Lt. Weary downed Colonel James Osgard in the first match of the second flight before battling First Sgt. Petit for number one honors in the second flight.

The three flight winners will each receive trophies symbolic of their victories.

Powell Topped Manchu Hitters

By 9th Inf. PIO

The 9th Infantry's catcher-manager, Max Powell, topped all Manchu hitters in the Division softball tournament with a batting average of .333 in final statistics revealed this week.

Third baseman Harry Hall nabbed the runnerup spot with a .327 mark on a 17 for 52 performance. Powell collected 18 hits in 47 trips to the plate. He scored 11 runs, drove in 12 markers, hit four doubles, and one home run in the 14-game schedule. The 9th Infantry finished third in the tourney with a 9-5 slate.

Pitcher Billy White hurled 10 complete games in 11 starts, compiling a record of seven wins and four losses. Three of his defeats were one-run affairs and included a 17-inning marathon against Division Trains.

White pitched 80 innings, surrendered 38 hits, 18 bases on balls, and 16 runs. He allowed only four earned runs, however, for a fantastic earned run average of 0.35 per seven innings of hurling. He fanned 109 batters. Robert Given hurled the other 9th Infantry contests, compiling a 2-1 mark.

At the plate White went 12 for 37 for a .324 average. He tallied 10 runs and batted in 10 during his 11 contests. White batted one double, four triples, and one home run. Robert Hiller led the 9th Infantry in rbi's with 14 while Waymouth Wyche paced the club in runs scored with 12.

151st Engineer Group to Battle The Student Brigade In One of Final Games of the First Half of Season

With only two games remaining in the first half of the post Major Unit Baseball League, a contest that could well decide who is the mid-way champion, will be featured this Sunday at Gowdy Field at 2 p.m.

In that game, the 151st Engineer Group, who, for only a few days wrestled the lead from The Student Brigade, will collide with the 1st Battle Group, 29th Infantry, 1st Infantry Brigade who were also in the title race at the beginning of the season.

But after the season started to wear on, the 29th Infantry fell to fourth place in the league standings with an even 5-5 won and lost record. While the 29th was falling in the listings, the 151st Engineers started a slow climb into the lead position, only to be knocked out of a comfortable lead by losing to the Infantry Center Troop Command last week.

Over-all the pennant race looks good, with only six and one-half games separating the front-runner and the cellar dweller.

The Student Brigade was helped into the lead position by posting a 5-3 win over the 2nd 4Howitzer Brigade, 10th Artillery, 1st Infantry Brigade "Redlegs" in last week's action. The other determining factor in moving TSB into first place was the 4-3 setback handed the 151st Engineers by Troop Command.

It was the second of two wins for Troop Command, who moved from next-to-last place in the standings to a fifth position hold. The first victory was over the last-place 428th Medical Battalion by a 5 - 4 count.

In the first game last week, The Student Brigade overwhelmed the 29th Infantry by an 11-7 onslaught. Meanwhile, the 428th Medics managed to win its second game of the year, 10-0, over the 1st Armored Rifle Battalion, 58th Infantry, 1st Infantry Brigade.

The 29th also aided in knocking the 58th Infantry from title contention, at least for the present, by whipping them, 9-1.

Tonight will mark the close of a rough make-up schedule that was caused by the late start in the league. From a high point of six games per week, the projected slate will feature four games weekly, with three-game slates mixed into the schedule here and there.

Tuesday (June 27) will officially mark the close of the first half of the schedule and doing up the closing honors will be the 428th Medics and the 10th Artillery.

On the other side of the schedule, Troop Command will compare lineups and batters with the 29th Infantry in the official openers of the second half, set for Wednesday (June 28) at 7:30 p.m. at Gowdy Field.

The other game on tap for next week is the battle between the first and last place clubs, TSB and the 428th Medics at Gowdy Field on Thursday (June 29).

Although the first and last place clubs in the standings haven't changed drastically since the first few weeks of the 1961 campaign, the middlemen have experienced quite a bit of shuffeling around.

The 58th Infantry and the 29th Infantry, who were one time the pushers for the top spot, have fallen off considerably. Troop Command, the 10th Artillery and the 151st Engineers, who used to occupy nearly the lowest positions are now surging ahead toward the pennant.

White Sox Named Main Post Champs

The Main Post Biddy League Team 7, the "White Sox", won the championship in their league with 6-1 season record. The team was coached by 2nd Lt. Jessie W. Watson, Jr., and sponsored by Combat Support Company, 1st Battle Group, 29th Infantry, 1st Infantry Brigade.

Among the outstanding players on the team were Johnny Yarborough, the pitcher, who pitched all seven of the team's games; Tom Jones, the first baseman, who led the team in batting; and Ronnie Rogers, the shortstop, who played fine defensive baseball and helped maintain team hustle and spirit. These three players were chosen by their team to play on the main post All-Star team.

The team's only defeat was in a close game with Team 5, the "Yankees", who was the runner up team in the league. Team 7 came from behind in two of their games to win and put them in first place which they maintained throughout the season.

Glenn Davis Gets Honors

Glenn Davis, one of the all-time grid greats of the U.S. military Academy who thrilled fans with his razzle-dazzle running, passing and scoring feats during the 1943-46 seasons, has joined the elite of the pigskin world with his selection, along with nine other standouts, to the Football Hall of Fame.

During his playing days at West Point, Davis established a college record of 20 touchdowns in a single season, a mark since broken but one that still stands in the school's football ledger.

The muscular star still holds records of 11.74 yards per play and 11.51 yards per rush for a single season. During his Army days he became one of the few players in history to garner the games three top awards — the Camp, Maxwell and Heisman Trophies.

Davis and such other famous players as Charlie "Choo Choo" Justice, a 1946-49 North Carolina halfback, and George A. McAfee, Duke University halfback of the 1937-38 era, along with seven others bring to 191 the number of men named to the Hall of Fame for achievements in college football. There are 143 players and 48 coaches in the Hall.

The new members will be formally inducted at the annual awards dinner of the FHOF in New York next December.

A breakdown by grade shows 99 going to E-9, 440 to E-8, 542 to E-7, 777 to E-6, 2,283 to E-5 and 8,732 to E-4.

The 542 promotions to E-7 is the biggest quota since April in that pay grade. The promotions to E-8 remained firm but for those going to E-9 there was a drop of about 100 slots compared to the June quota.

Of these men were singled out for what was to be the most daring underground mission of World War II — the assassination of SS General Reinhard Heydrich, the most ruthless butcher in Hitler's hierarchy.

AN INNOCENT ABROAD by Ronald Kirkbride (Prentice-Hall, 1961)

Elmer left the States a happy careless country boy bound for England, by way of Japan. But the day he landed in Tokyo, his troubles and hardship started. In a comedy of errors, Elmer is arrested during a Ginza bar riot, winds up at the local police station, and there meets Kimi. It takes little persuasion for this lovely flower of the East to convince our humpkin that a visit to a Shinto shrine is a "must" for every American tourist.

Allied Students to Fly During Air Orientation

Fifteen officers from eight Allied nations attending The Infantry School's Associate Officer Career Class 5 are scheduled to receive a red carpet orientation on Army aviation tomorrow.

They will be the special guests of Lawson Army Aviation Command at 1:30 p.m. and take individual flights in L-19 airplanes with students in their class who are pilots.

Major Robert G. Creson, senior among the seven pilots in the class, will present official flying caps to Lt. Col. Yu-ts'ai Chang, Lt. Col. Sung-Sen Fai and Lt. Col. Lin-Lai Tang of the Republic of China; Lt. Col. John Ladas, Major Nikolaos Moutoulis, Major George Papakonstandinou and Capt. Spyridon Skellariou of Greece.

Major Hans Rapold of Switzerland; Major Ekrem Unalan of Turkey; Major Mangaradja L. H. Pandjaitan and Capt. Gusti Sjamsir Alam of Indonesia; Capt. Sigmund Amundsen of Norway; Capt. Ali Ahmed Mariamy and Capt. Mohammed Hamid Haraga of Libya and 1st Lt. Alfred L. Bonner of Liberia.

The program resulted from the Allied officers' questioning their fellow students about aviation activities.

Their one-hour flights will tour the post and Columbus, and include simple maneuvers. The Allied officers also will be briefed at a display of Army aircraft on Lawson Field and receive a weather orientation.

Piloting the Allied students will be Capt. T. J. Clark, Jr., Capt. Wayne C. Hogan; Capt. Charles D. James, Capt. Don McMillon, Capt. Martin C. Sprague and 1st Lt. Marvin H. Ebaugh.

Lt. Col. John Oswalt, a committee chief at the Army Aviation School, Fort Rucker, will arrive by AO-1 Mohawk plane directly in front of the Allied group during the program to speak briefly on Army aviation.

Flags of the eight Allied countries and the U. S. will be displayed at the event.

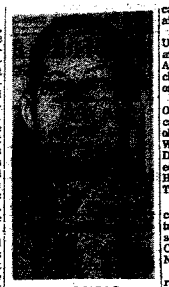
He's Now Airborne Student

Possibly Youngest to Earn MOH, Lieutenant Wants Ranger Training

By Pic Harold S. Kitching

One day in the early 1940's, Jack H. Lucas enlisted in the Marine Corps and the following chain of events led to becoming probably the youngest man ever to win the Congressional Medal of Honor, and eventually to his recent assignment with The Student Brigade.

Now a first lieutenant in the Regular Army as the result of a direct commission from the Pentagon, he enlisted in the Marines at the age of 14 and within 12 hours was sworn in and packed off to basic training at Paris Island, S.C., for "the roughest duty this side of Iwo Jima."



The young Marine remained in the States for 19 months before an overseas assignment to the Hawaiian Islands where he found himself stationed at an obscure quartermaster depot.

Deciding to take matters into his own hands he slowed away on a troop ship headed for combat. When discovered he offered the explanation, "I enlisted to fight and there I was counting socks."

Lt. Lucas received his wish to fight when he landed as a rifleman at Iwo Jima on February 19, 1945, just five days after his 17th birthday.

On the second day of combat a barrage of mortar fire forced him to take cover in a narrow trench along with three other Marines.

In a trench one yard away and parallel to them, 11 enemy soldiers came up. In the exchange that followed, Lt. Lucas' rifle became jammed. As he tried to take corrective action a grenade landed in the trench. Lt. Lucas threw himself upon it and then another grenade landed. Pulling the second one under him, he covered both with his body.

In the explosion that followed, he suffered lacerations of the right hip and arm, a ruptured pleura, shrapnel fragments around the heart, and heavy loss of blood. Left for dead it was nearly an hour before he was found by medical corpsmen and taken to an aid station.

After nearly five months in U. S. base hospitals, he was awarded the Purple Heart on August 7, 1945. He was discharged from the Marine Corps on September 18, 1945.

But the best was yet to come. On October 5, 1945, young Lucas, at that time only 17 years old, found himself at the White House in Washington, D. C., where he was presented the Congressional Medal of Honor by President Harry S. Truman.

Lt. Lucas then went back to complete high school and eventually received a bachelor of science degree from Highpoint College near Winston - Salem, N. C.

On May 24 of this year he received a direct appointment from the Pentagon as first lieutenant in the Army. Lt. Lucas chose the Army because of it's flexibility and training schools.

Now assigned to Headquarters and Service Co., 4th Student Battalion, The Student Brigade, for Airborne training, he intends to go to an Officer Orientation Course Class and would like to go through Ranger training.

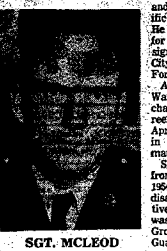
Annual Civic Bar-B-Q For Allies Held

Allied students attending The Infantry School were guests of honor at a barbecue yesterday given by the Chamber of Commerce, Merchants Association and civic clubs of Columbus.

The annual event at the United Oil Farm on Macon Rd. began with a social hour at 6:30 p.m., followed by the barbecue at 7:45 p.m.

Approximately 75 Allied officers from Afghanistan, Australia, Republic of China, Denmark, Greece, Indonesia, Iran, Japan, Republic of Korea, Lebanon, Liberia, Libya, Norway, Pakistan, Saudi Arabia, Switzerland, Thailand, Turkey, Venezuela and the Republic of Vietnam were invited to attend.

Major Gen. Hugh P. Harris, post commander and Brig Gen. William L. Hardick, commanding general of the 2nd Infantry Division, were slated to address the group.



Welcoming the guests on behalf of the sponsoring organizations were Frank Thompson, president of the Chamber of Commerce; Luther Bunge, T. G. Reeves, president of the Merchants Association, and Robert Turner representing local civic clubs.

An Allied student responded.

Among the 26 officers attending from the post were Brig. Gen. A. D. Surles, Jr., assistant commandant of The Infantry School; Brig. Gen. John E. Kelly, deputy commanding general of The Infantry Center, and Brig. Gen. Charles H. White, Jr., assistant commander of the 2nd Division.

1,900 Man-Hours

LAAC Ideas Add Up To Big Saving

One of our most valuable resources is manpower.

The Aircraft Field Maintenance Division of the Transportation Section, The Infantry Center, recently saved over 1,900 man-hours annually by a series of management improvements.

Common hardware kits were placed in a central location accessible to all mechanics. Previously, time was often lost in going a longer distance to obtain these items.

In another improvement, aircraft maintenance data was assembled in one location, which had previously been filed in two or three different areas.

A third improvement resulted in a change in the flow of work orders and led to better control of work assignment and more efficient utilization of personnel.

An additional benefit has been the saving of an estimated $4,200 through the improvements cited.

Manpower and funds saved through the management improvements are retained by the activity or unit for reuse within the organization.

Hi Yo, Silver

One show-off, scout dog "Shaw" in the 26th Infantry Scout Dog Platoon, 1st Infantry Brigade, thinks he's a horse. Every time his handler, Pvt. Ray Taylor, says "Hi Yo, Silver," the dog rears up on his hind legs and stays there until he loses his balance.

Three USAR Medical Units Train at MAH

Approximately 319 personnel of three Army Reserve medical units from Memphis are at Fort Benning for two weeks of training.

The units, which are undergoing field exercises and whose personnel receive on-the-job training at Martin Army Hospital, are the 330th General Hospital, commanded by Col. James E. Hughes; the 306th Field Hospital, commanded by Col. Arthur W. Green, and the 390th Dental Detachment, commanded by Lt. Col. William Polly.

During the first week of training, personnel of the 306th are establishing an operational field hospital in the McKenna Hill area, simulating a location in a communications zone. Simulated casualties are used for the exercises.

Its Army Training Test was administered to the 306th during the first week by the contrilling unit, the 330th General Hospital. The hospital and its personnel are evaluated on the basis of medical capability and basic military subjects.

Tuesday, doctors, nurses and technicians of the 330th and 390th began their on-the-job training in the medical, surgical, x-ray, laboratory, neuropsychiatric and dental facilities at Martin Army Hospital.

Elements of the 330th also participated with the 306th in field training.

The chief nurse of the 330th General Hospital, Lt. Col. Margaret Hippey, is supervising the training of the enlisted personnel at Martin Hospital.

The Reservists complete their Fort Benning active duty July 1.

Throughout the year personnel of the units receive training and experience at Kennedy Veterans Hospital in Memphis.

Ex-Korea DJ Is Now OC Student

Anyone stationed in Korea from July, 1960, to March, 1961, may be familiar with the face and voice of Officer Candidate Robert G. McGushin, of the 52nd Officer Candidate Company, 5th Student Battalion, The Student Brigade. O-C McGushin spent these months with the Armed Forces Radio Korea Network as a radio sportscaster, also doing some work in television.

It was not new to Candidate McGushin since, as a civilian, he was a DJ and sports announcer for radio station KSJO in San Jose, California, and did some MC work on local shows for KNTV in the same city.

Entering the Army in February, 1960, he completed basic training at Fort Ord, and then attended the Army Information School, at Fort Slocum, N.Y. Upon completing this course he was sent directly to Korea.

During his high school years, he was the California state champion in public speaking and in 1957 was runner-up for the national championship.

Gen. Surles' Infantry School Report

Voice of Command Must Be Heard Loud and Clear

Communication, the voice of command, must be heard loud and clear. Commanders and staff officers must be communication conscious and know this area to be successful on today's battlefield.

Gen. Clark L. Ruffner, former Third Army commander, felt so strongly about communications that he wrote to all commanders.

This letter stated in part: "A failure of communication due to inadequate operating and maintenance personnel or a lack of knowledge by commanders and staffs . . . cannot be tolerated. If a commander does not have continuous and effective communication. . . he does not have a command."

The mission of the Communication Department, The Infantry School, under Col. Glenn H. Gardner, is to insure that commanders are provided training personnel, and the best possible equipment for positive command and control.

The term "communication" denotes radio, wire, messenger, visual, and sound. In all tactical planning, each of these must be taken into consideration.

Although we have five means of communications, primary emphasis has been placed upon radio during the last decade due to change in tactical doctrine and wide separation of combat units.

The trend to increase the radio sets within the Infantry battle group has increased 50 times in the last two decades. For example, the Infantry regiment of World War II, in the early part of 1942, had 14 radios; the Infantry battle group in today's modern Army has 272 radios.

The Communication Department presents the second largest number of instruction hours per year of any department at The School

Three at MAH Receive Awards For Most Valuable Suggestions

Two sergeants and a civilian employee were presented special Infantry Center Certificates of Achievement for submitting the three most valuable suggestions during the 1960 Operation Searchlight campaign on the post at a ceremony at Fort Benning Monday.

Major Gen. Hugh P. Harris, commanding general of The Infantry Center, presented the awards to Sfc William J. Moore, assigned to the hospital's Pharmacy Service; Sfc Melvin E. Thompson, assigned to the hospital's Linen Exchange, and George C. Meredith, an engineer employee at Martin.

They were selected by The Infantry Center's Incentive Awards Committee for having submitted the most beneficial of almost 4,000 suggestions which came from military and civilian personnel during the special emphasis program.

Saved $50,000

Sgt. Moore's proposal is expected to result in estimated annual benefits of more than $50,000. He proposed expansion of the hospital's pharmaceutical laboratory to provide adequate space for the compounding of numerous drug products which formerly had to be purchased.

Dispensaries dependent upon support may now pick up their pharmaceutical supplies from the new laboratory, located in Building 396, thus saving a trip to the hospital as well as the loading of supplies out through the busy and public lobby of the hospital.

Previously, the compounding section of the laboratory was operated in a rear portion of the hospital pharmacy. According to Sgt. Moore, the space was inadequate for efficient operation due to lack of space for equipment and plumbing facilities. While compounding was taking place, other operations had to be suspended.

For his suggestion, Sgt. Moore has also received $25 as first place winner in Fort Benning's Monthly Military Suggestion Contest.

Linen Repair

Sgt. Thompson's proposal that thermoplastic patching equipment be used in the repairing of linen at Martin Army Hospital is expected to result in estimated annual benefits of more than $13,000. At his suggestion, the equipment was procured and installed in the Linen Exchange It is

Report

The department was a nine classroom and laboratory type buildings which have items of equipment found in the battle group.

Dependent upon the instruction being presented, this equipment ranges from a simple sound-powered telephone to the more complicated AN-GRC-46 radio. The Department's Equipment Pool, under the supervision of Capt. Jack O. Gardner and CWO Leonard J. Hatfield, maintains on hand over 10,000 items of signal equipment with an "on-the-shelf" value in excess of $3,200,000.

This equipment is used also by the 1st Infantry Brigade and the 2nd Infantry Division in support of School instruction.

To insure that instruction presented by the department represents the best possible approach to problems, Col. Gardner has established two innovations. These are an officer staffed department review board and a non-commissioned officer staffed advisory panel.

The review board is composed of the director, staff officers, committee chiefs, and the instructors of the problem concerned.

The non-commissioned officer advisory panel is composed on senior enlisted men, including MSgt Claude C. Erwin, Sfc Guy E. Shirley, MSgt.

COL. GARDNER

George R. Stoner, Sfc Harry N. Vonglis and MSgt John H. Lukosek. All instruction presented is reviewed by these groups to insure that it is compatable with doctrine, is in keeping with the commandant's policy, and represents the best combination of field experience available.

Due to the increased importance of communications created by technological advances, the department must present a wide variety of instruction. The programs of instruction for all resident courses at TIS contain a prescribed amount of communication training. The Radio and Wire Committee, headed by Lt. Col. Sam J. Adams Jr., presents instruction on the characteristics, components, and operation of various items of radio and wire equipment authorized the Infantry and Airborne Infantry battle groups.

The Operations Committee, with Capt. James V. Chriss as chairman, plans, prepares, and presents instruction on the tactical application provided these organizations. All training emphasizes practical work.

To insure that commanders and staff officers have available the appropriate knowledge and skills, the Communication Department conducts an 11-week course for Infantry communication officers. Those attending this course receive detailed instruction in characteristics and techniques of operation.

Upon graduation from this course, the student is awarded MOS 0200 and is qualified as a battle group communication officer.

In an organization as complex as the battle group, it is impossible for a communication officer to personally supervise all communication activities. Accordingly, the department conducts a course to train selected enlisted personnel to assist.

This course, "The Infantry Communication Supervision Course," is a 10-week course of 464 hours. It is tailored to the needs of senior enlisted ment to supervise the installation, operation and maintenance of signal equipment found in the battle group.

Upon graduation from this course, students are awarded MOS 311.7.

Brig. Gen. S. L. A. Marshall, the noted military historian, when commenting about communications during the Korean War, stated ". . . Army own part, I was impressed most strongly by the almost invariable collapse of communications."

This strong statement points up another requirement which must be met by the Communication Department.

It is essential that an individual properly trained in the mechanics of radio repair be available to complete the communication team in the battle group. The School has an Infantry Communication Specialist Course, which trains second echelon repairmen for the Infantry and Airborne battle groups.

This course, under the supervision of Major W. R. Tripp, provides in a 12-week, 528 hour course, the knowledge essential to maintain and repair the communication equipment.

As a point of interest, The Infantry School is the only activity in the U.S. where infantry radio maintenance personnel are trained and awarded the MOS 311.1.

Brig. L. A. Walsh Jr., former assistant commandant, indicated that the Artillery has always enjoyed the reputation of being good communicators. During his tour of duty as a regimental commander, he made it a point to insure that his communications were better than the Artillery.

He indicated that for a unit to be truly combat ready, this unit must be able to shoot, move and communicate.

The mission of the Communication Department is to insure that requirements such as stated by Gens. Buffner and Walsh are met.

Success on today's battle field dictates that the voice of command must be "loud and clear" — not the "whisper of despair."

A Misunderstanding Can Hurt

Maybe nobody was confused in this case, but a recent event pointed up an area of wide misunderstanding regarding blood donations. Thirteen men of the post Honor Guard Company, Company C, 1st Battle Group, 29th Infantry, 1st Infantry Brigade, came to the aid of a fellow soldier the other day and donated blood on behalf of Sgt. Thomas W. Carter's step-father, who was in a civilian hospital somewhere in this area. The Carter family were justly appreciative, and made every effort to thank the donors, who deserve credit for their prompt, unselfish act. But one report had it that these men were donating blood to the Red Cross Blood Bank to save the Carters from paying $25 a pint for it, and this was where the misunderstanding comes in.

There are many medical facilities which do not subscribe to the Red Cross Blood Bank program, and these do demand replacement or purchase of the blood used for a patient. Some of them will even delay non-critical type assistance until they are assured the replacement is forthcoming. But the Red Cross has nothing to do with such cases. It is strictly a hospital's internal policy. Often they will require two pints in return for the first one used in a transfusion, and thereafter one for one, apparently justified by the expense of typing and handling the blood. Anyway, none of this takes credit from the 29th's donors, who earn herewith an editorial pat-on-the-back for their answer to a comrade's call for assistance. They were, in addition to Sgt. Carter, 2nd Lts. James T. Short and James B. Buckbee; Sgts. Raymone R. Horwitz, William Proctor, Morris Caradine and Herbert O. Hardy; Spts Melvin L. Bosze, Charles L. Apel and William V. Hanshaw; Pfcs Daniel C. Bingham and Charles T. Campbell, and Pvt. Wilbur F. Ferrell.

It seems that a chart in the Armed Forces Medicare Office's newly released Fourth Annual Report shows an increase in the number of "active duty military married men" with "two", "three" and "four or more" wives. A slight decrease is shown in the number of married men with only "one wife". The Army Navy Air Force Journal reports under its Memo feature that the Medicare Office says despite Chart 13 of the report, there is no increase in the number of servicemen with more than one wife. A spokesman was reported as being unable to explain the curious statistics. "It's a poor chart," he was reported as saying.

Pfc Manson, 24, hails from Arlington, Iowa, and entered the Merchant Marine when he graduated from high school. He spent five and a half years in the Great Lakes region. His last berth was on a 14,000-ton hulk freighter, where he served as officer in charge of all deck equipment. The Meaning of July 4 Needs to be Restated

Independence Day through the years has come to mean so many different things to so many of us that visitors from abroad can be pardoned for seeing it as no more than what the British call a Bank Holiday — when commercial activities are suspended and people take off to the seashore and other resort spots for a good time.

But we as Americans should never let July 4th totter from its eminence on the calendar of history to become a day of hot dogs and hamburgers and soda pop, of highway carnage and boating mishaps. It is Independence Day, the day on which the Declaration of Independence was adopted — not signed — 185 years ago, marking the birth of a nation.

That document can never become for us a mere paper displayed in Washington — a venerable parchment. America's destiny is embodied in it, and that destiny was born in the ordeal of revolution when brave men laid down their worldly goods and their lives for freedom from a tyrant.

"We dare not forget today that we are the heirs of that first revolution,' said President Kennedy in his Inaugural Address. "Let the word go forth from this time and place, to friend and foe alike, that the torch has been passed to a new generation of Americans — born in this century, tempered by war, disciplined by a hard and bitter peace, proud of our ancient heritage—and unwilling to witness or permit the slow undoing of those human rights to which this nation has always been committed, and to which we are committed today at home and around the world."

The Judge Says . . .

By 1st Lt. Theodore D. Ponfil

Most service personnel are concerned with their family's welfare and the disposition of their property accumulations. This concern continues during their lifetime and reflects itself after death in the provisions made for those who are dependent upon them.

Estate planning is nothing more than a systematic projection of personal assets and present and probable future earning power in the manner most likely to attain the desired result. To best provide for dependents, it is necessary to stretch each dollar to its income producing limits consistent with current needs and the reasonable security of those it is to benefit.

As each person's desires and needs vary markedly, estate plans should be tailored to fit individual requirements and the personality of the beneficiaries. Because of the wide range of problems presented, any detailed plan involving substantial sums should be prepared with the aid of an attorney, an insurance underwriter and an investment counsel.

In providing for the welfare of himself and his dependents, some of the factors to be considered by the serviceman are: final expenses incident to death; required income for survivors; cost of educating children; need for reasonable funds to cover unexpected emergencies; and augmentation of expected retirement income.

A plan to accomplish the above should not create intricate tax problems nor control the property longer than necessary as few are able to foresee all future requirements.

Service personnel are reminded that their plans are not complete unless they have considered their accumulations of real estate, insurance, savings and other investments arrears in pay; amount of death gratuity and who may receive it; burial or burial allowances provided for persons dying on active duty or in a retired status; dependency and indemnity compensation to survivors; social security benefits — including retirement, survivor and death benefits; personnel, their dependents and survivors; and war orphans education assistance program.

Careful consideration also should be given to laws of the state of permanent residence and the plan should be thoroughly reconsidered at any time the permanent residence is moved to another state. This is particularly true as to each state's law respecting property which is exempt an estate.

Marital difficulties, death, disabling mental or physical disease, substantial changes in income or property and the tax advantages which might results from carefully planned gifts are further considerations which may require revision of your plan.

The paramount concern is the wishes of the individual and the needs of this expected beneficiaries. A will, in addition to investment and insurance programs, is all that many may require. For further information consult your civilian attorney or an attorney in the Legal Assistance Section, Office of the Staff Judge Advocate.

AF Cadets Welcomed For Four Day Visit

Emphasizing the military success resultant from coordination and cooperation among the armed services, Major Gen. Hugh P. Harris, commandant of The Infantry School, welcomed the Air Force Academy Class of 1964 to the post Wednesday.

The 550-man class will receive four days of training in the principles and application of Infantry tactics and techniques. Escorting them are 40 cadet leaders, 16 from the Class of 1963 and 24 from the Class of 1962.

"We are pleased that Fort Benning again represents the Army in this phase of your orientation," Gen. Harris told the visitors in the Main Theater.

"You will see what the Army is doing and how we do our job. You will learn about the Infantry and the Army and how our two services contribute to the success of the armed forces as a whole," he said.

The two-star general explained that the cadets would be engaged in practical work, which forms the basis of training at The Infantry School. "The emphasis will be where it belongs, that is, you do the work," he stated.

"You will be given the opportunity to operate, see demonstrated and fire all the Infantry weapons. You will look at the battlefield mobility we have in our field forces. You will take part in the leadership training we give our young officers," he continued.

"You will see a demonstration of Ranger activities, and I think you will be impressed", Gen. Harris added.

He also noted that the visitors would participate in some Airborne training, view an Infantry-tank team in attack and be briefed on the role of Army aviation.

Gen. Harris stressed his belief that in the next war the basic weapon will be man.

"In the Navy and the Air Force, the function of men is to put machines into action, but in the Army the function of machines is to put men into action," he said.

NCO of the Month

SSgt Lloyd Greer, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 806th Engineer Battalion, 151st Engineer Group, was recently congratulated by Col. S. Y. Coker, group commander, for being selected as group Noncommissioned Officer of the Month for June.

Here Four Days

585 AF Cadets Depart Sunday

Nearly 585 cadets from the Air Force Academy, Colorado Springs, Colo., are on post for a first hand look at the modern Infantry in action.

The group includes the 544-man Class of 1964 and 39 cadet leaders, 23 from the Class of 1962, and 17 from the Class of 1963. Twleve staff officers from the Academy, headed by Major Earle H. Ambrose, accompany the cadets.

They were welcomed at Lawson Field Tuesday by Brig. Gen. John E. Kelly, deputy commanding general of The Infantry Center.

Their four day training tour began with a welcoming address by Major Gen. Hugh P. Harris, commandant of The Infantry School and commanding general of The Infantry Center, last Wednesday.

Fire Weapons

Divided into seven squads, the cadets received instruction concurrently in the M-14 rifle, Browning automatic rifle, M-60 machine gun and 106-mm rifle familiarization firing; Airborne training in parachute landing falls, the swing landing tower and 34-foot mock tower; leaders reaction testing at Dixie Village, and capabilities and limitations of mobility means.

The Infantry School's Weapons, Airborne-Air Mobility, Special Subjects, and Ground Mobility Departments directed the Air Force group's training.

Demonstrations

The cadets also viewed presentations on the concept of leadership, weapons of the Infantry and Rngers in action, Infantry tank team in action reinforced with artillery and the role of Army aviation.

Gen. Harris will make the closing address to the class at 5:30 p.m. today in the Main Theater.

Formal Parade

The cadets will stage a formal parade on Sightseeing Field tomorrow at 8 a.m. The event will be open to the public.

Highlighting social activities during their stay was a hop Wednesday night in the Main Officers' Open Mess. Gen. Harris hosted the affair.

The cadets will leave the post at 7:30 a.m. Sunday.

Capt. George R. Henderson, Jr., and Capt. Fred Lindsay, both assigned to The Infantry Center G-3 Section, are projects officers for the cadets' visit.

OC FAME . . . Lt. Col. John T. Joseph, project officer for Airborne and Army aviation material in The Infantry School's Combat Developments Office, was newly elected to the post Officer Candidate Hall of Fame. Col. Joseph was graduated from OCS in July, 1942.

Post's Goal Is Accident Free July 4

Major commands at Fort Benning have joined in an extensive campaign to maintain the excellent non-fatality and low injury rate among post personnel over the July 4 holiday, it was reported this week by The Infantry Center Safety Office.

During the July 4, 1960 holiday, only two accidents caused minor injuries to two people.

Joining the command-level campaign, the Highway Safety Program featuring Duane Carter, one of the Indianapolis "500" race drivers, is also urging safe driving habits while enjoying the holiday.

The Youth Activities Club's annual carnival, which is expected to be one of the most successful in the history of the club, is another program designed to keep post personnel on the installation and off the nation's highways.

Major Unit commanders are planning special orientations, alerting personnel of the dangers of speeding, reckless driving and drinking while behind the wheel of a vehicle.

All available police, state and local, will be actively engaged in patroling all roads, highways and inland lake areas with their main attention directed toward the speeder and the drinking driver, since these two types of violators are responsible for most of the holiday accidents and nearly all fatalities.

Personnel departing on leave or pass around the holiday will receive a special lecture from commanders urging safe driving habits and common sense while in control of a vehicle.

Over-all, post safety officials hope to make July 4, 1961 the accident-free year. Each year a few minor accidents mar the holiday picture, but this year, "the chips are down."

Cancer Is Still No. Two Killer

By Maj. Robert H. Quinn, MC

No age is free from cancer, and certain forms of it, notably leukemia, are most often found in young children. Cancer takes the lives of children as well as adults and the same vigilance should be exercised.

Heart disease remains the number one cause of death today, however, cancer is the number two killer.

Population increases, the growing number of older people, improved diagnosis, better reporting of deaths, and other factors contribute to the growing cancer statistics. Alarming as they may appear, cancer is curable if detected and treated in its early stages.

For years the American Cancer Society reported that one in every four who had cancer was being saved. Today, one in every three are being saved. Where there's life, there's hope!

A physician dedicates his life to saving of lives, but he can do just so much. If suspected victims will learn the warning signs of cancer, physicians can save thousands of more lives.

If you value living, help your doctor by helping yourself first. Learn the following seven danger signals. They may some day save your life if detected and treated in their early stages.

1. Any sore that does not heal.
2. A lump or thickening, in the breast or elsewhere.
3. Unusual bleeding or discharge.
4. Any change in a wart or mole.
5. Persistent indigestion or difficulty in swallowing.
6. Persistent hoarseness or cough.
7. Any change in normal bowel habits.

There are only three proven ways to cure cancer: Surgery, X-ray and radium. These three tried and proven methods are used singularly or in combinations.

A quack "cure" won't affect the cancer but they may injure, cripple, kill or prevent detection and treatment by a reputable physician until it becomes too late. Time is of the essence.

A thorough physical examination by your medical doctor will reveal most forms of cancer in the early stages. You should get a complete physical at least once a year.

It is probably false and premature to think that you have cancer, but be smart and make certain that you don't. A slogan to remember — EARLY DISCOVERY — QUICK RECOVERY.

Pay Day Donations Expected

A boost toward Fort Benning's goal of $33,361 for the Army Emergency Relief and the Army Relief Society is expected following the June 31 military payday, according to the post's AER custodian.

First Lt. Wallace E. Viau, custodian and assistant chairman of the annual fund campaign for the agencies, said more than $6,000 in donations from soldiers has so far been reported to the Personal Affairs Branch of The Infantry Center's Adjutant General Section.

The 1961 goal was established on the basis of 15 per cent of loans and grants extended to military personnel and dependents during the calendar year 1960.

Between $14,000 and $15,000 a month in aid is extended to emergency cases at the post, according to Lt. Viau.

Col. Milton G. Schneider, adjutant general of The Infantry Center, is the post's 1961 campaign chairman.

Chairmen in all activities are conducting the drive, which ends July 31.

A WAC Challenging Army's Top Shooters? Unheard Of

By MSgt. Charles A. Quinn

High winds, heavy mirages, faulty weapons or ammunition, erratic shooters and all the other woes of the Army rifle coach not being enough, the task is complicated by another—the advent of woman into inner circles of Army marksmanship.

For the first time in the history of the Army's Advanced Marksmanship Unit, "E've" has challenged "Adam's" right to supremacy in one of the few exclusively male fields of Army endeavor.

"Eve" is this case, is WAC Sp4 Barbara J. Hile, who shot her way up through the Army's 1960-1961 competitive levels until she received recognition from Army shooting's high command.

Her scores fired in recently concluded Army championships were more than sufficient to earn her the right to try for the Army's "big" teams to shoot in the National Matches this summer.

Although a member of the Sixth Army team, Barbara was invited to shoot on an AAMU team in an unofficial capacity in one match of the championships. She outshot her male partner by six "V's."

"It was my rifle, Sarge, it-uh-it must have changed zero," he muttered to coach Sfc Bill Griffin after the match.

Getting the utmost skill from a top team of riflemen is more than nerve-racking and having a woman around the ranges can be still more nerve-racking.

Riflemen of the AAMU are split into two groups. The pro-Barbara's are those elite marksmen who have nothing to fear. She is turning to them for advice which may well bring her the U.S. Women's Rifle Championship title.

The con-Barbara's are those who are weighed down with the fear of getting shot off the team — and by a woman no less.

"Pretty pass," growled one, "it's now rifles and lipsticks, yet."

"Yah," commiserated a second, "I'll bet she'll miss her relays' cause she's got to go to the beauty parlor."

"Ha," sneered a third, "look at those traitors giving her the straight dope," pointing to where Barbara was surrounded by bobbing campaign hats.

Behind it all grins the rifle OIC, Major Raynold Dobak, upon whose invitation Barbara fired on the team. His grin indicates that psychology can play a powerful role in production of winning scores.

As for Barbara, she's busy absorbing the instruction of her pro-Barbara's but she did have time for one remark.

"Don't let them fool you, girls," she cooed, "face powder and gun powder do mix"

Barbara is certainly proving her point.

Jenni Johnson on Etiquette

DEAR JENNI: The male of Fort Benning can wear walking shorts everywhere, I assume because they are part of a regulation uniform. It doesn't seem fair that we women cannot.

—MISS SUFFERAGE

DEAR MISS SUFFERAGE: It is true that the male can wear walking shorts in most public areas. However if you have ever noticed the legs of most of these gentlemen you will know why they wear them . . . the shorts are FUNCTIONAL.

So you wear shorts to be cool and comfortable too. Ah, but the feminine figure in pretty shorts (not a drab color) and smooth legs, perhaps with polished nails showing thru sandals, creates quite a different picture from that of the male. There is no questions about it, milady, you are either TOO ATTRACTIVE in shorts or they are so UNFLATTERING that you wouldn't want to be seen in them outside your own backyard anyway.

Due to some embarassing confusion over just where sport clothes can be worn, the following is curent post regulation:

1. Outer civilian clothing for female personnel when appearing in public places on the reservation will consist of a skirt and blouse or dress. Public places are considered as, but not limited to, following: Main Post Exchange and its shopping complex, other Post Exchanges, Main Commissary, Martin Army Hospital, Service Clubs, Post Exchange snack bars, Post Exchange Cafeteria, theaters, libraries, offices of the installation, banks, Main Officers' Open Mess and the Noncommissioned Officers' Open Mess and their annexes (exclusive of the country club and golf course), problem demonstrations or athletic competition as observers, or any other public place at which troops and dependents may both attend. (note exception listed in paragraph 4 below)

2. Apparel to be worn by male and female personnel while participation in athletic or recreational activities will be appropriate for the occasion and conform to accepted standards of propriety. As an example, male or female personnel are permitted to wear bermuda shorts in bowling alleys and on golf courses of the installation. (I would like to note here that if you have an errand that takes you to one of the areas listed in section 1, be sure to slip on a skirt or coat over those shorts or slacks.)

3. Male personnel are permitted to wear those items of outer civilian clothing to public activities on the reservation as are indicated in paragraph 6 of USAIC Circular 670-7 and USAIC Circular 670-8.

In addition to the above bermuda shorts with sport shirt with or without coat and tie are authorized for wear in the following activities by male personnel: the commissary, Post Exchange, libraries, sport events as spectators, banks, offices of the installation, golf courses, bowling alleys, hospitals, swimming pool areas and cafeteria of the Main Officers' Open Mess.

4. Since troops do not frequent the Custer Terace shopping complex, female personnel are permitted to wear BERMUDA SHORTS with BLOUSE in the activities of this complex. (halters and brief shorts are not permitted)

5. Persons not attired in conformance with the above policy will be refused service by the activities concerned and requested to leave the premises.

Dinner to Fete ROTC Cadets of U. of Ga. Here

Cadets from the University of Georgia attending ROTC Summer Camp here will be feted at a dinner dance in the Custer Terrace Branch of the Main Officers' Open Mess July 6.

The university and its alumni in the area will host the event, which will begin at 6:30 p.m.

Graduates and former cadets of the university are invited to attend. Reservations may be made with Major Donald Rivette at 5-6224 or Lt. David Cleghorn LJ 5-3301.

Infantry Board Ladies Begin Summer Coffees

Summer informality set the pace for the Infantry Board ladies morning get-together at a coffee on June 20.

In the Normandy Room of the Main Officers Open Mess, the serving table was attractively centered with an arrangement of sweetpeas and gardenias. Floating gardenias and arrangements of summer flowers throughout the room complimented the summer decor.

As further evidence that summer had arrived on the scene, summer vacations, children's out-of-school activities, friends leaving for new assignments and unusual weather dominated the conversations.

Welcomes and bellos were said by the group to Mrs. Fred K. Mahaffey and Mrs. Jose Chacon, newcomers. Hellos were also said to a guest, Mrs. Roy Duggan Sr. who has been visiting her son, Major Roy Duggan and family.

Hostesses for the morning coffee included Mesdames Gordon Gunton, William Bricker and Gilbert Procter Jr.

The second of the series of summer coffees for the Infantry Board ladies will be hostessed by Mrs. John Tominac and will be held on July 18.

Says Donna Reed

Avoid These Gardening Errors

Making your garden bloom more luxuriantly may be just a matter of nipping small problems in the bud, according to Donna Reed.

Miss Reed, star of her own Thursday night TV show, is also an expert gardener. She suggests that happy gardening depends on the avoidance of these ten major gardening errors.

Inadequate planning. There are three things to keep in mind — the color your blooms will be, the height to which they'll grow, and the eventual width of the plants. Most flowers show up best when you mass whites, reds, purples or other shades, rather than mixing them.

Don't set plants too close together or you'll get crowded blooms that are inhibited in growth and can't be seen to best advantage. Learn in advance how tall each species will grow, then arrange your plants accordingly. That way, you won't have lovely low blooms hidden behind a high-growing border.

Soil Neglect. When you have spaded up your yard and removed all the underground trash, you should have it tested for acidity. Soil-testing kits can be purchased at any good seed store or ordered from the large mail-order houses.

If you do not want to buy a kit, write to an agricultural college for information on where to send a soil sample for testing. If the test shows the presence of acidity, you should add limestone to the soil to neutralize acid.

Wasted Seed Potential. Probably the most frequent gardening error with seeds is to plant them too deeply. Don't "bury" seeds; simply press them into the soil so that they'll come in contact with moisture.

Stinting on Mulch. A mulch is simply a covering of organic material such as peat moss or leaves, placed around a plant to a depth of about two inches. Mulching helps keep the soil from drying out and checks weed growth. You should wait until your plants are one-third or one-half grown before applying mulch.

Donna Reed

Watered - Down Watering. Lightly sprinkling the surface of the soil is almost worse than nothing, because it drives the thirsty roots to seek water at the surface, where they can be injured when you rake or hoe. What is needed is a thorough soaking once or twice a week with a watering can or sprinkler hose.

Weed Worry. If you can't conveniently pull out the weeds with your hands, then use a spud—an inexpensive tool that cuts roots below the surface so that the weed can be removed without displacing the soil. If your garden is large or the weeds numerous, you'll save yourself a lot of time and effort by using a commercial weed killer.

Bad Timing on Transplanting. Transplanting simply means digging up a young plant and putting it some place else. When young plants crowd one another, they either have to be thinned out, or transplanted. If you can, transplant on a cloudy day or late in the afternoon, lest the sun cause the plants to wilt.

Careless Pruning. The beginner is often either afraid to attempt pruning, or goes at it like Daniel Boone blazing a trail through Injun country. There's nothing complicated about pruning. It stimulates growth in rose bushes and other shrubs by removing dead and diseased growth.

The pruning shears should be sharp, and held so that the thin, or cutting, blade is held toward the part of the stem you wish to retain.

The cut should be made not more than one-quarter inch above a bud, and as much strong healthy portion of the stem as possible should be saved. Avoid the unkindest cut of all, which is chopping the shrub to within a foot or so of the ground. Instead, cut about one third of the weakest and oldest canes right down to the soil.

"Blooming" Ignorance. Some gardeners cling to misconceptions about gardening — the notion, for example, that marigolds should be meager and evil-smelling. Actually, you can grow gorgeous odorless marigolds with a six-inch bloom spread, like those that Donna Reed has in her garden.

You can also cultivate medium-sized marigold blooms that have the brilliance of a golden chrysanthemum. Learn the different strains of flower that are available — one of the newest is named after Donna Reed herself — and you'll add to your gardening pleasure.

Roses—Too Little or Too Much. When it comes to roses, some gardeners are like jittery parents — they either spoil the child with love, or starve him for affection. In planting a rose bush, extra-wide digging of the hole is important, so that you won't cramp the roots and inhibit fast, easy growth at the very start. On the other hand, when pruning roses it's always better to cut off too little rather than too much.

There you have ten tips from an American Beauty, Donna Reed, for more successful gardening. Practice them and chances are you'll rate raves from the back-fence critics in your neighborhood as a star among gardeners.

Caribou Troop Tests Evaluation Under Way

The troop test of the Army's Caribou aircraft moved into its final stage as the Troop Test Headquarters here evaluates the results of the recent field tests.

The Evaluation Section of the Test Headquarters is responsible for reviewing the data collected during the test. When completed, the recommendations will be submitted to Headquarters, Continental Army Command.

Chief evaluator is Lt. Col. E. W. Smith.

Major Gen. Hugh P. Harris, commanding general of The Infantry Center, is the test director. Deputy director is Col. Willard E. Harrison, director of the Airborne-Air Mobility Department of The Infantry School.

Test executive and operations officer is Lt. Col. Edward M. Harrell. Major Paul H. Schultz is chief of the administrative section of Test Headquarters. Chief controller is Lt. Col. O. G. Garrett.

The troop test was conducted by direction of Headquarters, Continental Army Command. The objective was to test Army organization, equipment, missions, doctrine, procedures and techniques using the Caribou to provide limited airlift mobility for small units of the field Army in the combat zone.

The troop test assisted in determining the suitability and feasibility of using the Caribou for airmobile operations to include paradrops of personnel and equipment.

The test unit, the 1st Aviation Company, Lawson Army Aviation Command, began training and preparing for the troop test in October, 1960. The men of the unit underwent a 12 week training program, two week long field exercises and an Army Training Test in April in preparation for the important role. Major Charles M. Honour, Jr. commands the company.

Fifty-One enlisted men and two officers of the 124th Transportation Company (Terminal Service) from Fort Eustis, Va., commanded by Capt. William Raymond, arrived at Benning February 7 to support the test. They were responsible for the preparation and loading of the cargo throughout the test.

A 20-man detachment of the 612th Quartermaster Company (Aerial Supply) and Company D, 1st Airborne Battle Group, 18th Infantry, 82nd Airborne Division, both from Fort Bragg, supported portions of the test.

The field testing which began in mid-April consisted of 46 realistic exercises simulating combat conditions.

In the first part of the two-phase field tests the Army's largest aircraft flew missions simulating support of an Army corps, and in the second, simulating use in an Army service area.

During the test the pilots of the 1st Aviation Company flew the aircraft the actual number of hours indicated in the exercises.

Throughout the test the aircraft were maintained in the field by the mechanics of the LAAC unit.

The aircraft both air-landed and parachute dropped supplies and equipment and personnel during the test.

The Caribou carries 32 combat equipped soldiers or 24 fully equipped paratroopers. The rear-loading craft will hold two quarter-ton trucks in its cargo space and carry up to three tons of cargo.

The twin engine aircraft is designed for short take-off's and landings which allows operation from short unimproved landing strips in a combat zone.

According to test officials the tests, "ran smoothly, having closely followed the feasability tests," and they are, "satisfied with the results."

Tests Are Made to Find a Way To Up Fuel Capacity in APCs

By Ida C. Evans

Testing a proposed change to a military vehicle involves more than that which meets the eye, according to officials of the Ground Mobility Department of The Infantry School.

Asked recently to test several proposed methods of increasing the gasoline tank capacity of the M-113 armored personnel carrier by 40 gallons, the department made wooden mock-ups of each suggested tank extension.

Any one of the proposals would be adequate if the only point to consider were more gasoline for the carrier.

More fuel means increased cruising range.

Purpose of the M-113 is to get fully equipped combat ready men to their destination.

The real test became a matter of loading and maneuvering the vehicle, equipped with each mock-up in turn.

Safety First

As a safety check on the test vehicle, it was first loaded with 5,000 pounds of sand in ammunition boxes and run through the course, a four-mile cruise over land and water.

Convinced that the test vehicle could meet the demands about to be put upon it, the evaluation team began the tests.

A rifle squad of 11 men, one man from platoon headquarters and a driver were selected for the tests. The men and their equipment were weighed. This was the test load used to evaluate the M-113's performance with each proposed fuel tank extension.

Battle Ready

Each man in the squad was combat equipped. He carried the new M-14 rifle, a basic load of ammunition and two fragmentation grenades.

The man from headquarters carried a radio.

The test also included a basic load of .50 caliber ammunition for the machine gun mounted on the vehicle, an extra box of hand grenades, an extra basic load of ammunition for the rifles, two days supply of rations and water, bedrolls and life jackets.

A 310-pound box of sand was added to represent the weight of an extended tank and the 40 additional gallons of fuel it would hold.

Loading the M-113 was not just a matter of getting all the gear and men aboard. It had to be loaded in such a manner to maintain proper balance for maneuvers both on land and in water.

With the mock-up extension tank in one location, for instance, the amphibious vehicle was right side heavy. In a cruise across Victory Pond, it went in circles to the right.

After testing the carier with the mock-up in each of the suggested locations, the rifle squad was changed to a weapons squad with appropriate equipment and the entire test was repeated.

300 Mile Range

The evaluation grew out of a need to increase the cruising range of the APC to coincide with that of the M-60 tank.

The M-113 now carries 80 gallons of gasoline, permitting a 200-mile cruising range. The addition of 40 gallons of fuel would increase the cruising range to 300 miles.

Troops participating in the test were from the First Battle Group, 29th Infantry.

Project officer for the test was Capt. Ernest F. Condina, officer-in-charge of the Vehicle Capabilities Subcommittee of the Ground Mobility Department's Operations and Control Committee.

Col. Paul T. Clifford is director of the department.

Army Aircraft Modernization to Result in Savings

The Army has announced significant progress in a program to provide its front-line troops with better combat aircraft and at the same time achieve widespread reductions in costs.

Under the 10-year modernization effort programmed through 1970, six helicopter and fixed-wing models will replace nine aircraft now in use. Involved are light observation, surveillance and combat area transport aircraft. The goal is to provide maximum air mobility to the fighting man with reliable aircraft requiring a minimum of maintenance.

The program had its origin in a study by the Army Aircraft Requirements Review Board designed to cover the Army's 10-year needs. A conference with representatives of the aircraft industry was held in December, 1959, and since that time the effort has been a military - industry team affair with the Navy, Air Force and National Aeronautics and Space Agency cooperating to assure that the Army has the benefit of the best available military - civilian counsel.

Major savings will be made through nearly complete conversion to turbine from piston engines and standardization of facts. The more efficient turbines will require less maintenance, which in turn means a reduction in time and expense involved in training large numbers of mechanics. Fewer models mean also fewer spare parts — bringing a saving in storage, transportation and manufacture.

The nine aircraft models being phased out required many different grades of fuel. Soon, only two or three grades of fuel will be required, cutting initial investment and reducing the burden of transportation and storage. Additionally, all of the craft at the Infantry division level will use the same grade of kerosene, simplifying logistics in the frontline area where it is most important.

The Army has about 5,500 aircraft at present. Under the program, which considers foreseeable requirements and budgetary limitations, it is anticipated that there will be about 8,000 helicopters, fixed-wing and vertical takeoff and landing craft by 1970.

The important factor, aside from the increased number, is that these aircraft will be specifically designed for the observation, surveillance, target acquisition or transportation mission they are assigned.

The aircraft they replace were produced hurriedly under World War II or Korean War pressures in a changing military situation. This contributed to a somewhat makeshift air fleet that required unreasonable amounts of maintenance and lacked the desired high degree of reliability.

Army Vehicle Is Being Offered By Canada Firm

NEW YORK (AFPS) — Canada has offered to develop a compact, lightweight, tracked vehicle to be used by the Army, under the terms of the Army - Canadian Development Sharing Program.

Acceptance of the offer was announced by Lt. Gen. Arthur G. Trudeau, Army Chief of Research and Development, after an analysis of comparative development and production costs was made.

Called the High Mobility Carrier, the gasoline powered unarmored vehicle is expected to be highly maneuverable and operate under extreme climatic conditions, over rough terrain or inland waterways.

Designed for airlifting, the vehicle will also have a trailer of equal payload. It is to be light enough to be carried by a helicopter with trailer attached.

HOISTS ON IMPROVISED FRAMEWORK AND RAFTS
Raise Tactical Aluminum Raft and Mounted Compressor

Equipment Reclaimed From Chattahoochee

A raft which normally transports troops and equipment across rivers and streams was recently put to use by the 586th Engineering Company in recovering a truck-mounted air compressor and light tactical raft from the Chattahoochee River.

The raft was especially modified and designed to pull the equipment weighing more than nine tons, from the water after it sank during exercises conducted by the 586th, a floating bridge company of the 151st Engineer Group.

After volunteer divers from the Fort Benning Scuba Club located the sunken aluminum raft and compressor in about 10 feet of water 180 feet from the Alabama shore, a plan for recovery was advanced by the 586th commander, Capt. Richard T. Robertson.

Directed by Capt. Robertson, company personnel set to work building a modified raft of pneumatic pontoons, or rubber floats, supporting a wooden structure resembling the framework of a house. The frame with hoisting chains was centered over an opening in the raft large enough to "straddle" the length and width of the sunken equipment.

The strange-looking craft was floated to the exact spot above the submerged compressor and raft and slowly the nine-ton load was lifted from the water and transported to shore.

The light tactical raft was disassembled under water before it was recovered to land. The aluminum pontoons, filled with sand from the river bed, weighing about 10 tons each, were then lifted and emptied by sluicing out the sand with a large water pump and floated to shore.

Within 48 hours from the time construction began on the modified raft, the air compressor, truck and light tactical raft were recovered with only minor damages.

Artillery USAR Unit Arrives July 2

The 3rd Howitzer Battalion, 83rd Artillery, a reserve unit of 364 members, from Laurel, Miss., will arrive at Fort Benning for it's annual active duty training on July 2. The advance party will be here on June 30.

The training period for the 3rd Howitzer Battalion will be from July 2 through July 16. The unit will be located in the Harmony Church area during its stay. The 1st Infantry Brigade and the Reserve Component Section of The Infantry Center will support the battalion while here.

The type of training the battalion will be occupied with, for the most part, will be field training. In addition, administration and housekeeping activities will be stressed and maintained at high standards.

The field training will include problems in reconnaissance, selection and occupation of positions, actual firing, night marches, surveys and communications.

The modern concept of One Army, which is the complete cooperation and coordination of the Regular Army, the Army Reserves and the National Guard is exemplified here in the team work of the reserves training with the Regular Army during the annual active duty training of the Reserve components.

Ending an Illustrious Army Career That Began With His Graduation in 1931 From the U. S. Military Academy, Brigadier General William Leonard Hardick Announces His Retirement. General Hardick Commanded 17th Inf in Korea

(Last of a Series)

By Clay Lacy

Colonel William L. Hardick has passed another milestone in 1951 when he completed 20 years of active duty with the United States Army. It had been a full career if he had stopped then, but another decade lay before him.

The Korean Conflict had been raging for a year and the West Point officer felt again the urge he had experienced in Washington, D.C. during World War II. The urge to contribute on-the-spot.

But the Army War College at Carlisle Barracks in Penn. came first, followed by a one-month refresher course at The Infantry School at Fort Benning, Ga. In Oct., 1952, his opportunity arrived in the form of orders assigning him to Korea to head the 17th Infantry Regiment.

Augusta and Jeanne were established at Carlisle, Penn., by this time, having gone there when the Colonel was attending the War College. Jeanne was attending school at Dickinson Hill College as a freshman and later transferred to Dickenson College.

When Col. Hardick arrived in Korea to take charge of the "Buffaloes", as the 17th was known, a twist of fate which would take almost ten years to be completed awaited him. The change of command ceremonies saw Colonel Hardick assume command from Colonel Royal Reynolds, a 1935 graduate of the Military Academy.

Almost ten years later, in 1961, the Department of the Army was to announce that the new incoming assistant division commander for the 2nd Infantry Division, who would fill the slot formerly held by Brig. Gen. Hardick would be none other than Brig. Gen. Royal Reynolds.

Colonel Hardick assumed the control of the fighting 17th Infantry Regiment and then led his unit through some of the roughest fighting of the Korean Conflict. The names of such famed battlesites as Pork Chop Hill, Old Baldy, Arsenal and Fishhook meant a stirring saga in military annals for the 17th.

Problems

Problems facing the unit leaders in the Korean Conflict were challenges which taxed the best of commanders. Most significant was the rapid turnover of personnel due to the fact that a soldier could accumulate enough points for rotation with nine months front-line service.

Tactically, Col. Hardick's unit learned the lessons which all U. S. troops faced in Korea — how to operate and fight at night. Small unit engagements with defensive action against a numerically superior enemy marked the 17th's stand at this point of the Conflict.

In May of the following year, Colonel Hardick was selected as the advisor of the newly-formed III Republic of Korea Corps which would operate under X U. S. Corps. The X Corps was later commanded by an old friend of Col. Hardick, Lt. Gen. General Reuben Jenkins, now retired in Columbus.

One month after activation, the III ROK Corps took its place in the defense line in the vicinity of Heartbreak Ridge. Col. Hardick continued in his advisory role until Nov. of '53, three months after the truce and armistice had been signed at Panmunjon.

Back Home

His new assignment brought Col. Hardick back to the United States to the Army Field Forces at Fort Monroe, Va. Later, the Army Field Forces would change designation to become Continental Army Command. The Hardick family was reunited at Fort Monroe and Col. Hardwick went to work with the Combat Development Section. Here he planned programs for future war games, studied possible future organizations and concepts and worked on part of the program which tested the pentomic change in the U. S. Army.

In May of 1954, Col. and Mrs. Hardick reached another milestone in their lives when their daughter Jeanne married. Jeanne was married in a colorful wedding held at Fort Monroe to Robert J. Wise whom she had met while attending Dickinson College.

Another surprise awaited Col. Hardick which came to fruition in April of 1955. Standing with pride in the office of General Montague, the Deputy Commander of the Army Field Forces, Colonel Hardwick had the star of Brigadier General pinned on by his wife, Augusta. Said General Hardick, "I had often heard the expression of being on Cloud Nine but at that moment I knew for the first time what Cloud Nine felt like."

With his promotion to general officer status came a new assignment, this time to Europe as Chief of the Military Assistance Advisory Group in Belgium and Luxembourg. General and Mrs. Hardick arrived in Europe remembering the many friends and historic spots they had seen on their last tour to Europe in the early 30s.

Brussels

Operating from his headquarters in Brussels, General Hardick supervised and planned the military assistance program for the two countries in his charge. The job called for many trips and visits to installations throughout Belgium and Luxembourg.

The position afforded the Hardicks the opportunity to not only renew many old acquaintances but also the privilege of meeting royalty from the two countries. At receptions they met the King of Belgium and later the Grand Duchess of Luxembourg.

The two-year tour sped to its finish quickly for the Hardicks and in July of 1957, they came back to the States to search on current and future military problems. Part of their decision to settle in the nation's capital is due to the nearness to their daughter, Joanne, and three grandchildren, Laurie, Catherine and Robert Jr.

Serving as division commander since January of this year, General Hardick earned the respect of all ranks of the division from battle group commanders down to enlisted men in the ranks.

Thoughts

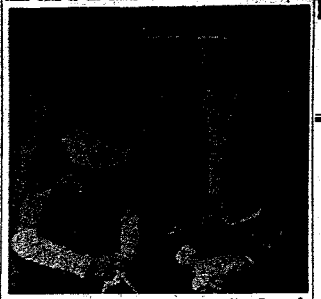
It has been three decades of service for General Hardick. I asked him what thoughts came to his mind at the completion of over 30 years' service.

He stroked his chin, frowned in thought, and with his face lifting in a grin that completely changed his otherwise sober expression, said, "If I had it to do over again, I wouldn't change a thing. It's been an experience that I wouldn't trade and one that I've thoroughly enjoyed."

In answer to my query as to his own philosophy through the years of service, he said simply, "My philosophy is to try to leave every place a better place."

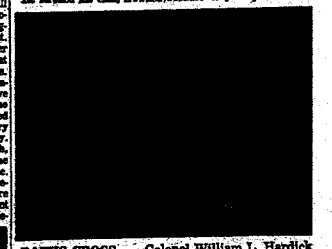
From the more than 10,000 members of the Indianhead Division could well come the response, "General Hardick, we hate to see you leave for, surely, the 2nd is the better because of your presence."

Washington, D.C. General Hardick's new job took him to the Office of the Secretary of Defense and there he put to use his more than 2 years' experience.



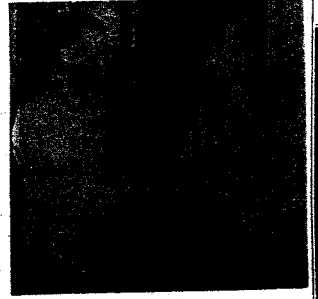
His specific job in Washington called for programming of military assistance on a world-wide basis. Here, General Hardick polished to a fine point the art of communication with men of many lands. To adequately program assistance to the various countries being helped by the U. S., he had to understand the basic problems of each country.

Command



For two years General Hardick worked on military assistance projects which are still in effect today. Then in October of 1959, he received a long-awaited command assignment. Assistant division commander of the 2nd Infantry Division at Fort Benning, read the orders.

Since his arrival at Fort Benning the affable Hardicks have gained the affection of all who have met them and worked with them both in the military and in the civilian community. In the latter part of last month, General Hardick announced he would retire at the end of June.



He and Mrs. Hardick will reside in Washington, D.C., where he has accepted employment with a civilian firm doing research.

READY FOR ROYALTY . . . Brigadier General and Mrs. Hardick pose for a photographer prior to attending a reception given by the Grand Duchess of Luxembourg while General Hardick was assigned as the Chief of the Military Assistance Advisory Group in Belgium and Luxembourg.

Almost ten years later the two would trade places when General Reynolds was named to replace General Hardick as assistant division commander of the 2nd Division.

General, Mrs. Hardick Honored At Spectacular Division Review

LEADS "MEN" in Col. Todd

Gen. Hardick 'Troops the Line' . . .

Military, Civilian Friends Join To Say 'Farewell' to Retiring CG

BY DON BAIRD

The 2nd Infantry Division Saturday bade farewell to its commanding general—52-year old Brigadier General William Leonard Hardick, retiring after more than 30 years' service.

But the general, in speaking to the more than 2,000 citizens and soldiers, remarked he'd prefer to skirt the "good-bye" because "I will be at home wherever soldiers are."

In ceremonies at Wetherby Field, General Hardick heard an 11-gun salute, "trooped the line" for the last time and watched the division pass in review. The ceremony was capped by a fly-by of helicopters and aircraft, the latter spelling a giant "H" in the slightly-overcast sky.

A high point in the ceremonies came when Major General Hugh P. Harris, Fort Benning commander, presented Third Army Commander Lieutenant General Paul D. Adams in awarding General Hardick the third oak leaf cluster to the Legion of Merit.

In speaking to the gathering, General Hardick said that during his 30 years as a soldier he has seen the role of our country change from a "case of isolationism in the 20s and 30s to that of a major world power with the awesome responsibility of guarding the peace through many, many parts of the world.

"Naturally, the role of the Army during this period has had to change. Our uniforms have changed several times. Our means of locomotion has changed from four - legged beasts to ever-more sophisticated types of vehicles and aircraft. The rifle has changed three times."

"But whether the Army is dressed in gunnysacks or Palm Beach suits . . . whether each soldier is equipped with a sling shot or a miniature atomic can-

Col. W. B. Todd Heads 'New' 1st

Served at USAIS as Deputy Director Of Instruction Before Div Assignment

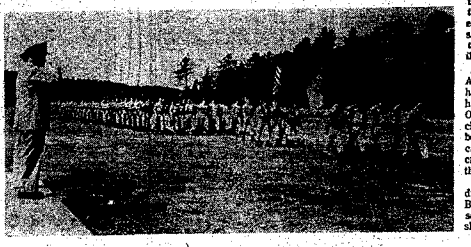
Lieutenant Colonel Walter B. Todd has assumed command of the "new" 2nd Battle Group, 1st Infantry.

Soon to be promoted to colonel, the new commander comes to the 2nd Division from the U.S. Army Infantry School, where he served successively as Advance Course Director and as Deputy Director of Instruction.

S.C. Native

A native of Clinton, South Carolina, Colonel Todd brings to his new assignment an unusually wide and varied background of command and staff assignments which began with his entry on active duty in July 1940 under the highly selective provisions of the Thomason Act.

Reporting into the 8th Infantry Regiment of the 4th Infantry Division, the following five and-a-half-years saw him serve in eight of its companies and hold the positions of platoon leader, company commander, battalion and regimental staff officer, battalion commander and regimental executive officer.



Colonel Todd's memory of the 8th Infantry includes the facts that it was the first to invade the beaches of Normandy; was with the liberation forces at Cherbourg; spearheaded the Saint Lo breakthrough; was a part of the first American troops in Paris; was one of the first American units through the Seigfried Line; fought in the Hurtgen Forest; held the southern shoulder of the "Bulge" in Luxemburg during the German counter-offensive; and it participated in the drive across the Rhine and the pursuit into Germany to the Bavarian redoubt area.

Of all these events, one he most clearly remembers is landing in the initial waves as the 8th Infantry assaulted Utah Beach, Normandy, with (then) Colonel James A. Ven Fleet, commanding.

After World War II, Colonel

After commanding the 9th Infantry for two years, Colonel James L. Osgard departed the battle group and Fort Benning after turning over his command to Colonel Clifford P. Hannum in charge - of - command ceremonies yesterday at Wetherby Field.

Colonel Osgard and his family bade Fort Benning farewell immediately following the changeover in commanders. The colonel spent three years with the Infantry School before assuming command of the 9th Infantry in July 1959. Colonel Osgard is now enroute to Carlisle Barracks, Pennsylvania, where he will attend the Army War College's 10-month course.

Ends Course

The new commander of the battle group, Colonel Hannum, just completed the course at the Army War College. He arrived at Fort Benning last week and attended a four-day Senior Officers Refresher Course at the Infantry School.

Division, Post and Columbus 'Hams' Join Forces in World-Wide Radio Relay Test

BY PETER TATISTCHEFF

Members of the Columbus Amateur Radio Club and the Fort Benning Amateur Electronics Club joined forces Saturday and Sunday in a world-wide radio exercise.

The exercise, which was to include radio amateurs throughout the world, tested operators to see what could be done on amateur frequencies.

The exercise was operated on a contest basis and consisted of signal reports which were relayed from sector to sector all over the world.

The Amateur Radio Relay League, with headquarters in West Hartford, Connecticut, is to judge the contest on the basis of the number of contacts made by each unit.

Sergeant First Class J. L. Ingram, chief operator of the 2nd Infantry Division MARS (Military Affiliate Radio System) station, and his assistant, Sergeant First Class Elmore A. Hatllestad, special project non-commissioned officer, sound section, U. S. Army Infantry School, were responsible for most of the preparation and maintenance of the portable field station set up on Torch Hill Road for this exercise.

Reenlistments

Two 9th Infantry noncommissioned officers have reenlisted for another stint in the Regular Army. Sergeant First Class Thomas Borris, 9th Infantry career counselor, reenlisted himself for three years as Regular Army unassigned. His new post will be with the 1st Infantry Brigade on Main Post as a career counselor.

The other NCO to reup was Sergeant First Class Sam Pelchar of the 9th Infantry's Company D. He signed for four years for Alaska. SFC Pelchar has 16 years in the service and SFC Borris has more than 13 years.

Col. Todd Heads 1st

Todd served in the G-3 Section of Headquarters, First Army, Governor's Island, New York, where he was responsible for staff planning and operations relating to the re-establishment of Army Reserve Units throughout the First Army area.

From April 1948 to June 1951 he served in the Operations Section of GHQ, Far East Command, during the latter stages of the occupation of Japan, including the first year of the Korean War. He was awarded the Legion of Merit for this service and returned to the U.S. in June 1951 to attend the Command and General Staff College at Fort Leavenworth, Kan.

DA Duty

After this tour, Colonel Todd served two-and-a-half years as a Plans Officer in the Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Logistics, Department of the Army General Staff. Then followed a tour from September 1955 to May 1957 as Assistant G-3, Joint United States Military Mission for aid to Turkey, at Ankara, Turkey. After graduation from the Army War College in July 1958, he became executive officer of the 2nd battle group, 14th Infantry, at Fort Benning, Georgia.

After one year he was assigned as Course Director of the Advance Course at the USAIS, where for a year he was responsible for coordination of the curriculum of this year-and year-long course, and was responsible for supervising and evaluating instruction presented during the course.

For the past year he has been Deputy Director of Instruction at the School, and has been responsible for the coordination of all the many activities of that office.

Decorations

Among Colonel Todd's awards and decorations are the Silver Star, Legion of Merit, Bronze Star with two Oak Leaf Clusters, the Combat Infantryman's Badge, the European Theater Medal with five Campaign Stars and one Bronze Arrowhead; the Belgian Fourragere; and the Department of the Army General Staff Identification.

Colonel Todd is married to the former Rosemary Alexander of Laurens, South Carolina. They and their son Walter Jr., 17, and daughter Matilda, 14, live at 105 Rainbow Avenue, Fort Benning, Georgia.

Radio

Columbus and Fort Benning transmitted and received signals at the field station during the 144 transmitting hours of the contest. During this period more than 800 contacts were made.

The Division's 122nd Signal Battalion furnished such facilities as lights and tents for the amateurs who used their own transmitting equipment. According to Sergeant Ingram their field station was as good as or better than any other station set up in the country because of the convenient facilities loaned them by 122nd Signal.

Atmospheric conditions held out throughout the exercise despite a light rain, and the operators, including Specialist Five John Langford, Specialist Four Alex Kellerman, both of 122nd Signal, and Sergeant First Class Frank J. Bagliani, Air Mobility Department, U. S. A. I. S., more than exceeded their estimated goal of 600 to 800 radio contacts.

Col. Huray entered the Army in 1941, and graduated from OCS in 1942. He later saw action as a platoon leader in the Luzon and New Guinea campaigns, where he earned the Silver Star, Bronze Star and Purple Heart decorations.

Following his return to the U. S. he served as a recruiting officer, was shipped to Italy where he was a company commander, then returned to Fort Slocum, New York as a member of the faculty at the Army Information School. He graduated from the Army Language School, where he studied Persian. Subsequently, he was assigned as a military advisor to the military forces of Iran.

the 9th Infantry, he saw the unit change from a mission of instructing Basic Combat Trainees to turning out Advanced Individual Trainees. He also saw the 9th Infantry make a switch from instructing with a battle group committee system to the current practice of instructing on a company level.

A 1941 graduate of the University of North Dakota, Colonel Osgard joined the 30th Infantry Regiment as a second lieutenant after his graduation. He fought with the 30th Infantry of the 3rd Infantry Division throughout the European Theater in World War II.

Silver Leaves

Colonel Osgard rose swiftly in rank, attaining the silver oak leaves of a lieutenant colonel just 13 months after his first campaign in North Africa. He was 26 years of age when he reached the rank of lieutenant colonel.

He was commander of the 30th Infantry's 2nd Battalion when the war in Europe ended. Fighting with the 30th for a total of 522 days, Colonel Osgard saw action in North Africa, Sicily, Italy, Southern France, Austria and Germany.

He was discharged in 1945 and rejoined the Regular Army in 1946 following his marriage. Colonel and Mrs. Osgard now have two sons and a daughter.

After serving with the Army Ground Forces, Colonel Osgard then spent three years with the Naval Amphibious Forces. He was awarded the Navy Bronze Star for his accomplishments in commanding unloading operations at Inchon during the Korean War.

After attending the Command and General Staff College at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, in 1951, Colonel Osgard spent tours at 6th Army Headquarters at the Presidio of San Francisco and in Hawaii. He was promoted to colonel in 1958.

Chaplain's Son Earns Eagle Badge

Eagle Scout John Young, son of Chaplain Robert C. Young, 87th Infantry, received his present rank recently at an impressive ceremony at the Wilbur Elementary School. Colonel James Osgard, commanding officer of the 9th Infantry, presented the Award.

John has been a patrol leader in Troop 37 for over a year. He is a member of the Knights of the Neckerchief and the Order of the Arrow, both national honorary organizations of the Boy Scouts.

His plans for the summer include a six week's stint as a counselor at Camp Pine Knot.

Bronze Star Winner

23rd Inf Trainee Fought in Korea As Contemporaries Sipped Sodas

By Max Courson

Back in 1950, most 15-year-old boys were hanging out at the local drug stores and "sweating" high school math. But Roy L. Hartford was fighting in Korea and winning a Bronze Star.

Hartford, now a corporal going through advanced individual training with Combat Support Company, 23rd Infantry, was one of the youngest members of the United Nations forces who slugged it out with the Communists during the first bloody year of the Korean Conflict. Corporal Hartford entered the Army in 1949 at the age of 14, and exactly a year later found himself involved in the retreat from the Manchurian Border and the Pusan perimeter battle in South Korea.

Saved Buddy

During his 11 month and 23 day stint in Korea Hartford was awarded the Bronze Star for rescuing a buddy while pinned down by enemy machine gun fire. He also received the Combat Infantryman's Badge, The Korean Campaign emblem with four battle stars, the Distinguished Unit Emblem with cluster, the National Defense Service Medal, the Meritorious Unit Emblem and the U.N. Ribbon.

The Appalachia, Virginia, lad, nicknamed "Youngblood" by his older fellow soldiers, was assigned to the 1st Cavalry Division, 7th Cavalry Regiment while he was in Korea. However, he was attached to a Greek battalion for three-and-a-half months as an instructor.

The young Soldier returned to the States and was released from the Army in 1952. He re-enlisted immediately and served for two more years, being discharged in 1954. Then, he was drafted for one year in 1955 and was stationed at Thule, Greenland.

After separating from the service in 1956, Hartford joined the Merchant Marine and sailed all over the world before re-entering the Army in February 1961. He hopes eventually to get into air defense radar work. He is married and the father of two children.

'Rougher Time'

Looking back on his initial training of 12 years ago, Hartford finds that the trainees had a rougher time although they received less combat and field training than today's recruits. "Back then we didn't even have to run the infiltration course," he said.

Now 26, Hartford admits he first entered the Army at a tender age, but he says it runs in his family. Two brothers joined the Army when they were 16, one of them now being a second lieutenant on active duty. "If I had it all to do over again," Hartford mused, "I think I would join the Army just like I did before. Only this time I'd stay in the service all the way through."

9th Inf Mascot Retired To New Life of Luxury

By Richard Hussar

"Porky Pig's" reign as the mascot of the 9th Infantry's Company B has terminated.

Porky received an honorary discharge and a special medal for "duty above and beyond the call" and has been permanently retired to a Georgia farm where he will spend the remainder of his natural life in luxury. His needs and wants remain relatively simple; all "Porky" desired was to lounge in an abundance of gooey mud and eat buckets of pig-chow in an effort to satisfy his unending appetite.

This fat little 50-pound black pig gained status as a 9th Infantry celebrity at the "Keep Up the Fire" unit's recent Organization Day. Greased from his black snout to his curly little tail, "Porky" ran a good race with 25 9th Infantry enlisted men hot on his heels.

In a heroic leap, two Company B trainees clamped a tender hug around the little porker's body and claimed him as property of Company B. "Porky" spent several days residing at the "Company B estate for pint-sized snikers," but requested to be sent TDY (temporary duty) to a farm where he has a few close kinsmen living.

Porky's request was granted, not on a TDY basis, but as a PCS (permanent change of station). The mascot displayed his acceptance of this decision with a squeal of delight.

Porky has imprinted a soft spot in the hearts of the members of Company B and the 9th Infantry and will, no doubt, be long remembered.

Mrs. Osgard has many interests which are wide and varied. She is particularly interested in flower arranging, bridge, swimming and reading extensively. She has been extremely active in social activities on post.

Mrs. Osgard is looking forward to the new post because it is a new part of the country for her. Her children are especially interested in sightseeing around that part of the country.

By 87th Armor PIO

As the men of 69th Armor take their turn at fire guard this month, they will have a trained forester in their ranks.

Specialist Four Joseph Desrochers, who works in the battalion message center, holds a bachelor of science degree in forestry from the State University of New York College of Forestry, at Syracuse University.

Specialist Desrochers, from Mount Vernon, New York, has parachuted into forest fires in New York State, surveyed forests for the U.S. Forest Service in Colorado and Wyoming and managed the utilization of virgin timber forests in Coos Bay, Oregon.

Graduate Forester

After graduating from college in 1958, Desrochers worked for a year in the Coos Bay region. Here, as a graduate forester, he helped plan the cutting of timber in the nation's great natfonal forests. He took his turn deciding which timber was ready for cutting, planning the roads and bridges needed for access to the trees and drawing up contracts between the Federal government and private firms bidding for the timber. He also supervised cutting, the burning of debris and the planting of new trees.

Earlier, in the summer of 1957, he worked on an experimental forestry project in Colorado and Wyoming. He and other men went to selected locations to measure height, diameter and growth of each tree.

According to Desrochers, his experience with Forestry leads him to believe that "proper utilization of forests" is one of the keys to conservation. "Conservation is not just letting the trees stay there. Sometimes at means development of forests for timber. Then again, it may mean creating areas like Yellowstone National Park, which has more aesthetic value than timber value."

Engineers Here Observe Anniversary

By 2nd Engr PIO

Some 680 men will represent the 2nd Engineer Battalion (Combat) in a parade commemorating the 186th anniversity of the Crop of Engineers which was founded June 16, 1775.

The Corp started with the appointment, by the Continental Congress of one Chief of Engineering and two assistants.

Beginnings

The 2nd Engineer Battalion had its beginnings on August 3, 1861 when it was organized from one existing company and three new companies of engineer soldiers.

Since that day, the 2nd Engineers, as it came to be known in April of 1942, have fought in the Civil War, the Spanish - American war, the Philippine Insurrection, and World Wars I and II.

Valiant Chapter

A valiant chapter of courage was written during the Korean Conflict when the 2nd Engineer Battalion was ordered to cover the withdrawal of the 2nd Infantry Division. In five days and nights of bitter fighting, nearly all the officers and men of the 2nd Engineer Battalion were killed, wounded, or taken prisoner in action against overwhelming odds.

Captain Kossie C. Akins, battalion adjutant, served as the Commander of Troops for the 2nd Engineer Battalion. The reviewing officer was Brigadier General John E. Kelly, deputy commanding general of The Infantry Center.

LONG WALK

Waitress Inez Sutton, of San Diego, Calif., has the proof she needs to back up demands for a raise. She attached a pedometer to her leg, and found that her eight-hour shift takes her on the equivalent of a 12-mile hike.

'See You Later, 'Gator,' Says Well-Muscled Mutt

The Pet Brigade staged this month in Service Club Two is now history but a side story from the affair demands this late telling.

Lieutenant Colonel Harry H. Hiestand, commander of the 2nd Division's 69th Armor, was looking forward to the pet exhibition since he had two animals to enter. One was Nando, a dog and the other was a pet alligator obtained by Colonel Hiestand on a visit to Florida last year.

Dour Mood

Careful grooming of Nando and a special bath for the alligator were accomplished in preparation for the big day. Then, on Saturday morning of the day of the event, Colonel Hiestand arrived at his office in a dour mood.

His executive officer, Major William Hearn, finally dared an inquiry on the CO's disposition. Colonel Hiestand looked up from his desk and in poker-faced attitude calmly informed Major Hearn, "Nando ate the alligator."

Further research by Major Hearn elicited the information that Nando had been giving the alligator close scrutiny for some time. The day before the pet parade was scheduled he finished his scrutiny of the hard-skinned long - nosed creature and disposed of this threat to his stature in the Hiestand household by devouring him.

Nando was voted the most muscular dog in the Pet Parade.

Signal Supports Bama Reserves

By 122nd Signal PIO

Two platoons from the 122nd Signal Battalion provided communications support for the 87th Maneuver Area Control Group recently during the Alabama Reserve unit's training at Fort Benning.

The second platoon of Company A under Lieutenant Arnold Roes, used AN-MSC 69 Radio Relay Terminal Equipment, AN-GRC 46 and VRC3 radios, established a signal center operations similar to one found in the Division Command Post. The platoon provided 24-hour operations to help the Control Group control the various units supporting the operations.

A battle group area support platoon from Company B under Lieutenant Francis Kowalski supported the 1st Infantry during the problem. They provided radio communications, radio wire integration and radio relay communications between the battle group and the control group headquarters.

Conqueror's New WO Draws on Experiences

By 87th Inf PIO

A member of the 87th Infantry has exchanged the stripes of a master sergeant for the bars of a Warrant Officer in ceremonies held at the headquarters of the 87th Infantry at Kelley Hill.

Warant Officer Merlyn F. Miner brings with him to the ranks of the Officer Corps many years of experience in the military service which includes service in the Navy and Air Force besides his many years of service with the Army.

Airborne

A graduate of the Quartermaster, Airborne and Intelligence Schools, Mr. Miner has been assigned as the Intelligence Sergeant in the S-2 Section of the 87th since December 1960.

Born in St. Louis, Missouri, and reared in Chicago, Illinois, Mr. Miner joined the Navy in 1945. He received PT boat training and was assigned to a PT boat unit in the Pacific during the closing days of World War II, taking part in the occupation of the Japanese homeland upon the war's end.

In September 1950, after a tour of duty with the Army Air Force and a year of college work at Wyoming University, Mr. Miner joined the Army and was assigned to Fort Benning where he attended the Military Intelligence School.

Later that year he attended the Adjutant Generals School at Ft. Riley, Kansas, and the following summer he returned to the Far East, this time in Korea. From Korea he attended jump school with the 508th Regimental Combat Team at Ft. Campbell, Kentucky.

Upon completion of jump school, he was assigned as the Quartermaster Sergeant with the regiment.

Mr. Miner then returned to the Far East with the 508th, going to Japan in 1955 and being assigned as the Regimental Intelligence Sergeant.

Career Counselor

Upon completing his tour with the regiment in Japan he returned to States and attended the Career Counselors Course in the summer of 1959.

Upon completion of this school he was the Chief Army Recruiter in Greenville, South Carolina, until his assignment to the 87th Infantry here at Benning.

SPECIAL NOTICE
ALL ARMED FORCES PERSONNEL

For the first time, a new product is now available in your Post Exchange which revolutionizes shoe care and provides armed forces personnel with an ideal and inexpensive way not only to protect their shoes, but to maintain that "inspection-day" shine at all times.

Manufactured by the Lloyd Aerosol Laboratories of Helen, Georgia, this new product is sold under the brand name of SHINE and is the first aerosol spray polish that really works. It is guaranteed not to crack or peel if used as directed.

