87th Builds 3 Run Lead Into Victory

The Conqueror softball team lengthened its lead in the division tournament last week by trouncing Division Artillery 12-5.

This also boosted the 87th Infantry in the point standings for the Commanding General's Sports Trophy, having dropped Division Artillery deeper into second place.

Three Run Lead in First Inning

The game was played under clear skies last Friday night at Main Field, Division Artillery's home grounds. The 87th hitters got off to a quick three run lead in the first stanza and built it up to a 10 run lead by the third.

Division Artillery pitcher Thompson was relieved by Don Barksdale in the third and the game settled down to a pitching duel between Barksdale and 87th ace Leonard Goodwin, who racked up his fifth win of the season, giving up six hits.

The Conquerors picked up 12 hits sparked by a three run homer by Jerry Handy, a two run homer by Lawery Jordan and a pair of timely doubles by Joseph Gross.

LT. COL. HARDGROVE (L) SEEN With MSgt. Holbrook, Post Pro, After His Victory

Martindale Wins Open

Col. Hardgrove Wins TIC Senior Golf Title

Lt. Col. George G. Hardgrove competing in the Senior's Division, shot the lowest 72-hole total in the 1962 Infantry Center Golf Tournament held at Fort Benning recently.

In winning the division for competitors over 45, Hardgrove carded rounds of 71, 73, 67 and 70 for a total of 281.

The next best score was logged by the winner of the Men's Open Division, 2nd Lt. Bill Martindale. A former All-American golfer for Texas A&M College, Martindale hoted rounds of 71, 73, 66 and 73, for a 72-hole total of 283.

The two winners were the only ones to finish the meet under the 288 par score.

Sgt. Betty Farmer captured the Women's Division.

Winners To Represent Post

The winners will represent the post in the Third Army tournament at Fort Gordon, July 16 to 19.

In addition, the next three top players in the Open Division and the runner-up in the seniors will be on the post team.

He was followed by 2nd Lt. Joe Hamby with 295 and Sp 4 Hugh Royer with 296.

MSgt. Howard Holbrook was runner-up in the seniors with a 7-hole total of 320.

Tournament director was 1st Sgt. Alonzo Newbern. Newbern will serve as manager and coach of the team during the Third Army meet.

ADDRESSING THE BALL... With a proper grip and stance, you are ready to put the club to the ball. Position of the club determines your body's distance from the ball. The bottom of the club should rest level on the ground. If the toe sticks up, you're too far away. If the club's heel is up, you're too close. Left arm forms a straight line with the club; your hands should appear to be slightly ahead of the ball. Now you're ready to start the backswing.

The Student Brigade Posts Its 17th Straight Victory; Spell Wins 11th

By SFC Bismarck Stith

The Student Brigade Tiger's behind the coaching of Bob Kinard and the pitching of righthander Charles Spell (11-0), came up with their 16th and 17th consecutive victories by defeating the 29th Infantry 8-6 and edging the 10th Artillery "Redlegs" 5-1.

Spell hurled his 11th consecutive victory, a three-hitter, while his teammates blasted Redlegs' hurler John Couch for seven hits and five runs. This victory gave the TSB a season record of 19-2.

Jessie Joyce and Bob Kinlaw led their team at the plate with two singles apiece. Harvey Walker's two singles and Coach's single paced the Redlegs' hitting attack. Starter John Couch was charged with the setback.

The Tigers still on the war path, handed the 29th Infantry an 8-6 setback. The Infantrymen scored two runs in the first and two in the second, while starter Clifton Johnson held the Tigers in check. In the sixth inning, the Tigers rallied for four runs to go along with Jessie Joyce's fifth inning solo homer to go ahead in the game, 5-4.

The Two-Niners came back in the seventh to score two more runs to take the lead, 6-5, but the hungry Tigers bounced back with two runs in the seventh and one in the eighth to cinch the victory.

TSB's Linwood Oates (7-1) twirled the win after getting off to a shaky start. James Battle, who relieved Johnson in the six inning, was tagged with the loss.

Jessie Joyce paced his teammates at the plate with a solo home and a double. Bill Silva's, Jim Padgett's and Bob Yerger's two singles apiece also boosted the hitting attack for the TSB nine.

Eloy Zamora's triple in the first inning and Dave Lynn's two singles paced the Infantrymen.

Engineers Split

The 151st Engineers split their doubleheader bowing to the 10th Artillery Redlegs, 12-7, and bounced back to hand the 428th Medical Battalion their second straight setback, 7-3.

In the Artillerymen game both teams had six hits apiece, but the Engineers committed nine errors.

Joe Winchester was credited with the win while Paul Synder suffered the loss.

Robert Steward's two singles led the winners in the hitting department. Engineer's Edward Beer's two-run inside the park home run and a single along with Curt Drummond's two singles sparked the losers hitting attack.

In the second game, the Engineers blasted the Medic's righthander, Charles Smith for 11 hits and 7 runs.

In the fourth Maurice Weatherton pushed Charles Smith across for the Medics first tally with a single into left centerfield. The Medics secured twice in the eighth to account for their third run.

Hubert Grossett's three singles; Curt Drummond's double and a single; Edward Beer's two singles and Harold O'Niel's triple led the Engineers hitting attack.

156th Signal Whips CTC, 9-3

The 156th Signal Battalion won their opener by blasting TICTC for ten hits and a 9-3, victory behind the pitching of Don Rumvett.

The Signalmen's big inning came in the second when they collected four runs on three hits. Bob Bernatski drew a base on balls; Rummett smacked single into center; Harold Dennis got on an error; Milan Puregraski hit into a fielder's choice forcing Dennis. Paul Bando's two-run triple cleared the bases. Mike Stocke's single scored Bando.

Bando's triple and a single paced the Signalmen's at the plate while Miller led TICTC hitting attack with three for four, a double and two singles. Floyd Olczak's double and a single was added to the losers hitting attack.

TSB Rips TICTC

In other games around the loop TSB tripped TICTC 7-1, Charles Spell, TSB's fireball artist was the winning hurler. Spell held his opponents scoreless until the ninth inning when TICTC's Fred Valentine tagged a fastball for a triple and scored on teammate William Howard's grounder to second baseman Ralph Maru.

Bill Silva had three hits for three trips for TSB, including a triple, double and a single. TSB's third baseman, Jesus Herrans connected with his second four-bagger, a two-run homer in the seventh frame to help the cause.

LONG-BALL HITTER... 1st Sgt. David Francis (R), Company C, 1st Battalion, The Infantry Center Troop Command, is all set to drive one out of the park. Pvt. Robert L. Oorbeck also of Company C, is the catcher, as Pvt. William Hill of Company C calls the balls and strikes. Sgt. Francis acts as "Official Heckler" at all Company C softball games. Company C is currently undefeated in company level softball.

FISH SPECIALISTS TO VISIT POST

The wildlife coordinator reports that fishery management biologists of the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service will be on post this week to render technical assistance in connection with the post's fish management program.

The biologists are expected to spend several days making detailed studies and recommendations on management of nearly all post ponds. Kings and Headleys ponds will be checked to determine if proper population ratios continue to exist and evaluate effectiveness of the fertilization program.

The feeding program and compatability of the stocked catfish and trout at Russ Pond will be studied.

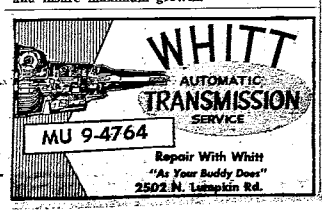
Seine analysis will be made at Stephens, Kirks and Pattersons ponds in an effort to find if ponds are in proper balance. These ponds have recently been included in the fertilization program.

Biologists are expected to make final recommendations concerning stocking of the recently renovated Averetts Pond which was completed during the past week. Also of particular interest will be the weed control experiments at Weems Pond. Several types of chemicals were used to clear water lilies from the pond.

Biologists will assist in evaluating results and make recommendations concerning possible treatment of portions of the entire pond.

FISHING AROUND POST

Reports have been spotty concerning catches during the past week. Kings Pond was yielding some bream and bass but generally activity was on the slow side despite the good condition of the pond.



There were several reports of good bass catches at Harps and Weems ponds. One angler netted a nice string of small bass at Harps while there have been no indication that any lunkers have been taken within the last week or two.

Sgt. Charles Collins of 3rd Field Hospital, 428th Medical Battalion, landed five nice bass at Weems Pond last week. The largest tipped the scales at 2 1-2 pounds and all were taken on minnows.

POND FERTILIZATION

In a recent issue of Alabama Conservation, fishery biologist Archie Hooper of the Game and Fish Division states the proper fertilization of a pond may increase the fish production by as much as 600 per cent. Fertilization will also aid greatly in preventing a pond from becoming infested with undesirable aquatic vegetation (pond weeds).

He further states that fishing is an integral part of good pond management. Proper fishing helps to maintain the proper number of fish and insure maximum growth.

OCS Field Day

Ancient Greek Event Recalled By Athletes

By Sp4 Bruce N. Yiffee

Athletics and the military have been traditionally associated since before the days of the ancient Greeks.

The Greeks, however, were the first to enact an annual event, known to us as the Olympic Games. These games were comprised of skills that were closely connected to the military. Events included the javelin discus (a form of stone throwing) and of course, running events, including the famed Marathon.

Same Spirit

Although warfare and weapons have changed greatly, the original games have changed comparatively little. Yet the same spirit that was no doubt prevalent during the first Greecian games has carried through to the present.

Competitive sporting events are as much a part of the modern Army, as is drill and command. Therefore it is not unusual to find a gauntlet being thrown down in this day and age.

Members of 52nd Officer Candidate Company, 5th Student Battalion, The Student Brigade, re-enacted an old tradition recently that has been suspended since 1958. That tradition was a challenge posed by the junior officer candidates to their senior counterparts 50th OC Company, to hold a field day.

Members of both companies were pitted against each other in a series of athletic events that took place at Briant Wells Field House and Eubanks Field.

The OCS Field Day has had two major changes since 1958. The first was the addition of swimming events and the second being that this is the first year that the junior company has hosted the event.

There were 13 events. Unlucky number? Not so for the junior candidates as they walked away with the total honors of the day.

First-place winners were: 100-yard dash S-OC Wardell C. Smith 50th Company; 220-yard dash OC Melford R. Willis 52nd company; 440-yard run S-OC Gary L. Steele 50th Company; 880-yard run OC Michael A. Kalis OC Melford R. Willis OC Don H. Gilbert OC Gary J. Tellier, 52nd Company.

One-mile run S-OC Wardell C. Smith 50th Company; high jump OC John W. Dempsey 52nd Company; broad jump S-OC Gary L. Steele 50th Company; grenade throw OC Raymond E. Rupcic, 52nd Company; sack race, OC John J. A. Brin 50th Company; tug-o-war, senior candidates of 50th Company.

Swimming Events

One-hundred-yard freestyle OC Frederick F. Menizer 52nd Company; 50-yard freestyle OC James R. Gelinas 52nd Company; 50-yard backstroke OC Edward R. Lesene Sr. 52nd Norton 52nd Company; three-legged race, S-OC Gary E. Roth S-OC Robert A. Pete 50th Company; PT test S-OC John A. Murley, S-OC William M. Two-hundred-yard freestyle relay OC Walter L. Wessell OC James R. Gelinas, OC John G. Henigham, OC Frederick F. Menizer, 52nd Company; 200-yard medley, OC James W. Kelsey, OC Walter L. Wessell, OC John G. Henigham, OC Edward R. Lesene Sr. 52nd Company.

Today's Sportrait

Today's Sportrait spotlights 2nd Lt. Fred J. Murphy, Infantry Center Special Services Section, from Atlanta, Ga. Murphy is a product of the Minnesota Vikings football team of the National Football League.

Lt. Murphy's athletic career dates back to high school where he played baseball, basketball, football and ran track.

He played his collegiate football with Georgia Tech. Lt. Murphy held down the offensive end position for three years and went to the Gator Bowl in 1959.

In 1960, he was signed to the Cleveland Browns where he played 16 of their 18 scheduled games the Browns finished in second place in the Eastern Division that season.

He also played in the first Runner-Up Bowl held in Miami, Fla. The game was against the Detroit Lions, with the Lions edging the Browns, 17-16.

In 1961, the NFL decided to field another team—the Minnesota Vikings". Lt. Murphy and two other teammates of the Cleveland Browns were drafted for the new team where he played 18 games out of 20 during the 1961 season.

Lt. Murphy is still being carried on the roster of the Vikings and will return to them after his military obligation is completed. He was called to active duty from ROTC status last April.

NEW ACADEMIC BUILDING . . . Most of the work on The Infantry School's new academic building, estimated to cost about $8 million, has been concentrated on the site development up until this time. This includes clearing and grading, and the laying of drainage systems. Scheduled completion date has been set for May, 1964.

'Special War' Center Adds New Course

WASHINGTON (ANS)—The Army's counterinsurgency program is gaining momentum with the establishment of a new high-level course to begin in July at the Army Special Warfare School, Fort Bragg, N.C.

The four and one-half day Senior Officer Counterinsurgency and Special Warfare Orientation Course is under the direction of the Continental Army Command and is open to members of the active Armed Forces in the grade of colonel or higher and government civilian employees of comparable rank.

The new course is one of several specialized evidences of the overall Army Counterinsurgency effort. Under the expanding program, all soldiers stationed in the U.S. and overseas will be given guidance and instruction in the subject, with emphasis in training and operational techniques of counter-guerrilla warfare and the importance of civic action projects in support of each operation.

Counterinsurgency, as defined by the Army, includes all military, political, economic, psychological, and sociological activities directed toward preventing and suppressing resistance groups whose actions range in degree of violence and scope from subversive political activity to violent actions by large guerrilla elements to overthrow a duly established government.

Screen Air Travel Needs; To Use Less First Class

WASHINGTON (ANS)—The Department of the Army is screening its travel requirements to assure that other than first class air travel is used when mission requirements permit.

The action is in accordance with a Department of Defense directive to use less first class commercial air travel whenever possible and to reduce the number of officials who may authorize such travel.

For overseas travel, DOD ordered that use be made of scheduled military air transportation, including commercial airlift contracted for by the Military Air Transport Service (MATS) where it will meet mission requirements satisfactorily and economically. For individually-ticketed travel, first consideration will be given to the special arrangements made by MATS with commercial carriers.

In a recent memorandum on "Class of Air Travel," Deputy Secretary of Defense, Roswell L. Gilpatric said that as a general policy the Department of Defense will use less than first class air accommodations, including shuttle services, to the maximum extent consistent with successful accomplishment of DOD missions.

However, he said he recognized that lower class travel may not always be available, and that use of it may at times require travel at unreasonable hours, require a circuitous route, or result in added direct expense, off-setting transportation savings. In such cases, use of first class accommodations is warranted.

Water Safety IsEmphasized For Safe Fun

All Fort Benning personel who go fishing, boating or participate in any activity around water are reminded the week beginning July 1 has been designated by President John F. Kennedy as "National Safe Boating Week."

The purpose of this designation is to emphasize the need for greater attention to boating courtesy and safety, to make boating one of the safest family sports and to help maintain high safety standards on waterways.

Officials at The Infantry Center Safety Section urge all personnel to learn the common safety rules of boating, and to practice them not only this week but the next and the next and the one after that.

1,100 Fatalities

A national survey shows there were 1,100 fatalities in boating accidents in 1961, and most of the mishaps involved the owners of small outboards.

The best way to protect yourself and your family is to learn some of the things to do and not to do when on the water.

Here are ten "don'ts" published by the National Safety Council.

Don't overload your boat; don't be without lifesaving devices; don't become overconfident; don't drink to excess when boating; don't go out in bad weather; don't operate a boat without some boat-handling knowledge; don't be reckless; don't neglect maintenance; don't violate the "rules of the road" and don't abandon your common safety sense.

Remember These!

Some "do's" to remember are: make sure your boat is seaworthy; make sure the motor you're using is right for the size of your boat; make sure there are life preservers for each passenger, a fire extinguisher and lights; make sure you know the weather forecast before putting out, and make sure you practice the rules of safety and courtesy at all times.

Accident prevention is the key to safety, but some accidents are unavoidable, and the next best thing is to learn what to do if a mishap occurs.

According to post safety director, Norman M. Evans, if your boat overturns don't leave it, unless you're absolutely sure the shore is within reach.

Most all boats will stay afloat after turning over and the best bet is to stay with it.

Learn to Swim

Evans further said that people who go out in boats should know how to swim. This should be a prerequisite, but if they don't, be added, they should never remove their life preserver.

He also said, if caught in a storm, or if you see one approaching, head for the nearest shore. Rough wind and lightning can be fatal.

Knowledge of first aid was another point he emphasized, particularly artificial respiration.

The easiest and quickest to apply is insufflation, or more simply, mouth-to-mouth respiration.

This is accomplished by immediately clearing the victims air passage if it is blocked by striking him sharply on the back or by dislodging it with your fingers.

Place victim on his back with head back and neck fully extended. Elevate his jaw by inserting your thumb between his teeth, grasping the lower jaw and lifting until the bottom row of teeth are higher than the top row.

Close his nose by pinching it between the fingers and thumb. Place your mouth over his, maintaining airtight contact, and blow air into his mouth until you see the chest rise. Then remove your mouth and let him exhale.

If the chest doesn't rise, check the positions of his head and jaw, and check for further obstructions.

Repeat the steps outlined above 12 times each minute, 20 times for children, until the victim revives.

Remember, the safety direct or reminds, safety depends on the individual, whether in a boat, at home, at work, or driving.

Reservists Are Reviewed

As part of the competition for the best Reserve component, conducted by the 1st Infantry Brigade, a review was recently held at Todd Field in the Harmony Church area.

Reviewing officers were Col. Richard W. Keyes, commanding officer of the 1st Infantry Brigade, and Maj. Fred N. Scott, commanding officer of the 156th Signal Battalion.

Participating in the review from the 156th Signal Battalion were Headquarters Company, from Detroit, Mich., commanded by 1st Lt. Robert A. Howard; Company A, Detroit, Mich., commanded by 1st Lt. Robert G. Noren; Company B, Adrian, Mich., commanded by Capt. Melvin C. Dye; Company C, Kalamazoo, Mich., commanded by 1st Lt. Gordon L. Wallace; Company D, Monroe, Mich., commanded by 1st Lt. Grant B. Swift. Also participating were Company C, 204th Signal Battalion, Festus, Mo., commanded by Capt. Earl D. Aubuchon the 233 Signal Company, Indianapolis, Ind., commanded by Capt. John R. Kerr, and the 111th Signal Company, Greenville, S. C., commanded by Capt. Perry J. Bryan.

Maj. Harold D. Straub of the 156th was Commander of Troops for the review.

The review marked the first appearance of the 156th Signal's new colors. The colors were carried by Company C of the 156th, while the music was furnished by The Infantry Center Band.

Deadline July 30

'Cover Contest' Set By Magazine Editors

The editors of Infantry Magazine need a cover for the November - December Issue of the magazine, and as a result are holding a contest for Fort Benning enlisted personnel.

Anyone who feels he can design, draw and have his entry ready by the deadline date of July 30, may win $50.

There will be only one prize. Each individual may submit as many as three entries.

Rules are as follows:

(1) The cover may use any or all of these colors: black, the magazines usual blue and any two others. The printing process will not be a color photo separation process. It will be mechanical.

(2) The cover design must include the current logo flag, but may be reduced up to 50 per cent from its May, 1962 size. It must include the issue date and some reference to the fact that it is the magazines 40th anniversary.

(3) The finished entry must be capable of exact scale down to eight and three-eighths by 11 and one-quarter inches. The final trim size will be eight and one-quarter by 11 inches. Artist may use any layout (vertical) with up to and including four-way bleed.

(4) The cover must reach Infantrymen. Study back issues.

(5) The editor will select a single judge, not from the Editorial and Pictorial Office and preferably from off post. His decision will be final for both the magazine and the contestants. Entries not selected will be returned.

(6) Please advise the magazine by phoning FA 5-4791 by June 30 if you plan to enter. If nobody enters the contest, we cannot afford to wait until July 30 to find out.

(7) The law will not allow us to pay for any work done on duty time.

(8) Deliver entries to Infantry Magazine, EPO, Bldg. 399

The magazine staff will be glad to discuss any technical questions but will not discuss subjective matters with any contestants.

1st Pershing Battalion Is Activated

WASHINGTON (AFPS)—The Army's first Pershing missile battalion has been activated at Ft. Sill, Okla.

Designated the 3d Missile Battalion (Pershing), 44th Artillery, the new unit will have an authorized strength of 615 officers and enlisted personnel.

Four firing batteries, a headquarters and headquarters battery and a service battery form a Pershing battalion. The firing batteries each have one launcher capable of delivering a nuclear warhead to a target more than 200 miles away.

The Pershing is an inertially guided, solid propellant missile system intended to replace the Redstone. All its equipment can be transported on four lightweight, full-tracked vehicles or by helicopter or assault aircraft.

Cites Need for Centrally Controlled Nuclear System

WASHINGTON (AFPS)—The United States advocates a single nuclear deterrent strategy for the free world alliance, Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara told University of Michigan graduates at this year's Commencement Day exercises.

He took the stand that "limited" nuclear capabilities, such as our allies could afford, operating independently of the alliance, would be "dangerous, expensive, prone to obsolescene and lacking in credibility as a deterent."

Mr. McNamara said, "There must not be competing and conflicting strategies to meet the contingency of nuclear war. We are convinced that a general nuclear war target system is indivisible, and if, despite all our efforts, nuclear war should occur, our best hope lies in conducting a centrally controlled campaign against all of the enemy's vital nuclear capabilities, while retaining reserve forces, all centrally controlled.

"A central military issue facing NATO today is the role of nuclear strategy. Four facts seem to us to dominate consideration of that role. All of them point in the direction of increased integration to achieve our common defense.

"First, the alliance has over-all nuclear strength adequate to any challenge confronting it our common defense.

"Second, this strength not only minimizes the likelihood of major nuclear war, but makes possible a strategy designed to preserve the fabric of our societies if war should occur.

"Third, damage to the civil societies of the alliance resulting from nuclear warfare could be very grave.

"Fourth, improved non-nuclear forces, well within alliance resources, could enhance deterrence of any aggressive moves short of direct, all-out attack on Western Europe."

The secretary went on to say that with the current balance of nuclear power which we expect to maintain, a surprise nuclear attack would not be a rational act on the part of an enemy. Neither would be the use of nuclear weapons resulting from a limited engagement in Europe or elsewhere. "I think," he said, "we are entitled to conclude that either of these actions has been made highly unlikely."

He admitted that the fact that it would be irrational for a nation to begin a nuclear war does not guarantee that such a war cannot take place. He explained that not only do nations sometimes act in ways that are hard to explain on a rational basis, but even when acting rationally they sometimes act on a basis of misstandings of the true facts of a situation.

"We must hope, indeed I think we have good reason to hope, that all sides will understand this danger and will refrain from steps that even raise the possibility of such a mutually disastrous misunderstanding," Mr. McNamara said.

"We look forward to the prospect that through arms control, the actual use of these terrible weapons may be completely avoided. It is a problem for all nations that are involved in this struggle we call the Cold War.

"For our part, we feel we and our NATO allies must frame our strategy with this terrible contingency, however remote, in mind. Simply ignoring the problem is not going to make it go away."

The U. S. conclusion on basic military strategy in a nuclear war, according to Mr. McNamara, is much the same as that of conventional military operations in the past. Principal military objectives should be the destruction of the enemy's military forces, not his civilian population.

However, he explained, the very strength and nature of the alliance make it possible to retain, even in the event of a massive surprise attack, a reserve striking power sufficient to destroy an enemy society if driven to it.

"In other words," he said, "we are giving a possible opponent the strongest imaginable incentive to refrain from striking our own cities."

The danger of relatively small national nuclear forces, independent of the alliance, lies in their ineffectiveness as deterents and the possibility of their threat against the cities of a major nuclear power causing that power to make a first strike against them. The use of these small independent forces against an enemy city would be suicidal, and their effectiveness against significant military targets negligible, he explained.

"In short, then, limited nuclear capabilities, operating independently are dangerous, expensive, prone to obsolescene, and lacking in credibility as a deterrent," Mr. McNamara said. "Clearly, the U. S. contribution to the alliance is neither obsolete nor dispensable."

Hitting at any fears that the United States would be reluctant to come to the defense of Europe in case of a nuclear attack, the Secretary said, "We know that the same forces which are targeted on ourselves are also targeted on our allies. Our own strategic retaliatory forces are prepared to respond against these forces, wherever they are and whatever their targets. This mission is assigned not only in fulfillment of our treaty commitments but also because the character of nuclear war compels it.

"More specifically," he continued, "the United States is as much concerned with that portion of Soviet nuclear striking power that can reach Western Europe as with that portion that also can reach the United States. In short, we have undertaken the nuclear defense of NATO on a global basis. This will continue to be our objective. In the execution of this mission the weapons in the European theater are only one resource among many."

He cited our growing Polaris force as an example of U. S. contributions to alliance nuclear power, in particular the commitment of five Polaris submarines, fully operational, to the NATO Command.

"We shall continue to maintain powerful nuclear forces for the alliance as a whole," Mr. McNamara said. He quoted President Kennedy as saying, "Only through such strength can we be certain of deterring a nuclear strike, or an overwhelming ground attack, on our forces and allies."

CONARC Undergoes Change Tomorrow

On July 1st the Continental Army Command, headed by Gen. Herbert B. Powell, will assume its new functions under the reorganization plan announced in January, 1962. Realignment of the headquarters structure at Fort Monroe was effected in May.

The new Continental Army Command is the culmination of an evolutionary process which began with the activation of General Headquarters, Army in Washington on July 26, 1940. Its initial wartime mission was to command and train all ground units in the U. S.

Its role was later expanded to that of anoperational post for the Army chief of staff in his capacity as commanding general of the field forces.

Under subsequent reorganization CONARC has had the responsibility for training all ground combat units and personnel within the zone of interior and had adjusted to peacetime requirements for commanding the six continental armies.

In 1954 CONARC assumed responsibility for a major portion of the Army's development effort. Under the reorganization CONARC's responsibilities in the areas of material development, combat development, organization and equipment of units, and the preparation of current doctrine were reassigned to other Department of the Army agencies.

An important new mission of CONARC is to provide the commander and staff of the Army component (ARSTRIKE) of the new unified STRIKE Command. To accomplish this mission CONARC prepares contingency plans, conducts maneuvers and tests, and supports deployment of combat-ready units on orders of the Joint Chiefs of Staff through STRICOM.

As commander - in - chief of ARSTRIKE Gen. Powell directs eight combat division forces, two operational corps plus combat and combat service support units. This is the largest combat command in the entire Army, embodying 261,293 members of the active Army in 772 units, and the 117,295 reserve personnel in 439 units called up for active duty during the Berlin crisis.

Offices Give 'Fair Share' To AER Fund

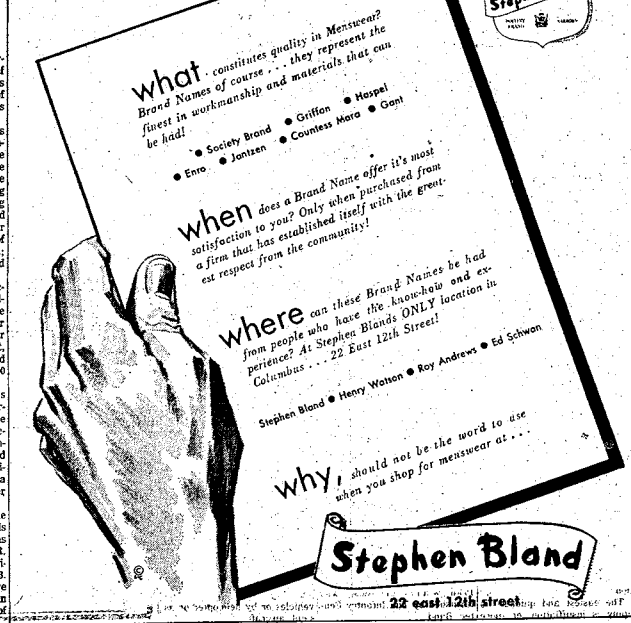
The 1962 joint Army Emergency Relief and Army Relief Society fund drive to date has resulted in contributions of $8,760.11, the AER office has reported.

Among general staff officers sections, five offices have contributed 100 per cent or more of their "fair share" to the fund campaign. They include the offices of the commanding general, deputy commanding general, chief of staff and secretary general staff, 100 per cent; the assistant chiefs of staff for G-2, 167 per cent; G-3, G-4, 117 per cent, and comptroller, 100 per cent.

Six special staff officers sections have also met or exceeded their quota. They are the adjutant general with 225 per cent; provost marshal, 111 per cent; chaplain, 200 per cent, and the signal, finance and transportation, each with 100 per cent.

Four Infantry School sections have likewise equalled or surpassed their goal. They include the assistant commandant; secretary, with 175 per cent; communications, 16 per cent, and the Department of Non-Resident Instruction, and the data processing office with 100 per cent.

The Student Brigade is the largest individual unit in funds contributed. The Brigade has collected $2,296 for the AER. Second is the 1st Infantry Brigade with collections of $1,548.



The AER-ARS fund drive will continue until Aug. 10 in an effort to reach its goal of $40,000.

468 Earn Badge of Parachutist

Parachutist Badges were pinned on 468 students representing three branches of the U.S. Armed Forces and an Allied country in graduation ceremonies recently.

Honor graduate of The Infantry School course was Army Fly Dennis A. Drost of Spooner, Wis.

Allied officers were Capt. Alliegowo and 1st Lt. Usman of Indonesia.

Army to Pay For Trailers At Move Time

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — The Army has published its regulation authorizing the movement of privately-owned house trailers and mobile homes on Government bills of lading. Similar regulations have been or will be published in the near future by the other services.

Under the new system, a service member authorized shipment of household goods may have a commercial hauler transport his trailer while the Government picks up the tab for the move. Any charges over and above the maximum allowance of 36 cents per mile are then billed to the trailer owner.

Previously, the serviceman made his own arrangements, paid the bill and then put in a claim for reimbursement to the amount of the Government's contribution. In the event of a long, cross-country move, this could amount to an outlay of hundreds of dollars by the serviceman before he could get delivery of his mobile home.

In the case of a large mobile home, measuring 50 feet long or more and 10 or more feet in width, the charges run up to 50 cents per mile, plus toll charges and cost permits levied by various states.

Excepted from shipment on Government bills of lading are trailers belonging to persons resigning, being discharged or separated from active duty who will not be in a pay status, unless it can be predetermined that the moving of the trailer will not result in excess costs.

The same exception applies to the movement of a trailer belonging to a person who died in service. However, movement at Government expense, up to the allowance limits, is authorized in this case regardless of the rank or grade of the deceased member.

Retiring members are entitled to move on a bill of lading, an Army spokesman said, since while leaving active duty they will still be in a pay status.

50 NCO's Back From 'Look See'

Fifty senior non-commissioned officers of Army National Guard and Reserve units called to active duty last fall, all participants of "Operation Look See IV," have returned to the U. S.

"Operation Look See IV" was a seven-day troop information field training trip under the direction of Gen. Herbert B. Powell, commanding general, Headquarters, Continental Army Command, Ft. Monroe, Va.

The trip enabled participants to see at first hand the military situation in Berlin and along the East German border and to witness the combat readiness of units of the U. S. Army Europe and the Army of West Germany.

Army and Navy Studying Day-Night Flight Methods

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — The Army and Navy are continuing their research efforts to find instruments that will permit helicopters to operate day or night in all kinds of weather.

A new contract for $1.1 million has been awarded for the continuation of the project which has been going for eight years.

Funds will be used specifically to "develop an airborne flight test vehicle equipped with new instrumentation and simplified control system developed earlier in the program."

Naval Research Reviews explains the Army - Navy Instrumentation Program (ANIP) goal, what it has accomplished and the latest system this way:

"The ANIP provides for a flight instrumentation system consisting in part of two basic displays — one set vertically and the other horizontally in front of the pilot.

"A path - like representation of the plane's prescribed course appears on the vertical screen against a presentation of the sky and ground.

"When the plane is exactly on course, this 'path-way in the sky' stretches ribbon - like in front of the pilot, just as a road appears when driving a car.

"If the pilot veers off course, the pathway appears at one side or above or below him. The horizontal screen displays a map of the area, showing navigational position, fuel range, ground track and the relation of the vehicle to its proper course."

Raw data from the same sources that feed data to the dials of conventional instrument panels are converted to simple pictures by a computer capable of making 15,000 computations a second.

Post MP's Receive Compliments On Performance Of Daily Duties

In a letter to The Bayonet and in letters to individual members of the force, Fort Benning's military policemen have been complimented highly.

Writing to The Bayonet, Mrs. Billie J. Shelton said, "We have been stationed here for six months and may I say that I've yet to meet more courteous, polite and friendly military policemen anywhere."

"To start or end each day just right," the letter continued, "I look forward to that friendly 'Good morning, Madam,' or 'Good evening, Madam,' with its accompanying smile."

"We ladies do appreciate these courtesies," it reads, "and may I take this method of thanking each and every one of you."

"Friendliness," the letter added, "takes only a little time but it is well worth the effort. Courtesy doesn't cost a thing and is such a delight to others, and is usually returned to the giver."

Mrs. Shelton's was not the only letter recently written in praise of the policemen.

Letters of appreciation and commendation have been received by SFC Joseph R. Martin, Sgt. Ed Smith, Sgt. Johnny Wright, Sp4 Ivan Vasquez Sp4 Robert Mugford, Sp4 Wayne F. King; Sp4 William L. Jackson and Sp4 Jerry Zyniewiczynski.

Mrs. Florence Galvis and Mrs. Myrtle C. Bartram, both post civilian employes, complimented Sp4 Jackson in a letter to the Provost Marshal. They commented on his "cordial manner" and "cheerfulness."

Lt. Col. James E. Farmer, provost marshal, also expressed his appreciation in a letter to Sp4 Jackson, as did 2nd Lt. John M. Turner Jr., commander of the MP Company.

Outstanding work during the recent Joint Civilian Orientation Conference brought words of praise to Sgt. Wright and SFC Martin. The sender was Lt. Col. Joseph A. Mitchell, operations officer.

All members of the MP Traffic Platoon are carefully selected and must undergo additional training in traffic control, convoy escorts and escorts of distinguished visitors. Sgt. Martin conducts this training in his role as Traffic Platoon supervisor.

Each member works approximately 250 hours monthly, regardless of weather conditions and is familiar with the many drivers and pedestrians passing his intersection daily. These are the people who benefit daily from the MP's cheerfulness.

Among the many other activities engaged in by the Traffic Platoon are the Patterson Award Ceremony, honor ceremonies, parades, Youth Activities Council Carnival and the bicycle safety program.

5-Year Plan Seeks Better Med Support

The Army Medical Research and Development Command is accelerating activities in accordance with a five - year program designed to increase the capability of the Army Medical Service for supporting troops in any type of warfare.

The five-year program provides for increased efforts in the following research and development projects:

Military Preventive Medicine — Seeks to equip each soldier in remote combat areas insofar as possible with his own "built-in" protection against a wide variety of infectious diseases by the use of new or improved drugs and vaccines.

Combat Surgery —Aims at reducing deaths and disability from wounds, wound infections, trauma and shock.

Military Internal Medicine — Seeks to prevent or improve treatment measures for such major causes of military noneffectiveness as diarrheas and dysenteries, hepatitis and disabling skin diseases.

Military Psychiatry — Designed to gain knowledge of the soldier's mental processes and thus to improve his adjustment and performance under the stresses of modern combat environments.

Development — Aims to provide new, improved, and more easily transportable medical field equipment and supplies.

Ionizing Radiation Injury — Has the goal of developing a compound that will help protect soldiers against the effects of ionizing radiation.

Military Environmental Medicine — Seeks to improve the combat soldier's ability to adapt to the stresses of heat, cold, and altitude.

SAFETY AWARD PRESENTED
By Col. Keyes (L) to Col. Caprino

Armored Rifle Battalion Presented Safety Award

Col. Richard W. Keyes, commanding officer of the 1st Infantry Brigade, recently presented the 1st Infantry Brigade Safety Award for the month of May to Lt. Col. Charles T. Caprino, commander of the 1st Armored Rifle Battalion, 58th Infantry.

For the 58th Infantry it was the fifth time in the past 11 months that it has been honored with this award. Col. Keyes presented the engraved plaque after watching a safety class conducted by 1st Lt. Henry Robinson.

The class was highlighted by a demonstration of the braking time needed to stop a one-quarter-ton truck. On a given signal the driver of the speeding vehicle made as fast a stop as possible. The distance from the point where signal was given to the beginning of the skid mark was measured distance, and the length of the skid mark determined the braking distance. This demonstration illustrated the danger of traveling at excessive speeds.

Before departing Col. Keyes spoke to the group re-emphasizing the importance of the safety program and congratulated the men on their safety procedures during the month of May.

New Class Now Open To Officers

FORT LEAVENWORTH, Kan. (ANS) — The Army Command and General Staff College has developed a special extension course entitled "Graduate Refresher" to assist its graduates to continue to learn.

All American or Allied military officer graduates of the College are eligible to enroll in the latest course offered by the Department of Nonresident Instruction.

Officers having equivalent constructive credit from the College may also enroll.

The course is being produced and disseminated to provide graduates of the College with information on the Reorganization Objectives, Army Division (ROAD) as soon as possible.

To enroll, officers should apply to the Chief, Nonresident Instruction, U. S. Army Command and General Staff College, Fort Leavenworth, Kan., giving their name, address, rank, serial number, branch, date of graduation or credit from the College.

Reserve officers must include their office of record.

Allied graduates apply through their Military Assistance Advisory Group, Mission or Attache.

RECENT GRADUATE

... First Lt. Peter P. Strzok, commanding officer of the 586th Engineer Company, recently graduated from the Special Demolitions Course at the Army Engineer School, Ft. Belvoir, Va. During his Army career, Lt. Strzok has served as aide-de-camp to Maj. Gen. Robert J. Fleming Jr., commanding general of the Theater Army Support Command, and to Maj. Gen. William C. Baker Jr., Gen. Fleming's successor.

Chemical Corps Birthday Is Observed Here

The 183rd Chemical Platoon (Smoke Generator) observed the Chemical Corp's 44th anniversary yesterday. The platoon attached to the 29th Infantry and assigned to the 1st Infantry Brigade, is under the command of Capt. Samuel L. Eure.

Although a platoon-size unit the 183rd has the company-size mission of supporting The Infantry School in general, and specifically of furnishing the necessary cover and concealment to troops participating in TIC problems requiring smoke.

Her secondary mission, that of providing the Third Army Alpha Survey Team for the southeastern sector of the Third Army area, encompasses Florida, Alabama, Mississippi and Georgia. Besides the primary and secondary missions, the unit also maintains the TIC CBR Defense Team.

A mission such as this necessitates the unit utilizing varied types of equipment and demands that each member of the unit be qualified to operate and maintain equipment essential to the functions of the platoon.

The men of the platoon for the most part trained at the U.S. Army Chemical School, Fort McClellan, Ala. are well trained in the operation of equipment constituent to their assigned missions. Their primary piece of equipment the smoke generator is often the topic of two and three hour classes, and being proficient with the smoke generator alone does not preclude their mastering other equipment impera-tive to the platoon's mission.

To this end, each man in the platoon must be able to drive the vehicles and trailers and assigned to the unit, operate radios and communication equipment, and predict the weather and its changes as to best employ smoke.

The Alpha Survey Team, the unit's secondary mission demands that each man excell in the operation and maintenance of radiac meters and possess knowledge of the many and varied radiation hazards produced by nuclear weapons.

The CBR Defense Team compels chemical men to keep up with the newer developments in the chemical field as he can be expected to be asked at any time the identification of any foreign substance found in the vicinity of troops. Decontamination apparatus is no stranger to the miniature company.

There is little use for a man in this unit without that paramount trait . . . versatility.

The 183rd was activated here May 28, 1957, and attached to the 87th Chemical Company (Smoke Generator), 2nd Battle Group, 14th Infantry, for rations and quarters. Given the same mission as the 87th, the 183rd supported TIS in problems and demonstrations.

During her five years in existence, the unit has received excellent ratings as support troops for the Infantry School as well as for her inspections and Alpha Survey Teams.

Reservists, Guardsmen Talented

Army Reservists and National Guardsmen on active duty are contributing specialized skills to Fort Benning, even as the date for their release draws near.

Spc Jim Beasley of Company C and PFC Dave Oliver of Company B are capitalizing on their backgrounds as radio announcers. Spc Beasley worked for the Main Post Information Section announcing the news, while PFC Oliver spins records for the patients at Martin Army Hospital. Another man, Sgt. David Lennox of Company B, is a technician at Mars Radio Station.

Two men from the battalion are serving as swimming pool lifeguards, Sgt. John Shuga of Company B and Spc Thomas Winship of Company A.

Sgt. Merrill MacKinder of Headquarters Company is kept busy with the Post Signal Inspection Team, while Sgt Gerald Samsons of Company C works at Post Finance and Data Processing.

Rounding out the list are Spc Amos Horton of Company A, who has a job at Martin Army Hospital Pharmacy, and Spc Gary Wildman of Company B who works at the Main Officers Open Mess.

Encourage Counterguerrilla Units in ROTC

FORT MONROE, Va. — Expanding Army efforts in the counterinsurgency field are being augmented by the Continental Army Command through a program encouraging establishment of volunteer counterguerrilla units on college campuses with ROTC (Reserve Officers' Training Corps) detachments.

In announcing the program, officials of the command headquarters at Fort Monroe stressed that care is being exercised to insure that the "activities of these units do not interfere with students' academic requirements."

CONARC exercises control over the ROTC program as a part of its responsibility for virtually all individual and unit training in the United States. In a recently published circular (CONARC Circular 145-6), the command's professors of military science are directed to encourage the organization of volunteer extra - curricular counterguerrilla ROTC units in the Senior Division category.

As pointed out in the CONARC publication, counterinsurgency operations, including counterguerrilla, now involve the entire US Army rather than special forces alone. All elements must become familiar with and develop proficiency in this type warfare to perform their assigned roles and missions. In this connection, ROTC programs of instruction are being revised so as to familiarize the student with counterinsurgency. As an interim measure, all Senior Division ROTC units completed a two-hour orientation course on counterinsurgency as a part of on-campus instruction during the school year just completed.

The special counterguerrilla units will have a twofold value. In addition to familiarizing ROTC students, many of whom will become future Army officers, with counterinsurgency, they will provide the college community with an awareness of this type military activity and the emphasis being placed upon it by the Army and other military services in accordance with Presidential desires.

Objectives of the ROTC counterguerrilla units include familiarizing the student with counterguerrilla operations, improving his physical condition and his ability to operate and survive under adverse conditions, and developing an interest in counterguerrilla training among college students and the community at large. The program also seeks to motivate non-ROTC students toward entering ROTC, and to motivate ROTC students toward seeking careers in the Army.

While it is recognized that units of this type are student organizations over which the Army has no command jurisdiction, formation of such units is encouraged. Additionally, they are encouraged to adopt designations as counterguerrilla units, according to Headquarters, USCONARC.

Subjects suggested for ROTC counterguerrilla units are map reading and land navigation, patrolling, communications, tactical problems, physical training, hand-to-hand combat, counterinsurgency operations, counterguerrilla tactics, troop leading procedures, and weapons. Army Commanders throughout CONARC will support the units with equipment and training literature.

Eleven volunteer ROTC units generally resembling counterguerrilla - type criteria, organized prior to announcement of the program, are already established at colleges in four of CONARC's six Army areas. They bear "Ranger" or similar designations.

This includes, but is not limited to, any type of special, volunteer unit engaged in Ranger, counterinsurgency, counter-guerrilla, patrolling, or reconnaissance training. The existing units are being encouraged to change their designation to counterguerrilla units for uniformity, to facilitate news coverage and understandings by the public of the important contributions they are making.

The 11 units in being are at Rutgers-The State University, Duquesne University, Pennsylvania State University (two units), Virginia Military Institute, Wake Forest College, The Citadel, North Georgia College, Loyola University, Texas Technological College and Trinity University.

The term counterinsurgency as defined by the Army includes all military, political, economic, psychological, and sociological activities directed toward preventing and suppressing resistance groups whose actions range in degrees of violence and scope from subversive political activity to violent actions by large guerrilla elements to overthrow duly established governments. Counterguerrilla operations are those conducted specifically against guerrilla forces.

DEPARTING MP's . . . Sgt. Myron M. Matteson (L) inspects PFC Samuel E. Albert (R) and PFC Vincent M. Lionetti as they prepare to go on duty here. The men are members of the 105th Military Police Company, a National Guard unit from Utica, N.Y. which has been training here since October. The company will depart for home in August.

Early Care Great Aid To Youngster's Teeth

By Maj. Charles W. Dobson
Preventive Dentistry Officer
(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the fifth in a series of articles presented in the interest of better dental health.)

All parents want the best of everything for their children. And yet many of us are assuring our children of a lifetime of dental trouble by neglecting their teeth now.

By the time a child is approximately two years old, all of his baby teeth are present in his mouth. These teeth are all he has to chew with for several years. The last baby teeth are lost between 10 to 12 years of age. If a child loses some of his baby teeth too soon or, they hurt him, he won't eat properly, which could affect him physically.

Baby Teeth Important

Baby teeth are needed for chewing, for appearance, for good speech habits, and to guide the permanent teeth into their proper position. If these baby teeth are lost too soon, the other teeth will drift into the spaces created with the result that the permanent teeth will either not be able to erupt, or if they do, they will be crooked and out of position.

This makes them prone to decay and gum disease. Then the parent must choose between the expense of having the teeth straightened, or he must accept the fact that he has created future trouble for his child.

This decision may be avoided by simple procedures conducted during childhood. The child should receive a proper diet low in sugar containing foods. His teeth should be brushed for him until he is able to do it for himself, and then the parent should watch to make sure he is brushing often enough and properly.

Regular visits to the dentist should begin at the time all of his baby teeth appear in the mouth.

Fluoridation has been proven to be a great aid in the reduction of dental decay. Fluoride applied to the teeth after they erupt also helps reduce decay. These applications should be made at regular intervals.

Reduce Expense

These things done while your child is still small will benefit him greatly and at the same time reduce your overall expense in maintaining his dental health.

The Post Preventive Dental Health Program here at Fort Benning is sponsored by the Community Activities Association and administered by the Post Dental Surgeon. It includes a prophylaxis (cleaning), the application of a fluoride solution and instruction in oral hygiene. This service is available to dependent children of active and retired military personnel and is located in A-14 Dental Clinic (Old Hospital Area), Building 1009.

It is recommended that children start these treatments at approximately three years of age and continue on an annual basis through the teen-age years. Appointments may be made in person or by calling 545-4494.

Active Army Completes Indoctrination

FORT MONROE, Va. (ANS) —Headquarters, U. S. Continental Army Command here has recently announced that all active Army units have completed indoctrination in counterinsurgency.

According to Gen. Herbert B. Powell, Commanding General CONARC, Reserve components and Reserve Officer Training Corps (ROTC) units will complete the indoctrination by July 1.

The counterinsurgency indoctrination is in the form of a two-hour course of instruction. Course material is contained in a pamphlet published by Headquarters, CONARC last April entitled "Counterinsurgency." The pamphlet (CONARC 515-5), covers the nature and causes of insurgency and the Army's role in counterinsurgency, stressing the importance of civic actions in relation to military activities in support of counterinsurgency programs.

The present lecture format of instruction will be supplanted in the near future by a film now being readied for distribution.

The counterinsurgency indoctrination is introduced into service school instruction and in the first week of basic combat training in the training schools so that every soldier will understand this vital aspect of the Army's role.

Implementation of the widespread program followed swiftly as the outgrowth of a two-day conference on support of the Army's counterinsurgency effort held at Headquarters, CONARC late in March. As a result of the widely - attended conference, emphasis is being given in troop training, troop information; and public information aspects of the counterinsurgency program.

Gun-Toting On Planes Prohibited

WASHINGTON (ANS) —The Department of Defense has issued a directive to its military and civilian personnel which implements an amendment to the Federal Aviation Act and an FAA regulation which makes it a Federal crime for all but authorized persons to carry a deadly or dangerous weapon aboard a commercial aircraft.

Under the new directive, any person in the Department of Defense, whose official duties require him to have such a weapon on him, is required, prior to boarding, to notify an airline representative of this fact and upon request present appropriate credentials for identification purposes. The directive standardizes actions taken previously by the Military Departments to implement this law shortly after its passage.

Public Law 87-197 of Sept. 5, 1961, and FAA Special Civil Air Regulation No. SF-448A, dated Oct. 9, 1961, which the DOD directive implements, have as their purpose the prevention of hijacking of aircraft and interference with crew members in the performance of their duties.

19 Interns Graduated At Hospital

Fifteen medical and four dental interns graduated in exercises last Friday at Martin Army Hospital.

Principal speaker was Dr. G. M. Hutto, consultant in radiology for the Army hospital.

Certificates were presented by Col. William A. Todd Jr., hospital commander.

AT THE Movies

BIRD MAN OF ALCATRAZ stars Burt Lancaster, Karl Malden and Thelma Ritter. Spending most of his life behind prison bars, a defiant killer rescues a bird that is blown by a storm into the prison yard. He then educates himself on birds and their diseases until he becomes a foremost authority on the subject.

THE COLOSSUS OF RHODES is adventurous spectacle for mature and young people. The ancient Phoenicians plot to invade the island kingdom of Rhodes and thus threaten Greece by menacing the trade routes of the Mediterranean. The climactic earthquake and spectacular scenes in this vivid and action-filled feature of historical conflict. It stars Rory Calhoun and Lea Massari.

THE NIGHT THEY KILLED RASPUTIN is a drama starring Edmund Purdom and John Drew Barrymore. Posing as a monk, a reckless and unscrupulous Siberian peasant seemingly heals the Czar's ailing son. From that moment on, the miracle man wins the confidence of kings and has a hand in shaping the course of history.

OPERATION SNATCH is outstanding comedy starring Terry - Thomas and George Sanders. An over-aged, underranked officer in charge of the British garrison on Gibraltar during World War II embarks on the war's most hilarious and laughter - packed mission to bolster the morale of the British war effort.

'Olympics' Held At Post Pool

The men of Harmony Church were winners of the Swim Olympics sponsored by Service Club 3 recently. The event was held at the Harmony Church pool.

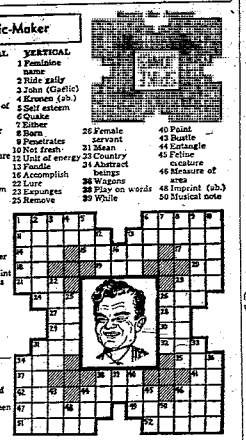
Winner of the fancy and comic diving event was Sp4 Harvey Katler. PFC Bill Dorr won the butterfly race while PFC David Barkow took the breast and side stroke honors.

PFC Bill Dorr won his second event by taking top honors in the rabbit relay.

Mrs. Maria Rider won the Inner Tube race.

PFC Buddy Grose, PFC David Barkow, PFC Dorr and PFC Peter Willcox teamed up to take the team relay event.

Sp4 James Amerson and Sp4 Don Hoggard, both of the Harmony Church swimming pool staff, were on hand to judge the various contests.



YANKEE CLIPPER . . . Two Fort Benning youngsters, Timmy Kelly (L), and Dick Kelly, (R), sons of Brig. Gen. John E. Kelly, deputy commanding general of the Infantry Center, and Mrs. Kelly received the thrill of a lifetime when they talked to all-time New York Yankee great and baseball Hall of Famer, Joe DiMaggio. The former slugger was on post in connection with a tour of southern military posts and visited with Gen. Kelly and Maj. John G. Setaro, Post Exchange officer. While here he took time to autograph Timmy's baseball glove.

When Emergency Call Comes, LAAC Crews Ready

By Capt. John F. Brosnan

It was approximately 4 p.m. on a recent afternoon in the cool, air conditioned refuge of Lawson Field's Air Traffic Control Tower.

The VHF radio receiver crackled, "Lawson Tower, this is Army 03454. Over."

"Roger, Army 03454, this is Lawson Tower," replied the chief tower operator while at the same time scanning the horizon in search of his visitor.

"This is Army 03454," replied the pilot with an urgency in his voice. "Request EMERGENCY landing instructions."

This last transmission launched a series of events in what seemed a matter of seconds. Bells, buzzers and telephones all came to life.

"Roger, Army 03454, stand by for instructions," signaled the tower.

"Army 03454, you are cleared for an emergency landing, Runway 02, winds calm and lots of luck."

The pilot gently steered his L-23B aircraft in the traffic pattern, set up a nice shallow approach and began descent. All eyes were locked on the aircraft as it lined up on the runway. By now everyone was helping the pilot in his own imaginative ways. Some were even thinking out loud at this point. The pilot's calmness in this time of stress indicated an exceptional degree of self-discipline and good judgment.

Further conversation with the pilot determined that a faulty landing gear which had failed to lock properly in the down position was the nature of the emergency. Army 03545 was now identifiable as one of the Army's newest multi-engine command aircraft with several passengers aboard.

By now the fire trucks, ambulance, chaplain, military police and maintenance crews had taken up their positions at the scene. With detailed guidance from the tower the pilot in distress was talked through all the known emergencies with no positive results.

"Tower, this is Army 03454. Request foam on Runway 02 and permission to attempt landing.

"Army 03454, you are cleared for an emergency landing. Runway 02, winds calm and lots of luck."

The pilot gently steered his L-23B aircraft in the traffic pattern, set up a nice shallow approach and began descent. All eyes were locked on the aircraft as it lined up on the runway. By now everyone was helping the pilot in his own imaginative ways. Some were even thinking out loud at this point. The pilot's calmness in this time of stress indicated an exceptional degree of self-discipline and good judgment.

Gently easing the large aircraft toward the foamed runway a gradual flare was started to break the rate of descent. Contact was made where the foam was thickest, directional control was maintained, engines were stopped and a forced landing was perfectly executed.

As Army 03454 slowed down it tilted forward to a rest on damaged nose gear section. This EMERGENCY was now over. No casualties or fires and only minor damage to the aircraft.

Close teamwork was evident throughout the whole period of emergency. Only positive actions which adhere to sound principles of safety as demonstrated by Lawson Airfield personnel can meet such emergency situations.

Shooting Medal Awarded By Army to Top Civilians

WASHINGTON (ANS)—The Elihu Root Medal and membership on the honorary National Civilian Rifle and Pistol Teams will be awarded this year for the first time. The Medal and the honorary teams were established last year by the National Board for the Promotion of Rifle Practice in order to give recognition to civilians who excel in rifle and pistol shooting.

The presentations will be at yearly event and will go to those who attain the highest scores at the National Trophy matches at Camp Perry, Ohio. This year's awards will go to the high scorers from the 1961 matches.

The Medal is very aptly named for the man who, in 1903, signed the order initiating the mission of the National Board for the Promotion of Rifle Practice. Secretary of War Elihu Root recognized the need for this organization to assist in the promotion of rifle marksmanship among United States citizens not reached through Armed Forces training programs. He not only approved of special legislation being presented to Congress, but when this legislation failed to pass, he consented to have the substance of it incorporated into the Army Appropriation Bill. In fact, today, the Secretary of the Army has assigned to him by law, the responsibility of training civilian marksmen. He appoints prominent individuals, both civilian and military, to the Board to assist him in this mission.

The program is not a sports activity, for in the words of Army Regulation 920-15, it has as its mission to encourage practice "for the purpose of training the citizenry in the arms, particularly to the end that those individuals who may be called upon to serve in time of war will be qualified as instructors and marksmen, and to create a public sentiment which emphasizes the necessity of marksmanship training with military - type individual small arms as a means of national defense."

Individual winners and the Governors of their home-states will be notified in writing by the President of the National Board for the Promotion of Rifle Practice, Under Secretary of the Army, Stephen Ailes. This is the first award of the Board to be presented on a State rather than a National level.

DUSTIN (E) CONGRATULATED
By Gen. Evans, Guest Speaker

Capt. Dustin Honor Grad

Capt. George M. Dustin graduated Associate Infantry Officer Career Course Class Number Three 2nd Student Battalion, The Student Brigade, recently with top honors. Capt. Dustin completed the career course with an overall average of 95.6 per cent out of a possible 100 per cent.

The reserve officer was congratulated and presented with his graduation certificate by the guest speaker, Brig. Gen. Benjamin F. Evans, assistant Deputy chief of staff, Plans and Development Department Continental Army Command.

In attendance was Brig. Gen. Royal Reynolds Jr. assistant commandant of The Infantry School, who introduced the guest speaker and congratulated the class on successful completion of a demanding course of instruction.

Gen. Reynolds and Col. Otto R. Koch Jr., TSB commander also extended their congratulations to each of the graduating liaison officers of the class, and presented them with the "Follow Me" Crest.

Gen. Evans spoke to the class on the important roll the National Guard and Ready Reserve play in the defense of our country. He stated "It is imperative that we maintain a combat ready, Ready Reserve. In the past the National Guard and Reserves were used as a back-up to the Active Army. Today we shape the modern Army."

Marksmanship Badges to be Standardized

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Effective Jan. 1, 1963, the armed services, including the Coast Guard, will have uniform rules for the awarding of Distinguished Marksman, Rifleman, and Pistol Shot badges.

At present, each service has its own rules for awarding the badges, which are given for the highest achievement in the field of competitive marksmanship.

The new rules are designed to enhance and insure the continued prestige of the badges.

Matches recognized for these badges are National Trophy Individual Rifle-Pistol; Interservice Rifle-Pistol; each All-Service Rifle-Pistol Championship; each Major Command (Fleet, Division) Rifle-Pistol Championship and the National Board for the Promotion of Rifle Practice Region.

The new rules state that the Distinguished Marksman - Rifleman or Pistol Shot badge awards shall be made on the basis of individual unassisted performance in recognized individual matches.

They also state that the award of the appropriate Distinguished Badge shall be made when an individual has earned a minimum of 30 credit points for excellence in competition in such recognized matches.

According to the rules, credit points shall be awarded to the highest scoring 10 per cent of all non-distinguished participants in such recognized matches, ranked in order of merit. Fractions of .5 and over will be resolved to the next higher whole number. Smaller fractions will be dropped.

Each individual shall be authorized to compete for credit points in not more than four recognized matches with the service rifle and the service pistol each calendar year.

Equipment for matches in which credit awards are authorized will be in accordance with those prescribed in the current edition of Rules and Regulations for the National Matches.

Looking east from the Georgia side of the Chattahoochee River, two completed piers and a nearly complete third one of the permanent bridge scheduled to replace the pontoon bridge presently in use here can be seen. Construction officials estimate the new $575,000 structure is 22 per cent completed. The completion date has been set for May, 1963.

Guardsmen Attending Sill School

Three National Guardsmen from the 156th Signal Battalion and Company C, 204th Signal Battalion, have been selected to attend the Army Artillery and Missile School, Fort Sill, Okla.

Currently undergoing training to become Reserve officers are Cpl. Keith Turner of Company A, 156th Signal Battalion; PFC James R. Wilson of Company C, 156t hSignal Battalion; PFC James R. Wilson of Company C, 156th Signal Battalion; and Sp4 Stanley E. Seabaugh of Company C, 204th Signal Battalion.

Cpl. Turner has a degree in engineering from the University of Michigan, where he worked on civilian missile programs. PFC Wilson attended Kalamazoo College where he graduated with a major in psychology. Sp4 Seabaugh has attended a number of Army courses, the most recent being a teletype course at Fort Gordon. All three men have shown high proficiency in their respective Army jobs.

Special War Capabilities Not Limited To Special Forces, Gen. Rosson Says

WASHINGTON (AFPS)—The number of persons specifically authorized for Army special warfare activities has been doubled since March last year, Maj. Gen. William B. Rosson told the Cleveland Council on World Affairs in a recent speech.

Gen. Rosson has been Special Assistant to the Chief of Staff, U. S. Army, for Special Warfare since this past February.

He explained that our special warfare capabilities are not limited to Special Forces groups, but that counter insurgency activities call for many other skills needed in assistance to friendly governments. This assistance he described as "four-pronged" including political, economic, ideological and military measures.

Gen. Rosson told how "Communist inspired wars of subversion and covert aggression" seek to weaken established governments by reducing the effectiveness of the government's military and economic means, and by destroying morale and the will to resist such aggression.

The general added, "Our primary interest in these countries is to help them maintain the freedom of choice through which they can mold their own new national life within the framework of their own culture."

"The facts are clear," he said. "The Communists' aim is to subvert free governments through development of local insurgent movements, including eventual organization of guerrilla forces, and to support and expand these movements from outside sources. Their activities are characterized by a rising scale of violence, passing from persuasion to coercion, reprisals, terrorism and guerrilla warfare, all aimed at ruthless, but unheralded, takeover of free countries."

Gadget for Viewing Slides Saves Time, Tax Dollars

How much difficulty have you had in viewing 35 millimeter slides? This is a problem which most of us have faced at one time or another, especially instructors with the Infantry School.

After much eyestrain the Nuclear Weapons Committee, which uses 35 mm slides throughout the year with an average inventory of four hundred slides, decided there must be a better way to determine more quickly the contents of a slide.

Formerly, each individual slide was held toward the light in order to determine if it would be appropriate.

The solution was to have plexiglass frames made which would hold forty slides on a flat surface in eight rows of five each, similar to window panes in a window. This was an improvement in that slides of a specific interest could be placed in a frame.

By holding the frame toward the light, the viewer was able to see a number of slides in comparison. However, this was not the ultimate since it was still necessary to hold the frame toward a good light source.

The committee instructors decided to design a box containing a light source and install a plate of glass on top of the box. By this addition, the viewer could rest the plexiglass frame on the box, switch on the light and scan the various slides in the plexiglass frame.

Though limited to forty slides at a time, this was decidedly an improvement over holding one slide at a time toward whatever light source was available.

A sum of $198 in manhours was saved in the first year, not considering the time of new personnel who were not familiar with which slides might be on hand. Additionally, this aid is used to view better the thousand plus viewgraph slides which this committee uses in its nuclear weapons instruction.

OC Scooler Wins At YAC Carnival

Highlighted by its own byword, safety, the Youth Activities Club Carnival attracted more than 20,000 Fourth of July celebrants who enjoyed a day packed with carnival concessions, athletics events, an Air Force academy parade and the traditional fire works display.

The 52nd Officer Candidate Company's OC Albert E. Scooler was presented the Outstanding Soldier Award for his ability in the cross-country run, physical fitness, jeep driving and M1 rifle and .45 caliber pistol shooting.

Capt. Jack H. Percival accepted the Commanding General's Trophy for the outstanding unit for Battery B, 2nd Howitzer Battalion, 10th Artillery, 1st Infantry Brigade.

Cadets Parade

Festivity seekers were greeted by the long blue lines of Air Force Academy cadets who opened the accident-free carnival with a parade review. The 1st Infantry Brigade's 10th Artillery, Battery A, opened fire with a 50-gun salute to add a touch of awe.

Even though plagued by intermittent showers, the carnival was termed "a huge success" by YAC officials.

Col. John H. Lattin, president of YAC, said, "The Carnival was a huge success, and I want to express my personal appreciation to Col. Keyes, the Carnival committee chairman, and Maj. Hare, the chief project officer, and to all the units and individuals for their cooperation."

Continuing, Col. Lattin said, "I want to especially acknowledge the Military Police. They did a tremendous job. They were courteous and cheerful, and extremely helpful."

Col. Lattin estimated that attendance was above that of last year's carnival by approximately one-third.

In a midway filled with familiar "carney" chants, booths of every description could be found. Everyone had a chance to test his skill at winning a "teddy bear" to present to his best girl.

Besides the many concessions, the 250-foot airborne training tower attracted large numbers along with the ponies, fire engines and jeeps available for the younger generations.

During the heat of the day, the refreshment booths turned out to be one of the biggest attractions. Cold drinks, hot dogs, and hamburgers kept the light-hearted crowd full of food. The roving ice cream vendors were constantly running out of their refreshing commodity.

Monetary proceeds from the annual YAC carnival provide the post's young people with constructive athletic and social activities. The carnival also provides post personnel and people from the surrounding

Mr. Vance Assumes Duties

"As I assume the grave responsibilities of the secretary of the Army, my first thoughts are of the people stationed in our homeland and throughout the world who make the United States Army the powerful and effective force which it is today. You are doing a magnificent job for America and for the cause of human freedom. I now share with you the Army's matchless heritage and I shall do everything in my power to ensure that the Army remains more than equal to any task."

Infantry CDA Is Activated

A new combat developments organization, The Infantry Combat Developments Agency, was activated here this week.

It is a subordinate agency of the Army Combined Arms Group at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., and a part of the Army Combat Developments Command established in the recent reorganization of the Army.

Col. Kenneth E. Eckland, former chief of the Combat Developments Office of The Infantry School, commands the Infantry Combat Developments Agency. Lt. Col. Neil G. Stewart is the deputy commander.

The organization will develop organizational and operational objectives, doctrine, tac-

Engineers Greet New CO In Colorful Ceremonies

The 151st Engineer Group changed commanders Tuesday as Col. Sears Y. Coker passed the group's colors to Col. Mahlon E. Gates, incoming commanding officer.

Col. Coker and Col. Gates reviewed the more than 2,500 engineer troops who are members of the group during the colorful ceremony.

In front of the massed colors and unit standards, Col. Coker spoke briefly to the men of the group. He thanked them for their loyalty and service during his command.

Commends Troops

He particularly commended the men in the Regular Army units, and expressed his confidence that they would maintain their high standards.

The Reserve and National Guard units called to active duty last year during the Berlin crisis and assigned to the 151st Engineer group were cited for the spirit with which they responded to their country's call in the hour of crisis.

Col. Gates was introduced to the command and the troops by Col. Coker. Col. Gates said he was very much impressed by the warm welcome he received, and that he looked forward to being able to command the group.

Col. Coker leaves the engineer group to assume duties as chief of the Army Engineer District, Charleston, S. C.

The new commander is a recent graduate of the Army War College, Carlisle, Pa.

Units Participate

Each unit in the 151st Engineer Group was represented at full strength to honor Col. Coker and welcome Col. Gates.

These units were the 391st Engineer Battalion (Combat) a reserve unit from Greenville, S. C., commanded by Lt. Col. Karl E. Nuessner; the 499th Engineer Battalion (Combat), a reserve unit from Pine Bluff, Ark. commanded by Lt. Col. Frank R. Allen Jr.; the 577th Engineer Battalion (Construction), commanded by Lt. Col. James H. Boykin; the 806th Engineer Battalion (Construction), commanded by Lt. Col. William M. Wilson; the 114th Engineer Company (Panel Bridge) commanded by Capt. Arthur S. Welch; the 186th Engineer Company, commanded by Capt. Joe B. Thompson; the 586th Engineer Company (Float Bridge) commanded by 1st Lt. Peter P. Strzok; and Headquarters Company, 151st Engineer Group (Combat), commanded by Capt. Alexander G. Fewsmith Jr.

Reservist Back From 'Operation Look-See'; Says U. S. Forces in Germany Are 'Ready'

U.S. Armed Forces in Germany are in a high state of readiness to move into combat on a moment's notice, particularly in Berlin, if the need arises, an Army Reserve officer stationed here has reported after a field trip to Europe.

First Lt. Alan D. Leckliter, a platoon leader of the 489th Engineer Battalion, a Reserve unit from Pine Bluff, Ark., was among 50 National Guard and Reserve officers who visited Germany in June with "Operation Look-See III."

The objective of the seven-day field trip, sponsored by Headquarters, U.S. Army, Europe, was to observe the training and operational activities, combat readiness, and weapons and equipment of Army units in Germany.

Witnessed Berlin Wall

Lt. Leckliter said the group also noted the isolation of Berlin, 110 miles behind the Iron Curtain, from West Germany, the "Wall of Shame" erected by the Communists, and the spirit of the German people to defend their freedom.

The wall was built by the Communists in East Berlin in August, 1961, to halt the steady escape of refugees from East Germany into West Germany.

"We were impressed most with the grimness of the wall with broken bottles and window glass imbedded in the mortar on top," Lt. Leckliter said.

"Part of the infamous wall was topped by barbed wire," he added. "East German police in guard towers watch for escapees. Along most of the border, Communists have ploughed the ground to a point some 10 yards from the fence separating West Germany from East Germany so they can see the footprints of people trying to escape. Many of the guards are teenagers."

In some areas that are con-

Look-See

sidered vulnerable, the Communists use trained police dogs and have mined the ground to keep refugees away, Lt. Leckltner reports.

The mood of the East Germans can be realized by the escape of more than 3.5 million people since the Communist takeover after World War I, he added.

West Germans can go to East Berlin with proper credentials to visit friends and relatives, but West Berliners cannot enter East Berlin, the officer stated.

Want Split

The Communists want to split Western unity by creating disunity between the people of West Germany and those of West Berlin," Lt. Leckltner said.

The Communists have been unsuccessful, the lieutenant pointed out, because of the spirit of unity among all Germans. The German people are imbued with the belief that someday all of Germany will be unified and that the people will rule themselves, he added.

Officers of "Look-See III" took a one-day bus tour of West and East Berlin.

"What impressed us most was the difference in the reconstruction of the two sectors of the city," Lt. Leckltner said.

"Because of the vast rebuilding of West Berlin since the war, the city is as modern and beautiful as anyone would want to see," he added. "Only the Reichstag building, the opera house and some churches have not been rebuilt."

East Berlin is just the opposite, he pointed out.

Vain Attempt

"The Communists have made a vain attempt to screen off the actual conditions," he said. "They have built a few rows of apartment houses on some streets to impress visitors and their own people with the progress they have made. But the apartments are no more than shallow facades. Behind this thin veneer of deceit lie the ruins of World War II."

At the conclusion of the 8,000-mile trip, members of "Look-See III" returned to their home stations to orient personnel of their own National Guard and Reserve units on what they learned. All 50 of the officers who completed the tour are on active duty.

Lt. Leckltner was named the Fort Benning representative for "Look-See III" after being interviewed in May by a board of four senior officers.

The Combat Developments Office was separated from TIS and used as the nucleus for the Infantry Combat Developments Agency. Many of the functions such as current Infantry doctrine and organization, now performed by the instructional departments of TIS will be transferred to the new agency.

Oct. 1, 1962, has been established as the target date for the Infantry Combat Developments Agency to be completely operational. It is expected that 48 officers, nine enlisted men and 22 civilians will be authorized the new unit.

Demonstrate Water Shoes

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Two men and a woman walked on the water of the Pentagon's river entrance lagoon recently in a demonstration of a product which may have military applications.

The water walking was done on rigid urethane foam shoes which can support 350 pounds and allow a man to move over the water's surface at about three mph.

Kean Stimm, president of Water Shoes, Inc., and the inventor of the shoes, showed military personnel that the shoes could enable soldiers to cross rivers, lakes or swamps at walking speeds with both hands free to handle their weapons.

He pointed out that soldiers using the water shoes could move easily through wild swampy terrain like that in South Vietnam or Laos, where foliage is too thick to allow boats and the water too deep for wading.

SOLDIER OF THE QUARTER . . . Sp4 Franklin D. Morris, Company E, Infantry School Battalion, The Student Brigade, was recently selected by a board of non-commissioned officers as "Soldier of the Quarter." Lt. Col. Lowell W. Hesser (L), TSB S-1, presents Morris with the honor plaque.

Lt. Bradbury Honor Grad

Second Lt. Richard A. Bradbury graduated Infantry Officer Orientation Course, Class Number 16, 2nd Student Battalion, The Student Brigade, recently with top honors. Lt. Bradbury completed the orientation course with an overall average of 93.5 per cent.

The newly commissioned officer was congratulated and presented with his graduation certificate by the guest speaker, Col. Walter B. Todd, commanding officer, 2nd Battle Group, 1st Infantry 2nd Infantry Division.

Attending the graduation exercises was Lt. Col. Vern L. Joseph, commanding officer, 2nd Student Battalion, who introduced the guest speaker, and their efforts during the course.

Col. Todd spoke to the gathering on the importance of a well - orientated Army, he stated, "This means it will be your responsibility to insure that each and every man in your particular unit or organization has a working knowledge of the mission and purpose of that unit."

Formation of the Strategic Army Corps (STRAC) was announced May 20, 1958. This Army unit is ready to meet any war situation anywhere in the world.

British Brigadier Is Here To See Infantry in Action

Brigadier David N. H. Tyacke, commander of the British 130th Infantry Brigade, arrived here Tuesday for a three-day visit.

His tour began yesterday with a demonstration by The Infantry School's Airborne-Air Mobility Department at Eubanks Field.

He then visited Brig. Gen. Royal Reynolds Jr., assistant commandant of the school.

Following briefings on the history and organization of The Infantry Center and the organization and mission of TTS, the Allied officer was slated to be oriented on the utilization of the post in support of training.

Before an official luncheon in his honor, Brigadier Tyacke was briefed on the Trainfire method of rifle training.

That afternoon, he saw two problems, one at Buena Hill, an Infantry-tank team in attack, and the other at Ruth Range, a reinforced rifle company in defense.

Today Brigadier Tyacke is scheduled to be briefed on Infantry organization and tactics, and on the Army career officer school program, and observe a weapons demonstration on Hook Range.

This afternoon, he will visit the Infantry Combat Developments Field Agency for a briefing on material developments in 1965-1970, and observe a problem at Victory Pond, "Rangers in action."

Brigadier Tyacke is scheduled to depart the post tomorrow.

Trap, Skeet Club Brings Out the Best in Shotgunners

By Bill Gardner

The statement, "Like shooting clay pigeons," is generally just a phrase in somebody's repertoire of cliches, but to members of the Fort Benning Trap and Skeet Shooting Club its an avocation that is both relaxing and exacting.

And shooting clay pigeons is not as easy when it is realized they attain speeds of 60 miles per hour. The size of these fast moving objects is 4 5-16 inches in thickness.

Any hunter would be quick to admit, it's no easy feat to knock down 25 of them in a row, as some of the club members are capable of doing.

The post group was organized in January, under the guidance of Col. Robin C. Montgomery, commander of the Marksmanship Training Unit.

Club facilities, which include three skeet fields and a trap field, as well as a club house, are open for shooting each Sunday at 1 p.m.

The organization is open to both military and civilian sportsmen and a person doesn't have to be a marksman to join.

According to the president of the club, Col. Curtis L. Hankins, commander of Lawson Army Aviation Command, qualified shooters will be on hand to assist in learning the fundamentals or bettering their present skills.

And speaking of qualified shooters, 1st Lt. James Clark is the .28 gauge national skeet champion of 1961.

Shooting Since 11

Clark, who has been shooting in competition since he was 11, won several national championships as a junior from 1951 to 1953, including the .410, .28 and .20 gauge.

Junior championships are restricted to competitors under 18.

In 1960, the accurate-shooting Oklahoman, was one of two representatives from the U.S., in the Olympics.

Another club member, 1st Lt. Jack Horner was only 18 in 1956 when he won the national .12 gauge championship. Both men are members of the U. S. Army Marksmanship Training Unit.

Skeet and trap shooting differ in a number of particulars and according to club secretary, Maj. Henry H. Parr, "The two don't mix well and it's a rare individual who is proficient in both." He said later, when speaking of Clark's ability, that he was one of those rare individuals.

"In both types of shooting," he continued, "a round consists of 25 targets thrown from a trap house at approximately 60 miles per hour, each using the same size disk."

Five Stations

He explained there are five stations in a trap field and each is arranged parallel to the other. Each station has different distances from the ejection point that are marked off. These differences range from 18 to 27 feet, the longer distance being for more advanced shooters.

"In trap," he stated, "the shooter never knows the angle from which the pigeon will come out of the housing." The angle varies 45 degrees on a horizontal plane. The only thing the shooter knows is when the target will come out, since it is controlled by a command from him.

In skeet shooting, there are eight stations arranged in an arc that is bordered on either end by the target houses. These two houses vary in height and are referred to by the shooters, as the high house and low house. Although the distance remains virtually the same as the competitor moves around the arc, the angle varies at each station.

The clay pigeons are released on a trail from the shooter, either coming from the high or low house, depending on which is next. To make things more difficult, on four of the eight stations, the targets are released simultaneously, requiring accurate and quick shooting to break both discs in the shooting boundry limits.

There are four gauges of shotguns used in skeet shooting, the .12, .20, .28 and .410. Only the .12 gauge gun is shot in trap. Skeet guns are bored in such a manner to enable the shot to be dispersed in a wide open pattern. Trap guns are choked full, allowing for a tighter pattern because the targets are always going away from the shooter and are shot at greater distances.

Maj. Parr, coach of the Army's Trap and Skeet Shooting Team in MTU, said the club is registered with the National Skeet Shooting Association in Dallas, and the Amateur Trap Shooting Association in Vandalia, Ohio.

"Each shooter is required to shoot a certain number of registered targets," Parr said, "and his average score is taken and recorded with the national associations."

Top Medal Winner Set For TV Show

Capt. Ola L. Mize, Medal of Honor winner and a student in the Officer Associate Career Course of The Infantry School, will appear on the National Broadcasting Company television show, "Today," July 12, in New York City.

The show will be seen locally on Channel 9, WTVM, Columbus, from 7 to 9 p.m.

The same day, Capt. Mize, who appeared Monday on the Columbia Broadcasting System show, "To Tell the Truth," will take part in the Medal of Honor Society memorial services in Arlington National Cemetery, Washington, D. C.

Capt. Mize was awarded the medal for valor in a series of battles during a conflict near Surang-Ni, Korea, June 10 and 11, 1953. He was then an assistant platoon sergeant in Company K, 15th Regiment, Third Infantry Division.

The 70th Medal of Honor winner for the conflict in Korea, Mize enlisted in the Army on April 18, 1950. Three years later he was sent to Korea where within two months he was credited with killing some 65 of the enemy while fighting off a numerically superior foe.

Cultural Exchanges; What's Their Basis?

Is it paradoxical, in the light of the diplomatic tensions prevailing between Soviet Russia and the United States, that Soviet artists tour this country and play to packed houses while in the Soviet Union such Americans as Van Cliburn and Benny Goodman also win ovations?

Some Americans think it is, but they fail to see that these cultural exchanges are really consistent with the U. S. position which aims at reducing world tensions by improving relations with the Russian people. We have no quarrel with them; it is the efforts of their Communist masters to weaken and subvert the nations of the Free World that we are militantly against.

Indeed, every American artist who performs in Russia should be regarded as an ambassador of democracy who is doing his country yeoman service. He is helping to raise the Iron Curtain that Stalin rang down across the boundaries of the Soviet bloc after WWII. He is destroying the carefully-manufactured Communist image of America as a nation of bloated, greedy, warmongering capitalists. A decade ago, a concert tour such as Mr. Goodman's —for which the Soviet Premier attended the Moscow opening night—would have been inconceivable.

And what about the Russian artists performing in this country—the Moiseyev Dancers, the Bolshoi Ballet, the great virtuosi of violin and keyboard such as Oistrakh and Kogan, Richter and Gilels? The fact that they rank among the greatest in itself makes their visits a contribution to U. S. cultural life. Their art is cheered by tens of thousands of Americans who could never be suspected of pro-Communist leanings.

The State Department's cultural exchange, under which these Soviet artists tour our cities from coast to coast, has long been recognized as a most effective instrument in opening the eyes of the Russian masses to what America is really like. The stars of the Soviet musical world enjoy great stature in the Communist state; their views are respected and sought after. When they return from abroad the picture they give of life in the Free World obviously is going to be far different from that provided by Communist propagandists for internal consumption.

It was this that Soviet policy under Stalin sought to prevent; since the Khrushchev regime has relaxed the harsh cultural isolationism of the past, we benefit the most from it.

The Judge Says . . .

By Capt. Robert S. Poydasheff

Indebtedness is major concern of this command. Grave hardships, embarrassments and ruined Army careers have resulted from improperly used credit.

Upon close scrutiny, it has been found that many of the ramifications of improperly used credit have been caused by the wife, who insists upon a standard of living above the means of her soldier husband.

She often makes purchases on credit, which may not be under the law, lawful debts of the husband, and at some later date, the husband is no agent. The law of agency is tified of the debt and a demand is made upon him to pay the debt.

Through his own ignorance, he agrees to pay or is advised to pay, and thereafter makes payments which upset his budget to such a degree that he cannot take care of current bills which accumulate into delinquent accounts.

This article will attempt to answer the question: "When is a husband liable for the debts created by a wife?"

As Agent

In theory, the husband is liable for the debts of his wife only when she is his

Liberty and Communism

It Takes Leadership

Modern democracies do not seek to crush all individual differences or to level all personal capacities. On the contrary, they realize that they need leadership, and they seek to encourage the development of outstanding capacity on the part of individuals.

Leadership in industry, business, science, art, music and journalism is widely recognized and welcomed. Here, leadership is a competitive process. Generally, although not always, the most alert, competent, and courageous individuals move ahead into positions of leadership.

In politics, much the same rule prevails. In a representative government, the political parties compete with each other for the election of their candidates for office.

In the United States, within each political party, outstanding individuals vie with each other for leadership all the way from local precinct committees to the National Committees of the Democratic and Republican parties.

Individuals compete for nomination as candidates of their respective parties, all the way from councilmen in towns and cities to the President of the United States.

The decision as to the leaders of which political party shall hold office rests with the voter. Free elections determine which set of leaders shall receive the responsibility of government for the terms of office to which they are elected.

Communists use much the same principle of leadership employed by fascism and nazism. Indeed, Lenin developed the principles and strategy of Communist leadership long before Mussolini and Hitler. Communism also uses the technique of the elite (the most competent and masterful men who are destined to rule the people).

The Communist Party is an army of the elite, called the vanguard or leaders of the masses. The vanguard is a rigidly organized hierarchy of graded leadership, under the "iron discipline" of the Party. At the bottom are the ordinary Party members. At the top is the Politburo (Political Bureau, now call-

CHAPLAIN'S CORNER

What Means This Word?

By Chaplain (Capt.) Mitchell C. Johnson

A schoolboy, around eight years old, was sent home from school because he repeatedly refused to say the Lord's Prayer along with his class. He just could not make himself say the words "Our Father. . ."

Each time he tried, his lips would tremble, his throat would jam, and his eyes would well-up with tears. His teacher finally blew up and sent him home. It turned out that he was not just being stubborn or obstinate. The word, "Father" was related to some bad experience with his father and he had trouble in using it in prayer.

This little story is true. It appears in a book I have read where the author is making the point that words and experiences are intimately related to each other.

Now and then, for instance, I hear sour remarks about such a word as love. Such remarks usually come from those men and women who have drifted into situations that have emptied the word "love" of all meaning for them.

Fortunately this principle also works the other way. At times, instead of robbing a word of its value and meaning, an extremely personal experience will give it a new and richer meaning.

I questioned a man once regarding his careless and thoughtless use of the word "Jesus Christ" in his ordinary conversation. "Aw shucks, chaplain," he said, "its just a word. I don't mean nothing by it!"

This is the point. A name, a word, ordinarily filled with so much meaning for so many can mean nothing to an individual unless he can connect it with a worthy personal experience.

SURGEON SAYS

Watch Your Ticker

By Lt. Col. James A. Ewart MAH Cardiology Clinic

"Hardening of the arteries," or arteriosclerosis, is the most urgent preventive medicine problem in the United States today.

Arteriosclerotic cardiovascular disease accounts for more than one-half of all deaths in this country today. It is the leading cause of death from disease among active duty personnel in the U. S. Army, being exceeded only by deaths from accidental cause.

Once, this was felt to be a disease of senior citizens. However, the median age of death among those dying while on active duty is 43 years. Coronary arteriosclerosis was found in 77 per cent of young American soldiers who were killed in action during the Korean Conflict, whose average age was 23 years. At Martin Army Hospital we frequently have servicemen hospitalized with myocardial infarctions who are in their third decade.

What is It?

What is arteriosclerosis? This is a disease of arteries. The most common form has been likened to scales of rust on the inside of a pipe. Fatty material in the blood infiltrates the inner layer of blood vessels causing the lumen to gradually become narrowed. Necessary blood flow is gradually reduced.

These patches are irregular in their distribution and may involve vessels supplying blood to the brain, and thus cause "strokes." They may involve the coronary vessels, which supply blood to the heart, and thus cause a "heart attack," or they may supply other less vital organs such as the kidneys or the legs.

What causes arteriosclerosis or "hardening of the arteries"? Many diseases, such as tuberculosis, are caused by a single factor. In the case of arteriosclerosis there is no known single cause. Many factors are contributory.

Heredity A Factor

Heredity appears to be one factor. If there is a strong family history of "heart attacks" or "strokes," the individual is more likely to develop arteriosclerosis. Unfortunately an individual can do little to change his family tree.

Tensions under which modern civilization exists have been suggested as possible etiological factors. In Europe during World War II, when the population was certainly under much tension, myocardial infarctions became less frequent. This was probably because there was also a food shortage and people lost weight. Tensions are probably of only minor importance.

Most statistical studies have linked smoking with an increased risk of myocardial infarctions. While this rate is only two times that found in nonsmokers, when it is considered that there are over 400,000 deaths from arteriosclerotic heart disease each year, it is apparent that many individuals are affected.

Need Activity

Individuals who lead a strictly sedentary existence show a higher incidence of arteriosclerotic heart disease. Those occupations requiring regular moderate physical exercise are associated with less obesity and coronary artery disease.

As some coronary vessels become smaller, others gradually become larger and are able to provide a satisfactory blood flow to the heart muscle. Patients with mild coronary artery disease are encouraged to take regular physical exercise daily in order to maintain optimal physical fitness.

A male with hypertension more than 180 millimeters of mercury has approximately four times the usual risk of having a myocardial infarction. Physicians, therefore, recommend that hypertension be treated with appropriate measures to reduce the blood pressure to satisfactory levels.

Major Factor

The major factor in the development of arteriosclerosis

Dental Health Series

Teeth Make You Feel, Look and Sound Well

By Maj. Charles W. Dobson Preventive Dentistry Officer

(EDITOR'S NOTE) This is the sixth in a series presented in the interest of better dental health)

Teeth are a visible and important part of the individual. They are necessary for the following reasons:

(1) They give shape and expression to the face and mouth.

(2) They aid in speech by helping us to sound words properly.

(3) They permit the chewing of food for body nourishment.

Teeth are also psychologically important as nice healthy teeth permit a pretty smile, thereby making us more pleasing in appearance and expression to others. This gives us confidence in expression of thought.

Since teeth are so important to us we should know a little about them — what they do, and how to care for them. Every person normally acquires two sets of teeth.

First Set

The first set of teeth begin to come through the gums when a child is four to eight months old. The lower front teeth usually appear first. By about two and one-half years of age, all 20 of the first or primary teeth have erupted in the mouth.

During early childhood, these teeth make it possible for the child to eat solid food which requires chewing. They help the permanent teeth come in straight and in the proper places and permit the lower part of the face to develop naturally. They aid in speech during early years when life-long habits are formed.

The eight molars in the first teeth must serve the child until he is 10 to 13 years old, the major share of childhood years. For these reasons, and to prevent infection which might result from neglect, the first teeth need as good care as the permanent set—regular brushing, visits to the dentist, and proper food.

Permanent Teeth

The 32 permanent teeth are meant to last a lifetime. Twenty of them replace the first teeth. Twelve additional ones come in behind them. Roots of the primary teeth start to slowly disappear about three years before they are lost to be replaced by permanent ones. Twenty-eight permanent teeth erupt through the gums between the sixth and thirteenth years of age. The four wisdom teeth (third molars) do not appear until early adult life.

The first permanent teeth to erupt usually are the six-year molars. The four second molars do not appear until the 12th or 13th years. The lower teeth usually come through the gums before the corresponding upper teeth. Girls usually get their teeth earlier than do boys.

What do teeth do? Front teeth (incisors) have sharp cutting edges, and cut food like scissors. The pointed or eye teeth at the corners of the mouth tear food apart and shred it. These are called cuspids because each has one cusp or point. Just behind them are the bicuspids, so-called because they have two cusps.

In chewing, the upper and lower bicuspids come together like a nut cracker, breaking and tearing food. All teeth behind these are called molars because they have broad surfaces to grind food. Each molar has four or five cusps with grooves between.

Teeth Care

How can we personally take care of our teeth? In addition to a good diet, which is the individual's responsibility, good habits of mouth hygiene are important to dental health. One such habit is to keep the teeth scrupulously clean. Teeth which are well brushed and cared for give the face a more pleasing appearance.

Teeth should be brushed as soon as possible each time after food is eaten, whether it is a meal or a between meal snack. When it is not possible to brush immediately after taking food, the mouth can be rinsed (with benefit) instead.

In addition to personal care we should see the dentist regularly to have our teeth examined, cleaned, and defects found and corrected. This care is of major importance in maintaining dental health. A child should be taken to the dentist first when he is about two and one-half years old.

Decayed teeth injure the young child's health by infection and interference with good nutrition. The primary teeth have important functions and must be given careful attention.

With few exceptions, neglected decay leads eventually to dental infection and poor health, as well as discomfort and pain.

Teeth of children and adults should be examined and cleaned at regular intervals. Proper interval between visits to the dentist depends on individual needs and situations. Every three or four months is not too often for some individuals, while for others, twice a year may be enough. The dentist is the only one who can give qualified advice on this subject.

Post Choir Brightened By Sponsor

If members of Fort Benning's Infantry Chorus seem more enthusiastic about attending regular rehearsals, the reason may be in the group's new sponsor, Miss Myrna Stratford.

During the summer months Miss Stratford, a senior at Tift College in Forsyth, Ga., is employed as program director at Service Club Three.

This English major was recently selected as "Miss Griffin of 1962." She is a member of the Tift College Choir and Ensemble, and directs the Waverly Hall Baptist Church in her hometown of Waverly, Ga.

Musically-minded personnel wishing to join The Infantry Chorus are requested to contact Miss Stratford at 545-5423, or PFC Robert Brinkley, choir director, at 545-5641.

Woman's Club Diary

Although the pool is the meeting place these warm days for most members of the Woman's Club, the committee chairmen are already hard at work planning for the coming year.

Marilyn Gray, chairman of the Charm School, announces that Teenage Charm classes, conducted by Ann Roberts, will begin Friday, July 13, at the Woman's Club building. You may call her at 544-2905 for details.

Ceramics classes continue through the summer in Building 1061, as well as piano lessons in the School of Music.

The Pre-Kindergarten School is preparing to move into their new home, and Mrs. Jack Murray, principal, will be happy to register your three and four-year-olds now for the fall term. Information on the school's program is yours by calling her at 545-4628.

Duplicate Bridge continues each Monday at 12:45 p.m. at the Country Club. If you need some brushing up before joining the duplicate group, or if you just want a friendly afternoon of playing for fun, join the Party Bridgers any Thursday afternoon at the Country Club beginning at 1 p.m.

Some really fabulous buys are available at the Thrift Shop, now in two buildings opposite the Infantry Museum. Open each Tuesday and Thursday from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., a good variety of appliances, furniture and personal items is now in stock.

Col. Coker Honored At Unit Dinner

On Monday evening the officers of the 151st Engineer Group (Combat) and their ladies held a dinner-dance to honor their departing commander, Col. Sears Y. Coker, and his wife and to welcome their new commander, Col. Mahlon E. Gates and his wife.

After dinner Col. Coker received a beautiful tobacco humidor inlayed with the crests of the engineer units he has commanded here.

Lt. Col. James H. Boykin, toastmaster for the evening, also presented Col. Coker with a tooled leather photograph album containing photos of engineer activities during Col. Coker's command.

Col. Gates and his wife were welcomed to the 151st Engineer Group (Combat) by the toastmaster.

Latest Weapons to Be Displayed

BEST MESS . . . Accepting The Infantry Center Troop Command's Best Mess in Temporary Building plaque are 1st Lt. A. M. Sims (L) and SSgt. Martha L. Elder of the WAC Company. Presenting the award is Col. John Lattin, TICTC commander.

Some 1,250 ROTC cadets training at Fort Benning, Regular Army personnel and visitors will view and be briefed on some of the Infantry's latest weapons and vehicles at The Infantry Center Ordnance Section's annual display of modern Army equipment Wednesday and Thursday.

All the weapons will be sent from Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md., while the vehicles will be furnished by the Post Ordnance section.

The display, which will be held from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., will be in and around Bldg. 4440 in the Harmony Church area.

In the exhibit will be a number of weapons and vehicles that have replaced equipment dating back to World War I.

Among them will be the M-60 machine gun, the Infantry's newest automatic weapon. This air-cooled weapon, which has been adopted by the Armies of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO), can be fired at the rate of 450 to 600 rounds a minute.

Also displayed will be the M-14 rifle which has replaced the Browning automatic and the M-1 rifles, the carbine and .45 caliber submachine gun; the Davy Crockett, a nuclear delivery weapons system designed to fire both nuclear and conventional warheads; the XM-79 grenade launcher, capable of destroying enemy machine gun nests, bunkers and small troop concentrations at a maximum range of over 400 yards.

Other weapons on display will be the SS-10, a French developed antitank guided missile, remote controlled, with a solid propellant capable of putting out of action any existing tank in present-day Armies, and the SS-11, a complementary weapon to the SS-10. The SS-11 has greater warhead weight and speed.

The display will be open to the public.

is hyperlipemia (an increased amount of fat in the blood). The usual American diet, and also the Armed Forces master diet, provides almost 45 per cent of its calories from fat, a large portion of which is of animal origin.

Population studies have indicated that such diets are associated with high blood serum lipids (fats) and a high incidence of arteriosclerosis. If a middle aged male is found to repeatedly have a high serum cholesterol (one form of serum fat), he has three times the standard risk of having a myocardial infarction (heart attack).

Obesity is associated with hyperlipemia and arteriosclerosis. Desirable weights have been determined by life insurance underwriters.

Middle - aged males more than 20 per cent over these weights assume three times the standard risk from arteriosclerotic cardiovascular disease. The number of calories required by an individual depends upon many factors. If an individual is overweight he has been consuming more calories than his body requires. To lose weight, appropriate calorie reduction is necessary.

Studies have shown that diets containing only 20-25 per cent of the calories from fat will help lower serum lipids. If 35-50 per cent of these fat calories are furnished by polyunsaturated fats (mainly vegetable oils), there will be an additional lowering of the serum lipids. (Appropriate diets are available from the Cardiology Clinic, Martin Army Hospital.)

Many factors contribute to the production of arteriosclerosis. A few factors such as heredity and tensions cannot easily be altered. Obesity should be corrected by weight reduction on a low-calorie, balanced-fat diet. The usual American diet should be altered so that only 20-25 per cent of the calories are provided by fat.

Polyunsaturated fats should provide 35 - 50 per cent of these fat calories. Hypertension should be controlled. Smoking cannot be advised. Regular physical exercise, consistent with an individual's age and state of physical fitness, is recommended.

COL. FRANCIS

LAAC Gets Deputy CO

Lt. Col. Ernest H. Francis has been named deputy commander of Lawson Army Aviation Command.

He succeeds Lt. Col. Donato N. Vincent who has assumed command on the 3rd Transportation Battalion.

Rated in both fixed and rotary wing aircraft, Col. Francis holds a bachelor's degree in mechanical engineering from Baton Rouge, and a master's in aeronautical engineering from the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor.

A veteran of 21 years service, his last position was commander of the 45th Transportation Battalion, Fort Sill, Okla.

GOVERNMENT TRAINED

During fiscal year 1956 upwards of 10,000 officers and civilians were graduated from management courses, varying from four hours at The Infantry School to 14 months at the Comptroller Course at Syracuse University.

124 Finish Orientation

Graduation exercises at Fort Benning recently saw 124 officers complete The Infantry School's officer orientation course.

Among the graduates were 10 U.S. Air Force officers and two Allied officers — one from Thailand and one from Laos.

Honor graduate was 2nd Lt. Richard Bradbury.

The eight-week course is designed to provide basic Infantry training to newly commissioned officers.

During the instruction they receive training in such subjects as small unit tactics, leadership and weapons.

156th Signal NCO's Get Diplomas

The second graduating class of the 156th Signal Battalion's NCO Leadership Course received diplomas recently at Chickamauga Hall.

First Lt. William C. White, course director, opened the commencement with introductory remarks. The main speaker was Maj. Fred N. Scott, commanding officer of the 156th, who stressed the importance of good leadership in a National Guard unit.

Seventeen NCOs and enlisted men graduated from the course. Honor graduate was Sp4 Gary Spaiohour of Company C. PFC George Parish of Company A was second in the class academically. Tied for third were Sp4 Bernie Latner and PFC James J. Hoey, both of Company A. The class scholastic average was 80 per cent.

Senate OK's Housing Pay Increase Bill

Washington (AFPS) — The Senate has passed the quarters pay hike for members of the armed services and sent the legislation back to the House for consideration of amendments.

The bill — HR 11221 — as passed by the Senate calls for an effective date of Jan. 1, 1963. The House version calls for an effective date of Oct. 1, 1962.

The bill also carries an amendment to delete that section which would have made permanent the Dependents Assistance Act.

A spokesman for the House Armed Services Committee said the legislation would now be "discussed" by the House subcommittee headed by Rep. L. Mendel Rivers (D-S.C.) and then referred to the full committee for action.

At this point it is impossible to anticipate when the measure will be cleared by both the House and the Senate and sent to President Kennedy.

much too complex to be covered in detail here, but suffice it to say agency is of three types: expressed agency, implied agency and agency imposed by a law or statute. The relation of principal and agent arises wherever one person authorizes another to act for him, or subsequently ratifies the acts of another in his behalf.

An expressly created agency may be an oral or written contract of the parties. An implied agency is also an actual agency; it is a fact which is to be proved from deductions and inferences and from other facts and circumstances.

For example, an agency may be implied from prior habits or from a course of dealings of similar nature between the parties especially where the agent has repeatedly been permitted to perform similar acts in the past; but when the agency is implied, it must be determined from all facts and circumstances. The question in the above - mentioned agencies is always to determine whether a party represents another, or is acting for another, and not what the parties may have designated their relations to be.

Once the agency exists, it will be an agency whether parties understood the exact nature of the relation or not. Therefore, unless the husband can be said to have made his wife either his express or implied agent, he should not promise to pay or be advised to pay a debt created by his wife.

19-Gun Salute Greets Head of Chilean Army

A 19-gun salute will officially welcomed the commander-in-chief of the Chilean Army to Fort Benning in ceremonies on Chapel Field this morning.

Gen. Oscar Izurieta arrived at Lawson Army Airfield Thursday.

Firing the welcoming salute were gun crews from Battery A, 2nd Howitzer Battalion, 10th Artillery, 1st Infantry Brigade.

The Honor Guard Company, Company C, 1st Battle Group, 29th Infantry, 1st Brigade, and The Infantry Center Band also participated in the honors ceremony.

The Allied visitor then received an Airborne-Air Mobility Department orientation at Eubanks Field.

Briefings on the history and organization of The Infantry Center, the organization and mission of The Infantry School, and the utilization of the post support of training will familiarize Gen. Izurieta with the operation of Fort Benning.

He is scheduled to see a weapons demonstration on Hook Range.

The Chilean official will confer with Maj. Gen. Ben Harrell, commanding general of TIC and commandant of TIS, and attend an official luncheon in the Supper Club Annex of the Main Officers' Open Mess.

Gen. Izurieta is slated to observe two problems demonstrated by Fort Benning's Infantrymen. The first will be a rifle company in attack, the second, the Rangers in action.

The Allied general will depart the post tomorrow with an honors ceremony at Lawson.

'Pershing' To Begin Courses

HUNTSVILLE, Ala. (ANS)— July 6.

The first personnel to maintain the Army's new Pershing ballistic missile in the field will begin training here at the Army Ordnance Guided Missile School at Redstone Arsenal on

The new field artillery weapon which is much lighter, smaller and more mobile than the "Old Reliable" Redstone missile, will replace the Redstone at bases in the U.S. and overseas.

Five Ordnance courses will be offered for the Pershing missile men. They will begin with maintenance instruction on digital computers that plot the missile's trajectory to its target and a lengthy ballistic missile maintenance technician's course. Other courses will deal with repair of propulsion and structural elements, inertial guidance and control maintenance and operation of test equipment that quickly checks the combat readiness of the entire weapon system.

The staff and faculty of 74 have received special training in the Pershing system in courses conducted under the supervision of the Ordnance Missile Command at the Martin Co. plant at Orlando, Fla.

Signal Corps Develops New Print System

WASHINGTON (ANS) — The Army has developed a new motion picture printer which automatically produces image with the same level of brightness between scenes and could also result in savings in time and cost of motion picture processing.

The printer, developed by Signal Corps engineers, employs a light-sensing photocell to set off a series of electro-mechanical operations which determine and automatically set the proper exposure for development.

HAVE SOME WATERMELON, SIS

And Fancy Meeting YOU Here. . .Brother Says

By 9th Infantry

Private James E. Buckman was the envy of Company A, 9th Infantry, last week at Little Creek, Virginia, when his attractive sister, Seaman Apprentice Betty Buckman of nearby Norfolk, paid him a visit.

The meeting was the first in several months since the two entered their chosen branches of service.

Rivals

The two military "rivals" are from a family of eight brothers and sisters, all from Clarkdale, Arkansas, where they lived on the family farm. Private Buckman is with his unit at Little Creek, Virginia, for a two-week amphibious training exercise with the Navy, while Seaman Buckman is stationed at Norfolk at the Naval Air Station.

Pvt. Buckman's younger brother of one year was the first to enter the service, when he enlisted in the Navy eight months ago. Private Buckman was the next to go when he was drafted in December 1961, just after his marriage.

Being a closely knit family and used to doing things together, Betty then decided that she would give the military a try. She enlisted in the Navy as a WAVE in January 1962, to broaden her education and to travel before settling down. Seaman Buckman took a ten-week basic training course at Bainbridge, Md., before being assigned to the Norfolk Naval Air Station as a clerk in the Wave barracks.

Unlike the basic training course taken by her brother, Jimmy, she studied Naval history and administrative functions rather than hill climbing and field survival.

Private Buckman's basic training was taken at Fort Chaffee, Ark., before he arrived at the 9th Infantry in May 1962, where he was assigned to the weapons platoon of Company A.

The two Buckmans took a day's break in their duties last week to tour the Air Station and to enjoy a lunch at the Naval mess hall. Had rain not been a hindrance, they would have found a way to do some water skiing, in which they both excel. The entire Buckman family, including their parents, are experts and avid fans of all water sports.

The next reunion of the entire Buckman family is scheduled for the Thanksgiving holidays, when the Buckman household will overflow with Army and Navy personnel and a multitude of grandchildren from the more settled section of the family.

Maj Johnson Is Promoted Again at Div

Major Robert D. Johnson, G-3 school officer, who served with the 37th Infantry Division (redesignated the 10th Division and later redesignated the 2nd) was promoted recently to his present rank.

He has spent his entire commissioned service with either the 2nd Division or a unit later redesignated the 2nd Division.

He enlisted in the Army in 1942 and served with the Army Air Corps as an enlisted man until 1945.

Was with 37th

In 1948 Maj. Johnson returned to the Army as a first lieutenant and was assigned to the 37th Division at Fort Polk, La. He went with the 37th Division to Fort Riley, Kan. where the 37th was incorporated into and redesignated as the 10th Infantry Division. From Fort Riley he moved with the 10th to Germany. The 10th returned to the United States and was redesignated the 2nd Division at Fort Benning in 1954.

Maj. Johnson served with the Army a total of 18 years, seven years as an enlisted man and 11 years as a commissioned officer.

He served with Division Artillery for four-and-one-half years, with 2nd Division G-1 for two-and-one-half years, and with G-3, where he is presently located, for 18 months.

Among other awards and decorations, Maj. Johnson holds the Distinguished Flying Cross, the Air Medal with three Oak Leaf Clusters, and the Good Conduct Medal with two clasps.

REENLISTING AT LAWSON FIELD
Gen. Chase, Left, Re-ups SMaj. Brown

SMaj Brown Reups; Plans on 30 Years

2nd Division's Sergeant Major Robert L. Brown, who in January 1960 was selected from all Army units to be among 100 Soldiers officiating in the inauguration of President John F. Kennedy, Tuesday elected to remain in the Army over 20 years.

Sergeant Major Brown, 2nd Division sergeant major completed 20 years service Tuesday and promptly reenlisted for another three-year term.

At Lawson Field

Reenlisting in a ceremony at Lawson Army Air Field, the sergeant major was sworn in by Major General Charles H. Chase, division commanding general.

The native of Winchester, Virginia, plans to make his home in Columbus, Georgia, following 30 years service.

The 36-year-old sergeant major who at the age of 20 was sergeant-of-the-guard for the 1946 Nuremburg War Crimes Trials, hopes to spend the rest of this Army career with the 2nd Infantry Division.

Sergeant Major Brown is a veteran of World War II campaigns in Africa and Italy with the 1st and 34th Infantry Divisions. He served in the occupation of Japan in 1949 with the 25th Infantry Division and fought in Korea with the same unit.

Prior to joining the 2nd Division, Sergeant Major Brown served in Hawaii. He joined

Relief Dollars Flowing; Fund Drive at Midstream

The annual Army Emergency Relief Drive is at its half-way point in the 2nd Division.

According to Captain Ralph C. Colley, project officer, a total of $5,163 has been turned in to his office to date. He emphasized however, that many units have not reported their July collections, and that he hopes the figure will be much larger by the time the drive is concluded August 10.

The requirement for the Army Emergency Relief nationally averages out to approximately $1.50 per man. Although the 2nd Division does not have a specific goal this year, it hopes to carry its fair share of the national objective.

The Army Emergency Relief Fund is maintained to assist military personnel in times of financial difficulty, especially when aid from other similar organizations may be unable to give immediate assistance.

Then They Took a Holiday

Beach-Invading 9th Inf Celebrates July 4th

By 9th Infantry PIO

Ships at Little Creek, Va., filled up once more as the 9th Infantry and support units boarded in preparation for their full-scale beach landing at Red Beach, Camp Pendleton, Virginia.

With all equipment and vehicles stowed away and ready to set sail, the 9th Infantry then took a holiday. The beaches of Virginia offered a 4th of July complete with fireworks.

Wednesday, the ocean-going vessels set out on their mission. For two days the 9th Infantry is experiencing a new type of "rock and roll", that of ocean waves beating the sides of a ship.

Today, the Manchuman will go into full swing. Companies A and C, in nine landing boats, will hit the beach. They will seize the initial objective, which is occupied by aggressor forces consisting of Army and Marine personnel.

Clearing the beach they will move on to their second objective with equal success.

With all objectives secured and the aggressor under control, the 9th will depart via bus to Fort Story, Virginia, and will prepare to return to Fort Benning. A two-day bivouac with maintenance of equipment will terminate the 9th's stay in Virginia.

122nd Sig. Bn. Is Host To Two Iranian Officers

By 122nd Signal Bn PIO

Concepts of signal operations and organization are being studied at the 122nd Signal Battalion by representatives of Iranian and Danish Armies.

Here for a brief visit are Captain Ali-Akbar Nazamzadeh and Lieutenant Jafar Kohee of the Imperial Iranian Army and Lieutenant Palar Fonsler of the Danish Army.

Study Capabilities

Purpose of the visit is to acquaint these Allied officers with capabilities of an Infantry division signal battalion.

During their visit to the battalion, the officers are spending an equal amount of time in each of the unit's three companies in order to gain a clear picture of the mission each company plays in the over-all mission of the battalion. They spent two days in the field observing operations during Command Post Exercise Juliet and have observed the staff operations prior to the battalion's moving to the field.

By 38th Inf PIO

Nine new officers, seven captains and two lieutenants, have joined the 38th Infantry in recent weeks while one officer has departed the battle group.

New Captains

Six of the new officers are recent graduates of the Infantry Officer Career Course at The Infantry School. Their assignments in the battle group include:

Captain Thornton A. Burns Jr., Headquarters Company commander; Captain Ralph P. Kennedy Jr., Company A commander; Captain Larry B. Aicken, Company B commander; Captain Dennis J. Harron, Combat Support Company commander; Captain Bynum P. Westall, S-2; and Captain James W. Grey, assistant S-3.

Also arrived are Captain Robert J. Griffon, new battle group surgeon, and Lieutenants Alton E. Galvez, platoon leader in Company A, and Leonard C. Thomas, platoon leader in Company B.

Gone from the 38th is the former surgeon, Capt. Henry Fuller Jr., who has departed the service for a residency at the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minnesota.

Capt. Burns, the new Headquarters Company commander, replaces Lt. Jack E. Kilgore, who has been assigned as assistant S-4. Capt. Burns is a 1956 graduate of the U.S. Military Academy and has served tours at Fort Riley, Kansas, and in Europe with the 1st and 24th Infantry Divisions.

Capt. Kennedy, the new Company A commander, succeeds Lt. Jean A. Sauvageot, who is now executive officer of Combat Support Company. Capt. Kennedy obtained his commission through The Reserve Officer Training Corps from Penn. State University in 1955 and has served in Japan and most recently as a Ranger School instructor at Fort Benning and Dahlonega, Ga. He is a jumpmaster and pathfinder and has been awarded the Army Commendation Medal.

Capt. Aicken replaces Lt. Frank L. Grubb as Company B commander. Lt. Grubb, scheduled to leave the 38th Infantry in August for aviation school, and is staying at present with the company as executive officer.

Capt. Aicken is a 1956 University of Kentucky graduate. A qualified Army aviator, he has served with the 2nd Aviation Company here and with the 1st Cavalry Division in Korea.

Capt. Harron in Combat Support Company replaces Lt. Thomas G. Boyd as company commander; Lt. Boyd has become battle group motor officer filling a gap left when Lt. Donald Abel became Headquarters Company executive officer. Capt. Harron is a 1954 Officer Candidate School graduate and also is an Army pilot.

Capt. Westall, new S-2, takes over the section formerly headed by Lt. Vincent A. Appruzzese, who is now assistant S-2. Capt. Westall served as an enlisted man from 1946 to 1952 before being commissioned in Korea while with the 31st Infantry Regiment. He has served nearly nine years overseas, including both Europe and in the Far East. He is qualified as a jumpmaster.

Capt. Grey, assistant S-3, is a 1955 West Point graduate and has also attended Airborne and Ranger schools. He served from 1957 to 1961 with the 38th Infantry, 3rd Infantry Division, at both Fort Benning, and in Europe.

The new surgeon in the 38th, Capt. Griffon, is a graduate of the Louisiana State University School of Medicine. He attended the Army Medical Officer Orientation Course at Fort Sam Houston, Texas, and served a short time with the 2nd Medical Battalion before joining the 38th.

Lt. Galvez, new Company A platoon leader, is a 1961 ROTC graduate of Texas A and M. University.

Lt. Thomas in Company B is an April 1962 graduate of Virginia State College. He also attended the Infantry Officer Orientation Course before coming to the 38th.

Parade Tomorrow

Training Suspended As 23rd Celebrates

BY 23RD INFANTRY PIO

Displays, a full battle group review, "kiddie" rides and refreshments will mark the 23rd Infantry's organization day tomorrow as Soldiers of that combat-ready unit take a day off from training to celebrate the history of their unit.

Festivities for the occasion begin tonight with dinner and dancing at the Supper Club for the officers of the battle group. The non-commissioned officers will hold their dinner and dancing tomorrow night.

Tomorrow morning a parade by members of the 23rd is scheduled to be reviewed at Wetherby Field by Colonel Gustav M. Bacharach, division chief of staff, along with other dignitaries and an anticipated large number of civilian spectators. The battle group commander, Lieutenant Colonel Cecil M. Sanders will present awards and read the history of the unit. A rededication of the battle group colors will also be performed.

Equipment on Display

On display for the public will be both garrison and field equipment of the battle group. An aid station display, including an ambulance, will help show the public the Army's medical services. The preparation of food during field training will be shown in a field kitchen set up on the parade field. Demonstrating how a .30 caliber M-1 rifle and rifleman can be camouflaged from the enemy will be the responsibility of two Soldiers from the Company E.

