$9,000 Saved at TIC By Facsimile Machine

By Pfc Del Bergheefer

Approximately $9,000 in savings has been realized during the first year of operation of a fascimile machine by Fort Benning's telegraph office of The Infantry Center Signal Section.

The machine trasmits and receives messages in picture form simply by pushing a button.

Before the machine was installed, two teletype operators were employed to transmit the messages to Columbus. This process was slow because of the duplication of messages and was costly because teletype operators had to be trained.

"By using the facsimile instead of the teletype which was used previously, we estimate that we save approximately 50 per cent of the time necessary to process messages," said Carl McDonald of Columbus, Signal Section administrative assistant who is in charge of the Western Union office.

"We average nearly 550 outgoing and 1,600 incoming messages each month and this time saving really adds up," he stated.

Using the new fascimile reproducer, a clerk can take the message written in pen or pencil by the customer, place it on the machine and an exact copy will be sent quickly to the Columbus Western Union office.

The new machine has several advantages, officials said. Because of the simple operation, unskilled personnel can be used. It is also a great time-saver because the message can be processed and sent as soon as it is written by the customer, without having to re-type it on a teletype machine.

Because of the heavy volume handled by the post telegraph office, this improvement has proven its value in processing messages quickly and accurately, signal officials added.

years old, Col. Todd said.

Post medical facilities at the hospital include a Poison Control Center for just such emergency where a complete file of harmful commercial products is maintained together with proper treatment.

When a little child is rushed to the hospital, the first question is "What did he swallow?"

A quick check of the files follows and treatment is begun immediately — but hospital officials would much rather know that precautions are being taken to preclude such happenings.

Top U.S. Marksmen Arrive To Vie for National Titles

Nine national championships will be at stake at Fort Benning, October 22 to November 6 when some 150 of the country's most elite marksmen will compete in U. S. International Shooting Championships, the first of their type ever held.

"Firing will be courses prescribed for world-level and Olympic competition," said Col. Burton C. Boatright, match executive, "and we expect to use seven of our Infantry Center ranges over the two weeks.

According to Col. Boatright international - type shooting competition has been conducted on a national level for some years past during the National Rifle and Pistol Matches at Camp Perry, Ohio, but because of modifications necessary at the Ohio range, conditions did not meet with the exacting rules of the International Shooting Union.

"Because our Infantry Center international - type ranges were constructed from ISU blueprints and because of the tremendous interest in this highly specialized type of marksmanship, it was decided that national championships in the true sense could be held this year," he said.

The championships were organized by the National Rifle Association with the cooperation of the U. S. Continental Army Command and invitations were extended to a large corps of America's outstanding

CAA Drive Reaches $64,380

The post Community Activities Association 1961 Fund Drive has soared to $64,380.15 with turn-ins of collections from the drive captains pushing the total closer to the $115,000 goal, according to drive officials.

There is still one military payday left during the campaign which will close November 9.

The latest sections to meet or surpass their goal are The Infantry School's Director of Instruction's Office and the Airborne-Air Mobility Department.

Funds from CAA support the post's welfare activities which would have to stop or greatly decrease their programs without the aid from the CAA, officials pointed out.

These welfare programs include the Youth Activities Club, which provides recreation for the post youngsters, the Visiting Nurses', Preventive Dental Health and The Infantry Center Chaplain's Programs.

The visiting nurses aid dependents by consultation in the Preventive Medicine Clinic or by home calls. They also assist in giving physical examinations and administering shots for dependents at the Immunization Clinic.

The Dental Health Program provides free cleaning and fluoridation of teeth of dependents under 18, reducing future dental needs of the youngsters, according to officials.

The Chaplain's Religious Education Program conducts classes for adults and children at the post Sunday Schools.

A portion of the CAA campaign fund is donated to the Muscogee and Russell County United Givers Fund Drive, which helps support the Armed Forces YMCA, the USO-YMCA and the USO Club in Columbus.

TIS Management Improvement Recognized at AFMA Meeting

Two post units and two civilian employees received management improvement awards Tuesday at a meeting of the Armed Forces Management Association at the Custer Terrace Branch of the Main Officers' Open Mess.

The awards were presented by Major Gen. Ben Harrell, post commander who was guest speaker at the meeting.

The highest award went to The Infantry School for achieving the greatest dollar benefits through management improvements during the first quarter of fiscal year 1962. The management improvement certificate was accepted by Brig. Gen. A. D. Surles, Jr., assistant commandant of The School.

The Infantry School was cited for achieving a saving of $119,399 through management improvements. One of the changes was a reorganization of the Ranger Department to provide seven needed personnel spaces.

An award for the unit with the highest percentage of participation in management improvement was presented to The Infantry Center Chemical Station. Capt. William E. King, chemical officer, accepted the award.

Gen. Harrell presented an award of $159 to Mrs. J. E. Smith of Cusseta, Ga., for a suggestion which simplified handling paper work in connection with clothing supply operations. The implementation of the improvement is expected to result in a saving of $7,200 per year.

Mrs. Smith is procurement clerk in The Infantry Center Quartermaster Section.

A check for $115 was presented to Earl M. Boatright of Phenix City, for a suggestion to use an adapter to a sewer machine, simplifying work on congested sewers. The suggestion is expected to amount to an annual saving of $2,298.

Boatright is a plumber in the post Engineer Section.

There were no access roads into the area and the local power company was unable to raise the level of the lake until the helicopter was removed.

Lewson Aviation Command was contacted for possible assistance.

A crew of the 19th Transportation Company was dispatched from a field position at Fort Bragg. Where the men were supporting activities at that station. Within one hour after arrival at Shaw AFB, the H-37 had slung the H-19 underneath it and transported the lighter craft back to Shaw.

This timely action saved considerable government expense and man-hours which otherwise would have been necessary to construct a useable vehicle access road to the area, according to officials.

The H-37 was piloted by 1st Lt. Harold E. Cooper and co-piloted by CWO Paul E. Gowan both of Columbus.

The flight engineer was Sp5 Johnny F. McAlister and the crew chief was Sp5 Grover F. Thompson both also of Columbus.

be able to turn out a "balanced product."

In the case of The Infantry School, the product would be a well trained student, the general stated. To be a well balanced product, the student requires adequate living and recreational facilities in addition to instruction, he said.

The product of various units on the post would be well trained men with properly maintained equipment. Gen. Harrell added.

To achieve these well balanced products requires good management of personnel, funds, time and facilities of the entire post, the general said.

"In the accomplishment of this mission, we all contribute in some way," he asserted.

"The value of such meetings as this lies in getting acquainted with the other fellow and learning how he solves his problems, whether he be another manager here on the post or a businessman from downtown," the general added.

Honored guests at the luncheon included Gen. Harrell, Major Gen. Charles H. Chase, 2nd Division Commander, Gen. Surles and Brig. Gen. John E. Kelly, deputy post commander.

Presiding at the meeting was Col. Dale D. Dixon, president of the association.

The Armed Forces Management Association is open to military and civilian personnel in key management positions both on the post and in the surrounding civilian community.

U. S. International Shooting Matches Will Get Underway on Post This Sunday

By MSgt Charles Quinn

Hunting enthusiasts of the Southeast will have the opportunity of seeing the fanciest shotgun and rifle shooting of the type ever fired in Dixie when the U. S. International Shooting Championships get under way at Fort Benning Sunday.

Scheduled to fire in International Skeet, International Clay Pigeon and International Running Deer events are some of the country's greatest shotgunners and riflemen including World and former World champions.

Heading the list of top-flight competitors in this event, Col. Boatright said, will be former World Champion Francis Eisenlauer of Palo Alto, Calif., who came within an ace of repeating the feat at world championships at Oslo, Norway, last summer.

Also on the International Clay Pigeon field will be Lt. Col. Wyeth G. Everhart, U.S. Air Force.

A third U. S. Team member and Olympic competitor, First Lt. James Clark of the Army AAMU, will add to the pressure of the championships.

Official referee for the event will be Major (ret) Gen S. Stalcup of Columbus, who holds the distinction of firing the all-time score for the 200-bird International Skeet event.

Shooting in the Interservice International meet held at Fort Benning last spring Major Stalcup smashed 200 out of 200 targets to exceed the world mark for the event, a 199 x 200 fired by U. S. Marine Corps Major Oliver Davis in Pan-American competition in 1955.

Running Deer competition will have the Army's Sfc Lloyd G. Crow Jr., to face. Sgt. Crow is the current world champion for the event andwill be shooting to add national championship laurels to his 1961 accomplishments.

The Issues In Berlin

Sense of Humor Helps Berliners Face Crisis

People in both the East and West Zones of the divided city of Berlin have used an invisible force to withstand the long succession of political crises resulting from their position behind the Iron Curtain. Their weapon: an indomitable and often irreverent sense of humor.

West Berliners have poked mocking, satirical fun at themselves as often as at the Communists. This has provided them with a balance and perspective that has carried them through the Soviet blockade, kidnappings of prominent citizens, ever-tightening border restrictions, a final closing of the borders, and the oft-repeated threat of absorption into the Communist empire.

The ironic calm of the Berliner, who feels he can weather anything that comes his way, is summarized in a taxi driver's reply to a visitor's question about the last 25 years and the changes they brought to the city.

"You haven't missed a thing," remarked the cabbie, casually dismissing Hitlerism, WWII, ruin, reconstruction and the Communist menace.

The city has a century-old tradition of humor with a strong political flavor. It is in cafes where performers jest incessantly with the foibles of officialdom. It is found in a variety of weekly and monthly publications, in the theater and on television, and in the first-rate political cartoons in the daily press.

Berlin's tradition of humor knows no political boundary and is equally appreciated on both sides of the border. Communist officials have tried to bring cabaret humor — a thorn in the side of the regime — into line with "correct political thinking," with dismal effects on East Berliners.

The Communist idea of entertainment itself and the propaganda which creeps into everything were illustrated in a West Berlin publication by an East German describing a radio quiz program.

"It's like this," he wrote. "Dance music fades out. Comrade announcer cracks a few jokes and then asks, 'Comrade, which Socialist State first protested against atomic rearmament in Bonn?'

"And the comrade clicks his heels and says — well, what is he going to say, the good comrade? — 'the German Democratic Republic,' he says, and the Comrade announcer is pleased and praises his ingenuity. Even the indispensable measure of applause is provided." So it goes until the comrade who has best memorized the party line is proclaimed the winner and sent for two weeks' vacation to the Baltic Sea.

West Berliners hide an understandable pride in their accomplishments, as well as their fears, behind their humorous barbs. The ultramodern and beautiful Congress Hall is familiarly and disrespectfully known as the "Pregnant Oyster." A church of advanced design has been dubbed "St. Alminum's," and the Philharmonic Orchestra's new-fangled, corrugated-roofed building has acquired the name of the "Music Garage."

Sometimes the Berliner's wit betrays a sober realization of the perils surrounding him. Famed dramatist Bertolt Brecht, who died in 1956, lived in East Berlin and for a time overlooked the regime's disregard for human liberties, telling himself the system might work in the future.

Brecht became totally disheartened and disillusioned when Soviet tanks and troops cruelly crushed the East German uprising of June 17, 1953. He showed his feelings in a poem he circulated secretly among his friends, adding an after-taste of bitterness to the humor of his protest:

After the rising of the 17th of June
The Secretary of the Writer's Association
Had leaflets distributed in Stalinallee
In which you could read
That the people
Has lost the Government's confidence
And could only win it back
By redoubled efforts. If so, would it not
Be simpler for the Government
To dissolve the People
And elect another?

'Urgently Need Nurses' States Army, Air Force

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — The Surgeons General of the Army and Air Force have announced an urgent need for professional nurse officers to expand medical care programs to meet the manpower buildup in their services.

Recruitment programs for qualified registered nurses and publicity for nurse recruiting are being stepped up in both services. Navy nurse strength is presently at its authorized level.

Early in September the Army listed a need for 500 nurses to keep Nurse Corps strength in line with increased manpower and stepped-up training. The Army asked for young men and women volunteers who had not served in the Armed Forces to avoid calling Reservists presently working in civilian hospitals.

In the recruiting drive the services will stress the individual's opportunity to rise professionally as nurse and as officer in the Army or Air Force, and at the same time to play a significant role in the nation's defense effort.

The Judge Says...

The Economic Fact of Divorce

By 1st Lt. Theodore D. Peadis

Marital discord frequently will cause one party or the other to consider the prospects of a divorce. Divorce actions like brightly packaged merchandise, frequently may be obtained through a modest initial cost and a life time of periodic payments. From a dollar and cents point of view—even if you ignore its high emotional cost and its impact on your personal religion—it is a luxury few can afford.

These hard economic facts should be considered by any serviceman contemplating divorce proceedings. The first obstacle to be overcome is his attorney's fee which may be expected to be several hundred dollars, depending upon the place where the divorce is to be obtained and whether it is to be contested. Next, he may be compelled to pay his wife's attorney fees.

Add to these the cost of property settlement, the support payments for all children until they are no longer entitled to such support and possible alimony payments to obtain a fair estimate of expected total cost.

The cost of supporting children will continue even though both parties may subsequently remarry. This support obligation is one enforced through the courts and will be respected by military commanders. Further, it constitutes a prior claim on earnings and must be paid even though it materially reduces the living standard of the man or his second family.

Any wife considering the prospects of a divorce should remember that the current income must be made to provide for two households; that support obligations terminate when the children marry, become adults, or become self-supporting; that alimony usually will not continue longer than is required for her to become self-supporting and will terminate on her remarriage; and that she will have no claim on her former spouse for any matter not provided for in the divorce decree.

Further, although this decree is enforceable and the military will respect it, proceedings to compel compliance with the decree frequent are time consuming and expensive.

The ultimate action available to military authorities is to cause the untimely discharge of the errant service member, but this action will neither increase his desire nor ability to comply with the court orders.

Lastly, she should examine her income earning potential, its long term limitations and the prospect of bleak later years.

Time is a great healer of all things and a conciliatory attitude on the part of each spouse during the time these economic facts of life are considered may result in the best practicable solution for all concerned. If you need legal advice on a domestic problem, consult your civilian attorney or one of the attorneys in the Legal Assistance Office.

Troop Rise May Cause Personnel Action Changes

Personnel actions in connection with Army expansion will necessitate suspension or modification of previously existing policies and procedures according to a recent communication from Department of the Army.

A major offshoot of such suspension or modification is the requirement that troops be made fully aware of the necessity of these changes.

Grave Crisis Marks U. N. Day This Year

The United Nations, marking its 16th birthday on October 24, has never convened under heavier storm clouds of crisis. Dag Hammarskjold is gone — at a time when it most needs a man of his skill and dedication to its aims. The appointment of a new Secretary General is blocked by the Soviet Union's mischievous and obstructive "troika" concept. The Berlin cauldron bubbles; the Congo strife goes on; the situation in Southeast Asia is as disturbing as ever.

All of this is desperately threatening such uneasy peace as the world knows. But it does not mean that United Nations Day 1961 is a time for defeatist hand-wringing. Only men of faint heart and short vision despair of finding honorable solutions to problems that affect the life of every human being on earth. Others persist; they will not be defected from the course they have set. Dag Hammarskjold was such a man.

But, as President Kennedy stressed in his address to the General Assembly, the problem facing the United Nations now is not the death of one man. "The problem," he said, "is the life of this organization. It will either grow to meet the challenges of our age or it will be gone with the wind, without influence, without force, without respect. Were we to let it die, to enfeeble its vigor, to cripple its powers, we would condemn our future."

These are solemn words, highlighting a firm and perspicuous statement of the U.S. position. It was reaffirmation of our faith as a nation in the ability of a strong United Nations to make progress in the out-lawry of war and the improvement of living standards of all peoples.

"A U.N. Decade of Development" — thus the President envisaged the great global aim which 100 nations working together could pursue in the 1960s if the ugly specter of war were banished. Ten years from now the world could be a far better place to live in — or it could be uninhabitable. The United Nations, born at the close of the greatest war man has ever known, is his best insurance against the latter becoming the reality. (AFPS)

NCO's
Distaff Doings

By Marianne Kelly

First of all we want to extend a hearty welcome to three new members; the Mesdames Herbert Klein, Thomas Caffrey and Lawrence W. Smith. Hope there will be many enjoyable hours ahead for you as there have always been for everyone affiliated with the NCO Wives Club of Fort Benning.

This past October 11, a luncheon was given by our "Firing Squad", the ladies of the Ceramics group. What a delicious meal they served! The spaghetti and meat sauce were out of this world, and everyone got a big kick out of the gally decorated bibs. Did they come in handy too! For once it was impossible to spatter spaghetti sauce all over ones clothes. Not one of the girls present had enough will power to resist temptation, namely all those wonderfully rich and delightful pastries. As usual we were most unkind to our waistlines; how about having Metrecal next time? (Brrrrr!)

Our gracious hostesses were the Mesdames Gardell Kaney, Ulysses Walters, James Rhyne, John Bayer and Henry Speech. You deserve a nice compliment girls, not only for preparing an excellent meal but also for donating those lovely pieces of ceramics given as door prizes.

Happy to have had several charming guests, the Mesdames Hollis Nolan, Eula Nelson, Gerald Chenard and John Dobrosky. Hope to see you often and as regular members.

Don't forget this month's night meeting, Thursday, October 26, 8 p.m. at the clubhouse. A cosmetics demonstration will take place with refreshments afterwards and, of course, as always lots of gab.

This is what the kiddies are looking forward to: A Halloween party in the clubhouse, on Sat., October 28, at 2 p.m. Sorry girls but this is for the children of members only. Why don't you join right now and give the darlings a chance to have a ball?

To acquaint the distaff side with all the "hosses" we decided on a husband and wife affair for a change. Start talking about it to that man in your life right now, girls. It will be a covered dish harvest supper on November 4, at 7:30 p.m., in the clubhouse. Be sure and tell those guys they won't have to dress up for this one, on the contrary, they should wear those old fishing pants and that shirt you have been trying to throw out for ages. And don't you dare appear in high heels and your best silks; this is going to be strictly homey country style.

Rumors have been going around about a big fashion show. Watch this column for details soon.

Bridge is still being played at Crain Hall every Tuesday. Starting time is now 9 a.m. Be sure and join us and try for those prizes.

MEDAL WINNER
Sgt. Nicholson

11th Inf's Sgt. Nicholson Cited in Grenade Incident

A quick-thinking 11th Infantry sergeant who disposed of a live hand grenade dropped by a trainee has been awarded the U.S. Army's highest non-combat award — The Soldier's Medal.

Receiving the award for heroism was Sergeant Robert L. Nicholson of the 11th's Company D.

Major General Charles H. Chase, commanding general of the Indianhead Division, presented the award to Sgt. Nicholson at Division Headquarters.

Among those witnessing the event were Colonel John E. Arthur, commander of the 11th Infantry, and Captain Jerry Morgan, commanding officer of the 11th's Company D.

Citation

Sgt. Nicholson's citation reads:

"Sergeant Robert L. Nicholson, a member of Company D, 1st Battle Group, 11th Infantry, Fort Benning, Georgia, distinguished himself by heroism on May 31, 1961.

"Sergeant Nicholson was performing duty on Dianda Range as an assistant instructor supervising the training of recruits in the handling of live fragmentation grenades.

"A trainee undergoing instruction dropped an activated grenade in the rear of the throwing bay, endangering the lives of all personnel in that vicinity.

"Quickly realizing the immediate danger involved, and with complete disregard for his own personal safety, Sergeant Nicholson moved to the activated grenade, seized it and, with only moments to spare, tossed it down range where it exploded instantly upon clearing the safety wall."

The citation concludes . . . "The prompt action, presence of mind and unselfish courage displayed by Sergeant Nicholson in this sudden emergency prevented serious injury or death to personnel, and reflect distinct credit upon himself and the military service."

Authorization for the award of The Soldier's Medal to Sgt. Nicholson was made by President John F. Kennedy under an act of Congress, dated July 2, 1926.

A Bit of Cheer For the Ailing

This month marks the first anniversary of the hospital ward parties given by the ladies of the 2nd Aviation Company.

A TIME FOR GAMES AND PUNCH
L. to r., Mrs. Kelley, SP4 Stender, M-Sgt. Warren

At the suggestion of Mrs. Robert E. McGraw, wife of Colonel Robert E. McGraw, Division Aviation Officer, the ladies undertook the project of a party every third month for the soldiers at Martin Army Hospital.

Three Groups

The ladies who volunteer for the work are divided into three groups. One group does the baking, another donates the beverages, while the third group consists of ladies who act as hostesses at the party in the hospital.

The party is from 6 p.m. until 8 p.m., which is the normal visiting time. This month the party was on Wednesday, October 11. At present, the 2nd Aviation Company ladies are the only ones giving a party at night. It is the aim of the women to bring a little cheer and goodwill, besides refreshments, to an otherwise long and tedious stay in the hospital.

Hostesses this month were Mrs. Warren Griffith, Mrs. Frank Bonanens, Mrs. Eugene Kappenman, Mrs. Robert Ingrett, Mrs. Edgar Kelley and Mrs. William Mahrt.

The Red Cross furnishes a recreation worker to assist with the games. Miss Frances Jones was present Wednesday evening. The games include bingo, quizzes, and card games. Movies Are Asked For Troops in Field

The Sand Hill Enlisted Men's Advisory Council has asked that movies and other Special Services activities be extended to the troops while in the field.

A response to this was that the hostesses would go to the field and conduct organized recreational activities upon request from the units.

Miss Madeline J. Parks, director of Service Club Two, asked that units send their requests through their council representatives for coordination three or four days in advance of the desired date. The first of these activities was to be at Headquarters Detachment and Band of Division Trains at 7 p.m. on October 11th.

Sergeant Harold Grinols of the Division Special Services Office announced that films could be issued as a 24-hour basis, as a first-come, first-served basis, for movies in the field.

First Lieutenant Perry J. Owens, Division Headquarters and Headquarters Company, recently was promoted to his present rank.

Air Force Detachment Goes to Field With Division

The Air Force went to the field last week along with the 2nd Infantry Division.

The unit — Detachment 10, 16th Air Weather Squadron — has the mission of providing weather support for the division during field training problems.

Composed of one officer and two enlisted men, it was able to make forecasts as far in advance as three days with portable weather equipment for taking field observations of existing conditions.

Training

The detachment, known as a Combat Weather Support Unit, is currently training a unit, composed of eight men, one officer and seven enlisted men. Three of these men are being trained as weather forecasters and three others are being trained as weather observers.

Working with mobile weather equipment available, the observing section has the capability to take, encode, disseminate to using agencies observations of the current weather.

The forecast section, working in conjunction with Corps weather, can directly support the division's aviation section, Division Artillery, the chemical - biological - radiological section and the Division G-2 (Intelligence) section with weather forecasts and appropriate climatological information.

Commanding Detachment 10 of the 16th Air Weather Squadron is Lieutenant Joseph A. Vittone. Its home station is Fort Monroe, Virginia.

Clearing Platoon Supports Division in Field

Provides Training for Personnel Along With Practical Experience

When the second platoon of Company B, 2nd Medical Battalion goes to the field, it does so to support the division with medical facilities and care and to train personnel in their respective jobs.

Last week when the platoon—the Clearing Platoon—set up operations, it handled an average of 30 patients a day with such ailments as sprains, snake bites and boils.

Clearing Station

The platoon's clearing station is more than a dispensary, and patients come to it only after they have gone to their unit's aid station.

Upon their arrival at the medical battalion's clearing station, they are received at the admission and disposition tent.

After treatment here, some are retained for additional treatment in the station's wards while others may be sent back to their unit for duty or convalescence in their quarters or to Martin Army Hospital, depending on the nature of their case.

The two other sections of the clearing station are the wards, which can accomodate 76 patients on 25 cots and 52 litters, and the surgical tent.

Four ambulances are maintained for use by the Clearing Platoon. However, in a tactical situation a unit of 12 such vehicles would be available.

Platoon Sergeant

Platoon Sergeant for the unit is Crawford White, assisted by Sergeant Rafael Marrero.

Non-commissioned officers in charge of the three sections are Sergeants Earl Cunningham, admissions and dispositions; Zean Bagley, surgical, and James Stedman, wards.

The platoon's leader is Lieutenant Eugene C. Neithold.

2nd Medical Battalion Moves To New Kelley Hill Location

The 2nd Medical Battalion has vacated its Sand Hill quarters to join the 1st, 11th and 87th Infantries on Kelley Hill.

It is as yet unknown which unit will occupy the buildings near Arrowhead Road formerly used by the Medical Battalion.

Building 9010

The battalion's three companies, Headquarters, Ambulance and Clearing, are presently located in building 9010 on Kelley Hill, using buildings 9022 and 9033 as a motor pool and storage house.

The 2nd Medical Battalion is the only Division Trains unit on Kelley Hill. The battalion is commanded by Major Dudley E. Pittman.

The move to accomodate both personnel and equipment in the new location is being accomplished with an eye toward completion this week.

Normal field duty for the Ambulance and Clearing Companies continues despite the complications of moving.

The change of quarters was made in an effort to take advantage of the modern building heretofore not occupied by Troops.

First Unit

The oldest present-day Regular Army Unit, the 1st Field Artillery Battalion, 5th Artillery, was organized January 6, 1776.

'Snake' in Sleeping Bag Kept 69th Man Hopping

The present training program of the division calls for plenty of work and learning to live and operate effectively in the field. This living and sleeping in the field does have some hazards.

Last week, for instance, a quite peculiar sight greeted members of the Division's 69th Armor as they rose from a night's sleep. For there, in front of them was one of the wierdest, biggest and most unorthodox jack rabbits ever seen.

Six-Footer

It was large, almost six-feet tall. And its body was a shocker. The top half resembled that of a human being while the bottom half of the body came together as one leg. And could it hop! Bounds of two to three feet in the air for distances of five or six feet at a time!

The peculiar rabbit turned out to be a member of the 69th Armor who had been hit while in his sleeping bag by a falling pine cone. Being so rudely awakened the Soldier could only think that perhaps a snake had gotten into his sleeping bag. He used the only immediate strategy he could think of . . . hopping around the area while still in his sleeping bag.

Snakes Still Active Here (1 Less Now)

Reptiles which habitate the Fort Benning reservation were still active up through last week, according to reports from various division units.

One no-legged creature ignored protocol, however, and made an appearance at Division Command Post Headquarters during "chow" time.

His reception and demise consisted of an M-1 rifle butt—

—smashed across the cranium.

Wielding the weapon was Captain Ishmael Pack, aide-de-camp of Major General Charles H. Chase, 2nd Infantry Division commanding general.

The intruder, a rattler, measured over three feet in length and possessed 12 rattles.

tion of himself he is quick to say: "I am about as creative as that wall...but I can do anything, I guess.... almost.'

"The main sport in my life has been skiing. I started at four, so you can say I've skied all my life...from Aspen, Colorado, to the west coast at major ski resorts like Alta, in Utah, Squaw Valley and Sun Valley....as a matter of fact I was a ski instructor during the winters of 1958, 1959 and 1960.

"It's a healthy life, I guess... being a ski bum...but then, I don't know. I went to college for two years at Portland State working toward a bachelor of Arts degree in Science, concentrating on physics. I was drafted after my second year but hope, when I get out of the Army, to continue on at the University of Washington. I might even become an eternal student. I don't know...I've learned not to make any real definite plans."

Sergeant Hatfield was promoted to Sergeant E-5 on August 15. Following basic training with the 23rd Infantry's Company A, he attended the Survey School at Fort Sill, Oklahoma, was assigned to the 12th Artillery and was sent to Teletype School at Fort Gordon, Georgia.

He has maintained an impressive record with each of his units...second in his company with the 23rd Infantry and while at Fort Sill. He was first in his company while at Fort Gordon's Teletype School.

Hatfield bowled on the 12th Artillery league bowling team last year and lists tennis and waterskiing as his main summer sports activities.

Detachment Commander

MP's Capt. Riley Cited For Duty in Germany

Captain John F. Riley, detachment commander of the Military Police Detachment, was recently awarded the Army Commendation Medal. He was cited for "meritorious service while serving as detachment commander, Berlin Detachment, 507th Military Police Company, Railway Guard, from February 1960 to July."

The Division Provost Marshal, Lieutenant Colonel John W. Thompson, presented the award in an informal ceremony.

Soviet Germany

The citation accompanying the award read, in part, "while performing duties as a freight train commander through the Soviet-controlled zone of Germany, he consistently accomplished his duties effectively, even though exposed to attempts to deviate from recognized procedures. Through his sound judgment, alertness and knowledge of existing agreements on military train control and rail access procedures, he resisted all attempts to abridge them."

Captain Riley has been Military Police Detachment Commander since August.

Lead Flag Tourney

87th Continues Winning Streak

By EUGENE BREESKIN

Private Leonard Goodwin, the 87th Infantry's "secret weapon," spearheaded a scoring parade last Saturday as the 87th swamped the 1st Infantry team, 41-12.

The 87th now remains the only undefeated flag-football team in the current division tournament, almost half over. Included in their 4-0 record is a forfeited win over Division Artillery last Thursday. Only a few more points would clinch the Commanding General's Trophy for the Conquerors from Kelley Hill.

Private Goodwin, who quarterbacks the team, put on an impressive show for the gallery of fans. A master of deception, he snapped off one pass after another for a well-over 75 per cent average.

On the receiving end was usually Private Major Lincoln. Battle group commander Colonel Robert E. Connor, who hasn't missed a game said he was very pleased with the team's drive and spirit.

The 87th has two tough ones coming up. Thursday, they met a strong 11th Infantry team and, Saturday, they face Separate Battalions.

23rd Downs Div Trains In 2nd Half

By 23rd Inf. PIO

After getting off to a slow start, the 23rd Infantry football team is now boasting a .500 average in four games.

The "We Servers" dished out a 13-7 defeat Saturday to Division Trains. After trailing 7-0 at the half the 23rd got rolling, when John Spratling intercepted a Division Train lateral and scored.

Dofford Corker scored the winning touchdown, when he snagged a pass and sprinted into the end zone. He also scored the extra point.

Last Thursday, the 23rd defeated Separate Battalions 1-0 in a "sudden death" playoff. The "sudden death" rule was invoked after neither team scored a point during the game's regular time limit.

The 23rd had a gloomy beginning in the flag football season by dropping its first two games to the 87th and the 11th Infantry teams.

Smith Passes Manchus Over 11th Squad, 12-6

By Bill Gibson

The 9th Infantry "Manchus" led by quarterback Jerry Smith, sped past the 11th Infantry nine to post a 12-6 flag football victory last week at Kelley Hill's Esschagger Field.

After a scoreless first half, Smith triggered a Manchu attack by going to the air with a 12-yard pass to right halfback Bob Given who skipped into pay dirt for a tally to put the 9th out in front, 6-0.

The 9th's extra point attempt failed, and the revenging 11th enjoyed a 65-yard touchdown jaunt on the kickoff return performed by speedy halfback Dick Holmes. This put the Kelley Hill men back in the game 6-6.

The deadlock went on until late in the fourth period when a 50-yard "Manchu March" put the 9th in scoring position again. Then quarterback Smith showed his passing skill and rifled a two-yard pitch to right end Hank Jankowski who was waiting in the end-zone to put the Manchus out in front again, 12-6.

The closing minute-and-a-half witnessed a spirited defensive squad led by Captain Alzo Reddick, which bogged down the 11th and clinched the victory.

After dropping a 12-6 decision to the 9th Infantry in a contest marked by penalties, the 11th Infantry rolled over Division Artillery, 28-0, for their third victory of the season.

The scoring parade started early as the Kelley Hill squad caught the Artillery nine off guard on the first play from scrimmage and Jim Gordon sprinted 50 yards for a touchdown on a slick double reverse.

Quarterback Bill Lochow threw three touchdown passes to Melvin Rice, Dick Holmes and Billy Smith and ran one over himself as the 11th rolled up the score while their pass defense continually broke up the Artillery's offensive attack.

Benning Scores Two Touchdowns In First Quarter of Night Game

By Pfc Del Bergboefer

The Doughboys trounced the Fort Lee (Va.) Travelers by an impressive 41-6 score here last Saturday sending the winless Lee eleven to their fourth straight defeat.

Benning scored twice in each of the first three quarters and added five extra points, four by passing and one by kicking, to pile up 41 points in the lopsided victory, the Doughboys' first in four games. Lee escaped a shutout when it scored in the final quarter against the Fort Benning reserves.

Cliff Eddy, hard - running Doughboy fullback, led the Fort Benning offense with 124 yards gained and three touchdowns, one on a 5-yard romp, plus a 56-yard runback of an intercepted Lee aerial.

The first two of Benning's scores came minutes apart near the end of the first quarter. Quarterback Kenny Ivers pitched a 28-yard pass to end Jim Daniel, capping a 57-yard drive for the first six pointer. The extra point was booted by Henry Derleth.

Kicking off after the TD, the stout Doughboy defense held the Travelers deep in their own territory, forcing them to punt. A bad pass over the kicker's head was recovered by Fort Benning and Eddy scored the first of his three TD-'s on a seven-yard burst over center, making it 13-0 as the first quarter closed.

With one minute gone in the second quarter, the Doughboys struck again needing only one offensive play. Eddy rambled 75 yards for the game's longest gainer and his second score after an intercepted Lee pass on the Fort Benning 25-yard stripe. A pass from Ivers to Cliff Manning clicked for a two-point conversion, making it 21-0.

Before the first half ended, the Doughboys added one more TD, capping a 64-yard drive. Halfback Cleveland Brown scored on a four-yard plunge which boosted Benning's lead to 27-0 at half-time.

The Doughboys completed the rout in the third quarter as they added two more TD's. Fullback Gerald Wilson capped a 45-yard march scoring from five yards out making it 33-0 midway in the third quarter. Five minutes later Eddy stole a Lee pass, running it back 16 yards to the Lee 24-yard line. A pass and two plunges by Eddy, the final one three yards, added six more points. An Ivers to Daniel pass was good for a two-point conversion and the Benning scoring finally stopped at 41 points.

Lee scored its lone counter late in the final quarter on a 25-yard aerial from quarterback Steve Pinsecki to halfback Don Butler.

"This game should really get us rolling," said Coach Leston Cofield after the one-sided win. "Our starting backs have shown great improvement over our previous games and in all we played a much smarter ball game."

Eddy, Benning's big gun, came back into action with a bang after missing last week's Fort Eustis game due to an injured neck suffered against the Quantico Marines in the second game. His brother, Emmett Eddy, is a starting halfback.

The Benning passing attack proved to be much more accurate than in earlier games, with only one interception as compared to five interceptions by Fort Eustis the week before. Quarterback Ivers completed seven out of fifteen for one TD, four extra points and 80 yards. One more touchdown pass was called back due to an off-side penalty by Benning.

The Travellers, however, filled the air with passes but could complete only 10 out of 32 attempts for 62 yards. The hard-charging Doughboys line can be credited for some of the poor passing by Lee, making the quarterback throw before his receivers were clear or throwing him for losses.

The Doughboys travel to Pensacola, Fla., tomorrow to play the Naval Air Station "Flyers."

The following two weeks they will be at home again, playing Lackland Air Force Base, Texas, October 28 and Memphis Naval Air Station November 4.

Kibitzer's Korner

By Lt. Joseph Tomko

Every Saturday throughout the nation, thousands of fans jam their favorite gridiron stadiums. With whirling majorettes, colorful high - stepping bands, and the clowning antics of the schools' mascot the background is created for that most important ingredient, the game itself.

The game, as you know, is played by two highly-spirited, opposing teams, each anxious to win by scoring more points than the other.

If one team fails to win consistently it becomes evident through use of a dummy stuffed with straw that a new coach is to be summoned.

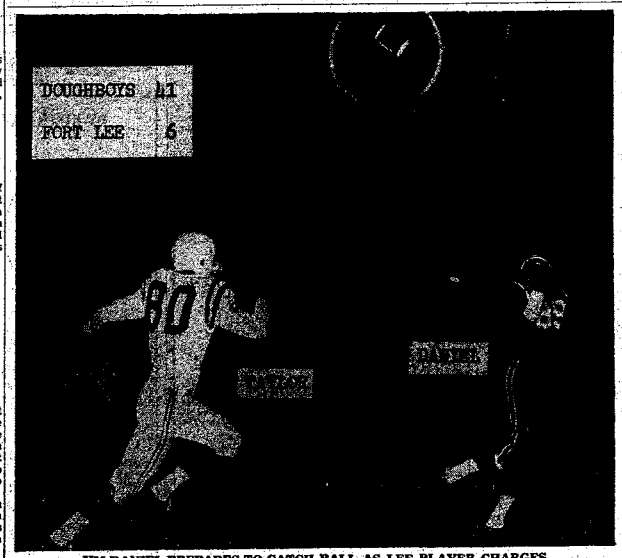
The arriving mentor is then greeted with fan-fare and told rather politely he has 'a free' hand but with certain conditions.

This principal condition is that he's expected to win a few games, especially that played against the school's arch-rival, Podunk U.

The coach is faced with a difficult problem. Should winning the game at all cost be the rule—or should emphasis be placed on how the game is played?

Advocates of the principle of winning at all cost stress that any game is played to win, a principle which develops a highly competitive individual who desires perfections in his ability.

Those opposed to this idea indicate that any game is played for mere enjoyment. The game provides a physical outlet by which the competitors find enjoyment and relaxation. It doesn't matter who wins a game — it's how the game is played. The individual must learn to be a good loser as well as winner.



I, myself, firmly agree that we should win as well as we lose. Personally, I do not like to lose, but this doesn't mean that I've always won. We must learn to temper competition to fit the needs of those who play the game.

A boy growing to be a man must have a goal toward which to strive. A complete man is one who is never satisfied with what he has attained.

Winning is not paramount—but it sure helps.

Charge On, Doughboys!

United Nations Plaza Is Now Flying 101 Flags

NEW YORK (AFPS) — Admission of the West African nation Sierre Leone to the United Nations brings its membership to an even 100 — exactly double the number that signed the U.N. Charter in 1945 at San Francisco.

This means that 101 flags now fly in the U.N. Plaza beneath the great glass and steel headquarters of the world organization that overlooks the East River in New York. For the 101st flag is the pale blue U.N. banner with its white emblem of a globe wreathed in olive branches.

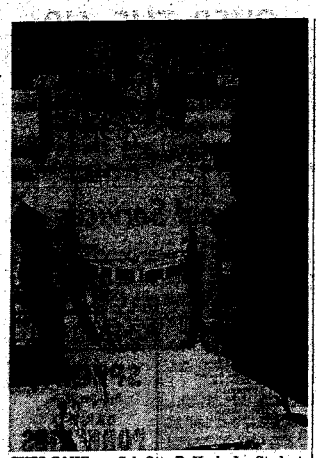
Governing the brilliant rainbow display of national colors is strict rules of protocol, one of which requires that all 100 banners be flown at exactly the same height in alphabetical order. An exception to this is made when a new U.N. member is admitted. Then its flag flys in a central position of honor for one day before taking its proper alphabetical place.

The array of colors now begins with Afghanistan and ends with Yugoslavia, with the U.N. banner flying above them all. They are raised every morning by six members of the security guard unless the weather is inclement.

When a chief of state or a U.N. officer dies, all 100 flags are not flown for one day, but the U.N. colors remain at half-staff, in the case of the late Secretary General Dag Hammarskjold the flags were downed until his funeral.

The variety of their colors and the symbols and designs on the banners fascinate visitors to the plaza. The blue and white flag of Guatemala is adorned with that country's national bird, the green and scarlet quetzal. Nepal's double-triangle standard is unique, suggesting the peaks of the Himalayas, with two human faces symbolizing the sun and the moon.

On the blue field of the Australian flag, along with the Union Jack and a single star, is a five-star constellation representing the Southern Cross. Cambodia's banner is more exotic, with the great temple of medieval Angkok Wat dominating a red central stripe.



All have stripes of green, yellow and red arranged horizontally, vertically and diagonally, chosen by the former colonies to proclaim their African unity.

CUTS CAKE . . . Col. Otto R. Koch, Jr., Student Brigade commander, cuts cake during a birthday party given for him by the brigade headquarters staff, personnel and friends.

Man, Like This 'Gator Gets Mad--Sound Retreat

FT. STEWART, Ga. (AFPS) —There it was crawling along the road on this Southern Georgia Army post. As big as an alligator. In fact it was an alligator—all six feet of it.

Capt. H. E. Motley brought the truck to a halt. He and his two fellow officers got out. Having fun with gators is an outdoor sport in these parts.

"We took a canoe paddle and poked it at the alligator," says Capt. Motley.

But this was no shy, retiring gator. Its tough hide wasn't easily bruised, but its feelings were. So it grabbed the paddle and snapped it in two.

"We started back to the truck," says the captain.

So did the gator, murder on its mind.

"We got another paddle and tried to beat the alligator off. But it splintered that paddle too."

The best thing to do then was to get in the truck—and fast. So they did, leaving a frustrated gator leering up at them and drooling.

But it wasn't finished yet. The gator slithered under the truck. Its big, mean jaws closed on the tailpipe. Off it came. Next the muffler. No more muffler. Now the gator; getting really interested began chomping on the axle.

That did it. Capt. Motley and his friends sounded retreat. And the alligator smiled, as only alligators can.

500 Medics to be Drafted Soon

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — A special call for almost 500 physicians, 154 dentists and 67 veterinarians has been placed with Selective Service by the Defense Department.

This call, the Defense Department said, is necessary to meet the requirements of the current military buildup requested by the President and authorized by Congress.

This is the second call for physicians this year. Prior to the earlier cal on June 9, no physicians had been drafted since 1957, no dentists since 1955 and no vets since 1952.

A breakdown by service shows the Army receiving 275 physicians, 154 dentists and 67 veterinarians. The Navy will get 70 physicians, and the Air Force 150.

Reserve Officers Not on Active Duty Able To Complete Appropriate Schooling Sooner

FORT MONROE, Va. — Reserve component officers not on active duty will be able to complete appropriate Army service school courses by a combination of resident and correspondence study at a greatly accelerated rate under sweeping changes in the Army Extension Course Program (AECP) made by Headquarters, US Continental Army Command (USCONARC).

Under provisions of this program, Reserve component commissioned officers not on active duty may attain certain educational levels for promotion.

In general, the requirements for military education as a condition for promotion are as follows:

LIEUTENANT TO CAPTAIN —Successful completion, constructive or equivalent credit for a (Branch) Officer Familiarization course or (Branch) Officer Orientation course or higher courses. Successful completion of 50 percent of either course satisfies the requirement for promotion to first lieutenant.

CAPTAIN TO MAJOR — Completion of at least 50 percent of the (Branch) Officer Career Extension course or (Branch) Officer Career (Reserve component) course.

MAJOR TO LIEUTENANT COLONEL — Successful completion of the (Branch) Officer Career Extension course or (Branch) Officer Career (Reserve component) course or higher course.

LIEUTENANT COLONEL TO COLONEL — Successful completion of the Command and General Staff College (CGSC) Extension course, US Army Reserve (USAR) School course, or Resident course.

The new Army Extension Course Program became effective in September, with major changes to be accomplished by most Army service schools by July 1, 1962.

Under the new AECP, emphasis is placed on career courses and their orderly development, designed to parallel as closely as possible similar courses offered by purely resident instruction. Another major change in the program is the elimination of the company or battery and advanced officers courses from the AECP curriculum.

Army service school commandants have been directed to develop two new types of extension courses. The first is the "pure" extension course, with all instruction to be completed by correspondence study. The second is a combination of correspondence study supplemented by active duty periods of resident instruction. All schools are affected by the new AECP.

Courses conducted in the AECP are now organized into the Army Pre-commission Extension Courses; the Career Courses consisting of the (Branch) Officer Orientation Extension, the (Branch) Officer Familiarization Extension, the (Branch) Officer Career (Reserve Component), the (Branch) Officer Career Extension, and the Command and General Staff College Extension (Combat or Logistical) Courses, and Special Extension Courses.

The (Branch) Officer Career (Reserve component) course and the (Branch) Officer Career Extension course replace the Company Officer and Advanced Officer Extension Courses.

USCONARC has directed that each career course identified as part of the AECP be conducted by the branch service school which teaches a comparable resident course. For example, an Army service school conducting a resident officer career course will also conduct extension courses on the same subject matter, to be completed either entirely by home study or by a combination of home study and active duty training (ACDUTRA) resident instruction.

The Army Precommission Extension (Nonresident) courses will be offered only by the US Army Infantry School and, for the Women's Army Corps, by the Adjutant General's School.

Under the USCONARC career course concept, the objective is to produce graduates, particularly Reserve component personnel, in significant numbers in the shortest time possible. The time required to complete the course will be dependent on the efforts of the individual concerned. Instruction given under the AECP will complement other reserve duty and active duty training. It will generally parallel essential branch material and common subjects instruction presented in the corresponding resident course.

The career courses are primarily designed for Reserve component officers not on active duty. However, they may also be taken by eligible Reserve component enlisted personnel and eligible enlisted men and officers of any component of the Armed Forces on active duty, but without the ACDUTRA phase.

Under new USCONARC administrative procedures for the career AECP, each enrolled student will be required to complete successfully, or have received credit for, 70-90 credit hours' correspondence study each "instruction year." This "instruction year" starts on the date of acceptance of his initial course application and ends the same date the succeeding year. Those who fail to complete the required hours during an "instruction year" will have their enrollment canceled, unless there are extenuating circumstances which are acceptable to the school commandant concerned.

A student enrolled in the combination resident — nonresident AECP will be required to complete a minimum of one nonresident phase each "instruction year." If he desires, he can progress more rapidly.

Each resident phase included as part of the combination resident — nonresident career courses will not exceed two weeks (88 hours) duration. A student participating in the combination course will be required to attend no more than one phase of resident AECP instruction during the year in which such instruction is programed.

The Army Precommission Extension courses (Nonresident) require a student to complete a minimum of 30 credit hours annually to remain enrolled.

Special Extension courses are those covering any subject or group of related subjects for which there is a military requirement and which can be taught successfully by correspondence. Students must complete a minimum of 30 credit hours annually to remain enrolled.

Outstanding features of the new career extension courses follow:

(BRANCH) OFFICER ORIENTATION EXTENSION COURSES AND (BRANCH) OFFICER FAMILIARIZATION EXTENSION COURSES. These courses may be conducted as nonresident or as a combination of resident - nonresident instruction. They will consist of two phases of instruction, which must be completed within two years of date of enrollment. Either or both type courses are offered by Army service schools. They are available to second lieutenants newly commissioned from any source other than a regular OCS course and whose assignment is to the branch of the school administering the course. The nonresident courses are also available to eligible enlisted personnel who have completed or who have constructive credit for a precommission course.

(BRANCH) OFFICER CAREER (RESERVE COMPONENT) COURSE (NUMBER C-24). This course will consist of a combination of resident-nonresident instruction phases, to be completed by the student in five years or less. The course will include a minimum of one and a maximum of two resident phases, with a mandatory requirement for enrolled students to attend one resident phase. Students unable to take the resident phase will be transferred to the "pure" extension course.

(BRANCH) OFFICER CAREER EXTENSION COURSE (NUMBER E-24). Unless otherwise directed by USCONARC the course will consist of at least six phases of nonresident instruction. Enrolled students will be expected to complete this course within a six-year period or less.

ARTILLERY OFFICER CAREER (RESERVE COMPONENT) COURSES. These courses will provide instruction in either field artillery or air defense artillery subjects. They will include: (1) Artillery Officer Career (Reserve component) course - Air Defense C-24, (2) Artillery Officer Career (Reserve component) course - Field Artillery C-24, (3) Artillery Officer Career Extension course - Air Defense E-24, and (4) Artillery Officer Career Extension course - Field Artillery E-24.

Students must meet the following requirements for enrollment in a C-24 course: Be an Army Reserve component commissioned officer, not on active duty, (1) whose actual or anticipated assignment is to the branch of the school administering the course or whose duties, actual or anticipated, require a working knowledge in that branch, (2) who has not received actual or constructive credit for an officer advanced or career course of the respective school, (3) who is physically qualified for service as prescribed in AR 40-501, (4) who has a proper security clearance, if required, (5) who meets one of the following: successful completion of, or constructive credit for, Officer Orientation course, Resident Company or Basic Officer course, or Officer Familiarization course - OR - successful completion of a regular OCS course - OR - successful completion of, or constructive credit for, a USAR School Company or Basic Officer course - OR - successful completion of a Company Extension course.

The prerequisites for the E-24 courses are the same as for the C-24 courses. An exception is that eligible officers, warrant officers and EM of any of the components of the Armed Forces on active duty, (See SCHOOLING, Page 24)

Post Commander Praises City In Speech to Rotary Club

Fort Benning could not possibly carry out its vital military tasks without the support it receives from the surrounding civilian community, Major Gen. Ben Harrell, post commander, told members of the Columbus Rotary Club last Wednesday.

Speaking at a weekly luncheon meeting in the Ralston Hotel, Gen Harrell said, "In our 46 years of association together, we have learned that nearly every important event which takes place in either the civilian community or at Fort Benning has a direct and immediate effect on both."

The general cited the locally proposed Linsey Creek bypass and Fort Benning's related plan to link up with the bypass at Victory Drive, continuing with a four-lane highway on the reservation. These combined projects will do much to solve Columbus and Fort Benning traffic problems, he said.

Another twin project of mutual benefit to city and post will be the new Fourth Street Bridge being constructed over the Chattahoochee River in Columbus and recently approved plans for a permanent bridge over the river to replace the temporary pontoon bridge within the reservation.

Referring to the post's recent request for the right to conduct non-firing military training over 44,000 acres of Marion County farm land adjoining the reservation, Gen. Harrell said, "The citizens of this county gave us the right to use their land for critically needed training, free of charge."

"These, I think," Gen Harrel continued, "are excellent examples of joint community planning and effort which promote the best interests of all concerned."

Gen. Harrel outlined his dual responsibility at Fort Benning as commanding general of the U. S. Army Infantry Center and commandant of the U.S. Army Infantry School.

The all important mission of the school, he said is to "train infantry officers and enlisted men for the grave responsibility of leading men in peace and war."

The Infantry Center, he said, supports the school and the other units on the post.

"We not only train leaders for our own Army," the general added, "but we also have the important job of training a large number of students from Allied nations."

"We believe that Fort Benning is an ideal place to give them well – rounded military training. Equally important, we feel that Columbus is an excellent community for them to observe, in action, the underlying principles of democracy and free enterprise which have made our country so great," he said.

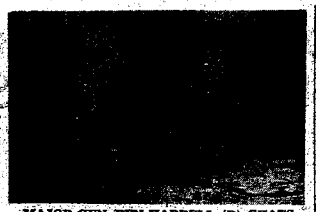
The civilian community makes its largest contribution to Fort Benning in the areas of housing, schools and recreation, Gen. Harrell stated, areas of vital importance to the moral and well being of military personnel and their families.

"We must count on the civilian community to provide roughly two thirds of the military housing required for our military families," he continued.

The general pointed out that 7,500 children of military personnel are enrolled in Columbus public schools.

Fort Benning has grown since 1918 from Camp Benning, known as the "seven-day wonder" on Macon Road to its present position as one of the largest and best equipped military installations in the world, he told the Rotarians.

Gen. Harrell's address was illustrated with slides showing the 1918 camp constructed in one week's time, a feat made possible primarily through the efforts of citizens of Columbus.



In striking contrast to the early pictures, Gen. Harrell presented views of the post today and the approved plans for construction of a new academy building for The Infantry School.

"Fort Benning is a truly permanent and stable military installation," Gen. Harrell said. "There has been a steady increase in the average size of the post over the years."

In the light of the recent appraisal of our national defense strategy, the general said, there is no evidence to show that this upward trend will be reversed.

The impact of changes in the national defense strategy is being felt at Fort Benning and will be felt in the civilian community, as well, Gen. Harrell asserted.

"Fort Benning and Columbus are going to have a great and important future," the general added.

Schooling

or members of a Reserve component of any of the Armed Forces not on active duty, may apply for enrollment in the course.

As the transition is made to the new AECP career courses, Army schools will grant credit for work completed by a student within the past six years in the branch company and advanced extension courses.

Under current plans, AECP students will not undertake the resident phase of career course instruction until after July 1, 1962. Students phased into the career courses who are eligible to attend a resident phase which is not available may complete such phases by nonresident means until resident input quotas have been established. Or, such students may attend an appropriate USAR school active duty training period, subject to the approval of the appropriate Army commander.

USAR troop program unit officers enrolled in AECP career courses have been encouraged by USCONARC to attend the appropriate resident instruction in lieu of attending annual active duty training with their units.

The previously announced provision permitting personnel to complete up to 50 percent of selected AECP courses by examination remains in effect.

Headquarters, USCONARC has explained that the USAR School Program and the AECP complement each other. The greatest difference between the two programs is that the USAR school program is intended to meet the military educational needs of Reserve component personnel assigned to USAR control groups. Establishment of the C-24 courses (resident-nonresident) provides an additional means to satisfy the military educational needs of Reserve component personnel of the US Army.

Referees Named For Rifle Match

Four official referees have been named by the National Rifle Association to preside at the International Shooting Championships on post, according to Lt. Col. Burton C. Boatright, match executive at the Infantry Center.

Col. (ret) Perry D. Swindler will officiate on the Running Deer Range while International Pistol events to be fired on the Post Pistol Range will have Lt. Col. (ret) Ben. C. Curtis of Columbus, as official NRA arbiter.

Major (ret) Gene S. Stalcup of Columbus, will oversee International Clay Pigeon events while Capt. (ret) Claude C. Harris, U. S. Marine Corps, will be on Parks Range for the several Free Rifle and Free Pistol events, Col. Boatright said.

Sponsored by the NRA with the cooperation of the Continental Army Command, the Matches will be under operation of personnel of Army Match Headquarters under Col. Boatright's direction.

Of the type seen at world and Olympic competitive levels the matches will be the first of the type ever fired in this country.

U-2 Job Is Now Testing, Weather Reconnaissance

EDWARDS AFB, Calif. (AFPS) — The long-winged U-2 aircraft, once a headlinemaker, is still performing yeoman service on missions remote from international controversy. Since its flights to collect intelligence data were halted in 1960 by presidential order, it has become a familiar sight at the Air Force's Flight Test Center here.

Five of the fleet planes are engaged in duties for which they are uniquely adapted — weather reconnaissance, high altitude testing of space systems and satellite pursuit, jobs which take them to Hawaii, Alaska, Cape Canaveral, Fla., and into the nation's mid-western "Tornado" Alley."

Still another U-2 group performs weather reconnaissance flights for the Strategic Air Command, operating out of Del Rio Texas.

Here at Edwards AFB the U-2s are also being used for taking up infrared lenses intended for the Midas missile warning satellite. They test them by flying high over launching areas to determine if the lenses can pick up missile exhaust.

Pilots of the U-2, which can cruise far above the clouds for seven hours or more, say that the very design which gives it such range and altitude makes it somewhat tricky to land. To keep weight to a minimum the plane has only a special nose wheel, and it takes skill to bring it down in a breeze.

"If you hit that nose wheel too hard," explains one pilot, "the plane bounces up and the first thing you know, you're flying again.

"Or if there's a little gust of wind as you're landing, those big old wings gather it in, and you're airborne again."

Promotions Up 68 This Month

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Army enlisted promotion quotas for October are up a little over September's total which was the largest in several months. The October allocations, E-4 through E-9, amount to 14,236, a total of 68 more than the previous month.

Allocations by grade were: E-9, 120; E-8, 585; E-7, 700; E-6, 1,656; E-5, 1,552; and E-4, 10,321.

China Military Academy Heads Visit The School

Two top ranking officials of the Military Academy of the Republic of China arrived at Muscogee Airport in Columbus, Wednesday for a three-day visit on post.

They were Lt. Gen. Ai Ai, superintendent of the academy and Major Gen. Ching-an Li, chief of the academy's Political Department.

In the party were three other officers from Nationalist China: Col. Sun-ying Hsiang, commandant of cadets; Col. Tso-chih Yao, chief of staff; and Lt. Col. Kuei-tang Shen, Intelligence Section.

While on the post they attended briefings on the organization and instructional facilities of the Infantry School.

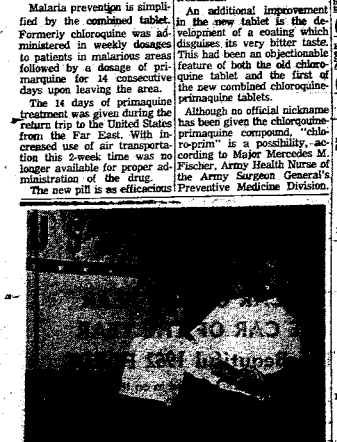
New Anti-Malaria Pill Adopted by Armed Forces

A new anti-malaria pill developed by the Army Medical Service has been successfully field tested in Korea and will be available as a standard item to the Armed Forces this November.

A combination of chloroquine and primaquine, the pill is the result of studies conducted by Dr. Alf S. Alving of the University of Chicago under contract with the Army Medical Research and Development Command, Washington, D. C.

Malaria prevention is simplified by the combined tablet. Formerly chloroquine was administered in weekly dosages to patients in malarious areas followed by a dosage of primaquine for 14 consecutive days upon leaving the area.



The 14 days of primaquine treatment was given during the return trip to the United States from the Far East. With increased use of air transportation this 2-week time was no longer available for proper administration of the drug.

The new pill is as efficacious as the old method and is a real time saver, since it is only taken once a week while in the malarious area. Under the old system with rapid transportation, it would have been necessary to arrange medical surveillance of patients for 2 weeks after returning to the United States.

Alternatives were to detain personnel at one of the other of the terminals — Korea or the United States — for 2 weeks medical surveillance during treatment.

An additional improvement in the new tablet is the development of a coating which disguises its very bitter taste. This had been an objectionable feature of both the old chloroquine tablet and the first of the new combined chloroquine-primaquine tablets.

Although no official nickname has been given the chloroquine-primaquine compound, "chlo-ro-prim" is a possibility, according to Major Mercedes M. Fischer, Army Health Nurse of the Army Surgeon General's Preventive Medicine Division.

No Change

Stripes to Remain As Always--Army

There will be no taking off of stripes next year for Army NCOs in grades E-5, E-6 and E-7, who have not been promoted or demoted since May 31, 1958.

Prior to this change in AR 670-5, all NCOs in those grades who had no change in pay grade since May 31, 1958, would have been required to remove one stripe from their grade insignia and would have been given new titles.

A former E-7 master sergeant wearing six stripes would have become a sergeant first class with five stripes after the change and the title of staff sergeant, and a sergeant E-5 would have retained the sergeant title, but would have been required to remove his "rocker" and wear the three stripes of "buck" sergeant.

Originally the strip change was a result of the change from seven to nine grades of enlisted men. To reduce the number of insignia changes, the "buck" sergeant grade insignia was reestablished and E-8s and E-9s were to wear the six stripes of the former master sergeant with identifying diamonds for first sergeants and stars for sergeants major.

A four year transition period was established for the changeover to give the affected NCOs a chance to be promoted and

Two Benning AAMU Firers Take Top Honors Wednesday

Two Army marksmen accounted for first-day trophies in U. S. International Shooting Championships at the Infantry Center, Tuesday.

Shooting in the first stage of the three-stage International Free Pistol match, 60 shots, slow fire at 50 meters, Sfc Samuel Hunter, Army Advanced Marksmanship Unit, posted a score of 565 out of a possible 600 points, to take first-day honors for the event.

Sfc Sam Hunter, AAMU, won the U.S. International Free Pistol title yesterday just as the Bayonet was going to press.

On the International Running Deer Range, AAMU 1st Lt. Willis Powell, shot a score of 419 out of a possible 500 points at 100 meters to account for the second event of the day.

Some 50 of the nation's rank-ing marksmen competed in the first two of nine separate national championship matches sponsored by the National Rifle Association and which requires shooters to fire each match course three times to establish a three-match aggregate which will decide winners of national laurels.

Runner-up in the Free Pistol event was Army Sfc Lloyd Burchett, AAMU, with a score of 556, while third place was won with 553 by Air Force Capt. Franklin Green.

High Navy competitor was TMI. (Torpedoeman First Class) Gasper Defino who listed a 545. Civilian honors for the first stage of the match were won with a 548 by Los Angeles police officer John Hurst.

Second place daily award was won by Running Deer Rifleman Army 1st Lieutenant John Torbush, AAMU, with 416

TIS Officer Will Present The Legion of Valor Cross

A Post Infantry officer will present the Legion of Valor Bronze Cross for Achievement to a Columbus High School senior at a 9 a.m. ceremony October 31 at the school.

Capt. R. M. Rhieberry, assistant operations officer at the Infantry School, will present the award to William D. Reaves, Jr., 17-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Reaves of Columbus.

The Bronze Cross will be presented to Reaves, a captain in the Corps of Cadets at Columbus High School for being the outstanding cadet in the XII U. S. Army Corps area. It is the first such award to be presented to an area cadet.

The award is also symbolic of Reaves' outstanding achievements in scholarship and military and civic activities. Reaves, who as a youngster had his mind set on going to the Naval Academy at Annapolis but who now wants to attend an Army college, was chosen over ROTC students from the three Columbus high schools.

The recommendation was made by Major Leon P. Johnson, professor of military science and tactics of the Muscogee County School District. The final selection was made by the commanding general of the XII Corps who was Major Gen. Walter B. Yeager, now deputy commanding general of Third Army.

Stateside Tours Are Cut For Most Army Personnel

The current buildup has caused the Army to temporarily set aside a number of its policies and regulations relating to the length of stateside tours.

Effective October 31, a new set of policies will govern eligibility for overseas service.

The new policies will result in some individuals returning overseas earlier than they would have under previous directives. However the Department of the Army said that when trained replacements are available to replace them overseas, they will be returned to the United States provided they do not volunteer to remain overseas.

Those returned to stateside duty will be given an adjusted date of return from overseas as provided for in Paragraph 8c of AR 614-30.

Selection of individuals as fillers or replacement from the qualified individuals available will be made on the basis of length of time in the United States since their return from overseas.

The new policies are outlined in DA Message 577020 which lists the individuals in three categories.

Category I states that effective on the date of reporting for duty to a unit, all personnel who are bachelors, or whose last overseas tour was in an

Capt. Rhotenberry was chosen to present the award to Reaves since the officer is a member of the Legion of Valor.

He received the DSC for valorous service in Korea in November, 1950, only a few days after being commissioned a second lieutenant.

Rhotenberry, who enlisted in the Army as a private in July, 1944, was awarded a battlefield commission in Korea October 18, 1950. He was promoted to his present rank in July, 1954, and was appointed a Regular Army captain last March 15. He has been at Fort Benning since August, 1958.

enthusiasts an opportunity to improve their skill.

Weapons and ammunition will be available at the range although rifle shooters may bring their own weapons if they desire. Only .22 caliber rifles will be permitted on the Running Deer Range.

Supervision of all firing will be under members of the Army's AMU personnel who will enforce all range safety precautions.

Sfc Loyd Crow, current holder of the world championship in the Running Deer event, will give a ten shot demonstration of the course twice for the benefit of shooters and visitors. The first demonstration is scheduled for 10 a.m. and he will give a repeat performance at 2 p.m.

There will be a charge of 50 cents for five shots for all adults and half that amount for youngsters, 15 and under.

For the youthful set there will also be a shooting gallery with prizes set at five shots for ten cents.

Trophy medals have been donated from the AAMU members personal collection. The medals will be awarded to the top firers.

The Running Deer Range can be reached by following Lumpkin Road into the Main Post to Dixie Road, turn right on Dixie and the range is on the immediate left. Appropriate signs will be posted in this area.

No advance reservations are necessary and light refreshments will be available at the range.

Cut

accompanied status, will be available for immediate overseas movement. This will not curtail any leaves or TDY enroute to the unit for the purpose of advancing reporting dates.

Category II provides that individuals whose dependents normally live with them and whose last overseas tour was unaccompanied and have, or will have, been back in the United States and or area of residence for at least nine months on the scheduled date of departure from CONUS, will be made available for overseas.

The third category covers those persons who volunteer for overseas tours.

Length of service remaining on current enlistments, plus any extensions of service, will apply to the retention of individuals in units and will be a criteria for selecting individuals for overseas assignments.

For unit movements, all individuals must have at least four months service remaining on the date the unit is scheduled to sail from the port of embarkation.

Individual replacements and fillers will be selected on the basis of; first, from those who can complete the full normal overseas tour; secondly, from those who can most nearly complete the full tour, and thirdly, those who can complete at least six months overseas.

avoid losing a rocker. June 30, 1962 was to have been the date for conversion.

The Army has kept a close watch on the program and recent studies indicated that a large number of its noncommissioned officers would not have the opportunity for promotion by the cut-off date. Since these men are for the most part long term career soldiers, DA felt they should not be forced to take the bust in title and insignia and so, changed the regulation.

Paragraph 130 of AR 670-5 has been changed to read, "Noncommissioned officers in grades E-5, E-6, and E-7, on 31 May 1958, are authorized to continue to wear the insignia and utilize titles appropriate to these grades on that date until involved in personnel actions which result in promotion or reduction."

Dr. Alexander Frazier Speaks at Post Meeting

For the first time in the history of public schools in the United States the goal in teaching foreign languages today is to make it possible for a student to speak the language well enough to be understood by someone who grew up speaking it, a group of teachers were told Saturday at Fort Benning.

Dr. Alexander Frazier, director of Ohio State University's Center for School Experimentation in Columbus, outlined trends in supervision and curriculum development for 125 teachers met at Faith School for a half-day workshop.

The workshop was staged by the Third West District of the Georgia Association for Supervision and Curriculum Development.

Dr. Frazier said new material is being added to the school curriculum. Such things as anthropology, mythology and eyethology may be added, he said.

The new idea of proficiency in languages is reflected also in science and mathematics, according to Dr. Frazier.

Schools heretofore taught in higher grades are making their way down into the lower grades, the educator said. This is an attempt to avoid putting barriers in the way of children who are ready to learn these subjects earlier than some of their contemporaries, he added.

There has been too much emphasis on graded sequencies in public school instruction, according to Dr. Frazier.

"We need a kind of learning that can be done on one's own," he added.

In science and mathematics, unified programs are being developed to give children guiding principles rather than mere isolated facts, he stated.

"Learning and thinking should not be separated," Dr. Frazier said.

Others on the program included Dr. Frances Hicks, professor of psychology at the Woman's College of Georgia, Milledgeville, and Dr. Lutian R. Weaver, professor of education at the University of Georgia in Athens.

anteed payments are possible under the provisions in the Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act.

Policies must have been in effect for a minimum of 180 days before the policy holder entered active duty for the guarantee to be in effect.

Guaranteed policies will not lapse or terminate for nonpayments of premiums, indebtedness or interest while the policy holder is on active duty. The protection is in effect for two years following the holder's discharge. However, the owner may call for withdrawal of the protection as of his discharge.

Policy holders are reminded that the payment guarantee is, in effect, a loan against the policy itself and must be repaid eventually.

The Issues In Berlin

Red Kidnappings Bring Terror to Divided City

Late in 1947 a West Berlin journalist named Dieter Friede was lured from the West Zone, arrested by the Communists and sentenced — without trial — to 10 years at hard labor. His disappearance brought a storm of protests from the West, yet Soviet authorities denied all knowledge of the incident.

This was one of the earliest of an estimated 200 kidnappings which have shocked and terrorized the residents of the divided city. In the five-year period from Oct. 1, 1949, to June 30, 1954, West Berlin police reported 132 kidnappings of anti-Communists in West Berlin by Soviet and East German secret police.

Eight years after his abduction, Friede returned to West Berlin with a group of German war prisoners from the Soviet Union. Others, such as Dr. Walter Linse, were not so fortunate.

Dr. Linse was a lawyer well known for his fight for human rights. He was set upon in broad daylight by four men in front of his West Berlin home, forced into a taxi and driven to East Berlin. All that remained after the taxi had sped into the Soviet Sector was a shoe dropped from Dr. Linse's foot, still protruding from a half-closed door.

Soviet authorities denied any knowledge of the lawyer's whereabouts, but in June of last year the Federal German Red Cross announced that he had died in the Soviet Union in December 1953.

One victim whose fate has never been disclosed was Dr. Alexander Trushnovich, founder and chairman of the West Berlin Rescue Committee. Soviet agents beat and kidnapped the physician in the British Sector of West Berlin in April 1954.

Painstaking investigation revealed that the kidnapping was ordered by top Soviet authorities, whose intention was to force a phony "confession" from the doctor as part of their "redefection" campaign against Russian emigres. Official protests and personal appeals, as usual, were ignored by the Soviets.

The kidnapping of Karl W. Fricke, another West Berlin journalist who was an East German refugee, was carried out with the aid of a Communist agent who later escaped to the East Zone. Police studies established that Fricke had been forcibly abducted, apparently after having been doped with poisoned candy.

These cases are typical. Many of the victims were prominent officials in the East German regime who fled to the West and became anti-Communist. One of these was Maj. Sylvester Marau, who defected from the East German militarized police. He was kidnapped in the American Sector in August 1955.

Robert Bialek, a former inspector general in the East German police, was drugged and kidnapped by Communist agents in the British Sector in February 1956. Bialek had spent the three previous years exposing Soviet rule in East Germany in numerous writings and broadcasts.

The ex-policeman apparently was drugged while a guest at a party given by a refugee friend. Realizing he had been drugged, Bialek locked himself in the hall bathroom where he was found unconscious by another tenant. His "friends" from the party said they would drive him to a hospital, but none were ever seen again.

The same week American authorities protested to the Soviets regarding an attempted abduction of four Germans from the American Sector. Communist police had tried to kidnap another former East German policeman, his sister-in-law and her two daughters, but the plan was frustrated when the 21-year-old ex-policeman beat off his would-be abductors

Chaplain's Corner

Due to a rapid build-up in active duty personnel we've had little occasion to fall into what some call "military monotony." This build-up of strength has imposed added work on fewer personnel. I have observed that almost everyone has risen to face this challenge with added vigor and enthusiasm.

In this scientific age greater stress is being placed upon mechanical means to increase production in industry and lower unit costs. This increased mechanical trend has contributed, in a decided measure, to the monotony of daily living.

The idea of "A Change of Pace" is to provide other avenues for individual expression, enjoyment and improvement. On post there are located several chapels where varied programs of religious worship and religious education are conducted for Protestants, Catholics and Jews.

By assisting through attendance at worship and working as a lay-volunteer you can find "A Change of Pace" which contributes to growth, contentment and community morale.

Religion can provide a more adequate perspective for daily existence and contribute to the strength of our America.

Attend Chapel on post next Sunday and find the added intellectual and spiritual strength for your daily tasks.

The Surgeon Says

By Colonel William A. Todd, Jr., M. C.

First aid instruction continues to grow in importance as industries, city, state and federal authorities, schools and colleges and other private organizations realize the significance of such training. First aid training is a valuable home and community resource at all times.

Such training helps the individual to prevent accidents and to care for himself and his immediate family when accidents do occur. It is invaluable in any kind of disaster.

The Army recognizes the need for this type of training. In the event of nuclear attack, survival may very well depend on what everyone does for himself, his family or neighbor during the first critical hours following such an attack.

Department of the Army Training Circular 8-1, Training in Emergency Medical Care, establishes the policy and outlines the responsibilities for the training of officer and enlisted personnel of the United States Army in emergency medical care, survival care (first aid-self aid), and in the management of mass casualties.

The American Red Cross is the agency which has the responsibility for training the civilian populace of our country in first aid and each Red Cross chapter has the volunteer organization to carry on such a volunteer training program.

First aid is the immediate and temporary care given the victim of an accident or sudden illness until the services of a physician can be obtained. It may mean the difference between life and death, between rapid recovery and long hospitalization, between temporary disability and permanent injury.

In every case, proper first aid reduces suffering and makes the physician's task easier when he assumes the care of the patient.

The need for first aid training is plainly evident in everyday life. It is of particular importance to parents of young children. We at Martin Army Hospital stand ready to serve you with the finest of medical care when our specialized services are needed.

However, in many instances, the application of prompt and proper first aid would obviate a hurried trip to the hospital. Minor cuts and abrasions, splinters, scraped knuckles, insect bites, and numerous other conditions can adequately be treated by a skilled first aider.

In addition to reducing the volume of persons presenting themselves to our Emergency Room so that we can care for those more critically ill, you can save yourself many hours of anguish and suffering while awaiting treatment.

First aid classes conducted by the American Red Cross are to start November 2 and all dependents of military personnel of Fort Benning are encouraged to enroll.

The course consists of 10 sessions of two hours each, held on Tuesdays and Thursdays, on have three choices of hours — 9:00 to 11:00 a.m., 12:30 to 2:30 p.m. or 7:00 to 9:00 p.m.

This course will enable you to give simple but effective first aid in such accidents as poisoning, burns, and those causing loss of consciousness or loss of blood or bodily injury. Mouth-to-mouth and other methods of resuscitation, bandaging and splinting will be taught also.

Medical Committee Teaches Subjects To All Resident Classes

'Conserve Fighting Strength' Is Group's Motto and Mission

"Conserve the fighting strength!"

This motto, which is the mission of the entire Medical Service, takes on real meaning in the Medical Committee of the Special Subjects Department.

Here, medical instructors study and teach the various problems which may confront an Infantry officer in the future. This means that the medical lessons of previous wars must be included in today's doctrine.

Combat officers must become alert to additional medical problems which can be expected in the future as a result of the newer ideas in austerity, mobility, and dispersion.

The Committee, headed by Lt. Col. George T. Britton, MC, teaches selected medical subjects to all resident classes. For realism and for detailed instruction they use standard training aids such as bleeding moulages, a human skeleton, and a plastic anatomical model with removable organs.

In addition, they use certain experimental medical items which have been furnished the Infantry School for evaluation, such as a wooden section of the head and throat, a torso for teaching mouth-to-mouth breathing, "Rescue Andy" — another breathing dummy with an inflatable chest — and special wound make-up.

Using make-up kits, which contain special theatrical supplies, Sfc James C. Hurst and Sgt. Charles H. Campbell reproduce certain combat wounds on demonstration troops. These simulated injuries give student Infantry Officers an idea of the true appearance of such wounds. Such training also shows students how they can provide psychological conditioning for their own troops during training.

"Just fix up a man with one of these fake wounds," suggests Lt. Col. Chester H. Davis, MSC, of the Medical Committee, "and slip him out into the middle of your training area. You will see then whether your men are ready for the buddy-aid they must perform in wartime!"

Wound simulation is used also by Capt. Ernest C. Snyder, MSC, in demonstrating the division medical service. Using a simulated combat situation, Capt. Snyder, formerly an Infantry officer, explains the actions of aidmen, frontline ambulances, and the battle group aid station.

This demonstration is acted out by the medical platoon of the 29th Infantry, under Lt. Edwin F. Tompkins, MSC, and MSgt James E. Sheffey; and by the medical section of the 58th Armored Rifle Battalion, under Lt. Harold R. Evans, MSC, and Sgt. Edward Meinfech. Conservation of the fighting strength is a main point of the demonstration and is illustrated by the return to duty of all casualties capable of assisting commanders in carrying out their mission.

The Medical Committee teaches sanitation and preventive medicine to all classes, and teaches the medical aspects of nuclear explosions to the Nuclear Weapons Employment classes. In this instruction the committee does not emphasize the long-range theoretical hazards of radiation, but confines itself to those practical battlefield problems which may face a combat leader in a nuclear war.

In addition to being the committee chairman, Lt. Col. Britton serves also as the Staff Surgeon for the Infantry School. He and his committee, therefore, analyze Infantry doctrine from a medical point of view and medical doctrine from an Infantry point of view. Often they are called upon to comment on various organizations and manuals, recommend troop tests, or evaluate general purpose equipment for possible medical use.

The committee has participated on various projects of the School by evaluating the human factors involved in testing of physical conditioning, developing advanced first aid techniques for troops on extended patrol operations, and evaluating endurance factors in the recent squad and platoon tests. Often the committee contributes to the testing of aircraft and vehicles for possible use in evacuating casualties.

At the present time the Committee is particularly interested in finding a new, light vehicle, with a lower silhouette and a swimming capability, for use as a forward ambulance, and in finding some mechanical device to carry a litter patient along a narrow jungle or mountain trail. They have been concerned also with the testing of cargo vehicles for the bonus ability of carrying wounded Soldiers on litters in a mass-casualty situation.

All of these separate activities are focused on the single goal of providing the Infantry with the best possible medical service to conserve the fighting strength.

Distaff Doings

Once more we had the good fortune to welcome two members to the NCO Wives Club of Fort Benning during our last get-together on Wednesday, October 18. They are Mesdames Frederick Szymanski and Hollis Nolan. Hope both ladies will have a most enjoyable time with us in the future.

Enjoyed the hat show immensely. It was organized and narrated in a very professional manner by our program chairman, Mrs. Laurie W. Rentrop. Keep up the good work, Dottie. The lovely hats were modeled with flair and charm by the Mesdames Herbert Klein, Basel Plumley and Chester Baird. Hope everyone's budget is still intact! The two very lucky winners of the door prizes, a hat of their choice, were Mrs. Frederick Szymanski and Mrs. Tanito Fortez. Tasty refreshments were prepared and served by our hostesses of the week, Mrs. Robert Lamb and Mrs. Edward Sanderson.

Congratulations to Mrs. Hermann E. Lyons. Marguerite displayed a tablecloth, which took six weeks to embroider, and which won her first prize at the fair recently. Undoubtedly some of the most beautiful work anyone ever saw.

Hello again to two charming guests, Mrs. Rex Bridges and Mrs. Robert R. Jones Jr. Hope to see you again soon.

Due to lack of space all the information about our bridge sessions could not be printed last week. As you know, bridge is now being played at Crain Hall every Tuesday starting at 9 a.m. Prizes are available for regular members. Do come out and join our friendly brand of bridge, either on a steady basis or as a guest.

Don't forget to remind the children to remind you about the Halloween party for the kiddies on Saturday, October 28, at 2 p.m. in the clubhouse. This promises to be a very happy affair for the little ones but be sure to let us know how many of them will attend and what their ages are.

Try to make an appearance at the regular business meeting on November 1, at the clubhouse. Bingo as usual afterwards.

Everyone is looking forward to a luncheon at Crain Hall Wednesday, November 8, at 1:30 p.m. Make plans right now, girls, to attend this gala affair, since reservations will be necessary.

Sorry to inform you that our plans for a big fashion show have been, of necessity, deferred. In the meantime our program chairman, Dottie Rentrop, will think of something just as exciting, to be sure.

Have you talked your husband into accompanying you to the harvest supper in the clubhouse on November 4, 7:30 p.m.? Remind him that his favorite old comfortable clothes are just fine for this one. Without a doubt there will be some extra special goodies in those covered dishes.

Prayer Circles Announced By Post Chaplain Section

Fort Benning's Protestant, Women-of-the-Chapels are organizing prayer circles, Chaplain (Col.) Silas E. Decker, post chaplain, has announced.

A prayer circle will include approximately six women living in the same neighborhood.

Each circle will meet once a week during the morning, rotating from home to home.

Purpose of the groups is to promote the religious life of the post through prayer, study and acquainting new arrivals with the worship and religious education activities available, Chaplain Decker said.

One activity of the prayer circles will be the enlistment of new Sunday School teachers and supervisors, he added.

With the rapid turnover of military personnel, there is a constant need for teachers in the Post Sunday School in the Main Post, Sand Hill and Harmony Church areas.

Approximately 210 volunteer teachers are needed to teach an average of 1,500 children attending the school. This number does not include the children who attend Lutheran, Episcopalian and Spanish Protestant Sunday Schools on the post.

The prayer circles will be under the direction of Mrs. Marguerite Waldrop of Columbus, Ga., director of Christian education at Fort Benning, and Mrs. Paul T. Engle, wife of Col. Engle president of the Women-of-the-Chapels.

The Infantry Center Chaplains Sponsor Supper, Fellowship Hour

Fort Benning Sunday School teachers, prospective teachers and other interested adults will meet at 6:30 p.m. Monday, Oct. 23, in Bldg. 2605 for a pot luck supper and fellowship hour, preliminary to a week of study in a Christian Leadership School.

The school, to be conducted by the Infantry Center Chaplains Section, will provide, classes for teachers of five age groups.

On Monday evening, Chaplain (Col.) Silas E. Decker, post chaplain, will deliver an inspiration address to the group after the supper.

Following Chaplain Decker's speech, the teachers will be divided into classes.

Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings, they will report to their classes at 7:30 p.m. Classes are nursery, Bldg. 2605; kindergarten and beginner, Bldg. 2618; primary, Bldg. 2617; junior, 2624, and junior and senior high school, Bldg. 2606.

Members of the faculty for the Leadership School are Mrs. Robert P. Peacock, Mrs. W. J. Erwin, Mrs. W. B. Clemmons, Mrs. W. J. Heard and Dr. Charles J. Granade, pastor of Wynnton Baptist Church, all of Columbus, Ga.

Mrs. Marguerite Waldrop, director of Christian education on the post, will direct the school.

The school is sponsored for Protestant Sunday Schools in the Main Post, Sand Hill and Harmony Church areas. Teachers of the Lutheran and Episcopal Sunday Schools and other interested personnel are invited to attend.

Personnel who are not already working in the Main Post Sunday School are requested to make reservations for the Leadership School by telephoning LI 5-4334.

Each night during the course a nursery will be provided in Bldg. 2609 for the children of those attending the classes.

One sixth of the school year is now tucked into our storehouse of memories. The sign post of the degree of merit is the well-known report card.

Baker students took home the Student Achievement and Guidance Report. The A-G report is a seven part carbon interleaf form covering a full year's teachers comments, and guidance reports. Students from the other schools continued to use the regular report card form. What type of merit did you tuck into your storehouse?

The Sigma Delta Beta sorority has recently completed its fall rush. The rushees are Sandy Colee, Georgianne Dilloe, Sandy Duke, Edith Freudendorf, Pat Harrison, Marsha Nottage, Sara Walters, Cissy Whitt, Earle Wilder, and Nancy Williams. "Hell night" was Friday, October 6. The girls spent an utterly riotous night. Their induction was the next night, Saturday, at the Main Post Chapel. It was followed by a pizza dinner given by the rushees for the old members at Earle Wilder's house.

Several of our Benningites have prominent positions in the high schools this year. George Britton holds the office of Vice President at Columbus High School's Quill and Scroll. Herb Roberts is one of the Semi-Finalists of the National Merit Scholarship. The new President of the FTA at Baker is Kathie Fitch. At Pacelli Mary Mike Magner is Vice President of the Student Council and Co-Editor of the school paper. Good Luck and Congratulations!

We were glad to see the familiar face of Georgia Anne Cain last weekend. She was visiting once again from St. Augustine, Fla. While here she stayed with the Todds.

A hallmark of Fall is the JADA Fall Fashion Show. Much preparation is required to put on a successful show. Sports clothes were sponsored by Town and Country. The were shown off by: Sandy Bagley, Edith Freudendorf, Barbara Hare, Stephanee Magee, Linda Seawell, Mike Ann Sterner, Tilda Todd, and Chris Youngs. Kayser-Lilienthal was responsible for the evening creations. Beverly Chapman, Sandy Duke, Cheryl Ely, Cathy Ewart, Mary Kay Gasperini, Kay Jones, and Annette Petarock modeled these fashions of dreams.

A long anticipated moment for Columbus Seniors arrived October 2. Their rings now shine out as a final proof of seniority. Underclassmen beware!

Pacelli High is the only school not having pigskin problems. They have chalked up five victories and a tie. They certainly have reason to be proud. Even though Columbus spirit is higher than ever, they are still waiting to score a victory. The Baker Lions are roaring about their win last Friday. The big question today is — who'll win the Baker-Columbus game.

Confetti marked the trails for the Hunt Club paper chase Saturday, October 7. Sandy Leonard, a Baker freshman, was the first to spot the fox tail that afternoon. Refreshments were served to all the participants at the end of the chase.

We'd like to congratulate Georgianne Dillon for winning second prize in the Chattahoochee Valley Exposition Art Exhibit. Her class was the still life or spray, oil or pastle.

Our storehouse of memories grows from moment to moment and stretches into the years. Let's have fun while we can and make our life rich with excitement, adventure, and knowledge. Hope your storehouse bulges at the seams with fabulous memories of times gone by.

Autumn Leaves Decorate Social

The ladies of the Infantry Board kicked off their fall social session with a dessert-bridge held recently in the Main Officer Open Mess.

The hostesses, ladies of the Operations Division, being inspired by a nip of fall in the air, used an autumn decor in their arrangement of autumn leaves and berries on the individual tables.

Prior to an evening of bridge and canasta, Lt. Col. Bruce Merritt, Chief of the Operation Division of the Infantry Board, showed an interesting film which told of the board's mission and functions in the test process which all Infantry equipment and weapons are subjected to.

Mrs. James E. Echols was a guest.

Jenni Johnson on Etiquette

DEAR JENNI: I am frequently perplexed by military jargon, particularly series of letters. Could you list some of the common ones and their meanings. I am often corrected by my husband but they don't seem to stick in my mind.

DEAR A.D.E.: What does A.D.E. stand for? Seriously though I know what you mean. I once announced that my father-in-law was head of TO&E for 1st Army. TO&E stands for Tables of Organization and Equipment. The gentlemen found it quite amusing. What I meant of course was TI&E, Troop Information and Education.

Acronyms are an idiosyncrasy of the American people. We love to use them and they are an eternal enigma to many just a few used at Fort Benning.

STRAC, Strategic Army Corps; STRAF, Strategic Army Force; CP Command Post; CONARC, Continental Army Command; EAD, Extended Active Duty; GCM, General Court - Martial; MOOM, Main Officers-Open Mess; BG, Battle Group; MATS, Military Air Transport Service; MOS, Military Occupational Specialty.

Other phrases used are: PIO, Public Information Office; PCS, Permanent Change of Station; TDY, Temporary Duty; OD, Officer of the Day; OC, Officer of the Guard; SOP, Standard Operating Procerure; 201 File, Personal record of Army Personnel.

Now here is one to think about. IG, Inspector General. He is not necessarily a general. He inspects everything in general, for some general.

Note also that periods are never used to separate the letters as you would initials.

GL . . GOOD LUCK

Company Tactics Ladies Coffee

The Ladies of Company Tactics, Command and Staff Department, held their monthly coffee recently in the Anzio Room of the Main Officer's Open Mess. Mrs. Robert Skiles was the hostess with Mrs. Roscoe Lacy and Mrs. Merlyn L. Stanfield as her guests.

Mrs. Stewart Moody poured coffee at a beautifully decorated table. Hot ham biscuits, doughnut holes, and assorted pastries were served. Wife of the committee chief, Mrs. Woodrow Laws, presented baby spoons to Mrs. Raymond Boecker and Mrs. Elmer Briggs.

Mrs. Willard E. Harrison, wife of the Department Director, attended as guest of honor.

Dr. Chaviano Is Speaker At Career Ladies Luncheon

The Fort Benning Supper Club was the scene of a luncheon held recently by the ladies of the Infantry Officers Career Course, Detachment 2, the 2nd Student Battalion, the Student Brigade.

Dr. Francisco Chaviano, a doctor who had operated a hospital in Cuba until 1960, gave a very interesting talk on the Cuban situation. Dr. Chaviano, with his wife and three children, now make their home in Phenix City where he is a resident physician at Cobb Memorial Hospital.

Mrs. Ben Harrell, wife of Maj. Gen. Ben Harrell, Commandant of The Infantry School, Mrs. Egeland, guest of Mrs. Frank Taylor, Mrs. Lathrop, guest of Mrs. Agustin Toro, and Mrs. Mibelli of Venezuela, guest of Mrs. Efrain Vegas were present as invited guests.

The head table was decorated with an arrangement of straw flowers and autumn leaves. Witches, cats, and Jack-O-Lanterns, placed on the tables, carried out the Halloween theme. Holding court on the bandstand was a scarecrow dressed in a fatigue uniform.

Hostessing the luncheon were Mesdames Weldon Honeycutt, Lynn Taylor, Bynum Westall, Neece Davis, Robert Huebner, Robert Phillips, and Francis Taylor. Approximately eighty persons attended the occasion.

Col. Lyman Is New Bank President

Col. (ret.) William A. Lymann was last Saturday elected president of The National Bank of Fort Benning.

Lyman, who has been a director of the bank since its founding, was named to the bank's top executive post at a special meeting at the bank Saturday morning.

E. G. Sparks was elected first vice president and cashier and appointed to the board of directors. William V. Rattan was elected a vice president.

Col. Lyman was born in 1909 in Rome, Ga. He received an A.B. degree from the University of Alabama in 1933 and attended the Stonier Graduate School of Banking at Rutgers University in 1948.

His banking career began with the Fourth National Bank here and was with the Trust Company of Georgia for a short period in 1941 before joining the First National Bank of Rome in late 1911.

Except for four years of Army service during World War II, Col. Lyman was with his hometown bank until January of 1957, when he came to National Bank of Fort Benning as executive vice president.

In Rome he served as president of the Kiwanis Club, chairman of the Red Cross chapter, as a member of the board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce.

Col. Lyman is married to the former Helen Fleming and they have one son, Stewart F. Lyman and a grandson, Stewart F. Jr., aged two.

Sparks was born in 1926 in Pacelot, S. C. and is a graduate of Clemson College. He also attended the Rutgers School of Banking in 1962.

He began his banking career with the Liberty National Bank in Cedartown, Ga. and was that city's "Man of the Year" in 1956. He served two and one-half years in the Army during World War II.

Sparks joined the post bank at its organization in 1957, as assistant cashier. He was named assistant vice president and cashier in July, 1958 and was made vice president and cashier in January, 1960.

He is president of the Chattahoochee Valley Chapter of the National Assn. of Auditors and Controllers and a member of the executive committee of Junior Bankers of Georgia.

Sparks is married to the former Hazel Neal Blythe of Charlotte, N. C. and they have three children, John E., 11; James N. 8; and Laura, 2. They live at 4024 Edgewood Circle.

Col. Rattan was born in Cooper, Tex. and retired from the Army in 1951 after 34 years service.

After attending Texas Christian University, he enrolled in the first Officers Training Camp at Leon Springs, Tex. in 1917 and was commissioned a second lieutenant of Infantry.

He saw service in both World Wars and in the Phillippine Insurrection.

Col. Rattan is married to the former Rose Harriet Ross of Pendleton, Ore., and they have one son, Lt. Col. Donald V. Rattan, now on duty with Headquarters, Allied Ground Forces, Central Europe, at Fontainebleau, France.

Col. and Mrs. Rattan reside at 3912 Mosley Dr., Columbus.

Student Brigade Personnel Observe 19th Anniversary

The Student Brigade of The Infantry School will observe its 19th anniversary tomorrow on post, beginning with a noncommissioned officers' miniature review at 8:30 a.m. on the parade field of the first Quartel.

Following the review, the companies will hold competitive athletics, open house and buffet luncheons.

The brigade, commanded by Col. Otto R. Koch, Jr., was first organized June 29, 1942. It observes its anniversary in October due to the heavy load of students in the summer.

Three student battalions, the Second, Fourth and Fifth, The Infantry School Battalion and Headquarters Company comprise the brigade. The 15th Finance Disbursing Section is also attached to the unit to provide financial service for the students.

The Second Student Battalion plays a vital role in The Infantry School's development and evaluation of newly commissioned infantry officers. Nearly 3,500 second lieutenants are graduated annually from the eight-week Infantry officer orientation course. Career officers who attend the advanced and specialized courses at The Infantry School are also assigned to the Second Battalion.

Members of the Fourth Student Battalion, undergo some of the most demanding training found anywhere in the Army. Students taking the three-week airborne training qualifying them to wear the parachutists' wings are assigned to that unit along with students taking the nine-week Ranger course.

The Fifth Battalion is the "home" of the officer candidates. Those successfully completing the strenuous 23-week grind are commissioned as second lieutenants, platoon leaders capable of leading men without further training. The OCS recently celebrated its 29th anniversary.

The Infantry School Battalion provides administrative and logistical support for the academic departments of The Infantry School. Personnel of ISB work in offices, classrooms and training areas throughout the post.

NEW MODERN CABIN INTERIORS!

Halloween's Traditions

Halloween in its modern form is a festive occasion when kiddies of the Christian world dress in grotesque costumes, ring doorbells for treats and pull childish pranks. It is a time when impressionable children imagine the blackened autumn sky is filled with flying witches, goblins and mischievous skeletons.

Actually, Halloween wasn't always a time of glee, but rather a night of grim pagan rites. Long before European Christendom set aside Nov. 1 as Allhallows, or All Saints' Day, the night before the hallowed eve was time for superstitious people to placate the spirits of the dead. To them, it was the end of the year and the beginning of winter.

Druid soothsayers of ancient Gaul and Britain recited magic tunes in rings of stones, such as the great circle at Stonehenge in Wiltshire. The Celts of Scotland and Ireland gathered on windy hilltops around huge fires.

Presumably these bonfires were used to guide the spirits of the dead to their final resting places, or to frighten off witches. For on that certain night, witches and goblins supposedly roamed the countryside, terrifying the populace.

Division Marks 44th Year Tomorrow

LEADS REVIEW
Gen. Reynolds

Troops, Guns, Rockets, Tanks to Pass in Review

The 2nd Infantry Division tomorrow will celebrate its 44th year of service in the "Second to None's" most ambitious effort since coming to Fort Benning.

The firing of an "Honest John" rocket, the naming of the "Career Soldier-of-the-Year" and a review containing 80 per cent of the division's Troop strength will help mark the occasion at Main Post's Sightseeing Field.

Activities begin at 9:30 a.m. and are expected to have in attendance hosts of visiting military and civilian dignitaries.

Last year, at the division's 1961 Organization Day review, crowds estimated at 15,000 were "jammed" onto Wetherby Field "under beautiful sunny skies" to see a "training" division.

Troop Strength

This year, with more than 80 per cent troop strength marching, followed by motorized elements, the division's most powerful weapons, the firing of the Army's "Sunday Punch" — the "Honest John" rocket — and a simulated nuclear blast, the review will be the biggest ever staged by the 2nd Division at Fort Benning.

The 1960 Organization Day review, last year, was commanded entirely by noncommissioned officers, with the division's sergeant major serving as commander of Troops, with a staff of three sergeant majors and one master sergeant.

Tomorrow, Brigadier General Royal Reynolds, Jr., the assistant division commander, will be commander of Troops, flanked by a staff of Lieutenant Colonels—the division's G-1, G-3, G-3 and G-4.

On the reviewing stand will be Lieutenant General T. J. H. Trapnell, Third U. S. Army Commander, and Major General Charles H. Chase, division commanding general.

They will be joined by the Sightseeing Field is located south of Eubanks Field, the site of the jump towers.

Gen. Reynolds Leads Tomorrow's Review

Leading tomorrow's Organization Day review, the largest parade ever staged by the 2nd Division at Fort Benning, will be Brigadier General Royal Reynolds Jr., assistant division commander, who will serve as commander of Troops.

The review will begin with the passing of the 2nd Infantry Division Band, under the direction of Chief Warrant Officer Mariano Morales.

Making up the staff next in line will be Lieutenant Colonel Ralph K. Jones, G-1 (personnel); Lieutenant Colonel John B. Wine, G-2, (intelligence); Lieutenant Colonel Ralph H. Hughett, G-3 (training and operations), and Lieutenant Colonel James Larson, G-4 (supply and logistics).

Two Brigades

The review has been divided into two brigades, with Colonel Maurice C. Holden, deputy brigade commander, commanding the first unit composed of the division's five battle groups.

Order of review of these units and their commanders are: 1st Infantry, Colonel Walter B. Todd; 9th Infantry, Colonel Clifford P. Hanauma; 11th Infantry, Colonel John E. Arthur; 23rd Infantry, Colonel Louis A. Kunzig, Jr.; 87th Infantry, Colonel Robert E. Conner.

Next in line will be the National, Third U. S. Army and 2nd Infantry Division colors, led by Division Sergeant Major Robert L. Brown.

The next half of the parade will be the second brigade led by Colonel Frank A. Osmanski, Division Artillery commander.

14 Candidates Await Announcement of the 2nd Infantry Division 'Career Soldier-of-the-Year' for 1962

By Peter Tritschoff

Who will be the division's "Career Soldier - of - the - Year" for 1962?

Tomorrow, Major General Charles H. Chase will present an award to one Soldier, singled out from the entire 2nd Infantry Division to bear the title of "Career Soldier-of-the-Year."

Competition for this distinguished title has narrowed down to 14 candidates.

Here they are — the men selected by their commanders for their impressive record of service, conscientious pursuit of education, decorations and awards, personal appearance and military bearing, instructional ability and a knowledge of customs and traditions of the Army, general military subjects and the history of the 2nd Infantry Division:

Platoon Sergeant Richard B. Alford, whose hometown is Parish Union, Louisiana, is the 9th Infantry's Candidate. He is 33 years old, married, and the father of two children.

Sergeant Alford has been with the 9th Infantry for over two years. He was promoted to Platoon Sergeant February 1.

1st Infantry

From the 1st Infantry — Sergeant First Class Olen Nantz, of Company B, who arrived at the "Always First" battle group July 2 from assignment at Fort Rucker. Sergeant Nantz is 32 years old, married and has one child—a girl.

He was promoted to Sergeant First Class December 22, 1955.

23rd Infantry

A native of Frederick, Oklahoma, is the 23rd Infantry's aspiring "Career Soldier-of the Year" candidate.

He is Sergeant First Class Nevel Marcum, who has been with the "We Servers" for 11 months. He is 30 years old, married, and has three children—two girls and a boy.

THE GREAT WAR

GREAT MULTITUDE ACCLAIMS THE 2D IN FINAL PARADE

Men of the Division That Crushed Prussian Guard at Belleau Wood Royally Welcomed by Father Knickerbocker.

"DEVIL DOG" MARINES GET OVATION AT GRAND STAND.

Pure Military Unit, Grim and Purposeful, Had No Colorsome or Banners in Honor of Its Dead in March Up Avenue.

Boys are tramping by. Tanned young faces under scarred steel helmets. Square shoulders under slight khaki covering. Stout legs in spirals of olive colored wool are swinging in unison.

An impression of firm chins outlined by helmet straps, forward looking eyes in stern, youthful faces. Flowers tossed by pretty girls are churned into green and crimson and yellow under the tireless beat of lines of evenly swinging heavy brown boots, hitting the black asphalt in steady cadence.

An observer could not imagine those lads doing otherwise than going onward over all obstacles—or dying.

That was the picture that a great artist might have drawn of the march up Fifth Avenue yesterday afternoon of the 2d Division past the reviewing stand in front of the Public Library.

And perhaps a great artist might have made immortal the moment and the scene. He might put the soul of up and onward into his picture—that and unconquerable youth.

For to one who has seen all the great parades in New York since the world war ended none created such an impression of unconquerable youth as did this tramp up the avenue of the 2d Division.

That titan hammer of flesh and steel with which the flower of the German Army, the Prussian Guard, was driven at Belleau Wood has been written about much. It will be written about more.

And those who were fortunate enough to be among the thousands who lined Fifth Avenue to see it march into history—the last march of be 9th and 23rd regulars and the 5th and 6th Marines ("Devil Dogs") —probably never will see the written word without a choky feeling in the throat and a quickening pulse.

Puttees Added For Yank Garb; Leggings Ousted

A part of the Yank doughboy's uniform is under discussion at present. The ever-loving wonderful canvas leggings, that is. Now, we all know the extra benefits of this vital part of our uniform.

Certainly while training in the States, the buckle strap contraptions aided in collecting the dust kicked up by marching troops and keeping the grime from one's legs.

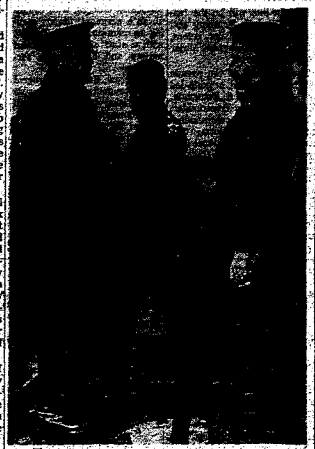
But here, in France, the trenches don't cooperate in producing swirling dust swirls. Instead the ever-present water in the bottom soaks into the canvas leggings and waits for the cold of the night.

The night air does the rest, stiffening the leggings until they feel like steel plates imprisoning the lower members of the body. Something has to be done and word has it from General Headquarters that relief is in sight for the Yanks.

The new device is called a puttee and wraps around the lovely Red Cross lass bandaging tenderly a wounded arm.

YANK PAPER YEAR OLD; SERVES ALL AMERICANS

February 8, 1918: This day marks the first anniversary of our own Stars and Stripes newspaper and we use this opportunity to reflect on a fine year both for the American Expeditionary Forces and the Stars and Stripes. It was early in last year that Lieutenant Guy T. Viskniskki, Infantry, arrived and suggested a newspaper strictly for the Americans.



The Stars and Stripes had and has but one purpose and that is to give the Army a voice and thereby stimulate the morale of the A. E. F. Here, at its start, was an army that was scattered to the winds of Europe. The idea was to write for the Yanks training with the British, the Yanks brigaded with the French, the Yanks loaned to Italy and the Yanks venturing a bit on their own northwest of Toul.

And, since Yanks are all skeptics who can smell bunk a mile off, it was decided that the truth must and should serve. No propaganda is used in the Stars and Stripes although we receive much copy from the British and French headquarters which is mainly propaganda. We of the editorial staff of the Stars and stripes decided to instead bank our hopes on the A. E. F. and follow their progress.

What we should have done if the A. E. F. failed, just how we should have extricated ourselves from our policy if the American troops had gone in for strategic retreating, we don't know.

But thanks to the combat divisions, the problem never arose. From that electric day in May, when the breathless squads from the 7th Machine Gun Battalion jumped into the fighting in the streets of Chateau-Thierry, the task of The Stars and Stripes became easy. The editorial staff just hung onto the coattails of the irresistable doughboys and was carried to glory.

During the stay of the A. E. F. in Europe, the Stars and Stripes became an institution.

COMMAND VISIT . . . The distinguished commander of the American Expeditionary Forces, General John J. "Blackjack" Pershing visits the 2nd Division on the front. With General Pershing is our own division commander, Major John J. LeJeune.

2ND REPORTS ON ATTACKS IN EUROPE'S GREAT WAR

Early in June the 2nd moved into the attack and sent a detailed report of the action and intelligence aspects of the attack to the General Headquarters. Their report follows:

"This morning, June 6, 1918, our troops attacked on the line station Bourescbes, Chateau Belleau, Torcy, Hill 126, as contemplated. The attack was highly successful, all objectives being reached. The exact number of enemy prisoners taken by us is not yet accurately known. A patrol from Mares Farm put to rout an enemy machine-gun post of twice its strength bringing back two prisoners and killing six. Reconnaissance patrols were spotted from the right of our lines.

Infantry offered unavailing resistance with machine guns to our attack on the left of our line and were forced to withdraw to the north. Enemy aircraft very active, 59 reconnaissance planes being over our sector during the day."

From this action, the 2nd Division continued on against the enemy, with successive defending of the terrain they took in the attack. The Germans were quick to launch strong counter attacks laced with heavy barrages of artillery and concentrated machine-gun fire. An item from the report of the 2nd during the counter-attack phase noted that "considerable mustard and lachrymatory gas shells were employed by the enemy."

Communications played a vital role in World War I and were employed by commanders throughout the lines for effective leadership. During heavy action of attacks or defensive stands, the communications were disrupted due to the disorder at the moment.

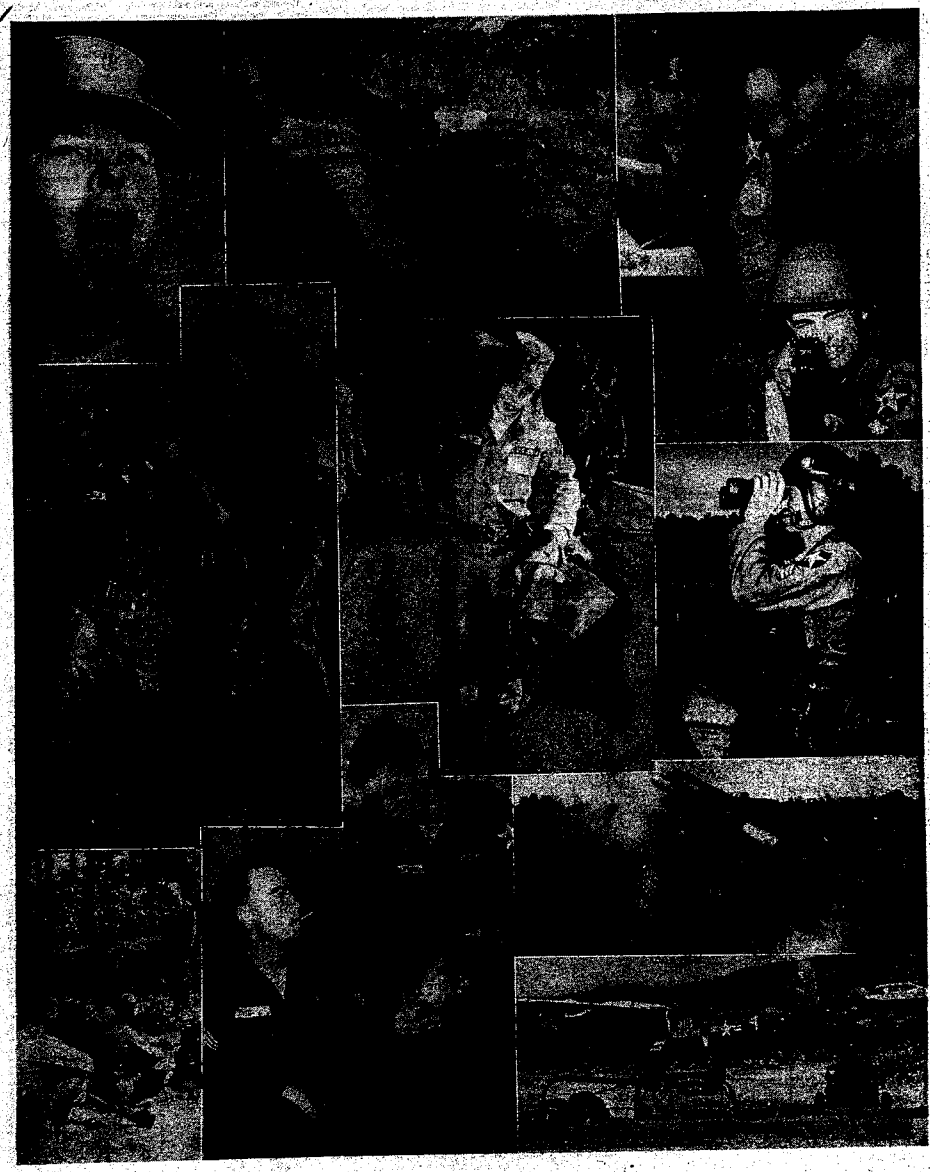
German's Letter Tells of Misery Yanks Give Him

Dear Kurt:

"We are now in the battle zone and canteens dare not come to us on account of the enemy, for the Americans are bombarding the villages 15 kilometers behind the present front with long range guns, and you will know that the canteen outfit and the others who are lying in reserve do not venture very far, for it is not pleasant to eat cherries with the Americans. The reason for that is that they have not yet had much experience. The American divisions are still very fiery.

About 400 of us are lying about here. We have our corner of the woods and the American has the other corner. That is not nice, for all of a sudden he rushes forward and one does not know it before.

Therefore one must shoot at every little noise, or one cannot trust them. Here always two men have dug a hole for themselves. Here one lies day and night without a blanket only with a coat and a shelter-half. One freezes at night like a tailor, for the nights are fiercely cold.



I hope that I will be lucky enough to escape from this horrible mess, for up to now I have always been lucky. Many of my comrades are already buried here.

The enemy sweeps every evening the whole country side with machine-gun and rifle fire and then artillery fire. But, we in the front lines are safer than in the support position.

At present our food is miserable. We are now fed upon dried vegetables and marmalade and when at night we obtain more food it is unpalatable. It is half sour and all cold. In the day we receive nothing."

With the determination of we Yanks, the German soldier will eventually find his food is all sour, all cold and all gone.

The Story of a Division Birthday Cake

By Peter Tatistcheff

One inquisitive Soldier to his friend: "Where did that come from?"

"What?"

"That cake the general's cutting."

"What do you mean — where? It's a cake . . . what did you want to go and ask that question for?"

"I just was wondering."

This imaginary conversation just might come up tomorrow when Major General Charles H. Chase may be seen cutting the division's 44th birthday anniversary cake — a cake which promises to be BIG — at least two and a half feet long and one and a half feet wide, made in three brilliantly - decorated layers.

Two non-commissioned officers are collaborating to produce this year's Organization Day birthday cake. They are Sergeant First Class Richard P. Apel, pastry instructor at the U.S. Army Infantry Center Troop Command, and Sergeant First Class Earl E. Jaeger, mess steward for Company A of the 87th Infantry.

Decorations

It will have white icing, blue letters and gold rosettes abounding on all three layers, topped by the traditional "Indianhead" patch.

Roughly 17 pounds of white flour, 20 pounds of sugar and 96 eggs, the major ingredients of the cake, are testimony to the fact that this is for no ordinary birthday party.

The Organization Day visitor can be sure that every inch of the enormous piece of pastry has been carefully planned for, carefully thought out.

So for the man that "wanted to go and ask a question like that," there's the story. Wonder no more.

1st Sgt. Aponte Returns to Cav.

Simulated A-Bomb Blast Possesses a Lot of 'Bang'

The big bang to follow the 2nd Infantry Division Organization Day review tomorrow morning will have a lot of bang in it.

The simulated atomic bomb blast, prepared and fired by the 2nd Engineer Battalion's Company C, is composed of seven 55-gallon drums of napalm, 200 pounds of TNT, 19 white phosphorus grenades, one cratering charge and a 40 pound can of ammonium nitrate.

Fired Electrically

The device will be fired electrically by a ten-cap blasting machine.

A mock-bomb blast of this type is designed to send a fireball approximately 180 feet in the air and and mushroom cloud of smoke to a height estimated at 1,500 to 2,000 feet. A sizeable crater will also result from the blast.

Detonating the device requires a safety radius of 1,500 feet, engineers say.

Simulated atomic bomb blasts such as the one to be seen tomorrow morning have been used in the division's field training exercises.

ATOMIC BLAST
Not For Real

Honest John Firing First Since JCOC

Organization Day observers will have an opportunity to see an actual firing of the Army's "Honest John" rocket.

This will mark the first time that this missile with nuclear capability has been fired for public viewing at Fort Benning since last year's Joint Civilian Orientation Conference.

'Bird'

The "bird," as it is termed in the missileman's jargon, is to be fired by the Indianhead's 1st Rocket Howitzer Battalion, 12th Artillery.

The Honest John will be set up for the firing approximately 2,000 meters away from the review area and will travel some 15-and-a-half-miles into a predetermined impact area.

A small flash warhead will be attached to the missile. However, the detonation may not be visible from Sightseeing Field.

It will be activated from a firing pit some 100 meters distant from the launching site.

UNITED STATES ARMY
The Chief Of Staff
TO THE OFFICERS AND MEN
OF THE 2D INFANTRY DIVISION

On behalf of the United States Army, I extend congratulations and best wishes to the 2d Infantry Division on the occasion of it forty-fourth anniversary.

The distinguished combat achievements of the 2d Infantry Division, spanning two world wars and the Korean conflict, constitute an inspiring record of courage and devoted service. In World War I, the Division fought in nearly every major engagement involving American troops. In five more campaigns in World War II, it moved through the costly hedgerow fighting of Normandy, across France, Germany, and into Czechoslovakia by war's end. Called upon again in the Korean War, the officers and men of the "Indian Head" Division added further to its laurels through heroic fighting. Today, the Division upholds its "Second to None" tradition as it develops its combat readiness for any mission that our country requires of it.

It is a great pleasure for me to pay tribute to the distinguished record of the 2d Infantry Division on behalf of the entire Army. I am confident that you — the officers and men who are the Division today — will uphold its great traditions and extend its record of success and of achievements.

G. H. DECKER
General, United States Army
Chief of Staff

HEADQUARTERS THIRD UNITED STATES ARMY

TO THE OFFICERS AND MEN OF THE 2D INFANTRY DIVISION

On behalf of the Third United States Army, I extend to the officers and men of the "Indian Head" Division, on the occasion of your 44th Anniversary, best wishes and congratulations.

