A variety of equipment is available to the diver. There are underwater compasses, wrist watches, depth gauges, weight belts, form fitting rubber suits for warmth, and almost as many varieties of masks as there are tastes.

Safety is always of prime importance in any form of recreation and club officials are unrelenting in the stress they place on it.

Even experienced divers are required to demonstrate the entrance requirements and start at the bottom of a graduated scale of experience, five levels in all.

Advancement

Advancement is made on the basis of increased ability and members are only allowed to participate in an organized dive after they have passed the second level.

The fundamentals of diving are taught in the swimming pool at Briant Wells Field House where the club meets every Tuesday at 8 p.m.

Here the prospective members learn how to breath through the regulators, how to swim and maneuver with the heavy and cumbersome equipment, and how to handle some of the more common emergencies, such as sharing anothers breathing apparatus.

One of the newer members, 2nd Lt. Benjamin M. Schaffer, learned what he knows about diving from the club's instructors.

"I began diving about four months ago", he said, "and am presently working on the third level of advancement, or the Silver Shark Badge."

"Like everybody else, I started out in the pool, although I had done some skin diving when I was in Hawaii," he continued.

"After passing certain tests, I went with the club to a sink-hole near Auburn Ala., and I passed other requirements, going down as deep as 50 feet once", Schaffer added.

Women Members

Schaffer's wife, the former Barbara Davis, recently became one of the first women to become full fledged club members. The only other woman member is Mrs. Richard Carl, the former Mary Jo Swink, wife of 1st Lt. Carl.

Management of club affairs falls into the hands of Maj. Whalen, president, John R. Poag, vice - president, Capt. Robert J. Archibald Jr., secretary, and 1st Lt. Darrell G. Schlehuver, training officer.

Besides affording opportunities for Fort Benning personnel to learn diving, the group, part of The Infantry Center's Special Services Section, sponsors trips to places in Florida, Georgia and Alabama.

They recently returned from a trip to Morrison Springs near Ponce De Leon, Fla.

One project that is being pursued at the present time by club members is the contruction of a miniature submarine.

This is not expected to be elaborate enough to compete with the Navy, but is intended only to afford the Scuba diver with a means of transporting himself through the water.

A committee has been set up to investigate this and at last word they were still looking for someone with knowledge of naval engineering.

Legislation On Duty Bill Is Expected

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — A joint House-Senate committee is expected to pass a final version of legislation that permits duty free privileges to servicemen returning from overseas.

The duty free privilege legislation is extended evey two years. A spokesman for the Ways and Means Committee said that both the House and Senate had passed the bill in time to meet the July 1 deadline.

A hitch developed in the Senate, however, when amendments not related to the privileges portion of the bill were tacked on at the last minute.

The spokesman said the amendments were of a controversial nature that required joint House-Senate conferee approval, but that they had no bearing on the duty free provisions of the bill.

Meantime, customs officials are operating just as though the bill was in force.

The customs officials, knowing it isn't the duty free portion of the bill that is affected, simply do not process the papers of returning servicemen.

According to the Ways and Means spokesman, there have been no complaints from people or any reports of the privilege being denied.

Insurance Plan Fails In House

WASHINGTON (AFPS)—The House has rejected a proposal to reopen the GI insurance program to every veteran of WWII and the Korean conflict.

By a standing vote of 124 to 87, the House approved a measure limited to veterans disabled while in service.

This cut some 1.5 million from more than 15 million veterans who would be eligible for a one-year period to buy National Service Life Insurance which they had let lapse or never bought while in uniform.

Earlier, the Senate had passed a bill that would reopen the program to all veterans.

There is a chance, however, the bill will see the light of day in one form or another.

Army Triumphs Again In Firing Competition

CAMP PERRY, Ohio — Army riflemen completed their siege of national honors last week by capturing all but one of the team matches at the National High Power Rifle Championships here.

Three individual titles were also added to the long list of winners produced by the Army.

The National Trophy Group's U.S. Army Eastern won the National Trophy and the Infantry rifle team events, setting a new national match record in the latter match.

Their record - breaking score in the Infantry Trophy was 1258, 24 points higher than the mark set by Army Eastern in winning in 1961. Firing members of the squad were Sgt. John Kingeter, Sgt. Arpail Gapol, SFC Ben Benoist, SFC Vernon Read, Sp4 D. L. Crowell and SFC Cecil L. Stevens. Maj. William L. Bassham, was team captain and SFC Leslie Drake was the successful coach.

On the winning National Trophy team were Capt. Richard Hinkle, Sp5 Marvie E. Warren, SSgt. James Cline, SFC William Brushwood, SFC Cleenon Anthony, Sgt. Ansel Kelly and Sgt. Glen Nelson. Their score was 1466-113v.

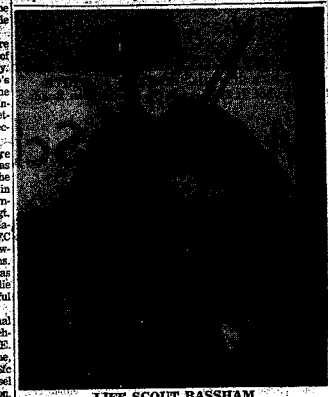
Army Western carded a 1252 for runnerup spot in the Infantry Trophy and the Army team was second in the National Trophy with 1465-144v.

The Army shooters repeated their last year's victories in the Enlisted Men's Trophy Team Match and the Rumbold Trophy Team Match. Army Western Grey took the former with an 886-56v effort and Army Europe Gold captured the latter with a 591-75v score.

Only event to escape the soldiers was the Herrick Trophy team match won by the U.S. Marine Corps with a new national match record score of 596-75v. The Army had held the old mark of 593-94v.

On the individual side Sp4 Barbara Hile, a supply clerk from Fort Mason, Calif., first member of the Women's Army Corps to compete in the National Matches as a firing member of the Army team, repeated as the Women's National Service Rifle champion with an aggregate score of 770-44v.

Her score automatically becomes the national match record for the new course of fire established this year.



In the National Trophy Individual Rifle event the Army swept the first three places.

SFC Vernon R. Read of the Marksmanship Training Unit placed first in a field of 2200 competitors with a 248-27v mark out of a possible 250 points.

Sp5 William L. Watton was runnerup with 248-18v and SFC Robert Anderson, Fort Campbell, Ky., came in third with 247-27v.

In an exciting shot-by-shot elimination, SFC Chester Hamilton, MTU; firing a bolt-action rifle, withstood the challenge of 98 finalists from the original 2200 entries to win the Wimbledon Cup Match, an event fired at 1000 yards.

The Service Rifle Division of the match was taken by Marine Cpl. Edward E. Schultz.

LIFE SCOUT BASSHAM
Wins National Title

Local Youth Wins Title

CAMP PERRY, Ohio — Life Scout, Lanny R. Bassham from Fort Benning shot his way to the title of 1962 National Junior Service Rifle Champion during the National High Power Rifle Matches here.

The 15-year-old senior patrol leader from Troop 51, Ga-Ala. council of the Boys Scouts of America, fired an aggregate score of 762 out of a possible 800, putting him ahead of some 220 other junior competitors age 15 to 18 years old.

Adding to the accomplishment of young Bassham is the fact that this is his first year of competition in the National Matches and his first year of shooting the M-1 Service Rifle.

A possible explanation to Lanny's shooting skill is that his parents, Maj. and Mrs. William L. Bassham, are also shooting enthusiasts. His dad is, in fact, a coach for the Marksmanship Training Unit.

Prior to coming here for the National Matches, Lanny went with his father and MTU to Ft. Niagara, N.Y., where the team practiced for the Camp Perry competitions. There, Lanny says, he picked up some valuable tips on shooting.

DUE TO BE ENLARGED SOON IS THE POST'S NEWEST SCHOOL, EDWARD A. WHITE
Ten Classrooms Will Be Added, Making This A 21-Room School. It Is Located On 1st Division Road.

Bells of Benning's Modern Schools Call 3,000 Dependents Tuesday

By Ida C. Evans

It's "back to school" here Tuesday for more than 3,000 military dependents.

For these sons and daughters of the nation's dedicated foot-soldiers, even the names of the schools they attend are a reminder of the challenging heritage that is theirs.

Each of the five Children's Schools on the post is named for some illustrious Infantryman.

Known as Faith, Patch, Wilbur, Loyd and Edward A. White, the schools honor the memory of Medal of Honor recipient Lt. Col. Den C. Faith Jr., and Distinguished Service Cross recipients Capt. Alexander M. Patch, and 2nd Lts. William H. Wilbur Jr., Frank R. Loyd Jr., and Edward A. White. The five men were cited posthumously.

The only significant difference between the dependent school system at Fort Benning and that of any civilian community is that the students are all children of military personnel.

Little Difference

In organization, administration and operation, the differences are small.

Like any other school system, primary responsibility and authority rests with the superintendent of schools, Mrs. Hazel J. Scudder.

Her office is located centrally, at Bldg. 889-A, adjacent to Faith School on Running Ave.

With a rich educational background and extensive experience as both classroom teacher and school administrator, Mrs. Scudder has served as Fort Benning's Children's Schools superintendent since 1950.

Mrs. Scudder was delegate-at-large for military dependent schools at the White House Conference on Education in 1955.

She is a member of the Benning Education Association, the Georgia and National Education Associations, American Association of School Administrators and the Association for Supervision and Curriculum Development.

Mrs. Scudder is a member of the National Department of Elementary School Principals and of the Department's Committee of College and University Relationships.

A forceful writer, Mrs. Scudder has contributed professional articles to both "NEA Journal" and the "National Elementary Principal."

Mrs. Scudder appears in "Who's Who in American Education" and "Who's Who of American Women."

In December, 1961, Mrs. Scudder was conferred the honorary rank of "Kentucky Colonel," a distinction reserved for citizens who have brought credit to Kentucky.

Holds Masters

Mrs. Scudder was graduated from Ouachita College in Arkadelphia, Ark., with bachelor of arts and bachelor of music degrees. She obtained a master of arts degree in administration at the University of Kentucky in Lexington. She later taught at both schools.

In addition to the University of Kentucky, Mrs. Scudder has engaged in graduate studies at the University of Chicago, George Peabody College for Teachers in Nashville, and State University College of Education in Plattsburgh, N.Y.

The widow of the late Col. Irvine C. Scudder, U. S. Army, Mrs. Scudder's background makes her pre-eminently qualified to guide the educational careers of military dependents.

Her experience in Army life has given her a deep appreciation of the needs of children whose parents are transferred from state to state and country to country.

Mrs. Scudder recruits, interviews and recommends personnel for employment in the school system. She organizes and supervises school activities to insure the highest practicable level of instruction.

She is administrative officer for the Fort Benning School Board, as well as advisor to the board on matters of general policies.

President of the board is Col. John M. King whose military assignment at Fort Benning is coordinator of instruction at The Army Infantry School.

There is no connection, Col. King said, between his duty assignment and his position with the School Board.

"The Children's Schools are not administered by the coordinator of instruction," he continued. "Mrs. Scudder is the superintendent of schools at Fort Benning just as Mr. Shaw is superintendent of schools in Muscogee County."

Serving with Col. King on the School Board are Lt. Col. John W. Williams, Lt. Col. Jack E. Compton, Lt. Col. Wallis E. McClain, Maj. Jean P. Doerr, Sgt. Maj. C. B. Westervelt, Col. (Ret.) Calvin T. Roush and Mrs. Scudder.

The board meets on the third Thursday of the month or when called into session by the president, and is accountable to the commanding general of The Infantry Center.

The physical aspects of the post's Children's Schools are the responsibility of the schools officer, Col. Roush. He acts as business manager for the system. The schools officer provides liaison between Fort Benning and the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare, which pays the cost of building, operating and maintaining dependent schools on the post. Funds are made available annually on the basis of a budget submitted by the installation.

The funds pay for salaries of all school employees, books, supplies and equipment, maintenance and repair of buildings, grounds and equipment, and tuition to high schools in Muscogee County attended by dependents living on the post.

Col. Roush said the cost of operating the school system in 1961-62 was $1,100,000.

The cost of transportation alone is more than $500 per day, he said. Fifty pick-up routes are covered by 25 busses, transporting students to elementary schools on the post and high schools in town. The buses travel nearly 1,000 miles per day.

Attend County Schools

Students in grades nine through 12 residing on the post attend one of the five high schools in Muscogee County. They are Baker, Carver, Columbus, Jordan and Spencer. Transportation and tuition costs are paid from the Dependent School Budget, Col. Roush said.

There are several private and parochial schools in the county available to students living on the post. The cost of attending these schools is borne by the individual concerned.

Attendance at post public schools is limited by law to dependents of personnel living on the military reservation. Military personnel living in the civilian community send their children to schools in the county, Col. Roush said.

In four of the post schools, a hot lunch is provided daily. Facilities for serving lunch are available at Faith, Wilbur, Loyd and Edward A. White Schools. Children attending Patch School carry a lunch.

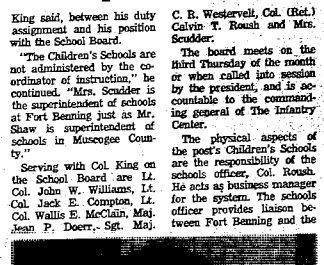
Meal tickets for students are available at the rate of 30 cents per meal. Adults and children without meal tickets pay 35 cents per meal.

Col. Roush reports that 210,000 meals were served last school year at a cost of more than $86,000. Since this is a revenue producing activity, the lunchroom program usually "breaks even." Last year there was a net loss of 70 cents, Col. Roush said.

As schools officer, Col. Roush is also accountable to the commanding general, through G-1. The superintendent of schools and schools officer work in close coordination on all matters pertaining to the Fort Benning Children's Schools.

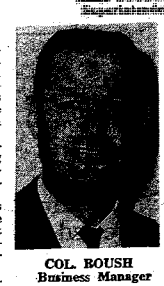
Class Breakdown

Faith School is attended by all seventh and eighth grade students on the post and some fifth and sixth grade students. There are 30 classrooms, a newly equipped science laboratory and industrial arts, music, art and home living classrooms. A multipurpose room serves as cafeteria, auditorium and gymnasium. The school was built in 1962 with later additions in 1953 and 1955.



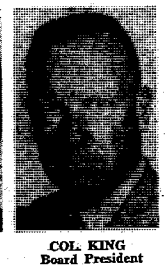
Patch, the oldest permanent school on the post, is attended by children from kindergarten through the fourth grade. It has 13 classrooms, a library and an auditorium. The building was constructed in 1931.

Wilbur School, for grades one through five, was constructed in 1950 and enlarged in 1955 to include 14 classrooms, library and a multipurpose room.



Loyd School, which accommodates grades one through six, is a 23-classroom structure with library and multipurpose room. It was built in 1958.

The newest school on the post is Edward A. White, completed and dedicated early in 1961. Its 11 classrooms house grades one through four. By 1963, a 10-room addition, already approved, will make it possible for the school to accommodate kindergarten and special classes now meeting in nearby temporary buildings. The school has a library and a multipurpose room.



Six kindergarten and special classes are conducted in Bldgs. 1092, 1093 and 1065, temporary structures in the Old Hospital area. These are the classes that will occupy the addition to Edward A. White School.

Education Plant Is Ever Growing

From 60 students to 3,000 in 41 years is the story of the growth of the dependent school population here.

The teaching staff has grown from three teachers in 1921 to 120 in 1962.

In strong contrast to the post's five modern school plants, the first school house was just a barn, a relic of the old Bussey Plantation.

Adapted to serve as a school for student officers, the classrooms were used by children during the day and by adults at night.

Necessarily, the desks and seats were "infantry-sized." Conversion of the classrooms each morning was simple. Sixty tiny stools were placed in the seats to lift the small students enough to use the desks. The school was private, supported by tuition fees supplemented by post funds.

Growth Reaches Far

From such a beginning, the present school system has developed.

The contrast between the first elementary school on the post and the present schools is not just a matter of size of the school population, furniture, buildings and freedom from fees.

The growth goes even further than modern heating and transportation. These alone would have seemed luxuries to those first teachers and students.

The Fort Benning Children's Schools are equipped with many modern machines to facilitate instruction.

There are school nurse, safety and physical education programs, as well as extra features in the school libraries which provide a great variety of learning experiences.

Dr. Joseph Conforti, director of instruction for the Children's School, organizes and supervises the instructional program. He selects teaching material and textbooks and constantly evaluates the curriculum, methods and teaching efficiency.

In both language and music instruction, caliphone record players are used. The machines are equipped with earphones for the students. Two caliphones are available at Faith School and three each at Loyd, Wilbur, Patch and Edward A. White.

Mechanical Aids

There are tape recorders, TV sets, record players and projectors to help enrich the teaching program.

The school nurse progam is conducted by Mrs. Lou Ella Williamson, assisted by Mrs. Louise Bush.

The nurses work in close cooperation with parents and the clinics at Martin Army Hospital to insure the welfare of the students.

Enlist Parental Aid

Parents are urged to list all allergies on the health forms. Although school nurses seldom give medication, it is imperative that they have a record of allergies, Mrs. Williamson said.

If a child is taking medication on the order of a doctor and a dose will be due during school hours, the prescription should be brought to the school nurse, not kept by the student.

The school nurses observe the children. If a child seems habitually tired, the reason is sought.

"The tired child is usually one who stayed up too late the night before or skipped breakfast," the nurse said.

Every illness or injury becomes a learning experience for the child, Mrs. Williamson said. If he is sent home from school because of illness, the nurse explains that it is for his own benefit and to protect others from exposure.

An intensified program on safety is conducted in the schools. Children are cautioned to stay away from excavations and construction projects. Special lectures, films and handouts stress bicycle safety.

The physical education program is under the direction of Max Spurlin. The program is planned to foster the physical development of each child, taking into consideration his needs, interests and abilities, Spurlin said.

Sports Pushed

Attitudes of team spirit, cooperation and good sportsmanship are as important to the physical education program as the development of strength, endurance and prowess, the director said.

Activities for the students include relays, jump rope, kick ball, modified softball, tag football, track and field events, soccer and indoor games for inclement weather.

Students in grades three and four receive one period of physical education instruction per week and in grades five through eight, two periods.

An important added resource of the post dependent school system is the five libraries, each of which features the interests of the children.

Post Benning school children find more than reference books and supplementary reading material in the libraries at Faith, Wilbur, Patch, Loyd and Edward A. White Schools.

Included are picture files, collections and displays to interest the browsing student. There are many training aids for use by classroom teachers, according to Miss Mae Craighead, head librarian.

At Faith School, attended by all seventh and eighth grade students on the post, facilities include a newly furnished science laboratory and special rooms equipped for teaching art, music, industrial arts and home living.

The Fort Benning Children's Schools today are repeating the benefits of the combined efforts of the present teachers, administrative staff, school board, PTA and post officials and all who have served before them during the 41-year history of the Dependent School System.

Benning PTA Is Largest In Georgia

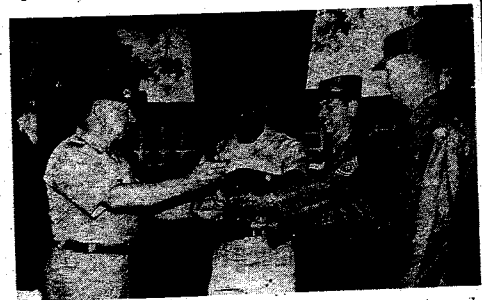
The Fort Benning P-TA, largest in Georgia during the 1961-1962 school year, hopes to top its own record in a membership drive which began Monday with the registration of students.

Last year, with an enrollment of 2,641 parents and teachers, the post P-TA was the largest in its history as well as the largest in the state, according to Col. Edward M. Foxworth, president of the organization.

Col. Foxworth, who is The Infantry Center quartermaster, said the purpose of the drive is not merely to attain a large membership.

"Special emphasis will be put on increasing our membership so that parent interest will be stimulated and funds generated to carry out the worthwhile work of the P-TA," he said.

Proclaims Goal



"Our goal is not just to hold Fort Benning's place as the largest P-TA in Georgia, but to maintain an organization capable of giving the best possible service to the teachers and students in the post's Foxworth said.

The P-TA meets the second Tuesday after the first Monday in the month. Unless otherwise announced, the meetings are scheduled for 7:30 p.m. at Faith School auditorium.

Serving with Col. Foxworth as officers of the P-TA are Lt. Col. Walter Hubbard Jr., first vice president; Sgt. Maj. Norman B. Mekkelsen, second vice president; Mrs. Frank J. Spetel Jr., third vice president; Mrs. Ishmael Peck, secretary; Mrs. Jean P. Doerr, assistant secretary; SFC Willard N. Hill, treasurer; SFC Kenneth R. Reid, assistant treasurer; and Capt. Robert S. Poydasheff, parliamentarian.

Committee chairmen are Lt. Col. Cornelius W. Coghill, audio-visual aids; Lt. Col. William R. Nettles Jr., finance and budget; Mrs. James O. O'Neill, health; M-Sgt. William R. Thomas, hospitality Mrs. James D. Clark, membership, and Chaplain (Col.) Silas E. Decker, program.

Mrs. C. A. Kilbourne, publications-magazine; Mrs. O. G. Garrett, room mothers; Norman Evans, safety; Mrs. Robert E. Tolman, special projects, and Mrs. Thomas O. Richardson, special study group.

Know Your Senior NCOs

Emil Rogers is sergeant major of the 5th Student Battalion (OC), The Student Brigade.

The top sergeant entered the Army in August, 1943, and received basic training at Camp Wheeler, Ga. At the conclusion of his initial training, Sgt. Maj. Rogers was given his first duty assignment with Company M, 30th Infantry, 3rd Infantry Division, in Anzio, Italy, as a machine gunner.

The senior NCO fought with this unit through the Italian and French campaigns, and on into Austria at war's end. During the fighting in the Argonne Forest, France, Sgt. Maj. Rogers, earned the silver star for heroism while in support of his rifle company during a counter attack.

In 1945, he returned to the U. S. for discharge, and reenlisted for occupational duty in Japan. He became a platoon sergeant and later first sergeant with the 21st Infantry, 24th Division.

Returning to the U. S. in 1949, E-8 Rogers, was again given duties as a platoon sergeant, this time with the 15th Infantry, here.

At the outbreak of the Korean War, he received orders, and joined the 5th Cavalry Regiment, 1st Cavalry Division, already engaging the enemy at Naktong River.

Next came an assignment to the 6th OC Company, 1st OC Regiment (5th Student Battalion, TSB) in the position of 1st Sgt. from 1951 to 1952, becoming regimental sergeant major until 1958.

ROGERS

Once again receiving overseas orders, the top NCO, went to Korea, with an assignment to the Korean Military Group (KMAG), in Wonju.

At the completion of this tour, he returned to the U.S., and became 1st Sgt. of the Fort Knox Reception Station, and later Sergeant major of the Headquarters Group Armored Center. While at this station, the senior NCO, was promoted to his present grade of E-9 on January 30, 1960.

The veteran of almost 20 years service in February of this year received an intracontinental transfer, to this post, assuming his present duties as sergeant major of the OCS headquarters on May 1st.

The top grader resides in Columbus with his wife and 10-year-old daughter.

Learn Your Vote Rights; Cast Your Ballot in '62

Who is eligible for voting Assistance under Public Law 296, "The Federal Voting Assistance Act of 1955" ?

Department of the Army Pamphlet 21-50, January, 1962, and AR 608-20, 25 April, 1962, specify four groups as being eligible for aid in voting by absentee ballot when their duty or service requires them to be away from their legal voting place at election time. These groups are:

Members of the Armed Forces while on active duty and their dependents.

Civilian employees of the United States in all categories serving outside the territorial limits of the United States and their dependents when residing with or accompanying them. The employee does not have to come under the civil service laws, the Classification Act of 1949, and he doesn't have to be paid from funds appropriated by the Congress.

Members of religious groups or welfare agencies assisting members of the Armed Forces who are officially attached to and serving with the Armed Forces, and their dependents.

Members of the Merchant Marine of the United States and their dependents.

The first step in the absentee voting process is to be sure that you are a registered voter in your state requires registration.

It is impossible in the limited space available here to list all of the registration laws for all 50 states. However, with the thought that some general registration information will be useful, we are providing it — 26 states this week and the remainder in next week's "Ballot Box."

The type of registration law most popular today is the "permanent" registration laws in effect in one form or another, the definition of "permanent" varying from State to State. Some of these laws state that once registration is accomplished, it is permanent until the registree fails to vote in a general election. A qualification often appearing limits "permanent" registration to certain counties, cities, parishes or other divisions within a state. However, in general it may be stated that in "permanent" States you need not register for each election. States having "permanent" registration are: Alabama, Arizona, California, Colorado, Florida, Georgia, Hawaii, Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Mississippi, Montana, Nebraska and Nevada.

Be sure to check with your Soldier Voting Officer for the details for your particular State Registration laws.

Alaska, Arkansas, Iowa, Kansas, and Missouri either do not require advance registration or do not have a registration law.

All the States listed in this week's article allow Armed Forces personnel to register by absentee process except Alabama and Louisiana where you must register in person.

Lt. Burk to Direct Local Theater Group Production

The Masquers, Fort Benning's community theater group, will present "Damn Yankees" Sept. 12 through 15 as its first production of this season.

The curtain is scheduled to rise in The Masquers Playhouse, Bldg. 2515, each evening at 8:15 on the musical comedy based on Douglas Wallop's novel, "The Year the Yankees Lost the Pennant."

Dress rehearsals are slated for Sept. 10 and 11 and tentative plans are to invite patients from Martin Army Hospital to see these first presentations.

Director of the play is 1st Lt. Bernard Burk, a member of The Infantry Center Staff Judge Advocate Section.

While at Tulane University, Lt. Burk directed and wrote lyrics for "Campus Night in College," musical review. He also was drama instructor at Camp Belaire, Tenn., directing "My Fair Lady," "South Pacific" and "You Can't Take It With You."

"Damn Yankees" opened on Broadway, May 5, 1955, with a cast which included Gwen Verdon, Stephen Douglass and Ray Walston. It had a long and successful run, totaling 1,019 performances.

The play book by George Abbott, Richard Bissell and Wallop tells the story of a businessman who enlists the devil's help by selling his soul in return for his favorite team's victory.

Army Reveals Long Ordeal of Pathet Lao Prisoners

WASHINGTON (ANS)—Maj. Lawrence R. Bailey and Sgt. Orville R. Ballenger, released from Pathet Lao captivity on Aug. 17, were returned to Washington, D. C., recently for hospitalization after brutal treatment as prisoners during almost a year and a half of imprisonment in Laos, the Department of the Army has announced.

Both men arrived at Andrews Air Force Base, Md., from Tokyo as litter patients aboard an aero-medical evacuation flight. They were met by Lt. Gen. Russell L. Vittrup, Deputy Chief of Staff for Personnel, Department of the Army. General Vittrup represented Gen. George H. Decker, Army Chief of Staff.

During debriefing, Maj. Bailey, suffering from malnutrition, intestinal parasites and malaria, told Army authorities of spending a full year imprisoned in a pitch black room under heavy guard. At no time during this period of "black box" incarceration was natural or artificial light permitted to enter his room.

Pathet Lao guards allowed Maj. Bailey outdoors only at night. These absences from his "black box" usually took place four times nightly and each lasted from one to three minutes. Thus, for a full year Maj. Bailey spent but a few minutes out of every 24 hours away from the total darkness imposed on him by his captors.

Although Maj. Bailey was not physically abused, the strain of solitary confinement was severe. The 39-year-old officer, however, stubbornly and successfully blocked this effort to shatter his nerve and to break his will to resist.

Maj. Bailey, of Laurel, Md., fell into Pathet Lao hands in March, 1961, after parachuting from a C-47 aircraft which was disabled by ground fire. At the time of his capture he was assistant Army attache in Laos.

Sgt. Ballenger, 28-years-old, confined in a different location in Laos, received equally brutal treatment, though of a different type. His guards repeatedly tried to get him to compose statements condemning United States support of SEATO (Southeast Asia Treaty Organization). All Pathet Lao efforts in this regard were fruitless. Though smitten with malaria, parasites and a bone disease induced by malnutrition, the determined paratroop sergeant refused to succumb to an endless stream of Communist threats and pressures.

Sgt. Ballenger began his ordeal of physical torture in April, 1961, on the day he was captured. After stripping him of his personal effects, Pathet Lao guards tied his upper arms close to his body, looped a length of rope around his neck and led him as though he were an animal on a leash. En route to his place of confinement, he was paraded through several villages where he was held up as an object of public scorn.

On one occasion during this march to prison, a guard sent a rifle bullet crashing past Sgt. Ballenger's ear as a gesture of derision. Many times during his detention, Communist guards coldly worked the bolts of their rifles and then pointed their weapons at the sergeant's head as if to execute him.

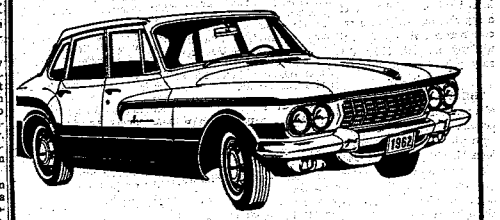
Sanitary conditions were abysmal while Sgt. Ballenger was a captive.

Later, when he was moved to another place of confinement, he was put in a room with other American prisoners. Filth and stench sickened the prisoners.

Sgt. Ballenger and his fellow captives suffered further mistreatment. They had their feet locked in stocks while lying on their backs and were forced to remain in this immobile position for 12 to 14 hours daily. The routine of locking the prisoners in stocks usually began at 5:30 each evening.

Sgt. Ballenger was taken prisoner while serving as a military advisor to Royal Laotian troops. His wife, Miyoko, lives in Spring Lake, N. C.

Maj. Bailey will undergo medical study and treatment at Walter Reed Army Hospital in Washington. Sgt. Ballenger will be evacuated to Womack Army Hospital, Fort Bragg, N. C.



FUEL CELL

The fuel cell used in the Project Apollo spacecraft will supply power for environmental conditioning, communications, instrumentation and scientific equipment. The hydrogen-oxygen cell will also supply Apollo's three-man crew with water.

WINS BRONZE STAR . . . Sgt. Orville Ballenger, (R), was presented the Bronze Star Tuesday for meritorious service while a prisoner in Laos. Lt. Gen. H. H. Howze, commanding general of the 18th Airborne Corps and Fort Bragg, reads the citation during award ceremonies at the sergeant's bedside at Womack Army Hospital, Fort Bragg.

Map Plan Being Tried

FORT BELVOIR, Va. (ANS)—An automatic system for the construction of mosaic maps from aerial photographs is currently being tested by the U.S. Army Engineer Geodesy, Intelligence and Mapping Research and Development Agency (GIMRADA), Fort Belvoir, Va.

The system, which uses an automated autofocusing rectifier and an automated variable magnification positioning printer, is designed to meet the demand for rapid and accurate map positions. Photomosaics normally are made by a cut and paste process, which is time consuming.

Each of the two units in the automatic mosaicking system is equipped with an individual electronic control console capable of conversion to punched taped operation. Both units operate from 115 volt, 60 cycle circuits, but may be manually operated in the event of power failure.

The system was designed and fabricated by the Union Instrument Corp., Plainfield, N. J., under contract with GIMRADA.

VTOL Turbo-Jet Aircraft Undergoes Army Testing

VTOL TURBO-JET In Initial Flight

WASHINGTON (AFPS)—The Army's first turbo-jet aircraft, the Lockheed VZ-10 Hummingbird, has successfully made its initial conventional flight at Marietta, Ga. The plane is designed for vertical takeoffs and landings.

After the current flight tests, Lockheed-Georgia will begin vertical takeoff and landing trials with the unique, twin-jet research plane.

The stubby-winged craft was flown by Leo Sullivan, Chief Engineering Test Pilot for Lockheed-Georgia. He said the flight was "completely successful in all respects" and that the VZ-10 "handled exceptionally well."

The heart of the Hummingbird is a system of ejector mixing chambers buried in the fuselage and enclosed top and bottom by bomb-bay type doors. The chambers are fed by high velocity exhaust diverted from the plane's two jet engines mounted in pods along either side of the fuselage.

For vertical takeoff, the doors are opened and free air is mixed with the exhaust gases and directed downward to produce augmented vertical lift.

Once aloft, engine diverter valves and fuselage doors are closed, directing the jet flow rearward for conventional flight. A reverse procedure allows vertical landing.

The Hummingbird is a mid-wing monoplane, 32 feet long, with a wing span of 25 feet. It is powered by JT12A-3 Pratt & Whitney turbo-jets.

Lockheed designed, built and is testing the aircraft under contract to the Army Transportation Research Command, now an activity of the newly-established Army Materiel Command.

Soviet Space Shot Leaves Little Doubt

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Defense Department sees nothing in the recent Russian world-orbiting "twin" flight that had not already been anticipated although the double launch was "important" and leaves Soviet skill undoubted.

In addition, the military implications of the flight at this time are not evident, if there are any since a thorough evaluation by top military, civilian and scientific officials has not been completed.

A Defense Department official did say, however, that certain medical information could have military implications. One would be how men operate for extended periods in a weightless environment.

The spokesman said that on a basis of what is known today of the Russian flight, there is no reason for changing our present space program even though full evaluations of the Russian flights have not been made.

In a recent San Francisco speech, Assistant Secretary of Defense Roswell L. Gilpatric gave a clear-cut explanation of how the Defense Department intends to cope with "specific military activities" in space.

He said "we cannot afford a Soviet technological surprise in the military space area, regardless of what its military significance might actually be.

"As a result," he said, "we are developing the components, subsystems and technologies of a number of possible space systems."

Driver Sp-4. Age 21. Time, 2315 hours. Car '57 model, good condition. Road paved, holiday traffic heavy. Mission, enroute home 450 miles away on holiday pass with family and one other soldier passenger. Sleepy and tired. Driver dozed, drifted over into left lane in front of an approaching car resulting in a head-on collision. Results: four killed, two injured seriously, car demolished. Lesson learned: wear seat belts and never start long trip at night while sleepy and tired.

'Soft Diet' Can Cause More Dental Disease

By Maj. Charles W. Dobson
Preventive Dentistry Officer

In discussions of means of reducing dental diseases, diet is covered most briefly, and yet it may be one of the most important factors.

Deficiencies in vitamins or other foodstuffs can result in general body disorders, the effects of which appear in the mouth. But in the United States generally, this is of no concern. Our standards of living are such that almost everyone has an adequate diet. This is not entirely true, but it is a safe broad assumption.

Primative people have traditionally had fewer dental disorders than people with a high standard of living. It does not necessarily follow that a low nutritional diet produces dental disease. The big problem in the U. S. seems to be our preference for a soft diet and foods containing large quantities of refined sugars.

As mentioned in previous articles on dental decay, the amount of sugar taken into the mouth has a direct effect on dental decay. These sugars are used by your body as carbohydrates, the energy producing substances. However, we receive adequate amounts of carbohydrates in a normal diet without foods high in sugar content. Therefore these should be eliminated or drastically reduced in your diet.

The "Snacker," the person who is constantly eating candy, cookies, or donuts, etc., tends to dislodge loose food particles which might otherwise remain in the mouth between meals, and who drinks several soft drinks during the day, is especially prone to dental decay. Many tests have been made proving that if this type of food is eliminated, your decay rate will drop.

If a person finds he simply cannot resist an occasional between-meal snack, fruits, especially apples, are the best substitute. Fruits not only are low in sugar content, they actually have a cleansing effect on the teeth and gums.

Soft foods have a detrimental effect on the mouth. They tend to cling to the teeth and gums and allow bacteria to thrive. This results in most of the dental disorders we know.

Hard, coarse, fibrous foods which require thorough chewing, produce a natural cleansing action of the tooth and gums. They also stimulate the supporting structures of the teeth and help to keep them healthy.

Drinking a sufficient quantity of water during a meal and rinsing with water after a meal also helps because it

Post Talent Contest Held At Service Club 1 Recently

Some 350 persons turned out to witness a talent contest held recently at Service Club 1. The contestants, all military personnel stationed here, entered in the competition for a top prize of a $50 savings bond.

The competition was broken down into two categories: group acts and individual performances.

Sp4 Wayne Eyre, Martin Army Hospital, was the over all winner in the solo category. Eyre played two selections on the classical guitar, including "Memories of the Alhambra" and "Green Leaves of Summer." He was awarded a $25 savings bond for his performance.

"The Vikettes" were the winners of the group competition and the $50 bond. Their song and dance act was accompanied by PFC Hubert Fleming of the 3rd Field Hospital. Choreography was done by PFC Eddie Robertson, 3rd Field Hospital, while Sgt. Bernard Jackson was vocal coach. The group included Sharon Johnson, Dorothy White, Linda Jackson, Patricia Baker and Hazel Neal.

PFC Raymond Murphy of the 58th Infantry placed third in the competition. He was awarded a cigarette lighter for his presentation of some new jokes.

Judges for the contest were Ray Anthony, Chaplain Mitchell Johnson, Charles Banu and 1st Lt. Thomas R. Amlicke, post entertainment officer.

Sp5 Charles Bey was master of ceremonies for the event.

Gen. McHugh Graduates With 306 Paratroopers

The Airborne - Air Mobility Department of Fort Benning's Infantry School graduated its fourth class of paratroopers recently in fiscal year 1963 as it presented silver wings to 306 students.

In the group were 258 Army enlisted men and 34 officers, seven Air Force enlisted men and three officers, two Marine Corps enlisted men, one Navy officer and one Allied officer.

Honor graduate of the group was Pvt. Martin L. Jones.

He received a certificate which said, "Your initiative, military bearing, superior physical conditioning and willingness to accept constructive criticism and instruction reflect great credit upon yourself and the Army."

Jones also received a statuette of a paratrooper, symbolic of his graduation as honor student. The presentations were made by Col. Michael Paulick, director of the department.

The 306 men who received silver wings brought the number of graduates of the Airborne-Air Mobility Department to 1,338 since July 1.

In the graduating class were Brig. Gen. Godfrey T. McHugh Air Force military aide to President Kennedy, and Wing Commander Stanley J. Hubbard, Royal Air Force, Great Britain.

Gen. McHugh's attending the jump course is indicative of President Kennedy's and the Air Force's interest in the highly specialized training required by the Armed Forces of the nation in the present international situation, Col. Paulick said.

Also graduating were three second generation paratroopers, Pvt. Willie B. Robinson, son of Willie L. Robinson, a member of the 101st Airborne Division in 1942 and 1944; Marine Corps Pvt. George Ramirez, son of Mrs. Dudelia Ramirez and Pvt. Ronald Garren, son of Thomas Garren.

The elder Garren was a member of the 82nd Airborne Division in World War II.

Junior High Form Dance Group Here

Miss Roesie Gilmore announced recently that a cotillion dance group is being organized to commence in the fall.

The group, to be composed of 7th and 8th grade boys and girls, will meet on Monday evenings from 7:30 to 8:30 in Building 1053. The first meeting will be held September 10.

Miss Gilmore said the class will be limited to 40 pupils. She suggests that persons interested might pick a partner and register with that person, thus assuring an equal number of boys and girls.

Dan Beers, a pupil of Miss Gilmore's for four years, will be the assistant instructor. For further information call Miss Gilmore at FA 5-3072.

of your family may visit you between 6 and 8 p.m. At bedtime, you will be given a "pill" to help you sleep. Generally, you're ready for sleep, for you've had a full day.

Early the next morning you will take a shower and wash with the special soap — then back to bed. The nurse will give you another "pill" and a "hypo" which are really part of your anesthetic. Now you can snooze peacefully until the operating room technician comes with his wheeled litter to take you to the "OR".

I'm afraid the operating room will prove a disappointment to you, for it is a quiet place filled with oddly dressed people, but without a single Ben Casey in sight. Now you are moved onto a narrow table, a strap is placed over your legs, and the anesthetist starts an intravenous injection to give you nourishment, for you've had nothing to eat or drink since midnight.

This nurse or doctor will tell you at each step exactly what is occuring. Before you know it, you're asking that blurred figure at your side, "When are we going to start", and are much surprised to hear the answer, "It's all over, and you're in the Recovery Room."

The Recovery Room is a specially designed and equipped ward located immediately outside the operating room. It is staffed with highly trained personnel to assure constant professional medical and nursing care until your anesthetic "wears off", and you are able to take nourishment. The length of time you will remain here is determined by your doctor, who will return you to your home ward when he feels you no longer require these specialized services.

Visiting is limited on this ward for obvious reasons, but if you remain overnight, adult members of your family may visit you one at a time between 7 and 8 p.m.

After you return to your ward, you will stay long enough to regain your strength before discharge. Generally, your "stitches" will be removed before you leave.

Throughout your stay, you will find Martin Army Hospital personnel ready to answer your questions, and ease your stay. Your operation will probably cause some initial physical discomfort, but you won't find this experience as bad as you think.

Army Dominates '62 International

By Sp4 Ron Claxton

A perfect score and 17 of 19 Army wins is the story thus far, in the 2nd Annual Armed Forces International Shooting Competition here.

This competition which ends today, saw 1st Lt. Robert B. Trew post a 594 out of a possible 600 score in the smallbore rifle prone championship to take the first individual Army championship.

The Army Blue Team of Captains Daniel B. Puckel and Tommy G. Pool, 1st Lt. Presley W. Kendall and Cpl. Gary L. Anderson, banged out a 2,352 score for the first Army team win. Their combined score exceeded the world record by 19 points but did not replace it. A world record may only be broken in world competition.

Blankenship Wins

National pistol champion, SFC William B. Blankenship brought down the first pistol win by firing a perfect 600 score in the centerfire championship. This perfect score added three points to last year's mark which was also set by the pistol champ.

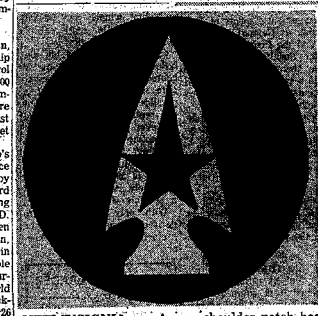
Even with Sgt. Blankenship's perfect score, the Air Force center fire team anchored by SSgt. Edwin L. Teague, third place individual winner, along with Captains Thomas D. Smith III, Franklin C. Green and TSgt. William H. Mellon, marked the first Air Force win with a 2,352 out of a possible 2,400 score. Their score surpassed the standing world mark set by a Czechoslovakian team, going over by 26 points.

On the skeet range 197 out of a possible 200 clay pigeons fell to MSgt. Henry H. Shaw's blazing shotgun for another Army first. Sgt. Shaw teamed up with 1st Lt. Gordon D. Horner, 1st Lt. James B. Clark and SFC Kenneth D. Gilbert to take first team honors in the skeet team championship.

In the three positions of the Smallbore rifle championship 1st Lt. Presley W. Kendall took the prone position title with a 397 out of a possible 400 score. Second Lt. Lonee W. Wigger Jr., posted a 371 out of a possible 400 score to take the standing crown.

Marine Victory

Marine Corps Sgt. James E. Hill broke up the Army's individual win streak by taking the kneeling position championship with a 391 out of a possible 400 score.



The Army popped right back by taking the aggregate of the three previous matches. Capt. Pool, though not winning a single one of the three posi

Promotions Set for Oct.

WASHINGTON (AFPS)—Promotions to the Army's super enlisted grades during October will show a substantial increase over those in September even though total promotions, E-4 through E-9, will be 5,000 less than the preceding month.

The October total of 19,333 enlisted promotions breaks down as follows: E-9, 257; E-8, 673; E-7, 486; E-6, 826; E-5, 7,492; and E4, 9,599.

NEW INSIGNIA . . . A new shoulder patch has been approved by the Department of the Army for the Army Combat Developments Command. It will be worn by all personnel of the Infantry Combat Developments Agency here. The Combat Developments Command is a newly organized research group with headquarters at Fort Belvoir, Va., which envelops 33 subordinate commands. The new shoulder patch, which will be worn by all units of USACDC, has a red background, white arrowhead, and blue star.

Viet Nam Experience Put to Use In CONARC Military Instruction

FORT MONROE, Va.—Continental Army Command is making full use of actual field experience gained by units and individuals currently assigned operational missions in Viet Nam.

Gen. Herbert B. Powell, CONARC commander, stated recently he is highly pleased with counterinsurgency instruction being given throughout the Continental Army Command. Lessons learned by soldiers in Viet Nam are being integrated into military instruction.

Gen. Powell further stated that "counterinsurgency-counter-guerrilla emphasis is continuing at a rapid and steady pace. Over 31,000 hours of instruction in counterinsurgency and related subjects are part of the 226 courses currently given by the 27 schools under CONARC. This averages over 700 hours per course per school in counterinsurgency and related subjects."

"This counter - insurgency emphasis," continued Gen. Powell, "is being done without losing sight of the fact that combat leaders must be trained to fight any kind of war, including a highly mechanized war in Europe. We at CONARC recognize that failure to train Army leaders in the use of all weapons and techniques

A Civilian News Editor Lauds Fort Benning's Troops

Editor
Post Newspaper
Ft. Benning, Ga.
Dear Sir:

In recent weeks, men from your post have been in our area as participants in Operation SWIFT STRIKE II.

South Carolina in August is hot and humid and many of these men were called up to endure climatic and insect pestilence while performing their duties. Due to an administrative break, many of your post personnel found their way into our town and community seeking a respite from the life of the field.

Without exception, men from your post conducted themselves as gentlemen and were excellent representatives of the United States Army.

Many of our community's residents befriended the troops in our midst and found them to be young men of excellent character and behavior.

So often, men in uniform reap criticism from the civilian population in an area where they are located. During SWIFT STRIKE II, the opposite was true. Your men and others in our area brought numerous compliments to the men, their units, and their commanders.

As an ex-soldier, I felt compelled to write to you and ask that you publish this letter on behalf of all of us in Bennettsville, South Carolina, and Marlboro County, South Carolina, who found the men of SWIFT STRIKE II to be "the nicest men you could ask for." They are a credit to the Army.

I congratulate the men, their unit commanders, and their parents on presenting themselves in such a favorable and gratifying manner while they were visitors in our area.

Sincerely yours,

would impair the Army's ability to fulfill existing requirements for the security of the nation. Thus, our training covers the entire cold war spectrum, including counterinsurgency."

CONARC school system includes eight combat arms schools, ten technical service schools, six administrative schools, three specialist schools. In addition, one-fourth of all instruction conducted at the 16 CONARC Training Centers for trainees is devoted to subjects that are directly related to counterinsurgency.

"The trainee," stated Gen. Powell, "is being continually impressed with the requirement to relate the skills learned to counterinsurgency operations."

CONARC has further integrated counterinsurgency training in every field exercise and maneuver. CONARC is responsible for virtually all Army training in the Continental U. S.

Matches

tion championships, rolled up an 1,147 out of a possible 1,200 score to best the other 31 firers.

Cpl. Anderson, Captains Puckel and Pool and Lt. Wigger combined their scores for a total 4,570 to take first piece in the three-position rifle team championship.

Capt. Cecil L. Wallis, firing over the world's most difficult rapid fire pistol course, brought home the bacon by pelting out 285 points out of a possible 300. This rapid fire match consists of 60 shots fired at silhouette targets from 25 meters. Three series of four five-shot strings are fired in eight, six and four seconds respectively. Each string of five shots is fired on a bank of five silhouette targets, one shot per target.

SFC Arthur G. Ogden, Laurence K. Mosley and Aubrey E. Smith teamed up with the individual winner and posted a winning 2,316, score out of possible 2,400 for first.

Cpl. Anderson fired his big bore rifle over three 300-meter courses of fire for an aggregate score of 1,154 out of a possible 1,200 to surpass but not replace the world record by seven points.

Shooting from the prone, kneeling and standing positions, Cpl. Anderson posted scores of 397, 388 and 369 respectively. All courses yielded a possible 400 points.

With only 12 matches to go the Army appears to be a cinch to take first team honors.

Post AFMA Is Planning Luncheon

A luncheon meeting of Fort Benning's Armed Forces Management Association has been scheduled for noon, Sept. 20, at the Custer Terrace Branch of the Main Officers' Open Mess.

Guest speaker will be Thomas C. Moore, manager of the Columbus Chamber of Commerce. He will speak on "Economic Development of the Columbus-Fort Benning Area."

The address will introduce the association's program theme for the 1962-1963 season, "Management Aspects of Fort Benning as Related to Columbus and the People Who Work on the Post."

The theme will be carried out in a series of presentations by outstanding speakers throughout the year.

Topics will include management and economic aspects created by the Walter F. George post development plan, and management aspects of The Infantry School's Operations Office.

The overall purpose of the series of lectures is to show how an individual job relates to the unit, the post and the community.

ANOTHER FIRST

A Polaris missile was launched from submerged nuclear submarine George Washington on July 20, 1960. It was the first successful firing of balistic missile from under water.

Initial PTA Meeting Set For Tuesday

The first P-TA meeting of the 1962-1963 school year at Fort Benning will be held at 8 p.m. Tuesday at Faith School.

Principal speaker will be Maj. Gen. Harrell, commanding general of The Infantry Center.

Col. Edwad M. Foxworth, P-TA president, will preside at the meeting.

Mrs. Hazel J. Scudder, superintendent of schools on the post, will introduce school principals and members of her staff. Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Arthur J. Estes will give the invocation.

A 30-minute concert by The Infantry Center Band will precede the meeting.

Parents will be asked to register by schools at tables placed on ramps near the auditorium. Teachers will be seated at the tables to meet the parents of their pupils. The Membership Committee will be on hand to enroll both fathers and mothers in the organization.

With a membership of 2,831 last year, the Fort Benning P-TA was the largest in Georgia.

The goal for this year is every parent of a child attending Fort Benning's Children's Schools be enrolled in P-TA, officials said.

Faith School is on Running Ave., Bldg. 880.

A battery of searchlights will be placed on the school grounds to mark the way. Ample parking space will be available.

NATIONAL CEMETERY

Arlington National Cemetery is administered by the Department of the Army. It was established on June 15, 1864, on land originally the estate of George Washington Parke Custis.

Process 3,185 Children In Dependent Registration

A total of 3,185 military dependents were processed during the post's dependent school registration last week.

Of this number, 2,724 will attend the post's five Children's Schools, which include kindergarten through the eighth grade.

Four hundred and sixty-one dependents living on the post obtained approval slips to attend high school in Muscogee County.

Military dependents living in the civilian community are not required to register with the post school system nor can they attend school on the post.

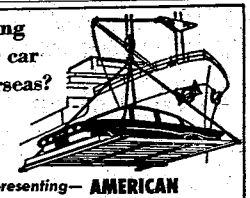
The breakdown by grades at the Fort Benning Children's Schools is kindergarten, 433; first grade, 416; second, 404; third, 351; fourth, 305; fifth, 295; sixth, 229; seventh, 201; eighth, 193, and special class, 5.

Africa Is Added To Foreign Area

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — The Army has added Africa to its Foreign Area Specialist Training Program.

A recent announcement said 15 officers would be trained as specialists in the African area at the American University here.

Currently there are 362 Army officers who have completed similar studies in 15 other areas of world interest.



The studies will acquaint the officers with the overall culture of the African peoples, the geography and economy of the continent — and within designated sub-areas, the languages of Africa.

Three Complete Rugged Jungle Warfare Course

If you know how to behead an enemy sentry with a machete, butcher and eat a monkey, booby-trap the corpse of wild pig with a poison-gas mine, and infiltrate many miles into unmapped enemy territory, chances are you have been to the rugged three-week jungle course offered by the Army's Jungle Warfare Training Center at Fort Sherman, Canal Zone.

Three officers from the 1st Infantry Brigade recently completed the rigorous training and earned the coveted "Jungle Expert Patch."

Completing the course at the end of August were 1st Lt. Carlton L. Clark, assistant S-4, 1st Infantry Brigade; 1st Lt. Donald L. Gregg, assistant S-3, 1st Infantry Brigade; and 2d Lt. James R. Maisano, 29th Infantry S-3 Troop Requirements officer.

The course is offered twelve times a year and includes 70 hours of actual jungle living. The course is so difficult that only one-third of those who start the course ever complete it.

The three officers all thought the school to be of exceptional calibre and very important considering the current world situation. However, commented Lt. Gregg humorously, "Contrary to most people's opinion, the ant is the king of the jungle."

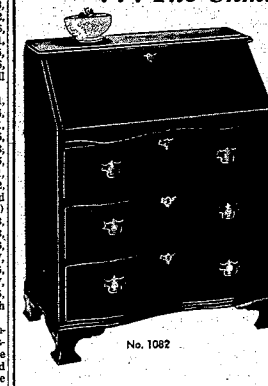
Artillery Duo Ties For Honors

Soldier - of - the - Month is almost something of the past in the 2nd Howitzer Battalion, 10th Artillery, 1st Infantry Brigade. For the first time in the unit's history two men have been accorded the honor for the same month.



Setting this distinctive example in becoming the first Soldiers-of-the-Month in the 10th Artillery are Sp4 Robert Bittel and PFC John M. Morman. Sp4 Bittel is an FDC chart operator in Battery C. PFC John M. Morman is a cannoneer in Battery A. The Salute Battery, and is often ceremonies here and throughout the Third Army Area.

Both men set a rugged pace in vying for top honors leaving the Soldier-of-the-Month Board for no other alternative but to declare two winners. Criteria for selection included knowledge of individual duties commanrate with duty assignment and MOS; knowledge of the organization and chain of command; military courtesy, appearance, and military bearing; and knowledge of world affairs.

Safety Record Here Admirable...So Far

Post safety officials tipped their hats Tuesday morning to Fort Benning's safety-conscious personnel. Not one fatality or serious injury was recorded as a result of the long holiday weekend among the thousands of troops stationed here.

We should keep in mind that safety is a continuing objective, not one for which to strive only during holiday periods.

The time of year when children are on the streets each morning and afternoon is with us once again. The post Children's Schools opened Tuesday, creating a new traffic problem of which we should be aware.

During the summer months it is easy to forget the speed limits in school zones and the stop signs on the school corners. Every motorist should readjust his driving habits so that children on and off post can walk or bicycle to and from school in safety.

Parents have a responsibility here, also. Children of all ages should be cautioned by their parents to the dangers of the highways. Rules for street crossing and bicycle riding should be reviewed with the children. Fatal accidents are not always the fault of the motorist.

Fort Benning's safety record has been a good one thus far. Let's keep it that way.

A 'Voice of America' That's Anything But

They have to ration shoes and a lot of other things in Cuba —under Fidel Castro the economy is a bleeding wreck. Cubans go hungry but Castro can spend an estimated $35 million on a radio station to bombard Latin America with Red propaganda in four different languages.

Radio Habana Cuba calls itself "The Free Voice of America." Twenty-two hours a day it lambasts the United States, burbles about the joys of life under communism and in general tries to stir up trouble in the countries whose governments are against Castro and all he stands for. It even has a few renegade Americans to prattle its line.

How many Latin Americans give a serious ear to such stuff? It's impossible to say, of course. Castro and his Marxist gang are out to give us a bad time in the Western Hemisphere, with the Soviets and Red China egging them on. It would be dangerous to underestimate the nuisance value of Radio Habana Cuba in countries where millions of people have only the barest necessities of life.

But Castro's gangster methods on his own captive island may nullify all the sweet talk and bluster of his propaganda. The regime has resorted to increasingly desperate tactics to stay in the saddle — regimentation of labor, attacks on the church, confiscation of property are only a few of them. Spies are everywhere. Justice is a farce. Prisons are jammed with miserable, starving men whose only crime is opposing Cuba's bearded, hysterical leader.

All this Castro can't conceal—and the world remembers well the fate of another dictator, Mussolini, hung by his heels in a Milan square by his own people. (AFPS)

Helps Every Inch of the Way

CHAPLAIN'S CORNER

Indulgence or Discipline?

By Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Alfred P. Lum

Holy Writ informs us that "the gate is narrow and the way is hard, that leads to life, and those who find it are few."

This is a stern and challenging invitation to revolt against the self - indulgence that often holds us in its grip. We are not here to drift and to dream and to please ourselves. The world is not our oyster; it is instead "a vale of soul-making," wherein we are meant to live lives worthy of immortality.

The "gate" and the "way" are quite beyond the finding of the self-indulgent who defy the discipline of God. Likewise the quest for God defies the cheap and the tawdry. The demand for stern self-discipline runs like a golden thread through the teachings of Scripture and the experience of our faith.

Unhappily and unfortunately, the cult of self-expression has palyed havoc with the mood of discipline in our time. We have been led to believe desires were meant to be satisfied without restraint. We have been persuaded that repression brings in its wake neurotic traits and that freedom comes from letting ourselves go.

The rebellion against self-indulgence demands the grace and strength of God in us. Self-discipline is not achieved by tugging at our bootstraps. It comes from an intelligent realization of who we are, children of the Most High God, and yielding to His divine lift.

It is loyalty to God that brings the change from self-indulgence to self-discipline.

Value of Your Vote: A Voice of Freedom

Why bother? It's only a piece of paper. Besides, what difference does it make to us? We're in uniform.

Ever hear that sort of talk? Maybe you were doing the talking. In any case, it doesn't hold water, not when the piece of paper is your ballot. What happens on the first Tuesday in November makes a lot of difference to us. It's the day Americans decide who's going to run our government—at national, state, county or town level.

We decide—that's the great thing. Millions of Russians and Chinese and other peoples in police states go through life envying us that free Americans we don't take any pushing around or funny business from our elected leaders. We put them in and we can put them out.

And as for being in uniform, that doesn't make us a breed apart. Service life gives a man a deeper understanding of duty; we should be the first to see that it's our duty as citizens to use our ballot. Wherever we are, we have a stake in what's going on at home.

Every state in the Union provides absentee ballots so we can make ourselves heard. All the services have designated Voting Officers with information about elections to be held in our particular state.

So there you are — the right that guarantees all other rights is ours. Let's not pass it privilege which some of us take for granted. As up! (AFPS)

Liberty and Communism

The Right to Own Property

The great English philosopher John Locke based the fundamental natural rights of life, liberty and estate (property) on the Natural law. He added a special argument for the right to property. It ran as follows:

In the state of nature, preceding the formation of government, property, especially land, was held in common. After the formation of government, men cultivated their own plots of land. They mixed their labor with the land, and thus, by virtue of their labor, the land became theirs.

Locke's labor theory of value as justification for property rights was later used by economists to apply to the entrepreneur as the vital element in creating new wealth (capital) involving new property rights.

The building of a new civilization in the "American wilderness" developed an individualism on the part of the colonists deeply devoted to the Lockean liberties. The colonists were firmly convinced of the rightness and utility of private property.

The new state constitutions following the Declaration of Independence in 1776 conspicuously asserted this right in their Bills of Rights.

According to the Communist Manifesto if 1848, the theory of communism can be summed up in the single phrase: "Abolition of private property."

But - modern - communism implies far more than abolition of private property. In addition, it includes: (1) abolition of private profits; (2) government control of all means of production, distribution and consumption; (3) enforce economic planning. and (4) a police state to enforce economic planning.

Before the Bolsheviks had consolidated their power and brought all of the old Tsarist empire under their control, they led the peasants to believe that the Bolshevik Revolution would help them to take and keep for themselves the lands of the great landowners.

Lenin instructed the Bolsheviks to encourage the peasants to seize the land of the great estates. He invented such slogans as "Land to the tollers" and "Expropriate the expropriators." Lenin thus used the land-hungry peasants to destroy the capitalist system in agriculture.

The Bolsheviks did not tell the peasants that the Soviet Government would soon confiscate all their surplus production from their new lands, nor that in another decade the government would confiscate the land itself, forcing the peasants into collective farms.

Women's Club Diary

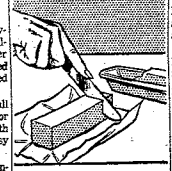
The sigh of relief from several thousand mothers was almost audible this week all over post, as the schools opened and our darlings all trooped off for another year.

Before you get used to all the free time this creates for you, plan your activities with the Woman's Club for the busy season ahead.

First, the Opening Tea, sponsored by the Ladies of the Weapons Department, is scheduled for Oct. 3, at the Main Club. This will be the first major event for our Club, as well as the first major affair in the newly decorated Club. So plan now to attend.

Invitations will be sent out this week, but if you do not receive one, come anyway. The Opening Tea is our get-acquainted affair for the year. All active and retired officers' wives in the area are cordially invited. Each activity chairman will be present to enroll new members. And there are some exciting things planned this year.

Hatmaking will be offered for the first time in several years, as well as Ceramics, Dance, Flower Arranging, and many, many more. That's Oct. 9, the Opening Tea.



Ann Roberts will begin a new modelling class this week in the School of Charm. A morning class will meet Tuesdays, and another class will be offered Thursday evenings. This is a wonderful opportunity to pick up pointers in looking your very best in the new clothes being featured this fall. Mrs. William Gray, 544-2902, is accepting registrations for the School of Charm and Modelling.

A trio of important activities beginning now:

Dance: Tap, Toe, and Ballet. Call Mrs. Miles, 545-3309.

Pre - Kindergarten School: Children 3-5. Mrs. Murray, 545-2217.

Dinner Held By Ballroom Dance Class

The Junior Ballroom Dancing Class held its semi-annual dinner dance recently at the Supper Club.

In the receiving line was Miss Jill Caldwell, who is teaching the group during the illness of Mrs. J. E. Morrow; Lt. Col. and Mrs. W. P. Kreil, Maj. and Mrs. Allan Twichell and Lt. J. M. Horvath. Miss Roberta Gingrich presided over the punch bowl.

After dinner was served in the main ballroom, members of the class did exhibitions in tango, foxtrot, waltz, swing and cha-cha. Miss Caldwell presented "Bennies," the highest trophies awarded to outstanding members of the advanced class.

The climax of the evening was the crowning of the king and queen — Kitty Cole and Richard Schroeder. They were voted the best dancers of the advanced class by their classmates.