Various types of vehicles and weapons currently being used by the battle group will also be displayed, with a narrator on hand to answer questions and point out the characteristics and mission of the equipment displayed.

For the kiddies, there will be rides in such Army vehicles as an M-41 Tank, the Army "Mule", an armored personnel carrier and quarter ton trucks. Refreshments will be served after the parade and during the time the displays are open to the public.

Edward J. Keefe Of 9th Inf S-4 Is Upped to SFC

9th Infantry PIO

A non-commissioned officer of the 9th Infantry, who has served overseas for over 14 years, was promoted recently to the grade of sergeant first class, (E-7).

Sergeant First Class Edward J. Keefe is the supply NCO with the S-4 section of the 9th Infantry.

He first entered the service in 1943 and took training at Aberdeen Proving Grounds, Maryland. From 1946 through 1951 he was stationed in Germany with an Ordnance Detachment. Sergeant Keefe then spent three years in Newfoundland.

From 1955 to 1958 he was stationed at Tokorozawa, Japan, as a supply sergeant. He returned to Germany in 1958 and in July of that year was sent to Lebanon. Sergeant Keefe spent three months on the beaches of Lebanon before the crisis died down and he was returned to Germany.

In 1961 Sergeant Keefe was assigned to Fort Benning and was the supply sergeant at Company E. He came to Headquarters Company in February 1962 to work in the S-4 section.

Looking Back

23rd's Seen Busy Year

By 23rd Infantry PIO

Looking back on the past year the 23rd Infantry has undergone many changes.

August saw the last cycle of basic trainees depart as the battle group received the mission of becoming combat ready.

In conjunction with this, the unit has undergone intensive training in varied fields of combat readiness. Field problems have taken the unit on maneuvers for as long as two weeks at a time. In February of the current year, the unit, as a part of the 2nd Infantry Division, was incorporated into the Strategic Army Corps.

The unit traveled, along with other units of the 2nd Division, to Fort McClellan, Ala., last February, and to Fort Stewart, Ga., in April to participate in exercises planned to give the troops a taste of what actual combat would be like.

The battle group experienced river-crossing problems. Escape and evasion techniques, the preparation for air movement, classes on counter - insurgency, and most recently, amphibious assault landing training at Little Creek, Va., have all been taught the infantrymen as part of their training program.

SSgt. Jones Of 2nd QM Is Promoted

By 2nd QM Co. PIO

Recently promoted to his present rank is Staff Sergeant Edgar S. Jones of the 2nd Quartermaster Company. Sergeant Jones is also the newly appointed mess steward of the 2nd Quartermaster Company, succeeding Sergeant First Class Porter T. Davis.

Sergeant Jones became a member of the 2nd Division in 1955 at Fort Riley, Kansas, where he served with the 41st Engineers. He was transferred to Germany later the same year and returned to the United States to attend the 2nd Infantry Division Non-Commissioned Officer Academy in 1958.

In January 1960, after a brief tour of duty in Korea, Sergeant Jones was assigned to the 2nd Quartermaster Company as first cook.

He has been in the Army for 16 years.

College Age Group Has Party at Club Lounge

The June party of the College Age Group was held on the evening of June 27 in the Supper Club Lounge. The group is sponsored by the 2nd Division Officers' Wives Club.

Lieutenant Colonel and Mrs. R. K. Jones and Lieutenant Colonel and Mrs. James Fiser were the chaperones at the event.

Name Tag Committee

On the name tag committee were Miss Donna Handins, University of Florida; Miss Gerry Vassar, William and Mary College; Jim Healy, Monterey Junior College; and Mike Busch, Western Kentucky State College.

Pouring were Miss Betty Drissell, Rollins College; Miss Jeannie McLendon, St. Francis School of Nursing; Miss Carol Cornett, University of Arkansas; Miss Christine Youngs, University of Florida; and Miss Kay Jones, Auburn University. Refreshments served at the get-together were punch and dips.

The College Age Group will sponsor a function in both July and August. Anyone interested in helping plan the July party should call Mrs. Jones at 545-3806.

PWOC Has Bible Drill At Meeting

The Protestant Women of Chapel Three held their regular monthly meeting recently.

Mrs. Edward E. Sexton gave the devotional. Chaplain G. R. Ristau and Chaplain Robert C. Harlee were master of ceremonies and score-keeper, respectively, in a Bible quiz. Mrs. E. L. Cockburn was the winner. Mrs. Sexton was runner-up. They each received a book as their prize.

Mrs. J. E. Moore was introduced as a new member. Mrs. Joseph D. Kelly was a guest at the affair.

The project for July will be a visit to a home for the aged. A devotion will be presented and gifts of fruit and flowers passed out. Mrs. Robert C. Harlee is in charge of the project.

87th Ladies Give 'German' Brunch

The ladies of the 87th Infantry feted Mrs. Gustav M. Bacharach with an "Auf Wiedersehen" brunch recently at the Custer Terrace Officers' Club.

Mrs. Bacharach was greeted by 40 ladies, each wearing an organdy apron and cap. They also wore name tags which featured the head of a little German girl with yellow, braided hair.

Decorations

Picture postcards and posters from many places in Germany were scattered throughout the room. The background music featured a number of German selections. Pink bouquets in German steins were placed around the room.

The head table featured a carved wooden figure of a man carrying a lantern. It was surrounded by a group of china figurines playing different musical instruments. The ladies were served punch in tiny varicolored steins.

Mrs. Ralph Hughett presented a corsage and a large German stein to Mrs. Bacharach as a parting memento from the group.

New arrivals to the group were introduced. They included Mrs. Richard Stewart, Mrs. Roy Dunaway Jr., Mrs. Herbert Sink, Mrs. Valdor Hall, Mrs. Cory Jackson and Mrs. Charles Hawkins.

Farewells were said to Mrs. Ronald Berkey, Mrs. Edwin May, Mrs. James Danley and Mrs. Kenneth Sweeney.

9th Ladies Coffee Has July 4th Air

The ladies of the 9th Infantry met in the Normandy Room of the Main Officers' Open Mess recently for their monthly coffee.

Mrs. Robert K. Gunn, Mrs. William L. McMullen Jr. and the wives of the S-2 and S-4 sections were hostesses for the affair.

To carry out the theme of July 4th they chose a miniature cannon and a doll-size soldier to decorate the serving table.

Mrs. Clifford P. Hannum, wife of the battle group commander, introduced guests at the event. They were Mrs. John M. Anthony, Mrs. Joseph Bruno, Mrs. Ernest E. Cross, Mrs. Robert L. Clark, Mrs. Edge Farley, Mrs. Raymond Komaniecki and Mrs. William L. McMullen Jr.

Farewells were said to Mrs. Horace Sams Jr., Mrs. George M. Wallace, Mrs. Allan J. Francisco, Mrs. Grady F. Webster and Mrs. James H. Bragg.

Coffee Given For Mrs. Tighe

A coffee was held last Thursday honoring Mrs. James Tighe, former president of the Ladies of the Big Indianhead, who is leaving Fort Benning soon.

The coffee was given by Mrs. Lawrence W. Smith at her home.

An arrangement of peck roses and heather centered the refreshment table at which Mrs. Bilbo Nowell poured. Guests in addition to Mrs. Nowell and Mrs. Tighe were Mrs. Stephen J. Regan, Mrs. Eubert Linthicum, Mrs. Warren Ottley, Mrs. Patrick Diener and Mrs. Pelham Breaud.

Senator, Governor Hired Mrs Hannum...Navy, Too!

By Ingrid Kraus

It's no wonder that Mrs. Clifford P. Hannum enjoys working; she has worked for some very interesting people, including Sen. Stuart Symington of Missouri, Maj. Gen. Joseph Martin, for whom the hospital here is named, and former Gov. Buford Jester of Texas.

The wife of Col. Hannum, commander of the 9th Infantry, has combined the role of a wife with a secretarial career almost continually since marrying into the Army.

'Safari Operation'

Mrs. Hannum accompanied her husband to Korea during 1958-60. While working for the United Nations Command she travelled there as a U. S. Army employee, later worked for the Air Force and left as a Navy employee. She explained that it was a "joint operation."

Mrs. Hannum, who has also been to Hawaii and Germany,

WORKER

commented, "I enjoyed Europe the most. It was very enlightening." While there she travelled extensively, including taking a trip to the Near East and the Holy Land.

The colonel's lady, who is originally from Mexico, Missouri, finished high school when she was 15, was graduated from secretarial school at Roanoke, Virginia, and attended the University of Texas.

Although battle group activities and her job as secretary in The Infantry School's office of the coordinator of instruction keep her very busy, she tries to find some spare time for bowling, horseback riding and attending events of the 2nd Division Officers' Wives Club and Fort Benning Woman's Club.

Mrs. Hannum feels that Army life is the most interesting, enlightening and educational life a wife could have. She commented enthusiastically, "You're constantly making new friends and are always crossing the paths of old friends. I enjoy this throughly. There's never a dull moment in the Army. I even like to move, since every move is exciting and challenging."

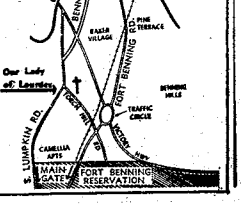
The Hannums came to Fort Benning from Washington, D. C., where Col. Hannum attended the National War College. Since the colonel has been stationed in the nation's capital several times, the couple feels very much at home in Washington.

HOW IS YOUR PITCHING ARM?... The penny pitch was one of the many concessions operated this week by 2nd Division personnel at the annual YAC Carnival. The 122nd Signal Battalion's Sergeant Bob Wooten, left, and Specialist Four Eddie Stanley call for carnival customers to come and try their skill.

Coffee Honors Mrs. Bacharach At Club Lounge

Hostesses recently at a coffee held in the Supper Club Lounge were Mrs. Ralph K. Jones, Mrs. John Wine, Mrs. Jack Samson and Mrs. Charles M. Johnson. The event was held in honor of Mrs. G. M. Bacharach.

The centerpiece was a carved watermelon basket brimming with fruit.



Pouring at the affair were Mrs. Louis A. Kunzig Jr. and Mrs. Walter Todd.

Mrs. Bacharach will journey with her husband, Colonel Bacharach, to their next assignment in Germany soon.

Free Coffee Is OWC Member Drive's Offer

87th Infantry and Division Trains Share First Place in Division Softball League

The 87th Infantry "Conquerors" softball team won two more games last week but dropped the big one to Division Trains, throwing the softball race into a tie.

The two teams, ending the regular season with a record of 10-2, are scheduled to play-off tonight at Essebagger Field for the division title. If the 87th's team should win, it would virtually clinch the Commanding General's Sports Trophy for the second consecutive time.

The loss to Division Trains, which ended in a 4-0 score, was the first time the 87th was shut out. The first inning saw Division Trains tally four times, and the remainder of the game was a pitching duel between Meyers and Goodwin with Meyers effectively stopping the usually busy Conqueror bats.

Earlier in the week, the Conquerors came from behind to whip the 38th Infantry 4-2 in an extra-inning contest. Behind 2-0 in the last inning, Pilar Garcia came through with a two run hit to tie the game. In the eighth, hits by Lavery Jordan, Goodwin and Larry Hall put the game away as Goodwin held the opposition scoreless.

IN ERROR

In the window of a bankrupt Chicago, Ill., store was placed the following notice: "Opened by mistake."

The following game saw the 87th take a 6-2 decision from Separate Battalions represented by 122nd Signal. Behind once again by a score of 2-0, The 87th batters came to life in the fourth to tie the game. In the sixth, hits by Joe Shaheen, Ronald Guy and Billy Stoops wrapped up the ball game for the Cooquerors. Goodwin, after a shaky start, settled down to pick up his seventh win.

Two Men's Divisions Play Net Tournament

Two men's divisions will mark the 2nd Infantry Division Tennis Tournament this summer.

A Men's Open Division and a Men's Senior Division will make up the competition. Those competing in the Senior Division must be 40 years of age on or before July 12th.

Sand Hill Tennis Courts

Sand Hill Tennis Courts will be the battlefield. The tournament dates are July 12 through July 19. All entrees will be on an individual basis. Those military personnel assigned to the 2nd Division are eligible.

Tournament Competition will be single elimination. In the opening events the preliminary rounds will be the best two out of three sets. The final winners will play the best three out of five sets. Those who are eligible for the Senior Division may enter the Open Division. However, they forfeit their entry to the Senior Division by doing so.

Competitors must provide all their own equipment except tennis balls. Division Special Services will provide these.

July 19 is the last day to report to Special Services in order to enter. Pairings will be announced on July 11. Assignment of officials and presentation of awards will be made by Division Special Services.

Competition will be in accordance with the 1962 United States Lawn Tennis Rules. Points towards the Commanding General's Sports Trophy may be claimed. Senior Division participants are not eligible for points.

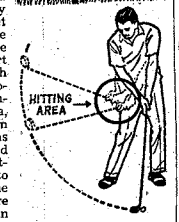
The senior singles saw Brig. Gen. Royal Reynolds, deputy commandant of The Infantry School, defeat M. J. McClung, 6-0, 6-0 to enter the semifinals.

Today's Sportrait

Today's Sportrait spotlights PFC Anna "Gidget" Kessler, WAC Detachment, The Infantry Center Troop Command, from Coatesville, Pa. Anna attended Scott High School in her hometown where she was voted the most popular girl of her class.

KESSLER

She was president of the Christian Hi-Y Club, a member of community church, active in school and community social functions.



Anna became interested in swimming at six years of age and, since then, has participated in five national events.

While a junior in high school she was the recipient of the Grand Prize Award in the first Pennsylvania marching championship contest held in Harrisburg. Anna was selected from a group of 250 contestants. She competed in military marching, drill team marching, manual of arms, drill and flag etiquette routines.

In April 1959, Anna represented Pennsylvania in the National Color Guard Championship in Washington, D. C., at which she received the National Marching Crown, along with prizes that range from two college scholarships to trophies and Savings Bonds.

At present Anna is a senior life guard at Bryant Wells Field House swimming pool. She was inducted into the service in 1961 by her father, MSgt. William K. Raybould, an Army career counselor. Anna took basic training at Fort McClellan, Ala., where she also completed clerical school and was awarded MOS 710. At present she is performing duties as record clerk of Company B, Student Brigade.

KEEP DOWNSWING SMOOTH . . . Rhythm, balance, control—these are the elements which make your golf swing a beauty to behold and produce the accuracy and distance to get down in par. Pause momentarily at the top of the swing; start club down with smooth, unhurried motion. As the wrists uncoil in the hitting area, three or four feet from the ball, the arms straighten out and body weight shifts naturally from right to left. At impact, the hands and arms are practically back in their original, address-ing-the-ball position.

489th Engr. Bn. Wins First Game Of 151st Play-off

Headquarters Company, representing the 489th Engineer Battalion, came from behind to beat Company A, representing the 391st Engineer Battalion 19 to 13, recently in a first-round game of the 151st Engineer softball playoff.

The game was played a week earlier but was called due to time with the score tied 10-10 after nine innings of play. Headquarters and Company A each won their respective battalion titles earlier this season.

The 391st jumped off to an early lead when they scored nine runs in the first inning. They held the lead until the fifth inning when Headquarters tied the score on Bobby Weaver's bases-loaded home run and then went on to win with six runs in the seventh.

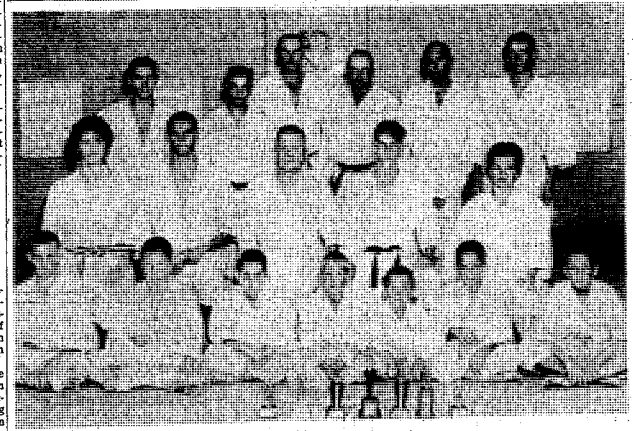
Richard Box led the winners at the plate with a perfect five for five. David Merrill had a single and double in four times at bat for the 891st.

WACs Grab First Win Of Season

The Fort Benning WAC softball team clobbered Fort McPherson WAC's 21-9, last Saturday, in their second game of the season. The WAC team bowed to the Fort Bragg team in their opening 11-10.

Josephine Grassia hurled the win during the McPherson game, while Louise Davis paced the hitting by smacking two four baggers, a three-run homer and a two-run homer. Pat Livingston and Charline Seals contributed two doubles and three singles apiece to help the winning cause.

The WAC's will travel to Fort Gordon this weekend for action. The girls will play their first home game of the season July 14. They will be facing Fort Bragg for the second time this season.



Pigskin Meet Set at BWFH

The Infantry Center Athletic Department announces that there will be a meeting of all men interested in trying out for the 1962 Doughboy football team on July 7 at Bryant Wells Field House. The meeting, scheduled for 1 p.m., is open to all men on active duty at Fort Benning.

Coach Cofield plans to discuss the coming football schedule and explain his views on the making of a football candidate for the Doughboy team.

Wynn Says Baseballs In Orbit

LOS ANGELES (AFPS)—"A careful study of the films of their flights might disclose some interesting facts about those particles they saw in orbit." Early Wynn, veteran pitcher for the Chicago White Sox, was explaining why he wired Astronauts John Glenn and Scott Carpenter in this vein.

Post Judo Team Returns Home With Nine Trophies

The post Judo team returned from the Tuscaloosa, Ala., Invitational Tournament last week with nine of the 18 trophies.

Harvey Carson placed first in the 180-pound division and was crowned the overall champion of the tournament.

In the 140-pound division, Tom Makamura and Peter Schapffle placed second and third respectively. Spencer Alexander took first place in the junior event with Edward Smith and Frank Hefner taking second and third place respectively.

In the women's division, Carmer Hensey placed first with Vera Read taking third.

The Fort Bening team will see action in the Southeastern Invitational Judo Tournament to be held at Briant Wells Field House July 14-15.

TIS Experts to Staff Firing School in Ohio

Fifteen officers and 36 enlisted men of The Infantry School's Weapons Department are preparing for the 1962 Small Arms Firing School to be conducted at Camp Perry, Ohio, in conjunction with the National Rifle and Pistol Matches.

With assistance from shooting authorities from other components of the Armed Forces and civilian communities, the Small Arms Firing School will present instruction in pistol and rifle marksmanship to over 6,000 participants in the 1962 National Matches.

Instruction Topics

Instruction will include mechanical training, techniques and methods of instruction. A special police-pistol course will be given to lawn enforcement agents.

During the conduct of the pistol course July 27-28 and the rifle course Aug. 12-15, Infantry School members of SAFS will, in addition to presenting the major portion of instruction, organize and supervise the instructional efforts of over 750 military coaches and guest instructors. These coaches and instructors will represent the Army, Air Force, Navy, Coast Guard and the National Rifle Association.

Courses of instruction presented by SAFS are specifically designed for adult marksmanship enthusiasts of either sex from all parts of the nation.

Divided Into Groups

Classes are divided into two groups, one for experts and the other for less experienced shooters. In both the rifle and pistol schools, the course for expert shooters will include specialized training in methods of instruction.

This training is designed to improve the effectiveness of instruction presented by the nation's best shooters in the communities from which they come. All courses will provide instruction in the service weapons employed by the Army.

Students, who successfully complete each course, will be awarded certificates of attendance or instructor certificates.

Really Cool Chapel Built In Glacier

CAMP TUTO, Greenland (ANS) — One of the most unusual military chapels in the world was put into use for the first time recently when mass was conducted inside a glacier at the edge of Camp Tuto, Greenland, summer operations base of the Army Polar Research and Development Center.

The Chapel was the result of a week's work by volunteer parishioners of the Camp Chapel under the direction of Chaplain (Capt.) Joseph V. Coshan, and was built in the Camp Tuto Ice Tunnel.

Every piece of permanent equipment in the 12 feet high, 10 feet wide Gothic vault Chapel was formed entirely from ice. The altar, which weighs nearly 700 pounds, was molded into a single block of ice formed by combining water with the chips hewn from the apse. This process formed the solid, modernistic, flaky sculpture.

Candlesticks used for the service were pure crystalline ice, blasted from Lake Tuto (the source of the Camp's water supply). After being hand-rubbed, they were as clear as fine glass.

The chamber in which the Chapel is located was particularly well lighted. A thick coating of hoarfrost causes the room's walls and ceiling to appear to be opaque. Beautiful hues of blue and green were given off by translucent lights shining through the frost and ice, illuminating the whole room.

The Ice Tunnell, in which the Chapel was built, is used for various Army Research and Development projects by the Army Cold Regions Research and Engineering Laboratory and the Army Engineering Research and Development Laboratories. Various projects involving measurements of snow and ice density and closure rate have been carried on since its construction in 1960. Always a point of great interest for visitors, the tunnel's attraction will undoubtedly increase since the Chapel will be retained as a permanent part of it.

Weather Station Command Goes To Maj. Vicroy

Maj. Clarence E. Vicroy recently assumed command of Detachment 10, 16th Weather Squadron, U. S. Air Force Weather Service, here.

He succeeds Capt. Michael A. Titre who is retiring.

In his new job, the Air Force officer will be the weather officer for Lawson Army Airfield and will be responsible for weather support operations at Lawson.

The new commander of the 10th Detachment is taking over on the 25th anniversary of the Air Weather Service and the eighth year of operation for the local unit.

At the present, there are three officers and 18 enlisted men assigned to the 10th.

RETIREMENT TRIBUTE . . . Sgt. Maj. Joseph H. Garner, retiring sergeant major of The Student Brigade, receives a miniature Infantryman statue as a parting gesture by the officers and men of TSB. Presenting the statue is Col. Otto R. Koch Jr., TSB commander.

RECORD HOLDER

Holder of 20 AAU national age group swimming records, Pvt. Jerry Fredericks has been assigned to Fort Ord.

Activate New Command

The Army Combat Developments Command was formally activated recently at Fort Belvoir, Va., under the command of Lt. Gen. John P. Daley.

The command was established as part of the Army's reorganization program.

From its headquarters at Fort Belvoir, the command will control six second-level agencies, each concerned with a special aspect of combat developments, and 19 field agencies. The command will employ over 6,000 military and civilian personnel at Army installations throughout the United States. Its annual budget, excluding military pay and maintenance, will be approximately $24 million.

The Combat Developments Command is concerned with answering three broad questions: "How should the Army be organized?"; "How should the Army be equipped?"; How should the Army fight?"

National Guard Signal Battalion Nears End of Tour

One of the National Guard units preparing to end a profitable stay at Fort Benning is the 156th Signal Battalion.

Though a young unit, the 156th has grown steadily in size and proficiency and now rivals many older units of its type.

The 156th Signal Battalion was organized in March, 1959, at Detroit, Mich., with the primary mission of installing, operating and maintaining four Army area signal centers in the Army Area Signal System. The secondary mission of the battalion is to fight as a member of a combat arm when necessary. Originally, the battalion was attached to Michigan's 46th Infantry Division.

The conversion of these different types of units into a smooth-running technical team took a tremendous effort on the part of everyone involved. The unit's first annual active duty for training period was at Camp Grayling, Mich. The next two summers, the unit conducted "Operation Wig Wag" II and IV at Camp McCoy, Wisc. The battalion trained intensively in the classroom and on field exercises to qualify individuals for their jobs.

When President Kennedy called for a military buildup in August, 1961, the 156th was the only Army National Guard unit to be activated from Michigan. The general mobilization of the battalion took place on Oct. 1, 1961. On October 11, the unit moved by rail to Fort Benning.

Many men experienced for the first time the unpleasant task of leaving family and friends, and adjusting to a new way of life. But for many others, it was not the first time.

The mobilization found the 156th willing to do its best to support our country and its way of life in the face of international crisis.

On arrival at Fort Benning, the 156th was assigned facilities in the Harmony Church area and attached to The Infantry Center Troop Command. In November it was placed under the command of the 1st Infantry Brigade. At this time two subordinate units were attached to the 156th. They were the 23rd Signal Company (FS& M) from Indianapolis, Ind., and Company C, 204th Signal Battalion (FWD) from Festus, Mo.

According to CWO Fred C. Henich, battalion personnel officer, the two weeks prior to movement to Fort Benning were hectic. However, Mr. Henich said the first month on active duty proved to be even more hectic.

Original members of the unit and hundreds of "filler" personnel from the reinforcement pool had to be interviewed and outfitted. Meanwhile the area and buildings in which the unit was housed had to be brought up to present military standards.

After this came basic unit training and advanced unit training in preparation for the Army Training Test. This test, which determines the proficiency attained by the individual soldier and the unit, is the ultimate test of combat readiness.

According to Maj. Harold D. Straub, battalion S-3, the 156th underwent intensive training in the field from the first week in December to the third week in February. The Army Training Test was successfully completed on Feb. 17, 1962, with an overall rating of "Excellent."

An "Operational Readiness" phase of training followed, designed to keep the battalion at the high level or readiness that it had achieved. At this time the unit began participating in support missions at Fort Benning and elsewhere.

In March the battalion moved to Fort Gordon, Ga., to receive signal training on equipment not available at Fort Benning. During this six-week period the 156th trained under the 711th Signal Battalion.

March 15 marked the third anniversary of the unit, but it was not celebrated until April 24th, after the unit had returned to Fort Benning.

Elements of the 156th participated in such support missions as "Operation Seneca Spear" at Fort Stewart, Ga.; "Operation Clear Lake" at Eglin Air Force Base, Fla.; the 32nd Joint Civilian Orientation Conference (JOCC), which took place here in May; and several demonstrations and exercises in support of instructional activities for The Infantry School.

According to Maj. Fred N. Scott, battalion commander, the 156th will remain on Operational Readiness until the middle of July. At that time the unit will settle down to the task of preparing to depart Fort Benning for home station on August 5, looking back over the past year with pride for a job well done.

KNIGHTS OF THE ROUND TABLE is a color release designed to entertain the entire family. It depicts an early medieval tapestry come - alive spread-out in the mellow hues of rose, gold, green and blue. It is a panorama of early England, newly and devoutly Christian in the shadow of it's Pagan heritage. Standout scenes are numerous — such as King Arthur's first successful battle with Modred and Lancelot's encounter with wild blue-painted Picts from the Northern country. It stars Robert Taylor, Ava Gardner and Mel Ferrer.

Would Cut 'Red Tape'

WASHINGTON (ANS) — The Army will join the other Services in the continuing effort to eliminate red tape and duplication in the various branches, when, on July 1, the Department off Defense initiates a new supply procedure called MILSTRIP (Military Standard Requisitioning and Issue Procedure).

MILSTRIP unites all the Services under one supply system where materials will be issued on the basis of the requesting unit's mission and urgency of need.

Approximately 36 different forms will be eliminated by this new system and requisition procedures will be simplified and expedited by the use of electronic equipment for receiving, recording, and processing requisitions.

ed Presidium, of the Party) which controls both the Communist Party and the Soviet Government.

The workers and peasants are considered too stupid to know their own best interest. They need the vanguard to tell them what to do, according to the Communists. In order to carry out the Revolution, the vanguard organized the dictatorship of the proletariat (workers). But the workers have no part in the dictatorship except to obey orders.

Today, there are 214 million people in the Soviet Union. The Communist Party numbers about ten million members. There are 11 top leaders in the Party Presidium, plus five candidate members. The organization of the Communist Party is the same in Red China, Yugoslava and the Soviet satellites.

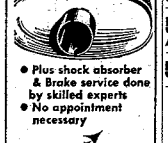
290 Wings Go to New Parachutists

Parachutist Badges were awarded to 290 graduates of The Infantry School's basic airborne course during recent ceremonies here.



Honor graduate was Pvt. Paul T. Edwards Jr.

Included in the graduation exercises were retirement ceremonies for SFC Fancher Jordan, an enlisted instructor with the department's Jump Training Sub-committee.

Jordan, who helped train the members of this class and many more, retired after 20 years of service, 16 of them with airborne units. During his career he has made more than 330 jumps.

As his final task with the department, he pinned the silver wings of the qualified paratrooper on the honor grad.

New Jersey Reserve Ordnance Unit Nears End of Year on Active Duty at Fort Benning

By SFC George McBurney

With nine months of active duty at Fort Benning already under its belt, the 322nd Ordnance Company of Morristown, N.J., is turning its eyes to August.

On Aug. 1, the Army Reserve unit which was called up in October, will depart this vast Third Army Infantry training center for its home station.

While at Fort Benning, the 322nd, commanded by Capt. Joseph J. Dunn, has received valuable training in the repair and maintenance of military vehicles, a vital necessity in the Army's far-flung transportation system.

"We have helped to keep the Army moving on wheels at Fort Benning," SFC John R. Zisa said. "We've kept the Army's five-ton and three-quarter - ton vehicles rolling. And we've worked on jeeps and small arms to keep them in the proper condition for use."

MSgt. Leo A. Kauff added "We are an automotive support unit doing field maintenance work for the Army."

"Our job here is mainly to keep wheeled vehicles in shape by repairing or replacing worn or unserviceable parts," he said. "And we do the same kind of maintenance work on small arms, such as pistols, the M-1 rifle, carbines and machine guns up to the .50 caliber model."

MSgt. Edward G. Hydock, operations sergeant of the 322nd, said, "We work on weapons and vehicles in the field when necessary and also in the post ordnance shops with Department of the Army civilians."

The company has trained 30 of its men in ordnance duty in a ground mobility course at The Infantry School. In addition, seven other men attended a 14-week ordnance training course at Aberdeen Proving Grounds, Md.

MSgt. Peter Ossenkowsky, first sergeant of the 322nd, said, "We were called to active duty because of the international situation last year, and while here we have accomplished our mission. That mission has been to help maintain the Army's ordnance facilities at this post."

Sgt. Ossenkowsky is one of the oldest men in his company in length of service. In February, 1947, he enlisted in the Army Reserve and has been a member ever since.

First Lt. Richard Turnau beamed with pride as he gave the results of the 322nd's Army Training Test in May.

"We were given a rating of 'superior' by the umpires of The Infantry Center," he said. "And in the CBR (chemical, biological and radiological) phase of the test, the umpires gave us a 'high superior'," he added.

The ATT included setting up a complete direct automotive support unit in the field and the maintenance of ordnance duties under simulated combat conditions. As part of the test, the company was subjected to attacks by aggressor forces from the ground and air, a tear gas attack and a simulated atomic blast.

During the three-day test, the unit was required to stage tactical movements and conduct lengthy motor marches in a "combat zone."

While most of the men of the company arrived at Fort Benning last October by truck convey or plane, about three-fourths of them will return home in their own cars which many of them acquired while here.

The Civilians You Work With?

Mrs. Patsy Martin is secretary to the S-4 of The Student Brigade.

In her work she is responsible for all distribution, both incoming and outgoing, typing of all correspondences, maintaining of filing systems, publications pertinent to the S-4 office, and assisting in the review of reports of survey.

A civil service employee for over seven years, Mrs. Martin has held her present position since November, 1961. She comes to brigade headquarters from the 4th Student Battalion headquarters, where she performed the duties of a clerk typist.

A native of Columbus, she is a graduate of Jordan Vocational High School. Mrs. Martin and her husband reside in Columbus with their son, Jimmy Edward, 5.

MARTIN

Mrs. Mary Gandy is administrative supervisor for the Officer Candidate Section of the Enlisted Student Branch Personnel, The Student Brigade.

She performs the duties of supervisor over the processing of documents concerned with the closing out of enlisted records, and opening of new records on recently commissioned officer candidate graduates.

A civil service employee for approximately 18 years, Mrs. Gandy has held her present position since August, 1955.

GANDY

A native of Bainbridge, Ga., she now makes her home in Columbus with her twin daughters, Margaret and Marilyn, 14.

May Get Certificates

ATLANTA — Presidential Memorial Certificates to honor the memory of any deceased veteran who served in the Armed Forces may now be obtained from the VA upon request by the next-of-kin of the veteran, it was reported this week by Pete Wheeler, Director of the Georgia Department of Veterans Service.

The Memorial Certificates are being issued by the Veterans Administration from its Central Office in Washington, D. C.

Only one certificate will be issued in the case of any veteran, and it will be issued in the following order of kinship precedence: widow, oldest child, mother, father, oldest sister, oldest brother. Where there is no next-of-kin, a request from a close friend or associate will be honored.

In the case of a veteran whose death has occurred since March 9, 1962, the VA Regional Office will automatically initiate necessary procedures for issuance of the certificate upon receipt of the notice of death.

In the case of those who died prior to March 9, 1962, it will be necessary for the next-of-kin to request the certificate. No formal applications forms are necessary, but applicants should give full information concerning kinship to the veteran in the letter of request, as well as veteran's full name and serial number or VA claims-number, and date of death.

Local TOPS Club Holds Meeting

Tops-e-Curvies, the Fort Benning Chapter of TOPS has organized and held its second meeting recently.

The purpose of TOPS (Take Off Pounds Sensibly) is to help "overweights" who are sincerely interested in losing pounds sensibly. It is based on the principle of group therapy; getting together a group of people who have a problem in common and discussing it frankly without fear of being laughed at or misunderstood.

The members of this chapter compete with each other in a friendly fashion while attaining their ideal weight and, in maintaining that weight.

The TOPS-e-Curves had an average weight loss of three and three-fourths pounds for the past week.

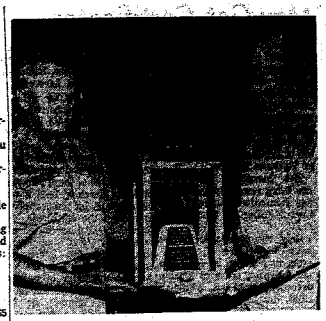
When Was America's First Auto Race?

By David M. Winkler

Often we let the steady purr of a high compression motor, the soft cradling of foam rubber cushions and the table smoothness of super-highways lull us into forgetfulness of a truth which it is death to hide: namely, every person who holds a steering wheel guides a mighty missile, projects a two-ton bomb at high speed on areas heavily populated with precious human beings.



Every human being behind a driver's seat takes the responsibility of human lives into his hands. Constant courtesy, unfailing patience and eternal vigilance are the necessary balance wheels of such heavy responsibility. This is one in a to test the motorist's general knowledge.

Questions

1. The first American auto race, held in Chicago was won by J. Frank Duryea with an average time of 6.66 mph on Thanksgiving Day, November 28, of what year:
   a. 1895
   b. 1880
   c. 1853
   d. 1887
2. Any pedestrian crossing a roadway other than at an intersection or marked crosswalk, will:
   a. yield the right of way to all approaching vehicles
   b. have the right of way and need not yield to anyone
   c. yield to all vehicles within one hundred (100) feet.
3. Do you realize that in the United States alone, in a single year, between the ages of one and 14 we killed:
   a. 2,380 children
   b. 3,450 children
   c. 4,100 children
   d. 4,650 children
4. Pick out the incorrect answer, No vehicle will overtake and pass another vehicle or be driven to the left side of a roadway under the following conditions:
   a. when the left side of the roadway is not clearly visible and free of oncoming traffic so that passing can be accomplished without interfering with the safe operation of any vehicle.
   b. when approaching the crest of a grade, hill or curve where the driver's view is obstructed.
   c. within 100 feet of any bridge, viaduct, road junction, intersection or railroad grade crossing.
   d. where official signs or center line markings prohibit passing.
   e. when the roadway is less than two lanes in each direction.
5. In an auto crash, the most important factor that will determine your chances for survival is:
   a. the speed at which you are traveling
   b. magnitude of the deceleration
   c. the object you strike
   d. the speed of the vehicle you strike
6. The speed limit on Benning Boulevard from Custer Road to the reservation boundary is:
   a. 25 mph
   b. 40 mph
   c. 45 mph
   d. 50 mph
7. It is estimated that by 1965 a total of 80 million vehicles will be traveling:
   a. 150 billion miles a year
   b. 340 billion miles a year
   c. 600 billion miles a year
   d. 800 billion miles a year

ANSWERS

1. A — 5. B
2. A — 6. C
3. D — 7. D
4. E

RECEIVES TRIBUTE . . . Col. Richard W. Keyes, 1st Infantry Brigade Commander (R), is presented an incased miniature of the Infantrymen Statue by Col. Otto R. Koch Jr., The Student Brigade commander. The trophy was given on behalf of the officers and men of TSB upon his departure to assume command of the 1st Brigade.

Know Your Senior NCO's

M-Sgt. Preston S. Tuttle is the operations sergeant for the 5th Student battalion, The Student Brigade.

Upon entering the Army in 1947, he received basic training at Fort Bragg, N.C. At the conclusion of his initial training, Sgt. Tuttle underwent medical basic at Brooks Army Medical Center, Fort Sam Houston, Tex. Successfully completing the medical course, E-8 Tuttle's first duty assignment was with the 421st Medical Collecting Company at Fort Jackson, S. C., as an ambulance driver.

In 1949, the operations sergeant volunteered for duty in the Far East, and joined the 35th Infantry Division in Japan. At the outbreak of the Korean Conflict, Sgt. Tuttle was sent to Korea, where he joined the 25th Medical Battalion of the 25th Division, as an S-4 clerk, and later when promoted to sergeant, became battalion ration breakdown sergeant.

TUTTLE

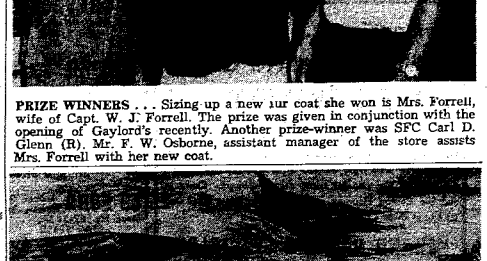
Leaving Korea in 1951, Sgt. Tuttle, received orders for Fort Meade, Md., as an instructor at the Leaders Course Company. It was during this assignment that he was promoted to sergeant first class. He later left Fort Meade for the 31st Medical Group in Germany, where he became assistant operations sergeant, holding this title for three years.

Returning to the U. S. in 1955, he re-enlisted and was assigned duty to the 3rd Battalion, 3rd Infantry Division, as a platoon sergeant and later, as battalion S-2 sergeant.

In May 1957, the veteran of over 15 years service, was transferred to Headquarters, 15th Infantry Regiment, to assume the position of regimental S-2 sergeant.

Gyroscoping in Germany with the 15th, Sgt. Tuttle, retained his position as S-2 Intelligence sergeant for the duration of his tour.

In January 1961, he returned to the U. S., and assumed his present duties.



Promoted to E-8 on May 28, 1962, MSgt Tuttle makes his home in Columbus with his wife.

PRIZE WINNERS . . . Sizing up a new fur coat she won is Mrs. Forrell, wife of Capt. W. J. Forrell. The prize was given in conjunction with the opening of Gaylord's recently. Another prize-winner was SFC Carl D. Glenn (R). Mr. F. W. Osborne, assistant manager of the store assists Mrs. Forrell with her new coat.

ARMY'S SHILLELAGH . . . This is an artist's concept of the Army's "Shillelagh," a lightweight surface-to-surface missile system being developed for close-in support of combat troops. It will provide greatly increased firepower against armor, troops and field fortifications. The missile is being developed by Ford's Aeronutronic Division, Newport Beach, Calif. The Army Ordnance Missile Command, Redstone Arsenal, Ala., supervises development of the missile and the Ordnance Tank-Automotive Command, Detroit, Mich., is responsible for system development.

MUSEUM DRIVE OPENS . . . Maj. Gen. Ben Harrell (R), commanding general of The Infantry Center, receives the first membership card for the U. S. Infantry Museum Society. The presentation was made this week by Brig. Gen. John E. Kelly, deputy commanding general of The Infantry School and president of the society. (See MUSEUM MEMBERSHIP, Page 2)

EXPLAIN RESERVE STATUS

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Army officer and enlisted Reservists, called up during the Berlin crisis but now ready for release from active duty, have received a status clarification.

Applicable to reservists serving under PL 87-117, on their release from active duty, are these facts:

To determine individual Reservists' assignments and computing eligibility dates for transfer to the Standby Reserve — or discharge — the active service performed under PL 87-117 will be credited as one year of active duty.

Reservists classified as six-month trainees and those who entered a Reserve component with no requirement for active duty or active duty for training, who subsequently serve on active duty, are eligible for transfer to the Stand. by Reserve upon completion of a combination of active duty and satisfactory Ready Reserve totaling five years.

As an exception to instructions (Para 4, AR 135-90), Reservists recalled because of the Berlin crisis will be eligible for transfer to the Standby Reserve on their fourth anniversary date of enlistment.

The Army said all other reservists will be governed by existing regulations in com-

NEW DCG SALUTES COLORS
Gen. Daniel (L) with Gen. Trapnell

Maj. Gen. Daniel Third Army DCG

Maj. Gen. Derrill McCollough Daniel, a scientist and highly decorated combat soldier, assumed his duties as deputy commanding general of the Third Army and commanding general of Fort McPherson here this week.

Gen. Daniel, the former chief of the Joint U. S. Military Advisory Group to the Republic of the Philippines, was honored with the traditional honor guard ceremony at Hedekin Field. Lt. Gen. T. J. H. Trapnell, Third U. S. Army commander, stood with him in the reviewing stand.

A native of Cooper, S.C., Gen. Daniel is a graduate of Clemson Agricultural College, S.C., and holds M.S. and Ph. D. degrees from Cornell University.

One of the most highly decorated officers in the Army, Gen. Daniel is a combat veteran of three amphibious assault landings on hostile shores, and has 109 parachute jumps to his credit.

During World War II he landed with the First Infantry Division at Oran, Algeria, in 1942; at Gela, Sicily, in 1943; and in the D-Day assault on Omaha Beach in Normandy on June 6, 1944.

He also took part in the Tunisian Campaign, the Saint Lo Breakout in France, the capture of Aachen (the first German city to fall to the Allies), the Battle of the Bulge, and the closing of the Ruhr Pocket.

As assistant commander of the 7th Infantry Division in Korea in 1952, he was cited for his actions during some of the bloody fighting that took place while the "peace talks" were going on. Before this he served as deputy chief of staff, Headquarters IX Corps, Far East Command.

Goes Airborne

Upon returning from Korea in 1953, Gen. Daniel qualified as a paratrooper and was assigned to the 82nd Airborne Division, Fort Bragg, N.C., as deputy commander.

Other assignments include serving as commanding general, Control Command Eyerelse "Follow Me"; commanding general, 11th Airborne Ky., and U.S. Army Europe; commanding general, Special Activities Division, Headquarters, U. S. Army Europe, and commanding general, XVI U.S. Army Corps, Omaha, Neb.

His decorations include the Distinguished Service Cross, Silver Star with seven Oak Clusters, Legion of Merit, Bronze Star Medal with V Device (with three Oak Leaf Clusters), Commendation Ribbon with Metal Pendant, The Combat Infantryman Badge with Star, and Master Parachutist Badge plus the United Nations Medal and seven citations from foreign governments.

Sgt. Helped Win Top Radio Prize

An Army radio broadcast specialist stationed here learned this week the American Heritage Foundation has chosen the American Forces Korea Network station he managed at Kunsan Air Force Base, Korean, as the armed forces' best.

But SSgt. Robert Martin must have had some idea of the value of his station long before he left the Korean peninsula for assignment with Fort Benning's Information Office as non-commissioned officers in charge of Radio and television.

One of the highest forms of flattery came often. . . . came when Radio Peking sent frequency-jamming signals to garble the words of freedom beamed from "Radio Mercury."

For Informing Troops

The American Heritage Foundation award was given for the best job of informing military personnel of our free way of life and the threat of international communism.

Sgt. Martin was manager of the station during the period on which the judging was based. The award came for a one-hour program produced five days each week entitled "Information Report."

"This hour was broken down into different segments," Sgt. Martin relates. "There was a 30-minute dramatic show called 'If Freedom Failed,' a 15-minute dramatic show called 'Ride to Panmunjon,' a five-minute study of communism and a five-minute question-answer section concerning democracy."

Dumped Rock 'n Roll

"We had to knock out an an hour of rock and roll music to put the show on the air.' This caused some comment at first but the show caught on quickly and was well received," he recalls.

"Most of the credit for the show goes to two fellows who have returned to the states. One was Sp4 Jeff Thompson. He's at Fort Bragg with a psy war' outfit. The other was A1-C

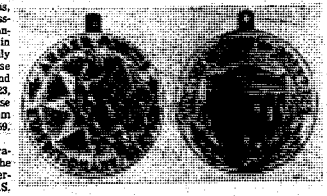
DOD Sets Criteria for Awarding Services' Expeditionary Medal

NEW YORK (AFPS) The Defense Department has announced the criteria for awarding the new Armed Forces Expeditionary Medal. There are three categories of operation for which the medal is authorized.



U. S. Military Operations, the first category, encompasses 1961 to a date yet to be announced; those who served in Lebanon during the period July 1, 1958, to Nov. 1, 1958; those who served in the Quemoy and Matsu Islands from Aug. 23, 1958, to a date yet and those in the Taiwan Straits from Aug. 23, 1958, to Jan. 1, 1959.

UN Support

Category two, U. S. Operations in Direct Support of the United Nations, singles out personnel who participated in U.S. operations directly supporting the United Nations in the Congo from July 14, 1960, to an unannounced date.

The last category, U. S. Operations of Assistance for Friendly Foreign Nations, includes personnel who participated in U. S. operations in countries such as Laos and Vietnam. Those serving in Laos from April 19, 1961, to an unannounced date and those serving in Vietnam from July 1, 1958, to an unannounced

Sp4 Watson Sets Record On PT Test

A specialist at Fort Benning has set a record in combat proficiency tests by scoring the maximum number of points in all events, believed to be the first time such a feat has been accomplished.

SP4 Spurgeon Watson, Company C, 29th Infantry, made 500 points by finishing first in all five tests among 35 entrants from battle group units.

In the tests conducted recently at Sightseeing Field, he scored 100 points in the mile run, which he covered in six minutes and two seconds, the grenade throw, 40-yard low crawl, the run, dodge and jump exercise and the horizontal ladder climb with only the hands used.

Medal

date are eligible for the honor.

The "area of operations" includes: (1) the foreign territory upon which troops were deployed for the direct support of the designated military operation; (2) adjacent waters in which ships are operating and (3) the air spaces above and adjacent to the area.

'Direct Support'

"Direct Support" is defined as: ground units, ships and aircraft supplying combat forces in the area, provided the designated area is entered; and ships and aircraft providing fire, patrol, guard, reconnaissance or other military support.

To be eligible, a serviceman must be a bona fide member of a unit engaged in the operatio, or must meet at least one of the following criteria:

Shall have served 30 consecutive days in the area;

Be engaged in direct support of the operation for 30 consecutive days or 60 nonconsecutive days, provided it involved entering the area;

Serve for the full period if an operation lasted less than 30 days;

Be engaged in actual combat or equally hazardous duty, when the operation met with armed opposition, regardless of time in the area;

Be a regularly assigned crew member of an aircraft flying in the area in support of the military operation;

Be recommended, either individually or as a unit, by the Chief of a Service or the commander of a unified or specified command for the medal.

Reserves

puting their Ready Reserve obligations.

Personnel eligible for transfer to the Standby Reserve will be transferred there unless they elect to remain in the Ready Reserve.

Reservists whose Ready Reserve obligation was extended and who were recalled to active duty as a result of the Berlin crisis will have such extensions terminated the date they are relieved from active duty. However, if they elect to remain in the Ready Reserve they will be transferred to the Standby Reserve or discharged, as appropriate.

The Army said provisions were not applicable to Reservists having "overriding agreements" with the Army National Guard or the U. S. Army Reserves.

Reservists whose Ready Reserve obligation was extended but who were not called to active duty under PL 87-117 will have their extensions ended as follows (date of normal expiration of extended obligation appears first, followed by the new approved extension termination date):

Oct.-Nov. 1962 — Sept. 30, 1962

Dec. 1962-Jan. 1963 — Oct. 31, 1962

Feb.-March 1963 — Nov. 30, 1962

April-May 1962 — Dec. 31, 1962

June 1963 — Jan. 31, 1963

in 1940 he served as an associate in research, (Entomology) New York State Agricultural Experiment Station and concurrently as Assistant Professor of Entomology, Cornell University. Gen. Daniel has had many articles and treatises published on entomological subjects, particularly on the biological control of insect pests.

He is an Episcopalian, a Mason and Shriner, a member of Acacia Fraternity, The Society of American Military Engineers, Clemson Alumni Association, and the Cornell Alumni association in addition to numerous military clubs and associations.

Martin

Robert MacPherson. These boys did most of the writing and production work," said Sgt Martin.

Sgt. Martin was one of three Army personnel assigned to the station. The remaining eight men were members of the Air Force.

Signals Jammed

"Information Report" was a prime target of Radio Peking's signal - jamming devices, according to Sgt. Martin.

"It didn't hurt the men on post too much, but it did effect reception by troops outside of a radius of about one mile," Sgt. Martin noted.

The communists realized the importance of a free radio station in maintaining morale of American troops and also in spreading the word of freedom to North Korean natives as well as South Koreans.

"We had price tags on our heads," Sgt. Martin said. They (the communists) offered $300 to anyone who would deliver me or the other men on the staff to North Korea."

In Korean War

Sgt. Martin also served in Korea in the days before AFKN. He earned the Combat Infantry Badge and the Purple Heart while a gunner with the 70th Tank Battalion, 24th Division.

Leaving the service in 1952, Sgt. Martin studied radio and television at the University of Denver. He has worked with civilian radio stations in Modesto, Barstow and Redding, Calif.

The Allentown, Pa., native lives with his wife, Lillian, and his four-year-old daughter, Leslie, in Columbus.

Sgt. Martin is a member of Company C, 1st Battalion, The Infantry Center Troop Command.

Suggestion Is Triumph Both For Sgt., KP's

A sergeant stationed here has been awarded $100 as first prize in the Third Army Military Suggestion Contest.

MSgt. Jack W. Brimm suggested that butter for Army mess halls be purchased in patty-size servings instead of five-pound packages that require time-consuming slicing.

Commercial butter concerns have agreed to cut the butter in patty-size before delivering it to Army posts.

Museum Membership Campaign Is Opened

The Infantry Museum Society is presently open for membership to all post personnel, military as well as Department of the Army civilians.

The first membership card was this week presented to Maj. Gen. Ben Harrell, commanding general of The Infantry Center, by Brig. Gen. John E. Kelly, deputy commanding general of The Infantry School and president of the society.

By increasing the number of its members, the society will obtain more funds from dues which are one dollar per member, and hopes to receive additional Infantry souvenirs and mementos for the museum. Dues provide a lifetime membership.

The society hopes eventually to expand its membership to include military and civilian personnel at Army bases in the continental U.S. and overseas.

Purpose of the museum society is to provide educational and recreational facilities for military personnel and their guests and for Army civilian employees and individuals who may visit the museum.

A second mission is to maintain a repository for Infantry documents and equipment that will depict the history of Fort Benning and the U. S. Army Infantry's proud heritage.

OUR FATHERS

Between 1820 and 1961, nearly 42 million immigrants were admitted to the U. S. Most came from Europe, but many also came from Latin America, Asia, Africa, Australia and Canada.

Fort McPherson Featured in Mag

Fort McPherson, home of headquarters of the Third Army, is featured in the July issue of American Armed Forces Features.

A story concerning the post appears under the heading, "Tribute to Valor."

Thieves broke into a Leicester, England, office and stole only a tape measure, but they left this note in a typewriter: "We will be back."

CADETS TRAIN . . . Utilizing the backs of his classmates for support, an Air Force Academy Cadet maintains a precarious position and passes a rifle to another cadet during training here. Over 700 members of the Class of 1965 participated in Infantry training recently at The Infantry Center and Infantry School and, divided into groups of five, attempted to solve problems such as these.

End of Tour Nears for Reserve Transportation Co.

The 414th Transportation Co. (Direct Support, Aircraft Maintenance), a Greenville, S. C., Reserve unit assigned to Lawson Army Aviation Command, has just cleared one big hurdle on the way to its date of release from active duty on August 9.

The company obtained a score of excellent on its field Army Training Test on both tactical and technical phases of its mission.

The company, called to active duty during the Berlin crisis last October, was required to pass the ATT before it could be released from active duty. The 414th came through in fine style with a score of 90.2.

During the ATT, the 414th performed third echelon maintenance on aircraft in the field. All phases of aircraft maintenance, fixed wing, rotary wing, engine repair, wing repaff and test flight were tested on and around Eelbeck Air Strip in a remote area of the sprawling Fort Benning Military Reservation.

The unit was required to repel simulated aggressor attacks and to undergo simulated air, gas and nuclear attacks. The company remained in tactical operation at all times during performance of the technical phase of its mission.

The unit returned to garrison after three days and three nights in the field.

Now that the unit has passed its ATT, it is busily transferring its equipment to the 335th Transportation Company (D-S), a Regular Army unit which has been formed to take the place of the 414th. When the 414th is released from active duty August 9, the 335th will become operational and will take over the duties of the 414th.

Members of the 335th, which is now attached to the 414th, took part in the ATT field exercise and helped the 414th to complete succesfully this phase of its mission.

Five Nationalist Chinese Officers Will Visit Here

Five Allied officers from the Army of Nationalist China are scheduled to visit here next week.

The group, headed by Lt. Gen. Kuo-Ying Chang, commanding general of the 2nd Field Army, will arrive at the post at 7 p.m. Wednesday.

Others members of the party are Maj. Gen. Kuei-Hua Chen, chief of staff for the 2nd Field Army; Maj. Gen. Yu-Hsiang Chung, division commander, 1st Field Army; Maj. Gen. Ming-Hui Peng, chief of staff for the 1st Field Army, and Col. Yang-Yu Ou, chief of staff, I Corps, 2nd Field Army.

The Chinese officers will be briefed on the history and organization of The Infantry Center, the organization and mission of The Infantry School and the utilization of the post in the support of training.

They also will inspect facilities, training aids and see tactical problems.

In addition, methods of instruction used by TIS will be shown the Allied military men.

They are scheduled to depart the post July 21 at 10:20 a.m.

The Fort Benning visit will complete their tour of U. S. military installations.

Reds Play the Same Old Barbaric Game

Once again, and why should we be surprised, it seems that the Communists have chucked their so called "peace pleas," replacing them with an array of war-rattling armament.

The recent buildup of Red troops and guns on the South China coast opposite the Nationalist Chinese islands of Matsu, Quemoy and Formosa should not shock us. It's the same old Communist story being rewritten in the same old barbaric style. And again, for those who could sit back and tend to feel comfortable in a moment's lull, it reminds us that the Reds will continue to play their deadly game for the final goal — world conquest.

Premier Khrushchev's pledge to bury the free world, and particularly the United States as its leader, is not dormant. The Communists will try to nibble away, like a rodent with cheese, join or coerce in any fashion at any time to gain their ends. The on again, off again smiles merely obscure the threat.

President Kennedy has again had to express his and the American people's "serious concern" in the face of very large troop movements by Communist troops in an obvious buildup. The United States, he said, speaks with one voice. We thank God that that voice is the voice of freedom.

This country has always opposed the use of force in the Formosa Straits or any other part of the world. Our commitments there are purely defensive. But the United States could not remain inactive should an aggressive force openly threaten Formosa.

The desires of free men should not be taken lightly by the Communist bosses. It would be well for the dictators to take stock of the consequences.

The Judge Says . . .

By Capt. Robert S. Poydashelf

We now mention the third type of agency between individuals, an agency created by law or statute. Such laws or statutes often express the agency so created in the following: "The husband shall be bound to support and maintain his wife, and his consent shall be presumed in all purchases of necessaires suitable to her condition and habits of life, made for the use of herself and the family."

Notice the law presumes the agency of the wife. The law lets the agency be rebutted by proof.

The law is further qualified by other laws, which are in effect: If the wife is living in adultery with another man the husband is not liable for her support or if she voluntarily abandons him without provocation, notice by the husband shall relieve him of this liability.

This is true even though a court order has specified a certain amount for temporary alimony pending a divorce action or during a bona fide separation by virtue of the said order.

A father is never relieved of supporting a minor child except when relieved by court order.

In defining necessities suitable to her condition and habits of life, we find the term to mean food, shelter and clothing and things incidental to reasonable enjoyment thereof which are within the purchase power of the husbands income or estate.

A house renting for $200 per month is not a necessity for the wife of a husband with a rental allowance of $78 per month and no other separate estate.

One trip a month to the beauty parlor may be a necessity suitable to the wife's condition and habits of life, but once a week would not be.

The husband is not always liable for rent simply because it constitutes a necessity of life. Where it appears that the wife contracted with the landlord to pay rent for the dwelling of the family and the credit is extended to the wife solely and with no intent to hold the husband liable, the husband cannot be held liable for this debt.

Further, if the seller has knowledge that the husband has furnished ample allowance to the wife for her needs, as is often the case of soldiers' wives, the husband cannot be held liable

SURGEON SAYS

Beware Athlete's Foot

Capt. Edgar W. King
Dermatology Service

During the summer months the incidence of athlete's foot rises.

There are two types. One manifests itself as water blisters over the soles and between the toes. The other shows only thickening and scaling of the skin of the soles and between the toes.

Occasionally in both types small cracks or fissures will appear in the affected areas. Every rash that appears on the feet is not due to the fungus which causes athlete's foot. Many rashes are due to allergy to materials in socks or shoes and some are due to irritation of the skin with plugging up of the sweat glands of the skin of the foot.

The treatment of athlete's foot depends on the type of rash present. If the rash is composed mainly of blisters, large or small, treatment should consist of only the mildest medications. The physical activities, such as running and long walks, should be curtailed until the eruption has healed.

The feet should be exposed to air whenever possible and if socks should be used exclusively. Sandals or perforated low quarter shoes should be worn by civilians, dependents and off-duty personnel.

For blistering athlete's foot, the feet should be soaked in cool or lukewarm salt solution (one level tablespoon table salt to quarter of a water) for fifteen minutes two to four times a day depending on the severity. With soaks, rest and air exposure, the rash will generally clear in several days to two or three weeks.

Strong athlete's foot medicines should never be used on blistering rashes of the feet. They will aggravate the condition and produce an acute weeping eruption that will be much worse than if the athlete's foot had never been treated and will require a longer time to heal than it would ordinarily.

For the athlete's foot that presents itself as a chronic scaling, thickened rash, the usual types of medicine and powder are often useful and rarely do any harm. In addition, letting the air get to the feet as much as possible and using absorbent socks is of great value.

In the prevention of athlete's foot the use of a fungicidal foot powder several times during the day and one of the athlete's foot ointments, creams or liq-

CHAPLAIN'S CORNER

Passage of Time

By Chaplain (1st Lt.) Bob E. Murdock

The earth gives a spin, making a complete turn, and we call it a day. The earth circles the sun, and we call it a year. Our continual journey through space, we call time.

Our clocks and our calendars tell us how far we journeyed and where we are. We know the day, the month, the year.

Time is our major asset. God has given each of us enough time to carry out His work. How we use our time depends on us. Everyone has the same number of hours in a day, the same number of days in a year.

Each of us is required to look back upon each day and determine whether or not it has been used properly.

What does God require of us? "To do justice, and to love kindness, and to walk humbly with your God" (Micah 6:8 RSV). The hungry are to be fed. The naked are to be clothed. The sick are to be visited.

Centuries have passed since Christ exhorted, "Go into all the world and preach the gospel." Why has it not been done? Because his disciples have not taken the time.

To waste time is to steal away the years. We sin woefully when we rob God of time, His greatest gift to us.

What do you do with your time?

A year has crept by, what have you done?

A month has passed, what have you accomplished?

A week has gone, what have you learned?

A day has ended, what have you said?

An hour has vanished, what have you done of value?

A minute has slipped by, what have you thought?

A second has just passed . . .

Liberty and Communism

Participation in Government

One of the liberties of free men is the right to participate in government. In ancient Greece, each city-state was sufficiently small so that all free men could meet in the assembly that made laws and decided public policy. This method of government is known as pure democracy.

In large modern states, this procedure is not feasible. Today, all free states use the system of representative government. Under this system, the people elect representatives or deputies to act for them in the seat of government.

In the United States, the voters elect the Senators and Representatives in Congress as well as the President and Vice President, who head the executive branch of government. In other countries, the voters elect the members of the parliament or legislature, which, in turn, selects the Prime Minister and other Ministers who head the executive branch.

Some representative systems may not be as democratic as others. In a few systems, the suffrage is so restricted that only a fraction of the people are represented in the legislature. In the United States, Great Britain and most free nations, however, there is universal manhood and womanhood suffrage. In other words, all citizens have the right to participate in elections.

Likewise, in modern democracies, elections are what are called "free elections." Parties in opposition to the government are allowed to exist and to offer candidates for election. Moreover, the secret ballot is used, in order to prevent both bribery and intimidation of voters.

There was a brutal honesty in the Fascist and Nazi use of the concept of the elite. Both of these regimes openly condemned democracy and called for the rule of the superman. Communism, on the other hand, has been deceptive in its use of the elite principle.

While Communists have contempt for the deficiencies of the masses, they take full advantage of the prestige attached to the words democracy and representative government. They brand the democracy and representative systems of free countries as bourgeois democracy. They claim that communism is the only true representative system. This is false propaganda attaching respected names to perverted terms.

The Soviet Union is not a democracy in the historical and generally accepted sense of the term, because the Soviet Government is solely in the hands of the Communist Party which has a membership of about 10 million in a population of 214 million. The Party is in turn controlled by a Presidium of only 11 members.

The Soviet Union is not a representative government, because Soviet elections are not "free elections," and the deputies in the Supreme Soviet have no control over the government.

The same abuse of the word democracy is found in Red China and all other Communist regimes. The so-called People's Republic of China is controlled by a Politburo of 19 leaders who dominate a Communist Party of 17 million members in a population of more than 650 million people.

Girl Scouts Visit Home Of Founder

The girls of Girl Scout Troop 95 recently made a trip to Savannah, Ga. The three-day trip was made under the auspices of Youth Activities Club.

The purpose of the trip was to visit the birthplace of Juliet Gordon Low, founder of the Girl Scouts of America.

In Savannah, the girls took a walking tour of the city, visiting points of interest, including the U. S. Customs House, the Owens - Thomas House and many of the historical monuments.

The girls went to Fort Pulaski, a national monument dating back to the War Between the States.

The girls stayed at Hunter Air Force Base for two days.

On their last day in Savannah the girls toured Bonaventure Cemetery, famous for its moss-hung, arching live oaks, camellias, wisteria and azaleas.

OCS Wives' Club Holds July Coffee

The 82nd Officer Candidate Company Wives Club, held a coffee in the Day Room of the Company recently.

The meeting was called to order by the chairman, Pat Kinard. Jackie McNeal introduced a new member, Carolyn Holland, who was welcomed by the group. Honored guests were also greeted at this time.

Following a discussion of old and new business, Mrs. C. B. Moore gave a talk on luncheons to prepare for a September luncheon.

Coffee and tea were served with light refreshments. The center piece consisted of yellow dasies and greenery arranged in a vase of driftwood. It was placed on a yellow linen table cloth with the silver tea and coffee services arranged around it.

Honored guests were Mesdames Royal Reynolds, O. R. Koch, and George P. McLendon.

Following refreshments, Pat Kinard, conducted a question and answer period.

After the hostesses for the morning were introduced, Mrs. C. B. Moore was bid a farewell.

The meeting was adjourned by the chairman until the next coffee on July 29, 1962.

Trans Corps Is Planning Celebration

Fort Benning transporation units will present a massing of colors and a ceremonial cake cutting to commemorate their Corps' 20th birthday, July 18 in the 39th Transportation Battalion area.

The actual birthday date, July 31, is being celebrated early due to convenience. Col. H. F. McFeely, post transportation officer, will cut the cake.

Units expected to be present are the 39th Transportation Battalion, TICTY; the 13th Transportation Battalion, 2nd Infantry Division; and the 414th Transportation Company, Lawson Army Aviation Command.

Peruvians to Arrive Here Sunday

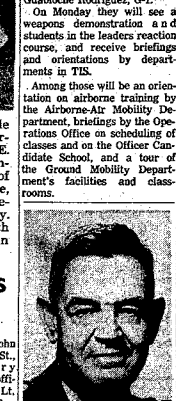
Ten faculty members and 60 students of the Peruvian Army Command and Staff College will arrive here Sunday for four days of briefings and demonstrations at The Infantry School.

The group, scheduled to arrive at 9:30 p.m., will be headed by Brig. Gen. Roberto Dianderas Chumblauca, director of the college, and Col. Ernesto Montagne Sanchez, subdirector.

Other officials of the school accompanying the group include Lt. Col. Oscar Vasquez Zegarra, G-3, and Lt. Col. Jose Guabloche Rodriguez, G-1.

On Monday they will see a weapons demonstration and students in the leaders reaction course, and receive briefings and orientations by departments in TIS.

Among those will be an orientation on airborne training by the Airborne-Air Mobility Department, briefings by the Operations Office on scheduling of classes and on the Officer Candidate School, and a tour of the Ground Mobility Department's facilities and classrooms.



An official luncheon will be held in their honor at 11:45 a.m. in the Supper Club Annex to the Main Officers' Open Mess.

After a trip to the 2nd Infantry Division Tuesday morning where they will see Infantry battle group training, the South American group will be briefed on the Ranger Department, visit the Communications Department and observe classroom instruction, and see an Infantry-tank team in attack.

At 7 p.m. they will be guests at an official reception in the Supper Club.

Wednesday morning they will go to Wigle Hall and be briefed on the Allied officer training program and later see a demonstration by the 26th Infantry Scout Dog Platoon.

Departure is scheduled for 10 a.m. Wednesday.

GEN. DALEY

Gen. Daley Here to Visit Infantry CDA

Lt. Gen. John P. Daley, commanding general of the Army Combat Developments Command, Fort Belvoir, Va., visited The Infantry Combat Developments Agency Monday.

After a call on Maj. Gen. Ben Harrell, commanding general of The Infantry Center, Gen. Daley was briefed by Col. Kenneth E. Eckland, commanding officer, ICDA, on reorganization of the Infantry Combat Developments Agency.

Other briefings centered around priority Infantry material projects and the forthcoming Fifth Tripartite Infantry Conference.

On a tour of the ICDA area; Gen. Daley was introduced to the project officers, enlisted personnel and civilian employees of the agency.

Gen. Daley was honored by an informal dinner given Monday evening by Col. and Mrs. Eckland at the Main Officers' Open Mess.

AIRBORNE RE-UP . . . In an airplane high over Fort Benning, SSgt. Carl C. Alligood (R) re-enlists for three more years in the Army after having completed 18 years service. After taking the oath, the veteran of World War II and the Korean conflict made his 181st parachute jump. Alligood is an enlisted instructor on the Tower Training Committee, Airborne-Air Mobility Department, The Infantry School. Administering the oath is Capt. Charoll F. Engineers' New CO Is War College Grad

COL. GATES

Col. Mahlon E. Gates, new commander of the 151st Engineer Group, comes to Fort Benning as a recent graduate of the Army War College at Carlisle Barracks, Pa.

The college is the most advanced formal training given Army officers, and students must be specially selected to attend.

Col. Gates' attendance culminates a long and distinguished career. The 1942 graduate of the United States Military Academy served in the India-Burma Theater.

He progressed steadily through the ranks until, in 1944, he became commanding officer of the 236th Engineer Battalion. As commander he saw action against the Japanese when his unit was attached to the famed 530th Composite Unit, more frequently referred to as "Merrill's Marauders."

While serving with the "marauders," Col. Gates earned the Bronze Star and his unit won a Distinguished Unit Citation.

Following the war, Col. Gates earned a masters degree in civil engineering at the University of Illinois.

He then became chief of the Plans Division, Armed Forces Special Weapons Project. This agency is now known as the Defense Atomic Support Agency.

After this tour in the U. S., Col. Gates traveled to Germany to command the 118th Engineer Battalion of the 43rd Infantry Division. He returned to the U. S. in 1956 to attend the Command and General Staff College and later to serve as the military assistant to the director joint staff, Joint Chiefs of Staff, in Washington.

Col. Gates' most recent overseas tour was in Iran where he was the area engineer at Ajabshahr, and was responsible for construction of cantonment areas for the Iranian Army.

The new commander and Mrs. Gates have two children, Pamela, 15, and Lawrence, 12.

VA Represents Vets Appearing Before Boards

The Georgia Department of Veterans Service will represent any veteran or members of a veteran's family residing within the state in appearing before boards of the Veterans Administration or preparing and filing appeals in his behalf, Director Pete Wheeler reminded this week.

AIRBORNE CADETS . . . Sgt. Bobbie McLemore (C), an enlisted instructor with The Infantry School's Airborne-Air Mobility Department, assists Cadet Carl B. Olson, a member of the U.S. Air Force Academy, Class of 1965, as he helps a classmate don a parachute harness during training at Fort Benning. Over 700 members of the class participated in training June 30 to July 6 that included small arms familiarization firing, Ranger tactics and ground mobility means.

Civilian Educators Visit To Observe ROTC Camp

Approximately 40 civilian educators from universities and colleges throughout the Southeast arrived here Monday for a two-day visit to the annual ROTC Summer Camp.

The institution officials, guests of the commanding general of the Third Army, represented the various schools which have cadets participating in the six-week field training.

Purpose of the program was to present to the officials the type and intensity of training conducted, and the standards of physical fitness, mental alertness, leadership, obedience and military skills required of the future officers being educated at their schools.

Maj. Gen. Ben Harrell, commanding general of The Infantry Center, greeted the visitors Tuesday morning to officially open the program.

Following the opening ceremonies, a fast-moving schedule included an orientation on The Infantry School, a briefing by Col. Robert E. O'Brien, deputy camp commander, a tour of the camp area, lunch in the field with the cadets, observation of the students in combat field firing, and meetings with the cadets from their institutions.

Wednesday they saw the cadets firing recoilless rifles, attended a luncheon at Victory Lodge, witnessed Ranger and supporting fires demonstrations.

Again From 23rd

Col Louis Kunzig New Staff Chief

A former 23rd Infantry battle group commander recently succeeded another former 23rd Infantry battle group commander as the 2nd Division's chief of staff.

Colonel Louis A. Kunzig Jr. began his chief of staff duties on Monday. His predecessor, Colonel Gustav M. Bacharach, left yesterday for an assignment in Germany. Colonel Bacharach commanded the 23rd Infantry from November 1959, to July 1960, when he was named the division chief of staff.

Background

The new chief of staff brings to his job a background of 23 years of varied military assignments.

Following his graduation in 1939 from the United States Military Academy, Colonel Kunzig was assigned to the 29th Infantry at Fort Benning. During World War II he served with the 86th Infantry Division in central Europe.

87th Guerrillas 'War' in Georgia

The Chattahoochee National Forest outside Blairsville, Ga., this week became an Army testing ground for guerrilla operations.

Working together with a detachment of the 7th Special Forces Group, Ft. Bragg, N.C., a contingent of 850 men comprising the 87th Infantry is staging a nine-day test exercise on counter-guerrilla training.

Commanded by Colonel Ralph H. Hughett, the 87th Infantry moved into the Blairsville area Monday, setting up camp about 400 yards from city limits.

The 87th's Company D, commanded by Captain William L. Patrick, has been separated from the rest of the infantry battle group to be the guerrilla force.

The Blairsville civilian community has been informed of the exercise which will involve the entire population.

A detachment of the 7th Special Forces Group, commanded by Major Rudolph Kaiser of Ft. Bragg has been working with the 87th for a month in preparation for this counter-guerrilla test exercise.

The 87th Infantry will return to Fort Benning July 19.

The band of guerrillas, advised and assisted by Special Forces are called "Patrick's Patriots," after their company commander. They left for the hills of Chattahoochee National Forest prior to the arrival of the rest of the 87th Infantry.

Called 'Clean Sweep'

The nine-day field problem, known as Operation Clean Sweep, will be commanded by Col. Hughett.

The central problem calls for the guerrilla force to "liberate" the Blairsville population.

Conflcts of interest arise as the 87th Infantry counter-guerrilla force attempts to clear the area of this guerrilla band which has been exploiting and terrorizing the local population.

In order to "free" Blairsville, the guerrilla force functions as their underground and must secure the confidence of townspeople through personal contact, leaflets and propaganda.

Acting as Spies

The band of insurgents are attempting to incorporate a small auxiliary group into the economic system of the town functioning as "spies" while acting as farmers, merchants and laborers.

To oppose this underground force the 87th Infantry counter-insurgency force have a psychological warfare representative at their disposal to counter "enemy" propaganda.

The regular guerrilla force has the job of harrassing the battle group by methods such as disrupting communications, ambushing supplies, capturing key personnel and "blowing" bridges with simulated demolitions.

WAR MONUMENT TO BE DEDICATED IN WASHINGTON
To Be Finished for Association Reunion July 19

Meeting Schedule Is Published By Second Division Association

A reunion schedule has been published by officials of the Second (Indian Head) Division Association Inc. covering military events, business meetings and parties to be held July 19-21 in Washington, D.C.

Members of the 2nd Division will attend the association's 41st annual reunion in Washington. Representatives of ten local association chapters within division units are being picked for the trip to the nation's capital.

Meeting Thursday

Scheduled to meet Thursday in Washington, members of the association will get together with members and friends of the 2nd Infantry Division with the main order of business being a dedication of the newly expanded 2nd Division monument.

The monument dedication will take place July 20 with bands, troops and colors making it "the biggest event in the annals of the association."

A moonlight parade at Marine Barracks will be featured that evening.

On the morning of July 21 reuntioners will travel to Fort Belvoir to see displays.

Parties to be held include a ladies' reception at the Royal Thai Embassy, Grand Annual Banquet and reception in the Presidential Room of the Statler Hilton Hotel, an Early Bird Party and Night Club Party with dancing and entertainment also in Washington's Statler Hilton Hotel.

The "Flaming Sword" monument to be rededicated during this reunion will show two new "wings" commemorating the 2nd Division war dead of World War II and Korea.

Constructed during this past year, the marble wings extend from the main structure of the monument which is built of Stoney Creek Granite from a quarry in Massachusetts. Fifty-foot flag poles rise from each wing.

'Galley' at Little Creek Fed 9th Infantry Well

BY 9TH INFANTRY PIO

Feeding 2050 enlisted men and 104 officers from the 9th Infantry as its support units at Little Creek, Va., recently was worked down to a science by 67 cooks.

Lieutenant Alexander Gunkel of the 2nd Medical Battalion acting as the consolidated mess officer and Master Sergeant W. H. Burns of the 2nd Quartermaster Company worked together to run the mess hall.

Days Ration

A vast amount of food was consumed. Eaten daily were 4,000 pounds of potatoes, 2,000 pounds of fresh meat, 170 gallons of milk, 280 gallons of coffee, 390 dozen eggs, more than 400 gallons of ice cream and mounds of vegetables and salads.

The Navy "Galley" is set up in four wings, each capable of seating 220 men at one time. There are separate baking, meat and vegetable rooms where foods are prepared individually before being transported to the serving line.

At each meal it took only 45 minutes to "chow down" the approximately 550 men in each wing. The kitchen, equipped with modern cooking facilities, included 16 ovens, 16 steam kettles for vegetables and soups and 10 electric grills.

The cooks worked in two shifts of 33 to 35 men per shift with 65 "mess cooks" (Navy term for Kitchen Police) on duty.

Israeli Army Major Sees Div Training

By 38th Inf PIO

An Israeli Army officer, Maj. Bar-Uryan, spent three days last week observing training in the 38th Infantry.

Major Bar-Uryan, who had spent five months at the Associate Career Officer Course at The Infantry School, is a 12-year service veteran.

He will attend another school—the Israeli Command and General Staff College upon returning home.

While at the 38th he observed Company C undergo amphibious wet net training and expedient methods of river crossing; and he observed Company D practicing the new combat proficiency test.

He was given tours of the Kelley Hill and Sand Hill areas and briefed upon the functions of the various staff sections and sub-units of the battle group.

Major Bar-Uryan was to spend several days in New York City prior to flying back to Israel.

Membership Drive Fete Has 'Convention' Theme

It had the atmosphere of a national political convention. Campaign buttons, banners and slogans were in abundance everywhere, including "220 All The Way," which was adopted from the 2nd Division's motto, "Second to None."

The scene was the Country Club branch of the Main Officers' Open Mess, and the occasion was the annual free membership drive 'coffee sponsored by the 2nd Division Officers' Wives Club.

In Charge

The 38th Infantry wives were in charge of the Tuesday morning event with Mrs. Edward F. Carroll acting as general chairman. Mrs. James R. Hoover and Mrs. Frederick A. Rall were in charge of decorations.

Only the rowdy, filibuster-like speeches and rivalry of a genuine party convention were missing as there was only one issue at hand: to affiliate as many ladies as possible with the 2nd Division Officer's Wives Club.

The two refreshment tables were centered with ballot boxes and topped with campaign hats bearing pennants. The table fronts bore giant campaign buttons in the patriotic red, white and blue.

The hostesses who poured punch and coffee were campaign button name tags and bright yellow hats with blue bands. They were Mrs. Carroll, Mrs. Maurice C. Holden, Mrs. Sidney J. Roche, Mrs. James R. Sessions, Mrs. Charles Bolen, Mrs. Ross W. Winne, Mrs. Dennis J. Harron, Mrs. Harold W. Darden, Mrs. Richard D. Freeman Sr. and Mrs. James F. Fisher.

A special guest at the morning event was Mrs. Eleanor Whitelaw of WRBL-TV in Columbus.

Other decorations included pennants advertising activities sponsored by the 2nd Division Officers' Wives Club. The numbers for the door prize drawing were inscribed on small yellow and red pennants.

Ballet Accepting New Pupils Now

The Fort Benning Ballet School, sponsored by the 2nd Division Officers' Wives Club, is now accepting registrations for summer classes.

Rossie Gilmore, director of the school for the past six years, will conduct classes for beginners from 9 to 10 a.m.

Miss Gilmore and Vicki Morales just returned from Montgomery, Alabama, where Miss Gilmore was on the teaching staff of the Certified Instructor's and Dancer's Guild for the southeastern states. Approximately 150 pupils and teachers from five states attended the course.

Vicki was presented the outstanding student award by Mr. Larry Smith, general counselor of the organization. Miss Gilmore has been invited to join the permanent teaching staff for conventions to be held in Atlanta, Birmingham, Nashville and Jackson, Mississippi.

Classes will be held here in Building 1053, old hospital area, Main Post. For further information call Mrs. Peabody at MU 9-1209 or Rossie Gilmore at FA 3-3072.

Births

Lieutenant and Mrs. David K. Williams announce the birth of their son, David K. Jr. He was born June 24 at Martin Army Hospital.

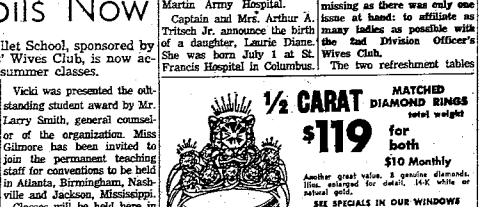
Incidental Intelligence

Visitors

Lieutenant Colonel and Mrs. F. V. Harris have as their houseguest Mr. E. S. Harris Sr., father of Lt. Colonel Harris, of West Palm Beach, Florida. Joining the Harris' last weekend were Lieutenant and Mrs. Charles Beall and their daughter, Cindy. The Bealls are also visiting from West Palm Beach, Florida.

Mrs. Samuel A. Montague of Tupelo, Mississippi, mother of Mrs. George E. Hill, will leave for home next week after spending the past six months at Fort Benning with Captain and Mrs. Hill.



Award

Mrs. Walter B. Todd, wife of the commander of the 1st Infantry, was the recipient of a Certificate of Appreciation from the 2nd Division Officers' Wives Club. Mrs. James T. Kolb made the presentation at the July executive board meeting of the Officers' Wives Club. Mrs. Todd will accompany her husband in the fall to his next tour in Korea.

'Happy Birthday'

2 Past Commanders Watch as 23rd Ushers in 101st

By 23rd Infantry PIO

With two former commanding officers on hand, the 23rd Infantry last Saturday celebrated its 101st birthday with displays, a full battle group review, "kiddie" rides and refreshments.

Joining Lieutenant Colonel Cecil M. Sanders, 23rd Infantry commander, in a review of the battle group was Colonel Gustav M. Bacharach, commander of the unit from October 1959 to July 1960. Also present was Brigadier General Royal Reynolds Jr., assistant commandant of the U. S. Army Infantry School and Colonel Louis A. Kunzig Jr., division chief of staff and a former commander of the 23rd who departed the unit last May.

Ceremonies began with a reading of the unit's history by Lieutenant David K. Williams, assistant adjutant, followed by presentation of Expert Infantryman's Badges by Lt. Col. Sanders and the rededication of unit colors.

Immediately following the review, there was a special treat for the 23rd as three helicopters swept the length of Wetherby Field to hover in front of the reviewing stand with a "Happy Birthday 23rd Infantry" sign.

In the display area the crowd witnessed the large, square birthday cake being cut by Col. Bacharach and Lt. Col. Sanders. Cake and other refreshments were served as the public looked at numerous displays set up on the field.

Probably the biggest attraction among the displays was that of the Army "Mule." Free rides were given to children on this vehicle. The engineers' portable bridge caught the eye of the crowd as its operators demonstrated how it could unfold to span a ravine or a stream of water.

Also displayed were various types of vehicles currently being used within the battle group, with narrators on hand to answer questions and point out characteristics and missions of the equipment.

Among the many weapons displayed was the battle group's newest, the M-79 grenade launcher. For those not familiar with the art of camouflaging, Company E offered some enlightenment with a rifleman and his M-1 rifle camouflaged on the open field.

1st Infantry's Colonel Walter B. Todd Gets Reassignment to 8th Army, Korea

By 1st Infantry PIO

The 1st Infantry's battle group commander, Colonel Walter B. Todd, has been assigned to the 8th U.S. Army in Korea.

He entered the Army in July 1940 and served at various military bases in the United States as well as in Japan and Turkey.

8th Infantry Regiment of the 4th Infantry Division during World War II. One of the first Allied invaders to hit Normandy beach in France, he was among the first American troops to arrive in Paris. He also was a part of the first American unit to penetrate Germany's Siegfried Line.

A graduate of the Command and General Staff College, Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, Colonel Todd has also served as course director of the Advance Career Course and deputy director of instruction at The Infantry School on Main Post prior to joining the 1st.

Colonel Todd has accumulated more than 12 awards and decorations for his service. He received the Army Commendation Medal for outstanding service with The Infantry School.

His wife, Rosemary, and daughter, Matilda, will accompany him to his new assignment in Seoul, Korea. His son, Walter Jr., will remain in the United States to attend college.

Unit Changes

During Colonel Todd's tenure of duty with the 1st Infantry he saw the unit start on an overseas unit replacement cycle with only 38 officers and 22 enlisted men and grow to a fully-organized combat ready force. While here he received his promotion to colonel.

Colonel Todd served with the School Program Sees a New High

By 87th Inf PIO

Participation in the 87th Infantry educational development program has reached new heights.

Although something less than 50 per cent participation is required by the Department of Army, the 87th Infantry has approximately 75 per cent of its officers and 80 per cent of its enlisted men currently enrolled in some type of educational program.

In progress are four subject classes preparing about 80 men for achievement tests to be taken this summer. Enrollment includes 100 in high school English, 30 in history, 20 in mathematics, and another 30 in 8th grade achievement. End-of-course tests are scheduled at the end of August.

In addition, for those who are presently eligible for testing, division education personnel facilitate the process by administering tests in the battle group area every Friday morning.

A company level educational development plaque will be awarded to that company with the most participation. Company A is currently in the lead with Company D running a close second.

THE LONG AND THE SHORT OF IT . . . Headquarters Platoon of the 69th Armor might well have the shortest and tallest men in the 2nd Division. Ch R Harllee Is Promoted At 23rd Inf

By 23rd Inf PIO

Notified last week of his promotion to captain was the 23rd Infantry's Protestant Chaplain, Robert C. Harllee, a long-time member of the "We Servers". In a surprise announcement of the promotion at the Officers' Organizational Day dinner and dance, the battle group commander, Lieutenant Colonel Cecil M. Sanders, aided by Mrs. Harllee, pinned the new captain bars on the chaplain.

Chaplain Harllee first entered the Army in 1953 as a draftee. He underwent basic training at Fort Jackson, S.C., and attended radio school there. Later, in December of the same year, he came to Fort Benning for airborne training and was reassigned to the 504th Airborne Regiment, Fort Bragg, N. C., upon completion of jump school. The remainder of his enlisted service was spent at Fort Bragg.

He returned to civilian life and college at the University of Florida in Gainesville, where he was graduated in 1956 with a bachelor of arts degree in psychology.

After receiving his direct commission as a first lieutenant in the Chaplain's Corps in July 1960, he went to Fort Slocum, N. Y., to attend the U. S. Army Chaplains' School. He arrived at Fort Benning and the 23rd Infantry in January of the following year, where he has held the same position until the present time.

Chaplain Harllee and his family reside at Fort Benning in Custer Terrace. Miami, Florida, is their home town.

NEW CAPTAIN . . . Promoted recently to his present rank is Captain William H. Proctor III, 87th Infantry liaison officer.

73 Levied Overseas At 87th Inf

By 87th Inf PIO

Two Department of Army levies at the 87th Infantry will send 73 enlisted men to overseas assignments this month.

The levies, eight for August and 65 for September, will affect pay grades E-2 through E-6. Although the majority of assignments are E-4's to Korea, other assignments include Europe, Alaska and Japan. Departing date for those leaving for the Far East is mid-July.

The levy, which calls primarily for riflemen and gunners also includes radio and vehicle mechanics, wire chiefs and teletype operators.

Battle Group Crown Awarded Co C, 87th Inf.

By 87th Inf PIO

Company C, 87th Infantry, took top honors in the recently completed company level softball tournament.

Company C, finishing the six game schedule undefeated, won behind the solid pitching of Leonard Goodwin, who is also the first string pitcher for the battle group team. Goodwin struck out an average of 12 per game.

Runner up was Company B with a 5-1 record backed by the equally effective pitching of James Perkins, whose only loss was to Goodwin. Company E, finishing with a 3-3 record, took third place.

Goodwin was also the leading hitter in the tournament, compiling an impressive .400 percentage.

2nd Division Tennis Matches at Sand Hill

Competition in the 2nd Division Tennis Tournament was initiated yesterday as the preliminary matches opened.

Playing at Sand Hill Tennis courts, the tournament contains two divisions. The senior division provides a category for players who are 40 years of age on or before July 12. The open division provides a category for all players who wish to participate. A senior division eligible may compete in the open division if he desires.

Single Elimination Tournament

Tournament competition operates on the basis of single elimination. The preliminary rounds are judged in relation to the best two out of three sets. The semi-finals and finals are selected for the best three out of five sets.

Pairings for the tournament were made last Wednesday. At the time of this writing 24 singles and 11 double matches had been scheduled.

The tournament is being conducted in accordance with the 1962 United States Lawn Tennis Rules. All military personnel assigned to the 2nd Infantry Division are eligible to participate.

MOST VALUABLE PLAYER . . . Lawery Jordan of the 87th Infantry was voted most valuable player in softball by his teammates. Jordan played catcher for the team and had a batting average of .400.

2nd DIVISION SOFTBALL CHAMPS

Softball League Won By Division Trains 9

Recently Division Trains played the 87th Infantry an extra game in order to break a softball league tie.

Division Trains won the game 3 to 0. Division Trains and the 87th had been tied in the softball league with identical records of 10 games won and two games lost.

87th Falls to Second Place

The league crown went to Division Trains, as the 87th's Conquerors fell into second place after leading the league most of the season.

A tie situation resulted when the Division Trains and the 87th Infantry teams played on the night of July 2. Division Trains won the game with a score of 4 to 0. The game to break the tie was set the following Friday night. Division Trains kept their winning streak going by registering a score of 3 to 0 in their favor.

The first run scored by Division Trains came when pitcher Frank Myers singled to right field and a man on base scored.

Line Drive to Center Field

Edward Capless then hit a line drive to center field. The effort was worth two runs bringing the total score to three runs.

4 Day Swim Meet Starts On July 23

Four days of swimming trials, eliminations and finals will be here soon for the 2nd Infantry Division swimming teams.

The Division Swimming and Diving Championship Meet will be held July 23 - 27 at Main Post's Carey Pool.

Teams of 20 Men

Entrance to the meet is limited to major command and unit groupings of the 2nd Division. Each command and unit may enter a team not to exceed 20 contestants.

Team and individual events present contestants opportunity to use regulation and free style techniques. Diving competition is open to individual effort.

The meet is an integral part of the Commanding General's Sports Trophy race. Points toward the competition for the trophy will be awarded the units competing.

FOLLOW THROUGH IS MUST . . . The ball is smacked solidly; the player hurriedly looks up to follow the ball's flight and mutters to himself, "Wha' happen?" Wha' happen is that the player neglected to follow through. The speed of the club must not be dissipated. Let its force take the club-head on through to the finish or sacrifice power. At the zenith of the follow-through a good golfer looks like this: (1.) Body is turned, facing the hole. (2.) Head is up; eyes follow the ball's flight. (3.) Hands are high, arms close to the body. (4) Weight is on the left foot; right heel is high off the ground.

Hq. Company To Represent 489th Engrs.

Headquarters Company won the 489th Engineer Battalion softball championship recently when they trounced Company C, 14 to 8, in the final game of league play. The victory gave them a perfect league record of six wins and no losses.

James Storz, who last week pitched a no-hitter, was the winning pitcher. Eugene Tiner led the Headquarters nine at the plate with a single and home run off losing pitcher Alton Douglass. Ray Wagner had a double and a homer for the losers.

In the other game of the day and finale for Companies A and B, Company A came out on top with a 12 to 4 win. Donnie Taylor went the distance on the mound to get credit for the victory giving up only four hits. Bernie Blake led Company A hitters with a pair of safeties while Hewitt Wallace had a home run off of losing pitcher Mayhard Cook.

Headquarters Company will represent the 489th Engr. Bn. in the 151st Engineer (Group) tournament to be played at a future date.

Golf Club Ends Play For Summer

Members of the Fort Benning Ladies Golf Club voted at their June coffee to discontinue their weekly golf tournaments during the summer months.

An interesting golf program is being planned to begin when the club resumes its schedule in September.

The season will begin with a social coffee to be held in the ball room at the Fort Benning Country Club so that newcomers to Fort Benning may get acquainted with past members.

Following the coffee a Scotch foursome tournament will be played mixing new and old members. Further arrangements will be announced prior to the dates set for the coffee.

Last week's winners of the throw-out-odd-hole tournament were Tillie Meade, first place; Gladys Reisch, second place, and Sis Vassar, third.

The Student Brigade Too Tough; Increases Lead With 19 Straight

By SFC Bismarck Stith

The Student Brigade Tigers are still riding high in the major unit baseball league. They recently compiled their 18th and 19th consecutive victories to run their season total to 21 wins and 2 losses.

Charles Spell chalked up his 18th straight win by hurling a three-hitter to dump the 156th Signal Battalion, 13-5.

Bill Silva's triple and three singles paced the winners along with Bob Yerger's triple and single and Spell's triple.

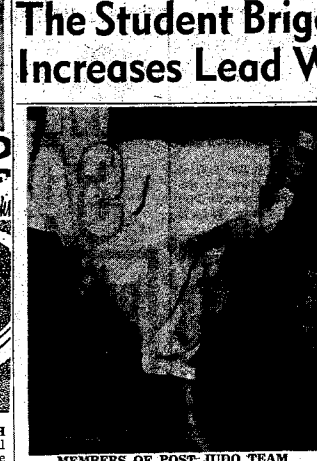
Don Rumvelt was charged with the setback. Paul Bando was credited with three RBI's along with three singles to pace the Signalmen.

In their 19th victory, the Tigers clobbered the last place 428th Medics, 14-3.

The Tigers blasted three Signalmen pitchers for 17 hits and 14 runs, including one triple, seven doubles and ten singles. Bill Silva's triple and double; Jesus Herran's double and two singles; Bob Padgett's two doubles and Charles Spell's triple led the Tigers hitting attack.

Harold Smith was the winning pitcher while Joseph O'Malley suffered the loss. Charles Story, William Harrison and John Krause each had singles to account for the Medics three hits.

In the 19th Artillery Redlegs' last three outings, they picked up two wins by defeating 428th Medics 2-0, and edging TICTC, 5-4, but lost to the 29th Infantry, 7-1.



In the Medics game, John Couch collected his first win with a 2-0 shutout. Coach also was credited with scoring one of the two runs. Robert Steward led the hitting attack for the Artillerymen with two singles.

Medics' righthander, James Williams, was charged with the loss. Charles Story paced the Medics at bat with two singles.

In the TICTC competition, the Redlegs rallied for five hits and four runs in the third frame to take charge. TICTC struck back by scoring two runs in the fourth and added two more in the fifth to even the all game. This game remained tied until the Artillerymen secured the winning tally in bottom of the 12th inning.

Redleg Cliff Brown was credited with the win. Robert Steward and Larry Covey pac-

'Warming-up' Four Tournament Action

Post to Host Experts In Judo Tournament

The Fort Benning Judo Team will host teams from the Southeastern United States Fort Benning Judo Tournament to be held at Briant Wells Field House tomorrow at 7 p.m.

Contestants from Birmingham, Ala., Mobile, Ala., Atlanta, Ga., Savannah, Ga., Fort Bragg, N. C., Tuscaloosa, Ala., Charleston, S. C., Fort Campbell, Ky., Fort Stewart, Ga., Fort Gordon, Ga., Parris Island, S. C., Camp LeJeune, N. C., Warner Robbins Air Force Base, Hunter Air Force Base, and Turner Air Force Base will participate.

There will be contests in the 140, 160, 180 pounds division and unlimited in the heavyweight division. There will also be team matches to determine a team champion.

Mr. Kenzo Uyeuo, 4th degree black belt, Mr. Yosh Fukudo, 4th degree black belt and Mr. James Takemori, 4th degree black belt, all of these men are judo champions and pastmasters at the sport.

Sgt. Ernie Cates, 3rd degree black belt and Sgt. H. Stark, 2nd degree black belt, from Parris Island Marines are favorites for the overall Judo Championship.

Hunter Air Force Base will also field a strong team and should give the marines tough competition. Fort Benning will have strong contestants in Sgt. Harvey Carson, Marcel Caries and Tom Nakamura. The Benning Judo team has been weakened due to overseas levies and injuries. The team has won the 1960 Southeastern United States Championship and placed second to Parris Island in 1962.

In this tournament there also will be competition in the junior division for boys 7 years to 16 years of age plus 17 woman and girl contestants.

Maj. M. G. Stafford, team captain, who is sidelined due to an injury, stated "This should be an excellent tournament and should be very interesting to the spectators."

50 Athletes Sign-Up For Fall Action

Head coach, Capt. Leaton Cofield announces that 50 football candidates signed up for a tryout with the Doughboys at a meeting held at Briant Wells Field House recently.

Some returnees from last year's roster included: Dave Lynn, former guard at Clemson and last year's right tackle, Alvin S. Aucoin, 6 feet 2 inches, 230 pounds. Aucoin will see his third year of action with the Doughboys. He played his college ball at Louisiana State University.

Hank Derleth, right end, 6 feet 3 inches, 210 pounds, who played at the University of Wisconsin was also '61 Doughboy.

This year's roster will carry several college and NFL players. 2nd Lt. Fred Murphy, property of the Minnesota Vikings and Allen Evenhart of the Baltimore Colts, head this list.

Coach Cofield says tryout applications blanks are available at the athletic department. All interested football players are urged to sign-up for the Doughboy team.

Third Army Tennis Play

Jackson Takes Tennis Crown; Benning Grabs Runner-Up Title

By SFC Bismarck Stith

Fort Jackson took the 1962 Third Army Tennis Tournament crown when Sp4 James Nerren scored a double sweep in the finals. Nerren won the singles and, with the help of teammate Pvt. Wade Rockafellow, the doubles title.

Nerren who was runner-up in the singles last year, set back Rockafellow in straight sets 6-3, 6-1, 6-2. He then teamed with his singles prey, Rockafellow, to win the doubles title over Fort Bragg's Lt. Ray Schilling and Lt. Charles Hilcox in five sets, 2-6, 6-4, 3-6, 7-5, 6-3.

Walk Off With Title

By virtue of the sweep of the men's division, Fort Jackson easily walked off with the team championship; garnering 13 points, and stepped ahead of Fort Benning, which was tied with Jackson at the conclusion of Thursday competition.

The tournament got underway at the Main Officers' Open Mess Monday, hosting 25 representatives from throughout the Third Army area.

In Monday's action, 2nd Lt. Ralph Quigley, Fort Jackson, over Capt. Donald Tribe, Fort McClellan, 6-4, 6-3; Pfc Webb Wilson, Fort Stewart, over Pvt. David Beamer, Fort Jackson, 6-2, 6-2; Fort Gordon's Lt. Ed Arnold defeated Pfc Thomas Watson, Fort Rucker, 3-6, 6-4, 6-2; Lt. Ray Schilling, Fort Bragg blasted Sp5 Athu Wade, Fort Gordon, 6-2, 6-1.

In the next two matches Rockafellow of Fort Jackson, blanked Capt. Edward Grubbs, Fort Benning, 6-0, 6-0, and Benning's Lt. Dick Champion defeated 2nd Lt. Stephen Bakalar, Fort McClellan by the same score 6-0, 6-0. Harold Cunningham, Fort Stewart handed Fort McClellan their final setback of the day by defeating Pvt. William McClung, 1-6, 6-3, 6-3; Fort Gordon's Sp4 Don Feezor and Pfc Robert Gold dropped their matches to Sp4 Gunter Polte, Fort Stewart, 6-3, 6-4, and Pvt. James Suomi, Fort McPherson, 6-3, 6-0, respectively.

Second Round Play

In the only second round match, James Nerren, Fort Jackson gave Suomi, Fort McPherson, his second setback of the day, 6-1, 6-2. In the men's doubles the first match saw Graver and Champion of Fort Benning defeating Quigley and Beumer of Fort Jackson, 6-0, 6-1.

In the next round of action, Jack Sterling and Richard Champion of Benning, along with James Nerren and Wade Rockafellow, both of Jackson, reached the semifinal round in men's singles division. Sterling got his berth with a victory over Arnold of Gordon, 7-5, 8-2. Champion defeated Robert Johnson of McPherson, 6-3, 6-2, for his spot. Nerren defeated Garver of Fort Benning, 6-3, 6-2 and Rockafellow edged out Schilling of Fort Bragg, 7-5, 9-7.

In the men's doubles division, Fort Bragg's Hilcox and Schilling gained the finals, defeating Polte and Wilson of Ft. Stewart in a match that went five sets, 4-6, 6-3, 6-2, 3-6, 6-1.

Final Action

Rockafellow defeated Jack Sterling of Benning, 2-6, 6-3, 6-0, 6-3; while Nerren eliminated Benning's last hope by downing Richard Champion, 6-2, 6-1, 6-2, this put the two Jackson players set for the singles title Friday.

The pair also joined as a team to move into the doubles finals defeating Serrett and Watson of Stewart, 6-1, 6-4, 5-7, 6-4, puting them into the finals to meet Hilcox and Schilling of Fort Bragg.

In the senior singles Brig. Gen. Royal Reynolds defeated Gil Procter, both of Benning, 6-4, 6-4, for the title. At the completion of Thursday action team standings place Fort Jackson far ahead with 11 points and the possibility of scoring 13. Benning with nine and Bragg in third with five.

On Friday, the finals saw Nerren and Rockafellow all the way until they walked off the Benning's tennis court with the 1962 Third Army Tennis Championship in the singles and doubles division.

Pistol Team to Enter Matches at Ft. Knox

By SSgt. Lee LaCombe

Next week the U.S. Army Pistol Squad, captained by Lt. Col. William S. Brophy, will entered the South Central Regional Pistol championships at Fort Knox, Ky., in final preparation for the National Pistol Championships at Camp Perry, Ohio, July 27 through August 4.

The Army squad left Fort Benning the latter part of June to begin its summer training for the matches.

The men have shot in two matches thus far and this weekend the squad has been broken up into three groups and entered in three scattered matches.

Trip Successful

Thus far their road trip has been eminently successful. Last weekend at the Kentucky State matches at Fort Campbell, Ky., SFC William Blankenship, current national champion, won the individual title with an incredible 2658 out of a possible 2700 points effort and the soldiers captured all team events.

Earlier in the Georgia State matches at Norcross, Ga., the MTU squad won the center fire team match and the unofficial team aggregate against strong competition from the U. S. Air Force. Blankenship was runnerup to the USAF's Capt. Thomas Smith in the individual race.

The two services goliaths on the American handgun scene today, clash again at Fort Knox in the final tuneup for both squads before the Nationals.

In three previous meetings this year the two groups have broken about even in team matches.

This weekend the shooters are firing in the Arkansas State Championships, Little Rock, Ark.; Egyptian Summer Pistol Matches, Carbondale, Ill., and the Mid-Western Regional Championships at Bristol, Ind.

AT THE Movies

I BOMBED PEARL HARBOR is an action-packed film starring Toshiro Mifune. It deals with the bombing of Pearl Harbor from the Japanese point of view. The film also follows the Pacific war through the eyes of the enemies as the Japanese fleet, seemingly invincible, strikes again and again at initally feeble American efforts to strike back. The defeat of the Japanese military machine is finally spelled out at the memorable Battle of Midway.

THE WILD WESTERNERS is the story of a rugged U.S. marshal battling rampaging Indians and a murderous band of outlaws while investigating a series of bold robberies during the Civil War. It stars James Philbrook and Nancy Kovack.

THE OKLAHOMAN is the story of early frontier doctor trying to establish his practice in the wild Oklahoma territory but finds himself in a band of vicious outlaws who are out to grab the oil-rich lands of the young territory. It stars Joel McCrea.

Dental Health Series

Keep '3-R's' in Mind in Caring for Teeth

By Maj. Charles W. Dobson
Preventive Dentistry Officer

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the seventh in a series of articles presented in the interest of better dental health.)

Despite all the skill and science of modern dentistry, tooth decay has been increasing from year to year.

To reverse this trend, it is essential that you cooperate with your dentist in the daily home care of your teeth. Remember, decay occurs between your visits to the dental office. Do not neglect regular visits to your dentist. His knowledge and skill are indispensable. But between those visits, keep your teeth healthy and attractive with this simple "3-R" program.

Reduce between-meal snacks.

If a person finds he simply cannot resist an occasional between-meal snack, fruits especially apples, are the best substitute. Fruits not only are low in sugar content, they actually have a cleansing effect on the teeth and gums.

Reduce sugar intake.

The amount of sugar taken into the mouth has a direct effect on dental decay. These sugars are used by your body as carbohydrates, the energy-producing substance. However, we receive adequate amounts of carbohydrates in a normal diet without foods high in sugar content. Therefore these should be eliminated or drastically reduced in your diet.

Certain bacteria in the mouth break down sugars into injurious acids which dissolve tooth enamel, the first stage of tooth decay, so reduction of sugar in the diet is an important step in decay prevention.

Because acid attacks may occur after each intake of sugar, the fewer times sugar products are eaten, the fewer the cavities. If a child insists on sweets, there are several good "sugarless sweets" on the market such as sugarless mints, gums, candy bars and diet colas.

Teeth should be brushed as soon as possible each time afterfood is eaten. The method used to brush the teeth should be one which thoroughly cleans away food particles from the teeth. Different methods may be recommended by dentists, according to the individual's needs.

In combating dental diseases, the toothbrush remains the greatest single weapon available for use by the individual. The underlying cause of most dental diseases is an unclean mouth. A person's mouth may be very susceptible to disease, but if his mouth is kept clean, these diseases will not develop or will be held to a minimum.

It should take you approximately three minutes to brush your teeth adequately. If for any reason you don't have access to your brush, it is beneficial to rinse your mouth with water to wash away as many food particles as possible. This is better than nothing but it must be stressed that this is not a substitute for brushing.

Each person should have a minimum of two brushes so that he may use a dry brush at each brushing. If the brush is used before the bristles are entirely dry, the bristles will be soft and lose some of their efficiency.

For the sake of your smile, remember the "3-R's" of tooth decay prevention.

Mr. Stahr Salutes U. S. Army

The following is the text of the farewell address of former Secretary of the Army Elvis J. Stahr Jr., to all members of the Army.

"As I prepare to leave office, I want to express my sincere appreciation to the men and women of the United States Army for the loyalty and support you have given me as Secretary of the Army since 24 January 1961.

"The Army — Regular, National Guard, and Reserve — in recent months has grown in strength, readiness, and capability to a degree unparalleled in its peacetime history. As a result, the nation can now face the future with increasing confidence and carry on the noble work of establishing a just and durable peace from a position of greater strength than ever before in this troubled era of crisis. All of the members of the Army, whether in or out of uniform, have had a part in its splendid achievements, and each of you has the right to take individual pride in them.

"It has been a great privilege to serve with you, and to enjoy your comradeship. I leave the Army with full confidence that under the leadership of my able successor it will continue to grow in spirit and power every day, and will remain a major instrument to bring about and preserve peace, with freedom, for ourselves and our children.

"May God bless you all."

Counter-Insurgency Views Told by USA

The Army has taken no official position on any new counter-insurgency program of the Air Force.

The Army believes that each service has a contribution to make to United States military capabilities for counter-insurgency. The Army, by virtue, of its long experience in counter-guerrilla and related operations, its intimate knowledge of all aspects of land warfare, and its assigned responsibility for combat incident to operations on land, considers that Army forces, including organic Army aviation, can make a major contribution.

In its consideration of this problem, the Army is not seeking single service responsibility for special warfare and counter - insurgency activities throughout the world. The Army feels that each service has a proper role to play in the national counter - insurgency program, utilizing capabilities, equipment, and techniques which are typical of or peculiar to each individual service. The Army considers that no service should acquire counter-insurgency equipment or create counter - insurgency organizations which duplicate existing or planned capabilities which are the responsibility of another service.

The Army does not believe that all additional money for counter-insurgency should be spent to increase capabilities which already exist in the Army and Marine Corps. The Army does believe that additional money should be allocated whenever and wherever it will produce significant improvement in the national counter-insurgency capability.

The Army is not seeking the establishment of a unified counter-insurgency command under Army direction.

The Army did not oppose the establishment of the Air Force's new special warfare center at Egtin Air Force Base in Florida."

AER Is Helping Hand for Army Personnel

By Spc Bruce Yaffee

Army Emergency Relief was organized in the early years of World War II, to provide aid to members of the Army and their dependents in times of emergency or distress.

Recognized as an important troop morale factor, AER operates chiefly through its many sections at each Army installation in both the continental United States and abroad.

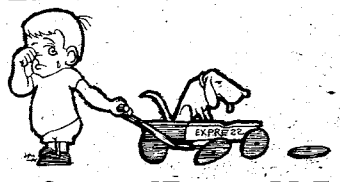
These sections are supplied with sufficient funds to meet the needs of their local requirements.

In the event of an emergency in which a member of the Army has not the means to cope with the problem, the AER, if notified, will weigh the case carefully and sympathetically, and if warranted, a loan will be provided the needy individual.

If repayment of the loan would cause undo hardship, then the assistance is given in the form of a grant. This is not to be interpreted as charity, as funds for AER are raised through money raising drives in which members of the Army are the chief supporters.

If, however, soldiers receiving a helping hand by the AER are able to repay their debt, then small monthly payments will be accepted by the organization. Usually payments received by the AER are in the form of a Class E allotment.

AER records show that most emergencies arise from the following reasons:



1. Non-receipt of pay, allotment or allowances.
2. Loss of pay.
3. Acute illness, when government facilities for treatment or hospitalization are not available.
4. Funeral expenses of dependents.
5. Travel expenses due to emergencies.
6. Payment of initial rent, or payment to prevent eviction.
7. Privation of dependents due to any cause.

Once a year a joint fund raising campaign is conducted by AER and the Army Relief Society. At present, Fort Benning and other Army installations are conducting their annual fund raising drives. Each unit on this post is given a quota, a goal to reach.

The Student Brigade, under the command of Col. Otto R. Koch Jr., obtained the quota set forth by the post authorities, and exceeded it by a full six per cent. The 106 percentile turned in by the brigade totals $5,040, and returns from outlying units of TSB are still expected.

Know Your Senior NCO's

First Sergeant (E-8) Otis B. Scruggs is the first sergeant of Headquarters Company, 151st Engineer Group.

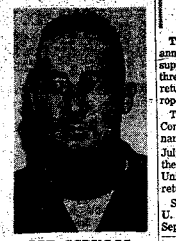
Sgt. Scruggs joined Headquarters Company last April. In a way it was a homecoming. Sgt. Scruggs found that the group commander, Col. Sears Y. Coker, had been his executive officer in the first unit he had belonged to, just 20 years ago.

Sgt. Scruggs enlisted in the Army in October, 1942, at Camp Shelby, Miss. He was sent to Fort Riley, Kan. to do his basic training in the 9th Engineers, 9th Armored Division. It was there that Sgt. Scruggs first met Col. (then Major) Coker.

After training with the armored division for a year and a half, Sgt. Scruggs went to England with the 9th Armored Division in 1944. The Allied troops landed in Normandy and the 9th Armor was there, spearheading the way for the First Army, and sweeping its way across France.

It was in Belgium that the going got tough. The Allied lines were extended by their rapid advance and the Germans launched a surprise counter-attack in the Ardennes creating what is known as the Bulge.

Sgt. Scruggs was caught with the rest of his combat command at Bastogne. The German Panzer Division surrounded this small city but the American troops, led by Gen. McAuleffe, kept on fighting until the relief broke through.



Halfway through the siege, the Germans asked Gen. McAuliffe if he wanted to surrender. Speaking for all his men, he answered "NUTS." For his part in this gallant action, Sgt. Scruggs received the Presidential Unit Citation.

Just a few months later, Sgt. Scruggs was with the engineers at Remagen Bridge at the Rhine. The engineers had to maintain and repair this bridge while it was under continuous artillery fire and fighter - bomber attack.

Here Sgt. Scruggs' unit again received the Presidential Unit Citation.

Returning home from Europe in 1945, Sgt. Scruggs left the Army for a few years before re-enlisting in 1948. This time he joined the Infantry and became a parachutist in the 504th Airborne Infantry Regiment. He had reenlisted as a PFC but, through his excellent military capabilities was promoted to master sergeant in just three years. He became a master parachutist and then transferred to his favorite branch, the Corps of Engineers.

After a brief tour in Germany, Sgt. Scruggs came to Headquarters Company, 151st Engineer Group in April. He is married and lives on post. His wife's name is Myrtis and their children are Louis, 21; Elinda, 9; Teresa, 6; and Carla, one month. In addition to becoming a proud father a month ago, Sgt. Scruggs' son Louis, recently gave him a grandson.

Suggestion Wins $50 for Embry At Army Level

SFC Cecil W. Embry, parachute maintenance shop supervisor of The Infantry Center Quartermaster Section, has been awarded $50 by the Third Army Incentive Awards Committee for a $5,036 money-saving suggestion.

Embry suggested the threaded lead seals used on emergency, back and chest Army parachutes be eliminated. The seals had been used to identify the riggers who installed them. Embry suggested that the close supervision of the parachutes made the seals unnecessary.

Adoption of his suggestion will eliminate 80,000 seals and is expected to save Fort Benning $5,036 yearly.

For the same suggestion in March, Embry received a $25 award from the Fort Benning Incentive Awards Committee and Certificate of Achievement.

Three Units Returning From Europe

The Defense Department has announced that 42 small Army support-type units including three from Fort Benning will return to the U.S. from Europe this year.