SHINE works on any colored leather except white or suede, and a light coating applied once or twice each week will give a high gloss to your shoes, as well as protect them from mildew. Water, the most damaging of all elements to leather, will not harm your shoes when you use SHINE. It completely waterproofs leather when properly applied.

The most important factor for armed forces personnel in the use of SHINE is that no buffing is required. Similar products have been on the market in the past which, when used, built up an unattractive coating that eventually cracked or peeled, or required the same amount of buffing as paste waxes. But SHINE eliminates all this. Here is a product that produces an instant shine within seconds after applying, needs no buffing for a high gloss, and maintains that gloss in spite of dirt or water.

If other spray polishes have been used unsatisfactorily, they can be removed from your shoes with acetone, inexpensively purchased at any drug counter.

For best results, shoes should be wiped with a damp cloth to clean them of all dirt before SHINE is applied. If the leather is badly scuffed or discolored, apply a light coating of wax containing a stain to even the color of the leather. Then just spray on a light coating of SHINE with a side-to-side motion, allow to dry for 30 to 60 seconds, and you have a shine that will pass the most rigid inspection. And the gloss will stay on your shoes. When shoes become dirty or mud-caked, merely clean them with a damp cloth, and the shine is still there.

A light application once or twice a week is all that is required to maintain this high shine, and the cost per shine of this product makes it actually less than any liquid or paste wax now on the market. The generous 10 ounce can will last from four to six months, making each shine cost less than 3 cents each.

SHINE is non-toxic, colorless, and will not barm clothing or skin. One can is all you need for all colored leather. It can be used with complete confidence.

You will save hours of time and worry by buying and using SHINE. No messy fingers, no buffing, and so economical and easy to use. A "must" for those who really try to maintain that "inspection-day" appearance at all times.

Go to your Post Exchange and ask for SHINE by Lloyd Aerosol Laboratories. You'll be glad you did.

General, Mrs. Hardick Honored

non . . or whether the Army rides in two-and-a-half-ton trucks or flying saucers — or on broomsticks, for that matter — some things in the Army will never change.

"The readiness, the willingness and the motivation to serve wherever needed and to do whatever job is necessary."

General Hardick continued, "The pride that one takes in one's unit, one's uniform and his service. The loyalty that one finds in a good unit; the loyalty to that unit, to the country; your ideals and principles — across all this is the idea of serving; the willingness to do what is necessary with the means at hand; to use whatever tools are available to do the job.

"The willingness when the chips are down and the goal is rough to make one more step, to fire one more shot . . . and to die, if necessary, for the cause you believe in."

The general declared that he wanted to "thank each member of this command for the loyal support you have given me during my tour of duty here." He then added: . . . .

"It has been the custom of soldiers upon departing to never say 'good-bye.' This is partly because under the terms of service we expect — and usually do — meet old friends again.

"However, I believe it is also partly because, upon parting a unit, you never really leave it — except physically. The part of you remains with your friends and with your unit just as some part of them remains with you.

"Thus . . . whenever I see a 2nd Division patch — or for that matter, any soldier in a uniform — I will feel that I'm still part of the Army — I will be at home wherever soldiers are."

Gen. Hardick was preceded by General Charles H. White Jr., who praised the retiring officer for his "interest in the individual . . for his extreme interest in seeing a job well done."

The third oak leaf cluster to the Legion of Merit cites General Hardick for his "exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding service in successive positions of importance during the period December 1953 to June 1961."

General Hardick, a 1931 graduate of the U. S. Military Academy, joined the "Second to None" in October 1949 as assistant division commander. He has served in recent months as commanding general, succeeding Major General Frederick W. Gibb, now retired.

Wife, Daughter

General Hardick was accompanied by Mrs. Hardick and his daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Wise of Berwick, Pennsylvania.

Other military and civilian guests included B. Ed Johnson, mayor of Columbus; General Harris; Major General E. F. Easterbrook, commanding general of the Army Aviation Center, Fort Rucker, Ala.; Brigadier General Alexander D. Surles Jr., assistant commandant, The Infantry Center, and Brigadier General John E. Kelly, deputy commanding general, The Infantry Center.

Dignitaries Gather To Honor Hardicks

By Clay Lacy

Military and civilian dignitaries gathered at the Custer Terrace Officer's Club Saturday morning to honor Brigadier General and Mrs. William L. Hardick upon the general's retirement.

And as guests filed through a receiving line to greet General and Mrs. Hardick and wish them well, one lady received kisses from both the general and his wife.

She was Mrs. Robert J. Wise, daughter of the Hardicks, who came to Fort Benning with her husband from Berwick, Pennsylvania, where they make their home.

Program

Following the reception, coffee and rolls were served with a short program, led by 2nd Division chief of staff, Colonel Gustav M. Bacharsch.

Colonel Bacharach introduced the president of the local chapter of the Association of the United States Army, William J. Schloth, who presented General and Mrs. Hardick with a memento.

Colonel Bacharach then introduced the mayor of Columbus, B. Ed Johnson, who extolled General Hardick's fine participation in community affairs. The Mayor expressed the hope that the Hardicks might choose Columbus as their home.

Key

Top gesture by Mayor Johnson came with the presentation of a gold key to the city of Columbus to the retiring general and his wife. The mayor presented General Hardick a scroll for his outstanding work with the Citizens Military Council.

Colonel Bacharach, speaking on behalf of the staff for the Indianhead Division, extended best wishes to the Hardicks. He also explained a staff study conducted recently to determine a method to improve General Hardick's golf game. With this spoof, Colonel Bacharach presented the general with a memento of his 20 months' service with the 2nd Division.

Speaking to the large throng of dignitaries, General Hardick thanked all for the "wonderful friendships we have had with you all while here." He went on to explain that his retirement plans are not settled at present but that he would probably start out living in the Northeast.

"But," said General Hardick, "come the first robin in spring and the last of the winter snow, and we definitely plan to come back to visit with our many friends here."

First Thing

Sergeant: "What's the first thing you do in cleaning a rifle?"

Recruit: "Check the serial number."

Sergeant: "What in blazes has that got to do with cleaning it?"

Recruit: "Make sure I'm cleaning my own rifle."

87th Tells How It Won Swim Meet

"Vires Montesque Vincimus" —the Latin motto of the 87th Infantry translated into English means "We Conquer Men and Mountains."

But last week, during the two-day 2nd Division Swimming and Diving Meet, held at Carey Pool, the Conquerors added a third element to their motto — water.

Racking up five first places, six seconds and two third places, out of ten swimming events, the 87th outswam a very good second-place 1st Infantry team by a score of 60 to 49.

The Conquerors started training for the meet over a month ago and, with the exception of the coach, Lieutenant John F. Collier, Combat Support Co. there was not a trained swimmer in the group. In the vernacular of the area, they were a bunch of "creek swimmers."

Arm Pulls

However, after a month of "arm pulls" (swimming with the feet tied together), kickboards, and repeated sprints, the Conquerors were ready for their graduation from creek to swimming pool.

There were 12 events on the program, including two diving events. Six of the ten swimming events were in the free style or "Australian Crawl" class.

Since this stroke included the bulk of the total points, it was in this direction that the 87th trained and, eventually, dominated, gathering four of the six first places and four of the six second places.

Colonel Robert E. Connor, Battle Group Commander, Lieutenant Colonel William T. Gordon, Deputy Commander, and Lieutenant Colonel Douglas W. Syverson, Battle Group Executive Officer, were on hand both nights to encourage and congratulate the swimmers.

The morning after the meet, a letter of appreciation from Col. Connor was presented to each of the team members. The letter, a tangible reminder of the "rigorous training" as evidenced by the "superior condition" which resulted in "a job well done."

Aquamen

Foust Places First in Army Tennis Singles

By Engr, Bn, PIO

Lieutenant Arthur L. Foust, Company C, 2nd Engineer Battalion, copped another tennis championship last week, downing Private James Neren, of Fort Jackson, S. C., 6-2, 6-1, 6-3 in the Third U. S. Army singles matches at Main Post.

Lt. Foust and Captain Paul Young combined their talents to win the doubles honors when they defeated Pvts. Neren and Alfred Thompson, 6-2, 6-1, 6-2.

Fort Benning accumulated a total of 10 points to take the Third U. S. Army Tennis Championships.

Previously, Lt. Foust captured post singles tennis honors with winning scores of 6-3, 6-2, and 6-1.

The 2nd Division officer first started playing tennis at the age of 13. He and his twin sister represented their high school with much success. He went on to win the Texas State School Board Championship.

At Rice University, he studied economics, taking time out to win the South West Double Championship, Louisiana State Championship, and Houston City Championship.

He has met and beaten Byron Mackay and Sammy Giammalva, both Davis Cup champions.

Engineers, Student Brigade Tied For Top Spot in Baseball League

By Pfc Joe Kuchera

A two-way tie closed out the first half of the Major Unit Baseball League here last week, as The Student Brigade and the 151st Engineer Group managed to gather nine wins and three losses apiece in the 42-game first and second round schedule.

A play-off got underway Wednesday between the deadlocked league leaders to determine the first half champion in the best two-out-of-three game series.

With the scheduling of the play-offs, the first two games of the second half had to be postponed. One of the game was rescheduled for this afternoon at 1:30 p.m. and the other for July 24 at 7:30 p.m.

In last week's action, the 151st Engineers defeated the 1st Battle Group, 29th Infantry, 1st Infantry Brigade, by a 1-0 scoreon while The Student Brigade dropped at the hands of the 1st Armored Rifle Battalion, 58th Infantry, 1st Infantry Brigade, 6-3.

In other action, the 2nd Howitzer Battalion, 10th Artillery, 1st Infantry Brigade nipped the 58th Infantry, 8-6, and the 29th Infantry shut out the cellar-dwelling 428th Medical Battalion by a 6-0 count.

Leading off the second half schedule next week will be the 151st Engineers, hopeful of going ahead at the start of the third round, opposing the 10th Artillery Sunday at 2 p.m. at Gowdy Field.

The 10th Artillery, dozing a game and a half out of the lead position, seeks its eighth win of the compaign against four losses. Should the Artillerymen come through with a victory, they would gain a full game on the Engineers and half a game on The Student Brigade.

Meanwhile, a win for the Engineers would shove them into a clear lead in the second half slate, a half game ahead of The Student Brigade, which doesn't see action until later in the week.

An Independence Day single game will feature the 58th Infantry against the 428th Medical Battalion at 2 p.m., also at Gowdy Field. In this contest the 428th seeks to gain freedom from the bottom rung of the ladder. A win for them would boost them to a half-game advantage over the 58th Infantry, who would fall into the cellar.

On the other hand, a win for the 58th Infantrymen would give them a much shorter shot over Troop Command, who rests in fifth spot, retaining the slim

A Wednesday (July 5) game will pit the Troop Command against the 10th Artillery "Redlegs". Victory for Troop Command would push them closer to fourth spot on the list. The 29th holds fourth spot, a mere one-game advantage over Troop Command.

The final game scheduled next week will have The Student Brigade opposing the 151st Engineers in a crucial game between the league leaders. They will meet Thursday (July 6) at 7:30 p.m.

Athletic officials recommend that post dependent personnel use Russ Pool instead of the others. It is expected that with the re-opening of Russ, some of the crowded situations at the other pools might be relieved.

For the next two years he fought his way up to the semi-finals in the USAREUR championship matches only to be stopped by Sfc Ed Crook, who is now the 1960 Olympic Gold Medal winner.

Post boxing fans will see Sgt. Young back in the ring again during the 1961-62 Infantry Center boxing season. He is now in training wih the 1st Armored Rifle Battalion, 58th Infantry, 1st Infantry Brigade boxing team. This year Sgt. Young will be looking forward to the All-Army championship meet.

SGT. YOUNG

She was a little, blonde toddler, not more than three. Dressed in a tiny blue thing, she was valiantly rasslin' an 18-foot cane pole toward the water's edge at King's pond last Saturday evening.

She never did make it, however, for her Daddy looked up from the task of unhooking a fat bream in time to forestall her baby efforts.

I don't know who she was except that she's one of hundreds of our post children who are finding the "new" King's Pond to be perfect for them. Green, grassy banks, gentle slopes, shallow waters, picnic benches and plenty of room for the first fishing lessons from Dad or Mother.

Last Saturday was my first opportunity to get a good look at King's since its opening and this column tilts its prist in salute to those who've made the pond environs as pretty as any city park . . . even to the pair of snowy ducks.

The only restrictive signs noted were pleas by our Wild Life Aides to have mercy on the young grass they've been trying to raise on filled land which used to be swampy, stump - strewn, and infested with snakes and chiggers.

Fish were biting to please even the most hungry angler and I'll bet if that little blonde had succeeded in wetting a hook, she'd have caught one too. Perhaps she did, under the guidance of a Dad who was concerned with her safety at the moment of observation.

Standing on the east shore at about 6 p.m., I counted 119 people from my little blonde to oldtimers at the game all having the time of their lives. A dozen families had barbeque grills going and the approach of rain didn't perturb anyone in the least.

Right now, I can see no reason for travelling miles off post looking for a place to picnic when King's is literally at our back doors and although the bass aren't of tackle-busting size, they sure are of eating size — and there to be caught.

There was only one adverse incident at King's last Saturday — a whooping and hollering which caused everyone to wonder whether the fella had gone insane. . .I apologize.

You see, it isn't every day that a pretty, 15-year-old picks up a fly-rod and snags a whopper after only 10 minutes of instructions. That's what Jeanie LeVert did — on a No. 10 Black Gnat fished wet.

Her coach was no less proud than her watching Mother and Dad but they didn't yell like Comanches when Jeannie flipped that big bream out on the grass. Maybe it was because they had visions of Jeannie slighting her piano lessons in favor of fly-tying. . .

20 Medical and Dental Interns Graduate Here

The glory of Western civilization is its willingness and eagerness to fulfill the obligation of passing on its knowledge and experience, a class of 20 medical and dental interns was told last Thursday during graduation exercises at Martin Army Hospital.

Col. David G. Eisner, chief of the hospital's Department of Surgery and director of professional training, spoke to the graduates on their responsibility to teach their profession under the doctor's Hippocratic oath. "Our profession is not a closed guild, with precisely guarded trade secrets," he said.

Pointing out that even though a doctor might not choose to teach primarily, Col. Eisner reminded the class that many of them will at some time or other be charged with instruction of younger members of the profession.

The speaker called attention to the achievements of medicine within the lifetime of the class and to the many research projects now under study that will affect the practice of medicine, including atomic and space medicine.

Certificates of completion of a year of internship were presented to medical graduates by Col. Bryan C. T. Fenton, hospital commander.

Col. Stuart M. Mitchell, post dental surgeon, presented certificates to the dental interns.

Medical interns graduating included Capts. Robert L. Bauer, Richard E. Burdick, Gary B. Copeland, Kale C. Gentry, Philip B. Kirk, Alvin L. Larsen, William W. Mears, Robert W. Muir, Thomas A. Readling, Roger D. Riegelbauch, James T. Townsley III, S. Ronald campbell, Stephen Tkach, William N. Toth, and Air Force Capts. Richard J. Bukosky and George W. Simaes.

Dental graduates were Capts. William E. Bartik, Neil S. Fishner, Francis G. Hedberg, and Air Force Capt. Donald C. Dertien.

Rangers Hold Orientation at Dahlonega

The third annual Dahlonega Day, set aside to acquaint the people of the Dahlonega-Gainesville area with some of the equipment and training of the Army and, specifically the Rangers, was conducted last Wednesday by the Mountain Ranger Camp, near Dahlonega, at the near-by 60 foot cliff area and the camp sight.

A military mountaineering techniques demonstration, as taught to Infantry School Ranger students during their training at the Mountain Camp, began the day's activities.

Following the mountaineering techniques demonstration, activities shifted to the camp proper. There spectators saw demonstrations in snake-handling by MSgt Lillard Hudson, Judo and hand to hand combat by 1st Lt. James Tucker, and scout dog activities by the scout dog platoon from Fort Benning. Displays of the Army's latest weapons and equipment, including communications equipment, the H-37 Mojave and H-34 Choctaw helicopters, the the 106mm recoilless rifle, were exhibited throughout the afternoon.

The Dahlonega Day activities concluded with a demonstration at Wimpy's Airstrip near the camp. This consisted of a Pathfinder parachute landing, a helicopter-landed assault, and a free-fall parachute jump from high altitude.

AN ARTIST'S CONCEPT SHOWS AIR FORCE C-130A As Possible Tow Plane for Air Trailer Using Semi-rigid Tow-Bar

'Air Trailer' for Missile Stages Has Been Designed by Corporation

A unique "air trailer" concept for carrying the largest U. S. space-missile stages has been designed by Ling-Temco Electronics, Inc.

The craft is the theme of a paper to be presented to a joint national meeting of the Institute of the Aerospace Sciences and the American Rocket Society, June 13, in Los Angeles.

Presenting the paper is W. M. Ligon, head flight dynamics engineer of Temco Electronics and Missiles Company, a subsidiary of Ling-Temco.

The new concept involves the integration of two air vehicles into one flexible aircraft system, which was developed more than a year ago following informal discussions with the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

Still in the drawing-board stage, one model of the air trailer has a 160-foot length and a 210-foot wing span. It can carry loads 24 feet in diameter, 90 feet long and weighing up to 50 tons. Other proposed models transport larger and heavier cargos.

Since the craft remains coupled to its tow-plane at all times by a semi-rigid tow-bar, Ligon explains that the term "air trailer" best describes the towed vehicle. The C-130A, one of the Air Force's largest transports, is one possible tow plane.

The air trailer's tow-bar was developed and demonstrated by Dr. Trutz Foelsche and Fritz Haimer in Germany during World War II. About 1,000 feet of cable weighing nearly a ton would be required to pull the air trailer by conventional towing methods, according to Ligon.

The company designed the air trailer, knowing that a fast, economical and reliable means of missile-stage transportation was needed. For example, this model carries the Saturn first stage inside the air trailer. Versions of the air trailer are feasible for transport of commercial cargo and of military cargo such as tanks and trucks.

Use of the air trailer avoids surface transportation problems associated with highway and rail travel, such as road widths, bridges, power lines, overpasses and tunnels.

Water transportation has remained the first consideration, since there are no U. S. aircraft large enough to carry huge missile stages internally.

He Didn't Drop a Point --115 Shooters Beat Him

By MSgt Charles A. Quinn

Pfc Raul McGinnis, young rifleman with the Army Air Defense Command Rifle Team, left Fort Benning this week wondering just what a man has to do to win a rifle match.

McGinnis, competing in the 1961 Army Rifle and Pistol Championships which ended at The Infantry Center last week, fired a perfect score of 100 in the Rapid Fire Match at 200 yards. Out of the 20 shots he fired, 20 hit the bull's-eye, only two landing in the tie-breaking "V" ring.

This type of shooting would win a trophy in most any league, but McGinnis, shooting against the best riflemen in the world, not only failed to win a trophy — he placed 116th.

In the Army marksmanship championships, 210 perfect match scores were racked up on rifle and pistol ranges, scores which do not include the hundreds of perfect 10-shot strings shot in matches consisting of more than one stage.

On the pistol range Third Army marksman MSgt Harold E. Wilson fired a perfect 300-22X in the .22 caliber Camp Perry course consisting of three stages. Of the 30 shots fired, 23 landed in the bull's-eye's X-ring, an inner tie-breaking ring slightly larger than a half dollar.

MSgt Howard A. Stevens, rifleman with the Army's Advanced Marksmanship Unit, fired 50 shots over the National Match course June 10 and established an all-time Army record when he put all 50 into McAndrew Range bull's-eyes, 29 of which landed in the V-ring.

This match calls for 10-shot strings at 200 yards, slow fire; 200 yards, rapid fire, and 20 shots, slow fire at 600 yards. Sgt. Stevens posted perfect scores at all ranges with the balance of his shots landing in the four-inch V-ring at shorter ranges and the 10-inch circle at 600 yards.

Behind the efforts of the two marksmen came the hundreds of "possibles" fired by 873 shooters who are going to the 1961 National Matches at Camp Perry, Ohio, or return to their home stations.

McGinnis intends to continue despite the blow of shooting a perfect match score and placing 116th.

Units Take Practical CBR Tests

On June 19, units of the 1st Infantry Brigade underwent the quarterly CBR Test.

The test, conducted by The Infantry Center Chemical Section, in the vicinity of Wygiel Range, differed from previous tests in that all the work was of a practical nature without any written portions, or "canned" situations.

Tests conducted in the past have consisted of written examinations on monitoring, decontamination, and map reading. The recent test was primarily an evaluation of survey teams in their recording and reporting readings of radioactivity at particular locations.

This method of testing was a welcome deviation from the classroom type of testing and the high scores attained by most showed it to be a huge success.

Army Takes Four CISM Pistol Slots

The International Center Fire Pistol Team which will represent the U. S. Armed Forces in the Council of International Military Sports competition at Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, July 23 to 30 was selected here last Thursday with two Army marksmen sharing top honors for the four-day eliminations.

Sfc Arthur G. Ogden and Sfc Laurence L. Moseley, both of the Army Advanced Marksmanship Unit, posted twin scores of 2,341 out of the 2,400 points possible by shooting the 600-point course of fire four times.

Clinching third place on the five-man squad which will carry U. S. colors in the 1961 CISM shoot was 1st Lt. Cecil L. Willis of the San Antonio, Texas, AAMU with 2,329, two points ahead of the Navy's TMI (Torpedoeman First Class) Gasper M. DeFino. Fifth team slot was won by Sfc Anthony Soza with 2,315 to give the Army four of five CISM team places.

The team expects to compete against shooters from some 26 CISM member nations over a course which calls for 30 shots, slow fire on the 50-meter bullseye at 25 meters, and 30 rapid fire on the International silhouette, also at 25 meters.

Although the trials were marked by cold rain and gusty winds, individual scores hovered at near-world record level. On the last round, the world record for team competition of a four-man score of 2,328 was exceeded by eight points. Sgt. Ogden's 580x600 was only two points below the official world mark and Sgt. Moseley's 589 was just three points away. Lt. Willis' 580 and the 577 by the Navy's DeFino completed the record-surpassing score.

Sixteen competitors from the Army, Navy and Air Force fired in the trials.

PFC DONALD R. SHYTLE POINTS TO BULLET HOLES
Made By Machine Guns Fired at His Moving Target Tank

23 Tankers Act as Moving Targets To Add Realism on Benning Ranges

In the hills of the Fort Benning reservation is a unit whose mission is little known to some Army personnel and the civilian populace.

This unit, the 4th Platoon, Company D, 69th Armor, 1st Armored Rifle Battalion, 1st Infantry Brigade, is known as the "Targeteers," and for good reason. It's men ride as "live" moving targets on post Ranges while trainees and students of The Infantry School fire rocket launchers and recoiless rifles at them.

Twenty-three men, under the command of 1st Lt. Frederick E. Angell, staff the platoon's five tanks. The "Targeteers" are now using five converted M-48 tanks, which were modified in 1956 by the unit.

Included are six extra tons of armor protection including track "skirts" of savaiged tracks welded together. These protect the tank's operating tracks from contact with the different projectiles.

"Live" 30 caliber machine gun ammunition and 50 caliber rounds from spotting rifles are fired at the tanks.

While riding the ranges giving students and trainees the opportunity to also fire blank rounds of 3.5 inch ammunition and dummy grenades at moving targets, the men inside the tanks receive additional protection from a sealed turret and cupola, telescope covers and the removal of all but the driver's periscope.

Only the defective 90mm guns, kept mounted for realism, and the tank's radio, necessary for communication to range control center, remain in the vehicle.

The Targeteers are in constant demand by The Infantry School and the 2d Infantry Division during the conduct of training. Their mission adds further realism to training of the Infantryman.

Soldier of Month

Sp4 Richard M. Bergermann, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 577th Engineer Battalion, 151st Engineer Group, was selected as group Engineer of the Month for June. He was congratulated by Col. S. Y. Coker, group commander.

Road Through Florida's Swamp Tests Engineers

A construction detachment of Company B, 577th Engineer Battalion (Construction) recently returned from the Florida Ranger Training Camp after spending 26 days at the camp performing training projects consisting of new construction and rehabilitation type work.

Among the items rehabilitated were five miles of roads and ditches, and eight hundred lineal feet of fence surrounding the Ranger Camp Motor Pool, POL storage area and the grease rack.

Newly constructed items included an eight man field latrine, an expedient assault boat launching site, two heliports and five miles of improved road.

The five miles of new road proved to be the most challenging phase of the entire project. Pushing a road across Florida swamp and through jungle-like brush can be most trying under ideal conditions, but when the elements produce an excess of rain that enlarges an already difficult drainage problem, a routine job becomes a very challenging chore.

After observing the effects of the spring downpours and the damage they caused, the Engineers decided that an additional nine culverts were required to solve the drainage problem.

The construction detachment was led by 2nd Lt. Frank A. Underwood.

For Achievement

Gen. Walsh Presented Certificate

Brig. Gen. L. A. Walsh Jr., former assistant commandant of The Infantry School, has been presented a Continental Army Command Certificate of Achievement for "outstanding performance of duty" at Fort Benning since August, 1960.

The presentation was made by Brig. Gen. A. D. Surles, Jr., former deputy commanding general of The Infantry Center who succeeded Gen. Walsh as assistant commandant. The latter will become senior adviser to the First ROK Army.

The commendation read in part:

"Throughout his tenure in this important position, Gen. Walsh consistently demonstrated exceptional initiative, outstanding professional ability and leadership in the accomplishment of many diverse responsibilities.

"Particulary noteworthy achievements include the review and improvement of school curricula, the establishment of combat development objectives for the Infantry, and his contributions toward the preparation of current Infantry doctrine.

"The marked improvement in instruction techniques and operating efficiency of The Infantry School are directly attributable to Gen. Walsh's enthusiasm, sound judgement and organization ability. On the occasion of his departure from Fort Benning, it is a pleasure to commend Gen. Walsh for the brilliant quality of his devoted service."

The citation was signed by Gen. Herbert B. Powell, commanding general of Continental Army Command.

SIGNAL COMPANY'S POWER TRAILER
Keeps Messages Moving in All Weather

596th Signal Completes ATT

Covering an area of approximately 900 square miles, the units of the 596th Signal Company (Support) recently concluded their annual Army Training Test, consisting of setting up and operating a 200 mile radio relay network over the State of Georgia.

Operation Orders were received at the assembly area, in Alabama, and the company moved by convoys to the points they were to occupy. Their orders called for a station here at Benning; relay stations at Pine Mountain, Palmetto, Fort McPherson and Marietta; and another station at Dahlonega. This exposed the company to 97 degree weather here while the units in North Georgia were battling heavy rain.

All of the units were harassed by aggressor forces except for the one sent to Fort McPherson. Besides the expected air strikes, CBR attacks and the infiltration attempts, the unit located at Marietta was attacked by helicopter-borne aggressors.

The problem was designed by the post signal operations officer, Lt. Col. Howard K. Merrian, who served as chief umpire. At the conclusion of the test, the men and officers of the 596th were commended by Col. Brantan Small, the Post Signal Officer, for the outstanding enthusiasm they displayed while carrying out their mission.

Freedoms Foundation Program Of 1961 Letter Awards Opens

VALLEY FORGE, Pa. (AFOS) —The Freedoms Foundation has officially opened its 1961 Letter Awards Program. Subject of the contest is "What I Can Do For Freedom."

All members of the Armed Forces on active duty may enter the contest. Entries on the above subject should be written in letter forming 100 to 500 words.

Contest prizes are as follows: One award of $1,500, one of $580, 50 presentations of $100 and 50 awards of $50. All winners will also receive George Washington Honor Medals.

The top winner of each service and the next five winners regardless of service will be invited here on Washington's birthday, February 22, 1962, for award presentation ceremonies. Attendance will be subject to the approval of the winner's commanding officer. Other winners will receive their awards through their service.

On the following day the visitors will go to the Capitol and other points of interest in Washington, D. C.

Contestants should send their letters to Freedoms Foundation, Valley Forge, Pa., postmarked no later than November 1, 1961. Each entry should include full name, rank or rating, serial number, branch of service, unit address and home address.

One approach to the subject suggested by the Foundation is through President Kennedy's statement, "Ask not what your country can do for you — ask what you can do for your country."

Similar ideas, such as the serviceman as "ambassador" abroad and other ways in which the serviceman can serve America, including nonmilitary activities, were also suggested as the basis for an entry.

Local TV Features Drill Team

Early morning TV viewers last week were able to witness the precision and coordination of the members of the 1st Infantry Brigade Drill Team, "Miss Patsy," a WTVM presentation aired each weekday from 9 to 10 a.m., was host to the six performers who showed their wares on the air.

Under the direction of Sgt. Donald L. Parker, the "crack" drill team used demonstrations to show the audience the difference in manual of arms as used by the Drill Team and that taught in basic training units. The Drill Team uses precise timing and modifications of the manual of arms which reflects in their sharp appearance and performance.

Sp4 James L. Ivison made a solo appearance as he executed different drill movements. The handling of the rifle with snap and precision is attained only by many hours of practice.

Other members of the drill team present were Pfc Raymon C. Donald, Pfc Frederick C. Winkler, Pfc Donald K. McCauley and Pvt. Leslie W. Good, Jr.

For Every Poor Shot-- Shooter Fines Himself

A pistol marksman with the Army Advanced Marksmanship Unit here has a new approach to higher scores — he fines himself each time he makes what he calls a poor shot.

Sfc Anthony Soza, a member of the AAMUs International Pistol Team, charges himself a nickel if he permits a shot to land three inches away from the bull's-eye center and a dime if a shot lands four inches out.

Proceeds go to Sfc Soza's favorite charity which, according to the Army marksman was "doing all right for a while."

However, Soza's self-imposed fines have been the means by which he could develop greater concentration of what has been termed the most exacting course of pistol fire in the world. His "money shots" in the six and seven rings of the 50-meter International free pistol target are becoming fewer and his monthly donations less.

The course of fire over which Sfc Soza is training calls for a bull's-eye with a center 10-ring little larger than a silver dollar, a nine-ring placed two inches and an eight-ring three inches away from center. The first of Soza's "money-rings," the seven-ring, is the last in the black of the bull's-eye and four inches out. The 10-cent six-ring is five inches away.

The free pistol shooter competing at world level can afford to let few shots land in the eight ring. The world's record for the course is a 566 out of a possible 600 points fired by a Russian. To approach this mark the shooter must place all his shots in the area of the nine-ring with rare exception.

This means that all his 60 shots must strike an area in the span of a man's hand.

All Must Talk Same Language Gen. Surles Says of One Army

You face an accelerated and vigorous program of work, discipline and development, Brig. Gen. A. D. Surles, Jr., assistant commandant of The Infantry School, told 195 men entering National Guard Officer Candidate Class 2 last week.

The class includes 180 Guardsmen from 40 states, Puerto Rico and the District of Columbia and 15 members of the Army Reserve. The nine-week course will end August 15.

"The ability of all the Army components to talk the same language is most important in the One-Army concept. In the past this was accomplished after the first shot was fired. In these times the National Guard and Reserve have to be maintained in an active state of combat readiness," Gen. Surles told the candidates.

"We have to be prepared at any time to meet our wartime responsibilities. The object of this course is to equip you to meet your wartime responsibility as a platoon leader," he explained.

The speaker pointed out that the platoon leader's title is the only one in the Army which specifically designates an officer as a leader.

"The emphasis in this course will be on you—what you are, what you do and how you do it. The basic idea is to work on your weaknesses and improve them," the one-star general said.

"You'll become thoroughly acquainted not only with the theories of leadership but with the means of practicing it," he added. "I congratulate you for having qualified for this very difficult and demanding leadership course."

Gen. Surles traced the illustrious, 19-year history of the Infantry Officer Candidate School. He noted that during World War II it provided enough combat junior leaders for 157 divisions.

Saddler Is Last In Army

WASHINGTON (AFPS)—The only unit in the Army that still uses horses—the famed "Old Guard" 3rd Infantry—properly enough boasts the services of the Army's last saddler, unique in his craft of repairing leather accessories for military mounts.

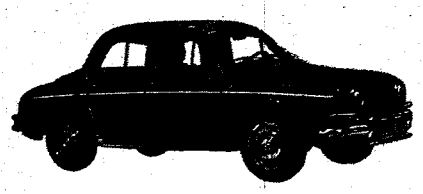
"Before I was assigned here three years ago," says Sfc Bryson L. Smith a shade wistfully, "I sold shoes in a clothing sales store because there was no place for me after the last Army unit using mules was deactivated in 1956."

Smith, who maintains the leather of the Old Guard's caisson section, responsible for escorting military funerals in Arlington National Cemetery, can look back to WWII days when his specialty was still vital to the Army overseas.

"I was with the 251st QM Remount Service in Australia in 1945," he recalls. "Our job was to break horses for use in China and India—they were fighting a different kind of war out there."

As many as 2,200 horses were shipped from Australia to the Far East, docking at Calcutta, he says. "The ranch always made me think of the Old West instead of Australia. The only difference was that the cowboys wore Army fatigues."

But today, for an Army saddler, times have changed. "The McClellan saddle, which used to be standard issue, must be ordered all the way from London now. And they just don't make officers' saddles anymore."



To fill the gap, Smith makes these saddles himself, using the McClellan frame. He also designed the scabbard holder used on the riderless caparison horse that traditionally follows some military funerals.

RESPONSIBLE STATEMENT

Rodney Perdew inserted this ad in the Los Angeles Times classified section: "Because today marks 15 years that she has been my bride and because she has given me four wonderful children and has been most helpful to keep my home a sanctuary in this confused and troubled world. I am happy to declare that I am responsible for all debts incurred by my wife, Elizabeth Perdew."

easy to use and the time required for making repairs has been reduced from seven to 15 minutes to 15 to 25 seconds.

A huge blacklog of items for repairs has been eliminated and the machine has made possible the closing of a linen repair shop in the old hospital area. The thermo-plastic patch is more acceptable for sterile procedures as it eliminates needle holes made with a sewing machine, according to officials.

For his suggestion, Sgt. Thompson previously received the $25 first place in Fort Benning's monthly contest, and $50 as a winner of the Third Army Quarterly Contest.

Safety Switch

George C. Meredith, an employee of The Infantry Center's Engineer Section assigned to duties at Martin Hospital, received his award for proposing a safety switch to the emergency power system within the hospital. The switch will provide maximum assurance of electrical power functions under all circumstances.

According to officials, the value gained from utilization of the switch cannot be estimated as the nature of the activities of a hospital makes this a vital function possibly involving life or death of patients dependent upon operation of equipment.

Meredith previously was awarded $100 for this suggestion.

Advanced Marksmanship Unit, Pre-Camp Perry Matches Won by Sfc Blankenship

U. S. Pistol Champion Sfc. William B. Blankenship added another to a growing collection of pistol championship awards by capturing the grand aggregate trophy at Pre-Camp Perry Invitational Pistol Matches which ended on post last Sunday.

Sgt. Blankenship fired a total of 2643-122x over the 270-shot course to win the award, taking four lesser trophies on the way. In addition to the over-all crown, he won the Timed and Rapid Fire Matches and the aggregate in the service pistol competition and also center fire aggregate laurels.

A first-year "All-Army" competitor, Pfc Norman L. Banta, prevented a clean sweep of all three aggregate trophies by a 589-40x as a four-match total with the 22 caliber weapon, a single point over the 888-48x posted by the Army champion.

Final bulletins of the pistol matches revealed that 23 out of 75 competitors fired better than 2,600 out of 2,700 points possible for the grand aggregate course.

"This is the first time in the history of Army pistol competition that this figure has been reached," Major William S. Brophy, of the Army said.

Major Brophy heads the USAMU's Pistol Section.

He said the shooting of a 2,600x2,700 score is comparable to the running of a four-minute mile and gains national fame for the competitor. He added that special recognition is received from the National Rifle Association by those who shoot a score which is still a rarity outside top military and civilian marksmanship circles.

Deductions from pay and cash deposits must be in even dollars and in sums of not less than $5.00 each. Repayment of such savings will be made on discharge, retirement, transfer to an inactive status in a Reserve component or when final settlement is made in the case of a deceased enlisted person. In addition, repayment is authorized at the expiration of each 3 year period of any enlistment greater than 3 years, or when in an emergency.

1st Brigade Unit Wins CG Trophy

More than 20,000 people attended Fort Benning's fifth annual Youth Activities Club Carnival Tuesday.

Instigated five years ago as a means of raising funds for youth activities on the post, the carnival attracts young and old with a schedule ranging from military competition to food and fun.

Beginning at 6 a.m. and closing with a spectacular display of fireworks at 9 p.m., the events of the day provided an interesting and safe holiday for families living on the post and in the surrounding community.

Highlight of the carnival was the presentation of trophies to competition winners by Major Gen. Hugh P. Harris, commanding general of The Infantry Center.

Commander's Trophy.

On Gordon Field, at 8:45 p.m. Gen. Harris awarded the rotating Commanding General's Trophy to Company C, 1st Battle Group, 29th Infantry, 1st Infantry Brigade. All major units on the post, including the 2nd Infantry Division participated in the "Parade of Champions" conducted to select the 1961 winners of the trophy.

Seven events were included in the rugged competition to select the post's outstanding unit. The contest began with a cross country run and continued with platoon drill, and other competitive activities.

TAKES HIS TURN . . . Major Gen. Mercer C. Walter (R), Third Army deputy commanding general, waits in the chow line with ROTC cadet George D. Clark, Jr., Georgia Tech student, during a recent visit to post to observe the cadets and reserve components in their summer training program.

ARMY WEIGHT LIFTER . . . Artist's conception shows the cargo-carrying "kite" being developed for the Army by the Ryan Corporation in California. Made of cloth or plastic attached to three poles, the huge glider can be folded up when on the ground. Loads of up to 60 tons can be towed singly or in fleets by helicopters or planes.

Two-Phase Plan Offers Better NG and Reserve Mobilization

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — The Army has a two phase plan "to progressively improve" the deployment readiness of its National Guard and Reserve units.

The first phase of the plan, finding ways and means of achieving new readiness objectives, has been completed and the concept approved within the Army.

The second phase of the program concerns methods of applying the plan to specific reserve units.

At a Pentagon briefing an Army spokesman said a draft plan has been developed and is being reviewed by appropriate Army agencies.

He said "elements of the plan will then be presented to State Governors or their designated representatives for final approval."

There were three reasons given for realigning Guard and Reserve units:

The new division organization, referred to commonly as the ROAD division, will be standard to both the active Army and the reserve components. Reorganization of present divisions will require some realignment in the structure.

To close the time gap in deployment readiness postures between active Army units and top priority reserve units. (The Army said some 89,000 troops could be ready in three weeks under the plan.)

To make the reserve component structure more responsive to strategic plans.

It was pointed out that the plan to improve deployment readiness of reserve units is not intended as a substitute for a larger active Army.

Here is the way it was explained: "The prime mission of the active Army is to defend the forward areas of the free world and to provide a strategic reserve ready for instant deployment. The reserve structure supports and complements the active Army structure and posture."

What the Army proposes to do to attain the proposed readiness objectives includes five points:

An increase in paid drill strengths from 700,000 in fiscal 1962 to 735,000 in fiscal 1963 and 760,000 in fiscal 1964.

Authorization for selected units of an additional week of active duty field training and as many as nine multiple weekend drills.

An increased authorization for selected units of the number and type of technicians. (The units have not been selected as yet and will not be until after this summer's training, according to the Army.)

An increased materiel procurement program over the next several years.

An annual training program for 100,000 men in the Ready Reserve Reinforcement Pool. (Two weeks of summer active duty training with the unit to which they will be assigned as fillers.)

Briefly here are some of the adjustments contemplated by the Army in its reserve components and what it will involve:

Combat and combat support ing units which are now in the structure will be predesignated to round out the active Army organization. (The objective is to have these units ready for movement to forward areas within three weeks following mobilization.)

Selected brigades and combat battalions will be designated as elements of specific active Army divisions.

Two division forces with all their combat and combat support units will be authorized 100 per cent materiel and personnel manning levels; increased numbers of technicians and additional training periods.

An additional eight divisions with their combat and combat support units will have varying degrees of the principle plan applied to them. (The post-mobilization training objectives established for these divisions are from four to eight weeks.)

The Army said the present National Guard on-site Nike program will not be affected by the realignment of forces.

Republic of China Officers Present Banner to School

A silk banner of appreciation has been presented to The Infantry School by four Republic of China officers who attended the school's officer orientation, Ranger and Airborne courses this year.

Brig. Gen. A. D. Surles, Jr., assistant commandant of The Infantry School, accepted the gift on behalf of The School from Capt. Chun - ming Li, spokesman for the group.

The other donors were Capts. Chu Wang, K'ang — fu Ts'ao and Hsueh-yen Liu.

The green and yellow banner was inscribed with a quotation from a tribute to ancient Chinese philosopher Confucius from his students.

Educators To Observe Training

Next Wednesday and Thursday, July 12 and 13, the post will play host to 38 officials from colleges and universities who will come to observe the training of ROTC cadets and view some of The Infantry School's demonstrations during their annual visit to the post's ROTC Summer Camp.

Welcoming the officials to the camp will be Major Gen. Hugh P. Harris, commanding general of The Infantry Center and commandant of The Infantry School, who is also ROTC Camp Commander.

The program for the visit will include an orientation on the organization of The Infantry School followed by a briefing by Col. William J. McCaffrey, deputy camp commander. Highlighting the agenda will be the observation of Ranger training and demonstrations of artillery firing and a tank Infantry team in attack.

During their visit institutional representatives and their wives will be guests of the post at an official luncheon to be served at Victory Lodge.

The activities for the second day will close with a dinner meeting attended by cadets and officials from their respective institutions.

Army Hikes Bachelor's O'Seas Tour

Department of the Army has announced that normal overseas tour of bachelor personnel will be extended from 24 to 36 months effective August 1, in Hawaii and 11 European countries.

Officer and enlisted personnel serving in the following countries will be affected: Austria, Belgium, Denmark, France, Germany, Italy, the Netherlands, Norway, Portugal, Spain, and the United Kingdom.

Purpose of the extension is to reduce undesirable turnover and travel of personnel and to enhance training and combat efficiency.

In the event of hardship in individual cases overseas commanders will have the authority to grant exceptions.

The extension will not be applicable to personnel whose enlistment or other term of service normally would dictate a return to the United States earlier than the end of a 36-month tour of duty.

No appreciable difference in strength of Army forces overseas will result from the action, since there will be a corresponding reduction in the number of personnel shipped to those overseas areas.

Individual soldier on the post was Sgt. L. A. Warren of the 582nd Transportation Detachment, Lawson Army Aviation Command. Runners-up were Officer Candidate D. F. Supenski, 5th Student Battalion, Student Brigade, and SSgt. H. C. Mulford, 2nd Division.

Sgt. Warren was presented a $500 Savings Bond, while Candidate Supenski received a $150 bond and Sgt. Mulford a $50 bond.

As a tribute to the flag on Independence Day, a fifty-gun salute was fired at noon on Chapel field. A six-gun detail from the 2nd Howitzer Battalion, 10th Artillery, 1st Infantry Brigade, executed the impressive salute.

Five athletic contests were staged including archery, golf chipping, and baseball, football and basketball throws.

PLAQUE TO AUSTRALIANS . . . General Herbert B. Powell (L), commanding general of Continental Army Command, presents a plaque from The Infantry School to Lt. Gen. R. G. Pollard, chief of the Australian General Staff, during Battle of the Coral Sea Commemoration ceremonies at Canberra April 27. Gen. Pollard accepted the plaque on behalf of the Australian Infantry School.

RE-UP SIGN . . . The huge re-enlistment sign at the 806th Engineer Battalion, designed and painted by Sp4 Wilburn Grissum, depicts an Engineer doing a man's job. Sp4 Grissum has since departed for an assignment overseas.

Col. McLaren Talks On British Schools

The British education system was discussed by Lt. Col. John Stuart McLaren, British liaison officer at The Infantry School, at the June dinner meeting of the Fort Benning Armed Forces Management Association.

"Our system is often misunderstood and is certainly different from yours," he told the group in the Main Officers' Open Mess.

"By law in England, everybody has to attend school or receive a private education from the ages of five to 15. We are trying to raise the school leaving age from 15 to 16, but haven't been able to do so for two reasons, not enough school teachers and not enough accommodations," Col. McLaren explained.

"We hope to make this change within five years," he added.

The speaker pointed out that free primary schools are available for all children between five and 11, with costs of books and meals also paid by the government.

"There are also fee-paying schools normally known as preparatory schools. Their students are usually between 11 to 13. A considerable number are boarding schools," he said.

"Education at the preparatory schools certainly is more advanced. For instance, at the age of nine or 10 the student starts Latin and either French or German. These schools are almost 100 per cent all boys or all girls," he added.

The British officer noted that at the age of 11 the student takes "Eleven Plus Examinations" which determine his future schooling. The student can enter a county or secondary school, which is free, a grammar school which is part free and part fee, or a fee-paying "public school."

"Preparatory schools aim for the Common Entrance Exam for 'public schools,'" Col. McLaren continued.

"This examination has been tightened up considerably since the last war. The stupid boy will not go to one of our best schools however much influence his parents may have," he stressed.

He explained that the "public school" has the advantages of extremely small classes and high caliber instruction. Forty per cent of "public school" graduates go to a university, he continued, as compared with 20 per cent of county school graduates and 25 per cent of those who complete a grammar school.

"Clever students in the free schools are encouraged to try for scholarships. However, there is the problem of parents who do not want their boy to go on with his education," the speaker stated.

"Eighty per cent of the men and women at universities are helped by the state in some way. If the student has the brains and the ability, he has a chance to have a first-rate education," Col. McLaren emphasized.

He added that the school year extends from September to the end of July, with three weeks' holiday in December and four in April.

"Our examinations are taken at the end of the long term which ends in July," he said, adding that this conflicts with some of the most pleasant English weather but is necessary to fit in with the university year.

The speaker was introduced by Col. Dale D. Dixon, president of the Armed Forces Management Association.

Col. Dixon announced new chairmen of the chapter's standing committees.

They are John Gause, Infantry School and second vice president of the AFMA, finance chairman; Lt. Col. Thomas K. Goodman, deputy dental surgeon of The Infantry Center, arrangements chairman, and Lt. Col. Charles Austin, deputy commander of the 2nd Battle Group, 1st Infantry, 2nd Infantry Division, program chairman.

Col. McLendon and Col. Austin were introduced as new members of the group's executive council.

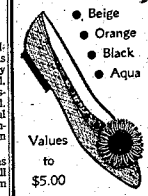
Interns Start One Year Of MAH Duty

Orientation day for 16 medical and four dental interns is scheduled for Tuesday, July 11, at Martin Army Hospital.

Col. David G. Eisner, hospital commander, and Col. Stuart M. Mitchell, post dental surgeon, will welcome the interns at 8:15 a.m. in the Main Conference Room.

Col. Eisner, who serves as director of intern training, will outline the over - all program for the coming year.

Chiefs of departments and heads of services will participate in the orientation. Topics to be presented include administrative details, supply, the scope or facilities, organization of the hospital, military courtesy and the proper wearing of the uniform.



During the afternoon, the interns will take a guided tour of the hospital.

The 20 interns are June graduates of medical and dental colleges throughout the nation. They were selected to serve a year in training as interns at Martin Hospital and with the Post Dental Service by provision of the surgeon general of the Army.

George Washington — Still Heeded

(Contributed By MSgt. Charlie Quinn)

"It may be laid down as a primary position and the basis of our American system, that every citizen who enjoys the protection of a free Government owes not only a proportion of his property but even his personal services to the defense of it.

"The citizens of America (with a few legal and official exceptions) from 15 to 60 years of age should be borne on militia rolls, provided with uniform arms, and as far accustomed to them that the total strength of the country might be called forth at short notice."

These views on a strong Army Reserve and its proficiency-in-arms were disclosed in a letter by Geo George Washington to a Congressional committee in 1783, some 168 years before the U. S. finally gave official approval to the concept of universal military training. The ultimate obligation of citizenship—the bearing of arms in defense of the community — became explicit with "The Universal Military Training and Service Act", an amendment to Public Law 51 adopted in 1951.

Today, even as Washington foresaw nearly 200 years ago, we do not indeed all our the young men. Yet we have over two million officers and men on inactive rolls.

In Washington's era, the "uniform arms" of which he wrote were the flintlock muskets of the period. By today's standards those old weapons could scarcely be termed as "uniform" but the commander-in-chief's referral to the general need for marksmanship skill is just as applicable today as it was nearly two centuries ago.

There was a time in our history when the American literally lived by the rifle; if he wasn't out hunting or fighting, he was guarding home and family while he worked. He was a member of any militia automatically.

As the personal need for the rifle disappeared, complacency crept in and today we are plagued by unknowing factions who would like to do away with firearms altogether.

Between the lines of Washington's letter we read of the extreme importance of the individual to the military scheme of things. Despite the weapons behind him, the individual importance of the steel-helpreted Infantryman of this nuclear age has not decreased one whit from that of his forebear in the tri-corn hat.

Wars are fought and won by individuals — the leading element in combat is Man, himself. The decisive factor in battle is the individual man-rifle team. Tomorrow it may be the man-raygun team and, the day team.

Don't Get in the Bastille, Bastille

Pfc Wilfred Bastille, Headquarters Company, The Student Brigade, claims he is going "all out" to celebrate Bastille Day, July 14. He says that the Bastille in Paris was not named for any of his ancestors, and admits that he did not help to storm the prison when it was destroyed during the French Revolution in 1789, but he still intends to celebrate regardless. His job? Legal clerk in Student Brigade Headquarters, right across from the post stockade.

BONDS Build Our Nation's Defensive Strength

Gets Temporary MAH Command

Col. David G. Eisner assumed command of Martin Army Hospital Wednesday, pending the arrival of Col. William A. Todd Jr., who has been named commander of the hospital.

Col. Todd is chief of the Department of Surgery at Madigan Army Hospital in Tacoma, Wash. He is expected to arrive on post August 14.

He will succeed Col. Bryan C. T. Fenton, who departed Tuesday for an assignment in Korea.

Editorial

The Careless Season-- June Through September

One of the greatest pleasures any man can hope to achieve is complete relaxation—the total absence of nervous strain and tension. We live in a world of speed and noise and tumult. Comes summer and we make plans to get away from it all—but in too many cases the planning generates new pressures and drains on our energies.

Nothing bears this out more than the seasonal accident-rate as people flock to the beaches and mountains, intent on getting the most out of a vacation. Often it seems that some of them are on a holiday from elementary good sense—they drive too fast and recklessly, they drink immoderately, they play too hard. Result: Exhaustion, jangled nerves, mental fatigue.

It's possible to genuinely relax while being careful to observe simple rules of health and safety. Caution in swimming and boating, avoidance of overexposure to sun, sensible eating habits—these all make for maximum enjoyment of a vacation. The serviceman who surrenders himself to the pleasure and novelty of unaccustomed surroundings, content to drift with the currents of nature at midsummer, is nourished by the best of all tonics—peace of mind. Chaplain's Corner

One of the greatest needs of the world today is an appreciation for the virtue of justice. The value of justice can be measured by the evil of injustice. The unjust man despises the rights and person of his fellowman.

He takes what is not his without regard for the rights of others. The money, the good name, even property. All injustice is a threat to the peace and order of human social living.

As the number of injustices increase the stability of social life dies. Men lose their incentive to work. Suspicion replaces trust and love in the hearts of men. The law of force and cunning replaces the law of justice.

The Communists say that Christnity has been in existence for 2000 years and still there are many injustices in the world. Surely they say, Christianity must not be the answer. Yet, it is not that Christianity has been tried and found wanting.

In most instances Christianity has not been tried. Even with people who are most religious, an examination of conscience is frequently needed regarding the practice of the virtues of justice and our concern for our fellow men.

Justice by definition is that habit by which a man respects the rights of others. Not just those rights that are pleasing to him at the moment but all rights given him by all law whether human or divine.

A just man clearly reasons that since he has been made by God and all that he has, has been given him by God, he must readily return to God a debt of gratitude. And so, a just man is a religious man not ashamed to acknowledge publicly his thanks to his Creator.

A just may pays his bills, does not acquire debts he will be unable to pay. A just man is truthful; he does his work conscientiously and keeps all promises. In short a just man respects all the rights of others.

When justice reigns there is peace in the hearts of men.

The Judge Says . . .

POWERS OF ATTORNEY
By 1st Lt. Bernard E. Burk

"You mean to tell me that my wife can sell my car without my permission just because I gave her a general power of attorney?" —"Do I need a will if I have given my wife a power of attorney?". These are some of the questions often asked of the Legal Assistance Officer.

The purpose of this article will be to acquaint the soldier with the scope and use of powers of attorney.

First, a power of attorney is an instrument authorizing a person to act as the agent or attorney of the person granting it. It is often called a letter of attorney.

Two Types

There are two classifications of powers of attorney; the general and the special (or limited) power of attorney. Both instruments authorize one person to act for the grantor.

The general power of attorney can be dangerous for the grantor if given to an irresponsible person, for it authorizes that person, on behalf of the grantor, to buy, receive, lease, accept, or otherwise acquire; to sell, convey, mortgage... or otherwise encumber or dispose of; or to contract or agree for the acquisition, disposal or encumberance of; any property whatsoever and wheresoever situated, be it real, personal or mixed..." This instrument also authorizes the agent of the grantor to "make or endorse checks in the name of the grantor and to make deposits or investments in, or withdrawals from any account of the grantor".

However, these are not the only authorities given the agent in a general power of attorney. The general power of attorney allows the agent to act for and in the name of the grantor in almost every type of transaction.

On the other hand, the special or limited power of attorney only allows the agent to handle a particular transaction and that one transaction is defined. For example, the grantor may draw up a special power of attorney authorizing his agent to sell his car, to ship his household goods, etc., The grantor has spelled out the limits of authority and the agent has no power to do anything else.

Termination

The power of attorney is terminated by its expiration date, by the death of the grantor or the agent and by notice of termination recorded in the court house where the power of attorney was recorded. Third persons who act without notice of an unrecorded revocation may be justified in presuming that the power still exists.

Copy to Agent

It is a good practice to give a copy of the written revocation to the agent and get him to sign a receipt. Also, it is best to recover all unused copies of the power of attorney.

A will and a power of attorney are not the same thing. The power of attorney stops at the death of the grantor whereas a will goes into effect at the death of the testator. So, a person has not made a last will and testament giving all his property to, for example, his wife, when he makes out a power of attorney naming his wife as agent.

It is suggested that when possible, a special power of attorney be used instead of the general type. For further information concerning powers of attorney, contact the Legal Assistance Officer.

Red Letter Day

Last Saturday was a big day for Pfc Joseph L. Marozzi of Headquarters Company, 1st Infantry Brigade. The brigade headquarters clerk had just successfully completed the testing for his Expert Infantryman's Badge and had the badge pinned on by Col. Charles T. Horner Jr., the brigade commander, when he was called again to report to the commander. This time he emerged ready to sew on new stripes — promoted to specialist fourth class.

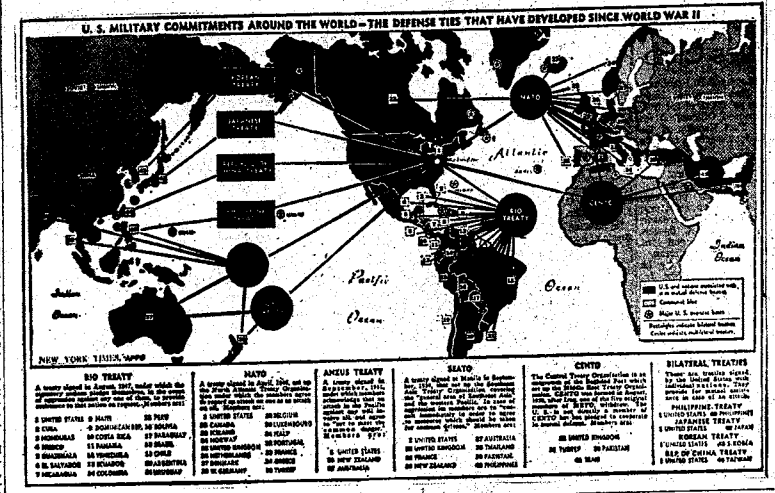
No Tragic Accidents Mar 4th

Post drivers came through the dangerous Fourth of July week-end with flying colors, the post's Safety Director, Norman M. Evans announced Wednesday.

"Despite a near all-time record toll of fatalities which was rolled up on the nation's highways," he said, "just two minor incidents were recorded out of the thousands of Fort Benning motorists who were on the road over the four-day period."

Final compilation of holiday reports revealed that one driver sustained a shaking up when he lost a wheel of his vehicle while the second was of lesser nature, Evans said.

The post's Safety Director credited the outstanding mark to be a result of the continuing program of safety orientation carried out by all commanders.



"The matter of personal safety in all its phases is continually stressed," he said, "but highway safety is particularly emphasized upon the approach of each of our holidays."

He said that military personnel and their dependents are becoming increasingly aware of the dangers and especially of the dangers of "letting down their guards" after a busy holiday.

Scholastic Honors

Miss Kathleen DeYoung, daughter of Col. & Mrs. Edward M. DeYoung, has been named on the Honors List for the second semester this year at Wesleyan College where she will be a member of the Junior class this fall.

To attain the Honors List, a student must have an average of B in all subjects.

Allies Singled Out for Praise in Gen. Yeager's Address

"Your attendance here strengthens the basic bonds of freedom in the Western world," Major Gen. Walter B. Yeager, commanding general of the XII Army Reserve Corps in Atlanta, told 20 Allied officers among 199 graduates of The Infantry School's Associate Officer Career Class 3 recently.

The general then told the class about the contributions of the 15 NATO countries to global peace.

The Allied students represented Afghanistan, Colombia, Indonesia, Japan, Lebanon, Pakistan, Saudi Arabia, Thailand, Republic of Vietnam and Turkey.

Capt. Kenneth L. Skuer was named honor graduate. He has been assigned to the 1st Battle Group, 12th Infantry, 4th Infantry Division at Fort Lewis, Wash.

"The nations in NATO are committed to the protection of the lands and peoples of the great area of Western Europe," Gen. Yeager told the group.

"The officers and men of NATO work together with a dedicated singleness of purpose which is contributive to the strong deterrent to aggression which NATO has always been. Not one inch of ground in the NATO countries has fallen to the enemy since NATO was established," he emphasized.

"NATO is truly an international command. It is not a paper organization. It is combat ready and ever on the alert," the speaker continued.

Gen. Yeager explained the command structure of the organization, going into detail on the activities of Allied Forces, Southern Europe, which encompasses Italy, Greece and Turkey.

The two-star general formerly served as G-3 of the Army Element of MAAG (Military Assistance Advisory Group), Greece.

He pointed out that "the Marshall Plan has helped in the economic regeneration of Italy. Military aid has helped in the stimulation of her Army but the magnificent spirit of the Italian people really pulled them through."

He noted that guerilla was was not effectively put down in Greece until 1949. "Greece has one of the toughest combat Armies. Its Army is rich in state tradition and esprit de corps" Gen. Yeager said.

"Turkey has a history of contact with Russia almost longer than that of any other nation. Another of her problems is her complexity of climate and geography. Practically every variety of terrain and climate is found within its borders," he added.

"No one doubts the ability of the Turkish soldier, particularly those who observed him in Korea. His courage is boundless; his tenacity and skill are almost amazing," Gen. Yeager concluded.

LET'S TRY IT THIS WAY . . . Cadets from the Air Force Academy at Colorado Springs attempt to solve some of the 16 tasks included in The Infantry School's Leader's Reaction Course during their four-day training visit to the post which ended July 2. The tasks are devised to test the student's organizational ability in moving equipment and men over obstacles using material normally available in the field, and call for decisiveness, judgment, enthusiasm, initiative, unselfishness and endurance. Purpose of the course is to assist the young leader in becoming a better leader. The Air Force Cadets performed the 15-minute tests as part of their visit to increase understanding of the role of the Infantry, for better inter-service coordination and national teamwork.

Simple Precautions in The Use of Power Mowers

This year more than 18,000,000 families will be cutting their lawns with power lawn mowers.

In fact, power lawn mowers have helped make suburban living more fun by eliminating the backbreaking chore of pushing a hand mower around the family green. As a result, since the end of World War II, the number of power lawn mowers in use has increased from about 1,000,000 units to the present figure.

Like any other piece of mechanized equipment, the power lawn mower should be treated with care to prevent accidents.

To help users handle their equipment properly, an engines corporation offers a few suggestions.

Most accidents occur, its experts say, when users of power lawn mowers try to repair them with engines running, or spark plug connected.

So, for safety's sake, they advise:

Always disconnect the spark plug before starting any work around your mower, even on as a simple a job as removing a stone or twig from the cutter blades.

It's also a good idea, they add, to disconnect the plug when the mower is not in use. Such a practice will prevent children from starting it up accidentally.

Other suggestions:

When using a rotary mower in tall grasses or weeds, slow down the engine speed to prevent damage to cutter blades and crankshaft if the cutter blade should hit a rock or other stationary object.

Periodically during the cutting season, clean and inspect the power mower to make sure all nuts and bolts are tightened. On rotary-type mowers, make sure the underdeck is kept clean. Don't let grass clippings collect there.

When starting mower, keep feet and hands away from cutter blades.

Don't let the children use the power mower as a playtoy.

If you plan on buying a new power mower this summer, buy one with built-in safety features. When buying, check to make sure that the engine has variable speeds to adjust to different cutting needs; is equipped with a ductile iron crankshaft which tends to absorb shock rather than snap off when the blades hit a stationary object; has operating controls on the handle and is sturdily reinforced at vital points. By observing these suggestions, you will not only keep your lawn in shape but yourself, too.

The Story of Your Amazing Skin And How to Properly Care For It

It's the body's largest organ — one of the most ingenious collections of "equipment" on the face of the earth — yet few people really know how the skin works, why skin problems arise, or what to do about them.

If you are average, you have about 17 square feet of skin which weighs a little more than six pounds. Its thickness ranges from 1-8th to 1-32nd of an inch. The skin has between two and three million sweat glands. Many people think that these glands put out visible perspiration only when the body needs to be cooled, but actually the process is more complex.

Most of us are probably always sweating. Scientists call it "imperceptible perspiration" which cannot readily be seen. We also sweat in reaction to emotional situations, like anger or fear or excitement. Sweating caused by high environmental temperatures is more familiar to most of us.

When the temperature is high enough, blood in the skin becomes heated, and heads for the temperature - regulation center in the brain. There a message is sent to the skin: increase perspiration. And increase it does as the sweat glands go into action. The process is continuous, even though we aren't always aware of it. Even during the cooler months, our sweat glands perspire about a quart a day.

In addition to temperature regulation, the skin performs a variety of other useful functions. Most people, for example, have heard that the top layer of skin is made up of dead cells. They can't be easily infected, and therefore serve as an invaluable shield against bacteria, viruses and other threats to health.

Another little known skin function is performed by highly specialized cells in the skin that produce a pigment—melanin — which is responsible for darkening the skin. Oddly, though many people believe that this darkening is entirely responsible for increasing the body's resistance to sun, actually the thickening of the skin is also responsible.

In fact, a thick skin is an excellent defense against sunburn and for good reason. For the injury the sun can do is remarkable, when you consider how people rush to get a suntan in the summertime.

Prominent determatologists maintain that fashionable women, who regard a deep brown suntan as essential, should be informed that sun can cause premature aging. They also blame a dry, coarse, and leathery appearance of the skin, pigmentary changes and wrinkling on too much exposure to the sun.

The villain is the sun's ultraviolet rays. If you know your way around the spectrum you know that it is the short ultraviolet rays that cause burning, and the long ones that permit tanning.

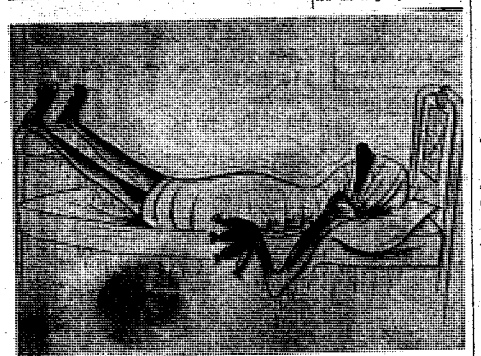
The dermatologists do not recommend carrying a parasol to protect you from sun the rest of your life. Their advice is: get a suntan gradually, over short periods. And they note that suntan lotions provide considerable safety. A suntan lotion, to be effective, must selectively screen out the short ultraviolet rays and allow the long rays in.

Knowing something of how your skin works and the injury you can suffer from too much sun can help you both acquire a tan and prevent being burned.

Getting a tan helps — but is not always highly effective. The color of your skin — its pigment — can keep out some of the rays. This is why blondes and red-heads and people with freckles, who have light pigmentation, are more sensitive to the sun than brunettes and people with dark skin.

But even with a tan, many persons must still limit their stay in the sun, particularly when the sun is high in the sky. Getting tan properly is simply a matter of moderation — exposing yourself for short periods and gradually increasing your exposure time as your skin thickens.

And you get a thicker skin and increased pigment from the ultraviolet rays — the same rays which coincidentally also make you tan. As your skin thickens it becomes harder for the burning ultraviolet rays to penetrate.



Use a good suntan agent.

Do not over-expose yourself to ultraviolet rays. This is harder than you think. The rays can be completely reflected back to you by water, sand or snow.

Clouds can disperse the rays, but they don't absorb them, which is why you can get burned on a misty morning. The rays are more potent the higher you are, the closer to the equator you are, the clearer the day, and the more directly overhead the sun is.

Give your skin the treatment it deserves. After all, where would you be without it?

The Pharmacy--Supply Source

By Capt. Lawrence H. Mancini
MSC

The primary purpose of the Pharmacy Service is to act as a source of supply from which wards, clinics and dispensaries may obtain drugs and medicines as required. In addition, the pharmacy dispenses directly to outpatients such preparations as are prescribed.

The pharmacy at Martin Army Hospital is easily accessible through the clinic entrance of the hospital and is adjacent to the central appointment desk waiting room. It consists of the dispensing room where outpatient prescriptions are received, filled and dispensed; the ward order room where the daily ward orders are filled for delivery; and a large walk-in vault in which drug items under control such as narcotics, barbiturates, alcohols, etc., are stored.

In addition to these facilities the pharmacy also operates a manufacturing laboratory on the third floor of Building 396 in the old hospital area where the major portion of bulk pharmaceutical preparations, such as cough medicines, ointments, and capsules are compounded and packaged.

All prescriptions are filled at Martin Army Hospital by either registered pharmacists who are graduates of recognized colleges of pharmacy and licensed to practice in one or more of the states, or by Army trained pharmacy specialists.

At the present time the Pharmacy Service at Martin Army Hospital is processing an average of 25,000 prescriptions per month or about 850 prescriptions daily. In view of this tremendous work load for such a small staff, it is requested that patients when leaving their prescriptions to be filled, be seated in the waiting area until the pharmacist calls their name to present them with their medicine.

Strict adherance to this policy will reduce the waiting time to a minimum by allowing the filling process to be uninterrupted; permit and enhance the series of checks which must be made as a control measure; and insure that the completed prescription is delivered immediately to the patient for whom it was prescribed.

Prescriptions written by civilian physicians or dentists for personnel eligible for military medical care will be honored at Martin Army Hospital under the following policy:

When the physician or dentist is practicing in the Columbus-Phenix City area; when the physician or dentist has a signature card on file in the Martin Army Hospital Pharmacy, and when the Pharmacy regularly stocks the items prescribed.

Certain pharmaceutical preparations have been authorized by the hospital commander to be dispensed without the benefit of a prescription. These include such items as aspirin, APCs, nose drops, cough syrup and calamine lotion which may be obtained by simply requesting them from the pharmacist on duty at the window from which prescriptions are issued.

The hours of operation for the pharmacy are from 8 a.m. until 6 p.m. Monday through Friday. On Saturday the pharmacy is open from 8 a.m. until 1 p.m.

Pistol Firing Is Too Much Noise for Ears

By MSgt Charles A. Quinn

Are you a victim of headaches, sinus trouble or jumpy nerves? If you are, heavy caliber pistol competition is not for you, according to Capt. Neil E. Pennington of the Preventive Medicine Division of Martin Army Hospital.

The officer's remarks came after he measured the sound level of some 60 .45 caliber pistols fired by marksmen engaged in the 1961 Army Rifle and Pistol Matches which ended at The Infantry Center last month.

"The needle of my meter slammed against the 105 decile peg and stayed there throughout the 10 seconds of a rapid fire string of five shots," Capt. Pennington reported, "although I was positioned 10 yards behind the firing line."

80 is Injurious

Sustained exposure to noise rated at 80 decibes, he said, is considered to be injurious and noted that some method of protective aid is mandatory for the pistol shooter.

Until recently, he said, pistol marksmen resorted to all types of makeshift protection, including cotton wads and even brass cartridge cases, to reduce danger to their eardrums.

During his visit to the pistol range, Capt. Pennington noted today's Army handgun competitors are using a newly devised protector which looks much like oversize radio earphones.

A check with the Third Army Pistol Team captain, Capt. Clyde R. Metts, brought out that these new aids cut the noise of heavy pistols down to a faint popping and are becoming standard equipment for all army squads.

Concussion is Next

"This is a battle only half won", Capt. Metts said, "for our second hurdle is concussion."

The muzzle blast of a single service pistol is tremendous. Sixty of the heavy weapons firing 300 shots in 10 seconds is enough to cause the casual visitor to cringe.

Capt. Metts added that the trained marksman calls upon his eyes, nerves, muscles and powers of coordination and concentration to a greater degree perhaps than does any athlete and must learn to disregard concussion.

"If he jumped at every shot," the Third Army Pistol Team captan said, "he'd never hit the side of a barn."

Gen. White Takes Command of Div.

BY DIV PIO

Brigadier General Charles Henry White Jr. has assumed command of the 2nd Infantry Division, succeeding retiring Brigadier General William L. Hardick.

General White is expected to serve in command until the arrival August 8 of Brigadier General Royal Reynolds, the division's new assistant commanding general. General Reynolds will man the number one post until the division's designated commanding general, Major General Charles H. Chase, arrives August 17.

To New Post

Following the arrival of General Reynolds, General White will prepare for departure to his new assignment with the Army Air Defense Command at Ent Air Force Base, Colorado. General White will serve there as deputy chief of staff, logistics, J-4.

General White, 49, is a 1934 graduate of the U. S. Military Academy and a native of Plattsburg Barracks, New York.

He was promoted to his present rank on April 1, 1960, after assuming command on March 1, 1960, of Division Artillery.

General White's previous assignment was as Chief of Staff of the Joint United States Military Aid Group in Greece. He earlier served as the Chief of Staff of the Group's Army Section.

West Point

Following graduation from the U.S. Military Academy, General White served with the 6th Field Artillery Regiment at Fort Hoyle, Maryland. Upon completion of the Artillery School at Fort Sill, Okla., in 1939, he was assigned as a battery commander in the 77th Field Artillery Battalion on the same post.

His next assignment took him to Fort Ord, California, in 1941, where he served with the 7th Infantry Division's 49th Field Artillery Battalion.

General White was in the original cadre of the 96th Infantry Division in 1942 and remained with the 96th through World War II in training out the west coast and in combat in the Pacific. His various duties included Division Artillery S-3 and Division G-3 while in training and later the Division Chief of Staff overseas and during the Leyte and Okinawa campaigns.

After the war, General White's assignments included duty in the G-3 section of Headquarters, Army Forces, Western Pacific, in the Philippines; the Personnel and Administration Division, War Department General Staff, and General Staff United States Army in Washington, D. C., from 1947 to 1950.

In July 1950, he was assigned as assistant chief of staff, G-1, of the 1st Cavalry Division in Japan and Korea. Following this he was assigned as Deputy Chief of Staff of VII Corps upon its activation at Fort Meade, Maryland, and later in Germany.

In January 1953, he was assigned as the initial commander of the 42nd Field Artillery Group of Seventh U. S. Army which he activated in Ger-

Good-Bye

Brigadier General William L. Hardick waves farewell to the division he commanded. Following a traditional, informal ceremony at his home, Gen. and Mrs. Hardick departed for Berwick, Pennsylvania, to visit their daughter and her family. 2 Win, More Show For Div in Carnival

BY DIV PIO

A 2nd Division unit—Division Artillery—walked off with top honors in two events and five other units made praise-worthy showings in the July 4th Youth Activities Club Carnival at Main Post.

Division Artillery placed highest in two events — "Jeep" driving and grenade throwing.

Parade

Sergeant First Class Henry L. Mulford, of the 2nd Engineer Battalion, placed third in the individual competition called "Parade of Champions." No man in division placed higher in this event.

Judges watching the "Jeep" driving contest stated that Divisional Artillery showed the "best driving they had ever seen."

Specialist Five Wesley F. Peters, 7th Cavalry, brought the cavalrymen a tie for second place in grenade throwing. Division Artillery was first in the event.

Rifle Matches

Sergeant First Class Joseph Partiasepe and Sergeant Pardee of the 9th Infantry both helped bring their unit up to third place in stiff competition in the rifle matches. The 23rd Infantry, represented by Sergeant First Class Marvin Wing and Sergeant Gary Weatherhead, came in fourth.

Another fourth place was racked up by Specialist Four 2nd B. Courtright, driving his quarter-ton in the "Jeep" competition.

The holiday's competition was rounded off by a speed march in which the 11th Infantry placed fifth.

Overdue 29 Years, Book Returns to 9th

BY 9TH INF. PIO

Worn and tattered, its pages turning yellow from age, a volume of James Fenimore Cooper's little-known sea tales was returned to Sand Hill after being 29 years overdue from the 9th Infantry's now-defunct Company H.

The book, a work by Cooper named "Wing and Wing," was checked out from the H Company library in 1932 by Winfield Gibson and had rested through the ensuing years in the attic of Mr. Gibson's home in Columbus.

Nostalgia

The 467-page volume recalled many pleasant memories for Mr. Gibson, reminding him of the bygone days when he was a member of the 9th Infantry nearly three decades past. At that time the 9th Infantry was garrisoned at Fort Sam Houston, Texas.

Mr. Gibson returned the book last week when he attended the retirement ceremonies for Brigadier General William L. Hardick at Wetherby Field. Mr. Gibson discovered the old volume recently while cleaning out his attic.

Mr. Gibson was a member of the 9th Infantry's Company H of the 2nd Battalion under the old Army Regimental system used in the early 1930's.

Korea Bowl Nostalgic Momento

By 23rd Infantry PIO

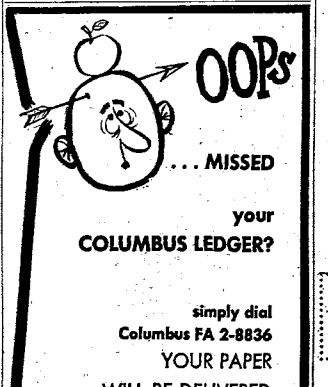
Members of the 23rd Infantry were reminded last week of one of their unit's most distinguished tributes to wartime endeavor.

The occasion arose when Captain Charles Lee of the 2220 Army Garrison, a reserve outfit in Palm Beach, Florida, dropped by the 23rd's trophy room to see the Korean Bowl.

Responsible

Captain Lee was assigned to the 23rd in 1953 when it was in Korea, and among his duties was the responsibility of the safety of the unit's 220-pound silver ceremonial bowl.

Housed at the regimental officer's club, the massive container was formed from 5,610 silver combat infantryman badges donated by the then members of the 23rd Regiment.



The idea for the bowl was conceived in 1951. It was to serve as a lasting memorial to the members of the 23rd Regiment during the war in Korea.

The bowl, when completed by Japanese craftsmen in 1952, was 36 inches in diameter, nearly 24 inches high, weighed 220 pounds and contained 188.6 pounds of pure silver. A saucer-like silver tray some 41 inches in diameter complemented the bowl. Estimated value of the Korea Bowl has been placed at $25,000.

Capt. Lee was disappointed when he learned that the bowl was now located with the 23rd Infantry's 1st battle group in Alaska, but he was glad to pass on first-hand knowledge of the bowl's origin and history. He said he made several motor trips through the Korean countryside with the bowl in the back seat. "Luckily, the bowl and I weren't captured," he laughed.

Div. Museum Receives Collection From Indianhead Assn. Member

By Div PIO

A number of personal World War I mementos belonging to a former member of the 15th Field Artillery have been donated to the 2nd Infantry Division Museum.

The items were the property of Fred J. Bonnert of Scranton, Pennsylvania, an active member of the Indianhead Association.

Included in the collection is the personal scrapbook of Mr. Bonnert which contains the original telegram that was sent to his parents by the War Department, telling them that their son had been "severely wounded."

Several copies of World War I issues of the Star and Stripes containing stories about the 2nd Division activities are included in the collection in addition to a copy of the The Contie, the 9th Infantry newspaper at that time.

"The Indian"

Another item is a bound collection of The Indian, the magazine of the division during World War I.

Five framed photographs of World War I scenes, including a picture of the 15th Field Artillery at Pine Camp, N.Y., and one of then Secretary of the Navy Josephus Daniels addressing 2nd Infantry Division Troops at Valldeam, Germany, April 18, 1919, were donated.

Other scenes are those of the famed Chateau Thiery area and the American cemetery there.

17th Picks Musiano

Specialist Four Joseph A. Musiano, Headquarters Battery, 7th Howitzer Battalion, 17th Artillery has been chosen Battalion Soldier of the Month for May and June.

Musiano, an Ordnance Supply Specialist, was selected to be Colonel's Orderly at two Division Artillery Guard Mounts in June.

4 Tankers Gain Expert Badges

Four tankers of the 2nd Medium Tank Battalion, 69th Armor, have been awarded Expert badges for their proficiency at crew firing the tank's 90-millimeter gun and machine guns.

The men are Staff Sergeant Clement J. Palko, Specialist Five Donald L. Allen, Specialist Five Richard Knight and Private Jose F. Castro.

The awards were given for firing done during the tank battalion's recent testing at Fort Stewart, Georgia. All four men had scores of 1935.

Twenty four men received the Sharpshooter badge, with scores ranging from 1545 to 1634.

He Rode 1,400 Miles ---On a Motor Scooter

BY 69TH ARMOR PIO

To the Army's search for greater mobility, Specialist Four Chester Pszenny, of 69th Armor, has added a new chapter.

Pszenny has proved that the motor scooter is practical for economical, safe, long distance off-duty transportation. He did it by riding his 220-pound machine from his home in Danvers, Massachusssetts, to Fort Benning—a distance of nearly 1,400 miles.

Sandwiches

Pszenny started his trip on the air-conditioned, scenic route early this month. Provisioned with three loaves of sandwiches (ham, peanut butter and tomato) and two quarts of milk, Pszenny left Danvers on a Tuesday. By 3 a.m. Wednesday, he had entered New York City.

Then he ran into a trolley line which projected two or three inches above the pavement and his scooter flipped. Pszenny rolled 25 feet.

When he got up he discovered he had picked a good place to turn over. He was between a hospital and a service station and the local dealer for his model scooter had an office four blocks away. The accident had damaged the fenders and bent the steering column. It hadn't damaged Pszenny.

By 8 p.m., Pszenny was on his way again. He crossed the George Washington Bridge in a heavy rain and rolled into New Jersey. After a night at a motel, he rode on. Before he left New Jersey, he picked up a passenger and took him to the Pennsylvania Turnpike.

'To Georgia?'

"You mean you're going all the way to Georgia?" the passenger asked.

By Thursday night, Pszenny was in Maryland. After another night in a motel, he left next morning and picked up a passenger in Washington.

Pszenny took him to Richmond, Virginia, where, in the best tradition of the 69th Armor's Maintenance minded soldiers, Pszenny made a half-day maintenance stop.

Outwitting a mule, which led up traffic for some distance in its efforts to keep Pszenny from passing, he rode on to Columbia, S. C. He arrived in Columbia Saturday morning.

By Sunday night he had reached Columbus. In Augusta, he had picked up another passenger.

"You mean you've come all the way from Massachusetts?" the passenger asked.

Though "a little slow," Pszenny feels the motor scooter is an economical vehicle for the soldier on leave. He spent $16 for motel rooms and $7 for gasoline and oil.

He didn't say what the sandwiches cost.

CONTINUES STUDY IN NEW YORK . . . Miss Rossie Gilmore, Fort Benning Ballet dance director, will study at the National Academy of Ballet this month. She is an active member of the Ballet Guild of Columbus.

Benning Ballet Instructress Studies Dance At Academy

Miss Rossie Gilmore, dance director of the Fort Benning Ballet, sponsored by the Officers Wives' Club of the 2nd Infantry Division, will be in New York City this month.

She will attend the National Academy of Ballet, a non-profit educational institution chartered under the education laws of New York State. She will study under Alexander Bennett of the Royal Ballet Company, Convent Garden, England.

Dance teachers, like public school teachers, must take refresher courses in order to keep up with the newest developments of the dance. The National Academy of Ballet is one of the two national organizations of ballet teachers only. The other is the Cecchetti Council of America.

Instruction

Competent ballet instruction can give a child good posture, co-ordination, strength and most important, poise. Leading ballet teachers and physicians agree that a child will benefit from ballet lessons only if her teacher is qualified.

Miss Gilmore is a permanent resident of Columbus. This will be her fourth season as director of the Fort Benning Ballet. She is an active member of the Ballet Guild of Columbus which presents a program each year at the Royal Theatre. Advanced pupils are eligible to participate with this group.

Jean Smith will be on the faculty again this season. She has just returned from Florida where she attended dance classes at the Jack Stanley

Miss Claudia Jean Rogers, daughter of Captain and Mrs. James B. Rogers, became the bride of Thomas Vetack, of Newark, N.J., Saturday, at the Post Catholic Chapel.

Captain Rogers, father of the bride, is S-4 for the 2nd Engineer Battalion.

The double ring ceremony took place at the Post Catholic Chapel, officiated by Lieutenant Colonel Edwin Curran, chaplain. The Chapel was decorated with jade foliage interspersed with arrangements of pink and white carnations.

Attendants

Serving as maid of honor was the bride's sister, Miss Kathleryn Rogers. The bridesmaids included Miss Eileen Vetack, sister of the groom, Miss Patricia Shipp and Miss Edith Duffy.

They wore lavender street-length dresses and carried nosegays of pink and white carnations.

The bride wore a gown of white chantilly lace and taffeta. With a fitted bodice, it featured a scalloped neckline and long tapered sleeves which extended into calla points at the wrists. Iridescents were sprayed on the floor length skirt, accented in the back with a large bow caught to a flowing panel that formed the chapel train.

Miss Rogers was given in marriage by her father. Richard Zalmanski was best man.

The ceremony was followed by a wedding breakfast given by the bride's parents at Custer Terrace Officers' Club.

That afternoon a reception was given for the newlyweds at the club. It was attended by approximately 150 guests.

Following a wedding trip to Florida, Mr. and Mrs. Vetack will reside in Columbus.

Change-of-Command Held at 9th Infantry

By 9th Inf. PIO

A veteran of more than 20 years' military service and a former member of the 2nd Infantry Division, Colonel C. P. Hannum assumed command of the 9th Infantry's 2nd Battle Group on June 29.

A native of Indiana, Colonel Hannum succeeded Colonel James L. Oggard as commander of the Manchu Battle Group.

Advanced Steadily

Commissioned as a second Lieutenant in January 1941, Colonel Hannum fought throughout World War II in the Southwest Pacific Theater of Operations with the 126th Infantry Regiment of the 32nd Infantry Division. He advanced steadily in rank and at 25 years of age was a Lieutenant Colonel when the war ended in 1945.