Miss Caldwell announced that new classes would begin at the Country Club Branch of the Main Officers' Open Mess during September. Ages 8 to 11 will meet at 6 p.m., and ages 12 to 16 will meet at 7 p.m. on Thursday evenings. All those interested in joining should call Mrs. J. E. Morrow at MU 9-0767.

'Follow Me' Crest Co-Designer Pays Call, Remembers Old Days

DESIGNER CRAWFORD Chats With Gen. Harrell

AFTER 40 YEARS . . . Col. Crawford tours the 29th Infantry area with Col. Warren Hodges, battle group commander. The 29th was Col. Crawford's unit here after graduation from The Infantry School. His fellow officers in the company included 1st Lts. Nathan Twining and Albert Wedemeyer, now retired generals.

Col. (Ret.) Tom Crawford of Phoenix, Ariz., visited here recently, where 42 years ago while a student in The Infantry School, he co-designed the "Follow Me" crest, official symbol of the school.

While on post he met with Maj. Gen. Ben Harrell, commanding general of The Infantry Center and commandant of The Infantry School, and Col. William A. McKee, Infantry Center chief of staff.

A second lieutenant in 1920, and just out the U. S. Military Academy, Col. Crawford was enrolled in The Infantry School's first graduating class.

Morale Factor

Experience during World War I had shown American Army officials that the regimental colors and insignia of the troops went a long way in maintaining troop moral. It was felt similiar emblems would add to the esprit de corps of the U. S. soldier.

Col. B. A. Byrne, at the time 2nd Lt. Byrne and a West Point classmate of Col. Crawford, was given the job of coming up with a suitable design for The Infantry School.

He, in turn, enlisted the aid of Col. Crawford.

The two sat down and began to ponder the matter. The first part of the emblem, the color, was easy to decide. Infantry blue was traditional.

At that time, there were nine weapons in the Infantry's arsenal, and a nine-sided shield was selected, each side to represent a weapon.

After official adoption several years later, two of the sides were dropped. This is the only variation from the original.

In search of a motto, the two hit upon a command used by small unit commanders when staging the final assault on an enemy position, "Follow Me".

The finishing touch added by the two 20-year-old officers is familiar to every Infantry leader in the U.S. and many Allied Armies. It is the upright bayonet, one of the weapons most peculiar to the foot soldier and the final weapon used by him in offensive thrusts.

As a member of the first graduating class at the school, Col. Crawford remembers some of the early history of the post.

All troops lived in tents. There were no hard surfaced roads. Rain gummed up these clay roads and made them almost impassable. The only way movement was possible at these times was on the board walks along each company street. These are all things he said in reflection.

He also remembered, "The only time we came to town was on Saturday afternoon after inspections, and then we'd have to be back for more studies on Sunday."

After finishing his schooling, he was assigned to the 29th Infantry.

Retiring after more than 30 years of military service, he and his wife moved to Arizona, where they now reside.

SPACE AGE

The age of space opened Oct. 4, 1957, when the Soviet Union sent Sputnik I into orbit around the earth.

Col. Crawford and his partner, Col. Byrne, can be proud of the product of their two minds.

The "Follow Me" emblem is the symbol of America's bravest fighting men.

Surgeon Says

Group Therapy Part Of MAH's Program

By Capt. Romulus B. Thomas, MC, Chief, Department of Neuropsychiatry

It was an unusual meeting. Five married couples sat about the small room looking expectantly at the man who settled himself at the head of the table, smiled in greeting and then nodded.

Mrs. X, who had undergone repeated negative examinations for severe headache, chronic fatigue, weakness and blackout spells, broke the silence: "Well, it happened again! I blacked - out yesterday, and George and I hadn't argued at all. In fact, it was the best evening we've had together in a long time so I don't see how you can suggest that we don't get along. Why, we never argue."

George, her husband, who never had A sick or nervous day in his life and can't seem to understand those who do, agreed, rather pugnaciously, "That's right. The wife and I get along perfectly."

Mrs. Y, now a lively and vivacious woman, who for five years changed doctor after doctor in despair and disgust because they told her that nervousness was causing her attacks of numbness, choking, shortness of breath and pressure in her chest rather than repeated heart attacks, said, "Boy, I'll have to see it to believe it. A husband and wife who never argue. John and I couldn't get along without a good old-fashioned argument."

Sgt. B, who had been referred by his commanding officer when his evaluation indicated that nothing in his command had seemed to cause Sgt. B to become edgy, irritable, distant, moody and to perform poorly and unpredictable at duty, interrupted her, "Yeah, that's true. Tell us the secret. The only way I know to keep from arguing is to never talk at all."

Mrs. K, an energetic and alert matron, who once felt vaguely insulted or rejected when her physician told her she had an emotional problem until she took the time to find out what they mean, chimed in. "Say, that's a possibility. How much do you two talk anyway?"

At this, Mrs. X lowered her head and shut her eyes, which had suddenly become tear-streaked while her husband blustered, "Why, why, well, we talk as much as any normal couple talks!!"

At this point, the man at the head of the table broke in, "That's an interesting point. I wonder. How do you tell how much normal people talk? Anybody?"

A chorus of voices responded and so it went until the end of the hour.

Strange conversation? Mean anything? Plenty — if you are there!

This is group therapy — a type of treatment for emotional problems utilized by Martin Army Hospital as well as other modern medical facilities where professionally-trained personnel are available.

Actually, there is nothing particularly mysterious about group therapy or its purposes. How individuals get along with the group or groups to which they belong (such as their family, marriage, where they work, etc.) is an important factor in determining whether or not they maintain emotional equilibrium. In other words, one way of considering emotional problems is to consider them as indicators that a person is having difficulty in the group or groups of which he or she is a member.

For example, Mrs. Y, mentioned above, might eventually find that her attacks of numbness, choking, shortness of breath and pressure in her chest, while due to her "nerves", was more specifically related to difficulties she and her husband were having with their marriage.

At this point, Mrs. Y probably also realized that the Emergency Room physicians were trying to help her with her condition when they suggested to her it was her "nerves" and that she should seek help in this area, rather than insulting or trying to get rid of her as she might have felt in the past during her many Emergency Room visits.

The basic approach to alleviating this type of condition is the same as when a physician sees a patient with fever who has pneumonia; the pneumonia is the basic condition to be treated and not the fever that accompanies it as a symptom. While penicillin may be the preferred treatment for pneumonia, so may group therapy be the preferred treatment for emotional problems, such as Mrs. Y experienced.

Group therapy consists of people meeting together with professional leaders in discussion groups. These groups vary as to the major area of consideration; for example, some may be oriented to marital problems, some to parent-child problems, while others may be oriented to work adjustment problems.

The goal of these groups is to allow people through discussion and interaction within these professionally - structured groups, to come to an understanding of emotional problems in terms of how they come about, how to deal with them, and how to prevent them. This, in turn, should lead to more harmonious functioning for the individual.

OPERATIONAL READINESS TRAINING . . . Camouflaged in the northern portion of the Ft. Benning Reservation, a quarter-ton truck carrying a 106 mm recoilless rifle and its crew participates in operational readiness training, part of 2nd Division combat training.

Readiness Phase Now in 10th Week

A greater portion of the 2nd Infantry Division returned from the field Thursday after completing the tenth week of operational readiness training.

Involved now with squad problems the 1st, 9th, 23rd, and 38th Infantries are preparing to continue training in larger units, from platoons to companies, getting ready for Army Training Tests.

Annual Firing

The division's 69th Armor, facing annual firing tests at Ft. McClellan, Ala., soon, is limbering up with tanks.

A great portion of the northern section of Ft. Benning has been allotted to the 2nd Division to complete this phase of training. Eleven different training sections have been designated and units rotate week to week from one area to another, holding their attack and defense problems, conducting regular training and living in the field approximately four days out of every week.

Headquarters for all units are maintained with minimum personnel in the Sand Hill and Kelley Hill contonment areas.

Ft. Mead Chemical Unit Scheduled to Join Div.

A new unit will join the 2nd Infantry Division in the next two weeks from Ft. Mead, Md.

Arriving Wednesday will be a seven-man advance party of the 184th Chemical Platoon, previously assigned to Headquarters, 2nd U. S. Army, Ft. Mead, Md. The balance of this unit, comprising one officer and 39 enlisted men, is scheduled to follow a week later.

Billets in Kelley Hill

The new 2nd Division unit is scheduled to be billeted in the Kelley Hill area, assigned as a part of 2nd Division Trains.

Duties of the 184th will be to support all division units with chemical supply, maintenance and chemical, biological and radiological training.

All division chemical support in the past has been provided by the 26th Chemical Detachment and the division chemical section. A request was made to assign additional chemical support to the division in the latter part of last year.

Sand Hill Power System To Have Greater Voltage

The electric power distribution system in the Sand Hill area is being modified to provide a greater voltage output from the main station.

Changing the copper wire connections in the station's transformers will increase the voltage traveling through the four-circuit distribution system from 2,400 to 4,160 volts.

Installatioo of the connections will save about $15,000 in the cost of larger conduits, U.S. Army Infantry Center Engineer Section officials said.

The cost of the project will be $15,533. Low bidder for the contract was the Andy Electric Company of Andalusia, Ala. The job is expected to be completed Sept. 14.

The modification will lessen the ampere load from the power station to the services and buildings in the area.

Without the changeover the electrical system would have required a greater feed of power that could have been accomplished only by the use of larger primary feeders.

Bloodmobile Is Visiting 2nd Division

A 2nd Division soldier recently was able to give free blood to his stricken mother even though she was in a hospital in far-off California.

The soldier had given a pint of blood six months ago at Fort Benning and had received a card and membership in the Red Cross Blood Bank. Because of this the California Red Cross office was able to give his mother free blood, saving her life and also much expense. If he had children or other inable dependents, this same security would have covered them.

The Red Cross Bloodmobile is once again visiting the 2nd Division. Today is the last day it will be open. It is located at Service Club Two.

All units have been approached and have set certain quotas. All division troops have been encouraged to give.

Col. Hughett (right) shows Mr. Zanger the 87th's training schedule

New York Author Visits Battle Group in Field

A New York author has been visiting the Division for the last few days, gathering material for a youth book he is writing on the daily life of the infantryman.

Mr. Jack Zanger, a free-lance writer now under contract to the publishing firm of Doubleday & Co., first went to Fort Dix, N. J., to get information on the soldiers' initial training.

He then spent some time at the Infantry School at Fort Benning before coming to the 2nd Division.

Here he was briefed by G-1 and G-3 on operations and training. He then went to the field where he observed the 87th Infantry, in training.

After a briefing by the battle group commander, Col. Ralph H. Hughett, he went to watch some of the squads of Co. A go through the attack phase of their current tests.

Mr. Zanger's book will deal with all phases of the soldiers daily routine, not only with what happens in garrison and in the field but also his off duty hours.

JUNGLE TRAINED
Lt. Leroy Jones

87th Officer Scores High With Jungles

By 87th Inf PIO

Lt. Leroy E. Jones, a platoon leader with Company D, 87th Infantry, last week returned after completing the three week Jungle Warfare Training course at Fort Sherman, Canal Zone, Panama.

By achieving one of the highest scores on the ten-event proficiency test, (over 800 out of 1000 points) Lieutenant Jones was awarded a Jungle Expert Badge to wear along with his Ranger tab and Airborne wings.

Lt. Jones recalled some of the areas of testing which included rope climbing, crossing rivers with full equipment, night and day navigation which took him through ten miles of dense jungle terrain and survival tactics, which required him to eat iguana lizards, boa - constrictors, monkey and a variety of jungle fruits and plants.

However, the most important and toughest phase of his training was escape and evasion during which he was pursued by "aggressor" school troops that eventually captured 125 out of the 185 man group. Lt. Jones added that the training and tactics he learned from the counter-guerrilla exercise that the 87th Infantry recently completed at Blairsville, Ga., proved invaluable.

Varied Subjects Keep 38th Busy

BY 38TH INFANTRY PIO

Preparation for overseas movement by the Europe-bound 38th Infantry continues at a rapid pace, with two of the major projects this week continuing on the ranges in M-14 Trainfire qualification and initial orientation and practical work for selected personnel with the armored personnel carrier.

Power

current for water heaters, coffee urns, steam tables in mess halls, electric dish washers, pump motors and building lighting.

After being installed, the new primary connections will feed current from only one phase of each transformer instead of the two now required.

38TH ORGANIZED

The 2nd Division's 38th Infantry was organized in 1917. It was assigned to the 3rd Division for movement overseas.

And for personnel not engaged in this training, subjects ranging from cold weather orientation to patrolling and small unit tactics all were on the schedule.

At Headquarters

At battle group headquarters, continued planning for the movement was added to routine duties for staff personnel. Staff sections and units alike put final touches into their instructions for the liaison group and advance party from the 38th soon to leave the battle group prior to embarkation of the main body.

Orientation, outfitting and training of new personnel continues in all units with a large influx of both arriving officers and enlisted men.

A number of personnel were returning or planning leaves prior to their six months' duty overseas.

The 38th is the first 2nd Infantry Division battle group scheduled for participation in "Rotaplan," which generally provides for a six-month overseas tour followed by a year and a half or more of duty back in the U. S.

CUP PRESENTED . . . The Commanding General's Sports Trophy for last season is presented by Maj. Gen. Charles H. Chase, right, division commander, to Col. Ralph H. Hughett representing the 87th Infantry. To win the semi-annual trophy the 87th accumulated 535 points, excelling in baseball, bowling, volleyball, and swimming. Since 1959 the 87th Infantry has won twice, 1st Infantry once, and Division Trains three times. Placing second and third in last seasons competition were Division Trains and Division Artillery respectively.

23rd, 9th Inf. Win Tennis Meet

The 23rd and 9th Infantries grabbed the honors with a decisive net victory in the recent Men's Open Tennis Tournament at Service Club Two.

Mike Spartling, Company B, 23rd Infantry, and Buford Burnley, Headquarters Battery, 10th Artillery, Fort Benning, teamed to whip Ben Harris, Company C, 87th Infantry and Robert Pilich, Company D of the same unit in doubles competition, 6-2, 6-4. Spartling and Burnley put on a burst after leveling the match at 2-2 in the first set. Harris and Pilich could not keep pace with the rallying front-runners.

In the singles battle, Mike Beechem, Headquarters Company, 9th Infantry, outplayed Ben Harris, 6-2.

Beechem, a varsity champ at Central Michigan University set a grueling pace with sharp serves and timely net play. Harris, an excellent player in his own, could not keep up with the surging Beechem.

"This year's tournament was a smashing success", said Sgt. Jesse F. Green, Program Director for the Service Club. Sgt. Green gave lessons to the entrees a month prior to the tournament.

2nd Division Volleyball Race Begins

The 2nd Infantry Division Volleyball Tournament started last week as six teams fought to gain an early lead in the first round.

The 1st Infantry came on with a rush to down Separate Battalions by scores of 15-8 and 15-9.

The 87th Infantry had an easier time as the coasted to 15-6, 15-4 wins over the 23rd Infantry.

Division Artillery did not even work up a sweat as they were handed two games by default from the 9th Infantry.

The games which were scheduled for Labor Day will be played today. There will be the 23rd Infantry pitted against Seperate Battalions at Sand Hill while Division Artillery will play 1st Infantry, and 87th Infantry will play 9th Infantry at Kelley Hill.

The competition is a double round-robin type tournament, the first round being over by September 20 and the second round by October 15.

With more than six years experience with Special Services work, Capt. Vazquez has many new ideas and plans for the 2nd Division.

More Sports

He hopes to encourage more sports participation especially within the battle groups. To this end he has called a meeting on the 14th of this month to discuss ways and means of more intramural sports activities. He also hopes to bring back more boxing and baseball.

With the advent of weekly field trainining, Capt. Vazquez hopes to produce a weekly Soldier Show to tour the battle groups. Already the first of these shows is underway.

Capt. Vazquez is married and has two children, Benjamin, eight, and Enrique, six.

Benning Grabs Third Army Title

Football Season Opens Saturday

By SFC Bismarck Stith

Saturday at Doughboy Stadium at 2 p.m., Fort Benning football fans will see what they have been longing for, the opening of the 1962 football season.

"We're a real good ball club" said Capt. Leaton C. Cofield, now starting his second year as head coach of the Fort Benning Doughboys, as he looked over some of the finest players ever assembled at the post.

Leading the starting line-up for their opening game with Gordon Military College will be Fred Murphy, pass - receiver for Malvin Tibbetts at Georgia Tech and at present a product of the Minnesota Vikings. Dan House, from Davidson University, will nail down the other end spot.

Two veterans from last year's team hold down the tackle positions, Lindell Loveliette, from Illinois at 250 pounds and Allen Everhart at the other side at 245. Everhart, was signed by the Baltimore Colts of the National Football League before being drafted into the Army.

At guard positions will be Sam Stellatella from Penn State at 190-pounds and Joe Wendryhowski from University of Illinois, a 1961 All-Canadian League star at Vancouver, who weighs in at 245.

At center is Elliott Mosely, formerly of the University of Alabama.

At quarterback will be a player who is no stranger to Georgia or the Southeastern Conference, Marvin Tibbetts, 1960 regular signal-caller for the Georgia Tech Yellow Jackets.

In the halfback slots will be two fleet - footed backs, Bobby Towns from the University of Georgia and Ron Quillen, from Tennessee State, a 200-pounder who last year played with Edmondton of the Canadian League. He was one of the three rookies selected from a crop of 33 to play in Canada last season.

The power-diving fullback position will feature Wallace Johnson, who played collegiate ball for University of Oklahoma.

Behind Tibbetts at quarterback will be John Saylor from Syracuse University, a good - running 185-pound back, and Wayne Peter, a newcomer to the team from Virginia State who weighs 190.

Coach Cofield announced that both games scheduled with the Atlanta Rebels, Nov. 3 and Nov. 24 have been cancelled and replaced with a home and away series with Fort Knox, Ky., on the same dates.

Spell Is Credited With Four Wins

REDSTONE ARSENAL, Ala.—The Fort Benning Doughboys baseball team took the Third Army baseball crown the hard way. After dropping the opening game to Fort Jackson, 4-2, putting them in the losers bracket, the Doughboys had to come back and win the next five games to walk off with the giant-size team trophy.

The tournament got underway Monday morning shortly after the opening ceremony, with Col. Thomas W. Cooke, post commander, tossing out the first ball. Both teams, Benning and Jackson, got off with a shakey start by contributing four errors each. Fort Jackson scored four runs while Benning could only pick up two. The game then turned into a pitching dual with Larry Purdy hurling a six-hitter to claim the victory. Benning's southpaw Marty Leicht pitched a three-hitter and chalked up a total of 11 strikeouts but suffered the loss.

In the second game of the tournament, Redstone Arsenal edged Fort Campbell 7-6, and came back the next day and clipped Fort McPherson 6-5, in a 13-inning game, the longest of the five-game playoffs. This game cinched a berth in the finals for Redstone Arsenal.

In the third game, Benning's work-horse Charles Spell went to work and pitched Fort Benning to the Third Army baseball championship.

After the Jackson 4-2 loss, the Benning team came back to down Fort Campbell, 9-0, Fort Jackson, 6-2, Fort McPherson 15-2 and Redstone by a score of 13-5 and 11-6.

Spell won every game but the McPherson game which went to Linwood Oates. In the four games he worked, Spell gave up only 12 hits and hurled a no-hit shutout at Campbell. In 23 innings he fanned 29 batters.

The hitting department was led by Benning's third sacker Jesus Herans who banged out 10 singles, a double and two triples. Teammate Jessie Joyce's two-run inside the park hime run along with six singles and Perdo Barrio's eight hits paced the Doughboys at the plate. Benning team banged out 54 hits in six games.

Besides winning the Third Army team trophy, each member of the Benning team was presented with a watch.

Packers' Starr Will Shine Here

Although the Green Bay Packers are one of the best balanced professional football clubs in recent years, they obviously are hitching their hopes to a Starr for repeating as National Football League champions.

Coach Vince Lombardi, whose team plays the Washington Redskins in Columbus Saturday, is in the center of a cluster of stars but he will agree the brightest is 28-year-old Bart Starr, the soft-spoken ex-Alabama quarterback.

In leading the Packers to the NFL title last year, the blond tousle-haired 200-pounder belies Leo Durocher's contention that nice guys finish last.

Modest and quiet off field, Starr is a commanding field general in action, barking orders sharply in a fashion contrasting to his every-day manner.

Starr was a dynamo in leading the Packers to their 37-0 triumph over the New York Giants in the championship game last December.

"Starr was the key to that victory," Coach Lombardi says. "Starr doesn't make many mistakes. And he's improved tremendously as a passer. He has timing and confidence now."

Starr credits Coach Lombardi with the victory. "Our passing game, like every other part of the operation under Coach Lombardi, is smart. We run a different pattern against zone and man-to-man defenses so all the quarterback has to do is watch the defense. He knows where the receivers are all the time."

Starr is heading into his seventh year of professional football since being the Packers' number 17 draft choice in 1956. He won the starting quarterback job last season after sharing it with Babe Parilli and Lamar McHan.

He now holds the Green Bay club record for most yards gained passing in a season with 2,418 in 1961 and the best passing record with 58.3 per cent of his efforts connecting last year.

Tickets for the Green Bay-Washington game, to be played at Memorial Stadium for the benefit of the Columbus-Phenix City Boys Clubs, are on sale at the Special Services office here.

GOOD GOLF

CEACK - THE - WHIP CHIP . . . Short, quick backswing, hit the ball in a crack-the-whip motion, short follow through — that's the chip. The object is to hit the edge of the green with a low trajectory shot that will roll when it lands. All arm — no body — action is the secret. Head is over the ball; stance is open; feet are close together when the No. 4, 5, or 6 clubs are used to chip. The club you use is determined by the amount of roll needed. Some players increase their control by choking down on the shaft, particularly if the shot has only a short distance to travel.

Awtrey Pitches Company To Softball Championship

Company A, Infantry School Battalion, captured the post softball championship recently as ace pitcher Thomas Awtrey pitched two consecutive shutouts at WAC Field over Bldgs. Company, 29th Infantry, 15-0 and 2-0.

The first game was halted after five innings when Company A built up a 10-run lead. Tournament rules entitle a team to be the victor if ahead by 10 runs after completion of five innings.

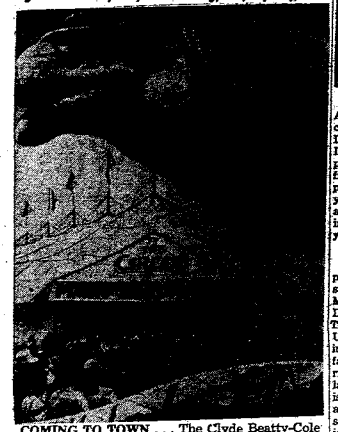
Pacing the hitting attack in the first game was Karl Durst. Durst collected four hits in as many times at bat. Pitcher Awtrey was in complete command as he coasted to his seventh straight victory.

Fifteen minutes after the completion of the first game, Awtrey went to work again, turning in his second straight whitewash performance. Durst also was the big gun in the second game, banging out a home run.

Company A had previously dropped their second game of the tournament to Company A, 806 Engineers, 3-1, before they came storming back to cop seven straight. They had to win two straight from Headquarters Company which was undefeated and required two losses to be eliminated from the tournament.

The victors began practicing Tuesday evening in preparation for their appearance as post representative in the Third Army Softball Tournament Monday through Saturday at Fort Jackson, S.C.

Old Post Gym Ready For Play



The "Old Post Gymnasium, recently renovated with a new floor and other facilities, will be ready for use in early September.

Improvements consist of a floor with an asphalt base under treated lumber planking and a hardwood surface to provide lasting service. New doors also have been installed in the building.

Some 500 of the Youth Activities Club's 3,800 members will play in three basketball leagues in the gymnasium this winter. The Biddy Leaguers, eight to 10 years old, and the Doughboy Leaguers, 11 to 12, will play on the small courts across the ends of the regulation courts.

Because of their size, they will score their points in baskets eight feet high instead of the usual 10 feet.

The YAC Intermediate League teams whose members are 13 to 15 years old will play on the regular court. All YAC games will be played after school hours and Saturday mornings.

COMING TO TOWN . . . The Clyde Beatty-Cole Brothers Combined Circus will be in Columbus Wednesday for performances at 4 and 8 p.m. Tickets, now on sale at several downtown locations, are $1 for children and $1.90 for adults. Columbus Civitan Club is sponsoring the appearance here on Victory Drive.

Dental Health Series

At Age 30, Average Person Has 12 Teeth

By Maj. Charles W. Dobson
Preventive Dentistry Officer
(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the 15th in a series of articles presented in the interests of better dental health.)

Here's a few facts you can really sink your teeth into.

The average American when he reaches 30, has only 12 healthy, unfilled teeth in his mouth, out of an original 32. Fifteen per cent wear false teeth, and another twenty per cent could benefit from them (though they are only one-third as good as natural teeth).

The newest stroke of genius, an electric toothbrush, would really have amazed our ancestors—less than 100 years ago, Americans were still brushing their teeth with homemade toothbrushes made from twigs!

The manufactured toothbrush didn't become popular here till the late 1800's. Yet the toothbrush has had a long and respectable history. Mohammed recommended it to his Moslem followers as a means for praising God!

The first "modern" toothbrush, looking startingly like the ones we use today, was invented by the Chinese — in 1498. The popular Roman toothbrushes was made from sponge. One of the earliest toothbrushes was made from wood rich in sodium bicarbonate.

For good, healthy teeth, let me suggest the following rules:

Brush your teeth immediately after eating.

Use a fluoride toothpaste.

Reduce between meal snacks.

If you cannot brush after snacks, rinse your mouth vigorously with water.

Visit your dentist at least once a year for (a) examination, (b) prophylaxis (cleaning), and (c) mouth X-rays.

309 Receive Silver Wings

The Army is richer by 309 paratroopers after graduation ceremonies here recently in which the newly qualified airborne personnel were given Parachutist Badges.

Honor graduate of the three-week course was Pvt. Chester E. Broyles.

Broyles topped a class that included 23 Army officers and 271 enlisted men, four U.S. Air Force officers and three enlisted men, two U.S. Marine Corps officers and one enlisted man, and one officer and four enlisted men from the Bolivian Army.

A highlight of the ceremony was recognition of five sons of former airborne soldiers whose fathers all saw combat during World War II.

John H. Wilson of Pittsburgh, father of PFC William W. Wilson; James T. Williams, New York, father of Pvt. James H. Williams, and Clarence Burke, Chicago, father of Pvt. Ted Burke, all served with the famed "Screaming Eagles," the 101st Airborne Division.

William H. Zwally, Pensacola, Fla., father of PFC Thomas H. Zwally, and John Meyers Whittaker, Calif., father of Pvt. Thomas Meyers, served with an equally noted unit, the 82nd Airborne Division, nicknamed, "All American Division."

Chaplain Estes Takes Post With Magicians

By Spt Bruce Yaffee

Irving Lewis, president of the International Brotherhood of Magicians, announced at the South Eastern Magicians Conference, held in Chattanooga, Tenn., recently, the appointment of Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Arthur J. Estes, The Student Brigade Chaplain, as chaplain of the I. B. M.

While at the convention, the brigade chaplain, was featured in a 20-minute magical act entitled "More Rope," that incorporated the use of one prop, a hank of rope.

The act was concluded with a sermonet designed to illustrate a patriotic theme. His one prop, the length of rope was cut in three varing sizes. The pieces of rope were to represent the three stages of growth of a patriot. During the sermonet, the chaplain, through magical effects, changed the ropes from unequal lengths, to equal lengths, and back to their original sizes.

Chaplain Estes, a member of three magician organizations—The Association of Christian Magicians, Magischer Zircle of Munich, Germany, and I. B. M.—categorizes his magic into three groups.

The first, "Pocket Magic," in which the use of small pieces of equipment are needed for close work. The second, his well knowledged use of magic sermonets, to illustrate one spiritual and moral truth; and thirdly, the full magic sermon, that may contain many points or ideas illustrated by magic.

Thompson, Regan 'Best' Photogs

Twenty-five dollars went to the first place winners in The Infantry Center Photography Contest, it was announced recently by Special Services Craft Director Hugh E. Cook.

SFC Edwin A. Thompson, a member of Company C, Student Brigade, won first place in the color division, and SFC Richard Regan, a member of 41st Company, 4th Student Battalion, took the black and white.

The winning photographs and 34 others in each division now move to the Third U. S. Army contest to be held at Fort Bragg, N. C., in late September.

Each photograph must start anew, however. Judges in the Third Army contest won't know the winner's of the post competition.

The same will hold true, when the pictures move to the All-Army competition in Washington, D. C., late in 1962.

As Cook put it, "A photograph that didn't catch one of the four judges eye in the post contest could come in first in the Third Army or All-Army."

All totaled 141 entered, 95 in black and white and 46 in color.

Other winners in color included MSgt. William G. Smith, second place and $20; Rexford V. Baker, third and $15; PFC Anthony D. Valentino, fourth and $10, and SSgt. Robert A. Martin, fifth and $5.

In black and white, David W. Oliver won second place and $20; Pvt. Robert L. Muska of Headquarters Company, 81st Armor, Fort Hood, Tex., third and $15; Sgt. Smith, fourth and $10, and Sgt. Martin, fifth and $5.

Oliver and Baker have been released since the contest began. Their entries will remain in contention, however, until eliminated through judging.

Army Lends Ear to Venus Sound Study

REDSTONE ARSENAL, Ala. (ANS) — Army Missile Command scientists are lending an "ear" to the Harvard College Observatory to enable astronomers there to listen to radiation emanating from the planet Venus.

Although the Command is primarily concerned with Army missiles, it is ready to assist in other scientific projects when it can.

The "ear" loaned to Harvard is a millimeter wave length radiometer, an instrument like a radio receiver that can pick up the extra short wave length raditions from Venus.

The radiometer, hand built by Missile Command scientists, is the only one of its kind known in existence.

Engineers Return From SWIFT STRIKE II

The 586th Engineer Company (Float Bridge) returned here recently after spending two weeks in South Carolina on Exercise SWIFT STRIKE II.

The 586th was assigned the mission of supporting the 92ist Engineer Group (Combat) for the Red Aggressor Forces of Gutasi, a mythical country at war with Renloa, another mythical country supported by the United States Government.

The two countries were initially divided by the Lynches River which flows two miles north of Bishopville, S. C. During the first two days of the maneuver the Red Forces planned and executed several river crossings into Renloa with a planned M4T6 Bridge in the vicinity of Wisacky, S. C.

The 586th, in support of the 27th Engineer Battalion (Combat), supervised the construction of the required pneumatic M4T6 floats in a rear bridge area and assisted in their movement to the proposed bridge site. However, due to the rapid advance of the Red Forces across the Lynches River, the permanent highway bridges were captured intact and the M4T6 was not required.

During the next one and one-half weeks, the support platoon's equipment, as used in the Lynches River Crossing, was on continual call and use. Later in the first week a second M4T6 bridge site was prepared across the Pee Dee River. The bridging which had been transported to a forward holding area was called out during a torenfial rain storm when three inches of rain fell in less than four hours. This developed the cumbersome task of moving the bridging equipment out of the holding area soaked by rain and covered by more than a foot of mud.

After almost three hours the entire company had moved out of the area and started forward. This forward movement was short lived as the Red Forces had captured the highway bridges over the Pee Dee River.

This victory resulted in the rearward movement ending in a regrouping action at the rear bivouac area located at Bishopville, S. C.

After the administrative break on Tuesday, the forward advance began again and the bivouac area was moved to the vicinity of Lamar, S. C., only to be moved again to the vicinity of Darlington County Airport where the 101st Airborne Division (Blue Forces) made their large air drop.

On the final day of the maneuver a final Red advance was attempted across the Pee Dee River at Brownsville, S.C., on Route 34. The 586th was again called out and arrived at the site prepared to bridge the 450-foot river at dawn. However, the Blue Forces used its atomic capabilities and completely destroyed the bridge site.

The movement back to Fort Benning ended with a reception committee consisting of Col. Mahlon E. Gates, 151st Engineer Group commander, other group officers and The Infantry Center Band.

YAC Fencing Classes to Start At Brat Barracks

The Youth Activities Club fall fencing classes are scheduled to begin this Saturday at the Brat Barracks. Classes will begin 2 p.m. and continue through 4 p.m.

Capt. Robert Byrom, Georgia foil champion for 1961 and 1962, will be the instructor for the coming year. His wife, Mrs. Patricia Byrom will assist him. Mrs. Byrom placed third in Georgia competition in 1962.

He's got that 'out of it' feeling

Guess he never got the word. Why not give him a hand and tell him about the 1962 Freedoms Foundation Letter Awards Program? Tell him he can enter by writing a 100-500 word letter on "My Freedoms and My Responsibilities" and sending it to the Foundation at Valley Forge, Pa. Point out that over 100 cash and honor medal awards will be given for the best letters. Urge him to start writing now! Get the poor fellow back in the fold! (By the way, you've already sent your entry in, haven't you?)

DNRI: Correspondence School for Infantrymen

By Sp4 Ron Claxton

With but 129 personnel, The Infantry School's Department of Non-Resident Instruction (DNRI) supports some 330,000 students a month.

The DNRI, acting as a school for Infantrymen off the post, is responsible for the instruction of students from the 50 states, the Canal Zone, Puerto Rico and other points overseas, including students from Allied countries.

Department personnel, 24 officers, 87 enlisted men and 38 civilians, under the direction of Col. G. Harry Huppert, obtain their instructional material directly from TIS and prepare it for use in the support of five non-resident programs.

The programs are the Reserve Officers Training Corps, National Guard State Officers Candidate School, U. S. Army Reserve Schools (Infantry), Staff Training Program and the portion of the Army Extension Course Program for which TIS is responsible.

Also ROTC

Each state, the Canal Zone and Puerto Rico have an ROTC program extending from high school through college. DNRI is the sole support of these 649 schools which have an estimated 275,000 students.

The National Guard Officer Candidate Schools numbering 57, with at least one in every state except Alaska, receive the up-to-the minute methods on all phases of the Infantry from TIS's resident officer candidate course via DNRI. An estimated 3,400 National Guard officer candidates are supported.

There are 185 Infantry Branch, Army Reserve Schools in the United States, one in Puerto Rico and seven in Europe. The schools in Europe are in Italy, Germany, Austria and Spain. Purpose of the schools is to keep Reserve officers abreast of current doctrines. To assist in accomplishing this mission, the Department of Non-Resident Instruction prepares programs of instruction and instructional problems.

The Staff Training Program consists of material available at TIS that may be useful to Reserve and National Guard commanders in training their staff members.

On an individual basis, an estimated 45,000 students are recipients of instruction from DNRI's Army Extension Course Program. Courses range from noncommissioned officers leadership courses to field grade officer courses.

2,500 Applications

"Army Extension Committee (AEC) receives an estimated 2,500 applications a month and 600 letters a week, all of which require action", Gustus Luckett, the AEC's executive officer, said.

Compilation of the department's data rests with 12 writers who work for the Instructional Materials Preparation Committee.

Maj. Buenaventura Esteves, the committee's chairman said, "In a recent survey, our writers turned out 18,500 pages of material in a year."

From the writers, the material goes to a pool of editorial clerk-typists, where it is set to style and format, the chairman explained.

After being typed, the material is reviewed for military content by a board of officers, then goes to an editorial section for sentence structure and punctuation correctness, to a specialist for educational validity and finally to the resident committees for doctrine and security checks, Maj. Esteves added.

The 12 writers, seven military and five civilians, have a general Infantry background, Maj. Esteves stated. All the civilians are college graduates while the military contingent are all graduates of TIS's career course.

After being printed by the Army Field Printing Plant here the material is packed and mailed by the department.

Over 175,000 pieces of mail a month are shipped from the DNRI's own post office, according to an official estimate. This includes some 12,000 subcourses and 34,000 lessons and examination grades.

Maj. Horton Is New Deputy SJA

Maj. Warren H. Horton has been assigned here as deputy staff judge advocate of The Infantry Center.

He succeeds Lt. Col. Daniel A. Leanon Jr., who has been named staff judge advocate of the 2nd Infantry Division, resident division on the post.

Maj. Horton, who was previously assigned to Korea, is an A.B. graduate of Rollins College in Winter Park, Fla., and an LLB (bachelor of laws) graduate of the University of Florida in Gainesville.

White is thought to be cooler because white is worn in summer and in hot climates. Although white reflects heat and light rays better than colors, in the case of underwear this would not apply.

DOD Reduces Supply Unit's Current Stock

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Soda crackers, sewing needles, dentist drills and aviation gasoline took the limelight recently in a DOD effort to cut the cost as well as the number of items purchased.

Basically, the military departments reached agreement to eliminate 3,228 additional line items of the Defense Supply Agencys' inventory of 244,300 items.

The cost of buying the average annual requirement of 1,500,000 pounds of soda crackers will be reduced by an estimated $93,000 annually.

Soda crackers were formerly purchased under a military specification designed to give the longest practical shelf life. While the shelf of another type soda cracker was proved to be somewhat shorter, test shipments indicated that they were cheaper and in good condition when used overseas.

The military departments agreed to standardize one grade of aviation gasoline instead of the four used since the end of World War II.

The end of World War II.

The Army estimates a saving of $153,000 in annual procurement of aviation gas while the Air Force believes it will be possible to save $345,000.

Agreement was reached to eliminate 91 of 151 different types of hand sewing needles. In addition, 73 per cent of the 651 kinds of thread will eventually be dropped.

The Defense Department said the introduction of ultra-high speed drills made the elimination of 27 of 86 different kinds of dental burrs and wheels possible.

Devotion to Code Of Conduct Brings Bronze Star Medal

An Army officer's incredible devotion to the Code of Conduct was recognized recently with the posthumous award of the Bronze Star Medal at Fort Bragg, N.C.

The officer, killed in his second attempt to escape from his Communist Pathet Lao captors, was Capt. Walter H. Moon, 38.

President John F. Kennedy signed the citation awarding the medal to Capt. Moon. In addition, the paratrooper has been awarded the Purple Heart and a promotion to the grade of major posthumously.

Maj. Moon was captured by the Communists in Laos in April, 1961, while serving as a military advisor to Royal Laotian troops. His physical torments began immediately after he fell into the hands of the Pathet Lao. His guards tied his arms behind his back, and then tied the rope to the headboard of the truck in which he was placed for the ride to the prison site.

PLACED IN HOLE

One time during the trip he was put in a hole in the ground, boards were placed on top of the hole and a truck wheel was driven on top of the boards to prevent his escape. Arms still tightly bound at the end of the trip, he was thrown off the truck and thrust into the cell that was to be his home.

Efforts to break him mentally and physically were constant. Interrogation followed interrogation. Beatings, kicks from guards, bindings of his arms and constant threats in addition to the physical torture failed to break his will to resist.

From the day he was taken, escape was uppermost in his mind. Although under constant heavy guard, just one month after his capture, Moon made his first attempt. As he was being led outside by guards, arms bound to his sides, he tried to get away. He was wounded in the head and on the left side.

REFUSED DOCTOR

The officer's calls for a doctor went ignored. Communist medical aid, when finally given, was crude and ineffective. Bandages were not changed nor was any further medication given him for three weeks. Guards would not let other prisoners help him.

Three months later, he made what was to be his final attempt at escape. He was shot by two Pathet Lao guards when he grabbed the rifle of one guard. The guards struck him on the head, then shot and killed him as he lay on the ground.

Maj. Moon is survived by his wife, Ruth, of Fort Bragg. The couple has two children, Gary W., 11, and Karen L., 5.

The story of the major's heroism unfolded with the debriefing of five Americans released recently from confinement in Laos.

THE AIRBORNE KELLY FAMILY
General (R) Congratulates Son On Jump

Gen. and Lt. Kelly Become First Father-Son Airborne Graduates

Brig. Gen. John E. Kelly, deputy comanding general of The Infantry Center, and 2nd Lt. Patrick O. Kelly, a recent graduate of the U. S. Military Academy, recently became the first father-son combination in Airborne history to receive their jump wings together.

After undergoing the rigorous three-week training program conducted by the Airborne - Air Mobility Department, Gen. Kelly received his coveted wings from Brig. Gen. Royal Reynolds, assistant commandant of TIS. Lt. Kelly was presented his wings by his father.

Among the 383 well disciplined troops who graduated with the general and his son were 225 enlisted men including four from the Marine Corps and one from the Air Force and 15 Army officers.

Army Pvt. Kenneth D. Montee, honor graduate, received a certificate and a statue, symbolic of the paratroopers.

Three second generation paratroopers were also among the host of jumpers.

They were Pvt. David Power, Pvt. William A. Icenoble and Pvt. Frank R. Longobardi. The fathers of the three soldiers had been paratroopers during World War II.

Col. Michael Paulick, head of the Air Mobility Department, acted as master of ceremonies.

NCOs Must OK 'Q' Pay

WASHINGTON — Noncommissioned officers with more than four years service are reminded to register a new class "Q" allotment if they want their dependents to receive an allotment check after Jan. 1.

Under the provisions of Public Law 87-531, these servicemen are authorized to receive quarters allowance "across the board" in their regular pay.

The Comptroller General of the United States has held that it will be illegal to continue the "Q" allotments of these members after Jan. 1, 1963, unless specifically authorized over the signature of the member.

Vehicle Care Classes Now In New Sites

The Ground Mobility Department of The Infantry School has expanded its area of operation to include five buildings in the 4300 block on the post, Col. L. S. Reynolds, department director has announced.

Wheel vehicle instruction will continue on Main Post in the Ground Mobility area on Baltzell Ave., while track vehicles will be taught in Bldgs. 4315 and 4317.

Occupied by Reserves

The 4300 block of five buildings and a storage shed were occupied until recently by a Reserve unit. Renovations in the area include fluorescent lights, and venetian blids.

Facilities include five class rooms and provisions for Q-service (quarterly preventive maintenance) for track vehicles.

A track trail has been prepared from the new area to Jamestown Road to connect with the track trail to problem areas Nos. 30 and 390 and to Victory Pond.

The expansion of the department is concurrent with an internal realignment of instructional elements to centralize control. The new organization has been tested during recent weeks. The plan includes the establishment of instructional committees and utilities present personnel.

Army Set to Handle New Blood Program

The Defense Department has given the Army responsibility for establishing and operating the new Military Blood Program Agency which will be staffed by officers of the three services.

Its function, says the Office of the Army Surgeon General, will be "to coordinate and integrate the plans, policies and procedures of the military departments and the Unified and Specified Commands regarding the collection, processing and distribution of blood and blood products for medical use in emergencies."

The new agency will implement the DOD Blood Program policy guidance and maintain and disseminate plans for coordinating the collection, processing and distribution of blood and blood products necessary to meet requirements beyond the capability of the military department or command concerned.

It will also provide the Defense Supply Agency with "technical and professional operational guidance on the procurement of whole blood and fractions, when required, and on mobilization and industrial mobilization requirements for plasma expanders, both natural and synthetic."

Among its other responsibilities will be to establish, on behalf of the Director of Defense Research and Engineering, a central register of military department research and development projects on blood transfusion, blood derivatives and plasma volume expanders to prevent unnecessary duplication and overlapping of effort.

Dignity Is a Must Should a Call-Up Of Reserves Come

President John F. Kennedy's request for Congressional authorization to all 150,000 Reservists to active duty in the face of the current international situation has, as expected, caused comment on every level. Should the President decide to utilize any authority granted by Congress, we may rest assured the Reserves are being called for a sound reason. A program of this magnitude would not be attempted without basis. . .the basis being to halt a threat to the free world.

It is the hope of all servicemen that if a call-up is made, those Reservists recalled accept the responsibility with which they are charged without the grumbling heard from some quarters during the last recall period.

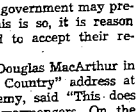
Many sacrifices are made by men in service during peace time, men who intend to serve as few as two and as many as 20 or 30 years. Civilian careers are delayed or interrupted. College educations are put off, and many husbands are separated from their wives for long periods. These are but a few of the peace-time sacrifices. The sacrifices in war need no explanation.

Sacrifices of the majority often go unheralded. But the grumblings of a few are always heard throughout the Nation. It is an indictment of our generation when a few men cannot do a fraction of what their predecessors died for in order to preserve the American way.

Through a call-up our government may prevent armed conflict. If this is so, it is reason enough for those affected to accept their resibility without question.

General of the Army Douglas MacArthur in his recent "Duty, Honor, Country" address at the U. S. Military Academy, said "This does not mean that you are warmongers. On the contrary, the soldier above all other people prays for peace, for he must suffer and bear the deepest wounds and scars of war."

We are out to prevent a war at all costs and one of these costs may be a call-up. Let everyone, Regular Army and Reserves, work toward this goal with dignity.



Status Quo in Cuba

In an interpretive article for The National Observer a reporter made mention of a "Soviet camp" in Castro's Cuba.

"It used to be an institution for wayward boys but now the wooden huts are filled to overflowing with young Russians," the writer noted.

JUST LIKE MAGNETS!

When the chips are down, Americans—especially American servicemen—have a way of sticking together. They've fought side by side, and nothing makes them closer. The American fighting man fights for a lot back home, but he also fights for his buddies. When they stick together, they're hard to beat.

CODE OF CONDUCT: 4. If I become a prisoner of war, I will keep faith with my fellow prisoners. I will give no information or take part in any action which might be harmful to my comrades. If I am senior, I will take command. If not, I will obey the lawful orders of those appointed over me and will back them up in every way.

CHAPLAIN'S CORNER

Hands of Blessing

Chaplain (Capt) John D. Logan

"Joshua, the son of Nun, was full of the spirit of wisdom; for Moses had laid his hands upon him." — Deut. 34:9a

A modern picture of Christ depicts a little girl looking at the imprint of the nails in Christ's hand and asking, "What happened to your hand?"

The scars in Jesus' hands are marks of his sacrificial love. He has given Himself unto the death of the cross to be "the Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world."

Our Savior often used these same hands to serve men. He had laid them on men to heal them from sickness, to raise them from the dead, to comfort them in sorrow. These same hands had been raised in blessing over little children whom Jesus loved.

God's hands of blessing rest on us when we trust Him to forgive us all our sins through the atoning death of Christ.

Moses used his hands to bless Joshua, and God bestowed the blessing in the gift of the spirit of wisdom.

We too may use our hands for good or evil. They may be tools of violence or instruments of charity. They may destroy or they may build.

Do your hands bear the marks of service and love as did our Lord's?

"O Lord, take my hands and let them move at the impulse of Thy love." Amen.

The Code Paid Off; They Wouldn't Crack

"It must be of the spirit if we are to save the flesh," said General of the Army Douglas MacArthur. There couldn't be better words to sum up the fortitude of two Americans after almost a year and a half of brutal imprisonment by the Pathet Lao Communists.

Both Maj. Lawrence R. Bailey and Sgt. Orville R. Ballenger were subjected to a variety of harrassments and humiliations. The major was confined in a pitch black room for a year. The sergeant was paraded through villages on a leash like an animal. Of course, there was a motive behind this sadism. The Reds were determined to break the spirit of these Americans and get them to condemn U.S. support of the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization.

But it didn't work. The two brave men held out. For them the Code of Conduct was something meaningful, deserving of more than lip service. When the chips were down, it gave them strength. As President Kennedy said in presenting Maj. Bailey the Bronze Star Medal at Walter Reed Army Hospital (the sergeant received his at the Ft. Bragg, N. C., hospital), his cold war ordeal was in many ways "a more exacting test of a man's courage than the battlefield."

There are others like the major and the sergeant who, under savage Red mistreatments, do honor to the tradition of the American fighting man. Each of us is sworn to uphold it, and when we read their story we tell ourselves we could do no less without letting them and their brave breed down. (AFPS)

Liberty and Communism

Equality of Economic Opportunity

The Declaration of Independence (1776) declared that "all men are created equal." By this declaration of political faith, the founders of our Republic meant that all men are equal under the law, and, as asserted in the Fourteenth Amendment (1868), possess the "equal protection of the laws."

They did not mean that all men should possess equal amounts of property or receive equal wages or profits. Rather, all men should have equal opportunities, under the law, by their industry and thrift, to improve their economic or social status. The founders had no intention of egalitarian regimentation as to property.

Many critics of the capitalist system condemn the inequality of income and so-called swollen fortunes. Extremely heavy taxation, however, has greatly lessened these inequalities.

In most democracies, including the United States and Great Britain, large fortunes have been severely curtailed by progressive income and inheritance taxes. In the upper brackets, the income tax takes 85 per cent of a man's income, and the inheritance tax almost as much of an inherited fortune.

All democratic countries guarantee civic equality under law to all citizens. Indeed, U. S. law goes even further, guaranteeing this equality to all persons whether citizens or aliens. This promise, however, does not include equality in wages, income or wealth.

Under the free enterprise system, all citizens may compete in business, and also, as workers or entrepreneurs, may increase their savings (capital) by frugality and care. In business competition, all businessmen are protected by laws requiring honest practices.

Marxian socialism and communism have gone much further in promises, pledging not only civic equality but also economic equality in the form of equal wages and salaries for all workers.

In other words, Marxian socialism and communism have held out the promise that all workers, whether common laborers or factory managers, government officials or Party members, would receive the same income.

There is a half-concealed trick in this sweeping promise: the equality would come after the abolition of the classes and the creation of the Communist society.

By 1919, Lenin frequently boasted that classes had been abolished. But the Communist Party has never admitted that the Soviet Union has passed from socialism to communism.

Today this legerdemain is still the lame excuse of the dictatorship for failure to fulfill the Marxian promise of equality of incomes. Even worse than this, during the present period of "transition from socialism to communism," the Communist Party has repudiated the principle of equality of wages.

Army Sweeps International Shoot

19 New Records Set in 23 Wins

Out of 26 individual and team matches, Army representatives swept 23, posting 19 new match records, to easily walk away with first laurels in the Second Annual Armed Forces International Shooting Competition.

Of the 19 new records, 10 scores were higher than last year's marks with the other nine being new matches which had not been fired last year.

On the rifle scene 2nd Lt. Loues W. Wigger Jr. kicked off the record-setting by blasting a 371 out of a possible 400 score in the 50-meter Standing Position Smallbore Rifle Championship, to add five points to the old record.

Cpl. Gary L. Anderson set the second individual rifle record in the Free Rifle 300-meter Championship with an 1154 score out of a possible 1200. The old record was 1129.

Running Deer Records

On the Running Deer Range, records were set in both the singles and the doubles championship. Sgt. Norman L. Skarpness banged out a 221 score out of a possible 250 adding 14 points to the last year mark.

SFC Loyd G. Crow Jr. pasted his doubles targets for a 217 out of a possible 250 score going over the old record by 15 points.

The only individual pistol record to fall was toppled by SFC William B. Blankenship who "maxed" the centerfire course for a 600 score and tacked an unbeatable 13 points to last year's record.

Team matches records fell profusely to Army shooters as Marksmanship Training Unit firers blasted the very first team event for a landslide record. Adding 43 points to last year's mark in the Smallbore rifle prone championship, Capts. Daniel B. Puckel, and Tommy G. Pool, 1st Lt. Presley Kindall and Cpl. Anderson blasted a 2282 out of a possible 2400 score.

In the next record - setting match, Capts. Puckel and Pool, Lt. Wigger and Cpl. Anderson fired a composite 4578 out of a possible 4800 score. The previous mark was 4480.

The Running Deer Championships also saw enormous advances as Sgt. Skarpness, the individual singles champion, anchored 1st Lts. Willes L. Powell and John W. Turbush Jr., and Sgt. Crow to an 859 score out of a possible 1,000 score, bettering the first year mark by 73 points.

In the double runs team championship the same team pasted 109 points to the previous year's mark with an 843 score out of a possible 1,000.

Last Record

The last record - setting match saw individual Trap Champion 1st Lt. James R. Clark team up with 2nd Lt. William A. Brauer, Sgt. Maj. Harold A. Grewe, and SP4 Charles T. Fisher to post a score to beat the old record by nine clay pigeons.

In matches not previously fired, Cpl. Anderson set three marks in the 300-meter Free Rifle prone, kneeling and standing position matches. His scores were 397, 388 and 369 respectively, all out of possible 400 scores.

First Lt. Robert B. Trew posted a 594 out of a possible 600 score in the individual Smallbore Rifle Prone Championship to set a worthy mark for next year's shooters to aim at.

In the Smallbore Rifle prone, kneeling and standing position team championships, Army firers set initial records of 1,576 and 1,527 and 1,449, all out of possible 1600 scores.

The only other records set went to the Air Force and the Marine Corps.

In the Center Fire Team Championship Air Force pistoleers added 20 points to the old mark of 2,322.

Marine Corps GySgt. James E. Hill set the lone leatherneck record in the 50-meter Smallbore Rifle Kneeling Championship with a 391 out of a possible 400 score. His score added five points to the old record.

Air Force Victory

The Air Force was triumphant when four of her firers blasted out 2,165 points out of a possible 2,400 to take first honors in the Free Pistol Team Championship on the final day of competition.

Captains Franklin C. Green and Thomas D. Smith along with SSgt. Robert C. Meagher and Sgt. Thomas M. Hardgraves, were the team members responsible for the Air Force second win.

The Army team took second place with a 2,157 score followed by the Marine Corps with a 2,145 score.

Army SFC Lloyd Burchett, MTU, took individual laurels with a 554 out of a possible 600 score.

Air Force Capt. Green took second place with a 553 score followed by SFC Samuel W. Hunter, MTU, with a 552 score.

Top Battery Is Honored By Artillery

Battery B, 2nd Howitzer Battalion, 10th Artillery, 1st Infantry Brigade, commanded by Capt. Jack H. Percival, placed first in monthly competition to win the Honor Battery tab for the month of August.

This victory marked their eighth consecutive win and the 11th in 13 months.

Capt. Percival accepted the Honor Battery Streamer and Plaque from Lt. Col. Wallis E. McClain, 10th Artillery commander, during a parade and awards presentation ceremony held on Peden Field.

He was also presented the monthly Best Motors plaque. This award was the fifth consecutive win and the eighth in 10 months. Battery A, commanded by Capt. Richard L. Bryan, was winner of the Best Mess plaque.

The 10th Artillery's honor Battery program, covering nine areas of competition, is designed to help maintain a spirit of competitiveness thereby enhancing the possibilities of obtaining the best results.

DAMN YANKEES . . . John Bonfanti, playing the role of Joe Boyd in the Masquer's presentation of "Damn Yankees" here, returns home in the play's last act to his wife, Meg, played by Mrs. Dwight Carr. The play will be presented at Building 2519 tonight and tomorrow at 8:15 p.m.

'Damn Yankees' to Run Through Saturday Night

"Damn Yankees", the former Broadway hit musical, is currently being presented by the Masquers at their playhouse on post. The comedy opened Wednesday night and will continue with performances through Saturday night. Tickets are on sale at Special Services or may be obtained at the box office.

The cast consists of a variety of Fort Benning and Columbus talent. Barbara Downes, professional actress turned Army wife, portrays Lola, the famous siren who usually gets "whatever Lola wants." Band members, PFC Ron Ferden and PFC John Bonfanti, are seen as Joe Hardy and Joe Boyd. Applegate is played by Guy Ben Giovanni, Meg Boyd by Gail Carr, Gloria by Maureen Bloemsma, and Sister by Nelcine Reddington.

Others in the cast include Sp4 Vince DeDario, Dwight Carr, Jeanne Douglas, Capt. Robert Poydasheff, and Lt. Tom Reddington.

Director Lt. Bernard Burk and set designer Sam Morris double up on their duties and sing and dance in the chorus along with PFC Ed Summers, Ed Williams, and Bobby Brannon.

Barbara Peterson, Maureen Gorecki, and Betty Drissel make up the girls chorus.

The play is the story of the Washington Senator's attempt to beat the Nep York Yankees and capture the pennant. This proves to be rather difficult as the only winning ingredient the team has is a lot of "heart." But Applegate a supernatural type gentleman comes along and supplies them with a player capable of impossible plays.

Joe, the new hero, has been changed from a middle-aged, home-loving baseball fan to this versatile young man of Applegate's design. Keeping Joe under his power poses a problem for Applegate so he sends for his assistant Lola. Lola is notorious for winning men's souls over to Applegate but whether or not she succeeds with Joe remains to be seen.

Japanese Theme Sets Party Scene

The Ranger Department Wives held a brunch recently at the Main Officers' Open Mess.

The wives of the Platoon Tactics Committee under the direction of Mrs. Letcher Crawford created a Japanese atmosphere with table arrangements of Hakata dolls, gelsha dolls and greens. Parasols, lanterns, name tags, posters and picture puzzle seating arrangements carried out the theme.

The original invitations and flyers created by Mrs. Frederick Mayer inspired the wives of the department to come in everything from Japanese kimonos and wigs to hapa coats and Mandarin dresses which were mementos of life in the Orient.

Mrs. Robert Clark, Mrs. Douglass Detlie and Mrs. John Hamblen assisted as hostesses and with decorating and mailing invitations. Mrs. John Hardy donated a colorful Japanese Hapa coat as a door prize which was won by Mrs. John Jackson.

Mrs. Jackson, wife of the department director, introduced the new arrivals Mrs. John Chalmers, Mrs. John Monville and Mrs. William Roosma.

Wives of Ranger Course Students present were Carole Dillon and Doris Tengan. Martha Hopkins, whose Marine husband is temporarily on duty with the department, was also welcomed.

Engraved silver trays were presented to Mrs. Philip Blanton, Mrs. Robert Clark, Mrs. Douglass Detlie and Mrs. Kirby Smith, whose husbands are leaving the department.

Plans were made to play bridge on the second Monday of each month at 8:00 p.m. in the Normandy Room of the Main Officers' Open Mess. Mrs. John Barker is chairman of the group.

Women's Club Diary

If you find extra inches where there were none when you put those winter clothes in storage last spring, you'll be interested in the charm and modeling classes offered by the Women's Club.

Instructor Ann Roberts has hints to make you appear thinner even if you have trouble actually shedding those pounds. With her special tips on exercise and diet, you will find becoming more attractive is lots of fun. Call Mrs. William Gray, chairman, 544-2909, to register.

Looking for something really different? Why not consider one of the new classes offered by the Women's Club this year? There is cake decorating (you would be the hit of every child in the neighborhood) and hatmaking, for the woman who likes the little extras that make dressing an art, not a necessity.

If you want to tailor a suit to match your hat, we'll also have sewing, both for beginners and advanced seamstresses, tailoring and slip covering. All these classes and many, many more will be accepting registrations at the Opening tea, which is scheduled for the newly decorated Officers Club on Wednesday afternoon, Oct. 3.

If you haven't received one of the thousands of invitations mailed this week, come anyway, as this is the Women's annual launching of the program year. No reservations are necessary, and we especially invite newcomers to Fort Benning to drop in and have a cup of tea and look over our varied activity schedule.

Radarmen's Beeps Can Tell WAC From Infantryman 'Sight Unseen'

To be able to distinguish a WAC from a soldier "sight unseen" is a secondary but interesting goal of a class of 23 men who completed a radar ground surveillance course here recently.

The primary concern of the students, was to acquire skill in detecting enemy movement to the front of a unit, identifying the moving object and reporting its location, speed and direction of movement to their company commanders.

The students learned with great interest, however, that their radar equipment is so sensitive that a highly skilled operator can detect the movement of one person in his assigned sector of surveillance. Not only that, but he can tell whether the individual is a WAC or a soldier, officials said.

More Motion

The distinction made by radar equipment is based on the fact that a woman makes more motion than a man covering the same relative distance.

Using AN-PPS-4 and AN-TPS-33 radar sets, the course was taught by SSgt. James E. Moore, principal instructor of the Applied Communications Committee of Infantry School's Communications Department.

The students donned earphones to listen to radar signals bouncing off moving targets beyond their vision and watched blips on screens in a 36-hour training course for radar operators.

Sgt. Moore said an operator must learn to pick out target-reflected sounds from a conglomeration of radar signals bouncing back from every object in the target area. "This clamor is called 'ground clutter' and is complicated even further by the interference of other nearby radar sets and enemy jamming," the instructor said.

"Unlike radio operators, a radar operator is free to change his frequency at will," Sgt. Moore continued. "You don't even have to know what frequency you are on. Just screen out the interference and concentrate on locating and identifying your target."

Listening to radar signals for longer than 30 minutes is so fatiguing that the operator begins to hear things that aren't there, the instructor said. Radar operators are assigned by twos and should take turns operating the set he added.

When radar is used in a static situation where a unit is in a defensive position, the operators must detect any enemy movement in the sector to the front. The moving object or objects may be artillery, trucks or even one man. A skilled operator can detect the movement and determine what type target it is, the distance and direction to it and the speed with which it is moving.

This is not done by sound alone. Radar equipment includes visual as well as audio reports of unseen objects far out of the range of human eyes and ears.

Radar sets available at company level have a range of approximately three and one half miles, and at battalion level, about 11 miles.

Learning the basic principles of radar and how to operate the equipment is not enough to make a good radar man. It takes a great deal of practice and persistence, Sgt. Moore said.

If the moving targets are really WACs, would-be radar operators will not have to be reminded that "practice makes perfect."

Drugs Big Business Both in, Out of Army

By SFC William J. Moore
NCOIC, Pharmacy Service, MAH

When the pharmacist called her name, Mrs. Jones came to the window and picked up her filled prescriptions, consisting of an eight-ounce bottle of penicillin suspension, a small vial containing 24 capsules of another antibiotic, and a small bottle of 30 tranquilizing capsules.

Then she asked for and received without a prescription a tube of fungicidal ointment for Johnny's foot condition. When she left the window, she walked away with $25.75 worth of medication. Of course, not a penny in cash changed hands. Uncle Sam footed the bill as he had done for the other 859 prescriptions filled that day at Martin Army Hospital.

No doubt about it, illness costs money. But, chances are, sickness would cost a lot more if it were not for prescription drugs. By curing patients faster, they cut hospital bills and length of stay, and reduce loss of pay due to illness.