The 54th Quartermaster Company (Equipment Maintenance) is to return between July 15 and Aug. 15. During the same period the 539th AG Unit Post (Type E) will also return.

Scheduled to arrive in the U. S. between Sept. 15 and Sept. 30 is the 820 Ordnance Company (Ammunition).

The 42 units returning represent some 7,500 officers and men.

The official announcement said the return is possible due to the receipt of new equipment, completion of proposi- tioning of equipment in Europe and improved logistics techniques.

The program is part of a continuing routine adjustment in world-wide deployment of U. S. non-combatant units and personnel.

FIRST ARMY PLANE

In 1909 the Army purchased its first airplane from the Wright brothers. Army aviation was at one time part of the Signal Corps.

ed the hitting attack with three singles each. Fred Valentine's two singles for as many trips led the losers.

Roy Bowers, 29th Infantry righthander, held the Redlegs scoreless for eight frames giving up two hits.

In the ninth, the Artillery men blasted him for three hits and one run to upset Bowers' shutout. The Infantrymen took the victory by a score of 7-1.

John Couch took the defeat. George Rogers led with three singles in as many trips at bat. James Bryant had two hits in four trips for the Redlegs.

156th Signal Nips Medics, 7-6

The 156th Signalmen grabbed a 7-6 victory victory from the 428th Medics recently.

Don Rumvelt held the Medics in check until the ninth inning when Medic Robert Demas led off with a single followed by Maurice Weatherton and Charles Story with singles putting the Medics back in the ball game. John Krause added a double and teammate Clyde Battle contributed two triples to account for five hits and six runs to take the lead, 6-4. The Signalmen bounced back with three runs in the bottom of the ninth to edge the Medics for 7-6 victory.

Allan Santure took the win while Joe O'Malley suffered the defeat. Harold Dennis led the Signalmen at bat with three singles while Clyde Battle paced the Medics with a triple and a single.

9th Infantry Wins Two

The 29th Infantry racked up a pair of victories in major unit action recently.

They whipped 151st Engineers, 8-4, in the afternoon and slammed 156th Signal in the nightcap.

Clifton Johnson won the open, while Victor Rivera paced the Infantrymen with two safeties. Charles Bishop was tagged with the loss although teammate Curt Drummond clubbed a triple, double and three singles for five trips.

James Battle, 29th righthander, hurled the second game to claim the win while Paul Bando suffered the setback.

for debts created by the wife.

The chatels purchased by the wife must be used by the wife and the family. A purchase of a hat to give to a friend does not bind the husband.

Unless the husband has made the wife his express or implied agent to make or create a debt, he is not liable for that debt, providing that the debt was not created for necessities suitable to the wife's condition and habits of life.

Foot Ills

uids in the evening, before retiring is very helpful. After bathing, the feet should be thoroughly dried, particularly between the toes, and any dead skin should be gently removed.

Socks should be of the absorbent type, preferably of cotton and again every effort should be made to air the feet, particularly after work. Shoes of the canvas and rubber types such as tennis shoes should be avoided by those who tend to develop athlete's foot. Frequently, since these prevent evaporation of sweat and actually increase sweating of the feet.

The fungus that causes athlete's foot is encouraged to grow in an environment that is warm and moist. Prevention and treatment both center around keeping the feet as dry as possible. If the blistering type of athlete's foot develops, remember not to put strong athlete's foot remedies on the raw tissue but in a gentle soothing fashion to avoid an even worse eruption than the athlete's foot.

If the rash does not respond within several weeks to the simple measures mentioned, or if evidence of infection with bacteria develops such as pus in the blisters, red streaks or fever, you should report to your dispensary or doctor.

WAR FIGURES

The number of individuals serving in the Army during the Korean War was 2,834,000. A total of 27,704 were killed in action and 77,596 wounded.

Sees Savings Of $3 Billion In DOD Costs

WASHINGTON (AFPS)— A saving of $750 million during the current fiscal year and an eventual saving of $3 billion a year in Defense Department spending has been predicted by Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara in a memorandum to President John F. Kennedy on the Defense Cost Reduction Program.

Secretary McNamara told the President that the savings are being achieved in three ways:

1. Buying only what we need to achieve balanced readiness.

2. Buying at the lowest sound price.

3. Reducing operating costs through integration and standardization.

Transferring surplus stocks from one of the armed services to another is accounting for many savings. The Secretary gave one example where the Air Force needed a type of silver-plated ball bearing which costs $79 per bearing. The Navy had a surplus of these bearings; they were transferred to the Air Force with a saving of $26,000.

Mr. McNamara said this was just one of 4,500 item transfers which occur monthly within the Department of Defense.

He also told how parts for various pieces of equipment are "over-specified" in original designing to insure maximum reliability. Many times it is found after testing that these specifications can be reduced with a considerable savings realized on future purchases.

He cited a turbine wheel used in a piece of classified equipment which in its original design, hand tooled from stainless steel, cost $175. Experience showed that it could be molded from plastic and produced for $2 per copy.

Awarding more contracts on the basis of competitive bidding is also reducing national defense costs, the Secretary said. Much of defense purchasing since the Korean Conflict, particularly in electronics, missiles and new weapons systems, has been from "sole sources," usually the contractor who built the original item. By putting more of these contracts, especially for replacement parts, on competitive bidding, savings of as much as 75 per cent are being made.

New Basic Branch Established

WASHINGTON (ANS) —The Army has established an Intelligence and Security Branch as a new basic branch for Army personnel.

Addition of the new basic branch, the first since 1950 when the Military Police and Transportation branches were added, will insure continuous availability of officers highly qualified in the intelligence and security field. This brings to 20 the number of branches in the Army.

Substantial reduction and eventual elimination is expected of the present requirement for officers from other Army branches to perform duties in intelligence and security organizations.

Authority to establish a new branch is given the secretary of the army under the provisions of Title 10 of the U. S. Code. Under this authority, the Army Secretary "may establish such other branches, in addition to those existent, as he considers necessary." Action is being taken now to design and select appropriate branch insignia.

Today's action will affect approximately 5,000 officers serving in a wide variety of intelligence and security functions throughout the world, such as the Army Security Agency, the Intelligence Corps, and other combat and strategic intelligence for the Army.

For the first time these officers will be brought together under a single career management authority. Benefits will include improved personnel control, improved career management and career development for the officers involved and improved intelligence for the Army.

Under the previous system, control and career management of officers participating in intelligence and security assignments was fragmented among 16 branches of the active Army. Officers who have received long and expensive training sometimes were not assigned most advantageously.

Army Intelligence (AI) and Army Security (AS) Branches exist in the Army Reserve. However, no counterpart, until today, has existed in the active

Col. Reynolds New Chief Of Ground Mobility Dept.

Col. Lawrence S. Reynolds has been named director of the Ground Mobility Department of The Infantry School.

He succeeds Col. Paul T. Clifford, who has departed the post for an assignment with the Military Assistance Advisory Group in Viet Nam.

Since December, 1961, Col. Reynolds has commanded the 1st Battle Group, 39th Infantry, 1st Infantry Brigade. He was chief of the Editorial and Pictorial Office of The Infantry School from August to December, 1961.

Col. Reynolds came to Fort Benning from Korea where he commanded the 1st Battle Group, 17th Infantry, 7th Division, from 1960 to 1961.

From 1955 to 1960, he served with the Department of the Army in Washington, D. C., in successive assignments as action officer, Organization and Training Division; deputy chief of staff for operations; military assistant to the assistant secretary of the Army for management and Reserve Forces, and military assistant to the undersecretary of the Army.

In Korea, Col. Reynolds served from 1954 to 1955 as G-4 of the 25th Division. He commanded the division's 3rd Battalion, 14th Infantry from 1953 to 1954.

Taught at Sewanee

Col. Reynolds was professor of military science at Sewanee (Tenn.) Military Academy from 1951 to 1953.

A 1938 graduate of Virginia

Post Firers Represent US at CISM

A 10-man Marksmanship Training Unit team has been selected to represent the United States in the Council of International Military Sports (CISM) shooting competition in Buenos Aires, Argentina, Aug. 28 to Sept. 10.

The team will consist of five riflemen and five pistolmen who were selected through an all-service competition.

Members of the rifle team are Capt. Phillip F. Cannella, 1st Lt. Thurston E. Banks, 2nd Lt. Charles E. Feuerbacher and Sgts. John Kahoilua and Milton Nagrone.

The pistoleers include MSgt. Herbert Roberts Jr., SFC Bobby D. Harris, SSgt Hershel L. Anderson, MSgt. George R. Snavely and SSgt. James M. McNally.

Headed by Colonel

The U. S. team, which will be headed by Col. Robin G. Montgomery, will compete against the Armed Forces teams of the other 25 CISM member-nations.

Col. Montgomery will go to Argentina as the U.S. Delegate to the CISM matches for the third consecutive year.

The rifle to be fired in Buenos Aires will be the Mauser, the weapon used by the military forces of the host nation. Pistols will be the choice of each competitor.

Courses of fire are along the lines of those fired in the Olympic and Pan American Games.

These matches are sponsored by CISM and draw entires from Europe.

Lead Victories

Col. Montgomery was chief of the U.S. delegation at the CISM matches in Athens, Greece, in 1960 and at Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, in 1961. In both instances the U. S. team, composed primarily of shooters from AMTU, captured the Grand Prix, emblem of supremacy in the team matches.

In 1961 the U. S. rifle and pistol shooters had their most successful ventue into international shooting when they won every individual and team match at the sixth annual CISM championships held at Rio.

Col. Montgomery, a graduate of University of Washington, Class of '34, has commanded MTU since June 1959.

COL. DOUGLAS

Col. Douglas Is New TIS Secretary

Newly assigned as secretary of The Infantry School is Lt. Col. James S. Douglas who for the past two years has served as editor of INFANTRY Magazine and recently assumed added duties as chief, Publications Section of the Editorial and Pictorial Office, TIS.

Col. Douglas succeeds Lt. Col. Ted Fuller who goes to Naples, Italy, where he will be secretary to the general staff, Headquarters, U. S. Army Element, Armed Forces Southern Europe.

Born in Honolulu, Hawaii, Col. Douglas attended the U.S. Military Academy and in 1944 was commissioned a second lieutenant of Infantry.

During World War II, he served in various company and staff assignments with the 222nd Infantry, 42nd Infantry Division, in the European Theater of Operations. After serving two years on post-war occupation duty, Col. Douglas returned to the states in 1947 and for two years attended the University of Missouri earning a masters degree in journalism.

Douglas

He was next assigned to the Pentagon with the Office of Chief of Information. During the period 1953 to 1954, Col. Douglas served in Korea as S-3 of the 27th Infantry, and later as commanding officer of the 3rd Battalion of the 27th in Korea and Hawaii.

For the next two years he was Assistant G-3 of the 25th Infantry Division in Hawaii.

Taught at Citadel

Returning to the states, he was assistant professor of military science at the Citadel, Charleston, S. C., until 1959.

Besides being a graduate of the Military Academy and the University of Missouri, Col. Douglas is a graduate of the Infantry Officer Career Course and of the Command and General Staff College.

Among his awards and decorations are the Bronze Star Medal with one Oak Leaf Cluster, the Army Commendation Medal, the Purple Heart, and the Combat Infantryman Badge.

Col. Douglas and his wife Jeanne and four children presently make their home at 122 Rainbow Ave.

Branch

Army. Establishment of the new branch eliminates the requirement for the Reserve Intelligence and Security Branches. These branches will be discontinued and Reserve officers currently assigned to them will be reassigned automatically to the new branch.

Those Regular Army officers who are currently in the Army Intelligence Specialization Program and Army Security Agency Programs will be queried on an individual basis to determine their preference for transfer from their current branch to the new branch. Transfer will be automatic for those agreeing to a transfer. Those who do not agree to transfer will be released from their specialization commitment on completion of their current intelligence assignments.

Authorization of the Intelligence and Security Branch, with its approximately 5,000 officers, makes it the seventh largest branch in the Army.

Reynolds

Polytechnic Institute in Blacksburg, Col. Reynolds was commissioned upon graduation. He entered active service in 1940.

During World War II, he was assigned to the 43rd Division and XI Corps in the Pacific Theater. He served overseas 65 months.

Col. Reynolds attended The Infantry School in 1943, returning in 1960 for a refresher course. In 1946, he attended the Command and General Staff College at Fort Leavenworth, Kan.

Among his awards and decorations are a Bronze Star Medal and Army Commendation Medal.

Col. and Mrs. Reynolds, the former Virginia A. Franklin, have two sons, Lawrence, 22, and Michael, 5, and two daughters, Suzanne, 20, and Elizabeth, 18.

DA General Studies Pay Needs

Maj. Gen. Herbert J. Vander Heide, chief of staff of The Infantry Center from January to June, 1954, was here to study the servicemen's compensation early this week.

Now assigned to the Army's Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Personnel in Washington, Gen. Vander Heide was on post to discuss with officers and enlisted men the military compensation system.

Special interest is being given to basic pay, allowances, hazardous duty and incentive pay, bonuses, longevity, fringe benefits and retirement.

Col. Lennon Takes TIC Legal Post

Lt. Col. Daniel A. Lennon Jr., arrived here Friday from Norfolk, Va., where he attended the Armed Forces Staff College.

He will assume the duties of deputy staff judge advocate of The Infantry Center, a position he held from October, 1960, to Jan. 22, 1962.

Capt. Robert S. Poydasheff of Charleston, S. C., who has filled the vacancy since January, has been named chief of military justice for the Staff Judge Advocate Section.

A Very Long Wait For Mr. Khrushchev

Nikita Khrushchev, the Kremlin's star cut-up, has been playing the Romanian circuit and trying out some new material which, if he ever visits this country again, ought to land him a spot on the Ed Sullivan Show.

In fact, if Mr. Khrushchev had been around in the heyday of vaudeville he'd probably have billed himself as "Society's Favorite Funster" or something like that. For the truth is that when he's not playing bogey-man, this portly comedian can be a riot. It's a real shame that his Romanian audiences weren't permitted to laugh.

What Mr. Khrushev pulled on his Romanian tour was what is known in show business as "the switcharoo." Time was when he was convulsing his American fans with such lines as "We will bury you." But now he's thrown out that howler and says instead that "tomorrow the Red flag will fly over the United States, but we will not fly the flag. It will be the American people themselves."

And this beaut comes, mind you, from a man who sulked because he couldn't visit Disneyland when he played America some years ago! A man with an aptitude for fantasy such as Khrushchev's needs none of Walt Disney's fantastic creations. If anything, Disney needs him.

Ah, Nikita, grand old clown that you are! Some tomorrows never come. A man just waits and waits. Who is going to hoist that Red flag for you? Will it be Gus Hall, your leading stooge whose American Communist Party has shrunk to a small discredited band of malcontents and crackpots? Maybe Mr. Hall, remembering the Hitler-Stalin pact, could join forces with George Lincoln Rockwell, the fuehrer of the American Nazi Party, to bring off the coup.

No, Mr. Khrushchev, tomorrow and tomorrow and tomorrow we will go on raising the same old flag. Old, but we like it. It will be red, true. But it will also be white and blue and it will have stars and stripes.

In fact, Mr. Khrushchev, you yourself some years ago came up with one of your "old Russian sayings" that is so very appropriate to your dream of the Red flag. When will we fly it? You gave the best answer—"When a shrimp learns to whistle." (AFPS)

CHAPLAIN'S CORNER

Are You Awake?

By
Chaplain (Col.) Silas E. Decker
The Post Chaplain

Sleep is a natural and normal recurring condition of rest for both body and mind, during which there exists little or no conscious thought, sensation or movement.

It may be produced artificially by the skillful surgeon and becomes a great boon for his patients. It is also a condition having some similarities to functions of body organs of approaching death.

Many people are restless and light sleepers, who put off sleep, because they fear this mental state of unconsciousness. Also, there are those who are so acutely aware of life that sleep is delayed lest they lose some benefits of this conscious awareness.

There are sleepwalkers and those who walk through life partially asleep. They have "eyes and see not, ears and hear not." They are like students who "miss the problem" and others who are "indifferent to their responsibilities" as "children of God". You find these people everywhere you go. They are reluctant to volunteer for community service which could benefit themselves and their neighborhood. They want all of God's blessings, but are stingy in sharing what blessings they have with others.

The religious program of this command, for Jews, Catholic and Protestants provides another opportunity for you to demonstrate that you are not sleeping when you should be awake.

Liberty and Communism

In all modern republics, political parties are considered a part of the democratic process. They are a necessary element of good government. A political party is a group of citizens permanently organized for the purpose of securing the election of their candidates to governmental office and for winning public opinion in support of their policies.

The Fathers of our American Republic were skeptical of political parties, and hoped that the new Federal Government could be operated without what they called "public factions." But they soon learned the convenience of political parties.

After the Federal Government was put into operation, the Federalist Party continued under the leadership of Alexander Hamilton. Thomas Jefferson, with the assistance of James Madison, organized an opposition party known as the Republican-Democratic Party.

All democratic representative governments permit, and even encourage, the existence of two or more parties. In Great Britain and the United States, the two-party system prevails. In France and many other parliamentary countries, the multiple-party system is found.

Both the two-party and the multi-party systems offer the voters the choice of alternatives among candidates and programs. This is something that no totalitarian regime permits.

In the U.S.S.R., the Communist Party, like the Fascist and Nazi Parties, is an elite and authoritarian group of power. It was Lenin who developed the Communist Party as an elite group composed of "professional revolutionists," not mere workers.

The Party was to serve as the "vanguard of the masses." It was to direct the Revolution, and to staff and control the dictatorship. The Communist Party was to be a hierarchy of authority, with a military organization governed by "iron discipline."

There were barely 23,000 Communists in March 1917. At Stalin's death in 1963, the membership had reached 6,013,259.

In 1956, Khrushchev announced that there were 6,795,896 full members and 419,909 candidate members for a total of 7,215,505. The total population of the U.S.S.R. at this time was 200,200,000.

The Communist Party, according to the Party Statutes is governed by a Congress of the Communist Party which meets irregularly. But the Congress is tightly controlled by the permanent Central Committee (now numbering 175 members and 155 alternate members).

The Central Committee, in turn, is rigidly controlled by the Party Presidum (the former Politburo) of 11 members.

SURGEON SAYS

Care for Your Feet

By 1st Lt. Murray Arenson, MSC
MAH Podiatry Clinic

It is generally recognized that the efficiency of a fighting unit depends upon the physical fitness of its personnel. Included in physical fitness is a pair of sound feet, capable of standing up under the demands made upon them.

Whatever work we do, our feet take the brunt of the activity, and it is only because they are the best shock absorbing mechanism devised by nature that we are able to get about at all.

There are various minor conditions which occur among military personnel, which could be easily prevented or controlled.

Ingrown toe nails caused by improper cutting of the nails or poorly fitted shoes and socks can be an incapacitating condition. When the toe nail has penetrated the skin, an infection usually follows.

Once the condition is present, professional care is a necessity. Prevention, therefore, becomes a most important factor.

The toe nails, unlike the finger nails, must be cut straight across and not down into the corners, and not shorter than the length of the toes. Shoes and socks must be of proper length, so that no increased pressure is brought to bear on the nails.

Cleaning of the nails should only be with a brush, soap and water. Using a sharp object only weakens the skin around the nail and only makes penetration of the nails easier. If an individual has the type of nail which is curved downward, he is more apt to be bothered with this condition.

Cotton or gauze packing separating the edge of the nail from the skin will usually cushion this sensitive area. Cutting a "V" or notch in the center of the nail is of no value as the nail grows in a straight-forward manner and not from side to side.

Warts, a common condition that looks like a simple callous, are caused by a particular type of virus. These warts, when they appear on the bottom of the feet, are usually painful or at least irritating. Because the skin of the sole is thick and body weight presses the wart inward, the treament is usually prolonged and inconvenient. Although the exact preventive measures are not known, routine hygienic care

The Judge Says . . .

Let's go back to the question, "Can he afford it?" The dealer wants to sell John the car and will do anything he can to make John believe that he can afford it.

The actual cost of the car is far higher than the total amount of money that passes through the dealer's hands. John must leave a margin of future income each month that he can draw on for expenses, and also leave a margin for emergencies.

Now let us consider some of the automobile expenses that John will have . . . not emergencies, but just plain day to day expenses.

First he is going to have to register the car in some state. Very likely he will have to pay a purchase or excise tax. This may approach $100 if the car is fairly new. Then there must be insurance.

Massachusetts and New York are two of the many states that say you must have liability insurance. If you hit someone, and can't show that you were driving carefully, then you, not some insurance company, will be paying for the injured party.

If the car is fairly new, John will want to buy collision insurance, for reimbursement of car damage. And then fire, wind, and theft, usually called comprehensive coverage.

If John is 25 years old or over, he can keep the total insurance cost close to $100; if under 25, the insurance premium total may well run as high as $200.

Then comes the repair bills. Two months driving and the car needs a ring job. Cars have a way of getting sick... quite often, in fact.

And then gas and oil. Liability insurance, collision insurance, inspection, registration, comprehensive coverage, excise, sales and use taxes, new ring job, grease, tires, battery, snow tires, chains, parking fees, traffic fines, swing costs . . . two, three, four, five hundred dollars.

How much out of each paycheck, and yet enough left to still pay the monthly finance payments? And to still have a reserve margin for emergencies, for the risks of buying on time.

Too many risks, too many expenses. . . miss a payment and the whole balance is in default.

This may seem like a bad dream, but it's true. It's far easier to consider all these things ahead of time than to get into the living nightmares that plague those who are up to their necks in debt.

This is serious talk and serious business. We are talking about men dealing in the commercial world where other men are out to make money.

Caveat emptor, goes the old Latin phrase, "Let the buyer beware." There is no deal so hot that it can't wait for a bit of inspection. Caveat emptor . . . if you can't afford it, you don't need it. Above all, consider before you buy.

Medal of Honor Centennial Opens

Capt. Ola L. Mize, winner of the Medal of Honor during the Korean War and now a student in the Officer Associate Career Course of The Infantry School, participated in ceremonies marking the centennial of the nation's highest award, last week.

Capt. Mize, along with Luther Skaggs, a World War II Marine Corps veteran who also holds the Medal of Honor, participated in wreath-laying ceremonies at the Tomb of the Unknowns in Arlington National Cemetery.

The ceremonies officially opened the eight-month-long observance of the Medal of Honor Centennial. The observance began July 12 and will continue to March 25, 1963. July 12 commemorates the signing by President Lincoln of the Congressional resolution authorizing award of the Medals of Honor to Army personnel.

During Civil War

The first such medals were presented on March 25, 1863, to six soldiers who took part in a mission designed to cut off the entire state of Tennessee from the Confederacy by sabotaging a railroad which ran between Marietta, Ga., and Chattanooga, Tenn.

Capt. Mize, latest living recipient of the decoration, earned his place in the medal's and the nation's history June 10 and 11, 1953, while assaulting enemy strongholds in the bitter fighting of the Korean War.

The last act of Army heroism to earn the Medal of Honor (posthumous award) was that of Sgt. Gilbert G. Collier on July 19 and 20, 1953, in Korea during an assault on a heavily fortified enemy position.

Army installations throughout the world will observe the centennial with appropriate services.

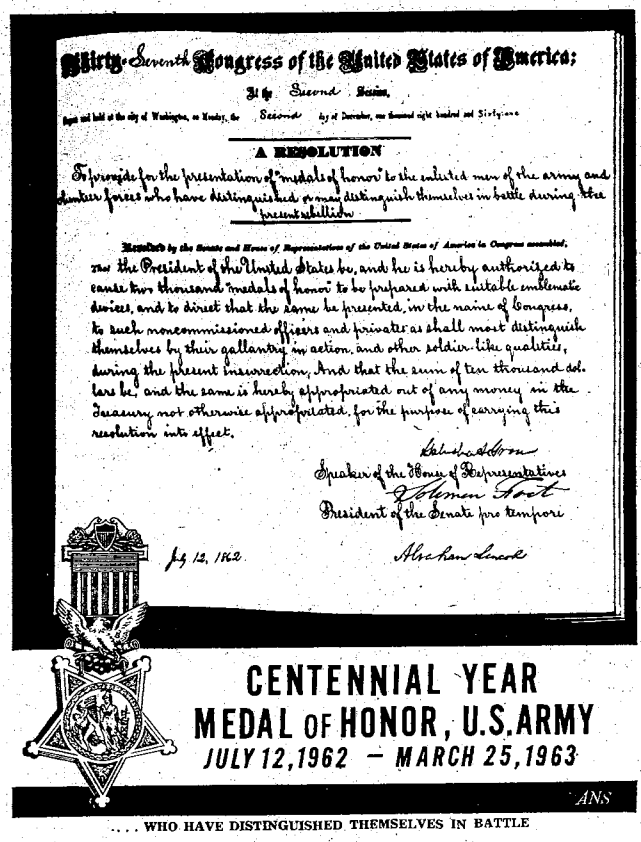
Exhibit Tells Story

In Washington, D.C., an Army exhibit tracing the history of the medal and its winners will go on display for the first time July 12 in the House of Representatives Office Building. The following day the exhibit, titled "Above and Beyond the Call of Duty," will move to the Senate office Building.

During the period July 14 through 17, it will be housed in the Lincoln Museum. From July 23 to 26 it will be on display at the Smithsonian Institution and then will be shown on the Concourse of the Pentagon from July 18 through 20.

Following the Washington showing, the Army exhibit will begin a nationwide tour.

Mize Was Sergeant



In June, 1953, Capt. Mize, then a sergeant, rescued a wounded soldier out on outpost duty, inflicting heavy casualties against attacking enemy forces.

Although he was blown down by artillery and grenade blasts three times, "he took his few men and moved from bunker to bunker, firing through the apertures and throwing grenades at the foe . . . When an enemy soldier stepped from behind a comrade, prepared to fire, Sgt. Mize killed him, saving the life of his fellow soldier. He fought his way to (a friendly machine gun) position, killing ten of the enemy and dispersing the remainder . . ." his citation reads.

Mr. Skaggs, now president of the Congressional Medal of Honor Society, earned his medal in July, 1944, during a Marine assault against the Japanese on Guam.

Then a private first class, Mr. Skaggs was critically wounded when a Japanese grenade exploded in his foxhole and shattered the lower part of one leg.

His citation states "he applied an improvised tourniquet and, while propped up in his foxhole, gallantly returned the enemy fire with his rifle and grenades for a period of eight hours, later crawling unassisted to the rear to continue the fight until the Japanese had been annihilated."

Thirty-Seventh Congress of the United States of America;

At the Second Session

Begun and held at the city of Washington, on Monday, the Second day of December, one thousand eight hundred and Sixty-two

A RESOLUTION

To provide for the presentation of medals of honor to the enlisted men of the army and marine forces who have distinguished or may distinguish themselves in battle during the present rebellion.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, that the President of the United States be, and he is hereby authorized to cause two thousand medals of honor to be prepared with suitable emblematic devices, and to direct that the same be presented, in the name of Congress, to such noncommissioned officers and privates as shall most distinguish themselves by their gallantry in action, and other soldier-like qualities, during the present insurrection. And that the sum of ten thousand dollars be, and the same is hereby appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the purpose of carrying this resolution into effect.

Gen. MacArthur Describes Soldier

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The following is an exerpt from an address given by General of The Army Douglas MacArthur before the cadets of the U. S. Military Academy upon his acceptance of the Sylvanus Thayer Award for service to his nation. In this exerpt, Gen. MacArthur tells the cadets of the men they will someday lead.)

". . . And what sort of soldiers are those you are to lead? Are they reliable? Are they brave? Are they capable of victory

"Their story is known to all of you. It is the story of the American man at arms. My estimate of him was formed on the battlefield many, many years ago, and has never changed. I regarded him then, as I regard him now, as one of the world's noblest figures; not only as one of the finest military characters, but also as one of the most stainless.

"His name and fame are the birthright of every American citizen. In his youth and strength, his love and loyalty, he gave all that mortality can give. He needs no eulogy from me, or from any other man. He has written his own history and written it in red on his enemy's breast . . .

"In 20 campaigns, on a hundred battlefields, around a thousand camp fires, I have witnessed that enduring fortitude, that patriotic self-abnegation, and that invincible determination which have carved his stature in the hearts of the people.

"From one end of the world to the other, he has drained deep the chalice of courage. As I listened to those songs of the glee club, in memory's eye I could see those first World War, bending under soggy packs on many a weary march, from dripping dusk to drizzling dawn, slogging ankle deep through mire of shell-packed roads; to form grimly for the attack, blue - lipped, covered with sludge and mud, chilled by the wind and rain, driving home to their objective, and for many, to the judgement seat of God . . .

"I do not know the dignity of their birth, but I do know the glory of their death. They died unquestioning, uncomplaining, with faith in their hearts, and on their lips the hope that we would go on to victory.

"Always for them: Duty, honor, country. Always their blood, and sweat, and tears, as we sought the way and the light. And 20 years after, on the other side of the globe, again the filth of murky foxholes, the stench of ghostly trenches, the slime of dripping dugouts, those boiling suns of the relentless heat, those torrential rains of devastating storms, the loneliness and utter desolation of jungle trails, the bitterness of long separation from those they loved and cherished, the deadly pestilence of tropical disease, the horror of stricken areas of war.

"Their resolute and determined defense, their swift and sure attack, their indomitable purpose, their complete and decisive victory—always victory, always through the bloody haze of their reverberating shot, the vision of gaunt, ghastly men, reverently following your password of duty, honor, country . . ."

Medical Wives' July Coffee Held

Martin Army Medical Wives held their monthly coffee last Friday at the Custer Terrace Officers Club.

The meeting was called to order by the chairman, Joan Schonholtz. The new medical and dental intern's wives were introduced. They are: Mesdames Thomas L. Cook, Larry W. Goetz, Frank B. Gray, Leland F. Haney, Francis L. Hulse, Louis L. Leatherman, Jackie D. Stephenson, Jerry L. Cremer and James E. Kennedy.

The new staff members were also introduced. They are: Mesdames Howard R. Scroggs, William H. Brakefield, Gerald M. Fendrick, George Kamatsu and Norman Sanders.

Farewells were said to Mesdames Robert Bernstein, Edwin S. Busch, Phillip A. Defferl Paul Seibert and Allen Talbot.

Coffee and tea were served with melon balls and sweet breads. The serving table was decorated with a decorative melon.

Hostesses were wives of the orthopedic and neuro-psychiatric departments.

Officers for the coming year are Joan Schonholtz, president; Patricia Pitts, vice president; Elizabeth Barber, secretary; Lillian Miller, treasurer.

Mrs. W. A. Todd made the announcement that the Fort Benning Womens Club is looking for recipes for their new cook book.

The meeting was adjourned by the chairman until the next coffee to be held Aug. 10.

Jan Rose's Woman's Club Diary

Although many post activities take a break in the hot summer months, just as many of the Woman's Club programs are continued throughout the year.

Piano lessons in the School of Music continue, as well as charm and modelling classes for teenagers. The Duplicate Bridge players meet each Monday at 12:45, and the Party Bridgers at 1 p.m. each Thursday, both at the Country Club.

The Thrift Shop continues to offer quality used merchandise at reasonable prices each Tuesday and Thursday from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. If you haven't been in since the addition of the second building to the Thrift Shop operations, you will be amazed at the wonderful changes, with adequate room for all merchandise to be seen and examined.

Mrs. David Hunter is the new chairman for the Red Cross Hospitality coffee sponsored by the Woman's Club. Volunteers serve coffee the last Friday each month at Martin Army Hospital in the Red Cross Recreation Room to patients and staff. If you are interested in helping to hostess one of these events, held from 10 to 11 a.m., please call Mrs. Hunter at MU 9-0322.

Mrs. Daniel French, 545-3990, is eager to begin compiling the new cookbook to be published by the Woman's Club this fall. Won't you please write down a favorite recipe or two? She will be happy to pick it up if you call her, or you may drop it by or send it to Mrs. Daniel French, 304-D Stewart Ave., Fort Benning, Ga.

Mrs. Tom Speaks At July Lunch

Ladies of the Antitank Missile Committee were hostesses for the July brunch for The Infantry School's Weapons Department recently in the Main Officers' Open Mess.

The theme was "Hawaii," with the North Porch of the Main Mess decorated with a flowing fountain and tropical plants and the Corregidor Room with leis. The tables, covered with green cloths and fresh cut flowers, added to the decor. Ladies of the Weapons Department were dressed in muu - muus. Members and guests were given leis on arrival.

The guest speaker for the occasion was Mrs. Harry K. Tom who discussed the hula, both ancient and modern. Mrs. Tom then demonstrated many Hawaiian musical instruments and the hula.

Seventeen new members were welcomed to the Weapons Department by Mrs. Raymond B. Marlin, wife of the Weapons Department director.

NCO Distaff Doings

BY MARIE FOWLER

The big word around the NCO Wives Club these days is "new."

We have new officers, new committee chairmen, the ceramics group is getting a new oven—and as you can see by the by-line, I am the new correspondent. It is a real challenge to follow in the steps of Marianne Kelly, who did such a wonderful job on publicity the past year.

We want, we need, new members! Our membership drive got underway with a bang recently at our monthly luncheon in Crane Hall. Inez Haines, Ruth Fogle, Mary Woodall, Linda Laugford and Tillie Fuscardo were welcomed into the club by Virginia Lamb, NCO Wives Club president.

The drive will continue until the first of October, with the member presenting the most new members receiving a bond. So get busy gals, and invite those new neighbors.

Departing members were honored at a coffee in Crane Hall recently. Farewells were said to Rachel Cinard, Margaret Criswell, Edith Sassner, Mary Evans, Mary Baksi, Burgi Edwards, Norma Maris, Nancy McCloud and Ingo Plandoski.

Souvenir gifts from the club were presented the honorees by Virginia Lamb. We regret losing these fine members and extend best wishes as they go to other state-side posts, and to such places as Ethiopia and Iran.

Our next meeting will be a luncheon in Crane Hall on Wednesday, August 8, 1 p.m. A cordial invitation is extended to all NCO wives. Come join us, won't you? For information or reservations, call 545-3606 or MU 9-1865.

29th Infantry's 1st Battle Group Welcomes New CO, Deputy CO

By Pvt. Larry Morgan

The 1st Battle Group, 29th Infantry, 1st Infantry Brigade, received a new commander and deputy commander in a recent change of command.

Col. Warren D. Hodges took command of the battle group, succeeding Col. Lawrence S. Reynolds.

Assuming the post of deputy commander was Lt. Col. John J. Lissner, succeeding Maj. Frederick Walters who became the battle group's executive officer.

Attends Service Schools

Col. Hodges brings to the battle group a blend of the theory of modern warfare plus knowledge gained through practical experience.

He attended the Command and General Staff College in 1954 and 1955; the Armed Forces Staff College in 1958, and the Army War College at Carlisle Barracks, Pa., in 1961 and 1962.

The new commander was commissioned into the Army Coast Artillary in 1943, and was switched to the Infantry in 1944. During World War II he served with the 134th Infantry, 35th Division and between 1946 and 1949, was assigned to Gen. MacArthur's Honor Guard in Japan.

Won Silver Star

The colonel, winner of the Silver Star with one Oak Leaf Cluster; the Bronze Star with two Oak Leaf Clusters, and a Purple Heart, was with the 38th Infantry in Korea from 1950 to 1952.

He served with the G-3 section of the Continental Army Command from 1952 to 1954, and was a member of the U.S. Military Advisory Group in Greece between 1955 and 1958.

He commanded the 2nd Armored Rifle Battalion, 54th Infantry from 1958 to 1961.

He is an avid sports fan, having nurtured the interest during college at the University of Kansas where he played football and baseball.

A former classmate of present New York Yankee manager Ralph Houk, Col. Hodges was offered a Yankee contract in 1940 but passed it up to continue his education. He has played much Army baseball and football, and is a golf enthusiast.

Col. and Mrs. Hodges are the parents of two children; Richard, 17, and Wanda, 16.

Col. Lissner Decorated

Col. Lissner, winner of the Silver Star and the Bronze Star with Oak Leaf Cluster, has been in the Army 17 years, seeing combat in France and Italy during World War II, and in Korea.

He entered the Army in 1941 and was commissioned in 1942. He commanded Company F of the 517th Parachute Infantry Regiment, participating in the now famous Battle of the Bulge.

After the war, the new deputy commander taught at Cardinal-Farley Military Academy in New York as professor of Military Science and Tactics.

In Korean War

The Korean Conflict interrupted his teaching. In 1951, he went to Korea, assigned to the 15th Infantry Regiment, 3rd Division. In 1952, he commanded the 3rd Battalion, 503rd Airborne Infantry Regiment until 1955 at which time he became advisor and civilian component for the Massachussetts National Guard.

In 1958, he returned to France, Paris this time, to serve with Support Operations Task Force Europe, where he stayed until his present assignment to the 29th.

Col. and Mrs. Lissner are the parents of three children; John, five, James, three, and Mary Ann, eleven months.

SOLDIER OF MONTH

The June "Soldier of the Month" of The Infantry Center Troop Command is Sp4 Thomas Pierce of Headquarters and Headquarters Company. He was recently presented a plaque by Lt. Col. Louis J. Maricle, deputy commander of TICTC.

Capt. Ward New CO in 1st ARB

Capt. Thomas J. Ward has assumed command of Company C, 1st Armored Rifle Battalion, 38th Infantry.

The new commander received his commission at Fordham University in 1955 and recently completed the Officers Career Course. He previously served with the 1st Battle Group, 15th Infantry, 3rd Infantry Division, in Germany.

PX Celebrates 21st Anniversary

In conjunction with the celebration of the 21st anniversary of the Post Exchange, employees are being honored for their years of service.

Some 1,858 men and women throughout the Exchange Service will be recognized this year. Of these, 51 work here at Fort Benning.

Frank D. Chester, retail supervisor, is celebrating his 25th year with the Post Exchange. For his service he is to receive a gold watch.

Awards will be presented in ceremonies on Monday.

On Monday the Post Exchange will celebrate either its 67th or 21st anniversary.

The Army and Air Force Exchange Service traces its ancestry to the early Roman wars. It was not until 1895, however, that the War department published a general order officially recognizing the Post Exchange as an integral part of the military service.

The Exchange Service, as it is known today, took shape in 1941 with the formation of the Army Exchange Service.

The following are scheduled to receive awards on Monday:

20 Years Service: James C. Blackmon, Aubrie C. Ellis, Fred R. Johnson.

15 Years Service: Clate Blackmon, James Blackmon, Paris Guthrie, Otis B. Day, Peter Holloway, Lucille Jenkins, Fannie H. Stubbs, Millard H. Veasey.

10 Years Service: Ada S. Kemp, Lester Smith, Edward H. Tucker, Barbara A. Roswell, Charles C. Johns, Ernest P. Prim, Earline L. Hardaway, Otis Thornton, Lillian M. Thornton, Douglas C. Phillips Jr., Ruby D. Washington, Katie B. Hammonds, Hubert H. Boswell Jr., Mattie L. Bain.

5 Years Service: Margaret A. Clark, Ollie G. Chester Jr., Charles B. Moore, Agnes G. Clement, Margaret E. Pigate, Jack Franklin, Robert E. Friese, Royce L. Brown, James C. Marbury, Lois Goodman, Kathryne Patrick Myro E. Burke, Harold A. Tutt, Robert E. Morawitz, Charlotte E. Carr, Willine Brazille, Jimmie L. James, Algebra McBride, Clara Duke, Alexander Wright, George C. Allen, Charles E. Tracy, Jean Martin.

Good Turn Is Done For Scouts

Thanks to volunteer services of members of Company D, 806th Engineer Battalion, Boy Scouts in this area of Georgia will soon have a first class site for their outings.

Members of the company are presently constructing latrine and bathing facilities at the camp site at Ellerslie, Ga., approximately eight miles north of Columbus.

All work done by the engineers is accomplished on Saturdays on a volunteer basis.

Aside from sanitary facilities, the engineers are clearing six areas, each approximately one acre in size, of safety hazards.

The engineers have also done some work on access roads to facilitate entering and exiting the camp site.

Total Loss

SH Gas Chamber Burns Wed Night

The 2nd Division's gas test chamber on Sand Hill yesterday was declared a total loss following a midnight blaze that consumed the two - room, wooden structure.

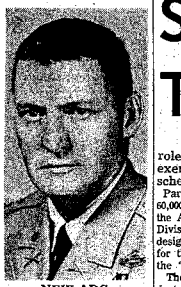
Cause of the fire has not been established. No one was injured during the fire, the building being locked and empty at the time.

Discovered at approximately 11:20 p.m. Wednesday by Sgt. Herbert Pearsall of Hqs. and Hqs. Company, 2nd Division, the fire raged until the 11:50 p.m. arrival of two fire trucks and eight firemen from both Sand Hill and Main Post, Fort Benning.

Laying 1,500 feet of fire hose to bring water from the Sand Hill Sunday School area, firemen extinguished the blaze in less than 20 minutes after one room had collapsed and the second had been half consumed.

Men of the division's Hqs. and Hqs. Company were scheduled to run through this building at 7 p.m. yesterday on their annual gas test. The building was used for a similar test Wednesday afternoon by troops of Company D, 9th Infantry.

The fire was reported at approximately 11:25 p.m. Second to arrive at the scene was Sgt. Louis Johnson of the 2nd Military Police Detachment, who aided in directing fire trucks to the area.



Two medical personnel from Martin Army Hospital arrived shortly afterward with an ambulance.

Arriving at 11:50 with the fire trucks was Fort Benning's Fire Chief, Gilbert A. Ward.

The wooden frame building had been used by the 2nd Division's chemical section to test the effects of three different type gases.

Division Gets a New ADC

NEW ADC
Colonel Corley

One of the Army's most decorated Infantry officers was recently assigned to the 2nd Infantry Division, and will serve as assistant division commander.

Colonel John T. Corley assumed duties Monday as the division's second-in-command. Colonel Corley recently returned to the United States from a post as Deputy Chief of Staff, Headquarters, United States Army Elements SHAPE, and stationed at Copenhagen, Denmark, a position he held since June 1960.

Colonel Corley is perhaps the most decorated officer still on active duty with the United States Army.

For his actions in World War II, he won the Distinguished Service Cross, Silver Star with Biggest '62 Strike War To Use Div.

The 2nd Infantry Division will play a key role in the U. S. Army Strike Command's largest exercise of the year, Exercise SWIFT STRIKE II, scheduled August 5 through 19.

Participating along with some 60,000 combat-ready forces of the Army and Air Force, 2nd Division troops will don newly designed aggressor uniforms for their role as members of the "Red" force.

The exercise will be conducted in North and South Carolina in a 90-mile wide corridor extending from Ft. Jackson, S. C., to Ft. Bragg, N.C.

Acting as part of the Army's III Corps the 2nd Division will be joined by Ft. Bragg's 82nd Airborne Division and the 2nd Logistical Command from Ft. Lee, Va., with engineer, artillery, transportation, medical, aviation and related service units.

Purpose of SWIFT STRIKE II is to test the reaction capability and readiness of selected units under the most realistic conditions possible.

Pitted against the 2nd Division and other "Red" force units will be "Blue" forces containing troops of the 101st Airborne Division, Ft. Campbell, Ky., the 1st Reconnaissance Squadron, 15th Armored Cavalry, Ft. Hood, Tex., and the 4th Transport Terminal Command, Ft. Story, Va. The transport unit will serve as logistical command.

The "Blue" force will be under the command of XVIII Airborne Corps.

The U. S. Strike Command Headquarters, headed by General Paul D. Adams, will direct the entire exercise. Strike is a unified command operating directly under the Joint Chiefs of Staff with headquarters at MacDill Air Force Base, Fla. It is a mobile, flexible, highly-trained force comprised of the combat - ready units of the Continental Army Command and Tactical Air Command stationed in the continental United States.

The maneuver area, which is about 100 miles long and 40 miles wide, lies south of U. S. Highway 1 in North and South Carolina and is almost entirely comprised of privately - owned property.

95 in Washington, D. C. For Indian Head Reunion

Ninety-five men from the 2nd Division, including Major General Charles H. Chase, commanding general, are in Washington, D. C., attending the 41st annual reunion of the 2nd Indianhead Division Association.

The group left by bus and airplane this week and will stay at the Statler Hilton Hotel, where the 3-day reunion, which began Thursday, is being held.

Included in the group is Gen. Chase's party of six, a composite platoon of 36 plus a platoon leader, platoon sergeant, and a 5-man firing squad, and an honor guard.

General Chase's party includes Lieutenant Colonel Ralph K. Jones, executive officer of 2nd Infantry Division Artillery, Lt. Col. Floyd L. Johnson who has been executive officer since March assumed new duties as Division Artillery S-3.

Lt. Col. Jones is no stranger to the Division Artillery, having commanded 15th Artillery for two months last year. Following this initial assignment, Col. Jones was selected to be the G-1, 2nd Infantry Division in September 1961 serving in that capacity until being reassigned to Division Artillery.

Commissioned in 1943

Col. Jones was commissioned at the United States Military Academy in June 1943. His foreign service tours include Europe, India, Pakistan, and Hawaii.

Lt. Col. Jones wears the Bronze Star medal, the American Defense medal, American Campaign medal, European African Middle Eastern Campaign medal, World War II Victory medal and United Nations medal.

Counter Guerrilla Maneuver Ends

MANEUVERING IN NORTH GEORGIA FOR 'CLEAN SWEEP'

By 87th Inf PIO

The recent 10 day counter guerrilla field problem conducted by the 87th Infantry at Blairsville, Ga., has ended—but the unique concept of the exercise will live on in the minds of the men who participated.

Called Operation "Clean Sweep" the basic problem consisted of two opposing forces—one of 150 men (Company D, 87th Infantry) assisted by a team of men from Special Forces, and another of about 1000 men whose mission was to surround and destroy the smaller force.

Population Participates

In order to gain the advantage, both sides relied upon the cooperation of the Blairsville population — a small Georgia community located 250 miles north of Fort Benning numbering a little less than 1,000 people.

To accomplish this, a great deal of importance was placed

All Over At Va Beaches

By 38th Infantry PIO

Amphibious training at Little Creek, Virginia, ends today for units of the 2nd Division.

The 2,228-man 38th Infantry Task Force, the last of five 2nd Division units to undergo the amphibious training, is scheduled to make its beach assault today.

Motor convoys left Sand Hill and Kelley Hill on July 3 and 7 carrying the 38th troops and equipment the long way through Georgia and North and South Carolina to the amphibious training area at Little Creek, Virginia.

Early Monday morning, July 9, the entire task force was welcomed to Little Creek by Colonel Maurice C. Holden, task force commander, and Brig. Gen. John C. Miller Jr., commanding general, Landing Force Training Unit, Atlantic, and received an orientation on what to expect during the next two weeks.

Immediately thereafter training began. The first week's training consisted of preparing vehicles and equipment for an amphibious assault, dry and wet net training, familiarization with amphibious vehicles, ship to shore movement and the employment of the air and naval support involved in an amphibious operation.

The second week was spent in preparation for embarkation, debarkation, and the actual beach landing.

After today's assault landing the task force will assemble in a predetermined bivouac area to make preparations for the trip home. Personnel and equipment will be shipped back to Fort Benning by rail and are expected to arrive Sunday afternoon.

"Red" force will be composed of units of the Tactical Air Command's 9th Air Force, while the "Blue" force air element will be the 19th Air Force.

Each air force will have a strong force of tactical fighters and bombers, as well as reconnaissance and troop carrier units, all supported by Air Force weather, communications and administrative support elements.

TAC's 839th Air Division will become the 32nd Air Force (Provisional Troop Carrier) supporting both sides of the exercise, utilizing C-130 Hercules C-123 Providers, C - 119 Flying Boxcars and SA-16 Albatross in its aerial armada.

The 9th Air Force is providing six squadrons of jet fighters F-100s and F-105s) and two units of reconnaissance aircraft (RB-57s and RF-101s for Exercise SWIFT STRIKE II.

Without the cooperation of citizens and property owners in the huge maneuver area, the maneuver would be impossible, and adequate training of ready forces in the exercise could not be attained. Even the largest military reservations are no longer adequate in size for training forces of this magnitude. Protection of private property is a major consideration in planning for SWIFT STRIKE II.

Taking Command

Aviators Parade For New Major

By 2nd Aviation PIO

Major Paul B. Robison assumed command of the 2nd Aviation Company during a company parade in honor of the exchange of command last Saturday at Lawson Field.

Major Robison's predecessor, Major Arlen R. Suddaby, departed Ft. Benning this week for the Command and General Staff College at Ft. Leavenworth, Kan. Maj. Suddaby commanded the 2nd Aviation Company for the past two and one-half years.

During his period of command the aviation company emerged from a small support company to a full strength Infantry Aviation Company.

The company flew an average of 1300 hours each month.

During this period, the company participated in the Division Intensified Combat Training Program, engaged in various field exercises, and performed field maintenance while in a simulated combat situation in order to estimate the company's potential not only as specialists in aviation, but also to show that the men are capable of reverting to fighting infantrymen.

Machine Gunner Chosen 1st Inf. Soldier for July

By 1st Infantry PIO

A machine gunner has been chosen 1st Infantry Soldier-of-the-Month for July.

The selection of Private First Class Corbitt O. Dalrymple of Company C was made by a board composed of the battle group sergeant major and two company first sergeants.

In the competition held last week, Pfc Dalrymple won over representatives from all 1st Infantry companies. Dalrymple is a machine gunner assigned to Company C.

Selection for the monthly honor is based on the individual's appearance, military knowledge and bearing, job competence and knowledge of current world events.

Pfc Dalrymple will receive a $25 United States Savings Bond for his selection.

Major Robison, a senior aviator of approximately 4,000 logged hours, began his aviation career in 1943 as a Marine Corps 2nd Lieutenant aviator cadet. Eight months later he was a 1st. Lt. While serving in the Pacific, he was awarded one of the highest decorations an aviator can receive, the Distinguished Flying Cross.

The DFC is awarded for "heroism or extraordinary achievement while participating in aerial flight."

Following the DFC, Major Robinson was awarded the Navy Air Medal with seven gold stars.

Major Robinson also holds a Senior Army Aviator's Badge and an Army Commendation medal for meritorious service.

Mrs. Sanders' Code: Get The Most Out of Each Day

BY KAYE LEE

Experience has taught Mrs. Cecil M. Sanders, wife of Lieutenant Colonel Sanders, 23rd Infantry commander, to get the most out of every day.

An active and interesting life was put to a test during the early days of World War II when she spent 37 months in a Japanese prison camp. This was a test of both her courage and her faith.

Born in Manila

Mrs. Sanders, whose given name is Alyce Jeanne, was born in Manila, Philippine Islands. She now calls the San Francisco Bay area home.

Mrs. Sanders became a seasoned world traveller at an early age when she accompanied her parents on periodic trips to Europe and the Far East. They also made visits to Africa.

Having visited nearly all countries of the world, Hong Kong remains her favorite city. As a result of her travels, she speaks five languages besides her native English — French, Spanish, Italian, Portugese and Tagalog (the native tongue of the Philippines).

On July 15, 1941 she married the then Lieutenant Sanders in Manila. They were separated several months later when Pearl Harbor was attacked and her husband was sent to Bataan. From this time in December 1941 until November 1945, her husband's capture and imprisonment by the Japanese following the fall of Bataan remained unknown.

Taken Prisoner

She herself was taken prisoner and interned January 1942 by the Japanese upon the capture of Manila. She and her parents were liberated February 5, 1945 when the tanks of the U.S. Army's 1st Cavalry knocked down the gates of their prison. At the time Mrs. Sanders weighed a scant 85 pounds.

The prison was located on the campus of Saint Thomas University, formerly administered by the Dominican friars. At times, when referring to the time spent in this prison Mrs. Sanders says she learned a great deal about human relations as a "student" there.

After being liberated, Mrs. Sanders and her parents came to the United States. It was not until November 1945 she learned her husband had also survived his imprisonment.

After being reunited, Mrs. Sanders continued her life of travel, but this time as the wife of an Army officer in peace time.

The Sanders are the parents of two daughters, Janice and Joan. Mrs. Sanders is active in both Main Post and 2nd Division distaff affairs. She is a Red Cross Nurse's Aid, sings in the Main Post Protestant Chapel choir (she is a past president of this organization), and was the organizer of the School of Music at Fort Benning.

MRS. TODD'S LAST COFFEE WITH 1ST INFANTRY WIVES

Goodbye for Mrs. Todd Held at J. Larson Home

The monthly coffee for ladies of the 1st Infantry was held in the home of Mrs. James Larson on Yeager Drive recently. It was the farewell coffee for Mrs. Walter B. Todd, wife of Colonel Todd, battle group commander.

Assisting Mrs. Larson were Mrs. Ted Gordinier and Mrs. Robert Kendrick. Iced coffee was served in the dining room by Mrs. Charles Austin. The centerpiece was an oriental arrangement of Fuji mums.

Mrs. John Yoesock presented poem she had written depicting Mrs. Todd's association with the 1st Infantry ladies for the past year. Mrs. Larson presented Mrs. Todd with a silver vegetable dish as a memento from the ladies. The Todds will depart Fort Benning soon to begin a tour in Korea.

Newcomer's welcomed to the group were Mrs. Robert Sanabria, Mrs. Harry H. Ball, Mrs. Ray Colvin, Mrs. Graham Lowden, Mrs. Tom McAniff, Mrs. Charles Murkenhire and Mrs. Frank Widrig.

In Korea, where he commanded the 24th Regiment, 25th Infantry Division, in 1950, he fought through three major campaigns.

Again he was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross, Silver Star with two Oak Leaf Clusters, and Legion of Merit.

Colonel Corley was awarded, in addition to the above listed decorations, the Purple Heart medal, the American Defense Service medal, American Campaign medal, European - African - Middle Eastern Campaign medal, World War II Victory medal, Army of Occupational medal, National Defense Service medal, and Korean Presidential citation.

Colonel Corley is a 1938 graduate of the United States Military Academy.

Joining the 1st Infantry Division in 1939, he trained with that unit at Fort Benning, Georgia, and remained with it until 1946.

As commander of the Third Battalion, 26th Infantry Regiment, he participated in eight major campaigns from North Africa through Sicily, France and Germany. In October, 1944, Colonel Corley accepted the surrender of Aachen, the first major German city to fall to American forces.

Returning to the U. S. after World War II, he served as tactical officer at the Military Academy from 1947 to 1947. He then attended the Command and General Staff College, Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, and graduated in 1948.

Assigned to the First Army Headquarters, Governors Island, New York, Colonel Corley served as assistant G - 1 in charge of plans until 1950, when he left for Korea.

Returning to the United States in 1951, Colonel Corley was assigned to the Army Field Forces, Fort Monroe, Virginia, where he served as Chief of Infantry Branch, plans and operations section, until 1953.

Upon graduation from the Army War College, Carlisle Barracks, Pennsylvania, in 1954, he went to Seventh Army Headquarters, Stuttgart, Germany, where he served as assistant chief of staff, G-1.

He returned to the United States in 1957, and in September of that year assumed duties as director of The Infantry School communications department, Fort Benning, Georgia. In March 1958, Colonel Corley assumed duties as the director of The Infantry School's Ranger Department, serving in that position until he was assigned overseas in 1960.

Colonel Corley is married to the former Mary Elizabeth Buckley, of Cambridge, Massachusetts. They have four sons and three daughters, and reside on the Fort Benning reservation.

SOLDIER-OF-THE-MONTH . . . Colonel Stanley L. Harding, left, commanding officer of Division Artillery, congratulates the June 2nd Infantry Division Soldier-of-the-Month, Specialist Four James H. Jones. He was also artilleryman for June. Specialist Jones enlisted in the Army 15 months ago.

on psychological warfare and propaganda. The guerrilla force, called "Patrick's Patriots" had the advantage of coming to Blairsville a week before the remainder of the 87th Infantry.

The actual "fighting" consisted of many realistic war games which took place in the mountainous country surrounding Blairsville. While the guerrilla force constantly harrassed the battle group force with raids, one patrol after another would have the job of capturing the guerrillas.

At the start of the exercise, 87th Infantry commander, Col. Ralph H. Hughett, met with representatives of the town to explain how important their help was toward the successful completion of the problem.

122nd Sig. Bn. Welcomes Sergeant Major F. Hodges

By 122nd Signal Battalion PIO

The 122nd Signal Battalion said farewell to Sergeant Major Richard J. McCoy and welcomed Sergeant Major Francis O. Hodges, who was recently promoted to his present rank.

Sergeant Major McCoy has departed the battalion for duty with the 394th Signal Battalion in Youngsan, Korea.

Prior to coming to the battalion, he was chief signal noncommissioned officer at Fort Jay, New York.

His successor, Sergeant Major Francis O. Hodges, was formerly first sergeant of the Forward Communications Company of the 122nd Signal Battalion.

Before reporting to the battalion in September of last year, Sergeant Major Hodges served with the 122rd Signal Battalion, Wurzburg, Germany, as first sergeant of the Forward Communications Company. Prior to this assignment, he was non-commissioned officer in charge of the signal office in Kassel, Germany, with the 7772nd Signal Service Company.

During his 19 years of Army service, Sergeant Major Hodges has been awarded the Bronze Star for service during World War II, Army Commendation Medal, presented to him upon his departure from the 123rd Signal Battalion, and the Good Conduct Medal with five clasps.

Sergeant Major Hodges lives with his wife, Mary, and three children, Libby, Cathy, and Stephen at 502 Harris Circle, Fort Benning.

Clean Up Project Gets Top Priority at 9th Inf

By 9th Infantry PIO

The 9th Infantry "Manchumen" have added landscaping to their many talents.

"Operation Clean Up" was one of the major projects taken up by the 9th Infantry this week.

Gallons of paint have been put on walls and ceilings of barracks and grass has become a permanent sight in company areas.

The big clean up was necessary due to the long absences of the 9th's personnel while participating in several field and garrison maneuvers in surrounding southern states.

TROOPING THE LINE AT ESSEBAGGER FIELD

CORDON OF 1ST INFANTRY TROOPS LINE DEPARTURE ROUTE
Colonel Todd, in Sedan, given Last Salute by Troops

For Col. Todd

Farewell Parade Held at 1st Inf.

A review in honor of Colonel Walter B. Todd, former battle group commander of the 1st Infantry, was held Saturday at Kelley Hill.

Units from the 1st Infantry, 15th Artillery, 69th Armor, the 2nd Engineers Battalion, and the 2nd Aviation Company participated in the Essebagger Field event.

Division Officers Are Guests

Guests included Major General Charles H. Chase, 2nd Infantry Division commanding general, Colonel Louis A. Kunzig, Jr., division chief of staff, and officers and wives from 2nd Division units.

Lieutenant Colonel Ted E. Gordinier was the commander of troops. As the troop units moved onto the field, the 2nd Division band played "Adjutant's Call". During the ceremony the color guard was posted and Colonel Todd inspected the units.

Colonel Todd was presented a 1st Infantry scrapbook by Sergeant Major Wilson R. Mouser. The book contained clippings, photos and mementos of Colonel Todd's period of duty with the 1st Infantry.

A highlight of the review was the final phase as the units marched past the reviewing stand and six aircraft from the 2nd Aviation Company flew by in a low altitude formation. Three of the aircraft, L-19's, were trailing colored smoke as they flew past in review.

As Colonel Todd left the battle group area, his route of departure was lined on both sides with troops from the 1st Infantry and supporting units.

187th Anniversary of the Chaplain Corps

We Look to Chaplains for Special Guidance — Stahr

At the January 1962 Command Conference held at Fort McNair, Va., Mr. Elvis J. Stahr Jr., former secretary of the Army said, "We look to our chaplains for the special guidance and professional competence needed to insure success in (proclaiming the basic truths of the Judeo-Christian religion throughout the Army)."

Looking forward to celebrating their 187th year in the Army, the Chaplain's Corps has watched over the religious influence in Soldiers' lives since its founding July 29, 1775.

Called by Congress

The legal origin of the Chaplain's Corps goes back to that day in 1775 when a resolution of the Continental Congress supported General George Washington's call for clergymen to serve with the armed forces.

In addition to the duties of clergymen, the chaplains of Washington's Army were school masters for troops, regimental historians and librarians.

Throughout the revolutionary period chaplains were assigned to regiments, separate units and hospitals. During the War of 1812 there were four Regular Army chaplains plus various state militia chaplains. Throughout the war between the states the Federal Army provided one chaplain for each volunteer regiment.

At the outbreak of World War I there were 67 chaplains on duty with the Army. During the period of actual warfare 2,363 chaplains were commissioned in the Regular Army and National Guard. Shortly after World War I the Office of Chief of Chaplains was created.

During World War II, 8,896 chaplains served in the U. S. Army. Of these 1,783 received 2,453 decorations. Four chaplains died in Japanese prison camps, 78 were killed in action and 262 were wounded.

In the Korean Conflict eight chaplains were killed, three died while prisoners of war, 26 were wounded or injured in action and 565 received 681 decorations.

Mr. Elvis J. Stahr Jr., until recently the secretary of the Army, gave an address at the Command Chaplain's Conference at Fort McNair January 26, 1962. His subject was "The Challenge of the Chaplaincy."

In his address Mr. Stahr said, "I am convinced that man's survival in this age of fast-breaking scientific achievements and challenging sociological change will depend in the final analysis on his active faith in God and his willingness to permit the basic concepts of the Judeo - Christian religion to influence his behavior.

"The responsibility for proclaiming this truth throughout the Army rests on all of us, but we look to our chaplains for the special spiritual guidance and professional competence needed to insure a full measure of success in this mission."

SPORT NEWS

Re-Opening of Golf Course Scheduled for August 1

Sand Hill Golf Course manager, Harry B. Goforth, reported earlier this week that he anticipates the reopening of the golf course by August 1.

Closed for repairs on May 25, the course has been open to vehicles with sections of pipe and heavy equipment since that date. The installation of a water sprinkling system has been underway.

Construction Nearing Completion

Construction of the sprinkling system has been completed except in the area of fairway eight. Pipe for this section should be installed by the end of this week.

Manager Goforth reports that the fairways and greens are in fair condition in some spots. Fairways and greens numbered one, two, three and nine have shown progress in developing a grass cover. The fairways and greens numbered four through eight are in the incubation state as far as grass cover is concerned. Actual construction work is nearing completion in these areas. It takes approximately three weeks for grass to sprout, root and grow sufficiently for play. "In time with the proper care and work the course will be a good playing course," says manager Goforth.

Golf pro Paul Wolfe has plans for the future players on the course. An advisory committee figures in this planning. Members would be made up of people familiar with golf, golf course layouts and golf course improvements. They would serve in an advisory capacity.

Sub-committees for greens, tournaments, trophys and ways and means would be formed. Other plans for the course program include golf clinics and ladies participation.

Further development of the golf course involves a new pro shop and a new club house. Manager Goforth reports that this is still in the planning stage and will not materialize in the immediate future.

Prelim's Set Pace in Net Tournament

Progress of the 2nd Division Tennis Tournament has shown itself in the amount of matches played since it started.

Four winners were produced in the eliminations held on July 12, the tournament's starting date. On the following two evenings eight more winners were produced for the elimination phase.

Field Eliminating Itself

By Monday night the field had narrowed itself down. Names began showing up on the winners card more than once.

The matches Tuesday evening revealed the competitors for the championship. Ronald Groshong defeated Larry Hall and Clay Mobley defeated Eugene Breeskin. This development paired Groshong and Mobley for a duel in the semi-finals.

Gerald Ristau defeated Dudley DeRouen in a Tuesday night match and Ted Gordinier defeated William Francis. The second semi-finals match will be between Ristau and Gordinier.

Finals for both singles and doubles events will be tomorrow. The doubles tournament started Wednesday. Results had not progressed enough for record at the time of this writing.

Tennis Tournaments Conflict in Sched's

Tennis tournaments were so popular this past week that one had to be cancelled because of conflict of schedules.

The 2nd Infantry Division Tennis Tournament had so many participants that matches were scheduled into July 21, which was the date for the Service Club Two Tournament.

Miss Madeline Parks, service club director, made the cancellation announcement Monday. The service club tournament was sinelined until further notice.

Trophy's Winner Will Be Selected

Final tabulations for the Commanding General's Sports Trophy will be made as soon as the 2nd Division Swimming Competition and Tennis Tournament are completed.

The winning team in the swimming competition will receive 50 points. Teams placing second and third will receive 30 and 10 points respectively.

The tennis tournament is an individual entry event. No command or unit group may enter a representative team. However, contestants may claim points for the Commanding General's Sports Trophy. In both singles and doubles events, the first place winners can claim 20 points. The runner up can claim 10 points.

The tennis tournament is scheduled to conclude Saturday. The swimming competition dates are July 23-27.

Top Army Tennis Players Open Trials for Interservice Play

BY BILL GARDNER

Twenty-five top players began trials here recently to determine the team to represent the Army in the Interservice Tennis Tournament to be held on the post Aug. 15 to 17.

Dan Sullivan, pro from St. Petersburg, Fla., who is in his fourth year as coach of the Army team, said this year's candidates look like the best ever.

And they have come up with some pretty good teams, evidenced by last year's sweep, which included the Open singles and doubles, and senior singles and doubles championships, and the coveted Leech Cup, symbolic of team victory.

Round Robin

The trials, which run until Aug. 12, will be a round robin affair, with each man playing a singles and doubles every day, and each man playing against every other man at least twice.

When it's all over and the dust has settled on the courts, six men in the Open and two, possibly three, in the senior's division, will be named to the team.

Sullivan admits this is a lot of tennis but said, "This gives everyone an opportunity to show their best."

The men will come from posts all over the world, each having been selected by Army areas to represent them.

Outstanding Players

Included among the team aspirants are some nationally ranked players.

Pvt. Ronald E. Holmberg, representing The First Army, is ranked seventh nationally and is a former member of the Davis Cup team. In 1961 he was half the doubles team that won the U.S. Indoor championship.

In 1959, while playing for Tulane University, he and a teammate won the National Intercollegiate doubles championship.

The nation's 14th ranked player, 2nd Lt. Norman Perry, will represent The Second Army.

Perry, was a member of last year's team and won the Interservice singles title.

Another Second Army representative, PFC Robert S. Bowditch Jr., is a former member of America's Junior Davis Cup team.

Sp4 Leslie E. Dodson from Sixth Army, played on last year's team and is another ex-Junior Davis Cupper.

1st Lt. John R. Newman, former star for Trinity University in San Antonio and ranked number one in Texas in 1960, will be one of the U. S. Army, Europe, representatives.

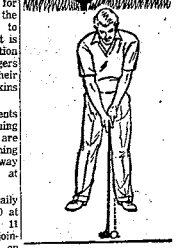
In the senior's division, Sgt. Bill Millikan, 1961 Interservice singles champ, will be back.

In addition, his partner in the senior doubles championship, Sgt. Ray Antigant, will come from the U.S. Army, Pacific, to help defend their joint title.

Fort Benning's lone representative, Brig. Gen. Royal Reynolds, Jr., will compete in this division.

YAC Swim Team Has Openings

The Youth Activities Club Swimming team has openings for boys and girls who are interested in competitive swimming. Openings exist in all age groups including 8-year-old and under, 9 - 10-year-old, 11 - 12-year-old, 13 - 14-year-old and the 15-year-old and up brackets.



Sp4 George W. Watkins, coach of the team, stated. "The only qualification for joining the team is that the individual must be able to swim at least 50 meters. It is hoped that through instruction and practice the teenagers will greatly improve their swimming ability," Watkins continued.

The team has several events scheduled for the remaining season. Two away meets are planned along with the coming home contests. The first away meet is set for July 27 at Moultrie, Ga.

The team practices daily (Monday through Saturday) at Carey Pool from 9:45 to 11 a.m. Anyone interested in joining the team report there on Monday morning.

WHICH WOOD WHERE? . . The problem of which wood to use in the varying lies is perplexing to the beginner. As a general rule, the neophyte will get better results off the tee with the brassie — No. 2 wood — than with the driver. The spoon — No. 3 — is preferable for fairway lies. It gives distance, height and roll. Unless the ball is practically sitting up in the fairway, steer clear of the brassie. With the spoon the ball is played off the inside of the left heel; knees are slightly flexed; head is over ball. Caution: Don't scoop; clubhead loft will get the ball up.

Sports Car Fans Will Test Skill In Sunday Rally

All officers, enlisted men and civilians interested in participating in a sports rally are asked to meet at the Main Post Exchange parking lot at 8:30 a.m. this Sunday.

The rally is to be held at Tifton, Ga., in conjunction with the Turner Air Force Base Sports Car Club.

Benning personnel will leave the post Sunday morning and meet the Turner club at Tifton. The cars are scheduled to leave Tifton by 2 p.m. and follow the course to Turner Air Force Base.

The group will stay at Turner AFB for dinner and swimming. A swimming suit, jacket and tie should be brought by those interested in staying for the Sunday evening dance.

Doughboy Schedule Released

An 11-game schedule is on tap for the 1962 edition of the Fort Benning Doughboy's football team.

Kicking off the season will be three consecutive home games beginning Sept. 8 with Gordon Military College from Barnesville, Ga., followed Sept. 15 with the Camp LeJeune Marines, and after a week's rest, on Sept. 29 with the Pensacola Naval Air Station eleven.

On Oct. 6, the Doughboys will engage Fort Eustis, Va., in a gridiron contest. The following week-end, Oct. 14, its back to Virginia for a go against Fort Lee.

Two home games follow. The first is with the Marines from Quantico, Va., Oct. 20, and after taking the next weekend off, the Doughboys take on a semi-pro team from Atlanta, the Rebels.

The next three contests will be on the road and include games Oct. 9 with Fort Belvoir, Va.; Oct. 17, Fort Dix, N.J., and a return match Oct. 24 with the Atlanta Rebels.

The final game of the season will be at home against the Fort Campbell eleven.

Home games will be played in Doughboy Stadium. Admission is free.

Kick-off time for all local games except the Sept. 8 match is 8 p.m. on Sept. 8 the game will begin at noon.

Today's Sportrait

STAFFORD

Today's Sportrait features Maj. Mebane G. Stafford, Command and Staff Department, Armored, The Infantry School, from Eagle Pass, Tex. He graduated from Texas A & M College where he starred in football holding down the offensive end position. The major entered the service in July, 1950.

Stafford began Judo training in Viet Nam in 1958 with the Danang Kawaishi Judo Club and the Vietnamese Military Judo Club. In 1960, Maj. Stafford activated the Fort Rucker Judo Club and was team captain of this club from 1960-61.

In 1961, he joined the Fort Benning Judo Club. He has acted as president of the club for the past two years and became team captain in early 1962.

Maj. Stafford was awarded the Black Belt in a recent Judo Promotional meet held at Brant Wells Field House. To obtain the coveted Black Belt, a person must have an excellent tournament record, pass competitive type contests and written examinations in all the preceding White and Brown Belt degrees. A Black Belt holder must have proven himself worthy. An average period of time to obtain this belt is four years of continuous Judo.

Maj. Stafford was awarded the Brown Belt in 1959 in an Atlanta Judo Promotional Tournament.

In a recent tournament held here he led his team to second place in team competition. In a Savannah Judo tournament he placed second in the heavyweight division to Ernie Cates, all-Marine Judo champion.

A member of AAU, Judo Black Belt Federation of American and Shufu-Judo Yudanshakai of Washington, D. C., Maj. Stafford stands six feet, one and one-half inches and weighs 205 pounds. He will depart Fort Benning soon to attend the Command and General Staff College, Fort Leavenworth, Kan. He hopes to continue to be active in the Judo field.

Maj. Stafford says if a club is available at his next station he will join. If not, he will try to activate a club in that area.

29th Infantry Ends Student Brigade Winning Streak With a 6-4 Victory

By SFC Bismarck Stith

The 29th Infantry nine edged the Student Brigade 6-4, to end a 19-game winning streak. Charles Spell, Student Brigade righthander, suffered his first setback after winning 12 straight victories in 12 starts.

Roy Bowers, starter for the Infantrymen, held the Tigers in check until the seventh inning. James Battle came on in the eight frame with a two run lead and held the Tigers scoreless in the ninth to be credited with the win. George Rogers' two singles and Albert Rockwell's double led the 29th.

Charles Spell was charged with the setback, although he paced his team at the plate with a solo home run along with two singles.

TSB Blasts TICTC

Linwood Oates, TSB fireball pitcher, held The Infantry Center Troup Command to five hits and three runs while his teammates blasted three TICTC pitchers for 12 hits and 15 runs.

Jessie Joyce's triple and a double; Jesus Herrans and Bill Silva, both with a double and a single each, along with Bob Kinlaw's two singles paced the hard hitting Tigers at the bat.

Floyd Olczak was the losing pitcher.

151st Engineers ended a three-game winning streak of the 10th Artillery Redlegs by handing them a 7-2 setback.

Paul Snyder hurled a four-hitter, holding the Redlegs scoreless until the seventh inning when James Bryant and Larry Covey scored two runs. Edward Beers's and Hurbert Gossett's two singles led the Engineers in the hitting department.

Joe Winchester was charged with the loss.

Signalmen Trip TICTC

The 156th Signal defeated TICTC, 9-6. The Signalmen took advantage of TICTC's nine errors to cop the victory.

Allan Santure hurled the win while Marty Leicht took the loss. Harold Stokes and Milan Puregraski paced the Signalmen with two singles each. Fred Valentine and Floyd Olczak led TICTC at bat with two singles each.

Engineers Dump 428th

The 151st Engineers clobbered 428th Medics in 96-degree heat, 11-4.

Charles Bishop pitched the win while James Williams took the defeat. The Medics blasted Bishop of the Engineers for nine hits but were able to score but four runs.

Medic righthander, Williams, gave up eight hits along with 11 runs. Curt Drummond's double and a single, along with Edward Beers's triple and a single, paced the Engineers at the plate. Charles Story, led his teammates with three singles for four trips.

Charles Smith, John Krause and Ed Stansbury contributed two hits each for the Medics.

29th Nips Signalmen

Rain in the sixth inning of an afternoon contest gave the Infantrymen a early win over Signalmen.

The Two-Niner's had a six-run lead to take the win and continue their winning streak.

James Battle twirled a one-hitter up to the six inning to get credit for the win. Don Rumvelt took the setback.

Engineer Units Meet For Title

Company D, 806th Engineer Battalion downed Company C, 544th Engineer Battalion in the semi-finals of the Engineer Softball Tournament. In other action the 114th Engineer Company defeated the Headquarters Company of the 498th Engineer Battalion.

The 114th and Company D will now face each other in a three game series for the championship of the 151st Engineer Group league. The winner will play in The Infantry Center softball championship playoff.

Company D won its game 12 to 3. The credit for the win goes to pitcher Sp5 John W. Harris.

PFC Lawrenre W. Hayes sparked the team by hitting two home runs for the 806th. The second time he walloped the ball out of the field with 2 men on base.

OUTDOOR OUTLOOK

By Pvt. Charles Hitchcock

FISHING AROUND THE POST

A three and one-half pound bass was caught in Weem's Pond recently by Sgt. Gernard Kuiper of the 156th Signal Battalion. Sgt. Kuiper hooked the bass while using live bait, a shiner.

Due to the hot weather, fishing seems to be slow, although fishermen are still bringing out some good strings of bream and catfish from King's Pond. The best catches have been made at dawn and dusk.

RUSS POND DRAINED IN EMERGENCY

Due to a break in a 16-inch water main under Russ Pond, the Wildlife Management Section of the Fish and Game Association was forced to drain the pond. This came as a great disappointment to the Fish and Game Association.

Earlier this year Russ Pond was stocked with catfish and rainbow trout. In the short span of time the trout were in the pond, they had grown from a size of 1 to 2 inches to a size of 5 to 6 inches.

The growth of these trout was closely watched by both the Fish and Wildlife Service and the State of Georgia. This was the first time that trout have grown and thrived so well in this part of Georgia.

Efforts were made to save the fish as the pond was drained. About 400 of the small catfish were saved and put back in the pond when it was refilled. Despite all the efforts of the Fish and Game Association, the trout could not be saved. Muddy water and clorine from the broken water main were too much for the delicate trout. Plans are now being made to put this pond back into operation.

Dental Health Series

Why, When and How To Brush the Teeth

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the eighth in a series of articles presented in the interest of better dental health.)

By Maj. Charles W. Dobson
Preventive Dentistry Officer

Why brush the teeth? — Brushing removes food particles from the accessible surfaces of the teeth and aids in keeping the teeth clean, thus helping to prevent dental disease.

When should teeth be brushed? Teeth should be brushed immediately after eating. Bacteria that are always present in the mouth begin acting on fermentable carbohydrates, especially sugars, within a few minutes to form acids that are capable of dissolving tooth enamel. Removal of fermentable food particles before acid can be formed helps to prevent tooth decay.

How should teeth be brushed? One frequently taught method of toothbrushing is this: Place the bristles of the brush against the gums, just beyond the necks of the teeth, and pointing toward the roots of the teeth move the brush firmly so that the bristles sweep over the gums and the teeth. Brush the upper teeth downward and the lower teeth upward. Brush the chewing surfaces with a scrubbing stroke.

Ask your dentist to demonstrate the best tooth-brushing method for you during your next visit.

What kind of toothbrush should be used? The brush should have a flat brushing surface and firm bristles. It should be small enough to get at all surfaces. The number of tufts is not so important as the size and shape of the brush.

What about dentrifices? The primary purpose of a dentrifice is to help the brush clean the teeth. Brushing without a dentrifice may be beneficial to dental health; however, a good dentrifice will aid in the cleaning.

Clinical studies have shown that a dentrifice with fluoride is of value in helping to prevent decay if it is used as part of a conscientious program of home and professional dental care. Several toothpastes now contain fluoride. Ask your dentist for further information.

What about mouthwashes? The usual commercial mouthwash has no medicinal value.

Deadline Near For TIC's Photo Contest

With the Aug. 10 deadline less than a month away, entries in the 1962 Infantry Center Photography Contest are lagging behind last year's record total, according to post crafts director, Hugh E. Cook.

The local contest is open to all military personnel on active duty, assigned, attached or stationed in the Columbus-Phenix City area. It is the first step leading to the Third Army, All-Army and Interservice contests.

Cook urged all interested personnel to get entry blanks and rules at the Post Craft Shop, Bldg. 394, Doughboy Stadium. He also reminded all who entered that instruction is available at the Special Services Photo Laboratory in the same building.

Competition is in two groups, black and white single photographs and color transparencies.

In each group are seven categories including portraits, babies and children, animals and pets, sports or action, scenic, military life and experimental.

The experimental category includes such results as may be achieved through varying the angle and exposure of camera, light source and printing or chemical processes.

Open New Mess Hall

Company B, 806th Engineer Battalion (Construction), recently opened its first mess hall converted to gas-burning stoves.

Since completion of recent intensified training, the 806th has embarked on an extensive modernization program. The opening of the new mess hall was one of the fine results.

The new mess hall is a rehabilitated World War II mobilization building in which new equipment has been installed. The gas-burning stoves replace coal-fired equipment.

Other improvements include a linoleum floor, glass-enclosed service line, self - service condiment table and a redecorated interior.

Participating in the official opening of the mess hall were Lt. Col. William M. Wilson, battalion commander; 1st Lt. David R. Hansen, Company B commander, and SFC Roland M. Orrvar, company mess steward.

Two EPO Officers To Attend School

Two members of the Editorial and Pictorial Office of Fort Benning's U. S. Army Infantry School have been selected to attend service schools.

Capt. Thomas E. Aaron, chief of the Special Editing Section, will attend the Command and General Staff College at Fort Leavenworth, Kan.

Capt. George V. McCoy, chief of the Visual Aids Section, will attend The Infantry School's officer career course.

WACS WIN AGAIN . . . Accepting the Best Mess in Temporary Building plaque from Lt. Col. Louis J. Maricle, deputy commanding officer of The Infantry Center Troop Command, is SSgt. Martha Elder, mess sergeant of the WAC Company. June marked the fourth consecutive month the award went to the WAC Company. Looking on is Capt. Francis Powell, WAC Company commander.

Companies Of 1st ARB Get Honors

Five companies of the 1st Armored Rifle Battalion, 58th Infantry, recently received awards from Lt. Col. Charles T. Caprino, battalion commander.

Sharing the battalion's "Best Company of the Month" award are Company D, 69th Armor, commanded by 1st Lt. James F. Foley, and Company C, 66th Armor, commanded by Capt. W. W. Atwood.

Company A, 58th Infantry, commanded by Capt. William E. Viau, and Company C, 66th Armor, tied for the reenlistment award with a rating of 100 per cent.

Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 58th Infantry, commanded by 1st Lt. John J. Allen, and Company B, 58th Infantry, commanded by Capt. Richard B. Schaefer, received letters of appreciation from Col. Caprino for having attained 89 per cent participation in the recent bond drive.

DONNELLY

John J. Donnelly is presently first sergeant of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, The Student Brigade.

Upon entering the Army in 1943, Sgt. Donnelly received basic training at Camp Barkley, Tex. At the conclusion of his initial training, he was sent to Fort Ord, Calif., to await orders for an overseas assignment.

Receiving his orders, the first sergeant, proceeded to New Caledonia in the Pacific Theater with some 180 other soldiers. He was to receive specialized training in scouting, patrolling and night fighting.

At the conclusion of this specialized program of instruction, E-8 Donnelly was assigned to the 2nd Regiment, 7th Infantry Division, and took part in the Leyte and Okinawa campaigns in August, 1944. His next assignment was in Korea, where he stayed for a period of almost two years.

Returning to the U. S. for honorable discharge, the top grader reenlisted seven months later, and was assigned duty to the 3rd Infantry Division at Fort Campbell, Ky. Next came an assignment in Italy with the 350th Infantry Regiment, followed by an assignment as a basic training instructor at Fort Dix, N. J.

Overseas orders sent him to Korea in 1951, where he was assigned a position as a first sergeant with the 2nd Infantry Division.

He returned to the U. S. in 1953, and within a two-year period he was again given orders for duty in a foreign largest city, Berlin, he served as first sergeant and sergeant major with the 6th Infantry Regiment, and later with the 272 MP Company.

Donnelly earned the grade E-8 in March 1960. He resides on post with his wife, Lillian, and two daughters, Debra, 11, and Dorene, 8.

Foreign Students Plan Tour

Thirty-two Allied students attending Associate Infantry Officer Career course No. 5, of The Infantry School, are scheduled to visit several business establishments and public utilities in Columbus Tuesday.

The 10 countries represented by the students are Brunna, Lebanon, Luxembourg, Nicaragua, Nigeria, Philippines, Saudi Arabia, Viet Nam, Thailand and Sudan.

Post EM Given Award for New Procedure Idea

Brig. Gen. Royal Reynolds Jr., assistant commandant of The Infantry School, presented MSgt. Aubrey E. Wells, operations sergeant, S-3, The Student Brigade, with a Department of the Army Certificate of Achievement recently at ceremonies held at brigade headquarters.

The achievement award was given to Sgt. Wells for the adoption of his suggestion. The operations sergeant devised an entirely new procedure for processing travel orders, payment of travel, and per diem allowances for participates of the Third Army Rifle and Pistol Championships held annually here.

Advisor New DNRI Deputy

Lt. Col. Charles A. Kilbourne has been appointed deputy director of the Infantry School's Department of Non-Resident Instruction.

He succeeds Lt. Col. Morency R. Dame who has assumed command of the Ranger Mountain Camp at Dahlonega, Ga.

Col. Kilbourne, who was graduated from Western Washington College in Bellingham in 1948 with a bachelor of arts degree, will assist Col. G. Harry Huppert, director of DNRI, in furnishing Infantry, airborne and Ranger training literature in support of The Infantry School non-resident instructional programs and in maintaining liaison with the agencies supported.

Before coming to Fort Benning, the new deputy served in Laos as a military adviser.

Before his MAAG assignment, Col. Kilbourne was chief of information for The Alaskan Command and was at Fort Bragg, N.C., as a member of the staff and faculty of the Special Warfare School.

During World War II, he was with the 96th and the 7th Infantry Divisions and was a member of the initial beachhead party on Saipan. On Okinawa he won the Silver Star, the Army's third highest award for valor.

Col. and Mrs. Kilbourne, the former Shirley A. Kronquist have two daughters, Sally Jane, 13, and Barbara Ann, 8.

DEFENSE AID

The USSR signed a 10-year military aid treaty with North Korea on July 6, 1961, pledging complete defense and financial aid.

Col. Scroggs Named MAH Exec. Officer

Col. Howard A. Scroggs has been named executive officer of Martin Army Hospital.

He succeeds Lt. Col. Thomas A. Laughlin, who has been assigned to the Combat Developments Group at Brooke Army Medical Center, Fort Sam Houston, Texas.

Born in Cherokee, Okla., Col. Scroggs was graduated with an A.B. degree from Central State College at Edmond, Okla., an M.A.H. (Master of Hospital Administration) degree from Northwestern University in Chicago, and a Ph. D. degree from the State University of Iowa in Iowa City.

He has served at the Medical Field Service School at Brooke Army Medical Center since 1959 as an instructor in hospital administration, and as deputy director and chief of the Department of Administration's Residency and Research Unit.

For the past five years, Col. Scroggs has been affiliated with Baylor University, Waco, Texas, as professor of hospital administration.

The Colonel served in the Oklahoma National Guard as an enlisted man from Jan. 3, 1936, to Sept. 14, 1940, when he entered the Regular Army. He was commissioned Oct. 17, 1942, at Camp Barkley, Texas.

Among his awards and decorations is a Bronze Star Medal with Oak Leaf Cluster.

HIGH-RIDING T.V.

A tiny TV camera and transmitter rode in the nose cone of a Redstone missile early in 1960 and successfully sent back pictures of the target area before, during and after impact.

Top OCS Graduate

Officer Candidate Ocie B. Stone topped the other 185 members of Officer Candidate Class One, 51st Company, 5th Student Battalion, The Student Brigade, with a score of 483 points of a possible 500 on the Combat Proficiency Test.

Not to be outdone by Candidate Martin, 17 of his fellow classmates surpassed the 450 point mark and the class average was a remarkable 410.

The Combat Proficiency Test is a five-part test, four of which are timed.

The other tests are the mile run, which must be completed in six minutes for the maximum points, the 40-yard low crawl, completed in 23 seconds; the horizontal ladder crossing in two minutes and the rum, dodge and jump in 22 seconds.

is the best method to use.

One of the most widely misunderstood problems affecting the foot is arch trouble. Most people believe a flat foot is a sick foot. This is not true. The height of the arch has very little bearing upon the health and strength of that foot. Only when the foot cannot perform the work for which it is called upon to do, and only when the bony architecture of the foot is in an improper position, can that foot be diagnosed as the so-called flat foot.

This problem is not as common as one might think. When a problem does exist, it may be a muscular or ligamentous strain of the foot. This problem, and we have all had it at one time or another, is just one way for nature to show us we have abused our feet. It is usually temporary and does not exhibit the same picture as the flat foot.

After a rest period the foot will return to normal, and it is at this time the individual should begin a program of gradual strengthening of these structures. Remember, walking is still one of the best exercises.

Excessive perspiration of the feet can cause not only embarrassment, but also discomfort and pain. Remember, your feet are housed in coverings at least 16 hours a day, they are constantly working during your activities, they get wet in the rain and dirty on the ground. All these factors cause perspiration accumulation and the skin of the feet rebels.

The feet may feel tired. There may be a burning sensation and blisters may even form. Prevent this condition with hygienic measures. A cool water foot soak is also beneficial.

The conditions described are those most commonly encountered in the foot of the soldiers here. With intelligent routine care, proper hygiene and professional care when necessary, your feet will function normally and give you the best possible service.

Reviews Honor Reserve, Guard Units

National Guard and Army Reserve units called to active duty last year during the Berlin crisis passed in farewell reviews Tuesday and today, marking the completion of their active duty tours.

The units will depart post in early August for their home stations.

Farewell ceremonies for 12 National Guard and Army Reserve units were conducted Tuesday at Chapel and Stilwell Fields.

Many Spectators

Attending the colorful ceremonies were Lt. Gen. T. J. H. Trapnell, commanding general of the Third U. S. Army, Brig. Gen. John E. Kelly, deputy commanding general of The Infantry Center and civilian spectators.

Tuesday at Chapel Field, six medical units were present for the observances. The 128th and 129th Medical Companies of Fairhope and Mobile, Ala.; the 215th Medical Company of Lake Village, Ark., National Guard units, and the 389th and 891st Medical Detachments of Cleveland, Ohio, and Atlanta, Reserve units, paraded with personnel of the 428th Medical Battalion to which they are attached for training.

The ceremonies began as Gen. Trapnell, Gen. Kelly and Lt. Col. Raymond J. Caldbeck, trooped the line.

Col. Caldbeck is commanding officer o fthe 428th Medical Battalion.

Receiving unit certificates of achievements signed by Gen. Herbert B. Powell, commanding general of the Continental Army Command, and certificates of appreciation by Maj. Gen. Ben Harrell, commanding general of The Infantry Center, were Maj. Frederick H. DeVane, commander of the 129th Medical Company; Capt. Edward F. Machlan, commander of the 128th Medical Company; Chaplain (Capt.) Ralph Kutait, and Sgt. Bertram A. Gordy, non-commissioned officer in charge of the 891st Medical Detachment.

Lauds Unit

Addressing the medical units in their final assembly here, Gen. Trapnell lauded the medi-

Defense Department Announces New Plan to Reduce Dollar Drain

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara has outlined DOD plans for a $2 billion reduction in the annual dollar outflow by fiscal year 1966 without affecting U. S. fighting power abroad.

The Secretary explained that the gross defense expenditures entering the international balance of payments have been averaging approximately $3 billion per year. "Our objective is to reduce the Department of Defense net adverse dollar outflow . . . to $1 billion by fiscal year 1966," he said.

"This objective is to be achieved without reducing our combat effectiveness abroad or creating hardship for the individual service man or his dependents."

Mr. McNamara presented figures showing a net adverse dollar balance of $2.6 billion in FY'61, an estimated net of $2 billion in FY '62, a forecasted net of $1.6 billion in FY '63 and $1 billion FY '66.

A number of studies are now being made to find ways to stem the dollar drain. They include three points of immediate interest to the serviceman and dependents overseas on modification of overseas post exchange operations to increase the purchase of U. S. goods. The three points are;

1. Establish U. S. Brokerage service concessions at selected

Sees No Change In Family Travel

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara, explaining DOD's plan for reducing the gold outflow, said, "There is no thought being given to the halting of dependent travel overseas while maintaining current tour lengths."

Mr. McNamara cited the short-tour rotation program which involved sending a battle group to Europe recently for 6 short tour without dependents.

Promotions Up by 4,000

Washington (AFPS) — August Army enlisted promotions will total nearly 4,000 more than those for July, according to the latest figures released by the Deputy Chief of Staff for Personnel.

The largest gains are in the E4 and E5 slots, each totaling 2,000 more than July limits. The E-8 quota showed a gain of 186, while the remaining grades lest spaces in comparison to July.

By grade, the August quotas are E-9, 209; E-8, 866; E-7, 955; E-6, 2,262; E-5, 8,455; and E-4, 16,416.

As has been the case for the past several months, the list of frozen MOSs reflected litle change from July to August.

Will Unveil New Window At TIC Chapel

A new stained glass window will be unveiled Sunday as part of a Chaplains Corps anniversary commemoration at the Main Post Protestant Chapel.

The Chaplains Corps, established 187 years ago, will be honored at each service at all chapels and religious centers on the post.

Maj. Gen. Charles H. Chase, commanding general of the 2nd Infantry Division, will unveil the window at the 11 a.m. service at the Main Post Chapel. He will represent Maj. Gen. Ben Harrell, commanding general of The Infantry Center.

The theme of the window is "Creation." It pas purchased by funds contributed by the congregation.

Third Window

This is the third stained glass window to be placed in

President Signs BAQ Hike Law

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — President Kennedy has signed into law the bill which increases military quarters allowances effective next Jan. 1.

The allowances as approved are the same as the bill passed earlier by the House of Representatives and modified by the Senate.

The major difference between the two was the effec-

Nigerians Attending TIS Class

Another country has been added to the list of nations which send military men to be trained at Fort Benning's renowned Infantry School.

Attending the 19-week associate officer career course No. 5 are Maj. Patrick Andrew Onyibo Anwunah and Capt. Hassan Usman Katsina, the first Nigerians to train here.

Before coming here, Maj. Anwunah was assigned as a company commander with the 2nd Battalion, Queens of Nigeria Regiment.

Capt. Katsina was General Staff officer III, in the 3rd Brigade headquarters.

cal units for their cooperative attitude and the success of their training program since their call to active duty in October.

After the ceremonies at Chapel Field, which ended with the units passing in review, Gen. Trapnell and Gen. Kelly departed for Stilwell Field.

There, similar departure ceremonies were conducted for transportation and ordnance units and a military police company.

They included the 131st and 322nd Ordnance Companies, National Guard and Army Reserve units respectively of Anniston, Ala., and Dover, N. J.; 138th Transportation Company, National Guard unit of Cocoa, Fla.; 414th and 674th Transportation Companies, Reserve units of Greenville, S. C.; and Orlando, Fla.; and the 105th Military Police Company, National Guard unit of Utica, N. Y.

After trooping the line with Gen. Kelly, Gen. Trapnell presented the outstanding award of the day to a member of the 105th Military Police Company.

To Sgt. Myron Matteson, Gen. Trapnell gave the Soldier's Medal, approved by The Infantry Center and the Department of the Army. Matteson was awarded the medal for his heroic action in rousing sleeping guests in the Main Officers' Open Mess in March so they were able to leave the burning building.

First Lt. Arthur E. Andrews, a platoon leader of the 674th Transportation Company, was presented the Army Commendation Medal by Gen. Trapnell for outstanding and meritorious service while on active duty.

After an address to the units by Gen. Trapnell the ceremonies were concluded.

At Stroup Field in the Harmony Church area at 11 a.m. today the 114th and 186th Engineer Companies, National Guard companies of Washington, D. C., and Brewton, Ala., will be present for the ceremonies.

Also taking part in the event will be the 381st and 489th Engineer Battalions, Reserve units of Greenville, and Pine Bluff, Ark.

At noon today at Todd Field, Harmony Church, the 114th Signal Company of Greenville, the 156th Signal Battalion of Detroit, and Company C, 204th Signal Battalion of Festus, Mo., National Guard units, and the 223rd Signal Company, a Reserve unit of Dover, will participate in the farewell to Fort Benning.

Movement of the units to their home stations will begin Aug. 1 and will be completed by Aug. 9.

installations to promote savings and investment. (The voluntary savings program last year totaled about $50 million. Mr. McNamara said it was hoped the $100 million mark would be reached this year.)

tive date. The House wanted the increase to be included in pay for October this year, although the Defense Department had recommended the January date. The Senate went along with DOD recommendations.

A major change in the quarters allowance pay other than increased pay, is the allotment provision. Under the new bill, enlisted men, E-4 and up, with over four years service, can elect to include the increase in their class "Q" allotment check which goes directly to their family, can take the increase over the pay table, or can reduce the amount now paid by check.

Both the House and the Senate were in favor of abolishing the legal requirements for allotments, taking the stand that non-commissioned officers who are trusted with the lives of men and the responsibility for the use of extensive equipment, should be permitted to be responsible for their own families.

The House Armed Services Committee said, "The Committee is convinced that this action will do much to increase the morale and prestige of our non-commissioned officer corps."

BURKE

Presiding over the first sergeant's duties at Company F, Infantry School Battalion, The Student Brigade, is 1st Sgt. Gordon Burke.

Sgt. Burke entered the Army in 1942 at Ft. Devins, Mass., and went to basic training and chemical school at Ft. Gordon, Ga. In January, 1945, he was sent to Europe and witnessed the last Allied push across Germany.

He returned to the states in September, 1945, took a 90-day re-enlistment leave, and reported back to the Chemical Corps at Edgewood Arsenal, Md. In September, 1946, he was sent to Fort Benning as a part of the 71st Chemical Company which was re-designated the 25th Infantry Combat Team. The 71st was re-activated in 1949 and he stayed with them until he volunteered for Airborne training in 1950.

Following Airborne training he was sent to the 82nd Airborne Division at Ft. Bragg, N. C. In September, 1950, he was promoted to MSgt. E-7 and assigned the duties of first Sgt. for several companies of the 3rd Battalion, 505th Battle Group, for the next seven years.

In 1957 he returned to the Chemical Corps as a member of the 11th Chemical Company at Ft. Bragg. Sgt. Burke received orders for Korea in October, 1958, and became First Sergeant of the 15th Quartermaster Company, and returned to stateside duty as a member of the 2nd Division here in December, 1959.

He was promoted to his present rank of First Sergeant E-8 on September, 1960, and in May of this year moved to his present position with TSB.

He lives in Columbus with his wife, Helen and his two daughters: Audrey 8; Alane, 19 months, and Gordon Jr., 12.

Honors 13 Civilian Employees

Thirteen civilian employees have been presented outstanding job ratings, cash awards for sustained superior performance, course completion and job improvement suggestion certificates here.

Commended for a two-year period were Mrs. Henry Montoya, a mail clerk, who received $100, and Miss Hazel E. Gibbs, chief clerk of Central Files, $150, both of The Infantry Center Adjutant General Section.

Section personnel receiving recognition for a 12-month period were Mrs. Robert H. Phelps, military personnel clerk, $100; Miss Virginia Garrett, table of distribution clerk, $100; and Howard C. Moore, military personnel assistant, $150, and Mrs. Herbert B. Payne, chief clerk of the Concurrent Travel and Orders Unit, $100.

The awards were presented by Col. Milton G. Schneider, TIC adjutant general.

Mrs. Archie E. Hatfield, a clerk-typist with the Third U.S. Army Training Aids Center, was cited for the period of May 1, 1961, through April 30, 1962. She was presented $100 and a certificate by Maj. Robert H. Schaffer, Training Aids Center director.

Six civilian employees at TIC's Supply Control and Storage Section were honored.

Russell A. Stow was presented $150 for sustained superior performance from March, 1961, to March, 1962. He is warehouse foreman assistant.

Robert P. Bollinger received $150 for a suggestion that is expected to result in a saving to the Government of $3,325 per year. He proposed a machine to replace sight and hand sorting of data cards.

Three employees were given certificates of completion of an introduction to a supervision course.

They were Guy Y. Moore, supervisor Requisition Unit, Procurement Branch; Wilson H. Bryant, a warehouseman, and Rudolph L. Cook, petroleum inspector.

Mrs. Henry C. Mills, Columbus, was also honored at recent ceremonies when she retired from Civil Service.

Window

the chapel. The first, "The Centurian Window," was installed above the altar several years ago.

The window, "Moses receiving the Ten Commandments," was installed in December, 1960.

The Woman's Club of Fort Benning plans to install a fourth stained glass window in the chapel in the near future. The theme they have chosen is "The Nativity."

A long-range plan of the Chaplains Section calls for the installation of windows featuring Old Testament themes on the congregation's right and New Testament themes on the left.

Chaplain Will Attend Conference

The Infantry Center chaplain will speak on the program of the annual meeting of the Indiana Conference South, Evangelical United Brethren Church, in Indianapolis Aug. 6 to 10.

Chaplain (Col.) Silas E. Decker will speak on the activities of United Brethren ministers serving as chaplains with the Armed Forces.

Chaplain Decker also will report on his own activities during the past three years when overseas assignments prevented him from attending the annual meeting.

The conference will be conducted at Indiana Central College.

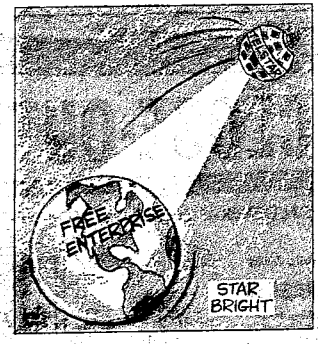
Cornflakes, Telstar: Freedom's Products

Premier Khrushchev, in a recent speech to the Russian people on farm problems in the Soviet Union, urged the Soviet citizen to diversify his diet by eating more fried potatoes and cornflakes.



Sounding something like a male Betty Crocker, the Premier even went so far as to announce that "baked potatoes are very tasty when thinly sliced, fried and salted." These remarks appeared in Pravda, the Soviet Communist party mouthpiece.

We might point out to Mr. "K" that the corn flakes, as well as many more important achievements were achieved through free enterprise.

America's new Telstar satellite, swirling around the globe in near perfect orbit, is also a product of free enterprise. Thus, an age old dream has become a reality. Now, around-the-world events of international significance will be televised as they happen.

No government direction ordered the manufacture of the corn flake. Nor, did any such direction order the television relay satellite into space. Both achievements, one large, one small, are important products of a free society.

A society where the state takes a back seat and lets the citizens do the driving.

Liberty and Communism

A Fair Trial

In Europe and America, the right of fair trial was gained only after centuries of struggles. In Anglo-Saxon law, fair trial or the formal examination of a case before a judge has come to mean, among other things:

(1) Trial by jury in criminal and most civil cases; (2) public trial or hearing of the case in open court; (3) only one trial for the same offense unless the jury disagrees; (4) no self-incrimination, meaning no compulsion for a defendant to testify against himself.

Also, (5) the accused must be confronted by witnesses and have compulsory process for obtaining witnesses in his favor; (6) the accused must have counsel for his defense; and (7) habeas corpus must insure that a prisoner is brought to a speedy and fair trial.

All of these safeguards are found in British common law and in the U. S. Constitution and its Bill of Rights. Jury trial, habeas corpus and many other safeguards of fair trial are lacking in the Soviet Union and other Communist regimes.

One of the greatest safeguards of liberty in Anglo-Saxon law is the common law rule known as presumption of innocence. In all criminal cases, the accused is presumed to be innocent until proven guilty.

In other words, the burden of proof of guilt falls upon the prosecutor. The accused is given every opportunity to rebut the evidence of guilt introduced in the trial by the prosecutor.

After both sides are heard, the jury decides the innocense or guilt. This safeguard does not exist in Communist regimes, especially in the courts of the Soviet secret police.

Tsar Alexander II reformed the judicial system of Russia in 1864, and introduced public trial and the jury system at that time. Guarantees of fair trial were included in the Constitution of 1906. Justice in Tsarist Russia of 1906-17 was far inferior to that in England, France or Germany. But progress had been made.

All this progress was destroyed by the Bolshevik Revolution. Lenin sneered at the jury system, calling it "street-corner justice." The reason for his dislike of the jury was that juries all over Russia could not be controlled by the Communist Party.

For the same reason, Lenin opposed independence of the judiciary. The Bolsheviks knew that communism could not succeed if they failed to control the judges and juries.

One weakness in Soviet law is the absence of the basic Western concept that a man is presumed to be innocent until proven guilty. Another is that during the pre-trial investigation, which is carried out under the supervision of the public prosecutor, the accused has no right to counsel.

The Judge Says . . .

The trouble with cars is that they are an easy way to get into debt fast, fast, fast. Here are a few examples—if you need them.

Recently a soldier borrowed a car from a friend for a trip and was involved in a serious accident while enroute. The liability insurance on the car applied only to the registered owner and members of his immediate family. A lawsuit instituted by persons injured in the accident resulted in a judgment for a substantial amount against the soldier. Inability to pay such judgment might destroy an individual's credit rating.

If you are purchasing or borrowing a car, assure yourself that it is covered with liability insurance protecting the registered owner, his family, and persons who operate the car with his express permission, against lawsuits.

Most finance companies and car dealers selling on credit insist that the car be covered with collision and comprehensive insurance, but are silent on the subject of personal liability insurance for the operator of the car.

Extreme caution should be exercised in signing as a cosigner or indorser on notes, especially for casual or short term acquaintances. You are liable as co-signer or indorser, if the principal fails to pay. This too may endanger your credit rating. In short, do not sign as a cosigner or indorser, unless you are fully able and willing to pay the entire obligation in the event of default for any reason whatsoever.

You may obtain advice on the legal aspect of your present obligations or proposed contracts from the Legal Assistance Officer, Office of the Staff Judge Advocate, Building 5. If the problem is important, do not telephone for legal assistance. It should be discussed in a conference at which you have all your papers available for examinatinn.

CHAPLAIN'S CORNER

Praying About It

By Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Roy D. Hidy

When confronted with a difficult or seemingly impossible, hopeless situation, prayer should be one of the first steps in the solving process.

The judge of a certain divorce court had a unique policy that solved many divorce cases before he actually heard them. When a couple came before him, he would tell them to go into a side room, and, together, kneel for about two minutes in prayer. Then they were to come back and he would hear their case.

Some said they did not pray, or couldn't pray, but he would tell them to kneel for two minutes anyway.

He said it was amazing how many couples would come back and tell him they had decided to "postpone" their divorce, and would leave arm in arm. It is next to impossible for two people who sincerely pray together to stay mad at each other.

When all seems lost, when the future appears hopeless, pray about it. Praying about a difficult situation has turned many impending defeats into victory.

SURGEON SAYS

Out-Patient Services

By Lt. Col. L. Marguerite Lines
Chief, Nursing Service, MAH

Martin Army Hospital, like every other hospital, has a story to tell about its services, its aims and its problems. The out-patient service plays a major role in the daily activities of the hospital.

The out-patient department is becoming increasingly more important in the Army Medical program. Many factors are responsible for this type of medical care. Improved methods of treatment, the use of new drugs to control infections, and accessible paramedic services such as laboratory, pharmacy and x-ray have made possible the treatment of many patients on an out-patient basis.

Treatment on an appointment system is encouraged. Treatment on the appointment system allows for time to examine the patient thoroughly, to obtain laboratory tests, to evaluate each patient and to treat and follow the patient's course to recovery.

A well-organized system helps to reduce the excessive waiting periods and the crowded conditions encountered in the hospital clinics. The appointment system also offers the patient some choice of doctors and helps establish a better doctor-patient relationship. All emergency patients and other "walk-ins" of an emergency nature are seen in the respective clinics during normal clinic hours.

One section unique to the out-patient department is the emergency room. The operation of this section is somewhat different from that of the other clinics. The emergency room is open 24 hours a day. This unit is primarily designed to handle all types of emergencies, medical, surgical and psychiatric.

Aside from the emergency activities, this area functions as an Out-Patient Clinic from 5 p.m. until 8 a.m., Monday through Friday and on weekends, when none of the clinics are in session. The daily average patients seen is 180. The emergency room is staffed on a rotating schedule of doctors who take "call." One doctor is on duty during the day and three during the evening and night. These doctors have worked on the wards or in the clinics during the normal duty hours.

Treatment is given on the basis of emergency. True emergencies, such as heart attacks, allergic problems, hemorrhages, severe convulsions, cuts, broken bones, insect bites, dog bites, snake bites, poisonings resulting from drug ingestions, which require immediate and fast attention are treated first and the less serious ailments await their turn.

The question sometimes arises, "Why is it necessary to see two or three doctors?" In these cases, the patient's problem requires specialized attention or treatment; therefore, the doctor on duty contacts the desired specialist on call and he examines the patient and prescribes the necessary treatment. Unfortunately, this does consume considerable time.

Ambulance service is provided for transportation of the emergency sick and wounded. It is imperative that this service be utilized for emergencies only. The emergency room staff must provide the necessary attendants to accompany all patients transported by ambulance. Many times this leaves the emergency room area without sufficient personnel to give proper care to the patients who are waiting.

We are sure if the public understands the conditions entailed in providing ambulance service, every effort to avoid requesting this service will be made and only in emergency situations will an ambulance be requested.

Proper identification must be established before treatment (except true emergency) can be initiated.

Chaplains Celebrate 187th Year

Corps Plays Major Role During Both Peace, War

BY IDA C. EVANS

This Sunday the 40 chaplains assigned here will join with their counterparts throughout the free world in commemorating the 187th anniversary of the Army Chaplains Corps.

The event will be observed with appropriate ceremonies at various chapels and religious centers on post.

There has been a remarkable growth and development in the Chaplains Corps since its founding in 1775, according to Chaplain (Col.) Silas E. Decker, The Infantry Center chaplain.

"Even since I entered the chaplaincy more than 26 years ago, there have been many changes," he said.

Leaders Take Part

"For one thing," he continued, "there has been a definite increase in the number of military leaders who take an active part in the religious life of their commands."

Referring to the physical set up, the chaplain said, "Twenty-six years ago we held services in mess halls, libraries, theaters or Service Clubs. When I was a young chaplain at Fort Benjamin Harrison, we had to straighten up the enlisted men's Service Club after the Saturday night dance in time to conduct Catholic Mass and Protestant services there on Sunday morning."

"Permanent theaters came before permanent chapels but we now have adequate facilities throughout the Army for conducting worship services," Chaplain Decker said.

"Other improvements are adequate support for our religious program, proper equipment and transportation," he continued. "Back in 1936, if a chaplain moved with the troops, he thumbed a ride — often in the cab of a truck."

"Our equipment was improvised," he said. "We did the best we could to provide our own 'field kit.' Now, every chaplain is furnished a field kit of tools appropriate to perform the duties of a clergyman of his faith. His transportation is provided, too."

Training Changes

Another great change, according to Chaplain Decker, is the method of training a chaplain. There was no school for chaplains 26 years ago.

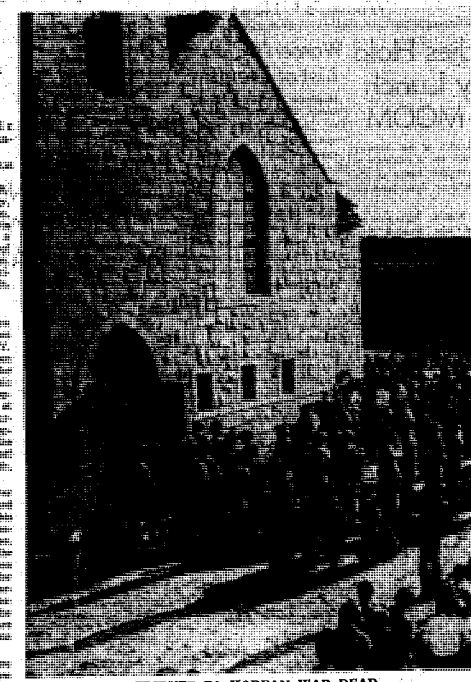
When a qualified young clergyman was recommended by his denomination, the Army gave him a three-day physical and mental examination, then assigned him to understudy an older chaplain.

"There were 125 chaplains in the entire Army when I was commissioned on May 14, 1938," Chaplain Decker said. "I was assigned to understudy Maj. Alfred Oliver Jr., the post chaplain at Fort Benjamin Harrison. This Methodist minister had a method of instruction all his own. He was gruff and very exacting, but once he was satisfied that I was sincere in my efforts to learn, he became like a father to me."

There was a great deal for the older chaplain to lay dead for every American, I went to Gen. Bruce Clark, commanding general of I Corps, and asked permission to build a memorial to the boys I had buried," Chaplain Decker said. "The memorial was to be a church, dedicated to the memory of all the Americans who had died in Korea, and was to be built at no cost to the government. The general agreed."

When the Communists overran Seoul, a Methodist church and school 10 miles to the north at the village of Ui Jong Bu were destroyed. The only thing left was the church bell.

The men of the I Corps contributed $13,000 to the project. This paid for the entire expense of the church.



Inside the church, a marble slab inscribed in both English and Korean, reads, "I Corps Memorial Church, Honoring American War Dead In Korea, 1950-1953."

After completing the church, the chaplain supervised the building of a school nearby for 200 elementary pupils with living quarters for two teachers.

Whether it be serving a 65,000-personnel community like Fort Benning in time of peace or slogging through mud or jungle with the troops in some far off troubled spot of the world, the chaplains of the Army carry out a mission assigned them by the Continental Congress on July 29, 1775.

Not Only Chaplains

Religious leadership is not restricted to chaplains. A military man who has impressed Chaplain Decker with his personal interest in religion and the religious life of his command is Lt. Gen. (Ret.) William Kelly Harrison Jr.

"A Bible scholar, Sunday School teacher and soldier diplomat, Gen. Harrison was one of the men who negotiated with the Communists for a cease-fire in Korea in 1953," Chaplain Decker said.