Traditionally, the 2d Infantry Division has been composed of men of the highest courage and skill. Its accomplishments have been recorded on many far-flung battlegrounds, during World War I and II in Europe, and in Korea. Today, the Division is an integral part of a mighty force for peace.

I am confident of the 2d Infantry Division's continued readiness and ability to accomplish its missions with the highest of standards as a member of the Third United States Army Team.

Cook of the Week

For a Special Caramel Dessert

Mrs. Jerry F. Bradley, wife of Captain Jerry F. Bradley, S-1 of the 23rd Infantry, has a tasty dessert recipe for us this week.

Mrs. Bradley is the mother of two sons, Pat 11 and Jerry 7, and lives with her family at 174 B Arrowhead Road.

Creme Caramel

Liquify ⅓ cup sugar over heat until golden brown. Add 1 tablespoon water and cook for a second. Pour into large baking casserole and cover bottom and sides of dish. Cool until hardened.

4 dozen eggs
½ cup sugar
2 cans evaporated milk (large)
½ can of water
2 cups regular milk
2 teaspoons vanilla
dash salt

Cream egg yolks and sugar, do not foam. Add 2 cans evaporated milk, ½ can water, 2 cups regular milk, 2 teaspoons vanilla, and a dash of salt. Mix thoroughly and pour through strainer into casserole over sugar topping. Cover casserole with lid or foil. Place casserole in pan of water in 300 to 350 oven for one hour. Test by inserting a knife. If it comes out clean, the creme caramel is done. Do not bake too fast to keep from curdling.

Cool at room temperature and place in refrigerator. To turn out, break edges of custard and place upsidedown on a tray that is deep enough to hold juices.

This dessert can be kept in the refrigerator for several days.

Ballroom Classes

The 2nd Division Officers Wives Club sponsors ballroom classes every Monday evening on Main Post. Classes are open to all 5th, 6th, 7th and 8th graders.

Classes are taught by Rossie Gilmore. There is a fee of $4.00 per month. For further information call Mrs. Mariano Morales MU 9-2497 or Mrs. Blackman 545-1096.

HALLOWEEN IS FOR LITTLE CHILDREN

MAN FROM SPACE

Beware! Tuesday is Halloween.

It's a time when the world gives in to unholy witches, goblins and gargoyles, spooks and clowns and slippery toed monsters and everywhere creatures are stirring on devilish business. So to keep the little monsters happy, here are a few suggestions, some trick-or-treat recipes and even a game to keep this Halloween safe. (It's always safer to satisfy the palates of goblins that come a-knocking on Halloween night.)

Coated Apples

1 pound caramels
3 tablespoons water
6 or 7 medium size apples wooden sticks

Place caramels and water in top of a double boiler. Heat, stirring frequently, until caramels are melted and the sauce is smooth. Wash and dry apples; insert one stick into stem end of each apple. Dip into hot caramel sauce and turn until surface is completely coated. Scrape off caramel from bottom of the apples. Put on waxed paper and place in refrigerator a few minutes until firm. Remove and serve.

Make a Spook Puppet

1. Find a medium-sized, firm, yellow apple.
2. Dig a hole in the bottom of apple to fit your first finger.
3. Cut a spook face on the apple. Cut slits only about ½ inch into apple.
4. Paint inside of eyes, nose, mouth with black ink.
5. Drape a white cloth over the apple so it will fall down over your arm when the apple is on your finger.

There's your spook!

IT'S HALLOWEEN!

Jiffy Treat

In the top of a double boiler, melt 1 (6 oz). package semi-sweet chocolate bits; stir in ¾ cup sweetened condensed milk.

Cook until thickened, stirring occasionally. Remove from heat, add one cup finely-chopped nuts. When mixture is cold, shape into balls about the size of a large marble. Let stand for about an hour, then roll in a mixture of one tablespoon each confectioners sugar and cocoa. Store in a cool place. Makes 24 pieces.

Chocolate-Wheat Floke Ting-a-Lings

Melt over hot water . . . 2 seven oz. pkg. semi-sweet chocolate pieces.

Cool at room temperature. Gently stir in until well coated, 4 cups Wheat Flakes (½ of 8 oz. box). Drop by tablespoonfuls onto waxed paper. Place in refrigerator until chocolate is set, dry and hard (about 2½ hours).

Three Honored on Retirement

Two 2nd Division officers and an enlisted man were given the best wishes of Army Chief of Staff General G. H. Decker at their retirement review last Friday.

Honored at a miniature review at Division Headquarters parade field were:

Major John G. Norris, assistant G-4, who retired after more than 20 years' service; Chief Warrant Officer Edward N. Robinson, 23rd Infantry, retiring after more than 30 years' service, and Master Sergeant Robert K. Harrison, 69th Armor, who is retiring after more than 20 years of service.

Certificates of Appreciation, signed by Gen. Decker, read:

"I hereby express to you the Army's appreciation for all you have contributed to its achievements. During your career you have witnessed the growth of the Army into the world's finest and you have aided materially in its growth. Your loyalty and devotion to duty throughout have reflected the highest credit upon you and the military service.

"I know you will continue in retirement to maintain the same lively interest and support of the Army as you have during your years of faithful service. The best wishes of the Army follow you in your future undertakings. May you find in your retirement the happiness and good fortune you so rightly deserve."

Change-of-Command Held at Div Artillery

BY DIV ARTY PIO

Division Artillery honored it's old and new commander with a review on Knight Field last week with a Change-of-Command Ceremony.

Colonel S. L. Harding, who has been the commander of the Division Artillery since July 11, presented the colors to Colonel Frank A. Osmanski, who has been named by the Department of the Army as the new Artillery Commander. Lieutenant Colonel Terence W. Huck, S-3, was commander of troops.

'Heritage'

Colonel Harding told the officers and men of the Division Artillery: "At a similar formation three months and six days ago, I recalled to you the very rich military heritage which is yours. In its 44 years of existence, this command has served with distinction in three wars, 21 battle campaigns, and more than 1,200 days of active combat. At that time I also charged you with adding to that splendid record of achievement by your own dedicated service. The intervening months have demonstrated to me, and to yourselves, that you have accepted that challenge.

"This Division Artillery is not yet ready to perform its ultimate mission of providing to our division commander on the field of battle his most powerful punch; but year progress toward that end has been most impressive and most gratifying.

"I am honored to have served as your commander. I welcome the opportunity to continue service to you."

After receiving the colors from Colonel Harding, Colonel Osmanski told the assembled troops how gratified he was to have been named the commander of the 2nd Infantry Division Artillery and that he was pleased with the training program he had noted thus far.

Colonel Osmanski comes to the Division Artillery from an assignment with the U. S. Army in the Pacific. He served as chief, plans and operations division in the office of the assistant chief of staff, G-4, for Headquarters, U. S. Army, Pacific.

Conquerors Down 11th Squad 16-0; Trounce Sep. Bn. 45-0

By 87th Inf PIO

Undefeated continues to be the story of the 87th Infantry's flag football team.

Last week the Conquerors posted two victories, downing the 11th Infantry 16-0 and trouncing Separate Battalions 45-0.

Goodwin Leaves

The game against the 11th Infantry was a real team effort. Playing without quarterback Private Leonard Goodwin, who has been providing the team's scoring punch for previous victories, the 87th came up with Private Fred Wilcox, who proved himself equally effective.

Goodwin was recruited to play for the Fort Benning Dongboys last week and will be lost to the 87th for the rest of the tournament.

The 16-0 was not indicative of the see-saw struggle that saw the two teams march back and forth across the field for almost three quarters without a score. Passing effectiveness was considerably cut down because of extremely high winds.

The 87th started its first scoring drive late in the third quarter with a quick pass in the flat to Private Frank Cain, who carried the ball to about midfield.

Connects Pass

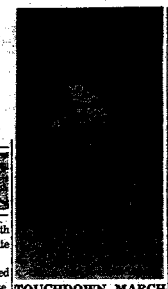
Wilcox then connected with a pass to Private Major Lincoln who ran to the Conqueror 10 yard line.

Wilcox then took the ball himself around left end for the score and ran the extra point.

The last quarter saw a long run by Wilcox up the middle for 66 yards, aided by some timely blocking.

Other notables were Specialist Four Ronald Guy, who kept the 11th off guard with some long kicks, and Private Edward Pearson, who made some notable defensive plays.

In Saturday's game, the 87th completely ran over Separate Battalions, 45-0.



The first half was dominated by the 87th's pass defense, which accounted for four touchdowns by Lincoln. The second half added two more by Private Issac Scott and still another two by Private Chester Berroud.

Offensive Plays

Lieutenant Robert C. Lowry, who coaches the 87th, made some offensive plays that paid off.

In the five games actually played, the Conqueror team has rolled up 188 points to their opponents 12.

The 87th meets Division Trains this week to round out the first half of the tournament.

Doughboys Lose To Navy Airmen

By PFC Del Berghoefer

A one-yard scoring sneak with two seconds left in the first half proved the margin of victory as the Pensacola Naval Air Station trimmed the Fort Benning Dougboys, 12-6, in a game last Saturday at the Florida installation.

The teams waged a fierce defensive battle throughout the first half, the Doughboys penetrating only to their opponents 20-yard stripe and the Goshawks netting only four yards rushing through the Doughboy defenses.

The seamen were close to paydirt twice before they scored in their race with the clock. Their drives stalled on the 12-yard line one time and again on the three, losing the ball on downs both times.

Pensacola, trying desperately to gain a lead before the first half ended, tried two field goals, but to no avail. After the second one missed, the Doughboys took over on downs on their own 11-yard stripe, but on the first play from scrimmage lost the ball on a costly fumble.

Pressed for time with only about one minute remaining before halftime, the seamen moved to the two-yard line on a pass. The rock-ribbed Doughboy defense held for two plays but on the third, with just two seconds remaining Pensacola quarterback Joe Tranchini carried over from the one, giving them a 6-0 half time advantage.

Unable to move the ball on the ground, the seamen took to the air with considerable success in the first half, connecting on seven out of 13 attempts good for 87 yards.

The Goshawks were able to complete only one pass in the second half but it was a big one, good for 65 yards and their second TD.

An exchange of punts marked the opening of the second half after neither team could manage a drive. On the second series of plays the Goshawks took to the airways once again. Quarterback Tranchini pitched to halfback Tom Rodgers who rambled all the way for a second score, the play covering 65 yards.

Emmett Eddy, who played standout defense for the Doughboys, leaped in front of Rodgers, gambling for the interception. The ball was just over his fingertips and right into the hands of Rodgers who raced untouched for the TD, making the score 12-0 with the third quarter less than five minutes old.

However, the Doughboys, not to be counted out yet, reared back in the fourth quarter making the Goshawks fight to hang onto their lead. The Doughboys took a punt on their own 17-yard line. On the third play Northern Brown, speedy Benning halfback, raced 74 yards around right end to score.

With the score now 12-6 with approximately five minutes remaining in the game, the Fort Benning team came to life. They had the ball two more times but each drive was stopped by a Pensacola intercepted.

On the first series the Doughboys moved to the Goshawks' 30-yard line before losing the ball. They started on their own 12-yard line and were forced to punt on their 19. The punt bounced off the leg of the intended receiver and was recovered by Emmett Eddy on the Pensacola 46.

Three plays moved it to the 30 and the Doughboys were on the march. Quarterback Clifton Farrier, going for the TD, threw a long pass which was intercepted by Tranchini on the 11, stopping the drive.

The Doughboys forced the seamen to punt once again and had one last chance to score. With time running out, they tried several desperation passes, the third of which was stolen by Rodgers. Pensacola ran out the clock, maintaining its lead.

The Doughboys will be at home for their next two games. They meet Lackland Air Force Base, Texas, tomorrow and Memphis Naval Air Station November 4.

The games are scheduled for 8 p.m. There is no admission charge.

Statistics for the game are:

Varied, Continuous Slate Of Athletics Offered Here

A varied and continuous program of athletic events and sports activities is available to post personnel.

The athletic program draws its main support through teams and leagues organized in each major unit. League and tournament winner in major unit competition represent the post in Third Army competition.

Sport and recreational activities include baseball, basketball, football, swimming, boxing, track, volleyball, bowling, golf, tennis, hunting and fishing, table tennis, horseshoes and handball.

A total of 82 fields are available for playing outdoor sports including a 36-hole golf course on Main Post and a nine hole course in the Sand Hill area. The latter course may soon be expanded to 18 holes.

Among the major sports activities is the annual USAIC open golf tournament, played on the 36-hole course.

Tennis enthusiasts will find modern tennis courts available and an annual open tourney is held at the Main Officers' Open Mess tennis courts. The club is a member of the U. S. and Southern Lawn Tennis Associations.

Football at Fort Benning includes the Youth Activities Club League which gives youngsters at the post a chance to learn the fundamentals of the game and to learn the true concepts of sportsmanship through friendly, competitive and supervised games.

For adults, there is the post football team; the Doughboys, which plays games against teams from other service installations.

Five outdoor swimming pools which are open in the summer, and an indoor pool open the year 'round, furnish swimming facilities for post personnel. Yearly swimming and diving competitions are open to all swimmers.

Modern bowling facilities are available for those who enjoy that sport. The post's three alleys are equipped with automatic pinsetters. Leagues and tournaments are open to anyone wishing to enter.

The Fort Benning Hunt Club has a stable of horses and classes are available in both beginning and advanced horsemanship. A membership initiation fee and regular monthly dues are charged. Horses may be boarded or rented by arrangements with club officials.

Many athletic events, including a great many tournaments are played in Briant Wells Field House. It contains an indoor swimming pool, handball court, two basketball courts and a complete gymnasium with adequate spectator seating.

Another new field house has just been completed in the Kelley Hill area and it has the same facilities as Briant Wells except for the swimming pool.

Doughboy Stadium, scene of the major football clashes, was built in 1924-25 entirely by volunteer soldier labor. Contributions for the construction of the 10-000-seat stadium came from every Infantry unit then in the Army.

Another prominent playing field is Cowdy Field, named for Hank Gowdy, the first major league baseball player to enlist in World War I. He returned to Fort Benning during World War II and was special services officer until his retirement in 1944.

Today's Sportrait

Today's Sportrait is Sfc Larry Jones of Company B, 1st Battalion, USAICTC.

Sgt. Jones has been an instructor in all types of sports but is better known to the fight fans for his outstanding boxing career.

He started slugging in 1938 in his home town where he won the 1938-39 District of Columbia Golden Gloves Championship in the welterweight division.

Sgt. Jones entered the Army in June of 1943, at Fort Meade. Upon completion of basic training at Camp Harrahan, La., he copped the post welterweight title.

Between 1944 and 1945 Sgt. Jones participated in the ETO during World War II. In late 1945 during the first stages of Army occupation in Europe, he won the middleweight title in the Military Training Area at Grafenwohr, Germany, and went undefeated in 22 bouts while in Germany.

He held the Fort Benning middleweight crown from 1946 to 1951; the Third Army Champion from 1947 to 1951, and was the all Army Champ, 1949-1950 and runner-up in 1951.

He fought pro from 1951 until 1959. During his professional boxing career he had 52 fights, winning 50, losing two. He had 39 knockouts to his credit. He hung up his gloves in 1959 with an over-all record of 177 fights, with 172 wins and five defeats.

During his amateur and pro boxing career, he also coached the 3440th AUS (presently the Center Troop Command) boxing team of Fort Benning to the post champions four consecutive years 1947-51.

He has trained such fighters as Pete Rademacher, heavyweight; Jim Boyd, light heavyweight and also Eddie Crook, 1960 Olympic middleweight champion.

Post Sports Car Driver Will Race

A post sports car driver, Capt. Thomas W. Herren, will participate in the 1961 Fiesta of Five Flags Divisional Sports Car Races in Pensacola, Fla., tomorrow and Sunday.

The captain placed second in his class in two races he entered this summer at Savannah, Ga., and Courtland, Ala.

The Fish and Game Maintenance Association announced the Annual Fall Turkey Shoot will be held Sunday afternoon, 17 December from 1300 to 1700 hours. Activities will take place at Roosevelt Range, Skeet and Trap Range and the Post Pistol Range. The School Committee has planned a variety of events for the youngsters to the experts.

At Roosevelt Range orders of 10 shooters will fire at "plus" marked targets with shotguns and the winner of each order will be awarded a turkey. There will be orders using 12 gauge guns, personal guns, and 410 gauge guns for ladies and children 14 and under, only. Fish and Game Association members are entitled to one free shot while additional shots are $1.00 per shot.

The Skeet and Trap Range will be the scene for events of interest to the skilled and expert shooters. Here there will be trap and skeet shooting with 5 shooters per order and winner of the turkey for each order will be based on most targets broken out of 5 shots. These events will be $2.00 per shooter per order.

Events at the Post Pistol Range include a running deer target with 5 shooters per order using M-1 carbine or M-14 or personal rifles and the winner will be based on the nearest hit on center of target. There will be a turkey winner for every order. Additional events will call for rifle and pistol shooting (.22 Cal) at NRA targets. There will orders for children under 14 years.

Shooters will be 10 to an order, with a turkey winner every order. .22 Cal rifles and pistols will be furnished or personnal rifles can be used.

DISEASES PLAGUE POST FISH

The catfish at Harps Pond have been dying as a result of a disease that has been rather common throughout the area this summer according to Robert Webb, Fisheries Biologist, of the U. S. Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife. According to Webb the disease is not a serious threat to the fish population. Very few other fish besides the catfish have been affected and the situation does not seem to involve any of the other 21 post ponds.

DEER SEASON OPENER NEARS

Red capped hunters with shotgun in hand will take to the woods on the Georgia portion of the Reservation November 1 in pursuit of post deer. The season is for bucks only, so just be sure antlers are visible above the hairline.

The bag limit is one per day, two per hunting season for the entire reservation. The opening date for deer on the Alabama portion of the Reservation is 10 November.

Wildlife Aids report considerable population of deer on post and from all indications there should be some good hunting. Although large herds of deer, as many as 20 or 25 have been seen in the recently cleared portions of the reservation in Alabama, last years reported deer kill indicates 63 of the 72 deer reported killed were taken from the Georgia portion of the Reservation. Most of these deer were taken from Areas A and D.

Outdoor Outlook

REPORT DEER

Hunters are urged to call the Fish and Game office at 545-3525 and report all deer killed on post. It is essential for proper deer management that an accurate figure of deer kill be obtained.

In past years there has been very poor cooperation from the hunters in reporting their deer. If this continues it can only result in a more strict deer check system which would only be a hardship on the hunter.

Profile of a Man

SFC ESTELL

"Among the great moments of my life in the Army was when I was informed that I had been named 'Soldier of the Year' by the 82nd Airborne Division in 1960," said Sfc Lawrence Estell, presently Ration Breakdown NCO of The Student Brigade.

Sfc Estell's mission in ration breakdown is to prepare and initiate changes in procedures and instructions to current regulations and directives which apply to subsistence stores within the Student Brigade.

He enlisted in 1947 and was sent directly to Fort Dix for basic.

After graduating he was sent to the 82nd Airborne and later volunteered for Airborne traning.

When the Korean Conflict broke out Sfc Estel volunteered for Ranger Airborne training and served with the 2nd Airborne Ranger company in Wan Ju, Korea.

Wounded in Action in 1951 he was sent to the Army hospital at Camp Attiberry, Ind., for treatment. When released in 1952 he returned to the Rangers as an instructor with the Ranger Training Command here.

During the following years he was assigned to Fort Knox; Yukon Command, and 101st Airborne Division at Fort Campbell.

He has been assigned to Fort Benning for the last four years.

Army Volunteers Increasing

More than 83 per cent of the Army's enlisted strength was made up of volunteers at the end of fiscal year 1961, and early enlistment reports for fiscal year 1962 indicate the trend is toward an even greater percentage.

The FY '61 figure was an increase of 19 per cent since 1958 and male enlistment for the first three weeks of August 1961 exceeded last year by 39 per cent, approximately 20 per cent higher than expected.

Keeping pace with the male component, the Women's Army Corps has had an average of 450 enlistments per month this summer, 150 per month higher than normal.

Improved personnel management policies adopted by the Army in recent years have been credited for the increased enlistment and reenlistment rates. Beginning in 1958, the Army placed the accent on attracting and retaining top-notch people by discharging nearly 100,000 men in the low mental category.

How well the Army's personnel procurement program has progressed in the past three years is reflected in the following figures for RFY 1958 and FY 1961, respectively:

Volunteer percentage of Army strength, 64 and 83; initial enlistment, 73,000 and 116,000; total regular Army reenlistment percentages, 45 and 58; career reenlistment percentages (over four years prior service), 80 and 87; first term reenlistment percentages, 17 and 28.

Post Will Observe Army Arts and Crafts Week

Fort Benning will observe Army Arts and Crafts Week, November 1 to 7, with an open house and display of craft items held in the Main Post Craft Shop under Doughboy Stadium.

The display will be open from 1 to 10 p.m. November 3, 4 and 5. Cash prizes will be awarded to the first three place winners in each class, according to crafts director, Hugh E. Cook.

Any item made this past year in one of the branches of the Special Services crafts shops may be entered in the contest. Classes include wood crafts, ceramics, leather work, auto craft, model planes, outboard boats and metal work.

All military personnel, their dependents and civilian employees of the post are eligible to enter craft items in the show. Display items should be brought in to the Main Post Craft Shop between 8 a.m. and 10 p.m. November 1 and 2.

The post crafts shops, under the supervision of the Special Services Section, are designed to provide off-duty recreational facilities for post personnel.

The eight branches are for use by military personnel, their dependents and civilian employees.

All shops, with the exception of one, are self-supporting, operating on funds received from the sale of material used to build the various projects.

There is no charge for the use of craft shop facilities and equipment. The small profit gained by the sale of material for making projects is used to buy expendable items which are available in all shops.

Each shop is staffed with competent instructors to ensure the proper use of power equipment. Instructors give assistance and advice on making various projects and enforce safety regulations.

The Main Post Shop is open Mondays through Fridays from 1 to 10 p.m., and 1 to 5 p.m. Saturdays and Sundays. It has facilities for woodworking, ceramics, leather work, photography and model planes.

Another shop on Main Post, Building 334, has similar facilities except for the photo lab. It is open 1 to 9 p.m. Tuesdays through Fridays and 1 to 5 p.m. Saturdays and Sundays.

Branch shops are in Building 3788 and 5145 at Sand Hill, Building 4046 and 4746 in Harmony Church and Building 9010 in Kelley Hill. They are open from 1 to 5 p.m. Tuesdays through Fridays and 1 to 9 p.m. Saturdays and Sundays. These shops have facilities for woodworking, model planes, leather work and boat building.

An automotive craft shop at Building 3309 in Sand Hill is open 12 to 10 p.m. Tuesdays through Fridays, 1 to 10 p.m. Saturdays and 12 to 10 p.m. Sundays.

Ft. Campbell's Salute to 101st

Seventeen years after paratroopers of the 101st Abn. Div. liberated Eindhoven, Holland, the people of the Netherlands have sent a testimonial of their lasting friendship for the famed "Screaming Eagles."

In a ceremony a special emissary from Eindhoven, Miss Gerardina van Lieshout, planted the first of 10,000 daffodil, hyacinth and tulip bulbs given the division by the Netherlanders.

"It is a great privilege," she told the 101st's commander, Maj. Gen. C. W. G. Rich, "to tender on behalf of the citizens of Eindhoven and the Dutch people these tokens of the deep gratitude we feel for that most precious gift of freedom for which we owe so much to the American people, and especially to your division."

Mr. Paul Renardel de Lavalette, representing the Netherlands Embassy in Washington, accompanied Miss Van Lieshout.

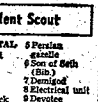
Exempts Areas From Ban On Foreign Autos

The Defense Department has issued a list of 13 areas which are exempted from the restrictions placed on government shipping of privately owned foreign-made automobiles.



When the ban order was issued earlier this year, commanders of overseas areas were instructed to request exemptions if proper facilities for maintenance and repair of American - made automobiles did not exist.

Those areas approved for exemption from the ban are: Bermuda (within the restrictions of Bermuda law), Indonesia, Hungary, Cyprus, Republic of the Congo, Eritrea, Bulgaria, Yugoslavia, Afghanistan, Malta, Poland, Ireland, and the area in proximity to Holy Loch, Scotland, including Argyll County and Gourock Greenock Township.

Beware

'Ghost of Torch Hill' May Soon Ride Again

By SFC D. W. Chase

One night, many years ago, when Fort Benning was still a young military post, a military policeman on motorcycle patrol in the Torch Hill area was startled by a shadowy form hurtling across the road in front of his machine.

He stopped and dismounted but saw nothing. He turned off the engine on his motorcycle, but the only noise he could hear was that of crickets and a hooting hound in the distance. Chalking the whole thing up to fatigue he continued on his way toward the main post.

The next night, the same patrolman was cruising the road in the same neighborhood when suddenly, the misty shape loomed before him again. He jammed on his brakes and looked hard trying to make out what the thing was.

As it passed, the MP caught the illusion of a horse and rider — but that was all. As on the previous night, the form disappeared as quickly as it had come. This time, he wrote up the incident for the desk sergeant to mull over.

As can be imagined, the soldier was in for a bit of 'ribbing' when he tendered his report. The wrinkled old MP sergeant told the patrolman that maybe a ten day leave might be a good idea at that time.

"Just rest up a bit, son, and maybe you won't be seeing any more of them 'things' again" we can almost hear him say.

A new patrol was assigned to the Torch Hill beat. The first night nothing was seen. But on the second, a terrified member of the new shift ran into MP headquarters and blurted out that he had seen the "thing".

The same circumstances seemed to apply. The cycle patrolman said that he was nearly run over by a shadowy horse as big as a barn. He further requested that his beat be changed.

For a time, further reports came in concerning the ghostly horse and rider. All were similar. Always the apparition was seen travelling at breakneck speed in the direction of Columbus and for those who thought they could tell what it was, it appeared to be a horse and rider.

Over the years, fewer stories occurred about the ghost and finally the tale was all but forgotten.

At the time, there was some speculation as to whose ghost this might have been. It must be remembered that in the 1928s, much attention was given to spiritualism and contact with the spirit world. Prominent in the news were the activities of the Fox sisters and Sir Arthur Conan Dyle who were firmly devoted to the concept of bringing back the dead in one form or another.

At any rate, someone dug up a story concerning a British colonel, who, during the Revolution, somehow became separated from his command while campaigning in western Georgia. For some reason or other, he died and was buried, probably by Indians, on Torch Hill.

The tale lived on among local folks and it came to pass that certain old timers had a ready explanation for the shadowy rider of Torch Hill. It was, they claimed, the ghost of the British colonel, still searching for his lost command.

Torch Hill in the early part of this century was the property of Mr. John T. Davis. It was purchased from him by the United States Government as a part of Camp Benning (later Fort Benning) in the early 1920s.

Since the later growth and expansion of the Columbus community into Benning Hills and along Victory Drive, there have been no further tales of mysterious night riders in the roadways of Torch Hill.

Perhaps the old colonel finally located his outfit and now rests in peace. If not, we might look forward to seeing him ride forth again some dreary night.

Army Studies Glider For Use as Supply Aid

A kite-like "Flex Wing" glider is being studied for the Army as a means of fast supply to troops in the field.

The unmanned tower glider would have as much as six times the carrying capacity as Army aircraft. Payloads of 18,000 pounds or more could be suspended beneath the craft.

Unlike conventional aircraft with rigid metal covered surfaces, the Flex Wing is of flexible, plastic coated material attached to a keel and leading edge members so as to form an arrow, or V-shaped, kite-like surface.

The flexible wing concept offers an extremely lightweight, large aerodynamic lift surface and a simplified control system using center-of-gravity shift instead of conventional control surface movements.

It is designed to be folded into a compact package so it can be quickly deployed for varied missions.

Ryan Aeronautical Co., holder of the study contract, has produced a wide range of uses, including both manned and unmanned vehicles, powered and unpowered.

These may vary from manned reconnaissance drones maneuvered by remote control, to huge, unpowered wings capable of recovering payloads and rocket boosters of 50 tons or more.

The wing has been tested, in free flight and wind tunnels, from low subsonic velocity to speeds of Mach 4.3 and from low altitudes to 200,000 feet.

$1,800 DEATHS

Accidental death visits a home in America every six minutes. It takes 249 lives every day, 1,750 lives every week, and 91,000 lives per year.

This means that while you chat ten minutes with a friend, two persons may die and 175 be injured in accidents.

The National Safety Council adds that motor vehicle accidents — no. 1 accidental killer — claims a life every 14 minutes.

USO, YMCA Extend Hearty Welcome to Army Personnel

The soldier new on the training grounds of Fort Benning will find the services and facilities of two Armed Service YMCAs and an expansive United Service Organization Club open to him during his free hours away from post.

The YMCA's are located at 14 West 11th Street and at 941 Fifth Avenue.

Saturday night dances, skating, music listening or just TV watching is part of the varied seven-day week program at the USO Club, 100 Ninth St.

For Army wives there is a USO wives club that meets once a week, holds luncheons, bridge and bingo parties and visits interesting sites over the city.

A popular feature of the year-round program of the 11th Street YMCA is Girls Service Organization, initiated to provide the facility with a junior hostess program.

GSO members, young women between 17 and 30, greet visiting soldiers on Sundays and during specially-arranged programs.

The YMCA they serve is open from 9 a.m. to 11 p.m., Monday through Thursday, and from 9 a.m. Friday to 11 p.m. Sunday continously. Every Tuesday night there is an 8:30 p.m. record hop and once a month a square dance.

Fellowship suppers are held at 5:30 p.m. on Sunday, following an afternoon home hour. At the suppers, light meals are prepared and served by civic and church groups. The meals are usually followed by group singing, an inspirational talk or a discussion of a subject of current interest. On the second and fourth Mondays of each month the International Club meets at the "Y" at 7:30 p.m.

Services offered by the YMCA include a money-saving system and check - cashing. Executive Secretary Wade Stokes Jr. points out that facilities on the premises include dormitory sections with showers.

Stokes notes that his organization is prepared to schedule events to meet the needs of Fort Benning personnel. When, for instance, units of the Second Infantry Division go on combat ready status, his organization is prepared to operate on a full 24-hour basis as it has done in past years, he said.

The USO lists a host of activities that include:

—Roller skating, dance classes, 8 p.m. Mondays, for all military personnel and military dependents.

—Square dancing by a private group, Gala Squares, each Tuesday, 8 p.m.

—Roller skating, for service wives only, 9:30 a.m. to noon, all, 7:30 to 10 p.m., Wednesdays.

—USO Wives Club program, family night bingo, Thursdays.

—Teen-age dance night, Fridays, 7 to 10 p.m.

—Mid-week dance, Wednesdays, and weekend dances, Saturdays.

In addition, a buffet snack is held once each month at the Ninth Street USO building, program director Miss Dorothy Westbrook points out.

In sectors of the building are a library, writing facilities, a snack bar and television viewing area.

FARM ACCIDENTS

From 1950-1959, 11 million farm residents suffered injuries disabling beyond the day of the accident and 130,000 farm residents were killed in accidents.

Don Carr in Concert At Protestant Chapel

Don Carr of Columbus, will appear in a piano concert at 7:30 p.m., Sunday at the Main Post Protestant Chapel.

This is the third presentation of the 1961-1962 secular concert series on the post.

Carr will play selections from Beethoven, DeBussy, Palmgren, Villa-Lobos and Lecuona in addition to two of his own arrangements.

From Beethoven, he will play "Sonata in C, No. 3, Opus 2." The composer dedicated the sonata to Joseph Haydn.

Four impressionistic preludes written by DeBussy after 1890 are on the program. They are "La Cathedrale Engloutie" (The Engulfed Cathedral), "La Danse de Puck" (The Dance of Puck), "Minstrels" and "La Soirre dans Grenade" (Evening in Grenada).

He will play "May Night" by Palmgren, "Dance of the White Indian" by Villa-Lobos and "Malaguena" by Lecuona.

"Variations on a Theme from Mother Goose," Carr's own arrangement, is written in the styles of Mozart, Strauss, Bach, Chopin and Rachmaninoff.

As his last number, the pianist will play his arrangement of old favorites in medley.

Born in Manhattan, Kan., Carr is the son of Mrs. Lilla E. Carr of Columbus.

He began his study of the piano at the age of six and later studied violin, cello and voice.

Considered a child prodigy, Carr was well-known in Manhattan for his work in radio, with the American Red Cross at Fort Riley, and with civic groups.

Educated at Kansas State University in Manhattan, Washburn University in Topeka and the Kansas City Conservatory of Music, Carr became an organist and choir director as well as a pianist.

Since 1952, Carr has made seven concert tours, appeared on a weekly TV program sponsored by the Air Force, played at the governor's mansion in Topeka, travelled with the Gene Pringle Dance and Dinner Music Band of New York City and served as organist and choir director for several churches.

While in the Army, he was assigned to Fort Benning, where he was organist at St. Michael's Mission - in - the-Woods and played at the Main Officers' Open Mess.

After returning to civilian life, he was organist at St. Thomas Episcopal Church in Columbus for several years. Carr is now organist at the Main Post Chapel.

On December 17, Carr will accompany The Infantry Center prelude.lon of "The Messiah."

He teaches piano in the Fort Benning-Columbus area.

S. C. Unit Tabbed 'Unique'

The 111th Signal Company of the South Carolina National Guard which arrived at Fort Benning Oct. 12, was organized under its present designation in 1947 at Greenville.

Capt. Bryan J. Perry of Greenville commands the unit which is unique in its organization.

The company is composed of a number of "teams" each of which is capable of handling different phases of signal operation. This setup lets each group specialize, making it possible for the unit to handle a much greater variety of signal jobs than it ordinarily could.

The unit, which has been called to active duty for the first time, will be attached to The Infantry Center Troop Command.

Gentlemen:

On Saturday 30 September at about 11:30 in the morning, I drove a two ton truck assigned to this agency into your establishment to have the speedometer fixed so that it would work.

Mr. Payne was extremely busy and as was everybody to an effort to fix-in all the work on hand by 5 P.M., nevertheless, Mr. Payne did find a way to repair the speedometer cable which had broken, as well as, to change the oil and filter.

This letter is to let you know that we do appreciate the service and attention rendered by Mr. Payne of your firm.

Sincerely,

FRANK C. [illegible]

32,000 Targets to Be Fired On During Present Rifle Matches

By M-Sgt Charles A. Quinn

Over 32,000 paper targets will be shot up by 150 of the nation's elite marksmen who are competing in the U. S. International Shooting Championships October 22-November 6 at The Infantry Center.

Supplied by the sponsoring National Rifle Association, the targets range from the pinpoint bull's eye for the smallbore rifle event to life-size outlines on the Running Deer Range.

"We don't expect to use every target supplied," said 2nd Lt. Guy L. Schottler, "but each has to be carefully prepared for possible use."

Rifle statistical officer at Match Headquarters, Lt. Schottler explained that extreme care had to be taken in the preparation because of the status of the coming shoot.

"Nine separate national championships will be decided in the two weeks of scheduled firing and a single slip in target preparation could cause no end of confusion," the lieutenant stated.

He said that each target had to be stamped as either a practice or record target and that each record bull's-eye then had to be serial numbered, and then stamped with a competitor number, a relay number and firing point number.

This system has been devised, he added, to facilitate firing operations and still keep firer identity unknown to target markers and to official referees who might have to decide shot values.

While Lt. Schottler was speaking, Sgt. Joseph L. Graham was shearing each 23-meter International rapid fire pistol silhouettes.

"These particular targets call for this added attention so that they might fit the stiff cardboard backing to which they have to be individually stapled," the Match Headquarters' chief clerk said.

He added that some 1,600 of them were needed for the rapid fire and center fire events.

Supervising preparation of still more targets was 1st Lt. George E. Hackney, pistol range officer at Match Headquarters.

"If good weather holds," he said, "we expect that most of these targets will show up with all-time record scores on them for, after all, we're going to have the world's best on our firing lines for the next two weeks."

ALLIED DISPLAY . . . 70 Argentine Officers Visiting The School To View Demonstrations and Techniques

Seventy Argentine Army officers, headed by Brig. Gen. Carlos J. M. Turolo, arrived on post yesterday for a two-day visit to view demonstrations of Infantry weapons and instructional techniques at The Infantry School.

The group includes faculty members and students from Argentina's Superior School of War, Superior School of Information and students from the Superior School of Communications.

After their arrival at Lawson Field yesterday afternoon, the visitors' schedule included a welcome by Major Gen. Ben Harrell, commandant of The Infantry School, and briefings on the history and organization of The Infantry Center and organization and mission of the School.

After the briefings, the Allied officers were shown instruction techniques including planning instruction, various methods of instruction and the use of training aids to assist in teaching the students.

Today's itinerary includes an airborne orientation, during which they will view training methods and equipment used by students undergoing basic airborne training at The Infantry School. The visitors will have an opportunity to ride the "buddy seat," a simulated parachute jump, from one of the 250-foot training towers after the orientation.

Following a briefing on Infantry organization and tactics and fire support available to a battle group, the Argentine officers will view a weapons firing demonstration on Hook Range, which will include the Army's new M-14 rifle, M-60 machine gun, recoilless rifle, mortars and anti-tank weapons.

Friday afternoon they are scheduled to see a demonstration of hand-to-hand combat techniques and to tour a display of Infantry battle group communications equipment, followed by a briefing and demonstration of Infantry motor vehicles of various sizes and capabilities.

An official luncheon will be held tonight for the visiting group in the Main Officers' Open Mess.

Tomorrow the visitors are scheduled to receive briefings on non-resident instruction and preparation of training literature.

The Argentine group will depart Lawson Field Saturday at 11 a.m.

Accompanying the Allied officers will be Major Miguel A. Fernandez, Department of Army tour director, and Capts. Luis F. Heranders and Roberto Airborne training is currently conducted at three points, Fort Benning, Fort Bragg and Fort Campbell.

All individual basic airborne training will be phased out at Fort Campbell by the end of December, 1961, and at Fort Bragg by the close of January, 1962, while training facilities at Fort Benning will be increased to handle the extra personnel.

Gen. Baker founded the Valley Forge Military Academy in 1928. Today this academy is recognized as a leader among military academies of the country. During World War II, Valley Forge trained some 5,000 second lieutenants for the Air Force. In 1940-1941, it conducted basic training for officers of the 28th Division and other National Guardsmen.

In 1953 the general was named chairman of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization.

In 1954 he was appointed personal adviser and consultant to Charles E. Wilson, secretary of defense, and from 1955 to September, 1957, was chairman of the Reserve Forces Policy Board of the Department of Defense.

Gen. Baker became the first recipient of the Department of Defense Distinguished Service Medal which was presented to him by Secretary Wilson. He also received the Department of Army Distinguished Service Medal, presented by Secretary of the Army Wilber M. Brucker.

In 1954 President Eisenhower appointed Gen. Baker as a member of the Alexander Hamilton Bicentennial Commission.

The general is the recipient of the Pennsylvania Distinguished Service Medal, awarded to him by four governors of Pennsylvania.

He received the award of the Military Order of Brazil, Grade of Grand Officer; Presidential Medal of Honor from Nicaragua, and the Order of Leopold from Belgium.

For his contribution to education, Gen. Baker has received honorary degrees of doctor of laws from Temple University, Gettysburg College, Norwich University and doctor of pedagogy from LaSalle College.

He is a trustee of Temple University and vice chairman of the board of advisers of Villanova University.

In September, 1955, Gen. Baker was made a Fellow of the International College of Surgeons for his service to mankind through education. He is one of the few civilians ever to receive this honor.

'Infantry' Magazine Due To Appear November 7

Readers of The Infantry Magazine, published at the Infantry School, are advised to get out their ear muffs, mittens and foot warmers before opening the November-December issue scheduled to appear November 7.

"Subarctic Bivouac," "Feeding in Subzero Weather," "The Far North (Geography)," "Effects of the Far North on Operations," "Heavy Mortars in Northern Operations," "Mobility in the Far North," "Attacks on Skis," "Maintenance in the Far North," "Cold Injury," "Ice Mining," "Navigation in the Far North" and "Soviet winter Operations" are among the articles included in the magazine.

In Part III of a series on articles on "Reorganization of the Infantry," members of The Infantry School's Command and Staff Department present a discussion of brigade and division, including changes made since Part II, printed in the September issue.

Infantry doctrine on the "Defense of a River Line" with the reorganized battalion is th subject of another article in the current issue.

Featured in the magazine will be the prize-winning article on "Rifle Squad Leader — Toughest Job in the Army," written by SSgt. Fred H. Bost of Fort Lewis.

Sgt. Bost placed first in a contest sponsored by the magazine to encourage enlisted men to write on subjects of interest to the Infantry.

Infantry Magazine is a professional journal for Infantrymen.

By providing its readers with the latest doctrine and developments, the magazine bridges the gap between changes and their appearance in training literature.

Kindness Is Best Souvenir Says 15 Iranian Students

A spokesman for 15 Iranian Army officers who graduated from The Infantry School recently said the kindness of the people they have met in the United States is the best souvenir they will take back to their own country.

Major Abdul-Rahim Arshadi expressed the sentiments of the students who arrived at the post in June to take an associate infantry officers career course. The officers departed the post for Iran after graduation exercises.

Speaking for the Allied students, Major Arshadi said, "Now that we 15 Iranian officers attending associate career course 6 are leaving U. S. for our home country, Iran, we consider it our duty to extend our hearty thanks to the authorities, instructors and the Allied Liaison Section of The Infantry School for their indefatigable effort for our training.

"We would like to say that during our stay at Fort Benning, both in school and in the social atmosphere, wherever we went and whomever we met, we were treated in a very friendly manner.

"This pure kindness is the best souvenir that we can take back home with us.

"It goes without saying that these friendly feelings are the initial step toward oneness.

"This is our request from Almighty God: to help us to succeed in strengthening the relations of friendship.

"We wish the same success for you."

Indianapolis Unit Boasts War Record

The 223rd Signal Company of Indianapolis, Ind., was organized in 1942 at Camp Crowder, Mo., and saw action in World War II at Guadalcanal, Bougainville, and Luzon, Philippine Islands, among others.

The company, commanded by Capt. John R. Kerr of Indianapolis, was inactivated in January, 1946, and reactivated as a Army Reserve unit one month later at Indianapolis. In 1950 the 223rd was designated as a signal installation unit and was redesignated as a signal repair unit in 1959.

First sergeant of the Company is 1st Sgt. Joseph L. Thomas of Indianapolis.

The unit undergoes two weeks active summer training annually at Camp McCoy, Wis.

While on active duty at Fort Benning, the 223rd will be attached to The Infantry Center Troop Command and billeted in the Harmony Church area.

U. S. Education Week Never More Timely

When President Kennedy proclaimed the period of Nov. 5-11 as American Education Week he described it as "a special period. . .to mark the importance of education and the continuing need to improve and strengthen it." He urged that all of us "take part, through school and community, in observances to focus attention upon the force for good which education has been and must continue to be in our national life."

All of us in the Armed Forces cannot, of course, participate in such communital activities. But we can ask ourselves if we are taking full advantage of the varied and excellent opportunities to continue our education that the services provide for us. The day is long gone when a period of military service arrested a man's pursuit of knowledge. Now he is encouraged by the service to read, to study, to keep abreast of developments in science and the humanities.

"If a man's education is finished, he is finished," a noted business leader and philanthropist once said. That is a remark worth thinking about, for it is consonant with the President's own belief that "the education of our people should be a lifelong process by which we continue to feed new vigor into the lifestream of the nation through intelligent, reasoned decisions."

Intelligence and reason — nowhere are they more at a premium than in the Armed Forces where they must inform the making of decisions at every level. And we acquire them through education, both academic and self-teaching. So the signal role of the teacher in our lives, from childhood into maturity, gives us good reason to salute the dedicated people who make our schools, colleges and great universities their lives — people for whom, as the President said, "every week is education week."

Services Owe Much To Efforts of USO

When the National Broadcasting Company televised "USO — Wherever They Go" recently, older service people must have felt a glow of warmth for the organization that brought so much cheer into their lives during WWII.

There were the familiar faces — Bob Hope, Bing Crosby, Danny Kaye, Lena Horne, Marlene Dietrich and others trouping tirelessly, willingly putting up with the dirt, discomforts, the dangers of war to brighten the spirit of the U. S. fighting man around the globe. Wherever he fought, the USO was with him.

Some of them, like Al Jolson, have passed away from the scene; many others are still major luminaries of the entertainment world. But to see them in the war theaters was seeing them best of all. And their huge audiences responded to their efforts with the enthusiasm of men starved for diversion.

The television film, saluting the USO for 20 years of service to the Armed Forces at home and abroad, emphasized the fact that the nation's buildup of military manpower will put considerable added strain on the organization's resources. That is why President Kennedy, as its honorary chairman, is appealing for public support of its fall drive for contributions.

"Winning the peace is a lonely battle" — it sure is, and we're the people who know it best. But the USO, which has adopted this theme for its current campaign, knows it too. In the words of its national campaign chairman, Gen. Anthony C. McAuliffe (Ret.), "Today's Armed Forces face altogether a different situation in the development and maintenance of their morale. They must be on the alert all the time, their fingers on a trigger we hope will never be squeezed. This is a drain on the bodies and spirits of men."

And, in speaking for this gallant organization, Gen. McAuliffe sums up the feelings of all of us in uniform who are served by it. "So long as there is need for an expanded, emergency military establishment, so long will there be vital need for USO and its worldwide operations."

The Judge Says . . .

By 1st Lt. Theodore D. Postl

Perhaps one of the most dangerous instrumentalities used in our modern day society is the automobile. Consequently, the law governing its use and the manner of employment has grown to tremendous proportions.

It is felt that if a portion of the law governing automobiles is explained, and also to point out how far the law has been extended in this area, it may serve a useful purpose.

Generally, a person is liable for any damage he does by improperly using his automobile. This is true whether the damage is done to the property of another person, or for personal injuries to another person.

By "improperly" is meant that if a person negligently drives his vehicle and thus is the cause of the damage to another person, the driver will be held liable.

The idea of negligence in our law is very old, and many things which would not, at a glance, be considered negligent, are negligence in the eyes of the law.

An an example of just how the law has gone in this area, some states have held the owner of an automobile liable where he left the keys in the car and a thief stole the car and hit a pedestrian. The courts have ruled the owner was negligent by leaving his keys in the ignition.

Another area in which the law has gone far to protect the public from misuse of the automobile is in the misuse of an automobile by a person other than the owner.

An example of this would be the situation where a person loans his car to a person who is intoxicated.

If the intoxicated borrower has an accident with the car and causes personal or property damage to a third person, the owner of the car will be held responsible for the damages sustained.

Once again the law reasons that a person who loans his car to one who is intoxicated is negligent, and is obviously putting a dangerous instrument in the hands of a person not capable of controlling it.

The Surgeon Says

College a Must?

More and more frequently these days we read or hear discussed the subject "The Importance of A College Education."

And, and rightly so, that on the average college graduates reach higher positions, earn more money and achieve more honors than non-college educated individuals. These facts are reaching more and more students and parents with the effect that greater and greater stress and pressure (direct and indirect) is being exerted on sons and daughters to go on to college.

For individuals who are capable of handling college level material and who have adequately prepared, such encouragement may well serve a healthy function in providing the extra motivation necessary to get the prospective college student on his way.

Unfortunately, however, this increasing stress on the importance of a college education has some unfortunate side effects in many cases. Most parents are rightly concerned that their child make the most of all educational opportunities, but in many cases this does not mean that college is the answer. Because having a son or daughter in college has frequently become a status symbol, parents of less capable individuals have too often planned and pressured subtly and directly in order to get their son or daughter into college and the result has far too frequently been an experience of frustration, failure and increased feelings of inadequacy.

Add to this the disappointment of the parents and the further effect this has on the son or daughter and it is easy to see that a great deal of needless heartache could have been avoided if more realistic educational plans had been made while the individual was still in junior high and high school.

The fact that must be faced up to is that many individuals do not profit by attending college and in fact, often experience serious emotional problems as a consequence of being mistakenly guided or pressured in this direction.

Too frequently we have failed to recognize that an individual can lead a much more productive, happy and satisfying life in a job that does not necessitate a college degree.

There are, for example, a great many good paying jobs for which on-the-job training is available. The military services also offer opportunities for education and training in a wide variety of occupational specialities from electronics to a laboratory technician.

Fine trade schools are also available to many individuals who are often capable of handling mechanical and technical tasks with a higher level of skill than their former high school classmates who may now be attending college.

We must remember that "success" is not to be measured solely in terms of status, money or position but rather should be based on the sense of satisfaction that comes to each individual who knows he is doing a good job in a position which he enjoys.

Takes Writing Contest Award

SSgt. Fred H. Bost of Fort Lewis, Wash., has won first place in a writing contest sponsored by Infantry Magazine, the professional journal for Infantrymen published by the Infantry School.

The contest was open to present and past squad leaders in pay-grade E-6 or below.

Sgt. Bost is a member of the Marksmanship Detachment at Fort Benning.

He will receive $75 for his article which will be published in the November-December issue of Infantry Magazine scheduled for release the first week in November.

The title for the article, "Rifle Squad Leader—Toughest Job in the Army," was selected by The Infantry Magazine staff.

Purpose of the contest was to secure more authors from the enlisted ranks. The magazine welcomes articles on any subject of interest to the Infantry, officials stated.

Sgt. Bost served during World War II as a petty officer in the Navy, assigned to a Naval Infantry battalion in the South Pacific.

Chaplain's Corner

Don't Be Tempted!

By Chaplain (Maj.) Clement Krug

Little Jackie is two years old. He is bright for his age. Like any boy who is growing up, he is curious. There are so many new things he is learning every day he feels himself in a land of wonderment.

He is annoyed sometimes with the many restrictions his parents place upon him; i.e., he can play only in an enclosed area, he must stay away from matches and stoves. His parents tell him why, but truly be doesn't understand.

One day, however, Jackie's mother was quite busy with watching Jackie and doing the household chores and answering the ever insistant salesman ringing the front doorbell. The telephone rang. Quickly she dashed to the phone and left Jackie alone in the kitchen near a hot stove.

Jackie felt the urge. No one was watching him. He was alone. He went over to the stove and touched the fascinatingly glowing hot plate. There was a scream. All confusion. Jackie received a severe burn. His ignorance was not bliss.

Ignorance in the application of the natural laws of life demands a toll of us in spite of our sincerity.

Some of us grow up like children in relation to the natural moral laws. We are curious. We don't understand why we must stay away from certain so-called pleasures. We wait until no one can check up on us. Then the burn, followed by morbid confusion.

Is it not better for simple living to want to know what is right and so to live by it? Ignorance or even malice makes you a victim of your mistakes.

Rangers From The Sky Support TIS Problems

Rangers and 187th Pathfinders Combine Into Hard-Hitting Team

Guiding Army aircraft into small, unimproved landing zones and providing combat patrols with reinforcement and up-to-date intelligence are two of the regular duties performed by the Ranger Department's small nine-man Pathfinder element.

Working in conjunction with Fort Benning's 187th Pathfinder Team, headed by Capt. Earl L. Bessent and assisted by Sgt. John D. Sexton, the Ranger unit supports the three USAIS problems which presently employ the parachute delivered forces. In this role, its members have averaged better than 21 parachute jumps per man during the past 12 - month period.

Problem 8750N, "Rifle Platoon Operations," with Capt. Oscar Herrgesell as principal instructor, assisted by M Sgt John S. L. Burchfield, employs the Pathfinders to reconnoiter, select and mark a landing zone in preparation for the arrival of a helicopter - borne student platoon engaged in a surprise attack on an enemy position.

This problem, scheduled just prior to graduation, is presented to Orientation and is the highlight of their platoon tactics instruction with the Ranger Department.

Parachutists are employed also in Problem 8630N, "Night Combat Patrol." Upon completion of a night patrol mission behind enemy lines, Orientation Course and Officer Candidate students are guided by Pathfinder personnel to a pick-up point and then airlifted back to friendly lines. The principal instructor for his operation is Capt. Joseph Orlowski, jr., assisted by MSgt Morris E. Tate.

In the course of instruction in the Mountain Ranger Camp at Dahlonega, Georgia, parachutists are utilized on long range day and night patrol missions. Ranger patrols are airlanded deep in enemy territory, resupplied, and evacuated through the use of Army aircraft.

Operations of this type require the Ranger patrol leader to coordinate closely with the unit Pathfinder and aircraft flight leader to insure the successful accomplishment of the patrol mission.

During all phases of these actions the patrols are subjected to continuous aggressor harassment, forcing the utilization of hit and run tactics, forced marches, and frequent displacement of the patrols' base of operation. The aerial resupply of the patrols and their plan for evacuation to friendly lines are a constant challenge for the parachute delivered Pathfinder element, and through activities such as these, the Ranger Department gains valuable experience in the long range patroling doctrinal field.

During the Florida phase of Ranger training, elements of the 187th Pathfinder Team participate in an airmobile raid with the Ranger students. The operation portrays a Ranger company in a night raid behind enemy lines.

Pathfinders are employed to provide guidance at landing zones and to insure the rapid delivery of the Rangers close to an objective area. Following the accomplishment of the raid, the Rangers move quickly to a pick-up site where the Pathfinders bring in Army aircraft for the evacuation of the raiding force.

Parachute delivered forces on a raid of this type must exercise both stealth and surprise to a maximum, for detection prior to the airlanding of the main force might well result in the failure of the mission.

Working with parachute delivered elements has a bonus value for USAIS students. In addition to learning to apply normal principles, the students gain valuable information on the employment of Pathfinders.

Additionally, this modern instruction acquaints the students with Army aircraft as an extension of mobility and guidance techniques necessary to execute successful airlanded or evacuation missions.

Jenni Johnson on Etiquette

DEAR JENNI: My husband was in an automobile accident while we were on leave in Florida. His injuries prevented us from returning before his leave was over. I did not know how to get it extended and I made several long distance costly phone calls. I wish someone had listed the proper procedure for me.

WORRIED WIFE

DEAR WORRIED WIFE: In case of serious injury, illness or death while on leave or enroute somewhere, you should, of course, arrange for his well being. As soon as you can collect your wits and be free for a few minutes: (1) Wire his commanding officer, giving him (a) your husband's full name, rank and service number, (b) Where the illness or accident occurred. (c) Its nature and seriousness. (d) The extent of injury or illness. (e) His condition. (f) The name and address of the attending physician. (g) the name and address of the hospital. (h) The address where you may be reached.

(2) If there is military authority or base nearby, call them for help. If there isn't any, see the Red Cross or VA.

(3) If a car is involved in the accident get in touch with the local representative of your automobile insurance company, or wire them at their home office.

(4) If appropriate, notify his life insurance company also.

(5) If there is some question about how his injury or death occurred, get a statement from the police, or some other authority proving it was not his fault. If there is any question of his own negligence or carelessness you may not get all your benefits.

(6) Don't call a private lawyer. There are many military sources available who serve without charge.

(7) Don't allow civilian strangers to handle your affair, particularly where money is involved.

NCO's Distaff Doings

By Marianne Kelley

A fascinating array of cosmetics delighted everyone present at the last meeting of the NCO Wives on Thursday, October 26. (By the way girls, where were most of you? It is a rather disappointing fact that lately many of you have shown very little interest in the club's activities.) However, we were happy to greet a new member, Mrs. Albert Contois.

Several guests were also introduced. They were the Mesdames R. M. Hanlon, R. C. Smith and M. Morales.

All the girls participated happily and noisily in a contest. The object was to find out who carried the most junk around in her purse. Mrs. David A. Doyle was the winner of the prize. Mrs. Frederick Szymanski again was the fortunate recipient of the door prize. Guess some of us are just lucky or something.

Refreshments for the evening were prepared and served by Mrs. E. K. Blois and Mrs. J. F. Kelley.

For those interested in ceramics. New classes are now being held every Tuesday and Thursday from 9 a.m. until noon. It was just learned that Mrs. Gardell Kaney, chairman of the ceramics club, had the misfortune to break her leg trying to extinguish a fire started by careless children. Hope Martha will be able to be with us again soon.

Jewish Women Meet On Post

The first meeting of a Jewish Women's Club at post was held yesterday at 7:30 p.m. at the Jewish Center, Building 1071.

For further information about the organization, telephone Mrs. Edward West, MU 9-4509 or Chaplain (1st Lt.) Naftali Friedman.

The afair of the week was the children's Halloween party, October 28, at the clubhouse. The girls who planned and worked so hard for this party deserve a heap of thanks and compliments. They are Mrs. Laurie W. Rentrop, Othon O. Valent and Thomas A. Mingey. Mrs. George Booth and Gardel Kaney helped with all the detailed planning.

The kiddies loved all the doings! There were old favorite games like, "Musical Chairs" "Marshmallow Snatching," and "Balloon Hop." The refreshments, prepared and donated by the mothers, were not exactly refused. The highlight of the party was the judging, by unbiased members, of the most original costumes.

The proud winners were: Ages 2 - 4, Lisa Tentrop, the tiniest and most adorable Geisha; 5 - 7, Kathleen Kelly, devastating charmer of the roaring twenties; Ages 8 and up, Jerry Yoder, a mighty cute Turk; Donnette Payne, an oriental charmer of the greatest magnitude; Allen Hightower, an authentic fugitive from a hobo jungle; and Mike Kelly, a battered and battle weary champion of the square ring.

Barbara Hare's Report Card...

An enthusiastic blonde with a wonderful personality is the subject of today's REPORT CARD. Mary Michael Magner, daughter of Maj. and Mrs. G. J. Magner, steps into the spotlight as the subject of this week's teen salute.

Mary Mike was born on December 10, 1944 in Fort Worth, Texas and calls this "home."

Mary Mike has attended Pacelli High School for four years and has proved herself not only an outstanding student but also an excellent worker. This year her schedule includes Trigonometry, English, Speech, Problems in Democracy, and Chemistry. She also holds two important student positions - co-editor of the school's newspaper "THE PACELLIAN" and vice-president of the Student Council. Last year Mary Mike also participated in many extra-curricula activities. She was inducted into the National Spanish Honor Society and the National Honor Society. She was the Pacelli winner of the "Voice of Democracy" contest. She has served as a student council representative.

This summer during July, Mary Mike was a conselor at the Cerebral Palsy Summer Camp held at The Infantry Center Rest Center. When I asked Mary Mike her opinion about being a counselor, she said "It was a wonderful and rewarding experience. I'd love to do it again." She also took a trip to Ohio this summer, which she enjoyed very much.

Her hobbies include all sports — especially basketball. She is an avid reader and spends a great amount of her spare time at the library.

Here at Benning Mary Mike is very busy with Junior Army Daughters of America (JADA). Besides living in Fort Worth and Benning, the Magners have resided in Puerto Rico, Oklahoma, Germany and Kansas.

After high school, Mary Mike plans to go to college and become a teacher.

Concerning her opinions about Pacelli and Benning, she said "Going to Pacelli has been one of the most fortunate experiences of my life. And I think Fort Benning is one of the prettiest posts in the United States and some of the most wonderful people live here."

Mary Mike has three brothers. Her father, Maj. Magner, is a member of the Special Subjects Department, USAIS.

Mary Mike is a good example of a Benningite who is working for her school and her community. We of Report Card salute Mary Mike and wish her much luck and success in the future!

Post Museum Helping Excavate Many Ancient Indian Villages

During the summer of 1955, a dental officer was walking along the banks of the Ochillee Creek looking for traces of Indian occupation. Not far from the southern border of the military reservation, he crossed one of the many old logging trails which snake through the thicket and piney forests.

In the eroded and washed out holes which gullied the ancient trail, he found what he was looking for: flint chips, pottery and an occasional arrowhead. He later returned to the same place and dug a few holes and uncovered additional evidence of a large Indian camp.

The dentist had not been trained in the science of archeology and was unable to understand the full significance of his discovery. It was not until the summer of 1957 that a systematic field exploration of the site took place under the supervision of the University of Georgia.

At this time, Sfc David W. Chase, curator of the Infantry Museum, was placed in direct supervision of the field expedition. Since work could be conducted only on off-duty hours, it took both July and August to excavate the 50-foot square section.

Sgt. Chase, whose archeological background includes work in New England, New York State and Central and Northern Japan, the latter being conducted under the direction of Dr. Higuchi, an eminent Japanese archeologist, was appointed as field liaison to the Laboratory of Archeology, University of Georgia, for all future work on the Fort Benning military reservation. He was subsequently granted a permit to conduct archeological excavations within the provisions of the Federal Law (Antiquities Act of 1907) by the National Park Service, Department of the Interior.

His work on the Ochillee Creek site uncovered evidence of the little known Early Swift Creek Culture which flourished about the time of Christ. He also found evidence there to indicate that the site had been occupied at least 4,000 years ago by wandering hunters of the Archaic Period. In all, four culture levels were uncovered.

Today, Sgt. Chase is still acting in his capacity of liaison to the University of Georgia for federal land archeology. He also is an informant to the Smithsonian Institute, whose archeologists are surveying and excavating some 300 to 400 historic and prehistoric sites between Columbus and Fort Gaines, Ga., which by the year 1963, will be covered by the backed up waters of the Walter F. George Dam at Fort Gaines. Among the threatened sites in the river high pool areas, 25 are on the Fort Benning reservation.

Also within reservation boundaries are over 100 Indian camp and village sites, plus four early European type settler sites of the 1700-1800 period. From time to time, such sites are intersected by road building, range construction or backed up waters of fish ponds.

A recent example involved the uncovering of an extremely rich prehistoric Indian village site behind the Main Post quartermaster warehouse area. Nearly 14 deep refuse pits of the late Swift Creek Period were exposed by a ditching machine in the autumn of 1958. The material was excavated on the site by Infantry Museum personnel on weekends and holidays.

Subsequent study of the thousands of pottery, stone and bone objects recovered revealed that a brisk trade association had existed between the local Indians and those of the Florida Gulf Coast nearly 500 years before the coming of the Europeans to this continent.

All post agencies whose activities extend into remote parts of the military reservation, such as the Fish and Game Association, Forestry Branch, and Roads and Grounds, Infantry Engineer Section, have been cooperative in reporting evidence of Indian occupation. Many post soldiers have also helped by bringing in pottery or stone implements found in many areas. Such information aids in piecing together the vast picture of human activity in the Chattahoochee Valley over the past several thousands of years.

The Infantry Museum also cooperates closely with the Bradley Museum of Arts and Crafts of Columbus in this endeavor. Joseph Mahan, Jr., curator of the Indian Hall at the Bradley, is kept continually posted regarding archeological activities on post.

The Infantry Museum has a double barrelled mission, both in the area of military history of the Infantry and of local Indian history as well. Recent explorations by Infantry Museum archeologists on the site of Fort Mitchell in Alabama, the first U. S. military garrison in the Middle Chattahoochee Valley, has served to tie both missions together.

In keeping with these archeological activities, the Infantry Museum has placed on exhibit a case containing certain Indian objects discovered on the reservation, together with archeological material and documents relating to the Fort Mitchell site.

5,000 See 2nd Display Strength

'SOLDIER-OF-YEAR' GETS HANDSHAKE
S-Maj. J. Runyon, 9th Inf., Greets Sgt. Alford

Nothing Div. Cannot Do --Army CG

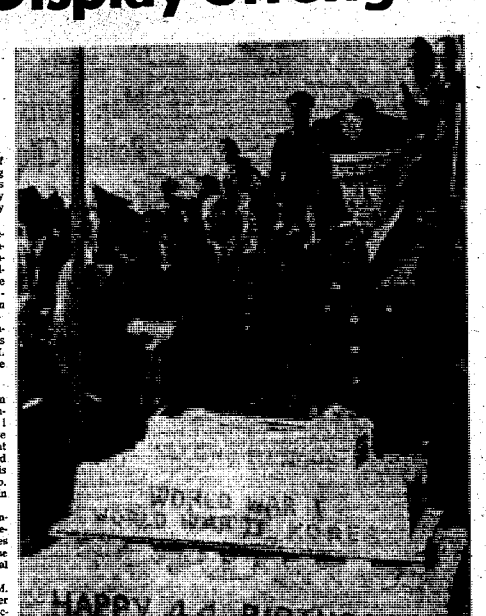
BY PETER TATISTCHEFF

More than 5,000 citizens of the Columbus — Fort Benning area sat under sunny skies Saturday to watch the mighty 2nd Infantry Division display its strength.

Massed for the largest review ever staged by the "Indianhead" division at Fort Benning, nearly 10,000 rough-and-ready troops passed before the reviewing stand, their many-colored unit flags fluttering in the autumn wind.

Here to review the 2nd Infantry Division's strength was Lieutenant General T. J. H. Trapnell, commander of the Third U. S. Army.

'Congratulations'



Speaking to the division on the occasion of its 44th birthday anniversary, General Trapnell extended his "sincere congratulations," adding that the 2nd Division's record "speaks for itself. There is nothing this division can't do. I wish you the best of luck in the days ahead."

Among the special guests invited to attend Saturday's review were two representatives of the 6th Marines, one of the "Indianhead" division's original units.

They were Colonel Jonas M. Platt, present-day commander of the marine unit that saw action with the division in the historic battle of Belleau Wood in July of 1918, and Sergeant Major Edward B. Pullen, present-day sergeant major for the 6th Marines at Camp LeJeune, North Carolina.

Sgt. Alford Repeats As 'Soldier-of-Year'

A 23-year old platoon sergeant has been named the 2nd Infantry Division's "Career Soldier-of-the-Year" for 1962.

Being selected for this distinguished honor, however, is nothing new to Platoon Sergeant Richard B. Alford, of Company D, 9th Infantry.

Sergeant Alford, a native of Farmville, Louisiana, also reigned as the division's "Career Soldier-of-the-Year" in 1960.

Announcement of Sergeant Alford's selection over 12 other candidates came at the "Indianhead" division's celebration of its 44th birthday anniversary and observance of its Organization Day activities last Saturday. More than 5,000 military and civilian spectators witnessed the ceremonies at Sightseeing Field, on Fort Benning's Main Post.

The "Career Soldier-of-the-Year" was selected on the basis of record of service, conscientious pursuit of education, decorations and awards, personal appearance and military bearing, instructional ability, a knowledge of customs and traditions of the Army, general military subjects and the history of the 2nd Infantry Division.

Sergeant Alford was congrat-

Col. McGraw Is Promoted

The Second Infantry Division's Aviation Officer, Colonel Robert E. McGraw, was promoted to his present rank at a ceremony in the office of Major General Charles H. Chase, division commanding general, last week.

The wife of the Indianhead's newest colonel pinned the eagle on his collar at the surprise promotion ceremony.

A native of Wahpeton, North Dakota, Colonel McGraw received his commission at the University of Wyoming in 1940.

Visitor Has Special Interest in Division

Among the many military and civilian visitors on hand to help the 2nd Division celebrate its 44th birthday anniversary was a tall, striking Marine officer whose very military career bears a direct relationship to the "Indianhead" division, a relationship that spans two generations.

Colonel Jonas M. Platt, commander of Camp LeJeune's 6th Marines, was a special guest of the Organization Day activities, along with his unit's top-ranking non-commissioned officer, Sergeant Major Edward B. Pullen.

Stopping to talk with a reporter before the ceremonies, Colonel Platt spoke of this relationship — when the 6th Marines, as one of the division's original units, helped to successfully win the Battle of Belleau Wood in World War I's infancy.

"An uncle of mine was commander of one of those Marine companies at Belleau Wood," said Col. Platt. "The example the division set and the first battle honors it won has made me very proud."

Maj. Norris Retires; Cited For Service

Major John G. Norris— a former supply sergeant who became the 2nd Division's G-4 (supply and logistics) officer — was cited Tuesday upon his retirement after more than 20 years' service.

Major Norris, in ceremonies at the office of Major General Charles H. Chase, commanding general, was presented the Army Commendation Medal (First Oak Leaf Cluster). Major Norris was cited for "outstanding and meritorious" service with the division and its predecessor, the 10th Infantry Division.

Citation

"In all of his actions," the citation said, Major Norris "demonstrated a high degree of professional knowledge, an awareness and appreciation of all aspects of any problem, and a desire to render assistance." It continued:

"Through his exemplary performance in all positions, as well as his enthusiasm, tact, leadership ability, and sincere devotion to duty, he was able to win the confidence and respect of all personnel with whom he came in contact, superiors and subordinates alike."

A former supply sergeant with the 2nd Division, Major Norris was commissioned in November 1951 after seeing service during World War II with the 4th Coast Artillery in Panama and South America.

Major Norris, a Steilacoom, Washington, native served as Division G-4 this summer during the interim preceding the arrival of Lieutenant Colonel James C. Larson, present G-4. Major Norris served concurrently as Assistant G-4 and as Brigade S-4 officer from February 1, 1960 until his retirement Tuesday.

Trans Unit Trades 'Deuce-and-a-Halves' For New Armored Personnel Carriers

The 13th Transportation Battalion's Company B is saying "good-bye" to its two-and-a-half-ton trucks and "hello" to the M-59 armored personnel carrier.

Turned Over

Lieutenant Colonel Clarence G. Collins announced that all of the battalion's 59 "deuce-and-a-half" trucks would be processed and turned over to other units. Colonel Collins is the battalion commander.

Each month the drivers of Company B logged thousands of miles, transporting elements of practically every unit in the division. With commitments of practically every day and night.

Every man in the company set himself to the task of preparing the trucks for the turnover. With maximum effort the switch was accomplished in minimum time.

At the same time, one-third of the company was undergoing an intensified training program in preparation for driving and maintaining the armored personnel carrier. Company C of the 13th Transportation Battalion provided the instruction and "tracks" for the training program. Within six weeks practically every man in Company B was a licensed armored personnel carrier driver.

Soon the tracks began arriving. At first, three from 702nd Ordnance came in. Then nine were transferred from Company C of the 13th. A few days later, three more arrived from Ordnance.

Almost as soon as the tracks arived, they were committed for support of the battle groups within the division.

At the present time, 16 APCs are in use but the remainder are expected at any time to bring the company to full TOE strength.

In order that each man in the company receives maximum training in the use of the carriers, Captain David B. Barnhill, commanding officer of Company B, has arranged a program whereby the tracks are rotated among the men in the company each week.

With the arrival of the remainder of the M-59 Personnel Carriers, Company B will again assume its vital support mission within the "Second To None" division.

9th's Capt. Hannen Gets New Tracks

By 9th Inf PIO

Promoted to his present rank was Captain William M. Hannen, the executive officer of Company C, 9th Infantry.

The promotion took place in the Command Post tent of the 9th Infantry. Colonel Clifford P. Hannum, commander, pinned the silver bars on the new Captain.

Captain Hannen, from Steubenvile, Ohio, is a graduate of Ohio University, where he studied history and government.

23rd's Rifle Platoons Rate Excellent in ATT

By 23rd Infantry PIO

Recently the 23rd Infantry's rifle platoons underwent extensive Army Training Tests to determine their proficiency in the field.

Individual platoon scores were high, and a rating of "excellent" was given to each of the rifle platoons taking the tests.

Company D

Delta Company's second platoon, led by Lt. Waylon D. Hawkins, scored highest with 94.51 points. Other top ranking scorers included the third platoon of Echo Company, led by Lt. Raul G. Vilaronga, with 93.57 points, and Bravo's second platoon, led by Lt. Walter D. Swain, with 93.41. Charlie Company's second platoon, led by Lt. Joseph W. Murray, rated 90.75, while its first platoon, led by Lt. John G. Lybrand, racked 90.59 points.

An average of platoon scores by each company showed that Company E, commanded by Capt. David S. Moore, averaged 90.2. Company C, commanded by Capt. Michael J. Lally Jr., had an average of 89.41. Company D, commanded by Capt. Frederick F. Woerner Jr., had 89.37, and Company B, commanded by Capt. Israel Nezvesky, averaged 88.99. Company A, commanded by Capt. Daniel J. Tobin, had a platoon average of 86.2.

Colonel Louis A. Kunzig Jr., 30th Infantry Brigade commander of the 23rd Infantry, said he was pleased with the tests' outcome and that the results were "very creditable" considering the short training time the platoons had.

Tests were conducted this week for the 23rd's weapons platoons and Combat Support Company's reconnaissance and heavy mortar platoons.

Captain Kenney completed World War II service in December 1946, and remained with the inactive reserve and was later commissioned in the Massachusetts National Guard while attending Boston College.

In July 1948, he entered the U.S. Military Academy as a plebe and graduated in June of 1952.

Since that time, Captain Kenney has had assignments with the 82nd Airborne Division, Ft. 13th Trans, 69th Armor Team with 9th Infantry

By 9th Inf PIO

In a surge of dust and with the sound of action, tanks of the 69th Armor and armored personnel carriers from 13th Transportation Battalion slowly moved forward to meet a simulated enemy aggressor in a training exercise with the 9th Infantry.

In an actual combat situation the tank battalions and the infantry go hand in hand on almost any mission. The infantryman covers the ground aggressor while the tanks provide the overwatching fires to the front.

Last week's training for the 9th Infantry centered around tank and infantry assault tactics, and each line company in the unit had at least a day's training with the 69th Armor. This was one of the larger field problems experienced by the 9th Infantry as they neared the completion of the intensified combat training program and prepared for the battle group Army Training Test, to be given in November.

Div. NCOs Hold Organization Day Ball Saturday Evening at Harmony Church

BY CLAY LACY

Some 1,200 non-commissioned officers and their wives thronged to the Field House at Harmony Church Saturday evening for the Organization Day Ball sponsored by the 2nd Infantry Division Non-Commissioned Officers' Open Mess.

Dancing music was provided for the affair by Little John Beecher and his orchestra.

Social Hour

A social hour opened the program, commencing at 7 p.m., followed by a smorgasbord buffet that included fried chicken, sliced ham, roast beef, various cold cuts, potato salad, beans, pickles, relish, olives, rolls and sundry embellishments.

Highlight of the evening was the visit by Major General Charles H. Chase, commanding general, who addressed the NCOs and their guests. General Chase praised the showing of the division units in the Saturday morning review at Sightseeing Field.

His other comments reviewed the history and heritage of the 2nd Infantry Division in its 44 years of active service to the United States. Other guests during the evening included Brigadier General Royal Reynolds Jr., the assistant division commander; Colonel Gustav M. Bacharach, division chief of staff; members of the division staff and battle group and major unit commanders who met non-coms and guests from their respective units.

Guest

A guest for the evening of the division Sergeant Major, Sergeant Major Robert L. Brown was the top non-commissioned officer of the 6th Marines from Camp LeJeune, N. C., Sergeant Major Edward B. Pullen.

Tables were set up throughout the large hall by unit with the majority of the unit sergeants major presiding. Dress was colorful with the Army Blue uniform as well as the Army Green uniform intermingled with the gay colors of the ladies evening gowns, cocktail dresses and evening attire.

Serving as host for the NCO Open Mess was the Club Secretary, Master Sergeant Harry A. Rupp. Assisting him to service the huge throng was a host of waiters, waitresses and cooks.

The gala affair lasted until 1:30 a.m.

Gen. Chase Speaks At Officers' Dance

The entire Main Officers' Open Mess was reserved for 2nd Division Officers, their ladies and guests for a dance Saturday celebrating the division's 44th birthday anniversary.

Speaking to the more than 1,200 in attendance, Major General Charles H. Chase, division commanding general, summed up the day's activities by saying that he had been "most highly pleased with the review," noting that "the leaders are right here—those who directed, prepared and lead the review. That is just a reminder of the things you can do if you start out to do them."

General Chase extended a special welcome to Colonel and Mrs. Jonas M. Platt. Colonel Platt is the present day commander of the 6th Marines, one of the units assigned to the original 2nd Division in 1917. A welcome also was extended to Percy Terwilliger, National President of the 2nd "Indianhead" Infantry Division Association.

The commanding general then presented a brief summary of the division's history as "part of the tradition to which we belong."

Addressing himself finally to the subject of preparedness, General Chase noted that the work was strenuous, "calling for patience and, encouragement on the part of the wives. I am certainly encouraged by the way things are going."

Many Dignitaries See 2nd Division Celebrate 44th Birthday Anniversary

A host of dignitaries—ranging from the commander of the Third U.S. Army to the present-day sergeant major of the Marine unit that saw action with the 2nd Infantry Division at the historic battle of Belleau Wood — Saturday witnessed the Indianhead unit's Organization Day review.

Third Army Commander Lieutenant General T. J. H. Trapnell was the reviewing officer for the Second Division's 44th anniversary parade at Main Post's Sightseeing Field.

On the reviewing stand with Gen. Trapnell were Major General Charles H. Chase, commanding general of the 2nd Infantry Division; Colonel Jonas M. Platt, commander of the 6th Marines, and Sergeant Major Edward B. Pullen, sergeant major of the 6th Marines.

Later, they were joined by Platoon Sergeant Richard B. Alford, Company D of the 9th Infantry, who was announced as the 2nd Infantry Division's "Career Soldier-of-the-Y e a r" for 1962.

Honored guests for the event included Major General Ben Harrell, commanding general of Fort Benning; Brigadier General A. D. Surles Jr., assistant commandant of The U.S. Army Infantry School; Brigadier General John E. Kelly, deputy commanding general of Fort Benning, and Colonel William A. McKee, The Infantry Center's chief of staff.

Among those attending from Columbus were Mayor B. Ed Johnson; Maynard Ashworth, president and publisher of the Ledger-Enquirer; T. G. Reeves, prominent businessman; Lieutenant General (Ret.) Reuben Jenkins, Major General (ret.) Phillip Gallagher, Brigadier General (Ret.) Marcus Bell, Oscar Betts, prominent businessman, and Sergeant First Class (Ret.) Alexander Hunter, the former "Mr. 2nd Division."

Attending from Kansas City, Mo., was Percy Terwilliger, National President of the 2nd "Indianhead" Infantry Division Association.

Terwilliger hosted this year's "Indian Head" Association Reunion at Kansas City and spent two days here renewing old ties with members who attended the reunion.

Commander of Troops for the mammoth review — the largest ever staged at Fort Benning by the 2nd Division — was Brigadier General Royal Reynolds Jr., assistant division commander.

Dunn 1st to Get Bar at 1st Inf

Lieutenant Ralph B. Dunn Jr., of the 1st Infantry, was recently the first junior officer to received promotion in the reformed, due to OVUREP, battle group.

Lt. Dunn received his silver bar in a ceremony held in the office of Captain Rocco Negris, Commander of Company E.

Field Duty Has Its Brighter Side

Field duty does have its luxuries for the men of the "Indianhead" Division.

They are being afforded the opportunity to see movies after duty hours and to enjoy the facilities of a Post Exchange in their area of operations.

24-Hour Basis

The movies are provided through the 2nd Infantry Division Special Services Office, which makes the movies available to various units on a 24-hour loan basis.

Master Sergeant Lewis Gray, of the division SSO, said the movies for the troops are of recent issue and come to his office from the Main Post SSO.

Each unit, however, must have its own projectionist for showings.

There are four mobile Post Exchanges operating in the field, two days a week, according to Lieutenant Ivor C. Manderson, division exchange officer.

Lt. Manderson said each of the four trucks spends about four hours at each unit or until each man has had opportunity to visit it.

The mobile PXs make their rounds on Tuesdays and Wednesdays and operate between the hours of 5 p.m. and 9 p.m.

Lt. Manderson added the mobile PXs operate under black out conditions when they are in areas which require this.

The Reason: Snakes

Walk Softly, Carry Big Stick, Urge 87th Men

By 87th Inf PIO

Soldiers of Company E, 87th Infantry have been flushing out more than just "enemy aggressors" lurking in the bushes.

While bivouacking last week in the vicinity of Box Springs and Rhinehart Roads, Echo Company claimed their third coral snake in five weeks in the same area.

Beauty?

The latest was a 20-inch beauty captured by Sergeant First Class George Flad while conducting a land navigation class.

The deadly coral was presented to the Ranger Dept. in the Harmony Church area. They said it was one of the largest ones ever seen.

For obvious reasons, Echo Soldiers "Walk softly, but carry a big stick."

'Library on Wheels' Now Takes Magazines, Paperbacks to Field

By George Hord

A vehicle bearing a sign "Field Library" may not be listed on an Infantry division's Table of Organization and Equipment . . . but such can be seen about every other week on the roads of Fort Benning during Indianhead field training exercises.

The response to the book and magazine deliveries made by the Special Services Field Library has been "favorable," says Mrs. Mary Jane Galer, librarian at Sand Hill Library Two, where the trips to the field originate.

Non-Returnable

The books are paperbacks and are non-returnable. They are taken from a list of well-rounded subjects sent out by the Department of the Army, Mrs. Galer said. Some 500 volumes are distributed by the library on wheels.

In addition, a variety of 200 current magazines are distributed to the Soldiers in the field by way of the field library.

Mrs. Galer said she and a library staff member usually start on their "book run" about 1 p.m. on Mondays and that the trip to all division units takes about four or five hours.

One such trip, she stated, totaled 94 miles round-trip.

Distribution of the books and magazines is made by visiting units' command posts or message centers, where they are deposited for further distribution to the Soldiers in the field.

2nd Division Headquarters Company Moves to Former 2nd Med Bn Area

Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 2nd Infantry Division, has moved into the area on Sand Hill formerly occupied by the 2nd Medical Battalion.

The 125 men who, with all company facilities, occupied eight buildings in their previous area near 2nd Administration Company, now occupy 4½ buildings off Arrowhead Road.

History

According to Captain Ralph C. Colley, company commander, "The move, as one can well imagine, has some history behind it. We are composed of men working in general staff sections, brigade, command headquarters and have a Military Police Detachment attached. We are also responsible for all equipment held by these sections.

"Before, we were at extreme reduced strength—that is, before the division received its new mission. We had no problems then with equipment storage. Now, with the division's new mission, equipment and personnel began to flow into the company at a greater rate, necessitating an expansion of our storage place. There just wasn't enough room for it all."

Now, with 21 buildings at their disposal, storage and maintaining alert equipment has ceased to be a problem. Living facilities have been greatly improved, says Captain Colley, taking into account the addition of a complete security platoon not carried by the company under the former division mission.

2nd Marine Div. Lauds 2nd Inf Div On Anniversary

The 2nd Infantry Division has received congratulations on its birthday from the commander of the 2nd Marine Division.

Major General J. P. Berkeley, commanding general of the Camp LeJeune-based division, wrote 2nd Division Commanding General Major General Charles H. Chase:

"The Marines of the 2d Marine Division salute their brothers in arms of the 2d Infantry Division on the 44th anniversary of the Indian Head Division."

Weapons Platoons Take Army Training Tests

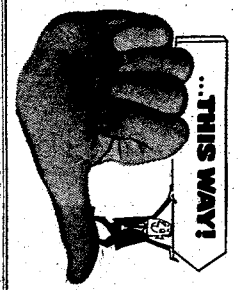
By 23rd Infantry PIO

The weapons platoons of the 23rd Infantry underwent Army Training Tests recently.

The tests were given in the field from October 16-18, where the platoons went through their paces to demonstrate how well they had learned to apply their training. High scores and efficient performance of their duties enabled the weapons platoons to place well up on the rating charts.

Average

The battle group average for the tests was 87.21 Point spread between the high and low weapons platoon was a slim 13.17. Company B's platoon, led by Lieutenant Walter L. Swain, amassed a numerical score of 95.37 and an adjectival score of "Superior" to lead the group.



Army Training Tests on the company level were given the 23rd Infantry this week. Results of these tests will be published next week.

Driver With Seat Belt in His Car Considered 'Oddity'

By David M. Winkler

The speeds at which we cruise today on some of our highways would have been the top speed a car was able to attain just a few years ago.

And today's roads and highways are being built to accommodate the demands of a motoring public for commuting, making business appointments, shopping, transporting the children to school and for general driving pleasure.

The author is a member of the 2nd Division Military Police Detachment. His sources of information are a result of careful research of articles prepared for and published by the better periodicals.
—Editor

The Need

These factors, combined with many others, emphasize the need for greater safety in today's automobiles.

Such a safety device that could save your life is a safety belt.

Because of the fact that approximately 1,200,000 Americans are injured annually in auto mishaps (and of these 39,000 die), numerous safety-minded organizations are campaigning for seat belts in every car.

"Public inertia and ignorance" of the value of seat belts are leading to needless highway injury death," says Dr. Rokert G. Frazier, secretary of the American Academy of Pediatrics. Analyzing several studies involving 10,000 or more injury-producing accidents, Dr. Frazier points out that the use of seat belts reduced the number of major-to-fatal injuries by 35 percent.

Beliefs

Also, Dr. Frazier learned, certain widespread popular beliefs are not supported by fact.

To wit:

It is not true that few serious accidents take place at low speeds, or that most such accidents occur far from home. To the contrary, Dr. Frazier finds that 47 percent of all traffic deaths occur at speeds of less than 40 miles-per-hour and 66 percent take place within 25 miles of the driver's home.

Public indifference, he says, seems to be the major factor in the unsuccessfulness of the seat belt campaign.

The attitude displayed is "one just can't be bothered with strapping oneself securely into the seat before operating his motor vehicle." The fact that this minor task may save one's life seems to have little significance.

It must be remembered, he points out, that while the driver may cause accidents, the possibility of injury or death is largely influenced by the interior design of the automobiles.

Occupants being tossed about inside a car will come in contact with at least one of a vast assortment of objects capable of inflicting serious injury or death. They may also be hurled out the door or through the windshield onto the road or pavement.

However, today — some five years after the initiation of the safety campaign — the mass with seat belts is considered something of an oddity.

It is estimated that seat belts are used by fewer than one percent of American drivers. Public interest in this safety device never really took a strong foothold, and has since deteriorated to virtual indifference.

The motoring public has not chosen to believe that it is not always the "other guy" who is seriously injured or killed in auto mishaps.

In an auto crash, it is the magnitude of the deceleration that determines your chances for survival. The forces developed during deceleration are measured in Gs (for gravitation force), and it is the Gs alone that determine how great a restraining force will be needed to keep you in your seat.

For instance, you are cruising at 40 m.p.h. and plow into a fence, bringing your car to a halt in 60 feet. This deceleration develops one G, or a force exactly equal to your own weight. You will be thrown out of your seat unless you brace in time to exert an equal counter force.

At one G you may succeed unaided, but higher deceleration rates are common, even in minor collisions.

Experiments such as those conducted by Colonel John P. Stapp, chief of the Air Force Medical Field Laboratory, have demonstrated that the body can withstand peak loads of more than 30 Gs for brief periods.

These experiments were used to set up Federal specifications which must be met by all passenger car seat belts purchased by the government.

In collisions much above 20 Gs, the value of a seat belt may become somewhat academic, since the car itself very likely will collapse about the occupant. And even a seat belt which meets the rigorous Federal specifications will provide a greater measure of safety than no belt—at all.

Misconceptions

Here are some misconceptions that the public has about seat belts:

Q. Isn't it safer to be thrown out of an accident?

A. No. Statistics show that you are five times more likely to be killed if thrown from your car.

Q. Can a seat belt trap me and cause my death?

A. In some types of accidents you may be trapped. However, in such a case, it would have occurred whether or not you had been wearing a seat belt. It is only a matter of two or three seconds at the most to be free of the seat belt. And it is unlikely that entrapment would ever occur from the belt itself.

Q. Can the seat belt break in an accident?

A. Occasionally, where high speeds are involved. However, this happens seldom, and, when it does, the belt has already served its purpose. It has already withstood the force of the impact.

Q. What advantage do seat belts have for people sitting in the front seat?

A. If the impact is great enough, the passenger's head may strike the windshield, dash panel or the steel "header strip." However, the seat belt will have greatly reduced the force with which he would hit these objects, lessening the damage done. It will prevent them from being thrown through the windshield or out of the door, diminishing the chances of critical injury or death.

The driver of the vehicle, using seat belts, will have the same advantages as the passenger. In addition, if the car is being bounced around; the driver will be held in a better driving position than had he not been using a belt. This will enable him to maintain better control of his vehicle.

True, auto belts will not stop the tremendous slaughter caused by negligent and careless driving. But, it will help in the campaign against the needless injuries and deaths that could have been prevented.

Club Luncheon

Talk on Japanese Flower Arranging Set Nov. 14

A demonstration of Japanese flower arranging will highlight the 2nd Division Officers' Wives Club luncheon, hosted by the 11th Infantry wives on November 14.

"How to Understand Japanese Flower Arranging" will be the topic of Mrs. Rudolph A. Kobs, Columbus resident and former Army wife. She will trace the history of the art from its beginning in the 6th century to the present day.

Rikka Style

"The earliest arrangement, known as Rikka, was 40 feet tall," explained Mrs. Kobs, "but modern styles are much simpler and smaller."

She will illustrate her talk by showing seven styles currently popular in Japan. They are Rikka, Shoka, Sankiske, Nagire, Moribana, Morimono and free style. Mrs. Kobs will also bring her authentic classical Japanese containers, which she acquired in Japan.

Pine and chrysanthemums appear most frequently in Japanese flower arrangements, according to Mrs. Kobs.

To Mrs. Kobs, her hobby is more than just the skill of arranging flowers. She comments: "Japanese flower arranging recreates yourself. It is an interpretation of oneself and of nature as it is today. It teaches that heaven, man, and earth are about us every day if we will but see them."

Mrs. Kobs became interested in this hobby while listening to a talk on the philosophy of Japanese flower arranging given by a Fort Benning officer's wife 12 years ago.

Since then, she has studied under teachers of various schools of the art both in the United States and while she and Major (ret.) Kobs were in Japan in 1958-59 where Mrs. Kobs was studying on a Fulbright grant for English teachers.

Ikenoba School

Mrs. Kobs is a member of the Ikenoba school, the oldest one, which founded the basic principles of Japanese flower arranging. All other schools are based upon it.

The demonstration and talk will fit in with the Japanese theme of the luncheon, which will be at 12:30 at the Sapper Club. Everything will be Japanese, from food to decorations to door prizes.

Overall chairman for the event is Mrs. John E. Arthur. Committee chairmen include Mesdames John S. McCord, decorations; Walter P. Blanton, sherry; Cecil M. Sanders, menu, and Michael J. Bardis, reservations for the 11th Infantry.

Reservations for the luncheon can be made by contacting the reservation chairman of each unit. This should be done at least 48 hours before the luncheon.

Indianhead Wives November Lunch

The Ladies of the Big Indianhead November luncheon will be held November 9 at 1 p.m. in the Non-Commissioned Officers' Open Mess. There will be free nursery facilities behind Theatre Seven. For reservations call Mrs. Howard Flora MU 9-5015 or Mrs. Wayne Cliff FA 4-8319.

Bridge

Crucial Opening Lead

BY JENNI JOHNSON

87th Ladies Bridge for the evening was hostessed by Mr. James Danley. High for the evening was Mrs. Karl Tomaka, second high Mrs. Richard Sharp. Afternoon bridge at the home of Mrs. T. M. Glushien awarded high to Mrs. Roy Sims and second place to Mrs. William Wilcox.

The following hand was dealt by Captain Dion Johnson recently, his only regret was that he was not North. This very unusual hand is critiqued by Captain and Mrs. Dale Sweetwood. Capt. Sweetwood, a junior master, plays fine duplicate bridge; Mrs. Sweetwood is chairman of the party bridge for the Woman's Club of Fort Benning.

East is dealer; North and South are vulnerable.

Opening lead, small heart.

When should you lead fourth from the longest and strongest against a NT bid? Obviously not when your right hand opponent has opened 3 NT. When leading, East must consider point count and distribution. East can account for at least 26 of the 40 high card points; 25 for the declarer and 11 in his own hand. Perhaps even 38 points if the declarer has a maximum 3 NT open (25 - 27 pts). East can only defeat the contract by taking the K, J of hearts, the K, Q of diamonds and either a small diamond or heart. How does he know this???

East can figure North has the A, Q of hearts and the A, J of diamonds, the A, K, of spades and either the A, K or the A, Q of clubs since these are the only high cards not accounted for. The dummy will be of little assistance and the declarer will probably not get to the dummy unless it has Q, K of clubs and North a small club to reach it. After considering the above East knows the only lead which he can make to set the contract of 3 NT would be a club or spade. With a heart lead North is able to win the 9 tricks by giving up two hearts and two diamonds.

If a spade or club is lead, the declarer will not win the Q of hearts and will also lose a small heart.

The real idea in evaluation of this hand, however, is the bidding.

Who can blame North for being excited over a hand with 26 high card points (add one for 4 aces). The SIZE is fine for 3 NT but the SHAPE is wrong. In addition to 25-27 pts the distribution must be one of three types for no trump (4-3-3-3, or 4-4-3-3, or 5-3-3-2). The 2 doubletons disqualify the hand for no trump. What should his bid be? There is a small slam in clubs, and the bidding should have been as follows, with east and west passing of course. North, 2 diamonds — absolutely forcing to game; South, 2 NT — poor hand, less than 6 pts. North, 3 hearts showing heart suit and asking South to choose trump. South, 4 clubs — indicating length in clubs and denying support in hearts or diamonds. North, 4 diamonds — rebid shows length of diamond suit. South, 5 clubs—rebiddable suit. North, 6 clubs — re-evaluation of hands as bidding progresses gives North the point count and distribution of his partners hand.

No matter what the opening lead is, this contract is made. South is now declarer and West leads, probably a heart or diamond. East takes the trick with the king and the rest are South's. When on the board with the A of spades declarer leads the J of diamonds from the dummy to finesse East's Q. East knows South can trump and so plays the 7 of diamonds, South cluffs the 7 of Hearts.

A small slam, vulnerable is worth a lot more than 3 NT even with the 150 honor points of party bridge. To say nothing of the disappointment of being set at 3 NT with 26 beautiful points, don't let points blind you to the texture of your hand. When on the defensive, think over the opening lead, it is often the most important card of the hand.

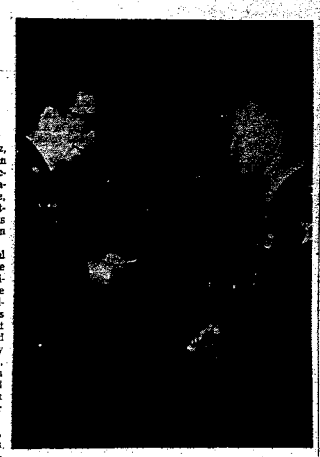
Gen. Ruiz Visits 1st Facilities



By 1st Inf PIO

Major General Alberto Ruiz, commander of the Colombian Army, escorted by the "Second to None" commander, Major General Charles H. Chase, visited the 1st Infantry recently, to observe the "Always First" Infantrymen's garrison life.

General Ruiz and General Chase were greeted by the Battle Group Commander, Colonel Walter B. Todd, at the battle group headquarters. Colonel Todd briefed the officers on the battle group's present field training. He explained that the unit was presently training in the company phase, but had only two weeks left in this phase. Then, he pointed out, the battle group will begin operation on unit level, rather than the company level.

At the close of the briefing, Colonel Todd presented each of the officers with the "Always First" crest.

The officers then went to Company C to observe the squad bay, supply room, the arms room and mess hall.

Promotion Facilitated By Chopper

By 22nd Infantry PIO

A 23rd Infantry officer flew to a promotion recently.

The air lift assist occurred last week, when four "We Serve" second lieutenants were advanced in rank. To consummate the occasion, ceremonies were planned in the field, where the 23rd was undergoing training. However, one of the officers, Lt. Walter L. Swain, was on duty in garrison. Word was sent to hustle Lt. Swain out to the field, and he was quickly carried there by a helicopter that happened to be headed in that direction.

Colonel Louis A. Kunzig Jr., commander of the 23rd Infantry, pinned a silver bar on Lieutenants Swain, Christopher Hendricks and Marvin L. Lawson. The fourth recently promoted officer, Lt. William L. Nelson, was on TDY to Fort Gordon, Georgia and was mailed his bar.

Cavalry Tankers Get New Tanks

Members of the division's 7th Cavalry have been busy in recent weeks getting familiar with the M-48 medium tanks, which have replaced the M-41 light tanks formerly assigned to the unit. The turn-in of the lighter armored vehicles has been completed and the tank crews have been working on familiarization training with the M-48s.

An intensified training period briefed the crew members on the differences between the two tanks and the specific duties required of each crew member of the M-48. Also learned was the operation of the 90 millimeter gun of the M-48.

DivArty Project

One of the numerous current projects supports the Division Artillery under the Command of Colonel Frang A. Osmanski.

Stafford road, which loops around Concord Observation Post and connects Box Springs Road with Route 103, is being improved and rerouted to connect Box Springs Road to Shamanski Road.

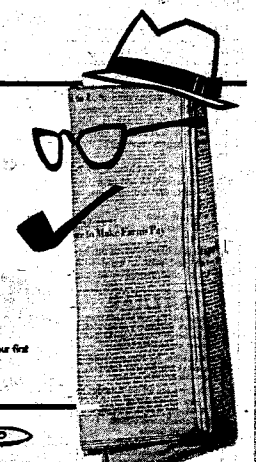
The purpose of the project is to enable the Artillery to move under complete blackout conditions around the Concord Impact Area without traveling on Route 103. Two timber trestle bridges to carry Division Artillery roads are being constructed by "Bravo" Company and the 9th Infantry's Engineer Platoon. The bridges, which cross Pine Knot Creek and a tributary, are being constricted from native timber at the site.

Headquarters Company is furnishing additional dozers and operators for the project. A noncommissioned officer - in - charge and his equipment operators are bivouacking with their equipment. This system increases efficiency and decreases construction time so that the road will be ready for the Division Artillery in the near future.

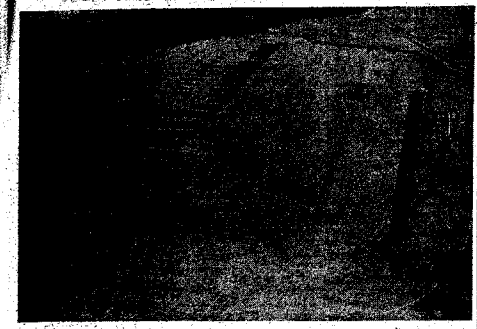
Not Enough Water Stops Cav March

Major General Charles H Chase, commanding general, recently inspected the pontoon bridge over the Chattahoochee River which stopped the tanks of the 7th Cavalry during the road march to the squadron training area in Alabama.

Normally, wet weather slows up and sometimes stops movement of armor units, but the tanks of the 7th Cavalry were stopped by lack of water.



Lack of Rain



As the Troopers of the Cavalry approached this pontoon bridge across the Chattahoochee River, they were stopped by the Engineers because the current lack of rain has caused the level of the river to drop so low that the treadway approaches had insufficient support for the 52-ton tanks. After a conference and a test crossing, the squadron armored personnel carriers, a near 20-ton vehicle, were allowed to make the crossing. The following day, after additional supporting material had been added, the tanks successfully crossed the bridge and joined their respective Troops.

followed the troop units past the reviewing stand and bleachers. Spectators seated in the bleachers witnessed 105 millimeter Howitzers, 155 millimeter Howitzers, eight-inch Howitzers, mortars and machine guns rolling by—part of the lethal striking power possessed by an Army Infantry division.

As a spectacular highlight to the 2nd's "birthday" review, men of the 12th Field Artillery Battalion fired the "Honest John" rocket, one of the most deadly weapons possessed by the Army.

The awed crowd watched as a massive green missile catapulted from its launching truck, roared into the sky at a 45 degree angle and disappeared into the distant impact area.

Closely following the rocket display came a simulated nuclear blast — a hugh dark mushroom cloud which came near the end of the division's Organization Day review.

Following the review, spectators watched as the Third Army commander cut the three-tiered division birthday cake.

Lieutenant Jonas H. Platt, for whom he was named. The fact that Lt. Platt was there, said the colonel, was an "inspiration" in his choice of a military career.

He added, "I still carry my uncle's sword on ceremonial occasions."

'Unique'

Col. Platt agreed that it was "quite unique" that he would now be commanding the same Marine unit that helped squelch the Germans' Paris-bent thrust back in the summer of 1918 when it was part of the 2nd Division.

The Marine officer said that he was "happy to have been invited" to the Organization Day activities. "I am particularly proud of the 2nd Division," he said, "considering the fact that our unit's first battle honors were won while we were a part of it."

Col. Platt, Sgt. Pullen and all past, present and future members of the 5th and 6th Marines and the 6th Marine Machine Gun Battalion were made honorary members of the division by a 2nd Division proclamation which was read during the Organization Day program Saturday.

Col. Platt was accompanied by his wife, who was introduced to the ladies of the division.

Field Training Has No Peers --Gen. Chase

In the Army, training is endless, Major General Charles H. Chase, commanding general of the 2nd Infantry Division, told a class of 115 U. S. and Allied students graduating from the U. S. Army Infantry School recently at Theater One.

"Training is the heart and soul of military life," said the general.

"Many problems arise in small unit training," Gen. Chase continued, "but most of these problems can be solved even though the training situation is far from ideal."

Speaking to graduates of an associate Infantry officers' career course, the 2nd Division commander told the Infantrymen to train their units as though they were at full strength, treating any shortages as they would combat losses.

"There is no substitute for field training," the general said. "In the field, men learn to survive, leaders keep in close touch with their units and lessons are learned in supply of water, medical needs and food. There are learning opportunities in the movement to and from the field."

Gen. Chase told the graduates, "You must always find ways to train. Never give in to difficulties."

Commo Platoon Carries 60 Miles of Wire, Handles Many Key Jobs on Trips to Field

By 22nd Infantry PIO

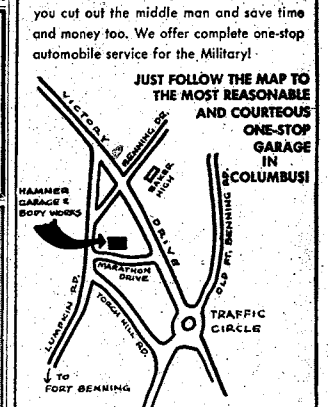
Playing an integral part in the 22rd Infantry's field training during the past two months has been the battle group's communications platoon.

Briefly, the "commo" platoon's job is to provide internal and external communication for the 22rd. This is accomplished by means of radio, wire and teletype as well as cryptographic equipment for coding and decoding messages.

Communications officer for the 22rd Infantry is Captain Harold Austin, and the communications platoon leader is Lieutenant Hal Davis. The platoon has over 40 men and is divided into four sections.

The radio and visual section is headed by Sergeant Thomas Kibbler, and the wire section is run by Sergeant Marvin H. Wing; Specialist Five Hollice West is in charge of the message center, and Master Sergeant Richard Sullivan supervises platoon headquarters.

Using eight jeeps and seven three-quarter ton trucks to haul their men and equipment, the commo platoon sets up in the command post area when they go to the field. Their complex of radio transmitter-receivers include three VRQ-3 sets, two ANC-46 radio teletype machines, one ANGRC-19 AM transmitter-receiver as well as four battery operated PRC-10 radio transmitter receivers. These battery radios are portable, and they are used as supplementary units, when needed.



Also carried along is some 60 miles of wire, which is strung throughout the bivouac area to connect field telephones. This indispensible "comm" wire is recoverable and is gathered up whenever the battle group breaks camp.

While in the field the commo platoon provides radio station network control for both the battle group administrative net and the command net. These nets provide a radio link between battle group headquarters in garrison and the field. The battle group is also able to communicate with other units in the area and with Division Headquarters.

The message center, always a beehive of activity, sends out and receives messages, codes or decodes them, and dispatches them to their destination.

A less glamorous — but vital — of commo's field tasks is the handling of regular distribution papers and the mail.

'First-men' Drub Sep. Bn., 47-0

By 1st Inf PIO

The once defeated 1st Infantry opened the second half of the Division Flag Football tournament last Friday with a convincing 47-0 rout over Separate Battalions.

The "Always First" nine struck early in the game for their first six pointer. Separate Battalions received the kickoff and took to the air route on the third play from scrimmage after two running plays had failed.

First Infantryman John Pittman reached high into the air to intercept the pigskin and returned it to the Separate Battalions' 25-yard line.

On the next play Quarterback William Taliaferro threw a pass to halfback Alvin Williams, who dashed into the end zone for the first six points.

Again the Infantrymen kicked off and again the Separate Battalions offense was unable to gain yardage.

Hqs. Co. Keeps Bowling Lead

By 1st Inf PIO

The "Always First" Bowling League of the 1st Infantry resumed bowling activities at Sand Hill Bowling Alley Thursday with Headquarters Company maintaining their lead within the league.

Combat Support moved from fourth place to the second place position by winning four games while Company D and the Officers' team lost three games each.

The individual winner of the week was Larry Reny of Company D who had a total of 598 pins to take top honors for the three game series. Darl Hicks from Headquarters Company bowled a 227 game to win single-game competition with handicap, while Major Erwin Farrell of the Officers' team bowled a 206 from scratch.

On the fourth down, the Separate Battalions team punted to the safetyman, Pittman, who took the ball on his one-yard line and returned it 79 yards to score.

The remainder of the first half was a see-saw struggle in which neither team was able to score.

In the last half, the "Always First" team scored each time it had possession of the ball, collecting five touchdowns.

Henderson Gordon intercepted a pass and returned it 29 yards for a touchdown, James Banks made a two-yard plunge for another, John Pittman scored on a 60-yard pass play, William Taliaferro returned a kick-off for 68 yards, and Alvin Williams made the last touchdown on an intercepted pass.

Doughboys Meet Memphis Hellcats Tomorrow

OUT OF MY WAY, MAN! . . . Cliff Eddy (R) gives the arm to Malcolm Griffin, Lackland, as Eddy tries to score.

Beat Lackland Air Force Base In Night Home Game By 13-7

BY DEL BERGHOEFER

The Doughboys stunned the Lackland Air Force Base eleven here last Saturday night 13-7, sending the Warhawks to their first defeat this season in seven games.

The Doughboys, showing rapid improvement in the last three games, scored their two touchdowns in the second quarter. The first came on a 32-yard pass from quarterback Charles Haile to Jim Daniels, the Doughboys' leading pass receiver. Henry Derleth added the extra point.

Halfback Cleveland Brown accounted for the second tally with a five-yard scoring sprint after Benning recovered a Lackland fumble on the Warhawk 32-yard stripe.

The airmen entered the scoring column late in the final quarter on the passing of quarterback Jim Giest. He pitched 13 yards to halfback Wallis Hill for their lone counter.

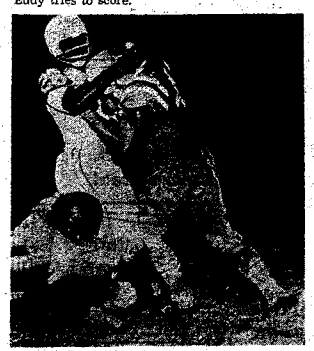
The Warhawks threatened earlier in the fourth frame, recovering a Doughboy fumble on the Benning 39-yard line and moving to the six on an 18-yard run by halfback Clarence Willis and a 15-yard Doughboy penalty.

With their backs to the wall, the impenetrable Doughboy defense which held the airmen to three yards rushing in the first half, stiffened, holding Lackland to no gain in three plays.

On the fourth down, George Burt intercepted a Warhawk aerial on the two, stopping the threat.

The Doughboys punted out of danger after moving the ball to the seven on two line plunges. Lackland scored three plays later after the two teams traded fumbles on consecutive plays.

Neither team could generate a sustained drive in the opening quarter. The Warhawks moved to the Doughboys' 18-yard line, but a pass interception by Burt, who stole three Lackland passes in the game, stopped that drive.



After the Doughboys scored early in the second stanza Lackland had possession of the ball for only five plays before the fired up Benning team struck again.

A Lackland fumble was recovered by Cliff Manning, Doughboy end, on the Warhawk 32 and in eight plays Fort Benning scored its second TD which proved to be the winning margin. Cliff Eddy fullback, the Doughboys leading ground gainer, picked up 22 of the yards and Brown scored from the five-yard line.

Although he didn't start, Haile was at the Doughboy helm throughout most of the game and amazed many observers with his fine play. He reported out for the team only three weeks ago. At the University of Wyoming where he played college ball, Haile lettered three years at quarterback.

Big Doughboy end Bill Johnson made his presence known to the Warhawks also, catching two passes and punting

WHO'S TACKLING WHO? . . . Wayne Pavel (L) tackles Malcolm Griffin (C), Lackland, as Griffin tries to pull Cliff Eddy to the ground during last Saturday night's home game.

MAYBE IT'S A JUMP BALL . . . Jim Daniel, Doughboy, and Melvin Johnson (R), Lackland, grapple for possession of a passed football during night game which Benning won 13-7.

COME TO MAMA, YOU SWEET THING . . . "Crazy, Man," says Lackland Air Force Base player as he grabs pass for Lackland's only score as other Airman blocks out Doughboy. The snared pass didn't help much as the Doughboys won 13-7.

YOU GRAB HIS LEFT FOOT AND I'LL TAKE THE RIGHT . . . "Oh, Mother," thinks Malcolm Griffin, Lackland, as Doughboys Robert Roach (C) and Frank Farella (R) bear down upon him with murder in their eyes. As if you couldn't guess, Griffin didn't go much further.

JOHNSON'S POND CLOSED

Johnson's Pond, located near the intersection of Cactus and Shamanski Roads will be closed until next spring. The pond has been stocked with 2,000 very small channel catfish. The catfish will be fed a special fish food several times a week until next spring at which time they will have reached 1 to 1½ pounds each. At that time the pond will be open for fishing and should provide some good action for the catfish enthusiast.

In past years this pond has been stocked with trout during early spring. However, this year trout will be stocked in the newly renovated pond above Russ Pool on the Main Post.

DEER TAGS REQUIRED

Deer hunters are reminded that they must carry deer tags that are attached to the regular Georgia hunting license with them at all times while engaged in hunting deer, and within ten minutes after the killing of a deer, will attach one tag to the deer, filling out the tag and make sure the tag remains attached to the deer until the carcass has been removed to the place of residence or until such a time as the deer carcass loses its identity.

All hunters over 65 years of age who have been issued honorary license, hunters under the age of 16, who are excluded by the laws of the State of Georgia from the purchase of hunting license, and personnel hunting within the boundaries of the Fort Benning Military Reservation with Alabama licenses may make application and pick up necessary deer tags at no cost from Fish and Game Maintenance Association office, Bldg. 384, Main Post.

FIRE HAZARD HIGH

With over 45 days without rain, the woods continue to be dry and the fire burning index increases. The situation is approaching what foresters call "blow-up" conditions. This is a situation that can develop when fuel moisture, humidity, and wind velocity are all very low. Heat from a going fire can set off vast areas to a burning inferno without the fuel coming in direct contact with the flame. Consequently, extreme care must be exercised by all persons in the woods during the prolonged dry spell.

Post forestry officials report they have been having an average of five a day; fortunately none have caused extensive damage.

Fall Handicap Golf Match Set

The Veteran's Day golf tournament, for members and associate members of the Main Officers Open Mess, will begin on 8 November, at 8 a.m.

Entry fees will be one dollar and registrations can be made at the Country Club Pro Shop. One of the prizes will be a turkey.

Howitzers Nip Helmets; Bombers Second

In Tuesday action in the Biddy League eight teams went into action and four records were broken.

The Howitzers upset the league leading Helmets and moved into first place by a 7-6 victory. The Howitzers scored in the first quarter when Steve Pitts, Howitzers fullback went around left end for a 40 yards touchdown, and went over center for the PAT to go ahead for seven points. The speedy Helmets went scoreless until three minutes to play in the fourth quarter when right halfback Thomas McClain went 35 yards for six points. The Helmets were unable to score the PAT and the game ended with the Helmets suffering their first defeat.

The red hot Bombers moved into second place by handing the Bulldogs their fourth setback 26-6. The Bombers scored in each quarter. In the first quarter and the second quarter, Craig Plowman, the Bombers left halfback picked up two touchdowns and one PAT for the total of 103 yards. He sprinted 75 yards in the third quarter for six points to bring his season totals to 603 yards rushing and a total of 70 points. Bomber's quarterback Robert Marble went over from the three yards line for a touchdown in the fourth quarter and Jimmy Sessions went around right end for the PAT to account for seven points for the winners. The Bulldogs left halfback, Carl Groseclose, ran a 80 yard touchdown around left end in the second quarter for the Bulldogs only tally in the game.