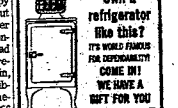
In a very real sense, your prescription filled at Martin Army Hospital is the biggest bargain in history - and the largest saving in both lives and money. Consider these facts:

(a) Many infections which once required weeks of hospitalization can now be treated at home with antibiotics. In 1946, over 1.2 million Americans caught an infectious disease that could be treated with antibiotics. By 1955, the number of cases was reduced to 714,238, a drop of 42 per cent.

(b) Drugs help patients get well faster. Today's medicines are more powerful and effective. Since 1940, modern drugs, along with improved sanitation, medical techniques, higher standards of living, have helped add seven years to the life expectancy of the average American - from 63 to 70.2 years.

(c) Antibiotics helped cut the death rate by 56 per cent for tuberculosis, syphilis, dysentary, scarlet fever, diphtheria, whooping cough, meningococcal infections, and pneumonia from 1945 to 1955.

(d) Antibiotics have helped make huge cuts in maternal and infant death rates. In 1925, 65 out of every 10,000 women died in childbirth, and 72 out of every 1,000 babies never lived to see their first birthday. By 1955, the maternal deaths had declined to five per 10,000 births, and the infant death rate had dropped to 26 per 1,000 babies.



(e) The great advance made in medical and drug therapy did not come by accident, but through greater and greater expeditures of time and money. American scientists lead the world in antibiotic research. Aside from penicillin, the 12 other antibiotic substances manufactured by American firms from 1948 to 1956 were all discovered and developed in the United States. Of the broad-spectrum drugs, all were developed by private industry. Since 1956, all new antibiotics produced in the U. S., except one, were discovered by American scientists.

Yes, drugs cost a lot of money. The average prescription will cost you about $3.50 at a local pharmacy. Think of that the next time you visit the pharmacy at Martin Army Hospital.

No one likes to be sick, and no one likes to pay out good money to get well. Yet, the sums involved are expended by Uncle Sam daily, year in and year out, in defense of our most precious possessions: good health and life itself.

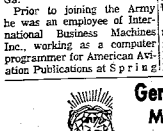
The Lone Ranger's Son Reenlists for Electronics

The son of "The Lone Ranger" has reenlisted for six years, for electronics.

Sp4 Fran Strike Jr., whose father is the originator of the fictitious Western hero, "The Lone Ranger," is a fire team leader with Company E, 87th Infantry.

Reenlisting recently at the 87th Infantry, Striker will enroll in the Electronics Device Repair School, Fort Gordon, Ga.



Prior to joining the Army he was an employee of International Business Machines Inc., working as a computer programmer for American Aviation Publications at Spring Valley, N. Y.

After he finishes the school, his job will be to service complex electronic "brains" located at every Army command headquarters.

Born and raised at Grosse Pointe, Mich., Striker has attended Wayne State and the University of Michigan.

Drums and trombone are his most serious avocations, having played with the Moonlighter instrumental group at Kelley Hill Service Club Two.

Doughboys Crush Gordon Military College 61-0 for First Victory

Benning Backs Penetrate Bulldog Defense at Will

The Fort Benning Doughboys opened the 1962 football season Saturday as they crushed Gordon Military College 61-0. The Gordon Bulldogs proved to be no match for the high-powered Benning football machine as the Doughboys were able to move the ball at will.

The Doughboys rolled 606 yards in total offense, sending halfbacks Towns, Eddy, Quillen, and Herr through the Bulldog line for long - gainers throughout the game.

Coach Leaton C. Cofield was able to experiment with all phases of Doughboy offense and defense, with the second and third strings seeing action in the early stages of the game.

Fort Benning won the opening toss and elected to receive. Doughboy quarterback Marvin Tibbetts grabbed the opening kick-off and returned it to the Benning 34. Wallace Johnson, Ron Quillen, Tibbetts and Bobby Towns alternated carrying the ball to the Bulldog five-yard-stripe. From here, Towns cut over right tackle for the score.

Guard Sam Stellatella made the score 7-0 with his extra point conversion.

Taking Johnson's kickoff the Bulldogs were unable to move the football past their own 23. They punted to Towns who returned it to the Gordon 47. Gordon was penalized five yards for off sides and the ball was moved to the 42.

Eddy Scores

After Brewster Hobby banged off left guard for four yards, then, Raymond Eddy scampered off right tackle 38 and a Doughboy TD.

William Johnson's attempt at the conversion was good and the scoreboard read 14-0.

Following another Doughboy kickoff the Bulldogs were unable to move and punted from their own 26. Hobby gathered in the punt and returned it to the Bulldog 42. With the Doughboy's Quillen doing most of the ball carrying, Benning moved for a first down on the 21. The Doughboys then moved the ball down to the two-yard stripe on Tibbett's outstanding running. Johnson then smashed off left guard for the score.

Stellatella's conversion try was good, making the score 21-0.

Gordon Military College returned the kickoff to the 30, only to lose the ball on the first play from scrimmage.

TD Pass

Benning was penalized 15 yards for holding, but third string quarterback John Saylor arched a 32-yard pass to Robert Dickerson for the TD.

Leonard Goodwin made the score 28-0 with the point after touchdown.

GMC returned the kickoff to their own 21. After two running plays, quarterback Don Bright picked up a Bulldog first down on the 34.

Bright then moved the ball for another Gordon first down as he scooted around right end to the 46. The GMC drive was stopped and the Bulldogs were forced to punt.

The ball was put in play on the Doughboy 36. On the second play from scrimmage, halfback Bobby Herr took a handoff and sped 55 yards to paydirt.

Goodwin's point after touchdown attempt was blocked making the score 34-0.

Following exchange of the football, Benning hammered down to the Bulldog one yard line before the half ended.

The Doughboys kicked off to begin the second half of play and two plays later Gordon fumbled on their own 33. On third down, Tibbetts pitched to halfback Ron Quillen and the speed merchant scampered 32 yards to the one-foot line. On the next play, he plunged in for the score.

Again Stellatela kicked the extra point making the score 41-0.

The Bulldogs took the kickoff and again were unable to move the ball. Bobby Towns took a Gordon punt on his own 35 and rambled down the sidelines all the way to the GMC nine yard line.

On the next play, Towns darted off the right side for he score. Stellatella once again arched the ball between the uprights and it was 48-0.

Bright Fumbles

After moving the ball to their own 26-yard line following the kickoff, Bulldog quarterback Bright was smothered by a host of Doughboys and fumbled on the 20.

Doughboy's fleet - footed Northern Brown then streaked 20 yards for the score. William Johnson booted the extra point and the score shot to 55-0, with nine minutes remaining in the quarter.

Gordon took the kickoff and returned it to their own 25. With Bright firing aerials to Harold Burton, the Bulldogs moved the ball to the Doughboy 19-yard stripe. An apparent TD pass was then nullified and Benning eventually took over on downs.

The two teams exchanged the football before Gordon fumbled on its own 38. William Godfrey, a third team back broke off tackle to the 20. Five plays later Saylor went in for the score. Goodwin's conversion try was wide and the score was 61-0.

Post Bowling Leagues Still Needs Teams

The Main Post Bowling Center has released the 1962-63 bowling schedule to be followed this winter. Several of the scheduled leagues have openings for teams or individuals.

On Monday nights, the officer's Crimson League still has openings for one to three teams. Anyone desiring information about this league is asked to call Maj. Johnson at 545-3456 or 545-1827.

Friday nights will see two shifts of league play go into action. The Infantry Center Scratch League will begin play first, while the Dependent Wives' League will finish up the evening. All teams commitments are complete in this league, however, there are some individual openings.

The only action scheduled on Saturdays is the YAC League. The time and starting date for action in this league has not been determined.

On Sunday nights, a 16-team Mixed Doubles League will go into action. At this date only 12 teams have signed up for play, leaving openings for four teams. Anyone desiring to bowl in this league is asked to call the Main Post Bowling Center, 545-3927. League play is scheduled to begin on Sept. 20.

Sgt. Dyes Rolls MAH Into Title

Martin Army Hospital Detachment copped first place honors in the summer bowling league recently at the Main Post Bowling Center. The detachments five-man team carried a 41-21 game record for the season.

The hospital detachment was not assured of the league championship until the last frame of the final game in league play. Sgt. Francis Dyes of the detachment rolled a strike and a spare to defeat the second place team by nine points to give MAH the title.

The hospital detachment also won the high team series and high team game honors for the season and individuals on the team placed for individual game and series honors.

Members of the team are Sgt. Dyes, Sgt. A. Z. McMurry, PFC Roy E. Mills, Sgt. Willard Davis and Sgt. William West.

Team members will receive individual trophies and the team will present a plaque to the detachment.

GOOD GOLF

LOFTED CLUB FOR DISTANCE . . . From the fairway sand trap, you need distance; therefore, you may need a long iron or wood instead of the wedge. Don't worry about distance at first; concentrate on getting out of the trap. Once this technique is mastered, you can shift to a less lofted club for distance. The stance is square away; the swing is practically that of regular fairway shot. Here, the ball is hit first; contact the sand after lifting the ball clear.

Gordon Dumps Fort Benning In Softball Play

Fort Benning was downed by Fort Gordon in first-day action of the Third U. S. Army softball tournament being played at Fort Jackson, S. C. Five errors by the post representatives played a major role in the 5-4 defeat.

Fort Benning moved into a 2-1 lead after the first inning of action but were tied up by the Gordon nine in the third. The 2-2 deadlock was broken in the sixth when an error by second baseman John Handy allowed Gordon to push two runs across the plate.

YAC Needs Coaches

The Youth Activities Club is still looking for volunteers to coach football teams in one of its three leagues for the 1962 season.

The boys range from eight to fifteen years old and are furnished with practice and game equipment with the exception of shoes.

The Biddy League, boys 8 and 9, will play on Monday evenings. The Doughboy League, boys 11 and 12, will play on Tuesdays and the Intermediate League with boys 13, 14 and 15 will play on Wednesday.

All volunteers should contact Lt. Olszewski at 545-2120 during the hours of 8 to 4:30 Monday through Friday.

Gen. Trapnell Congratulates Team on Play

Lt. Gen. T.J.H. Trapnell, Third U.S. Army commander, sent a note offering his congratulations to the Fort Benning Doughboy baseball team for its outstanding showing made in the recent Third Army baseball tournament.

Gen. Trapnell's note read, "Heartiest congratulations to you and your command on winning the 1962 Third United States Army baseball tournament."

The Doughboys won the tournament by winning five straight games after losing their opener.

Women's League Still Has Openings

The Woman's Club Bowling League, which held its organizational meeting Thursday, is still accepting calls from interested bowlers before the start of the league season on September 20.

Call Mrs. West, MU 9-4509, or Mrs. Hart, MU 9-2221, for details.

Football Outlook Promises Rugged, Stormy Season

By J. Gordon Bridge

This college football season promises to be even more rugged than the last one, but indications point to only a slight shuffling among the top teams.

At the end of last season, the top five in order were Alabama, Ohio State, Louisiana State, Texas and Mississippi.

Alabama's position as defending National Champion looks rocky, even in its own Southeastern Conference. Ohio State will be up there along with LSU, Texas and Mississippi.

In fact LSU could be the National Champion. Coach Charlie McClendon, who took over from Paul Dietzel, has 26 regulars back from last year's team that was beaten only once — in its opening game.

Ohio State lost All-American Bob Ferguson, but Coach Woody Hayes still has most of his defensive starters from last year and some outstanding replacements to cause trouble in the Big Ten.

In the East, Penn State is supposedly 'loaded' and ready to repeat its successes of last year which were capped by the 'Gator Bowl win over Georgia Tech. The nittany Lions could, in fact, push themselves right into the top five in the nation.

Among the Service Academy teams, Paul Dietzel has a rebuilding job at Army. The team doesn't appear as strong as last year's team that lost to Navy 12-7. However, the shake-well methods of Dietzel and his large coaching staff may make for surprises on the Hudson and elsewhere.

Navy's Wayne Hardin faces a crushing schedule with a team that has an improved Ron Klemick at quarterback. Vern VonSydow and Steve Hoy could block and tackle for any team in the country.

The Air Force, coached by Ben Martin, is hoping for another good season to dedicate the Falcon's new 40,000 seat stadium. With the move of halfback Terry Isaacson to quarterback, the Martin - men may be ready to really fly.

In the Big Ten, Ohio State coach Woody Hayes and the entire Buckeye squad have their eyes on the title and the Rose Bowl trip they missed last year. Schools like Minnesota, Purdue and Michigan State may, just may, get in their way.

Bob Ferguson, the bruising OSU fullback, is gone, but the defense is still there. Dave Katterhenrich with Paul Warfield and Joe Sparma may be able to keep the attack going.

Purdue needs some replacements in the line. Quarterback Ron DiGravio is expected to spark a rugged eleven that has been tough on many Saturdays, though not all of them.

Multiple offense has been the word at Michigan State for years. Coach Duffy Daugherty may make it 'bread and butter' for a try at caviar. Lineman Dave Behrmann, a giant, will anchor the forward wall. Backs such as Sherman Lewis, Dewey Lincoln and George Saimes, barring injury, will move the ball.

All-American Bobby Bell is back as tackle for Minnesota. Coach Murray Warmath must find a replacement for quarterback Sandy Stephens and that's a tall order.

Dave Glinka is set at quarterback at Michigan, but Coach Bump Elliott still must find replacements for seven starters and six second stringers—another big job.

At Madison, everyone talks about All-American end Pat Richter, but he may not have enough help to carry Wisconsin in the rugged Western Conference.

Indiana, which lost seven games last year, and Illinois, which played .500 ball in 1962, can be still grouped in the 'have not' class.

Notre Dame, hit by ineligibilities and a too-tough schedule, will win a lot of sentiment for Coach Joe Kuharich, but not many football games.

Independent Detroit has one of their top quarterbacks in Gerry Gross, but appears overmatched for national ranking.

OUTDOOR OUTLOOK

By PFC Stephen O. Able

FISHING AROUND POST

With the coming of cool weather the fishing around post has improved and some very good catches have been hauled in.

A rumor has been going around the post that the fish in Kings Pond are dying. Although some fish have been observed dead on the pond, this is no cause for worry. At the time of the observance of the dead fish a change of 20 degrees in temperature had occurred, and this is believed to be the cause of the fish dying.

This is not a new thing, and has occurred in the past on the reservation.

CARPENTER

First Sgt. James C. Carpenter is operations sergeant of the Airborne Operations Section, 4th Student Battalion, The Student Brigade.

Sgt. Carpenter first entered the service in 1943, wearing Navy blue, and served throughout World War II, as a gunner's mate on troop transports.

He was discharged from the Navy in 1945, remaining in civilian status for nine months until August 1946 when he enlisted in the Army Air Corps and was assigned to the Alaskan Command. In September, 1948, the airborne sergeant applied for and received a short discharge from the Air Corps, immediately enlisting in the Regular Army.

Volunteering for airborne training, E-6 Carpenter, received his introduction to Fort Benning. Successfully completing The Infantry School's Airborne Course in 1948, he was transferred to Company K, 504th Battle Group, 82nd Airborne Division, at Fort Bragg, N. C., until May 1961.

Returning to this post, he joined the 506th Regimental Combat Team, 11th Airborne Division, as a mortar section leader.

The veteran of over 19 years service, receiving orders joined Company B, 187th Regimental Combat Team, 7th Infantry Division, and served with this unit during the latter stages of the Korean War, from September, 1952, to November, 1953. Upon the completion of this tour, the operations sergeant was assigned duties to the jump school here, as an instructor of Airborne.

From 1954 to 1961, Sgt. Carpenter served another tour in Korea, a tour with a special forces group, and received European assignment with the 1st Battle Group, 504th Airborne Infantry, 82nd Division, in Germany.

An instructor of Airborne from February 1961 until May 1962, he was promoted to his present rank of First sergeant E-8 and given the temporary assignment of first sergeant of 43rd Company, 4th Student Battalion, TSB, until he assumed his present duties at battalion operations.

Sgt. Carpenter lives in Phenix City, with his wife, Mary, two sons, Walter, 7, and Alan, 2, and a daughter, Rita, 12.

58th Infantry Companies Are Honored

Awards for Savings Bonds purchase, safety, and a special Air Force Commendation Medal were recently presented in the 1st Armored Rifle Battalion, 58th Infantry, by Col. Richard Keyes, commander of the 1st Infantry Brigade.

The U.S. Savings Bonds Award, commonly called the "Minute Man," award is presented by the Department of the Army for outstanding achievement, as a unit, in the purchase of bonds by personnel.

Individual units within the battalion to receive the award were Hdqs., B, C, and D Companies of the 58th Infantry; Company D, 69th Armor, and Company C, 66th Armor.

Lt. Col. Charles T. Caprino, commander of the 1st Armored Rifle Battalion, accepted the battalion award from Col. Keyes. A Third U.S. Army citation for participation in the drive was also presented to each unit. Overall bond purchase amounted to 79.29 per cent within the 1st ARB.

Attention to safety, long a strong point with the officers and men of the 1st ARB, was also recognized with the presentation of the brigade Annual Safety Award to the 58th. A total of six monthly awards have gone to the battalion during the past fiscal year. In recognition of this achievement a mahogany plaque will take its place among the trophies of the battalion.

The Air Force Commendation Medal was presented to 1st Lt. Richard S. Johnson, Company D, 58th Infantry, for his recent duty as a U.S. Air Force officer prior to his transfer to the Army.

The award ceremonies were held in the battalion classroom.

1st Brigade Continues CAA Drive

The 1st Infantry Brigade is working diligently in an effort to achieve 100 per cent participation in the Community Activities Association Fund Drive. Some 43.7 per cent of the $8,775 quota has already been met.

As of Monday, the 2nd Howitzer Battalion, 10th Artillery, was leading brigade units with 79 per cent. Following with 50.7 per cent was Brigade Headquarters. The 29th Infantry has netted 33.3 per cent, while—the 58th Infantry participation is 27.9 per cent.

Col. Richard W. Keyes, commanding officer of the 1st Infantry Brigade, is the chairman for the post drive. Maj. John F. Hare, adjutant, is the project officer for the 1st Infantry Brigade.

Missile School Sees Fast Growth

REDSTONE ARSENAL, Ala. — The growth of the Army Ordnance Guided Missile School in the course of a decade is emphasized by its student statistics. In 1952, when the school began, it had a total of seven students.

By October of this year, says the school's commandant, Col. William J. Macpherson, its average monthly training roster is expected to reach 1,750. And it will go even higher next January when the Army transfers classes at other installations to Redstone and adds new subjects to the school curriculum.

Col. Macpherson estimates that upwards of 5,000 students representing the Army, Navy, Air Force, Marines and 14 Allied nations are slated for training here by next July 1.

At present the school offers some 60 courses on nine guided missile systems and related equipment, varying in length from two months to almost a year.

Col. Macphersoon attributes the expansion in the school's activities to a new cycle of foreign training on several missile systems and the addition of new courses on the Pershing ballistic missile and new electronic computer systems. At present foreign enrollment totals 457 students from 18 European and Asian countries.

Under the Army's current reorganization, the school's staff and faculty has absorbed a Signal Corps detachment of 256 officers and enlisted men who have been here for several years on detached service from Ft. Monmouth, N. J.

Judge Says

Powers of Attorney Seen Both Good, Bad

By 1st Lt. Bernard E. Burk

"You mean to sit there and tell me that my wife can sell my car without my permission just because I gave her a general power of attorney? Do I need a will if I have already given my wife a power of attorney?"

These are some of the questions quite frequently asked of the Legal Assistance Officer.

First, what is a power of attorney? It is an instrument authorizing a person to act as the agent or attorney of the person granting it. It is often called a letter of attorney.

There are two classifications of powers of attorney: the general and the special (or limited) power of attorney. Both of these instruments authorize one person to act for the grantor.

The general power of attorney can be a dangerous piece of paper for the grantor if given to an irresponsible person, for it authorizes that person, on behalf of the grantor, to buy, receive, lease, accept, or otherwise acquire; to sell, convey, mortgage, or otherwise encumber or dispose of; or to contract or agree for the acquisition, disposal or encumbrance of; any property whatsoever and wheresoever situated, be it real, personal or mixed.....'

This instrument also authorizes the agent of the grantor to "make or endorse checks in the name of the grantor and to make deposits or investments in, or withdrawals from any account of the grantor."

However, these are not, by any means, the only authorities given by the grantor to his agent in a general power of attorney. In essence, the general power of attorney allows the agent to act for and in the name of the grantor in almost every type of transaction.

On the other hand the special or limited power of attorney only allows the agent to handle a particular transaction for the grantor and in the special power of attorney that one transaction is specifically defined. For example, the grantor may draw up a special power of attorney authorizing his agent to sell his car, or to ship his household goods. By doing this, the grantor has spelled out the limits of his agent's authority and the agent has no power to do anything else.

Third parties dealing with an agent on the basis of a written power of attorney are not prejudiced by any private instructions, either written or oral, unless such instructions are in some way referred to in the instrument.

The power of attorney is terminated by the expiration date on the instrument, by the death of the grantor or the agent, and by special notice of termination recorded in the same court house wherein the power of attorney was recorded, if it was recorded. Third persons who are without notice of an unrecorded revocation may be justified in presuming that the general power of attorney still exists.

It is a good practice to give a copy of the written revocation to the agent and to get him to sign a receipt for it. Also, it is best to recover all unused copies of the power of attorney.

It is, then, apparent that a will and a power of attorney are not the same thing, for the power of attorney stops at the death of the grantor whereas a will only goes into effect at the death of the testator. Therefore, a person has not made a Last Will and Testament giving all his property, for example, to his wife, when he makes out a power of attorney naming his wife as agent.

It is suggested that whenever possible, a special power of attorney be used instead of the general power of attorney. For further information concerning powers of attorney, contact the Legal Assistance Officer, Building 5.

Dental Health Series

Preventive Dentistry New Army Program

By Maj. Charles W. Dobson
Preventive Dentistry Officer

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the 18th in a series of articles presented in the interests of better dental health.)

The prevention of disease has been a subject of interest to man for thousands of years. But, not until fairly recent times have great strides been made toward this goal. By the means of vaccination, smallpox, typhoid, diptheria, whooping cough, more recently polio, along with many diseases have become virtually unknown.

Unfortunately, the most common disease known to man cannot be eliminated by vaccination. That disease is dental decay (caries). However, dental caries can be greatly reduced and perhaps even eliminated for most people.

The other great destroyer of mouth health is pyorrhea or periodontal disease. This disease causes the loss of more teeth after a person reaches age 35 than dental caries.

This does not mean that pyorrhea only attacks after this age. It is a slow-acting disease that probably began many years before.

In recent years the dental profession has made tremendous progress. New equipment has been developed enabling us to perform corrective work faster and better than ever before. Dental research has accomplished much. A classic example of its results is the fluoridation of many of our cities water supplies. This has helped to markedly reduce dental decay in the area where it is being used.

In the United States you are offered the best dental care in the world. Yet three out of ten Americans past age 35 are wearing full dentures. Think of the time and money wasted, the unnecessary pain, suffering and poor health that could be prevented. And they can be. We know the cause of these diseases, and by eliminating the cause, we can eliminate the disease.

The Army Dental Corps has recently begun a program of preventive dentistry. This program is Army wide and will continue on a permanent basis. We intend to put into effect every available means of combating dental diseases.

High on the list of preventive measures is education of the public. You must know not only how to prevent these diseases, but why it is important to do so.

Continue to read these articles on Dental Health and practice good oral hygiene.

Quick Way To Destroy $7 Million

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — The Army has destroyed about $7 million in cash at a Maryland testing center just to find out how fast it could be done.

Scientists at the Army Chemical Center, Edgewood, Md., tested a newly-developed technique of rapidly doing away with money to deny use of American currency to the enemy in event of an attack.

To conduct the test, the Army made arangements with the Treasury Department for the ton of cash — mostly worn out or imperfect bills.

Although the exact method used to destroy the money is classified information, an official at the post said the rate of destruction was "extremely rapid."

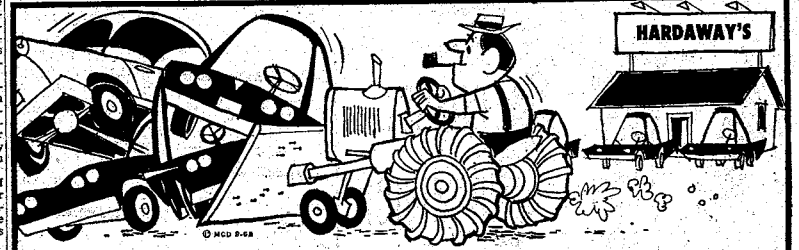
IOCC Students Hear Maj. Gen. Jablonsky

"An Infantry officer is his own best career manager," Maj. Gen. Harvey J. Jablonsky told 370 students at The Infantry School recently.

Gen. Jablonsky, director of the Officers Assignment Directorate, Office of Personnel Operations, Department of the Army, spoke to the combined Infantry Officer Career Courses Nos. 1 and 2 in Theater No. 1.

"We want you to have a successful Army career so that you can make the greatest contribution to the Infantry, the U. S. Army and the United States of America," the general said.

"Career development of an officer is the responsibility of the Department of the Army, the commander, and the officer himself," he continued.



Gen. Jablonsky outlined Department of the Army organization as it pertains to personnel and delineated the responsibilities of a commanding officer to further the careers of the officers assigned to him.

"In the interest of his own career," he said, "an officer wants assignments that are interesting and challenging."

Another primary wish of an officer is to be assigned to a good post where his family can be with him. "You want to go to all the military schools," Gen. Jablonsky said. "And I'll bet you want fast promotions."

"Actually, your desires are the same as ours," he continued. "We want to give you the best there is."

To accomplish this, the general admonished the student officers to "know yourself, know your goal, decide on the best way of getting there, seek assignments, evaluate yourself and practice counseling others on career matters."

Award Goes To 2nd Div.

A Minuteman Award was presented to the 2nd Division recently in recognition of its outstanding achievement in the Army Savings Bond Program.

Maj. Gen. Charles H. Chase accepted the award on behalf of the Division last Thursday.

Units of the division have also received citations. The 4th Cavalry will receive the highest Savings Bond Award, the minuteman flag which requires 90 per cent participation with 500 assigned strength.

The 68th has received the Secretary of Army Award which is the second highest award and requires an 80 per cent participation with a 500 assigned strength.

Receiving the A-1 Minuteman Award are the 122nd Signal, the 27th Artillery, the 69th Armor, the 38th Infantry, and soon the 1st Infantry. To receive this award the unit must have an assigned strength of 100 with a 60 per cent participation.

TSB Is Tops In Educational Development

The Student Brigade was recently awarded a Certificate of Merit for educational development during the fiscal year ending June 30.

Brig. Gen. Royal Reynolds Jr., assistant commandant of The Infantry School, presented the award to Col. O.R. Koch Jr., TSB commander.

Competition for the award was open to major units and was based on the percentage of participation in educational programs available to military personnel.

The programs included U.S. Armed Forces Institute correspondence courses, preparatory instruction, high school courses or others conducted either on or off duty, college classes, MOS-related courses or any other test conducted by the Army Education Center.

A rundown of post participation percentages shows TSB with 27.67 percent; The Infantry Board, 25 percent; Lawson Army Aviation Command, 16.57 percent; 498th Medical Battalion, 14.52 percent; The Infantry Center Troop Command, 11.82 percent; Martin Army Hospital, 11.40 percent; 1st Infantry Brigade, 10.5 percent, and the 151st Engineer Group, 8.82 percent.

The award will be an annual event, according to Leonard S. Ozley, Infantry Center education officer.

PFC Hoogwerf Is 'Best Driver'

PFC Robert A. Hoogwerf emerged victorious in stiff competition to become "Driver of the Month" in the 2nd Howitzer Battalion, 10th Artillery, 1st Infantry Brigade. He is assigned to the Rocket Platoon of Battery D as a driver.

Criteria for selection included before and after operation safety checks; knowledge and performance of preventive maintenance; general driving knowledge; and driving performance.

Anti-Red Speaker Scheduled

W. Cleon Skousen, one of the nation's foremost authorities on communism, will speak at 8 p.m. Tuesday at Columbus High School Auditorium.

This event, sponsored by the Columbus Jaycees, is part of their effort to assist in the fight against communism.

Cleon Skousen was an FBI agent in charge of Internal Subversion, the author of the best seller "The Naked Communist" and appeared on the three-hour nationally televised series "Hollywood's Answer To Communism."

There will be no admission charge. The public is invited to attend.

GREAT MOMENTS IN HISTORY THAT SPARKED FREEDOM

"SURRENDER AT YORKTOWN"

EVER SINCE 1775 THE AMERICAN COLONIES HAD FOUGHT FOR THEIR INDEPENDENCE FROM ENGLAND. SIX YEARS PASSED; AND AFTER MANY DIFFICULT CAMPAIGNS AND NUMEROUS CASUALTIES, THE TIDE BEGAN TO TURN FOR THE AMERICANS.

CUT DOWN EVERY ENEMY REBEL IN YOUR PATH!

EARLY IN 1781 THE AMERICAN TRAITOR BENEDICT ARNOLD LANDED 1,600 BRITISH TROOPS AT CHESAPEAKE BAY AND RAIDED UP THE JAMES RIVER TO RICHMOND...

GENERAL—I AM JUST AS ANXIOUS AS YOU ARE TO BRING ARNOLD BACK ALIVE.

WASHINGTON ATTEMPTED TO TRAP ARNOLD, AND SENT MAJ. GENERAL LAFAYETTE TO VIRGINIA WITH 1,200 CONTINENTALS.

BUT ARNOLD EVADED THEM... IN MAY, 1781, GEN. CORNWALLIS ARRIVED WITH THE REMNANTS OF HIS ARMY AND TOOK OVER COMMAND OF ALL TROOPS IN VIRGINIA: 7,000 MEN...

MAYBE WE CAN SURPRISE THE REDCOATS!

WASHINGTON DECIDED TO OUTSMART THE BRITISH TROOPS. PRETENDING TO ATTACK NEW YORK, HE MARCHED HIS ARMY SOUTH TO JOIN WITH LAFAYETTE...

I AM HAPPY TO SEE THESE REINFORCEMENTS, BUT I WILL BE OVERJOYED TO SEE THE GENERAL!

THE FRENCH FLEET (24 SHIPS) ARRIVED OFF YORKTOWN IN AUGUST, 1781, AND DEBARKED 3,000 FRENCH REGULARS...

THE BRITISH SAILED IN TO ATTEMPT TO DRIVE OUT THE FRENCH FLEET BUT THE FIGHT ENDED IN A STALEMATE. JUST AS WASHINGTON'S ARMY ARRIVED IN YORKTOWN...

CHARGE!

THE ALLIED ARMY NOW NUMBERED ABOUT 15,000, TWICE AS MANY AS THE BRITISH, WHO HAD NOT COUNTED ON WASHINGTON MARCHING SOUTH. THE BATTLE BEGAN ON OCTOBER 6...

THIRTEEN DAYS LATER, WITH THE FRENCH FLEET BEHIND THEM AND WASHINGTON'S ARMIES IN FRONT OF THEM, THE BRITISH WERE HOPELESSLY TRAPPED. CORNWALLIS WAS FORCED TO SURRENDER HIS ENTIRE COMMAND...

CORNWALLIS' DEFEAT RESULTED IN THE OVERTHROW OF THE BRITISH CABINET, AND THE NEW GOVERNMENT HAD NO CHOICE BUT TO END THE WAR. AFTER SIX LONG, WAR-TORN YEARS THE AMERICAN COLONISTS HAD WON THEIR INDEPENDENCE, AND A GREAT NATION WAS BORN.

• Voting Defends Freedom

1962 is a major voting year. In November, Americans will vote for all seats in the U. S. House of Representatives and approximately one-third of the seats in the United States Senate. Important State offices will also be filled at the polls this fall as voters exercise their greatest privilege under our form of government.

The President and Congress will look to this fall's election results to determine the wishes of the majority on many basic policies. The opposing candidates will place most of these issues before the voters and the election results will indicate the choice on opposing issues as well as personalities. Similar policy questions will be placed in issue in the various State elections.

Soldiers, even those away from home, have an important stake in these issues and in the coming opportunity to vote. The major issues affect all citizens, and the voting privilege is a foundation of the system soldiers are pledged to defend.

It is the policy of the U. S. Army to make all soldiers aware of their voting responsibility and to encourage maximum participation by all soldiers who are eligible to vote. Soldier Voting Officers have been appointed to arrange voting by absentee ballot. Special post card applications for absentee ballots have been distributed to all commands and special publications have been issued for guidance.

Department of the Army Pamphlet 21-50, "Voting Information," is of particular importance. It lists all the principal elections to be held in each state and the voting regulations of each state. The laws of each state are different, and voting soldiers must conform to the laws of the state in which they cast their ballots.

Our government is really "of the people, by the people, and for the people" only when elections represent the will of all the people. Each eligible voter must be certain that his will is expressed. It is the most certain way that democracy and its guarantee of freedom will prevail.

CUTTING CORNERS

Do you think that buying is always cheaper than renting? Or that ready-made foods always cost more than if you prepare them yourself? These ideas are incorrect. And it's because of misconceptions like these that many people lose money when they try to save it! Here are five mistakes many people make, and advice on how to avoid them:

1. They shop too often. A homemaker should shop only about once a week. Reason: you'll have more time to plan your purchasing, and you'll make fewer snap decisions. Besides, you'll go in for more economical bulk buying.

2. They don't anticipate their needs. Psychologists have proven that people will buy too many foodstuffs if they shop when they are hungry. And common sense indicates that if you shop when you absolutely must have something — say, tires — you won't compare prices and pay attention to quality.

3. They buy before considering renting. If you wax your floors only twice a year, it is probably more economical to rent a waxing machine than to buy one. But, considering the upkeep costs of an automobile, renting may not be as wise as going by bus. What you must compare is: the renting charge — and the cost of the appliance, its service and repair charges, its frequency of use, and its life expectancy.

4. They are fooled by guarantees. A guarantee doesn't always do that. Sometimes it will have instructions you must follow to make the warranty good. And occasionally, the cut-off time is unrealistic. Your best guarantee is a well-known brand in the store of a reliable merchant.

5. They are too trusting or too negligent about cash. When you give a cashier a $10 bill, mention the amount to him, and don't be too shy to count your change.

If you want to give away money — by ignoring these rules, at least get a reputation as a philanthropist.

The history of canned dry beans is varied. Theatrically, just the word "beans" has meant a sure-fire laugh for any comedian performing before a group of servicemen. Superstitiously, the bean has been credited with power of good and evil, and has been used in sorcery and medicine. Statistically, beans are one of the first modern-day convenience foods, having been canned in America since 1877. Nutrionally, they are held in high esteem by dieticians, since they supply important quantities of protein, and protein is of prime importance in body building . . . for youngsters and oldsters alike. Tastewise, they open up new experiences in eating when combined with meats, fruits, herbs and spices. Since this is still the season for outdoor barbecues it is well to remember that the success of any outdoor party revolves around the menu. It is good food that prompts conversation, and beans, hot or cold, are an ideal food for outdoor eating. Here are a few excellent recipes:

Mexican Barbecue Beans

½ pound ground beef
¼ teaspoon salt
Dash chili powder
1 teaspoon prepared mustard
¼ cup chopped onion
1 teaspoon butter or margerine
1 can (1 pound) barbecue beans

Combine beef, salt, chili powder, and ½ teaspoon mustard; shape into 12 meatballs. Cook meatballs and onion in butter until meat is brown and onion is tender. Add remaining mustard and beans; heat, stirring now and then. Makes two to three servings.

Curried Beans and Meatballs

½ pound ground lamb
2 tablespoons fine dry bread crumbs
2 tablespoons grated carrot
1 tablespoon minced onion
1 egg, slightly beaten
¼ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
¾ teaspoon curry powder
1 tablespoon butter or margerine
1 can (1 pound) barbecue beans

Combine lamb, bread crumbs, carrot, onion, egg, salt, and pepper. Shape into meatballs. Cook curry powder in butter for a few minutes. Add meatballs; brown slowly on all sides. Continue cooking for ten minutes. Add barbecue beans; heat 5 minutes longer, stirring now and then. Makes three servings.

Kabob Beans

2 cans (1 pound each) pork and beans with tomato sauce
1 can (12 ounces) luncheon meat
8 pineapple chunks

Pour beans into shallow baking dish (12x 8x2) or a 9-inch square pan. Cut luncheon meat into 16 cubes. Make 8 kabobs by arranging 1 cube of pineapple and 2 cubes of meat on toothpicks; place on top of beans. Bake in a 400° oven 20 minutes, or until the beans are bubbling. Makes four to six servings.

If your floor creaks, fill the cracks with talcum powder, then shellac the floor . . . When driving tacks or small nails into a wall or shelving, a bobby pin will eliminate bruised fingers. Slip the tack through the closed end of the bobby pin, hold the prong, position the tack and then hammer away . . . Raw carrot sticks can be improved by soaking a half hour in ice water to which slices of onions have been added . . . Too much radio in your car will weaken the battery and can be the cause of the engine being hard to start . . . After laundering and drying your summer blankets, fold them in thirds lengthwise, then in thirds again; wrap in clean paper; seal with gummed tape before storing for the winter . . . To clean pearl and amber beads, rub a few drops of olive oil on them with a piece of flannel and rub very gently . . . A clip board, the kind you buy in stationary stores, makes a dandy holder for place mats. This way you can hang them in a closet and save valuable drawer space . . . If your drainpipe leaks, cover it with wet plaster and cloth, tie it with a string, and let it dry . . . Putty that has become hard can be revived by mixing it well with a few drops of linseed oil . . . When ironing turn your ironing board around so that the iron rests on the narrow end of the board. This will give you more ironing surface for large pieces . . . A tear in a kid glove can be mended by first sewing a button-hole around the edge of the tear before drawing together. Then over-sew the buttonhole together and the repair will hold . . . Egg stains on silver can be removed by rubbing with damp salt . . . Suede articles can be brightened up by rubbing a piece of stale rye bread over the surface. If this isn't enough to do the job, first go over the suede with a cloth dipped lightly in vinegar . . . The secret of pouring liquid from a can is to make two holes in the top instead of one. The one hole is for the liquid to pour from, the other is to let the air into the can.

on the GLAMOUR FRONT

by Max Factor, Jr.

When traveling, your creams and lotions will prove one of your most important beauty aids. For a quick pick-up, for instance, when your skin feels taught and dry from air conditioned planes, trains, and hotel rooms, or from too long a stay out-of-doors, cleanse your face thoroughly with a moisture-plus liquid cleanser. Next, apply a liberal amount of dry skin cream and allow it to remain on your face during your bath or shower. The steam from the water will hasten the softening qualities of the cream and provide added moisture. After your bath, remove the cream with tissue, pat on skin freshener or astringent, and then apply your make-up. You will feel completely refreshed, and the use of these requisites regularly will help you maintain a lovely complexion.

Much More Ground Must Be Covered in CAA Drive

Participation in the annual Fort Benning Community Activities Association Fund Drive, now in its fourth week, has climbed to 27 per cent participation.

The drive, which is coming along satisfactorily, according to Col. Richard W. Keyes, commander of the 1st Infantry Brigade and Fort Benning Fund Drive chairman, and drive project officer Maj. Jean P. Doerr, commander of the 1st Battalion, The Infantry Center Troop Command, must cover much more ground in order to attain the "fair share" goal of 100 per cent participation.

Drive officials will be depending upon team captains from each command, staff section of The Infantry Center and The Infantry School, through their keymen to canvass personnel to obtain their fair share goal.

"Civilian personnel who contribute to the United Givers Fund Drive may receive credit for participation by presenting to their keymen a receipt for their contribution made elsewhere," the post Fund Drive chairman added.

The CAA approves fund requests for the operation of three principal Fort Benning community activities. The Visiting Nurses, Preventive Dental Health and the Youth Activities Club. Without the support of the CAA, these organizations would have to suspend all or a substantial part of their activities, officials pointed out.

The Visiting Nurses Program renders health education and assistance to dependents of military personnel by visiting the home or by consultation in the Preventive Medicine Clinic (old hospital building).

The nurses make many home calls to young mothers after discharge from the hospital. They also assist in administering shots for dependents at the Immunization Clinic and physical examinations for children. This program served almost 4,000 last year.

The Preventive Dental Health Program provides free cleaning and floridation of teeth for dependent children through age 18. This treatment sharply decreases future dental needs of the youngsters, according to post dentists.

The Youth Activities Club provides an agency for coordination of activities such as Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, Brat Barracks, athletic programs, Junior National Rifle Association, playgrounds and other recreational facilities for dependent children.

The CAA also makes a contribution to the Muscogee and Russell Counties United Givers Fund Drive. The UG fund supports 34 local and national health, welfare and character building agencies, including the YMCA and

FORT BENNING, GEORGIA, HOME OF U.S. ARMY INFANTRY CENTER

VOL. 21, NO. 2 — FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 21, 1962 — FORT BENNING, GA. — 28 Pages — 5c

President Approves Article 15 Changes; Effective on Feb. 1

President John F. Kennedy has signed a bill authorizing changes to Article 15 of the Uniform Code of Military Justice.

Changes in the code, effective Feb. 1, 1963, are expected to greatly reduce the number of summary courts-martial held by the Armed Services.

Preliminary estimates predict a 75 per cent decrease in the number of military personnel tried by summary courts-martial. With this reduction of judicial effort comes the bonus of a reduction in the number of young men who acquire the stigma of criminal conviction.

Previously Too Light

Experience with "non-judicial" punishment, authorized by Article 15 since the code was adopted in 1951, has shown that the punishments originally authorized were either too light to enforce discipline or too inflexible to permit appropriate punishment without recourse to court-martial.

Under old limitations the punishment could range from light penalties in the form of a maximum of 14 days extra duty (two hours per day), restriction, or withholding of privileges to the more severe reduction of one grade in a rank. Only officers could be fined.

The new Article 15 introduces forfeitures, detention of pay and correctional custody as punishments and extends the 14-day limit on restriction to a possible maximum of 60 days.

Can Demand Trial

Under the new law the offender acquires a statutory right to demand trial by court-martial in lieu of accepting punishment under Article 15. The only exception to this right occurs when the individual is attached to or embarked in a vessel.

The offender may appeal an

Post Gridders Set for Battle With Orlando

Off to a flying start, the Fort Benning Doughboys journey to Orlando, Fla., tomorrow to engage Orlando's semi - professional team in a gridiron battle.

Coach Leaton C. Cofield of the Doughboys expects plenty of trouble from the big Orlando team. "We'll have to run around them," said Cofield.

The Orlando team averages 230 pounds on their starting offensive line and 250 pounds on their defensive line.

Some of the players on the Florida squad are former collegiate footballers and most are former professionals. Thus far this season Orlando has compiled a 3-2 record playing in a tough Florida semi-professional league.

Two Injured

Two Fort Benning players came up with injuries in last Saturday's 21-14 conquest of the Camp LaJeune Marines at Doughboy Stadium.

End Robert Dickerson suffered a bad ankle sprain and fullback Wallace Johnson received a slight ankle sprain.

Companies Returning From TDY in Europe

HI DAD! . . . Sp4 Freddie Patterson gives his son a swing for the first time in six months upon his arrival at Muscogee County Airport. Sp4 Patterson is one of the 180 men of the 147th Ordnance Company who arrived here Saturday after serving in Kaiserslatern, Germany for six months temporary duty. The 147th was on TDY from The Infantry Center and will be reattached to the 7th Ordnance Battalion. The Infantry Center Troop Command. His wife Sandra looks on.

The Infantry Center Troop Command, which recently added one new company to the fold, welcomed the 147th Ordnance Company Saturday and is looking forward to two more arrivals in the near future.

The 147th, which arrived by [illegible] Muscogee County Airport, brought some 180 officers and enlisted men to the Troop Command from Kaiserslatern, Germany.

Met by Col. John H. Lattin, command commander, the company was treated to a steak dinner with all the trimmings.

Attached to Ordnance

The 147th, which left The Infantry Center in March, 1962, on a temporary basis, will be attached to the 7th Ordnance Battalion, Center Troop Command.

It served in support of troops in the Northern Area Command, Europe, attached to the 554th Ordnance Battalion, 509th Ordnance Group in Kaiserslautern. The unit will be housed in the Harmony Church area.

The 554th Ordnance Company, which left Fort Benning in October, 1961 commanded by 1st Lt. Allen C. Jones, will leave Camp Fontaine Ammunition Depot, France, Sept. 28 by air.

It also will be attached to the 7th Ordnance Battalion and housed in the Harmony Church area.

Receives Citation

During its tour in Europe, the 820th, comprised of some 220 men, was commanded by Maj. Gen. Henry R. Westphalinger, commanding general of the U. S. Army Communications Zone, Europe, for a job well done in "receiving, segregating and storing approximately 14,000 tons of ammunition during the period November, 1961, to January, 1962."

The 554th Ordnance Company, whose arrival date is still unknown, is also expected to return here.

Upon arrival of each of the companies, an official welcome and a steak dinner with all the trimmings will be presented by the Troop Command, Lt. Col. James L. Atkins, deputy commander of the command, said.

Storm Alert Test Is Set Next Week

Sirens and mobile public address taxis will begin blaring their warnings at 10 a.m. next Friday to initiate the first practice test of the storm warning system for the coming storm season.

This practice exercise will be a simulated storm "green" with all operations on post ceasing, to allow time for every individual to be oriented on storm precautions and procedures.

Two emergency radio nets will be established and expanding telephone notification will go into effect.

This is only a practice "green" storm test and additional information will be furnished to staff sections and major commands before "green" time.

President John F. Kennedy on fund raising said, "This year, the Honorable Robert S. McNamara, Secretary of Defense, will again serve as vice chairman for the Federal Government of United Community Campaigns of America. I am confident everyone will extend full cooperation to the Vice Chairman in these campaigns. Such cooperation should, under the Federal policy on voluntary fund raising, include the effective solicitation of all employes, the acceptance of equitable unit goals, and the setting up of an adequate collection method for the convenience of those who wish to make contributions on an installment basis."

Continuing the U. S. Fund Drive Chairman said, "Last year, Federal workers helped the United Community Campaign attain a record total of $500,000,000. We can be proud of that performance, and it is my hope that employes of your department in each community where it conducts its operations will continue to give thoughtfully and generously to these campaigns."

The Doughboys acquired a new player this week when 2nd Lt. Allen Taylor turned out for practice.

Taylor, a former star halfback at North Carolina State University, will add depth to the already fine Doughboy backfield.

The Doughboys will return home Sept. 29 to host Pensacola Naval Station, Pensacola, Fla., at Doughboy Stadium.

Article 15

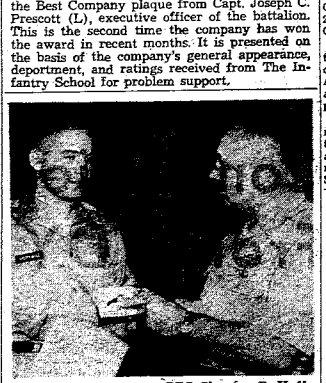
Article 15 punishment which he feels is unjust or disproportionate. The unexecuted portions of an Article 15 punishment may be suspended at any time. Within time limits to be established by individual service regulation executed reductions and forfeitures of pay may also be suspended.

This power to suspend, especially in case of reductions, will permit a commander to enforce discipline and still not result in a permanent loss of rank where the serviceman's future conduct demonstrates he has learned his lesson.

Coveted Tab Of Rangers Goes to 54

The Ranger Department of The Infantry School graduated its first class of trainees for the current fiscal year recently as it presented the coveted Ranger tabs to 54 men who completed the rugged 838-hour course.

Honor graduates of the class were 2nd Lt. Archie D. Rodgers and Platoon Sgt. Billy J. Bailey.



One of the highlights of the ceremony was the presentation of the Association of the U.S. Army plaque to Sgt. Bailey. It was given to him by Lt. Col. James W. Talley, chemical officer of the 2nd Infantry Division. Col. Talley is assistant secretary-treasurer of the Columbus-Phenix City-Fort Benning Chapter of the AUSA. Sgt. Bailey, a member of the 82nd Airborne Division at Fort Bragg, N. C., also received a year's subscription to INFANTRY Magazine.

Col. John W. Jackson, director of the Ranger Department, addressed the class briefly before the graduation certificates and Ranger tabs were issued.

He said, "In every major war in which our country has been involved, Ranger techniques and concepts have played a major role. Rangers have inflicted damage on the enemy all out of proportion to their size. Now, more than at any other time we need the toughness of the Rangers' minds and bodies. The tab you will wear is looked on with respect by all other branches of the Armed services."

BEST COMPANY HONORS . . . Capt. George W. Dustin, commanding officer of Company B, 1st Armored Rifle Battalion, 58th Infantry, receives the Best Company plaque from Capt. Joseph C. Prescott (L), executive officer of the battalion. This is the second time the company has won the award in recent months. It is presented on the basis of the company's general appearance, deportment, and ratings received from The Infantry School for problem support.

FOR SOLDIERING . . . PFC Clarence R. Huffman (L), 7th Ordnance battalion, The Infantry Center Troop Command, receives a certificate and wristwatch from Col. John H. Lattin upon being chosen Soldier-of-the-Month for TICTC during August.

Norwegian Officer Heads Platoon Class Graduates

In graduation ceremonies of the Battalion Mortar and Davy Crockett Platoon Officers Course No. One here Monday, 35 officers received certificates for having completed the six-week course.

Among the graduates were National Guardsmen on active duty and others called to duty to train in the class, Army Reservists, three Regular Army lieutenants and three Allied student officers.

Also receiving graduation certificates were five second lieutenants stationed at Fort Benning. They were Bernard D. Edmundson, 2nd Infantry Division; Jon L. Mason, The Infantry Center; Jerry O. Parrish, 1st Infantry Brigade; Jerry E. Sheffield, TIC, all Army Reservists, and Melvin C. Rupp, Combat Support Co., 29th Infantry, a National Guardsman.

The outstanding graduate of the class was 1st Lt. Arne Vik of Christianson, Norway, an Allied student who earned a score of 95 of a possible 100 points.

For his achievment Lt. Vik received a letter of appreciation signed by Brig. Gen. Royal Reynolds Jr., assistant commandant of The Infantry School.

The second highest score was made by 1st Lt. Richard W. Miller, 506th Infantry at Fort Campbell, Ky., who received 94.9, only a tenth of a point behind Lt. Vik's score. Lt. Miller also was given a letter from Gen. Reynolds.

In a brief address at the start of the ceremony, Col. Raymond B. Marlin, director of The Infantry School's Weapons Department, congratulated the graduates.

He said, "A good leader makes an Infantry platoon good. An expert leader makes it extra good. You will be extra good leaders. You will probably be platoon leaders or will be associated with platoons.

"You will have the leadership ability to know your men and your job. This course has not been an easy one, and I express my appreciation for the job you have done."

The letters and certificates were presented to the graduates by Gen. Reynolds.

Hawaii, Island State, Gem in U. S. Diadem

This July 7 marked 64 years since the United States by annexation acquired the islands that were to become the 50th State of the Union. With Hawaii now approaching the third anniversary of her statehood, it's a good time to reflect that Congress never passed a wiser resolution, one more beneficial to the nation, than its decision in 1898 to accept the Republic of Hawaii as a U. S. Territory.

James A. Michener, in his popular novel "Hawaii," has traced the history of the islands and their people from earliest times up to their struggle for statehood. No Americans were happier than those of us in the Armed Forces when Hawaii achieved her wish.

Veterans of the war in the Pacific never saw the islands at their serene and glowing best. The war had begun at Pearl Harbor, and thereafter Honolulu — all of Oahu — overflowed with troops in training and en route to and from the battle areas. It was an exciting time, a violent time, but scarcely one for unhurried enjoyment of a tropical paradise.

And yet the veterans of the war, as well as those who saw the islands during the Korean conflict, remember Hawaii with a special affection. If they were lucky they saw much more of it than bustling, modern Honolulu — they marvelled at Mauna Loa and Kilauea, the active volcanoes on "the Big Island"; they swam at Waipahee Falls on Kauai, "the Garden Island"; they visited the huge plantation on Lanai, "the Pineapple Island," and they climbed the mountains of Maui, "the Valley Island." And even if they never saw more of the islands than teeming Oahu, the view from the Pali was one they would remember the rest of their lives.

Yes, Hawaii, our Pacific bastion, is a preferred duty station for people of all the services. Even now she is contributing to it as famed "Wolfhound" troops of the 17th Inf. of the 25th Inf. Div. from Schofield Barracks face the Communists in Thailand, while ships of the Seventh Fleet, based at Pearl Harbor, patrol Southeast Asia's troubled waters. (AFPS)

The Judge Says

Credit Is a Privilege To Be Used Wisely!

By 1st Lt. Stephen V. Dubin

One of the easiest methods of incurring a lifetime problem is to fail to pay for items purchased on credit.

Besides the embarrassment, possible discharge by board action or military criminal charges involved (dishonorably failing to pay a just debt is a violation of Article 134 of the UCMJ), a failure to meet one's credit obligations can lead to the loss of property which you value as well as the loss of a good credit rating.

As to the possible loss of property, a creditor has a right to sue a debtor for obligations which are unpaid. If the creditor gets a judgment against the debtor, then, in most states, a sheriff can satisfy this judgment by selling the debtor's property at public auction. The price that these items bring goes to the creditor and the debtor only gets that amount, if any, which exceeds the amount of the creditor's judgment.

Also, where there is a deficiency, the creditor can get a deficiency judgment and proceed against the debtor for the balance, including a reasonable charge for interest.

The possible loss of a good credit rating is usually even more serious than the loss of property. Most businesses in the United States belong to local credit associations. These associations keep records on practically everyone who has ever purchased on credit in their area. They know whether you pay your debts, and how long it takes you to pay them.

Before extending credit, a reputable businessman will first secure a report on your credit standing. If you're a poor risk, he usually will not extend credit. At times, this can really prove damaging because practically all of us cannot always afford to pay cash for items which we consider necessities. By means of various national associations of credit bureaus, your rating follows you wherever you go for the rest of your life.

I Came, I Saw, THEY Conquered!

Military Police Corps Comes of Age Wednesday

Wednesday marks the coming of age of the Army's Military Police Corps. The MPs will be 21.

On the Main Post and stationed with the 2nd Infantry Division are men of the corps who will join with their counterparts around the world in celebration of the event.

Though the MP Corps was not permanently established until Sept. 26, 1941, the Military Police function is as old as the Nation's armies. In January, 1776, Gen. George Washington appointed the first "provost martial" who levied provost guards from companies of the line.

Today's Army has some of the finest law enforcement personnel to be found in any police agency, military or civilian. Whether they're controlling the thousands of vehicles that roll on and off post daily, or assisting civilian police in their work, the MPs are on the job 24 hours each day.

They are men of stature and integrity, skilled in the latest law enforcement techniques and trained to perform rugged tasks in combat. As their motto states, today's MP is truly "Of the Troops and for the Troops."

CG Lauds Post Safety

In a message to Third Army posts, Gen. Trapnell stated:

"I am pleased to report the near success of the Third U. S. Army accident prevention effort during the past long Labor Day weekend.

"While our record was marred by a single off-duty drowning and non-critical injuries to five soldiers involved in civilian vehicle accidents, this accomplishmeot is impressive when assessed against the numbers involved and the risks encountered.

"I share with all the gratification which comes from a job well done."

CHAPLAIN'S CORNER

Thoughts on Fidelity

By Chaplain (Capt.) James A. Peterman

Alway faithful! No greater tribute can we bestow upon a man — the Christian gentleman. How often, however, does the honor have to be passed up and only a beast, an old dog, some pooch wagging its tail, seem to qualify as the always faithful.

Fidelity implies trust, honor, a giving of self. The faithful man gives sacrificing service to the persons he trusts and loves. Maybe that is why few men receive the great tribute of being always faithful, for could it be that self sacrifice is becoming a non-entity or at least a scarce quality of character among human beings while the canine society still seem to possess it?

Fidelity is faithful devotion to duty and to ones obligations or vows. How wonderful it is to come upon a faithful soldier — devoted to his duty. The real strength of the Army depends upon his kind — the always faithful. A man who loves his country, its people and himself will loyally serve it — even die to defend it.

When Francis I of France at the Battle of Marignano in 1515 went charging into battle, he yelled out, "Qui m'aime me suivre!" (He who loves me, follow me.)

Then there is fidelity to God. Christ gave us the perfect example of fidelity — always did he do the will of his Father in Heaven, even to the dying on the cross. Like the king's battle cry, "If you love me, follow me," Christ's words come to us — "If you love me, take up your cross daily and follow me."

Love, self sacrifice is required of the faithful man, whether he serves his country, his family or his God. We may dedicate monuments to the faithful soldier who dutifully performs military tasks, we may pay high tribute to the always faithful husband or wife, father or mother or child, we may gloriously praise the religious man who devotedly serves God, but nothing could be more rewarding than to hear Christ's words spoken to the always faithful, "Well done, good and faithful servant; because you have been faithful over a few things, I will set thee over many; enter into the joy of thy master." Matt. 25:21

As the poet, Elizabeth Barrett Browning, wrote:

The sweetest lives are those to duty wed,
Whose deeds, both great and small,
are close-knit strands of unbroken thread
Whose love ennobles all.
The world may sound no trumpets, sound no bells;
The book of life the shining record tells."

"Loyalty is the holiest good in the human heart."
—Seneca

Liberty and Communism

In modern democracies, men and women are free to choose their occupations, and free to change their occupations. Likewise they are at liberty to change jobs and move from one part of the country to another seeking better employment. In totalitarian regimes, and especially in Communist dictatorships, these freedoms are greatly restricted.

Clark Kerr, in the book Goals for Americans, writes, "the American economic system has evolved with a primary emphasis on the freedom of the individual to make economic choices.

"This was not happenstance, of course, but a reflection of the American people's belief that free choice in economic matters best serves our basic national purpose, which is, after all, the fulfillment of the individual.

"From the outset, we accepted as an imperative the proposition that a democratic political system can be successful only with a democratic form of economic organization.

"In some particular economic sectors — notably the development of our national railroad system after the Civil War — government policies were consciously directed toward increasing the effectiveness of the economy.

"For the most part, however, legislation and public influence were directed to keeping the economic system democratic and so, we believed, effective."

All totalitarian regimes require a harsh labor discipline and also produce a rigid social stratification between the elite and the common worker. These conditions are as conspicuous in the Soviet Union today as they were in Fascist Italy under Mussolini and in Nazi Germany under Hitler.

Before the Bolshevik Revolution, Lenin promised to abolish the internal passports of Tsarist days that tended to bind workers and peasants to their jobs and prevented their movement to other regions in search of higher wages.

Immediately after the October Revolution, the dictatorship of the proletariat allowed considerable labor mobility. Labor was desperately needed in the campaign to revive industry in the factories and mines; and peasants were encouraged to migrate from rural areas to towns to enter employment in these industries.

By 1930, a large labor force had been recruited for industry. But the turnover of workers in mines and factories was considerable.

To speed industrialization under the first Five Year Plan, the dictatorship looked for means to stop the turnover. Among the methods adopted were the piecework system and the differential in wages.

Army MPs Celebrate 21st Year

AN IMPORTANT TASK HANDLED DAILY
PFC Thomas Hallihan Directs Traffic At Outpost 1

A paragraph from the Articles of War issued by Charles I of England in 1629 reads "The Provost must have a horse allowed him and some soldiers to attend him and all the rest commanded to obey and assist, or else the service will suffer."

Neither Lt. Col. James E. Farmer, Army Infantry Center Provost Marshal, or any of the 143 Military Policemen working under him, use horses, but this hasn't hampered the efficiency with which they do their job.

Their competence recently received praise from Major Gen. Ben Harrell, commanding general of The Infantry Center, who, in a note congratulating them on their 21st anniversary said, "Since its activation, the Military Police Corps has attained an enviable record, in a wide scope of activities from combat military police duty to complex crime investigation."

"I am confident the Corps will continue to perform its mission with the same marked ability that has characterized past achievements," the message continued.

Lauds Local MPs

Col. Farmer, who has been in military police work for over 11 years, added to this by saying, "The performance of the post MPs is unparalleled in my experience."

"They have done a tremendous job, despite a shortage of vehicles and personnel," he added.

Although the MPs will celebrate with a family picnic at TIC recreation area Sunday, the actual date of the anniversary isn't until Wednesday.

It was on this latter date in 1941 that the Military Police Corps was established. Their record during World War II and the Korean conflict is well known.

The full history of the military policeman, as the excerpt from Charles I's Articles of War indicates began much earlier than 21 years ago.

In the U. S. their beginning is signaled by Gen. George Washington's appointment in 1776 of a "Provost Martial".

Two years later Congress authorized a Provost Corps. They were authorized one captain, four lieutenants, three sergeants, three corporals, one quartermaster sergeant, one clerk, two trumpeters, four executioners, and 43 provosts, or privates.

A general order of 1778 charged them to "Patrole ye Camp and its neighborhood for the purpose of apprehending deserters, marauders, drunkards, rioters and stragglers, and to apprehend all soldiers in violation of general orders".

Today's MPs still encounter some of the problems their ancestors faced, but their present-day tasks are much more complicated and exacting.

For instance, at Fort Benning they are responsible for traffic investigation and control, security, range guard control, fish and game regulations enforcement, confinement, criminal investigation, escorting all visiting dignataries, fingerprinting of civilian employees, and registration of all firearms and vehicles, to name a few.

Some of their most important jobs are liaison with civilian police and maintenance of law and order as far as the military is concerned, and traffic escort at all school crossings on post.

As Col. Farmer says, they deserve a happy birthday salute.

Post P-TA Holds First Meeting of Year

The first meeting of the Fort Benning Parent Teachers Association for the 1962-63 school year saw over 1,000 parents gather in the auditorium at Faith School recently.

Highlight of the evening was an address by Maj. Gen. Ben Harrell, commanding general of The Infantry Center and commandant of The Infantry School, welcoming all new parents and teachers and those who were here last year.