When the cease fire was accomplished, Chaplain Decker went to see Gen. Harrison to commend him for his work as a member of the United Nations Commission. He found the general helping his orderlies fold his tent.

Gen. Harrison listened to the chaplain, then walked over to a field table and picked up a Bible.

"The help I needed, I found here," he said.

"Military leaders like Gen. Harrison are on the increase in the Army," the chaplain said.

Almost as old as the Army itself, the Chaplains Corps has served through the years to maintain freedom of worship and to preserve and strengthen the moral fiber of the American soldier.

TIS's Rangers Complete Rugged Jungle Training

Two officers and four enlisted men from The Infantry School's Ranger Department recently completed the jungle warfare training course at Fort Sherman, Canal Zone.

The officers graduating were 1st Lt. Wendell O. Doody and 1st Lt. Henry O. Johnson, III.

Enlisted men included MSgt. Richard J. Doucette, Sgt. Ralph D. Ormes Jr., SFC William R. Brayman and SFC W. L. Stinchcomb of Winder, Ga.

Live in Jungle

The course is three weeks long and includes some 70 hours of classwork each week and 30 to 40 hours of living in the tropical jungles of Panama.

The curriculum includes such instruction as rappelling a 200-foot sheer cliff, infiltrating into miles of unmapped territory for hit and run raids on "enemy" encampments, evasion and escape techniques and general survival in a land where dangerous insects, animals and reptiles are plentiful.

Some of the meals include boa constrictors, various lizards and a raccoon-like animal, the coati-mundi.

After completing the course each man is considered ready to fight and survive in any jungle in the world.

Ladies Hold July Lunch At MOOM

The Ladies of the Infantry Board met for a luncheon in the Corregidor Room of the Main Officers' Open Mess recently.

Mrs. William Summers introduced Mrs. Randall Regnier, whose husband's last station was Turkey, as a new member of the group. A farewell was said to Mrs. John Tominac.

Mrs. Bob F. Spitzmiller, a former member, paid a visit. Two guests, Mrs. Anna Jarvi, mother of Mrs. Arthur House, and Mrs. Donald Smith, a friend of Mrs. Charles Saint, were present at the meeting.

Hostess for this July luncheon were Mrs. Roy Inman, Mrs. Stewart Cromwell, Mrs. John McLaurin, Mrs. Fred Magaffey and Mrs. Charles Saint.

A surprise ending to the luncheon was a birthday cake for Mrs. Roy Inman.

Welcoming Coffee Heads TSB Wives' Social List

The wives of the officers attending Infantry Communication Class One were entertained at a coffee recently in the day room of the 2nd Detachment, 2nd Student Battalion, The Student Brigade.

The cadre hostesses, Mrs. Wade W. Herring and Mrs. John V. Patrick, served refreshments.

Capt. Wade W. Herring, 2nd Detachment commander, and Mrs. Herring welcomed the ladies to Fort Benning and spoke briefly concerning the course and The Student Brigade.

Yellow summer floral arrangements were used on the tables of the day room.

Special guests were Mrs. Hubert E. Strange and Mrs. Vern L. Joseph.

Wives of the officers attending Infantry Officers Associate Career Class Five, 2nd Student Battalion, The Student Brigade, held their monthly coffee recently in the Anzio Room of the Main Officers Open Mess.

Mesdames Eugene R. Darbonne, Charles C. Anderson, William G. Bryant, and Chester W. Brunson acted as hostesses for the affair. Mrs. Vern L. Joseph, wife of the commander of The Second Student Battalion, was guest of honor.

The program was presented by a local hair stylist. Different hair styles were demonstrated for the 31 attending ladies.

A floral center piece of red, white and blue summer flowers was used as decoration.

Newcomers Welcomed At MOOM

The July meeting of the Ranger Department Wives was a swimming party followed by a box lunch at the Main Officers' Open Mess recently.

Hostesses for the luncheon were the wives of Ranger Headquarters. Mrs. J. W. Jackson and Mrs. J. A. Meads Jr. handled arrangements, Mrs. J. J. Ondishko Jr. and Mrs. W. D. Kelley helped with sending invitations and Mrs. J. R. Fitzpatrick Jr., drew the invitations.

After lunch under the canopy, Mrs. Jackson bid farewell to the departing members of the group: Mrs. Andrew J. Adams, Mrs. J. M. Bowers, Mrs. J. J. Burcham, Mrs. J. W. Foss, Mrs. N. J. Gannon, Mrs. R. E. Goble, Mrs. F. W. Goodenough, Mrs. W. E. Lyon, and Mrs. C. J. Mendoza. Mrs. Jackson presented engraved silver dishes to all of the departing members.

A welcome was extended to newcomers Mrs. Jon C. Crawford, Mrs. H. H. Covington, Mrs. P. M. Landrem, Jr. and Mrs. R. G. Miller.

Army Lawyers Give Professional Service to Troops

Seventeen officers and enlisted men here will mark the 187th anniversary of the founding of the Army's Judge Advocate General's Corps on Sunday.

They are the seven officers, two warrant officers and eight enlisted men assigned to The Infantry Center Staff Judge Advocate Section. All of the officers, one warrant officer and two of the enlisted men are lawyers.

Like all members of the corps, the personnel of the Staff Judge Advocate Section provide legal services for the command to which they are assigned.

Under the leadership of Col. V. Homer Drissel, staff judge advocate, the section furnishes legal advice to the commanding general, his staff and deputies.

Military personnel of the post and the surrounding area and their dependents look to the section for legal assistance and advice.

Conducts Courts-Martial

All general courts - martial arising in the jurisdiction of TIC are conducted by the section.

The staff judge advocate and his staff supervise all legal activities of commands subordinate to The Center and the administration of military justice in the command.

The SJA Section reviews and expedites more than 450 local claims annually, according to Capt. Robert S. Poydasheff, deputy staff judge advocate.

Its Military Affairs Branch renders more than 2,000 legal opinions a year. These may be matters of interpretation and application of laws, regulations or statutes affecting the operation of the local command.

8,000 Cases

The SJA Legal Assistance Branch handles more than 8,000 cases a year. Areas covered include domestic relations, wills, power of attorney, taxation, estates, real property sales, leases, contracts, notes, personal property, affidavits, dispositions, citizenship naturalization and change of name.

A major responsibility of the corps is to see that the statutes, regulations and customs of the service are carried out correctly and fairly.

Still another responsibility is to explain and justify any features of military law which may be misunderstood and criticized by the civilian bar and public.

The corps demands the highest type of education and training of its members, as well as exemplary personal behavior.

From the time the Second Continental Congress, on July 29, 1775, appointed William Tudor, Esq., judge advocate of the Army of the United Colonies, to the present day, this nation's Army has had the best available legal advice in all its undertakings, Capt. Poydasheff said.

Washington Issues Order

Gen. George Washington, from his Continental Army General Headquarters in Cambridge, Mass., issued an order July 30, 1775, to the effect that the judge advocate was "in all things relative to his office to be acknowledged and obeyed as such."

The importance to the Army of sound legal advice is emphasized in Gen. Washington's reason for directing that the judge advocate countersign each copy of the Articles of War.

He took the action so "no mistake in regard to the said articles may happen."

Shortly after July 4, 1776, when the United Colonies became the United States of America, Congress officially named Tudor judge advocate general with the rank of lieutenant colonel in the Army of the United States.

The history of the Judge Advocate General's Corps is the story of the outstanding service rendered the Army by a long succession of military lawyers.

Until World War I, the corps was composed entirely of officers. When the United States declared war April 6, 1917, the JAG branch consisted of 17 officers, four of whom were on duty in the Office of the Judge Advocate General. War Department instructions issued in 1918 directed the addition of enlisted men to the corps to serve as law clerks in the War Department and in the field.

A Judge General's School was established in Washington, D. C., when the U. S. entered World War II. The present permanent school at Charlottesville, Va., dates back to August, 1951.

The Office of the Judge Advocate General of the Army was the first legal position to be established under the authority of the U. S. It is 14 years older than the Offices of the Chief Justice and Attorney General.

As in 1776, the Judge Advocate General's Corps strives to carry out the will of the American people so its civilians shall enjoy equal justice under the law.

NG, Reserves Are Praised By Mr. Vance

Secretary of the Army Cyrus R. Vance has told nearly 104,000 Army National Guardsmen and Reservists who will return to civilian life next month after nearly one year of active duty that their service has "materially assisted in deterring aggression."

In letters to three divisions called to active duty last September, Mr. Vance said they had "helped provide the strength required by our nation during this period of threatening crisis, strength which has placed us in a better position to work toward a peaceful future."

A similar message was sent to 891 non-divisional units by the Army secretary.

Mr. Vance also has authorized commanders to award individual Guardsmen and Reservists a special certificate of appreciation for honorable service. "You have demonstrated that we are One Army in substance as well as in spirit," the certificate reads in part.

A total of 118,500 officers and enlisted men of the Army National Guard and Reserve had been called to active duty during the Berlin crisis last fall. Approximately 8,500 were given deferments while some 2,500 were released for various reasons.

Volunteering for extended active duty were 2,400, while more than 1,200 asked to remain on duty for a full year.

Units Complete 3-Day Exercise

Five Reserve Component units due for release in early August have recently completed a three-day counter-insurgency and counter - guerrilla training exercise. The exercise was under the direction of 1st Lt. Joseph J. Burn.

The units — 128th Medical Company, 129th Medical Company, 216th Medical Company, 891st Medical Detachment, and 389th Medical Detachment — have completed all mandatory training requirements.

OUT ON PATROL . . . Getting instructions from patrol leader Richard P. Helmbold (L), an ROTC cadet from North Georgia College, are Edward W. Ulmer C, University of Alabama, and Jon C. Stemples, University of Miami. The three prospective second lieutenants are among 1,250 ROTC cadets currently undergoing summer training here.

ROTC Cadets Seek to Win Rifle Trophy

Reserve Officer Training Corps cadets from Florida Southern University will represent the Fort Benning ROTC Summer Camp in competition for the "Warrior of the Pacific" trophy, sponsored annually by the University of Hawaii.

The Florida cadets will be competing for the marksmanship trophy with ROTC cadets from the six other ROTC Summer camps conducted in the United States.

To compete for the trophy a school must have at least 20 cadets in attendance at the camp, and fire the combat firing course. Scores are computed from the average of all cadets firing the course and are the result of normal training rather than special courses.

The average scores are forwarded to the Department of the Army for final judgment.

The summer camps competing are located at Fort Devens, Mass.; Indiantown Gap Military Reservation, Pa.; Fort Bragg, N. C.; Fort Sill, Okla.; Fort Riley, Kan.; and Fort Lewis, Wash.

Florida Southern won first place locally over 30 competing schools now attending summer training here.

Scores of the eligible schools were: Florida Southern, 63.48; Puerto Rico College of A&M.A, 62.20; Mercer University, 62.09; North Georgia College, 61.97; University of Mississippi, 61.64; University of Southern Mississippi, 61.29; Florence State College, 60.79; Vanderbilt University 60.53; Georgia Institute of Technology, 60.43; The Citadel, 60.36.

RED ARMY

The Red Chinese regular army is estimated at approximately 3,000,000, including 2,500,000 in 70 first - line armies; also 1,500,000-2,000,000 regional district troops, 600,000 public security troops, and a poorly equipped home guard.

Firing Begins Today in '62 National Meet

CAMP PERRY, Ohio — An estimated 8,000 sharpshooters from every state of the union are expected to converge here today through Aug. 26 to compete in the National Rifle and Pistol Matches.

The best civilian marksmen, in shoulder-to-shoulder competition with the finest the military has to offer, will take aim on ten national championships at stake.

Often referred to as the "world series of marksmanship," the event includes women's, junior, collegiate and National Guard championships in each field from the .22-caliber pistol to the high-powered .30-caliber rifle.

Army MSgt. William B. Blankenship of Fort Benning's Marksmanship Training Unit will be gunning for his third straight win of over a field of 2,400 challengers for the national pistol title.

Defending champion with the service rifle is Sgt. Charles D. Davis.

Some 2,300 support personnel from the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps are temporarily assigned here to provide services necessary in staging an event this size.

American teams will compete against foreign teams in a unique "fire and mail" arrangement. The U. S. teams will fire here while their competitors fire on their home ranges. The results will be mailed to a central office of the National Rifle Association where the scores will be checked and the winners declared.

The NRA also sponsors a four-day school for potential deadeyes over the age of 12. For the more advanced sharp shooters seeking to improve their style, instructors from Fort Benning conduct a three-day small arms firing school prior to each phase of the match.

FAREWELL CALL . . . Greeting Col. William H. Birdsong (L), former commander of the 1st Infantry Brigade, as he arrives in the 1st Armored Rifle Battalion, 58th Infantry area is Col. Charles T. Caprino, battalion commander. During the farewell call Col. Birdsong visited with Col. Caprino, the staff and company commanders. He later reviewed the guidons and the first sergeants of the battalion's companies. A traditional salute was fired by tanks of Company C, 66th Armor, as Col. Birdsong departed.

Units of Medical Battalion to Aid In 'Swift Strike'

Three units of the 428th Medical Battalion are scheduled to participate in Exercise "Swift Strike II" in North and South Carolina during August.

Headquarters and Headquarters Detachment, the 50th Medical Company, and the 690th Medical Company will work with the STRAC forces during the training.

The 50th Company was part of "Swift Strike I" held last year; while the 690th and Headquarters Company in Exercise "Southwind" in October and November, 1960.

The 690th will depart Wednesday, while the 428th Medical Battalion convoy will depart prior to Aug. 5.

The units are expected to return here on or about Aug. 20.

Hospital Personnel Hail Anniversary of Medics

Martin Army Hospital personnel will commemorate the 187th anniversary of the Army Medical Service at 2 p.m. today in the American Red Cross Recreational Hall.

The observance will feature a cake cutting and a coffee hour.

There are 271 members of six all-officer corps that comprise the Army Medical Service here. Of 58 Medical Corps officers, 49 are assigned to Martin Army Hospital and nine to the 2nd Infantry Division.

Dental Corps officers on the post number 58, of whom 52 are assigned to the Post Dental Service, three to the 2nd Division, one to the Third Field Hospital and two to Martin Hospital.

There are 61 members of the Army Nurse Corps serving at Martin Army Hospital and with post surgeon's activities.

Staff and administrative positions in connection with medical services on the post are held by 82 members of the Medical Service corps. At Martin Hospital, there are 26, in the 428th Medical Battalion, 28, the 2nd Division, 26, and two are members of the Medical Committee of The Infantry School Special Subjects Department.

Four members of the Veterinary Corps inspect all food delivered to the post, storage facilities and the premises of the contractors who supply the food. They operate a Veterinary Clinic and furnish veterinary support to the 28th Infantry School Dog Platoon.

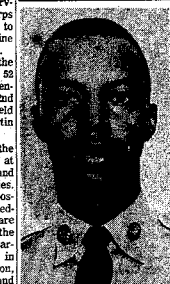
Eight members of the Army Medical Specialist Corps are assigned to Martin Hospital. Three are engaged in physical therapy, two in occupational therapy and three in food service.

The Army Medical Service dates back to 1775 when Gen. George Washington requested the Continental Congress to make provisions for "the lives and health of both officers and men."

In compliance with this request, Congress ordered the establishment of a hospital. Two years later, a "director-general of all military hospitals" and administrative personnel were authorized.

From this beginning, Army Medical Service developed through the years to a modern complex which provides scientific, technical and administrative support in the care of the sick and wounded and in maintaining the health of the Army.

The scope of Army Medical Service includes medical examination of personnel entering the service and periodic examinations while in service; storage and distribution of all items of medical and surgical supply; administration of military hospitals and other medical facilities and education, training and supervision of personnel to perform these functions.



Through the years, the Army Medical Service has benefited both military and civilian populations of the world, in time of peace as well as during war.

Personnel of the service continuously contribute to the wealth of professional literature, documenting advances in their particular fields of interest.

Research conducted by the Medical Service, ingenious equipment devised, and new techniques developed provide a worldwide contribution to mankind.

Lt. Gen. Leonard D. Heston, the Army surgeon general, referring to the anniversary of Army Medical Service, said, "While an anniversary is a time for remembering and reminiscing about the accomplishments of the past, it is also a time to look forward and plan for an even brighter future as today's spectacular successes fade into history to make room for tomorrow's achievements."

Formerly, military medicine was restricted to alleviating the suffering caused by illness or injury incurred in war or peace. During the past century, however, it has become a vital part of an effort aimed at scientifically conserving manpower, officials said.

Two Generals To Visit Here During Week

Two general officers including the chief of staff of the Third U. S. Army, will visit here within the next week.

Scheduled to arrive today for a three-day visit is Maj. Gen. William J. Sutor, mobilization director designee to the Office of the Deputy Commanding General for Reserve Forces, Continental Army Headquarters.

Gen. Sutton's visit is to include briefings on Reserve units here for summer training and on the Reserve Officers Training Corps Summer Camp here. He will depart on Sunday at 3 p.m.

Gen. Blanchard

Brig. Gen. Robert M. Blanchard, chief of staff of Third Army, will arrive here Thursday for a day's visit.

Following briefings on the history and organization of The Infantry Center, and the organization and mission of The Infantry School, Gen. Blanchard will visit the 2nd Infantry Division.

He will depart Thursday afternoon.

Gen. Ryan Visits

Tuesday and Wednesday, Brig. Gen. William F. Ryan, commanding general of test and evaluation, Army Infantry Board, Aberleen Proving Ground, Md., was here for briefings and conferences with The Infantry Board.

ICDA Is Host For Briefing

The Infantry Combat Developments Agency hosted a briefing concerning the new Combat Developments Command, located at Fort Belvoir, Va., and the role and functions of the Combat Developments Experimentation Center located at Fort Ord, Calif., recently.

Col. William E. Rigel conducted the briefing on CDC and its subordinate agencies, while Col. Carl C. Edmondson and civilian scientist, Dr. York Lucci gave an informative, stimulating presentation on CDEC.

The audience of 125 at Theater One were told that CDEC's next major experiment will involve an Infantry School project to examine the Antitank Assault Weapons System of the ROAD Infantry Battalion.

Reservists to Get Readjustment

WASHINGTON (A F P S) — President Kennedy has signed into law a bill which gives "rifled" reservists readjustment payments up to $15,000.

To qualify, the involuntarily released Reservist must have had a minimum of five years continuous active duty. Breaks in service of 90 days or less are not considered disqualifying so far as the continuous service is concerned.

The payments are computed on a basis of two months pay for every year of active duty with the maximum payment $15,000 or two years basic pay, whichever is less. Officers, warrant officers and enlisted men are eligible for this readjustment pay based on their basic pay at the time of involuntary release.

To compute total active duty, periods over six months are counted as a full year. Periods less than six months are dropped.

The bill also required that any mustering-out pay received must be deducted from the lump sum of readjustment pay. No previous periods of service for which readjustment payments were received will count in future payments.

No readjustment payments will be made to persons released for reasons of moral or professional dereliction. Persons released because their performance of duty is below standard or because their retention "is not cearly consistent with the interest of national security" will receive the old rate of payment of one-half a month's pay for each year of service.

Drug Bottles Fill Faster With Vacuum Equipment

Filling two, four and eight-ounce sterile bottles with liquid preparations at Fort Benning's Pharmacy Service is now a "breeze" according to technicians who handle the job.

A new vacuum-operated system has been installed that makes it possible for one man to fill more than 7,000 bottles in an eight-hour working day. In actual practice, however, a technician spends half a day manufacturing preparations and half a day filling bottles.

The equipment is attached directly to a large mixing vat and fills three bottles at a time. There is no spilling, for an overflow container is provided.

After filling bottles in their original sterile containers, the technician caps them with an automatic capper.

Gone are the days when the technician had to fill a five-gallon carboy from the mixing vat, then painstakingly fill each bottle from the carboy.

The pharmacy officer, Lt. Col. John L. Hassig, considers the new equipment and a great help in supplying the post's eight dispensaries with liquid preparations.

The dispensaries require approximately 1,800 gallons of liquid preparations for internal and external use each month. These medications are dispensed in two, four or eight-ounce bottles.

With the new equipment, the bottles can be filled at the rate of 18 per minute, according to MSgt. William J. Moore, noncommissioned officer-in-charge of the Pharmacy Service.

Dental Health Series

Regular Care Needed In Keeping Teeth Fit

By Maj. Charles W. Dobson
Preventive Dentistry Officer

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The following is the ninth in a series of weekly articles presented in the interest of better dental health.)

A person who practices good dental health habits and visits the dentist routinely has the best chance of retaining his own teeth.

By visiting the dentist every six months, or as often as he suggests, you can usually avoid serious trouble. Dental defects can be corrected more easily and with less discomfort and expense in the early stages.

Parents should take a child to the dentist shortly after all his primary teeth are in — at about two and a half to three years of age. The child will then have an opportunity to become acquainted with the dentist on a friendly, familiar basis before any extensive work is needed.

There is very little discomfort associated with cleaning the teeth or with filling small cavities. But a child suffering from a toothache when he makes his first visit to the dentist is likely to become the adult who neglects his dental health because he associates dentists with an early painful experience.

Dental prophylaxis (cleaning of the teeth by a dentist or a dental hygienist) is an important part of regular dental care for both children and adults. Deposits of calculus (tarter), foods and other matter are removed from the crowns and necks of the teeth. These irritants are one of the causes of gum diseases. The cleaning also makes it easier for the dentist to find and fill cavities while they are still small.

The dentist's goal is to help the patient make the best possible use of the teeth that nature provided. He can do this only if the patient follows good dental health rules and visits the dentist's office regularly so that control measures can be started and defects can be corrected early. Neglect and infrequency of professional care will result in unnecessary loss of teeth.

Both children and adults should have regular dental x-ray examinations. This procedure is especially important for children since it enables the dentist to discover any abnormality that might affect the future health of the teeth and mouth.

X-ray pictures help the dentist to detect small cavities, decay developing beneath fillings and impacted (unerupted) teeth. These pictures also show bone loss in periodontal disease (pyorrhea), abnormalities of tooth roots and many other conditions not visible to the eye alone.

The x-ray examination provides the dentist with information that makes it possible to diagnose and treat dental defects more effectively. The x-ray picture is helpful in determining whether a defective tooth can be saved or must be removed.

'Indian Heads' Hold 41st Reunion

World War II, Korean Wings Dedicated At Three-Day Washington D.C. Convention

The dedication of two new wings to the 2nd Infantry Division monument highlighted the 41st annual reunion of the 2nd Infantry "Indian Head" Division Association conducted last week in Washington, D.C.

The three - day convention opened Thursday July 19, and closed with the annual banquet on Satuday evening.

New Dedicated

The two new wings dedicated last Friday are an extension to the original monument which was erected in 1936 in honor of the 2nd Division's World War I dead. The new wings and pedestal honor the division's dead of World War II and the Korean Conflict.

The dedication ceremony featured guest speaker General Maxwell D. Taylor, Military Advisor to the President and newly designated Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Ninety-five men from the division, headed by Maj. Gen. Charles H. Chase, commanding general, attended the reunion which opened on Thursday afternoon at the Statler - Hilton Hotel with welcoming remarks by the Association's National President, Mr. Percy J. Terwilliger. The opening ceremonies also included the presentation of the association's Award of Merit plaque to Mr. Ralph O. Lundgren, Chairman of the Memorial Committee.

Business meetings during the reunion determined a slate of eight resolutions of which all were voted upon and passed. The nominating committee presented a slate of officers for the coming year which showed only one change from the slate elected last year.

Terwilliger Re-elected

Re-elected as National President was Percy J. Terwilliger of Kansas City, Mo. He received an unanimous vote for re-election from all delegates after being presented by the nomination committee.

Serving with Mr. Terwilliger during the coming year will be a slate of six vice-presidents which includes two members of the active division. Lieutenant Colonel J. E. Compton, assistant chief of staff, G-1 is the only newly elected vice president. This is the second term for Sergeant Major Robert Brown, division sergeant major.

Mrs. Steve Schwebke, wife of the Association's National secretary and treasurer, was elected as President of the Women's Auxiliary.

On Saturday morning the attending delegates and families traveled to Fort Belvior, Virginia, where they were hosted by The Engineer School. Festivities at Fort Belvior included an orientation of The Engineer School, a display of engineer equipment, the precision marching of the Fort Belvior Drill Team and lunch in a mess hall.

Final festivities of the three-day reunion took place Saturday evening with the annual banquet preceded by a social hour. Keynote speaker was the Honorable Frank H. Weitzel, assistant comptroller general of the United States.

During the busy three days, former members of the 2nd Division renewed old ties with comrades from the two World Wars and Korea. Command posts were organized within the hotel for different chapters of

August Army Digest Spotlights Div

In an August salute to the sixteen active Army divisions, Army Information Digest spotlights the current missions and past glories of the 2nd Infantry Division.

REUNION FRIENDS . . . Corporal Daniel Minnick, right, who fought with the division in World War I as a medical corpsman with Field Hospital 15, meets at Washington reunion with division's Sergeant Major Robert Brown.

Two hundred thousand copies of the official U. S. Army magazine will soon carry the "Second - to - None" story throughout the Army and to every member of Congress, prominent citizens, and the various communications media.

The feature begins with an introductiom by Major General Edwin H. J. Cams, Acting Deputy Chief of Staff for Military Operations, who writes: "The sixteen divisions that are active today have strong ties with the past, impressive stature in the present, and form a rallying point for all those who will soldier in the future . . . we in the higher headquarters staffs and supporting elements everywhere exist only to support these divisions in the accomplishment of their important missions. It is upon their successes that the rest of us must guage our accomplishments."

A look at the division of the future is provided by Major General Ralph E. Haines, Jr., who tells of the implementation of the ROAD concept in the 1st Armored Division.

Among other articles in the August Digest, the newest branch of the Army — first established since 1950 — Intelligence and Security, is described; potentials of Chemical Biological Warfare are cited by the Chief Chemical Officer; and the effects of the Department of Defense Program System on Army budgetary policies and programs are detailed.

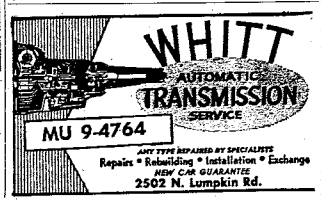
15th Fires Gun Salute For Japan Ambassador



Battery A of the 15th Artillery fired a 19-gun salute honoring Ambassador Koichiro Asakai last week at Redstone Arsenal, Huntsville, Alabama.

The battery, commanded by Captain Donald A. Gray, left Fort Benning by plane last Tuesday morning and returned to Fort Benning by motor convoy.

With them were the battery's six Howitzers.

The Japanese Ambassador and his wife are at Huntsville attending the graduation of 50 officers and enlisted men from the First Missile Support Detachment of the Japanese Self Defense Forces.

The unit is the first from Japan to be trained to maintain constant combat readiness in NIKE air defense missile systems.

10,000 Have Amphib. Training Under Their Belts

By John R. Grant

More than 10,000 men from the 2nd Division, over two-thirds of the Division's entire personnel, completed a period of specialized amphibious training last Friday.

The importance of water mobility for an infantry force became evident during World War II at such places as Normandy, Anzio Beach and countless Pacific islands; thus amphibious assault training is one of the areas of specialized training that the "skilled, tough, and ready around the clock" 2nd Division must go through to maintain its status as a member of the Strategic Army Corps.

Since May 14 each of the division's five battle groups, along with supporting armor, artillery, engineer, logistics, transportation, communication, and medical units, has spent two weeks at Little Creek, Virginia, undergoing amphibious training.

The training was conducted in five increments with each of the five battle groups acting as the nucleus of a task force. This system allowed one task force to be training in Virginia while the other four Battle Groups remained at Fort Benning continuing the combat training program.

The actual beach assault, which climaxed each two-week period, was only part of the training.

Training for the amphibious mission actually began around the first of the year when members of the 2nd Division were given swimming tests and instruction on wearing life jackets. In addition many officers and non-commissioned officers attended special courses of instruction at the Naval Amphibious Base located at Little Creek.

In the later part of March a team from Little Creek came to Fort Benning and conducted a two-week planning course for the staff members of the battle groups.

Before going to Virginia each man who would be involved in the training was required to take wet and dry net training on towers simulating the side of a ship, which were erected on Sand Hill and Kelley Hill.

The first week of training at Little Creek consisted of preparing vehicles and equipment for the assault, dry and wet net training, familiarization with amphibious vehicles, ship-to-shore movement and naval and air support of an amphibious operation.

The second week was spent in preparing for embarkation and debarkation and the actual beach landing.

Each landing force used approximately 400 vehicles in the motor convoy that transported it to Virginia and shipped about 35 tracked vehicles by rail. All of this equipment was loaded aboard the ships and unloaded during each beach assault.

Civil Affairs Group Here From Gordon

A civil affairs detachment from Fort Gordon, Georgia arrived at the 2nd Division recently to make preparations for Exercise SWIFT STRIKE II.

The detachment, lead by Captain Thaddee F. Moreau, civil affairs officer, consists of Lieutenant Clarence Mason, assistant civil affairs officer, a chief clerk and a driver.

Wartime G-5

Capt. Moreau's group, which has a wartime designation of G-5, will support the commanding general in matters pertaining to civil affairs in Exercise SWIFT STRIKE II.

In periods of conflict it is the duty of G-5 to assist in matters involving the civilian population of cities and towns with which the Army has contact. The group is equipped to aid the commanding general in restoring order and operating a war-torn city's government, economy, and institutions.

The group is temporarily attached to 2nd Division G-3 (training and operations), but will be in the field as a separate G-5 unit during Exercise SWIFT STRIKE II.

SMaj Regan 20 Year Vet ReUps Again

By 69th Armor PIO

The 69th Armor's Sergeant Major Stephen J. Regan completed 20 years of service recently and promptly reenlisted for another three years filling his own vacancy.

Lieutenant Colonel James T. Kolb, 69th Armor's commanding officer swore in the sergeant major. After the ceremonies company commanders and first sergeants of the battalion joined the reenlistee in a short reception with cake and coffee provided by Headquarters Company Mess Hall.

Served in Two Conflicts

Sergeant Major Regan, a native of New York City, has served in two wars and traveled over most of the world in his 20 years of service. The sergeant major served in Europe in World War II and the Korean conflict. Among his medals are two Bronze Stars for World War II, and one Bronze Star for Korea. The sergeant major's records reveal several letters of commendation and other awards for outstanding performance of his duty.

The sergeant major has held his present rank for the past three years. Other duties performed by Sergeant Major Regan include President of the Tankers Chapter of the Warrior's Branch of the Second Indian Head Association, and President of the Board of the Second Division NCO Open Mess.

Sergeant Major Regan, his wife Ronnie, and their two children reside at 2456 Wise Street, Columbus, Georgia.

McGondel Comes Back To 23rd Inf

By 23rd Inf PIO

Having just completed the Army Associate Career Course at The Infantry School at Ft. Benning, Lieutenant William H. McGondel has returned to duty with the 23rd Infantry as the battle group motor officer. This marked the third time that Lt. McGondel has attended the school.

Lt. McGondel was commissioned in June 1956, after completing Officer Candidate School at the Massachusetts Military Academy in Boston. Prior to this, his last military assignment was as first sergeant of Company E, 182nd RCT, 26th Division, in Massachusetts.

Active duty and Fort Benning beckoned last August, and he was assigned as executive officer of Headquarters Company, 23rd Infantry. Since that time Lt. McGondel has held a number of positions for the battle group, including, in succession, platoon leader of Company E, executive officer, and commanding officer. Prior to his departure for the Infantry School the last time, he was battle group liaison officer.

Lt. McGondel's hometown is Woburn, Mass., where his family is now residing.

Lt. Touhey, a graduate of both Ranger and Airborne school, will report to Fort Bragg, N. C., prior to his going overseas, to undergo training in Special Forces.

'23rd' Totem Pole Listed Number One at Benning

By 23rd Inf PIO

A news release received recently from Headquarters, Third United States Army, Fort McPherson, Georgia, stated the 23rd Infantry battle group newspaper, The Totem Pole, was named the number one authorized newspaper, in the category of mimeographed newspapers, at Fort Benning.

Other Fort Benning newspapers, listed according to standings at Fort Benning, are the Voice of the Commanders, the Martin Monitor, and the LAAC Newsletter.

Based on Quality

The standings, are based on the appearance of the newspaper, balanced coverage of news, success of circulation, and manner of compliance with pertinent directives.

The Totem Pole was first published on February 10, 1951, when the 23rd was a basic and advance individual training unit. Its first editor was Lieutenant (now Captain) Douglas Haldane. Lieutenant David K. Williams is the current editor, and Specialist Five Charles T. Coker is reporter and make-up man.

EM Promotions Triple at 23rd Inf

By 23rd Inf PIO

Promotions within the 23rd Infantry for the month of July have more than tripled the number for the month of June.

To date, a total of 157 enlisted men have been upped a grade in rank in July. Of this total, 115 were in the E-4 category, with those attaining an E-5 and an E-6 position numbering 19 each. Four E-7's were promoted.

Museum Given War Relics

The 2nd Division Museum recently received a collection of World War I relics from a former 2nd Division soldier.

Mr. Dale McNally, who donated the collection, served as a sergeant with Company F, 2nd Engineer Battalion, 2nd Infantry Division during World War I.

He now lives in Los Angeles, California.

Mr. McNally has had these relics in his possession since serving in Europe during the war and sent them to the museum recently.

The collection includes his own uniform jacket, hobnailed combat boots, protective mask, steel helmet, campaign hat, mess kit, campaign ribbons and medals. The jacket, helmet, and protective mask are adorned with the Indianhead patch.

Also included in the collection are some German objects — a steel helmet, a dress cap, some uniform belts and belt buckles, the German Iron Cross, and two Lugers, both of which are of considerable value.

The Sand Hill NCO Club was the scene recently of a promotion dinner party hosted by eight sergeants and their ladies.

The sergeants are members of Company C, 23rd Infantry.

Hosts included Sergeant and Mrs. Walter E. Haralson, Sergeant and Mrs. Wilmer D. Nelson, Sergeant and Mrs. Clevon Perry, Sergeant and Mrs. Richard O. Meekins, Sergeant and Mrs. Tony M. Rumple, Sergeant and Mrs. Harold E. Taylor, Sergeant and Mrs. William T. Walker and Sergeant Dennis C. Leahy.

Cav Hails and Farewells At Country Club Party

The members of the 7th Cavalry held a "Hail and Farewell" evening party at the Country Club recently.

Hosting the affair were Major Charles C. Busch, acting squadron commander, and Mrs. Busch.

Special Guests

Major Busch welcomed the squadron's special guests, Mrs. Murry Swartz, mother of Mrs. Arthur Tritsch visiting from Los Angeles, and Lieutenant Colonel John T. Consalvo, on ROTC duty with Auburn University, a guest of Captain and Mrs. George A. Griffin Jr. The newcomers to the squadron, Lieutenant and Mrs. Thomas J. Ritenour were introduced to the group.

Farewell plaques were presented to departing persons: Lieutenant and Mrs. Ronald P. Richards and Lieutenant John C. Hardin Jr., who are returning to civilian life; and Captain and Mrs. Stauffer P. Malcom, who are departing for an overseas assignment. All carry with them a plaque bearing the 7th Cavalry crest and the words, "to remind you of friends."

Capt Arthur A. Tritsch accepted the Fathership Award, which is a traveling trophy, passed in turn to each new father in the Garry Owen Squadron. Mrs. Tritsch was presented with a silver baby cup for their infant daughter, which was born July 1.

Busy Mrs. Hughett Finds The Days Are Too Short

By Ingrid Kraus

There just aren't enough hours in the day for Doris Hughett.

The wife of Colonel Ralph H. Hughett, commander of the 87th Infantry, has so many hobbies and interests that she longs for more time to pursue all of them.

Enthusiastic

Mrs. Hughett is enthusiastic about almost everything, including her hobbies of designing and sewing clothes for herself and friends, ceramics, painting in water colors, drawing charcoal sketches, bowling, decorating and cooking.

The attractive, auburn-haired woman had a twinkle in her eye when she said, "I love to collect recipes and to try out new dishes on strangers. Isn't that just awful?"

ACTIVE
Mrs. Hughett

Ceramics also play a prominent role in the Hughetts' entertaining as the colonel's lady makes centerpieces and individual place card holders for battle group and other dinners and luncheons. Recently, she made 40 beer steins for a luncheon.

Mrs. Hughett, who admits she has been bitten by the ceramics bug makes ceramic planters for each new baby born to an 87th Infantry family.

She enjoys entertaining and has acquired many pointers on giving parties and dinners while working in the Army chief protocol office in Washington.

There, she helped prepare many functions for prominent foreign and domestic government and military officials, including presidents, senators, congressmen and ambassadors. Mrs. Hughett said, "I loved that kind of work as I enjoy meeting and am at ease with all kinds of people. I am glad I married into the Army, for I have the opportunity to meet so many people."

Worked

Mrs. Hughett also worked as secretary for several other military agencies in Washington, including the directorate of photography of the Air Force, when it was headed by Elliott Roosevelt.

Born in Baltimore, Maryland, Mrs. Hughett took courses in commercial art and fashion designing at the Maryland Institute of Art. She also attended business colleges in Baltimore and Washington.

She and Colonel Hughett, who was then a lieutenant colonel, were married in 1957 in Washington. This is Mrs. Hughett's first Army post, for shortly after their marriage Colonel Hughett was assigned to Viet Nam and then attended the Army War College at Carlisle Barracks, Pennsylvania. The couple came to Fort Benning in 1959. Prior to taking command of the 87th Infantry, Colonel Hughett was the division G-3 and served with the 1st Infantry.

The colonel's lady has been very active at Fort Benning. She worked as Thrift Shop and ceramics chairman, held the first vice presidency of the 2nd Division Officers' Wives Club, headed the division wives bowling team and is a member of the Fort Benning Woman's Club.

Hostesses Abound At 69th Fete

The ladies of the 69th Armor held their monthly coffee Tuesday in the Normandy Room of the Main Officers' Open Mess.

Hostesses for the event were Mrs. W. A. Rusher, Mrs. C. O. Burbank, Mrs. Richard Yowell, Mrs. Peter R. Budd and Mrs. Francis Cocorum. Also Mrs. E. G. Gibson, Mrs. William J. Hickey, Mrs. Paul R. Powers, Mrs. Dennis L. Smith and Mrs. William G. Smith.

Pouring at the affair were Mrs. James Kolh and Mrs. Arno Apel.

Farewells were said to Mrs. Apel and Mrs. John Wright. Welcomes were extended to Mrs. James M. Highet Jr. and Mrs. R. M. Hanvey.

87th Infantry Party Staged Sat. at MOOM

The officers and ladies of the 87th Infantry held a battle group dinner-dance last Saturday evening in the Country Club branch of the Main Officers' Open Mess.

Colonel Ralph H. Hughett, battle group commander, welcomed newly-assigned officers and their wives to the group. They included Lieutenant Colonel and Mrs. Richards O. Stewart, Major Albert R. Ives Jr., Captain and Mrs. Roy S. Dunaway Jr., Captain and Mrs. William L. Patrick, Captain and Mrs. Herbert T. Sink, Lieutenant and Mrs. Robert W. Boylston, Lieutenant and Mrs. C. W. Cowgill, Lieutenant Bernard A. Guinyard and Lieutenant and Mrs. A. B. Hammond.

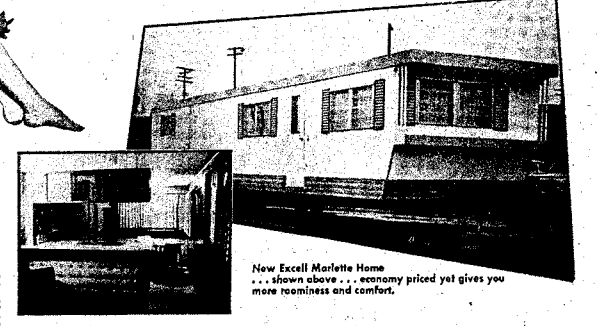
Lieutenant and Mrs. Charles W. Hawkins, Lieutenant and Mrs. Valdor M. Hall, Lieutenant and Mrs. Cory G. Jackson, Lieutenant Stuart B. Keller, Lieutenant William W. Francis, Lieutenant Thomas E. Leverette, Lieutenant William F. Terry III, Lieutenant and Mrs. John E. Watts and Lieutenant and Mrs. Donald L. Zechman.

Farewells were said to several of the officers and their wives. They included Captain and Mrs. Hubert Garrell, Captain and Mrs. Ronald Berkey, Captain and Mrs. Edwin M. May Jr., Lieutenant and Mrs. James M. Danley Jr. and Lieutenant and Mrs. Charles H. O'Dell.

Baby cups were presented by Colonel Hughett to new parents in the group. They were Lieutenant and Mrs. Ronald E. Brooks, Lieutenant and Mrs. Bobbie E. Chavis, Lieutenant and Mrs. Dahl Marshall and Lieutenant and Mrs. Arthur A. Ullman Jr.

Mrs. R. Maglin Holds Coffee For Cav Ladies

The ladies of the 7th Cavalry held their monthly coffee July 5 at the home of Mrs. Richard R. Maglin in Columbus. Mrs. Charles A. Busch was assistant hostess at the affair.



The centerpiece on the serving table was an arrangement of yellow daisies.

105 MILLIMETER HOWITZER BLASTS ITS DEADLY FIRE FOR PRACTICE
Men of 27th Artillery Practiced Direct Fire Friday

27th Sharpens Its Direct Fire Skill

By 27th Artillery PIO

Big guns boomed and targets disintergrated Friday as Batteries A and B of 27th Artillery sharpened their direct fire skills.

From their points high on Ft. Benning's Concord Observation Post, howitzers blasted targets in full view so that gun sections could receive instruction in howitzer direct fire capabilities. As they watched the men of the 27th viewed the devastating results of howitzer handiwork.

15th Artillery Ceremony Held for Commanders

By 15th Artillery PIO

The 15th Artillery passed in review Monday, honoring its departing battalion commander, and welcoming its new commander.

At the ceremony which was held at Division Artillery's unit training area eight, Lieutenant Colonel John M. Evans assumed command of the 15th Artillery from its former commander, Lieutenant Colonel Donald B. Roof.

Reviewing Officers

The reviewing officers, Colonel Roof and Colonel Evans were joined by Battalion Executive Officer, Major Edmund D. Rozecki, commander of troops, as they reviewed the 15th.

Colonel Roof accepted the national and battalion colors from Sergeant Major Dennis J. Amaturio and presented them to Colonel Evans.

The departing battalion commander, Colonel Roof, stated that the battalion had accomplished a great deal since he took command last fall. He said he has been extremely proud of the battalion and knew that the 15th Artillery would aspire to even higher achievement under its new commander.

Colonel Roof said he felt the performance of the battalion's firing of a 19-gun salute at Redstone Arsenal recently was indicative of the high level of performance that others have come to expect of the 15th Artillery.

Colonel Evans told the officers and men of the 15th Artillery that he is sure its many achievements have been accomplished through close teamwork. He said that he is certain that he can be assured of the same excellent cooperation Colonel Roof was given.

He noted that he had served with the 2nd Infantry Division Artillery in the past, and was pleased and proud to have the opportunity to serve with it again.

After the addresses of the old and new battalion commanders had been given, officers and men of the 15th Artillery passed in review.

Colonel Roof is scheduled to retire from active duty on August 31, 1962 with over 20 years' service. After his retirement, he plans to attend Kansas State University, and upon his graduation hopes to enter the teaching profession.

Colonel Roof served as assistant S-3 for Division Artillery, and battalion commander of the 6th Howitzer Battalion 37th Artillery prior to assuming command of the 15th Artillery in September of 1961.

Colonel Evans, who succeeds Colonel Roof as battalion commander, has served with the 2nd Infantry Division in the past. He was assigned as assistant S-3, 38th Field Artillery Battalion.

Colonel Evans attended the Citadel, and is a graduate of Roosevelt University in Chicago, Illinois. He is also a 1959 graduate of the Command and General Staff College in Fort Leavenworth, Kansas.

7th Cavalry NCO Attends NCO Academy at Jackson

By 7th Cavalry PIO

Sergeant Elbert L. Perritte, a mortar squad leader with Troop B, 7th Cavalry, has recently departed for Fort Jackson, South Carolina to attend the Third United States Army Non - Commissioned Officer Academy. The course will run for six weeks and will have classes and field training with emphasis on leadership. The courses are designed to build and create better junior non-commissioned officers.

Sgt. Perritte entered the Army in January 1959 and took basic combat training at Fort Riley, Kansas. Upon completion of basic training he was assigned to the 4th Infantry, 3rd Infantry Division, stationed in Bamburg, Germany.

While in Bamburg Sgt. Perritte was a member of the Bamburg Raiders football and baseball teams. In November 1960 Sgt. Perritte returned to the United States and was assigned to Troop B, "Garry Owen" and held the job of a mortar squad leader.

2nd Division Swim Tourney Closes

The 2nd Infantry Division Swimming and Diving Tournament has been completed this past week and some of the results show the degree of competition.

The events were made up of two diving events and ten swimming events. At the time of this writing four of these events had been conducted and the results were established. They were the 50-meter freestyle, the 100-meter free style, the 200-meter free style and the 100-meter backstroke.

In the 50-meter free style there were seven participants. Of these seven men five placed in the finals event. LeRoy Jones of the 87th Infantry placed first with a time of 27.3 seconds. Charles W. Walls of the 87th Infantry placed second with a time of 22.2 seconds. Peter Wilcox of Division Artillery placed third and John Walborn of the 87th Infantry placed fourth. Roy Stevens of Division Trains placed fifth in the event.

In the 100 meter free style Leroy Jones placed first with a time of 1:5.6 seconds. Charles Walls placed second with a time of 1.8 seconds. William P. Dorr of 122nd Signal placed third with 1:10.8 seconds. Wilcox placed fourth in this event with a time of 1:11.6 seconds. David Balkow of the 1st Infantry placed fifth with a time of 1:17 seconds.

The 200 - meter free style event was conducted with five winners, also. William Dorr took 1st place with a time of 2:44.1 seconds. David Balkow picked up second place with a time of 3:4.3 seconds. Daniel Dix of the 87th Infantry placed third with a time of 3:18 seconds.

Richard Tully of the 87th Infantry placed fourth and registered a time of 3:20.5 seconds. Kelcy Allen of the 87th Infantry placed fifth with a time of 3:42.5 seconds.

In the 100-meter backstroke event, John Collier of the 87th Infantry placed first with a time of 1:28.7 seconds. Leo Golden of Division Trains placed second with a time of 1:35.8 seconds. James Alyea of Division Trains placed third with a time of 1:39.5 seconds. William Francis of the 87th Infantry took fourth place with a time of 1:45 seconds. Jimmy Ruth of the 1st Infantry took fifth place with a time of 1:57.8 seconds.

The point breakdown for these events is as follows: first place will get six points, second place will get four points, third place will get three points, fourth place will get two points and fifth place will receive one point. These points will be tabulated for each event. As each team accumulates points they are credited to them. The team with the highest number of points wins the swimming and diving championship crown.

THEY PREPARED . . . These swimmers from the 1st Infantry practiced last week and were in the 2nd Division Swimming and Diving Tournament this week. They are from left: Wilberto Ruiz, Donald Ream and Jerry L. Shuffield.

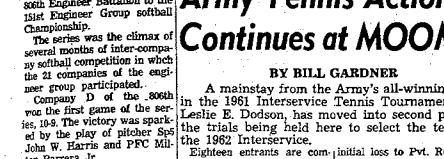
Tennis Meet Completed For Indianhead Division



This week brought to a close the 2nd Division Tennis Tournament, held at the Sand Hill Tennis Courts.

On Monday night, the doubles championship in the open division was played with the team of Ted E. Gordinier and Clay N. Mobley of the 1st Infantry defeating Ronald Groshong and Gerald R. Ristau, 6-6, 2-6, 6-2, 6-4, and 6-4. The winning team, with a combination of fast returns and precision hitting, took the win over Groshong of 2nd Administration Company and Ristau of Division Trains.

Though not on the winning doubles team, Ristau rallied the following night to defeat Mobley and became the singles champion of the tournament with scores 6-3, 6-3, and 6-0.

The tournament was conducted in accordance with the 1962 United States Lawn Tennis Rules. All military personnel assigned to the 2nd Infantry Division were eligible to participate.

114th Grabs Engineer Unit Softball Title

The 114th Engineer Company took a three game series against Company D of the 86th Engineer Battalion to the 151st Engineer Group softball Championship.

The series was the climax of several months of inter-company softball competition in which the 21 companies of the engineer group participated.

Company D of the 86th won the first game of the series, 10-9. The victory was sparked by the play of pitcher Spc John W. Harris and PFC Milton Parrera Jr.

The second game was won by the 114th, 6-5. Sp4 John Vrablik and Sp4 Julio Warr of the 114th and PFC Theodore G. Argianas of the 86th all hit home runs for their respective teams.

The third game was won by the 114th. SFC Lloyd Cornwall, 114th pitcher, gave up only three hits. Sgt. Delmar Wilson, manager of the 114th, attributes a part of the team's success to the catcher, Sp4 John Palmer.

The 114th Engineer Company, a National Guard unit from Washington, D. C., will not be able to represent the 151st Engineer Group in the post championship because of it's scheduled release before the start of the tournament.

Hunt Club To Present 'Gymkhans'

A different kind of horse show will take place Aug. 5 at 8 p.m. when the Hunt Club presents its Gymkhans.

Members are urged to participate in such classes as the needle and thread race in which each mounted contestant races to one end of a ring with a needle where his dismounted teammate waits to thread it. The first one to cross the finish line with the threaded needle wins.

Another contest will be a doughnut race where each contestant will ride to the far end of the ring and eat a doughnut suspended by a string, then race back to the finish line.

Other classes will include a potato race, tug-o'-war and musical chairs to name a few.

There will be no post entries. All entries should be mailed to Entries Secretary, Fort Benning Hunt Club Gymkhana, P.O. Box 1924, Fort Benning, or should be given personally to Mrs. Harry R. Leonard, Donna Davis or Ted Franklin.

The entrance fee will be forfeited for all animals duly entered but not shown. Each rider must wear an exhibitor number provided by the numbers table before entering a class.

Army Tennis Action Continues at MOOM

BY BILL GARDNER

A mainstay from the Army's all-winning team in the 1961 Interservice Tennis Tournament, Sp4 Leslie E. Dodson, has moved into second place in the trials being held here to select the team for the 1962 Interservice.

Eighteen entrants are competing for the six slots on the Open team and seven for the three-man Seniors.

Dodson after suffering an initial loss to Pvt. Roger McCormick, number one man on the ladder, has waded through successive opponents, capping his comeback drive with a 6-3, 6-2 victory over 1st Lt. John R. Newman.

MALLICK

College Star

A former star for Kalamazoo (Mich). College, Dodson was part of the duo that won the 1961 Interservice Open doubles title.

McCormick, whose college days were spent at the University of Miami, has managed to remain undefeated in recent matches.

In his match Monday, he slapped PFC Herman D. Carrillo from the undefeated ranks, 6-2 and 6-1.

Carrillo, playing for Fifth Army, occupies the fourth slot.

The third position on the ladder is held by former Trinity (Texas) College star, Newman, who like McCormick is from Army Europe.

Nerin Upset

In fifth and sixth place are Third Army representatives, Sp4 James Nerrin and Pvt. Wade Rockafellow.

In Monday's action Nerrin beat Sp 4 Ronald Sanders from the Sixth Army, 6-0, 6-2, but in an upset today fell to PFC Luis C. Dominguez, 6-0 and 6-3.

Coach Dan Sullivan, who has the responsibility of selecting the team, said players like Dominguez make his job more difficult.

Dominguez, who occupies the 10th slot, has beaten the number five man, but lost to the sixth and ninth place holders.

Rockafellow beat him in two hard sets Monday, 7-5 and 7-5, losing earlier to Nerrin, 6-4 and 6-3.

Anders, PFC Edward A. Pasui of Army Pacific and 2nd Lt. James R. Moses Jr., of the Fourth Army occupy the seventh, eighth and ninth spots.

New Arrivals

Second Lt. Norman J. Perry and PFC Robert S. Bowditch Jr., placed by Coach Sullivan in the second and third poition in the pre-trials seedings, arrived Monday and were placed on the bottom of the ladder.

Sullivan said the reason for this is to enable them to meet each man in a match at sometime during the trials.

So far they have had easy going. Perry blanked Capt. Charles D. Lake easily in two sets by identical 6-0 scores Monday, and similarly beat Capt. Norman Dunlap.

Bowditch beat Dunlap, 6-0 and 6-2, and took 1st Lt. Don-

Mallick Sets Pool Mark At Recent Meet

Mary Ellen Mallick, daughter of SFC and Mrs. John Mallick, Company B, 1st Battalion, The Infantry Center Troop Command, broke the existing pool and meet record at the Ninth annual Albany Invitational Swimming and Diving Championship, held recently at Tift Park Pool in Albany, Ga.

The previous record for 50-meter freestyle for girls eight years age and under stood at 42.9 seconds. Mary Ellen broke the record in her heat with a time of 41.5 seconds.

In the finals, she won two second-place medals in the 50-meter freestyle and 50-meter backstroke. She qualified for the finals in the 50-meter butterfly, winning fourth place in that event. At last year's meet in Albany, she won a third place medal for the 50-meter freestyle event.

At the Edgewood Country Club City Invitational Swim Meet, held on July 2, Mary Ellen took three first-place ribbons for freestyle, backstroke and butterfly, swimming in the eight and under group. She was also a member of the first-place medley relay team. She was named the most outstanding girl swimmer at the Edgewood meet.

Hugh Royer Paces Team To Third Army Golf Title

PFC Hugh Royer Jr. blasted his way to a record 10 under par 278 and raced to a 13-stroke victory as he captured the Men's Open at the Third Army Golf Tournament at Fort Gordon.

Royer three times shot three under par 69's to eclipse the previous 72-hole course record of 283 shared by Bill Girard and Maj. Harold L. Zink.

HUGH ROYER

Royer is a former University of Georgia basketball star and a native of Columbus, Ga.

His 13-stroke victory also established a record. Not since 1930 has a margin of victory been so large, and then, former golf great Bobby Jones had to play two rounds on the Augusta Country Club's course to achieve it.

Hardgrove Wins

Lt. Col. George Hardgrove won the Men's Senior Division with a 72-hole total of 306, scoring rounds of 76-76-79. Col. Hardgrove nudged out Col. Lynn D. Fargo of Fort McPherson by two strokes as Col. Fargo made a strong finish.

M-Sgt. Elinor E. Jones of Fort McClellan coasted to a 32-stroke victory in the Women's Open as she posted a score of 334, scoring rounds of 86-79-82-87. Capt. Joyce L. Collins of Fort Gordon was her closest competitor with a score of 366.

Hamby Takes Second

Another Fort Benning golfer, 2nd Lt. Joe Hamby, won the battle for second place in the Men's Open with a total of 291. Third place went to defending champion SSgt. Clifton Harrington of Fort Campbell, with a 72-hold total of 295.

Rounding out the top five in the Men's Open were Fort Benning's 2nd Lt. Bill Martindale, finishing fourth with 296, and Maj. Carl E. Knowles of Fort Gordon in fifth place with 297.

The team title went to Fort Benning with a combined total of 888. Fort Campbell finished second with a team score of 927.

OUTDOOR OUTLOOK

By Pvt. Charles Hitchcock

DOVE SEASON

The first half of the 1962-63 dove season is to open Sept. 15 and run through Oct. 14. Shooting will be permitted only from noon until sunset. The bag limit will again be 12 birds per day.

Dove fields on the reservation are in their second stage of planting.

The fields are planted in strips. Strip planting provides food for both sessions of the season. The first strip was planted approximately five weeks ago and the second strip should be completed within a few days.

HEDLEY'S POND CLOSED

Hedley's Pond will be closed for an indefinite period. When the fish biologist was on post the latter part of June he stated that Hedley's was out of balance and needed renovating. The pond will be pumped dry to save the bass so they may be put in King's Pond. The pumping started last week. As of now no date has been determined when the transplanting of the bass will begin.

LILY PAD EXPERIMENT

With some success of the first application of chemicals on the lily pads at Weem's, a second application was made three weeks ago. One strip was widened to approximately 50 feet. The area around the island and spillway was also treated. Complete results will not be known for some time, but the results so far are very promising. With these strips, fishing should be improved.

GOOD GOLF

FOR ROUGH LIE . . .

Many golfers have the mistaken impression that only an iron can loft the ball out of an almost impossible lie. Equally valuable in this situation are the number 4 and 5 woods. The number 4's tremendous loft and compact head knifes through long grass, gets the ball up quickly to clear trees and other hazards. Not standard equipment but it should be, the number 5 wood can get the ball out of almost hopeless lies. It's easier to control than an iron and has the carrying power of a number 2 or 3 iron. Its added loft makes it a valuable, par-shaving tool.

Valentine's Homer Helps TICTC Up-End 428th Medical Battalion

By SFC Bismarck Stith

Fred Valentine, The banged his sixth homer of the season and Student Brigade righthander, Charles Spell, posted his 13th and 14th wins in the Major Unit Baseball circuit.

Valentine's homer produced two runs along with a three-run triple that helped TICTC trip the 428th Medics, 8-1. John Lindic was credited with the TICTC win and John Cillon took the setback.

Spell posted his 13th victory by hurling a three-hit, 2-0 shutout over 151st Engineers. Parker Humphrey took the loss for the Engineers allowing only four scattered hits, all singles.

In Spell's 14th win he came in the tenth inning to relieve teammate Tootlaker, with the score, 5-5. Jessie Joyce was credited with driving in the winning run.

Spell led the inning off with a single; Ralph Maur, hit into a fielder's choice forcing Spell out at second base, but Joyce racked out a hit into right center field scoring Maru for the tally that counted. Joyce also clouted a two-run homer in the eighth inning to pace the Tigers at the bat.

Don Sanlurè suffered the setback giving up only six hits. Harold Stokes's two singles led the Signalmen at the plate.

151st Edges TICTC

TICTC's southpaw, Marty Leicht, held the Engineers scoreless for six innings, giving up three hits. His teammates posted a three-run lead in the first frame when they blasted the Engineers for four hits and three runs.

The big blow in the seventh inning was a three-run homer by Curt Drummond of the Engineers, along with Lester Wilson's single and run to account for a four-run seven inning rally. The four runs evened the score, 4-4.

In the ninth, Hurbert Gossett connected with a single and the winning run to edge TICTC, 5-4.

Paul Snyder tossed the win along with striking out 16 opponents. Leicht, who had 12 strikeouts, took the loss.

29th Infantry Wins

The 29th Infantry added two wins to move their streak up to seven in a row.

The defeated 428th Medics and TICTC by the same score, 7-5. In the Medics game, Craftenen was credited with the win and Meyer was charged with the loss. Dave Lynn paced the Infantrymen with a triple and a single while James Williams was tops for the Medics with two singles.

TICTC's Floyd Olczak gave up five hits to the Infantrymen while his team smashed Bowers and Chapel, for seven hits including a three-run homer by John Rhoden.

Chapel was credited with the win, Curt Gentry's double and a single led the Infantrymen at bat.

Behind the three-hit pitching of the James Williams, the Medics came up with their second win of second-half action in the Major Unit Baseball circuit by a score of 8-1.

John Couch suffered the loss. Robert Demas' three singles along with Charles Story's and John Krause's two singles paced the winners. Drard Warden also con-the Medics. Smith, Steward and Bryant each had a single for the 10th Artillery Redlegs.

The 29th Infantry blasted 151st Engineers for four hits and five runs to break a 1-1 tie in the 14th inning for a 6-1 victory. The game went into the tenth inning before Albert Rockwell tripled and scored on Victor River's single. But Paul Snyder scored in the Engineers half of the tenth to even the score, 1-1.

The Infantrymen started a rally in the 14th inning. Curt Gentry's triple; Fred Martin's and Dick Shull's doubles were the big blows for the 29th.

Roy Bowers was credited with the win and Parker Humphrey took the loss. Curt Gentry's triple, double and a single paced the winners. Beers, Gossett and Foster each had two hits, singles, for the Engineers.

AT THE Movies

TWO WEEKS IN ANOTHER TOWN stars Kirk Douglas, Edward G. Robinson, Cyd Charisse and George Hamilton. The story concerns a once-famous actor who goes to Rome in an effort to re-discover himself by starting again on his acting career. Striving to control his uncertainty, he is helped and hindered by an embittered and self-centered film director and a beautiful but selfish woman of the world.

THE BEST OF ENEMIES is an offbeat military comedy in color. It stars David Niven and Michael Wilding. A British career officer matches wits with a slovenly but resourceful Italian officer when their paths cross during World War II. As the fortunes of war shift, each becomes the prisoner of the other and their mutual contempt gives way to grudging respect and admiration.

GUN FIGHT is a western drama starring James Brown and Jean Staley. Two hard-living brothers go their separate ways as one becomes an outlaw while the other is a law-abiding citizen. Ironically, the roads which each follow eventually bring them together for the exciting showdown.

85 Gridders Open Daily Workouts

The 1962 version of the Fort Benning Doughboys began football practice Monday with 85 gridders on hand.

According to the coach, Capt. Leaton Cofield, this number will be cut to 44 by the time the season opens. Presently there are 37 players on orders, leaving Coach Cofield seven men he must select to round out the squad.

Cofield said practice sessions will be held twice daily, an hour morning workout and an hour drill in the afternoon. Practices will deal primarily with passing and physical conditioning.

Warner Is Top Grad

Second Lt. Clarence E. Warner graduated Infantry Officer Orientation Course, Class No. 17, 2nd Student Battalion, The Student Brigade, recently with top honors.

Lt. Warner completed the 8 week-course with the highest overall average in his class, receiving a 95.9 per cent.

Col. Louis A. Kunzig Jr., chief of staff, 2nd Infantry Division, the guest speaker for the graduation exercises, was introduced to the class and guests by Lt. Col. Joffree L. Guoymard, The Student Brigade executive officer. Col Kunzig, congratulated the class on their efforts during the course, and congratulated the honor graduate and presented him with his graduation certificate.

In his address to the graduating body, Col. Kunzig said "that the flexibility of mind and the weighing of every factor are prerequisites to the making of good command decisions." He reminded the men to be ever conscious of responsibilities to their men; understand and know them, and to maintain a person to person relationship.

In closing, the 2nd Division's chief of staff, related, "As you go forth to your new duty assignments, keep this foremost in your minds—that the men under you will look to you for instruction, leadership and inspiration."

Witherington Is 'Best Driver' Of 428th Medics

Winning out over six other competitors in the 428th Medical Battalion's "Driver of the Month" contest recently was Sp4 Gordon E. Witherington of the 128th Medical Company.

Criteria followed in judging the winner included personal appearance of the driver, cleanliness and maintenance of the vehicle, driving ability and general military knowledge.

Inspecting officer was Maj. Jackie E. Edgar. Sp4 Witherington won a three-day pass for being the battalion's top driver.

DNRI Receives 2 Editor-Writers

The Department of Nonresident Instruction this week said farewell to three officers and welcome two new editor-writers.

Capt. Alfred A. Zamparelli and Capt. Gene Sherron departed for the regular course at the Command and General Staff College at Fort Leavenworth, Kan. Capt. Charles M. Harris departed for the associate course at the school and eventual assignment to Korea.

Joining the department as editor-writers are Capt. Willford L. Warren and Capt. Frederic L. Shean.

Freedoms Foundation 1962 Contest Opens

New York (AFPS) — The Freedoms Foundation has announced the opening of its 1962 Letter Awards Program. This year's theme is "My Freedoms and My Responsibilities."

"The Communists are waging a relentless attack on our freedoms and have vowed to destroy them," the Freedoms Foundation warns. Servicemen, serving all over the world to defend these freedoms, are citizens and so are responsible for more than just the military defense of our freedoms.

"Only with a clear, and full understanding of what our freedoms are, and mean, and the responsibilities these freedoms impose, can they fulfill their obligations as citizens and members of the Armed Forces."

All members of the Armed Forces on active duty are eligible to compete for the program's 101 cash prizes amounting to $8,500. First prize is $1,000, with 50 second - place awards of $100 and 50 third-place prizes of $50 each.

George Washington Honor Medals will be awarded to all winners including those who receive honorable mentions.

The subject, "My Freedoms and My Responsibilities," is based on this statement by Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara: "Our fighting men should know the positive values of the freedoms which the Nation is calling them to serve. . . ."

To enter, eligible service personnel should write a letter of between 100 and 500 words on 1962's theme. Entries should be addressed to Freedoms Foundation, Valley Forge, Pa. and postmarked no later than Nov. 1, 1962. Each entrant should include his or her rank or rating, serial number, branch of service, unit address, and home address.

Top winner of each service and the next five winners regardless of service will be invited to Valley Forge on George Washington's birthday, Feb. 22, 1963, to receive their Awards. Attendance at the award presentation will be subject to the commanding officer's approval.

NEW AT TSB . . . Lt. Col. Joffree L. Gueymard recently assumed duties of executive officer of The Student Brigade. He succeeds Lt. Col. James C. Donaghey who is presently assigned to the Command and Staff Department, The Infantry School.

Col. Mulkey Is New Editor Of INFANTRY

Lt. Col. Steve W. Mulkey has been named the new editor of The Infantry School's monthly publication, INFANTRY Magazine.

Col. Mulkey succeeds Lt. Col. James Douglas who has been appointed as Secretary of The Infantry School.

Col. Mulkey came here in May, 1960, from an assignment in the Philippines. He served as The Infantry Center information officer until September, 1961, when he was named special assistant to the commanding general, Maj. Gen. Ben Harrell.

A 1944 graduate of the U. S. Military Academy, Col. Mulkey was awarded an M.A. degree in journalism four years later at the University of Wisconsin at Madison.

Service schools he has attended include The Infantry School, Command and General Staff College and the Armed Forces Staff College at Norfolk, Va.

In WW II

During World War II, Col. Mulkey served in the European Theater with the 66th Infantry, 71st Division. In Korea, in 1953, he served with the 45th Division.

From 1955 to 1958, Col. Mulkey was an instructor at the Military Academy. He has served as administrative assistant to the Supreme Allied commander, Europe and as aide-de-camp to the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff in Washington, D. C.

He has served 80 months overseas.

Among Col. Mulkey's awards and decorations are a Bronze Star Medal with Oak Leaf Cluster and Army Commendation Medal.

75 Cadets Are 'Going Airborne'

Three weeks of airborne training designed to qualify them as paratroopers began here Monday for 75 cadets from the U. S. Air Force Academy.

Also taking training with the cadets, selected students of the Classes of 1963, 1964 and 1965, are three members of the staff of the Colorado-based academy.

Annually since the program began in 1958, a number of volunteers from the academy give up their summer leave to take training. Each year the number of participants has grown.

This is the second group to train here this summer. The first group, composed of 10 members of the Class of 1963, received their Parachutist Badges July 6.

Reserve Medics Are Completing Summer Drills

The 429th Medical Battalion, a Reserve Unit from Savannah, Ga., hosted by the 428th Medical Battalion, is terminating it's two-week summer camp with a five-day field exercise this week.

During the exercise, emphasis will be placed on perimeter defense and night movement.

The commanding officer, Col. John G. Zirkle, a prominent surgeon in Savannah, is a veteran of 24 years in the Reserves.

This is the third year the 429th Medical Battalion has come to Fort Benning. Previously they have trained at Fort Bragg and Fort McPherson.

In 1961 the 429th received the top medical unit honors in Exercise LOGEX, a three-week maneuver with approximately 15,000 participating troops.

Tomorrow, the 21 men in the 429th Medical Battalion will return home.

The mural pictured is of President Andrew Jackson's home, "The Hermitage." Another painting depicts the White House.

Korean Bill Expiration Date Nears

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — The Veterans Administration says there are more than 150,000 Korean Conflict veterans still eligible for the educational provisions of the Korean GI Bill.

Time is running out for them, the VA says, as the education and training of non-disabled Korean veterans expires on Jan. 31, 1965.

This gives those who have already begun training under the bill, or any late starters, just about two and one-half years to complete their courses.

More than 2,372,000 Korean veterans have either gone to college, taken below-college-level training or completed on the-job or on-the-farm courses since the Korean Bill went into effect.

318 Receive Silver Wings

Parachutist Badges were pinned on 318 newly qualified paratroopers in graduation ceremonies here recently.

Honor graduate of the three-week basic airborne course conducted by The Infantry School's Airborne-Air Mobility Department was Pvt. Tyrone L. Keithley.

Included in the class were seven sons of former airborne soldiers. Six of the fathers saw combat duty during World War II and one of them, Galle Bestul, the father of Pvt. William Bestul, served with the 187th Airborne Regimental Combat Team during the Korean conflict.

The World War II veterans included MSgt. (Ret.) William J. Miller, who saw service with the 11th Airborne Division, and in addition, is a former instructor with the Airborne-Air Mobility Department. His son is Pvt. Edward Miller.

Three of the fathers served with the 101st Airborne Division, the famed "Screaming Eagles."

They are Lawrence Doig of Sitka, Alaska, father of Pvt. Bruce DOIG: David Newlin of Columbus, Ohio, father of Pvt. David Newlin, and Bernard Liroff of Miami, Fla., father of Pvt. Alan Liroff.

The remaining two parents served with the equally famous "All-American Division," the 82nd Airborne.

They are Olin Chairs of North, S. C., father of PFC Ernest Chairs, and Leslie Baxter of Corydon, Ky., father of Pvt. Leslie Baxter.

Columbus Unit Trains on Post

The 218th Transportation Company, a general support Reserve unit from Columbus, Ga., has recently completed its annual summer training at Lawson Field.

While stationed here the unit participated in field problems and observed the latest methods of aircraft maintenance.

The 218th, commanded by Capt. Raymond P. Eastburn, is trained in the maintenance of both rotary and fixed-wing aircraft.

Organized in 1956, the unit is the only one of its kind that holds its weekly meetings on a regular Army post.

To Evaluate Army Officers

A two-year Army experiment involving 1,000 junior officers, a simulated invasion, and a mythical Military Assistance Advisory Group (MAAG) will begin at Fort McClellan, Ala., soon in a search for possible answers to future officer assignments.

Purpose of the Army experiment is to test the traditional system of officer selection and the assumption that each officer should be broadly trained and expected to perform well in almost any job. This concept will be tested in view of increasing complexity and precision of performance required by present and future military man-machine systems.

Site of the novel study, which involves defense against a simulated invasion of the capital city of a friendly nation, will be a newly-created unit at Fort McClellan, the Army Officer Evaluation Center.

The center was activated in March and will be in full operation later in the summer. Establishment of the center climaxes a six-year Army research and development effort of the Army Personnel Research Office for the Army Deputy Chief of Staff for Personnel.

The Officer Evaluation Center will operate a mythical MAAG as a field research laboratory where nearly 1,000 junior officers will perform a variety of realistic military tasks taxing combat, technical and administrative abilities. A staff of 14 officers and 38 enlisted personnel, under the command of a combat arms colonel, will play the roles of MAAG superiors and subordinates of the junior officers, as well as members of the friendly foreign army.

Evaluations of task performance will then be compared with experimental test scores obtained earlier in the officers' careers.

RESERVES, NG PASS IN REVIEW

Troops of eight National Guard and Reserve units training here since October ended their active duty last Friday with farewell ceremonies a few days before leaving the post for their home stations.

More than 2,000 officer and enlisted members of the units took part in the parades and awarding of honors at Stroup and Todd Fields at Harmony Church.

Present at both ceremonies were Lt. Gen. T. J. H. Trapnell, commanding general of the Third U. S. Army, and Brig. Gen. John E. Kelly, deputy commanding general of The Infantry Center.

Troop the Line

At Stroup Field the program began with Gen. Trapnell and Gen. Kelly trooping the line before the 391st and 409th Engineer Battalions, Reserve units of Greenville, S. C., and Pine Bluff, Ark., and the 114th and 186th Engineer Companies, National Guard units of Washington, D. C., and Brewton, Ala.

Gen. Trapnell then presented Army Commendation Medals to 24 members of the units and individual certificates to five officers and two enlisted men.

At Todd Field similar ceremonies were conducted for Company C, 204th Signal Battalion, and the 156th Signal Battalion, National Guard units, of Festus, Mo., and Detroit, and the 11th and 223rd Signal Companies, National Guard and Reserve units of Greenville, S. C.,

FOR JOB WELL DONE
Gen. Trapnell Congratulates Capt. Bryan J. Perry Jr., 111th Signal Company

Gen. M. D. Taylor Is JCS Chairman

NEW YORK (AFPS) — Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, a former Army Chief of Staff, has been chosen by President John F. Kennedy to become the new Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, succeeding Gen. Lyman L. Lemnitzer.

The announcement came after Gen. Lemnitzer was named Commander-in-Chief of U.S. Forces in Europe in the same White House statement.

Gen. Taylor has served for the last year as President Kennedy's personal military advisor. A new military adviser to the President has not yet been named.

A West Point graduate, Gen. Taylor was artillery commander of the 82d Airborne Division during WWII. He took part in the Sicilian and Italian campaigns under Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower.

Bold Journey

He was sent through enemy lines to Rome 20 hours before the invasion of the Italian peninsula for a meeting with Italian officials on a proposed airdrop. He made the bold journey aboard a British PT boat, transferring to a waiting Italian Corvette bringing him to Rome.

Later Gen. Eisenhower, in his book Crusade for Europe, wrote of Gen. Taylor:

"The risks he ran were greater than I asked any other agent or emissary to undertake during the war — he carried weighty responsibilities and discharged them with unerring judgment, and every minute was in imminent danger of discovery and death."

Gen. Taylor had retired in July 1959, after serving two terms (starting in June 1955) as Army Chief of Staff during President Eisenhower's administration.

Gen. Wheeler Named Army Chief of Staff

NEW YORK (AFPS) — The White House has named Gen. Earle G. Wheeler, Deputy Commander-in-Chief of the U. S. European Command, to the post of Army Chief of Staff. He follows Gen. George H. Decker who retires Sept. 30.

Gen. Wheeler was Director of the Joint Staff from April, 1960, to February, 1962, before going to Camp des Loges, near Paris, and NATO Headquarters.

Gen. Norstad Retires

Gen. Wheeler's new assignment was announced shortly after the White House said Air Force Gen. Lauris Norstad, Supreme Commander, Allied Forces in Europe and Commander-in-Chief, U. S. Forces, Europe, would retire from his double post at NATO Headquarters in Paris.

Gen. Decker, who served as Army Vice Chief of Staff under Gen. Lyman L. Lemnitzer and then as Chief of Staff, is an appointee of President Eisenhower.

He twice succeeded Gen. Lemnitzer, who was just named Commander-in-Chief U. S. Forces, Europe, first in the post of commander of U.N.

DA to Study Junior Officer Assignments

New York (AFPS) — A two-year experiment incorporating nearly 1,000 junior officers, a simulated invasion, and a mock Military Assistance Advisory Group (MAAG) is being planned by the Army. Through the experiment, which will take place at Ft. McClellan, Ala., the Army hopes to find a new way of evaluating officers for future assignments.

Traditional systems of officer selection use the assumption that each officer should have a broad range of abilities in order to perform well in a variety of jobs. These will be tested in the light of increasing complexities in present and future man-machine military systems.

A newly established unit at Ft. McClellan, the Army Officer Evaluation Center, will run the simulated MAAG where the junior officers will execute a variety of realistic military assignments testing their combat, technical and administrative abilities.

SFC Moore Fires Pistol Record At Camp Perry National Matches

By SSgt. Lee LaCombe

CAMP PERRY, Ohio — Two national records were broken here Tuesday as more than 2,600 of the nation's best pistol shooters opened three days of competition for honors in the 1962 National Rifle and Pistol Matches.

SFC Alvin J. Moore of Fort Benning's Marksmanship Training Unit, cracked out 198-4X in the .22-caliber slow fire match, first event of the day, to better the old mark of 196 set by SFC William B. Blankenship Jr., defending national pistol champion.

PO2 (Petty Officer Second Class) Donald Hamilton, U. S. Navy, broke the time fire record with a 200-17X effort, one "X" shot better than the old mark. The "X" ring is the small circle within the bullseye used to break ties.

The .22 caliber crown was won by SFC R. L. Cochran, also of MTU, with an 884-37X. This gives him a one point lead in the race for individual honors over Capt. Franklin Green, U. S. Air Force; Sgt. Larry Hauman, Marine Corps, and Sgt. Blankenship.

In other results of Tuesday's firing, the Army won two matches.

SFC Sam Hunter, of MTU captured the rapid fire match with a score of 29-12X. Sgt. Cochran walked off with the final fired match, the National Match Course, with 298-14X.

The individual matches ended last night and the team events end today. The pistol portion of the 1962 championship matches will terminate Saturday with the firing of the two national trophy matches.

Next week will be the small bore rifle competition, followed by high power rifle championships. Complete results will be carried in the Aug. 10 edition of The Bayonet.

and Indianapolis, Ind.

Presents Medals

Gen. Trapnell presented Army Commendation Medals to four officers and six enlisted men and Certificates of Achievement signed by Maj. Gen. Ben Harrell, commanding general of The Infantry Center, to an officer and nine enlisted men.

In addition, all members of the 19 National Guard and Reserve units, which came here in the call-up, will receive individual certificates of appreciation signed by Secretary of the Army Cyrus H. Vance.

Concluding the ceremonies at Stroup and Todd Fields an hour apart, Gen. Trapnell thanked the men on behalf of the Army for their part in strengthening the nation's defense at a time of possible emergency during the Berlin crisis.

He added that the call to active duty, the most efficient in the Army's history, acted as a deterrent to enemy aggression.

"You have helped to preserve the principles on which our country is founded," he said.

Other National Guard and Reserve units at the post had their farewell review July 24.

Wheeler

Forces and U. S. Forces in Korea and then as Army Chief of Staff.

A graduate of the United States Military Academy, West Point, in 1932, Gen. Wheeler began his military career as an enlisted man in the District of Columbia National Guard in 1924.

Gen. Lemnitzer Is New SACEUR

Army Gen. Lyman L. Lemnitzer, one of the drafters of the NATO treaty, will succeed Gen. Lauris Norstad as Supreme Allied Commander, U. S. Forces in Europe.

Gen. Lemnitzer's two - year term as Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff ends Sept. 30. Gen. Norstad retires from the Air Force on Nov. 1.

Sgt. Fedrick Now At NCO Academy

Sgt. Johnnie L. Fedrick is on approximately 46 days temporary duty at Fort Jackson, S. C. He is attending school at the Third U. S. Army Non-Commissioned Officer Academy.

Sgt. Fedrick is locally assigned to Battery B, 29th Artillery (Searchlight), 1st Infantry Brigade, as a chief of searchlight section.

Col. Stephens New Iran Army Advisor

Lt. Col. Norman M. Stephens, recently arrived in Iran from an assignment with the Infantry Board, here. He has been assigned the duties of Senior Advisor, Field Army Team S4 (Infantry Center), ARMISH-MAAG.

ARMISH-MAAG, the U. S. Military Mission with the Iranian Army and the U. S. Military Assistance Advisory Group in Iran, has the mission of assisting and advising fighting forces.

Gen. Ondrick Retires In Ceremonies Here

Brig. Gen. John G. Ondrick retired from the Army in ceremonies here Monday.

A review for the general, who has been at the post for a month, was held on Chapel Field. Maj. Gen. Charles H. Chase, commanding general of the 2nd Infantry Division, was reviewing officer.

Honors included an 11-gun salute fired by gun crews from Battery A, 2nd Howitzer Battalion, 10th Artillery, 1st Infantry Brigade. Also participating in the ceremony were the honor guard company, Company C, 1st Battle Group, 29th Infantry, 1st Infantry Brigade, and The Infantry Center Band.

Gen. Ondrick came here after serving as civil administrator for the U. S. Civil Administration on the Ryukyu Islands for nearly three years.

He began his military career upon graduating from the U. S. Military Academy in 1932. Before World War II, he served at posts in the U. S. and overseas, graduating from The Infantry School in 1937.

From 1941 to 1942, he was military attache in Iran. In 1943, Gen. Ondrick completed the Infantry advanced officer course at Fort Benning and assumed command of the 309th Infantry Regiment, 78th Infantry Division, serving in combat in both France and Germany during World War II.

Gen. Ondrick entered the Command and General Staff College, Fort Leavenworth, Kan., in 1946 for a five-month course. He was graduated from the Industrial College of the Armed Forces in 1947.

From 1947 to 1951, he served as a member of the faculty at the Command and General Staff College, and the Army War College at Carlisle Barracks, Pa. He is a graduate of both colleges.

In Washington, D. C., the one-star general was a member of the Army Joint Intelligence Group in the Office of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

In September of that year, he went to Eighth U. S. Army headquarters in Seoul, Korea, where he served as G-4, and later as deputy chief of staff for administration until December, 1955.

Returning to the U. S., Gen. Ondrick was assigned to the Presidio of San Francisco, where he became deputy chief of staff of Sixth Army.

He wears the Silver Star, Bronze Star Medal with Oak Leaf Cluster, Army Commendation Medal, Combat Infantryman Badge, the French Croix de Guerre, and Korean Order of Ulchi with Silver Star.

He is married to the former Patricia Bernice Hodgins of Chicago. They have two daughters, Patricia, 15, and Mary Kathleen, 13.

TRAVEL TOGETHER . . . SP5 Daisy Spires Carson, WAC Company, The Infantry Center Troop Command and her husband, SSgt. Dale Carson of The Infantry School, proudly compare orders to Munich, Germany. The Carsons, who married in June, will travel together and be assigned together in Munich.

Maj. White's Feat Is Cause for Just Pride

Perhaps it didn't seem quite as dramatic as the first orbital trips of Lt. Col. John Glenn or Lt. Cdr. Scott Carpenter, but the flight of Maj. Robert M. White in the X-15 to more than 58 miles above the earth is nevertheless unique, filled with that same devotion and courage exhibited by earlier space pioneers.

The adventure was a first and it made history. It achieved something the missile astronauts cannot as yet claim. For the major rode a self-powered craft into space and brought it back again. No separation boosters were required.

At the completion of the flight Maj. White became the fifth American to qualify for astronaut wings by breaking the 50-mile space line set up by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration and the military services.

Future flights may even have the rocket-like experimental craft shooting for a 75-mile height. It is certainly a tribute to the pilot and designers of the plane that everything went well.

The nation and the Air Force can show a just pride in this American. No doubt others will follow, but it is with tremendous satisfaction that all America salutes Maj. White as the first winged spaceman. (AFPS)

The Usual Harvest

The Judge Says . . .

Ignorance may be bliss to some people but not to those involved with contracts. Some soldiers have the idea that being too poor to pay (TPTP) is a defense against payment of a debt.

Remember that inability to pay is not a legal defense for failure to make your time payments. Also, it is not a legal defense to your obligation on a contract to show that the car or appliance has been turned back, repossessed, or that the price was excessive.

Failure to make payments on time, or completely, enables the mortgagee, in most chattel mortgage contracts, to repossess the item purchased and to sell it, applying the proceeds to the indebtedness on the item.

It should be realized that the original purchaser (i.e., mortgagor) is legally obligated under most contracts to pay any deficiency which might result from the failure of the proceeds of the sale of the item to equal the amount of the indebtedness. This deficiency can be collected by legal action by the mortgagee, if necessary.

Normally, the proceeds of the item resold do not equal its current market value as the mortgage has little incentive to sell the item because he is practically insured against any loss.

Therefore, in most cases, it is obviously ill-advised to turn back an item or to fail to make the payments.

The Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act of 1940 does give a soldier certain relief on obligations existing prior to entry into service from civilian life, but does not extend its benefits to obligations contracted while in service.

Obtain advice on the legal aspects of your present obligations or proposed contracts from the legal assistance officer, Office of the Staff Judge Advocate.

SURGEON SAYS

Watch Your Diet

By Maj. Jean M. Hawkins
AMSC
Food Service Division, MAH

Diet has long been used as a corrective measure in disease, but why not give a thought to diet as a preventive measure.

For example, let's consider heart disease. Arteriosclerotic cardiovascular disease outranks all other causes of death in the United States today (54.3 per cent), accounting for more than 90,000 deaths yearly. This is frequently associated with high serum lipids (fats).

The average American diet provides almost 50 per cent of its calories from fat. Studies have shown that diets which reduce this figure to 20-25 per cent will help lower fats. Wouldn't it be easier and more pleasant to cut down on strikes, than to wait and require a really fat-free diet after it occurs?

Cutting down on fats does eliminate them. It simply means that you should use a sensible approach to your diet. If you follow these simple rules, you may save yourself considerable trouble in the future:

(A.) Cut down on the amount of fried foods that you eat. You may be surprised at how good broiled or roasted meat can taste. This doesn't mean that you can never have a fried meal — just limit them.

(B.) Limit yourself to one pat of butter or margarine at meals.

(C.) Don't use butter in preparing your vegetables.

(D.) Reduce your intake of rich desserts. Why not serve fresh fruit now that it is in season? When you DO have a rich dessert, take only one serving and make that a small one.

(E.) Use fish, shellfish and poultry as a main course more often. These are low in the saturated fats which are associated with heart trouble. (Many specialists now agree on a diet in which beef, pork, veal and lamb are eaten only four times each week.)

(F.) Use unsaturated oils and margarines in your cooking.

(G.) Drink and cook with skim milk rather than whole milk. Each glass of whole milk contains ten more grams (90 calories of fat) than skim or buttermilk.

The rules above have a double value. They not only cut down your fat intake, but also point out a very good and practically painless way to lose those few added pounds you've been worrying about. It is commonly agreed that excess weight greatly increases the danger of having heart trouble. This is only reasonable when you stop to think that every added pound is that much more of a load on your heart.

If you really want to lose weight, don't try a crash diet or a liquid diet. To keep your weight down, you must establish correct eating habits. Try these suggestions:

(A.) Use iced tea in place of high caloric carbonated beverages. You'll find that it is even more refreshing.

(B.) When you want a snack, munch on fresh vegetables rather than peanuts, candy, etc.

(C.) Eat either bread or potato at a meal — not both.

(D.) When you serve canned fruit, rinse off the sugar syrup and save several calories the easy way.

(E.) Use Ice Milk instead of Ice Cream.

(F.) Eat breakfast . . . it will keep you from snacking during the day, and give you more energy so that you can get the exercise you need.

CHAPLAIN'S CORNER

Practice Makes Perfect

By Chaplain (Capt.) William J. Barragy

None of us would be so foolish as to attempt to enter into an athletic competition without being familiar with the game, and without practice. Practice is necessary in order to do anything well. Practice gives us familiarity in acting and builds up good habits.

There are certainly many times when we feel the need to pray. We feel that without the help of Gow we will be unable to take care of the problems that face us, but we are not used to praying and prayer comes only with difficulty.

It is possible in these circumstances to give up praying altogether. Here is exactly where we should realize that if we are ever to speak to the Lord with ease that we have to practice. The habit of prayer makes one of our primary duties to our Creator easier to fulfill, for the difficulty we might experience in prayer in no way changes the fact that we have a difinite obligation to pray.

As little children we probably were taught to pray at bedtime and at mealtime. There's nothing so particularly important about these times of day, but what was important was that the beginning of a habit of prayer was planted in our hearts. If we had continued to pray with regularity right up to the present, then we should have a strong habit of prayer to use now.

There's no time limit on when we can start to build up our prayer life, the important thing it to start, and then to follow through with repeated efforts to pray. Doing this we'll find that we will soon have a loving familiarity with Our Father in Heaven, and that we will be able to speak to Him easily, confident that we are heard, and confident that we will be answered.

"Ask and you will receive; knock and it will be opened to you."

Liberty and Communism

Purpose of Education

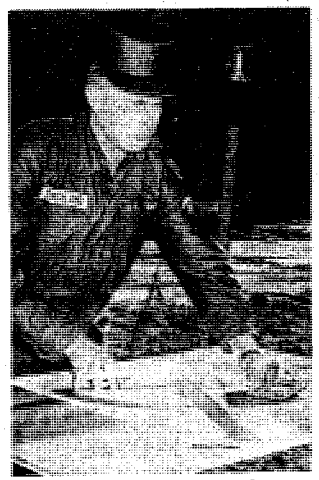
The purpose of education in a democracy and in a totalitarian regime is entirely different. This difference stems from the opposing views regarding the dignity of the individual and the relation of the individual to the state or to the dictatorship.

In 1779, during the War of Independence, Thomas Jefferson introduced in the Virginia legislature a Bill for the More General Diffusion of Knowledge, designed to establish a system of public elementary and secondary education in that state.

The bill was not adopted; it was not until 1817 that a similar bill drafted by Jefferson was passed. In Notes on Virginia (1784), Jefferson explained his reason for promoting general education.

They show that he was one of the first leaders of modern democracy to understand what Aristotle had pointed out, namely, that democracy requires the education of all citizens. To Jefferson the chief purpose of education was to safeguard the democratic form of government.

While Jefferson insisted that universal education would safeguard personal liberty, both he and his contemporaries were advocates of individualism, and also urged public education on other grounds, such as the development of the individual and the promotion of morality and individual happiness.



Modern democracies consider education to be so important that attendance in all grades of the common school, up to and including the eighth grade, is compulsory; some countries require attendance of all youths up to 18 years of age.

In other words, the authority of parents over their children is limited to the extent that they can deprive their children of a common school education.

While this is a limitation on individual liberty, it is a universally justified restriction in the interest of the development of children, the citizens of tomorrow.

In all Communist systems, public education is rigidly controlled by the Communist Party through the central government. In the Soviet Union, the so-called People's Schools are one of the principal agencies of the Communist Party for molding the youth in the Communist mold.

By the same token, Communists insist on compulsory attendance in the People's Schools or in special schools maintained by the Party and the Soviet Government.

Infantry School Report

ON THE WAY
Capt. William Green Observes
A Student Observing

Infantryman Meets His 'Best Friend': Artillery

You are the commander of a rifle company in the attack. Your company has just reached the high ground on which you are now located. Suddenly, you receive a heavy volume of rifle and machine gun fire from an enemy position to your front!

Your sole Artillery forward observer, caught in the initial burst of fire, crumbles with serious wounds that will require his immediate evacuation. What to do? That's right — YOU act as the forward observer and call immediately for Artillery fire!

This situation is re-enacted many times in Problem 7200 at Concord Observation Post where members of Orientation Courses are acquainted with the role of "Artillery in Support of the Rifle Company."

Capt. Niles Fulwyler, principle instructor for this problem, points out that the exercise is designed to acquaint the newly commissioned officer with the Artillery available in the Infantry division and to give him the opportunity to adjust Artillery fire and to observe its deadly effects on the ground before him. Approximately 3,500 students have attended the class since its started in July, 1961.

In Three Parts

The problem is conducted in three phases. It starts with a discussion of the mission and organization of Artillery, fire planning, and a demonstration of methods and procedures of adjusting Artillery fire.

Highlighting this phase is an exercise which places all students in a tactical situation requiring each to act as forward observer and determine data for bringing fire on a target designated by the instructor. The data computed by one of the students is then selected as the actual fire mission.

At this time, Battery C, 2nd Howitzer Battalion, 10th Artillery, moves by in mounted formation and occupies a firing position immediately in front of the student bleachers. The battery, commanded by a former Infantryman, Capt. William F. Green, then demonstrates the results of this adjustment when the entire battalion commences fire and completely covers the target area with exploding rounds.

The second phase of the problem is a "round robin" of four stations. At the first three stations the students observe, in turn, a forward observation post, a fire direction center, and the firing battery. They also observe the activities that take place during the conduct of a fire mission.

Weapons Displayed

Station Four is a weapons display where the students get a close look at some of the weapons found within Division artillery. According to Sgt. John Freeman, Battery B, 10th Artillery, most attention in the display centers on the two weapons capable of delivering nuclear fire — the eight-inch howitzer and the Honest John.

The final phase of the problem is conducted by dividing the class into groups and having each group occupy a selected observation post. For approximately two hours, students have the opportuoity to apply the techniques of forward observers and to best their abilities of properly requesting and adjusting Artillery fire.

Maj. James E. Bagley III, of the Artillery Committee, states that this practical period is the "most beneficial and memorable to the student, as it is usually his first opportunity to adjust Artillery fire."

By the end of the afternoon, after 'shooting' several hundred rounds of ammunition, Orientation Course students have a better understanding of the role of Artillery and how it befriends the Infantryman on the battlefield.

In the words of Lt. Col. James E. Echols Jr., chairman of the Command and Staff Department's Artillery Committee, "Artillery in Support of the Rifle Company introduces the young officer to his best friend on the battlefield — the Field Artillery.

"By demonstrating Artillery fire as it appears in combat and by permitting the student to 'shoot-it-himself,' the Artillery Committee allows the student to acquire a lasting respect for the combat power available to him from the Artillery."

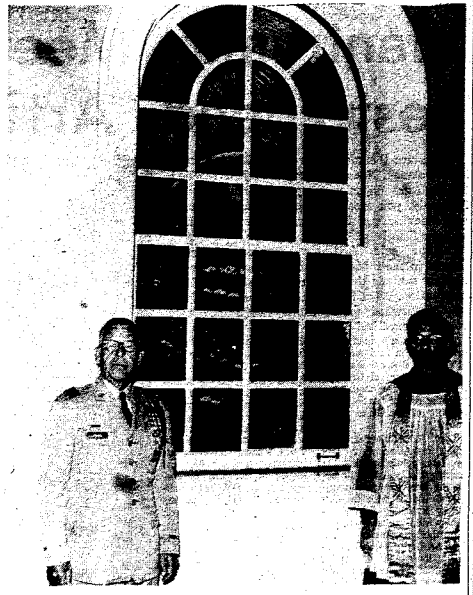
No grade E-8 or E-9 personnel will be trained for or classified into MOS listed above, unless directed by the Department of the Army. The list of surplus MOS in DA Circular 611-4 appliees to personnel actions other than appointments for grades E-5 through E-7.

Chaplain Leaves 29th Infantry For New Duty

The Catholic chaplain of the 29th Infantry Brigade, Chaplain (1st Lt.) Michael M. DeSantis, left Wednesday for a new assignment at Fort Davis in the Panama Canal Zone.



Chaplain DeSantis has been here since December, 1961, at which time he was assigned to the 1st Infantry Brigade.

A native New Yorker, Chaplain DeSantis received his Chaplain schooling at Fort Slocum, N. Y.

He was ordained a priest in 1955 and prior to coming to Fort Benning, Chaplain DeSantis was a parish priest in the Archdiocese of Washington, D. C.

440-FOOT DIVE

President Harry Truman made a 440 foot dive in a captured German submarine.

A.F. Cadets Complete TIS Jump School

Among the 243 graduates of The Infantry School's basic airborne course who received Parachutist Badges in recent ceremonies here were 10 cadets from the Air Force Academy, Class of 1965.

The first of two groups from the Colorado based academy to take jump training at the post this summer, the cadets lived up to the objectives of the training as stated by academy officials, "to successfully complete the motivational and challenging training of the airborne soldier, thereby acquiring a skill of great value to the professional airmen."

Honor graduate of the class was Army PFC Nicholas R. Mrsich.

Also included in the class were the sons of three airborne veterans of World War II.

One second generation paratrooper is Pvt. Otis H. Ashley, III, whose father, Otis H. Ashley, II, served with the Marine Corps' paramarines.

Another young soldier to follow in his father's footsteps is Pvt. Jefferson H. Triplett Jr., whose fathers served with the 503rd Parachute Infantry.

The third second generation paratrooper, Pvt. James T. Steed III, is the son of James T. Steed II, who saw combat duty with the 82nd Airborne Division.

Lt. Col. Cellucci Honored In Yard of Month Contest

The rotating plaque awarded for the Yard of the Month went to Lt. Col. and Mrs. Loreto Cellucci whose residence at 625 Gibson Drive, Custer Terrace, was selected as the most attractive for July.

Col. Cellucci is the senior intelligence instructor on the Attack Committee, Command and Staff Department, The Infantry School.

Area winners, selected by The Infantry Center officials, included SFC Jack A. Tinney, Company G, Infantry School Student Brigade; 2nd Lt. John A. Olzewski, Battery C, 2nd Howitzer Battalion, 10th Artillery; Maj. Charles E. Welch, Data Processing Office, The Infantry School, and SFC Elvis J. McCullogh, 666th Transportation Company.

Eight other yards were recommended for letters of appreciation.

Five Generals Will Visit Here

Five general officers, one the Air Force military aide to President John F. Kennedy, and another from Iran, are scheduled to visit here for training and observation purposes beginning next week.

Brig. Gen. William T. Seawell, commandant of cadets, Air Force Academy, is scheduled to arrive Sunday to observe cadets from the Classes of 1963, 1964 and 1965 make Airborne jumps.

Over 70 cadets have given up their summer leave to participate in this training.

Scheduled to arrive Monday is Brig. Gen. Dillman A. Rash, commanding general of the 100th Division, Fort Chaffee, Ark.

Forty-nine members of the division are taking airborne training.

Graduation day for these men and the other members of the class, numbering over 700 at the beginning of the course, is scheduled for next Friday.

Gen. McHugh

The Air Force military aide to the president of the United States, Brig. Gen. Godfrey T. McHugh, is scheduled to arrive here Sunday for airborne training.

Gen. Ordoobadi

Brig. Gen. Mansour Ordoobadi, chief of the Mashhad Gendarmerie Regiment, Imperial Army of Iran, is scheduled to arrive here Sunday for a three-day visit.

With him will be two other Iranian officers, Brig. Gen. Gendarmerie Regimental Ordnance, and Col. Naghi Pourvash, chief of the Legal Department, Joint Affairs.

They will be briefed on the history and organization of The Infantry Center, the organization and mission of The Infantry School, and be familiarized with the role of the post in support of training.

The Allied officers have special interest in small arms marksmanship training methods.

Gen. Ordoobadi and his group are scheduled to depart the post Aug. 8 for Fort Gordon to visit the Military Police School.

VFW Ladies Open 28th Teenage Writing Contest

The Ladies Auxiliary to the Veterans of Foreign Wars announced today the opening of its 28th annual National High School Writing Contest. The topic will be "What I Can Do For My Country."

The writing contest, first started in 1935, is intended to put before the student some problem of patriotism, citizenship or similar topic about which he must study and learn in order to write the essay.

During the last school year some 40,000 students wrote on the contest topic, "America the Beautiful — How Long Without Clean Water?" The U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare supplied students with free kits of background readings on water and control; and awarded to each state winner a special certificate. Dr. Albert E. Burke, Cheshire, Conn., an authority affairs, served as chairman of the national judges.

Students in all public, private and parochial high schools are eligible to enter the contest. National prizes are: first, $1,000 cash scond, $500; third, $250; fourth, $100 and gold medals, and 20 other cash awards for honorable mention. State and local contest winners receive additional Auxiliary awards which vary with the community.

Further information on the 1962-63 contest may be obtained from local Auxiliary units, or by writing to the Contest Department, V.F.W. Auxiliary, 406 West 34th Street, Kansas City 11, Mo.

Auxiliary members annually give more than three million dollars, and more than six million hours, to volunteer service for hospitalized veterans, community service, Americanism programs, assistance to youth groups, civil defense and legislation benefiting veterans and their families. Members are the wives, mothers, sisters, daughters, granddaughters and widows of veterans who have served overseas in the U. S. armed forces, or women who have themselves had overseas service.

Dental Health Series

Dental Science Keeps Eye on the Teenagers

By Maj. Charles W. Dobson
Preventive Dentistry Officer

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The following is the teath in a series of weekly articles presented in the interest of better dental health.)

You may not know it, but dental science is keeping a sharp eye on teen-agers. Why? Because the rate of tooth decay is known to be higher during adolescence than at any other time of life.

All over the country dental scientists are at work to find out why this is so, and what can be done about it. Communities are getting aroused to take part in dental health projects, carried on with cooperation of dentists, parents, teachers, and most important, young people themselves. Exciting studies, tests and experiments are going on. More and more truth is coming to light.

For example, it has been found that painting childrens teeth with fluoride solution annually can prevent much decay. The experts are now trying to find out how effective the treatment might be in adults. Scientists are searching too, for more facts about the growth and nourishment of sound teeth which will not decay readily.

Keep posted about what the scientists, physicians and dentists are doing. If your school is asked to take part in a dental health study, jump at the chance. It will mean much to your future and that of your children. Well, that's fine for the future, you may say, but what about now?

To that we must say: Now is the time! Don't wait for tomorrow's miracle to pop out of a laboratory. Be your own laboratory today. Use your head for your teeth. After all, they're your teeth. Not a soul can do for them what you yourself can do.

All you need to do is put into practice what you know right now about:

Intelligent Eating,
Prompt Cleaning,
Regular Care.

Your teeth depend upon you. Give them these three things and chances are you can depend upon them.

Artillery Completes Unit CPX

Personnel and equipment of the 2nd Howitzer Battalion, 10th Artillery, have returned from a successful three-day 1st Infantry Brigade Command Post Exercise.

Purpose of the problem was to train commanders, staff sections, communications personnel and selected headquarters personnel in the planning, conduct and execution of a CPX.

Some of the objectives were to detect problem areas in the present brigade organization; to determine status of equipment; to test current field standing operating procedures (SOP's) and directives and determine their feasibility and need for revision and to determine the capability of the 1st Infantry Brigade to perform as a tactical organization.

Precise execution of the exercise was mainly dependent on prior planning coordination and execution of movement to ad from the dispersal areas, defensive situations, counter attacks, passage of lines, and attack situations.

CALDWELL

Robert A. Caldwell, first sergeant of Hdqs. and Hdqs. Company, 806th Engineer Battalion, served both in World War II and in Korea.

Completing basic training following entering the Army in September, 1941, Sgt. Caldwell was assigned to the First Air Force, Mitchel Field, N.C.

In 1943, he went to Europe with the 1412 Engineers as an equipment operator. After World War II he re-enlisted and went to the 2nd Engineer Special Brigade as an equipment sergeant.

Sgt. Caldwell was sent to Japan and assigned to the 3rd Engineer Combat Battalion, 24th Infantry Division, as platoon sergeant. He was sent to Korea with that unit in July, 1950.

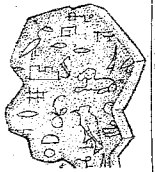
Wounded in action shortly after his arrival in Korea, Sgt. Caldwell was evacuated to Army and Navy General Hospital, Hot Springs, Ark. There he received the Purple Heart and the 24th Infantry Unit Citation.

His next assignment was here with the 78th Engineers at Sand Hill.

In 1951 he went to Austria with the 518th Special Demolition Company which, at the time, was the only unit of its kind in the Army. It was in Austria that Sgt. Caldwell became first sergeant of Company A, 70th Engineers.

Returning from Austria in 1954, Sgt. Caldwell was assigned as first sergeant of Company, 662nd Engineers, 45th Division, at Fort Rucker, Ala., later to move here with that division.

Upon activation of the 577th Engineer Battalion, Sgt. Caldwell was transferred to Company B, as first sergeant, remaining there until February, 1956, and was shipped to France where he spent 3½ years with the 97th Engineers as first sergeant of Hdqs. Company.



Sgt. Caldwell joined the Polar Research and Development Center at Fort Belvoir, Va., in March, 1960. With this unit he participated in some of the greatest machinery and equipment movement ever to cross the ice caps of Greenland.

After spending 4½ months in Greenland, Sgt. Caldwell returned to Fort Benning and was assigned to Range Maintenance Section of the Post Engineers.

Sgt. Caldwell completed his civilian schooling in Oneonta, Ala., where he participated in football, basketball and track.

He resides in Columbus with his wife, Mary, and their four children: Bert, 19; Allen, 14; Kenneth, 13, and Mary, 11.

WW II Veterans Of 83rd Infantry To Hold Reunion

WASHINGTON (ANS) — The 83rd Infantry Division — the famed Thunderbolt Division of World War II, for the third straight year, is conducting an extensive search for some 30,000 of its former members. That is the number of men on the roster that have not been contracted since the end of the war. These men are scattered all over the United States.

Every year the 83rd holds a reunion. This year the 16th annual conclave will be held at Atlantic City, N. J., August 16, 17 and 18, at the Hotel Ambassador on the board walk. A great program has been arranged and nationally known speakers will address the meetings.

All former members of the old 83rd are urged to contact the national security, Harry Lockwood, 43 Oakland Ave., Jersey City, N. J.

Jumper, Dad Wear Same Badge

The largest class to graduate since the consolidation of airborne training schools last winter, 517 men, received Parachutist Badges in ceremonies here recently.

Included were three U. S. Marines from the 2nd Forces Reconnaissance Group at Camp Lejeune, N. C., and an Allied officer, Capt. Manuel Gredara of the Philippines.

Honor graduate of the Infantry School's three-week course was Pvt. Bernard M. Stanahan.

A highlight of the ceremony was the return of a 1943 graduate of the course, Charles Gould Sr. of St. Louis, Mo., who pinned his original Parachutist Badge on his 20-year-old son, Pvt. Charles, Jr.

The elder Gould a sports writer with The St. Louis Globe Democrat newspaper, served with the 513th Parachute Infantry Regiment during World War II and made a combat jump in Holland.

Arriving earlier in the week the newspaperman observed much of his son's training.

"Some of the techniques have changed," he stated, "but the end result is about the same ... first class fighting men."

There were two other second generation paratroopers in the class, Pvt. Harold W. Cooke, whose father, Oscar T. Cooke, served with the 101st Airborne Division during World War II, and Pvt. Clifford D. Gross, Jr., whose father, Clifford, Sr., saw World War II combat with the same unit.

Three Depart From ICDA

Leaving the Infantry Combat Developments Agency for assignment with the G-4 Section, U. S. Army Pacific, is Lt. Col. William F. Dellinger, Col. Dellinger served as project officer with the Doctrine and Organization Division and Plans Division.

Col. Dellinger entered active duty in 1942, after graduating from Clemson A&M College. He is also a graduate of The Infantry School's Infantry Officer Career course and Command and General Staff College.

Col. Dellinger's decorations are the Silver Star, Bronze Star with Oak Leaf Cluster and the Combat Infantryman's Badge.

Lt. Col. Kenneth E. Dohleman, Chief Combat Materiel Division, leaves the Infantry Combat Developments Agency for assignment as a student at the Armed Forces Staff College, Norfolk, Va.

After graduating from OCS in 1946, Col. Dobelman subsequently completed the Airborne Course, Infantry School Infantry Officer Career Course 1955, and Command and General Staff College in 1959.

Col. Dohleman's decorations include the Bronze Star and Combat Infantryman's Badge.

Leaving the Infantry Combat Developments Agency for "Operation Bootstrap" at the university of Omaha, Neb., is Capt. Arnold S. Stallman. Capt. Stallman served as project officer with the Combat Materiel Division. Capt. Stallman graduated from OCS in 1952, and the Infantry School's Infantry Career Course in 1960.

His decorations include the Combat Infantryman's Badge and Purple Heart.

UNITED STATES ARMY STRAC READY FORCE

Fort Benning, Ga. FRIDAY, AUGUST 3, 1962

Carolina-Bound

Div. Troops Move To 'Swift Strike'

Approximately 7,000 men of the 2nd Division leave tomorrow via motor convoy for the first leg of their journey to the Exercise SWIFT STRIKE II maneuver area.

The convoy will stop at Fort Gordon, near Augusta, Ga., to spend Saturday and Sunday nights before converging upon the exercise assembly area near the South Carolina towns of Manville, McBride's Corner and Sardinia.

Some by Bus

Some 2,000 men of the 1st, 38th and 97th Infantry battle groups and the 7th Cavalry will leave Fort Benning Monday by bus for a non-stop trip to the assembly area.

All of the division's heavy equipment, such as engineer machinery and track vehicles, were shipped by rail earlier this week and should arrive at Fort Jackson, S. C. by Monday. From there the equipment will be moved into the exercise area.

Two 2nd Division units left earlier for the exercise area. The 122nd Signal Battalion departed Fort Benning last week to set up communications equipment within the 100-mile long, 40-mile wide exercise corridor. Division Hq. and Hq. Co. left Tuesday to establish the command post site for the division's assembly area.

Largest Exercise

Exercise SWIFT STRIKE II, the U. S. Strike Command's largest exercise of the year, will involve some 70,000 combat-ready forces of the Army and Air Force. The 2nd Division, the 82nd Airborne Division, Fort Bragg N. C., and the 2nd Logistical Command, Fort Lee, Va., will form the "Red" aggressor force, and air power will be supplied by the 9th Air Force. Lieutenant General Thomas W. Dunn, commander of the 111 Corps, Fort Hood, Tex., will be in command of the "Red" forces.

Opposing them will be the "Blue" force, which is comprised of the 101st Airborne Division, Fort Campbell, Ky., the 1st Reconnaissance Squadron, 15th Armored Cavalry, Fort Hood, Tex., and the 4th Transport Terminal Command, Fort Story, Va., The 19th Air Force will support the "Blue" force. The XVIII Airborne Corps will be in command of the "Blues."

Exercise SWIFT STRIKE II will be staged almost entirely on privately - owned land in South and North Carolina and will last 15 days. Members of the 2nd Division are tentatively scheduled to begin leaving the exercise area on or about August 19.

DA Picks 38th Inf. For Rotaplan Kick-Off

TO EUROPE IN THE FALL . . . From left, PFC Robert Grey, Sp4 Donald Spangler and Cpl Joseph Chapman, all of Company A, 38th Infantry, were out patrolling this week in preparation for Exercise SWIFT STRIKE II. These men along with other members of the 38th are scheduled to travel to Europe in October to inaugurate the Army's new "Rotaplan." (Photo by Miller)

The 2nd Division's 38th Infantry has been selected by Department of the Army to inaugurate the experimental unit rotation plan due to begin operation around Oct. 1.

The 38th Infantry, commanded by Col. Maurice C. Holden, will leave for Europe on or near that date, exchanging places with the 1st Battle Group, 26th Infantry of the 8th Infantry Division.

The rotation plan, known as "Rotaplan," when fully implemented will provide for the rotation of three battle groups to Europe, with one rotating to the U. S. every two months. The battle group returning to the states will be replaced in Europe by a battle group in CONUS.

Dependents Stay

Movement of dependents of individuals assigned to "Rotaplan"-units will not be authorized to overseas commands. Also, further relocation of dependents in the United States at government expense will not be authorized during the period their sponsors are overseas — which will be for six months. However, dependents occupying government quarters at the time their sponsors receive orders for temporary duty overseas will be permitted to continue such occupancy, with privileges such as medical care continuing unabated.

Also, nearly 4,000 dependents in Europe with the 8th Infantry Division will be required by "Rotaplan" to return to the United States during the next ten months.

Third Army C of S Visits 2nd Division

The Chief of Staff, Third U. S. Army, visited the 2nd Division yesterday.

Brigadier General Robert M. Blanchard Jr., making his initial visit to the 2nd Division since becoming chief of staff, was met at division headquarters by Col. John T. Corley, assistant division commander.

After conferring with Col. Corley the general was briefed by Capt. James W. Phillips, Infantry Training Officer, G-3. Following the briefing, General Blanchard was escorted by Col. Corley to Sand Hill, where the new chief of staff visited the 9th Infantry and spoke with Col. Clifford P. Hannum, the battle group commanding officer.

Immediately after leaving the 9th Infantry, General Blanchard made a general tour of Sand Hill while enroute to Kelley Hill, where he spoke with Col. Maurice C. Holden, the commander of the 38th Infantry, the unit that soon will leave for Europe under the Army's new "Rotaplan" unit rotation plan.

Sp4 C. Neal Wins Div Soldier-of-Month Title

The division Soldier-of-the-Month of July recently was selected from candidates representing division battle groups, tactical support elements, logistical support units and division artillery.

Sp4 Cecil L. Neal, with the 37th Artillery since August 1961, was the July choice.