With the 126th Infantry, Colonel Hannum participated in campaigns in New Guinea, Luzon, Papua, Leyte, and Morotai. He earned the Silver star, the Bronze Star for valor, and the Combat Infantryman's Badge.

The colonel joined the 2nd Infantry Division at Fort Lewis, Washington in 1946. He remained with the "Second to None" Division as Assistant G-3 until released from active duty in June 1947.

Taking advantage of the break in military service to complete his education, he graduated from the University of Indiana. He returned to active duty on New Year's Day 1949 and spent four months as Assistant G-3 of the 17th Airborne Division at Camp Pickett, Virginia.

Capital

He spent the next 12 months in the Office of the Secretary of the Army in Washington, D. C., and from April 1950 to late August 1952 the colonel was assigned to the Office of the Assistant Chief of Staff, G-2, in the nation's capital.

Following his graduation from the Command and General Staff College at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, in August 1953, he went to Europe for a 4-month stint in the Office of the Commander-in-Chief, U. S. Army Forces, Europe, in Heidelberg, Germany.

The next nine months were spent with the 5th Infantry Division in Germany where he served as a Battalion Commander, Regimental Executive Officer, and Regimental Commander.

United States

Colonel Hannum returned to the United States in March 1955, spending five months with the Military District of Washington as Assistant G-3. After attending the Armed Forces Staff College in Norfolk, Virginia in 1955-1957, he returned to the Military District of Washington as Deputy G-3. He was promoted to Colonel in October, 1958.

From July 1958 to June 1960 he served with the Korean Military Advisory Group as G-3. He was graduated from the National War College at Fort Leslie J. McNair, Washington, D. C. just prior to assuming command of the "Keep Up the Fire" Ninth Infantry.

Colonel and Mrs. Hannum reside at 405 Baltzell Avenue.

Jordanian Linguist With Flying Yen Received Free Education in Kuwait

By 23rd Inf. PIO

A 20-year old linguist from Jordan with a yen for flying is currently undergoing Advanced Individual Training with Company E, 23rd Infantry.

Yasin Abdulah, who speaks Spanish, Hebrew and English in addition to his native Arabic, entered the Army in February of this year and hopes to get into the Army flying program.

Abdullah says he picked up his knowledge of Spanish from talking with his cousin's Spanish wife. He learned Hebrew from having grown up in Jerusalem, where he was born. He attributes his English to his many relatives living in the United States, including his parents.

Military Lessons

This is not the young Jordanian's first experience in the military. "When was in school in Jordan, a sergeant in our army would come to the towns each week and conduct military lessons for the men," he said. Abdullah added that the classes generally were on how to disassemble and assemble weapons (British-made) and movies on military topics.

After finishing high school in Jordan Adbullah went to the tiny, oil-rich country of Kuwait, where he attended Kuwait College for a year. Here oil royalties enabled the government to pay all expenses for students attending the college, including food, clothing and books, he said.

Abdullah liked the free education in Kuwait, but he didn't care for its etemperature. "It's very hot there; too hot to study, even with air conditioning. It's much hotter than Fort Benning, even," he said with a smile.

Abdullah's plans for the future are centered around his desire to be a pilot. He hopes to enter Army Aviation after AIT or, if that is not possible, to attend the Army Language School.

Armor Drivers Awarded Badges

Three men of the 2nd Medium Tank Battalion, 69th Armor have been awarded the drivers badge for their proficiency with wheeled vehicles.

The man, all from Company C, are Specialist Four Emmet C. Bishop, Specialist Five Wendell Clapp and Specialist Four Lawless J. Gerad.

Private First Class Rodney K. Ryals, also of Company C, was awarded the Mechanics Badge.

Lt. Frank N. Kaney Goes to 2nd QM Co.

Lieutenant Frank N. Kaney left the 69th Armor this week bound for his new duty assignment.

No change of division shoulder patch was involved, only a change from Armor collar brass to Quartermaster was necessary before Lieutenant Kaney reported to the 2nd Quartermaster Company.

87th Inf Sgt Would Return To 'Jungle'

Spent 37 Months At Fort Sherman Warfare Center

By 87th Inf PIO

Ability to learn the ways of the jungle so completely that it gives a man self confidence is, according to an article in a recent issue of Reader's Digest, the essence of jungle warfare.

Staff Sergeant Herbert Reynolds Jr., of the 87th Infantry's Company B, agrees.

Reynolds trained and then taught for 37 months at the Army's Jungle Warfare Training Center in the Canal Zone.

"A man must have as much faith in himself as he possibly can," says Reynolds who, along with less than two per cent of all U. S. Soldiers, wears the Jungle Expert badge.

'Foundation'

As the article in Reader's Digest points out, this faith is built on a solid foundation — mastering the essentials of survival, and this means strenuous training. For Reynolds, there were many memories of such training while he was at bejungled Fort Sherman.

He recalls one incident during a descent down a 200-foot cliff, a training exercise mentioned in the article. "I saw a man nearly choke to death when he fell loose, and his rope swung him around until he hung by his neck."

Reynolds also recalls the river crossing pointed out in the article. This is done by stuffing jungle grass into a raft made of two ponchos. "You can't get enough grass into that thing, said Reynolds whose first raft sunk. "When I tried it again, I had so many leaves in it that if you had stuck it with a pin it would have burst."

But this is the type of training — dangerous but exciting if you stay alert — that appeals to Reynolds. He would like to return to Fort Sherman after he completes his upcoming tour in Korea with the 87th.

SURROUNDED . . . Miss Jo Zinceau, chief librarian, is "surrounded by knowledge" at the Kelley Hill branch. The library contains 8,000 volumes, including reference materials and USAFI textbooks.

Kelley Hill Library Started By Borrowing Its First Books

The Kelley Hill branch library stands fallest among the post's libraries, mainly because it is situated on the third floor of building 9010.

Hundreds of eager soldiers flock to its doors each day for any number of reasons. There are those who like to keep pace with current events through newspapers and magazines, while others choose to sift through the many bookshelves in search of escape literature. It often serves as a haven for a young private who has escaped momentarily from the busy schedule of basic training.

Miss Jo Zinceau, the chief librarian, is largely responsible for the library's popularity. She organized the branch in 1958 with a collection of borrowed and salvaged furniture and inadequate lighting facilities. Her first books were received from the ROTC library and the Harmony Church branch.

Today, the library is equipped with the latest fluorescent lighting, and spacious study tables dot the main reading room. There are large easy chairs and sofas finished in attractive pastels.

The library possesses nearly 8,000 catalogued volumes, among which are numerous reference works and periodicals. There is also an extensive supply of USAFI textbooks which are circulated by the library in connection with the 2nd Division's Education program.

An added feature of the library is its music room which is equipped with an extensive classical records collection and stereo record player.

Miss Zinceau is assisted by Sergeant First Class Earl Carlson and Private Philo Baumgartner of Special Services.

Div Photo, Radio Teams Assist in Demonstration

By 122nd Signal PIO

A photo team and two radio teams from the 122nd Signal Battalion participated in the Firepower and Airmobile Assault demonstration recently conducted by the Infantry Center.

The photo team, composed of Specialist Five Charles Crays, Specialist Four Elias Tullar and Private First Class Whitman Joslin, was used to demonstrate how quickly a battlefield commander can obtain aerial photos of his objective if they are needed.

An aerial photo was made at the start of the demonstration from an L-19 plane and the film was dropped to the processing team who developed the negative and processed the photos. At the end of the demonstration, 60 photos were distributed to the audience.

The Radio teams, under Sergeant William Paxton, were used to furnish communications from Underwood Control Tower to McKenna and Ellbeck airstrips. The radios were used to control the aircraft taking part in the demonstration. The teams also furnished a link of communications into the Main Post Telephone System.

First Inf's Hatfield to Display Tennis Style in Coming Tourney

By 1st Inf PIO

The newly-forming 2nd Battle Group, 1st Infantry has an "old pro" militarily and athletically.

Sergeant Major Archie E. Hatfield, who is soon to display his tennis style at the 2nd Infantry Division Tennis Tournament, was born in Williamsburg, Kentucky, and entered military service in August of 1940. He served varying assignments including a tour of duty with the United States Army Pacific during World War II, and a second tour in the Far East during the Korean War. He was assigned to Fort Benning, Georgia, in September 1958.

WARM-UP FOR DIV TOURNEY
Sergeant Major Archie Hatfield

Japan Open

Sergeant Hatfield has quite a history of tennis behind him. He was runner-up in the Japan Open in 1954, entered the 3rd Army Open at Fort Gordon, Ga., in 1957, and was runner-up with his team in doubles in the Fort Bragg, N. C., Open in 1958.

The year 1958 showed him slightly as he was unable to participate in tennis tournaments while attending Jungle Warfare School. SMaj Hatfield was again swinging rackets in 1960 as he won in singles and doubles in the senior division at Fort Benning.

In 1961 he lost in the senior division to Lt. Col. Ebb Smith of the Caribou Test Headquarters. Sgt. Hatfield also assisted in tennis instruction for the Youth Activities Club — for three years.

Sergeant Hatfield says he is "slowing down," but is grooming someone to take his place when he feels that he must lay down his tennis racket. His only son Archie Jr. won the Y.A.C. tennis tournament in 1958, 1959, and 1960. He and his teammate also won the Region I-AAA High School Doubles for Columbus High School in 1961.

Baseball Fans

Columnist Arthur Daley sizes up the avid diamond nine spectator as: "A baseball fan has the digestive apparatus of a billy goat. He can — and does — devour any set of diamond statistics with insatiable appetite and then nuzzle hungrily for more."

This Week's Sportrait

Sp6 Edward H. Burkhart of Headquarters Battery, 2nd Howitzer Battalion, 10th Artillery, 1st Infantry Brigade, is top kegler in the Phenix City-Columbus - Fort Benning area. His 191-plus average in 96 games during the winter gave him recognition as the top keg ler.

Sgt. Burkhart started bowling with duck pins at the age of 15 in his hometown of Scottdale, Pa. It was not until a four of duty in Hawaii in 1953 that he became interested in ten pins. He averaged 162 his first season after the change over. Later in 1955, he missed his first perfect game when his final ball failed to topple the 10-pin.

Upon returning to the mainland, in 1955, he was assigned to Arlington Hall, Va., where he bowled in the Second Army Tourney.

Sgt. Burkhart attended the Artillery Ballistic Meteorology School at Fort Sill and spent a year at South Park, Pa., before being assigned to Fort Bragg. He became a member of the Fort Bragg team which won the Third Army Crown in 1958.

It was also at Fort Bragg that he began to bowl regularly for the first time since Hawaii. In one of the post leagues, he rolled a 732 series for the best of his career.

An assignment to Korea followed, during which he did not participate to a large extent in league bowling, although he did win all events in the I Corps Artillery rolloffs. He also placed second in the I Corps rolloffs and was a member of the group team which bowled in the Eighth Army Tournament.

Last September, Sgt. Burkhart returned to his current assignment at Benning. Since coming here, he has made quite a name for himself in bowling.

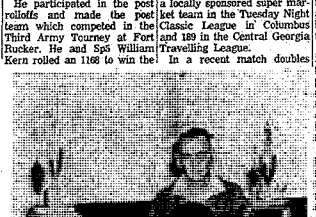
He participated in the post rolloffs and made the post team which competed in the Third Army Tourney at Fort Rucker. He and Sp5 William Kern rolled an 1168 to win the Third Army doubles tournament.

Sgt. Burkhart had an edge of 605 during the tournament. "The team which won the 1961 Third Army Crown was the same group from Fort Bragg that I rolled with in 1958," says Sgt. Burkhart.

He has averages of 190 on a locally sponsored super market team in the Tuesday Night Classic League in Columbus and 189 in the Central Georgia Travelling League.

In a recent match doubles event in Montgomery, he rolled a 706 series with Sfc Gene Rogers for a doubles total of 1347 for top honors. His lowest game in that series was a 203. He and Sgt. Rogers bowled together previously at Fort Bragg.

Bowling is by no means the limit of his sports accomplishments. In high school he was a four-letter man in football, baseball, boxing and lettered three years in basketball.



In Germany, he played post level football and baseball with the Frankfurt Red Raiders. His positions were right half-back and catcher, respectively. He was also star catcher on his a team which won the championship for three consecutive seasons.

While stationed at South Park, Pa., he won the Pittsburgh area horseshoe championship. He topped all competition from missile units in and around the area.

His more than 85 bowling trophies show what a kegler he really is. He has additional trophies in baseball, softball and horseshoe pitching.

Although bowling is foremost with Sgt. Burkhart, he still finds time to play on his battery's softball team. The various positions he plays are catcher, pitcher, second baseman and left fielder.

The secret to being a top-notch kegler may well depend on the grip as much as the approach. Sgt. Burkhart uses a semi-finger grip, rolling a slight hook down the line on his first ball and picking up his splits with a spinner.

By Sgt. Loris G. Holliday

The Custer Terrace (YAC) Baseball League team trounced the Main Post All-Stars in two straight games, after dropping the first, to win the post championship in little league play last week.

The Main Post team took the lead in the first inning after two runs, but had to yield the position in the second after the Medic - coached Custer Terrace Team brought in five runs.

However, they came back strong in the third inning to clinch the game with five runs of their own and set the score at 8 to 5 in the Main Post team's favor. Tighe pitched for the Custer Terrace League and Kennedy pitched for the winners.

ACT OF COWARDICE

The third game was also won on a one-sided score as the Custer Terrace League team grabbed the lead in the first inning on Whiteside's single and Burns brought him in on a hard hit ball.

The Main Post Team threatened in the fifth as the bases were loaded. McNally relieved Smith and forced the rallying team into a series of double plays that retired the side with but one score. Kennedy also pitched the last game for the losing team.

By Gen. Harding, Ohio State Professor

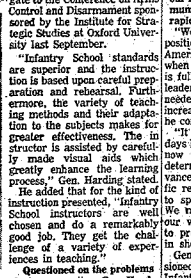
Infantry School Standards Are Called 'Superior'

Commending The Infantry School for adapting its instruction to the future, Major Gen. H. F. Harding, commanding general of the 83rd Infantry Division, Army Reserve, Cleveland, Ohio, characterized the School as outstanding in the military field during an interview last Thursday.

A member of the six-man Educational Survey Commission which reorganized the Command and General Staff College in 1956, Gen. Harding is a student in The Infantry School's officer refresher course.

The class of 128 from the Regular Army, National Guard and active and inactive Army Reserve includes three generals, 30 colonels, 40 lieutenant colonels, 53 majors and two captains.

"I'm especially impressed with Ranger training and the utilization in the course of recent advances in ground and air mobility, communications and engineer equipment," the two-star general declared.



Gen. Harding noted the increasing inability of American youth to cope with the rigors of battlefield conditions.

"Ranger training at Fort Benning brings back the hardiness of the frontier. In a remarkably short time, young men who have grown up in cities without a knowledge of outdoorsmanship suddenly develop new confidence. They learn to live off the land, make quick decisions and defend themselves against an enemy," he said.

"I strongly believe that all junior officers should take Ranger training as a routine part of their early careers," he emphasized, adding that his statement applies equally to the non-combat arms.

Gen. Harding is professor of speech at Ohio State University.

He is a member of the Department of the Army's General Staff Committee on Reserve and National Guard Policy and the Advisory Council of the Association of the U. S. Army and was a U. S. delegate to the Conference on Arms Control and Disarmament sponsored by the Institute for Strategic Studies at Oxford University last September.

GEN. HARDING

"Infantry School standards are superior and the instruction is based upon careful preparation and rehearsal. Furthermore, the variety of teaching methods and their adaptation to the subjects makes for greater effectiveness. The instructor is assisted by carefully made visual aids which greatly enhance the learning process," Gen. Harding stated.

He added that for the kind of instruction presented, "Infantry School instructors are well chosen and do a remarkably good job. They get the challenge of a variety of experiences in teaching."

Questioned on the problems facing our nation, Gen. Harding stressed, "Our most vital concern is to develop an aroused and determined public opinion. We must bring our military forces to a maximum state of readiness as rapidly as possible."

"We cannot negotiate from a position of weakness. The American citizen will respond when the nature of the threat is fully explained to him. Our leaders must specify what is needed in training, in budget increases and in national goals he continued.

"It is true that the good old days have disappeared. We are now up against a grim and determined competitor. By advanced education and scientific research he has forced us to speed up the competition. We must certainly strengthen our whole educational system to produce far better leaders in shorter time," he added.

Gen. Harding was commissioned a second lieutenant of Infantry while a graduate student at Cornell in 1929, having completed Civilian Military Training Camp at Fort Douglas, Utah. Two years later he transferred to the artillery and served in that branch until becoming a general officer.

He was commanding general of 83rd Division Artillery before assuming command of the division. This is his first visit to The Infantry School.

The 83rd includes units in Ohio and West Virginia. It is one of the 10 "early ready" Army Reserve divisions.

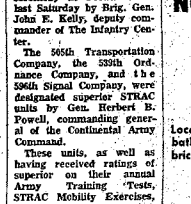
Camp Perry Events Now Move Here

The 1961 U.S. International Shooting Championships will be held at Fort Benning October 22-31, according to Lt. Col. Burton C. Boatright, Army match executive.

The championships previously have been held at Camp Perry, Ohio, in conjunction with the National Rifle and Pistol Matches.

The National Rifle Association has indicated that an estimated 200 to 250 competitors from all over the U.S. are expected to arrive at this post next fall where International-type range facilities include 300-meter and 50-meter rifle, 50-meter pistol, 25-meter pistol, skeet, trap and Running Deer ranges, the most complete of any range system of this type in the country.



Infantry Center hosting of the national championships will add to its growing prestige as the home of American marksmanship, Col. Boatright said. He predicted that larger and larger numbers of American shooters will be attracted to the event as interest in precision-type shooting continues to grow.

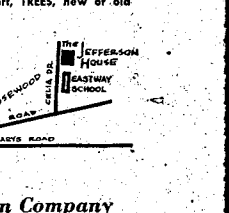
Constant Attack

"Today the institutions of freedom are under attack all around the globe. It is a fully planned, well-organized and determined attack, engaging every aspect of human activity —political, economic, scientific, ideological, and, in some places, outright military force. The main thrust of the attack shifts from one part of the globe to another, and from one form to another, but the struggle relentlessly goes on."—R. L. Gilpatric, deputy secretary of the Army.

3 Center Units Given Superior STRAC Awards

Three units of The Infantry Center Troop Command were awarded Strategic Army Corps Streamers at a ceremony at French Field last Saturday by Brig. Gen. John E. Kelly, deputy commander of The Infantry Center.



The 505th Transportation Company, the 533th Ordnance Company, and the 596th Signal Company, were designated superior STRAC units by Gen. Herbert B. Powell, commanding general of the Continental Army Command.

These units, as well as having received ratings of superior on their annual Army Training Tests, STRAC Mobility Exercises, Command Maintenance Inspections, STRAC Assembly Exercises, and annual general inspections, demonstrated exceptional military bearing, alertness and conduct in performing their normal missions.

ONE ARMY FACT

The Puerto Rico National Guard may well be the oldest "territorial militia" organization in the western hemisphere. It was first organized in 1658 by the Spanish explorer Ponce de Leon.

Sgt. Gentry Had Part in Space Shot

By Pfc Harold S. Kitching

Sergeant First Class Neal R. Gentry, Company G, Infantry School Battalion, The Student Brigade, played an important role in the rocket launching that sent Naval Commander Alan Shepard into space.

He instructed and trained civilian personnel in the operation and maintenance of an M-113 Armored Personnel Carrier which would have been used to evacuate Commander Shepard from the capsule had the rocket misfunctioned or caught fire on the launching pad. This would have been done by either pushing or pulling the capsule out of the flames.

The personnel Sgt. Gentry trained included Naval Commander Morris, a physician and surgeon who was Shepard's personal attendant; two firemen from the Cape Canaveral fire department; technicians who helped construct the space capsule; and the pad safety officer.

Sgt. Gentry, who works in the Vehicle Capability Section of the Infantry School's Ground Mobility Department, was with Commander Shepard and his physician on several dry runs of the evacuation process. "He always seemed cool and collected," Sergeant Gentry recalls.

He also worked with another of the astronauts briefing him on the vehicle operation, it's special equipment and the capsule removing apparatus.

"It was on the launching pad when Commander Shepard was placed into the capsule," he related. "Then I went into the concrete blockhouse where the technicians worked. But before the shot I moved to another safety area where I could see all of the launching." From the blockhouse all you can see of the firing is the flame and initial take-off, then the rocket is lost from view.

Gentry said they were all happy that the shot was successful. He also added that he didn't think Commander Shepard was too nervous during the delays, for he was thoroughly trained and disciplined to expect such things.

When asked if he would go back for the next shot if he had the chance, he said, "I'd sure like to; it was wonderful."

The Motorist's Prayer

(The following prayer, author unknown, has been submitted by Chaplain (Major) Harry G. Campbell, Jr., deputy post chaplain, who feels that it is ideal for those tempted to speed, drive while drinking, or drive recklessly—Editor)

"Grant me a steady hand and watchful eye,
That no man shall be hurt when I pass by.
Thou gavest life, and I pray no act of mine
May take away or mar that gift of thine.
Shelter those, dear Lord, who bear me company
From the evils of fire and all calamity.
Teach me to use my car for others' need,
Nor miss through love or speed
The beauties of thy world; that thus I may
With joy and courtesy go on my way."

ULTIMATE RELIANCE

"All U.S. military doctrine is based upon reliance on the ingenuity of the individual working on his own initiative as a member of a team and using the most modern weapons and equipment which can be provided him." Gen. Maxton S. Eddy.

When Inspector General Says 'Hmm,' Watch Out

The Inspector General thumbed through the morning report of Headquarters Company, The Infantry Center Troop Command, paused, and then went back to a rapid scanning of its some 38 pages.

"Hmmm," he said.

Now, as any soldier can tell you, a session of inspection by the "IG" is enough to make strong men quake and when a session gets to the "Hmm" stage the inspected stand in fear for their military futures.

In this instance, however, the post unit's 1st Sgt. Stafford W. Plauche, and morning report clerk, Spc4 John J. Walsh, stood their ground.

Finally, the inspector closed the file and extended a hand to Walsh.

"A 38-page morning report without a strike-over," he said, "is deserving of congratulations and I find your work letter-perfect."

The Army demands that the morning report, upon which it depends for a maze of information concerning the individual, be correct in every respect. A single typographical error, if left unnoticed, may cause a chain reaction of errors which could prove disastrous to everyone.

"This isn't the first time that Walsh has been outstanding in his work," said his 1st Sergeant who added that Headquarters Company's clerk holds the post record of a 51-page report typed out last year, the longest morning report of Fort Benning record.

Sgt. Plauche, a veteran of the "Old Army", gave his clerk a slap on the back as the door closed upon the departing inspector.

"I can remember back when the morning report was about the size of a check book and you could carry it in your back pocket," he reminisced.

"Yuh, Sarge," grinned his clerk, "and it's me for those good old days"!

BOOKS in REVIEW

FINISHING TOUCHES by Candy Jones. (Harper, 1961)

Candy Jones is the ideal author to guide women in the subtle arts of makeup, and dress and, let's face it, beauty camouflage. She is a former cover girl, model and TV personality. And, she is a graduate of France Nuyen, Julia Meade, Gloria Graham and, many other successful personalities. In Finishing Touches, Candy Jones set down for the first time the hundreds of hints.

THE NIGHT RIDERS by Todhunter Ballard, (Doubleday, 1961)

Here is a novel of suspense, based on an incident in California history when a powerful mining company raped the mountain of its gold and almost destroyed the towns and ranches in the valleys below.

THE MINISTER'S HANDBOOK OF DEDICATIONS by W. H. Leach. (Abingdon, 1961)

From many sources, Dr. Leach has collected the 5 services contained in this book. The services are divided into three sections, each dealing with a particular type of church dedication program. Part I is concerned with the dedication of buildings and sites, such as ground-breaking and cornerstone laying ceremonies; Part II, with the dedication of furnishings and equipment, such as altars, pulpit furniture, baptismal fonts, windows, choir vestments, hymnals, and memorials; and Part III, with other dedications, such as camps, hospitals, and parsonages.

AFRICA SPEAKS by James Duffy. (Nostrand, 1961)

Emerging from the dark ages of captivity, Africa speaks — on the problems and successes of freedom, on challenges, on democracy, on prospects for the sixties, and on Africa's ultimate destiny. This book reflects current thinking by leders of the New Africa.

APRIL MORNING by Howard Fast. (Crown, 1961)

This is the story of battle, but we think it is unlike any other battle story you have ever read. In all truth, it is the story of the beginnings and the specific memory of America; it is for anyone and everyone who is an American.

DONNA DAVIS DISPLAYS A FIRST PLACE RIBBON WON in the English Pleasure Class of the Post Hunt Club Horse Show

Benning Horsemen Presented Awards

Fourteen Fort Benning youngsters were presented the first of three awards in attaining certain levels in horsemanship and horsemastership last Sunday, following a horse show which was sponsored by the post Hunt Club.

The 14 who were present had to demonstrate the ability to lead a horse from a stall, corral or field and saddle and bridle it properly, groom the horse, go through a series of movements with the horse, know the safety and courtesy rules for the stable and ring, and demonstrate proper care of the saddle and bridle and name the principal parts of each.

Receiving the bronze medal first award were Mike Kunzig, Jeannie Kunzig, Jim Woods, Janet Leeney, Sandra Leonard, Carole Leonard, Bobbie Leonard, Donna Davis, Jennifer Hall, John Sams, Jim Sams, Donna Sokolowski, Christine Cole and David Kennedy.

Two dependents who earned the medal but were not present for the presentations were Glenn Bracken and Ann Tipp.

Included in the horsemanship and horsemastership test are a series of 10 difficult movements which must be executed correctly, at ease and in perfect co-ordination with the animal.

The first test is mounting the horse, followed by walking the horse in a straight line for at least 60 feet, make a half-circle at a walk, trot in a straight line for 60 feet, make a half-circle at a trot, center in a large circle at the proper lead, changing direction, halt straight, back up straight, and halt the horse and dismount.

Making the presentation of awards was Col. Morris E. Bracket, of Martin Army Hospital.

Signalmen To Join Exercise

Ten officers and 220 enlisted personnel of the 596th Signal Company, Infantry Center Troop Command, will participate in the Army's exercise Swift Strike, scheduled in North and South Carolina beginning July 10.

Commanded by Capt. Don S Fayne, the Benning unit will depart to arrive at Sand Hill, S.C., July 10 and occupy a key role throughout the maneuvers.

The unit's mission, according to 1st Lt. Edward J. Kelly, unit executive officer, will be to provide communications support for the XVIII Airborne Corps for the field operations.

The unit will be attached to the 39th Signal Battalion of Fort Gordon. It is scheduled to return to Fort Benning following the field exercise which ends August 20.

The 596th will carry with it the Strategic Army Command superior unit streamer awarded by Continental Army Command June 30 for superior performance during the Army training year of 1960.

Mississippi Reservists Training Here

Approximately 360 Mississippi Reservists arrived at Fort Benning last weekend to participate in two weeks active duty at The Infantry Center.

The 3rd Howitzer Battalion, 33rd Artillery is the major unit taking part in the training. It is comprised of these component units: Headquarters and Headquarters Battery of Laurel, Battery A of Meridian, Battery B of Waynesboro, Battery C of Hattiesburg, and Service Battery of Ellisville.

Field training will occupy much of the time of the troops. They will train in reconnaissance, selection and occupation of positions, night marches, surveys and communications, with day and night firing. The last week will be spent in bivouac with emphasis on night problems.

Training in artillery military occupational specialties will be conducted by gun, radio, wire and fire direction center schools.

The training for the battalion will end July 16. The battalion will be supported by the Reserve Component Section of The Infantry Center and the 1st Infantry Brigade.

Lt. Col. Ralph L. Stotts is commander of the battalion.

Summer time brings hot sun, vacations, and innumerable trips to the swimming pool. This season also brings home many college and high school students who have been attending school away from Benning.

An outstanding example of a returning high school student is Eva Ulrich, daughter of Lt. Col. and Mrs. Richard W. Ulrich. Eva was recently graduated from Cushing Academy located in Ashburnham, Mass., after completing three years of high school there.

During her three years at Cushing, Eva has accumulated an impressive record of honors, awards, and activities. Her most recent honor was the Pioppi Drama Award, presented to her during her commencement exercises June 9. After reviewing the lists of Eva's activities in the field of drama, one does not wonder that she was selected for this award.

The first play in which she had a part was in her sophomore year. The play was "Joan of Arc" where she was given the role of Joan. This year Eva gave a one person skit from the play for a Women's Club.

Since her first play, Eva has appeared in Shakespeare's play "A Midsummer Night's Dream" and in the play, "Family Circle," which was presented amid the Winter Carnival festivities held Valentine's weekend. Eva was property mistress for the senior class play.

In addition to portraying a character in the Winter Carnival Play, Eva was selected by popular student body vote as one of the nine girls comprising the Carnival Court. However, membership on a court was not a novelty for Eva as she was selected by her classmates as one of the Junior Court for her Junior Prom.

As regards her extra-curricular activities, Eva's years at Cushing have been well filled. She was a member of the French Club and the History Club. As a member of the Expression Class, she wrote articles for "The Breeze," Cushing's student newspaper. She served on the yearbook staff in the capacity of photographer and was the authoress of the "Last Will," regarding the future of her 83 classmates. Eva also participated in the activities of the Academy Choir and Girls' Glee Club.

While at Cushing, Eva took advantage of its fine sports program, in the fields of tennis, swimming, skiing and horseback riding. At present she is taking golf lessons.

"I think I would never have learned how to study if I hadn't gone to Cushing," stated Eva, when asked what impressed her most about her school. She went on to state that she particularly liked the closeness of the student body.

Eva lived at Benning and attended Columbus High when she was a freshman. While she was here, she was elected chaplain of the Junior Army Daughters of America and was a member of the Sigma Delta Beta Sorority.

Eva, who was born in LaGrange, Ga., has also lived in Yokohama and Camp Zama, Japan. She has a brother, Ricky, who is 12 and attends Trinity School.

Eva Ulrich is certainly a distinguite whom we are proud to claim.

AUTOMOBILE LICENSES

The Soldier's and Sailors' Civil Relief Act provides that so long as a serviceman registers his vehicle in his State of domicile, that is, his legal residence, he is not required to register his vehicle in any other State. However, in the event the vehicle is registered in a State other than his home state and the serviceman has a temporary residence in a third State, he may be required to purchase a license in this third state.

UP THE LADDER

In the American tradition of opportunity for all, the Army considers its young soldiers an important source of future top leaders. Gens. Walter Bedell Smith and Walter Krueger are two of many who began their careers as enlisted men.

"One who is honest to avoid trouble demonstrates skin-deep integrity," Gen. Gallagher said, adding that a good officer must have such "deep-seated" facets of integrity as honesty, stability, fidelity, fairness, decisiveness and tenacity.

"Moral weakness in an officer is not his own business but may jeopardize the country he serves," the speaker said. "Standards of decency do exist and are accepted," he said.

"Loyalty is what holds the Army together, the retired general declared.

The former commandant of cadets at the U. S. Military Academy, West Point, stated that loyalty when violated was felt all along the chain of command.

Honor graduate of the class was Joseph L. Byrd Jr. Gen. Gallagher assisted Mrs. Byrd in pinning the gold bars of a second lieutenant on the top graduate, who was presented an Association of the U. S. Army Award by Lt. Col. John B. Wine, secretary of AUSA.

Brig. Gen. A. D. Surles Jr., assistant commandant of The Infantry School, introduced Gen. Gallagher.

The Special Services production of "I Am The Infantry" was presented at the statue.

2 Ranger Graduates Get Honors

Lt. Chappell R. Wilson and MSgt Robert E. Niarhos were named Honor Graduates of Ranger class 8 during ceremonies recently at Harmony Church. Both were presented a miniature replica of the class guidon.

Sergeant Niarhos was also designated as outstanding Ranger of the class and presented the Association of the U. S. Army award by Brig. Gen. C. H. White, Jr. assistant 2nd Infantry Division Commander, guest speaker. This award is donated by the Columbus-Phenix City- Fort Benning chapter of the AUSA and has been awarded to the outstanding graduate of each of the leadership courses on post. These two courses are Ranger and Officer Candidate School.

One hundred and five students graduated from the class.

Infantry officer candidate training at Fort Benning is featured in the July-August issue of The Infantry Magazine which goes on sale today.

Two Marshall Award winning articles, "Raid and Destroy" by Capt. John G. Pappageorge, and "A Lesson in Nuclear Effects" by Capt. James F. Bell, also appear in the magazine.

The Marshall Award honors Gen. George C. Marshall, famed general, secretary of defense and secretary of state. Competition is open to career course students at The Infantry School.

Capt. Pappageorge is a 1954 graduate of the U. S. Military Academy. He has served in the U.S. as platoon leader and company executive officer and in Japan and Korea as platoon officer and company commander.

A graduate of Airborne, Ranger and pathfinder courses at The Infantry School, Capt. Pappageorge was an instructor at the Ranger Mountain Camp at Dahlonega, and served as a Ranger section leader at The Infantry School's Airborne Air Mobility Department. He is now an instructor at the Military Academy.

Capt. Bell was commissioned in 1954 when he was graduated from the University of California at Berkeley. He has served as platoon leader, assistant battalion S-3 and battalion S-2 of the 325th Airborne Infantry Regiment at Fort Bragg.

NATO Group Will Arrive Here Sunday

Legislators From 10 of 14 Nations To Stay Two Days

Legislators from 10 of the 14 nations which, together with the U. S., comprise the North Atlantic Treaty Organization will visit The Infantry School July 16 to 18 during a two-week tour of military and industrial centers in this country.

The 26-member group representing Belgium, Canada, Denmark, France, West Germany, Greece, Italy, the Netherlands, Norway and the United Kingdom is visiting the U. S. following the NATO Parliamentarians' Conference in Ottawa, Canada.

Fort Benning is the only Army post on its itinerary.

Arrive Sunday

The Allied visitors will arrive at Lawson Army Aviation Command Sunday at 7 p.m. They will be welcomed by Brig. Gen. Charles H. White Jr., who then will be commanding general of The Infantry Center.

Brig. Gen. A. D. Surles Jr., assistant commandant of The Infantry School, will address the group Monday at 8 a.m. on Eubanks Field. The parliamentarians then will view demonstrations of Airborne training, familiarization with Army aircraft, capabilities and limitations of mobility means and weapons of the Infantry battle group. Following the latter, they will have an opportunity to fire individual weapons on Hook Range.

Gen. White will host a reception and buffet dinner for the visitors Monday at 7 p.m. in the Supper Club Annex of

The public is invited to attend.

The two-star general will leave the post tomorrow to command I Corps in Korea. He has been nominated for the rank of lieutenant general by the president.

Col. Charles T. Horner Jr., commander of the 1st Infantry Brigade, will be the troop commander for the retreat review.

Approximately 2,300 troops will participate in the formation, including The Infantry Center honor guard, salute battery and band, 26th Infantry Scout Dog Platoon and composite companies from the 1st Infantry Brigade, Student Brigade, Infantry Center Troop Command, 428th Medical Battalion and 151st Engineer Group.

Honor guard ceremonies will be staged at Lawson Army Aviation Command Saturday at 10 a.m. for Gen. Harris preceding his departure.

Gen. Harris came to the post following a tour as deputy chief of staff for operations, plans and training of Continental Army Command.

Infantry School Report

Ranger Department Teaches Evasion And Escape

"Men, I have considered several courses of action and the only feasible one is evasion by infiltration." These were the words of Officer Candidate John Bailey as he alerted his patrol for its evasion and escape exercise at The Infantry School, but it could have been any place in the world.

Of the 7,190 American troops captured in Korea, 85 per cent were taken in groups of two or more, so someone could have assumed leadership. Too often leadership was not assumed because personnel were not familiar with the action to take to avoid capture.

Presently, all new personnel (newly commissioned officers and recruits) must undergo Code of Conduct training. At The Infantry School, a phase of this training is an orientation by the Ranger Department designed to teach the principles and techniques of evasion and escape, and a realistic field exercise.

The student must use his knowledge and intuitive in difficult terrain and in infiltrating aggressor positions. Similar training can be conducted in areas overseas.

All students receive classes on the Code of Conduct and see a training film which depicts the articles of the Code and how they apply in combat.

Following the film, the students move to a mock stockade where they watch a demonstration of interrogation methods used by the communists in Korea. They learn methods of indoctrination and how the communists exploited American prisoners.

Following the stockade training, the students receive a conference on principles and techniques of evasion and escape, especially courses of action for a unit cut off behind enemy lines. Four courses of action are: defense of present position, breakout to friendly areas, penetration deep into enemy territory to conduct guerrilla action, and evasion.

Evasion can be conducted by units or small groups. Units should be broken down into small groups only after all other courses have been rejected.

The student also learns organization for evasion, techniques of avoiding the enemy, and methods of escape if captured.

After the formal instruction, the students are placed in a situation isolated behind enemy lines. They are moved to the field where they plan for evasion.

Under the supervision of the senior man present, release points are selected, and the groups released shortly after dark with the mission of returning to friendly lines.

The student must move approximately three and one-half miles over difficult terrain. Aggressors patrol every likely lane of drift, using scout dogs, motorized patrols, foot patrols, and fixed positions in an effort to capture students not following sound principles or who are not moving with necessary precautions.

To put realism in the exercise, demolitions are used to simulate artillery. Flares are used for battlefield illumination.

A field stockade is provided for student prisoners. In the stockade, the student has a further chance to show his knowledge of the Code of Conduct.

Under the firm guidance of Sfc Fred Armstrong, the student prisoner is subjected to roll calls, formations, and interrogation. Here, as on the terrain, the student hears recordings of battlefield noises and propoganda speeches.

A logical opportunity to escape is given the student.

Those students who reach friendly lines relate how they successfully evaded the enemy and give information regarding the enemy and terrain.

After the evasion and escape exercise, the student understands the numerous problems of moving at night in difficult terrain. His knowledge of patrolling and map reading has been reinforced. He is now ready to present to others effective training in support of the Code of Conduct. All of this training is designed to increase a unit's fighting strength and increase the individual's will to resist.

ment with the experimental 88th Airborne Battalion at Benning. Upon activation of the Airborne Command at Fort Bragg, he was named assistant G-3 and subsequently served as G-3 of the command during combat preparations of the 82nd, 101st, 11th and 17th Airborne divisions and eight separate Airborne combat teams.

Shortly after the activation of the 13th Airborne Division in 1943, Gen. Harris became chief of staff of the unit and served in this position with the division in Europe.

He went to Korea in July, 1952, as commander of the 224th Infantry Regiment, 40th Infantry Division, and next served as G-3 of Eighth Army throughout the heavy Communist spring offensive of 1953. On his promotion to brigadier general in June of that year, he became deputy chief of staff of Eighth Army.

Gen. Harris was promoted to major general in December, 1955. Among his decorations are the Distinguished Service Medal, Silver Star, Legion of Merit with two Oak Leaf Clusters and the Republic of Korea Distinguished Service Medal.

He was married to the late Jane Boyd of Chattanooga, Tenn. Their daughter, Mrs. I. Edward Jenkins, resides in Newport News, Va.

the Main Officers' Mess. He also will be the host at an official luncheon that noon in the Supper Club.

Tuesday morning the party will witness a demonstration of Rangers in action at Victory Pond and an Infantry-tank team attack on Buma Hill. Gen. Surles will give the commandant's closing remarks at 11:45 a.m. at Buma Hill. Following lunch, the visitors will leave the post at 1:45 p.m.

Capt. Earl H. Hale Jr., 1st Lt. Hugh Peterson Jr., 1st Lt. Edwin T. Spikie, 2nd Lt. Joseph A. Tomko and 2nd Lt. David R. Hansen will be the guide officers for the visit.

Lt. Col. Dallas M. Patterson and Capt. George R. Henderson are project officers.

Other Steps

In addition to Fort Benning, the party also will visit Cleveland, Ohio; Strategic Air Command, Offutt Air Force Base, Neb.; Navy and Marine Corps installations, San Diego; Marine Corps Air Station, El Toro, Calif.; industrial presentations and Disneyland in Los Angeles; Pacific Missile Range, Hamilton Air Force Base, Calif.; San Francisco; Supreme Allied Command Atlantic, Norfolk, Va., and Washington, D. C.

See President

At the capital the NATO group will confer with President Kennedy at the White House, Secretary of State Dean Rusk and Department of Defense officials.

The NATO Parliamentarians' Conference is an unofficial association of members of parliaments of all the political parties which support the North Atlantic Treaty. Conference members are chosen by the individual national parliaments. Delegates speak and act on their own responsibility; their statements do not commit their governments, parliaments or parties.

The conference is governed by a Standing Committee composed of one member from each nation. Congressman Wayne Hays of Ohio, U. S. member, arranged the tour. A similar visit was made to NATO bases in Europe last year.

14 in AG Section Cited For Suggestions Adopted

Fourteen civilian employees and military personnel of The Infantry Center Adjutant General Section were cited recently for suggestions and ideas which have resulted in improved job operations and increased efficiency.

All recently completed the work simplication course at the post.

MSgt Thomas B. McDonald was presented a letter of appreciation for his two suggestions.

He proposed maintaining one set of special order files by the Military Personnel Division for use by both the Officer and Enlisted branches of the office rather than the two sets previously kept and that one copy of a monthly report be submitted by unit personnel sections, eliminating two copies.

Receiving Suggestion Award

Certificates were Mrs. Pauline M. Santiago, Mrs. Anne W. Patten, Mrs. Marjorie M. Maupin, all of Columbus, Sfc Zadcock Cox, and Milton L. Carroll.

Work Simplication Certificates were presented to MSgt Gerald R. Rickson, Glassells S. Lawson, both of Columbus, 1st Lt. Roger C. Poole, Jr., MSgt Floyd A. Hightower, MSgt Henry A. Hicks, MSgt Howard F. Porter, Lenzy J. Dennis and MSgt Kenneth B. Cameron.

Col. Milton G. Schneider, Infantry Center adjutant general, made the presentations.

Chaplain's Corner

By Chaplain (1st Lt.) Norton D. Sharpe

A story is told about a dean of a theological school who noticed that one of the students was reciting his prayers with tremendous speed. He proceeded to question the student about this. The student replied that the reason he prayed so quickly was to keep what he called "strange thoughts" from entering his mind and disturbing his prayer.

"You see," said the student, "it is like driving a wagon through a rough neighborhood. If I drive slowly, hoodlums will board the wagon and beat me up; but if I drive quickly, the hoodlums will not have an opportunity to get on the wagon."

The Dean reflected, looked at the student smilingly, and said, "I'm afraid it will make no difference if you drive the wagon slowly or with great speed, for it is clear that the hoodlums are already in the wagon — they were there from the very start of the journey."

I am afraid we too have the "hoodlums aboard our wagon," for the capacity of evil to overcome us remains constant.

How many of us can honestly say that we have never wronged another person? That we have never caused others grief and pain? That we have never shamed our fellow man? How many of us can recall and reflect a moment of weakness or lack of control that could have led us into disaster or could have wrecked the life of another human being?

The prophet Jeremiah observed the weakness of the human personality: "The heart is deceitful above all things, and it is exceedingly weak — who can understand it"? In another passage he compares man's fascination for evil to a mad stampede of horses. Once the stampede has begun, it is almost impossible to constrain it.

In modern times we have made great strides in understanding the hidden layers of human personality. The discipline of psychiatry has brought to stark relief the power of unconscious motivation that brings frustration, pain, and despair to human life. Our religious leaders intuitively perceived and understood the conflicting drives within the subconscious minds of men. They understood that sheer will-power is not enough. The power of the evil impulse is too subtle for most men to discern.

The discipline of religion was developed to help channel the destructive tendencies within men to constructive ends.

Does this mean that a life guided by the ideals of religion will automatically subdue evil impulse and transform the personality into a decent human being?

Unfortunately, life is not that simple. Many parents try to do their best for children and sometimes their sincerest efforts are not good enough. What we can definitely say is this: A life disciplined by the ideals of religion has a definite advantage. The chances for overcoming evil impulse and refining human personality are infinitely better then if left to the mercy of good intention.

This is a 100 Per Cent Outfit

Lawson Army Aviation Command seems to come through any campaign with something over 100 per cent participation. Whether it be educational development, blood donations, monthly re-enlistments, fund drives or selling tickets, the outfit is constantly bringing in records showing better than 100 per cent results. The latest was the item on my desk saying the officers and men of the major command sold 2,190 tickets in connection with the recent Youth Activities Carnival. Their quota? Two thousand, naturally enough. Quite a running contest between LAAC and the 1st Infantry Brigade for top honors in the constant endeavors in which records are compiled. Wonder which of the two units will get in here first with the next 100 per cent record?...While this was still in the typewriter they did it... Two 1st Brigade units made 100 per cent in June reenlistments, the story is in this issue. Now relax for a while, will ya.

Search For a Hobby Stumped Him . . .

Ever feel a sense of loss due to easy living? Not in if we do our job well; but in off duty life, where most everything has been made easier by automation, mass production and easy transportation? It isn't easy these days to find a hobby or other interest that can give us a real feeling of having done something—all by ourselves and from scratch. Sfc Antonio Garcia of Company A, 1st Battle Group, 29th Infantry, 1st Infantry Brigade found one. He makes lamps out of Florida cypress stumps, and it takes a long time and lots of work. Though he doesn't sell them, he says they would bring as much as $30 each if he did sell them. The main process, boiling the bark off and then drying the stump, takes about two months. Four coats of varnish cover the trimmed finish product, which has a golden hue. He's been interested in working with wood since he came to Benning three years ago.

The main point here is what the hobby means to him, or might mean to any of us. In a day when about every item we need is ours for the going price, we need some source of real satisfaction other than our work for a well rounded contented life. It seems to me that fires made from wood gathered and chopped always gave more real warmth than a heater we take for granted, and I know a cup of coffee or movie or hamburger we walked a couple of miles for back when cars weren't so numerous in the Army meant more than they do when we can drive a few minutes and get the same things at a dozen places. I'll bet Sgt. Garcia enjoys those lamps a lot more than I enjoy mine. No wonder so many of us use the post craft shops.

Gen. Harris Must Leave; Accomplishments Stay

Though Fort Benning must lose a commanding general under whom we should all be proud to serve again anywhere, anytime — the loss is made more palatable by two tangible things. The lasting accomplishments of Major Gen. Hugh P. Harris while he has commanded the post and served as commandant of The Infantry School, and the pending arrival of another distinguished officer to succeed him—Major Gen. Ben Harrell.

High on the list of items Gen. Harris has taken a personal interest in since he arrived at Fort Benning in April 1960, and for which the area will remain indebted to him, are projects in safety and community endeavors. He provided military police for courtesy traffic stops during holidays to prevent accidents, divers to search for bodies in the Chattahoochee River, and mercy flights for those stricken in the area.

During the flood in February of this year, he sent men and equipment to flooded areas in answer to a local need. Columbus and Phenix City found him a responsible and cooperative leader.

Buena Vista will long remember Gen. Harris for the doctors from the post sent to their aid during a hepatitis scare and shortage of local doctors just a few months ago.

Putting the Army story before the local public has also been a constant interest of the post commander, and military speakers at civic clubs increased their appearances and the scope of their subjects. This materially aided in understanding between the sister communities.

The post and civilian neighboring communities will long remember Gen. Harris, and wish him well in his future commands. He gave unselfishly of himself, and departs a military installation and civilian area richer for his presence.

Malice and Pettiness Are Unmilitary Traits

One of the things service people like to admire in themselves is the absence of lamentable characteristics that many people in civilian life seem to develop in their struggle to get ahead. You hear talk of the "rat race" where people will stab you in the back; where by innuendo and disparagement and petty maneuverings they'll seek to advance themselves at the expense of others.

Human nature being the fallible thing it is, probably a lot of this is true enough. But the world of the military is also a very human world, populated not by saints but by people with human failings. If you doubt it, keep an open pair of ears at the next coffee break or lunch with the gang and see how much of the talk that goes on is about people who aren't present to hear it.

Or test yourself — do you rise to the bait when someone makes slurring reference to the man who's just been promoted or commended for a job well done? Do you take more relish in talking about his failings than his good points? Do you conjecture about his personal habits?

All very human to do this — granted. But observe that there are always one or two people who stay outside this discussion of personalities or absent themselves when it gets under way. If they can't talk about a man to his credit they'd rather not talk at all.

Gen. Harris to Answer

DESTINY'S CALL

The Judge Says . . .

By 1st Lt. Hugh Petersen, Jr.

Every so often a soldier from Fort Benning is arrested by civilian authorities for possessing beer which he purchased on post and took off post. A few such cases can put the entire military population in a very bad light. Furthermore, the individuals who get caught find themselves in much more trouble than they bargained for, with both the military and the civilian authorities.

Here on post we are able to purchase beer at prices somewhat lower than those in neighboring civilian stores, primarily because beer sold on the military reservation is not subject to state taxes.

The rule on post is that no alcoholic beverages purchased on post will be carried off post. This includes 3.2 beer. Any serviceman violating this rule is subject to prosecution by military authorities.

The law in Georgia is that it is a misdemeanor to possess non tax-paid intoxicating liquor in Georgia. This does not include beer or wine, but it does include whiskey. In Georgia it is unlawful to possess non tax-paid beer for the purpose of resale and any violation of this law is a misdemeanor. However, it is not against Georgia law to possess non tax-paid beer for private consumption.

One important thing to remember, though, is that in Columbus it is unlawful for anyone under twenty-one to possess any alcoholic beverages. A conviction for this offense carries a maximum penalty of ninety days in jail and a $250 fine. This is important to remember because the military allows sale of 3.2 beer to anyone over eighteen and one-half years of age.

In Alabama, the story is different. It is unlawful for anyone to possess any non tax-paid liquor in Alabama. Phenix City has an ordinance which incorporates this state law as city law. Conviction carries a sentence of at least one year and as many as five years in the penitentiary. The Alabama law applies to any beer, wine, or whiskey.

Summing up, it is clear that anyone who buys any alcholic beverage on post and takes it off is looking for trouble.

A serviceman who is absent because he is in custody of civilian authorities is considered AWOL if he is tried and found guilty. Any time spent in jail due to a sentence is "bad time."

A serviceman who is convicted in a civilian court may be subject to a court-martial resulting in a discharge from the service, with a loss of many privileges

Even if one is not convicted by the civilian court, he may be subject to a court martial for conduct tending to bring discredit to the Army or prejudicial to good order and discipline. In the alternative, he may be subject to a reduction for inefficiency. In any case, a serviceman who gets into such trouble has lowered himself in the eyes of those with whom, and under whom, he serves.

The moral: Enjoy your beer on post. Don't risk trouble by taking it off.

Woman's Club Diary

We have now reached the midway point of the summer vacation, and the weeks until school bells ring again will pass quickly (or so the harassed mothers at the pool seem to hope).

September 5 is just six weeks away, and that is the date for the start of the Pre-Kindergarten School term. Because the facilities are limited, parents of children aged 3-5 who wish to enroll their children are urged to avoid the last minute rush and enroll now. Mrs. Norvin Smith at 5-2496 is chairman.

Speaking of the Nursery School, we are sad indeed to lose our principal, Mrs. Robert Sine. We shall miss her friendliness and patience. We are pleased to welcome Mrs. Jack H. Murray Jr., as the new principal. A teacher at the school the past year, Mrs. Murray is well-acquainted with the trials and tribulations of our junior set. Mrs. Alexander C. Page will replace Mrs. Homer Rhoads as assistant principal.

The Woman's Club seems to suffer the fate of all Army families, as orders arrive unexpectedly, and we lose our hardworking officers. We were sorry to accept the resignation of our recording secretary, Mrs. Raymond Carrabello. Taking the minutes for the coming year will be, instead, Mrs. Ralph Whitt.

Although many of our activities have slowed down during the summer, please note that piano lessons, private dance lessons, and teen - age charm and modeling classes are available. The School of Music is accepting both beginning and advanced Piano students. Call Mrs. Paul Engels, 5-4596, for information. The School of Dance, under the direction of Mrs. Howard Wilson, is continuing lessons. Contact Mrs. John Bohen, chairman, at MU 9-7452, to register.

An eight week course in advanced modeling for teenagers is beginning this week. Mrs. Ann Roberts will also conduct a six week charm class for teenagers beginning next Wednesday, July 19, and continuing each week from 11:30-1:30 at the Woman's Club, Building 1125. If you know interested teenagers, registration may be secured by calling Mrs. B. F. Dobson at MU 9-7340. Charm and modeling classes for adults will be announced in the early Fall.

Remember that all you need to participate in any of these activities is one membership in the Woman's Club. If you have been "putting off" getting your membership, call Mrs. Warren Walters at 5-4607, and get yours today.

TV SATIRE . . . The roles of Mrs. I. Q. Thesaurus and Mrs. Marilyn Monsoon are depicted by Mrs. Kermit Johnson (L) and Mrs. Edwin Passmore of the Fort Benning-Columbus Toastmistress Club as they prepare for a television takeoff on masters of ceremony. The skit will be portrayed on WRBL-TV's Chattahoochee Classroom next Tuesday at 1:15 p.m., as part of the club's Community Service Program. Several other members are slated to participate.

Report Card...

Georgia Ann Cain steps into the spotlight this week as the subject of today's Report Card. This charming brunette is the daughter of Col. and Mrs. Robert S. Cain.

Georgia Ann was born in Ridgeland, South Carolina on August 6, 1944, but she calls Hampton, South Carolina "home". She has one sister, Dewise, and one brother, 2nd Lt. Bob Cain, who just graduated from West Point.

Georgia Ann has lived in many places and has met people from all over the world. Prior to this tour, which is her third one at Benning, she has lived in Fort Sill, and Salzburg, Austria.

While she was in Salzburg, the Austrian Peace Treaty was signed and all forces were then stationed in Wiesbaden, Germany, for the remaining part of their European tour.

This October the Cain's are moving to Saint Augustine, Florida where Col. Cain will be stationed.

Georgia Ann participates in many activities here on post. She is the new president of the Benning chapter of Junior Army Daughters of America, having been elected in May. Georgia Ann has also served as past recording secretary.

At the club's annual Christmas Ball she was an attendant on the Queen's Court. She is also a member of the Sigma Delta Beta sorority. Having served as past vice-president and corresponding secretary, she is now chaplain.

Georgia Ann supported the YAC sports activities two years by playing baseball and basketball. She attends the Main Post Protestant Sunday School, The Protestant Chapel and Follow-Me-Club.

Georgia Ann has attended Columbus High School for the past three years and is looking forward to her senior year. She is going to take Government, English, Spanish, and Physical Education. She says that her favorite subjects are Plane Geometry and foreign languages.

She is going to attend the University of Florida or Columbia College and has planned to become a nurse or physical therapist upon graduation. Following her ambition in life, Georgia Ann has participated in the Nurses Aid program at Martin Army Hospital and she helps the Handicapped Brownie Troop every week. Last summer she helped at the Cerebral Palsy Camp and said that it was a rewarding experience.

This popular teenager who is enjoying life at Benning is an asset to her group and will be greatly missed when she leaves this fall.

Hard Training AMU Out to Keep Records

There'll be two targets at the National Rifle Matches this year, according to Col. Robin G. Montgomery, the Army Rifle Team and the bull's-eye.

The commander of the Army Advanced Marksmanship Unit at the post made the statement upon returning from Fort Niagara, N.Y., where the Army team is training for the 1961 championships at Camp Perry, Ohio, in August.

"Our Army riflemen now hold the lion's share of national honors and every shooter on Camp Perry ranges will be gunning for them," Col. Montgomery said, adding that the Army team is preparing to take on all comers.

Under the direction of Major Raynold Dobak, members of the team rise at 4 o'clock, breakfast at 5, take a half hour of rigorous physical training at 6 and fire their first shots at 6:30 each morning.

Individual and team firing continues until dark with but scant three-quarter hour lunch period. An organized program of off-duty activities prevents dulling of shooting eyes by the constant grinding course of training.

Highlight of the training has been the shooting of a perfect 250-32V score over the National Trophy Individual Match course by Capt. Verle Wright, who followed with a score of 100 out of 100 points for 20 shots at a range of 1,000 yards.

Capt. Wright equaled the all-time record for the National Match course and his score at 1,000 yards saw 16 of his 20 shots land in the 20-inch "V" ring to give him a perfect day of firing without loss of a single point.

The team will continue in training until August 1 when it will break camp at the New York post and go to Camp Perry for the championships the first two weeks in August.

Sgt. Blankenship Wins Georgia Pistol Crown

Five pistol marksmen from Fort Benning blasted through Georgia State Pistol Championships June 28 to 30 to tally 2,690 scores out of the 2,700 points possible, or better, in the grand aggregate match sponsored by the River Bend Gun Club at Norcross.

Georgia's 1961 Individual Pistol Championship was won by Sfc William B. Blankenship with 2,654, five points below the American all-time record for the course which he had established in 1960.

In capturing the Georgia crown, Blankenship fired winning scores in six of 13 matches. Of his 270 shots, fired with three weapons, better than 50 per cent landed in the half dollar-size, tie-breaking "X" ring, the inner-most circle of the pistol bull's-eye. A total of 152 shots landed dead center.

Runner-up was Army MSgt. Richard D. Stineman with 2637-120X, while Henry Weinbrecht posted a 2635-113X, for third award.

Sfc Emil Huegatter listed a 2631-117X and Sfc William G. Horton shot a 2630-123X total in and exhibition of pistol shooting which saw 25 Army competitors exceed the coveted 2,600 mark.

All three team events were won by Army entries also from the Army Advanced Marksmanship Unit.

TIS Has National Teaching Mission

Eighteen officers and 41 enlisted personnel of The Infantry School's Weapons Department will conduct the annual Small Arms Firing School at Camp Perry, Ohio, expected to be attended by some 6,000 Americans.

The school will be staged in two phases, pistol instruction, July 28 to 30, and the rifle session, August 13 to 16.

The courses of instruction are specifically designed for whom military training is not available. Citizens over the age of 14 years are eligible to attend.

Classes are presented for beginners, advanced marksmen and coaches in both sessions, while a special course is presented for members of the country's law enforcement agencies.

This year for the first time, Infantry School instructors will conduct another special class of rifle instruction for junior and lyro students.

At Camp Perry the student at the Small Arms Firing School will rub shoulders with national and world champions, see national crowns won and lost, new range records established, and see the teams of the Armed Forces battle for range supremacy.

As a student of the Small Arms School, sponsored by the National Board for the Promotion of Rifle Practice, he will be encouraged to compete in the National Individual Trophy Match for his specific weapon established as an "end of course" test.

IF ONLY HE HAD CHECKED HIS CAR'S BRAKES MORE REGULARLY
Another of the 10,000,000 Annual Traffic Accidents Was Avoidable

Don't Be An 'If Only' Driver

Want to bet that you won't be involved in a traffic accident?

If so, get good odds, even if you have a perfect driving record, because the experts say chances are 50-50 that you or some member of your family will be involved in a highway mishap before your driving days are through!

While traffic accidents in the U. S. topping the 10,000,000 mark annually, the people whose business it is to help keep you safe point out that only around 2,000,000 of these accidents involve normally reckless or irresponsible drivers. Around 8,000,000 involve the usually proficient, normally conscientious, comparatively accident-free group, known as "good" drivers.

If you fit in this group — and most of us do — then beware, lest you become one of the nation's burgeoning crop of "If-Only" drivers.

What's an If-Only driver? The term was devised by traffic engineers of one of the nation's largest insurers of cars and trucks, after their studies revealed that nearly all of the country's 10,000,000 annual traffic accidents could be prevented! An If-Only driver, they say, is one who gets involved in a traffic accident that could have been prevented if only he had acted, or reacted, differently.

Authorities point out that even some of the most intelligent and experienced motorists sometimes court disaster. Before you eliminate yourself from the ranks of If-Only drivers check yourself against this list of five psychological driving types. If you fit into even one of these categories you have the makings of an If-Only driver:

The Power-Packer. The very young and the very old sometimes try to play this role. They use all their cars' power — and especially enjoy sudden bursts of speed — because it makes them feel more powerful.

The Big Wheel. This man seeks a feeling of skill rather than power, is fond of shifting lanes and riding very close to the car ahead —trying to 'outsmart' the normal traffic.

The "Teacher." This driver seeks to "teach that guy a lesson" (often, by cutting him off) as a public service. Secretly, the teacher is really, trying to boost his own ego!

The Gambler. To this fellow a car is like a ride at an amusement park. He takes chances, enjoys the thrill of danger, and one day he'll run smack into his own fate on the highway.

The Economist. This penny-pincher delays replacing burned-out lights and worn-out windshield wipers and probably won't have his brakes adjusted until he's crawled up on your back bumper. In the long run his attitude will cost him more money than the repairs would have.

Attitudes like these, when the driver recognizes them, are easy to change. The chances for a lifetime of accident-free driving can also be increased by adhering to the simple fundamentals of driving: those basic rules that often are disregarded simply because they are so very common. Here are 10 reminders that can help you avoid If-Only driving, and perhaps save your life in the process:

1. Keep speed under control. Legal speed limits are set for ideal conditions. When traffic is heavy and conditions poor, lower your speed. Driving too fast for conditions is the biggest single factor in accidents.

2. Keep right of the center line. Sounds elementary, but head-on collisions are the most deadly type of accident.

3. Yield the right-of-way, even if it's legally yours. Who wants to be dead right? When in doubt — Yield.

4. Obey traffic signs every time. Nine times out of ten is no good: The time you don't is the time you wish you had.

5. Check rear-view mirror and be extra careful when changing lanes. Never pass on hills or curves, and watch out for those who do!

6. Long before turning, ease into the proper lane and give a continuous signal until turn is completed.

7. Keep a comfortable distance from car ahead. On open highway keep a car-length behind for each 10 mph of speed. Keep your eyes and mind ahead of the car ahead.

8. Never drive after drinking. Alcohol figures in one out of every three fatal traffic accidents.

9. Keep your car in good shape. Replace worn tires, keep brakes, lights, horn and windshield wipers working.

10. Drive defensively — that is, so skilfully that you do not create accident situations nor get trapped into those created by others.

MISSILE DEFINITION

Command guidance — a system whereby a missile's movement is guided by electronic commands from an outside source.

These common-sense rules can keep you safe if you observe them all the time you are driving. One momentary lapse — one error in judgment — one failure to anticipate — can ruin your perfect record and plunge you into a lifetime of If-Only regrets.

Still, traffic engineers say that there are several million really good drivers who will drive for a lifetime without becoming involved in an accident.

Will you be one of this select group? The experts say you can be, if only . . .

The services were held Monday at Chapel Four in the 9th Infantry area for the four—all Advanced Individual Trainees with the 9th's Company C.

Brigadier General Charles H. White Jr., commanding general, attended the Memorial Service at Chapel Four, which was filled with officers and enlisted men from the 9th Infantry and other division units.

The four victims were among 27 Company C trainees felled by the lightning bolt during a severe thunderstorm. Twenty-three trainees were admitted to Martin Army Hospital for treatment and observation and all have since been released, with the exception of one, a trainee who suffered minor burns.

Trucks were used to dispatch the less-seriously injured to Martin Army Hospital, while helicopters evacuated the others to the hospital within 15 minutes after the tragedy.

First aid and artificial respiration was administered to the injured by officers and noncommissioned officers at the scene.

Local Clergymen Tour Division

By Div PIO

Division Chaplains were hosts Monday to members of the Columbus Ministerial Alliance, the Phenix City Ministerial Alliance and representatives of Independent and Interdenominational churches.

Welcoming the clergymen at a luncheon, Brigadier General Charles H. White Jr., division commanding general, reminded them of the role of the Chaplain's Section, indicating that "the man that has been raised in the Church actually takes his church with him into the Army and the Army's religious program, then, becomes an extension of his church."

Conditions

The tour was designed to give the clery a feeling and appreciation of conditions under which chaplains work and men are trained in the division.

Chaplain (Major) James H. Fiser, division chaplain, and Chaplain (Major) Clement P. J. Krug, assistant division chaplain, escorted the members of local churches on a tour of the 2nd Infantry Division, including a Change of the Colors Ceremony and Miniature Review at Eisebagger Field on Kelley Hill.

Following the review they were entertained at Sand Hill Chapel Four with coffee and cake provided for the occasion by Combat Support Company of the 9th Infantry.

Meeting

A brief business meeting was held at the chapel, presided over by The Reverend Jimmy R. Cook, pastor of the Morningside Baptist Church, in Columbus, and the Reverend Langdon Garrison Jr., pastor of the First Methodist Church, in Phenix City. The Reverend Mr. Cook is president of the Columbus Ministerial Alliance and the Rev. Mr. Garrison is president of the Phenix City Ministerial Alliance. The Interdenominational Alliance was represented by the Reverend A. W. Fortson, pastor of the Friendship Baptist Church.

Representing the Catholic Clergy were Fathers Rocco D'Angelo and Claude Kennedy of Holy Trinity in Alabama.

Following the meeting at Chapel Four, the clergy were escorted to the Malone Range where they observed actual Train Fire, target mechanisms and a field mess.

Foreign Officer Finds Old Friend On Visit to 23rd

By 23rd Infantry PIO

Although it is not uncommon for the 23rd Infantry to host allied soldiers and give them a tour of the training area, it is rather unusual when the foreign officer and battle group executive officer are old friends.

This situation occurred recently when Captain Rossoul Rowsham of the Iranian Army visited the 23rd. He was accompanied on his tour by Lieutenant Colonel Frank T. Hurley, who had met Captain Rowsham several years ago when the Colonel was a military advisor to Iran.

Wall Racks Facilitate Armorer's Job at 11th

By 11th Inf PIO

New wall racks are being constructed in the arms room of Headquarters Company, 11th Infantry, to replace their conventional floor rifle racks.

Designed to afford more floor space, the new racks will accommodate the M-14 rifle in addition to the M-1.

Activity commenced after Specialist Four Marshall England, the armorer, complained that work in the arms room was extremely hampered because of the space consumed by the floor racks. His suggestion for the construction of wall racks was enthusiastically received by Captain Michael Sardis, Headquarters Company commanding officer.

The economical design, developed by Sergeant Kenneth Barrett, will add security as well as being relatively inexpensive.

Extending only seven inches from the wall, these racks are designed to accommodate the new M-14 rifle which cannot be secured in the racks currently in use.

In a recent inspection by the Military Intelligence Department, the MI team was very enthusiastic about the plans. They noted the economy of material, security provided and speed in which the racks could be installed.

The wall-type rack will greatly facilitate the checking of weapons, and will hold 25 weapons. The floor racks held but 20.

KOREA-BOUND 32ND INFANTRY GIVES COLORS TO KELLEY HILL 'SUCCESSOR'

By 1st Inf PIO

The new 2nd Battle Group, 1st Infantry received its colors from the Korean-bound 1st Battle Group, 32nd Infantry at Essebagger Field Monday.

The event climaxed ten months of training for the combat-ready 32nd Infantry and signaled the beginning of the eighth OVERUP cycle with the forming of the new 1st Infantry under Lieutenant Colonel Walter B. Todd.

The 32nd Infantry has spent the last year as the 2nd Battle Group, 1st Infantry at Fort Benning.

Exchange

The exchange of colors was made by 32nd Infantry Commander, Colonel James H. Hayes, to 1st Infantry commander, Lieutenant Colonel Walter B. Todd during the miniature review. Brigadier General Charles H. White Jr., division commander, paid final tribute to the out-going OVUREP battle group.

General White cited the 32nd Infantry's achievements and commended it for its "splendid performance" while a member of the Division. He expressed pride that the battle group would represent the division in Korea although assigned to the 7th Infantry Division.

Color guards of each divisional unit paid final tribute to the Battle Group and welcomed the new 1st Infantry into the Division during the closing ceremonies.

A spectator-filled stands included many foreign officers, guests from the Infantry School and members of the Columbus and Phenix City ministerial alliances.

Division Has Trained 68,000, General White Tells Kiwanians

BY PETER TATISTCHEFF

The 2nd Infantry Division has trained a total of 68,000 men since its reorganization at Fort Benning in June 1956, Brigadier General H. White Jr., commanding general, revealed Tuesday.

General White, in addressing the Columbus Kiwanis Club at the Ralston Hotel, discussed:

1. Work being done by the Division in summer training.
2. The Oversea Unit Replacement Program.
3. The amount of training accomplished in the Division since its reorganization in June 1956 at Fort Benning.

OVUREP

"The OVUREP program," he said, "is one of our important missions at the moment. It is still a test but we have proved it to be feasible." It is, in his opinion, an "excellent development in the process of building a unit."

Explaining that the primary mission of the 2nd Division was its training mission, General White emphasized that the military, like business, must adapt and grow. . . a good fighting man. . . must be trained in a flexible program." The OVUREP program, he said, is an example of such flexibility.

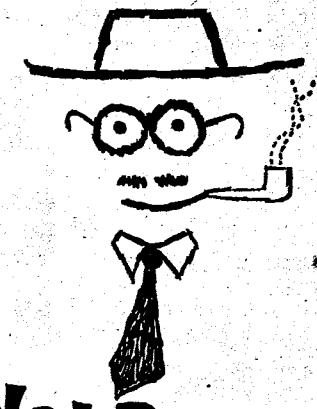
Turning to the training program in general, General White stated figures showing the number of men trained in various division training units since June, 1956. A total of 68,000 men have been trained. This included Basic combat Training, and Advanced Individual Training. More than 7,000 were trained as Heavy-Weapons Infantrymen. More than 8,000 were trained as Light-Weapons Infantrymen.

"Specifically, from July of last year until the end of June this year, we trained slightly over 19,000 individuals."

Turning to the subject of summer training, General White said that "every summer we expect to send at least a quarter of our trained personnel not only to areas in Fort Benning but to many different sectors of the south in order to help out in summer training."

The main summer activities mentioned by the 2nd Division commander were Reserve Officers Training Corps summer training and National Guard.

"Just to be technical," he said, "college students who are now receiving summer training total approximately 1,200 and represent 30 colleges and universities from six southern states." The R.O.T.C. summer program depends upon the experience of active service personnel.



Wrapping up the activity of the 2nd Infantry Division, General White said "I am proud to say that we are constantly improving our basic structure, meeting the growing demands of our peacetime missions, and, through improved training methods, in the long run, improving the quality of our final product—the American Soldier."

Stripped of His Chevrons, They All Address Him as Mister Now

Lieutenant Colonel Frances P. Sheridan, battalion commander of the 17th Artillery, in a solemn ceremony, recently stripped off the chevrons of Sergeant First Class Robert E. Brown, Headquarters and Headquarters Battery.

Although stripped of his rank, Sergeant Brown did not leave his unit in shame, but left the commander's office a warrant officer. Brown was recently sworn in as a reserve warrant officer, and was assigned to Headquarters, 2nd Infantry Division to begin a tour of active duty in his new status.

When ex-Sergeant Brown visits his old unit, cries of "Hey Sarge" will probably be met with a smile and the admonition: "Call me Mister."

69th Teaches Armor to 11th Infantry

By 69th Armor PIO

Two officers of the Royal Afghan Army recently paid a visit to the 11th Infantry's OVUREP (Oversea Unit Replacement) and found the infantrymen being taught the fundamentals of tank operations by the 69th Armor.

The Afghanistan officers, escorted by Lieutenant Richard R. Maglin, observed the training of the assault weapons platoon of the 11th's Combat Support Company.

Instruction

The platoon will be equipped with medium tanks during their unit training phase, receiving instruction in various phases of armor training.

The Division's 69th Armor is conducting training in gunnery maintenance, driving and communications.

The foreign officers, Lieutenants H. Sediqi and A. Kohistany, were escorted by Lieutenant Richard R. Maglin.

On the foreign officers' visit, Private John Ward and Private Roosevelt Jackson were taking turns driving, and Sergeant Billy J. Holcomb of the 69th's Company B acted as instructor and tank commander.

The two "foot soldiers," fresh out of Basic Combat Training, remarked that they were impressed by their first experience with tanks.

But Jackson observed:

"It isn't like driving a car."

Platoon Leader Awarded Medal At 11th Infantry

The 11th Infantry's communication platoon leader, Lieutenant Glenn H. Wilson, received the Army Commendation Medal last Saturday in the office of the commanding officer, Colonel John E. Arthur, for the performance of meritorious service during the period July 2, 1959 to February 28.

Lt. Wilson performed his job as tactical officer with the 61st Co., 5th Student Battalion, The Student Brigade, United States Army Infantry School in an outstanding manner.

While he was tactical officer, the native of Rutherfordton, N. C., was responsible for all the phases of development and evaluation of a platoon of Officer Candidates.

He accomplished this difficult mission through the use of personal influence, proper guidance, detailed counselling, and constant evaluation. For this display of diligence he was awarded the Army Commendation Medal.

Originality Pays Off at ReUp Office

Ingenuity plus a dime store toy, a few magazine clippings and an old beer company electric display unit have given the 23rd Infantry reenlistment office an attractive re-up reminder.

The battle group career counselor, Master Sergeant Warren J. Ottley is to be credited with the creation. He took the display, resplendant with background mirrors and three revolving panels, and put it to work for the Army. Out came the pictures of cool, foaming brew and in went color clippings of Army rockets, Infantrymen of the Future and a poster showing the advantages of re-upping Army.

To highlight the display, Sgt. Ottley bought a scale-model personnel carrier and placed it on the center revolving post.

The unusual display has caught the eye of almost everyone entering the sergeant's office in the 23rd Infantry trophy room. This includes Lieutenant Colonel R. G. Holton Jr., battle group commander, who complimented Sgt. Ottley on his originality.

Sgt. Ottley's ideas are not without value, since he has won the reenlistment NCO award for the past three months, the reenlistment award for 1960 and the trained enlistment plaque for 1960.

Units Hold Coffees

An imaginary Hawaiian vacation for "those unable to get away this summer" formed the theme for the 2nd Division Officers' Wives Club monthly coffee at the Main Officers' Open Mess on Tuesday.

Palm trees and baskets of fruit decorated the Main Ballroom. The baskets of fruit were given away as doorprizes.

The 1960-1961 Woman's Club Scrapbook was on display at the coffee. It was compiled by Mrs. Earl R. LeVier, historian of the club.

The ladies of the 7th Cavalry, wearing paper leis, served as hostesses and also poured. The punch bowls were covered with colorful canna leaves.

Mrs. Charles P. Frinks and Mrs. Arthur A. Tritsch were in charge of arrangements. The decorating committee consisted of Mrs. Richard O. Edwards, Mrs. William E. Griffiths, and Mrs. Ronald T. Richards. Mrs. Anthony J. Alfano and Mrs. Larry A. Wheeler arranged for door prizes.

The theme was especially appropriate because this month marks the anniversary of the annexation of Hawaii.

7th Cavalry

The 7th Cavalry officers' wives held their monthly coffee in the Anzio Room of the Main Officers' Open Mess on July 6. Mrs. Richard H. Schuessler and Mrs. Stauffer P. Malcom were hostesses.

Two newcomers were introduced to the group. They were Mrs. Joseph C. Gross and Mrs. Robert Murdock.

The Anzio Room was decorated with clusters of orange marigolds on the side tables. The main table was set with a centerpiece of multi-colored zinnias in a cut glass bowl. Mrs. Murdock poured.

A social hour was followed by a business meeting in which final arrangements for the 2nd Division Officers' Wives Club coffee were made. The 7th Cavalry ladies will be the hostesses for this month.

702nd Ordnance

The ladies of the 702nd Ordnance Battalion gathered in the Corregidor Room at the Main Officers' Open Mess on July 6 for their monthly coffee. Mrs. Herman D. Gano and Mrs. Chester F. Kopicki were hostesses.

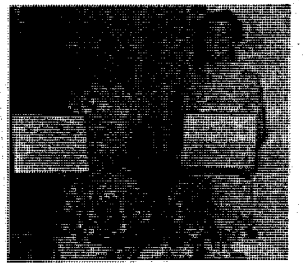
The serving table was centered with a lovely arrangement of white flowers. Mrs. Dock L. O'Neal poured.

A farewell gift was presented to Mrs. Lary L. Foore who is leaving the group this month.

2nd Aviation

Mrs. William R. Mahrt, Mrs. Gerald R. Beekman, and Mrs. Bruce L. Stover acted as hostesses at the 2nd Aviation Company's monthly coffee at the Main Officers Open Mess on Friday, July 7.

A floral arrangement decorated the serving table.



Mrs. James W. Grimes won the doorprize which was a hair styling by William on Lumpkin.

Farewells were said to Mrs. Weldon C. Britton and Mrs. Edmund L. Fuchs. Mrs. Dan Stefanowich and Mrs. Warren E. Griffiths were welcomed into the group.

Cook of the Week

This week we are hearing from the head of the household. Captain Edgar N. Kelley, Operations Officer, 2nd Aviation Company, is sharing his barbecue sauce recipe with us.

Capt. Kelley and his wife, Diana, live at 106B Arrowhead Road along with their three children Edgar, Jr. 9, Eleanor Ann 6, and Emily Nannette 4. Capt. Kelley's main interests outside of the Army are fishing and cooking.

His wife very proudly testifies to the fact that he does all the outdoor cooking and baking. (He has a family recipe for fruit cake which I am sure we will all be eager to see later in the year.)

Barbecue Sauce

1 bottle tomato catsup
1 tablespoon vinegar
1 tablespoon butter
1 teaspoon onion salt
½ teaspoon garlic salt
½ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
½ teaspoon pepper
Heat all ingredients and use to baste meat frequently.

69th Gives Welcoming Luncheon

The ladies of 69th Armor met recently for a luncheon held at the Villula Tea Garden.

During the luncheon, farewell was said to Mrs. Frank N. Kaney whose husband is leaving the battalion and returning to his basic branch of Quartermaster. The newcomers welcomed were: Mesdames Kay K. Gibbs, William F. Moore, Edward E. Sexton, Jacob P. Yelverton, Dan C. McCall, and William J Hickey. Corsages were presented to Mrs. Kaney and to each of the new ladies.

Hostesses for this luncheon were Mrs. William Spilker, Mrs. William A. Rusher and Mrs. Eugene E. Reardon.

Coffee Held at Officer's Club

The ladies of the 9th Infantry recently held their monthly coffee in the Normandy Room of the Main Officer's Club.

Hostesses for the event, representing Headquarters Company, were Mrs. S. E. Weary, Mrs. F. A. Darden, Mrs. J. C. Trickey, Mrs. P. J. Beachem, Mrs. H. L. Goldman and Mrs. N. L. Marsh.

The theme of the 9th Infantry coffee had a 4th of July flavor. Miniature flags and soldiers as well as firecrackers were placed about the room.

Cross-Country

On June 16, 1922, Lt. Col. G. L. Bissell inaugurated night cross-country flights between Bolling Field, Washington, D.C. and Langley Field, Va., and return.

Mrs. G. E. Armstrong bid welcome to six new arrivals in the 9th Infantry and at the same time, regretfully said farewell to six ladies who were departing with their husbands for new posts.

The Take-Out Double

BY JENNI JOHNSON

At the 87th Infantry couples bridge party this hand was dealt. Off-hand it does not seem unusual. Over bid by a too ambitious north and doomed to go down. Mrs. Charles H. Bolen offers her critique of the hand. Mrs. Bolen taught bridge at the Orly Air Force Base NCO Club in France when Major Bolen was stationed outside Paris before coming here to Fort Benning.

Dorothy Young Smith's ... THIS and THAT ...

Writer Acquires Vast Collection During Travels

Since my travels began when I was more young than gay, I soon acquired a collection of miniscule address books, letter openers, keys to cities, thumbprint ashtrays, and similar worthless souvenir counter trash. During my college years, I amassed, in addition to an impressive harvest of football banners, dance tallies, party favors, letters, and autographed menus, friendship rings and the more tokens of places I visited, mementos of my personal encounters with me [illegible] woven shell [illegible] native market.

Haphazard collecting is all very well when you live in a rambling well-closeted Victorian house and are going to spend your life there. But there came the day when the Colonel house which had sheltered three generations of my family proved impractical for only two persons. With the house went many of my treasures.

After that shattering experience I tried to confine my collecting to a more practical trend. Prior planning and knowing in advance what I want in each country or resort, keeps my useless purchases at a minimum, allowing me to select one or two items which can and will become a part of my everyday life instead of closet dusteatchers.

My after dinner coffee cups and accompanying spoons, acquired to many countries both before and after my marriage, are always a conversational opener. As I dust a bright blue Van Briggle vase, I remember a delightful summer in Colorado Springs.

Everytime I bake, the canisters bring back a peaceful day spent wandering up and down tree-shaded canals in Delft, Holland. As the crab-like claws of my sugar tongs grasp a cube, I remember the now humorous difficulties I encountered that day in Paris when I discovered the oddity. Shoes, purses, dishes, and countless other personal and household items remind us of our tour of duty in Bamberg, Germany.

Potatoes

During the last three weeks farmers' revolts have erupted all over Brittainy. Behind these rural uprisings is the falling price of potatoes, long a Breton staple crop. Which brings to mind that few plants have a more fascinating history than the potato, now taken for granted in so many countries.

The potato, as we know it today, is no longer extensively grown in South and Central America, although, oddly enough, that is where it originated. Potatoes found in the tombs of pre-Incan races let us know that the vegetable was grown for thousands of years before the white man reached the New World.

Like its cousin the tomato the potato is a member of the deadly nightshade family and was once poisonous. Also like the tomato, the potato was cultivated in our sister continent until it became edible.

The good old spud is a seasoned traveler. The Spaniards took them back to Spain. Then the Spaniards brought them to Florida in 1560 and English raiding parties captured Spanish food supplies and took them to England. While the British looked upon the vegetable with considerable distaste, the Irish went for them in a big way. When Captain John Smith's party sailed for America, they brought them back again. The English colonists, not knowing the tuber's history, called them "Irish" potatoes and so they have come down in our own history.

Mrs. R. L. Brown Honored at Coffee

An introductory coffee honoring Mrs. Robert L. Brown, wife of the Second Infantry Division Sergeant Major, was given by Mrs. Lawrence W. Smith at her home last Thursday.

The serving table, overlaid with a lace cloth, was centered by an arrangement of summer flowers. Mrs. Bilbo Nowell, wife of the division G-1 Sergeant Major, poured.

Guests, in addition to the honoree and Mrs. Nowell, were Mrs. Ralph B. Patterson, Mrs. Edward W. Minnick, and Mrs. James L. Runyon.

pts. and even though south had 9 added to North's 14 makes only 23 counting distribution and is 3 pts short of the 26 needed for game in a major suit. North jumped to game on impulse certainly not on pts. and got doubled for her bravery. However looking at east's hand, which certainly warranted a party double, with 13 high card pts, why not make a takeout double at east's first opportunity to bid.

Review the bidding. South, as dealer, cannot open. West hesitates to open a very distributional hand in second position with minimum 13. When north bid 1 spade as third hand east can use a take-out double. East has a opening hand and can support hearts or diamonds, and should west bid clubs can respond with no trump. Look at the bidding this way:

1 ♣	Double 2 ♥	3 ♦
Pass	Pass	Double

South raises north's spades as before. But now West speaks, and bids the long diamond suit which partner's take-out double asks for. If north continues to three spades she will go down even at three for now east will lead the ♥ of diamonds and north will lose the ace, king of diamonds, 2 spade tricks and 2 club tricks. So north should pass. East and west have 26 pts. and this is not game for them either, and east passes. West plays and makes a 3 diamond contract. This is a part score hand. West might as well take it for 3 diamonds as let north have it for 2 spades!