The Bayonets copped their first win of the season when they blanked the Missles 32-0. In the first quarter, the Bayonets picked up 14 points when quarterback Gary Bowen scored two touchdowns and fullback Charles Coats made a touchback. The Bayonets went on to score in the second, third and fourth. Right end Robert Rice went for a 50 yard touchdown in the third quarter and big Charles Coats sprinted for twenty five-yards in the fourth quarter for six points and Tommy McDaniels went over for the PAT to end the game and their first victory, 33-0.

Charles Coats, Bayonets fullback, was the outstanding player of the day for his red dogging through the Missles line, he made 75 per cent of the tackles.

The Grenadiers notched their third victory by holding the Bears scoreless 26-0. Curtis Baker, Grenadiers left halfback scored all 26 points with the help of his teammates blocking and holding the line. Baker scored in each quarter, 7 points in the first, 6 in the second and third, and 7 points in the fourth.

The Bullets, the lone team without action, drew a bye.

The YAC football loop is composed of three leagues (Biddy, Doughboy and Intermed) which consist of seventeen teams.

In the Biddy league there are nine teams that go into action each Tuesday and Wednesday at Sightseeing Field.

The leagues are composed of the following teams and coaches: "Helmets", coached by Sp5 Alexander Cnichin of 724 Engineer Company, 29th Infantry; "Howitzers", Sp4 Wilgin, E Company, 29th Infantry; "Bombers", MSgt Floyd Hightower, Post Career Counselor; "Grenadiers", MSgt Wilburn, E Company, 15B; "Bullets", Pfc John Moses, D Company, 29th Infantry; "Bears", Sfc James Gregory, Headquarters Company, 58th Infantry; "Bulldogs", Capt Andrew Perkins; "Missles", Lt. Col. Everett Mead, Command Staff Department; and the "Bayonets", headed by Sgt. James Mulligan, A Company, 29th Infantry.

In the Doughboy League, the riding high "Tankers" which head the league are coached by Sgt. Harold W. Sullivan, Headquarters Company, 58th Infantry; the second place "Rangers" are controlled by Sp4 Desmond McCullagh, D Company, 29th Infantry; the third place "Troopers" and fourth place "Gunners" are coached by Pfc Jack Clanton and SMaj. Norman B. Mekkelson respectively, both of Headquarters Company, 29th Infantry. The Doughboys see action on Wednesday at Sightseeing Field.

In the Intermed League, Lt. Joseph A. Tomko's "Eagles" head the department, with the "Packers" tailing in second place with a 1-1-1 record. "Packers" are coached by Capt. R. R. Drake, Command Staff Department; the "Gi-

Kibitzer's Korner

By LT. JOSEPH TOMKO

Primarily, the purpose of this column is to induce people to write an article commenting about some aspect or controversy.

The word "Kibitzer" according to the dictionary, means "to give unwanted advice."

I plan to start a controversy over the relative powers of such football teams as Mississippi and Alabama. As references for the facts I have obtained, I use the two football telecasts involving both teams.

Both Alabama and Mississippi displayed poised, strong, highly trained teams capable of meeting and defeating any and all opponents on a given Saturday.

The nucleus of my argument is the term "on a given Saturday." What most college schedules emphasize is the need to have a so-called breather before a tough opponent. This gives a team an opportunity to recover from injuries, mental or physical exhaustion.

Notice the schedules of both Alabama and Mississippi and itemize their schedules in comparison to any Big Ten team. You'll notice the Big Ten teams lack what we normally consider a breather before playing a major opponent.

If you consider this comparison out of proportion for justified controversy, take West Virginia University. Opponents such as Penn State, Pittsburgh, Army and Syracuse are faced week in and week out with no let up on the quality of their opponents.

Any team which must meet opponents of the same characteristics consistently every week-end does not permit time for regrouping of reorganization. After any hard fought battle there is a material letdown by the staff and players of any team.

A team which must meet a similar tough opponent the following weekend, does not have the opportunity to regroup as a breather schedule would provide.

I end this now for it is only my opinion.

TSB'S Annual Touch Football Trophies Given

three times over 50 yards. He has been out of action since the season's opening game with a chipped ankle bone.

Fort Benning's outstanding ground defense sparkled once again as it held the airmen to only 21 net yards rushing.

The Doughboys have given up only 167 yards rushing in the last three games against Fort Lee, Pensacola Naval Air Station and Lackland. Lee picked up 100 of these yards in its game, meaning that only 67 yards have been gained on the ground against the Doughboys in the last two games.

The Doughboys' defensive bulwarks in the middle of the line have been Don Cooksey, Frank Farela, Al Aucoin, Lindell Lovelette and Dave Lynn.

The Doughboys will play at home again tomorrow evening when they meet the Memphis Naval Air Station Hellcats. Memphis was defeated earlier this season by Lackland, 26-0.

'Too Large Or Too Small' Clothing Is No Longer True For New Recruits

By SMaj Peter Bolkan

The old gag that Army clothing is issued in two sizes —too large and too small—has lost its punch today.

The enlistee at Fort Benning is now tailored and fitted in all particulars so when he receives his issue of clothing after alteration (which is the day after being measured) he can fall out for a rigid inspection and make a good showing.

In December, 1960, Fort Benning became a reception center for enlistees of the Third Army area. A problem which is as old as the Army, that of issuing clothing to the "rookie" which will fit him, was attacked by The Infantry Center Quartermaster Section.

The section established a reception station initial clothing issue point in Building 337 with the capacity of servicing 1,500 new arrivals per month.

The station's 10,000th recruit passed through the issue point in September.

Since its inception, the emphasis has been constantly on improving the fit and appearance of the clothing issued to the new Soldier.

Where there is a lack of fit in the green or suntan uniform, it is tailored to measurement. The point, in addition to improving the quality of service in equipping him, has approximately doubled its capacity to process the newly arrived recruit.

The incoming recruit is received at the Reception Station at Lawson Field, where the initial issue of bare necessities in clothing is made.

One set of fatigues, a suit of underwear, sox, field cap, field jacket, a belt, towel, gloves, an overcoat and a duffel bag are issued at this time. The next day the individual gets a complete issue.

First step in processing is to take measurements of neck, sleeve length, chest, waist and inseam.

Next station is the fitting of combat boots and low quarter shoes. Both feet are carefully measured by precision instruments to determine exact size. The complete range of sizes in these items makes it possible to give accurate fit except in rare instances where special sized shoes or boots must be ordered.

The recruit then goes to the clothing section where all garments to be issued are tried on. Alterations to be made are marked on the garment and taken to the tailor shop next door. The tailored garments are available the next day.

The initial clothing issue point is operated by an officer, 23 enlisted men and two civilians. A steam plant is almost complete and will house the pressing facilities of the Clothing Repair Section. It is planned to have all the facilities of the issue point in one building.

Lt. Pool Wins Smallbore Rifle Prone Title Saturday

Army 1st Lt. Tommy G. Pool won the U. S. International smallbore rifle prone title last Saturday and equaled an Olympic record on the way to the national crown.

Shooting against 27 of the nation's finest riflemen, Lt. Pool, Army Advanced Marksmanship Unit, posted a 590 score out of a possible 600 points over the 60-shot course at 50 meters in the third and final stage of the match.

He equaled the Olympic mark set by a West German in the 1960 Olympic Games.

The Army rifleman put together strings of 580-582-590 for the win and to defeat teammate Capt. Daniel B. Puckel by a single point.

Air Force T-Sgt. Edward E. Cagyle took third place with 1,742 points. Lt. John R. Miller listed high Navy effort of 1,723 while high Marine scorer was Gunnery Sgt. Charles B. Ainscoe with 1,704.

Miss Janet Friddell, current women's champion and sole civilian entry, fired an 11th place score of 1,729.

The event was the third of nine national championships to be fired under National Rifle Association sponsorship at The Infantry Center before Nov. 6.

Italian Army Officers Witness TIS Training

Ten officers of the Italian Army recently visited the post to witness tactics and techniques used in training U. S. soldiers at The Infantry School.

The group was headed by Major Eugenio Ferrari, deputy commander of Italy's Northeast Military Regional Command.

Other officers of the party were Brig. Gen. Ernesto Chiarizia, chief of the Committee of Military Experts for Disarmament; Brig. Gen. Cosimo Cassone, G-1 (personnel officer) of the Italian Army General Staff; Brig. Gen. Edgardo Gandolfo, recorder of the Superior Council of the Armed Forces, and Col. Giambattista Ratti, staff member of the War College commandant.

Col. Ettore Brancato, organization officer of the G-3 (Plans and Operations) Section of the Army General Staff; Col. Augusto Arias, of the cabinet of the Defense Ministry; Col. Giuseppo Firrone, chief of the Research and Development Office, Army General Staff; Col. Vincenzo Gifuni, a member of the Executive Office, Inspectorate of Artillery, and Lt. Col. Luigi Galeni, section chief of the Army General Staff's Training Office.

Friday the group received an orientation on Airborne training and a briefing and tour the Ground Mobility Department. They also viewed Infantry School problems, river crossing techniques and weapons of the battle group. A visit to the 26th Infantry Scout Dog Platoon kennel area closed their second day's activities.

The Allied visitors attended a briefing at The Infantry School Ranger Department and viewed record firing on the Trainfire range. They also witnessed an officers orientation class in machine gun marksmanship and map reading.

Post Steam Heating Plants Receive Major Modification

Three of Fort Benning's six major steam heating plants received modification of their electronic and other type controls during the first quarter of Fiscal Year 62.

The project was planned by Col. Riel S. Crandall, post engineer, with the objective of permitting all of Fort Benning's major steam plants to be operated by one-man shifts.

In addition to the decrease from shifts of two men or more, the modification program will also decrease fuel consumption and increase safety of operation.

The improvements were incorporated at the three plants located at Martin Army Hospital, Kelly Hill and in The Student Brigade area on Main Post adjacent to Carey Pool.

Lesser improvements were made at the remaining major plants of the system operated under the supervision of John T. Hudson.

Modifications were under the direction of Herbert Hutton, chief of the Utilities Division and Carl H. Coleman of the Mechanical Branch, Engineer Section.

Improvements installed included electronic, pneumatic and hydraulic controls, metering combustion controls, flame failure safeguards, air and fuel ratio controls and other control and safety devices.

ARMY DISBANDED

November 3, 1783, the Continental army was disbanded, except for one regiment of infantry and two battalions of artillery.

Advanced Marksmanship Class Will Begin on Post November 7

The Third Army advanced marksmanship instructor's course will begin at Fort Benning November 7, with nearly 100 rifle and pistol instructors of the Third Army area attending.

The school, which ends November 10, will be presented by officer and enlisted personnel of the Army Advanced Marksmanship Unit as one of a series staged annually in each of the country's six Army areas.

Students scheduled to arrive at The Infantry Center for the classes will include men from all active Army posts in Third Army, the IV and XII Corps (Reserve) and from Army Air Defense Command units stationed at area Air Force bases.

The AMU's Major Joseph B. Berry, will head the course staff's rifle instructors while pistol classes will be under the direction of Capt. Clyde Metts.

"Conduct of such schooling is a little-known operation of the Army AMU," said CWO Oscar Weinmeister, who will assist Capt. Metts, "but one which we consider to be of utmost value."

According to the Army pistol coach, objective of the school is to produce graduates versed in the latest mechanics and techniques of marksmanship.

"Through our presentation we hope that these men will be better marksmen, better instructors and better team coaches who will be able to pass on their learning to their own men upon return to home stations," Weinmeister said.

The course is not conducted for the benefit of new and individual shooters, he said. Weinmeister added that each man attending is a skilled marksman and instructor even before arrival.

He said the USAAMU course, which will have been conducted in each of the country's Army areas before the beginning of the next competitive season, provides an over-all and systematic approach to the problem of teaching advanced marksmanship principles and techniques.

"In short," he added, "through this program we will know that the same type of marksmanship instruction is being received by a soldier wether he be stationed at Fort Williams, Me., or at the Presidio of San Francisco."

Discussing the value of the pistol in modern-day military operation, the Army coach said a point was proved as late as the Korean conflict.

"Although the handgun has been classified by some as a weapon of no more than secondary or last ditch personal defense, we know that it can be used with terrific impact in the hands of men who really know how to use it," he said.

He stated that the whole idea of Army rifle and pistol marksmanship instruction was based upon this single point.

"Matches, trophies and personal recognition for shooting skill are but part of our progress toward the ultimate goal of the highest level of combat proficiency possible to attain," he said.

The scheduled Third Army course will be operated by Match Headquarters.

Simplification Course Pays Dividends Quickly

A work simplification course conducted on post recently began to pay off while students were still in training.

A Class of 47 supervisors initiated 35 management improvements after enrollment in the course.

The improvements resulting from the efforts of the class are expected to save the Army $40,811.61 the first year.

During the fiscal year 1961, the Work Simplification Program trained 165 supervisors. Improvements made by 123 members of the group resulted in savings of over $100,000.

Turkish Colonel Visits Main Post

Col. Muzaffer Kinikli of Turkey arrived on post Sunday for a four-day visit.

The colonel is chief of Turkey's Mobilization Group, Personnel Department.

He will be accompanied by the department's executive officer, Lt. Col. Rifat Yildirim, and the chief of the Technical NCO Group, Major Ahmet Tufekcioglu.

Plans for the visit include orientations on Infantry Center and Infantry School activities.

The Turkish officers went into the field to observe training problems and firing demonstrations. They will see the latest Infantry weapons.

Among the problems they saw were techniques of machine gun fire, foreign mines and breaching, recoilless weapons familiarization, light anti-tank weapons and tank weapons familiarization.

Demonstrations included an airborne training orientation at Eubanks Field, capabilities and limitations of ground mobility means at Bleacher 390, conditioning activities at Watson Field, preparation of a field exercise in Pratt Hall, Infantry combat support company equipment and personnel at Sightseeing Field and Ranger training at Victory Pond.

On Tuesday Col. Kinikli and his party visited the office of Brig. Gen. A. D. Surles, Jr., assistant commandant of The Infantry School.

There was an official luncheon honoring the Turkish visitors at 12 noon Tuesday at the Main Officers' Open Mess. Host at the luncheon was Col. Richard W. Keyes, deputy assistant commandant of the school.

Col. Kinikli, Col. Yildirim and Major Tufekcioglu departed Wednesday.

Agency Chief Describes Role Of Worldwide Civil Service

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — America's "worldwide civil service" is playing a key role in cultivating friendship, confidence and understanding throughout the Free World and is "helping to combat communism and preserve peace by helping other nations to help themselves."

That was the theme Civil Service Commission (CSC) Chairman John W. Macy Jr., used in an address to the national convention to the Veterans of Foreign Wars in Miami.

Of the half-million Americans now living abroad, 31,000 are Government employees,

Mr. Macy said. He pointed out that the Commission and the VFW "share a common cause" in the global resistance to international communism.

"The Commission's goal is America's goal," he said.

Mr. Macy reported that the CSC curfently is cooperating in two new fields of foreign endeavor — the Peace Corps and AID.

Elaborating on Peace Corps activities, Mr. Macy said it expects to have negotiated agreement by the end of this summer with as many as a dozen countries for up to 750 volunteers.

Between 200 and 300 volunteers already are in training for specific assignments to several countries in South America and Africa.

The CSC's role in the Peace Corps, he said, is testing of applicants, advising on the staffing for a permanent organization, and helping to plan for the placement of returning volunteers where the knowledge and experience they gain overseas will be of greatest value.

The second new project of world scope involving CSC is the Act for International Development (AID), which is under active debate in Congress.

The proposed agency he said, would include the International Cooperation Administration and several other federal agencies engaged in foreign aid and development activities.

MEDICARE

One Army facility and service which is always hit hard by swift expansion is the Army hospital and although troop build-up is scarcely under way, reports are that Army medical facilities are already being taxed.

OUTPATIENT CARE

Under the Medicare program only maternity care and the treatment of injuries, such as wounds, fractures and lacerations. The patient pays the first $15.00 in either case with the exception of a $25.00 charge for hospital maternity ward service.

If a Federal Medical Teatment facility should be inadequate to handle this care, the patient is then entitled to treatment at a civilian establishment. A Nonavailability Statement will be issued by the Federal facility or by the commanding officer of the sponsor's duty station having no Medical Treatment Facility. Dependents residing apart from their sponsors need not obtain a Nonavailability and have freedom of choice in steaking Federal or civilian medical care.

HOSPITALIZED CARE

If a physician deems hospitalization necessary, the patient pays the first $25.00 or $1.75 a day whichever is greater.

HOSPITALIZED CARE NOT AUTHORIZED

Chronic diseases such as tubercular cases will not be treated except in extremely rare cases. Nervous and mental disorders do not warrant hospitalization under the Medicare program except for acute phases and then not to exceed 21 days. Surgery solely for cosmetic purposes and convalescent, or nursing, home care will not be provided.

Fort Mitchell Was Early Military Installation Here

Garrison Established In 1800's Was Protection Against Indians

(Editor's Note: The following article was written by Sfc Dave Chase, curator of the post's Infantry Museum. In addition to keeping the museum in top shape, Sfc Chase has also made numerous trips to the site of old Fort Mitchell and helped excavate.

By Sfc D. W. Chase

Fort Mitchell, the first U.S. Army garrison in this region, was built about 150 years ago on an Alabama hillside about one mile due west of present day Main Post.

In response to a series of local Indian uprisings, Gen. John Floyd, was delegated to construct a series of strongpoints from Fort Hawkins on the Ocmulgee River, to a point near present day Montgomery, Ala. The key garrison in this chain was Fort Mitchell, completed by late summer, 1813.

The Indian trouble grew out of the red man's decision to side with the British during the War of 1812. The British had promised the Creek Indians their hunting grounds would be given back to them when the Americans were defeated.

Failure of the Indian plan to materialize did not end the difficulties on the frontier. Indians continued to attack settlements in reprisal for land seizures and broken treaties.

Thus, Fort Mitchell became a staging area for American troops in their earliest campaigns against the Indian. During this period of frontier strife, troops performed astonishing feats of soldiering.

In November, 1813, Fort Mitchell men marched from that post to assault the Creek Indian towns of Autossee and Tallassee, some 60 miles southwest. After the battle, which they won, they marched the 60 miles back to Fort Mitchell — all on five days rations.

In the spring of 1814, General Floyd's command nearly met defeat while marching to the Coosa River in northern Alabama. They were ambushed by a combined British-Indian force led by a Colonel Woodbine. General Floyd managed to reorganize his troops and counter-attacked. His quick action saved the American forces. After the battle, the command returned to Fort Mitchell where they remained throughout the year 1814.

In the years that followed, elements of the 3d and 4th Infantry Regiments joined the Fort Mitchell garrison. These units were later sent to Florida during the Seminole War.

In July 1825, the fort was expanded and several new buildings erected. At about this time, a tavern was constructed on the Federal Road which ran past the fort and served as the main highway from Milledgeville, Georgia, to Fort Montgomery, Ala.

Already functioning since the second decade of the 1800s was the Federally sponsored Indian 'factory' where local Indian peoples were able to purchase clothing, musket balls, gun flints and other utility items at very low cost. By the early 1830s, a post hospital was added to the fort complex and the garrison was rapidly becoming a thriving community.

In the twilight years of Fort Mitchell, the main mission involved gathering and housing Indians who were scheduled to be sent to reservations in Oklahoma in accordance with land treaties. Hundreds of Indians camped at the post before their removal along the infamous "Trail of Tears."

By 1838, the fort had lost its military importance and the troops were removed to a new post near Tampa, Fla. A civilian government agent remained at the old fort to dispose of government property which was of no further use to the troops.

In its more active years, Fort Mitchell was visited by many prominent figures in American history. Among the earlier guests at the post was the Marquis deLafayette, famous French general who assisted the young American Army during its struggle for Independence. Francis Scott Key, composer of our National Anthem, stayed at Fort Mitchell as a young lawyer working for the government.

An archeological survey of the old fort site was begun in 1957.

Two trash pits were explored during the survey. These yielded a wealth of material including fragments of English - made Stafford shire chinaware, iron objects, musket flints and balls and dozens of military buttons once worn by the men who were stationed at the fort. These were quite similar to today's brass uniform buttons except that the shield on the eagle device bore the letters "I" for Infantry, or "A" for artillery.

From the geographical standpoint, this old fort serves as an ancestor to the modern garrison of Fort Benning whose very boundry passes within a few hundred feet of the fort site.

Fort Mitchell's Infantry soldiers of both the 3d and 4th Regiments were true pioneers of the modern Infantry tradition. In this respect, Fort Mitchell's great neighbor of later years could not have been better located.

The new library is located in Building 2907 and houses approximately 5,000 books. It is expected to have 5,400 by December.

Among the many publications available in the library will be two sets of encyclopedias, forty-three magazines, six newspapers, and about 200 records.

Chief Librarian Reed, who recently reenlisted for six years, has been on post for a year and was recently assigned with the ROTC library in Harmony Church. Most of the equipment and books for the brigade library came from the facility in Harmony Church, which is now closed.

Sergeant Ray Palmatier and a crew of workers from the 72d Engineers are responsible for getting the library in physical shape. The crew reworked, painted and built most of the necessary fixtures and equipment.

Martin Army Hospital Official Givs Poisoning Facts

By Major A. A. Turek, ANC

Little children like to chew on things. In their immature, exploring minds, they will put most anything in their mouths, thinking it is something pleasant to eat. They may even acquire a taste for it.

This is especially true of children who are teething. As they toddle and play about the house, they find and often chew on objects such as woodwork, window sills and stair railings.

These items are usually covered with paint, which may be dried, flaked or old paint. Children will eat paint. Paint contains lead. Lead is a deadly poison. Children will also eat plaster. This is a poison too.

Some children seem to get an "appetite" for such things. They chew on them even when they are not teething.

Lead poisoning is a very serious illness. When eaten, some forms of lead can damage many tissues of the body and brain. This damage may last for life or may cause death.

Statistical studies have indicated that exposure to lead poisoning is greatest in toddlers and children between 1 and 3 years of age; particularly where there is living in old dwellings in which flaked, leaded paint or plaster is readily accessible.

Outdoor structures are often a source, too; such as painted steps, porches, railings, benches, swings, fences and other painted surfaces.

The original paint applied in the factories to children's toys, cribs, and furniture is safe. However, sometimes well-meaning but uninformed home painters will use the wrong type of paint when refinishing children's toys or furniture.

Outdoor paints contain lead and other harmful ingredients and should not be used for this purpose. Outdoor paints should be applied only to outdoor surfaces. Usually finishes designed for use on indoor surfaces seldom contain any harmful ingredients.

However, it's a good idea to check with your paint dealer if you are in doubt about the type of paint to use in the home.

Studies also indicate that parents whose children suffered from lead intoxication were not concerned with the problem prior to the development of such poisoning because they did not consider the quantity of paint or plaster flakes their child was eating to be sufficient to hurt them.

Actually, the ingestion of a few small paint and plaster flakes or chips can yield potentially toxic amounts of lead, particularly where there are many layers.

Usually the ingestion of these substances by the child has been going on for a long period of time and not just at the time the parent notices it. Poison results from accumulation.

While it is the responsibility of parents to protect their children from nibbling at painted surfaces or ingesting flakes of paint or plaster, it is difficult to control them from doing so.

The best means of long-range prevention of childhood lead poisoning is the maintenance of the proper state of repair of both interior and exterior painted sufaces. Parents should be particularly careful in older homes and buildings, where the woodwork may have many layers of paint on it. Remember — paint is not made to be eaten.

Some kinds of paint are much more dangerous than others. Paint made for outdoor use usually contains more lead than that made for indoor use. Remember, outdoor paint should never be used on toys, walls, woodwork, furniture, or anywhere inside the home. When you buy paint for indoor use, be sure there is no lead in it. The label on the paint can should read "For Interior Use." Never use outdoor paint which contains lead for indoor painting.

If you have seen your child eating or chewing paint, plaster or painted surfaces, take him to the Pediatric Clinic or the Emergency Room. Do not wait until signs of poisoning appear. Give your doctor full information about everything your child has eaten.

Post Assistance Asked For West Point Museum

Post personnel have been asked to assist in assembling non-military exhibits for the Military Academy Museum at West Point.

Frederick P. Todd, director of the museum, requests items related to the history, economics, geography or culture of various countries to be used in setting up small exhibits to supplement the academic program of the cadets.

Officials of the museum feel that a display of sculpture, prints, objects of art and ethnic artifacts can do more to familiarize a cadet with a country than textbooks.

Funds for building the collection are limited. The museum is soliciting gifts of art objects to supplement purchased items.

To avoid duplication, individuals who wish to donate to the museum are asked to write to the director, listing the items.

VOL. 20, NO. 9 | THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 9, 1961 FORT BENNING, GA. | 28 Pages — 5c

STRUM IT BOY . . . Pfc Howard C. Griffith, a member of the 114th Engineer Company, a National Guard unit of Washington, D.C., strums his guitar on the bus taking the unit from the Central of Georgia Railway Station in Columbus to Fort Benning. The 114th is one of the units called to active duty recently in the Army's buildup program. While on post it will train with the 151st Engineer Group.

Veterans' Day Show Slated For Saturday

Troop Units Will Support Large Scale City Parade

Fort Benning will provide a show of strength and readiness with troops and weapons to support Veteran's Day activities in Columbus Saturday.

Tomorrow will be a holiday for post military and civilian personnel. It will not, however, be a holiday for military dependents attending Fort Benning Children's Schools, Baker High School, Columbus High School or Jordan High School, although dependents attending Spencer or Carver High Schools will have a holiday.

In a massive tribute to veterans who have fought and died for the preservation of freedom, the Fort Benning-Columbus observance will begin with a parade in downtown Columbus at 9:45 a.m., followed by memorial services at Riverdale Cemetery commencing at 11 a.m.

John S. Gleason, Jr., chairman of the Veterans Day National Committee, said President Kennedy has proclaimed Nov. 11 as a day dedicated to the cause of world peace. The President will deliver an address on Veterans Day at Arlington National Cemetery and lay a wreath at the Tomb of the Unknowns.

These activities will commemorate the 43rd anniversary of the armistice of November 11, 1918, which brought World War I to an end.

Narrated by Capt. Robert D. Masters, from a speakers stand on Broadway, the parade will feature units and equipment of both The Infantry Center and the 2nd Infantry Division.

From The Infantry Center, there will be the honor guard Company C, 29th Infantry; 1st Infantry Brigade Drum and Bugle Corps; 29th Infantry Drill Team, two color guards; five color bearers, and the 138th Transportation Company, a National Guard unit from Cocoa, Fla., recently called to active duty.

The 2nd Division will provide a rifle company, band, massed colors, two 4.2-inch and two 81-MM mortars, two 106-mm recolless rifles and two 105-mm howitzers.

Chaplain (Capt.) Harold T. Elmore will give the invocation and pronounce the benediction at the Riverdale Cemetery services.

Major Edward Schowalter, a Medal of Honor recipient, will deliver the memorial address.

A firing squad and a bugler from the 29th Infantry will participate in the service.

The Veteran's Day activities are sponsored by the Veterans Council of Columbus, composed of representatives of the American Legion, Amvets, Disabled American Veterans, Jewish War Veterans, Veteran's of Foreign Wars and Veterans of World War I.

Veterans' Day Message

On Veterans' Day, November 11, American people everywhere will pay homage to veterans of our Armed Forces, both living and dead.

Across the nation and overseas, American men and women in uniform will participate in ceremonies to honor those who served the cause of peace.

On this occasion, the military and civilian personnel of Fort Benning will join with the citizens of Columbus and Phenix City to observe this hallowed day. It is fitting that we pause to offer our prayers of respect and gratitude for those who gave so much to preserve the freedom we all enjoy.

Let us also rededicate ourselves to the principles for which so many gave the supreme sacrifice, that we too may keep our nation free.

Fallout Protection Is Available On Post If Need Should Arise

If the need arises, some type of fallout protection could be provided over 60,000 civil employees, dependents and military personnel at Fort Benning.

A recent engineer fallout shelter survey shows that existing buildings on the reservation could be used to provide some measure of protection for that number of people.

Some buildings, especially those having sub-basements, would provide maximum fallout protection. Others would provide protection in proportion to the density of fallout.

The survey is one of many steps being taken by Infantry Center officials to enable the military to continue operation and still provide protection for personnel following an attack.

Other civil defense measures include:

An air defense warning system, bolstered by loud-speakers. Plans call for decals to be distributed to all personnel which would give the various siren warnings. These decals will be placed on or near telephones.

Emergency operations plans would enable the post to carry out its military mission.

Plans to stock emergency shelters with medical supplies. At this stage of planning, it is the individual's responsibility to provide himself with food and water and other emergency supplies. According to G-3 officials, an announcement will be made soon regarding suggested items for individuals to have handy in the event they must move to a shelter.

Training for chemical-biological - radiological survey teams which would monitor fallout density.

Fort Will Test Warning Sirens On Wednesday

Fort Benning will test all warning sirens on the post at 10 a.m. Wednesday, November 15.

Sirens will be sounded for five minutes.

The Infantry Center G-3 Section has requested major commanders to report the designation of units or activities where the sirens cannot be heard. No further action is required of any personnel in connection with the five minute warning blast.

Plans are underway to provide more sirens as needed to provide an adequate warning system for use in case of impending disaster.

Officials to Try For Extra-Safe Long Weekend

Post officials are going all out in a determined effort to prevent accidents and fatalities over the long Veterans' Day weekend tomorrow through Sunday.

"Veterans' Day holidays are generally the least dangerous of all holidays for post personnel," Norman M. Evans, post safety director, said. "While we expect no increase above the normal weekend number of accidents this year, we, nevertheless, urge everybody to take all precautions to prevent mishaps and casualties."

To combat accidents, the post Safety Office has assisted the various units conducting

Infantry Conference Due On Post November 14-16

A special conference for Infantry instructors at service schools throughout the United States will be conducted by The Infantry School at Fort Benning Nov. 14-16.

Primary purpose of the conference is to acquaint the instructors with changes in Infantry doctrine and to assist them in preparing instruction based on new organization concepts. Changes in the instructional mission of The Infantry School also will be discussed.

During the three-day meeting, conferees will attend sessions conducted by the departments of The Infantry School.

The Command and Staff Department will hold conferences on the organization and equipment of the Infantry, Airborne and mechanized division and major changes in doctrinal emphasis in new manuals and integrated conferences and practical exercises on offensive operations and defensive missions at the brigade and battalion levels.

The Weapons, Ground Mobility, Communications, Airborne-Air Mobility and Ranger Departments also will hold sessions in their respective subjects.

The school's Special Subjects Department will conduct a conference on the organization and

Contributions To The CAA Still Rising

Contributions to the Fort Benning 1961 Community Activities Association Fund Drive have jumped to $103,586.

Collections made after the recent military payday account for the big jump, with six days left for the team captains to make final collections and turn-ins to the drive officials.

The drive, which ended November 7, is attempting to $115,000 for the support of the post's community activities.

A portion of the amount is contributed to the United Givers Fund Drive of the local civilian community.

Drive team captains from all units, staff sections and departments of The Infantry Center, Infantry School and 2nd Infantry Division have contacted all post personnel and civilian employees in the campaign.

It is expected that signs soon will be erected to designate buildings suitable for emergency shelters.

In addition, some 600 family units on post have basements that could be adapted to provide some measure of protection.

One problem in moving people to emergency shelters is lack of individual responsibility to provide food and water. Infantry Center civil defense officials are coordinating with national and local civil defense officials in determining what equipment each individual should keep readily accessible.

employment of medical units.

The Infantry School's five major non-resident programs and changes in each will be the topic for one session to be conducted by the Department of Non-Resident Instruction.

A conference on future operational and organizational objectives for Infantry, the visualization of the battlefield as projected to 1966-1976, and the material development trends for the future will be conducted by the Combat Developments Office.

Following a question period in the afternoon of the third day conducted by Brig. Gen. A. D. Surles, Jr., assistant commandant of The Infantry School, the conference will end with a few remarks by Major Gen. Ben Harrell, school commandant.

Accidents

their own safety programs for the coming holiday.

This assistance, which has been given over a period of years through safety instruction and driver improvement courses, has cut the death and accident rate sharply in the past two years, Evans said.

Fort Benning has had no fatalities during Veterans' Day holidays among post personnel since Nov. 11, 1957. On that date one soldier was killed in Bowling Green, Va.

Citing the leading causes of accidents, Evans said, "Speeding, driving under the influence of alcohol and fatigue are responsible for most destruction of property and loss of life.

"Speeding is a relative condition. It is not necessarily driving at a high rate of speed. Under adverse conditions low speed can be dangerous."

Safe driving depends more on drivers than on any other single factor, Evans said.

Knowing the road conditions and other hazards is highly important in defensive driving, officials stated. Accidents need not happen if drivers observe these conditions and drive accordingly, they added.

The improvement in the accident record has come about despite an increase in the number of vehicles on the post and in miles driven.

Records of accidents involving post personnel show that while more than two-thirds of the injuries from auto accidents occurred less than 25 miles from the post, the severity of the accidents was greater beyond the 25-mile radius of the Fort Benning and Columbus area.

"Most fatal accidents can be eliminated if drivers are convinced that one drink of alcoholic beverage is dangerous and that fatigue can be even more risky than liquor," Evans said. "Drinking should be timed so that it does not conflict with driving. Sleep and rest should always precede long distance driving."

The post safety director also warned that there is always a higher than average death and accident rate during holidays from fires, drownings and altercations.

As a final warning of possible danger, Evans said, "If the present accident trend continues, one person in every two now living in the United States will be killed or injured in traffic accidents sometime in their lives."

Blood

More than 58 per cent of the nation's hospitals were provided blood by the Red Cross during 1958-60.

Post Sergeant Helping Excavate Numerous Ancient Indian Villages

By Pvt. Bruce Yuffee

Sergeant First Class David W. Chase, presently curator of the Infantry Museum, is working in liaison with the Archeological Salvage Team of the Smithsonian Institution River Basin Surveys within the Fort Benning Reservation.

Sgt. Chase, who has much experience in this field, was requested to aid in the salvage operations here by Mr. Harold A. Huscher, Smithsonian Field Archeologist, and Dr. John Griffin of the National Park Service.

Archeology has been the chief interest of Sgt. Chase since 1937, when he was accepted to work with the Rochester (New York) Museum of Arts and Sciences in an archeological expedition in the Lake Champlain and central New York State area under Dr. William A. Ritchie, currently state archeologist for New York.

While serving in the Army in Panama in 1941, he had the opportunity to do limited work in the areas surrounding Miraflores Lake, and at the site of Old Panama City. When World War II ended in 1945, Sgt. Chase was sent to Japan, where he excavated sites in central and northern Honshu, the southern most island of Japan.

Since 1955, Sgt. Chase has surveyed the Fort Benning Reservation for historical and prehistoric sites, and has found nearly one hundred. His surveys were of extreme value to the Smithsonian Institution representative upon his arrival to the reservation in the spring of 1957, to conduct the river valley survey.

The federal effort in locating and excavating the river basin sites is due to the impending rise of the Chattahoochee River water after the completion of the Walter F. George Lock and Dam at Fort Gaines. Hundreds of important sites will be under water, and all the critical material within will be lost.

According to Sgt. Chase, about 25 sites have been discovered on the military reservation which will be either lost or turned into swamp land by the rising river. Salvage work by Mr. Huscher and Sgt. Chase, on these doomed sites, is an exhausting task due to their limitations in time.

Possibly the most important site effected is the large village of the Yuchi on the Alabama side of the river. This site was reported by William Bartram, the famous naturalist, during his explorations in the Creek country in the late 1700's. The Indian village was still flourishing at the time of Benjamin Hawkins, The Creek Indian Agent in 1799. The Yuchi, together with the members of the Creek tribes were moved to Oklahoma in 1836 where their descendents still reside.

Several very early prehistoric sites are also included in the survey; some of these dating as early as an estimated 2000 years ago. The work involved in the salvage of these sites is not all digging. Each must be mapped and staked out in ten foot squares. Usually, anywhere from two to five squares on each site are explored. This method reveals the presence of successive occupations; the earlier ones being deeper in the ground.

Materials obtained from site excavations are washed and studied separately. Detailed records, photographs and extensive field notes are all part of the scientific procedure in the investigation. It is from these records the human or prehuman story is derived as to what was there, how long they stayed, and how they lived. Pottery, stone, and animal bones are samples which help identify the cultures involved, and in the case of prehistoric remnants, their time period.

"Treasure digging" is unlawful on government property. Official explorations must be obtained through proper channels. A digging permit must be granted from the National Park Service under the provisions of the Federal Antiquities Act of 1907 before any excavating can be done in this area, or any area in the United States proper. Local authorities should also be asked for their approval before salvage of sites. Violators are dealt with severely. Only one case of a "looted" site is known since the Fort Benning explorations began in 1957.

It is expected that the surveys in the river basin will continue well into 1962, at which time the rising waters will cause the conclusion of the excavations.

Post personnel who come abreast of site areas are requested not to disturb the excavations in any way or to displace survey stakes, since these actions would cause permanent damage to the site records, and a resultant loss of important information.

DOD Advisory Panel Studies Housing Needs

Military family housing policies and criteria are subjects for study by a new Defense Department advisory panel appointed by Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara.

The six member panel, headed by Deputy Secretary of Defense Roswell L. Gilpatric, is to conduct an "intensive reappraisal" of the subjects and report its findings to Secretary McNamara no later than Nov. 15. Its members include experts on financing, marketing, construction and management of real property.

The scope of the panel's reappraisal includes requirements, standards, financing, management and a legislative program for fiscal year 1963, based on the group's studies.

Veterans' Day Pledge: Our Nation Is United

Saturday is a Veterans' Day that finds men who have served their country well once more wearing its uniform in response to the call of crisis. It is a day when, looking back to honor Americans who served in all our wars, we face a greater peril than ever confronted them.

But we do face it — the threat of Communist imperialism to the free world that looks to us for leadership is a naked, ugly fact. Americans know weakness is fatal. They know the peace of the world — the very future of the world, perhaps — depends on our strength.

And we are that strength — each and every one of us making up the bastion of defensive power that is the only sure deterrent to the ambitions of international thugs. It is a responsibility to be proud of — and one never to forget.

For to remember it is the finest tribute servicemen and women can pay to those — the living and the dead — who have gone before us and whose voice has come down to us through time, saying: "Be yours the torch to hold it high!"

We give them our answer in the clear, poignant notes of Taps sounded by the bugler at 11 a.m. on Veterans Day at the Tomb of the Unknown Solider. No sacrifice is too great, no hardship or separation too bitter, for us to keep faith with them.

VETERANS' DAY MESSAGE TO MEMBERS of the

UNITED STATES CONTINENTAL ARMY COMMAND

11 NOVEMBER 1961

On this eleventh of November, Americans throughout the free world will pause again for a minute of silent reflection upon our debt to the veterans who have fought and died for the preservation of freedom.

It is proper that we honor these veterans who have done so much to preserve and uphold America's ideals. In so doing, we express appreciation for the achievements of the past and rededicate ourselves to meeting successfully the hazards and requirements which lie before us. Veterans' Day is not only a commemoration of the past, but also a pledge for the future.

All members of the United States Continental Army Command must meet the challenge which exists in our day with character, courage and confidence. We can pay no greater tribute to our honored veterans than to be sure we are ready and trained to follow the high traditions they have set for us.

The Surgeon Says

Emotional Energy--A Necessity

By David L. Garber, 2d Lt., MSC
Social Worker

Each year all of us devote a great deal of time to the task of finding ways in which we can do our job better. The Army gives awards to those who suggest ways of saying time and money. Business concerns spend a great deal of money on time studies, hire efficiency experts to observe the way things are done and to come up with better ways of doing them. We make up flow charts, task sheets and conventionally evaluate our procedures in order to conserve energy and to get the most done with the least effort. We have machines now to do some of the work that man once had to do and all that is left for him to do is push a button. There is no doubt that this is important. We save a lot of time and get the job done better. In short, our work nowadays requires less physical energy than it once did and we have more left to apply to activities that we enjoy after hours.

Another kind of energy that we need every day is emotional energy. We do not hear much about this energy. It, like physical energy, helps us do our job. It also is ours to enjoy. Like physical energy, it has a limit and we can become emotionally tired. Most people become emotionally tired as the result of misusing their emotional energy.

In the Army we recognize the need for good leadership and the results that this brings. Many of the positive results of good leadership involve the proper direction of emotional energy. Take "esprit de corps," for example. This is defined as "the loyalty to, pride in and enthusiasm for a unit shown by its members." What is this but the direction of people's emotions in a constructive way? We all know that a unit functions much better when the esprit de corps is good. The same is true of an individual. When his emotional energy is well directed, he feels better, works better and plays better.

What are some of the ways we waste emotional energy? One is kicking against the proverbial brick wall. When we find a situation we cannot change, we often are frustrated and seem to boil with emotional energy. The fact that we are boiling means that we are using energy — really tiring ourselves out and getting nothing done. In situations like this, would it not be better to work out our frustration by doing something useful? There are many ways to do this. One good way would be to do something for our own improvement. The craft shop, sports or education are examples of ways to use this energy positively.

Another way we waste our emotional energy is by holding inside of us feelings of anger. We all know that at times it is unwise to take out our anger on the person or thing that is making us angry. If we did, we would just make the situation worse. When we try to contain it, however, we fight with ourselves. It is like trying to pick up an axe while standing on the handle. We get tired and still have not completed the job. On the other hand, we do not pick up the axe by taking hold of the sharp edge; like anger, it can hurt us. A way to "pick our anger up by the handle" is to get it off our chest, talk it out with someone. If we cannot do this, we can work it off often by doing something constructive. This way, we use our emotional energy to help ourselves.

As you may have noted, emotional energy is different from physical energy in that we do not conserve it by not using it. We conserve it by using it in constructive ways. The individual who can do this does not suffer from emotional fatigue and will go farther faster than the one who wears himself out fighting with himself. It is a good idea to make a mental flow chart of your emotional energy. Where is it going and how does it get there? How can it do the job better?

The Issues In Berlin

City's Fight To Survive: A Chronology Of Events

The Western half of Berlin has existed since WWII as an island of freedom deep within Communist territory. Enjoying both economic prosperity and complete political freedom, West Berlin is a vivid contrast to the bleakness of Communist life surrounding it.

Such well - being has been a source of embarrassment to the Communists — "the bone in our throat," Premier Khrushchev has called it — and removal of that source has been a top-priority target in Soviet strategy.

Soviet threats to absorb West Berlin into the Communist empire have been numerous. A chronology of free Berlin's efforts to survive despite these threats during the postwar years would include the following main events:

June 5, 1945 — The Soviet Union, Britain, France and the United States agreed to occupy the city under a four-power governing authority. Soon afterward the powers also agreed there would be unrestricted transportation and movement among the city's four sectors.

Aug. 2, 1945—At the Potsdam Conference, President Truman, Prime Minister Attlee and Marshal Stalin pledged to treat Germany as an economic entity and to prepare for the reconstruction of German political life. By February of 1946 the Soviets had broken the majority of these agreements by setting up border controls and curbing all freedoms of the East German people.

March 20, 1948 — Four-power control in Berlin broke down completely. During the next three months the Soviets systematically severed all means of transportation and communication between East and West Berlin. On June 24 a total blockade of West Berlin went into effect.

June 26, 1948 - May 12, 1949—The historic Berlin airlift took place. In these 11 months the Western powers flew 2.3 million tons of food and supplies into free Berlin. Meanwhile, the Soviets had formed a separate government for East Berlin.

June 17, 1953—An anti-Communist revolt, which began when a few hundred workers in East Berlin protested increased labor quotas, rapidly spread throughout East Germany. Nearly 600 East Germans died when the uprising was crushed by 20,000 Soviet troops supported by tanks.

Nov. 27, 1958 — The Soviet Union proposed that West Berlin be made a demilitarized "free city" with no outside connections. It set a six-month deadline and warned that if no agreement were reached, East Germany would be given control of all access routes to West Berlin.

Aug. 5, 1959 — The German Foreign Ministers conference to find a plan for German reunification ended in a total impasse, the Soviet Union never having seriously considered any such plan.

May 17, 1960 — Premier Khrushchev wrecked the summit meeting with President Eisenhower before it began, greatly increasing tension over Berlin.

Sept. 30, 1960 — West Germany announced its intention to end trade agreements between itself and East Germany in answer to further Soviet restrictions of movement in the divided city. A month later the trade agreement was renewed, and Communist restrictions began to ease somewhat.

June 4-5, 1961 — President Kennedy and Premier Khrushchev met in Vienna, where the Soviet leader restated his "free city" proposal and his threat to sign a separate peace treaty with East Germany.

June 28, 1961 — President Kennedy told a news conference: "There is peace in Germany and Berlin. If it is disturbed, it will be a direct Soviet responsibility." He again voiced U. S. determination to uphold its obligations in Berlin.

Aug. 13, 1961 — The East German people were completely sealed off when the border between East and West Berlin was closed by the Communists and the East German police. Until this date over four million refugees had fled to freedom.

Chaplain's Corner

'Are You The Missing One?'

BY CHAPLAIN (Capt) GEORGE W. FOSHEE

A doctor in a small French village was about to retire. He had cared ceaselessly for his people although they could not pay him much. Many times nothing. His people wished to make a concrete expression of their gratitude and affection.

Since they had little money, it was proposed that on a given day each would bring a pitcher of his own wine and pour it into a large barrel in the public square. The barrel could then be presented to the doctor for sale or use as he pleased. All day long people were seen pouring in their offering. At night the barrel was presented to the doctor with the inevitable speeches. Finally the doctor was left alone in the memory of their love.

He went to the barrel and drew a bit of the wine to taste the fruits of his people labor. Then he went to sit comfortably by the fire to enjoy it. The first sip was a shock. It tasted like water! He sipped again. It was water!

He called the mayor; who called the assembly men; who called the people. Then the truth was revealed: Everyone had reasoned: "My little pitcher of wine won't be missed. I have so little for myself. The others will take care of it. The little water I substitute will not be noticed!"

This is a story true to life in many realms. It is true in religion that much is watered down in faith, service and love because one conviction will not matter. One missing member in worship will be missed. It becomes a watered down religion! It is true in government and many other realms of public or social life. The missing one always contributes to a watered down version of what-ever is represented. It is the missing one which is very much needed today in a world of crisis. It is the missing one church member, it is the missing vote in an election, it is the missing one in the voice of public opinion, it is the missing one in a protest against tyranny, it is the missing one in a stand for righteousness.

But the big question is: "Are you that missing one?"

At Fort Benning there are several chapels where services of worship are conducted for Jews, Catholic and Protestants. Go to church each Sunday, somewhere.

Modern Infantry's Wall of Steel--The Mortar

MSGT REDCLIFF, HEAVY MORTAR TEAM Chief, Talks With MSgt Steve Bernhardt

CAPT. STANLEY HOLTON DISCUSSES Point With Sfc Lobere and SSgt Behnfeldt

CAPT. STRATHER HAWKINS, TEAM Chief, Checks Course Of Instruction

"FDC, this is FO Red, Fire Mission."

With these words the wheels of motion have started to prepare the 4.2 inch mortar to deliver its devastating firepower.

"From registration point, azimuth 4800, right 100, add 400, troops in open, will adjust."

As the message continues and is received at the tub of this ever-turning wheel, known as the Fire Direction Center, the pace quickens until within a few minutes a wall of steel is blanketing the enemy.

At Fort Benning, the Mortar Committee of the Weapons Department is responsible for training Infantry Officers and Officer Candidates on the 4.2 inch mortar. The students are given instruction in the operation of this indirect fire team, which is the heavy mortar platoon.

As Sfc Marvin E. Fuller, an instructor in the Mortar Committee, says, "The forward observers are the 'eyes' of the team. They call for and bring the fires of the mortars upon any enemy in the No Man's Land forward of the friendly positions."

SSgt Bobby E. Martin, who instructs fire direction procedure, believes that the Fire Direction Center personnel are the "brains" of the team. They compute the necessary information that is needed to bring accurate fire to bear upon the enemy.

The firing sections, according to SSgt Henry H. Behnfeldt, who instructs in this field, are the "muscles" of the team. There are two firing sections of three mortars each in the platoon. The mortar is carried on a three fourths ton vehicle in the Infantry Division Battle Group and manned by seven men "It takes the well trained mortar crew about three minutes to off-load the weapon, set up and fire," says Sgt. Behnfeldt.

Armored rifle battalions have the 4.2 inch mortar mounted on a M-84 carrier. From the carrier the mortar crews are capable of firing upon the enemy within seconds after moving into a position.

Lieutenant Colonel David B. Wright, the USAIS Mortar Committee Chairman, says, "Words are not needed to sell the mortar. One look at its effect on a target is enough to make a believer out of any man."

The heavy mortar had its start in the Second World War with the Chemical Corps. They were prepared to fire chemical shells at the enemy, but, except for white phosphorous and smoke, never did. They fought throughout the war firing only the conventional high explosive ammunition.

The artillery had responsibility for the weapon from 1956 until 1959, at which time it was returned to the Infantry.

At present, the USAIS conducts four Heavy Mortar Officer Courses per year. Each class has a quota of sixty students. During the five weeks the students attend the course, they receive detailed instruction in forward observation techniques, fire direction procedures and mechanical training.

In addition to the mortar training, the classes receive instruction in tactical employment of the mortar and the communications that are organic to the platoon.

The last week of the course consists of training in the use and employment of the Davy Crockett weapon. The Davy Crockett is the weapon that gives the Battle Group Commander an atomic "Sunday Punch."

The graduate student is awarded a 1543 MOS, which qualifies him for assignment to a heavy mortar platoon.

The Infantry has such confidence in the simplicity of the operation of the heavy mortar team that all Infantrymen are trained to adjust the fires of the platoon. Should a trained forward observer not be available, any Infantryman can call for the mortars fire by simply telling the mortar platoon where the target is located in relationship to his position.

This wall of steel is always available.

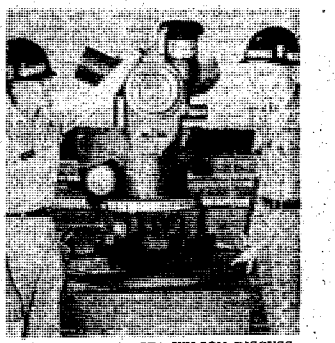
Re-enlistment Plaques Go To Student Brigade

The Student Brigade has been awarded two plaques for achieving the highest percentage of re-enlistments among the major commands on post during the first fiscal quarter of 1962.

The brigade re-enlisted 50.2 per cent of its career personnel to win one plaque and 21.9 per cent of its first term personnel to win the second.

Brig. Gen. A. D. Surles Jr., assistant commandant of the Infantry School, presented the plaques to Col. Otto R. Koch Jr., brigade commander.



Other major commands which competed with TSB for re-enlistment honors included the 428th Medical Battalion, Lawson Aviation Command, Martin Army Hospital, First Infantry Brigade, Infantry Center Troop Command and the 151st Engineer Group.

Each fiscal year a revolving plaque is awarded to The Infantry Center unit that attains the highest percentage of immediate re-enlistments among all categories of its personnel. TSB has won the plaque three consecutive times.

Capt. Roy F. Sullivan, TSB re-enlistment officer, said, "Our personalized counseling has helped our re-enlistment program no end. We urge all our eligible personnel who are short timers to stay in the service. When we point out the benefits to them and to the Army, many re-enlist."

Jan Rose's Woman's Club Diary

Plans are underway for the gala Christmas Luncheon of the Woman's Club, which is scheduled for Wednesday, Dec. 6, at the Main Officers Club. The Medical Services wives are sponsoring this event, and the plans are set for an old-fashioned plantation Christmas, like those in Georgia a hundred years ago.

The Choral Group, under the direction of Mrs. Wallace Lancaster, and the School of Dance, with Mrs. Howard Wilson, director, will present a colorful Christmas program. As an added attraction, a Christmas Bazaar will be featured, with a variety of gifts made by members of the club. Mrs. Wallis McClain, 544-2349, is Chairman of the Bazaar, and welcomes any and all contributions. If you have a favorite handiwork or food item you would like to include, please call her.

The Bowling League, which rolls on Thursday mornings at the Main Post Alleys, needs substitutes. Please call Mrs. Beckman at 544-3997 if you are interested in being included on the substitute list.

Don't forget the Distaff Dinner Dance on November 18. If you have not already bought your tickets, see your unit commander's wife. For the best selection of tables, buy your tickets early. Remember, you could win the cruise to Nassau. Girls: another of the door prizes is a $50.00 gift certificate from Kayser-Lilenthal!

Captain and Mrs. Jack M. Williams' name was drawn to receive the head table's centerpiece. This was an especially wonderful surprise for the Williams, because in addition to attending the Brigade social, their 21st wedding anniversary.

The centerpiece of the head table was a floral display of decoratively arranged chrysanthemums, cattails, and fall leaves, embraced by two large candelabrum.

The decorations of a harvest moon, huge autumn leaves, corn stocks, and pumpkins, were in keeping with the social's fall theme.

The girls are already busily planning for the children's Christmas party. Christmas luncheon for the clubmembers and last but not least the traditional Christmas dinner dance.

One more item that is certainly worth mentioning: The NCO Wives have again supplied two of the clinics with an unbelievable amount of lollipops: $85.00 worth to the immunization clinic and $42.50 worth to the laboratory.

We have to announce, unfortunately, that we may no longer be able to continue this service unless we receive some financial assistance from some of the other organizations as our funds are rather limited.

The beauty of Autumn can be seen in and around Fort Benning. Mother Nature seems to surround us with her wand of wonders. While Nature prepares her animals for the coming Winter, we are preparing for the cold hard wintery road of life ahead.

Goblins, ghouls, and ghosts ushered in JADA's Halloween Dance at the old Post Gym, Oct. 27. Bales of hay, shocks of corn, and pumpkins were the effective decorations. The crowd ranged from beatniks to little girls and boys, cave men to records, ghosts to cowboys and Indians, Jack and Jill to Mat Dillon and Kitty, Martha Washington to Gypsy Rose Lee, and chaperones.

Congratulations Baker! On your smashing victory against Columbus. Keep your spirit roaring. Good luck on your remaining games.

Pacelli knows nothing but victory. The Blue Devils are getting bluer by the week. The football season is coming to an end, as the fans cheer for more.

In the fall induction of Columbus High's National Honor Society Karen Lincoln and Donna Davis, Benningites, were honored for their superior achievements in school. Old members from Benning include Frances Clark and Carlise Park. We are well represented, don't you agree?

JADA had its November luncheon and meeting on the 4th. The main topics of discussions were the turkey raffle, the financial status, and the Christmas Formal preparations. Captain Puydasbeff, a dynamic speaker, addressed the group. We believe that more people should have been able to hear his talk on "What We, The Youth, Could Do To Combat Communism."

Many seniors are taking or preparing to take college board examinations. These tests are usually difficult and very long but once they are taken, over half of the question of a person's college qualifications are known and your acceptance will soon be revealed.

The Baker High School will present its first play of the year: "Rashomon". It is supposed to be the best Baker has ever presented. Miss Eleanor Brodie is the director; she is new at Baker this year. Miss Brodie is a favorite with her students. The play takes place and is centered in a Japanese court. So far the cast has done an excellent job in the interpretation of the lives and atmosphere involved. We're looking forward to the first night, November 16. Best of luck!

Several of the sportsmen of our teenage society here at Benning have had a good time hunting and fishing. Their tales are tall and their bounties are small. Just remember that there is always a tomorrow, right, boys?

Students are still polishing the apples as we draw near the end of National Education Week. Each school has participated in some way in this national program. Prospective teachers had the opportunity to visit, observe, and teach in several schools. We hope that you took time to thank your teachers for all they do.

This year one of the most popular subjects is speech. Several of our Benningites participate in the speech classes in the various schools. Miss Chandler has two speech classes a day. A favorite proverb of these students is "here today and 'goon' tomorrow". Some of the speeches of interest have been how to dissect a frog, how not to wrap a Christmas package, how to carve soap, an exhibition on how to play tennis, how not to chew gum, the Berlin situation, how to rat your hair, what music means to me, the rookey of the year award, nominating and accepting the position of governor of Georgia, and presenting the award to the world's greatest liar. We began the year by giving a speech about our lives and what we had been doing for the past years. Over half of the classes ended up telling about their trips around the world which means that most of the students are from Benning.

Prufrock, the stuffed man from Baker, is well known and talked about around school. Miss Eleanor Brodie is the creator of this fine speciman of rag men. Her students practice their eye contact with him. Pacelli's Mrs. Robert Lagen has one speech class a day. They have been giving speeches on interviews they have taken and informative talks. One of their best was the demonstration on the dances of today which included the fish, the fly, the twist, the bug, and the roach. They also discuss world problems as do the other classes.

TO: The Officers and Men of the 2d Infantry Division

On Saturday, 11 November 1961, Americans throughout the world will observe Veterans' Day--a day of special significance to members of the Armed Forces as it brings to our minds the immeasurable sacrifices of former members, made so that this nation might remain "the land of the free."

In this time of world tension, it is fitting for every one of us in the 2d Infantry Division to pause in our busy schedules and reflect upon these sacrifices so clearly evidenced by the gallant and brave deeds of military men since the founding of this country. May their example inspire us to rededicate our service more strongly than ever to maintaining our heritage of freedom.

Gone Two Months

Aviation's Drone No Longer AWOL

The 2nd Aviation Company's wandering Drone is home.

The ground-controlled, pilotless aircraft strayed to parts then unknown on September 5 when the 2nd Aviation Company's Drone Section lost radar track of it in the northern part of the reservation.

Alarm

A wide alarm was sounded for the 430-pound aircraft, used primarily for aerial photography and survey. But days passed, and Aviation officials were about ready to chalk it up as a deserter.

Then success!

Captain Donald A. Graves, commander of the 15th Artillery's Battery A, while with his unit Monday on Fournier Range, solved the two-month old mystery.

The SD-1 Drone, battered, weather-beaten and totally unsalvagable, was discovered and returned home.

Major John W. Roush, assistant division aviation commander, said he was glad to see its return, but added that its flying days were over.

The Drone was found about seven miles (as a Drone flies) from the site of its launching.

Portable Altar, Organ, Candles Go to Field With the Chaplain

What does a chaplain need to function in the field?

Wall tent, portable altar, altar dressings, candle holders and candles, communion sets and linen, metal Bible stand, hymn books, folding chairs and tables, portable pneumatically-operated organ. . . .

Such items are usually found in the checklist of Chaplain (Captain) James J. Kennedy and Chaplain (Lieutenant) Robert C. Harlles when they moved out to the field with the 23rd Infantry.

Portable Chapel

The chaplains and their two assistants, Specialist Four Eddie Mabry and Private First Class David E. Stancil, usually set up the portable organ in the battle group command post area near the medical aid station. This site is chosen in order to be nearby if someone is injured, for the chaplains want to be on hand to render whatever assistance and comfort as is needed.

Actually, morale boosting is a major contribution by chaplains in the field, whether it is done by accompanying a wounded man to the hospital, by chatting with the Soldiers during a rest period, by participating in a training problem with a platoon or by conducting Character Guidance classes and field services for the Troops.

While they are in the field the chaplains also do counseling work, which occupies a large segment of their time when they are located permanently in garrison. Usually, though, the chaplains spend most of each day "on the go," visiting as many company areas as possible before dark.

Highlighting the chaplains' field activities is the nightly religious service. Each evening a different company is visited, and vesper services are announced. The men sing hymns, and the chaplain gives a talk. Usually held in the open, these evening services set an atmosphere for worship. They have proven to be very impressive and inspirational, and response to them is always good.

Two Re-Up In the Field

Following a mass tank and infantry assault training exercise recently a double reenlistment of two men, one from the 9th Infantry and the other from 69th Armor, was performed in the field.

Sergeant Daniel Clow of Company E, 9th Infantry has three years' service behind him and was given the oath of reenlistment for another six years by Colonel Clifford P. Hannum, commander of the 9th Infantry.

Sergeant Clow has been a member of the 9th for only a few months and prior to this assignment was stationed in Germany with the 41st Infantry. He is a fire squad leader.

Also sworn in by his company commander, Captain Harold W. Roeder of Company C, 69th Armor, was Sergeant Ploncell Christain. He reenlisted for another six years and has 13 years of service to his credit.

By 23rd Infantry PIO

Five Allied officers of the Iranian Army are visiting the 23rd Infantry.

The officers — all recent graduates of the motor officers' course on Main Post — have been observing the 23rd's motor pool procedures for maintenance, organization and administration. The officers explained that their Army is equipped with vehicles similar to ours, and that the knowledge they gather at the motor pool can be used in the care of their own vehicles.

The officers are Captain Hassan Ashtari, Captain Lotfali Amir - Poursaid, Lieutenant Mehdi Poor-Karimi, Lieutenant Aliakbar Sopassi-Tjrani and Lieutenant Aziz Ilkhanizadeh.

During their stay at the 23rd motor pool the officers were guided and briefed by Lieutenant James W. Askine and Master Sergeant Hudnell M. Durham.

They are scheduled to depart tomorrow.

'Most People Enjoy a Magician,' Says Pvt. Jacoby, 87th Infantry

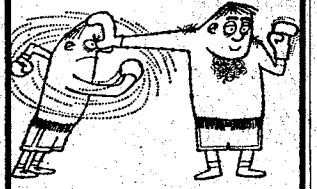
BY EUGENE BREESKIN

"Most people enjoy a good magician not because they really believe that he can pull a rabbit from an empty hat or produce a beautiful girl from nowhere, but because they enjoy fantasy and being fooled . . . the multi-million dollar business of Walt Disney is proof of man's enjoyment of fantasy."

So says Private Keith E. Jacoby, an S-1 clerk assigned to Headquarters Company, 87th Infantry.

100 Shows

While attending high school and college, Private Jacoby worked more than 100 shows. Dabbling in magic since he was 12, he still feels that he has only begun to "scratch the surface." Most of the equipment he works with is hand-made.



Since entering the Army, Private Jacoby has had time to once again bring out his bag of tricks, and finds that he enjoys the art of magic as much as his audience. Already having performed in Kelley Hill service club shows, Jacoby is always looking for a market for his occult talents. They're still trying to figure out some of his tricks but Jacoby isn't talking.

A MODERN MORIBANA ARRANGEMENT . . . Mrs. Rudolph A. Kobs, who will speak on Japanese flower arranging at the 2nd Division Officers' Wives Club November luncheon, displays three stages of a modern Moribana arrangement. Based upon the informal triangle, which is the basis of all Japanese art, two aspidistra leaves, left, reach for the highest point — Heaven or Shin. The dried pampas grass is the second highest line of the triangle — called Man or Soe. Adding chrysanthemums, center, establishes the third point of the triangle as Earth or Tai. Addition of leaves, right, adds weight to the base, anchoring the flowers.

Two NCOs Serve Division Well

702nd's Company 'A' Supports Infantry, Artillery, Armor Units

BY CLAY LACY

The role of the Infantry Soldier in the present training program within the 2nd Infantry Division is well-known to Indianhead members, but not-so-well known is the role of the support personnel.

Take, for instance, the role of the 702nd Ordnance Battalion. This unsung workhorse unit literally keeps 'em rolling for the 2nd Division.

'Amazed'

While gathering material for this article recently, this reporter was amazed at the number of jobs performed by the 702nd Ordnance and, particularly, Company A of that unit. The officers and men of Company A maintain all wheel and track vehicles plus armament for the Indianhead Division.

In one shed alone at Sand Hill, I counted four complete units from the M-48 tanks sitting on the floor awaiting maintenance work. These transmission and engine packs weigh over 8,000 pounds and must be removed from the tanks with a five-ton wrecker serving as a hoist.

In the Company A operations shack at the Ordnance Shop area, I found Sergeant First Class Nazan Wrench huddled over production reports sent to his office from all sections of Company A.

Conferring with Sergeant Wrench was the Operations Officer, a lean, young officer, Lieutenant Dwight L. Doane, of Atlanta, Georgia. Together, Lieutenant Doane and Sergeant Wrench maintain a close control on production and workloads for the Ordnance unit.

Sergeant Wrench explained some of the finer details of his job to me. "Basically," he said, "we handle here at the 702nd Ordnance all third echelon repair work for the division units."

Query

He answered my query as to the definition of "third echelon" by saying this was the field maintenance echelon of repair. Here such jobs as replacing major assemblies and rebuilding items such as fuel systems and electrical circuits are handled for the units.

To accomplish this overwhelming workload, Sergeant Wrench has six sections which divide the incoming maintenance problems. So, when the 23rd Infantry has a two-and-a-half ton truck needing a new transmission, the job would be handled through Sergeant Wrench's office as follows:

The 23rd would turn in first the paperwork describing the malfunction of the vehicle. Coming through channels this paperwork would go through Sergeant Wrench directly to the section of Company A which handles the vehicles for the 23rd.

In this case, the man receiving the paperwork would be Staff Sergeant Kinzel L. Harmon, since his section supports the 23rd Infantry. Sergeant Harmon with 10 years of his over 21 years of military service spent in ordance work, capably supervises the work of ten men. Specialists within Sergeant Harmon's section will next receive the disabled vehicle and conduct an immediate shake-down inspection to determine the work needed to make the truck operational.

In this inspection Sergeant Harmon will want to know, also, if his section can handle the work needed or if the truck will have to be turned over to Company B of the 702nd for complicated repair or for shipment to Post Ordnance or a major ordnance depot.

Transmission

Since it is a new transmission that is needed, Sergeant Harmon will draw up the necessary paperwork to obtain the part and commence work on the vehicle. He forwards the inspection findings to Sergeant Wrench at Operations.

Sergeant Wrench maintains a huge production control board on which he keeps a constant check on vehicles. Sergeant Harmon logs in the work needed, processes the parts' requisition and by means of a daily report to Sergeant Wrench keeps him posted on the work flow necessary to repair the truck.

Sergeant Wrench's master chart shows five sections titled: awaiting parts, awaiting shop, in shop, evacuation and awaiting pick up. By these five categories, a series of nails hold a multitude of yellow tags, one for each repair job. Noting my study of two red tags on the board, Sergeant Wrench explained:

"Those are top priority items. Here in the 2nd Division, all emergency vehicles are given top priority." I checked the two red tags and saw that one represented a five-ton wrecker and the other a quarter-ton ambulance.

"What's top priority mean to your men," I asked.

"Simply that no matter how great our workload or how pressed for time we may be at the moment a top priority job comes in, we will place that vehicle before anything else. This reduces the time in shop for the vehicle and gets it back to the parent unit fast."

Meanwhile, back at the direct support section of Sergeant Harmon, the deuce-and-a-half had gone into shop. There the specialists, some school-trained in wheeled vehicle repair and others simply trained from on-the-job application, had removed the transmission and prepared the mounts to receive the new part.

As soon as the new transmission had arrived Sergeant Harmon's men got it installed and adjusted. Their work was then inspected by another member of their team who gave the vehicle a complete inspection to assure that it was fully operational.

Ready

Sergeant Harmon completed the wrap-up paperwork and informed the operations team that the vehicle was ready for return to the unit. Sergeant Wrench completes a cost analysis on the work performed and files a maintenance record sheet on the vehicle in his files. In this manner, he can tell with each repair job the history of maintenance work performed by his men on a particular vehicle.

Sergeant Wrench, 46, is one of many support personnel within the 2nd Infantry Division who has been both a front line Soldier and a specialist in maintenance work. During World War II, he made four combat jumps while a member of the 82nd Airborne Division in Europe.

He brings a wealth of experience into his ordnance job with over 12 years spent in ordnance outfits. He came to the 2nd in 1958 following a tour of duty in Mannheim, Germany, with the 293th Ordnance Detachment.

He told me that when the units of the division take to the field as they have been doing lately, the section of his company that supports those units goes right along. With these sections goes a truck loaded with tools and small parts.

To service the units in the field with their larger repair problems, a five-ton wrecker is used to serve as a hoist. Supply of parts for the many trucks and tracked vehicles has been maintained, according to Sergeant Wrench, even though the ordnance workload and commitments have increased.

"One thing, though, is important to remember," commented the veteran non-com. "This is a team effort by our men. Our aim is to cut the in-shop-time down to a bare minimum to support the 2nd Division units with maximum effort."

I was impressed. These were not highly-paid civilian mechanics and engineers who operated in deluxe shops with the latest in tools and equipment.

Instead these were soldiers, whose duty placed them in support of the front-line troops, who learned their jobs from Army schools and on-the-job training, whose pay was adequate with their rank and time-in-service, and who functioned both in the shop as well as in the field with a dedication to their job and division that would be welcome to any Infantry commander.

He Came 1,000 Miles To Train for the Army

By 87th Inf PIO

When Private First Class Henry H. Hausen, a member of Company B, 87th Infantry, volunteered for induction, he had to travel more than 1,000 miles just to start his training. Since then, he has added thousands of more miles to his travels.

Private Hansen is a native of the Virgin Islands, which is without an Army Induction Center. After a 40-mile plane trip to nearby Puerto Rico, where he was sworn in, he went on to Miami and eventually to Fort Jackson, S. C., where he completed basic and individual training.

Soon after, he was on the road again, this time to the 8th Cavalry in Korea, where he was assigned to a 106 anti-tank section.

On his return from Korea, he took a quick trip to New York to marry his high school sweetheart from his own country. Soon after his return to the nearby 58th Infantry, Private Hansen learned he was one of the first to be affected by the President's decision to extend personnel due for discharge. Shortly thereafter, he joined the 87th and Company B where he is again with a 106 section.

69th Pltns Culminate Training

The 69th Armor recently completed its platoon test phase of training.

The high platoon in the battalion with a score of 635 out of a possible 700 points was the first platoon of Company C, commanded by Lt. Dan C. McCall.

The tank platoon test is composed of four parts and lasts a minimum of eight hours. The platoons are tested on movement, mobile defense, retrograde and offensive operations.

Two platoons are tested simultaneously, using the opposing force concept. This concept assures that each platoon will receive a well-rounded test of their ability to operate as an independent force.

The battalion is now participating in a battle group support mission with the individual companies being attached to the battle groups. In the immediate future, the companies will begin their three-day test, covering all aspects of small units operations.

87th's Co E 1st in Tests

Company E of the 87th Infantry, commanded by Captain Charles M. Rapp, recently took first place in the battle group weapons platoon tests.

The test is given after an extensive and comprehensive training period and is designed to show the platoon's combat proficiency. The platoon was high with an 89.8 per cent. Company C took second place with an 85.6 per cent.

This score gave Company E the honor of having achieved first place on both the rifle and the weapons platoon tests.

ERDLATOR IN OPERATION AT ENGINEERS BIVOUAC SITE
Draws Water From Stream, Pumps It Purified into Tanks

The Erdlator Makes Water--Not Coffee

No, things are not always what they seem.

An Erdlator is not a new kind of coffee maker. It's a new kind of "water maker" designed by the Engineer Research and Development Laboratories at Fort Belvoir, Va. In fact, that's where the name ERDLator originated.

Advantages

Of course, the Erdlator does not actually make water. It is the new Army water purification unit and has some advantages over conventional city water purification models. It will process muddy or colored water and produce completely palatable water that is pure and safe to drink.

The unit is truck-mounted and is operated by a trailer-mounted generator. This mobility gives a distinct advantage over the old method of water purification used by the Corps of Engineers.

The old system consisted of gasoline engine pumps that transferred the water from the stream or source into a 1,500 gallon settlement tank, where chemicals were added by hand to cause flocking (deletion of foreign matter). From there the water was filtered into another tank where chemicals were added to purify it. Next, the water was filtered into storage tanks for use.

The Erdlator is operated by buttons, which eliminate the long tedious process so that a three man crew can move into an area and produce purified water in two hours and maintain continuous operation.

The 2nd Engineer Battalion has the water supply responsibility for the 2nd Division and is authorized five Erdlators. A representative of the Engineer Regional Maintenance Office has instructed men from the battalion in the operation of the Erdlator. A non-commissioned officer-in-charge and five men each week bivouacked at the water point and furnished the water for the division during training.

Personnel of the 2nd Engineer Battalion recently completed a two-week training program directed at attaining a high degree of proficiency in operating the Erdlator.

Winning Streak Continues

9th, DivArty Fall Victim To 87th Infantry 'Nine'

By 87th Inf PIO

With chants of "do you believe?" and "oh yeah!" the spirited 87th Infantry nine continued to dominate the 2nd Division Flag Football tournament.

By winning two more games last week, the Conquerors brought their season record to 10-0, shutting out their opponents eight times.

6-0 Win

Just about clinching the Commanding General's Trophy, the 87th won their toughest game of the season last Thursday night with a hard-fought 3-0 win over the 9th Infantry, followed by a crushing 40-0 win over Division Artillery on Friday night.

The game against the 9th was primarily a defensive battle. Early in the first quarter, Major Lincoln intercepted a pass and carried the ball for about 50 yards for the only TD of the game.

The score stood at 6-0 until the final minutes of the game when the 87th pushed the 9th back into their own end zone for the final two points. The game was marked by three touchdown plays which were called back because of penalties against the 87th.

The Division Artillery team was determined to upset the 87th apple cart, but the Conqueror team, displaying a well-trained and spirited fighting unit, was hard to stop.

The scoring machine got started as soon as the 87th got possession. A quick pass to Lincoln, good for about 40 yards, was followed by a touchdown pass from quarterback Fred Wilcox to Chester Berroud. Wilcox intercepted a pass and turned it into another touchdown with a pass to Frank Cain.

With a welcomed light drizzle coming down, the 87th really poured it on in the second half. The roof caved in on the Division Artillery team as Wilcox and 87th Coach Robert C. Lowry, alternating at quarterback, hit Lincoln and Cain for one pass after another until the score reached its final proportions.

Scheduled this week are games against the 1st and 11th Infantries, both strong and determined to topple the unbeaten Conquerors from Kelley Hill.

CWO Robinson Ends 3 Decades

By Clay Lacy

"We wouldn't trade or take back a minute of any of it," said Mrs. Edward N. Robinson as she reflected on her husband's career in the U. S. Army.

Chief Warrant Officer (W-4) Robinson retired at the end of October after completing three decades of service in the military. Retiring after this lengthy period, the stocky Army officer still recalls his early service in the height of the depression that swept the United States in the early 1930s.

"I got into the swing of Army life quickly," commented CWO Robinson as he chatted with this reporter at his home at 217 Munson Drive in Benning Hills. "For one thing, I was assigned to Battery B of the 3rd Field Artillery and that outfit was still horsedrawn. Terms such as the caisson and the limber taught us youngsters the items used by the artillery to tote their weapons, the French 75s."

In 1937, Mr. Robinson tasted his first overseas duty upon being assigned to Schofield Barracks. While the world heard the distant rumbling of the war machine from Japan and Germany, he was part of the slow buildup in Hawaii.

In the early part of 1939 he received orders to Fort Knox, Ky., and the 7th Cavalry Brigade. This unit was to become the forerunner of the present day 1st Armored Division. World War II saw Mr. Robinson serving in North Africa and Europe with the 17th Field Artillery.

Jumping off from England, his unit hit North Africa and moved steadily through the desert fighting into Sicily, Italy, Southern France and on into Germany. At war's end Mr. Robinson was in the Bavarian capital of Munich, Germany.

For his service in Europe during World War II, Mr. Robinson was awarded the Bronze Star Medal for Meritorious Service.

Returning to the United States in 1946, CWO Robinson, then a first sergeant, reenlisted at Fort Jackson, S.C. He attended a four-month special course at Fort Sill, Okla., for training as an instructor for Civilian Components of the Army.

Following this course, he was assigned for three years as an instructor and adviser with the Mississippi National Guard with headquarters at Greenville, Miss. He traveled throughout the state, instructing units of the 31st Infantry Division Artillery. Just prior to completing this tour, he received his warrant commission in the personnel and administration field.

Fort Benning was his next post, where he served as a unit administrator with the 3rd Infantry Division. During 1950 he was part of the amphibious maneuvers staged at Vieques Island, off Puerto Rico, which lasted three months.

In late July of 1950, Korea beckoned. His unit replaced the 82nd Field Artillery at Seoul and he saw six campaigns during the Korean Conflict. Serving initially with the 9th Field Artillery, he later joined the 3rd Division's Medical Battalion.

A Fort Rucker, Ala., assignment was next for Mr. Robinson with the 47th Infantry Division's 164th Infantry Regiment as personnel officer. Returning to Fort Benning in 1954, he was assigned as the personnel officer with the 3rd Division's 30th Infantry.

A year later he became a member of the Personnel Management Team until an overseas assignment sent him to France in 1956. Coming from there to the 2nd Division in 1959 he served initially with the 11th Infantry and then the 23rd. He has been the personnel officer with the 23rd from 1959 until his retirement.

On Tuesday of this week, Mr. and Mrs. Robinson celebrated their 16th wedding anniversary.

Defensive Scrap Seen In 11th Infantry Victory

By 11th Inf. PIO

Overcoming the rains of last Friday night, the 11th Infantry turned back the 9th Infantry, 12-6, to give them a 7-3 season record. It was the 9th who gave the Wanderers their first defeat of the season after four straight wins.

Both teams, battling desperately to overcome each other's defense as well as the rain, fought to a 0-0 first half stalemate.

Fighting for that first TD, the 11th finally broke the ice early in the third quarter on a pass from halfback Jim Gordon to Bill Tyus. Gordon rolled out to the right behind good protection and threw 30 yards to Tyus deep behind the secondary for the score.

The 9th spelled a run through the center for the extra point.

It wasn't until the final period that the 9th was able to register their only touchdown of the game. The PAT was foiled as the 11th tigthened their defense.

Good running by halfbacks Dick Holmes and Gordon put the 11th into the 9th's territory to set up their second tally. The 11th sighted pay dirt with a pass from quarterback Bill Lochow, who nailed Holmes in the end zone for six.

The point after was successful as Lochow rolled to the right on an option and again found Holmes clear for the toss.

Doughboys Take Hellcats' Hide in 56-0 Workout

Night Home Game Saw Benning Score Four TD's in First Quarter

By Pfc Del Berghoefer

The Doughboys struck for four first quarter touchdowns and rolled on to rout the Memphis Naval Air Station Hellcats with a 56-point barrage, holding the seamen scoreless in a game played here last Saturday.

The Hellcats, held to minus 30 yards rushing in the second half, penetrated into Benning territory only once in the game, driving to the 25-yard line before losing the ball on downs.

The Doughboys' touchdown parade was led by halfback Northern Brown who scored three. His first, a 30-yard jaunt, opened the scoring and was set up by the recovery of a Memphis fumble by guard Frank Farella on the Memphis 30. The point after touchdown was kicked by Henry Derleth, who booted all eight PAT's.

The Doughboys added three more TD's in the last five minutes of the first quarter on only nine scrimmage plays.

Quarterback Charles Haile scored on a two-yard plunge after the Doughboys had taken a punt on the Memphis 28, moving to the top in three plays. Derleth added his second and PAT.

Benning needed only one play for its third TD. Cleveland Brown galloped 59 yards to score after the Doughboys had taken the ball from Memphis on a pass interception on their own 41. Derleth again converted.

Two minutes later Benning took a Hellcat punt on the midfield stripe and tallied again in four plays. Two passes netted 30 yards. An 18-yard draw play by fullback Eugene Holland moved the ball to the two where Len Goodwin carried over. Another Derleth kick pushed the score to 28-0 as the first quarter ended.

With the second and third teams playing in the second quarter, Fort Benning scored only once, an eight-yard burst by Northern Brown. The score was set up by the game's longest run, a 67-yard punt return by halfback Bob Kelly who was caught from behind on the Hellcats' eight. Derleth's conversion made it 35-0.

Opening the second half, the Doughboys marched 69 yards on eight plays, with fullback Cliff Eddy going over from the two. Derleth again converted the PAT.

Early in the final stanza Benning scored again, moving 61 yards in 10 plays. Northern Brown scored his third TD on a one-yard plunge. The automatic Derleth split the uprights for the seventh time.

A blocked Memphis punt late in the final quarter set up the final Doughboy score. The Doughboy reserves forced Memphis to punt deep in its own territory but the kick was blocked and recovered by Doughboy end Isaac McClanahan on the Memphis one. Fullback Gerald Wilson lugged the ball over for Benning's eighth and final TD. Derleth again converted, making the final score 56-0.

The Doughboy reserve played extensively throughout the game as coach Leaton Cofield used all available players in the lopsided victory. The second and third stringers made a fine showing.

Memphis could only gain 60 rushing yards in the game. In the second half they were thrown for losses totaling 30 yards, making their net yardage rushing only 30 yards.

The Hellcats, unable to move on the ground, took to the airlanes but were stymied there also. Of 23 pass attempts they completed only four for 45 yards and lost two on interceptions.

Cleveland Brown was the leading ground gainer for Benning picking up 105 yards on six carries for an average of slightly more than 17 yards per carry. Northern Brown's 75 yards in seven carries gave him more than a 10-yard average per try.

The revitalized Doughboys, who dropped their first three games of the season, have outscored their last four opponents 116 to 25 and led them in rush-

DEER OPENER ATTRACTS MANY

The opening of deer season on post during the past week brought an unexpected mass of hunters into the woods before the crack of dawn.

Opening day found the hunters concentrated into relatively few open areas. However, during the first weekend nearly all areas were open and hunters took to the woods seeking their favorite spot with eye and ears peeled for the alert whitetail.

Although many hunters report seeing deer, the kill reported at the Fish and Game office indicates 10 bucks taken on post during the first 5 days of the season. Three were spike bucks, one 4 points, two 7 pointers and two 8 point bucks. Most of these deer were taken from the lower Jamestown Road area.

FIRES BURN VAST AREAS

During the week prior to the opening of hunting season numerous fires blazed throughout the reservation. Vast areas in and around the impact areas south of 1st Division road have burned over, destroying considerable game habitat. Unlike a control burn, these fires burned with such intensity that they have eliminated essentially all of the lesser vegetation and in some instances damaged a considerable volume of both young and mature timber.

'Tankers' Down 'Gunners', 27-0

By Sfc Bismarck Stith

The "Tankers" of the YAC Doughboy's league shut out the "Gunners" 27-0, at Sightseeing Field last week. The rough and hard running Tankers racked up 13 points in the first half and came back 14 more points in the last half to remain the undefeated team in their league.

Tanker's quarterback, Mike Bunger accounted for two touch downs for a total of 51 yards, a 21 yard sprint around right end and 30 yards on a single reverse play. Other six pointers were run by left halfback, Dennie Dodd and Rodney Cartright, also a half-back for the Tankers, picked off a pass by quarterback Mike Bunger and went 20 yards for six points.

Cartright was voted the outstanding player by coach Harold Sullivan for his defensive play in rushing through the Gunners line.

Sonnie Martin, Billy "Mike" Darden, David Roper contributed one PAT each to guide the Tankers to their fifth victory.

In the Intermed league, the first place Eagles and third place Giants ended in a deadlock 6-6. The teams failed to score the extra points. Both teams defensive play was outstanding throughout the game.

The Eagles long touchdown was a hand-off to left halfback, Roberto Paz, from quarterback Trooper Taeeter. Taeeter passed to Bil Salmon for PAT but failed to make the grade.

The Packers still hold the second place department in the Intermed league. The Packers handed the last place Cardinals their fourth setback by a 29-19 victory. Quarterback Joe Harmon engineered his team to their second win by hurling three touchdowns passes for a total of 55 yards and went over the middle for a six pointer. Right end Joe Freeman pulled down an aerial for 35 yards; left end Frank Davis snatched a 5 yard pass and left tackle, Jim Lau picked off a 15 yard pass, all went the distance for a total of 18 points. Sidney Herbert was credited for the two PATs with handoffs from quarterback Joe Harmon.

It's Water That Counts Says Survival Expert

Bread, as the old saying goes, is the staff of life, but an Air Force nutritionist thinks its importance to man's survival under emergency conditions is less than is generally believed.

Says Lt. Col. Albert A. Taylor, "If he has enough water, a man can live 30 days or more without food. But without water, in a hot desert he will not last a day. In cooler climates he will last only a little longer. Water is far more vital to survival than food."

The average man, says the colonel, requires somewhere between 2,500 and 3,000 calories of food a day, while a woman needs somewhat less. "But," he adds, "there is no set minimum requirement that would apply to everybody."

Col. Taylor sees "nothing particularly remarkable" in the case of the British pilot who recently lived for four days in the desert solely on snails.

"Gen. Nathan Twining and a crew of 14 were forced to ditch in the Pacific during WWII," he points out. "They climbed aboard a pair of inflatable liferafts with only one can of sardines, a chocolate bar and two cans of water. Yet they easily survived for six days until their rescue by a naval vessel."

As a remarkable case of survival the colonel cites the case of Poor Lim, a Chinese who drifted 113 days on a raft. "He got drinking water from rain, and he was so expert at foraging in the sea—catching fish and sea birds — that when he was rescued he had apparently lost no weight.

AT THE Movies

THE SECOND TIME AROUND is a bouncing outdoor comedy starring Debbie Reynolds, Steve Forest, Andy Griffith and Juliet Prowse. Leaving the formal world of New York, a young widow starts a new life in the gambling and sunsmoke West of 1911. Proving she can take care of herself in any situation, she tames the West, using unique and riotous methods.

THE MISFITS is a mature movie starring Marilyn Monroe, Clark Gable and Montgomery Clift. Gable was never better nor Marilyn more alluring than in this excitingly modern story of three rawboned, hard-living cowboys who follow the rodeo trail, and a recent Reno divorcee who is at loose ends with herself and with the world.

WHO WAS THAT LADY stars Tony Curtis, Dean Martin and Janet Leigh. When his wife Janet walks in on him while he is being kissed by a pretty student, chemistry professor Tony Curtis tries to get off the hook via a fantastic fable concocted by their friend, TV writer Dean Martin. He claims they are undercover FBI men.

THE WONDERS OF ALADDIN is a movie for the whole family and stars Donald O'Connor. It's sheer delight . . . as enchanting and captivating a motion picture as the screen has ever conjured up. BOOKS in REVIEW

THE KENNEDY CIRCLE by David Brinkley. (Luce, 1961)

Here, in profile, is the new circle of men who run our national government under President John Fitzgerald Kennedy. They are a new breed, with new ideas. They were handpicked by the new President, for reasons that will be apparent when you read this book.

THE BATTLE OF NEW ORLEANS by Donald Chidsey. (Crown, 1961)

The war started in an odd way. In June of 1812 the United States had declared war on Great Britain, charging that there were over 6,000 instances of illegal impressment of American sailors by the British Navy. If this was an honest count, there were more American sailors in the British Navy than in the navy of the United States.

THE ROAD TO THE SNAIL by William P. McGivern. (Dodd, 1961)

Here is a warm and engaging novel about the people who live in a little Spanish town. Some of them are wise and some are incredible foolish, but few are too blind to recognize love or the saving grace of a miracle. The Snail, is an enchanting villa high on a Spanish hill.

New Books At The Library

MCGIVERN — The Road to the Snail (F)

KEMAL—Memed My Hawk (F)

STOUT — Five of a Kind (F)

STEINBECK — The Winter of Our Discontent (F)

HANLEY — The Journey Homeward (F)

FIVE OF A KIND by Rex Stout. (Viking, 1961)

The five ventures of crime contained in this novel are, In The Best Families, Door To Death, Man Alive, Omit Flowers, and One Threesome. The third Nero Wolf omnibus, the fat detective of Rex Stout's novels, towers over his rivals in one respect: he is a superman who talks like a superman.

MEMED MY HAWK by Yashar Kemal. (Pantheon, 1961)

This stirring epic of modern Turkey — a tempestuous, romantic tale of rebellion against a still-existing feudal world—is told with the simplicity and awesome sweep of the great folk legends.

Awards based on those tests will be made as soon as possible after a receipt of Evaluation Data Cards.

Gen. Freeman, Ex-Commander Makes Post Visit

Lt. Gen. Paul L. Freeman, Jr., deputy commanding general for Reserve Forces of the Continental Army Command and former commandant of The Infantry School, arrived on post Saturday for a four-day visit.

While at the post, Gen. Freeman visited the International Shooting Championship Matches and the awards presentations ceremonies Monday.

Accompanying Gen. Freeman were Lt. Col. E. I. Peterson of the Office of the Deputy Commanding General for Reserve Forces, and Capt. J. K. Gibler, aide-de-camp to Gen. Freeman.

The general departed the post Tuesday.

Sport Jumps Are New But Not the Parachute

The parachute has long ceased to be a novelty; in the air age it is not only standard military equipment but the growing popularity of skydiving has put it in the sporting goods category.

How old, actually, is the parachute? Even the most ardent devotees of skydiving at Ft. Bragg, N. C., and other airborne installations might be surprised to know that, if a Chinese historian can be believed, man made his first recorded jump some 4,000 years ago.

The historian was Se-ma Ts'ien and the jumper was Emperor Shun of China who lived about 2200 B.C. The story goes that Shun's wicked father made his young son climb to the top of a granary and then set it afire. The boy held up two big, round reed hats and leaped. The hats brought him safely to the ground.

More like the parachute we know today was Leonardo da Vinci's 16th century sketch of a device resembling a four-sided tent. With it, wrote Leonardo, a man "would be able to let himself fall from any great height without danger."

The late 18th century saw increasing experimentation with the parachute in France. Dr. Sebastien Lenormand first jumped from a treetop in 1783, holding a pair of parasols. He followed this by jumping from a tower, using a conical chute 14 feet in diameter.

Another Frenchman, Jean-Pierre Blanchard, in 1785, went up in a balloon and dropped a dog in a silk parachute. It landed safely.

But the age of modern parachuting really opened in 1797 when Andre-Jacques Garnerin jumped 2,000 feet from a balloon over Paris. The swaying of his chute made him airsick; he later corrected this by cutting a hole in the top similar to the vent used in chutes today.

Invention of the airplane of course, accelerated parajumping, although at first some Doubting Thomases wondered if man could survive bailing out at the "terrific speed" of 30 m.p.h. Their fears were dispelled as early as 1911, however, when Grant Morton jumped from a plane at Venice, Calif., carrying the canopy of his chute under his arm and releasing it in mid-air.

Girl Scouts At Weekend Campout

Troop Number 138, Fort Benning Girl Scouts, held a campout last weekend at the post's Camp Hideaway.

The 21 members of the troop were working for credit toward First and Second Class Tenderfoot Badges, which includes knowledge of following trails, fire building, nature and games.

The girls were supervised by Mrs. James Liggett of Fort Benning, troop leader.

General Surles Pins Blue Day Guidon Ribbon

A blue streamer, signifying senior status, was added to 50th Officer Candidate Company, 5th Student Battalion. The Student Brigade's guidon by Brig. Gen. Alexander D. Surles, Assistant Commandant of The Infantry School, during the "Blue Day" exercises held recently at Sightseeing Field.

Commander of Troops, O-C 5th Student Battalion commander, and Capt. William L. Webster, 50th O-C Company commander.

Concluding the Blue Day exercises, the senior cadets returned to their billeting areas, where a reception was held at the company mess hall. Later that evening the seniors with their ladies attended a dinner and dance at the Gold Bar Club.

8-Cent Stamp Will Honor Gen. John Pershing

A new eight-cent stamp honoring Gen. of the Armies John J. Pershing will be issued by the Post Office Department on Nov. 17.

The Pershing design will eventually replace the eight-cent Statue of Liberty design which at present also appears on regular three-cent and eleven-cent denominations.

Pershing's portrait on the stamp shows him in full uniform with only four stars on his shoulder. As a General of the Armies—the only American soldier ever to bear that title—the leader of the WWI American Expeditionary Force was entitled to wear five stars, but he never did.

Swim Classes Begin on Post

Beginners swimming instruction for adults and children started Monday at the Briant Wells Field House swimming pool.

Classes are from 6 to 8 p.m. Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, and are open to all post personnel, including civilian employees and dependents.

Further information may be obtained by calling LI 5-5760.

Lt. Breaks Record for Mile Run in PT Exams

Second Lt. Ardean V. Wilkinson, presently attending Infantry Officer Orientation Course Class No. 7, 2d Student Battalion, The Student Brigade, recently, during the physical training test examination, broke the mile event record by a full 46 seconds.

The former mile event record of 6 minutes and 18 seconds was held by 2d Lt. Anthony P. Fellner. It was during this mile event that Lt. Wilkinson turned in a time of 5 minutes and 32 seconds.

The physical testing phase of Lt. Wilkinson's training is part of a program, which enables the orientation detachments to obtain the necessary information to evaluate the fitness and capabilities of the newly commissioned officers attending the basic Infantry course of instruction at The Student Brigade.

WANT ADS are for EVERYBODY

When Mother and Daddy start talking about family vacation plans, I keep quiet and listen. That's how I know all about how they found a summer place where we can have all this fun. I heard them talking when they decided to run a want ad in the paper saying we wanted to rent a summer cottage. Dad said he used want ads for lots of other things so why not try it. It worked and here we are. So I believe it when they say "Want Ads are for Everybody." Even little kids like me can have lots of vacation fun, because Mother and Daddy are smart and use Want Ads.

Jordanian Army Officer Makes Three Day Tour

Col. Najib Yacoub Ayoub, commander of the 2nd Signal Regiment of the Jordanian Army, began a three-day tour of instructional facilities and techniques at The Infantry School at Fort Benning Monday.

Col. Ayoub, accompanied by Lt. Col. Mohammed Ahmad Shehadeh, commander of the 14th Infantry Regiment, arrived at Muscogee Airport Sunday afternoon.

Their itinerary included a stop at the International Shooting Matches being held on post and a visit with Brig. Gen. A. D. Surles Jr., assistant commandant of The Infantry School.

The Allied officers departed Muscogee Airport yesterday morning.

Project officer for the visit was 2nd Lt. Lawrence R. Woodland.

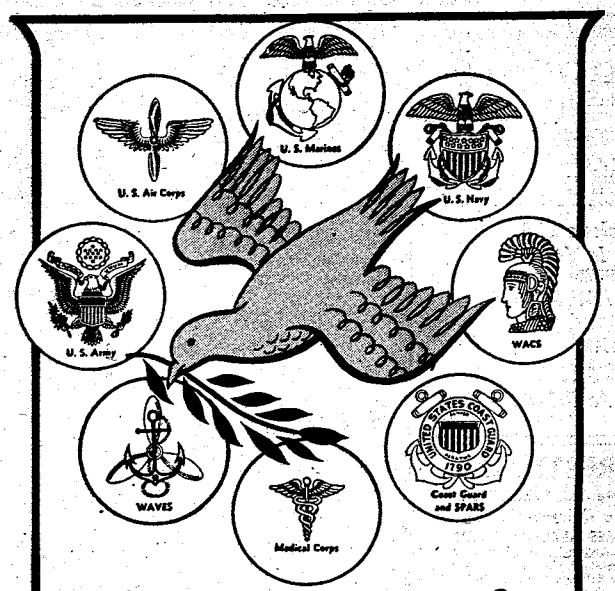
Certain Medical Officers Exempt In Army Recall

Certain Army Medical, Dental and Veterinary Corps officers of the Ready Reserve are being excused from recall to active duty, according to the Department of Defense.

Not subject to call-up are those officers in these fields who have previously completed more than 21 months of active service and are not currently participating members of Reserve or National Guard units.

The 21 months does not include periods spent in student programs prior to receipt of professional degrees nor does it include time spent in intern training.

Affected officers who entered service since Sept. 1, 1961 may request relief from active duty if they so desire. Also, those currently under orders who have not yet entered on active duty may request revocation of their orders.



This policy does not excuse those who were called or may be called as regularly assigned members of a Reserve or National Guard organization, participating in a pay status.

According to DOD, the policy change does not reflect a reduction in Army requirements for MC, DC and VC officers, but is based on a decision to obtain unit filler personnel through the use of individuals without prior service and available through the Selective Service System.

Military Might Spirals Upward

Preliminary figures for September 1961 show that 2,553,697 Americans were in the uniforms of the various Armed Forces as of Sept. 30.

The figures, which represent full time military personnel, both regulars and reserves on continuous active duty, along with cadets at West Point and the Air Force Academy and midshipmen at Annapolis, indicate an increase of 39,794 over the Aug. 30 total.

We salute all those who served Freedom's Cause

Veterans Day, 1960 is set aside as a reminder that the "battle" for freedom and peace is never ending; that we must always be vigilant in its couse. We pay tribute today to all of the brave men and women, living and dead, who honorably served our country and helped preserve the freedom and democracy we all enjoy today.

No Post Holiday Fatality

Motorists among Infantry Center personnel came through the Veterans' day weekend without a traffic fatality, injury or accident of even a minor nature, according to Andrew J. Baldwin, deputy post safety director.

"Our Fort Benning drivers are now entering the most dangerous period of the traffic year," he said, "and are even now acutely aware of the road hazards which will increase as Christmas and New Year's seasons approach."

He attributed the veterans' Day record to the continued safety program conducted on post at all levels of command, but added the program would still pick up in tempo in post efforts to remain on the credit side of the Christmas - New Year's traffic ledger.

'Strong America Can Remain Free'

Lt. Gen. Baker AUSA Speaker

Lt. Gen. (ret.) Milton G. Baker, president of the Association of the United States Army, told members and guests of the Columbus-Phenix City-Fort Benning chapter at a dinner meeting held in Briant Wells Field House last week, that only a strong America can remain free and the Army is an integral part of the cornerstone of our strength.

"As a result of modern nuclear war the Nation must place more reliance on military leaders and the defense establishment. The threat must be appraised on a military basis."

Gen. Baker, who is superintendent of the Valley Forge Military Academy, Wayne, Pa., said, "Modern strategic analysis has given content to two words, competency, relating to military strength, and credibility, the extent others believe that military strength will be used.

Noting that historically the United States is defensive-minded he said, "probably no country believes the United States will use its strength aggressively.

"While this is a disadvantage at the bargaining table President Kennedy's firm stand against overt acts should have given weight to our credibility.

"The equal probability is that no country in the world believes that Russia would hesitate for one minute to use the nuclear bomb, if it could do so without inviting self-destruction.

"Furthermore, Khrushchev, even without the threat of a bomb, has convinced a

U. S. Army Marksmen Win Two, Drop Third Match as Meet Closes

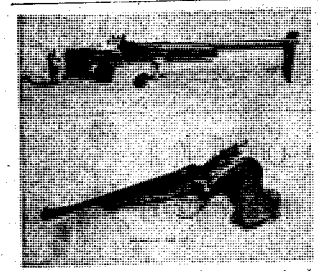
Army marksmen won two and lost the third of the last three national championships by a single point in U.S. International Shooting Championships.

Capt. Daniel B. Fuckel won the 300 - meter International free rifle title while Army Advanced Marksmanship Unit teammate Sfc William B. Blankenship was annexing the International center fire pistol crown. The International clay target event was snatched by a civilian, Dr. Gordon C. McLaughlin of Terre Haute, Ind.

The Indiana pediatrician went into the last 25-bird string of the 300-target match tied with Army SMaj. Harold A. Grewe, at 268X300 and smashed all 25 against the 24X25 broken by Sgt. Grewe for a trophy winning 293X300.

Grewe's 293 was followed by the 288X300 of 2nd Lt. Gordon D. Horner, USAAMU. Air Force Major Frank Knapp placed fourth with 288 after a shoot-off with Lt. Horner.

High Marine honors were taken by Gunnery Sgt. William D. Abbott with 285. Top Navy gun was Seaman Kenneth D. Sedlecky with 282.



Capt. Puckel posted a total of 3,425 out of 3,600 points to win the 300-meter free rifle event after firing a third-stage 1,138 out of 1,200 points. Cpl. Gary L. Anderson, AAMU, took second slot with 3,416 followed by 1st Lt. Tommy G Pool, with 3,369.

High Marine was Col. (Reserve) Emmett O. Swanson, with 3,273. High Air Force entry was 1st Lt. John Bertva, with 3,212, and T. Y. Wu fired first civilian total of 3,173.

Second to Sgt. Blankenship in the center fire pistol event was Marine Corps Capt. William B. McMillan, with 1,766. Third was Army Sfc Samuel W. Hunter, with 1,765.

High Air Force score was the 1,763 of Capt. Franklin Green of Lackland Air Force Base. High Navy tally was the 1,747 of TM1 (Torpedoman First Class) Gasper F. Defino. Civilian John R. Hurst of Los Angeles, shot out 1,726 to take

Heavy Traffic Expected on 103 During Second Division Training

Military foot and vehicular traffic through the Fort Benning reservation on State Highway 103 (Buena Vista Rd.) will be unusually heavy from 8 a.m. Sunday to noon Wednesday during training maneuvers of the 2nd Infantry Division, post officials have announced.

Major Gen. Ben Harrell, post commander, and state and county officials have made arrangements to maintain a safe and orderly flow of civilian traffic during the four days.

Georgia State Highway officials will erect temporary warning signs along the route. Military guards will be posted on a round-the-clock basis to caution motorists of military vehicle movements.

Gen. Harrell has stressed that the highway will not be completely closed during the maneuvers as is normally done in the case of large-scale dem-

Area Closures

All training areas on post, with few exceptions, will be closed to hunting, fishing and other recreation from noon, tomorrow, until midnight, Wednesday.

All post personnel are reminded that Range Control Section (545-2222) must be contacted before entering any area for such purposes.

Student Brigade Sergeant Saves Lives of Two Girls

An Army sergeant recently saved two young daughters of a post soldier from drowning in King's Pond on the reservation.

SSgt. William A. Thomas was fishing in the pond when he saw a station wagon with two children in it start rolling downhill toward the water some 50 yards away.

Dropping his fishing pole, Thomas, an instructor in advanced airborne techniques assigned to the 41st Company, Fourth Student Battalion, The Student Brigade, ran to the car and tried to stop it by holding it back, but managed to only slow it down.

Inside the car were the daughters of SP-5 and Mrs. Jack W. McDonnell, Tina Marie, 4, and Susan, 2. When the station wagon was only 15 yards from the water, Thomas number of the neutrals that the Red Army is a formidible offensive force," and he said, "here again most of them believe he would utilize it if he could get away without precipitating a total war."

Gen. Baker added that Khrushchev has built a myth of invincibility around the Red Army by simply parading it up and down Red Square past Lenin's tomb.

"There is no gainsaying the fact that the Red Army fought bravely against the Nazis," he said, "but the question which will always be arguable is could it have survived against Hitler without the aid of the United States, England, and to a lesser degree, France."

"I think that you will agree that on balance, the answer is no," Gen. Baker said.

Gen. Baker said that the ability and loyalty of the present Red Army had never been tested except in the suppression of the Hungarian revolt and the possible surreptitious use of some units in the Korean conflict. He added that the Red Army had been used offensively only two times, first against the Finns where it sustained unbelievable losses, and when it marched into Poland being attacked by Hitler from the west.

The AUSA president told the group that this myth of the Red Army being an offensive army has enabled Khrushchev to use it as a psychological weapon to gain objectives without committing a division to combat.

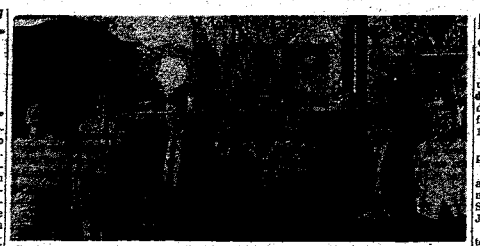
"He has been content to use it as a show of force while pulling the strings of his puppets to manufacture crises in various parts of the world, which have forced us to redeploy our armed forces to meet these threats," he said.

Gen. Baker said that Khrushchev's strategy may have been too clever in noting that satellites in the Far East are displaying an independence of the Kremlin. The rift between Moscow and Peiping as displayed at the 22nd Congress of the Communist Party in October may force Khrushchev to concentrate his attentions on internal issues within the Communist empire in the not too distant future, he added.

"Albania's unprecedented scathing attack on his uncomplimentary reference to that country may indicate that his difficulties are more widespread than we had anticipated," Gen. Baker said.

"It would be too sanguine to expect that the Communist block is crumbling, but the Soviet Army may have to be employed to hold it together by some means other than merely marching in Red Square. Its combat efficiency may yet be tested within the boundaries of the Communist Empire."

"The Cold War has sharpened our sense of readiness, and we have never been better prepared both militarily and psychologically. Our Army is better educated, trained, equipped than any time in history," Gen. Baker said.



"Economics as well as warheads are involved," he told the group, adding that, "ours can stand the strain of preparedness, but all must avoid unnecessary spending.

"The Army is deserving of your support," Gen. Baker told the group in closing, "and a bigger and better Army means a greater and better America."

Gen. Baker was introduced to the members and guests by Mr. Maynard R. Ashworth, a member of the board of directors of the Columbus-Phenix City-Fort Benning Chapter of the AUSA. Mr. William J. Schloth, local president, presided at the meeting.

Lt. Gen. Daley Slated to Speak

Lt. Gen. John P. Daley, deputy commanding general for development, CONARC, will address career classes at The Infantry School this morning at 10 a.m. in Theater I.

He arrived on post at 4:45 p.m. yesterday.

Plans for Gen. Daley include a visit to the assistant commandant of The Infantry School, Brig. Gen. A. D. Surles, Jr.

At noon today, he will attend an official luncheon in honor of the commanding general of the Army of Peru, Major Gen. Nicholas Lindley Lopez, who is visiting the post Nov. 16 to 18. Major Gen. Ben Harrell, commandant of The Infantry School, will be host at the luncheon.

Lt. Meets Deer No, Not a Dear, Just Plain Deer

Lieutenant Joseph S. Gilch, presently attending Infantry Officer Orientation Course, Class 7, 2d Student Battalion, The Student Brigade, recently had a surprising experience while on practical ground navigation exercises.

Lt. Gilch, like most new soldiers introduced to the post wilderness, was wary and watchful during the class exercises, half expecting a water moccasin or rattlesnake to appear out of every nook and cranny of the underbrush. However, he didn't expect to be charged by a spikehorn deer.

The deer narrowly missed the startled newly commissioned second lieutenant and dashed back into the dense wooded area encompassing the section with which the exercises were concerned.

After the close call with the deer, Lt. Gilch, more cautious than before, returned to the problem on hand; computing land azimuths and coordinates.

USAAMU Will Host 200 Visitors Tuesday

BY S-SGT. LEE LACOMBE

The Army's Advanced Marksmanship Unit will be host next Tuesday afternoon to 200 visitors from the Columbus area.

Members of the Civitan group, Optimists Club, Business and Professional Women's Club and Kiwanis will visit the AMU area and be given an orientation on the functions and mission of the CONARC unit.

A county fair demonstration has been arranged by Col. Robin Montgomery, CO, AMU, with four demonstration stations. Each orientation will last approximately 30 minutes.

The visitors will have an opportunity to see Army riflemen fire the National Match Course, Infantry Trophy Course and the Bolt Gun Course on the rifle range; at the pistol range they will be briefed on the national and international courses of fire and see a demonstration of the International Rapid Fire Course.

At the other two stations they will see how Trap and Skeet are fired and have a tour of the AMU Weapons Shop. Here they will be able to see standard and international weapons at close range and be given an explanation of how Army armorers prepare weapons for match competition.

The afternoon presentation will begin at 2:00 p.m. and continue until 5:00 p.m.

Local Radio and TV Stations Cited For Information Support

Radio station WGBA and television stations WRBL-TV and WTVM in Columbus have been awarded Department of the Army Outstanding Public Service Award plaques in recognition of outstanding support of the post public information and community relations programs during the year 1960.

Receiving the awards on behalf of their respective stations were Charles A. "Chuck" McClure, owner-manager of WGBA radio, Frank Ragsdale, general manager of WTVM and J. W. Woodruff, Jr., president and general manager of WRBL-TV.

Lt. Col. William C. Hacker, Infantry Center information officer, made the presentations.

Each year the Office of Chief of Information, Department of Army, presents the awards to radio and television stations who have been outstanding in telling the Army's story to the public. Awards are based upon nomination by public information officials.

The two TV stations were cited for contributing equally in support of the Army in 1960 and for giving generously of prime air time. They were equally responsive to special request for coverage and have greatly enhanced Army prestige in the Fort Benning area, states the letter of nominations for the two stations.

Radio station WGBA was nominated for the award for actively seeking to increase its news coverage to gain new listeners among military personnel and for the interest shown in Army problems. Station personnel have sought to give complete and impartial coverage of events for and about the military, according to the nomination.

During the conference, various departments of The School conducted sessions of their respective subjects. Wednesday afternoon was devoted to visits to departmental facilities and individual conferences with the departments.

A reception was held Tuesday in Salerno Mess.

Following a question period yesterday afternoon conducted by Brig. Gen. A. D. Surles, Jr., assistant commandant of The Infantry School, the conference closed with remarks by Gen. Harrell.

Telling About America Is Family Responsibility

We hear a lot today about the effect of the actions and attitudes of servicemen overseas, and how important they are in telling the true story of America to our foreign friends. That the serviceman is still our best ambassador is acknowledged without a doubt. But sometimes overlooked is the tremendous effect that wives and children also have in forming an opinion of what America is really like and what she actually stands for.

Each service wife, along with her husband, should take on this responsibility with seriousness and dedication. She, along with her spouse, is a walking, talking example of America. Everywhere she goes, whether it is just to the commissary or a sightseeing tour in a foreign land, she is on display.

The way she talks to people, the manners she displays, the dress she wears, are manifest in reflecting a true picture of the USA.

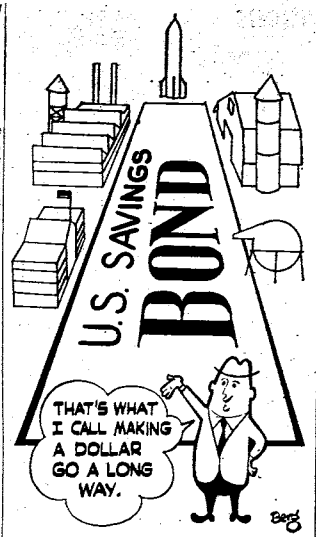
If the service family feels a lack of knowledge about some aspects of American life, it can be readily obtained in the service library or through information and education offices. There are hundreds of books and pamphlets that tell the American story and give background on the peaceful aim of our government.

Great enthusiasm is aroused when Americans take time to explain this great country to those who want to know. And there are hundreds of thousands overseas who do want to know.

President Kennedy has said that "winning the peace is a lonely battle." Yes it is. But it would be far less so if servicemen and their families would take time to integrate into the foreign communities where they find themselves stationed.

The President's Peace Corps was set up with this in mind. But the biggest "peace corps" is still the thousands of American servicemen and their families stationed overseas.

We are dedicated to preserving the peace. We should also be just as enthusiastically dedicated to preserving the correct image of our country to our international neighbors.



"As it applies to military effectiveness, the human factor is by long odds the most important. The effective use of the complex weapons and equipment of today's Armed Forces depends, of course, on human skills. But, beyond this, the degree to which skills become fully effective depends on the state of morale."

Chaplain's Corner

The Bridge of Prayer

Chaplain (Capt.) John D. Logan

When an English teacher left Japan, her students asked her to take a copybook to the students in America. One Japanese girl who had only recently become a Christian wrote, "Our friends in Christ, although we are far away from each other, our prayers are always with you and we are one in Christ." She thought of an unseen bridge that linked Christians together all over the world. In the same sense prayer is a bridge connecting God and man.

Here are the parts of the bridge that makes a prayer. To pray means:

Belonging to God whom we bless for our creation and protection;

Respecting and revering God by confessing our sins;

Interceding for God's help;

Dedicating ourselves to God by seeking to lead a better life;

Gratitude to God for the many blessings of life;

Eternal life through fellowship with God now.

You can build a bridge between yourself and God by learning to offer prayers that are more than just asking for something. Offer prayers using all parts of the bridge.

St. Paul urged the early Christians to pray without ceasing. Many of us forget to pray unless we have definite times to pray. Some of these times are immediately before we go to sleep, upon awakening in the morning, at meals, and the many occasions when we join with others in prayer in the church.

Think for a moment how much stronger you are when you pray. You are never alone. God is your constant companion, your truest friend. Let God help to fashion your life as you learn the meaning of prayer by becoming a serious pray-er.

Use the Bridge of Prayer which connects God and man.

Newspaper terms are a breed all of their own.

Many readers may have heard some of them on the late movies which always feature a rough, tough, hard bitten reporter who talks through the side of his mouth, around a dangling cigarette, as he tells his boss where to get off while uncorking his liquor bottle.

Typical sentence would be: "Run this dummy up to the news editor and ask him if he wants a galley proof or whether he wants the byline in agate or headline."

As a service to readers, The Bayonet is reprinting a list of definitions put out by reporters of the Louisville (Ky.) Courier-Journal. The names have been changed to protect the innocent. (The dark type sentences in parenthesis were added by myself.)