Introducing the general was P-TA president, Col. Edward M. Foxworth, Infantry Center quartermaster.

Last year, with an enrollment of 2,641 parents and teachers from the five post elementary schools, the P-TA was the largest in post history and the first meeting reached 859.

Col. Foxworth made a plea for every parent of a child enrolled in the post schools to join, stating the success of the organization depends on the percentage of parents participating.

The importance of the PTA in the life of a school child was pointed out by Gen. Harrell when he said the real objective of the association is to establish a relationship between the parent and teacher so the two together can help the child obtain the most from school.

Introduced to members at the meeting were the principals of the schools, the superintendent's staff and the president of the school board.

Col. Howard R. Scroggs, executive officer of Martin Army Hospital, is school board president.

Making the introductions was Mrs. Hazel J. Scudder, school superintendent.

Next regularly scheduled meeting is slated for Oct. 9.

Col. Scroggs Is Named to School Position

Col. Howard Raymond Scroggs has been appointed president of the board for dependent schools here.

He succeeds Col. John M. King who has served as president since August, 1960.

Col. Scroggs, who is executive officer of Martin Army Hospital, holds three academic degrees. He was graduated from Central State College, Edmond, Okla., with a B. A. degree in education; Northwestern University, Chicago, master of hospital administration, and State University of Iowa at Iowa City, doctor of philosophy.

He served as an instructor in the Department of Administration at the Army Medical Service School, Fort Sam Houston, Tex., from August, 1949, to September, 1952, and from September, 1959, to May, 1961.

Jan Rose's Woman's Club Diary

The bowling season starts this week for the Woman's Club League. If you missed the roll-offs for teams last Thursday morning, please call Mrs. West, MU 9-4509, chairman, for details on how you can still be in the league. If you are interested in being a substitute, call Mrs. West.

The Pre-Kindergarten School, Building 222, still has openings for toddlers aged 3-5. But the classes are filling up, so hurry and call Mrs. Murray, 545-2217, and register your child now.

The Distaff Dinner Dance will be held on Nov. 17 in the new Main Club. An annual affair, the event promises to be even bigger and better than last year's gala, which was one of the nicest parties of the year. The committee, Mrs. John E. Kelly, chairman, Mrs. Braxton E. Small, co-chairman, is hard at work on the plans. Watch for tickets in your unit.

Don't forget, it is less than two weeks until the Opening Tea on Oct. 3. The Main Club will not be finished, as we all had hoped, so the Tea has been moved to the Supper Club on Wednesday, Oct. 3, 2 until 5 p.m. All the activity chairmen will be present to register people for the classes starting in October. So do plan to attend.

Report Card

By Mary Beth Williams

The wonderful summer of 1962 is over. But you can be assured, as I am, the memories of those days will remain with us through the long winter ahead.

Girls will still laugh, or cry, as they remember the cadet hops and a certain cadet who may or may not be still writing. Boys, too will recall those days when it seemed the post was being invaded by an enemy force.

At some of these parties, we said goodbye to many of our old friends. Many left for far-away places; some have only gone to Auburn. Wherever they went, they leave places which will never be completely filled.

With warmth and enthusiasm, we welcomed many new-comers to our ranks. Now it is almost impossible to believe they just hit the post in July.

Besides the regular summer school courses, many of us took advantage of the typing courses offered at the Adult Education Center.

"Let's go to the fortune teller!" was a familiar cry during August. Isn't she fantastic?

Were you at the pool on those long days when nobody got wet? The bridge bug really hit us. Remember the impatience of the masters (who are working their way through college playing for a penny a point) trying to teach us the finer points of the game . . . yes, that means you count points before you bid!

Yes, the wonderful summer of 1962 is over. It will never come again.

Now it's nearly October, and time for three-weeks tests. Seniors from Baker, Columbus and Pacelli are flashing their rings . . . and talking about "privileges" in knowing tones.

Clubs are getting into full swing on post and in the schools. In tune with this new season, I am starting this column, which is not to be simply a commentary on parties and local happenings, or merely a series of biographies of our friends. This is to be your column, where you can read what you want me to say. So that I can fulfill the thus stated purpose of this space, please let me know what is going on; tell me about the adventures you have; give me a sign when there is someone you think is worthy of being interviewed.

Attention all girls interested in and eligible for membership in the Junior Army Daughters of America! There will be a coke party at the Officers Club (Normandy Room and East Porch) from 2 to 4 p.m., September 29. The charge per person will be 25 cents. All officers daughters or granddaughters who are in high school are cordially invited to attend.

Famed WW II Composer Comes Out of Retirement

Irving Berlin, who, in his famous WWI song, threatened to murder the bugler, to amputate his reveille, and to spend the rest of his days in bed, is back to work after 12 years of semi-retirement. In October, he will be back on Broadway with his latest show, "Mr. President." His last show, "Call Me Madam," opened 12 years ago.

Berlin, now 74, attempted to retire, but could find nothing as pleasing as his work. If he comes up with a patriotic song, it will probably benefit some patriotic organization, as other great songs have done before. In fact, he seems to have made a hobby of giving away the millions his patriotic songs have netted.

"This Is the Army," was the WWII soldier show written and produced by Berlin. The entire proceeds went to the Army Emergency Relief, and it tops the list of the nine patriotic contributions made by the composer, with $9,535,625 turned over to the fund by June 1955.

"God Bless America" besides almost becoming second to our national anthem, contributes hundreds of thousands of dollars to a special fund for the Boy and Girl Scouts of America. Up to Dec. 31, 1961, the song had earned $339,100.1 for both organizations.

Berlin's "I Threw a Kiss in the Ocean" is earmarked for the Navy Relief Society. It has so far earned $20,106.21. His "Angels of Mercy" song dedicated to the American Red Cross, has earned $10,502.17. Three other songs, "Arms for the Love of America," "Any Bonds Today" and "I Paid My Income Tax Today" are all earmarked for the American Ordnance Association and have so far earned $10,718.74. His "Freedom Train," written for the benefit of the American Heritage Foundation, has earned $9,341.61. The "President's Birthday Ball" has contributed $1,212.76 to the Infantile Paralysis Fund. All of the copyrights have been given to the respective beneficiaries.

38th First Group Arrives In Europe on 'Rotaplan'

BY 38TH INFANTRY PIO

The advance party of the 38th Infantry has arrived in Baumholder, Germany, preceding the battle group's main body scheduled to leave about October 15 as the first unit moving overseas under the Army's new "Rotaplan."

Fifty-five officers and men of the 38th left Monday, with the 2nd Infantry Division band stationed at Kelley Hill to give them a musical send-off, while companies of the 38th in garrison lined the streets to give a farewell salute and the battle group mascot burro "Rockie Marne" stood at attention.

The group moved by bus to Lawson Army Air Field to board a Military Air Transport Service (MATS) aircraft on the first leg of the flight to Rhine Main Air Force Base in Frankfurt, Germany. From there the party moved by motor vehicle to Baumholder, the temporary duty station scheduled for the battle group.

The 38th's advance party consisted of officer and enlisted representatives from each company, principal staff sections and the Communications Platoon and was headed by the battle group executive officer, Lt. Col. Sidney J. Roche.

During its month overseas prior to the main body's movement, the advance party will receive property from the outgoing 26th Infantry and find out the details of the operational missions that will face the 38th there as well as the administrative and logistical situation.

ASSIGNED TO 2ND — Brig. Gen. Billingslea

26th Infantry Flying In

The advance party of the 1st Battle Group, 36th Infantry, began arriving yesterday by air from Germany to start change-over operations with the 1st Battle Group, 38th Infantry, as part of the Army's new rotation system — ROTAPLAN. The 26th has been stationed with the 8th Division in Germany for the past four years. The Battle Group is commanded by Col. Arlie J. Keue.

Awards Give Incentive To Study

By 87th Inf PIO

The educational development program at the 87th Infantry has achieved several awards.

Most recent is a company level monthly plaque which was won by Combat Support Company for achieving an overall percentage of 98 per cent enrollment of all deficient personnel. Accepting the plaque was Capt. Robert T. Smith Jr., who in turn presented it to company education officer Lt. William W. Francis.

Last month's winner was Company A.

Former Chief of Staff, 8th U. S. Army, Korea

Brig. Gen. Charles Billingslea, former chief of staff of the Eighth U.S. Army in Korea, arrived here Thursday afternoon for duty with the 2nd Infantry Division.

A 1936 graduate of the U. S. Military Academy, West Point, N.Y., Gen. Billingslea returned from Korea in May of this year and since that time he has served in Washington, D. C., as a member of the "Howze Board" reviewing the entire U. S. Army Aviation program.

Gen. Billingslea will assume command of the "Second to None" Indianhead Division later this month upon the departure of Maj. Gen. Charles H. Chase. Gen. Chase has been reassigned to the U. S. Strike Command at MacDill Air Force Base in Tampa, Florida, and is scheduled to assume his new duties on October 1.

Among his many decorations during World War II, Gen. Billingslea has been awarded the Distinguished Service Cross with Oak Leaf Cluster and the Bronze Star Medal with Oak Leaf Cluster.

In November, 1960, he was appointed assistant to the Sen-

M-14 Rifles Will Be Here By December

By December units of the 2nd Infantry Division are scheduled to receive over 11,000 new-7.62 millimeter M-14 rifles in exchange for M-1 rifles presently in use.

The new rifles will be issued to infantry battle groups first. They are already in use in the 22rd Infantry and the 38th Infantry.

Unlike the M-1 rifle, the M-14 is magazine fed. Designed primarily for semi-automatic fire, it is easily converted to fire automatically. When stripped of its magazine and webbed sling, the rifle weighs 8.33 pounds. It weighs 10.22 pounds fully loaded and ready for firing.

Tank Gunnery Qualification Nears for Div. Cavalrymen

BY 7TH CAVALRY PIO

The 7th Cavalry is approaching the final phase of its intensified training in preparation for annual tank gunnery qualification at Fort Stewart, Ga.

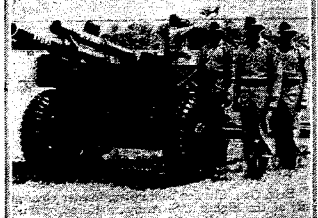
Tank qualification will be followed by a reconnaissance platoon live fire exercise.

Qualification for the 7th Cavalry will be held beginning Thursday and ending October 19.

For the past two weeks a program of instruction in tank gunnery principles and fundamentals has been conducted. The final week of tank gunnery training, being conducted at Fort Benning, will consist of sub-caliber firing on Warner Range.

Visited Fort Stewart

The squadron commander, Lt. Col. Quintus C. Atkinson, accompanied by his executive officer, Maj. Venon H. Ison and Lt. Raiford P. Mullins, the newly assigned S-4 officer, visited Fort Stewart last week to coordinate annual training activities and to arrange for logistical support.



All elements of the "Gary Owen" will move to Fort Stewart, not only to support the tankers for firing, but to run a reconnaissance platoon live fire exercise.

The live fire exercise, written by Maj. Ison and conducted by the 7th Cavalry last April following Exercise SENECA SPEAR, has received high acclaim at the Armor and Artillery Firing Center at Fort Stewart.

The reconnaissance platoon live fire exercise is designed to create a realistic combat situation in which the platoon leader must employ all elements of his platoon using all available sources of fire power in order to accomplish his mission.

Also accompanying the cavalry to Fort Stewart are the tank sections of reconnaissance platoons from the 1st Infantry, 9th Infantry, 23rd Infantry, 87th Infantry and tank sections of the 2nd Engineer Battalion.

Deputy Brigade Commander Attended Army War College Prior to Arrival

Second Division's deputy Brigade commander arrived at the "Indianhead" Division from Carlisle Barracks, Pa., where he attended the Army War College.

Col. William O. Morgan Army War College graduate, is a native of Starkville, Miss. and holds a Bachelor of Science degree in Agriculture from Mississippi State University.

Receiving his commission after taking Reserve Officer Training Corps instruction at Mississippi State University in 1940, Col. Morgan joined the 22nd Infantry stationed at Fort McClellan, Ala.

In 1945 he joined the Caribbean Defense Command and was stationed with an infantry force on one of the island bases leased from the British in the West Indies. By 1946 he had reached the position of base commander there following assignments as an infantry company commander and base executive officer.

His tour in the West Indies was interrupted by a short course in 1944 at the Command and General Staff College, Fort Leavenworth, Kan.

His next assignment took him to Fort Monroe, Va., where he served as G-1 with the U. S. Army Field Forces. He remained there from 1946 to 1949.

During the Korean Conflict the colonel served with the 25th Infantry Division as executive officer in successive assignments with the 35th Infantry and 14th Infantry.

In the Spring of 1952, duty in the Far East continued with an assignment with the G-2 section of the Far East Command, Tokyo, Japan.

Returning to the U. S. in 1954, Col. Morgan joined the Plans and Programs Division of the Office of the Chief of Research and Development, located in the Pentagon. He stayed at this assignment until 1957.

Further schooling called in the Spring of 1958, taking him to Norfolk, Va., and the Armed Forces Staff College.

The colonel's next assignment was with the joint plans division of the Joint Staff, Office of the Commander-in-Chief, Pacific, located in Hawaii.

Following this duty, Col. Morgan attended the Army War College and then joined the 2nd Infantry Division.

23RD'S EXECUTIVE
Lt. Col. Silver

Back to Benning After 11 Yrs., Lt. Col. Silver Joins 23rd Infantry

To the 23rd Infantry's new executive officer, the battle group area looks pretty familiar. It ought to, for Lt. Col. Benjamin S. Silver was stationed here 11 years ago.

At that time Col. Silver was assigned to the 30th Regiment, 3rd Infantry Division, Fort Benning, Georgia, and the 30th's regimental area encompassed some of the buildings now located within the 23rd Infantry's complex.

Joined in August

Col. Silver joined the "We Serve" unit in early August shortly before Exercise SWIFT STRIKE II began. Previously, he had been assigned to the Office of the Director of Army Aviation, Department of the Army, Washington, D. C., a four year tour of duty.

A native of Havre de Grace, Md., Col. Silver enlisted in the Army in May 1942 and was commissioned in March 1944. He served with the 87th Infantry Division in Europe during World War II as a member of the 345th Regiment.

After returning to the United States after the war, he was assigned to the 5th Infantry Division, Fort Campbell, Ky., where he volunteered for liaison flight school in 1946. Following completion of flight training he was assigned for 2½ years with the 25th Division in Japan.

Col. Silver returned to the 11th Airborne Division, Fort Campbell, Ky. and then was assigned to the 3rd Infantry Division, Fort Benning, Ga. In August 1950 he went with this unit to Korea where he served until December 1951 when he was assigned to the 30th Infantry at Fort Benning.

Col. Silver attended the Infantry Officers' Advance Course in 1952 and was then assigned to the 278th Regimental Combat Team, Fort Devens, Mass. His next tour of duty was at the helicopter school, Camp Gary, Texas. The succeeding two years of Col. Silver's military career were spent with the 47th Infantry Regiment, 9th Infantry Division in Europe. He "gyroed" back to the United States with this unit, which was reassigned to Fort Carson, Colorado.

Prior to this Department of the Army assignment at the Pentagon, Col. Silver attended the Command and General Staff College, Fort Leavenworth, Kansas.

Doughboys Avenge Last Year's Defeat With Win Over Marines

Towns Scores With 1:45 Left to Cop Win

BY BILL GARDNER

The Fort Benning Doughboys, scoring the tie-breaking touchdown with 1:45 minutes left in the game, downed the Camp Lejeune Marines, 21-14, before 12,000 football fans in Doughboy Stadium last weekend.

The victory, second for the Doughboys in the 1962 campaign, was particularly sweet, avenging a 27-7 defeat at the hands of the Marines last year.

Tomorrow, Coach Leaton C. Coffield's boys, go to Orlando to take on that city's entry in the Florida Professional Football conference.

Take Over on Downs

The beginning of the end was signaled for the visitors last weekend when Fort Benning took over on downs on the Marines' 42-yard line with 3:59 remaining.

Two plays later, the Doughboys, with two quick five-yard gains by Bobby Towns and Ron Quillen, rolled to a first down on the 32-yard line.

Towns played college ball at Georgia and Quillen at East Tennessee State.

Then Marvin Tibbetts, former Georgia Tech star and Fort Benning's ace quarterback took the ball on a rollout. Seeing no open receivers downfield, he dashed around right end for a 16-yard gain.

Workhorse Wallace Johnson, fullback from Oklahoma University who picked up 69 of the Doughboys' 171 rushing yardage, blasted through the middle of the Marine line, going to the one before he was hauled down.

Towns Scores

Towns capped the drive with a one - yard dash off right tackle, pushing Fort Benning ahead to stay.

Sam Stellatella, a guard from Penn State, kicked the extra point, his third of the game.

The final seconds saw the Marines trying to salvage the game via the airwaves, but the game ended with them some 10 yards short of the midfield stripe.

Fort Benning took the opening kickoff and marched 65 yards for a touchdown with Tibbetts sneaking across with 6:37 minutes remaining in the first quarter.

Johnson, Quillen and Tibbetts carried the brunt of the load during the strictly ground attack.

When the Doughboys scored their second touchdown on a five-yard run by Towns with 9:15 remaining in the first half, the partisan crowd expected something similar to Fort Bennings 61-0 rout of Gordon Military College.

Long Return

An 85-yard punt return by Marine halfback Dan Droze dispelled this vision, and the firedup visitors scored on a six-yard pass from quarterback F. V. Cesare, to end L. B. Manous.

After playing a scoreless third quarter the Marines broke the ice early in the final period on an 11-yard run by E. B. Hatchett, 180-pound halfback.

C. A. Rix, kicked his second extra point, knotting the score at 14 all and setting the stage for Fort Benning's final touchdown.

Strong Defense

The home team dominated first half play, picking up 11 first downs, 102-yards rushing and 43 through the air to one first down for the Marines, seven yards rushing and 32 passing.

Fort Benning's beefy line, anchored by Stellatella, Joe Wendryhoski, ex-University of Illinois guards, and tackles Allan Everhart, Appalachian State, and Lindell Lovelletta, University of Illinois, largely accounted for the victory over the smaller Marines.

Poor Hitting Whips Post In Tourney

A case of the first game jitters and the inability to hit in their second game eliminated Fort Benning's Softball Team from The Third Army tournament held Sept. 10-14 at Fort Jackson, S. C.

Fort Jackson won the tournament, defeating Fort Campbell, Ky., 5-0, in the finals.

In Fort Benning's opening game at Fort Jackson's Darby Field, Fort Gordon, Ga., broke a 2-2 deadlock in the top of the sixth inning and hung on for a narrow 5-4 victory. Five Benning errors played a major role in the Gordon win.

After the Fort Gordon leadoff man opened the sixth inning with a walk, the next batter drove out a single. Fort Benning then committed an error and both runners scored.

The Gordon leftfielder who had hit the ground ball then scored the fifth run as Fort Benning committed a throwing error.

Fort Benning had moved to a 2-1 lead at the end of the first inning, then became tied up after Gordon pushed across a run in the fourth.

Fort Benning gathered six hits in the contest and moved a game down in the loser's bracket. Star pitcher, Thomas Awtrey, of Company A, The Infantry School Battalion, suffered the defeat.

Fort Rucker, Ala., dealt Fort Benning its second loss in the double elimination tournament.

The Albamans scored a lone run in the first and another in the sixth inning to get the win.

The Fort Rucker allowed only three scattered hits in going the distance and no Fort Benning runner advanced past second base. Eight Fort Benning strikeouts were recorded.

Rucker scored the first run on a sacrifice fly and the second when it stole home on a heads-up play.

WATCH SLICE ON DOWNHILL LIE . . . On downhill lies, the trick is to loft the ball and avoid a slice. Because the weight shifts more to the left foot, open the stance; flex the right knee slightly; play the ball a bit back of center. Use a more lofted club than you normally would use for distance. Hit down into ball.

AVERETTS POND BEING REFILLED

The drain pipe on Averetts pond was closed this week and the pond is now being refilled. The pond will be restocked this year, and it is hoped that it will once again become a fine fishing area on the reservation.

DOVE SEASON OPEN

Last Saturday marked the beginning of another dove season. Although the shooting was slow, it is hoped that with the coming of cooler weather shooting will improve. Dove hunters are requested to consult the Daily Bulletin as to the times the dove fields will be open. This information can be received also by calling the Fish and Game Association at 545-6028.

Just a reminder to hunters on the post. Dove season is just the first of many fine hunting seasons soon to start on the post. If you have not gotten your hunting license you are urged to do so as soon as possible so you will be ready when the other seasons open. Also hunters are reminded that all shotguns must be registered with the provost marshal.

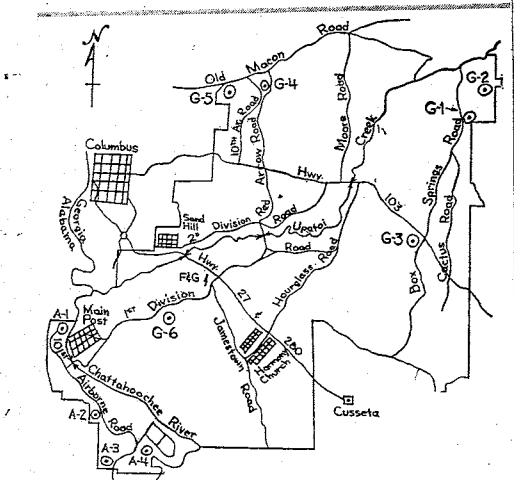
Nation's Top Teams Open 1962 Season

By PFC Peter Shough



Last Saturday marked the beginning of the 1962 football season, but tomorrow is the day the country's major college teams swing into action. Several of last year's top ten performers go into action to see if they can duplicate or improve their '61 record.

This area should see some of the country's best football when Alabama and Georgia bump heads in Southeastern Conference play. Although Georgia should be a push over for the Crimson Tide, many feel that Alabama can not repeat as national champions. Some even wonder if it is possible for them to repeat SEC champions.

This season the Crimson Tide will employ their talents against what should be a greatly improved Tennessee team. Coach Bowden Wyatt's volunteers could develop into championship form this year.

A game that could chalk up a tally in the Alabama losers column is the Nov. 10 Miami - Alabama. Miami's great quarterback George Mira should be even greater with eight games under his belt. A victory would be a feather in Alabama's cap but a defeat would certainly knock the wind out of those national championship sails.

The Crimson Tide is lucky they won't face either Louisiana State or Mississippi this year. Both of these teams will run-off with honors somewhere in the nation's top five.

DOVE FIELDS . . . Outlined on the above map are the 10 fields maintained by the post Fish and Game Association. The fields will be identified by signs lettered A-1 through A-4 for those located in the Alabama portion of the post and G-1 through G-6 for those in the Georgia portion. The signs will be located on the nearest main roads adjacent to the fields. The season, which opened Sept. 15 in Georgia, does not open until Oct. 1 in Alabama. Hunters are asked to use standard load shells only.

MIDAS MEANS MUFFLERS

The word really gets around. No matter where you go from coast to coast, you'll find that even smart motorists think of mufflers, they think of Midas. Midas means guarantee. Midas means fast installation—just fifteen minutes. Midas means free insta-alert—there's no charge for it and it's simply great. Midas means mufflers.

Bill Tasker and Hatchett picked up 25 and 24, respectively, but the Marines' outstanding player, particularly on defense was D. S. Fitts.

DOUBLE RE-UP . . . Sgt. Carl Brownell (R) and his twin brother, Sp5 Paul Brownell, serve cake to the man who had just sworn them in for six additional years in the Army, Lt. Col. Wallis E. They started their careers by volunteering for the draft when they were 19 years old.

New Compensation Bill Signed

WASHINGTON (AFPS)—Servicemen — past, present and future — will share the increased disability rates recently passed by Congress and signed by the President.

The legislation provides a boost in compensation for men who incur a disability as the result of military duty.

Generally, provisions in the bill continue to give higher payments to men whose disabilities occur during wartime. In line with this, peacetime veterans receive 80 per cent of the wartime rate except in situations where the disability is from "warlike or extra hazardous duty."

As an example, any man hurt in South Viet-Nam fighting whose ailments prove to be permanent is entitled to monthly compensation based on wartime rates provided the disability is rated 10 per cent or higher.

The higher disability rating would get higher payment. A veteran with 10 per cent disability would get $20 instead of $19 a month under the wartime formula, while the peacetime rate for the same degree of disability would be $18 instead of the current $15.

The rates also are substantially increased in cases of blindness, loss of both hands or feet and certain other cases.

A veteran totally disabled in peacetime service who requires an attendant would receive an increase from the present $480 to $580 a month. If the same individual received his disability under wartime conditions his payment will increase from $600 to $725 under the bill.

Dental Health Series

Toothbrush Valuable Friend in Field Duty

By Maj. Charles W. Dobson
Preventive Dentistry Officer

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The following is the 17th in a series of articles presented in the interests of better dental health).

When large groups of troops return from a field training exercise, the Army Dental Clinics serving them are flooded with patients complaining of "bleeding gums."

Wartime experience has proven this condition can disable large numbers of men. Is this evidence of a flaw in the combat preparedness of our Army? Why is it that in our modern, well-fed, finely trained Army, a few days of peacetime field training makes dental casualties of some of our healthiest soldiers?

The answer — some of our soldiers mistakenly feel they can't brush their teeth in the field!

Actually, "bleeding gums" is a symptom of the first stages of periodontal disease, commonly known as "trenchmouth," affecting the gingival (gum) tissues and the bone that hold teeth in place. It starts as bleeding of the gums and through the years destroys the supporting structures of the teeth until they become loose and have to be removed.

Since periodontal disease is the greatest cause of loss of teeth about age 35, it is a serious disease, and one we should all know about.

Many Factors

There are many factors which help cause or aggravate periodontal disease. The most important is irritation. Imagine how irritated your eye would get if you packed sand under your eyelid and left it all day. The gums are irritated by food and also hard deposits called calculus. Our gums don't have the sensitive nerve endings that our eyes do, so we often allow these irritants to stay under our gums, and this leads to periodontal disease.

The important thing to remember is that periodontal disease can be prevented by practicing two rules.

Brush your teeth carefully, immediately after eating.

Have your teeth cleaned at least once a year by a dentist or hygienist.

And this brings us back to the soldiers who thought they couldn't brush their teeth in the field. If we can repair vehicles, use telephones, cook meals, we can brush teeth. The only necessary equipment are a toothbrush and a canteen of water, and every good soldier will carry both.

Education Plan Open To Civilians

Civilian employees of the Department of Defense may enroll in Army extension courses, officials at Fort Benning have announced.

Employees whose official duties or prospective duties require information available through the courses may apply. Approval will be made on a need-to-know basis.

Employees interested in enrolling in extension courses are asked to contact their supervisors.

NIKE BASES

Nike installations are deployed throughout the United States in defense of industrial, thickly populated areas.

Chaplain Landsberg was graduated from Adelphi College with a B.A. degree, and Columbia University with an M.A. degree.

Chaplain Landsberg received his theological training at Hebrew Union College, Jewish Institute of Religion, in New York City where he obtained both a bachelor's and a master's degree in Hebrew literature.

He has served as rabbi at Temple Sinai, Amityville, N.Y., and Temple Beth-El, at Somerville, N.J.

Chaplain Landsberg was commissioned Feb. 2, 1960, at Brooklyn, N.Y. He entered active service Aug. 8.

He attended the first phase of the basic chaplains course at Chaplains School, Fort Slocum, N.Y., in 1960 and the second phase just prior to coming here.

Management Award Won By TIC G-4

An annual award for outstanding achievement in management improvement here during the 1962 fiscal year was recently presented to The Infantry Center's G-4 Section.

Accepting the trophy for the section was Col. Dale D. Dixon, logistics officers. Brig. Gen. John E. Kelly, deputy commanding general of TIC, presented the award on behalf of Maj. Gen. Ben Harrell, commanding general.

A 9.4 per cent participation rate and the establishment of a central holding facility which resulted in savings of $330,000 of installation consumer funds were the two factors responsible for the section's winning achievement.

Present Certificates

During the ceremony two quarterly award certificates for management improvement were presented. An award for achieving the greatest dollar benefits went to The Infantry School. During the fourth quarter, the school made improvements, resulting in monetary benefits of $156,617.

Col. J. G. Cornett of Fayetteville, Ark., chief of the school's Academic Staff, accepted the certificate.

The other award for the fourth quarter was presented the Safety Section, G-4, for the highest per cent participation, 17 per cent.

Accepting the award was Norman M. Evans.

UN Day Meal Being Planned

WASHINGTON (ANS) — The Army will serve an international meal in its messes on United Nations Day, October 24, in support of the "international meal" project sponsored by the U.S. Committee for the United Nations.

The menu may be used by cafeterias, clubs and a home, as well as in the mess halls, and will feature foods representing 20 countries.

Jewish Personnel Preparing for Holy Days

Jewish personnel here will celebrate High Holy Days during September and October.

Rosh Hashannah, the New Year, will be observed from sunset Friday, Sept. 28 to sunset Sunday, Sept. 30, and Yom Kippur, the day of Atonement, from sunset Sunday, Oct. 7, to sunset Monday, Oct. 8.

Services scheduled at the Post Jewish Center Bldg. 2071, include Eve of New Year, 8 p.m. Friday, Sept. 28; New Year, First Day, 9 a.m. and 6:30 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 29; New Year, Second Day, 9 a.m. Sunday, Sept. 30; Eve of Day of Atonement, 9:30 a.m. Monday, Oct. 8.

The special services have been arranged through The Infantry Center Chaplains Section and the National Jewish Welfare Board.

Services at the Jewish Center will be conducted by Chaplain (1st Lt.) Alfred B. Landsberg, post Jewish chaplain. He will be assisted by Maj. Edward C. West.

Arrange Hospitality

The Jewish Welfare Board Armed Services Committee has arranged home hospitality in Columbus and Atlanta for post personnel during the Holy Days.

In charge of hospitality in Columbus is Dr. Dave Berman and in Atlanta, Leon Goldberg. Personnel desiring home hospitality are asked to telephone PFC Harvey A. Bairbatz, 545-2725.

Unit commanders are urged to grant leave and passes to Jewish personnel desiring to participate in the observance of the Holy Days.

The ten days from Rosh Hashanah through Yom Kippur are known as the Ten days of Repentence. During this time, Jewish personnel engaged in soul searching, confession of sins and communion with God. The observance includes prayers for peace and for the welfare of all mankind.

The ancient Shofar (ram's horn) is sounded during Rosh Hashanah services. Used in Biblical times to sound a warning to the people, the Shofar today symbolizes a warning to repent.

FIRING HANGAR

A new horizontal concrete firing hangar for the Atlas ICBM has been devised by the Air Force and is now operational.

Some Burn $$; Rodent Nibbles It

Somewhere on this vast military reservation lurks a squirrel with a taste for U.S. government paper and ink.

Victim of this rodent's idiosyncrasy is Sgt. John C. Smoyer of the Infantry Center's G-1 section.

Returning from a 12-day leave, Sgt. Smoyer went to the Fort Benning post office to pick up his accumulated mail. In his box he found several magazines and a note requesting him to see the postmaster.

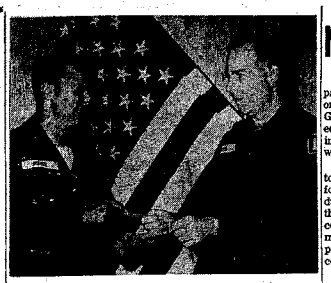
The postmaster greeted the sergeant with a tattered envelope. His allotment check, $176 worth, had been nibbled upon by the fugitive squirrel which had somehow gained entry to the mail box.

While postal officials continue the search for the squirrel, finance personnel are making arrangements to replace the check.

Quartermaster Post Is Taken By Maj. Johnson

Maj. Daniel L. Johnson has been assigned deputy quartermaster at The Infantry Center.

He succeeds Maj. Clyde W. White who has been acting as deputy quartermaster and will be assigned to the Adjutant General Section.



Maj. Johnson arrived here from Germany.

A former radio announcer in St. Augustine, Fla., and studio engineer in Jacksonville, he entered the Army in January, 1946.

He and his wife, Christine, and their 22-month-old twin sons, live on the post.

TOP SOLDIER . . . Pvt. Larry R. Robinson, Company D, 69th Armor, Patton, was chosen as Soldier-of-the-Month for September in the 1st Armored Rifle Battalion, 58th Infantry. Pvt. Robinson, an armor crewman, was chosen on the basis of his personal appearance, knowledge of his job, and superior military bearing. For his efforts, Pvt. Robinson will receive a three-day pass and a subscription to The Armor Magazine.

GIVES TO CAA . . . Receiving his certificate of participation in the Community Activities Association Fund Drive is Col. Richard W. Keyes (R), commander of the 1st Infantry Brigade, and drive chairman. Col. Keyes' donation is accepted by 2nd Lt. Gerald F. Meyer of Milwaukee, keyman for the brigade. During the drive which continues through Nov. 9, team captains from each command, staff section of The Infantry Center and The Infantry School will, through their keymen, canvass personnel to obtain their goal, 100 per cent participation. A guide line for contributions in the form of "fair shares" will be available for personnel in their respective organizations.

1st Lt. A. D. Ribak Assigned to School

First Lt. Abraham D. Ribak has been assigned to The Infantry School.

After completing a three-week training course, he will be an instructor in the Weapons Department.

Before being assigned here he was a member of the 7th Infantry Division in Korea.

Mr. Heberling Receives High Army Award

The presentation of the Department of the Army's second highest civilian award to George E. Heberling highlighted ceremonies here Tuesday in which 18 other presentations were also made.

Heberling received the Meritorious Civilian Service Award for exemplary performance of duty and technical ability in the dual capacity of program coordinator, G-3, Army Command Management System program, and executive officer, G-3 Section.

Brig. Gen. John E. Kelly, deputy commanding general of The Infantry Center, made the presentations.

Three people from the Engineer Section were given Certificates of Achievement upon retirement.

Among these were Walton Brooks, with more than 34 years service here; James L. Segler, an operating engineer with more than 26 years, and James M. Kirkpatrick, an electric lineman lead foreman with more than 23 years.

Monetary awards were given to three employees who submitted suggestions in the Army's Suggestion Program.

Two of these, Milton F. Gallops and Thomas H. Rainey, work with the Engineers.

Thomas M. Rainey earned $95 for proposing the fabrication of a portable switch assembly on the H-34C helicopter.

Outstanding job ratings were presented to Marvin E. McDaniel and James B. McKoy, Engineers; Miss Elsie E. McDaniel and Morris C. Long, both of the Supply and Cold Storage Section, Pal Daniel, Martin Army Hospital, and Ellis W. Davis, Commissary.

Civilians, Military Recognized for Service

Checks totaling $215 were presented to three civilian employees here recently for meritorious service.

Two of the checks were for sustained performance of duty and one was for the adoption of a time and money-saving suggestion.

Also awarded were eight letters of appreciation, one letter of commendation and five outstanding work ratings. The awards were made through the Incentive awards Committee of The Infantry Center Civilian Personnel Section.

Mrs. Leo G. Perkins, a clerk in the evaluation section, office of the secretary, The Infantry School, received $100 for sustained superior performance of duty from May 21, 1961, to May 31, 1962. She also was given an outstanding rating for her work.

Mrs. D. H. Jackson, a clerk-typist in the Weapons Department, also was given a $100 check for sustained performance of duty from June 1, 1961, to May 31, 1962. She was also given an outstanding rating.

Film Suggestion

A $5 check was presented to Bobby L. Brown for the adoption of his suggestion to use an improved method of combining film positives in the reproduction of maps. Adoption of his suggestion will result in savings in time and money in the Army Field Printing Plant, where he is a film assembler-stripper.

Letters of appreciation were given to Miss Ruth Wesley, a librarian, for proposing that the faculty and staff of TIS be encouraged to contribute quotations to TIS library for its card file.

Capt. Robert H. Clark, Special Subjects Department, TIS, received a letter for suggesting that a "yield right of way" sign be placed in the intersection of Red Arrow and 1st Division Roads. He is an instructor on the training committee.

Miss Charlotte Stafford, a clerk-stenographer in the Department of Nonresident Instruction, also received a letter for proposing the use of an improved method of posting changes in addresses of TIS students. Adoption of her plan will result in man-hour savings.

Billy R. Weaver was awarded a letter for his suggestion that signs be erected giving the location of the identification section of The Student Brigade. Adoption of his idea will aid dependents in locating the building. He is employed in The Student Brigade as a personnel clerk.

Milton L. Lenior was commended for his suggestion that drapes be used to provide a better working area of darkness when personnel are doing projection work. Priviously, all lights in the area had to be turned off when someone operated the projector.

Illustrators to Visit

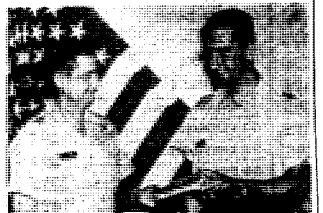
Manford D. Metcalf received a letter for suggesting that illustrators be allowed to visit classes where their charts are used. Attendance of the classes will show the illustrators how their work is used and how it can be improved when necessary.

Lenoir and Metcalf are supervisors in the visual aids section of the Editorial and Pictorial Office.

William E. Taylor, employed in the Army Field Printing Plant as a platemaker, was commeaded for suggesting an improvement in filing negatives in the plant. He urged that all material for one job be placed in a folder after the job is completed. Increased efficiency will result from the adoption of his suggestions.

A Letter of Commendation will be presented at a later date to Carl A. Keth for the adoption of his suggestion. He proposed a card system to maintain control over work processed through the printing plant, where he is a supervisor of cold-type composing machine operation.

Adoption of his idea will provide the section chief a ready reference for checking the status of priority and other work.



A rating of outstanding was given to Alan C. Ramsay, a supervisor in the Editorial and Pictorial Office, for the period of May 1, 1961, to April 30, 1962.

PFC Michael Wityk received a Letter of Appreciation for proposing the procurement of aprons to protect the clothing of employees. He is an illustrator in the Editorial and Pictorial Office.

Arthur F. Blair, a classification coordinator in the Operations Office of TIS, also received an outstanding rating for the period April 1, 1961, to March 31, 1962.

Miss Beverly G. Goins, a supply supervisor in the Operations Office, will receive an outstanding rating at a later date.

The certificates, all signed by Brig. Gen. Royal Reynolds, Jr., assistant commandant of TIS, were presented in the various sections and offices by Col. J. G. Cornett, chief of the Academic Staff, TIS.

175mm Gun Is Accepted

The Army Materiel Command has accepted the first of the Army's new "more punch per pound" generation of self-propelled artillery.

The Pacific Car and Foundry Company, Renton, Wash., delivered the first production model of the M-107, a self-propelled 175mm "Long Tom" weighing just 60,000 pounds.

Also being produced at an adjoining production line is the M-110 eight-inch self-propelled howitzer.

The M-107 is a new gun with a 30-foot barrel which can hurl a shell accurately to ranges in excess of 20 miles. Compared to the M-55 self - propelled 155mm gun which it replaces, the M-107 weighs about as much but delivers a much heavier projectile nearly twice as far.

More significant than the new 175 mm gun is the vehicle. The same chassis can carry the "Long Tom" or the M-110 eight-inch self-propelled howitzer, or be finished as an armored wrecker. Its new features constitute a breakthrough in the design of combat vehicles.

Other innovations developed for the vehicle are the "lock-out" and gun control devices. The "lock-out" device prevents when the guns are fired. It eliminates the spring in the tracks, in effect converting the tracks to solid platforms which transmit the recoil force directly into the ground on which the vehicle rests. This permits the weight of the vehicle to be cut almost in-half without impairing the action of the gun.

The gun control system utilizes recoil energy to adjust the tube and power loading devices, saving tremendous wear on the battery of the vehicle.

Both the M-107 and M-110 are air-transportable in a C-133 aircraft and their diesel engines are capable of cruising 450 miles without refueling their 200-gallon fuel tanks. In comparison, a gasoline engine-powered model would have required 450 gallons of fuel for the same distance.

Both have top speed of 34 miles per hour, can negotiate a 60 per cent grade, bridge seven-foot trenches and cross vertical obstacles up to 40 inches.

Lt. Smith Honor Grad Of 100C

Second Lt. Turner T. Smith Jr., graduated Infantry Officer Orientation Course, Class Number One, 2nd Student Battalion, The Student Brigade, recently with top honors. Lt. Smith completed the eight-week course of instruction with a 95.6 percent rating.

Brig. Gen. Royal Reynolds, Jr., assistant commandant of The Infantry School introduced the guest speaker for the exercises, Col. Clifford P. Hannum, 1st Battle Group Commander, 2nd Infantry Division. Col. Hannum, speaking to the graduates, stressed the importance of being a good leader, knowing subordinates and superiors.

"If however," the Colonel stated, "you sincerely believe you have a different point of view, of interest to your superiors never hesitate to bring it to their attention."

Col. Hannun further pointed out that knowing the likes and dislikes of the men is not enough, but knowing how to deal with them makes a successful leader.

EM Benefit Association Pays Refund

WASHINGTON (AFPS)—The Armed Forces Enlisted Personnel Benefit Association, just finishing its fifth year of operations, has declared a $51 refund to its insured members.

Increased membership during the past fiscal year, along with a favorable mortality experience, was credited with the size of the refund which exceeds that of the past two years.

The association has Department of Defense approval to enroll members throughout the Armed Forces. Allotments for payment of the insurance premiums are authorized.

All enlisted personnel in good health and on active duty are permitted to join except for six-month trainees. Membership and insurance may normally be continued into retirement and until the member reaches age 65.

TIC Will Host 33 Allied Officers

THE ARMY'S BOSSES . . . President John F. Kennedy is pictured with Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor (L), who will become the new Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and Gen. Earle G. Wheeler (R), who will become the new Army Chief of Staff. Gen. Taylor, a former Army Chief of Staff, succeeds Gen. Lyman L. Lemnitzer who will become Commander-in-Chief of U.S. Forces, Europe, Nov. 1. Gen. Wheeler follows Gen. George H. Decker who retires Sept. 30.

Officers from eight countries will arrive here Wednesday as part of an orientation tour of Army schools by the Allied group.

Heading the contingent are Maj. Gen. Aman Mikheel Andom, commanding general, 3rd Imperial Ethiopian Division; Maj. Gen. Thai Quang Hoang and Brig. Gen. Mai Huu So Xuan of Viet nam; Brig. Gen. Kusno Utomo, commanding general, Training Command, Indonesia, and Brig. Desmond P. O'Reilly, commander, Anti-Aircraft Brigade, Pakistan.

They are scheduled to land at the Muscogee County Airport at 1:45 p.m. Wednesday.

After stopping at their quarters, they will be taken on a tour of the post and The Infantry Museum.

On Thursday the foreign officers will be briefed on the history and organization of The Infantry Center, the organization and mission of The Infantry School, the utilization of the reservation in support of the two activities, and Infantry organization and tactics.

Will Observe Demonstrations

Later the same day they will observe demonstrations on Artillery organization, of an armored vehicle launched bridge, and techniques of machine gun fire.

An extensive briefing and tour of TIS's Airborne Air Mobility Department and training facilities will begin the day's tour Friday.

Following this introduction to American paratrooper training the group will witness demonstrations on anti - tank guided missile systems demolition techniques and scout dogs.

A reception and dinner in the Supper Club annex of the Main Officer's Open Mess will close the day.

A tour of Lawson Army Aviation Command and airfield is planned for Saturday morning.

At 12:15 p.m. they are slated to depart from the county airport. Their next stop is the Army Artillery and Missile Center and School at Fort Sill, Okla.

Visitors Listed

In addition to the four general officers, other members of the group include from Jordan, Col. Moh'd Khalil Abded Dayem, commanding officer, 6th Artillery Regiment, and Capt. Naif Abdul Razzak Kassem.

72 Canadian Army Officers To Tour Post

Seventy-two members of the Canadian Army Staff College and 23 members of the Canadian Army Senior Officer's School, both in Kingston, Ontario, will arrive here Sunday at 1:20 p.m. to begina two-day tour of the post.

Heading the group will be the Staff College commandant, Brigadier Donald C. Cameron, and Col. George J. H. Wattsford, commandant of the Senior Officer's School.

An honors ceremony at 8:15 a.m. Monday on Chapel Field for Brig. Cameron will begin the official tour.

To See Airborne

Following the ceremony, the group will go to Eubanks Field to see a demonstration by members of The Infantry School's Airborne-Air Mobility Department.

Next on the agenda are talks on the history and organization of The Infantry Center and the organization and mission of TIS.

Before lunch they will see student officers going through the leaders reaction course.

That afternoon they will observe a demonstration on the capabilities and limitations of ground mobility means and receive a briefing by the Infantry Combat Developments Agency on future concepts and equipment.

Tuesday morning the visitors will spend two hours seeing demonstrations by the Infantry Board.

The visit will end that afternoon with a demonstration of Infantry weapons.

Oct. 15 We Turn 'Green'

Start airing out your "greens," men. You start wearing them again on Oct. 15.

In compliance with AR-670-6, all posts in the Third Army area will make the change at that time.

Personnel who have received promotions, demotions or acquired extra inches around their midsection, should begin now preparing their winter uniforms for the change-over date.

The Infantry Center G-1 section suggests that personnel transferring to other duty stations in the near future check AR-670-6 to insure they arrive at their new posts in proper uniform.

Post Firers Gain Positions On U.S. Shooting Squad

Some 94 Americans from all walks of life will pit their marksmanship skill against top world competitors from approximately 50 foreign nations during the World Shooting championships at Cairo, Egypt, Oct. 11 to 20.

United States representatives chosen from two points of tryout "promise to be the strongest team the U. S. has fielded since World War II," team captain Col. Thomas A. Sharpe, assistant chief of the Training Division, Office of the deputy chief of staff for military operations, Department of the Army, Washington, D. C., said.

"The U. S. finished second in the 1958 world shoot held in Moscow," Col. Sharpe pointed out. "But in trials, team members have exceeded the world records in all except two events with one of these being a tie."

Many From MTU

The Infantry Center, which hosted half of the world tryouts Sept. 12-19, saw 18 of the 34 representatives chosen.

Of the 18 slots up for grabs at The Infantry Center, the Marksmanship Training Unit, counted 10 of her marksmen chosen.

The five Running Deer representatives, all MTU shooters, are 1st Lt. Willis L. Powell, world Running Deer double runs champion; SFC Loyd G. Crow Jr., world single run champ; SSgt. Norman L. Skarpness, 1st Lt. John W. Torbush and 1st Lt. John R. Foster.

Three-time national pistol champion SFC William B. Blankenship, heads the list of free pistol entries followed by Air Force Capt. Franklin C. Green, the national International-type free pistol champion; SFC Lloyd Burchett and MSgt. Frederick Schaser, and Air Force TSgt. Bernard A. Stoltman.

Armed Forces International rapid fire pistol champion, Capt. Cecil L. Wallis MTU, along with Marine Corps Capt. William W. McMillan Jr., world and Olympic rapid fire pistol champion, will represent the U. S. in the rapid fire pistol category with Air Force Capt. Thomas D. Smith III, Army Sgt. James H. McNally.

Marianne Jensen, and Janet S. Friddell will go to Cairo, as representatives in the small

'Doughboys' Meet Navy Tomorrow

The Fort Benning Doughboys bring their 1962 football campaign back home tomorrow night after a victorious trip to Orlando, Fla.

Fresh from a 21-7 victory over the Orlando Broncos, the Doughboys will attempt to avenge a 12-6 defeat suffered at the hands of Pensacola (Fla.) Navy Goshawks last year. The Goshawks are out to protect their unblemished 3-0 record for this season.

Kick-off is slated for 8 p.m. and another capacity crowd is expected.

Hike in Fund Drive Percentages Expected; Officials Urge Support

By Spt Ron Claxton

With payday only a few days away, Community Association Fund Drive officials are looking forward to a big percentage hike in their participation figures for the annual post-wide drive.

"We, as members of the Fort Benning community, should assume our 'full citizens share' of support of the health, welfare and recreational needs of the community. There is much personal satisfaction derived from exercising such community responsibilities," commented Maj. Jean P. Doerr, drive project officer and commander of the 1st Battalion, The Infantry Center Troop Command.

Single Contribution

Continuing, he emphasized, "This we can accomplish through the Community Activities Association Fund Drive which provides us with an opportunity to participate in many recognized voluntary organizations by a single contribution."

"The benefits of our contributions," he went on, "are Drive chairman Col. Richard W. Keyes, commander of the 1st Infantry Brigade, said the CAA fund supports post welfare, health, and youth activities, and makes a substantial contribution to the United Givers Fund in the adjacent civilian areas.

The drive, which continues bore rifle events. Miss Friddell was women's smallbore rifle champion this year at Camp Perry, Ohio.

WAF Wins

Women's Air Force 1st Lt. Gail N. Liberty, women's national pistol champion at Camp Perry, and Trudy Schlernetzauer, runner-up to Lt. Liberty, and Camp Perry .22 caliber pistol champion, will represent the U. S. in the women's International centerfire pistol events.

Lackland Air Force Base, Tex., which hosted the other half of the competition saw MTU finers again take the lion's share of places with nine of 16 to their credit.

Skeet gunning saw A2C Thomas J. Heffron lead all American shooters for top berth followed by Aviations Electronics Chief Kenneth L. Pendergras, civilians Robert D. Rodale, and Edwin C. L. Calhoun.

Marine Corps WO James E. Hill broke up the Army's sweep of the smallbore rifle events allowing only four of the five places to the Army. Cpl. Gary L. Anderson, Capt. Verle F. Wright Jr., Capt. Tommy G. Pool and 1st Lt. Presley W. Kendall are the four.

Capt. Daniel B. Puckel and 1st Lt. John T. Bertva took the free rifle berths.

In women's positions Mrs. Charlotte Berkenkamp of Chatsworth, Calif., took the only clay pigeon slot. Mrs. Marjorie C. Annan of Aspen, Colo., took the Skeet position.

Representatives were selected by the International Shooting Committee of the National Rifle Association which sponsored the world tryouts, conducted by the Continental Army Command.

Land Army Ultimate Weapon in Conflict

At various stages in the history of warfare, new and supposedly "ultimate" weapons —including the sling shot, the spear, long bow, the musket, cannon, machine gun, tank, airplane, lethal gas, and atomic weapons—have been introduced to the battlefield. But in each case, they have soon been recognized for what they are: tools for the men of the essential force, the land Army.

Atomic weapons, for example, have provided vastly increased fire power for the Army, ideally suited to exploitation by small, flexible, swift-reacting and highly mobile units capable of rapid massing or dispersal, operating with the support of either nuclear or non-nuclear firepower. Such operations, in turn, have been communications and mobility.

Today, the security of our nation rests heavily on the Army's ability to deter war, to assist our Allies and, when necessary, to strike effectively, swiftly, and with a measured response to any form of aggression. The trends in international conditions and in military developments have again demonstrated that the Army stands in the forefront as the Army's strength and talents are in demand in all corners of the world. As in the days of the old West, the Army is protecting the frontier. In the last century, it cleared the way for peace and progress over a large portion of our nation. Now, in conjunction with its sister Services and our Allies, it serves to secure a much broader frontier—that of the entire Free World.

In Thailand, Viet Nam, Berlin, Korea and throughout the world, some one million men and women in the uniform of the U. S. Army are visible proof that sophisticated weaponry does not provide the only or ultimate answer to our defense needs. To deter aggression across the full spectrum of warfare requires a strong, flexible, land power—a power which can defeat enemy forces in ground combat and gain control of its land and its people. Providing that land power is the basic task of the Army—Active, National Guard, and Reserve, the ONE ARMY — Essential Force for freedom.

CG's High Holy Days Message

I extend best wishes for the coming High Holy Days to all Jewish personnel and their families.

As in the past, the great festivals of Rosh Hashanah and Yom Kippur will be observed at Fort Benning in complete awareness of their solemn significance. May this time be one of rededication to the promotion of goodwill and brotherhood among all mankind.

May God bless you and your loved ones as you observe this High Holy Season.

Urges Contest Entries

Each year the Freedoms Foundation Letter Awards Program provides a unique opportunity for each of us to think deeply about some aspect of the great cause which we serve and to express those thoughts in writing. The men and women of the Armed Forces whose letters are judged to have contributed most to a better understanding of the specified theme are accorded significant honors and tangible awards. The subject of the Letter Awards Program for 1962 is "My Freedoms and My Responsibilities." Through normal command channels and other means you will be informed of the details of this activity.

I urge each member of the Army to participate in this worthy program.

Freedom's Meaning -- Put It in Letter Form

We service people are great ones for writing letters, especially when we're overseas. We write home to the family, to friends, to relatives, describing the sights we've seen, the people we've met. And once a year, if we're really on the ball, we write a letter to some people most of us have never met.

Their address? — Freedom's Foundation, Valley Forge, Pa. This year they're asking to hear from us on the topic of "My Freedoms and My Responsibilities" in a letter of from 100 to 500 words. And of course, as in the past, there are incentives in the form of 101 cash awards with the top winner bringing the writer a sizeable $1,000.

The money's a nice reason for taking part in the Letter Awards Program, of course. But there's another. When we sit down and ask ourselves what are the freedoms some of us are apt to take for granted and what are our responsibilities as service people to defend them — then we may see the role we play in a new light.

Our fighting men should know the positive values of the freedoms which the Nation is calling them to serve.

The words are Defense Secretary McNamara's. They give us a springboard from which to launch our personal expression of the freedoms that make Americans the most fortunate people in the world — and the duties that are inherent in them.

Let's beat that Nov. 1 deadline by writing now! (AFPS)

CHAPLAIN'S CORNER

God Made a Tree

By Chaplain (Col.) Silas E. Decker
TIC Chaplain

Someone has said, "Only God can make a tree."

A tree reaching maturity is a wonderful thing. In northern California is located the famous Redwood Forest. This forest is one of the great wonders of nature. Some of those Redwood giants were big when Augustus Caesar was building the Roman Empire. These great products of nature must be seen, firsthand, to be appreciated.

A first impression at a first visit is that they are impossible; but there they stand.

They were no accident, for they are the results of the soil from which they gained their strength and statue, the climate providing moisture, temperature, sunshine, and the seed from which they grew. In addition, they are now protected by our laws.

Our military community at Fort Benning may, in relation to our people, especially young people, compare to the environment which produced the Redwoods, for we have the basic tools, a friendly community, the means of professional and spiritual growth at Fort Benning to produce outstanding citizens from among our children.

Also, this community has the resources which can assist the young soldier and young officer to further develop their native abilities and professional skills.

If the continued growth of our people is to be assured we must have older adults, men and women, who will volunteer to work in community welfare activities, such as, the religious, P-TA, youth activities and Special Services programs. Will you volunteer as a community worker to help this post continue to develop talented leaders?

Liberty and Communism

The Right to Compete

Under the free enterprise economic system, sometimes called democratic capitalism, every citizen has the right to take his savings and start a business for himself. His savings then become his capital for this business venture.

He also has the right to invest their savings is his enterprise. Whether his new business is the production of economic goods or the rendering of services, he enters into competition with other businessmen and corporations.

While businessmen hope to reap profits, the consumer receives many benefits from this competition in the form of lower prices and better quality of goods and services. Quality are directly derived from the right of businessmen to compete.

In totalitarian regimes, including communism, there is no economic competition. Such systems lack the many benefits derived from competition in democratic regimes.

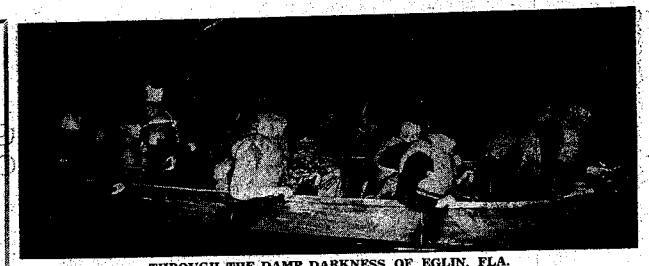
Communism destroys competition in economic life and substitutes monopoly. The government, in the control of an elite party, monopolies all means of production and good and services and even controls consumption.

In the Soviet Union, the Communist Party developed the technique of economic planning in order to guide, year by year, the complicated operation of production and distribution of goods and services throughout a vast empire.

The first Five-Year Plan covered the years 1928 - 1933. The sixth Five-Year Plan, for the years 1956-1960, was replaced in 1958 by a Seven-Year Plan (1959-1965).

Unquestionably, the industrial progress of the Soviet Union under economic planning has been remarkable. For instance, the annual production of steel increased from four million tons in 1928 to 49 million tons in 1956.

On the other hand, the Soviet economic planning system is thoroughly undemocratic.



The Five-Year Plans required (as does the current Seven-Year Plan) the existence of a police state and the loss of many of the liberties that people in democratic countries greatly prize. Among these lost liberties, of course, are free initative and the right to compete.

THROUGH THE DAMP DARKNESS OF EGLIN, FLA.
Ranger Candidates Wind Way During Navigation Problem

Ranger...History's Rumpled Victor

"Dirtiest, most contemptible, cowardly dogs — and the worst soldiers in the universe," commented British Gen. James Wolfe, conqueror of Quebec during the French and Indian Wars over 200 years ago, about the American Rangers.

To this cultured gentleman, a product of the finest military schooling in the British Empire, the Rangers in their sweat-stained hunting shirts and Indian style leggins probably represented anything but soldiers when compared to his red-coated regulars.

But, after a few weeks of campaigning in the North American wilderness, Wolfe managed to include at least four companies of Rangers in his command. He had found to his surprise, that the Rangers were well disciplined, their weapons were always in excellent condition, and in woodland warfare they could not be matched.

'Modern' Uniform

The modern Ranger uniform is oiled boots, unpressed field clothes, and unblocked field caps. But today's Rangers are still well disciplined, their weapons remain in perfect condition, and on raids, ambushes and reconnaissance patrols they have no equals.

Ranger operations have not changed drastically in the last 300 years. Ranger missions still include the gathering of intelligence through patrolling, the destruction of enemy personnel and equipment, and the disruption of enemy communications.

The Rangers of today hold a distinct advantage over Rangers of yesteryear. Motor vehicles and aircraft have increased their mobility; modern weapons have increased their firepower, and they have the benefit of 300 years of Ranger experience.

Fort Benning is the home this rugged training. Here and in North Georgia and Florida the student Ranger learns the skills that make him the finest small-unit leader in the world today.

To prepare the Ranger for operations in any part of the world under any circumstances, the course is conducted over varied terrain under many different conditions. The training is designed to be as realistic as peacetime conditions will permit.

The first three weeks of the course are conducted "on the double" here at the Fort Benning Ranger Camp, operated by Lt. Col. Christopher Gooch.

While here, the Ranger students learn skills they will use throughout their Army careers. They become deeply involved in subjects ranging from advanced demolitions to the fine art of scouting and patrolling.

Students who meet the Ranger's standards here continue their training at Lt. Col. Morency R. Dame's Ranger Mountain Camp in the Blue Ridge Mountains of North Georgia. For the next three weeks they are taught military mountaineering, including rappelling and cliff assault.

Their patrolling ability is sharpened by conducting raids, ambushes, and surveillance missions. Some of these operations last over 96 hours, during which time the Rangers may walk more than 50 miles.

The final three weeks of training are given in the swamps near Eglin Air Force Base, Fla., at the Ranger Jungle, Swamp and Waterborne Camp commanded by Lt. Col. Robert W. Hakala.

In these final weeks the student Rangers are taught survival, small boat operations, and amphibious raiding tactics. Their patrolling ability is honed to a keen edge while operating over some of the worst country in the world — the swamps of Florida.

Finally, when training is finished, those who have mastered the art of Ranger warfare are awarded the Ranger Arc Tab. They have become experts in small unit warfare. These men have found their weaknesses and have overcome them.

They have mastered the problem of leading men under the adverse conditions of lack of sleep, severe weather, physical exhaustion and little or no food. These Rangers consider no terrain to be impassable. In fact, they use difficult terrain to their advantage.

When a man is graduated from the Ranger Course of instruction, his career as a Ranger has only started. He is now a qualified Ranger instructor, a man who is master of raids, ambushes, and short-range or long-range patrols, a man who possesses the ability to operate against the Communist guerrilla oo any terrain under any circumstances and defeat him. He can now pass these skills on to other soldiers.

For example Army Rangers currently are in the field with Vietnamese Ranger units, teaching Ranger methods of combating the Communist Viet-Cong.

If you visit Ranger training areas at Fort Benning, in the Blue Ridge Moustains, or in Florida swamps, you will not find spit-shined, starched and pressed garrison soldiers. You will see rugged, sweat - stained soldiers learning the principles of fighting for which Rangers have been historically famous — since before the founding of our Nation.

These soldiers are about to become the United States' ultimate weapon. The Army Ranger.

Cafe de Paris Luncheon Opens TIS Fall Society

Ladies of the Command and Staff Department, The Infantry School, enjoyed their first luncheon of the fall season recently at Custer Terrace Officers's Club, sponsored by the ladies of Department Headquarters.

On hand to greet the ladies was a life sized model of a French Chef, made by Lt. Col. Jean K. Woodyard Jr. The voice of Lt. Col. Paul L. Aussaresses, French liaison officer was tape-recorded to provide the background.

A gay and light mood prevailed in the "Cafe de Paris" settings. Flowering trees, umbrella tables, a bobbling fountain flanked with French stationery, and murals painted by Mesdames Ralph H. Hughett and Jessie W. Watson Jr. helped complete the atmosphere. A beautiful replica — eight feet tall — of the Eiffel Tower built by Maj. Harold D. Yow, was later to be presented to the Baker High School French club. Appropriate music was provided by Mrs. George F. Marko.

Among the guests of honor, introduced by Mrs. Samuel W. Koster, were: Mesdames Ben Harrell, Royal Reynolds, James O. Jones, William R. Lynch, J. G. Cornett, Raymond J. Caldbeck, George W. Local Chapter of DUSA Donates $1,000 for MAH Pediatric Ward

Checks for $1,500 have been awarded to two post activities and the Army Distaff Foundation in Washington, D.C., the post chapter of the Daughters of the U.S. Army has announced.