Entering the Army in the summer of 1958, Sp4 Neal took his basic training at Ft. Benning. After basic, he served as an intelligence plotter, intelligence teller, and a radar height indicator operator with the operations section of the 24th Air Defense Artillery Group.

Sp4 Neal was discharged from the Army in May 1961 and reenlisted in August 1961. At the present time he is battalion message center clerk.

Gen. Paul Adams, Strike Commander, Briefs 2nd Division on 'Swift Strike II'

SPEAKS TO 2ND DIV
General Adams

The commander-in-chief of U. S. Strike Command visited Ft. Benning Tuesday to brief officers and non-commissioned officers of the 2nd Division on up-coming exercise SWIFT STRIKE II.

Speaking to division officers and non-commissioned officers, General Paul D. Adams, Strike commander, compared the forthcoming exercise to Exercise SWIFT STRIKE held last year. He stated that twice as many troops were being used in this year's exercise.

Rapid Reaction Stressed

New things on schedule in this exercise, he stated, included rapid reaction. This type of reaction calls for an airlift in a space of a few hours of units as far away as 2,000 miles.

Airlift capabilities, he said, are to be highly stressed.

General Adams also stated that this exercise would train conventional forces to achieve military objectives while defending themselves against insurgents. Guerrillas will be employed by both opposing forces during the exercise.

Stressing that this exercise will be a joint Army and Air Force maneuver, the Strike Command chief looks for an intensified effort in joint training.

Safety, care of property and respect for umpires and controllers were other topics covered.

General Adams, who will direct the entire exercise, has been on a tour of all units in the U.S. participating in Exercise SWIFT STRIKE II.

Vintage Uniforms Highlight 7th Cavalry Anniversary

By 7th Cavalry PIO

The 7th Cavalry marked its 96th anniversary last Friday with a look into its past.

The 3rd Reconnaissance Squadron, a 2nd Division unit and one of three U.S. Army units presently bearing the 7th Cavalry colors, celebrated its founding day with a parade that included troopers wearing vintage cavalry uniforms and riding horses furnished by the Fort Benning Hunt Club. The "Garry Owen" unit also welcomed a new squadron commander, Lieutenant Colonel Quintus C. Atkinson, who assumed command from Major Charles A. Busch at a change of command ceremony held during the parade.

Following the parade an open house, athletic events and a family-style barbeque were held in the squadron area.

The 7th Cavalry Regiment was formed July 28, 1866, by an Act of Congress. Its first 25 years were spent in Indian fighting. One such battle was the Little Big Horn where 700 cavalrymen under the command of Brevet Major General George Armstrong Custer fought some 3,000 Indians, resulting in heavy losses to the regiment. The Indian Wars ended in 1891.

During the next 25 years the 7th Cavalry participated in the wars of Cuba, the Philippines and in Mexico. It also assisted in the training of National Guard units.

The 7th Cavalry did not participate in the European phase of World War I. It was stationed along the Mexican border, where it remained until 1942.

At this time all horse cavalry units were converted into dismounted units. During World War II the 7th Cavalry fought as an infantry unit, suffering 1,300 casualties.

After the war the regiment was placed on occupation duty in Japan until June 1950, when it was hurriedly committed to the Korean Conflict. During this conflict the 7th Cavalry spearheaded the drive up the Korean peninsula after the breakout at Pusan to link up with the Allied amphibious landing at Inchon.

Following its deactivation as a regiment in 1957, the 7th Cavalry was broken into three separate units, each retaining the name of the 7th Cavalry. These units are presently organic to the 2nd Infantry Division, the 3rd Infantry Division and the 1st Cavalry Division.

The colors of the 7th Cavalry carry 28 streamers. Its awards include three Presidential Citations, and 45 of its men have been awarded the Medal of Honor.

From African Attache Duty To 7th Cavalry

CAV COMMANDER
Lt. Col. Atkinson

The 7th Cavalry's new squadron commander, Lt. Col. Quintus C. Atkinson, assumed the duties of his new post last Friday.

The 1943 graduate of the U. S. Military Academy at West Point came to "Garry Owen" from duty as an Army attache to the Republics of Ivory Coast, Upper Volta, Niger and Dahomey, West Africa.

Col. Atkinson's decorations include the Silver Star medal and the Bronze Star medal.

Rotaplan

"Rotaplan" is to improve the capability of the Army to respond rapidly to any situation throughout the world. The plan calls for air-lifting U. S.-based units to their overseas stations, where they will be attached to the overseas command for deployment within the theater. The reason for air-lifting the troops by military air transport service aircraft, in addition to speed, is to give each "rotaplan" unit maximum experience and training in rapid moves.

Units returning to the United States will board the same MATS planes that transported the incoming units. During their tours here in the U. S., the troops will be assigned missions in the Strategic Army Corps (STRAC). Units taking part in the testing of "Rotaplan" normally will remain in the U. S. for a period of 18 to 30 months between overseas deployments.

Still another reason for the initiating of "Rotaplan" is the government's interest in stemming the outflow of gold from the United States. It is hoped that this plan, without reducing the combat capabilities of troops in Europe, will cut the flow of U. S. gold by $1,000 to $3,000 per soldier. Travel costs will also be reduced since dependents are not authorized to relocate at government expense.

Major Reid Named 37th Arty Exec; Is Former Teacher

By 37th Arty PIO

A former assistant professor of military science at North Carolina State College has been appointed executive officer of 37th Artillery.

Major Edwin M. Reid, until recently S-3 officer of 12th Artillery, succeeds Major Joseph Mordente.

Major Reid graduated from the Presbyterian College in South Carolina.

'Swift Strike II'

Unconventional Warfare Adds Realism to Exercise

Unconventional forces, old in warfare's history but the newest branch of Army combat training, will add realism to the United States Strike Command's Exercise SWIFT STRIKE II.

The 15-day exercise begins Monday and will provide a testing ground for the intelligence-gathering efforts of conventional and unconventional warfare units.

It also will provide joint unconventional warfare forces with further training in performing their combat mission whether it be a hit-and-run strike against a road or a rail network or the ambush of an enemy troop column.

The use of unconventional forces is a joint effort. Air Force troop carrier units will infiltrate Army Special Forces operational detachments. The Air Force's 1st Air Commando Group will also conduct infiltration, exfiltration, resupply, psychological warfare and low-level night attacks on targets deep in enemy territory.

Two joint unconventional warfare operations bases have been established. At each base there will be a joint liaison detachment of Army and Air Force personnel who will move with commanders of opposing forces to coordinate efforts of unconventional forces with the over-all objectives of the conventional commanders.

CG Awards 5 Plaques To Top Units

Meritorious units of the 2nd Division, along with the June Soldier-of-the-Month, last week were presented awards by Major General Charles H. Chase, division commanding general.

Sp4 James H. Jones, 38th Artillery, was the Soldier-of-the-Month for June.

Other awards presented at the same time by General Chase were the monthly First Term Enlistment and Re-enlistment Plaque, to 38th Infantry; the quarterly Enlistment and Re-enlistment Plaque, also to 38th Infantry.

The Best Mess award in the Sand Hill area was presented to the 2nd Quartermaster Company; and on Kelley Hill the same award went to Hq. and Hq. Company, 87th Infantry.

Quarterly safety awards were presented to 23rd Infantry, 38th Artillery, and the 2nd Aviation Company.

NEW ADJUTANT
Major Lloyd Cain

Major Cain Is Adjutant At 87th Inf

A new adjutant has been assigned to the 87th Infantry.

Succeeding Captain Edwin M. May Jr., who recently departed to attend the Command and General Staff College at Ft. Leavenworth, Kansas, is Major Lloyd R. Cain.

The new adjutant, who was awarded the Silver Star Medal while serving as a private in World War II, comes to Ft. Benning for the first time in 19 years of active service.

Major Cain served with the 100th Division in World War II. During the Korean Conflict he was with the 40th Division. He obtained a battle-field commission during World War II.

Non-Combat Duty

The longest period of continuous non-combat duty in the 9th Infantry's history occurred between World Wars I and II. The 9th, serving with the 2nd Infantry Division, was garrisoned at Fort Sam Houston, Texas, for 23 years.

Religious Director Made Honorary Div. Member

The former director of religious education at the Sand Hill Sunday School last week was made an honorary member of the 2nd Division.

Mrs. B. B. Littlejohn, who first came to the 2nd Division in September 1958, was presented a certificate noting her honorary membership by Major General Charles H. Chase, the commanding general, while Chaplain (Lt. Col.) James H. Fiser, looked on.

The citation, given in appreciation for her work with Protestant personnel, was presented on the 187th anniversary of the U. S. Army Chaplains Corps (July 27) which was being celebrated with an "open house" at the Kelley Hill service club.

Accompanying the award were many personal letters of appreciation to Mrs. Littlejohn from chaplains and other associates.

General Chase cut the cake baked for the occasion, and the chaplains' wives served punch.

First Regiment

The 9th Infantry was the first American regiment to cross the moat guarding Chapultepac, the famous fortress of the Mexican War.

HU-1B HELICOPTER JOINS 2ND AVIATION
Named 'Iriquois,' It Replaces H-19

HU-1B Arrives

2nd Aviation Co Gets Four New Choppers

By 2nd Aviation PIO

Four new HU-1B Iroquois helicopters have been added to the 2nd Aviation Company's fleet of aircraft.

These helicopters will greatly enhance the company's aviation support of the 2nd Division.

The HU-1B is a utility type aircraft of compact design featuring a low silhouette for low vulnerability to meet combat requirements. The helicopter features a wide cargo-passenger compartment that permits the aircraft to transport eight personnel. It is especially useful to transport special teams or crews, equipment and supplies, and for medical evacuation and emergency ambulance service between two medical installations where facilities for fixed wing aircraft are not available.

The HU-1B is capable of operating from prepared or unprepared take-off or landing areas, under instrument (IFR) conditions including day or night flights and to navigate by dead reckoning or by the use of radio aids to navigation. Maximum visibility is afforded the pilot and passengers by the use of transparent plastic panels at the top, front, bottom, and side of the cabin.

The powerplant for the HU-1B is a Lycoming T53-L-9 turbine engine which produces 1100 horsepower at maximum power. The greatest advantage of the turbine engine as far as the passenger is concerned is the quietness in comparison to a reciprocating engine. Passengers can carry on a normal conservation without the aid of a headset.

The HU-1B has a two and one-half hour flight capability and will cruise 80-120 knots.

Col. Connolly Takes Helm Of 37th Arty

By 37th Arty Bn PIO

The division's 37th Artillery has received a new commanding officer from the Armed Forces Staff College, Norfolk, Va.

Lt. Col. John E. Connolly, recently assigned as battalion commander of the 37th Artillery, succeeds Major Peter Rose who was assigned assistant division G-3.

Before arriving at Ft. Benning, Col. Connolly attended the Armed Forces Staff College in Norfolk, Va. From 1957 to January 1962, he served on the general staff, Department of the Army. From 1954 to 1956, he served with 1 Corps in Korea. He served with the 320th Airborne Field Arty Bn, at Ft. Benning from 1951 to 1954. In World War II he served with the 87th Infantry Division.

Col. Connolly is a graduate of Duquesne University, Pittsburgh, Pa. He was commissioned from Officer Candidate School at Fort Sill, Okla. He is also a graduate of the Command and General Staff College, Ft. Leavenworth, Kansas.

He has been awarded the Silver Star Medal, the Purple Heart Medal and three battle stars for combat in Europe.

Col. and Mrs. Connolly, the former Miss Nina Carson, were married at the Post Chapel here at Fort Benning in 1953. They have two sons, John Jr. and William.

9th's Supply Office Starts New System

By 9th Infantry PIO

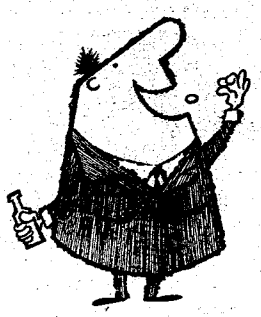
A change in supply procedure in the 9th Infantry is expected to save the Army some money and the unit supply sergeants valuable time.

Under the supervision of Captain Henry R. Thomas, Battle Group S-4, and CWO Herman L. Goldman, supply chief, a central issue point for all TA-21 (Field) equipment is being prepared. Unit supply sections have turned in all TA-21 equipment to the issue point and inventory is now being taken before the excess equipment is turned in to quartermaster supply.

Draw Only Bedding

Incoming personnel will draw only bedding and unit property from the company supply rooms and will report to the issue point for the remainder of their equipment.

By stocking only a minimum amount of equipment of up to 25 pieces of each article, the 9th hopes to save money, valuable time, and paper work. Under the old system each unit supply section was required to keep on hand approximately 10 pieces of each TA-21 article and often became overstocked when there were more personnel clearing the company than coming in.



Personnel changing units within the battle group will retain their equipment and clear the issue point only in discharge or change of station assignments, thereby cutting down a vast amount of paper work and producing a much more efficient operation.

Unit supply sergeants will remain responsible for direct exchange of damaged and unservicable equipment and also keep the clothing records on file. The new system should be in full operation within the next few weeks.

COMPANY A GETS COMMANDER'S TROPHY

2nd Avn Rescues Two Hurt Pilots

By 2nd Aviation PIO

Pilots and helicopters of the 2nd Aviation Co. recently figured prominently in the rescue of two pilots from downed aircraft.

Captain Royce Smithson and Lt. John Whiteside, flying their H-34 helicopter over the Blue Ridge Mountains north of Murphy, N.C., spotted a glider pilot who had crashed his glider into the side of a 5,600 foot mountain.

Smithson and Whiteside, hovering approximately 100 feet over the crash area, lowered crew chief Sp6 Thomas Calvert by hoist to the injured pilot. Calvert moved the pilot uphill to an area where removal by helicopter was possible.

The rescued pilot, Walter Fuller, was treated for shock, exposure and a sprained ankle. Authorities stated that the rescue, which took place only a matter of minutes by helicopter after the accident was discovered, would have taken three days by ground mountain rescue personnel.

A few days after this rescue a similar one occurred. Lieutenants Clifford Burns and Frank Otte, after picking up a doctor at the Martin Army Hospital, flew to Eufaula, Ala., where Dr. Robert E. Foy Jr., a Ft. Benning Army Doctor, lay seriously injured. Dr. Foy had crashed his fixed wing aircraft on take-off.

On his way back to MAH Foy received professional medical attention and blood transfusions, and upon arrival at the hospital, was placed on the critical list. Last Friday he was taken to Walter Reed Army Hospital, Washington D. C.

Company A, 9th Named Winner Of CO's Trophy

Company A, 9th Infantry, was awarded the Commander's Trophy at a full battle group review Saturday morning.

Colonel Clifford P. Hannum, commander of the 9th, presented the award to Capt. Donald B. Smith, company commander, and Capt. Walter Ginger, the company commander prior to being transferred to the S-3 section of the battle group.

The trophy is presented twice annually to the company that has excelled in all training phases, maintenance of company equipment and inspections.

Coat of Arms

The 9th Infantry holds the distinction of being one of the few Army units authorized a separate coat of arms and a distinctive insignia. The distinctive insignia is worn by all members of the 9th Infantry and consists of an "Imperial Five-Toed Dragon" facing the dexter, encircling a disc bearing the number "9" in the center and the motto, "Keep Up the Fire" around the central number.

2 Sgts, 1 Specialist to OCS In August From 23rd Infantry

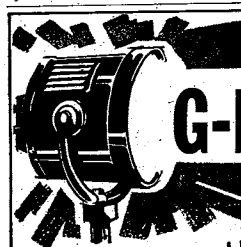
Six Men Are Cited

These enlisted men from the 23rd Infantry have been accepted for Officer Candidate School classes which are scheduled to begin August 13, at Ft. Benning.

The three, Staff Sergeant Robert J. Hughes of Combat Support Company, Sergeant John F. Phillips of Company B, and Specialist Four Charles E. Johnson Jr., of the battle group Headquarters Company, now all hold standing promotions in the 23rd Infantry's military career because when he entered the National Guard of Pennsylvania in March, 1952. Active duty terminated in April 1954. He underwent basic training at Fort Ord, Calif., and then went to Fort Knox, Ky., for communications school.

The enlisted stint of active duty began at Fort Jackson, S.C. From there he was assigned to Fort McClellan, Ala., and duty with the Inspector General Station. The Army Language School at The Presidio of Monterey, Calif., was his last assignment before coming to Ft. Benning and the position of battle group administration NCO.



Sgt. Phillips, who serves as communications chief with Company B, came on active duty in June 1961 and took basic training in Bravo Company, where he has remained ever since. Since basic, he has served as radio telephone operator, a senior rifleman, and is current position of communications chief. He was born at Fort Bragg, N.C. and attended the George Washington University in Washington, D. C.

Two years of basic Air Force Reserve Officer Training Corps at Florida State University in Tallahassee is Sp4 Johnson's military background, in addition to the active duty time from June 1961 until the present. He took basic here with the 7th Cavalry.

9th Infantry Gets DCO From Greece

By 9th Infantry PIO

The 9th Infantry recently welcomed a new deputy commander from Athens, Greece, where he has been assigned for the past three years as a military programing assistance officer.

The new deputy commander, Lieutenant Colonel Donald T. Paul has been stationed at Fort Benning twice in his 20 years as an Army officer. A 1942 graduate of the Infantry Officer Candidate School here, he was assigned in 1949 and 1950 to the 3rd Infantry Division stationed at Ft. Benning's Sand Hill.

Colonel Paul's career has taken him through four campaigns in Europe and one campaign in Korea. His decorations include the Silver Star medal, the Bronze Star medal with four oak leaf clusters and the Combat Infantryman's Badge.

A native of Castleton, New York, Colonel Paul received a Bachelor of Science degree in military science from the University of Maryland in 1961.

Colonel and Mrs. Paul reside on the Ft. Benning reservation with their daughter Nancy.

27th Arty Ready, Able After River Crossings

The 27th Artillery last week completed a river-crossing program under the supervision of the 2nd Engineer Battalion.

This training, following their movements by air, rail, motor, and on the ocean, qualifies these men for maneuvers to any area by any mode of transportation.

The river - crossing, which consisted of assault boat crossings and the loading of heavy equipment on vehicle rafts, ended with a three-day tactical river crossing exercise in which the battalion supported the 87th Infantry in an assault.

Major W. D. Hall Upped Recently At 7th Cavalry

By 7th Cavalry PIO -

Major Walter D. Hall, maintenance officer of the 7th Cavalry, was recently promoted to his present rank in an informal ceremony held at the squadron headquarters. Lieutenant Colonel Harvey Scott, former commander of the 7th Cavalry, awarded the gold leaves to Major Hall, and Mrs. Hall pinned them on.

Major Hall has been with "Garry Owen" since September 1961 when he was transferred from 2nd Division G-4 section where he served as assistant G-4. He was also assigned to 2nd Division's 69th Armor Battalion from November 1959, until April 1960, just prior to joining G4.

Major Hall has served in both World War II and the Korean Conflict and has won the Bronze Star in addition to other decorations. During his tour with the Army he has served in Europe, Japan and Korea.

FIRST IN FRANCE

The 23rd Infantry Regiment joined the 2nd Infantry Division in September 1917 and was one of the first units to arrive in France after the United States entered World War I.

27th Arty Gets 6 for Battery B

Six new men have been assigned to Battery B, 27th Artillery. Three of the six men, Staff Sergeant Isaac Chavez, Staff Sergeant Arthur Taylor and Staff Sergeant Joseph Gross, came from Germany and will be assigned as chiefs of section.

Private Albert Morrison will be assigned to the fire direction center. Private Robert Hagans and Private Garnet Jones also came from Fort Sill, Okla.

Are Automobile Seat Belts REALLY Necessary?

By David M. Winkler

A decade after seat belts first came on the market as an auto safety accessory, only about three per cent of the nation's passenger cars are equipped with them. People who express horror at the endless carnage on the highway are often victims of a false euphoria about their own motoring prospects. They go poorly prepared into a traffic maelstrom which, according to U. S. Surgeon General Luther Terry, will involve 70 per cent of the nation's licensed drivers in auto accidents within the next five years.

Will the 70 percent of U.S. drivers expected to be involved in accidents in the next five years include you? If so, will you be wearing a safety belt? Is it likely to protect you? What are your chances of survival when wearing seat belts?

Here are the answers to some of the questions people ask — and the reasons why belts should be used.

Q—What protection do seat belts give in case of collision?

A—Seat belts help keep passengers from being ejected. This is important because chances of being killed in an accident are five times greater if thrown from the vehicle. Belts also reduce the force of impact of the body on any part of the car's interior. Further, when the driver is held firmly in place by a seat belt he is able to maintain better control of his vehicle after a collision occurs.

Q—What if I am caught in a burning or submerged car with my seat belt fastened?

A—Less than 1 percent of all injury — producing accidents involve fire or submersion. Even in such instances, chances of remaining conscious in order to free yourself and escape from the vehicle are greatly increased when wearing a seat belt.

Q—If I own a convertible wouldn't passengers be safer not strapped in?

A—In a convertible the greatest danger is that of being pitched over the windshield or over the side. All types of cars can be involved in rollover-type accidents — however, it only occurs once in every five accidents. A roll-over is dangerous with or without seat belts.

Q—Is there a possibility the belt will break?

A—A good belt will stand 3000 to 4000 pounds pull from your body. Only about 2 in every 100 belts break. In a severe crash, if a belt breaks it will already have done its job. You will land with a ton and a half less force.

Q—Are safety belts necessary in rear seats?

A—Yes! In head-on crash, rear-seat passengers may be thrown from the car against front seat passengers. They can be hurled forward with such force that they may strike the dashboard or windshield with even greater impact than those seated in front.

Q—Can the belt itself injure or kill users?

A—Choking and lower-torso injuries occur six times more often to non-seat belt users. Belts do not pull across the abdomen, and if properly snug you will not slide down.

Q—How long does it take to secure and release the buckle?

A—About five seconds are required to fasten the buckle—and just an instant to release it.

Q—What are "Gs" referred to in explaining deceleration and impact?

A—One "G" is equal to the force of gravity. The "G" requirement is the amount of restraining force needed to keep you in your seat in the event of a collision.

Q—Do seat belts encourage driver carelessness?

A—Highly unlikely. Psychiatrists studying intensive seat belt user reports have found the opposite to be true.

Q—Is it necessary to use seat belts on short trips to the store, the office or to perform minor errands?

A—More than half of all injury-producing automobile accidents occur in urban areas. Three out of four traffic deaths occur within 25 miles of home. And more than half the traffic accidents, involving either injury or death, occur at speeds less then 40 mph.

Q—Will children use them without argument?

A—Yes. Make it smart and attractive for them to use seat belts. Identify each belt with their own name. They can imagine themselves as "space pilots" or "airline stewardesses."

It can be FUN to wear seat belts. Racing drivers, FBI agents, policemen and state troopers wear seat belts.

Q—Can children open belts in an emergency?

A—Any four-year-old child or over should be able to do so. Every 22 seconds someone suffers a disabling injury in a traffic accident. Don't let it happen to you. Keep the percentages on YOUR side. Have safety seat belts installed in your car and use them when you drive. Your chances of escaping death or serious injury in a traffic accident are five times better if you do. Join the Seat Belt Crusade today.

Capt. Sage Made CO By 9th Inf

By 9th Infantry PIO

Combat Support Company of the 9th Infantry recently welcomed Captain Robert S. Sage as its commanding officer. Captain Sage came to the 9th from the Student Officers Battalion on Main Post where he was assigned as executive officer.

The Airborne-Ranger officer was commissioned in 1955 at the Virginia Military Institute and spent some time at Fort Benning prior to serving a 33-month tour in Hawaii. He was then sent back to Fort Benning where he was assigned to the Student Officers Battalion before joining the 9th Infantry this week. He attained the rank of captain in April 1961.

Sgts Voldertann, Fleming Leave For USAIC Duty

By 1st Infantry PIO

Two 1st Infantry sergeants recently departed the 1st Infantry for duty with the U. S. Army Infantry Center, Fort Benning.

Sergeant First Class Herbert R. Vondertann, Headquarters Company and Sergeant Tommy P. Fleming, Combat Support Company, departed their respective units shortly after the 1st Infantry returned from Little Creek, Va.

Sergeant Vondertann has served in the 1st Infantry as supply sergeant for Company C and later as assistant chief of supply, battle group S-4 section. He is a veteran of World War II and holds as his decorations the World War II Victory Medal, American Defense Service Medal, European-African-Middle Eastern Campaign Medal and the Good Conduct Medal with two loops.

Sergeant Fleming reported to the 1st Infantry in July 1961 from Headquarters Company, 3rd Training Regiment, Fort Jackson, South Carolina. He served as a squad leader in Combat Support Company. Sgt. Fleming has served tours in Buedingen, Germany and Good Conduct Medal, and the Dept. of Defense Service Medal.

Sgt. James McDonough Reenlists

Master Sergeant James G. McDonough, personnel management supervisor, Adjutant General section, reenlisted for three years in a brief ceremony held recently in the office of Major Daniel L. French, the division adjutant general.

Sergeant McDonough, a South Boston Irishman, has been with the AG section since June 1958. He has been in the Army for more than 17 years and was promoted to master sergeant in March 1960.

Sergeant McDonough has attended the Intelligence Specialist School, Radio Operator's School, Artillery School, and Signal School.

NEW MASTER SERGEANT . . . Col. Louis A. Kunzig Jr., right, division chief of staff, promotes Master Sergeant Bert Buzzard Jr., 122nd Signal Battalion, to his present rank.

New Physical Training Field Built at 87th Inf

By 87th Inf PIO

A newly built physical training field is the latest addition to the 87th Infantry landscape.

Designed primarily for the new Army combat proficiency test, the field will be operational this week and is expected to be finished by the first week in September.

The field, 880 feet long and 240 feet across was built by the engineer platoon of Headquarters Company under the supervision of Lieutenant John T. Land. To assist him, Lt. Land called on elements of the 577th and 806th Engineer Battalions from Ft. Benning.

All of the Kelley Hill population (about 3,000 men will use the new field located behind the 87th Infantry pool. Divided into five testing areas, the field offers horizontal bars, the grenade throw, the 40 yard low crawl, the dodge, run and jump and the mile run. A quarter-mile red clay track encloses the test site.

Skunk Bite!

By 38th Inf PIO

An unusual entry on the Martin Army Hospital logs was registered Saturday night when PFC Joe Fagan, 38th Infantry S-2 driver, was admitted for treatment of skunk bite.

PFC Fagan and a companion spottid a baby skunk in the middle of a street on Kelley Hill and attempted to assist it to safety. Apparently the skunk didn't feel it needed any help and bit PFC Fagan on the index finger.

All this occurred without the slightest scent of unpleasantness.

According to MAH officials, PFC Fagan's skunknipped digit is the first case of its type they have had in more than 25 years.

38th Inf. Leads 2nd Div in Reups For 3 Months

Leader of the 2nd Infantry Division reenlistment, race for the months of May and June, the 38th Infantry has maintained its steady pace for the month of July.

According to 2nd Division reup scoreboards at Sand Hill and Kelley Hill, the Marnemen of the 38th have stayed at the top of the ladder with the most reenlistments, four in May and five in June. July's total was nine.

Since the first of the year the 38th has registered 23 reenlistments. During that period three men in the top two pay grades were reenlisted for their own vacancy. Seven reups of the past three months' total have been in the ranks of private first class or below.

Personnel Turnover Listed at 13th Trans

The 13th Transportation Battalion experienced a major personnel turn-over this month.

Major Oren DeHaven, who was previously assigned to the Student Detachment, United States Army Command and General Staff College, Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, arrived at Fort Benning June 27. He replaces Major Donald W. Alberti as Battalion S-3. Major Alberti is now on "Operation Bootstrap" at the University Omaha.

New arrival from the 7th Cavalry in Korea, is Lieutenant Frank D. Green Jr. Lt. Green succeeded Captain Willis E. Carlsen as commanding officer of Company C. Captain Carlsen retired recently after 20 years of service.

Lieutenant Bill D. Chandler, formerly with the 252nd Helicopter Maintenance Company, Fort Eustis, Virginia, has succeeded Captain David B. Barnhill as commanding officer of Company B. Captain Barnhill left to attend the Transportation Officers Advanced Course at Fort Eustis, Virginia.

Other members of the command leaving this month include Chief Warrant Officer Clifford L. Kindel, battalion supply officer. Both Lieutenants David W. Balke and John T. Pelham, graduates of Texas A&M, will return to civilian life.

Distaff Profile

Flowers and Coins Are Mrs. Harding's Hobbies

Here at what she describes as "the finest Artillery post in the Army" is Florence Harding, wife of Colonel Stanley L. Harding, commander of the Division Artillery.

Mrs. Harding is a native of Rochester, N.H. and a graduate of Boston University where she was active on the campus in public relations, local politics, dramatics, and majored in education.

After graduating, she became principal of the Dwight School in Needham, Massachusetts while continuing to work for her Master's Degree at Columbia University during the summers.

Married in 1948

In 1948 she married Colonel Harding in Boston. They are the parents of one daughter, Mary Elizabeth, who is a senior at Georgetown University in Washington, D. C.

She has accompanied her husband to all stations except Europe in World War II and Saudi Arabia, and recalls with pleasure the assignment in Hawaii as well as the tour at Fort Bliss during which time a trip to Mexico was the highlight.

Coins and stamps are among her collections and she enjoys growing African violets. Perhaps her most unusual love is that of balancing the checkbook, and this she does with zest each month. Dogs are another love and for a time she raised cocker spaniels.

Currently in quarters is a ten year old black cocker named Cricket who serves in the capacity of "chief greeter" for the Hardings.

Active for the past year in women's activities, particularly in the 2d Div. Officers' Wives Club of which she is a member of the Executive Board, a member of the Fort Benning Woman's Club, and engaged in Thrift Shop activites, Mrs. Harding voices the hope that she may remain here for a real long time.

She fosters two ambitions, one of which is to go to Europe some day, and the other to persuade her husband to do a slow fitterbug.

age by her father, wore a waltz-length gown of pink lace and silk organza. The full skirt featured a bustle caught up with silk fabric roses. A cummerbund of crushed silk organza encircled the waistline. The lace bodice featured a scooped neckline and cap sleeves. The fingertip veil was of pale pink tulle extending from a bandeau of pink organza featuring tiny seed pearls. Her only jewelry was a diamond lavalier worn by her grandmother and her mother in their weddings. She carried a small white Bible covered with a cascading bouquet of vanity fair roses from palest pink to deepest rose with satin leaves, poufs and pink satin ribbons and polished ivy. A pale pink orchid centered the bouquet.

The mother of the bride wore a candlelight lace dress with matching accessories. On her shoulder she pinned a corsage of green cymbidium orchids.

The groom's parents were unable to attend.

Reception

A reception, held in the Kelley Hill Chapel Fellowship Hall, was given by the parents of the bride. The bride's table was laid with white satin cloth caught up with clusters of pink fleur d'amoir and pompoms. Five branched silver candelabra held pink candles and garlands of pink fleur d'amour and stephanotis. An arrangement of pink sensation roses with snapdragons in a silver compote flanked the tiered wedding cake. Silver compotes held pink and green mists.

The punch table was also laid with a white satin cloth and was caught up at the corners with clusters of pink flowers. The silver punch bowl was banked with greenery and a garland of pink pompoms.

The guest book table also was covered with a floor length cloth. The table held a three branched silver candelabrum garlanded with pink fleur d' amour and pompoms.

Assisting in serving were Mrs. Ronald Brooks, Mrs. S. D. Collier, Mrs. Keith Smith and Mrs. Blanton Crew. Mrs. Ronald Slusarchuk greeted the guests. Miss Penny Collier, cousin of the bride, kept the bride's book.

For her wedding trip the bride wore a dress of robin's egg blue pure silk shantung with white accessories. On her shoulder she pinned the orchid from her bridal bouquet.

The couple will reside in Mineral Wells, Texas, where the groom is undergoing flight training at nearby Camp Wolters.

13th Trans Has Party At MOOM

The officers and ladies of the 13th Transportation Battalion held a farewell dinner-dance recently in the Supper Club Lounge of the Main Officers' Open Mess.

Following dinner a short ceremony was held to bid farewell to departing members of the battalion. Major Jack J. Lynn acted as master of ceremonies, and Lieutenant Colonel and Mrs. Walter Hibbard Jr. presented silver card trays to the officers and the ladies.

Recipients were Captain and Mrs. Willis F. Carlsen, Lieutenant and Mrs. D. W. Balke, Lieutenant John T. Pelham and Chief Warrant Officer and Mrs. Clifford Kindel. Captain Carlsen and CWO Kindel are both retiring from the Army after 20 years of service.

Guests at the affair included Mr. Davis R. Cox, a former Lieutenant with the battalion. Miss Brenda Hendry and Miss Sara Cole.

Newcomers to the unit were introduced. They were Major Oren DeHaven, Lieutenant and Mrs. Bill Chandler and Lieutenant and Mrs. F. D. Green.

Lieutenant Chandler and Lieutenant William C. Boyers were co-chairmen in charge of the events.

New Fall Color

Green, a combination of brown and green, is the newest color for the coming fall season.

Buffet Supper Held Recently At 38th Inf

By 38th Inf PIO

Officers and wives of the 38th Infantry got together last Friday evening at a buffet supper to greet a number of new officers and their wives and to say goodbye to some others.

Farewells were said to Captain and Mrs. Ross W. Winne Jr., Lieutenant and Mrs. Frank L. Grubb and Lt. Thomas G. Boyd, and engraved silver plates were presented to the three officers in recognition of their service.

The evening's event, which was held at Kelley Hill, included dancing after the buffet.

Battle group commander Colonel Maurice C. Holden and deputy commander Lieutenant Colonel James R. Sessions and their wives greeted the guests, who included several officers from the 38th Artillery, the battle group's direct support artillery unit.

Sleeveless Woolens

The sleeveless wool dress or blouse is still in for fall, but sleeves will be coming down in many suits and coats. The new popular length will extend to the wristbone.

Parties Twice

Two events were held on Thursday, July 12 in the Harold W. Roeder home. The first was an afternoon party at which the ladies of the 69th Armor were guests. The event was held in honor of Mrs. Arno M. Apel, who will depart Fort Benning soon.

Guest

A special guest at the affair was Mrs. Dominick Orlando.

That evening Captain and Mrs. Roeder honored Captain and Mrs. Apel at a dinner party in their home. Guests included Lieutenant Colonel and Mrs. James Kolb and Major W. M. Hearn.

Div. Hq. Coffee Takes Travel-Holiday Theme

A travel and holiday theme was carried out at a recent coffee held by the ladies of Division Headquarters in the Normandy Room of the Main Officers' Open Mess.

The ladies of the G-3 section, under the leadership of Mrs. Jack Samson, decorated the room with a variety of travel posters. Featured on the main serving table was a small European kiosk covered with miniature travel advertisements and surrounded by dolls in the native dress of several foreign countries. Miniature kiosks were placed on smaller tables around the room.

Welcomes

Mrs. Louis A. Kunzig Jr., a newcomer to the group herself, welcomed other newcomers and bade farewell to those leaving. Mrs. Kunzig, whose husband, Colonel Kunzig, is the new chief of staff, and Mrs. J. T. Corley, wife of Colonel Corley, the new assistant division commander, were presented with corsages.

Other newcomers to the chief of staff section were Mrs. J. M. Stephens Jr., Mrs. G. W. Carman and Mrs. D. W. Jackson.

Welcomed to the G-1 section were Mrs. J. J. Repsher, Mrs. R. T. Dittamore, Mrs. S. H. Riley and Mrs. H. L. Connor. Newcomers to the G-2 section were Mrs. R. A. Karch and Mrs. D. K. Lewis.

New arrivals to the G-3 section included Mrs. Peter Rose, Mrs. E. F. Vassar, Mrs. D. A. Lanier, Mrs. F. O. Bonnarens, Mrs. E. P. Hollowell Jr., and Mrs. L. L. Mills. Mrs. J. V. Stoeker was welcomed to the G-4 section.

Mrs. William O. Morgan and Mrs. G. D. Collier were new members of the Brigade.

Farewells were said to Mrs. F. J. Spettel, Mrs. J. A. Burns, Mrs. C. M. Johnson, Mrs. J. R. Shelnut and Mrs. R. E Evers.

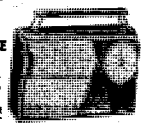
9th Ladies Set Coffee

The ladies of the 9th Infantry held a coffee in the Normandy Room of the Main Officers' Open Mess last Tuesday.

Hostesses for the occasion were the wives of the S-3 section, Mrs. Wendell F. Delamare, Mrs. John C. Lamb, Mrs. Walter D. Ginger and Mrs. Allan J. Francisco.

Decorating the serving table was an arrangement of zinnias and marigolds floating in a shallow silver bowl.

Mrs. Clifford P. Hannum, wife of Colonel Hannum, battle group commander, welcomed the guests of the morning, who were Mrs. Donald B. Smith, Mrs. Nathan Turner and Mrs. Donald T. Paul.



Goodbyes were said to Mrs. Ben C. Nordell, Mrs. William A. Viehman and Mrs. Allen R. Simpson.

87th Runs Away With Swim Meet

After three days of rugged competition at Carey Pool, the 87th Infantry captured the 2nd Division Swimming and Diving Championship for the second consecutive year.

Racking up eight first places out of the ten swimming events, the 87th amassed 102 points to win the 2nd Division Swimming and Diving Championsnips, capturing team and individual honors.

Comfortable Margin

The team's 102 points provided a comfortable margin over the second place Division Trains with 33 points and the third place 1st Infantry which accumulated 26.

But in the diving events, Paul Bridgewater of the 1st Infantry upset the 87th winning streak and took first place in both the one-meter and three-meter dives. Michael Rhodes of the 87th was second in the three-meter dive and Harold Tompkins of Division Trains was second in the one-meter dive with Rhodes placing third.

One of the two swimming events in which the 87th failed to place first was the 200-meter free style taken by William Dorr from the 122nd Signal Bn. The other was the 200-meter breast stroke, won by Morgan V. Jones of Division Trains with a time of 3:35.9 seconds. Second place in this event was taken by Peter Wilcox of Division Artillery and third by William Francis of the 87th Infantry.

Run Away

The rest of the competition the 87th carried away. Leroy Jones of the 87th won the 50 and 100-meter free style, and John Collier of the 87th won the 100-meter backstroke.

Collier also won the 400-meter free style with a time of 6 minutes. Placing second was William Dorr, and third was Kelcy Allen of the 87th with times of 6:9 seconds and 7:57 seconds respectively.

In the 10-meter butterfly it was again Collier with a time of 1:23.6 seconds. Second was Leroy Jones with 1:27.8 seconds, followed by Morgan V. Jones with 1:43 seconds.

In the first team event, the 300-meter medley relay, the 87th Infantry team of Collier, James Chase and Joseph Mesaros captured first place with a time of 5:21.7 seconds.

Also, the 87th Infantry team of Chase, Allen, Charles Walls and John Neil won the 800-meter free style relay with a time of 12:37 seconds. Division Trains with a time of 16:13.3 seconds came in second.

100-Meter Relay

In the 100-meter free style relay Walls and Jones won for the 87th, their time being 58:5 seconds. 1st Infantry finished second (1:5.5 seconds) and Division Trains finished third (1:6.5 seconds).

By placing first in the meet, the 87th were assured of first place position in the race for the Commanding General's Sports Trophy with a grand total of 535 points to date.

The 87th began training for their swimming victory more than a month ago. Under the direction of Captain John F. Collier, Combat Support Co., they trained with "arm pulls" (swimming with the feet tied together), kickboards and repeated sprints.

87th Celebrates Victory; Wins Top Sports Honors

The 87th Infantry held a steak dinner and victory celebration Wednesday night in honor of their double win in the 2nd Division Sports competition - first place in the Swimming and Diving Meet and the recipient of the Commanding General's "Outstanding Athletic Achievement" Trophy.

Individual awards were given out for bowling, swimming and softball, and the battle group commander, Col. Ralph H. Hughett, said he was particularly proud of the 87th's achievement, as last year the 87th had also won both the Swimming Meet and the Commander's Trophy.

To win the Trophy the 87th accumulated 535 points. Second was Division Trains with 500 points and third was Division Artillery with 440 points. Separate Battalions came in fourth with 395 points followed by 1st Infantry (370 points), 22nd Infantry (250 points), 38th Infantry (240 points) and 9th Infantry (150 points).

The Commander's Trophy is given out semi-annually. Since 1959 the 87th Infantry has won twice, 1st Infantry once, and Division Trains three times.

Traffic Quiz

---Kids Are Injured In Auto Accidents?

By Daivd M. Winkler

At one time or another almost everyone who has ever driven a car has caught himself in some carelessness. We would all do well to meditate on the heavy responsibilities that belong to any driver.

Any time a driver steps into his car he is responsible for the life of every pedestrian or motorist who comes within range of his auto. He has definite moral obligation, an obligation to be physically and mentally alert, to watch the streets carefully, to watch especially for heedless children in congested areas, and to drive slowly enough to stop his car in a split second.

Safety councils in all our cities can provide the driver with a list of rules of caution. All drivers should be completely familiar with such rules. There is no room for uncertainty or confusion on the road.

Questions

1. Do you realize that in the United States alone in a single year, between the ages of one and 14, we injured with autos more than:
   a. 80,000 children
   b. 235,000 children
   c. 125,000 children
   d. 185,000 children
2. When a registration decal or plate becomes lost or damaged to the extent that it is not clearly legible, the registrant will:
   a. wait until the next time it becomes necessary to have the vehicle inspected and get a new one issued at that time.
   b. make application immediately to obtain a new registration.
   c. make application for a new registration within five working days.
3. When your right wheels strike a soft shoulder, what should you do?
   a. relax your grip on the wheel.
   b. immediately apply the brakes.
   c. grip the wheel firmly, take your foot off the accelerator.
   d. speed up and force the car onto the road.
4. The driver of a vehicle which has collided with an unattended vehicle will stop immediately and leave, in a conspicuous place in or on the other vehicle, a written notice containing his name, address, and a statement of the circumstances, and will report the incident to the Military Police:
   a. within 24 hours.
   b. within 72 hours.
   c. before leaving the scene of the accident.
   d. as soon as possible.
5. Rapid wear in the center of an automobile tire tread would normally indicate:
   a. Overinflation.
   b. Underinflation.
   c. Front end out of alignment.
   d. Inferior grade tire.
6. The speed limit on Ivy Road from 1st Division road to Watkins Road in the Kelley Hill area is:
   a. 25 mph
   b. 35 mph
   c. 40 mph
   d. 45 mph
7. A Stanley Steamer, driven by Fred H. Marriott, in 1906, set a new American record with the speed of:
   a. 86.6 mph
   b. 97.43 mph
   c. 116 mph
   d. 127.66 mph

9th Infantry Gains 2 Platoon Leaders

Deadline Set For Entries In Post Meet

The Infantry Center Athletic Department announces that the 1962 Infantry Center Swimming and Diving Meet will be conducted at Carey Swimming Pool August 10 and 11.

The competition will be in accordance with the 1962 swimming and diving rules of the Amateur Union of the United States.

Individuals may enter a maximum of three swimming events and may also compete in both diving events.

Competition will be conducted in the following events: 100, 200, 400, and 1500-meter freestyle; 100-and 200-meter butterfly; 100 and 200 meter breaststroke; 200-meter backstroke; 400-meter individual; 1-and 3-meter springboard diving.

The meet will be conducted in two sessions. First session is scheduled for 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Friday, August 10, and the second session will take place on Saturday, August 11, 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

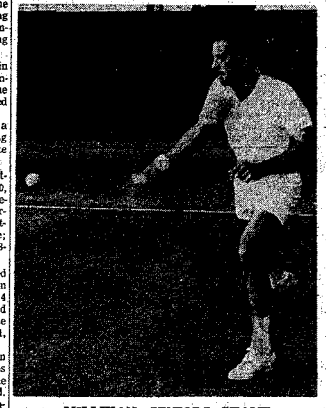
Entries will be received on an individual basis. All entries must be in person. Telephone entries will not be accepted. Individuals may enter no later than 5 p. m. August 6, at the Athletic Department Office, located in Bright Wells Field House, Building 933.

'Doughboys' Need Players To Aid Attack

About 14 players are needed to round out the 44-man Doughboy squad, according to football coach Lester Cofield.

Some 75 gridders reported for tryouts when practice sessions began last week, but since then Coach Cofield has cut about 40 men from the team and a few players have received early outs from the service.

Presently there are six ends on hand, a shortage of about two. Coach Cofield also is looking for a couple more guards and a few tackles to bolster the Doughboy attack. At the center position the Doughboys also are lacking in depth with only two players.



"The backfield is in fairly good shape, with several players looking well in practice," Cofield said.

Players who look impressive are Joe Outlaw who played collegeiate football at Lincoln College in Missouri; San Stellatella, played at Penn State; and Fred Murphy and linebacker Marvin Tibbets, both former footballers at Georgia Tech.

Another Doughboy grider who has stood out in practice sessions is workhorse Joseph Wendryhoski.

Cofield hopes to add a few new players to the team by the end of this week. Anyone interested in trying out for the team should contact Coach Cofield at LI 5-2386 between 8 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. Mondays through Fridays.

428th Medics Win Two As Rain Hampers Action

By SFC Bismarck Stith

Rain slowed up action in the Major Unit Baseball Circuit recently with only five games being played.

The 428th Medics, league cellar dwellers, came to life and won two straight. They blasted out a 10-6 against the 156th Signal, and an 8-3 victory over the 10th Artillery Redlegs to bring their winning total up to four victories.

The Medics game with the 156th Signal Battalion found Clyde Battle having a field day. He smacked two inside the park homers, one good for three RBI's, the other for two. He also played a spectacular defensive game by bringing down eight fly balls that appeared to be extra base bound.

John Dillon was credited with the win while Tom Rummilt suffered the defeat.

Top Players

The 1962 Major Unit Baseball League will be history in a few days, but not to be forgotten. This season, the fans have seen some of the top professional players in the nation. Charles Spell, TSB's ace righthander, assigned to the Los Angeles Dodgers; Gary Hess, 428 Medic's infielder with the Boston Red Sox; Fred Valentine of TICTC with the Baltimore Orioles, and John Couch of the 10th Artillery with the Chicago White Sox.

Many more college and semi-pro ballplayers participated in league action this season.

The Reserve Units also contributed many fine players to the league, but will be unable to participate in the Third Army playoffs, which will be held at Redstone Arsenal, Ala., Aug. 27 through Aug. 31.

Select All-Stars

The Athletic Department announces that an all-star team will be selected to represent Fort Benning in the playoffs.

Plan Meeting To Organize YAC Archery

The Youth Activities Club will hold a meeting Saturday at 1:30 p.m. for boys and girls 10 years old and above who are interested in taking archery instruction.

YAC has two qualified instructors who will organize the class and form schedules for lessons.

Sp5 Lewis W. Robinson Hdqs. and Hdqs. Company, 606th Engineers, taught archery for several months at the Boys Club in Naples.

His experience with a bow and arrow includes field shooting at moving and stationary targets, and hunting in the Florida Everglades for alligator.

The other instructor, PFC Thomas E. Allison Company C, 1st Battalion, Infantry Center Troop Command, received instruction on safety with the bow and arrow at the University of Illinois.

His teaching experience includes nine weeks of instructing 6 to 15-year-olds at a camp in southern Michigan.

YAC will supply the necessary equipment.

Dodson Moves Into Second

Pvt. McCormick Heads All-Army Tennis Trials

BY BILL GARDNER

Pvt. Roger McCormick, the sensation of the first half of the trials to select an Army team for the Interservice Tournament here, aggravated a minor back injury suffered two months previously and has been out of action since last Friday.

Although not considered serious, the injury is painful and Coach Dan Sullivan has no idea when the former University of Miami whiz will return.

McCormick, who is representing Army Europe in the trials which will continue to Aug. 12, has been number one man on the ladder since the trials began.

Only Loss

His only loss came in his last game Friday when he lost to PFC Luis C. Dominguez of First Army.

McCormick won the first set easily, 6-1, but the rangy Dominguez came back strong to take the next two sets, 6-1 and 6-4.

Dominguez, on the strength of this win plus a 3-6, 6-0, 6-4 win over PFC Herman D. Carrille of Fifth Army has moved into the third spot.

In a match Monday he lost to up and down 1st Lt. John R. Newman, 6-1, 6-2. Newman, holding down the sixth slot, in turn lost to Carrillo, 6-3, 1-6, 6-4.

Dodson Second

In second place is Sp4 Leslie E. Dodson of Sixth Army.

Dodson, who lost to Carrillo Wednesday, 6-4, 6-4, has three straight wins beginning with a squeaker over Dominguez. This was perhaps the best match of the trials from a spectators standpoint, going three full sets.

Dominguez, who blasted the ball so hard at one point that he knocked the racket from Dodson's hand, took the first set handily, 6-2.

From then on it was up and back, with Dodson rallying to take the last two sets and the match, 8-6, 7-5.

On Friday he beat Third Army's Sp4 James Nedrin, 6-0, 8-6, and followed this with a 6-2, 6-1 win over 1st Lt. Ronald R. Schoenberg of Fourth Army.

Carrillo Slips to Fifth

Carrillo, breathing the lofty air of second place only last week, has been steadily tumbling down the ladder and now rests in fifth place.

His latest defeat was a 6-1, 6-1 loss to late starting but fast climbing 2nd Lt. Norman J. Perry of Second Army.

Perry, who wasn't here for the first week of the trials has yet to suffer a loss.

Saturday he took Nerrin easily, 6-2 and 6-0, and Friday, bested another Third Army representative, Pvt. Wade Rockafellow, 6-3, 6-3.

He is now fourth on the ladder.

Another late starter and a pre-trial pick for the teams number two spot, PFC Robert S. Bowditch Jr., is the only other unscathed entrant.

Bowditch is in eighth spot and like Perry is from Second Army.

Nerrin is in seventh place with Rockafellow holding down ninth.

Millikan Heads Seniors

In the Senior's Division it's Sgt. Bill Millikan all the way.

Millikan, representing First Army, has dominated the Senior's for years now, and this year looks like no exception.

Monday, he blasted Sgt. Ray Antignat, 6-2, 6-1, replacing the Army Pacific contender in first place.

Antignat, who also has seen one or two Interservice Senior's battles, couldn't keep up with the clowning Millikan and dropped into second place.

There is little doubt in anyone's mind, especially Sullivan's that these two will be part of the three-man Senior's team.

The remainder of the Senior entrants are battling for third spot. The latest ranking has MSgt. Martin E. Jones of Sixth Army in third; Maj. Philip Hardie, Army Europe in fourth; Lt. Col. Lavere Strom, Fourth Army, fifth SFC Terry Scott, Fifth Army, sixth, and Brig. Gen. Royal Reynolds Jr., Third Army, seventh.

The 10th through the 17th spot on the Open ladder reads, in order, 1st Lt. Arthur Pond, Third Army PFC Edward Panul, Army Pacific; 2nd Lt. James R. Moses Jr., Fourth Army; 1st Lt. Donald Williams, Eighth Army; Sp4 Ronald Sanders, Sixth Army; Capt. Norman Dunlap, Fifth Army; Capt. Charles Lake, Eighth Army, and Schoenberg.

In last place is Pvt. Ronald E. Holmberg of First Army.

Holmberg, who just arrived Monday, hasn't played a match yet. However, nobody expects him to not make the team, especially since he is the nation's seventh ranked player.

Army Netter Once Battled With Hoad

A tennis player who once won a set from the world's second-ranked professional is battling his way for a position on the Army tennis team.

Sp5 Leslie E. Dodson, 25-year-old net star representing the Sixth Army, played Australia's Lew Hoad before 10,000 spectators on Memorial Day at the Men's National Lawn Association in Forest Hills, N. Y.

The slender-built netter won the first set 6-2, then watched the more experienced Hoad come on the win the last three sets 6-0, 6-2 and 6-3.

Dodson's tennis career dates back to high school days at Redford High School, Detroit, where he won the conference singles for three years in a row. He then moved into the college ranks where he played in the number one position at Kalamazoo (Mich.) College. He battled against such college powers as Illinois then Big Ten champions - Indiana, North Carolina and Presbyterian College.

Dodson captured his college conference singles championship three years in a row and was doubles champion for four years.

Since entering the Army he played with the winning Army team in last year's Interservice Tournament at Newport (R.I.) Naval Base. He went undefeated in singles and teamed up with Fort Benning's 1st Lt. Art Foust to capture the doubles crown.

Today's Sportrait

Today's Sportrait spotlights 2nd Lt. David C. Lynn, Company B, 1st Battle Group, 29th Infantry, 1st Infantry Brigade, from Fairless Hill, Pa.

Lt. Lynn, while attending high school in his hometown, selected two major sports, baseball and football, in which he has since been active.

He played his collegiate football and baseball at Clemson University, Clemson, S. C. In football he held down linebacker and right guard positions, and in baseball he was first-string catcher.

Lt. Lynn saw action from 1958 through 1961. In 1958-59, he played in the Atlantic Coast Conference; in '59 started in two bowl games, Sugar Bowl against LSU and the Blue Bonnet Bowl going against Texas Christian. In the blue bonnet game he was voted the most valuable lineman.

Lt. Lynn was mentioned for All-America in 1959-60, and made All-Conference in 1960. He also piloted the 1960 football team at Clemson as captain.

LYNN

Some of his baseball highlights while attending college include playing in the college World Series at Omaha, Neb., in 1959; making All - Conference, All - American and All - District 3, (includes all colleges in the southeast area) in 1960.

Lt. Lynn was called to active duty from ROTC status in July, 1961. Since being assigned here he has participated in the 1961 Third Army Baseball Championship playoffs at Fort Bragg, N. C., Lt. Lynn was Fort Benning's catcher during the tournament. Benning's team was named 1961 Third Army runner-up champ. He also played right guard for the Benning's 1961 Doughboys football team.

At present, Lt. Lynn is performing duties as playing manager and coach of the 29th Infantry baseball team in the major unit baseball league. He is holding down the catcher position on the team.

Lt. Lynn plans to see action with the Doughboys this season.

Post Title Claimed By 'Indians'

The Indians, Team One in the Main Post Doughboy Baseball League, claimed the title of post champions when they defeated the White Sox, Team Five of the Custer Terrace League, 8-0 in the final game of the season.

The champs completed the season with a record of 14 victories against no defeats.

Mark Kleber and Charles Preston, the Indians only pitchers received credit leading the team to the title.

Tom Jones, team captain and first baseman, lead the team in batting and runs scored. The fielding of Geof Drissel, Mike Paulick and Paul Ingle also received an outstanding rating by team coach, 1st Lt. Jessie W. Watson Jr.

Quote Of The Week

Vince Lombardi, Green Bay Packer coach, on halfback Paul Hornung's release from the Army: "If Hornung doesn't show up in August, I don't think I will either."

Iwo Jima was invaded by The U.S. joint expeditionary forces on Feb. 19, 1945.

Hqs. Unit Takes Title In Play-off

The final game of the 2nd Howitzer Battalion, 10th Artillery, 1st Infantry Brigade, softball league, a second half playoff between Headquarters Battery and Battery D, has been played with Headquarters emerging the 7-3 winner.

Both teams ended the second half with a 5-1 record. Headquarters Battery won the first half with a 6-0 record.

Sfc Emery D. Nipper pitched his first game for Headquarters Battery. Sgt. John Mallaird was credited with the loss.

Headquarters Battery will now enter two teams to represent the Battalion in the 1st Infantry Brigade Softball Tournament slated for August 1-8. The winners of this contest will then compete in the post championships.

Begins Duty With 69th

An Army veteran of 23 years service has been assigned as First Sergeant of Company B, 69th Armor.

First Sergeant John L. Lott was originally assigned to Company B while participating in Exercise SENECA SPEAR at Fort Stewart, Georgia. He replaces First Sergeant Oliver M. Garner who has departed for an assignment in Korea.

Sgt. Lott has served at Fort Benning on two different assignments. He has also served at Fort Knox and Korea. Prior to joining Company B he was in Germany with the 32nd Armor.

Reserve Medics Armed With Weapons, Knowledge

By SFC George McBarney

Among the most popular and highly valued soldiers in combat are the Army's medical technicians.

It is the medics who, to their everlasting credit, save the lives of thousands of ill and wounded men, often at the cost of their own lives.

Unarmed in the nation's wars until the Korean conflict, the medics have treated the wounded suffering from combat casualties ranging from simple factures to shell-shock and shrapnel and bullet wounds.

Here a small group of aidmen of the 891st Medical Detachment, an Army Reserve unit of Atlanta, has been learning through practical experience these life-saving duties.

The on-the-job-training the 891st has conducted since its call to active duty in October, has molded the unit into a high quality dispensary detachment, ready to move into a combat area if needed.

Ohio Unit

The 891st has been training with another Reserve unit, the 389th Medical Detachment of Cleveland, Ohio. The two units, among the smallest numerically in the Army, have an authorized strength of only 16 men.

In the dispensaries, pharmacies and Martin Army Hospital, the medics of the Reserve units train with Regular Army men in Fort Benning's medical installations.

Their training consists of giving physical examinations to countless soldiers, making blood tests and giving shots for the prevention of typhoid fever, tetanus, malaria and smallpox.

They also prepare medicines under the supervision of experienced Army doctors and receive refresher training in giving first aid, blood and intravenous transfusions, learn to apply splints to actual or simulated fractures and treat lacerations and burns.

Though the 891st is trained in dispensary duties, the detachment had not operated as a dispensary unit before its call to active duty.

Sgt. Bertram A. Gordy, a former oil salesman in Atlanta, is the non-commissioned officer in charge of the 891st. He entered the Army in 1958 after graduating from Auburn University with a bachelor of science degree in business administration.

He received his training in Army medical duties at Fort Sam Houston, Tex. After being discharged, he was recalled to active duty in October.

Mobile Unit

The 389th Medical Detachment is a mobile unit that can be moved to any sector of a field of operations. Its primary mission is to provide medical aid to casualties suffering injuries of the upper chest, lungs, heart and throat.

Both detachments are commanded by 1st Lt. Robert E. Murray. A member of Headquarters Detachment, 428th Medical Battalion, he has been acting commander of the units since last winter.

In addition to their medical training, the detachments also have conducted extensive field combat exercises, Army Training Tests and defense against chemical, biological and radiological attacks.

Staging the field exercises under simulated combat conditions, the units move into a wooded area where they join the 428th Medical Battalion. After erecting tents and setting up their medical equipment and supplies, they gird for an attack by aggressor forces.

Equipped with rifles and carbines, the 891st and 389th Reservists, firing from foxholes and camouflaged defensive positions, blaze away at the "enemy" and stop his attack cold.

CBR Training

Part of the field exercises is the defense against tear gas, smoke bombs and a simulated atomic blast in the CBR test. For protection from radiation from the blast, the medics cover themselves with their ponchos and lie low in their foxholes.

When this monthly realistic battle is over, umpires of the 428th move quickly into the area to determine the number of probable casualties and the amount of damage.

Radiac meters assess the amount of radiation in the area, on the men's clothing and on the units' vehicles.

Active duty for the 389th and the 891st will end Sunday when they leave the post and return to their home stations.

Flurry of Correspondence Flies Through His Hands

"Each day, The Student Brigade message center processes an average of 12,000 pieces of correspondence to be desseminated to higher and lower echelons," stated SSgt. Thomas F. Peebles, TSB message center chief.

Sgt. Peebles' mission as NCOIC of the message center is to provide and distribute all in-coming and out-going correspondence, and provide a regular messenger service. He must stock, receive and consolidate requests for blank forms and publications from all units assigned and attached to the brigade.

Enlisting in the Army on April 26, 1954, Peebles, received his basic training at Fort Ord, Calif. At the conclusion of his initial training, the message center NCO was given orders to report for Advanced Individual Training at Fort Dix, New Jersey.

Completing AIT, he was sent to Fort Eustis, Va., as a personnel clerk with the 4th Transportation (Beat) Terminal.

From October, 1955, to February, 1958, Sgt. Peebels, was assigned to the 83rd Ordnance (Ammo) Battalion, Seoul, Korea. He was given the duties of assistant personnel sergeant.

Returning to the United States in February, 1958, he was assigned as advisor to the 140th Infantry Regiment, Missouri Army National Guard. Sgt. Peebles was next given orders for Fort Benning, where he was assigned to TSB as assistant sergeant major of the 4th Student Batalion.

Receiving an inter - brigade transfer, he assumed his present duties as NCOIC of the TSB message center.

SSgt. Peebles resides in Columbus with his wife, Nancy, and daughter, Lesa, 23 months.

Distillation Unit Passes Long Test

The Army Corps of Engineers has successfully completed a 1000-hour sea water test of a mobile, vapor-compression distillation unit.

The trailer-mounted unit was developed by the Army Engineer Research and Development Laboratories, Fort Belvoir, Va., to provide troops with efficient, economical, and easily transportable equipment for desalting sea water for drinking purposes. It was tested under field conditions at Daytona Beach, Fla., by personnel from the laboratories and from the Army Engineer Test Unit at Fort Belvoir.

True Storybook Life Awaits This Reservist When He Returns to Role of Civilian Sailor

By 2nd Lt. R. H. Carl

When PFC Michael S. Mitchell is de-activated along with the rest of the men of the 223rd Signal Company on August 9, he will return to a storybook way of life dreamed about by thousands of men, young and old.

PFC Mitchell was sailing the trade winds somewhere in mid - Atlantic when his activation orders came last year.

"And I want to be able to say 'This where I came in' just as soon as possible," the Reservist said recently.

PFC Mitchell's family owns and operates Vagabond Cruises, Ltd., a charter boat business with headquarters in Fort Castries, St. Lucia, West Indies.

Two large and handsome stay-sail schooners make up the Vagabond fleet. They are the 110-foot "Voyager" and her sister ship, "Lady Phyllis."

"Voyager," PFC Mitchell's favorite, has a replacement cost of $2 million. The list of her lavish appointments is practically endless. Among them are a stainless steel, air conditioned galley with a walk-in refrigerator, rare wood panelling in her eight staterooms and salon; a steel hull and twin diesel auxiliary power with enough fuel capacity for an ocean crossing.

According to PFC Mitchell, his job in the firm has been as a "jack of all trades" man with a strong emphasis on personnel management.

"A good part of our crews are made up of my college chums," he says. "They make ideal crew members and recruiting is a pleasant task because of their enthusiasm for adventure."

PFC Mitchell is a student at Michigan State University whenever he can break away from his duties long enough to get in a full semester.

Way of Life

Sailing has been a way of life for the Mitchell family. They own a 70-foot yawl, a 30-foot class "E" racing sailboat, a class "A" ice sailboat, and a 45-foot motor yacht.

"I learned to sail as a child and it has always been the biggest part of my life," comments PFC Mitchell.

For several summers he has been teaching sailing at a YMCA camp in Northern Michigan. He is proud of the fact that many of his campers have written to him here, expressing their desire to have him as a teacher once again.

"Summers are off-season in the charter boat business and I enjoy working with the kids," he said.

PFC Mitchell is a "filler" in the signal company, an Army Reserve unit from Indianapolis, Ind. He was a recent member of the "honors class" which attained the highest scholastic average in the Fort Gordon Signal School's history.

Meets Cousin

While taking an Officers Candidate School physical proficiency test last winter, PFC Mitchell met Sgt. David Lenox of Company B, 156th Signal Battalion, a National Guard unit from Adrian, Mich.

They became good friends before discovering they are cousins. Sgt. Lenox will accompany PFC Mitchell to the islands in November and become a member of the family firm.

Both the "Voyager" and the "Lady Phyllis" charter for $2,-000 weekly to private parties only. There is an additional charge at $5 per day for meals.

"This may sound like a lucrative business out our overhead is very high," PFC Mitchell notes.

Because hauling rates are cheaper in Europe and their charter seasons comes during the summer months, Vagabond Cruises is attempting to break into the European business. Operations in the Mediterranean Sea are planned.

Vagabond Cruises, Ltd., is a young and growing firm.

"The present is exciting," PFC Mitchell comments, "But the future will truly be an adventure in paradise."

Two Complete Jungle War Orientation

Second Lt. John D. Hughes and PSgt. Marlyn Murphy of 428th Medical Battalion, recently completed Jungle Training School at Fort Sherman, J.W.T.C., Canal Zone.

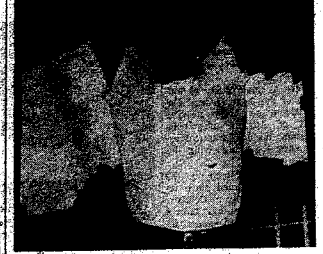
The jungle training is a three-week orientation with the objective of teaching men survival techniques under remote circumstances. Learning to live off the plant and animal life of the land is a major phase of the training.

The trainees receive specialized instruction on the commando crawl across rivers and other river - crossing techniques. They practice repelling from 200-foot cliffs and learn to build a jungle Bohio, four-man hut. Reconnaissance and combat patrol tactics are also taught during the three weeks.

First Lt. Joseph J. Burn and 1st Lt.-Gari B. Carter are also trained in jungle warfare. Now that Lt. Hughes and Sgt. Murphy have completed the training, the 428th Medical Battalion has an officer or an NCO trained in jungle warfare in each of its four units.

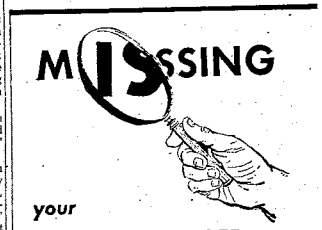
Platoon Leader Was Formerly On Radio, Stage

Second Lt. Richard W. Burton has recently joined Company A, 1st Armored Rifle Battalion, 58th Infantry, where he will serve as a platoon leader.



Hailing from Charlotte, N.C., Lt. Burton has had an active career in radio and on the stage. He is a member of two theatrical groups, The Charlotte Little Theater and the Carolina Playmakers.

Before entering the service he was associated with Radio Station WCLM, Charlotte, as an announcer, writer and producer.



Lt. Burton attended the University of North Carolina where he graduated with a degree in business administration.

Army Material Command Assumes Control

WASHINGTON (ANS)—The Army Materiel Command, under the command of Lt. Gen. Frank S. Besson Jr. has assumed operational control of a nation-wide complex of military installations and activities engaged in developing, producing and fielding equipment and other types of materiel for the Army.

The Army Materiel Command (AMC) was established May 8, 1962 under the Army reorganization program. It is responsible for most of the materiel functions formerly performed by the Army's seven Technical Services, including research and development, procurement and production, storage and distribution, inventory management, maintenance and disposal.

AMC begins operations with a $30 billion inventory and a anticipated annual expenditure of $7.5 billion.

With headquarters in the Washington, D. C. area, AMC will operate through seven major subordinate commands and will direct the activities of depots, laboratories, arsenals, proving grounds, test ranges, procurement offices and transportation terminals throughout the continental United States.

Effective today, AMC assumed command of personnel and operations at these locations on an "in place" basis. All are expected to be phased into the new AMC organizational structure by 31 December 1962.

Under the AMC concept of operations, AMC Headquarters will furnish over-all policy direction for AMC's far-flung operations, the major subordinate field commands will serve as the "mid-management level" to supervise performance, and the individual installations and activities will accomplish the actual execution of the Army's materiel program. AMC also will make maximum use of "vertical management" techniques, using project managers to expedite development, production and delivery of selected major or critical weapons (equipment) systems.

In a message to all AMC personnel, General Besson cited the establishment of AMC as "an unprecedented challenge and an unlimited opportunity. . . .

"It is a challenge," General Besson explained, "because never before has it been so important that our Army have the finest possible weapons and equipment. It is an opportunity because never before has there been a single integrated organization specifically conceived and designed to provide the Army's weapons and equipment."

Speaking particularly of the Technical Services, General Besson said: "Despite its newness in the Army spectrum, AMC represents a merger of proud traditions that extend, in some instance, to the birth of the Army itself. With your help, I am confident AMC will prove worthy of that great heritage."

Civilian Employees' Suggestions Win $$$

Checks totaling $260 have been presented to Infantry Center Quartermaster Section personnel for adoption of time and money-saving suggestions.

The highest award was given to Mrs. Marita M. Fishburn, Clothing Sales Store, who received $150 for her suggestion that clothing returned to the supply system not be processed through laundry or dry cleaning facilities before being turned in.

Adoption of her suggestion is expected to save about $3,-800 a year. Mrs. Fishburn also received a certificate signed by Brig. Gen. John E. Kelly, deputy commanding general of The Infantry Center.

SFC Sylvester T. Bowen, Maintenance Branch, was awarded $20 and a letter of appreciation for his suggestion concerning instructions in typewriter first echelon maintenance.

Mrs. Emmagene M. Bassett, Commissary Division, was given $15 for her proposal that the Quartermaster Section purchase pre-packed fresh chicken.

Acceptance of her suggestion is expected to increase the efficiency of the commissary meat market by curtailing work hours and offering customers a better selection of cut chicken. She also was awarded an outstanding performance rating for the period April 1, 1961, through March 31, 1962.

For suggesting that the Troop Issue Section use menu changes posted by the Food Service in figuring requirements for troop consumption, Mrs. Louise D. Mumford, Commissary Division, received $15. Adoption of her suggestion will result in intangible benefits.

An award of $15 was given to Haskel D. Garner, Commissary Division, for the acceptance of his plan to remove unused coffee-grinding machines and the coffee-weighing machine from a warehouse. Eliminating the machines increases safety and creates more space for workmen.

Albert W. Henson, Maintenance Branch, received $15 for his suggestion that instructions to close the side walls before erecting tents be included in the next revision of the field manual.

A check for $15 was presented to Joseph W. Mills, Commissary Division, for his adopted plan to place canvas covers on grocery carry-out carts in rainy weather.

Adoption of his suggestion will prevent paper sacks and cardboard boxes from becoming soaked and tearing up.

Willie Ford, now on leave, will receive $15 for his proposal to lower the exhaust fan in the typewriter repair shop.

Lowering the fan effectively removes cleaning fluid fumes and eliminates the possibility of the fumes impairing the health of typewriter repairmen.

The checks and certificates were presented by Col. Edward M. Foxworth, quartermaster of The Infantry Center.

War Vets Given Job Preference

War veterans, their widows, and especially disabled veterans are given special preference by the Georgia State Merit System in exam competitions for state jobs, it was pointed out this week by Georgia Veterans Service Director Pete Wheeler.

All war veterans are given five points in addition to their earned rating in examinations for entrance to classified jobs. from 70 percent to 65 percent, and in cases of tie grades the veteran's name is listed above the name of the non-veteran on the register.

War veterans with service-connected disabilities, veterans over 55 who are receiving a pension for non-service connected disabilities, and widows of war veterans each receive ten points preference and need only 60 per cent to make a passing grade. In addition, any veteran receiving the ten-point preference who makes the passing grade will be placed above all others on the register.

The wife of a disabled veteran may receive the ten-point preference otherwise due her husband if she is otherwise qualified and the veteran has been disqualified for appointment because of his disability.

Medical Unit Returns Home With 10 Months Of Realistic Training

The 128th Medical Ambulance Company, an Alabama National Guard unit of Fairhope which completes 10 months of active duty here this month, is preparing to return to its home station.

On Sunday, the 128th which was called up in October, will go back to Fairhope.

Since the company's arrival, it has trained in the field and at Martin army Hospital in carrying out its medical duties. This training consists of a number of field exercises near King's Pond and the McKenna Airstrip, and the Army Training Test.

These field training exercises, which are staged usually for three days once a month, enable the judges to rate the 128th's ability to conduct its mission as a medical ambulance company under combat conditions.

1st. Sgt. John E. Driskell said, "Our company has accomplished its mission. In our Army Training Test some time ago we scored 91.5 of a possible 100 points, and that's a good score."

The ATT consisted of the company moving to a combat area on the post, defending itself against tear gas and another simulated atomic blast, staging night movements and fighting off guerrilla aggressor attacks.

One of the 128th's most important functions in the test is the evacuation of ill and wounded men and treating injuries.

Capt. Edward F. Machlan, commander of the 128th, wholeheartedly seconded comments made by his men that the call to active duty has been of great benefit to the unit.

"Our training at Fort Benning has improved the company tremendously in a military sense," he said. "Training one night a week in the Fort Riel Armory in Fairhope was good for us, but being on full - time active duty has given us more practical experience in operating as an ambulance unit and in giving emergency medical aid under simulated combat conditions," he added.

Officer personnel in the 128th is unchanged since the unit's arrival. All of them plan to return to their former civilian occupations.

Capt. Machlan will teach science and mathematics at Fairhope High School. First Lt. James C. Irving, supply officer and a combat veteran of World War II and the Korean conflict, will resume his engineer job with an Alabama power company as a trouble shooter.

First Lt. Lloyd T. Moore, 128th executive officer, will return to his basketball and football coaching duties at Davidson High School in Mobile. While on active duty, he coached the 248th Medical Battalion touch football and basketball here.

First Lt. James Shore, a platoon leader, who has been with the 128th since 1954, will again work in the engineering department of a nylon manufacturing company in Pensacola, Fla.

On July 24, a departure ceremony was conducted at Chapel Field for the National Guard unit. A certificate of appreciation, signed by Gen. Herbert B. Powell, a former commanding general of The Infantry Center and presently commander of the Continental Army Command, was presented to the company.

The advance party of the 128th left here proud of its accomplishments but glad to return home. With the unit will go 25 vehicles, nine more than the company brought with it 10 months ago. The nine vehicles, all ambulances, were furnished by other National Guard units.

The 128th also will take nine radiac meters and two radiac chargers furnished by other units.

The 128th Medical Company dates its origin back to 1903 when it was known as the Mobile Rifles of the Alabama National Guard. Three members of the Mobile Rifles of 59 years ago are still living in Fairhope.

James E. Gaston is an automobile dealer. His brother, Dr. C. A. Gaston, is secretary and treasurer of a Fairhope concern. Clayton C. Baldwin, the third member of the original group, is a retired postmaster of Fairhope.

As the years passed, the 128th became larger and better equipped and trained. In 1947 it was designated as a platoon of Headquarters Company, 2nd Battalion, 200th Regiment of the 31st Infantry "Dixie" Division.

The unit with this lengthy title used an empty potato shed for its training in 1947 and 1948. The shed was loaned gratis by its owner, Willie J. Nelson.

In January, 1951, the combat unit at Fort Jackson, S.C.

Most of its men were sent to Korea where they served for two years. In May, 1959, the unit was redesignated as a platoon of a combat signal company. Less than a year later it became a medical ambulance company with its present designation.

When the 128th ends its training in the field and at Martin Army Hospital and returns to Fairhope, the men will resume their one night a week training at the Fort Riel Armory.

Benning Officer Sets Sports Car National Mark

Capt. Harold Witter, presently attending Associate Infantry Officer Career Course, Class No. 5, 2nd Student Battalion, The Student Brigade, set a new national sports car record recently at the Southeastern Regional Championship record run.

Capt. Witter covered the quarter-mile in his grey Porsche in 16.45 seconds or 84 miles per hour for a new national Class D Modified Sports Car Record.

COMMUNIST FLAG . . . Bobbie Nett (R), eight-year-old son of Medal of Honor winner Lt. Col. Robert B. Nett, lends a North Viet Nam flag sent to him by Capt. Richard Ziegler, to the U. S. Army Infantry School's Ranger Department for display. Capt. Ziegler, a former instructor with the Ranger Department's Platoon Tactics Committee, headed by Col. Nett, is serving with the U. S. Military Assistance Advisory Group in the Republic of Viet Nam. Receiving the flag from Bobbie is Col. John W. Jackson, Ranger Department director.

American Armies Hold Conference

FORT AMADOR, C. Z. (ANS) — Top army officers of 19 Western Hemisphere republics recently converged on the Canal Zone for the third annual Conference of the American Armies. The conference was held at the headquarters of U. S. Army Caribbean, Fort Amador, C. Z.

More than 80 senior officers, including the commanders of most of the armies of North, Central and South America, took part in the five-day conference held July 16-20.

The central theme of the 1962 discussions was "Logistics" — the techniques of getting the right equipment to the right place at the right time, and, in condition to use. During the sessions, experts from Peru, Venezuela, Guatemala, and the United States made presentations.

Major Gen. Theodore F. Bogart, Commanding General of U. S. Army Caribbean, who has hosted the Conference of the American Armies since it was inaugurated in 1960, said that the conference "provides an annual meeting ground where the military leaders of the Western Hemisphere discuss mutual problems, exchange ideas on military matters and strengthen the bonds of friendship and understanding."

CORRECTION

A photo caption in the July 27 issue of The Bayonet stated Lt. Col. Joffree L. Gueymard recently assumed duties of executive officer of The Student Brigade.

He does not succeed Lt. Col James Donaghey, as previously reported, but rather, Lt. Col. Lowell W. Hesser. Col. Hesser is currently S-1 of TSB.

Col. Atkins New TICTC Deputy CO

Lt. Col. James L. Atkins, a World War II veteran with 22 years of service, has assumed duties as deputy commander of The Infantry Center Troop Command.

He succeeds Lt. Col. Louis J. Maricle, who will attend the Armed Forces Staff College at Fort Leavenworth, Kan.

Col. Atkins received a direct commission while serving with the 317th Infantry, 80th Division during World War II.

In Korea, during 1952 and 1953, he was a company commander, S-3, executive officer, and battalion commander with the 65th Infantry Regiment, 3rd Division.

After a Korean conflict, the colonel served with the 3rd Infantry Regiment at Fort Myer, Va. In 1955, he became a staff officer at the Army War College, Carlisle Barracks, Pa.

Col. Atkins served in Fountainbleau, France, from 1957 to 1960 as operations officer with the Allied Forces, Central Europe. In 1960, he was named Infantry adviser and assistant chief of Test design and analysis at Dugway (Utah) Proving Grounds (Chemical Corps).

Before coming here, the colonel was assigned to the Command and General Staff College at Fort Leavenworth.

Among his awards and decorations are the Distinguished Service Cross for extraordinary heroism against an armed enemy, Bronze Star Medal with Oak Leaf Cluster for Valor, Purple Heart and Infantryman Combat Badge, second award.

Col. and Mrs. Atkins have two sons, James Jr., 17, and Jonny, 12.

Transportation Corps Observes 20th Year With Massed Colors

A massing of colors and a ceremonial cake cutting were presented by transportation units at the 39th Transportation Battalion area recently to celebrate their corps' 20th birthday.

The celebration featured Col. H. F. McFeely, The Infantry Center transportation officer, as the principal speaker.

The massing of the colors included those of the 39th Transportation Battalion, The Infantry Center, and the 13th Transportation Battalion, 2nd Infantry Division.

The 414th Transportation Company, Lawson Army Aviation Command, was represented by a company guidon.

The Transportation Corps was established by the War Department July 13, 1942, when early World War II experience indicated the necessity for an integrated surface transportation system operating under one coordinating agency.

The assistant transportation officer at The Infantry Center, Lt. Col. Noble E. Taylor, when asked of the extent of the corps' activities here, answered, "The transportation motor pool operation is probably the largest in the U. S. Army, We have 1,113 passenger and cargo vehicles which traveled almost 9,000,000 miles last year."

Commenting on the Commercial Traffic Division, he said, "During 1961, they handled a workload of approximately 20 million pounds of outbound freight, 18 million pounds of household goods, approximately 8,500 transportation requests and meal tickets; assisted many dependents with overseas' travel arrangements, and handled several thousand military passengers, both individual travelers and troop movements."

"The Aviation Field Maintenance Shop provides supply and field maintenance support for fixed and rotary wing aircraft assigned to Fort Benning units and activities, and also for certain satellited off-post activities," the officer added.

In addition, Col. Taylor explained, "The Fort Benning railroad, which is contractor-operated, utilizing Government owned equipment, is supervised by the trasportation officer."

The 39th Transportation Battalion (Truck) is commanded by Lt. Col. Gus A. Wolman Jr., and has the mission of conducting training of assigned and attacked units in accordance with appropriate Army training programs.

In addition to the training mission, the battalion provides truck support to The Infantry Center, such as Reserve component summer training, Ranger camps and the transportation of personnel and cargo in support of The Infantry School.

The 3rd Transportation Battalion (Helicopter), which is commanded by Lt. Col. Donato N. Vincent, is attached to Lawson Army Aviation Command.

At present the unit is on temporary duty at Fort Bragg, N. C., supporting the Howze Board which is making a study of future requirements in the field of tacitcal mobility and Army aviation.

The normal mission of the Third Battalion is to provide command control, staff planning and administrative supervision for from two to seven transport aircraft companies.

The 13th Transportation Battalion, assigned to the 2nd Infantry Division, is commanded by Lt. Col. Walter Hibbard Jr., who is also the division transportation officer and is responsible for technical supervision of aircraft maintenance in the division.

Cadets Hold Military Field Day

A military Field Day for the cadets of the ROTC Camp was held on French Field Thursday.

The annual sports event, which highlights the six-weeks training of the cadets, consisted of many and varied athletic competitions, including push-ups, sit-ups, grenade throw, horse and rider, three - legged race.

Also there were some purely military skills such as assembly and disassembly of the M-1 rifle, tent pitching, 81 mm mortar mounting, and assembly of the machine gun. Squad and platoon precision drill competitions were also held.

The scores of the field day competitions will be counted in the running competition for "Best Company" of the Camp. The camp ends today.

New System Speeds Data Transmission

WASHINGTO N(AFPS) — A new high-speed data transmission system which will increase the speed of data traffic (punch card information) more than 30 times, has been successfully tested, according to the Army Signal Corps.

The new system, operating over long-distance, high frequency radio circuits, will be capable of data transmission at a rate of 100 cards per minute simultaneously in each direction.

Equipment now in use handles from two to three cards per minute.

A variable operation feature of the new system provides operation at 25, 50, 75 or 100 cards per minute.

A prototype system is being tested between the Army's Northwest Relay Station and Army facilities in Japan. It is expected that the system will be converted to full operational traffic by October to serve the data transmission requirements of the Army, Navy and Air Force btween the two points.

Eventually, the Signal Corps expects to establish similiar systems at all major overseas commands.

Pvt. Wright Tops Class

Pvt. Allen Irvin Wright of the 238rd Signal Company, recently graduated top man in a class of 42 men at radio repair school at Fort Gordon, Ga.

The holder of a bachelor of science degree in electrical engineering, Pvt. Wright worked as a color television design engineer for the Radio Corporation of America in Indianapolis, Ind., prior to being activatad with his unit last fall.

While on active duty, Pvt. Wright has served as an electronics instructor.

First Lt. John E. Westwick, radio repair platoon leader, said, "Wright has done a good job as he always does, and will prove a valuable instructor when the unit returns to Reserve status."

Sp4 Thomas B. Corlett III, a personnel administration specialist in Headquarters Battery, 2nd Howitzer Battalion, 10th Artillery, 1st Infantry Brigade, has departed on a 41-day temporary duty assignment to Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind.

He is attending the five-week Personnel Management Specialist Course being taught at The Adjutant General's School.

FIRST PRESIDENT

The first president to cruise aboard an atomic submarine was President Eisenhower who rode the Seawolf out of Newport, R.I. on Sept. 25, 1957.

Registration Day Set For AU Fall Courses

The American University's fall term will begin Sept. 10 and continue through Nov. 1. All classes will be held at the Education Center on post.

The University will accept registrations Aug. 31 through Sept. 11. The courses are open to all military personnel and their dependents with a high school diploma or who have successfully passed the high school General Educational Development (GED) test.

Tuition fees are payable upon registration. Military personnel eligible for tuition assistance must present completed Department of Army Form 2171 at the time of registration.

Registrations will be accepted from Aug. 31 to Sept. 11. A fee of $5 will be charged for late registrations.

Persons desiring tuition assistance may present a completed DA Form 2171 at the time of registration.

Classes will meet on Monday and Wednesday, and Tuesday and Thursday evenings at the Army Education Center. Qualified students may earn a maximum of six semester hours during this term.

The tentative schedule for Monday and Wednesday first period contains: Introductory Accounting I, Business Law I, Analysis of Financial Statements, Introduction to Economics II, Psychological Statistics II, Methods of Teaching in Secondary Schools, Principles of Marketing and History of Education in Western Culture.

The schedule for Tuesday and Thursday first period includes: English Composition I, English Composition II, Basic Mathematics, Human Biology, Elementary German I, History of United States I, Introduction to Sociology, Social Disorganization, Pyschology of Education, Personnel Management in Industry and Mental Hygiene.

The second period schedule is World Literature I, Survey of Mathematics I, Science of Physics, Elementary Spanish I, Backgrounds of Civilization I, The Family, Philosophy of Business, Business Finance, English Composition I, Psychology of Adolescence and General Psychology.

Caribou II To Handle Big Cargos

Washington (AFPS) — A new short-take-off and landing aircraft, the Caribou II, is to be developed for the Army by De-Havilland Aircraft, Ltd., of Canada.

Design for the new aircraft developed from the Caribou now in use by the Army. The current model was not designed specifically for certain Army needs, but was purchased as a readily available aircraft.

The new model will have increased power and more cargo space and will be capable of transporting the Pershing missile system, the 105 mm Howitzer, or the three-quarter-ton truck.

The new aircraft's cargo compartment is comparable to that of the Army's Chinook helicopter which was designed for such loads.

Canada is sharing the cost of developing the new aircraft, which will be powered by two turbo-prop engines. The Army is converting to such engines in a move to allow the use of one type of aviation fuel instead of the several types now in use.

Boxing Official

MSgt. Frank R. Pizzuto, a member of the 3rd Infantry Division in Germany, is one of six boxing officials from Germany to officiate in the 1962 Army Boxing Eliminations in Europe.

Civilians, MPs Prepare For Shoot

The annual Law Enforcement Pistol Tournement will be conducted here Aug. 17 through 19, sponsored by The Infantry Center at the post Pistol Range.

Awards will be given in both military and civilian categories, provided by the Rifle and Pistol Club of Fort Benning.

To be eligible to compete in the tournament, a shooter must be presently serving as a member of a civilian law enforcement agency or a member of a military police unit stationed here.

Competition in the match can be completed in a three-hour period, according to MSgt. (Ret.) Thomas Kirkman, custodian of the post club. Competitors need not be present for the entire three days of shooting.

Entry cards may be obtained at the post Pistol Range. A fee of $2.50 will be charged for each entry, regardless of the number of matches entered. A fee of $1 will be made for challenges.

Deadline for entries is Aug. 15.

2 Medics Complete Schooling

PFC Roy L. Brown of the 690th Medical Company, 428th Medical Battalion, recently completed the Infantry Mechanic Course with honors.

PFC Brown finished second in his class, just .7 of a point behind the top man. He received a letter of commendation from Brig. Gen. Royal Reynolds, assistant commandant of The Infantry School.

PFC John D. Chase, Hqs. and Hqs. Detachment, 428th Medical Battalion, was not far behind PFC Brown in the race for top honors, managing to finish fourth in the class.

The purpose of the course is to provide enlisted personnel with a working knowledge in the performance and organizational maintenance of Infantry and full-tracked vehicles and associated equipment.

National Guard Signal Company Proves Proficiency in Training

By SFC George McBurney

The 111th Signal Company of Greenville, S. C., on active duty here has made an enviable record for proficiency since its call-up in October.

Included in the honors the National Guardsmen have been awarded are a plaque for having the best mess hall among eight National Guard and Army Reserve units on active duty here, a rating of "Superior" for its command maintenance inspections and a high excellent score on its Army Training Test.

The 111th also successfully completed the Trainfire course, a difficult test of the men's ability to hit mechanical running deer and other hidden field targets that pop up intermittently upon electrical contact.

Lauded by Brigade

In addition to its laurels for success in this training, the Greenville unit has been officially lauded by the 1st Infantry Brigade, to which it is attached for training, for its combat proficiency, the battle indoctrination course and its defense against chemical, biological and radiological attacks.

In the CBR test the 111th proved its prowess in combating simulated atomic blasts and poison gas attacks, smoke bombs and radioactive fallout.

The 111th, the first South Carolina Army unit to be called to active duty last year in the Berlin crisis, is a large base signal company whose mission is to install, operate and maintain communications, to provide pictorial services, electronic countermeasures, signal intelligence and supply and to maintain Signal Corps equipment.

It is the only National Guard or Reserve unit that can be divided into teams for various kinds of missions. At present the 111th has 38 teams conducting 21 signal missions.

Prove Quality

The Army Training Test, one of the unit's most important activities, proved the company's quality. The ATT, given to all units on active duty to determine their combat readiness, tested the 111th on its ability to operate technically with its signal equipment and to sustain itself during field operations and maneuvers.

In the tests for maintenance and operations of signal equipment, switchboard operation, supply issue and record keeping setting up field activities and doing photographic work on the job and in the laboratory, the 111th is rated top quality.

Much of the National Guard unit's training is in a wooded area several miles from the company's billets and Signal Section on the Main Post. Once a month the 111th conducts a field training exercise to keep in top conditinn and maintain its combat readiness.

Commanded by Capt. Bryan J. Perry Jr., the 111th moves into the field and prepares for a mock battle with aggressor forces.

Rifle and machine gun fire with blank ammunition, smoke bombs, tear gas, air raids by enemy planes and a simulated atomic blast add realism to the maneuvers that are designed to keep the company in the proper readiness.

Such practical experience and realistic training have molded the 111th into a combat ready unit, company officers said.

Wiser Now

First Lt. Robert J. Foster, an assistant platoon leader, added, "We are wiser and more experienced because of our training at Fort Benning than we would be if we hadn't been called to active duty."

On Sunday the 111th, its bags and baggage and equipment packed, will leave the post to return to its home station in Greenville.

Not all the men who arrived with the company in October will return. About 40 of them applied for Regular Army status to become military career soldiers. To date, 21 enlisted men and four officers have been accepted by the Army.

Some will remain here while others will receive overseas assignments or will be sent to signal units in the United States.

After returning home the members of the company will resume their training one night a week in the National Guard Armory in Greenville.

Capt. Perry said of his men and their training, "Our training at Fort Benning has been of great value to us and the National Guard. We have improved tremendously as a combat-ready signal unit since we came on active duty. We of the 111th are proud of our company and I am proud of the men. They are good soldiers."

Pentagon Credit Union Opens to O'Seas EM

WASHINGTON (AFPS)—The Pentagon Federal Credit Union, one of the oldest chartered by the Bureau of Federal Credit Unions, has extended overseas membership to Army and Air Force enlisted men, grade E-5 and up, if they are serving in an area not serviced by a credit union.

An announcement by the Pentagon - based credit union also said it has reduced its interest rates on dependents' college tuition loans to three-quarters of one per cent per month on unpaid balances.

Previously, the credit union had extended full overseas membership privileges only to officers and warrant officers. Due to numerous requests from enlisted men, however, it obtained permission from the Federal Bureau to include E-5's and up, providing they have more than four years of active service.

Full membership privileges include savings (share) accounts, personal (signature) loans and secured loans such as loans against shares, automobile financing or other collateral.

Three plans are being offered to help finance college educations for the dependents of credit union members.

The first, an eight-year, pay-as-you-go program, allows the member to borrow to meet the student's needs on a semester to semester basis. The loan can be renegotiated at the beginning of the student's final semester and repayment extended for an additional 60-month period. This extends the length of the loan to the eight and one-half years.

A second plan is called the Five - Year Tuition Savings Share Plan. The money borrowed is used only as needed and the balance is deposited in the credit union where it draws semi-annual dividends. This loan can be scheduled for a five-year repayment. The dividends earned by that part of it kept on deposit help defray the cost of the loan.

The third plan is a Five-Year Lump Sum Loan under which the entire tuition cost may be borrowed at once and repaid within 60 months on a monthly budget plan.

Shares (savings) of $1,000 and less, and loans are all protected by a life insurance policy in the amount of the shares or the unpaid balance of a loan at no extra cost to the credit union member.

Col. Keyes Commends Artillery

At a 2nd Howitzer Battalion, 10th Artillery, 1st Infantry Brigade review, Col. Richard W. Keyes, brigade commander, commended members of Battery B for winning the Commanding General's Trophy in the annual Parade of Champions competition.

Col. Keyes presented the Brigade Certificate of Achievement to Capt. Jack H. Percival, Battery B commander, and the 10th Artillery Certificate of Achievement to 1st Lt. Robert C. Soderstrom and 2nd Lt. John R. Wooldridge who assisted in molding the Parade of Champions winners.

In the same ceremony, Capt. Richard L. Bryan, Battery A commander, received both the quarterly and annual Brigade Best Mess Award from Col. Keyes.

Assisting Col. Keyes in making the presentations was Lt. Col. Wallis E. McClain, 10th Artillery Commander.

Device Aids In Reducing Gun Sounds

The Army Medical Service has devised a new electronic item which protects the ears of armored soldiers from the high-intensity noise of gunfire.

Developed by the Army Medical Research Laboratory at Fort Knox, Ky., the mechanism is box-like in shape and is connected by wires to the gun and intercom system of the tank. Before the gun goes off, the device generates a little clicking noise in the gunner's earphones which immediately damps or contracts the eardrums.

To demonstrate the effectiveness of this device, researchers of the Psychology Division at the Army Medical Research Laboratory have devised a measure of hearing conservation termed "Temporary Threshold Shift Reduction (TTSR)."

TTSR is a measure which expresses in decibels — a standard sound intensity unit — the difference in temporary hearing loss induced by gunfire sounds when the individual is and is not protected by the electronic device.

Although some persons do not evidence a need for the system, most individuals do, and a significant number experience a marked protection of their hearing when the electronic device is used. Temporary threshold shift reductions of from one to 60 decibels have been recorded in persons protected by the acoustic reflex device.

112 Cadets Receive Commissions Today

The Army is scheduled to gain 112 new second lieutenants at 9 a.m. today when the Reserve Officer Training Corps Summer Camp holds commissioning ceremonies.

The cadets to be commissioned have completed their military requirements and have graduated and received degrees from their respective colleges or universities.

Commissioning ceremonies will climax the 1962 Summer Camp at Theater One.

The various branches of the Army will receive the following number per branch: Infantry, 33; Armor, 12; Transportation Corps, five; Adjutant General's Corps, four; Military Police Corps, four; Engineers, nine; Artillery, 20; Army Intelligence, five; Signal Corps, six Medical Service Corps, eight; Quartermaster, two; Ordnance, 3.

Following the closing ceremonies at Theatre One, there will be a "pinning ceremony" at The Harmony Church Service Club (Bldg. 4410), at which it is expected that quite a few wives, mothers, sweethearts will do the honors by pinning the gold bar on the new Army lieutenants.

That ceremony will begin at 10:30 a.m. Following the pinning, a coffee will be held in honor of the new lieutenants.

Twenty-four colleges and universities are represented by those being commissioned. In the state of Alabama, Florence State College, two; Jacksonville State, three; Spring Hill, one; and Tuskegee, one.

Florida is represented by Florida A&M, three; Florida State University, three; Florida Southern, one; Stetson, two; University of Florida, three; and the University of Miami, five.

The Mississippi schools are Mississippi State, two; University of Southern Mississippi, two; and the University of Mississippi with four.

Georgia is represented by Georgia State College, three; Georgia Tech, one; North Georgia College, three; and the University of Georgia, three.

The Citadel, in Charleston, will commission 47, Tennessee is represented by The University of Chattanooga, two, East Tennessee State, four; University of Tennessee three; Vanderbilt, six.

The University of Puerto Rico, which includes the College of A&M.A., has seven cadets being comissioned, and Marquette University in Milwaukee, Wisc. has one.

Hero of Boxer Rebellion Gives Treasures to Unit

SCHOFIELD BARRACKS, Hawaii — The military mementoes of one of the Army's greatest living heroes were formally presented to Company E, 1st Battle Group, 14th Infantry, 25th Infantry Division, in ceremonies here Monday.

They are the mementoes of the Army bugler who, during the Boxer Rebellion, immortalized the words, "I'll try, sir."

In connection with the centennial observance of the Medal of Honor as the Nation's highest military award, Lt. Col. (ret.) Calvin P. Titus, 82, of North Hollywood, Calif., last week sent his most treasured military memorabilia to the company with which he served during the Boxer Rebellion in China 62 years ago.

Included in the momentoes were his bugle, saber, pistol, West Point cadet cap, helmet, collection of photos, and a five-by seven-foot picture of him scaling the walls of Peking.

On Aug. 13, 1900, the 14th Infantry was attempting to force its way into Peking to succor American and other foreign citizens within the walled city. During the height of the battle, Pvt. Titus, with a simple statement, "I'll try, sir," volunteered to scale the fortified walls, succeeded in the attempt, and so inspired his fellow soldiers that the regiment was successful in accomplishing its mission.

The 18-year-old bugler was given an appointment to the U. S. Military Academy in recognition of his heroism. In 1902, in an action unprecedented in the history of West Point, the entire Corps of Cadets was "turned out" to witness the presentation of the Medal of Honor by President Theodore Roosevelt to Cadet Titus.

Col. Titus served in World War I and retired from the Army October 31, 1930. His famous statement "I'll try, sir," has been adopted as the motto of the 14th Infantry, whose 1st Battle Group is part of the 25th Infantry Division.

Services to Standardize All Aircraft Designations

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — In a matter of months, the Air Force's T-39 will no longer be the Navy's T3J, but will be T-39 in both services. The Navy's F4H will become the Air Force's F4 instead of F-110 as it is now known.

These changes are part of a Defense Department program to standardize the designations of all military aircraft, ending a situation in which each of the separate services had its own system of designation.

A DOD directive has given the Air Force responsibility for setting a time schedule for standardizing the designations of existing and future military aircraft and for applying this system in coordination with the Army and Navy.

The Air Force will also maintain current listings of popular names given military aircraft, and so far as possible the names of civil and foreign aircraft, to prevent duplication in naming planes.

The system will designate planes by prefixes which will identify the basic model of a particular type of aircraft. This will be further modified by an additional prefix for modifications of the aircraft and suffices for significant changes in the basic model.

It will work in this manner: Alphabetical symbols will mark the basic mission of the aircraft (F for fighters, B for bombers, C for cargo-passenger planes, etc.). This will be preceded by another symbol indicating a modified mission such as the F-4 modified for reconnaissance becoming the RF-4, the letter R indicating reconnaissance.

Another example of the system is the Army AO-1 combat surveillance plane which is capable of operating from small fields and unimproved runways. It will be known, servicewide, as the OV-1 (O for observation and V for vertical or short take-off aircraft).

The Air Force said the program was being put into effect immediately but it would be some months before it was completed.

Medic Unit To Study Air Health

To meet the increasing need for research in Army aviation medical problems, the Army Aeromedical Research Unit was established July 1 at the Army Aviation Center, Fort Rucker, Ala.

The new unit, headed by Lt. Col. John D. Lawson, MC, will be a class II activity of the Army Medical Research and Development Command, Office of the Army Surgeon General. Conceived by Col. Spurgeon Neel, MC, flight surgeon of the Army Aviation Center and commanding officer of the hospital there, the unit will study those problems specifically related to Army aviation.

National Matches Swept by Army In Unprecedented Firing Session

DOUBLE WINNER . . . The Army Western Region "Gray Team' won the grand Aggregate Pistol Team Championship and the .45-caliber pistol team event at the National Pistol Championship last week. Seated (L to R) are SSgt. Leland A. Wessel, Fort Riley, Kan.; Sgt. Claude F. Bennington, (coach), Tacoma, Wash.; Maj. William Kirkpatrick (captain), Fort Benning; Sgt. Irving E. Henry, New York. Back row, Sgt. Merriweather Jones, Seattle, Wash.; SFC Alvin J. Moore, Fort Benning, and SFC R. L. Cochran, also of Fort Benning.

Blankenship Is Again Champion

By 1Lt Lee LaCombe

CAMP PERRY, Ohio—Army pistol shooters swept all before them as they stacked up an unprecedented number of first places in the team and individual matches at the 1962 National Pistol Championships which ended here Saturday.

U.S. Army Western Region four-man team captured the National Trophy Pistol Team match with an 11th-hour effort to cap a week of trophy winning which started with the very first match —.45-caliber Slow Fire—won Monday morning by SFC Alvin J. Moore, with a record-setting 198-4X out of 200.

Western's victory was its third in the team events. On Friday they captured the .45-caliber team match and the coveted Pistol Team grand aggregate, setting new marks in both events. They fired 1187-78X in the .45-caliber match and had 3898-188X in the aggregate, a new event this year.

Toughest Victory

Individually the Army pistol shots scored as well.

SFC William Blankenship Jr., of the Marksmanship Training Unit, banged out a three-day grand aggregate of 2633-128x to come from behind and win the National individual crown for the third consecutive year.

Blankenship's victory was perhaps his toughest as he did not lead in the individual race until PO2 Donald Hamilton of the U.S. Navy fired his final round on the last relay of Thursday's .45-caliber matches. Hamilton finished with 2633 also, but with 116X shots.

Hamilton had taken over the lead in the individual race for honors from Sp4 Robert Stoecker, a Reservist firing on the Army Reserve Team from St. Louis, Mo., in the second match Thursday.

Stoecker had entered the final day of firing with a one point edge on the 2633 entries with a two-day total of 1764. Hamilton had 1763 and Blankenship was third with 1758.

Stoecker had gained his margin by taking first place in the Center Fire aggregate with 881-46X, slipping past the first day leader, SFC R. L. Cochran, Army, who had won the .22-caliber aggregate with 884-37X.

Blankenship's twin victory in the .45-caliber aggregate (with 875-41X) and the grand aggregate gave the Army handgunners a sweep of all the individual aggregates.

Take Team Events

They continued their domination of this year's events by taking all of the team events also and adding the National Trophy Individual title, won by SSgt. James McNally of MTU with a 294 out of 300.

Coeds Will Tour Infantry Center

Coeds from college campuses throughout the United States who have shown an interest in the Women's Army Corps will visit here Wednesday through Friday for an introduction to various phases of military life.

The girls, all juniors in college, are scheduled to arrive from Fort McClellan, Ala., at 4:20 p.m. Wednesday.

The following day they will be briefed on the history and organization of The Infantry Center and the organization and mission of The Infantry School.

In addition, they will tour The Infantry School's Editorial and Pictorial Office and Martin Army Hospital for orientations, see demonstrations on the capabilities and limitations of ground mobility means and an Infantry-tank team in attack.

The day will close with a vis-

Provost Marshal Wednesday, and Col. Frank H. Stone, new Army Adjutant General.

Col. Kieffer, the new Third U. S. Army Engineer, comes to Fort McPherson from the Office of the Secretary of Defense, Washington, D.C., where he served as Director, Office of Emergency Planning. At Fort McPherson he succeeds Col. Ellery W. Niles, who has been reassigned to the White Sands Missile Range, White Sands, N. Mex.

As Alaska District Engineer, Anchorage, Alaska, from 1956-58, Col. Keiffer designed and supervised the construction of the nation's first nuclear power plant built by the government to its design and specifications.

A 1936 graduate of the U. S. Military Academy, West Point, N. Y., Col. Keiffer holds an M. S. Degree in civil engineering from Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Cambridge, Mass. and an M. A. Degree in international affairs from George Washington University, Washington, D. C. He was born at Fort DuPont, Del.

Col. Campbell, the Third U. S. Army's new Provost Marshal, succeeds Col. Harry W. Corman, who retired from active military duty on July 31.

Col. Campbell served as Provost Marshal of U. S. Army Hawaii from April 1958 until assigned here. Before that he was Deputy Provost Marshal, U. S. Army Europe and served as President, Military Police Board, Fort Gordon, Ga.

Col. Campbell received his Army ROTC commission in 1932, after graduating from Clemson College in South Carolina.

As Third U. S. Army Adjutant General, Col. Stone succeeds Col. B. H. Sbell. Col. Stone's last assignment was at the Pentagon where he served as executive officer to The Adjutant General, Department of the Army.

From 1957-59 Col. Stone served as Assistant Chief of Staff, G-1 (Plans and Operations), Headquarters, Eighth U. S. Army, Korea, and before that was Deputy Adjutant General of the Sixth U. S. Army with headquarters at the Presidio, San Francisco.

A native of Fond Du Lac, Wis., Col. Stone holds a B.S. Degree in civil engineering from the University of Wisconsin, Madison, Wis. and an M.S. Degree in personnel administration from American University, Washington, D. C.

it to the Infantry Museum.

The Infantry School's Airborne-Air Mobility Department will brief the girls on paratrooper training Aug. 17 and conduct "buddy seat" rides, simulated parachute jumps, from a 250-foot training tower.

Later that morning they will see a scout dog demonstration performed by men of the 26th Infantry Platoon, and a display of various infantry equipment.

They will eat lunch with members of Battery A, 2nd Howitzer Battalion, 10th Artillery.

Departure is scheduled for 1:15 p.m. that day.

What a Menu!

Food Service Division, MAH

How would you like to head for the commissary with a monthly shopping list like this?

Six tons of beef; 2,700 lbs. of chicken; 1,700 lbs. of bacon; 3,420 dozen eggs; 1,600 lbs. of butter; 3,000 loaves of bread; 40 gallons of mayonnaise; 6 tons of potatoes; 10,000 lbs. of fresh and frozen vegetables; 240 gallons of ice cream; 4,600 gallons of milk; 1,300 lbs. of coffee; 2,500 lbs. of sugar; 400 lbs. of salt; 34 gallons of vinegar.

Impressive? Well, it's only a partial list of the food purchased each month by the Food Service Division at Martin Army Hospital. The average "grocery" bill is about $21,000 per month.

The mission of the Food Service Division is "The preparation and service of high quality, nutritious food to patients and authorized duty personnel within prescribed financial limits."

To accomplish this mission, Food Service receives a ration of approximately $1.07 per day for each patient and each authorized staff member. This allotment must cover not only the regular diets, but also all special diets and nourishments including diabetic foods, high-protein supplements and baby formulas.

The financial management of the [illegible]

however, is only one facet of the job done by the Dietitians at Martin Army Hospital. They are also responsible for management, menu planning, procurement, storage, issue, preparation and serving of food, sanitation, equipment management, and personnel training.

The feeding of 650 persons each meal requires much equipment and many employees. When a large percentage of these persons are on special diets, the matter becomes even more complicated. For example, a meal of baked ham requires the preparation of another meat for those patients who cannot have ham. If the other meat were to be roast beef, you would find the cooks in the main kitchen involved in the preparation of ham, ground ham (for dental patients), roast beef, fat-free roast beef, salt-free roast beef, salt-free-fat-free roast beef and chicken for certain special diets. And this is only the meat course - the same must be done for potatoes, vegetables, etc.

The equipment used in preparing such large amounts of food is comparable to that used in homes but on a much larger scale. The pressure cooker is a three-compartment steamer which stands five feet high. The pots and pans range in size from five to 80-gallon capacity steam

Better Education Brings Better Rank

Educators for two decades have been loudly decrying the fact that Johnny can't read or think for himself.

You perhaps may recognize Johnny in yourself. Formal schooling may have ended for you before you left civilian life. You may be one of those about whose educational status the Defense Department is now concerned as it has not been before. For, as everyone must know who has kept abreast of the news, the very basic concepts of the military mission have been reviewed to indicate, most urgently, that the Army of today must be an Army of fully qualified and knowledgeable personnel. It is the duty of the individual soldier to see to it that he meets needed qualifications.

The objective of at least a high school education for noncommissioned officers has been set by the Department of the Army. If you plan for promotion and do not meet this objective, it is your responsibility to set about doing so. Visit your Army Education Center, Building 2512, to arrange for class instruction or testing.

Airborne Graduates 539; Record Class

Four services were represented at graduation ceremonies recently for 539 members of The Infantry School's basic airborne class.

This number sets a new record for one class since the airborne schools were combined last year, eclipsing the old record of 517 set last week.

Included were 56 Army officers and 419 enlisted men, one U. S. Air Force officer and two enlisted men, two U. S. Navy enlisted men, and six U. S. Marine Corps officers and 53 enlisted men.

Honor graduate was Marine Corps SSgt. James I. Walsh. Sgt. Walsh is assigned to the 5th Forces Reconnaissance Company, a Marine Corps Reserve unit in Albuquerque.

Five sons of former paratroopers who served during World War II were among those receiving Parachutist Badges.

One of these is Pvt. Leo L. Fancher, son of Pvt. Leonard Fancher who was killed in action on Dec. 22, 1944, while serving with the 82nd Airborne Divison.

Pvt. Jerry Abbott's father, Calif., also served with the 82nd Airborne Division.

Omie B. Robinson Sr., of Philadelphia, father of Pvt. Omie B. Robinson, Jr., was with the 101st Airborne Division.

Two of the fathers stayed in the Army after the war and later retired.

They are Col. (Ret.) James Gaston of Hayward, Calif., father of Pvt. James Gaston, and MSgt. (Ret.) John Lackey of Coral Gables, Fla., father of 1st Lt. John Lackey.

In addition to serving with the 82nd and 13th Airborne Divisions during the war, Sgt. Lackey was an instructor with the airborne school in 1945.

OCs Assist Columbus Fire Victims

By Sp4 Bruce N. Yulfee

A collection totalling $170 taken among members of the 51st Officer Candidate Company, 5th Student Battalion, The Student Brigade, was presented to a Columbus family, recently victimized by a tragic fire.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Robinson received the money from OC Lawrence P. Nemelka and OC John Q. Fliegar, president of the company's Student Council.

The Robinson's home and gatherings of a life time were completely destroyed in the blaze. The homeless family was taken in by neighbors and given food and shelter until other arrangements could be provided.

Mr. Robinson, the sole supporter of seven — his wife, father, Mr. Albert Robinson, Sr., and five children, Gary, 13, Rosella, 12, Timmy, 10, Kenneth, 8, and Gwen 6—is only able to work part time because of a back ailment. Due to this disability, what little funds Mr. Robinson had left, have since been used in an effort to reconstruct a home. At present the Robinson family is residing at 214 22nd Avenue, Columbus.

After reading of the family in an article appearing in the Columbus Ledger-Enquirer, OC Nemelka approached his fellow classmen requesting that they lend a "helping hand" to the needy Robinsons. The class did just that collecting a total of $170.00.

Engineers Participate In Exercise

The 586th Engineer Company (Float Bridge) goes to Swift Strike II again this year. Last Friday the advance party left for Fort Gordon, Ga., the first step in its movement to the maneuver area in North and South Carolina.

The purpose of Swift Strike II as stated by Headquarters of the U. S. Strike Command is "to gain experience in joint operations; develop the capabilities of the forces to react rapidly; and to provide numerous opportunities of the forces to react rapidly; and to provide numerous opportunities for units and organizations from squads to corps to be confronted with fresh tactical situations."

In this exercise the 586th Engineer Company will be in support of the Red Forces (Aggressors), by being directly attached to the 921st Engineer Group (Combat).

In a maneuver of this type the mission of the 586th Engineer Company will be to maintain and transport floating bridge components and give technical advice in the technical advice in the construction of the floating equipage.

At full strength this unit posseases 725 feet of M4T6 bridge, 472 feet of aluminum footbridge and six light tactical rafts.

It Could Be Murder For Careless Driver

Murder is an ugly business. Yet, deliberately on every day of every year, despite repeated forewarnings, personal and public, thousands of "good" American citizens set out to murder, maim or dismember human beings through careless, thoughtless use of their automobiles.

Often when "good" citizens find themselves behind the wheel of a car, they, by some irrational mental lapse, begin dereliction completely beyond reason or common sense.

A dangerous delusion has slowly crept its way into the life of every American, reasoning that murder on the highway is somehow different, a lesser crime than a body shot dead with a revolver.

It has been said that "manners maketh man." But morals and manners are closely equated. Without one the other becomes merely an empty shell.

Recently eight people were slaughtered during a fatal 100-mile an hour "drag race" between two cars on a Maryland turnpike. One was a child born dead when the impact occurred.

This was not only murder, it was suicide!

SURGEON SAYS

Ready for School?

Maj. Anna A. Turek
ANC
Army Health Nurse
Martin Army Hospital

Few of us adults remember the experience of entering school for the first time. We have forgotten the thrill, and at the same time, the bewilderment that confronts a six-year-old child as he leaves the familiar, secure background of his home for new and unexpected adventures that await him.