Pathfinders -- Not Glamorized But Specialized

STUDENTS . . . Sgt. Richard Smith, instructor, lends helping hand as Sp-4 Lander Pierce, in steel helmet, guides helicopter in for landing.

TAKE-OFF . . . Sp-4 Lander Pierce, right, signals helicopter pilot to take off as instructor, Sgt. Richard A. Smith, observes.

NOT GLAMORIZED BUT HIGHLY specialized is the way one pundit spoke of Pathfinder training. And the only post where this training is available is here at the Infantry School.

The small and inconspicuous group of Pathfinder instructors here are a prod lot and are every bit as "gung-ho" as any Airborne jumper or Ranger.

The overall responsibility for conducting the Pathfinder Course lies with the Airborne-Air Mobility Department. However, the Pathfinder Sub-Committee of the Department's Advanced Airborne Training Committee presents the majority of instruction.

Lt. Donald Bowman is the sub-committee chairman and his principal assistants are Lt. Donald A. Hare and Sfc Jesse Chambers. Lt. Bowman is directly responsible for the supervision of the course, adequacy of instruction, safety of the students and cadre, and review, revision, and preparation of the entire program of instruction.

The majority of the five week course is conducted within the Airborne-Air Mobility Department. In general terms, Pathfinder equipment and techniques comprise the most hours of the course.

During this phase of the training, some of the following subjects are taught: erection, operation, and employment of homing devices; aircraft equipment and inspection; aerial navigation; drop zone techniques, which includes day and night operations; helicopter and fixed wing landing zone operations; and the packing, rigging, jumping, and releasing of parachutist equipment containers.

The present TO&E for the Pathfinder detachment prescribes a 15-man team. In order to facilitate training, each Pathfinder class is organized into two teams, and each team has an Airborne Department cadre noncommissioned officer assigned to it.

These sergeants supervise all activities of their respective teams. They present some of the instruction the students receive and grade all field work that is conducted.

Sfc James M. Turberville and SSgt. Thomas C. Cochran, Jr., presently perform detachment sergeant duties. SSgt. Richard A. Smith and Sgt. Daniel J. Sobasky are assistant detachment sergeants.

One of the most important duties performed throughout the course is that of safety noncommissioned officer. This noncommissioned officer in each aircraft must ensure that the students comply with all safety procedures during loading, in-flight, and then jumping.

Although the students act in command positions, the safety personnel may override any decision, postpone jumping, or terminate a problem if, in their opinion, the safety of the students is impaired. Sgts. Travis T. Keeo and Benjamin J. Benavidez often act in this important role.

A 32-hour field exercise terminates the course. During this problem, the Pathfinder students make two parachute jumps, establish and operate landing and drop zones from Fort McClellan to Fort Rucker and back to Fort Benning, and review all previous instruction.

Seven parachute jumps are made throughout the course from three Army aircraft: Caribou, U-1A Otter, and the L-20.

Other departments of the Infantry School also present instruction to the Pathfinder students. For example: Engineer specialists from the Command and Staff Department teach proper use, characteristics, and techniques of employing demolitions; Communications Department personnel cover message preparation, security, authentication, and proper operation of radio sets.

The Special Subjects Department presents map and aerial photograph reading and nuclear weapons effects. One can readily see that even though the Airborne-Air Mobility Department presents a large percentage of the instruction; the Pathfinder course is by no means a one-sided effort and involves many of the other departments at USAIS.

When the student completes the vigorous Pathfinder training, he is fully qualified to join a tactical Pathfinder unit. Our current TO&E's specify one Pathfinder team to be organic to each aviation transportation battalion.

Gen. Surles'

Infantry School Report

There are, however, other missions that he may be called upon to perform. One is to assist in the training of unit Pathfinders, who are individuals with primary duties such as riflemen, radio operators, cooks, etc., in tactical units. As secondary duties, they must be capable of assisting Army aviation elements that may be supporting their unit. The Fort Benning - trained Pathfinder renders undeterminable assistance in adequately training these individuals.

We at the Infantry School can once again be proud of the job being done here. The small, inconspicuous and dedicated group of instructors that provide the Army its needed Pathfinder capability are a valuable asset to the United States Army.

SMOKE . . . Smoke is used to identify aircraft release point by instructors, Sgt. Howard Stevens and Sgt. Gaylord Thomas.

Ground Broken At Div Memorial

Veterans' Day Ceremony Marks Beginning of 'Wing' Construction

BY GEORGE HORD

Second Division Infantrymen of World War II and the Korean Conflict were honored Veterans' Day at the ground-breaking ceremony for the addition of two wings to the 2nd Division Memorial in Washington, D.C.

Participating in the ceremony for the addition of the two wings were Major General Charles H. Chase, commanding general of the 2nd Infantry Division, and Percy Terwilliger, of Kansas City, Mo., president of the Second "Indian- head" Division Association.

From Division

Accompanying General Chase to Washington for the ground - breaking ceremony were Captain Ishmael Pack, aide-de-camp, and Sergeant Major Robert L. Brown, 2nd Infantry Division sergeant major.

Principle speaker at the ceremony was General Clark L. Ruffner, United States representative to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization's Military Committee and Standing Group.

The ceremony was opened with an Advance of Colors by a color guard of non-commissioned officers from the division.

Composing the color guard were Sergeant First Class George A. Saualinas, Headquarters Battery, 12th Artillery; Sergeant First Class Nevel R. Marcum, Company B, 23rd Infantry; Staff Sergeant James Sosebee, Company E, 9th Infantry, and Staff Sergeant Howard W. Flora, Headquarters Company, 2nd Engineer Battalion.

Chaplain (Lieutenant Colonel) Harry P. Henderson, chaplain at Bolling Air Force Base, gave the invocation, followed by the United States Marine Corps Band's rendition of the National Anthem.

Honors Dead

General (Retired) G. C. Thomas, United States Marine Corps, laid a wreath honoring 2nd Division dead of three wars.

A musical interlude then followed. It consisted of the national anthems of the United Nations troops attached to the division in the Korean Conflict — France, The Netherlands and Thailand.

A tribute to the dead of World War II was paid by Major General (Retired) Ralph W. Zwicker, USA, who was then chief of staff of the division, while Major General (Retired) James C. Fry, USA, division commander in Korea from May, 1952, paid tribute to the dead of the Korean Conflict.

Topic of General Ruffner's address was "Our Dead of Three Wars." He commanded the division in Korea from January to August 1951.

Past Association President Alfred Crooks then presented the spade used to turn the first earth for the construction of the original monument.

Turning the first spade of earth was Mr. Terwilliger, who

Thanksgiving 4-Day Holiday

Second Division men coming in from the Field Training Exercise will have a four-day work-free period of rest.

Thanksgiving has been traditionally declared a holiday.

Friday, Saturday and Sunday will be non-training days.

Only those personnel necessary for fatigue and guard details and care of the sick will be required for duty, 2nd Division officials said.

2nd Div. FTX Starts Sunday

1st Full-Scale Maneuver Uses All Available Troops

The first division-size exercise of the 2nd Infantry Division's intensified combat training program begins Sunday.

All officers and men assigned to the division, less minimum unit security detachments, will leave the garrison area until Wednesday to practice unit and individual tactics in the field. The troops will return in time for the Thanksgiving holiday Thursday.

Non-Live Fire

Scheduled to commence Sunday, this exercise will be a controlled, non-live fire maneuver conducted against an "aggressor" enemy throughout the entire northern area of the Fort Benning reservation.

Division forces will be under the command of Major General Charles H. Chase, division commander. Exercise director will be Brigadier General Royal Reynolds, Jr., the assistant division commander.

Controllers, with a few exceptions, will be provided by The Infantry Center, allowing for the greatest possible number of men assigned to the division to take part in the maneuver.

For the first time, division headquarters and all subordinate units will be brought together in this exercise, which is another step in the intensified combat training program begun by the "Indianhead" division this fall.

23rd Filing Cabinet Reveals 1929 Menu, Interesting Facts

BY MAX COURSON

It's surprising what one can find in a filing cabinet.

For instance, this reporter recently was rummaging through the 23rd Infantry's historical records and came upon an elaborately-printed menu that had been issued for the 23rd's Christmas Dinner of 1929. At that time the 23rd was stationed at Fort Sam Houston, Texas.

Included on the officers' roster was one Lieutenant James M. Gavin, executive officer of the 23rd. The thought immediately came to mind that this might well be the present Ambassador of the United States to France, the author of a recent best-seller on United States military policy, and the former commander of the 82nd Airborne Division at the Normandy Invasion of World War II.

Letter

A letter was prepared and dispatched to the U.S. Ambassador in France asking him if he were the same man listed in the menu. A reply came swiftly from the Foreign Service Office, Paris, France. It said, in part:

"It is true that I was on the roster of the 23rd Infantry in December of 1929. I was reassigned to the 15th Infantry in Douglas, Arizona, later in the month.

"The 23rd Infantry was a very fine regiment, and I acked particularly to be assigned to it. It has an outstanding reputation, not only in that part of Texas but also throughout the Army at large.

"I am sure that you will find, too, that some very distinguished officers served with it in the period following World War I."

Signed: James M. Gavin.

Capt. Hall was originally commissioned Infantry through Officers Candidate School at Fort Benning in 1942. However, four months later he transferred to Armor.

Ex-Tulip-Picker, Ship Crewman Now Assistant Machinegunner

BY 23RD INFANTRY PIO

How many assistant machinegunners do you know who were born in Holland, worked in the tulip fields there and served as a cook on an ocean steamer — all by the time they were 16 years old?

Well, the boys in the 23rd Infantry's Company C know one. His name is Wilhelm Frederick Van Soelen.

He finished high school in Holland when he was 14 years old, and, not liking work in the tulip fields, he attended a cooks' school. Upon completion of the course Bill was hired as second cook on a Holland - America Line vessel that plied the seas to Belgium, France, England, Canada and the United States.

In 1958, Bill's mother and sister came to the United States and settled in Salt Lake City, Utah. Bill followed them there, finished high school American style, then enrolled in the Salt Lake Trade Technical Institute to study printing.

A longing to see his native country and relatives again inspired Bill to enlist in the U.S. Army in April. Eventually, he hopes to be stationed in Germany near the Dutch border.

Bill has filed his declaration of intent papers for U.S. citizenship, and he, his wife and child plan to stay in this country after completing his Army tour of duty.

was followed by General Chase.

As an added feature of the dedication ceremony, representatives of the nations that had units attached to the 2nd Infantry Division during the Korean Conflict also lifted a spade of earth.

Representing their countries were Major General Philippe Gotrand, military attache from France, Colonel L. Kosters, assistant military attache from The Netherlands, and Colonel Sithi Chirarochana, military attache from Thailand.

The Second Division Prayer was then rendered by Charles B. MacDonald, who commanded Companies I and G of the 23rd Infantry in the European Theater of Operations.

A three-volley salute was fired by the United States Army Firing Squad.

Taps, with band arrangement, was then played by a Marine Corps bugler. Conductor of the Marine Corps Band was Gunnery Sergeant Jack Kline.

The ceremony, symbolizing start of construction of the World War II and Korean Conflict wings of the memorial, was sponsored by the Memorial Committee of the Second "Indianhead" Division Association, headed by Ralph O. Lundgren.

These L-shaped wings, 20-feet in length, are to be engraved with the battle sites of their respective conflicts. A 50-foot flag will adorn the bottom of each L.

The original memorial was dedicated in October 1936 to the members of the "Indianhead" Division who fought in World War I.

It is located on the Ellipse in Washington, D. C.

Their Own Cookbook: The Tried and the True

Ladies of the 11th Infantry have been complimenting each other ever since they received copies of their own cookbook, entitled "Favorite Recipes from the Officers' Wives, 1st Battle Group, 11th Infantry."

Each wife contributed two to four of the recipes favored by her family.

PRESIDENT . . . Mrs. Walter D. Hutchko, recently elected president of the Ladies of the Big Indianhead, a club composed of 2nd Division Non-Commissioned Officers' wives.

The 36-page booklet, complete with sketches and illustrations was compiled so that the wives would have something by which to remember each other and the 11th in later years.

The tried and true recipes, almost 70 of them, range from the very simple to the most exotic. Among the more unusual ones are beef burgundy, chili con queso, Shrimp New Orleans, sherry pork roast, savoy fried rice, French breakfast puffs, eggnog pie and biscuit pork roast.

Some of the old-time favorites include pound cake, chili con carne, cheese cake, shortcake, banana bread and apple pie.

1st Infantry Ends Conquerors' Winning Streak With 25-14 Score

BY 1ST INFANTRY PIO

The efforts of the 87th Infantry's flag football team for an undefeated season came to an end last week when the Conquerors' "nine" fell victim to a 25-14 defeat by the 1st Infantry team.

This first loss by the 87th throws both teams into a tie position for first place in the 2nd Infantry Division Flag Football Tournament, each having a record of 10 wins and one loss.

Scores Four

First Infantryman Alvin Williams Jr., of Company A, scored three of their four touchdowns and William C. Tallaferro, also of Company A, recorded the fourth touchdown for the "Always First" team.

Williams made one of the outstanding plays of the game when he intercepted a pass in the end zone and ran the distance of the field for a touchdown.

A similar play was carried out by the 87th Infantry's Major Lincoln when he returned a kick-off some 80 yards to set the stage for the first Conqueror touchdown.

The season's last regularly scheduled games are set for this weekend with a possibility of a play-off for the championship between the 1st and 87th Infantries.

Last night at Sand Hill's Bennett Field the 9th Infantry (7-4) was to meet the Division Trains team (5-3). The Division Artillery "nine" (0-11) was scheduled to meet Separate Battalions (2-9).

On Kelley Hill, the 23rd Infantry (4-7) was pitted against the 1st Infantry while the 11th Infantry (8-3) was to take on the Conquerors.

In tonight's action at Sand Hill, the 87th meets Separate Battalions to be followed by a game of Division Trains versus Division Artillery.

11th Infantry Posts 13-0 Victory Over DivArty

By 11th Inf. PIO

A 13-0 victory over Division Artillery last Thursday night stretched the 11th Infantry's season record to 8-3 with three games left on the schedule.

The 11th opened their scoring bid in the first quarter when halfback Dick Holmes received a DivArty punt and raced 60 yards for the touchdown. Quarterback Bill Lochow spirited through the middle for the extra point.

Opening the third period with a 7-0 mark, the Wanderers were still not satisfied and registered their second TD, which turned out to be the game's final tally.

Team captain Jim Gordon spotted his favorite receiver, Bil Tyus, deep in the secondary and flipped the 40-yard scoring pass. DivArty turned back the try for point after.

The 11th was to pit their talents against the once beaten 87th last night. Tonight, they go against the 1st. Both teams hold wins over the 11th in earlier games.

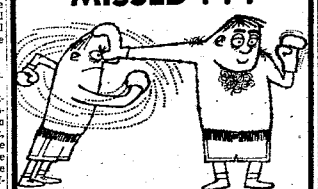
The driver of a vehicle emerging from an alley, driveway, or building, shall stop such vehicle immediately before reaching a sidewalk, or the sidewalk area extending across the alley or driveway, and shall yield the right-of-way to any pedestrian and, before entering the roadway, shall yield the right of way to all vehicles approaching on the roadway. (sec 13-d)



2. True. (sec 13-e & g)

3. Number two is incorrect. (sec 13-1)

4. True. The driver of a motor vehicle shall not follow another vehicle more closely than is reasonable and prudent, having due regard for the speed of such vehicle, and the traffic and conditions of the roadway. 9th Inf. Sgt. Given ACM

9th Infantry PIO

Sergeant Unga Johnson of the 9th Infantry's Combat Support Company recently received the Army Commendation Medal for service in Germany. Presenting the award to the non-commissioned officer was the 9th Infantry Commander, Colonel Clifford P. Hannum.

The accompanying citation noted that Sergeant Johnson, while a member of Troop C, 3rd Reconnaissance Squadron, 12th Cavalry, "by outstanding leadership and experience" led his section to successful completion of the division mortar test. His section was one of only two in the 3rd Armored Division to pass the difficult tests, given at Grafenwohr, Germany, by the 6th Field Artillery in 1959.

Ordnance

While overseas, Sergeant Johnson also served with the U. S. Army Ordnance Team in Casa Blanca, Morocco. His duties there included the deprocessing and servicing of ordnance equipment.

In one six-day period at Casa Blanca, Sergeant Johnson and training personnel of the Royal Moroccan Forces handled 36 major items of this equipment.

1st Inf Man Moved in Top Circles As French Instructor at Berlitz

By 1st Inf PIO

An ex-French instructor who taught at the world- famous Berlitz School of Languages has been assigned to Company A, 1st Infantry.

Versatile Maurice Sasson brings into the service the rich experience of language interpretation. Pvt. Sasson, reared in Algiers, completed his formal education with the reception of a bachelor of arts degree in the French language from Guillemin College, Algiers, in 1955.

Famous People

The color of Sasson's early career came with the private tutoring of such famous people as actresses Tina Louise and Carole Lawrence, the wives of several well-known ambassadors, actors Tony Perkins, Sidney Poitier, Ricardo Montalban and several others in the French language. This personal instruction took place in the world-famous Berlitz School of Language, located in New York City.

Pvt. Sasson, 24, received his first look at the United States and the American way of life in 1956 when he joined relatives in New York City. The several years spent in New York before being inducted into the Armed Forces formed several impressions.

"I was surprised with the hospitality of the American citizen," he said, "and, of course I was impressed with the vastness of New York City. The women are lovely, wages are high, and in short, I love it."

Pvt. Sasson also commented on his previous education as compared to the American education. Because of his compressed college schedule and longer classes, the average student receives his diploma in three years, while, in the United States, four years is a comparable average.

Drafted in March, and with several years already behind him as a resident of the United States, Maurice is taking another step closer to his citizenship.

BONELESS ROASTS

Boneless, rolled roasts are becoming more and more popular with homemakers. When roasting, allow approximately 10 minutes per pound longer to cook than the same roast with bone in.

Kibitzer's Korner

(Editor's Note: Recently, LA Joseph Tomko gave an opinion on football conferences. This week, Pfc Ray Knight takes up the challenge and gives his opinion. This column is open to anyone who wishes to give his opinion on a sports matter. Material should be sent through message center to: Sports Editor, The Bayonet, Bldg. 5.)

By Pfc Raymond P. Knight

You wanted a controversy over the football powers of the South. I imagine you've received many comments and answers to your article. After reading Paul Cox's article in last Friday morning's Columbus paper, I can't help but wonder if he read your article in THE BAYONET.

Everyone from their own region of the country considers their particular conference the best. This is logical because in most cases they're partial to their state schools and the conference they're in.

Recently, many football fans and sports writers have been comparing the Southeastern Conference with the Big Ten Conference or vice-versa. It's true that the Big Ten and the Southeastern are two of the strongest conferences in the nation. But, they by no means completely dominate the collegiate football picture. In this week's AP poll, there are four Big Ten teams and three Southeastern Conference teams in the top ten.

In the top 20 teams, there are six from the Big Ten and four from the Southeastern. However, this doesn't prove a thing because there are many other conferences and independent teams well represented in the top twenty.

I consider this sufficient evidence to say that no major conference completely dominates the collegiate football scene. I think you can find exciting, explosive and powerful teams in all major conferences. There are many strong independent teams also.

Personally, I consider Notre Dame and Syracuse as two of the better teams of the '61 season, despite the fact that they've had their troubles.

What would it prove if Alabama played Ohio State either during the season or in a bowl game? Which ever team won, it wouldn't prove that their respective conference was the best or that they were the better team. It would only prove that they were the better team on the given day that they played.

"ON A GIVEN SATURDAY or any given day," the least expected team in the nation could defeat the top rated team if they scored the most points and made the least number of errors. The best team on the field doesn't always win the game.

You used the word "BREATHER" while referring to games with weak teams. A team has to make necessary preparation for all of their games. To me, a "BREATHER" would be when a team has an open date on their schedule.

About whether a team has a chance for regrouping or organization after a tough game or a soft one—I find that immaterial to this controversy because this would be taken care of in the necessary preparation for every game.

These are my opinions, but they may also be other people's opinions.

(Well, Pfc Knight has told what he thinks of the situation. This column is open to all. Any takers? Editor.)

Post Basketball League Begins Intra-Unit Play

Competition in the Infantry Center Major Unit Basketball League began Wednesday, according to the schedule announced by the Special Services sports department.

The league will be comprised of seven teams, each playing a double round robin slate. The season will be divided into two halves, with the two half-season winners meeting in a play-off to decide the post championship.

Post units entering teams in the race include the 29th Infantry, 58th Infantry, 10th Artillery, Center Troop Command, The Student Brigade and the 428th Medical Battalion and Lawson Army Aviation Command who will field a joint team comprised of personnel from both units.

Our new team will enter league play this year, the 609th Radar Squadron (U.S. Air Force Reserve) from Eufaula, Ala.

In the season's opener Wednesday, the 10th Artillery faced the 609th Radar Squadron and the 58th Infantry met The Student Brigade, last year's champion.

YAC Swimming

The Youth Activities Club swimming team will begin after- school practice Monday, Nov. 20, from 4-6 p.m. at Briant Wells Field House.

All interested swimmers have been invited to attend.

30 DEER TAKEN OVER WEEKEND

The deer hunters literally crowded the woods during the long holiday weekend in both the Georgia and Alabama portions of the Reservation. The biggest deer harvest of the season was made during the three day weekend with over 30 deer reported being taken. This brings the reported deer harvest on post for the season to near 50, well above the take for the same period last year.

All hunters are again urged to report all deer taken on the Reservation to the Fish and Game Office by phoning 545-3525. If at all possible, hunters are asked to bring deer to Fish and Game Office (Bldg. 384) during normal duty hours for weighing and aging.

DUCK SEASON OPENS

Duck and geese season opened during the weekend on the Georgia portion of the Reservation which is in the Atlantic flyway. The season on ducks and coots opened November 11 and continues thru December 30 in Georgia while the opening date in Alabama is not until December 11. The open season on geese in both Georgia and Alabama is November 10 thru January 6. Waterfowl hunters are reminded of special protection on certain species; no canvasback or redhead duck may be shot as there is a nationwide closed season on these two species. There is a special limit of two wood ducks per season in the Atlantic flyway which includes Georgia.

Generally speaking, this year's waterfowl hunting regulations are quite involved, so interested hunters are urged to pick up a copy of waterfowl regulations when securing their Duck Stamp.

QUAIL SEASON OPENS NOVEMBER 20

Hunting will get in full swing on Post this season with the opening of quail season on both Georgia and Alabama portions of the Reservation on November 20.

Quail hunters will probably find hard gunning during the early part of the season due to the dry weather which has resulted in many coveys concentrating in and around stream and branch bottoms. Wildlife Aids report a good quail population this year on post, but limited to these low lying areas. Hunters are reminded of a recent change in hunting regulations which requires a dog for hunting quail.

Although deer hunting was the main attraction in Alabama during the past week, rabbit season opened on that portion of the post November 10 and will continue until February 20. The opening date for rabbit season on the Georgia portion of the Reservation will be November 20 with closing date February 25.

Doughboys Shoot Down Eglin's Airmen By 35-6

First Road Win For Post Team

By Pfc Del Berghoefer

The Doughboys scored four touchdowns on the passing of quarterback Charles Haile as they defeated the Eglin Air Force Base Eagles 35-6 in a game played at Eglin last Saturday.

The win was the first on the road for the Benning team and evened its season record at four wins and four losses.

The Doughboys scored the first time they got possession of the ball, taking a punt on their 47 and moving 53 yards in four plays, including two passes to end Bill Johnson, one good for 34 yards and the second for a three-yard TD. The point after touchdown was booted by Henry Derleth.

They scored three times in the second quarter, breaking the game open and giving them a 29-0 halftime lead.

The second TD was scored on a 32-yard pass play, Haile to halfback Cleveland Brown, capping a 75-yard march in seven plays. Derleth again converted the PAT.

Doughboy halfback Bob Roach recovered an Eagle on his own 38 to set up the third score. Halfback Northern Brown covered the last 19 yards on the drive with a scoring jaunt around right end, following consecutive 17-yard gains by halfback Bob Herr and fullback Gene Holland. Derleth added his third extra point.

With 35 seconds left in the first half, Benning struck for another score, driving 61 yards in eight plays. The final 41 yards were picked up on two consecutive passes, Haile to end Jim Crabbe, one for 13 and the second for 28 yards and the fourth TD. Derleths fourth consecutive extra point made the halftime score 35-0.

The Eagles came back strong in the second half, scoring their first TD while holding the Doughboys to only one.

A recovered fumble on the Doughboys 46-yard line set up the Eglin score, which took only two plays. Halfback Henry Blades scored on a 39-yard run, nearly half of the Eagles' rushing total. A two-point conversion pass fell incomplete.

The final Doughboy score came as the third quarter closed, with Haile pitching 14 yards to end Cliff Manning in the end zone. Manning made a circus grab of the aerial, leaping high to take it away from two defenders. Derleth booted the PAT, his fifth of the game and 13th in succession in the last two games.

The Benning passing attack was the best displayed this year, with quarterbacks connecting on 12 out of 20 attempts good for four TD's and 183 yards, only 14 less than the team's rushing total.

Four ends and four halfbacks were on the receiving end of the throws, with Cleveland Brown and Jim Crabbe having two each and Bill Johnson three.

The Doughboys gave up 81 rushing yards to the Eagles, two more than the total gained by opponents in the previous three games. This raised the opponents' ground gained to an average of only 52 yards in the last five games.

The Doughboys will play a home game tomorrow at 2:30 p.m. against the Fort Dix Burros.

Football Tourney Gets Underway

Touch Football Tournament got underway Monday with four teams seeing action. Company B, 29th Infantry, tripped C Company, 60th Armor 6-0 in the opening game.

The brigade defending champs, 72d Engineers Company, 29th Infantry, shutout Headquarters Battery, 10th Artillery, of the Redlegs League 18-0. Quarterback, Curtis Gentry tossed three touchdown passes for a total of 97 yards. Frank Johnson, Richard Medina, and Frederick Traylor were the receivers. The Engineers scored six points in the first, second and third quarters. They had a total of 218 yards rushing and 105 in the air.

Doughboys, Dix Fare the Same

The Doughboys, with three consecutive wins against interservice teams under their belts, will meet tough Army rival, the Fort Dix Burros, tomorrow in an afternoon game played at Doughboy Stadium.

Kick-off time will be 2:30 p.m.

The Burros, with a 4-5 season record and the Doughboys, 4-4 for the season have fared about the same against four common opponents.

Dix defeated Fort Lee 14-7 and lost to Fort Eustis 20-10, Camp Lejeune Marines 20-13 and Quantico Marines, 13-8.

The Doughboys steamrollered Fort Lee 41-6 and lost to Fort Eustis 15-7, Camp Lejeune 27-7 and Quantico, 33-2.

The Doughboy losses were in their first three games, however, when they were beset by injuries and transfers. Since that time they have won four out of five and have outscored their opponents 151 to 31 while holding them to an average of 56 yards rushing per game.

End Jim Daniel, the team's leading pass receiver and rugged defensive halfback Emmett Eddy, are expected to be back in action against Fort Dix. Daniel has missed the last two games and Eddy last week's contest, both with shoulder injuries.

Game Change

The football game between the Doughboys and Fort Dix, originally scheduled for 8 p.m. tomorrow, has been changed to 2:30 tomorrow afternoon, Special Services Sports Department announced yesterday.

Curtis Baker Leads League With a Total of 115 Points

BY SFC BISMARCK STITH

Curtis Baker, left half back for the Grenadiers of the YAC Biddy League, has set a league record by scoring all points in four victories. He has a total of 115 points.

In last week's action, the Grenadiers moved into the number one spot in their league, tied with the Helmets. Curtis Baker sprinted 45 yards around right end in the first quarter for the Grenadiers first touchdown. Baker also ran the PAT.

A 65 yard run by Baker in the second quarter was made with eight seconds to play. Baker recovered a fumble and went 65 yards before the Howitzers brought him down.

The Grenadiers went scoreless in the third quarter, but came alive in the Fourth, when Baker went over for six more points to shutout the Howitzers by a score of 13-0.

The Bullets nipped the high sprung Bombers 13-6, in a battle to the finish. Both teams went scoreless in the first quarter and each pushed over six points in the second. Bullets fullback, Peter Clapsaddle, went around left end for a 10 yard TD, he also tried for the extra point but failed. Jimmy Sessions, Bombers right halfback, scored his team six points. Craig Plowman was stopped at the line of scrimmage for the PAT.

Clapsaddle scored a touchdown and made the PAT in the closing seconds of the fourth quarter to give his teammates a victory over the fighting Bombers.

The Bayonets picked up their second straight victory, by handing the Bears their fifth setback of the season, a shutout 20-0.

The Bayonets scored in the first, second and fourth quarter.

In the first quarter, Gary Bolan, Bayonet's quarterback, flipped a 15 yard touchdown to right end Robert Rice. Right halfback Thomas McDaniels went over for the PAT.

In the second quarter, left half back, Rick Bouyvears, sprinted 40 yards on a single reverse play for six points.

The Bayonet's final points came in the fourth when Bolan went over the middle for a TD, and Charles Coats made the PAT. Bouyvear and Coats were the team's outstanding defensive players.

RANGERS UPSET TANKERS

The Rangers evened their score with the league leading Tankers by handing them their first Setback, 14-7. Earlier in the season the Tankers gave the Rangers their only defeat, so it was a rough and tough go throughout the complete game.

The Tankers kicked off to the Rangers to open the game. In the first play from scrimmage the Rangers fumbled and the alert Tankers recovered. After two plays for the Tankers they fumbled and the ball was recovered by the Rangers. The Tankers held the Rangers on their 20 yard line for four downs forcing the Rangers to punt which was blocked by the Tankers halfback, Dennis Dodd. The tough defensive line of the Rangers held the Tankers for five yards in four downs. The Rangers recovered the ball on the Tankers one yard line. In the first play of scrimmage the Rangers fumbled and Mike Bunger went over for the TD. Dennie Dodd went around left end on a handoff for the PAT.

During the next two quarters both teams went scoreless, but it was a thriller all the way to see a stubborn defense from each team hold their lines. It was a fumbling contest throughout the game with the Rangers dropping eight and the Tankers five.

The Rangers came to life in the fourth quarter with 30 seconds to play when Ranger's quarterback, Thomas O'Donnell hit left end. Tom Jones twice in succession with a 30 and 40 yards gain. Suddenth hit O'Donnel with a 10 yard aerial. In the next play O'Donnell went over the middle for six points and around right end for the PAT to even the score 7-7. On the first play after the punt to the Tankers, Suddenth intercepted a Tankers pass. O'Donnell pushed through center for a 30 and 10 yards gain. In the next play he bulldozed through the middle for a touchdown and also over the middle for the PAT, giving his teammates a 14-7 victory over the previously undefeated Tankers.

PACKERS NIP GIANTS 14-12

The Packers rolled up 287 yards rushing, and completed six out of 10 passes to nip the Giants, 14-12, in a hard fought game to extend their record to the third win.

The Packers hit pay dirt in the second quarter when quarterback, Joe Herman hit right end, Joe Freemen with a 12 yard touchdown pass. Herbert Sidney, "The Toe", kicked the PAT. In the fourth quarter, Harman hit Charles Gavin, the full back, with a 35 yard pass and Sidney was credited with the PAT.

The Giants fought back through out the game as Doug Baker, Giant's tailback, played a one man game by scoring all the points for the Giants. He also made 90 per cent of the tackles during the game.

BOOKS in REVIEW

THE FOXGLOVE SAGA by Auberon Waugh. (Simon, 1961)
A glorious antidote to the grimy novels of the angry young men. It is witty, funny and cynical, written with all the brilliance, the facility and the bite that are, apparently, the unmistakable hallmark of the Waugh family.

WAKE ISLAND COMMAND by W. Scott Cunningham. (Brown, 1961)
Two decades after Pearl Harbor, the name "Wake Island" still evokes pride and sadness, pride in Wake's defenders for their stinging if temporary defeat of the Japanese, and sadness for the inevitable surrender the day before Christmas Eve, 1941.

A YANKEE PRIVATE'S CIVIL WAR by Robert H. Strong. (Regnery, 1961)
After a century of silence a Union Infantryman speaks from the yellowed, dusty pages of notes hastily scrawled under fire or written by the light of campfires, to give us a vivid, firsthand account of our country's Civil War. The ordinary men who fought the war appear in full demension.

SOLO FOR SEVERAL PLAYERS by Barbara Jefferis. (Sloane, 1961)
She was alone in the air-in a plane without a pilot, and she only knew one thing about flying—that she feared and hated it. Readers of this exciting and wholly credible story will not unfasten their seat belts until the very last page.

TWELVE DEAD GEESE by Eugene McKay. (Van Rees Press, 1961)
Beneath the explosively comic events of this novel there runs a serious and intense story of European youth in the first years after the end of World War II—its search for context and commitment. Twelve Dead Geese introduces a fresh and unusual talent to the American literary scene.

Training By TIS Department Not Terminated Over Weekend

Members of The Infantry School spent last Friday, a non-duty day, training 106 selected officers from a Kentucky Army Reserve division and a National Guard division from Wisconsin.

The training, conducted by the Weapons Department's Machine Gun Committee, was designed to prepare the 67 officers of the 32nd National Guard Division and 41 men of the 100th Reserve Division to give similar instruction in their units.

Following an orientation on the preparation and conduct of formal instruction and range firing, the officers were shown the program of training and examples of each phase.

They also participated in practical exercises and were briefed on types and uses of training areas and aids.

The training was conducted with the 30, .50 caliber and the M-60 machine gun.

The divisions were recently called to active duty in the Army's buildup program. The 100th is training at Fort Chaffee, Ark., and the 32nd is at Fort Lewis, Wash.

Promotions Go To E-4s, E-5s

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Prospects for Army promotions to grades E-4 and E-5 during November look good with both grades getting substantial increases over October in the monthly quotas.

The Army's overall quota (E-4 through E-7) for November is nearly 4,000 over October, but the increase went only to the 4s and 5s with all the higher grades taking a cut in authorizations.

By grades, the November authorizations are: E-9, 100; down 20 slots from October; E-8, 310, down 275; E-7, 464, down 236; E-6, 527, down 531; E-5, 3,072, an increase of 1,529; and E-4, 13,783, up 3,462.

The MOS freeze list did not change noticeably, although the number of specialties not authorized for promotion has been decreasing gradually over the last few months. November's list shows the same trend.

Army Tells New ID Card Policy

Complaints from the field that extended Army Personnel and their dependents are experiencing difficulty in establishing identity and obtaining privileges with expired identification cards, have caused the Army to reverse its policy regarding the renewal of such cards.

A DA message, sent out on Friday, Oct. 27, rescinded a previous message which had said involuntarily extended enlisted personnel and their dependents would continue to use the expired identification and privilege cards and use additional methods of proving their continued privileges. That message had suggested using copies of orders, personal letters and official statements as proof of privileges.

Replacements for expired cards will be issued by the Army with new expiration dates coinciding with the expected dates of expiration of extended terms of service.

TIC Small Arms Firing School Begins on Post This Week

Students scheduled to attend The Infantry Center's Small Arms Firing School which began Tuesday are finding their instructors flying new colors.

The four-day session presented at the beginning of each competitive marksmanship year is an activity of the Third Army Rifle and Pistol Team, recently designated as a full-fledged advanced marksmanship unit.

"We're now on a par with the AMU's of the other five Army areas," said the unit's commander, Capt. Donald M. Blauvelt.

The officer added that the unit now has an authorized strength of three officers and 28 enlisted men.

Conduct of the annual small arms school, Capt. Blauvelt said, is in conjunction with the unit mission to train and develop competitive marksmen to represent the Third Army in shooting competition and to provide finely skilled shooters from which the Army Advanced Marksmanship Unit could build its powerful teams.

Capt. James G. Brannon heads the unit's rifle group while M-Sgt. Leonard Ross of Hammond, Ind., leads the pistol squad.

According to 1st Sgt. Aubrey W. Wells, his Headquarters Section is composed of a crack staff of hand-picked administrative, supply and armorer personnel.

"We feel that the students in the Small Arms School are receiving the best course of instruction possible to present in a four-day period," the unit's first sergeant said, "because each of our instructors is an accomplished marksman in his own right."

The school is being presented with the cooperation of the officer and enlisted staff of Army Match Headquarters.

Dental Lab Chief

Major Virgil Woods has succeeded Lt. Col. Wallace L. Lancaster as chief of the post Dental Laboratory.

Major Woods came to the post in August from an assignment at Valley Forge General Hospital.

Philippine Officer Visits School

The facilities and techniques, which play a major part in Fort Bennings production of top, combat-ready Infantrymen were viewed this week by the acting dean of professors at The Philippine Military Academy.

Lt. Col. Felix P. Duenas arrived Sunday for three days of briefings and orientations.

He was shown The Infantry School's methods of instruction, which are considered to be among the best in their field.

The Allied officer also will see some of the Army's latest equipment used to train the Infantryman and available to the soldier in combat.

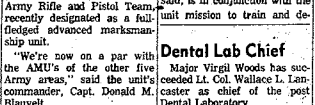
Col. Duenas completed his tour of the post Wednesday morning.

General Harrell MOWW Guest

Major Gen. Ben Harrell, commanding general of The Infantry Center, was the principal speaker at the ladies night meeting of the Military Order of World Wars yesterday evening at the Main Officers' Open Mess.

The meeting, starting with a social hour at 7 p.m. and dinner at 8 p.m., is one of three ladies nights held each year.

Membership in the MOWW is limited to officers who have served during World War I or World War II.



The Fort Benning chapter meets monthly.

Lawson Field Members Are Awarded Certificates of Achievement Here

For outstanding performance of duty while conducting a mission in Greenland last year, five members and three former members of the Lawson Army Aviation Command were recently awarded Air Medals and Certificates of Achievement.

Members of the 94th Transportation Company of LAAC cited were 1st Lt. Henry R. Northridge, operations officer: WO Sidney H. Levine, both light helicopter pilots, and SP5 Robert C. Johnson, light helicopter crew chief.

CWO's Raymond H. Chapman, 31st Transportation Company, light helicopter pilot, and Wade C. Kern Jr., 19th Transportation Company, medium helicopter pilot, also received medals.

The certificates and medals were presented by Col. Curtis L. Hankins, commander of LAAC, and Lt. Col. Jean K. Woodyard Jr., Air Force liaison officer to The Infantry School.

The men unable to be present at the ceremony were CWO's Richard C. Hodgkins, now stationed in Germany, and Joseph I. Kilpatrick, on temporary duty at Fort Eustis. Both were light helicopter pilots of the 94th.

Also of the 94th was SP4 Allan H. W. Adair, former crew chief who was discharged last August and is now living in Manitowac, Minn.

Their medals were forwarded to them by Col. Hankins.

The airmen were awarded the medals for their unique testing of radio frequency patterns transmitted by the crews to the U. S. Air Force Ballistic Missile Early Warning (BMEW) System at Thule, Greenland, from May 15 to Aug. 22, 1960.

The crews transmitted radio beams at one-tenth of a second to receiving units at the BMEW, five to seven miles from the flight areas. The mission's purpose was to insure that the beams would conform to the vertical, lateral and horizontal clearances required by Air Force and civilian engineers.

During most of the 76-day operations, the pilots of the two helicopters carrying the crews had to fly their aircraft without crash boats or survival equipment over open Arctic waters in sub-zero weather and high velocity wind storms.

Air currents often were so dangerously high the helicopters were forced to remain at hover within a 50-foot cubic area, while the pilots concentrated on avoiding undue risks.

The operation, which was ordered by the Department of Defense, required 344 hours of flying time, much of it in dangerous weather, and the measuring of 4,451 radio beams. The DOD reported the mission to be a complete success, the first of its kind to be successfully accomplished.

Army Developing Faster Amphibian

An experimental Army tracked vehicle, capable of operating on roads, snow, mud, tundra (arctic moss) or water, is in the developmental stage at the Army Transportation Research Command, here.

The proposed vehicle, resembling a tank, will run on low pressure inflated rubber tracks designed to provide maximum traction on slippery surfaces and flotation characteristics.

Army Going To The Dogs? No, Dogs Going To The Army

The recent appeal by the Army for additional war dogs to guard our bases in the United States and overseas points up the important role played by veterinary officers in keeping these dogs healthy and in fighting trim.

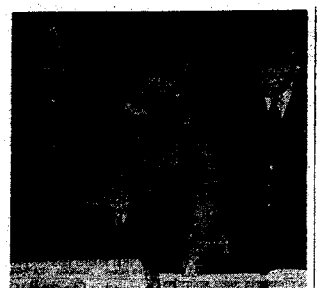
A specific responsibility of the Army Veterinary Corps is keeping dogs in the same excellent condition as is required of their handlers. The dogs — all German Shepherds — also are sure of a balanced diet, proper grooming, and routine immunizations.

In Europe, the Army maintains a unique medical unit, the 51st Medical Detachment (Veterinary Animal Hospital), located in Lenggries, Germany. In the United States, the Army Medical Service has designed a complete surgical and medical unit specifically for the care of dogs.

The latter-type unit is housed in three tents and provides small animal hospital care. Two officers and 12 enlisted men care for its patient load. Recuperating dogs are housed in a 50-patient ward.

At the hospital in Lenggries, dogs procured in that area are given complete physical examination, and all abnormalities and required treatments are noted and recorded. They are quarantined, given immunizations, and administered preventive medicine therapy against leptospirosis.

All dogs in the hospital and kennel training areas at Lenggries are observed closely morning and afternoon, and prompt medical attention is rendered where needed. In addition, they are re-examined monthly thereafter.



To qualify for military service dogs must be pure-bred German Shepherds possessing certain specifications.

19-Gun Military Salute Greets Peruvian General

A 19-gun salute welcomed the Peruvian Army commanding general when he arrived on post yesterday for a first-hand look at Infantrymen on the job.

Major Gen. Nicolas Lindley Lopez, reviewed honor guard troops of Company C, 1st Battle Group, 29th Infantry, who were massed on Lawson Field.

The 19-gun salute was fired by Battery A, 2nd Howitzer Battalion, 10th Artillery. Music was provided by The Infantry Center Band.

Gen. Lindley is today scheduled to observe an airborne orientation, receive briefings on the history and organization of The Infantry Center, organization and mission of The Infantry School, and the utilization of the reservation in support of training.

Following a trainfire training briefing, the Allied visitor will view demonstrations of the M-14 rifle and M-60 machine gun and visit the leaders reaction course.

Gen. Lindley also will visit Major Gen. Ben Harell, post commander.

This afternoon, the commander will observe problems and classes, including the familiarization with Army aircraft, the battle group participation in mobile defense, combat first aid and Code of Conduct training. In addition, he will attend a briefing on Ranger training.

Gen. Lindley will be the honored guest at an official dinner at the commanding general's quarters at 7 p.m.

The Allied visitor will depart Fort Benning tomorrow at 9 a.m., following an honors ceremony at Lawson Army Airfield.

Past Employee Receives Award

The Army's second highest award for civilians has been awarded to Harvey M. Allen, a former post employee now living in Homestead, Fla.

Allen, who retired in August after 38 years of service with the government, was honored for achieving a 46 per cent increase in production at the Army Field Printing Plant from July, 1960, to June, 1961.

As printing and reproduction foreman at the plant, Allen accomplished the unprecedented output of training literature with 18 per cent fewer personnel than usually required for normal production.

The award consists of a medal with accompanying lapel pin and a citation.

The citation reads, in part, "Mr. Allen demonstrated unusual initiative, professional skill, tireless energy and aggressive leadership."

The award has been forwarded to Allen in Homestead.

Thanksgiving 1961

THANKSGIVING DECORATIONS . . . Symbolic of the decorations to be used in mess halls throughout the Army, both home and abroad, are these corn stalks and pumpkins displayed in front of the mess hall at 1st Battalion, Center Troop Command. Our camera caught Sfc Wilmer Foster, right, one of the mess personnel, as he helped get the decorations ready for Thanksgiving Day. With him are, (L-R) Pfc Norman Brown, Co. C, 1st Battalion; Pfc Joseph Merkel Co. B. 1st Battalion, and Pfc Peter Konieczny, Co. C, 1st Battalion. The decorations are now in place in the mess hall. Next door, in The Student Brigade's Infantry School Battalion mess hall, a full wall mural depicting the pilgrims' life has been added for the Thanksgiving holiday. (Photo by Sgt. Betty Farmer, post signal lab.)

Troops Will Eat Turkey Tomorrow

Troops on post will eat more than 25,000 pounds of Turkey on Thanksgiving Day.

The grocery list for the noon meal tomorrow is one to startle, any housewife.

The list calls for 3,360 pounds of shrimp, 6,160 pounds of Irish potatoes, 6,106 pounds of sweet potatoes, 1,960 pounds of frozen peas, 2,800 pounds of frozen succotash, 56,000 rolls, 80,640 pats of butter, 28,000 slices of pie, 560 quarts of whipping cream, 4,200 pounds of fruit cake and 12,000 pounds of fruit.

Armed with this supply of groceries, mess halls at The Infantry Center and in the 2d Infantry Division will serve a Thanksgiving dinner for approximately 30,000 military personnel and their guests.

The menu reads: shrimp cocktail with sauce and crackers, roast turkey with bread dressing and giblet gravy, cranberry sauce, mashed potatoes, candied sweet potatoes, buttered peas, succotash, assorted crisp relishes, cloverleaf rolls, pumpkin pie, mincemeat pie, whipped cream, assorted fruits, candies, fruit cake, mixed nuts, tea, coffee and milk.

The cooks will make 5,000 gallons of gravy to go with the mountains of mashed potatoes.

There will be 10,000 slices of cranberry sauce. As for the coffee, tea and milk, the supply will be unlimited.

Mess halls will be decorated in keeping with the Thanksgiving season.

At each place there will be a menu in Infantry blue and gold.

Chaplains Extend Holiday Wishes

Thanksgiving Prayer

BY — Chaplain (Maj Gen) Frank A. Tobey, Chief of Chaplains, United States Army

Almighty God, we praise Thee as the Father of all peoples and the God of our Nation. We thank Thee for our heritage of freedom, so dearly won; for those who were pioneers in the beginning of this Republic; for the loyalty and devotion of humble men and women; for all who dreamed the American dream into visible shape and form.

Help us to keep faith with our heroic dead. Save us from the waste of their sacrifice, from carelessness and indifference, from softness and smug complacency. Fashion us into a united people, devoted to the ideals of freedom and justice.

Grant to us, we pray Thee, a deep appreciation of all Thy mercies, that our hearts may be truly thankful, and grant us grace to defend and maintain these blessings of religion and liberty, not only with our lips, but in our lives, by increased devotion to Thee and our beloved country.

Amen

Let Us All Give Thanks

BY — Chaplain (Colonel) Silas E. Decker, TIC Chaplain

The season of Thanksgiving helps me to recall a very wonderful visit which my family and I had at Plymouth, Massachusetts, a few years ago. There we saw the memorial to the Indian Chief who taught the new colonists how to plant corn by placing with the grains a small fish for fertilizer. Nearby was the tomb holding remains of those who died during their first winter in an unfriendly land, and close by where the sea touches land, was the remains of Plymouth Rock. In the town was a museum where the sword of Captain Miles Standish was kept with other treasures, including household utensils belonging to the Alden Family.

At Thanksgiving time 1961 let us give thanks to Almighty God, for His goodness and His countless blessings, in our places of worship and in our homes. May we each rededicate ourselves to the cause of personal and national liberty, for He has placed in our hands, to defend; the liberty and dignity of man.

Thanksgiving Message

Never in the history of mankind was any nation faced with greater hardships and discouragements than was our Country at its founding. Because our forefathers faced up to those hazards, it seems that Almighty God blessed them in greater measure with natural resources and with the benefits of national freedom and individual liberty.

For these many blessings, Thanksgiving Day affords us a special opportunity and privilege to give thanks to our Creator for a strong and free America.

To each of you I express appreciation for your services in building a stronger America, able to defend the liberties given by our Creator and defended by our fathers.

Greenville Guard Unit Likes Post

By SFC George McBarney

One of the proud days in the 11-year history of the 111th Signal Company, a National Guard unit from Greenville, S. C., came in October when the company was ordered to active duty at Fort Benning as part of the Army's buildup program.

The first National Guard unit from South Carolinia to be called to active duty this year, the 111th is one of only three Army signal units which can be divided into groups or cells for various kinds of assigned missions.

After making the 278-mile trip by bus and convoy from its headquarters in Greenville, the company is undergoing an intensive training program with The Infantry Center Troop Command here. The training is conducted by the 111th's own personnel.

Morale of the 111th is high.

Spt Thomas L. Adams of Florence, S. C., said, "We are glad to be here because we like this assignment. Our duties have a wide scope of interest. This training is really tops."

Adams, one of the 111th's most valuable men, is a clerk who keeps records of training films and photographic equipment.

"We always know where all our equipment is and to whom the films are shown," he added.

Spt Ted H. Floyd of Greenville, also voiced his approval of being called to active duty. Floyd, a manual teletype operator, said, "One reason why I like this job is because I can attend an Army signal school in December. If the 111th is still here when I complete the schooling, I will return to my parent unit."

Spt James E. Phillips of Greenville, a vehicle dispatcher, likes the 111th and the training it gives him but would like to go overseas, preferable to Europe.

"The 111th and Fort Benning are all right but I hope I can serve at least one tour overseas before I take off my uniform for good," he said.

Another specialist fourth class, Isadore E. Sanders of Greenville, finds continuous training at a large Army post like Fort Benning quite different from National Guard training and civilian activities.

"Training day in and day out in the Army is a big change from civilian life but I don't mind it," he said. "This training in the Army's buildup program strengthens the Army and makes the United States a stronger country."

One man, a photographer, declared, "The 111th is a fine organization and as long as I have to be in the service I wouldn't want to be in any other unit."

The 111th can boast having one of the oldest men in the Army in length of consecutive service with one unit. He is M-Sgt. Guy H. Edwards of Greenville, the company's first sergeant. Edwards, 50, has served 25 years consecutively with the 111th.

Edwards, a member of the unit when it was part of the 30th Infantry Division before World War II, has seen it grow from a small and virtually unknown unit to one of the largest companies in the Army.

An oddity about Edwards is that while he has completed 31 years of military service, 25 in the National Guard, he has no Regular Army service. Some 20 years ago a major operation kept him from being accepted for Regular Army duty.

He intends to remain in military service indefinitely, or at least for five more years. "It will take an act of Congress to get me out in less than five years," he said.

Normally attached or assigned to a division, corps, army, theater or communications zone as needed, the 111th's mission is to install, operate and maintain communications, to provide pictorial services, electronic countermeasures, signal intelligence and supply, and to maintain signal corps equipment.

Originally formed as Company G, 118th Regiment of the 30th Infantry Division, South Carolina National Guard, the 111th was called to active duty to September 16, 1940, for a year. But with the outbreak of World War II, it remained in an active duty status for the duration.

After the war, the unit was reorganized as the 51st Infantry Division Signal Company Aug. 27, 1947. In April, 1959, it merged with Battery C, 678th Anti-Aircraft Artillery Gun Battalion and assumed its present designation as the 111th Signal Company.

Activated last Oct. 1, the unit was originally scheduled to report to Fort Gordon. A few days later the orders were amended to send it to Fort Benning. The 111th is commanded by Capt. Bryan J. Perry, Jr., of Greenville.

Film Showing Is Mandatory

Department of the Army has prescribed as mandatory the showing and viewing of AFIF No. "Anatomy of Aggression" for all military personnel at The Infantry Center prior to January 1.

The 27-minute film appraises the pattern of Communist aggression in both the Eastern and Western hemispheres since WWII. It also underscores the positive actions taken by this country and other free nations to hold back the Red line.

The film will be available from the Film Library, USAIC, to all major subordinate commands on specified dates to be announced in a training directive soon to be published.

Gen. Harrell Presents UG Fund Check

A check of $68,687, the Post contribution to the local civilian United Givers fund drive, was presented Monday to UG Campaign Chairman James Blanchard by Maj. Gen. Ben Harrell, commanding general of The Infantry Center and commandant of The Infantry School.

The check represents a portion of the funds collected by the Fort Benning 1961 Community Activities Association fund drive, which opened August 31 and ended November 9.

The CAA fund drive collected approximately $112,000 and the balance will be used to finance health and character building activities at the Post.

Col. William Birdsong was drive chairman and Lt. Col. Howard Mumford was project officer of the Post drive.

Among the CAA - financed activities are the Youth Activities Club, which is a centralized agency for coordinating activities for Post youngsters; the visiting nurses program, which renders health education and assistance by visits in the homes of military personnel and their families and by consultation in the preventative medicine clinic; the preventive dental Health programs under which dependents up to 18 years of age receive free teeth cleaning and fluoride applications; and the Religious Education program, which provides Sunday School services for post adults and children.

Fort Benning's contribution to the civilian UG drive pushed that drive to within 96.5 per cent of its goal of over $650,000. Only $31,000 remains to be collected in the UG campaign.

TIS Management Improvement Saves Over 80 Hours Weekly

Management improvements in the Department of Non-Resident Instruction of The Infantry School have realized an estimated savings of 80 man-hours per week in mailing lesson material to students enrolled in the school's extension courses.

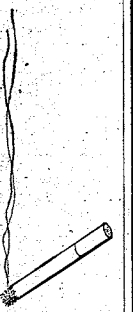
The improvement plan, according to DNRI officials, consisted of rearranging storage bins, utilizing rolling tables which can be pushed from bin to bin while assembling lesson materials and the placement of mail sacks within 10 feet of the vehicle loading ramp.

Serving the 42,000 students enrolled in The Infantry School's extension courese is a major project, Col. Hary G. Huppert, DNRI director, said.

Any time-saving improvement is a great help, he added.

By using the rolling tables, one person can collate several lessons from the various storage bins at one time.

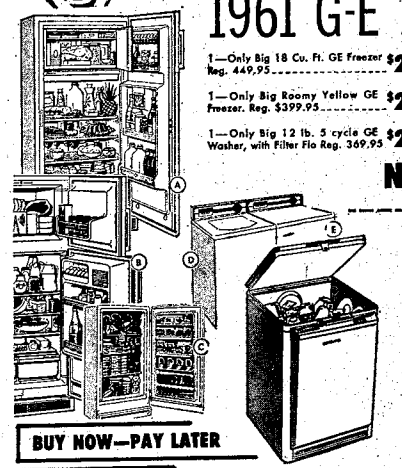
Under the old method of storage and distribution, valuable man-hours were wasted through lost motion and inadequate storage systems because materials were stored in separate areas in the warehouse. This made it necessary for the person assembling the lessons to go to several storage bins to gether the materials.



Only a small amount of lesson material could be handled at one time by the person assembling it this way. The rolling tables increase greatly the amount of material which can be gathered and assembled by one person.

Moving the mail bags from 100 feet away from the loading ramp to only 10 feet away decreases time and labor spent in loading the bags and rearranging warehouse facilities increased storage items from a 15-day stock level to a 30-day level.

The improvements are a part of the DNRI's efforts to service enrolled students as fast as possible, Col. Huppert said, adding that the increased performance and economy realized from the plan add up to financial savings in the operation of the department.



HAWK SYSTEM

The Hawk system uses guidance techniques unusually successful in hunting down and destroying the attacker. Hawks's radar "eye" ignores stationary objects, and instantly speeds the deadly Hawk missile toward a threatening moving aerial target.

Another Tall Tale

This "long drought" that has been in progress here at Fort Benning reminds me of the time we were working the night beat out of my former civilian newspaper's Hong Kong bureau. This was the day my greatest adventure as a newspaperman began.

It was raining that day as it frequently does in Hong Kong. When it would rain we started all stories with: "Under dismal clouds." So much for that.

Anyway, we were lounging around drinking coffee when we were told to get a picture and story on the rainstorm. "Under dismal clouds we went forth for a story."

This wasn't as hard as it may sound. We knew of a place where the drains were clogged and the slightest drizzle would flood the street. So, we would always take a rickshaw over to the spot, borrow a duck and let it paddle in the water. It was a fabulous picture. We must have used it 500 times.

Anyhow, just before we left, the fire department called. They were going to rescue a cat. There was no rain involved in this, but there was a lot of water.

This crazy cat had climped onto a post in the bay and was being trapped by the rising water.

Oh, my boss was ecstatic. "What a terrible storm," he raved. "Even the ocean is rising. Save that poor cat. I don't care how, but it must be saved."

It was no big thing. The firemen put a plank out to the rock and called:

"Hey, Cat."

But the stupid cat wouldn't come off the post. He was a tough-looking tomcat who probably had a past record of such things. Maybe he thought this was a pinch.

Pushing everyone aside, we moved to the plank. We were men of the press. We were the Fourth Estate. Surely the cat would understand this. But, unfortunately, he didn't. He still wouldn't come off the post.

We even put tuna fish out for him to eat. He just turned around two or three times and then went to sleep. All of the time the ocean was rising higher and higher.

I threw rocks at him, too, but even that didn't help.

Well, although I hate to admit the press was ever defeated, we left the animal there. (We left the plank there, too, although I had a notion to take it away and leave him stranded, but he probably couldn't have cared less.)

We went back to the newspaper office, threw a mangy old alley cat into a barrel of water and the photographer took a picture of me holding the ratty-looking thing.

We ran it full-page with a caption saying:

"Saved by Daring Reporter."

Like, A Wild Thanksgiving

Once upon a time, many years ago, the Pilgrims came to America.

The big, dark forests signaled danger so they all (get that Southern bit?) set about to build a shelter. The square leaders of the group swung a quick GI loan and in no time had a sturdy bungalow built.

But, as with all new adventures, things didn't go well for them. Their clothes were shot, they were bugged with disease, and they weren't getting their three squares a day.

So, they were about to give up the ghost and go back to merry old England when a wild thing happened—Squanto blew into town.

Now, like slowly, man, Squanto was a real swinger with a solid style. He rumbled on over the Pilgrim's hut, and applying his hairy knuckles to the door said, "Open up them swinging doors, Miles. Big Squanto is here."

But, old Miles Standish was a sports model cat with a suspicious nature and he wasn't about to open the door for anyone. (In all probability he had just finished reading the story of "The Big Bad Wolf.")

He replied, "Like, Truszkowsky, it's after closing."

"Why, Miles, I'm clean. I've came to show you how to plant corn."

The Pilgrims finally came out and let him demonstrate his great prowess at earthly corn growing. (Squanto being barefooted probably had a hard time growing any corns himself.)

He took a decayed (and how) fish, flung it into a hole along with some corn kernals, and it grew! (Minus the fishy flavoring, of course.)

The pilgrims were so thankful they decided to have a blast and invite all the cool kats up from Swingsville. Eventually, the blast become so successful they decided to have it every year.

Well, Trooper, it's that time of year again. And in any language you say it, hep or not, it's time to be thankful.

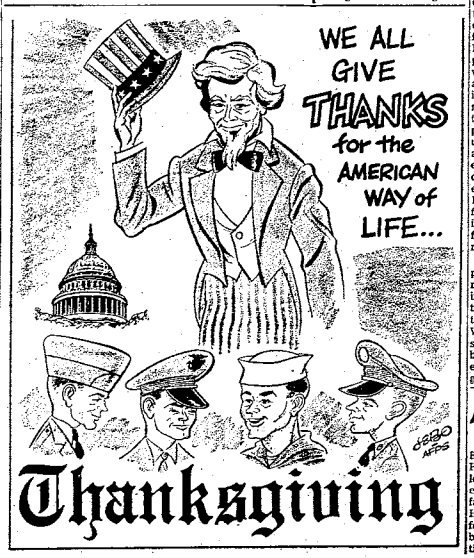
Editorial

More Thanks Due Now

(Editors Note: This Thanksgiving editorial was written by Pfc Henry E. Gladstone, Headquarters, 1st Infantry Brigade. The Bayonet extends an invitation for any Soldier to submit an editorial whenever he feels the need is present.)

We have more to be thankful for than the Pilgrims ever did. Long after the first Thanksgiving, men stood up to proclaim the rights of man and to establish a nation dedicated to preserve them. America was the first nation in history to realize that all men are created equal, and that all men have the right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.



Since that time other nations have followed America's lead. Some have been successful. Others have only used these ideals as a front for the age-old quest for power.

We can be thankful that our Nation was born with ideals of freedom. The responsibility left to us is to help ourselves grow, and in so doing, help all of humanity grow by proving that men can be not only prosperous, but Free.

The Surgeon Says

Control of Pests

By 1st Lt. Linnaeus B. Savage, MSC

With the coming of cooler weather people have a tendency to relax in their lookout for insects and rodents. Although many insects do not appear during autumn months, the following pests may be expected to be a problem this fall, and because they could be of medical importance to personnel their seriousness should be recognized.

COCKROACHES

Few homes or kitchens have been lucky enough to entirely escape the cockroach. This pest hides during the day in sheltered places, and being easily pleased as far as food is concerned, will readily feed on paper coverings on boxes and binding on books, as well as food products in pantries and kitchens. Since the cockroach is easily killed by the cold, it prefers high temperatures and humidity.

To control this repulsive insect, the first and most essential step is scrupulous cleaning of the home in order to eliminate the food supply. Also the cockroach must be prevented from moving from one building to another. Cracks in walls where it hides during the day as well as places where pipes come through the wall should be properly sealed. If this fails, insecticides used as a monthly spray are usually effective.

BEDBUGS

Bedbugs can be identified by being reddish-brown, flattened, and wingless. Since they live in close association with humans, they can be found in beds, mattresses, and luggage. Like the cockroach, they prefer heated buildings, and spend the day behind baseboards and in similar crevices which provide shelter. The bite of the bedbug causes itching and burning to a variable degree. It thrives on crowded living conditions. Here again, thorough cleanliness will reduce the number, but proper application of a residual spray will give control for six months.

FLEAS

The capability of this insect to transmit disease makes this insect an important pest. Just the irritating bite of the flea is enough to warrant control. Fleas readily feed on man, skunks and rodents, as well as on dogs and cats.

Control may be accomplished by three means: (1) spraying of the floor and rugs; (2) control of the flea on domestic animals by either dusting pets with proper formulations or excluding these pets from the building; and (3) control of rats and field rodents.

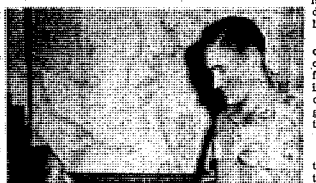
EARWIGS

Occasionally earwigs migrate into homes and buildings during the fall. They usually live in the soil and feed on other insects, plants, or decaying matter. The earwig has a conspicuous pair of hooks or forcepts at the end of the body which can effect quite a pinch. This is annoying but not dangerous. Insecticidal dusts applied around the outside of the house constitute the best control method.

RATS

Rats are a menace in that they damage buildings, contaminate and destroy supplies, and are a source of some diseases. They are found in buildings, dumps, rubbish piles, and burrows in the ground. One species prefers to live in attics, trees and shrubbery. The presence of rats is indicated by tracks, burrows, nests, droppings, gnawings, and runways.

There are a number of ways to get rid of the rat. It is estimated in some communities that 65 per cent of the rats could be controlled by good refuse sanitation measures. Elimination of their food supply is the first step, along with proper refuse disposal and ratproofing of the building. Another control measure, mainly for large-scale infestations, is the mixing of certain poisons with baits. Traps are used as a supplement to the above means. When the rats' environment has been thus changed, their enemies find it easier to find and kill them. In addition, competition for food among the remaining rats increases, causing them to fight one another. Thus the rodent population will go down.



In summary, the individual person can perform the primary steps in controlling these insects and rodents by practicing proper sanitation at the home as well as on the job. With adequate control of insects and rodents, disease can be reduced, supplies conserved, and a major nuisance in general can be reduced.

Data Processing--More Than Pushing Buttons

The hand-graded examination is fast becoming a thing of the past. Tests are now being graded by electronic accounting machines of the Data Processing Unit. This unit, which also prepares, processes, and updates student academic records, is operated by the Department of Non-Resident Instruction.

PFC FRANK REMMICK OPERATES

SFC JAMES CAMPBELL EXPLAINS
Operation to Mrs. Gloria Dixon

Approximately 13,000 officers and enlisted men attend resident classes here at the Infantry School each year and another 43,000 are enrolled in the extension course program. The number of examinations submitted annually by these students is well over half a million.

Data processing is a complex operation in which raw data is converted into a more useful form. The information is fed into the machine on punched cards. The machine quickly digests the data and computes the results.

There is no magic involved in this operation. Before an "electronic brain" can do as much as add one and one, human beings must tell it exactly what to do and, step by step, how to go about doing it.

These detailed instructions are conveyed to the machine through wired control boards referred to as "programming panels." In some cases, depending on the complexity of the program, it takes several weeks to prepare a single panel. Approximately 65 panels are employed in Data Processing Unit operations.

Examinations completed by resident classes are delivered to DPU by motor messenger from the Academic Records Section, Secretary's Office. Those submitted by extension course students are received by the Army Extension Course Committee, Department of Non - Resident Instruction, which is located in the same building with the DPU. After the correspondence has been sorted, it is forwarded to DPU, where it is logged in and assigned a "job-order" number.

Now the work begins. Master Sergeants Alymer E. Forwalter and Adrian W. Monohan, Chief Programmers, are the first to admit the machine grading is not as simple an operation as one might think. To illustrate, let's take a quick look at the non-resident grading program.

Extension Course Examinations

To help processing, certain identifying information such as enrollment number, subcourse number and edition, is punched into the examination card before it is mailed to the student. When the cards are returned for grading, they are processed through six to eight different machines depending on the particular examination.

The electronic sorter is used to separate the examination cards according to type and number of questions. Each group is then matched with the respective correct solution template on the collator. Both machines are operated by Pfc Robert J. Johnson and Pvt. Gerald J. McMenamin.

The answers that the student has selected are punched into his card by an electronic machine called an Optical Scanner. The card is then fed into the Computor, UNIVAC 120, by Pfc Herbert C. Rudolph and machine graded.

The graded examination is then used as a source document for updating the student's academic records and to prepare a certificate of subcourse completion. The certificate and the card are forwarded to the Army Extension Course Committee for additional processing and mailing.

When you consider that both resident and non-resident programs are processed concurrently, the complexity and magnitude of the operation become apparent.

Machines are no better than the men behind them. The initial success of DPU operations rightfully belongs to the Soldiers and civilian ladies of DNRI who, without the benefit of formal machine instruction or prior experience, are mastering the art of data processing.

NCO's

Distaff Doings

By Marianne Kelly

A very big event took place on November 15 at Crain Hall, the fashion show every one had been looking forward to. Since the original plans for a professional style show could not be worked out, the NCO Wives of Benning decided on a do-it-yourself affair.

This was only possible due to the untiring efforts of our program chairman, Dottie Rentrop and all the wonderful help we received from the owner of Edee's Dress Shop. It was actually a lot more fun for us to pick out the clothes and model them ourselves than to watch professionals show ensembles none of us could squeeze into in the first place. And didn't some of us feel like skipping town with those lovely clothes on! There were sports togs, street fashions and an array of gorgeous cocktail gowns, jewelry, hats and handbags.

We would like to express our thanks to Claudine from Edee's, who spent so many hours assisting us and also narrating the show in a most charming manner. Mrs. Howell deserves credit adding color and atmosphere with beautiful background music on the piano. Mrs. Davis and Mrs. McKnight were hostesses of the day serving refreshments to the guests.

The doorprize, a lovely dress, was won by lucky Mrs. John F. Kelly.

Anyone interested in a charm course, to be conducted by Mrs. Hacker, please call 545-1108.

A gift wrapping contest and a lesson in cake decorating are on the agenda for the next meeting at the clubhouse on November 29 at 1 p.m.

The bridge group is still looking for new members. Don't be afraid to join us thinking we are all experts! On the contrary, some of us are still beginners. Maybe we could learn something from you! ! ! See you at Crain Hall every Tuesday 9-12. For any information please call Mrs. Sassner at 545-5410 or Mrs. Kelly at 544-2747.

Six Post Girl Scouts Pinned During Hideaway Ceremonies

Six Fort Benning Girl Scouts were pinned in an investiture service Saturday, November 4, at "Hideaway," a retreat on the post.

Receiving Girl Scout pins at the candlelight service were Holly Lynn, Mary Moreno, Carla Weeks, Hilda Stevens, Kathy Hyatt and Diane Barbee.

To qualify to wear the Girl Scout pin, a Scout must complete nine requirements. She must know the salute, sign and handshake, correct display and use of the American flag, recite the 10 laws of scouting, be familiar with the history of Girl Scouting, the World Association of Girl Guides and Girl Scouts, be able to explain what use is made of scout dues, exhibit certain skills in homemaking and outdoor activities and make the "Girl Scout Promise."

The investiture was part of a weekend program of activities at Hideaway in which 24 members of Troop No. 138 participated.

Assisted by First Class Scouts, many of the girls completed Tenderfoot and Second Class Scout requirements.

Attending the camp, in addition to the six Scouts who were pinned, were Carolyn Bailey, Gail Bardis, Linda Bell, Penny Booth, Brenda Cabler, Cheralyn Hendrix, Cissy Harloam, Cathy Jestice, Marlene Liggett, Geraldine Moulder, Donette Payne, Evelyn Rivera, Kathleen Rhotenberry, Linda Thompson, Jerry Yoder, Lillian Rupp, Veronica Bush and Wendy Davis.

Supervising the activities of the camp were Mrs. Inge Liggett, troop leader; Mrs. Pat Booth, co-leader, and Mrs. Shirleen Edwards and Mrs. Peggy Hall.

The Messiah Rehearsals

A rehearsal for Handel's "The Messiah" at Benning was held Monday at 7:30 p.m. at the Main Post Protestant Chapel.

Other rehearsals are scheduled for November 27 and December 4 and 11.

The oratorio will be presented December 17 at 8 p.m. in the chapel.

The chorus is composed of members of post choirs, church choirs from the civilian community, Infantryman's Chorus, Woman's Club Chorus and other singers.

The presentation will be under the direction of Mrs. David L. Buckner. It is sponsored by the Infantry Center Chaplains Section.

Student Bottolion Coffee For Wives

Mrs. Vern Joseph, wife of Lt. Col. Joseph, commander of the 2nd Student Battalion, The Student Brigade, held a coffee at her home on November 6 for the Battalion cadre wives.

The ladies discussed and planned several activities to be held in December.

Mrs. Robert Norse was present as an invited guest.

Woman's Club Diary

If you find that Debbie Drake at 7:30 am is a bit early when you are trying to get lunches packed, children fed, and husbands off to work, but you still need to lose a few pounds and inches before the Holiday season, now is the time to enroll in the Slim'n Trim Classes. Mrs. Neil Stewart, 545-2517, is chairman of this popular activity which meets twice weekly in Building 1046. In addition to the exercises, a Stauffer couch is available for the pleasant way to reduce unwanted inches. Call now for registration information.

An advanced class in ceramics is being offered to members of the club who want further training in techniques. You may register any time at the Ceramics Workshop, Building 1061.

Sally Starker has been hard at work getting out the invitations to members of the Woman's Club for the "Plantation Christmas," Luncheon and Bazaar, scheduled for Wednesday, December 6, at the Main Officers Club. If you have not as yet joined the club, you may do so at the Luncheon. Only members will receive invitations, but all wives are invited to come and join them. Call Mrs. D. D. Dixon, 545-1416, for your reservation. The Army Medical Services wives are sponsoring this event and it will be a beautiful setting for the program which features Mrs. Lancaster's Choral Group and members of the School of Dance, trained by Mrs. Howard Wilson. I have seen some of the Bazaar items, and they are just lovely. A good way to pick up some original, inexpensive Christmas gifts.

Approximately 550 persons gathered last Saturday evening at the Main Officers Club for the Annual Distaff Dinner Dance, sponsored by the Woman's Club to raise funds for the Army Distaff Foundation.

The foundation is an organization devoted to the establishment of a residence hall in Washington D. C. for the widows, mothers, and sisters of Army officers, active and retired.

Entering the club, guests were transported to the Tidal Basin in spring, complete with cherry trees, the familiar Jefferson Memorial, and a large reproduction of the Distaff Hall itself. Decorations were planned and carried out by Mrs. James H. Phillips. The Distaff Hall was done by Mrs. Carl Lange. Other Committees included: Chairman, Mrs. A. D. Surles, Jr.; Co-Chairmen: Mrs. Bernard G. Teeters, and Mrs. Austin Yerks; Hostesses: Mrs. Robert E. Conner and Mrs. John Arthur; Tickets: Mrs. William McKee and Mrs. Gustav Bacharach; and Decorations: Mrs. Ralph Hughett.

Major Austin yerks acted as Master of Ceremonies for an varied and exciting floor show, which featured Mrs. Ellen Buckner, Mrs. Barbara Downs, Don Mattson, and Father James F. Dolan.

A variety of door prizes were awarded.

All Benningites are enjoying the first real vacation since school has started. Everyone is thankful for these days to finish up the extra work and spent a little time relaxing. Isn't it great?

Tomorrow doesn't just mark another date on the calendar, it is Thanksgiving. Sometimes we seem to forget just what it symbolizes. Let's flip back through the pages of our American history and refresh our memories. The pilgrims originated the day we just observed. It was their way of expressing their thanks of reaching this great land we know today. They were thankful for their successful community, friendly relations with the Indians, and a copious harvest. Our blessings are unlimited in our modern democratic nation.

A turkey or five dollars was given to Patricia Riobargh and Malcolm Poser. They were holders of the winning raffle tickets. Junior Army Daughters sponsored the Turkey Raffle and much of the proceeds will go to charity projects.

Galle McClain, Jerry Paulick, and Sue Clark have been trying out their skills in the masculine world of football. You have probably heard them murmer about their sore muscles. These Benningite representatives will participate in the Powders vs. Puffs game at eight o'clock on December 2, at the Memorial Stadium. This game is a Columbus High Senior project to raise money for a gift to the school. Admission is 50 cents for students and $1.00 for adults. A group of boys will demonstrate grace as they act as sponsors and Cheerleaders. This promises to be a night filled with laughter and memories.

Rehearsals have begun for Bell, Book and Candle, Columbus High's first play this year. The male lead of this story of modern witchcraft was awarded to Ted Franklin. Hal Hilstand will play the part of Nicky, a member of the witch clan. Several other Benningites will have parts making this production under Miss Chandler's direction a success.

The gridiron has been replaced by the hardwood court. Columbus High won the BICity last year; however, Baker held the championship for the 9 previous years. There will certainly be a tremendous amount of rivalry between the two schools. Returnees are numerous and practicing hard is one school to defend its title and the other to revenge it.

Two of Columbus High's Senior Attractees live on Post. Carlyle Park, and Walter Todd were chosen by the Senior class from a list of twenty-two boys.

Recently the Columbus High French Club had its first meeting and elected officers. Frances Clark, president; Barbara Hare, vice - president; Mary Beth Williams, secretary; and Lee Short, treasurer; all from Fort Benning. "Les Bon Amis" are planning service projects.

Thanksgiving will bring home many college students. Those of us still in high school enjoy seeing our old frinds again. Among those home will be Mickey Bennet, Cindy Bracelett, Tom Surls, Jerry Fiser, Judy Harrison, and Sandra Taylor.

Academic Ladies Meet at Luncheon

A bi-monthly luncheon was held recently for the Academic Custer Terrace Officers Club by the ladies of the Operations office.

Fall flowers, fruit and vegetables added to the harvest season mood of the Luncheon.

Mr. Charles Duck, of Columbus, gave a demonstration on home furnishings. MSgt. Frank Hardin provided music for the affair.

Guests at the luncheon were Mrs. N. Frisby, guest of Mrs. Bruce McClure; Mrs. Blair, guest of Mrs. Richard W. Keyes; Mrs. Stubbs, guest of Mrs. Robert S. Rose; Mrs. Mary Cowan, guest of Mrs. John W. Jackson and Mrs. G. A. Tunton Sr., guest of Mrs. G. A. Tunton Jr.

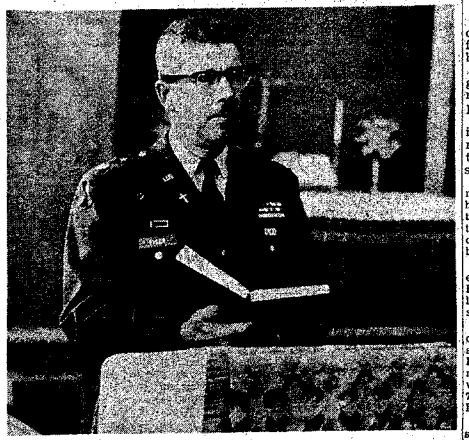
Thanksgiving to Be a 'Family Day'

Chapels Plan Special Services

Thanksgiving, tomorrow, is to be a family day in the 2nd Infantry Division.

Division Soldiers may bring their families and guests to Thanksgiving Day religious services in the morning. Mess halls are planning to have large numbers of guests at the traditional Thanksgiving turkey dinner.

Service club activities throughout the day have been augmented to accomodate the families of division servicemen.



Religious Services

Special services for both Protestants and Catholics will be held tomorrow morning at Sand Hill and Kelley Hill chapels.

A combined Protestant service will be held at Sand Hill's Chapel Three at 10 a.m., with Chaplain (Major) Russell K. Lee, Chaplain (Lieutenant) Gerald R. Ristau, Chaplain (Lieutenant) Robert C. Harlee and Chaplain (Lieutenant) Bob E. Murdock officiating.

A protestant service will be held in Sand Hill's Chapel Four at 11:30 a.m., Chaplain (Cap-

TO: The Officers and Men of the 2d Infantry Division

On November 23, 1961, Americans everywhere will observe Thanksgiving Day. This American holiday, established by the pilgrims as they offered thanks to God for His rich blessings, is a traditional day of prayer.

I urge each of you to pause on this day and give thanks to your God for His bountiful goodness which is so richly reflected in our American way of life.

Troops Display Ability On Simulated Battlefield

BY PETER TATISTCHEFF

Men of the 2nd Infantry Division were getting on with "IT" in a big way this week — with their first full-scale division exercise in simulated combat conditions.

Leaving only a minimum security force in the garrison areas on Sand Hill and Kelley Hill, the men pulled out Sunday, ready for four days of physical and mental conditioning.

"IT" (Intensified Training) reached perhaps its most important phase — the division-size maneuver, where the men had to display the technical skills and teamwork learned in smaller-scale tests this fall.

The foot soldier with his M-1 rifle and the commander with his tactical background pooled their experience and training this week to show what they could accomplish, given a combat situation.

The 2nd Division, commanded by Major General Charles H. Chase, was tested in a non-live - fire, controlled exercise scheduled to end today.

The exercise was under the direction of the division's Assistant Division Commander, Brigadier General Royal Reynolds Jr. The "aggressor" role was portrayed by the division's 7th Cavalry, commanded by Lt. Col. Harvey Scott.

This unit, a reconnaissance squadron, has taken on the "aggressor" mission in smaller battle group exercises earlier this fall.

Detachments from The Infantry Center at Fort Benning and units from other Third U. S. Army installations were made available to the "Indianhead" division to aid in controlling and testing the men.

The general situation presented to the 2nd Division was the following:

An aggressor nation has launched a full-scale attack against the major cities in the nation. This attack began in mid-September, during which time cities were bombed and invasions were landed along the southern and eastern coasts.

As the fighting progressed,

Band Plays New Tune--With Rifles

As yet no member of the 2nd Division band has played music on his M-1 rifle or fired a round from his baritone horn —however, this would not be totally impossible.

The 2nd Infantry Division Band, under the direction of Chief Warrant Officer Mariano Morales, took on a dual mission this fall, combining their function as a band with a new mission — security platoon for Division Trains.

Training Sergeant

Sergeant First Class Fred Hill, who arrived recently from an assignment in Europe, joined the band as training sergeant to help guide the 42-man band in its new combat-ready mission.

Maintaining security and running tactical problems are two responsibilities in addition to the band's entertainment function. As they complete Basic Infantry Training they continue to provide music both for military occasions and for the entertainment of 2nd Division Troops.

Three non-commissioned-officers, who are regular bandsmen, have taken charge of the band's three squads. Sergeant Eddie Underwood, who plays baritone horn, doubles as squad leader as his men lay down their instruments to concentrate on squad in attack and squad in defense training. The other two squad leaders are Sergeant First Class Harold Emigh, bass horn player, and Sergeant First Class Elmer Warma, who also is a drummer.

Upon completion of their Basic Infantry Training, the bandsmen function as security platoon with Division Train's in the field.

Families Invited

Div Mess Halls Spend Weeks On Thanksgiving Preparations

The enlisted men, officers and their families of the 2nd Infantry Division will enjoy a festive Thanksgiving spread this week—thanks in part, to the strenuous efforts of the men who will not be able to take part in the festivities that day—the oft-forgotte n mess personnel.

For mess stewards and their staffs, the Thanksgiving meal is more than just the luxury meal that appears to those who sit down to dinner tomorow.

For instance, take a look at Company B, 87th Infantry's efforts.

Prodigious Effort

In statistics alone, the meal represents a prodigious effort: 140 pounds of turkey, 100 pounds of potatoes, 52 pounds of ham, 70 pies. This doesn't take into account the salads, the vegetables, shrimp cocktail or other pastries.

Preparations start weeks before the final tray is heaped with turkey on Thanksgiving Day. In order to draw rations, the mess steward, Staff Sergeant Walter Seed, had to poll the company to find the number of members who would bring their families as guests. Then, beside the gastronomical aspect, there are other problems that need to be worked out in advance.

The decorations, for example — the corn stalks and pumpkins and the crepe paper streamers — don't actually go up before Thursday, but they have to be rounded up beforehand. The table arrangement and method of serving are two more problems that have to be worked out before the mess hall opens its doors Thursday afternoon.

The two shifts of mess personnel, Specialist Five Clarence A. Dindore, Specialist Four Robert McMillan, Specialist Four Roy D. Humphries and Private First Class Warren C. Vroeman, heat up their ovens Wednesday afternoon for the large and difficult operation of roasting the birds. Into the five ovens go the first of the turkeys, followed on a hazardous time schedule by more turkeys, pies, rolls, dressing, and ham.

Complicating this year's work for Bravo's mess personnel is the division field exercise, which will keep the men in the field right up to the last minute. When the mess moves into garrison it will have its field gear to clean and Thursday's breakfast and evening meals to prepare.

When Bravo personnel sit down to their Thanksgiving meal this week, they can be thankful, along with many other things, for their mess staff.

Thanks to Quartermaster

Five Tons of Turkey A BIG Meal Do Make

How many cans of cranberry sauce does it take to sweeten five tons of turkey?

This was a problem faced by the 2nd Division Quartermaster in preparing for tomorrow's Thanksgiving meal.

Second Division troops, fresh from a four-day field exercise, will be dined in style.

Colossal amounts of the traditional Thanksgiving meal "fixings" have begun their annual march from marketplaces in the South to division mess halls .... 10,000 pounds of golden brown roasted turkey being the main attraction.

The Menu

Mess tables will sag with the weight of shrimp cocktail, roast turkey, mashed potatoes, candied sweet potatoes, buttered peas, buttered succotash, assorted crisp relishes, cloverleaf rolls, pumpkin pie, mince meat pie, assorted fruits, candies, mixed nuts and fruit cake ... will that do for one meal?

And here's the answer to that question — it takes 1,380 cans of cranberry sauce to sweeten five tons of turkey.

Division Soldiers may invite guests to join them in their Thanksgiving meal.

The work of planning, procuring, storing, issuing, preparing and serving of the huge feast is under the direction of the 2nd Division Quartermaster, Lieutenant Colonel James T. Durham.

No point, however small, has been overlooked in preparing this meal.

Turkey, Bands Planned For Busy NCO Weekend

Thanksgiving Dinner with all the trimmings will be served at the 2nd Infantry Division Non - Commissioned Officers' Club from 12 to 3 p.m. tomorrow.

Leading off the menu will be shrimp cocktail with a main course of roast young tom turkey, giblet gravy, cornbread dressing, assorted relishes, yams, assorted rolls, ice tea and coffee to follow.

Price of the meal is $1.50 with children under 12 years of age served at half price.

That evening the NCO club will feature Fred Peterson's Band.

Fate Woodham's hill-billy and western band is scheduled for Friday night along with ladies' club bingo.

Saturday night, Tom Hipp's band is scheduled for entertainment while the band of Jack Garrett is set for Sunday evening.

That's like looking for a golf ball in a sand trap in the Sahara Desert.

USO Show Features Ex-WAC Magician

Over 400 2nd Division men Saturday night were treated to a star-studded USO Show from Atlanta.

But it was a slight, graying lady waving a magic wand that stole the show.

Her identification card read "Genevieve F. Harris, Sergeant First Class," but she is known from the Pentagon to the Guard House as "Granny."

She was part of 22-member cast on a two-day visit here, their first.

The show began with a combo playing "Hold It," followed by Sandra Ellenburg, mistress of ceremonies, who received a rousing welcome from the 2nd Division men.

First half of the show was highlighted with individual dances and vocals.

Following an intermission when refreshments were served by the troupe, "Granny" Harris made her appearance.

Many men who took part in the Korean Conflict remember "Granny." While in Korea, "Granny" and her magical powers were in demand at all bases and hospitals for 28 months, beginning early in 1950.

During this time, she traveled more than 40,000 miles and gave 1,410 shows.

"Granny" has performed at service clubs, mess halls, hospitals and troop trains.

"I have performed in Korea under a tarpaulin stretched to keep me dry while soldiers sat out in the rain to watch and distant guns applauded."

During the show, "Granny", resplendent in a dress blue uniform, made magic with rabbits, shirts, lipstick, handkerchiefs, watches, and, finally, turned a silk scarf into a large American flag.

Another act that stole the show was a hula dance performed by pretty Carol Porter.

"Granny" Harris retired from the Army two years ago at the age of 65. She is now, however, "ready to go again."

Early next January, she plans to leave for Europe, this time as part of the Army, Navy and Air Force Overseas Entertainment Troupe.

Mortar Platoon Has Eyes, Bones, Nervous System

LOADING 25-POUND SHELL INTO A 4.2 MORTAR
From Left, Pvt. Berber, SFC L. Barber, PFC J. Friend and Sp4 F. Byrd

The 87th Infantry Conquerors have a heavy punch.

Coming at you from the ground up, you never see it, and it's deadly accurate.

It belongs to the Conquerors 4.2 inch mortar platoon, which has the mission of providing close and continuous indirect fire support for the maneuver elements of the battle group.

Combined Efforts

This is one punch, though, that can't be claimed by one man.

Rather, it's a product of the combined efforts of 80 men and officers under the command of Lieutenant John F. Collier. The 87th Infantry mortar-men think of it this way:

There are four basic areas in the platoon. First, the mortar squads themselves—they are the "muscle and bones"; second, the forward observers — the "eyes and ears"; third, the fire direction center — "nervous system" and fourth — the wire team, which tailors together the dismembered gladiator.

Put him through a well-planned and disciplined training program which bathes him in the sweat of topnotch private Soldiers and hammers into his head the professional knowledge of the best Non-Commissioned Officers in the Army. Then, "Aggressor, take cover, because you're up against a well-conditioned, smoothly-coordinated, heavy punching, "sudden death" opponent".

The 87th Infantry, commanded by Colonel Robert E. Connor, has had a long and varied training program this past year, i.e., everything from Basic Combat Training, last March, through the platoon and unit training, to the Intensified Combat Training Program now underway.

Coming Red Cross Visit To Boost Percentage

When the Red Cross bloodmobile returns for a two-day visit to the 2nd Infantry Division in December, the amount collected then will increase the percentage by which the Indianhead unit has surpassed its yearly goal.

Some 2,117 pints of blood have been donated thus far, according to Sergeant Henry Kile, the division's safety NCO.

One-Visit-Early

This amount puts the division comfortably over its 3,000-pint goal and does so one-donation-visit early.

The bloodmobile is from the Atlanta Regional Blood Center, and it has visited the division every other month this year.

On previous visits, 702 pints were donated in April, 608 pints in June, 575 in August and 298 in October — all well over the 500 pint per visit goals.

Distributed

The blood is donated through the American Red Cross under the Army Blood Donor Program.

It is taken to Atlanta where it is typed and processed for use and then distributed to hospitals, both military and civilian, that are a part of the Red Cross Blood Program. Veterans Administration and Public Health hospitals are also members of this program as is Fort Benning's Martin Army Hospital.

The whole blood is available for use for 21 days, and if not used by then, it is processed into blood plasma.

Deadline: December 9

Interest Grows in Division's Color Photo Slide Contest

Interest is mounting in the division's "Getting Combat Ready" color photo contest, reports Mrs. Eleanor Sabota, Service Club Two program director.

"Many inquiries are coming in," said Mrs. Sabota, "and we look for many exciting entries."

Prizes

The contest, which closes at 10 p.m. December 9, is open to all division personnel and offers first, second and third place prizes in three categories. The contest is sponsored by Service Club Two and Service Club Four.

The categories are:

Category I: Personnel and/or combat units actively engaged in Infantry field training.

CategoryII: Artillery personnel and/or units actively engaged in Artillery field training.

Category III: Personnel and service type units actively engaged in support roles of the division's combat units in the field.

All entries must be color slides in cardboard mounts and on 35 milimeter film or 828 film. A limit of six slides in each category may be entered.

Entry blanks, available at the service clubs, must accompany each entry.

Capt. Rohland At 11th Inf.

Captain Richard R. Rohland recently assumed command of Company C, 1st Battle Group, 11th Infantry.

Captain Rohland succeeds Captain Donald M. Fann who will serve as Assistant S-3, with the 11th Infantry.

Engrs. Get New Mine Detector

Modernization of today's Army is physically evidenced in the equipment recently received by the 2nd Engineer Battalion.

The battalion has begun training with the Army's new mobile mine detector, which is mounted on a quarter-ton truck (Jeep), and is utilized for visual and audible detection of anti-tank and anti-personnel land mines.

Mine detection and clearing, one of the engineer support missions, will be accomplished in comparatively short order in the future by the use of this mobile unit.

Signal Devices

The set is equipped with three highly-sensitive signal devices which detect and warn of the presence and location of mines. When a mine is detected through an audible signal in the headset, the vehicle is automatically braked to a complete stop.

The search coil carriage is then steered until the exact location of the mine is determined. Since it is heavy, the search coil carriage is counterbalanced through a boom and cables so that the three skid-caster type wheels exert significantly lighter loads on the ground.

The set can be put into operation by two men in six minutes, and, due to its accuracy and mobility, is expected to greatly expedite support of the division in mine detection and neutralization on routes of advance and communication.

PROMOTED . . . Lieutenant Colonel Edward B. Blackman was promoted to his present rank in ceremonies at the office of Major General Charles H. Chase, division commanding general. Col. Blackman is assigned to the office of the Assistant Chief of Staff, G-3.

Thanksgiving Safety Drive Begins

A lesson-plan entitled "Safety Organization — Thanksgiving Holidays 1961" has been published by the division's Adjutant General to acquaint all personnel with the heightened accident possibilities expected during Thanksgiving Day weekend, and to offer suggestions as to how such accidents can be avoided.

The lesson-plan is "a guide" at this time in the year when "we find more people making a desperate effort to visit families and friends."

Accident Reasons

Three principal reasons for Fort Benning private vehicle accidents are outlined as:

1. Excessive speed — not always driving at a blind unreasonable speed, but most often in driving too fast for your headlight range, too fast for a poorly designed or constructed road, or too fast for a wet and slippery road surface.

2. Driving under the influence of intoxicants.

3. Attempting to drive too far in too short a time.

The guide states tha "motor vehicle accidents can be prevented by the exercise of common sense and the observance of a few fundamental rules for safe conduct. The individual driver usually has some means of controlling the possibility of his becoming an accident victim."

Accident prevention ideas are listed:

1. Allow sufficient time to make your trip safely.

2. Never plan to drive more than 300 miles per day, or longer than eight hours.

3. Plan your trip to avoid driving at night — most of us are more susceptible to "nodding" when driving at night.

4. If you must drive longer than you would normally consider safe, try the following means of off-setting drowsiness:

a. Keep plenty of fresh air in the car.

b. Engage in light conversation if you have passengers. It is wise to have passengers if you have to drive over a long period.

c. Pull off the road when drowsy, and take a nap. Take care in selecting your place to do this, however.

d. Park the car and rest your eyelids by pressing the index fingers gently on your eyelids.

e. Drink coffee or strong tea to stimulate wakefulness.

f. Avoid alcoholic drinks. They cause or intensify drowsiness.

g. Rest frequently by getting out of the car and walking around.

h. If you have a passenger whom you can trust to drive your car let him "spell" you when you become tired.

The division Adjutant General, in the safety guide, suggests that personnel consider carefully the facilities for recreation available on post and in nearby communities before deciding what to do during the Thanksgiving weekend.

He adds that "regardless of where you may choose to spend your holiday, it is still necessary to observe common sense precaution. Don't forget that even if you are fortunate enough to have the four-day weekend free of military duties, travel time cuts into your time for other activities and adds to the possibility of your becoming an accident statistic."

2nd Div Museum Expanding --But Plans Bigger Things

BY GORDON ALDERMAN

Brimming with mementos and documents of three major conflicts, the 2nd Division Museum presently is in the midst of an ambitious expansion program.

Wall maps pointing out the routes trod by "Second to None" Infantrymen — and the campaigns the division fought in — are part of three large recently-added displays covering World War I, World War II and the Korean Conflict.

But that's only the beginning. The displays are all constructed in sections, so that more items can be included as they are donated.

Behind the Scenes

The driving force behind this program is Lieutenant David J. Jones of the 2nd Military Intelligence Department. Lieutenant Jones designed and built the displays and has even more ideas in the works.

As time allows, he has plans for display cases down the center of the museum, filled with documents and materials.

Many items have been donated to the museum recently, including mementos from World War I.

Found in the World War I display are copies of "Stars and Stripes," orders to new recruits, maps, postcards, pay records, even a song written in that era, dedicated to the men of the Indianhead Division.

Captain Vernon Justice of the Military Intelligence Detachment donated the spiked Imperial German helmet found in the display. Made of leather, the helmet was used both as parade gear and in the trenches. During the latter part of the war, this leather helmet was replaced with steel headgear, as Allied artillerymen became more accurate and casualties mounted.

Found in the same display is a propaganda leaflet dropped on the men of the 2nd Division, a "message from the skies" from their commander, Major General John A. Lejeune. This is, perhaps, the first recorded "brainstorm" of an information officer, and the first use of airplanes for propaganda purposes.

(Editor's note:) This is the first in a series of articles featuring the 2nd Infantry Division Museum.

87th Inf Poet Authors New Book of Poems--'I'

By 87th Inf PIO

Private First Class Gordon Fitch is a fire direction computer assigned to the mortar section of Company A, 1st Battle Group, 87th Infantry.

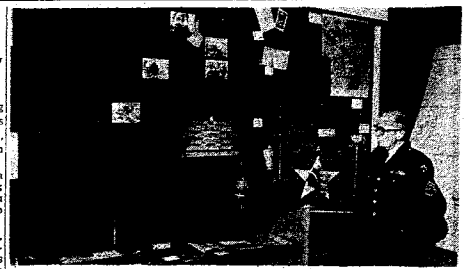
He also is a poet.

Private Fitch has recently published a book of his poems called "I." A hard-cover book published by Vantage Press of New York, "I" is a collection of 23 short poems and one rather long poetic drama.

New Yorker

The author of "I" is a native of New York but likes to think of New England as his home-land. He spent five years being formally educated at Phillips Academy and Yale University, and two years "informally on the road."

He thinks none of this is a qualification for writing poetry; instead "a demon seizes you by the neck, and you have to start working on a poem."



In a note to the reader, which prefaces his book, Private Fitch relates his feelings about his work: "Poetry is what in words is ecstatic. Consequently none of it is pleasant, because ecstasy is agony and terror as well as joy. And none of it is easy, because in ecstasy the heart pounds, the brain turns incandescent, the blood becomes a river of ice. None of which is ease. If this verse drives you into ecstasy, I have succeeded. If it disturbs and irritates you, it is not a total loss."

For those interested, a copy of this book will be available for inspection at Company A, 87th Infantry.

WORTH REPEATING

"This country needs and, unless I mistake its temper, the country demands bold, persistent experimentation. It is common sense to take a method and try it. If it fails, admit it frankly and try another. But above all, try something."

— Franklin D. Roosevelt

A Thanksgiving Story

'Your Help is Always Around Me'

BY INGRID KRAUS

"In this poor family of mine, your help is great and enormous. I only thank God for your favour and help towards me."

These words of grateful appreciation are contained in a letter written by a 12-year-old Korean boy and addressed to the Women of the 87th Infantry.

Although Hyun Wook Park addressed the women as "aunts," they became more like mothers when they "adopted" him.

Sponsorship

The wives are sponsoring Hyun Wook through the program of the Save the Children Federation, a non-sectarian, non - profit organization dedicated to helping children both at home and overseas.

The donations of the 87th wives are providing Hyun Wook with clothing, food, school supplies and some cash.

The women, in search of a philanthropic project, decided to sponsor a Korean orphan when their former OVUREP status indicated that the 87th might be going to Korea. Although Hyun is not an orphan, he is in need of help. His father, a laborer, has to support the family of seven.

Children selected for sponsorship through Save the Children Federation have been recommended by recognized indigenous social agencies with adequate professional standards.

Selection criteria is based upon evidence of need and belief that a sponsorship will aid the family to help itself to solve its current problems, one of which might be to raise school fees.

The Education Problem

By law, Korea has compulsory education; and elementary education, covering the first six grades, is alleged to be free. However, in fact, the governmental appropriation is never sufficient and individual school boards are empowered to assess fees to cover repairs, maintenance and even additions to buildings and increased teachers' wages. This fee must be met if the child is to stay in school and in many areas keeps as many as 50 per cent of the eligible children out of school.

In his letter to the women of the 87th, Hyun Wook tells about his family and that he is studying very hard to get into "middle school" next year. He writes:

"I worried very much whether I could enter middle school or not, but I am studying only hard, believing that your help is always around me."

Another letter, written by Hyun Wook's mother, reads in part: "After we got your gift from you, we came to respect American service men here who came to Korea to protect us from communists' aggression and to keep our lives and property, in much different way from which we used to do."

Both letters are written in Korean, but the SCF field office in Seoul translated the letters and sent both the translations and the originals.

The 87th wives are planning to correspond once a month with Hyun Wook and his family. For Christmas they will send a card and a group picture.

The sponsorship, which will last for one year, costs $150.

Div FTX Ends Today

the tide of battle turned toward Atlanta and the "Second to None" division was called upon to prevent any further movement.

Given this situation, the division units received their initial mission — to establish strong lines of defense.

With protective masks strapped to their sides, carrying individual weapons, the helmeted Soldiers began the job—"digging in," and camouflaging, laying barbed wire, building road blocks and mine fields—doing all they had been trained to do to create impenetrable positions.

Once the lines were established the vigil began. The men lived and worked as they would under combat conditions as they waited to engage the "enemy."

It was up to the "aggressor" force to probe, harrass and, finally move upon the men in their defense positions. They did.

Commanders were ready with carefully - prepared tactical plans coordinating the resources of rifle platoons, weapons platoons, support units, engineers, artillery potential and all the varied skills possessed by a division.

Reaction Ability

Isolated skirmishes turned into solid attacks and counter-attacks as the battle groups and their support elements met the "enemy" and displayed their reaction ability on the "battlefield."

Realism was the keynote. Blank ammunition had been issued to the men. Tear gas and smoke bombs were used, adding to the realistic effect. The men were carefully controlled and watched over by umpires and controllers.

The 7th Cavalry Soldiers, dressed in green and brown "aggressor" uniforms, moved against the rest of the division and clashed in simulated battle.

Following the four-day exercise, which ended today, the men returned to the garrison area to begin the job of evaluating, examining and understanding the value of their performance in the field.

87th Inf Began With Ski Training

Unique in its inception, youngest of all Regular Army units, the 87th Infantry was constituted at Fort Lewis, Washington November 15, 1941.

Ski training was started that winter on the slopes of Mount Rainier, Washington. Back at Fort Lewis, the 87th Infantry became the first of a limited number of units specially trained for mountain warfare.

The 87th Regiment hit the beaches of the Kiska Islands in the Aleutians on the morning of August 13, 1943, and quickly scaled the rocky cliffs to gain its objective. Although the Japanese forces had secretly withdrawn before the assault, it was still the first land counter-offensive against the Japanese.

After the assault on Kiska the 87th returned to Camp Carson, Colorado, and then went to Camp Hale, where it became part of the 10th Mountain Division. After additional training at Camp Swift, Texas, the 87th sailed for Naples, Italy, in January 1945.

World War II

In the final spring offensive of the war, the 87th spearheaded the Fifth Army in the Apennines offensive, breaking the final German resistance in Northern Italy and crossing the Po River. The attack began April 14, 1945 and lasted for nine days, with the 87th becoming the first Allied troops to cross the Po River. The campaign ended May 2 with the German surrender.

The regiment, after three months in Italy, listed 393 killed, 1,250 wounded and not a man lost to the enemy as a prisoner. The 87th thus became the first regiment to conduct operations in both the Pacific and European theaters.

The 87th was scheduled to return to Camp Carson for additional training and then move to the Pacific Theater. Three days after landing in the States, Japan unconditionally surrendered. The regiment was inactivated November 21, 1945 at Camp Carson.

On July 1, 1948 the 87th was redesignated as part of the 10th Infantry Division at Fort Riley, Kansas. During the Korean Conflict, the regiment trained replacements for infantry combat units in Korea.

tournament, and Private First Class Dalé E. Vaughn accepted the trophy for the first-place cross country team.

The ceremony concluded with an address by Colonel Connor. He commended the unit on its success in both the company and battle group tests. He outlined the role of the 87th in the scheduled division problem and closed his talk by again praising the battle group's athletic accomplishments.

A cake was presented to the Conquerors by the 11th Infantry Wanderers.

ernoon defeat of Division Trains to the tune of 39-0.

Offensive Stars

This game provided a new set of offensive stars, proving the versatility of the Conqueror team. Richard Scott proved his running ability by plowing up the middle for two touchdowns in the first quarter.

Isaac Scott also set up a number of other 87th touchdowns by grabbing every airborne football thrown by either side.

A perfectly - executed Scott-to - Chester Berroud lateral broke the spirit of Division Trains and made the halftime score 19-0.

The second half saw another series of "Lincoln Specials" as Major Lincoln faked, dodged and sprinted his way through the Division Trains defense for three more touchdowns, making the final score 39-0.

The defensive team, aggressively led by Ronald Gay, Clarence Williams, Thomas McCool and Harry Tomlin, put on an outstanding performance.

Playing the 11th Infantry on a clear and cold night last Thursday, the 87th put on a display of football talent.

Although a number of players deserve credit for the 26-7 score, such as quarterbacks Fred Wilcox and Robert C. Lowry, the show really belonged to the 87th Infantry ends, Berroud and Lincoln.

Berroud's play in the first half gave the 87th three touchdowns before the 11th got their only score of the game. The second half belonged to Lincoln, who put on an unstoppable running exhibition. Isaac Scott scored the final touchdown on a fine pass play from Lowry.

The Friday night 1-0 win over the absent Separate Battalions team gave the 87th team the needed rest for the game against Division Trains, played on the following afternoon.

87th League Still Looking For Leader

By 87th Inf PIO

The 87th Infantry Bowling League is still looking for a team that can hold down first place for more than one week.

As of last Friday, Charlie Company had a shaky lead over Headquarters Company and Echo Company.

Month To Go

With only about a month remaining in the tournament, these three teams have been passing the top slot around among them since the formation of the league.

Headquarters owes its success largely to Leonard Shoemaker, who is leading the league with an average of 176.

Other outstanding players in the league include Glenn McCommon, of fourth-place Company A, who has an average of 172 along with a high game of 279 and a high series of 648.

30-6 Score Climaxes 9th, 1st Contest

By 1st Inf PIO

The 1st Infantry wrapped up its regular season of flag football play Saturday afternoon, defeating the 9th Infantry "nine," 30-6, and creating a tie with the 87th Infantry for the 2nd Infantry Division Flag Football Championship.

A play-off for the championship between the two Kelley Hill teams has been scheduled for November 29.

First Score

In the "Always First's" final game Alvin Williams scored the first two touchdowns, coach-player Jesse L. Madden was credited for the third, John Pittman made the fourth, and William Taliaferro made the fifth and final touchdown of the regular season.

Last week, the Firstmen came from behind in the fourth period to tie the 11th Infantry in a hard fought football game played at Kelley Hill's Essebagger Field.

The "Always First" spotted the 11th's "Always Faithful" two touchdowns in the first period and then came back to tie the score at 14-14 with two long passes.

The first touchdown by the 1st Infantry came on a 60-yard pass from coach-player Jesse Madden to Stanley Stansberry, while the second was scored by John Pittman on a pass from William Taliaferro and covered 25 yards.

The determined 11th Infantry scored again in the third period on a two-yard pass after a long drive from their own 13 yard line.

They held onto their six-point lead until the final minutes of the last period when Taliaferro of the stubborn 1st Infantry "nine" scooted around end for 65 yards and the tieing score.

In the overtime period Stansberry caught a pass covering 40 yards from Taliaferro which put the 1st Infantry ahead.

On the fourth and final down Taliaferro hit the sidelines for an additional 40 yards.

The 11th tried to retaliate, but it was in vain as they passed for 40 yards. They were held at bay by the 1st for the three remaining plays.

'Echo' Wins Conquerors' Co. Flag Championship

By 87th Inf PIO

The 87th Infantry's Echo Company won the battle group's company level flag football tournament last Thursday when it defeated Company B by the slim margin of one point, 7-6.

The week-long single-elimination began November 9 when Bravo Company kicked off against the Headquarters Company nine.

Matter Of Inches

But the final game wasn't even close compared to the Bravo - Headquarters game. With the score tied at 6-6 at the end of the regular time, Bravo won the sudden death playoff by a matter of inches.

Elsewhere in the league, Combat Support Company came up with a strong and spirited team defeating Company A by a score of 13-7. Echo made its way to the top by defeating both Delta Company, 12-0, and Combat Support Company, 13-0.

The final game was the big one however. While the crowd looked on, the game got off to a slow start with a scoreless first half. Robert. C. Lowry quarterbacked for Bravo Company and George A. Krajack called the plays for Echo Company.

Bravo was the first to score as Quarterback Lowry got off a long pass grabbed by Richard Scott. Missing the extra point made the score 6-0 until a few plays later, when Krajack connected with Chester Berroud for a touchdown, setting the stage for the outstanding play of the game.

William Manship made a circus catch of Krajack's extra-point pass to give Echo Company the game and the tournament.

Captain Charles M. Rapp, Echo Company commander, expressed great pleasure with his team's performance.

FAMOUS GAME

One of the famous football games in history was played by Cornell and Dartmouth in 1940. Referee Red Friesell gave the Cornell team five downs, allowing them to score a last minute touchdown to win 7-3. The error was discovered in films and the score was disallowed, changing the score in Dartmouth's favor two days after the game.

See-Saw Football Tilt Sees Manchus Win, 25-19

By Bill Gibson

The 9th Infantry Manchus, led by the four-touchdown performance of quarterback Gerry Smith, downed the Division Trains flag football "nine," 25-19, at Sand Hill's Bennett Field.

The Trains squad enjoyed a 6-0 lead at the end of the first quarter, but the Manchus came back in the second quarter and went ahead in the contest, 7-6.

The Trains club, too stubborn to lose that easily, took the edge again and hammered into the Manchu end zone, and enjoyed a 12-7 lead at the intermission.

Then, early in the third stanza, Manchu QB Smith, again showing his "Bobby Mitchell" style of running, rang up two more tallies and gave the 9th a 19-13 lead.

But the Trains squad wasn't finished. They tied the would-be victors and ended a scoreful third quarter.

The deadlock lasted until late in the fourth quarter, when Smith sped into "pay dirt" on a 25-yard touchdown jaunt that meant victory for the Manchus.

Doughboys 'Mule-Kick' Burros From Dix, 50-0

Alert Benning Defensive Plays Account For Three Touchdowns

BY PFC DEL BERGHOEFER

Alert Fort Benning defensive play accounted for three touchdowns and set up three more as the Doughboys walloped the Fort Dix Burros, 50-0 in a game played here Saturday afternoon.

They scored five times in the first half, cashing in on a blocked punt, runbacks of 65 and 70 yards on two intercepted passes, a 70 yard punt return, and a four-yard plunge which was set up by a 31 yard return of another stolen pass.

The Doughboys opened the scoring with one minute left in the first quarter. A Burro punt attempt from their 25 was blocked by guard Dave Lynn and in the scramble for the ball, Doughboy end Bill Johnson scooped it up on the eight yard line and ran it over for the touchdown. A point after touchdown kick by Henry Derleth was wide, his first miss in the last three games out of 14 attempts.

The Doughboys added four touchdowns in the second quarter, using only one offensive play, to roll up a 32-0 half time margin.

Halfback Emmett Eddy, out the previous week with a shoulder injury, took a Burro punt on his 30 and raced 70 yards down the sidelines for the second TD.

In less than a minute, Fort Benning struck again, the score being set up by a 31 yard run back of an intercepted pass by George Burt, who was caught from behind on the Doughboy four yard line. Halfback Cleveland Brown scored from the four on an off-tackle slant.

Three minutes later, Burt, offensive center for the Doughboys, stole another Dix aerial on the Doughboy 30 and raced untouched the remaining 70 yards to score, outdistancing the entire Burro team.

His feat was nearly matched by Bill Johnson a short time later when the big Doughboy end stole a Dix pass on their 35, juggled it momentarily, and then rambled 65 yards down the sidelines for the fourth score of the period.

In scoring four times, in the second stanza, the Doughboys had their hands on the ball for only five offensive plays compared to 27 for Fort Dix. A series of four plays ended with a vain field goal attempt by Burt from the Benning 18. The other offensive play was the four yard scoring plunge by Brown.

The Fort Benning pass defense, not outstanding in previous games against the spread or "shotgun" offense used by the Burros, intercepted three more aerials in the third quarter, converting two into touchdowns.

They came after the sixth TD, scored by halfback Northern Brown on a seven yard end run, capping a six-play 50 yard drive. Derleth added the PAT.

Guard Gus Rampone intercepted the first on the Fort Dix 23. On the following play quarterback Charles Hale pitched a screen pass to Emmett Eddy who ran behind a wall of blockers for the 23-yard score. Derleth's second PAT was a good, boosting the score to 44-0.

Gaining the ball one minute later on guard Linford Pitts' interception, Hale threw a long pass to end Jim Crabbe who was deep behind the defense and scored untouched, making the final score 50-0. The play covered 53 yards.

The Doughboys have now won four consecutive games and five out of their last six. Against the six opponents they have rolled up 201 points compared to the opponents 31, while holding them to a rushing average of 48 yards per game.

The strong Doughboy defensive forward wall composed of Al Aucoin, Lindell Lovelette, and Frank Farella, Cliff Manning, Dave Lynn, Linford Pitts, Don Cooksey, Pvts. Bill Johnson and Al Everhart threw the Burros for minus 19 yards rushing in the first half.

The Doughboys have an open date next week and will finish the scheduled season play on Dec. 1 when they meet Fort Campbell's Screaming Eagles there. Score by quarters:

OUTDOOR RECREATIONAL OPPORTUNITIES

As part of the current nationwide inventory of outdoor recreational facilities, the Outdoor Recreatioo Resources Review Commission has compiled an interesting report of Fort Benning's recreational resources.

There are 22 ponds totaling nearly 500 acres and approximately 54 miles of streams and rivers flowing within the installation. There are nearly 10 miles of shoreline on the natural and artificial bodies of water within the installation that are used for recreational activities such as picnicking, fishing and boating.

On the Fort Benning Reservation a variety of hunting is available. Upland bird hunting tops the list with excellent quail hunting throughout much of the Post. Rabbit, squirrel, raccoon and opossum likewise receive considerable attention from the small game hunter. The Post's 2,000 acres of permanent wetlands such as marshes, bogs and beaver ponds attract a variety of waterfowl. Deer, the only big game on the reservation, have ranged out over much of the post and hunting has been sporting and ever increasing interest.