East certainly should enter the bidding as fourth hand with 13 pts. as Mrs. Bolen suggests with a take-out double. This take-out double makes it possible for the east-west partnership to score, either by making 3 diamonds or by setting 3 spades, for the diamond response to east's take-out double will draw a diamond lead.

First round bidding is very important and if a player holds opening count it is rare that he should pass in fourth position.

Host and hostess for this bridge party were Lt. Col. and Mrs. William T. Gordon. High for the evening was Chaplain Robert Young. Second high was Capt. Alan Horwedel. Lieutenant James Gritz and Chaplain Young tied for the bingo hand.

It Takes Much Food For NCO Club Feed

BY DIV PIO

What does it take to satisfy the appetite of the average 2nd Infantry Division non-commissioned officer?

Well, from the quantity of food required for a smorgasborg served recently at the division NCO Club it is doubtful that anyone went away hungry.

Sergeant First Class George T. Ertel, club manager, said some 1,300 people were fed from a massive array of food that included, just to name some of it, sliced ham, fried chicken, sliced turkey, tossed salad, deviled eggs and assorted fruits.

To prepare the meal, Sgt. Ertel reported such quantities of food needed included 300 pounds of roast beef, 200 pounds of baked ham, eight turkeys, 16 cases of chicken, 100 pounds of turkey salad, 100 pounds of chicken salad, 90 pounds of assorted cold cuts, 200 pounds of potato salad, 150 pounds of macaroni salad, 20 gallons of baked beans, 60 pounds of combination salad, 30 pounds of lettuce wedges, one case of stuffed celery, 40 pounds of deviled eggs and 300 pounds of assorted fruit.

Afterwards, some 12 sheet cakes that were left over from the feast were sent to Martin Army Hospital, along with chicken and macaroni salad for patients who were not on restricted diets, Sgt. Ertel said.

Another smorgasbord is planned for July 15 along with a whole-hog barbeque, he added.

Radio Chief At 11th Earns DOD Citation

By 11th Inf PIO

Sergeant Lawrece E. Nusbaum, the 11th Infantry's Radio Section chief, recently received a Certificate of Merit from the Department of Defense for the flawless reception in International Morse Code of the 1961 Armed Forces Day message.

The Defense Citation, signed by Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara, cited Sgt. Nusbaum for his unusual proficiency in receiving this message, transmitted at 25 words per minute, without an error.

'Well Done'

In addition, Sgt. Nusbaum received a letter of congratulation personally singed with a "well done" by A. B. Kunz, commander, U. S. Navy, head of the Naval Reserve. Commander Kunz remarked that "it is most gratifying to see the work results of a skilled international morse code operator." The 11th Infantry's Radio Section Chief, who has been an amateur radio operator for seven years, received the Navy's transmission of the 1961 Armed Forces Day message.

In June of 1960, when Sgt. Nusbaum was with the 57th Ordnance Group in Germany, he took top honors in code competition at the International Ham Festival held at Karlsruhe. These transmissions were made at 40 words per minute.

The "ham" operator is also a member of the Military Affiliate Radio System (MARS).

69th Tankers Turn Infantrymen To Train Visiting ROTC Cadets

By 69th Armor PIO

Can a tanker fight on foot? The men of Company C, 69th Armor, are certain they can.

The tankers are currently demonstrating their versatility to 1,600 Reserve Officers Training Corps Cadets. At the rate of one company per day, the Cadets are watching the tankers demonstrate "The Rifle Squad in Action."

Using M-14 rifles and automatic rifles, the tankers demonstrate the fundamentals of range determination, characteristics of rifle and automatic rifle fire, and landscape target firing. In their parent unit, the basic weapons of the demonstrators are the .45 callber pistol and the .90 millimeter gun.

Two Ranges

The demonstrations are being given on two ranges, Ninninger and Carkner. After watching the tankers perform, the Cadets fire on the ranges themselves. On each of the complex ranges, 20 69th Armor men operate the targets, machine guns and demolitions.

The NCOIC on Ninninger Range is Sergeant First Class Alfred I. Goodsell and the NCOIC on Carkner Range is Sergeant First Class Marvin M. Wichers, both of Company C.

Most of the 69th Armor men had never fired the M-14 and the automatic rifle before the day of the demonstration. The demonstration requires some most accurate firing, as they must mark their sectors of fire with their weapons.

The Officer-in-Charge of the ranges, Major Lawrence E. Bishop, has emphasized to the cadets that the men giving the demonstration are tankers, not infantrymen. Captain Harold W. Roeder, commanding officer of Company C, reports Major Bishop praised the tankers for their "very accurate firing."

Captain Roeder says this has been a company project and he is proud of the enthusiasm and "esprit-de-corps" of his men. But no one has requested a transfer to the infantry. "Apparently, they still prefer to ride," Captain Roeder says.

Three Foreign Officers Visit, Tour 23rd Infantry

By 23rd Inf. PIO

The 23rd Infantry recently played host to a field grade officer of the Pakistan Army.

Major Mahmud Ali Akhtar of the Baluh Regiment was conducted on an extensive tour of the battle group with special emphasis on logistical operations and a briefing on the unit's history and traditions.

Major Akhtar was welcomed to the 23rd area by Lieutenant Colonel R. G. Holton Jr., battle group commander.

Career Course

A recent graduate of the Infantry School's associate career course, Major Akhtar came to the United States six months ago.

During this time he has visited many military posts in the southeastern part of the country.

The Pakistan officer has been in the Army since 1941. He served in Burma during World War II, and his last assignment was assistant S-4 in Corp Headquarters prior to his arrival in the United States.

According to Major Akhtar, one of his strongest impressions since coming to this country has been the friendliness of Americans, both civilians and military.

'Lost'

He told of being lost while driving in Atlanta with a group of foreign officers and being unable to find the highway leading to Columbus. He asked a woman in a nearby car for assistance. She said to follow her car, and she led him to the correct turnoff. He then learned that she had been on her way to a meeting, but she had been willing to be late in order to help the officers find their way in unfamiliar territory.

Major Akhtar leaves Fort Benning soon for Washington, D.C, New York and then a tour of military installations in Europe.

Lieutenants

Two Afghanistan Army lieutenants also observed training recently in the 23rd Infantry's Combat Support Company.

Lieutenants Habibullah Sedigi and Kadzf Kahnistany were briefed at the infantry platoon leader level in such fields as patroling, map reading, rifle squad tactics and Chemical - Biological - Radiological refresher training. They also became familiar with the organic equipment of Combat Support Company.

The two allied officers participated in a current events discussion with Combat Support trainees. They described their country and explained its role in combatting the spread of Communism.

Ristau Wins Opener In Division Matches

SPORT NEWS

BY PETER TATISTCHEFF

Lieutenant Gerald R. Ristau, Division Artillery, battled his way to a 6-1, 6-1 victory over Lieutenant James B. Edwards of 2nd Administration Company, in the first game of the 2nd Division Tennis Tournament, Monday.

Taking a quick three game lead in the first set, Ristau displayed a smashing serve which caught Edwards off guard time and time again. The opponents shot powerful long shots relying on misjudgements, trying each other out on their weak points.

Attempts Fail

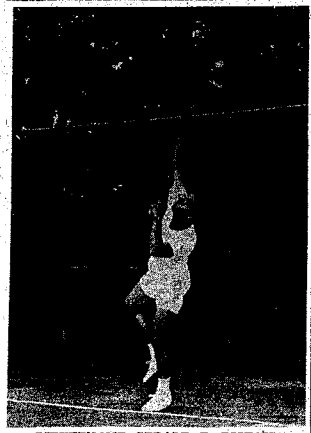
Attempts by Ristau to rush the next and catch his opponent in a suicide defensive failed as Edwards took the fourth game 40-15.

The advantage then swung back to the agile Ristau, taking the next three games to win the set. The pace increased from point to point, playing evened out, as the players backed each other up with long low skimmers.

The second set began, Edwards serving and winning the first game. Attempts by Ristau to rush and smash once again ended in failure.

A badly placed smash by Edwards in the second game of the final set threw the advantage to Ristau, whose fleet-footed returns and long left-right shots began to turn the tide of the match.

Ristau went on to win the next six games, struggling for each point of the well-matched battle. Neither player seemed to tire as they went into the tenth game of the match; each playing an aggressive game. It was then that Ristau finally connected with a good rush to the net, cornering his opponent in the back of his court. Edwards, began to lob his returns, setting up his opponent, the first of these coming late in the eleventh game.



Ristau went on to win the match, Edwards showing signs of tiring only in the next to last game. Even then no game was sure as Edwards constantly rallied, never willing to take the defensive.

Other games played Monday in the open singles matches were:

Lt. Clay N. Mobley vs Rct. Keith E. Jacoby (Mobley 6-0, 6-0)

Lt. Ron Groshong vs Lt. Kenneth Crane (Groshong 6-2, 6-2)

Lt. William L. Patrick vs Capt. Chico deRouen (deRouen 3-6, 6-4, 6-3)

SNAKES WERE MONEY IN THE BANK FOR THIS EX-FANCIER OF OPHIDIANS

By Richard Hassar

A family "pet" that wound up as six and one-half feet of troublesome dynamite recently took up a new residence in the San Diego, California, zoo, although still yearning for the freedom of the family swimming pool he considered home.

The "pet," a water boa constrictor with the official handle of anaconda, was the prize possession of Private Elliot Noska of the 9th Infantry's Company D.

Prior to entering the Army earlier this year, the 9th Infantry driver owned a collection of 27 different snakes, one of which possessed an ultra-deadly venom that guaranteed death in just over two minutes. This particular crawler, a Gaboone Viper, is considered the third most poisonous snake in the world.

The professional snake handler began his collection while still a high school junior. What started as a hobby soon developed into a profitable business. Besides selling his ophidians to various California zoos, Noska learned that the venom of his more treacherous vipers was "money in the bank."

He began to "milk" his rattlers and then sold the valuable venom to the University of California at Los Angeles (UCLA) research laboratories. Noska also turned a neat profit on a non-poisonous 15-foot Regal python when he sold the reptile to the San Diego zoo for $800. He had originally purchased the python for $175.

In order to feed the larger snakes in the collection, the Noska backyard was transformed into a menagerie consisting of chickens and small pigs to satisfy the palates of these tubular titans.

Freedom

However, just before Noska's entering the Army, the family homestead in Malabu, California, cheerfully bade adieu to every last inch of reptiles as the serpents were either sold or given their freedom.

The only snakes Noska now handles are those he finds in and around the dense vegetated areas where the 9th Infantry holds training. He captured a copperhead in the 9th's Unit Training Area Three recently. Noska also has corralled several bullsnakes up to five and one-half feet in length. They all now reside at the Ranger station at Fort Benning's Harmony Church.

As a professional in this line of work, Noska does not recommend that amateurs try their hand at catching any of the slithering reptiles that make their annual appearance during the summer months. The reason is obvious as there are several poisonous varities populating the Sand Hill area of Fort Benning.

Bermuda's Fish Tourney Open Through November

Bermuda's 19th annual Game Fishing Tournament has just barely begun, and already more than 400 fish have bitten the "dust," or whatever it is they hit when they take their last bite.

Mike Fountain, director of the Fishing Information Bureau here, said this year's seven-month-long contest may well be the best ever held. Entries are coming in at a steady pace, he said.

One entry, a 107-pound Allison tuna caught on 30-pound-test line, has even set a new Bermuda record. The big fish was hooked by John Hunter of the Virginia (Richmond) Anglers Club.

Another outstanding entry is a 133-pound Allison caught on heavy tackle by Bermudian Joe DeCosta.

The tournament, which ends November 30, is open to all amateur fishermen, and prizes will be awarded in all of the 16 species of fish which are eligible for entry. A monthly prize will be awarded for specified types.

Included among the eligible species are bonefish, wahoo, amberjack, bonito, baracuda, dolphin, white marlin, blue marlin, blackfin tuna, Allison (yellowfin) tuna, pompano, mackerel and Bermuda chub.

Trophies will be awarded for fish taken on 10, 20, and 30-pound-test lines as well as those taken on heavy tackle.

The tournament will be run under International Game Fishing Association rules. Entry blanks can be obtained from the Fishing Information Bureau, Hamilton, Bermuda.

Biddy Leaguer Hurls No-Hitter In YAC Baseball

George T. Oncale Jr., came close to being a one-man team recently, pitching a near-perfect game at Twin Fields in the Custer Terrace Area.

Georgie went the route (six innings), allowing no hits in his win over Team 7 of the YAC Biddy League. Georgie pitches for Team 3, known as the "Wagon Trains."

Of the 18 batters he faced, he struck out 14, walked only 3, and caught the only "pop-up" in the game. He assisted his own win at the plate, slugging a triple and a single in four trips to the plate and driving in five of his team's ten runs.

He has been selected by his team to play in the Biddy League All-Star Team.

Pfc Cleveland Brown of the 151st Engineers collected his second hit in the twelfth inning, a single to right field, and Sgt. James Hill followed with a double to center. Pfc Emery struck out twelve batters in collecting the victory.

Southpaw Pfc Martin Leicht of the Engineers held TSB hitless for 11 complete innings, and in the twelfth inning, 2nd Lt. Jim Frum got on by error when shortstop Pfc Bruce Woods made a bad throw to first base on Lt. Frum's grounder.

Pfc Brewer was being given an intentional base on balls, but pitcher Pfc Leicht tossed one inside the strike zone and Pfc Brewer rapped it into center field, scoring Lt. Frum for the winning tally.

The winners had a total of seven men left on base and the losers had nine. Pfc Brown's two singles, Sgt. Hill's double, and Pfc Ted Racz single accounted for the Engineer's four hits.

Pfc Ray Young, of the 10th Artillery Redlegs, hit a one-run double in the first inning, and a one-run sacrifice fly to center field in the third along with Sp4 Bob Stewart's one-run triple in the ninth inning to account for the 3-2 victory over the 29th Infantry last Sunday afternoon.

Sp4 David Johnson held the Two-Niners to six hits, taking credit for the victory. The losing pitcher, right-hander 2nd Lt. John Henning, was lifted in the eighth inning after giving up only three hits, one the game's deciding blow, a one-run triple by Sp4 Stewart to deep center field for the winning run. Pvt. Roy Bond relieved Lt. Henning and went the route, giving up only one hit.

Pfc Al Spencer paced the losers with two "back-to-back" triples and a single for four trips to the plate. This setback left the Two-Niners with an 0-2 record for the second half of the Major Unit Baseball League play.

Today's Sportrait

Today's Sportrait spotlights Sfc Bob Kinard, of The Student Brigade. He has been active in sports since he was five years old. Although interested in all types of sports, baseball and basketball are among his favorites.

He is now head coach of The Student Brigade baseball team, and coached the brigade basketball team last season, which broke standing records on post. He has been coach of championship teams on post for the past three years in baseball and basketball.

During his active baseball career, Sgt. Kinard played second base and was among the top five batters on his squad. One of the most exciting games of his career was the Major League All-Stars played in Columbus in 1951. Sgt. Kinard was credited with a double off Whitey Ford, now the ace southpaw for the New York Yankees.

SFC KINARD

Sgt. Kinard has trophies ranging from tennis and baseball to basketball, all as a player or coach. He was named post athlete of the year in 1948, at that time as a member of an Airborne battalion, for his commendable performances in baseball and basketball.

The Student Brigade baseball team won the first half of major unit play so far this year with a 2-1 record and was victor of a three game play-off with the 151st Engineers for the season's first half championship.

Sgt. Kinard, brigade coach, is looking forward to bringing the Third Army Baseball Championship back to post for the first time in two years.

Four out of every 40 acres of the Fort Benning forest area will provide better feeding and nesting in the future, according to a program now in the final stages of planning.

Estimated acreage to be marked out for clearing and planting was agreed upon as the result of an intensive survey conducted jointly by representatives of the U. S. Forestry and Fish and Wildlife Departments, our post Engineers and the Fish and Game Maintenance Association.

In a conversation with MSgt. George David, wild life aide, I learned that this program of fish and game management will really get under way this fall and next spring. It is expected to be continuous and will tie in with Forestry lumbering objectives on post, with aspects of the Walter George Dam backwaters, and a string of long-range projects.

..Signs of operations can already be seen, especially along Uchi Creek where power saws are busy knocking down timber at the water's edge. Perhaps you've noticed splashes of red paint far up the banks which, I understand, indicate the projected water level of the future. Everything below that level is scheduled for removal and Sgt. Davis seems to think that Uchi and other post creeks are going to be hottest of the post's hot fishing spots.

The word is that deer, turkey and quail are on the upswing again this year and anyone seeing a little fawn could help with the F&G Association study by reporting time and location and, in addition, try to see whether the little thing has any signs of budding antlers.

If post game is on the upswing now, I wonder what will happen when the conservation really gets going . . . but then, any program of such nature and scope must depend upon everyone — not just a handful of forestry and wildlife officials.

From where I sit, any step-up in fish and game management should also see added interest by the sportsman who is the ultimate recipient of any results attained. One of the most difficult phases of the planned program will be the coping in with our field trailing and that's where you come in.

..Naturally, the F&G Association has been planting in isolated areas but then, too, some of our training problems cover a lot of ground . . . so do the best you can to prevent a lot of hard work from going down the drain.

King's Pond is growing prettier every day — have you gone out, yet?

Football Workouts Are Begun; Capt. Leaton Cofield Is Coach

By Pfc Joe Kachero

Football is silently creeping back into the sports spotlight here at Fort Benning, and only two weeks remain before the first full-scale "hard" workout has been scheduled by new head coach Capt. Leaton C. Cofield.

The Jet, Okla., native, coming to the post from Brooke Army Medical Center, Tex., recently moved his offices into The Infantry Center Athletic Department and started the ball rolling on getting the 1961 Doughboys back together.

Heavy workouts are slated to start around Thursday, but for the past few days the new coach has been holding chalk talks and meetings at the new team billets.

The need for more players seems to be pressing Capt. Cofield. In an interview recently, he stated, "In order to have a good team, you have to show that you are trying to help them, and in return, they'll play good ball for you."

He also said that being from The Infantry Center, a lot is expected from the Doughboys. In short, the post is nearly pressed into having a successful team. More players are needed to form the nucleus of this squad.

According to early reports from the coaching staff, only five men and possibly six at the most, have returned from last year's squad.

One of the main trouble areas so far has been the end position. At the meetings and talks, which are held Monday through Friday, and Saturday mornings, no likely candidates for that position have turned out.

"If we can get two good ends, we can build that position from there," declared Capt. Cofield.

Plans for the team this season include billeting in a special barracks to keep the team together. In the building, the training and dressing rooms will be located on the ground floor with all unmarried personnel living in the upstairs part of the structure.

Light workouts were started last week, with players turning out in sweat togs. The preliminary conditioning phase will come to a close next week as the hard, back-breaking drills get underway.

One of the minor things bothering the new Doughboy leader is the question of attendance. During his stay at Brooke Army Medical center, his charges played before crowds of all sizes.

"The largest crowd we played before was 17,000 one afternoon. And the smallest was 9,000 that turned out on a rainy day."

In order to attract a large attendance at the games, a top notch team must rank with the best service teams in the nation. The level of ball is good because many of the high-ranking college stars in the nation crowd the rosters.

Many times service football has been used as the medium between collegiate and professional football.

The season's schedule for the post team has not been released as yet, but indications show it to be a rough one, facing some of the major service teams in the country.

Private Sets Top Pace

(AFPS) — Two, three and even four varsity lettermen are common in collegian athletic circles this day and age, but Pvt. Leslie Spriggs Jr. earned eight monograms during his undergraduate days at Hanover College, Ind.

Although he captained the cross-country team in his senior year, Spriggs carved his niche in college sports in track events. Primarily he specialized in the mile run, hurdles, two-mile run and broad jump. He still holds the school's record in the two-mile run.

Spriggs also claims a couple of AAU titles. He won the mile walk in 1957 and 1958 in the Indiana State meet, and then placed eighth in the two-mile walk in the national meet at Dayton, Ohio.

What is he doing in the Army? You guessed it. The long-legged athlete recently participated in the Post Track Meet at Fort Knox and won the 220-yard low hurdles event in 28 seconds flat.

15 Complete EIB Testing, Get Badges

Graduation ceremonies for 15 Expert Infantryman's Badge Class 4 were held last Saturday in the 1st Infantry Brigade area as Col. Charles T. Horner, Jr., brigade commander, pinned on the coveted badges. Fifteen personnel received the badge and two Artillery officers were awarded a certificate of completion.

Honor graduate of the class was 2d Lt. Stephan Howe, Company D, 1st Battle Group, 29th Infantry, 1st Infantry Brigade. During the testing conducted last week covering a multitude of military proficiencies, Lt. Howe amassed a total of 1,520 points out of a possible 1,900. Second high graduate was Sfc William R. Gregory, Company D, 1st Armored Rifle Battalion, 58th Infantry, who had totaled 1,451 points. Following third with 1,432 points was Sp4 Frank R. Anderson, Combat Support Company, 1st Battle Group, 29th Infantry.

Other graduates in the latest class to pass the rigorous tests were 2d Lt. Elton E. Engstrom, Company C, 58th Infantry; Sgts. Michael B. Batala, Theodore Hollingsworth, and Thomas C. Lee, all of Company B, 58th Infantry; Sgts. Lewis Broomfield and Konello Sagaio of Company A, 56th Infantry; Sgt. William C. Bell, Sgt. Albert B. Porter, Cpl. James Bartenfield, and Pfc Alfonso T. Hart, all of Combat Support Company, 1st Battle Group, 29th Infantry; Sgt. Carlos Santiago, Company D, 29th Infantry; and Pfc Joseph L. Marucci, Hq and Hq Company, 1st Infantry Brigade.

Second Lieutenants Roland P. Brown and George W. Spence, both of Battery C, 2d Howitzer Battalion, 10th Artillery, received certificates of completion from Col. Horner.

Masquers--Unmasked

By Pfc Charles Parise

Pfc Elliot Paul, director of the recently successful "Girls in 509" and a member of the 1st Infantry Brigade, has been chosen president of the Masquers, Fort Benning's Little Theater Group.

A native of Boston, Elliot comes to us via Wesleyan University, Middletown, Conn., and Boston University.

Before his induction into the Army, Elliot was managing a coffeehouse in the "Late George Apley's" section by night, and carrying a full load of Philosophy and French courses by day at Boston University. A sometime musician, writer and actor, Elliot's Theater credits run all the way from deck hand in "Billy Budd" to Billy Herndon in "Abe Lincoln in Illinois".

Pfc Vince Dedario, who did such an excellent job handling the sound and special effects of "509", has been chosen as vice president of the group, a position in which his vast experience and judgment can be used effectively. Phyllis Tritsch, the eccentric Aunt Hettie in "509" who "hadn't been down to the corner in 26 years", was chosen secretary. Wes Carr, who created the marvelous role of Old Jim, the frustrated but witty actor-elevator operator, was elected business manager.

Jane Walsh was unanimously reelected to the post of treasurer, a position of great responsibility which she has handled so well in the past. John Olbrys, the stuffy junior law partner in "509", has been selected to handle properties while Doug Moir, one of the cynical newspaper reporters, will be in charge of personnel.

The Masquers' Radio Workshop is in full swing with tapes already completed including "The Hitchhiker", "Sorry, Wrong Number", and the "Thousand Dollar Wife". Stafford is directing the workshop in the absence of Peg Teeters, and current scheduling has the workshop meeting on Tuesday and Thursday evenings at the playhouse. Radio drama opens a new door for the organization, one that is sure to be a success.

A play-selectim committee is already at work choosing the Masquers' next major production which is scheduled for the late summer or early fall. The announcement of readings for parts is forthcoming and all friends and associates of the Masquers are urged to watch for it.

1st Brigade Starts Safe Driver Plan

A Driver Education Program has been established in each unit of the 1st Battle Group, 29th Infantry, 1st Infantry Brigade, for the purpose of indoctrinating all personnel in the practices of safe driving.

For the first two weeks, which began July 3, 30 minutes a week will be devoted to this subject, with 15 minutes a week thereafter.

Unit commanders may, as an additional measure, invite each individual involved in a plain the mishap to the assembled men of his unit. This explanation will cover the circumstances surrounding the accident, as well as the steps the individual personally took to avoid the accident.

A major reason for the Driver Education Program is the increased amount of fatal injuries to servicemen during the past year.

Fifteen Attend

Annual Camp Sitwa Here Entertains Handicapped

Fifteen children from the Cerebral Palsy Center in Columbus are "camping out" this week at the post.

The campers arrived on the post Sunday and will remain through today.

An annual affair, the Cerebral Palsy Camp is sponsored by the Columbus Civitan Club for United Cerebral Palsy of Muscogee County, Inc.

Ten enlisted men and two officers from Battery C, 2nd Howitzer Battalion, 10th Artillery, 1st Infantry Brigade, set up the camp Saturday at The Infantry Center Special Services Recreational Area.

Activities scheduled for the campers include horseback riding; a dog show, rides on an Army "mechanic mule," a cargo vehicle; music, games, crafts, nature study, camports and hikes.

A sample of life in the Army, the camp is equipped with tents and cots. The food is prepared and served Army style.

Mrs. Luke Teasley of Columbus is camp director. Junior counselors are eight Senior Girl Scouts and two Explorer Scouts.

A registered nurse is on duty at the camp.

The Hunt Club furnished a horse for the campers to ride.

The 26th Infantry Scout Dog Platoon staged a demonstration at the camp Wednesday morning.

The Surgeon Says

A Look Inside MAH Kitchens

The Production and Service Branch of the Food Service Division operates the kitchens and dining rooms of the Old Hospital and Martin Army Hospital.

The kitchen and dining room in the Old Hospital accomodates the off-duty detachment personnel and personnel who work there. Pastry products are sent from the bake shop in Martin Army Hospital but meals are cooked in the kitchen of the Old Hospital. The menu is identical with the Martin Army Hospital menu.

The hospital's regular menu provides a well-balanced diet adequate in all nutrients. This menu average 3200 calories per day. Food likes and dislikes are taken into consideration. The availability of food, seasonal supply and price affect the menu.

Time consuming work such as cleaning shrimp must be avoided. Equipment can limit a menu, but the hospital kitchen is fortunate in having adequate ovens, stoves and refrigerators. A typical day's menu reads:

Breakfast
Chilled Orange Juice
Assorted Dry Cereal or Oatmeal
Hot Cakes-Hot Syrup
Crisp Bacon
Toast — Butter — Jelly
Milk Coffee

Dinner
Black Bean Soup — Crackers
Barbecued Spareribs
O'Brien Potatoes
Sauerkraut
Pear-Cottage Cheese Salad
Bread Butter
Eclairs
Milk — Coffee — Tea

Supper
Swiss Steak-Gravy
Mashed Potatoes
Buttered Spinach
Tossed Salad w-Oil and Vinegar Dressing
Pineapple Filled Cake
Milk — Coffee — Tea

The main MAH kitchen prepares the regular and modified diet food served to the patients and duty personnel. Approximately 650 people are served at the noon meal. An accurate estimate of the number of people expected at each meal must be made based on past records.

The Army cook book, with recipes yielding 100 portions and file receipts are the sources of most of the meals. Both military and civilian cooks are employed. Many of the civilian cooks have had years of experience as military cooks.

Cooking time is staggered to avoid drying out or over cooking food. Vegetables are cooked in small amounts to maintain freshness, flavor, and appearance. In a typical day, 550 pounds of potatoes are consumed.

It takes 195 pounds of hamburger meat for a noon meal of meat loaf. Eighty pies are required for one meal.

Ambulatory patients and duty personnel are served from cafeteria lines. A special cafeteria line is set up for the patients requiring modified diets. Diabetic, reduction, dental soft, low salt, liquid, bland, low fat, low cholesterol, and low purine diets are some of the modified diets served daily.

The food for the bed patients is loaded on hospital food carts and sent to the wards. Food served and satisfying to the patient is considered an important part of overall patient care and treatment.

Printing Plant Hits Top Output

More than 369 million pages of instructional literature and related material were printed at the Army Field Printing Plant during the fiscal year which ended June 30.

The production figure not only exceeds the projected total for the year but is the maximum printed in any year since the plant was established 41 years ago.

Ten years ago, in fiscal year 1951, the production total was approximately 180 million pages. The plant's output has risen steadily, while the number of employees has decreased from 114 to 97.

Officials attribute the larger production with fewer personnel to efficient organization and planning, improved equipment, and to the skill and devotion of employes.

A recent report of an inspection of the plant by a representative of the Army's Adjutant General Office reads in part, "The plant is well arranged, permitting a smooth and orderly work flow."

Operated by the Editorial and Pictorial Office of The Infantry School, the printing plant's primary mission is to produce instructional literature for the school.

The plant also produces the majority of other post publications and quanities of material for Third Army.

Lt. Col. Harold K. Slater is chief of the Editorial and Pictorial Office, while Lt. Col. Clarence W. Welch is chief of the printing plant.

VOL. 19, NO. 45 FRIDAY, JULY 21, 1961 FORT BENNING, GA. 32 Pages 5c

Col. Horner To Assume Paris Post

COL. HORNER

Col. Charles T. Horner, Jr., commander of the 1st Infantry Brigade, is scheduled to depart Fort Benning at the end of July for an assignment with SHAPE (Supreme Headquarters, Allied Powers Europe) Headquarters, Paris, France.

Col. Horner has commanded the brigade since April, 1960, having served as chief, Combat Developments Office, The Infantry School, prior to that time.

Sightseeing Field will be the scene of a Farewell Review for Col. Horner tomorrow. The review, comprised of mounted and dismounted units of the brigade, will get under way at 10 a.m. and is open to the public. Commander of troops will be Col. Samuel W. Koster.

Units Have Role In 'Swift Strike'

Approximately 900 troops from The Infantry Center will participate in Exercise Swift Strike at Fort Bragg, August 6 to 20.

The tactical exercise will include the 82nd and 101st Airborne Divisions.

Departing the post July 18 for the command post exercise will be the 596th Signal Company, Infantry Center Troop Command.

Leaving around August 2 will be the 1st Aviation Company, Headquarters and Headquarters Detachment of the 3rd Transportation Battalion, the 19th and 31st Transportation Companies and the 138th and 593rd Transportation Detachments, all of Lawson Army Aviation Command; the 586th Engineer Company, 151st Engineer Group; the second platoon, 45th Medical Company, and the 50th Medical Company, 428th Medical Battalion.

The 50th Medical Company, 428th Medical Battalion, will be the largest supporting medical unit in the field during exercise Swift Strike. The company is commanded by Capt. Benjamin Kilpatrick.

The Second Platoon, 45th Medical Company (Air Ambulance) will accompany the 50th to give medical support to the field training exercise.

The Fort Benning medical units will act as the cleaning agencies for both Aggressor and defending forces.

Major Gordon Gunton, Canadian liaison officer at The Infantry School, will observe Airborne operations in the exercise August 11 and 12.

Military units from 25 states, ranging across the country from California to New Hampshire, will take part in the joint Army-Air Force training exercise to be conducted in the area of North Carolina and South Carolina.

In addition to active Army and Air Force units, Air Force Reservists and Air National Guardsmen from a number of states will participate.

Army Airborne divisions and support units from the South and Southwest will be joined by Air Force tactical and troop carrier units based throughout the country. They will combine in an inter-service demonstration of the ability of the Strategic Army Command and Tactical Air Command composite air strike force in placing a combat-ready striking force in any area of the world on very short notice, and in sustaining such a force during combat operations.

Exercise Swift Strike will be held almost completely on civilian domain. It will be the first time since the Louisiana Maneuvers of 1941 that such a massive exercise within the U. S. has been held not within the bounds of military reservations.

It signals the high point of the summer encampment season with large numbers of Air Force Reserve and Air National Guard flying units and their supporting ground elements going into action with active TAC elements to air support troops of the Army's XVIII Airborne Corps.

The two Army Airborne divisions employed in the exercise, the 82d and 101st, are the Army's two Strategic Army Command Airborne units. This highly mobile and combat-versatile team is the Army's answer to potential small-scale aggression.

The Air Force Reserve and Air National Guard units with active elements of the regular Air Force will demonstrate the importance of TAC's Composite Air Strike Force — a small, highly mobile tactical air force able to move fast and decisively to prevent the aggressor from expanding and consolidating forces.

In an actual combat situation, the Strategic Army Command and the Composite Air Strike Force would be deploy-

Tests Will Determine Squad, Platoon Makeup

For the first time in the Army, tactical firing exercises have been conducted by The Infantry School to determine the most effective balance of all the elements of the rifle platoon.

Tuesday through Thursday all the Garnsey Road Range Complex officers and non-commissioned officers of various departments of The School observed and evaluated the performance of two rifle platoons in continuous live-fire exercises, the final phase of the Rifle Squad and Platoon Test program.

Personnel of Companies A and B of the 1st Battle Group, 29th Infantry, 1st Infantry Brigade, participated in the platoon tests. They began training in May as members of eight candidate rifle squads.

Following the squad testing phase in June, the best features of the three most outstanding squads were incorporated into the two Infantry rifle platoons.

Seeks Balance

The objective of the Rifle Squad and Platoon Test Program is to examine squad and platoon organizations in order to promulgate The Infantry School's position on the most effective balance of personnel, firepower and tactical techniques in the current squad and platoon.

Under consideration during the testing is the advisability of replacing the M-14 (modified) with the M-60 machine gun; the distribution of M-79 grenade launchers; the role of the weapons squad; the validity of the squad fire team concept, and logistical implications of various combinations of type and numbers of weapons within the squad of platoon.

Being evaluated are a series of offensive and defensive situations performed by various combinations of squad and platoon organizations in firing and non-firing phases. Emphasis is being placed on evaluation of firepower, mobility, logistical and control capabilities of each of the organizations.

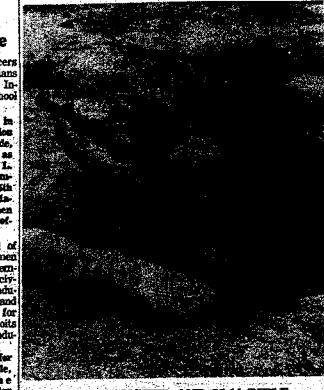
School Is Proud Of Officers In OCS Hall of Fame



Since June 1958, 200 officers and distinguished civilians have been honored in the Infantry Officer Candidate School Hall of Fame.

Located in Wigle Hall in the 5th Student Battalion area of The Student Brigade, the hall was established as a project of Major Jack L. Treadwell, at that time commanding officer of the 5th Student Battalion, and of Major William S. Wyrick, then the battalion's evaluation officer.

The purpose of the Hall of Fame is to honor those men who have distinguished themselves either in military or civilian affairs since their graduation from Infantry OCS and to provide an incentive for candidates through the exploits and successes of past graduates.

Wigle Hall, so named for 2nd Lt. Thomas W. Wigle, posthumously awarded the Medal of Honor for valor

Soon to Ignite— The Third Stage

July 31 will be the final pay day of the three month Army Emergency Relief and Army Relief Society annual fund drive. Approximately half the post goal was reached during the first two months of the campaign.

Every effort will be made to assure that the post's $33,361 pledge is met.

The AER-ARS program is the Army's way of "taking care of its own," when soldiers or their dependents need emergency financial assistance.

They May Never Volunteer Again

Sixty cadets and an instructor from the Air Force Academy at Colorado Springs are taking jump training.

Members of the classes of 1962 and 1964 who are giving up summer vacation to attend the course, the cadets represent 21 states, including Alaska.

The ground phase of training is being conducted this week. The second week of training will be on mock jump towers.

During the third and final week of Airborne training, each cadet will be required to make five qualifying jumps to earn his parachute emblem.

The class is expected to graduate August 3.

Not a requirement of the Air Force Academy, jump training is available to the cadets on a voluntary basis.

Col. Horner

commander of the 1st Battle Group, 29th Infantry.

The dismounted portion of the review will include composite units of the 1st Battle Group, 29th Infantry; 2nd Howitzer Battalion, 10th Artillery; and 1st Armored Rifle Battalion, 58th Infantry. Motorized elements will include an Honest John rocket, and representative artillery, engineer, signal and infantry equipment.

Equipment Display

In addition to the review, a static display will be set up to the rear of the bleachers on Sightseeing Field. The public is invited to visit this display.

A 1940 graduate of the University of Pennsylvania, Col. Horner has attended many service schools, among these the Command and General Staff College, the Armed Forces Staff College, and the Army War College.

A veteran of eight major WWII campaigns in Europe, he served with the 16th Infantry, 1st Infantry Division, rising in rank and position from platoon leader to regimental commander.

London Duty

For a time he served as U.S. representative to the War Office and British School of Infantry, London, England.

In 1952, he became assistant chief of staff, G-4, Army Research and Development Program, Department of the Army. After attending the Army War College in 1953, he became an instructor at the Armed Forces Staff College until 1957.

Col. Horner reported to Fort Benning in 1956 after a tour as Chief of Staff of the Military Assistance Advisory Group, Vietnam.

Highly Decorated

The Doylestown, Pa., native holds the Distinguished Service Cross, Silver Star with Oak Leaf Cluster, Bronze Star Medal with three Oak Leaf Clusters, Army Commendation Medal, Distinguished Unit Citation with one Oak Leaf Cluster, Combat Infantryman's Badge, Belgian Fourragere, British Distinguished Service Order, French Fourragere with Coleurs de la Medaille Militaire, Croix de Guerre with Palme and numerous service ribbons.

Col. and Mrs. Horner, the former Joan Mary Davy, of Colchester, England, will be entertained tomorrow evening at the Main Officers' Open Mess by the officers and ladies of the Brigade.

Tests

The School's Ranger Department, is giving careful consideration to the individual Infantryman's load.

"The soldier's load must be kept within his carrying ability," Col. Teeters said. "Unnecessary items are being eliminated during the tests so as to enable the Infantryman to move more speedily across the ground, enabling him to reach his objective better conditioned to close with and destroy the enemy."

In this regard, the combat pack has been eliminated for test purposes. In its place, the soldier carries one extra M-14 ammunition pouch containing one-third of a day's rations, along with minimum toilet articles.

Assisting Col. Teelers as deputy test director of the program is Major Austin J. Yerks, Jr., whose principal duty is chairman of the Ranger Department's Defense Tactics Committee. Major Joseph Ondishko, The Student Brigade, is the chief evaluator for the program.

According the Major Yerks, "The personnel serving as evaluators are the cream of The Infantry School. They were carefully selected by department directors on the basis of experience in their respective fields."

The project is being coordinated with the Command and Staff, Weapons, Airborne-Air Mobility, Communication and Ground Mobility Departments and the Combat Developments Office of The Infantry School.

The (Infantry) Human Research Unit and the Infantry Board have contributed greatly to the success of the program so far by providing guidance and evaluation procedures as well as background information pertaining to the rifle squad and platoon, officials stated.

Yesterday, Brig. Gen. A. D. Surles, Jr., assistant commandant of The Infantry School, was scheduled to observe the platoon test runs. With him were Col. Haskell L. Connor and Lt. Col. Charles Ellett, representatives of the Combat Developments Experimentation Station, Fort Ord, Calif. Also present were Lt. Col. Arthur Hillery, a personal representative of Lt. Gen. Louis Truman, deputy chief of staff, Operations, Plans and Training, Headquarters, Continental Army Command.

The series of tests will be completed on or about August 1.

Unofficial Rifle Record

That's Some Shooting

Members of an Infantry Trophy Match team, whose headquarters is at Fort Benning, have set an unofficial national record score — a blazing 1,285 points — for firing across the tough and demanding course.

The record is unofficial because the score was recorded during practice at Fort Niagara, N. Y., where members of the Army team are training for the forthcoming Interservice and National High Power Rifle Championships at Camp Perry, Ohio.

National Record is 1,107

The national record for the Infantry Trophy Match is 1,107 points, set by the Army in 1959 at Camp Perry. The record for the Army's annual rifle and pistol championships is 1,136 points scored by the Europe team this year at Benning.

Members of the team which fired the 1,285 score were Sgt. Roy O. Ambler, Sfc Cecil L. Stevens, MSgt Don F. Burger, Sgt Henry P. Edwards, Sgt Roy Garride and Sgt. Bobby G. Tubbs.

MSgt Clyde W. Burns and Sgt D. B. Teague coached the shooters. All eight enlisted men are assigned to the Advanced Marksmanship Unit.

Four Range Match

The Infantry Trophy Match is a four-stage event. Six-man teams fire 864 rounds at eight targets starting at 600 yards and then moving to the 500, 300 and 200-yard lines.

Each firing member of the team is given 24 rounds to fire. The standard military service rifle is used.

All ammunition is shot rapid fire at silhouette targets centered on a standard target frame.

Fire Plan Used

The match is so named because in practice it parallels the fire control plan of an Infantry rifle squad, with each of the team coaches directing a fire team in much the same manner as a squad leader and his assistant control their squad.

A fire plan, involving the rate of fire and distribution of fire for each team enables the Army squad to attain the high scores.

Two years ago, it was considered an impossibility to attain a score of more than 1,200 points across the Infantry Trophy course. Careful study led to revision of the existing fire plans and to subsequently higher scores.

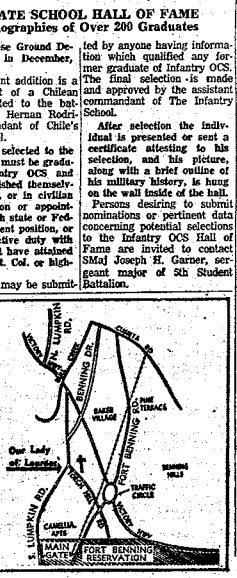
during WW II, performs a multi-purpose job.

In addition to being a hall of fame it is one of The Infantry School's classrooms for OCS, and has a briefing room used to brief civilian and military personnel on the functions of The Infantry School.

Wigle Hall also houses the trophy case containing mementos and trophies of the 5th Student Battalion. One of the displays is a plaque with the raised outline of an ancient Japanese warrior's helmet. It was presented to the Infantry OCS by the OCS of the Japanese Ground Defense Force, in December, 1955.

A more recent addition is a miniature bust of a Chilean soldier presented to the battalion by Col. Hernan Rodriquez, commandant of Chile's Infantry School.

All persons selected to the Hall of Fame must be graduates of Infantry OCS and have distinguished themselves in combat, or in civilian life by election or appointment to a high state or Federal Government position, or still be on active duty with the Army and have attained the rank of Lt. Col. or higher.



Nominations may be submitted by anyone having information which qualified any former graduate of Infantry OCS. The final selection is made and approved by the assistant commandant of The Infantry School.

After selection the individual is presented or sent a certificate attesting to his selection, and his picture, along with a brief outline of his military history, is hung on the wall inside of the hall.

Persons desiring to submit nominations or pertinent data concerning potential selections to the Infantry OCS Hall of Fame are invited to contact SMaj Joseph H. Garner, sergeant major of 5th Student Battalion.

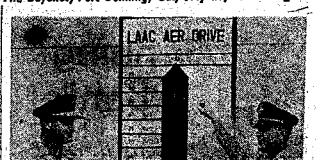
Need NCOs



Special Forces Still Open

The Army Special Forces is looking for senior non-commissioned officers. The big need is for NCO's in grades E-5 through 7-9, with combat arms MOS's (MOS 11E-112-113-121 or who are radio operators (MOS 05E) or medical aid personnel (MOS 91L). Experience in these fields, though preferable, is not necessary for Special Forces training includes training in these skills.

Volunteers for Special Forces must meet the prerequisites outlined in AR 611-62. Primarily, the soldier interested in Special Forces training and assignment must be Airborne qualified or be willing to undergo Airborne training; must have four months of prior service and a minimum of eighteen months remaining service on his current enlistment.

All Special Forces volunteers will be trained at the Special Warfare Center at Fort Bragg, and will be subject to assignment to Special Forces units, world wide. This training includes specialized training in the combat arms, communication and medical MOS, individual and unit training and field exercises. Additionally, cross MOS training is received in communications, weapons, demolitions, operations and intelligence and medical fields.

Upon completion of training, the soldier will be awarded a fifth digit, "suffix 3" to his MOS, denoting Special Forces qualifications. Because of the expanded Special Forces program, assignment to a Special Forces unit also provides considerable opportunity for advancement, and since the MOS's listed above are in the Pro Pay System, allows the Special Forces soldier to qualify for proficiency pay under the Enlisted Evaluation System.

BOILING OVER . . . Lawson Army Aviation Command claims it was the first major unit on post to exceed its fair share goal in support of the Army Emergency Relief and Army Relief Society's annual fund drive. All LAAC units passed the 100 per cent mark and the drive is not yet over. Capt. John F. Murphy (R), adjutant of the command, shows the chart to Col. L. W. Leeney, LAAC commander.

Help Wanted—Male or Female

No newspaper could report every event that takes place on this post, or give credit to each person who does something interesting. But no newspaper will say it is doing all it wants to do, or can do, either. For our part, we know some of our own shortcomings, and are anxious to correct them. As we have no staff of reporters and photographers, we must ask for help from you, the reader, in making the Bayonet a better service to the post.

We'll lay it on the line — here's what we need: information on events and sports and people. You don't have to be a polished writer either, just give us the facts. We'll make the best possible use of the information in line with our policy and space. We especially need someone to write a weekly hunting and fishing column; for the post, and the Army, are soon to lose MSgt "Charlie" Quinn, after 30 years service. The column is open, and the staff volunteer cartoonist, Pfc Littlepage, is ready to lend help with illustrations. Any takers, please?

You can do something else for us too, and for all Bayonet readers. If you know someone who should be featured in the Sportrait, Senior NCO, Civilians You Work With or Profile of a Man Doing a Man's Job columns, bring him to the attention of your major unit Information Section, or notify us, at 5-2791. Thanks.

So The Navy Flipped a Coin

A flip of a coin solved a $86,000 problem for the Navy at the Potomac River Naval Command. Capt. Wilburn J. McFarland, Jr., public works officer, had received two identical bids to construct a plant at Indian Head, Md., and flipped a 1922 silver dollar to break the tie. Both contractors were invited to the tie-breaking ceremony. The coin came up tails.

Let's Take Care of Our Own

The Army has always had a good reputation for helping those in trouble. Compassion, understanding, and the desire to take a minute to pat a baby on the head, assist an elderly person or give food or candy to a child are traits which have reflected well on servicemen and the U.S. as a whole all over the world. Wherever Americans are stationed, it's true that those of us in uniform have done as much or more to improve international understanding and goodwill than have any service people of any nation or era. But, we like to do these little things in our own way, as individuals, or as small teams.

Now is the time to remember that the Army Emergency Relief and Army Relief Society are Army functions. They represent the way the Army takes care of it's own, and they call for those best traits of the Soldier, working in close teamwork. The drive conducted each year is now under way, but due to end after this pay day. About half the post goal was reached within the past two pay periods, so we have this one more chance, and let's go over the top on this one. . .

We wouldn't miss the chance to help a friend or buddy in our own outfit. Someone in most units will call on AER this year — this is the way we can help them all.

When is the last time you gave a salesman a blank check with your signature on it and told him to fill in whatever amount he wished? Perhaps you have not been so free with your money, but consider this soldier who was.

These facts are taken from a legal assistance file, but the name is fictitious. Soldier Roe decided to purchase a used car and, after days of search, found one he liked at a nearby car lot. The salesman was friendly and wrote out, at Roe's request, a dealer's statement of sale which listed the monthly payments as $62.00. Roe decided to consult his wife before making the purchase and took the statement home. A week later, with the concurrence of his wife, he returned to complete the deal.

The salesman told Roe that since his secretary was out to lunch, and he, the salesman, could not type, Roe should sign a blank contract. It would be mailed to Roe when completed. There was no disagreement about the terms, and Roe did as the salesman suggested.

A week later Roe and his but, as you guessed, the monthly payments were now $68.00 a month a sum which Roe was unable to pay. The next morning Roe came to the Legal Assistance Office for help.

What is the moral of Roe's story? First, military personnel should be wary. Buying and selling should be "an arm's length" transaction as parties to sales frequently misjudge their position or product and may take advantage of the other's inexperience.

No matter what a salesman tells the customer, it is the written terms of the contract which determine the rights of the parties. Be sure that all matters upon which you rely are in writing and that the contract is filled out completely before you sign. Read and understand all its provisions.

In the purchase of a car by conditional sales contract, it is essential to know what the total price will be and the exact amount of monthly payments. Further, this contract may control the nature of the "guaranty" provided by the seller and usually will set forth the right of the seller to repossess the car should the buyer fail to make his payments. Your signature, like your reputation, is too valuable to be treated casually.

If, when contemplating a purchase, you are uncertain as to the meaning of the contract, consult your civilian attorney or one of the attorneys in the Legal Assistance Office.

Overseas Duty Helpful If Time's Spent Wisely

Most of us are familiar with the old saying, "When in Rome, do as the Romans do." Well, that makes plenty of good sense — if you know what the Romans do. Supposing you don't, then what?

How about those of you stationed overseas. What about the country you're in? Do you know its people, its customs, industries, form of government, its history?

If your answer is no, then you are missing out on an opportunity that may never come your way again. It is an opportunity to broaden your mind, increase your knowledge, and be a credit to your service. And above all it will help you in observing local customs and traditions.

Okay, let's say that up to this point you haven't taken very much interest in the country to which you are now assigned, but you would like to. How do you go about it.

First, check your information center. You'll find up-to-date information about the country, its customs, traditions, taboos and further details for bettering your understanding. Don't forget your ship or base newspaper and the bulletin boards. They usually carry additional information about such things.

Second, after you read up on the country go out and see for yourself how the people work, live, dress and get around. Find out what form of government they live under — talk with the local residents, through a guide if necessary. If they do things differently than we do, find out why. .

Now you might say, where is all of this going to get me? What good will it do me when I get back home?

Well, look at it this way:

You will be able to speak with authority about a foreign country, because you will know what you are talking about.

And most of all you will have the personal satisfaction that you made friends for the United States.

Chaplain's Corner

By Chaplain (1st Lt.) James Webb

"This is my commandment, that ye love one another, as I have loved you. Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends." (John 15: 12-13).

Henry Van Dyke said, "Love is not getting, but giving; not a wild dream of pleasure, and a madness of desire — oh, no, love is not that — it is goodness, and honor, and peace and pure living. The great truth that shines with an ever increasing brilliancy from the pages of the Bible is — that God loves man for "God is Love" (1 John 4:8).

This truth is the greatest of all truths. What is sweeter, what is more acceptable when we are in the midst of distress, trouble, or sickness; than to be assured, to be convinced, that God is love, that God loves me. And because love is of God, love never bargains.

Love never counts the cost. Go with me in imagination to the house of Simon the leper. Jesus is there. In Mathew 26:7 we find the scripture says: "And there came unto him a woman having an alabaster box of very precious ointment, and poured it on his head, as he sat at meat."

Marth of Bethany broke the alabaster box and poured it on the head of her Lord and Master because of her great love for him. She did not count the cost. Love never puts a price on what it gives.

There were those in Simon's house, who, from hearts of greed and selfishness shouted, "To what purpose is this waste? For this ointment might have been sold for much, and given to the poor." The bargainers had spoken, but love never bargains.

Love seeks to serve, love forgives and forgets.

M-14 Rifle Production Stepped Up

The Army has acted to expedite manufacture of the new M14 rifle in order to re-equip the Active Army with the weapon as soon as possible.

On July 11, the Army granted Brig. Gen. Elmer J. Gibson extraordinary powers to exercise broad authority in the manufacture and supply of the new weapon.

The M14 rifle is being commercially produced by Harrington and Richardson, Worchester, Mass., and by Winchester-Western Division, Olin Mathieson, at New Haven, Conn.

The new rifle will replace four Army weapons: the M1 rifle, the M3 submachine gun, the Browning automatic rifle and the M2 carbine.

A third production source is under consideration to increase the rate at which the rifles will become available for use.

General Gibson will operate from the Pentagon office of Lt. Gen. J. H. Hinrichs, chief of Army Ordnance. General Gibson has spent 34 of his 35 years of military service in management and production of Ordnance material, most recently as Commanding General, Ordnance Weapons Command, Rock Island Arsenal, Ill.

Benning Tops The Third Army in June Re-Ups

A re-enlistment rate of 39 per cent by The Infantry Center and School led all other Third Army posts for June, according to officials at The Infantry Center Re-enlistment Section.

Five units tied for first place with 100 per cent re-enlistments for the month.

The 1st Infantry Brigade, Martin Army Hospital, 151st Engineer Group, Lawson Army Aviation Command and the 428th Medical Battalion each had 100 per cent of all eligible first-term and career personnel to "re-up."

The Infantry Center Troop Command and The Student Brigade placed second and third respectively with overall averages of 97.8 and 90.8 per cent.

The Infantry Center placed second in Third Army for the fourth quarter of the fiscal year ending June 30, with an over-all re-enlistment rate of 61.7 per cent.

The Student Brigade led Fort Benning units during the quarter with 74.8 per cent, followed by the 1st Infantry Brigade with 63.2 per cent and The Infantry Center Troop Command with 60.2 per cent.

NATO Legislators See Infantry Might

The value of the team spirit of the NATO nations as a deterent to aggression was emphasized on post in a July 18 talk by Brig. Gen. A. D. Surles Jr., commandant of The Infantry School, to 26 legislators from 10 NATO countries.

The legislators, at Fort Benning for a two-day look at the Army's capabilities, were welcomed to the post July 17, by Lt. Gen. Paul D. Adams, commanding general of Third Army.

"I want to express the personal welcome of the Army, the chief of staff and the commanding general of Continental Army Command," Gen. Adams told the visitors.

In his speech, Gen. Surles praised "the cooperation of all nations of NATO in furtherance of the articles of the alliance."

He stated that the team efforts of NATO countries "demonstrate to the enemy we're determined to preserve our freedom and our individual ways of government."

See Demonstrations

He pointed out that The Infantry School demonstrations witnessed by the visitors exemplified "increased reliance on mobility, both ground and air; weapons that the Infantry uses; the very necessary coordination of firepower and the use of Army aviation as a full member of the fighting team.

The group saw presentations showing the soldier as the ultimate weapon. They are making a two-week tour of military and industrial centers in this country following the NATO Parliamentarians' Conference in Ottawa, Canada. It includes representatives from Belgium, Canada, Denmark, France, West Germany, Greece, Italy, the Netherlands, Norway and the United Kingdom.

During their stay at the post the parliamentarians viewed demonstrations on Airborne training, Army aircraft, ground mobility weapons of the Infantry battle group, Rangers in action and Infantry tank team tactics.

Official Reception

They were honored at an official luncheon and reception and dinner Monday in the Supper Club Annex of the Main Officers' Mess, hosted by Brig. Gen. Charles H. White Jr., commanding general of The Infantry Center.

The NATO Parliamentarians' Organization is an unofficial association of members of the parliaments of all political parties which support the North Atlantic Treaty.

Soldiers resting on the banks of Bull Run

BATTLE OF BULL RUN . . . On July 21, 1861, the first major land battle of the Civil War took place at Bull Run, near Manassas Junction, Va. There, 18,000 Federal troops under the command of Gen. Irwin A. McDowell attacked a like number of Confederates, commanded by Gen. G. T. Beauregard. McDowell sent a small force against Stone Bridge as a diversionary move, while the main force forded Bull Run near Sudley Springs. The Federal attack went well at first, but by midafternoon, the Confederates had gained reinforcements and rallied on a brigade led by Gen. Thomas J. Jackson, who that day won the nickname "Stonewall" and the tide of the battle turned. McDowell retreated to Washington with the first defeat for the Federal Army.

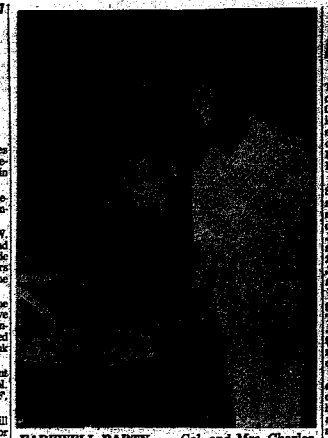
Brigade Honors Departing CO

More than 400 officers and ladies of the 1st Infantry Brigade are expected to attend a farewell reception and party in honor of Col. and Mrs. Charles T. Horner Jr., tomorrow evening at 6 p.m. in the Main Officers' Open Mess.



The brigade commander departs this month for assignment in Paris, France.

Col. and Mrs. Samuel W. Koster, host and hostess, and Major John F. Hare, brigade adjutant, will join the Horners in a reception line in the Anzio Room.

Immediately following the reception, the party will move to the main lounge, where entertainment will be provided until 8 p.m. by M-Sgt. Frank Hardin and his organ.

Arrangements for the event have been coordinated by Col. Koster and Major John F. Georger, brigade S-2.

The party and reception will climax farewell activities for the commander and his lady. Non-commissioned officers of the unit held a party recently for the colonel.

FAREWELL PARTY . . . Col. and Mrs. Charles T. Horner, Jr., cut a cake at a recent party held for the 1st Infantry Brigade commander and his wife by the brigade non-commissioned officers. More than 300 NCOs and their wives gathered at the Old Homestead to honor the colonel and his lady, who depart late this month for assignment in Paris, France.

Jan Rose's Woman's Club Diary

A survey among the wives in my block reveals that they don't like to cook during these hot afternoons any more than I do. Unfortunately, this same survey shows that husbands enjoy eating as though it were January and not July.

A kitchen where it's 99 degrees is NOT the place to experiment with new recipes, but after two months of barbecuing everything except the bacon and eggs, most of us are ready for something WITHOUT the charcoal flavor.

I've solved my problem with one phone call to Mrs. Byrd Sergent, who was delighted to sell me a copy of the Infantry School Cookbook, compiled and published by the Woman's Club.

Full of hundreds of recipes from Army wives, it is concise, simple, and best of all I don't have to try out a dish first, as these recipes have been lovingly prepared many times before. The commissary carries nearly all the ingredients. Mrs. Sergent suggests the followings as a samples:

RING CHERRY SALAD

1 pkg. raspberry jello
1 pkg. lemon jello
1 pkg. Knox gelatin
1 large can Bing cherries, 1 medium can diced pineapple
1 pint grape juice

Heat pineapple and cherry juice and dissolve jello and gelatin in hot juice. Add grape juice and enough water to make four cups of liquid. When mixture cools and begins to thicken, add cherries and pineapple. Pour into molds or salad ring and finish setting. Serves 12.

If you haven't bought a copy of the cookbook, better hurry as quantities are limited. The Bookstore has them available, or call Mrs. Sergent at 5-2219.

Help Wanted

Walking into the Thrift Shop last Thursday, I passed a young lady not over 13 who was proudly carrying what was obviously her first, very pretty, formal gown. I am always amazed at the fine quality of merchandise available.

More than a "second - hand" store, the Thrift Shop has an unique personality. Where else can you find everything from Andirons to Zithers? Manned (or should I say "Wo-manned"!) by volunteers, the Thrift Shop depends on Woman's Club volunteers for its operation.

Mrs. Cyril D. Sterner, president, reports that your response this past year has been wonderful, but with the turnover in personnel, and the many wives on leave, we still need help. If you are able to give one Tuesday or Thursday, please call Mrs. Sterner at 5-3938.

The Women's Club is proud and delighted to announce that Mrs. John E. Kelly is the new chairman of the Pre - Kindergarten School. Gen. and Mrs. Kelly are the parents of a seven children, so Mrs. Kelly is well qualified to guide our Nursery School operations. Registrations for the Fall term are now being accepted. If you have a child aged 3-5 you would like to enroll, please call the principal, Mrs. Jack Murray, 5-4628.

Last Chance

This is the last week for Teenagers Charm Class. A wonderful chance to develop poise, personality, and appearance, the class will meet each Wednesday from 11:30 until 1:30 at the Woman's Club, Building 1125. Cal Mrs. B. F. Dobson, MU 9-7340, to register.

Leaving

As a final note, I am sorry to report that the wives at Fort Benning are losing a good friend next week when our Post Quartermaster, Col. Charles A. Ritchie, retires. The new parking lot at the Commissary is the latest of many accomplishments of Col. Ritchie that have made our lives easier and more pleasant. I'm sure that each wife on post joins me in wishing them the best for the future, and hope they often stop back to visit their many friends.

jenni johnson on Etiquette

DEAR JENNI: Must I be invited to be on a first name basis with a lady whom I've just met and whose husband outranks mine . . . especially when everyone else is using her first name but me, including those whose husbands' are the same rank as mine?

And how do I refer to my husband? Do I ever call him by his rank?

MRS NEW LIEUTENANT

DEAR MRS. NEW LIEUTENANT: You've quite a question there! First take the question of using a familiar name. You must be invited to do so. It is very rude to call anyone "Jane", "Joe," or "Mary," unless he or she indicates that you may do so.

Even though others call her Mary, and even if no one else calls her Mrs. Jones, you should continue to use Mrs. Jones until she expresses a desire to have you call her Mary. You must assume that the others have already been invited to use her first name.

Of course once she asks you to call her Mary don't hesitate to do so. However, when introducing her to a friend of yours she is Mrs. Jones during the formalities.

I might note here that senior officers and their wives often call juniors by their first names. In that case it is an honor to be so familiarly recognized, but the compliment is not expected to be returned. They are still Captain and Mrs. Jones to you.

Your second question about the use of your husband's title is definitely a taboo for you. Use of the phrase "The Lieutenant and I . . ." or what ever his rank may be is in the very poorest taste and should not be done. Nor should you refer to yourself as Mrs. Captain Jones, or in any way use your husband's rank as part of your name.

The Surgeon Says

Right This Way—A Clinical Tour

PART I OF A SERIES

By Major Edwin S. Basch, MC

The Pediatric Service at Martin Army Hospital has several major areas of responsibility:

An inpatient service for the treatment and study of patients who require hospitalization.

A nursery for newborn infants.

A teaching program for physicians, nurses, allied medical personnel and the general community.

An outpatient clinic for infants and children.

We will discuss these primary duties of the Pediatric Service in these columns. This time I wish to briefly review the clinic services.

A clinic for infants and children who are ill is held daily Monday through Friday from 8 to 11:30 a.m. and 1 to 4:30 p.m. Children who are acutely ill may be brought to this clinic without appointment and are evaluated and treated as soon as possible.

Those patients who require hospitalization for investigation or treatment are admitted to the hospital without delay. If additional clinic visits are necessary, arrangements for future appointments will be made by the clinic staff.

Arrangements for elective (non - emergency) visits to the Pediatric Clinic by appointment can be made by calling one of these numbers: 4-2153, 4-1479, 4-1780 and 4-2841.

If there is a genuine need to speak to a physician about an immediate problem concerning a sick child, the above numbers may be called. The lengthy telephone conversation for a necessary clinic visit is discouraged.

A clinic for well babies is held at Martin Army Hospital on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday mornings from 7:45 to 10:30. Visits to this clinic are arranged through the office of the Army Health Nurse, Captain Alice Houle (6-1234).

Information may be obtained through this office regarding the routine care of infants and attendance at Well Child Conferences which are held at the Old Hospital.

All routine immunizations for dependents are given at the Old Hospital Monday through Friday between 8 and 11 a.m., and 1 to 4 p.m.

In 1960, the Pediatric Service cared for 60,000 outpatients. To provide for this outpatient care, and for the other child health services referred to earlier, there are eight assigned physicians, six of whom are specialist pediatricians.

These medical officers also have responsibilities in connection with the health needs of military personnel, and emergent circumstances in any section of the Post may require their immediate attention.

It can be understood why at times some patients may be inconvenienced, but every reasonable effort will be made to provide necessary medical care for those children who are eligible to receive it.

In an article shortly forthcoming (Part II), I shall consider pediatrics in the newborn nursery.

Lightning Dangers Frequent in Summer

The hazard of lighting is a dangerous problem particularly to troops in the field at this time of year.

The path of lightning is generally held to be unpredictable; however, through research much has been learned about its probabilities. Lightning is affected by air current. It usually strikes the highest point such as trees or high open ground, nearest the center of electric disturbance, and is attracted to solid masses, especially metal.

With these principles in mind, it is possible to formulate the following safety precautions which will tend to reduce the danger from lightning.

a. Avoid flat open field or bare hilltops during a thunderstorm; if unavoidably caught in such a situation, lie flat upon the ground, thus reducing the "target height" and chances of being hit.

b. Avoid single isolated trees or poles in large open spaces, or if in woods, avoid the highest trees.

c. Avoid large masses of isolated metal in open fields, such as a mounted gun, vehicle, wire fence, etc.

d. If a group is unavoidably caught in a flat open space or bare hilltop, do not huddle together, but scatter to reduce the attraction of a mass of bodies, and reduce the odds of being hurt or killed when lightning strikes.

e. Buildings will afford some protection, particularly if grounded or if outer wall and roof surfaces are wet. Personnel in buildings should avoid standing under high chimneys, near outer walls, water pipes, and wiring.

f. Communications systems should be grounded properly and, unless a tactical situation prohibits, lead-in wires to switchboards and telephones disconnected.

g. Conversations over telephones in the field should be held to a minimum during severe electrical disturbances.

h. Personnel in the field should refrain from lying underneath vehicles. Due to the insulating effect of vehicle tires, the bodies of such men become the path of an electrical charge from truck to ground. Get inside the vehicle, if possible.

i. When personnel assembled in bleachers are caught in a storm, they should be dispersed quickly, especially from metal or metal-supported type bleachers.

j. Do not swim in any pool during thunderstorms, or participate in water sports off post.

k. Golfers should be warned of the dangers involved during thunderstorms while carrying golf clubs on their shoulders. They should also avoid taking cover under isolated trees.

That Artistic Gold Crown

If It Chews OK on the Machine They Polish It Up for Service

SGT. W. B. MYERS Trims Stone Model

2,500 POUNDS . . . Pressure is adjusted on flask containing an immediate denture, by Sp4 Horace B. Davenport.

BY IDA C. EVANS

Turning out a work of art of a highly practical nature is the job of a group of enlisted men and Army trained civilians on the post.

They are making teeth.

To the uninitiated, the Dental Laboratory is a place of mysterious odors and flickering flames. There are "rituals" reminiscent of an alchemist attempting to turn base metals into gold, or the mystic rites of a conjurer preparing a magic charm.

Gold is melted and spun on a wheel.

An acrid odor arises from a boiling brew.

In sharp contrast to the metallurgy and chemistry, some of the activities of the laboratory sound as down to earth as baking, scrubbing and pressing, but with tools a housewife might covet.

Tiny ovens no larger than a child's toy bake wax out of a "pattern" to leave a perfect mold for a gold crown.

Scrubbing is a matter of turning on a powerful blasting machine that blows finely ground walnut shell over the article to be cleaned.

Pressing is done at from 2,000 to 3,500 pounds pressure, and is part of the process of making the pink plastic "gum" of a set of teeth.

Throughout the process of making teeth, there is grinding, trimming and polishing. A water flushed rotating disk trims the base of a dentist's model. Motor driven brushes and even a "rag wheel" are used to polish surfaces.

Gold used in the laboratory comes in small squares. It is melted either by a hand torch or in an electric casting machine. The melted gold is placed on a cross bar nest to a small opening in a "pattern" for a gold crown.

When the bar is spun around rapidly, the liquid gold is slung into the pattern by centrifugal force.

Removed from the casting machine, the gold crown is cleaned by dropping it into a hot acid solution.

A perfect reproduction of a dentist's model, the gold crown is like the base for a delicately carved cameo pin. It is ready to receive a porcelain face and become a highly individualized artificial tooth.

Whether for a complete denture or a "partial," a false tooth is carefully selected from rows and rows of teeth of various sizes and shades.

The stock tooth is personalized by adding characteristic markings of the patient's original tooth. With a dental drill, a technician carves the "store bought" tooth to look like the natural tooth. If advisable, he will improve the appearance of the tooth but he duplicates it as nearly as possible.

Appearance is not the only consideration in making dentures. False teeth must fit the patient's mouth and must meet correctly upper and lower, or have proper "occlusion."

One step in making dentures is to place the teeth in a hinged "articulator." The apparatus can be moved up and down and sidewise to simulate chewing motions of the jaws.

The Dental Laboratory supports the Dental Services at Fort Benning by fabrication of prosthetic dental appliances for all dental treatment clinics on the post.

Lt. Col. Wallace L. Lancaster, dental laboratory officer, supervises the laboratory and the preparation of dentures.

Col. Lancaster is a member of the Education Committee of the Post Dental Services. He participates in the training of dental interns and other dental officers, familiarizing them with laboratory procedures. He instructs the officers in the preparation and insertion of prosthetic appliances.

Educators See ROTC Cadets Train

Forty college and university officials were recently welcomed to The Infantry Center by its recently departed commanding general, Major Gen. Hugh P. Harris, for a two day visit with some 1,200 ROTC cadets from schools all over the south attending summer camp.

Gen. Harris told the group that some of the finest training offered ROTC cadets anywhere was given at Fort Benning due to the supervision, equipment and high quality of instruction. He also commended the ROTC cadets of the past and present and said they reflect genuine credit on the parents of the individuals and upon the leaders of the schools they attend.

Comments and suggestions of the visitors on how the program may be further improved were solicited by the post commander.

While at the post, the educators witnessed various training demonstrations, and briefings on how camp activities and training schedules are run. They also visited with cadets from their respective schools.

MILLION SAVED

Recently the Army amounced the development of a new manufacturing process applied to the production of 8-inch steel artillery shells. By using unfinished commercial grade forging steel, a savings of $19 per ton was realized in material cost. This would approach a total saving of $1,000,000 annually based on peacetime requirements.

Plan to Visit Washington, See 'Old Guard' Museum

WASHINGTON (AFPS)—Another military point of interest has been opened to visitors in this area. It is the Fort Myer, Va., showroom of the Army's oldest Infantry unit, the 1st Battle Group, 3rd Infantry, well known as "The Old Guard."

The exhibits housed in the building include a "Presidents' Room" containing photographs, papers and relics related to the Old Guard's association with eight Chief Executives. Two of these, William Henry Harrison and Zachary Taylor, were 3rd Infantry officers prior to becoming Presidents.

On display also is the "Chapultepec Baton" carved from the wood of the flagstaff which stood in front of the Grand Plaza in Mexico City when that city was taken by the 3rd Infantry during the Mexican War. The baton was presented to the unit by President Truman.

A wall mural in the "Old Guard Room" depicts the unit's role in battle and around the walls are displayed the battle streamers earned by the Old Guard during its long history. Completing the display are muskets and rifles of previous eras and models of modern Infantry weapons.

87th's Engrs Finish AIT, Pro Testing

By 87th Inf PIO

The Engineer Platoon of the 87th Infantry has completed their Advanced Individual Training cycle and Proficiency Test.

Over three-hundred hours were spent on engineer subjects and practical exercises including roads, bridges, demolitions, Chemical-Biological-Radiological defense team training, field fortifications, land mine warfare, engineer reconnaissance, rigging, hand tools, and power tools.

Usually the AIT cycle for engineers in the battle group is conducted on a division level by the 2nd Engineer Battalion, but for the first time all of the training was conducted by cadre from the engineer platoon in the Battle Group.

Classes and training were conducted by Lieutenant John T. Land, Master Sergeant John N. Bozarth, Sergeant First Class Raymond L. Williamson, Staff Sergeant Joseph H. Ibach, and Sergeant Harold D. Weaver.

Lieutenant Land, a graduate of the Drexel Institute of Technology Reserve Officers Training Corps program, commented on the training by stating that many problems involving coordination and arrangement of lesson plans and classes were incurred during the training cycle but only through the excellent assistance and cooperation from the 2nd Engineer Battalion, and the 151st Engineer Group, was the engineer platoon able to conduct the outstanding training program.

9th Inf Graduates, Gains AIT Cycles

The 9th Infantry recently graduated an Advanced Individual Training cycle and gained another two days later. Company E graduated 130 men in Military Occupational Specialty 112 and Company A gained new AITs in the same heavy Infantry weapons MOS.

The top award on the Division proficiency test went to Private Richard Walker who tied the Division record with a score of 98 points out of a possible 100. The top honor on the 106-millimeter recoilless rifle went to Private William Burch. Private David Bailey finished first for the 81-millimeter mortar and Private John Henderson was number one on the 4.2 inch mortar.

23rd Infantry's Co.A Initiates Prior Service Refresher Program

By 23rd Inf PIO

The 23rd Infantry's Company A will initiate a new program of instruction in the near future designed to provide refresher training for prior service personnel returning to active duty.

The training program, according to the commanding officer of Company A, Captain Howard F. Leavitt, Jr., represents a new approach to the problem of providing refresher training for prior service personnel when they return to active duty.

Prior Service

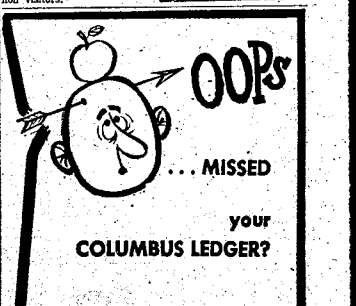
The training is designed to qualify for active duty those individuals with prior service in the Army or Marines, with a break in service of less than three years.

The training is scheduled during a 44 hour week and includes training in such subjects as trainfire qualification, escape and evasion, military justice, battle indoctrination, and civil affairs. When the training cycle is completed the students are immediately available for reassignment.

This represents a considerable saving of time when compared to the earlier practice of assigning those personnel requiring refresher training to basic combat training cycles lasting for eight weeks. The individual would not be required to attend the complete basic combat training cycle, however, the training he was required to attend was scheduled over an eight week period, and he could not be reassigned until the program was complete.

The new training program contains only the required refresher training and is completed during the one week training cycle. This will speed the process of those personnel returning to active duty assigned to a permanent unit.

The first group of prior service trainees is presently arriving at Company A, and the training is scheduled to get under way on July 24.



Lot o' Folks

The recreational facilities maintained by the Army Corps of Engineers at civil works attracted 109,000,000 visitors during 1960. Lake Texhoma on the Red River in Texas and Oklahoma alone recorded 6.6 million visitors.

DIVISION CIRCULAR SPELLS OUT SAFETY MEASURES FOR LIGHTNING STORMS

By CLAY LACY

The recent tragedy within the 2nd Infantry Division that claimed four Soldiers, slain by lightning, has spearheaded a new look into this unpredictable phenomenon of the southern weather patterns.

The result of this scrutiny by division safety officials has been published as Circular Number 385-7, titled "Safety, Protection of Personnel Against Lightning."

The new circular follows closely the theme of a previous circular, still in effect, which had been published by the United States Army Infantry Center of Fort Benning.

Tips

The circular enumerates safety precautions that will apply to personnel, both in military duties or off-duty pursuits, and spells out tips to use during thunderstorms. These are given in the circular as follows:

Avoid flat open fields or bare hilltops during a thunderstorm.

If unavoidably caught in such a situation, lie flat upon the ground, thus reducing the "target height" and chances of being hit.

Avoid single, isolated trees or poles in large open spaces, or, if in woods, avoid the highest trees.

Avoid large masses of isolated metal in open fields, such as a mounted gun, field piece, vehicle, wire fence, etc. (Exception: Persons inside closed vehicles with steel tops have usually escaped injury when such vehicles were struck by lightning, due to the shielding effect of the steel body.)

If in a group unavoidably caught in a flat, open space or bare hill top, do not huddle together, but scatter to reduce the attraction of a mass of bodies and reduce the odds of being hurt or killed if a bolt of lightning strikes.

Buildings will afford some protection, particularly if grounded or if outer wall and roof surfaces are wet. Personnel in buildings should avoid standing under high chimneys near outer wall or water pipes, wiring, etc.

Communication systems should be grounded properly and, unless tactical situation prohibits, lead-in wires to switchboards and telephones should be disconnected.

Conversations over telephones should be held to a minimum during severe electrical disturbances.

Personnel in the field should refrain from lying underneath vehicles. Due to the insulating effect of vehicle tires, the bodies of such men become the path of electrical charge from truck to ground.

'Positive Action'

Other points of the circular reaffirm the positive action utilized in the recent tragedy which consisted of immediate first aid and artificial respiration being applied to all victims of lightning. The circular notes that many victims may be temporarily stunned and paralyzed so that "prompt artificial respiration and treatment for shock may restore their breathing and thus save their lives."

Although lightning can be capricious, the Soldier who knows its general tendencies and the tips of safety contained in the new division circular will be prepared for the many thunderstorms that erupt in the Fort Benning area.

Artillery's Unique, Colorful History Precedes Birth of Our Nation

ONE OF DIV ARTY'S BIG GUNS GETS SET TO FIRE While Soldiers at Right Anticipate 'Boom' of 8-inch Howitzer

HONEST JOHN ROCKET STREAKS OFF TO 'KILL' One of Many Weapons Possessed by Division Artillery

By Div Arty PIO

The United States Army Artillery celebrates its 182nd Anniversary today.

The term "artillery" comes from the old French "artiller," "to fortify," and in its broad sense means munitions of war, especially missile-throwing equipment of all kinds.

In its more specific usage, it is applied to guns or fire-arms of larger than hand-size, firing projectiles by means of gunpowder. The artillery weapons are usually called cannons, getting their name from the Latin "canna," meaning a hollow reed, which is descriptive of the barrel.

The unique and colorful history of the artillery dates back long before the birth of our nation. Like gunpowder, "cannon" developed from the use of the series of combustibles usually called Greek fire and the accessories used with it. As the composition of Greek fire improved it was placed in the breech end of hollow tubes, and when ignited, it blew its less volatile elements out on the opposition in flaming chunks. Greek fire thus developed into crude gunpowder and the tubes used with it became missile projectors or true cannons.

Gunpowder of a reasonably practical formula seems to have been known to have been about to some extent in Europe during the 13th century, and cannon as definite projectile-propelling engines are mentioned in rare instances in mid-13th-century European manuscripts.

Cannons undoubtedly existed in Seville, Spain, in 1247, and one dating from 1258 was preserved until recently in the Castle of Coucy, France. The 14th century may be accepted as the true beginning of the era of gunpowder and cannon in military affairs, since more general notice of them appears in the early part of the century and their influence was felt more and more as the century progressed.

Improvements

The 15th and 16th centuries brought many improvements in cannon design and use. Cast guns with trunnions for mounting them flexibly on portable carriages were increasingly used as the century progressed. In 1525, the first cannon of this type was cast and made in England. During this period cannons were more accurately classified in all armies and became a part of royal standard army equipment instead of being, as had often been the case, previously, the personal property of masters of artillery who owned them and rented them out, like the mercenary soldiers of the period. Increasing numbers of decisive effects were definitely influenced by the use of field guns.

The greatest genius in the use of artillery in the 17th century was Gustavus Adolphus of Sweden. Between 1620 and 1630, he developed the tactical use of light and medium-weight field artillery in conjunction with infantry in open-field battles to a degree that was not improved upon for more than 100 years. He made a definite division of types and limited his field artillery to four, nine and 12-pounders, using the lighter pieces as battalion, and the heavier as regimental guns.

The history of the organization of the American artillery may be divided into four phases. The first artillery units organized in the Continental Army during the Revolutionary War were batteries, averaging six guns each. The original type of battery organization lasted until the Civil War, when the artillery battalion, numbering three or four batteries at that time, came into being. The tactical concept of employment of artillery was that field batteries were massed and covered on the battlefield to positions that afforded good fields of fire, while the infantry formed along the flanks of the artillery in order to protect or support it in the defense.

More Improvements

The period from about 1880 to 1900 produced revolutionary improvements in weapons, propellants, and projectiles in all the armies of the world. Improved technique kept pace. At the time of the Spanish-American War, the American artillery had perfected the indirect laying technique and developed overhead fire procedure.

From colonial times until 1900, the artillery was a single branch of the service, with batteries designed as field type, to accompany the army in the field, or seacoast type, permanently emplaced to protect harbors and other critical points of the seacoast. In 1907 new developments and techniques had produced sufficient variance within the types of artillery to cause the artillery arm to be broken into two separate arms, the Field Artillery and the Coast Artillery.

Batteries, currently numbering four guns each, were formed into battalions, and battalions into regiments. By World War I, the United States had regiments formed into brigades, one of which was organical. ly a part of each division. The heavy caliber guns were formed into brigades of corps and army artillery. The development of the airplane brought the need for a defensive artillery weapon and, in 1921 the antiaircraft artillery was created as a branch of the Coast Artillery.

Experience in World War II indicated there was no real need for the separate branches of artillery, and, consequently, they were integrated again into a single army.

The reliability of artillery lies in the fact that once it joins the battle its fire is available around the clock. No condition of weather gives it pause. It is limited only by its maximum range and the ammunition tonnage which can be delivered to the firing positions.

Upset Highlights Open Tennis Finals

Lts. Mobley, Groshong Take Doubles Chaplain Ristau Wins Singles Honors

BY PETER TATISTCHEFF

Colorful play animated the open division of the 2nd Division Tennis Tournament this week. An upset in doubles and a victory for Lieutenant Gerald R. Ristau in singles kept excitement high Tuesday afternoon in playing that lasted well into the night.

Upsetting Ristau and Lieutenant Colonel John B. Finnegan, battalion commander, 38th Artillery, were Lieutenant Clay N. Mobley, Company A, 1st Infantry, and Lieutenant Ron Groshong, 2nd Administration Company.

Mobley and Groshong, pitted against an excellent duo, stretching the playing out, gained victory after five sets — 1-6, 6-2, 3-6, 8-6, 6-1.

The doubles game, which relied primarily on teamwork, quick decisions and careful placing of each shot, was the highlight of the tournament. Ristau and Finnegan were unable to squelch the steady styles of their opponents. They were caught disorganized and, at times, lacking in strategy in a game that depended most upon strategy.

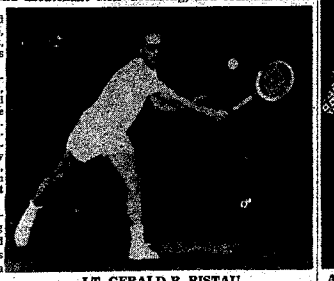
Following the doubles, Ristau returned, now playing alone against Groshong, and came out Division Open Singles Champion for this year in a score of 6-1, 6-2, 6-1.

Ristau, a slight and carefully built chaplain assigned to Division Artillery, found himself opposed by a very difficult defensive tennis style. The Chaplain, whose game is hard and fast, found the going rough despite the defensive attitude adopted by Groshong.

In contrast to the first game of the tournament, when Ristau was opposed by Lieutenant James B. Edwards, and where both players slammed powerful shots across the net, this last match saw Ristau impart. ing most of the power behind the ball as Groshong returned lazy and deceptive lobs and corner shots.

Fireball Serve

Ristau's serve stood out during the match as this player's greatest asset. The first and third games were won primarily by Ristau's fire-ball serve. Against steady aggressiveness, Groshong proved most effective in averting left - right dashes and returns with well placed lobs. In the end, however, he was defeated by his defensive attitude.

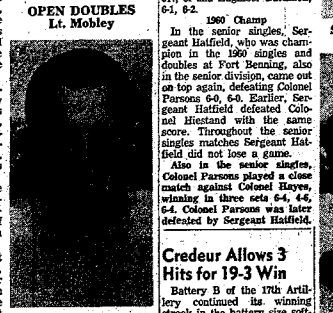


Lieutenant Ristau, the tennis-playing chaplain, and new 2nd Division Open Singles Champion, is from Appleton, Wisconsin. He arrived at Division Artillery from the Chaplain's School at Fort Slocum, New York, on March 27 of this year.