A child who starts school for the first time will have many new experiences to master, and the way he interprets these new experiences will be one of the most potent factors which will influence his adjustment to the school and its environment.

Unless he knows why he has been placed in the school, he may misinterpret its meaning, which may result in anxieties and bring him new problems.

Of course, the meaning that the new experience has for a child will depend upon his past experiences in his home — being secure in his parents' love, and having learned to adapt himself to separation from home and parents, which will vary in different children.

Nevertheless, preparing the child for school and its many new experiences is very important for a sound and healthy adjustment. Also, preparation for new experiences supports the child's ego. If he is assured that separation is for legitimate reason, and not because he has been naughty or is unwanted, he will have less anxiety and more energy available for mastering his situation and staying healthy.

Preparing a child for school is preparing him not only to meet new experiences but also to meet life. How the child accepts the experiences in the new situation will affect his adjustment in school, his feeling about himself and even his relationship with his parents.

When he is informed that he is "going to school," it should be explained that it is not "forever" or "for all time" but for just a little while everyday, because he is ready to learn things which his mother and father know he will enjoy. He will meet new playmates; be will learn new games; be will learn to write his name.

In all discussion and explanation, be must not be "sent" to school, but be is "going" to school, otherwise he will think he is being sent away. This may cause him to resent going to school.

A child will need to know what is expected of him at school. Because the classroom has a less flexible and more rigid environment than the home, he must know that there will be periods that all children must sit still, (example, during a story period) and listen as quietly as possible.

He needs to know that the teacher will be like his mother and request that be do certain things at certain times. Also that he may talk to the teacher when be needs anything or wants help. He will need to know that the teacher will expect him to take care of his possessions, such as clothes, books, pencils, and his toilet needs. He needs to know what to do when school is over.

Build his eagerness for school by:

(a.) Visiting the school with him before the school opens. Tour the building and the grounds with him, and have him meet the principal, if possible, thus familiarizing him with the total school environment.

(b.) Introduce him to other children in your neighborhood, who will be going to school with him, so be won't

(See SURGEON, Page 14)

Right to Information

In all modern democracies, the right of citizens to receive full information regarding all actions of their government is incontestable. This right to information includes publication of the text of all laws, regulations and treaties. It prohibits secret treaties.

It includes access of the public to sessions of legislative debates. It also includes the obligation of the government to inform the citizens regarding mistakes in administration of any malfeasance of officers.

Democratic constitutions contain procedures compelling the governments to give full information regarding offical operations. Of course, the existence of an opposition party or parties, with full rights of criticism, is the fundamental means of enforcing publicity.

Even so, modern democracies also provide special means for all parties to compel any reluctant administration to divulge information.

The methods used to elicit information from the Executive include: (1) the demand by either house of Congress that the President or a Cabinet officer furnish information on a certain subject in writing; and members by committees of either house of Congress in congressional hearings.

Again, the President and the Cabinet members hold periodic press conferences in which they answer questions by newsmen.

In contrast to the citizens of modern democracies, the citizens of Communist regimes have no constitutional guarantees for obtaining information regarding governmental operations and no procedures to compel the dictatorship to disclose such information.

There are no opposition parties to condemn the government for its secretiveness. The press and radio are useless for this purpose. They are controlled by the Communist governments.

Delegates in the puppet legislatures have no power to force the dictatorship to reveal what the dictators which to hide. The delegates are handpicked by the Communist Party, and subservient to it.

The Communists in the U.S.S.R. even jam foreign broadcasts to cut citizens off from information coming from abroad that may be critical of the Soviet Government.

In other words, the Communist Party, as the "vanguard of the masses," considers itself the guardian of the minds of the proletariat, and will give only such information as it considers proper for the masses.

Of course, such a system lends itself to covering up all governmental mistakes and blunders, which in a parliament lead to the fall of the Cabinet.

CHAPLAIN'S CORNER

What's It Worth

By Chaplain (1st Lt.) Gerald E. Ristau

Little children make terrible bankers. They don't understand that different pieces of money have different values. They are influenced much more by the size of the coin, and by the glitter and the jingle, than they are by the value. They would much rather have ten pennies that gleam and rattle, that can be played with and shown off to the otber children, than have a $10 hill that lies quietly and dully in some place where it is safe.

It's normal for children to be like this. We expect it, and with our more mature understanding we are quietly amused at their childish "treasures". But we also expect, for ourselves and for others, that when we grow up we "put off children things". Yet how many people are there, mature in years and supposedly mature in understanding and judgment, who are still little children in the value they place upon things in life. Their time, their energies, their talents given to the glitter and the jingle of life, the things of real value lie forgotten and ignored, too pale and quiet to attract childish eyes.

"Receive my instruction, and not silver; and knowledge rather than choice gold. For wisdom is better than rubies; and all the things that may be desired are not to be compared with it." (Proverbs 8:10,11).

Popularity, wealth, prestige, earthly success, power — tinkling toys to play with, shiny possessions to show off. Beside them stand the wisdom of God's truth, tbe knowledge of salvation in Jesus Christ. No worldly glitter here — but value greater than all of earth's wealth, valu that endures through all of eternity. What is it worth to you?

The Judge Says . . .

Education can help a blank mind, almost nothing can help you if you sign a blank contract. Read on, and fill some possible blanks in your mind.

In order to avoid being misled, read and become familiar with all of the terms of any contract before you sign it, especially conditional sales, chattel mortgage, or other types of time payment contracts.

Under no circumstances should you sign a contract containing blanks that are not filled in. Be sure that you receive a copy of the signed contract at the time you sign it. Remember, no matter what the salesman says, in most contracts, if all the terms are not in writing on the contract before you sign it, they are not binding on the company.

If the salesman agrees to some term not in the contract, you are entitled to write it in yourself before you sign. Do not be taken in by his assertions that he will take care of everything if you sign on the dotted line. No legitimate salesman should have any objection to any of the foregoing.

If you have any doubts, do not sign the contract, since it is normally too late to cure defects once you sign.

In buying a car or other item of personal property on time, it is important to note two things. When you trade in a used car or appliance on a new one, be sure the holder of the mortgage is notified, or paid off. Most contracts prohibit the moving of purchased items outside the boundaries of the state, and sometimes the county, without the written permission of the vender or mortgagee.

Therefore, in preparing to move, it is advisable to have the written permission of the vendor or mortgagee to move the financed item out of the state or the country, even if the contract does not require that it be in writing.

You may obtain advice on the legal aspects of your present obligations or proposed contracts from the legal assistance office. Office of the Staff Judge Advocate.

FPCA Voting Card Is Out To Troops

Washington (AFPS) — A major campaign to provide eligible servicemen and women an easy route to the voting booth during the coming 1962 elections is underway here.

Instructions and regulations to commanders have already been revised by the separate services to make it easier for service personnel to cast their ballots.

For instance, Standard Post Card Form 76 will be distributed to all eligible personnel on an individual basis at overseas installations by Aug. 15. In the United States they will be delivered to the individual by Sept. 15.

It was explained that in the past service personnel have had to seek out their voting or personnel officer to obtain the card. In some cases this proved to be too much of a chore and was neglected by individuals.

Even so, 736,000 servicemen and women — about 40 per cent — voted during the 1960 presidential election out of the 1.8 million that were eligible.

Defense voting officials here are optimistic that the changed regulations will help bring a bigger percentage of service ballots in the 1962 elections. They also point out that the Form 76 voting card will be issued in this manner in all future general elections occurring at two-year intervals.

We exercise our control over our government by carrying out our right to vote in local, state and national elections.

There is still time to vote in this year's primaries in some States and, of course, plenty of time to become familiar with the issues involved and the candidates running in the November general elections.

Check with your Soldier Voting Officer today. He has been appointed to assist you to vote by State absentee ballot and to answer any questions you might have concerning your vote.

Primary elections still to be held are:

Alaska, August 14; Arizona, Sept. 11; Colorado, Sept. 11; Georgia, Sept. 12; Hawaii, Oct. 6; Kansas, Aug. 7; Massachusetts, Sept. 18; Minnesota, Sept. 11; Missouri, Aug. 7; Nevada, Sept. 4; New Hampshire, Sept. 11; New York, Sept. 6; Rhode Island, Sept. 11; Vermont, Sept. 11; Wyoming, Aug. 21.

Remember, the ballot in the desk drawer doesn't count.

15 Train as Army African Specialists

The Army has started to train fifteen officers as specialists in the African area in a program designed and conducted by The American University, Washington, D. C.

The African Area Studies are the latest addition to the Army's Foreign Area Specialist Training Program. Currently there are 362 Army officers who have completed similar studies in 15 other areas of world interest. Annually, between 40 and 80 officers enter this program.

Two Post Officers Enroll in Course

Two members of the Ground Mobility Department of the Infantry School will enroll in the school's Infantry officers career course Aug. 29.

They are Capt. Roxie R. Hart and Capt. Royce L. Porter.

1962 Matches

Army Blue took the Center Fire event with match with a record-busting 1176-57X effort and 1167-45X.

Army Western Gray capped the day with its twin victories in the .45-caliber and grand aggregate.

Firing members of the champion Western crew were SSgt. Leland Wessel, Sgt. Merriweather Jones, SFC A. J. Moore, SFC R. L. Cochran and Sgt. Irving Henry, who fired in the .22-caliber event only. MSgt. Claude Bennington was the successful team coach and Maj. William Kirkpatrick was team captain.

Capt. Clyde Metts, Capt. Cecil Wallis, SSgt. Robert Jones, and MSgt. Lloyd Burchett composed the winning Army Green entry. SSgt. Forest Smith was coach and Lt. Col. William S. Brophy was team captain. All are from MTU.

On the Army Blue squad were SFC Sam Hunter, SFC Blankenship, SFC Arthur Ogden and Sp4 Richard Stengel. MSgt Mack Salmon was coach and Col. Brophy was team captain.

The National Trophy Team match had as exciting a finish as did the race for the individual pistol crown.

Western had its 1129 posted on the MTU board and spotters had marked up the scores from all of the other major service entries and it appeared Western had won it easily with a six-point edge over the U.S. Marine Corps. Then CWO Oscar Weinmeister walked up and marked in U.S. Marine Corps Reserve, paused momentarily and slowly chalked up 112 — 8, and the entire Army team clustered closely around the board heaved a tremendous sigh.

Behind Blankenship and Hamilton in the grand aggregate came Sp4 Stoecker with 2626-113X and pushing him closely was SFC Alvin Moore with the same point total by 111X shots.

Of the 17 possible individual first places the Army pistol shooters captured 15 and won all of the five team matches which readily illustrates their complete domination of this year's events.

Individual Army match winners were:

.22-Caliber aggregate, SFC R. L. Cochran, 564-36X; Slow Fire, SFC Alvin J. Moore, 189-4X; Rapid Fire, SFC Sam Hunter, 200 - 12X; National Match Course, SFC R. L. Cochran, 298-14X.

Center Fire aggregate, Sp4 Robert Stoecker, 581-46x; Slow Fire, SFC William Hortoo, 196-8X; Time Fire, SFC John Lingle, 200-16X.

.45-Caliber aggregate, SFC William Blankenship, 575-41X; Time Fire, SFC Ralph O. Thompson, 200 - 14X; Rapid Fire, SFC William Blankenship, 199-13X; National Match Cover, Sgt. Emil Heugatter, 294-13X.

Grand aggregate, SFC William Blankenship, 2633-128X.

National Trophy Individual, SSgt James McNally, 294.

Troops to See 29 Collegiate Show Groups

New York (AFPS) — Beginning in September, the United Service Organizations will sponsor overseas tours by drama and music groups representing 29 U. S. colleges and universities.

A year-long travel schedule will take more than 400 students to the Pacific, the Caribbean, areas in the North Atlantic, Europe and the Mediterranean, Edwin E. Bond, USO's national executive director, announced.

They will bring troops at Army, Navy and Air Force bases a varied repertoire of musical comedies, variety shows, choral and instrumental programs, opera and dramatic plays. Where appropriate the collegiate entertainers will also give performances under State Department sponsorship for foreign nationals.

USO said that college officials are planning the students' itinerary so as to avoid loss of classroom time. None are expected to be absent from their campus for more than two months.

Pre-School Physicals Will Begin on Monday For Post Dependents

Physical examinations for military dependents attending off-post schools for the first time this fall will be conducted at the Physical Examination Section, Building 396 (Old Hospital Headquarters Building) beginning Monday.

Boys with last names beginning with A through G will be examined at 8 a.m., Monday; letters H through M at 10 a.m., Monday. Boys with last names beginning with N through S will be examined at 8 a.m., Aug. 27; letters T through Z at 10 a.m., Aug. 27.

Girls with last names beginning with letters A through G will be examined at 8 a.m., Tuesday; letters H through M at 10 a.m., Monday. Girls with last names beginning with N through S will be examined at 8 a.m., Aug. 28; letters T through Z at 10 a.m., Aug. 28.

Children are urged to report promptly at the designated hours. One parent must accompany a child under 10 years of age.

Off-post physical examination forms will be available at the Physical Examination Section and will be given to the child when the examination is completed.

It is imperative that immunization records accompany children when they report for their examination. Children found in need of additional immunizations will be given these at the Immunization Clinic following their examination.

Clinic To Close

Dependent's Immunization Clinic, Bldg. 396, will be closed during the morning hours only on Aug. 13, 14, 27 and 28, due to physical examinations being conducted for dependents attending off - post schools.

All physical defects and indicated recommendations for follow - up medical treatment will be recorded on the physical examination form at the time of the examination.

The examination will include a urine test. Each child should bring a urine specimen of approximately four ounces. The specimen should be collected in any type of clean glass bottle prior to leaving home, and the bottle should be labeled with the child's name.

INTO CIVIES . . . Sp4 Ellis Daniel tries on his "civvies" before leaving here. He is a member of the 391st Engineer Battalion, an Army Reserve unit from Greenville, S.C., which has been on active duty for 10 months. The 391st left here Tuesday for its home station.

Reservists, Guardsmen Finish Their Departure

National Guard and Army Reserve units training here since their call to active duty in October have completed their exodus.

First to leave here with the 105th Military Police Company, National Guard, of Utica, N.Y., and the 322nd Ordnance Company, Army Reserve, of Dover, N.J. Both companies traveled largely in carloads of privately owned vehicles, while a number of men left by plane from the Muscogee Airport.

Both units previously had shipped their equipment home by rail. Advance groups, which had departed earlier, unloaded the equipment for transportation to the units' training armories.

One member of the 105th passed around cigars to members of his unit as they were about to board buses bound for the airport.

Asked whether he had become a father, he replied, "Heck no, I'm not married. I'm just celebrating our departure." Then he added quickly, "But we liked Fort Benning and got in some good training here."

He was Sgt. George V. Wald of Utica.

Attending the departure of the 105th at the airport was Lt. Col. James E. Farmer, provost marshal of The Infantry Center. He thanked the military policemen for their cooperative spirit and outstanding job.

Also present at the flight takeoff was 1st Lt. Edward D. Lockwood, commander of the 105th MP Company, a Regular Army officer who did not accompany the unit to Utica.

Minutes after the 105th departed, the 322nd also left by plane.

The next units to leave the post were the 128th Medical Company of Fairhope, Ala.; 111th Signal Company of Greenville, S.C.; 114th Engineer Company of Washington, D.C.; and the 156th Signal Battalion of Detroit, National Guard units; the 489th Engineer Battalion of Pine Bluff, Ark., 389th and 981st Medical Detachments of Cleveland, Ohio, and Atlanta, Reserve units.

These seven units left on Sunday.

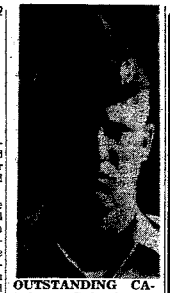
Col. Gorman Is New WAC Chief

Washington (AFPS) — Col. Emily C. Gorman has been appointed Director of the Women's Army Corps (WAC). She is the sixth to hold the position.



Serving as Deputy Director, WAC, from 1953 to 1957, Col. Gorman has held several other high ranking positions in the Corps. Her major assignments have included service as WAC Staff Adviser to the Army Surgeon General in 1944; Assistant to the Director, WAC, in 1947, planning organization of the WAC's training Center at Ft. Lee, Va.; and in 1951 as WAC Staff Adviser of Second Army, Ft. George G. Meade, Md.

Col. Gorman started her military career on July 30, 1942 as a member of the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps (WAAC). She attended Officer Candidate School at the 1st WAAC Training Center, Ft. Des Moines, Iowa, and received a commission as a third officer (second lieutenant).

Col. Gorman then went on to her first assignment, Chief of the Administrative School, 1st WAAC Training Center.

There she was responsible for the clerical and administrative training of enlisted women, preparing them for wartime duties in the United States and overseas.

Col. Gorman is holder of the National Defense Medal and the General Staff Identification Badge, the Army Commendation Medal, WAC Service Medal, European - African-Middle Eastern Campaign Medal, WWII Victory Medal and the Army of Occupation Medal.

OUTSTANDING CADET . . . Cadet George D. Jenkins, 20, a student at the University Florida, was selected as the outstanding cadet of the Reserve Officers Training Corps held here during the past six weeks. 20-Year Enlisted Woman Retires

WASHINGTON (ANS) — SFC (E-7) Mina A. Nelson, the first army enlisted woman to retire after 20 years of active duty, recently received congratulations from General of the Army Omar N. Bradley during a ceremony in her honor at the Pentagon.

It was fitting that General Bradley should take part in this ceremony for it was he who administered the oath to the first woman to enter the Women's Army Corps after it had become part of the regular Army.

Sergeant Nelson, of Seattle, Wash., entered the then Women's Army Auxiliary Corps in July, 1942, just two months after its establishment.

These 20 years have brought her a variety of assignments including service, during World War II, in North Africa and Europe. Her last assignment was with the U. S. Army Security Agency at Arlington Hall Station, Va.

Sergeant Nelson was awarded the Army Commendation Medal for meritorious service during retirement ceremonies at Arlington Hall Station. She then traveled to the Women's Army Corps Center at Fort McClellan, Ala., where she was the guest of the non-commissioned officers assigned there.

The first thing on her civilian agenda is a trip back to Seattle and a visit to the World's Fair.

Medics Are At Exercise Swift Strike

Headquarters and Headquarters Detachment, 428th Medical Battalion, left here Saturday by motor convoy to participate in exercise Swift Strike II which is currently being held in North and South Carolina.

The 428th, commanded by Lt Col. Raymond J. Caldbeck, will act as Headquarters for the 50th Medical Company and the 680th Medical Company, also of Fort Benning, which departed at earlier times for the exercise.

The mission of the battalion is to furnish aid stations and evacuation for members of the Red Forces. The battalion is expected to return to Fort Benning about Aug. 20 and resume its duties in post support and STRAC Readiness Training.

'Swift Strike' Begins; 'Total' War Conducted

SERGEANT'S COFFEE BREAK . . . Taking a moment off while participating in Exercise SWIFT STRIKE II in Sumter County, S. C., is Platoon Sergeant Richard B. Alford, Company D, 9th Infantry. Sgt. Alford, who last October was named 2nd Division Soldier - of - the - Year, wears the "aggressor" uniform worn by all 2nd Division Soldiers in this maneuver.

Exercise SWIFT STRIKE II began Monday with two full-fledged opposing forces of air and ground elements deploying into position along a wide-spread battlefront within the Carolinas.

During the next two weeks "Blue" forces and "Red" forces will wage massive, although mock, warfare against each other with every means available to the U. S. Strike Command troops. This will include regular Infantry and air warfare as well as airborne drops, guerrilla harassments and psychological warfare.

Important Role

Playing an important role in the "Red" force strategy are the men of the 2nd Division, the 82nd Airborne Division of Fort Bragg, N. C. and the 2nd Logistical Command of Fort Lee, Va.

According to General Paul D. Adams, commander in chief of U. S. Strike Command, (USSTRICOM), "This exercise is expected to prove extremely valuable to the units participating. They will use realistic tactics against an actual maneuver enemy. Maximum opportunities will be presented for unconventional type methods of warfare to be conducted by Army Special Forces, the Air Force's 1st Air Commando Group as well as by psychological warfare units."

Exercise SWIFT STRIKE II differs radically from past large-scale maneuvers in that both "Blue" and "Red" forces will make maximum use of free-play tactics and strategy. There will be no advance information furnished by either side and no timetable against which either of the air or ground forces can plan their attack or defense. Guerrilla warfare will play an active role in the over-all movement and activities on each side.

9th Inf. Sgt. Upped to E-8

9th Infantry PIO

The top promotion of the week in the 9th Infantry was given to First Sergeant Harry L. McBee of Company D. Sergeant McBee received his E-8 promotion recently when Colonel Clifford P. Hannum, commander of the 9th Infantry, presented him with a copy of his promotion orders.

Sergeant McBee has been a member of the 9th Infantry and Company D for four years and has been a "combat soldier" for more than 18 years. He was drafted in March 1944 at his hometown, Kansas City, Kansas. His first two years were spent in combat during World War II.

Having fought with the 78th Infantry Regiment in the Rhineland and Ardennes campaigns, Sergeant McBee was awarded the Purple Heart, Bronze Star and the Combat Infantry Badge. After the war he went to Berlin and studied Chemical Warfare tactics until February 1954. He had a brief tour at Fort Lewis, Washington, when the 2d Division was there.

In 1955 he was stationed at Fort Carson, Colorado, with the 31st Division and then went on Operation Gyroscope to Germany.

Div Command Post Housed In Helicopter

Exercise SWIFT STRIKE II gives the 2nd Infantry Division a chance to test a new concept in command posts.

Utilizing the expanding capabilities of Army aviation to support an infantry unit, the 2nd Division's commanding general is using an aerial command post completed recently by members of the 2nd Aviation Company.

Major General Charles H. Chase, division commanding general, now can step into his helicopter and fly out over the maneuver area maintaining contact with his staff. If called upon to leave his command post in the field while in conference, the general may continue his conference while in the air, with access to FM, VHA and UHF command radio nets.

The unit that makes all of this possible is a "command console," constructed by Capt. Michael J. Horan, rotary wing tactical commander for the 2nd Division's 2nd Aviation Company. It has been built to fit into any one of the four division HU-1B "Iroquois" helicopters being used in Exercise SWIFT STRIKE II.

S. Maj. Hodges Succeeds McCoy at 122nd Sig.

By 122nd Signal PIO

The 122nd Signal Battalion said farewell to Sergeant Major Richard J. McCoy and welcomed Sergeant Major Francis O. Hodges, recently promoted, to his new position.

Sergeant Major McCoy departed the Battalion for duty with the 304th Signal Battalion in Yongsan, Korea as Sergeant Major.

Prior to his coming to the battalion he was stationed at Fort Jay, N. Y.

His successor, Sergeant Major Francis O. Hodges, was formerly First Sergeant of the Forward Communications Company of the Battalion. He was promoted to his present rank in ceremonies held recently in the office of the division chief of staff.

Sp. 5 Higgins Wins Titles Of 23rd, Brigade SOM

By 23rd Inf PIO

Combat Support Company of the 23rd Infantry has again supplied the 23rd with its soldier of the month, Specialist Five Joseph E. Higgins.

Higgins was also named brigade soldier of the month after appearing before a board along with other Infantry soldiers of the month in the 2nd Division.

Second Time

This is the second time Higgins has been honored with the two awards, the first being in September 1961.

Higgins entered the Army in September 1960 and underwent basic training at Fort Dix, New Jersey. He then came to Fort Benning and the 23rd's Combat Support Company for advanced Infantry training, where he has remained until the present.

Presently, he holds the position of senior radar operator in the company. Last October he completed the Infantry Corps Radar School here.

Trees Fall At Benning From Storm

A story literally fell at the 2nd Division PIO's door this week.

A large shade tree planted in front of the PIO - Special Services — Inspector General building was uprooted during a brief-but-violent storm early Wednesday morning. Personnel assigned to the building were surprised to find the tree lying across the sidewalk when they reported to work.

Fortunately, the tree fell away from the building, and the only damage done was a few scratches on the large building identification sign in the front yard.

According to post engineers, several trees on the military reservation were reported blown down in the storm, but no damage occurred to buildings.

M.I. Detachment Commander Leaves

The commander of the Military Intelligence Detachment will be leaving soon.

Capt. Richard E. Evers has been assigned to Fort Holabird, Maryland. He will be succeeded by Capt. Vernon R. Jestice, who is chief of the security section at the detachment.

CAPTIVE BEING SEARCHED . . . A five-man "Blue" force patrol, attempting to cross a bridge in the "Red" force area in Sumter County, S.C., was captured Tuesday by men of the 9th Infantry. Here a member of the XVIII Airborne Corps patrol is searched by Sp4 Jack Cardell of the 2nd Military Police Detachment.

23rd Inf Sp-4 Gets Reserve Commission

By 23rd Inf PIO

An excited 23rd Infantry-specialist four-turned-lieutenant departed last week for home, civilian life and the Army Reserves.

It all began when Roy C. Delony of Headquarters Company and the communications platoon submitted an application last April for a Reserve commission as lieutenant.

Was A Draftee

The 25-year-old draftee, a graduate of Louisiana Polytechnix Institute with a bachelor of science degree in business, decided to apply for the Reserve commission which would go into effect after his two year stint of active duty had been completed.

Until his release, no official word had been received confirming or denying his application; so, dutifully, he reported to the Transfer Point last Friday and was processed from active duty status.

However, upon his return to Headquarters Company for a few last minute farewells before heading home to Vienna, La., Delony was informed to report to battle group headquarters. There, he was administered the oath of office and commissioned an officer by the battle group commander, Col. Lucien F. Keller, all within half an hour of his release from active duty as an enlisted man.

FREED SLAVES

Preliminary proclamation, issued on Sept. 22, 1862, by President Lincoln announced that on Jan. 1, 1863, all slaves would be declared free in territory then in rebellion.

Civilians Aid Army Stage 'Renloa' Plot

As the final details of Exercise SWIFT STRIKE II began to unfold, the city officials of Florence, South Carolina suddenly found themselves playing some unusual roles.

The men were asked by the Army to act as cabinet members of "Renloa," the title given one of the four "countries" slugging it out with invading forces during the exercise. This added touch of authenticity to the maneuver cast Mayor David H. McLeod as the president of "Renloa, City Manager Powell Black as prime minister and other key city employees and businessmen in roles comparable with their civilian duties.

At Counter-Guerrilla Exercise

Army Conduct in N.E. Ga. Praised By Blairsville Mayor, Newspaper

A letter praising the conduct of his troops while participating in maneuvers last month in northeast Georgia was received recently by Colonel Ralph H. Hughett, commander of the 87th Infantry.

The letter was from Mr. Obediah Pruitt, mayor of Blairsville, Georgia, and was accompanied by articles from the Blairsville newspaper which echoed the mayor's complimentary remarks.

One news article said, in part, "These were such well-behaved soldiers. . .that they made fine impressions on all of the people of this town and county. We are proud to say that there were no complaints filed against the U. S. Army. There was work done to roads and other work done by the soldiers that will be of help to the town and county."

Approximately 850 men of the 87th Infantry participated with a detachment of the 7th Special Forces Group of Fort Bragg, N. C. in counter-guerrilla warfare training for nine days in July in the Chattahoochee National Forest near Blairsville.

Members of the community also took part in the exercise, which was planned to involve guerrilla forces "exploiting and terrorizing" the local population. The 87th Infantry counter-guerrilla force was assigned to clear the area of this guerrilla band.

NAMED AFTER KING

Georgia was named for King George II of England by James E. Oglethorpe, a colonial administrator, in 1732.

He Marched 500 Miles With Merrill's Marauders

By 9th Infantry PIO

A former member of the 5307th Composite Unit (Provisional), better known as "Merrill's Marauders," is now serving with the 9th Infantry.

SFC John D. Motsenbocker, who served with "Merrill's Marauders" in Burma during World War II, came to the 2nd Division in September 1961 and was assigned to Company B, 9th Infantry.

In South East Asia

Joining the Army at the age of 19, Sgt. Motsenbocker's first assignment was with the South East Asia Allied Command's 5322nd Unit. Travelling on to Bombay, India and Colombo, Ceylon, he volunteered for duty with the 5307th Composite Unit.

This guerrilla group, composed of British and American Soldiers, was commanded by the then-Brig. Gen. Frank D. Merrill. Under his leadership the unit fought to secure Japanese-held Burma and Myitkyina.

Along with 500 others Sgt. Motsenbocker walked from Rangar, in Burma's Assam Province 500 miles through jungles and swamps to Myitkyina, where, with less than half the group still surviving, they surprised the Japanese and secured a railhead and supply point.

The sergeant spent two years with this unit, fighting in the Northern China Offensive and the India-Burma defensive. He left the unit upon its deactivation in August 1944.

Report From 'Swift Strike'

Secrecy, Insects, Heat Are Part of Field Duty

WITH THE 2nd DIVISION SOMEWHERE IN SOUTH CAROLINA: Military security, not poetic license, prohibits me from specifying more clearly our exact location. After all, those mean ol' "Blue" forces would dearly love to know where the 2nd Division is located. The 2nd Division, of course, is operating as part of the "Red" force.

We are bivouaced in a stand of pines with thick undergrowth girding it. Walking through the area one can see niche carved through this undergrowth with a tent set up in the midst of the clearing. A sign in front of the tent identifies it as the signal office or provost marshall office or one of the several sections here with the advance party.

Camouflaged Vehicles

By looking closely one can spot jeeps and trucks back in the brush, but one must look closely because they are well camouflaged.

Bordering one side of the bivouac area is a hard-packed white sand driveway. Visible from the campsite is a two-story southern mansion, complete with six white columns. I haven't seen any Kentucky Colonel - type people sipping mint juleps on the veranda yet, but I wouldn't be surprised to see such a scene at any time.

Thus far the exercise hasn't been without surprises. Last Friday morning, Lt. Col. Jack E. Compton, division G-1, was notified he had become a father for the second time. Mrs. Compton gave birth to a boy the night before.

Tuesday, Lt. Col. Harold K. Sharp, division quartermaster executive officer, was notified he was promoted to his present rank. The promotion occured Monday while he was enroute here from Fort Benning. The promotion ceremony took place in the field with Colonel James A. Thetford, chief of staff for the 2nd Logistical Command, Fort Lee, Va., pinning the silver leaves on Col. Sharp.

Discomforts

The usual discomforts of field duty are available, of course. A few mosquitoes, chiggers and redbugs abound as well as the inevitable root or stump that isn't discovered until midnight just as one gets set to roll over and get set for a deep sleep. One soldier put it well when he said, "Every time I throw one of those roots out from under my sleeping bag, it comes back and brings a buddy."

With temperatures in the 80s and 90s each day a shower is always in order and welcomed. The 2nd Division Quartermaster has a shower point set up nearby which draws water from an artesian well.

Just a stone's throw from this wooded campsite is a busy highway with cars scurrying up and down it all day long. Most of the car occupants are concerned with business of their own, and they little suspect that less than a hundred yards away, hidden by bushes and trees, men of the 2nd Division are quietly and efficiently going about the business of perfecting and polishing their skills in the deadly art of combat.

UN COMMANDER

On July 7, 1950, the UN asked President Truman to name a Commander in chief of UN Forces in Korea. He appointed Gen. MacArthur.

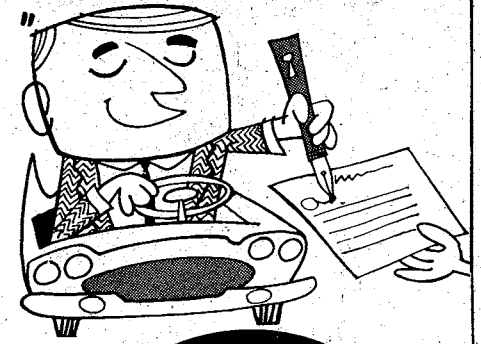
122nd Sgt's Are Assigned Other Duties

122nd Signal PIO

Sergeant First Class Bert Buzzart and Platoon Sergeant Julian Dixon assumed new duties in personnel actions in the 122nd Signal Battalion recently.

Sergeant Buzzart, formerly fifth platoon sergeant in the Forward Communications Company, moved to Headquarters as chief clerk in the Division Signal Office section.

As chief clerk, Sergeant Buzzart will assist in the preparation of the Division SOI, SSI, circuit diagrams and traffic diagrams.



Sergeant Buzzart resides with his wife, Ingeborg, at 38 Mason Drive, Columbus.

Sergeant Dixon has moved from the Forward Communications Company, where he was a platoon sergant, to Headquarters Company as first sergeant.

He is married and lives with his wife, Annie Lou, and four children at 1000 McGraw St., Fort Benning.

Distaff Profile

Army Life Offers More, Says Mrs. Bettye Kunzig

By Lucille Beard

A vitality, a stubborn determination to accomplish and a true joy of living emanate from Mrs. Louis A. Kunzig, Jr., wife of the 2nd Division chief of staff.

Mrs. Kunzig's parents, Mrs. Thomas J. Cassidy and the late Colonel Cassidy, impressed upon her that one must be an active, working member, not a passive, taking part of a society. The women of Ft. Benning know that she has done much to work for and with this community for its betterment. The employees of Tot Town Nursery signed a petition requesting that Mrs. Kunzig continue for a second year as president and chairman of the board of Tot Town, a project of Army Daughters.

Many Activities

Last year, Mrs. Kunzig, golfer, bowler, and ardent bridge player, served also as president of the Second Division Officers' Wives Club. As first lady of the 23rd Infantry, she gathered material for and had printed a cookbook with recipes coming from the other battle groups of the 23rd, which are located in Alaska and Texas.

Mrs. Kunzig was born in Nogales, Arizona, where her father was then stationed as a dental surgeon. She travelled extensively as a child, living in Hawaii and Panama, where she was graduated from high school. Mrs. Kunzig attended Brenau College, Gainesville, Georgia, and was a member of Alpha Chi Omega sorority.

When the then-Second Lieutenant Kunzig was assigned to the 29th Infantry Regiment, Ft. Benning, immediately after his graduation from West Point in 1939, he met and within a year, on September 18, 1940, married Elizabeth Cassidy. Mrs. Kunzig's parents lived at 213 Lumpkin Road, a block from the house in which Colonel and Mrs. Kunzig now live. In July, 1941, Louis A. Kunzig III, now a first classman at West Point, was born.

At the outbreak of World War II, Colonel Kunzig was sent to Ft. Gordon, Georgia. Mrs. Kunzig, already displaying her willingness to be a full - time Army wife, lived with her small son in one room in Augusta, Georgia. When Colonel Kunzig went to Europe with the 86th Division, Mrs. Kunzig went to Camp Fannin, Tyler, Texas, to "wait out" the war with her family.

To Europe

After the war, Mrs. Kunzig went to Europe to join Colonel Kunzig. Returning to Boston, Colonel Kunzig entered Harvard in September 1948, and on the day of his registration, son Tom was born. In June 1950, the Kunzig's only daughter, Jean, was born at West Point.

After three years of instructing at West Point, Colonel Kunzig was sent to Supreme Headquarters Allied Powers Europe, (SHAPE), in Paris, where the Kunzigs lived from 1952 to 1955. This was Mrs. Kunzig's favorite tour.

Both Colonel and Mrs. Kunzig speak German and French, and it is an experience to hear Mrs. Kunzig speak French with her children in order that they will not forget the language. Mrs. Kunzig feels that one should speak the language of the country in which one is stationed, and she is not afarid to tackle a new language. Colonel Kunzig has been known to say, "If she has to learn a new language to talk, she'll learn it. She's not going to be quiet!"

Again returning from Europe the Kunzigs lived in Washington, D.C., where Col. Kunzig was stationed and where Robert was born in 1957. Then came Army War College at Carlisle, Pa., and the inevitable hardship tour, with Col. Kunzig going to Korea and Mrs. Kunzig returning to her parents' home in Tyler, Texas. In September, 1960, Mrs. Kunzig met her husband in San Francisco in time for their twentieth wedding anniversary. The MG sports car she prizes was the colonel's anniversary gift to her.

Mrs. Kunzig feels very strongly about girls who come into the Army and don't realize the advantage of an Army life. "If only," she says, "they would stop worrying about the break with home and go into Army life with a spirit of adventure. Too many girls are missing the FUN they could have by being provincial and by not welcoming this chance to meet people from all over the world. Army children may have the disadvantage of being uprooted from their schools, but the advantage of seeing the U.S. and the whole world far overcomes the disadvantages. Army children are far more sophisticated and cosmopolitan than those who have not had their opportunities."

Fort Benning residents know the rest of her story. Bettye Kunzig is too vibrant a personality to go unnoticed!

Surgeon Says

feel he will be going alone.

(c.) Answer all his questions patiently, simply and truthfully.

(d.) Stress the pleasant aspect of school at all times. Avoid teasing about teacher and school.

Encourage independence by teaching him:

(a.) To take off and put on his outer garments without assistance, and to check his clothes by his name tape.

(b.) To distinguish between his things and those of others. It is important that all outer garments, including rubbers, gloves, hats, scarfs and lunch box, have his name on them for identification from other similar items.

(c.) To attend to his toilet needs without assitance or self-consciousness.

(d.) To know where to get the school bus or know the route he will travel going to and from school.

(e.) At home the child should be taught safety precautions in crossing streets and to protect himself from hazardous situations.

Build security for your child by:

(a.) Teaching him his-her name, address and telephone number. For the first week or two, pin a small name card on the blouse or dress for teacher's comfort to identify the child. He should know his father's name.

(b.) Dressing him in appropriate clothing.

(c.) Teaching your child safety rules to observe on way to and from school and behavior on the school bus.

(d.) Stressing the relationship between the home and school so as to reassure the child that if anything unusual happens, he will be taken care of.

The child also needs physical readiness for his new school experience. One of the fundamental factors for happiness and success in school is good health. Your school-age child is no baby, and you won't want to treat him as one.

Still, the same wholesome program of eating, sleeping, working and playing which built his health during pre-school years should be continued now. The child who is in optimal health will be able to make a better adjustment and have more resistance to the illnesses he will be exposed to.

It helps children to have their school schedules adjusted well in advance of the beginning of school so that they are accustomed to them. The establishment of desirable health habits is of vital importance to the life of a child. These are the things you can do to help insure good health for your child:

(a.) See that your child has at least ten (10) hours of sleep each night. Awaken him in the morning in plenty of time to dress leisurely. Give him adequate time to get to school.

(b.) Encourage him to start the day by eating a well - balanced breakfast. Many school emergencies are due to the lack of breakfast and staying up late the evening before, which results in late-rising the next morning because of fatigue. When the child must hurry, he may become frustrated eating breakfast quickly or not eating at all, and this may cause frequent emotional upsets. If he takes his lunch, see that it is adequate.

(c.) Teach him to go to the toilet regularly and to wash his hands after each visit and before eating.

(d.) Train him to bathe himself regularly.

(e.) Train him to brush his teeth after breakfast and before retiring.

(f.) Train him to keep fingers and objects out of his mouth.

(g.) Train him to use a handkerchief or tissue to cover coughs and sneezes.

(h.) Train him to pick up after himself and to be reasonably neat.

(i.) See that your child has his immunizations and booster "shots" early in the summer. No child should begin school with the handicap of malaise from recent immunizations or other corrective treatment. There should be no connection between fear of "needles" and the beginning of school for the prevention of emotional upset.

(j.) Send him to school in a happy frame of mind. It is important that your child be free from fear and worry.

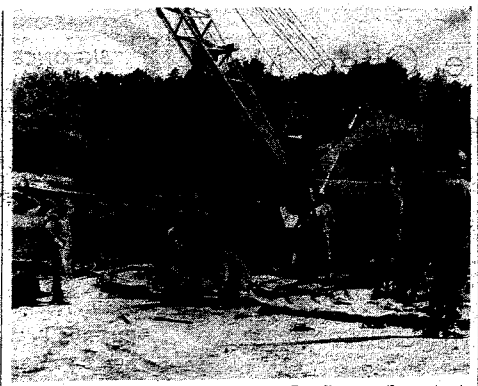
Inspect your child before he leaves for school each morning. Do not send him to school if he is ill. Keep him at home and consult a physician if he shows the following signs of illness:

(a.) A flushed face that may indicate a fever.

(b.) Sore throat.

(c.) Body skin rash that may indicate a childhood disease.

(d.) Headache.



(e.) Upset stomach or nausea.

(f.) Swollen glands.

It is important to answer children's questions, and to talk over other natural situations during the summer — what school is like, programs in school, etc.

Now that your child is going to be on his own at school, it is more important than ever that he feel secure and happy. When there are younger children still at home all day, it is especially important that the school child gets his fair share of affection when he comes home. He needs to know that his parents are interested in what he is doing in school. It is also important for him to feel that while his mother and father love him dearly, they realize that the school is always working in his best interest.

The reassuring sense that he is safe, loved and trusted, which a child gets primarily from his family, is one of the most important factors in his school progress.

2 Ordnance Bn Sgts Are Promoted to E-7

Promotions to sergeant first class E-7 recently went to Daniel L. Markham and Giles M. Thurman in ceremonies held in the 702nd Ordnance Battalion commander's office.

Sergeant Markham, a veteran of 17 years service, entered the Army in January 1944 at Fort Devens, Massachusetts, and saw service in the South Pacific during World War II.

Assigned as division ordnance sergeant with Headquarters and Company B, 102nd Ordnance Battalion, Sergeant Markham has a total of 126 months overseas service.

After having been presented his promotion orders by Lieutenat Colonel Woodrow H. Myers, the battalion commander of the 702nd Ordnance Battalion, Sergeant Markham recalled that once before he had been presented promotion orders by Colonel Myers. That event was in August 1949 and the new E-7 was then being promoted to corporal. That promotion took place in Bamberg, Germany, while Colonel Myers was company commander of the 701st Ordnance Maintenance Company, First Infantry Division.

Sergeant Thurman, the division ordnance reports control supervisor, is also assigned to Headquarters and Company B, 702nd Ordnance Battalion.

A native of Redwood, Virginia, Sergeant Thurman entered the Army in January 1943, and received basic training at Camp Tyson, Tennessee. Not destined to be a foot soldier, Sergeant Thurman volunteered for airborne training. After completing airborne school in September, 1943, the young paratrooper was assigned to the 506th Parachute Infantry Regiment of the 101st Airborne Division.

Remaining with that unit throughout the European campaign, Sergeant Thurman received the Bronze Arrowhead for jumping with his unit into the Saint Marie sector of France June 6, 1944. He again "combat jumped" in September 1944 when his unit landed in the Wilhelmena Canal area, Holland, and was at Bastogne, Belguim during the Battle of the Bulge. A veteran paratrooper with 63 jumps to his credit, Sergeant Thurman is also a veteran of the Korean Conflict.

Mental Outlook Aided 87th in Swim Meet

"Having the right mental outlook when approaching the block, reinforced with tough physical condition, were the prime reasons for the 87th's swimming success last week," says Captain John F. Collier, swimming coach for the 87th Infantry swimming team.

Captain Collier, who coached the team to its championship victory last week in the 2nd Division Swimming and Diving Meet, has had swimming is his primary sports interest for years.

Swam at 12

He learned to swim at the Boston Boys Club of Massachusetts when he was 12 years old. During high school he swam on the swimming team and spent his summers as water safety instructor at youth clubs and summer camps. In his junior year at Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Maine, he was voted captain of the varsity swimming squad, and there he learned the methods he used in training the 87th.

"We used dry land calisthenics, kick-boards, arm-pulls and repeated four-to-five hundred yard sprints," Captain Collier said. "This put the 87th team in top physical shape, but in the final analysis we won because we had the desire to win."

23rd's Co. C Wins Playoff From Co. D

By 23rd Inf PIO

In a three game play-off last week the 23rd Infantry's Charlie Company unleashed its "Cougars" against Delta Company to win the series for battle group softball champs by scores 8-4, 9-8, and 12-10.

Playoff

The season had ended with the Cougars of Charlie and the Devils of Delta tied at five wins one loss each, resulting in the playoff.

Contributing greatly to the Cougar's triumph was pitcher John R. Stanley, who pitched all three games and won two of them. Three homers, two in the second game and one in the last game, helped Moses L. Marshall and the Cougars earn their third victory over the Devils.

Devil pitcher for the series was Thomas Lee.

FRED MURPHY HEADS OVER THE WALL
Of Aucoin (77) And Everhart (73)

Former College Players To Head Doughboy Team

Fort Benning head football coach Leaton C. Cofield watched some 30 players turn out in full equipment Monday morning to begin their first rigorous workout.

The Doughboys, though still lacking depth at a couple of line positions, will still be a good ball club when they open the season here Sept. 8 against Georgia Military College, according to Coach Cofield.

Local football fans will be watching former Georgia Tech signal caller Marvin Tibbets direct the Doughboy attack.

"The cool, calm Georgian is one of the best quarterbacks I've ever coached," Coach Cofield said.

Also in the Doughboy backfield will be hard hitting Bobby Towns who played collegiate football at the University of Georgia and professional football with the St. Louis Cardinals of the National Football League.

223 Pound Average

Up front on the Doughboy line will be players who average 223 pounds. Leading the contingent is 245-pound workhorse lineman Joseph Wendryhoski. Wendryhoski was an All-Canadian League star with Vancouver last year after playing his collegiate ball at Illinois.

Another student is 190-pound Sam Stellatella who anchored the middle of the line at Penn State last year.

A pair of hefties beef up the center of the Doughboy line in 245-pound Wayne Everhart, a veteran of last year, and Lindell Lovelizzle of Illinois. Everhart was signed by the Baltimore Colts of the National Football League before being drafted. Lovelette, at 250, is also a standout performer.

Georgia has another standout on the squad in end Fred Murphy, star pass-catching end who played at Georgia Tech. The 210-pound Murphy will man one of the end positions while either 195-pound Dan House from Davidson or 215-pound John Trueman from Michigan State will hold down the other end spot.

Coach Cofield has plenty of talent in the backfield in such players as quarterback John Saylor, 185 pounder from Syracuse University, and 190-pound Wayne Jeter from Virginia State.

Running mate with Towns

at the halfback position will be Ron Quillen, 200-pound speedback from Tennessee State. Quillen played professional football last year with the Edmiston Eskimos of the Canadian Football League. The hard charging back was one of 33 rookies chosen to play in Canada last year.

Things are a little tighter at the fullback position where two players are fighting it out for the starting position. Presently Coach Cofield would have to go with powerful Wallace Johnson, a 215-pound blockbuster who played football at the University of Oklahoma.

All-American

Abdul Sutton, who weighs in at 195 pounds, is another fullback. Sutton was twice Little All - American from Kansas where he first won honors while playing for Garden City Junior College and then again for Ottawa State College.

This week marks the third week of practice and the first in which the Doughboys have dressed in full equipment. The first two weeks were spent in getting the team in physical condition.

Now Coach Cofield will have his squad out in full padding for two-a-day practice sessions. This will continue for two weeks after which they will go back into shorts and T-shirts for a week and then back into pads.

Readying Team

Doughboy Coaches Al Aucoin, Bobby Boyleston and David Lynn are assisting Coach Cofield in getting the team ready for the 1962 season.

The main concentration point is on kicking and offensive blocking. Not until the last couple weeks before the opening game will the team begin its workouts on defense.

The Doughboys appear to be considerably better off this year than they were at this stage of the game last year, according to Coach Cofield, who is beginning his second season as Doughboy coach.

This year the team will run into the always tough Marine teams, Quantico and Camp Lejeune.

In Interservice Play

Army to Field Strongest Team In Years Says Coach Sullivan

By Bill Gardner

Trials to pick an Army team to compete against the Navy and Air Force in the Interservice Tennis Tournament at the Main Officers Open Mess courts Aug. 14 to 18, are almost over, and part of the team has been chosen.

Eighteen players have been vying for positions on the six man Open Division team and seven for the three berths on the Senior's squad.

Coach Dan Sullivan, pro from St. Petersburg, who has coached the team several times in the past, including 1961, has been watching his charges play against each other in daily matches since July 12, and he definitely knows the top three on the Open team and the top two on the Seniors.

TOP MAN

Rated number one on the Open squad is Pvt. Ronald E. Holmberg and representing the First Army.

Holmberg's tennis credentials are as extensive as they are impressive. Currently ranked seventh nationally, he was a member 1957 Davis Cup team, and in 1959 was rated fourth nationally.

National titles he has won include the Boys' Doubles, Boys' Indoor Singles and Doubles, Junior Indoor Singles, Wimbledon Junior Singles and Intercollegiate Doubles, twice.

His latest victory was a 6-1, 7-9, 6-1 victory over another Army player, 2nd Lt. Norman Perry, in the recent Cavalier Beach Hotel Invitational Tournament at Virginia Beach, Va.

Teaming with still another participant in the trials, SP5 Leslie Dodson, he won the doubles title at the Virginia meet.

Second Spot

Fighting for the second spot are Perry and PFC Robert S. Bowditch Jr., both playing out of the Second Army.

Perry is ranked 14th nationally and is last year's Interservice singles champion.

Bowditch from Worchester, Mass., is a former New England champion and in 1961 was rated number one in that area.

One of these men will occupy the second position, the other will be in third.

The remaining three berths present somewhat of a problem for the coach. There are five players battling for these slots and the struggle will probably continue down to the wire.

Maintaining an inside track at present are Dodson from the Sixth Army and Pvt. Roger McCormick from Army Europe.

Back Lajury

McCormick hurt his back recently and hasn't been playing as well as he did earlier in the trials. He still is a formidable competitor.

The other three contenders still in the running are PFC Luis C. Dominguez from the First Army, PFC Herman D. Carillo from the Fifth Army and 1st Lt. John R. Newman, Army Europe.

Senior Action

In the Senior's Division, it's MSgt. Bill Millikan from the First Army and Sgt. Ray Antignat from Army Pacific all the way.

Millikan has claimed the Interservice Senior singles title four out of the last five years and has been half of the winning doubles team five out of the last five.

His partner in the last two victories was Antignat.

Still in there struggling for a possible third slot are Lt. Col. Lavere Strom, Fourth Army, and MSgt. Martin E. Jones, Sixth Army.

Coach Sullivan feels with this aggregate of talent the Army should sweep the tournament without too much trouble, labeling the team as probably the best the Army has ever had.

History of Competition

It is a competition for two trophies, the Leech Cup and the Riseley Bowl.

The Leech Cup was donated by A. Y. Leech Jr., one-time treasurer of the U. S. Lawn Tennis Association and a close associate of the donor of the Davis Cup, Dwight Davis.

Since its donation, in 1924, either two, three or four services have battled for it continuously, except for breaks during war years.

Originally only the Army and Navy competed. After the creation of the Air Force, they joined in 1948.

In 1955, the Marine Corps entered for the first time.

Through the years, the cup has been won by the Navy 10 times, Army eight, Air Force twice and Marine Corps twice.

This year, as in 1961, the Marines will not send a team.

Last year the meet was held at the U. S. Naval Station, Newport, R. I. Four singles and three double matches were played with the Army winning, downing the Air Force 4-3 and the Navy 5-2.

This Leech Cup competition will be a round robin affair, with each service playing the other. The winner will be decided on which team wins the

Grid Battle Free To Servicemen

MIAMI, Fla. — Miami is preparing to greet thousands of members of the military from all parts of the United States and overseas Oct. 14-20 during this city's third annual "Salute to Servicemen Week."

Highlight of the week-long festival will be the football game Oct. 19 between the University of Miami and the Maryland Terrapins in the world famous Orange Bowl.

All servicemen in uniform will be admitted free to the Friday evening grid battle.

MOTH-BALL FLEET

The USS Wisconsin, the last United States battleship, joined the moth-ball fleet at Bayonne, N. J., on March 9, 1958.

Three Benning Golfers Selected For Army Trials

On the basis of outstanding play in the recent Third Army Golf Tournament, three Fort Benning linksmen have been selected to participate in the Army golf eliminations and training camp at Fort Meade, Md., next Monday through Friday.

Making the trip are Lt. Col. George G. Hardgrove, 2nd Lt. Joe Hamby and 2nd Lt. Bill Martindale.

They will compete against representatives from Army areas throughout the world. Those selected will play in the Interservice championships at Westover Field, Mass. Aug. 27 to 31.

TSB Grabs Third Straight Baseball Title

The Student Brigade won the Infantry Center Major Unit Baseball crown for the third time in three years, all under the guidance of manager and coach Bob Kinard.

The TSB Tigers copped the first-half of play with a 16-2, record and dropped only two games in the second half to post a season record of 32-4.

The 29th Infantry of the 1st Infantry Brigade, coached by Dave Lynn, handed the Tigers two defeats early in the first-half action. The 156th Signal Battalion and 10th Artillery Redlegs was accounted for the other two setbacks.

The Tigers set a post and league record by winning 19 consecutive games only to be stopped by the 29th Infantry. The Two-Niners ended the season with a 24-12 slate.

Now the Infantry Center Athletic Department officials, team managers and coaches are busy putting a All-Star team together to represent Fort Benning in the Third U. S. Army championships play-offs which will be held at Redstone Arsenal, Ala., Aug. 27-31.

16 Teams To Compete In Play-Offs

At least 16 teams and possibly 32 will compete in the post fast-pitch softball play-offs Aug. 27 for the right to represent Fort Benning in the Third Army tournament at Fort McPherson, Ga.

No date has been set for the Third Army tournament because of the indefinite length of time required to complete the post play-offs.

The local play-offs will begin at 9 a.m., running all day with the last game beginning at 9 p.m. It will be a round-robin tournament with a double elimination.

Company C, 1st Battalion, The Infantry Center Troop Command heads the teams scheduled to participate. During the regular season, it compiled a 17-1 record.

Umpires for the post tournament will be drawn from the Fort Benning Umpire Association.

most matches overall.

Tuesday and Wednesday will be devoted to Leech play. The first match is scheduled for 10 a.m. Tuesday after opening ceremonies at 9 a.m.

A banquet will be held in the Custer Terrace Officers Club at 7 p.m., at which time the cup will be awarded to the winners.

Riseley Bowl

The Riseley Bowl is awarded to the Open singles winner. Donated in 1945 by A. H. Riseley, then chairman, Executive Committee, All-England Lawn Tennis Club of Wimbledon, it was to be awarded to the winner of open singles competition among members of the U. S. Armed Forces in Europe.

Since 1955, wbe it first became part of the Interservice, a representative from the Army has won it three times, Air Force twice and Marines once.

Last year it went to Perry.

Some past winners include name tennis stars, such as Barry McKay, Whitney Reed, Jack Douglas and Bill Quillian.

Riseley Bowl play will start on Thursday and continues through Saturday.

After the first day matches will begin at 9 a.m. and continues until late that afternoon.

Special bleachers will be set up on the courts for spectators. Caution should be taken to obey directional signs and not walk on the courts.

Admission is free. The public is invited.

MOOM's Remodeling Completed

For the past month Company B, 806th Engineer Battalion (Construction), has been working on improvements to the basement of the Supper Club for the Main Officer's Open Mess.

Included in the scope of work was the installation of numerous floor drains constructed of cast iron pipe. Installing these drains called upon a skill which is seldom utilized or available in a unit of this type; that is, the sealing of the pipe joints by the use of molten lead.

At no time during the course of this job was the use of heavy equipment possible. The considerable earth work necessary to lower the floor level four inches, and the pouring of 126 cubic yards of concrete to finish the job required the use of men with wheelbarrows.

It is anticipated that the newly finished basement will be used in the future for an entertainers lounge, a cold storage area, and the package store.

Large Crowd Witnesses Hunt Club's 'Gymkhana'

One of the largest crowds to witness a horse show here turned out Sunday to watch members of the post's Junior Hunt Club compete for first place ribbons in a gymkhana, a game and contest event.

Hunt Club officials estimated the gathering to be between 150 and 200 people.

Included among the spectators were Maj. Gen. Ben Harrell, commanding general of The Infantry Center and commandant of The Infantry School, and Mrs. Harrell, Brig. Gen. Royal Reynolds Jr., assistant commandant of The Infantry School, and Mrs. Reynolds, and Mrs. J. L. Bradley, widow of the late Maj. Gen. Bradley.

Twelve events were held and included such antics as the familiar musical chairs, a race where contestants had to eat a doughnut suspended from a string, on horseback and without the use of hands, and another timed event in which contestants had to balance a ball on a spoon until crossing the finish line.

Winners included Jenny Hall, hunt and jump event; Donna Davis and Ted Franklin, needle and thread race; Wayne Robinson, potato race; Vicki Reaves, slow horse race; Nancy Guernsey and Bobbie Leonard, the Greta Greene; Greg Franklin, spoon and ball race; Sandy Leonard, balloon popping contest; Paul Voorhees, doughnut race; Sandy Leonard, bucket bobbing race; Randy and Wayne Robinson, rescue race, and Donna Davis, musical chairs.

Mrs. Harrell presented ribbons to the winners.

Judges were Mrs. Ruth King and Sgt. (ret.) John Hill of Claymore Plantations, and Max Spurlin, athletic director for the post's Youth Activities Club.

New Army Agency Now Operational

The Office of Support Services, a new Army special staff agency charged with operation of the National Cemetery system and supervision of Army food service, became operational recently.

The Office of Support Services will administer and maintain 65 National Cemeteries under Army jurisdiction.

WOMEN ATHLETES . . . First Lt. Alyce Sims (L), pitcher for the WAC softball team, and Sp4 Enid LaPage, shortstop, study the records of the Fort Benning-Fort McClellan WAC softball game played at Fort McClellan recently. The Fort Benning WACs won the contest, 13-3.

Today's Sportrait

Today's Sportrait spotlights SFC Billy L. Ross, Company B, 1st Battalion, Infantry Center Troop Command, from Austin, Texas.

He entered the Army in August 1943 and served in the European Theater of Operations during World War II.

Ross was awarded the Purple Heart and the Combat Infantry Badge during the Korean conflict.

Sgt. Ross played baseball, softball, volleyball and football while attending high school. Recently, he became interested in officiating Army sports activities.

He holds an officiating card for baseball, football, basketball, tennis, softball and volleyball. He has selected baseball, softball and volleyball as his favorite sports.

Sgt. Ross has been a member of the International Federation of Amateur Softball Association (IFASA) since 1948. He has officiated softball championship playoffs in Europe during the 1953-54, and 55 seasons, Georgia Region and District Championship 1959-60-61. He also umpired in the Texas Championship Playoffs.

Sgt. Ross attended the Bill Summer's Umpire School in 1957, and George Barr's School in 1958.

Since his assignment to The Infantry Center Athletic Department as athletic operation sergeant, he has conducted volleyball and softball clinics among Third Army and The Infantry Center personnel. The clinics familiarize officials, managers and coaches with the rules and changes each year.

Sgt. Ross says that his experience in officiating competitive sports has taught him a lot about the necessity of good officiating, and the desire to display good sportsmanship.

Ross strongly recommends that others learn the rules and regulations in the sport of his or her choice in order to make it a clean and fair game in which to participate.

Army to Study Thunderstorm Cloud Patterns

An attempt by the Department of Defense to analyze the life history of thunderstorms by causing small temporary cloud changes has started in central Arizona.

Project BATON, a Department of Defense research project supported by the Advanced Research Project Agency, has been established to study atmospheric processes and modification. As a part of this program, the Department of Army and its contractor, Meteorology Research, Inc., of Pasadena, Calif., are jointly conducting experiments in the central Arizona area. The scientific team is led jointly by Dr. Helmut Weickmann of the Army and Dr. Paul McCready of Meteorology Research, Inc.

TV's 'The Gallant Men' To Have Familiar Ring

HOLLYWOOD—Warner Bros. has put before the television cameras a new series for fall showing which will touch the heart of anyone who has ever watched a boy march off to war.

It's "The Gallant Men," story of an American combat unit in Italy during World War II, which will be seen on the ABC-TV network in fall.

Although it has plenty of action, the series does not deal in flashy heroics. Although it has a large cast, it does not employ tremendous armies. Although it has all the vivid sweep of war, it is not a tableau of martial splendor. It is, instead, the story of the ordinary foot soldier, always tired and dirty, afraid at times but always fighting, the counterpart of a million infantrymen who saw the war from behind a rifle.

It is war in microcosm, a sharp encounter between patrols, a ruined village, love in the eyes of a partisan for the woman who fights beside him, the face of an orphaned and homeless boy.

The man who tries to explain it is Conley Wright, a war correspondent, portrayed by Robert McQueeney, who fought the same kind of war half a world away in New Guinea. William Reynolds, who was a sergeant during the Korean war, plays Capt. Benedict, the company commander. Richard X. Slattery is Sgt. McKenna, the Regular Army man who goes by the book.

Robert Ridgely plays Lt. Frank Corbin, who sometimes lets his concern for his men override Army regulations. Roland LaStarza, who once fought Rocky Marciano for the world's heavyweight title and is now an actor, portrays Pvt. Lucavich, big, brave and sentimental. Eddie Fontaine, night club and recording singer playing a straight dramatic role, is Pfc. D'Angelo, card-sharp, hustler and hero.

Teenagers Lend Assistance at Martin Army Hospital

Sixteen teenagers qualified as "Volunteen" Gray Ladies and a Gray Man in capping ceremonies recently at Martin Army Hospital.

Taking the course with the 15 girls and one boy was a Senior Gray Lady, Mrs. George R. Kobaly. The course for teen-age Gray Ladies and Men is the same one taken by adults.

The young people were the first teenagers to take the course here.

The girls were capped and both the girls and the boy and pinned in ceremonies in the American Red Cross Recreation Hall at the hospital.

Col. Milton G. Schneider, adjutant general of The Infantry Center, guest speaker, told the graduates that service to God, country and mankind are overlapping.

Others participating in the ceremony included Col. William A. Todd Jr., hospital commander, who welcomed the guests, and Chaplain (Lt. Col.) James B. Blunk, hospital chaplain, who gave the invocation and pronounced the benediction.

Certificates were presented by Mrs. A. Edward Smith, chairman of education relations, Muscogee County Chapter, American Red Cross.

Volunteen Gray Ladies included Priscilla Beasley, daughter of Mrs. Lois Beasley; Susan French, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John B. French Jr.; Sandra Holmes, daughter of Sgt. (Ret.) and Mrs. Floyd O. Holmes; Jo Ann McVey, daughter of Mrs. James E. Lofton; and Judy Ross, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James T. Ross.

Diane Culverhouse, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Robert Culverhouse; Audrey Hammerich, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Hammerich; Geraldine Ibach, daughter of M-Sgt. and Mrs. Joseph H. Ibach; and Sharon Kloeb, daughter of Lt. Col. and Mrs. William C. Kloeb.

Judith A. Landess, daughter of Mrs. Willis E. Carlsen; Dianne Davis, daughter of Mrs. Mary W. Davis; and Mary Ellen Plowman, daughter of SFC and Mrs. Lorenzo Plowman.

Emily Short, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Walter D. Short; Margarita Torres, daughter of SFC and Mrs. Martinez A. Torres; and Leslie Tritsch, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Arthur A. Tritsch Jr.

Wayne Buff, son of MSgt. and Volunteen Gray Man was Mrs. C. C. Buff.

586th Engineers Aid Local River Project

The 586th Engineer Company (Float Bridge), 151st Engineer Group, has been credited with invaluable assistance in a project to remove pilings from the Chattahoochee River.

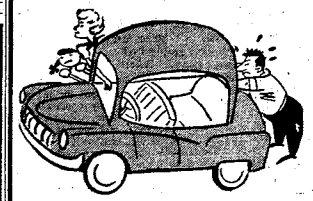
The most efficient method to remove the pilings was determine on the basis of tests performed in July in conjunction with personnel of the Mobile Engineer District, Army Engineers, by the local unit.

O. L. Adams, operations division chief in the Mobile officer, said that the excellent work performed by the members of the unit enable the Corps of Engineers to formulate plans to remove the piling in the most expeditious and economical manner.

More than 50 years ago the Corps of Engineers installed contraction works consisting of rows of timber piling in the river for a considerable distance below Columbus in order to assure sufficient depth for steamers to reach the river port even in low-water periods.

When the new lake is filled behind the big Walter F. George Dam now nearing completion near Fort Gaines, Ga., the piling in the lower part of the lake will be covered more than 10 feet deep, but the river ends of the jetties in the upper end of the reservoir below Columbus if left in place would obstruct necessary dredging operations and present a hazard to traffic when the channel is opened to navigation.

The Engineers plan to remove all piling in the 12-mile stretch of the river immediately below Columbus for a distance of 25 feet back from each side of the navigation channel. The piling near the river banks will be left in place to continue to stabilize the channel.



The approximately 3,000 timber piles to be removed will be pulled by a crane mounted on a barge. The job will be started next week and will take about three months.

The Corps of Engineers is currently constructing a barge channel in the Apalachicola and Chattahoochee Rivers from Apalachicola, Fla., to Columbus and Phenix City as a part of a comprehensive development of the Apalachicola, Chattahoochee and Flint Rivers for navigation, flood control, power production, stream flow regulation, and other beneficial uses.

The Walter F. George Lock and Dam, which will provide a nine-foot depth in the Chattahoochee River from Fort Gaines to Columbus and Phenix City, is one of four dams in the overall development. It is scheduled for completion next year.

Officers Take New Posts At Airborne

Lt. Col. John J. Lissner has been named deputy director of The Infantry School's Airborne-Air Mobility Department, and Lt. Col. Victor K. Harwood, chief of the department's Operations Section.

Col. Lissner succeeds Lt. Col. Louis A. Williams who is to take the Army primary fixed-wing course at the Army Aviation School, Fort Rucker, Ala.

Before coming to the department, Col. Lissner was training officer for Headquarters Support Operations Task Force, Europe.

A highly decorated combat soldier who saw action in World War II and the Korean conflict, he holds the Silver Star, Bronze Star Medal with Oak Leaf Cluster, Purple Heart with Cluster and the Croix de Guerre avec Etoille d'Argent (with Silver Star). He also holds a Master Parachutist Badge with combat star.

His wife, the former Patricia Greenan of Chicago, served in the Army Nurse Corps from 1942 to 1954.

They have three children, John M., James P., and Mary Ann.

Col. Harwood assumes command of a newly organized section in the department, resulting from the consolidation of the Air Mobility Committee and the old Operations Section.

He has been with the department since January, 1959, serving as chairman of the Test and Evaluation Sub-Committee, operations officer and chairman of the Advanced Airborne Committee.

He is married to the former Martha Bodak of Hoosick Falls, N. Y. They have five children, Victor K., Alan R., Mark, Donna and Gary M.

Command To Number 190,000

Washington (AFPS) — Maj. Gen. Frank S. Besson Jr., commander of the Army's Materiel Command which became operational Aug. 1, said his widespread command will number approximately 20,000 military members and 170,000 civilian employees.

The new command, a part of the Army's reorganization setup, has most of the responsibilities previously held by the Army's seven technical services.

It began operations with a $23.5 billion inventory and its estimated annual expenditures will be $7.5 billion.

Dental Health Series

Dental Decay Is Our Most Usual Disease

By Maj. Charles W. Dobson
Preventive Dentistry Officer

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The following is the 11th in a series of articles presented in the interest of better dental health.

Dental decay is the most common disease known to man. It is even more common than the everyday cold. It attacks all age groups, but it is most prevalent in children and young adults.

In order to combat dental decay or dental caries, as it is more commonly called, we first need to know what it is and what causes it.

Your mouth contains more bacteria, or germs, than any other part of your body. In fact it contains more bacteria than can be artificially grown on any culture media known. These bacteria live in the mouth in groups or colonies. If the mouth is not properly and frequently cleaned, they form on the teeth in what we call bacterial plaques. Certain of these bacteria act on sugars and break them down into acids. These acids then dissolve the tooth structure and produce a cavity.

Enamel Coating

The crown portions of a tooth are covered with a hard outer surface called enamel. Dental caries progresses slowly through this substance, but once it reaches the softer underlying material, the dentine, it progresses much more rapidly.

Not only does decay penetrate deeper into the dentine, but it spreads out under the enamel and often results in a tooth with nothing but an enamel shell around a mass of caries. Thus, one of the important uses of x-rays is to discover teeth with this condition.

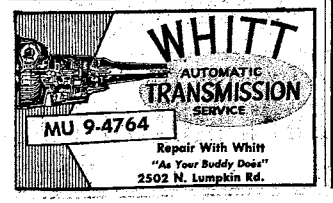
If dental caries is allowed to progress unchecked, it finally reaches the pulp chamber of the tooth. This is the area in the center of the tooth which contains the nerves and blood vessels. When this occurs the tooth dies and the disease process spreads to the tissue at the end of the root.

We are all familiar with the pain and swelling associated with an abscessed tooth, but what many people don't know is that a tooth may be abscessed and never cause any pain or other signs that infection is present. These painless diseased teeth may allow bacteria to enter the blood stream to the rest of the body and result in disease apparently unrelated to the teeth. Here again, the importance of x-rays is seen because they can show up these undiscovered diseased teeth.

There are several methods we can use in combating dental caries. At this point one obvious method is frequent visits to the dentist with periodic x-ray checks.

Artillery Batteries Honored

Excelling in the Honor Battery Competition Program of the 2nd Howitzer Battalion, 10th Artillery, 1st Infantry Brigade to receive top honors for the month of July were Batteries A and B.



Capt. Richard L. Bryan, Battery A commander, accepted the Best Mess plaque from Lt. Col. Wallis E. McClain, 10th Artillery commander, during an awards presentation ceremony. Receiving the Best Motors and Honor Battery plaques was Capt. Jack H. Percival, Battery B commander.

In the same ceremony Sgt. Maj. Otho O. Valent, 1st Infantry Brigade sergeant major, presented 1st Sgt. Lorenzo Colon, Battery B, a Certificate of Appreciation from the Columbus-Phenix City-Fort Benning Chapter of the Association of the United States Army.

The citation reads, "For outstanding support of the Association and Chapter manifested by his interest and enthusiasm in presenting the aims and objectives of the organization to others."

It further states, "His service has been of inestimable value to the Chapter and is worthy of this official recognition", signed Ernest W. Higgins, president.

First Post Newspaper Provides Interesting Reading

By SFC David Chase

The U. S. Army Infantry Museum has added to its growing library eight volumes of The Fort Benning News which appears to be the earliest news weekly publication on the post.

The first issue came out Sept 8, 1922, and without doubt, few old timers could thumb through its 16 pages without having a few pangs of nostalgia.

The first issue reflects the rising morale of the commissioned officer at the news of a revised bill being introduced in Congress, which would authorize retention of 1,249 line officers as opposed to a previous bill which proposed shaving commissioned officer strength to 824. In this crisis, 985 junior captains were "sweating out" demotion as recommended in the provisions of the Anthony Bill.

News of post events and activities resemble those taking place at Fort Benning today with a few minor exceptions. On Sunday afternoons the big event was polo. The games were played on French Polo Field, which is still used for sports events and training activities. Boxing, football and baseball were popular sports then as now and units would frequently turn out en masse to cheer their players on.

An amusing article proposing a "Knocker's Column" of the "letter to the editor" type appears on page nine of the first edition. The editor commented, "Judging from the unrecorded gems of this nature now being lost in the summer air, the proposed column should be popular. . ."

A "Cat Column" was also considered, but, according to the reporter who wrote the item, "the editor lost his nerve. Being a pacifist and seeing possibilities in such a column contrary to the principles of pacifism, the suggestion had to be rejected."

On March 17, 1923, The News ran a real "morale buster." The 67th Congress had closed without voting on a bill to increase the number of non-commissioned officers in the service. This was due to two factors — general apathy on the part of anti-militarists with short range vision and the old bugaboo — no funds.

The result was catastrophe for 3,566 NCO's in the Army. Each was reduced one grade. Those affected were 334 master sergeants, 561 technical sergeants (SFC's to those not in the "old-timer" category), 423 staff sergeants, 492 sergeants and 1,327 corporals. You can imagine how this hurt when you stop to think how long it took to make a stripe in those ancient days — a corporal made in two hitches was a miracle!

In the edition of The News with a Sept 10, 1926, dateline, we see a little item headed "Many Benningites Become Eligible for General Staff. Seven officers are listed among the eligibles, among these a young major named Dwight D. Eisenhower.

The last issue of The Infantry School News seems to date to March 5, 1951. The termination of this interesting and newsy publication was due to a Congressional ruling that "No appropriation for the pay of the Army shall be available for the pay of any officer or enlisted man on the active list of the Army who is engaged in any manner with any publication which is or may be issued by or for any branch or organization of the Army or military association in which officers or enlisted men have membership and which carries paid advertising of firms doing business with the government . . ."

NOTICE!

A DEAL WHERE NEARLY 3,000 OF YOUR NEIGHBORS HAVE BOUGHT SINCE JAN. 1, 1962!

Now Offer ROTC Flight Training

GOVERNORS ISLAND, N.Y. (ANS)—The extra - curricular flight program offered this fall by the Army Reserve Officer Training Corps in 15 Northeastern colleges and universities will be twice as interesting as goldfish-eating, and infinitely more valuable to the college student about to graduate.

The colleges and universities in the First U. S. Army Area authorized participation in the program for the academic year of 1962-63 are:

Cornell University; Rutgers —The State University; Seton Hall University; Syracuse University; Boston University; Northeastern University; Norwich University; the Universities of Connecticut; Maine; New Hampshire; Vermont; Massachusetts, and Rhode Island Middlebury College; and Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute.

The training is part of the nation-wide, pre-Army aviation program established in 1956 and now given at 57 schools of higher learning throughout the country. The course, an activity of the U. S. Continental Army Command at Fort Monroe, Va., lasts approximately nine months and is offered without additional costs, to senior year ROTC cadets who meet prescribed academic, health and military requirements.

Upon graduation from college and commissioning in the Army Reserve, as a second lieutenant, the successful ROTC flying student embarks upon three years of active duty which includes a 40 - week course in primary Army flight training.

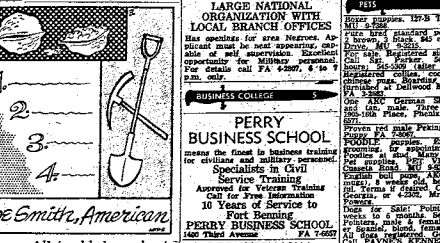
New Look Is Sported By Museum

The U. S. Infantry Museum is boasting a "new look."

The former library room has been renovated and is now a trophy and memento room, according to SFC Homes Pritchard, noncommissioned officer in charge of the museum.

The projected concept will include colorful curios and interesting objects presented by many of the foreign students who have attended The Infantry School in recent years.

These include tapestries, plaques, cups and art works from several European, Middle Eastern and Oriental nations. This display is supplemented by similar mementoes from visiting service groups such as the Air Force Academy, U. S. Military Academy.



A new central floor case is being developed and will contain interesting documents and material relating to the early days of the post.

Recently acquired donations to the museum collections include a Japanese Nambu automatic rifle of the World War II period, donated by Lt. Col. Louis J. Maricle, The Infantry Center Troop Command; and a Japanese sword and ancient pike donated by Col. W. M. Wilson, and a round of ammunition for a Japanese "knee" mortar, donated by MSgt. (Ret.) Robert J. McDonald.

Thus far, 175 persons have joined the U.S. Infantry Museum Society and the prospect of many more new members appears good, officials report. The membership drive was launched July 16.

LONG FLIGHT

An Army H-21 helicopter landed in Washington, D. C., Aug. 24, 1956, after first nonstop transcontinental helicopter flight — 2,610 miles in 37 hours.

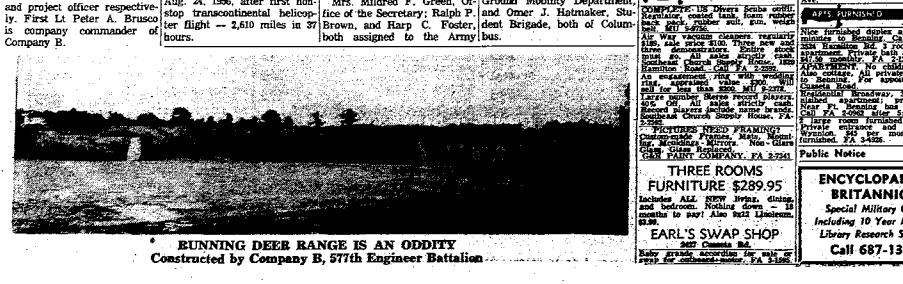
Running Deer Range Now Open to Fire

Company B of the 577th Engineer Battalion has just completed work on Fort Benning's newest and most unusual firing range.



Built by the Engineers for the Marksmanship Training Unit, Running Deer Range, represents the only one of its type in the United States. The novel feature of the range is a life-size deer that crosses a 23-meter opening in four seconds while being fired at from a distance of 100 meters. Other ranges of this type are located in Norway, Sweden, Germany and Russia.

Located on Dixie Road between the Fort Benning Pistol and Rifle Club and Easley Range, Running Deer Range was built to the exacting specifications required in this type of international competition. The main construction on this project consisted of erecting two nine-inch reinforced concrete walls, three berms, a 128-foot runway and a firing house.

Approximately 61 cubic yards of concrete, 2580 cubic yards of dirt fill and 27000 pounds of reinforcing steel were used in the construction of the range.

Work on Running Deer Range began on July 5, 1962 and the range was completed and turned over to Match Headquarters on Monday, eight days ahead of the scheduled target date.

Sgt. Fetterman and 2nd Lt. Clarence D. Blaine were NCOIC and project officer respectively. First Lt Peter A. Brusco is company commander of Company B.

Outstanding Job Ratings Are Awarded

Outstanding job ratings were given to four Infantry School personnel and nine others were recognized for submitting suggestions in the Army Suggestion Program at Fort Benning recently.

Brig. Gen. Royal Reynolds Jr., assistant commandant of The Infantry School, made the presentations.

Receiving the outstanding ratings were Mrs. Ruth O. Andrae, clerk-typist with the Department of Non-Resident Instruction; Mrs. Fay J. Rayburn, clerk-typist with the Ground Mobility Department; Charles J. Brettelle, chief of the Lithographic Section, Army Field Printing Plant, and Mrs. Shellie P. Hardy, Student Brigade.

In the suggestion category seven personnel were awarded 315 for proposals and two others received letters of appreciation.

Those receiving money included Mrs. Mary I. Gandy, Mrs. Gladys G. Adcock, and Richard S. Land, all employees of the Student Brigade, and John Kissell, Department of Non-Resident Instruction.

Mrs. Mildred F. Green, Office of the Secretary; Ralph P. Brown, and Harp C. Foster, both assigned to the Army

Moon Guidebook Being Prepared

Huntsville, Ala. (AFPS) — The National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Marshall Space Flight Center has contracted for the preparation of something new in the way of travel guides — a guidebook to the moon.

The Martin Company's Space Systems Division will compile for NASA a lunar handbook and an earth orbital operational manual which will serve as reference books for space scientists and engineers. The two volumes will collect all current information on such facets of space travel as trajectories, forces acting on an orbiting object, times, speeds, space environment, rendezvous, and heating during re-entry.

Dr. Ewart to Speak To Post TOPS Club

Dr. Ewart, a cardiologist at Martin Army Hospital, will address the newly-formed TOPS chapter concerning cardiovascular diseases of the overweight on Monday.

The local chapter, known as the Tops-e-Curvies, meets each Monday at 7:30 p.m. in the conference room on the second floor of Martin Army Hospital.

Field Printing Plant.

Letters of appreciation went to MSgt. Leonard F. Shaw, Ground Mobility Department, and Omer J. Hatmaker, Student Brigade, both of Columbus.

Army Wins Over All Competition During Interservice Rifle Matches

QUANTICO, Va.—The Army reconfirmed its history of having superior riflemen by moving onto this Marine Corps Base and sweeping aside all opposition in the Interservice Rifle Championships.

When the smoke of firing had cleared the soldier shooters departed for the National High Power Rifle Matches at Camp Perry, Ohio, taking with them eight individual first place trophies and both the six and ten-man team events as well as the Marine Corps Infantry Trophy.

Only two matches, both involving the match rifle, escaped the Army experts, but only by a matter of V-ring (the smaller circle within the bullseye used to break ties) shots.

On their way to a smashing victory the Army riflemen set five new marks and tied a pair of others for the title of Interservice Rifle Champions.

Sp6 Earl Waterman, Troop C, 2nd Recon Squad, 7th Cavalry, U.S. Army Europe, won the individual Interservice

Announced Later

The date for registration at the county high schools will be announced in the local papers.

Officials request that students from Fort Benning entering county high schools for the first time visit the school of their choice some time before Aug. 24 and preregister. The Fort Benning approval slip is not required for pre-registration.

All seventh and eighth grade pupils will register at and attend Faith School.

Children from kindergarten through grade six will be registered by grade and housing area. The school designated for registration of these grades does not necessarily mean that a child will attend that school.

Students in grades six and above may register for themselves. Below the sixth grade, parents will register for the students. It is not necessary for children to accompany parents for registration.

Transportation will not be furnished for registration but will be available on the opening day of school, Sept. 4. Tentative bus schedules will be distributed at registration.

A child must attain the age of five years on or before Jan. 1, 1963, to enter kindergarten, and six years to enter the first grade. Birth certificates are required to register a child for either kindergarten or first gride.

Immunization records must be presented at registration. Requirements are: smallpox vaccination, DPT (diptheria, whooping cough and tetanus) completed and booster, if indicated, and polio series begun.

Children in grades one through six living in the enlisted Capehart area will register at Loyd School on Santa Fe Road near Victory Highway.

Grades one through five from Custer Terrace, Battle Park, Upatoi and officer Capehart areas will register at Wilbur School on Custer Road near the Wherry Housing area.

Children from kindergarten through the fourth grade living in Harmony Church or on the Main Post north of Baltzell and Wold Avenues, children in

Capt. Pool Is Smallbore Rifle Champ

By SSgt. Lee LaCombe

CAMP PERRY, Ohio — It took a re-count to do it but Capt. Tommy G. Pool of the Marksmanship Training Unit again won the National Smallbore Rifle Position Championship here last week.

Capt. Pool and Army 1st Lt. Presley Kendall were knotted in first place at the end of the individual matches with a score of 1558 points out of a possible 1600. In addition each had accumulated 84 x-ring shots,

Approximately 150 of America's top military marksmen will meet here Aug. 27 through Sept. 7 to vie for top honors in the Second Annual Armed Forces International Shooting Competition.

Twenty-nine individual and team championships will be decided during the competition to be hosted by The Infantry Center. The program is sponsored by the U.S. Continental Army Command and sanctioned by the chiefs of staff of the respective Armed Forces and the National Rifle Association.

The competition will be on world championship and Olympic levels.

The program will see five ranges used by the crack competitors, who comprise the greater part of America's hopes in future world shoots, said Match Headquarters officials who will direct the competition.

Meet Challenge

Maj. Fremont R. Burdick, officer-in-charge of the Marksmanship Training Unit's International Team, said, "In answer to the Soviet challenge flung about 1955, America decided that her marksmen and armorers could and would meet the challenge if the opportunity was provided."

"A U.S. team with but little preparation went to Moscow in 1958 and succeeded in snatching several world championships and gold medals from under Soviet noses," he continued.

"Since that time, the U.S. Army Marksmanship Training Unit at Fort Benning has had the military program to provide skilled competitors, and Army marksmen have won the majority of team slots," he stated.

Last year's competition, the first of its kind, saw the Army cop 20 of 23 firsts."

Rough Competition

This year Maj. Burdick predicts rough competition from all services teamwise and individually from Marine Corps Capt. William B. McMillan, world and Olympic rapid fire pistol champion.

Air Force Capts. Franklin C. Green and Thomas D. Smith are also strong possibilities in the rapid fire pistol matches. U.S. Navy Torpedoman First Class Gaspar M. Defino will be rough in the 50-meter pistol competition, he added.

This International-type competition is the third of a three-phase Interservice competition, the x-ring being a smaller circle within the bulls-eye used to break ties.

Early results released by the Statistical Office awarded the championship to Lt. Kendall and Capt. Pool asked for a recount.

Statistical personnel went back to their tabulating machines and using National Rifle Association tie-breaking procedures reversed their earlier pronouncement and awarded the championship to Capt. Pool. He was the defending champion.

In the team event Army "Blue" won the Four Position Metallic Sight Match with a four-man score of 1592-97X. Firing members were 1st Lt. Robert Trew, 2nd Lt. Lones Wigger Jr., Capt. Pool and Capt. Daniel Puckel.

The CONARC Army Reserve squad took the Prone Any Sight team event with a record-breaking score of 1599-125X, eight x-shots better than the old mark.

A civilian foursome from Illinois won the last team match, Prone, Metallic Sight, with a score of 1592-97X.

Registration

grades one through four from Benning Park and kindergarten from the enlisted Capehart area will register at Faith School at the corner of Baltzell and Lumpkin Road.

Pupils from kindergarten through the fourth grade living on Main Post south of Baltzell and Wold Avenues, kindergarten children from Custer Terrace, Benning Park, Battle Park, Upatoi and officer Capehart areas and special classes from all housing areas will register at Edward A. White School on First Division Road.

Pupils in grades five and six residing on Main Post, Benning Park and Harmony Church, and students in grade six from Custer Terrace, Battle Park, Upatoi and officer Capehart areas, as well as all students in grades seven and eight, will register at Faith School.

Gilbert

signed to the Marksmanship Training Unit.

Gilbert astounded the 500 competitors in the matches by smashing 250 birds with the 12-gauge over a three-day period and then outfiesting five others in a shoulder-to-shoulder shootoff with five of the world's best shots.

Gilbert, who has been shooting in competition for only 11 months, was perhaps the least known of his five teammates who entered the world skeet championships.

Suddenly he found himself catapulted to the edge of greatness.

Four of his five competitors fell by the wayside at the end of the first four rounds of the shootoff, fired strings of 25 birds.

Only Gilbert and Howard Confer of Detroit remained and as the crowd watched breathlessly the two men each shattered 25 more birds, then 25 more and yet another 25 without a miss.

In the eighth field Confer missed a pair while Gilbert methodically shattered all 25 for a match total of 450 straight birds.

"I'm tired but boy am I happy," Gilbert said immediately afterwards, and then, seemingly unaware of the stir he had created in shooting circles, calmly sought out a hot dog and an orangeade.

Others making the trip to the world meet from MTU were Maj. Robert Gaches, Maj. Henry Park, 1st Lt. James Clark, 1st Lt. Gordon Horner and MSgt. Henry Shaw.

Matches

Match Headquarters officials said.

The Air Force hosted the first phase, the service pistol competition, at Lackland Air Force Base, Tex., and the Marine Corps the second, the service rifle, at Quantico, Va.

The Infantry Center's complete complex of International-type ranges brought the Army the third phase, match officials stated.

Major world shoots toward which military marksmen are working are the Cairo meet in 1962, and the 1963 Pan-American Games in Brazil and the 1964 Olympic Games in Tokyo.

Events programed for the coming Fort Benning meet include International trapshooting, 300-meter and 50-meter rifle, 50-yards pistol, 25-yards pistol and Running Deer matches.

This International-type firing is conducted over courses of fire and ranges especially designed by the International Shooting Union for world shoots.

Weapons, ammunition and other shooting gear must comply with rigid ISU regulations. Targets used are designed to demand the utmost precision from the weapon-ammunition-competitor combination.

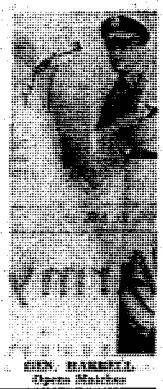
Visitors

and Maj. Javier Palacios R., secretary.

Monday morning will be devoted to orientations on the history and organization of The Infantry Center, the organization and mission of The Infantry School, and a briefing by the school's Operations Office.

After lunch in the Supper Club Annex to the Main Officers' Open Mess, the Latin American officers will visit the post weapons pool, be briefed on Infantry organization and tactics, and observe a tank gunnery problem.

Two departments and a satellite unit will conduct tours and briefings for their Allied counterparts Tuesday morning.



These include the Third Army Training Aids Center, Instructor Training Section and the Department of Non-Resident Instruction.

Students accompanying the director and faculty members include Maj. Cristiano Becker D., and Capts. Augusto Reijer R., Rigoberto Rubio R., Alfredo Behren P., Renato Cantuarias G., Hernan Brantes M., Jorge Cruz B., Dante Iturriaga M., Juan Manual Contreras S., Juan Alejandro Barrientos V. and Pablo Iturriaga M.

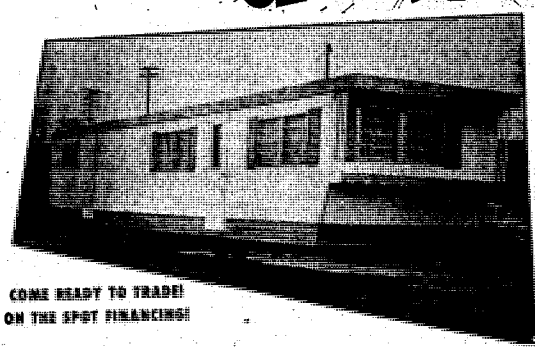
EPO Receives Plaque for Suggestion Work

The Editorial and Pictorial Office, USAIS, was recently presented a plaque in appreciation for outstanding participation in the Department of the Army Suggestion Program.

The plaque, signed and presented by Brig. Gen. Royal Reynolds Jr., assistant commandant, is blue and white, with an engraved brass plate containing the award citation and recipient's name.

The citation reads as follows: "For outstanding, effective, and timely participation, resulting in both tangible and intangible benefits to the U.S. Army, EDITORIAL and PICTORIAL OFFICE is presented the USAIS DA Suggestion Program Annual Award for the fiscal year ending 30 June 1962."



This award is presented annually to the USAIS activity which has most effectively contributed to the Department of the Army Suggestion Program during the fiscal year.

During FY 1962, personnel of the Editorial and Pictorial Office, including Visual Aids Section and the Army Field Printing Plant, received five cash awards totaling $75 and six letters of commendation or appreciation for adopted suggestions. A total savings of $3,784.90 was realized by adoption of suggestions submitted by these personnel.

Although not award winners, the Department of Nonresident Instruction and The Student Brigade deserve special mention for their participation in the program. In overall competition for the annual award, these two activities placed second and third, respectively.

Continuous emphasis is placed upon the DA Suggestion Program within USAIS.

Korean Police Duty Is a Man-Sized Job

The little card bore the blue and white emblem of the United Nations. I'm Not a Soldier, it read, I'm a U. N. Policeman.

Many veterans of the Korean War must remember that card well. It was printed and circulated by some well-wisher with a sense of humor who thought the troops would get a kick out of it. They did.

But this is a good time to ask, What's wrong with being a U. N. policeman? A good time because the U. N. Command in South Korea has just marked its 12th anniversary.

There are no guns barking in the Land of the Morning Calm today — thanks to the men who from 1950 to 1953 taught the Communists that the United Nations was more than a debating society. But the Free World can also say thanks to the "policemen" who now stand guard against any second invasion by the North Korean or Chinese Reds. These men — some of them sons of the men who fought the war — have a man-sized job as keepers of peace.

Crack combat units such as the U. S. 1st Cavalry and 7th Infantry Divisions give the U. N. Force a powerful punch. The Republic of Korea's own armed forces have become, through U. N. training, among the strongest in Asia. Anyone who has played a part in forging this instrument can tell himself that the job was worth the effort. (AFPS)

Liberty and Communism

What Is Propaganda?

Propaganda is persuasion. More particularly, it is the technique of influencing the attitude of large numbers of people by the use of symbols such as words, pictures and even music. In modern days, the channels of propaganda are the media of mass communication—newspapers, books, pamphlets, moving pictures, radio and television.

In the United States, during WWI, the term propaganda came to have a derogatory meaning as false persuasion. In many countries, however, this prejudice against the term does not exist. In Spanish-speaking lands, propaganda means advertising.

From a scientific aspect, propaganda is an objective word with no moral implications. It simply means the attempt to persuade large number of people to adopt an attitude favorable, or unfavorable, toward a person or persons, or a country or countries, or a policy or program.

Propaganda is bad and dishonest if it conceals or falsifies the facts, or if it attempts to persuade persons to take an altitude harmful to themselves and to others.

Hitler's famous, or rather infamous, radio address on Sept. 1, 1939, the day he invaded Poland, is an example of dishonest propaganda. He concealed many facts and defended a highly immoral act.

On the other hand, propaganda is honest if it urges attitudes that are not harmful to the recipients of the persuasion. The Fourteen Points proposed by President Woodrow Wilson in January 1918, during WWI, are an example of honest propaganda.

The morality which prevails in all modern democracies strongly condemns false propaganda as well as any government attempt to conceal the facts from the people, or in any way to distort the facts.

To sum up, every speech by a President or a Prime Minister that attempts to persuade large numbers of people to think in a certain way is propaganda. Every pamphlet issued by a pressure group as well as most editorials in newspapers are propaganda.

A large part of Communist propaganda is false. Indeed, Communist morality, in contrast to democratic morality, justifies the use of deception in mass communication.

While democratic morality condemns the use of falsehood by governments and by individuals, Communist morality condones the use of false propaganda as well as terrorism and murder if used on behalf of the masses in the class struggle.

Since the "vanguard of the masses" is the Communist Party, this Party is the custodian of Communist morals. If false propaganda is in the interest of the "class struggle," such deceit is morally right, in their eyes.

SURGEON SAYS

Know Inside Story

BY Maj. George J. Schonholtz
Assistant Chief,
Orthopaedic Service, MAH

A definition of Orthopaedic Surgery is probably indicated at the outset. Orthopaedic surgery is that branch of medicine which deals with diseases and injury of the musculoskeletal system.

This includes muscles and nerves, ligaments, bones and joints. The word "orthopaedic" actually is Greek for "straight child," because most early orthopaedic surgeons were primarily concerned with childhood deformities.

The scope of the specialty has widely expanded into other spheres from these early roots. The orthopaedic surgeon is a physician with four or more years of specialized training after internship. This specialty should not be confused with chiropractic or osteopathy. The specialist in these are not medical doctors.

The orthopaedic staff at Martin Army Hospital deals with musculoskeletal injuries ranging from sprains to dislocations of joints, fractures and hand injuries and a wide variety of other miscellaneous injuries. Automobile accidents and fractures of children, especially during the summer months, add to the scope of injuries seen.

Children account for a large percentage of patients treated by the military and civilian orthopaedic surgeons alike. Some of their difficulties are present at birth such as clubfeet and dislocated hips and certain types of cerebral palsy. Other deformities are acquired such as the residual deformities of poliomyelitis, which mercifully are on the wane since the introduction of the Salk vaccine.

Thanks to improved methods of diagnosis and the antibiotics, another previously serious childhood disease, osteomyelitis, is seen less and now has a better outlook when it does develop.

Our age groups from the early teens to the late 20's are usually seen by the orthopaedic surgeon in relation to accidents involving the musculoskeletal system. This age group is quite mobile, starting first with sports, followed by automobile travel and for the young men, finally military training. A relatively high rate of injury, then in this group, is not unexpected.

The middle and older age population rely on the orthopaedist for treatment of low back difficulties, including ruptured discs, bunions, bursitis, arthritis, generalized bone softening and complications arising from these.

Still another large responsibility of the orthopaedic surgeon is the amputee. The care of these patients who may range from very young to very old requires many skills, including the actual amputation, supervision of rehabilitation and fitting and use of an artificial limb.

CHAPLAIN'S CORNER

Just Four Here?

By Chaplain (Capt.) John S. Stannard

While teaching a character guidance class on the subject of honesty, I quoted Shakespeare — "to be honest, as this world goes, is to be one man picked out of 10,000."

As the class continued a man in the back of the room raised his hand and said, "Well, if that's the case, there are only four honest men on this post." We all chuckled, but what about it — are there only four?

For a man to be honest, first, he must be honest with God. God knows his thoughts, desires, reasonings, and actions. To try to fool God who knows all about him is only to kid himself. Honesty, therefore, must start with God. But is he honest with God?

At the time of salvation when the question of eternal life was considered, promises were given, decisions made, plans to serve the Lord determined. Then, time went by. Have his promises been kept and plans for the Lord developed? Has he been honest with God like he said he would?

Then, there were those tough spots in life when he promised God to serve Him if only he could get out of those situations. In the war, it was the foxhole; in peace, it was the physical, financial, mental and moral problems. But where are those promises now? Is he really honest with God, willing to stand and keep his word? To be honest he would have to.

In marriage, that occasion when sacred vows were given before God and men, he promised "to have and to hold from this day forward, for better for worse, for richer for poorer, in sickness and in health, to love and to cherish, till death do us part, according to God's holy ordinance; and thereto I plight thee my troth."

But now disagreements have arisen; trouble has come at home. Will he keep his vows no matter what the cost? Is he really honest with God?

When one becomes honest with God, who knows all about him, he will be, then, an honest man, and everyone he meets will know it. Tell me, how many honest men are there at Fort Benning? Are there really only four?

The Judge Says . . .

Personal credit is defined as that credit which a person possesses as an individual, and which is founded on the opinion entertained of his character and business standing. A good credit rating is one of your most valuable assets and not as intangible as it may sometimes appear. It is of considerable importance when you are released or retired from the military service and desire to purchase a home or start a business.

GI loans are not automatic. A number of applications have been refused in cases when the credit rating of the applicant was poor.

A good credit rating is also an excellent recommendation when you seek to secure responsible civilian employment.

A poor credit rating is normally regarded as an indication of poor judgment and inability to manage business and personal affairs.

To maintain the good reputation which military personnel have for prompt payment of financial obligations, and your own good credit rating, it is important that you make payments on cars, TV sets, refrigerators, deep freezers, and other items when they come due.

In the event you are not able to meet the obligation as agreed, contact the creditor in an effort to obtain written permission to pay at a later date. The most satisfactory way to handle such an extension is through the mails, which gives each party a written record of the transaction and prevents misunderstanding.

You may obtain advice on the legal aspects of your present obligations or proposed contracts from the Legal Assistance officer, Office of the Staff Judge Advocate.

Scout Dogs Give Early Detection Of Quiet Enemy

BY PVT. LARRY MORGAN

The 26th Infantry Platoon (Scout Dog) of the 1st Battle Group, 9th Infantry, has the unique distinction of being the only unit of its kind in the Army.

Organized in 1942, its beginnings were through Dogs for Defense, Inc., a non-profit agency which sought dogs for military use by means of public donation. The use of dogs in war, although not a phenomenon, was new to the Army at that time, and due to the success of the program the dog was retained as an integral part of intelligence and security operations.

Dogs have been used in the past by Frederick the Great, Napoleon, and the armies of Greece and Rome. They have performed in rescue work, mine detection, trailing, and as sentries, sled teams, ammunition carriers, message carriers, and as battle dogs in the attack element of ancient armies. One of the newest roles, that of scout dog, is the concern of the 26th Infantry Platoon.

The scout dog is used primarily for reconnaissance and patroling, activities which employ the dogs' acute senses of smell and hearing to fullest advantage in order to detect the presence of the enemy and give an early, silent alert to handler and patrol. Such abilities, although inherent in the dogs, require discipline through training for actual, effective utilization.

The dogs are procured from Lackland Air Force Base, Tex., at a cost ranging from $1.00 to $150. They come to the 6th untrained, having had only a health examination and what basic obedience was taught them by previous owners. Upon arrival here they are given another health examination, assigned a handler and proceed into the 13-week training period necessary to make them scout dogs.

The first week is an adjustment period in which the dog and handler become familiar with ooe another, learn each other's traits and characteristics, and form a meeting of personalities the result of which is a rapport of fondness and obedience.

Such is not always the case, however, and some dog-handler relationships are not so smoothly harmonious, so Lt. Richard Earle, commander, is always on the lookout for signs of special attachment between any man and any dog. Affection in this case makes for efficiency in the day-to-day routine of training.

The remaining weeks are spent on basic obedience, off-leash obedience, daily runs over the unit's obstacle course, conditioning, and exercises in scouting and patrolling.

The mission of the platoon encompasses support of the Infantry School, Ranger training, and Special Forces, on problems, special testing and demonstrations. The platoon has recently been involved in phases of the Army's new counter - insurgency training program, and has been working with the Pioneering Research Division, Department of the Army, on a field test of a special scent training program.

The extraordinary characteristics of the dog, the acuteness of his senses, his affection for man, his watchfulness, speed and aggressiveness, have made him a valuable asset to the soldier. And the advantages of his use are the reasons underlying the existence of the 26th Infantry Platoon.

Prekindergarten School To Open on September 4

The Prekindergarten of Fort Benning will opeen Sept. 4 in a new location.

Previously housed in two frame, barracks - type, temporary buildings, the school for three and four-year-old military dependents has been moved to Bldg. 322, adjacent to the Old Hospital.

Registrations will be conducted at the school from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Aug. 24.

A three-story brick and stucco permanent structure has been renovated to accommodate the prekindergarten.

Improvements include a covered walkway from the street to the school, a five-foot high guard around each porch, and a chain link fence to enclose the playground.

The fence was donated by the Woman's Club of Fort Benning, sponsor of the Prekindergarten.

Chairman of the Prekindergarten School board is Mrs. Geoge Hudson.

Principal is Mrs. Jack H. Murray Jr. Mrs. Ray Crowley is assistant principal.

Returning Faculty

Former members of the faculty returning to the Prekindergarten staff include Mrs. James Roberts and Mrs. John Hicks, who have taught at the Kindergarten three years each; Mrs. Gregory Brickhouse, two and one-half years, and Mrs. Walter Brooks, two years.

Mrs. Edwin Thompson, one and one-half years; Mrs. John Stannard, one year, and Mrs. J. E. Echols, one-half year.

Mrs. Stannard taught seven years and Mrs. Roberts, three years before joining the Prekindergarten faculty.

New teachers are Mrs. T. R. Watkins and Mrs. R. L. Runkle. Mrs. Watkins has had two years experience in prekindergarten teaching and Mrs. Runkle, seven.

The school nurse is Mrs. G. H. Grisard who served four years as an Army nurse.

The school will be conducted Monday though Friday from 8:50 to 11:30 a.m.

For further information, telephone Mrs. Murray at LI 5-4628.

ROA Dinner Set Tonight At MOOM

The Columbus - Fort Benning Chapter 38 of the Reserve Officers' Association will hold a dinner meeting and dance tonight in the Corregidor Room of the Main Officers' Open Mess.

The meeting and dinner will precede dancing in the Supper Club. Refreshments will be served on the East Porch at 7 p.m. Dress is informal.

Members, their wives and guests, military and civilian members from other ROA chapters, and personnel eligible for membership are invited.

Mrs. W. Wilson Honored Guest At Card Party

Mrs. W. M. Wilson, wife of Lt. Col. W. M. Wilson, commander of the 806th Engineer Battalion, was guest of honor at a farewell luncheon given by the battalion officer's wives at a local restaurant recently.

Bridge and canasta were played following the buffet luncheon and the card theme was carried into the decorations in the form of No-Trump Towers, which were used as table centerpieces.

Mrs. Mahlon E. Gates won high honors for bridge and Mrs. Edgar C. Peddie for canasta.

Mrs. Kenneth R. Dimond headed the committee which planned the farewell, and she was assisted by Mrs. Albert Conti and Mrs. David L. Rivard.

Jan Rose's Women's Club Diary

Although the weather would not indicate it, summer is almost over. At least the lazy days at the pool are nearly finished for another season, and school starts in less than three weeks.

If you have tots three or four years old, you will be interested in the full and varied program of the Pre-Kindergarten School. Group skills, social living, and music and art are part of the schedule which makes this school one of the finest in the country.

Mrs. Jack Murray, principal, will be happy to discuss the program with you. Call her now at 545-4628 in order to assure a place for your child when the term starts Sept. 4.

The school will also hold a special registration day on Aug. 24 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the new school, Building 322, behind the old hospital.

Plenty of bargains these days at The Thrift Shop, just across from the Infantry Museum. If you are new on post, or haven't visited the facilities recently, you will be delighted with the changes, including the addition of the new building (all air-conditioned of course). The Thrift Shop is open each Tuesday and Thursday from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. and whether you are a "buyer" or "seller", you will enjoy a browse. Never know when you will find something you have wanted for years.

Ceramics workshop continues to start new classes for beginners. For more information, call Mrs. McKee, chairman, at 545-3546.

NCO Club's Distaff Doings

By Marie Fowler

Green and gold were the colors used in decorating the tables for the NCO Wives Club luncheon, held recently at Crane Hall. Hostesses were Maurene Mcrilling, Nita Valent and Lenore Edwards.

Past-presidents of the club were invited as honored guests. Three were able to attend, Edith Gill, the club's first president in 1953, Jean Coleman and Edith Hightower. Each spoke briefly and were presented corsages and a souvenir gift by Virginia Lamb.

Plans were announced for a picnic at Victory Lodge the evening of Sept. 19. The families of members will be guests.

Numerous activities are being planned for the fall and winter.

Woman's Club Names Ballet Director

The Woman's Club of Fort Benning recently announced the new director of the Dancing School will be Mrs. Margaret LaForrest.

Mrs. LaForrest, member of the Columbus Ballet Guild, has directed her own classical Ballet School for the past five years. She received her early ballet training from her mother, who was a well-known European ballet dancer. She later studied in East Prussia under Olga Fetrassnaieff.

Mrs. LaForrest continued her early training at the Ballet Academy of Berlin under Willi Gottlewsky. She was awarded two scholarships providing for special study in Hungarian and Russian dances. She was also honored by being one of five girls chosen by the Berlin Academy to audition for the Royal Ballet Academy in London, which was at that time the Sadler Wells Ballet.

Mrs. LaForrest's professional career started at the age of 15. She danced for almost six years in opera houses and operetta theaters throughout Europe. When the theaters closed during the war, Mrs. LaForrest was already a soloist and member of the International Artist League.

In 1944, she escaped from East Germany and joined Special Services for work in Munich and Frankfort under the management of Mickey Rooney.

Under Mrs. LaForrest, the Woman's Club School of Dance will continue to maintain the same high standards set in past years. The teaching methods employed will continue to be those of the French Classical School of Ballet, the oldest and most honored method of ballet instruction.

Staff Ladies Hold Coffee At MOOM

A coffee welcoming newly arrived wives of the Command and Staff Department, The Infantry School, was given recently. The scene of the coffee was the Corregidor Room at the Main Officers Open Mess.

Mrs. Samuel W. Koster was hostess, assisted by Mrs. Walter D. Short, Mrs. Everett V. Mead, Mrs. Woodrow Laws, Mrs. Ralph L. Whitt, Mrs. Sydney E. Sacerdote and Mrs. Albro L. Parsons Jr.

The cool and inviting centerpiece was a watermelon basket filled with summer fruits. New ladies included Mesdames Henry M. Austin, James E. Coggins, Howard G. Crowell, Edgar Egeland Andrew L. Goodwin, Donald F. Hanson, John M. King, George F. Marko, Neal B. McCurdy, Charles R. Orr, Harold R. Page, John M. Petracca, John C. Swearingen, Ignatius J. Turon and Charles S. Ziegler.

A gracious welcome was given by Mrs. Koster, with a summary of activities available to the new ladies.

AMERICAN FIRST

According to Robert Ingersoll, Thomas Paine was the first to write the words, "The United States of America."

Donut Bar Sets Theme At Coffee

Ladies of the Infantry School Weapons Department met for a coffee in the Corregidor Room of the Main Officers' Open Mess, recently.

Hostesses for the occasion were the ladies of the Mortar Committee.

The center of interest was a Coffee and Donut Bar. Coffee and donuts were served by Mortar Committee ladies dressed in chefs' costumes. Small tables placed about the room were covered with red and white checked cloths for coffee-room atmosphere.

Mrs. Raymond B. Marlin introduced guests Mrs. Agnes Hauanio and Miss Sue Fretz.

New members welcomed and introduced were Mrs. John W. Loffert, Mrs. Andrew J. Brinquel, Mrs. Ronald C. Crowl, and Mrs. Richard G. Franklin.

Retreat By Women's Groups

Four Protestant Women-of-the-Chapel groups will conduct a retreat from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Aug. 21 at The Infantry Center Recreation Area.

Participating are the Women-of-the-Chapel from Main Post, Student Brigade and Sand Hill Chapels No. 1 and 3.

Principal speaker will be Mrs. Nell Scruggs, a senior case worker at a Columbus firm.

Free baby sitting at Tot Town Nursery will be available for mothers attending the retreat. Those with Tot Town membership are requested to show their cards at the nursery, even though the service is free.

Participants are requested to assemble at the Religious Education Center, Bldg. 2606, at 8:30 a.m.

Cold drinks will be furnished at the Recreation Area, but each participant is requested to take a lunch.

For further information telephone Mrs. Dan McCall, MU 9-8252, or Mrs. Robert Whitehead, MU 9-7192.

New Detail

New suit details are shown for the fall, such as longer and narrower sleeves, set-in sleeves, double-breasted closings and concealed buttonless closings.

Wives Meet Newcomers

The officers' wives of the 29th Infantry were hosted by Mrs. Warren D. Hodges, wife of the battle group commander, at their monthly coffee.

The refreshment table was decorated with a summer theme while Mrs. James E. Stacy and Mrs. Robert P. Lott poured.

Newcomers to the group were Mesdames James E. Stacy, wife of the new battle group executive officer, Gary W. Taylor, Thomas L. Williams, and William Scarborough.

Farewells were said to Mesdames Frederick Walters, Linford R. Pitts, James T. Short, Henry M. Derleth and David C. Lynn.

Guests included Mrs. Andrew Hoersch, houseguest of Mrs. Frederick Walters.

87th's Legislation Aids Services

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — The 87th Congress is still in session but the prospect for passage of any new military bills now looks dim. However, military legislation already through the session has brightened the outlook for all servicemen.

The quarters allowance hike has been signed by President Kennedy and will go into effect Jan. 1. Another bill signed into law will permit servicemen to accept fellowships, scholarships or grants.

Certain veterans with a wife or child are now assured that there will be no reduction in pension otherwise payable during hospitalization, and another, firmed-up piece of legislation liberalizes the provisions of title 38 of U. S. Code relating to the assignment of National Service Life Insurance.

A new bill permits persons eligible for veterans' benefits under the war orphans's educational assistance to attend foreign schools under certain circumstances.

Bills still on the legislative route include:

1. Legislation in the Senate giving commanding officers greater authority to hand down non-judicial punishment for minor offenses.

2. A bill in the Senate Armed Services Committee allowing members of the Armed Forces to retire in the "highest grade satisfactorily held" in any service.

3. Congressional bills that would amend title 38 U. S. Code, providing education and training for veterans who served after Jan. 31 1955; an amendment to the Code to permit an extension time within which certain educational programs must be begun and completed (pertaining to persons called during the Berlin crisis) and legislation to reinstate the WWII veterans' education program.

Most of this legislation will be in the hopper when Congress returns to Washington for its next session.

'Brigadeers' Donate 265 Pints of Blood

The second Red Cross Blood Drive of 1962 has reached completion within the 1st Infantry Brigade.

The drive ended last Friday afternoon in the Brigade Classroom with 265 pints of the life-giving fluid being donated during the two-day period by "Brigadeers." Another 11 pints were collected from other sources.

The breakdown on the donations show the 9th Infantry led the way with 179 pints. Following in second place with 73 pints was the 58th Infantry.

Brigade Headquarters and the 10th Artillery donated 11 pints each. In addition, the 44th Ranger Company contributed 10 pints and one pint was received from a Red Cross volunteer.

This latest drive in conjunction with the Atlanta Regional Blood Center brings the brigade's total contributions this year to 745 pints.

FEMALE FIRST

UNITED STATES ARMY — STRIKE — READY FORCE

RED FORCE COMMANDERS MEET WITH THEIR LEADER
From Left, Col. Keller, Gen. Chase, Gen. Dunn, Col. Hannum

Gen. Dunn Says 'We'll Win War'

'Red' Force CO Tells Of Exercise Victory

The "Red" force commander has promised the men of the 2nd Division that, "We are going to win this war, and we are going to win it well."