The potential recreational developments for Fort Benning are very bright for all outdoor sportsmen. With the completion of the Walter F. George Dam at Fort Gaines, the back water of the Chattahoochee River will provide an additional 2,000 to 3,000 acre body of water within the Reservation which should not only provide excellent fishing but will undoubtedly develop into a popular boating spot for Benning boatsmen.

BOWL PARTICIPANTS

The first two teams to participate in a Rose Bowl game were Michigan University and Stanford University in 1902.

Cancelled

The post Doughboys football game with the Florida State University Freshman team, originally scheduled for Saturday has been canceled, according to post Special Services Athletic Department officials.

No other team will be scheduled to fill the open date, giving the Doughboys two weeks to prepare for their scheduled season's closer at Fort Campbell, Dec. 2.

Infantry School News Was First Paper Made It's Appearance In September, 1922

By Sfc Dave Chase

The Infantry Museum recently added to its growing library eight volumes of The Infantry School News which appears to be the earliest news weekly publication on the post. The first issue came out Sept. 8, 1922, and without doubt, few old timers could thumb through its 16 pages without having a few pangs of nostalgia.

Admission to the theater in those days was 15 cents for adults and 10 cents for children. There were three theaters on the post at the time and patrons were treated to anything from Hal Roach one-reel comedies to suspense charged drama — all offered in the atmosphere created by the tinkling piano in the pit. Well-known then were Harry Carey, Pearl White, Buck Jones, Ben Turpin, Buster Keaton, Jack Holt and Rudolph Valentino.

The first issue reflects the rising morale of the commissioned officer at the news of a revised bill being introduced in Congress, which would authorize retention of 1,345 line officers as opposed to a previous bill which proposed shaving commissioned officer strength to 524. In this crisis, 325 junior captains were "sweating out" demotion as recommended in the provis-

News of post events and activities resemble those taking place at Fort Benning today with a few minor exceptions. On Sunday afternoons the big event was polo. The games were played on French Polo Field, which is still used for sports events and training activities. Boxing, football and baseball were popular sports then as now and units would frequently turn out en masse to cheer their players on.

An amusing article proposing a "Knocker's Column" of the "letter to the editor" type appears on page nine of the first edition. The editor commented, "Judging from the unrecorded gems of this nature now being lost in the summer air, the proposed column should be popular..." A "Cat Column" was also considered, but, according to the reporter who wrote the item. . . "the editor lost his nerve. Being a pacifist and seeing possibilities in such a loss of the Anthony Bill.

-column contrary to the principles of pacifism, the suggestion had to be rejected."

On March 17, 1923, The News ran a real "morale buster." The 67th Congress had closed without voting on a bill to increase the number of non-commissioned officers in the service. This was due to two factors — general apathy on the part of anti-militarists with range vision and the old bugaboo — no funds. The result was catastrophe for 3,566 NCO's in the Army. Each was reduced one grade. Those affected were 334 master sergeants, 561 technical sergeants (SFC's to those not in the "old-timer" category), 423 staff sergeants (one-rocker sergeants), 492 sergeants (buck) and 1,327 corporals. You can imagine how this hurt when you stop to think how long it took to make a stripe in those ancient days — a corporal made in two hitches was a miracle!

In the edition of The News with a Sept 10, 1926, dateline, we see a little item headed "Many Deaninglies Become Eligible for General Staff". Seven officers are listed among the eligibles, among these a young major named Dwight D. Eisenhower.

The last issue of The Infantry School News seems to date to March 5, 1951. The termination of this interesting and newsy publication was due to a Congressional ruling that "No appropriation for the pay of the Army shall be available for the pay of any officer or enlisted man on the active list of the Army who is engaged in any manner with any publication which is or may be issued by or for any branch or organization of the Army or military association in which officers or enlisted men have membership, and which carries paid advertising of firms doing business with the government. . . ".

To date, no evidence of the revival of this publication has ever come to light. Nonetheless, it served well as a good history of the early days of Fort Benning.

'Impossible! Can't Be Done!'—Do It Anyway!

Many Ideas Would Have 'Sunk' If Originator Had Given Up Hope

"Impossible!"
"Can't be done!"
"What a weird idea!"

Outcries like this have greeted an amazing number of the ideas and inventions we take for granted today—and can still frequently be heard, even in this age of technology, when a radical new device makes its appearance.

"Crazy mathematician" was the label pinned on Isaac Newton when he announced his discovery of the laws of gravity. Louis Pasteur was challenged to a duel when he expressed his belief that a person could be immunized against the violent form of a disease by a "vaccination" that would produce a mild form of the disease.

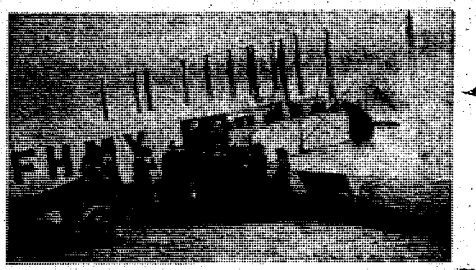
Then there was the experience of Rowland Hill. "A means of sedition (treason) easier" was one reaction to a proposal he made in 1837. "Of all the wild and visionary schemes I have ever heard of, this is the most extraordinary," was another, expressed by England's Postmaster-General before Parliament. Hill's "wild" suggestion: the use of postage stamps as a method of prepaying the delivery of mail!

Three years later, the penny post was enacted into English law, and other countries soon followed suit. People liked stamps so much they soon began to collect them—and a new hobby was born.

In 1919 — sixteen years after the Wright Brothers made the first sustained flight — the idea of air passenger service was still novel. The airplane might be an interesting experiment, most people thought, but the way to TRAVEL was by train or steamship, and probably would be so destined for years hence.

They were still talking like this when Lignes Farman, flew eleven passengers from London to Paris on February 8, 1919. The first scheduled international passenger flight in history took two hours and 30 minute to cover 175 miles at an altitude of approximately 4,000 feet. The passengers sat in wicker chairs eating sandwiches and cookies as they peered down at the White Cliffs of Dover from the windows of the Farman "Goliath", The bimotor bi-plane, 92 feet long and weighing 11,000 pounds, was a giant aircraft for its time.

Even such an obviously useful invention as the typewriter also suffered from the onslaughts of good men who thought they were coming to the aid of the country by denouncing the new machine.



At first, technical difficulties were uppermost. It took ten years of experimentation for Wisconsin newspaper editor Christopher Sholes to produce a workable model. After receiving a patent in 1868, he joined forces with a businessman named James Densmore, who needed all his powers of salesmanship to persuade an armament and sewing machine firm to invest in an untried product of doubtful value.

Then there was the social hurdle. When the New York City Young Women's Christian Association announced its intention of training young women to operate typewriters, it encountered a storm of opposition. Men argued that such arudous labor was far beyond the capacity of female minds and constitutions.

When the first eight typists finished the course without a single nervous breakdown among them, the typewriter was on its way to public acceptance — though one early typewritten letter was returned to a business firm by a Kentucky recipient with an indignant no's that "you don't need to print no letters to me, I kin read writen."

Sometimes the "no's" that make news come from the inventors themselves. Thus a Parisian named Jean-Jacques Perret, master cutler by trade, became angry when his barber cut him once too often. He determined not to put up with this indignity in future. No, he did not grow a beard or knife the barber. He attached a wooden guard to a straight razor so that only a snip of the blade protruded—and voila! the first crude safety razor, in 1762. Today one company spends $30,000,000,000 a year just to advertise its safety razors and blades!

MORAL: if you think you have a really sharp idea, pay no attention to cutting remarks. Remind yourself how many commonly accepted inventions won acceptance by only a whisker — or by a stretch of the imagination.

Army's Menu: Bob Newhart, Grasshoppers

The Army is eating grasshoppers and having its reaction to them conditioned by the recordings of comedian Bob Newhart. But neither innovation is likely to become SOP.

Members of the American Psychological Assn., convening here, were briefed on the experiments by psychologist Ewart E. Smith whom said they were conducted with some 240 Army Reservists at the request of the Army Quartermaster Corps.

Previously, said Dr. Smith, the Army has been concerned with changing its food to suit soldiers' taste. Now it is experimenting with changing their attitudes about what they are served.

Dr. Smith said that the subjects of his experiment showed no enthusiasm for fried grasshoppers when attempts were made to "sell" them on such unusual fare. They were much more disposed to sample them when no persuasion was applied.

"Apparently our subjects, like everyone else, have been subjected to so many attempts to change their attitudes that they responded favorably to being exposed of a new attitude but with no pressure on them to accept it," Dr. Smith told the convention.

He said the recording by Newhart was played on the theory that "humor might dissipate anxiety and thereby increase food consumption."

His subjects thought the record just fine. They laughed heartily. But it didn't increase their appetite for fried grasshoppers.

Post Will Honor 353 Civilian Workers Here

The post is honoring 353 civilian employees for length of service in award ceremonies during November.

The first of the ceremonies was conducted in Theater 1 last Tuesday, when Major Gen. Ben Harrell, post commander, presented two 40-year and 14 30-year pins and certificates.

A concert by The Infantry Center Band preceded the award ceremony.

Honorees and guests were welcomed by T. A. Barefoot, chief of The Infantry Center Civilian Personnel Section.

Gen. Harrell told the audience, "There is no greater satisfaction for a commander than to recognize the outstanding work of those who serve under his leadership."

Other award ceremonies will be conducted at unit headquarters, instructional departments and offices of The Infantry School and sections of The Infantry Center.

In the organizational award ceremonies 20-year pins will be presented to 176 and 10-year pins to 161 civilian employees.

This is the third annual career service presentation on the post.

The program of awards for length of service to the government was established to recognize competent and devoted public service, according to J. Frank Spear, executive secretary of the Incentive Awards Committee, Civilian Personnel Section.

Ralph Marterie To Play Here

One of the country's big name dance bands, Ralph Marterie and his orchestra will play here Dec. 4 at a dance at the Old Post Gym.

The dance will be from 8 to 11:30 p.m. Tickets will be 50 cents.

The Marterie orchestra has risen to nation-wide popularity with such recordings ranging from the slow and beautiful "Blue Mirage" to the up tempo "Crazy, Man, Crazy".

Included among the orchestra's many hits are songs with an international motif, such as "Caravan," "Shish Kabob" and "Skokiaan," a number with an African background which was one of the group's biggest smash hits.

ACADEMY COLORS

The official athletic colors at the Military Academy are black, gold and gray.

PINS GUIDON RIBBON . . . Brig. Gen. A. D. Surles, Jr., assistant commandant of The Infantry School, pins a blue streamer to guidon of 50th Officer Candidate Company. The "Blue Day" ceremonies signify the day when officer candidates reach the senior status level.

Army's Last Blacksmith Still Hard at His Work

When the metallic ring of hammer striking anvil carries across historic Ft. Myer, it is the Army's last practicing blacksmith at work.

A large, jolly man, the blacksmith is Sgt. Robert T. Bechdoldt, a member of the Caisson Section of the Army's famous 1st Battle Group, 3rd Infantry (The Old Guard).

"When I entered the Army in 1945, I had no idea blacksmiths would become so rare," said Bechdoldt. "We had plenty of horses in service then."

He was referring to horses used by mounted platoons established to maintain order in Germany after World War II. Since then, the Army has steadily decreased the number of horses until today, only a few are retained for ceremonial duty.

Today, Bechdoldt is in charge of shoeing the 26 horses assigned to the Caisson Section. The animals are used to pull caissons in full honor military funerals and figure to be around so long as the ancient military tradition prevails.

Probably the most "military-looking" item in the shop is a large wall chart containing the name and shoeing record of every horse in the unit.

When asked if he maintained other charts listing hoof disorders or other characteristics of particular horses, Bechdoldt grinned.

"I keep that up here," he said, pointing to his head.

Ordinarily the horses in the section must be shod about every six weeks. However, each horse varies a little.

Man's Best Friend Has It Pretty Easy--Lucky Dog

Once upon a time, in ancient Ethiopia, there lived a mighty and dreadful king. He dwelt in a palace, surrounded by attendants, officers, and guards. And like all kings, he sat on a throne, with a crown on his head, wearing the royal garments.

Summoned before this powerful ruler, you had cause to tremble. For if he growled, you would be put in jail or even executed. But if he chose to lick your hand, that was a wonderful honor.

The king, you see, was a dog.

Strange? Modern times may not be so different. You may not know it, but all over the country there are cemeteries for dogs. In Central Park, New York, there's even a statue to one. And in 1910, when King Edward VII of England died, his favorite dog, Caesar, marched in the funeral procession. . .followed by nine kings and nearly all the princes of the realm. Fort Benning even has a dog cemetery.

The reason for these honors is that the dog has been man's best friend ever since caveman days. Mankind's oldest pet is the dog—compared to him, the cat and horse are mere upstarts.

The wolf is believed to be the dog's ancestor, though you could hardly tell it by looking at some dogs. Through crossbreeding over the centuries we have developed innumerable sizes, shapes and types. The St. Bernard, for example, will weigh anywhere from 250 to 300 pounds; the Chihuahua one and a half pounds. On the run, a pointer can tell if a quail, yards away, is dead or just wounded; while a pekingese can't tell a pig from a porcupine a yard away. The tenacious bulldog was so named because it once was used to hold bulls by their nose, in sport; on the other hand, the toy spaniel will run in fear at the sight of a rabbit.

History is filled with evidence of man's love for his dog. . .and vice-versa. The ancient Egyptians went the ancient Ethiopians one better: they made a dog into a god. And when a pet dog died, members of an Egyptian family would cut off their hair in mourning.

Buried under lava in 79 A.D., the city of Pompeii was uncovered in the 18th Century. Across the skeleton of a little girl, as if trying to protect her, was the skeleton of a dog. And on the dog's collar was an inscription praising him for once saving his master's life from a wolf.

King James I of England really loved his hunting dogs. When the Archbishop of Canterbury accidently shot one of the King's servants, James advised him "not to discomfort himself, as such an accident might befall any man." But when the Queen happened to shoot one of the King's dogs, reports were that "he stormed exceedingly a while."

It has been truly said that modern America is going to the dogs — to about 27 million of them, to be exact. Nothing, it seems, is too good for friend Rover. Every year hundreds of millions of dollars are spent on prepared dog foods, and upwards of $100 million on liquids, powders and sprays to rid them of fleas and ticks.

Even here, medical science has come through for our dogs. Recently, a leading pharmaceutical firm, developed the first oral insecticide—a sugar-coated tablet—which is fed to the dog in his food. Thereafter, when fleas and ticks feel inclined to bite man's best friend the parasites die.

There can be no doubt that the "best buy" for dogs these days is the wonderful care modern veterinary medicine provides our pets. Veterinary surgeons, working in ultra-modern hospitals, are able to perform delicate heart and brain operations, repair broken bones, remove cataracts. . . among other "human type" operations.

Did you think that rabies is the greatest killer among dogs? You're wrong. It's distemper, a virus-caused disease that damages the central nervous system. Another serious killer is canine hepatitis. Fortunately for dogs and those who love them, research scientists have developed vaccines that protect against these diseases, the latest being a combination of the two that protects with a single injection.

For the person who likes the unusual, there is a company that prints greeting cards for dogs; you can buy pajamas and rain coats, diamond-studded collars, silver clips and even mutt-ernity clothes. Or maybe you need a "mustache" bowl to keep the dog's whiskers out of his water?

Many modern dogs lead the lives of kings, even if they aren't regarded as such. Found in a German foxhole by an American officer in World War I, Rin-Tin-Tin went on to Hollywood fame, and at one time was receiving a million fan letters a year (presumably from humans). Lassie, or more properly Laddie, gets paid $1,000 a week. A famous TV dog is insured for $300,000 - $400,000 a pound.

How are you at identifying other famous dogs? What about Fluah, Boatswain, Pellaes, Fala, Balto, Argos, Cerberus, and Barry? These dogs have achieved recognition denied to most humans.

The first three belonged to poets. Fluah was Elizabeth Barrett Browning's dog, Boatswain belonged to Lord Byron (who wrote some tearful epitaphs when the dog died), and Pelleas was Maurice Maeterlinck's pooch (the warmest tribute to a dog is Maeterlinck's book, "My Dog").

Fala, of course, was President Roosevelt's Scottie. Balto was the Alaskan husky who plodded 75 miles in a raging blizzard to deliver some serum that saved many lives. It's in his honor that Central Park has a statue.

Classical literature gives us Argos and Cerbeus. Argos was Ulysses's dog, and when his master returned after 10 years of wandering, it died of joy. Cerberus was the terrible dog in Greek mythology who made sure that no spirits escaped from hell.

A sad story is told by the inscription on the tombstone of the great St. Bernard Barry. It reads: "Barry, the heroic. Saved 40 persons and was killed by the 41st." A lost traveller, thinking Barry was coming to harm him, killed the dog.

History has its share of bad dogs, too.

October 18, in case you didn't know it, is "whipping-dog day"—in memory of the dog that consumed a sacred wafer in church. Sir Isaac Newton's dog, Diamond, once knocked over a candle, and the fire destroyed some of the scientist's important papers.

Dogs also figure in sayings, superstitions, and statistics.

"Dog - goned" is a variation of a mild curse — just as the English say "Zounds!" instead of "God's wounds!"

Days of intense heat are called "dog days" because the Romans thought that the period from July 3 to August 11 was very warm because the dog star, Sirius, was high in the heavens. (Sirius was named in honor of the dog's faithfulness by the Egyptians, for whenever the star rose in the sky, it predicted the overflow of the Nile River.)

If you think a black cat is bad luck, you might remember that our ancestors thought a black dog was Satan in disguise. One of history's most famous "supernatural" dogs was Boye, owned by Prince Rupert in the 17th Century. Sometimes Boye would play with the children of King Charles I, and this terrified one observer. He wanted the dog banished, "lest he taught them to swear."

The oldest dog? Authorities credit 34. Largest litter? A St. Bernard, in 1935, gave birth to 21 puppies. Longest dog team? In 1941, as a test, the Army used 73 dogs to pull a 10-ton truck. Highest price bid for a dog? In 1956, a Canadian offered to purchase a three-year-old golden pekingese, who bore the name Champion Caversham Ku-Ku of Yam, for $29,400.

Of course, no story about dogs could be complete without mention of Mark Twain's great tribute.

"If you pick up a starving dog and make him prosperous, he will not bite you." "This," he concluded, "is the principal difference between a dog and a man."

Post Civilian Ends Finance Class

Department of the Army civilian employee Eugene Graham, chief of the Installation Accounts Branch in the Finance and Accounting Office, completed the Advanced Installation Accounting Problems Course, Class 2, at the Finance School, Ft. Benjamin Harrison, November 3.

The two-week course which Mr. Graham attended in temporary duty status is designed for selected officers and civilian personnel at field installation and higher staff levels. Classroom work evolves around seminar case studies of problems arising in accounting areas of the Army Command Management System.

All instruction at the 41-year-old Army Finance School is designed to train personnel to support the Finance Corps in its mission of furnishing required finance and accounting services for the Department of the Army.

Mr. Graham, a native of Atlanta, served with the Army Signal Corps from 1946 to 1950. He attended college three years and has attended Army courses at Ft. Jackson and Ft. Harrison.

Thirty-four year old Graham is a member of the F&AM (Mason), RAM (Royal Arch Mason), and the AFMA (Armed Forces Management Association). He lives with his wife, Louise, and three children, Ed, 8; Leah, 6, and Mark, 3, in Columbus.

Captain R. Bass At Proving Ground

Capt. Robert L. Bass of Graceville, Fla., an instructor on The Army Infantry School's Machine Gun Committee, is at Aberdeen Proving Ground this week to observe joint engineer-user tests of a new Army machine gun.

The tests will involve comparison firing of the new M85C and the Army's present .50 caliber machine gun which the M85C is designed to replace.

The M85C represents a reduction in weight over the present gun and features a quick-change barrel, according to officials.

Expansion Sets Aviation School Accomodations

Expanding needs have opened the Army Aviation School to more captains and lieutenants who desire to become qualified pilots, according to a directive published by CONARC.

Here, Major Gen. Ben Harrell, has directed that all company grade officers who are eligible for aviation training be given an opportunity to apply for the Army Aviation School at Fort Rucker.

The Infantry Center program will be supported by staff officers and aviators of Lawson Army Aviation Command, who will furnish advice and assistance to all officers who may wish to take advantage of the career opportunities newly opened by the expansion.

An aviation officer will conduct orientations as part of the program being held.

Children Can Receive Santa Letter Courtesy of Alaskan Air Station

During this Christmas season, Army, Navy and Air Force personnel can make sure their children get a real letter from Santa Claus, postmarked "Santa Claus House, North Pole, Alaska."

Following success of the past six years' Santa letter programs, in which nearly 18,000 letters have been remailed to Air Force kids, members of Detachment 5 of the 9th Weather Reconnaissance group at Eielson Air Force Base in Alaska have volunteered to help make this Christmas a memorable one for Army and Navy kids as well. These far-north Air Weather Service weathermen will use their free time to forward Santa Claus letters to children all over the world.

Here is the way it works:

You write a letter to your child and sign it Santa Claus. Address the letter to your youngster and affix the proper return air-mail postage from Alaska.

Place the letter or letters in a larger envelope and address it to Santa's Mail Bag, care of Detachment 5, 9th Weather Reconnaissance group, APO 937, Seattle, Wash. Add the proper air-mail postage and drop it in the mailbox.

A few miles from Eielson AFB is a post office officially called Santa Claus House, North Pole. When the volunteer mailmen get your letter, they will remail the Santa letter from this post office.

A few days later your child will receive his letter from Santa, complete with authentic postmark.

A deadline of December 15 has been set for mailing letters to Santa's Mailbag, to permit receipt of the re-mailed letters by Christmas Day.

TSB Sergeant Continues His Explorations

By Pvt. Bruce Yrffee

Sergeant First Class David W. Chase, of The Student Brigade, continuing his work with the Archeological Salvage Team of the Smithsonian Institution River Basin Survey Expedition within the Fort Benning Reservation, has made some important discoveries of late while excavating a newly found site on the Georgia side of the Chattahoochee River. (Creek Indian translation of Chattahoochee River is "River of Blood or Bloody River").

This historical location of the Indian town of Lickacta (the word "lickacta" means "broken arror" in the Hitchitee Indian Language—the Hitchitees were a subordinate of the larger Creek nation.) was located during a further reconnaisance of the river basin.

Through reports, documents, and observations of Benjamin Hawkins, one of the first Indian agents to the Creek Nation, it was explained why "broken arrow" was designated as the name of the little Indian village. The name was derived from the fact that the numbers of the Lickacta tribe had separated from a larger Creek tribe, known as the Coweta. The Cowetas were located on the Alabama side of the river, south of Phenix City. There is also the liklihood that both these tribes were separations of still a larger unit within the Creek stronghold, which occupied the area at the mouth of the Broken Arrow Creek across the Chattahoochee River from Fort Benning, known to be the home of the celebrated Indian chief, Little Prince.

Sgt. Chase expects that the Smithsonian surveys will continue through December, and into January, at which time the constant rise of the "Bloody River" will force the halt of their operations.

Ranger Training at Benning Produces Tough Combat Men

Is Attended By Allied Students Along With American Soldiers

By Sfc George H. McBurney

Capt. Jacques Joseph Engels, learned first hand the grueling duties and training drills of the Army's Famed Ranger.

Like many other Ranger students, both Allied and U. S., he passed the training tests like a veteran.

Engels, who was in the U.S. for the first time, arrived at Fort Benning last July and on August 10 was enrolled in Ranger Class 2. Then for eight weeks the 37-year old native of Beirut, Lebanon, went through some of the most realistic, severe and demanding training in his 11-year military career.

His first two weeks of Ranger training were a preparatory phase in which the students were toughened mentally and physically and taught basic combat skills. Physical training exercises, speed marches and hand-to-hand combat practice further conditioned the students and strengthened their endurance.

Engels' group was trained in three phases. In the initial class the students were required to take two "confidence tests." The first was a rope drop that required the prospective Rangers to climb a 40-foot spiked pole, walk a narrow log walk, climb a knotted rope to reach a horizontal rope, monkey crawl along this rope to a designated point and then, on order, drop 40 to 50 feet into a lake below.

In the second test, known as the "suspension traverse," the men climbed a platform 75 feet high, hooked a pulley to a steel cable stretched over the lake, then slid down the cable and, on signal, plunge into the water.

These tests enables Engles and his men to face and overcome any inherent fears of height, water and injury.

After the first training phase, Engels was ready for the second part — learning the rugged technique of mountain climbing that might some day save his own or someone else's life. He also learned to recognize deadly snakes and how to treat for snake bite. He and his classmates learned to overcome any possible obstacle and to accomplish any difficult or dangerous mission the Rangers may be called to do.

In the final phase of training, the Ranger course put the men to the ultimate test — survival. This part of the training, conducted at Eglin Air Force Base, Fla., taught Engels and his classmates the skills and techniques of swamp and jungle fighting to develop confidence and endurance under hazardous conditions of terrain that equal and often surpass combat fighting.

Such training is the closest approach to combat conditions that can be achieved by a peacetime army. The number and variety of problems faced by Ranger students equal those they would experience in battle campaigns.

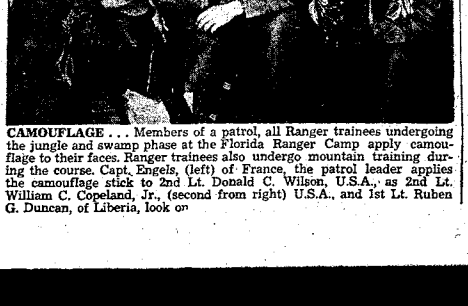
Engels and his fellow students took part in 14 basic problems, three air-landed and three waterborne. All problems were closely watched by a Ranger officer or non-commissioned officer. After each patrol, a detailed critique was made by a Ranger cadre instruction who had accompanied the patrol.

Much of the training was seemingly impassable terrain, without regard for weather or fixed schedules. Often hungry and usually fatigued, the men seldom averaged more than five hours of sleep daily.

Thus the Rangers learn the value of tough, realistic training for the fighting man whose job is to close in on and destroy the enemy. They get the best possible training so they can successfully accomplish their mission and stay alive. During periods of hunger, fatigue and mental strain, the men are forced to react to a series of tactical situations to accomplish an assigned mission.

Near the end of the final training phase, a Ranger patrol, with Capt. Engels in charge, moved out into the dusk. The success of the mission was his responsibility. As he led his men he felt calmly assured that he had learned well the duties of the Rangers.

Origin of the Rangers dates back to 1746 when Major Robert Rogers of New Hampshire recruited nine Continental companies which became known as Rangers. Since those Colonial days the Rangers have distinguished themselves in all of America's wars.



The Standing Orders of Rogers' Rangers included these memorable instructions: "Do not forget nothing. Have your musket clean as a whistle, hatchet scoured and be ready to march at a minute's warning. When you're on the march, act as if you was sneaking up on a deer; see the enemy first. Tell the truth about what you see and do; there's an Army depending on us for correct information; you can lie all you please when you tell other folks about the Rangers but don't lie to a ranger or officer."

RANGER PATROL . . . Capt. Jacques Engels of France (center foreground), leads his fellow Ranger trainees out on a patrol, during the jungle and swamp phase of their training at the Florida Ranger Camp. Ranger trainees at The Infantry School undergo survival training during this portion of the course. This patrol consists of (left to right) 2nd Lt. Patrick M. Bower, USA, 2nd Lt. Tuangsidhi Charusathien, Thailand, 2nd Lt. William C. Copeland, Jr., USA, Capt. Engels, and 1st Lt. Ruben G. Duncan, of Liberia.

NO GAME . . . Bayonet drill is no game to Capt. Jacques Joseph Engels, a French Army officer, who recently graduated from the Infantry School's nine-week Ranger training course. Among the many different combat situations taught at the department, hand-to-hand combat is listed.

CAMOUFLAGE . . . Members of a patrol, all Ranger trainees undergoing the jungle and swamp phase at the Florida Ranger Camp apply camouflage to their faces. Ranger trainees also undergo mountain training during the course. Capt. Engels, (left) of France, the patrol leader applies the camouflage stick to 2nd Lt. Donald C. Wilson, U.S.A., as 2nd Lt. William C. Copeland, Jr., (second from right) U.S.A., and 1st Lt. Ruben G. Duncan, of Liberia, look on

It begins with murder on a foggy November evening: Reginald Grant, a British poet on a temporary assignment at New York's Dyckman University, steps into a cab and finds huddled on the floor, the body of a girl who has, all too recently been stabbed.

CHEROKEE OUTLET by Dwight Bennett. Doubleday. 1961)

It was a town that had known violence. But eight years had passed since the respected and trusted judge, Ben Roman, had been exposed as the leader of the most ruthless gang in the Utah Territory. The citizens' vigilante committee had hanged Ben Roman, and Star City once more became a normal, frontier mining town. Now the judge's widow had returned to Star City under another name, but she was not forgotten.

Saudi Arabian Student Learns Much More Than Infantry Tactics During Stay Here

BY IDA C. EVANS

An airborne instructor from Saudi Arabia learned more than Infantry tactics while studying at The Infantry School recently.

He learned the "American" language and he learned to cook his favorite Saudi Arabian dishes.

"American and the English I studied in high school and Army Language School in my country do not sound alike," 1st Lt. Said Ameen Yousef of Medina, audi Arabia, said.

"When I came to Fort Benning in June, I listened as though to a new language," he stated. "Soon I found that I could understand some of you but not all of you. Now, just as I am graduating and ready to go home, I have found the explanation. The tone you give a vowel depends on the section of the country you come from. I find the Southern vowel tones more like those of my British teachers."

"I have learned a new skill while I have been in America," the young lieutenant continued.

"I liked the American food very much, but I was hungry for some of the foods of Saudi Arabia. So, I learned to cook them," the Allied officer explained.

"One of the many friendly people I have met in the community invited me to use the kitchen in his apartment in Columbus," he added. "Remembering how my mother and sister prepared foods, I began to cook on weekends. My friend and I spent many happy hours together enjoying Saudi Arabian meals and talking of our countries."

While attending The Infantry School, the lieutenant found time to travel on weekends and holidays. He has visited Washington, D. C., Atlanta, Panama City, Fla., and Charleston, S. C.

Lt. Yousef came to the U.S. under the provisions of the Military Assistance Program. He was one of 19 Allied students from five countries enrolled in an associate Infantry officers career course.

Other nations represented in the class were Denmark, Iran, Pakistan and Lebanon.

There were 96 U. S. students in the class.

At graduation exercises in Theater 1, the 115 members of the class received diplomas before standards bearing the flags of the U. S. and the five Allied nations.

Major Gen. Ben Harrell, commandant of The Infantry School, told the class, "It is the purpose of the school to turn out students with more knowledge than when they came to us. It is my sincere hope that when you return to your units, whether U. S. or Allied, this course at The Infantry School will assist you in doing your job."

After graduation, Gen. Harrell pinned a "Follow Me" emblem on the uniform of each Allied student. The official emblem of The Infantry School, the pin symbolizes the place of leadership held by Infantry officers.

The graduation address was delivered by Major Gen. Charles H. Chase, commanding general of the 2nd Infantry Division.

After graduation, the students departed the post for the four corners of the earth, some going home but others to duty stations.

For Lt. Yousef, returning to duty meant returning to his native land where he served from 1959 to 1961 as an instructor in the Airborne School and from 1958 to 1959 as a company commander.

PRESENTS EMBLEM . . . Colonel Curtis L. Hankins, commanding officer, Lawson Army Aviation Command, presents the "Winged S" Air Rescue Emblem to Sp5 Benjamin D. Jones of the 94th Transportation Co (Lt. Hel.), Lawson Army Aviation Command, for having participated in a successful life-saving operation with a Sikorsky Helicopter on September 1. Sp5 Jones was assigned to the 503d Aviation Co, 3d Armored Div in Hanau, Germany, during the life-saving operation, and joined this command in July, 1961. Sp5 Jones, his wife Mary and their two children Karen Ann and Glenn Dale presently reside at Fort Mitchell, Ala.

Lt. Pike Was Wrong; His Peak Is Popular

"No human being could have ascended to its pinacle," wrote the young Army officer in his diary after an unsuccessful attempt to reach the top of the Colorado mountain.

But 1st Lt. Zebulon Pike was wrong — very wrong. Today the mountain that bears his name attracts more than half a million visitors annually to its summit. Pikes Peak may, indeed, soon be registered as a National Historic Landmark. In line with established reservation policies, the Department of the Interior is negotiating with landowners to make the mountain's status official.

Pike discovered the mountain in November 1806 while on an expedition to report on the Louisiana Territory which President Thomas Jefferson had purchased. He and his small party tried to reach the summit but were turned back by the snow and sub-zero winter weather of the Rockies.

It was 14 years later that a party led by Maj. Stephen Harriman Long reached the top. Pike didn't live to know it. A brigadier general in the War of 1812, he was killed in 1813 while leading the attack on York (Toronto), Canada.

Thanksgiving? Old Dominion Claims a First

New England has long laid claim to the first Thanksgiving when the little band of Pilgrims at Plymouth, Mass. offered thanks for a fruitful harvest.

But it's no undisputed claim, and in the spirit of the upcoming holiday four Virginians journeyed north from Richmond to give their side of the story. Thoughtfully, they brought along a couple of turkeys — one for Massachusetts Governor John A. Volpe and the other for the chairman of the Plymouth Board of Selectmen.

The sons of the Old Dominion claim that the first Thanksgiving was actually celebrated on the banks of the James River, some 25 miles from Richmond, on Dec. 4, 1619. That would be more than a year before the Pilgrims stepped ashore at Plymouth Rock.

Like, What's That--A Frogmen's Meet? No, It's Just The Post Scuba Diving Club

By Pfc Del Berghoefer

Visitors at the swimming pool of Fort Benning's Briant Wells Field House probably will be startled if they happen to stop in any Tuesday evening between 7:30 and 9:30, expecting to swim.

At first glance it may appear to be a frogmen's convention, but it is only the weekly meeting of one of the post's more unique organizations, the Fort Benning Scuba Club.

Club members are from all major commands on the post and range in rank from privates to colonels. They all have one common bond, however, an avid interest in one of the country's rapidly booming sports, scuba diving.

The name scuba diving refers to the type of equipment used by members of the club, self-contained underwater breathing apparatus.

The organization, when formed three years ago, started as an association of scuba diving enthusiasts. Several months ago the club became a Special Services activity, now numbering approximately 60 members.

The club which gives a common organization to post personnel with an interest in scuba diving, has four main objectives.

These include exploring the military applications of scuba diving, minimizing the danger in scuba diving through complete and thorough instruction in the techniques of water safety, being prepared at all times to assist civilian and military authorities in case of national or local emergency and the furthering of conservation of natural resources.

Several members of the club train for competition in interstate meets and in the annual Western Hemisphere spearfishing contest held at the Dutch West Indies.

Members also have made dives around the old Confederate gunboat "Muscogee," sunk in the Chattahoochee River on the reservation, aiding representatives of the Georgia Historical Society in their attempts to raise the craft.

For practice diving, the club goes to Auburn, Ala., diving in quarries near there. Deep water dives in excess of 100 feet are made in caves at Morrison Springs, Fla., while salt water diving and spearfishing on coral reefs are done off the Florida Keys near Key West.

"All members of the club are trained to national scuba standards," asserted Capt. Anthony Labrozzi, the club's training officer. "All we require of persons wishing to join the club is that they be in good physical condition and that they know how to swim."

Three members of the club form a unique trio known as the "Double Century" group. They are Major Thomas Whalen, club secretary; Major Victor Harwood, and Major Gordon Gunton of Montreal, Canada, Infantry School Canadian liaison officer and chairman of the club's board of governors. Each has made 100 or more parachute jumps and have made dives of 100 feet or more in depth.

Equipment used by scuba divers includes flippers, face mask, air tanks filled with compressed air controlled by a regulator. Most members also use a skin tight rubber suit, called a "wet suit" for warmth in cold water.

A plan to use scuba club members as military participants in certain water-borne exercises and demonstrations of The Infantry School is under consideration, according to club officials.

"All military personnel and civilian employees of the post as well as their dependents are eligible to join the club," stated Major Gilbert Proctor, president.

Other club officers include Sfc Elvin George, vice president, and 1st Lt. Larry Moorer, equipment officer.

Civilian Workers Recalls Days Of Army and Low Pay

6lc GEORGE McBURNEY

The Army has come a long way since the calm days of the 1920's and the turbulent 1930's, says a post Department of the Army civilian.

The civilian, William F. Armstrong of Columbus, a former enlisted man and now a review and analysis assistant in the Comptroller's Office of The Infantry Center, has been in military service for 28 years.

In those years he has seen the many changes and improvements in the Army which have helped to make the United States one of the greatest nations in the world.

Armstrong joined the Army in 1927, when the United States had Coolidge prosperity, prohibition and bathtub gin. Eventually he was promoted to corporal, the highest grade he was to attain in the service.

"As a corporal I made $49 a month," he observed. "But it wasn't bad pay in those days. I wonder how high in grade I would have gone if I had stayed in."

Recalling some of the highlights of his early military service, Armstrong, a natily dressed, diminutive man with close cropped, graying hair, said, "In the old days we didn't have the modern mechanized Army of today. We didn't have a lot of other things either, such as the present day pay scales and other benefits. And of course we didn't have atomic powered weapons and guided missiles.

"In the 1920's and early 1930's the Army's equipment was entirely horse and mule drawn. To haul artillery weapons and iron-tired vehicles we used mules. And on maneuvers and road marches all our platoon's equipment that we didn't carry was mule drawn."

Some 30 years ago at Fort Benning only one unit, the 100th Motor Transportation Co. of the Quartermaster Corps, was mechanized. But the MTC's vehicles were antiquated jalopies of World War I vintage. It wasn't until the mid-1930's that the Army began mechanizing its transportation system.

Another of the memorable episodes of Armstrong's early Army career was the rapid rise in rank of many of the junior grade officers with whom he once served.

"Many of them who were second lieutenants when I first knew them are now active or retired generals," he recalled. "Since so many that I served with were promoted to high rank, I must have brought them good luck," he said with a chuckle.

In 1927 Armstrong's first company commander was Capt. Andrew D. Bruce of Hawitzer Company, 29th Infantry Regiment. Sometime after World War II, Armstrong learned that Bruce had retired as a lieutenant general.

Former 2nd Lt. Paul D. Adams, a platoon leader in the old 29th in the 1920's, is now a four-star general. Until recently he was commanding general of the Third Army at Fort McPherson.

Armstrong and Adams met again in the early 1930's when both were stationed in the Canal Zone. Adams, who then had been promoted to first lieutenant, was adjutant of the 3rd Battalion, 14th Infantry Regiment.

WILLIAM ARMSTRONG STANDS BEFORE Doughboy Statue In Front Of Post Headquarters

Another young officer with whom Armstrong served in the Canal Zone was 2nd Lt. James V. Thompson, also a platoon leader in the same regiment. Thompson is now a retired brigadier general living in Columbus.

Armstrong spent some of the most interesting days of his Army career in the Canal Zone.

"Those were the free and easy days of Army life," he reflected. "The depression? We hardly knew it existed. In those days a soldier could live like a king on a corporal's pay. We had all the fishing, swimming and boating we wanted. The Canal Zone was the only place I ever fished for tarpon without a boat.

"I caught plenty of them from a spillway on the Chagres River that flows to the Caribbean Sea. We had our work to do though. While I was there I did about everything except act as first sergeant and bugler."

While he was at Fort Benning, Armstrong, a native of Atlanta, who always had a soft spot in his heart for horses and had ridden them often, became the trainer of the post polo team horses.

One of the team members was Capt. Withers A. Burress. Armstrong said, "When I last heard of him he was a lieutenant general."

Another team member was 2nd Lt. John G. Van Houten. Armstrong, who has an acute memory of his Army life of more than 30 years ago, recalled that Van Houten later became a major general.

"And there was a 2nd Lt. George (Dutch) Smythe, an All-American halfback from West Point in the 1920's. Eventually he became a brigadier general and at one time was commanding general of the Third Army," he said.

Most all Army officers of 30 or more years ago were graduates of the U. S. Military Academy. The Officer Candidate School was nonexistent then and direct commissions were seldom if ever given.

"A few officers were commissioned as DMG's, Distinguished Military Graduates of military colleges, but there weren't many of them," Armstrong said.

"At Fort Benning there were many fine officers, some of whom became known throughout the world," he stated. "Gen. Patton was one of them. He was another. The former President, a captain at the time, coached the post football team. While at Fort Benning he was promoted to major."

In 1934 Cpl. Armstrong left the Army. He found employment in the lumber camps of Maine and New Hampshire. There he cut timber and sawed it into four-foot lengths for the mills.

He was still there when the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor. On Feb. 10, 1942, he reenlisted as a private.

"I would have been drafted anyway," he mused.

After basic training and a two-month stint with the 30th Infantry Division at Fort Jackson, he was sent with a task force to Ascension Island, a "dot on the South Atlantic."

"We had a two-fold mission there," he said. "We built airstrips as stopovers for planes winging their way to North Africa, New Delhi and later to Italy. We also built a string of outposts and observation points on the island beaches."

Meanwhile, his perseverance paid off and he was promoted to corporal the second time. In May, 1944, Armstrong returned to his old stamping grounds, Fort Benning, where he became a weapons instructor in The Infantry School.

He remained at the post until he was discharged in October, 1954. A year later he became a Department of the Army civilian as a military pay clerk in the Finance Office.

Military service seems to run in the Armstrong family. His wife, Myra, a native of Bainbridge, Ga., has been a military pay clerk in the post Finance Office for the past 16 years.

Armstrong, a member of the Knights of Columbus and a charter member of the Armed Forces Management Association, is the son of Mrs. F. E. Armstrong of Honolulu, Hawaii, where she lives with her daughter and son-in-law, a lieutenant colonel in the Air Forces at Hickham Air Force Base.

Asked how long he expects to be at Fort Benning, he replied, "I intend to stay here as long as I can."

Pool, who won the Smallbore Prone Position Match; Cpl. Gary Anderson, smallbore three position winner; Sfc William Blankenship, 1961 National Pistol Champion and winner of the International center fire diadem, and Sfc Sam Hunter, who took the free pistol medal.

DOD Cuts Early Outs This Year

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — There will be no special Christmas season early releases from the Armed Forces this year, according to the Defense Department.

The current efforts to increase and strengthen the Armed Forces caused the suspension of the customary "early outs," which in previous years had released prior to Christmas, many members whose term of service was due to expire in late December or early January.

Assistant Secretary of Defense (Manpower), Carlisle P. Runge notified the various service secretaries of the ruling which backs up other efforts such as involuntary extensions of service and recall of members of the Reserve Forces.

The suspension applies only to those who would have received early releases because of the holidays. It does not revoke the normal authority of the service secretaries to release personnel early under certain other circumstances.

Your Spiritual Piggy Banks

ROY D. HIDY

Sunday, December 10, is universal Bible Sunday. The message of this day is the importance of the daily reading of God's word.

The story is told of a lad, who as the result of many gifts from visitors had his piggy bank filled with small coins. One day as he stood before the family's guests holding his treasure high, he said, "I've been putting littles in for a long time. Some day I'm going to take out a big."

There is great spiritual lesson in the words of this wise lad.

Psychologists have succeeded in making us aware that we have subconscious mind, but perhaps we are not aware of the fact that it is somewhat like a spiritual piggy bank. Each day we put the littles in and then someday we take the big out.

A brief passage of scripture taken into mind and heart each day can result in great spiritual blessings. It will result in a God-centered life.

We might para-phrase a passage of scripture and say, "Be not deceived, God is not mocked, for what so ever is taken into the mind and heart will likewise come out, be it good or evil. For out of the heart come the issues of life." (Gal 6:7)

A portion of God's word taken into your life each day, can give you life for all eternity.

Local Education Center Offers New Math Class

A revised course in review arithmetic is now available through the United States Armed Forces Institute (USAFI) in Madison, Wis.

The material covered in the course is similar to that found in refresher courses offered by civilian schools at the high school level.

Numbered B 150 and titled "Review Arithmetic," the course is designed as a refresher for those students who wish to review the basic principles of arithmetic.

A USAFI announcement explained that a few new topics are introduced and the discussions on some of the previously taught topics are expanded slightly.

Topics included in the course are addition, subtraction, multiplication, division, problem solving, fractions, decimals, percentages, measures, scale drawing, square roots, ratio, graphs and proportion.

Although the course will not be offered in group study classes at the post education center, it will be available through correspondence lessons (17 lessons). Prerequisites for Review Arithmetic are either a course in arithmetic similar to USAFI A 035 or eighth-grade ability in the subject.

Presently a higher math course is being taught at the education center by Pfc David F. Smith. It deals with a brief math review and then goes into informal geometry, measurements, fractions and business arithmetic.

The next course begins in January. An exact date will be announced later.

Persons desiring further information have been asked to contact the post education center (Bldg. 2512), phone 545-4111.

The "Saluting Demon" of the AEF visited post recently to see how his hometown unit, the 128th Medical Co. of Fairhope, Ala., is getting along on active duty training.

Known as the "Saluting Demon" because he enjoyed making all new second lieutenants salute every time he would see them, MSgt (ret.) E. G. Turner, enlisted in the Army during World War I and fought in the Meuse-Argonne campaign.

It was a little bit different Army in those days," he said. "I remember how the chow trucks used to come out to the area, set up long tables, put the food on them and we'd go down the line taking whatever we wanted."

According to the retired sergeant, the food was a little different then, also. "I recall several times that I had bread so hard I had to soak it in my tea before it became soft enough to eat," he reminisced. "Once we saw a stack of bread that was about ten feet high by two blocks long. The cooks had just finished baking it, but I don't know where it was going."

If it wasn't the bread that was hard when they got it, it was the meat that was frozen.

"Oh, yes," he laughed, "we had meat up where we were, but it wasn't fresh. It came to us frozen so it wouldn't spoil. Many was it the time I saw the cooks take an axe to chop off enough for a meal."

"Sometimes," he continued, "we had rice or fish for breakfast, lunch and supper."

The Germans constantly observed the village where Turner's unit was stationed.

"One day," he said, "A German aviator flew over the village looking for our barracks so he could bomb it.

"We saw him coming so I hid in a doorway where I could watch but he couldn't see me. As I said, he circled around the village looking for the barracks. Finally he dropped a bomb which sprayed dirt over the area.

"I didn't stay around any longer," said Turner. "I just shook it on down the road."

Although the men were under orders not to fire back at the Germans, one day when the scout plane came over, an MP guarding the bridge took a pot shot at him with his pistol. The German plane circled and opened fire on the MP.

"And," he added, "We were under orders not to fire back or even show ourselves because our commander didn't want the Germans to know how many troops were in the town and what fire-power we had."

After WW I, Turner left the Army and afterwards joined the Alabama State Guard. He attended 6 summer camps with the unit until he retired in 1947.

Since then, he has attended summer training with the National Guard unit at Fairhope, strictly on a voluntary basis, acting as the unit historian. He has probably the largest file of press clippings of any unit on post.

Henry Ford II Tells:

How You Can Help Your Country

"What can I do to help my country?" is an old question that demands new answers.

Twenty years ago, when the bombs fell on Pearl Harbor, or 11 years ago, when Red China swarmed over Korea, the men and women of the American Armed Forces had a simple and direct answer to that question. Their duty was to serve where they were needed.

For some, this meant to fight and die. Yet, they knew that if they served with honor, the crisis would pass and most of them could return in a few months or a few years to the pursuit of their private goals and interests.

Today, the answer is not this simple. No matter how honorably you serve in the Armed Forces of the United States, this alone will not be enough. Whether your period of service ends next month, or in 1970 or in 1980, it is more than likely that when you return to civilian life, your country will still be in grave danger and still be in urgent need of your help.

What can you do to help? When the problems facing our country are so vast, so permanent, so hard to solve, can any one person really do anything to help?

I believe each of us can help. And I believe also that the most important thing any of us can do is to live this life as a free man. Freedom cannot be given to or forced upon anyone. If, as individuals, we do not use our freedom, we lose it. And if we in this country lose freedom, then Freedom's cause is lost throughout the world.

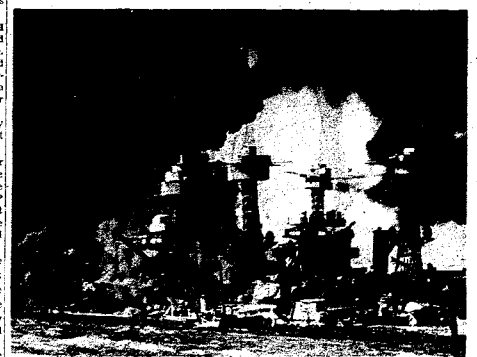
Freedom is the opportunity every American has to make the most of himself and his life. It does us no good unless we think for ourselves, act for ourselves. It comes alive only when we set ourselves high goals and high standards and do our best to reach them.

The man who lets others do his thinking for him, who drifts through life with no special effort might as well be living behind the iron curtain. If too many of us follow this path, then eventually we may all be living behind the iron curtain.

Our country needs people who strive for excellence whatever their chosen career, people with high ambitions and the will to work. These are the people who will make our economy strong, our institutions healthy and our government vigorous. These are the people who can prove to the world by their example that a free society is the strongest and the best. If enough of us follow this path, we need have no fears for the future.

Restricted as you must be by necessary military rules and regulations and the need for military discipline, it may seem strange that I should urge you to exercise your freedom. Yet, if freedom is viewed as the opportunity to make the most of yourselves and your lives, then your period of military service can be a contribution to your freedom rather than a restriction upon it.

Here, I would like to address myself especially to the young men and women of the Armed Forces who expect to return to civilian life at the end of their present enlistments.



I would urge each of you to view your military service not as an interruption in your civilian career, but as a chance to push it ahead. Your opportunities for advancement and training in the Armed forces can be of the greatest value to you when you return to civilian life.

I know that this is true because the management of the Ford Motor Company today depends very heavily upon men who were hired by our Company following their armed services training and experience during World War II. A man who was one of this large group until very recently is now the Secretary of Defense.

I would also urge those of you whose educations were interrupted by the call to service to return to school when you leave the service. Education is the key to true freedom, just as ignorance is its greatest enemy.

Finally, I want not to advise, but to thank those of you who are devoting your lives to a career in the Armed Forces. I believe that American industry is increasingly aware of its obligations as your partner in the defense of our country.

May This Never Happen Again

TWENTY YEARS AGO . . . On the morning of Dec. 7, 1941, the Japanese made a surprise air and submarine attack on Pearl Harbor and the Army and Navy airfields of Hawaii. Caught on the ground or at their moorings were about 300 U.S. airplanes and almost 100 ships. Aircraft destroyed numbered about 140 in addition to approximately 80 damaged. Of the eight U.S. battleships at Pearl Harbor, five were sunk, one severely damaged and the other two hit. Two destroyers and nine other ships were sunk or severely damaged. The Pacific fleet's three aircraft carriers, not at Pearl Harbor on that fateful morning, escaped damage. Casualties among the military personnel numbered over 3,000 including more than 2,300 killed. The Japanese made no effort to land at Hawaii, nor had they any plans to do so. The slogan "Remember Pearl Harbor" became reminiscent of "Remember the Maine." The attack precipitated, on Dec. 8, America's declaration of war upon Japan and the beginning of active U.S. participation in World War II.

Twenty Years After: The Shock of Pearl Harbor

Sunday morning, Dec. 7, 1941. Many Americans were still asleep, but thousands of miles away Japanese bombs were raining on our greatest Pacific naval bastion. "The day that will live in infamy," President Franklin D. Roosevelt was to call it.

And now, 20 years from that fateful day that brought us into the war, we look to Japan as our staunch ally and friend. The war lords are long dead and gone. Time has cooled our fury at the evil they wrought. But we do not forget Pearl Harbor and we never should. To do so would be a breach of faith with the more than 2,300 Americans killed in the Dec. 7 holocaust.

Five battleships sunk, one severely damaged, two others hit. Two destroyers and nine other ships badly damaged. And of our planes, 140 destroyed and some 80 damaged. It was an awful toll, but the shock of it fired Americans into the greatest concerted war effort in our history. Almost four years later, when General of the Army Douglas MacArthur accepted Japans surrender aboard the battleship Missouri, the war lords and their subject people had paid a terrible price for the Pearl Harbor treachery.

Remember Pearl Harbor—many of us in the Armed Forces do; we can recall vividly where we were, what we were doing, when the stunning, almost unbelievable news reached us. But many of us do not; we were mere youngsters at the time. It is as a nation that we should keep green this memory of what it costs to let an unscrupulous enemy strike the first blow.

For the flaming bavoc of Pearl Harbor was superficial compared to the awesome damage an aggressor might inflict in the age of the atom. To remember it is to see the life-or death necessity for strength and vigilance. Never to be lulled, never to be caught off guard—that is why the Strategic Air Command is poised, why the Navy's carriers and submarines patrol the seas, why our ground forces are ready with men and missiles.

On this Dec. 7, as in the past, we grieve for the brave men who died at Pearl Harbor. The hearts of all Americans will be attuned to the service conducted at the unfinished memorial which spans the sunken battleship Arizona.

No Dreamers In TIS Combat Developments Office

Gen. Surles'
Infantry
School
Report

TOMORROW'S AIRBORNE JEEP? . . . CDO thinks such a thing is possible.

ARE YOU IN THIS PICTURE . . . Could be, according to CDO concepts of tomorrow's Infantryman.

CONTRAST . . . Lt. Col. Kenneth Dohleman, right, Infantry Project Officer, explains differences between Soldier of today and the Infantry School's conception of the Infantryman of tomorrow to newly assigned Maj. John Burgess.

Dreamers, crystal balls and Iuija boards are not items to be found in the Combat Developments Office Materiel Section.

The Materiel Section consists of one Engineer, one Ordnance, one Signal Corps, and five Infantry officers who have primary interest in the future equipment used by Infantry, Airborne Infantry, and Mechanized Infantry, whether it's a new ration, new ray gun, or new vehicle.

The officers in this section deal primarily with hardware. What does the Infantryman need? Does he need a ray gun to support the future concepts envisioned by the Department of the Army planners? Does he need a flying platform to move about the area in which he will operate?

These problems face the Materiel Section officers daily and it is their job to ensure that equipment for future Infantry units will be the best and most efficient available both from civilian industry and military tech services.

Let us briefly describe the steps involved in having an idea become a reality.

First, the idea is conceived. This idea can be brought to the attention of the research and development people through letters, briefings, reports and, in general, anyone who feels he can visualize something new being added to the system.

The Materiel Section then submits a statement of requirement in the form of a Qualitative Materiel Requirement (QMR) which describes the item, its operational and organizational concepts: The military characteristics — size, weight and other specifics — are included.

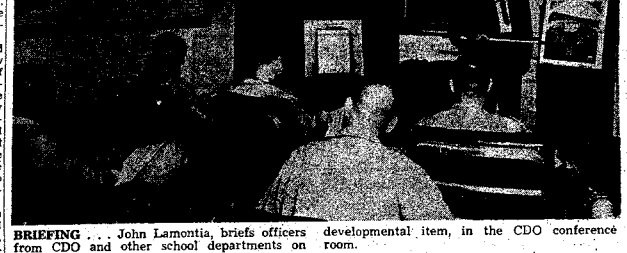
Department of the Army then approves this QMR and the technical services or civilian industry conduct feasibility studies to see if the item is within the "state of the art." If it is, a prototype is constructed and tests are run by the agency producing the prototype to ensure that it meets the Infantry's requirements.

The time then goes through a series of engineer and service tests. The Infantry Board, located here, normally conducts service tests on equipment to be used primarily by Infantry. If the item passes these tests and shows a marked improvement over its predecessor, it will then be adopted as standard equipment.

When funds are available, it will be produced and placed in the hands of the troops.

During the entire period, the Combat Developments Office monitors these items of equipment to ensure that the Infantryman's welfare is continually maintained.

In fulfilling its responsibility to the Infantry, the Materiel Section follows and influences new equipment from its initial concept until it has been standardized by Department of the Army and issued to troops.



The time period involved is normally from 7 - 10 years. During this time industrial engineers, tech service officers, and other members within the research and development system contact the Infantry School, i. e., the use of this future equipment, for their ideas to ensure "the right hand knows what the left hand is doing."

In order for the Materiel Section to submit requirements for the new items of equipment, they must be fully aware of the new tactical concepts envisioned 7 - 10 years from now.

It would be silly if we looked at the battlefield of tomorrow — its objectives, its routes of advance, its maneuvering forces — with equipment in the hands of the troops today. Why not a ray gun? Why not a vehicle capable of land, sea, and air operations? If technological breakthroughs are made, we must use these to enhance the ability of the Infantry soldier to close with and destroy the enemy.

What does the Infantryman of the future require? We feel he will need more firpower, more mobility, communications, logistical support, and last but not least the ability to seek out the enemy and destroy him through the use of surveillance equipment compatible with his weapons system.

CDO feels its job is looking to the future for the Infantryman. We who do so feel we have a challenge and welcome all ideas from every source to meet this challeoge.

BRIEFING . . . John Lamontia, briefs officers from CDO and other school departments on Position Fixing Navigational Systems, a current developmental item, in the CDO conference room.

Ordnance Section Ladies Gather For Indian Style Luncheon Meet

A stoney-faced Indian warrior and six smiling squaws greeted guests at a luncheon recently at the Custer Terrace Branch of Benning's Main Officers' Open Mess.

The warrior was only an eight-foot statue but the squaws were very much alive. Dressed in moccasins and fringed costumes, hostesses at the luncheon were wives of officers of The Infantry Center Ordnance Section.

Attending the gala affair were wives of officers of The Infantry Center G-4 (Logistics) Section and technical services and guests.

An Indian theme pervaded the mess in decorations, menu and background music.

Depicting the life of the original Americans, a centerpiece panorama extended from one end to the other of the U-shaped luncheon table.

In a realistic miniature woodland setting were trees, tepees, cooking pots, buffalo, deer, Indian warriors, squaws, children, dogs and Indian burial ground.

A life-sized Indian scene was arranged on a platform, complete with wigwam, skins drying on a frame and pottery.

On a side table was a hogan made of mud and sticks.

"Tom-Tom" ceremonial organ music was played by MSgt Frank G. Hardin, a member of The Infantry Center Chaplains Section.

Menus were written with green ink on thinly cut slabs of a young tree.

Food included prairie grass (tossed salad), roasted buffalo (roast beef), succotash, grassed white root (parsley potatoes), red root (Harvard beets), maise sticks (corn sticks), pumpkin pudding with beaten buffalo cream (pumpkin pie with whipped cream) and brown herb juice (coffee).

"Tribal" guests at the luncheon were Mrs. Ben Harrell, wife of Major Gen. Harrell, commanding general of The Infantry Center, Mrs. Cecil M. Sanders, Mrs. Norris E. Brackett, Mrs. William Brophy, Mrs. Willis C. Carder, Mrs. Charles Ritchie, and Mrs. W. R. Alderman.

New members welcomed to the group were Mrs. John A. Carlin, Mrs. Robert L. Magee, and Mrs. Denajah Tillman.

Farewells were said to Mrs. A. T. Stafford, whose husband is retiring.

Mrs. Dale D. Dixon presided at the luncheon.

Board Ladies Thanksgiving Lunch

In keeping with the traditional Thanksgiving season, turkey headed the menu at the recent Thanksgiving luncheon held in the Anzio Room of the Main Officers Open Mess by the Infantry Board ladies.

Large cornucopias, filled and spilling over with colorful fruits and vegetables, were used as table arrangements and created a most effective setting. Ivy, interpersed with mums, complimented the attractive fruit and vegetable laden cornucopias on the tables.

Mrs. William D. Summers welcomed back former members of the Infantry Board ladies group, Mrs. Woodrow Myers and Mrs. Robert Spitzmiller. Hellos and welcomes were extended to Mrs. R. A. Gunton of Montreal, Quebec, Canada who is here for the winter visiting her son, Major Gordon A. Gunton, Canadian liaison officer, and family. Hellos were also said to Mrs. Earl Roberts, a newcomer, to the group.

Mrs. D. F. Jenkins of Columbus gave a delightful briefing on her favorite hobby, hat making.

Hostesses for the Thanksgiving luncheon, the ladies of the Administration Division, included Mesdames James A. Sudderth, J. B. Estes, M. D. King, John W. McLaurin, and Fred K. Mahaffey.

Distaff Doings

By Marianne Kelly

The NCO Wives Club of Ft. Benning would like to take this opportunity to extend a most hearty welcome to all the wives of Reservists and National Guardsmen called to active duty and now stationed at this post.

Consider this a very special invitation to come out and get acquainted with our club members and activities, girls. If you need any help or information, please feel free to call our club president, Mrs. Raymond R. Faust at 545-1440 or call me at 544-2247.

The spotlight is on one of the brand new Army wives,

MRS. MAUS

Norma Maus, wife of MSgt Craig Maus, who was called to active duty together with his unit from Hot Springs, Arkansas.

We all realize that it is no simple matter to have your whole way of life changed practically over night. Norma, like most of the other girls, has lived in a lovely home of her own for years, the children never has to change schools, there were dozens of good friends, and last but not least many rumors, none of them cherry. Norma faced the problems squarely. There was only one decision for her: Friends and a beautiful home could never be a substitute for her husband and the children's father. And there is only one statement I have to make: Hot Springs' loss is Ft. Benning's gain!

Norma plunged into Army life head first from the start. She is most anxious to meet lots of people and discovered happily that there are very few strangers around here. I already consider her a good friend and great company.

This charming lady, Norma Maus, is a witty, vivacious person, loves bridge, music and sewing in that order. She is the mother of 4 attractive children, who have made many friends around the neighborhood in no time at all. Norma decided to become an active member of the NCO Wives Club and is already a very fine addition to our bridge group.

Glad to have you with us, Norma, and for a long time to come, we hope.

Barbara Hare's Report Card...

An outstanding Columbus High School senior is the subject of this week's REPORT CARD. Carlyle Park is the teen personality of our salute. He is the son of Lt. Col. and Mrs. H. C. Park.

Carlyle was born on July 21, 1944 in Greenville, Ky.

For his freshman and sophomore Year, Carlyle attended West Carrollton High School in Dayton, Ohio. While he was a member of Carrollton's student body, Carlyle participated in many activities. He was a member of the Representative Scholarship Team from Dayton and competed against other Ohio state teams for top honors. Carlyle was on the football, basketball, cross country, and track teams. He was also president of the Latin Club his Sophomore Year.

When the Parks were transfered to Benning, two years ago, Carlyle enrolled in Columbus High School. Last year he was inducted into the National Honor Society during the annual Spring Induction. He also was a member of the Columbus High School's Reserve Officer's Training Corps (ROTC). Besides being a member of the Honor Society and an operations sergeant in the ROTC, Carlyle holds membership this year in the Debator's Club, and is his homeroom's representative to the Senior Council.

Last week he was chosen as one of the ten Most Handsome Boys in the Class of '62.

Carlyle's schedule includes Trigonometry, Speech, English IV, Physics, Government and ROTC. His most interesting and favorite subject is Trigonometry.

Here at Benning Carlyle has the honor of being Vice President of Follow-Me-Club and is the Chief Usher of the Club's Usher Team. He also attends the Main Post Protestant Chapel on Sundays.

In the future, Carlyle plans to go to college and become a dentist or a medical scientist. His hobbies include photography and reading.

"I have enjoyed the life of an Army dependent and the experiences of traveling around the world have been very educational and beneficial," said Carlyle when asked about Army life.

Besides living here at Benning, Carlyle has lived in Germany, Formosa, Alabama, and Ohio. While in Germany, he traveled all over Europe and saw the many interesting and historical sights.

Carlyle has one sister Donna, 7; and two brothers, Andy 10, and Larry 6. Col. Park is the 2nd Infantry Division Finance officer. The Parks reside on Rainbow Avenue.

Carlyle is an excellent example of a Columbus High School senior who is an asset to his school and to Benning. He has proved himself a well-rounded student whom we are proud to call a 'Benningite. REPORT CARD salutes Carlyle Park as the personality of the week.

More than 50 members and guests attended the affair which featured holiday fashions from the Sport Shop and the Nolie Moore Dress Shop in Columbus.

The models, trained by Mrs. Austin Yerks, were: Mrs. John Foss, Mrs. James Bowers, Mrs. Larry Ivers, Mrs. Cedric Blackwell, Mrs. Roy Muth and Mrs. James Woodall.

Mrs. Bernard Teeters acted as narrator while Mrs. Robert Whitehead provided appropriate background music. Mrs. Christopher Gooch, in charge of the luncheon, acted as coordinator for the special program.

Jan Rose's Woman's Club Diary

Monday is the last day to make your reservation for the Plantation Christmas Luncheon and Bazaar which will take place at the Main Club on Wednesday at 12:30 p.m.

Mrs. William Todd, chairman, will have the interior of the ballroom decorated into a true old plantation as might have been found in Columbus a hundred years ago.

The Woman's Club Choral Group, under the fine direction of Mrs. Wallace Lancaster, will present an original program of Christmas music, both the traditional and a variety of spirituals. The Program, which also includes students of the School of Dance, was planned and written by Mrs. Lancaster.

On the porch and side rooms will be hundreds of colorful and original items made by members of the Bazaar committee, Mrs. Willis McClain, chairman. Decorated stockings, centerpieces, slippers, and cardholders are just a few of the unique items which will be on sale. The proceeds from the Bazaar will be used to help with the Welfare and Orphanage projects in Korea.

Other Items of Interest

Charm and Modelling classes will begin the week following New Year's. Call Mrs. B. F. Dobson MU 9-7340 for details.

The Christmas Program and Party for the Pre-Kindergarten School students and their parents will be held December 18. Don't forget if you have children who will be three within the next month, you may register them. If you plan to send your toddlers in January, better register them now to avoid disappointment. Call Mrs. Murray, 545-2217 for details.

Etiquette Questions Answered

By Jessi Johnson

Beginning with this issue this column will answer questions on Christmas-card sending and other holiday etiquette questions.

Amy Vanderbilt points out, "You will not become a social outcast if you do not send a single Christmas card. Many people will gratefully cross you off their own swollen lists, but like you none the less. It also makes sense to try to limit your card list mostly to out-of-town friends and convey your greeting to nearby friends in person."

She must have been thinking of us military folk when she said that. I too feel that it's the far away folk who come first.

We send a family letter of all our doings since last year, and though it must be typed we leave room for comments to be written in appropriate to the recipient. Each year we receive more and more letters of similar style in place of cards from distant friends. And truthfully we enjoy them much more than a plain signature. Our local cards, for those whom we are not sure of calling in, we make up ourselves and what used to be a chore is becoming more and more of a family project to be looked forward to.

Question: When signing the card, whose name is written first. . .the husband's or wife's?

Answer: It is courteous for the person signing the card to write the other's name first. For example, if you sign the card for you and your husband, it should read: "Tom and Mary" (or Tom and Mary Green, if more identification is needed).

Benning Scouts In Xmas Drive

Fort Benning Boy and Girl Christmas projects this year.

They are combining efforts in a project called "Operation Santa Claus." Toys, books, games and clothing, regardless of condition, will be picked up, repaired and distributed to needy children.

Door-to-door pick ups will be made tomorrow from 9 a.m. to noon, and again Saturday, December 9.

In addition, there will be a decorated carton and and poster in key locations on the post. Those who were missed in the door-to-door canvas may place their donations in these cartons.

Members of Benning's 24 Girl Scout troops are gathering serviceable clothes, toilet articles and toys for the Gracewood Georgia Training School.

Benning's Hi Neighbor Queen In Holiday Christmas Parade

A Fort Benning third grader was one of 19 "Hi Neighbor Queens" in a Holiday Christmas Parade in Columbus, November 28.

Representing the post in the parade was Laury Holden, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Maurice C. Holden.

To select Fort Benning's Hi Neighbor Queen to ride in the parade, each third and fourth grade in the Post Childrens' Schools elected a room queen.

Last year's Hi Neighbor Queen, Karen Yoder, daughter of MSgt and Mrs. Charles D. Yoder, officiated at a drawing to select the 1961 queen and two alternates.

First place went to Laury who attends the Hospital area School.

CG Commends Troops On Exercise Showing

Expresses 'Confidence' In Progress

Major General Charles H. Chase, 2nd Division commanding general, has applauded the division's troops for their showing in the division's first Field Training Exercise since taking on its new "combat-ready" mission.

At a special critique November 22 of all 2nd Division officers and sergeants major, General Chase stated that "polishing up remains to be done," but that "a great amount of progress has been made. I have great confidence in this unit."

Professional Note

At the critique — which closely followed the return of division troops from the field — Brigadier General Royal Reynolds Jr., assistant division commander, added that "a professional note was readily observable in the way in which the Division performed its mission."

General Reynolds, who acted as exercise director during the maneuver, presented the opening remarks at the meeting.

Other speakers at the specially-called post-mortem were Colonel Frank Osmanski, division artillery commander; Colonel Maurice C. Holden, deputy brigade commander; Lieutenant Colonel Ralph H. Highett, division G-3; Lieutenant Colonel Harvey Scott, commander of the 7th Cavalry, which played the aggressor role in the field training exercise, and Captain Vincent T. McKelvey, who spoke as Brigade S-2.

Two Div. Officers Advanced to Lt. Col.

23rd Inf XO and Signal's CO Told News in Surprise Ceremonies

Two 2nd Infantry Division officers were promoted to the rank of lieutenant colonel in surprise ceremonies held Monday and last week.

Receiving the promotions to their new ranks were Lieutenant Colonel John V. Swango, executive officer of the 23rd Infantry, and Lieutenant Colonel Herbert W. Coburn, commanding officer of the 122nd Signal Battalion.

The promotion of Col. Swango took place in the headquarters of the battle group when that unit returned from the field training exercise last week.

On hand to greet him was his wife, who pinned the silver oak leaf on his jacket. Colonel Louis A. Kunzig Jr., battle group commander, was the first to congratulate Col. Swango.

Col. Swango's association with the 23rd Infantry can be traced back to 1956, when the 23rd Infantry was a regiment stationed at Fort Lewis, Washington. He remained with the unit after it was shipped to Alaska, where, under the pentomic concept, it was re-organized into the 1st Battle Group, 23rd Infantry.

He joined the division's 2nd Battle Group, 23rd Infantry in June and was initially assigned as logistics officer (S4).

Col. Coburn's promotion took place in the office of Major General Charles H. Chase, 2nd Infantry Division commanding general.

Prior to assuming command of the division's signal battalion in August of this year, he served as Senior Signal Advisor to the Second Republic of Korea Army.

He has also had tours of duty as assistant professor of military science and tactics at

Thanksgiving Observed in Many Ways-- Chapel Services, 'Feasts,' Dances, TV

Thanksgiving Day 1961 was spent in a variety of ways by 2nd Infantry Division personnel and their dependents.

There were chapel services, sumptious meals in the mess halls, activities at the Service Clubs and Non-Commissioned Officers' Club and just plain relaxing at home with family and friends.

Special services were held for both Protestants and Catholics at Sand Hill and Kelley Hill Chapels.

Services

Protestant services were held at Sand Hill's Chapels Three and Four and at the Kelley Hill Regimental Chapel. Catholic services were also held on Sand Hill at Chapels Two, Four and Five and at the Kelley Hill Regimental Chapel.

In addition, 2nd Division personnel also observed Thanksgiving in the churches of nearby civilian communities.

Mess tables for the special meal in the various unit mess halls sagged with colossal amounts of the traditional meal "fixings" of shrimp cocktail, roast turkeys mashed potatoes, candied sweet potatoes, buttered peas, buttered succotash, assorted crisp relishes, cloverleaf rolls, pumpkin pie, mince meat pie, assorted fruits, candies, mixed nuts and fruit cakes.

And the same was true at the Sand Hill NCO Club, where shrimp cocktail, young roast tom turkey, giblet gravy, cornbread dressing, assorted relishes, yams, assorted rolls, ice tea, and coffee were included on the bill of fare.

Indianhead non - commissioned officers and their ladies were treated to the music of a variety of bands over the weekend, including those of Fred Peterson, Fate Woodham, Tom Hipps and Jack Garrett.

In addition, ladies' club bingo was also available for enjoyment.

A full slate of activities was made available for 2nd Division men at Sand Hill's Service Club Two.

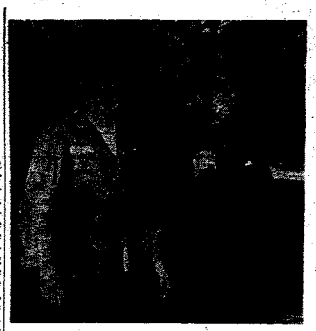
Maj. Bradley Gets Orders To Presidio

By 23rd Infantry PIO

The 23rd Infantry's adjutant leaves early this month for what promises to be an exciting and rewarding assignment.

Major Jerry F. Bradley received word recently that he had been accepted to receive instruction in the Army's Foreign Area Specialist Training Program. He will attend the Army Language School at The Presidio, Monterey, California, for the next six months, where he will study Spanish. He will be accompanied by his wife and two sons.

Colombia



After finishing the language school, he will attend American University, Washington, D. C., to advance his knowledge of Spanish and Latin American culture. Major Bradley will then be assigned to duty in Bogota, Colombia.

Army personnel who qualify for the Foreign Area Specialist Training Program usually spend a larger portion of their remaining military career serving in geographic areas for which they have been trained.

Major Bradley first entered the Army in 1943 and remained on active duty until 1946. He re-entered the service in 1942. While in the Army he has served at various military bases in the United States as well as in Italy and Korea.

Major Bradley has been with the 23rd Infantry since its activation at Fort Benning in 1958. His previous assignments within the battle group include eight months as commander of Company A and 19 months as commander of Headquarters Company. Following this, Major Bradley served as battle group adjutant, except for six months when he completed his degree in education at the University of Omaha.

Taking over Major Bradley's position will be Captain Joseph J. Radosevich, who at present is the battle group's intelligence (S-2) officer. Captain Maurice R. Van Meter, assistant S-2, will move up to replace Capt. Radosevich.

Visiting Newsmen See Division 'Front-Line' Action During FTX

During the field training exercise last week three members of the national and local press were escorted on tours of division front-line units.

C. J. Greene, military feature writer for the New York Daily News; Tom Sellers, columnist with the Columbus Ledger, and Barbara Reigle, of WRBL in Columbus, in search of news about the 2nd Infantry Division, were given a first hand demonstration of skills and techniques learned this fall during the division's intensified combat training program.

By Helicopter

Mr. Greene, who arrived on post November 20, was met by Major Darwin C. Miller, division information officer, and flown by an H-19 helicopter to the division main command post in the field.

Upon their arrival at the main command post, Mr. Greene was met by Colonel Gustav M. Bacharach, division chief of staff, and brought up to date on the exercise by Lieutenant Colonel Ralph H. Hughett, division G-3.

Lieutenant Colonel Ralph K. Jones, G-1, escorted the newspaperman throughout the main command post.

He was then flown by helicopter over a portion of the troops to "Cactus Strip," where he was met by Colonel Walter B. Todd, 1st Infantry commanding officer.

Mr. Greene, who is considered an expert on military affairs, was introduced by Colonel Todd to Captain William R. Colvin, Company A commander, and was shown positions occupied by Company A.

Two .106 millimeter recoilless rifles mounted on quarter-ton trucks and in position guarding their separate sectors of fire were of particular interest to the Daily News representative, who spoke briefly with Sergeants Robert A. Mitchell and Rankin J. Birchfield, in command of these weapons.

Later, upon being shown the blocking positions occupied by members of the third platoon of Company A, led by Lieutenant Clay N. Mobley and Sergeant Don Taylor of the 1st Infantry, Mr. Greene asked if "the holes had been dug before the men took up this position."

Mr. Greene was told that the positions had been prepared by these men overnight in what had been a "virgin area."

From Company A, Mr. Greene was taken to the area held by Company E, commanded by Captain Rocco Negris and toured the line, stopping to speak briefly with a fire team leader, Private First Class Russell W. Stewart Jr., and a rifle squad leader, Sergeant First Class Quinlus Harris, both of "Echo" Company.

Following his tour of the 1st Infantry, Mr. Greene returned to Lawson Field to embark for Washington, D. C.

Tom Sellers

Mr. Sellers, a columnist with the Columbus Ledger newspaper, was escorted by Lieutenant Gregg DeWolfe, division assistant information officer, on November 21, spending much of his time with the 1st Infantry's Company D, commanded by Captain Glenwood E. Jones, Jr.

Mr. Sellers was gathering information for a story titled "Indianhead Troops on War-path," which appeared in the Columbus Ledger November 22.

Miss Reigle, of WRBL in Columbus, arrived in the field November 20, took motion picture film of the Division main command post, division artillery headquarters and line units for television broadcast that same day.

Major Joe T. Ely, assistant division signal officer, was awarded the United States Army Infantry Center Certificate of Achievement for outstanding service during his tour of duty with the First Infantry Brigade.

The award was presented to Major Ely in ceremonies held Monday by 122nd Signal Battalion Commander, Lieutenant Colonel Herbert W. Coburn.

Major Ely served as Signal Officer with the Brigade from August 8, 1960 to August 31.

Units Kept Aware of Movement, Alert for Action in Division FTX

BY MAX COURSON

A division on the attack or the defense is a mammoth machine almost too vast, too complicated for one to envision.

Even after this giant organization is reduced to its component parts, a single unit is still something large and complex.

Here, then, is a thumbnail sketch of the activities of one such unit during last week's exercise:

The 23rd Infantry took to the field Sunday as one segment of the 2nd Division's over-all defensive-offensive plan. The 23rd set up a defensive line along its assigned area and was ordered to repel all attacks by the Aggressors. It also was to join in the division attack later that week.

Soon after the seven companies of the "We Serve" battle group had dug in, the air was virtually crackling with radio messages reporting patrol probes, small scale attacks and feints. The nerve center for receiving and transmitting messages within the battle group was located in the S-2 and S-3 tent.

Placed strategically in the command post area a safe distance from the forward edge of the battle area, this vital communications link was the method used primarily by Colonel Louis A. Kunzig Jr., battle group commander, to receive information from the individual companies. He could then evaluate it and issue orders via either radio or field phones to his units.

What was it like in the 23rd Infantry area during the recent field exercise?

First, the men were constantly aware of movement, tanks, armored personnel carriers, trucks, jeeps and aircraft clattered through and over the countryside.

Wiley Aggressors were forever punching at the FEBA, (Forward edge of battle area) and the back of rifles, the rattle of machine guns and the roar of powerful engines seemed to never cease.

The already fast tempo quickened Monday afternoon and night, when the Aggressors launched a series of fanatical attacks using armor, CBR weapons and paratroopers dropped. One section of the 23rd's line was so hard-pressed that a reserve company was sent up to reinforce the area.

To dramatize the food problem—and to add a touch of realism to the training—simulated wounded were marked, treated for their "injuries" and then dispatched back to the front as replacements for their own "casualties."

Despite the emphasis on combat-like conditions, several activities were carried on in much the same manner as in garrison. The mailman regularly distributed his bundles of morale boosters, even though he ran the risk of capture each time he took to the road. The mess halls managed to produce their usual hot, nourishing fare, too. But at least one mess sergeant and his KP helpers had to drop what they were doing to fight off a snooping Aggressor patrol.

The long-awaited division attack began Tuesday morning. The 23rd slashed deep into Aggressor territory—so far, in fact, that the battle group command post area had to be moved several miles forward. It was from this location that the 23rd was commanded until the problem was completed Wednesday morning.

The results of the four day field training exercise—a group of tired, dirty men. But they were more than that. They had completed 14 weeks of grueling instruction in combat conditions, and they now have a good idea of what will be expected of them if they should ever be called upon to fight their country's enemies.

Angela Says 'Thanks' To Div's 69th Armor

BY 69TH ARMOR PIO

The 2nd Medium Tank Battalion, 69th Armor recently received a post card from West Palm Beach, Florida. Contents of the card are as follows:

"Thank you for the picnic area near the Benning Traffic Circle on US 27. Our family had occasion to use it several months ago and this is a much belated note of appreciation for the very kind gesture on your part. It's a most welcome sight on a hot day after travelling for hours with a car full of children. Many Thanks." Angela McNair.

The division's Armor battalion established a road side picnic area in July 1958. It has maintained this area as a part of its daily routine for the past three years.

'Destroyed' Bridge Fails to Stop Her

During the recent 2nd Division Field Training Exercise, an umpire stationed a private at a bridge used by the men of the 1st Infantry. He was ordered to allow no one to cross it, in the wake of constant "bombardment" by aggressor forces.

A short time later, a lady farmer approaching the bridge in her car was waved to a stop by the young soldier. He told her the bridge had been "destroyed" and advised her to take a detour. Instead, she took a double-take.

Uncanny Eye

Staring at the bridge with an uncanny eye, she remarked:

"Young man, I've been crossing that bridge twice a day for the last 15 years and I don't intend to stop now."

"I'm sorry," the private answered, "but the bridge has been destroyed and you can't cross it."

Noticing another private sitting under a nearby tree, the lady approached him.

"Soldier, is your friend sick?" she asked. "He is trying to tell me that the bridge has been blown up, when I can see perfectly well that it is as good as new."

The soldier answered:

"I'm sorry, lady, but I can't talk to you. I've been dead for two days."

87th Inf Co Posts High ATT Score

By 87th Inf PIO

Company C, 1st Battle Group, 87th Infantry, received the highest score (93.77) in the division's recent Army Training Tests for infantry rifle companies.

Captain Roy D. Sims, Company C's commander, lauded the unit for "performing in an outstanding manner during the 24-hour period. During the critique it was brought out by the company umpire that should Company C have to go into combat, "there is no doubt it would come out as a top-notch infantry unit."

"I have always known that we were outstanding," said Captain Sims, "and now you have proven it to yourselves."

Bloodmobile's Last '61 Visit Set Dec 7-8

The bloodmobile from the Atlanta Regional Blood Center is to return to the 2nd Infantry Division December 7-8 for its final every-other-month visit this calendar year.

It will set up operations at Sand Hill's Service Club Two.

Some 3,117 pints of blood have been donated thus far, according to Sergeant Henry Kile, the division's safety NCO.

This amount has put the division comfortably over its 3,000 pint goal and did so one-donation-visit early.

On previous visits, 702 pints were donated in February, 634 pints were donated in April, 608 pints in June, 575 in August and 598 in October — all well over the 500-pint-per-visit goal.

45-Star Flag Flew in 1898

Tucked away in the Sand Hill Library lies a 45-star American flag belonging to the 9th Infantry. The historic flag and war relic was flown in the Spanish - American War in 1898 when the 9th Infantry Regiment fought to victory.

The flag also appeared in Cuba on battleships near San Juan Creek and San Juan Hill. From there the battle-christened flag followed the regiment to the Philippine Insurrection and later to the Boxer Rebellion in China.

Col. Holden Guest of 9th For Holiday

9th Infantry PIO

After a four-day holiday of leisure (and plenty of Thanksgiving turkey), the 9th Infantry returned to duty Monday morning with slightly larger waistlines and smiles of contentment.

Colonel Clifford P. Hannum, commander of the 9th Infantry, was a guest at Combat Support Company for the long-awaited feast. With him were his wife and his mother, Mrs. F. L. Berry. Mrs. Berry is from Indianapolis, Indiana, where she is engaged in the antique business. She is visiting with her son until Christmas.

Also seated with Colonel Hannum was Colonel Maurice C. Holden and his family. Colonel Holden is the Deputy Brigade Commander.

As the honored guests of Company C, were Chaplain James B. Dolan, the battle group Catholic chaplain, and Chaplain Horace Sams Jr., his wife and their five children. Both Chaplains led the men in prayer.

The meals prepared by both companies began with shrimp cocktail and assorted relishes. One hundred and eighty pounds of turkey were served with the traditional Thanksgiving cuisine.

7th Cavalry--Plus Two

Exercise Aggressors Attack Div in FTX

Morale went "sky-high" in the 7th Cavalry last week as the reconnaissance squadron took on the aggressor mission for the division's field training exercise.

According to Major Charles A. Busch, squadron executive officer, the men displayed great enthusiasm as they played the "enemy" last week.

Augmented

Approximately 800 men strong, the squadron, commanded by Lieutenant Colonel Harvey Scott, was augmented by two companies -- Company C of the 87th Infantry, Captain Roy D. Sims, commanding, and the 66th Armored Cimpany from Main Post, Captain Thomas W. W. Atwood, commanding.

Company C of the 87th Infantry had been chosen chiefly because these men achieved the highest score in company - level, division Army Training Tests this fall. Under the command of Captain Sims and their top non-commissioned officer, First Sergeant John N. Bocarth, the men were attached to the cavalry's Troop B. Their aggressor designation was the 16th Mechanized Rifle Regiment.

Wearing the dark green dyed uniforms of aggressors, the men used equipment carrying the aggressor nation's symbol, a circle around a green triangle.

As many Soldiers from "friendly" units found out (along with several trucks and tanks that also were captured) the cavalrymen and their attached comrades meant it when they took on their mission to test the combat-readiness of the division.

Familiar Job

The job was a familiar one for the men of the 7th Cavalry, who had played aggressors against the division's infantry battle groups in their Army Training Tests.

Therefore, they were well prepared when renamed the 58th Mechanized Rifle Division. They established a covering force along the line of highway 80.

Though this was not a free maneuver, it was a chance for the squadron to work as a squadron, playing against time, giving everybody good training.

The cavalrymen probed "friendly" lines, sent patrols behind lines, made several simulated air - drops of enemy agents to gather information and, finally, according to the problem scenario, attacked division line units, pushing them back, in several cases, to the forward edge of the battle area.

Even though the exercise was non-live fire and controlled, the aggressors looked on their mission enthusiastically, and gained the valuable experience of engaging a highly - organized and effectively trained "enemy."

Sgt. Led 'Exciting Life' as Detective

9th Infantry PIO

Hunting down murderers and rehabilitating juvenile delinquents were, at one time, only a small part of the duties performed by Sergeant Joseph L. Garl of Headquarters Company, 9th Infantry.

Sergeant Garl now works at the message center at battle group headquarters which is quite a change from the routine of an active and very often dangerous life of a detective in plain clothes.

Prior to his first interest in law enforcement, Sergeant Garl enlisted in the Army just before the Korean conflict broke out in 1950. He served four years with the 25th Division and received a Purple Heart.

After the conflict reached its climax, Sergeant Garl returned to the United States to start his career as a law enforcement officer at Reading, Pennsylvania. He attended a course in law enforcement officers training and became a "Rookie" cop for six months and was then promoted to patrolman. During off-duty time he attended the Pennsylvania Institute of Criminology and graduated with honors. He was then promoted to detective.

As a detective, his life was filled with excitment and action each day. Never knowing what to expect next, Sergeant Garl chased after car thiefs as well as handling murder case suspects.

Sergeant Garl then decided to reenter the Army and make it his career. He was stationed in Germany with the 7th United States Army Security Company from June 1958 to June 1960. On returning to the states, he came to the 9th Infantry and has remained here since. He still has a keen interest in law enforcement and hopes to enter the field some day in the future.

Sergeant Garl, his wife, Hattie, and their three children reside in the Columbus area.

Says Captured Aggressor

'I Forgot That It Was Just A Field Training Exercise'

BY LT. JOSEPH C. GROSS

I had always wondered how it felt to be captured . . . how an interrogation team really worked . . . to see how I would react while going through it.

I guess that's why I volunteered the day before my capture in order to get the "experience."

And, believe me, before it was over, I almost forgot this was just a part of a field training exercise.

Here's what happened:

I was commanding a regular platoon of men, dressed in the Aggressor dark green uniform. We were a part of the 115th Mechanized Rifle Regiment.

Capture

On Tuesday, November 21st (the third day of the exercise), during an attack on a roadblock at the intersection of 10th Armored Division Road and Highway 103, I left my vehicle and started down 103.

Shortly thereafter, I met my captors: a platoon of the 23rd Infantry.

Lt. Gross is a platoon leader in the 7th Cavalry's Troop A. As a member of the Aggressor force testing division troops on their effectiveness in combat in last week's field training exercise, he ended up volunteering for a different type of personal test — a grill by an interrogation of Prisoners of War Team.

This is his story.

Upon capturing me they searched me thoroughly and blindfolded me and I stayed in the general area of capture for approximately 15 minutes.

They took my weapon and, for the problem play, they cleared it and gave it back so I would not, of course, lose track of my weapon.

I stood there blindfolded for about 15 minutes. Then they moved me out on some sort of vehicle. I guessed it to be a three-quarter ton truck. About 12 minutes later, we arrived at what I think was probably the Battle Group Command Post —I'm not sure — where I was interrogated at that level.

At this first interrogation point they never pressured me except verbally. Two Specialists, that was the rank they wore, took me out of the cold into a very warm tent and offered me a cigarette, offered me coffee. They were very lax to start with — finding out my name from my dog tags. They found one document which was purposefully put on my person. It was a history and it showed the unit I was with, units of the entire aggressor force and who their commanders were.

They questioned me about the paper, firing questions at me for about 20 minutes. I refused to answer, of course. When they found they were getting no answers from me they sent me to the prisoner of war compound and brought another man in.

POW Point

I was next taken to the division main POW Point, which was surrounded by Military Police. There were compounds, segregated between officers, enlisted men, civilians, stragglers and such.

It was closely-guarded and the barbed wire was very effective. The people seemed to know their job. . . even when I was walking with somebody armed, everytime we walked by a man going in or out of the compound they always asked the person I was with if everything was all right. Their security, I thought, was very good.

At this point I was searched by a sergeant of the MPs who checked me over very thoroughly. Then I went into the second interrogation session.

This division-level interrogation was the real test. I had wanted for my own personal experience to see how an interrogation team worked, to see how I would react while going through it. That is why I volunteered the day before my capture in order to get the experience of going through the IPW team.

When I walked into the interrogation tent there was a captain and a specialist behind a desk. The captain followed me in and immediately snapped me to attention, held me at a rigid position while he fired questions at me.

His first approach was to try to get me angry, talking about the fact that I was a junior grade officer and an aggressor junior officer was something to be questioned as far as character was concerned. I was dirty, and he talked about my appearance, trying to get me to believe that I was of low standard.

Pressure

He was very effective, keeping a steady pressure on me verbally. I began to forget that this was just a part of a field training exercise.

I had previously made up my mind that I wouldn't say anything but 'I don't know' and my name, rank and serial number. But even with this, he had a disturbing way of making me stop and listen to what he was saying rather than actually shutting out from my mind what the man was saying.

They didn't get anything out of me, but the pressure was very great. It brought out a realism that brought home what I would have to do to withstand such an interrogation in actual combat.

Following the interrogation I was taken back to the POW compound and from there to Brigade. This was where the test ended for me and I was released to return for the rest of the problem to my unit.

I later had a chance to speak with a fellow officer and some enlisted men who were captured. One thing that they all got around to saying was that they were very impressed with the IPW teams and the realism that was injected into the thing — even though this had been just a training exercise.

PROCLAMATION ACCEPTED IN BEHALF OF 6TH MARINE REGIMENT
Col. Platt and S-Maj. Pullen, Organization Day Guests

Organization Day Guest

'A High Point of My Career,' Says Marine S-Maj of Visit to 2nd Div

Special to THE BAYONET

The birth of Mary Catherine Pullen, daughter of Marine Sergeant Major and Mrs. E. B. Pullen Jr., did not keep her father from attending the 2nd Infantry Division's Organization Day activities last montb.

Mary Catherine arrived, weighing in at 7 pounds, 4 ounces, two days prior to the intended departure for Fort Benning of Colonel Jonas M. Platt, commanding officer of the 6th Marine Regiment and her father, who is sergeant major of the unit based at Camp Lejeune, N. C.

Sgt. Pullen, torn between two desires, was aided in his decision when his wife Jerry said, "They invited you, you go! I won't have you missing such an honor."

Hosts

The two Marines arrived at Fort Benning on the evening of October 27 and were met by their hosts, the 2nd Infantry Division's Chief of Staff and Sergeant Major, Colonel Gustav M. Bacharach and Sergeant Major Robert L. Brown, respectively.

Both Col. Platt and Sgt. Pullen were eloquent in praising their hosts.

"They really went all-out to make us feel at home," S-Maj. Pullen said, "They had everything all planned and the 'red carpet' treatment was the order of the day. It was very entertaining and impressive."

At 9:30 a.m. on October 28, Organization Day got underway with a division review and, according to the two Marines, it was "quite an experience."

"There were 7,000 troops in formation plus vehicles and supporting arms," Col. Platt reported. Yes, and the local newspaper estimated there were 5,000 spectators," added the sergeant major.

Both Marines said they were "completely surprised" by the activities that lay in store for them.

"When we went out to 'troop the line' with the two generals in one jeep and the Colonel and myself in the other, I could not help thinking, 'Oh boy, this is probably the first time in history a Marine Sergeant Major has inspected an Army Division'," the sergeant major said.

"It was a distinct honor and pleasure and will have to rate as one of the high points of my career, along with being a sergeant major of Marines," he added with a smile.

"We were introduced as distinguished visitors after the review," said S-Maj. Pullen, "and then General Chase presented us with a very impressive proclamation making us 'honorary members of the United States Army's 2nd Infantry Division'."

Upon his return to Camp Lejeune following this "extremely pleasant and unique experience," Col. Platt presented the proclamation to Major General James P. Berkeley, commander, Marine Corps Base, Camp Lejeune.

A framed reproduction will be hung in the corridor of the 6th Marine Headquarters, opposite copies of the French Citations issued to the regiment during World War I.

Another copy of the proclamation has been sent to the Commanding Officer of the 5th Marines.

Forget Sleeping Bag

Guard Duty No Time for Idle Thoughts, Aggressor-Harassed Sentry Discovers

BY EUGENE BREESKIN

It was very dark. I could see the battle group command post tent silhouetted against the star-filled sky, magnifying its size. Accustomed to the dark, I walked slowly around the perimeter of the tent, acutely aware of the slightest sound, making sure to avoid the white sand. Guard duty would be over in about 20 minutes.

This was a tactical bivouac. One of the many field training exercises scheduled for the 87th Infantry as part of the 2nd Infantry Division's intensified combat training program. Only two more weeks would complete the 14-week cycle, one consolation for sustaining the cold and the weariness of the moment.

Mounting Weight

Being on a tactical problem meant wearing more equipment. I could feel the mounting weight of my M-1 rifle slung across my shoulder and felt the tug of my belt and protective mask around my waist. Despite the added weight, I felt a certain lightness like a beast of prey.

The ground was strewn with dry dead leaves and profuse undebrush, crisp and brittle—the result of three rainless months. Trying to make as little noise as possible as I peered through the blackness, I occupied myself with random thoughts. The password and the countersign, the satellite I saw earlier making its weird way across the sky, off-duty plans for the approaching holiday.

The luminous hands on my watch told me it was about time to wake up my relief. I ached for the warmth of the sleeping bag and the prospect of four hours of uninterrupted sleep. Scanning the approximate location of his shelter, I suddenly was aware of sounds other than my own steps. I froze, but the rustling persisted. Maybe it was a snake, desperate for the same warmth I sought. No, it was too stealthy.

Attack!

Approaching shadows flickered about a hundred feet away. Infiltrators! Attack! As I formed the words, I heard the terrible whistle - like scream that precedes a hurtling projectile. A blinding flash of light and a sudden blast shattered the stillness. For an instant, night became day as I whirled around to seek out and arouse the others. Another blast startled me, even closer. Then another and another.

An estimated half - dozen aggressors were now only a few feet away. They seemed to be everywhere at once. My cries of halt went unheeded.

The others in our group, now fully awake, were scrambling for their freshly-dug prone shelters, prepared to defend their position.

The enemy began to dissolve into the shadows as quickly and quietly as they came. The attack was over. A realistic and valuable lesson in security was accomplished.

Within a few minutes, everyone was deep inside the warm sleeping bags. The last sound I remember was the rustling of dead leaves beneath the boots of the new sentry.

Runaway 'Cootie Machine' Dismayed Germans, Terrorized French Peasants

BY GORDON ALDERMAN

From the front-line trenches to General Headquarters, one biting problem plagued the Allied soldiers during The Great War—"cooties."

Lack of proper sanitation facilities, combined with the manner in which the average soldier lived during this period, served to increase the number of these pests by untold numbers.

Irrespective of rank, "cooties," or lice, struck at anytime, anyplace, anyone.

'Enemy'

The Allied forces, in an attempt to do away with this "enemy behind the lines," evolved machines known as "machine, delousing, steam operated and chain driven."

These mechanical monsters were used with a fair degree of success all during World War I, and it is about one of these machines that the following comments were recorded in the diary of Sergeant Bernard J. McCrossen, 22rd Infantry. The account has to do with the march of Sergeant McCrossen's unit toward the French town of Meaux, May 31, 1918, and with a "runaway cootie machine."

"The 2d Division, while near Beauvais expecting to move to the front, possessed a delousing plant, so large that it resembled a threshing machine, consisting of an enormous boiler mounted upon great iron wheels.

This plant was under the personal direction of 'Arkansas Pete.'

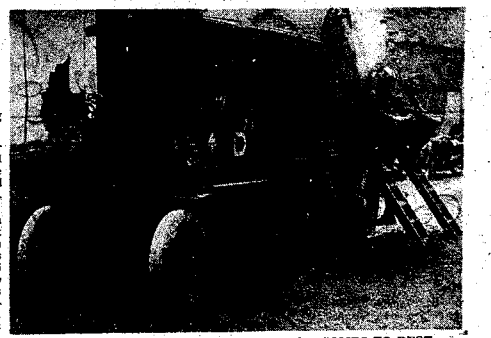
"When orders arrived for the division to move without delay towards Meaux, Pete sought in vain for a railway flat car; but he found that the French had left him out in their calculations. However, being a man of resources, he went through the French town with a cart, collecting coal which he stored into his plant. Then he fired the boiler to its maximum capacity, blew three piercing blasts with his whistle, and started full speed down the main street directly on the road to Paris.

"His perilous passage, running at not less than ten knots an hour, spread consternation among the country people. As he thundered along the highway, blowing his whistle to clear traffic, children ran in terror, peasants retreated into their homes and cattle stampeded. The great iron monster careened like a billiard ball off St. Denis, just missing the Royal Tombs, and started down the highway to Meaux.

Quiet Village

"While passing through a quiet village, it happened that a highly respected French shopkeeper had just closed his store after a busy day and climbed up the stairway into his living apartments over his shop, hoping to enjoy an evening of rest. Unfortunately, just at this moment 'Arkansas Pete' arrived; and his delousing plant, skidding at a sudden turn, completely demolished the shop and sent the shopkeeper and his wife high in the air, landing them in a nearby fish pond.

"Numbers of German observation planes, their pilots astonished at this curious sight, flew low as if to observe in detail this strange smoking contrivance, then suddenly changed their course towards the headquarters of the German High Command where they undoubtedly reported that a new and terrible tank was on its way to the front.



"'Arkansas Pete' never stopped; not even at Meaux, where he obstructed traffic and blocked the French army headquarters from reaching Trilport.

"Late that night, the plant, vomiting flames and smoke, drew up, its boiler heated to a fiery red; and a weary quartermaster, aroused from his sleep, was amazed to see 'Arkansas Pete' reporting for duty, ready for any delousing emergency."

This is the second in a series of articles dealing with various features of the 2nd Division Museum.

MORE BINGO AT 2ND ANNIVERSARY PARTY Mrs. Tighe checks a Winner, SP5 Dailey

MAH Program Begins 3rd Year For Ladies of the Big Indianhead

This autumn marks the second anniversary and the beginning of the third year of the Martin Army Hospital program sponsored by the Ladies of the Big Indianhead, under the supervision of the American Red Cross.

Once each month the club provides a morning coffee for the hospital staff and ambulatory patients.

Quarterly, usually around a holiday, there are ward parties for which the club furnishes punch and prizes for games and members furnish homemade cakes.

Party Day

Party day this quarter was Thursday, November 16th, in Ward A-7. Hostesses were Mesdames Lawrence W. Smith, chairman of the Hospital Welfare Committee; James J. Tighe, Pelham Breaud, and Edward Haller. Games of bingo were won by: Specialist Seven V. C. Fenner, Specialist Four Samuel Howard, Specialist Five Robert L. Dailey, Specialist Four Edward McParland, Sergeant First Class Roscoe Lowery, and Sergeant Edward Gill.

After the games the patients were served punch and cake. The cakes were furnished by Mesdames Edward W. Minnick, James J. Tighe, Basil Plumley, James R. Simmons, Melvin M. Hunson, and James D. Speer.

In addition to hospital work, the Ladies of the Big Indianhead members contribute to many other projects which could not be carried on without voluntary contributions and help. The dollars spent for bingo cards with the ladies each Friday evening at the Sand Hill Non-Commissioned Officers' Open Mess help finance and support these good works.

69th Units Take Company Tests

By 69th Armor PIO

The individual tank companies of the 69th Armor recently received their company test.

The tank company test was a three-day test covering all aspects of small unit operations. The primary mission of the tank company in an Infantry Division is to provide close and continuous support to the Infantry battle group to which it is attached. For this reason, the tank company test consists of four phases. These phases are movement, defense, withdrawal and attack.

Each of the five companies of the 69th Armor were attached to one of the five battle groups for the period of the test.

Specialist Four Clarence D. Green of Company E, 9th Infantry, last week graduated with honors from a course given at Main Post on morning report procedures.

Specialist Green has been a member of the 9th since February of this year.

World's Fastest Sport Played by 87th Inf Man

PLAYS JAI-ALAI
Breeskin

BY KEITH JACOBY

Ask anyone: what is the fastest and most dangerous sport in the world?

Answers may vary, but Private First Class Eugene Breeskin, a headquarters clerk assigned to the 87th Infantry, would answer Jai-Alai. (Pronounced hi-li)

Private Breeskin's knowledge of Jai-Alai is first hand, having played the game while doing some research on the subject in Mexico City. Describing the game, he says, "Jai-Alai is unlike any other sport." A cross between lacrosse and handball, it is played on a large three-sided concrete court that varies in length from 175 to 200 feet.

Cestas

"The players, usually two on a side, wear large claw-like straw cestas (literally translated as baskets) strapped to their wrists," says Breeskin. "They play with a very hard ball, much like a rock, that is bigger than a handball but smaller than a baseball. They are handmade and expensive, and because they are imperfect, their bounce is unpredictable.

"A game consists of 30 points and play is so strenuous that players often rest between points. The ball rockets off the walls at speeds of more than 125 m.p.h. and the players, who wear no protection at all, must crash into walls and fences in order to snatch the ball while it is ricocheting off the walls.

"Once caught, they must fling the ball in the same motion, even if in mid-air. The most important thing a player must have besides nerve is a good strong wrist, because players must reach the front wall from as far back as 175 feet."

Breeskin goes on to say that, "Good players are in demand as much as the top bullfighters and are just as well paid. Seldom are they older than 30. Reflexes must be razor sharp or else the ball will rebound off the players instead of the walls."

One of the world champions is a Spaniard named Larranaga, whom Breeskin met in Mexico City.

"His play is so hard and aggressive that he has had the misfortune of killing two men in play during his career. Able to fling the ball so hard, the umpires sometimes lose sight of the ball because of its blinding speed."

Betting Game

"The crowd sits on a side protected by a large screen. Activity among the spectators is as furious as the action on the court. A very popular betting game, the odds change with every point."

Jai-Alai has never been very successful in the United States, but Breeskin feels that it has never been given much of a chance. He hopes that someday Americans will realize the "great potentialities of the sport from the standpoint of player and spectator alike."

9th Awards Dual Tracks To Webster

Captain Grady F. Webster was promoted to his present rank in a brief ceremony in the office of Colonel Clifford P. Hannum, commander of the 9th Infantry. Captain Webster is assigned to the 9th as assistant S-2 (intelligence).

The new Captain is a graduate of Georgia Tech and has a bachelor of arts degree in industrial management. After college he served in the U. S. Air Force as a jet pilot until 1958. He then was employed by the Lockheed Aircraft Corporation as a college relations director.

In early 1960, Captain Webster re-entered the service as an officer in the U.S. Army.

Starting this week, and continuing until the Christmas holidays, Troop Information classes throughout the 2nd Infantry Division will see a special information film entitled "The Anatomy of Aggression."

The positive actions taken by our government and the free peoples of other nations to counter these moves are underscored.

23rd Inf. Ladies Conduct Annual Cake Bake Sale

By 23rd Inf PIO

Ladies of the 22nd Infantry were in the "We Serve" area all day recently conducting their annual Cake Bake Sale.

Display tables were set up in company mess halls, where platters of cookies and cakes were sold to any trooper with a sweet tooth and a hankering for home cooked goodies.

The cakes and cookies were prepared by the ladies, and they sold like wildfire. An unofficial tally showed that more than $410 was raised. All proceeds will go for a Christmas party for children of 23rd Infantry personnel, both enlisted men and officers.

Mrs. Louis A. Kunzig Jr., wife of the battle group commander, expressed a word of thanks to all for their contributions of time and products which made the sale a success.

She also thanked Mrs. John Swango, wife of the battle group's executive officer, who was chairman of the Cake Bake Sale.

Fifty points were to be awarded to the winner of the 87th — 1st flag football tilt Wednesday night and 30 points to the loser.

If the 1st has won that game, it will still be 40 points shy of matching the 87th. (Results were not available at press time)

The 87th amassed four points in division tennis, 22 in division golf, 25 in company - level volley ball, 75 in divison-level volley ball, 50 in the cross country run, 25 in company-level flag football and 65 for their 13-1 record in regular season play of the division flag football tournament.

The 1st Infantry received 21 points for division tennis, 25 in company-level volley ball, 30 in division - level volley ball, 30 in the cross country run, 25 in the company-level flag football competition, and 65 as it tied the 87th for first place in the division flag contest.

Also each unit received 25 points each time it fielded a team in a major command sports event.

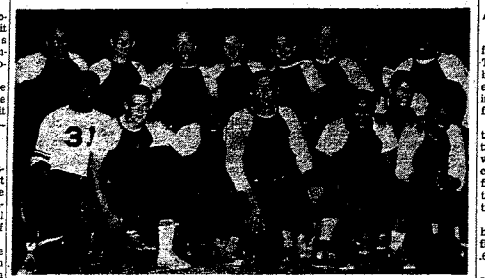
The third place contender for the Commanding General's Sports Trophy is the 9th Infantry with a total of 197.

The Manchus recorded their points by getting two in division tennis, five in USAIC golf, 25 in company-level volley ball, 35 in division - level volley ball, ten in the cross country run, 25 in the company level flag football tourney and 45 in the division-level flag football.

Additional points were to be awarded as a result of Wednesday night's game.

Other major unit teams and their totals are: Separate Battalions, 192; Division Trains, 172; Division Artillery, 133; 11th Infantry 95, and 23rd Infantry, 73.

The award of the Command-in-General's Sports Trophy is to be made at a later date.



Play-Off Results

The 87th Infantry Wednesday night defeated the 1st Infantry, 22-21, to capture first place in the 2nd Infantry Division Flag Football Championship in a play-off game.

In another play-off game, the 11th Infantry downed the 9th Infantry, 28-12, to nail down third place.

Both games were played at Sand Hill's Bennett Field.

The new "Soldier-of-the - Month" has been in the U.S. Army for three years. Two of these years were spent in Germany with the 2nd Armored Cavalry Regiment.

Only two seasons, 1955 and 1960, failed to produce a 20-game winner in the American League since it was organized in 1901.

Larry Jones, of Fort Benning, has a long list of fistic champs that he has coached. One of the pupils who have served under his instruction is Eddie Crook, 1960 Olympic middleweight crown owner along with heavyweight Pete Rademacher.

One of the bigger gridsters on the forward wall of Parris Island is a 20-year-older who tips the scales at a solid 230 pounds. The player, Jerry Nicholas, served his apprenticeship at the University of Miami where he lettered for two seasons.

Paul Hornung, razzle-dazzle halfback who has made the Green Bay eleven of the NFL a leading title contender, passed his physical at NTC Great Lakes, Illinois, and has donned an Army uniform.

Former West Point letterman Bill McCaffrey, whose services as a grid end were curtailed due to a leg injury during his Point days, is now catching touchdowns for the 1st Cavalry Division in Korea.

All Eight Teams Are Tied As Flag Football Ends

The outcome of the 2nd Infantry Division Flag Football Tournament is for the record books — each member of the eight-team league is involved in a tie for one of the first four spots.

Vying for the first place position are the 1st and 87th Infantries, boasting records of 13 wins and one loss and a percentage of .929, while teams from two other battle groups, the 9th and 11th Infantries, are tied for second place.

The second place contenders have a record of nine wins and five losses and an average of .643.

A playoff for these top four spots was scheduled for Wednesday at Sand Hill's Bennett Field. The 9th and the 11th were to do battle at 6:30 p.m. and the 1st and 87th were to take on each other at the 8:00 p.m. nightcap.

Next two teams that are tied are the 23rd Infantry and Division Trains — four wins, 10 losses and a .286 average.

Separate Battalions and Division Artillery are tied with two wins, 12 losses and a percentage of .143.

The Always First nine and the Conquerors' team wrapped up their bid for the championship November 18 when the 1st Infantry downed the 9th Infantry Manchus 30-6 and the 87th Infantry blanked a Division Trains team 39-0.

The lone defeat on the records of the 1st and 87th Infantries were dealt by each other in regular season play.

Div Man Gets Two TKOs In Silver Gloves Tilts

Welterweight Fred Rutherford, a 2nd Division member of the Fort Benning boxing team, scored two TKO's Monday in the opening bouts of the 1961 Southern Silver Gloves Boxing Tournament in Jacksonville, Florida.

First to fall victim to Rutherford was Thomas Kimball of Jacksonville Naval Air Station in the second round of their fight.

In his second fight, Rutherford, TKOed Tom Bacon of Saint Augustine in the first round.

The tournament was to end Wednesday night.

Representing Fort Benning is a 17-man team, of which seven men are from the Indianhead Division.

In other bouts Monday, Mel Lonas, a trophy winner of this year's Southern Golden Gloves Tournament, decisioned William Jones of Charleston Air Force Base in a heavyweight tilt.

Heavyweight Charles Garlington drew a bye for the finals.

Other division team members making the trip are Robert Richter, lightweight and Amos Crumbley, light heavyweight.

Trainer for the Fort Benning team is Louis Prolago, Division Trains athletic and recreation NCO.

World of Sports

Tony Kubek, the New York Yankee's rifle-shot shortstop, has left a huge gap in the world champion's infield after answering Uncle Sam's beck and call. Kubek is on a year's active duty at Fort Lewis, Washington.

Two mainstays of last season's Quantico Marines' hardcourt five — 6'7" Al Salee and ex-LaSalle University standout Andy Taylor — will be back in the fold. Salee broke into service ball while playing for Parris Island and Taylor excels in grabbing rebounds.

Grid fans who attend West Point's home gridiron tilts at Michie Stadium are often perplexed when they discover the National Anthem isn't played before the opening kickoff. Truth of the matter is that since the Point is on U. S. property, tradition has it that the anthem is in order only at retreats or when honoring distinguished persons.

Dick Schafrath, the Cleveland Brown's tackle, is now wearing Army green and serving at Mansfield, Ohio. However, Schafrath is moonlighting (with the Army's approval) by playing with the Browns on weekends.

72nd Engineers Take 1st Brigade Crown

The 72d Engineers, 29th Infantry, 1st Infantry Brigade, became the brigade 1961 Touch Football champs for the second consecutive year by clipping the last year's runners-up, Headquarters Battery, 10th Artillery, 30-0.

The Engineers went undefeated for the last two years, winning a total of 20 games. The Engineers were scored on only three times during the 1961 season, for 20 points — 14 by B Company, 29th Infantry and 6 points by Battery D, 10th Artillery, both in the championship playoffs.

The tournament got underway with Bravo Company, 29th Infantry blanking C Company, 66th Armor 7-0; 72d Engineers Company shutout Headquarters Battery, 10th Artillery, 18-0. In the next round of play Delta Battery, 10th Artillery, downed Headquarters Company, 58th Infantry, 18-0; in game four the "Big Red" Engineers struck again by walloping Bravo Company, 29th Infantry, 43-14. Headquarters Battery, 10th Artillery, came back after their lone defeat and eliminated Charlie Company, 66th Armor, by a score of 44-0, and the next day dropped Headquarters Company, 58th Infantry from the race, 13-6.

The Engineers put Delta Battery in the losing bracket by a 13-6 upset which brought the Artilleryman team in the semi-finals.