He has played tennis since 1946, when he played for Appleton High School on their varsity team. He was Captain of the High School Tennis Team in his senior year.

He went on to play tennis at Wartburg College in Waverly, Iowa, occupying the number one slot there. In competition Ristau placed second in the Wisconsin State Hardcourt Tournament in 1949. He has also won several city tournaments.

While at College, Ristau was the Iowa Conference Tennis Champion in 1953 and 1954. He was unable to continue his tennis playing during attendance at the Wartburg Theological Seminary and while assigned to a parish in Lake Mills, Wisconsin.



Winning the 2nd Infantry Division open tennis competition is the first chance Chaplain Ristau has had to display his style while in the Army.

Earlier, Sergeant Hatfield defeated Colonel Hiestand with the same score. Throughout the senior singles matches Sergeant Hatfield did not lose a game.

Also in the senior singles, Colonel Parsons played a close match against Colonel Hayes, winning in three sets 6-4, 4-6, 6-4. Colonel Parsons was later defeated by Sergeant Hatfield.

After receiving the colors from Colonel Johnson, 37th Artillery Commander, the new commander declared, "Yours is a command possessing one of the most distinguished records in the United States Army. 40 Turn Out For Post Football

By Pfc Joe Kachera

A turnout of over 40 hopefuls highlighted first week pre-season workouts for the 1961 edition of the Fort Benning Doughboys, Capt. Leston C. Cofield, head coach, reported.

Although the number of turnouts is large, the desired team quality is yet to be reached by the coaching staff. According to reports, a lot more taller and heavier men with experience are needed to fill out the club's roster.

"We need men in all positions. Hurting us most this season will be the backfield ends and center, unless we get some more candidates," the Doughboy coach said. "Of the candidates turning out now, not very many are very tall or heavy."

In pointing out the need for more turnouts, particularly experienced men, Capt. Cofield added:

"We open with the Camp Lejeune Marines September 16 and follow through with the Quantico Marines September 30. These are two rough games to open with and we need a better calibre of ball players to meet their strength."

Only eight weeks remain before the season's opener with Camp Lejeune. The first two games will be played away from home before the post squad opens at Doughboy Stadium. The schedule is tentatively set to run through December 2.

Improving facilities was one of the largest steps taken by the Doughboy coaching staff at the opening of pre-season drills. On tap was centralizing training and dressing facilities near the billets in Building 1353 on Carpenter Street.

The renovation has the training and dressing rooms in the lower part of the barrack-type building with living quarters on the second level.

After the team is selected, all men who live on post will move to the team headquarters.

Practice sessions in the conditioning phase of the pre-season workouts are held each day at 1 p.m. at the new training field.

Capt. Cofield is assisted with the coaching by Max Spurku, an athletic official with the post Youth Activities Club, and Lt. George Whitten, who last season played for the Doughboys but will not don the "Infantry Blue" togs this year.

Additional coaches are expected to be named later by The Infantry Center Athletic Department.

Post WACs Defeat Parris Island Nine

By Sfc Bismarck Stith

The Fort Benning WAC Softball Team handed the Parris Island team its first defeat of the season by splitting a two-game series last weekend.

The Parris Island nine copped the first game Saturday behind Sgt. Mary Eckdahl, Parris Island right-hander, hurled her sixth straight victory to receive credit for the win, while Sp4 Ann Davis suffered the defeat.

In the Sunday morning game, the Fort Benning WACs squeezed by the Marine team by a 6-5 margin. Southpaw Pfc Wheedle pitched her first win, aided by teammate Sp4 Bonnie Laird, who paced the winners with three hits in three trips to the plate. Eckdahl was tagged with her first setback.

The Fort Benning team went into the last inning with the Paris Islanders leading by a score of 5-4, as Sp4 Laird bunted for her third hit.

Lt. Alyce Simms also tapped a perfect bunt, sending Laird to second; Sp4 Livingston then rapped a single to center field, loading the bases. Pfc Wheedle got on with a fielder's choice, with a grounder to shortstop, scoring Laird to bring the tally to 5-5.

Lt. Simms was forced out a third on Pfc Wheedle's grounder. Sgt. LaPage bunted to again load the bases. Pct. Toney Taylor was credited with the winning RBI when she also bunted to first base, scoring Livingston for the winning tally.

A weekend of action is scheduled for the post WACs, a double-header here at Fort Benning with the Fort McClellan team. The first game is scheduled for tomorrow night at 7 p.m. and the second will be played at 10 a.m. Sunday morning. All games will be played on the WAC softball field.

Major Unit Baseball

Student Brigade Cops Third Win; 10th Artillery Holds 2nd Place

By Sfc Bismarck Stith

The Student Brigade nine ripped Troop Command, 7-1, for their third straight win, and the 151st Engineers clipped the 429th Medics, 5-1, Friday at Gowdy Field in two make-up games that were previously rained out. The 10th Artillery, who remained idle during the week, still solds down second place in the standings.

Pfc Carroll Emery picked up his second win in the second half Major Unit baseball play for The Student Brigade, and also rapped out two singles. Pfc Bruce Barry absorbed the loss. Emery held the Troop Command nine to three hits.

Pfc Martin Leicht, southpaw of the 151st Engineers, chalked up 12 strikeouts in last Friday night's game, beating the Medics. Pfc Leicht, a victim of a 1-0 defeat by The Student Brigade in a 12-inning duel in which he pitched hitless ball for 11 innings, went the route against the Medics, giving up only four hits.

Sp4 John Orsini, right-hander for the Medics, struck out 13 Engineers, one short of the 14 strikeout record he set in the first half of the major unit baseball action, but was still tabbed with the loss.

Sgt. James Hill, Pfc Bobby Rose and Pfc Cleveland Brown paced the winners with two safeties each.

The Engineers also edged the 58th Infantry Wednesday afternoon with a 5-2 score. Pfc Carey was credited with the win while Sp4 Freddie Morris suffered the defeat. The Engineers put on a hitting attack in the eighth inning for their three winning runs.

Pfc Mike Lopez, ace right-hander from The Student Brigade, hurled his first victory in his first appearance on the mound on Sunday when he came on in the fourth inning to relieve Pfc James Brown with the game tied at 3-3. Pfc Lopez gave up one hit and one run to hand the 29th Infantry their third setback with a 5-4 victory.

Second Lt. Larry Buch's one-run double in the first inning and a triple in the seventh, along with Pfc Tom Monza and Charles Nelson's two singles each paced the winners.

Second Lt. John Henning was tagged with the loss after chalking up eight strikeouts. Third baseman Pfc Chico Medina paced the losers with a double and a single. Don Shull also contributed a two-run double to account for the Two-Niners three hits.

Pfc Wayne Carpenter, Troop Command right-hander, broke up the game with a tenth inning one-run single as third place Troop Command gained ground on first place Student Brigade by edging the 58th Infantry, 4-3, Tuesday night.

The Troop Command scored one run in the first inning when Pfc George Billman blasted a triple to right field and Pfc Paul Nocella followed with a too-hot-to-handle line drive to second, scoring Billman.

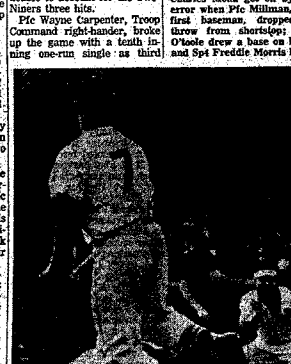
In the fourth inning, Pfc Nocella led off with a base on balls; Pfc Jack Ferrone rapped a one-run double to center field and stole third on the next pitch; and Pfc Ed Carey smacked a line drive to shortstop, scoring Ferrone for the third run.

The 58th Infantry struck back in the sixth and seventh innings for three runs, to even the score at 3-3. Pfc Charles Monk got on by an error when Pfc Millman, the first baseman, dropped a throw from shortstop; Pfc O'Toole drew a base on balls and Spt Freddie Morris hit a line drive to third, loading the bases.

Second Lt. Ken Allen hit into a fielder's choice, scoring Monk. O'Toole scored when Morris over-ran second and was tagged out at third. The tying run came in the seventh when Pfc Rockwell and Sfc James Gregory led off with bases on balls and Pfc Monk smacked a single to center field, scoring Rockwell.

It looked as if the Infantry men were on their way to their first victory when Pfc O'Toole drew a base on balls to airtight the bases, then Pfc Carpenter came on to relieve Pfc Harry Barry, who had chalked up seven strike outs and given up two hits in 6 innings.

Pfc Carpenter took over with the bases loaded, two outs and two balls on the batter. Carpenter struck out 2nd Lt. Bill Robinson to end the inning.



Troop Command put the game away in the tenth with two out. Pfc Art Silveria drew a base on balls; then Pfc Carpenter produced his game-winning blow, a single to right field. Carpenter was credited with the victory. Sp4 Morris was tagged with the setback, going nine innings, striking out ten and giving up four hits.

The Veterans Administration Hospital baseball team from Tuskegee, Ala., will play the 151st Engineer Group in an exhibition game that was previously rained out at Gowdy Field tonight.

The VA sponsors a baseball team each season to play games for the benefit of the patients. A return engagement has been scheduled at the hospital on July 30.

Col. Hardgrove Sets Top Score To Win Benning Tennis Tourney

COL. HARDGROVE (L) IS PRESENTED Men's Open Championship Trophy by Gen. Kelly

Lt. Col. George Hardgrove was nearly forced to paddle his way to the scoreboard to post his title-winning 295 total for the 72 holes in the 1961 Infantry Center Golf Tournament at the post Country Club last week.

The 18-hole round in the morning went fine until severe thundershowers in the early part of the afternoon sent scores zooming to record heights in the 72-hold tournament.

Col. Hardgrove's score of 295 was four strokes better than a second place tie between Major Robert Himes and Pfc Bruce Busby, who carded identical 299's. Major Himes won a play-off and was awarded second place.

Col. Paul T. Clifford won top laurels in the senior division with a 72-hold total of 307. Second place was won by MSgt Howard Holbrook, who fired a 312 for the tournament.

The winner and runner-up in the senior division were far out in front of the field with hardly any competition.

Sgt. Betty Farmer was automatically the winner in the women's division, being the lone contestant. Sgt. Farmer played the 72 holes, but only for practice and priming for the Third Army Golf Tournament, scheduled for August 28 to 31 at Fort Jackson.

Seven team members to represent Fort Benning in the Third Army tournament will be selected at a later date by The Infantry Center Special Services Athletic Department.

Other scores in the post golf championships were as follows:

OPEN DIVISION

Col. Hardgrove, 295; Major Himes, 297; Pfc Busby, 297; CWO Bill Shuff, 306; Capt. Richard Reish, 308; Pvt. Howard Anderson, 312; Sgt. Richard Souders, 314; Major William Rullman, 315; Major Jack Aure, 316, and Capt. Dan VanVaulkenburg, 317.

Major Joseph Sokolowski, 324; Pfc John Maloney, 327; Col. Jack Looney, 330; Lt. Barry Kelly, 330; Ted Polking, 332; Lt. Col. Calvin B. Roush, 335; Pfc Kurt Land, 344; M Sgt. James Hughes, 348; Lt. Fred Holmes, 355; and Capt. Donald Kennedy, 356.

SENIOR DIVISION

Col. Clifford, 307; MSgt. Holbrook, 312; Lt. Col. William Kloeb, 332; MSgt. Ralph Patterson, 340; Sp5 Solomon Miller, 341, and Major William H. Gunn, 347.

COL. CLIFFORD (L) ACCEPTS SENIOR DIVISION TROPHY From Brig. John E. Kelly, Deputy Fort Benning Commander

EAGLE SCOUT . . . Tom Scoville, son of Major and Mrs. T. M. Scoville, has been presented the rank of Eagle Scout in the post's Boy Scout Troop 37. Mrs. Scovill presented the rank during recent ceremonies. He is the recipient of 22 Boy Scout merit badges, a Fiftieth Anniversary Achievement Award and a rifle marksmanship badge.

Retired Officers To Hold Election Next Tuesday

A double barreled meeting of the Columbus Chapter, Retired Officers Association, will be held at 7:30 p.m. next Tuesday at the Main Officers Open Mess.

Election of officers and presentation of certificates of appreciation to individuals who have rendered outstanding services to the association will follow the dinner.

Officers on active duty, especially those who contemplate retiring, are encouraged to attend the meeting, according to Col. (Ret.) W. H. Shaefer, president of the chapter.

Call CWO (Ret.) G. L. Britt at MU 9-1156 for reservations. Deadline is today.

Co-Champions

Both West Point and the Naval Academy were declared National Lacrosse collegiate co-champions for 1961. Navy, defending champ, finished its season with a 9-1 record, losing only to Army. The cadets had an 8-1 record with a loss registered to Virginia.

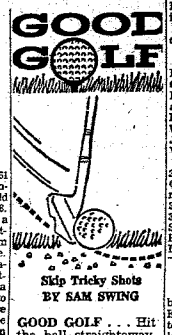
1st Brigade Sets Tourney For Softball

By Sfc Bismarck Stith

The 1st Infantry Brigade 1961 company-level softball championship play-offs will be held at Peden Field from July 24-28.

The tournament will be a double elimination type consisting of six teams, two from each major unit of the brigade. During the brigade softball season a total of 23 teams, consisting of three leagues, played a triple round-robin and the two top teams in each league were selected to participate in the brigade tourney to be held in August.

In the Two-Niners league, the 183rd Chemical Platoon and the 72nd Engineers Company will be top contenders representing the 29th Infantry.



Headquarters Company, 1st Infantry Brigade, and C Battery will represent the 10th Artillery of the Redleg league.

The 58th ARB league has selected Headquarters Company and Company A to take care of their chores in the tournament playoffs.

A two-game series will be played each day during the tournament, one game at 9 a.m. and another at 2:30 p.m. The public is invited to attend.

Masquers--Unmasked

By Pfc Chuck Parise

Chairman Spi Vince DeDario announces that his play-reading committee has narrowed the choice for the Masquers next major production to six possibilities —"Tea and Sympathy," "The Big Knife," "The Glass Menagerie," "Dial M for Murder," "The Second Threshold" and "The Searching Wind."

Friends and associates of the Masquers Little Theater Group are encouraged to read these plays and offer their comments as to production, staging, adaptability, and direction, to a member of the selection committee: DeDario, Wes Carr, Phyllis Tritsch, John Hofus, or Margo Carter.

Final selection of the next play, and the date for initial readings for parts will be announced this week.

Experiments in the varied techniques of radio drama continue in Peg Teeters' Radio Workshop. Newcomers Mike and Babs Downs, whose special brand of enthusiasm and vitality reveals a remarkable natural talent, and "old pro" Pfc Dick Weeks, the creator of 509's "Mr. Pusey," the delightful reporter - professor from Missouri Baptist College for Men, highlighted this week's taping of "The Thous and Dollar Wife."

In addition, the many dialects of Pfc Steve Lebow, the delicate nuances and shadings of John Hofus' voice portrayals, and the off-beat approach of the theater's new husband and wife comedy duo, Wes and Gail Carr, are creating for the Radio Workshop a refreshing synthesis in the multi-faceted of characterization, experience and talent.

The Playhouse has undergone a decided face-lifting, as property director Pfc John Olbrys and production assistants Pfc Chuck Parise and Pfc Bill Griffin have reinforced and repainted the Masquers stage.

With the approaching birth of the Masquers next production, persons interested in acting, staging, production, property, costumes, art, publicity, lighting and sound, are urged to contact personnel director Pfc Doug Moir—during the day at The Infantry Center Chaplain's Section and in the evening at the Playhouse (Phone 5-2468).

PIRATE TREASURE

Six years ago Bermudian skin diver Teddy Tucker turned his hobby into a real business. He found an emerald-studded gold cross in the wreckage of an old Spanish ship just off Bermuda. The cross has been valued at more than $75,000, and in the six years Tucker's total treasure finds amount to an estimated $200,000.

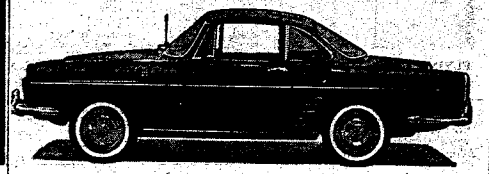
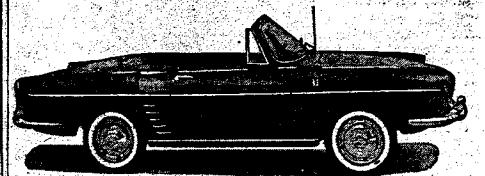
Shooters Get Their Third Legs During Fort Niagara Practice

The Distinguished Rifle Badge, highest individual qualification in competitive marksmanship, has been received by two members of the Army Rifle Team of Fort Benning training at Fort Niagara N.Y.



They are Sfc Tommie L. Mills of the Army Advanced Marksmanship Unit, and Sgt William Carrion of the Marksmanship Detachment, 2nd Infantry Division.

The award is presented by the National Board for the Promotion of Rifle Practice to individuals who, on three occasions, have fired in the top 10 per cent of eligible competitors participating in a National Trophy Rifle Match.



An intermediate award is made to those who have qualified at least once or twice. These are the Excellence-in-Competition Badges, or "leg" medals. The awards, or legs, must be won at various levels of competition including the National High Power Rifle Championships.

Sgts Mills and Carrion are firing in their third year of rifle competition. They earned the third leg for the Distinguished badge during the 1961 Third Army Rifle Championships at Fort Benning.

Satellites To Offer Instant Global Net

Instantaneous global communications is the goal of Project Advent, the Army's latest satellite communications system now under development.

Advent's primary objective is to conduct research and development to determine feasibility of a microwave communications system, using earth satellite communication repeaters in a synchronous, equatorial orbit.

Unlike previous communication satellite projects, which used passive and delayed repeater satellites, Project Advent will employ active repeater satellites. These will allow a signal beamed to the satellites to be received, amplified and relayed immediately to a receiving station on earth.

Project Advent is the responsibility of the Army Advent Management Agency, Fort Monmouth, N.J., an activity of the Signal Corps. The Project Advent space satellites are being developed by General Electric's Space and Missile Vehicle Department.

An operational Advent system would require a minimum of three satellites to orbit the earth's equator at a height of 22,300 statute miles, and a speed of 7,000 miles per hour.

Such an orbit would synchronize the satellite's movement with the earth's rotation and each satellite would remain in a relative position over a given point on earth. In this way virtual world-wide coverage could be achieved and maintained.

Two ground stations are planned for the system, one near Fort Dix, N.J., and the other near Camp Roberts, Calif. A Navy shipboard terminal will serve as a third station at sea operating in many parts of the world to test communications capabilities. The system will permit simultaneous transmission of high speed radio teletype and voice broadcasts.

The Rangers' Menu Not for Squeamish

If, as the old saying goes, one man's meat is another man's poison, people with queasy stomachs would do well to pass up lunch at the Swamp Rat Room.

And what is the Swamp Rat Room? Well, Duncan Hines never gave it his imprimatur and Howard Johnson never provisioned it. It exists, in fact, only in the lore of the Army's tough, combat-wise Rangers, trained to live off the land, whether it be Florida swamps or North Georgia mountains.

Lunch at the Rangers' Swamp Rat Room would be both filling and nutritious, providing any non-Ranger could bring himself to order from its menu.

He might begin with the soup course — Alligator Snapping Turtle Soup with Reindeer Moss — and go on to the chef's salad of broken fern and bittergrass with snake vine shoots. For fish he could choose from mud-baked East Bay River mullet, live reef oysters on the half shell, broiled Yellow River mud catfish and Blackwater Bay blue crabs.

Entrees? He's have his choice of the following: Broiled Florida woods steer, hickory - smoked suckling razorback hog, roast boar possum, grade-A spotted skunk steak; barbecued Holly Creek alligator, fresh - cooked Florida swamp rabbit, hickory-smoked cottonmouth water moccasin; baked box turtle in the box and hot roasted wood worms.

For side dishes he could choose from fresh green palmetto hearts, fresh green Weaver River bamboo sprouts and broiled coral fungus. He could wash all these goodies down with either sassafras tea or boiled creek water. Of the latter beverages the Swamp Rat Room menu advises thoughtfully, "Please strain minnows before drinking."

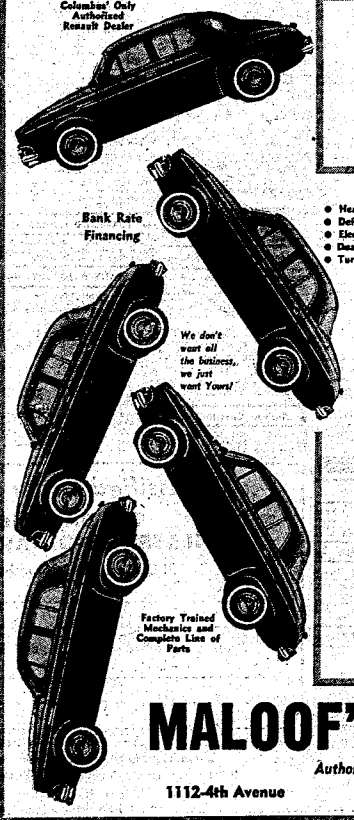
Dessert, finally, would consist of sweet gum swamp candy (in season) or a variety of berries: blue, black, goose, gopher and huckle.

But he's have to bring his own bicarbonate of soda.

Post Displays Are Featured At AMVET's Meet

A display of Ranger and Airborne training and models of Army missiles were featured at the Georgia AMVETS' convention in the Ralston Hotel last Saturday.

Lt. Gov. Garland Byrd and former Gov. Marvin Griffin were the principal speakers at the three-day meeting, which began Friday.



Between 400 and 500 posts were represented at the convention, state commander John E. Brown of Columbus announced.

All-Star Gridder

J. J. Holub, a private at Fort Riley, will participate in the celebrated College All-Star Football Game to be held in Chicago, August 4. Holub, a former Texas Tech lineman, is slated to report to Northwestern U. in mid-July to begin work under Coast Guard Academy head mentor Otto Graham.

Annual Camp Perry Firing School Opens Today

More than 7,000 students are expected to attend the Small Arms Firing School which opens at Camp Perry today. The three-week course comes under the responsibility of The Infantry School's Weapons Department.

The SAFS is held annually in preparation for and in conjunction with the national pistol and rifle matches at Camp Perry.

The Weapons Department has been conducting the school since 1953.

The objective of the school is to develop competent marksmanship instructors. It also promotes interest in marksmanship and raises the standards in the use of individual arms of the citizens of the United States.

The course is open to all citizens 14 years of age or older. Since its beginning, attendance has grown steadily. Approximately 5,500 students attended in 1960.

Courses are offered in the service pistol, police pistol and service rifle. A course in methods of instruction, headed by Capt. Carlton G. Bar-

Gen. Harrell Will Arrive; Take Command on Tuesday

Major Gen. Ben Harrell, new commandant of The Infantry School and commanding general of The Infantry Center, will be welcomed with honor guard ceremonies August 1 on Chapel Field.

The 4:30 p.m. event is open to the public. Immediately following the Chapel Field ceremonies, Gen. and Mrs. Harrell will be honored with an official reception in the Main Officers' Open Mess. Approximately 350 guests will attend.

The two-star general comes to the post after serving as commanding general of the 101st Airborne Division, Fort Campbell, since June, 1960. His predecessor at Fort Benning, Major Gen. Hugh P. Harris, departed July 15 to command I Corps in Korea.

Gen. Harrell was stationed at The Infantry School from December, 1945, to July, 1949, in successive assignments as assistant director of training of the Academic Department; director of the Combat Requirements Section; commander of the 37th Infantry Regiment; chief of the Operations Training Committee, General Subjects Section, and chairman of the General Subjects Section.

He attended The Infantry School's officer advanced course in 1940 and Airborne course in February, 1949.

Gen. Harrell graduated from the Military Academy at West Point, N. Y., in 1933. He was born in Medford, Ore., and considers Eugene, Ore., his home. He and Mrs. Harrell, the former Harriet Campbell of Medford, have two sons, Charles and Hunter.

In May, 1942, Gen. Harrell, then a captain serving as S-3 of the 7th Infantry Regiment, 3rd Infantry Division at Fort Lewis, Wash., was named G-3 of the North African Theater of Operations and Mediterranean Theater of Operations.

Colonel at 33

He was promoted to the rank of major in April, 1942, to lieutenant colonel six months later and became a colonel at the age of 33 in June, 1944.

Gen. Harrell was instrumental in the preparation of tactical plans for Operation TORCH, the amphibious landings in North Africa in November, 1942; for mounting the invasion convoy of more than 1,000 ships, the world's largest up to that time, which landed on the southern beaches of Sicily in July, 1943, and for the sweep across Sicily which terminated at the Straits of Messina in August, 1943, and drove the German Army back to the continent of Europe.

He assumed command of the 3rd Division's 15th Infantry Regiment in the Mediterranean

Medic Saves Woman's Life; Pfc Captures Bandit

Two acts by post soldiers on leave, almost a continent apart, have brought praise to them individually and credit to the service. Pfc Dennis Lyle of the 428th Medical Battalion was credited with saving the life of an accident victim near Atlanta, and Pfc Albert E. Tatro of the 1st Infantry Brigade subdued a gun-wielding terrorist in California recently.

In Atlanta

It doesn't take a war to prove the value of Army training.

Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Lyle of Westminster, S. C., know this and they have a letter from Georgia's governor Ernest Vandiver praising their son, Pfc Dennis Lyle, and his prompt action in an emergency where his medical training led to saving a woman's life.

Lyle, who is assigned to the 428th Medical Company, 428th Medical Battalion, was credited with saving the life of an Atlanta woman injured in an auto accident earlier this year. The young soldier was on his way home on leave at the time.

Critical Condition

Prompt first aid, properly administered, saved the critically injured woman. With Lyle was Pfc Preston Lewis, who was also commended for acts at the accident scene.

On receiving a letter of appreciation from Gov. Vandiver, Mrs. Lyle wrote her son's commanding officer, expressing her thanks for the "training and supervision" he has received while in the unit.

The letter said the facts surrounding the accident and her son's actions were forwarded to her by Gov. Vandiver and the Georgia State Patrol.

'We Are Proud'

She concludes: "We are proud to have our son serve in a superior unit (such) as yours. Thank you very much."

Lyle says the Army's training has "really paid off" for

On Pay Day

$15,000 Needed By AER-ARS

Approximately $17,733 has been donated so far in the annual fund drive for the Army Emergency Relief and the Army Relief Society.

A final emphasis will be made next Monday to reach the post goal of $33,361, based on 15 per cent of loans and grants extended on the post during 1960.

Typical cases in which the AER assists servicemen are due to non-receipt of pay or dependents allotment, loss or theft of pay, illness when government facilities are not available, funeral expenses of dependents, privation of dependents and emergency travel expenses.

The ARS exists solely to meet the needs of widow and orphans of Regular Army personnel.

Col. Milton G. Schneider, adjutant general of The Infantry Center, is the post's 1961 campaign chairman. Capt. Wallace E. Viau is assistant chairman and AER custodian.

OCS FAME . . . The latest addition to the Infantry Officer Candidate School's Hall of Fame is Lt. Col. Lewell W. Hesser, S-1 of The Student Brigade. His picture and military biography are being placed in Wigle Hall along with others so selected for the honor. He has served here since November, 1960.

'Fly-by' of 50 Called Largest Ever in Army

The largest "fly-by" in Army aviation history, according to Lawson Army Aviation Command operations officials, helped give Major Gen. Hugh P. Harris a farewell review July 14 on Sightseeing Field, as he departed as post commander and Infantry School commandant to assume command of I Corps in Korea.

Fifty aircraft from all units of the major command took part in the formation flight, as some 2,300 troops from post units marched in review.

Included in the salute were fixed-wing and rotary-wing craft ranging from L-19 observation planes to the Army's newest and largest cargo carrying Caribou; and from H-13's and H-34's to the largest operational cargo helicopter, the H-37 Mohave.

Post Sergeant Supports Probe Into Space by 2nd Astronaut

For a second time The Infantry School's Ground Mobility Department supported a U.S. space reconnaissance from Cape Canaveral.

Sfc Anthony J. Amodeo, Company G, Infantry School Battalion, The Student Brigade, was with personnel operating an armored personnel carrier standing by in case of a malfunction on the launching pad as Air Force Capt. Virgil I. Grissom was hurled to space.

His mission, along with fire and other rescue teams was to remove the astronaut, or the entire capsule itself, from the immediate area should danger develop.

During the space shot which sent Navy Commander Alan Shepard on the first space probe, Sfc Neal R. Gentry, also of Company G, was with the APC.

Theater in September, 1942, and the next month became deputy chief of staff of the division. He participated in the Volturno and Cassino engagements and made the landing at Anzio.

Planned Anzio Tactics

Gen. Harrell was named G-3 of VI Corps in February, 1944. In this position he planned the tactical maneuvers for the defense of and breakout at Anzio and the capture of Rome.

In August, 1944, he landed in Southern France in the ANVIL invasion. Taking command of the 3rd Division's 7th Infantry Regiment a few days later, he led it through the capture of Strasbourg, France, in December, 1944. He then returned to Italy as G-3 of Fifth Army, serving in this position until coming to Fort Benning a year later.

After leaving The Infantry School in 1949, Gen. Harrell went to the 11th Airborne Division at Fort Campbell for 25 months in successive assignments as division G-3, commander of the 511th Airborne Infantry Regiment and division chief of staff.

SHAPE Staff

On graduating from the National War College at Fort McNair, Washington, D.C., in August, 1952, he went to Paris as a staff officer at SHAPE (Supreme Headquarters Allied Powers Europe). A year later he assumed command of the 6th Infantry Regiment in Berlin and after 12 months was appointed chief of staff for the COB (Commander of Berlin).

Gen. Harrell became executive officer to the assistant secretary of the Army for manpower and Reserve Forces in August, 1955. The following January he was selected to head the Infantry Branch of the Career Management Division, Office of the Adjutant General, Department of the Army. He was promoted to the rank of brigadier general a month later.

Korea and CONARC

He went to Korea in July, 1958, as assistant commander of the 7th Infantry Division and commanding general of the 7th Infantry Brigade. Promoted to major general in August, 1959, he was named assistant deputy chief of staff for operations, plans and training at Continental Army Command, Fort Monroe. He stepped up to deputy chief of staff for operations, plans and training in April, 1960.

Among Gen. Harrell's decorations are the Silver Star, Legion of Merit with Oak Leaf Cluster, Bronze Star Medal with Oak Leaf Cluster, Czechoslovakian Military Cross, Poland's Golden Cross of Merit with Swords, French Croix de Guerre, Crown of Italy, Order of the British Empire, Military Valor Cross of Italy and Brazil's War Medal.

PFC LYLE

old Edward Lee Richard south of Gold Beach, Ore. That was the beginning of a five-hour seige of terror.

It ended when Tatro smashed a bottle in the face of the gunman. The gunman was charged with armed robbery, assault with intent to kill, assault with a deadly weapon, two counts of kidnapping and being an ex-convict in possession of firearms.

Pfc Tatro, who left the 19th Artillery last week for an assignment in Germany, told of events leading to the capture.

They were driving to Samoa, Calif., to see Jay's father when they picked up a hitch-hiker who said he was on his way to Los Angeles to look for a job.

They bought some beer at Crescent City. Jay said, and after a few drinks, Richard began "acting real funny."

"He (Richard) started giving all sorts of stories about where he was going and what he was going to do," Jay said. "He said he was really going to Los Angeles to kill somebody, not to get a job."

Richard then reached into a bag and pulled out a .22 caliber revolver, which he pointed at the heads of both Tatro and Jay, firing once out an open window. He then robbed Jay of five dollars.

The convict-hitchhiker next spot a liquor sign at a large market, and forced Tatro to pull over.

Taking Tatro with him into the store with the expressed intent of buying a bottle of liquor, Richard ordered Jay to remain in the car.

Moments later Jay heard a commotion, and within seconds, it seemed, the police were there.

The clerk had handed the gunman a bottle and some mix, and turned to make change when the convict whirled on him with a gun. Then Tatro slugged him on the head with a bottle just as he (Richard) fired. The shot went wild and the clerk ran out.

As Tatro and the gunman scuffled on the floor, another clerk ran in as Tatro was shouting, "Get the gun! Get the gun!" The second clerk picked up the revolver, which had skidded to one side, and held it until the police arrived.

Both Pfc Tatro and the convict were taken to a hospital for treatment. The stocky convict had by far the worse of it, with a broken nose and fractured dental plate where the bottle had hit him. The much smaller Tatro had only a small cut on one hand from glass on the floor.

General Order 100

'Law of War' Order Is Now 98 Years Old

NEW YORK (AFPS)—"Men who take up arms against one another in public war, do not cease on this account to be moral beings, responsible to one another, and to God."

So reads the central thesis of Army General Order 100, a rare copy of which is being exhibited at Columbia University as part of a display of Civil War materials.

Written in 1863

The historic order was written in 1863 by Columbia's Professor Francis Lieber who taught history and political science at the university. He wrote it at the request of Abraham Lincoln's Secretary of War Edwin Stanton who knew Lieber's reputation in the field of political ethics.

The order, consisting of 97 articles, was designed to provide a code of conduct for Union soldiers, but it was later adopted by England, France and Germany to be incorporated in the so-called "law of nations."

Lieber stressed the necessity of avoiding all useless suffering and of preserving the material and spiritual assets of civilization in the midst of armed conflict. He urged the sparing of hospitals, libraries, churches, museums and charitable institutions, stressing that the enemy should mark them plainly.

Lieber's order went counter to European military traditions of the period when it forbade Union troops to appropriate for themselves money, clothing and valuables of dead and captive Confederate soldiers.

Military men, being under arms and physically stronger than civilians, should, he insisted, conduct themselves in every situation with a sense of honor and justice. He stated also that crimes committed by the military called for punishment of the greatest severity.

Was Ex-Prussian

Lieber himself had been a liberal agitator in Germany where he was wounded while serving in the Prussian Army. After being imprisoned several times for his views, he fled to London and later came to Boston. Known as "the father of political science in America," he taught at Columbia from 1856 until his death in 1872.

Capt. Poydasheff Addresses Local Sertoma Members

Capt. Robert S. Poydasheff, chief of the Military Affairs, Claims and Legal Assistance Branch of The Infantry Center Staff Judge Advocate Section, gave a talk on "The One-Army Concept" at a luncheon meeting of the Columbus Sertoma Club Wednesday.

The program was held at the Columbus Country Club. J. H. Knox, program chairman of the organization, made the arrangements for the presentation.

her, is integrated into the service rifle and pistol courses for the more advanced students with emphasis on developing a competent instructor-coach.

Classes in the service rifle and pistol are open to all, whether competing in the national matches or not. Maj. Joseph F. Gregory, 1961 chief of the pistol course, is assisted by Sfc James H. Johnson who is making his fourth trip to Perry as senior enlisted pistol instructor.

The latest small arms information is presented. Techniques of instruction and marksmanship training is received by civilians and various components of the Armed Forces not reached through active military service training programs.

New responsibility was added this year when the SAFS mission was expanded to provide instructional assistance to the National Rifle Association in conducting the Junior and Tyro School — .22 caliber, CO2 and Air Rifle — which has a projected load of 1,400 students. This course is open to all novice shooters over 12.

School planning began last November under the directions of Lt. Col. Robert A. Guenthner, 1961 SAFS director. SAFS instructors, 19 officers and 41 enlisted men, of the Small Arms Committee of the Weapons Department prepared most of the lesson plans and training aids.

MSgt Charles A. Yoder, SAFS sergeant major, reported last Monday, that rehearsals were proceeding as planned and that all would be ready for the school opening.

Each year selected guest instructors from other branches, services and civilian organizations are invited to supplement USAIS instructors.

Guest instructors for the service pistol and service rifle courses will include representatives from the Navy, Air Force, Marines, Coast Guard, the Army Ordnance Corps, the Provost Marshal's General School, and the U.S. Army Advanced Marksmanship unit at Fort Benning.

Take a close look at the backgrounds and records of those entering Officer Candidate School, and you'll find a lot to be proud of as representatives of the best in American young men.

One of the recent candidates now training with the 51st Company, 5th student Battalion, The Student Brigade, is a post recipient of the Andrew Carnegie Fund award for courage and valor.

With two friends, OC Karl J. Swindull was returning home from a National Guard drill session in Florida when they heard a radio flash seeking help for several swimmers in trouble. The report said a rescue boat had been dispatched, but Candidate Swindull decided to help too, if he could.

When he arrived at the scene, he and his companions saw that the rescue boat had capsized, and now both the swimmers and boat's crew were in danger. All three plunged into the Atlantic, and were credited with saving seven lives.

The $500 Carnegie award wasn't the only commendation they soon received. They were awarded the Distinguished Service Medal from the State of Florida, and a citation from the Florida Adjutant General.

Army Is Selling Its Last Paddlewheel

Army Engineers are taking bids for the Mississippi, one of the last of the "texas deck" sternwheel packet boats operating on U. S. inland waterways. Having been used by the Corps of Engineers as a river boat since 1927, it is being replaced by a trim, more powerful modern vessel.

Bids for the sale will be opened sometime next month at the Memphis office of the Engineers.

'Sabre City' Sounds Like Fine Idea

Two World War II veterans, J. R. Houser and L. L. Rankin, conducted an independent survey and then decided it was high time to establish an exclusive community for retired servicemen and their families. The survey showed the average 20-year-retired officer's and NCO's age is 45 years, and listed him as having 2.7 children in the teenage bracket.

Known as Sabre City, in the suburbs of Sacramento, Calif., their development will have, in addition to homes priced from $13,800 to $20,000, a trained staff offering free employment guidance and placement; a five-acre community center complete with a club, large swimming pool, pitch-and-putt golf course, tennis courts, and a lagoon; and a 14-acre shopping center.

With about 275,000 former servicemen now drawing retired pay after 20 years service, another 46,000 scheduled to shed khaki and greens this fiscal year, and as many as 1,163,000 anticipated for 1983, this project looks to us like a farsighted and beneficial trend—at least we hope it's a trend.

Draft Swings Up to 13,000 in August

A draft call for 13,000 has been asked for in August, as a step in bringing Army authorized strength up to one million. June strength was listed at 856,000.

The call is the highest since last December, when the number drafted was 8,000. The new call is a result of the defense review by President Kennedy.

The Nation Lost a Giant In Ernest Hemingway

To the Infantrymen of WWII he was "Papa." He called himself "the poor man's Pyle." Sportsmen knew him as a big game hunter, a deep sea fisherman of legendary skill and cunning. The whole world knew him as one of the five Americans ever to receive the Nobel Prize for Literature.

That prize officially recognized Ernest Hemingway's eminence in the world of letters, but the man himself was of heroic mold even for people who hadn't read "A Farewell to Arms," "For Whom the Bell Tolls" or the famous short stories. Hemingway's death at 61 means the loss of a giant—an American who will be remembered as much for his personality and exploits as for his books.

It is no accident that some of his most ardent admirers and friends were military men. The admiration was mutual. Hemingway spoke their speech. He thought their thoughts. He wrote about them with insight and appreciation because courage was a pivotal theme in his books and he knew that war is the ultimate test of a man's courage.

His whole life was a test of stamina and fortitude. Hemingway nearly died from wounds suffered in WWI when he served as a volunteer in the Italian Army, and the experience colored all of the books that made him famous. The Hemingway hero faced death as a stoic—on the battlefield, in the bull ring, in the mountains of Spain, in the African veld. He was no stranger to fear, but he didn't whimper.

There is much to be learned from reading Hemingway, quite apart from his great art as a story-teller. His prose style was clear and trenchant. It influenced a whole generation of writers, but none of them could do more than imitate it. He wrote as he lived—cleanly and sometimes violently, but always with respect for the qualities of spirit that make the decent and brave man. Ernest Hemingway was his own best hero.

Chaplain's Corner

Why Not Start This Plan Today?

By Chaplain (Capt.) James F. Dolan

In our family the great pastime was singing. A piano wasn't something to be dusted — it was something to be used. My mother had the lovely custom of picking out songs that each of us could sing. I'll always remember her phrase: "Here's a song that will go well with your voice".

I'll never forget one song she taught me as a youngster. It is called "JUST FOR TODAY". Here are some of its phrases:

"Lord, for tomorrow and its needs I do not pray,
Keep me, my God from stain of sin, just for today.
Let me both diligently work and duly pray:
Let me be kind in word and deed, just for today."

There are treasures of wisdom in that song. It is a plea to each of us to live in the present, accepting each day that God gives us as life.

There are some people who can't forget the past. They spend their present in fruitless regret for the opportunities they failed to capitalize on in the past. They cripple their thoughts with the constantly recurring theme: "why didn't I do such and such?", "why did I make that decision?"

Others see only the cold record of their past sins and miss the great feat of divine mercy and forgiveness. They never seem to realize that what God wants is their sorrow and their sincere determination to serve Him in their future lives.

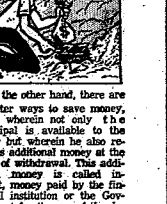
Then there are the future type. They are always going to begin—"tomorrow". There is the man who thinks: 'Someday I'm going to knuckle down . . . but not just yet. I'm going to really start praying . . . tomorrow." When we think of the lives of saintly people, we have the mistaken notion that they reached sanctity by one sudden leap. If you'll look more closely at their lives, you'll find that it was a day by day process of growing into sanctity.

They lived one day at a time; they valued each God-given day, hour and minute. And they tried to serve God to the best of their ability — just for that day. Their prayer each day was taken right from The Lord's Prayer: "Give us this day our daily bread."

An old Latin phrase has been used for centuries. It is this: "NUNC COEPI" — "Now I begin".

"Now I begin" — a good motto to begin the day with. Follow it up with a morning offering to God, asking Him to make this day of life worthy of Him. Consider the graces God is offering you—just for today. What can He make of you, if you cooperate with His divine help today? How can you fulfill His Will today? Instead of moaning over yesterday's mistakes or nursing yesterday's injuries, how can you correct the mistake or show forgiveness today? Why put off until tomorrow the greatness you can achieve today?

Our lives have a past, a present and a future. We confide the past to God's mercy, leave the future in the hands of His Fatherly Providence. And we live our present day in the light and strength of God's grace.



The Judge Says . . .

Why Lose Interest In Old Shoes, Tin Cans or Suchlike?

There is an old bit of corn about an Irishman whose house was entered by a burglar one dark night. Thrusting a beater in the face of the sleepy and much bewildered Pat, the burglar demanded, "Your money or your life."

"Take me life," sputtered Pat, "I want me money for me and age." Now, there was a man really carried away with the principle of long range savings—savings to provide for the contents of his time of withdrawal. This additional money is called interest, money paid by the financial institution or the Government for the use of the depositor's money — a sort of rent for the use of money.

Savings accounts in banks, building and loan associations, ect., postal savings, and Army Soldier's Savings accounts for enlisted personnel are all methods of saving and earning interest. An additional favorable feature of these methods of saving is the guarantee by the Government protecting the saver against loss.

On the other hand, there are smarter ways to save money, ways wherein not only the principal is available to the saver but wherein he also receives additional money at the time of withdrawal. This additional money is called interest, money paid by the financial institution or the Government for the use of the depositor's money — a sort of rent for the use of money.

Savings accounts in banks, building and loan associations, ect., postal savings, and Army Soldier's Savings accounts for enlisted personnel are all methods of saving and earning interest. An additional favorable feature of these methods of saving is the guarantee by the Government protecting the saver against loss.

An Outpatient Is No Stepchild

Full Facilities Of MAH Support Outpatient Clinics

By Lt. Col. Frances C. Mantor, ANC

A well developed outpatient department is really a hospital in miniature form.

It has the same aims as the inpatient department; that of providing care and treatment for the sick and injured, promoting public health and teaching. The main difference is that outpatients are not fed or housed and no major surgery is performed for them.

Volume Treatment

Outpatient type care of the sick and injured is on a slightly different basis than inpatient care; larger numbers are treated in a shorter time and they are not admitted to the hospital. The health of the public is watched by the outpatient department because it is here that epidemics are often first noted, along with other health hazards, such as the number of bites from animals, the number of poisonings resulting from small children eating aspirin, swallowing clorox and so forth.

Education Stressed

Education as well as treatment is performed for outpatient personnel and this has two aspects; teaching the public preventive health measures and how to care for their own seasonal illnesses at home, and teaching medical personnel how to better care for the ill.

If mothers were not able to cope with a large number of their children's childhood diseases and the family's common colds at home, the clinics would be even more crowded and the more seriously ill outpatients would suffer.

If there were no teaching programs and facilities, there would not be enough properly trained doctors, nurses and attendants for the future.

Age of Specialization

Medical science is steadily breaking through into such complicated and precise areas that it is impossible for one person to learn all the details to treat all diseases and disorders. This compels medical personnel, especially doctors, to specialize, in other words to concentrate their learning in one field after the basic general background of medicine is acquired.

Organization of patient care in the hospital rests upon these specializations for inpatient and outpatient treatment.

Since the outpatient service is the hospital in miniature, the specialty divisions for outpatients applies to the hospital in general.

Clinics

The service is composed of clinics, staffed with personnel equipped with knowledge of specific disorders. The clinics are surgical, medical and neuropsychiatric in type manned by personnel well trained in their field.

Doctors see patients on planned appointments which provides adequate time for thorough examination, tests to assist in finding the cause of a disorder, and to evaluate each patient and follow the recovery.

A person may report as an outpatient and receive treatment in a series of appointments at various clinics; and then, again, examinations and tests on one visit may reveal a need for more treatment as an inpatient on a ward.

Emergency Cases

One section unique to the outpatient service is the Emergency Room. Here treatment is given as the name applies; when a crisis has developed which needs immediate action to save life, prevent crippling and disfigurement and to ease acute pain.

Doctors work in the Emergency Room on a rotating basis. Although many may be specialists, they do not necessarily treat patients in their particular specialty. However specialists are always on call for the patient with very severe disorders.

An orthopedic surgeon is called in for a patient with a fractured leg, a cardiologist for a heart attack, etc.

Get Priority

It is only reasonable that emergency cases receive priority, treatment and the less serious await their turn. People with chronic illness such as hay fever, sinusitis, anemia, backache, sore joints, etc., normally will not receive immediate care in the Emergency Room but will have to wait so that patients in greater distress can be seen first.

Pamphlet

Martin Army Hospital has published a pamphlet entitled "Clinics" which describes the different clinics and how to make an appointment. This pamphlet can be obtained at the Main Information Desk, Central Appointment Desk, in all clinics of the new hospital and the Dependent's Immunization Clinic in the Old Hospital Building.

SGT WARREN Holds Latest Award

Sgt. Leonard A. Warren, 593rd Transportation Detachment, Lawson Army Aviation Command, was winner of the Outstanding Soldier of the Year Award at Fort Benning recently, following competitions during the Youth Activities Club Carnival July 4.

Sgt. Warren entered the Army in 1950 at the age of 18. Upon completion of basic training, he was transferred to Korea, and captured by the North Korean forces. Escaping from the prisoner compound, he managed to return to the UN lines.

At present Sgt. Warren is a senior cargo helicopter repairman on the H-37 "Mohave", the Free World's largest operational cargo helicopter. He is assigned to the 520nd Cargo Helicopter Field Maintenance Detachment as acting shop foreman.

The 593rd Detachment's mission is to support the 19th Transportation Company (H-37 Mohave).

Who'll Take It Up There?

Dover, N. J. (AFPS)—The largest single piece of encased explosive in the world—more than a ton of TNT—has been fabricated at the Army's Picatinny Arsenal here.

The powerful "firecracker," cast in the shape of a sphere, weighs 2,560 pounds and measures 11½ feet in circumference, or about 100 times the size of a regulation basketball.

The huge ball will be used in cratering studies near Anchorage, Alaska. It has no casing since container fragments would interfere with the tests.

"Bootstrap"

Four Post Officers Graduated

Four Main Post officers were among the 200 military men and women who completed their academic work at the University of Omaha recently.

All but eleven of the officers received bachelor of general education degrees through the College of Adult Education. The others received bachelor of science in military science degrees, and one "lady Bootstrapper" received the bachelor of science in nursing degree.

The Bootstrap program is designed for the career service man or woman who has completed three years of college. Army and Air Force personnel are granted six months duty leave to complete their work on the campus.

"Bootstrappers know why they're here," college officials stated, "and their grades confirm this." Bootstrappers have compiled better than a "B" average in the past eight years, and have acquired a group reputation for being "curve-wreckers."

The Bootstrap candidates for degrees from Fort Benning are Lt. Col. Ralph J. Rashid, Capt. Herschel W. Bagby, Capt. Wayne Seeley, and 1st Lt. Helmer Behrens.

Signs Keep Travelers On 'Right Side'

BERLIN (AFPS) — The American serviceman stationed here is in a ticklish spot. But one of the dangers confronting him isn't so apparent, and it can lead to trouble if it isn't reckoned with.

That danger is the 103-mile border that separates East and West — the Iron Curtain. It divides 28 miles of the city of Berlin and runs for 75 miles between West Berlin and East Germany.

Sgt. Leroy E. Piatt, a military policeman, takes two days off every week from his regular duties to perform a unique job. He inspects and repairs the signs that stand along the American-sector side of the border as a warning to travelers.

Sgt. Piatt might be called the Army's border watchdog. Under his responsibility fall 50 miles of boundary — 16 of those with East Berlin and 34 with East Germany.

His chief concern is that all the warning signs are standing and are legible. The sergeant has 457 signs in the American sector to care for, and he says he must replace about 25 every month.

"There's no pressure," Sgt. Piatt reports. "It's the same as any other duty. I get along pretty well with the people on the other side of the border. They always watch us at work."

While West Berliners are free to cross the city boundary into East Berlin under international agreement, they stand a good chance of being arrested if they disregard the East German "zone" border.

The signs in the city itself are mainly to tell soldiers they are entering East Berlin. The ones along the zone are to keep them out.

Soldiers can also get into trouble on Berlin's elevated railway. If one should fall asleep and pass his stop, he could easily wind up in Communist custody.

Sgt. Piatt isn't professionally concerned with the "el," however. His worry is the network of signs that lets the serviceman know where he's going, and where he can't go.

MAH Wants Your Help As Red Cross Volunteer

By Trish Bishoff

Although the temperature continues to soar into the 90's each day, it is a good time to think about October classes and enroll in the Red Cross Volunteer program.

There will be classes for Volunteer Nurses Aides, Staff Aides, and Gray Ladies. These classes are open to all mature, interested women who are high school graduates, whether military dependents or civilians.

The courses range in length from eight hours to forty hours, depending upon your choice. For further information about any one of the courses, you may contact the chairman of each group. They are Mrs. William Summers, 5-2718; Gray Ladies; Mrs. Archie Bishop, FA 7-6847, Volunteer Nurses Aides; Mrs. Robert Phillips, 5-1498, Staff Aides; Red Cross Office, 4-3300 or 4-2300.

The Daughters of the U.S. Army have made available free nursery at Tot Town for trainees and workers in the past, and in all probability, will do so this year. Volunteers must pay for their own uniforms, but the cost of these is minimal.

Emmal Johnson on Etiquette

Whatever happened to the old custom of the CO's wife visiting her husband's men that were confined to the hospital, ill?

SGT. OLD GUARD

DEAR SGT. OLD GUARD

Custom is, according to Webster, a habitual or usual course of action. And as you have signed yourself as 'old guard', I know you can compare the regiment of 25 years ago with the battle group of today and note many customs that are antique because they are impractical.

A peace time regiment of 25 years ago consisted of a few companies organized at battalion level. Very few professional soldiers had dependents on station. The turn over of personnel was very slow and an officer had time to get to know the men who worked for him.

A commander's wife knew the names of those assigned to her husband's unit as she would know the names of family cousins. If calling on the sick was done, I'm sure it was because she knew the man she visited, and knew his visitors would be few.

Today her military family of people under her husband's command has grown to such proportion that she would spend most of her time on calls to the sick. A large majority of these men now have their own families on station with them. These same dependents can receive treatment too.

Mrs. CO knows that sick folk still like attention, special visitors and help with the problems an illness brings. And she still helps to meet this need.

In June, here at Fort Benning, 97 uniformed trained ladies volunteered some 1,546 hours of time throughout the hospital. These gals may be privates wives and generals' wives in any of several uniforms; Gray Ladies, Volunteer Nurses Aide, Staff Aides, and Red Cross. And June is considered a low month for volunteer help.

In addition to this, here at Martin Army Hospital, 117 non-uniformed ladies put in 350 hours of time at such events as ward parties in June. These ward parties are sponsored by the ladies of various units such as battle groups.

Mrs. CO oversees the arrangements for these affairs which require volunteers to make and donate goodies, get them to the hospital and serve them in the wards.

Also Chaplains look up each hospitalized soldier in their unit and make a point of visiting him.

Visits from others like yourself or the commander's wife are still welcomed at the hospital. Custom changes as does any community service when the community changes.

Meet Held To 'South Sea' Theme

The ladies of the Weapons Department, The Infantry School, attended a "South Sea" Brunch recently at the new Supper Club Annex.

Hostesses for the brunch were the ladies of the Small Arms Committee under the direction of Mrs. Robert A. Guenthner.

teen report

By Donna Davis And Kay Jones

An outstanding red-head with a sweet personality is the subject of today's Report Card. Linda Turner, daughter of Lt. Col. and Mrs. Leonard C. Turner steps into the spotlight.

Linda was born in Enterprise, Alabama, on March 21, 1945, and calls this "home." Linda has a sister Deborah, 9, and a brother Gary, 12.

She has lived here at Benning for the past four years, and during this time she attended Faith School for the seventh and eighth grades and Columbus High for her freshman and sophomore years.

At Faith, Linda graduated in the top ten and at Columbus High she had an all "A" average for two years. Linda's ambition in life is to go to college and become a school teacher.

Linda is a perfect example of versatility, and participates in many activities. She is a member of JADA and was previously the chaplain of this club.

For the past two years, Linda has modeled in the fashion show for the Mother-Daughter luncheon that JADA gives each April. She is also a member of the Sigma Delta Beta Sorority, is a Sunday School teacher in the post kindergarten, attends the Protestant Chapel, and belongs to the "Follow-in H. Me" club where she was a past vice-president.

Linda is a graduate of the Nurses' Aide program of Martin Army Hospital.

Even with all these activities, she still finds time for hobbies. Among these are tennis, swimming, and collecting stamps.

Prior to living at Benning, she was stationed in Germany, Fort Leavenworth, and Fort Monroe, Virginia. The Turners are leaving here the first week in August for the Language School in California for six months and then to Venezuela for three years.

We of Benning salute this popular teenager and wish her much success in her next assignment.

In May, 1937, Sgt Gibson was assigned to Company G, 18th Infantry, Mountain Trail Detail, at Schofield Barracks in Hawaii. In October, 1939, he reenlisted for Fort Jay.

October, 1940 saw Sgt. Gibson with the 162d Infantry which served at a number of posts, including Fort Benning, Fort Jay, and Fort Blanding, Fla.

World War II

In May of 1942 he was promoted to staff sergeant and was cadre to the 304th Infantry, 76th Infantry Division at Fort Meade. That September he was promoted to tech sergeant as cadre with the 357th Infantry, 100th Infantry Division at Fort Jackson.

E-8 GIBSON

During World War II, Sgt Gibson went overseas to France and Germany with the 100th Infantry Division where he participate in the Battle of Bitche in Southern France during 1945.

After the War

While operations sergeant with the 351st Infantry, he participated in the evacuation of American families from the free territory of Trieste. This evacuation was due to political friction between the Italians and the Yugoslavians over the turnover of Trieste to the Italian government.

Among Sgt. Gibson's decorations are the Bronze Star Medal and the Combat Infantryman's Badge.

He was assigned to his present duties in May, 1961, and promoted to E-8 in February of last year.

Congress Studies Plan To Aid Trailer Owners

Washington (AFPS) — A bill to ease financial burdens for some 9,000 trailer owners on permanent change of station moves (PCS) is making headway in Congress.

The House Armed Services Committee, headed by Rep. Karl Vinson (D-Ga.), reported favorably on the legislation which calls for a raise in trailer allowances from 20 to 30 cents per mile on PCS moves.

In its report to the full House, however, the group stipulated that the trailer authorization increase should not exceed the cost incurred in moving the maximum PCS move allowances of the different ranks.

PRESTIGE NOTE

A Latrobe, Pa., housewife returned an income tax questionnaire with the title "Home Executive" written neatly across the top.

It also makes clear that trailer allowances should never exceed those given on PCS and make ownership of a mobile home more profitable to service trailer owners than those with conventional homes.

Before becoming law the measure must clear the full House and Senate, and have Presidential approval.

Findings of a 13-Month Tour

Well Known Local Archeologist Returns With Korean Citation

Sfc David W Chase, who has been cited by the Republic of Korea minister of education for his contributions to Korean archeological research, has completed the Korea tour and will be assigned here next month. He is now in Columbus on leave.

Sgt Chase served as curator of The Infantry Center Museum before his 13-month tour in Korea. He was active in the explorations along the Chattahoochee River which have added greatly to the knowledge of early Indian life.

Prehistoric Sites Found

While assigned as chief clerk in the Civil Affairs Section, Headquarters Forward, 7th Logistical Command, he received a letter of appreciation for his extensive archeological reconnaissance of the Han River region near Seoul which uncovered several important prehistoric dwelling sites.

Pottery and stone implements he obtained from his off-duty hour diggings were given to the National Museum of Korea.

The letter was presented by Col. Mun Hui Sok, minister of education, at a ceremony attended by Professor Lee Min Jae, vice minister of education; Gregory Henderson, cultural attache, U. S. Embassy; and Dr. Kim Won Yong, chief curator of the National Museum.

Japan and Panama

Though he is "most interested in North America," Sgt Chase has done archeological work in Panama and Japan, as well as Korea during his 19-year Army career.

While assigned here before, he was liaison between the Army and the University of Georgia and the Smithsonian Institute.

A representative of the Smithsonian Institute is expected here Aug. 1, and Sgt Chase plans to renew his work with both the institute and the university. He has also been busy renewing contacts with city and county groups with whom he was active before.

When asked if he encountered difficulty in beginning his Korean explorations due to the language differences (he does speak Japanese fairly well) and relative unfamiliarity with the country, he said he had to spend the first few weeks studying the background and history of the area.

Better Understanding

"The main need", he said, "is for a better understanding of the true history of their land and civilization by the peoples of Japan and Korea." He cited the heavy reliance on mythology in many Far Eastern cultures.

Sgt Chase added that he will remain in touch with those he met and worked with in Korea, as he has with many in Japan, and continue to be of help to them in any way possible.

Anniversaries Marked Locally By Personnel in Four Branches

Members of the Judge Advocate General Corps, Chaplain Corps, Transportation Corps and the Army Medical Service at the post joined their counterparts on Army installations throughout the world this week in celebrating the anniversaries of their respective corps.

To mark the Medical Service's 186th anniversary yesterday, a coffee was held in the Red Cross Lounge of Martin Army Hospital for hospital personnel and others on the post.

The 13th Transportation Battalion, 2nd Infantry Division, will hold a review tomorrow at Knight Field at 9 a.m. in honor of the Corps' 19th birthday Monday. Members of The Infantry Center Transportation Section and transportation units are invited to attend.

Fourteen chaplains of The Infantry Center will celebrate the 186th anniversary of the Chaplain Corps with a reception from 2 to 5 p.m. today at the Main Officers' Open Mess.

More than 500 invitations have been issued to general officers, unit commanders and key personnel of The Infantry Center and The Infantry School.

The Judge Advocate General's Corps also will be 186 years old tomorrow, having been founded by Gen. George Washington in 1775.

Justice

The legally trained officers in The Infantry Center Staff Judge Advocate Section handle problems in the fields of claims, military affairs, legal assistance and military justice.

Transport

The Infantry Center Transportation Section includes the Commercial Traffic Division, Motor Transport Operations Division which maintains and operates one of the largest administrative motor pools in the Army, and the Motor Transport Maintenance Division which provides third echelon aircraft maintenance for the Army's second largest aircraft population, in addition to maintaining other vehicles.

Transportation officer for The Infantry Center is Col. H. F. McFeely.

Major transportation units on the post are the 3rd Transportation Battalion, Lawson Army Aviation Command; 39th Transportation Battalion, The Infantry Center Troop Command, and the 13th Transportation Battalion, 2nd Infantry Division.

The chaplaincy dates back to July 29, 1775, when it was established by a resolution of the Continental Congress.

Almost as old as the Army itself, the Chaplain Corps has served through the years to maintain freedom of worship and to preserve and strengthen the moral fiber of the American soldier.

In every major conflict the nation has encountered, chaplains have served with honor. Many of their number have made the supreme sacrifice for their country.

Chaplains at Fort Benning serve a community of approximately 65,000 persons. They plan the religious activities of military personnel and their dependents, meet the spiritual needs of the troops, provide character guidance and maintain a close relationship with the surrounding civilian community.

Health

The original component of the Army Medical Service, the Medical Corps, was established in 1775. The other corps that comprise the service, the Army Nurse Corps, the Dental Corps, the Medical Service Corps, the Veterinary Corps and the Army Medical Specialist Corps, were established later.

Four Records Fall In Regional Match

CAMP CHICKAMAUGA, Fort Niagara, N.Y. — Four national records in rifle competition were topped by members of the Army rifle teams at Fort Niagara during the 1961 East Central Regional High Power rifle championships July 15-16.

Most outstanding was the accomplishment of Sgt Raymond E. Campbell, Army Advanced Marksmanship Unit, who won the regional championship with a perfect score of 500-48V.

First 500 Score

It is the first time a 500 point aggregate rifle match has been won by a possible score with the winner firing the service rifle. It has been done in competition with the shooter using a bolt action rifle.

All of the seven individual competitive events were won by Army shooters of the five squads at Niagara.

National records were bettered at the 200 yard standing match by Sgt William Carrion, Eastern Division squad, with 100-10V; in the 200 yard rapid fire match by S-Sgt. Herbert L. Duncan, Advanced Marksmanship Unit, with 100-16V; and in the 300 yard rapid fire match by Sfc George R. Mason, Eastern Division squad, with 100-16V.

Other Winners

In the other individual events the first 600 yard slow fire match was won by Sgt Noah I. Bailey, Army Europe rifle squad, with 100-71V while Sfc Alfred B. Falcon, Advanced Marksmanship Unit, won the second 600 yard slow fire match with 100-17V.

Sergeant Campbell also won the NRA International Shooting Fund match, an aggregate of the 200 yard standing and first 600 yard slow fire matches, with a score of 200-18V.

Harold C. LeRoy, of Albany, N. Y., was the high scoring civilian competitor with a 493-46V total in the aggregate. John C. Herr, of Elmira, N.Y., was the high Reservist with 486-39V and Spc4 Barbara J. Hile, WAC member of the Advanced Marksmanship Unit, was high woman competitor with 471-24V.

Team Results

The team match was won by a four-man entry of the Army XX Corps, a Reserve organization, with a total of 971 points of a possible 1000. Members of the active service did not compete in the team match.

The two-day regional championship, ranked second in competitive level to the National matches, was sponsored by the Buffalo Revolver and Rifle Club, Inc., Buffalo, N.Y. It was registered with the National Rifle Association.

Army Slates Tests of New Radio-Telephone System

WASHINGTON (ANS) — The Army soon will be testing a radio-telephone system which has an initial range of 15 miles.

The unique communications system has been developed to handle 700 subscribers, each being able to communicate with any other subscriber with a minimum of interference. Each person has full use of his equipment at all times.

A $88,000 contract has been awarded the Orlando Division of the Martin Company for purchase of preliminary models for evaluation and test purposes of the system known as RACEP (Random Access and Correlation for Extended Performance).

Can Increase Range

The Army feels that the system, whose range can be extended beyond the present 15-mile limitation, can prove to be a revolutionary development in tactical voice communication. Messages could be transmitted with some degree of privacy from point to point, outmoding the present radios which can be heard by friendly and enemy forces.

RACEP is the equivalent of a radio-telephone system with out wires or central switchboard. A subscriber uses it merely by dialing the other subscriber with whom he wishes to talk.

The gibberish caused by the crowding of radio channels, which often plagues radio communications between pilots and air traffic control centers, or between mobile police or fire department communication systems, may be eliminated with RACEP.

Pre-Set Receivers

It uses a single channel for many two-way communications without interference. This is accomplished by disintegrating and coding speech signals into millionth-of-a-second frags ments, combining them at random, and transmitting them all at once over the same channel. Only receivers pre-set for the proper code of a specific conversation can receive it and reconstruct its fragments into a normal flow of speech.

Because of the random access feature of RACEP, there is no central communications center to fail and possibly paralyze total communications. Each RACEP unit will be self-contained and will reach any other unit from any location merely by turning a knob which sets the transmitter to the receiving code of the other unit and the picking up of a telephone.

Delivery of the system is expected to be made early in 1962.

'Swift Strike'

2nd to Support Joint Maneuver

Umpires, Signal Groups Prepare For Army-Air Force Exercises

BY PETER TATISTCHEFF

All units of the 2nd Infantry Division will provide men in support of the joint Army-Air Force maneuver — Exercise "Swift Strike," being held August 6 to 20 in North and South Carolina.

Three provisional signal platoons, a total of 90 men, are to be sent by 122nd Signal Battalion to Shaw Air Force Base, North Air Force Base and Donaldson Air Force Base, in South Carolina.

Lieutenants Paul Klofcznik, William Partridge and Edward Colace of 122nd Signal Battalion, will lead signal platoons to the South Carolina Air Force Bases. They will operate internal communications at each air field for the Army Staging Area Commands during exercise "Swift Strike."

According to Captain Sidney H. Bryant, assistant G-1, the division will supply officers from all division units as umpires and escort officers in support of the exercise.

Captain Robert A. Plant, assistant S-3 with 69th Armor, has departed for Fort Bragg, North Carolina, where he will act as a briefing officer in Army Component Headquarters Visitors Bureau. Ten lieutenants selected from Division Artillery, 7th Cavalry, and the 1st, 11th, 9th, 23rd, and 87th Infantries, will depart July 31 for Fort Bragg where they will be escort officers. They are to be joined there by representatives from 69th Armor, 2nd Medical Battalion and 2nd Engineer Battalion, also acting as escort officers, escorting visitors throughout the 5,00 square miles of maneuver area.

Umpires

Captain Roy L. Sherrard, Captain Marion R. Carrigan Jr., and Lieutenant Jack C. Hughes, from Division Artillery units, left Fort Benning July 17 for Headquarters XVIII Airborne Corps, Fort Bragg. 2nd Div Delegates Attend Reunion To Strengthen Indianhead Ties

BY CLAY LACY

More than 30 2nd Division members journeyed to Kansas City, Missouri, this past week for the 40th annual reunion of the 2nd Infantry "Indianhead" Division Association. The three day convention opened Thursday, July 20, and closed with the annual banquet on Saturday evening.

Delegates from the division included the division chaplain, Lt. Col. James H. Fiser, the division sergeant major, Sergeant Major Robert Brown, and the division information officer, Captain A. C. Mitchell.

Also included were representatives from the various chapters of the "Warrior" Branch of the Association. The Warriors are the active duty members of the 2nd Division.

Welcome

Opening ceremonies Thursday afternoon at the Continental Hotel in Kansas City were sparked by a hearty welcome from the mayor of Kansas City. Mayor H. Roe Bartle, a 350-pound dynamo, amazed the more than 200 delegates from across the nation with his speaking ability, punctuated with hearty laughs.

Business meetings during the reunion determined a slate of seven resolutions, of which six were passed in the final business meeting held on Saturday morning. The nominating committee also presented a slate of officers for the coming year, but this slate was modified somewhat in the final session.

Elected as president of the association for the coming year was Percy Terwilliger of Kansas City, who served as host for this year's reunion.

He received a unanimous vote in the election when Bill

Colonel Todd Promoted, Awarded Commendation

BY 1ST INF. PIO

Colonel Walter B. Todd, the commander of the new "Eighth Ovurep" 2nd Battle Group, 1st Infantry, was doubly honored recently when he was awarded an Army Commendation Medal and his new "Eagle," symbolic of his promotion to Colonel, by Brigadier Charles H. White Jr., in separate ceremonies.

With his wife Rosemary and Colonel Gustav Bacharach, division chief of staff in attendance, the awards were made only two days apart. His army Commendation Medal was awarded for outstanding service while a member of the Infantry School for his service as Course Director of the Career Courses and Director of Instruction for the United States Army Infantry School at Fort Benning.

PROMOTED
Col. Todd

Outstanding Work

His Army Commendation Medal cites, in addition to his regular duties, the "outstanding work he performed for the Refresher Courses for Reserve and National Guard Officers" and for work performed during off-duty time, in support of the 31st "Dixie" Infantry Division in preparing their Division Staff for their role in the One Army Concept.

A native of Clinton, South Carolina, Colonel Todd brings a long and varied career with him to the 1st Infantry. He lives with his wife and two children on post.

Reunion

Creech of San Antonio, Texas, who had been recommended by the nominating committee, urged all delegates to cast their votes for Terwilliger and that his own name be withdrawn from the slate.

Serving with Mr. Terwilliger during the coming year will be the slate of six vice-presidents which includes two members of the active division. Lieutenant Colonel Byrd Sergent, deputy brigade commander, and Sergeant Major Robert Brown, division sergeant major, were the two selected.

The ladies of the association, the Auxiliary, reelected Mrs. Ethel Hirschfelder of San Antonio, Texas, as their president for the coming year.

San Antonio

Other business concluded Saturday morning was the selection of San Antonio, Texas, as the site of the 1962 reunion. The delegates from this Texas city made a determined pitch to other delegates for their city which included issuing every delegate a miniature sombrero with a streamer recommending San Antonio.

Highlight of the Saturday morning business meeting, which was a joint affair with the men and ladies groups present, was the presentation of a $10,000 check to the association from the active division. This unexpected presentation to the monument fund brought a standing ovation from the assembled delegates honoring the active duty members of the 2nd.

Presenting the large check was Sergeant Brown, after he was introduced by Colonel Sergent. Robert C. Barr, of Westmont, New Jersey, president of the association, accepted the check, but remained speechless for almost a full minute upon realizing the size of the stipend.

A memorial service Saturday afternoon was held at the Little Theatre located three blocks from the Continental Hotel in the Municipal Building. Here, in colorful, meaningful services, the fallen dead of the 2nd Division of World War I, World War II and the Korean Conflict were honored. Active duty members participated with assistance as color guards and forming a corridor for the honor guard.

Memorial

At the Memorial services the division chief of staff, Colonel Gustav M. Bacharach, delivered an account of the memorial services held at the 2nd Division monument in Washington, D. C., in June of this year. Colonel Bacharach arrived in Kansas City Saturday afternoon after a trip to California to bid farewell to the 22nd Infantry, formerly the 1st Infantry, as that unit departed for Korea under the Oversea Unit Replacement Concept.

Final festivities of the three-day reunion took place Saturday evening with the annual banquet, preceded by a social hour and followed by dancing. Keynote speaker for the annual banquet was Kenneth Belieu, the assistant secretary of the Navy, who is a Second Division veteran of WW II.

During the busy three days, former members of the 2nd Division renewed old ties with comrades from the three great conflicts of this century. Command posts were organized within the hotel for the different units of the 2nd Division. Most notable of these was the "Lost Souls" suite, staffed by veterans of the Korean Conflict and World War II. This hearty group had a constant stream of traffic through its suite during the entire reunion period.

Sunday morning was used in final good-byes and many a by word of "See you next year in San Antonio."

S-Maj. Nicholas Honored Tues. at Miniature Review

A farewell miniature review was held Tuesday to honor Sergeant Major Frank K. Nicholas, former 2nd Infantry Division sergeant major, upon his departure for a new assignment in Korea.

Commander of Troops for the review was Sergeant Major Bilbo Nowell, of the Division's G-1 section.

Plaque

At the farewell ceremony, Sergeant Nicholas was presented a plaque, representing all the units of the division.

Speaking to the assemblage, he said that his departure was the climax of seven years in the division — a "fine and wonderful tour of duty."

He called the division the "finest group of officers and enlisted men in the United States Army."

Good Habit

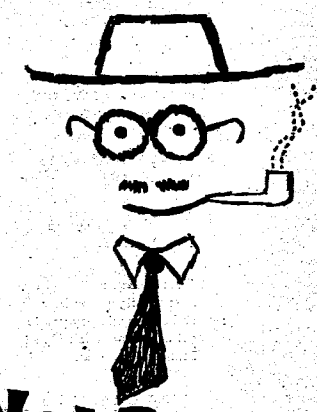
Americans bought more than $3.5 billion of Series E savings bonds during 1960.

They also purchased an additional $718 million of Series H savings bonds at banks.

Following the review, Sergeant Nicholas personally said good-bye to the Sergeant Majors of all the division's units.

Sergeant Major Nicholas is to leave this weekend for his new assignment with the Korean Military Advisory and Assistance Group.

Successor



His successor in the division's top enlisted man's job is Sergeant Major Robert L. Brown, formerly of the division's 23rd Infantry.

Among those attending the review were Brigadier General Charles H. White Jr., commanding general, and Colonel Gustav M. Bacharach, chief of staff.

Division's Identical Twins Have Grown Accustomed to 'Their' Face

". . . to see oursel's as ithers see us . . ."
—ROBERT BURNS

BY DON BAIRD

So you think looking at yourself in a mirror before breakfast is a harrowing experience . . .

But how'd you like to see yourself in three-dimension?

Such is an experience that three 2nd Division men have grown accustomed to—their identical twin brother's face.

"We've sort of learned to live with it," says Ron (or was it Don?), the carbon copy half of the 2nd Division Band's McDermott twins.

Regulation

The McDermotts, like the 2nd Administration Company's Nesters and the 69th Armor's Zamoras, are taking advantage of a regulation that allows twins to remain together in peacetime military service.

In each case, only slight differences in physical appearances avoid total confusion.

Don McDermott added the initial "D" to his nametag and sports wavy golden hair. Brother Ron wears a crewcut and a wedding band (he was married June 10 to the former Barbara Ann Carpenter, a Ranger department employe whom he met here).

John Nester has a darker tan than brother T. Fred and wears the Specialist Four insignia. Fred, whose induction followed John's by a month and three days, is a Private First Class.

The 24-year old Jose and Arturo Zamora have been confusing folks around 69th Armor for the past 13 months. They underwent Basic Combat Training together at Fort Carson, Colo., and Advanced Individual Training in tanks at Fort Knox, Ky.

'Mirror Twins'

The McDermotts and the Nesters are "mirror" twins, a self-explanatory psychological term. Don McDermott and John Nester are right-handed, thus suggesting a "mirror" effect when standing face-to-face with their southpaw brothers. Both Zamoras are right-handed.

Similarity fails to end, also, when it comes to vocations and avocations among the division's identical twins.

The musical-minded McDermotts went to Youngstown (Ohio) University in their home town on music scholarships, and each says he may pursue a teaching career when Army days are over. In addition to their duties with the Division Band, Ron finds time to lay aside his trombone occasionally to play violin with the Columbus Symphony. Don, a trumpeter, performs locally with various dance orchestras.

The Nesters, who plan to pursue real estate careers, followed each other from Trenton (N. J.) Junior College in their hometown to Wake Forest College at Winston-Salem, N. C., and back to Trenton and Rider College.

Ex-truck drivers, the Zamoras, as soldiers, have found themselves inside the turrets of tanks. They both are tank drivers at the 69th.

The McDermotts and the Nesters have admitted playing pranks on friends by pulling "switcheroos." Posing as his brother and dating his brother's girl friend was "fun for awhile."

But Ron McDermott recently found himself in a ticklish situation.

"I bumped into this girl downtown Don had apparently been seeing. I didn't know her, but she assumed I was Don and, well, I found it hard convincing her that I wasn't and that I was married."

The Chaplain's Corps Marks 186th Anniversary

By Peter Tatischeff

Tomorrow will mark the 186th anniversary of the Army's Chaplain's Corps, created by act of Continental Congress in 1775 to "strengthen the Officers' hands by public and private exhortations to obedience of General and Regimental Orders" and "to provide moral and spiritual leadership to generations of Soldiers and their families."

Since 1775 the Chaplain's Corps has been a regular part of the United States Armed Forces as well as their spiritual focal point.

The duties of Army Chaplains, which originally included being school-masters, historians and librarians, have always centered about their role as clergy. Today, in a time of peace, their part in Army life is just as important. Their work includes the organization and performance of regular worship services, pastoral counseling, classes in character guidance, field and hospital visitation and such religious services needed by the Army community.

DIVISION CHAPLAIN AND STAFF
L. to r., Sp.4 Lester B. Gibbs, Sp.5 Paul E. Merritt, Chaplain (Lt. Col.) James H. Fiser, Sp.5 Ernest Colden.

Serving a community which is generally 33 per cent Catholic, 45 per cent Protestant and two per cent Jewish, the Army provides facilities for conducting worship services. In the 2nd Infantry Division areas, Road Hill and Kelley Hill, there are eight chapels with a new chapel presently under construction on Kelley Hill.

Eighteen Chaplains are assigned to the 2nd Division. These men, who are ordained clergymen, have volunteered to join the Chaplain's Corps feeling that their professional services would be beneficial to Army personnel and their families.

Chaplain (Lt. Col.) James H. Fiser, division chaplain, and his assistant, Chaplain (Major) Clement P. Krug, head all chaplains assigned to the division and are responsible for the implementation of religious activities as developed by the Chief of Chaplains, Major General Frank Tobey, in Washington, D. C. It is from General Tobey that the highly-organized and varied guidance program emanates.

Services

Providing regular oral worship services and masses with established rituals and sacraments of the church is the primary responsibility of all division chaplains. During one year they are required to perform 1,334 services and masses in the division's eight chapels.

A chaplain's schedule is further expanded by the Character Guidance Program through which the Troops are lectured on such subjects as "Home and the Family," "Patriotism" and "Moral Strength." These lectures, attended by most Soldiers in the division, are in most cases the only form of character training available to men away from their families and are thus a necessary extension of the religious program in the Army.

Recognizing the diversity in each man's religious faith and background, each chaplain allows time for counseling and speaking with soldiers that desire his help. Of all subjects, marriage counseling has been the most important.

Whatever free time a chaplain has is usually not his to spend. He must get to know the men of his unit and their families. Much time is spent in field visitation, circulating among the troops, showing them that the chaplain's section is always eager to help with a soldier's personal or spiritual problems.

Visitation

Hospital visitation, a part of every ordained clergyman's schedule, is carried on by chaplains at Martin Army Hospital here and they are flown by the Army to hospitals in other parts of the nation wherever they may be called by a member of their unit.

Militarily speaking, the Division Chaplain is the Division Commander's advisor on all subjects concerning morals and morale. For example, their suggestion that provision be made in the Army's schedule for providing adequate time for military personnel to attend services of their choice, has always been adhered to and respected.

The Chaplain's Corps, which has been in its present form since 1920, continues, in its 186th year, to enrich the lives of the men and women who depend upon Army Chaplains for pastoral friendship and ministration. They continue to be the focal point for an Army unit's religious and moral life.

Rededication of Hardee Barracks Observed Here

By 11th Inf. PIO

A rededication of Hardee Barracks was held recently at the 11th Infantry's battle group headquarters with Brigadier General Charles H. White, Jr., the division commander, and Colonel John E. Arthur, battle group commander, taking part in the ceremony.

Hardee Barracks was named in honor of First Lieutenant Ralph A. Hardee, who served with the 11th Infantry and received the Distinguished Service Cross during World War II.

After Chaplain Frank E. Deese had delivered the invocation, the DSC citation for Lt. Hardee and a testimonial from the President of the United States were read.

These citations and other gifts donated to the 11th Infantry by Mrs. Reba Hardee, mother of Lt. Hardee, were then enumerated.

General White then formally presented the gifts and citations to Col. Arthur, who accepted the gifts for the battle group.

Lt. Hardee received the DSC citation, in addition to the purple heart, when he led his platoon up a hill against a very heavily fortified enemy position near Angers, France, on August 9, 1944.

The native of Spartanburg, South Carolina was wounded and eventually killed during the attack, but the outstanding courage, extraordinary heroism, and complete disregard for personal safety he displayed that day earned him the Distinguished Service Cross.

The Lallys have three sons, Michael, six, Billy, four, and Robert, one and a half. Although she has been kept busy teaching and acting as assistant publicity chairman for the Officers Wives Club, Francis still finds time for bowling, golf, and music.

Dinosaurs Proved Exciting Source To Movie Makers

Dinosaurs have been a source of excitement to scientists and a challenge to Hollywood for many, many years. Every now and then another highly improbable movie is based upon a "lost world" rediscovered by some fictional explorer.

One of the newer endeavors in this field currently supplying neighborhood children with nightmares features paleontological stars who were unearthed from their sea bottom graves in a frozen state and came to life when they thawed.

Tropical Background

One wonders why these movies invariably have a tropical background when prehistoric remains do come to light with rewarding frequency in glacier-tortured sections of the world.

Since the turn of the century, gold dredges have been nuzzling into the frozen gravel of Alaska and disturbing the bones of prehistoric monsters trapped and buried there thousands of years ago. Listed species uncovered, some on display at the University of Alaska Museum, are mammoths, mastodens, giant bears and beavers, super-

$10,000 Check Thrills Reunion

Division Delegates Present Gift To Boost Memorial Fund Drive

By Clay Lacy

Almost 200 delegates, former members of the 2nd Infantry Division, were impressed with the active members of the "Indianhead" unit during the 40th reunion of the 2nd Infantry "Indianhead" Division Association held in Kansas City, Missouri from July 20 to July 22.

A group of 34 delegates from the Warriors Branch of the Association represented the active division at the reunion. Travelling by chartered bus, the delegates lived in the Continental Hotel and participated in the entire program set up for the 1961 reunion.

Veterans of World War I, World War II and Korea who meet annually at the "Indianhead" reunion welcomed the delegates from Fort Benning with open arms. Many who attended this year's session were recalled by the oldtimers from last year's reunion staged at Columbus and Fort Benning.

But, even with the wonderful welcome from the oldtimers and the happy hours spent at the command posts situated throughout the hotel, the highlight of the response from the oldtimers to the active duty members came on Saturday morning.

At the business meeting staged then, the association members rose on their feet en masse and rendered a standing round of applause for the active duty members of the 2nd Infantry Division.

Reason for the outburst on behalf of the present Soldiers of the Second was a presentation by the division sergeant major, Sergeant Major Robert L. Brown, of a check to the association for the monument fund.

The check read "Ten Thousand and no-100 dollars. . . . $10,000.00"

The chairman of the Memorial Committee, Ralph O. Lundgren, commented, "I never thought before that we'd ever reach our goal for the monument fund, but now, for the first time, I know we can make it."

And veteran of World War I W. Phil Bohnert, said, "Well, I'll be darned. I told you those kids on duty today have got that 'Second to None' spirit."

From national president, Robert C. Barr: "Wow, that's all I can say. Wow!"

Campaign

This large donation from the active division was possible due to the participation in the fund raising campaign during the past year within the active division. The Warrior Branch, made up of the active duty members, also sponsored the trip to Kansas City for the 34 delegates and handled all expenses incurred during the three day event.

The current fund drive throughout the division will assist in furnishing funds to send delegates to next year's reunion at San Antonio, Texas. The division Chief of Staff, Colonel Gustav M. Bacharach, speaking at the banquet on Saturday evening, told the association, "Next year, we hope to send not 34 delegates, but 134 delegates, and, with wives, to San Antonio."