Part of $7,100 raised by the February, 1962, annual '49er Party, sponsored by the organization, the money is earmarked for disbursements approved by DUSA.

Largest of the three donations, $1,000 goes to Martin Army Hospital to buy supplies such as toys and pajamas for the pediatric ward.

The Main Post Dental Clinic received $200 to purchase new bulletin boards.

A check for $300 was sent to the Army Distaff Foundation to be applied toward the care of a needy Army daughter in the foundation home in Washington.

The post chapter of DUSA stages the '49er Party early in February each year for the express purpose of raising funds to foster welfare activities on post. The chapter contributes to a nationally sponsored scholarship and makes an occasional donation such as the one to Distaff, but the bulk of the money is spent on the post.

DUSA underwrites Tot Town Nursery in the amount of $3,000 annually. For several years, the nursery operated at a loss which was met by DUSA. In recent years, the undertaking has become almost self supporting, making it possible to spend part of the DUSA funds on improvements.

Youth activities on the post come in for a large share of DUSA donations.

When the Pony League was organized, DUSA donated $1,500 for football equipment. In 1960, DUSA gave post Boy Scouts $1,000 to build a swimming pool at Camp Pine Knot. In 1958, they contributed $500 for playground equipment at the Enlisted Capehart Housing Area.

The Obstetrics - Gynecology Clinic at Martin Army Hospital was furnished by the Army Daughters. The hospital receives a donation each year. In addition to monetary contributions to welfare at the hospital, DUSA provides free nursery care for children of all Red Cross Volunteers in training or working at the hospital.

DUSA keeps an ever-ready emergency fund available for use in the Army Health Nurse Program on the post. The fund usually requires from $85 to $100 a year.

The Childrens' Schools receive varying amounts from DUSA funds each year. Donations and customs of the service, vision sets and $942 for encyclopedias.

Mrs. Michael Lally, DUSA president, said the members "hope to carry on their work according to the ideals, traditions ad customs of the service."

Personnel engaged in welfare type activities on the post should write to DUSA, outlining their needs, Mrs. Lally said. DUSA donations are made upon the merits of such requests, she added.

Letters should be addressed to DUSA, in care of Mrs. Lally, 107 Baltzell Ave., Fort Benning.

New Spacemen to Begin Training for Moon Shot

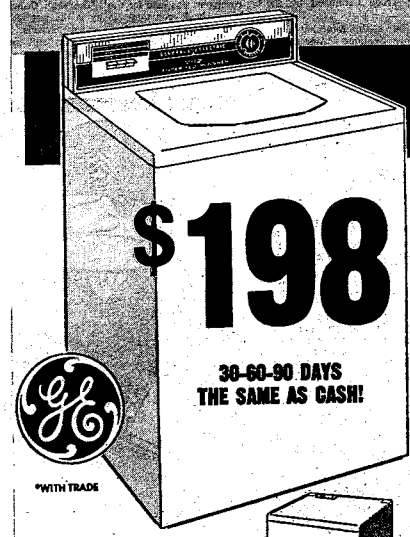
NEW YORK (AFPS) — Two civilians, four Air Force officers and three Navy officers have been chosen to train for space projects leading up to and including the lunar space flight scheduled for the late nineteen-sixties. The nine will report for duty at the Manned Space Aircraft Center in Houston, Tex., on Oct. 1.

They will join the seven astronauts of pioneer Project Mercury who are preparing for Project Gemini, which plans to rendevous two orbiting manned capsules early in 1964, and for Project Apollo, the manned flight to the moon.

The new astronauts' first assignment will be to act as observers when Navy Cdr. Walter M. Schirra Jr. goes on a scheduled six-orbit flight in late September.

The average age of the new spacemen, 32.5 years, is two years below that of the Mercury team at the time of its selection in 1959.

Civilians on the new team are Elliot M. See Jr., 35, and Neil A. Armstrong, 32, test pilots for the General Electric Co. and NASA, respectively.



The Air Force officers are: Maj. Frank Borman, 34, an instructor at the Aerospace Research Pilot Center, Edwards, AFB, Calif.; Capt. James A. McDivitt, 33, an experimental flight test officer at Edwards; Capt. Thomas P. Stafford, 32, also with the Aerospace Pilot School at Edwards, and Capt. Edward H. White, 32, a test pilot at Wright-Patterson AFB, Ohio.

The new Navy astronauts are: Lt. Charles Conrad Jr., 32, a safety officer of Fighter Squadron 142; Lt. Cdr. James A. Lovell, 34, a flight instructor and safety officer, NAS Oceana, Va., and Lt. Cdr. John W. Young, 32, maintenance officer for Fighter Squadron 53, NAS Miramar, Calif.

Airborne Broadcast Unit Is Now Being Developed

WASHINGTON (AFPS)—The Army Signal Corps has contracted for development of a powerful broadcasting system able to be airlifted by helicopter.

The miniature radio studio could be landed anywhere in the world to be assembled and activated in a few hours.

One of the transmitters, a 50,000-watt standard broadcast unit, will be equal in power to the largest commercial radio stations in the United States, with a possible coverage of 12,000 square miles.

The system is housed in 21 packaged units and will include telescoping antenna towers; fully equipped studios with tape recorders, turntables and teletypes for news wires; and diesel-powered electrical generators. It will also contain a sensitive receiving station that can monitor hostile broadcasts or pick up the Voice of America, Armed Forces Radio Service or other U.S. broadcast programs for retransmission.

Each 'copter will carry one "bell-hut," which is the name given to equipment designed to be self-contained for airlift purposes.

Artillerymen Make Appearance on TV

Lt. Col. Wallis E. McClain, 2nd Howitzer Battalion, 10th Artillery, 1st Infantry Brigade commander, Maj. John V. Lamp, former adjutant now enroute to an overseas assignment, and Capt. Carol D. Davis, Headquarters Battery commander, made a guest appearance on television this week.

They were guests of Mrs. Rozell F. Fabiani, hostess of WRBL's "At Home with Rozell" show which is celebrating its seventh year on the air.

Two Assume TIS Course Supervision

Staff changes in the Coordinator of Instruction's Office, The Infantry School, recently saw two veteran Army officers assume supervision of the Officer Career Course.

They are Col. Cornelius W. Coghill Jr., who will supervise Career Course No. 1, and Lt. Col. James T. Carter, supervisor of Career Course No. 2.

Career courses last 35 weeks and train Infantry officers, who have had experience in troop assignments, in the duties and responsibilities of the commander and staff at battle group level.

Instruction is also given in nuclear weapons employment and tactical operations at the brigade and division levels.

During his 23-year Army career, Col. Coghill has served with the Eighth Army in Korea, the U.S. Military Mission in Turkey, as professor of military science and tactics at the University of Richmond (Va.), and from 1950 to 1953, on the staff and faculty of TIS.

During World War II, he served in Europe with the 5th Infantry Division from 1942 to 1945.

He and his wife, Lucille, reside here with their three children: Karen Deane, Cornelius III, and Julie Lynn.

Since his arrival here in August, 1960, Col. Carter has served as company course director and chief of the Resident Instruction Section, both in the Coordinator of Instruction's Office, and as chief of the Operations Section, Communications Department.

Since enlisting in 1941 he has seen duty with the Seventh Army in Germany, the 48th Infantry, also in Germany, as regimental adviser to the Indiana National Guard Advisory Group, and as military adviser with the Military Assistance Advisory Group in Turkey.

During World War II, he saw combat duty from 1944 to 1945 with the 69th Armored Division.

He and his wife, Marie, have three children: Donna, James Jr., and David.

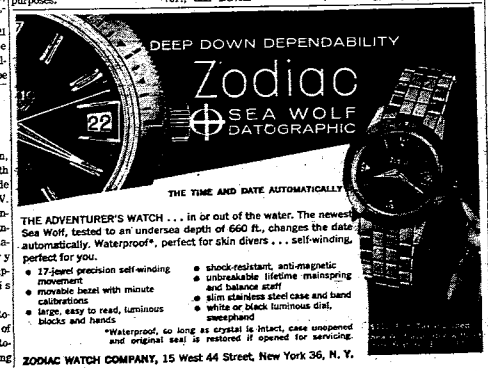
820th Ordnance Company Back Following Year's European Duty

Amid tears of joy and warm welcomes the 820th Ordnance Company arrived at Muscogee County Airport last Friday to strengthen The Infantry Center Troop Command by 220 men.

The 820th, returning from Trois Fontaine Ammunition Depot, France, was welcomed at the airport by Lt. Col. Gus A. Wolman, deputy commander of the Troop Command, and was then treated to a steak dinner with all the trimmings in its company area in Harmony Church.

Lt. Col. Lincoln B. Hunt, commander of the 7th Ordnance Battalion, was also on hand for the arrival. He is the new company's battalion commander.



Third of Four

The third of four new arrivals to the command, the 820th is commanded by 1st Lt. Allan C. Jones. The company shipped from here on a permanent change of station in October, 1961, but after almost a year of doubtful overseas duty in Europe the ordnance company was reassigned to The Infantry Center.

While in Europe, the 820th was commended by Maj. Gen. Henry R. Westphalinger, commanding general of the U. S. Army Communications Zone, Europe, for a job well done in "receiving, segregating and storing approximately 14,000 tons of ammunition during the period November, 1961, to January, 1962."

Tuesday an official welcoming ceremony was held for the newly arrived company in its company area. Brig. Gen. John E. Kelly, deputy commanding general of TIC delivered the welcoming address, and Col. John H. Lattin, commander of the Troop Command, welcomed the group.

The 554th Ordnance Company is the last of the four expected arrivals. Its date of return is still unknown, TIC officials said.

New Battle Group Joins Div. Force

As a climax to several months' preparation, a short ceremony Monday initiated a new infantry battle group into the ranks of units assigned to the 2nd Infantry Division.

The 4th Battle Group, 7th Infantry, was activated at division headquarters parade field as Maj. Gen. Charles H. Chase, former division commander, passed the unit's colors to Col. William O. Morgan in a symbolic assumption of command.

Assigned Commander

Col. Morgan, the 7th's newly assigned commander, is the former 2nd Division Brigade's deputy commander.

The 7th will be billeted in the Harmony Church area at Ft. Benning.

Lt. Col. Durell B. Hartman has been assigned as executive officer and Sgt. Maj. Chester R. Westervelt, sergeant major for the 2nd Division Trains, has been designated to become the 7th Infantry sergeant major.

From Netherlands

Col. Hartman comes to the 2nd Division from The Hague, Netherlands, where he spent three years as Operations and Training Officer of the Army Section, Military Assistance Advisory Group.

The unit is known as The Cottonbalers, a name earned for participating in General Stonewall Jackson's "brilliant victory in New Orleans" in 1815.

Although not the oldest Infantry regiment, its awards and decorations earned in 60 campaigns from 1812 to 1953 has established the 7th Infantry as the most highly decorated infantry organization in the U. S. Army.

The 7th Infantry saw wide participation also in the Civil War years, traveling cross-country through at least eight confederate states. Ten streamers were added to the regimental colors for major battle streamers for actions through this war.

The 23rd Infantry has initiated a voting campaign wherein all eligible voters assigned to the battle group are urged to submit absentee ballots in home state elections this year.

According to Lt. David K. Williams, battle group assistant adjutant, the drive is to inform every eligible voter of his voting rights and responsibilities, and to encourage maximum participation of the Armed Forces personnel in this year of general elections, and in observance of Armed Forces Voters Day, September 25.

She Directs Service Club Two, Creating a 'Home Atmosphere'

By John R. Grant

Service Club Two has seen a number of improvements over the past few years, which came about largely through the efforts of Miss Madeline J. Parks, club director.

Miss Parks' duties as director of Service Club Two are to plan, administer, and supervise the club programs and facilities, and to develop these activities in relation to the overall objectives of the Army.

Improving Morale

She explains that the purpose of the service club program is to assist in the basic objectives of sustaining and improving morale of the troops. The mission of the service club is to provide for enlisted men and their families and friends a homelike atmosphere where they may participate in wholesome recreational activities during off-duty hours.

Miss Parks is connected with Special Services, United States Army Infantry Center, Fort Benning, and served as director of Service Club Four at Fort Benning and Service Club Three at Harmony Church before she was appointed Club Director of Service Club Two in September 1957.

She graduated from Tuskegee Institute, Alabama, with a Bachelor of Science degree in home economics in 1943 and went to work for the Navy as a secretary in Philadelphia. Later she was employed by the Adjutant General's office in Washington, D. C., after which she returned to Philadelphia as an Office of Price Administration investigator. Just prior to coming to Fort Benning, Miss Parks was American Red Cross staff Assistant on Okinawa.

When asked if she had any outside interests, Miss Parks remarked that her main interest is Service Club Two, but she travels a great deal during vacations.

Among other awards she holds the Department of the Army Performance Award Certificate, one of the highest awards that a civilian employed by the armed services can receive. Brigadier General John E. Kelly, deputy commanding general of the U. S. Army Infantry Center, Fort Benning, presented Miss Parks with a Performance Award Certificate for outstanding and sustained superior performance of duties during the period September 1, 1956-August 31, 1962. During this period Miss Parks was serving as club director of Service Club Two.

Since Miss Parks took over her present post, the activities program has been stepped up, for which she modestly accepts no credit, and a number of recreational materials have been acquired. The club will be completely refurnished before the end of this year.

27th Artillery Firing Test Has Aura of Emergency

By DivArty PIO

Battery A, 27th Artillery went to the field early last week with five 105 millimeter howitzers for their annual battery firing test.

Shortly after 7 a.m. at the rendezvous area where the 27th was securing its positions, the men were discovered from the air and subjected to a strafing and bombing attack. This was the first phase of an all-morning combat firing test.

Bombing Mission

When the mock bombing mission had been completed to the satisfaction of umpires at the site, orders were given to move out. The next destination, several hundred meters from the scene of the initial attack, was the area in which the 27th's Battery A was to fire its emergency mission, which is designed to test the speed of deploying, loading and firing the weapons under emergency combat conditions.

As the 27th was preparing to leave the rendezvous area, an aggressor force represented by members of the 87th Infantry launched a ground attack including machine gun fire and gas bombs. This action continued on the road to the emergency area until the 87th was forced to retreat down the road, where they later were to regroup in preparation for a second attack.

The trucks towing the howitzers were quickly directed off the dirt road and onto a small hill where the second phase of testing was beginning. Racing against time, while retaining their deadly accuracy, the artillerymen darted across the dusty field readying their weapons for fire.

Commands were being shouted back and forth with such intensity that only the well-trained man could decipher their significance. In reply to the call, "deflection," all-important numbers were voiced: "Deflection two, five, zero, nine."

When the five 105's, which are numbered in sequence from the right, were ready to be fired, a check was made by a safety officer prior to loading. When the report that each weapon was safe was returned to the fire direction control center, the appropriate "fire when ready," or "at my command" fire commands were given either by Lt. Jimmy W. Ritchie, executive officer of 27th's Battery A or Capt. Robert L. Marble, Div Arty assistant S-3, and the fire direction control umpire for this battery test.

When, as occurred at the end of each part of the test, the command "end of mission" was shouted, the chore is started of lowering radio antennas that are to be set up again, picking up wire which will be replaced at another position, and moving five 105-mm howitzers to the trucks by which they will be towed to an advanced stage of the test. This, and more, was all done while withstanding a second harrassing attack by the aggressive 87th Infantry.

The final part of the test, which was not to be troubled by aggressor attacks, bombings, or strafings, was conducted at still another location, thus requiring additional assembly and movement of men and equipment. This phase of the operation was designed particularly to observe the accuracy and speed of the battery.

Firing at targets located in the "impact area," the entire battery as well as the individual sections had a determination made of their accuracy by "flash bases" situated near the impact area. The "flash bases" measure the point of impact by use of aiming circles.

With the 15th Artillery having completed their tests during the week of Sept. 9-15, the 27th Artillery last week, and the 17th Artillery scheduled to finish this week, this annual program is almost half completed.

During the week of Oct. 14-20, the 38th Artillery is scheduled for battery tests, and Oct. 21-27 is the week set for the 37th.

The 12th Artillery completed their marksmanship (Train-fire) training Tuesday, and will have their battalion firing tests near the end of October.

From the Chaplain

On the Highway You Are Your Brother's Keeper

BY CHAP. (LT. COL.) JAMES H. FISER

John Doe sat in his accustomed pew at his church on Sunday morning. As he entered his pew, he bowed his head and prayed.

As the service progressed he joined in the singing of the hymns and he also listened intently as the preacher led the worship meditation. At the close of the service, he gathered his family together, went out the door and shook hands with the preacher as he departed.

He got in his car, backed out of his parking place without looking and almost ran over his neighbor's child.

Upon reaching the street, he turned his car into the traffic without looking around until he heard the screech of brakes.

Mrs. Doe had a roast in the oven and it should be ready for them when they reached home; so John was in a hurry. Sunday morning, little traffic, quiet streets, 25 mile per hour zone—that's not so important, so

CHAP. FISER

John drove 40 until he saw another car turn into the street behind him. After all, it would not look right for John Doe to get a speeding ticket coming home from church. The car turned off and again John moved ahead to 40 and then 45. The corner stop light was not on this morning, it was only blinking yellow so John slowed down to 25 for the intersection.

As he approached his drive, he slowed a little and turned in. The children's dog recognized the car and came bounding to meet it. John was watching the bike on the side of the drive and did not see the dog. When the children yelled, it was too late.

Now, John has three sad eyed, hurt children. But, John was lucky. Or was he? After all John was a good churchman and was looked on as a leader in the church and the community. He had a Christain family, a good job, and met all his obligations.

John's driving involved only little things BUT was John's driving Christian?

"Thou shalt not kill!" How far does this go in a man's life? Can a Christian drive his car and recklessly endanger his own and other's life? The answer must be "NO."

Religion is more than attending church and kneeling during Mass. It is more than paying to missions or singing hymns. Religion encompasses the entire life of man so that he can realize "Abundant Life" for himself and make possible the abundant life of all other people.

Religion, as such, is a poor substitute to a new widow for her husband; it cannot restore the mangled body of the pretty little blond daughter; it cannot bring back the shouts of glee that Johnny makes when he hits the ball over the fence.

You are your brother's keeper and the highway is one place where you must keep him. Safety is included in a man's obligation to God since his obligation to God also obliges him to his fellow man.

Safety can be protected by one great principle of Christianity— "As ye would that men should do to you, do ye evenso unto them."

In other words, let us practise our religion on the highway as we would in church.

The Girls on That Isle Called Him 'Boss' Man

By Charles T. Coker

Can you imagine living on a small island all your life? Having six or seven attractive girls call you "boss"? As improbable as it may seem to the average serviceman, it has been a real-life thing for a 23rd Infantry soldier, PFC Martin Tekulsky, now performing the duties of Courts and Boards clerk for the 23rd.

The "small island" referred to just happens to be an expensive plot of real estate called Manhattan Island, located in the heart of New York City. And the girls were just a small portion of about sixty that Martin supervised as part of their daily routine with the New York Telephone Company's commercial department.

After high school, Martin entered Hamilton College in New York City in 1956 with a four-year New York State granted scholarship based on competitive examinations. He graduated in 1960 with a BA degree in history. After college and before the Army, a European trip took him to Italy, where he visited most of the principal cities. He reports that Rome, with its splendor of architectural attractions, was most interesting to him.

The 24-year-old draftee entered the Army at Fort Dix, N. J., where he underwent basic training. At present, as battle group courts and boards clerk, he types board actions, and records court proceedings.

With his coming to Georgia and Fort Benning, the Manhattan native encountered his first taste of "Dixie". Not surprising, a taste of Southern fried chicken won him over.

FORMER COMMANDER VISITS . . . Back to visit his former command recently was Maj. Gen. Robert H. Wienecke, right, commandant of the Armed Forces Staff College, Norfolk, Va. He is greeted here by Sgt. Maj. Robert L. Brown, division sergeant major, who served as sergeant major of the 23rd Infantry when Gen. Wienecke commanded the 2nd Division in 1959.

Traffic Quiz

Seat Belts Standard On How Many Cars?

BY DAVID M. WINKLER

Engineering and automotive science is slowly but surely reducing the mechanical hazards of safe driving. Wiser city planning will in time reduce many others. But each of us has the solemn duty to eliminate the careless and intemperate habits which, harnessed to a six or eight cylinder car, can become a veritable atomic engine of destruction.

Only the one in the driver's seat can be master of himself. This is one in a series of quizzes designed to test the motorist's general knowledge.

QUESTIONS

1. Today, a decade after seat belts first came on the market as an auto safety accessory the percentage of the nation's passenger cars that are equipped with them is only:
   a. 28 per cent
   b. 17 per cent
   c. 11 per cent
   d. 03 per cent

2. The driver of a vehicle within an intersection intending to make a left turn will yield the right of way to any vehicle approaching from the opposite direction which is:
   a. within fifty feet of the intersection
   b. within one hundred feet of the intersection
   c. within or so close to the intersection that it constitutes an immediate hazard.

3. Experiments such as those conducted by Col. John P. Stapp, chief of the Air Force Aero Medical Field Laboratory, have demonstrated that the body, for brief periods, can withstand peak loads of more than how many G's (for gravitational force)?
   a. 10 G's
   b. 20 G's
   c. 30 G's
   d. 40 G's

4. By restraining the user from the effects of crash forces which hurl him toward the many hard surfaces, knobs, and controls inside the usual car or might even catapult him out of the car, a seat belt can reduce the chances of serious-to-fatal injury in crashes, according to the best estimates available, by about:
   a. 10 per cent
   b. 15 per cent
   c. 25 per cent
   d. 35 per cent

5. When two vehicles enter an intersection from different highways at the same time:
   a. the driver of the vehicle on the left will yield the right of way to the vehicle on the right.
   b. the driver of the vehicle on the right will yield the right of way to the vehicle on the left.
   c. the larger of the two vehicles will have the right of way.

6. In 1907, Fred Marriott, driving a Stanley Steamer at Daytona Beach would have set a new American record if he had not cracked up before finishing the mile as his speed had reached:
   a. 168 mph
   b. 180 mph
   c. 147 mph
   d. 156 mph

Mother and Horsewoman Part of Old Army Family

BY KAYE LEE

"Each Army generation says 'today's Army isn't the one they grew up in', but regardless of the changes I wouldn't trade it or my experience in it for anything".

So stated Mrs. John Martin Stephens Jr., wife of Lieutenant Colonel Stephens, the Division Aviation commander.

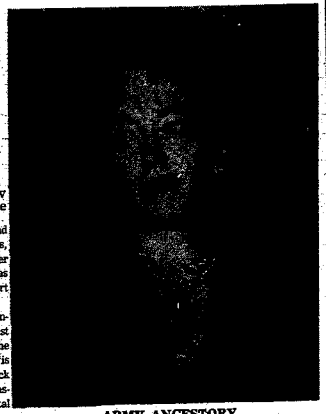
Both of Mrs. Stephens parents were Army children and she can trace a direct Army ancestry in each family all the way back to the Revolutionary War. She Stephens, herself was born at Fort Banks, Winthrop, Massachusetts, and she laughingly says that she can really qualify for the title "army brat."

She is greatly interested and feels a great deal of pride in the 2nd Infantry Division. Her father, the late Major General J. Sladen Bradley was the assistant division commander in Korea during the early days of the conflict. Her brother also fought with the 2nd Division in Korea and her husband commanded "C" Company, 23rd Infantry from 1941 to 1945. Mrs. Stephens says she feels very much "at home" in the division.

Fort Benning has been her home three separate times. She attended and graduated from Columbus High School and she and the then Captain Stephens were married here in the Main Post Protestant Chapel on August 2, 1949 while her father was the Assistant Commandant of The Infantry School.

Philosophy was her major at George Washington University where she was a member of the Alpha Delta Pi sorority. She also attended Abbott Art School, Washington D. C. and Spartan School of Aeronautics, Tulsa, Oklahoma. Before her marriage she was employed as a fashion artist and an art teacher.

Mrs. Stephens says swimming and ceramics top the list of her favorite hobbies. She states her main ambition "is to find the time to get back to some of her favorite pastimes, which include oriental water colors and golf."



Eighteenth Century antiques, oriental art and antiques, fashion illustration and flying are also of special interest to her.

The mother of two children, Susan, age 12 and Frances, age 9, she manages to find time to be active in the Army Daughters, Nurses Aides, Red Cross and the Executive Board of the 2nd Division Officers' Wives Club. She is also the first lady of the 2nd Aviation Company. When asked to cite any unusual experiences that had occurred during her lifetime with the Army she smiled and stated, "that the entire time spent with the Army has been exciting and unusual and that the Army is anything but dull!"

Mrs. Stephens is well known in horseshow circles. She was an accomplished rider and instructor. She taught riding here during her previous tours and also at Fort Meyers, Virginia, where she served on the staff of the National Capitol Horseshow in Washington, D. C., and Madison Square Garden in New York City.

She experienced her "Swan Song" in active horseshows when in 1949 she rode the famous 26-year-old Blue Point and won the Jumper Championships here.

Guam, the Philippines, Japan, China and Germany are among the foreign tours she has experienced. Her favorite stateside tours include Fort Leavenworth, Kansas and Fort Benning. Of Fort Benning, Mrs. Stephens says she "can't think of a nicer place to be as it holds many pleasant memories for her".

Mohawks and Sioux On Bowling Warpath

There will be two new teams on the Indianhead Ladies Bowling League this season — the Mohawks and the Sioux.

They join the four other teams in the league, the Apaches, the Poncas, the Cherokees, and the Shawnees. The number of entries at the Sand Hill Bowling Alley last Monday night was so many that these two extra teams were formed.

The competition will begin next week upon the announcement of the members of the teams.

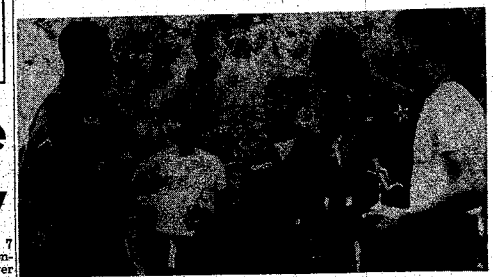
Three Mile Race Begins Tomorrow

Approximately 40 runners will sprint off tomorrow morning at 7 a.m. when the gun fires and the 2nd Division Cross Country Championship Race begins. The course, laid out in the Kelley Hill area, winds over hill and dale, through thickly wooded areas, through drainage ditches, deep sand and slick muddy hillslides. It is approximately three miles long.

Each major command will enter a team of five athletes and will receive an automatic 25 points towards the Commanding General's Sports Trophy. The winning team will receive an additional 25 points. Scoring is accomplished by adding up positions placed, and the team with the least number of points is the winner.

In addition to the team trophies awarded for first, second and third place, individual trophies will be awarded to the first five winners. Even though a team might not win a trophy as a whole, there is still a possibility that a team member might win an individual trophy.



All the trophies will be presented immediately after the race. General Charles Billingslea, commanding general of the 2nd Division, is expected to make the presentations.

The team rosters do not have to be submitted until Friday so the units are having their own elimination races and run-offs and there is much excitement as to who will be the final representatives. Robert Washington, last year's winner, however, is a certainty for the 1st Infantry team.

Entries are expected from all the teams participating in the Commanding General's Trophy: the 1st Infantry, the 9th Infantry, the 23rd Infantry, the 87th Infantry, Division Trains, Division Artillery, and Separate Battalions.

Conduct of the event will be governed by rules issued by the Special Services Office.

Inclement weather postponements will be made by the division Special Services Office.

Tournament Golfers End Play on Links Tomorrow

The 2nd Division Golf Tournament ends Sunday with many rounds still to be played.

With tomorrow the last day of play many are expected on the links to complete the four rounds which make them eligible for the trophies.

Only two to date have completed the required rounds. They are Stanley L. Harding, Divison Artillery, whose final score is 336 made up of 83, 86, 84, and 83, and Joe R. Hamby, 69th Armor, whose score is 297 made up of 72, 76, 76, and 73.

Harding is in the senior division. His opponent Lucien F. Keller, 23rd Infantry, has completed two rounds, 95 and 90.

Hamby is in the open division. There are seven others who have played more than one round. Andrew L. Hamm, 87th Infantry, 92, 105; John Heitzenroder, 87th Infantry, 105, 92; Lee L. Howard, 87th Infantry, 105, 106; Roscoe Lacy, 2nd Administration Company, 84, 84; Pat Patrick, 9th Infantry, 80, 84; John A. Slaughter, 87th Infantry, 83, 83.

There are three players in the open division who have completed one round. They are Robert A. Enos, 87th Infantry, 87; Clay N. Mobley, 1st Infantry, 103; and Roger F. Schwelch, 87th Infantry, 113.

In the handicap division, B flight, Edwin K. Crowley Jr., and David K. Williams, both of the 23rd Infantry, have completed three rounds. Crowley scored 93, 88, 93, while Williams scored 79, 79 and 84.

Others in the division are: Arnold Dryer Jr., Division Headquarters, 100, 95; Ronald R. McGee, 2nd Administration Company, 92, 88; Edmund D. Rozecki, 15th Artillery, 93, 89; T. W. Valenteen, 15th Artillery, 89, 95.

In C flight Rex T. Dittamore and John F. Kearns, both of 2nd Administration Company, have scores of 86, 93 and 113, 105 respectively. James D. Speer, also in this division, has played one round with a score of 96.

Volleyball Views

By 23rd Infantry PIO

Still nursing the sting of defeat handed them last week by the 1st Infantry, the 23rd Infantry volleyball team retaliated this week by trouncing the 9th Infantry team 15-5 and 15-7, and racked up its second win of the current 2nd Infantry Division Volleyball Tournament.

This week brings to a close the first round of the tournament, and the 23rd is scheduled to meet the current tournament-leading team, the 87th Infantry, next Monday in the first game of the second round.

By DivArty PIO

The DivArty volleyball team is anxiously awaiting their forthcoming opportunity to repel the first-place "Conquerers."

Holding down second place with a 5-1 record, the DivArty team is scheduled to meet the 87th Infantry here on Sand Hill Monday evening. This, the last scheduled meeting of these teams in this double round-robin tournament, is to begin at 7:15.

87th Inf. Draws Ahead In Volleyball Competition

The 2nd Division Volleyball tournament continued this week with games played last Thursday and Monday.

The 87th Infantry still leads the competition, picking up two points this week through the forfeiture of Division Trains and the 23rd Infantry. The 87th now leads with a record of seven games won and no games lost.

On Thursday Division Artillery defeated the 23rd Infantry 15-3, 15-10 and on Monday they took the 7th Cavalry 13-2, 10-2. These results put Division Artillery into a firm second place.

Third place was taken in last week's tally by the 1st Infantry defeating the 9th Infantry by forfeiture on Thursday, and the 7th Cavalry on Monday, 13-3, 10-2.

The breakdown of the teams and their averages is as follows:

VOLLEYBALL STANDINGS

	Won	Lost
87th Infantry	7	0
Division Artillery	5	1
1st Infantry	5	2
7th Cavalry	2	3
23rd Infantry	2	5
7th Cavalry	3	3
23rd Infantry	2	5
9th Infantry	1	6
Division Trains	0	6

The Division Volleyball Tournament will continue this month ending October 15. There are 19 series left consisting of three games in a series.

Company Commanders Come and Go But Sergeant Hangs on to Company B

BY 23RD INFANTRY PIO

Eight years in the same company seems a long time but not for the 23rd Infantry's Company B 1st Sgt., Charles W. Bernatovitz.

Officers and non-commissioned officers have come and gone, but of all who were members of the original outfit, Company F, 145th Infantry Regiment, when it was formed at Camp Polk, La. in 1954, only 1st Sgt. Bernatovitz remains.

Sgt. Bernatovitz can recall 18 commanding officers who during the last seven years have led what is now Company B of the 23rd Infantry. When the unit moved to Fort Riley, Kansas, Company F became Bravo Company B, 85th Infantry.

The company then "gyroed" to Bamberg, Germany, for three years. Sgt. Bernatovitz was a member of the advance party, and he says that in all the seven years his most memorable experience was the birth of his son, who was the first child born overseas to a family of the then 85th Infantry.

When the Pentomic concept was begun, "Bravo" of the 85th became a part of the 29th Infantry. When the unit returned home to Fort Benning, it was again switched — this time to the 23rd Infantry.

Sgt. Bernatovitz joined the Army in 1947, enlisting in his home state of Pennsylvania.

During the Korean Conflict he served as first sergeant of an Eighth Army Headquarters detachment.

"I feel fortunate," Sgt. Bernatovitz says, "that I've been with a good unit this long and have been able to watch it improve over the years, both here in the States and overseas. We've always done a number one job, whether we were combat ready or training recruits."

Penalties Slow-Down Benning Ground Game

The Fort Benning Doughboys hammered out a 21-7 victory over Orlando, Fla., last Saturday night at Orlando.

Fort Benning streaked to two first period scores and shoved across one touchdown in the second stanza to amass its final total. The only Bronco score came shortly before the end of the first half.

Coach Leaton C. Cofield of the Doughboys was not at all pleased with the officiating, showing displeasure with the 145 yards the Doughboys received in penalties.

Coach Cofield praised the Doughboy team, stating, "I thought our boys played a real fine game."

The Fort Benning squad was called five times for pass interference and twice the interference ruling placed the pigskin on the Doughboys' own five-yard stripe. Both times, however, the Doughboy defensive line put up a brick wall to stop the Bronco threats.

The Doughboys leading point producer, 2nd Lt. Bobby Towns was called twice for interference.

Quillen Heads Backs

The Doughboys picked up 267 yards in rushing led by halfback 2nd Lt. Ron Quillen who gathered 116 of them. Quarterback 2nd Lt. Wayne Jeter was next in line with 26 yards and 2nd Lt. Brewster Hobby, had 24 yards on the ground.

Second Lt. Wallace Johnson picked up 18 yards. Sp4 Raymond Eddy, added 17 and first string quarterback, 2nd Lt. Marvin Tibbetts had 14.

The powerful Fort Benning defense held the Broncos to 37 yards on the ground. The Florida team mustered 160 yards in the air, completing 13 of 32 passes for 40 per cent.

The Fort Benning quarterbacks tossed for 155 yards through the aerial waves, completing seven of 10. The combined total on the ground and in the air for the Doughboys was 422 yards.

Following the opening kickoff by Orlando, Fort Benning marched to the Bronco 20-yard line from where Tibbetts fired a 20-yard strike to end 2nd Lt. Fred Murphy for the touchdown. First Lt. Sam Stellatella added the conversion to make the score 7-0.

The Doughboys again drove deep into Orlando territory near the close of the first quarter. Hobby, a former Oklahoma University halfback, then scampered around end for five yards for the score. Stellatella arched the ball between the uprights and the scoreboard read 14-0.

Tibbetts chalked up the third Doughboy TD as the former Georgia Tech quarterback climaxed a drive in the opening seconds of the second period by rambling 11 yards on an option play. Stellatella made it a perfect evening by booting the PAT.

Orlando's only score came in the second period on a five-yard pass, play, adding the extra point.

The Doughboys lay their undefeated skein on the line tomorrow when Pensacola Naval Air Station, Fla., invades Doughboy Stadium. Game time is 8 p.m.

Presently Undefeated

Navy Air Base to Feature Former College Players

The undefeated Pensacola Navy Goshawks invade Doughboy Stadium Saturday at 8 p.m., anxious to repeat last year's 12-6 victory over the Fort Benning Doughboys.

Thus far this season the Goshawks have copped three straight wins — a 7-0 victory over Corpus Christi (Tex.) Naval Air Station, a 35-8 spanking of the Fort Lauderdale, (Fla.) Tigers, and a 14-0 shutout of the Marines from Camp LeJeune.

Fort Benning downed the Marines 21-14 on Sept. 15.

The Goshawks, who run off a winged-T formation, are paced by halfback Charles Rogers, a former speedster Star at New Mexico Highlands University in Las Vegas, N. M. Jose Gacusana, a former University of Nebraska standout, anchors the Goshawks bruising first-team line.

Quarterbacking the Florida Gulf Coast team will be Bobby Bunch, former signal caller at the University of South Carolina.

A year ago it was the magic arm of Pensacola quarterback Joe Tranchini that led the Naval team to victory. Although the Doughboys held the Goshawks to 28 yards on the ground, they found it difficult to defend against the former U. S. Naval Academy quarterback's aerial bombardment.

The only bright light for the Doughboys was halfback Northern Brown. The 180-pound speedster scored the lone Fort Benning touchdown when he galloped on a dazzling 74-yard run.

This year Brown is a halfback on the Doughboys's number two unit and the Navy squad will be coping with a much stronger Army team.

Last season the Doughboys picked up 164 yards on the ground and 82 through the air waves, but found the Goshawk defense tough in the clutch.

This year's Pensacola team will be as it has been in the past 34 years of the team's history, a new one because of the almost 100 per cent turnover in player personnel at the Basic Flight Training Base.

The Goshawks are coached by Lt. E. F. Hauel and its players are predominantly made up of officers, most of whom had football experience in colleges, universities and at other military schools and installations.

Pensacola takes its name from a genus of a hawk that is large, shortwinged and noted for powerful flight and courage.

Ladies Plan Match With AF Golfers

On Oct. 5, the Women's Golf Club of Fort Benning will travel to Maxwell Air Force Base to play the return leg of the annual inter-club match.

The Maxwell female linksters ran-off with top honors and the Holbrook Trophy in the first meeting of the two clubs. The trophy was presented by MSgt. Howard Holbrook, golf pro at the Country Club, as a rotary trophy award for the affair.

All women who have not signed up for the meet are urged to do so immediately.

Upon returning home, the ladies will again swing into action on Oct. 7. Club members will team with their husbands for a Scotch Foresome Tournament. Tee-off time will be at noon.

The Ladies Golf Club will also sponsor several tournaments throughout the month of October.

TEST OF INGENUITY . . . The sidehill lie often separates the men from the boys. This is a toughie, demands careful analysis. If the ball is lower than the feet, the tendency is to reach for it. Flex the knees to eliminate the feeling of toppling forward. A natural swing will cause a slice, so aim to the left of your target. When the ball is higher than the feet, concentrate weight on balls of the feet to banish feeling of leaning backward. Shorten up on the grip. The tendency is to hook, so shorten the backswing and aim to the right of the hole.

Jr. Rifle Club Registration Set For Tomorrow

Fort Benningites, aged 12 to 19, interested in rifle marksmanship may register for the post Junior Rifle Club tomorrow at 9 a.m. at the Running Deer Range on Dixie Road.

Firing will begin under the sponsorship of Col. Raymond B. Martin, director of The Infantry School Weapons Department.

Preliminary rifle instruction and safety procedures will be conducted by personnel from the Small Arms Committee of the Weapons Department.

Shough's Sports Scope

BY PETE SHOUGH

The Duke Blue Devils, who are causing most of the talk around the Atlantic Coast Conference this year, were victims of one of the young season's first upsets.

Although Southern California is not to be scorned, most of the experts across the country thought Duke would grab the victory at the expense of the Trojans. The Blue Devils had the experience and power but not the points in the scoring column.

Duke's defeat may give Maryland the extra boost it needs to move into the number one slot in the ACC. Maryland, by the way, chalked up its first victory with a 7-0 battle over SMU.

Another surprise was Penn State's romp over the "Middies." Nothing could stop Penn State as they racked up 41 points and limited Navy to 7.

Things in the Southeastern Conference went as they should. Alabama, Louisiana State and Mississippi all won their openers. The only team to score on the SEC top three was underdog Memphis State, as they managed to put seven points on their side of the tally sheet. Both Alabama and Louisiana blanked their rivals.

Tomorrow, things begin to get a little tougher for the nation's big powers.

The big Ten will swing into action pitting Michigan State against Stanford; Ohio State against North Carolina; Illinois against Washington while Michigan opens against Nebraska.

LSU will meet Rice, in a game which will give Charlie McClendon's Tigers stiffer competition than Texas A&M.

The game to watch in this area will be the Georgia Tech-Florida match. The nod will have to be given to the Gators mainly because of the size and experience.

Miami should dump TCU. George Mira and company were idle last Saturday but they have one victory in their pocket that came at the expense of Pitt.

Out West, Washington is going to return to the Big Ten for action. They locked heads with Purdue last Saturday only to draw a tie. Tomorrow it's Illinois. The Huskies will take this one.

Southern Cal will bring home the bacon against SMU. Maryland edged the Mustangs last Saturday and the Trojans will do it tomorrow.

UCLA is idle until Oct. 6 when they will meet the Buckeyes from Ohio State.

In the pro ranks, the Redskins' victory over the Browns is the big surprise. The 'new' Browns lacked the punch inside the ten - yard line. They were stopped twice where it counted. The second time the Browns elected to go for the TD instead of the three-pointer which later proved to cost Cleveland the victory.

The Browns may see another defeat this Sunday as they go against the Eagles. One thing is for sure, Jimmy Brown had better make sure the man he laterals to is another Brown.

NEW FIELD HOUSE DIRECTOR . . . SFC Clyde E. Hood, Company B, 1st Battalion, TICTC, recently returned from Wertheim, Germany, and is assigned to The Infantry Center Special Services, with duties with the Athletic Department as NCOIC of the Harmony Church Field House. Sgt. Hood has been working in the athletic field for the past four years. During his last assignment, he was with the 72nd Artillery Group.

WINNER'S TROPHY . . . Maj. Jean P. Doerr, commanding officer of the 1st Battalion, The Infantry Center Troop Command, presents the battalion softball trophy to Capt. Bobby Crews, commanding officer of Company C, 1st Battalion, in recent ceremonies. Company C won the 1st Battalion championship with a record of 17 wins and two losses.

From 1942 to 1945 Sgt. Maj. Cress served in the Pacific. He returned to the United States in 1945 and then, in 1946, began a five-year tour in the Far East. Arms Group Chief Pays Visit to Post

Col. Robert C. Works, deputy director of the Army Combined Arms Group at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., was here recently for a one-day visit to the Infantry Combat Developments Agency.

Col. Works's unit is directly above the post group in the organization of the Army Combat Developments Agency. He described his purpose in coming here as a two-fold one — to become oriented in the activities of ICDA, and to "come home." Col. Works is an Infantry veteran.

He entered the Army in August, 1943, after graduation from Mississippi State University, where he received a bachelor of science degree. In December, 1943, he was commissioned at the Officer Candidate School at Camp Davis, N. C. In World War II he served in the Rhineland and Central European Campaigns.

Col. Jordon is a graduate of the Air Command and Staff College at Maxwell Air Force Base, Ala. In 1954 he received a master's degree in civil engineering from Texas A & M College.

MOS Test Self-Critique Is Coming

WASHINGTON—"How can I improve my MOS evaluation test score?" "Where was I weak on the test?"

The answers to these questions asked by Army EMs should soon be available.

The Army says a new report form (AGTE-10) will be divided into ten sections the same as the individual test aid. Within each section the testee will be graded on five levels—very high, high, typical, low or very low.

By comparing the test report with the test aid he will be able to pinpoint the areas which need improvement.

The new form, as soon as it is completed, will be distributed in three copies; the original intended for the individual's field 201 file, the duplicate to the unit and the triplicate for filing at the Army's Enlisted Evaluation Center.

Examination Is Advised For Civilians

Civil Service employees below grade GS-7, who entered the service by any other examination, are advised by officials to take the Federal Service Entrance Examination.

The examination will be given at the Columbus Post Office Oct. 13 and on six additional dates during fiscal year 1962-1963.

Any government employee is eligible to apply for the examination if he meets the educational and experience requirements.

Exam Required

The examination is required for entrance to Civil Service positions in grades GS-5, 6 and 7. It is also a requirement for promotion from a lower grade to certain GS-5, 6 or 7 positions.

Employees are encouraged to take the examination and furnish the Civilian Personnel Section, The Infantry Center, a record of successful completion to be placed in their permanent files.

The examination is also open to college juniors, seniors and graduate students and personnel with equivalent experience as a means of entering government service.

In addition to Oct. 13, the examination will be given Nov. 17, Jan. 12, Feb. 9, March 16 April 20 and May 11.

To be admitted to the Oct. 13 examination, applications must be filed on Sept. 27. The latest date other applications will be accepted is April 25, 1963.

Applications for management internships, a related examination, must be filed before Jan. 24.

Application forms and further information are available at the Civil Service Board, TIC Civilian Personnel Section, Bldg. 1620, and the Columbus Post Office.

Paratroopers Are Awarded Wings Here

The recent graduation of The Infantry School's basic airborne course was reminiscent of Armed Forces Day as representatives from the Army, Navy and Air Force received Parachutist Badges.

The lineup was slightly in favor of the Army as 44 officers and 171 enlisted men were graduated from the three-week course.

They were followed by the Air Force with seven officers and three enlisted men, the Marines with five enlisted men, and the Navy with one officer and two enlisted men.

Also included in the 234 newly qualified paratroopers was Capt. Fazil Akbar from Pakistan.

Honor graduate was Army Sgt. Henry E. Irvin.

COL. WOLMAN

Col. Wolman Assumes Post With TICTC

Lt. Col. Gus A. Wolman Jr. has been assigned as deputy commander of The Infantry Center Troop Command.

He is also commanding officer of the 39th Transportation Battalion here.

Col. Wolman, stationed here since April 9, was formerly assigned to the Defense Traffic Management Service in St. Louis, Mo.

A 1943 graduate of Texas A & M College at College Station with a bachelor of science degree in business administration, he entered the Army as an enlisted man. After completing the Officer Candidate School course at Fort Sill, Okla., in 1943, he was commissioned in the field artillery.

In World War II he served with the 538th Field Artillery Battalion in the European Theater of Operations.

A graduate of the Command and General Staff College at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., Col. Wolman was assistant professor of military science at the University of Miami, Coral Gables, Fla., from 1951 to 1954.

The colonel, his wife, Yvonne, and their three children make their home on the post.

1st Lt. Foust Named Aide To General

First Lt. Arthur L. Foust of Houston, Tex., has been named aide-de-camp to Brig. Gen. Royal Reynolds Jr., assistant commandant of The Infantry School.

Medical Company Now Has New CO

First Lt. Robert E. Murray was recently named company commander of the 699th Medical Company. He succeeds Capt. Leroy M. Barber who has been named S-2 and S-3 of the 428th Medical Battalion.

Lt. Murray's five years of service include a tour of duty in Korea where he was ambulance platoon leader.

Theatrical Group Has New Name

The post theater group known as the 'Masquers' has recently changed its name to the Fort Benning Little Theatre Group.

The group, which falls under the control of the Entertainment and Recreation Section of Special Services, presently puts on four plays a year.

Members of the group were pleasantly surprised with the large turnout at their latest production of 'Damn Yankees'. The scheduled performances were increased from three to our when the overwhelming response was seen.

"The greater the response for the plays, the more there will be in the future", said 1st Lt. Thomas R. Amlick, post entertainment and officer.

Yearly Facials Required

"A shrine of Democracy. . . placed so high it won't pay to pull it down. . .carved as close to heaven as possible."

This was the vision of Gutzon Borglum, the sculptor who labored for 13 years until his death to carve the gigantic faces of Washington, Jefferson, Lincoln and Theodore Roosevelt upon Mount Rushmore in the Black Hills of South Dakota.

Borglum's spectacular monument will last, geologists estimate, a half-million years; but this doesn't mean that its granite features withstand the elements without the help of man. The fact is that the four Presidents get an annual "beauty treatment" by National Park Service repair experts.

Their task is to seal the "wrinkles" caused by winter rains that freeze in crevices which widen and mar the smooth surfaces Borglum and his corps of assistants achieved. The repairmen work in bosum chairs banging over the 5,725-foot mountainside filling in the fissures with a mixture of white lead, granite dust and linseed oil.

Borglum, who died in 1941 and left completion of the work to his son Lincoln, was determined that it would resist the ravages of time.

"When I learned," he said, "that this granite erodes perhaps an inch in 100,000 years, I added a foot to Washington's nose. Nobody could tell the difference, and it will give him another million years."

Dynamiting for the project began in 1927. The presidential features, which can be seen 60 miles away, were roughed out with drills and jack hammers on measurements from a scale model. Later they were smoothed with pneumatic chisels.

CAN IT BE?

Ted Williams, noted as a slugger, was a pitcher for the Boston Red Sox. Williams pitched two innings against the Detroit Tigers in 1940.

By Rushmore Presidents

Today Borglum's epic 60-foot sculptures of the Presidents are visited by more than a million tourists annually. They form the world's largest memorial, taller than the great pyramid of Egypt.

JUST PUSH THE BUTTON . . . A file clerk at Martin Army Hospital has only to press a button to reach any one of 250,000 medical records. PFC Thomas F. Cromie locates a patient's record in one of seven new power-shelf filing machines recently installed at the hospital.

MAH Filing System Modernized By New Automatic Shelf System

No more walking, bending, stooping nor ladder climbing for file clerks at Martin Army Hospital!

Seven new power-shelf filing machines took the drudgery out of handling the hospitals 250,000 medical files, Monday.

Like seven lobes of a giant brain, the machines can come up with any patient's file at the touch of a button.

Each machine has 14 shelves which revolve when the operator presses a button. The shelf containing the desired medical file comes into view and stops before a window in front of the operator.

The files are alphabetized and each machine bears a chart on its face to show what records it contains and the distribution on each of its 14 shelves.

Maj. Frank E. Blakely, hospital registrar, said his office plans to operate the files from 7 a.m. to 11 p.m. One man will be on duty from 7 a.m. until 3 p.m. and two will work from 3 to 11 p.m. Five additional personnel will be on duty at the files during hospital clinic hours, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

A patient reporting to a clinic will go to the admission entrance of the hospital, pick up his own file and take it with him to his appointment.

Before the new system was installed, a list of appointments had to be prepared at each clinic a day in advance. The list was sent to the file room where clerks collected the needed medical files from shelves varying in height from floor to ceiling. The files were then carried to the clinics, used, returned, and filed once more by the same time-consuming, back-breaking method.

The new filing system is not designed to decrease the number of personnel employed nor to speed up the task of maintaining in patient files, Maj. Blakely said.

"The sole purpose of installing the machines is to make a patient's record available more quickly when it is needed," he added.

Installation of the machines required reinforcing the floor of the file room. A double door was cut from the admission lobby to the file room. Seven three-prong electric outlets provide the current to operate the machines.

If the hospital should suffer a power failure, the files will not be "dead." A small motor will operate the power-shelf file machines, using the hospital's auxiliary current.

Not even a mechanical failure can render the medical records unavailable. Each machine is equipped with a hand crank for such an emergency. There is no possibility that careless filing may "jam" a machine. If a medical file protrudes from its shelf, an electric eye stops the machine.

This same safety feature protects the hands of the file clerk from getting caught between a disappearing shelf and the edge of the window.

The shelves revolve either up or down, whichever is the shortest distance from the desired shelf to the operator's window. The machine automatically makes this decision — not the operator.

The clerk will not know in which direction the shelves will move when he presses a button. Yet there is no danger of getting his hands caught.

The same electric eye that stops the machine for a protruding file will stop the machine for a man's hand.

Strong Character Takes Courage, OCs Told

It takes a different, deeper kind of courage to display strength of character in life than for a soldier to charge a raging machine gun, Maj. Gen. Robert H. Wienecke, commandant of the Armed Forces Staff College in Norfolk, Va., said here recently.

Speaking to 109 graduates of The Infantry School's Officer Candidate Class No. 4, Gen. Wienecke, former commanding general of the 2nd Infantry Division, stated that strength of character is one of three guiding factors to a man's success.

The general added that another guiding factor is to "constantly strive for improved professional competence."

Build Library

"Start early on your library," the speaker said. "Get good books and study them. Go to your service schools. Take every opportunity for more education and make it pay off."

Gen. Wienecke said, "An insatiable curiosity is necessary if you are to reach your goals."

He cited the necessity to gain human understanding as the third and final factor. The two-star general challenged the new officers to "get out and see for yourself what's going on in your command."

"In dealing with your men, you must use good judgment", the general said. "Just go by the golden rule, you don't have to be soft, but remember that your judgment must be sound."

Following the address, Gen. Wienecke presented the first diploma to the class honor graduate, 2nd Lt. Albert G. Scooler.

Receives Awards

Lt. Scooler also received the Association of the U. S. Army Award, a Letter of Commendation, and personal congratulations from Gen. Wienecke.

Second Lt. Kenneth G. Hacker of Fort Benning was recognized as the honor leadership graduate, receiving a statuette of an Infantry leader.

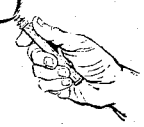
Gen. Wienecke also spoke to the Military Order of World Wars while here.

He stressed that the American people should support the U. S. foreign policy effort without reservation.

Gen. Wienecke is formerly chief of the Military Assistance Advisory Group in Pakistan.

"A strong effort is necessary in this field," he said. "We have a lot of dedicated people working to stop Communism in all areas of the world, and they must have public support, regardless of political party affiliation."

Honor Gen. Eddy



During the business meeting, MOWW members unanimously passed a resolution honoring Lt. Gen. (Ret.) Manton S. Eddy, who died April 10, for his military service and for his contributions to the community and the Military Order of World Wars.

The resolution read in part as follows:

"WHEREAS, Lt. Gen. (Ret.) Manton S. Eddy, United States Army, departed this life on April 10, 1962; and WHEREAS, his passing marked the loss of a true friend and loyal companion, whose life included 37 years of brave, enlightened and devoted service as a soldier of his country; WHEREAS, upon retirement he took an active and effective part as a business and civic leader in our community, including chairmanship of the Board of the National Bank of Fort Benning; NOW, THEREFORE, in recognition of the great worth of Gen. Eddy's life's work to our nation and to express our high regard and esteem for an outstanding soldier of our times, the entire membership of the Columbus - Fort Benning Chapter of the Military Order of World Wars by unanimous vote in meeting assembled, does hereby authorize the original of this resolution, duly signed by our commander and adjutant, respectively, to be spread upon the minutes of this organization and that the family of Gen. Eddy be furnished with an official copy thereof."

The resolution is dated Sept. 20, 1962, and is signed by Maj. Gen. Phillip E. Gallagher, commander of the Columbus-Fort Benning Chapter.

T. C. Moore Lauds Area Managers

The excellent business managers in Columbus industries and at Fort Benning are largely responsible for the splendid economic position the city enjoys, 80 members of the Armed Forces Management Association here were told recently.

Speaking at the first luncheon meeting of the fall season was Thomas C. Moore, executive director of the Columbus Chamber of Commerce.

"Columbus is a born manufacturing town," Moore said. "And thanks to the good industrial managers, and this installation at Fort Benning, we find ourselves in an excellent position."

Moore expressed his faith and pride in the growth and development of the city.

"As a manager whose responsibility is to help mold the economy of this city, I wouldn't want to die with it on my conscience that 100 years from now someone might speak of Columbus as a 'city that was' rather than a 'city that is'," he continued.

The speaker presented both political and business aspects of the economic management of the community.

Moore praised the advance planning in the areas of education and religion and Fine Arts in the Columbus area. He pointed with pride to the progress that has been made toward a "face-lifting" for the downtown area.

"If the downtown area of a city dies, it is the citizens who pay for it," he said.

Referring to the building of canopies on Broadway, Moore said, "I am proud to say that this plan came from our organization, the Chamber of Commerce."

Dental Health Series

Teeth Are Damaged By Bad Oral Habits

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The following is the 18th in a series of articles presented in the interests of better dental health.)

By Maj. Charles W. Dobson
Preventive Dentistry Officer

With conscientious care you should be rewarded with sound teeth, relatively free of decay and gum diseases.

But sometimes it is not enough to brush your teeth and visit the dentist regularly. You can offset all this with bad oral habits. They will destroy your teeth just as surely as decay or gum diseases.

The extent of destruction depends upon the habit itself; how often, how long, and how intensely it is repeated. Are you doing any of the following?

Nervous habits: Biting lips, fingernails, cigarette holders, cigars or clenching teeth.

Nothing - better - to - do habits: Biting toothpicks, pencils, fountain pens, straws, matches, paper clips, safety pins and bobby pins.

Pressure habits: Pressure from hand as in stature "The Thinker" or from stem of pipe, pressure resulting from constant use of teeth to open bobby pins, abnormal tongue pressure, or wedging toothpicks between the teeth. (These habits either influence the position of the teeth or eventually lead to the destruction of the supporting bone, or both. The main function of your teeth is to chew your food. Stop inventing additional jobs!)

Children's habits: Thumb-sucking, most children grow out of it but this habit can cause the upper front teeth to protrude or the lower front teeth to recede.

Abnormal sleeping habits: Some children sleep with their fists tucked into the soft flesh of their cheek. The pressure will influence the normal growth and development of the entire dental arch, actually forcing the teeth to grow or incline towards the tongue.

Mouth breathing: Because the mouth is kept opened breathing there is little or no natural lip pressure against the front teeth and they may tip forward to a greater degree than normal. Breathing exclusively through the mouth dries out the tissues, leading to decrease in tone and eventual gum disorders.

Abusive habits: Cracking nuts with your teeth, chewing ice or opening bottles with your teeth.

Habits that wear away tooth structure: Improper tooth brushing with a hard brush. Scrubbing the teeth with the ends of the bristles of the toothbrush, over a period of years, will actually carve V-shaped notches in every tooth involved.

Using coarse pumice or salt as a dentifrice. These agents are abrasives and will remove the enamel. Use a safe dentifrice. One containing a fluoride will reduce decay up to 25 per cent if used four times each day. Save the abrasives for wood and metal.

Grinding teeth together. Usually people are aware of their habit but have great difficulty stopping without professional help. The dentist can help by construction of an appliance similar to the protective mouth pieces worn by prize fighters.

Eating excessive amounts of citrus fruits such as lemons and oranges. The organic acids in these fruits softens the enamel. Once this decalcification starts, varying amounts of enamel is removed while brushing. The teeth eventually appear notched or scratched.

Stop bad oral habits for better dental health.

25 USO Volunteers Visit Service Clubs Recently

A group of 25 young ladies from the Atlanta USO representing the Junior Volunteers paid The Infantry Center a two-day visit recently.

Saturday afternoon after dinner at a local restaurant the group departed for Service Club four in the Kelly Hill area to entertain a standing-room-only crowd with a talented show. The group, along with a combo from Atlanta, made a brief appearance at Crain Hall NCO Mess after leaving Service Club four.

Their Sunday schedule got underway with a coffee call at Harmony Church Service Club three. The Junior Volunteers made their last stop at Martin Army Hospital to do a show for the patients.

The group was chaperoned by senior volunteer hostess, Miss Anna Marie Katzenstein.

The following girls made-up the group of the Junior Hostesses: Donna Buelterman, Donna Davis, Arlene George, Ann Hanson, Eleanor Viddle, brooks, Anne Styles, Robbie Hargrove, Juanita Spangler, Libby Doherty, Brenda Aiken, Lyn Prickett, Beverly Samples, Betty Jean Seabolt, Jerry Morgan, Gerry Samples, Dot Norris, Helen Sutton, Jackie O'Neal, Mary Alice Aaron, Doris Elam, Jackie Murphy, LaVon Poer, Barbara Oliver and Laura Ericson .

This affair was under the guidance of Miss Caroline Reid, Infantry Center Service Clubs supervisor, Miss Riki Coll, director of Service Club one, Miss Elizabeth Shanks, Service Club four director, and Miss Carolyn Doningus, director of Service Club three.

AUSA Annual Meet Scheduled Oct. 8-10

WASHINGTON (ANS)—Some 4,000 members are expected to hear Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara deliver the principal address at the annual meeting of the Association of the United States Army to be held at the Sheraton - Park Hotel in Washington, Oct. 8-10.

The defense secretary will address the group at the General Julis Robertson of Virginia; and the newly designated Army Chief of Staff, Gen. Earle G. Wheeler.

Included on this year's business agenda are progress reports on major Army and joint service commands; a look at Army reorganization and special warfare; and a forecast of what the future holds for the Nation's Senior Service.

More than 150 Army and industry exhibits featuring the very latest in Army equipment and industrial and scientific developments in the military field will round-out the delegates' view of the modern Army.

Vets Qualify For State Jobless Pay

ATLANTA — Recently discharged veteran, including Reservists and National Guardsmen just released from active duty, are eligible for unemployment compensation if they are unable to find work within one week, Georgia Veterans Service Director Pete Wheeler reported this week.

To be eligible for unemployment compensation, a veteran must have an honorable discharge, have served at least 90 days continuous active duty (or have a service-connected disability if less than 90 days), and have earned enough wages either as a serviceman or in previous private employment to establish a claim under the Georgia Employment Security Law.

Unemployment compensation based solely on military earnings ranges from $26 a week to $38 a week for a minimum of nine weeks and a maximum of 26 weeks, depending upon length of service and military pay scale.

At present, job insurance claims are based on insured earnings during the period from April 1, 1961, through Mrch 31, 1962. Employment in either private business or active military duty during this period will count toward unemployment compensation.

Veterans either on terminal leave from the military or attending school under the GI Bill are not eligible for job insurance claims.

Veterans who are unemployed should report to the nearest office of the Georgia State Employment Service and bring a copy of their discharge. They will receive priority in placement in available jobs while claims for unemployment compensation are pending.

Fort Leavenworth: Training Ground for Top Leaders

By Bem Price

FORT LEAVENWORTH, Kan. (AP) — The Army examines its officers for brass content here.

If the assay level is high, they become qualified as staff officers, chiefs of staff and generals; the Army's top brass.

Any man who fails the examination might as well plan on retiring to that world known to the Army as "the outside."

Ft. Leavenworth is the home of the Army's Command and General Staff College, a remarkable school practically unknown to the civilian world.

A vast amount of basic military doctrine originates here, doctrine that ultimately finds distribution in the form of field manuals and instructional pamphlets.