In the finals, the 1960 champs, 72d Engineers and runners-up, Headquarters Battery, 10th Artillery, met for the second year. The fighting Engineers went to work in the first period. On the first punt to the "Big Red" team, quarterback Curtis Gentry galloped 60 yards for a TD. The Redlegs fought back, but were unable to score when the quarter ended. The Engineers scored six points in the second period when fullback Frank Johnson hit Gentry with a 50 yard aerial to setup the TD, then Gentry connected a short 4 yard pass to Johnson for the TD. In the third period, Gentry hit Alvin Beverly in the end zone for the Engineers third TD. In the closing minutes of the game the Engineers scored two more touchdowns. Johnson ran 85 yards on a pitch out around left end for six points and Gentry intercepted a Redlegs pass on the 40 and sprinted down the sidelines for a six-pointer to end the game with a 30-0 victory and the 1961 1st Infantry Brigade Championship.

A presentation was held at brigade Dust Bowl Field after the contest between the Engineers and the Artillerymen. Col. William H. Birdsong, brigade commander, made the presentation. Captain Joseph S. Wood Jr., commanding officer, 72d Engineer Company, 29th Infantry, received the team trophy for the second consecutive year and the following players received individual trophies for the brigade Touch Football Championship:

Kibitzer's Korner

BY PFC ROSS HUFF

Recently in this column, as well as many sports editorials in leading newspapers throughout the nation, there has been a difference of opinions as to which is the toughest football league, the Southeastern Conference or the Mid-West's Big 10.

The SEC and Big 10 are undoubtedly the two strongest conferences in the nation today, according to top football critics and the UPI and AP weekly ratings. As to which one is the better of the two leaves much room for discussion. This is where I would like to state the views of a western football fan that has no prejudice toward either conference.

First of all let's bring up this word "BREATHER." This word alone seems to generate a heated discussion almost every time a Big 10 fan and a SEC enthusiast meet during this gridiron season.

Let's try a reasonable definition to the way this word is used in our discussion. According to Lt. Joseph Tomko, in his November 3 article, "This gives a team an opportunity to recover from injuries, mental or physical exhaustion." Further elaborating he leaves the impression that a "BREATHER" is a game played against a team of much less quality than themselves or their future opponents. He also infers that the SEC teams, "on a given Saturday," play "BREATHER" games, there as those in the Big 10 don't.

On the other hand Pfc Raymond P. Knight says that a "BREATHER" is, "when a team has an open date on their schedule." He uses this term of logic in defense of his definition, "a team has to make necessary preparation for all of their games." Meaning that only an idle team can be considered as having a "BREATHER".

I have to agree and disagree with both Lt. Tomko and Pfc Knight when it comes to the question, does the SEC play "BREATHER" games and the Big 10 not? Using Lt. Tomko's definition it is my opinion that the teams in both conferences play "BREATHER" games during their scheduled seasons.

As Pfc Knight said, "necessary preparations", for all games are a must. But common sense tells us that the necessary preparations for a weak team would not be nearly as rigid as those for a more powerful opponent.

With this theory in mind, it is my opinion that all of the powerful teams in the nation have some "BREATHER" games during a season. It is also my opinion that the SEC teams, such as Mississippi, Alabama and LSU, have more "BREATHERS" as compared with Ohio State, Minnesota, Purdue and Iowa of the Big 10, thus giving them an easier schedule.

I Granted that some of the nation's finest teams are from the SEC, but, are there as many as in the Big 10?

Main Post YAC All-Stars Win Turkey Bowl Game

The main post (YAC) Doughboys Football league All-Stars edged the Custer Terrace All-Stars in the Thanksgiving Turkey Bowl at Doughboy Stadium.

These two all-star teams were composed of the outstanding players of each team of the Doughboy league.

Both teams went scoreless until six minutes to play in the fourth period when the Main Post team hit pay dirt for the lone tally of the game. Main Post's full - back, Chipper Beard uncorked a 45-yard pass to right end, Tom Jones. Jones moved all the way in the 1 yard line. Quarterback, Tom O'Donnel went over the middle for the TD and he also bulldozed his way up the middle for the PAT.

The Custer Terrace All-Stars fought back but the Main Post All-Stars stubborn defensive squad would not give ground.

The clock ran out and caught the fighting Custer Terrace short of a score. So the Main Post All-Stars became the 1961 Turkey Bowl Champs with a 7-0 victory.

During the past week, post hunters have been going over most of Area A and the Alabama portion of the Reservation with a fine tooth comb. With over 80 per cent of the reservation closed through noon last Wednesday, hunters invaded the only remaining open areas. Deer hunting continues to be the center of attraction with continuing success of many hunters kindling the fire of enthusiasm. Although few areas have been open during the past week, numerous hunters have reported taking deer and the reported harvest for post is 75 bucks to date. The popular area continues to be the lower Jamestown Road area but Wildlife Aids report deer to be throughout the reservation.

QUAIL HUNTING

Wednesday, November 29 marked the opening of quail season on both the Georgia and Alabama portions of the Reservation. During the opening days, most bird hunters were concentrating on the Alabama area.

TURKEY SEASON

Turkey hunters are reminded that the post turkey season does not open until December 20. There has been some confusion with the opening of turkey season the 20th of November in Muscogee, Chattahochee, and Stewart counties. In certain instances post seasons differ from state regulations and post hunters are urged to check with Fish and Game office for details. On post, the winter turkey season opens December 20 and continues through January 1 1962 as compared with the larger season in the adjoining counties. However, a special spring gobbler season from March 20 1962 through April 15 1962 has been authorized for the Fort Benning Reservation.

Carries Ball For Second TD

Rangers Beat Troopers; Tankers Whip Gunners

The Rangers shutout the Troopers 19-0, and the Tankers rolled over the Gunners 23-0 in the YAC Doughboys league.

The Rangers held the Troopers scoreless. They hit pay dirt early in the first quarter when David Kennedy galloped 63 yards in a single reverse play setting up the TD. On the next play full-back Marvin Davis went 20 yards around right end for six points. The PAT was incomplete. The Troopers held the rambling Rangers scoreless in the second period, but they struck again in the third and fourth periods. In the third, quarterback Thomas O'Donnel went back to punt, but he jugged the ball and was unable to punt with fighting Troopers moving in, so he sprinted down field for a 78 yard run and a TD. Davis tried for the PAT, but the Troopers defensive team held him to the line of scrimmage.

In the fourth period left half-back Bob Fowlers charged down the left side line for a 71 yard TD on a single reverse play to put his team ahead 19-0. Fowlers had good blocking and running interference all the way down field.

Although the Troopers went scoreless throughout the game, they really played tough and rugged. Both offensive and defensive players never gave up; they fought back all through the game. It seems as if it just wasn't the Troopers day.

The Tankers just rolled over the tough little Gunners 25-0. At half-time the Tankers had racked up a 19-0 lead. Harold Ackerson contributed the first six points, followed the team leading ground gainer, Mike Bunger with two touchdowns, one a 75 yard run from a punt return; half back Dennis Dodd added the PAT. Bunger scored again in the last period to clinch the victory.

The Gunners are the leagues smallest team, but every team that has played the little underdogs really knew they were in a game when the final gun went off to end the contest, for there isn't a team in the league that hits, tackles or blocks any better than the little Gunners. So how about saying "Hats-Off" to the fighting Gunners of the Doughboys league.

OTHERS POST WINS

In the Biddy league the Bombers came back to life after dropping two games in a row and blasted the Bayonets 26-6. The Bayonets had won their last two games before being stopped by the yellow team.

Creig Plowman and Jimmy Sessions were credited with two six pointers each. Sessions and Marble added the PAT's. Plowman had 128 yards rushing to bring his ground gained season record to 801 yards and a total of 82 points.

The Bayonets lone tally came in the closing seconds of the fourth period when Robert Rice received the ball on a single reverse play. He went around left end for 63 yards which set up the next play for a TD. Fullback Charlie Coats plowed through the middle for 8 yards and a TD. They failed to make the PAT.

The Helmets overpowered the Bears for a 26-0 victory. The Helmets scored 13 points in the first period, 7 in the second and 6 in the third. The Bears held them scoreless in the fourth.

Tom McLain had three touchdowns and one PAT to his credit and teammates Ronald Busch hit pay dirt for six points while Bruce Barlow added one PAT.

The high riding Grenadiers scored in each period to shut out the Missiles 25-0. Coach Wilborn played every player on the team trying to even the match with the Missiles. In the first half Curtis Baker and Eddie Crunk scored one TD apiece.

In another game the Bulldogs nipped the Bullets 7-0.

Army Outlines New Rules On Reserves Obligations

WASHINGTON (AFPS)—The Army has announced its new policies regarding the mandatory assignment to a reserve unit of those active Army enlistees or reservists who entered service on or after April 1, 1957.

Those being released from two years of active duty may, at any time prior to the fifth anniversary of their initial entry on active duty, be mandatorily assigned to a unit.

However, they will not be required to serve involuntarily more than two years and after the two years will be transferred to the Standby Reserve.

If not sooner transferred to the Standby Reserve, they will be transferred on the fifth anniversary of their initial entry to active duty.

Upon release from three years active duty as a reservist or a member of the Regular Army, an individual may not be mandatorily assigned to a unit. He may volunteer for duty and at completion of the year be transferred to the Standby Reserve.

If a reservist, excepting those who serve four years active duty, is placed in the Ready Reserve Mobilization Reinforcement Pool (RRMRP) upon release from active duty, his Ready Reserve obligation will be until the total of his active duty and Ready Reserve time is five years.

Transfers to the Standby Reserve for the two and three year active duty members will not be made if the reservist elects to stay in the Ready Reserve and executes the appropriate DA contract to remain in that status.

In the case of persons serving four years of active duty as reservists or members of the Regular Army, they may not be mandatorily assigned to a unit or the PRMRP.

Such service will be entirely voluntary on their part.

New York Company Now With Infantry Center Counterparts

By M-Sgt. Charles A. Quinn

Two military policemen were directing traffic at an intersection of busy Weld Avenue this week where but one was usually seen.

Both men were clad in the well-known gear of the Military Police Corps, Army green with gleaming belts, boots, holsters and white hats but one wore the shoulder insigne of the Third Army rather than that of the Infantry Center.

Who's the Third Army MP?" asked an Infantry sergeant driving through the intersection.

"Belongs to the 105th MP Company, a New York National Guard outfit," his companion answered.

"Sharp soldier."

RECENTLY CALLED

Some short six weeks ago the "sharp soldier" had no inkling that he, as a member of the 105th Military Police Company of Utica, N. Y., would be swiftly called to active duty nor that five days later he'd be flown for active service at the roaring Georgia post—home of the Infantry—Queen of Battles.

"We were called on the 15th of October and landed at Fort Benning on the 20th," said the 105th commander, 2nd Lt. Phillip Frate, Jr., "and hours later we were on the job."

Assigned to support The Infantry Center Provost Marshal Section activities, some of the unit's more experienced men reported immediately for duty with the provost marshal's Operations Section while the rest swung to the task of getting the unit established in one of Fort Benning's massive cuartels.

VARIED BACKGROUNDS

Lawyers, real estate brokers, newspaperman, farmers, professional basketball players and professors, largely from the Utica-Long Island areas of New York, the 105th personnel are now a part of the bustling, blasting activity which comprises one of the busiest military installations in the world.

"Sure, some of us had problems rising from separations from job or family but we're all zeroed in now," said the unit's first sergeant.

A veteran of eight years service, 1st Sgt. Archibald H. McGowen of Ilion, N. Y., said the unit had little trouble in the transition from the weekly training at the Utica State Armory to the 'rugged schedule which now begins at dawn.

"Up at 5 a.m., chow at 5:30, and the day doesn't end until we complete night training exercises," he said.

LOTS OF TRAINING

According to Sfc Albert J. Bement of Cortland, N. Y., unit operations sergeant, the training includes hours of character guidance, map reading, drill and ceremonies and other subjects such as first aid and proficiency in arms.

"In addition," he said, "we're busy with military police squad, platoon and unit level training, all of which will take up the unit's time until just before Christmas."

The night training exercises mentioned by the first sergeant include instruction in "blackout" driving under simulated combat conditions. This phase of training will be conducted over the main traffic routes, secondary roads and trails which crisscross the 182,000-acre tract 13 miles south of Columbus, and which is bisected by the Chattahoochee River.

WILL PAY OFF

In months to come the men of the 105th will find that much of their duty assignment will entail combat traffic control required by the huge field exercises conducted by The Infantry School, convoy escort activities and other operations much of which will take place under cover of darkness.

"So you see we have a lot of work cut out for us in the next month," the unit's commander said, but added that his men were fast becoming accustomed to the arduous daily schedules.

"The unit has already participated in several parades and reviews held by the Infantry Center Troop Command, our parent unit here," he said.

In a huge review at The Infantry Center's French Field recently, the unit "stood the formation" beside its Regular counterpart, The Infantry Center's Military Police Company. Following the ceremony, Lt. Frate was congratulated on the appearance of his company as it saluted the reviewing officer, Brig. Gen. John E. Kelly deputy post commander.

As for the men of The Infantry Center's Regular unit, they're pleased with the readiness of the New York National Guardsmen to fill, in at any given moment.

"My people are sure happy that the 105th is here," said M-Sgt. William B. Beckham of Columbus.

HEAVY SCHEDULE

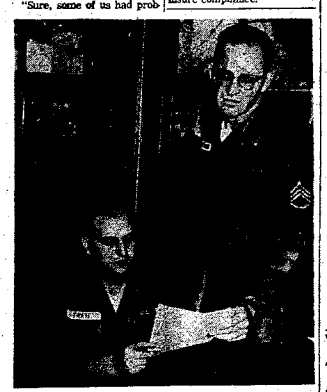
Operations sergeant for the Provost Marshal Section, Sgt. Beckham said, while the troops looked forward to time off during the Christmas-New Year's holidays, the MP's could look for nothing more than heavier work schedules.

Traditionally unsung men, personnel of the Army's Military Police Corps continue to follow their motto, "Of the Troops and for the Troops."

Pvt. Harvey Klein of Forest Hills, L. I., a member of the 105th's Traffic Platoon, put it this way:

"Give us National Guardsmen time to get used to Dixie hominy grits and red gravy Georgia's red clay and getting up at 5 a.m. and this New York outfit will serve with the best . . . and the best is right here at The Infantry Center."

Aliens Must Tell Address In January



Aliens living in the United States or its possessions, including servicemen and their dependents, are reminded by the Department of Justice that they must report their addresses to the U. S. Attorney General during January.

In January, all Post Offices will have cards on which the reports are filed. Cards can also be obtained, at any time, from the offices of the Immigration and Naturalization Service of the Justice Department.

Those aliens temporarily abroad during January must report their addresses within ten days following their return to the States.

Willful failure to submit the report, the annual reminder notes, leads to serious penalties, such as fines, imprisonment or deportation.

It is important that alien members of the Armed Forces, or those who have dependents or relatives who are not U.S. citizens, file their reports to insure compliance.

Gatling Gun Has Bright History; Used in Spanish American War

BY IDA C. EVANS

Two Gatling guns stand in the Infantry Museum here.

One is short barreled and tripod mounted. The other is a long barreled, wheel-mounted model.

The short barreled gun was presented to the museum by the president of Costa Rica. It is evidently one of many such guns given or sold to other countries by the United States after the Army declared the Gatling gun obsolete in 1911.

The long barreled gun was given to the museum by Third Army Headquarters at Fort McPherson, Ga.

For many years, the wheel-mounted predecessor of the machine gun stood near the entrance to the Headquarters.

No one knows exactly where the old Gatling gun came from nor anything of its combat record.

Made by Colt's Patent Fire Arms Manufacturing Company in Hartford, Conn., and bearing patent dates ranging from 1862 to 1872, the gun could easily have been one of the first four Gatling guns ever used in offensive combat against a foreign enemy.

Assuming that it is one of those historic weapons, here is its story, based on official records and a report by "Gatling Gun Parker," a lieutenant who earned his nickname at the Battle of Santiago in 1898.

Invented in 1861 by Dr. Richard Jordan Gatling, the gun was considered by the Army a strictly defensive weapon by the time of the Spanish American War.

Mounted on the ramparts of a military fortress, it was successfully used to fire on ships in a harbor or troops approaching by land.

Dr. Gatling had not been able to interest the Army in testing his wheel-mounted gun as a weapon for mobile offensive action.

These events occurred before young 2nd Lt. John H. Parker was born, but he read Dr. Gatling's accounts of the gun and his recommendations for its employment.

While waiting shipment to Cuba from Tampa, Fla., Lt. Parker learned that 15 Gatling guns were lying neglected in the warehouse where ammunition and supplies were being assembled.

Although the guns were wheel-mounted, no one thought of them as offensive weapons, except Lt. Parker.

The young officer dreamed of a chance to prove what the Gatling gun could do on the offensive. He visualized a Gatling gun detachment and talked of his dream to everyone in his chain of command.

Describing the gun, he said, "The gun is pointed by a lever just as one points a garden hose or sprinkler, with the advantage that the gun can be clamped at any instant, and will then continue to sprinkle its drops of death over the same row of plants. . ."

His efforts seemed fruitless until somewhere along the way, he had a chance to talk to Col. Arthur McArthur.

Shortly after that, orders came to establish a Gatling gun detachment, under the command of Lt. Parker.

Parker was issued four Gatling guns. He was given 12 men, selected on the basis that their commanders could well do without them.

When Parker and his men tried to assemble the guns, they found that easy manipulation of the weapons had been sacrificed for precision of measurement. The guns were unwieldly.

Using armorers' tools, the men filed away the parts until the pieces could be adjusted by a feather touch.

When the time came to embark for Cuba, Lt. Parker learned that the orders made no allowance for loading his four Gatling guns.

Obtaining permission to supervise loading the vessel, "The Cherokee," Parker first took his guns aboard, then loaded regimental baggage on top of them. If there had been any complaint, time and prudence would not have permitted unloading the ship to remove the guns.

Having trained his detachment in transit and transported the Gatling guns over virgin Cuban soil, Parker and his men went into battle at Santiago.

Describing the battle later, Theodore Roosevelt said, "Then suddenly smote on our ears a peculiar drumming sound.

"One of my men cried out, 'The Spanish machine guns!'

"After listening a moment, I leaped to my feet and called, 'It's the Gatlings, men! It's our Gatlings!'

"Immediately the troops began to cheer lustily, for the sound was most inspiring. . .

"From then on, Parker's Gatlings were our inseparable companions throughout the siege. . .

"At whatever hour of the 24 the fighting began, the drumming of the Gatlings was soon heard through the cracking of our carbines.

"This is the way Lt. Parker used his battery when he went into action at San Juan and when he kept it in the trenches beside the Rough Riders before Santiago."

In Lt. Parker's own report dated July 24, 1908, he commended his men for their performance with the "first battery of Gatling guns ever used in the history of war."

Parker brought all four of his history-making Gatling guns back from Cuba. Who knows but what one of them is the gun standing on its ancient carriage in the Infantry Museum.

Be that as it may, the weapon represents the mobile, offensive Gatling, forerunner of modern automatic weapons.

Engineer Section Forestry Department Saves $425,000 From Sales of Timber

By SFC George McBurney

One of the least known but an important Army activity at Fort Benning is saving the Government hundreds of thousands of dollars a year.

This small but vitally important organization is the Forestry Branch of The Infantry Center Engineer Section. For the past 4 years the unit has aided the Government in receiving an income of more than $425,000 annually from the sale of saw timber and pulpwood grown on the reservation.

The wood is sold to contractors who cut it and transport it to mills.

Without the Forestry Branch, whose primary duty is to prevent the loss of timber from fires, much of the Government's income from the post's timber would be lost.

Fort Benning has 129,000 acres of woodland available for the growth of timber. The post also has 40,000 more acres in a fringetype area used extensively for military training which prevents timber management by the Forestry Branch.

Since Fort Benning is a military reservation instead of a national forest area, it has a fire occurrence some 20 times greater than a similar sized area of a national forest or park.

Norman F. Force, chief of the Forestry Branch, said one of the greatest misconceptions about woods fires is that they are caused by lighted cigarettes.

Dropping lighted matches in a wooded area can quickly start fires but tossing away burning cigarettes virtually never do, he said.

To combat fires and to preserve the timber, the Forestry Branch has 10 pieces of equipment, including eight crawler-type firefighting tractors and two caterpillar diesel tractors. The unit also utilizes hand tools for mop up purposes, rakes and Indian back pack water pumps.

The crawler - type tractors have hydraulically operated plows that cut three to five-foot paths from three to six inches deep around the perimeter of fires to keep them from spreading. These tractors can plough a swath in the ground at a speed of four to six miles an hour, faster than the average man walks, Force pointed out.

"This path effectively separates the burnable material from the active fire area," he said.

The Forestry Branch, which is staffed by nine civilians and five sergeants, has done its work so well that only once during the recent severe drought has it needed to call on troops to help fight fires.

Another of the Forestry Branch's means of combating loss from fires is its fire controlled burning program. The unit used fire itself as an added implement to prevent serious blazes from spreading, and also to aid military training by improving the troops' visibility in the field.

"Troops can't see well in the training field if their vision is obscured by vines and high bushes," Force said. "so we plough a trough around an area and then burn off the undesirable vines and weeds. By so doing we also promote the growth of legumes and annual plants in the woods. Wild turkey, quail and deer feed extensively on such plants."

Force added, "Although we had the worst October for fires in our history, we are in the best fire fighting shape ever. We have well trained personnel and good equipmnt and our morale is the best."

Force, a 1939 graduate of the University of Michigan with a bachelor of science degree in forestry, came to Fort Benning in 1951 from the U. S. Forest Service, Southeastern Forest Experimental Station, Asheville, N. C.

At Asheville he was for four years the field supervisor of the southeastern forest area which comprises Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia and Florida.

SMAJ JOSEPH GARNER was recently assigned to The Student Brigade as brigade sergeant major. Prior to coming to brigade headquarters, he was sergeant major of 5th Student Battalion, The Student Brigade. He replaced SMaj Welborne Callahan who is new Infantry Center sergeant Major.

Panel Advises Increase In Housing Construction

The Advisory Panel on Family Housing Policy has made its final report to Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara with one recommendation calling for a significant volume of construction of on-post family housing during Fiscal 1964 and subsequent years.

The panel was first established by Secretary McNamara on Oct. 4, 1961. Its job was to conduct "an intensive reappraisal of housing requirements, construction standards, financing and management."

Mr. McNamara said the panel had done "an outstanding job" in providing a comprehensive reappraisal of the military housing program.

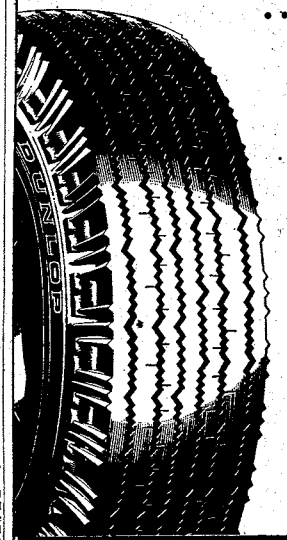
Secretary McNamara reported that they have recommended an increase in the quarters allowance under certain conditions.

Chairman of the panel was Roswell L. Gilpatric, Deputy Secretary of Defense.

The group held five principal meetings. They were assisted in their work by a full-time professional housing staff and a number of consultants working under the direction of Robert H. Ryan, executive vice president of the Perini Corp.

Included in the recommendations made by the panel were:

Establishment of a professional Family Housing Management Office in the Office of the Secretary of Defense.



Adoption of a uniform military family housing management organization within the three military departments.

Adoption of improved techniques for financial management of family housing covering both new construction and the operation and maintenance of existing housing assets.

Today Marks 20th Birthday for Civil Air Patrol

The Civil Air Patrol, the nationwide voluntary civilian auxiliary of the Air Force, will observe its 20th year of service to the nation on Dec. 1.

During Civil Air Patrol Week, Dec. 1-7, units of the organization will hold open house and aerospace displays showing their activities in search and rescue, cadet training and aero-space education.

Founded only six days before Pearl Harbor in 1941 CAP now numbers nearly 70,000 senior and cadet members in some 2,000 communities. This "junior partner" of the Air Force also claims 4,000 light aircraft and more than 8,000 licensed pilots.

Operations control of the CAP is under the Air Rescue Service of the Military Air Transport Service (MATS). During this first half of this year, CAP pilots flew over 9,600 hours and helped in the rescue of 271 persons from disaster areas.

The Prevention Of Cold Injury

By Captain Leonard F. Greenberg, MC

Cold injury is damage to the body, commonly the feet and the hands, produced by prolonged exposure to cold. The temperature is not the only factor causing cold injury. The moisture and wind both play important parts.

During the second World War, cold injury was responsible for much lost manpower. There were 91,000 soldiers in the Army who received some form of cold injury, and the hospitalization time for these men averaged 48 days. So you can see what an important role it can play. In addition, many of those afflicted with a cold injury are permanently disabled, having required amputation of a hand or a foot. The most important thing to remember about cold injury is that it is completely preventable.

There are several types of cold injury. Chilblains occur at temperatures between 32F and 50F when associated with high humidity. It also occurs when there is exposure to intermittent cold, warm one day and cold the next. Immersion foot occurs under similar temperature conditions, but there is the additional factor of the actual immersion of the foot in water for periods of 12 hours or more. When the feet are wet or damp, but actually not in water, trench foot occurs. Finally, when the temperature is below the freezing point of 32F, frostbite may occur. When this happens, there is actual freezing and crystalization of the tissues. Regardless of the name we give it, the body is affected in a similar manner.

The severity of the injury depends upon the length of time that the person is exposed to the cold and moisture.

Degrees of Injury

First degree — After the feet have been rewarmed, they assume a purplish-red color. Later, they will become swollen and fluid will collect under the skin. If the patient is at complete bed rest, this will clear up after several days. Recovery usually occurs without any after effects.

Second degree — When blisters form on top of a first degree injury, we have a second degree injury. Blisters must never be broken as this allows an opening for bacterior to enter and cause a serious infection. Most peeople with this degree of injury will recover without any after effects.

Third degree — When the skin and underlying tissues die and become black, thick and hard, gangrene has occurred. Ulceration of the skin often occurs. Healing may occur after a long period, or it may progress to a fourth degree injury. These people usually have some disability.

Fourth degree — If the entire area, including the bone, has been involved with gangrene, a fourth degree cold injury has occurred. Due to the total destruction of the involved part, amputation becomes necessary. This may involve the entire leg in the case of trench foot or frostbite.

First Aid Steps

If the feet are involved, the patient must be transported on a litter. He must not walk.

Remove all constricting clothing such as leggings, garters, etc.

Place blankets, clothing or other items over the affected area in order to warm it. However, do not place extremity into direct heat such as a fire or oven.

Do not rub snow onto a frostbitten foot as this only increases the pain and worsens the condition.

Do not break blisters as this may cause infection. There is no effective treatment for cold injury. However, it is entirely preventable, and the prevention is easy.

INJURY PREVENTION

Keep clothing Clean.

Avoid Overheating.

Wear Loose Layers of clothing.

Keep clothes Dry.

Notice that each of these principles emphasizes a letter C-O-L-D which makes it easy to remember.

Wear adequate clothing to protect yourself from the cold.

Make sure that clothing fits well. Do not wear tight fitting clothing.

Change socks frequently; at least once a day.

Keep hands and feet dry.

Exercise mildly to increase circulation of the blood.

Eat a proper diet.

Use common sense.

In order to protect yourself from the dangers of the cold, remember these facts. They could save your life.

Income Taxes

Relief Act Helps You When Filing That Form

You can't avoid it. Paying taxes is something everyone does.

If you earn money you pay income tax on it. The only question is, to whom.

Federal income tax is universal throughout the United States and its territories, and some states levy income taxes.

Servicemen stationed in states or territories having their own income taxes sometimes wonder whether or not they pay taxes to their home states or the state in which they earned their incomes. If their home states do not impose income taxes, they are confused about whether they have to pay taxes at all.

The Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act, a federal law, exempts military pay from all state income taxes, except those imposed by the state of your domicile (home state).

This only applies to income taxes based on military pay. The act does not exempt non-military income, earned within a state where you may be serving.

States can and do, for example, require you to pay income taxes on salaries from civilian employment therein, rents from property located in the state, and profits from the sale of such property, even though you hail from another state.

Ordinarily, you file two state income tax forms, one, a "resident" income tax return to your home state on all of your income, and the other, a "non-resident" return to the state where you are stationed on all non-military income earned in that state.

This could amount to paying taxes on your non-military income to both your home state and the state where you are serving. However, tax credits may reduce your overall tax burden if this is the case.

No exemptions are authorized under the act for civilian members of your household from taxes in the state of temporary residence.

Under the act any tax or income (federal, state or local) may be deferred up to six months after separation from active service. This deferment does not involve interest charge or penalties if your ability to pay is materially impaired by reason of military service.

Post Commander Attends Briefing

Major Gen. Ben Harrell, post commander, was at Redstone Arsenal, Huntsville, Ala., Tuesday to attend briefings.

Among those accompanying Gen. Harrell was Brig. Gen. A. D. Surles Jr., assistant commandant of The School.

They were briefed on the Saturn by the National Aeronautics Space Administration and on anti-tank missiles by the Army Ordnance Missile Command.

IN A SMALL PACKAGE

The Army has found a way to package 2,000 electrical components per cubic inch in its miniaturization program.

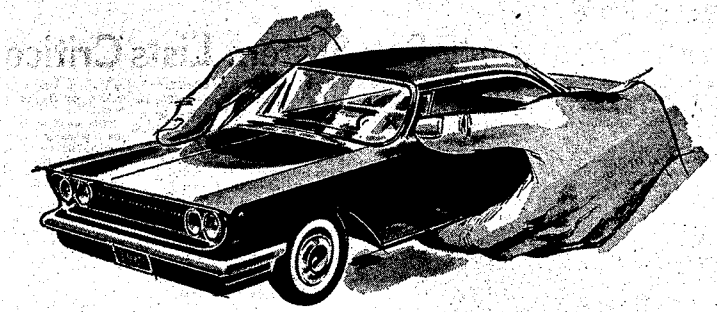
Spy Drama On Television

One of WWII's most fascinating spy stories will be unfolded Sunday when the TV documentary "Twentieth Century" presents "The Man Who Spied on Pearl Harbor."



The spy in question was Ens. Tokeo Yoshikawa of the Japanese Navy, who collected information at the big Hawaiian naval base while assigned to the Japanese Consulate in Honolulu prior to the surprise attack on Dec. 7, 1941, that opened the war in the Pacific.

Walter Cronkite narrates the half-hour program which is based on an article by Marine Lt. Col. Norman Stanford, first published in Naval Institute Proceedings a year ago.

Yoshikawa's identity was kept secret until 1953 when details of his spying appeared in a Japanese newspaper.

Here's How It Works

Army Proficiency-Pay System Lists Criticality as Key

Fluctuations in Army proficiency pay cut-off scores do not necessarily indicate better or poorer efforts on the part of the persons being tested, according to those who administer the Army's program.

Army experts explain that changes in cut-off scores, from one testing period to another, generally are a result of varying needs in a given MOS and the average retention rate of persons in that particular field.

They say first that an MOS proficiency score is determined by a combination of a raw test score and a Commander's Evaluation Report which is submitted for each person being tested. The first they interpreted as showing "what a man knows," and the second as reflecting what he "can and does do." The "weight" values of these are not fixed, but the two are combined "in a manner to best predict 'true' efficiency."

After all scores of a test are computed, the cut-off for minimum pro-pay qualification score is determined by the criticality listing of the tested MOS.

This criticality, the key to proficiency payments, is decided by two factors: the time involved in training and or schooling a person in a particular MOS; the length of time the Army can expect to retain the holder of this skill.

In many skill fields, the training and schooling takes up approximately one-third or more of an individual's enlistment and in many fields, the skills learned are those which have a lot reenlistment rate due to the demands of private industry for men with such training and experience. These skills would have a high criticality index.

Degrees of criticality are expressed in percentages ranging from 10 to 90 per cent. In those with a low index, qualifying scores normally tend to be high, and the reverse is true of those with a high index.

Assuming that for a given MOS the criticality index was 50 per cent, the qualifying score would be the lowest of the top 50 per cent of scores, unless that score was below 80. Regardless of criticality index figures, the Army has placed an arbitrary lowest qualifying score at that point, not wanting to award pro-pay to anyone who "just happens to be there."

Two other factors play some part in changing cut-off scores —the total pro-pay authorization for the Army and an individual's efforts at self improvement. The pro-pay authorization currently amounts to 11.5 per cent of the Army's strength, and can vary. This tends to keep qualification scores high. Increased study on the part of those being tested, along with assistance being rendered by Army Education Centers is also bringing up scores to some extent and making qualification more competitive.

While proficiency pay is intended primarily to retain men in critical skills, the Army does not limit P-1 pay to critical skills alone. If feels no one should be denied the opportunity to qualify and that the really top soldiers in any skill, critical or not, should be entitled to some reward. To date not all skills have been taken into the program, but by June 1962 all MOSs will be included.

The Army does limit its P-2 pay. Awards of P-2 are made only in those skills which are the most critical.

Evaluation tests are scheduled for the middle of each quarter of the year with three approximately equal increments within each quarter. The scoring and announcement of qualifying scores is done by these increments, explaining why two men in different MOS may be tested at the same time and still find their award dates as much as three months apart.

About the wide fields covered, it was explained that exams are based on testing a person's overall knowledge of his occupational specialty as listed in the skills and knowledg portions of AR 611-201, the Manual of Enlisted MOS. While it is realized that within many fields there are persons specializing in one "narrow" phase, it would be physically impossible to develop and administer tests for each of these "within the MOS specialties" in the 1,400 four-digit MOSs now listed.

The conclusion was that "specializing" within an MOS would have an adverse effect on the individual's test score and could prove harmful should he transfer to another assignment and be required to perform other duties within his MOS description.

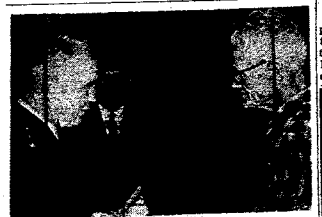
BEST MESS . . . Col. William Birdsong, Jr., 1st Infantry Brigade commander, presents the brigade best mess award to Sfc Rolle Vanderpool, right, and 1st Lt. Darrell Truitt, commanding officer of Hq. Co., 1st ARB, 58th Infantry. The company won the award for the first quarter of FY 62.

Germany-Based Soldiers Get 'Silent Sentry' Portable Radar

U.S. troops in Germany will get the Silent Sentry sometime during November. The Silent Sentry is a transistorized radar that is "highly portable," reaches through darkness, fog and smoke to pick up and locate enemy soldiers and vehicles.

Although a two man team usually operates the set, it can be set up and operated by one man.

The device weighs 48 pounds, including its tripod mount, less power supply and carrying cases. The Army said it is the lightest tactical radar for ground surveillance.



The transistors, it was explained, sharply reduce power requirements and thus make it practical to use batteries.

By using batteries there is added security against enemy detection because of the silent operation. The radar can, how ever, be powered by an engine driven generator when tactical conditions permit.

The Army said a well trained operator can distinguish between a man crawling or walking by interpreting the tone of the signal fed to the operator's head set. He can also tell the difference in moving vehicles.

The radar in its original form was developed by the Army Signal Research and Development Laboratory, Ft. Monmouth, and the Sperry Gyroscope Co.

Transistorization was accomplished under the direction of the Army Signal Material Support Agency, Ft. Monmouth, in conjunction with Sperry.

He received a Department of the Army certificate of service and a lapel pin. Presenting the certificate is Major Gen. Ben Harrell, left, commanding general of The Army Infantry Center who officiated at the ceremony.

AT THE Movies

POCKETFUL OF MIRACLES is a comedy suitable for the family and stars Glenn Ford, Hope Lange, Bette Davis and Arthur O'Connell. An extroverted Broadway "Character" transforms a derelict apple-seller into an apparent socialite of wealth and position just in time to convince a Spanish Nobleman that his son, engaged to marry "The Grande Dame's" daughter, is wedding into a socially prominent family.

FLIGHT OF THE LOST BALLOON stars Marshall Thompson and Mala Powers, journeys in a hydrogen gas balloon across the impenetrable jungles of savage Africa to rescue a fellow explorer and engages in a cat-and-mouse game with an evil and mysterious Hindu who is intent on finding the famed hidden treasure of Cleopatra.

ALL HANDS ON DECK is a return engagement and stars Pat Boone, Buddy Hackett and Barbara Eden. Navy lieutenant Pat Boone commands an LST that is turned into a madhouse when a carvaceous and enchanting lady reporter, garbed as a gob, stews away to get an inside story on the U.S. Navy.

CINDERFELLA is a comedy on a return engagement starring Jerry Lewis, Anna Maria Alberghetti and Ed Wynn. This is a modern version of the fairy tale classic in which the wicked stepmother and step brothers are anything but kind. You'll roar at Jerry's particular brand of hilarious antics as he is transformed by his fairy godfather into the hit of the princess' lavish ball.

BOOKS in REVIEW

GEOGRAPHY And WORLD POLITICS by Lucile Carlson. (Prentice, 1958)

Political geography is old—the philosophers of ancient Greece and Rome pondered the relation of states to their physical settings, and history records the geopolitical problems that plagued men even in the days of Babylonia. Political geography is controversial and based on the power blocs into which the world is presently broken — Western, Communist, and Neutral. Although some small readjustments may occur to somewhat alter the alighment of nations, no major change in the basic motif of the political world is likely to take place in the near future.

THE POWER OF THE DEMOCRATIC IDEA by Rockefeller. (Doubleday, 1960)

A realistic yet hopeful statement of the idea of democracy as it has found expression in the American scene. It recognizes the central problems of our democratic society but does not agree in all particulars, but it is an honest picture of our democratic system and its prospects.

DREAM AND REALITY by Louis Halle. (Harper, 1959)

This book deals with the human nature of foreign policy. It is in dealing with world affairs. From the setting of the patterns of our past performance through periods of crisis and revolution—such as the Civil War.

THE CONTINUING STRUGGLE by Richard L. Walker (Afreve, 1958)

This book makes deep scrutiny into the nature of the Chinese Communist regime, its goals, and its methods. The continuing struggle calls for bold and sympathetic but ironic appreciation of the imperfect humanity that is represented by foreign policy in general, by American foreign policy in particular. The birth of America was regarded as a fresh start of mankind. But the nation that America as Utopia implied an isolation which could not maintain. Here are the elements of tragedy implicit in all history—the sequence of hope and disillusion of dream and reality. It is in this context that the current American debate over idealism vs. realism must be viewed.

THE POLITICAL ECONOMY OF NATIONAL SECURITY by J. Schlesinger. (Praeger, 1960)

Where do we stand today in the struggle for power between the West and the Communist bloc . . . and what are our chances for survival? The author quickly dispenses with the idea that there is any one economic panacea that will provide maximum security and prosperity for the nation.

Mrs. Shepherd performs the duties of secretary-receptionist to the brigade S3. Compiling concurrent reports and typing of correspondence related to her section are other areas with which she is concerned.

She worked as the secretary to the comptroller, Fort Jackson, S. C., prior to present position.

A native of Cannelton, Ind., and graduate of Cannelton High School, Mrs. Shepherd has worked in civil service for better than four years.

The S3's secretary remarked "that of the many areas of endeavor with which I have been a part, I find my present assignment the most rewarding.

2d Division Commander Thanks Infantry Center

In a recent letter to Major Gen. Ben Harrell, commanding general of The Infantry Center, Major Gen. Charles M. Chase, 2nd Infantry Division commanding general, expressed appreciation for The Center's cooperation and assistance in the celebration of the division's 44th anniversary.

Many organizations from The Infantry Center and School contributed to the anniversary review and related activities.

The Sound Section from the school supplied sound trucks and loud speakers.

Extra traffic control and route marking were the responsibility of the provost marshal.

The Transportation Section helped with the movement of personnel.

The First Battle Group, 29th Infantry, supplies states flags for decoration.

Special programs and a dance were made possible through the cooperation of the Main Officers' Open Mess and the Service Clubs.

The Protocol Division prepared a scroll for presentation to the Marine Corps representatives and also provided 400 cushions for bleachers.

The bleachers came from the Operations Office of The Infantry School.

The Range Control Section received mention from Gen. Chase for the use of Sightseeing Field and cooperation in firing the Honest John Rocket.

Brochures dealing with the celebration were prepared by the Third Army Printing Plant.

The letter also thanked The Infantry Center Information Office for assistance with publicity and the Quartermaster Section for the birthday cake.

Army Scores Double-Header With ZEUS Anti-Missile Missile

The Army's NIKE ZEUS anti-missile missile system scored a double success in firing tests just hours apart at White Sands Missile Range N.M., Nov. 15.

Brig. Gen. John G. Zierdt, commander of the Army Rocket and Guided Missile Agency (ARGMA) said, "important test objectives were met in both firings."

In the first test, the ZEUS was launched from an above-the-ground rail used in development testing. In this test, the missile's radars tracked a special test target and the ground electronics of the missile defense system successfully controled a NIKE ZEUS missile.

The Free World's only defense system in advanced development, the NIKE ZEUS uses radar to collect data on the targets. An electronic brain on the ground uses these data to automatically guide the NIKE ZEUS to its target.

The second firing was a combination test of the NIKE ZEUS in the launch method planned for operational use and the ground electronics that control it in flight. The missile was fired from an underground launch cell, then maneuvered in flight in response to control commands from its ground guidance center.

Sunk vertically into the ground, the launch cell is a prototype of that planned for operational use. It had been tested sucessfully in previous firings.

Other objectives of today's tests included further evaluation of the missile aerodynamics, structure, solid - fuel rocket motors and guidance and control system.

The firings were a continuation of the development test series being conducted at White Sands Missile Range and at Point Mugu, Calif., under the technical supervision of ARGMA, at Redstone Arsenal, Ala.

Army Mutual Aid Group Ups Benefits

The Army Mutual Aid Assn., a non-profit organization which has provided insurance and service to Army officers since 1879 has announced extensive increases in the benefits of membership to become effective in January.

Most important is the change giving the members the right to acquire a maximum of $9,000 of coverage instead of the previous limitation of $6,000. Eligibility for the additional insurance is the same as eligibilty for initial membership in the association.

In addition, the Army Mutual will guarantee a one-sixth increase in the face amount of its certificates after they have been in effect or three years. This means three years after each membership certificate has been in effect, a member can be assured his beneficiary will receive $10,500 instead of $9,000, $7,000 instead of $6,000 or $3,500 instead of 3,000. The additional death benefit or terminal dividend which has been paid since 1956 will continue in a reduced amount so the payments to beneficiaries in 1962 are expected to be $7,500 and $3,750 respectively, based on certificates presently in force.

The Judge Says . . .

Obligation of Child Support

By 1st Lt. George S. Lyons

Mr. and Mrs. B were formerly husband and wife. They had one child and sometime thereafter, Mrs. B took the child to her home in another state. The father, Mr. A, filed suit for divorce in Georgia and thereafter was awarded a total divorce from Mrs. B.

Prior to the awarding of the divorce, the mother and father executed a contract in which it was agreed that the mother would have permanent custody of the child and would support, maintain, educate and care for the child without any monetary or other contribution therefor to be made by the father. The court in its decree approved and adopted this contract between the mother and father as to custody and support of the child and made the agreement the judgment of the court and a part of its decree.

The mother and child continued to live in the other state and the mother, later, petitioned the Court of Juvenile and Domestic Relations in that state for support of the child. This petition, pursuant to the proper practice under the reciprocal acts of the two states, was forwarded to the proper Superior Court in Georgia where jurdisdiction was obtained over the father.

The father, Mr. A, pleaded that the case was res judicata (i.e., a mater judicially acted upon or decided) showing the previous judgment by the Georgia Court and stating that the case was final.

However, the trial judge overruled the father's plea and awarded the sum of $10 per week to the mother for support of the child.

The Court of appeals affirmed the case, stating that a father in Georgia is liable for the support of his minor child under 18 years of age although the child may be residing in another state, and if the father is possessed of sufficient means, he may be required to pay for this support.

This duty rests upon the father and may be enforced although either spouse has obtained a final decree of divorce or separation and although there has been an award for support of the child in some prior proceeding. The appellate court stated, further, that a prior award of support for the minor child is not final and unalterable so as to preclude reconsideration and adjustment under the Georgia Uniform Support of Dependents Law.

Generally, the parents of minor children have the legal duty to support, maintain, and educate the children. The duty of parents to provide necessary support and maintenance may be said to rest on the inability of the child to care for himself. Subject to certain exceptions, the father of a child has the primary duty to support his minor child and to educate him. This duty of the father exists whether there is in force a valid order of the court requiring him to do so or not. Courts have held that a decree which purports to relieve the father of his continuing legal duty to support his minor child is null and void.

The obligation of the father is absolute and may not be delegated to another, and the father is not relieved of his obligation because other persons in fact are supporting his children.

Need New Steward

The Citadel, Charleston, S. C., has requested assistance in replacing the school's mess steward who died recently. They are especially interested in a retired Soldier to supervise the mess which daily feeds over 2,000 cadets and 100 faculty members.

This is an opportunity for a sergeant, who is retired or approaching retirement, to continue his service.

Interested personnel have been advised to make application through The Infantry Center Adjutant General section, phone 545-1853. Applications should include name, qualifications, personal data, recommendations and other supporting references.

ETS Policy

Infantry Center distributed a letter recently giving policy on adjustment of ETS for enlisted or inducted personnel serving on extensions of service.

According to the letter, exact dates of ETS will be established so as to spread members of a particular unit evenly throughout the period in order to permit an even flow of persons through the post transfer point.

In addition, the letter stated no ETS will be established on Sundays and no ETS will be established that will cause an extension of service of an eplisted man of over four months from his original ETS date.

New ETS for persons whose normal ETS was from October 1, 1961, through June 30, 1962, will be adjusted as follows:

First Airborne Group Begins Classes Here

All Training Now at TIS As Consolidation Result

The Army's airborne training, which first began here more than 20 years ago, has returned to the post.

Monday marked another milestone in the history of Fort Benning as the Airborne-Air Mobility Department of The Infantry School took over the training of the American airborne soldier.

On that day the first airborne class to be trained under the Infantry School's newly expanded program marched to Eubanks Field to take part in the opening ceremonies. Included in the group were 176 enlisted men and 60 officers.

The 236 men, all volunteers, arrived here recently from Army training centers throughout the United States. They were greeted and welcomed by Major Gen. Ben Harrell, Infantry School commandant.

"More than a year ago I requested that basic airborne training be returned to Fort Benning and now it has been," he said. "There are certain basic qualities of this training that you must learn.

"It's hard and tough, mentally and physically. It is an individual endeavor that takes courage, determination, physical strength and agility. You have the finest instructors in the Army to train you. And you will have great personal satisfaction when you complete the course."

In May, 1941, before Pearl Harbor and the atom bomb and the fall of the Axis powers, Fort Benning began training the Army's first airborne troops.

From a small original nucleus of 48 enlisted men and two officers, the Army's airborne effort quickly expanded until by the end of World War II the training school had been vastly expanded and the Army could boast having five airborne divisions and eight regiments.

In recent years airborne volunteers were sent directly from training centers to airborne units. Monday's class marked the return of all basic airborne training to its birthplace — Fort Benning. By early February Fort Benning will have the only airborne training center in continental United States, the Airborne-Air Mobility Department said.

Each training course will consist of four weeks of instruction and exercises for officers, and non-commissioned officers and three weeks for all other enlisted men.

The present airborne training course is designed to train some 250 men in one group. Eventually it will be expanded until 2,000 men can be trained each month.

In the first week of training, the ground training phase, students learn the fundamentals of parachuting, how to jump from a plane and land safely. In the second week, the tower training phase, the students are taught how to control their parachutes during descent from 250 foot towers.

At the end of the ground and tower training, students who have mastered the basic jump techniques and who can meet the physical training requirements, progress to the testing week of the basic airborne course.

During the final week the students must make five qualifying jumps which become progressively more difficult.

Rapid Fire Pistol event, and 2185 for the international Free Pistol event.

WOW! . . . Sgt. Charles L. Spooner, right, stares in disbelief at the string of service stripes on the uniform of SSgt Robert F. Campbell, 71-year-old veteran of World War I recently retired from active duty as a photographer at Fort Benning. Sgt. School Opens Meeting For Infantrymen Today

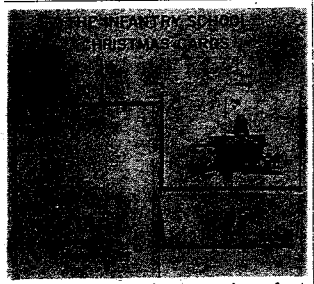
The Infantry School is conducting a three-day orientation briefing today through Sunday for battle group commanders and staff officers.

Attending the conference are approximately 75 officers from the 32nd Infantry Division, a National Guard unit from Wisconsin now at Fort Lewis, Wash.; 1st Infantry Division from Fort Riley, Kan.; 49th Armored Division, a National Guard unit from Texas now at Fort Polk, La., and the 2nd Infantry Division.



Sessions consist of selected subjects designed to orient the participants in the latest tactics, techniques and operating procedures.

The Infantry School effort is part of a CONARC program in which other service schools, including the Command and Staff College, are participating. The primary purpose of the program is to provide up-to-date information for newly activated units.

This is the second such conference held here.

NEW DOUGHBOY . . . Lt. Col. Felix P. Duenas, right, dean of professors at the Philippine Military Academy, is presented a "Follow Me" pin during a recent three-day visit to Fort Benning. Making the presentation is Brig. Gen. A. D. Surles, Jr., assistant commandant of The Infantry School. While at the post, the Allied officer viewed methods of instruction and some of the Army's latest equipment.

POST CARD . . . A Christmas card on sale at The Infantry School Book Department here carries a picture of the school. The "Follow Me" emblem forms a crest on the envelope flap. The cards can be personalized on 24-hour notice.

President Kennedy Tells Policy On Recent Call to Active Duty

(Editor's Note: At President Kennedy's press conference last week a reporter asked the following question: "Mr. President, there are reports that the morale among the reservists who have been called up is bad. They claim they don't have jobs. Many of them say they have nothing to do, the equipment is inadequate. Do you care to comment?" Following is the President's answer.)

"Well, I have seen the newspaper stories. There is not any doubt that any newspaper can go out and interview a man who has been called up. Their lives are disturbed. Many of them are older. They all have jobs. For most of them, it is a heavy sacrifice. We are not at war.

"They go to camps which have perhaps been newly opened or where the equipment may not be immediately available. They are bound to be unhappy. I have seen the stories in some cases where newspapers have reported that the Department of Defense has determined to keep these people in for more than a year.

"When it is proved that story was wholly wrong, they write that the Pentagon has changed their mind and send their reporters around to examine and interview servicemen and build up the sense that Americans are not ready to serve their country.

"Let me make it very clear, the reason why we called these men. The reason we called these men is that there is a direct clash of interest in a major area which is Berlin and West Germany. There also is increased tension in Viet Nam. When we came into office, we did not feel that there was sufficient strength in our conventional forces of the 14 Army Divisions with three training divisions.

"The United States has commitments all around the world. While we rely on our nuclear weapons, we also as I have said, have a choice between humiliation or holocaust.

"Therefore, we believe calling these men up and their willingness to serve increased the chance of maintaining the peace. There are countries where leaders have talked very strongly about standing firm in various areas, but do not have the military force to support that statement. We require it. The United States is the strongest power and the leader of the free world, and as such we must have the power to make our commitments good.

"These men who may be serving in a very cold and windy camp in Fort Lewis, Wash., are rending the same kind of service to our country as an airplane standing at 15-minute alert at a SAC Base in Omaha is serving. We call them in to prevent a war, not to fight a war. If our efforts to hold a peace should fail, they would be used in a more direct way.

Their function today is to indicate that the United States is serious about its commitments; that it means to meet its commitments. It wants to negotiate a peaceful settlement if it can, but it does not propose to surrender.

"Therefore, I would propose any serviceman sitting in a camp, however unsatisfactory it can be, and I know how unsatisfactory it is, will recognize that he is contributing to the security of his family in a most direct way. In these days when weapons are so terrible, the important thing is to maintain the peace, and they are helping us to do it. I think it is up to us to make sure they do get the equipment.

"It is up to us to make sure their training is useful. As I have said, we have sent the Inspector General out to Washington (state) to look at the camp and talk to the people involved. But I do think it would be well for us to recognize that in the first place, these men are not going to be kept longer than a year. There has never been such a proposal in the Pentagon that I have ever heard, newspaper reports to the contrary notwithstanding. This has never been suggested.

"Secondly it is our hope to get these men out before their 12 months period.

"Third, these men were called in at the request of the administration and with the approval of the Congress which gave us the authorization to call them. In my opinion they are rendering a valuable function. We are going to get them out as quickly as we can. But they are doing a service and I hope they recognize it, and I hope all of us who are in a position to communicate will explain to them and their families how important their service is today."

The Freedom Of Worship

Chaplain (1 Lt.) Naftali Friedman

Throughout the world the Jewish people are celebrating this week the Festival of Lights, Hanukah.

This celebration commemorates the victories of the Maccabites over the Syrian-Greek Hellenists and Emperor Antiochus IV, in the year 165 B.C. After the battles were over, Judah and his brothers entered Jerusalem where they found the Holy Temple desecreated and greek idols installed in the Holy Sanctuary. The Maccabites removed the idols, cleansed the Temple, rededicated it and proclaimed an eight-day holiday for generations to come.

Hanukah, which translated from Hebrew means, Rededication, has a universal message for all freedom loving and at the same time God-fearing men of the world.

Antiochus was a dictator who abolished all the religion in his domain. His empire had only one legal religion, Helelnist - Paganism. And this was the religion that he forced upon all his subjects. All who disobeyed were eliminated. Many forsook their own convictions and accepted the religion of Antiochus. They bowed under the yoke that was cast upon them.

But there was a small group of strong in spirit, and sturdy in body, to whom the passing of freedom was undeniable. Such a group was Matithias and his five sons, known as the Maccabites. They elected to fight, even though outnumbered, rather than to give up their convictions. They were ready to give up their physical body for the sake of the spiritual soul.

This is, probably, the first recorded incident of a group of people fighting for their religious freedom.

Here, in America, all of us are blessed with the freedom of worship, according to our convictions. But in others on earth, even to-day, groups are still struggling and giving up their lives to attain the right to worship.

The word Maccabite is a constructed word, whose individual Hebrew letters are the first letters which spell out the war-cry of Matithias and his sons, "Who is like thee, Oh Lord, among the mighty?"

The struggle of the Western democracies with the Communist world is actually quite similar to the battle of the Maccabites against the Hellenists. The Communists, with their God-less doctrine, want all of us to practice their "religion" — Marxism. And this is, probably the dominating factor in this idealistic battle. And like the Maccabites, we can be assured that we will be victorious.

Tyranny might flourish for the moment, but at the end righteousness must triumph.

However, in our constant struggle for the sake of freedom, we must remember one thing: We must realize, as did the Maccabites, that without God we are helpless; that without God there shall be no victory.

It is appropriate that the portion from the Prophets, which is read in the Synagogue on Nanukah, ends with this statement: ". . . this is the word of the Lord into Zerubabel saying, Not by might; nor by power, but my Spirit, saith the Lord of Hosts." (Zechariah 4:6)

We must go into battle with God on our side, and then, we can be assured we shall emerge victorious.

APPRECIATION . . . Mrs. Frederick W. Hindley, right, receives a letter of appreciation during recent retirement ceremonies at Martin Army Hospital where she has served as a clerk-typist since July, 1960. Mrs. Hindley retired after more than 26 years in Civil Service. Making the presentation is Col. William A. Todd, Jr., hospital commander.

Yesterday, December 7, 1961, was the 20th anniversary of the attack on Pearl Harbor. Many people looking back upon the incident are gratified that the Japanese didn't hit the West Coast.

True, the Japanese did not, at that time, attack the West Coast—that was to come on the night of June 21, 1942.

It was at Fort Stevens, Oregon, located on the mouth of the Columbia River.

A guard, walking his post, saw what he thought was a brief flash from the direction of the sea. An instant later, a shell exploded less than 200 yards from where he stood. The time was 11:20 p.m.

This was the first time in 130 years a fortification within the Continental U. S. had been the target of an enemy's artillery fire.

Eight more shells ripped trees and landed close to the fort within the next 20 minutes.

Gun flash indications showed the shells were coming from a submarine about 16,000 yards offshore. Fort Stevens, which was last modernized in 1904 with two 10-inch guns with a 15,000-foot range, was unable to return the fire.

The whole Northwest was alerted immediately. Yet, the surprise was so complete, Col. Frederick Dahlquist, writing in the Portland (Ore.) Oregonian, said, "There was disbelief that the shelling was caused by an enemy firing from the sea."

No submarine or other craft was ever sighted, although a day or two later, an unofficial report said a depth bomb dropped from a search plane had "brought oil and debris to the surface."

People then thought that was the end of the attacker, but this was not the case. In 1945, Col. Dahlquist learned that the Japanese sub had returned safely to its port and the captain who shelled the Oregon coast became the skipper of a freighter sailing between Japanese ports.

For awhile now there has been talk of making Fort Stevens into a large state park. When this is done, if it hasn't been already, it would probably be a good thing for a monument to be placed among the weed-overgrown shell holes there to remind people of the night Oregon, and, for that matter the whole United States, was attacked and was unable, because of outdated equipment, to return the fire of an enemy LESS THAN ONE MILE OFFSHORE!!

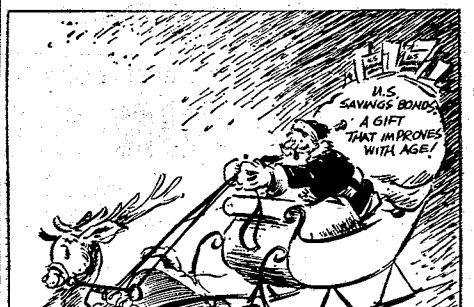
George Meany Tells:



How You Can Help Your Country

In these perilous times, "What You Can Do to Help Your Country" is surely clear enough in an immediate way to those who comprise our first line of defense. You need no reminder from anyone that your first and pre-eminent duty is to be prepared, in every way, to protect the citadel of liberty from tyrannical aggression. The lives of all of us, and the future of freedom, depend in a most immediate sense on your individual valor and devotion to duty.

Yet, in due time, nearly all of you will return to civilian life, and like the veterans of earlier generations, blend into it so completely that your years in service will become only a fading memory. One of the glories of our free land is a military force made up almost entirely of citizen soldiers, men of peace who master the arts of war, not as a profession, but solely in the interests of peace itself.

It is only in that context that I venture to suggest one area of activity for men in service. It is simply this: Keep in touch with events in the civilian life to which you will return. Try to maintain the broadest possible contact with the daily course of your country, not only from one viewpoint but from many. In short, try to be as broadly prepared for your return as a civilian as you are now prepared for the periods of war.

The duties of citizenship in a great democracy are many. They are not met solely by registering and voting — as important as these are. Perhaps most important of all is understanding — understanding the problems, the issues, the positions of our political parties, the needs of our fellow citizens and of our country.

Remember that while debate is incompatable with a military organization, it is the very life's blood of a democracy; and open minds are essential if debate is to have meaning.

While those in uniform have a clear obligation in this time of crisis, all the rest of us can also help our country at this time.

First, every American must make clear his support of our government in its determination to resist the further spread of Communist oppression. That means support of those measures, including legislative actions, which the government believes are essential to this end.

I am not suggesting blind acquiescence in every Administration proposal — not at all. Members of Congress, and citizens generally, have a duty as well as a right to discuss those proposals. But the discussions should be statesmanlike and constructive, not narrow and partisan. The aim of us all, at all times, should be the best way to achieve our common objective — not to gain political advantage.

Second, every American should do all he can toward the perfection of our own society. We all hope the contest between freedom and communist slavery will not become a clash of arms; but the realization of that hope will not end the contest itself.

We Americans know that our free way of life is best. However, we can't rest on that knowledge. We have to insure a decent level of life to all our people, not just most of them. We have to make equal opportunity in every field a reality, not only for the great majority, but for the various minorities that meet unfair obstacles.

This is primarily a task for individuals, for it can be accomplished, in the truest sense, only as each of us looks into his own heart and his own conscience, and acts according to the best that is within himself.

Finally, we must have the courage born of confidence — confidence that our cause is inherently right, confidence in the ability of freedom to withstand even the most formidable challenge of oppression.

It is quite right for us to recognize and respect the military and scientific strength of the Soviet Union. It is wrong for us to question our own ability to meet it. I for one have no doubt that Americans have skills, resources and ingenuity in ample measures; nor do I doubt, despite our national delight in the comforts of national well-being, that Americans are ready, willing and able to defend their traditional liberties, at whatever cost.

We face up to this crisis, as always, reluctantly. Blessed as we are with the good things of life, it is hard to turn our faces toward grim reality. Yet we civilians have no more choice than our men in uniform; we, too, must gird ourselves for the struggle which mankind dare not lose.

YAC Spirit Should Be Guiding Light for Everyone

(Editor's Note: This guest editorial was written by Captain Andrew D. Perkins, Jr., Defense Committee, of The Infantry School's Command and Staff Department. The BAYONET extends an invitation to any Soldier to submit an editorial whenever he feels the need is present.)

By Capt. A. D. Perkins, Jr.

Any American who has had the light of his faith and confidence in the future of America dimmed by the hristlingly pessimistic editorials of the day need only attend or otherwise be remotely associated with our Youth Activities Club (YAC) little league program to gain the fuel to make it burn brightly again.

For clearly imprinted in the spirit of these young warriors of ours is the future of America. And believe you me, if the participants of the Fort Benning league is a representative cross section, the future is a bright star which will burn forever.

I had the enviable pleasure of coaching one of these teams for this season. A team that won just half of its scheduled games.

I saw grouped together boys of varying sizes, religions and hues deriving their ancestory from every crack and corner of this great nation, first flounder in individuality and then group themselves together in team work to accomplish in some cases seemingly unconquerable tasks and when failing, rise with doubled spirit and energy to try again.

I saw the small and the physically weak gain in strength through belonging and give everything of themselves for the good of the group — and emerge stronger because of it. Selfishness and petty personal desires faded and were replaced with humility and tolerance.

I saw the strong give of their strength to aid and protect their weaker teammates and expend all their energies toward the common goal.

I saw them fall together and try again with no thought at all of the failure and the odds against them — and I saw them succeed and not lose sight of why they succeeded and land it over the defeated.

I saw them give up their favorite television program, the parades, the fair and other personal desires to work, work and work some more for the team that they believed in. I saw them play fair and to refuse to cheat when there was no apparent chance of being caught.

They are the best!

EPO Training Aids Section Doesn't Putter Around

In medieval England during the fifteenth century, the principal instrument of warfare was the knight in armor. A knight, encumbered by his weighty protection, had a rough time staying on his horse, much less fighting effectively. The slightest off-center movement often would cause him to lose his balance. Training a knight to remain on his horse seemed to be an insurmountable problem, but a simple training device provided the solution. A young Earl, Richard of Warwick, simply lashed his knights to their saddles.

Modern training has proceeded along the same principle. What were formerly complex problems are now greatly simplified through the use of training aids. We currently use them to demonstrate, clarify or emphasize certain areas of our training program.

Recently, weapons such as the M79 grenade launcher and the M67 90mm recoilless rifle were needed by the Ranger Department when they were conducting tests to determine the ideal size and composition of the infantry squad and platoon. Since these new weapons at that time were not yet in mass production, sufficient weapons weren't available here for the tests. The problem of producing models to the exact scale and weight of the real weapons was given to the Visual Aids Section of the Editorial and Pictorial Office, formerly headed by Capt. Romeo J. Larochelle.

With the proper guidance and information, the Devices Branch of this section tackled the problem enthusiastically. Draftsmen, carpenters, and artists, working together, built realistic models of the actual weapons. Sp4 Kenneth Steinke, in the carpenter's shop, cut out from wood the intricate parts of the weapon. Sp4 Charles Kaufman added steel mesh and pipe to duplicate the weight. Under the watchful eye of MSgt Emerson Burton, 12 M79 grenade launchers and four M67 recoilless rifles were made for the Ranger Department.

Using imagination and ingenuity, members of the Devices Branch of the Visual Aid Section continuously search for ways to devise simple and inexpensive visual aids.

For example, six months ago the Special Subjects Department required an instructional aid to help critique student performance on the Leaders Reaction Course. This course, which consists of mental and physical problems arranged in a series of cubicles, is used here to assist students in developing their leadership abilities. The Devices Branch was asked to construct 17 duplicate scale models of the course out of light-weight balsa and fir wood.

Time was essential. Handcutting all the detailed parts for the models would involve a great deal of work.

To speed construction of these models, Sp5 James Reynolds developed out of safety pins and razor blades a device similar to a guillotine. As strips of wood were passed beneath the blade, the guillotine device cut them into 2500 scaled planks used in the models. This would have taken approximately three days to accomplish by hand, but with this simple device the work was done in an hour.

Infantry School Report

As Col. Lawrence S. Reynolds, Chief of the Editorial and Pictorial Office stated, "This section receives many unusual requests. As far as I know, they have never been stumped in the reproduction of a visual aid. Their sole purpose is to provide the very best for The Infantry School."

An unusual request recently came from the Weapons Department. Not being able to use actual warheads of the nuclear-capable Davy Crockett for obvious reasons, the Weapons Department asked the Devices Branch for an effective substitute. This request resulted in nine models of the Davy Crockett warhead being constructed.

MSgt Burton, Chief of the Carpenter Branch, said upon completion of the project, "I dare anyone to tell the difference between the real and the mock-up warhead from 10 feet."

With a small but professional group, whose imagination and ingenuity have little bounds, the Devices Branch helps maintain the Infantry School's reputation for quality instruction for tomorrow's leaders. Members of this branch just don't have time to be tied to their saddles.

Baker High School's P-TA Hears Minister Praise Freedom

"Spiritual freedom is freedom of ones self, from within, which makes us truly whole and free men and women," stated the Rev. John Wilson at a meeting of the Baker High School Parent-Teacher Association Monday evening, November 20, in the school auditorium.

Rev. Wilson, who is a well known Methodist minister of the South Georgia Conference, gave a most inspiring speech, and concluded by saying he was, "thankful for our country which allows religious, and spiritual freedom."

Mr. Oscar P. Broyles, assistant principal, was presented the first copy of the 1961-62 P-TA Year Book, which was dedicated to him for his helpfulness, guidance, and understanding in P-TA work. The dedication, and presentation was made by Mr. Harold Richburg, P-TA vice-president, and mathematics professor.

A student panel, representative of each class, discussed, "What America Means to Me". The moderator was Steve Davis; John Wells represented the senior class; Lynn Craddock, the junior class; Becky White, the sophomore class; and Micky Kleber, the freshman.

Mrs. Robert Lamb, secretary, read the letter sent to State Sen. Harry Jackson, by Mrs. Robert Helle, president, on behalf of the members, asking that he support the Compulsory Child - School Law.

Lt. Col. (Ret.) Sam H. Adams, citizenship chairman, reminded everyone that a good citizen votes.

Etiquette

Questions Answered

By Jemi Johnson

This is the second in the series on questions concerning Christmas-card sending.

Whose name comes first if you use a card with your names printed or engraved on it? Here the wife's name is courteously used first, "Mary and Tom" (or Mary and Tom Green).

What if a child's name is included in the signature? Then the father's name should come first. "Tom, Mary, and Billy Green". If you have several children you may informally sign the card: "Tom and Mary Green" and underneath it, "Billy, Jane, and Debbie". Or: "The Greens — Tom, Mary, Billy, Jane and Debbie." The birth of a baby since last Christmas is often announced, such as "and our new daughter Betty Ann, born September 27, 1961."

Is it correct to print or engrave your name rather than sign it personally on a Christmas card? Many busy people with large mailing lists have their names printed or engraved. I happen to prefer a personal signature, especially on a card to a close friend, even it it is printed or engraved.

Reference for the answers for these questions is "Amy Vanderbilt's Complete Book of Etiquette".

Don't turn the page, girls, there are lots of important items you'll want to find out about!

First we would like to express our thanks to Mrs. Chenard, who displayed a most wonderful talent for decorating cakes at the last club meeting on Nov. 29. Anyone interested in a course in cake decorating please contact Mrs. Chenard for the details.

Hostesses for the day were Mrs. Criswell and Mrs. Payne, who served some of the best refreshments we ever tasted! The centerpiece especially caught everyone's eye, it was most attractive—and edible! It consisted of a pineapple gally decorated with red and green cherries and chunks of canned pineapple. Well done, girls.

The lucky winner of the attendance prize, Mrs. Chenard's beautiful cake, was Mrs. Payne.

Prizes for the most attractive Christmas wrappings went to Mrs. Bayer and Mrs. Morris.

A Christmas luncheon will be held in the clubhouse on December 12, 1 p.m. Reservations will be necessary (your phone committee will get in touch with you), and everyone will have a chance to show off their best new holiday clothes. A surprise guest is scheduled for an appearance and gifts will be exchanged among the club-members. Guests, as always, are most welcome.

The big event is going to take place on the following evening, December 14, 7:30 p.m. at Crain Hall. It is our traditional Christmas dinner dance, which all of us have been anxiously awaiting. The buffet style dinner is free and reservations are a must. If your phone committee cannot reach you, please call Mrs. Raymond R. Faust at 545-1440 or Mrs. Thomas A. Mingey at 544-1319 no later than today.

Lighting Program Signals Division's Holiday Season

Switch to Be Thrown Next Friday by Div CG

A Christmas lighting program next Friday night will signal the beginning of the holiday season in the 2nd Division.

The program, scheduled for 7:15 p.m. at Division Headquarters parade field, will mark the official lighting of Christmas decorations throughout the 2nd Division area.

The 2nd Infantry Division Band, under the direction of Chief Warrant Officer Mariano Morales, will open the lighting program with a selection of Christmas music.

Invocation

An invocation will then be given by Chaplain (Major) Clement P. J. Krug, assistant division chaplain, to be followed with group singing of Christmas carols.

Chaplain (Lieutenant Colonel) James H. Fiser, 2nd Division chaplain, will then read "The Christmas Story."

Following the singing of more Christmas carols by those attending, the lights in the area will go out during "Silent Night" and Major General Charles H. Chase, division commanding general, will throw the switch to light the area's Christmas decorations.

Simultaneously, a command will go out over the command radio net for units to turn on their lights.

Following the singing of more carols and a benediction rendered by Chaplain (Major) Alfred P. Lam, Division Trains chaplain, refreshments of coffee and doughnuts will be served.

5 Battle Group Commanders Weigh Results as Training Program Ends

BY PETER TATISTCHEFF AND GEORGE HORD

Commanders of the 2nd Division's five battle groups this week evaluated the progress made by their units since the beginning of the Intensified Combat Training Program and revealed their plans for the future.

"It is my opinion," said Colonel John E. Arthur, commander of the 11th Infantry, "that the end of the Intensified Combat Training Program isn't the end of anything. It is the beginning of the formation of a professional unit."

Colonel Louis A. Kunzig, 23rd Infantry commander, in speaking of the program, said: "It was a very well designed program to get us combat ready in a minimum of time. It was a real challenge to all of us, but having met that challenge and having profited from the program, I personally am confident we can meet successfully any new situation that may confront us."

"Each Soldier knew he was participating in building a unit," said Colonel Walter B. Todd, commander of the 1st Infantry. "We and the whole Army have learned a lesson—that you can take a unit, start from a dead stop and develop it into a highly-trained, hard-hitting combat ready force when time is at a premium."

According to Colonel Clifford P. Hannum, 9th Infantry commanding officer, the men of his unit "have come to realize that this profession of ours is not a Sunday School picnic. It is serious business, teaching men to fight, protect themselves, kill, and win on the battle field. They are realizing the sense of urgency in their mission."

Colonel Robert E. Connor, commanding officer of the 87th Infantry, said: "The real thing we learned was to weld the small unit, through practice, into a better team, and the battle group into a compact unit."

At the 87th

Speaking about progress made by the 87th Infantry during the training program, Colonel Connor stressed the growing leadership experience realized by officer-leaders.

"The ICTP," he said, "found us well-prepared. We had been together for a year. Our people were trained Soldiers by last August because of our former Overseas Unit Replacement mission. In my opinion the individual Soldier was as highly-trained as an individual needs to be. From then on it was the officer-leader who was most in need of training.

"The officer-leader was trained to get the most out of his men. The six to seven weeks that were spent in company-to-division exercises trained the leaders in welding the different units together into a compact whole.

"Our people had been living in the field when we were given the new mission. Many of our men were sent to other battle groups, and we, in turn, got a considerable number of non-commissioned officers in. But our record points out the fact that we continued on the whole to be pretty well trained."

Colonel Todd emphasized that the 1st Infantry had a unique position — starting from scratch.

"I calculate," said Colonel Todd, "that I had the most serious problem of putting together a unit. We were extremely fortunate in having an excellent cadre force, put together originally to form an OVUREP unit.

"Starting only with a cadre, the filler personnel came from other units. Some of these people had as little as five weeks training in the Army.

"They progressed from a mass of recruits into a real professional team—and they know it. Each Soldier knew he was participating in building a unit and both the Soldiers and their leaders took pride in this.

'Over There'

2nd Infantry Division, Born of Necessity, Came Into Existence in The Great War

BY GORDON ALDERMAN

The 2nd Infantry Division was born in the cold mists of France in September 1917 and matured in the trenches of The Great War.

Three brigades made up the majority of the division's fighting strength, one of Infantry, one of Marines and one of Artillery. Originally, plans had called for two brigades of Infantry, one to be made up of regiments that had won honor on the battlefield at Gettysburg during the Civil War.

Plan Scrapped

This brigade was to be the elite of the American Expeditionary Forces, a true morale factor for the doughboy "over there." The plan was scrapped, however, after consultations between the War and Navy Departments and the Marine brigade substituted.

This was done for two reasons: first, it was feared that if such an illustrious unit was trapped in battle and wiped out, the damage to the morale of the Allies and the civilians back home would be irreparable. Second, the Marines were easier to organize. One unit, the 5th Marines, had all but two of its companies already formed. The other unit, the 6th Marines, was formed at Quantico, Virginia, by the usual procedure of preparing Marine detachments.

Beginning in June, 1917, troops began sailing for France, troops destined to become "Second To None."

Division Headquarters were opened at Bourmont, France, October 26, 1917. Brigadier General Charles A. Doyen of the Marine Corps, the senior officer then present, assumed command. Major General Omar Bundy, the permanently-designated division commander, relieved him on November 8th.

A division area was assigned and preparations made for training troops as they arrived.

Earlier in 1917, training responsibility had shifted from the Operations Section of the General Staff, American Expeditionary Forces, to a separate Training Section, where it remained until the end of the war.

Three Phase Program

The instruction program adopted was for a three-month divisional course. The first month, Infantry instruction was to be in small units, followed by a month's service by battalions in a French division in a quiet sector.

During this period, regimental and higher headquarters and staffs were to follow a course of instruction in technique, mostly without troops.

Meanwhile, the artillery was to be placed in a separate camp where facilities for firing were available, regardless of the location of the division.

During the third month, the division was to be assembled in a rear area for training as a unit.

Many of the units that were with the 2nd Infantry Division at its organization in France in September, 1917 are with it today. The 9th and 23rd Infantry Regiments, the 12th, 15th and 17th Artillery Battalions, Division Trains, 2nd Engineers and the 2nd Military Police Detachment were all part of the Indianhead Division's beginning.

The accounts that appear here do not attempt to duplicate previous histories, but serve to augment them. In this series, we will attempt to highlight interesting facets of the 2nd Infantry Division, to bring out little-known incidents that are just as big a part of the 2nd's history as the battles of Chateau-Thierry, Belleau Wood and the Argonne.

TO ADMIN. CO. Capt. Dunlap

2nd Admin Company Gets New CO--Captain Dunlap

Captain William C. Dunlap, formerly commander of Headquarters Company, 23rd Infantry, this week assumed command of the 2nd Division's 2nd Administration Company.

Captain Dunlap, who joined the division in January following a tour of duty in Korea, joined the Armed Forces in December 1941.

1st Marines

He served with the 1st Marines from 1941 to 1945, participating in Pacific Theater operations during World War II. Following his duty with the Marine Corps, he attended Southwest Texas State College.

In 1949 he entered the Army with the 2nd Armored Division at Fort Hood, Texas.

Following duty with the 2nd Armored Division, Captain Dunlap attended Officer Candidate School at Fort Benning, earning his commission in 1949. His second stay at Fort Benning was in 1959 when he took the Advanced Officers' Course with the U. S. Army Infantry School.

The new 2nd Administration Company commander's hometown is San Antonio, Texas. He lives with his wife and four children at 119 Baltzell Avenue, Main Post.

Captain Dunlap lists four varsity letters, having played football with Southwest Texas State College. He is presently active in handball. He holds the Expert Infantryman's Badge.

An L-19 aircraft of the 2nd Division's 2nd Aviation Company, piloted by Lieutenant Harlan R. Trower, Friday made a forced landing five miles northwest of Phenix City at the Russell County drag strip.

While returning to Lawson Army Air Field, Lt. Trower experienced low oil pressure and elected to land on the drag strip. The plane was on a training mission. There was no damage or injury.

'This Is Strength, Not Paper'--Jerry Greene

BY JERRY GREENE
Military Editor, New York News

There's an object lesson here at Fort Benning for the skeptics, American and Russian variety. It's called the 2d Infantry Division. It's primed and ready to fight—14 weeks after it was converted from a training cadre.

Editor's Note: The following is an excerpt from an article written by Jerry Greene, the military editor of the New York News, after a visit to the 2nd Infantry Division and Fort Benning during the recent field training exercise.

The 2d Infantry Division, with a fabulous combat record in both World Wars and Korea, inactivated in 1957, was reactivated here the following year strictly as a training division, preparing units for Regular Army service. It had a training cadre of about 7,000.

SHIFTED

By the stroke of a Presidential order, the 2d Infantry, given to the command of Maj. Gen. Charles H. Chase in mid-August, was shifted from training to combat status and told to get in shape. . .

Gen. Chase, a veteran paratrooper, had to pull in nearly 7,000 new men, settle the whole into proper units, then blend these into one hard, high-spirited fighting machine. His men have spent so much time living and working in the field these last three months they undoubtedly would be glad to do battle with anybody to let off steam.

The 2d Division drew the new men from recruits, inductees and transfers; there are no reserves in the ranks. But the fast polishing of this fine weapon has been a key part of the whole revitalization of the ground forces. It would not have been possible had not the reserves been mobilized to supply the missing bits and pieces of small but vital supporting units which go to make up the battle team.

What's happened to the 2d, the 1st and the 2d Armored has piled muscle on the bones of the U.S. Army to a degree probably unprecedented in any 90-day period in the nation's peacetime history.

This Outfit Could Go All Out, Right Now

The troops have their essential equipment — not all of it the latest models, the highly desirable most modern designs — and they are tough, physically and mentally. They dig foxholes deep. They camouflage these and their gun positions not just casually but as if they expected the exercise to turn into the real thing any moment; they are difficult to spot and identify from a low-flying helicopter.

Army veterans report that more training for the 2d would be desirable, but in a pinch this outfit could go today, all out.

And with its sister training divisions of last August, the 2d Infantry has considerably compounded the problems facing Nikita Khrushchev in just a few short weeks. This is strength, not paper.

These things are clearly available evidence of American intent which can be seen by the officers from those 30 to 40 friendly nations at school here. The 2d Infantry is a product of doing, not talking.

GIVEN A-C-M
Capt. Crisp

Capt. Crisp, Given ACM

Capt. William H. Crisp, 2nd Administration Company, recently was awarded the Army Commendation Medal.

The award cites Capt. Crisp for "performing his duties in an outstanding and meritorious manner" while serving consecutively with the 87th Infantry and the Adjutant General's section from Nov. 19, 1959, to Nov. 30.

Responsibility

"In all his positions," the citation said, "Capt. Crisp's "effectiveness and efficiency, as well as his sense of responsibility, were consistently demonstrated.

"In the 87th Infantry, his processing and maintenance of the personnel and pay records for the unit's officers, permanent cadre and personnel of repeated cycles of Basic Combat Training were characterized by diligence, accuracy and absolute reliability.

"Assigned to the Adjutant General's section from the 87th Infantry, Capt. Crisp continued to display those qualities . . ."

Service Club Director Presented Award

Miss Madeline J. Parks, director of Sand Hill's Service Club Two, has been presented the Outstanding Civilian Personnel Award for "sustained superior performance of duty."

The award — $150 — was presented to Miss Parks by Brigadier General John E. Kelly, deputy commanding general of the United States Army Infantry Center, in ceremonies at the club last week.

Also attending the ceremonies was Major General Charles H. Chase, commanding general of the 2nd Infantry Division.

Gen. Kelly also presented Miss Mary Elizabeth Shanks, director of Service Club Four, Kelley Hill, a certificate of accomplishment for placing third at Third Army-level in the 4th All-Army Operations Service Contest.

Miss Parks' award is the first awarded to a member of the Special Services staff here in a number of years.

A coffee was held for Special Service personnel and other friends of Miss Parks following the presentation.

Among those attending the presentation were Colonel Gustav M. Racharach, division chief of staff; Lieutenant Colonel Jack E. Compton, division adjutant general; Lieutenant Colonel Ralph K. Jones, division G-1; Lieutenant Romie W. Mills, division special services officer; Sergeant Major Robert L. Brown, division sergeant major; T. A. Barefoot, civilian personnel officer for post; Frank Spear, chairman of the incentive awards committee, and Darien Parks, Miss Parks' father, of Sylvester, Georgia.

1st Infantry Bake Sale

There were goodies galore at the mess halls of the 1st Infantry as the ladies held a bake sale last Saturday.

The gaily-decorated tables were laden with cookies and cakes which the men could enjoy during "coffee call."

An Interlude

The baked goods prepared by the ladies of the '1st' brought an interlude to the routine inspections that were being conducted.

The donations of the sale will be used for a Christmas party for all children of the 1st Infantry personnel. The party has been planned for Saturday, Dec. 16.

The sale was a joint effort of the officers' and NCOs' wives of the battle group. Chairman for the affair was Mrs. Frederick Harris, wife of the deputy battle group commander. Mrs. Harris was assisted by Mrs. Archie Hatfield, wife of the sergeant major.

Mrs. Walter B. Todd, wife of the battle group commander, expressed her appreciation to the ladies and men who contributed their time and talents in making the sale such an "overwhelming success."

An unofficial estimate showed that more than $500 was raised.

Mrs. Connor Tops Hostesses For 87th Infantry Punch Party

Ladies of the 87th Infantry initiated the Christmas Season recently with a punch party at the home of Mrs. Robert E. Connor, wife of the battle group commander.

Hostesses, in addition to Mrs. Connor, were Mrs. Douglas Syverson and Mrs. Raymond Rush.

Honored guests introduced to the ladies of the 87th Infantry were Mrs. Royal Reynolds Jr., wife of the assistant division commander; Mrs. Frank A. Osmanski, wife of the division artillery commander, and Mrs. Maurice C. Holden, wife of the deputy brigade commander.

Ladies of the 87th who attended posed on the lawn for a group picture to be sent to the Korean school boy they have "adopted."

In addition to sending the group photograph, the ladies each plan to send him a Christmas card.

Five Co. Commanders Welcomed to 87th Inf

By 87th Inf PIO

As a result of a number of overseas assignments, the 87th Infantry will have five new company commanders this week.

The changes, effective December 1st, will effect every company in the battle group except two, and also will result in a number of changes in almost every principle staff section.

Departing

Scheduled to depart as the end of the year as a part of a special advisory group are Captain Roy D. Sims, commander of Company C, Captain John H. Woodyard, Combat Support Company commander, and Captain Charles M. Rapp, commander of Company E.

Replacing the departing officers are Captain Clet W. Warren, new commander of Company C, formerly assigned to S-3 (operations) as the air liaison officer; Lieutenant Robert C. Hubbard, new CO of Company E, previously a liaison officer in the S-3 section, and Lieutenant John F. Collier, new commander of Combat Support Company, formerly the company's 4.2 inch mortar platoon commander.

Two other companies will get new company commanders this week as a result of the rearrangement. Company D, previously commanded by Captain George E. McKenna, who will be the new S-2 (intelligence), is replaced by Captain Raymond Whitaker, previously assigned as assistant S-4 (logistics) and Company B, previously commanded by Captain Ronald R. Berkey, who is now assigned as the assistant S-3 (air) will get Captain Raymond E. Murphrey, formerly assigned to S-2.

Three other officers from the 87th are effected by the change. Lieutenant John A. Dennis will be the new assistant S-4, Lieutenant James W. Crysel will be a liaison officer and Lieutenant Richard Sharp will assume command of Combat Support Company's mortar platoon.

The two companies which remain unchanged are Company A, which will retain Captain Willis G. Bacon, and Headquarters Company, which will keep Captain Kenneth J. Sweeney.

Five BG Commanders' Opinions on Intensified Combat Training Program

"As we trained, it became obvious that we were not lagging behind. We hammered away at our motto —'Always First' — and this spirit caught hold. Week by week one type of training was a building block for the next phase — platoon to company to battle group."

Colonel Todd added that "the field training program was welcomed by the men, who, I believe, prefer field training to garrison duty. They were eager to go out. After the division field training exercise they felt a distinct let down. The men were eager to get on."

Colonel Hannum inherited in the 9th Infantry, a unit which had been turning out trained heavy-weapons and light-weapons infantrymen. It, unlike the 1st, 11th and 87th Infantries, was not a part of the OVUREP program.

He felt that his men learned "to operate as a team, realizing the need for team action."

"Their efforts," he said, "were characterized by a more professional manner as unit integrity and unit esprit improved.

"As the battle group progressed toward combat readiness the competitive spirit grew in the units from squad up."

That the men of the 11th Infantry applied individual skills to the growth of an "organization," this, said Colonel Arthur, was the greatest experience of the ICTP.

"Before we started the program," said Colonel Arthur, "the men were individuals learning individual skills. They had heard of an organization—heads up of a lot of skills—carrying out a mission, but it wasn't until the ICTP that they saw these skills put together so that a company or the battle group could perform its mission effectively.

"They went to the field and learned what they had always heard about—the functioning of an organization. They gained a confidence in the unit and in themselves.

"In my opinion, the ICTP did not turn out the final polished product. There is still a lot more to know about. But now they can function as a combat organization.

"When our mission was changed from OVUREP, the men shifted gears in midstream, re-oriented themselves and pushed on. I feel the men have great pride in the professional status they have achieved."

According to Colonel Kunzig, whose unit, like the 9th Infantry, had never been a part of the OVUREP program, "no matter how good the individuals are, it takes teamwork to make an effective fighting unit."

He feels that the 23rd Infantry developed a "moral determination to succeed. It showed spirit and teamwork.

"The new personnel individually learned to take care of themselves in the field—to respond readily to many different challenges. Though some persons did not have the benefits of full recruit training, they learned with their unit as the program progressed."

For the Future

The division's five battle group commanders look forward to a future of filling in the gaps, continuing preparedness and stemming out into more specialized types of training.

In speaking for the 9th Infantry, Colonel Hannum said: "Our next goal is to get as much training in as possible. The men must get this knowledge firmly under their belts because training hours are precious."

In the 23rd Infantry, Colonel Kunzig hopes "for a period when we can train hard, both in the field and in garrison, so we can say we are ready for any kind of operation the nation might ask of us."

Colonel Arthur finds the future of the 11th Infantry lies in "maintaining a level of readiness, and increasing the scope, broadening the base of the training by going into special kinds of operations."

For the 87th, Colonel Connor hopes to be able to "maintain proficiency and keep up unit type training. The average Soldier gets bored doing the same thing all the time. They will be given a chance to broaden their training."

"The 1st Infantry," said Colonel Todd, "is now devoting its time to a continued buildup of individual and unit skills. We are now engaged in trainfire. After the holidays we will go into special operations."

87th Wins Nip 'n Tuck Flag Battle

Teams Swap Touchdowns For First Three Periods

BY EUGENE BREESKIN

Already having won the Commanding General's Sports Trophy, the 87th Infantry's Conquerors won the division flag football tournament last Thursday night.

In a hard fought and tense clash, with masses of troops looking on from both sides, the 87th Infantry came from behind to whip the 1st Infantry team, 32-21.

It was by far the most thrilling game of the year for the 87th. Both teams traded touchdown for touchdown until the 87th broke the game open late in the third quarter.

The play-off game got off to a flying start. Taking the 1st Infantry kickoff, Issac Scott fought his way to midfield. Fred Wilcox then faked a pass and carried right up the middle, to be stopped hard and momentarily taken out of the game.

Robert Lowry, coach of the 87th team and the alternate quarterback, hit Chester Berroud with a pass on his first play, and Berroud raced into the end zone for the first score of the game.

Photos By Joslin

The 1st Infantry came roaring back with a TD, the result of some fine passing by Jesse Madden and some tough running by William Taliaferro.

With the 87th in possession again, Berroud got a pass from Wilcox and weaved his way up field for one of the most spectacular touchdown runs of the tournament.

The 1st retaliated again with Madden engineering a series of deceptive running plays. The first quarter ended with the 1st ahead, 14-12.

Held in reserve during the first quarter, Major Lincoln took his position in the backfield and broke loose for a number of long gains, defying the 1st Infantry defense. Taliaferro, the 1st's small and speedy halfback, almost matched Lincoln's rushing output and provided the big push for the 1st's three-point lead at halftime.

The cold third quarter began with a booming kickoff by Ronald Guy. The 87th got its big break a few minutes later as Lincoln snagged a long pass intended for a 1st Infantry receiver and ran it back for about 20 yards.

A perfectly executed trap play gave quarterback Wilcox just enough room to drive all the way for the deciding touchdown. An extra point run by Lincoln made the score 25-21.

The last quarter saw the 87th defensive team at their best throwing up a defensive wall to stop the 1st Infantry's running attack. Outstanding were William Gurley, Jerry Lestock, George Cerruti, Harry Tomlin and Thomas McCool.

The last score of the game was made by Wilcox, who sprinted around left end for a 60-yard TD, which, coupled with the extra point, made the final score 32-21.

The last thing on the schedule for the Conquroring Nine from Kelley Hill is a banquet to consist of steak dinners and a presentation of individual trophies by the Battle Group Commander, Colonel Robert E. Connor, in recognition of a great football year.

11th's Barrage Of Four TDs Stuns Manchus

BY BILL GIBSON

The 11th Infantry, throwing a barrage of four touchdowns and three "Always Faithful" extra points, posted a 28-17 victory over the 9th Infantry "Manchus" last week to nail down third place in the division's flag football tournament.

Scoring came early for the 11th when in the first quarter, halfback Billy Smith jarred the 9th Infantry with a 25-yard touchdown jaunt to be followed with an extra point executed by halfback John Baskus.

This put the 11th in front 7-0, a lead that extended late in the quarter until it was strengthened by a 13-yard touchdown sprint by Baskus and an extra point plunge by quarterback Bill Lochow.

After the goal-changing ripsl and early in the second period the "Manchus" showed their spirited determination when line-backer Alford Jackson intercepted a Lochow pass in the backfield and scooted 25 yards into "Always Faithful" paydirt, making the score 14-6.

Then the 11th came back when Lochow went to the air, slinging a 27-yard touchdown pass to Jim Gordon, boosting the score to 20-6 at the half.

After the half-time break, the 9th got the scoring urge again and reached the "promised land" as quarterback Gerry Smith threw a 25-yard pass to end Jim May, increasing the Manchu income to 12 points.

The 11th clinched the victory in the fourth period on a Billy Tice touchdown drive and extra point by halfback Bill Holmes.

In an uncontested event, Douglas Johnson was declared the champion of the feather weight open category.

The Fort Benning pugilists won the Open Team trophy with a total of 28 points to be followed by the Bolling boxers with 20 points.

The post boxers were runner-up in the novice team championship with 15 points following Jacksonville Boys Home with 30 points.

In the semi-final bouts, Robert Richter, light heavyweight, lost a decision to Bolling's Guy Nichols.

Doughboys 'Drop' Paratroopers; Fifth Straight Gridiron Victory

CLEVELAND BROWN MAKES 52 YARD RUN AROUND CAMPBELL'S LEFT END As Eagle Players (81 and 76) Make Vain Effort To Pull Him Down

28-15 Away-Game Upset Ends Post Team's Season

BY SP4 DEL BERGHOEFER

The Fort Benning Doughboys completed a successful football season last Friday as they defeated the Fort Campbell "Screaming Eagles", 28-15, at the Eagles' home stadium.

It was the fifth consecutive win for the Doughboys who finished the season with an over-all 6-4 record.

Fort Campbell's 15 points was the most scored against the strong Fort Benning defenses in its last seven games.

The Eagles took the opening kick-off and marched 80 yards to score with less than two minutes gone in the game. Fullback Ernie Wheelwright picked up the six-pointer on a half-yard plunge over center. The extra point was kicked by Eddie Wright, giving the Eagles a 7-0 lead.

The Doughboys stormed right back, moving 89 yards in nine plays to score. Much of the yardage in the drive was picked up by the team's brother duo, halfback Emmett Eddy and fullback Cliff Eddy. A nine-yard pass from quarterback Charles Hailie to Emmett Eddy in the end zone was good for the Doughboys' first score.

Before the quarter ended Fort Benning struck again through the air for its second TD. Hailie threw a long strike to halfback Cleveland Brown deep behind the Eagle defenders who raced all the way untouched for the Doughboys' second score. The play covered 67 yards. Going for the two - point conversion, Hailie threw to Brown complete, giving the visiting Doughboys a 14-7 lead as the first quarter closed.

Before the first half ended, Fort Benning threatened again, but was halted by the clock as time ran out in the first half with the Doughboys in scoring position on the Eagle five-yard line. Minutes earlier a 34-yard TD by halfback Northern Brown had been nullified by a Doughboy offside penalty.

In the third quarter the Doughboys added a third TD as guard Frank Farella recovered a Fort Campbell fumble in the end zone. A 48-yard Fort Benning drive stalled on the Eagle three-yard line and Fort Campbell took over deep in their own territory. On the first play Eagle quarterback Dave Bourland fumbled as he was hit by hard charging Doughboy lineman Dave Lynn. The alert Farella recovered the ball in the end zone for the score. End Henry Derleth booted the extra point for a 21-7 lead.

One of the key plays in the game came early in the fourth quarter as George Burt, Doughboy center, intercepted an Eagle pass on his own 11-yard line to halt a Fort Campbell scoring threat, its deepest penetration since early score.

Fort Benning added its last TD midway in the final quarter, which was set up by Northern Brown's recovery of an Eagle fumble on the Eagles' 30. Emmett Eddy raced 25 yards around left end for the Doughboys' fourth TD, and Derleth's PAT raised the score to 28-7.

Fort Campbell added its final tally in the last two minutes on a one-yard pass from Bourland to end Joe Schmidt. An end run by halfback Mike Cockill gave them a two-point conversion, and ended the scoring for both teams at 28-15.

Leading the Fort Benning offense was halfback Cleveland Brown who gained 129 of the Doughboys' 259 rushing yards. The Eddy brothers accounted for another 104 between them.

Fort Campbell's offense was hampered in the second half by over - aggressiveness on the part of some of their linemen. They were assessed five 15-yard penalties for unsportsman-like conduct, and personal fouls. The Eagles were penalized a total of 105 yards in the game.

The statistics give the Doughboys an edge in the important first downs and rushing yardage. Fort Campbell had a four-yard edge in passing yardage but needed three more completions.

The Eagles 225 pound fullback, Ernie Wheelwright, was effectively stopped throughout most of the game by the rugged Doughboy defense. He got loose on the second play of the game for a 53-yard run, accounting for a large share of his 95 yards gained. Other than his one long run, he was held to approximately half of his normal eight-yard average per carry.

After the game the jubilant Doughboys hoisted Coach Cofield to their shoulders and carried him to the stands where he presented the game ball to Major Gen. Ben Harrell, Infantry Center commanding general, who had flown to Fort Campbell to witness the season's final game.

The win ran the Doughboys' scoring total to 229 in their last seven games compared to their opponents' 46 points.

WHAT DOES THAT DEER WEIGH?

The deer harvest on Post stands at 124 bucks with hunters reporting deer daily. This is the greatest number of deer taken at Fort Benning since a season was open for deer over 5 years ago. Prior to this year, deer hunters recorded their best success in the 1959-1960 season when 102 deer were taken on Post.

Last season, the reported kill took a dip when only 72 deer were reported taken on post. However, it appears that the deer population is on the upswing at an alarming rate.

Earlier in the year Wildlife Aids reported that deer had ranged out over the entire reservation and it was evident the deer herd was on the upswing. With this in mind, the bag limit was increased to two bucks.

The prolonged dry spell and numerous fires have destroyed much game habitat and reduced the carrying capacity of many areas. This has been reflected in the condition of deer being taken from certain areas, particularly the southern portion of the reservation where deer populations are highest. This is supported by the fact that there are numerous spike bucks being taken in the southern portion of the Post.

Although relatively few deer have been taken on the northern part of the Post, no spike buck have been taken in this area. Deer weights seem to vary remarkably, generally in the upward direction when being estimated by a successful hunter. Numerous deer have been reported to field dress over 200 pounds, however we are still waiting to put one on the scales at the Fish and Game office. Of the deer actually weighed by Wildlife Aids, which has been a fairly representative sample, the average field dressed deer is 90 pounds.

The average spike buck weighs in about 80 pounds while a 6 or 8 pointer would go 110 pounds. Undoubtedly there are big deer on Post, we are anxious to know just how big!

GENERAL MEETING

A general meeting of the Fish and Game Association members was held at Victory Lodge this past Monday at which time a revised constitution and by-laws was discussed and adopted. Following the business meeting members enjoyed a social hour and two wildlife conservation films were shown.

(Editor's Note: For several weeks now, a controversy has been raging across the BAYONET sports pages on which is better, the SEC or the Big Ten. Another argument is on what does the word "BREATHER" mean? Last Week Pfc Ross Huff gave his opinion on what he thought of Pfc Raymond P. Knight and Lt. Joseph Tomke's Opinions. So, this week, Pfc Knight is writing again. This column is open to anyone. Items should be sent to Sport Editor, Bayonet, Bldg. 5. Articles may also be brought into the office, room 38 of Bldg. 5)

Knight Answers

By Pfc Raymond P. Knight

Several weeks ago, I found myself trying to uphold the glories of collegiate football in this same column. Since then, it seems that some fans and sports writers prolong the controversies that assail in the colorful and spirited season of football.

Again, I want to put some of my opinions into writing. But first let me say that I'm not prejudiced toward either the Big Ten or the Southeastern Conference. I'd just as soon see Syracuse, Penn State, Duke, Miami, Texas, Colorado Or Washington play as I would Alabama or Ohio State.

I still maintain that no conference or two conferences completely dominate the collegiate football scene. Take a look at the final picking of the top 20 teams in the nation and you can easily assume.

Last week, Pfc Ross Huff wrote an article saying that he would like to state the views of a western fan who has no prejudice against the Big Ten or Southeastern Conference. Then, he followed with a drawn-out discussion about what the word or term "BREATHER" means in relation to a team's schedule.

I never did see the views of the western fan — I only saw an unconstructed analysis of the word "BREATHER."

To Pfc Huff's comments about the word "BREATHER," here are some more of my own. Webster's Collegiate Dictionary defines the word "BREATHER" as "a pause for breath." Thorndike - Barnhart Dictionary gives the definition of the word as "a short stop for breath" or "a rest."

I think the most practical synonym or definition of the word "BREATHER" would be "rest."

So, if a football team has a game on its schedule, whatever day it may be, they would not be having a rest. Therefore, we may state that no team plays "BREATHER" games. By this fact, I still maintain that the only "BREATHER" a team has on its schedule is their open date, if they have one.

Pfc Huff also stated that "common sense" tells us that the necessary preparations for a weak team would not be as rigid as those for a more powerful opponent. All good coaches and teams will use approximately the same amount of preparation and rigidness for all of their games. Some top teams get upset because they slack off practice and rigidness in preparation for one of your so-called "BREATHER" teams. I think Coach Shug Jordan of Auburn can vouch for that.

Pfc Huff ended his article by stating, "Granted that some of the nations finest teams are from the SEC, but are these as much as in the Big Ten?"

To this I would close by adding two things. First, look in the top twenty and compare the SEC and Big Ten teams; and, second, some of the nation's finest teams are from conferences other than the SEC or Big Ten.

He Finds Humor In Newspaper

BY SP-4 HAROLD KITCHING

"DOUGHBOYS RISK 4-GAME STREAK AGAINST WHEELWRIGHT JONES & CO." reads a headline in the sports section of Fort Campbell's newspaper.

The article's writer seemingly was comparing the two teams and trying to pick which one would win on the grounds of certain qualifications.

"Fort Campbell has a 6-3 record; Fort Benning has a 5-3 record. Fort Campbell should win," he wrote. Well, unfortunately, he was a little off—like, about 28-15 off.

"Fort Benning defeated Fort Lee 41-6; Fort Campbell defeated Fort Lee 27-7, Fort Benning should win." Yes, I'll grant him this.

"Fort Campbell has a slight edge in speed; Fort Benning is heavier. On a dry day Fort Campbell should win; on a wet day Fort Benning." I wonder who would have won on "ANY GIVEN SATURDAY?"

"Fort Campbell won its last game 44-6; Fort Benning was a 50-0 victor. Fort Benning scored more, so should win?" he said. All I can say is, WE KNOW WHO WON.

The next thing he says is, "Fort Benning has won its last four in a row, so should be on a winning streak. Fort Campbell has won three out of its last four and is on the comeback trail following the loss to Tennessee Tech three weeks ago." I guess the trail kind of came to an end, didn't it?

Continuing, he says, "At best, picking the favorite would be a guess, but a good football game is in the offing. Fort Campbell will be depending on All - Army candidate Ernest Wheelwright to continue his great running in the fullback slot. Quarterback Jack Jones has turned in two consecutive performances at quarterback, hitting 12 out of 16 attempts last week against Austin Peay State College." Unfortunately, Ernest Wheelwright seemed to have picked up a charley-horse somewhere, for he only picked up half of his normal eight-yard average per carry, out-side of his one 53-yard run on the game's second play.

So, I guess the Doughboys were really rolling that day. Nothing could stop them. Not even "WHEELWRIGHT, JONES & CO."

BOOKS in REVIEW

STORM OVER LAOS by Sisouk Champassak. (Praeger, 1961)

For 16 years now, the Kingdom of Laos, has experienced insecurity and war . . . Concentrating especially on the time since the Geneva Conference of July, 1954, I have attempted to relate these events and to analyze them without prejudice or passion, despite personal involvement.

STRANGER IN A STRANGE LAND by Robert Heinlein. (Putnam, 1961)

Although certain teachniques of science fiction are used, this novel satirizes our contemporary culture by presenting it as seen from the non-human viewpoint of a visitor from another culture. Said visitor is a Martian named Valentine Michael Smith who eventually became martyr to his non-Earth idealism.

ANZIO by Vaughan-Thomas (Holt, 1961)

In Italy in 1944 'Anzio was one of the bloodiest and most eventful campaigns of World War II. Here is the story of this tragic battle told in its entirety with . . . on-the-spot observations! and commentary on the Allied generals.

SATURN OVER THE WATER by John Priestley. (Doubleday, 1961)

An account of his adventures in London, New York, South America and Australia by Tim Bedford, painter; editor, und ertakes a search for a cousin's husband, a scientist who has disappeared somewhat in South America. This quest involves him in an international plot.

WHAT SHIP: by Shepard Rifkin. (Knopf, 1961)

This novel tells the seriocomic saga of 'the first Irgun ship to run the British blockade into Palestine,' in 1946. Starting from Brooklyn with a crew of both idealistic volunteers and professional sailors, the voyage runs the gamut of predictable adventures.

Why You Are In The Army

". . . we shall pay any price, bear any burden, meet any hardship, support any friend, oppose any foe to assure the survival and the success of liberty." (President John F. Kennedy, Inaugural Address, 20 January 1961.)

Sfc Charles Rycroft Discovers What Could Be Extra-Rare Coin

What might prove to be one of the rarest U. S. coins in existence has been uncovered here, a Liberty Head "V" nickel dated 1913.

"Only five of these coins have been known to exist," Sfc Charles D. Rycroft, said, "but five of us have examined the worn date under a magnifying glass and have come to the conclusion that it can be none other than a 1913."

Sgt. Rycroft, a member of Headquarters Company, Infantry Center Troop Command, said he came into possession of the coin in a manner which also supports the decision of his buddies.

"The nickel came down to me as part of a set of Liberty nickels down to 1913, the year the U. S. Mint began to issue the Buffalo nickel," he said.

The Fost soldier said the collection had been turned over to his family over 40 years ago by the original owner who also believed the coin to be of 1913 vintage.

In the intervening years, he said, the nickels had been worn through contact with other old coins his family had kept. The 1913 coin picked up a nick on the date line.

"Despite the nick, however," the coin's owner said, "we're of the opinion that it's a genuine 1913."

He gave the old coins no thought until coming here where he overheard a conversation among amateur coin collectors.

"They got all shook up when they saw the coin and advised me to hang onto it at all cost," Rycroft said.

When told that an authentic 1913 coin could be valued well up in the five-figure bracket, the Fort Benning soldier reflected a moment and then said:

"Man! What a Christmas present that would be!"

Enlisted Benefit Group Declares Annual Dividend

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Members of the Armed Forces Enlisted Personnel Benefit Association will receive their fourth consecutive annual Christmas dividend.

This is the association's fourth year of operation. Its primary benefit is a group life insurance plan. Enlisted personnel on active duty in the Armed Forces are eligible to join the non-profit organization.

Amounting to $3.75 per month per member, the $45 dividend was the same as declared last year.

This is being made in addition to a substantial increase in the insurance coverage, up from $10,000 to $17,000.

With the dividend, the basic net cost of the insurance comes to only $5.25 per month.

Holder of Lowest Active Enlisted Serial Number Retires at CTC

BY MSGT. CHARLES QUINN

SSgt. Robert H. Campbell, 71-year-old Army photographer and holder of the Army's lowest active enlisted serial number — RA 2 345 — retired from active duty at Fort Benning recently after nearly a half century of active military service in three Armies, including two World Wars and the Korean conflict.

Holder of the Distinguished Service Cross, the old soldier from Jacksonville, Fla., would not hear of a troop review but settled for an informal ceremony in the office of his battalion commander.

Major Howard E. Lippincott, commander of the First Battalion, Infantry Center Troop Command, in which Campbell had served for the past years as a member of Company A, added the green and white ribbon of the Army Commendation Medal to the rows of decorations and awards the old soldier began to accumulate in 1916.

Once more the adage, "Old soldiers never die," made famous by General of the Army Douglas MacArthur, was brought forcefully home.

Sgt. Campbell, who stands as straight and slim as any West Pointer from his lifetime of soldiering, was born in St. Mary's, W. Va., Dec. 11, 1890.

Rumbles of war in Europe brought him to the ranks of the 52nd Royal Canadian Engineers in Winnipeg in 1912 and he served with the Canadian unit until 1916.

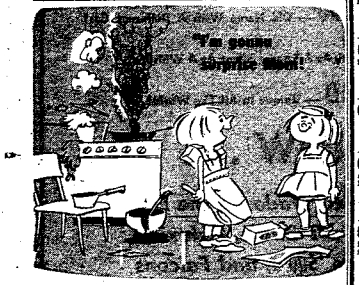
He first entered the U. S. Army in 1916 at Fort Bliss, Texas, where his first assignment was with the 1st Infantry Division.

Some of the most famous campaigns of World War I followed, including the Sommerville, Montdidier and Soissons Sectors, Cantigny, St. Mihiel, Muese-Argonne, Second Battle of the Marne, Sedan, Coblentz Bridgehead and Ansauville.

While serving with the Army of Occupation, Sgt. Campbell became a member of the 1st Division's "Society of the First Division, AEF" and still carries his membership card bearing the date "5-2-19".

Following World War I, Sgt. Campbell settled in Australia. In 1936, he enlisted in the Australian Army later to fight at Tobruk and El Alamein Campaigns of North Africa before transferring to the U.S. Army.

Throughout World War II, he served in the South Pacific in Gen. MacArthur's headquarters and returned to the United States in 1945. His Korean tour saw assignment to the Identification Section, Headquarters, Eighth Army. He was reassigned overseas in 1952. Following his return from LaRochelle, France, Sgt. Campbell was stationed at Jacksonville on recruiting duty, where he makes his home today.



He arrived here to begin his final tour of active duty in February, 1961, where he served as a photographer with the Photographic Laboratory, Signal Section, Infantry Center.

In addition to the Distinguished Service Cross, Sgt. Campbell also holds the French Croix de Guerre with Palm which was personally presented by Field Marshal Petain for action near Soissons a year earlier, the Purple Heart, and an assorted dozen campaign ribbons besprinkled with bronze service stars denoting as many battles in which he had participated.

2nd Howitzer Bn Sergeant Returns

Sergeant Ervin E. Naylor, chief NCO of the Fire Direction Center of the 2nd Howitzer Battalion, 10th Artillery, 1st Infantry Brigade, has returned from temporary duty at Fort Jackson. He was assigned to the United States Army Training Command for 73 days as an instructor of basic trainees.

Army Increasing Search For More Pilot Trainees

The Army is increasing its search for officer and enlisted personnel qualified for training as pilots for the Army Aviation Program, according to a message received at The Infantry School from CONARC.

The message, addressed to commandants of 10 major Army schools, is a follow-up to a letter from Gen. Herbert B. Powell, in which the CONARC commander stressed the need for additional applications by qualified officer and enlisted personnel for flight training at the U. S. Army Aviation School, Fort Rucker.

In addition to the procurement program under way at The Infantry School and Infantry Center, the message requested orientation instruction be presented to students attending officer candidate courses, branch orientations and career and associate career classes.

In this instruction, the message said, the Army Aviation Program and the current need for qualified officers in the program should be especially stressed.

It also pointed out that pilot training is open to qualified enlisted personnel who would receive promotions to warrant officer upon successful completion.

Special attention is to be given to all applications, according to the message which recommended that applicants assure that all items on physical examination records are completed to establish minimum processing time.

Gen. Powell previously explained that considerable expansion was expected in Army aviation activities. As a result of the CONARC commander's forecast for the need of additional flight officers, Major Gen. Ben Harrell, Infantry Center commanding general, initiated an orientation program here in which interested personnel were assisted by staff officers of the Lawson Army Aviation Command.

N. Y. Increases State's Benefits To Servicemen

NEW YORK (AFPS)— The New York State Legislature has passed a number of proposals designed to expand state assistance to New York servicemen on active duty, and to their families.

The legislation, which was signed into law by Governor Nelson A. Rockefeller, includes the following:

An extension of the present scholarship program for children of deceased and disabled veterans, which will provide $450 annual scholarships to qualifying children of members of the Armed Forces serving in the period beginning Oct. 1, 1961. The number of scholarships available each year is increased from 100 to 500.

Military pay up to $100 per month received after Oct. 1, 1961 is now exempt from state personal income tax.

The protection of the New York Soldiers and Sailors Civil Relief Act against eviction which applied to dwellings with a monthly rent not above $80 has been raised to $125 per month.

The present law concerning non-forfeiture of life insurance policies has been increased from $5,000 to $10,000 to conform with Federal law.

Lump sum payments for accrued vacation and overtime credits will now be available to state employes at the time of their entry into active service.

An extension of service credit in the New York Employes Retirement System to state and certain other employees who belong to the system and serve in the Armed Forces during the period beginning Oct. 1, 1961.

Complete information on these new laws may be obtained from the New York State Division of Veteran's Affairs, 155 Washington Ave., Albany 10, N. Y.

Negotiation Completed For University Center

Classes Slated to Begin In Early January, 1962

Fort Benning and American University officials have completed negotiations for the establishment of an American University Center on the post.

It is planned that The Center, a four-year residence degree-granting institution, will begin operation here next month.

Enrollment will be limited to military personnel and their dependents.

Instructors for the institution will be recruited locally.

The signing of the contract to bring an American University Center to the post is the culmination of several attempts by post officials to establish a four-year college level program on the reservation.