This remark brought the house down and then the throng again gave the 2nd Division active members a rising ovation. Delegates from the various branches across the nation heaped invitations upon the Fort Benning delegation to visit with them in their home cities at any time.

The oldtimers and past members of the 2nd Division were also impressed on Saturday morning when a member of the active division reenlisted at the joint business meeting. Sergeant First Class Clay Lacy was sworn in by Captain A. C. Mitchell, division information officer, for another six years with the 2nd Infantry Division.

Memorable

For the some 30 odd delegates attending the reunion from the 2nd Division it was a memorable three-day occasion and one which could not be easily forgotten. The former members were impressed with the spirit of today's 2nd Division, but so, also, were we of today's 2nd richly impressed with the fine "Second to None" spirit of those who have served before us.

The presence of the 34 division delegates at the reunion renewed the ties with the former members of the division as no amount of letters or fine words could do. These former members and veterans of World War I and World War II live in cities across America and are by far the best supporters of today's 2nd Division.

These oldtimers are vitally interested in the 2nd Infantry Division and the type of men that make up the present "Indianhead" unit. Through the close contact maintained by the active members at the reunions these ties are strengthened and a favorable impression of the 2nd Division is spread throughout the U. S.

Div's Search for Museum Pieces Gets Results From WWI Veterans

BY CLAY LACY

Lieutenant Colonel Byrd Sergent, deputy brigade commander, urged the former members of the 2nd Division to forward souvenirs and mementoes to the division museum at the 40th reunion staged last week in Kansas City of the 2nd Infantry "Indianhead" Division Association. His call got results from two veterans of World War I.

VISITED . . . Former President Harry S. Truman was visited by several delegates to the Second Division Indian Head Association Reunion at his home in Independence, Missouri. (Photo by Embring)

W. Phil Bohnert, a veteran of the 2nd Engineer Battalion with the 2nd Division in World War I, promised to have a paragraph added to his will to send his original uniform in tact and complete to the division.

Pistols

And Dale O. McNally of Los Angeles, California, who also served with the 2nd Division in the World War I, said he would forward very shortly two German Luger pistols he garnered in France during that conflict.

Mr. Bohnert displayed his World War I U. S. Army uniform last year while attending the 39th reunion of the association in Columbus and Fort Benning. His uniform is complete with six items to include helmet, tunic, breeches, leggings, hob-nailed shoes and gas mask.

He fought with the 2nd in every campaign of the American Expeditionary Forces in World War I and earned the Silver Star during the bitter fighting at Soissons.

The spry veteran of the 1917-1919 fighting preserved his uniform by the use of cedar shavings and moth balls and kept his leather belts and shoes pliable with kneesfoot oil. He first displayed the uniform in 1959 at the reunion of the association, held in Kansas City that year.

Engineer

Mr. McNally, who also served with the 2nd Engineer Battalion in World War I, obtained his German Luger pistols During the march across France late in the war. One of his prized possessions was obtained from the body of a German officer lying along the road, while the other was taken at a German supply depot.

McNally said that one of the pistols has a special barrel which will hold 32 rounds of ammunition.

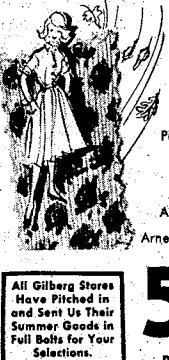
Colonel Sergent told the former members of the division that all items sent to the division museum would be credited with the name of the donor alongside the displays and the units listed with which the donors served. More mementoes are expected during the coming year as many of the veterans promised to take another look in the attic upon their return home.

Indian Heads Select San Antonio for '62

Although still a year away, plans for the 1962 reunion were started last week in Kansas City, Missouri, at the 40th annual reunion of the 2nd Infantry "Indianhead" Division Association with the selection of San Antonio, Texas as the site of next year's meeting.

The Texas city was selected on Saturday morning in a final business meeting of the Association. The delegation from San Antonio kept the name of their city before the reunion delegates by the use of pin-on sombreros with attached streamers.

As each delegate from across the nation registered for this year's reunion, members of the San Antonio delegation pinned one of these small souvenirs on the incoming delegates.



Also on hand was ample literature describing San Antonio. The advance publicity was effective as San Antonio was voted unanimously as the city for the 1962 reunion.

Review Set Tomorrow Celebrating Transportation Corps Anniversary

By 13th Trans. PIO

The 13th Transportation Battalion will stage a Battalion Review tomorrow at 9 a.m. observing the 19th anniversary of the establishment of the Army's Transportation Corps. The review will take place at Knight Field.

In addition to marking the birthdate of the Army's youngest service, the review will include the presentation of several individual decorations to members of the battalion as well as the award of the Division Safety Pennant for the month of June.

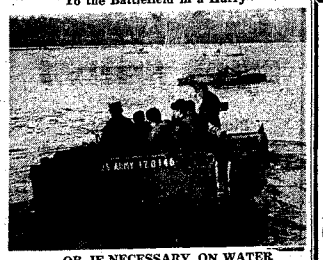
Vital Role

The vital role of transportation in military operations has long been recognized, but it was not until the early days of World War II that a reorganization of the Army separated this function from the then-existing technical services and centralized it into a single branch.

The accomplishments of the Transportation Corps during this global conflict in the movement of millions of men and enormous quantities of supplies are well known at all.

In Korea, as in World War II, the Transportation Corps was again faced with a monumental task of rapidly moving our combat forces to a distant area and supporting them under the most adverse conditions.

It was during and immediately following the Korean conflict that the responsibilities of the Transportation Corps were substantially broadened. Perhaps of greatest magnitude and most far-reaching effect was the assignment of logistical responsibility for the Army Aviation Program in 1962. The increasing emphasis on air mobility of ground combat forces has made this task one of major importance to the entire Army establishment.



Of greatest significance to the Infantrymen were the organizational changes which came when the new pentomic division was created. For the first time, a Transportation Corps unit became an organic part of the combat division with the mission of providing tactical mobility for its assault elements. The trucks and armored carriers of the 192d Transportation Battalion which perform this mission in the 2nd Infantry Division are familiar sights to all its members.

The "wheels" of the Battalion, Companies A and B, logged over 1¾ million miles during the past year and transported over a million Indianhead Soldiers. The "tracks" of Company C participated in numerous field exercises, principally in support of the division's three OVUREP Battle Groups.

Movement Control personnel of the Battalion Headquarters coordinated the individual and group travel of over 30,000 soldiers during the same period. The battalion operations section, in addition to its normal function, supervised the operation of the Division Driver Training School which graduated some 450 drivers for other division units.

Engineer's Lt. Foust Participates In All-Army Tennis Tournament

Special to the Bayonet

FORT BLISS, Texas — Lieutenant Arthur Foust, of the 2nd Infantry Division's 2nd Engineer Battalion, placed fifth in a field of 12 in the standings of the open division of a month-long elimination tennis tournament being conducted at Fort Bliss, Texas, to select an All-Army team.

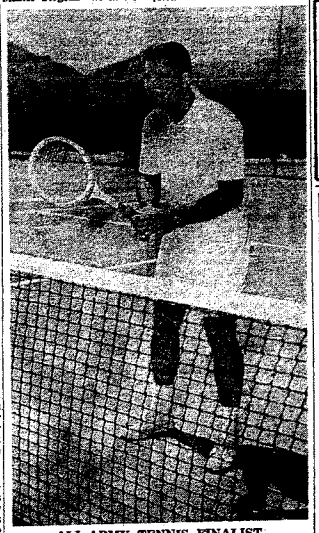
The team will compete against Navy, Air Force and Marine counterparts at Newport, Rhode Island, next month.

Lt. Foust, of the Engineer's Company C, is among 18 men — 12 in the Open Division and six in the Senior Division — who are vying for team spots.

CG's Welcome

Fort Bliss was selected to serve as host and training site for the Army tennis hopefuls this year. Fort Bliss Commanding General, Major General Marshall S. Carter, personally welcomed the Army tennis players, representing Army commands from all over the world, before they settled down to a rigorous training schedule.

According to Dan Sullivan, St. Petersburg, Floria pro and coach of the Army team, a grueling month lies ahead for the Army racket men. With an average of 16 to 17 games scheduled daily, each man will play at least one full match per day in addition to normal conditioning exercises.



The elimination tournament began immediately after the men arrived and will continue through August 9. It will be run on an approximate round-robin basis, with one man facing the same opponent at least three times during the course of the tournament. Coach Sullivan expects this system to give a fair opportunity to all participants.

A progress record will be kept on each player and as a man advances or fails back in the elimination meet, his name will be upped or dropped a rung on the "ladder."

At the end of the tournament the top six men in the open division will be selected for the All-Army team. A similar setup will be used to select the four man Senior division team.

Davis Capper

After the first week of competition, Private First Class Gerald Moss of Brooke Army Medical Center, Junior Davis Capper and last year's top Army player, headed the open division. Defending Senior doubles and singles champ of last year's inter-service meet, Master Sergeant William Milikan of USMA, West Point, N. Y., paced the Senior division.

bison, saber - toothed tigers, horses, and unbelievably enough, some camel bones.

Like turning the pages of a history book to the trained eye are the "uncoveries" at Mammoth Creek near Fairbanks. Once our Far North had a warm climate, they tell us. Luxuriant vegetation grew and prehistoric animals roamed its surface. Pleistocene animals died and became embedded in the soil. Thousands of years later ice covered the region and preserved the carcasses of animals common to Alaska over 20,000 years ago.

Excavations in this region have washed out tusks of the great hair mastodon and mammoth measuring up to twelve feet. Skulls and bones of extinct lions and prehistoric wolves which prowled Alaska when the world was young have been unearthed.

Alaska today has the largest bears, the largest moose and the largest caribou on earth, all midgets compared to their ancestors. Skulls of bears twice as large as today's entry, the great Kodiak, have come to light. The remains of the extinct Alaska bison show him to be more than twice as large as his present-day descendant. In strong contrast, the bones of the early Alaska horse are smaller than today's living species.

Although none of these giants have been known to thaw and revive with the urge to terrorize, some have been completely preserved these thousands of years in the frozen soil. A prehistoric muskox was found with the contents of the alimentary tract still identifiable. Once a baby mammoth and once a bison were uncovered with bones, flesh, and hide intact.

Sp4 Feddie Morris' pair of home runs accounted for five runs Sunday as the 58th Infantry ripped the 29th Infantry, 7-2, at Gowdy Field in the Major Unit Baseball League.

Morris' first blast came in the first inning with one teammate aboard and the three-run homer was hit in the ninth.

The 58th Infantry put on a hitting attack throughout the game, blasting the Two-Niners for 14 hits. In the first inning, Sfc James Gregory, 58th Infantry second baseman, led off with a single to left field, Pfc Bob Nelson smacked a one-run double to center field and then Sp4 Morris rapped a 360-foot homer over the left field fence, the longest homer of the season.

The Two-Niners scored in the fourth and fifth innings, Pfc Gentry getting on by a fielder's choice, and then stealing second and third bases on the next two plays. Second Lt. Jay Mitchell cracked a single to center, scoring Gentry.

In the fifth, Pfc Al Spencer sacrificed Pvt. Roy Bowers to second after Bowers slammed a line drive to center. Sp4 Bob Palmer then hit a one-run single to left field for their second and last tally.

In the ninth, the 58th rallied for four hits, including Sp4 Morris' second three-run homer, and four runs. This put the game on deep-freeze for the 58th Infantry. The 29th Infantry threatened a comeback in the ninth, but were unable to score.

Sgt. Bill Carey went six innings, giving up five hits, and was relieved by Sp4 Morris. Carey was credited with the victory and Pfc Roy Bowers was charged with the loss.

Sp4 Jack Reynolds tossed a six-hitter and Pfc Jack Ferrone cracked out a double and three singles as the Troop Command nine defeated the 418th Medics, 7-1.

Pfc Stephen Foote suffered the defeat. Pfc John Krause led the losers at the plate with two hits.

The Student Brigade stretched their winning streak to four games Wednesday night and grabbed off their 15th victory in 18 starts by clubbing the 10th Artillery Redlegs, 9-1.

Pfc Carroll Emery, Student Brigade right-hander, hurled his ninth win in ten starts. Emery had chalked up a total of 86 strike-outs and holds the league strike-out record, 15 in one game, against the 151st Engineers on July 6.

Emery gave up five hits to the Artillerymen to collect the victory. Pfc Monza paced the winners with three singles. TSB rallied in the ninth inning for four hits and five runs.

The Redlegs' lone tally came in the first inning when Sp4 Franklin Walker rapped a double to right field and Pfc Ray Young smacked a single to center field, scoring Walker. Pfc Joe Winchester was tagged with the setback.

Pfc Bruce Woods, two - run single in the ninth gave the 151st Engineers a 5-4 victory over the Troop Command Tuesday night.

Pfc Martin Leicht hurled a five hitter and chalked up 15 strikeouts, going the distance to collect the victory. Sp4 Jack Reynolds was charged with the loss.

The Engineers picked up three runs in the fifth and went scoreless until the ninth inning. Going into the ninth the Troop Command led by a score of 4-3. The Engineers loaded the bases with two out. Pfc Bruce Woods cracked a two run single to center field for the winning tally. Brown, Woods and Rose contributed two hits each for the winners. Pfc Paul Nocella paced the losers by collecting three of the four hits.

Sp4 John Orsini set a new Major Unit Baseball league strikeout record as he hurled the 428th Medics to a 5-2 victory over the league-leading Student Brigade Monday night.

Orsini allowed just four hits and fanned 19 for the new record, which was previously held by The Student Brigade fireball pitcher, Pfc Carroll Emery, with 15 strikeout.

The only opposing batter to give him trouble was 2nd Lt. Lynn who collected three of the four hits, all singles. Sp4 Dick Whispell led the plate attack for the Medics with a double and two singles. The Medics blasted The Student Brigade's two pitchers, Pvt. Lopez and Pfc Emery, for 12 hits. Pvt. Lopez was charged with the mound loss.

This victory for the Medics halted a six game winning streak for TSB.

Doughboys Set 12-Game Slate

The 1961 Doughboy football team will face a much rougher schedule this season than was last year's when the post squad wound up with a 4 - 4 worksheet.

The 12-game schedule opens on Sept. 16 and closes on Dec. 2, both on the road. In between, six games are slated for Doughboy Stadium, ranging from small colleges to other services.

The opener will be against Camp Lejeune, a perennial service football powerhouse. Things slack off a bit the following week as the post hosts the Albany State College eleven.

Off To Virginia

On Sept. 30, the Doughboys travel to Quantico, Va., to collide with the Quantico Marines, another service strongarm.

Other games include: Fort Eustis, Va., Fort Lee., Va., Fensacola Naval Air Station, Lackland Air Force Base, Memphis Naval Air Station, Eglin Air Force Base, Fort Dix, N. J., Fort Campbell, and the Florida State University Frosh.

Only a few returnees spot the roster, but there are hopes that some top-flight players who might have been transferred here from other installations and rotated to Fort Benning from overseas will turn out for practice.

Undefeated

Capt. Lenton C. Cofield, who last year headed a Brooke Army Medical Center team to an undefeated 9-0 season, has taken over the reins of the Doughboys.

The Jet, Okla., native remarked at the opening of the pre-season drills that he was very disappointed in the turnout for the post team.

The Doughboys are working out 1 p.m. each day in the new billet-practice area setup initiated by Cofield a short time ago.

Billets

In this setup, unmarried players are billeted together on the second floor of an old-type barracks. The first floor arrangement includes training and dressing facilities.

Noticing the game with the FSU frosh, it will mark the second appearance of the Seminole Juniors in Columbus this year. They will oppose the Mississippi Southern freshmen earlier in the season.

The complete Fort Benning Doughboy 1961 schedule is: Sept. 16 — Camp Lejeune, away; Sept. 24 — Albany State College, here; Sept. 30 — Quantico Marines away; Oct. 8 — Fort Eustis, here; Oct. 14, Fort Lee, here; Oct. 21 — Pensacola NAS, away; Oct. 29 — Lackland AFB, here; Nov. 4 — Memphis NAS, here; Nov. 11 — Eglin AFB, away; Nov. 19 — Fort Dix, State Frosh, here; and Dec. 2 — Fort Campbell, away.

1st Brigade Playoffs Underway

The 1st Infantry Brigade 1961 company - level Softball championship playoffs officially opened Monday as Col. Samuel W. Koster, commanding officer of the 29th Infantry, pitched the first ball.

Battery C, 10th Artillery, tripped the 183rd Chemical Platoon in the opening game, 5-3. Sgt Norman Ingram tossed a three-hitter and gave up two runs. Sfc Emmett Winn gave up seven hits to the Redlegs and suffered the loss. Sgt Joe Marquez paced the winners with two singles.

In the second game of tourney play, Headquarters Company, 1st Infantry Brigade, defeated Company A, 58th Infantry, 9-5. Sp4 Leroy Burton hurled the win while Sp4 Horn took the loss.

The big blow came for Headquarters Company in the second inning as 2d Lt. Travis Bowden rapped a grand-slam homer. First Lt. Bob Turpin also contributed three hits for the Headquarters team. The 58th nine rallied in the sixth inning for three hits and four runs.

In the third game of the tourney play, Headquarters Company, 58th Infantry, clipped the 72nd Engineers, 7-4. The Engineers picked up three runs on three hits in the second inning and held this margin until the 58th struck back in the fourth for four runs.

The Engineers added one run in the fifth, only to be blasted for three more runs by the Infantrymen in the bottom of the same inning.

Sp4 Chyba gave up just four hits and struck out nine batters in collecting the victory. Pfc Jimmie Dicks was tagged with the loss.

In the next game, Headquarters Company, 1st Infantry Brigade, ripped Battery C, 10th Artillery, 14-4. Headquarters Company blasted the Redlegs for seven hits and 14 runs, scoring in each inning except the fourth.

Sp4 Leroy Burton hurled his second victory in the tourney and Sgt. Norman Ingram was charged with the loss. Second Lt. Travis Bowden's two-run double and 1st Lt. Bob Turpin's one-run single were the big blows for the winners. Sgt. Washington had three hits for four trips to the plate.

McClellan, Post Split Two Games

The Fort Benning Women's Army Corps Softball Team split a double header last weekend with the Fort McClellan nine.

The Fort Benning team nipped the McClellan squad, 7-5, in Saturday's game behind the pitching of Pfc Wheedle, who copped her second victory. Dollie Ouden was tagged with the setback.

Fort Benning center fielder, Pfc Louise Davis, paced the winners at the plate with a home-run, a double and a single. Pvt. Tony Taylor also contributed two hits for the Fort Benning team. Sgt. Deegerino rapped three doubles for the losers.

In the Sunday game, Fort McClellan defeated the post WACs, 19-4. Dollie Ouden struck back for the win after her earlier setback. Sp4 Ann Davis was charged with the defeat. Sgt. Deegerino had a perfect day at the plate as she cracked four hits for four-trips to the plate.

The WAC softballers will be idle this weekend, and are scheduled to meet the McClellan nine for another double-header on August 5-6.

577th Engineers Revamp Scout Camp

The Pine Knot Boy Scout Camp on the post is receiving a much-needed "face lifting" by Company B, 577th Engineer Battalion, before it opens Aug. 12.

The construction and remodeling is centered around the mess hall and swimming area.

Sfc Coleman is in charge of remodeling the mess hall with Sgt. Coheley as his assistant. The job consists of replacing the old rotted rafters along with reroofing of the building.

To prepare a safe swimming area for the camp, the first platoon of the company was given the remodeling job of the old swimming hole.

Their job consists of relocating a foot bridge which had been washed out, cleaning and increasing the depth of the swimming hole to 12 feet, construction of a sand beach, and clearing logs from the creek above and below the swimming area.

The sand beach was constructed on a clay fill that had been sloped down to the water by removing part of the creek bank.

Seven 1961 graduates of the U.S. Naval Academy, Annapolis, recently reported to the 1st Infantry Brigade to begin Army careers.

Each year the Naval Academy allows 12.5 per cent of its graduating class to choose either Army or Air Force for their service careers.

They arrived Monday, and Tuesday morning were greeted by Brig. Gen. John E. Kelly, deputy commanding general of The Infantry Center, who formally welcomed them to the Army.

Later that morning they were briefed by their first commanding officer, Col. Charles T. Horner Jr., commander of the 1st Brigade.

Each of the lieutenants will be assigned to line units within the brigade for 30 days for their "baptism" to Army life. Following their tour with the unit, during which they will undertake Expert Infantryman's Badge training, the seven will remain at Fort Benning for Airborne and Ranger training.

Six of the new Army lieutenants chose artillery, and one Infantry.

The seven new Army officers are second lieutenants Pierre V. Kieffer III, Infantry; Lowell L. Martin, Archie W. Spencer, Jan. V. Harvey, Dennis E. Doherty, Alfred C. Doherty Jr., and Paul R. Kleindorfer, Artillery.

The former Midshipmen voluntarily passed up 30 days leave for an orientation of Army life at The Infantry Center.

THE SIX ORIGINAL OIL PAINTINGS IN THE CODE OF CONDUCT SERIES
Mobile Exhibit to Be Displayed at Fort Benning

Original Code of Conduct Paintings Shown

A Department of Defense exhibit illustrating the Code of Conduct adopted by the Armed Forces will be displayed at the main post Aug 1 to 3, and in the 2nd Infantry Division area Aug. 4 and 5.

The main post displays will be at the 1st Infantry Brigade on the 1st and 2nd and at The Infantry School Battalion on the 3rd.

Prescribed Aug. 17, 1955, by executive order of the president, the code outlines a standard of conduct for members of the Armed Forces while in combat or captivity and provides each fighting man with "specific training and instruction designed to better equip him to counter and withstand all enemy efforts against him..."

The code, which resulted from various individual acts during the Korean conflict, expresses the loyalty and devotion that have been traditional with American fighting men and has become an integral part of military training.

Designed to help portray the meaning of the code for members of the Armed Forces, the exhibit will feature full-color illustrations, handsomely mounted and indirectly lighted, which supplement the text of the six articles embodied in the proclamation.

The original oil paintings each placed first in its class in a nationwide competition sponsored by the American Society of Illustrators.

Army Adopts Collapsible Rubber Drum

A new 500-gallon collapsible rubber container developed by the Army has been standardized for military use in speeding transport of fuels to combat units.

The versatile container can be dropped by parachute without the use of cushioning platforms, carried to using elements by helicopter, military vehicles, landing or rail craft, or used to convert cargo aircraft to bulk fuel transporters.

Made of fuel-resistant rubber, the unit weighs approximately 250 pounds when empty and can be collapsed for ready storage when not in use.

Between 60 and 70 per cent of the material tonnage used to support the Army overseas consists of automotive gasoline, aviation gas or jet fuel.

BOOKS in REVIEW

THE AGONY AND THE ECSTASY by Irving Stone. (Doubleday, 1961)

In this fictional biography, set against the background of Renaissance Italy, Michelangelo emerges with his strange and difficult personality, his courage and independence, his lifelong slavery to his demanding family, and his complete indentification with his many-sided genius. Sculpture was his goal . . . but, faced with necessity, he proved himself equally gifted in painting, architure, and engineering.

DON'T TELL ALFRED by Nancy Mitford. (Harper, 1960)

The many admirers of the Pursuit of Love and Love in a Cold Climate will be happy to learn that many of their favorite characters are here again in Don't Tell Alfred. Older no doubt but as refreshingly unconventional as ever, and the younger generation has inherited much of the family dottiness.

KNIFE EDGE by Donald Mackenzie. (Houghton; 1961)

Neil MacFarlane, a gentleman gambler on the French Riviera, has a run of bad luck. His only chance to recoup his losses lies in gaining admittance to a private game. Amstey, an Englishman, gets this opportunity for him — for a price. The story culminates in a manhunt in which there is some doubt which is the hunter and which the hunted.

IF THINE EYE OFFEND THEE by Heinrich Schirmbeck. (Simons, 1961)

This novel by a young German writer deals with the moral problems of today's nuclear scientists. The central figure in the novel is a young physicist whose story, fraught with symbolism, is essentially the plight of the man whose knowledge has brought him too far.

Aviation Reserves Are Busy

Checkouts in various military aircraft, maintenance, and supply functions have kept pilots and enlisted men of the 301st Reserve Aviation Company busy in the One Army concept as they buckled down to summer training.

Approximately 50 men from Greensboro, Charlotte, Greenville, Winston-Salem, Lenoir, Asheville, Southern Pines and Mount Airy, N. C., and Florence, Myrtle Beach, Greenwood and Columbia, S. C., are participating in the two-week intensified training.

Pilots are checking out in military aircraft, and enlisted men are performing aircraft maintenance and supply and administrative duties.

The first week of training was spent at Lawson Army Aviation Command with the 1st Aviation Company, an active unit with modern equipment assigned to The Infantry Center.

The 301st moved to the field the second week, where the unit is operating from a sod strip on the military reservation.

Capt William Groome of Greensboro, company c o mmander, reports he is well-pleased with the training of his men.

The aviation unit arrived here July 16 and returns home tomorrow.

The men of the 301st are part of the 25,000 personnel in the XII Army Reserve Corps.

Music in Church Discussed By Protestant Women

Music in the church was the topic of a program Wednesday when the Protestant Women-of-the-Chapels met in Building 2606 for their monthly meeting.

Mrs. R. J. Whitehead presented the program.

Hostesses were Mrs. Stuart M. Mitchell and Mrs. Paul T. Ingle.

HEAVY DUTY LIFT . . . Sp4 Wendell Donathan of the 539th Ordnance Battalion, Infantry Center Troop Command, lefts a five-ton truck motor in its shipping case with his Rough Terrain Fork Lift Truck. The fork lift can raise 8,000 pounds to a 40-foot height and with its "body tilt" mechanism can climb a 40 degree slope while keeping the load and driver level. It performs in swamps as well as on the highway.

As ROTC Camp Closes

70 Commissioned In Ceremony Today

The main post theatre will be the scene of closing ceremonies today as 70 newly appointed second lieutenants launch a career in the Army, having completed a four-year program in military science capped by six weeks of rigorous field training at the 1961 ROTC Summer Encampment.

This ceremony will mark the official closing of a successful camp period for nearly 1200 cadets now at the post.

The 70 cadets will receive commissions as second lieutenant in the Army (Res.) in the following branches of service. Adjutant General, 2; Armor, 3; Artillery, 16; Chemical, 1; Engineers 3; Finance, 2; Infantry, 18; Medical Service, 3; Military Police, 2; Ordnance, 2; Quartermaster, 4; Signal, 9; and Transportation, 5.

Among the distinguished visitors expected will be Brig. Gen. Charles H. White, Jr., commanding general of The Infantry Center and commander of the ROTC Summer Camp, who will render the opening address and present special awards to deserving cadets.

Each of the newly commissioned second lieutenants will depart well versed in the practical side of military science, having been thoroughly tested for leadership and military doctrine.

In addition to the commissioning activities, eight trophies and plaques will be presented to cadets in recognition of outstanding individual and group achievements, to include the outstanding cadet of the 1961 ROTC Summer Camp, cadet achieving the highest score in physical combat proficiency test, outstanding cadets in rifle fire competition, the best athletic company and the Honor Company of the ROTC Camp.

Named as project officer for this closing camp event is Capt. Hugh C. Holt, member of the General Subjects Committee here and assistant professor of military science at Marion Institute.

New Target Aids U. S. Air Defense

Washington (AFPS) — The Army's newest supersonic target missile, NA 273, has been successfully test fired at White Sands Missile Range.

A ramjet powered missile, it will be used as a target for Army Air Defense Command crews firing Hawk and Nike-Hercules air defense missiles.

The 19-foot long missile, only one foot in diameter, has stubby, triangular six-foot wings. It is capable of operating from 300 to 60,000 feet altitudes at subsonic to supersonic speeds.

The first test was a low level flight. The missile was fired from a standard launcher used for the Army's Little John rocket. It was later recovered intact through the operation of its automatic parachute recovery system.

Initial thrust is by a 6,000 pound underslung booster rocket which falls off a few seconds after launch. Then the ramjet engine takes over.

Honor Battery Named For June

After stiff competition in safety, training, fund raising and Savings Bond drives, mess and supply inspections and many other areas, Battery B, 29th Artillery, was named Honor Battery for the month of June.

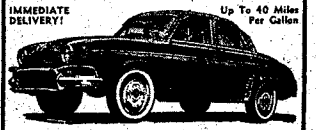
The unit is attached to the 2nd Howitzer Battalion, 10th Artillery, 1st Infantry Brigade, and is commanded by 1st Lt. Richard L. Bryan.

All personnel in the unit contributed to the honor by their efforts in various phases of the competition. Each member of the battery receives a day off, in line with battalion policy.

Spider Spins Defense Web

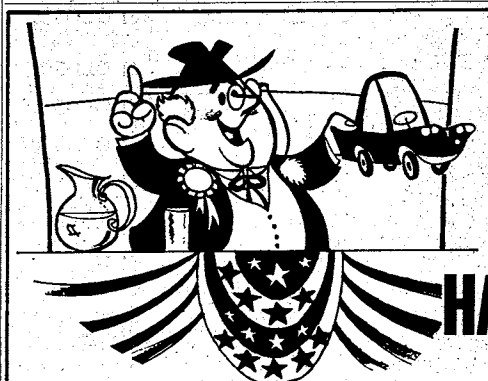
Despite the fear and havoc a black widow spider can cause by an uninvited appearance, scientists are rushing to her defense.

They say that she is a retiring creature who rarely ventures far from her web. She is so shy that she generally runs away or plays dead at the advance of a human. She is even on Uncle Sam's employment list.



The Army Corps of Engineers "hired" 100 black widows several years ago to work at the General Depot in Columbus, Ohio. At the present time black widows are "employed" at the MCSC Albany, Ga.

Strands of the black widow's web are used for cross hairs in survey instruments, microscopes and telescopic gunsights. These strands are said to be tougher than steel and are only 1-20,000 of an inch in diameter.



The strength and thickness of the black widow filament make it the best material known for use in optical instruments, and its useful qualities have offset the danger of caring for the spiders and in gathering the web.

Latest From Finance -- Mechanized Pay Vouchers

Military pay vouchers at the post Finance and Accounting Office are rolling out of an accounting machine like cloth off a loom—by the yard.

Faster than 80 high speed typists could produce them, the machine "reads" data from punch cards, uses the information and fills out the vouchers at the touch of a button.

Once a tedious task performed by hand, the post is in the process of converting to mechanized pay vouchers.

Actually, paying by machine-made vouchers involves more than pushing the button, watching wheels go round and gathering up and separating lengths of vouchers.

The machine must be wired to do the job.

Before the wiring begins, an advance plan is made. A machine accounting specialist decides what the machine's final product should be. He then draws a diagram showing what the machine must do to accomplish this purpose.

With a tray load of brightly colored wires, the specialist proceeds to transfer his wiring plan to a panel perforated with 5,420 holes. The holes correspond with the internal circuitry of the accounting machine.

The color of a wire indicates its length. A gray wire, for instance is two inches long, while an orange wire is 22 inches long. There are seven colors, for seven lengths of wire.

Each wire has a metal tip on both ends. Half the wires have temporary tips to be used to set up the pattern for testing. The remainder of the wires have permanent tips. After the wired panel has been tested for accuracy, the specialist replaces each temporary wire with a permanent one.

An accounting machine picks up needed information from material fed to it on punch cards. The machine may be asked to reproduce the information or to use it in some way and print or store the result.

Wiring a panel for preparing pay vouchers requires providing for the machine to "read" holes in punch cards and record corresponding figures on the vouchers.

To accomplish this, the specialist places one end of a wire in the hole which corresponds with the perforation on the punch card, and the other end of the wire in the hole that will control the printing of the figure by the machine.

The tips of the wires go all the way through the panel, protruding from the back.

When the completed panel is placed in the machine like a piece of bread in a toaster, the tips of the wires make contact with and complete electrical circuits in the machine.

As punch cards are fed to it, the machine follows the pattern wired on the panel and produces accurate military pay vouchers faster than 80 speedy typists could prepare them.

The key punch cards also are machine prepared.

In the key punch room of the F and A Office, operators transfer "raw" data from listings and vouchers to the punch cards, by machine. The cards are then run through another machine where a second operator verifies the data.

A card may carry from one to 80 items of information about a man but it always shows his serial number. There may be as many as six cards pertaining to one man's pay voucher.

When all the cards have been punched, they are run through still another machine called a sorter.

The sorter assembles the cards by serial number in any desired sequence, ready for the accounting machine.

The first troops on the post to be paid by mechanized pay vouchers were members of the Infantry Board, who received the new vouchers last pay day.

Each successive month the records of 2,000 troops will be mechanized until approximately 10,000 have been converted to the new military pay voucher.

According to officials of The Infantry Center Finance and Accounting Office which handles pay vouchers for more than 14,000 military personnel on the post, mechanization will extend to all except STRAC (Strategic Army Command) units.

1st 'Standard of Conduct' Issued by DOD

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara has issued new instructions on "Standards of Conduct" for the Defense Department.

The directive (5500.7) reflects the high ideals of ethical conduct proposed by President Kennedy in his message to Congress April 27 in which he proposed a revision in the conflict of interest laws.

It was explained that the individual military departments have had detailed regulations on the subject with some variance for a long period of time. The new directive, however, is the first comprehensive DOD order on the subject.

High-lights of the new directive are.

All DOD personnel, military and civilian, are required to avoid not only any activity which would place them in a position of conflict between their private interests and the interests of the United States but even all activities which would give the appearance of such a conflict.

DOD personnel are prohibited from accepting any favors, gratuities or entertainment, not only affect their impartiality in government matters but even where it might give the appearance of affecting such impartiality.

DOD personnel are required to report to superiors any possible conflict of interest with respect to matters on which they might be working and to withdraw from such matters.

DOD personnel are prohibited from dealing with former government personnel if such action might involve a violation of a conflict of interest law applicable to such former personnel.

The directive contains a very tight definition of selling in order to close loopholes that have been troublesome in the past.

For the first time for the entire DOD, a procedure is established whereby former officers of the Armed Forces who have served eight years or more on active duty are required to complete a form enrolling them with the department with which they propose to do business prior to conducting any business with that department.

For the first time, civilian as well as military personnel are prohibited from using their official titles in connection with commercial enterprises.

It was explained that while this was not applicable to military personnel not on active duty, the military department has been given authority to restrict inactive and retired military personnel from using their military titles in connection with public appearances overseas.

Under the new instructions such personnel are also prohibited from using their titles in connection with commercial enterprises where such use might mislead the public into believing that the DOD endorsed the enterprise involved.

The new directives also prohibit all Department of Defense personnel from accepting outside employment which might interfere with performance of their official duties.

Each military department will have an official to insure compliance with the new directives.

The Defense Department explained that the new directives are designed to implement the principles of ethics in government proposed by President Kennedy in his message to Congress in which he stated:

"There can be no dissent from the principles that all officials must act with unwavering integrity, absolute impartiality, and complete devotion to the public interest. This principle must be followed not only in reality but in appearance. For the basis of effective government is public confidence and that confidence is endangered when ethical standards falter, or appear to falter."

Local AUSA in 1st Place

Association's Wire Makes Spot Official

A membership of 3,403 has pushed the Columbus-Phenix City-Fort Benning Chapter to the top of the roll in the Association of the U. S. Army, making it the largest among the AUSA's 123 chapters.

The local chapter's standing was revealed in a recent message from national headquarters in Washington, D. C., releasing June figures which showed the chapter membership at 3,264. This exceeded second-place Tennessee Valley Chapter by nearly 600. Since that time, another 139 members have been accepted by the Columbus - Phenix City-Fort Benning chapter.

Local President

The local chapter is headed by Columbus attorney William J. Schloth. It began a concerted membership drive in February when membership was some 1,900. In four months, over 2,000 individuals from The Infantry Center, 2d Infantry Division and civilian communities submitted applications for membership.

Losses through military transfer during the same period balanced figures to the present total of 3,403.

The Infantry Center lists over 1,800 military personnel as members of AUSA, the 2d Infantry Division reports over 1,100. Nearly 500 civilian members have been enrolled in Columbus and Phenix City.

Added Prestige

Counted by the national organization as one of its most active and influential chapters, the local group now holds the added prestige as AUSA's largest chapter.

More than 25 of its members are already making

Major Gen. Ben Harrell, New Commanding General of The Infantry Center And Commandant of The Infantry School Arrived At Fort Benning Tuesday

Gen. Harrell Welcomed To Post Tuesday

Honor guard ceremonies on Chapel Field welcomed Maj. Gen. Ben Harrell, new commandant of The Infantry School and commanding general of The Infantry Center, Tuesday afternoon.

Local commander for the occasion was Brig. Gen. Charles H. White, Jr., commanding general of the 2nd Infantry Division, who has served as post commander since Major Gen. Hugh P. Harris departed July 15 to command I Corps in Korea.

Brig. Gen. A. D. Surles, Jr., assistant commandant of The School and Brig. Gen. John E. Kelly, deputy post commander also participated in the ceremonies.

Expresses Pleasure

Gen. Harrell, commander of the 101st Airborne Division since June, 1960, spoke briefly at the event.

He said it was "a real pleasure and honor" to come to the post and that he and Mrs. Harrell look upon his assignment here as an opportunity to renew acquaintances with old friends, as well as an opportunity to add many more.

Gen. Harrell said he was fully aware of the fine reputation of Fort Benning and The Infantry School. "I assure you I will make every effort to continue it," he emphasized.

Civilians Present

He expressed appreciation to the guests from the surrounding community attending the welcoming ceremonies, stating that their presence was an indication of the fine community relations he had been told existed between Fort Benning and the Columbus-Phenix City area.

Following the review, Gen. and Mrs. Harrell were honored at an official reception in the Main Officers' Mess attended by approximately 350 military and civilian guests.

USMA Class of '33

A 1933 graduate of the U. S. Military Academy, Gen. Harrell considers Eugene Ore., his home. He is maried to the former Harriet Campbell of Medford, Ore. They have two sons, Hunter Harrell of Knoxville, Tenn., and 2nd Lt. Charles Harrell, a student in The Infantry School's Ranger class No. 1.

COL. HANKINS

Col. Hankins Arrives As LAAC CO

Col. Curtis L. Hankins has arrived and assumed command of Lawson Army Aviation Command as Col. L. W. Leeney leaves for the National War College.

Col. Hankins received his commission in the Infantry as an ROTC graduate from the University of Arkansas in 1940. He served in World War II as battalion commander of the 61st Armored Infantry Battalion, 10th Armored Division.

Operational highlights of his unit included the Battle of the Bulge, the breakthrough of the Siegfried Line at Ayl, and finally across Bavaria through the towns of Crailsheim, Ulm, Oberammagau and Garmisch-Partenkirchen.

During these operations, Col. Hankins received the Silver Star and one Oak Leaf Cluster, the Bronze Star and three Oak Leaf Clusters, the Purple Heart and one Oak Leaf Cluster and the French Croix de Guerre with Etoile d'Argent.

Until a recent promotion, Col. Hankins was the only lieutenant colonel in the Army authorized to wear both rifle and pistol Distinguished Marksman Badges.

After graduating from aviation training in 1947, Col. Hankins served in aviation assignments as aviation officer for the 2nd Constabular Brigade, Third Army, Eighth Army in Korea, in the Combat and Development Department of Staff and Faculty at Command and General Staff College, and recently as aviation officer for Sixth Army at the Presidio of San Francisco.

Col. Hankins has attended numerous service schools, including both Armor and Infantry Basic Courses, the British Air and Warfare School and the Air Command and Staff College.

His hobbies are hunting, fishing and field trailing pointers.

U.S. Team Wins International 'CISM' Shooting Competitions

U. S. marksmen, who trained here, blasted to seven individual match wins and won seven rifle and pistol trophies to take the Grand Prix at the Council of International Military Sports competition in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, July 23 to 30.

"It was the first time in the history of the CISM matches that one country swept all competition," Col. Robin G. Montgomery, U. S. delegate at the shoot, said.

According to Col. Montgomery, commander of the Army Advanced Marksmanship Unit stationed here, 12-man teams from France, Holland, Belgium, Peru, Korea, Brazil, Argentina and Uruguay could do no better than to take several second place awards behind American winners.

"A highlight of the matches was the performance of a Korean team which had been involved in a serious bus accident shortly before opening of competition," Col. Montgomery said.

He added that despite injuries suffered by all members, the Korean marksmen gave American pistol shooters their roughest competition in the Rapid Fire Pistol Matches, taking the second-place team award even though two firers did their shooting while on crutches.

Ten of the 11 American competitors were from the AAMU commanded by Col. Montgomery and one was a Navy pistol marksman.

Although the American team retained the Grand Prix, it had previously won in Athens, Greece, in 1960, Col. Montgomery claimed the greatest accomplishment at Rio de Janeiro was in the field of international relations.

"The commandant of the Brazilian Air Force Academy actually published an order to his cadets against 'pestering' members of the American team," Col. Montgomery said.

The colonel explained that as soon as one of his shooters appeared in public five or six cadets or other members of the Brazilian military would follow him about avidly seeking secrets of good shooting.

"The manner in which the Americans handled the situation, their department in public and on the range and their quick adoption of the injured Korean team was recognition from officials of the American embassy," Col. Montgomery said.

Army Sfc Anthony V. Soza won the Full Bore, Slow Fire Pistol Match while the rapid fire event was taken by Sfc Arthur F. Ogden. Sgt Ogden also won the full bore pistol aggregate award.

The .22 caliber Silhouette Match was won by 1st Lt Cecil L. Wallis, the slow fire rifle event by Cpl. Gary L. Anderson. The rapid fire rifle award was taken by Capt. Thomas W. W. Atwood, who won the rifle aggregate trophy.

The U. S. won all team awards. Argentina placed second in the grand aggregate while Brazil placed third.

DEPUTY G-1 . . . Lt. Col. Walter R. Braun has been named deputy personnel officer of The Infantry Center, succeeding Lt. Col. Calvin T. Roush, who retired July 31. Col. Braun last served as assistant G-1, 25th Infantry Division and chief, Military Personnel Division, U. S. Army, Hawaii, and comes to the post from studies at Omaha University.

WAC Cadets Visit Post Next Week

Approximately 75 women students from colleges and universities throughout the U. S. will arrive at Fort Benning Monday for a two-day visit as part of the Women's Army Corps College Junior Training Program.

The student cadets, who hold the Army Reserve rank of corporal, are eligible to apply for Reserve commissions as second lieutenants upon graduation from college. The three-week training program is designed to give the college women an understanding of the missions and organization of the Army.

The cadets, who will arrive Monday afternoon, will be honored at a dinner and dance that evening in the Custer Terrace Branch of the Main Officers' Open Mess. Their escorts will be members of The Infantry School's Officer Orientation Class 1. At the event the cadets will be presented Honorary Doughboy Certificates and "Follow Me" pins.

On Tuesday they will be given buddy seat rides on the Airborne training towers, visit The Infantry School for a briefing and orientation on the history, organization and mission of the school and Infantry Center. The students also will tour the Main Post Weapons Pool.

In the afternoon at Hook Range, they will see a demonstration on the weapons of a battle group. Later at Victory Pond they will see a Ranger demonstration, followed by an Infantry-tank team in attack problem at Buma Hill.

On Wednesday, the cadets will visit the 26th Infantry Scout Dog Platoon, receive an orientation on Army aviation, including flights, and see an aircraft display, followed by a tour of the Infantry Museum.

They will depart the post Wednesday afternoon.

586th Engineers Pass in Review On 86 Vehicles

In an unusual display of its equipment, the 586th Engineer Company, a float bridge unit of the 151st Engineer Group, joined in a group retirement review last Saturday fully mounted on its 86 vehicles.

Marching three vehicles abreast, the unit stretched the circumference of Sightseeing Field. The company left this week to participate in Exercise Swift Strike.

FIRST PARACHUTE CO

The commander of the first parachute unit in the United States Army was Major General William L. Miley, (then Major).

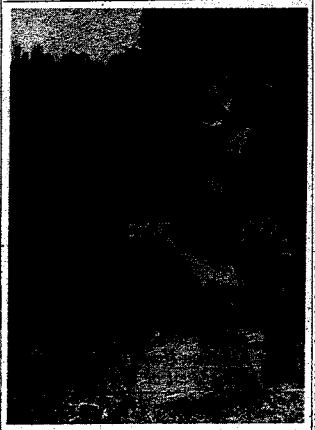
Awarded Certificate of Merit

Lawson Command Cited For Educational Advance

Lawson Army Aviation Command has been awarded a Third Army Certificate of Merit for Educational Development for the highest percentage of participants in the on the post for the fiscal year that ended June 30.

Brig. Gen. John E. Kelly, deputy post commander, presented the award to Col. Lewis W. Leeney, Lawson commander.



Competition for the award was open to major units at Fort Benning and was based on percentage of participation in educational programs available to military personnel.

The programs included USAFI (U. S. Armed Forces Institute) correspondence courses, preparatory instruction, high school courses or other courses conducted either on-duty or off-duty, and college classes, MOS (Military Occupational Specialty) related courses or any type of test conducted by the Army Education Center.

Personnel participating in the program included commissioned officers with less than a baccalaureate degree, warrant officers with less than two years of college and non-commissioned officers and specialists with less than high school education.

Units on the post competing and their percentages for the year were LAAC, 28 per cent; 428th Medical Battalion, 22.9 per cent; 151st Engineer Group, 19.3 per cent; The Infantry School's Student Brigade, 20.4 per cent; 1st Infantry Brigade, 17.3 per cent; Army Infantry Board, 17.7 per cent; Infantry Center Troop Command, 17.3 per cent, and Martin Army Hospital, 13 per cent.

The award was initiated at the beginning of the fiscal year and will be an annual event, according to Leonard S. Ozley, Infantry Center education officer.

AUSTRALIAN FIRER . . . Firing the Army's new M-14 rifle on English Range is Australian Capt. Dale P. Burnett. Coaching him is 1st Lt. Elmer E. Oling, assigned to The Infantry School's Weapons Department. Honor graduate of The Infantry School's Ranger Class 6, the Allied officer has been an observer for the past two months with the Small Arms, Machine Gun, Antitank-Missile and Mortar Committees of the Weapons Department.

It Sounded Good to Them

One of the earliest examples of Psychological Warfare was a "desertion leaflet" used by the American forces shortly after the Battle of Bunker Hill. Of unknown origin, the leaflet read as follows:

PROSPECT HILL.	BUNKER HILL.
I. Seven dollars a month.	I. Three pence a day.
II. Fresh provisions, and in plenty.	II. Rotten salt pork.
III. Health	III. The scurvy.
IV. Freedom, ease, affluence and a good farm.	IV. Slavery, beggary and want.

plans to attend the organization's 1961 national convention at the Sheraton Park Hotel, in Washington, September 6 to 8. Schloth has been designated as official delegate and Ernest W. Higgins, 1st vice president, also of Columbus, as alternate.

ROTC and Industry

In addition to its 123 chapters AUSA also has 64 ROTC companies and 73 American industrial and other corporations in support of its objectives. The organization is dedicated to fostering, supporting and advocating the legitimate and proper role of the Army in providing for and assuring the nation's military security.

The local chapter has won national recognition for its keen analyses of problem areas, basic needs and swift action concerning AUSA objectives. It has conducted a continuing struggle to gain for the Army its rightful place in the eyes of the public, according to officials.

High approval of Fort Benning personnel was gained by the chapter's strong action in support of all Congressional action favorable to the Army and its personnel, especially that concerning laws affecting retired pay.

Chapter committee members are studying current Presidential and Congressional action involving Army expansion by an anticipated 250,000 men and extension of active duty under Selective Service.

Box Score on Army Buildup

In fast action following President Kennedy's talk to the nation last week on the need for a buildup in U. S. Armed Forces, ways and means of increasing the Army's size and ability to cope with any threat started shaping up. As of press time, here are highlights of the beefing-up as they affect the Army:

Present Strength

— Figures released this week to the wire services put the total strength of the Armed Forces at 2,482,975, of which 858,622 are listed as Army.

Proposed Strength

An increase of 125,000 or more will bring the Army to a strength of almost a million. This expected increase will be used to bring three STRAC divisions to a combat-ready state; the 1st Infantry Division at Fort Riley, 2nd Infantry Division, at this post, and the 2nd Armored Division. The Atlanta Journal reports the increase will add "15,000 men" to the local "Indianhead" division, which stands at about 60 per cent of its full strength now.

Draft Quotas to Climb

In addition to higher voluntary enlistments, already seen in reports from recruiting offices, the monthly draft will climb from the present 8,000 or less per month to as much as 25,000. The increase is not expected to take place in one or two months, but over a period of several months.

Longer Overseas Tours

Two year men in Europe can expect to spend up to an additional year there, if they are retained, as overseas tours are boosted from 18 months for non-volunteers.

Draftees May Have Three Years

The draftees military tour may be lengthened from six months or two years to as much as three years.

Promotions Should Open Up

The manpower boost will mean approximately 55,000 more rated positions open for enlisted men and a jump from 90,000 to over 100,000 strength in the commissioned officer corps, according to unofficial estimates.

More Posts May Open

Reports carried in several periodicals say that two Army installations now closed or in limited use may be put in full operation to accommodate the rise in new trainees. The two posts were not named in releases, though speculation has been active.

Pro-Pay Not Effected Yet

As no national emergency or general "mobilization" has been called, proficiency pay has so far not been affected by the buildup.

Editorial

President's Address Call For United Action

When President Kennedy spoke to the nation on July 25th he was speaking to the world —not to the free world alone but to that other world whose military action in the months ahead could provoke what every American would avert but no American should shrink from: conflict to protect our own interests and those of our NATO allies in West Berlin.

For that beleaguered city is, in the President's words, "the great testing place of Western courage and will, a focal point where our solemn commitments and Soviet ambitions now meet in basic confrontation."

Every member of the Armed Forces must have heard their Commander-in-Chief, or read his words, while asking: What does this mean to me? Only future developments can answer that in specifics, but one thing is certain—the role that we shall be called upon to play in our country's history will be far greater than in recent years. The spotlight will focus on the services more intensely than at any time since the Korean war.

We will be bigger numerically, yes, but we will not necessarily be stronger unless each of us wills it and accepts the responsibility that will fall to us as the build-up of the Armed Forces proceeds. The President's call for sacrifice was directed to all Americans, but it addressed us as that body of the nation certain to be immediately affected. He had us in mind when he said, "Any dangerous spot is tenable if brave men will make it so."

The regulars, the Reserves, the National Guard—all are brave men and willing to work —and if necessary fight—with the same devotion to the goals of freedom that the President's calm and courageous words reflected. We above all other Americans understand the language of leadership.

Got to Borrow? First Check Your Insurance Policy

By Capt. Robert S. Poydasheff

If one is forced to borrow money, he is advised to examine the loan provisions of his life insurance policy before contacting commercial lending agencies. Many insurance companies will grant a policy loan with a minimum of delay and at a nominal interest.

Guaranteed Cash surrender values accumulate in all life insurance policies except those for term insurance. This includes both National Service Life Insurance policies and those offered by commercial companies.

This cash surender value serves as collateral and security, against which the insurance company will lend money to the policyholder. Most companies will lend up to 100 per cent of the cash surrender value, however, a National Service Life Insurance policyholder may borow only up to 94 per cent.

The rate of interest on policy loans is usually five per cent; however, NSLI policyholders may borrow at the rate of four per cent.

Subtracted at Death

The portion of the loan plus interest not repaid at the death of the policy holder will be subtracted from the amount payable at death. Any portion of the loan not repaid when the policyholder cancels the policy will be deducted from the cash surrender value.

To illustrate the workings of the loan, consider a $10,000 Ordinary Life plan taken out at age twenty. The cost of this coverage, as offered by leading companies, is about $155.00 per year. The cash surrender or loan values build up slowly during the early years so that at the end of the second year the cash surrender value will be only $80.00 although $310.00 in premiums would have been paid.

Rises Sharply

At the end of five years, the cash surrender value has risen to $260.00 while the total premiums paid amount to $775.90. $1,160.00 may be borowed on the policy after ten years for a paid premium of $1,550.00. After twenty years $2,530.00 will be available as a loan compared to $3,100.00 paid as premiums. Thus each year the cash loan value becomes greater as compared to the premium paid.

In addition to guaranteed cash surrender of loan values, many companies return a portion of the premiums paid as "dividends" and these may be left with the company to accumulate at compound interest or withdrawn.

If left with the company, they will be held separate from the guaranteed cash values. Before borrowing on the policy, it is well to check the dividend accumulation, for it may be sufficient to make borrowing unnecessary.

Use Only if Necessary

One should oot borow money from any source unless it is absolutely necessary, but if creditors are beating on the door or an emergency arises, the policy may be an excellent instrument for obtaining the necessary funds.

Unlike most lending agencies, most insurance companies do not add carrying charges, interest rates are comparatively low, no additional security is required, and the loan can be procured quickly. Some policyholders have received their loans in a matter of hours.

If you desire advice on a policy loan, either contact your insurance agent, the Post Insurance Office, or the Legal Assistance Office.

LOVE NEVER BARGAINS

"This is my commandment, that ye love one another, as I have loved you. Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends." (John 15:12-13).

Henry Van Dyke said, "Love is not getting, but giving; not a wild dream of pleasure, and a madness of desire — oh, no, love is not that—it is goodness, and honor, and peace and pure living.

The great truth that shines with an ever increasing brilliance from the pages of the Bible is — That God Loves man, for "God is Love" (1 John 4:8). This truth is the greatest of all truths.

What is sweeter, what is more acceptable when we are buried in sorrow, in the midst of distress, trouble, or sickness; than to be assured that God is love. And because love is of God, love never bargains.

Love never counts the cost. Go with me in imagination to the house of Simon the leper—Jesus is there. In Mathew 27:7 we find the scripture says: "And there came unto him a woman having an alabaster box of very precious ointment, and poured it on his head, as he sat at meat."

Mary of Bethany broke the alabaster box and poured it on the head of her Lord and Master because of her great love for him. She did not count the cost. There were those in Simon's house who, from hearts of greed and selfishness shouted, "To what purpose is this waste? For this ointment might have been sold for much, and given to the poor." The bargainers had spoken, but love never bargains.

Love seeks to serve, love forgives and forgets.

Infantry School Report

Hollywood Thespian--Fort Benning Style

"Quiet, everybody. . . places, . . . action. . . camera—let 'er roll," intones the movie director. Contrary to first thought, this did not take place in Hollywood, but right here at Fort Benning.

Now under production is a new Infantry Training Film entitled, "Teachnique of Employment, M18 Anti-Personnel Weapon (Claymore)," with local military personnel taking the place of "Magic City" actors.

The subject of training films is a hot one. Since 1942, when Infantry films were first produced, the caliber of productions has increased to the extent that they are today recognized as outstanding training vehicles.

Presently on the post is a director and camera crew from the Army Pictorial Center Long Island City, New York, producing a new training film for The Infantry School. The focal point of the new film, the Claymore, originally was a large two-edged sword used by the Scottish Highlanders to cut a wide gap through enemy ranks.

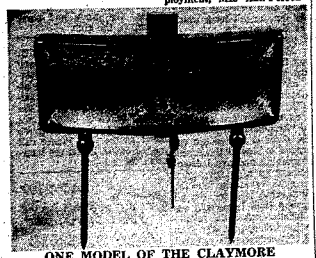
Today's Claymore — an anti-personnel weapon — is designed to accomplish the same purpose, but in a somewhat different manner. Unlike its namesake, the modern Claymore is a one-shot weapon that delivers a hail of steel fragments in a fan-shaped zone in front of its position.

The film now being produced opens with a squad of Infantrymen facing a mass attack by aggressor forces. Riflemen are shown firing at the advancing enemy. When he comes within close range, the soldier presses a switch which fires the Claymore.

Several other of the death-dealing weapons are shown being fired, and the camera then picks up a badly disorganized retreating aggressor force — or what's left of it.

There is never a dull moment on location when the soldier-actors go into high gear and the cameras are rolling. Some of the action borders on the spectacular when our soldier-hero routs the aggressor forces. To the casual observer who has never heard a shot fired in anger, the impression seems to be that the actors go a little too far in gaining realism.

Troops supporting the film-ing are from the Combat Support Company, 1st Battle Group, 29th Infantry, 1st Infantry Brigade: 1st Lt. George W. Snoke is the troop liaison officer and has the job of getting support troops and equipment "on location" at the proper time.



Director of the film project from the Army Pictorial Center is Mr. Mike Sheehy, no stranger to Fort Benning. He has directed Infantry films for several years and recently completed a project for the Ranger Department entitled "Patrolling."

Army Pictorial Center personnel assisting Sheehy are: 1st Lt. Victor Hunter, assistant director; 1st Lt. James Rogers, assistant director; Sgt William H. Wilson, first cameraman; Sfc Alden Floyd, cameraman, and Sp5 Dave Dardzinski, assistant cameraman.

1st Lt. Carl Melton is the Weapons Department technical advisor and has the task of insuring that the employment of the Claymore is filmed correctly and will assist the director during actual filming.

Coordination for the production of Infantry training films is the responsibility of the Film Section, Editorial and Pictorial Office. Major Alfred M. Leonard is the Training Films Liaison Officer for The Infantry School and effects the coordination necessary to produce training films.

The Film Section assists the Army Pictorial Center and the instructional departments of The Infantry School in the completion of approximately 15 films annually while some 35 other film projects are in other phases of production.

Gen. Lawrie Tells TIS Graduates

Inner Incentive Will Decide Between Success and Oblivion

The incentive within you will make the difference between success and mediocrity in your military career, Brig. Gen. Joe S. Lawrie, assistant commander of the 101st Airborne Division, Fort Campbell, told 133 graduates of The Infantry School's Associate Officer Career Class 4 July 26.

"Carry the image of The Infantry School with you," the speaker urged the group at the ceremonies in the Main Theater, adding that Infantry School ideals complement the desire to succeed.

"The Infantry School is more than a school; it is an institution. It is a molder of men and a leader in doctrine. Irrespective of the job we have or how high we go, we always turn to Benning for guidance," Gen. Lawrie emphasized.

Honor Graduate

Capt. Roger O. Maldonado, son of MSgt and Mrs. Juan F. Maldonado of Schofield Barracks, Hawaii, was honor graduate. He has been assigned to the 1st Battle Group, 27th Infantry, "Wolfhounds," 25th Infantry Division in Hawaii.

The one-star general took note of the 30 members of the class from Indonesia, Republic of Korea, Thailand and the Republic of Vietnam: He added that he has served in Korea and Vietnam and traveled extensively in both Indonesia and Thailand.

Praised Cooperation

"I'm delighted to see our governments working so closely together that we can exchange knowledge with you," he told the Allied students.

"The experience and precision you gain at The Infantry School puts you head and shoulders above your contemporaries," Gen. Lawrie continued. "They allow you to move into the 'thinking and doing' group."

"In the Army we are looking for people who can teach and who can train. Here you have perfected the ability to teach and train your men. Now you can teach Infantry School principles and train your command by molding your men, integrating these principles into their daily life," he said.

Col. Richard W. Keyes, deputy assistant commandant of The School, introduced the speaker.

Gen. Lawrie has been stationed at Fort Benning three times. In 1942 he was a member of the fifth parachute training class at the post. He is a 1936 graduate of Louisiana State University.

HI- NEWCOMERS

Welcome, new Benningites! Glad to have you join our family. We hope you all will soon be enjoying the variety of activities here on post. Here are some:

THE POOL

When the sun is beating down, relief is found at the pools. Most everyone gets a tan and a bit of gossip while lounging in these areas. Interested teens are swimming toward their junior and senior lifesaving badges.

The junior class is held at the Main Officers' Open Mess under the direction of head lifeguard Jerry Harrison. Lifeguard Jim Small is instructing the senior class swimmers in the evenings.

THE COURTS

The tennis courts furnish a place to exert extra energy. At almost any hour of the day, someone is playing on one of the courts.

FAIRWAYS

Teeing off from the greens of Fort Benning's 36-hole golf course offers some brow-mopping hours of fun and perspiration.

BOWLING

The coolest activity offered for our entertainment here is bowling. Quite a few strikes have been scored by teenagers enjoying the comfort of air conditioning.

HORSEBACK RIDING

The post Hunt Club provides a place of peaceful trials and a nearness to nature. Anyone for a moonlight ride?

SEWING

Several afternoons during the week find a number of our young lasses learning the art of sewing. They're basting their way to a new fall wardrobe.

LIBRARY

A quiet refuge is the library. Here all we have to do is to take a book from a shelf and we're on the way to the place and time of our choosing.

STUDIES

Summer school and business courses have been added to the variety of vacation life, preparing us for a well-rounded future.

BAKE SALES

August 2 found enterprising Sigma Delta Beta members selling cakes and pastry in order to make their treasury bulge.

CHARM AND GRACE

Boys Beware! The tomboys are changing into graceful ladies at one of the many charm and modeling schools.

MOVIES

For cool relaxation and no exertion, the movies offer a wide range of topics as varied as life itself.

AND BRAT BARRACKS

Dancing, cards, pool, ping pong, or just talking can be achieved at Brat Barracks. It's open to all teens three nights a week.

This list could be longer, but space doesn't permit and all the time in the world wouldn't be enough to give every detail of the post's summertime possibilities.

Linda Turner made good use of the tokens of friendship she received recently at a coke party given in her honor by Lynn Craddock and Earle Wilder. Thirteen girls participating in the party wished Linda, a long-time Benningite, the best for the future.

Linda was saluted in last week's Report Card (by Barbara Hare) as the guests bid their last au revoir. Linda was showered with handkerchiefs which she in turn showered upon.

This summer has caused a turnover in military personnel and we regret to say that a large number of our teens are moving . . . to destinations that scope the world.

As they leave, some small part of them is left here at Fort Benning, along with a spirit of good times past. To you departing we can't say goodbye, just "Auf Wiedersehen," 'til we meet again.

We Goofed— It Was Barbara

Last week's Teen Report Column was written by Barbara Hare, not Donna Davis and Kay Jones, whose names appeared over the report.

The Bayonet regrets the error, and is pleased to print this correction.

Jan Rose's Woman's Club Diary

The scrub brushes and paint brushes are in much demand these days at Building 1182. That's the home of the Pre-Kindergarten School, and Mrs. Helen Murray, the principal, is busy each morning getting ready for the fall term which opens September 5.

If you have children aged 3-5, Mrs. Murray will be happy to discuss the program of the school with you.

A formal Registration Day has been set for Monday, August 21, from 9 a.m. til 4 p.m. but as children are accepted on a "first-come, first-served" basis, those interested are encouraged to stop at the school any morning and avoid disappointment by registering now.

As summer starts into the final months, and we are all returning from leave with extra inches around the middle (it's inevitable, isn't it?) Mrs. Neil Stewart reminds you that the place to lose those pounds is the Slim 'N Trim class. For information, call her at 5-2517.

If you are interested in any phase of art work, from posters to decorations, we are always happy to use your talents. With the opening tea coming in early October, we are hoping to secure as much talent as possible. Please call me, LI 5-2807, if you are interested in helping.

Student Battalian Bids Farewell to Capt, Mrs. Smith

The Cadre officers and wives of the 2nd Student Battalion, The Student Brigade, met at the Custer Terrace Officers' Club to bid farewell to Capt. and Mrs. John J. Smith. Capt. Smith was Detachment 2 commander.

Lt. Col. Vern L. Joseph presented a memento to Capt. Smith. Mrs. Joseph gave Mrs. Smith a silver dish from all the battalion ladies.

Later the group had steak dinners at the club.

7-Year-Old Visits Reservists, Lawson Area

Angela's Letter Earns Her a 'One Army' Tour

The two new buildings on Macon Road in Columbus were impressive ones for little, seven-year-old Angela Edwards, and she was determined to find out what went on in them.

Angela, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Edwards, passed the two buildings in her neighborhood often and each time she became more curious about the signs, "U. S. Army XII Corps Sub-Sector Command" and "U. S. Army Reserve Center."

But that didn't tel her enough, so, to get to the nub of the problem, she directed the following letter to those in authority:

"Dear Sir:

I would like to tour the U. S. armoury. I have been passed there many times. I am seven years old and have just finisht the second grade. I think it would be fun to tour there. Thank you."

So, impressed with Angela's civic mindedness, the Army Reservists immediately began the wheels turing that led to her personally conducted tour of the armory and Lawson Army Aviation Command.

See Sub-Center

The tour started when Angela, accompanied by her mother and sister, Rita, were called for at their home by Army Reserve officials and escorted to the XII Corps Sub-Sector Command. There they were welcomed by Capt. Charles P. Berry, commander of the Sub-Sector headquarters.

The first of the Reserve units to be visited was Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 3rd Battle Group, 29th Infantry, 31st Infantry Division, commanded by Capt. Luther R. Odom.

Here weapons of the unit were shown and explained to Angela, and the Army Reserve Center building, which houses the company and the 375th Station Hospital, was toured.

200 to 500 Bed Unit

The hospital is a 200 to 500-bed unit with a mobilization strength of approximately 1,200. Some phases of its training are held at Martin, Army Hospital.

The 375th is commanded by Lt. Col. B. W. Waldemayer. In civilian life, he is the chief of staff of the Americus and Sumter County Hospital in Americus.

Angela and her party were guests of the 375th at noon for a meal with the troops.

After lunch, the nurses of the 375th and Col. Waldemayer showed Angela how a blood transfusion is given and demonstrated and explained other nursing techniques.

Attend Church

The visitors then attended services at the Army Reserve Center chapel. The services were conducted by Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Frank Gilmore, pastor of the South Columbus Methodist Church. Spt Andrew C. Ownbey played the field organ.

Later Angela visited the 218th Transportation Company (Aircraft Maintenance and Supply) at the Lawson Command, where it does its training and other operations.

The 218th, commanded by Capt. Raymond P. Eastburn, is unique since it is the only unit in the Army Reserve that is actually based, trained and operated on an Army post.

The personnel of the 218th were busy repairing all types of aircraft, both fixed-wing and rotary. The men would take time out to explain their particular project to Angela.

They told her the 218th works with the Lawson units, and in this way it can use th equipment and facilities of the command. The 218th also sees the many problems of a large active duty unit.

At the end of the tour, Angela was given a model helicopter by Capt. Eastburn as a memento of her visit with the Army Reserve units.

Summing it all up, Angela commented, "It was fun."

She was glad to have some interesting things to tell her third grade class when school begins in September.

What Do You Know About Brakes?

Your safety on the highway... depends on your BRAKES

Do you know how to dry your brakes when they become wet? How to prevent yourself from driving with the emergency brake on? What to do if your brakes fail on a steep hill?

Probably you have some idea — but unless your answers are instantaneous, you may be risking your life. From a safety viewpoint, your brakes are the most important part of your car. More than 60 percent of all fatal accidents on the highway are caused by speeding and faulty brakes, according to safety engineers.

Besides, the misconceptions and poor braking habits many of us have has wasted money—on gas, on tires, and on brake replacements. And you don't have to know an anchor pin from a wheel-cylinder piston to save yourself from a serious brake-down.

Give Your Brakes A Break

The three most important rules for proper braking are: 1. Use your brakes as little as possible; 2. become familiar with how much pressure your brakes need to slow or stop your car; 3. when you use your brakes, don't ride them.

1. The more you use your brakes, the quicker you will wear out the brake lining, the more gas you waste, and the shorter the life of your tires. So, when slowing down, take your foot off the gas pedal early; allowing the car to decelerate; and use the brakes early enough so you won't have to slam them on.

2. To develop "feather touch driving, get familiar with a new car's braking ... power. Try stopping on a deserted road at fairly low speeds. You might even drive in your stocking feet — your sense of touch will be greater, and you'll save on gas and on brakes, too.

3. Quick, short brake applications are most effective. By so doing you prevent tremendous heat build up in the brake drums. Thus you help maintain effective friction qualities. Also, high temperatures may cause the metal of the drum to expand, and the shoe no longer can contact the drum properly. And, of course, you'll need replacement of brake parts that much sooner.

One of the simplest ways to see whether your brakes need service is to watch the brake pedal. It should have just ¼ to ½ of an inch of free play. Within an inch, it should set the shoes against the drums. Its total movement should be 1¾ to 2 inches.

Once you notice that the pedal goes down further than usual, have the brakes adjusted. After two or three adjustments, have the linings checked for wear.

Surprisingly, the linings on all wheels may not wear out at the same time. Usually the front ones go first. But you can save on labor costs by having them all replaced, since the rear ones probably wouldn't last long anyway. But be sure to use a quality lining: your brakes are only as good as the linings.

Other symptoms of brakes that need service, besides too much pedal movement, are: grabbing too tightly, noisiness, dragging, and brakes that pull the car to one side.

Every 1,000 miles, check the fluid level in your brake system. If fluid has to be added more often than 1,000 miles, have the entire system checked. Every 3,000 miles, have your emergency brake checked for adjustment, and you should inspect the movement of the floor pedal. Have your brakes adjusted every 5,000 miles.

Know an easy way to see if your brakes need adjustment? After driving the car a short distance, feel the wheel's drums. If one is hotter or colder than the others, have it adjusted.

In An Emergency

The moment all drivers dread is when they press the pedal down, . .and nothing happens. The reasons vary — perhaps the brake fluid has leaked out, perhaps the brakes are wet.

The most important thing to do in this situation is: pull the emergency brake. Many people forget to do this. . . and in some cases pay for their forgetfulness with their lives. For, in many cars, the emergency brakes continue to operate when the regular brakes are gone.

Don't fail to slip the car into a lower gear to help stop the car. And pump your brakes — it may build up pressure if some fluid remains. Next, look for other ways to stop the car. In the country, look for a side road, aim at a soft spot on the bank of a hill, or sideswipe a tree. But, on a hill, do it quickly — before you gain momentum. In the city, rub your tires against the nearest curb, but be careful the car doesn't jump the curb.

If your brakes go because they are wet — simply washing the car can do it — there are two remedies: wait for them to dry; or drive for a few moments with both the accelerator and brake down (this will generate heat to dry the brakes).

In blowouts, use your brakes only when you have control of your car. In skids, release your brakes for a second, reapply them when the car is under control. On ice, be sure to pump your brakes, don't ride them.

The Emergency Brake

To prevent driving with the emergency brake on, set it as tightly as you can. Use both hands. . .and depress the footbrake, since this will make the task easier. Or you might have a warning light installed, which will tell you when the emergency is on.

In freezing wet weather, try to park without the emergency brake on. Use your parking gear. Otherwise, the brakes and cables may freeze, making it impossible to move the car or damaging the linings.

After hot-weather driving, don't set the emergency brake very tightly. Overheated drums may contract unevenly, causing squealing brakes, rapid wear, or uneven braking.

Don't forget about the emergency brake in emergency. . . but don't let it become a substitute for your floor brake. Engineers maintain that the emergency brake is only one-third as effective as your regular brake!

If you treat your emergency brake and your regular brake with the proper care, and follow proper braking habits, you'll be giving your brakes—and yourself — a break.

New Vehicle

Experiments With Rubber Track Begin

WASHINGTON (ANS) — Experiments will be started soon on a revolutionary vehicle, designed to travel on water, hard surface, snow, mud or tundra, as the result of a $20,000 Army contract awarded to Chance Vought Corp., Dallas, Tex.

The projected vehicle would operate on a continuous track of rubber - impregnated cells filled with low pressure air, giving the vehicle high flotation and letting it ride over soft terrain or water.

The machine, which will probably resemble a tank, would have self - cleaning tracks, with air blowing away mud, dust or snow.

The contract award for the vehicle, called PAT, for Plenum Air Track, provides for a preliminary investigation of the new concept in transportation. Plenum is an air supply chamber which can be supplied with air automatically if pressure is lost. The cells would be self-sealing if punctured.

Plans call for the PAT to travel about 10 m.p.h. on highways. The speed on water would be twice that of present amphibians.

Under the first phase of research, Chance Vought will design and construct for the Army Transportation Research Command at Ft. Eustis, Va., a half-scale test bed of the PAT. The test bed would be a frame-work model of the proposed prototype.

The Surgeon Says

This Happened To Each of Us

In The Valley Of The Shadow Of Birth

By Major Edwin S. Busch, MC Chief, Pediatric Service

This is how Doctor Clement Smith of Boston, one of our great teachers and scholars of American Pediatrics, referred to the interval between the birth of a baby and the time when its continued living is established.

This is always a dramatic period. There is no time more critical in human life. Never again must so many intricate adjustments be made so rapidly.

In most instances these adjustments are made by the baby itself, and the vital processes which support life function smoothly and effectively with a minimum of assistance.

But, if we marvel that an infant will breathe spontaneously within seconds of delivery, let us not presume that in every instance there is assurance of continued normal breathing.

The respirations of a newborn baby must be watched and evaluated frequently — at times supported for several days. Because a baby only seconds old can suck and swallow is no guarantee that its early feedings can be given without expert care.

It would be unsafe to assume that in every instance when these vital functions begin normally that there is no need for continued attention.

Vigilance on the part of all those who care for infants in the newborn nursery is vital for their continued well being. All babies are observed carefully. Their feeding and breathing, their appearances and actions — all have meaning for the pediatrician.

The sum total of our observations over a period of days (and nights) allows us to send most infants home with their mothers three to four days after birth with confidence that they will do well.

At times babies must remain in the nursery for a longer period. Progress in learning to nurse may be unusually slow, and it may require further special care in being fed. Another infant's breathing may not be satisfactory and it will be kept under watchful eyes for a few days longer until breathing is normal and serious disease avoided.

Some babies are born months too early and require the special care of a Premature Nursery team of physicians, nurses, and many other trained and experienced people. These are the most frequent reasons why the homecoming of some babies may be delayed.

There are other more serious situations which occur, and which are detected only by repeated careful examinations. The baby who "just isn't doing well," who is growing too slowly, who becomes more listless as its infection worsens, and whose life is threatening, is rare. But during the past year we had a few, and our treatment was effective in saving the babies.

Space does not permit a longer detailed discussion of pediatrics in the Newborn Nursery. However, it is hoped that what we have written will give some insight into how much importance we attach to this aspect of our specialty — and how much of our time and attention we must give to it.

DOD Film Explains Red Threat

WASHINGTON (AFPS)—The Department of Defense is releasing a new training film entitled "Challenge of Ideas" to explain the background of communism and the ideological struggle being waged in the world today.

It is narrated by Edward R. Murrow, now Chief of the U.S. Information Agency, and features actress Helen Hayes, actor John Wayne, Hanson Baldwin of the New York Times, and commentator Lowell Thomas.

"Challenge of Ideas" replaces two films previously used by the Armed Forces which were produced by non-defense organizations.

The film is being made available through the film libraries of the military departments. Its use in non-profit television and theatrical exhibitions is authorized. However, commercial television showing overseas is prohibited.

577th Engineers at Camp Perry

Local Detachment Supports Ohio Events

A detachment of 66 enlisted men and two officers, from the 577th Engineer Battalion arrived at Camp Perry, Ohio, more than a month ago to take over chores of rehabilitating the firing range for the 1961 National Rifle and Pistol Matches July 28 through August 27.

Under the leadership of 1st Lt. Ray W. Goetz, platoon leader, the detachment is responsible for not only repairing and maintaining approximately 1,572 targets that will be used on the range, but has also accomplished such tasks as painting the 100 foot high flag pole; removing trees for range parking areas, installing 1,400 feet of power cable for pistol ranges, and surveying safety angles for the ranges.

With the aid of a huge Galion road grader, the 577th Engineers have graded and rolled 13,000 feet of range roads and parking lots.

They will also be responsible for the upkeep and maintenance of the targets and range during the month of firing at the Ohio Army Installation.

It is these 68 Army engineers who will construct the 50 pop-up and six running-deer targets for the special marksmanship school for civilian, military and federal officers attending the Matches. These targets will also be used for a Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) quick-draw pistol shooting demonstration.

To accomplish all of the repairs required to put the firing ranges into perfect shooting condition, the 577th Engineers used approximately 175 gallons of paint, 125 sheets of 4 x 8 plywood, 525 pounds of nails, 2,600 yards of target cloth, 1,800 feet of wire and 5,300 board feet of lumber with more repairs ahead.

WHY A COMPANY?

Ever wonder why a military outfit should be called a company? It's because the first military companies, in the Middle Ages, were real commercial companies. They were organized and equipped by businessmen with money to invest and they fought for the king or nobleman who would pay the most for their services. The profit motive has gone out of military service, but the name remains the same.

Brig. Gen. Reynolds Due Tuesday

Arrives From Spoin to Command 2nd Division for Interim Period

BY PETER TATISTCHEFF

The 2nd Infantry Division will welcome Brigadier General Royal Reynolds, Jr., Tuesday with a review and reception.

General Reynolds will take command of the division in a review planned also as a farewell for Brigadier General Charles H. White, Jr., the present commanding general.

General White will remain in an advisory capacity to aid in the reorganization of the division. He is scheduled to depart the latter part of this month for his new assignment with the Army Air Defense Command at Ent Air Force Base, Colo.

Salute Battery

A miniature review and eleven-gun salute are scheduled for 9 a.m. Tuesday, honoring both generals. The reception will be held at the Main Officers Open Mess at 5 p.m. that afternoon.

Special guests invited include Major General Ben Harrell, new commandant of the Infantry School and commanding general of The Infantry Center, Brigadier General Alexander D. Surles, Jr., assistant commandant, U. S. Army Infantry School, and several local dignitaries.

General Reynolds, whose last assignment was deputy chief of the Military Assistance Advisory Group in Spain, will command the division until mid-August and the advent of the division's designated commander, Major General Charles H. Chase. General Reynolds will then become the Assistant Division Commander.

A 1933 graduate of the United States Military Academy, General Reynolds was born in San Francisco, California. He previously has been at Fort Benning twice — in 1937, when he attended the Infantry School, taking the regular Of-

Training Mission to Halt, General White Tells Div

BY CLAY LACY

The Commanding General of the 2nd Infantry Division informed division personnel Tuesday afternoon that the 2nd Division has been earmarked to become a full-strength combat-ready division in the "very near future."

Brigadier General Charles H. White, Jr., speaking before all senior noncommissioned officers and junior officers at Sand Hill's Theater Seven, said that the present training mission of the 2nd Division would soon be halted.

Special Meeting

General White called for the special meeting following an earlier session held in the morning with all commanders and staff officers present. Another meeting held following the senior noncoms and junior officers was given to young soldiers newly assigned within the division.

General White informed the members of the Indianhead unit that there would be many transfers within the division to balance the know-how currently within the unit. He pointed out that at present there is a wide variance in the degree of proficiency of soldiers because some units train basic combat trainees and others carry out the advanced phases of individual training.

"We will shortly be undergoing an intensive period of training," he said, "and though the training period may not be as long as we might like to have, it is up to us to see that we do the job and produce the best unit in the United States Army."

Speaking to the top three ranks of non-commissioned officers in his audience, General White said, "I am anxious

Three Signal Units Leave For Exercise Participation

Three provisional platoons of the division's 122nd Signal Battalion — some 90 men — left last Saturday morning to participate in Exercise Swift Strike", the joint Army - Air Force maneuver that begins Sunday in North and South Carolina.

They will number among other division men who left earlier for participation in the exercise, headquartered at Fort Bragg, N. C.

Support Exercise

Men from the 2nd Infantry Division will serve as umpires and escort officers in support of the excercise. These men were drawn from all division units.

The signal platoons went to three air bases — Shaw, North and Donaldson — all in South Carolina, where they will provide internal communications for the Army Staging Area commands during the exercise.

Leading the signal platoons are Lieutenants Paul Klueznik, William Partridge and Edward Colace. The platoons traveled to the three bases by truck convoy.

Eleven enlisted men of the division left by bus Tuesday morning for Fort Bragg where they were to serve with the Joint Information Task Force during "Exercise Swift Strike."

Lieutenant Colonel Harvey Scott has assumed command of the division's 7th Cavalry, formerly commanded by Lieutenant Colonel Leonard L. Keene.

Colonel Scott entered the Army as a draftee from Grand Rapids, Michigan, in June 1941. He was commissioned a second lieutenant at Fort Knox, Kentucky, in November 1942. He served in Europe in World War II as a tank company commander through five campaigns, winning the Bronze Star, Purple Heart and the Belgian Croix de Guerre and Fouraguerre.

Colonel Scott returned to civilian life in 1945, residing in Sparta, Michigan, where he served a term as city council man. He returned to active duty with the Army at Fort Knox, Kentucky, in December of 1948.

His active duty with the Army began at Fort Sill, Oklahoma, where he served as a platoon leader in a rifle company and a machine gun company of the 29th Infantry.

In 1935 he was assigned to Fort Washington, Maryland, and served as a company commander in the 12th Infantry. In 1939, following his duty at the Infantry School, he was assigned to Fort McKinley, Philippine Islands, and served as regimental communications officer and Headquarters Company commander in the 57th Infantry (Philippine Scouts).

At the outbreak of World War II, General Reynolds was commanding the 1st Battalion, 57th Infantry, and fought against the Japanese at Bataan, P. I.

Following the fall of Bataan, General Reynolds went into the mountains of Luzon, Philippine Islands, and fought guerrilla action, evading the enemy until February, 1945, when he joined the U. He returned to the United States in 1945, was promoted to lieutenant colonel, and assigned to the United States Military Academy as a tactical officer.

Association's Report Explains Funds' Use

By Clay Lacy

The 40th annual reunion of the 2nd Infantry "Indianhead" Division Association is now history, but a report to the many personnel of the Division will give them an opportunity to see how their donations throughout the year were utilized.

The Warrior Branch is the division of the Association that covers all active duty members of the 2nd Infantry Division. Present head of the Warrior Branch is Lieutenant Colonel Byrd Sergent.

Chapters

Within the Warrior Branch are contained chapters for each major unit of the 2nd Division and these function as a part of the Warrior Branch. For this year's reunion, each chapter had approximately two delegates who were sent to Kansas City, Missouri, for the three-day affair in the third week of July.

Expenses while at Kansas City were handled through the various chapters and the Warrior Branch. These expenses included hotel rooms, meals, tickets to the functions of the reunion such as the banquet and bus fare on a chartered bus for the trip.

In addition to furnishing expenses for the 34 delegates to this year's reunion, the Warrior Branch, through the faithful efforts of division personnel was able to give a check for $5,000 to the Association earlier this year for the monument fund.

Fallen Members

The monument fund is set up to add to the present memorial erected in Washington, D. C., honoring the fallen members of the "Second to None" 2nd Infantry Division.

Present plans call for adding wings to the monument in memory of those who fell in World War II and the Korean Conflict.

An additional effort by the division made it possible for the Warrior Branch to present at the reunion another check to the monument fund. This check was in the amount of $10,000 and literally set the delegates on their heels.

In summation, the Warrior Branch of the Association, made up of the active duty members of the 2nd Division, contributed this year the sum of $15,000 to the memorial fund in addition to sending 34 delegates to the reunion.

Army Sergeant Serves Community as Ballplayer

By Clay Lacy

Participating actively in community affairs can be a strenuous experience, according to First Sergeant Ira F. Myers of the 2nd Division's 2nd Medical Battalion.

As a pitcher with the Villa Nova softball team, Sergeant Myers found himself in the unenviable position of having to pitch five games in a row in one day during a recent tournament.

And, of course, if you're in

ALL-AROUND AMERICAN

the late teens or early 20s, five games in a row can be a strain and a real effort. But if you're like Sergeant Myers, you're in for a real marathon. Because Sergeant Myers is a ripe 42 years of age.

Phenix City Native

Just for the record, the native of Phenix City withstood the challenge in admirable fashion for the day, chalking up three wins and two losses during the grueling grind.