Gives the Test

It is here that national policy becomes converted in broad outline to strategy, tactics and techniques and is tested against the broad experience of the students, probably the most cosmopolitan and widely traveled student body to be found on any campus.

For example, there was a time national policy and the probability of the Army fighting a non-nuclear war was discounted heavily.

The tables of organization and equipment for the Pentomic Division, made up of five battle groups armed with nuclear rockets, originated here.

In that nuclear-war-or-nothing period, the school devoted about 97 per cent of its instruction to the use of atomics on the battlefield, the need for mobility and dispersal.

But then policy changed and it became the national assumption that "little" wars in underdeveloped nations were more likely to occur than all-out war. The Pentomic Division for this kind of combat was all wrong.

At the moment the Army is in the long process of another reorganization of its divisions to give them a greater flexibility in meeting the problems of nuclear and non-nuclear war, regardless of size. Under this plan there will be no such thing in the future as a standard Army division — only a type of division.

The ideas for this new division came out of brain-storming sessions of the faculty.

The new division has a central command and supply base as a foundation. By adding or subtracting battalions of armor, Infantry or mechanized Infantry, the division can be tailored to the mission.

In the past, generals have been specialists. They have been classed as armored division commanders, mechanized infantry commanders or Infantry division commanders.

With the reorganized division each general is supposed to be a man capable of maneuvering and fighting all three types of divisions equally well.

This concept of the all-purpose general is still being debated at the school even as it tries to produce the first examples.

The purpose of the school is simple: To give officers an understanding of the means, military, moral and economic, by which to achieve victory wherever they are called upon to lead.

Wants No Blunders

The Army wants no blunders such as those committed by the Germans when they invaded the Soviet Ukraine during World War II and with oppressive tactics converted a potentially friendly, anti-Russian people into deadly partisan warriors.

The college gives an intensive, 39-week cram course for regular officers in which the students receive what amounts to a four-year course in geopolitics.

Atop this is piled a series of subjects running the gamut of military operations from field army management through warfare of all types in all possible climes.

The school is open to officers with not less than eight years of commissioned service and not more than 15.

Here the students, senior captains through junior colonels, go to classes six hours daily, Monday through Friday.

All in all, the officer going through the regular course — there are shorter, less demanding associate courses — will spend 1,145 hours in classrooms. He will have 740 hours of homework at a minimum and he will spend 33 hours taking written examinations.

The school accepts about 1,500 students a year and about half go through the regular course.

Any given day and night find the student engaged in a war game involving: "air-landed Infantry division in semi-independent operation; vertical envelopment, influence of cold, snow and ice; employment of chemical, bacterial and nuclear weapons.

The playground: Red China.

Again, he might find himself studying the armored division in offensive and defensive operations in unfavorable terrain . . . command decisions required as a result of nuclear surface burst."

Locale: Poland.

There is no area of the world where the students do not maneuver imaginary troops in all sorts of warfare —Siberia, Syria, North Africa, Central Africa, Norway, Cuba, Afghanistan, Brazil — you name it, they study it.

Sample problem:

"What does a commander do if he is fighting in Southeast Asia when a cholera epidemic breaks out among the civilian population with whom his troops are in daily, routine contact? The immunity of his troops is borderline and the supply of vaccine is limited. These are a friendly people and he depends in large measure on them for support. The probability of contact with the enemy in the near future is high. Who gets the available vaccine?"

The object of the problem is to make the student think. There is no pat solution and the student must seek the variables and then offer and support an opinion in open argument.

Student Must Know

The student must know the politics, customs, racial characteristics, religion, terrain and economy of each country in which he might be called upon to fight.

"School solutions" to the wide ranging problems are worked out well in advance of the school year by teams of instructors — the brightest majors and lieutenant colonels the Army can find.

These are men who have not been cast in the Army mold of acceptance. Their job is to question everything. Further, the student is not bound to accept the school solution. So long as the student can support his position with logic, he is entitled to his opinion and is not penalized for it.

At the end of the course, the student should know the mechanics of handling any size force from a two-regiment brigade through a 250,000-man field army.

The college trains not only U.S. officers, but officers from 55 friendly or allied nations. There are 80 foreign officers attending the school now.

TSB Lists Totals In '62 Fund Drive

Civilian employes of The Student Brigade have attained 74.07 per cent of their goal of 100 per cent participation in the current Community Activities Association Fund Drive.

Headquarters TSB has accomplished 84.8 per cent participation so far in the drive which is being conducted in all the command and staff sections in an effort to reach established goals.

Gen. Harrison Sees World in Serious State

There is no way to stop war—it is fight or surrender—50 members and guests of the Officers Christian Union were told Monday night.

Lt. Gen. (Ret.) William K. Harrison of Atlanta, president of the National Officers Christian Union, spoke to the group at the Religious Education Center following a seated buffet.

"I have been in the Army through three wars," the general said, "yet never have I seen the world situation as serious as it is now. There is no way to stop wars. They are not made by generals. We must fight or surrender."

Era Predicted

"This age was predicted in the New Testament as a time of great disaster," he continued. "There is no doubt that both we and Russia have weapons that could destroy civilization. . .Only God can save men from what ails them."

From 44 years experience in military service, Gen. Harrison recounted instances which strengthened his faith as a Christian.

"It does not matter whether you are a general or a president or a king, Christ does the same for everyone who believes," Gen. Harrison said. "There is no human scientific explanation of salvation, but God can and does save men."

"You must be the very best officers possible if your Christian testimony is going to amount to anything. No one will listen to you if you aren't," he added.

Gen. Harrison arrived on the post Sunday for a two-day visit.

He addressed Infantry Center and 2nd Infantry Divison chaplains Monday at the Main Post Protestant Chapel.

A luncheon for Gen. Harrison was held at noon at the Main Officers Open Mess.

President of the local chapter of the union is Capt. Albert Krapf.

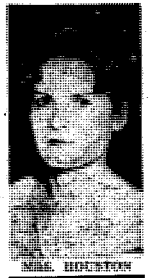
A MATTER OF COURAGE



Two American fighting men came back after a year as prisoners of the Communists in Laos. They showed the courage traditional in American servicemen. The POW is bound to tell his captors only four things: his name, rank, service number and date of birth. Above all, he doesn't say anything that might hurt his buddies, his unit or his country. With him, as with Maj. Bailey and Sgt. Ballenger, it's a matter of loyalty —and courage.

CODE OF CONDUCT: 5. When questioned, should I become a prisoner of war, I am bound to give only name, rank, service number and date of birth. I will evade answering further questions to the utmost of my ability. I will make no oral or written statements disloyal to my country and its allies or harmful to their cause.

New Device To Measure Body Data

A portable telemetering system to measure physyiological data from soldiers during field maneuvers will be developed under a contract awarded by the Army Medical Service.

Radiation Incorporated of Melbourne, Fla., was awarded a $97,991.00 for development of the system.

The lightweight telemetry system and transmitter will be carried on a fool-soldier's back to measure his temperature, pulse - rate and respiration during field maneuvers. Information will be transmitted by the system over at least a half-mile of terrain to a portable data receiving station.

The telemetering system may also be used to record information on the ground from a parachutist making a jump. It will be designed to operate over an air-to-ground distance of approximately 21,000 feet.

Throwaway Magneto Now Being Tested

FORT BELVOIR, Va. (ANS) —The U. S. Army Material Command is currently testing a small, compact, throwaway type of magneto which requires no spare parts or maintenance.

According to engineers at the Command's Engineer Research and Development Laboratories at Fort Belvoir, Va., the new magneto can save the Army thousands of dollars.

It is expected to simplify logistics by eliminating complicated cataloging and supply of repair parts, as well as bulky and expensive support equipment and tools. The entire assembly replacement using the unitized magneto has been found to be less costly and time consuming than replacing parts in the conventional model. In addition, little or no training of maintenance personnel is required.

The new magneto weighs 3¾ pounds; has a cubage of 45.0 cubic inches and costs less than $16. The conventional magneto, which is designed for repair parts replacement, weighs 9¼ pounds, has a cubage of 78.5 cubic inches and costs $32.

The units undergoing tests were developed by Slick Electro Corp., Rockford, Ill., under contract with the Laboratories, an agency of the new U. S. Army Mobility Command, Detroit, a major sub-command of the Army Materiel Command.

New Army Chief Asks Teamwork

Gen. Earle G. Wheeler this week assumed the position of Army Chief of Staff, succeeding Gen. George H. Decker who retired Sept. 30. Following his installation as top military authority of the Army, Gen. Wheeler made the following statement to all members of the Army:

"I assume the post of Chief of Staff of the United States Army realizing fully the Army's heavy, world-wide responsibilities and confident of the loyal support of the men and women of the Army in meeting those responsibilities.

Our continuing mission—our responsibility to our country—is to defend the nation. In today's turbulent world of protracted conflict and of exploding technology, the accomplishment of this mission and the discharge of this responsibility is more urgent and more difficult than ever before. Each of us—of all ranks and all components—must strive together to execute our assigned mission and deserve the confidence of our countrymen by

SAFETY CONSCIOUS COMMANDER—Col. Lattin Adjusts Belt

Safety Conscious Colonel Makes Seat Belts 'SOP'

With an ear attuned to the advice of numerous safety officials, Col. John H. Lattin, commander of The Infantry Center Troop Command, has installed seat belts in his official staff car.

"After viewing the survival car that visited the post recently, and reading the statistics put out by the National Safety Council and other groups, I appreciate the value of seat belts in reducing injuries," the safety conscious officer said.

"As a matter of fact," he added, "I also have them in my private vehicle."

In his staff car, Col. Lattin had four of the safety devices installed, two in front and two in back. He is following a trend that has seen rapid growth in the last two years.

According to National Safety Council officials, the use of seat belts in automobiles tripled in 1961 and at least six states are requiring installation of them on new cars.

Another post official who is a firm believer in the value of seat belts is Infantry Center safety officer, Norman M. Evans.

"Almost 40,000 lives are lost in traffic accidents every year," he stated, "and it has been proven by reliable studies that seat belts can reduce serious and fatal injuries by one third."

The list of organizations urging the use of the safety device is impressive and includes the National Safety Council, the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, and the American Medical Association.

A pamphlet printed jointly by these groups states, "Thousands of lives are lost each year because people are thrown against windshields or out of car doors by the impact of crashes."

Seat belts, which buckle around the waist and hold a person fast, prevent this, the pamphlet adds.

A commonly heard objection to this, according to Safety Council officials, is fear of being held in the car in case of

Doughboys' 4-0 Record Set for Test

Fort Benning's Doughboys will put their 4-0 record on the table tomorrow night when they travel to Fort Eustis, Va., to meet an undefeated, unscored on Army team.

Fort Eustis, the 1961 National Service football champions, brag of such overwhelming victories as a 47-0 romp over Fort Dix and two wins over New England semi-pro teams.

Last year, Fort Eustis handed the Doughboys a 15-7 loss at Doughboy Stadium.

molding an increasingly powerful, effective and ready Army.

"The strength of the Army derives from the professional skill and the intelligent dedication of its people. tribute to the United Givers Fund Drive may receive credit for participation by presenting to their keynes a receipt for their contributions made elsewhere," the fund drive chairman Col. Richard W. Keyes, commander of the 1st Infantry Brigade, emphasized.

The CAA approved fund requests for the operation of three principal Fort Benning community activities, the Visiting Nurses, Preventive Dental Health Programs and Youth Activities Club.

Without the support of the CAA, these organizations would have to suspend all or a substantial part of their activities, officials pointed out.

The CAA also makes a contribution to the Muscogee and Russell Counties United Givers Fund Drive. The UG fund supports 34 local and national health, welfare and character building agencies, including the YMCA and USO Clubs in Columbus which provide recreation and entertainment for servicemen.

Safety

fire or submersion in water.

Council officials refute this by stating, "Less than one per cent of all injury producing accidents involve fire or submersion, and seat belts greatly improve your chances of surviving even such an accident."

Seat belts can be unfastened in an instant with one hand, and they greatly improve chances of remaining conscious.

Evans commented "A car when plunging into a body of water generally turns over and if a person is not securely held by seat belts, he is apt to be thrown about the car."

"When the car finally settles, chances are good that the driver will be disoriented and not know where the door is, since its quite dark underwater" he continued.

"If the driver were able to remain behind the wheel, he would have no trouble orienting himself and opening the door," he concluded.

At Moderate Speeds

Other facts about the bells emphasized by the Safety Council concerns accidents at moderately slow speeds and those that occur in a 25-mile radius from home.

"More than half the accidents causing injury or death occur at speeds of less than 40 and three out of four traffic deaths occur within a 25-mile radius of home," they say, refuting the common arguments of not needing seat belts unless you are on a long trip.

"It may be an inconvenience to unbuckle and buckle the belts every time you get in or out of the car, but isn't your life worth a little trouble?" Evans asked.

2 Post Units To Participate In Maneuver

Two Fort Benning units, the 31st Transportation Company (light helicopter) and the 138th Transportation Detachment, will participate in Exercise Three Pairs, a Strike Command maneuver at Fort Hood, Tex., Oct. 15 through 30.

They will move to Fort Hood before Oct. 12, transported by air and ground convoy.

The 31st Transportation Company, commanded by Maj. Paul O. Bailey, will be responsible for transportation of aggressor forces during the operation. The 138th, under command of Capt. Vernon L. Sawvell, also of Columbus, will support the 31st in providing field maintenance service.

Operation Three Pairs will be a mock war involving friendly and aggressor forces consisting of a mechanized Armored Division with attached logistics support and Air Force units.

The Air Force elements will work alternately with the friendly and aggressor forces emphasizing air maneuverability and support of ground forces.

The exercise, headed by Gen. Paul D. Adams, commanding general of the U. S. Strike Command, will include a "live" fire phase in which both Army and Air Force elements will participate.

According to Three Pairs officials, two specific purposes of the exercise are to gain experience in counterinsurgency and to stress development of solutions for problems of coordination between Army and Air Force aviation in conjunction with air traffic control.

America's Founder Oceanaut of His Age

They had their last sight of land on Sept. 9 —and even that bleak hump in the Canary Islands must have seemed friendly to their eyes as the Admiral of the Ocean Sea set their course due west into the unknown.

Three little wooden ships; ridiculously frail and unseaworthy by today's standards. Their total crews numbered less than 100 men—good sailors all, but some of them in their hearts must have remembered the old theory that the world was flat. A lot of people still believed it.

Not Christopher Columbus. He knew where he was headed — by sailing 2,400 miles west he'd reach a group of islands near Japan. A new, short sea route to Asia would be opened.

It seems odd, but long after Oct. 12—the day we now celebrate as Columbus Day—Columbus insisted that San Salvador, the island in the Bahamas where he and his men first came ashore, was part of Asia. This oceanaut of his age had no notion of his true achievement—the discovery of a New World.

Think of the obstacles he surmounted to pursue his dream. Today our astronauts and the army of scientists engaged in Project Mercury and Project Gemini and Project Apollo are backed by the resources of a great nation. They're cheered on every step of the way.

What did the oceanaut have in 1492? Precious little — and he wouldn't have had that if Isabella of Spain hadn't listened to her royal treasurer. It was the best investment any queen ever made.

Legislation Affects Rights of Veterans

Legislation affecting members of the Armed Forces continues to make its way through Congress.

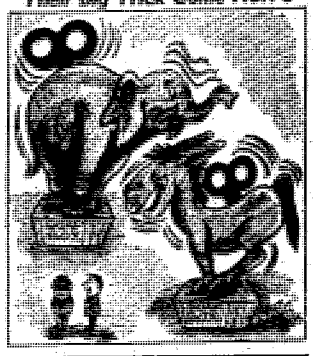
Much of it means money, benefits or rights to servicemen returning to civilian life either through retirement or release from active duty.

Latest figures show that 22 legislative packages have become public law since the 7th Congress convened.

The latest bill to pass Congress and be signed by the President affects all servicemen — past, present and future — by increasing the rates of disability compensation.

Another new law extends the veterans' guaranteed and direct home loan program and also provides for the veterans' direct loan program.

Still another liberalizes the provisions of Title 38, U. S. Code, relating to the assignment of National Service Life Insurance.



An amendment to the existing law authorizing hospital and medical care for peacetime veterans suffering from non-compensable service-connected disabilities may affect any serviceman.

A bill signed by the President in July 1962 amends an existing law relating to war orphans' educational assistance. Eligible persons may now attend foreign educational institutions under certain circumstances.

Another new law explains what type of service is now creditable for pension purposes. Other legislation increases the rate of special pension payable to certain persons awarded the Medal of Honor.

One law protects the family as well as the veteran. It states there shall be no reduction of pension otherwise payable during hospitalization of certain veterans with a wife or child.

Their Big Trick Come Nov. 6

Liberty and Communism

Labor's Right to Organize

In all democratic countries, workers have the right to organize in labor unions and to engage in collective bargaining with employers regarding wages, hours, benefits and conditions of labor.

In addition, labor unions have the right to strike or carry out a work stoppage. Finally, labor unions are as free from government control as are corporations and businessmen, in some respects even more free.

In 1900 there were 2,565,000 workers in British trade unions, and only 869,000 in American labor unions. After 1900, in the United States, the American Federation of Labor and the United Mine Workers rapidly increased their memberships.

By 1955 the AFL represented 107 separate unions with over 10 million members; the CIO, 32 unions with 5.7 million members. In that year the two federations united in the AFL-CIO. There were about two million members of unions outside the merger.

In a discussion of labor problems, the Soviet legal writer N. G. Aleksandrov reveals that Soviet "trade unions" are rarely if ever consulted on such important labor problems as wage scales, norms, labor legislation, housing, leaves, etc.

In accordance with a decision of the Communist Party Central Committee of December 1956, "trade unions" were granted a "major concession" in the form of a new statue issued on Jan. 31, 1957, establishing a new procedure for reviewing labor disputes.

While it would seem on the surface that at last Soviet "trade unions" were truly empowered to represent and defend the rights of workers, close scrutiny of the new statute indicates that under it "trade unions" are not empowered to negotiate new labor conditions, such as wage rates and production norms, before they come into force, but only have the right to protest a violation of already established rules.

Thus it appears that even the most "progressive" form of Soviet labor legislation still lags far behind those principles and rights which workers and trade unions in the free world have long come to take for granted.

Space Effort Costly But Pays Dividends

When the average man reads in cold figures the cost of the nation's space program, his mind reels—and he can't be blamed for that. After all, it's his money that helps to pay for the missiles and rockets and other space age hardware, and he wouldn't be human if he didn't sometimes wonder if it is all worth while.

So we finally succeed in putting an astronaut on the moon—then what? It will make a lot of scientists happy, and of course we'll all glow with pride in their achievement. But wouldn't the money be better spent in making the world a better place to live in—carrying on man's never-ending war against hunger, disease and poverty?

Many well-meaning people share this view. They might, however, modify it if they considered the by-products of space research that affect their daily lives. To take a very simple example, a ceramic material developed by scientists for use in rocket nosecones is now used in dishes which can go from the coldest freezer into the hottest oven, and vice versa.

But of far greater significance is the contribution space scientists are making in the field of medicine. The "heart-watcher" is a case in point—a device the size of a cigarette pack that can broadcast an electrocardiogram to a doctor while his patient is engaged in routine affairs. And in communications, it is anticipated that by 1970 one enormous network will link the whole world, making global telephone-dialing possible as well as world-wide television.

Weather observation, thanks to the Tiros I satellite, is expanding toward the ultimate goal of world observation which will give early warning of hurricanes and tornadoes. Long-range forecasts will enable farmers to regulate their plantings and assure a stable supply of food.

These are but a few of the dividends the space program is returning to us—not all of them immediate, but foreseeable as the hurdling of one barrier brings science to another. So the conquest of outer space is, after all, contributing to human betterment. (AFPS)

Where Were You?

By Chaplain (Col.) Silas E. Decker
TIC Chaplain

The above question is one that may be daily asked by a parent of a child and frequently asked by a superior of an associate or assistant. It serves as a check upon the use of our time and the status of our presence. We can, with considerable profit, take a moment of time and ask ourselves this same question: "Where were you?"

I remember a Sunday, many years ago, spent in the home of Henry Baxter, Sheridan Road, Evanston, Illinois. I had visited the campus of Northwestern University (Methodist) with the thought of entering college. Mr. Baxter said, "Prepare now for what you want to be 10 years from today."

The future is largely shaped by events of the past. This is confirmed by history. America, compared to some countries, is a young nation. Today its culture and traditions are in a formative period. Where we will be as a people 10, 20 or 50 years from now is being decided by what we are doing today.

If we prevent the evils of materialism from engulfing the free world we must believe in our America, hold sacred our vows to defend our country, and, as citizen-soldiers, within the framework of the Uniform Code of Military Justice, help direct our nation's future by the practice of good citizenship. Herein lies the personal application, "Prepare now for what you want to be 10 years from today."

NCO Club's Distaff Doings

By Marie Fowler

When the NCO Wives' Club plans to have a hobo party, it takes more than rain to dampen their spirit!

Husbands of members were guests, and attired in everything from potato sacks to baggy trousers and decrepit velveteen skirts, "hit the road" for Victory Lodge. A downpour made the planned cook-out impossible, but a quick frisk of car trunks produced a portable grill which was hastily installed inside a fireplace where "Chefs Boy-ar-dee Fowler and "Duck Bill" Krilling soon had tasty hamburgers and hot dogs ready to go with other chow brought along by the ladies.

Highlight of the evenings entertainment was a chorus line and pantomime skit "Take Back Your Mink" performed by Mesdames Krilling, DiLorenzo, Valent, Sellers and Valentine. Contests, games and dances completed the entertainment and all present voted this a real fun party.

Our thanks to Mrs. William Krilling, whose creative ability made the evening such a terrific success.

We are happy to report that our president, Mrs. Robert E. Lamb, who underwent surgery recently is recuperating nicely and will be with us again soon.

Sword, Pen Club To Meet Tonight

The Sword and Pen Chapter of the Armed Forces Writers' League will hold its monthly dinner meeting at the Villa Nova Restaurant tonight at 7 p.m.

All members are urged to attend to discuss plans for the coming season. Actively engaged writers of the area are invited to join the group as guests and new members. For further information call Mrs. Lawrence W. Smith, 544-3428.

Fall Coffee Held By G-4 Tech. Wives

Unique decorations highlighted the G-4 Tech. Services' first fall coffee held recently at the Custer Terrace Branch of the Main Officers' Open Branch at Fort Benning.

Ladies of the Post Ordnance were hostesses. They made the decorations depicting an autumn rural scene including lighted, functioning "waterwheel" and "waterfall." The centerpiece was a miniature farm complete with house, waterwheel and populated with tiny ceramic pixies and animals. Individual tables held floral arrangements of ivy and bittersweet studded with small figures and cattail shaped candles.

Mrs. Dale D. Dixon conducted a short meeting and announced the planned fall activities.

New members were welcomed. Among the guests welcomed were Mrs. Ben Harrell and Mrs. John E. Kelly.

39 Officers To Attend CC Party

Thirty-nine lieutenants in the Judge Advocate General Corps who are attending an orientation at The Infantry School here will be honored guests at a party at 4 p.m. Oct. 14 at the Country Club.

Hosts will be members of The Infantry Center Staff Judge Advocate Section.

The JAG officers are enrolled in an eight-week Infantry officers leadership course, which ends Oct. 30.

The students are law school graduates and qualified attorneys who recently accepted commissions as first lieutenants. They will attend an 11-week course at the Judge Advocate General School at Charlottesville, Va., after the orientation at The Infantry School.

For further information about the party, telephone Capt. Robert S. Poydasheff, LI 5-4423.

Report Card

By Mary Beth Williams

The Fort Benning chapter of the Junior Army Daughters of America welcomed new members last Saturday with a coke party at the Main Officers Open Mess.

About 75 girls enjoyed refreshments in the Normandy Room and East Porch. Wall decorations brought back summer memories and football helmets were on the tables.

Georganne Dilloo, vice-president of the organization introduced the officers and read the purposes of the club as stated in the constitution. In the general discussion period which followed, the year's schedule was outlined.

Word comes that Carlyle Park, former Benningite, has begun his campaign for the office of vice-president of the freshman class at the University of Western Kentucky. Carlyle, son of Lt. Col. and Mrs. Herman Park, is well-remembered for his fine record and representation of Fort Benning at Columbus High for two years, as well as for his work with Follow Me Club and as a lifeguard this summer. He has pledged the Pershing Rifles at this college in Bowling Green.

A majority of Benning teenagers attend Baker High School and make up a large percentage of the school.

Among the Benningites prominent at Baker are Kay Johnson, Lynn Craddock, and Cheryl Ely, who serve as ROTC sponsors. Lynn and Cheryl are president and secretary - treasurer of the Civinettes, also.

Cissy Whitt, Linda Seawell and Lyn Vallentine boost Baker's terrific school spirit in their roles of cheerleaders.

In other school clubs, Diane Lane holds the position of secretary of the Future Homemakers of America, and Sandy Partain is chaplain of the Future Teachers.

Pacelli's undefeated football team is aided by many of our finest post boys. I was able to get the names of Johnny Meads, Jimmy Wein, Ed Doucette, Mike Merrill, Corky Henderson, Bobby Thompson and John Corley.

The Vikings have a big game coming up tomorrow at Golden Park. Cheerleaders Leigh Vassar and Vaje Smith will be cheering their team on in hopes of matching last year's perfect season.

Ronald Alvarez has been elected vice - president of the Honor Society at Columbus High this year. Ronnie is president of the Library Club, too.

Many Benningites have found that they can see good football and root for the "home" team at the Doughboy games on Saturday nights. Almost as many thrills, and perhaps just as much fun can be had on week ends if you sneak up on the boys scrimmaging at Richardson Circle. Though the boys are not the same ones who were the "stars" last year, the games are still fast and rough. . .or so I hear!

Spice CABINET

SOMETHING DIFFERENT . . . Tomato juice juleps are different. Crush a few mint leaves in the bottom of a glass. Fill with crushed ice and tomato juice. Serve with lemon wedge and sprig of mint.

DISTAFF TICKETS . . . Maj. Gen. Ben Harrell, commanding general of The Infantry Center, purchases tickets for the annual Distaff dinner dance, which will be held at the Main Officers' Open Mess Nov. 17, from Mrs. N. E. Smith Jr., Distaff ticket chairman. The dinner dance is a benefit from which all proceeds go to the Distaff Home in Washington, D. C., for the widows and dependent daughters of former U. S. Army officers. Officers may purchase tickets through their unit commanders or by contacting Mrs. Smith, telephone LI 5-2496.

First Lt. William D. McLarty has assumed command of C Company, 60th Armor, which is attached to the 1st Armored Rifle Battalion, 58th Infantry, succeeding 1st Lt. James R. Bolia, who has been released from active duty.

Personnel Are Reminded To Check NSLI Records

WASHINGTON (AFPS)—The Defense Department has again cautioned service personnel holding National Service Life Insurance (NSLI) policies to keep their beneficiary designations up to date with family situations.

A Defense official said "it appears that forgetfulness rather than intent" is the reason service members fail to keep their policies made out to the beneficiary desired.

NSLI policy holders have the right to name any one beneficiary but the name shown on Veterans Administration records will receive the proceeds of the policy.

No change can be made to the beneficiary designation except by the insured. It is up to each policy holder to see that the beneficiary named is the one he wants to protect.

Although the services have made every attempt to bring the matter to the attention of their personnel, cases still arise in which the VA pays the proceeds of the insurance policies to persons other than a deceased member's dependents.

In many instances payment is made to former wives, brothers or sisters, friends or nondependent parents who were named as beneficiaries many years prior to the member's death and before he acquired family responsibilities of his own.

The change can be made with a minimum effort by filling out VA Form 9-336 and sending it to: The Department of Insurance, Veterans Administration, Washington 25, D.C.

Jewish Rites Are Planned For Festival

Jewish personnel will observe the Festival of Sukkos from Oct. 12 through Oct. 20.

Synagogue services scheduled include Eve of Sukkos at 8 p.m. Oct. 12; First Day of Sukkos, 9:30 a.m. Oct. 13; regular Sabbath service at 8 p.m. Oct. 19, and Sh'Mini Atseret (Yizkor), 9:30 a.m. Oct. 20.

Orthodox and Conservative Orthodox Jewish personnel will conduct other lay services during the period in keeping with the Traditional Jew's nine-day observance of the Festival, which includes Oct. 21.

During Biblical times, the Festival of Sukkos marked the gathering of the harvest.

Sukkos means tabernacles or booths and symbolizes the ancient custom of building temporary vine covered shelters when on a pilgrimage to Jerusalem.

The festival is described in Exodus 23:16 as an "ingathering" and is thought to have strongly influenced the Pilgrims who established the American Thanksgiving Day.

ARMED FORCES DAY

Armed Forces Day is always the third Saturday in May, by Presidential proclamation.

General Says OC Grads Valuable

The future of the Army as a combat-ready force depends to a great extent on the men who are commissioned through officer candidate programs, Maj. Gen. Henry V. Graham, adjutant general of Alabama, told Reserve Component Class No. one Saturday.

Gen. Graham, commanding general of the Alabama National Guard, said, "Communist imperialism has as its ultimate goal world domination. It represents an immediate danger to this country. Our ability to survive and prosper is dependent on recognizing this danger and accepting the challenge."

He added, "Communism is an aggressive military and economic power, conceived in strife, nourished in discontent and must devour the world to survive."

World Not Big Enough

Gen. Graham pointed out that the world is not big enough for communists and freemen. It cannot remain half free and half slave, he added.

"The price of freedom is eternal vigilance," he said. "This is a great country, the best devised by man. We must protect it with all our force and will."

"The challenge to our leaders is that their leadership be wise, to our military that they shall be vigilant and strong, to all that we shall do our duty to God and country and reaffirm our resolve that this nation, under God, shall not perish from this earth," he concluded.

Honor graduate of the class was Candidate John A. Liethen. He was presented a certificate signed by Brig. Gen. Royal Reynolds Jr., assistant commandant of The Infantry School.

Liethen also received an Association of the U. S. Army plaque, awarded to the outstanding graduate, and the Erickson Award, a cup named for Maj. Gen. Edgar C. Erickson, former chief of the National Guard Bureau, Washington, D. C. In addition, he was given an inscribed copy of the Officers' Guide from the Fort Benning Book Department.

Another graduate, Candidate Nunzio G. Pollina, was presented an Infantryman statuette for attaining the highest score in leadership qualities.

The graduating class, the first in fiscal year 1963, consisted almost entirely of National Guardsmen and Reservists who were called to active duty last October during the Berlin crisis. It was the first mobilization OCS class conducted here since the Korean conflict.

Name Capt. Nugent To New Position

Capt. Francis O. Nugent has been named communications trends officer of the Communications Department at The Infantry School.

He succeeds Maj. Sidney S. Wolfeld who is scheduled to retire Oct. 1 after more than 20 years of service.

Capt. Nugent has served the department as assistant operations officer since January, 1961.

President Kennedy Orders Troops From Division to Mississippi Crisis

HEADS ARMY TROOPS Gen. Billingslea

Join Units Enforcing Federal Law in Oxford

BY JIM WILSON

President John F. Kennedy last Saturday night ordered that the Mississippi National Guard be placed under federal control and ordered a battle group and command group of the combat-ready 2nd Infantry Division to move to Memphis, Tenn., prepared for possible use in the Mississippi integration crisis.

The entire crisis surrounded the enrollment of James H. Meredith, a Negro, into the University of Mississippi, after a U. S. Court had ordered he be admitted. The 2nd Division units were alerted and moved to that area for the purpose of enforcing that federal court order.

Brig. Gen. Charles Billingslea, commanding general of the 2nd Division, and Army Field Commander for this operation, flew from Lawson Army Airfield shortly after midnight last Saturday accompanied by a command group. The command group included Col. Louis A. Kunzig, Jr., division chief of staff, key members of the general staff, and supporting troops.

Simultaneously, Gen. Billingslea gave the order for the 2nd Battle Group, 23rd Infantry, under the command of Col. Lucien F. Keller, to move by motor convoy to the Millington Naval Air Station at Memphis. Accompanying the 23rd Infantry as an attached unit was Company B, 2nd Battle Group, 9th Infantry, commanded by Lt. Robert L. Clarke.

Meanwhile, three Mississippi National Guard Units and other Regular Army personnel were ordered into action in the Mississippi crisis. The Regular Army's 70th Engineer Battalion, Fort Campbell, Ky., was assigned the mission of housekeeping duties for federal marshals in Memphis.

The 503rd MP Battalion, Fort Bragg, and the 716th MP Battalion, Fort Dix, N. J., were

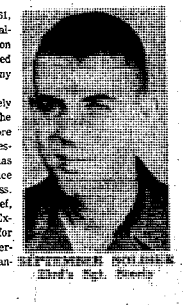
Sept. Soldier Comes From 23rd



By 23rd Infantry PIO

Named last week as Division Soldier-of-the - Month for September was the 23rd Infantry's Soldier-of-the - Month for September, Acting Sergeant Clyde R. Steely. The appearance before the Division board was the young infantryman's first try for the title. It is also his first for the battle group title.

As Soldier - of - the - Month, Sgt. Steely receives an engraved wrist watch and a cash award of 25 dollars.

Acting Sergeant Clyde R. Steely, a squad leader in the battle group's Company E, has been at Fort Benning for his entire military career. He entered the Army in June 1961, and was sent to the 7th Cavalry for his basic training. Upon completion of basic, he joined the 23rd and "Echo" Company where he has remained.

A native Georgian, Steely grew up in Atlanta, where he finished high school before enlisting in the Army. At present a Specialist Four, he has been an acting sergeant since he was a Private First Class. Although his career is so brief, he has been awarded the Expert Infantryman's Badge for his knowledge on matters pertaining to all phases of infantry criteria.

flown into Memphis on Sunday.

All three National Guard units were ordered to be in Oxford, Miss., by 10:00 a.m. Monday. (The University of Mississippi is in Oxford.)

Early Monday, traveling units of the 23rd Infantry were diverted from their original destination in Memphis and directed to proceed to Oxford.

Meanwhile, orders came to move the 2nd Battle Group, 1st Infantry, from Fort Benning to Columbus, Miss., by motor convoy. The 1st Infantry is commanded by Col. Edgar R. Poole. Company A, 2nd Battle Group, 9th Infantry, commanded by Capt. Donald B. Smith, Jr., was attached to the 1st Infantry and also moved to Mississippi.

Meredith Enrolls

After an evening of rioting which included gunfire and tear gas, James Meredith was enrolled as a student at the University of Mississippi on Monday morning.

In the face of further rioting, the massing of troops continued Tuesday morning. Several elements of the 101st Airborne Division arrived in the vicinity of the Millington Naval Air Station. And later four battle groups of the 82nd Airborne Division from Fort Bragg began filtering into the area near Columbus, Miss.

At this writing, the two days of violence on campus and in the town of Oxford have subsided. Two battle groups of the 101st Airborne Division have returned to the staging area at the Naval Air Station in Memphis. The men of the highly-trained 2nd Division continue to stand guard and maintain order in and around Oxford.

No word has been received concerning the return of the 2nd Division soldiers to Fort Benning or the duration of their stay in Mississippi.

National and international news media have covered this event in Mississippi and with their dispatches go the story of the 2nd Infantry Division.

Artillery Units' Insignia Show History of Battles

By DivArty PIO

Much of the history and many of the accomplishments of a unit are symbolized by the distinctive unit insignia worn on the epaulets of Army uniforms.

Some units, including the 15th Artillery, have attempted to remind their men of this fact by preparing and distributing a complete history of the unit, its activities, and its insignia.

Legend of 15th

In fact, the insignia of the 15th Artillery, which consists of the shield of the battalion coat-of-arms, is practically a legend of that unit.

On the shield, in the upper left corner, is a replica of the shield of the Fourth Field Artillery Regiment which originally furnished the instructing members of the 15th Artillery.

The red of the shield, the traditional artillery color, represents the blood that was spilled by members of 15th Artillery in winning World War I.

The 15th, whose motto is "Allons" (Let's Go), also was a part of the 2nd Division overseas and took part in the heaviest of fighting. Their participation with the division is indicated on the shield by the five wavy silver stripes representing the rivers crossed—the Aisne, Marne, Meuse, Moselle, and Rhine.

Similarly, the insignia of the 12th Artillery Battalion contains much to tell of their service to the United States and other Western nations.

Arms of Soissons

The single fleur-de-lis of silver is taken from the arms of Soissons where the 12th Artillery performed such distinguished service that it was cited by the French in Orders of the Army.

The golden crown on the fleur-de-lis is from the city of Verdun, near which the 12th had its baptism of fire. In the upper left corner, on the canton, is a green Aztec war banner from the Mexican War service of the 12th's parent organization, the 3rd Field Artillery, while the insignia background is field artillery red.

The red insignia of the 17th Artillery bears a replica of the castle of Ehrenbreitstein crossed by a bendlet carrying the American colors and 17 stars to signify the occupation of that castle by the 17th. On a canton in the upper right corner is a detail from the arms of the parent organization, the 8th Field Artillery. The 17th Artillery motto — "In Time of Peace Prepare for War" — is a part of the coat-of-arms but is not incorporated into the distinctive insignia.

The motto of the 37th Artillery Battalion — "On the Minute" — becomes very significant when examined along with their insignia which consists of the shield and otto of the coat-of-arms.

A gold tower within the traditional red represents the old clock tower of Fort Sam Houston, Texas, former home of the 2nd Division. The hands of the clock point to seven minutes after three which, when read "Three Seven," indicate the numerical designation of the battalion.

The insignia of the 38th Artillery consists of the shield, crest and motto of the coat-of-arms and displays three vertical gold stripes accosted by eight shells. This symbolically represents the number 38 and designates the battalion as an artillery unit.

The white mountain peak and lone star on the wreath above the shield represent Mt. Rainier and Fort Sam Houston, Texas. These symbols refer respectively to the locations here the battalion was organized and reactivated.

The 38th motto — "The Steel Behind the Rock" — cleverly reveals that the organization was reactivated as a battalion and made part of the 38th combat team, whose infantry, the 38th, is known as "The Rock of the Marne." Therefore, the 38th Artillery Battalion is indeed, "The Steel Behind the Rock."

Volunteers Give Blood From '1st'

By 1st Infantry PIO

The Red Cross bloodmobile campaign was well under way at Service Club Two, as the men of the "Always First" unit arrived to do their part in the drive.

Firing Gun Salutes

'Wait 2 Seconds, Pull' Is Their Other Motto

By 15th Artillery PIO

To those who fire salutes, the process seems quite long and drawn-out.

There is the wait before the first round is fired. At that point, the whole inexorable, irrevocable chain begins. The remaining shots must be fired at carefully measured interval.

Those who fire must wait a very long two seconds after the first shot. Then the lanyard is pulled and the men of the firing battery wait again. The whole process is repeated until the requisite number of shots is fired.

During th last several days, Battery A, 15th Artillery, fired three salutes — one for the new 2nd Division Commanding General, Brig. Gen. Charles Billingslea; a second for Maj. Gen. Derrill Daniel, deputy commanding general of the Third U.S. Army; and a third for Maj. Gen. Charles H. Chase.

Describing the performance of his men in firing the three salutes, Capt. Donald A. Gray, commanding officer of Battery A, said, "They were perfect."

Salutes are traditionally fired by 105 millimeter towed howitzer batteries, three of which are in the division. In addition to the three recent salutes, the 15th's Battery A fired a salute several weeks ago at Redstone Arsenal, Alabama for President Kennedy's arrival. Approximately 35 officers and men fired the salutes with the battery's entire complement of six howitzers.

Battalion Reviews, Awards Letter of Commendation

By DivArty PIO

The sergeant major of Headquarters Battery, 12th Artillery, recently was honored with a battalion review and a letter of commendation.

Sgt. Maj. Howard Gregory, who is on orders for the 1st Howitzer Battalion, 17th Artillery, Korea, has been with the 12th since May 10, 1961.

Col. Huck Cites

Lt. Col. Terrence W. Huck, commander of the 12th Artillery, said Sgt. Maj. Gregory "performed his duties in an outstanding manner."

Sgt. Maj. Gregory personally suggested, designed and supervised the construction of a battalion trophy and historical room. This project involved moving the operations section to a new building, obtaining two large showcases, remodeling the room, building furniture, and preparing exhibits.

Col. Huck says the trophy room "was so impressive, it became a model visited by other units for ideas to copy. It proved invaluable as a source of morale and esprit."

Prior to the Annual General Inspection, Sgt. Maj. Gregory organized and led inspection teams to check administration in the battalion, all full field layouts, and a number of other phases for the inspection. The battalions and all the batteries were rated superior in the AGI.

Hard Worker

The citation read at the review indicates that Sgt. Maj. Gregory is particularly "commended for his personal example of integrity, long hours, hard work, military appearance, uncompromising standards, interest in the welfare of the men, professional competence, and concern for the reputation of the unit. He set a remarkable example for his associates to emulate."

Sgt. Maj. Gregory entered the Army on Jan. 25, 1941. He had school training as a high speed radio operator in 1943, as an artillery survey specialist in 1949, and graduated from the NCO Academy in 1949. At various times he has served in the European theater of operations, Germany and Korea.

He has been awarded the National Defense Service Medal, the Good Conduct Medal three times, the Expert Rifleman Badge, Army Commendation Medal, Purple Heart; European - African - Middle Eastern Campaign Ribbon with five battle stars, the World War II Victory Medal, and the American Overseas Medal (Germany).

The sergeant major's wife is Marie Gramlich Gregory. They live on post with their daughter Silva, 13.

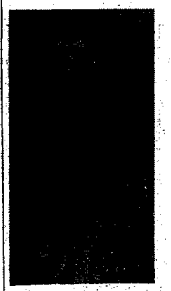
Scheduled in All Chapels

World Fellowship Communion

By Chap. (Capt.) Robert C. Young

The first Sunday in October is World-Wide Communion Sunday.



In addition to the spiritual values inherent in every Communion Service, the most distinctive thing about World-Wide Communion Sunday is the special recognition of world-wide fellowship. Communion will be served in all 2nd Division Chapels.

To help make the act of recognition more meaningful, the following values and results are suggested:

1. Renew the habit of regular church attendance.

2. Prepare for Holy Communion. The Chaplain, the organist, the music is important; so is the high expectancy with which you, a Christian, approach the Lord's table. You can let awareness of a world-wide fellowship bring you memories of persons through whom God's love and grace have come to you and . . . you can remember within the widening circle of fellowship people who need your help.

3. Resolve to minister more effectively to people who need your help. Sharing one's possessions at the Lord's table is not a new experience; for Christians have done this from earliest times. The offering received in each of the Division Chapels will be forwarded to the Committee for Overseas Relief, whose work deals with relief, rehabilitation, and refugee resettlement. These three comprise the Fellowship of Suffering and Service.

FORMER MARINE
Sgt. John Crimmins

Goes to Florida

Ex-Marine Sgt. Recruits Brand New Army Men

By DivArty PIO

A former marine is recruiting men for the Army.

Sgt. John J. Crimmins, Headquarters Battery, Division Artillery, has been assigned to the Army Recruiting Station, Lakeland, Fla., to demonstrate to the young men of that town that the Army is everything he says it is.

Sgt. John J. Crimmins, Headquarters Battery, Division Artillery, who served with the Marines from 1950 to 1954, has decided on a career with the Army, and on Oct. 1 began a six year enlistment as an Army recruiter.

Sgt. Crimmins joined the Army in 1961 and advanced from private to sergeant in only 17 months. He chose a career in the Army because "the opportunities for advancement are better, and the benefits offered to me and my family are exceptional."

The 29-year-old sergeant took his basic training at Fort Dix, N. J., and his advanced training at Fort Sill, Okla. He arrived at Fort Benning in March 1961, at which time he was assigned to 12th Artillery. In September of that year he moved to Division Artillery where he was made senior radar operator on TPS 25, ground surveillance radar.

The holder of several military awards, including both the Army and Marine Good Conduct Medals, Presidential Unit Citation (Navy), National Defense Service Medal, Korean Service Medal with three service stars, United Nations Service Medal, and the Korean Presidential Unit Citation, Sgt Crimmins will be able to offer the young men of Lakeland varied military experience.

As a marine, Sgt. Crimmins taught wire fundamentals at the Officer Candidate School, Quantico Marine Base, Va., was a wire liaison sergeant and communications chief, and served with the 1st Marine Division, 1st Marine Air Wing, Korea, from September 1951 to November 1952. He was a staff sergeant when he left the marines.

As the new recruiter and his wife, Nancy Lou, made final preparations for moving to Florida, the much-praised sergeant found he had another supporter. "You're a good daddy," said his seven-year-old son John Barrette. "You're not leaving my rabbits here!"

Prepare for Army Tests

Special Training Follows

They've Got an Extra Heavy Duty Training Year Scheduled Ahead

NEW SIGN FOR SAND HILL'S OUTPOST FOUR Spd David Winkler Replaces Signs

By 9th Inf PIO

The 9th Infantry, returned to the field Monday to begin its 14th week of Operational Readiness Training and its first phase of company level tactical training.

The 12-week period of field training that the 9th is currently undergoing began with individual squad tactical training September 9 and will progress through platoon, company, and battle group level tactics by November 10.

On Platoon Level

Platoon level tactical training, which the 9th recently completed, consisted of both day and night attack and defense exercises.

Army training tests are being conducted at the end of each phase. The recently completed platoon level tests presupposed a situation involving a rifle company in the attack. The two tested platoons in each lane represented the attacking units of that rifle company. In order to add realism to the tests, it was arranged to have two platoons attack in adjacent zones, and all elements of a company required to support company tactical operations were present in the field.

The overall objective of Operational Readiness Training is to maintain all units of the battle group at a high state of combat readiness that will insure the capability of prompt reaction to any assigned mission and sustained combat operation.

The current training has been planned so as to integrate other types of training into the tactical training. This involves protection against chemical agents, psychological warfare counter-measures, field fortifications, map reading, and the use of the compass.

A Field Week

The 9th Infantry spends Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday in the field each week. The remainder of the week is spent with troop information classes, character guidance, commanders' time, maintenance of equipment, and inspections.

Battle group level field training exercises will be conducted October 21 through November 3, after which will be the battle group Army Training Test. This test, which is scheduled for November 4-10, will end the 9th's field training for this year.

Training will be less intense during November and December; however, on January 13, 1963, the 9th Infantry is scheduled to go to Fort McClellan, Ala. for 10 days of field training.

The schedule for the first few months of 1963 includes amphibious landings, river-crossings, and counter-guerrilla warfare.

MP's Have New Sign Aid For Traffic Control

Traffic control on Sand Hill has taken another step in an orderly direction this week now that the MPs at Outpost Four have an "MP Ahead" sign to fit over the stop sign at the junction of Custer and Cusseta Roads while the MPs are on duty. During duty hours the MPs will control traffic.

The MPs announce that people driving under the bridge next to Wetherby Field on Custer Road wishing to go up 3rd Street — into the 2nd Division towards Theater Seven — should not use a left turn signal. A left turn signal indicates a sharp left turn onto Cusseta Rd. Third Street is considered straight ahead by the MPs. When an MP is not manning the Outpost, Four traffic control box (after 6 p.m. until 7 a.m. weekdays, after 1 p.m. Saturday until Monday morning 7 a.m.), drivers should obey the normal traffic signs.

The "Dim the Lights" sign preceding the stop sign on Custer Rd. does not mean to go from headlights to parking lights or parking lights to no lights. "Dim the Lights" indicates to not use high beam headlights but to rather use normal headlights.

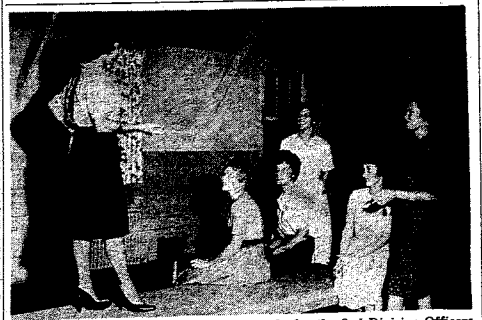
Discuss Service Center for Wives

BY MARY JEAN BROST

Wives and husbands of the 38th Infantry met recently to discuss the planning of a "Rota Family Service Center."

The center will be a semi-formal organization, eligibility in which will be limited to those wives who have a husband in the 38th. The husbands, participating in "Rotaplan," are currently preparing to leave in mid-October for a six-month overseas tour in Europe.

Two-Fold Plan



At the meeting, Col. Maurice C. Holden, battle group commander, outlined the two-fold plan of the Center. First, it will try to fill the place of the husband in trying to solve problems that occur in the lives of the dependents. Secondly and on the other side, the husband will feel better because of the organization, for he will know that his dependents will be looked after and will have a place where they can receive help with their problems.

The Center will be patterned after the one the Air Force has successfully carried out for its dependents.

Building 1101 in the Old Hospital area is presently being equipped for the Rota Family Service Center and when completed will contain two offices which will be used by the volunteer workers. It is planned to have two wives present for three hours every morning, six days a week. There will also be four committees of volunteer workers: office, publicity, emergency and casuality. Each of these committees will have a chairman, co-chairman and a list of those who can be called upon if help or assistance is needed.

The Catholic and Protestant chaplains from the 2nd Infantry Division have also offered their services if needed.

An Open House will be held at the center before the battle group leaves in order that everyone might become better acquainted with what services will be available.

Hughett Home Is Scene Of 87th Get-Together

Ladies of the 87th Infantry held their monthly coffee September 28 in the home of Mrs. Ralph H. Hughett, wife of the battle group commander, Colonel Hughett.

Hostesses for the affair were the ladies of Company C. They include Mrs. Gilbert Ellis, Mrs. Dahl Marshall, Mrs. Mosie Tate and Mrs. John Watts.

They chose an arrangement of pyrancantha as the centerpiece for the table, which was covered with a cutwork and lace cloth.

Mrs. Hughett conducted a business meeting during which she welcomed newcomers and bade farewell to those departing the group. A special welcome was given to Mrs. Richard O. Stewart, whose husband was recently reassigned as deputy commander, and to Mrs. George D. Crosby, whose husband is the new executive officer of the unit. Mrs. Raymond Rush, wife of the departing deputy commander, was presented a silver tray inscribed "From the Ladies of the 87th Infantry."

New unit committee chairmen were introduced by Mrs. Hughett. They are Mrs. Stewart, receptions chairman; Mrs. Ellis, sunshine chairman; Mrs. Joseph Gross, treasurer; and Mrs. Raymond Murphrey, publicity chairman.

Plans were discussed for the battle group cook-out to be held on October 6 at King's Pond. Plans were also made for the November luncheon of the 2nd Division Officers' Wives Club for which the 87th Infantry ladies will act as hostesses.

Ladies Tour 13th Trans.

Ladies of the 13th Transportation Battalion met recently in the home of Mrs. Philip L. Lee.

Instead of holding their usual monthly coffee meeting they proceeded to Sand Hill and were treated to a tour of the 13th Transportation Battalion area.

Lt. Col. Walter Hibbard Jr., commanding officer of the unit, presented a brief talk on the duties and mission of the 13th.

Coffee and cake were served in the Company B Day Room. The ladies then embarked on a bus tour of the motor pool, where they witnessed a demonstration of the Armored Personnel Carrier (M-59).

Artillery Loses Long-Time Member in Retiring Captain

By DivArty PIO

"We hate to see him go."

All around the 12th Artillery Battalion recently — in fact, all around 2nd Division Artillery— these words were being spoken about a long-time member of the division.

From Europe

Over four years ago, on Sept. 12, 1958, Capt. Mike Demeter arrived here from Headquarters Battery, 30th Field Artillery Group, Europe, to assume the post of communications officer with the 12th Artillery.

Now he is retired.

A communications man almost since the day he entered the service on Oct. 25, 1937, Capt. Demeter is said to have immediately gained the respect and admiration of the men with which he worked.

On July 20, 1959, as now, the 12th Artillery had to say "goodbye" to Capt. Demeter. But the division did not. He moved to Division Artillery, where he was to stay until October 1961. Again, he was the communications officer.

For his final transfer within the 2nd Division, Capt. Demeter on Oct. 6, 1961 returned to 12th Artillery as the communications officer. There he remained until Sept. 30, 1962, when he retired with the rank of major in the Army Reserve.

Was Enlisted Man

Capt. Demeter served as an enlisted man until Aug. 24, 1945, when as a master sergeant with the 738th Medium Tank Battalion, he left active service. He reentered active service in August 1950, going to Korea as a master sergeant with the 196th Field Artillery Battalion.

Just over one year after he reenlisted for active duty, the then Sgt. Demeter received his commission as a second lieutenant. This was on Aug. 23, 1951, while in Korea.

Less than five months later, on Jan. 15, 1952, 2nd Lt. Mike Demeter became 1st Lt. Mike Demeter; and on Aug. 10, 1955 it was captain.

In Europe, Capt. Demeter participated in the Rhineland Campaign, Ardennes, and Central Europe, and in Korea in the first U. N. Counter Offensive, the CCF Spring Offensive, US Summer-Fall Offensive and the 2nd Korean Winter.

He has earned the Good Conduct Medal with clasp, American Defense Service Medal, European - African - Middle Eastern Campaign Medal, World War II Victory Medal, American Campaign Medal, Korean Service Medal, UN Service Medal, National Defense Service Medal, Air Medal, four Overseas bars, the Distinguished Unit Citation, Commendation Medal with Oak Leaf Cluster, and the Armed Forces Reserve Medal.

5 Medics Total 18 Years in Re-Ups

Five men from Co. B of the 2nd Medical Battalion reupped for a total of 18 years under the Army's RECAP program. Under this program, the men are allowed to reenlist for a specific area or their old position. SFC White signed up to fill his own vacancy; Sp4 Alsup for 3rd Trans Bn, Fort Benning; Sp4 Sorrells for Eighth U.S. Army; Sp4 Wood for Hawaii; and PFC Johnson for Fort Ord, Calif.

Capt. Demeter, who was born in Summerset, Pa., attended Phillippi, West Va. High School. In the service he went to the Radio School, Chemical Warfare School, and Artillery School.

12th Artillery Hq. 1st Sergeant Retires, Cited by General Decker

The first sergeant of Headquarters Battery, 12th Artillery retired Monday, receiving a "Certificate of Appreciation" from Gen. George H. Decker, Army Chief of Staff.

First Sgt. Walter C. Grail was cited by Gen. Decker for his "many years of outstanding service."

Sgt. Grail entered the Army in Chicago in January 1942, and went to tractor - trailer school at Fort Lee, Va., immediately thereafter.

He was a platoon sergeant at Fort Ord, Calif., and traveled extensively in England, France, Germany, Belgium and Holland. In 1946, Sgt. Grail was stationed in Stuttgart, Germany, for military intelligence duty.

After spending two years with the Illinois National Guard, Sgt. Grail went to Fort Carson, Colo., where he was first sergeant with the 269th Field Artillery.

He joined the 2nd Infantry Division in August 1961 and has remained here with 12th Artillery since then.

Sgt. Grail participated in several campaigns, including Ardennes and the European-African-Middle Eastern campaign, and has been awarded the European-African-Middle Eastern Campaign Medal with five service stars, the Good Conduct Medal with six clasps, and the Army of Occupation Medal.

1st Inf. Cruises To Long Run Win

The 1st Infantry's well-trained and conditioned Sgt. Robert Washington again this year captured first place in the Second Division's gruelling cross country run.

Winding three miles through the woods, hills and streams of the 38th Infantry's unit training area, the course carried 25 men on an early morning jaunt last Saturday and brought team honors to the 1st Infantry along with Sgt. Washington's individual victory.

In team competition, the 87th Infantry followed the 1st to second place and was trailed by Division Artillery, the 9th Infantry, and Division Trains in that order.

The individual winners in the cross country duel were, after Sgt. Washington, Spd Raymond Roberts of the 9th; in third place, again the 1st Infantry, PFC Alfred L. Dearing; fourth place, the 87th's PFC George Griener; and fifth, PFC Isaiah Cherry of the 1st Infantry.

Entered in last year's marathon with no real practice or thought to the serious side of the sport, Sgt. Washington surprised himself by topping the pack. Since then, he's prodded himself to run every day, and whatever natural ability he has has been multiplied by his careful attention to work outs and exercises. The 10-month-married man, a "Bravo" Company squad leader, 1st Infantry, maintains the regimen and dedication of a professional athlete as closely as possible.

Trophies and medals were presented to the outstanding teams and individuals by Maj. Daniel L. French, the 2nd Division's Adjutant General. Col. Edgar R. Poole, commanding officer of the 1st Infantry, accepted a trophy from Maj. French for his five-man team's first place. Maj. French also honored the second-place 87th Infantry with a trophy to Col. Ralph B. Hughett, 87th Infantry commander.

Individually, Sgt. Washington accepted his second trophy in cross country competition giving him a 1.000 batting average, and the 2nd 3rd, 4th, and 5th-placed men received medals for their winning efforts.

The competition this year was handled by the division's Special Services Office. The official in charge was Capt. Benjamin Vasquez, Special Services officer. Assisting him in timing, setting out guides and flags, and other duties, were MSgt. Lewis Gray, SSgt. Floyd B. Washington, and Sgt. Harold B. Grinols, all special services men. Also officiating were Division Trains Sp5 John Mason II; MSgt. Crawford of Division Artillery, SFC Albert R. McDaniel of the 1st Infantry; and SSgt. Burl Withers of the 87th Infantry.

Benning Plays Toughest Fray At Fort Eustis

Undefeated Fort Benning will be out to throw a block beneath the undefeated, unscored upon "Wheels" of Fort Eustis, Va., as the Doughboys step outside the state tomorrow to tackle the 1961 National Service football champions.

Fresh from a 30-7 conquest of the Pensacola Navy Goshawks, Coach Leaton C. Cofield's Doughboys will be playing to keep their four-game victory skein alive.

So far this season the Wheels have rolled to three consecutive wins, including last Saturday's 47-0 romp over Fort Dix, N. J. The Virginians' two earlier wins came from two New England semi - professional teams, Whitman, Mass., 41-0 and Springfield, Mass., 19-0.

The Doughboys own victories over Gordon Military College in Georgia, 61-0, Camp Lejeune, N. C., 21-14, Orlando, Fla., 21-7, and Pensacola, 30-7.

Doughboys Keep Streak Alive With 30-7 Victory

Murphy Scores Two Benning Touchdowns

BY PVT. DAVE BRAUN

The hopes of 10,000 wind-chilled fans for an undefeated season were raised last Saturday as the Doughboys upended the previously unbeaten Pensacola Navy Goshawks 30-7.

Capitalizing on early game fumbles and pass interceptions, the Fort Benning team raced to its fourth straight victory of the season.

Coach Leaton C. Cofield's Doughboys were led by a couple of former Georgia Tech footballers, quarterback Narvin Tibbetts and end Fred Murphy.

Tibbetts unlimbered his throwing arm only five times, but two of his three completions were for touchdowns to Murphy which helped build up to a 24-0 halftime lead.

The Doughboys picked up 189 yards on the ground and 41 through the air.

Big ground gainers for Fort Benning were Wallace Johnson, with 41 yards, followed by Ron Quillen, with 38, Albert Taylor, with 31, and Brewster Hobby, with 30.

Pensacola moved for 63 yards on the ground and 66 in the air on six of completion. The Goshawks were victims of four pass intereceptions.

Fred Riddle paced the Goshawks with 33 yards rushing and Jerry Hollifield was close behind with 32.

The Goshawks kicked off to Fort Benning and the Doughboys were stopped suddenly after getting off three or four fine running plays.

After Hollifield was stopped in his tracks attempting to run back a Doughboy punt, the Goshawks began their first half game of fumbleitis.

Taking a handoff Hollifield raced 13 yards off the left side before fumbling on about the Fort Benning 33. Quillen, Hobby, Johnson and Tibbetts quickly moved the ball to the Pensacola three-yard stripe where Tibbetts executed a good fake and spun in for the score.

Sam Stellatella booted his 10th straight extra point of the season and the scoreboard read 7-0.

Late in the first quarter Fort Benning pounced on another Goshawk fumble in Pensacola territory. With a fourth down situation on the Pensacola 21-yard line Stellatella booted a field goal through the uprights and the score was 10-0.

Taking advantage of another Goshawk fumble in the second period Fort Benning moved from Pensacola's 38 to the 22 where Tibbetts fired a strike to Murphy for the score.

Stellatella made the conversion attempt good once again and it was 17-0.

The Doughboys, whose fierce line play kept Pensacola in hot water all night, grabbed another Goshawk fumble just before the half, and moved from their own 40 to the Pensacola six where Tibbetts rolled to his right and hit Murphy on a spectacular catch for the TD.

Stellatella made it a perfect evening of kicking as he added the conversion, making the score 24-0 at halftime.

After a scoreless third stanza, 2nd Lt. Wayne Jeter brought the throng to its collective feet by taking a Hollifield punt on his own 25, and weaving his way downfield behind a wall of blockers 75 yards for a TD.

William Johnson missed the PAT and the score was 30-0.

Pensacola began going to the air and in the warning minutes of the game, quarterback Herb Best tossed a 14-yard scoring pass to end James Luper. Sam Kallus ended the scoring by kicking the PAT and the final was 30-7.

Shough's Sports Scope

By Pete Shough

Well, its happened! Ohio State moved into the number one position of the nation's top ten this week. The weekly Associated Press sports writers' poll placed OSU first by the slim margin of six points.

This really can be credited to several factors — more sports writers in the north — Alabama started the season with a weak schedule—State's outstanding play in the North Carolina game. Ohio played the contest without being forced to punt at any time and Woody Hayes showed off his supreme confidence by putting a total of 62 players into the fray.

Many feel OSU will hang on to the top rating next week mainly because of scheduling differences between the two teams. Alabama goes against a winless Vanderbilt, while OSU goes against last year's Rose Bowl contestant, U.C.L.A. A team can't expect to be the top in the country when it only plays teams that are struggling to keep their head above water. The true nation's champion will be determined later in the season when Alabama's schedule improves and OSU moves into conference play.