Major Gen. Ben Harrell, post commander, recently wrote to the American University, requesting a center be opened on the post in January.

Post officials feel there would be an initial enrollment of approximately 300 students, with some enrolling in more than one course. They anticipate an increase to 500 students within one year.

The estimate of the expected increase is based on mark-

MSGT. JESSIE T. McCASKILL

Benning Sergeant Awarded ASME Plaque After 6th Try

MSgt. Jesse T. McCaskill, Third Army Advanced Marksmanship Unit, has been honored by the American Society of Military Engineers as the ranking engineer in the field of rifle marksmanship in 1961.

During ceremonies held at headquarters of the 151st Engineer Group, Sgt. McCaskill, long-time member of the Corps of Engineers and crack competitive marksman, was presented the ASME Trophy awarded to the high engineer of any of the military services in the President's Match fired each year during the National Rifle Matches at Camp Perry, Ohio.

Presentation of the famous trophy, fashioned from a German mortar captured by engineers in World War I, was made by Burton J. Bell of Atlanta, technical liaison officer, Corps of Engineers, who represented the society.

Bell also presented Sgt. McCaskill with a medal miniature of the trophy which the engineer will retain if he has to relinquish his hold on the award in the future.

In expressing his thanks for the honors accorded by the society, the Third Army rifle coach said he had tried five times to win the coveted trophy in the past and finally won out on his sixth try in the 1961 match.

Some 3,000 riflemen competed in the match, the major trophy for which is a personal letter from the President of the United States.

Sgt. McCaskill compiled a score of 149 out of a possible 150 points and put 11 of his 30 shots in the tie-breaking V-ring at 200, 300 and 600-yard ranges to win the Engineer Trophy, a special medal for placing within the first 10 places. A shoulder brassard is

New Troop Information Plan Distributed on Post

Troop Information quarterly plan for third quarter, FY 62, (January 1 to March 30, 1962) has been published and distributed by the post Information Section for implementation at major subordinate command level.

The plan emphasizes the Army Air Defense and Modernization with stress on the Army's role and effort in these fields.

One topic, Communist Exploitation of Youth, is included in the plan. The specific objective of this topic is to develop in each soldier his belief in the principles of American democracy and freedom and to alert him to the threat of Communism to America and the free world.

The plan also urges commanders to devote a portion of the program to meeting the information needs of Army National Guard and Army Reserve personnel recently called to active duty.

Commanders have been advised to insert topics appropriate to their mission and activities in the event certain prescribed topics are not considered applicable to their local program.

CONARC troop topic, Soldier: Why You Serve, has been cited as important instructional material to personnel who have recently entered the Army.

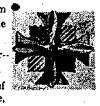
The customary displays of student supplies are overshadowed by Christmas merchandise.

Books are there, and many of them suitable for gifts, but the emphasis is on luxury items.

Take hollow-ware, for instance, both domestic and imported. There are silver pitchers, ice buckets, coffee service, sugar and creamers, trays and serving pieces of all kinds.

There are wash-and-wear fatigues, just like Dad's, in sizes from two to 12. They are full-fashioned and authentic in detail. An accompanying fatigue cap completes the suit.

For the men of the family, there are pen and pencil sets, desk sets with name plate, and officer candidate and Infantry School class rings.



To help set the stage for a joyful Christmas, Book Department officials have assembled a large selection of holiday decorations, suitable for doorways mantels, centerpieces or window ledges.

Gift wrappings of all kinds are available, as well as a gift wrapping service.

Also on sale is The Infantry School Christmas card. It features a picture of the school building. The "Follow Me" emblem is on the envelope flap.

For the duration of the Christmas shopping season, hours at the Book Department will be from 9 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays; 9 a.m. to 7:30 p.m., Tuesdays and Thursdays, and 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturdays.

The Distinguished Flying Cross is awarded to any member of the Army who distinguishes himself by heroism or extraordinary achievement while participating in an aerial flight.

The medal, left, consists of a four-bladed propeller on a bronze cross.

The ribbon has alternate stripes of blue, white, blue, white, red, white, blue, white, blue.

For the literary minded personnel stationed here, Ohio State University is offering a prize of $2,500 for the best book-length manuscript on "National Security," according to the Armed Forces Press Service.

Manuscripts need not be limited only to the military threat; they may be a treatment of other angles of the problem, such as economic, political, ideological, scientific or diplomatic.

Partially completed or proposed works will not be accepted and the committee has reserved the right to withhold the award if no work of satisfactory quality is submitted.

Ohio State University Press will publish the prize-winning manuscript, with royalties going to the author.

April 2, 1962, is the contest deadline. All entries must be original scripts, double-spaced on white opaque paper, 8 and one half by 11 inches in length.

Manuscripts should be mailed to the Mershon Committee, Ohio State University Press, 164 West 19th Ave., Columbus 10, Ohio.

This should be a good chance for some Soldier with a literary flair to show what he can do.

Major Major

Captain Raymond L. Major is no longer Captain Major; he's now Major Major. Sound like a tongue twister? Well, it's true. Captain. . . er. . . that is. . . Major Major, who works in the S-4 Section of 1st Infantry Brigade, was recently promoted.

So, if you are referred to Major Major, the person isn't stuttering — Major Major is really Major Major.

Lincoln's Memorial Spans 55 Years

"Don't put the memorial here, boys. Why, the malarial ague from these mosquitoes would shake it to pieces."

This was the view of the colorful speaker of the House, "Uncle Joe" Cannon, when the Lincoln Memorial Commission created by Congress in 1911 was seeking a site for one of the century's most imposing shrines.

But Uncle Joe lost out; the swamp by the Potomac was the chosen site, and the area was reclaimed and filled to extend the Mall westward.

Actual construction of the massive marble structure with its 36 Doric columns—representing the number of states in the Union when Lincoln died—began in 1915, and the memorial was finally dedicated on Memorial Day of 1922. But the project itself was much older than that.

In 1867, only two years after the 16th President's assassination, proposals for a memorial to him had been made. A nationwide appeal for donations by the public, to be made through postmasters, went out.

That same turbulent year, however, opened the Reconstruction Period — years of political bitterness and turmoil—and plans for a fitting memorial had to give way to more pressing issues. They only took real shape when Congress acted in 1911.

What emerged in the years that followed is one of our greatest man-made national treasures, one that attracts some two and one-half million visitors a year. Its architect, Henry Bacon, created a majestic temple in the classic tradition, fronted by a long pool and facing up the Mall to the Washington Monument.

But of course its most majestic feature is Daniel Chester French's great seated figure of Lincoln, measuring 19 feet from the top of his head to the tip of his boots. Although it took 28 blocks of Georgia marble, the sculptor fitted the stone so perfectly that it seems of a single piece. The lighting of it, which French worked seven years to perfect, enhances the work's brooding dignity.

Brig. Gen. David Sarnoff Tells:

How You Can Help Your Country

Destiny has imposed a great mission upon the men and women of the Armed Forces, as it has upon all Americans and their government: The preservation and strengthening of democratic freedom and the defeat of tyrannical world communism, by peaceful means if at all possible. The awesome truth of our time is that either we will fulfill this mission energetically and fearlessly or we will fall ignobly into an era in which ideological dogma replaces free inquiry, political demands supplant human aspirations, and mass man smothers the individual.

Among the many steps that could be taken by individual American, both within the Armed Services and without, to help their country in this stand out in my mind as distinct and different in their relevance to the central reality of our time: the struggle between communism and freedom.

First, we must know the enemy.

The Communists, whatever their tactics in a particular period, have never deviated from their fundamental purpose. It has been openly proclaimed from Lenin's day to Khrushchev's. It is, in the words of the official Moscow magazine "Kommunist," "implacable struggle" looking to "the inevitable end of capitalism and the total triumph of communism."

The illusion still persists that the Cold War can be "called off." But the plain truth is that the Kremlin itself could not call it off without abandoning the Communist conspiracy to dominate the world — without, that is, ceasing to be Communists.

Such a challenge can be met and overcome only if each of us understands its full import and the compelling need for adequate counter-measures. This understanding can be developed through discriminating reading about the enemy and about our own traditions; studying, both in formal classes and informal discussions, the nature of the challenge confronting us. Only in this way can the allegiance of the heart which we call patriotism be made fully effective through a fusion with the allegiance of the mind.

Second, we must be willing to sacrifice.

The safeguarding of our cherished freedoms cannot be bought cheaply, nor can it be bought once and for all. Each generation of Americans must be ready to purchase it anew, paying when necessary in the coin of life and treasure.

To win the Cold War—and win it we must — will call for substantial sacrifices in material terms. But the notion that it will require a deep cut in living standards —either for military or civilian personnel — underestimates the wealth and productive genius of our country. The more demanding sacrifices, indeed, will be in the psychological and moral domains. Our people, in short, will have to renounce complacency, euphoria and illusion. They will have to embrace the grim but inspiring realities of our epoch.

May it never be said of us, as Marshal Petain said of his countrymen after the fall of France in 1940: "Our spirit of enjoyment was greater than our spirit of sacrifice. We wanted to have, more than we wanted to give. We spared effort and we met disaster."

Third, we must cultivate a deeper appreciation of moral and spiritual values.

No one denies that we need the best military hardware that science can produce to guarantee our survival. But this will prove tragically inadequate if it is not backed by the hardware of the spirit.

Regardless of how dramatically the known and accessible universe may be enlarged, the center of that universe remains man himself.

The Guardsman That Guards Twice

Armed Services Can Share Honor to Hofstadter

This year's Nobel Prize for Physics is shared by Dr. Robert Hofstadter, Professor of Physics at California's Stanford University, and it is an honor the Armed Forces can view with pride asd satisfaction. For Dr. Hofstadter's 10 years of research into the mystery of the hidden structure of matter was conducted with Navy and Air Force support.

The program involved the construction at Stanford of an enormous, 300-foot long, high-energy linear accelerator which produced electrons for Dr. Hofstadter's measurements of atomic nuclei and nucleons. The Office of Naval Research initiated this construction project in 1946, and it still administers the program.

The accelerator—for years the largest of its type in the world — was completed with funds from the ONR, the Atomic Energy Commission and the Air Force's Office of Aerospace Research. Thus two branches of the Armed Forces contributed directly to Dr. Hofstadter's experiments which have provided the first direct measurements of the size and structure of protons and neutrons and have contributed to man's deeper understanding of nature's basic forces.

Dr. Hofstadter's achievement, which places him in the ranks of the world's scientific elite, dramatizes our role as members of the military in helping science push forward to new horizons. It is more than a matter of strictly financial backing — in this case the California professor's experiments were greatly simplified and made less costly by his use of Navy surplus gun mounts as rotating platforms for two large magnets which measured the energy of electrons scattered by the nuclei.

Close and friendly rapport between U. S. scientific and military groups in a tradition of long standing. Each, in their way, work for a world of peace and enlightenment. Dr. Hofstadter, bringing distinction to his profession and to his country, has a resounding "Well done!" from the armed services.

700 Students Yearly Receive New Map Course

For skywriters and cotton pickers sunset means the end of a working day. For cattle rustlers and snipe hunters it means the beginning. But the Infantryman's working day has neither beginning nor end.

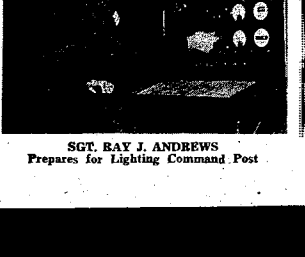
For him, sunset means only that he must prepare for the dark of night. If he is not prepared, it is a time of terror. But if he is prepared, he can use this blackness as a cloak of invisibility to hide his movements from the enemy.

The Map Reading Committee of the Special Subjects Department recently developed a new course in Night Navigation. Each year 7000 officer and enlisted students receive this training.

Before a class reaches the training area, the students are organized into groups of three who will work together through the evening of night navigation.

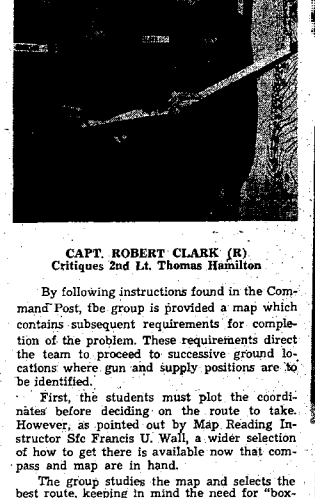
The students are familiar with the principles of daylight navigation, and similar principles are applied at night. However, according to Capt. James H. Bremer, an instructor on the committee, it is necessary to introduce additional ideas such as the use of the stars, presetting the compass for night use, azimuth "offset" techniques and "box in" principles.

Following the short conference, students are oriented in the practical work of the evening, and then—they're on their way.



Practical work begins with a compass march. One group proceeds to a designated starting point, and, from this point the group is required to move on a magnetic azimuth for a specified distance without use of a map.

Most groups accomplish this move by teamwork. One man handles the compass and directs one of the others out on the desired azimuth and uses him as an aiming point. When he is satisfied that the second man is located on the correct azimuth, he and the third man move forward to join him. The third man counts the paces. This process is repeated until the team arrives at its objective.



Frequently it becomes necessary to offset the azimuth. This is one technique whereby a calculated error is introduced to cause the navigator to arrive at the right or left of an objective located along a linear feature such as a road, ridge, valley or stream.

Upon reaching the linear feature, it is then a simple matter to turn in the appropriate direction to locate the desired point. At the objective the three students will find a small building identified as a "Command Post."

Inside the red-illuminated shack, maintained by Assistant Instructor Sgt. Ray J. Andrews, the team will find an enlarged map of the area with a solution that tells if it has arrived at the correct destination. By map study and self-critique, the group is able to determine errors committed.

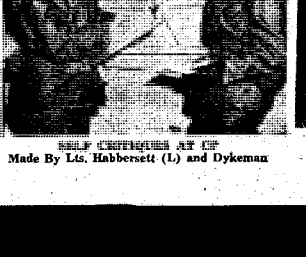
CAPT. ROBERT CLARK (R)
Critiques 2nd Lt. Thomas Hamilton

By following instructions found in the Command Post, the group is provided a map which contains subsequent requirements for completion of the problem. These requirements direct the team to proceed to successive ground locations where gun and supply positions are to be identified.



First, the students must plot the coordinates before deciding on the route to take. However, as pointed out by Map Reading Instructor Sfc Francis U. Wall, a wider selection of how to get there is available now that compass and map are in hand.

The group studies the map and selects the best route, keeping in mind the need for "boxing yourself in" which was strongly stressed by Instructor Capt. Robert H. Clark.

This technique provides a method whereby the navigator selects prominent terrain features perpendicular and parallel to the route of advance to serve as check points and guides to ensure location and proper direction.

Having applied this and other techniques and principles of navigation, the wiser yet usually frayed, wet, and fatigued team arrives some three hours later at its real objective—the finish point.

"Since the inception of the course in July 1961, I am convinced that the new night navigation course is of far greater value than previous practical work in preparing Infantry leaders for night operation," stated Lt. Col. Carroll D. Sbealy, Chairman of the Map Reading Committee.

Barbara Hare's Report Card...

Wallis McClain steps into the spotlight this week as the subject of today's REPORT CARD. This talented Baker High senior is the son of Lt. Colonel and Mrs. W. McClain.

Wallis was born in Paducah, Ky. on August 5, 1944, and calls this "home". He has two brothers, David who is a Freshman at Baker and Donnie who attends Faith.

During his freshman and sophomore years, and part of his Junior year, Wallis attended high school in Lawton, Okla. He was the Valedictorian of his junior high school graduating class. Wallis was the president of the freshman class which was one of the highest offices that his fellow students could have elected him to hold. He was also a member of the board for mechanical drawing.

When he was a sophomore, Wallis was named "Outstanding Sophomore of the Year." He was a member of the Latin club. A very active member of the National Honor Society, Wallis was elected to the board of directors and was one of six delegates who attended the National Honor Society state convention. He was also a delegate from Lawton's chapter in his Junior year. Before leaving in January '61, Wallis was the drum major of the school's band and was a member of the French club.

Upon coming to Benning, Wallis entered the junior class at Baker High School. He helped to organize the French club and was elected president of this new club. He was also a member of the National Honor Society. Besides the National Honor Society, Wallis holds membership this year in the chemistry club, debate club, French club, and Junior Civitan club. He is the President of the band and is the new drum major.

Last year he received a certificate of merit from the University of Georgia. This year he received a certificate of achievement from the National Merit Scholarship program. He was selected as one of the individuals from Baker to participate in the National Counsel of Teachers of English award.

Music is one of Wallis's chief interests. Having played the Alto-Sax since the sixth grade, he has won many awards for his musical ability. During his freshman and sophomore years, he was rated superior in district and state music solo festival. He also played in the school's dance band. Last year he was elected to the all-state band. At present he plays regularly in the Knights of Jazz dance band which is sponsored by the Optimist Club.

This year Wallis' schedule includes band, English IV, American history, French II, advanced math, and chemistry.

Before living at Benning, the McClains have resided in Oklahoma, North Carolina, Germany and Fort Lewis, Wash. Last summer Wallis attended the summer science workshop at Auburn, University.

Besides music, Wallis' hobbies are photography, stamps, planes, and reading. He attends the Follow-Me-Club, and the Main Post Protestant Chapel.

In the future he plans to go to Vanderbilt University located in Nashville, Tenn., and become a doctor.

Wallis said concerning education, "I think that it is a student's business to be selfish as far as his education is concerned. With 12 years of elementary and secondary education and possibly four more years of college, a student has to strive to make the best of every opportunity to gain knowledge. It is the student of today's primary concern to better the world in which we live. In this respect I think that each pupil should busy himself with his own education and momentarily disregard what the crowd does."

The McClains live at 405 Lumpkin Road on Main Post. Lt. Col. McClain is battalion commander of the 2nd Howitzer battalion, 10th Artillery, First Infantry Brigade.

Athough Wallis has been a "Benningite" less than a year, he has become an active member of the Baker High student body.

Medical Wives Hold Coffee

The Fort Benning Medical Wives Club had a coffee at the Custer Terrace Branch of the Main Officers' Open Mess Friday December 8, sponored by the 428th Medical Battalion wives.

Mrs. Raymond J. Caldbeck was chairman.

Other hostesses were Mesdames Edgar Bunger, Leaton Cofield, Charles Ogden, Charles Braden and Leroy Barber.

Decorations were suggestive of the season with a "Mr. and Mrs. Santa Claus" and simple arrangements of red berries in silvered containers.

Newcomers welcomed were Mrs. Jack Edgar, Mrs. Harold Elmore and Mrs. Edgar Fonde.

Mrs. John Patton, whose husband, Col. Patton, is chief of the Department of Surgery at Walter Reed General Hospital, Washington, D. C., was the guest of Mrs. William A. Todd Jr.

Christmas Eve at Benning Manor Is Woman's Club Luncheon Theme

The calendar was rolled back more than 100 years at Fort Benning recently as approximately 450 members and guests of the Woman's Club celebrated "Christmas Eve at Benning Manor."

The occasion was the December luncheon meeting of the club at the Main Officers' Open Mess. The "celebration" was a musical skit written by Mrs. Wallace L. Lancaster.

The scene was laid in an ante-bellum plantation home. The time was December 24, 1856.

The main ballroom of the officers' mess was decorated as the exterior of a typical Southern mansion.

Brick paper covered the front wall of the room. An authentic front door was flanked by lighted casement windows. Four white columns supported a balcony, approached by two winding, iron-grilled stairways.

Announced by a narrator, Mrs. Arthur A. Tritsch, 18 members of the Woman's Club Choral Group and eight little girls from the School of Dance acted out the arrival of relatives and neighbors to spend Christmas at Benning Manor.

In authentic period costumes, the choral group sang "Twelve Days of Christmas."

The dancers wore full skirts and long hose. Their hair was dressed in the demure "little girl" styles of 100 years ago. Mrs. Howard H. Wilson directed the dancers.

"Benning Manor slaves" in aprons and kerchiefs sang "watch" songs, the only truly American Christmas music, according to Mrs. Lancaster.

The "watch" songs included the spirituals, "Baby Born Today," "Rise Up an' Foller" and "Go Tell it on the Mountain."

In the olden days, the slaves sang these songs on Christmas Eve, in the expectation that Christ would return to earth at midnight, Mrs. Lancaster said.

The "watch" kept by the slaves on Christmas Eve has been perpetuated in many communities as a "Watch Night" service on New Year's Eve, she added.

Traditional Christmas carols completed the musical skit, with the singers spotlighted on the balcony.

Theme of a plantation home was carried out in decorations throughout the officers' mess.

An antique spinning wheel stood by an open fireplace. Mrs. George Skipworth sat in a ladder backed chair, operating the wheel and rocking a cradle by pulling a card.

A mural depicted a scene in a cotton field.

In one room there was a manger scene before a stained glass window.

Luncheon tables were lighted by candles placed in frosted old-fashioned lamp chimneys. The only other illumination came from muted red and green bracket lights on the walls.

Heading the decorating committee was Mrs. James H. Phillips.

On the East Porch, a Christmas bazaar was held before the luncheon.

Items on display included handmade felt aprons, Christmas stockings, ceramics, molded candles and holiday decorations of all kinds.

Mrs. Wallis E. McClain was in charge of the bazaar.

Guests of honor included Mrs. Ben. Harrell, Mrs. Royal Reynolds, Mrs. A. D. Surles Jr., Mrs. John E. Kelly, Mrs. John L. Waldrop and Mrs. Barbara Riegle.

Hostesses for the luncheon were wives of Medical Services officers, with Mrs. William A. Todd, Jr., as chairman.

Mrs. Cyril D. Sterner, Woman's Club president, presided at the luncheon.

Weapons Department Lunch Features Christmas Theme

Ladies of The Infantry School's Weapons Department held a luncheon last Friday at the Main Officers' Open Mess.

Hostesses were ladies of the Small Arms Committee, under the direction of Mrs. Paul T. Ingle. Mrs. Francis H. Douglas and Mrs. William W. Gray were co-chairmen.

Mrs. Robert D. Wood and Mrs. Franklin A. Flesher were welcomed as new members.

A Christmas theme was carried out in the table decorations of ornamented pink Christmas trees and pink candles. Gold boughs graced the length of the tables to complete the arrangement.

Mrs. James E. Morrow discussed inside Christmas decorating. She explained predominant theme and color in decorating, ways children could help with decorating, and integrating the arrangements for mantel, door and table with the tree and packages.

The ladies were asked to make centerpieces with materials furnished their tables. Those constructing the most original centerpiece received Christmas corsages as prizes.

Etiquette

Questions Answered

This is the third in the series on questions concerning Christmas-card sending.

What do you think of religious Christmas cards? They're most appropriate. Christmas, after all, is a most sacred holiday. I prefer religious cards that are recognizable art, such as Raphael's "Madonna". Some others I find over-sentimental. I understand why many religious persons are offended by flippant Christmas cards or those that try to commercialize on the birth of Christ. Many of these cards are in bad taste, regardless of your religious belief.

Do you approve handmade Christmas cards? Yes, indeed. The person receiving it is usually flattered that you took the time and trouble to make it yourself. I have seen many delightful as well as useful handmade cards that also serve as bookmarks, decorations, or card holders.

Are family photographs really correct to send as Christmas cards? Of course. For many years I have been sending this type of sentimental keepsake. Some of my friends save these cards as a record of my children's year-to-year growth.

What do you think of the printed or mimeographed "family newsletter" type of Christmas card? It can be very nice if done in good taste. I also send this type of card. Especially when we have moved or traveled to interesting places during the year that can be described entertainingly. It is important not to let this type of card-letter become an egomania, and for this reason I write mine in the third person. Leave out the things which will sound too boastful and write about a humorous incident involving the family instead, for actually you must be a bit of a story writer to make it worth reading.

What about original verse on Christmas cards? It can be delightful if it's good or amusing. Unfortunately, some rich or pretentious people write some very bad verse each year and try to immortalize it on an expensive Christmas card.

Is colored ink in good taste on Christmas cards? Certainly, red or green add a sparkle to your signature, message, or the envelope of your card.

Should Christmas cards be mailed sealed or unsealed? A Christmas card, like any other enveloped communication to a friend, should be given the dignity of first class postage.

Woman's Club Diary

The overflow crowd at last week's Christmas Luncheon and Bazaar enjoyed both the beautiful decorations and the program, written and directed by Mrs. Wallace Lancaster. The ladies of the Choral Group shone in a program of both traditional and American Christmas Carols. Mrs. Howard Wilson's School of Dance students were delightful as the children of a hundred years ago. Quite the most beautiful luncheon I have attended at Fort Benning.

Our School of Dance is accepting registrations from children of all military and civilian personnel at Fort Benning. Classes in Tap, Toe, and Ballet are offered to both beginning and advanced students from three years old and up. Call Mrs. John Boken, MU 9-7452 for information.

Mrs. Gilmore from Tot Town Nursery called to remind me that the nursery will have special party hours for New Year's Eve. The facilities will open at 6 p.m. and remain open until 3 a.m. for your convenience. Children will be accepted on a reservation basis only, so if you are planning to use the Nursery, better call now for a reservation.

Charm and Modelling classes will begin in early January. Call Mrs. B. F. Dobson for information, MU 9-7340.

Ladies of the Officers' Wives Club of The Infantry School Ground Mobility Department were entertained December 7 by Mrs. Vernon Mergler in her home.

The serving table, overlaid with white linen, was appointed in silver. The Christmas centerpiece was done not in the traditional greens and reds of the season, but in pink and lent a delicate but festive air to the room.

Mrs. Henry P. Kulchinski Jr. presided at the head of the table.

Christmas Program Set Tonight

At Concord Outpost

Division Artillery Slates Firepower Demonstration

Division Infantry and Armor units Tuesday will have a chance to see —first-hand—exactly what support is available to them, artillery-wise.

The occasion is a firepower demonstration at Concord Outpost by the big, potent guns of Division Artillery.

This will mark the first time that Division Artillery has been used in full force for demonstration purposes, said Major Carl A. Forslund, assistant fire support coordinator and demonstration conductor. More than 2,000 men, representing all Infantry battle groups, cavalry and armor units, will attend the demonstration, scheduled for 1 p.m. Tuesday.

The objective of this demonstration, said Major Forslund, will be to show division troops exactly what firepower is available to them for support.

"Every leader — from the commander down to the platoon sergeant — will be able to see the firing of each artillery piece, as well as how it's used and when it is used," he said.

Participating will be 64 cannons, ranging from the 105 millimeter howitzer to the 8-inch howitzer. Also taking part will be the heavy mortar platoon from the 11th Infantry's Combat Support Company.

Colonel Frank A. Ormanski, Division Artillery commander, is in charge of the demonstration.

The event will be repeated sometime in February, said Major Forslund, for men unable to attend Tuesday's demonstration.

Div Overshoots '61 Blood Goal

The 2nd Division has surpassed — by 741 pints — it's 1961 Bloodmobile goal.

The visit last Thursday and Friday of the American Red Cross Bloodmobile netted 634 pints, according to Sergeant Henry Kile, division safety NCO. This was added to the division's already-collected total of 3,117 pints.

On previous trips, 702 pints were donated in February, 634 pints in April, 608 pints in June, 575 in August and 598 in October. The goal of each visit was 500 pints.

Event Includes Caroling, Band Concert, Lighting

The 2nd Infantry Division's program of Christmas music and caroling will be held tonight at division headquarters parade field.

All post personnel and the general public have been invited to attend the event, to begin at 6:30 p.m.

Throw Switch

At the program, Major General Charles H. Chase, division commanding general, will throw the switch to light the area's Christmas decorations.

Simultaneously, a command will go out over the command radio net for the division's units to turn on their lights.

The program is beginning with a band concert by the 2nd Infantry Division band under the direction of Chief Warrant Officer Mariano Morales.

Chaplain (Major) Clement P. J. Krug, assistant division chaplain, will give the invocation.

"The Christmas music and caroling program is to include community singing of such carols as "O Little Town of Bethlehem," "The First Noel," "Hark the Herald Angels Sing," "It Came Upon A Midnight Clear," "Silent Night," and "O Tannenbaum."

Specialist Four Lester B. Gibbs will lead the singing, while Specialist Four Eddie L. Mabry will provide organ music. Both are chaplains assistants.

Chaplain (Lieutenant Colonel) James H. Piser will read "The Christmas Story."

Following the benediction, rendered by Chaplain (Major) Alfred P. Lam, refreshments will be served before a guided tour of the 2nd Division area to view Christmas decorations is conducted.

The tour—for which five bus-

Command Post Exercise Echo Played This Week By Div.

The 2nd Division this week continued to put more practical experience under its tactical belt with the play of Command Post Exercise "Echo."

Ending yesterday, the two-day exercise sought as training objectives:

1. To establish and operate communications nets at normal distances and to minimize processing and transmission time of messages.

2. To provide the division staff practice in the complete, more timely dissemination of information orders, and

3. To provide practice in the preparation of estimates and orders and the displacement of the Division Command Post.

'Realistic Situation'

Brigade Headquarters, which had charge of "Echo," was to furnish "sufficient information and orders" to provide a realistic tactical situation to cause actions and reactions on the part of the division staff.

The general situation, in essence, evolved around the division's being part of a hypothetical Army corps which had been in a defensive position for four days in a section of Germany. The division was to react to attacks, which were to include penetrations, infiltrations and rear area raids. After receiving a Corps attack order, the division was to make staff estimates, prepare and publish a division order.

Participation - wise, primary emphasis was to be placed on the activities of the Division Headquarters and supporting elements. Headquarters participation was to include a Division Tactical Operations Center, Fire Support Control Center, G-1, G-4, G-5, Division Trains Headquarters, Division Logistical Control Center, signal support and message center.

Division Artillery, along with all battle groups, the 2nd Engineer Battalion, 69th Armor, 7th Cavalry and 2nd Aviation Company, were to furnish

9th Infantry's Company E Develops New Means of Communications, 'Pack Radio'

BY CAPT. FRANK G. WHITELEY

"26, this is 6. Move to your left front and screen that critical area . . . 36, this is 6. Shift left to cover gap, over."

"This is 6, wilco, out."

"This is 36, wilco, out."

During the time it took you to read those first three lines the entire frontage of an attacking company was shifted, and the direction of the attack was altered. Before "36" received his instruction, the gap had already been created by the left flank platoon. We were Infantry troops mounted in APC's using our own communications.

How?

How was this possible? How could the commander be assured of instantaneous reaction? Could he be sure the radio operator would get the message right? How could the message be heard and understood?

The Combat Pack Radio was developed by Company E, 2nd Battle Group, 9th Infantry, during the Intensified Combat Training Program (ICTP). For 14 weeks there were daily opportunities to improvise and experiment and test ideas to improve our communication capability. One idea was tested that turned out to work successfully under all conditions.

The Combat Pack Radio is exactly what the name implies. It is a combat pack with an AN-PRC — 10 radio inside. Take off the bottom part of the PRC-10, invert it, tape it to the top portion, insert the battery connecting cable, put the works in a pack and stick on a pair of earphones.

The chest set (Chest Set Group AN-G86 earphones come as components to the AN-VP —3) and earphones give the commander three footmobile stations with an inherent intercom capability.

We use an abbreviated radio procedure when talking on the direct net. In the attack, the platoon leaders carried the radio so that they, not their operators, knew exactly where and what the company as a whole was doing. There was no "Wait Out" when you called someone. The whole thing is just like what airplane pilots have: push, talk, loud and clear transmissions directly to the platoon leader. Try it. The company was credited by the Umpire for having outstanding communications during the Army Training Test.

Captain Whiteley is commander of the 9th Infantry's Company E.

Kiddie Christmas Party Planned Wed. by 23rd

By 23rd Infantry PIO

The 23rd Infantry is going all out with plans for a Kiddie Christmas Party next week.

The party will be held Wednesday at Service Club Two beginning at 2 p.m. All children of 23rd Infantry personnel are invited to the party, and an impressive array of surprises and entertainment is in store for them.

'CoCo'

According to the tentative schedule, CoCo the Clown will be on hand to perform. Christmas movies will be shown and an accordion band composed of children will play. The accordion band is under the direction of Mrs. Jo Collins and has made several local appearances, including television shows.

Of course, Santa Claus will arrive to highlight the occasion, and he will hold special consultations with all good little boys and girls. He will give presents to the small fry, also.

There will be plenty of soft drinks and cookies to refresh the guests. Approximately 300 children are anticipated with a majority of them being 10 years old and under.

Funds from last month's battle group Cake Bake Sale will be used to finance the Christmas party. Taking an active role in preparing the party are the wives of battle group personnel.

Christian Fellowship Plans Caroling Visits

By 23rd Infantry PIO

Caroling and visiting the sick are on the Sand Hill Christian Fellowship's agenda for Christmas Eve.

The Fellowship, composed of approximately 30 men from the Sand Hill area, plans to visit every ward in Martin Army Hospital during the night before Christmas, singing carols and visiting with the sick. Also, a speaking choir will present a portion of the Christmas Story as taken from the Bible.

Santa

Climaxing the visit will be an appearance by ol' Santa himself, who will dispense gifts to the bedridden. The Fellowship will then be taken to Service Club Two for refreshments.

Additional voices are needed for the singing, and all interested persons are encouraged to attend the next Fellowship meeting for details. The Fellowship meets at 6 p.m. every Sunday night at Chapel Three.

Aside from practicing for special events such as the Christmas caroling, the Fellowship has guest speakers and vocal groups from local Columbus area churches, sees films and conducts Bible quizzes at its weekly meetings. Refreshments furnished by the Protestant Women of the Chapel are served after each session. Chaplains in the Sand Hill area are in charge of the Fellowship.

Kelley Hill Club Tells Coming Holiday Plans

By 57th Inf PIO

Although many soldiers in the Kelley Hill area will be away on holiday leave, Service Club Four at Kelley Hill has planned a complete Christmas program.

Right now, the service club, under the supervision of Miss Elizabeth Shanks, has initiated a gift-wrapping service, available to everyone. During the hours of operation, daily from 1 p.m. to 10 p.m., Miss Shanks supervises a small band of Columbus volunteers who will wrap all kinds of packages, big or small. The only thing you have to provide is the stamps.

For the big holiday week, the club plans to have a Christmas Eve party on December 24th. Holiday activities will continue all through the week, and include a Christmas buffet supper on Dec. 25, dance instructions, games of all kinds and open house parties at which servicemen are welcomed to bring guests. The fun will run right up to the last minute of the year, with a party scheduled for New Years night.

CRAZY DRIVERS

"I'm not worried about my own driving. It's the crazy drivers I meet that scare me."

Yet the figures show most holiday drivers meet death at their own hands, through excessive speed, distractions, bad judgment.

The Holidays COULD Be a Time of Cheer, IF...

By Clay Lacy

Once again the annual season of bright lights, festive occasions and gayly-wrapped presents is upon the 2nd Infantry Division as the Indianhead unit prepares to enjoy the Christmas-New Year holidays. It will be a time of laughter, of song and good cheer. But not for YOU!

NOT FOR ME, you say. But why not? After all, you recall, I've always gotten a bang out of the carolers filling the crisp December air with Yuletide music, always felt the goosebumps on my skin when the spirit of Christmas overcame me.

Not For You!

But, it's true. All the festivities of this year's celebration will not be for you. That is, if you are one of the following:

You're leaving the post for a wonderful stay with the homefolks over the holidays. Your leave papers are signed and in your wallet. It's great to be alive! In fact, you still are chuckling over the party last night, denoting your coming vacation. Boy, it was a blast! Didn't get in until four in the morning.

The car purrs along the taut ribbon of highway as you drive toward your destination. You're relaxed and even a little drowsy. Oh, well, you tell yourself, when I get home I'll stay in bed for a full day to make up the rest I lost. Hmmmmm, so restful.

The car careened off the side of the road, struck a tree, hit the ditch, rolled crazily through the air and came to rest on its side. Result, one Soldier's leave ended abruptly in death — his.

Such incidents are recorded each year during the holiday season. These are not statistics, these are human beings, destroyed in the prime of life.

Again, you will NOT enjoy this wonderful season if you:

Are spending the evening with the light of your life at the local drive in movie. The picture is that one you were waiting to see; your girl friend is cuddled close, a box of popcorn sits on the dashboard.

It's one of those cold December evenings that come to Georgia at this time of year. That doesn't bother you since the good old car heater is really putting out the warmth. And you sure picked a great spot at the drive-in, way to the rear in the corner.

The movie had been ended after the second showing for 30 minutes when the attendant made a final check of the lot and found the car. Two people appeared to be asleep inside. But when he opened the door, the horrible truth became apparent. Two young people's lives snuffed out by asphyxiation.

This happened locally only a year ago under similar circumstances. Only it was four young people who died. Two were Soldiers.

Precautions

Therefore, if you would have a truly Merry Christmas and a coming New Year filled with hopes for the future, observe Safety precautions in all your activities during the coming holidays. Some are as follows:

1. Plan your driving trips carefully with attention paid to road conditions and the traffic. If you must drive at night, take frequent rest stops, getting out of your car at each stop.

2. When using heating devices in your car or at home, provide ample ventilation. In the car, keep the side vents open. At home, open a window at least six inches.

3. Check electrical outlets carefully when decorating for Christmas. Watch for overloaded circuits.

4. Allow plenty of time for return trips after your vacation. Long stretches of uninterrupted driving are tiring and make the driver less alert.

And, whatever you do, make this holiday season a SAFE one.

Safety Quiz

Must Pedestrian Yield At Unmarked Crosswalk?

(This traffic quiz was prepared by the 2nd Division Provost Marshal's Office in an attempt to better acquaint you with the safe and legal methods of operating a motor vehicle. All information is taken from Fort Benning Pamphlet FB-P-385-3, Vehicle Registration and Traffic Regulations.)

True or False

1. A driver desiring to make a left turn must yield to all traffic coming from the opposite direction which is close enough to be a hazard or which will become a hazard at any time during the turning movement.

2. The driver of a vehicle should slow his vehicle to not more than 15 miles per hour when approaching a "Yield Right of Way" sign at an intersection.

3. The driver of a vehicle approaching a "Yield Right of Way" sign at an intersection must yield to all vehicles approaching from the right or left of the intersecting road or street which are within 100 feet of said intersection.

4. A pedestrian, crossing in an unmarked crosswalk at an intersection, must yield the right of way to all approaching vehicles.

Answers

1. True. The driver of a vehicle within an intersection intending to make a left turn will yield the right of way to any vehicle approaching from the opposite direction which is so within the intersection, or so close thereto as to constitute an immediate hazard. (sec. 14-5)

Outstanding unit and individual achievements in the 9th Infantry were given official recognition last Saturday morning in a colorful Battle Group review, presided over by Colonel Clifford P. Hannum, commander of the 9th Infantry.

Spectators at the review included Major General Charles H. Chase, commander of the 2nd Division, and the families and friends of the "Manchumen."

After the presentation of the colors, awards went to the men chosen as the "Soldier-of-the-Month" for the last six months. Sergeant Ernest Hayes of Company D received the first place award for the month of July. Sergeant Charles Joyner of Company E accepted the award for September.

For the months of October and November, Staff Sergeant Dalmer S. Cox of Combat Support Company proudly accepted two awards. The "Soldier-of-the-Month" for December was Sergeant First Class William Wright of Company C.

For having the best rifle platoon in the test, Lieutenant Robert A. Given and Sergeant First Class Benoit Maillot, the platoon sergeant accepted the award for their first platoon in Company C.

The program was concluded with the presentation of a check to First Sergeant Walter Wallace, first sergeant of Company C, for composing the 9th Infantry Manchu Chant. The chant, now the official marching song of the 9th, was demonstrated by Lieutenant Roland Greenwood's platoon.

PROMOTED . . . First Sergeant George Boothe recently was promoted to the pay grade E-8, receiving simultaneously the first sergeant's designation. Sgt. Boothe has served as 2nd Administration Co. first sergeant since October, previously serving as section sergeant of the 2nd Replacement Section.

Chaplain H. C. McKeown Assigned to 1st Infantry

By 1st Inf PIO

Chaplain (Captain) Hugh C. McKeown, recently assigned to Headquarters Company, 1st Infantry, is presently serving as the Catholic chaplain to the personnel in the Kelley Hill area.

Chaplain McKeown was born in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, in 1914. After completing his high school education, he entered a monastic order of the Catholic Church, the Passionist Fathers, with headquarters at Union City, New Jersey. He was ordained a priest in 1943. After this date, he was stationed at various monasteries of his community until he entered the military service in April 1952.

Far East, Europe

Chaplain McKeown has served nine years with the Army. Varied assignments have carried him over the globe.

He was commissioned in 1952 and was given an initial assignment with the 12th Anti-Aircraft Artillery Battalion at Fort Hancock, New Jersey. Succeeding tours took him to the Osaka Hospital in Japan during the latter part of 1952 and then to Korea, where he remained until March of 1954.

Upon his return to the United States, Chaplain McKeown was assigned to Fort Bliss, Texas, and then to Valley Forge Army Hospital in Pennsylvania, where he remained until 1956.

Chaplain McKeown's next assignment took him to the Bahama Islands, and from there back to duty at Fort Eustis, Virginia. February 1957 found him moving overseas to Europe for assignment at the U.S. Army Engineer Depot in Toul, France. Recently, after three and-a-half years in France, he returned once again to Fort Benning and the famous "Second to None" Division.

Fighting Mess Sergeant With Carving Knife Helped 'Clear the Trenches' of Invaders

BY GORDON ALDERMAN

On March 10, 1918, the newly-formed 2nd Infantry Division ended its first elementary phase of training and prepared to move to the front.

This was the first movement of the division as a whole, and the first experiment in dealing independently with French railway transportation, so the orders governing movement were full of details not found in later movement plans.

The equipment and train crews were entirely French and operated under French orders. The standard French military train consisted of 30 box cars of the "40 and 8" variety, 17 flat cars and one coach, with a caboose or two for the train crew.

Due to the large size of the

This is another in a series of colorful, lesser-heard-of incidents from the annals of the 2nd Division's history. Facts are documented from records on hand at the 2nd Division Museum.

American division, almost twice the strength of a French unit, 58 trains were required, 26 of them for artillery alone.

'Quiet Sector'

The division moved into the Toulon Sector, between St. Mihiel and Verdun, along the Meuse River. Here, the division gained practical experience in a "quiet sector" of the front.

Troops of both armies were sent to these "quiet sectors" to rest and refit. Here, war was routine. By air observation and patrolling, each side obtained and kept up to date the most minute information on the other.

On these "quiet sectors" serious operations were not undertaken. A few shells a day, an occasional raid for identification of hostile units, summed up the activities.

Legends arise from any war, and the first such story in the 2nd Division's history took place during this time.

Artillery barrages increased as the Germans noted the arrival of American troops, and it was during one of these barrages that a raiding party of Germans infiltrated the American lines.

As the barrage lifted, the Americans found Germans both front and rear. One party in wave formation reached the rear of the American forces, and Companies "L" and "I" of the 9th Infantry were attacked from the front and rear. For two hours the combat was furious—man-to-man in the darkness, within the confines of an enemy artillery box barrage. While these companies were cut off by hostile shells, one of their runners managed to work his way to the rear, and the report spread that Companies "L" and "I" were wiped out.

Deserted Kitchen

This rumor reached the rolling kitchens and Mess Sergeant Wiggins, Company "I", 9th Infantry. On hearing the news, Sergeant Wiggins, an old regular over 40 years old, grabbed a rifle in one hand and a long carving knife in the other and, deserting his kitchen, hurried forward shouting, "Hell, 'I' Company's never wiped out as long as I am here!"

He reached his company and assisted in clearing the trenches of invaders.

Such was the spirit of the men of the Indianhead Division, as they completed their second phase of training in a "quiet sector". This was first blood for the 2nd—ahead lay Chateau-Thierry, Belleau Wood and the Meuse-Argonne—bitter fighting, fallen comrades, honor, glory and memories for the men of the fighting 2nd.

Ahead by a long, hard road till it was over, "over there."

87th's Yon Assigned To Sp'l Forces

By 87th Inf PIO

A platoon leader assigned to Company A, 87th Infantry, recently received orders making him a member of the U. S. Army Special Forces.

He is Lieutenant Frank E. Yon, and for Lieutenant Yon it's like a dream come true. Ever since his ROTC commission from the University of Florida in 1959, he has wanted Special Forces.

To Bragg

Lieutenant Yon will soon be on his way to Fort Bragg, North Carolina, to enroll in the unconventional warfare school. Upon completion of the course, where he will study survival tactics, demolition, group psychology, techniques of famous guerrilla leaders and many other subjects, he will receive an assignment with a Special Forces outfit in Okinawa. There, he will get a chance to apply practice to theory. He has already completed his Airborne assignment with the 82nd.

The son of a retired colonel, Lieutenant Yon's home is in Gainesville, Florida. However, he spent most of his summers near Rainey Lake, a wilderness located in Ontario, Canada. He feels that this frontier living will be of great use to him. From now on, Lieutenant Yon will wear the Special Forces motto, "De oppresso liber" to liberate from oppression.

By 1st Inf PIO

The 1st Infantry has announced the selection of its "Soldier of the Month" for December.

Chosen on the basis of military bearing, knowledge of military subjects and current events was Sergeant David H. Stevenson of Company C.

A native of Lakewood, Calif., Sergeant Stevenson has been a member of the "Always First" since June, serving as a squad leader. He entered the Army in April 1952 and formerly has served as motor sergeant with the 1st Armored Rifle Battalion, where he received the Letter of Commendation.

A career man, Sgt. Stevenson's favorite recreation is deep sea diving. He learned this feat through a six-month course obtained at Wilmington, Calif.

FIRST COMMANDER . . . Brigadier General Charles A. Doyen, USMC, checks location of the 2nd Infantry Division during early 1918. General Doyen was the first commander of the Indianhead Division. This is one of many historical pictures found in the 2nd Infantry Division Museum.

9TH 'TOPKICK'
Sgt. Petit

Petit 9th's 'Topkick Of Week'

By 9th Infantry PIO

The one time manager of Ridgewood Country Club in Columbia, South Carolina, who once took pointers on golf from Ben Hogan, has been chosen "Top" Sergeant of the week in the 9th Infantry.

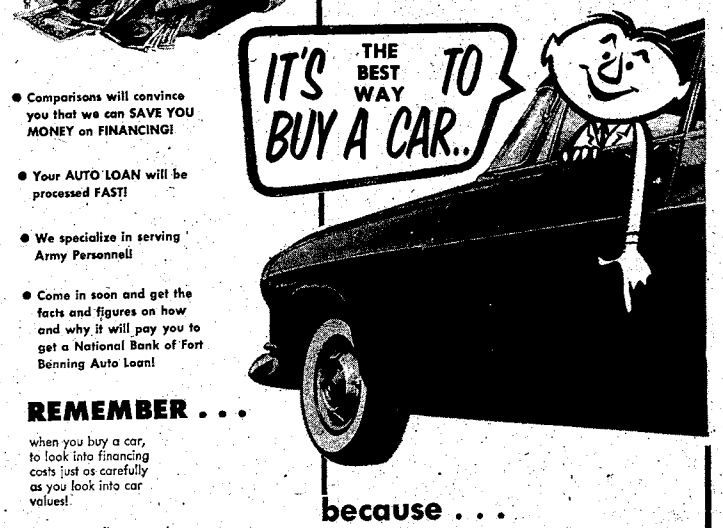
He is First Sergeant Earl R. Petit, the first sergeant of Headquarters Company, commanded by Captain John C. Trickey.

"Top" has been first sergeant at Headquarters Company since April. Before coming to Headquarters he was assigned to Company C of the 9th for 18 months. He is a veteran of 25 years service, both reserve and active duty.

He entered the service in 1931 when he joined the South Carolina National Guard. In 1940 the unit was activated and Sergeant Petit went to Iceland with the 11th Infantry Blue Indigo Task Force. He remained until 1943. Later he served in England, France, and Germany. He returned to civilian life in 1954 but retained his reserve status.

While in the European Theater he fought in the Rhineland Campaign and was awarded the Bronze Star and Combat Infantryman's Badge for his actions there. With the break of the Korean Conflict in 1950, Sergeant Petit was recalled to active duty and assigned to the 2nd Armored Division at Fort Hood, Texas.

He then played a part in the first experimental march up the Alcan Highway with the 196th Infantry in 1952. The 308-mile march lasted 22 days and was undertaken to see how well a unit could travel on foot and still be supplied with all the necessary equipment.



He also served three tours of duty in Korea but missed the conflict.

Sergeant Petit is an avid golfer and was, for four years, manager of the Ridgewood Country Club in Columbia, South Carolina. He recalls the time he played a round of golf on the Ridgewood course with "Battling Bantam" Ben Hogan. Mr. Hogan was practicing for a $5,000 tournament at the club. He took Sergeant Petit around the course with him and gave him good tips on how to improve his game.

"Top" is a confirmed bachelor of 46 and hails from Charleston, South Carolina.

CARE Says 'Thanks' To 11th Wives

The officers' wives of the 11th Infantry recently received a letter from CARE, thanking them for their contribution to the organization.

The letter read, in part:

"The name of your club will accompany the packages to their destination. The Korean children will know that they have friends at Fort Benning. When you consider that one dollar will furnish a family of four food for a month, through CARE, you can see what great help your generosity will mean."

In search of a philanthropic project, the wives decided to help Korean children when the battle group's former OVURFP status indicated that the 11th might be going to Korea.

The wives will receive a later report from CARE about the recipients of the packages.

Mrs. John F. Arthur, wife of the battle group commander, was chairman of the project.

Trainer Recalls Florida Trip of Division Boxers

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The following article is by Lou Prolago, Division Trains athletic and recreation NCO, who is now on special duty at Main Post, as the trainer for the Fort Benning boxing team. Here is his account of how the 2nd Infantry Division men fared at the 1961 Southern Silver Gloves Boxing Tournament, recently concluded at Jacksonville, Florida.)

BY LOU PROLAGO

Competing against the Fort Benning team were local civilians, Donaldson AFB, Bolling AFB, Jacksonville Naval Air Station, Williams AFB, Boys Clubs, PAL (Police Athletic League) Clubs and Youth Clubs.

Competition was great, for Bolling Air Force Base team entered five All-Air Force champions and Donaldson AFB entered two former Inter-Service champs and two All-Air Force champs.

Opening night saw Fred Rutherford of the 2nd Engineer Battalion, Amos Crumbly, a heavyweight from Company B, 23rd Infantry, Melwin Lonas, a light heavyweight from the 7th Cavalry, and Douglas Johnson of the 9th Infantry's Combat Support Company all win by KOs. Rutherford won two bouts.

Action on the second night started with Rutherford winning by a KO and losing another bout by a split decision. The 11th Infantry's middleweight, Booker T. Anderson, also fought twice, winning on a decision in both fights while Robert Richter, of the 9th Infantry, lost his only fight by a decision.

The third and final evening of the 1961 Silver Gloves Boxing Tournament brought up the 9th's Johnson as the featherweight champion and Anderson winning the middleweight championship.

Crumbly won the novice light heavyweight championship and was also voted the outstanding boxer throughout his division. For this honor, he was awarded an extra trophy.

Lonas won the light heavyweight championship by a crowd-pleasing, thrilling TKO.

The best all-around fight was Charles Garlington's encounter with Willis Ellis of Bolling Air Force Base, the former Inter-Service heavyweight champion. Garlington KOed him.

Many Boxing Titles Belong To Garlington

By 69th Armor PIO

Sergeant Charles "Baby Huey" Garlington, Headquarters Company 69th Armor, is the 1961 Silver Gloves Heavyweight Champion.

The 235-pound tanker from Shreveport, La., defeated Willis Ellis of Bolling Air Force Base with a TKO in one minute, 59 seconds of the second round to gain the title.

The bout was one of many last week at Jacksonville Naval Air Station, Jacksonville, Florida.

Sergeant Garlington began boxing in 1947, and his present record stands at 40 wins and 5 losses.

The Louisiana slugger was runner - up in Korea in 1952, losing in the finals to the highly - regarded Zora Folley. His other victories include the heavyweight championship of Fort Hood, Texas, in 1954. He was also the heavyweight champion of the 4th Army area the same year.

In 1958, 1959, and 1960 he was the 4th Armored Division Champion. He was the heavyweight runner-up at Fort Benning in October.

Sergeant Garlington was assigned to the Headquarters Company scout platoon in November 1960, following a tour of duty in Germany. He is married and the father of two sons and one daughter.

As for the future, Sergeant Garlington is looking forward to the Invitational Tournament December 15, at Bolling AFB. There will be an AAU return bout at Jacksonville Naval Air Station, and an engagement with the Marines at Camp Le Jeune, N.C., in January.

Other athletic participation of Sergeant Garlington includes baseball and football. From 1953 to 1956 he participated as pitcher and catcher on the Fort Hood baseball team. His batting average was over .300 during this period.

During the same period he played guard and tackle on the Fort Hood football team.

87th's Trophy Collection Growing

By 87th Inf PIO

The sports picture at the 87th Infantry looks very bright with a myriad of eyefilling trophies dotting the scene — some already awarded and others still on the shelves, awaiting presentation.

With the Commanding General's Sports Trophy on the way, ready to be cased at Conqueror headquarters for the next six months, three lesser prizes are already in the fold with excellent prospects for more.

Division - level trophies include second place outdoor volleyball, first place cross-country and the recently won flag-football tournament. Individual football trophies were awarded recently at a banquet and bowling trophies will be given out as soon as league play is completed.

The next big sport on the schedule is basketball. A company-level tournament has already been organized and began on December 2. Points accumulated for the division basketball tournament will go on the books for next year's Commanding General trophy, to also include indoor volleyball, softball and swimming.

Lieutenant George Krajack will coach the 87th and as usual, Athletic and Recreation NCO Burl Withers will manage the team. The 87th will play their home games at the newly-constructed Kelley Hill Field House.

Back From School

Private Daniel Truitt of the Communications platoon of Headquarters Company, 69th Armor recently returned from radio-teletype operators' school at Fort Gordon, Ga.

Private Truitt completed his course with an average score of over 90 per cent, which placed him in the top ten per cent of his class. Private Truitt's home is Decatur, Ala.

Co. C Clinches Conquerors' Bowling League

By 87th Inf PIO

With only one more week to go, Company C clinched first place in the 87th bowling league last Friday night, defeating the second place Headquarters Company team.

The league, which began over three months ago, has seen almost every one of the six teams in first place at one time or another. Company C, the winner, now, with a record of 41-15, is five full games ahead of Headquarters Company. Company E, which had the highest team average is in third place and Company A, which held the lead only a few weeks ago, is in fourth place.

The members of the victorious Charlie Company quintet are James Patterson, Lavern Horton, Donald Buckley, Bobby Baynard and Stanley Higashi. Patterson captained the team.

Leonard Shoemaker of Headquarters Company is the top individual bowler of the league carrying an average of 176. Glenn McCammon, of Alpha Company is second with a 173 average and Paul Suding is third with an average of 171 along with high game, 279, and high series, 648.

Farella, Aucoin Named All-Army; Selected By A Poll Of Coaches

Clark Takes Gloves Tilt

KO's Opponent In Third Round To Grab Victory

Pfc Leon Clark, Battery B, 2nd Howitzer Battalion, 1st Infantry Brigade, is the new Southern Silver Gloves Heavyweight Champion.

He brought home the top honors after Benning's boxing team traveled to Jacksonville, Fla., to compete in the tournament.

In the semi-finals, Clark polished off his opponent in 45 seconds of the first round for the win.

In the finals, his opponent, Airman Fred Howie, managed to finish two rounds, but Clark decked him in the third with 1:20 gone.

This is Clark's first year on the post boxing team. Undefeated in four bouts, he has won three by knock-outs. Included in these wins is the post heavyweight championship.

Were Doughboy Linemen During Past Two Years

BY SP-4 DEL BERGHOEFER

Two outstanding linemen of the Doughboys for the past two years, Al Aucoin and Frank Farella, have been named to the All-Army football squad.

They were selected in an Army-wide poll of coaches and sportswriters, on the basis of their outstanding play against Army opponents this year.

The two hefty linemen, both weighing 230 pounds, formed the nucleus of the strong Doughboy forward wall which held eight opponents to an average rushing yardage of only 76 yards.

Aucoin is a 1958 graduate of Louisiana State University where he played football for four years, earning varsity letters the last three. In 1957 he was captain of the LSU eleven and was named to the All-Southeastern Conference team. He was selected to play in the annual college intersectional "Blue-Gray" game his senior year.

AUCOIN

"Al is a great team player," according to Doughboy head coach Leaton Cofield, "He called all of our offensive plays this year, and was outstanding on defense, never allowing himself to be trapped. Any coach would be proud to have a player of Al's caliber on his team."

Farella is a 1958 graduate of Arkansas State College where he played four years of varsity ball and earned Little All-America honors in 1957, when he was a senior and captain of the team.

A third Doughboy lineman, center George Burt received Honorable Mention in the All-Army poll, according to late word received by Special Services officials. Burt played college ball at Northwest Louisiana State College four years, graduating in 1960. This was his first year with the Doughboys.

FARELLA

Coach Cofield hails Farella as "the best offensive guard and defensive middle lineman that I've had the privilege to coach. On offense he is smart and alert and takes advantage of any weakness in the opposition's defensive line. Playing defensive middle guard in a five-man line, Frank covered from tackle to tackle without any difficulty, freeing our outside linebackers to cover wide running plays. I feel that he is a great pro prospect," Cofield added.

Farella earned honorable mention in the All-Army selections last year.

Both players expected to be discharged from the Army before next season, which will leave a two big slots in the right side of the Doughboy line to be filled by Coach Cofield.

Aucoin recently assumed duties as sports officer for the Infantry Center Special Services Section. Lt. Farella is assigned to Headquarters Company, 122nd Signal Battalion, Second Infantry Division.

Eddy Brothers Had Important Part In Doughboy Victories

By SP4 Del Berghoefer

Two former All-State high school football players from Louisiana, Emmett and Raymond Eddy, played an important part in the Doughboys' becoming one of the toughest service teams in the country this year.

The brother duo, who also played at Northwestern Louisiana State College, formed half backfield, with Raymond running at fullback and Emmett of the Doughboy's starting at the right halfback slot.

The Fort Benning eleven won six of the last seven games, compiling a 64 season record.

The Eddy brothers, both hard running backs, gave the Benning offense a double threat, up the middle and around the ends. Emmett had a six-yard average per carry and Raymond was close behind with an average per carry of five yards.

In addition to their offensive threat, both were outstanding on defense where they played the halfback spots. Many opposing runners who broke into the Doughboy secondary were brought down on a bruising tackle by one or both of the rugged Eddy brothers.

Raymond sustained a neck injury in the second game of the season against the Quantico Marines and missed the following week's game with Fort Eustis, which the Doughboys lost, 15-7.

Back in playing shape the following week, Raymond led the Doughboys in a 41-6 rampage over Fort Lee. He intercepted a pass, returning it 75 yards for a touchdown and scored twice more on plunges of seven and three yards.

EMMETT (L) AND RAYMOND EDDY

Two week later Emmett was sidelined with a knee injury and Raymond switched to his brother's place at right halfback.

The brothers turned in a two star performance against the Fort Campbell Screaming Eagles as the Doughboys emerged victorious, 28-15, against one of their toughest opponents of the season. Emmett and Raymond contributed a joint total of 106 yards in the win, the team's fifth consecutive win and the season's closer.

Emmett scored two of the team's four touchdowns, catching a nine-yard pass for one and running 23 yards for the second.

"The Eddy brothers are a couple of hard runners and real tough to bring down," said Leaton Cofield, Doughboy coach, commending the two after the Fort Campbell game, "and they both like physical contact too. Neither is afraid of hitting hard nor being hit," he added.

Barring transfers before next year's football season, the brothers will be back in uniform for the Doughboys again in 1962 providing "double trouble" for Fort Benning opponents.

Emmett is assigned to Company D, 1st Armored Rifle Battalion, 58th Infantry. Raymond is a member of Company D, 1st Battalion, Infantry Center Troop Command.

Eagles Capture Title In Intermediate League

A week ago, the champion Eagles of the YAC Intermediate Football League closed out their season by trouncing the yellow-shirted Packers of Custer Terrace, 21-0.

The previous week, the blue Eagles trampled the Giants 28-0 to capture the league title with a 7-1-1 record.

Led by quarterback Trooper Teeters, the split-T offense of the Eagles gained momentum as the season progressed. Against the Packers, the Eagles took the ball on the opening kickoff and marched 68 yards with fullback Corky Henderson hulling over from the seven yard line.

Minutes later, recovering a fumble on the Packer two yard line, the inspired Eagles moved to the Packer's two yard line. On the first play after giving up the ball to the Packers, the hard-charging blue line tackled the Packer quarterback in the end zone for a safety.

Early in the third quarter, Robert Paz took a hand-off on his own 40-yard line and skampered 60 yards to paydirt. Leading 14-0 midway in the fourth quarter, Trooper Teeters passed to Rich Gasperini from his own 48-yard line, and Gasperini scored unmolested to make the score 20-0. Teeters added the extra point on a quarterback sneak to make it 21-0.

The hard-charging Eagle line, led by Mike Merrill, Jerry Walding, Lynn Spurling, Jerry Carrig, Carl Stevens, Ron Jenkins and Bill Salmon permitted only 19 points to be scored against them on defense. Scoring offensively, 138 points, the Eagles, with their smooth machine looled offense, were a dangerous threat anywhere on the playing field.

Coached by Lt. Joseph Tomko, the Eagles displayed their right and privilege to be champions of the YAC Intermediate Football League.

Hasn't Changed

The art of throwing hand grenades has not been changed in over 43 years.

According to the Grenade Training Manual, prepared at the Infantry School of Arms, Fort Sill, Oklahoma, and edited by the Army War College in January 1918, the same instruction is given to the modern-day "trooper" that was drummed into the World War I "doughboy." Some things just don't change.

OUTDOOR OUTLOOK

SPECIAL DOE SEASON

Early in the deer season it became evident that the habitat in certain areas on post was in such poor condition that it was seriously affecting the deer herd. A sharp increase in the deer population on the southern portion of the reservation coupled with prolonged dry weather and extensive wildfires brought about a significant reduction in the carrying capacity for deer. This combination of conditions simply resulted in the area having more deer than the habitat would support. This was confirmed early in the season when Wildlife Aids checked deer from these food shortage areas and found many animals to be in poor condition. In addition, many areas were heavily browsed indicating a high deer population.

During November game biologists of the Georgia Game and Fish Commission were called upon to study the situation on post. Their findings revealed that an over-population of deer exists in that portion of the reservation south of Highway 27 and there is a critical shortage of natural food in this area. The biologists recommended that the deer herd population be reduced by harvesting female deer. These recommendations were presented to and subsequently approved by the Georgia Game and Fish Commission for a six-day "either sex" season in this over-populated area.

The special antlerless deer season will be split to include the last two weekends of December. On these dates, December 22, 23, and 24 and December 29, 30, and 31, 1961 that portion of the Fort Benning Reservation south of U.S. Highway 27 will be open for taking of a deer of either sex.

Naturally special regulations will be established for this six day season. Each hunter who kills an antlerless deer will be required to bring the deer to the check station at the Fish and Game office, Bldg. 4050, Harmony Church. If possible, the deer should be brought to the check station immediately after kill without field dressing it in order that a state biologist or check station personnel can inspect the deer for age, condition, and extract certain internal organs for study.

Tagging for these antlerless deer is of utmost importance. The deer will be tagged with a special tag at the check station and become "legal". Only check station personnel will tag the deer. Any antlerless deer taken from the reservation without this tag will be illegal, and upon apprehension by state authorities, such persons are subject to prosecution. Any hunter who is found with an antlerless deer north of Highway 27 without proper tags will be considered as possessing an illegal deer.

Hunters are reminded that the bag limit for deer on post is two bucks or one buck and one doe. Antlerless deer will be tagged with the regular deer tag attached to state hunting license in addition to the special antlerless deer tag.

In 1955, then SFC Singleton, stationed at Fort Dix, appeared in many of the local boxing exhibitions on post, but was primarily concerned with training. However, he was forced to limit his fighting due to his duties as Chief Clerk, 1st Army Quartermaster Inspection Team, Fort Dix.

While stationed at Fort Jackson in 1956 to 1957, Singleton was given the honor of representing Fort Jackson in the 3d Army Boxing Championships held at Fort Benning in the summer of 1956.

Bernard Singleton, the name he fights under, left the Army in 1957, and reenlisted on July 31st, 1961. Singleton stated recently "that my present plan concerning boxing is in the training of young men between the ages of 10 to 14 years in the art of self defense."

National Archives Knows If Your Ancestors Fought in Civil War

In this first year of the Civil War Centennial, a popular American pastime is to check back through family papers to find out which of one's forebears, if any, fought in the Civil War. To follow great grandfather's regiment through its campaigns is a useful way of personalizing that conflict.

And the National Archives here stands ready to help with its enormous body of records and historical materials. Anyone who believes that an ancestor served in either the Union or Confederate forces can write to the National Archives, Washington 25, D.C., giving that ancestor's name and the state from which he served.

The Archives will confirm his service and give the name of his unit. Also, at a charge of one dollar, it will send copies of pertinent records. It advises, however, that a reply cannot be expected for several weeks.

The years following the Civil War saw extensive publication of regimental and other unit histories which are still available today in public libraries, state historical societies and the offices of state historians. From such histories the Civil War buff can become intimately acquainted with the outfit in which a forebear saw battle action.

Many veterans of the war on both sides also broke into print with their own colorful and anecdotal reminiscences of the Blue and the Gray. While some of these are now collectors items, a great many are part of the Civil War material in libraries. The New York Public Library is considered to have the most complete collection of its type.

The Surgeon Says

Watch That Diet

Crash programs to slough off many pounds of fat in a hurry by going on one of the numerous 900 calorie a day formula diets without medical advise, may be ineffective and undesirable, says the Council on Foods and Nutrition of the AMA. The Council makes the following points in part: "One of the most important goals in any long-term weight control program is that of educating the patient in good and bad dietary habits. This type of education is best achieved by building the therapeutic diet around ordinary foods. Monotony of the formula diet may result in its abandonment after a short period, at which point the patient usually resumes his normal food habits and gains or fails to lose. Excessive rates of weight loss or large fluctuations in weight in obese individuals who restrict their caloric intake excessively or spasmodically may be undesirable. Both diarrhea and constipation have been reported by users of formula diets. Only the dietary program which results in permanent weight loss and lifetime control of weight will be a satisfactory one." (From Nutrition Notes, United Fresh Fruit and Vegetable Association)

Discussing "Vitamins, Minerals and Anemia," the editors of the Journal of American Medical Association have branded as of little value for the average person the "hematinic" (blood improving) mixtures offered for sale. The Journal adds: "Except in a small percentage of persons in the lowest income group where funds are insufficient to procure an adequate diet, a mixed vitamin capsule has no utility other than placebo effect, nor can such a capsule substitute effectively for a nutritious diet."

In the Spring of 1956, 783 pre-school children, aged 62-78 months, of West Tennessee, were studied to determine the general between - meal eating patterns, the types of the items eaten most frequently, and the relationship between the frequency of eating specific snack items (chiefly refined carbohydrates) and caries experience. The average frequency of between-meal eating was 1.75 items per day with the four most popular items, in descending order, being gum, candy, soft drinks and pastries. The frequency of consumption of high-sugar adhesive items was related directly and consistently to caries experience. (Nutrition News, Feb. '61)

Recently at the American College of Cardiology, researchers reported that Americans Seventh Day Adventists had achieved for the first time the low cholesterol levels that were obtained among the Japanese and Bantus, people among whom heart disease is very rare. Some 70 Adventists in the experiment had substituted corn oil for saturated fats in their diets. Cholesterol levels were reduced in two weeks. Corn oil products such as mayonnaise and shortenings were tested.

BEWARE OF TRAFFIC

The holiday death toll on the nation's highways averaged 25 percent higher than on the non-holiday weekends. Traffic is heavier, of course — more chance for mishap. Extra traffic means extra caution by the driver.

BOOKS in REVIEW

MASTER OF THIS VESSEL by Gwyn Griffin. (Holt, 1961)

A young ship's officer suddenly finds himself in the role of Acting Captain, and in the midst of a hurricane, is forced to fight both the elements and a hostile ship's company. Among the characters are a group of migrant laborers, a predatory female, a British submarine commander and the ship's first officer who lets his hate for the 'Captain' smother his nautical judgement.

SWEENEY SQUADRON by Donald J. Plantz. (Doubleday, 1961)

This book of the American Air Force in World War II tells the story of a fighter squadron from its training period on Florida air base to its disintegration in furious actions in the Pacific islands."

AN AMERICAN VISITOR by Joyce Cary. (Harper, 1961)

The American visitor of this story is Marie Hasluck. An itinerant journalist touring Africa, she is caught up in the tribal war precipitated when certain natives and the British attempt to unite several hostile villages. Marie is an impetuous idealist who believes that primitive man untouched by civilization enjoys a state of blessed innocence. The havoc wrought by her insubstantial convictions is traced here.

BEYOND SURVIVAL by Max Ways. (Harper, 1959)

It is possible to determine whether our foreign policy and our military policy are what they ought to be by whether or not they work, but under present circumstances we may not know that until we are dead. A better way is to form an idea of "right" policy as a means of getting from premises through circumstances to goals, thus providing a usable standard for comparison. After describing the situation of the United States in the world today, Ways examines some formulations of our purpose, such as "survival" and "national interest."

It Could Always Be 'Trey' in Card Game But Mess Hall 'Tray' Is Vanishing Breed

WASHINGTON (AFPS)—The Army has authoried the optional use of conventional dinnerware in place of the long-familiar compartmented trays in its dining halls.

The switch from trays to dishes on an optional basis is the result of a continuing program to improve food service and provide a more homelike atmosphere in enlisted men's messhalls, the Army said.

No timetable for worldwide conversion to the new system was set.

"The change-over," the Army said, "will be accomplished by individual commands and installations on an optional basis within the limits of available funds."

Made of tempered glass, the new dinnerware will be available in white with either green or burgundy decorative band.

Two sizes of glass tumblers are authorized under the new system along with plates, bowls, cups and saucers. Also authorized are plastic serving trays to carry dishes from serving lines to dining tables.

Accelerated studies of food serving techniques started by Maj. Gen. Webster Anderson, Quartermaster General of the Army, played a part in the decision to authorize dinnerware in messhalls, the Army said.

"Experience has demonstrated," Gen. Anderson said, "that use of conventional dinnerware in a lieu of institutional-type trays is a definite factor in increasing the soldier's enjoyment of his meals and raising troop morale.

"Moreover, studies have shown that use of dishes instead of compartmented trays appreciably reduces food waste by permitting closer portion-control at time of serving.

"This does not mean a soldier will get less, but rather that he will tend to leave less at the dining table."

Gen. Anderson said the switch from trays to dishes should do something for the soldier's appetite and make it easier for him to comply with the time-honored Army messhall adage:

"Take all you want but eat all you take."

The General Services Administration will procure the dinnerware and plastic serving trays to meet the Army's requirements.

"42 Years With Chrysler"

The Judge Says . . .

What are the factors which one should consider before going on a note for a friend or relative? And, what differences does it make if one is being paid to guarantee the payment of another's debt to a creditor?

Legally speaking, one may subject himself to liability by signing a note in at least two ways. First, he may become a guarantor of the maker. As a guarantor, he vouches for the maker's financial soundness and, in effect, says to the holder of the note "if you cannot get the money from the principal debtor, I shall pay the balance owing on the note". It is then incumbent upon the creditor to exhaust all of his legal remedies against the principal debtor, including suit for non-payment, levy and execution on the principal debtor's property and a return of such levy and execution showing that the debtor has no property which will answer for the debt.

Only after all the legal remedies against the debtor have been used can the creditor look to the guarantor for payment. This type arrangement generally requires also some consideration in money or property running to the guarantor in exchange for his acceptance of the obligation to answer for the debtor's obligation and must be in writing.

A friend or relative may, however, wish to aid one who is seeking to borrow money as an accommodation to that person. In such a situation, the individual may become a surety and represent to the holder of the note that the note will be paid. In substance, he is saying that he will pay the creditor whether or not the debtor is willing or able to pay the obligation. The creditor, therefore, may look to the surety for payment when the note or a payment is due, even before he makes a demand on the principal debtor.

While this may rarely be the case, it does indicate the risk of being primarily liable on the note as a surety. The agreement to become a surety for the borrower does not require any consideration and may be a binding oral agreement.

One very important consideration which a person who is willing to stand as surety or guarantor on a note is that if the principal debtor goes into bankruptcy and properly lists the obligation, he may be discharged from the obligation. Significantly, however, the discharge in bankruptcy does not discharge a surety or guarantor from the debt and he may be called upon to answer for the default of the principal debtor. His only recourse then would be to share in the bankrupt's estate with all other creditors.

Chaplain's Corner

Peace Among Men

By Chaplain (Major) Russell K. Lee

The outlook for Christmas is bleak for many peoples around the world. There is a temptation to feel that talk of peace among men is a mockery in this day and age.

But Jesus was born in a time of turmoil and strife. The Roman Empire was not an ideal environment by any means. Slavery was widely prevalent and sick slaves were often left to die because that was cheaper than trying to cure them. Subject peoples felt the iron fist of despotism. Yet, it was in that period that the shepherds heard the angels sing, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace among men of good will".

From that day to this, men of good will have rejoiced in that song and in the salvation God has provided for mankind. The challenging task of God's people has been to work for the spread of the spirit of Christmas, the spirit of good will that leads to peace among men. Here is a task which should claim our noblest efforts, and these need not wait for and should not end on December 25th.

Target Marker Soon To Vanish

Another part of the "Old Army" will go the way of the cavalry horse and wrap leggings.

According to word received here, the black-cross-on-white scoring disc, which indicates to military riflemen a shot has landed far away from the bullseye, will be no more.

From now on, the Army says, a shot value of three, which brought the black and white disc up, will be indicated by raising the present red four disc to the upper lefthand corner of the target.

A four will see the red disc raised to the righthand corner. When a shot lands in the bull's-eye, the same disc will be reversed to show the crisp white for a five.

Engineer Company Has Most Diversified Personnel

BY SFC GEORGE MCBURNEY

Among the many military components training here, Regular Army, National Guard and Reserve units, perhaps the one with the most diversified personnel is the 114th Engineer Company.

This unique unit is a Washington, D. C., National Guard company recently called to active duty in the Army's buildup program. Training daily at The Infantry Center, the 114th has men from many walks of life and with highly diversified talents and backgrounds.

Among them are former government employees, school teachers, chemists, athletics coaches, draftsmen, a lawyer, an assistant bank director and a bricklayer, to name only a few.

Attorney

Cpl. Jacques H. Croom of Alexandria, Va., was an attorney for a well-known railroad company in Washington before being sent here with the 114th.

A graduate of the University of North Carolina in 1959 with a degree in law, Croom, 27, is an assistant bridge construction foreman of his company.

"Somebody has to take this training and we are one of the units chosen," he said. "Our training is so well conducted and so beneficial that there is no question about our being able to do our job well."

Croom, a former tank driver in the New Jersey National Guard, will return to his legal practice after completing his training here.

Pvt. Terrence M. Day of West Hyattsville, Md., was a personnel clerk for three years in the Bureau of Administration, Department of State, Washington, before he began his Army training here.

Job Is Different

Now a bridge construction helper, Day said, "This job is different from anything I've ever done before. But I like it because it is interesting and valuable. It shows what the Army can do in training the troops."

SP4 Raymond R. Rillon of Washington, a bridge construction specialist, explained, "The 114th is a National Guard engineer company that specializes in building panel-type bridges for the Army.

"Our job here is to train our own men and to instruct Infantry units in the construction of this kind of bridge. In combat our mission would be to instruct and aid all units needing panel bridge building."

Rillon, 23, has been a National Guardsman for three years and a member of the 114th for the past 30 months. A former student for two years at Montgomery Junior College, Silver Springs, Md., he was a clerk in the Post Office Department, Washington, before entering active military service.

Thorough Training

"Our men receive thorough training in building panel bridges," he said. "We learn to survey an area so we will know how many men and parts we will need for the job. To do it right, we must pre-determine our work accurately."

Rillon continued, "We study the bridge area from both sides of the site. Then we decide what use of a bulldozer we may need. We teach our men that to be strong and safe, a bridge must be secure on the opposite side from which we start it."

"It's like a pitcher throwing a baseball to the catcher. One is as necessary as the other," he explained. "We can usually build a panel bridge with about 30 men. The time needed depends on the length of the span and the size needed."

Another member of the 114th who has a diverse background is Sgt. Delbert E. Wilson of Arlington, Va., non-commissioned officer in charge of the training of his unit.

GUIDANCE COUNSELOR

Wilson, 25, a graduate of William and Mary College in 1957, was a guidance counselor and a biology teacher at an Alexandria high school before being called to active duty. He was also assistant basketball coach at the school.

The call - up of National Guard units is foremost in the minds of the 114th. Its members are more than willing to abandon their personal plans for the present if by so doing they can help the country's defense effort.

The unanimous opinion of the men is that they are glad to take part in the Army's buildup if the nation's defense is in danger.

BRIDGE BUILDER . . . Pvt. Terrence M. Day of West Hyattsville, Md., learns to build a panel bridge as part of his training at Fort Benning with the 114th Engineer Company, a National Guard unit of Washington, D.C., recently called to active duty in the Army's buildup program. Day is a former personnel clerk in the Bureau of Administration, Department of State, Washington, D.C.

Safety Regulations Announced For Christmas Home Decorations

Safety regulations governing indoor and outdoor Christmas decorations have been announced by post safety officials.

All outside lighting must be weatherproof and be approved for outside use by national testing laboratories. Any lighting which exceeds 500 watts must be installed on a separate circuit equipped with a fused outside switch, since no extension cords extending through doors or windows will be allowed.

Outdoor lighting may be turned on after today, but should be switched off by midnight each night. All outdoor decorations should be removed by Jan. 4.

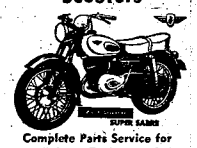
Safety standards for indoor decorations include keeping the tree in water, putting out all decorative lights when leaving the house, and checking all electrical light cords, making sure none is frayed or worn.

In decorating trees indoors, non-flammable decorations should be used, according to safety officials, adding that post regulations require all trees to be flame-proofed.

Trees will be flame-proofed free of charge at Fire Station 2 on Yeager Ave. beginning Monday.

1962 Bloodmobile Schedule Is Told

The schedule or visits of the American Red Cross Bloodmobile to the 2nd Division during 1962 has been announced by Post Red Cross officials.



The Bloodmobile is scheduled to visit the division May 17-18 and June 14-15.

The division exceeded by 741 pints its 1960 goal of 3,000 pints.

Germs--The Silent, Invisible Threat to Your Health

Most people, if they dropped some food on the floor, would not pick it up and eat it . . . yet they probably are doing some other things quite as dangerous to health.

In almost any home right now — in the refrigerator or bathroom glass — there may be a threat to family well-being: germs. The average home collects 108 pounds of dirt every year, and each pound contains millions of germs.

KNOW THE ENEMY. A germ is a microbe that produces disease. Microbes are tiny living organisms, some of which are so small they can be seen only under an electron microscope. Curiously, relatively few of the microbes are germs.

The smallest germs are the viruses, which cause smallpox, the common cold, and polio. Rickettsia are a little larger, and they cause such illnesses as typhus fever and Q fever. Bacteria are still bigger, and cause many infectious diseases, such as pneumonia and tuberculosis. Then there are fungi, which cause infections like athlete's foot. And there are protozoa, which cause malaria.

What makes germs so dangerous is that they grow so fast—many start reproducing when they are less than a half hour old. And one single microbe can turn into 16,000,000 in half a day.

Microbes need moisture and average temperatures to survive. Germicides, sunlight, extreme cold or heat will kill them. That's what you should remember when searching your house for these hidden invaders.

A MICROSCOPE'S 'INSIDE VIEW' Of The Hidden Invaders Within Your Home

KITCHEN. Be sure you have adequate light in your kitchen. One ceiling fixture is not enough, according to the Illuminating Engineering Society. You should have a wall bracket over at least two of your major work areas.

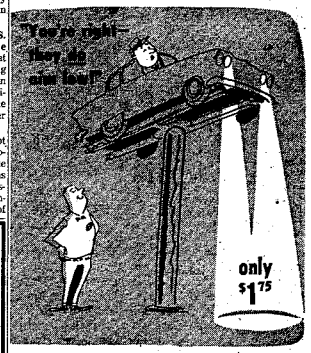
Keep all foodstuffs tightly covered. Oatmeal, rice and flour should not be kept in paper boxes but in tin or glass containers. Clean out your refrigerator periodically so that old foods don't accumulate. (Dust out that refrigerator motor too.)

Throw away dishes or cups that are cracked or chipped. Germs collect in the crevices. By using paper cups and plates you can do away with this problem altogether. If you are served a cracked cup or dish in a restaurant, notify the local board of health.

Use metal or plastic containers for your trash, and be sure they are covered tightly. If your refuse is not picked up every day, spray the contents with an insecticide.

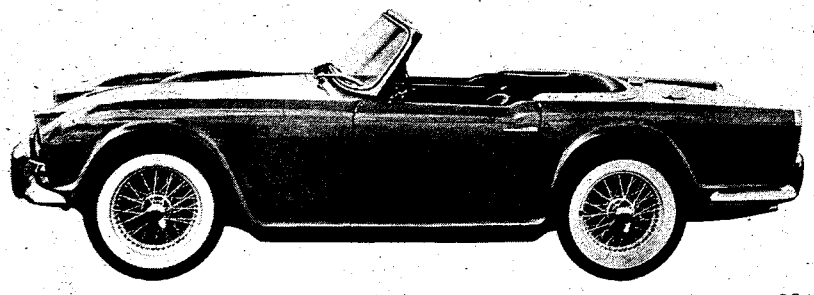
FOOD. According to Jerome Trichter, assistant commissioner of the New York City Health Department, the best rule here is: handle your food as little as possible. Never use your fingers when a utensil will do the job — even where it is socially acceptable. For the chief source of food poisoning is the human hand and the infectious germs it collects.

Refrigerate perishable foods at all times. If you are serving a hot lunch or dinner, don't let it remain at room temperature for even a few hours. Germs that may be in the food can thrive at room temperature; but not in the refrigerator.



The obvious rules are also easily ignored: Teach your children to wash their hands with soap and water and to dry them thoroughly with a clean towel before they eat.

THE BATHROOM GLASS. Most housewives neglect the health hazard posed by that common bathroom drinking glass, just above the washbasin and to the side of this medicine cabinet. Everyone in the family uses it — no one ever washes it thoroughly.



A rinse with cold or hot water — many housewives apparently believe — will make the glass as sanitary as it was when new. Tests of these glasses, however, show they contained many different types of germs — even when rinsed. These germs can cause sore throats, colds, and other nose and throat ailments.

One way to beat this problem in to wash the bathroom glass as often and as thoroughly as you do the regular dishes. Another solution is the use of disposable paper cups.

Red Cross Bloodmobile Sets Visits

The schedule of monthly visits of the American Red Cross Bloodmobile to major units here during the coming year has been announced by post Red Cross officials.

Dates and the host units for the first six months are:

Jan. 11 and 12, Infantry Center Troop Command and 428th Medical Battalion; Feb. 8 and 9, 2nd Infantry Division; March 8 and 9, 1st Infantry Brigade; April 12 and 13, 2nd Division; May 17 and 18, 151st Engineer Group, Lawson Army Aviation Command and Student Brigade; and June 14 and 15, 2nd Division.

The goal of the bloodmobile is a minimum of 500 pints during each two-day visit. The donations are processed for whole blood transfusions for Red Cross welfare, disaster and emergency uses.

All military personnel donating blood will be relieved from duty for four hours immediately after donating, and will not be required to engage in strenuous activities for a period of 12 hours following donation.

TRADITIONAL . . . One of the more striking Christmas displays on post is this traditional Nativity scene displayed by the 428th Medical Battalion. Situated in the archway of building 399, the display was constructed by battalion personnel. In front of the building's "L" section, The Student Brigade also has a Nativity scene. TIC Asks Safe Holiday Driving

The Infantry Center's Christmas-New Year's Holiday Safety Program contains four major points which Major Gen. Ben Harrell, post commander, wants emphasized to all personnel during holiday safety orientations.

Gen. Harrell asks that commanders direct specific attention to orientation of new personnel and personal counseling of individuals with records of traffic accident or violations.

All holiday safety counseling should stress necessity for prudent driving, self-discipline and courtesies of the road, according to the commanding general, and should include reminders of the dangers of driver fatigue and hazardous conditions on crowded highways.

Gen. Harrell's fourth point covers late-at-night driving, cause of all Third Army traffic fatalities during the 1960 Christmas-New Year's period.

In heading The Infantry Center's drive for an accident-free holiday, Gen. Harrell has directed leaves and passes be so controlled to discourage late-at-night driving during this most dangerous time of the year for highway traffic.

"The vital importance of exercising care, judgment and common sense, particularly while driving," The Infantry Center commanding general, said, "should be emphasized to avoid loss of life and tragedy and sorrow to families from accidents involving injury or death."

A substantial reduction in fatal and disabling injuries to post personnel Gen. Harrell attributes to post-wide acceptance of personal responsibility by individuals for their own and the safety of others.

An even more keen awareness of this responsibility during the coming holidays, he said, should reap highest possible dividends.

Christmas Message

As the holiday season approaches, I desire to extend best wishes to all the military and civilian personnel and their families at Fort Benning for a very Merry Christmas and a Happy and Prosperous New Year.

At the same time, I am pleased to take this opportunity to express my heartfelt appreciation for the splendid service and devotion to duty displayed by all personnel at Fort Benning throughout the past year. You may take great pride and satisfaction in your contribution to the vital mission of the U. S. Armed Forces.

I hope that each of you will be able to participate in the traditional religious observances of your choice, and that you will enjoy the recreational activities planned for your entertainment on and off the Post.

TIC Sergeant Major Re-Ups for Final Tour

After more than 27 years of Army service, SMaj. Welborne A. Callahan, Infantry Center sergeant major, re-enlisted recently for his final tour of duty.

After being discharged last Tuesday, Sgt. Callahan re-enlisted for three years, his last in the Army. He was sworn in by Col. William A. McKee, Infantry Center chief of staff.

Sgt. Callahan entered the Army Nov. 1, 1934, at Fort McPherson. In World War II he served with the 24th Infantry Division in the Philippines.

Before assuming his present duties with The Infantry Center August 15, he had served as sergeant major of The Student Brigade since June 1, 1959.

In the twilight of his Army career, Sgt. Callahan had a word of advice for young soldiers.

"The Army offers almost unlimited opportunities for young men today," he said, "For travel, education, the saving of money, medical and dental aid and many other benefits, the Army is tops. And the re-enlistment bonuses and the pension after retirement should not be overlooked."

(See Picture, Page 2)

Christmas Dinner Is No Simple Task

Planning Christmas dinner for troops at Fort Benning is an art, according to the men in The Infantry Center's Troop Issue Section.

A practical art, its primary skill is ordering the right amount of groceries before one knows how many guests there will be.

Eight months ago, MSgt. Woody G. Royster put in the first requisition for food for Christmas dinner when he ordered fruit cake, mince meat, nuts and candy. In October, he ordered other items.

The quantities were determined through long experience in meal planning in terms of hundreds of people.

"We usually feed 50 per cent of the men assigned to the post. Take into consideration such changes as the influx of Reservists recently called up, estimate how many men will go home on leave, then add a highly flexible number of guests who may be invited to the various messes, and you know just how many people will be coming to Christmas dinner. My formula gives me approximately 12,000 people to feed this time," he said.

"Then there are the 'satellite' units we feed, such as Reserve units in Columbus and Albany, Ga., and in Montgomery, Ala.," he continued.

"To get an idea of what Christmas dinner means to this office, just imagine that you are a housewife who must not only supply the groceries for the holiday meal in her own home but in the home of every relative down to her fourth and fifth cousins," Sgt. Royster said.

Each unit submits a requisition to Troop Issue These are processed by SFC Dewey C. McCormack.

The frozen turkeys, 550 of them, were issued yesterday to allow for thawing and preparing the birds for baking. The turkeys will go into the ovens Christmas morning.

The menu, planned by the Office of the Quartermaster General in Washington, D. C., includes shrimp cocktail, roast turkey with bread dressing, giblet gravy, cranberry sauce, mashed potatoes, brown sweet potatoes, buttered peas, whole grain corn, assorted relishes, hot rolls and butter, pumpkin and mince meat pies, assorted nuts, candy and fresh fruit, tea, coffee and milk.

In terms of quantitites, this one meal at Fort Benning will require 11,000 pounds of turkey, 466,560 shrimp, 4,105 pounds of Irish potatoes, 4,105 pounds of sweet potatoes, 1,305 pounds of frozen peas, 1,867 pounds of frozen corn, 37,334 rolls, 18,667 pieces of pie, 800 pounds of fruit cake, 6,000 pounds of fresh fruit and 53,760 pats of butter.

FINAL THREE . . . SMaj. Welborne A. Callahan, right, is sworn in for his last three years of Army duty by Col. William A. McKee, Infantry Center chief of staff. Callahan, sergeant major of The Infantry Center since Aug. 15, has completed 27 years of Army service which began Nov. 1, 1934, at Fort McPherson. (See story, page 1.)

Secretary's Greetings

It is no mere coincidence that the angelic proclamation at the Nativity, " . . . on earth peace, good will toward men," so nearly describes the underlying purpose of our Nation's military forces. For generations past, Americans have built both personal hopes and national policies around that exultant cry. We are prepared again today to work with all nations for peace through the triumph of good will, while firmly opposing any surrender of the values for which Christmas stands.

You can take great pride in the part you are playing in this effort, for without the strength you help provide, the noblest national intentions would amount to little more than wishful thinking. Some of you are stationed in foreign lands, far from home and the people you love. Others of you have only recently interrupted your careers to serve again in your country's cause. Many of you have had to lay aside for awhile your ambitions to further your education or to begin your life's work. All of you have earned the Nation's respect and gratitude, and I am sure I speak also for your families, friends, and neighbors when I salute you at this Christmas season for your loyalty and service.

In the fervent hope that our efforts together will soon bring the gift of Christmas—of peace and good will—to the whole uniting world. I extend my sincere wishes to you and your families for a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

Sp-4 Harold Kitching

Well, Christmas is almost here again. And, it will be with us for the next five years, at least.

Last year at this time, Sfc Merry Christmas re-enlisted in the Army for another six years.

Can't you just see him walking into the re-enlistment office? The conversation would probably go something like this:

"I'd like to re-enlist?"

"Sure thing. What's your name?"

"Merry Christmas."

"I appreciate the sentiment, but your name please?"

"Merry Christmas."

"And a Happy New Year to you, too, but what's your name?"

Now something like that could go on forever!

Merry Christmas to You, Too

The BAYONET has received a "mighty fine" Christmas card from Mrs. Marie L. Scipio, of Los Angeles, Calif. The Scipios were once stationed here before they left for the Air Force Base in 1947. Mrs. Scipio's husband put in a total of 43 years and 8 months of military service.

"I do wish I was there (Fort Benning) with my many friends," Mrs. Scipio said. She also expressed the desire to come back for a visit.

The BAYONET would like to take this opportunity to wish a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year to Mrs. Scipio and her friends —we are sure she has many.

We Wonder How Many Now?

Another thing brought up last year was the fact that Santa Claus, Ga., was still the state's smallest incorporated town, even though the population had increased 250 per cent over the last ten years.

In 1950, Santa Claus had a population of two; last year there were five.

That's -30- for this Week

We close now with a salute to the punster, to whom nothing escapes his sense of humor . . . to wit:

A ranking member of the Soviet regime was having an argument with his spouse in Moscow recently:

SHE: But I say it's just misting."

HE: "Quiet—Rudolph, the Red, knows rain, dear."

Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt Tells:

How You Can Help Your Country

There never was, it seems to me, a much more crucial time in the history not only of the United States but of the world than the period we are at present living through, and so our Armed Forces have an important role to play in keeping themselves at the highest level of efficiency.

They are actually engaged in a war of nerves. They must show how completely we are disciplined and prepared for war and yet how much we hope to avoid it.

No accident must happen to complicate an already difficult situation and yet we must be on the alert to note any move in the struggle for power which is now going on. The spirit of the soldier is an all important factor not only in his own particular work but in what he imparts to his family and his friends.

We want above everything else to keep peace in the world but we know that there is a power struggle going on in which the leaders in the Kremlin strive to show the world that they have greater power and that they are more determined to be better prepared for any emergency than we are.

We must, therefore, show by preparation at home, by improvement in our economic situation, by our willing cooperation whether it is in preparation for Civil Defense or whether it is in any other service that our government sees fit to ask of us, that we are ready to meet it in order to back up our Armed Forces and our leaders.

We have a far higher standard of living than have the people of the Soviet Union. We want to preserve the essentials of good living for our people and that means that we must have education, health services, good housing, and abundant food. These are the basis of a good standard of living.

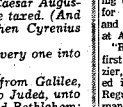
We have added on to these many others and many luxuries and temporarily we may have to curtail some of these. We have to recognize that we have much rapidly than can the not fully used production in order to reduce unemployment. There are, of course, in every country some unemployables that have to be carried by the rest of the community, but at the present time, it seems to me, it is almost urgent that we show the Communist countries of the world that we can use our full productive power which includes the full use of our manpower.

In a period of emergency the people of the United States have always had to grant to their government certain powers that curtailed their freedom for a time, and the time may be here when this must happen again, but we can meet this situation and build our power within us which built our country from its very beginnings into the great strength that was ours at the end of World War II.

We do not want war but both in military measures and in civilian life we may have to submit to disciplines we have not usually submitted to in order to have the strength to prevent war and save the world.

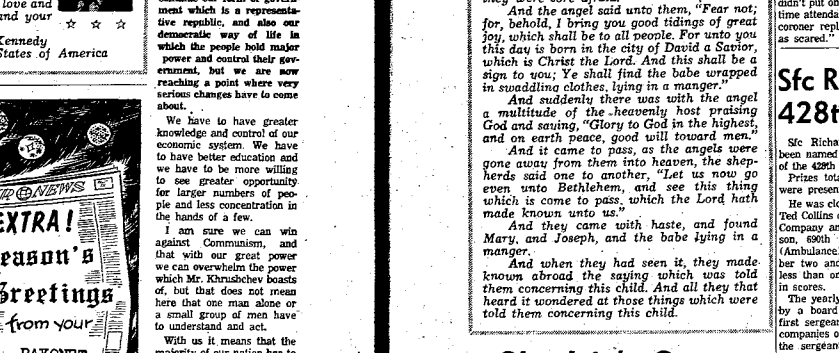
Mr. Khrushchev has said on several occasions that he would bury us. By that I don't think he means physically that he will bury us. I think he means much more specifically that he, with his firm belief in Communism, or, as he calls it, socialist methods, can achieve results which we would never be willing to accept the necessary discipline to achieve.

Freedom and participation by the people in their government requires a very high order of education, intelligence and discipline. So far we have shown that we have been capable of doing what is necessary in every crisis that arises to preserve our essential freedoms and to continue our form of government which is a representative republic, and also our democratic way of life in which the people hold major power and control their government, but we are now reaching a point where very serious changes have to come about.



We have to have greater knowledge and control of our economic system. We have to have better education and we have to be more willing to see greater opportunity for larger numbers of people and less concentration in the hands of a few.

I am sure we can win against Communism, and that with our great power we can overwhelm the power which Mr. Khrushchev boasts of, but that does not mean here that one man alone or a small group of men have to understand and act.



With us it means that the majority of our nation has to understand and act and to be back of their leader and give him the support he needs and the power to act for us. This is a great responsibility for every individual citizen, and we need to be conscious of it in these days.

Eleanor Roosevelt (Mrs. F.D.)

As Commander-in-Chief and as the representative of the American people whom you serve so well, I send you Christmas Greetings for 1961. All the Nation looks to the spirit, courage and determination of our Armed Forces in support of peace and freedom. May you find joy and satisfaction during the Christmas season in the love and faith of your families and your countrymen.

John F. Kennedy
President, United States of America

For the Gift of Christmas Spirit Try Giving Yourself

The stores are jammed with last-minute shoppers; the marvelous mechanical toys are bobbing and whirring; great glossy firs and spruces glow with lights in public squares. It's another Christmas, and all the peoples who observe this incomparable festival around the world can take time out from tension to attend a birthday party.

And a birthday party is, of course, an occasion for joy. Christmas is the joyous season, but joy — true joy — is much more than gift-swapping and gluttonizing. It is honest delight in being members of the human fraternity — a time to throw old distrusts and grudges out the window and substitute charity and good will in the spirit of the Nativity.

"Peace on earth" — has that splendid phrase, the sum of man's hopes through the centuries ever had more meaning for us that at Christmas 1961? Wherever the season finds us, helping to preserve such peace as the world enjoys, we respond in our hearts to its message. And in responding we give the ultimate gift — ourselves, each of us dedicated to something outside and above preoccupation with creature comforts. We in the service are looked to by all our fellow Americans as the guardians of the best way of life the world has ever known.

Christmas is a time of wonder, as the Wise Men wondered. For children it is a time of pulse-racing excitement, and their elders are given their greatest gift when they make it a memorable event for them. Gift-wrapping, tree-trimming, the hanging of lights, the carol singing, the holiday feast — we can remember their magic from our own childhood and we cherish the memories.

Many of us this Christmas will be far from our homes and families — but near them in spirit, and by letting them know this we are offering them something that can't be bought in any department store or exchange but is of infinitely higher value.

South Carolina Army Reserve Unit Is Becoming LAAC 'Right Arm'

BY MSGT. CHARLES A. QUINN

Where there was one mechanic engaged at each task in the Lawson Army Air Command maintenance hangar, two aircraft mechanics are now deeply absorbed in the jobs at hand — one a Regular Army man, the other an Army Reservist of the 414th Transportation Company, Greenville, S. C.

Going into their third month of active duty at The Infantry Center, the Reservists have become part of the huge operation at LAAC, which keeps post pilots in the air and at their particular job of supplying air support to The Infantry School.

ONE OF THREE

The 414th is one of only three direct aircraft support units of its kind in the Army, according to 1st Lt. Mason G. Alexander, executive officer.

Lt. Alexander said the company was first organized in 1959 with the mission of providing third echelon maintenance for divisional aviation units and other non-divisional units at Army and corps levels.

"Right now," said the 414th's first sergeant, William P. Frazier, "our men are integrated into OJT positions beside Regulars of the Lawson Command's maintenance crews."

The veteran "top-kick" said in this way the unit was accomplishing the same mission which the company would fulfill if it were "on its own" in the field.

SCARED TO DEATH

The Chicago coroner asked permission to hire a second attendant for the night shift at the county morgue because the present attendant is afraid to stay alone in the morgue with the bodies. When asked why he didn't put one of the three daytime attendants on the job, the coroner replied, "They're just as scared."

This same system of integrated training, he said, was used to advantage during the unit's annual field training at Simmons Field at Fort Bragg. Home station for the Greenville unit is Donaldson Air Force Base, he said.

HIGH EDUCATION

"Let's not forget the education level of the unit," reminded the company's supply sergeant, Charles Gilreath.

Gilreath said the men of his outfit averaged a healthy 13-year level of formal schooling.

This, he said, was in consonance with the elite position of the company as one of the few of its kind. When the unit was activated in June, 1959, according to the supply sergeant, membership was decided through careful screening of applicants.

Quartered in one of the modern troop billets in the 1st Infantry Brigade area, the company had just successfully passed a pre-IG inspection by staff officers and teams from the Lawson Command.

It wasn't actually an inspection, Sgt. Frazier said, but a check made by the hosting organization to suggest and correct matters of administration, supply and unit operation in preparation for the formal inspection by the inspector general.

The gleam of waxed floors in the unit's squad room vied with shining combat boots sharply aligned at bunks showing not the first sign of a wrinkle.

"The pre-inspection action consisted of a stand-by formation of all personnel with each man's full complement of field gear and clothing laid out," Sgt. Frazier said, adding that his company came through the stiff scrutiny with colors flying.

The "real thing," he stated, when the Inspector General section team would go over the unit with the proverbial fine-tooth comb. From this traditionally rigid inspection, the operational readiness of a unit is as readily discerned as are troop proficiency, fitness and morale levels, and its skill in administrative and supply procedure.

DIVERSIFIED

Comprised of teachers, mechanics, college students, textile industry employees, salesmen and a score of other civilians, men of the 414th feel they can stand "spit and polish" inspections with the best outfits.

They believe the unit will sail through the coming inspection as it did the pre-inspection.

This "why shoot for an 'Excellent' rating when a 'Superior' could be as easily won" attitude is supported by the fact that eight of its members are already well into advanced rotary - wing maintenance schooling at Fort Rucker.

"Although we're one of the few units of this type," Lt. Alexander said, "we are by no means a so-called 'glamor' outfit."

AWARENESS

The former hotel manager added that the 414th was well aware of the critical nature of its mission. He said not a man fails to understand that the lives of pilots and crews depend upon his individual skill as an aircraft mechanic, if not the success of an entire combat mission.

The 414th's commander is 1st Lt. Byron L. Clark, a professional pilot with a civilian aircraft corporation.

The acceptance of his Reserve unit into the circle of Lawson Command units Lt. Clark termed to be nothing short of "fabulous."

READY ASSISTANCE

"A Lawson Command officer or NCO was ready to assist us at every point of operation," the lieutenant said.

He added that from the time the unit arrived at The Infantry Center, it received high level support from Lawson Command personnel.

In turn, he said, the 414th was doing its utmost to reach the objective of all U.S. Army aircraft maintenance units — "Keep 'em Flying."

The Christmas Story

The Christmas story, according to the second chapter of Luke:

And it came to pass in those days, that there went out a decree from Caesar Augustus, that all the world should be taxed. (And this taxing was first made when Cyrenius was governor of Syria.)

And all went to be taxed, every one into his own city.

And Joseph also went up from Galilee, out of the city of Nazareth, into Judea, unto the city of David, which is called Bethlehem; (because he was of the house and lineage of David:) to be taxed with Mary his espoused wife, being great with child.

And so it was, that, while they were there, the days were accomplished that she should be delivered.

And she brought forth her firstborn son, and wrapped him in swaddling clothes, and laid him in a manger; because there was no room in the inn.

And there were in the same country shepherds abiding in the field, keeping watch over their flock by night. And, lo, the angel of the Lord shone round about them: and they were sore afraid.

And the angel said unto them, "Fear not; for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people. For unto you this day is born in the city of David a Savior, which is Christ the Lord. And this shall be a sign to you; Ye shall find the babe wrapped in swaddling clothes, lying in a manger."

And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God and saying, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men."

And it came to pass, as the angels were gone away from them into heaven, the shepherds said one to another, "Let us now go even unto Bethlehem, and see this thing which is come to pass, which the Lord hath made known unto us."

And they came with haste, and found Mary, and Joseph, and the babe lying in a manger.

And when they had seen it, they made known abroad the saying which was told them concerning this child. And all they that heard it wondered at those things which were told them concerning this child.

Sfc Richard Doby Named 428th's Soldier of Year

Sfc Richard M. Doby has been named NCO of the Year of the 428th Medical Battalion.

Prizes totaling over $150 were presented to the winner.

He was closely paced by Sgt. Ted Collins of the 50th Medical Company and Sgt. Frank Wilson, 69th Medical Company (Ambulance), who won number two and three spots with less than one point difference in scores.

The yearly contest is judged by a board composed of the first sergeants of each of the companies of the battalion and the sergeant major of either the battalion or the Third Field Hospital who acts as chairman and senior member.

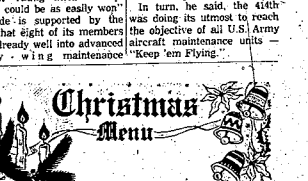
The board this year was comprised of Sgt. Major Robert P. Gallavotti, Third Field Hospital; 1st Sgt. William E. Boyle, 690th; 1st Sgt. Alonzo Newbern, 50th; 1st Sgt. John Driskill, 128th Medical Company (Ambulance); 1st Sgt. William J. Gilbert, 129th Medical Company (Clearing); 1st Robert Church, Third Field Hospital; and 1st Sgt. Douglas A. Suitt, 69th Medical Company (Clearing).

Sfc Doby is a veteran of the Korean conflict. He was awarded the Silver Star and the Bronze Star Medal for action there. He was graduated from the 2nd Division NCO Academy last year near the top of the class. He is now assigned as a platoon sergeant at the Third Field Hospital.

Others competing in the week-long contest included Sfc Ernest Smith of the 216th, Sfc C. M. Fell of the 128th, Sfc Rudolph Pierce of the 129th and Sfc Francis Frein of Headquarters Detachment.

The selection was based on lesson plans and presenting a class, a demonstration of drill and ceremony ability, military bearing and characteristics of a soldier, and the candidate's knowledge of general subjects and world events.

Chaplain's Corner



On behalf of the Armed Forces Chaplains Board, I extend greetings, best wishes and a Merry Christmas to all Armed Forces personnel and their families.

It is our mission in the Armed Forces to keep the peace — to this end we have dedicated our strength. God grant that we may be able to accomplish this mission in a manner to give glory to God in the highest and share good will with all men everywhere.

Wherever we may be stationed in the vast complex of American military installations that extend around the world, may we celebrate this Christmas in reverence and humility as we kneel in the spirit of the shepherds to pay homage to the Christ Child.

During this holy season when our thoughts turn back to the manger of Bethlehem and that first glorious Christmas, let us take up the ancient message and proclaim to the world anew: "For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord."

FRANK A. TOBEY

DNRI Annual Christmas Party Held at Benning's Country Club

The Department of Non-Resident Instruction staged its annual Christmas party on the evening of December 16 in the ballroom of the Fort Benning Country Club, with Colonel and Mrs. Richard W. Keyes, Deputy Assistant Commandant, as the honored guests of Colonel and Mrs. G. Harfry Huppert, Director of the department.

Decorations were the traditional holly leaves and candles of the Christmas season. Four large wreaths of pine and magnolia were given as door prizes.

Cocktails and buffet dinner were followed by dancing and the presentation of gifts to Capt. and Mrs. John W. Terhune in farewell to Capt. Terhune who retires in February.

The Department of Non-Resident Instruction is the agency of The Infantry School responsible for the preparation, distribution, and grading of instructional material for Infantry civilian components, National Guard Officer Candidate schools, and the Army Extension Courses of the Infantry Branch.

Woman's Club Diary

Although it is just a few days until Christmas and all of us are in the throes of last-minute shopping and parties, the Woman's Club is already planning a variety of activities for the coming New Year. If you are already finding the parties are adding inches to your waistline, you will want to be the first to enroll in the Slim 'n Trim classes in January. Mrs. Neil Stewart, 545-2517, can tell you more about this proven way to dissolve inches and pounds.

Charm and Modelling Classes for both teenagers and adults will begin in January. Contact Mrs. B. F. Dobson, MU 9-7340 for starting dates.

Now that you have a few extra hours to kill, and all sorts of good resolutions for the New Year already in mind, why not resolve to learn something new? Sewing, Tailoring, and Upholstering Classes will begin just after New Year's. If you have children, I can speak from experience in saying that Sewing is a necessity not a hobby. And what better way to prepare for Spring than with a new suit, tailored by yourself? Mr. Scovill, 545-1906, will be happy to enroll you in a class.

Each member of the Board of the Woman's Club joins me in wishing you and yours the most joyful of Holidays.

Etiquette

Questions Answered

By Jenni Johnson

This is the 4th in the series on questions concerning Christmas-card sending from "Amy Vanderbilt's Complete Book of Etiquette".

Should Christmas cards be sent to your Jewish friends? Not ordinarily to deeply religious Orthodox Jews. But it is perfectly all right to send them to your Jewish friends who consider Christmas the national gift-giving holiday. Avoid sending them cards, though, that illustrate the Nativity. (Perhaps a New Year card would do most appropriately.

Should a person who has had a recent death in the family send Christmas cards? The modern feeling is that we do not shut off warm contacts with our friends during our period of mourning.

Should you send a Christmas card to someone in mourning? There's no objection, especially if it is a religious, loving or thoughtful card. Naturally, avoid cards showing pictures of gravestones or other cards in similar bad taste.

LIKE THIS . . . Cheryl Ely, a student of the School of Dance at the Woman's Club, demonstrates the techniques that have been taught to more than a thousand students in the past five years. Children of all post civilian and military personnel are eligible.

DNRI Ladies Monthly Lunch

The theme of the forthcoming holiday season recently prevailed throughout the Anzio Room of the Main Officers' Open Mess as the ladies of the Department of Non-Resident Instruction gathered for their monthly luncheon.

Miniature snowmen amid seasonal foliage formed a centerpiece for each table. Following the luncheon Christmas gifts were exchanged.

Mrs. Claude W. Sites and Mrs. Richard N. Lang were hostesses for the luncheon.

Career Ladies Hold Luncheon

A Christmas coffee was given December 12 by the ladies of the Third Platoon, career course No. 1, 2nd Battalion, Student Brigade at Fort Benning.

The main table held a trimmed tree, and the individual tables, tied with red crepe ribbon and topped with pine cones and multicolored balls, were decorated as Christmas packages.

After refreshments were served, Mrs. Raymond Nutter, aided by Mrs. George Neroutsos, Mrs. Robert Nourse and Mrs. Maynard Nelson, distributed the Christmas gifts.

Mr. John Meese thanked the third squad which had planned the coffee and made several announcements.

BROWNIE PARTY

Mrs. John J. Donnelly's Brownie Troop 85 held its annual Christmas party at the Capehart Cottage on December 19th at 3:30 p.m. Co-hostesses were Mrs. Herman A. Payne and Mrs. William Ard.

OCS Wives' Club Holds Luncheon

The 50th Officer Candidate Company Wives' Club recently held a graduation luncheon at the Custer Terrace Officers Club, Mrs. Thomas J. Medley presiding.

Diplomas were presented to the OC wives by Mrs. John W. McClair after which a program of Christmas Carols was given.

Honored guests were Mesdames Otto R. Koch, James Donoghey, John W. McClair, William L. Webster, Ed Vaughn, Edward Lensen, Kirmit Southern and Richard Klim.

TSB Officer's Wives Hold Holiday Luncheon

Dozens of gay miniature Santa's elves helped create a holiday atmosphere at the monthly luncheon of The Student Brigade Wives, held at the Custer Terrace Officers' Club on Thusday, Decemer 14th.

The tiny red and white figures, all created by Mrs. Jan Sveen, slid down the snow-covered roof and frolicked in the yard of the brown cottage forming the centerpiece on the main table, peeked out of the arrangements of candles, holly, and pine that centered each individual table, and nestled in the foliage of the Christmas corsages presented the honored guests.

The ladies of the Fourth Student Battalion were hostesses for the event. A choral group, composed of Mrs. Chumley Waldrop, Mrs. Delmar Corbin, Mrs. Kazuo Agena, Mrs. Donald Johansen, and Mrs. James Watson, led the others in singing Christmas carols. Mrs. Joseph Hacia, dressed in scarlet gown, nightcap and slippers, acted as Mrs. Santa Claus and distributed a gift to each guest. Mrs. Otto R. Koch welcomed Mrs. Oliver Aspinwall and Mrs. Joseph Hacia, and introduced the guests, who were Mrs. Richard Keyes, Mrs. Bernard Teeters, Mrs. Michael Paulick, Mrs. Rupp, Mrs. Rawls, and Mrs. Pete Rademacher.

December is here again and we of Fort Benning have begun to make ready for Christmas. Most clubs are doing some worthy project during this season. Giving is a blessing which all of us should be conscious of. If we take part of our time and do something for someone else our days would be far more enjoyable. Won't you give it a try?

Backs were aching, muscles were stiff, and bruises were numerous as Columbus High senior girls awoke Sunday December 3. Saturday night was spent in charging down the field at the Municiple Stadium with flag in pocket and pigskin tucked under arm. We are proud of the Benningites who participated in the game. Thanks for representing us so well. The "powder puff" game was enjoyed as a different type of night. The women deciding to make some changes in this man's world really took over in every way.

Twirp season characterized by girls with empty pockets drew to a close as men with batons and rah-rah skirts and girls in jerseys and ears decided that it was fun, but things were best as they were in the beginning.