Sgt. Myers has served with the United States Army more than 17 years and saw combat duty both in World War II and Korea. He started his athletic career even earlier, having played both football and baseball while still in Industrial High School in Columbus as a student.

He continued to play ball in the Army but concentrated his efforts on softball in the pitching department. The Army offered him many opportunities to participate in the game with the many unit and post teams formed at stations both here in the U. S. and abroad. His skill as a pitcher has improved until today he holds top spot with the Villa Nova team.

Coming to the 2nd Division in September of 1959 from a tour of duty in Hawaii, Sergeant Myers decided to participate in both military and civilian softball play. As a pitcher for the Division Trains team of 1960, he paced his team to first place and winner of the division softball tournament.

Honors

His community relations participation followed almost immediately when he earned a berth with the Villa Nova team. This team, sponsored by a local restaurant, has earned honors in the Southeastern area.

Last year at the Southern Regional Playoff held at Chattanooga, Tennessee, Sergeant Myers pitched the Villa Nova team into the runner-up position. The feat was duplicated again this year when the team participated in Florida in the preliminaries of the Playoff.

The current Southern Regional Playoff is scheduled this year for Columbus, Georgia, and Sergeant Myers is counted already to be a big threat for all opposing teams.

The Soldier-athlete carries his love of sports into his family life and gives personal coaching tips to his two sons, Ronnie, 13, and Stephen, 10, are following in their father's footsteps and both are members of the Little League.

Medic

Sergeant Myers, his wife Evelyn, and their two sons live in Phenix City, close to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ira Ellis Myers. During the Korean War, the military pitcher served with the 3rd Infantry Division as a Medical Specialist.

Sergeant Myers has kept his military career abreast of his advancement in softball circles. Serving with the 2nd Medical Battalion of the 2nd Division initially as a platoon sergeant, he was promoted to first sergeant rank in October of last year.

1ST CANDIDATE
Sgt. Myers

Sergeant Myers has found his participation in the community affairs to be rewarding and beneficial. "For one thing," he says, "it gives me an opportunity to see at close hand how our civilian friends rate the Army."

Though up-in-years for an active ball player, Sergeant Myers is certainly young-in-heart, both for the military service and for the well-rounded life that can be gained by taking part in the community affairs of the local area.

Sergeant Ira F. Myers is an "All-Around American."

If you know of a prospective candidate for this "All-Around American" feature, contact your unit information officer who will submit a resume to the Division Information Office for consideration. Since there may be several applications each week, a selection board headed by the division Chief of Staff, Colonel Gustav M. Bacharach, will determine the weekly winner. Winners will appear in the "All-Around American" feature of the 2nd Division section of the Bayonet.

122nd Signal Acquaints Div's New Commanders

By 122nd Signal PIO

A Signal Equipment Display was set up in the 122nd Signal Battalion area for three days recently to acquaint new commanders in the Division with the capabilities of the Battalion.

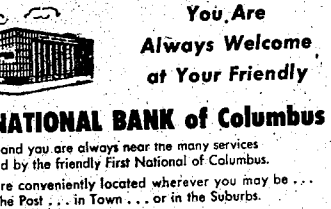
Visiting the display were Brigadier General Charles H. White Jr., Division commander, Col. C. P. Hannum, 9th Infantry commander and Col. Stanley L. Harding, Division Artillery commander.

On display were AM and FM radio equipment, radio relay, radio wire integration, photographic darkroom and Signal repair vans. Equipment of special interest to the visitors was the new SB-611; a patch panel switchboard.

Also viewing the display were the communications officers of the battle groups and battalions of the division.

They held their quarterly meeting, conducted by the assistant division signal officer, Capt. John Petercok. Items discussed were supply and maintenance problems on signal equipment. Brought to the attention of the officers were two courses to be taught in August: The Crypto Supervisors Course, to be conducted by the battalion, and optimum use of Communications, to be taught at the Infantry School.

87th's C-S Co. Surpasses Goal



Combat Support Company, 87th Infantry, has set the "Second to None" standard for the Army Emergency Relief Program.

The goal set by the 87th Infantry was reached and surpassed. The company achieved 103 per cent unit participation by contributing $231.25.

The Army Emergency Relief Program is one of the ways that the Army takes care of its own. It is a way of insuring that military personnel may receive financial assistance whenever faced with an emergency beyond their means.

Mrs. Woodyard, Daughter "Pia" in Costume

Ladies of 87th Shown Costumes at Coffee

BY IRENE JOHNSON

Mrs. John Woodyard and her daughter modeled Danish costumes recently for the ladies of the 87th Infantry. The monthly coffee was held at the home of Battle Group Commander Colonel Robert Conner.

Mrs. Woodyard, whose home is Copenhagen, made both of their outfits. Little Miss Woodyard's name is Catherine but she is called Pia. Phonetically, this means for "little girl" in Danish.

Ladies of Headquarters Company hostessed the coffee under the direction of Mrs. Kenneth Sweeney. Lieutenant and Mrs. V. Elequin designed a unique centerpiece of 25 inch high "87 numerals" of small pompoms.

Cook of the Week

This week we are fortunate enough to have an old family recipe from Jerrie McCrary, wife of Lt. John McCrary, Company B, 69th Armor. Jerrie is not sure how far back this recipe goes, but she knows her grandmother used it.

The McCrarys live at 35-C Battle Park with their son Wayne, eight months.

Countryside Biscuits

2 pkg. yeast (dry or cake)
3¼ cup flour
1 cup whole milk
⅓ cup margarine or other shortening
1 teaspoon salt
3-5 cup sugar
2 eggs

Dissolve yeast in one-fourth cup lukewarm water to which one tablespoon sugar has been added. Put milk, margarine, salt, and sugar into saucepan and heat until sugar dissolves and butter melts. Stir constantly.

Sift flour twice. Beat three eggs in large mixing bowl. Add yeast mixture to eggs, then add cooled milk mixture. Lastly, add flour and beat by hand until smooth.

Put dough in refrigerator to rise. Take out after chilled. Roll out and cut biscuits about one to one and a half hours before baking and let stand to rise on greased sheet.

Brush top of biscuits with butter for more flavor. Bake in 450 degree oven ten to 12 minutes. Makes three dozen.

Will keep in refrigerator for five days to be used as needed. Can also be cut and frozen for about three weeks.

'Responsive'

He urged the small unit leaders to develop their soldiers so that they are responsive both to command and leadership. To do this, he reminded his audience, it must be the small unit leader who is the model and example.

General White was introduced to the sergeants and officers by the division sergeant major, Sergeant Major Robert L. Brown. He spoke for approximately 15 minutes in sharp, clear language from the theater stage, which was decorated with the colors of the United States, 2nd Infantry Division, a one-star general's flag, and the colors of the battle groups and separate units of the division.

2nd Engineers' History Stirring Saga of Service

By 2nd Engr PIO

The history of the 2nd Engineer Battalion is a history of men who also faced battle. As individuals, the unit has known its great heroes and its brave men. As a recognized and honored part of an organization of war, the unit has known great honor always. It is a colorful, dramatic, and, sometimes, tragically heroic history.

It begins on August 3, 1861, when the decision was made to organize the Battalion of Engineers, Army of the United States. The Civil War was in its beginning days and the fierce battles of Peninsula, Antietam, Fredricksburg, Chancellorsville and numerous others lay ahead. In each of these battles, the engineers used their talents and abilities for their primary mission and, when needed, fought courageously as infantry support.

Bitter Years

Through the bitter years of the Civil War, the Battalion of Engineers fought valiantly and, at the end, held streamers for the aforementioned battles, as well as Virginia 1863, Wilderness, Spotsylvania, Cold Harbor, Petersburg and Appomattox.

The Nation lapsed into its great Reconstruction Era after the war and it was not until 1898 that the Battalion went to war again. This time, though besieged by insects, humidity, sultry weather and disease, as well as by the enemy, the unit was awarded streamers for its participation in the battles for the Cuban stronghold, Santiago, and for its work during the Philippine insurrection.

It was not until 15 years later that the Battalion was to flex its muscles once more. Under the command of General "Black-Jack" Pershing, it was reorganized into the 2nd Engineer Regiment on August 1, 1916 at Columbus, New Mexico. The bandits, headed by the wily and famed Pancho Villa, were pursued with vigor by these men and, for their efforts, the unit received a campaign streamer for this punitive expedition.

A year later, September 1917, an enlarged unit was assigned to the 2nd Infantry Division. It was this unit which was to distinguish itself during the bitter fighting in the trenches of the 1st World War. Two Croix de Guerres were awarded the unit by the government of France, both after battles in which the casualty rate of the hard fighting engineers rose steadily higher. At the end of the war and conflicts such as Meuse-Argonne, Aisne-Marne, Ile de France, and St. Mihiel, whose names will live forever in the annals of great battles, the Regiment had received a higher percentage of battle casualties than any other engineer unit in France.

With the advent of the 2nd World War, the 2nd Engineer Battalion, after intensive training in Fort Sam Houston and in England, took part in the great D-Day activities. On June 6, 1944, one officer and 69 enlisted men waded ashore on bloody Omaha Beach at H-hour to blow up obstacles in the path of assault boats and landing craft carrying the infantry. These 70 men were awarded the Bronze Arrowhead and the Distinguished Unit Citation.

At one point during the bitter fighting of the early days of the Northern France Campaign the war took on an aspect of a personal contest as coincidence pitted the men of the American 2nd Engineer Battalion against their counterparts of the German 2nd Engineer Battalion.

It was also during this period that Technician Grade Four Truman Kimbro, Company C, gave his life endeavoring to halt German tanks by placing mines directly under them. For this act of heroism, he was posthumously awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor.

At the end of the war the 2nd Engineer Battalion found itself in Pilsen, Czechoslovakia. It had been a war in which the Battalion had constructed bridges and removed minefields straight across the face of Europe. Always at the forefront of the battle, the Battalion's soldiers gained a reputation of being ready at all times to join their infantry comrades to repulse the enemy.

Sixty-five men had been killed in action, 59 were listed as missing in action, and 252 men had been wounded in the performance of their hazardous duties. Men in the Battalion were awarded one Medal of Honor, one Distinguished Service Cross, 27 Silver Stars, 85 Bronze Stars, and four Croix de Guerres. The Battalion was cited twice by the Belgian Army for action at Ardennes.

After a period of peace, conflict broke out on a peninsula in the Far East that few of the world's population had ever heard of. Its name was soon to be engraved in the annals of the Battalion's history in block letters of bright red. Korea!

The Battalion sailed from Fort Lewis in Washington to take their place in battle. Soon after their landing at Pusan, they spearheaded a drive north to the Yalu River. Then began the Chinese Communist intervention.

What followed was possibly the most heroic and tragic action of the Battalion's history.

The huge force of the advancing hordes of Chinese soon required the Division to withdraw down the peninsula. The men of the 2nd Engineer Battalion received the order: Hold!

For the five days between November 25th and the 30th, the Battalion's defenders viciously fought off the incredible numbers of the enemy. They were overwhelmed at Kuna-ri. Three hundred and twenty-nine officers and enlisted men were killed or captured.

A reconstituted 2nd Engineer Battalion was still in business when the final cease fire was given. Numerous battle streamers were awarded in addition to a second Distinguished Unit Citation, and two Republic of Korea Presidential Unit Citations.

The Battalion moved to Alaska upon being relieved in Korea. It was then transferred to Department of Army control in December of 1957.

On June 14, 1958, the Battalion was reactivated at Fort Benning, Georgia. Its mission was both training and engineer support of the 2nd Infantry Division.

Since its reactivation in 1958, approximately 11,000 trainees have been processed and trained by the Battalion. Engineer AIT cycles were trained for the replacement of personnel in the 10th Engineer Battalion in Germany.

Engineer Commands 100-Year Battalion

By 2nd Engr Bn PIO

Born to an Army family during World War I, Lieutenant Colonel Albro L. Parsons Jr., first saw Fort Benning in 1921, where his father was stationed until 1926. During this time he witnessed the construction of Doughboy Stadium, the "Old" Hospital and the first permanent quarters on Austin Loop (then called Block 14).

He entered the service immediately following graduation from Pennsylvania State College with a degree of bachelor of science in civil engineering. Later, he was awarded a master's degree in the same subject by Cornell University.

Schooling

His military schooling includes graduation from the Command and General Staff College, and a non-resident course, "Management of the National Economy," of the Industrial College of the Armed Forces.

He participated in eight campaigns in the European Theatre of Operations with the 1st Infantry Division, and three in Korea with IX Corp and the 3rd Infantry Division.

For this service he has been awarded the Silver Star with Oak Leaf Cluster, the Purple Heart with Oak Leaf Cluster, the Bronze Star with two Oak Leaf Clusters and Valor Device, and the Army Commendation Medal.

Various assignments prior to taking command of the 2nd Engineer Battalion in October 1960 include Loading and Discharge Officer of all vessels of the Task Force Landing on Omaha Beach on D-Day 1944; Chief of the Technical Division, Military Liaison Committee to the Atomic Energy Commission; Commander of the 10th Engineer Combat Battalion; Atomic Weapons Test Officer for the Continental Army Command Board Two; Assistant Chief of Civil Works for Southwestern Divisions, Office of the Chief of Engineers; and Azores Area Engineer.

Lieutenant Colonel Parsons is married to the former Gloria Sisney of Springfield, Missouri. Their two children are Tyler Barnett, 15, and Scott Albro, 3.

Col. Parsons is a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers and the Society of American Military Engineers.

He holds a professional engineer's license in Kentucky and is a member of the Kentucky Society of Professional Engineers.

2nd Div Engineers Are 100 Years Old

By 2nd Engr Bn PIO

The 2nd Engineer Battalion today will observe the 100th anniversary of its founding.

Brigadier General Charles H. White Jr., commanding general, will be the reviewing officer at a parade today at 2:30 p.m., at Engineer Field.

Picnic

Tomorrow, the members of the battalion and their families will gather for a day of fun, contests and a picnic.

Founded in 1861, the battalion received a letter from the Department of the Army officially designating August 1 as Unit Day. The official activities and recognition of the anniversary, however, were set for today and tomorrow.

A number of displays at Engineer Field will indicate the variety of engineer tasks and skills. Among the displays will be a water point display, a 38-foot bridge, a medical display; field kitchen and a gin pole with a boom derrick.

Games featuring engineer skills will include log-cutting and spike driving, along with the traditional tug-of-war. The public is invited.

Kenneth Belieu's Speech to 'Indianhead' Convention

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Published here are excerpts of the address by the Assistant Secretary of the Navy, Kenneth Belieu, at the 40th annual reunion of the 2nd Infantry "Indianhead" Division Association held in Kansas City, Missouri. Mr. Belieu served with the 2nd Infantry Division during World War II)

There are those who imply that this country is worn out and tired. They are completely mistaken! There are those who still fit over, over there"—and a President named Wilson saying — "The world must be made safe for Democracy."

We have not forgotten the names of Hirohito, Mussolini nor a Nazi called Hitler saying "It is the last territorial claim I have to make in Europe". We can sometimes still hear the sound of a Chinese bugle, the rattle of a machine gun, and the crump of a mortar on the Korean ridge just behind us.

But that which we remember most of all—that which we cherish so dearly—is the common cause we shared—and still cherish. If this were not so we would not be here tonight.

If we did not believe in that for which we have fought—and if we did not think the future is worth defending—we'd not be here either.

Two Attempts

In our collective lifetimes we have witnessed two international attempts to stifle freedom on a world wide basis—these we have defeated. Now we are faced with a third threat.

The first two we met with armed conflict. The third is more insidious. True, we fought the threat once in Korea — but the solution does not necessarily reside on the field of global battle — (Although on this point let no one doubt either our will or our ability to defend ourselves).

The solution here, while requiring the constant maintenance of unquestioned military strength also requires eternal vigilance and effort on the ways and means of making democracy work.

It requires that we not only set the example here at home, but that we also constantly seek ways to work with our allies and the uncommitted nations toward this end.

It is not enough that you and I—as we leave here—rest on the memories of past deeds. It is not enough that we pay our taxes and participate in the strength of our military forces.

It is required that we keep our minds alert to world conditions and that we keep alive our cherished institutions — a vital living awareness of the value of our institutions—a belief in God and Country and the principles of true democracy if you please — else past deeds and military strength alone may well be of no avail.

We have now, 16 years after World War I and 12 years after the signing of the NATO treaty, a situation where it is the moral responsibility of, especially the Western nations, to achieve unity of purpose — unity of action — not only in the interest of self preservation — and in the interest of World peace — but in the interest of raising the standard of living throughout the world.

In response to this responsibility our country took action last fall in manner somewhat unusual. Because it is a fresh idea it hasn't been too widely publicized and because — it is an example of a course of action other than military—ther than by formal governmental procedure, I thought you'd be interested.

Citizens Commission

I refer to the creation of the United States Citizens Commission on NATO created by public Law 86-719 last fall.

This provides for appointment by the President of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of a commission of 20 U.S. citizens — equally divided between the two political parties. While the commission is officially constituted, by law, its members are restricted by the government and are free to act as individuals.

The members of the commission are representative of our most outstanding leaders. Notably among them are former Secretary of State, Christian Herter and former Under Secretary of State William Clayton.

The purpose of the commission is to find ways, in cooperation with similar commissions of the NATO countries, for greater cooperation and unity — to the end that democratic freedom may be promoted by economic and political means.

You, the comrades, with whom I have served and proudly share I know, my conviction that we must explore every avenue by which free-thinking men can be united in the common desire for world peace. That we must strive by democratic means and mutual cooperation to seek a better world — A world in which the future brings the hope of every man for eternal freedom — and the right to proclaim this freedom.

Memorial

Friends, today we gather in solemn ceremony to honor those of the 2nd Infantry Division who died that this nation and free men everywhere might live. In doing so, we honor ourselves.

We reaffirm our faith in freedom's future—and this is what they who have gone before would want. It is only proper that words spoken here — at this selected gathering—should pick up the ever vibrant echo of deeds past — so that we of the present can better keep the faith.

This 2nd Infantry Division — born in World War I — came into being on November 18, 1917, in France. Unique in spirit, and privileged in organization, it consisted then of two Army Infantry Regiments — the 9th and 23rd — and the 5th and 6th Marine Regiments.

While its structure and personnel have changed with the decades and conflicts — its "second to none" spirit never has. The ever increasing list of valorous deeds speak in forceful, quiet dignity and from the hearts of those who served.

We who fought in Europe had — as we prepared to land on Normandy beaches in June of 1944 (17 years ago) — the example of those who stopped the Kaiser at Chateau Thierry in June 1918 (43 years ago). — How could we fail? We had the testimony of Belleau Wood, of Soissons, of St. Mihiel. In Europe we had the memories of Trevieres, St. Lo, Brest, St. Vith — Remagen — Liepzig—and Pilsen. In Korea—the 2nd blood proudly with its French, Dutch, Turkish, Thai, and Korean brothers.

At times badly mauled — but ever defeated — it always took to fight again — more vigorously — with greater strength and with increasing valor. A shining example to its tradition — keeping faith with those who went before, holding high the standard for hose who are now — and are to be.

If you and I, all free men, all Americans, remember these things. . .If we take this concept to home, to love, honor and hold fast, then our attendance here at this convention is not only a memorial to what was — but a light to the future.

We, the living, hold the key o the future in our hands. f ts the living daily example f each one that is the life lood of n democracy. . .

But the past sometimes hows the way. As we take eave until another year—let is remember these things.

And perhaps with Kipling ay:

"The tumult and the shouting dies;

The captains and the Kings depart.

Still stands Thy ancient sacrifice;

An humble and a contrite heart.

Lord God of Hosts, be with us yet,

Lest we forget, lest we forget."

Manchus' Busby to Play In Army Golf Tourney

BY 9TH INF. PIO

A sharp-shooting automatic rifleman and veteran golfer will be going for top honors in the Third Army Golf Championship to be held at Ft. Jackson, S. C., August 28-31.

He is Private First Class Bruce Busby, a clerk typist assigned to the medical platoon, 9th Infantry Aid Station.

New York Native

The 25-year - old linksman came to the 9th Infantry on temporary duty with the Marksmanship Detachment in January. A native of Bronxville, New York, Busby has been in the Army only 14 months but has already finished high in two major Army golf tournaments.

In early April he was a member of a four-man Fort Benning team which placed third in the Tri-State Golf Tournament at Parris Island, South Carolina; and just recently he placed third in the Fort Benning Open tourney held this month.

The deeply-tanned golfer is the only amateur from Fort Benning to qualify for the Third Army Tournament. The top four finishers in the Fort Benning Open will represent the post at the Fort Jackson tourney.

Busby shoots in the mid-70s and has been playing golf since he was eight years old. In this time he has won a number of club championships but says that he plays only for his own "pleasure and relaxation."

A member of the Main Post Golf Club, the young golfer visits the greens only two or three times a week. "I hope I'll get to play more regularly in preparation for the tournament this month," he added.

Other Interests

Busby's interests run in other areas besides golf. Although a two-year varsity golfer with Hobart College in Geneva, New York, he also was a two-year varsity center mid-fieldman on the college's lacrosse team.

The young athlete is also an expert marksman with the Browning Automatic Rifle. He teamed with Specialist Four James Arnold of Company E, 9th Infantry to win the 2nd Infantry Division Commanding General's Championship in January.

Only three months later, he and Specialist Four James Washington of the 9th Infantry Weapons Pool placed fourth in the Third Army Browning Automatic Rifle Championships and in June, the two 9th Infantry sharp-shooters placed ninth in the All-Army Browning Automatic Rifle Championship.

A college graduate with a major in economics, Busby says he has never shot a hole-in-one, but added that he has "come close" several times. Asked about his plans for the future, the young linksman said he planned to go into industrial science after completing his service obligation.

What about golf? "I play golf for enjoyment. I'm not good enough to even consider going into the professional ranks," Busby said modestly.

Athletics Program Picks Up at Signal

By 122nd Sig Bn PIO

The athletics and recreation program of Company A, 122nd Signal Battalion, is gathering steam under the guidance of Lieutenant Arnold L. Ross and Sergeant Kenneth Dinsmore.

The program, which includes two hours of organized athletics on Wednesdays and Fridays, is designed to offer a wide selection of activities; including swimming, volleyball, basketball, and softball.

Teams have been organized in softball and volleyball for participation against other teams in the battalion.

Thus far, Company A has won three games and lost one in volleyball. The softball team has recorded two wins.

Signal Platoon Displays at TIS

A battle group area support platoon from Company B, 122nd Signal Battalion held a static display recently for The Infantry School.

The platoon, under Lieutenant Francis K. Kowalski and Staff Sergeant Jimmy Hamilton, provided the students of the Infantry School with information on what is available to a battle group in the way of Signal Communications.

Matches to Be Played At MOOM Golf Course

BY GEORGE HORD

Plans were announced this week for the 2nd Infantry Division 1961 Golf Tournament to be held at the Main Officers Open Mess Golf Course, August 11 to September 5.

Entries will be on an individual basis and there will be no team championship. All military personnel assigned to the division are eligible to participate.

Officials

Officials and scorers for the tournament will be furnished by the 2nd Division Special Services officer.

The competition of the tournament will be conducted in accordance with the 1961 United States Golf Association Rules and local ground rules established by the golf committee consisting of the golf professional at the Main Officers Open Mess Golf Course, the Division Special Services Officer and the assistant division Special Services officer, who will act on all matters pertaining to the tournament.

The tournament will be conducted in three divisions — Open Division, Senior Division and Handicap Division.

The Open Division will be determined by playing 72 holes during August 11 to September 5 with the low gross for the 72 holes determining the Division Open Champion.

Senior Division participants must have reached the age of 45 on or before the opening date of the tournament. These participants will play 72 holes during the same period with the low gross determining the Division Senior Champion.

Personnel Eligible

Personnel eligible to compete in the Seniors event may enter the open division if they so elect, but by doing so, will forfeit their right to compete in the Senior Division.

Three flights of the 72-hole handicap division are to be played with the low net determining the winner and runner-up. These flights are: B Flight 8-17 handicap (inclusive); C Flight 18-27 handicap (inclusive); and D Flight 28-36 handicap, (inclusive).

Participants in the handicap division must have a posted handicap at either the Main Officers Open Mess Golf Course or the Sand Hill Golf Club. These handicaps must be based on a minimum of ten rounds of 18 holes per round and must be posted prior to entering the tournament.

Play in all four divisions of the tournament will be in foursomes.

In the event of a tie for first or second place, a play-off will determine the winner.

Entry Deadline

Personnel desiring to participate in the golf tournament are to submit their entries in writing to the Division Special Services Officer, Building 3019, not later than 12 p.m. today.

Entries will not be accepted after today.

However, individuals assigned to the division after today may compete if they golf and are ruled eligible by the golf committee.

Entry forms may be picked up from unit Athletic and Recreation Offices or from the Special Services Office.

Each participant will provide his own individual equipment. The Division Special Services Officer will, contingent on funds available, furnish balls for play in all divisions.

Pairings Posted

The pairings will be posted in the Division Special Services Office August 9 and individuals paired will play together throughout the tournament unless changed by the Special Services Officer.

All rounds are to be played during the tournament date and time and date of rounds to be played will be the responsibility of the foursome paired.

Upon completion of each round of play, a legible score card, signed and attested will be deposited in the 2nd Infantry Division Special Service Box, located in the Golf Pro Shop at the Fort Benning Main Officers Open Mess Golf Course.

The 10th Artillery Redlegs edged the 428th Medical Battalion, 7-5, to move into a three-way tie for second place in Major Unit Baseball competition Tuesday night.

George Ricketts made his first appearance on the mound to collect the victory with the help of relievers Joe Winchester and Dave Johnson.

The winners blasted out nine hits for seven runs. The big blow for the Redlegs was Richard Ruark's three-run homer in the first inning, which put his team ahead, 3-0.

Filbert Penaflor, Harry Forenz and Franklin Walker also contributed two safeties each for the Redlegs. John Orsini rapped a three-run triple in the eighth inning, pacing the losers.

The Redlegs nipped the 58th Infantry, 4-3, last Wednesday, extending their winning streak to three straight. Paul Thomas pitched five innings and gave up two hits and one run. Winchester went two innings, giving up two hits and one run.

Johnson took over in the eighth and pitched hitless ball in getting credit for the victory, while Bill Carey absorbed the defeat.

Robert Steward smashed two doubles to set the pace for the winners. Freddie Morris collected a pair of singles for the losers.

The Student Brigade copped its fifth win Sunday afternoon, handing the 58th Infantry their fifth defeat in the second half of baseball play by a score of 5-3.

A total of 10 hits were collected in the game, TSB picking up four and the 58th Infantry rapping out six, all singles except James Reid's one-run double for the 58th in the seventh inning.

Carroll Emery posted his 10th Victory with the help of Hill's relief in the eighth inning.

The Student Brigade blasted the 58th hurler, Bob Borowski, for three hits and four runs in the first inning. Carey came in and held The Student Brigade to one hit and one run for the rest of the game. Borowski was charged with the loss.

In another game, the 29th Infantry clipped the 428th Medics by a margin of 8-5 for their first victory. John Gerrold hurled the victory as Stethin Foote suffered the defeat.

Second Lt. Jay Mitchell rapped five hits for five trips to the plate for the winners. Second Lt. Guy Schottler also hit a home run in the seventh inning for the 29th. Foote's one-run homer in the first inning was the big blast for the losers.

The 151st Engineers defeated the 29th Infantry, 9-5, at Gowdy Field on Sunday night. Martin Leicht collected the win and 2nd Lt. John Henning was tagged with the setback.

The Engineers collected eight hits and eight runs for their fourth victory. The losers smashed out nine hits for five runs. O'Neil's two doubles and a single and Reez's two singles paced the winners at the plate. Al Spencer's triple and single were the big guns for the losers.

King's Pond Reopens to Anglers, Is One of Favorites At Benning

King's Pond, long one of the favorite fishing spots at Fort Benning, once again is the scene of crowds of hopeful anglers intent on catching their limit of bluegills or bass.

The pond, largest of all bodies of water on the post (75 acres in area), was drained in September, 1959, for the purpose of enlarging and deepening the shore line and restocking with the most desirable game fish. This also resulted in eliminating undesirable fish that inhabited the pond.

In November, 1959, the water was of sufficient volume to permit the planting of 75,000 bream or bluegills. During June, 1960, the restocking program was resumed by the planting of 7,500 bass.

To stimulate the growth of the proper plant life for fish culture, $3,000 was spent in fertilizing the pond in 1960. The present plan is to spend a like sum in 1961 for additional fertilization.

The funds for this program have been raised by the Fish and Game Management Association of Fort Benning through membership dues and other monies received from such fund raising activities as turkey shoots or fish and skish contests.

To increase the amount of shore line available for fishermen without boats, a peninsula was built out into the pond. The bed of the pond was deepened along the shore around the perimeter to make more good, sufficiently deep water within reach of the shore.

To improve the camping and recreational aspects of the area around the pond, seven acres of land have been cleared and more picnic tables are being added. Also added are fire places, refuse disposal receptacles and other camping facilities.

During the first two days after the recent opening, 8,749 fish were taken. They weighed a total of 2,407 pounds. An average of 1,500 people per day for the first two days, tried their skill and none weot away empty handed, officials reported.

King's Pond is open to dues paying members and their families from 12 noon to 6 p.m. Saturdays and Sundays only. This restriction on hours will be lifted if and when it is determined that the danger of the pond being depleted of fish has passed.

A fish biologist from the Fish and Wildlife Service is making the survey to determine when it is safe to extend the hours of fishing.

Football Team Needs Seven More Players

By Pfc Joe Kuchera

"If we get seven good ball players, we're going to have a good ball club," said Doughboy head coach Capt. Leaton C. Cofield as the 1961 Fort Benning team goes through daily workouts at the new practice field.

According to Cofield, the team is going through two-a-day practice sessions. The mornings include conditioning and priming of the fundamentals of the gridiron and the afternoons are devoted to scrimmages.

"Of the 90 or so men we started out with at the beginning of the pre-session practices, we now have only 28 men still holding on," remarked the new Doughboy mentor. "Of course there are a few boys looking good, but we still have a need for some good ball players in the key backfield and end positions."

The native of Jet, Okla., said if he could get two good ends, he could continue to build the club from there and work it into one of the best post teams.

"But I'm a believer in getting some good ends and building the team from there," Cofield declared. "Somehow we just aren't getting the men out to practice."

Some of the returnees from last year have shown well this season and could be holding the team together as it is right now, officials said. Among top appearances are those of 1st Lt. Frank Farella, 1st Lt. Al Aucoin and Pfc Donald Cooksey.

Mel Ott Award

Ernie Banks, slugging outfielder-shortstop of the Chicago Cubs, has been presented the Mel Ott award for topping the Nationals in the home run category. He swatted 41 during the last season.

2,400TH HIT

The Chicago Cubs' Richie Ashburn got is 2,400th hit of his career, making him number 2 in total hits of active major league ball players.

Today's Sportrait

Carroll Emery, the strong righthander for The Student Brigade, has a vast background in athletics.

During his four years at Piedmont (S. C.) High, he earned 14 letters in sports.

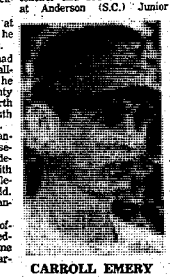
While a sophomore he had the honor of being on the all-state basketball team. Also he made the Greenville all-county five and played for the North team in the annual North-South game after his senior year.

At Wofford College, Spartanburg, S. C., he played baseball four years. He was described as a steady man with the stick and having a "rifle-shot" throw from the outfield. He also was intramural manager at Wofford.

After graduating from Wofford, Emery joined the Piedmont Rangers who became champions of the Western Carolina League.

Emery then accepted a position as physical education teacher and basketball coach at Anderson (S.C.) Junior High. He also served as baseball coach of Anderson's Boys High during the 1958-59 school year.

Last year at Fort Benning he was outfielder - pitcher for The Student Brigade. He had seven hits during the Third Army playoffs.



More recently he played guard for The Student Brigade's basketball team.

This baseball season he has been mainly a pitcher but occasionally playing the outfield.

When he finishes his military obligation, Emery intends to return to teaching and coaching.

His athletic versatility lives up to a warning issued by a Wofford College professor:

"Don't teach the boy a sport he has never played. He'll be whipping you after a couple of games!"

Little Leaguers Visit Post, See Demonstrations

Approximately 140 Babe Ruth League baseball players who participated in the state tournament in Columbus August 1 to 3 toured The Infantry Center August 2.

The youngsters viewed a demonstration of dismounted drill and obedience by the 26th Infantry Scout Dog Platoon, 1st Infantry Brigade, in Bolling Bowl. Next they went to Lawson Army Aviation Command for briefings on the Army's fixed-wing aircraft and helicopters.

The party ended its stay at the post with a visit to the Infantry Museum.

Jim Adair of Columbus was in charge of arrangements for the tour.

North Carolina trout fishing is enough to make flat-lander's eyes pop—and my orbs are just getting back to normal after a two-week session in the hills.

A Tar Heel trout of 12 inches is just about "keeper size" according to host Denver Love, ex-member of Aircraft Supply at Lawson Field and now retired.

"We don't consider a trout as a trout if it don't completely cover a hand-saw blade," Love says, and from what I saw I believe him.

Love rassled one such "blade" all over the Nantahala River before it got purchase on a rock and snapped his six-pound leader with no effort. Love swore the lunker was as long as his arm and must have weighed in the vicinity of six or seven pounds—and again I believed him.

Fishermen in that River area have pinpointed the lairs of four different fish which have foiled all angler attempts to land them. Every week or so, the report came in that Angler X fought Fish B for so many minutes before losing him.

One of the four, a big brown trout, is known to be in the 30 to 35-inch class while another brown some 10 miles up the bill is estimated to be 25 inches or better.

Add to these the number of yet unknown trout of possible like size and streams full of fat 14, 16 and 18-inchers, both rainbow and brown, and it'll give you some idea of Tar Heel trout fishing — yet, believe it or not, some of those natives will come down into Georgia to go fishing!

Two different fellas told me that they hit for streams northwest of Dahlonega between the Ranger Camp and Blue Ridge when they want a mess of lunker trout. It could be that they've grown tired of fighting for North Carolina trout which live in streams which are not always easily accessible.

In fact, a roaring mountain stream, even if its banks aren't choked by rhododendron and laurel, offers dangerous potential in its speed of current and slippery rocks—and I know where of I speak.

Thunderstorms limited fishing to a great degree and on no day did we catch our limit of 10 trout — but neither did any one else.

Love's titian-haired daughter, Patricia, landed an 18-inch rainbow which made the mistake of striking at a lure cast near a sunken rock and from that time on two Regulars, one active and one retired, didn't have too much to say. Neither were further angling efforts of the two helped by a female giggle every once in a while from the third member of the party.

Anybody catch any lunkers out of Harp's??

Retired Sergeant Cited For Golf Course Work

An unusual citation for an individual, in recognition of an outstanding job well done, is being published this week to recognize the devotion to duty on the part of MSgt (Ret.) Lester Lawrence as superintendent of the Main Officers' Open Mess Golf Course.

On July 11, 1929, work was begun on an 18-hole course on the post. It extended on each side of Lumpkin Road and south of Baltzell Avenue. The greens were made of cottonseed hulls and water was obtained from the post engineer water system and transported in trucks.

Golfers were rather scarce, too, at this time, with an average of two or three foursomes per weekday afternoon. The present general location of the golf course was begun in 1932 with an 18-hole course.

A water sprinkler system was inaugurated in 1939. In December, 1950, the course was expanded to 27 holes by adding seven holes across the 11st Division Road. In December, 1959, the course was enlarged to the present 36-hole course.

During this evolution of the present Main Officers' Open Mess Golf Course, Sgt Lawrence has been the guiding light, having been responsible for the planning and the supervision of construction and maintenance of the course from the beginning until the present.

The maintenance cost per hole, for this course, is among the lowest in the south, yet the course is rated as being among the better courses available in the same area.

The coming Professional Amateur tournament scheduled for Sunday will be designated to honor Sgt. Lawrence's outstanding service in making the present 36-hole course a reality.

A proclamation has been issued by Brig. Gen. C. H. White Jr., deputy commanding general of The Infantry Center, setting forth Sgt Lawrence's unusual performance of duty in making the present course a reality.

He further states that the awards will be presented to the winners by Sgt Lawrence in honor of his service.

Pan-Pacific Surgical Meet

Medics Make Progress In Treatment of Injuries

During the recent Pan-Pacific Surgical Conference, an Air Force doctor described the progress that has been made in treatment of sports injuries.

Major A. E. Minyard told the conference at Clark AFB, Philippines, the myth that surgery for a knee injury will sideline a man for the remainder of an athletic season has been exploded. Dr. Minyard cited the example of two Clark AB football players with knee injuries who underwent corrective surgery and returned to active play the same season.

"Prior to that time it was generally considered a necessary evil to consult the physician and nearly inevitably the end to athletics for the player," the doctor noted.

Other points he made concerned trainers who keep players going despite injuries, which often causes delay in treatment resulting in the end of the players career. Also, Dr. Minyard said the practice of placing ice on injuries until a medical examination can be made can result "in marked swelling, hemorrhage and muscle spasm."

The doctor said that at Clark AB, football accounted for 61 admissions, baseball 55 and basketball 27.

Three major sports showed the most frequent injured area is the knee region with a total of 51 cases; the ankle followed with 41; hand injuries, mostly minor, accounted for 31, the medical officer explained.

He noted that his profession in general "has had a poor knowledge of the methods of training athletes and has had little understanding of the mechanics involved that have resulted in injuries.

However, he said that during the past decade "there has been a keen and growing interest by orthopedists, physicians, coaches, and trainers in preventing athletic injuries and rehabilitating the athlete who has been injured."

Unofficial

Sawfish Record

When "compleat anglers" get together to swap tall yarns of rod and reel, Roy L. Nichols will be in there armed with snapshots to prove that his record catch didn't get away.

But a technicality makes Nichols' monster sawfish, which he landed after a two and one-half hour fight on Padre Island, south of Corpus Christi, Tex., an unofficial world record. A line was used to pull it ashore.

This ruled it out of official classification by the National Fish and Game Association, although Nichols' sawfish, some eight feet wide and weighing a whopping 1,000 pounds, exceeded the world record on the books.

The NFGA record for the sawfish is 754 pounds and a length of 16 feet, nine inches. Nichols' catch measured 17 feet, five inches. Its saw alone was 47 inches long.

The sawfish was caught with a 14-0 Peen reel, a 120 pound test Dacron line and a 25-foot, 600 pound test leader. Nichols used shark for bait.

Floor Show Set For Tomorrow At Crain Hall

Crain Hall NCO Open Mess presents "Calendar Capers", tomorrow evening at 8 p.m. This schmaltzing floor show consists of the versatile Bob Barrett, M. C., who carries the show with aplomb from the smash opening to the finale. His versatility takes many forms as he sings, tap dances, tells stories and does impersonations.

Barbara Michaels, singer, enchants audiences with her style. She has just closed at the Tower Club, Hot Springs, Ark., and other recent engagements have been at the Tradewinds, Chicago; and the Lake Club in Springfield, Ohio.

Betty Andre has vitality plus and demonstrates it by doing the charleston, varsity drag and Hindu dance from "The King and I".

Music for the entire production will be played by the show orchestra, which also plays for dancing and listening pleasure.

BOOKS in REVIEW

THUNDERBALL by Ian Fleming. (Viking, 1961)

In Thunderball Ian Fleming presents the blueprint for monstrous crime that could be just around the corner in history. James Bond is in disgrace. His monthly medical reports are critical of the high living that is ruining his health and he is packed off for a fortnight to a nature-cure clinic to be tuned up to his former pitch of exceptional physical fitness.

ADAM'S CASE by Michael Underwood. (Doubleday, 1961)

Young Adam Cape's first case at the Old Bailey was a simple one, "Wounding with intent" — yet a formidable opposing lawyer and warning notes that his client was lying unnerved him. Events rapidly took a far more ominous turn — with Adam himself suspected of murder!

DEAR MR. BROWN by Harry Fosdick. (Harper, 1961)

For the person who has doubts about religion — and seeks a firmer faith. Mr. Brown is a person growing up into a 'mature' faith (and this can happen at any age). When the book begins, he is on the verge of giving up his religion. So much of his experience, so many of the things he reads and hears, seem to contradict the Christian faith.

SHORT NOVELS OF DOSTOEVSKY by Dostoevsky. (Dial, 1960)

Most well-read Americans are familiar with the work of Dostoevsky but they know him only for such long novels as, "Crime and Punishment", "The Idiot", "The Possessed" or "The Brothers Karamazov". Few, however, are aware of his shorter and equally readable books. To fill this gap, this book contain six of the great prose master's short novels.

THE CASE OF THE SPURIOUS SPINSTER by Erle S. Gardner. (Morrow, 1961)

Although Amelia Corning, owner of the Corning mine interest, was confined to a wheel chair, no one had the misconception that she was a gentle, little old lady. Half-blind and crippled, she might be, but lesser characters quailed before her steel-trap mind and razor-sharp tongue — and Susan Fisher was no exception.

Miniature Review

Non-commissioned officers of The Student Brigade recently held a miniature review honoring ten retiring TSB sergeants.

Col. Otto R. Koch Jr., brigade commander, presented the Army Commendation Medal to each of the retiring NCOs.

AVIATION HISTORY

Lt. Frank P. Lahm was the first Army passenger carried by a "Wright Flyer" during trials at Fort Myer, Va., September 9, 1908.

CHORUS DIRECTOR . . . Second Lt. Robert F. Danner has been selected as the new director of the Infantry Chorus. A 1960 graduate of Wheaton (Ill.) College, he has a bachelor's degree in music education. He participated in the college band, was director of the school's choir and was a member of the Church of Chicago Choir.

THE WHOLE QUOTE

I am tired and sick of war. Its glory is all moonshine. It is only those who have neither fired a shot nor heard the shrieks and groans of the wounded who cry aloud for blood, more vengeance, more desolation. War is hell . . . Gen. W. T. Sherman.

58th Infantry Sponsors Show On MAH Radio

The 1st Armored Rifle Battalion, 58th Infantry, 1st Infantry Brigade, is now the sponsor of a one hour rise jockey program which can be heard every Wednesday evening at Martin Army Hospital over the facilities of radio station WMAH.

The format is one of music and news and is directed particularly to patients there who are members of the 58th Infantry. The men get to hear their own requests as well as those of their friends in the Battalion and they receive news and other items of general interest and importance concerning the battalion.

If the program continues with its present success the 58th hopes to sponsor continued programs.

Scouts Hosted by 58th Infantry

The 1st Armored Rifle Battalion, 58th Infantry, 1st Infantry Brigade, acted as host to 42 Explorer Scouts visiting the post from Camp Mobley, Georgia on July 21.

SOCIALLY MINDED

"I'm clean," said the man in Raleigh, N.C. But it didn't help him; police charged him with shoplifting — two bottles of deodorant.

Frank Bonnell, camp director, acted as chaperon while Sgt. Gregory McCabb, of the 2nd Infantry Division and asst. scout master of Fort Benning, acted as guide.

The group was met by 1st Lt. Vasik S. Baddy, of Company C, 66th Armor, and shown through an armor display in the 58th Infantry area.

DON'T take chances! Out-of-line or unbalanced wheels cause hard steering and "road wander"—dangerous in emergencies. Unbalanced or misaligned wheels are expensive, too, because they grind rubber off your tires, cutting down mileage. They can ruin steering and wheel assemblies. Come in today and let our service department check your wheels with our precision John Bean Wheel Alignment and Balancing System. Savings in tire and chassis wear will more than pay for the job.

Jacqueline Cochran's View

'Space Woman' Next Says 1st Lady of Air

LOS ANGELES (AFPS) — "Women drive cars and planes as well as men do, and women will go into space shortly after men do." That's the conviction of famed aviatrix Jacqueline Cochran, a lieutenant colonel in the Air Force Reserve.

And she adds, "I wager that before I hang up my helmet I'll be going into space too . . . I became the first woman to cross the sonic barrier, five and one-half years after Chuck Yeager (AF Col. Charles Yeager) did it in 1947.

"It shouldn't take that long for an American woman to leap into space. Certainly not if another country does it first," said the flier who visited this post, last February for the Robert P. Patterson Memorial Award ceremony.

Miss Cochran, as America's first lady of the air, speaks with authority. She was an official timer for Cdr. Alan Shepard when the Navy astronaut made his historic space ride last May.

The determined organizer of the WWII WASPS— women pilots of military planes in non-combat operations — is equally set on getting space rights for her sex. She has set up a screening program for space women, conducted by the Lovelace Foundation which gave medical tests to Cdr. Shepherd and his fellow astronauts.

Women who apply for screening must be credited with 1,200 to 1,500 flying hours, rated on multi-engined planes and instruments and be under 35.

She adds that the program, the same as that devised for the astronauts, will continue until a dozen women candidates for space have been chosen. So far, six applicants have made the grade in the grueling physical and mental tests, with top honors going to Geraldyn Cobb of Oklahoma credited with more than 7,300 flying hours.

Of her own space ambitions, Miss Cochran, who began flying in 1932, says: "I may not be the first. But after living through two eras of aviation, I can't imagine that the space age will pass me by."

WITH G-1 . . . Capt. Russel M. Brami is the new chief of the Personnel Services Division, G-1, succeeding Major Charles E. Taylor, who is attending Command and General Staff College. Capt. Brami last served as adjutant of the 1st Armored Rifle Battalion, 58th Infantry, 1st Infantry Brigade.

12 Military Officers Test Radiation Effects

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AFPS) —Twelve officers selected from the Army, Navy, and Air Force are undergoing training to test the bio-medical effects of intense nuclear radiation.

Training with a unique type of atomic reactor, the specially-selected officers will form the cadre for the staff of the new Armed Forces' Radiobiology Research Institute which is under construction at the National Naval Medical Center in Maryland.

Involving a $5-million over-all investment, the Institute is being established by the Defense Atomic Support Agency.

During the 10-week training, officers will use General Atomic's operating prototype of the new-concept TRIGA Mark-F "pulsing" reactor to be installed as the primary research tool of the institute.

The Mark-F TRIGA, because of its self regulating characteristics and built-in safety features, is able to simulate under controlled laboratory conditions the bursts of intense neutron and gamma radiation associated with explosions of nuclear weapons.

These "pulses" will help scientists to determine the extent of biological radiation damage for varying doses, rates and distances of exposure.

Investigations also will be made into the use of controlled, safe amounts of nuclear energy for the treatment of cancer and other diseases, as well as in the fields of health, physics and radiation shielding.

When complete, the institute's initial staff will consist of commissioned officers, seven from each service, and the reactor facility will have a staff of approximately 100, including both military and civilian personnel.

Army Capt. Wins Car, $60,500

SCHOFIELD BARRACKS, Hawaii (AFPS)— If Army Capt. Lloyd A. Epperson had to retire tomorrow, financial headaches would be the least of his problems.

It's two years since he entered a national contest which called for solving a mathematical puzzle by use of numerical values for letters — a kind of computer-type tick-tack-toe for the brainy set.

Now the sponsor has notified Capt. Epperson that he's winner—after seven ties with unknown competitors.

The prize: 25 $1,000 U. S. Savings Bonds, a certified check for $25,000, and a spanking-new compact car.

Uncle Sam will, of course, claim a good share of the hefty take—nearly $30,000, but the 25th Infantry Division officer isn't begrudging it. A career soldier and a combat veteran of WWII and Korea, he's looking ahead to retirement three years from now.

56 AF Cadets Graduate After Airborne Training

Fifty-six Air Force Academy cadets received silver insignes of qualified parachutists yesterday when they completed three weeks of basic Airborne training.

Graduation was held following the fifth and final jump on Fryar Field in the morning.

Members of the academy's 550 man Class of 1964 which visited The Infantry School June 27 to July 6, the graduating cadets represent a group which gave up summer vacation to take Airborne training.

Joining 12 Army and Reserve enlisted personnel, the cadets spent the first week of training, conducted by the Basic Airborne Training Committee of The School's Airborne Air Mobility Department, learning the mission of the trained parachutist and the rudiments of his advanced skill.

Ground work included physical conditioning, adjustment of the parachute harness, proper parachute landing falls, proper departure techniques and jumping from a 35-foot training tower.

The second week of training saw the cadets master tricks of disengaging from a parachute after landing in a high wind and jumping from The Infantry School's 250-foot training towers in preparation for jumps from aircraft in flight. Five successful jumps from an altitude of some 1,250 feet are required for students before the coveted Parachutist's Badge is awarded.

Folding the canopy of his parachute into its bag after making his second qualifying jump, Cadet Lanny Burrell grinned and said the training was terrific, but the Georgia heat is something which makes the Colorado hills inviting.

The group is returning to the Air Force Academy in Colorado Springs.

Makes Twice In a Row For Blankenship

Sfc William B. Blankenship of Fort Benning won his second national pistol championship in a row August 3 when he won the 1961 pistol crown at Camp Perry, Ohio, with a grand aggregate score of 2,631-119X out of a possible 2,700 points.

Competing against over 2,500 of the country's ranking pistol marksmen from civilian, police and armed forces shooting circles, Sgt. Blankenship totaled his winning score with 2 Center Fire and a .45 caliber weapons to come within five points of the all-time National Matches record he, himself, set in 1960 competition.

Third in History

Blankenship's return of the Harrison Trophy to the post's Army Advanced Marksmanship Unit marks the third time in the history of modern pistol competition that the national championship has been won by a shooter more than once. Detroit's police inspector Harry Reeves and the Army's Sgt. Maj. Huelet (Joe) Benner of West Point, have accomplished the feat in previous years since 1949.

Commenting upon Blankenship's shooting ability Inspector Reeves said that the Army shooter's competitive skill with the handgun was literally fantastic.

"Greatest" Shooter

"There's no question in my mind that Blankenship isn't the greatest pistol shooter who ever lived," Reeves told a group of shooters at Andrews, N. C., recently.

The USAAMU marksman, who holds the all-time American pistol record of 2,659 x 2,700 points, was credited by Reeves as accomplishing the impossible when the score was fired in Indiana competition

Operation 'Swift Strike' Forces Clash This Week

Operation Swift Strike, the nation's largest peace-time military exercise since World War II, started through its first paces last Sunday as some 15,000 paratroopers from the 101st and 82nd Airborne Divisions, tons of equipment and numerous Strategic Army Corps (STRAC) units moved to the field.

Elements of the 428th Medical Battalion, Lawson Army Aviation Command and the 2nd Infantry Division are supporting this operation.

Using Military Air Transport Service (MATS) planes, a strategic airlift of Airborne forces, numbering about 5,000, moved into the combat zone in the Carolinas, for a parachute assault Tuesday. At the same time Air Reserve planes from as far west as Texas and as far north as Minnesota, moved into the area to provide the tactical airlift of the Airborne forces and Air National Guard jet reconnaissance aircraft reconnoitered miles of territory to pave the way for later air strikes.

The exercise is a combined Army and Air Force operation with a major objective of providing realistic peacetime training for troop carrier elements of the Air Force Reserve, Tactical Fighters and Reconnaissance units of the Air National Guard and active Army Airborne units of the Strategic Army Corps. The 14 day exercise is under the joint command of Lt. Gen. Paul D. Adams, commanding general Third Army, and Major Gen. Maurice A. Preston, commander of the Nineteenth Air Force.

You'll Dial Differently Next Month

A Joint Service Committee composed of representatives of the Southern Bell Telephone Company and The Infantry Center Signal Section met here recently to discuss the improvement and expansion program now underway in the post's telephone system.

As a result of improvements, the system will change to seven-digit, all number calling in September.

New automatic electric equipment being installed will eliminate many delays, providing the user with more efficient telephone service, according to officials.

A new post telephone directory is also planned. Telephone company representatives attending the meeting were J. D. Reed, district commercial manager; G. E. Kelly, district traffic manager; S. L. Asher, district engineer; G. T. Dial, supervising central office foreman of the Columbus district.

Infantry Center personnel attending included Col. Braxton E. Small, signal officer, and members of his staff.

Six of Top 10

The Richland, Va., marksman paced the Army to six out of the first ten places in the championship. Team-mate MSgt. James W. Surdi fired 2,627 for second place and Sfc Emil Heugatter posted 2,625 for third place. Marine Capt. William B. McMillan listed 2,624 for fourth and was followed by the Army Reserve's Sgt. Maurice G. Baum, who won the Reserve championship with 2,622. The AAMU's Sfc Samuel Hunter filled sixth place by firing 2,621, Sfc William G. Horton, who had just won the .45 caliber pistol crown, added up a low-ranking 2,617 to place seventh behind Sgt. Hunter.

Sgt Floyd D. Thomson tallied a 10th place 2,616 to make the seventh Army shooter to place in the top ten competitors listed by the championship's bulletins.

Team Events

Army efforts in team matches resulted in record-smashing scores with new marks being posted in events fired with each of the three competitive weapons. The Army "Blue" Team posted a score of 1,175 out of 1,200 points to up the mark for the .22 caliber pistol by one point and then went on to boost the Center Fire Team mark by three points with 1,167. The Army's Western division Blue Team then went into the .45 caliber competition to shoot a 1,164, eight full points over the national mark for the event.

Fifth Army First

On September 9, 1943, Fifth Army troops landed at Salerno, Italy, to become the first American Troops in World War II to set foot on the European continent.

MISSIONS AND ASSISTANCE

Our entrance into these fields dates from 1926, when we began establishing military missions in various Latin-American countries. MAAG units, in general, are small and pertain to only one of the Armed Services. They are advisory in character.

HRU Has Had Fruitful History

Civilian psychologists and highly trained military personnel here work hand in hand to improve the Army's methods of instruction and to develop the most effective training literature.

Members of the Infantry HRU (Human Research Unit) on the post, 36 civilians and 12 military personnel, are applying scientific research methods to various phases of military instruction.

The Infantry HRU is part of an overall program of research conducted for the Department of the Army by HumRRO (Human Resources Research Office) of George Washington University, Washington, D. C.

HumRRO, which celebrated its 10 anniversary recently in Washington, was established July 30, 1951.

The Infantry unit came into being in 1953.

One of the earliest research projects conducted by HumRRO, known as Task TRAINFIRE, was carried out by the Infantry branch unit on the post.

By substituting mobile silhouette targets for conventional bull's-eye targets, the Army's program of teaching rifle marksmanship was given a new approach. TRAINFIRE, now in use throughout the Army, gives a soldier training in target detection, distance estimation, and quick firing.

A land navigation course was developed by the Fort Benning unit as a result of Task PATROL. The course is designed to help a soldier find his way about a modern battlefield.

The Infantry HRU is now engaged in three tasks, RIFLEMAN, SWINGSHIFT and OPTTRAIN.

Task RIFLEMAN is designed to assist in improving the proficiency of the light weapons Infantryman.

Task SWINGSHIFT involves techniques and training methods to improve performance of units and individuals when visibility is limited.

Task OPTTRAIN is a study in leadership training for junior officers.

The unit is also engaged in exploratory studies on topics related to problems an Infantryman may expect to encounter in the event of war under today's increasingly complex conditions.

The studies include communication, tactical control, efficient teamwork and motivation.

The Unit works closely with The Infantry Center and School to put the latest scientific knowledge and research findings into use.

HumRRO operates four research units in addition to the Infantry unit at Fort Benning. They are the Armor unit at Fort Knox, Leadership HRU at the Presidio of Monterey, Calif., the Air Defense unit at Fort Bliss, and the Aviation unit at Fort Rucker.

Each of the five units includes both civilian psychologists and Army personnel. The military chief of the Infantry HRU is Major Lyman H. Clark. He is under the direction of Gen. Herbert B. Powell, commanding general of the Continental Army Command at Fort Monroe.

Dr. Carl J. Lange is director of research at the Infantry unit. He is under the direction of Dr. Meridith P. Crawford, director of HumRRO.

HumRRO was established July 30, 1951, as a result of an Army staff study.

A contract between the Department of the Army and George Washington University was signed at that time and is still in effect. It is monitored by the Human Factors Research Division, Office of the Chief of Research and Development, Department of the Army.

From a small group of psychologists who began work on the university campus in 1951, the organization has grown to include a Training Methods Division in Washington in addition to the five research units at Army installations.

The Training Methods Division conducts studies for the technical services and for general use throughout the Army.

From Reserve

2,000 Officers Will Be Called

WASHINGTON (AFPS)—Approximately 2,000 company grade Army Reserve officers will be selected for voluntary active duty during FY 1962 under the provisions of Circular 601-13 which rescinds 601-6 of last year.

An Army announcement of the procurement program stated, "The Army is interested in receiving applications from all eligible to apply, particularly in view of the impending increase in Army strength which means a greater need for officers."

Procurement for 14 Army branches are provided for in the new circular. They are: Armor, Artillery, Infantry, Adjutant Generals Corps, Chemical Corp., Corps of Engineers, Military Police, Finance, Ordnance, Quartermaster, Signal and Transportation Corps, Army Intelligence and Army Security. Procurement for other branches is provided for in other directives.

Reserve officers now serving as enlisted men can be appointed to active duty under this program, according to the Army. However, an objective of the program is the call to active duty primarily of those officers with less than 14 years active Federal service.

Because of over strengths of officers with from 14 to 20 years active Federal service, applicants in this category will be considered only if a special value to the service is established.

Included in the new circular is the paragraph concerning direct appointment as a Reserve officer with concurrent active duty. It states, "Eligible and qualified individuals may apply for direct appointment under the provisions of AR 140-100, and concurrent call to active duty under the provisions of this circular."

OCS CO. . . . An Infantry Officer Candidate School graduate and member of its Hall of Fame, Lt. Col. John W. McClain has been named commander of the 5th Student Battalion, (OCS), The Student Brigade. He succeeds Lt. Col. Richard W. Ulrich, who has been assigned as professor of military science at a South Carolina college. Col. McClain was promoted to his present rank in 1960.

ONE OF TWO FORT BENNING DUMP TRAILERS To Be Shown Simultaneously in Six Major Cities

1st Nation-Wide Telephone Auction Will Offer 2 Post Items for Sale

The first nation-wide telephone auction, of equipment worth over $13 million, will be conducted Wednesday, August 30.

Surplus property at 46 Army, Air Force, Marine and Navy installations throughout the United States will go on the block at six sale sites simultaneously. Sales are to civilians only.

Two post items will be up for sale at the countrywide event. Both are 11 cubic yard dump trailers with hydrolic lift and four wheels carrying 1600 x 24 tires. They will be shown through color slides to prospective buyers.

Sale sites connected by telephone circuits will be: Hotel New Yorker, New York City; Deshler-Hilton Hotel, Columbus, Ohio; Cosmopolitan Hotel, Denver; Western Hills Hotel, Fort Worth, Texas; and Hotel Claremont, Berkeley-Oakland, Calif., with the chief auctioneer presiding at the control point in the Henry Grady Hotel, Atlanta.

Auctioneer services with audio and projected color slides will be provided at each of the sale sites where the theater-type auction will be conducted.

This sale will include a variety of equipment consisting of truck mounted cranes, crawler cranes, rail cranes, bulldozers, low bed trailers, fork lifts, metalworking machinery, clothing, boots, vehicles, tug boats, supply vessel and barge, plus many other items.

Bidders at each sale site will have the same opportunity to bid on all property offered for sale, regardless of its physical location or the city from which they are bidding. The public is invited to attend any of the six convenient sale sites. No bid deposit will be required.

The nation-wide sale is in addition to established local sales of excess property.

On this post "spot bid" auctions are conducted frequently to offer items for sale to non-military bidders of this area.

The next such sale is scheduled for August 21. The only recent change in the local sales is that bids submitted prior to the actual sales are now mailed to a central agency at the Marine Corps Supply Center at Albany, rather than directly to Benning.

Property at this post is still retained here, and delivered to buyers by post personnel, as in the past.

Recreation Areas Open For Service Personnel

The Third Army maintains a recreation area at Altoona Reservoir, Cartersville, Ga., open for Army personnel on active duty in the Third Army area and their dependents.

A copy of the circular showing policies and procedures of the recreational area is available at the Special Services Office.

Military personnel and their dependents on post may also make reservations at The Infantry Center Rest Camp at Destin, Fla., for any of the following five-night periods:

September 5-10; September 6-11; September 10-15; September 11-16; September 15-20; September 16-21; September 20-25; September 21-26; September 25-30; September 26 to October 1.

An Ounce of Prevention

Those expecting to retire or leave the service soon may avoid one of the most expensive pitfalls in receiving all due veteran's benefits, if they will follow the advice of Pete Wheeler, director of the Georgia Veteran's Service Department. Wheeler says some $8,000 in checks for 165 Georgia veterans or their survivors are returned each month as "undeliverable" because the veteran has failed to give a notification of change of address. He adds that the problem nationally involves almost 200,000 checks for various benefits totalling some $15,000,000. So, whether or not you know you have a benefit check coming, leave change of address cards whenever you move.

Where Are Those Air Needles?

The Army has announced that influenza shots will be given all active duty personnel during October. Also, those entering active duty prior to August 1, 1962, will be given the shots as soon after entry into service as practical. Overseas, dependents will be offered the vaccine on a voluntary basis.

Donations Still Coming In

Late returns have brought the post AERARS goal within reach, with the latest published standing at 79 per cent (already a week old and surpassed). More reports were due and it was expected the post will meet its obligation. An additional month has been alloted the 2nd Infantry Division to enable it to reach its share.

'What Can You Do?' Put It in Letter Form

For another year, Freedoms Foundation at Valley Forge, Pa., is conducting its Letter Writing Awards Program in which all service people on active duty are eligible to submit letters of from 100 to 500 words that may bring awards ranging as high as $1,000.

The subject for the 1961 program, which is in the past has a Nov. 1 deadline, is "What I Can Do For Freedom," and the Foundation suggests that an ideal take-off point for a letter on this theme might be President Kennedy's widely-quoted exhortation in his Inaugural Address.

"Ask not what your country can do for you," said our Commander-in-Chief, "ask what you can do for your country."

Those simple but ringing words have inspired much discussion since the President spoke them last Jan. 20. Many — perhaps most —of us may have searched our thoughts and clarified our feelings about how we can play a creative role in keeping America strong and free.

Now we can solidify this concept of our duties — really our privileges — as Americans in uniform by putting them down in words. The Freedoms Foundation program gives us a unique opportunity to do this with the prospect of substantial rewards in prizes and satisfaction.

The President; in that same Inaugural Address, also said something that should lead each and every one of us to sober self-examination: "In your hands, my fellow citizens, more than mine, will rest the final success or failure of our cause."

A letter to Freedoms Foundation this year, then, is a way of asking ourselves what we can do.

By Chaplain (1st Lt.) W. R. French

How often we have said "Prayer is the soul's sincere desire unuttered or expressed." But even with this definition when is our praying real prayer?

The Bible says "Ask, and ye shall receive, that your joy may be full." (John 16:24) But many people have become sceptical and cynical for they have "prayed" but have not received.

Rather than giving up, let us look deeper. Have you ever flipped a light switch and failed to get a bright light? No amount of flipping the switch will bring light as long as there is no electricity in the switch.

Yet when we pray and receive no results we continue to "flip the switch" and pray the air until we give up in disappointment and say there is nothing to it.

But when the switch is in contact with the power line and there is no obstruction on the current we have faith that there will be light when we turn the switch. And just so, when we really pray if there is no obstruction between us and God we may have faith that he hears.

Sometimes when we pray we are putting God "on the spot" to see if he will actually grant our wish. But our praying must be in line with God's will and not our will.

Many of our requests would bring injury to some other deserving person if God did as we said. And sometimes God's will cannot be worked out in our own lives if He grants our petition.

It has been said that nothing lies outside the reach of prayer except that which is outside the will of God.

Praying according to God's will is necessary before we can really have faith for an answer. A person may believe the truth and yet not have faith because faith calls for commitment and action. This is obedience. And the disobedient cannot have much trust in God.

This obedience does away with most of the obstructions on the prayer line. It gives foundation for our faith and helps us to pray with the right motive instead of selfish desire. It should remind us that we do not have bargaining powers with God whereby we can expect answers on the basis of our own righteousness.

This is the reason Christ instructed us to pray in His name for it is on the basis of His righteousness that we can come confidently and boldly to God. In this manner we are not demanding something we do not deserve but asking for what has been promised to us.

Two final thoughts we need to consider. It may be that instead of changing the thing we are praying for, God sees best to change us. And, we may blunder and often fail in our praying but keep praying. As we come to know God better our praying will be more effective.

The Judge Says . . .

Think You're Good? Well So Did Smith

If someone asked, "Who is the best automobile driver in the world?", what would your answer be? Well, regardless of your answer, I'm sure that everyone feels strongly that he is the best driver. Yet, these people have "accidents".

For example, one of our "best" drivers, whom we shall call Pfc Smith, was driving a government sedan on Highway 27 on the post. The road was snowpacked and slippery and because of ice and fog, visibility was only about 100 feet. It was 4:30 p.m. and dark as he left the main gate at the post.

Smith was tired and wanted to get back to the motor pool so he could check in and go home. He knew the road well, every bend, curve and bump. As he drove along, he came up behind an automobile.

Checking his speedometer he said to himself, "That creep is only doing 30—what's the matter with him anyway?" Smith passed the vehicle with ease and hardly skidded.

About 10 minutes later Smith looked down to check the heater control knob. When he looked up again, he saw the back end of a bus, stop lights flashing, dead ahead. Smith stepped on the brakes — nothing happened.

He frantically turned the wheel to the left—still nothing happened. Then something did happen—the sedan hit the back of the bus with a sickening crash.

Fortunately, Pfc Smith wasn't seriously injured physicaly. His injuries were financial.

He was arrested by the military police for negligent driving. He was tried by court-martial, and forfeited $50.00, as well as having his driving privileges suspended for 6 months. A report of survey held him liable to the government in the amount of $750.00. And, since he could not be used as a driver any more, he was transferred to an assignment which was not quite as warm and pleasant as driving.

If Smith had been driving his own car, he, or his insurance company would have had to pay for the damage to the bus and injuries to passengers, but as it was, the government paid those claims with tax money.

Because Smith was such a "good" driver that he didn't have to be cautious, it cost him a lot of money. His "skill" cost the taxpayers a lot. Let's speculate for a moment on what he was going to do if he had gotten home five minutes early as he planned. Don't you imagine the first thing he was going to do was sit down?

Infantry School Report

GRENADE THROW During New Test

But They'll Not Be Forgotten

Push and Pull-Ups—On Their Way Out

"Lower, Soldier, lower. Do you want your hip pockets shot off And 'You, Soldier, don't toss that grenade; throw it.' Such commands may soon be heard in training areas when the new Physical Combat Proficiency Test replaces the presently used Physical Fitness Test.

Gone, but not forgotten, will be the push-ups, pull-ups, and other events all Soldiers connect with physical fitness testing. This doesn't mean that a tough drill instructor won't sound off with, "Gimmie 15, Soldier." And you, the Soldier, will know exactly what to do upon receipt of this command.

The new battery of tests are related to the physical skills required in combat, such as crawling, running, jumping, and throwing; therefore coordination, the important component of physical fitness neglected by the current test, is more fully measured.

The Infantry School developed the Physical Combat Proficiency Test, with the Ranger Department serving as the testing agency. Two years of work went into the project. Twelve thousand troops at nine major installations participated in the field test, and hundreds of statistical computations were made in analysis of the data.

There are five events in the new test including the 40-Yard Low Crawl, Horizontal Ladder, Dodge Run and Jump, Grenade Throw, and the One Mile Run. Distinctive scoring differences appear in comparing the current and the new test. Although both tests have five events and maximum scores of 500 points, the average man will score 75 to 100 points higher on the new test.

The minimum standard of physical fitness for the current test is 200 points; on the new test 300 points will be required. The use of increased coordination and skill lessens the need to award points for age beyond 30, therefore no compensating age points will be included.

The field uniform will be worn during testing without individual arms or equipment. Present requirements make the test mandatory for trainees undergoing Basic Combat Training and for those applying for special training such as Officer Candidate School, Ranger Training, Special Forces training, and the Expert Infantryman Badge. For the remainder of the Army, extensive use of the test will be directed by major unit commanders.

Locally, personnel including TIS students and faculty, troop units of the 2d Infantry Division, and units of the Infantry Center have taken the test. The highest score to date at Fort Benning was recorded by Officer Candidate Thomas H. Donegan on March 16. He scored 495 points, making a perfect score on four of the five events.

Department of the Army has announced no effective date for implementing this new test, but it is anticipated the test will be available sometime during the late summer. Changes to Field Manual 21-20 and Technical Manual 21-200 will contain all required information.

Project officer here was Lt. Col. James E. Reilly, at that time Department Executive Officer. Other Department personnel who had major responsibilities in the development of the test were Mr. James S. Dawson, Civilian Physical Education Specialist; Capt. David R. Patterson; MSgt H. A. Freeman; Sp4 Don C. Frazer and Pfc Joel Klein.

According to Captain Hugh J. Quinn, administrative officer for the Ranger Department, the Infantry Human Research Unit here and the Personnel Research Branch of the Adjutant General's Office at Department of the Army rendered advice and assistance.

Soldier, you now have the advance "poop" on the upcoming Physical Combat Proficiency Test. If you're eager and want to max the test, you might lose more than your pockets in combat.

While saving things, don't throw away your old dishes, pots and pans, etc. when you are doing the end-of-summer clean-up.

The many Allied officers and their families who will be arriving at Benning sans household goods will be delighted to have these extra items. Mrs. Ellsworth Cundiff, 5-1985, the Allied liaison chairman, will arrange to pick up your donations.

Donations of time and talent are what Mrs. James H. Phillips, decorations chairman, is looking for. If you are interested in helping with table and room decorations for the Tea, call her at 5-2527. The club now has a building for painting and storing things for this committee, so there is plenty of room to experiment. It's fascinating work and a wonderful introduction to the Woman's Club.

Barbara Hare's Report Card...

The subject of today's Report Card is a blond with a sparkling personality, Tracy Harrison, daughter of Mrs. Janet T. Harrison steps into the spotlight.

Tracy was born on November 6, 1949, at Fort Lauderdale, Fla. Even though born there, Tracy calls Benning "home."

Active in School

She attended Columbus High School for four years. While there she participated in many activities. She was president of the Girl's Glee Club and secretary-treasurer of the Library Assistants Club.

This year Tracy was president of Footlighters, the high school dramatic club. She directed its play, "The Teahouse of the August Moon," and the Senior Class Day play, "Columbus High Goes Dogpatch, U.S.A." Both of these were a huge success!

At Benning, Tracy has proved her versatility. She is a member of our Benning chapter of the Junior Army Daughters of America, where she served as corresponding secretary in her Junior year and last year she was president of this fine organization.

She is a member of the Sigma Delta Beta social sorority and was a previous vice-president. Tracy played the lead feminine role in the Masquers (Benning Little Theatre Club) production of "Ten Little Indians."

Besides being an actress, Tracy is a writer as we witnessed when we read JUDY'S and TRACY'S column TEEN TALK in the BAYONET last year. Tracy attends Saint Michael's Episcopal Mission every Sunday.

Even with all these activities she still finds time for hobbies. Among thes are reading, cooking, and swimming.

After graduating from college, Tracy wants to become an actress. I know after seeing Tracy act that some day we will see her name in lights!

We of Benning are proud of Tracy, and wish her much luck and success in college and the future.

jenni johnson on Etiquette

DEAR JENNI:

I'd be the first to try to squelch harmful gossip that would hurt anyone, but is it really so terrible to discuss with your friends the rumors that are everywhere about where military units might be sent?

CONFUSED

DEAR CONFUSED:

If you do not want to hurt anyone, as you say, then for your own peace of mind consider the source of the rumor. If it is a publication then quote it correctly and not out of context. If it is not some media of mass communication think twice about how the rumor was stated.

So often the figment of one person's imagination repeated in jest happens to hit the truth. Of course those who hear it repeat it with a tone of authority. The first thing you know there are all appearances of a security leak.

I know you would not want to be dressed down for such a thing, but even worse, your husband or his CO might be the one who is blamed. There's plenty of time at Leavenworth for him to regret the things he's said or is unable to prove he did not say.

With this in mind be careful what you say, when, and to whom. The PXs and street corners are not the places to discuss rumors ladies and gentlemen.

Remember "chicken little" of "The Sky is Falling" nursery tale fame? Next time you bear a rumor think of that story and don't chicken-a-little . . . recognize it for what it is, false. AND HUSH!

Review Bids Hello, Good-Bye To Generals Reynolds, White

By Clay Lacy

The 2nd Infantry Division rolled out the red carpet via the miniature review Tuesday morning in a dual ceremony honoring incoming Brigadier General Royal Reynolds Jr., and outgoing Brigadier General Charles H. White Jr.

An 11-gun salute echoed across the division headquarters parade field honoring the two generals as a crowd of spectators watched from bleachers on the edge of the field.

Sitting in the reserved section, a line of chairs in front, were Major General Ben Harrell, commanding general of The Infantry Center; Brigadier General A. D. Surles, assistant commandant of The Infantry School; Brigadier General John E. Kelly, deputy post commander; Columbus Mayor B. Ed Johnson; retired Lieutenant General Reuben Jenkins; retired Major General Phillip Gallagher, Maynard Ashworth, president and publisher of the Ledger-Enquirer newspapers, and T. G. Reeves, United Oil, Columbus.

Generals Reynolds and White trooped the line on foot, led by the commander of troops for the review, Colonel Robert E. Connor. Colonel Connor is the division's 87th Infantry commanding officer.

General White, addressing the officers and men from the division units standing before him, and the audience, said, "I have felt a great pride in having seen service with this fine division, the 2nd Infantry Division." He noted the many challenges which face the 2nd in the near future and wished the personnel of the Indianhead unit the "best of luck."

BRIDGE

all is the purpose of bidding. North should remember she has a partner.

When south hears the response of one spade she shows her own strength by jumping to three spades. Note that south's hand is now worth 18 points when reevaluated by promoting one of her four trump and giving the void five points. Jump in responder's suit by opener guarantees at least 16 points in openers hand. Now north adds the minimum of 15 to her own 14 high card points plus the void which was her partner's opening suit; for a total of 19 in her own hand, and at least 35 for the partnership. A Slam is indicated.

With suit established the Case Method could be employed whether it is or not, north has to tell her partner about the club situation, and a change of suits at this level is invitation to slam, showing the strength of the clubs. (This will not be mistaken for the Gerber Club Convention since the open was a suit bid—not no trump.)

South is delighted, her void in clubs will not present a problem. South responds four diamonds showing suit control and cooperation for Slam. North uses the Blackwood Convention asking for aces with four no trump. South's response must be five hearts indicating two aces.

South's bidding shows that she must have a singleton or void in clubs and though all aces are not accounted for, as they say, who needs 'em! North says seven spades. The bidding then should be:

North	East	South	West
Pass		1 ♥	Pass
1 ♠	Pass	3 ♣	Pass
4 ♣.	Pass	4 ♦	Pass
4 NT	Pass	5 ♥	Pass
7 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

You will notice there is no double by west, who in the previous bidding doubled six spades. His ace-king seemed a sure combination, though he should have remembered that the opening bid of one heart was denied emphatically—the chances of his hearts going around twice were remote.

With the new bidding, and contract at seven spades a double would be even more absurd. For the exchange of information through the bidding practically calls the cards, and unless he was daydreaming during the bidding he knows he must pass.

If there would be any chance a double would certainly tell the declarer where the trouble lay.

Remember, Bridge players, it takes two—each has 13 cards —don't deny your partner further information when she opens in first or second position. She guarantees a rebid if you make a forward going response. North's fear of the bidding dying would miss a Grand Slam for the partnership.

High for the evening was Mrs. Dion Johnson, second high—Mrs. Carl Warren. Mrs. Johnson also won the bingo hand.

Goodbyes were said to Captain and Mrs. Alan Horwedel who have been transferred to the 9th Infantry. Mrs. Horwedel was Bridge chairman for the 87th.

Ladies Bridge at the home of Mrs. Dion Johnson resulted in high for Mrs. Richard Sharp, second high—Mrs. Roy Sims, Ladies evening Bridge hostessed by Mrs. Roy Sims gave high to Mrs. Carl Warren and second to Mrs. Alan Horwedel.

Indian Soldiers, 9th Fought Together In Boxer Rebellion

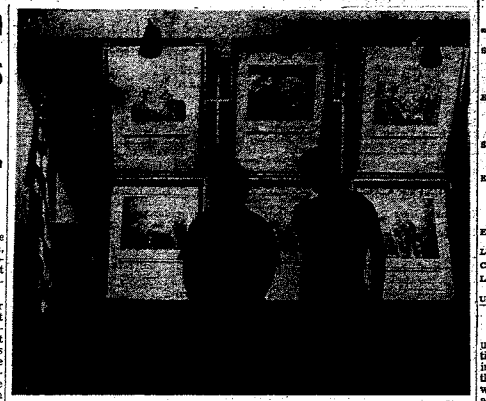
By 9th Inf. PIO

The 9th Infantry's 1st Battle Group, stationed in Alaska, commemorated "Rajput Observance Day" recently at Fort Richardson with a Retreat Parade.

The parade was held in honor of the 3rd Battalion, Rajput Regiment of Ponna, India. During the proceedings the 1st Manchu Battle Group, the 2nd's sister battle group, saluted the 3rd Rajput. Historical highlights of the ties between the Indian Regiment and the 9th Infantry were read prior to the Pass in Review before Colonel Robert E. Edwards, 1st Battle Group commander.

Friendship

The cordial bond of friendship between the 9th Infantry Regiment and the 3rd Rajput Regiment was formed in combat 61 years ago during the Boxer Rebellion in China.



The Indian Regiment had been ordered to proceed to China and protect English lives and property there. It was a unique honor for an all-Indian unit to be awarded the task of protecting the Queen's property in a distant land. It showed great trust and confidence in this regiment which sailed for China on June 30, 1900.

The 9th Infantry Regiment was posted in the Philippines. They received orders to proceed at once to China to protect American lives and property.

Boxer Rebellion

The 3rd Rajput Regiment and the 9th Infantry fought together in the Boxer Rebellion and a strong bond was formed. They were instrumental in the capture of Tientsin and Peking, and were billeted in Peking for several months following the war during which time the bonds forged in combat grew stronger.

And so the two Regiments parted in 1901, and since that time their paths have never crossed. On July 14 annually the Regiments salute each other. This is in honor of both Regiments who commemorate their gallant assault on the walls of Tientsin, China.

CODE OF CONDUCT . . . Two 2nd Division soldiers stand silhouetted against the lighted display of the six original oil paintings of the AF's Code of Conduct series. Army area, was brought to the division as a special presentation of " Project 61," a program of special classes, films, displays and guest speakers supporting existing troop information programs in the division. 87th Views 69th's Armor Prowess

By 69th Armor PIO

The 69th Armor recently demonstrated a live fire problem for the 87th Infantry using M48A1 tanks and infantry mounted in Armored Personnel Carriers.

The tank-infantry problem gives a realistic view to the members of the 87th Infantry of the shock action, fire power, speed and mobility of a combined arms team. The problem also demonstrates the use of supporting fires from 81-milimeter mortars, effect of terrain on tracked vehicle maneuverability and the importance of teamwork between infantry and tanks.

Desired Methods

The combined arms team is composed of a tank platoon and an infantry platoon. The problem is demonstrating one of Armor's desired methods of attack. That is, attacking on two axies and converging on the objective. As the tank-infantry platoon attacks the objective, the fire of the 60-millimeter tank guns, .30 and .50 caliber machine guns, and 81-millimeter mortars is brought to bear on the objective. Upon reaching the objective, the infantrymen dismount and continue the attack on foot while firing live ammunition.

This type of problem was designed by Lieutenant Colonel Harry H. Hiestand, commanding officer of the 69th Armor. Colonel Hiestand felt that this problem would best demonstrate the fire and mobility of a tank - infantry combined arms team. Captain Edvin S. McClure was the narrator for the demonstration and Lieutenant Albert S. Britt was the range officer.

The problem was conducted on Fournier Range during July and also on first, second and third of August.

Each company in the battalion submitted one vehicle for each phase of the battalion-level competition, which is held monthly.

11th Officer Is Promoted

By 11th Inf PIO

The 11th Infantry's motor officer, Captain Leonard A. Boulas, recently was promoted to his present grade in the office of Colonel John E. Arthur, the commanding officer.

Receiving his commission from the Officer Candidate School in 1956, the native of Uniontown, Pennsylvania, attended both the Airborne and Ranger schools. From Fort Benning he went to Berlin, Germany and was stationed with the 6th Infantry Regiment as assistant motor officer and platoon leader.

In January of this year Captain Boulas joined the 11th Infantry and became the battle group's motor officer.

SKIN DIVER BREATHED THROUGH 'WATER HOSE'

BY 9TH INF. PIO

While most of the world is concerned with how high the next rocket will soar into the heavens, there remain a few "human fishes" who are interested in how far down they'll be able to penetrate the ocean's depths.

Such a "fish" is Specialist Five Robert D. Cruce, a mechanic in the 9th Infantry Motor Pool. The 24-year-old native of Alachua, Florida, is an amateur skin-diver who hopes, upon his retirement from the Army in 1975, to become a professional ocean floor explorer.

Cruce first became interested in skin-diving while only a boy. He and his brother went on frequent excursions to Florida waterways "but never found anything of value."

While on one of these trips, he decided that he would improvise and make an air hose out of an old water hose. Everything went all right until his brother let the hose sink beneath the water line and Cruce "almost drowned."

Cruce was assigned to Headquarters Company, 9th Infantry in March and one month later joined the Scuba Club on Main Post. The club, which meets once a week, utilizes a gym pool for teaching the fundamentals of skin diving. The 40 - member organization has made excursions to Florida and nearby waterways in which its members spend several days diving "for real."

Scheduled to leave for a three-year tour of duty in Hawaii in late September, the six-foot, 180-pound Floridian says his main interest is ocean floor exploration "and a little sea hunting."

Makes Plans

Cruce has made preparations for diving while in Hawaii. Last month he bought diving equipment which consists of one air tank (modified from a CO2 bottle), mouthpiece and mask. In talking to men who recently have returned from the 50th State, Cruce said he learned "diving is a popular and profitable sport."

Asked about a few of the finer points of skin-diving, Cruce said it doesn't take a strong swimmer to be a good diver. "An ordinary swimmer can dive," he said.

The seven-year Army man said a 71 cubic foot air tank, normally used in skin-diving, holds enough air to allow a swimmer to remain one hour underwater at a depth of 30 feet. "The further down you go, air time is lessened," Cruce cautioned.

ROTC Cadets View Div Trains Displays

By Div Trains PIO

Personnel from the 2nd Infantry Division Trains recently coordinated the instructions and displays set up in support of the Reserve Officer Training Corps in the Harmony Church area.

The four technical service displays were to familiarize the ROTC Cadets with equipment organic to the Infantry Division in each of their special fields.

Quartermaster

At the dismount point they were met by Staff Sergeant Gerald Brady and Sergeant John Adams of Headquarters Detachment, Division Trains, who guided them to the Quartermaster Display for a general orientation by Captain Sidadal, the Division Quartermaster Supply Officer.

The group was then conducted through the three static demonstrations in a "county fair" fashion. These consisted of a bath unit, Class III section (petroleum products) with the new 5,000 gallon tank trailer, and a Class I (rations) Class II IV (clothing equipment) sections.