Flying in from his headquarters in the field, Lt. Gen. Thomas Dunn, III Corps commander from Fort Hood, Texas and in command of all "Red" forces participating in Exercise SWIFT STRIKE II, also explained the maneuver's objectives, stressing the need to develop effective units, both small and large.

Field Training

"We can read books, but until we get into the field, we will never be trained. We are here to train," he said.

Among other things, the commander pointed out this maneuver is affording good training in communications, logistics, mobility, air assault, joint Army - Air Force capabilities and guerrilla operations.

Noting that the land being used for the exercise is privately owned, Gen. Dunn emphasized care of private property. "We are on land owned by other people. We enjoy good relationships with these people and want to maintain these relationships. We might want to use this land again, perhaps next year."

TROJAN HORSE? . . . Specialist Four Eugene L. Reifel, left, of the 122nd Signal Bn. was on outpost duty recently at Exercise SWIFT STRIKE II, when he heard a noise in the darkness. After no one responded to his challenge, Specialist Reifel advanced upon the sound and captured what appeared to be a stray mule. Or was it a clever trick by the "Blue" force to smuggle enemy agents behind the "Red" lines disguised as domestic animals? The four-legged invader has been turned over the "Red" intelligence unit for "questioning, etc."

Strike Commander

S. C. Citizens Honor Gen. Adams

The cooperative bond between the citizens of Sumter, S. C. and all participants in the huge Exercise SWIFT STRIKE II now underway was symbolized recently with an award of a plaque by the city to the exercise commander.

General Paul D. Adams, commander-in-chief of the U.S. Strike Command, was presented the plaque by Sumter Mayor Clifton Brown, which was given in recognition of General Adams' "outstanding career as a soldier and the close cooperation by Sumter citizens with General Adams' command."

Ceremonies

The ceremonies were held at the Sumter American Legion installation in Sumter, where an exercise press center has been established.

In accepting the award, General Adams praised the citizens of the Sumter area who have furnished, without cost, part of the required maneuver land. He also praised the "public spiritedness and patriotism of residents in this part of the country, which is long-noted for its brilliant contributions to the United States military history."

The U. S. Strike Command is currently staging Exercise SWIFT STRIKE II in an area of North and South Carolina comprising some 5,500 square miles in all, and Sumter is located in the exercise area.

General Adams said, "No military preparation could handle an operation of this size," and he underlined the helpfulness of the civilian population in making the maneuver possible.

In describing the objectives of Swift Strike Command, General Adams said, "We're highly mobile and hard-hitting. Our job is to go anywhere and go right into business."

To accomplish this objective, Army and Air Force elements function as a single unit under General Adams' command, which consists of 70,000 men and which is capable of quick deployment to any part of the world for any kind of action, 'brush' fire to all-out conflict.

"Rapid reaction," the general said, "is the key to our success. In one night we can get troops out and relocated. We get the heavier elements up earlier that way and close out the entire movement faster, as a result."

"We also have MATS, the Air Force's world-wide transport service, providing air-lift facilities."

Lt Jesse Fulfer Is Liaison Off. At 1st Infantry

By 1st Infantry PIO

Lt. Jesse K. Fulfer recently was assigned as the 1st Infantry liaison officer.

Lt. Fulfer has previously served as executive officer of Company C and commanding officer of Company B.

He is a distinguished military graduate of the Reserve Officer Training Corps program at West Texas State College.

38th Inf. Is Lead Unit as Div. Invades

The 2nd Division's 38th Infantry has spearheaded an attack across the Pee Dee River into Marlboro County, S.C., on their way to capturing successfully their main objective —Bennetsville, S.C.

Flanked on the left by 7th Cavalry and on the right by the 23rd Infantry, the 38th stormed across the bridge on Route 15 leading from Society Hill, S. C., to Marlboro.

The advance across the bridge was delayed for approximately a half hour while engineers repaired part of the bridge "destroyed" by the opposing "Blue" force. Violent rain storms, described by some local civilians as "the worst in a long time" also made the work of the infantry and the engineers slightly less than drudgery.

All along the road, with Air Force jets streaking overhead, the realistic appearance of the fighting was almost only by the scores of curious civilian passers-by. Dogs barked at the rolling equipment, children waved and pointed their fingers like guns, while farmers behind plows and tractors, with a full day's work ahead of them, could afford only a rapid glance.

With the "Blue" force in regular U. S. Army combat uniform, and the "Reds" in the specially designed multi-colored jackets, some civilians on the road to Bennetsville were heard to reveal their confusion. "I really get mixed up," one lady was heard to say. "All I know is that the "Blues" were camped on that hill last night. There was some shootin' and now the "Reds" are up there."

Maj. Armstrong Rejoins 9th Inf.

By 9th Infantry PIO

Major George E. Armstrong returned to the 9th Infantry recently after a six-month absence, during which he attended the University of Omaha and completed his college education.

Major Armstrong graduated with honors last month and received a Bachelor of Science degree in general education. He majored in military science.

Audrey's Soft Voice Taunts Troops on 'Swift Strike'

HEADQUARTERS, EXERCISE SWIFT STRIKE II, CAMDEN, S.C. — The second hand inched toward 12:45 p.m. The attractive blonde crossed her shapely legs and stared into the microphone.

And an announcer in the WIS Columbia, S.C. radio station came in with "This is a special message for troops participating in Swift Strike II."

This was followed by music, low and soft. Then came the blonde's voice saying huskily: "Hi, fellows, this is Audrey. I didn't sleep well last night. I was worrying about you. I guess that's the way it has to be though — you out in those fields with those mosquitoes and gnats.

"And me in Columbia. Anxious to meet and welcome you here. Why don't you lay down your arms and surrender. While you think about it, I'm going to play a record especially for you — "Smoke Gets In Your Eyes."

"That's the way we usually begin a program," explained Audrey Hunt when asked about her Tokyo Rose-Axis Sally type program, a three-minute show of "lush, sentimental music and small, soft talk."

Audry is a slim, trim blonde Doris Day type minus the freckles. She is the mother of three boys: David, 12, Andy, 10, and Steve, 6. And she says she and her husband, Samuel, have been receiving lots of phone calls since she started her "Voice of Audrey" program.

"There was an invitation to dinner at Fort Jackson Friday night," Audrey said. "And the 328th Carrier Squadron invited me to a party at the Holiday Inn Saturday night. And there was a soldier who wanted to know whether I'd mind if he just came over and talked with me some time."

The chic blonde added that her studio has been bombarded with a heavy concentration of phone calls since the four daily programs — at 6:50 a.m., 12:45 p.m., 7:45 p.m. and midnight (a 10-minute show)—began around Aug. 5.

That's when exercise Swift Strike II brought "war" in peace to the Carolinas. The mock war exercises—scheduled to run through Sunday—are the largest field training exercises ever staged by the U.S. Strike Command (USSTRICOM).

"Some of the boys call me and say 'Audrey, I'm going to lay down my arms and surrender right now'," Audrey said. "They want to know where they can meet me. I give them the address of the USO in Columbia . . ."

Out in the field, the men have varying reactions to Audrey's program.

"That type of program does not bother me at all," said Lt. Sal Bordell in between bursts of machine gun fire. "It just makes me want us to capture Columbia and start giving some broadcasts of our own."

Bordell, of New Orleans, La. is with Company B, 2nd Battalion, 61st Infantry Division.

"I haven't had time to write my wife yet, let alone worry about radio programs," said Sgt. Roland Lamontagne, as his men dug in around the bridge crossing the Pee Dee River, near Society Hill, S.C. Lamontagne is also with the 61st Infantry.

PFC Allan Sutliff, Company C, 38th Infantry, admitted he would be annoyed by such broadcasts. The native of Highland Falls, N. Y., said "It's bad enough being out in the boondocks without being hit by that kind of stuff."

In the command post area of the 38th Infantry Division, where Sutliff was speaking, Spt George Farnum, summed up the prevalent troop opinion: "The program is a lot of silly nonsense. But it sure makes war realistic."

Audrey started making things "realistic" at the suggestion of the Columbia Chamber of Commerce. She says her broadcasts to the troops are quite a departure from her regular "The Girl On The Go" program in which she uses a portable tape recorder to come up with on-the-spot interviews of social and civic events.

And she wants the troops to know she has a soft spot in her heart for the Armed Forces. "After all, I married a former Army sergeant," she says. "And I used to work for the USO as a hostess in San Jose, Calif., where I was born."

August Coffee Has Picnic Motif

A picnic motif was featured at the August 2nd Division Officers' Wives Club coffee held last Tuesday at the Custer Terrace Officers' Club.

The serving tables were covered with red and white checkered tablecloths on which the main centerpiece was a large picnic basket filled with various foodstuff and picnic accessories. Picnic items were scattered throughout the club. Coffee was served from a large urn instead of the usual silver coffee service.

Hostesses

Hostesses for the affair were the ladies of Division Headquarters under the leadership of Mrs. Walter Hibbard and Mrs. Jack Samson. Assisting them were Mrs. John M. Stephens, Mrs. Charles C. Clark, Mrs. Dave Termin, Mrs. F. V. Harris and Mrs. Woodrow Myers. They all wore name tags designed as hot dogs.

Mrs. John T. Corley, wife of the new assistant division commander, was a special guest at the event.

Mrs. James Kolb, president of the club, conducted a short business meeting, during which she introduced Mrs. Corley and other new unit commanders' wives. They were Mrs. Lucien F. Keller, wife of the new commanding officer of the 23rd Infantry; Mrs. William O. Morgan, wife of Colonel Morgan, new deputy brigade commander; Mrs. Edgar R. Poole, wife of the new Division Trains commander; Mrs. John Staples, wife of the commander of 1st Infantry, Colonel Staples; Mrs. Quintus Atkinson, wife of Lieutenant Colonel Atkinson, commanding officer of the 7th Cavalry; and Mrs. Gus H. Grissard, wife of the new commander of the 122nd Signal Battalion.

High Neckline

The high neckline look in fall suits and coats is attained by stand-up collars to the chin or muffling stoles over collarless neck.

Soufflé Wools

Coat and dress costumes are important for fall and will be featured in soufflé wools, colorful tweeds and soft jerseys.

Tea Fetes Mrs. Harris At MOOM

Mrs. F. V. Harris was honored last Friday at a farewell tea held in the Normandy Room of the Main Officers' Open Mess. Guests included the ladies of Division Trains.

Special guests at the affair were Mrs. John T. Corley, wife of the new assistant division commander, and Mrs. E. R. Poole, wife of the new commanding officer of Division Trains.

Hostesses for the afternoon event were Mrs. Walter Hibbard Jr., Mrs. Alfred P. Lam, Mrs. Woodrow Myers, Mrs. Dudley Pittman, Mrs. John M. Stoecker and Mrs. Bryan Evans.

White carnation corsages were presented to Mrs. Corley, Mrs. Poole and Mrs. Harris. Mrs. Hibbard presented an engraved silver tray to Mrs. Harris as a parting memento from the ladies of Division Trains.

Mrs. Sessions Hosts 38th Infantry Ladies

Mrs. James R. Sessions, wife of the 38th Infantry's deputy commander, hosted the August get - together for the battle group's officers' wives.

Mrs. Sessions gave an afternoon tea August 1 at her home at 110-A Gait Court.

Green was featured in the decorations as well as the refreshments, which included lime sherbet floats. The table was covered with a green cloth. A wooden lazy susan held a pineapple surrounded by green hydrangeas. The centerpiece was flanked by green candles also surrounded by hydrangeas.

The wives welcomed Mmes. George M. Massey, Thomas H. Fincher Jr. and Alton E. Calvez. Farewells were bid to Mrs. Ross W. Winne Jr., whose husband is leaving for Korea.

The next battle group coffee, scheduled Wednesday, Sept. 5 at the Main Officers' Club, will be hosted by Headquarters Company with Mrs. Thornton Burns heading the committee.

7th Cav Ladies Attend Coffee At Hall Home

Mrs. Vernon Ison and Mrs. Dewey Hall were co-hostesses at the August coffee for the 7th Cavalry in the home of Mrs. Hall on First Division Road. It was a welcoming coffee for Mrs. Quintus Atkinson, wife of the new squadron commander, Lieutenant Colonel Atkinson.

Miniature paper tanks were used as name tags, and the centerpiece of the serving table was a toy tank surrounded by yellow flowers. Punch was served to each guest as she arrived, and later Mrs. Atkinson poured coffee for the guests.

Indianhead Ladies Meet At Lunch

The Ladies of the Big Indianhead held their monthly luncheon last week at the 2nd Division NCO Club.

Tables were decorated with assorted flowers. Special guest at the meeting was Mrs. B. B. Littlejohn, former director of religious education at the Sand Hill Sunday School. She was presented with a gift of appreciation for making a nursery possible for children of club members and other ladies attending luncheons and meetings. The presentation was made by Mrs. W. G. Freeman, first vice president. Another guest was Mrs. Judy Sutton.

New member of the Ladies of the Big Indianhead was Mrs. Michael Gaffney. Goodbyes were said to Mrs. Warren Ottley.

All Fur Dresses

Look for all-fur dresses and suits in broadtail or lammoire, the dresses usually sleeveless shifts, the suits fitted and short of jacket.

12th Arty Promotions Celebrated

The officers and ladies of the 12th Artillery gathered recently to celebrate the promotion of Major Clifford J. Phifer and Major Francis C. Whitcomb.

The evening event was held in the Anzio Room of the Main Officers' Open Mess.

During the evening farewells were said to Major and Mrs. Edwin M. Reid, Major and Mrs. Francis C. Whitcomb, Captain and Mrs. Michael C. Cornwell, Lieutenant and Mrs. Walter C. Parks, Lieutenant and Mrs. William H. Collar and Lieutenant George R. Horn, Lieutenant Colonel Terence W. Huck, commander of the 12th Artillery, presented each officer with a farewell plaque.

Lt. Colonel Huck also presented a silver tray to the newlyweds of the unit, Lieutenant and Mrs. Walter C. Parks.

Guests at the affair included Major and Mrs. Edwin S. Bush, Major and Mrs. Fergus T. Monahan, Captain and Mrs. John Bohen, Captain and Mrs. Howard B. Cromwell, Captain and Mrs. Roy L. Sherard, Captain Charles E. Avery and Mrs. John McCreary.

Children, Dramatics Fill Life of Mrs. John Corley

BY INGRID KRAUS

Her faith and the philosophy, "to live day by day, to do the best one can and not to worry about the future as it will take care of itself," have brought much happiness into the life of Mary Elizabeth Corley.

The greatest blessings and sources of happiness of the wife of Col. John T. Corley, the 2nd Division's deputy commander, are the couple's seven children. Their names and ages are John Jr., 16; Jim, 15; the twins Mary and Bob, 14; Ellen, 12; Michael, 8, and Carol, 6.

LOVES CHILDREN
Mrs. Corley

Seven In School

Carol will enter first grade this fall, and thus all seven will be in school for the first time; this will give Mrs. Corley some additional time to devote to her second love, dramatics.

The former Mary Elizabeth Buckley of Cambridge, Mass. developed her theatrical interest in high school and won a four-year scholarship to a dramatic college. However, after one year she transferred to Radcliff and switched her efforts to economics and history. Despite her comparatively short dramatic education, Mrs Corley has used her knowledge of dramatics perhaps more than her more academic studies at Radcliff.

In college she started to do monologues for the Boston Speakers' Bureau to earn some money, and she continued writing and producing monologues in the Army, mainly for coffees and luncheons. Although she has covered the entire range of emotions in her writings, most of her monologues are humorous. She has done several funny takeoffs on the life of the Army wife, including a couple for the Fort Benning Woman's Club, when the Corley's were stationed here from 1957-60.

The attractive brunette especially enjoys writing, producing and directing original musical reviews "just for the fun of it." She has done several and especially enjoyed doing them in Germany because it brought the wives together when the men were out on maneuvers.

Mrs. Corley also plans to devote some of her time to help the wives through Rota-plan. She understands the hardships caused by separations as she was left alone with five babies when her husband was sent to Korea.

Honor Graduate

The Corleys were married in 1942 when she was a junior in college; after only one month, then then - Maj. Corley was sent overseas to fight in World War II. His bride returned to college and was graduated cum laude.

When Col. Corley came back to the States, he was assigned to the U. S. Military Academy faculty, and his wife recalls West Point as her favorite station. "We had lovely quarters, but from there we had to move into barracks at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas," she said.

Mrs. Corley has also accompanied her husband to stateside stations at Carlisle Barracks, Pa.; Fort Monroe, Va.; Fort Jay, N.Y., and to Fort Benning twice.

The family just returned from Copenhagen, Denmark, where Col. Corley was associated with NATO. She commented that the American wives are spreading ladies coffees and luncheons abroad.

Special Forces Presents Challenge for Top Men

By Robert C. DeCamera

"Here is a challenge. A man naturally gravitates to the best."

These are the words of a Special Forces officer. And the best today is the Army's Special Forces. Right now, fighting, sometimes dying, teaching but always learning, the Special Forces man works with the native population in Southeast Asia to organize them against communist terror. In the United States, in every climate and condition, in Germany, in Okinawa, Special Forces is training and maintaining forces to help others help themselves.

Four-in-One Man

In some parts of the world, this soldier's soldier is putting what he knows to use, not 3,000 miles from the battle but right in it, where it counts. Guerrilla and statesman, master of diplomacy and sabotage, this is one man, not four. This is the Special Forces soldier, and this can be you.

Right now this Army branch needs good men qualified in many MOSs. How can you in the 2nd Infantry Division get in this outfit? With the exception of enlisted men alerted or under orders for overseas duty, it's easy to apply. Every volunteer must have or be willing to take airborne training. Physical requirements must be met, including the ability to swim. You must have at the minimum an interim secret clearance. Applications for Special Forces go through normal command channels.

If Special Forces does not need your military occupation specialty you may be retrained without losing proficiency pay and pick up an extra $55 a month as jump qualified. A Special Forces "A" team, consisting of 10 enlisted men and two officers, is trained in five MOSs, demolitions, intelligence and operations, medics, weapons and communications. Two men share the same MOS. In this way the team can split in half and still carry on its mission effectively.

There are also openings in headquarters companies for men skilled in such fields as supply, radio repair, clerical work and parachute rigging. Before you finish Special Forces training and take your place as a non-commissioned officer on an operational team, you will have been thoroughly cross-trained in the team's other four MOSs.

What other training will you get? By the time you're ready to go out in the field or on an overseas mission, you'll be an expert in jungle and mountain warfare, underwater demolitions, psychological warfare, parachuting, and you will know a foreign language.

It sounds like hard work, and it is. Dangerous sometimes too. But Special Forces will build a pride in you, the kind that makes men and armies and protects countries. And that's what Special Forces is all about. If you're a good soldier, you want to be a better one.

Campaign Streamers

Eight campaign streamers from the Civil War were accrued to the 9th Infantry in 1869 when the personnel and colors of the 27th Infantry were consolidated with those of the 9th.

Battery 'A' CO Receives ACM

12th Artillery PIO

Battery A commander of the 12th Artillery received the Army Commendation Medal recently.

Capt. Robert A. Farr, received the award for his outstanding performance of duties while a member of Headquarters and Headquarters Battery, 2nd Infantry Division Artillery, with specific duties as assistant S-2 officer, security control officer and custodian of classified documents.

Captain Farr is a graduate of the University of Vermont and holds a bachelor of science degree in Agriculture.

PROMOTED ENROUTE . . . Lt. Col. Harold K. Sharpe, left, of the 2nd Division's 2nd Quartermaster Company, was promoted to his present rank last week while traveling by motor convoy from Fort Benning to the Exercise SWIFT STRIKE II maneuver area. Upon arriving he received his promotion orders and during an informal ceremony had his silver leaf pinned on by Col. James A. Thetford, right, who is chief of staff, 2nd Logistical Command, Fort Lee, Virginia.

Prisoners Are Captured, Questioned at Exercise

The first week of Exercise SWIFT STRIKE II has ended, and already there are hundreds of prisoners confined in the barbed wire compound at the division's collecting point.

Most of the prisoners are enlisted men. Some are captured members of guerrilla bands while others are from reconnaissance patrols that attempted to infiltrate the area. Still others are from airborne units dropped behind the lines, and there is always the unfortunate soldier who blundered unknowingly into enemy territory.

Tagged

Most of the prisoners were captured by the battle groups and were held by them only long enough to be tagged.

They were then shipped to the collecting point where they were thoroughly searched, interrogated by trained specialists and segregated by rank into different parts of the compound.

After a maximum stay there of 12 hours they will be returned eventually to their units.

The POW collecting point is operated by the 2nd Military Police Detachment. As well as being equipped to handle POWs, it also handles deserters, stragglers, shell shock victims, captured civilians and female prisoners.

Life in Rear Area Is Rugged, Busy

By Robert De Camera

Two hours ago this place was a sparse and weedy orchard lazing in the Carolina sun. Now it looks like it will rain, and just as rapidly two-and-a-half ton trucks have trampled down the weeds and deposited their men and equipment.

This is the administrative headquarters of Exercise SWIFT STRIKE II, the largest Armed Forces peacetime exercise ever. Trucks crowd the trees hiding from enemy observation planes, and men have raised their pup tents and camouflaged them. Officers sit in their large command post tents talking about their "aggressor" role in the exercise.

The rain now beats warmly and softly on the tents of enlisted men and officers.

Composite

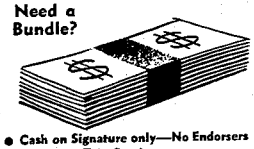
Exercise SWIFT STRIKE II is a product of the Army and Air Force — combined U. S. Strike Command. Strike Command is a composite of STRAC —Strategic Army Corps—and TAC — Tactical Air Corps. These high-level commands are then broken down into individual units; but pursuing it only one level lower, STRAC is the Army trooper, his supplies and transportation, and the men who decide where, why and how to move him.

Every unit bivouaced in this area has at least one tree which seems to be a grouping point if not always the focus of activity. On this tree is tacked or tied the lid from a number-ten-size can on which the units' names have been painted.

Over at the mess tent, smoke curls from a kerosene stove heating water for the men's mess gear. Inside the large tent, cooks in tee shirts are preparing great pans of warm food for the men.

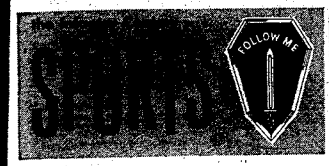
Although the rain has slowed some activities down a little, men are still digging in, uncertain how long they'll be here before they have to pack up and follow their battle troops around the countryside. All the preparations here have a vague air of unreality.

Over the evening air comes the busy hum of a generator, and lights have snapped on in the work tents. Everything is wet and cool. Water beads on canvas tents and truck coverings and drips from trees, refreshing the earth and the tired men who are camped here. Everyone is hurrying along now, winding up the day. Soon the orchard will be quiet again.



Muddy Road Leads to 9th Motor Pool

Somewhere in Sumter County, S. C., turn right onto the muddiest, most winding road you see. At the end of this road the 9th Infantry motor pool has set up shop for Exercise SWIFT STRIKE II.



Arriving early last week, the 22 enlisted men and two officers of the maintenance section have already accomplished the removal of three 5-ton wreckers in a half day from the quicksand-like ground of Sumter County.

Army Netters Capture Leech Cup

WOOD OR LONG IRON? . . . If an iron will get you there, use it in preference to a wood. The No. 1 and 2 irons are distance tools. They have little loft, therefore handy in keeping low your long shots into the wind. The No. 3 has more loft; the decision to use it depends on whether it will carry the ball the required distance. With the long irons close the stance a bit drawing the right foot back about an inch from the line of flight. Hit down and through the ball; use the same follow through as for woods.

Predator Control

Extensive predator control by the Wildlife Aides, with the assistance of a professional trapper from the National Wildlife Service, was initiated during the first week of August. This predator control is post-wide and will continue throughout the month of August.

The purpose of this control work is to try to eliminate some of the vermins that prey on game, especially fawns and quail.

All personnel are urged not to allow their pets to run loose on the reservation during the month of August. To avoid the possibility of harming pets, no predator control will be practiced within one mile of the reservation boundary or within one mile of cantonment areas.

Kings Pond Stocked

The bass taken from Hedleys Pond the first Saturday in August were put in Kings Pond. There were over 400 pounds of fish taken from Hedleys Pond.

Some fish were lost because of the extremely muddy condition in Hedleys before being removed.

As soon as the water temperature lowers, the fishing, especially bass fishing, should show a great improvement in Kings Pond.

Pond Fertilization

Kings Pond was fertilized last week and there will probably be two more applications of fertilizer before the program is stopped for this year.

Many people ask the question, "Why fertilize when the fish are biting?" When fertilizing a fish pond you are accomplishing three things. First it increases production of food for the fish; second, it controls submerged weeds; and third, it makes fishing more successful.

Dove Fields Being Staked

With dove season only four weeks away the dove fields, six in Georgia and four in Alabama, are being staked. These are safety stakes which the shooters will be required to stand by to shoot dove.

A small map of the reservation showing the location of each field as well as the safety rules will be available for the hunters prior to the opening date of the season. This map may be picked up at the Fish and Game Headquarters at Harmony Church.

Unregistered Boats

There have been a few boats on the ponds around the post that have not been registered. There is a post regulation that all boats have to be registered with the Fish and Game Association. Wildlife Aides are instructed to bring all unregistered boats into the Fish and Game Headquarters. Owners who are missing boats should check there.

Also all boats that are not kept in the proper state of police or are tied up at the proper dock will be brought in.

Triangular Swim Meet Set on Post

A 50-event triangular swim meet will be held tomorrow at Carey Pool at 9 a.m. with the Columbus YMCA, Edgewood Country Club and Benning's Youth Activities Club participating.

YAC swimming coach Sp4 George W. Watkins announced today that over 100 boys and girls will participate in the meet which will feature seven events and five age groups for boys and girls.

He also stated that Carey Pool has bleachers situated so that spectators can get a clear view of the action.

The competitors will be broken down into sections as follows: 8 and under, 9 and 10, 11 and 12, 13 and 14, and 15 and up.

The five individual events are freestyle, breast - stroke, back-stroke, butterfly, and individual medley in which each swimmer must use all four strokes. The team events are the freestyle relay, and the medley relay. All races are for 50 meters.

Ribbons will be awarded to the winners, of first, second and third place in each event. Specialist Watkins stated that the meet will be ever at noon.

EXECUTED

Nathan Hale, executed as an American spy by the British on Sept. 22, 1775, said, "I regret that I have but one life to give for my country."

Dump Navy, Air Force In Singles and Doubles

The Army tennis team won the Leech Cup Wednesday morning as it 'sank' the Navy squad, winning all four of the singles matches.

Ron Holmberg, the Army's number one netter, was a little off his usual sparkling game as he defeated Navy Lt. Dick Gaskill, 7-5, 6-1.

Holmberg was forced to go to overtime in the first set as he lost his serve twice. He rallied after being down 5-4 to win the next three games.

The second set was a little different as Holmberg's drop shot began clicking and he won six straight games after dropping the first one.

Army number two netter Bob Bowditch had little trouble as he disposed of Aviation Machine Superchief Leon Wilson.

Bowditch again displayed fine form as he jumped off to an early 3-0 lead in both sets and coasted to an easy victory.

Norman Perry, the 14th-ranked U.S. amateur, was in top form as he raced to a 6-0, 6-1 victory over Seaman James S. Whitehad.

Perry won 11 straight games before dropping his first after leading 5-0 in the second set. Throughout the entire match he amazed the crowd with repeated spectacular shots.

Leslie Dodson, the Army's number four netter clinched the victory for the Army as he coasted to victory over Navy Lt. (JG) John Oettinger, 6-2, 6-1.

After a shaky start in which he was down 2-1 in the first set Dodson settled down to take the next five games. The second set went fast with Dodson having little trouble.

Not once throughout the entire match did Oettinger win his serve.

The Army Tennis team swept all four of the first round matches Tuesday at the 1962 Interservice Tennis Tournament at Fort Benning.

The activities began with an opening address by Col. William A. McKee, chief of staff of The Infantry Center, to members of the Army, Navy and Air Force squads.

Col. McKee spoke in behalf of Maj. Gen. Ben Harrell, commanding general of The Center, wishing the players good luck.

Holmberg Wins

Army net star PFC Ronald E. Holmberg was the first victor as he defeated Air Force 1st Lt. Henry Jungle Jr., of Richards-Gebaur Air Force Base, Mo., 6-3, 8-6. Jungle jumped to an early lead in the first set, forging ahead 3-1, but the powerful Holmberg fought back to take the next five games.

The second set was a see-saw battle with the score tied six times before Holmberg won out.

While Holmberg was defeating Jungle, the Army's Bob Bowditch displayed a fine volley and net game as he rode to a 6-2, 6-3 victory over A2c Robert Delgado of McClellan Air Force Base, Calif.

Bowditch was never headed after rolling to an early 3-1 lead in the first set. In the second set Delgado played much better, but the lanky Bowditch was too much to handle displaying a variety of shots. Delgado had defeated Bowditch four times before their Tuesday meeting.

Army 1st Lt. Norman Perry was in fine form as he polished off Air Force 1st Lt. Stanley C. Hack Jr., of Stewart Air Force Base, 6-1, 6-2, after dropping the first game. He then settled down to take the next nine games in a row before Tack finally won a game in the second set.

Spell Tosses No-Hitter

Benning Wins Two-Game Series With McPherson

By SFC Bismarck Stith

The Fort Benning Doughboy baseball team took command last weekend in Atlanta, Ga., by sweeping a two-game series from the Fort McPherson nine, 11-2 and 20-0.

In the Saturday night duel, Clyde Battle hurled a one-hitter and was credited with the victory. The Benning team pounded out 11 hits for 11 runs. Curtis Gentry's solo homer and Jesus Herrans' triple paced the Doughboys at the plate. Dillard smacked a four-bagger in the seventh frame to account for the McPherson lone tally.

Fort Benning's fireball artist, Charles Spell pitched a no-hit shutout Sunday afternoon while his teammates had a field day at the plate, they banged out 20 hits for 20 runs to complete a two game sweep over McPherson.

Gentry led his teammates in the second game with a home-run, his second of the series and followed with three singles with five trips at the plate. Jessie Joyce aided the Doughboys with a triple and two doubles.

Fort Benning will play host to a two game series here at Gowdy Field against Fort McPherson. Both games are scheduled to get underway at 7:30 p.m.

These exhibition games are warm-ups for the Benning Doughboys who will represent the Infantry Center in the Third Army Championships at Redstone Arsenal, Ala. August 27-31.

The players were selected from the Infantry Center Major Unit Baseball League at the end of the regular season competition on their outstanding performance during the playing season.

The Student Brigade took the crown for the third time with a 3-4 season record. Bob Kinard, has been selected to pilot the Benning team in the Third Army competition.

The following players head the Doughboy roster from Student Brigade: William Silva, Wilbur Green, Linwood Oates, Pedro Berrios, Jessie Joyce, John Barclay, Ralph Maru, Jesus Herrans, Bascombe Pangett, Charles Spell, Wallace Henderson and Edwin Toothaker.

The 1st Battle Group, 9th Infantry, 1st Infantry Brigade, contributed Curtis Gentry, Albert Rockwell, Roy Bowers, James Battle, George Rogers, and Richard Shull. James Hill was the lone player from 151st Engineers Group and Marty Leicht came from The Infantry Center Troop Command.

WAC BATTERY . . . First Lt. Alyce Sims (L) and Sp5 Charlene Seals discuss strategy to be used during the Fort Benning - Fort McPherson softball game played here recently. The Benning Wacs won the contest, 12-11.

Dental Health Series

X-Rays Aid Dentist In Protecting Teeth

By Maj. Charles W. Dobson
Preventive Dentistry Officer

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the 12th in a series of articles presented in the interest of better dental health.)

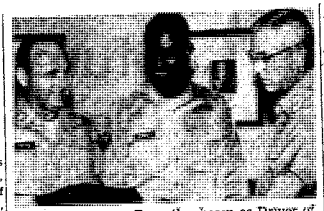
People have become increasingly aware of radiation since the advent of the atomic age. As a result, some are laboring under the misconception that dental x-rays are harmful.

The small amount of radiation transfered to the patient, eved during a full mouth x-ray examination, is directed on tissues which are resistant to its effects. Some of the rays scatter and reach more sensitive cells, such as reproductive cells. This scattered radiation amounts to a fraction of that received from natural sources. The natural sources are cosmic rays from outer space and radiation from radioactive sand and stones.

Put your mind at rest on this point. There has never been a reported injury caused by dental x-rays.

The function of x-rays is to detect defects of the teeth and surrounding tissues that cannot be seen during visual examination of the mouth. Small cavities appear on x-rays long before they are seen by the naked eye. Filling these teeth while the cavities are small saves tooth structure.

Many teeth are lost because recurrent decay under or in the sides of fillings are neglected. This type of decay progresses very rapidly. Periodic x-ray examinations make detection of the decay possible.



Dental x-rays are important for the early discovery of cysts and cancer, for these conditions cause little or no pain while they are developing. Undetected cysts could grow and involve the adjacent teeth or the entire jaw on that side, thus incurring a possible loss of additional teeth, and extensive oral surgical operation.

Cancer is a wild growing tumor. Since its presence threatens life itself, early detection of cancer is imperative.

Diseases affecting the gums and bone are also discovered by x-ray examination long before its effects are visible to the dentist's eye. The lack of a permanent tooth developing below a baby tooth is frequently uncovered through the use of routine dental x-rays. Teeth with crooked, curved, or oversized roots demand different techniques for their removal, which, through the use of x-rays, is planned in advance.

In the construction of artificial dentures, x-rays are useful to the dentist in determining the conditions of the tissue over which the dentures are placed. Unerupted teeth, broken and retained roots, if not detected and removed, make wearing the dentures difficult or impossible.

The dental x-ray is an important part of the dentist's forces in the never-ending battle to preserve your dental health.

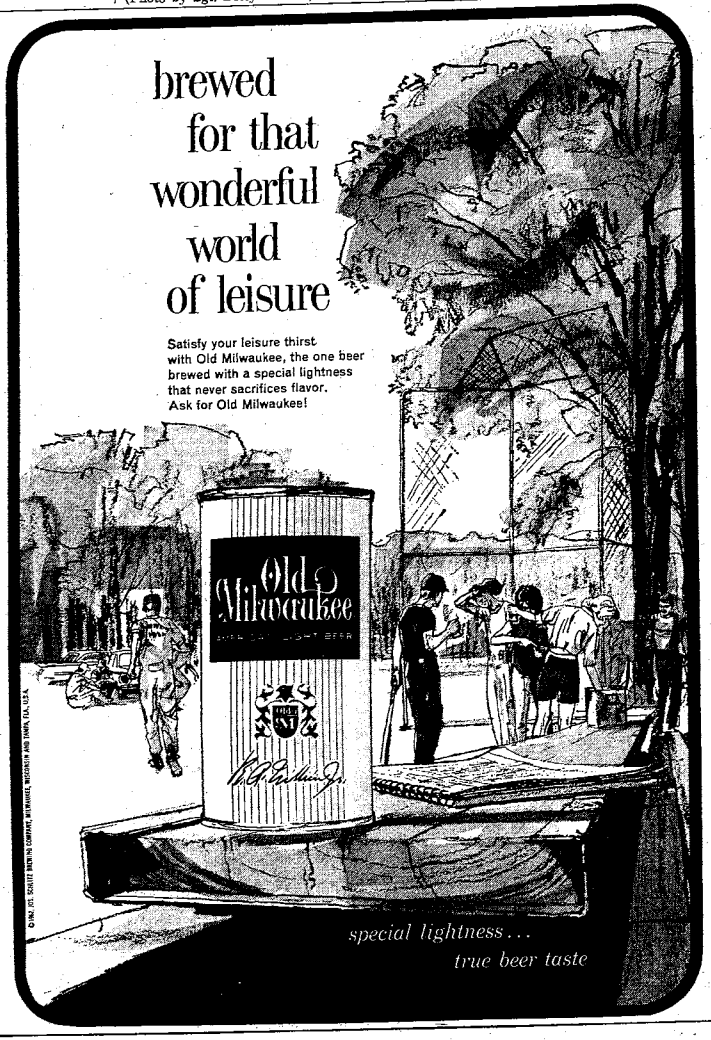
Army to Assign Billets by Name



WASHINGTON (AFPS)—The Army reports it will give its top three enlisted grades assignments by name.

About 54,000 men will be affected. The Army also said there is a possibility it will extend the name assignments to E-6s.

AT THE Movies

THE MIRACLE WORKER is an outstanding drama starring Anne Bancroft, Patty Duke and Victor Jory. A determined young lady, once blind herself, undertakes the seemingly impossible task of bringing light into the terrifying dark world of a deaf mute and blind child. There are many trying and intense moments when these two extraordinary people of indomitable will match personalities.

ROMAN HOLIDAY is the story of a runaway princess who rebels against her official routine while in Rome and slips away to have some fun incognito. The story concerns her many gay and fun-filled adventures in one of the world's most colorful cities, and the young American newspaperman she falls in love with. It stars Gregory Peck and Audrey Hepburn.

THE FRIGHTENED CITY, starring Herbert Lom and John Gregson, is a crime-filled drama for adults and young people. Gripping the city of London is a vicious protection racket syndicate which is made up of six main gangs. When an accountant decides to amalgamate the gangs, savage warfare breaks out. Dissension among the gangleaders leads to an eventual break in the syndicate, which is a blow to organized crime in London.

THE PHANTOM OF THE OPERA tells the story of a disfigured "Phantom" that terrorizes an entire theatrical company with a sinister series of frightening events. Concentrating his attention on the beautiful heroine of the opera house, he finds his hatred has been replaced with a desire to help her with her promising career. It stars Herbert Lom and Heather Sears.

Chess Play Starts Oct. 13

WASHINGTON (AFPS)—The chess champion of the Armed forces will be determined here Oct. 13-20 during the 1962 Thomas Emery Armed Forces Chess Finalists' Tournament.

Details of this year's tourney were announced by Walter J. Fried, president of the American Chess Foundation, sponsor of the event.

Gen. David M. Shoup, Marine Corps Commandant, will head an honorary committee of flag officers for the tourney. Other military services will be represented on the honorary committee by Adm. R. B. Pirie, Deputy Chief of Naval Operations (Air); Brig. Gen. Walter A. Jessen, Chief of Staff, Fourth Army; and Brig. Gen. Henry C. Huglin, USAF, Deputy U. S. Representative to the NATO military council.

Fried said each of the military departments is issuing instructions for the selection of participants.

Three finalists will be selected from each of the services—Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps.

The Navy will include the Coast Guard in its selection procedure at Tyndall AFB, Fla., between Aug. 27-Sept. 1, with the three top players participating in the Washington tourney.

Col. Stacey Is New DC At 29th Inf

Col. James E. Stacey recently took the position of 29th Infantry deputy battle group commander, succeeding Lt. Col. John J. Lissner who went to a command position in the Airborne School.

Col. Stacey was commissioned in 1942 here at the Officer's Candidate School. After OCS, he went to Fort McClellan, Ala.; then to Camp Shelby, Miss. where he served as commanding officer in the 271st Infantry, 69th Division, for a company which was then training, and which subsequently was sent to combat in Belgium and was part of the push across Germany to the Elbe River at the time of the meeting with the Russians in that same sector. As a captain, he held the position of Inspector General of the Third Infantry in the Army of Occupation until 1945.

He was the first Army representative to the Joint Press Chiefs in 1948 and 1949, and Commander of a heavy mortar unit with the 23rd Infantry, 2nd Infantry Division, until 1950 when he was sent to Korea as S-4 and executive officer of the 3rd Battalion, 23rd Infantry. In 1951 he took the Career Advanced Course here, and in 1952 was operations officer in G-3 of The Infantry School.

The colonel, whose awards include the Bronze Star with Oak Leaf Cluster, the Croix de Guerre, and the Distinguished Service Cross, was sent to Panama in 1953 where he, along with a board of 10 other officers, was instrumental in the establishment of the Army's Jungle Warfare School, a project which has now expanded and become a substantial institution.

He was a professor of military science at Fort Douglas, Utah, from 1956 to 1960, during which time he received the VFW Outstanding Citizenship Award for the State of Utah.

In 1960 the colonel took a course at the Command and General Staff College at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., a language course at the Military Assistance Institution which prepared him for his assignment in 1961 as senior infantry advisor to the Royal Thai Army, Chief of Combat Arms, branch of the Army section, in Thailand where he stayed until his present assignment to the 29th.

Col. Stacey, a tall, soft-spoken man, attended San Diego State College prior to World War II where he played football, basketball, and baseball. An avid sports fan, he says with a wry grin, "My athletic activities are now limited to golf."

Col. and Mrs. Stacey have three children: James II, 18, Teresa, 14, and John, 12.

PROJECT APOLLO

Project Apollo, the U. S. manned lunar expedition, will employ 100,000 persons ranging from space age technicians, rocket experts and scientists to aerospace doctors and nurses and the astronauts themselves.

Call Him Sgt. Major

A change in Army Regulation 600-30 has redesignated the term used in reference to a non-commissioned officer of grade E-9.

The change, dated July 3, 1962, provides that NCOs of that grade will be addressed as "sergeant major," and not "sergeant."

New Personnel Office Replaces Work Handled by 20 Agencies

WASHINGTON (AFPS)—The Army's Office of Personnel Operations, just over a month old, now handles officer and enlisted assignments formerly controlled by 20 separate agencies.

Headed by Maj. Gen. Stephen R. Hanmer, the office comes under the general staff supervision of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Personnel. Its missions include seven general activities:

1. Assignment of all officers except medical, judge advocate and chaplain.

2. Centralized assignment control of all enlisted personnel, with personalized by-name assignment of grades E-7, E-8 and E-9.

3. Supervision of personnel management administration throughout Army Reserve components.

4. Formulation of specific personnel objectives, plans and programs.

5. Statistical analysis in support of personnel management.

6. Development of implementing standards, systems and procedures.

7. Recommendations for personnel policy and procedural changes.

The OPO staff includes officers of all arms and branches who monitor assignments, training, schooling and other activities affecting officers of their own branches.

Explaining OPO's mission, Gen. Hanmer said, "People are our most important business." He pointed out that the operation of OPO affects the lives of some 80,000 officers and nearly a million enlisted men.

The general said he expects the new office to provide the Army with the right people in the right places as well as planning the development of officer and enlisted careers and formulating objectives, plans and programs.

Expressing his ideas of "personalized" treatment on all personnel actions, Gen. Hanmer said, "My staff must have a real understanding of people. They must realize that every paper crossing their desk deals with human beings.

73 AF Academy Cadets Among Airborne Grads

Among 568 students awarded Parachutist Badges in graduation ceremonies here recently for The Infantry School's basic airborne class were 73 U.S. Air Force Academy cadets.

Many of the cadets, members of the Class of 1963, 1964 and 1965, gave up their summer leave to participate in the three-week course.

The honor graduate of the class was Cadet Thomas A. Trill, Class of 1964.

In addition to the cadets, 65 Army officers and 418 enlisted men, four Air Force officers and four enlisted men, and a U. S. Marine Corps officer and three enlisted men were graduated.

Also included among the newly qualified paratroopers were three young soldiers whose fathers also wear or have worn the Parachutist Badge.

Pvt. Robert E. Hawkins' father, MSgt. Edwin Hawkins, is still serving with one of the most famous airborne units, the 82nd Airborne Division at Fort Bragg, N.C.

Another one of the second generation troopers' parents, Capt. Roland White, is still in the Army. He is the father of Pvt. Joe W. White.

Pvt. Michael Tulyszewski's father, William E. Tulyszewski served with the 82nd and 101st Airborne Divisions.

BEST MECHANIC . . . Sp4 Herbert N. Files of the 505th Transportation Company, was recently chosen as Mechanic of the Month for The Infantry Center Troop Command.

Give Awards To Companies Of 58th Inf

During a weekly company commander's meeting held recently at the 1st Armored Rifle Battalion, 58th Infantry, four companies were honored for achievements during the month of July.

First Lt. John J. Allen, commanding officer of Headquarters Company, was presented an engraved plaque for having the "Best Company" for the month of July.

The monthly award for highest percentage of reenlistments was shared by 1st Lt. James R. Bolla, commanding officer of Company C (Patton) 69th Armor (attached) and Capt. Richard B. Schaefer, commanding officer of Company B, 1st Armored Rifle Battalion, 58th Infantry. Both companies has 100 per cent reenlistments for July.

The battalion's summer athletic program awards were also presented at the meeting. Winning the Softball Championship was Company A, 1st Armored Rifle Battalion, 58th Infantry, commanded by Capt. Thomas J. Ward. Company D (Patton) 69th Armor (attached) was the recipient of the Horseshoe Tournament plaque.

700 Officers Are on Post For Training

The Pittsburgh Army Reserve School began two weeks of Infantry officers' training here Monday.

The main body of the 700 officer Reservists arrived on the post Sunday. The 75 staff and faculty members have a week of training already behind them, having arrived Aug. 5.

Commanded by Col. Hiram A. Carpenter Jr., of Pittsburgh, the Reservists are from 65 USAR schools of the Second, Third, Fourth, Fifth and Sixth Army areas.

Attached to the Pittsburgh School for support is the Champaign (Ill.) USAR School. The commandant, Col. John M. Hilts, is assistant commandant of the Pittsburgh school while at Fort Benning.

Rhymes of the Times

The Pittsburgh group differs from other Reserve schools in the Second Army area in that it has been chosen to conduct the annual training for its Infantry students for the past 11 years. The past six years of this training has been given here.

Reserve schools across the nation conduct 24 training periods from June 1 to Sept. 1, in addition to a number of supplemental drills.

One class of the Pittsburgh unit is taking the first year Infantry officers' training course. Four other classes are taking the second year course.

Visiting the Reservists Monday and Tuesday was Maj. Gen. Malcom Hay, adjutant general of Pennsylvania.

Barking is a form of vocal expression that has been acquired by dogs since domestication. Wolves, foxes, wild dogs, and other canines in the natural state howl, yelp, whine, and make other characteristic noises, but they never bark.

ROA Chapter Will Install New Officers

The Columbus Area Chapter, Retired Officers Association will install newly elected officers for 1962-1963, at a social-dinner meeting Tuesday at the Corregidor Room of the Main Officers Open Mess.

Retired officers to be installed are Lt. Col. Clyde M. Thornhill, president; Maj. Frank J. Stonebraker, 1st vice-pres.; Col. Lonnie M. Johnson (USAF), 2nd vice pres., Maj. John H. Price, 3rd vice pres.; CWO Joseph A. Hampton, secretary - treasurer; CWO Samuel E. McGarvey, assistant secretary; and Lt. Col. Frank J. Campbell, legal counsel. Col. Raymond S. Holtzman (Ret), will be the installing officer.

A social period will be held from 7:15 to 8 p.m., followed by a dinner and installation of the new officers. Reservations may be made by telephoning CWO Helle, the chapter president, at 545-3313 during the daytime, or MU 9-6608 evenings, until noon on Monday. The ladies are invited.

Engineers Plan For Celebration

The men of the 577th Engineer Battalion (Construction) will observe their unit's organization day Aug. 25, with activities beginning at 8.15 a.m.

Competition will be held in various engineer type games, plus in drill and races.

Capt. Lieto P. DiPietro is commander of the battalion.

game which has brought him the number 14 ranking in the country, Perry continually placed beautiful backhand shots down the line past his opponent and was devastating as the net.

The final match in the morning saw the Army's Sp5 Leslie Dodson race to a 6-2, 6-3 victory over AP Donald Rubell of Shephard Air Force Base, Tex., with Rubell as he slowed his game down in the first set and then won four straight games after the score was tied at 2-2. In the second set it was almost the same story as he pulled away after a close start.

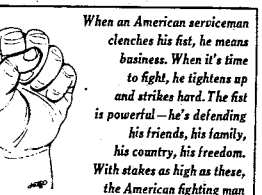
The Navy team drew a bye and did not play.

Complete results of all interservice tennis play will be carried in next week's Bayonet.

Sgt. Nettles Jungle War Class Grad

MSgt. James E. Nettles, formerly platoon sergeant of the Construction Platoon, Company D, 806th Engineer Battalion, recently returned from the Canal Zone where he completed a three-week course in jungle warfare.

Sgt. Nettles was schooled in day and night navigation, obstacles and methods for overcoming them, and general jungle survival.



His new assignment is with the S-3 section of the battalion where he will be operations sergeant.

Retirees With U.S. Peace Corps Won't Lose Pay

WASHINGTON (AFPS)—The Peace Corps has assured retired service people who are considering joining its ranks that they will suffer no loss of their retirement pay.

However, if they sign up for service with the Corps, such pay will be banked for them in the United States. Corps volunteers, who receive $75 a month, are expected to conform to the economic standards of the people with whom they work.

Know the Code

When an American serviceman clenches his fist, he means business. When it's time to fight, he tightens up and strikes hard. The fist is powerful—he's defending his friends, his family, his country, his freedom. With stakes as high as these, the American fighting man doesn't give up until he wins.

CODE OF CONDUCT: 1. I am an American fighting man. I serve in the forces which guard my country and our way of life. I am prepared to give my life in their defense.

350 Human Research Experts Will Confer Here

It was announced Wednesday by Gen. Herbert B. Powell, commanding general, U.S. Continental Army Command (USCONARC), that Fort Benning will play host to approximately 350 of the nation's leading experts in human engineering research.

This group will gather here Oct. 16 to 19 for the eighth Army Human Factors Engineering Conference.

Theme of the conference is "The Infantryman —Invincibility on the Battlefield." Dr. Lynn E. Baker, chief assistant on human factors to the Office of the Chief of Research and Development, will serve as general chairman.

The results of 25 human research projects will be presented during the three-day meeting.

Maj. Gen. Ben Harrell, commanding general of The Infantry Center and commandant of The Infantry School, will officially open the meeting with a welcoming address October 17.

He will be followed by the keynote speaker, Lt. Gen. John P. Daley, commanding general of the Army Combat Developments Command, Fort Belvoir, Va.

That afternoon the first day of sessions on research papers will begin with two running concurrently.

One of the sessions is entitled "Design for Infantryman" and papers to be presented include "Evaluating Proficiency in the Use and Maintenance of Infantry Weapons" by Thomas F. Nichols and Joseph S. Ward of the Army Infantry Research Unit, Fort Benning, and "User Review of Camouflage for the Individual Combat Soldier" by A. H. Humphries and David L. Gee of the Army Engineer Research and Development Laboratories, Fort Belvoir.

The other, "Design for Combat Support," includes papers on "An Experiment in Quartermaster Corps Systems Research" by a representative of the Army Quartermaster and Engineer Command, Natick, Mass., and "Effects of Atmospheric Noise Level and Work Methods on Radio Telephone Message Transcription" by Anthony E. Castelnovo.

Papers in the former include such topics as "The Assessment of Human Factors in Land Navigational Ability" by Theodore R. Powers of the Human Research Unit at Fort Benning, and "Limb Sensitivity to Wire Barriers" by Paul S. Strauss, Gino R. DeTogni and G. Paul Bessey of the Human Factors Unit, Picatinny Arsenal, Dover, N.J.

The latter session will hear papers on "The Rhesus Monkey in Hearing Loss Research" by John J. Romba of the Army Ordnance Human Engineering Laboratories, Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md., and "Summary of the Problem" by Dr. Aram Glorig, director of research, American Academy of Opthamology and Otolaryngology, Los Angeles.

The session will also include papers by Meredith P. Crawford, director, Human Resources Research Office, George Washington University, Washington, D.C., on "The Engineering of Training" and Lee W. Gregg of the Carnegie Institute of Technology and Flight Safety Foundation, on "Computer Simulation in Human Factors Research."

The conference will close with a report from the Army Human Factors Engineering Committee, Office of the Chief of Research and Development.

★ Fleeting Targets Await Shooters in International ★

By Sp4 Ron Clarion

Running deer and zooming clay pigeons are but a few of the targets at which marksmen will be aiming during the Second Annual Armed Forces International Shooting Competition set to open here Monday.

Some 150 of the Nation's top military marksmen will be on hand for the competition which will conclude Sept. 9.

Match officials commented this week on the variety of events planned to test the eyes and reflexes of competitors.

"On the word 'pull,' a 'clay pigeon' about the size of an ordinary saucer is flung into the air from a ground-level house some 20 feet in front of the firing line," Maj. Robert A. Gachter, officer-in-charge of the Army's Skeet and Trap Team, explained when asked about the International Trap competition.

Moves 115 MPH

The "shotgunner" knows the bird is traveling almost 115 miles an hour but the height and angle of the bird is a complete mystery, the major continued.

"Bang" and another "bang" — The firer, if he misses his first shot, may shoot again and still receive the same credit for hitting the "bird."

"After shooting at his target," Maj. Gacher went on, "the shooter moves to the next point on the five-point course, rotating after each shot."

First Lt. James Clark, U. S. Olympic team member who won fourth place in the 1960 Olympic Trap shoot, will be a heavy favorite in this event, Maj. Gacher claims.

An eight-point half moon course with a high-ejecting house on the left and a low-ejecting house on the right is the International Skeet course.

Maj. Gacher explained, the shooter here calls for his target which comes instantly or up to three seconds after call. The clay bird is flung directly parallel with the firer's position moving at 60 miles an hour. The marks-

Service Vote Drive Seen in Full Swing As Deadline Nears

WASHINGTON (AFPS)—The effort to get out the service vote in the November elections has moved into high gear.

The Defense Department announced that Sept. 25 has been set as the final date for delivery of the Standard Form 76 to all eligible voters both in the United States and overseas.

The September deadline gives voters about 42 days in advance of elections to fill in their cards and mail them. Early mailing will give state voting officers time to honor all cards.

The states in general, have one criticism of the voting card. Under item 5, most voters do not name their county of residence simply because the card does not ask for it. To be sure, include the county along with state and voting precinct.

Here are a few "don'ts" listed as vital in using Form 76:

Don't send in more than one card. Give the state a chance to send you a ballot. Two cards only cause confusion.

Don't write or print illegibly. Names and addresses that cannot be read are the most common error in filling out the cards.

Don't use one card for two people. Sometimes a serviceman and his wife use the same card. This confuses voting officials and delays return of the ballot.

Don't fill in improperly. In many cases the state must write back to an individual for verification of only one fact. Often the time lag causes the vote to be thrown out because it is late.

Don't wait to fill out and mail the card. Time will be short at best—get it in the mail as soon as possible.

Gen. Harrell To Open Fund Drive Today

A kick-off ceremony today will launch the annual Fort Benning Community Activities Association Fund Drive.

The 9 a.m. ceremony in Theater No. 1 will feature Maj. Gen. Ben Harrell, commanding general of The Infantry Center, as guest speaker.

Maj. Gen. Charles H. Chase, commanding general of the 2nd Infantry Division, also will be present.

Drive chairman, Col. Richard W. Keyes, commander of the 1st Infantry Brigade, will preside over the meeting.

Scheduled to attend are team captains and key men. A question and answer period will be conducted by the fund drive project officer, Maj. Jean P. Doerr, commander of the 1st Battalion, Infantry Center Troop Command.

During the drive, which continues through Nov. 9, team captains from each command, staff section of The Infantry Center and The Infantry School will, through their key men, canvass their personnel to obtain their goal; 100 per cent participation.

A guide line for contributions will be available for per-

Army Shooters Take Five Individual Titles

WILL REPRESENT U.S. IN CISM . . . All of the members of the U.S. 1962 CISM (Conseil Internationale du Sports Militaire) Rifle and Pistol Team are from the Marksmanship Training Unit. They will defend the U. S. team title at Buenos Aires, Argentina, Monday through Sept. 6, against service competitors from CISM nations. Seated (L to R) are Sgt. Milton Nagrone, SSgt. James McNally, SSgt. Hershel Anderson. Col. John Kahoilua, Col. Robin Montgomery, chief of delegation, CWO Oscar Montgomery and CWO Weinmeister hold the silver inlaid, 17th century matchlock pistols, symbolic of victory in the CISM matches. Middle row: MSgt. Weinmaster, team captain, SFC Bobby Harris. Back row: 1st Lt. Thurston Banks, SSgt. George Snavely, 2nd Lt. Charles Feuerbacher, Capt. Phillip Cannella Jr., MSgt. Herbert Roberts.

Slim Margin Gives Marine Rifle Crown

By SSgt. Lee LaCombe

CAMP PERRY, Ohio — A 23-year-old Marine Corps Sergeant, David A. Luke, won the National Service Rifle championship here Tuesday with a seven-match total of 790-69V out of a possible 800 points.

It was a narrow victory for the Marine with two soldiers from the Army Marksmanship Training Unit pressing closely.

SSgt. Hory P. Edwards posted the same total score of 790 but was beaten by two v-ring shots. The v-ring is a smaller circle within the bull's eye used to break ties.

Trailing the two leaders by only a single point was Army SFC Cecil L. Stevens.

Double Winner

Sgt. Stevens was the only one of the nearly 2,500 competitors to win two fired matches at the 1962 High Power Rifle Championships.

He captured the Air Force Cup match with a 100-19V score and later added the famous Leach Cup Trophy match with a 100x100 point effort.

With only one match remaining to be fired, Stevens had taken over the lead in the race for individual honors with a 640-point total out of a possible 650. He supplanted Marine Cpl. Robert T. Strawman who led the field at the end of four matches with an aggregate of 447 out of a possible 450 points.

In addition to Stevens' pair man has less than one second to fire.

To make it even more difficult, a doubles match is fired, which entails shooting at two targets at the same time, one bird from each house.

The Air Force Marksmanship Training Unit team of Lackland Air Force Base, Tex., which won the 1962 World Skeet team championship at Montreal, Canada, in August with a phenomenal record-breaking 1246 out of a possible 1250 score, promises to be a tough competitor for the Army's defending International championship team, Maj. Gacher predicts.

The Army has such greats as 1st Lt. Gordon B. Horner, 1956 World American Skeet Champion, and SFC Kenneth Gilbert, winner of the 1962 Individual World Skeet Championship at Montreal, Canada.

At 15 miles an hour across an opening of some 25 yards, a life size silhouette of a "running deer" is fired on from 100 meters, SFC Loyd G. Crow Jr., explained, when asked about the Running Deer Matches.

Sgt. Crow also mentioned the Running Deer doubles which are identical to the singles, except there are two deer to shoot instead of one.

Sgt. Crow, the World Running Deer Singles Champion, said a strong team from every service is expected.

Major world shoots toward which the military marksmen are working are the Cairo meet this year, the 1963 Pan-American Games in Brazil and the 1964 Olympic Games in Tokyo.

of victories, Army riflemen also captured three other events.

Coast Guard Trophy

SFC Vernon L. Read won the Coast Guard Trophy with a 100-13V mark and Sgt. Willie D. Jordan was the winner in the Navy Cup Match with a 100-9v score. Both are from MTU.

Army SFC Roger E. Stanley, Fort Campbell, Ky., took the Marine Corps Cup match when he set a new national match record with a score of 100-14V.

Sgt. Luke won only one event on his way to this year's championship and that was the President's Match (which did not count in the individual aggregate) with a score of 149-10V. Possible in the match was 150 points.

Only individual-fired matches not won by the Army experts were three bolt rifle events and these were all taken by civilian shooters.

Earl H. Burton, Vacaville, Calif., won the Bolt Rifle Championship with an aggregate of 780 and also the Coast Artillery Match with a 100-11V score.

Phillip J. Roe, Toledo, Ohio, took the Scott Trophy match with 100-10V and Ray Steele, Denver, Colo., captured the Crowell Trophy with 100-19V.

Army Gets New Special Staff Group

WASHINGTON (ANS) —A new Army special staff agency, the Office of Support Services, recently became operational.

The new agency is charged with operation of the National Cemetery system and supervision of Army food service.

In operating the Cemetery system, the Office administers and maintains 85 National Cemeteries under Army jurisdiction.

In its food service role, the Office of Support Services is responsible for administration of the Army food program, worldwide, including staff supervision over 3,768 Army messes.

New Chute Is Designed

Van Nuys, Calif. (AFPS) — A new parachute called the Glidesail, which the wearer can guide in direction and angle of glide, is being developed here by the Northrop Corporation's Ventura Division for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Manned Spacecraft Center.

Examinations To Continue For Students

Physical examinations for military dependents attending off-post schools for the first time this fall will continue Monday and Tuesday at the Physical Examination Section, Building 396 (Old Hospital Headquarters).

Boys with last names beginning with letters N through S will be examined at 8 a.m. Monday, while boys with last names beginning with letters T through Z will be examined at 10 a.m.

Girls with last names beginning with letters N through S will be examined at 8 a.m. Tuesday; letters T through Z at 10 a.m. Tuesday.

One parent must accompany a child under 10 years of age, and examinees are urged to report promptly at the designated hours.

Immunization records must accompany children when they report for examinations. Children found in need of additional immunizations will be given these at the Immunization Clinic following their examinations.

The examination will include a urine test. Each child should bring a urine specimen of approximately four ounces. The specimen should be collected in any type of clean glass bottle prior to leaving home and the bottle should be labeled with the child's name.

The Dependent's Immunization Clinic, Bldg. 396, will be closed during the morning hours Monday and Tuesday due to the physical examinations for dependent children.

52nd OC Company 'Turns Blue'

Members of the 52nd OC Company, 5th Student Battalion, The Student Brigade, celebrated their reaching of senior status recently with "Blue Day" Exercises.

The day marked the beginning of the final phase of their 26 weeks of training.

"Blue Day," so named because the candidates wear new Infantry blue shoulder boards and helmet liners, after the reading of a General Order, proclaiming the 52nd Company a Senior Officer Candidate School Company, is only second in importance to graduation in the minds of the cadets. At this stage of training the senior candidates do not as yet have officer privileges, but command the same respect from their junior classmen, as do commissioned officers.

Highlight of the day's activities, the Senior Status Review, was held at French Field.

The traditional parade was reviewed by Brig. Gen. Royal Reynolds Jr., assistant commandant of The Infantry School.

On the evening of "Blue Day," the 52nd Company held its 18th Week Party at Ozan Mess. Honored Guests at the formal reception and dance were Gen. and Mrs. Reynolds, Lt. Col. and Mrs. Vern L. Joseph, 2nd Student Battalion commander, Lt. Col. and Mrs. George P. McLindon, 5th Student Battalion commander and Capt. and Mrs. Edward J. Linson, 52nd Company, commanding officer.

Officers May Earn Diplomas

In line with the Army's educational goal of attainment of a college degree for commissioned officers, a plan has been devised for officers to complete their college education while in the Army.

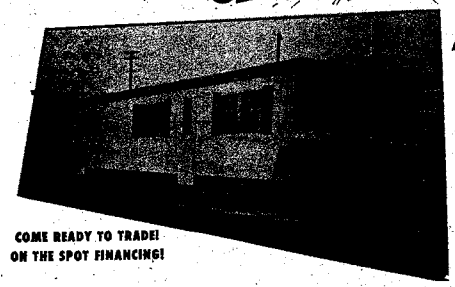
An officer who lacks only 36 semester hours for a degree can make application for temporary duty assignment on full pay allowances to attend an accredited civilian college or university for a period not to exceed 12 months in order to complete degree requirements.

Officers who may be eligible under the final semester plan are invited to visit the Army Education Center, Building 2512.

Application must be made 150 days before the beginning of the semester the applicant desires to attend. The application must be accompanied by a transcript of college credits and a letter of acceptance from the college or university concerned.

Officers not within 36 semester hours of college completion are urged to consult the education advisor in order to plan a program that will eventually make him eligible for the final semester plan.

Correction



News reports from the 29th Infantry, 1st Infantry Brigade, inadvertantly listed Lt. Col. James E. Stacy, new deputy battle group commander, as holding the rank of colonel in the Aug. 17 edition of The Bayonet.

In the same issue the 29th Infantry was listed as the 9th Infantry in stories concerning the 26th Infantry Platoon (Scout Dog) and the brigade's blood drive.

'What You Can Do--' Here's Special Case

In the year and a half that has elapsed since President Kennedy delivered his inaugural address, much has been said and written about his celebrated exhortation to his fellow Americans: "Ask not what your country can do for you—ask what you can do for your country."

That eloquent call for "high standards of strength and sacrifice" has been variously interpreted, and one interpretation certainly inspired a recent story in the news concerning a New York jeweler named William Berns.

Mr. Berns, who died recently, was an army enlistee in WWII. A Scot by birth, he left a will naming "the Treasurer of the United States of America" as beneficiary of his estate of $250,000, "to be used and applied for the general governmental purposes of the United States." The estate will go to the Treasury on the death of Mr. Berns' mother.

What prompted this unusual bequest? Mr. Berns' will gives the answer. "I make this bequest," he wrote, "in appreciation of the freedom and liberty afforded in this country to all citizens, irrespective of race, creed or color."

This is, to be sure, a highly special case of one American's response to the President's call. Very few of us in the Armed Forces could follow Mr. Berns' example even if we were so disposed. But what is interesting about his bequest is that it was made by a naturalized citizen who did not take for granted, as some of us do, the "freedom and liberty" we enjoy.

He did not, obviously — again as some of us do — regard the Treasury as a tax-hungry behemoth with an insatiable appetite for the money we can earn. In the astronomical area of government revenue Mr. Berns' quarter of a million dollars is, of course, a drop in the bucket, but the patriotic devotion that prompted it is something to think about, especially when tax time rolls around. Liberty and Communism

Stalin's 'Peaceful Coexistence'

"The government of the U.S.S.R believes that in spite of differences in economic systems and ideologies, the coexistence of these systems and the peaceful settlement of differences between the U.S.S.R and the U.S.A. are not only possible, but absolutely necessary in the interest of universal peace."

With these words Stalin launched his "peaceful coexistence" campaign designed to hamper the rearming of democratic countries to prepare to resist Communist aggression. At this time, the Kremlin was preparing Communist North Korea for the attack on the Republic of Korea which came in June 1950.

Peaceful coexistence is the official line of the Soviet Communist Party on which, with the development of weapons of mass destruction, Nikita Khrushchev has placed increased emphasis.

The statement issued by the conference of representatives of world Communist Parties held in Moscow in November 1960 brands the United States as "the chief imperialist country of today," and bluntly says that "it has become the enemy of the peoples of the whole world" because of its "policy of aggression and war." Nevertheless, the Communists plugged "peaceful coexistence" with the imperialists as the only acceptable alternative to nuclear war.

But the statement makes clear that in Communist language "peaceful coexistence" does not mean (as many non-Communists would like to believe) a policy of "live-and-let-live." It means an intensified struggle for the victory of communism over the whole world. To Communists "peaceful coexistence" means the peaceful transition of capitalism to communism.

Communists often refer to the present system of rule in Communist countries as "socialism," which in their dictionary means the stage preceding the final state of true communism.

Communist "socialism" should not be confused with Western parliamentary socialism as advocated by Socialist or Labor parties in Western Europe, where in a few countries they hold power.

Red 'Youth Festival' One Whopping Flop

The Russians are great showmen. They've proved it with such productions as the Moscow State Circus and the 22d Congress of the Communist Party. But somebody goofed for sure in staging the recent World Youth Festival at Helsinki.

Finland, Soviet Russia's small neighbor, didn't want to host the thing in the first place. As a "neutral" nation living is the shadow of the Russian bear, she didn't have much choice. Finnish students, however, took it upon themselves to express the feeling government official probably shared in private. The students' demonstrations turned the Red clambake—said to have cost the Soviets a whopping $35 million—into a shambles, a flop.

And it wasn't only the hostile young Finns who made the thing a fiasco. The various delegations, bickering and complaining, did their share. They weren't all Communists, of course. Many made the trip just out of curiosity, and among the 600 Americans on the scene there were vigorous spokesmen to scoff at the Red denunciations of Western "capitalism, imperialsim and colonialism."

Moscow probably will think twice before doing a repeat of this dismal spectacle marked by riots, walkouts and defections. Probably the only people who enjoyed the melee were those East German delegates who managed to escape to the West.—(AFPS)

CHAPLAIN'S CORNER

God, Country, Neighbor

By Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Edward A. Curran

Much has already been said, many words spoken, more written, concerning man's relation to God, his country, his neighbor.

Sound advice has been freely given, based on experience, given only that others, especially the youth, may avoid mistakes made in the past.

The old battle cry rings loud and clear, you lived your life, please allow me to live mine.

I suppose we have all, at least in thought have said that, only to learn to our sorrow we should have followed the sound judgment of our elders.

Our relation to God, every man must know he is entirely dependent on the Creator. All have heard the Commandment, "Love God above all things". Knowing does not suffice, we must love, and true love never offends.

Our Country. Are we good citizens, do we obey all the laws? Do we know the laws? Do we vote according to sound judgment, pay taxes, take an active part in community affairs? Or, are we followers instead of a leader. A follower is a person that will violate traffic regulations, cheat on taxes, fail to vote for the man or women he believes to be best qualified, in other words a do nothing, a don't bother me type.

Our neighbor. Do you recall God saying, "I give you a new Commandment — Love thy neighbor as thyself". Naturally it is permitted to condemn certain acts people do, even punish them for these acts but it is not permitted to hate the person.

Let us be serious, ask ourselves, do we love God, country and neighbor?

SURGEON SAYS

Watch Blood Pressure

By Lt. Col. James A. Ewart, MC
Chief, Cardiology Service, MAH

"Hypertensive vascular disease" is the medical term applied to a sustained, significantly elevated blood pressure. Everyone has transient elevations of blood pressure following stresses, such as anger, acute anxiety, or strenuous physical exertion. It is only when the blood pressure remains elevated most of the time that vascular changes occur.

The exact incidence of hypertensive vascular disease is difficult to determine. It is estimated that over 20 million adults in the United States have elevated blood pressures. U. S. Census Bureau statistics indicate that approximately 30 percent of deaths were due to, or contributed to by hypertension."

"Hypertensive vascular disease" is not a single disease entity, but many separate conditions resulting in a sustained elevation of the blood pressure with subsequent blood vessel damage.

Various causes of hypertension have been isolated. With the identification of each, treatment for that type of hypertension becomes more effective. For this reason each individual with a significantly elevated blood pressure must be thoroughly evaluated and if possible the type of hypertension determined.

A number of surgically correctable causes for hypertension have been isolated. Examples of these are: a narrowing of the aorta, a tumor of the adrenal gland and various conditions causing narrowing of the artery to the kidney. If these lesions are found early, before generalized vascular damage is present, the hypertension may be cured by surgery.

Many patients with hypertension have diseases of the kidneys, such as pyelonephritis or glomerulonephritis.

The majority of patients with hypertension have no demonstrable causes, and are classified as "essential."

Many factors are probably contributory. Dr. Irvine Page, director of the Division of Research of the Cleveland Clinic, has proposed a "mosaic theory" of hypertension which suggests that the height of the blood pressure, and the tissue perfusion by blood, are dependent upon many variables.

A few of these are: the volume of the vascular system, the volume of blood present, the reactivity, elasticity and caliber of the blood vessels, the viscosity of the blood, the cardiac (heart) output, and central nervous system impulses. Different factors and combinations of factors are important in different individuals.

Thirty years ago physicians questioned the desirability of lowering blood pressure, lest the perfusion of the heart, brain, kidneys and other vital organs be compromised. Ten years ago drugs which were available for the reduction of blood pressure caused such undesirable side effects (other than lowering blood pressure) that many

Infantry's Past Traced at Museum

By SP4 Bruce N. Yuffee

The purpose of the U. S. Army Infantry Museum is to provide educational and recreational facilities for military personnel, their dependents and civilians. In addition, the museum serves as a repository for Infantry documents and equipment that depicts the proud heritage of the Army Infantry.

The Infantry Museum first opened its doors in October, 1959. Since its inception, the museum has had to depend exclusively on items loaned and donated. However, many more items which might have been obtained, unfortunately, have remained out of reach.

The museum operates almost completely under a non-appropriated fund. For this reason, display materials that could have been utilized for exhibits have remained unobtainable. Due to this ever present problem of not having the necessary funds to procure needed materials, The Infantry Museum Society has evolved.

By increasing the membership of The Infantry Museum Society, the funds received from the lifetime memberships, which are one dollar per individual, will make it possible for additional Infantry relics, souvenirs and momentos.

In furthering the efforts to increase active interest and membership in the museum, The Student Brigade has scheduled guided tours of the museum as part of the brigade's troop information program. TSB personnel, when touring the museum, are given an orientation as to its mission.

Throughout the tour, as well as receiving information on the displays and exhibits, additional information is provided on the care and maintenance of items. In furnishing not only information on the materials displayed, but background information, an overall picture of the entire operation is established.

Among the more pressing problems is the need for display mannequins, floor and wall cases and battle scenes for the mounting donations provided the museum. Such items are usually quite costly, and require an extensive amount of care, but have proven to be the more popular of attractions in other museums.

The continued support of the Infantry Museum Society, through lifetime memberships, will contribute to making this, the U. S. Army Infantry Museum, the best branch type museum of its kind.

School of Dance Moved To New Building on Post

The School of Dance, sponsored by the Woman's Club, has been moved to a new location for the coming year's activities. The new location is at Building A-15, on Baltzell Ave.

The building was recently redecorated in ballet pink and white. It will be open for inspection Aug. 27 and 28.

Registration for lessons at the dance school will be held at Building A-15 on Aug. 27 and 28. This is a change in procedure from the last few years. Interested parents will not be able to register their children at the post schools.

Mrs. Margaret LaForrest, new instructor of the dance school, plans to add lessons in International Folk Dancing in the classical ballet classes. Her interest in folk dancing stems from her pre-war training in Europe.

Classes will be scheduled for all ages from four years and up, including a ladies' ballet class.

Mrs. James S. Miles has been named the new chairman of the School of Dance by the Woman's Club. Further information about the school may be gained by calling her at 545-3369.

Local Orchestra To Present Last Outdoor Concert

Mrs. Marion Page, president of the Columbus Symphony Guild, has announced that the Columbus Symphony Orchestra will present its second and final outdoor pops concert of the season at Weracoba Park in Columbus. The concert is scheduled to begin at 8 p.m. on Thursday night, Aug. 30.

The orchestra, conducted by Robert M. Barr, will offer a program consisting chiefly of selections in a light vein, including works of Sigmund and Cole Porter.

There will be no charge for admission.

Post Girl Scout Fall Registration Set Next Week

All Fort Benning girls who are Girl Scouts or wish to become Girl Scouts must register this fall. Registration will take place at the same time registration is made for post schools on Aug. 27 and 28.

Application forms will be available at the school and also at YAC. This registration applies to all girls whether they are presently enrolled in a troop or wish to be placed in a troop.

Senior scouts may make application at Faith School at the time they pick up their approval slips for the Muscogee County Schools.

Woman's Club Diary

Less than two weeks until school begins, and there are still openings for your three and four-year-olds in the Pre-Kindergarten School.

Registration will be held today from 9 a.m. through 4 p.m. at the school, Building 322, behind the old hospital. If you haven't seen this lovely new home of the school, drop in today or any morning this week and chat with Mrs. Jack Murray, the principal.

School begins Sept. 4, and in order to set up carpools, the cutoff for registration is August 28. So, if you want your toddler to start school promptly, register now! Call Mrs. Murray at 545-2217, or 545-4628 for further information.

The School of Dance is now accepting registrations for the fall term. Classes in classical ballet and tap are available for beginners and advanced students, age four and up.

Registrations will be taken at the dance school, Building A-15, on Aug. 27 and 28. There will also be a ladies ballet class for interested mothers.

For further information please call the director, Mrs. Margaret LaForrest, MU 9-9663 or Mrs. John Bohen, 545-3316.

THEY'RE EAGER—HE'S OLD PRO
Chaplain Estes Talks With New Jumpers

Silent Prayer Precedes 'Go' Signal for Chaplain Wearing Airborne Wings

By Ida C. Evans

An airborne chaplain might well paraphrase a familiar hymn to read "And He walks with me and He 'jumps' with me."

Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Arthur J. Estes has bowed his head in silent prayer just before exiting the aircraft on each of his 87 jumps.

Frequently jumping with members of an Infantry School airborne class who are about to make their first jump, the chaplain's prayer is not for himself, alone.

"I like to jump with a new class," he said. "I am usually first man out in the lead plane, jumping as a turbulence tester, or 'wind dum; my'. That means, I am not to direct my descent by slipping (guiding) but just let my parachute drift down. By watching my jump, decisions can be made as to just where to release the students in order for them to land on the drop zone."

At Wind's Mercy

First man out and more or less at the mercy of the wind, Chaplain Estes said the few moments in the air are filled with mental activity.

He watches the field, the performance of his equipment and his own landing technique.

The chaplain said that he remembers very little about his first three jumps. The training is so thorough that a student reacts automatically, he added.

"It was on my fourth jump that I became aware of myself as an individual in the air suspended between earth and sky," Chaplain Estes recalled. "That awareness was as sudden as my parachute's opening shock, for my heel was caught in a riser, bringing one foot up to the level of my head."

"I'll never forget my sixth jump," he continued. "I had completed parachute training at Fort Benning and was back at Fort Campbell (Ky.) about to participate in a mass jump involving nine planes."

Great Pressure

"Although I was lost in the crowd, I felt there was great pressure on me," Chaplain Estes said. "There was the usual feeling that the men were looking to me as a chaplain to set an example. To this was added a new feeling that I must be careful not to embarrass the Airborne."

By his 15th jump, the chaplain had become accustomed to his new role of "jumping chaplain" and found himself enjoying it.

He likes to move about among the members of a new class as they don their parachutes to make the first jump.

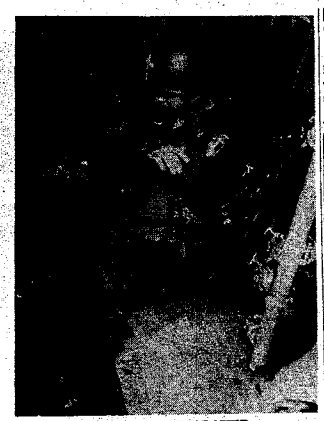
"The men are ready for that first time," he said. "Airborne training naturally attracts men of great pride aod determination. Added to that, it is the excellent training, both physical and psychological, that prepares a man for his first jump."

Any fear of jumping has already been met and conquered at the 34-foot training tower, Chaplain Estes said.

The chaplain who is closest to his men is the airborne chaplain, he said.

"Although I have not been in combat since I earned my wings, I am convinced that no other chaplain shares the dangers of the battle area as does the airborne chaplain," he continued.

There are three levels of a military parachutist. After five jumps, the student becomes a parachutist; after 30 jumps and certain requirements, a Senior Parachutist, and after 65 jumps and still other requirements, a Master Parachutist.



Chaplain Estes is a Master Parachutist. He is working toward his 100th jump which will entitle him to gold wings presented by the Airborne Association. The prized emblem is designed to be worn on a civilian suit.

Chaplain Estes has served as chaplain of the 24th Infantry Division, the 11th Airborne Division and the 101st Airborne Division. Since Feb. 15, 1960, he has been chaplain of The Infantry School Student Brigade.

He was in Korea during hostilities there, assigned to the 7th Infantry Division. He has served overseas 55 months.

Among his awards and decorations are a Bronze Star Medal and an Army Commendation Medal.

A qualified magician, Chaplain Estes is a member of the International Brotherhood of Magicians, Magischer Zircle of Munich, Germany, Georgia Magic Club and the Fellowship of Christian Magicians.

Col. Leasure Is Assigned To TIS Post

Lt. Col. Dan S. Leasure, former chief of the Engineer Branch, Military Assistance Advisory Group in Laos, has joined the Operations Office of The Infantry School.

Col. Leasure will assume duties as assistant to the operations officer and will be assigned to the Special Activities Section.

Col. Leasure was graduated from Western High School in Washington, D. C., and attended the University of Virginia at Charlottesville. After working as a construction engineer's assistant, he entered the Army in January, 1941.

After serving as an enlisted man for about a year, Col. Leasure attended the Engineer Officer Candidate School and was commissioned at Fort Belvoir, Va., June 24, 1942.

As commander of Company A, 202nd Combat Engineer Battalion from June, 1943, to November, 1945, the colonel participated in campaigns in northern France, through Central Europe, over the Rhineland and the Ardennes.

During the Korean conflict, he commanded a company of the 43rd Construction Engineer Battalion in Japan, whose mission was to maintain U. S. airstrips in that country.

Col. Leasure received the Bronze Star Medal for his service in Europe during World War II.

Col. and Mrs. Leasure have three daughters, Jo Anne, 19; Kathy, 15, and Michelle, 5.

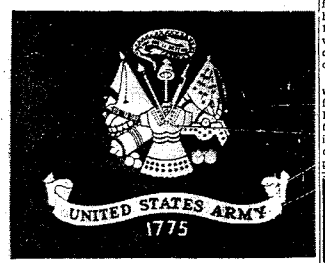
Sergeant, 38, Claims Feat; 'In' 25 Years

EIELSON AFB, Alaska (AFPS) —Take the sergeant's age — he's 38 — and subtract his age when entering the service — 13. You come up with 25.

That would make SMSgt. William J. Cleary the youngest E-8 with the most time in service in the Air Force. For how many men begin their military careers at the tender age of 12?

Cleary did—in 1937 at Ft. Brown, Tex. He joined the 16th U. S. Cavalry after gorging himself on bananas and water to tip the scales at the 100-pound minimum weight and standing on tip-toes to reach the required five feet, four inches.



Cleary, now NCOIC of Eielson's Security and Law Enforcement Section, says that he kept his secret for the next 12 years in which he served with the Cavalry on the Mexican border and saw WWII combat in Europe.

The ruse came to light only when he decided in 1949 to go from the Army into the Air Force when the latter was established as a separate service. While the military doesn't condone enlistment under false pretense, officials took the view that Cleary's good record as a soldier more than atoned for his youthful duplicity.

So he continued to go up the ladder with the Air Force until today he's a long way from the $18.75 per month and 10 cents a day clothing allowance he drew as a private.

This new Army field flag has been adopted by the Department of the Army for display by Military Assistance Advisory Groups, Missions, and other organizations not authorized the Army flag. The new flag will be the second highest ranking in the Army. It will have the same basic design as the Army flag but the colors will be reversed and battle streamers will not be authorized. It is estimated that the new flags will be available in nine months.

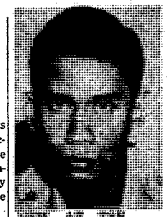
Sky Divers Perform Rare Feat



The first double baton pass during a free fall ever accomplished by members of the Fort Benning Sports Parachute Club was successfully completed recently by three of the club's skydivers.

Carrying the baton, a piece of wood about eight inches long, Sp5 Thomas Pride jumped from the plane at an altitude of 8,500 feet.

He was followed shortly by SSgt. Danny Byard who caught up with him at 6,500 feet and took the baton.

The third man, Sp5 John Ellis, who by manipulation of his arms and legs and body, controlled his rate of descent, watched the pass and as soon as it was complete, caught up with Byard, relieving him of the baton at 4,500 feet.

The maneuver, occurring more than two years after club members completed their first single pass, was done during practice sessions at Fryar Field, where the group meets each weekend.

UNITED STATES ARMY STRAC READY FORCE

What Realism!

Capturing of 'Neutrals' Impresses a Newsman

Editor's Note: The following article appeared in the August 14 issue of the Tampa Morning Tribune written by Ronald Soziana, Tribune staff Writer.

Anyone questioning the realism of Strike Command's Operation Swift Strike II can take a lesson from a Tampa officer, Lt. Jimmie Wilson, 211 W. Platt St., assistant information officer of the 2nd Infantry Division, Ft. Benning, Ga.

The 2nd Infantry has been assigned the role of an aggressor force in the massive operation involving 70,000, spread over 5,500 square miles of North and South Carolina.

Part of Lt. Wilson's job is escorting newsmen seeking stories about hometown soldiers, new weapons and the action.

Saturday, Lt. Wilson picked up a Tribune staffer; a reserve officer from Tampa, Maj. William Smith, assistant vice president of the First National Bank; and together with his own photographer and driver, headed for 2nd Division rear.

Starts Pleasantly Enough

The trip started pleasantly enough. The Red (Aggressor) Press Center is deep within its own territory. The jeep cruised unmolested down a South Carolina highway.

The day before the trip, the Blue Forces had dropped 1,200 members of the 101st Airborne Division into the area, but the Red forces seemed to have contained the famed "Screaming Eagles."

Lt. Wilson laughed at one point when his jeep sped past a Blue force jeep ill-concealed alongside the road.

"Its a good thing I am a press escort, or we could have been captured," he joked.

Around the next turn in the highway, Lt. Wilson's smile disappeared.

The jeep was suddenly the center of attention for 20 to 30 members of the 101st.

From Nowhere

Men appeared from seemingly nowhere and concentrated a heavy fire of blank cartridges from automatic weapons on the vehicle.

An umpire approached Lt. Wilson and advised him he and his party had been captured by the Blue forces.

Lt. Wilson and Maj. Smith smiled to show they accepted the spirit of the maneuver and nonchalantly displayed the Red Press Center passes.

Maj. Smith was fortunate. He was wearing his regular military uniform. Lt. Wilson was dressed in the garb of the aggressor army.

He had a peculiar ornament attached to his helmet and his jacket was adorned with the gaudy epaulets and insignias of the "enemy."

The officer of the 101st, commanding the roadblock, refused to release Lt. Wilson, his photographer and driver. The three men were ordered to lean forward with their hands on the jeep, while being searched.

They were then transported, under guard, to the command post of the 101st, where they were interrogated and threatened with confinement in the prisoner of war compound.

Maj. Smith pleaded for the release of the men, but the 101st was leary. Many troops were operating in the maneu-

Bravery Wins 87th Gutasuan 'Swamp' Award

By 87th Inf PIO

SWIFT STRIKE II provided many memorable experiences for members of the 87th Infantry but none more rewarding than a citation for bravery from the people of the fictitious country of Gutasu.

The citation was awarded to Specialist Four Dennis L. Hume, a headquarters section clerk.

Called the Flower of the Swamp, the coveted award (one to a battle group) was presented to Specialist Hume by battle group commander Colonel Ralph H. Hughett.

An exerpt from the text of the citation reads, "On the night of August 14th, while Specialist Hume was walking guard, a company of aggressors attacked the headquarters command post of the 87th Infantry. During the ensuing action, Specialist Hume rallied his troops to bring fire power upon the enemy, holding the enemy attack in check. While directing fire power of the enemy, he repeatedly went up and down the line placing men in strategic positions, encouraging them to stand fast until additional help arrived. His actions reflect great credit upon himself, his unit and the United States Army."

38th Trains With M-60 For Europe

By 38th Inf PIO

Some 60 machinegunners and assistant gunners of the 38th Infantry are undergoing a 30-hour period of instruction in the M-60 machinegun with the Machinegun Committee, Weapons Department, United States Army Infantry School.

The instruction is being held to throughly familiarize and qualify the gunners in the M-60, which is anticipated to be their basic weapon upon arrival overseas in October as the first 2nd Division unit moving to Europe under Rotaplan. The M-60 fires the standard NATO 7.62 millimeter round.

It is hoped all battle group personnel will be able to complete a nine-hour familarization period with the weapon prior to departure.

Getting into full swing next week will be familiarization training and qualification in Trainfire with the M-14 rifle, another of the Army's weapons expected to be issued to 38th Infantry troops in Europe.

SS II Panorama Unfolds at Last

To the individual soldier or airman participating in the recently concluded Exercise SWIFT STRIKE II, the over-all action must have been vague. The massive maneuver covered too much territory and involved too many persons for most to visualize completely. Actually, here is how the panorama unfolded:

Sunday, August 5 — Troops and equipment of the Army and Air Force begin converging on the Carolinas for Exercise SWIFT STRIKE II. The 70,000 men are under the command of General Paul D. Adams, commander in chief, U. S. Strike Command.

Monday, August 6—Residents of the peaceful little towns and villages all over North and South Carolina begin adjusting to "military occupation" and to the sight of troop convoys and military vehicles moving back and forth through the countryside. Local residents are puzzled by strange looking helmets, green shirts and vehicles bearing on their sides a green triangle within a circle, the symbol of aggressor forces of Gutasu. This can only be interpreted as a direct military threat to nearby pro-Western Renloa.

Tuesday, August 7 — Initial clashes between Renloan and Gutasuan patrols occur along the Lynches River. Extensive guerrilla activity begins also against Renloa, making an all-out offensive against this country a certainty within the next 24 hours. Towards the end of the day, troops of the Gutasuan III Corps move into tactical positions along the river border.

Wednesday, August 8—The Darlington County, S.C. Airport field is secured by 1,240 paratroopers of the 82nd Gutasuan Airborne Division. Uniting with elements of the 2nd Gutasuan Infantry Division that forded the Lynches River during the night, the combined Red force sweeps toward the capital city of Florence.

Thursday, August 9 — Florence, the capital of Renloa, is in the hands of Gutasuan forces, and the Renloan government requests military assistance from the U. S. The 5th U. S. Infantry Division is ferried into the area via MATS troop carriers. Meanwhile, advance elements of the Gutasuan III Corps cross the Pee Dee River.

Friday, August 10—The 101st Airborne Division drops from the skies into Gutasu territory. Renloan forces launch a counteroffensive to tie in with the air drop, capturing Shaw Air Force Base, S.C. Both sides employ nuclear weapons.

Saturday, August 11—101st Airborne Division continues to consolidate its gains in the Shaw AFB complex and attempts to link up with other Renloan forces and the 5th Infantry Division along the Pee Dee River.

Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, August 12-14—Peace talks are held between Gutasu and Renloa, but these talks break down and fighting is renewed Tuesday afternoon. Renloan forces blow up bridges crossing the Pee Dee River.

Wednesday and Thursday, August 15-16—Renloan Army forces move slowly northeastward across the Lynches River from its airhead in the Bishopville area. They encounter stiff resistance from Gutasuan ground forces. The 101st Airborne Division pushes northward to effect a junction with Renloan troops along the Pee Dee River line. A helicopter attack by the Gutasans against Renloan guerrillas and U. S. Special Forces backfires and results in the capture of a number of Gutasuan helicopters.

For an account of the last all-out battle of Exercise SWIFT STRIKE II see page 16 and the "Battle of Bishopville" story.

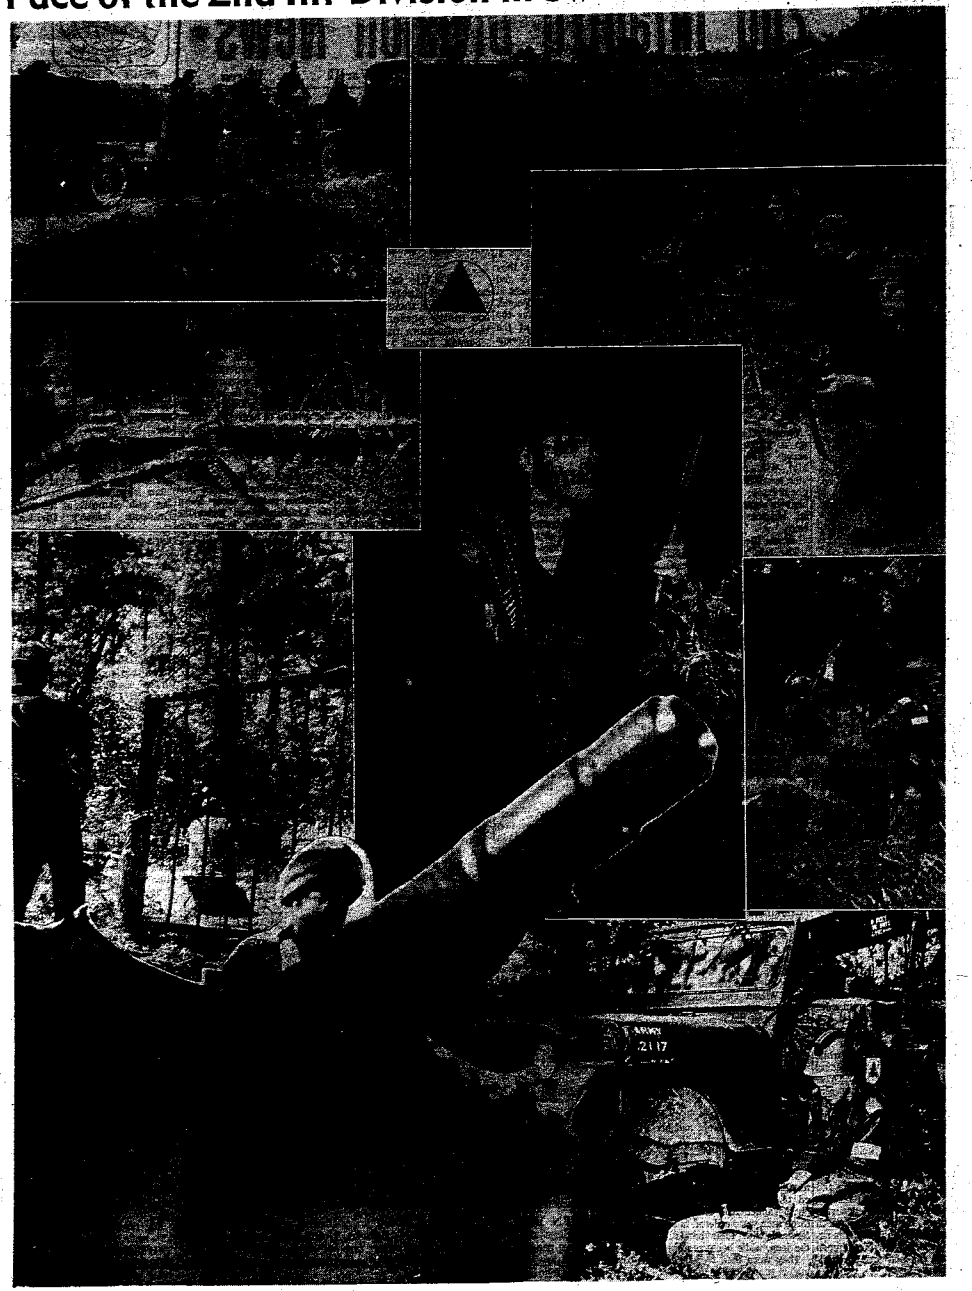
Learned

This Was No Game

By Peter Tatisheff

One basic fact about the present day U. S. soldier was reaffirmed by Exercise SWIFT STRIKE II: he is eager to fight and two weeks in the field observing tactical day and night maneuvers is no game. If anything, he is too eager to fight, as scores of umpiring officers and non-commissioned officers found out.

One woman doing a sudden two-week boom business in soft drinks from her country "super" grocery store summed up the civilian point of view amid gun fire that woke her up at all hours of the night and the convoys that tangled traffic outside her door:



"I don't know much about what's goin' on," she said. "Other people oughta see this too, people in big cities and other parts where they talk so much about war."

A soldier saw a civilian car parked by the side of the road near his command post location. He stopped to ask the driver if he needed any help. "No thanks," he replied. "I'm on my way home. A little ways back I got stopped by a roadblock, and my knees got to shaking so much I decided to rest. It brought back memories."

TEACHING
Vicki Morales

Youthful Dancer Instructs Ballet

The Fort Benning Ballet, sponsored by the 2nd Division Officers' Wives Club, has added a youthful but talented instructor to its teaching staff.

Miss Vicki Morales, daughter of Chief Warrant Officer (Ret.) and Mrs. Mariano Morales of Columbus, is instructing the beginner classes.

Began Early

Vicki, who is now 13 years old, began her ballet training as a toddler and has not only studied in various cities in this country but has also received instruction for three years in Germany.

Vicki also plays the piano and sings, but she plans a career as a professional dancer. She appeared in the 1961 Atlanta "Theater Under the Stars" production of the "King and I." Blanche Thebom of the Metropolitan Opera appeared as "Anna," the English school teacher.

Vicki is soloist for the Ballet Guild of Columbus and periodically participates in the Armed Services YMCA entertainment programs in Columbus.

She is presently working with the Fort Benning "Masquers" in preparation for the musical "Damn Yankees," which will open in mid-September. She will attend Baker High School this year as a freshman, where she plans to work with the high school choral and drama groups.

Registration is still open for all ages in the fall classes of the ballet school. For further information call Mrs. James S. Peabody at MU 9-1209 or Mrs. Rossie Gilmore at FA 3-3072.

Engagement-Calendar Book

Mrs. Harold Roeder Edits 2nd Div. O. W. C. Book

By Kaye Lee

The flurry of activity created recently by Mrs. Harold W. Roeder will be explained when the first copies of the 2nd Infantry Division Engagement-Calendar of 1963 are released.

The book, published by the 2nd Division Officers' Wives Club and edited by Mrs. Roeder, will have approximately 110 pages. It will not only feature a calendar and space to note daily engagements, but it will also highlight the histories of the 19 major units and eight smaller units in the 2nd Division.

Activities

Activities dating from October 1961 to such current events as the amphibious training at Little Creek, Virginia of this year will also be featured in the book. Pictures of many unit activities will be scattered throughout the publication.

The engagement - calendar book will be on sale beginning early in September. This book may well be the first one of its kind to be published about the 2nd Division.

Mrs. Roeder is no novice when it comes to publications of this type. When she and her husband, Captain Roeder, were stationed in Fulda, Germany, she helped publish two such works concerning the 14th Armored Cavalry Regiment. She was a general helper on one and editor of the other.

She has worked in advertising on both radio and television and was at one time a music critic for newspapers in the Akron and Cleveland, Ohio areas.

Journalism, Music

Besides her abilities in the field of journalism, Mrs. Roeder also has considerable talent in the field of music. She conducts piano and voice lessons privately, and has been a soloist at many civic and church functions.

She studied at the Baldwin-Wallace Conservatory of Music, Cleveland, Ohio and later transferred to Ohio State University in Columbus, Ohio. Mrs. Roeder worked with the European Concert Circuit while in Germany, and for her efforts in this endeavor she was awarded a commedation from President Eisenhower's People to People Program. She was also the U. S. Lady of the Month in the U.S. Lady Magazine in October 1960.

Mrs. Roeder, whose husband commands Company C of the 69th Armor, is one of the most active and versatile ladies in the 2nd Division Officers' Wives Club. She is a former secretary of the club and is at present the alternate first vice president of the group.

ver area as civilian guerrillas and spies.

In fact, the Blue Forces were not too happy at the Tribune reporter's having the freedom of the area and taking pictures of the strategic point.

One major reporting back from an advanced position was heard to exclaim, "What the hell is that guy doing walking around loose with a camera?"

While waiting to learn the fate of Lt. Wilson and his crew, Maj. Smith was getting a private from the 101st to pose for a picture with a new-style grenade launcher he was carrying.

"You Stupid Meatball"

The confused private was complying with the Major's instructions until his first sergeant snarled:

"You stupid meatball. Standing there pouring your heart out about your weapon. How do you know who you're talking to?"

The sergeant reported to Maj. Smith with apologies, but refused to allow the photograph.

With the prisoner of war compound in plain sight, Maj. Smith didn't argue the point.

After several radio conversations with a headquarters unit, the entire party was released.

Maj. Smith returned to the press center for another assignment, and Lt. Wilson returned to the Red area. That afternoon, Lt. Wilson was forced to detour several times as he tried to return the reporter to Sumter, S.C. The 101st had spread out during the day and blocked many of the roads.

With darkness and its confusion approaching, Lt. Wilson didn't want to gamble on being allowed to proceed should another 101st roadblock appear.

But the day was far from over for the lieutenant. He reached Sumter and ordered his driver to return to their area to move his tent.

The 2nd Division was moving out. Lt. Wilson told the driver to return to the press center after moving the equipment. Three hours later, the driver had not returned.

Fearing he had been captured again, Wilson requisitioned a driver and vehicle from the press center motor pool to drive him to the 2nd's new area.

Outnumbered, Guerrillas Swing a Mean Punch

MEN, WE HIT HERE TONIGHT
69th Armor Guerrillas Plot Strike on the Enemy (STRICOM Photo)

The 333-to-1 odds were just about right for the guerrilla bands who harrassed both "Red" and "Blue" forces during Exercise SWIFT STRIKE II.

The guerrilla units were comprised of Companies B, C and Headquarters of the 69th Armor, 210 men in all. Half were assigned to conduct guerrilla operations against the "Reds," and the other half waged war against the "Blues," a total military force of 70,000 troops.

Training Began Early

Training for their roles began early in July with Special Forces personnel instructing the 69th in the subtleties of unconventional warfare. The two guerrilla units, subdivided into four bands of 27 men each, were then flown to the exercise maneuver area July 31, where they began learning the terrain, establishing camps in the swamps and making contacts with area civilians who could supply valuable information on troop movements.

The two units were also assigned Special Forces men who contributed their knowledge of unconventional warfare tactics.

The civilian auxiliaries — some 350 in all before the problem ended — proved invaluable to both guerrilla units. They supplied information gleaned from loose-tongued Soldiers, cut miles of communications wire, participated in ambushes, assisted in setting up security points around parachute air drops and supplied vehicles and food for the regular guerrilla fighters. Auxiliary members included local policemen, National Guard and Army Reserve personnel, farmers, merchants and civic leaders.

One of the more successful civilian auxiliary groups was composed of two attractive teenage girls and a high school teacher, who drove through the maneuver area and stopped occasionally to talk with the soldiers. While the girls distracted the troopers, the teacher would slip from the car and cut all the commo wire he could find.

However, the bulk of guerrilla operations was carried out by the military participants. Dressed in civilian clothes, these men literally lived by their wits during the exercise. Although they had caches of food, many resorted to killing wildlife such as snakes, raccoons, 'possum and rabbits for nourishment.

Temporary Jobs

In order to spy on the enemy some guerrillas took temporary jobs in garages and on farms while others lived in crude camps deep in the swamps scattered throughout the maneuver area. After snooping around during the day for whatever intelligence they could find, the guerrillas would make lightning raids during the night on troop concentrations, strategic bridges, supply dumps and convoys.

The guerrillas also ran escape and evasion courses for "downed" pilots who were parachuted into the combat area. The guerrillas had to find the airmen and smuggle them through enemy lines to safety.

The effectiveness of guerrilla units operating within the battle zone was graphically demonstrated when a "Red" band learned from a civilian contact that all power lines in a certain area would be de-energized on a particular day. This and other data indicated that the 101st Airborne Division of the "Blue" force would use it as a drop zone, and the "Red" force had the area encircled with a net of steel when the "Screaming Eagles" hit the silk.

Brahms to Bullets For Gun-Toting 2nd Div Band

By Colin Higgins

"Drop your 'M-1' clarinet and pick up your M-1 rifle!", was the cry heard when the 2nd Infantry Division Band went to the field during SWIFT STRIKE II.

Soldiers first and musicians second, the Band was located with 2nd Division Trains and supported those units with the soldiering duties of K.P., tent erection and perimeter guard.

On August 16th, with polished trumpets and tubas, they were trucked up to Division Main where just after sunrise they played "The Second Division March" and "Happy Birthday" for General Chase's 52nd birthday. The General thanked them and complimented them on their playing.

For the rest of the exercise the Band showed that in addition to being a gun-toting concert, marching and jazz band, they are also accomplished horn-blowing field infantrymen.

The Band is made up of individuals whose talents range from a professional plumber to a forestry expert and include three amateur radio operators, several bi-lingual personnel, an insurance salesman, two qualified light aircraft pilots, three certified music teachers and an apprentice mortician.

Guerrillas Hit By 1st Inf. During SS II

By 1st Infantry PIO

Counter - guerrilla tactics were widely used by the 1st Infantry during their participation in Swift Strike II.

After moving into positions near Shaw Air Force Base, South Carolina, the battle group was assigned as the III Corps reserve.

The activities of the guerrillas were intensified in this area, and men had to be on a constant watch. The guerrilla force constantly harrassed the battle group with raids and individuals trying to infiltrate the line.

Companies sent patrols to locate the operations base and capture the guerrilla force. A part of the force was captured and a large quantity of their rations was taken.

The 101st Airborne Division made its drop in th vicinity of the 1st Infantry lines. Many prisoners were captured while the 1st Infantry fought a delayed retrograde movement as the full force of the division hit their main lines.

Many moves were made during the next few days as the battle group maneuvered to prevent the link-up of the "Blue" forces.

A movement of the battle group forces to the vicinity of Hartsville, South Carolina was initiated near the end of the exercise. Here the 1st Infantry was in constant contact with the "enemy" as they again tried to make a link-up with their forces.

'Battle of Bishopville' Involves 9th Inf. Versus 101st Abn. Div.

By 9th Infantry PIO

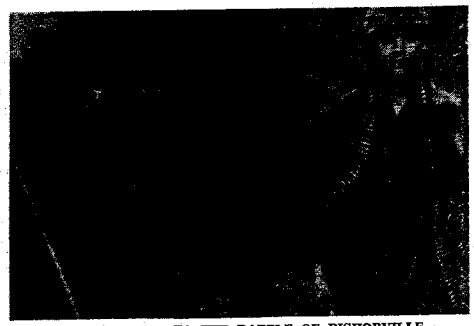
The day dawned gray and muggy as the 9th Infantry "Manchumen" packed their tools of war in preparation for a repositioning of forces. No one realized that within five hours the 9th would be engaged in what later became known as the Battle of Bishopville, during exercise Swift Strike II.

The 9th Infantry completed its movement at approximately 11 a.m. August 14 and went about the business of making its area livable and tactically safe. As these preparations were progressing, the 2nd Division commander discovered that the Blue forces were attempting to skirt his positions and cross the Lynches River. The only "Red" force in this area was the 9th Infantry.

At noon the order came from division headquarters for the 9th Infantry to move out and stop the enemy at the town of Bishopville. Colonel Clifford P. Hannum, commander of the 9th Infantry, committed three companies to the Battle of Bishopville. This action brought almost instantaneous response from the enemy in the form of violent combat action. Sensing that the enemy had a good reason for such action, Col. Hannum committed more of his unit until all rifle companies were in contact with the enemy. His reserve consisted of the battle group headquarters defense platoon.

The Battle of Bishopville continued through August 14 and 15, during which time the entire battle group fought against numerically superior troops of the 101st Airborne Division.

Although all units conducted themselves in a creditable manner, the exploits of Company A, 9th Infantry will be told here in detail.



Commencing the attack, Company A, commanded by Captain Donald B. Smith Jr., fought its way along the northeastern section of the city and, after dogged action, succeeded in clearing its sector of the city. Soon after this initial success Captain Smith's company was counter-attacked by a reinforced company and forced to withdraw. Upon withdrawal Capt. Smith led his company around the city in a flanking movement and again forced the Blue forces to withdraw.

Throughout the night of August 14-15 Company A was the target of three counter-attacks, each of which was successfully repelled with heavy "casualties" inflicted on the enemy.

As in many instances during battle, the exact actions of the enemy were not clearly defined; however, as the situation developed, it became obvious that the Blue forces were using Bishopville as a vital junction in their road net and that occupation of the city would enable them to move their entire force across the Lynches River to link up with their forces near Darlington.

The action of the men of Company A and the rest of the 9th Infantry team drove the Blue forces out of Bishopville, making this a decisive battle of Exercise SWIFT STRIKE II. For his action during the Battle of Bishopville, Captain Smith was presented the Flower of the Swamps award Monday night at Theater Seven.

At that time Colonel Hannum addressed the 9th Infantry and reviewed the unit's part in Exercise SWIFT STRIKE II. He especially emphasized the accomplishments of Companies D and E, commanded by Captain Richard H. Morton and Lieutenant William Graham respectively. These two companies became separated from the rest of the 9th Infantry August 11 when the 101st Airborne jumped in between them and their main body.

'Bang! Bang! You're Dead!'...But EM Finds He Can't Really Rest in Peace

Private First Class Allan Sutliff was "killed in action" — but not really. He was looking for a cigarette. And three days later, he was "alive" again.

Sutliff, 20, of Company C, 38th Infantry, "died" last week during Exercise SWIFT STRIKE II, when his outfit tangled with "Blue" forces near Darlington, S. C.

"There was rifle fire, and I was dug in. The next thing I know this umpire came up to me and said, 'You're dead,'" recalled Sutliff. "It sure was a funny feeling."

He said the umpire gave him a tag marked KIA (killed in action.) Then medics came up and started asking him questions. They recorded his answers on the tag.

The tag was attached to his mud-caked fatigues. It listed his name, and rank. Then came 111.10. "That's my MOS (Military Occupation Specialty)," explained Sutliff. "I'm a rifleman."

The Highland Falls, N. Y. native fingered his tag uncomprehendingly, then said, "funny thing about being dead is that I keep wanting cigarettes and nobody seems to have them."

"I may be dead, but I never have done more walking in my life," the crew-cut soldier said. "As soon as they tagged me, we moved out."

Sutliff was resting in peace in the command post of the 38th Infantry, hidden amidst a cluster of oak trees. Only he wasn't really resting. And he really wasn't in peace.

"Most of the time, we dead men are helping load and unload trucks," said Sutliff. "Nothing is a picnic out here." His glance swept the command post area. "Some of these guys are lucky if they're getting an hour's sleep," he said. "Some of us dead guys do better than that. We sleep in the truck. They sleep on the ground.

"Only you get tired of being dead," he added. "You know this SWIFT STRIKE II is a great training exercise. 'Red' fights 'Blue.' 'Blue' fights 'Red'. It really doesn't matter which side you're on as long as you're playing the game and getting something out of it."

"I hate to miss any of it," he concluded. "Thank goodness I'll be alive again in three days and can get back into the fighting."

HUNTING SEASON

Hunting season opens with the dove season Sept. 15. Dove shooting will be on a half day basis from noon until sundown.

All dove fields are now staked and are ready for opening day. Maps of the locations of dove fields, with safety rules, will be available at the Fish and Game Association Headquarters before the opening day.

If you have not already bought your hunting license for the coming season, do so as soon as possible. Hunting licenses are now on sale at the Fish and Game Association, Bldg. 4050, Harmony Church.

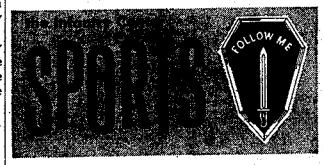
PREDATOR CONTROL

Just another reminder to pet owners. We would advise you to keep your pet from running on the reservation during the month of August, and the first week in September. Extensive predator control activities are now in progress on the reservation, and will continue for the remainder of August and the first week in September.

As a protection of your pet, no predator control will be practiced within one mile of cantonment areas or the reservation boundaries.

RECREATIONAL POSSIBILITIES

The Fort Benning Reservation has some of the finest hunting and fishing areas in the United States. People are urged to take advantage of the many recreational possibilities offered on the vast 185,000 acres of this post.



A few things must be remembered though before hunting and fishing.

Most of the hunting and fishing areas are in danger areas, and it is the responsibility of each fisherman and hunter to secure range clearance before entering the hunting and fishing areas of the post. By calling Range Control, you not only insure your own safety but also the safety of others.

Most of the boats on the ponds of the post are rather short draft boats, and can be dangerous if not properly handled. Children have been seen playing in boats which are tied up at the various docks on the ponds, especially Kings Pond. This is a dangerous practice and parents are urged to keep children out of these boats for their own safety.

Army Completes Sweep Of Interservice Tennis

Holmberg Wins The Riseley Cup

ACCEPTING HONORS . . . Holding the coveted Leech Cup, PFC Ron Holmberg, captain of the Army team that won the trophy, symbolic of team victory, in the Interservice Tennis Tournament, makes an acceptance speech on behalf of his teammates.

WINNING TEAM . . . Winners of the Leech Cup at the 1962 Interservice Tennis Tournament are Army personnel (L to R) Coach Dan Sullivan, PFC Roger McCormick, Maj. Phillip Hardie, 2nd Lt. Norman Perry, PFC Ronald Holmberg, and M-Sgt. John Quinn, trainer; second row, 1st Lt. John Newman, Sp5 Les Dodson, MSgt. Bill Millikan, Sgt. Ray Antignat, Lt. Col. Lavere Strom and PFC Bob Bowditch. The Army team defeated the Navy and Air Force to cop the title.