Junior Army Daughters of America had its December luncheon on the 9th. The main topics of discussion were the charity project and the traditional Christmas Ball. The Ball is slated for the night of December 23. The evening will be highlighted by the crowning of the queen and her court. These girls are elected because of their numerable services rendered to JADA.

Pacelli High is the first of local schools to have a girls basketball team. December 2 they won their first game against Mt. Desales of Macon. Liz Reynolds, high scorer, made 15 of the 24 points. Other Benningites include Mary Mike Magner, Bonnie Male, Marty Cowan, Leigh Vessar and Jerry Vessar, manager. The boys were also victorious that night against Mt. Desales. The teams of both schools ate supper together after the game and attended Open House. Athletic boys are eagerly awaiting arrival of their letters which are well deserved from football season.

Recently the Pacelli juniors were measured for their senior rings which will arrive in May. The ring style is unchanged.

The Christmas spirit will be spread by JADA carolers Friday, December 22. All members are reminded to meet in the old hospital parking area at 7 p.m. At 9 a get together with refreshments is planned for the participating carolers.

One of Fort Benning's Bands played a Christmas program for Pacellians last Wednesday. The arrangements set the mood for the holidays. Students at Pacelli are enthusiastically working to win the Walkathon for the March of Dimes again this year.

On the hardwood court defeat was suffered by both girls and boys of Pacelli. Squads from Marion pulled the trick. In an overtime the Baker Lions roared to a narrow victory against Central. Columbus scored above Baker in an exhibition game. The Blue Devils then went down under Central's power in a league game.

With two days left until Christmas, we'd like to remind everyone that the spirit of giving is in itself rewarding. Let's make this Christmas the best yet in every way. Wishing you a very MERRY CHRISTMAS.

Officer Wives Hold Luncheon

Mrs. R. Cook and Mrs. L. Staley were hostesses at a recent luncheon held for the officers wives of the Communication Department.

Before lunch the ladies were served cranberry punch and after lunch Mrs. Cook played a recording that she made in Japan in 1948 of a group of Japanese children singing Christmas carols.

The centerpiece, made of advent candles, was given as the door prize.

Mrs. Toro, wife of a Chilean officer, was guest of Mrs. Charles Benge.

Detects Wet Feet

WASHINGTON (ANS) —Wired for sound, a pair of socks can signal the wearer that his feet are wet long before he can feel they're even damp.

A new detector device, called "Aquatek," developed by the U. S. Army Quartermaster Corps, is being used for locating and measuring moisture penetration of leather combat boots undergoing field testing.

Moisture penetration changes the electrical resistance of the sock and the sensitive device instantly "beeps" to tell the soldier that his boot is leaking. Quartermaster Corps scientists can use these test results to improve boots and leather for America's fighting men.

Available Support Shown To Div's Infantrymen

More than 3,000 Infantrymen Tuesday witnessed 2nd Division Artillery's first full firepower demonstration.

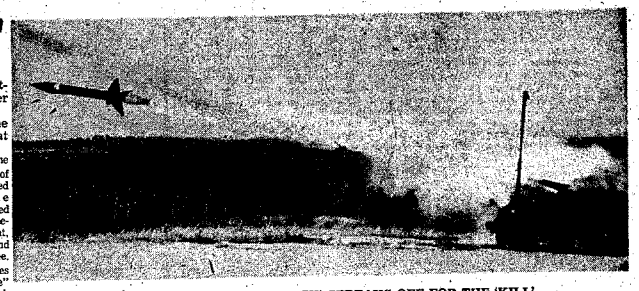
The objective: to acquaint them with the massive artillery support available in a combat situation.

Participating in the hour-and-a-half demonstration, in addition to Headquarters and the six firing battalions of Div-Arty, were the heavy mortar platoon from the 11th Infantry's Combat Support Company, a firing section from the 10th Artillery's Battery C and the 2nd Aviation Company's Drone Section.

Narrator

Major Carl L. Forslund, assistant fire support center coordinator of Division Artillery, was the narrator for the demonstration at Concord Outpost.

He first defined the artillery's basic problem of locating targets accurately on both the ground and the map, and then introduced Captain Charles T. Gibson, of the Division's Aviation Company, who demonstrated the capability of the SD-1 Drone aircraft to assist in solving this problem of target location.



This was followed by Major Forslund's introduction of the several calibers of weapons of the Division Artillery and a demonstration in front of the stands of the effectiveness of these weapons in direct aimed fire. In this technique, the Artillery cannons are handled like an Infantryman's rifle, seeing the target through the sight, allowing for elevation and windage, and zeroing the piece.

Targets up to three miles away were hit "on the nose" in this demonstration, which Brigadier General Royal Reynolds, Jr., the assistant division commander, described as "the finest shooting" he had ever seen.

The trajectory of an Artillery round was then shown by firing from the 8 - inch howitzer "charge 1," which could be seen by the spectators all the way to the target, and by firing several air bursts with different fuze settings from one of the distant 105-millimeter batteries.

This was followed by the Redlegs' "show-off tricks," in which a high-angle round and a low-angle round are both

Div Christmas Lighting Ceremony Marks Start of '61 Holiday Season

By GORDON ALDERMAN

The 2nd Infantry Division's 1961 Holiday season opened officially Monday night with the annual Christmas lighting ceremony.

Officiating at the ceremony at Division Headquarters parade field was Brigadier General Royal Reynolds Jr., commanding general, in the absence of Major General Charles H. Chase. Gen. Chase was attending a meeting at Fort Campbell, Kentucky.

"Let these lights symbolize the light of hope to free men all over the world," declared Gen. Reynolds as he turned on the Christmas lights. At the same instant, a signal went out over the command radio net, work, and the Christmas lights of units throughout the 2nd Infantry Division area twinkled to life.

Starts Promptly

The lighting ceremony, postponed once by inclement weather, began promptly at 6:30 p.m. with a medley of Christmas carols by the Division Band and Chorus. Under the direction of Chief Warrant Officer Mariano Morales, the band and chorus played portions of "A Christmas Party" and other holiday music.

Following an invocation by Chaplain (Major) Clement P. J. Krug, assistant division chaplain, the audience of more than 300 joined in singing "Silent Night."

"...may He give us direction in a world moving toward darkness and confusion," said Chaplain Krug in his invocation, "and may He engender in us a courage that will give us hope to live in the future a better life here and a perfect life hereafter."

In the lighting ceremony, General Reynolds prefaced the actual lighting ceremony with these remarks:

"Good evening, ladies and gentlemen, officers and men of the 2nd Infantry Division. General Chase is away on an official trip to Fort Campbell and has asked me to represent him on this occasion.

"The fine music this evening serves notice that once again the Christmas season is here. You probably felt as I did the nostalgia of childhood as we sang these carols of old. Christmas time is indeed a moving time.

"It is a time of remembering old friends and Christmases past. . .of Christmas morning with the family gathered around the brightly-trimmed tree with its many gaily-wrapped presents beneath.

"But there is more to Christmas than the tree, the lights,

9th Inf. to Help Needy Families, Orphans In Lieu of Giving Self a Christmas Party

BY CLAY LACY

One major unit of the 2nd Division has decided to make Christmas of 1961 a happy time for needy families and orphans of the local area. The 2nd Battle Group, 9th Infantry voted to dispense with the usual practice of a huge party for youngsters of the unit in favor of helping the less fortunate.

A committee headed by Chaplain Horace Sams Jr. has been formed in the Manchu unit to supervise the Christmas program. Serving as treasurer of the group with about $500 to spend wisely is Lieutenant Ben G. Nordell, Combat Support Company.

Coordinator

Chief coordinator for the group will be the 9th's top enlisted man, Sergeant Major James L. Runyon. To confirm needy families, Sergeant Dalmar S. Cox, Combat Support Company, will serve the group as investigator.

Other appointments on the committee include Mrs. Runyon and Mrs. J. C. Coody, wife of Company E's first sergeant, as buyers; and Mrs. George M. Wallace, wife of the 9th's S-3 Officer, and Mrs. Wendell F. Delamar, wife of the S-4 Officer, as wrappers.

The group has three main phases to implement in their Christmas campaign. First consideration will be given to families of members of the 9th Infantry who may be in difficult straits this Christmas.

Second phase is other military families on the Fort Benning reservation who would be assisted greatly by food and clothing donations. The third and final phase will be support of youngsters at local orphanages.

The funds collected for this worthwhile project will be used to purchase food staples and clothing. To furnish toys to youngsters, the 9th Infantry has started a toy collection point.

In centrally-located areas throughout the battle group, members of the Manchu tribe can contribute broken and used toys. These will be repaired by the Battle Group Training Aids section and the members of Craft Shop Four, located in the 9th area.

Needy youngsters will be able to appreciate the 9th's efforts this Christmas as they find freshly painted toys under their trees, warm clothing to wear and bountiful supplies of foodstuffs awaiting them.

Tree-Nappers Watch Out--69th Is Prepared

Christmas tree-nappers had better beware the 69th Armor.

In an effort to prevent a repetition of last year's still-unsolved case, the armor battalion is taking positive steps against possible tree burglars.

About this time last year First Sergeant Clifford P. Black, Company A, was standing outside his orderly room when a car came to a sudden halt on 13th Street. As he watched, the driver jumped out, axe in hand and, with one mighty swing, felled his prize tree.

Before Sgt. Black could take appropriate action, the tree-napper had fled the scene of the crime, leaving only a stump. This, Sgt. Black found, was quite difficult to decorate.

Unconfirmed reports indicate that areas surrounding Company A have been "booby-trapped" and completely covered with trip flares. Protective barbed wire is reportedly being placed at this time.

No unsolved tree - napping cases are anticipated.

Speakers Pour Carols Through 9th Inf Area

By 9th Infantry PIO

Despite rainy days and wet boots, the spirits of the 9th Infantry "Manchumen" have not been dampened. Knowing that Christmas is but a few days away and that leave requests have been approved, there are smiles of contentment on the faces of the spirited 9th Infantrymen.

Discussions can be heard coming from barracks, orderly rooms, and administration offices concerning Christmas activities. Each company is preparing its dayroom and messhall with colorful decorations. One notable exterior Christmas preparation is a Nativity scene built by Combat Support Company. The manger and choir of singing angels gracing 3rd Avenue was the project of Sergeant John L. Solomon, Sergeant First Class Everett Lowery and Specialist Five John W. Brown.

Another festive scene is Santa and his reindeer, perched atop the cleaning shop at the 2nd Division entrance. Adding to the growing spirit are carols constantly pouring from speakers placed throughout the battle group area.

Gen Jackson, Visits Here

Major General Abraham C. Jackson, chief of staff of the Armed Forces of Liberia, visited the 2nd Division this week.

General Jackson was escorted on a three-hour tour of division units by Brigadier General Royal Reynolds Jr., assistant division commander.

Following a briefing on the activities of the division's G-3, General Jackson saw a platoon attack live-fire problem by the 11th Infantry's Company D. He also witnessed a tank platoon problem being carried out by the 69th Armor's Company C.

Kelley Hill's 'Best Mess' Awarded 87th Inf Hq.

Headquarters Company, 87th Infantry, recently won the Kelley Hill Best Mess Award for November.

But that's just a part of the story.

Conqueror mess halls have won this award seven out of the last eight months, but Headquarters company deserves special attention, establishing itself as the best mess hall in competition ranging over the past three years.

Ten Times

The division food service records, under the supervision of Chief Warrant Officer Homer White, indicate that Headquarters Company has won "Best Mess" ten times in the past 32 months. Records also show that Headquarters Company has walked away with the award for the past three months.

The man responsible for the record compiled by Headquarters Company is Sergeant First Class Burl D. Clabern, mess steward. Sergeant Clabern has been in the food business, both military and civilian, for most of his 35 years.

fired from the same weapon, with both landings on the same target at the same time.

The several methods of indirect, unobserved fire techniques were then demonstrated, with all battalions of the Division Artillery participating. Consecutively fired were the concentration, the barrage, the preparation, the "all available," and the "TOT." In this latter, the "Time on Target," every weapon of the Artillery is so fired that all rounds strike the same target at the same time, thus combining the massive fire shock with complete surprise and devastating effect.

The demonstration was concluded by the firing of the "Honest John" rocket, a weapon which packs in a single combat warhead the same tremendous power which devastated the Japanese cities of Hiroshima and Nagasaki in 1945, bringing World War II to a close.

Colonel Frank A. Ozmanski, commanding officer of the Division Artillery, concluded the demonstration by addressing the spectators on behalf of Major General Charles H. Chase, the division commanding general, and conveying holiday greetings to them and their families.

Sequel demonstrations of the same type are planned for the next few months in order that all other personnel of the Division may see this display of their Artillery in action.

Music was furnished by the U. S. Army Infantry Center Band. Because of the close time interval between a preceding engagement and the demonstration, the band was airlifted by helicopter to the field site of the fire demonstration.

13th Trans 'Best Mess'

Major General Charles H. Chase, commanding general, presented Sergeant First Class Leonard Harris, mess steward of Company A, (Truck), 13th Transportation Battalion, the "Best Mess Award" for the Sand Hill Area for November.

The ceremony took place in the Company A mess hall. Lieutenant Colonel C. G. Collins, battalion commander, Major Marshal Whitlier, Division Trains executive officer, and Captain Warren A. Jones, commanding officer of Company A, also were present.

Sergeant Harris, a native of Madison, Florida, entered the Army in 1942 at Fort Bragg, North Carolina. No stranger to the "best mess circle," Company A and Sergeant Harris won the monthly award twice and the "Best Mess-of-the-Year" Award last year.

'Message of Hope'

"There is a message of hope in Christmas. Hope brought by the birth long ago of Jesus Christ and the promise of 'Peace on Earth, Good Will To Men.'

"It is this hope that men of the free world must today defend. We in the military must stay strong; ready to defend that hope wherever tyranny would smother the freedom of man.

"Our determination for 'Peace on Earth' shines as a beacon to those of troubled lands who live in darkness and oppression. As I light our Christmas decorations, may it symbolize the light of hope to freedom-loving men of all nations.

"Let this be our Christmas message, 'Joy to the World, The Lord is Come; Let Earth Receive Her King.'

"A very merry Christmas to each and every one of you."

Following more group singing, the division chaplain, Lieutenant Colonel James H. Fiser, read "The Christmas Story."

The program concluded with carols, and the benediction, given by Chaplain (Major) Alfred P. Lam.

Following the actual lighting ceremony, refreshments were served to the guests, who then toured the division area to view the unit Christmas decorations.

I like to think that the Star in our Indian Head Patch also indicates that same hope for all nations.

For it bears witness of those brave men who have fought in three wars and those who are ready now to fight again if need be so that all men may be free and live in Peace.

Within the ranks of our Association are many dedicated men who give of their time and talents to preserve the friendships among ourselves and our Active Division.

So, to all of you who have shown a great loyalty to our Association by supporting your officers, our "Indianhead" and our beautiful mounment . . I extend to you on behalf of your Association the sincere wish that you each enjoy a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

Friction Slows American Forces' Attempt At Their Type of Fighting 'Over There'

BY GORDON ALDERMAN

The 2nd Infantry Division's first Christmas was spent—like this one—"getting combat ready."

Organized October 26, 1917, at Bourmont, France, the division was in the midst of its first phase of training as the Yuletide season approached. The average doughboy of the Indianhead division probably felt at a low ebb at this time, away from home at Christmas, in a strange and war-torn country. . .perhaps he cursed the fates that had led him down this path. . .blissfully ignorant of what lay ahead. . .never dreaming that storm clouds of dissension were brewing at Allied headquarters. . .clouds that would eventually have a far greater effect on his life than the thundering guns of the Boche, on the Western Front so many miles away.

This was the situation as the 2nd Division underwent its training. Troops, as such, were training under a three-phase method. . .The first month of training devoted to small units, the second month devoted to training the units in battalion sizes with French divisions in quiet sectors, the third month devoted to training the division as a whole.

Paralleling this troop training, a system of schools was provided. The 2nd Division was to conduct such elementary schools as it might find necessary for its own purposes. Higher up the ladder, each Army corps was to set up schools for officers and for non-commissioned officers, and training courses for replacements. Army schools, under the immediate direction of General Headquarters, were to train staff officers, instructors for corps schools, officer candidates and specialists of various kinds; also, to fix and control the tactical doctrine to be taught throughout the expeditionary forces.

The rub was in the last area of instruction.

The French and British officers already on the scene, veterans of years of fighting, naturally assumed that their duty was to teach the Americans exactly what they were doing themselves, in their own way. Americans were not Frenchmen or Englishmen however, and their ways were not our ways.

Decided friction developed.

The French and British, influenced by their experiences in the peculiar direction the war had taken, brought about by the universal use of trenches, had crystallized their experience into a definite doctrine. They had been unable to study that doctrine objectively, at their leisure, and in a detached frame of mind. Their aggressiveness was blunted, and they had accepted stabilization as a normal situation. . .one which would continue. Their estimate of the value of rifle fire had never been high, and had by now fallen to a point where the rifle was regarded as little more than a bayonet handle.

This was the attitude that faced General John J. Pershing and his staff when they arrived in France.

Santa Abandons Sleigh, Comes to 1st in 'Chopper'

BY 1ST INF PIO

It's a bird . . . It's a plane . . . No, it was Santa Claus via helicopter at the 1st Infantry last Saturday morning. This was the beginning of a day filled with fun and surprises for the kiddies of the "Always First".

Santa's parade through the battle group was followed by approximately 350 children. At headquarters, each of the children was given an opportunity to talk to Saint Nick, telling him what they would like for Christmas.

Of course, the party wouldn't have been complete without Christmas carols. Private First Class James Brown, Headquarters Company, played his accordion and led the children in such songs as "Silent Night" and "Jingle Bells."

Private First Class Keith Jacoby of the 87th Infantry thrilled the children by performing his magic for approximately 30 minutes, following a 30-minute movie, "The Littlest Angel."

The children's attention once again returned to the jolly man with the white beard, as Santa reappeared to pass out presents to the children!

Each child squealed his delight as he opened his presents, made possible through the Cake Bake Sale of the Ladies of the "Always First."

As the party came to a close, the children were given a variety of nuts, candies and fruits.

NCO PROMOTED . . . Master Sergeant Laurence E. Laughlin, Headquarters Battery, Division Artillery, recently was promoted to his present rank.

The Goal: No Fatalities

By Clay Lacy

The holiday season is upon us and many 2nd Division members will be heading for homes across the country to visit with loved ones and families over the Yuletide. Still many others will stay here in the Columbus area during the Christmas-New Year holidays.

The Safety Officer for the 2nd Infantry Division, Lieutenant Carl Melton, has announced that "special attention will be required by every member of the 2nd Division to determine a safe holiday with no fatalities."

Emphasis

Emphasis for the coming holidays, safety-wise, will include precautions in the home, on the road and at social functions. In all activities during the holidays, prevention of accidents by careful observation of safety tips and rules should be stressed.

In the home at Christmas time there are numerous additional hazards for young and old alike. Cold weather requires heating for homes, and here, too, precautions should be taken.

Gas heating devices should be checked thoroughly before use to determine if there are any leaks in the lines or hoses used. Additional care should be taken with devices with built-in pilot lights to assure these stay lit and do not spread lethal fumes throughout the residence.

Another precaution for all heating devices is for the homeowner to assure that no paper or garments are located in the immediate vicinity of the heater. Home fires have been started by clothing which has been hung above a heater for drying and which ignites from the high temperatures by the heater.

Ventilation

Ventilation is essential whenever gas heaters are in operation. Maintain open windows throughout the home to assure proper ventilation.

Another hazard at Christmas time is the overloading of electrical circuits. Almost every family likes to display decorations which require electrical energy in the form of tree lights, window displays, etc. Here, caution must be made to assure no overloading of circuits.

When dealing with electric cords for your decorations, make a physical check of the cord beforehand to determine if there are any frayed spots along the cord with wire exposed. This is conducive to short circuits and sudden fires. Bare spots should be well-taped before using the cord.

Toys are welcome objects to the youngsters on Christmas morning. Here again can be a safety problem. Some toys have sharp corners and projections which can mean the loss of an eye in the hands of a playful child. Parents should check each toy for potential safety hazards before purchase.

Toys can also spell accidents when left about the home on stairways and in doorways. The classic cartoon of a man slipping on a roller skate and tumbling down a flight of stairs is based on the all-too-frequent occurrence of this type accident.

Finally, when finished unwrapping all the Christmas gifts do not overload wastebaskets and leave them in the home. This is a definite invitation for a fire. Wastebaskets should be emptied in covered metal cans outside the home, ridding them of volatile wrappings.

Make this Christmas a happy time for you and your family by observing these safety precautions in your own home. The adage fits at this time of year ... "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure."

13th Trans Kiddies Talk To Mr. Claus

Over 185 youngsters of the 13th Transportation Battalion members celebrated one of the first Christmas parties of the current season last Saturday in the Sand Hill Division Gymnasium.

A committee headed by Sergeant Major Walter Edge decorated the gym in colorful holiday style, capped with a giant Christmas tree.

CoCo

The program began with cartoons for the youngsters, interspersed by routines performed by CoCo the Clown, who served as a master of ceremonies for the affair.

Parents and children joined CoCo in singing carols and seasonal songs highlighting Christmas time. Other fun included youngsters attempting the hokey-pokey, which one mother asserted was the original version of the Twist.

Santa Claus made his triumphal appearance via Armored Personnel Carrier at the hall and presented each child with a stocking full of candy and nuts, as well as a gift. In addition, the Old Man of the North listened intently to urgent requests from the smallfry for bicycles, dolls and other toys.

THE 23RD's 'COLOSSUS' Looking Down Upon Company D

Co D's 'Colossus' Looms Above 23rd Infantry

BY ROBERT GARSTIN

Day and night the men labored, fortified by cup after cup of steaming coffee. The various specialists came in; Sgt. Robert Cunningham, the electronics technician, planned and installed the complex wiring system.

Sgt. Samuel Womack, working late into the night, applied layer upon layer of the protective red coating. The technical advisor, Lt. Waylon Hawkins, carefully supervised and inspected each minute detail of the gigantic project.

Lt. Roland R. Part, spending hours poring over research material and consolidating all available information, came up with the complicated scheme.

After hundreds of hours of frantic labor the project neared completion. The only stumbling block remaining was transporting the massive hulk from the construction site and raising it to its preplanned position.

Working far into the cold, rain-swept night under conditions that would have broken lesser men the gallant construction team labored.

Dawn broke to find the men exhausted but ready for the supreme effort. Then, after another day of back-breaking toil, the mammoth creation was raised into position.

Even to this day, miraculously still in its lofty place in the sun, stands the "Colossus of Delta."

Looming high over Sand Hill is the gigantic Santa Claus of the 23rd Infantry's Company D.

Company-Level Matches Tone Up Basketball Muscles

By 87th Inf PIO

With just about a month to go until the division basketball tournament gets under way, the 87th Infantry company-level competition has jumped off to a fast start.

The double - elimination tournament began on December 8th and, so far, seven games have been completed. The rugged schedule should provide the 87th Infantry with a strong and healthy battle group team. Company E and Company D appear to be the strongest conqueror teams, both winning their first two games by decisive scores.

Hq. Falls

The first game of the tournament saw Echo's big guns romp over Headquarters Company, 61-48. Led by Mel Bankhead, Carlton West and Paul Williams, the Echo team proved too much for Headquarters Company, despite some fine play from Clint Roseberry and Kenneth McClure.

On the same night, Delta Company, led by a 22-point scoring spree by Private First Class Lawery Jordan, toppled Alpha Company in a close one —42-40. The following evening, Bravo company whipped Charlie Company, but Company C came roaring back a few days later with a 50-30 win over Alpha Company.

Echo's second victim was Combat Support Company, winning 49-41. The Echo team had a balanced scoring attack, however. Frank Byrd of Combat Support Company was high man with 19 points.

The best - played game thus far was the Headquarters-Delta game. Tied 30-30 at half-time and 43-43 at the end of the third quarter, Delta Company broke the game wide open in the closing minutes, the score was 67-50. Top performer for Delta Company was Private First Class John Neil with 21 points. League play will resume after the Christmas-New Year holiday period.

Clinic Held by Sp'l Services

The 2nd Division Special Services office last week presented "A Conference of Instruction" for basketball coaches and officials.

After an introduction by Lieutenant Ronnie W. Mills, division special services officer, Master Sergeant Lewis Gray outlined rule changes from last year.

Finer Points

Sgt. Gray and Sergeant Hal Grinols discussed at length and demonstrated the finer points of basketball officiating and the 10 basic rules.

Discussed were equipment, officials and their duties, players and substitutes, scoring and time regulations, out of bounds and throw - in, free-throw rule, fouls and penalties and "live ball and dead ball."

Sgt. Grinols also presented a film to augment the discussions and conducted a question-and-answer period.

'Snorting' Deer Now Just Venison Steaks

BY 87TH INFANTRY PIO

Corporal John Heitzenroder, 87th Infantry, was about ready to give deer hunting back to the Indians one recent chilly morning . . . but a "snort" quickly renewed his faith in the sport.

The "snort" belonged to a 200 - pound, eight - point buck, whose head will soon grace Cpl. Heitzenroder's den at his home in Newark, Delaware.

Returning to his car after a fruitless morning of hunting, Cpl. Heitzenroder heard the snort as he prepared to enter his car. Turning, he managed to get off one hasty shot from his 20 gauge shotgun at the fleeting target. He found the big buck lying about 150 meters away in the prone unsupported position.

After carrying their trophy to the Fort Benning Game and Fish Department, Cpl. Heitzenroder and fellow hunter Sergeant Herbert Darby were told that theirs was one of the largest bucks ever shot in the Benning area.

Cpl. Heitzenroder is assigned to the 87th Infantry's Company E.

OUTDOOR OUTLOOK

By Pfc Don Girton

IT'S TROUT TIME

Although this time of the year seems like the most unlikely time to go and try ones luck at fishing, ordinary Georgia fishing that is, it's the time of the year when the spring fed streams and ponds are cold enough for stocking trout. Benning anglers will be digging out the fly rods and spinning rigs to try their luck at trout fishing in the recently stocked Russ Pond.

The new fishing spot is located on main post just above Russ Swimming Pool. Although the pond is less than an acre in size, it should accommodate lots of anglers since the entire area adjoining the pond has been cleared making all the banks accessable. Although the impoundment has existed for some time, it was recently rebuilt and cleared under the direction of the Post Engineer.

The pond has been stocked with 1250 keeper size rainbow trout. The trout arrived last week in a special hatchery truck from the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service hatchery at Wallhalla, South Carolina. The opening three days children under 16 years will have an opportunity to try their luck. The pond opened Wednesday 20 December at 1300 hours and will be open from 0800 to 1700 hours daily thereafter. Those 16 and older will be able to wet their lines Saturday, 23 December. The daily creel limit of six trout would make a nice dinner. Either live or artificial bait can be used.

Get Your Christmas Turkey

If you are one for tradition, then you should have been out for the opening of turkey season on the Fort Benning Reservation December 20 and got that gobbler or hen for the family table. Although the season is short, with the closing date 1 January 1962, there should be plenty of time during the holidays to track down a bird. During the fall turkeys were generally found sticking pretty close to the large dense swamps. However, if the cold and rainy weather continues, turkeys should be ranging out over the uplands and hunters are likely to find birds far from the swamps during the day.

Hunters are reminded that all turkeys killed on post must be reported to the Fish and Game office, Bldg 4050 Harmony Church, by bringing the bird in or phoning 545-6028. This will enable a consolidated report to be sent to the State Game and Fish Commissions of Georgia and Alabama.

SMALL GAME

Although deer hunting seems to be taking the limelight, the small game hunters have been reporting good success. There seems to be a good crop of squirrels this season and from all reports they are unusually large. This coincides with a large oak mast crop and very likely accounts for the large squirrels. Post rabbit hunters have also been having good success on both the Georgia and Alabama portions of the reservation. Several hunters reported bagging their limit of rabbits.

With bird season in full swing, the bobwhite have abandoned the low lying areas where they were early in the season during the prolonged dry weather. The recent near-flooding conditions have moved most of the birds to the upland areas. The recent damp and overcast weather has made the bird hunting easier for the bird dogs and those hunters with good dogs and who are good shots have been scoring. Generally this year's coveys are larger than those of the past several years with the overall bird population about the same.

Instructors Have Chance To Practice

Marksmanship instructors at the Army's Advanced Marksmanship Unit had an opportunity recently to practice what they have been preaching.

All members of the unit who had not fired the army qualification course during the current fiscal year went to the range for rifle firing.

Members of the rifle section of the unit who travel throughout the country during the year teaching others how to coach had an opportunity to get in some practical training. They conducted the 12-hour course of preliminary rifle instruction and then supervised and assisted during record-firing.

The results, as expressed by Capt. John R. Walker, S-3, were "gratifying."

Of the 32 men firing, 17 qualified as expert, nine as sharpshooter and the remaining pair as marksmen.

"This is a remarkably high percentage of experts," Captain Walker said, "and can probably be traced to the excellent coaching the men received."

He pointed out that the majority of the men qualifying are administrative personnel assigned to the unit and that the course of instruction and record-firing was carried out under adverse weather conditions.

Pfc Edward Mänsch fired the best score of the group, 245 out of possible 250 points.

Biddy, Doughboy Leagues Attend Annual Banquet

By Sfc Bismarck Slith

Over 250 YAC football players and parents gathered in the mess hall of Co. D, 29th Infantry, 1st Infantry Brigade, for an annual football banquet held in honor of the Biddy and Doughboy YAC football league.

This banquet was sponsored by the parents and coordinated by the league commissioner, SMaj Norman Meeklelsen of the 29th Infantry.

The dinner was prepared by Sp4 Henry Popp and Sp4 Bob Dobrouski, both of E Company, 29th Infantry. The dinner consisted of Bar-B-Q Chicken, Roast Beef, Baked Ham, Potato Salad, Hot Rolls and Coffee.

Mrs. Evelyn Meekelson and Mrs. Betty Lamb were active in the decoration of the mess hall and also served on the receiving line.

After dinner, SMaj Meeklelson made the following presentations: Curtis Baker, halfback for the Grenadiers in the Biddy League, was awarded a trophy for the outstanding player in his league. He scored all points for his team, a total of 198, and highest yardage gain rushing for a total of 1856 yards.

Mike Bunger received the outstanding player award for the Doughboy League. Bunger played half-back for the Rangers.

Team trophies were awarded to the first and second place coaches of both leagues.

In the Doughboy League the Tankers copped first place by clipping the Rangers in their final season game. The Tankers were coached by Sgt Harold Sullivan and the Rangers piloted by Sp4 Desmond McCullagh.

In the Biddy League the Grenadiers and the Helmets finished the season in a deadlock with a 7-1 record.

The Grenadiers were under the guidance of Adrain Wilborn, while the Helmets were coached by Alexander Crichton.

Rodney Cartwright received the league sportsmanship award while Richard Mead received the outstanding coaching award.

A Great Season, Doughboys

AUTOGRAPHED . . . Major Gen. Ben Harrell, left, Infantry Center commanding general, is presented a football autographed by members of the Doughboys at the team's banquet last Wednesday night. Making the presentation is Capt. Leaton Cofield, Doughboy head coach. In his first year as coach at Fort Benning, Cofield's team compiled a 6-4 record, winning its last five games.

'White Christmas' Hit Now Rated As a Classic

"It isn't a war song. It isn't even a love song. Yet it has sung its way into practically every home and heart in the country. No one seems able to explain just why. Even Mr. Berlin himself is puzzled."

This is The Christian Science Monitor writing about "White Christmas," the song Bing Crosby introduced just 20 years ago in the musical, "Holiday Inn." The phenomenal popularity of the Irving Berlin composition ever since is one of the legends of the entertainment world.

Bing himself has, down the two decades, dreamed about a white Christmas, just like the ones he used to know, to the tune of 14 million records—and this season will up that total.

Another 14 million discs by some 85 other artists have crossed the counters. The song has been waxed in more than 100 versions — in Italian, French, the Scandinavian languages, Chinese, German, Spanish, Hungarian, a number of Polynesian tongues and, finally, Swahili.

Crosby himself disclaims credit for the whopping hit; it's all due, he says, to Berlin. But the popularity of his version among troops in WWII is beyond debate.

He was entertaining an airborne unit in France, Bing recalls, when a burly sergeant came up to him before the show and asked him if he planned to sing "White Christmas." Crosby said yes, and the trooper sighed, "Well, in that case I guess I'll duck out."

"Why not stick around?" said the surprised Bing. "I think you'll like the other numbers."

"I like the song all right," said the combat veteran. "But I'll listen from behind the port-able kitchen. It's no good for the men's morale to see their sergeant crying."

Post Personnel Helping Santa

Santa is getting a lot of help at Fort Benning this year in the big task of collecting toys for his annual visit to girls and boys.

Among his volunteer helpers are Cub Scout Pack No. 227 and members of the Machine Gun Committee of The Infantry School's Weapons Department.

The Scouts, with the help of their sponsor, the 428th Medical Battalion, made door-to-door pick-ups Dec. 2 and 9, collecting toys and clothing.

The toys have been turned over to The Infantry School for repair and distribution to needy families. The clothing will be distributed by a charity organization.

Officers and enlisted men of the Machine Gun Committee helped assemble an array of toys in Bldg. 1291 on Hook Range.

Relief Act Explained

Financial Aid Available For Number of Personnel

Only "persons in the military service" are covered by the Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act. They include:

All personnel on extended active duty, either inductees, regulars, members of the National Guard, Reserves, or volunteers, serving with the Army, Navy, Air Force, Marines or Coast Guard.

All officers of the Public Health Service on duty with the military services, and

All persons either training or studying under government supervision prior to induction into the Armed Services.

In addition in some cases certain benefits are allowed to dependents of military personnel and to persons having guaranteed obligations of service personnel.

Under the Civil Relief Act you are protected for the duration of your active duty and for the most part for short periods after separation. Your active duty date begins when you enter the service and terminates when you are separated. Both enlisted reservists and draftees may ask for relief as soon as they get orders to report for active duty.

Protection under the provisions of the Relief Act applies to lawsuits in any court in the United States, from a Justice of the Peace Court to the United States Supreme Court.

In order to understand some of the terms used in explaining the Relief provisions applicable to lawsuits, following is a brief rundown on the procedures used in filing a lawsuit.

The "plaintiff" is the person who files the complaint. The person who the complaint is filed against is known as the "defendant" the written document filed with the court is called the "complaint."

Ordinarily, a lawsuit is begun when either the plaintiff or his attorney acting in his behalf, files the complaint with the proper court. The complaint states the reason for filing the suit.

After the suit is filed, the defendant must be notified by the plaintiff of the action being brought against him by serving him with a formal written notice, known as a "summons."

The defendant contests the suit by filing a written document called an "answer" in which he states reasons why the plaintiff should not win a judgment in his favor.

A judgment by default is entered by the court when the defendant does not file an answer within a specified time stated in the summons.

Both sides are heard by the court at the trial. A judgement in favor of one of the parties is issued. In a lawsuit concerning money the decision of the court may order the defendant to pay or state that the complain is not justified — the defendant does not owe any thing.

BOOKS in REVIEW

ARMS CONTROL by Louis Henkin. (Prentice, 1961)

These are crucial questions for our nation and the world. Yet, as citizens with a mortal concern in the answers, how much do we know about these problems? In general, we have regarded arms control as "too technical" an issue for us to understand, and while national sentiment favors the idea, we have been skeptical, and even apathetic, about the possibility of achieving it.

THE SANDS OF DUNKIRK by Richard Collier. (Dutton, 1961)

A day-by-day account of the rescue of the British Expeditionary Force from Dunkirk in World War II: what the British experienced, falling back towards the coast and massed on the beach; how the Germans divebombed and shelled them . . . Through the book are woven the full stories of some brave individuals.

THE UNITED STATES IN THE WORLD ARENA by W. Rostow. (Harper, 1960)

This challenging book considers a subject of impressive magnitude: the nature of America society and past, present, and probably future behavior imaginative action by the free world, especially in terms of full economic and moral support for those countries directly threatened by the Communist organizational weapon. This is the major concern of the present small volume.

The Surgeon Says

By Richard R. Lessing, 2d Lt, MSC

When seeking care from civilian sources, under the provisions of the Medicare Program, dependents must present DD Form 1173, "Uniformed Services Identification and Privilege Card," to establish their eligibility for Medicare benefits.

It is important to note that DD Form 1173 is valid only from the date of issue through the expiration date noted thereon. Cards bearing no date, an expired date, or carrying a date notation of "indefinite" are unacceptable for purposes of identification. Such cards are considered inadequate to authenticate the eligibility of a patient, and correspondingly, the payability of a medical claim. When such cards are presented for Medicare benefits, the result is unnecessary inconvenience to the dependent, and the process of prompt payment of Medicare claims is delayed. In such instances, supplemental documents are required in order to validate the Medicare claim.

When sponsors or dependents seek care from military medical treatment facilities the possession of an up-to-date, valid DD Form 1173 is again of primary importance. Individuals ordinarily authorized medical treatment and possessing no valid ID card will experience the aforementioned inconvenience while a check is made to authenticate eligibility. Whether the individual requests treatment from military or civilian facilities, the "ID Card" is a must.

It is realized that a number of sponsors have been lax and have not taken the initiative to assure issuance of DD Form 1173 to their eligible dependents. Dependents, too, may not be aware that their cards may carry invalid date designations or show an expired term of eligibility.

In the event it is discovered that a dependent is in possession of an invalid card, the dependent should be advised to surrender the card and obtain a corrected DD Form 1173 immediately.

Because of the extension of servicemen beyond their normal tours of duty, the problem of expired DD cards may become critical. Servicemen who have been called or recalled to active duty or extended beyond their normal ETS date should make every effort to procure an up-to-date (1173) ID card for themselves and their dependents. If personnel officers are unable to furnish ID cards upon request and a waiting period is involved, the sponsor must obtain for himself and his dependents a signed statement by either the commanding officer or personnel officer attesting to the sponsors' retention on active duty. The implementation of this policy will alleviate delays and waiting while the civilian and/or military hospital personnel ascertain their eligibility for medical treatment.

MAYOR WELCOMED... Mayor Phillip T. May, left, of Brewton, Ala., is welcomed to Fort Benning by Capt. Joseph B. Benning Trucks Aid Post Office

The Columbus post office is being assisted again this year in transporting the deluge of Christmas packages and letters by military trucks borrowed from Fort Benning.

Nineteen trucks, including 17 three-quarter ton and two one-and-one-half ton vehicles are augmenting the regular post office truck fleet in handling the Christmas overload of mail.

The military vehicles will be used by the post office until the holiday rush is over.

Last Christmas season the Columbus post office handled approximately 6,630,000 pieces of mail during the holidays.

Post office officials estimate they will handle some 6,856,000 pieces of incoming and 5,828,000 pieces of outgoing mail this year. The increase is based upon the added Reserve and National Guard personnel on active duty at Fort Benning, according to the officials.

New-type Rifle Range Will Provide Safety

A new-type rifle range has been constructed here which will permit preliminary marksmanship instruction under maximum safety conditions, according to officials of The Infantry School.

Planned primarily for installation at standard ranges in use by Army Reserve all over the country upon final Army approval, the new range was designed to offset increasing limitations placed upon national and state rifle ranges.

"Old ranges were usually built in outlying districts far removed from heavily populated areas," Major L. G. Simmons said, "but mushrooming housing projects have made range safety studies a necessity."

According to the executive officer of The Infantry School Weapons Department's Small Arms Committee, the new range utilizes a system of soil pipes which will lend the illusion of depth for practicing riflemen and, at the same time, prevent the possibility of wild shots flying outside range limits.

He said the prototype range was constructed for use by Reservists being trained under the Trainfire system of rifle marksmanship instruction and is 25 meters long.

Under the direction of Major Simmons and his small arms staff, the new range was constructed by Company B, 806th Engineer Battalion. It consists of four "tubes" 40 feet long. One of the tubes is of heavy wooden planking while the others consists of sections of cement piping.

Major Simmons said one of the firing lanes had been modified to allow shooting from the one 40-foot section of piping directly along the top of the lower pipe.

"Covered foxholes built at the firing line end of the tubes now permit shooting from the foxhole and from the prone, kneeling, sitting and standing positions with little chance of stray shots flying off," he said.

Work now includes an intensive session of firing in deliberate attempt to hit the cement and wood at the far end of each tube. Shots are being fired at top, bottom and sides of the tubes to ascertain maximum possible angle of ricochet flight. The bouncing bullets tear through a huge expanse of cloth erected on frames which enclose the entire area of bullet strike.

"We then read the angle of the wildest shots from the muzzle of the tube from which they were fired to give us an idea of just how extensive in height and width range backstops must be," Major Simmons said.

Capt. Donald J. Green, an instructor on The Infantry School's Mortar Committee, is assisting in the study of ricochet flight.

He said through the studies, the shortest possible tube with the greatest safety possibilities would be selected and whether cement or wood would better support long-range maintenance requirements would be determined.

The prototype range is the 88th in the vast system of firing ranges on the Fort Benning reservation, according to Major George C. Walsh, Infantry Center range control officer.

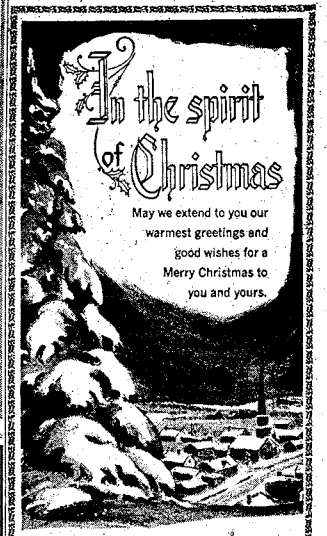
Greetings From Secretary of Defense

I extend to each of you, in and out of uniform, hearty greetings at this 1961 Christmas season.

For the men and women of the Defense Department there is a special significance to the spirit of giving that is traditionally associated with Christmas. You are giving abundantly of yourselves to the service of the Nation and the cause of humanity. As you give, you also receive. The strength you give America makes possible the security of our homes and families and the perpetuation of cherished peace and freedom and the moral principles which are their foundation.



You have earned the gratitude of your countrymen and of free men everywhere. Their hopes for God's special blessing will follow you wherever you serve during the coming year.

It is my privilege to offer you and your loved ones sincere wishes for a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

ROBERT S. McNAMARA
Secretary of Defense

Indebtedness Can Hinder Your Career, Promotions--So Better Watch Out

You might as well call a spade a spade and face facts when you are in a financial jam and more money is needed to pay off debts.

Legal advisers say it's at this point you better take a careful look at what's been going on and where you are headed, financially.

If you fail to take a reading at this point, they say, chances are you'll become a statistic in your particular service and sink into a morass of legal entanglements.

First by Mail

Generally, your commanding officer's first knowledge of your problem reaches him by mail and goes something like this: ". . .we realize you are not a collection agency . . . but since this indebtedness reflects discredit upon the service, we would appreciate if you would. . ."

If the evidence indicates you have been lax in handling your financial affairs, your chances of promotion may be diminished and it may even be reflected on your efficiency report.

Another thought to keep in mind is that Article 134, Uniform Code of Military Justice, makes punishable the military offense of wrongful and dishonorable failure to pay a debt (or debts).

If the facts in your case disclose a possible violation of Article 134, or any other provision of the Code, you are subject to investigation, administrative action and punitive action to include, where appropriate, trial by court-martial.

Get Advice

The minute you find outgo totaling more than income get advice from your legal assistance officer or your civilian attorney. The services have trained lawyers at all levels and their job is to help you.

"It can be tough," an officer said, "if the serviceman has tied himself into financial knots with over-extended credit, unwise contracts and loans from illegal unlicensed loans.

Chaplain's Greeting

BY CHAPLAIN (COL.) SILAS E. DECKER
Post Chaplain

Recently a minister described Christmas as, "the time when God descended his throne in the heavens with a baby in his arms and presented it to all man-kind at the Bethlehem Manger." That was the first Christmas.

Some say the past cannot be recovered, for it is beyond our reach completely. This is certainly not true of Christmas. It is as true as life itself, and can be as exciting as a new excursion into space and as rewarding as the greatest of achievements.

Christmas is a time of making old memories as fresh as springtime, and small kindnesses as rewarding as harvest-time. Christmas is a time of giving. We give as sincere expressions of our love. Sometimes we may spend more than we can afford, however, love never counts the cost. "God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son."

Christmas is a time of joy and gladness for it is life, liberty, joy and blessing. Christmas is music. The child was born while angels sang the first carol, "Peace on Earth" and so we sing at this time the great music of Christmas in churches and military chapels.

It is the wish of your Army Chaplains that each of you will have a blessed Christmas. Attend worship somewhere on Christmas Day.

Infantry Has Finest Heritage Gen. Clayman Tells Graduates

AT MANAGEMENT MEET . . . J. Lewis Powell, center, of Washington, D. C., guest speaker at a recent dinner meeting of the Armed Forces Management Association at the Custer Terrace Branch of the Main Officers' Open Mess, chats with Col. Dale D. Dixon, left, president of the association, and Lt. Col. Charles F. Austin, who introduced the speaker. Powell is a member of the staff of the assistant secretary of defense for supply and logistics.

The Army Infantry has the finest heritage among all branches of service in America's long and honorable military history, the deputy commanding general of the XVIII Airborne Corps and chief of staff at Fort Bragg, said here Saturday.

This avowal of the Infantry's prowess was recounted by Brig. Gen. Donald C. Clayman to the 111 graduating students of the associate Infantry officers' career course Saturday. The course began Aug. 1.

"The Army today is what we of the officers' corps make it," he said. "The Infantry will do the job and you are the officers who will lead the Infantry in battle. You must always be prepared. If you command units that obey, fight and get on with the job, you are in business."

Present at the graduation ceremony were 67 U. S. officers who ranged in grade from second lieutenant to major, and 24 Allied officers from Burma, Costa Rica, Ethiopia, Indonesia, Iran, the Republic of Korea, Saudi Arabia and Thailand. Their grades were from first lieutenant to lieutenant colonel.

Honor graduate of the group was Capt. Carl A. March. March, a member of the First Battle Group, 19th Infantry Regiment, California National Guard, was presented a certificate by Gen. Clayman.

Concluding his address to the graduates, Gen. Clayman said, "Our combat ready forces today are in the best shape of their peacetime history and are ready to fight.

"Much careful thought has been put into the Army's procurement program. More equipment will be available and more men will be provided if we need them.

"Almost anybody can be a soldier but only a good soldier can be a good Infantryman."

HOLIDAY TRIPS

Start your trip in plenty of time so you won't have to hurry. Expect danger and be extra alert. Slow down at sundown. When you get tired, stop.

AT ARMOR DINNER . . . At a recent Armor Association dinner dance at the Main Officers' Open Mess at Fort Benning are Lt. Gen. (Ret.) Alvan C. Gillem, Jr., left, Georgia state supervisor of purchases, Atlanta, and Major Gen. Ben Harrell, post commander. Gen. Gillem was keynote speaker for the occasion which commemorated the 185th anniversary of the Army's Armor Branch.

1961 Proves To Be Great Year

COL. CORNETT

COL. REYNOLDS

Col. Cornett EPO Chief; Col. Reynolds With 29th

Col. J. G. Cornett has been named chief of the Infantry School's Editorial and Pictorial Office.

He succeeds Col. Lawrence S. Reynolds, who has assumed command of the 1st Battle Group, 29th Infantry.

In 1937, he was graduated from the University of Arkansas at Fayetteville with a bachelor of science degree in business administration. He received his commission at the university in 1936.

Entering active service in 1941, Col. Cornett participated in the Normany campaign in 1944 and later served in Korea in 1953.

He has served overseas six years.

Service schools Col. Cornett has attended include the Command and General Staff College at Fort Leavenworth, and the Army War College at Carlisle Barracks.

Col. Reynolds servd as chief of the Editorial and Pictorial Office from August until December. He came to the post from an assignment in Korea.

From 1955 to 1960, he served with the Department of the Army in Washington in successive assignments as action officer, Organization and Training Division; deputy chief of staff for operations; military assistant to the assistant secretary of the Army for man-

New Post Commander; Other Important Changes

The year 1961 was one of fulfillment for Fort Benning, as ideas for future improvement and expansion of post facilities began to take shape as reality.

A new academic building for The Infantry School, plans for the establishment of a four year degree granting university center on the post and the urgent desire for a larger training area all have, or will in the near future, become actualities.

A personal word of praise for Fort Benning in 1961 came from the Commander-in-Chief, President John F. Kennedy.

Highlights of the year run the gamut from the return to the post of basic Airborne training to honors won by various individuals.

Early in January, CWO Ralph M. Fitch, Jr., set the pace for the year by scoring a "first." He logged in his 1,000th hour as first pilot on the Army's H-37 helicopter. A member of the 1st Aviation Company, Lawson Army Aviation Command, he is believed to be the first aviator to hit the thousand mark in the twin engine H-37, the Army's largest operational cargo helicopter.

Secretary of the Army, Elvis J. Stahr, Jr., headed a list of distinguished visitors to the post February 11, for the ninth annual Patterson Memorial Award. The winner was 2nd Lt. Howard R. Moseley, who received the award from Mrs. Robert P. Patterson, widow of the late secretary of war. The award is given to the outstanding soldier-graduate of the Infantry Officer Candidate School (OCS) each year.

Congressman Carl Vinson (D-Ga.) Chairman of the House Armed Services Committee announced early in February that a new academic building for The Infantry School was one of the major items contained in the Army proposed Fiscal Year 1961 military construction authorization program. The proposed 10 million dollar building is designed to consolidate effectively the numerous elements of The School in one location.

Construction of a new elementary school on the post began in March. Dedication ceremonies are set for January.

A change was made in the inspection of privately owned vehicles, effective March 15. A REVIVAL . . . The Army is reviving the famous World War I poster of Uncle Sam pointing sternly at the viewer with the legend, "I Want You." Starting last Saturday, large posters for street display and cardboard signs for window display were distributed throughout the United States in a new recruiting campaign. This is the second time the original poster had been revived, the first time being in World War II.

Record 7,361 Pints of Blood Are Donated to American Red Cross

A record 7,361 pints of blood were donated by post personnel to the Red Cross Bloodmobile this year, according to John A. Cramer, post Red Cross field director.

"This tops our previous high, made three years ago, by 524 pints," Cramer said. "Everyone who participated in this program during the year is to be commended for his contribution to an outstanding accomplishment."

Gifts Await First 1962 Baby Born To Post Parents

A host of gifts awaits the first baby born in 1962 to a military family at Fort Benning.

The contest is sponsored annually by your "hometown newspaper" The Bayonet.

To qualify for the first-baby-of-the-year contest, the only stipulation for military families is that the baby be born at Martin Army Hospital.

The exact time of birth must be specified in a written statement by the attending physician. Applications must be submitted to The Bayonet office not later than January 6.

Although there are other baby contests sponsored, this contest was sponsored by the following strictly for Fort Benning.

AAMU Slated for Re-designation As Marksmanship Training Unit

The constantly expanding training mission of the Army's senior marksmanship unit has necessitated bringing identification into alignment with performance.

As of January 1, the Army Advanced Marksmanship Unit will be re-designated the Army Marksmanship Training Unit.

Research reveals that this unit has actually been devoting 75 per cent of the annual effort to training other shooters

Other units and organizations of The Infantry Center and the number of pints donated include Troop Command, 895; Lawson Army Aviation Command, 194; 42th Medical Battalion, 191; Student Brigade, 166; Army Advanced Marksmanship Unit, 2; Women's Clubs, 9, and civilians, 8.

The remainder of the total, 2,746 pints was contributed by the 2nd Infantry Division.

Another 1,683 persons volunteered to contribute but were turned down due to age limitations or other restrictions.

within the Army, 25 per cent to competition.

The Advanced Marksmanship Unit had a timely connotation when the Army was generally un-advanced in marksmanship prior to 1956. The original objective to improve Army shooting has been accomplished and the tributaries of this effort are now Army-wide. The term "coaches clinic" grasped hurriedly in 1959, has become outmoded by the scope and breadth of the instruction given. More emphasis is being placed on instructor courses.

The Marksmanship Training Unit has been performing functions easily described by the new title.

Evolution rather than revolution has generated a breed of marksmanship instructor throughout the Army who can substantially attest to the concept of training. Marksmanship units throughout the continental armies have broadened their base of shooting to one of instructing units of their respective commands.

The spectrum of teaching has been widened and accentuated to include R.O.T.C. instructors, civilians and personnel of all branches of the Armed Forces.

Minuteman ICBM Program Shifts From Rails To Underground Silos

Development of plans for mounting Minuteman intercontinental ballistic missiles on special railroad launching cars has been terminated in favor of widely dispersed hard underground launch sites.

Instead of sending the solid-fueled missile on roving patrols aboard special trains, substitute plans have been adopted to increase the number of Minuteman missiles placed in underground silos.

The silos are spaced 50 to 100 miles apart. Four Minuteman wings make up the program with a total of 150 launching sites currently under construction.

Fueled with a hard rubber-like substance, the Minuteman missile stands ready to fire without the involved fueling procedures of its older brethren, the Air Force liquid-fueled Atlas and Titan missiles.

There has never been a "merry" holiday season as far as accidents go.

Each year, traffic deaths continue to lead the fatality list. This Christmas was no exception. National traffic deaths stood at 521 at midnight Monday—21 over the estimate of the National Safety Council. Last year 488 persons died.

But not all persons met death on the highways.

Fires accounted for 83 lives and miscellaneous mishaps took 85 more. This ran the overall total of violent deaths to 689.

Weather was said to have played a major part in the traffic accidents, as many parts of the country were sheeted with ice and packed snow.

Nine Christmas Day deaths in traffic accidents and fires and a Christmas Eve plane crash sent Georgia's holiday death toll to 24. Nine of those 24 met death in Christmas Eve traffic accidents.

Alabama fared little better as accidental deaths struck at the rate of more than one victim every four hours during the Christmas weekend. Traffic claimed 10 victims. The rest died in drownings, shootings and a fire.

These figures are ugly, but true. Although they concern mostly civilians, Fort Benning personnel are by no means immune.

For the past two years there has been an average of one fatality and eight disabling injuries during the holiday period.

Prior years saw the average at three fatalities and 20 disabling injuries. The improvement has been attributed to a safety emphasis program conducted at all echelons of command.

Accidental deaths and serious injuries during the New Year holiday, particularly on New Year's Eve, are especially tragic.

Tonight signals the beginning of the New Year holiday. Last year there was one fatality over this period. This is another year. What the final tabulation will show depends upon each individual.

The annual holiday traffic slaughter must end—but how and when and where?

Joseph Blaustein Tells:

How You Can Help Your Country

It may seem presumptuous, in a way, for anyone not in uniform to be discussing what you in the Armed Forces and your families can do to help our country. After all, you are already doing one of the most essential jobs of all. Yet national defense has come to take many forms which call for extra effort from soldier and civilian alike.

Missiles and moonshots have made distance obsolete. The most remote place on earth is but a rocket's throw away. As a result, our personal outlook on people overseas has become part of our national security. Equally important is the way they look at us.

The more the world shrinks, the more our attitudes must broaden. One way to do what is best for us is to think of what is best for people everywhere, whatever their nation, race or religion. Because today, more than ever before, people everywhere are in the same boat, share the same anxieties and the same aspiration to live in dignity.

Every man's right to live in dignity: this is the cornerstone of our American creed, the central moral and spiritual value in our American tradition. Individual dignity is a more precious guarantee than any turn has to offer, and one that Communism skies away from most of all. Making this clear to people in other lands is a job for all Americans, in or out of uniform, but those of us who are stationed or otherwise visit overseas have the greatest opportunity to do it.

Do not let us pretend we are perfect. Sit-ins and freedom riders make headlines all over the world. When you are questioned about such happenings, it is important to give honest answers. But our own friendly attitudes and behavior will go further than words to set the picture straight — to prove that obstacles, even setbacks, cannot make us stop working, as a nation and as individuals, with an increasing measure of success, to overcome old prejudices and develop new understandings.

Do try to show what our country seeks to accomplish as a leader in world affairs. Here again, it is important to talk thoughtfully about America's policy, especially such features which most affect other people's lives: our support of the United Nations . . . our extensive foreign aid.

But just sounding off about our deep commitment to the U.N. will not convince anyone — unless we show we have caught the spirit behind it. The U.N. idea is that everybody counts—small and big, weak and strong. Not long ago, as a U.S. delegate to the United Nations, I watched that idea in action. It was one of the most inspiring experiences of my life. The U. N. is serving as a forum for divergent views, a meeting ground for people of all kinds and conditions. The U. N. is striving to win basic human rights for all mankind — the same guarantees of freedom and equality we won for ourselves in our own Bill of Rights. America's backing of the U. N. is most vividly expressed by your own open mind, your own unmistakable concern for other people's rights.

The same applies to foreign aid: there is a human equation behind it. Too many people abroad have unfortunately been sold on the false idea that our American goal, "the pursuit of happiness," means nothing more than the selfish pursuit of our own material comforts. You can help explode this shabby myth. You can show that our goal in "the pursuit of happiness" includes an all-out drive to overcome poverty, ignorance and disease —not only from Maine to California, but on other continents as well. That is the meaning of our foreign aid. Your own instinctive helping hand to those in need reflects our country's desire to see that everyone gets a chance to live in dignity.

After all, the serviceman and his family are almost the only Americans that millions believe or reject Communist propaganda according to the way the Americans they know bear out or belie what they have heard.

Meanwhile, you have a right to expect that we at home will be doing our job too: measuring up, in our everyday lives, to our country's ideals.

These are missions that only we, all of us, as individual citizens, can accomplish for our country. Thus, in a very real sense, each of us in a major degree holds the future in our hands.

Soviet Contempt Shown In Great Leap Backwards

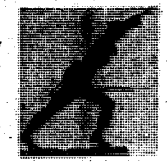
"The government which would be the first to begin nuclear weapon testing would take upon itself a heavy responsibility before the people."

The words are those of Premier Nikita Khrushchev speaking to the Supreme Soviet almost two years ago. They were uttered at a time when the so-called Big Three moratorium on nuclear testing was still in effect.

They went up in a fury of radioactive dust on Sept. 1, 1961, when Premier Khrushchev violated the moratorium to which he had piously subscribed. Since then the Soviet Union has conducted an elaborate series of nuclear blasts on an unprecedented scale, setting off some 30 detonations.

What did it achieve, aside from further pollution of the earth's atmosphere with radio-active fallout? For one thing it demonstrated again the contempt in which the Soviets hold agreements to which they are a party when it serves their ends to do so. It was an act of defiance of world opinion — a naked and barbarous show of nuclear force, a monstrously irresponsible and senseless gesture.

Who was impressed? Certainly not the scientists of the free world who have long known that such superbombs as the Russians detonated could be built. Were the so called "neutral" nations impressed? Definitely — but perhaps not in quite the way Premier Khrushchev intended. There is ample evidence that they watched the Soviet performance with shock and alarm.



The United States has, of course, resumed its own testing — but underground to avoid more poisoning of the atmosphere. Nevertheless it has returned to Geneva for resumption of the test ban talks, true to the spirit of President Kennedy's statement in his Inaugural Address — "Let us never negotiate out of fear. But let us never fear to negotiate."

Meantime no nations except those under Communist domination can be so willfully blind as not to perceive the harsh illogic of the Soviet position — the pattern of bullying threats accompanied by syrupy lip-service to "peace and disarmament." Around the globe the press has cried out against the criminal cynicism of the Khrushchev position.

But the free world has benefited enormously from Russia's nuclear perfidy in terms of becoming more closely united to face the common threat. No future Soviet blandishments can undo this. In the face of the radiation dangers unleashed by the Russian tests, there can be no decent human beings who in their hearts remain "uncommitted," no matter what their governments profess.

Sorry, Astronauts, But TIS Beat You To The Punch

Infantry School Report

When the first astronaut returned from space, the United States witnessed the beginning of our Space Age. Mass media proclaimed the advance of progress. A new age had begun. But had it?

Nestled away in the dark recesses of the Office of the Secretary toiled other astronauts, those of the United States Army Infantry School. For years these unsung heroes of the Management Section have born the title of "Space Cadets" with honor, pride, and deferent humor.

How do these people deal with space? Simple and accurate is the fact that within this section rests a "space" for each officer, enlisted person, and DA civilian within each of the academic staff offices, departments and The Student Brigade of the United States Army Infantry School.

The United States Army Infantry School is organized under a Table of Distribution (TD). To the uninitiated this is something like a Table of Organization and Equipment (TOE) except that the using agency builds its house from raw material, whereas TOE's are prefabricated homes built by Department of the Army using long established standards and requiring occupancy only.

At this point it is worthy of mentioning that the Management Section provides only the spaces, authorizes grades, and MOS. True to DA policy and USAIS teaching, it is the GI who finds the bodies to fill these spaces.

With the paucity of replacements in the Army today, it is no wonder that many Chiefs or Directors badger the Chief of the Management Section, Chief Astronaut Major P. L. Mason, with the axiom, "I'll trade you two spaces for one body."

Major Mason, when not the recipient of such kind statements, busily engages himself in using his M1 Space Stretcher, a formidable secret weapon that makes three spaces out of two, or divides spaces in half: for example, giving the upper half of a needed space to a department requiring verbal instruction and the lower half to a department requiring ambulatory instruction.

His system, however, is not perfected completely, since the orator can't move and the ambulator can't talk. But these are some minor administrative problems to overcome in this age of push-buttons, mechanical monsters, automation, and lack of personnel spaces.

This is truly, then, a Space Age. Continual change in missions, reorganizations within activities, or just plain changes directed by higher headquarters, require the constant revision of the TD.

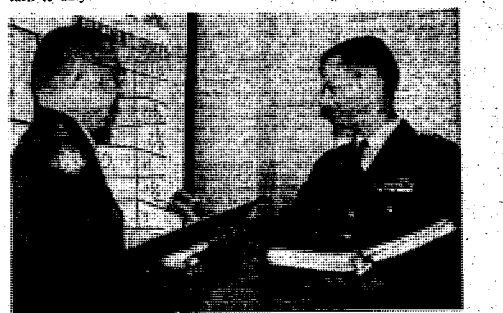
These changes are made monthly by Astronaut Stewardess Miss Wynell McDurmont, the TD clerk and girl Friday of the section. Miss McDurmont reviews recommended changes to insure the requested grades and MOS are consistent with DA regulations. This done, she puts the requests and her notes on the desk of Astronaut Navigator Captain Claude D. Taylor, Jr., assistant chief, and evaluator extraordinaire.

One of Captain Taylor's many tasks is to insure there aren't too many Chiefs to the number of Indians. Since this age is so technical, there is always a possibility that a space request could be filled only by a composite of Pershing, Einstein, Schweitzer and Hoover. Captain Taylor insures we don't get too far out into space.

The DA civilian side is tackled by Astronaut Stewardess Mrs. Sara Hamilton who is the civilian personnel expert and girl Saturday of the section. Mrs. Hamilton has files to cover almost any personnel precedent, and although she wasn't around when Custer made his last stand, her records serve her well in telling you the grade and job descriptions of his civilian scouts. (Sara says two of Custer's scouts received unsatisfactory performance ratings immediately after the Battle of Little Big Horn.)

Since a TD blasts off from ground level, then step by step progress of its organizational structuring must support higher and higher levels of personnel. This brings us to the missile foreman of the section, Astronaut Engineer Sgt. William H. Horton, who whirls his comptometer, slide rule, and mental IBM calculator to reflect in numbers, graphs, charts, and other data, the supporting work performance data for personnel requirements.

These five individuals are the "Space Cadets," the Astronauts of the Office of the Secretary. Within their responsibilities lie the fate and fortune of five academic staff offices, eight departments, and one brigade, with totals of over 750 officers and warrant officers, 2,500 enlisted personnel, and 320 DA civilians.



So when the first astronaut returned to earth his space accomplishments were gratifying. But the astronauts of USAIS had already had a cumulative length of time of 22 years in space. That's enough time to sojourn on Saturn or vacation on Venus, let alone mosey around the Moon a few score times.

Are they qualified as astronauts, you ask, being a difficult man to convince. As testimony to their assiduity, perspicacity, and complete qualification, the remarks of several department chiefs, all of whom received less space than requested, can be offered: "You all should be in the head of a nose cone!"

Truly, then, USAIS has been in the space age for some time, and its "Space Cadets" have been probing space relentlessly.

MRS. GREENE: . . . "But all I wanted was to check my Social Security number. When did you say Mrs. Hamilton would be well enough to return to duty?"

CAPTAIN TAYLOR: . . . "That's correct, Major Mason can operate this machine exactly right and can fulfill personnel spaces. This might give them a small administrative problem."

First Female Officer Saw Civil War Service

It's exactly 100 years ago that the U. S. Army, building its strength for the years of war that lay ahead, took a revolutionary step. It commissioned Dr. Mary Walker as its first female officer. At 29, Dr. Walker thus became the first woman in the world to be a military surgeon.

The Confederate Army also had its single distaff officer. She was Capt. Sally L. Thompkins of Richmond, Va., who headed that city's principal hospital for sick and wounded soldiers.

Dr. Walker, who had graduated from the Syracuse, N. Y., Medical College in 1855, found her unique military status presented problems, but she took to the battlefield as well as supervising hospital facilities. A grateful Congress later voted her a medal for bravery.

She resumed her private medical practice in Washington in 1865, but the postwar activity of this colorful pioneer in Army medicine seems to have been crusading for women's rights.

During the war, in the field, she had adapted the uniform of the Union soldier to her own needs. She resumed feminine attire when peace came, then, as a zealous suffragette, she went back to masculine garb.

Here again she scored a "first." Dr. Walker was the first American woman to secure legal permission for such dress, in line with her battle to win more freedom for her sex.

SGT. HORTON: . . . (To himself) Something's got to be wrong with these computators! These time utilization reports show that the USAIS is justified an additional 13,461 instructors.

MISS MCDURMONT: . . . "No, sir, I'm not too busy to find out how many Airborne and Ranger qualified scout-dog handlers can be authorized hazardous duty pay."

Barbara Hare's Report Card...

On Saturday, December 23, in the main ballroom of the Officer's Club the Junior Army Daughters of America (JADA) held its annual Christmas Ball. The highlight of the evening was the crowning of the queen and her court. Major Gen. Charles H. Chase made the presentations and crowned the queen. The purpose of the court is to honor the members who have worked for JADA and supported her many projects.

The court consisted of eight girls — a freshman, a sophomore, a junior, and five seniors. The senior who had the most votes was declared the queen.

The freshman representative was Sue Ingle who was escorted by Terry Shirley. Sue, daughter of Lt. Col. and Mrs. Paul T. Ingle, attends Baker High. She came to Benning last year after living in Annandale, Va.

The Sophomore representative was Tilda Todd, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Walter B. Todd. Tilda who attends Columbus High was escorted by Dave Ingle. She has been a member of JADA for a year and holds the office of Corresponding Secretary. Tilda calls South Carolina "home," and hopes to go to Converse College.

Mary Beth Williams was the junior representative. A junior at Columbus High, Mary Beth is the daughter of Lt. Col. and Mrs. Louis A. Williams. She was escorted by Dallas Patterson. As chairman of the Christmas Ball, Mary Beth did a wonderful job. Recently, she was elected to the office of Vice-President. Mary Beth is also from South Carolina.

Gaile McClain escorted by Gene Clemmens, Jerry Vassar escorted by Curry Bagley, Kay Jones escorted by Ted Franklin, and Barbara Hare escorted by Earl Hayes were the senior representatives.

Gaile is the daughter of Lt. Col. and Mrs. John W. McClain and attends Columbus High. She holds the office of historian and has been active in all the club's projects. Gaile came to Benning two years ago from Germany She claims Texas as "home" and is going to major in secondary education at North Texas State.

Jerry, a senior at Pacelli High, is the daughter of Major and Mrs. E. F. Vassar. "Home" to the Vassars is New York. Having served on many JADA committees, Jerry, is the new membership chairman. She hopes to attend William and Mary College in Virginia and major in math.

Kay, daughter of Major and Mrs. Dillard F. Jones, is a senior at Columbus High. Kay writes the column Forbesets which also appears in the Bayonet. She plans to attend Auburn University and major in speech. A very talented dancer, Kay is helping choreograph the play "Bell, Book and Candle", and teaches dancing every Saturday morning. She came to Benning in the summer of '60 from Germany.

The Queen of the Ball was Mary Mike Magner, daughter of Major and Mrs. G. J. Magner, who was escorted by Bill Doucett. Mary Mike is a senior at Pacelli High and is president of JADA. She has lived at Benning for four years. At Pacelli, she is vice-president of the Student Council and co-editor of the school's newspaper, "The Pacellian." Upon graduating from high school she plans to go to college, and hopes to became a teacher.

The JADA Christmas Court has become a tradition that each member anxiously awaits. The final results of the voting are not made known until the court is announced at the dance. Then as each name is called, the girl and her "date" come forward.

Last Saturday night was the most thrilling night of eight girl's lives. JADA honored them by the election to the court: REPORT CARD honors them by this salute. This week we salute the entire JADA court and congratulate them!

Army Issues Its Policies On 'Non-Deployable' Assignments

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — "Non-Deployables" will not be transferred from units which have been assigned a readiness date for overseas movement, but will be retained until a "decision to deploy" has been made, according to a recent Department of the Army message.

These non-deployables, persons who have less than nine months in CONUS following an unaccompanied overseas tour, and those who have less than four months remaining on their current enlistment, will be earmarked for reassignment and up-to-date records will be maintained as to the unit's needs for replacements until the firm decision is made.

The Army plans to make replacements prior to actual shipment of units, if time permits. If not, replacements will join the units at their overseas stations.

Commanders were also instructed to encourage volunteers for overseas movements.

Chaplain's Corner

A Philosophy Of Life

By Chaplain (Capt.) Horace Sams Jr.

John H. Hallowell, in his book "The Moral Foundation of Democracy," has said:

"Our Democratic institutions require a philosophy of life to sustain them. . . Even more formidable than the threat of Russian aggression is our lack of a philosophy in terms of which we can justify our Democracy and our preference for it. For without a clear understanding of why these institutions exist, we shall have neither the means of defending them intellectually nor the resolution to defend them by force when the occasion demands it."

Everyone must have some kind of a philosophy of life. As Americans our philosophy of life must be democratic and moral and spiritual. We believe in freedom justice and right. We respect the dignity of every individual as a creature made in the image of God. This creator God is a moral being; therefore, the creature man is a moral being. The creator would not very likely or logically fail to reveal Himself and his will to his creation. He has in fact revealed Himself through nature, through His written Word, and through His Son who came as the Light of the World. We have certain responsibilities to God who made us. From this basic premise, issue other moral responsibilities as inevitable conclusions.

This is the essential farbic of our democratic philosophy of life which is founded squarely on our Judeao — Christian religious heritage. Do we really believe in it? It is diametrically opposed to the athiestic and materialistic communist philosophy of life. Can we justify our philosophy in preference to theirs? The communist knows what he believes and why he believes it. Do you know this? The Communist values his philosophy above his own life. Do you? The Communists have the ability to defend their philosophy intellectually, and they have the resolution to defend it by force when the occasion demands it. Do you?

A political philosophy—and also a religious creed — which is not clearly understood, which is not vital and sincere and relevant, defended intelligently by the one who professes to hold it, will not be resolutely when it is forcefully challenged in a moment of crisis.

Powell Tells AFMA

History Has Made Present Generation

History has made the present generation "vice-president-in - charge" of tomorrow, 100 members and guests of Fort Benning's Armed Forces Management Association were told by a member of the staff of the Assistant Secretary of Defense for Installations and Logistics.

J. Lewis Powell spoke at a dinner meeting of the organization at the Custer Terrace Branch of the Main Officers' Open Mess.

Powell is a featured speaker at the Management Course of the American Management Association in New York City and the Army Command Management School at Fort Belvoir, and in Europe.

"This is the first generation in the history of mankind that does not live in the age in which it was born," the speaker said.

"History played a trick on you! Everyone previous to you was born, lived and died in one age," he told the group. "A man born in the stone age died in the stone age. People born in the wood age died in the wood age. But in your lifetime you have spanned ages."

"You are a kind of technological 'Adam' standing on the threshold of a new world," he continued.

Powell said most of the progress of mankind in 50,000 years on earth has been made since 1945. The technological renders all previous progress insignificant, he said.

In spite of the tremendous upsurge of man's advancement in recent years, "neither science nor management has developed substitutes for decisive thinking human beings," he affirmed.

"Technology has no morals. It doesn't care whether it is used for good or evil," he said. "It has no nationality. It does not care whether it is used by friend or foe. It is very efficient. It will eliminate polio or people with equal effectiveness. Technology can be used to create a hell or a paradise."

"Morality is the business of men, not of machines," the speaker added. "Man can't give this responsibility to a machine. It is his alone, and he had better start working overtime."

The challenge of modern civilization is to "supply the morality and the 'know-how' necessary to use technology for the common good instead of evil," the speaker said.

Powell maintained that brainpower has replaced manpower, requiring that everyone be educated according to his aptitude. To concentrate only on scientists and engineers would be like "driving an automobile and concentrating on making one wheel go faster than the other wheels," he said.

"While we are at it, let us restore respect and provide recognition for those who have the ability to get things done. Let's make this a good world," he concluded.

Post Civilian Ends Course

George M. Edenfield, a civilian accounting technician in the Finance and Accounting Office here completed the Military Accounting Course, class 4, at the Army Finance School, Fort Benjamin Harrison, recently.

The five-week accounting course which Mr. Edenfield attended in temporary duty status is designed to provide specialized training so that Army personnel will have a working knowledge in the organization, recording procedures, operations and reports pertinent to financial accounting under the Army Command Management System.

Mr. Edenfield, 48, a native of Waycross, served with the Army from 1931 to 1934 and from 1944 to 1945.

Carlisle P. Runge Visits; Discusses TI Program

Carlisle P. Runge, assistant secretary of defense for manpower, arrived here recently for discussions on the Army's Troop Information Program.

Col. B. P. Flint, Jr., of the Troop Information Division, Office of the Chief of Information, Department of the Army, was also at the post.

Mr. Runge attended briefings on the Troop Information Programs of The Infantry Center and the 2nd Infantry Division, and visited the troop information period at Battery B, 29th Artillery, while here.

A briefing on the Army's Troop Education Program was also conducted.

After his arrival, Mr. Runge was the honored guest at an official luncheon in the Main Officers' Open Mess.

The assistant secretary of defense was accompanied to the post by Marine Corps Col. Melvin D. Henderson, military assistant to Mr. Runge.

In 'The Great War'

A Recalcitrant Gen. Pershing Fought Trench Warfare, Allied Theories, Odds

BY GORDON ALDERMAN

General John J. Pershing arrived in France with two strikes against him. The American Expeditionary Force, his command, was woefully unprepared for war. In fact, it had never been seriously considered by the Allies as anything more than a great replacement organization, set up to feed men and materiel into the armies of France and England.

The second strike against "Black Jack" Pershing was his attitude. Pershing heard the desires of the Allies and made his reply. "No!" Pershing refused, absolutely, to allow his command to be split up and scattered in among the other Allied forces. He remained firm in his desire to set up the AEF as a separate fighting force, commanded by American officers.

To make matters worse, Pershing and his staff disagreed with the French and English outlook toward trench warfare. They did admit the necessity of continuing these methods for the time being, but set about to include their own ideas on offensive warfare too.

Ignorant Novices

The Allied command, not knowing the military background and competence of our leading military minds, looked upon us as arrogant, ignorant novices, too self-centered to weigh advice. In a word, the minds of Americans and their Allied counterparts did not meet upon the question of tactical doctrine.

While foreign instructors were invaluable in teaching the numerous technical details connected with trench warfare, at the same time through them the doctrine of the trench defensive could filter into the ranks of the Americans. However, the doctrine of an aggressive offensive and training in open warfare combat continued to be emphasized in the American schools and wherever training took place, and was no small factor in the AEF's ultimate success.

This is another in a series of lesser-heard-of sequences in the 2nd Division's history by BAYONET reporter Gordon Alderman. Facts are documented by material at the 2nd Division Museum.

Pershing vindicated himself in the realm of tactical leadership with the AEF's success too. As we mentioned earlier, Pershing had replied with a resounding "No!" to the suggestion that the men and materiel of the AEF be scattered among the Allied armies already spread along the Western Front.

Pershing saw clearly that such a plan would not only place America in an inferior position, but would be a precedent that could never be fully justified. In retrospect, we see that in insisting upon the creation of an American army, Pershing stood upon sound precedence historically.

Two hundred years before, Marlborough and the English had stood in the same position as Pershing and the Americans. Marlborough had placed certain British troops under the orders of Prince Nassau-Saarbruck. Lord Cutts, while pledging himself to strict compliance, begged particularly that the orders should be issued to the British brigadier Ingoldsby and "not sent to particular regiments under his command without his knowledge," since a general officer "could not justify it to his King, the Nation, and his own honor," if "he suffered himself to be a cipher at the head of an English army in a foreign country."

Twice

The British, in our own Revolution, made extensive use of American troops — Loyalists or "Tory" units. These men fought gallantly, but their identity is lost. In the popular mind their achievements are set down as those of British troops.

In keeping the American Expeditionary Force intact, Pershing did more than save the prestige of the United States... he proved that America was indeed capable of girding itself for total war...and winning.

This, too, was part of the history of the 2nd Infantry Division during "The Great War."

Here's How (And How NOT) to Make the Headlines

By Clay Lacy

Only one more holiday remains during the current end-of-the-year season. New Year symbolizes the start of another 12 months. For most, it is a sign of fresh prospects, new progress and determined resolutions.

To enjoy the coming year of 1962, one prerequisite is foremost for every member of the 2nd Infantry Division. That necessary item is life itself. For to accomplish anything this coming year, you must be alive at the start of it.

Facetious?

Now that assumption may sound a bit facetious. And you may assume that the writer is playing a game. But look at some past cases:

It is New Year's eve. A night to revel and await the stroke of midnight heralding the new year. Nightclubs are filled to capacity with merry-making throngs. Highways are crowded arteries of traffic threading from one community to another.

Early on the first day of the new year, many of these cars have been found as twisted, tangled, smashed bits of metal along the highways. Cars cost money but they can be replaced. But the occupants inside these death vehicles know no such capacity.

They lie with bodies punctured, crushed, mangled and lifeless. No plastic surgery available in this 20th century can restore and bring back to life the heart that has been stilled by death. No modern miracle has been found which can pick up these pitiful bodies from horrible wrecks and breathe life into them.

When the notices are published in the newspapers they only specify that so-and-so was killed in an accident at such-a-place and under such-and-such circumstances. They don't tell the grim facts which accompany each such fatality.

A human life ended abruptly. A grieving wife left to raise young children as best she can under a handicap of greatly reduced income. Parents left behind sorrowing that their offspring is gone for good. These items are not published but you know they are true.

So what, you say. That's for the other guy. That won't happen to me. If that's your reasoning, remember this one point. . . thousands die horrible deaths on the nation's highways every single year; thousands who also said to themselves "it can't happen to me."

The above comments may sound gruesome to you. If so, good. Then maybe they will cause you to stop and think before you start your celebration on New Year's eve. And maybe they will cause you to not take that last drink for the road.

Or if you are lucky enough to have been stirred by these facts, you will plan your evening carefully.

Marines Say 'Thanks' For Div. Proclamation

Members of the 5th Marines and the 1st Marine Division have forwarded their appreciation to the 2nd Division for being made honorary members of the "Second to None."

Colonel Charles Earl Warren, commander of the 5th Marines, Camp Pendleton, Calif., sent a letter of appreciation to Major General Charles H. Chase, division commanding general, for the proclamation of honorary membership awarded at the 2nd Division's recent Organization Day ceremonies.

Colonel Warren's letter was endorsed by Major General James Marvin Masters Sr., commanding general of the 1st Marine Division.

'Apt'

"It was both apt and fitting in point of time and sentiment," said Col. Warren's letter, "particularly so in view of the fact that the Fifth Marines observance of the 176th Anniversary of the Corps on November 10, 1961, was directed in spirit to the commemoration of those comrades-in-arms who contributed in full measure to the heritage of Corps and country.

"While the events of history subsequent to World War I have placed Marines and Soldiers side by side in the forefront of combat operations throughout the course of World War II, Korea and Lebanon, certainly none of these associations overshadowed nor fired the imagination to a greater extent than our combat operations on the battlefields of France.

"The proclamation has been accorded a place of prominence in the office of the Commanding Officer, Fifth Marines and I am sure that it will serve to remind others serving in the Regiment of the historical association and cooperation of the respective commands."

General Masters wrote:

"It is fully appreciated that distinction in battle by U. S. Marines serving with the 2d Infantry Division during World War I was achieved, in no small measure, through mutual respect and inspiration of common purpose and sacrifice shared with our Army brothers-in-arms.

"Be assured that the hallowed memory of the association of Marines with comrade members of your 2d Infantry Division during that critical period of conflict shall not be forgotten."

Regular Sunday morning worship schedules will be observed throughout the division on December 31. In addition, Catholic masses have been scheduled for division personnel on New Year's Day.

In Sand Hill on January 1, masses will be held as follows: 9 a.m., Chapel Two; 10 a.m., Chapel Three; 11 a.m., Chapel Four, and at noon Chapel Five. Mass will be held at Kelley Hill Chapel at 9 a.m. and 11 a.m. on New Year's Day.

Arty Honors 15th's S-3

The newly-promoted S3 of the 1st Howitzer Battalion, 15th Artillery was recently honored at ceremonies at Division Artillery headquarters and at headquarters of the 15th Artillery.

Major Ray J. Rogers was congratulated at the 15th by Lieutenant Colonel Donald B. Roof, battalion commanding officer, and by other officers of the battalion. Mrs. Rogers pinned the gold leaf on the new major's lapel.

Commissioned in 1949, Major Rogers transferred from Infantry to Artillery in 1956. He was Battery B commander before becoming S3 of the Artillery unit here.

Major Rogers lives at Fort Benning with his wife and three children.

ANOTHER STRIPE... Staff Sergeant Charles C. Henderson, 2nd Replacement Section, recently was promoted to his present rank. Sgt. Henderson is the section's shipping sergeant.

NCOs from Thailand Visiting 9th Infantry

Two non-commissioned officers of the Thailand Army will be visitors at the 2nd Division's 9th Infantry until January 16. They will observe operations in the line companies and have on-the-job training in the operation of a motor pool during their visit.

Master Sergeant Sumit Prenmani and Sergeant Pramote Kumpachalee of the Thailand Army are the visitors.

Line Companies

From their arrival on December 15 to December 30, the two non-coms have been attached to each of the line companies within the battle group, spending a few days with each as observers. Here they watched the rifle company move to the field and operate as a vital link in the battle group battle plan.

Sergeants Prenmani and Kumpachalee spent further time with the 9th's Combat Support Company observing the operations with the 4.2 inch mortar.

On-the-job training is next for the visitors as they will spend two weeks in the 9th's motor pool performing on-the-job maintenance under the supervision of motor pool maintenance personnel.

87th's Co B Fires; Lists Gentry Tops

By 87th Inf PIO

Bravo Company of the 87th has completed range qualification with the M1 rifle, and Private First Class John W. Gentry has shot his way to the top of the scorer's list.

Gentry, of Bravo's second platoon, compiled a 223 score, dropping only 27 points over the standard course. Close behind him were Private First Class Steve Matton, third platoon, who hit 220, and Private First Class Harry C. Tomlin of the weapons platoon, with 214.

On a platoon level, Lieutenant John D. Speikler's third platoon came in high with a 168.62 average, barely nosing out Lieutenant Robert C. Lowry's weapons platoon which finished only .01 of a point behind. The platoon firing was close across the line; less than four points separated the highest from the last place platoon.

Intermittent rain, mud on the firing line and cold winds were waiting for Bravo when it went to McAndrew Range, but the elements failed to dampen the company's spirits and platoon competition held determination at a high level. It actually made little difference that from time to time Bravo's firers had to tar the rain out of their rear sights.

Division Ladies Host Christmas Tea at MAH

Red Cross volunteers, composed of wives of 2nd Division and Main Post personnel, were hostesses for the annual Christmas Tea held recently at Martin Army Hospital.

The guests of the tea sponsored by the Red Cross workers were the duty personnel, staff and patients.

The serving table was centered with a silver and crystal bowl full of red Christmas ornaments and surrounded by holly. Silver candelabra with red tapers were placed at either end of the table. Hot spiced tea was served by the volunteers from two silver tea services.

The side walls were covered with scenes from "The Littlest Angel" and angel figures were suspended from the ceiling in the center of the room. A side table held a scene with Santa, his reindeer, Christmas packages, and carolers in a red, gold and white train on a bed of angel hair. Colored pine cones surrounded the scene. A large Christmas tree stood in one corner.

Holiday Party Is Held By NCO's Wives

The Ladies of the Big Indianhead climaxed the Christmas season with their annual Children's Party last Thursday.

Approximately 100 children attended the party, held at Service Club Two.

Cartoons were shown, the children sang carols and the arrival of Santa Claus concluded the party.

Mrs. Henry Baker, entertainment chairman, was assisted by Mesdames Edward Owens, James Talbert, Norman Hollowell, James Speer and Eubert W. Linthicum.

Punch and coffee were served from a table overlaid with a red cloth. A large red candle

Games were organized by Mrs. Walter D. Hall, Mrs. Arthur A. Tritsch and Mrs. Anthony J. Alfano. Prizes were furnished by the 2nd Division Officers Wives Club. Birthday cake was served to all attending.

The patients of Ward A-6 presented the ladies of the 7th with a scroll of thanks in honor of the occasion. The expression of their gratitude was in the form of a poem composed by Specialist Four John Crimmuns, a patient on the ward.

Fisers Plan 25th Anniv.

Chaplain (Lieutenant Colonel) and Mrs. James H. Fiser will celebrate their 25th wedding anniversary Sunday. A few close friends will honor the Fisers at an informal gathering at their home.

Company D Cops 9th Inf Cage Tourney

BY J. J. SHIELDS

Displaying the nearest medium to perfection in teamwork, Delta Company, 9th Infantry finally clinched the 9th's company-level basketball title as they rolled past Company B of the "Manchu" unit, 62-31, Saturday night at the Kelley Hill Gym.

Delta Company wasted little time in gaining the victory as they moved ahead early in the contest. Paced by the floor play of Jan Jankowski and the accurate shooting of Dennis Ware, the new champs led 11-16 at the conclusion of the first ten minutes of play.

His Stride

At this point the victors hit their stride. With Willie Branic controlling the boards, and the rest of the squad hitting with perfect precision, the Delta Company quintet poured 14 markers through the nets while holding their opponents to only four in the remainder of the initial half. As the teams left the court for the intermission, Company B was on the short end of a 25-14 score.

Regaining their first half form, the champs exploded for seven straight points at the offset of the second half to increase their lead to 32-14. From here, the Delta Company cagers coasted to the victory.

Jankowski led the night's scoring, pouring in 18 points.

Hq. Keglers Bowl Tops In 1st Loop

By 1st Inf PIO

The "Always First" bowling league of the 1st Infantry completed its final two series on December 18 with a number of last-minute wins and losses which left the winners undetermined until the last ball was rolled down the alley.

Headquarters Company, long the league-leader, suffered a three game defeat by Company E in the first round of the evening, but bounced back in the second series to win 2-of-the-3 games from the officers team in a surprise finish.

Highlight of the evening was the performance of Master Sergeant Rafael M. Chavez, Headquarters Company, who started the third game of the second series with seven strikes in a row. This performance sparked his teammates to victory and was the extra margin of pins necessary to place the Headquarters team in first place. Starting the evening in third place, Combat Support Company won three games from Company A and then lost three to Company B to place second, a game behind the league-leaders.

Individual honors for the tournament went to Sgt. Chavez, for his high game of 237; Private Lewis Monchamp, Company A, high average of 176, and Private Edward T. Collins, Company D, high series of 551.

JOHN WELLS (R) ACCEPTS CERTIFICATE
From Lt. Col. Paul T. Ingle

Benning Boy Awarded Certificate For Junior NRA Marksmanship

The 17-year-old son of a retired Army officer was awarded a certificate recently for winning top honors in the Junior National Rifle Association marksmanship competition at Fort Benning.

John W. Wells, Jr., son of Lt. Col. (Ret.) John W. Wells of Columbus, won over about 120 other young riflemen. The marksmen, who ranged in age from 11 to 19 years, used .22 caliber rifles on a 50-foot range. All are the sons of active or retired military personnel.

The certificate, awarded by the National Rifle Association of Washington, D.C., was presented to young Wells by Lt. Col. Paul T. Ingle. Col. Ingle is chairman of the Infantry School's Weapons Department Small Arms Committee.

Wells is an Eagle Boy Scout and an honor roll student at Baker High School, where he is a senior.

The certificate stated, "John W. Wells, Jr., has successfully completed the requirements for his rifle rating of expert by demonstrating unusual marksmanship skill on the 50-foot official NRA marksmanship qualification course."

Wells also received a brassar on which was inscribed, "Distinguished Rifleman, NRA, Junior Division," and a medal with the same inscription, and a rifleman's lapel pin.

To win the certificate, Wells made the highest score among all contestants firing at 40 targets from the prone, sitting, kneeling and standing positions.

Targets of all young shooters who earned the rating of expert were sent to the NRA in Washington for final scoring.

Olympic Games Praised

Gen. LeMay Stresses Sports, Physical Fitness

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Gen. Curtis E. LeMay, Air Force Chief of Staff, doesn't think the human brain is "obsolete" or ever will be.

But he does believe that it isn't very effective without a healthy and vigorous body.

Gen. LeMay made these observations before the U. S. Olympic Assn. here.

"As you know," he said, "we have always stressed physical fitness as an essential element of combat readiness. Today we are taking steps to increase our emphasis in keeping with the President's message."

The Air Force's top military leader said he believes the future of democracy "depends to a considerable extent" on the shape and form of American sports in the coming years because democracy and sports have the same principles.

"And the Olympics, in addition to being a bridge across curtains and walls, bring understanding and mutual respect — the solid foundation of peace."

The general told his listeners that each service has a comprehensive program which requires commanders to insure that each man has the strength, coordination and stamina to perform the physical elements needed for his job; also that the individual's weight is within allowable limits.

He pointed out, however, that physical conditioning is only one phase of the overall program. "Competitive sports," he said, "give our people the opportunity for teamwork, leadership and develop a desire and the will to win.

"We are continuing our service sports contests and our interservice championships. In addition, through out Interservice Sports Council, the services cooperate in joint efforts to ready promising men for the Pan American and Olympic Games."

The general pointed to three areas in which the Olympic Assn. could help the Armed Services. One would be Defense Department representation on executive and game committees; two, a realistic screening program; and three, "give us immediate information concerning the service commitments of outstanding athletes.

"We want, if possible, to put these people at bases where we have facilities or which are nearby so the individual can continue his training.

"We don't and won't pamper athletes in uniform," Gen. LeMay said, "but we do and will help them and your organization in every way possible."

Second Army Seeking NCOs For Recruiting

WASHINGTON (AFPS)—The Second Army area is seeking applications from noncommissioned officers who would like to serve a tour on recruiting duty.

Those noncoms interested in recruiting duty may apply now for a limited number of openings.

Col. Fred J. Martineau, Commanding Officer, Second Army Recruiting District, with Headquarters at Ft. Meade, Md., recently announced opportunities for qualified personnel in Ohio, Pennsylvania, Kentucky, Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland and the District of Columbia.

More than 275 different duty stations are located throughout the seven-state area.

Noncoms in grade E-5 or above with a high school education, GT score of 110 or more and six years active Federal service are eligible.

Applicants should list one or more of the following Recruiting Main Station areas to which they would like to be assigned: Cleveland, Columbus, Cincinnati, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, Harrisburg, Wilkes-Barre, Ashland, Louisville, Roanoke, Richmond, Fairmont, Beckley or Washington, D. C.

Provisions for reenlistment in recruiting are outlined in AR 601-215 or AR 601-235. Transfers may be effected in accordance with AR 601-275.

Fort Eustis Thumps Quantico

ORLANDO, Fla. (AFPS) — The national Armed Forces service grid crown was relinquished by the Quantico Marines to a determined Ft. Eustis, Va. eleven, 25-24, in the second annual Missile Bowl.

The Eustis Wheels had to fight a come-from-behind battle after the leathernecks piled up a three touchdown lead.

Paced by field general Fran Curci, former U. of Miami star, who flipped three touchdown passes and a two point conversion, the Army aggregation started to roll in the second period. Curci completed 13 of 24 passes and gained 161 yards via the air lanes.

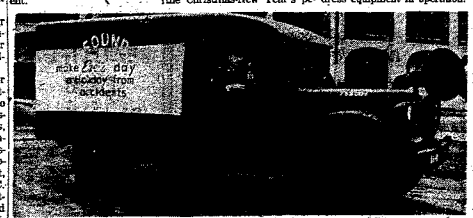
The game winning counters were scored by a 41-yard field goal by playing coach Dan Tossotti in the third frame. This cost the Marines the title and put Eustis in front for keeps.

Ironically, the Marines topped Eustis in first downs, 16-10, yards gained, rushing, 246-180, and passing, 205-175.

Sgt. Safety Goes Through TSB Trying to Cut Holiday Mishaps

By MSgt. Charlie Quinn

The voice of "Sgt. Safety" was heard throughout the Student Brigade area prior to Christmas.



Sgt. Safety, in the person of SP4 Harold L. Shelley, went around in a truck, urging safe driving during the holidays. This was part of the Student Brigade's concerted effort to enjoy the coming holiday season without accident or injury to a single member or dependent.

"We cover the entire brigade area between the hours of 11 a.m. to when most personnel are at lunch," said Shelley, the brigade safety NCO, "so we can reach as many drivers as possible with our reminders."

Sgt. Safety reminded his audiences that speed, fatigue and alcohol are three of the holiday driver's greatest enemies, that the "wee hours" are the road's most deadly and that the Christmas-New Year's period is the most dangerous of the year.

"We began the tour Dec. 18 and continued through Friday, the 22nd," he said, adding this is the time when a large part of the brigade personnel departed on Christmas leave.

Assisting in the Sgt. Safety program was Sgt. Robert J. French, who drove The Infantry School's Sound Section truck and kept the public address equipment in operation.

BOOKS in REVIEW

IN THE STONEWORKS by John Ciardi. (University Press, 1961)

In this new book of poems, John Ciardi maintains the vigor of the earlier poems and the fusion of laughter and passion, irony and directness, that have become the hallmarks of his verse.

MAN AND DOLPHIN by John C. Lilly. (Doubleday, 1961)

In the story of research now going on that may mark the beginning of a major scientific breakthrough: man's attempt to communicate with another species.

AMERICA THE VINCIBLE by Emmet J. Hughes. (Doubleday, 1960)

There has probably been since World War II, no books about America's role in world affairs to match this power of analysis or power of language. Its force — its boldness and its originality — derives from the author's freshness of thought and independence of spirit, disdaining all simple explanations for complex problems and penetrating to the political realities deep below the surface of partisan polemics and rhetorical cliches.

ON WAR by Raymond Aron. (Doubleday, 1959)

This is a provocative reexamination — by the leading French political and economic commentator — of the problem of atomic warfare as viewed from historical and humanistic considerations. On War is a clear, well-reasoned, and extremely timely analysis of a problem, which has faced mankind since the beginning of history, that is particularly acute in this thermonuclear age.

KIDNAP by George Waller. (Dial Press, 1961)

Tells the story of the Lindbergh kidnapping.

14 Times In Three Years

Earning the honor of being named "Soldier of the Month" undoubtedly calls for a lot of hard work, but for one Fort Benning soldier, it has paid off.

In qualifying for the award 14 times in the past three years, SP4 Charles A. Reilly of Paisley, Scotland, has received six suits of clothes, $350 in bonds and three trips to Japan.

The selection for the honor is based on soldierly conduct and appearance throughout the month and a rigid examination on general military knowledge.

Reilly's latest award occurred recently when he was named Soldier of the Month for November by the Infantry Center Troop Command to which his unit belongs. This was the third time he has been selected for the honor by the command.

Since his arrival on the post May 1, Reilly has been named Soldier of the Month four times by his unit, the 147th Ordnance Company, 7th Ordnance Maintenance and Supply Battalion, where he is a machinist.

The Surgeon Says:

So You Want To Lose Weight

By William P. Schane, Capt., MC

There are as many weight reduction programs as there are doctors to dispense them. Any which a doctor suggests is effective if one conscientiously follows this regimen.

The plan I wish to suggest has no magic virtue. It is not easy. However, with it you can lose weight, and what is perhaps more important, you can keep it off once it is lost.

Before we begin, there are several things upon which we should agree regarding obesity and weight reduction:

There is no easy way to lose weight.

ALL obesity is due to eating more calories than your body needs to maintain caloric balance.

Conversely, to lose weight, one must eat less than the body needs to maintain this balance.

No matter how little you eat, it is too much, if you do not lose weight.

In general, obese people have a habit of overeating. In order to lose weight and stay slim, one must totally revise this poor habit pattern.

Persons who are obese will never be able to go back to their old eating habits and expect to remain slim.

Therefore if one wishes to succeed in weight reduction, he must be prepared to tackle a life-long program on diet consciousness.

The responsibility for administrating any weight reduction program lies solely with the patient. The physician can merely advise you, he cannot reduce you.

Once a week weigh yourself at the same time in the day, preferably first thing in the morning. Keep a chart with these weekly weights recorded the amount you have eaten on it. Regulate your diet for the next week on the basis of your weight change in the previous week. If you have lost 1-2 pounds on the previous week, the amount you have eaten in the last week is about right for you, and you should eat about this same amount in weeks to come. If you lose more than 2 pounds, you should eat more. If you fail to lose at least 1 pound, you must eat less in order to lose weight, no matter how little you have eaten in the previous week.

Now for a few tips to help you follow the plan and lose weight safely.

It is better to eat 6 small meals a day than to eat all your calories for the day in one meal.

One should eat each day:

1 serving of meat, fish or fowl
1 glass of skimmed milk or its equivalent
1 egg
1 portion of raw fruit
3 portions of vegetables, one of them raw.

These foods should be used sparingly:

Fats, oils, alcohol
Sugars, candies, syrup
Fruits preserved in syrup, preserves
Breads, pastries, cereals
Potatoes, beans, peas, corn, rice
Macaroni, spaghetti.

Between-meal snacks can foil the best diet, and should be avoided.

Drugs are ordinarily not necessary for a successful weight reduction program and should be avoided if possible.

To decide when you are at a good weight, pick up a fold of skin from your abdomen. If you have more than ¾ inch between your fingers, you can safely lose more weight.

If you have any questions about your personal reducing problem, see a physician, and follow his advice.

Recently Retired Civilian Employees Given Awards

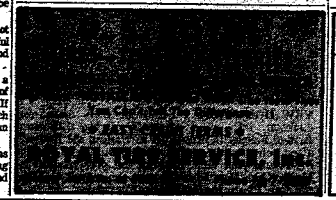
Five recently retired former civilian employees of the Infantry Center Engineer Section have been presented Certificates of Achievement for outstanding service.

Another employee who will retire early next year also received a certificate. Two other retired civilians who were absent will receive their certificates by mail.

The men present for the presentation ceremony received a certificate. Two other retired civilians who were absent will receive their certificates by mail.

The men present for the presentation ceremony received their certificates from Col. Riel S. Crandall, Infantry Center engineer.

They were Curley James, Phenix City, who completed 41 years of service before retiring last March 29; Alonza Walker, Columbus, 25 years; William L. Rainer, Columbus, 35 years; Robert H. Hood, Phenix City, 35 years, and Ernest Miles, Fort Mitchell, Ala., 23 years.



Henry Colquitt, Columbus, will retired Jan. 31 after 21 years of service.

Unable to be present at the ceremony were Calvin Elrod, Cartersville, Ga., who completed 27 years of service, and William B. Caldwell, Columbus, with 23 years.

The eight civilians have completed a total of 246 years of service here.

The certificates stated, "Upon the occasion of your honorable service to the Government of the United States, it is a pleasure to express to you sincere appreciation for your long and faithful service.

"You have every right to be proud of your record of duty well performed. Your work in the Engineer Section has been carried out in a most commendable manner.

Some Korea Vets to Receive Special VA Dividend Checks

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — More than $29.5 million in special dividend checks are in the process of being mailed to more than 400,000 Korean Conflict veterans who hold "W" type government insurance policies, the VA has announced.

The mailing of these special dividend checks is expected to be completed in December, the VA said.

An additional 200,000 Korea veterans who have not yet converted nor exchanged their government "RS" insurance for the "W" type policies will also become eligible for special dividend checks if they convert or exchange before the time limit, Sept. 14, 1963.

WWI and WWII veterans are not included in the present dividend distribution. They hold either U.S. Government Life Insurance (USGLI) or National Service Life Insurance (NSLI) and have already received regular dividend payments this year plus a special dividend payment.

The average dividend now being mailed to "W" insurance policy holders will be about $72 depending upon the amount of the policy and the length of time it has been in force, the VA explained.

Each of the remaining "RS" policy holders will receive a letter from the VA within the next few weeks explaining the advantages of changing to "W" type policies.

"RS" insurance was issued to Korean Conflict veterans discharged between April 25, 1951, and Dec. 31, 1956, as five-year term policies not eligible for dividends.

safety inspection is now required 30 days before expiration date of the registrant's auto insurance policy. The inspection is made at the Post Exchange Garage.

A 1911 and a 1960 graduate of the U. S. Military Academy at West Point addressed the Academic Founder's Day dinner March 17, at the Main Officer's Open Mess. The speakers were Brig. Gen. (Ret.) James B. Crawford, of New York City, and 2nd Lt. Harold Lucky, who attended Airborne training at The Infantry School after graduation from the Academy. Guest of honor and principle speaker was Lt. Gen. Paul D. Adams, then commanding general of Third Army.

The First Annual Armed Forces International Shooting Competition was held on the post March 26 to April 3, with 153 of the most accomplished marksmen of the Armed Forces participating. The meet was sponsored by the Continental Army Command, sanctioned by the chiefs of staff and the National Rifle Association. The competition was on World Championship and Olympic levels.

The Infantry School celebrated its 54th anniversary April 1. The Infantry School's beginning dates back to 1907, as the School of Musketry at the Presidio of Monterey, Calif. Its permanent establishment at Fort Benning was in 1918, during World War I. Continuing through World War II and the Korean Conflict, the School has, in peace and war, taken the place of leadership in training and development of tactics and weapons.

Henry Cabot Lodge, former ambassador to the United Nations, addressed officer career classes at Benning April 7. Lodge is a Major Gen. in the Army Reserve.

On April 11, General (Ret.) Mark W. Clark was guest speaker at the Columbus Phenix City-Fort Benning Chapter of the Association of the U. S. Army. Clark is president of The Citadel, Charleston, S.C.

Fort Benning collected nearly all the top awards in the Third Army Entertainment Contest held on the post April 20 to 22. Osar winners qualified to participate in the Army eliminations at Fort Belvoir, Va., and a chance to audition for the "Rolling Along of 1961" Soldier Show.

Cooperating with citizens of Columbus and the surrounding area, Fort Benning put on a show of strength in observance of Armed Forces Day, May 20. In keeping with the traditional slogan "Power for Peace" troops participated in a parade and weapons and equipment were displayed in the downtown area. The post was represented in Armed Forces Day activities throughout the South.

May was the Chief of Staff's Suggestion Month. Military and civilian employees submitted 10,629 suggestions to improve operations during the month. During the whole of 1961 some 12,025 suggestions were submitted. Awards presented under the program ranged from a Commendation Medal to cash awards and certificates.

Two captains won the General George C. Marshall awards for outstanding military writing. Open to career course students at The Infantry School, the award honors the late general, secretary of defense and secretary of state. The 1961 winners were Capt. John G. Papageorge and Capt. James F. Bell.

Brig. Gen. John E. Kelly arrived on the post June 10 to assume the duties of deputy commanding general of The Infantry Center, succeeding Brig. Gen. A. D. Surles, Jr., who became assistant commandant of The Infantry School. Gen. Surles succeeded Brig. Gen. L. A. Walsh, Jr., who was reassigned to Korea.

Twenty-two new records were established during the 1961 Army Rifle and Pistol Championships held on post from June 6 to 13. Approximately 1,000 competitors, coaches, team captains and supporters attended the annual windup to the marksmanship cycle.

For military dependents at Fort Benning, a highlight of the year was the annual Youth Activities Carnival on July 4. With parades, contests, rides, and fireworks, the carnival sponsored by the YAC provided an exciting but safe holiday on Independence Day. Proceeds from the carnival are used in support of the youth program on the post.

Major Gen. Ben Harrell arrived August 1 to assume the duties of commanding general of The Infantry Center and commandant of The Infantry School. He came to the post from Fort Campbell, Ky., where he was commanding general of the 101st Airborne Division. Gen. Harrell succeeded Lt. Gen. Hugh P. Harris, who departed the post July 15 to command I Corps, in Korea.

Approximately 900 troops from Benning participated in Exercise Swift Strike at Fort Bragg, N. C., August 6 to 20.

A Fort Benning soldier won his second national pistol championship in a row August 3. Taking the 1961 pistol crown at Camp Perry, Ohio, was Sfc William B. Blankenship. His grand aggregate score was 2,631-119X out of a possible 2,700 points. Using .22 Center Fire and .45 caliber weapons, he came within five points of the all-time National Matches record he, himself, set in the 1960 competition.

Fort Benning obtained permission to use temporarily, 55,000 acres adjoining the post to supplement training and maneuver facilities.

During the summer the post was the scene of two weeks active duty training for 10,123 Reservists and a summer camp for 1,200 ROTC cadets from 33 colleges.

The U. S. Military Academy Class of 1962, numbering 598 men, was on the post June 6 to 13 for training in Airborne concepts, leadership and tactics.

From June 27 to July 1, the 613 members of the Air Force Academy Class of 1964 underwent intensive training here on Infantry weapons, doctrines and techniques.

The post won the Third Army Award of Honor in recognition of a superior Educational Development of Military Personnel Program for fiscal year 1961.

The 30th class of the Armed Forces Staff College at Norfolk, Va., numbering 210 students, accompanied by 21 faculty members, visited the post in September to observe Infantry training and capabilities.

The Infantry Officer Candidate School celebrated its 20th anniversary September 27. The School has graduated 78,012 second lieutenants since its founding in 1941.

The first of approximately 4,000 officers and enlisted men of 19 Army Reserve and National Guard units recently called to active duty arrived on the post early in October.

President John F. Kennedy called Fort Benning's participation in a STRAC combat readiness demonstration at Fort Bragg, October 12, "the highlight of the afternoon." In a wire to Gen. Harrell, he said, "The performance of every man in every unit was exemplary...and the Rangers, to a man, were the highlight of the afternoon." Members of The Infantry School's Ranger and Weapons Departments participated in the demonstrations.

Lt. Gen. T. J. H. Trapnell was on the post October 27 and 28, his first visit since as-

Gen. Van Fleet Makes Reserves Statement; They Are 'Ready' and Spirit 'Magnificent'

WASHINGTON (ANS)— Following is a statement by General James Van Fleet, special consultant to the Defense Department, following a report to the President:

The spirit of the citizen-soldier in all of the units and camps visited stands out as the one indelible impression. It is magnificent and truly reflects the readiness of America to answer the call of the President in this or any other emergency. Complaints are insignificant and not representative of the overwhelming majority. The headlines appearing in the press of dissatisfaction and inadequacy of supplies are overstated. Morale is extremely high in all units.

But I must caution that it is the initial expression of proud and patriotic hearts stimulated by the incentive of the world situation and need for added preparedness.

The quality of these units is far above any previous mobilizations as took place in World War II and Korea. The average age of the men is 26-27 years. They are mature, well-trained individually, and with tremendous skills in large numbers.

I have the highest commendation for the outstanding care and instruction given at our replacement training centers at Fort Jackson and Fort Knox. The training I witnessed is far superior to any in preparation for World War II and Korea.

The Reserve Forces Act has proven a great benefit to all National Guard and Reserve units. I would not change it. A soldier never gets enough training and we can say from experience that training pays off in battle.

The Special Forces at Fort Bragg are indeed a timely activity. I do have a conviction that the school is imperative to develop doctrine and tactics and general information world-wide on past, present and future international communist guerrilla activities and countermeasures to meet them. The training of individuals is excellent and should be a great asset to supply qualified men to various military assistance groups in friendly nations currently threatened.

My report must include high praise for the warm welcome and assistance rendered to all units by post commanders and Regular Army troops at all stations and levels. Significant too is the efficient manner in which Fort Polk was opened by a Reserve Station complement and the aid rendered by the Fourth Army.

Gen. Reynolds Speaks at OCS Graduation Here

Brig. Gen. Royal Reynolds, deputy commanding general, 2nd Infantry Division, was guest speaker at the recent graduation exercises for OCS class 1-62, 5th Student Battalion. The Student Brigade, in the Main Theater.

Speaking on the problems confronting junior officers, Gen. Reynolds emphasized the importance of their role in today's troubled world. He was introduced by Brig. Gen. A. D. Surles, Jr., Infantry School assistant commandant, who welcomed the families and guests of the newly commissioned officers. Gen. Surles also made a short introductory address to the graduates, congratulating them upon completion of the course.

Second Lt. Thomas Medley, honor student, was presented the Association of the United States Army (AUSA) award by Lt. Col. John B. Wine, assistant chief of staff, G-2, Second Division.

Presentation of diplomas was made by Gen. Reynolds. The Invocation was given by Lt. Col. Arthur Estes, Student Brigade chaplain.

Threat of Red Conquest 'Clear' In South Vietnam

WASHINGTON (AFPS)—The United States has cautioned its allies that war-ripped South Vietnam today is threatened by the "clear and present danger" of Communist conquest.

If South Vietnam and its neighbors fall to the Communists, the official report continued, the balance of power in Asia will be "tipped perilously" against the non-Communist countries.

The State Department "white paper" was a 52-page booklet plus 102 pages of supporting documents mostly captured from Communist soldiers. It calls on our allies and on neutral nations alike to recognize the danger of an expanding Communist military effort in Southeast Asia.

The report said the Communists had shown "utter contempt" for the International Control Commission some weeks ago when they kidnapped, tortured and killed Col. Hoang Thuy Nam, Chief of the South Vietnamese liaison mission with the Commission.

The Commission, set up to supervise the 1954 peace agreement in Southeast Asia, consists of India (chairman), Canada and Poland.

Viet Cong, or Communist, forces in the area number between 8,000 and 9,000 fighting men organized in about 30 battalions, according to the report. These are supported by "thousands of village guards, political cadres, special agents, bearers and the like."

"North Vietnam," the white paper added, "in guiding and supporting the Viet Cong effort, has had the full backing of Moscow, Peiping and the rest of the Communist world."

The statement pointed out that South Vietnam has received aid from the United States and other friendly countries. "In the face of heightened efforts by the Viet Cong, more assistance may be needed," it said.

"The problem here is to work out cooperatively the kind of assistance program that is likely to prove most effective in meeting the present danger."

The white paper, titled "A Threat to the Peace" was given the status of a diplomatic paper when it was officially distributed by Assistant Secretary of State Averell Harriman to ambassadors of Britain, France, Australia, New Zealand, Thailand, Pakistan and the Philippines.

These countries are our allies in the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization. Copies of the report also went to the governments of Canada, India and South Vietnam.

suming command of the Third Army.

Individual basic Airborne training was returned to Fort Benning, birthplace of the Airborne. Facilities on the post will be increased to handle the extra personnel as individual basic training is phased out at Fort Bragg and Fort Campbell.

A special conference for Infantry instructors at service schools throughout the United States was conducted on the post November 14 to 16. The conference was held to acquaint the instructors with changes in Infantry doctrine and to assist them in preparing instruction based on new organization concepts.

The superintendent of Fort Benning Childrens' Schools, Mrs. Hazel J. Scudder, is one of 29,000 of the country's outstanding women selected to appear in "Who's Who of American Women (1961)." She has headed the post dependent school system since 1950.

A four year, resident, degree-granting college for Fort Benning became a reality with the announcement December 15 that the American University will establish a center on the post in January.

Engineers at Fort Benning have assisted in a community effort to raise the "Chattahoochee", a Confederate gun-boat found wedged into the bank of the Chattahoochee River, on the reservation. It was under a hundred year's accumulation of mud and silt.

Plans call for reassembling the iron-class vessel to form the nucleus of a Confederate Naval Museum.