Next was Ordnance orientation by Captain Daniel Pride, who gave a familiarization of the basic organization, capabilities, and mission of the Ordnance Battalion organic to the Infantry Division.

The cadets were briefed by Colonel A. K. Clark of the United States Army Combat Surveillance Agency on the varied missions of the Signal Battalion organic to an Infantry Division.

Captain Gora Elzworth of the Military Police Detachment introduced the Cadets to the mission of the Military Police. A static displays they witnessed demonstrations in techniques of handling prisoners of war and riot control methods.

MP Remembers Chat With Gen MacArthur

BY CLAY LACY

A 2nd Infantry Division noncommissioned officer recalled this week a memorable occasion when, as a member of an Army honor guard platoon, he conversed with General of the Army, General Douglas MacArthur.

This incident marks only one of the highlights for Sergeant William E. Jones, a military policeman for his entire 11 years of Army service.

Honor Guard

The opportunity to see General MacArthur came for Sergeant Jones when he was selected as a member of the 1st Army Honor Guard while stationed at Fort Jay, New York, in 1956. When the United States Army flag was officialy adopted then, a special presentation was made to General MacArthur which called for the honor guard to participate.

Says Sergeant Jones, "I was flabbergasted. When the presentation was completed, the General came down the ranks of the honor guard and stopped at each one of us to shake our hands and chat for a moment."

Another highlight remembered by the Birmingham, Ala., native was when the honor guard helped give the official welcome to Queen Elizabeth of England upon her arrival in New York City in October 1957.

"For that affair," Sergeant Jones commented, "we practiced for almost five weeks, perfecting our every move to a fine precision."

Entering the Army in 1950, Sergeant Jones was among a group of 23 Soldiers selected at Camp Atterbury in Indiana to serve as military policemen. His unit received both basic combat training there and basic military police training.

Germany

His first assignment following basic was overseas in Germany. While in Germany, Sergeant Jones spent 19 months as personal driver for the Provost Marshal of the 7th Army, Colonel Thomas Lancer.

Returning to the United States in January of 1955, he was assigned to the Military Police Detachment at Fort Jay, and was later selected as a member of the 1st Army Honor Guard.

During his three year tour of duty at Fort Jay, the military policeman also served as desk sergeant and operations sergeant with his detachment.

Following a tour in Korea, Sergeant Jones was assigned to the 2nd Infantry Division in August 1959. He has served with the 2nd as driver for Brigadier General William L. Hardick, who retired at the end of June. Last month, Sergeant Jones was awarded the Army Commendation Medal for his outstanding performance of duty as the general's driver.

Sergeant Jones is single and claims reading and studying as his off-duty pursuits.

BY 87TH INF PIO

Company B opened the 87th Infantry's Volley Ball season last week with a hard-earned pair of wins over Company E.

Bravo took the first game by a three-point spread, then quickly fell behind to lose the second by a wide margin. The three game set was decided late in the last game. It was nip - and - tuck until Bravo scored the winning point by slapping three straight across the net that company E couldn't return.

Winning for Company B were Private First Class David White and Privates Anthony Ayerza, Joseph Padovano, Kenneth Page, Joseph Shaheen, Micheal Stearns and Lamarse Washington.

Ray Young Hits Fifth Home Run; Ken Teel Hurls One-Hit Shutout

By Sfc Bismarck Stith

The 16th Artillery Redlegs came from behind in the ninth inning to gain control of second place in the Major Unit Baseball League by edging the 151st Engineers, 4-3, last Thursday night at Gowdy Field.

Engineers' right-hander Marlin Leicht held the Redlegs to six hits, scoreless and had chalked up 11 strikeouts until the Redlegs put on a rally in the last half of the ninth.

Robert Steward led off and got on on an error by shortstop Bruce Woods; Ray Young crashed his fifth home run of the season over the left field fence for two runs; Richard Ruark walked; Larry Covey sacrificed Ruark to second and then William Ray rapped a one-run triple to deep center to even the scores at 3-3. Ray scored the winning tally on a wild pitch that got away from catcher James Hill, to end the game.

Youngs two-run homer and a single, along with Larry Covey's two hits paced the winners at the plate. Reliever Joe Winchester was credited with the win while Martin Leicht was tabbed with the setback.

The Engineers were able to tally only eight scattered hits for three runs.

Ken Teel pitched a one-hitter as the league-leading Student Brigade clubbed the 151st Engineers for their second setback of the week, 15-0.

Student Brigade scored 15 runs in three inning, five runs each in frames 4-5-7. In the fourth Doc Green led off with a base on balls; Dave Brewer walked; Larry Lynn got on by a hit pitched ball to load the bases; Charles Nelson smacked a three-run triple to right field. Elmer Smoot's fly to center was dropped by Bobby Rose and Nelson scored as Smoot went to third. Tom Monza grounded to shortstop and the ball was booted by Rodgers, with Smoot scoring the fifth run.

In the fifth they rallied for five more runs when Brewer walked, Lynn hit over second for a single, Nelson cracked a one-run double to right, his third hit for three trips at plate, then Lambert came in to relieve starter James Hill with two on base and one out.

On Lambert's first pitch, Bob Poston smacked a two-run double to left field; Smoot beat out a bunt for a base hit; Teel sacrifice fly to left scored Poston and Monza beat out a bunt for a base hit, sending Smoot home for the fifth tally.

Charles Nelson paced the Brigade's 14-hit attack with 3-for-3, a triple, double and single. James Hill was charged with the loss. Ted Recr

A trip out to King's Pond the other evening proved a number of things including that age must be creeping up on me. I didn't take my fishing gear.

While waiting for the steaks to cook I walked along the water's edge just below the Recreational Area building and saw something I'd never seen on post before...a whole fleet of little bream lined up along the edge like little submarines.

For a moment I couldn't figure out what was going on and then it dawned on me that, as I walked, the little fellows kept pace with me — they wanted to be fed!

Getting some tiny meat scraps I tossed one into the water and the water literally boiled as the fingerlings, 50 to 100 of them, fought for it. A second scrap tossed a little further out brought perhaps twice that many after it — and it was snatched away by a pan-size bream this time.

The third scrap was dropped on the very edge of the very shallow water and a big, green "V" converged on it. I wouldn't dare venture a guess as to how many bream were there — but one of the smallest wriggled up and struggled back lugging the comparatively huge piece of chow only to be swamped by his little buddies.

Another scrap was taken right off my palm. I put the back of my hand on the sand about two inches under water—and in nothing flat a whole fleet of little fellas lined their noses up against my fingers gathering up courage to dart in and snatch the suet in the center of my palm; another second and it was gone.

I tried this experiment three or four more times and each time the water boiled but the little fellas wouldn't come near me when I tried the palm bit.

It was concluded, therefore, that the fish along the little point which projects out into the pond have learned to wait for scraps from the hundreds of picnicers who've enjoyed the area's barbecue facilities.

It was proved that King's is swiftly building up a fine population of bream and, if all the little fellas I saw keep growing they should all be of eatin' size come cold weather. This doesn't mean that there aren't bream of eatin' size out there now — a larger chunk of suet tossed onto a weed bed was slurped up in a flash, and no little guy had gotten it, either.

Watching closely, I scanned each whirling school to see if I could pick out fingerling bass but didn't see any — but I know they must have been in the fray, too.

As I say, I've never seen anything like this hand-feeding anywhere except at private trout pools and those fish had to be fed like chickens. Yessir, King's is quite a place and if you take the kids out there — don't forget my little buddies like potato chips if you crumble them up small enough.

Prospects Looking Brighter For Team, Reports Head Coach

By Pfc JOE KUCHERA

Prospects for the 1961 Fort Benning Doughboys look brighter and more satisfying, reports Capt. Leaton C. Cofield, head coach for the post football team.

Added to the list of needs were a few good blocking backs, with which Cofield Could perfect his self-styled "jumbled-up T" formation.

According to the new mentor, the Doughboys this year will operate mainly from a split and an angle-T formation with forms of the wing-T thrown in. Although somewhat resembling the wing-T, the variations planned by Cofield are expected to be much more effective.

Asked how successful the "jumbled - T" formations were, he replied, "We have'nt lost many games."

Referring to the "we", Cofield, for the past three seasons, has been at the helm of the Brooke Army Medical Center team from Texas. During that time he compiled an impressive 23-4 record. Before handling the Comets, he gained serious wide recognition as one of the finest military football coaches in the Armed forces.

"Over-all, the team has gained a better attitude and is slowly getting into shape," Cofield declared. "As each week goes by, the prospects of a top-notch team look better and better."

Donning the pads each afternoon are 33 most likely candidates who will be wearing the blue and white of the post squad in the opening game September 16 at Camp Lejeune, N.C.

Even though the team may look fine from this point of view, Cofield said the team still has some way to go before it will actually be ready to stand up under the strain of the tough 12-game schedule which will cover three months.

The team still needs some good ends, tackles, guards, and running backs, he said.

The Surgeon Says

Do It Today— Before It Hurts

Be Set Next Time You Hurt Yourself

Experience is the best teacher — at least that is what most of us say and believe. Working about the home or barracks, from time to time we cut our fingers, scrape our knuckles and are bitten by various insects. When these injuries occur, we seek medical attention usually in the form of iodine, bandaid, tape, etc.

Too often, we either "just ran out" or we never had the supplies on hand to begin with. We make a mental note that the next time we are at the drugstore, we'll get the necessary supplies. Unfortunately, we keep putting it off. We will injure ourselves time and again before we finally purchase a few supplies.

Assemble a Kit

One of the most important fixtures that you should have in your home is a first aid kit. If you don't have one, assemble the supplies now before you need them.

Once you have the necessary supplies DO NOT add them to the jumble of tooth paste, bobby pins and other paraphernalia in the medicine cabinet. Instead, get a suitable box (such as fishing tackle box or small tool chest with a hinged cover) and put the supplies in it. This way, everything will be handy when needed.

Label Each Item

Label every item you put into the box and if possible obtain a first aid booklet and place it along with the supplies. DO NOT LOCK THE BOX — otherwise you may be hunting for the key when time is most precious. Place the kit on a shelf out of the reach of children.

The following lists the items that should normally be in a first aid kit. All of these items can be purchased at any drugstore and can easily be assembled in a first aid kit:

Sterile gauze pads, roll of gauze bandage, box of assorted adhesive dressings, adhesive tape, roll of absorbent cotton, bottle of two per cent solution iodine, small bottle of mineral oil for minor burns, tube of vaseline or other petroleum jelly, bottle of calamine lotion, small bottle of oil of clove, dry mustard to induce vomiting of poisons, baking soda, aromatic spirits of ammonia, small bar or tube of antiseptic soap, and a can of foot powder.

Don't hesitate — act now so that a practical first aid kit will be available when needed.

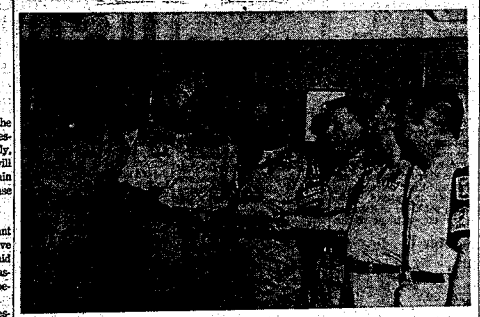
Gen. Harrell hosted an official luncheon for the two-star guest Thursday in the Main Officers' Mess.



Gen. Yahya will confer with Gen. Harrell tomorrow at 9 a.m. in the latter's office.

BOOKS in REVIEW

THE CARPETBAGGERS by Harold Robbins. (Simon, 1961)

The Carpetbaggers is a mighty, turbulent, explosive novel. It is realistic and tough, ruthless and outspoken, frank to a point that may offend the squeamish. Broad in scope and bold in the brush strokes that define its action, it is complex both in the number of its characters and in the relationships to each other, utterly honest in its underlying theme — that every human being is ceaselessly searching for love and there is almost no end, however destructive, to which he or she will not go to attain it.

AMERICA: TOO YOUNG TO DIE! by Alexander P. DeSeversky. (McGraw, 1961)

Atomic war does not have to be apocalyptic destruction. There is and will be a defense against a nuclear attack. And there will be a victor, and a vanquished, for superior ideology is bound to triumph. In spite of recent spectacular achievements by the Soviets, America is still the greatest industrial power on earth. These are the themes of Major Alexander P. DeSeversky's warning about the peril to the nation.

A JOURNEY TO MATECUMBE by Robert L. Taylor. (McGraw, 1961)

A journey to Matecumbe, is a big, exciting story about a young boy's wildly funny, often hair-raising flight down the Mississippi to a precarious haven in the Florida Keys just after the Civil War. The assortment of villians in pursuit — Ku Klux Klansmen, wicked Indians, ruthless spies and impostors — will delight the reader.

AND NOW TOMORROW by Rachel Field. (Macmillan, 1960)

Looking back over the first twenty-five years of her life, Emily Blair realizes that there has been some queer kind of pattern behind it. Some trace remains of every thing — each house or tree or postbox recalls anew 'here he kissed me, here we met by chance, here I stumbled crying past that fence post'—yet she can never be again as she was in the past

Masquers--Unmasked

By Pvt Chuck Parise

Fort Benning's little theater group, the Masquers, is all set to role with the latest production "Tea and Sympathy."

The cast was selected last Tuesday and will be announced next column. It is interesting to note that "Tea and Sympathy" was originally directed on Broadway by Elia Kazan, and starred John Kerr and Deborah Kerr in the lead parts.

Pfc Henry Gladstone, Headquarters Company, 1st Infantry Brigade, will design the set for the play. A commercial artist in civilian life, his freshness in approach has created much interest and enthusiasm among the members of the group.

Paul Shay will handle the lighting for "Tea and Sympathy" while Sp4 John Offreys and his crew will handle the technical end.

New members to the group are Barbara Kelly and John Stearns.

Those personnel interested in joining the Masquers may visit the Playhouse, Building 1045, after 7 p.m. or call 5-2468.

The Army's Build-Up Going to the Dogs

The Army has issued an urgent call for 200 German Shepherd dogs to be trained for sentry duty at Army missile sites and Air Force bomber and missile bases in the United States and overseas.

So far, no plans have been announced for training or procurement locally, but information and necessary forms may be obtained from the 26th Infantry Scout Dog Platoon, 1st Infantry Brigade. The platoon is the only scout dog unit presently in the Army.

The Army Quartermaster Corps, which buys German Shepherds for both Army and Air Force use, said the "emergency requirement is the first increment of an estimated 1,200 of these dogs to be purchased during the next 12 months."

Of that number, 900 will be procured to meet normal Army-Air Force requirements in the U.S., with an additional 400 for Air Force needs in the Far East.

The following specifications reflect the high standards set for military guard dogs: purebred German Shepherd; one to three years of age at time of examination; minimum height at shoulder 22 inches, minimum weight 60 pounds; and they can be any color.

The Army said dogs of either sex are acceptable, but females must be accompanied by a veterinarian's certificate indicating a complete spaying has been performed at least 90 days prior to acceptance.

Registration is not essential, but animals accepted must be physically and mentally sound. They must also have typical German Shepherd characteristics the Army said.

Persons interested in selling qualified animals are urged to get in touch with the Army Animal Procurement Office, PO Box 52, Lackland AFB, San Antonio, Tex.

3,400 Reservists Coming

Peak Due Sunday In Summer Training

The peak of activity in the Summer Reserve active duty training will be reached when approximately 3,400 troops from seven Southern States arrive here Sunday.

This will be the last cycle of Reserve training at Fort Benning for 1961 and will end August 27.

Forty-two Reserve units will make up the final two week training period. Engineer units are most numerous, with 31 due to arrive.

These units are supported by the 151st Engineer Group and the Reserve Components Section, both of The Infantry Center. An Army Postal Unit, a band unit and an ordnance detachment will be supported by The Infantry Center Troop Command and the Reserve Components Section.

LEAVES AND PASSES

Army personnel are in general entitled to leave at the rate of 2½ days per month, or 30 days for a complete year of active service. Leaves are approved by local commanders if military requirements permit. Oversea personnel may be granted emergency leave in the U. S. if a personal emergency requires their presence at home. Commanders may also grant special passes for up to 72 hours not chargeable as leave.

Three Transportation Corps aviation units will be supported by the Lawson Army Aviation Command and the Reserve Components Section. Four medical units will be supported by the Martin Army Hospital and the reserve section.

Equipment and facilities of the Regular Army organizations of the post are made available to give the reservists the latest to work with, and the most up to date techniques are used in all phases of training.

Reservists and Regular Army personnel working as a team to produce the best trained troops possible, the One Army concept of unity, is the goal to which the Summer Reserve training is aimed.

Col. Samuel W. Koster, 29th Infantry commander, expressed his approval in a letter to the trio.

"It gives me pleasure," Col. Koster wrote, "to express my appreciation for your excellent showing in the ... Rifle and Pistol Championships.

"Being awarded the Excellence-in-Competition Badge is a tribute to your proficiency and professional competence in pistol marksmanship. This evidence of exemplary performance brings honor upon you as well as the 29th Infantry.

"Please accept my congratulations on a job well done."

Less than a month after entering the Army, Sgt Brookes enrolled in the Signal School and took a four-month intermediate radio operator course at Fort Monmouth.

During World War II, Sgt. Brookes served as chief radio operator with the 76th Signal Company and the 295th Joint Assant Signal Company from June, 1942, until September, 1943.

Polaris Sub Ethan Allen Joins Navy

NEW YORK (AFPS) — The Ethan Allen, first atomic submarine designed to launch the long-range 1,500 mile Polaris, is scheduled for commissioning August 8.

The 6,900-ton, 410-foot long boat is the largest missile submarine ever built and the first of a totally new class of Polaris submarines.

Sixteen Polaris solid fuel missiles are carried in the midships section.

SurfSide 6 at Cape

Missile merchants at Cape Canaveral must have time occasionally to watch the television show "SurfSide 6". They've named a building at the base "SurfSide 6."

It is the Navy's 20th atomic submarine. Its construction time, less than 23 months, will have matched the post-war record made in building the Polaris equipped Patrick Henry.

As in all Polaris submarines, the Allen will carry two alternate crews of 10 officers and 90 men each.

Like Calypso Music? Dancing? Then Better Come to This Party

Unlimber your bongos, boys. You are invited to try your talent at the Main Post Service Club's Calypso Party next Saturday, August 19, at 8 p.m.

The scene of this party is the exotic South American-decorated "Jamaica Room" at the club. Persons attending the party will be allowed to wear jamaica shorts and capri pants in the Jamaica Room, but nowhere else in the club.

Bill Murphy and Rusty Rowe will be featured during the 30-minute floor show which will see Bill playing and singing calypso favorites and Rusty doing a calypso dance and calypso songs. Also highlighted will be a calypso combo.

For the double-jointed, a Limbo contest will prove, or disprove, your agility. This contest, for the men, consists of leaning backwards and trying to go under a bamboo pole held close to the floor. The person who goes lowest will be given a prize.

Refreshments will be served and the rest of the club will be open for those not attending the party.

Service Club Briefs COs, Sgt Majors

The commanders and sergeant majors of the major units at The Infantry Center were guests August 2 at the regular meeting of the main post Service Club's Enlisted Men's Advisory Council.

The council, which helps the club director plan programs and other features, hosted the commanders in order to orient them on the newly re-decorated service club.

Miss Glenda James, club director, briefed the commanders on the operation and special features of the club and what the long range plans are.

One of Miss James' main points was about the Sunday morning coffee call which is currently sponsored by each unit to give the men a place to go after each Sunday morning's church services.

"We need the help of each unit to make this successful," she said.

The Enlisted Men's Advisory Council meets on the first and third Wednesday of each month. Any person interested in service club work is welcome to join.

Modernized Phone System Almost Ready

Improved Service, Altered Directory Due on Labor Day

Labor Day weekend will mark the culmination of six months work by civilian and military technicians from the Signal Engineering Agency at Arlington, Va., to expand and improve the post telephone system.

Assisted by soldiers and civilian employers of the Fort Benning telephone system, the team will have added 2,000 more automatic switches to speed up telephone calls at the post.

The growing importance of The Infantry Center, The Infantry School, resident Infantry division and other units dictates a continuing program of improvement, officials said. The project, which should be completed on Labor Day weekend, marks an important milestone in the growth and modernization of the telephone plant, they added.

The modification requires some changes by users of the system. Major H. E. Welch, Infantry Center Wire officer, stated the new equipment, like that being installed throughout the country, will require that all users dial seven digits to complete a call.

Under the new plan, the first three digits will be 545 or 544 which will bring into operation switches in one of the two principal telephone exchanges on the post, followed by four digits which will ring the telephone called.

The adoption of seven digits in place of the old Liberty designation corresponds to changes being made in many major cities to provide a more flexible dialing plan, signal representatives stated.

It is expected that the new system will ultimately be incorporated into direct distance dialing by means of which many telephones in the U. S. may someday be dialed by the users without the assistance of telephone switchboard operators.

Post telephone office workers are rushing completion of a new directory to provide the new numbers.

Gen. Surles Opens USAR School

'Urgent Need' Cited For Constant Alertness as Reservists Train

More than 700 Reserve officers and staff and faculty representatives of the Pittsburgh Army Reserve School heard the assistant commandant of The Infantry School emphasize the urgency of officer training Monday at the Reservists' two-week summer session.

Brig. Gen. A. D. Surles, Jr., pointed out the seriousness of the world situation today particularly as it effects members of the military. He stressed the urgent duty of the officer to prepare himself in the latest techniques in the use of modern weapons and tactics.

"If it is our responsibility to provide you with information; it is your responsibility — each one of you —to takefull advantage of the opportunities offered you here, and in your school course throughout the year, to learn, to continue to improve yourselves professionally, so that you can truthfully say that you will be ready when your country needs you," the general said.

"The One Army concept today is a reality," he stated. "The active Army, National Guard and Army Reserves are better trained than we have ever been, short of actual combat."

He concluded by saying, throughout the year. The two-week summer camp completes their year's instruction.

Opelika SSgt Is Honor Graduate

One Army OC Class No. 2 Graduates 145

The Army meets its far-flung commitments through maximum and effective use of the Reserve Components now and in the event of mobilization, Major Gen. Clayton P. Kerr, assistant chief of the National Guard Bureau for Army National Guard, Washington, D. C., emphasized at graduation ceremonies for The Infantry School's Reserve Components Officer Candidate Class 2 Tuesday.

Gen. Kerr presented certificates to 134 Guardsmen and 11 members of the Army Reserve from 40 states, Puerto Rico and the District of Columbia in the program at the Main Theater. They are now eligible to receive a commission and the gold bars of a second lieutenant from their home units.

Fifteen Army Reservists and 180 Guardsmen entered the course June 14.

Staff Sgt Mac W. Speaks of Opelika, a member of the 116th Special Forces Operations Detachment (Airborne), Alabama National Guard, was named honor graduate of the class.

Receives Trophy

In addition to a letter of commendation, he also received the Major Gen. Edgar C. Erickson Award, named for the former chief of the National Guard Bureau and given to the outstanding NG OC graduate. The silver trophy is a replica of the "Sons of Liberty" bowl designed and made by Paul Revere.

Speaks, 23, is a veteran of three years' active duty and two years with the Guard.

"Your eager and intelligent attitude reassures my faith in the Army National Guard and Army Reserve," Gen. Kerr told the class.

Reserves Important

"You are the cream of a new generation. On you and the other young men who qualify for commissions in the National Guard and Reserve rests the future of the mobilization of the Guard and USAR," he continued, stressing that never before has the role of the Reserve Components in national defense been more important.

The speaker explained that the Active Army maintains missions in 44 nations, helps train 200 combat divisions of our Allies, protects this nation and stands prepared to fight an all-out or limited, brush war. He said that to meet these many requirements, the Army must have the help of the Reserve Components.

Gen. Kerr reminded the graduates of the responsibilities of Army leadership they will soon assume.

"It is the small unit leader who is the key to success in combat. The final decision in ground combat will always rest with small units fighting under alert, aggressive leaders such as you," he stated.

Gen. Kerr was introduced by Major Gen. Ben Harell, commandant of The Infantry School.

The Caribou Herd at Swift Strike

You can expect to hear some praise directed at the Lawson Army Aviation Command personnel and their aircraft for their part in exercise Swift Strike now under way in the Carolinas. Sunday six Caribou of the 1st Aviation Company flew over 20 tons of gasoline into a small sandy pasture in the maneuver area during resupply of front line troops.

With the "enemy" 101st Airborne Division fully committed against the 82nd Airborne Division, more air supply was expected during the week, and further use of the Caribou and Otter aircraft.

The Spectacular Is Old Hat at LAAC

Letters and verbal commendations are common items at Lawson, if our memory serves us. They were right there doing a variety of jobs during the flood this last spring, and are always ready to lend a helping hand with their heli-birds.

One of the most recent incidents involved a job for Warner Robbins Air Force Base, using an H-34 chopper, Capt. Leon H. Stone Jr., CWO Carl J. Crow and Sp5 Carl W. McCall, all of the 31st Transportation Company, placed a complex radar set in position atop a hangar by use of a sling. The base commander, Col. Earl D. Duncan, sent a letter of appreciation to Col. Curtis L. Hankins, Lawson commander.

Unpromoted President Consoled

The large Manila envelope was delivered to 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue — addressed to Lt. John F. Kennedy, USNR, ret., The White House, Washington, D. C.

Inside, the addressee found a 16-page single-spaced multigraphed letter from the retiring Chief of Naval Operations Adm. Arleigh A. Burke. The CNO called it "my last personal letter" to Navy officers.

The admiral expressed sympathy in the event they may have been passed up for promotion.

Now It's Fort Irwin

That well known (especially to tankers) California post, Camp Irwin, has been designated a permanent installation. As Fort Irwin, the base will now receive increased budget allocations. It will be used as an Armor firing and desert training area for armored and artillery units of the One Army components. The post measures about 1,200 square miles. It was originally activated in 1939.

Single Shell Stopped Tank Force

The major wanted to know what was wrong. He sped to the head of the idling tank force which had come to a full stop on a Camp Brum, N. Y. Tank trail.

A single shell had held up the 12 M-48 tanks and other vehicles, he found, for the driver of the lead tank was waiting impassively—for a mud turtle to complete its plodding trip across the trail.

It's Catching...

Sfc "Trooper" Benefield, the sage of the Range Control Section, tells of a friend of his who stutters. Seems this friend raised a little puppy, and when Trooper last went to visit him the dog ran out and greeted him with "B...B...B... Bow, W...W...W...Wow."

To Wreck Your Career Just Write a Bad Check

A man's word is as good as his signature and a man's mettle is as good as his word. The man who commits himself by signature to obligations he can't fulfill, or has no intention of trying to, has no place in the service; if he's an incorrigible in this respect he's likely to wind up in another kind of uniform.

Right now the services are asking Congress for stiffer legislation so they can crack down on the bad apples who cash bad checks. The House Armed Services Committee heard from the Air Force JAG, Maj. Gen. Albert M. Kuhfeld, that "just too many bad checks" is a service problem. And nothing, be added, "gets the services into quicker disrepute in a community than a rash of bad checks."

Ideally, it should not be a service headache at all, but a certain number of deadbeats, grifters and chiselers are bound to get in and make trouble for the great majority of honorable, conscientious career people. For, as Gen. Kuhfeld told the committee, when they bring disrepute to their uniform they are hurting others besides themselves. Any serviceman who has had difficulty cashing a perfectly good check in a strange town can vouch for that.

Bad-check offenses at present are prosecuted under the UCMJ articles covering larceny, unbecoming conduct or discreditable conduct. But because of technicalities involved in their use, says Gen. Kuhfeld, "offenders go unpunished." The new law the services want would convict an offender once it was clearly established that he wrote a bad check intending to defraud or deceive.

Obviously this would not be applicable to the financially harassed individual who is likely to overdraw his account toward the end of the month. He is a service problem too, but any experienced commander can differentiate between the man who's weak and irresponsible in money matters and the criminal type who knows the checks are worthless.

The Judge Says . . .

Fast Buck or Bust? The Buyer Beware

By 1st Lt. Hugh Peterson, Jr.

"I made a fortune in my spare time. You can too." Such words are common in advertising today. The explanation which usually follows says a pot of gold sits at the end of some course of instruction or can be yours by the use of a simple sales kit.

Many an ambitious person has eagerly snapped up the bait offered, anticipating a fortune, only to end up wiser and poorer.

Many of these advertisers are both sincere and genuine. Many of them are honest attempts to procure agents for selling some product or the honest offer of instruction.

However, there lurk among them a great number of cheats who take advantage of the fact that one ordering by mail cannot see what he is ordering until it is too late. They also rely on the gullibility of the average person when easy money is dangled in his face.

One example was referred to recently by Federal Trade Commissioner Seigurd Anderson in a speech before a Lions Club. The ad read in part: 'Tired of retirement? Earn $9,000.00 a year in your spare time. . . . Many an oldster bit into this apple and ended up with a cellar full of idle vending machines.

The ad tells restless retirees that all they need to do is install the machines, keep them stocked and clean out the coins now and then. The trouble is that after the old folks exchange several hundreds of dollars for the machines, they find their neighborhood has all the vending machines it can absorb.

They learn too that all the sales are final and they are stuck with the vending machines. Other gimmicks in the phoney ad racket are: furriers who get large sums by labeling coats made of dyed rabbit and marmot furs as "electric seal", "Florida mink" and "Baltic lion."

Merchants who pedal such phoney bargains as $15 watches "marked down from $75" and actually worth $5.

Correspondence schools which take a girl's $300 for a stewardess course, knowing that a dumpy figure and buck teeth will never land them a job with any air line.

These are just a few examples. They do not mean all advertisers are fraudulent but they do indicate that he who answers such ads is taking a big risk. Remember a few basic points and you may save a lot of money. First, you cannot see what you order by mail until it is perhaps too late.

Second, as for money-making schemes, just stop and ask yourself, if this man had such a tremendous secret for success, why does he want to share it with 180,000,000 citizens.

Third, read the advertisements over carefully to make sure you know what you are getting into. Often millions of dollars are made simply through the use of a trick phrase or a misleading sentence.

Chaplain's Corner

Worship and You

By Chaplain (1st Lt.) R. E. Murdock

People down through the ages have worshiped one thing or another. Generally, they have worshiped nature, man, or they have gotten outside themselves and their surroundings and worshipped God.

Worship is the sense of the presence of another who is greater.

Modern western man, with rare exceptions, believes that worship of nature is primitive. He claims to reject the worship of man. He feels that the worship of man collectively, as the Communists preactice, is wrong.

One would assume that we, today, in America, worship God. But, if one were to open the doors of the chapels of Fort Benning on Sunday mornings, he would have his doubts.

Two Forms

Worship takes two forms, private and public. Private So is public worship. The Jews have worshipped God together since the beginning of their nation. Christians have also worshiped together.

The Apostles' Creed states, "I believe inthe communion of sainte." Paul taught that Christ is the Head of the Church apd believers are the body. God expects public worship for He sees the need of man to worship together.

God also sees the need for men to worship often — at least one day in seven. The Jews worship together on the seventh day of the week. Christians, commemorating the resurrection of Jesus, worship together on the first day of the week.

Failing to Worship

When you fail to worship God in a way pleasing to Him, then you are taking God out of His rightful place in life and putting man in His place. In this case, that "man" is self.

Such a low degrading form as worship of one's self is even below the worship of nature.

God will not continue to pamper those who go their merry way thinking someday in the future they just might favor Him be attending a service. God is not the kindly old "Man Upstairs" who puts up with anything His creation chooses to do.

God is God. Like a loving Father, he chasteneth thos whom he loveth. Perhaps this is the reason for the Berlin crises, Communism in Cuba, and unrest in the world. Perhaps God is trying to get through to us, that He will be worshipped.

Who receives YOUR worship? Will you worship your Creator this week?

Infantry School Report

Weapons Pool Valet Service

2 Central Points Provide Expert Cleaning and Care

A dream which has been entertained by millions of servicemen, past and present, about firing a weapon and walking away without having to clean it, has long been a reality for supporting troops and departments through the use of Weapons Pools at The Infantry School.

Approximately 20,000 items are maintained in two pools, with a value in excess of $2,350,000. The equipment is given expert care by highly skilled military and civilian technicians, thus freeing students and instructors from maintenance and security responsibilities and allowing them a greater amount of time to devote to study and instruction.

Wide Variety

The weapons and equipment range from a variety of small arms, mortars, recoilless rifles, Davy Crockett launchers, to optical and fire control equipment, and are probably the best cared for group of weapons and equipment to be found anywhere in the Army, even though they are in constant use supporting demonstrations, classes and other activities year-round.

This system is operated under the supervision of Col. J. W. Jackson, operations officer of The School. It consists of two weapons pools, located in the Main Post and Harmony Church areas, commanded by Capts. Robert L. Earley and John F. Chambers, respectively.

One Army

In addition to supporting The Infantry School, the pools provide limited quantities of equipment to the Army Reserve, National Guard, and the Reserve Officers Training Corps during summer training or other special activities. Total monthly issues frequently exceed 55,000 items.

It all started in 1945 when the need for a central issue and maintenance point for small arms was established by The Infantry School, because instructors were devoting too much time needed for other purposes.

First Pool

Fort Benning's first weapons pool opened in the Harmony Church area in September, 1945. Two years later, in August 1947, it was moved to the Main Post, where it now operates as Branch 1. In April, 1951, due to the expansion of School responsibilities to support the Korean Conflict, the facilities were expanded and Branch 2 was established in the Harmony Church area.

Branch 2 maintains all of the recoilless rifles and most of the mortars, because the Mortar and Recoilless Rifle Committees of the Weapons Department of The School are located in that area, while the majority of the small arms are kept at Main Post; otherwise, the operation and appearance of both facilities are similar.

91 Assigned

Employed in the two pools are two officers, 70 enlisted men, and 19 civilians.

Of the civilians assigned, 12 are retired service personnel, many of whom have 30 years' active duty behind them, and all have extensive backgrounds in small arms.

A few, like Basil L. Rayle, have ten years of civil service in addition to 30 years of military service. Six civilians, who were hired when the pools first offered them employment in August, 1950, are still working there. Joseph J. Dowling and Sylvester C. Duncan at Branch 1 are retired from active duty, and Napoleon Wheeler, Theodore Stratigos, Floyd S. Morrison and Willie D. Ferell head the seniority list at Branch 2.

Requests for use of weapons and equipment are submitted, three days in advance of actual use. Using agencies provide their own transportation. As a convenience to the user, the weapons pools receive and issue equipment 24 hours a day, seven days a week. Property is returned directly from the field without cleaning. This method assures the best possible maintenance.

Mass production assembly line methods are used by both pools. For example, when equipment is returned from the field, it is washed in dry cleaning solvent (except optics) and then sprayed with a light coat of oil.

Mortar tubes are cleaned with electrically driven cleaning staffs which spin oil soaked rags through them from top to bottom. Flash-hiders for small arms are kept smooth, free from dents, and clean by use of special tools and a variety of special purpose machinery.

'Best I've Seen'

MSgt William Ferguson, Jr., Shop Foreman of Branch 2 at Harmony Church said, "Our job is to take care of this equipment, and have it available for The School whenever it needs it. The people we have know how to do that better than any group I've ever seen."

At Main Post, Shop Foreman MSgt William T. Herrin added, "When visiting Allied Officers or National celebrities sit down to watch a demonstration staged by The School, they expect to see everything work perfectly. It's our job to see that they aren't disappointed."

Jennl Johnson on Etiquette

DEAR JENNI.

When entertaining is it proper for the "host" to extend the invitation to the male guests, or is it the wife or 'hostess' place to issue the invitation thru the ladies?

A. HOSTESS

DEAR HOSTESS.

Who should extend invitations, the host or the hostess? I have all due respect for the host and I could not possibly entertain without the aid of my better half, however, giving the chore of inviting to him is a nuisance for him and may be disasterous.

If he is to extend the invitation by word-of-mouth, referred to by one military etiquette book "as the poorest method . . . ever devised by man"; he might say, "how about coming over for a little informal buffet next Saturday?" The guest tells his wife, who must then call you anyway to find out the time and dress.

I won't even go into the guest who forgot to tell his wife, or the host who forgot to mail the written invitations. Assuming the affair will have a host and hostess, she should certainly extend the invitations.

A possible exception could be inviting a bachelor or widower who has no phone or permanent local address or is not acquainted with the hostess. As I'm sure every hostess has experienced the fear of overlooking a guest or the unexpected guest that suddenly appear as a result of hubby doing the inviting, be safe, milady, and do the inviting yourself.

Through what media should a information invitation be extended then. Nancy Shea's "The Army Wife" reads, "In the Army there is an informality in extending invitations that is not found in the fashionable circle of civilian life. . .the telephone is the means of conveying many invitations." And the Complete Etiquette for the Serviceman's Wife advises that after issuing an invitation by phone to follow it up with a card (a joint one, since you are issuing the invitation as a couple) with "to remind" or "Look forward to seeing you" written above your names, and the hour and date in the lower-left-hand corner.

It's not good form to issue invitations to a party at another party which you are attending. The persons invited may forget your asking them and not show up at your party.

Students in kindergarten through eighth grade will attend post schools. High school students living on the post must secure approval slips at the registration before completing registration at Muscogee County High Schools.

Post registration will be held from 9 a.m. to noon and 1 to 3 p.m. by grade and housing area. The school designated for registration does not necessarily mean the child will attend that school. Children's School authorities emphasized.

Transportation will not be furnished for registration but will be available the opening day of school, September 5. Tentative bus schedules will be distributed at registration.

A child must attain the age of five years by January 1, 1962, to enter kindergarten or each the age of six by that date to enter first grade. Birth certificates will be required for children enrolling in either kindergarten or first grade.

Transfer Pupils

Transfer pupils should have in their possession transfer certificates, report cards or similar documents to establish their proper grade placement.

All students in the post schools are required to present immunization records at registration. Immunization requirements are: small pox vaccination; DPT, diphtheria, whooping cough and tetanus completed and booster, if indicated, and polio series begun.

Charts Posted

Charts will be posted in all schools showing room numbers of each grade registration. It is not necessary that children accompany the parent for registration. Students in sixth grade and above may register for themselves.

All children in kindergarten regardless of where they reside on the post will register in the auditorium of Faith School, which is on Main Post off Lumpkin Rd.

Children in grades one through four living on Main Post, Benning Park Homes and Harmony Church will register at Patch School at Ballzell Ave. and Lumpkin Rd.

27th Annual High School Writing Contest Outlined by VFW Auxiliary

The opening of the 27th annual National High School Writing Contest was announced recently by the Ladies Auxiliary to the Veterans of Foreign Wars. The topic will be "America the Beautiful — How Long Without Clean Water?"

Students in all public, private and parochial high schools are eligible to enter the contest. National prizes are: first, $1,000; second, $500; third, $250; fourth, $100; and 20 other cash awards for honorable mention. State and local contest winners receive additional Auxiliary awards which vary with the community.

Since 1935

The writing contest was begun by the V.F.W. Auxiliary in 1935 to encourage young people to think and write on patriotic subjects. During the last year more than 30,000 students entered the national contest. Judge Albert Saperstein of Miami, Beach, Fla., served as chairman of the national judges.

Further information on the 1961-62 contest may be obtained from local Auxiliary units, or from the Contest Department, V.F.W. Auxiliary, 406 West 34th Street, Kansas City 11, Mo.

Auxiliary members annually give more than three million dollars, and more than six million hours to volunteer service for hospitalized veterans and their families, community service, Americanism programs, assistance to youth groups, civil defense, and legislation benefiting veterans and their families.

Members are the wives, mothers, sisters, daughters and widows of veterans who have served overseas in the Armed Forces, or women who have themselves had overseas service.

The annual writing contest is one of the Auxiliary's oldest individual projects and one that has won considerable recognition nationally. The National Auxiliary has received from Freedoms Foundation two distinguished service medals for the contest.

The first of the series was initiated at the time of the celebration of the Statue of Liberty's Golden Jubilee. In addition to local and state prizes, the first place winner received a gold medal at ceremonies at the Statue of Liberty, in the presence of President Franklin D. Roosevelt. A trip to France on the "Normandie" and an official reception in Paris were added to her awards.

Non-Commercial

The contest was started to encourage young people to think and write on patriotic subjects. It has no commercial connection and is intended to put before the student some problem of patriotism, citizenship or similar topic about which he must study and learn in order to write the essay.

The Auxiliary feels that any such effort is valuable to a student and many letters received from students, teachers and judges bear out this feeling.

The National Association of Secondary School Principals has given its approval each year, an endorsement that is given to few writing contests.

Winners of past contests have used their prize money to attend some 20 different colleges and universities.

In 1959-60, the Office of Civil and Defense Mobilization joined the Auxiliary in presenting prizes in the contest, titled "Civil Defense — an American Tradition," offering each state winner a $100 U.S. Savings Bond.

More than 30,000 contestants requested the background kits which were especially prepared by OCDM to aid the students in writing about the topic. In addition, copies of the kit were mailed to all Auxiliary departments and to state and local CD directors for information purposes.

Prizes Vary

Local Auxiliaries give prizes of citations or medals and each state Auxiliaries vary in the ways in which each rewards winning authors. National awards are presented in the form of cash and medals in the express hope that the winners will use the money to further their education.

Judges are selected who are recognized as civic leaders or authorities on education and patriotic activities.

Hunt Club To Conduct Open Show

The Fort Benning Hunt Club will conduct an open horse show Sunday, September 10, at the club.

Participation in the event will be open to all clubs or individuals in the local area.

The show is free and seating arrangements are being provided.

There will be 12 events for children and adults, some of which will be Eastern and Western Pleasure Classes and Jumping Classes with variations of each.

Judges are Capt. Durwood Gosney of the Infantry Board, who will judge the western events, and Major Edward Miller, a graduate of the 7th Cavalry advance course, who will judge the English and jumping competition.

Pre-School Requirement

Children's Physical Exam Schedule Set

The physical examination dates for military dependents attending off post schools for the first time, public, private and parochial, has been set for August 24 and 25 at the Physical Examination Section, Old Hospital Headquarters, Building 396.

Some of the examination procedures for parents to follow are: mothers to accompany children and report on time, children should be given a substantial breakfast on the day of examinations, girls over 9 years of age should bring a bathrobe to use during examination, and the children's individual immunization records should be brought with them.

Those requiring immunizations will receive them at the Dependents Immunization Clinic at the end of the examination.

Each child is also required to bring a urine sample of approximately four ounces in a clean bottle which should be taken just prior to leaving home. The bottle must be labeled with the child's name and address for identification.

Child Health Record forms are available at the examination section and will be completed during the physical examination and given to the mothers.

In view of the shortage of medical personnel it is imperative that all military dependents attending off-post schools for the first time receive their physical examination as scheduled because these examinations will not be conducted again this year.

The examinations will be given alphabetically by last name, according to the following schedule:

Girls—August 24
A through G—8 a.m.
H through M—10 a.m.
N through S—1 p.m.
T through Z—3 p.m.

Boys—August 25

Facts About Your Amazing Ears

Next time a telephone jangles your nerves, or range firing hurts your eardrums, or a car's horn makes you jump, try thinking about all the things your amazing ears do for you.

Consider: you can hear thunder . . . and a faint whisper — the one being ten million times as loud as the other. Your ears can make out 300 different degrees of softness and loudness. They can recognize 400,000 different sounds. They can tell 1,500 different variations of highness and lowness.

Even While Asleep

Besides that, your ears are working all the time — even while you sleep. And if your ears heard any better, you would be listening to your blood circulate, your bones scrape, and your muscles moving!

As it is, your ears hear more than they have to. (That's why some people can gradually lose their hearing without knowing it.) For instance, you don't have to go atop a mountain to hear echoes: you're hearing them all the time! Only you don't know it, because of the short time between the sound and its echo.

Even with acoustical materials, 15 per cent of the sound made in a room is bounced back to you. In a special room that the Bell Telephone Company built in Murray Hill, New Jersey, only 02 per cent of the sound made is echoed back. But in an ordinary room, 85 per cent of the noise can be reflected back to your ears!

And hearing isn't all your ears do for you. Inside each ear are three organs known as semi-circular canals, filled with fluid. These tell you whether you're standing up straight — how your balance is. Then there are two small sacs deep in your ear, which tell you whether you're going up or down, forward or sideways.

Selective

Your ears are pretty discriminating too. They don't hear just anything — they hear best what you want to hear. In a crowd, you will hear the voice you're listening for. And if you don't listen for anything in particular, you will hear unusual sounds best — the first sound, the sound that goes on and off, and the sound that shifts its location.

Quite as amazing as what your ears do for you is how they do it.

The tiniest bone in your entire body — and you have 206 bones — is in your ear. It's called the anvil, and it helps pass on sound waves to the brain. Then there's the eardrum, which catches sound waves. Small as the fingernail of your pinky, one-tenth the thickness of a dime, your eardrum vibrates one 200 billionth of an inch when you hear a whisper — you couldn't see it move with the world's most powerful microscope!

Adjustable Drum

And it's not your ears' fault that you are annoyed by noise —the ear does the best it can. When you hear a loud noise, the eardrum tightens — so it will vibrate less, so you will hear less of the noise.

After all, noise isn't just annoying: it can reduce your working efficiency, cause you to have more accidents and make more errors, raise your blood pressure and pulse, make you deaf, even make you warmer!

The louder the noise, of course, the more bothersome it is. The higher noises are more annoying than low ones, and intermittent noises more than steady ones.

How can you eliminate noise?

Earplugs will help a little, but, as Dr. Norton Canfield of the Yale University School of Medicine says, "ear protectors, no matter how carefully made to protect the ears, have only limited value."

What's So and Not So

Let's examine some facts and fallacies about your ears.

A person standing next to you hears your voice louder than you do. True. When you talk, some sound waves go up a canal at the back of your mouth, and inside your ear they meet the sounds coming from the air, and help cancel them out.

One ear could do the work of two. False. If your two ears have the same efficiency, they tell you where a sound is coming from. A sound reaches your ears at slightly different times —and unconsciously you locate the direction of the sound.

You could hear almost as well without ear flaps. True. The part of the ear you can see has virtually no function. However, it is believed that our ancestors could fold them forward to keep out noise. You still have nine muscles in your ears you can't move — unless you can wiggle your ears.

You can neglect the earwax that you have in your ears. False. Earwax probably causes more deafness than any other cause — although it's easily curable. Of course, earwax does protect your ears from dirt and dust. Don't try removing it yourself.

Bandage your ears back, and

Pennsylvania AG Visits To See Training

Major Gen. Malcolm Hay, adjutant general of Pennsylvania, arrived here Monday, to observe summer training of the Pittsburgh Army Reserve School.

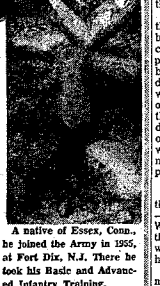
The general was briefed by the USAR School officials upon his arrival.

Tuesday morning he observed the Pittsburgh USAR School training in range firing of the M-1 and the Browning automatic rifles. A problem in fundamentals and theory of terrain association was witnessed, followed by a problem in electronic warfare.

After an office call on the commanding general of The Infantry Center, Major Gen. Ben Harrell, Gen. Hay returned to the USAR School headquarters for conferences. He departed Lawson Army Airfield at 11 a.m. Tuesday.

Gen. Hay was appointed adjutant general of Pennsylvania by Gov. David L. Lawrence in April, 1961, with the rank of major general. From 1951 to April, 1961, the general was the commandant of the Pittsburgh USAR School. He was a colonel during World War II and served with armored division cadre in the European Theater.

Gen. Hay is a graduate of Yale University and is a lawyer in civilian life. His home is in Pittsburgh and his civic activities in the community are wide and varied. He is a prominent lay church leader and is chancellor of the Episcopal Church of the Pittsburgh diocese.



Profile of a Man Doing a Man's Job

Sgt. Charles E. Cory, Company A, 1st Armored Rifle Battalion, 58th Infantry, 1st Infantry Brigade, is an example of a man doing a man's job as a member of the Buna Hill Demonstration team.

The Buna Hill team runs demonstrations for The Infantry School, showing the use and tactics of various Infantry and armored weapons. The team also gives demonstrations for VIPs visiting the post.

Sgt. Cory has been a member of the team since 1959, and at the present time fires a 3.5 rocket launcher during demonstrations of the Infantry tank team in attack. Since he began firing in the training problem, Sgt. Cory has not missed the target tank, some 250 yards away, and has run his total to approximately 100 consecutive hits.

A native of Essex, Conn., he joined the Army in 1955, at Fort Dix, N.J. There he took his Basic and Advanced Infantry Training.

He came to Benning after a tour of duty in Vicenza, Italy. When not participating in the Buna Hill exercises he is a fire team leader in his company.

Second Lt. Joseph A. Tomko, Jr. has been assigned to the Editorial and Pictorial Office of The Infantry School. He is publications officer in the Special Editing Section.

Post P-TA To Seek Members

The post Parent-Teacher Association will conduct a concerted membership drive for 1961-1962 during student registration at the post school system August 28 and 29.

Army Riflemen Capture 8 Interservice Matches

Army riflemen with headquarters at Fort Benning scored heavily in 1961 Interservice Individual Rifle Championships August 7 to 9 at the Marine Corps Base at Quantico, Va., winning eight out of 15 matches fired, including the 1961 individual championship.

Sp5 Justus J. Allen, Army Advanced Marksmanship Unit, won the individual crown over the efforts of 600 marksmen from all the Armed Forces.

Allen scored a total of 497-50V for five matches fired to take top laurels and lead 18 other Army marksmen to the top of the championship bulletin.

The Commandant Marines Corps Schools Team Match was won by the Army's Blue Team. This was followed by a 10-man Army squad defeating teams from the Marine Corps, Navy, Air Force, Coast Guard and Marine Corps Reserve in the interservice rifle team championship. The trophy - winning Army score was 246-212V.

Club Wins 3rd Place In Contest

By Div PIO

Kelley Hill's Service Club Four has been awarded third place in the Third Army category of the Department of the Army's "Operation Service Club Contest" of 1960.

Miss Mary Elizabeth Shanks, club director, said she was notified early this month that the clubs entry in the contest was the only Fort Benning Service Club to be so honored.

"Beat the Heat"

The club's entry, entitled "Operation Beat the Heat," was a scrapbook containing a pictorial account of the club's activities during the month of July 1960.

Because the club lacks air-conditioning facilities, Miss Shanks and her staff made arrangements for Army personnel stationed in the Kelley Hill area to spend each Sunday of the month at Ida Cason Callaway Gardens at Chipley, Georgia.

Approximately 200 men took advantage of the service each Sunday, leaving Kelley Hill in

BY CLAY LACY

The parade field at the headquarters of the 2nd Infantry Division was the scene Monday morning of welcoming ceremonies honoring the new commanding general of the 2nd Division, Major General Charles H. Chase.

Local military and civilian dignitaries were on hand for the miniature review which officially welcomed the 1933 graduate of the U. S. Military Academy to the division. A 13 gun salute echoed under an overcast sky to greet General Chase.

Guests

On hand from Fort Benning were the post commander and commandant of The Infantry School, Major General Ben Harrell; the assistant commandant of The Infantry School, Brigadier General A. D. Surles, and the deputy post commander, Brigadier General John E. Kelly.

From Columbus were Mayor B. Ed Johnson, retired Lieutenant General Reuben Jenkins, retired Major General Phillip Gallagher, retired Brigadier Generals Marcus Bell and James V. Thompson, Oscar Betts, manager of the Ralston Hotel and Tom Moore, executive secretary of the Columbus Chamber of Commerce. Also on hand were members of the local news media, including the Ledger-Enquirer newspapers, WRBL-TV and WTVM.

In a short acceptance speech, General Chase told his audience that he felt it a distinct honor to command "this magnificent division." He said that he had already learned of the "great job ahead" for the 2nd Division and said he felt certain and confident that "we can do it."

Cambodia

General Chase reports to the 2nd Division after an assignment as chief of the Military Assistance Advisory Group in Cambodia. He has served most of his 28 years of Army service with Airborne units. A former chief of staff of the XVIII Airborne Corps (July, 1957 to May, 1959), he also has served as the assistant division commander of the 101st Airborne Division from January 1956 to July 1957.

Monday's review was a double honor for the native of Maine as he also marked his 51st birthday anniversary. A reception honoring the new commanding general of the 2nd Division was held at 5 p.m. Tuesday at the Main Officers Open Mess.

strengths and weaknesses.

Captain Crooks pointed out that the men would be firing blanks, and that they had been cautioned against establishing physical contact with the "enemy." The members of the platoon were authorized to capture aggressors and to take their ammunition.

Following the general briefing by Captain Crooks, General Reynolds observed as Capt. Crooks briefed the Troops. It was unknown where the "enemy" was at the moment. The men were told the background to the situation: that the "enemy" had made a landing on the Florida - Georgia coast and had pushed inland. They had presently stopped for resupply.

The platoon's first mission was to establish contact with the "enemy." They were to be an advance guard, with a reconnaissance purpose.

They were warned to expect an artillery barrage, run up against radio - activity, and to be ready for an all-out attack before dark. Captain Crooks told them that they could expect to attack the enemy only at 8:30 p.m. that evening.

As briefings continued, General Reynolds joined with Col. Conner and Lt. Col. Sergent to receive a general briefing on the layout of the test area. They also discussed various projects involving the securing of land space for artillery firing tests.

The 2nd Platoon leader, Lieutenant Richard Finn, and platoon sergeant, Sergeant First Class, James E. Pippin, met individually with squad leaders and General Reynolds watched as the leaders assigned specific missions to their men.

The Army Training Test got under way at 1:30 p.m. General Reynolds followed the Troops through the first and second phase of the problem.

The test lasted until 10:30 that evening in what Sergeant Pippin later described as a highly successful display of combat ability and training.

Tank Rides Better Than Broncos, Says 69th Man, Ex-Rodeo Cowboy

By 69th Armor

Going across-country in a tank is "smooth sailing," according to Private First Class Robert V. Brown, 23, of the 69th Armor.

Before entering the Army last December, Brown was a professional rodeo cowboy.

Brown has participated in numerous rodeo events, including bareback bronco riding, bull riding, and bulldogging. He started entering rodeo events at the age of 19 in Orlando, Oklahoma. His first contest in bareback riding earned him the nickname "one jump, thump." On the first jump of the horse, Brown went "thump" on the ground and got his first injury in the form of a knee knocked out of joint.

Back Again

Only one week later he was back in the arena again, but this time he stayed on long enough to place fourth in the event and win his first prize money. By this time, the rodeo spirit was in his blood.

For the rest of the rodeo season, Brown traveled from town to town participating in the amateur rodeos. He entered as many as three rodeos a week and sometimes traveled 750 miles to enter a rodeo. All the prize money he won was spent travelling to the next rodeo. He has had to borrow money.

Ballroom, Pointe, Ballet Draw Young Dancers

Registrations continue for the Fort Benning Ballet, which will begin classes in September.

The Ballet, a permanent feature of the Benning scene, has drawn many young aspiring dancers in the past and continues to provide instruction in many dancing styles.

Rossie Gilmore, director of the school and a permanent resident of Columbus, has just returned from New York City, where she attended the National Academy of Ballet.

Miss Gilmore

Academy

The National Academy of Ballet is one of two national organizations of ballet teachers. The other is the Cecchetti Council of America.

Competent ballet instruction can give a child good posture, co - ordination, strength, and most important, poise, Miss Gilmore said. Leading ballet teachers and physicians agree that a child will benefit from ballet lessons only if her teacher is qualified.

Miss Gimore devotes each Saturday afternoon during the school season to her advanced pupils who are interested in performing with the Ballet Guild of Columbus, which presents a program each year at the Royal Theater.

Jean Smith will be on the faculty again this season. She has just returned from Florida where she attended dance classes in tap, ballet, and modern jazz at the Jack Stanley Studios.

The Fort Benning Ballet offers classes in ballet, pre-ballet, pointe', and ballroom. These classes are open to all dependents of Fort Benning personnel. The classes are held in Bldg. 1053 (Old Hospital Area.)

To register or for further information, call Mrs. Mariano Morales, MU 9-2497, or Mrs. Edward Blackman, LI 5-1096.

Dance Planned On August 21

College-age dependents of all Fort Benning officers are invited to attend a dance at the Supper Club on August 21. Music will be furnished by the Ric Cartey Combo.

The dance is sponsored by the 2nd Division Officers Wives Club and the Fort Benning Officers Wives Club. This will be the last college-age activity of the summer. Announcement will be made of future activities.

A Pie in the Sky

For that special occasion, here is a special dessert. Our cook, Grace Kowalski, says this is one of her best recipes.

Grace and her husband, Lt. Francis V. Kowalski, executive officer of Company B, 122nd Signal Battalion, live in Battle Park with their 17-month-old son, Kevin. She keeps busy cooking and swimming.

PINEAPPLE CHEESE PIE

Crust:
1 cup fine Graham cracker crumbs
¼ cup sugar
⅓ cup melted butter

Filling:
1 package (8 oz.) cream style cottage cheese
¼ cup cream or top milk
2 tablespoons flour
½ teaspoon salt
grated rind of ½ lemon
1 tablespoon lemon juice
2 eggs
½ cup sugar

Topping:
2 tablespoons sugar
1 tablespoons corn starch
½ cup crushed pineapple
Maraschino cherries

Blend crust ingredients thoroughly in small bowl. Pack mixture in even layer on bottom and sides of 9 inch pie plate. Reserve.

Press cottage cheese through sieve. Put cheese in bowl; add cream, flour, salt, lemon juice, and lemon rind. Beat eggs until light. Gradually add sugar until mixture is thick and lemon colored. Fold beaten mixture into cottage cheese mixture. Then pour filling into crumb-lined pie plate.

Bake in slow oven (300 F) for one hour or until firm in center. Cool. While pie cools, combine sugar and corn starch for topping in small saucepan. Stir in pineapple. Cook over moderate heat until thick and put over top of cooled pie. Garnish with cherries.

Colonel Bacharach Pays Visit To August 'Indianhead' Lunch

BY MRS. LAWRENCE W. SMITH

At their monthly luncheon on August 10, the Ladies of the Big Indianhead were visited by Colonel Gustav M. Bacharach, division chief of staff.

Beside praising them for their past achievements, the ladies heard Colonel Bacharach stress the importance of their part in building the spirit of the division. He thanked them for the encouragement they were giving their husbands, adding that "This is so much a part of our good morale here in the Second Division."

Decorations

Decorations for the luncheon were under the direction of Mrs. Wayne Cliff, hospitality chairman, assisted by Mrs. Howard W. Flora, Mrs. Robert E. Hawkins, Mrs. James Speer and Mrs. Henry Baker.

A late summer theme predominated in the decorations which were vari-colored zinnias and lighted yellow tapers. These were set about the tables.

The monthly bingo sponsored at Service Club Two by the club was under the direction of Mrs. Henry Baker and Mrs. Conrad Campnest. Prizes of homemade cakes were furnished by Mrs. Baker, Mrs. Campnest, Mrs. Lawrence W. Smith, Mrs. Stephen J. Regan and Mrs. James Simmons.

The monthly Martin Army Hospital coffee was under the direction of Mrs. Smith, assisted by Mrs. Martin F. Cardwell, Mrs. Stephen J. Regan and Mrs. Patrick H. Diener.

Attempts to Plant And to Transplant

August is a month for fairs and rodeos. It is also the month for setting out iris and peonies for spring blooming.

I do not recall ever having seen peonies blooming in Georgia and I know that the root I set out never materialized into a bush. But then I do confess to setting it out in April. So I guess I'll try again.

Peonies and lilacs always bring on nostalgia for the days of my youth which will come no more.

Which, for some reason, brings me to pansies, perfect proof that tried and true blooms do not adhere to strict rules in different parts of the country. Our family home, that same Victorian rambler I mentioned once before, was well surrounded by what in those days was called a "yard" and one thing or another bloomed from snow-melting to frost.

Pansy plants were set out in late April and they bloomed from mid-May to mid-June. I sowed them in Georgia from pelletized seed the first spring we lived in our Capehart quarters. Spring passed into summer, summer into fall. Still no pansies.

Then one sleet-ridden January day I went to the patio to be greeted by the pixie faces of yellow pansies which had apparently popped up overnight. The valiant little things blossomed all through the freezing weather and in March they disappeared as unexpectedly as they had come. One day they were there and the next they were gone.

Pansies have ever since appeared in our garden at odd times during the fall and winter. One clump which put in an appearance last Thanksgiving, bloomed continuously until a month ago. All of which goes to show that you can't rely upon a pansy in the warmer climates. So I shall plant them in October and wait for the results.

Three of us in our neighborhood have a common bond. One of us is eight, one of us is ten, and one of us pushing . . . Well, anyway, we planted, or transplanted I guess I should say, a tree. A mimosa tree it shall be if it ever gets going. Each day we look at what is now a dried up twig; each day hope dies a little. A neighborhood tree, however, transplanted about the same time as ours, is budding, giving us renewed faith.

I must have been endowed with some of the fervor of Johnny Appleseed, the way I plant trees and bushes across the United States and its possessions. Who, I often wonder, is enjoying the cascades of white blossoms each spring or the bridal wreath I planted in an Atlanta trailer park fifteen years ago?

Is the willow I planted at Fort Dix and never got a chance to gloat over still there? Did the elm survive the severe weather conditions of Fort Riley? Do the present occupants of my beloved house on Fort Amador, Panama Canal Zone, appreciate the palm I planted for them as much as I did the bougainvillea a predecessor planted for me?

MP Sergeant Guides Local Boy Scouts; Serves as Camp McKenzie Staff Counselor

BY CLAY LACY

Since President Kennedy made his, by now, famous quote of "ask not what your country can do for you — ask what you can do for your country," Americans have sought ways to be of service. For the military man, this question means more than just wearing the uniform of the country.

Witness, for example, Sergeant Gregory T. McCabe, a veteran of two wars and over 19 years service with the United States Army. Sergeant McCabe found the answer to President Kennedy's query before the question was even asked.

Guides Boys

Sergeant McCabe decided, while serving a tour in Korea, that the way he could serve his country best was to help the youth. Says the native of Bellaire in Long Island, New York, "I don't know for sure, but it seems to me that if we guide our young boys while they are growing up, we can look forward to strong leaders in the future."

ALL-AROUND AMERICAN

To undertake this program of assisting the youth, Sergeant McCabe joined in the Redding Boy Scout program in Korea. He had been in the Boy Scouts himself as a youngster, and he endeavored to expand the Boy Scouts in his off-duty time.

Results of Sergeant McCabe's efforts were tremendous. In only three months, he had raised the membership rolles from 400 to over 1,000 Scouts!

In addition, Sergeant McCabe organized the first Sea Troop formed in Korea. His accomplishments were noted upon his departure from Korea when over 600 Scouts crowded onto the docks at Inchon to bid their American helper good-bye.

With Sergeant McCabe on his return to the States was a citation with an Order of Merit Medal presented him by the Korean Boy Scouts for his accomplishments with the Boy Scouts of Korea.

Troop 57

Assigned to the 2nd Infantry Division in July of 1959, Sergeant McCabe continued his outstanding off-duty program with Boy Scouts by serving as Assistant Scoutmaster of Troop 57, made up of boys of Army personnel stationed at Fort Benning.

Sergeant McCabe spread his influence this summer to other Scouts when he served as a member of the adult council at Camp McKenzie, outside of Columbus. To this camp, situated in Georgia pine country, came Boy Scouts from all over Georgia and Alabama for summer encampment.

SCOUTER
Sgt. McCabe

During June and July, Sergeant McCabe lived at Camp McKenzie and served as an instructor and provisional scoutmaster for many Scouts of different troops. The other members of the Camp McKenzie staff paid tribute to the Army military policeman at the end of July.

At that time, Sergeant McCabe was selected by the council to receive the Order of the Arrow award for his outstanding contribution to the summer camp.

19-Year Veteran

The 19-year-veteran served in World War II in the Philippines with the 158th Regimental Combat Team. In Korea, he saw action as an infantryman with I Corps, and later as a military policeman with that unit. He holds the Bronze Star for Valor and the Combat Infantryman's Badge.

Now 37 - years - old Sergeant McCabe hopes to retire next year from the active military service and plans to return to his native New York and work in Scouting circles. When on duty with the 2nd Division, Sergeant McCabe is a patrol supervisor with the military police detachment.

This All - Around American found that he could do for his country not only as a Soldier but also as a guiding hand for youngsters who will be the Soldiers of tomorrow.

August Soldier Picked at 69th

Specialist Five Francisco R. Reyes was selected the 69th Armor Soldier - of - the - Month for August.

Specialist Reyes is assigned as a tank driver in Company D, 69th Armor.

The Soldier-of-the-Month is selected from outstanding representatives of each of the companies by a board of First Sergeants and the Battalion Sergeant Major. In selecting the Soldier-of-the-Month, emphasis is placed upon neatness, military bearing, and general knowledge of military subjects.

Monk Finds New Back At 87th Inf's Company E

BY 87TH INF PIO

If you see the 87th Infantry's Captain Charles N. Rapp with a monkey on his back, don't be alarmed.

It's only the company mascot.

Responsibility

The squirrel monkey was presented to the Company E commander last week by the company's third platoon. It is supposed to symbolize the transfer of responsibility from the squad and platoon level to the company level.

Having recently completed the squad and platoon tests, the company is preparing for its company tests. So, the perversial monkey has found a new back.

The monkey was presented to the startled commander at a special formation by Sergeant First Class Robert E. Stallings, who, together with the third platoon, masterminded the plot and had the monk flown in from Florida.

9th Inf. S-2 Is Promoted

By 9th Inf PIO

Major Thomas A. Austin III, S-2 of the 9th Infantry, received his promotion and gold oak leaves recently at a small ceremony held at battle group headquarters.

The new major joined the 9th Infantry in February 1960, serving as commander of Company D before coming to Headquarters to assume duties as assistant S-3. He also served as the 9th's S-2 before taking the S-2 assignment.

Point Graduate

The 35-year-old field officer graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point in 1952. He has served with 33rd Infantry Regiment in Panama, with the 101st Airborne and 8th Infantry Divisions at Fort Jackson, South Carolina; 6th U. S. Army Headquarters at the Presidio of San Francisco, California; in Iceland, and with the 2nd Division's 11th Infantry.

Major Austin has departed to attend the Command and General Staff College at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas.

He is a graduate of the Advanced Infantry Course and holds the parachutists badge.

Major and Mrs. Austin live on post. They have four children.

11th Trainees Get Blue Disks As Cycle Ends

By 11th Inf PIO

The 11th Infantry celebrated the completion of its Advanced Individual Training cycle last Saturday morning at Eisenhauger Field with a parade and review ceremony.

After the battle group had formed on the field, Brigadier General Royal Reynolds, Jr., the 2nd Infantry Division's new assistant commander, and Colonel John E. Arthur, the battle group commander, inspected the troops.

Disks

One trainee from each company then marched to center to receive the blue insignia disk. This award symbolized the completion of the Advanced Individual Training cycle and the authority for all the trainees to wear the insignia disk.

Gen. Reynolds then addressed the troops and congratulated them for their successful completion of training. Upon conclusion of the General's address, the battle group passed in review. Refreshments were served immediately after the review.

Four Division Trains Pugilists Win

Henderson Kayos Walker in Two; Three Teammates Also Victorious

BY CHUCK FOSTER

Division Trains boxers were winners in four of six bouts on the 13-bout card in Briant Wells Field House recently. Emmitt Henderson of Division Trains knocked out Robert Walker of 10th Artillery and three of his teammates won by decision.

Henderson clipped Walker in the second round of their scheduled three-rounder after successfully landing combinations to the body and head of his 10th Artillery opponent.

Trains Winners

Other Division Trains winners were James Johnson, Amos Crumbley and Fred Rutherford.

Johnson defeated Amos Waters of the 29th Infantry and Crumbley won a unanimous decision from Milton Gaines, also of the 29th Infantry, in the only heavyweight bout of the night. Rutherford was the winner in his bout over Donald Burke of the 58th Army Rifle Battalion.

Finding the going a little rougher were Division Trains pugilists Melvin Lonas and Carlos Valderrama. Lonas lost to Robert Simmons of the 29th Infantry and Valderrama was defeated by Donald Carr, also of the 29th Infantry. Both losses were by decisions.

Coached by Sergeant Lou Prolago, the Trains boxing team is comprised of boxers from units throughout the 2nd Infantry Division. They are housed, fed and trained under the close supervision of Sgt. Prolago.

Two Holdovers

Rutherford and Lonas are holdovers from last year's team which captured the post championship. Lonas, whose fighting weight is 178, is gaining recognition steadily as a light-heavyweight and Rutherford, according to Sgt. Prolago, stands a good chance to capture the post light-welterweight championship.

Also bolstering the Trains team, which Sgt. Prolago feels "has championship possibilities", is Sgt. Robert E. Battle, a recent addition to the team from Company D, 87th Infantry.

"Battle should take the post welterweight title," Sgt. Prolago predicts. The Trains coach described Battle's style as similar to "Sugar Ray's (Robinson)" and expressed a hope the slugard-hitting boxer will bring additional ring honors to Division Trains.

At present Divison Trains holds third place in the running for the Post Team championship. Out front is the 29th Infantry with 71 points but close behind is the 58th ARB with 64 points. Division Trains has 49 points and is followed by the 10th Artillery with 25 points, the 151st Engineer Battalion with eight points and USAIC and TSB have combined for five points.

Three post smoker bouts remain before the Post Championship bouts in late October. All bouts are three-rounders with fighters, ranging from beginners to champions, participating.

The next scheduled smoker bouts will be held August 24 at 7:30 p.m. in Briant Wells Field House on Main Post.

DIVISION VOLLEYBALL TOURNEY POSTPONED

BY DIV PIO

The 2nd Infantry Division Volleyball Tournament, originally scheduled to begin August 17, will not get underway until August 24.

Capt. Milton Lewis, Special Services Officer, said the postponement for the beginning of the tourney was made necessary because of the large number of personnel changes being made throughout the division.

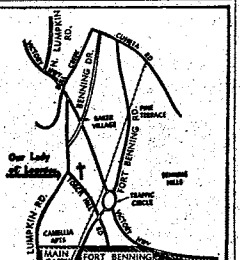
Capt. Lewis said that teams should be organized by August 24 and the tournament would get underway immediately.

Units expected to furnish 10-man teams for the tournament include the 9th Infantry, 87th Infantry, 23rd Infantry, 1st Infantry, 69th Armor, Division Trains and Division Artillery.

2nd Administration Co. Captures Softball Title

By Div PIO

The 2nd Administration Company defeated Company A, 702nd Ordnance, 2-0, recently to capture the Division Trains Company Level Softball Championship.



Manuel (Zep) Zepeda twirled the four-hit shutout for the winners, saddling Joe Royere with the loss. Royere also allowed only four hits but three of these came at crucial times.

A walk to Vince Bujan and consecutive singles by Rocco Siravo and Bob Haglof provided Zepeda with a one-run lead in the first inning. The 2nd Administration Company nine scored again in the second when John Mirenzi walked, went to third on two errors and scored on Siravo's second hit of the game, a single to center.

After the second inning, Royere shut the door and pitched shutout ball the remainder of the game.

Vince Mayer was the only Company A man to solve the slants from Zepeda. He cracked triples in the fourth and sixth innings but was unable to score.

pawn his favorite gun, and at times it even got so bad he had to get a job to earn enough money to get to the next rodeo. Brown estimates he has entered more than a hundred rodeos since 1957.

In 1957, he entered Oklahoma State University in Stillwater, Oklahoma, where he majored in business. However, attending college did not stop him from participating in rodeos. He was a member of the rodeo team at Oklahoma State University, which is affiliated with the National Intercollegiate Rodeo Association. As a member of the rodeo team from Oklahoma State University, he won the bulldogging contest at the Texas Tech Rodeo in Lubbock, Texas.

In the Fall of 1958 and the Spring of 1959, Brown won first place in the bull riding contest at the All-College Rodeo in Stillwater. Last July 4th Brown tied for third place in the bull riding contest at the Reeltown Rodeo in Alabama. Although he has entered some contests in a professional status, he still considers himself an "amateur."

Some people carry golf clubs and fishing equipment in the trunk of their car in order that they can play golf or go fishing at the drop of a hat.

Not, Bob, when his hat drops he is usually still in it. He is always ready to ride in a rodeo. He carries a bull rope, bareback rigging, three pair of spurs, chaps, riding gloves, boots and a "35 rodeo hat," in the truck of his car at all times.

When he gets out of the Army he plans to be a professional in the rodeo business in the Southwest. His highest ambition is to win first place in the Denver Fat Stock Show and Rodeo in Denver, Colo.

Brown is assigned to Headquarters Company, 69th Armor as a clerk typist in the personnel section.

TSB Recaptures Baseball Lead After Upset to 29th Infantry

BY SFC BISMARCK STITH

The 29th Infantry staged a ninth inning rally for five runs to temporarily unseat the league leading Student Brigade, 7-6, in a Fort Benning Major Unit Baseball League contest at Gowdy Field last Friday night.

John Henning was credited with the victory for the Infantrymen, backed with the powerful bats of teammates Dick Shull, Curt Gentry and Bob Capalbo.

Going into the ninth with the score 6-2, Student Brigade, the Two-Niners blasted pitcher Ken Teel and Bob Cress for six hits and five runs when Howard, Bob Whitehead and Bob Palmer each rapped a single to load the bases. Dick Shull collected his third hit of the night, a two-run single to center; Curt Gentry cleared bases with a solid hit triple to deep center to even the score, 6-6; Bob Capalbo drove in the game-winning run with a single to right scoring Gentry.

The loss dropped The Student Brigade into a tie with the 10th Artillery Redlegs for the league lead.

TSB NIPS 428TH; REGAINS FIRST

The Student Brigade edged the 428th Medics, 3-2, to regain control of first place in the Major Unit Baseball league Monday night in a league make-up contest.

TSB scored in innings 1-6-9, all three runs scored on errors by the Medics shortstop, Thomas Land. The Medics picked up one run in the second and one in the sixth.

In the second, Russell Taylor led off with a single to center; Clyde Battle followed with a single to center sending Taylor to third; Land hit a sacrifice fly to right scoring Taylor to even the score 1-1.

In the sixth the Medics evened the score again when Stephen Foote got on as the catcher dropped the third strike; Taylor smacked his third hit, a single to right field and Battle followed with a single to right sending Foote across to tie up the game.

In the ninth, The Student Brigade pitcher, Carroll Emery, got on when the shortstop overthrew first. Monza hit into a fielder's choice forcing out Emery at second; Buch beat out a bunt for a base hit sending Monza to second; Doc Green grounded to second forcing out Buch; Land, overthrowing first while trying for a double play, scored Monza for the winning run.

Emery, giving up six hits and chalking up 13 strikeouts, was credited with the victory. John Orsini, giving up five hits, suffered the loss. Bob Poston's double in the sixth led the winners at the plate. Taylor had three singles, Battle two singles and Orsini's lone single accounted for the Medic's six hits.

10TH BEATS 29TH

The 10th Artillery Redlegs nipped the 29th Infantry, 5-1, Tuesday night. The victory went to right-hander Joe Winchester. The 29th tagged him for nine hits but were able to score only one run. Roy Bowers gave up only three hits but five runs were charged with the loss.

Charles Lumpkin collected a pair of singles for the winners. Bob Palmer had the same number of hits for the losers.

This was the seventh straight triumph in nine starts for the Redlegs.

58TH HITS 428TH; SHUTS OUT 29TH

The 58th Infantry boosted their wins to five by a shutout over the 428th Medics 10-0, Saturday afternoon and handed the 29th Infantry their seventh setback by a score of 13-10 Sunday night.

Bill Carey hurled a one-hit shutout over the Medics to collect his fifth victory in the second half of Major Unit Baseball play. Bob Nelson, Freddie Morris, and Barilicato paced the winners at the plate with two hits apiece. James Gregory also contributed a single for the Infantrymen.

Freddie Morris hurled the victory over the Two-Niners while John Gerrold was the loser. Rockwell rapped a two-run homer in the seventh to pace the winners and Dick Shull cracked a solo home run in the third for the losers.

Post Sergeant Nominated For CISM Diving

A post sergeant has been nominated by The Infantry Center Special Services to compete in the 25th annual Council of International Military Sports, CISM Swimming Championships in Athens, Greece, next month.

Sfc Paul A. Bridgewater, assigned to the 2nd Battle Group, 1st Infantry, 2nd Infantry Division, is awaiting confirmation of the nomination from the Continental Army Command before making travel arrangements.

According to Special Services officials, Sgt Bridgewater will enter the one and three-meter springboard diving competition when the CISM championships convene in September.

To qualify for a nomination, a swimmer or diver must equal or better the standards set by the Department of the Army. A list of past accomplishments must also accompany the nomination.

Two Changes Effect 1961 Grid Season

Two major changes have affected the 1961 Fort Benning football schedule, eliminating one game and changing the location of another, according to Infantry Center athletic officials.

The second game on the schedule, which was tentatively set for September 24 with the Albany State College squad, was dropped. Plans are under way to get another team to fill the vacancy.

Fort Dix, which was set as an away game for the post eleven, has been changed to Doughboy Stadium November 19, giving the Doughboys an 11-game slate, six of which will be played at The Infantry Center.

The changes came with little more than four weeks remaining before the opening game with the Camp Lejeune Marines September 16 on the "Leathernecks'" home grounds. The post squad, after a two-week rest, will return to the road September 30 to meet the Quantico (Va.) Marines.

The Infantry gridders will not play at Doughboy Stadium until October 8 when they host the Fort Eustis, Va., eleven, in the first ever Infantry game on the local turf this season.

Pass, Punt and Kick Contest To Be Open to All Youngsters

A nationwide football competition that will give boys a chance to display their prowess in punting, passing and place-kicking was announced today by the Ford Division of Ford Motor Company.

The program, appropriately dubbed "P.P.&K..." will be conducted during the 1961 football season in cooperation with the National Football League.

Punt, Pass, and Kick, open to all grade-school boys from ages six through ten, will be judged by coaches, professional football players and recreation officials.

Judging each event will be fairly simple. Scoring will be based on distance and accuracy, with one point for each foot the ball travels in the air, minus one point for each foot the ball lands to the right or left of a center line.

"The objective of the program," an official explained, "is to create interest in sports and physical fitness among American youngsters by giving them a chance to test competitively their skill in punting, passing, and place-kicking a football."

Elaborating on the physical fitness aspects of the program, he noted the following comment the division received from the Council on Youth Fitness in Washington, D. C.: "We feel that the objectives of the President's Council on Youth Fitness are such that they should be of concern to every American. In fact, it is only through the concern, support and cooperation of every possible organization and individual that our goals will be reached. . ."

"Your contest will make it possible for millions of young boys of boys who have been unable to 'make the team' have been deprived of the benefits offered by participation in the sport of football. This program will make it possible for all boys to participate."

Hundreds of thousands of dollars in sports equipment and other prizes will be awarded to the contestants.

The program will start with local contests conducted by Fort dealers. There will be local prize winners, first, second and third place in each of the five age groups. First place winners will have a chance to be named regional winners selected on the basis of the highest scores attained in local contests.

Winners of regional championships in each age group will compete for national honors in spectacular pro-game half-time programs in view of thousands of fans and the stadiums and millions more watching television.

The national champions in each age group will take part in half-time ceremonies of the NFL Championship Game and will receive a trip to Washington where they will be accorded with an official White House reception.

Starting with the regional competitions, fathers will accompany their sons, all expenses paid.

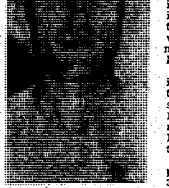
Although exact dates have not yet been announced, registration for the program will start later this month, with actual competitions beginning in October.

American boys to participate in a program which will promote interest in physical fitness and athletic competition. We wish you every success."

Commissioner Pete Rozelle of the National Football League pointed out that the NFL is cooperating in the promotion of P.P.&K. and lauded the program as a "youth activity that will contribute to the health and happiness of American youngsters."

"Despite the efforts of organized sports in many areas," Rozelle added, "mil-

Today's Sportrait



Spc Andy Green, Headquarters Battery, 2nd Howitzer Battalion, 10th Artillery, 1st Infantry Brigade, is a stock car driver, whose interest in drag racing predates his first participation in 1956 while stationed at Fort Bliss.

He won his first race there plus 18 more before he departed for overseas.

Stock racing is divided into classes from "A" thru "F", determined by the size of the automobile's engine. Green drives a 1959 Impala down the quarter-mile oval track in the class "A" stock.

When a driver is a winner in his class, he becomes eligible to race in the stock elimination. Winners of each class comprise this elimination.

Out of five races in Maryville, Tenn., Green was winner of his class five times, and a one-time stock elimination winner. He moved in from his home town of Hendersonville, N. C., three times.

ANDY GREEN

"Of course, competition is stiffer at home because the better drivers from all over the country go there to race", says Green.

When asked if there was much danger in racing, Green replied, "no, there isn't, as a matter of fact, it's safer on the race track than on the streets and highways. The tracks are well maintained and supervised by local police."

Since arriving at Benning in June, Green has raced on the Phenix City dragstrip, south on Alabama highway 165, five times. He was winner of his class four times. In his last race he also won the stock elimination.

Green has a total of 31 trophies won in 31 races out of 32. He has won the stock elimination six times.

According to a release from the National Rifle Association hundreds of its affiliated clubs across the country are planning "Sighting-In" days for hunter members and their guests.

"Sighting In" means practice firing of weapons to learn just where sights should be set to hit targets at given ranges. In addition, the NRA program teaches weapons capabilities, fundamentals of safe gun handling, shotgun patterning, slug testing and other subjects of importance to accurate and safe field shooting.

Here at Fort Benning most of us are acquainted with the rifle, but on post the shotgun is the authorized hunting weapon. Surprizingly enough, where we have riflemen who can shoot your ears off at 1,000 yards, we have a vast number of hunters who look upon the shotgun as a "gas-pipe", a "scatter gun" which "any idiot should be able to shoot".

Granted the shotgun is not as precise a weapon as our International Free Rifle, for example, but let's not think that precision isn't a deciding factor where accurate shotgun handling is concerned.

Too many of us buy shotguns, stuff our pockets with shells, and head for the woods on opening day thinking that we're ready for anything that comes along.

Then, too many of us return from the day's hunt with nothing but alibis as to why we shot up three boxes of shells at doves without a hit, missed (or just wounded) that deer, or didn't dust the feathers of a quail.

I'm no whiz at shotgunning but I do understand that there are dozens of points which govern success or failure of the shotgun pointer. The weapon must fit the gunner to a "T" . . . if it doesn't, he'll shoot over or under his target—or to one side or the other. He must know just where the shotgun shoots, just where it places its pattern of shot at a certain distance and whether that pattern consists of evenly-spaced shot.

Choice of shot size or game hunted is another factor which has to be considered and especially the rifled slug. Deer hunters should get a lot of practice in with the heavy slugs so as to know just where they land at certain ranges, just what the maximum range should be, and so on. Above all, a lot of deer would be saved from this "way back in the bind quarters if the shotgunner matched up principles of lead with the particular traits of his own weapon.

Practice of this nature now will pay off when hunting season comes. I suggest you drop out to the Skeet Club and you'll get detailed information on all these points and learn that the shotgun isn't the "casual" weapon so many people believe it to be.

Of The Week

Manager Ralph Houk of the Yankees made this statement about pitchers: "As a rule when you go out to the mound to make a change, the pitcher will tell you he feels fine and that he's sure he can get the next batter out. So you let him stay and then regret you ever listened to him."