By the way, the rest of the top ten goes as follows: Texas, Penn State, Georgia Tech, Southern California, Mississippi, Washington, Miami (Fla.) and Army.

The Southeastern Conference comes up with one of the nation's top games again this week-end as two of the country's best, Georgia Tech and Louisiana State, meet in Atlanta.

L. S. U was knocked from the top ten last week by an underdog Rice Team. The tie pushed the Tigers from a number five ranking all the down to the 17 slot.

Tomorrow, Georgia Tech should push LSU out of contention.

Last week's college T.V. game of the week gave nation - wide coverage to what some called a mild upset. Notre Dame stopped several Oklahoma drives, including one that ended on the Irish one-yard line. Oklahoma's brilliant quarterback, Monte Deere, showed Sooner fans how the quarterback option should be run. Oklahoma relied on option when most teams would be wondering if their fullback could crack the Notre Dame defensive line.

It looks like Notre Dame won't get to rest this week-end as they play host to the Boilermakers from Purdue. Purdue had a rest last week-end, but did see action Sept. 22 when they fought to a 7-7 deadlock with the Washington Huskies. Both teams will be ready for this traditional battle.

Area pro football fans had the opportunity to see the 'new' Milt Plum lead the Detroit Lions' sweep of a sound victory from the Baltimore Colts last Sunday on T. V.

The Lions, bolstered by the ex-Cleveland Brown signal caller, completely surprised the Baltimore defense by launching a shattering air attack. The Plum - Barr combination was found to be unbeatable, the climax being an 80-yard TD toss in the second period. Plum added further insult to the Colt defensive unit by scampering 45-yards on a quarterback sneak.

Another ex-Clevland Brown, Bobby Mitchell, had his second Sunday field day. Mitchell was on the receiving end of two Snead passes that carried the 'Skins to a 24-14 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals. The Redskins, who won only one game last year, look like they may have an outside chance at the top slot this year.

The Dallas Cowboys, who only managed to be on the winning side of the ledger twice last year, have already pocketed victory number one this year. If Eddie LeBaron can continue with last Sunday's performance, the Cowboys may see a winning season this year.

BIG BANG . . . Half-time color and added game-time attractions drew as much attention as the football game at Doughboy Stadium last Saturday. PFC Walter Robart Jr., Hdqs. and Hdqs. Company, The Infantry Center Troop Command, fired the little cannon whenever a Doughboy touchdown was made. Youngsters gathered around to investigate the source of the noise. (Photo by Sgt. Betty Farmer)

FISHING AROUND POST

With the coming of cooler weather, the bass are hitting with more regularity. Some proof of this was demonstrated Sunday when 1st Sgt. John Donnelly, The Student Brigade, landed an eight-pound lunker at Harps Pond, using a shiner for bait. Incidentally, this lunker was landed in deep water, at 11 a.m., showing that bass will strike during the mid-day hours.

WHITE-TAILED DEER

For nearly an hour you've sat that stump. Suddenly there's a deer. It materialized from, nowhere, on the browse and moving slowly head-down, and it hasn't seen you. And no matter how much hunting you've done, if you want that deer badly enough you'll likely break down with buck fever. It's enough to make a strong man cry, and has.

Buck fever is a form of shell-shock. Under great emotional stress a temporary block occurs between the overwhelmed mind and the fumbling nervous system.

The only real cure for buck fever is probably not giving a hoot whether you get a deer or not. Experience won't always cure it. But what would deer-hunting be without a case of the buck fever now and then.

Who has the most fun, the cold clinical hunter, or the shook up guy who bites through his pipe-stem when a deer jumps?

I mourn for the man who's never had a flush of buck fever. He's never really been hunting. Nov. 1, marks the beginning of another quest for the most sought after big game animal in North America.

The day of a white-tailed deer, being a rarity in this part of Georgia, has changed to a day of reality. The deer kill on the reservation this year is expected to surpass even last year's kill of 404.

Each hunter is entitled to a kill of two bucks with at least four-inch antlers. Remember Nov. 1 is the day to hit the fields and start the age old search. It is hunted against hunter. See you then?

Today's Sportrait

Today's Sportrait spotlights PFC Wayne Everhart, Company B, 1st Battalion, The Infantry Center Troop Command, from Thomasville, N.C.

Everhart, a member of the Baltimore Colts, has had a colorful football career. He picked football for his favorite sport and started playing the game in high school. He played his collegiate ball at Appalachian State Teachers College. Everhart played a total of 37 games while in college and was selected the Most Valuable Player his fourth year.

Everhart had three offers to play professional football before he decided to sign as a free agent with the Baltimore Colts of the National Football League. Other offers were from the Bullfalo Bills and the Edmonton Eskimos in the Canadian League.

Everhart is presently holding down the tackle position for the Fort Benning Doughboys, a return from last year's squad. Last week in the game against the Florida Central Broncos at Orlando, Fla., Everhart was credited with reddogging the Bronco line in 75 per cent of the plays.

GOOD PUTTING IS PAYOFF . . . Many times a hole is parred or bogeyed on the green. A fine putting touch, plus a correct "reading" of the green, is essential. Prime points to remember: A putter works like a pendulum; there is no body action, little wrist; body and head do not move; follow through is important. Some greens are fast, others slow; they slope in tricky ways. That makes a careful study of the green so necessary. Use a stance that is natural and in which you feel comfortable. Practice, practice . . . and . . . May par golfing or better-be yours.

Regulation Explains Materiel Readiness

WASHINGTON (ANS) — Army Regulation 11-14, dated June 5, 1962, sets forth the objectives, responsibilities, and policies essential to the attainment of materiel readiness for the Army.

The regulation states that "Commanders, soldiers, and civilians at all levels must realize that the increasing dependency of the Army on larger quantities of more complex materiel carries with it the mandatory obligation to maintain materiel in a ready condition."

Two WW II Dramas Open On Television

WASHINGTON (ANS) — The saga of the U. S. Army's fighting men during World War II unfolds in two, weekly, hour-long television programs making their debut this fall over the American Broadcasting Company network.

The first of the series, "Combat," premiered on Oct. 2 and had as its setting the European battlefields of World War II. The plot has as its focal point the personal experiences of the members of an Army infantry platoon from D Day to V-E Day, as they fight their way across Europe. Each episode of "Combat" will depict a famous chapter from the annals of World War II.

The second of the series, "The Gallant Men," will make its debut tonight and will be based on the members of a typical infantry company of the Fifth Army serving in the Italian Campaign. The series is set in the atmosphere of war and action, but portrays the individual American fighting man, a human being facing new problems in a world shaped and dominated by the pace of war.

Army Lt. Col. Davis W. Sisco and Maj. Horner H. Jones are serving as technical advisors for the dramas.

MSgt George O. Prince, administration specialist, of the 1st Armored Rifle Battalion, 58th Infantry, is a man with many unusual experiences.

Sgt. Prince, a native of Birmingham, Ala., was drafted at the age of 35 in 1944. This was not uncommon during the war years, but for a man to be jerked out of civilian life and put into military service at such a late age, and then continue to make the Army his career is truly remarkable. Sgt. Prince advanced to the grade of master sergeant in just two years after he was drafted, an outstanding achievement.

After being drafted into the service at Fort McClelland, Ala., Sgt. Prince was assigned to the 662rd Ordnance Ammunition Company, Fort Sill, Okla., for basic training. In October, 1944, he shipped overseas with his unit that later became attached to the 3rd Armored Division ("Old Blood and Guts") in Europe.

One month after V-E Day, Sgt. Prince returned stateside and for six months was assigned to the 25th Combat Team here. In 1946 he became an ROTC Instructor at Tuskegee Institute, Ala., where he remained for four years.

PRINCE

In August, 1950, he joined Hdqs. Company, 3rd Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment, here and moved to Korea. After seeing action in Korea, Sgt. Prince returned here to be assigned to Hdqs. Company, 3rd Battalion, 30th Infantry, and later to Hdqs. Detachment, Combat Training Command, as troops requirement sergeant. In 1954, Sgt. Prince journeyed south to the Panama Canal Zone to become first sergeant of the Jungle Warfare Training Center at Fort Sherman.

Sgt. Prince returned to the states in 1956 to be assigned to The Armor Center, Fort Knox, Ky., where he remained for two years. Sgt. Prince next moved west into the Pacific to Okinawa to spend thirty months with Headquarters Company, IX Corps, and Headquarters Company, USA Ordinance Group.

In April, 1961, Sgt. Prince returned to Fort Benning, where he was assigned to Headquarters Company, 58th Infantry. Since joining the 58th he has worked in operations and intelligence before becoming the administration specialist in S-1.

Sgt. Prince has received the Good Conduct Medal six times. He has the European Theater Operation Medal with Bronze Battle Star, the Korean Service Medal with 3 Bronze Battle Stars, and many other medals and letters of commendation including The Infantry Center Certificate of Achievement.

However, Sgt. Prince's most prized possession is the Combat Infantryman's Badge, an award well earned, by perhaps one of the oldest draftees to make the Army his way of life.

AUSTRIAN STUDENTS PRESENT GIFT . . . Brig. Gen. Royal Reynolds Jr., (C), assistant commandant of The Infantry School, accepts a portrait of an Austrian stallion from two Austrian officers attending Communications Course No. One. They are 1st Lt. Anton Stoeller, (L), and 1st Lt. Wolfgang Romauch. The Allied offices presented the portrait to the school after completing the course.

Col. Gates Is Among Jump Grads

The commanding officer of one of Fort Benning's major units, the 151st Engineer Group, was among the 233 newly qualified paratroopers graduated from The Infantry School's basic airborne course recently.

Col. Mahlon E. Gates was the highest ranking member of the class that included five other Army officers and 221 enlisted men, two U. S. Air Force officers and one enlisted man, and three U. S. Navy enlisted men.

Honor graduate of the three-week course was Army Pvt. George J. Willard.

Also among those receiving the silver Parachutist Badges were three sons of former airborne personnel.

They are Pvt. Bruce O. Rubright, whose father, Hamen Rubright of New York City, served with the 101st Airborne Division; Pvt. Clifford L. White, son of William C. White of Newberry, S. C., who also served with the 101st, and Pvt. Raymond R. Dreyfus Jr., son of Raymond J. Dreyfus of Milwaukee, who served with the 11th Airborne and 82nd Airborne Divisions.

MOH TO LINDBERGH

The first Medal of Honor to be awarded for a deed not involving actual combat with the enemy was presented to Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh on March 21, 1928. The award was made under a special act of Congress for his flight from New York to Paris.

3 EMs Attending Course in Atlanta

Three members of the Data Processing Division of The Infantry Center Finance and Accounting Office are attending an accounting machine operations course in Atlanta.

They are Sgt. Robert L. Walden, Sgt. Gerald E. Kuss, and Sp5 Albert W. Gesner.

Data Analysis Agencies Are Consolidated

The Infantry School will consolidate all data processing and analysis functions into a single agency effective Monday, officials have announced.

Designated RADPO (Research Analysis and Data Processing Office), the agency will be located in Bldg. 2622.

The consolidation involves the former Data Processing Office, Academic Records Section from the secretary's office and Data Processing Systems Section from the office of the coordinator of instruction.

Chief of the new agency will be Maj. Charles E. Welch, presently chief of the Data Processing Office.

John R. Thode will be associate chief. He was formerly a member of the office of the coordinator of instruction.

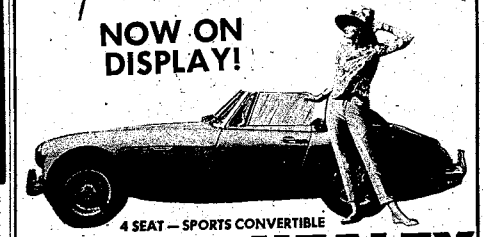
Capt. James F. Coates will be reassigned from the secretary's office to the new Research Analysis and Date Processing Office.

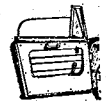
The consolidation was described by Maj. Welch as "a combining of interrelated functional areas in order to achieve maximum use of resources."

"This organization will enable the office to provide the school with a more timely and efficient service," he continued.

RADPO will support the school in matters pertaining to data processing, statistical methods and analysis.

The office will score lessons and examinations, maintain records and statistical data, and prepare reports in support of both resident and nonresident instruction.





RADPO will be the office of record for student academic data, and will serve as recorder and clerical assistant for Officer Candidate School panels and school boards.

The mission of the office also includes planning, coordinating and conducting studies and analysis as well as providing professional evaluations of the studies and making recommendations based upon the findings.

Distempter Is Biggest Threat to Young Canines; Need Proper Innoculations

By 1st Lt. Gerald A. Kelso
Assistant Station Veterinarian

Undoubtedly the biggest threat to the successful raising of a dog from puppyhood to maturity is canine distemper. This disease is accountable for more deaths in young dogs than all other diseases combined.

Not only is the disease devastating to an individual dog once stricken, but it is contagious to other dogs. The responsible virus is airborne, thus direct contact with an infected dog is not necessary for the spread of the disease.

Since anti-viral drugs have not yet been developed, the only sound method of prevention relies upon a closely followed schedule of protective serum injections from weaning age to three months, at which time the permanent distemper vaccine can be given.

The protective serum injections, often referred to as "temporary shots" or "puppy shots," should not be relied on to provide more than two weeks' protection. However, they do aptly serve to bridge the gap between weaning age, at which time the antibody protection from the mother's milk ceases, and three months of age, at which time a dog is considered to be mature enough to produce its own antibodies from a permanent-type vaccine.

The most recent and apparently the most effective permanent vaccine is the one injection method using modified live virus vaccine at three months. However, it should be stressed that this permanent vaccine should not be given to an animal with a known exposure or one showing symptoms of the disease. Instead, the protective serum injections should be given in an attempt to prevent the progression of the disease. When the danger of the exposure has subsided, the dog can then be given the permanent vaccine.

Due to a dog's natural exposures and consequential increases in immunity as the dog grows older, the permanent vaccine given at three months will in most cases result in lifetime immunity. For dogs which are not in contact with other dogs, it is advisable to give yearly boosters using the same vaccine.

As has been implied above, distemper is a constant threat to the health of all young dogs not immune to the disease. From weaning age to around one year comprises the most susceptible age group. Symptoms most often seen are discharges and mattering from the eyes and nose, listlessness, depression, refusal to eat, dehydration and fever. Diarrhea and vomiting are also common in the acute form. As the disease progresses, the virus enters the central nervous system, causing a variety of neurological disorders such as twitching of one or more legs, jerking of the head and neck, champing of the teeth with salivation, and systemic convulsions which may cause the death of the animal. Even if the animal lives, the nervous damage is usually permanent. Usually speaking, the appearance of central nervous symptoms decreases the afflicted dog's chances of survival.

Canine distemper is a virus disease, is very contagious, usually affects young dogs, cannot be optimistically treated, but can be prevented by following a sound vaccination program.

Retired Officer Returns To Post After 43 Years

Maj. (Ret.) James E. Freeman, who was a member of the 29th Infantry when it was at Camp Benning on Macon Road in Columbus, Ga., 43 years ago, has returned for a visit with Army friends now employed on the post as civilians.

"Fort Benning was always my favorite post," he said. "If I hadn't like it, I wouldn't have stayed so long."

Maj. Freeman, now living comfortably in retirement, was stationed at the post for nearly 27 years.

Many years ago Army personnel were not transferred from one post to another and they are now.

A native of Warm Springs, Ga., he joined the Army at Fort Oglethorpe, in September, 1917, shortly after the United States' enrry into World War I. After serving with the 7th Machine Gun Battalion of the 3rd Infantry Division in Europe, he returned to the United States' entry into World signed to Camp Benning in 1919.

Early in the 1920's he received a Reserve commission as a second lieutenant but remained an enlisted man for active duty.

By 1934, he had been promoted to master sergeant in the 29th Infantry where for the past 10 years he had been a personnel sergeant. When the United States entered World War II, he was commissioned in the active Army.

Assigned to Headquarters, Fort Benning, he remained with the unit until 1945, when he was sent to the 12th Infantry Division in the Philippines. With the 12th, which was almost entirely a division of Philippine Scouts, he served until April, 1947.

Freeman returned to Fort Benning as a major and was assigned as provost marshal of the post Headquarters, his former unit for many years. Five months later, in September, 1947, he retired after 30 years of service.

"There have been many changes and improvements in the Army since I was an enlisted men," he said. "One of the greatest improvements has been the big increase in pay of enlisted men and officers. These pay boosts have helped keep thousands of valuable men in the Army."

Maj. Freeman and his wife, Willie, were visiting her sister, Mrs. Eddie Culbreath of Columbus.

British Officer Visiting Here

Col. R. C. Gibbs, staff officer for Infantry and Infantry Air activities for the British Army Staff in Washington, D. C., is currently visiting here.

According to Lt. Col. John S. McLaren, British liaison officer here, Col. Gibbs will visit the Infantry Combat Developments Agency, The Infantry School's Ranger Department and the Infantry Board.

During his visit to the Ranger Department, Col. Gibbs will see a demonstration of Ranger skills and will be told of the training program used by The Infantry School to develop them.

Col. Gibbs is scheduled to depart the post Saturday (Oct. 6).

U. S. Sends Strong Team to World Shoot-Off

Spt. Ron Claxton

Representing a history of excellence, 34 U. S. marksmen departed Fort Benning Sunday for Cairo, Egypt, where they will pit their marksmanship proficiency against representatives from some 36 countries in the 1962 World Championships Tuesday through Oct. 20.

These modern-day Sgt. Alvin Yorks and Annie Oakleys have been practicing on The Infantry Center's complete complex of International - type ranges since the close of the U. S. tryouts.

The United States has long been credited with being "a nation of riflemen."

Born of necessity, with large numbers of Americans living on the frontier of our nation's continental expansion, this skill was a provider and a defense. It was long a part of our military potential, and the history of the military is filled with heroic accomplishments of American riflemen.

In 1903, the year of the first National Rifle and Pistol Matches through which U. S. National Guard units romped, the regular services, through a realization of marksmanship deficiency, turned to the Guardsmen for help. With this help, improvement came rapidly. Soon the regulars were winning the national matches.

Then in answer to the Soviet challenge flung about 1955, America decided that her marksmen and armorers could and would meet that if the opportunity was provided.

This meant U. S. marksmen would have to learn a type of shooting far different from what they were used to.

"In ordinary competition shooters compete among themselves, but in this International-type shooting the competitor fights his greatest battle with himself," MSgt. (Ret.) Charles A. Quinn, an old pro, said.

For example, Sgt. Quinn added, riflemen shooting in the Free Rifle Match at 300 meters would be permitted six hours to complete 120 shots from three positions.

"In this match," he said, "they'll attempt to put 120 shots into a circle no larger than the top of a teacup at a range of some 227 yards.

He described weapons to be used as finely machined instruments which might weigh as much as 17½ pounds. The marksman added that handling this dead weight for six hours at a stretch was a mean task in itself.

Once the firer begins his score, Quinn states, he must call on his utmost concentration, muscular and nerve coordination, mental sharpness and eyesight to get that first shot exactly where he wants it.

According to the sergeant, the 300-meter match calls for 40 shots each in the prone, kneeling and standing positions. The physical and mental requirements can only be appreciated by the competitors themselves, he added.

With the end of the 1962 U.S. International Shooting Trials held jointly at Fort Benning and Lackland Air Force Base, Tex., the United States has come up with the strongest team since World War II, U.S. team captain Col. Thomas A. Sharpe, assistant chief of the Training Division, Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Military Operations, Department of the Army, Washington, D.C., said.

"The United States finished second in the 1958 World shoot held in Moscow," Col. Sharpe pointed out, "but in team trials this year team members have exceeded the world records in all except two events with one of these being a tie.

The 34 representatives from the United States will include 1st Lt. Willis L. Powell, world Running Deer double runs champion, and SFC Loyd G. Crow Jr., world single run champ, in the Running Deer tilts.

On the pistol scene Army SFC William B. Blankenship, champion; Air Force Capt. Franklin C. Green, national International - type free pistol champion; Army Capt. Cecil L. Wallis, 1962 Armed Forces International rapid fire pistol champion, and Marine Corps Capt. William C. McMillan Jr., world and Olympic rapid fire pistol champion, will pit their prowess against the world's best.

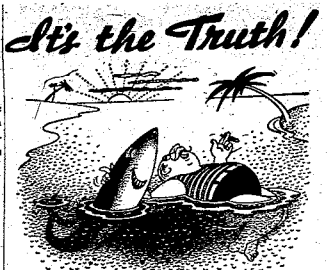
Army 1st Lt. Gordon B. Horner, 1956 world American skeet champion, is a heavy favorite in the skeet shoot.

Janet S. Friddell will represent the United States in the women's smallbore rifle events. Miss Friddell was women's smallbore rifle champ this year at the National Matches at Camp Perry, Ohio.

Women's Air Force 1st Lt. Gail N. Liberty, women's national pistol champion at Camp Perry, and Trudy Schlernetzauer, runner-up to Lt. Liberty and Camp Perry .22 caliber pistol champion, promise strong competition in the women's International center fire pistol events.

With this array of talent the United States promises to be a formidable contender to previous Russian supremacy in the World shoots.

HONOR LEADERSHIP GRAD . . . Second Lt. Kenneth J. Harmon and his wife, Nelda, proudly examine the statuette he has received for being named honor leadership graduate of officer candidate class No. 4 at The Infantry School. Lt. Harmon, who served more than eight years as an enlisted man, received his commission at recent graduation ceremonies at Theater No. 1.



Col. J. C. Borroum To Attend Course

Lt. Col. James C. Borroum, chief of the Operations and Review Section of the Communications Department, The Infantry School, will attend an Army Security Agency indoctrination course Oct. 7 through 16 at Fort Devens, Mass.

BURSTING WITH NEWS...'63 MERCURYS

NEWS-MAKING ROOF FROM MONTEREY. The advantages of Monterey's distinctive styling go far beyond its beauty. This is elegance that works. See how the recessed rear window slants inward? It stays clearer in rain or snow. On hot days, it opens for breezeway ventilation. The overhanging roof shades rear-seat passengers from the sun, gives them more headroom, keeps glare off the rear window for better rearview visibility. There's news inside the '63 Monterey, too. A Mercury Marauder 390 V-8 is the standard engine. Optional engines range up to a Super Marauder 406 V-8.

SPARKLING MODELS FROM METEOR. For 1963, Meteor is the hot brand. Meteor is the sparkler with a whole line of models in the low price field—sleek low-to-the-road hardtops, sedans, and three station wagons. Feel sporty? Try the racy Meteor S-33 hardtop, with individually adjustable bucket seats, and a handy console. For brilliant preformance to match Meteor's sparkle, a Lightning 260 V-8 is optional in every model. And you save on upkeep with Mercury service-savers like 36,000-mile major lubrications, 6,000-mile minor lubes. Action-test Meteor soon!

THE LID'S OFF COMET. Now a jaunty convertible joins Comet's all-full line. This sleek, rakish beauty comes in two models: the Custom and the dashing S-22, with bucket seats and optional stick shift. All Comets now have a complete package of service-savers like self-adjusting brakes. And Comet still heads its class with the largest trunk, longest wheelbase, and best resale record. See Comet's whole happy '63 line-up: convertibles, sedans with Comet's classic roof, station wagons like the Villager with rich mahogany-toned metal paneling.

Dental Health Series

Dentures Will Never Replace Real Thing

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The following is the 19th in a series of articles presented in the interests of better dental health.)

By Maj. Charles W. Dobson
Preventive Dentistry Officer

Many times patients whose teeth are in bad condition ask the question, "Why not take them all out and make a denture?" This question shows that there is a great lack in our education of the public concerning dental problems.

Occasionally a physician must tell a patient that to save his life, an arm or leg or finger must be amputated. The loss of teeth is in no way as serious, but it does follow along along the same lines.

Teeth are a necessary part of the human body. To lose them makes a person a dental cripple in the same sense that loss of a leg will make him a physical cripple.

Because it is essential that a person can chew food properly to prepare it for use by his body, and because of the poor appearance created by loss of teeth, we as dentists replace extracted teeth to the best of our ability. But a denture cannot approach taking the place of good sound teeth.

Despite improvements that are constantly being made in the construction of artificial dentures, the fact remains, that we cannot and will never be able to construct dentures as satisfactory or as good as natural teeth.

The only patients I have ever seen who were really happy with their artificial dentures were those who had suffered great pain over long periods of time with their natural teeth. And yet, how much better off these people would have been if their own teeth could have been restored.

One great error commonly believed about dentures is that once you have them your dental trouble are over. Nothing could be further from the truth. Once natural teeth are removed, the bony ridge upon which dentures are constructed is continually shrinking until the day you die. As this bone and tissue change takes place, the denture becomes loose, and it must periodically be corrected to fit this changing ridge.

A loose, ill-fitting denture can produce many serious effects, and it can and does sometimes cause cancer.

Of course not everyone wants his natural teeth removed, but people who neglect their teeth and gums are well on the road to becoming denture wearers at some point during their lifetime.

ASSUMES DUTIES . . . First Lt. Charles Rizzo recently assumed the duties of chief of the Enlisted Student Branch Personnel. The Student Brigade, succeeding 1st Lt. Virgil F. Emory, who is currently on assignment in France.

Post P-TA Will Meet On Tuesday

Accidents and poisonings in childhood will be the theme of a meeting of the Fort Benning PTA at 8 p.m. Tuesday at Faith School Auditorium.

The program, sponsored by Martin Army Hospital, will feature Capt. Frank A. Mershon as speaker.

Capt. Mershon is assistant chief of the hospital's Department of Pediatrics and chief of the Pediatric Outpatient Clinic. He will show slides to illustrate a presentation on the "Prevention of Accidents and Accidental Poisoning Among Children."

Capt. Mershon said accidents and accidental poisoning are "far too common."

"It is doubtful that there is a parent anywhere who has not at some time been confronted with the type situation we will discuss," he said.

ARMY AIR FORCE

The Army Air Forces was started Aug. 1, 1907, as the Aeronautical Division of the Signal Corps.

Lt. Stancer Honor Grad Of 100C

Lt. Stancer completed the eight-week course of instruction with the highest overall average in his class, 94.4 per cent.

Col. Ralph H. Hughett, commanding officer, 1st Battle Group, 67th Infantry, 2nd Infantry Division, guest speaker for the graduation exercises, was introduced to the class and guests by Lt. Col. Vern Joseph, 2nd Student Battalion commander. Col. Hughett congratulated the class on their efforts during the course, and presented the honor graduate with his graduation certificate.

Addressing the graduating body, Col. Hughett spoke about combat readiness training. He stated the three areas in training as being evaluation of the situation before training, building up deficiencies in the unit and specialty training.

Col. Hughett noted that evaluation of the situation was needed to determine what training was necessary. Next, he said, the training would be used to build up all deficiencies.

Obvious, isn't it, that Pontiac's come up with another beauty this year. Fresh over-and-under headlights, clean profile—but you can see that. There's a wider Wide-Track, too, and a full line of Trophy V-8's. [That ought to be enough to make those other cars turn green.] And we haven't mentioned such happy touches as self-adjusting brakes. So what, pray tell, could be keeping you from a 1963 Pontiac of your own? A small suggestion. Don't run down to see one. Gallop! Wide-Track Pontiac

VISITING CANADIANS . . . Col. George H. Wattsford (L), commandant of the Canadian Army's Senior Officer's School, talks over the home situation with Maj. Gordon A. Wattsford headed 23 members of the Kingston, Ontario, on their visit here which ended Tuesday.

Jungles of Battlefield Will Be Tourist Lure

MANILA (AFPS) — Twenty years after American and Filipino troops made their gallant but hopeless stand on Corregidor before its surrender on May 6, 1942, the Philippine Government has plans to make the rocky island a tourist attraction in Southeast Asia.

Corregidor, in the mouth of Manila Bay 28 miles from the old capital city, has been reclaimed by the jungle through the years. Its corroded guns that barked defiance for four months stand silent, festooned with creepers, monuments to its defenders. For the island has a special place in the history of the Pacific War; its surrender marked the end of organized American resistance in the Philippines.

The government's plans for the island include cutting back the defense tropical vegetation, restoring the old military roads and providing regular boat service from Manila. It will encourage businessmen to build resort hotels, restaurants and a golf course. Nets will be hung at the beaches to protect bathers from sharks.

Often called "the Gibraltar of the Pacific" in the pre-war days, the island's defenses extended deep underground where a subterranean railroad connected the main part of Fort Mills with a six-inch gun battery offshore. Corregidor was considered impregnable as far back as 1795 when the Spanish fortified it to ward off hostile tribesmen and pirates of the South China Sea.

It was in the island's concrete-lined Malinta Tunnel — dark and deserted today — that American nurses heroically tended the wounded and the dying in emergency wards. And it was Corregidor and Bataan, both secure in history's a shining epic of American valor, that inspired the words of General of the Army Douglas MacArthur:

Warn Against Tailoring The Duty Uniform

The wearing of improperly tailored uniforms has been noted by the G-1 Section of the Infantry Center.

"Improper alterations create non - uniform appearance in themselves," according to a recent notice in the Daily Bulletin. "Such tailoring causes an unnecessary operational laundry expense by the Quartermaster using laundry machinery which is designed for pressing military clothing as it was issued."

Receipt of improperly tailored uniforms will cause it to be returned without laundering," the notice continued.

Unit commanders have been urged to conduct inspections to insure that no military uniforms of any type have been improperly altered.

Improper alterations include the "pegging" of trouser legs on any type uniform.

There is no "wear-out" period for improperly altered uniforms. troops were warned and replacement will be at the expense of the individual responsible for unauthorized alterations.

1,300 Civilian Employes Set For Pay Hike

More than 1,300 civilian employees here will receive a pay increase effective Oct. 21, officials announced Monday.

News of the increase came in a telephone call from the Army-Air Force Wage Board in Washington, D. C., according to William A. Buzbee, chief of the Position and Pay Management Branch, Civilian Personnel Section, The Infantry Center.

The pay raise will affect unskilled, semi - skilled, trade and craft employees and their supervisors. The average increase in non-supervisory jobs will be 5.85 cents per hour.

Leaders (first line supervisors) will receive a raise of 6.23 cents per hour while supervisors will receive 8.23 cents per hour.

Laundry workers did not receive a general increase, Buzbee said, but there will be slight increases in grades 8, 9 and 10.

Lithographic and printing workers in grades 4 through 11 will receive a slight increase.

The average increase is in keeping with the Army-Air Force Wage Board plan of an annual pay scale survey in the community surrounding an installation with adjustments based upon the findings of the survey, Buzbee said.

Canadian, British Delegates Due Here for Conference on Infantry

BY PFC FRANK GIBSON

Senior Army officers from Canada and Great Britain will begin arriving here Sunday to represent their countries in the Fifth Biennial Tripartite Conference Nov. 5-10.

The meeting is part of the standardization program among the Armies of the United States, Great Britain and Canada. The Infantry conference has been held every two years since 1952, the location being rotated each session.

Lt. Gen. John P. Daley, commanding general of the Army Combat Developments Command at Fort Belvoir, Va. will deliver the introductory address to the delegates.

Gen. Harrell Host

Official Army host and senior U. S. representative will be Maj. Gen. Ben Harrell, commanding general of The Infantry Center.

In addition, the U. S. will be represented by senior officers from the Department of the Army, Combat Developments Command, Army Materiel Command in Washington, and Fort Benning's Infantry Combat Developments Agency.

Heading the British delegation will be Maj. Gen. P. Gleedell, director of Infantry for the British Army. Brigadier B. O. P. Eugster, commandant of the United Kingdom School of Infantry, also will be present.

Senior representative among the Canadian delegates will be Col. William De N. Watson, director of Infantry, and Col. J. C. Allan, commandant of the Royal Canadian School of Infantry.

According to Lt. Col. Paul E. Nottage of the Infantry Combat Developments Agency the purpose of the standardization agreement and the conferences is "to insure that there will be no operational, material or technical obstacles to full cooperation and collaboration among the American, British and Canadian Armies and to obtain the greatest possible economy in the use of combined resources and effort."

On Agenda

Among the topics on the conference agenda are future Infantry operational concepts and requirements for equipment, both current and future, to be used by organizations of the three Armies.

In discussing the accomplishments of past conferences, Col. Nottage explained that in any international activity the first step toward effective cooperation is the adoption of common terms and definitions. The Tripartite nations

'Early Outs' For Holidays Are Approved

WASHINGTON (AFPS — The Defense Department has announced a Christmas "early - out" program for thousands of eligible officers and enlisted men providing international developments permit.

The customary early - release-for-Christmas policy was suspended last year due to efforts at that time to increase and strengthen the Armed Forces.

Under the Defense Department's 1962 early-out timetable, most non-regular officers and regular and non-regular enlisted personnel whose normal expiration of obligated service or enlistment occurs between Dec. 15, 1962, and Jan. 3, 1963, inclusive, will be separated beginning Dec. 10.

Eligible personnel under the policy this year include those stationed within the continental 40 states (or in their area of residence in the states of Alaska and Hawaii) and the Com-

'Greens' Are SOP Monday

If you're prone to making simple mistakes in the early morning, be doubly cautious when slipping into your uniform Monday.

Make certain its color is Modern Army green.

In compliance with AR 670-6, all posts in the Third Army area will make the change from khaki to green Monday.

If you haven't had those alterations made, or those new stripes sewn on, you had better do it now.

Scientific Studies on Infantryman To Be Presented Here Next Week

Scientific studies which may make the Infantryman of the future a more potent battlefield force will be presented here Tuesday through next Friday during the eighth annual Army Human Factors Engineering Conference.

The conference is expected to draw approximately 300 of the Army's top personnel from developing and using agencies concerned with the man - machine compatability of Army equipment.

Theme of this year's conference is "The Infatryman—Invincibility on the Battlefield."

As in the past, Dr. Lynn E. Baker, chief assistant on human factors in the Office of the Chief of Research and Development, will preside as general chairman.

Sessions Set Wednesday

The first day will be devoted to registration. Conference sessions begin Wednesday at 9 a.m.

Chaplain (Col.) Silas E. Decker, post chaplain, will give the invocation.

He will be followed by Maj. Gen. Ben Harrell, commanding general of the Infantry Center and commandant of The Infantry School, who will deliver the welcoming address.

The keynote address will be made by Lt. Gen. John P. Daley, commanding general of the Army Combat Developments Command, Fort Belvoir, Va.

An hour-long presentation on Infantry doctrine and concepts by Col. Walter D. Short, chairman of the Defense Committee, Command and Staff Department, The Infantry School, will close the first morning session.

Concurrent Meeting

That afternoon the conferees will divide into two groups and attend one of two concurrent sessions beginning at 1 p.m.

Payday tabulations saw six units bubble over their 100 per cent "fair share" participation goals in the 1963 Community Activities Association Fund Drive with the Center Troop Command being the first major unit to accomplish this charitable excellence.

The drive, which continues through Nov. 9, is now at a post-wide 43 per cent mark with new figures being received constantly.

Other units that have attained 100 per cent are the Infantry Center Inspector General Section, Red Cross, Main Officers Open Mess, Bank of Fort Benning, and the offices of the commanding general which includes those of the assistant commandant of The Infantry School, deputy commanding general of TIC and the chief of staff.

Drive chairman Col. Richard W. Keyes, commander of the 1st Infantry Brigade, notes the CAA fund supports welfare, health and youth activities, and makes a substantial contribution to the United Givers Fund in adjacent civilian areas.

Tripartite

began the job of standardizing military terminology in 1947. Since then, this activity has been expanded to all NATO nations.

The colonel pointed out that almost every day various items of military equipment are loaned between one country and another for tests and evaluation.

Col. Nottage explained that absolute standardization of equipment is not the immediate goal of the conference or of the standardization agreement between the three nations.

"The goal is to attain the maximum benefit from all the resources, knowledge and skill available," he added. "Discussions at Fort Benning will help guarantee that there will be no obstacle to successful integrated action on the battlefield."

Each official delegation will be assisted and advised by a group of experts from its own country. Approximately 60 U.S. and Allied officers will participate in the formal sessions of the conference.

Following the arrival of the Allied working parties, whose responsibility is to form a detailed agenda, they will be briefed on the organization and mission of The Infantry Center and School.

The working parties plan to complete the majority of their activities Oct. 30 and prepare to begin the actual conference Nov. 5. The official delegations are scheduled to arrive by Nov. 3.

A highlight of the conferees' activities will be the U. S. Army Infantry Board's demonstration Nov. 7 of U. S. Army developmental firepower.

According to conference officials, the meeting will involve more than four weeks work at The Infantry Center for many of the participants and many more weeks for planning and evaluation.

DOD Asks for Action on Spending

WASHINGTON (AFPS)—The Defense Department is taking definite action to help stem the flow of gold into foreign markets.

The latest move, disclosed here by Assistant Secretary of Defense Roswell L. Gilpatric, is a two-year agreement with West Germany.

Under the "offset arrangement" West Germany will spend some $600 million for purchase of American storage, training, supply and medical services.

This would offset the money the U.S. spends in West Germany for the maintenance of its forces there.

The plan is also a part of U.S. efforts to broaden military cooperation with its allies.

In addition to the West German agreement, Gilpatric revealed that similar negotiations are underway with France and Italy.

"Our shopping list of things available to France," he said, includes naval weapons, aircraft, ordnance and electronics items.

"Our offset objective in Italy is $10 million a year and $250-$275 million in France, although we are a long way from that at the moment."

Although the balance of payments problem is the immediate reason for the agreements, Mr. Gilpatric said the long range effect would be the modernization of NATO armaments and standardization of logistics systems.

Increase Seen In Small Firm, Military Pacts

WASHINGTON (ANS) — Military prime contract awards to small business firms during the fiscal year which ended June 30, increased by almost $1 billion over the previous year and amounted to 17.7 per cent of total Defense procurements during the period, it was recently announced by Department of Defense officials.

The $4.6 billion in contracts awarded to small business during fiscal year 1962 reverses a 5-year downward trend.

According to the Department of Defense, plans for the current and subsequent fiscal years call for a continued increase in the share of Defense work going to small business concerns.

10,555 military personnel will be granted early releases under the 1962 policy.

An American Writer On a Russian Stamp

When Nikita Khrushchev and other big Soviet brass aren't making bogey-man noises and threatening the destruction of the U. S. skyline, they busy themselves in all sorts of weird and wonderful ways.

Such as announcing that a forthcoming Russian stamp will honor the American short story writer, O. Henry, who was born 100 years ago.

And, to top that, the stamp will carry the likeness of the author—his real name was William Sidney Porter—against the New York City skyline. How paradoxical can you get?

Why O. Henry? His stories with their contrived trick endings have gone out of fashion today—at least in his own country. But the Russians eat them up, along with the books of Jack London who is also a bit of an antique at home.

It could just be, in O. Henry's case, that some Soviet bureaucrat decided the writer was a neat case of capitalist injustice. Porter, as is well known, was a bank clerk who was convicted of embezzlement and served three years in prison. There he took up writing, using the name of one of his guards as a pen name. His biography says there was some doubt as to his actual guilt.

Well, anyway, it's good to see the Russians honoring the man who immortalized New York as "Baghdad - on - the - Subway"—especially with that skyline thrown in. If memory serves, Mr. Khrushchev didn't think much of our largest city the last time he dropped in for some shoewaving at the U.N. Maybe O. Henry changed his mind.

If the Soviet philatelist bosses really want to play hands-across-the-sea, why not a stamp honoring Robert Frost. Our 88-year-old Poet Laureate was over there recently and among the poems he read was his famous one that begins: "Something there is that doesn't love a wall. . ."

Or don't the Communists like to be reminded about walls nowadays? AFPS

Liberty and Communism

Protection From False Arrest

False arrest is unlawful detention of any person by an officer of the law. While modern democracies seek to maintain order, to protect citizens and to curb crime, they have adopted numerous constitutional measures to safeguard innocent persons from false arrest and imprisonment.

In some countries the law may be one thing and practice another. But modern democracies make every effort to have practice follow legal requirements. Sheriffs and police officers who violate these requirements are not only condemned but also severely punished.

In Communist regimes, the citizen's legal protections against false arrest are weaker than in democracies, or else nonexistent. And too frequently Communist practice does not follow the law.

Anglo-Saxon law looks upon the writ of habeas corpus as the most effective prevention against false arrest.

Under British and American law, any person who is arrested may ask a court for a writ of habeas corpus directed to the sheriff or other officer in whose custody he may be, directing the officer to bring him into court and show lawful cause for his detention. If a lawful reason cannot be shown, the court will order the prisoner to be released.

There are many protections against false and arbitrary arrests other than the writ of habeas corpus. Chief among these are the constitutional requirements regarding proper warrants for searches, seizures and arrests.

False arrests by the secret police have been common in the Soviet Union as in all Communist regimes. In 1918, Lenin established the notorious Cheka, the first secret police organization. This was followed in turn by the GPU, the NKVD and the MVD.

Today the secret police is divided between the Republic MVDs (regional Ministries of the Interior) and the Committee on State Security.

Your Spiritual Security

"Unless the Lord build the House, they labor in vain who build it. Unless the Lord guard the city, he watches in vain who guards it." (Psalm—13)

This text taken from the Psalms of David should give every American pause to reflect. In these days of urgency and confusion, and anxious future offers little hope to men.

We have heard so much platudinous talk about democracy, freedom, and human dignity that it tends to become old shop. Like unthinking children, we put away from our thoughts that our rights as a free people could ever be lost or destroyed. Naively confident in our natural sense of self sufficiency, we rely almost totally upon our material strength and resources. Yet history records the almost overnight collapse of great nations who trusting to their human powers and arms, forgot this most fundamental truth of all human rights.

"Unless the Lord build the house, they labor in vain who build it. Unless the Lord guard the city, he watches in vain who guards it." For many Americans, the Psalm texts are deserving of serious personal consideration. The rights we enjoy as Americans come from God.

The Declaration of Independence proclaimed this truth at the very beginning of our nations history. The Constitution confirmed it and spelled out the safeguards to protect these

Recent War Games Built Army Image

Good community relations have many faces, from the proper conduct of a single soldier to the massive support of the entire Army in a national project. They also play a vital role in field training, as demonstrated in the recent exercise SWIFT STRIKE II.

For today's big maneuvers, troops need hundreds of square miles to carry out the realistic and complex training required to be prepared for modern warfare. Where possible, the Army acquires land for this purpose from the Federal government or from local governments, but a large part of it must be secured from private citizens. The land contains the homes, schools, churches and businesses of these citizens, as well as their farms, orchards, woods, and grazing areas. Obviously, these are strong community relations factors which must be a carefully-planned, integral part of exercise preparations.

It was such an approach in community relations planning that netted positive results in SWIFT STRIKE II, one of the largest peacetime maneuvers ever held in the United States. Involved last August were some 65,000 troops, including the 2nd Infantry Division, who flexed their muscles under the U. S. Strike Command in some 3.5 million acres.

The first community relations step was taken in January when influential citizens in the proposed exercise area were visited by senior Army officers and briefed on the national need for the field training, its scope, the area, and dates involved. In the months following, other details were worked out with residents of the area — including procedures for quick settlement of claims and prompt repair of damaged property. Troops were thoroughly indoctrinated before and during the maneuver on matters concerning respect for private and public property, behavior and discipline, safety, and the like.

As a result of these actions and especially the exemplary conduct of the participants, it is safe to predict that troops will be welcomed back in the Carolinas with the same great display of public support and cooperation so evident during SWIFT STRIKE II. In this and other activities, while the planning aspect of community relations is vital, it is plain that it is the conduct of the individual soldier which will decide finally the kind of return reception the Army will get—or whether it will be welcomed at all.

Once a Form of Wagering, Insurance Is Invaluable

By 1st Lt. Lawrence D. Sledge

In "Merrie Old" England, when the practice of insuring one's life was in its youth, the local pub crowds amused themselves by speculating how much longer a public figure would live.

Whenever the newspapers announced a popular person was in bad health, a series of wagers would be placed as to how long this person would live. These wagers grew in popularity and in size.

Some speculators would take this rather seriously, and after placing a heavy wager, would retain the services of the underworld, which somehow would precipitate the demise of the insured at the specified time. Consequently, the speculator would reap the reward of the "insurance."

The untimely passing of noted figures, as well as obscure persons, did not go without attention, so the courts and Parliament announced that these practices were against public policy as well as safety and should be abolished. These statements have been woven into the texture of our law over the years.

Thus, before a life insurance policy can be valid, the party taking out the insurance must have an "insurable interest" in the life of the party insured.

This insurable interest must exist at the time the contract is entered into, regardless of whether it exists later or not.

"Or instance, a husband insures the life of his wife, making himself the beneficiary, and later the marriage ends in divorce. This policy would still be valid, though the two subsequently become estranged.

Marksmanship Era Ends As Col. Dobak Stacks Arms at MTU

By SSgt. Lee LaCombe

An era in Army rifle marksmanship came to an end recently with the retirement of Lt. Col. Raynold S. Dobak after more than 20 years active duty.

Col. Dobak had been officer-in-charge of the Rifle Division of the Army's Marksmanship Training Unit since 1960.

At the time of his retirement, Army riflemen rested atop the shooting world. They have won every available national team and individual honor.

But it wasn't always so.

When Col. Dobak became a coach with MTU in 1958 the Army's fortunes in national rifle competition were not the best. In addition, troop training with the rifle was under fire from within and without the Army.

Knew Both Sides

The 50-year-old Army officer had first-hand knowledge of both sides of the coin. He had been a rifle competitor on major command and the U. S. Army Rifle team for many years and was one of the few who at that time had earned the Distinguished Rifle Badge.

Also he had only recently completed a tour of duty as a battalion S-3 with the 2nd Infantry Division in Alaska where he had been able to observe troop training on a day-to-day basis.

Col. Dobak coached the Army team through an intensive training program in 1958 and they enjoyed one of their best years at the National Matches.

Since then, teams coached by him or under his command have won the Inter-Service team events with the service rifle in 1960 and 1961; The Infantry Trophy Team Match at the Nationals, four times, and the National Trophy Team event every year since 1952.

His shooters won the NRA High Power Service individual championship in 1959, 60, and '61 and the Inter-Service individual crown every year since 1960.

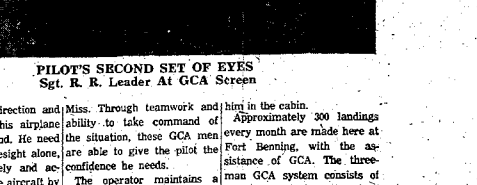
It was also during his tenure that Sp4 Barbara Hile rose to prominence in national shooting competition and won the Women's Service Rifle title two years running.

Influence Widespread

But, Col. Dobak's influence in rifle marksmanship extended beyond the Army Marksmanship Training Unit.

Through coaches' clinics conducted throughout the country, assistance at the Small Arms Firing School at the National and All-Army Matches and correspondence with shooting groups, both civilian and military, the doctrines and mechanics of successful rifle coaching and rifle marksmanship were spread.

In a further attempt to reach every soldier in the Army, major command rifle teams now train for nearly three months with the MTU team following the All-Army matches each June, forming the National Trophy Rifle Group.



Thus, soldiers from every Army command in the world received direct instruction from the highly experienced coaches of the MTU.

Is this training program reaching the individual soldier, wherever he may be stationed?

The results of the 1962 National Matches provide an emphatic answer in the affirmative. Army firers emerged victorious.

So, Col. Dobak leaves with sounds of victory still ringing in his ears. And he can take with him the knowledge that the coaching techniques and marksmanship doctrine he has worked so diligently to spread will continue to be taught by those now in charge . . . many of whom learned from him.

In future years as Army teams and individuals go forward to claim their winning awards and as trainees qualify successfully on rifle training ranges, Col. Dobak will have the satisfaction of knowing that his efforts have not been in vain and the doctrines advocated by MTU continue to help the Army.

Special Forces... Future Unlimited

Though the Special Forces training center is at Fort Bragg, N.C., the distinctive green beret of these highly skilled troopers can be seen bobbing around The Infantry Center.

It is worn by Sgt. Sidney Rosser, Special Forces career counselor, who has set up headquarters in Building 2362, the Airborne Operations Center, 4th Student Battalion, The Student Brigade.

"We've been averaging about 50 volunteers a month," notes Sgt. Rosser, "but we expect the number to increase since the secretary of the Army has approved expansion of Special Forces in fiscal years 1963 and 1964."

Post Plays Part

Fort Benning plays a part in the preparation of Special Forces personnel. Before being accepted for Special Forces, officers and enlisted men must earn the coveted silver wings of the parachutist, the training for which is conducted here, home of the Airborne.

Other than the necessary physical qualifications, applicants for Special Forces must have final or interim secret security clearance, have at least four months active duty, be able to swim at least 200 yards, and have 18 months remaining in service or be willing to sign a statement of intent to reenlist.

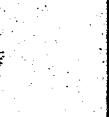
"There's no paper work involved on the enlisted man's part when he asks for Special Forces training," Sgt. Rosser said. "However, officers must follow normal channels, putting in a 1049 form."

Holders of all ranks and all MOSs are eocouraged to apply for Special Forces by the local career counselor. Personnel actually undergo an MOS change during their training at Fort Bragg.

List Courses

The four courses offered at the training center include:

COMMUNICATIONS — A 16-week course in continuous wave radio operations.



WEAPONRY — Training in 22 U. S. weapons from the .22 caliber rifle through mortars, and 12 foreign weapons, lasting eight weeks.

DEMOLITIONS—An eight-week course in conventional as well as unconventional explosives.

OPERATIONS INTELLIGENCE — For grades E-6 and up, an eight-week course in intelligence work.

The fifth MOS awarded to Special Forces personnel is in medical work. This training, 33 weeks in duration, is conducted at Brooks Army hospital at Fort Sam Houston, Tex.

The training includes 22 weeks in the medical school, nine weeks of on the job training in the hospital and eight weeks of medical research laboratory work.

Upon successful completion of MOS training, the volunteer moves on to seven weeks branch training, oriented toward Special Forces operations:

"Special Forces is a challenge," comments Sgt. Rosser, "and it will prove beneficial to the individual concerned as well as the Nation."

Little Known System Eases Pilot's Burden

By Sp4 James Royer

"GCA," a little known abreviation to most, is well understood by the pilots and control tower operators who work with it and depend on it.

Ground Controlled Approach, or GCA, is an integrated system of men, machines, radio and radar that helps bring weather-bound airplanes safely back down to the airfield. It plays an important role in today's modern aviation.

Commercial airlines depend on GCA to keep their flights on proper schedule. It is invaluable in the field of military aviation, providing the capability to utilize airfields that would otherwise be inaccessable due to adverse weather.

Used At LAAC

To illustrate, take the Lawson Airfield Control Tower here at Fort Benning. One of the Army's busiest airfields, it had over 144,000 aircraft takeoffs and landings last year.

The Lawson Airfield is open on many occasions during which it might be closed due to weather. It is kept busy every day with the activities of The Infantry School, Airborne training and pilot proficiency training of the attached aviation units.

The airfield is open 24 hours a day, part of that being "on call." This is made possible by the use of GCA, which allows aircraft to land in fog, rain, snow, or other adverse weather conditions which effect visibility.

GCA is the Lawson Airfield "primary instrument approach." In using this system in bad weather, the pilot is instructed as to direction and altitude to bring his airplane safely to the ground. He need not rely on his eyesight alone, but may completely and accurately control the aircraft by use of instruments based on instructions received over his radio receiver.

Pinpoint Aircraft

The operators on the radar sets have the aircraft pinpointed in relation to height above the ground, speed, and alignment with the end of the runway. The men who operate the GCA equipment are highly trained specialists who have completed an extensive training period at Keesler AFB, Miss. Through teamwork and ability to take command of the situation, these GCA men are able to give the pilot the confidence he needs.

The operator maintains a continuous flow of information to the pilot such as aircraft position in relation to the center line of the runway, and glide path. The pilot is constantly reminded on such items as checking to insure the landing gear is down.

This reassuring continuous chatter, in addition to informing the pilot, has the effect of seating the pilot during this moment of tension. This makes the pilot feel as if the GIA operator were sitting next to him in the cabin.

Approximately 300 landings every month are made here at Fort Benning, with the assistance of GCA. The three-man GCA system consists of radar-radio equipment valued at a quarter of a million dollars. It is a large sum of money when we first think of it, but economical indeed when bringing a large airliner full of passengers safely back to "terra firma."

This is the role the GCA people play . . . a role seldom heard or read of, but one that is depended on vitally when and if the team is called upon to furnish a pilot with that "second set of eyes."

MUSEUM SOCIETY MEMBERS . . . Col. Richard W. Keyes, second from right, commander of the 1st Infantry Brigade, is given an envelope containing $107 as membership fees in The Infantry Center Museum Society. Presenting the envelope is M-Sgt. Lorenzo Colon (L), first sergeant of Battery B, 10th Field Artillery, 2nd Howitzer Battalion, the first post unit to reach 100 per cent membership in the society. Col. Keyes is a member of the museum council. Looking on are 1st Lt. Robert C. Soderstrom, executive officer of Battery B, and 2nd Lt. Thomas C. Latham (R), museum custodian.

Artillerymen 100% Behind Post Museum

Battery B, 10th Artillery of the 2nd Howitzer Battalion, recently became the first post unit to attain 100 per cent membership in the U.S. Army Infantry Museum Society.

In joining the society, the artillerymen contributed $107 in lifetime membership fees.

The money was presented to Col. Richard W. Keyes, commander of the 1st Infantry Brigade and a member of the museum council, by MSgt. Lorenzo Colon, first sergeant of the battery.

The addition of the 107 men of the field artillery unit increased the membership of the society, which was organized July 10, to 707. Maj. Gen. Ben Harrell, commanding general of The Infantry Center, was the first member.

The museum's only source of income is from membership fees, SFC James A. Pritchard, non-commissioned officer in charge of the museum, said.

The society will continue its campaign indefinitely to add new members, he added.

"We would like to have all Infantrymen on the post to join us," he said.

The museum is open Tuesdays and Thursdays from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. and from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m., except Mondays, on the other days of the week and holidays.

SFC David W. Chase, who for many years has maintained an interest in the research and discovery of historical objects of value to museums, is the Infantry Museum's curator.

Two Cooks, One Kitchen Works Fine

Two cooks in the same kitchen? It'll never work, Orville.

Yet two units operating at Lawson Army Aviation Command have proved it is possible.

Cooperation is the byword between the 62nd Aviation Company and the 202nd Transportation Company. Having flown and maintained aircraft together, they're now living and eating together, their cooks taking turns in the mess hall.

Harold G. Baskins, first sergeant of the 62nd, and John R. Bolen, his counterpart in the 202nd, put their heads together and decided it could be done. Heading the kitchen staff for the first six-month period is Sfc. John G. Cochran of the 62nd.

Motto in the combined mess hall is: "Don't complain too loudly about the chow. . .Next month you might be cooking it!"

Special Forces Hike Reports Made Clear

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Roswell L. Gilpatric, deputy secretary of defense, has explained the Defense Department's position on stories relating to the buildup of Special Forces units.

"The first matter," Gilpatric said, "is the report that came out that the Army had won approval for its increase in its Special Forces from the present level of around 5,300 to 15,000. That is not correct."

Gilpatric said the Army has been given approval to build up its Special Forces spaces over the next five years, with no approved increase in the overall strength of the Army, to about 6,650, less than half of this 15,000 figure.

At the same time DOD withheld approval of an Air Force request whereby its Air Commando units (the Air Forces Counter Insurgency Force) would have an increase in personnel from something under a thousand now to six or seven thousand.

The secretary said the Air Force also asked for authority to expand its end strength rather than absorb the increase as the Army proposes to do within its existing end strength.

"Both services have also put in requests for rather large buys of equipment, principally aircraft," Gilpatric continued. "On those we have held up approval until we are ready to take a position is the broader tactical air procurement areas following our consideration of the House study for the Army and the Disoway study for the Air Force."

He said DOD recognizes certain problems is basic roles and missions in the counter-insurgency force area that will require some evolution of tactical doctrines. "We believe," he went on, "that the Strike Command is the best place to develop a plan whereby we can deal with joint Army and Air Force phases of aviation.

"We will probably not make any major decisions in this area between the Army and the Air Force until we have given the Strike Command time to go into these tactical questions. Then we will decide how to divide up any additional procurement that may be needed of aircraft for this type of mission."

Doctor Call Is Sounded; May Draft

WASHINGTON (ANS)— The Department of Defense has indicated that an anticipated shortage of 1,000 general duty medical officers for fiscal year 1964 may necessitate drafting a number of such officers.

According to the Department requests for deferment of active duty from among applicants for the Armed Forces Physicians' Appointment Residency Consideration Program, commonly known as the Berry Plan, may necessitate such a draft call.

Of the 1,176 applications received through Aug. 31, 974 requested deferment for specialty training. Only 161 requested active duty immediately after internship, while 41 requested active duty one year after internship.

The Department said there were three possible ways to overcome this shortage: an increase in the number of interns volunteering for active duty immediately following internship; Berry Plan participants who are excess to the needs of the Armed Forces in their specialties may have to be used as general duty medical officers; and the use of the Doctor Draft.

He also has the Army Commendation Medal with one Oak Leaf Cluster and numerous other decorations.

Col. Duncan Of Liberia Visits Here

Col. William N. Duncan, commander of the 3rd Infantry Regiment of the Armed Forces of Liberia, is here to attend orientations and demonstrations by Infantry School personnel.

After a visit with Col. J. G. Cornett, chief of The Infantry School's Academic Staff, the visitor saw a demonstration of demolition techniques by Army engineers Wednesday afternoon.

Thursday Col. Duncan was briefed on the history, organization and mission of The Infantry Center and School. In the afternoon he saw a demonstration of paratrooper training by the school's Airborne-Air Mobility Department and was oriented on the activities of the Ground Mobility Department.

Today the Allied colonel will witness demonstrations of Ranger and counter-guerrilla activities, and will observe marksmanship groups fire for record with various Infantry weapons.

Copter Unit Is Lauded For Action

The 31st Transportation Company (light helicopter) displayed its unique capabilities in two unusual night flights from Memphis to Oxford, Miss. during recent federal action there.

Shortly before midnight on Sept. 30 the unit scrambled 16 choppers to fly some 160 passengers to the University of Mississippi campus. An extremely dark sky and high wind conditions made the total of 12,000 passenger - miles flown in the single lift, precarious.

Another scramble in the early hours of Oct. 1 resulted in a total of approximately 24,000 passenger miles for the unit.

"All pilots displayed a high degree of efficiency with esprit de corps as back up," commented Maj. Paul O. Bailey, commander of the unit. "Our hats are off to them for a job well done."

Two-Thirds Approved For Service

In 1961, as in previous years, approximately two-thirds of all American youths liable for military duty were qualified for service in the Armed Forces, according to data released by the Army Surgeon General's Office.

The study deals with both draftees and voluntary enlistees.

Proportionately more of the draftees qualified for military service last year than in previous years — 51 per cent as against 49 percent in the 1958-60 period.

Of the draftees not qualified for service, about half were turned down for medical reasons. The other half failed to pass the mental tests. About one per cent were rejected for administrative (primarily moral) reasons.

Only about seven percent of the applicants for enlistment could not qualify for military service.

The study was prepared by Dr. Bernard D. Karpinos of the Medical Statistics Division, directed by Eugene L. Hamilton.

Tobey, told the gathering that "The victory in tomorrow's battle will depend not so much upon weapons but on the spiritual strength of our soldiers.

"Our Army today," he continued, "must be prepared to fight in a new environment—anywhere is the world under any conditions. This has resulted in the need for a new breed of soldier — more resourceful and mature. The Army chaplain must be prepared to be custodian of the spiritual welfare of these soldiers.

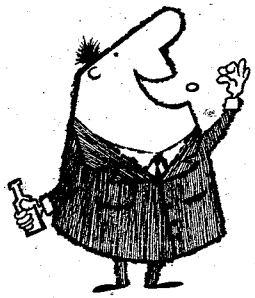
Beetle Just Not Worth PFC Stripe

FORT KNOX, Ky. (AFPS) —The word has come down from Headquarters — There will be no PFC stripe for that champion of all goldbricks, Pvt. Beetle Bailey.

"Headquarters" is Mort Walker whose popular comic strip enjoys one of the largest audiences in the world—second only to Chic Young's "Blondie," according to its distributor, King Features Syndicate.

Walker vetoed any boost in Beetle's status in response to a petition from Fort Knox soldiers who felt that 12 years at the bottom of the promotion ladder was too long for their favorite private. Walker says that he received a similar plea from men at Fort Carson, Colo., some years ago.



"I'm still not sure promoting Beetle would be in the best interests of the country," he explained. "In these days of high-flying rockets, atomic subs and other new developments, I believe it would give everyone a sense of security to feel that something was permanent.

"As I told the soldiers at Fort Carson, I couldn't imagine Beetle entering the leadership ranks in even a small way. In fact, I pretty bluntly told the men I did not think Beetle could lead a Cub Scout to a candy store . . . to give him a promotion would give aid and comfort to the enemy and produce chaos within our own ranks."

Move Begins Monday

Europe-Bound 38th is Packed

By 38th Infantry PIO

The 2nd Division's 38th Infantry will begin movement early Monday to Baumholder, Germany, as the first U. S. Army unit to participate in the Army's new overseas unit rotation plan, "Rotaplan."

The battle group, with over 1,500 men, will leave in 17 flights from Turner Air Force Base, Albany, Ga., with takeoff of the last flight planned for Wednesday evening. The 38th will move to Turner by bus.

The battle group will touch down at Rhein Main Air Force Base in Frankfurt, Germany, and complete the move to Baumholder by motor vehicle.

The 38th will be on temporary duty for six months with the 8th Infantry Division in Germany, and is replacing the 1st Battle Group, 26th Infantry. The 26th will move into Kelley Hill buildings on post vacated by the "Rock of the Marne" 38th.

The 38th will move to the U. S. on the same planes that are flying the 38th to Europe.