The curtain closed on the 1962 Interservice Tennis Tournament here Saturday and four Army players walked off the stage with all the honors.

PFC Ronald Holmberg won the Riseley Bowl as he defeated PFC Bob Bowditch, 6-0, 2-6, 6-1, 6-0, in the Open Singles Championship.

Playing well in the first set Holmberg quickly grabbed the first four games and then breezed through the remainder. Bowditch, a bit nervous, repeatedly made costly mistakes and the more experienced Holmberg took the best advantage of them.

Bowditch's overhead and deep shots began clicking in the second set as the lanky net star shot ahead of Holmberg, 5-0. With the score 40-love in Bowditch's favor in the ninth game, Holmberg rallied to take the next two games before losing.

The third set was a lop-sided affair as Holmberg quickly snatched the first three games before Bowditch could recouperate. He lost the sixth game, but then came ripping back to take the set.

The fourth and final set was all Holmberg as the Military Academy tennis instructor completely dominated the play. In the final game of the match Holmberg displayed a variety of shots and constantly kept Bowditch on his heels with his booming serve.

Sweep Doubles Action

In the Open Doubles, Holmberg teamed with Sp5 Les Dodson to win the title, beating the Air Force combination of 1st Lt. Hank Jungle and Bob Delgado, 6-3, 6-4, 6-3.

In a match which was supposedly a lossup, the Army duo raced to victory in three straight sets as they were never headed after dropping the first game.

With the score knotted at 1-1 in the first set Holmberg and Dodson won the next two games. They increased their lead to 5-2 before Dodson lost his service. With the score 5-3 Jungle's serve was broken and they took the set.

The second set was nip and tuck all the way until Holmberg and Dodson broke away from a 4-4 tie to win. They were in complete command the third and final set as they jumped out to an early 3-0 lead.

Going ahead 4-1 Jungle of Richards-Gebaur AFB, Mo., and Delgado of McClellan AFB Calif., thrilled the crowd in a comeback effort tightening the set at 4-3. Then Jungle lost his serve and Dodson clinched the match by winning his.

Defends Title

MSgt. Bill Millikan defended his Interservice Men's Senior crown by beating Sgt. Ray Antignat, 6-3, 6-1.

PFC Ronald E. Holmberg is an exciting tennis player to watch.

The nation's seventh-ranked player said, "I play every point with the idea that it's important and I try to place my shots where they'll be to my greatest advantage."

This year marks Holmberg's first in playing for the Army. Since entering the service in October, he has coached tennis at the U. S. Military Academy at West Point, N.Y. It's here that Holmberg said he achieved his greatest thrill in tennis.

"Funny as it might sound, it came from coaching the Army Tennis Team to victory over the Navy," he said.

Since his early childhood in Brooklyn, N. Y., Holmberg has been toying with a tennis racquet. At the age of four he was learning to swing a special short tennis racquet given to him by his parents.

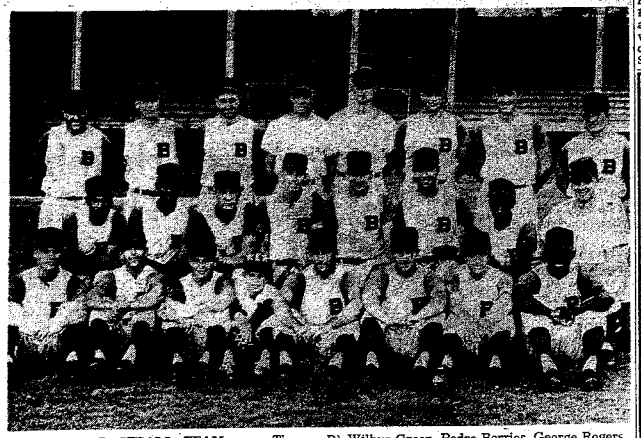
"I actually was playing around with a tennis racquet when I was two and a half," he recalls.

Trophies are scattered high and heavy at his home where tennis has become a byword. In high school he won the Greater New York Catholic High School Athletic Association title three years in a row.

By the time he was 15, he said, "I was playing in the men's tennis circuits during the summer months."

He won the National Boys Doubles Championship and the Boys Indoor Singles and Doubles Title in 1953.

At Tulane University where he entered in 1956, he compiled an outstanding college record, winning the Southeastern Conference title three years and the freshman title his first year.



There was an interruption in his college playing from September, 1957, and February, 1958, when he dropped out of school to go to Australia to play in the Davis Cup Tournament.

Holmberg was graduated from Tulane in 1960 with a Bachelor of Arts in political science.

GOOD GOLF

SHORT IRON ACCURACY . . . Your control of the short irons determines your golfing status — duffer or par shooter. The No. 7, 8 and 9 clubs are the tools to put the ball nearest the cup and, thereby, reduce the number of putts needed to get down. The short iron shots are played primarily with the arms and hands. The stance is open. Top of the backswing reaches only about the three-quarter mark of a full swing. You have reached it when your left arm is extended almost straight out from the body. Hit firmly, crisply; swing down and through the ball. Take a divot on the follow-through to insure accuracy.

DOUGHBOY BASEBALL TEAM . . . These players will represent The Infantry Center in the 1962 Third Army baseball championship playoffs to be held at Redstone Arsenal, Ala., Aug. 21-31. Today's Sportrait

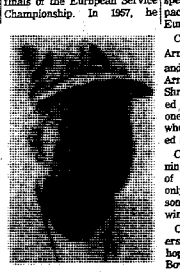
Today's Sportrait spotlights Capt. Leaton C. Cofield, 50th Medical Clearing Company, 428th Medical Battalion, from Jet, Okla.

All eyes of Fort Benning are watching Capt. Cofield as he starts his second year at the helm of the Doughboys football team.

A veteran of 10 years military service, Cofield started his football career as a halfback on the Jet High School team, where he won All-State honors both his junior and senior years.

World War II interrupted his football career when, in 1941, he joined the Marine Corps. In 1943, he participated in the invasion of the Island of Peleliu in the Pacific as a member of the 1st Marine Division. He was severely wounded and was hospitalized four months.

After his discharge from the Marines in 1944, Cofield entered Oklahoma Northwestern College and played fullback.



Cofield started his service football coaching career after joining the Army in 1952, as an assistant coach at Brooke Army Medical Center. Fort Sam Houston, Tex. Two years later he became head coach and embarked on his present 67-10-3 record on the gridiron.

In 1955, with only one year of head coaching experience, he led the Schweinfurt, Germany Crusaders of the 86th Infantry Regiment to the semi-finals of the European Service Championship. In 1957, he wound up a three-year coaching tenure with a highly respectable 29-1-3 record and paced the Crusaders to the 1957 European Championship.

Cofield went back to Brooke Army Medical Center in 1958 and led the Comets to the Army Championship and the Shrimp Bowl Classic. He guided the Comets to the number one football ranks again in 1960 when the Texas team compiled an 10-0 record.

Cofield arrived at Fort Benning just before the opening of the 1961 season, and with only a short period of pre-season practice, he turned out a winning, 6-4 record.

Cofield say swith the players he has for this season, he hopes to make the Shrimp Bowl Classic without any trouble.

opening game of the match before taking three games in a row. He then woo the next set easily since Antignat could not keep pace with his steady game.

Millikan appeared to get stronger in the second set since he had comparatively little trouble in coasting by his opponent.

In the doubles competition of the Men's Senior Division, Millikan and Antignat teamed to race to victory over Maj. William T. Farmer and Lt. Col. James W. Parsons, 6-2, 6-3.

The two Army netters had little trouble as they polished off the two Air Force players in less than an hour.

Following the matches presentation ceremonies were held on the courts. Brig. Gen. Boyal Reynolds Jr., assistant commandant of The Infantry School, and Lt. Col. John S. McLaren, British liaison officer, presented the Riseley Bowl to Holmberg an dplaques to the three other winners.

AT THE Movies

DAMN THE DEFIANT is a war-torn story of a gallant man-of-war whose decks ran red with the mutiny that tore apart the greatest navy to sail the seven seas! It stars Alec Guinness, Dirk Bogarde and Anthony Quayle.

THE PREMATURE BURIAL stars Ray Milland, Hazel Court and Heather Angel. It tells the story of a medical student who strongly believes his father was buried alive and fears that the same fate is in store for him. Going into seclusion, the student builds a tomb which contains every possible escape and survival devise so that he may free himself if ever mistaken for dead.

THE 300 SPARTANS stars Richard Egan and Diane Baker. Battling an army five million strong, a handful of warriors devise the cleverest strategy in the history of warfare by forming the incredible "flying wedge" at the battle of Thermopylae.

Dental Health Series

Today's Dentists Not Pain Dealers of Yore

By Maj. Charles W. Dobson
Preventive Dentistry Officer

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the 13th in a series of articles presented in the interests of better dental health.)

The primary goal of dentists today is the prevention of oral and dental disease. One of the important secondary goals however, is the prevention of pain during treatment of disease that has occurred.

It is the desire of every dentist that each of his patients be relaxed and comfortable during their treatment. Many vital improvements have been made in this respect in recent years. Improvements in both equipment, methods and theory.

The most revolutionary new development, and the one that patients appreciate most, is the air-driven handpiece. When you have a cavity in a tooth, the dentist must first remove the decayed material. Then he must shape the cavity so that the resulting filling will be strong and resistant to new decay.

A tiny rotating bur is used for this. With previous belt-driven models, there was much vibration and noise. Now the bur is driven by a stream of air. It rotates so rapidly and smoothly that the patient gets no sensation of "drilling" at all.

The rotating bur is cooled by a stream of water and air so that there is no problem of heating the tooth. Preparing a tooth with the instrument is gentle, quick and easy.

Contour Chairs

Many dental offices are now equipped with contour dental chairs. These are the ultimate in comfortable sitting. In fact some are even equipped with a vibrator to lull and relax the patient.

Treatment rooms themselves are being decorated in colors that will have a pleasing effect on the patient. Chairs, cabinets and dental units are blue, green or peach colored. Walls are painted in matching or harmonizing colors. Even the dentist's and assistant's gowns may be pastel colored.

Another innovation, designed specifically to make the patient enjoy his visit to the dentist more, is the use of "hi-fi." Some dental chairs are even equipped with ear phones for stereo or television. Many people find these things so pleasantly diverting that they require little or no anesthetic for average appointments.

Every day the dental profession advances in its effort to make dental treatment a pleasant experience. The most effective weapon against discomfort in dentistry still resides with the patient himself. Go to your dentist before painful conditions develop.

Youngsters should start going to the dentist when they are three years old and go regularly after that. With regular early care, dental treatment will not be costly and unpleasant.

58th Infantry Wins Brigade Safety Award

Col. Richard W. Keyes, commander of the 1st Infantry Brigade, recently awarded the 1st ARB, 58th Infantry, commanded by Lt. Col. Charles T. Caprino, the Brigade Safety Award for the Fiscal Year 1962.

The 58th has won the award six times in the past 12 months, thereby taking permanent possession of the plaque.

The 58th infantry safety program is under the direction of 1st Lt. Henry Robinson, battalion S-2. The program includes regular troop safety orientations on year-round as well as seasonal safety hazards.

Heavy stress is also placed on vehicle and road safety. The 58th Infantry's role of supporting the Infantry School, which requires maximum usage of both troops and vehicles, places an extra burden on the safety program.

SOLDIER OF MONTH . . . Sp4 Michael R. Jones, Hdqs. Company, 1st Armored Rifle Battalion, 58th Infantry, was chosen Soldier of the Month for of the 58th Infantry for August. A personnel actions section chief, Jones was selected on the basis of his personal appearance, knowledge of his job and current events, and military bearing.

Maj. Bullock Joins Artillery Committee

Maj. Frank E. Bullock, an Artillery officer, was assigned to Command and Staff Department for duty with the Artillery Committee recently.

He came here upon completion of the Regular Course at Command and General Staff College, Fort Leavenworth. Maj. Bullock is also a graduate of Artillery OCS and Artillery Advanced Course.

Engineer Unit Tours Projects

Company D, 806th Engineer Battalion, recently returned from a visit to Fort Rucker, Ala. The members of the company were conducted on a tour of construction projects currently under way at the Alabama post.

The visit was highlighted by a barbecue and a softball game between Company D and Company C, 806th Engineer Battalion, stationed at Fort Rucker.

On the return trip, the men of Company D stopped briefly at Fort Gaines to visit the Walter F. George Dam, now near completion.

The trip was a return visit for one the Fort Rucker company made to Fort Benning recently.

New Airborne Unit Developed by Army

The Army Signal Corps has contracted for a powerful broadcasting system designed to be airlifted by helicopter.

The miniature radio studio will be constructed so that it can be landed anywhere in the world and go on the air to the civilian population or to enemy forces in a matter of hours.

HONOR GRADUATE
Capt. Boyle Congratulated

Capt. Boyle Is Top Grad

Capt. Roger W. Boyle, graduated Associate Infantry Officer Career Course, Class No. 4, 2nd Student Battalion, The Student Brigade, recently with top honors.

Brig. Gen. Robert R. Williams, Army Aviation Center, commanding general, at Fort Rucker, guest speaker for the graduation exercises, presented Capt. Boyle with his graduation certificate and congratulated him on his achievement.

This Indian Says Custer Not Last Man at Big Horn

Norfolk, Va. (AFPS) — A 91-year-old Sioux Indian chief visiting here has twanged an arrow through the legend, believed by generations of schoolboys, that Gen. George Armstrong Custer was the last man standing in the battle at Little Big Horn in 1876.

Custer, says Chief Red Fox, actually was killed early in the massacre. The last of his cavalrymen to die was a Capt. Marcus Kehoe. "Capt. Kehoe was on his horse getting away. The Indians wounded his horse to stop him and killed him."

How does Red Fox know this? Was he at the scene Not quite — as the six-year-old son of Chief Black Eagle he was nine miles away with the children and old people of his tribe. But his father, his mother and his uncle, Chief Crazy Horse, all took part in the savage battle, after which they fled to Canada. The family was not reunited for 13 years.

In the wake of Little Big Horn, the boy was moved to a reservation by U. S. Indian agents and later sent to the Carlisle Indian School in Pennsylvania. After that he drifted into the white man's world of show business, joining P. T. Barnum's circus as a roper. This led to a job with the Miller Brothers' 101 Ranch Wild West Show that featured Buffalo Bill Cody.

Buffalo Bill's last performance anywhere was in Norfolk. Red Fox recalls, adding: "A person would have to be 60 years old to remember that."

The Chief, who was "in charge of the Indians in the show," found himself out of a job. But the movies could always use a redskin to "bite the dust" in the westerns that were becoming popular. He played extra roles in 117 cowboys-and-Indian thrillers, never for a minute taking them seriously.

"We just thought it was all a laugh," says Red Fox, whose Christian name is William. "I fell off a horse once two days before the shot that was supposed to have killed me was fired by the cowboy hero. And when he fired it he was 21 miles away on another location."

Korean Officers Here for Briefing

Five Allied Army officers from the Republic of Korea are on post for a 15-day orientation on Infantry School activities.

Col. Kin Pilho, Col. Lim Seonmoon, Col. Kim Bongsu, Lt. Col. Ahn Moonseong and Lt. Col. Choi Jinshik plan to incorporate certain facets of the school's training and organization into their own unit, the Combat Arms Center of the South Korean Army.

Of particular interest to the Korean officers are teaching methods used by various departments of the school.

They are scheduled to leave Aug. 31.

He Corners Market on 3-Day Pass

Through an unusual chain of events PFC William R. Bell, Hdqs. and Hdqs. Company, 806th Engineer Battalion, recently was the recipient of a $25 Savings Bond and three three-day passes.

It happened like this; PFC Bell was a member of the Main Post Guard furnished by the 806th Engineer Battalion on Aug. 5. The guard received a superior rating and the members were awarded three-day passes. He was selected as supernumerary and received pass number two. He was also chosen as Orderly of the Day for the Commanding General which entitled him to a $25 Savings Bond and pass number three.

PFC Bell has been in the Army since August 1961 and is assigned to the Battalion Operations Section as a surveyor. He hails from Washington D. C. but is presently residing with his wife, Marilyn, in Columbus.

First Army T-114 Vehicle Rolls Off

The first T-114 Personnel Carrier rolled off the assembly line recently at the U. S. Army Cleveland, Ohio, Ordnance Plant, a facility of the Army Materiel Command.

The vehicle carries a crew of three, with room for a fourth man.

General Says Guardsmen Seek Professional Leadership From Regular Army During War

The National Guard looks to the Regular Army for professional leadership in time of war, but it is the citizen soldier who must go out and win the battles, Maj. Gen. Henry F. McMillan, adjutant general of Florida, said here recently.

Speaking to 156 graduates of Infantry Officer Candidate (Reserve component) Class No. 2 at The Infantry School, the general outlined the role of the National Guard officer to the students.

He explained that, unlike the Regular Army where troops are delivered to the company orderly room for duty, the National Guard leader must recruit his own men, train them, lead them, counsel them and command them.

Gen. McMillan emphasized that these officers must keep their men ready for combat.

He added, "Just being able to mobilize quickly is not enough. The National Guard must stand ready to fight a war as soon as it is mobilized."

He pointed out that the Regular Army has only 16 divisions, most of which are deployed in wide areas of the world.

"The National Guard has 26 divisions," the two-star general said. "We must be ready."

The general challenged each graduate to take back to his own unit the determination to mold the kind of fighting force which can carry out its assigned mission no matter what it may be.

In expressing the dual role the new officers will fill as both soldiers and civilians, the general said, "In your community you must deserve the respect of all your associates, or in your Guard unit you will not be able to demand the respect of your men. It will take effort. You will have to lead your men all the way."

Gen. McMillan explained that National Guard officers can go as civilians and talk to civic leaders or even with congressmen and strive to get what is needed for the security of the nation. The general cited this as an advantage over Regular Army officers.

Commenting on the technical progress men has made in the past few generations, he pointed out that in the old days people could travel only as fast as the fastest horse, but that today men encircle the globe in about 88 minutes.

He added that regardless of the amount of progress made in the past or discoveries in the future, one element will remain constant. That is man is still the only method we have of closing with and killing or capturing the enemy and occupying the land, the officer said.

Gen. McMillan told the students that with man living in an age of rapid and continuous changes, those unwilling to go along will be passed up, but they must remember the unchanging mission of the man with a weapon.

Gen. McMillan presented the first certificate of completion to the class honor graduate, Robert A. Lucas.

The general presented him with a letter of commendation signed by Brig. Gen. Royal Reynolds Jr., assistant commandant of The Infantry School.

Lucas also received an Association of the U. S. Army plaque and the Erickson Award, named for Maj. Gen. Edgar C. Erickson, former chief of the National Guard Bureau, Washington, D.C.

Lucas is a member of Company A, 1st Medium Tank Battalion, 303rd Armored Division, of the Washington National Guard in Longview.

Graduates of the course are qualified for commissions, which are given by the National Guard boards in their home state.

Army Missile Scores 3 Hits In Test Firing

The Army's new Sergeant ballistic missile recently scored three consecutive hits on pre-selected targets in engineer - service test firings at White Sands Missile Range, N.M.

The firings of the tactical ballistic missile are combining Army engineer and service tests in a single series. Normally such firings are conducted separately and consecutively. Engineer tests verify the performance of production line missiles and ground support equipment. Service tests are designed to demonstrate the readiness of the system to operate in the field under combat conditions.

The Army cited successful combination of the two types of tests as an example of the continuing effort to provide soldiers with reliable and effective equipment at the earliest possible date.

Sergeant is in production as a replacement for the liquid fuel Corporal missile which has been operational with Army units at home and overseas for several years.

Sergeant, using solid propellant rocket fuel, is more mobile, rugged and reliable than the Corporal and can be set up and fired under adverse conditions of weather and terrain. Its inertial guidance makes it immune to all known electronics counter-measures.

Safety Campaign Stressed for Labor Day Weekend

Commanders To Assemble Their Troops

As the long Labor Day weekend approaches, post officials are emphasizing the campaign to make the period the safest of the year.

Monday will be a holiday.

Third U. S. Army Headquarters has ordered that all troops will be assembled by their commanders within 48 hours of the weekend for orientation directed toward hazards to which personnel will be exposed to while off duty.

These dangers include fatigue, preoccupation, distractions and alcoholism, driving during the hours of darkness and traveling too far in the time alloted and at excessive speed. Another risk is the lack of proper safety checks on privately-owned cars.

Commanders may extend leaves and passes when valid reasons preclude personnel from returing to duty on schedules that entail undue driving risk.

Police supervision will be intensified over the weekend and careless drivers, if apprehended, will be delayed in returning to the post.

Most holidays have been comparatively safe for Fort Benning personnel in the past few years, with the number of injuries being less than that of an average day.

This usually favorable record can be attained this year by the observance of safety in driving and recreational activities, Norman M. Evans, post safety director, said.

Maj. Gen. Ben Harrell, commanding general of The Infantry Center, in an effort to accelerate the safety program, said, "The past record indicates that most traffic and recreational accidents occur on weekends or holidays just after a payday."

He added, "These factors are

They're Going Back to School Again

The military policeman at his post plays an important role in the life of Fort Benning's dependent children during the school year. It is his duty to protect school children at the post's many busy intersections and school crossing zones. Here, Sp4 Donald R. Army Firers Show Power With 1st Win

The Army drew first blood here Wednesday in the 2nd Annual Armed Forces International Shooting Competition when Marksmanship Training Unit firers took first place in the individual and team Smallbore Rifle Prone Championship.

First Lt. Robert B. Trewp, posted a 593 out of a possible 600 score with his international-type .22 caliber rifle to take first place and match the world's record. Lt. Trew's score exceeded last years mark by 10 points.

Army 1st Lt. Presley W. Kendall ran a close second, out by only one point. Cpl. Gary L. Anderson was third with a 590 score.

In team firing the second and third place individual winners teamed up with Captains Daniel B. Puckel with a 596 score and Tommy G. Pool with a 584 score to roll up a composite 2352 team score, exceeding the world mark by 19 points and giving their Army Blue Team first laurels. This Blue Team score exceeded last year's mark by 43 points.

Following right behind the winners was the Army Red Team with a 2349 score and the Air Force team followed with a 2345 score.

Three Positions

Saturday offers 50-meter rifle competition in the prone, kneeling and standing categories.

An aggregate of the three positions will distinguish the smallbore rifle, three-position champion.

After a record-fire lull Sunday, Monday will bring the rapid fire pistol championship.

The 300 - meter free rifle matches in the prone, kneeling and standing positions will be fired Tuesday, with an aggregate of the three matches deciding the free rifle champion.

The clay pigeon event will be

Matches

conducted Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday.

The Running Deer, single run competition is slated for Wednesday, Sept. 5, and the double run the following day.

The free pistol championship will end the competition next Friday with the awards and closing ceremonies the same day.

Four ranges will be used. The Post Pistol, Running Deer, Skeet and Trap and Parks Ranges, all in the vicinity of Dixie Road.

The approximately 150 firers who are competing in the 29 individual and team matches are the United States' hope in future world competition.

Holiday

all present in the forthcoming holiday. Every possible effort must be made to prevent these tragic occurrences. To this end I enjoin all commanders to insure that personnel are properly oriented prior to the holiday on the hazards likely to be encountered, and the behavior standards expected of them, both on public highways and in recreational areas."

Most holiday traffic accidents occur within 10 miles of the victims' homes and in the heavy traffic of the early and late hours of the day.

Since most Labor Day injuries and deaths result from auto accidents, the post safety Section urges drivers to stay off the highways during the hours of heavy traffic, to drive with extra care and to make use of the point's recreation and entertainment facilities.

To combat the accident toll, the Safety Section urges the use of seat belts and the allowing of one car length of distance behind the car ahead for each 10 miles an hour of speed.

Common faults of some drivers are speeding, following a car too closely, passing red lights and stop signs, driving under the influence of alcohol and on the wrong side of the road and passing on hills and curves.

Traffic accidents are not the only hazards of the Labor Day weekend, Evans warned. Scores of people drown at this time. The victims are usually alone or in unpatrolled waters. Oddly, most of them are not swimming when they drown but fall from boats, docks or piers.

Follow These Suggestions, Travelers!

Personnel alerted for overseas movement should keep in mind the uniform changeover date set up by the commands they will join, according to a recent message from Third U. S. Army Headquarters.

The changeover date in winter uniforms in France and Germany is Sept. 17. Effective Sept. 1, all personnel reporting to overseas replacements station at Fort Dix, N.J., for shipment to France or Germany are advised to arrive with fatigues, summer and winter uniforms to include overcoat.

Since personnel destined for Italy may be routed via Germany or France, these same requirements apply even though the changeover in Italy is not until Oct. 8.

Personnel not complying with these directives will be compelled to purchase necessary items upon their arrival at Fort Dix.

Over 900 Team Captains Hear Gen. Harrell Open Fund Drive

More than 900 team captains attended a kick-off meeting recently for the 1962 Community Activities Association Fund Drive.

Guest speakers were Lt. Gen. (Ret.) Reuben E. Jenkins, a member of the board of directors of United Givers, Inc., in Columbus, Ga.; Maj. Gen. Ben Harrell, commanding general of The Infantry Center, and Maj. Gen. Charles H. Chase, commanding general of the 2nd Infantry Division.

Gen. Harrell commended the installation as a whole and fund drive officials for the splendid performance in the 1961 campaign.

"It doesn't have to be a high pressure job, if you let people know the purpose of the drive," he said.

"Some of the money raised will go to organizations downtown and some will be used here on the post," Gen Harrell said. "The amount to be hirmed over to United Givers agencies downtown has been carefully worked out."

"Many people don't realize this money goes to assist certain organizations that serve our 9,000 families who live off post and participate in community activities," the post commander said.

"I am confident," he told the assembled fund drive workers, "that with your support and your explanation to post personnel, we will have no difficulty with this drive."

Gen. Chase said the drive warrants the support of all military and civilian personnel at Fort Benning.

"Funds collected in the drives on post and in Columbus provide support for activities that make Fort Benning and Columbus better places to live," he said.

"The agencies in town which benefit from the drives devote a major part of their services to military personnel and their dependents," Gen. Chase said.

The campaign which opened Friday will continue through Nov. 9, with a goal of 100 per cent participation.

Bayonet's Publishers Plan New York Tour

"New York! New York! That wonderful town . . ."

An excitement-packed five days and four nights amid the dazzling lights of mid-Manhattan can be yours.

In October the Ledger-Enquirer, publishers of The Bayonet, will sponsor a "Theater Holiday" to New York City.

This will include:

Choice seats at four Broadway hit shows.

Tickets to Radio City Music Hall and to popular television shows.

Five days and four nights at the Hotel Manhattan.

Tour of the United Nations and lunch in the Delegates Dining Room.

Air or rail transportation to New York and back plus bus service and tips from rail or air terminal and return.

The cost? It will be $236.75 if you fly and $176.63 by train.

Deadline for making reservations is Oct. 8. The tour will be taken Oct. 22-26.

Ledger-Enquirer Society Editor Mary Margaret Byrne will serve as hostess for the trip.

"How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying" starring Rudy Vallee and Robert Morse. This is a musical comedy and one of Broadway's biggest hits in years. This wacky story is about the window washer to chairman of the board of World Wide Wickets Company.

"A Thousand Clowns," with Jason Robards. Time Magazine called this the "freshest, funniest comedy of the season." And Walter Winchell's comments were: "1,000 laughs! Jason Robards, Jr., is the new king of Broadway."

"Mary, Mary" with Barbara Bel Geddes. This is a comedy by Jean Kerr, author of "Please Don't Eat the Daisies."

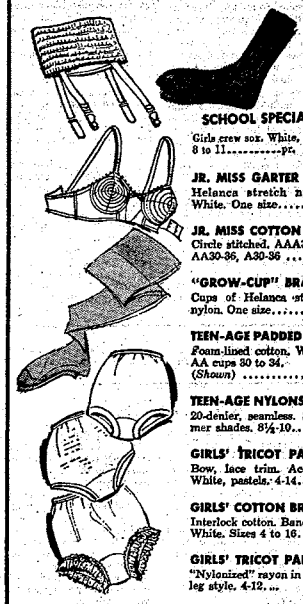
ST. PAUL, Minn. (ANS) — A Target Intercept Computer (TIC) has been developed by UNIVAC, St. Paul, for use with the Army's NIKE ZEUS anti-missile missile.

The TIC controls the operation from the moment it is assigned a target by the ZEUS Acqusition Radar. In the critical time from detection to the "destruction" of the target, tracking information is received from the Target Tracking Radar to predict the intercept point. Input from the Missile Tracking Radar is used in the computation of orders used to steer the three-stage Army NIKE ZEUS anti-missile missile to its rendezvous with the target vehicle.

New Machine Saves Plant 4,160 Man-Hours Yearly

An estimated 4,160 man-hours per year will be saved by use of a new machine recently installed at Fort Benning's Army Field Printing Plant.

A heavy duty automatic, three-knife trimmer, the machine is expected to save the government an average of $7,589 annually over a period of eight years, according to Lt. Col. Clarence W. Welch, chief of the printing plant.



Replacing an old single knife cutter, the new machine trims the three open edges of a stack of pamphlets in one operation. Handling of the pamphlets at the trimmer has been reduced from three to one operation.

To operate the new machine, a binderman stacks the pamphlets in front of an arrangement of three blades. When the pamphlets move into position, three blades descend, simultaneously trimming top, bottom and unbound side of the booklets.

David H. Freeman, plant supply officer, said a primary advantage of the machine is its safety features.

A shield protects the hands of the binderman while the machine is in operation. Lifting the shield stops the trimmer.

'Time-Servers' Are A Detriment in Battle Against Communism

In the mountainous, the subtropical, the plateau regions of Viet Nam, member of the U. S. Army are not only learning lessons in a different type of warfare, but also strengthening the confidence in American ideals and free-world objectives that has moved them into the Asian nation.

Much has been said of the guerrilla warfare being fought in Viet Nam. There has been adverse criticism of the role played by our troops.

Recently, in a guest column by Tom Lambert written for Joseph Alsop, the adverse criticism was more than neutralized. American troops in Viet Nam were referred to as the "savvy" Americans, as opposed to the fabled "ugly" and "quiet" Americans.

"The Army still has a goodly number of grumblers and petulant malcontents on assignment here," Lambert wrote. "There are still the inevitable Army time-servers here, waiting only for the end of their tours."

"But in general, and especially in field advisory posts with the South Vietnamese army and in the sensitive jobs of counseling South Vietnamese officers and civilian officials on politico-military programs to fight Communists, the Army men on duty here are impressive. Notably the "savvy" ones, the columnist commented.

"Those are the soldiers who have learned that this war involves not only battalions and machine guns, but also politics, economics, minority factions, civic action, and that group in each nation of the world to which most armies heretofore — despite pious platitudes to the contrary — have been strangers: the people," Lambert continued.

In order to win the people and, hopefully in turn the war of which Lambert speaks, the American fighting man must feel the responsibility of the ambassador he inevitably is in any geographical location to which he may be assigned. He must "soldier" for his command and attempt to win the people for the free world by every means at his disposal.

There is no room for laxity. There is no room for the complacent attitude of the "time-server." No choice is left in the battle against Communism but to do the assigned task and a little more on top of it.

There is but one answer to the question of whether or not we prefer serving our duty tour in a free society, or serving a "civilian" life-time under communism. The "savvy" Americans in Viet Nam apparently have no question in their minds. Neither should we.

* * *

The responsibility felt by the men in Viet Nam, the lengths to which they go to prove the validity of the American way of life, should not vary geographically. Their enthusiasm and desire to do a job should be, must be displayed at every military installation from the Berlin wall to Fort Benning to Saigon. There is no choice if choice is to remain.

'Let's Keep It in the Family'

SURGEON SAYS

Don't Fear Surgery

By Maj. Doris S. Frazier, ANC
Nursing Service, MAH

"Well, sergeant, you'd better come into the hospital next week and let us take out that gallbladder."

Many of us hear similar words each year, and each has the same reaction — nonchalance and a bit of fear. This is natural and arises from distrust of unfamiliar, and reputedly unpleasant, experiences.

Let's look at what actually happens when you report to Martin Army Hospital for surgical treatment. Your clinic physician will have given you a date and time (usually the day before your operation) for you to be admitted. It is important that you observe this time, for it is planned in order that a bed will be available for you, and to allow for necessary checkups before your operation.

When you arrive at the hospital, you report to "A and D" or the Admissions and Dispositions Desk. Here your hospital record will be initiated and an "Identaband" bracelet will be placed on your wrist to assure you of correct personal identification while in the hospital.

You will be taken to the baggage room where your personal clothing will be stored and hospital clothing issued to you. If you are a female, your clothing change will be made on your ward.

Now you are directed to your ward where the nurse will greet you and help you get settled in your room or area. The remainder of this day will be busy. First, you will go to the laboratory, where a small amount of blood will be taken from your arm. This, and a specimen of your urine, will be checked to be sure you are up to par and ready for your surgery.

Next, you move down the hall to "X-Ray" where a film will be made of your chest to be certain no respiratory condition exists which might interfere with your anesthetic.

When you return to the ward, you will be visited by your physicians, who are interested in you and your physical condition. They will ask many questions, seeking necessary information to help guide them to the best possible personalized care for you. Besides your surgeon and his assistants, you will be visited by the anesthesiologist, who will discuss your anesthetic with you.

Later, the skin area of your operation will be prepared by shaving and washing with a special soap. In the evening, adult members

CHAPLAIN'S CORNER

To Really Live

By Chaplain (Capt.) Mitchell C. Johnson

There is in life a sickening and nagging sort of tension from which we do well to have relief.

Television commercials say, "take aspirins!" But then there is still another kind of tension which is as necessary to good living as a mainspring is to a good watch. We need something here to keep us calm, but even more important is that something to keep us alert and alive.

An all too common mark of our generation is its impulse to get away from it all and just "lounge". Life in our larger cities has made lounging into a lucrative business. There is some type of lounge on every corner.

We certainly need some respite from the fever of getting and gaining. But for our soul's sake we need the pull and strain of those times and places that can most surely keep us vibrantly alive.

Thank God first of all for the unfinished business within the moral and spiritual realm of living. Looking at the world for what it is and realizing at the same time what it could be, is enough to unlease the tremendous creative impulses of any sensitive spirit. Albert Schweitzer must have felt this kind of inner stress when he plunged soul-first into the midst of a wretched African people. It gave him life, and he carried it to others!

Then what one of us can, after self examination, really and truly "take it easy." Paul, after contemplating the long road toward personal spiritual perfection, declared, "I press on. . . ." Too many of us are prone to die spiritually at one youthful age, while we linger around to finally be physically buried at a later time. The nerve and fibre of living is the pressing on toward the mark of spiritual achievement.

Finally the keen edge of greatness is in our reverence of God. I pity anyone trying spectacular human achievements without acknowledgement of God's presence. Russian cosmonauts say they did not see Him in their orbiting around the earth. Others go still further and say he is not here.

But God be praised that against the discordant cries of the few blind and misguided, is the numberless host of those who join the Psalmist declaring, "O Lord, our Lord, how excellent is Thy name. . . ."

The grandeur of a great soul is often reflected in a brief word or so. Our Lord Jesus Christ points to the life-giving wellspring of his soul when he says, "I must work the works of him that sent me while it is day, for night cometh and no man can work".

While it is day? Night cometh? What a splendid sense of urgency! What a magnificient way to keep alive. No lounging, no boredom, just the unending works of God to be accomplished while it is still time!

Liberty and Communism

Religious Freedom

Modern democracies not only guarantee religious freedom but also encourage the practice of religious faith. Least of all do they discourage public or private worship. In contrast, all Communist regimes, while pretending to permit freedom of religion, actually discourage religion and persecute persons of religious faith.

America led the world, in the 1780s, toward religious freedom.

The fundamental step in this great achievement was the seperation of church and state — the freeing of all citizens from compulsory support of an "established church."

The battle for complete religious freedom, begun by Roger Williams in 1636 in Rhode Island, saw fruition in the enactments of the legislatures of the 13 new states soon after the Declaration of Independence (1776).

Communist doctrine attempts to assert that a guarantee of freedom of conscience includes "freedom of religious worship" and "freedom of anti-religious propaganda."

It claims that this complete freedom is lacking in capitalist countries. Communist doctrine on this point is utterly false. Both of these freedoms exist under democratic constitutions.

In the U. S. Constitution, religious freedom is guaranteed, while the guarantee of free speech includes a guarantee of the right to carry on anti-religious propaganda on the part of anyone who desires to do so.

But the U. S. Government does not use its own agencies to support any religious sect, nor, on the other hand, to carry on propaganda against religion.

There might be some truth in the Communist claim if the Communist Party and the Soviet Government, which rule the Soviet peoples, were neutral and refrained from anti-religious propaganda.

On the contrary, the Party and the Government use the public schools, press and radio (which they completely control) to attack all religion.

The distorted logic of the Soviet Constitution seems to be swallowed by millions of Soviet people who cannot think for themselves. But it ought not to deceive free peoples outside of the Soviet Union.

This series is taken from Ideas In Conflict, Liberty and Communism (DOD Pam 3-11), published by the Directorate for Armed Forces Information and Education, Department of Defense.

MSgt. Lott and Field Phone

With the invention of the telephone in 1876, the history of warfare was revolutionized.

Commanders no longer had to depend upon smoke signals, flashing mirrors, or signal flags. Now they could personally direct and control their units without being on the scene. Thus, a new means of communication was born — wire.

The device invented by Alexander Graham Bell was a simple sound-powered telephone, and it wasn't until years later that our present-day telephone was developed. However, we still use the sound-powered principle in the Army today.

Sound-powered simply means the ability to transmit and receive without the use of batteries. If great distances are involved, the sound-powered telephone is ineffective and a battery-powered telephone must be substituted.

Now Second Nature

To reach for a telephone and place a call has become second nature to most of us without a thought of what makes it operate. There is more to a telephone than just calling a party. A telephone, when connected to a wire line, is restricted to that one channel of communication. Can you imagine a commander with ten telephones on his desk — one for each of his staff and company commanders. Not very likely!

Therefore, within the wire system a device must be installed that will allow the commander to choose the channel he desires. This device is known as a switchboard.

Switchboards will vary in size depending upon where they are located and the number of wire lines they must terminate. However, they all have three common characteristics: the ability to receive and send a signal, the ability to interconnect wire lines, and the ability to communicate.

Wire communications do not end here, because between the telephone and switchboards a wire line must be installed. The time for installation depends upon the length of the line, the method of laying it (vehicle or manpack), number of available men, their training, the terrain, routes, weather, and visibility. The installation and maintenance of a wire line is not an easy task and must be performed by trained personnel.

Cite Mission

A mission of the Communications Department, The Infantry School, is to train selected personnel in wire communications. This includes pole climbing, wire systems, and the installation, operation, and maintenance of telephone, switchboards, and wire laying and recovery equipment. Each year the Communications Department graduates many enlisted and officer personnel who soon fill the vacancies from company to battle group level as communications experts.

Wire communications is often taken for granted and never fully appreciated until it becomes inoperative. The next time you place a telephone call, stop and think for a moment of the time, personnel, and equipment involved to make your call possible.

Because of technological advances in the area of electronics, today's modern Army is placing an ever-increasing dependence on radio as its primary means of communication. However, communications by wire still play an important part in military operations as a back-up for radio and for utilitzation where radio-type communication is appropriate.

Yes, wire is still an important means of communication. Time and concepts may change its physical appearance, but never its principles. Regardless of the situation, all military operations require wire communications. Therefore, wire must be planned for and used, or communications, the "Voice of Command," could become the "Whisper of Despair."

Dance School Still Accepting Pupils

The School of Dance, sponsored by the Women's Club of Fort Benning, is taking registrations for lessons in classical ballet and tap dancing. Classes are scheduled to begin Sept. 4.

The Women's Club has engaged qualified professional dancers to instruct the classes.

All military dependents are welcome to enroll in any class. There will be a class for boys, in addition to the regular ballet and tap classes, and a separate class one evening a week for ladies.

Mrs. Margaret LaForest will include lessons in International Folk Dancing in the ballet classes. She has engaged Mrs. Roberta Wilbur as a tap dance assistant instructor.

For more information regarding the School of Dance, call Mrs. James Miles, 545-3309.

BALLET DANCERS . . . Three members of last year's ballet classes are shown performing in a recital ending last year's season. The recital marks the climax of a year's hard work at the Fort Benning School of Dance, sponsored by the Woman's Club. Registrations are now being accepted at the School of Dance, Building A-15, for the coming season.

Mrs. Hayes Addresses OCS Wives

The 52nd Officer Candidate Company Wives Club held a coffee in the day room of the company recently. Chairman Pat Kinard called the meeting to order.

New members of the day were introduced by Jackie McNeil. They are Shirley Craft, Jane Malloy, Ann Peckinpaugh, Louise Dahlegren, Anne McDonald, Virginia Gelinas, Joanne Dydell and Adele Hogan.

Coffee and tea was served along with light refreshments. The center piece was an arrangement of permanent mums and greenery. Hostesses were Pat Police, Katrina Price and Monica Dale.

Mrs. Thomas T. H. Hayes added to the program by giving a talk on social calls and calling cards. She also reviewed the budget. A question and answer period was then conducted.

Honored guests at the coffee were Mesdames Ben Harrell, Royal Reynolds, George P. McLendon and Joffree L. Gueymard, C. B. Moore, D. A. Miller, Thomas T. H. Hayes and Edward J. Linsin.

Plans for the Sept. 4 luncheon were discussed and committees were appointed.

Pre-Kindergarten School Opening Delayed 2 Days

The Pre-Kindergarten School will open Sept. 6 instead of Sept. 4 as previously announced.

The school for three and four-year-olds has been moved to a new location, Bldg. 322, adjacent to the Old Hospital.

Porches have been enclosed for safety and a play yard constructed. A covered walkway leads from the drive to the school.

The prekindergarten is sponsored by the Woman's Club of Fort Benning.

For further information, telephone the school at LI 5-2217 or Mrs. Jack Murray, principal, at LI 5-4628.

Ladies Hold Luncheon

The Fort Benning Country Club was the location of an informal summer luncheon held by the Infantry Board Ladies recently.

Chicken in the basket was served on tables decorated with red and white checked table nias.

Mrs. Robert C. Williams Jr. welcomed Mrs. Joe L. Martinez recently arrived from Atlanta, as a new member of the Board Ladies. Mrs. Robert F. Gayler was a guest of Mrs. Bruce Merritt for the luncheon.

Bidge followed the luncheon that afternoon.

Hostesses for this affair were Mrs. John C. Cougill, Mrs. David B. Price, Mrs. Marshall L. Mott, Mrs. Earl D. Robert Jr., Mrs. Thomas F. Whalen, and Mrs. John D. Hutton.

Ladies Golf Club Plans Coffee to Greet Members

Committee members of the Fort Benning Women's Golf Club met recently to make plans for the fall golf season. The season is to officially open Sept. 4 with a coffee at the Country Club, to be followed by a penalty golf tournament.

Newcomers to the group will be introduced to last year's members at the coffee. The club hopes to attract all newcomers to the post.

The committee has planned several interesting events. In addition to the weekly tournaments, the ladies have engaged the club professional, Howard Holbrooke, to conduct several golf clinics. They have also planned on several usual tournaments such as an Elebash Tournament and a Turkey Tournament.

The committee members have made arrangements with the Ladies' Golf Club of Maxwell Air Force Base for a return match. Last spring, the Air Force ladies came to Benning to grab top honors over the links.

The committee members are Stevie Doer, president; Tillie Meade, first vice - president; Eva Inman, hospitality; Irene Curtis, rules; Lor Kearns, secretary-treasurer; Molly Ross, trophy; Betty Farmer, publicity; Gladys Fowler, telephone; Evelyn Jones, nominating and special tournaments, and Mimi Roush.

The penalty tournament to be this Tuesday will be scored as an additional stroke for each ball hit into a sand trap and for each three-putt green.

For Women's Club School

Name Assistant Dance Instructor

By Mrs. John Bohen

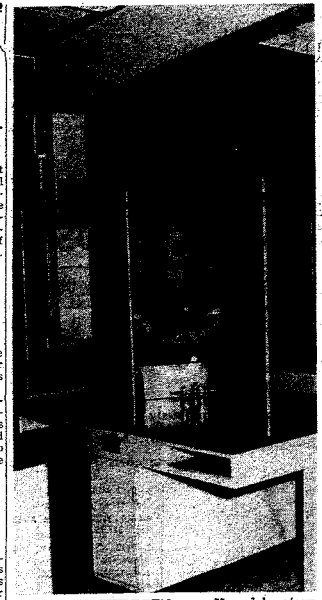
This is the time of year for meeting new teachers and hoping that your child will have the best available, so the Womens Club School of Dance takes great pleasure in introducing to you Mrs. Roberta T. Wilber.

Since the age of nine Mrs. Wilber has done all types of dancing, including tap, toe, ballet, jazz, baton and interpretive dancing.

After studying in Las Vegas, Mrs. Wilber returned to New England where she studied at the Alice McNary Smith School of Dance. She later became assistant and then associate teacher in tap and ballet. During the owners leave of absence she assumed direction of the school with its 200 pupils.

Mrs. Wilber also studied at the Alicia Langford School of Ballet in Boston and attended the Boston Conservatory of Music where she majored in dance and minored in drama.

She has participated in Little Theater Groups and opened her own studio in Massachusetts after college.



Mrs. Wilber will be associated with Mrs. Margaret LaForest, director of the Women's Club School of Dance, and will teach all the tap classes. Tap classes will also be available for boys this year.

All classes will be taught by either Mrs. LaForest or Mrs. Wilber, so that students will be assured of an experienced, professional instructor.

It is strongly urged that registration be accomplished as soon as possible since classes will start on Sept. 4. Register now by calling Mrs. LaForest at MU 9-9663 or the chairman, Mrs. James Miles, 545-3309.

A Labor Day Message

Labor Day 1962 again reminds us of the indispensable part Labor plays in our Defense program as a partner of the Armed Forces. America's working men and women are providing supplies and weapons — many of unparalleled complexity — vital to the defense of our country and allies.

Challenges to our security still confronts us. The teamwork that has met and overcome the challenges of the past must continue undiminished and with even greater efforts on the part of all of us to meet the challenges of the days ahead. We are confident that Labor as an essential part of the team will continue to make its full contribution to our national defense.

The Department of Defense welcomes the opportunity on this occasion to salute the working men and women of this country.

Firing Fever Hits Family At Matches

CAMP PERRY, Ohio, — Shooting fever is a mysterious malady that seems to strike anyone who spends any time here at the scene of the 1962 Rifle and Pistol Matches.

A case in point is the family of Lt. Col. Louis R. Buckner. The colonel, a member of the Operations and Training Section of The Infantry Center, was assigned here as the range director. As such, he is responsible for one of the largest rifle and pistol ranges in the world.

After a few weeks, the colonel's wife, Hazel, and two sons, Louis W., 12, and Thomas, 8, joined him here. Then the fever struck.

First to be affected were the two boys, who, awed by the sights and sounds of shooting, attended the Junior - Tyro school recently, to learn how to shoot the BB and Pellgun.

Not wanting to stay home while her family was engaged in the Camp Perry programs, Mrs. Buckner became afflicted with the "shooting fever" also. She attended the Small Arms Firing School here, learning to shoot the .22 and .45 caliber pistols. Then, she attended the Instructor's Course of the Junior - Tyro School, learning how to teach her sons and other boys like them how to shoot.

When they first arrived, Camp Perry was just another duty station to the Buckner family — a place the Army had sent Dad. Now, thanks to the strange "shooting fever", the Buckner Family is an active shooting family.

One small draw-back to the family's "togetherness" — Dad is so busy making sure that the matches, he is finding little time to join the family in shooting.

American U. Registration Is Scheduled

Registration for American University courses will be held from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. today through Sept. 11 in the Educational Developments Section here.

Classes will begin Sept. 11.

A wide selection of courses will be available and a college degree credit will be granted. Any member of the Armed Services may take the courses. The Army will pay 75 per cent of the tuition.

To qualify for registration, military personnel and their dependents must have a high school diploma or have successfully passed the high school GED test. A late registration fee of $5 will be charged for registrations after Sept. 11.

Classes will meet on Monday and Wednesday, and Tuesday and Thursday evenings at the Education Center. Students may earn a maximum of six semester hours of credit during the fall term.

The tentative schedule will include beginning courses in subjects such as business law, accounting, economics, history, biology, sociology, psychology, education and foreign languages.

Persons interested can visit or telephone the Army Education Center at 545-4111 for information.

LAAC Unit Will Receive New Copters

A Fort Benning medium helicopter unit, the 202nd Transportation Company assigned to Lawson Army Aviation Command, is slated to be the first unit of its type to be equipped with the HC-1B Chinook.

The first of the turbine powered rotary winged craft are scheduled to arrive in October, according to the 202nd's commander, Maj. Albert A. Johnson Jr.

The HC-1B is only one of the completely new inventory of aircraft the Army has programmed to meet the needs of its rapidly expanding aviation branch, officials said.

Army aviation's role today has been defined primarily as support of the combat commander in combat zones.

In fulfilling this role, the Army's helicopter and fixed-wing aircraft pilots fly missions that include aerial observation and surveillance, target acquisition, airlift of combat troops and supplies, aeromedical evacuation, radiological monitoring, and armed aircraft operations.

The Chinook is powered by two turbine engines, has a capability of airlifting 33 combat ready troops or 24 litter patients, an average cruise speed of 130 knots and can transport internal or external loads up to 16,000 pounds.

Back to the Woods Again For Next Combat Training

After participating in two weeks of field maneuvers, 2nd Division troops are back in the field maintaining their combat skills.

Five battle groups, cavalry, armor, engineer, aviation, artillery and trains units left their garrison areas Monday and returned yesterday. With training being conducted entirely on the Ft. Benning Reservation, the units are expected to continue this schedule weekly in preparation for future Army Training Tests.

The entire training phase will last about 14 weeks with final testing in November.

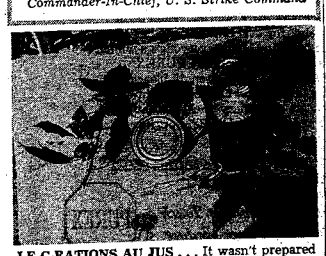
In Ten Areas

Ten separate training areas have been portioned off on the reservation where ten types of training will be conducted. The infantry battle groups will rotate in use of the various training areas with certain units using heavy equipment such as tanks remaining in one location throughout the training phase.

The rotation is designed especially to insure that no one unit should become too familiar with terrain in any location.

Special "field - type" telephones have been installed at all unit garrison headquarters, maintaining this one connection with their home areas while in the field.

Fridays and Saturdays are spent cleaning gear and preparing for the following week's field training.



From Gen. Adams

To Div 'Swift Strikers'

"As exercise SWIFT STRIKE passes into history, I wish to commend all participating forces for their whole-hearted efforts in making SWIFT STRIKE II a resounding success.

"The enthusiasm of the troops and the energetic play of the innumerable tactical and logistic situations have resulted in the participating forces gaining a vast sum of practical experience which would be of inestimable value if the forces should have to engage in combat."

General Paul D. Adams
Commander-In-Chief, U. S. Strike Command

On Safety

From General Chase

"The combination of August payday and the Labor Day weekend will find many people on our highways, all anxious to enjoy the holiday to the maximum extent possible.

"This condition will create hazards which could very easily result in accidents and personal tragedy. I urge all members of this Division to be alert to this potential danger to themselves and to their families; to exercise every precaution, and to allow plenty of time to accomplish necessary travel. We must also be alert to the hazards of our recreational activities, especially water sports; to the frequent electrical storms that occur during this period, and most important, to the extreme danger resulting from drinking while driving."

38th Alerts Liaison Men For Europe

By 38th Inf PIO

The training pace at 38th Infantry is increasing in direct proportion to the rapid approach of Sept. 10, the date scheduled for the departure of a liaison group to Germany under "Rotaplan," the experimental Army rotation plan.

The 38th, whose main body will fly to Germany approximately five weeks after the liaison group consisting of Lt. Col. Sidney J. Roche, battle group executive officer, and one representative from S-1 and S-4, is at present chiefly concerned with training personnel in the weapons to be used overseas.

Companies already have started this week to move to the Malone Trainfire complex for the beginning phases of qualification with the M-14 rifle.

Machinegun crews have been taking instruction in the M-60 machinegun, and plans are being made to orient personnel in the use of the grenade launcher and light anti-tank weapon.

Armored personnel carrier training is being planned; and drivers soon will be looking over and operating the Army M-151 quarter-ton vehicle to be used by the battle group in Europe. The drivers also are being instructed in USAREUR traffic regulations and international road signs.

Some live firing also is on the schedule for 81 millimeter mortar crews; and in between other training, troop informa-

Div Honors 16 Retirees

A miniature review is scheduled for 8 a.m. this morning in honor of those officers and men retiring from active duty this month.

With a total of 16 division members retiring, seven will be present for the parade at 2nd Division headquarters parade field.

Those present at the review honoring their retirement will be MSgt. Douglas Lawdy, platoon sergeant with 23rd Infantry; MSgt. Ronald W. Marcum, platoon sergeant, Troop C, 7th Cavalry; Plt. Sgt. Creighton W. Harris, platoon sergeant, Company A, 87th Infantry; SFC Robert M. Lillis, intermediate speed radio supervisor, 7th Cavalry; Sgt. Herman E. Lyons, fire direction computer, 23rd Infantry; Sgt. Hardrett L. Wiggins, battalion repairs and utilities noncommissioned officer, 38th Artillery; and Sp5 Edwin J. Thomas, senior auto repairman, 702nd Ordnance Battalion.

Those retiring during the month of August but not attending the review are Lt. Col. Donald B. Roof, 15th Artillery commander, 21 years service; CWO (W-3) Henry T. McFarland, division engineer supply officer, 2nd Engineer Battalion, 20 years service.

MSgt. Clyde B. Martin, senior S-4 sergeant with the 9th Infantry, 20 years service; SFC Janies Defries, mess steward, 2nd Administration Company, 22 years service; SFC William Perry, section sergeant, Company B, 2nd Medical Battalion, 20 years service; SSgt. William E. Floyd, squad leader, Company C, 2nd Engineer Battalion, 21 years service; Sgt. Ernest A. Clark, petroleum foreman, 2nd Quartermaster Company, 20 years service; Sgt. Francisco Rivera, team leader, 23rd Infantry, 21 years service; Sp5 Eli W. Newsome, heavy truck driver, 69th Armor, 21 years service.

23rd 'Finds' Artist --- Sp4 From Ecuador

By Charles T. Coker

A native of Ecuador who hopes to become a U. S. citizen, is steadily earning the title of "unofficial" artist of the 23rd Infantry. Using his artistic abilities, Sp4 Hernan P. Montesinos has worked for practically every section of the battle group, and, thanks to him, the sergeant major and battle group executive officer are wearing painted stripes and oak leaf on their respective helmet liners, rather than the paste-on decals.

PAINTER PUTS FINISHING TOUCH TO SIGN
Sp4 Montesinos in his 23rd Infantry Shop

Latest project undertaken by the 23-year-old Latin brushpusher is the painting of directional signs to the battle group, and new signs designating each of the seven company locations. The signs are on a white background with black lettering. On one side will be a big Indianhead with the unit crest on the opposite side. Blended in the background will be soft-blue silhouettes of infantrymen in action.

Montesinos grew up in Cuenca, Ecuador, the son of a draftsman. His father works for an American company. As a teenager he developed a liking for drawing, and all through high school used his ability for school posters, decorating for dances, etc. He entered Guayaquil University for two years, studying architectural and chemical engineering.

After college, he did commercial art work for newspapers and architects in his hometown. Also, he once drew up a coversheet of Ecuador's capital building for one of the national magazines.

Adventure and the United States beckoned and in August 1960, he arrived in Miami, and was sent here to Fort Benning and basic with "C" Troop, 7th Cavalry. He joined Headquarters Company and the engineer platoon of the 23rd last September.

His talent as an artist soon became known, and he is constantly in demand for various projects. The battle group newspaper, The Totem Pole, has garnered his services and has received many compliments on the artistic work. In a Service Club Number Two-sponsored art contest, he walked off with both first and second places in the water color division.

Capt R H Corliss For 23rd Inf.

A recent graduate of the Officer Career Course at the U.S. Army Infantry Center has been assigned to the 23rd Infantry with duties as assistant S-3.

Captain Reginald H. Corliss, who entered active duty status in October 1963, received his commission through the Reserve Officer Training Corps at the University of Vermont.

Sp4 Min Gets Citizenship At Ga. Court

By 23rd Inf PIO

United States citizenship comes automatically for most of us at birth, but for those born in other countries, it is a happy and rewarding occasion. Such is the case of Sp4 Zin Min, 23rd Infantry battle group special order clerk.

This week at the Columbus, Ga., Courthouse, after putting much time and effort toward the goal, the small, easy-going former Burmese national had his dream come true and received his U. S. citizenship papers.

Twenty-six year old Min was born just outside Putao, Burma, and was first exposed to the English language by his Indian nurse at the age of five. He continued learning it through his father all through secondary school.

College In Mandalay

Continuing his education, he entered Mandalay College, and completed intermediate college there. It was in 1954, his last year there, that hard work and exceptionally good grades paid off. He was granted a scholarship by the Burmese government to attend Lehigh University at Bethlehem, Pa., for having one of the best scholastic records in all Burma.

Excited, Min eagerly boarded his first airplane, and flew off to Pennsylvania. Enroute, he reports, there was difficulty in paging his name over the public address system. In Rome, he was paged as "Mr. Zinnin" while in Amsterdam it was "Mr. Zinnin".

He attended Lehigh from 1954 to 1957, where he was graduated with a bachelor of science degree in mining engineering. After college and until he entered the U. S. Army for a three year stint in 1961, he held the position of chief mining engineer for a western Pennsylvania coal mining company.

Adcock Named 'Always First' August Soldier

By 1st Infantry PIO

Sergeant Marion W. Adcock, Combat Support Company, was selected as the 1st Infantry "Soldier of the Month" for the month of August.

The selection was made by a board composed of the battle group sergeant major and two non-commissioned officers.

Sergeant Adcock won over representatives from all companies. Sergeant Adcock is an assistant squad leader assigned to Combat Support Company.

He is a veteran of the Korean War and has received many awards and decorations.

Selection for the monthly honor is based on the individual's appearance, military knowledge and bearing, job competence and knowledge of current world wide events.

Sergeant Adcock will receive a $25 United States Savings Bond for his selection.

'Always First' Welcomes DCO

By 1st Inf PIO

The 1st Infantry recently received a new deputy battle group commander.

Lt. Col. Jack Samson, who was Assistant Chief of Staff, G-3 at Division Headquarters prior to his assignment with the "Always First," succeeds Lt. Col. James C. Larson, who has been assigned to Headquarters as assistant chief of staff, G-4.

A graduate of Officer Candidate School, Col. Samson received his commission in 1942. Before coming to the 2nd Division he was an instructor in the Command and Staff Department, United States Army Infantry School.

The colonel has more than 12 awards and decorations, including the Combat Infantryman's Badge, with star.

Colonel Samson, who attended Southern Oregon College and the University of Omaha, lives on post with his wife at 406 1st Division Road.

87th Task Force Uses Many Tactics

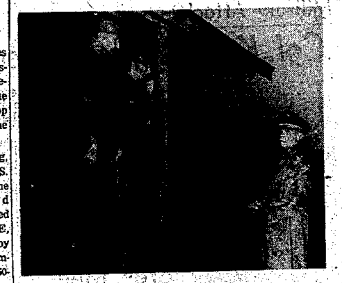
By 87th Inf PIO

Fighting under the flag of the mythical Gutasu Red Force, as a part of the 2nd Division Aggressor Army, the 87th Infantry task force climaxed months of intensive combat training.

Arriving on the South Carolina scene Monday, Aug. 6, in the vicinity of Sumter, S. C., representatives of the Aggressor force assembled to hear III Corps Commander Lt. Gen. Thomas W. Dunn explain the mission of the Red Force. Gen. Dunn further explained how all modern Army techniques of warfare were to be incorporated into the exercise, which STRIKE officials hoped would emphasize realism with safety.

Bridges Are "Blown"

At 3:30 a.m. on Aug. 8, the first signs of combat were detected along the Lynches River when the "enemy" Renloa Blue Force "blew up" several key bridges. With the battle group alerted, their first mission was to seize and secure these important river crossings.



Split into two forces, the regular task force, under the command of Co. Ralph H. Hughett, had the job of providing the division's left flank with maximum security. The other, led by Lt. Col. Raymond J. Rash, Jr., protected important bridge sites along the right flank of the division.

Along with the attacking "Reds," the 87th pushed deep into "enemy" territory, moving up to 50 miles a day. While near Bennettsville, S. C., the "enemy" 101st Airborne Division made a successful drop behind the front lines, effectively stopping the attack. A counterattack followed, during which the 87th pulled back in the vicinity of Woodrow in a defensive blocking position.

Wipe-out Enemy

After a brief administrative break, the war raged on, with the 87th called upon to cut off "enemy" escape routes and split the "Blues" into segments. With all the companies attached to brigade, their mission was to seek out and destroy the remainder of airborne troops that continued to drop during the final phases of the war.

On the last day of fighting, Aug. 7, near Darlington, S. C., three companies of the 87th Infantry surrounded and annihilated a company-sized "enemy" force. Companies E, A and C were credited by STRICOM umpires with completely wiping out nearly a 150-man Blue Force unit. Employing artillery barrages, small arms fire and close combat tactics, the 87th invaders were able to capture over 170 prisoners.

CINCSTRIKE ON SCENE . . . Visiting troops of the 9th Infantry during the Battle of Bishopville, near the close of the exercise, is General Paul D. Adams, right, commander-in-chief of the U.S. Strike Command and director of Exercise SWIFT STRIKE II.

Military Attache

Col. K. L. Eggleston Reassigned to Ethiopia

ACHIEVEMENT . . . Presented a certificate of achievement recently was Lt. Col. Gus H. Grisard, 2nd Division signal officer. The award was presented by Maj. Gen. Charles H. Chase, division commander.

The Inspector General of the 2nd Division, an officer instrumental in establishing the Ethiopian Infantry School, is scheduled to return to that country as military attache assigned to the United States Embassy of Ethiopia.

Lt. Col. Kenneth L. Eggleston, who has been IG since February 1, 1961, is due to arrive for his new assignment at Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, on June 1, 1963. Before leaving the United States, however, Col. Eggleston will go to Washington where he will attend the Amharic language course and the Strategic Intelligence School. Amharic is the national language of Ethiopia.

Sent To Italy

Col. Eggleston entered the Army in 1943, received his officer's commission upon graduation from Officer Candidate School and was then assigned to the 10th Mountain Division. His unit was sent to Italy, where the colonel remained until 1946, when he was assigned to duty in Trieste. He was stationed in Trieste through 1952.

After spending 1952 and 1953 with the Mountain Cold Weather Training Command at Fort Carson, Colo., Col. Eggleston went to Korea, where until 1954 he was with the 7th Division, United Nations Command Military Armistice Commission. During the latter assignment, he was the liaison officer with the neutral nations inspection team in Pusan, where all incoming and outgoing personnel and material were inspected.

Prior to his first tour in Ethiopia in 1958, the colonel attended the Command and General Staff College in 1954, and was on the faculty and staff of the Army Intelligence School, Fort Holabird, Md. from 1955 to 1958.

Col. Eggleston went to Ethiopia as a member of the joint Army, Navy and Air Force Military Assistance Advisory Group. During this time, he met His Imperial Majesty Haile Selassie I, the emperor of Ethiopia.

Colonel Eggleston joined the 2nd Division in November of 1959, during which time, in addition to being the IG, he has been battle group S-4 and executive officer of the 1st Infantry and executive officer of Division Trains.

His wife and son will accompany him to Ethiopia.

Bickerstaff Bros. Meet At Exercise

By 22nd Inf PIO

Exercise SWIFT STRIKE II did more than provide men of the 23rd Infantry with a realistic view of what war might actually be like. For Specialist Five Dee Bickerstaff of Headquarters Company it was climaxed with a reunion with a brother, Sgt. Clayton Bickerstaff.

It had been almost four years since the two brothers from Hodges, Alabama had seen one another. Clayton services as a member of the Military Police with the 101st Airborne Division at Fort Campbell, Ky.

The purely chance meeting, since the two were members of opposing forces during the problem, resulted when Dee and members of the Headquarters Company engineer platoon were assembling with the battle group for their return trip to Benning. Dee spotted some 101st Airborne Division men in a jeep and asked them if they knew where his brother was located. They directed him to a nearby location, and the two brothers had a surprise reunion.

A third brother, Othell, is also in the Army and is assigned to the 8th Division in Germany.

FIRST DESTROYER

The Navy's first destroyer, the Bainbridge, was launched in 1901. It had a top speed of 28 knots, displaced 420 tons and was armed with two torpedo tubes, two 3-inch 50's and five six pounders.

Ripe Melons Found Easily By 23rd Soldier

The old trick of the forked stick finding water has nothing on a 23rd Infantry soldier.

By placing a grass straw across the width of a watermelon, Specialist Five James H. Huddleston of Headquarters Company can tell by the movement of the straw on the melon whether or not the fruit is ripe.

Much to the amazement of his fellow soldiers, Huddleston demonstrated several times that if the straw moves from side to side, the melon is ripe. No movement at all indicates that the melon has not ripened sufficiently.

Huddleston traces his knowledge of this trick back to his youth and the farm he grew up on in Lutesville, Missouri.

9th Takes to Field To Stay Battle-Ready

By 9th Infantry PIO

The entire 9th Infantry, with the exception of a portion of Headquarters Company, went to the field Monday to begin a 12-week period of operational readiness training, designed to maintain the battle group's high state of combat readiness.

Training begins with individual squad exercises and progresses to platoon, company, and, finally, battle group level tactical exercises.

At the end of each level of training, Army training tests will be administered, the final test being the Battle Group Army Training Test, which is scheduled for November 9-15.

Each squad will be tested by its own company with platoon and company level tests being conducted by Headquarters, 9th Infantry, and Headquarters, 2nd Division, respectively.

The 9th Infantry will go to the field Monday of each week and will return to Sand Hill Thursday. Fridays and Saturdays will be spent maintaining equipment and attending mandatory classes.

A company or battle group level inspection is scheduled for each Saturday morning throughout the 12 weeks.

9th Re-Ups 17

The 9th Infantry reenlistment office reenlisted 17 men since last July 15. This is one of the 2nd Division's highest unit reenlistment totals for the period.

PRESENTING NEW OBJECTS FOR 2ND DIVISION MUSEUM
From Left, Gen. Chase, Lt. Col. Wine and MSgt. Samuel Gore

Mementos for Museum

Three gifts, mementos of the July extension dedication of the 2nd Division Flaming Sword monument in Washington D. C., were received recently at the Division Museum.

A marble plaque was the first of these gifts. Hewn from the same marble as the Flaming Sword monument, it symbolizes the famed monument in honoring the Division's dead of both World Wars and the Korean conflict.

Also presented was the first American flag flown at the memorial during the dedication ceremonies. It was presented by the National Park Service of the Department of the Interior.

The third gift was the trowel used to seal the crypt in the east perestal of the monument. Inclosed in the crypt is the honor scroll containing in a copper box the names of the donors to the expansion project. The list included over 11,000 men of the active 2nd Division who contributed $15,000 to the project.

Traffic Quiz

Who Beat the Steamer?

BY DAVID M. WINKLER

Many times we have heard the question, "How can I apply my religion to everyday life?" For those who drive automobiles, our highways are a good place to start. Let your religion show while driving.

This is one in a series of quizzes designed to test the motorisit's general knowledge.

QUESTIONS

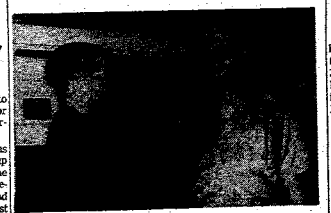
Key to 38th Is Movement

Swift Strike II Allowed None To 'Grow Roots'

By 38th Inf PIO

Movement — that seemed to be just about the key word for the 38th Infantry during Exercise SWIFT STRIKE II.

Rifle companies and platoons alike weren't able to set up as the tactical situation in the realistic maneuvers kept riflemen and drivers, cooks and commanders, privates and just everyone on the go.



After moving to a position beyond the release point of McBrides Corner, the motor convoy element of the battle group and supporting units soon moved near the town of Elliott, S. C., prior to the arrival of troops on the bus convoy. Preparations were made here for the initial attack.

The attacking force then moved east across the Lynches River to seize a sector of Darlington, rested overnight and then moved north through the town of Society Hill and across the Great Pee Dee River towards Bennettsville. Some of the hardest fighting of the maneuver took place for the 38th in this area prior to the administrative break which found the unit generally between the Great Pee Dee and Bennettsville.

When the administrative break ended, the 38th was ordered to points to the south, west and north of Shaw Air Force Base. Attacking as a task force, the battle group and its support units gained the air base, then moved 71 miles under cover of darkness to the Darlington - Lamar area and continued the attack generally in this region until problem's end.

The Headquarters Company element had no fewer than eight major semi-permanent positions during the problem while the command group in its tactical forward status moved many more times — sometimes remaining in a position for hours, other times only for brief minutes.

The 38th met enemy forces from all of the three major elements facing the Red Forces during the maneuvers — 1st Infantry Division, 5th Infantry Division (Mechanized) and 101st Airborne Division troops.

NEW MAJOR . . . Recently promoted to his present rank is Major Aylwyn D. Williams, right, S-3 officer for 2nd Division Brigade, shown being promoted by Colonel William O. Morgan, deputy brigade commander.

Hectic Time For 2nd Aviation Co.

From reconnaissance patrols to the evacuation of victims, from the operation of a carrier service to Fort Benning to the transportation of troops, supplies and VIP's — these are just some of the hundreds of missions flown by the 2nd Aviation Co. during SWIFT STRIKE II.

Averaging a 90 per cent mobility, the 2nd Aviation Co. was continually on the move, flying to and from the battle groups and division headquarters to the front lines and into "enemy" territory.

This was the first time the company completely supported the entire Division in the field and consequently was faced with many new problems. All problems were solved and the division aviation officer, Lt. Col. John M. Stephens Jr., was highly pleased with the tactical performance and safety record of the unit.

Many times the helicopter pilots set their planes down with little more than a farmer's vacant field or a small clearing in a pine forest to act as a heliport, yet throughout the exercise the company maintained an accident-free record.

This was also the first time the company was dispersed over such a large area thus complicating fueling and maintenance, but the performance of a H-34 helicopter, rigged out to bring immediate maintenance to stricken helicopters or vehicles, did much to alleviate this problem.

Around the clock aircraft radio relay, operated by the 2nd Aviation Co., again proved invaluable and kept up communications between units separated and dispersed over large areas.

With 25 helicopters and 19 fixed-wing aircraft the company racked up an impressive 2,000 aviator hours which includes pilot, co-pilot and instructor pilot.

Airborne Seizes But to No Avail

By 12th Arty PIO

The 101st Airborne Division had its hands full when they took PFC Melvin L. Screeton Jr. of Battery B, 12th Artillery as a prisoner of war during Exercise SWIFT STRIKE II.

Screeton experienced an adventure of capture, escape, and evasion, which served to add an extra touch of realism to the war games.

As the 12th Arty motor convoy was forced to make an unscheduled turn off Highway 15 North of Bishopville, S. C. to avoid capture, PFC Screeton was posted as a road guard to insure that no vehicles missed the turn.

As Screeton waited for a few last straggling vehicles, which he was informed were somewhere behind, he saw an enemy column approaching from the direction of Bishopville. Having no way to leave the area, Screeton tried hiding behind a shed. Everything seemed to be moving in his direction when he looked around one side of the shed and saw no immediate danger. However, as he turned to check the other side, he found himself staring into the muzzle of an enemy flare gun. Thus Screeton became a prisoner of war.

With Screeton captive, the 101st tried many means of obtaining helpful information while receiving over and over his name, rank, service number, and date of birth.

As the opportunity presented itself in a heavily wooded area during a period of disorder caused by an aggressor attack, Screeton with a newly acquired friend made an escape from the back of a truck.

The time after this was spent trying by various means to determine the direction of enemy forces. Eventually Screeton received a ride part of the way in a friendly ambulance. After spending time with first one unit and then another on the return trip and eating rations obtained from the captors during his escape, Screeton finally was delivered to Division Artillery Headquarters. From this Headquarters Screeton was returned to the 12th Artillery where he was questioned by the battalion S-2. Upon completion of his battalion report PFC Screeton returned to his job as a launcher crewman in the Honest John Rocket Battery.

Screeton is the son of M-SGT Melvin L. Screeton Sr. of Fort Sam Houston at San Antonio, Texas.

2nd MPs Guard Prisoners, Patrol Cities Without Break Durining Swift Strike II

During the SWIFT STRIKE II administrative break there was at least one participating section that could not set aside their work.

The 2nd Military Police Detachment was given the responsibility during the break for the policing of the nearby South Carolina towns. Lt. Col. Frank E. Hearn Jr., who arrived here as provost marshall on July 30, just days before the beginning of Swift Strike II, assigned them this duty.

The busy MP's, who prior to the start of the combat maneuver took part in a command post exercise preparing them for their field duties, also sent a liaison officer ahead of them to contact civil authorities with whom they were to cooperate.

Once the maneuver was under way, with traffic control and patrolling of towns continuing, the military police were also in charge of safeguarding prisoners of war brought to POW collecting points by their captors. The police were not responsible for transporting the prisoners from their point of capture to the collecting points. They had to guard the POW's at both the collecting points and the prisoner of war enclosures.

With nearly 250 prisoners processed through the camps at the time of writing, and several days of combat remaining, the 2nd MP Detachment allowed only two prisoners to escape — one from a truck during a change of position, and another from a prison camp.

The prisoners were processed through to III Corps as quickly as possible, but in the case of officers, NCO's or men with maps or other apparently important information, they were turned over to Military Intelligence men for extensive interrogation.

Also, there were no MP's captured during the exercise, in spite of the fact that they were very definitely "in the game."

With the command posts being moved many times during the maneuver, the military police were confronted with an additional job. When changes of position were contemplated, Maj. Jerome J. Repsher, headquarters commandant, would go out, along with a representative from the provost marshall's office, to investigate possible sites.

If the new location selected required the movement of convoys through towns, the PM representative contacted the civil authorities and made the necessary arrangements. At times, rush hours could not be avoided, with the result that an additional burden was placed on the military police.

Still another duty of the MP was to operate a straggler point, which was situated within the area of the POW camp. To this point would be brought persons who were lost from their units, or dazed or shell-shocked. The MP's would attempt to locate the straggler's unit so that he could be picked up and returned.

Lastly, there were 12 MP's assigned to guard the division command post; four were general's guards, four guarded the division tactical operations center, and four the dismount point beyond which authorized vehicles were not permitted.

To Be Filmed

Motion picture cameras and still cameras will invade the 38th Infantry to capture future training and activities of this Europe-bound unit.

Personnel from the Army Pictorial Center at Long Island City, N. Y. will provide motion picture and still coverage of the Battle group training, packing, loading, moving and assuming duties in Europe.

38th Alerts

tion subjects preparing replacements for overseas movement are being conducted. Such items as Code of Conduct lectures, overseas orientations, and the Physical Combat Proficiency Test are being completed.

Advance Group Follows

Separating the departures of the three-man liaison group and the main body — which is scheduled to leave for Baumholder Post, Germany, between Oct. 5 and 15 — is an advance group of approximately 70 men, who will leave around 70 men. Among these there will be four enlisted men from each line company, two officers and five enlisted men from Headquarters Company, two officers and eight enlisted men from Combat Support, four enlisted men from S-1, one officer and one enlisted man from S-2, two officers and two enlisted men from S-3 and four enlisted men from S-4.

This party, along with the liaison group, will inventory and receipt for unit and station property in Europe, establish local supply and other accounts for the incoming units, and orient the outgoing battle group.

An advance party from Europe will come to Fort Benning on the same aircraft used to transport the Germany-bound group.

A number of officers and enlisted men are arriving at the 38th, bringing the battle group near full strength. These persons are mostly from other 2nd Infantry Division battle groups.

"Rotaplan" provides for the rotation of three battle groups to Europe, with one rotating to the U. S. every two months. The battle group returning here will be replaced in Europe by a battle group from the United States. The units returning to the states will be assigned to the Strategic Army Corps (STRAC), and normally will remain here for a period of 18 to 30 months before redeploying to Europe.

Chicken Dinner With the Enemy; Part of Exercise Swift Strike II?

Although Exercise SWIFT STRIKE II ended two weeks ago, 9th Infantry men are still talking about the unusual experiences some of them had with the civilian population within the SWIFT STRIKE area.

The consensus among 9th Infantry troops is that Carolina people are the friendliest people one could hope to meet. More than a few Soldiers received and accepted invitations to dinner. Some even found the Carolina civilians more than willing to aid and abet escaped prisoners.

One particular instance is related by a private first class from Company E:

"I was captured by some 101st Airborne men late one afternoon, but, as soon as it got dark, I escaped and ran into the woods. I walked about two miles to a farmhouse where we'd filled our canteens that afternoon and knocked on the door.

"The farmer's wife answered the door but immediately closed it and locked it. I knocked again, and this time her husband answered. He invited me in and apologized for his wife's behavior.

"Evidently she had been frightened by my apparance, as I was scratched up a little from walking through the woods in the dark and hadn't had a bath in three days. Also some soldiers had stopped by earlier in the day and warned them against helping or having anything at all to do with those fellows with the green jackets and things on their helmets.'

"I asked to fill my canteen, but they wouldn't let me go until I had eaten some hot biscuits and fried chicken. I had just finished eating when someone else knocked on the door. I thought it was probably some 101st Airborne men, so I told the farmer and his wife that I'd have to hide and that if these newcomers didn't have green jackets like mine to say that they hadn't seen me.

"The farmer let them in. I could see everything from my hiding place, which was the bathroom, and, sure enough, they were three from the 101st Airborne. They wanted to fill their canteens, too. I expected the farmer and his wife to send them away, but, cordial people that they were, they extended an invitation to have some chicken to the newcomers, who, of course hastily accepted.

"The farmer and his wife didn't really betray me. They just left me sitting in the bathroom and seemed to forget all about me. I eased out the bathroom window and ran into the woods."

A private from Company C was crashing through the brush in pursuit of the enemy one day during the exercise and stumbled upon an old gentleman with a shotgun. He seemed to be guarding something about the size of a jeep, but it was covered with canvas.

The private, being a South Carolina boy himself, recognized the guarded object as a jeep, a jeep guerrilla. Now those old still. Said the private: "I just moonlighters just don't fool ran onto this old boy, all of a around, so I just rendered a sudden like and stopped dead hand salute, did an about face in my tracks. I knew he wasn't and beat a hasty retreat."

What's In a Name? Just Ask 23rd Inf.

AN UNMANNED TOWED GLIDER, a new version of the unique Flexible Wing System, is towed by an Army helicopter in this artist's concept. Undergoing studies at Ryan Aeronautical Co., the Flexible Wing glider may be able to lift as much as six times the normal lifting capacity of the helicopter. Following release from the helicopter, the payload—all types of supplies, weapons and fuel—would be delivered by the Flexible Wing in a gentle glide to a prescribed area and under radio control from the aircraft or the ground. This would provide speedy logistics support to Army units in the field. The Flexible Wing is of flexible, plastic-coated material attached to a keel and leading edge members forming an arrow of V-shaped, kite-like surface.

By 23rd Inf PIO

Ever sit down and think of what's in a name? Ever wonder just what type names comprise a particular unit, insofar as odd names, short names, long names, most common names, etc., are concerned? Recently the public information office of the 23rd Infantry perused a battle group roster of its assigned personnel, and has come up with some amazing findings.

First to catch the eye was famous names within the battle group. Company D has its own John Adams. And James Stewart is assigned to Company C. Echo claims George Hamilton, Headquarters has its Gerry Butler, and, would you believe it, Combat Support enjoys the antics of Jerry Lewis.

Beginning the roster is Sp4 Ralph W. Aaron of Company B, with Pvt. Tomo Zivic of Company A rounding it out. Packed in between are men from all walks of life, and nations. Topping the "most common name" list are the ever-popular Smiths, with the Browns, the Joneses, the Johnsons, and the Whites in that order. Men from Burma, Hungary, Poland, Germany, Ireland, Lebanon, and Italy can be found in this combat-ready STRAC outfit.

Colors, too, abound in the outfit, with Greens, Whites, Browns, Grays, Silver, and Golden producing an omnipresent atmosphere of autumn. Not to confine "Silver" to a color, we use it, along with the "Nickols" (also "Nikkels") and "Penny," to add to the wealth of the 23rd domain.

Proper names — the names of countries, cities, rivers, etc., are all common to members of the 23rd. For instance, it may seem difficult to believe that located within the realm of the 23rd, there exists "Ireland" and "Jordan." One may motor through the area in a "Ford," visiting such cities as "Boston," "Paris," "Cleveland," "Austin," and "Sumter." The "Hudson" River even flows through this "English" - speaking geographical area. Strange also, is the fact that two compass points and two seasons exist in "Twenty-thirdland!" — "Southern" and "West," and "Summer" and "Winter."

Wild game is somewhat limited in our imaginary land, with only "Fox" and "Hawks" available for our "King" and lone "Knight" to stalk. However, this is as it should be, since we are a "Christian," "Peoples," and do want to live in "Peace"

ATOMIC WEAPON

The first atomic weapon that reached the field was the Mk 9 or M 354 shell for the 280mm gun.

Odd last names, at least those not typically American, sometimes present pronunciation problems. Take for instance Szaranice, Dobrowolski, Olazagasti, Radosevich, Schleck, Przybilski. Tongue twisters? We also have several very short last names: Yon, Ruh, Min, Kaw, Poe, Fry, and Ard.

More last names within the 23rd Infantry begin with the letter "B" than any other letter. It is followed by "M," "R," "S," and "W." One "U" and one "Q" are tied for the letter with the least number of last names starting with a certain letter. Unfortunately, there are no "X's" presently assigned to the battle group.

Of all the names, perhaps the most interesting and longest (28 letters) is that of PFC Kenneth Zimostraderowesterманchowski, a medic in Headquarters Company. However, since entering military service, his Polish name has been shortened to Zimostrad, for convenience sake.

Cake, Coffee At Divarty Parties

The ladies of Division Artillery Headquarters held their monthly coffee on August 21 in the Normandy Room of the Main Officers' Open Mess.

Mrs. Stanley Harding poured during the morning event at which Mrs. Russel K. Lee served as hostess. The serving table was adorned with an arrangement of peach gladiolus and astors.

Farewell was said to Mrs. Lee, who will accompany Chaplain (Lieutenant Colonel) Lee to another duty station early next month.

12th Artillery

The distaff members of the 12th Artillery held their monthly coffee August 17 in the home of Mrs. Robert W. Garner. Assisting hostess was Mrs. George I. Coulbourn.

A single floral arrangement of gladiolus, astors and daisies graced the serving coffee table.

Miss Kay Jones, the daughter of Mrs. Dillard F. Jones, was a guest at the affair.

17th Artillery

Homemade ice cream and cake were the highlights of the monthly coffee for the ladies of the 17th Artillery.

The event was held August 21 in the home of Mrs. Willie W. Phillips.

38th Artillery

Mrs. Harry T. Hannon was hostess in her home recently to the ladies of the 38th Artillery for their monthly coffee.

She chose a fresh fruit centerpiece for the serving table.

Mrs. Edmond D. Rozecki and Mrs. Robert B. Parsons, who both were presented with corsages, were bid farewell by the ladies of the group.

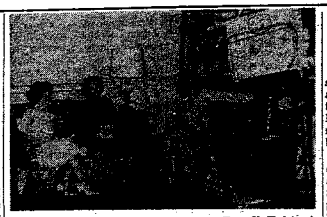
Family Reunion



The family of Major Paul B. Robinson, Company Commander of 2nd Aviation Company, have recently joined him here from Boston, Mass.

After a short time of being together the family will again be separated when Rosemarie, the eldest Robinson daughter, will return to Stone Hill College in North Easton, Mass. while Kathleen, age 16, will attend Mount St. Joseph Academy in Brighton, Mass.

The youngest Robinson daughter, Janet, will remain at Fort Benning with her parents.

Bridge Parties

The ladies of the 87th Infantry held a series of three bridge parties during Operation Swift Strike II. Mrs. James G. Getz was the hostess of the first gathering while Mrs. Arthur A. Ullman and Mrs. Thomas M. Glushien hosted the ladies at the second and third parties, respectively.

AT HOME WITH ROZELL . . . Rozell Fabiani of WRBL-TV (right) interviews Mrs. Harold Roeder (left) and Mrs. James Kolb about the recently published 2nd Division Engagement-Calendar Book. The book will be on sale at the Sand Hill PX during lunch hour on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of next week; also at the Custer Terrace Shopping Center on Thursday afternoon and at the Main Post commissary and PX from 1:00 p.m. on Friday.

Mrs. Keller Entertains

The monthly coffee for the ladies of the 23rd Infantry was held August 10 at the home of Mrs. Lucien S. Keller, wife of the new battle group commander of the 23rd Infantry.

Special guests invited were Mrs. John E. Kelly, Mrs. Stanley L. Harding, Mrs. Clifford Hannum, Mrs. Ralph Hughett, Mrs. Maurice C. Holden and Mrs. John F. Staples.

The table was set with Army and Navy cloth and a Danish silver service. Pouring tea was Mrs. Michael J. 'Lally Jr. while Mrs. Benjamin S. Silver served the guests coffee.

A short business meeting was conducted, and it was agreed to reprint the 23rd cookbook. Committees were formed, and Mrs. Del L. Briscoe was named publicity chairman treasurer; Mrs. Ralph E. Inman; and Mrs. Silver, in charge of the calling committee.

A farewell was given Mrs. Michael J. Lally Jr., and a welcome bestowed upon Mrs. Ralph J. Griffon and Mrs. Robert L. Mosier.

Next month's coffee will be held at the home of Mrs. Richard A. Perkins.

Last Dance Of Summer

The final event for the summer season of the College Age Group was held last Friday. August 24, in the ballroom of the Country Club. The evening affair was a dance featuring the New Yorkers combo.

Chairmen for the various committees of the function were Miss Charlotte Strange of Mount St. Joseph, Cincinnati, Ohio; Patrick Jones, University of Illinois; Mary Beth Harding, Georgetown University, Washington, D.C.; Donna Hankins of University of Florida; and Betty Drissel of Rollins College.

Lt. Col. and Mrs. George McLendon and Lt. Col. and Mrs. R. K. Jones were the chaperones.

The next event planned by the group will be during the Christmas holidays.

Officers' Wives Club Pres. Has Versatile Activities

By Kaye Lee

A measure of the esteem held for Mrs. James T. Kolb became evident last May when she was elected to the presidency of the 2nd Division Officers' Wives Club.

Mrs. Kolb, who is noted for her quiet efficiency and charm, is the wife of Lieutenant Colonel Kolb, G-3 of the division.

"Inky"

The former Emma Rose Talbot of Fayetteville, N.C. is more familiarly known as "Inky," a nickname carried over from her prep school days. Fifteen years ago in the Presbyterian church of Fayetteville she married the then Captain Kolb. Since then she has contributed her many and varied talents to the communities and posts at which she and her husband have been assigned.

Mrs. Kolb

She has worked extensively with the Grey Ladies and regrets that her activities at Fort Benning prevent her from being active in this endeavor here. She insists that in work of this type one always gets back so much more than one is able to put into it.

Besides her efforts as president of the 2nd Division Officers' Wives Club, she works each month in the Thrift Shop. She is very interested in dramatics and has contributed her talents to several productions at other Army posts but, again, she cannot find the time to participate in the drama group at Fort Benning.

Her days are filled with incredibly versatile activities. For active enjoyment she plays golf, swims, bowls and rides. For more relaxing enjoyment nothing delights her more than an afternoon of bridge. She also likes to "dabble" in oil painting but confesses that many times her paints completely dry out because of disuse. One of her ambitions is to study art, particularly in the field of portraits.

Enjoys Baking

Cooking and especially baking, is a favorite pastime for Mrs. Kolb. Colonel Kolb does not care for desserts but she takes time from her busy schedule to make sure that she has some "goodie" on hand should company call.

Mrs. Kolb, who likes to keep comfortably busy, welcomes all opportunities to learn new skills and knowledge in any field. She humorously admitted that she was, "one of those people who would try anything once!"

Like most of her contemporaries, Mrs. Kolb enjoys traveling and hopes to return to Europe for another tour.

It was at Fort Dix, N.J. that she had her first experience as an Army wife. This tour was followed by an assignment at Fort Knox, Ky. and a three year stay in Germany. She and Colonel Kolb spent a short time in Detroit and then were assigned to Fifth Army Headquarters in Chicago, which was followed by assignments in Newport, R.I. and Arlington, Va. Mrs. Kolb cites the latter as her favorite tour.

Before coming to Fort Benning for their current tour, they were stationed at Fort McPherson, Ga. It was at Fort McPherson that Mrs. Kolb received two of her most prized possessions. She was presented Certificates of Merit by Lt. General T. J. H. Trapnell and General H. B. Powell for her outstanding participation in community affairs. They are just two more indications that she is, indeed, a valuable contributor to the well-being of the community in which she resides.

Name Staff For Dance School

The Dance School, sponsored by the 2nd Division Officers' Wives Club, has completed staff selections and is now accepting registrations for the fall classes.

Miss Rossie Gilmore, director of the school, will teach ballet and toe. Vicki Morales will conduct classes in beginning ballet and Nancy King will instruct pre-ballet classes. Carol Greenfield, the newest member of the staff, will teach tap and modern jazz.

Both group and private lessons will be offered. Lessons will be held on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday in Building 1053.

Registration may be made through Miss Gilmore, FA 3-3072 or Mrs. Peabody, MU 9-1209.

Second Aviation Flies To Twenties

A "Roaring 20's", costume party was the theme of an event given by the officers and ladies of the 2nd Aviation Company at the Lawson Officers' Club on August 25.

The club was decorated to recreate the atmosphere of the 20's complete with a stuffed dummy, stationed at the entrance, dubbed "Willie The Worm" sporting a scarred face and notched gun. It was here that guests were asked "to check their fods."

The main room was decorated with large reflecting balls and pictures depicting the period. Balloons and streamers added to the color of the party. The tables were set in cafe style.

Guests of the evening included Lieutenant Colonel and Mrs. Benjamin S. Sliver, Major and Mrs. Robert B. Parsons, Captain and Mrs. Frank C. Bertagnes, Captain and Mrs. Reginald H. Corliss and Captain and Mrs. Dennis J. Horran.

The ladies presented a program which took place in the "Bluehorse Speak-Easy", with Mrs. John M. Stephens portraying "Texas Guinan" and acting as toast-mistress. Presenting acts in the program were the Flappers Four, Mrs. Franklin Harris, Mrs. Neil Johnson, Mrs. Willaim Priest and Mrs. Warren Griffith; The Baby Face Group, featuring Mrs. Jerry Keebaugh and Mrs. Allan Hammerbeck; The Bowery Bums and Barney Google, Mrs. Robert Messer, Mrs. John W. Barry, Mrs. Carroll Heape, Mrs. Jack Lawrence and Mrs. John D. Jenks as Barney Google. The Bathing Beauties from Iris, Mrs. Neil Johnson, Mrs. Fire Island were Mrs. Maurice Jack F. Lawrence and Mrs. Menefee, Mrs. Franklin Har- Jerry Keebaugh.

CG's Trophy Race Gets Underway

With the advent of darkened mornings and dripping skies comes the second series for this year's Commanding General's Trophy.

Already off to a flying start with the completion of the tennis tournament, the race for the Trophy will continue to December.

The eight participating teams vying for the 2nd Division's highest sport's trophy are the 1st Infantry, 9th Infantry, 23rd Infantry, 38th Infantry, 87th Infantry, Division Artillery, Division Trains and Separate Battalions.

They will be pitted against each other in golf, volleyball, flag-football and a cross-country run.

The golf series started this week and will run through the 30th of September. There are three divisions in the tournament and 48 entries—32 in the junior division, 11 in the handicap division and two in the senior division.

Volleyball begins on the 30th of August and goes on till the 18th of October. All units have entered teams except the 38th Infantry, who will depart for six months' of duty in Germany in early October.

The cross country run is scheduled for the 29th of September and flag football, beginning the 29th of October and ending the 13th of December, will wind up the competition.

GOLFING IN FULL SWING . . . The Commanding General's Golf Tournament began this week and golfers, like Roscoe C. Lacy of 2nd Admin. Co., were much in evidence. Elimination rounds are set for this week and next, with the finals being played off at the end of September.

1st Infantry Wins Tennis

The final tennis scores are in and the competition for the Commanding General's Trophy is off once again to a quick start.

The 1st Infantry has taken the lead by winning the tennis tournament and racking up 36 points.

In the opening doubles, the 1st Infantry team of Ted E. Gordinier and Clay N. Mobley defeated Gerald R. Ristau of the 69th Armor (Separate Battalions) and Ronald W. Crossbong of 2nd Admin. Co. (Division Trains) in a tight match. In the first two sets the 1st Infantry team was defeated 0-6, 2-6, but suddenly rebounded to a smashing 6-2, 6-4, 6-4 victory.

Revenging this defeat in the singles, Ristau beat Mobley 6-3, 6-3, 6-0, thus helping to bring Separate Battalions into second place with a total of 26 points.

Division Trains came in third with nine points followed by 87th Infantry with eight points and 23rd Infantry with one.

The 38th Infantry, the 9th Infantry and Division Artillery failed to score.

Bitter Taste to Jokes Behind Iron Curtain

Humor is more than an expression of pleasure; it can also be an outlet for fierce resentment and scorn as the work of Mark Twain and other great humorists demonstrates.

Nowhere is this truism borne out more sharply than in the "jokes" circulating in countries behind the Iron Curtain. Here is a sampling of some recent ones indicating the popular feeling toward Communist regimes:

Ivanov: "If the Western powers attack us, our agents will carry atom bombs concealed in suitcases to Paris, London, Rome, New York and all the capitalist imperialists and destroy them."

Petrov: "I guess we'll have enough bombs for that, but how about suitcases?"

Two Soviet delegates are conversing at the United Nations. One asks: "Did you reach any agreements today?" "No," says the other, smiling with satisfaction, "but I prevented four."

Warned that an inspector would be visiting the school shortly, a Bulgarian schoolteacher told her pupils to write an essay which would be shown to him on his arrival. The teacher praised the efforts of one small boy, Ivanche, who wrote: "I have a lovely black cat. It has three kittens. All of them are Communists." On the day of the inspector's visit the teacher noticed that the essay now read: "Two of them are Communists." "Why did you "change your essay?" she asked. "Because," said Ivanche, "one of the kittens opened its eyes this morning."

A Pole applied for a visa to visit the United States, saying he wished to see capitalism "on its deathbed." When he returned home the Ministry of the Interior asked him: "Well, comrade, did you see capitalism dying?" Of course I did," he replied. "What a beautiful death!"

One delegate to the 22d Soviet Party Congress to another: "What is the gravest punishment inflicted by the Party?" Second delegate: "Expulsion from the grave."

During the present destalinization in Bulgaria, an investigating commission was interviewing individual convicts. One inmate was asked: "And what were you sentenced for?" "Nothing. I am absolutely innocent." "For how long were you sentenced?" "Ten years." "You lie," screamed the commission chairman, "the sentence for nothing was only five years!"

One East German to his friend: "Can Communism be put into practice in West Germany?" Friend: "Yes, but why?"

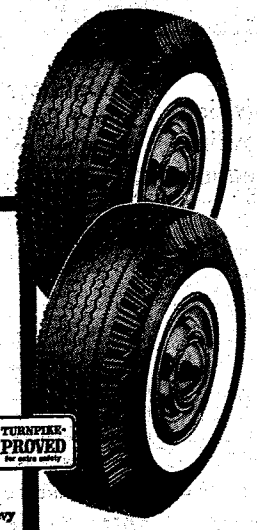
And finally, there's the story from Budapest about the absentminded professor who escaped to the Soviet Union during the Hungarian Revolution.

Pleasure Is Offered By School Libraries

Titles of new books purchased during the summer for the Fort Benning Children's School libraries promise hours of adventure for young readers.

"Cat Thief" by Cass, "Tom Bean and Blackbeard, the Pirate" by Henderson, "Dog" by Kjelgaard, and "Cecily G. and the 9 Monkeys" by Key are but a few of the tantalizing books on the list.

The military interests of the school system's population is reflected in such selections as "Arms of Our Fighting Men," "Fighter Gear of World War I" and "Fighter Gear of World War II" by Colby, "West Point" by Engeman, and "Jet Pilot Overseas" by Lent.



Head librarian for the system is Miss Mae Craighead who also serves as librarian at Faith School.

Mrs. Jean Adock Curan is librarian at Loyd School; Mrs. Evelyn Southwood, Wilbur School, and Mrs. Margaret Pemberton, Patch and Edward A. White Schools.

84 Coaches Seen With New Jobs Across Country

By Gordon Bridge

New York (AFPS) — College football's annual game of 'Musical Chairs' has seated 84 head coaches in brand new jobs this fall.

That's 11 more than last year, as heads rolled and resignations were tendered from coast to coast. Two of the switches were highly controversial.

At Colorado, "Sonny" Grandelius was fired for alleged recruiting violations after taking the Buffaloes into the Orange Bowl. Alumni secretary William E. Davis, who never had been a head coach, was called in to fill the vacancy.

At West Point, Army officials replaced Dale Hall, who couldn't beat Navy, with Paul Dietzel, one-time Army assistant. Dietzel had chalked up a terrific record at Louisiana State, Charlie McClendon, Dietzel's defensive specialist at L.S.U., was upped to head coach.

A total of four new coaches takes over in the Southeastern Conference, two in the Big Eight, and two in the Southwest.

In addition to the move at L.S.U., Paul Davis takes over at Mississippi State for Wade Walker. Tommy O'Boyle replaces Andy Pilney at Tulane and Charlie Bradshaw moves in at Kentucky replacing Blanton Collier. Collier went to the Cleveland Browns.

In the Southwest's two big moves, Hank Foldberg moved from Wichita, which hired Marcelino Huerta, to Texas A&M, which dropped Jim Myers. SMU replaced Bill Meek with first year head coach Hayden Fry.

In the Big Eight, Nebraska picked Bob Devaney from Wyoming in place of Bill Jennings, Wyoming promoted Lloyd Eaton and Jennings went to Kansas as an assistant.

Lahar Back to Colgate

Hal Lahar quit at Houston and returned to Colgate, where Alva Kelly retired, Bill Yeoman was promoted at Houston.

Jim Miller of Detroit went to Boston College to replace Ernie Hefferle, with John Idzik taking over at Detroit.

In all there were 51 changes among NCAA member colleges and 33 among smaller schools that don't belong to the NCAA but list their schedules with the big athletic group.

Thirty-six of the 51 NCAA changes replaced an experienced coach with a first-timer.

The school fight song is "Bow Down to Washington" and that's about what the rest of the West Coast College football teams will be doing this fall.

After two successful years in the Rose Bowl, the Huskies had to rebuild last year because of graduation of most of the team. Coach Jim Owens came up with a club of sophomores who posted a 5-4-1 record, even beating the UCLA team that went to the Rose Bowl.

California and Stanford are expected to be tougher than they were last year, and UCLA, the Big Six defending champion; may be weaker.

Best Year

Charlie Mitchell, a senior at Washington, should have his greatest year with quarterback Craig Morton expected to star at California. Hal Bedsole at USC is considered one of the best ends in the nation.

USC, a disappointment last year, does not look too improved in 1962, while Washington State, back in the conference this season, also appears overmatched.

Oregon looks like the best of the West Coast independents, featuring a great all-around athlete named Mel Renfro. Renfro finished second in the NCAA hurdles and third in the broad jump. In fact, Renfro and Mitchell may be the fastest men in college uniforms this fall.

In the Southwest Conference, there seems to be little opposition to the stampede of the Texas Longhorns. Darrel Royal, coach of the Cotton Bowl champions, may have trouble with TCU, Arkansas or Texas A&M.

26 Lettermen

While only four of Royal's 26 returning lettermen were starters on the nation's number four team last year, Darrel's big problem is top reserves.

All signs point to the stampede by Texas; close behind, though in the dust, will be Arkansas, Texas A&M and TCU. Rice and Baylor will be in a position to cause trouble, but Texas Tech and SMU figure to be trampled in the rush, regardless of who is rushing.

The area's only independent, Houston, with a new coach and a young team, has a schedule too tough to draw national attention, at least for this year.

When you talk Southwestern Football — podner, you mean Texas!

Tibbetts to Call Signals In Doughboys First Test

In a little more than a week, Sept. 8, Fort Benning will pry the lid off the 1962 football season against Gordon Military College and from all indications the Doughboys will be ready to go in their first home game.

The team has been concentrating primarily on its ground game due to its team speed and the running ability of quarterback Marvin Tibbetts, a former Georgia Tech star, Doughboy head coach, Capt. Leaton C. Cofield, explained.

Tibbetts, an adequate passer, is a fine runner and mixes up his plays well, Coach Cofield went on. When the pass is needed he can get the job done and he has a fine catching mate in end Fred Murphy, another Georgia Tech standout.

Speed will play an important factor in the Doughboy offense as speed merchants Bobby Towns, a former Georgia star, and Steve Quillian provide constant break-a-way threats to Doughboy opponents.

Pile-Driving Back

The bread-and-butter man in the backfield is fullback Wallace Johnson. The pile-driving back is just the man the Doughboys will be calling upon for that two or three next yards.

Up front the Doughboys are in good shape with an average in the neighborhood of 220 pounds. Leading the charge thus far has been guard Joe Weadryhoski; has been a workhorse both on offense and defense.

Other standouts on the line have been Wayne Everhart, tackle and Sam Stellatella.

Some Injuries

Though several key players have received injuries in practice, none were on the first team.

The Doughboys' number two squad has shown up well in practice, especially on pass defense. The number three unit, nicknamed "The Bombers," also has looked impressive in spots.

According to Coach Cofield, the two games previously scheduled with a professional team in Atlanta have been canceled in favor of Army opponents.

As to the team's big game against the Quantico Marines on Oct. 20, Cofield said "They'd better come with their lunch; it's going to be a long day."

Top Slots Won by Two Army Men

CAMP ZAMA, Japan (ANS) —One U. S. Army officer finished in first place and another took third place in the recent American-Japan Goodwill Modern Pentathlon Tournament at North Camp Drake, Tokyo.

Capt. Donald J. Johnson won the pentathlon when he ran the 4,000 meter (2½ miles) cross country run with the fast time of 13:32 to stay on top in the five-day competition.

Capt. James W. Moore's 13:14 winning time in the 4,000 meter cross country event pulled him from seventh to third place in the final standings.

Shigeaki Uchino copped the runner-up position. The Osaka policeman was a Japan representative in the 1960 Olympics at Rome.

Two teams from Japan competed with the U. S. Army men at Camp Drake. Competition was in five events: riding, fencing, shooting, swimming and cross country run.

Registration Set for YAC Football

Registration for the Youth Activities Club 1962 football teams will be held today through Sept. 15 here.

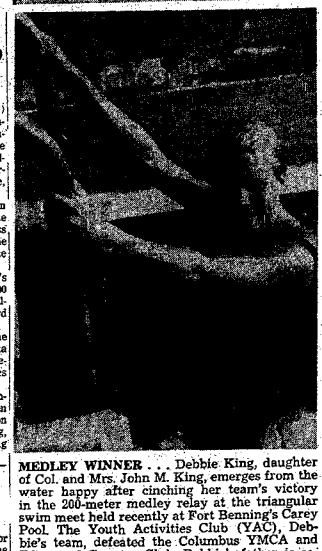
YAC is requesting all boys from the ages of 8-15 who are interested in playing in one of the three leagues sponsored by the club to register as early as possible so the teams may be planned.

There will be three leagues, each divided according to age brackets.

The Biddy League will consist of boys 8 and 9 with a maximum weight of 100 pounds. It will include about seven teams. The Doughboy League, also of about seven teams, will consist of boys ranging from 11-12 years old and weighing no more than 115 pounds.

Intermediate League play will be for boys 13, 14 and 15 years of age. There will be approximately four teams with each boy weighing no more than 135 pounds. Five pounds may be added after Oct. 15.

Teams will be formed and practice will start Sept. 8. YAC will completely outfit the teams with practice and game equipment with the exception of shoes.



The club also is asking for volunteer coaches for the teams, preferably fathers of boys playing.

The Biddy League will play Monday evenings, the Doughboy League Tuesdays and the Intermediate League Wednesdays. The season will start the last week of September.

Registration cards will be available at the public schools. Boys attending parochial schools may acquire them at the YAC office, Bldg. 1054, or telephone 545-4747.

The Youth Activities Club (YAC), Debbie's team, defeated the Columbus YMCA and Edgewood Country Club. Debbie's father is coordinator of instruction at The Infantry School.

Infantry Unit Wins Brigade Softball Title

The final game of the 1st Infantry Brigade Softball tournament was played at Dust Bowl Field with Headquarters Company, 29th Infantry bombing out Headquarters Battery, 10th Artillery, 25 to 3.

The game got off to an early start with the 29th scoring four runs and getting at least one run every inning except in the third. Their big inning was the last when they scored 11 runs.

The 10th Artillery got off to a bad start and was not able to pull out of it. They were stumped by the 29th's pitcher Billy Buhl who held them to five hits.

Dave Hertz led the 20 hit barrage for the 29th with five hits for five times at bat. Velon Tankersley was next with two doubles and a home run, in four times at bat. Charles Foster and Dick Gabler also hit home runs.

Top hitter for the 10th was their first baseman, Alden West who singled twice and was walked twice.

Previous games in the single elimination tournament were, Headquarters Battery, 10th Artillery downing Headquarters Company, 1st Infantry Brigade, 19-4; Headquarters Company, 29th Infantry, winning a close 5-4 decision over Company C, 66th Armor, 58th Infantry, and Battery D, 10th Artillery, losing to Headquarters Company, 29th Infantry, in a fast-paced 8-6 decision.

General's Wife Hooks Big One In Alaska

FT. MONROE, Va. (AFPS)—That "compleat angler" Izaac Walton might feel quite at home when Ft. Monroe's Officers Wives' Club holds its meetings these days.

For Mrs. Herbert B. Powell, wife of the commanding general of the Continental Army Command, is back from an Alaska vacation with a piscatorial tale to make local anglers green with envy.

While visiting at Seward, Alaska, Mrs. Powell decided to try her hand at the popular Alaskan sport of salmon fishing in nearby Resurrection Bay. She had the novice fisherman's usual high hopes, but she got more than she hoped for.

Her catch: A king salmon that tipped the scales at 40 pounds.

Spell Tosses No-Hit Shutout in 9-0 Win

REDSTONE ARSENAL, Ala. — Fort Benning dumped Fort Campbell from the Third Army Baseball Tournament action as Charles Spell tossed a no-hit shutout to post a 9-0 victory for the Doughboys.

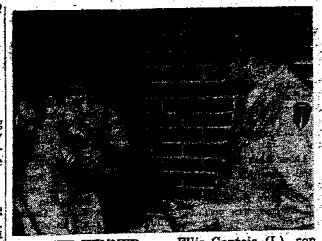
Spell just missed his bid for a perfect game when, in the late stages of the fray, one man from the Kenntucky post reached first after being hit with a pitch.

Jessie Joyce and Jesus Herrans paced the Benning squad with four hits apiece. Joyce had a two-run, inside-the-park home run along with three singles. Herrans added to the Doughboy hitting barrage by hitting a triple, double and two singles.

The victory gave Fort Benning a breath of life after being forced into the losers bracket by 4-2 loss to Fort Jackson.

Errors proved to be the deciding factor as Fort Benning hurler PFC Marty Leicht, assigned to Company B, 1st Battalion, The Infantry Center Troop Command, gave up but three hits. None of the six runs scored in the game was earned.

There were eight errors in the game, each team making four.



Leading the Fort Benning hitting attack was PFC Cartis Gentry. The outfielder, assigned to the 72nd Engineer Company, collected two singles in four trips to the plate.

Redstone Arsenal squeaked past Fort Campbell, Ky., 7-6, in the only other game played Monday in the double elimination tournament.

Complete results of all the Third Army Baseball action will be carried in next week's Bayonet.

SPELL

TROPHY WINNER . . . Ellis Contois (L), son of MSgt. and Mrs. Albert A. Contois accepts a trophy and congratulations from Lt. Col. Everett V. GOOD GOLF

AIM PITCH HOLE HIGH . . . The pitch shot is made with a short iron—the No. 7, 8, 9 or a pitching wedge. The idea is to drop your ball as close to the hole as possible on the fly. Little wrist action is the key to good pitching. On the backswing, wrists are not fully cocked; on the follow-through there is little or no rolling of the wrists. It's strictly a hand-and-arm shot. Height of the backswing is determined by the distance you need. Player stands almost directly over the ball, which is positioned midway between the feet.

Benning Scuba Club Popular With Post Swimmers

By Bill Gardner

One of the fastest growing recreational activities in the country is Scuba diving, and its popularity is evident here where over 100 post military and civilian personnel have joined the Fort Benning Scuba Club.

Scuba diving is not merely swimming but requires the knowledge of many safety rules and the use of the self contained underwater breathing apparatus from which the word Scuba is derived.

It's no easy feat to drop to depths of 100 or 200 feet and peer at an unfamiliar world whose whole horizon is limited to the area in front of your diving mask.

Silent World

Speaking of this underwater world, Maj. Thomas F. Whalen, president of the post club said, "The environment is entirely different. There is a feeling of unlimited freedom."

"It's so silent, it's almost eerie, but it's beautiful," he added.

Countless written accounts by divers the world over substantiate this last statement.

It has been said of the world that awaits the diver, it is perhaps the last frontier within the confines of the globe.

The breathtaking beauty of this environment, the excitement of exploring the unknown, and the almost tranquilizing effect of drifting effortlessly through the water have all combined to lure thousands into rivers, creeks, lakes ponds and the oceans.

New Park

In response to this increasing popularity the government has created an underwater park off the Florida Keys, the only one of its kind in the world.

Here divers can explore the sunken vestiges of Spanish galleons, view the myriad colored coral reef formations, or see thousands of multicolored fish swimming in comparatively shallow water.

Like all things, scuba diving has another, less romantic side, for with the increasing number of participants there has also been a corresponding increase in the number of accidents.

Why is this so? All things considered it is a reasonably safe activity.

The answers safety authorities give is the victims, in most cases, became a statistic because of their own carelessness. They were either inexperienced or took foolish chances, or both.

This sort of thing is frowned on by a responsible group such as the post Scuba Club.

Know Rules

Before even considering diving, the post organization requires all prospective members to familiarize themselves with certain rules and pass a number of tests.

Entrance requirements are quite rigid. Examples of these are demonstration of the ability to swim 150 yards without mechanical aids, free dive to a depth of 10 feet, clear the face mask of water, and with skin diving gear, swim 25 yards, dive to a depth of 10 feet and return to the surface swimming to the original point without taking the head from the water.

Skin diving gear differs from Scuba equipment in that it includes only a face mask and a pair of flippers.

Scuba equipment consists of mask and flippers, plus a tank containing compressed air, the size of the tank, and a regulator that mechanically controls the amount of air inhaled.

It is as important to familiarize yourself with the equipment as it is to know how to swim Whalen said.

Difficult Phase

Making the transition from breathing through the nose to depending entirely on the mouth is often difficult for some people to make.

In fact, it has prevented quite a number of people from taking up the sport.

The most common tank contains air that has been compressed to a pressure of 2200 pounds per square inch.

Obviously a person couldn't take this volume of air if it was all released at one time.

This is where the regulator comes in. It controls the flow of air, keeping it at a normal breathing level.