Some 55 advance party personnel of the 26th Infantry are presently at Fort Benning and have signed for property and received detailed information on operational missions the 26th can expect as a part of the 2nd Infantry Division. In addition, they have received details of the administrative and logistical situation here.

Now in Baumholder

Presently in Baumholder, the advance party of the 38th Infantry is finding out the same things in relation to Baumholder and the 8th Division.

Transfer of all property from the 38th to the 26th has been completed and final training this week has been keyed to orientations on what troops can expect on their new assignment in Germany.

The rotation plan, known as "Rotaplan," begins with this exchange of units between the U. S. and Europe. When fully implemented, however, the

23rd Infantry Troops Assemble And Move Into Ole Miss Campus

By 23rd Infantry PIO

After having arrived in the city of Oxford, Miss., in the early daylight hours of October 1, the 23rd Infantry and its attached elements from the 2nd Infantry Division, set up an administrative bivouac in the Holly Springs National Park area, between Oxford and New Albany, Miss.

The battle group departed Fort Benning by motor convoy during the night of Saturday, September 29. The entire battle group, with the exception of the personnel section and a minimum number of personnel left behind for guard duty and the maintaining of one- operational mess hall, made the journey to Mississippi.

First on Campus

First location for the battle group was on the campus of Ole Miss, in the rear of Hemingway Stadium, in what is called "Vaught's Valley". This site became occupied by members of the 101st Airborne 'Screaming Eagles' upon the 23rd's departure to the Holly Springs area.

The next location was off the main road in what appears to be a wooded area. However, the narrow dirt road leading into the area reveals corn and cotton fields presently ready for harvest. Formany, it was their first close

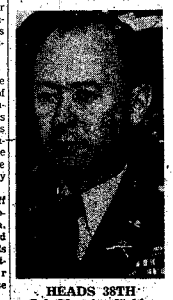
Colonel's Exploit Earns Kin Membership in '2nd'

By Colin Higgins

The 2nd Division now has two new members.

They are 16-year-old Janice and 13-year-old Cathy Coers who were made honorary members of the 2nd Infantry Division by Brig. Gen. Charles Billingslea, commanding general of the division, "in recognition of the honorable and distinguished service rendered to the 2nd Division by their father, Lt. Col. Burt N. Coers, during the Korean Conflict from 10 July 1950 to 25 March 1951."



Mrs. Coers, widow of the late colonel, was also present at the informal ceremony and accompanied the girls on a tour of the field command post.

Col. Coers was assigned from Japan to the 9th Infantry as regimental surgeon at the outbreak of the Korean hostilities. During the winter

8 Allied Nations Send Observers

A STRAC 2nd Infantry Division opened its doors Friday to 33 senior officers of eight Allied nations, giving them an opportunity to see a battle-ready U. S. Army Infantry Division.

Here on a tour of Army service schools, the Allied officers represented armies of Ethiopia, Indonesia, Jordan, Pakistan, Philippines, Saudi Arabia Thailand and Viet Nam.

Greeted at division headquarters by Col. John T. Corley, division commander, the visitors passed through offices of the commanding general, chief of staff, general staff and 2nd Division Brigade, as members of the "Indianhead" division explained the commands organization and operation.

Their tour of the 2nd Division included detailed presentations on the organization of an infantry division and a special briefing on the activities of the 2nd Division.

During the visit, Col. Corley presented a 2nd Division "Indianhead" patch to Maj. Gen. Thai Quang Hogan of Viet Nam to take back to the assistant division commander of Viet Nam's 2nd Division.

Following a hurried tour of the division's headquarters complex, the guests heard a presentation by Maj. Rutland D. Beard Jr., assistant G-3 officer, concerning the Infantry Division Organization, Mission, Equipment and Doctrine.

This was followed by a briefing on 2nd Infantry Division activities, delivered by Lt. Col. James T. Kolb, G-3 officer. Maj. Charles G. Gagliano of The Infantry School, presented material on the Infantry Division Army Training Program, Standing Operating Procedure and Tactical Operations Center.

Following a brief discussion, the Allied officers dined with their 2nd Divisino hosts at the Indianhead Lodge.

The visitors included five general officers. They were Maj. Gen. Aman Mikhael Andom of Ethiopia, Maj. Gen. Thai Quang Hogan of Vietnam, Brig. Gen. Kunso Utomo of Indonesia, Brigadier Desmond P. O'Reilly of Pakistan and Brig. Gen. Mai Hun So Xuan of Viet Nam.

Prior to visiting the 2nd Infantry Division, the officers were guests of Fort Benning's Infantry School.

Remaining until Saturday at Fort Benning, the group saw airborne and Ranger instruction and demonstrations underlining the cooperation between the infantry, artillery, engineers and Army aviation.

plan will provide for the rotation of three battle groups to Europe, with one rotating to the U. S. every two months. The battle group returning to the states will be replaced in Europe by a battle group in CONUS.

Movement of dependents of individuals assigned to "Rotaplan" units will not be authorized during the time their sponsors are overseas. However, dependents occupying government quarters at the time their sponsors receive orders or temporary duty overseas will be permitted to continue such occupancy, with privileges such as medical care continuing unabated.

Nearly 4,000 dependents in Europe with the 8th Infantry Division, will be returned under "Rotaplan" during the next eight months.

The purpose of "Rotaplan" is to improve the capability of the Army to respond rapidly to any situation throughout the world.

Still another reason for the initiatlag of "Rotaplan" is the government's interest in stemming the outflow of gold from the U. S. It is hoped that this plan, without reducing the combat capabilities of troops in Europe, will cut the flow of U. S. gold by $1,000 to $3,000 per soldier.

Leisure time for the battle group was spent in various ways. Full-length feature movies, obtained from 2nd Division Special Services Offices, offered hours of enjoyable relaxation. The perennial card-playing, touch football, and even horseshoe pitching were observed during off-duty hours.

Attached elements to the 23rd Infantry commanded by Col. Lucien F. Keller, included members of the 2nd Medical Battalion, 2nd Quartermaster Company, 2nd Aviation Company, 2nd Military Intelligence Detachment, 2nd Engineer Battalion, 122nd Signal Battalion, Company B, 9th Infantry, and Company A 13th Transportation Battalion.

of 1950, when the 9th Infantry withdrew and there was no means available for evacuating the wounded, he elected to remain behind. Captured by the North Koreans, he was forced on a "Death March" to a prison camp near the Yalu River.

There he continued to minister to the sick and wounded and to share his small rations. He died about two months later from the effects of his captivity.

In early 1955 Mrs. Coers accompanied by her two daughters, attended the dedication ceremony at Fort Sam Houston, Texas, where the 9th Infantry Headquarters building was named Coers Hall.

Later that same year Col. Coers was re-interred at Arlington National Cemetery, Arlington, Va., with full military honors. The Chief of Chaplains presided at the ceremony which Mrs. Coers and her daughters also attended.

Mrs. Coers makes her home in Oxford, Miss. Her husband was a graduate of the University of Mississippi before entering the University of Tennessee where he completed his medical studies.

TAC and CONARC Plan an Exchange of Officers

Plans for an exchange of officers between units of Tactical Air Command and United States Continental Army Command were announced Wednesday.

The exchange will result in 19 Air Liaison Officers and 16 Forward Air Controllers from TAC units being assigned to USCONARC Corps and Divisions and 13 Ground Liaison Officers from USCONARC units being assigned to TAC numbered Air Forces and units.

Coordinate Activities

Air Liaison Officers coordinate Forward Air Controller activities with associated Army units while FACs direct close air support for front line units from forward battle areas. Duties of USCONARC's Ground Liaison Officers are to advise air commanders on Army organization, operations, tactics and equipment; to assist air commanders in unit training and the planning of joint-training exercises; to perform the Ground Liaison Officer duties during joint training exercises to examine air-ground procedures such as briefing, debriefing, target designation and identification of friendly troops, recommending improvements where indicated.

The moves announced by the Virginia based commands will help promote better understanding of the concepts, doctrines and tactics of each service and will increase the effectiveness of joint operations.

Details of the plan, which have been under consideration for some time and recently approved, call for one ALO to be assigned permanently to Headquarters, 18th Airborne Corps, Fort Bragg, N.C., and one ALO to be assigned to Headquarters, Third Corps, Fort Hood, Texas. In addition, the 82nd Airborne Division, 101st Airborne Division, Fort Campbell, Ky., 1st Infantry Division, Fort Riley Kansas, 2nd Infantry Division, Fort Benning, Ga., 1st Armored Division, Fort Hood, Tex., 2nd Armored Division, Fort Hood, 4th Infantry Division, Fort Lewis, Wash., and 5th Infantry Division, Fort Carson, Colo., will each receive one ALO and two FACs.

On One Each Basis

Army GLOs will be assigned on a one each basis to 19th Air Force and 4th Tactical Fighter Wing, Seymour Johnson AFB, N.C.; 12th Air Force, Waco, Texas; 9th Air Force, Shaw AFB S.C.; 837th Air Division and 363d Tactical Reconnaissance Wing, Shaw AFB, 21st TFW, Homestead AFB, Florida; and 12th and 15th TFW, MacDill AFB, Florida; 345th TFW, Myrtle Beach AFB, S.C.; 355th and 479th TFW, George AFB, Calif.; 27th and 474th TFW, Cannon AFB, New Mexico; 401st TFW, England AFB La.; and 388th TFW, McConnell AFB, Kan.; 314th and 463d Troop Carrier Wings, Stewart AFB, Tenn.; 464th TOW, Pope AFB, N.C.; 4510th Combat Crew Training Wing, Luke AFB, Ariz.; and 4520th CCTW, Nellis AFB, Nevada; and 64th TCW, Dyess AFB Texas.

STRENGTH IN DEPTH

Last year, three divisions and 438 non-divisional combat and combat-support units were ordered to duty to round out or balance our expanding Army forces.

In each case, the officers assigned to work with the other service will advise their host commanders on capabilities of their own service units, assist in planning Joint Exercises, and actively participate in training conducted by the unit of assignment. Both groups of officers are authorized to deploy overseas with their assigned units on a temporary basis.

Air Force ALOs and FACs will remain current in their basic aircraft and will also be encouraged to fly in and become familiar with Army aircraft used by their host unit. USCONARC GLOs likewise are encouraged to fly in and become familiar with TAC planes used by their units of assignment.

Forward Air Controllers will be assigned to Army units for 18 months, with Air Liaison Officers being assigned for two years. USCONARC Ground Liaison Officers will be assigned to TAC units for either two years or three years dependent on unit and location.

In the joint announcement, it was pointed out that the new permanent assignment system will not do away with the present system of assigning ALOs and FACs to USCONARC units on a temporary basis for a given exercise, but rather it will supplement the present system by making additional Liaison and Controller personnel available to each division.

Another First for the 'Second to None'

Division Smashes Records in Physical Training

By Peter Tatistcheff

Long hours of physical training and constant field exercises have paid off for soldiers of the 2nd Infantry Division, according to scores achieved in the recently administered Physical Combat Proficiency Test, putting them well above all average Army scores both in the U.S. and abroad — Another first for the "Second to None" division.

The Physical Combat Proficiency Test combines five separate events designed to measure basic skills of crawling, climbing, dodging and jumping, throwing and running. The test is made up of the 40-yard low crawl, horizontal ladder, dodge run and jump, grenade throw and the one-mile run.

A total of 96.4 per cent of some 10,000 men tested in the 2nd Infantry Division achieved passing scores. Some 3 per cent of the command was excused for medical reasons and some 4 per cent were excluded for age (over 40).

This physical test is the Army's way of indicating general physical proficiency for combat. In order to pass, the soldier must achieve a score of at least 300 points.

The 40-yard crawl must be completed in 36 seconds with the body close to the ground. During this time, the person tested makes a round-trip on a 20 yard course, keeping his body close to the ground. It is a measure of a man's endurance, coordination and ability to crawl.

The horizontal ladder or monkey bar event measures the strength of the upper arms, back and shoulder girdle muscles and general body coordination in propelling oneself suspended in the air along 14 rungs of a ladder which is suspended overhead. To achieve a minimum passing score, the soldier must grasp and swing past 26 rungs in one minute.

The dodge run and jump event tests an individual's agility, coordination and his ability to sprint and change stride. It is designed to be completed in 26.5 seconds. This course contains four lanes consisting of four wooden obstacles per lane and a shallow 6-foot ditch across the center of all lanes. To receive points for this event, the soldier must run as fast as possible between the first two obstacles following directional arrows. Having jumped the first ditch, he runs between the last two obstacles, returns and makes another roundtrip. This is designed to evaluate ability to change directions rapidly while running and to jump a 6-foot ditch.

IN THE LOW CRAWL THE SOLDIER SLIDES WITH THE BODY CLOSE TO THE GROUND
This Event Must Be Completed in 36 Seconds, Going 40 Yards

The Grenade Throw

The grenade throw provides targets 90 feet from the throwing line. It tests a man's agility and coordination, and one's ability to throw for distance and accuracy. Coming to a kneeling position from the prone, the person tested throws a total of seven grenades into a bullseye target for a minimum qualification score of 15 points.

The one-mile run tests endurance and the development of the circulatory-respiratory system. To make a passing score, the mile must be completed within eight minutes and 30 seconds.

Heralded in 1960 as "a farewell to squat jumps and push-ups," the Physical Combat Proficiency Test was a project of the Infantry School's Ranger Department. The test is designed to be administered once at the beginning and once before the end of basic combat training to all male Army members 40 years old or less. Thereafter it is given annually.

The idea behind its conception was to design a combat-related test bearing direct correspondence to the physical activity demanded of soldiers in combat.

After studying tests of other services and even foreign armies, the five-event examination was developed at the Infantry School by Lt. Col. Jim Reilly and endorsed by the 1958 Infantry Conference.

Check testing and evaluation was accomplished under the supervision of James S. Dawson, civilian physical education specialist of the Ranger Department, who prepared necessary directives and manuals. Mr. Dawson was aided by Lt. Col. George R. Stevens III, Dr. Preston S. Abbott and Mrs. Doris A. Follestie, all of Fort Benning's Human Research Unit.

Directing Ranger Department

Director of the Ranger Department at that time was the 2nd Infantry Division's present Assistant Division Commander, Col. John T. Corley.

The result of Ranger Department efforts scored high among thousands of troops tested in 1960. Above all, enthusiasm greeted the test's competitive aspects, stimulation of unit esprit, lack of monotony and repetition, and low cost of facilities.

In the same way that realism in Army Field exercises grows in importance as a test of combat capability, the realistic aspects of this Physical Combat Proficiency Test provide a more accurate test of a soldier's combat - readiness.

For the 2nd Infantry Division, which in August 1961 began an intensive effort to reach combat-readiness, the superior results recorded in the Physical Combat Proficiency Test should not be surprising.

Designated members of the Army's elite Strategic Army Corps, 2nd Division soldiers have gone from exercise to exercise, special training to special training, taking every offered mission as an examination of their preparedness. They met the challenge of this physical test as they met field exercises and joint service maneuvers, giving them a reputation of unbeatable skill in all phases of Army activity.

Familiar with realism, test scores mirror the 2nd Infantry Division soldier's attraction to a more realistic physical proficiency test; knowing that he must bolster requirements set upon his unit, a full-ready instrument of the national will, designed to face any crisis at any time anywhere in the world, from a show of force to general war.

Mississippi National Guard Takes Riot Control Training

By Colin Higgins

An exhibition in riot control tactics was given by the 2nd Infantry Division's 2nd Military Police Detachment to members of the Mississippi National Guard recently in a small field not far from 2nd Division field encampment at Oxford, Miss.

The 1st Squadron, 108th Armored Cavalry of the Mississippi National Guard received training in riot control ever since their arrival but this was the first time they had seen the riot control formations executed by a well-trained squad.

Maj. Walter P. Kawalek, the assistant provost marshall, began by stressing the importance of the riot squad to assemble out of sight of the mob. He also stressed the importance of each individual executing the commands quickly and in a strict military manner.

The purpose of riot control is to disperse or move a mob in the direction the riot squad wishes and to accomplish this, the major explained, there are three basic formations — the skirmish line, the left or right echelon, and the wedge. The latter is most effective in splitting or penetrating a mob.

Each of these formations were executed by the MP riot squad. This squad, which was set up to give demonstrations to Reserve Officer Training Corps cadets during their summer training, is commanded by SFC John E. Vasconcelios.

The demonstration was given twice before to other units of the 108th and the MPs have also been helping individually in the training, as advisors and instructors.

9th's Co. C Promotes 4

By 9th Infantry PIO

Four men of Company C, 9th Infantry were promoted to ranks ranging from E-7 down to E-4 recently in a ceremony at the office of Lt. Shane N. Soldato, company commander.

Promoted to platoon sergeant (E-7) was Sgt. Leon McGee of the 3rd Platoon. Sgt. McGee came to Company C from The Infantry School, Ft. Benning, where he served with the machine gun committee, in September 1961.

He enlisted in the Army in October 1950 and is a native of Pulaski, Tennessee.

SSgt. Robert F. Bullock, a squad leader in the 1st Platoon, Company C, was promoted to his present rank. He came into the Army in 1947 and was awarded the Combat Infantryman's Badge for service in Korea. Prior to his arrival at the 9th Infantry in February, 1960, Sgt. Bullock served with the 1st Cavalry Division in Korea.

Also promoted to his present rank was Sgt. Rondal H. Riddle, leader of the recoilless rifle squad of the weapons platoon. Sgt. Riddle came to the 9th Infantry June 1961 and took Advanced Individual Training with Company C, his present unit, when it was still a training unit. He was promoted to E-6 after having been in the Army 18 months.

Spt Hector A. Pujol, a native of Cuba, was promoted to the rank of E-4 after 14 months in the Army. He enlisted in the Army July 17, 1961, in Miami, Fla., shortly after arriving in this country. He took Basic Combat Training with Battery B, 17th Artillery, while it was a training unit and has spent his entire Army service at Fort Benning.

69th Armor Firers Back From Qualification Firing

By 69th Armor PIO

The 69th Armor returned to Fort Benning last Wednesday after completing the battalion's annual firing at Fort Stewart, Ga.

The battalion fired Tables IV, V, VI, VII and VIII for tank crew qualifications. Table VIII is the culmination of all previous Tables, sort of a "tankers final exam": It is a tank crew proficiency course, day and night, where the entire crew is tested on its own ability to function as a unit.

EXPANSION

Last year 113,254 officers and men of the Army National Guard and Army Reserve helped make possible the Army's rapid expansion from 860,000 to over a million men.

Over 75 per cent of participating crews scored sharpshooter or better on Table VIII.

UP A STEP . . . Recently promoted to the rank of 1st lieutenant is Lt. Joseph C. Gross III, reconnaissance platoon leader with Combat Support Company, 87th Infantry.

High firing tank commanders for each company are: Headquarters Company, Sgt. Conrad C. Beshoner; Company A, SSgt. James R. Fisher; Company B, SSgt. George M. Bush; Company C, SSgt. Billy A. Dampier; Company D, SSgt. Sidney J. Green; Company E, SSgt. Billy J. Holcome. Each company and crew received a trophy for their outstanding performance.

For the battalion trophy for high crew each company was allowed to assemble the most proficient crew they could to compete in a final "shoot off." The battalion high was carried home by Sgt. Autry H. Reed and crew of Company A.

Division Unveils ROTA Service Center for Wives

TAPE FALLS AWAY, OPENING CENTER

MAPS IN CENTER PINPOINT LOCATIONS OF UNITS IN GERMANY
Mrs. Darden Shown Map by Capt. W. Wade, Sgt. Maj. Conway

Happy days are here again for wives of men of the 38th Infantry assigned overseas under the Army's new ROTAPLAN.

It was perhaps not exactly happy, but many of the burdens formerly confronting wives of men with their soldier-husbands sent away on training missions will be lifted.

Last Saturday, Mrs. Maurice G. Holden, wife of the 38th Infantry's commander, and Mrs. William Conway, wife of the 38th's Sergeant Major, snipped a pale blue satin ribbon and officially dedicated the ROTA Service Center. The center is designed to aid wives of officers and enlisted men in emergencies, to give them guidance for contacting the proper authorities on matters of legal and financial assistance and personal affairs, and, as a secondary benefit, to provide a place for get-together social functions for the wives.

Focal Point

The ROTA Service Center will serve as a "focal point" for those in need of help. Between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m., five and a half days a week and from noon on Saturdays, two volunteer workers will be on hand to take care of incoming calls or visitors in need.

"In an emergency any of the committee members could be called," said Mrs. Harold W. Darden, a 38th wife and committee member.

The ROTA Service Center is something new not only to the 2nd Division but to the Army as well. Since 1954, however, the Air Force has had such a facility on a world-wide basis. The 38th's ROTA Service Center was, in fact, planned after a study of Air Force centers.

Dedication ceremonies were opened with a prayer by 2nd Division Chaplain (Capt.) Frank E. Deese, who had aided the wives previously by visiting Maxwell Air Force Base in Montgomery, Ala., and reporting his studies there to the plans committee. The ceremony was hosted by Col. Maurice G. Holden, and division commander, Col. John T. Corley was keynote speaker at the affair.

The guest list also included Mrs. Ben Harrell, wife of The Infantry Center commanding general, Maj. Gen. Ben Harrell; Mrs. John Kelly, wife of the Infantry Center deputy commander; Mrs. James T. Kolb, president of the 2nd Division's Wives Club; Mrs. Hubert E. Strange, president of the Fort Benning Woman's Club and Mrs. Louis Kunzig, wife of the 2nd Division's chief of staff.

ROTA Service Center committees and members under the leadership of coordinators Mrs. Holden and Mrs. Conway include: emergency, Mrs. Sidney J. Roche, chairman, Mrs. R. J. Johnson and Mrs. Carolyn Phillips, assistants; office, Mrs. James R. Sessions, chairman, Mrs. Carl R. Poole, assistant; casualty, Mrs. Wayne H. Barnes, chairman, Mrs. Frank E. Deese assistant; publicity, Mrs. Lester Gibbs, chairman, Mrs. Darden, assistant. Mrs. John T. Corley, wife of the division commander is advisor to the Center.

Under ROTAPLAN, the 38th Infantry is the first stateside unit chosen to start off the new system. The men of the 38th will leave Fort Benning next week to spend six months in Germany. They are changing places with the 1st Battle Group, 26th Infantry, which will arrive at Benning shortly after the 38th lands in Germany.

Mrs. O'Donnell Heads Hostesses For Hq. Coffee

The ladies of the 2nd Division Headquarters held a coffee recently in the Normandy Room of the Main Officers' Open Mess.

The ladies of the G-4 section were hostesses with Mrs. E. T. O'Donnell acting as general chairman.

Mrs. J. T. Corley poured at a table decorated with an arrangement of purple mums in a purple vase. Mrs. P. J. Osborne and Mrs. L. L. Hansmann were in charge of the centerpiece.

Which Way's Best?

Dude and Rancher Clean Up the Trail

By Bob de Camara

"Don't drop that paper, suh, or I'll fill ya fulla 2nd Division Circular 210-3, Division Police Policy," dated 21 May 1962.

A wind blows chill through the flat streets and spaces of the Sand Hill Prairie Settlement. Sagebrush and tumbleweed float along the ground and slap at the yellow ranch-type barracks. Against the gray horizon a lone figure stands silhouetted, the contour of his body broken by something slung on his shoulder. It's early morning.

The figure stoops and retrieves something from the ground. He turns it over in his hand, looking hard at it, his brow a wrinkled study of concentration. Then slipping the treasure into the sack hung on his shoulder, he moves down the street, looking, searching. The letters on the bag get smaller as he moves away. The letters stand out plain for an instant as he crests a small hill, 122nd Signal Battalion litter bag, then disappear as he passes over out of sight.

Nostalgic words. Words that flood the mind with distant memories of bacon sputtering in crisp morning stillnesses, sergeants, the clean smell of oil on a gun barrel, reveille, a faded lithograph of a pretty girl in a gingham dress and bonnet smiling from a locker door, formations.

This is the world of western Sand Hill and the world of the hard-riding, hard - fighting Headquarters and Headquarters Company and the 122nd Signal Battalion, a world where lives are lived quickly and the iron hand of the frontier police detail keeps order, picking them up and putting them in, standing tall and stooping small. Always on the move with the litter bag, bending, bending, and bending until your back aches and the street glistens.

What do the Eastern dudes know about this kind of police work with their fancy jeeps and trailers. And their two men to a detail; the driver and the soldier walking ahead of his jeep, depositing the trash in a modern moving "waste-basket." This is something else entirely. Armor, artillery and at Kelley Hill, those three battle groups. You know which ones I mean. This is where "Main roads and approaches will be policed by a detail which is not to exceed two individuals, including the driver if used," and "areas immediately surrounding PX's, clubs, and other special activities will be policed daily only if required."

Only if required! You compare the two: the individual man alone against nature with his litter bag, the tradition, the glory. Or man and machine. You compare them.

Hqs. Supply Engineer Is Now SSgt.

In a brief ceremony held recently in the office of Lt. Col. William C. Carter Jr., 2nd Engineer Battalion commander, a sergeant received his promotion to staff sergeant E-6.

The sergeant was Michael J. Gaffney, assigned to Headquarters Company as supply sergeant. Sgt. Gaffney has been with the battalion since May 1956. Being one of the few old soldiers remaining with the battalion, he has worked as a postal clerk, combat construction specialist, armorer, company supply sergeant and divisions engineer supply sergeant.

Born in Maplewood, Mo., Sgt. Gaffney joined the service in April 1952, from Kansas City, Mo.

Returns for Second Tour

Joining the 2nd Engineer Battalion for a second tour of duty is Lt. Douglas N. Campbell.

Lt. Campbell was first assigned to the battalion on December 18, 1959, as a Platoon Leader with Company A. He remained with the unit until October 17, 1960 when he was assigned as an Engineer Platoon Leader with the 1st Infantry. In June 1961 the lieutenant left for Korea, where he served in various capacities as assistant division engineer, assistant S-3 (operations) officer and company commander.

Finally on October 1, 1962, Lt. Campbell was re-united with the 2nd Engineer Battalion. This unit was initially his first troop assignment. He is presently serving as company commander of Company E.

Former Member Is Chosen New 7th's Sergeant Major

By 7th Infantry PIO

Editor's Note: With this initial release, the Bayonet welcomes a new unit to the list of its contributors. Watch for more news from this unit as it comes to full strength to join the 2nd Infantry Division team. The 4th Battle Group, 7th Infantry, which in future issues of the Bayonet will be referred to simply as the 7th Infantry, has the distinction of being the most highly decorated infantry organization in the U. S. Army.

The newly activated 4th Battle Group, 7th Infantry, has received as its sergeant major, a former member of the 7th.

Coming from 2nd Division Trains, Sgt. Maj. Chester R. Westervelt comes to the 7th Infantry for the second time. His first tour was during 1950 and 1951 when the 7th Infantry participated in the Hungnam evacuation in Korea. He was a member of the 2nd Battalion, 7th Infantry.

Assigned to the 2nd Division in August 1961, he joined the 1st Infantry as operations and intelligence sergeant. He was subsequently promoted and reassigned to the 2nd Division Trains as sergeant major.

His first assignment with the 2nd Infantry Division was in 1949 when he assisted in the activation of the 3rd Battalion, 23rd Infantry, at Fort Lewis, Wash. From 1959 to 1961 he was a senior infantry instructor at The Citadel, Charleston, S. C. He has also been an instructor at the Louisiana State University, Baton Rouge, La., from 1951 to 1956.

The sergeant major entered the service in 1939 from Muskogee, Okla., and joined the 19th Infantry at Scofield Barracks, Hawaii. He was assigned to the unit during the bombing of Pearl Harbor on December 7, 1941, and remained with the 19th until 1945.

His many decorations include the Legion of Merit, The Combat Infantryman's Badge with Star, and the Army Commendation Medal.

Air Force Borrows a 'Chopper'

An Army helicopter, piloted by officers of the 2nd Division's 2nd Aviation Company, gave the Air Force a helping hand recently at Robins Air Force Base, Ga.

Officials at the Air Force base had a six-by-nine foot glass thermopane too large to fit the entrance to the building in which the glass was to be installed. Faced with the problem of lifting the 600-pound crated package to a control tower atop a six-story hanger, a helicopter proved to be the only answer.

With Special Wench

The "chopper," called from Lawson Army Air Field, where the 2nd Aviation Company is based, was equipped with a special wench to lift the crate to the control tower. The job was further complicated by steady nine-mile - an - hour winds.

Because of the wind, the helicopter was unable to take the glass straight up from the flight line to the tower. Instead it made a one-quarter mile half-circle to approach the roof.

All work stopped on the flight line and travelers on nearby Highway 427 watched breathlessly as the heavy crate hung suspended in mid-air from the wench, buffeted by wind and the backlash from the helicopter propellers.

For 10 minutes the pilot, Lt. R. L. Dase; co-pilot, Lt. Robert S. Messer; and crew chief, Sps Johnnie Hintoi, maneuvered the fragile cargo in a wide half-circle, delivering the thermopane in perfect shape despite rough handling and wind.

Replacement of a window in the tower became necessary recently when constant fogging and leaking cut down visibility of the 1926th Communications Squadron air traffic controllers who perform a vital service for pilots landing and taking off from Robins Air Force Base.

87th Keeps Top Men To Threaten Football Crown

By 87th Inf PIO

A look at the current sports program at the 87th Infantry reveals a comprehensive and tough schedule. Flag football is currently in the spotlight with try-outs being held this week.

Flag football was one of the Conqueror's strongest sports last year as they captured the division title with only one loss. About 50 men have turned out for the try outs, and coach Ronald Brooks has been putting the men through some very stiff training and drills.

Returning from last year's championship team are Ronald Guy, Edward Pearson, Isaac and Richard Scott, Fred Wilcox, Clarence Williams, Harry Tomlin, Frank Cain, George Cerutti and Most Valuable Player Major Lincoln. Coach Brooks commented that together with the new talent, the prospects of a good season are very likely.

Right now the 87th Infantry is in second place in the Commanding General's Sports Trophy race behind the 1st Infantry. However, after the volleyball points have been totaled, in which the 87th is still undefeated with a 9-0 record, the division race will be very close. Football is the last event of the cycle.

CG's Trophy Boils A Sports Fan Stew

By Bob de Camara

To take a look at the standings of 2nd Division teams for the Commanding General's trophy, the 1st Infantry has been busy with needle and thread sewing up the gold cup. But at this point only two-fifths of the summer - fall sports are exhausted, tennis and cross-country, and the 1st has no monopoly on league seamstresses.

In volleyball, which is, along with golf, sort of an on again off again thing, the Conquerors from the 87th have taken a long lead which they won't seem to give up—in spite of the cries of "Always First" from the second-place team. However, a volleyball first place and an undefeated record for the 87th closes the trophy race but keeps the 1st Infantry towering some 13 points high at the summit.

Up there where the air is cold and thin, the 1st Infantry is going to have to keep their ranks tightly closed, and why? Because on November 1st, "Big Daddy" flag football kicks off with a host of units eager to knock the 1st Infantry off their perch. Alpine hats and ice picks not restricted anymore to the 87th which conquers mountains and men, (or the 1st which has their hands full conquering the 87th), the Division this year is expected to field a horde of Class A powers.

And one entry new to the division — which can't compete for the CG's trophy but which might throw a little football fear around — is the 26th Infantry, a bunch of German imports as loveable as a Volkswagen. With a few Swiss maids to cheer them on in their mountain climbing and a little beginner's luck — as they're new to Georgia soil—the 26th just might do the mopping up here that they did overseas.

And then don't count out the rest. With a few breaks and some new blood, any one of these clubs might do the trick. Division Artillery, always strong; Division Trains or the 23rd Infantry, "with a little bit of luck;" Separate Battalions, they have four teams to choose from and the best from all four; the 9th Infantry, an able unit that right now is turning out a lot of excellent work for Fort Benning's Doughboys, the crystal-ball All-Service Champions.

Football can go any way. And so can the all-sports trophy.

9th Builds For Sports Conquests

By 9th Infantry PIO

SSgt. Louis Prolago, 9th Infantry athletics and recreation sergeant, announced recently that the 9th Infantry has begun a company level round robin flag football tournament.

Each of the seven 9th infantry companies is represented by a team of 15 men. The team which wins the most games will be awarded a trophy.

In the opening game between Company E and Company D, Company D was defeated 12-6. All games will be played at Weatherby Field.

The battle group's 18 best players will compose the 9th Infantry team to participate in the 2nd Division tournament which is scheduled to begin October 25.

Sgt. Prolago plans to have the 9th Infantry participating in all seasonal sports.

The athletic and recreation program has been divided into two parts, the winter-spring program (January-June) and the summer - fall program (July-December). The former consists of basketball, indoor volleyball, bowling, and softball while the latter consists of cross country, open golf, tennis, outdoor volleyball and flag football.

First Period TD Pushes Doughboys Past Fort Eustis

Quillen's Eight-Yard Run Marks Fort Benning's Only Touchdown

Undefeated Fort Benning upped its victory skein to 5 Saturday as the Doughboys made a four-point lead stand good for three quarters in carving out a 7-3 win over previously unbeaten Fort Eustis on the Virginians' home field.

Once again Fort Benning's rugged defense was almost invincible as the "Wheels" only points came on a 35-yard field goal early in the opening period.

The defeat was the 1961 National Service champions first after streaking to four straight victories.

Fort Eustis grabbed the lead at Dan Tossottie's field goal after a drive was stopped on he Doughboy 35-yard line.

Following the kickoff by the Wheels, the Doughboys marched 75 yards in 12 plays with Ron Quillen cracking in from the eight-yard line.

Sam Stellatella booted his 13th straight extra point of the season, and the scoreboard read 7-3.

From this point on the Doughboys seemed to be content with their slim lead.

"We should have scored another touchdown when Raymond Eddy scooted 55 yards to the Fort Eustis eight-yard line, but then we got penalized after moving the ball to the six," Coach Leaton C. Cofield said.

Throughout the remainder of the game both teams made several threats. The Wheels plowed to the Fort Benning 35 and the Doughboys once drove to the Fort Eustis 30-yard line before stalling.

Fort Benning was almost completely stifled in the second half, hardly able to get out of its own territory. Fort Eustis played inspired football but the Doughboy line kept the Wheels in check.

The victory avenged a loss handed to Fort Benning last year at Doughboy Stadium. Of the four defeats suffered by the Doughboys last year, three have been avenged this season. They are the Camp Lejeune (N. C.) Marines, Pensacola (Fla.) Naval Air Station and Fort Eustis.

Fort Benning will remain in Virginia for a week of drills in preparation for its Oct. 13 battle with Fort Lee, Va.

QUILLEN Scores Only TD

Fort Benning Determined To Make Lee 6th Victim

The Doughboys will journey to Fort Lee, Va., this weekend to meet the Travellers of Fort Lee in Williams Stadium. Coach Leaton C. Cofield's team will be seeking their sixth victory against no defeats.

On Oct. 20 they will return here to play the rough leatherneck Marines from Quantico, Va.

The Travellers handed the Doughboys a 33-2, defeat last year and was runners-up in the Missile Bowl Classic, defeated by Fort Eustis.

Head coach George Staley in his third year of piloting the Travellers, played his collegiate ball at Wake Forest.

Coach Staley has only seven returnees from last year but feels the players he gained play good ball. Joe House, from University of Corpus Christi, will be at quarterback against the undefeated Doughboys, while returnees Joe Kemp and Carl Plato will be in the halfbacks spots. John Mays, from University of Tennessee will be at fullback.

Coach Cofild will go with same starting line-up that has started the last five games.

Softball Teams Named for Fine Sportsmanship

Maj. Gen. Ben Harrell, commanding general of The Infantry Center, recently received a letter from the commanding general at Fort Jackson, S. C., congratulating Fort Benning on its recent showing in the Third Army Softball Tournament.

Maj. Gen. Charles S. D'Orsa extended his personal appreciation and congratulations for the fine performance of the Fort Benning softball teams.

He said, "It was a pleasure to have had these fine young Americans at Fort Jackson during the tournament."

Gen. D'Orsa stated, "We at Fort Jackson are all proud of the sportsmanship and spirited will to win exhibited by all competitors."

Volleyball Clinic Set

The Third Army Volleyball Coaching Clinic will be conducted here Oct. 25-27.

Subjects to be covered will be directed to the military volleyball program. The clinic will be conducted by Mr. Edmund Welch, editor, of the Official Volleyball Rules and Reference Guide.

A basketball coaching clinic, under the auspices of Third Army Headquarters, will be conducted at Fort Gordon, Ga., Nov. 15-17. This clinic will be conducted by John Hyder, head basketball coach of Georgia Tech.

Participation in the clinics by installation representatives should improve the caliber and technique of play of volleyball and basketball at post level. In view of the informal nature of the clinics and the limited capacity of facilities at Fort Benning and Fort Gordon, representation from each post will be restricted to not more than three individuals capable of absorbing the subject matter and imparting such information at a clinic level to interested personnel at home station.

OUTDOOR OUTLOOK

By PFC Stepehn O. Able

FISHING AROUND POST

The past weekend proved to be the best weekend of fishing on the post in the last couple of months.

Harps Pond yielded a large number of bass and catfish, including a six-pound lunker caught by SSgt. Edward Shands, Copany A, 69th Armor.

According to all rumors and stories, the bass were biting on everything from artificial bait to worms.

Bass of the two-pound class were being caught with some regularity, not only at Harps, but also on Weems and Kings. Kings Pond is now starting to produce some good strings of bass in addition to the catfish and bream it has been producing in the past.

HUNTING SEASON AROUND THE CORNER

Remember that deer, turkey and squirrel seasons begin on the post Nov. 1, a short three weeks away. All hunters who have not purchased their hunting licenses are urged to do so as soon as possible, to avoid the last minute rush.

Remember, if your gun has not been registered with the Provost Marshal, you can get it registered anytime between now and Nov. 1 and be ready to go.

While deer hunting, you must wear either red or yellow head gear. This is a safety factor and is designed to help you, the individual hunter.

While on the subject of safety, I would like to urge each and every hunter to observe all safety rules for hunting on the post, and I am sure when hunting season closes, we will have as many hunters to close the season as we had at the start.

Recently a list of the seasons and bag limits were published in this column. Part of the deer limit was omitted. Each hunter is entitled to two deer. One per day, two per season with at least four-inch antlers.

Shough's Sports Scope

By Pete Shough

To many of us the coming of fall marks the end of the long, hot Georgia summer and return of cool evenings, but to some 2500 post hunters it marks the season of one of their favorite past-times.

Hunting season, which opened officially in Georgia on Sept. 20 with dove season, is considered by many to be one of the most dangerous times of the year. All across the country, hundreds of people are killed by an unloaded gun, apathy toward safety precautions, or mistaken identity.

How many times have you read of a case where the individual at fault says, "I thought he was a deer," or "I thought my safety was on."

Fort Benning is no exception. Norman Evans, post safety director, reports that almost every year individuals tell of being shot at accidentally. In fact, last year one man was killed because a hunter fired at a moving bush.

"Firing at unidentified noises or movements is the major cause of post hunting accidents." Evans said. "Almost every year someone in the Third Army area is killed because a hunter fired at an unidentified sound."

Accidents can be prevented by observing some very simple safety rules that will cost nothing more than a little common sense. First, be sure you don't load your gun until you reach the area in which you intend to hunt. Second, be sure to wear one item of clothing that is a bright color. Third, hunt in pairs. Your buddy can save your life.

While hunting on post, be sure you can recognize a danger area and stay clear of it. There is always the possibility of duds exploding at any time.

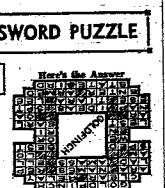
There is a set of rules that even the safest hunter often fails to observe. That is adhering to the local and state game bag limits.

These bag limits are established for your benefit, so there will be a continued supply of game for the coming season. You may think killing one more dove or deer than the law states does not hurt a thing, but; stop and think what you are doing.

If one-half of the hunters on this post alone would kill one dove more than the law permitted, that would amount to 1200 doves killed that officials feel cannot be spared.

Nov. 1 is the opening of several more popular seasons. They include deer, turkey, and squirrel.

Deer season, which continues through Jan. 5, is one of few seasons that designates the size and sex of game that may be shot. In Georgia, a hunter may shoot bucks with at least four-inch antlers.



Turkey season will limit hunters to one turkey per day. Squirrel season limits a hunter to carry six home.

Make this hunting season safe for all by using common sense and observing the bag limits.

RECAP WITH DUKE'S T-150 RUBBER

MORE PUNCH PER POUND . . . Lt. Gen. Frank S. Besson Jr., commanding general of the Army Material Command, accepts the first production model of the M-107 from T. B. Monson (R) of the Pacific Car and Foundry Co., Renton, Wash. The self-propelled 175mm "Long Tom" weighing 58,000 pounds, is the first in the Army's new generation of self-propelled artillery. This new gun's 30-foot barrel can hurl a shell accurately to ranges in excess of 20 miles. The vehicle chassis can also carry the M-110 eight-inch howitzer, or can be finished as an armored wrecker.

CONARC Will Study Reserve Call

Headquarters, United States Continental Army Command, is capitalizing on lessons learned from the partial mobilization of our Reserve forces last fall.

That's the word from headquarters of the command responsible for training the Army reserves in the continental U.S.

Gen. Herbert B. Powell, commanding general of CONARC, has directed a conference of corps commanding generals, selected staff officers, and deputy commanding generals of the Armies, all of whom administer reserve affairs throughout the U.S.

This conference to be held at Fort Monroe, Va., on Oct. 18-19 will be headed by Maj. Gen. George T. Duncan, assistant to Lt. Gen. Louis W. Truman, CONARC's deputy commanding general for Reserve Forces. The ability of our Reserve forces to be responsive to a partial or general mobilization will be the main topic of discussion.

Gen. Herbert B. Powell has announced the appointment of a board of 10 officers and a working committee composed of seven officers and one Department of the Army civilian employe to evaluate lessons learned and problem areas encountered during the callup of Army Reserve Forces in August, 1961.

Gen. Duncan has been appointed chairman of the board, and Col. Randolph C. Dickens, CONARC assistant deputy chief of staff for reserve Forces, has been named chairman of the working committee and assistant to the chairman of the board.

The board will evaluate reports submitted by the commanders of the six U.S. continental armies and the Military District of Washington. The board's recommendation will be submitted to the commanding general prior to Nov. 10 and it will be forwarded to Washington by Nov. 16, a headquarters spokesman said.

Basic purpose of the conference is to further insure expeditious implementation of standard missions and uniform procedures for all corps. At the same time it will expedite the streamlining of command and management of the corps as pertains to Reserve component matters, thus developing a Reserve system responsive to future requirements.

Top Honors Taken by Post Soldiers in Photo Contest

Seven Fort Benning soldiers won 14 prizes in the 1962 Third U. S. Army Photography Contest, according to word received from contest headquarters at Fort Bragg, N. C.

Topping the list of winners were MSgt. William G. Smith with three firsts, a second and a third place, and SSgt. Robert A. Martin with two firsts and a second.

Smith, a photographer for the Infantry Center Special Services Section, won first place in the animal and pet, sports and action, and experimental categories. All were in the black and white division.

His other finishes included second in the experimental category, color transparency division, and a third in the sports and action category, also a color transparency.

Martin, a broadcast specialist with the Radio and Television branch of the Infantry Center's Information Section, took firsts in the babies and children category in both divisions.

A member of Company C, 1st Battalion, Infantry Center Troop Command, his second place effort was a color transparency in the military life category.

Another double winner, PFC Anthony D. Valentino, a member of Company A, 1st Battalion, Infantry Center Troop Command, won second place in the portraits category, color division and third place in the military life category, color.

Other winners and their categories and division included two members of Company B, 1st Battle Group, 57th Infantry, 2nd Infantry Division, Sgt. Warner J. Johnson, third place, portraits, black and white, and Spc4 Sarmjot Payaknili, second place, animals and pets black and white.

PFC Rexford Van Norman Baker, a member of the Army Marksmanship Training Unit, third place, experimental color, and Spc Christopher C. Hayes, third place, scenic, black and white.

Hayes was with the 391st Engineer Battalion an Army Reserve unit from Greenville, S. C., on active duty at the time of his entry.

Each of the winning entries will go from Fort Bragg to the Military District of Washington, where they will be entered in the 10th All-Army contest to be held late in November.

Photographs surviving this contest will be submitted as Army representatives in the 1962 Interservice contest, hosted this year by the U. S. Navy. The Interservice is scheduled for Dec. 12.

Thirty-six entries from the post were submitted. There were seven categories in the two divisions.

Dental Health Series

Early Care Prevents Badly Formed Teeth

By Maj. Charles W. Dobson
Preventive Dentistry Officer

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The following is the 20th in a series of articles presented in the interests of better dental health.)

Do you know someone whose appearance is marred by crooked or protruding teeth? The real tragedy is that proper dental care throughout childhood can prevent or cure these problems as they arise.

When teeth are spaced ideally, the back teeth mesh together like cogs or gears. No tooth receives an undue amount of pressure. The front teeth are lined up regularly. The uppers slightly lap over the lowers.

Many Factors At Fault

Many factors may cause the teeth to be crooked or to bite together wrong. Heredity may cause the bones and teeth to be of incompatible size resulting in misplacement of teeth. Your dentist can recognize this as the permanent teeth are erupting and recommend an orthodontist who can guide the teeth into their proper position.

Another common cause of maloclusion (improperly positioned teeth) is the poor care of children's teeth. For example, the primary molars should be retained until the child is 10 or 11 years old. Many times these teeth are lost to decay much earlier than this. After the tooth is lost the surrounding teeth drift into the space. Then when the permanent tooth is ready to erupt there isn't room for it so it is forced off to one side.

To prevent this, children's teeth should be well cared for until they are lost naturally. If a tooth is lost prematurely, an appliance should be put into the space to hold it open.

Occasionally the primary teeth do not become loose when they should, and stay in place. This can prevent the eruption of the permanent tooth, or cause it to come into the wrong position. Extraction of primary teeth at just the right time will prevent this.

Some bad habits can push teeth and bone out of position. Prolonged thumbsucking or tongue thrusting (a habit of pushing the tongue against the upper front teeth when swallowing) and biting habits are examples.

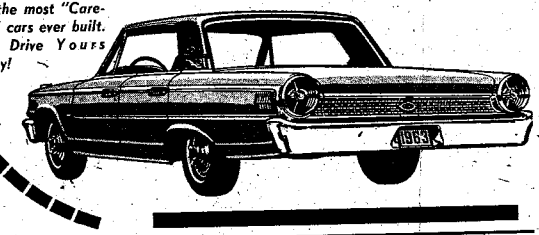
What are the results of malocclusion? Unsightly teeth, poor chewing efficiency, greater susceptibility to decay and gum disease and excessive biting pressure on some teeth which can cause them to die.

Treatment Takes Time

How does the orthodontist treat this? By putting appliances on made of bands and wires or plastic with pressure to guide the teeth into proper position.

How long does orthdontic treatment take? It can take years or more, depending on the severity of the condition.

At what age should treatment be started? This depends on the individual case. Space maintainers may be needed by children of four or five. Extensive treatment is usually done at junior high or high school age, although adults can often be successfully treated too.



Monthly Payment Plan

Is orthodontia expensive? Payments are usually made on a monthly basis throughout the treatment, and considering the lifetime benefits that result, the treatment is usually a wise economy.

Thanks to the wonders of modern dentistry, no person need have irregular, unattractive teeth. See your dentist regularly and ask him to recommend a specialist if you suspect that someone in your family needs orthodontia.

WOs, EMs Given College Education Rights

The warrant officer's and enlisted man's chances of earning a college degree while on active duty were enhanced by a recent change in regulations governing the degree completion or "Operation Bootstrap" program.

Officers previously could qualify for on-campus college attendance for completion of the last year of college work leading to the baccalaureate degree, or for one semester, if a graduate degree was sought.

Change four to AR 621-5 dated Sept. 12, extends the degree completion program to warrant officers and enlisted men on active duty. Prerequisites for warrant officers are the same as for officers.

In the case of enlisted men, the following requirements must be met:

Must be serving on active duty with a minimum of three years and no more than 15 years active federal military service for retirement purposes. Grades E-7, E-8 and E-9 may request waivers on service in excess of 15 years.

Applicants for a degree must have sufficient time to serve on current enlistment at the time schooling begins, to insure two years of obligated service after completion of schooling. Applicants for graduate degrees must have sufficient time to insure four years of obligated service after completion of schooling.

Must be assigned within the continental United States and not enroute or on assignment orders to an overseas command. Enlisted personnel with no overseas service or assigned within CONUS in excess of three years will be considered for the degree completion program only upon return from the next overseas assignment. Individuals occupying overseas positions may apply for schooling while overseas but will not be eligible to return for this schooling until completion of their overseas tour.

Must be able to obtain a degree within 12 calendar months in a subject area of functional importance to the Army. If a graduate degree candidate, be able to obtain the degree within one semester or two quarters.

Must agree to bear all expenses in connection with the schooling, including tuition, fees books and travel.

Priority will be given to personnel who require the least amount of time to complete degree requirements.

Further information may be obtained by contacting the Army Education Center, Building 2512, telephone 545-4111.

ACCIDENTS COST THAT MUCH . . . Charlie U. Daniel, assistant safety director of The Infantry Center, and Sp4 William R. Herren, safety section, The Student Brigade, point out to Col. Otto R. Koch Jr. (R), TSB commander, the cost of accidents for fiscal year 1963 will be $375,840. A chargeable injury costs $1,800 while a chargeable fatality costs $41,400. safety officials point out. TSB recently initiated a safety program to reduce the number of accidents within the command. (Photo by Sp5 Earl Johnson Jr.)

Gen. Taylor Backs Policy Sparing Cities

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, newly appointed chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, endorsed the so-called "no-cities" war strategy in a statement issued shortly after his wearing-in ceremony.

The "no-cities" plan aims at universal agreement to strike only military installations instead of heavily populated cities in the event of a nuclear war.

This endorsement reverses the opinions he held while serving as Army Chief of Staff.

Asked why, the general explained, "We knew so little about Soviet targets then. We have better intelligence now."

At the same ceremony President Kennedy presented a Second Oak Leaf cluster for the Distinguished Service Medal to Gen. Lyman L. Lemnitzer, outgoing chairman of the Joint Chiefs. The general has been named to succeed retiring Gen. Lauris V. Norstad as Supreme Allied Commander, Europe, on Nov. 1.

In another ceremony, Gen. Earle G. Wheeler took the oath as Army Chief of Staff from Secretary of the Army Cyrus R. Vance. He succeeds Gen. George H. Decker, who retired.

MEDAL OF HONOR HOLDER . . . Lt. Col. (Ret.) Raymond Harvey (L), a Medal of Honor holder in the Korean conflict, receives a statuette of an Infantryman from Brig. Gen. Royal Reynolds Jr., assistant commandant of The Infantry School, during the colonel's recent visit to Fort Benning. He received the Medal of Honor for heroic action near Taemi-Dong, Korea, March 9, 1951. Col. Harvey spoke at ceremonies opening Officer Candidate School Class 2 recently.

'Las Vegas of Orient' Is Set on Korean Hill

SEOUL, Korea (AFPS) — "It's utterly fantastic. There is nothing to match it in Asia. It's the biggest thing outside of Las Vegas."

Speaking was Al Ricketts, entertainment columnist for Pacific Stars and Stripes, following a visit to Walker Hill, Inc., a complex of hotels and recreational facilities scheduled to open in December on the banks of the Han River outside Seoul.

A private enterprise under supervision by the government of South Korea, the project is named for the late Lt. Gen. Walton H. Walker, commander of the U. S. Eighth Army in the early stage of the Korean War. Gen. Walker died in a jeep accident on Dec. 23, 1950.

The role of the U. S. Army in South Korea is also commemorated by the five hotels included in the complex. They are named, respectively, for Generals Douglas A. MacArthur, Matthew B. Ridgway, Maxwell D. Taylor, James A. Van Fleet and Lyman L. Lemnitzer.

Ricketts toured the project, which is situated on the site of former President Syngman Rhee's riverside retreat, with Steve Parker, film producer and husband of actress Shirley MacLaine. Parker, who is publicizing Walker Hill, says the Koreans are confident it will prove a big tourist attraction as well as serving U. S. troops in Korea.

He hopes to bring "some really big name" talents such as Frank Sinatra, Sammy Davis Jr. and Dean Martin for the Dec. 20 opening.

The $5.5 million project, in addition to its five hotels and a casino, includes indoor and outdoor swimming pools, a 500-seat night club, bowling alleys, riding stables, tennis courts, speedboats and restaurants, and waterskiing facilities on the Han. A golf course is also available nearby.

Dieters Are Surly Says Psychologist

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (AFPS) — Some men had enough to eat and some didn't. But although the hungry soldiers grew surly and uncooperative as the month wore on, they worked as efficiently as their better-fed buddies.

This was the result of a study made for the Army Quartermaster Corps on the Greenland Icecap in July, 1960, and reported by a California psychologist, Richard Seaton, to the American Psychological Assn. Meeting here.

He said the men undergoing the test received less than 2,400 calories a day as against the 4,800-calorie diet of other soldiers with whom they worked. The former group, tending toward clumsiness, complained often of minor ailments and fatigue, Seaton told the convention.

"Still," he continued, "they were as strong and physically able as soldier who received the 4,800 calories daily."

Seaton noted also that the study showed "Men deprived of a bountiful diet are considerably more enthusiastic when they eat."

Company of Month Award Presented

Headquarters Company, 1st Armored Rifle Battalion, 58th Infantry, has been chosen as company of the month in the 58th Infantry. First Lt. John J. Allen, commander of the company, was presented the award by Maj. John L. Kennedy Jr., 58th Infantry commander.

Company C, 66th Armor, commanded by 1st Lt. William D. McLarty was the recipient of the re-enlistment award with 75 per cent re-enlistments. This is the third time Company C has won the award in recent months.

Report Card

By Mary Beth Williams

Last Saturday, 107 Junior Army Daughters Association members and their guests held a fashion show at the Supper Club.

Beautiful fall and winter clothes were modeled by 16 girls. They were: Vivienne Johnson, Louise Williams, Leslie Tritch, Johnnie Hare, Pam Gates, JoAnn Morgan, Wanda Hodges, Liz Costigan, Sara Walters, Georganna Dillon, Cheryl Ely, Sandy Duke, Kathy O'Donnell, Cathy Ewart, Christy Elstad and Karen Price.

Sharon Estes was the pianist and Mrs. Slaughter was the commentator.

The Supper Club was decorated in a fall theme, highlighted by pom-poms in the colors of Pacelli, Baker, and Columbus High School.

Anita Braun and Leslie Tritch were in charge of the show.

Later on Saturday, rags and tatters were the mode at the home of Terri Setaro. The monthly social of the Sigma Delta Beta sorority was a "hobo" party. Members of the sorority, their guests, and dates, danced and played games in the Setaro's basement, which was appropriately decorated.

The first series of six-weeks tests is over. Thank goodness! Now all we have to do is sit around and wait for report cards . . and restrictions.

The Baker Thespian Society has a reputation for excellence not rivaled in the area. They are now making plans for their fall production, "The Male Animal." For your convenience, the club is selling season tickets this year.

Benningite Tony Saleme has a starring role in this production. Tony is drum major of the Baker band. "The Male Animal" will be presented Oct. 19 and 20.

Baker seniors will have their annual Career Day on Oct. 23. Speaking of Baker seniors, though they already have separate tables in the Co. lunchroom, they are seeking more senior privileges. It must be nice!

And now to make a feeble attempt to survey the football situation. Pacelli is still undefeated and hopeful of a season topping all expectations. Baker, after her victory over Jordan, is hoping for two more wins before she meets CHS.

Columbus meets the big Valdosta Wildcats tonight, but is looking forward to a game with Baker . . Oct. 26.

In case you'd like to know: Carlyle Park lost in his bid for the vice - presidency of the freshman class of the University of Western Kentucky. We can appreciate the honor being nominated, though.

I've been informed by Jack Mott and Steve Huppert that they are almost-ashamed to show their faces at Benning again. You see, though they got the room they wanted—Georgia students get into all home games free!

Revival Set Next Week

Dr. Robert E. Goodrich Jr., Texas Methodist minister, former director of SMU Mustang Band and nationally known radio and television personality, will conduct a revival at St. Luke Methodist Church next week.

St. Luke members at Fort Benning and in Columbus are extending invitations to individuals and groups to attend the service which will begin Sunday at 7:30 p.m.

Dr. Goodrich will preach daily at 10 a.m. and 7:30 p.m. on the theme of "Questions That Count." Portions of his sermons have been delivered over national radio and television programs.

The Texas Methodist leader inaugurated the annual "Pig-skin Review" on the SMU campus and has directed a band which toured the nation for 13 weeks under sponsorship of National Broadcasting Co.

rights. But frankly speaking, how many Americans remember this, How many Americans are actually grateful to Almighty God Who is the source of these national blessings?

There is a strong temptation to answer, "Comparatively few". Poorly attended chapel services on Sunday and other days of worship, seem to support this pessimistic answer. Are we so foolish as to think that we are always going to be prosperous and victorious just because we are Americans.

This might well be our fatal mistake. The citadel our rights as free Americans may not so much be overthrown by our enemies, as undermined by those Americans who neglect their God and the practices of their religious beliefs. It is only in constant and continuing communion with Our God that we are going to find the necessary light, strength, and courage to guide us in the days ahead.

"Unless the Lord build the house, they labor in vain who build it. Unless the Lord guard the city, he watches in vain who guards it."

Insurance

be valid, requires an insurable interest at the time of the loss. The latter are contracts of indemnity, i.e., the restitution of the value of the thing lost. A human life has no such money limit.

A policy will be declared void if this interest is lacking. This is why a total stranger cannot insure the life of a member of your family and then collect the proceeds should the event insured against comes to pass. The temptation of encouraging recovery through the medium of homicide is too great for the law to tolerate.

A man may insure his own life without restriction as to amount or beneficiary. He may designate and later change the beneficiary. The beneficiary may assign another beneficiary in his place if the new beneficiary has this insurable interest. To determine whether such an interest exists, the court will look to the facts to assure that no wagering exists.

Just what constitutes this "insurable interest"? A general rule is: An insurable interest exists when there is a much greater desire to see the insured alive than dead.

Family ties are superficially sufficient, although the opposite may be shown if proven that there was a feud or any animosity. Love and affection for the insured are certainly legitimate interests, particularly for wife, children and close friends.

A sound factual expectation of becoming a member of the family would serve as a basis. Another example would be the situation where a company will insure a key employee where loss of his life would mean suffering substantial economic loss to the company.

It may be seen that there is usually a sound historical and practical reason for the presence of each of our laws.

were often made at night. The victims were imprisoned and often executed or sentenced to slave labor before their families were informed of their trials.

An example of Soviet justice is the case of Nicholas Prychodko, a junior professor of the University of Kiev accused of "counterrevolutionary activities." Prychodko was arrested after midnight without being shown a warrant.

In prison he was charged with "counterrevolutionary activities," brutally beaten for refusing to make a false confession implicating his colleagues, detained for 21 months, and finally sentenced to a slave labor camp in Siberia.

The case illustrates the fact that in the Soviet Union the prisoner has no opportunity for release by a writ of habeas corpus, unlike prisoners in the United States and Great Britain.

FORT BENNING, GEORGIA, HOME OF U.S. ARMY INFANTRY CENTER

VOL. 21, NO. 6 — FRIDAY, OCTOBER 19, 1962 — FORT BENNING, GA. — 32 Pages — 5c

GEN. TRAPNELL (L) MAKES HIS LAST JUMP
Third Army Commander Plans To Retire In November

Duty Officer Need Increased for '63

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — The Army needs approximately 17,500 additional duty officers and 1,900 warrant officers during Fiscal year 1963.

To meet this requirement the Army plans to increase its supply of officers from existing sources and is planning new programs designed to attract potential officers.

All ROTC graduates scheduled for active duty in FY 63 will be called for periods of at least two years. The six-month-active-duty-for-training program will remain suspended throughout FY 63.

ROTC graduates may request delay of their active duty call to obtain a graduate degree but will be required to serve two years of active duty after completion of their studies.

The OCS program for qualified enlisted men will be expanded and a new recruiting program will allow qualified college graduates to enlist for OCS training.

Approximately 1,700 of the officer requirement must come from the Reserve and National Guard voluntary active duty program. Need for these officers exists in all branches of the army, especially the Infantry, Artillery, Engineers, Ordnance and the Adjutant General Corps.

The requirement for nurses and medical specialists exceeds 1,000 and WAC needs are in the neighborhood of 250.

Requirements for warrants in 25 different specialties will be filled from the enlisted ranks and by encouraging Reservists to apply for active duty. Some additional warrant officers will be obtained through a procurement plan allowing the appointment of qualified civilian applicants and applicants from the other services.

Wednesday Is Named UN Day Across Nation

Wednesday is United Nations Day and military and civilian personnel here will join over 120 Allied students from 31 countries in observance of the day President John F. Kennedy has set aside for national recognition of the organization.

Menus in troop mess halls will feature samples of international cuisine and a number of Allied officers are scheduled to present talks about their countries to high school and civic clubs in the Columbus, Ga. area.

The Allied officers are attending Infantry School courses under the Military Assistance Program.

The program was established following World War II. According to officials of the school's Allied Liaison Section, it has made a wide impact in the field of mutual security throughout the world.

Many graduates have been processed through the various courses offered at Fort Benning. Currently students are enrolled in associate career and career officer courses, and Infantry officer orientation, Ranger and airborne courses.

In a proclamation commemorating UN Day, President Kennedy urges "the citizens of this nation to observe Wednesday, Oct. 24, 1962, as United Nations Day by means of community programs which will demonstrate their faith in the United Nations and contribute to a better understanding of its aims, problems and accomplishments."

Third Army Chief Makes Last Jump

Lt. Gen. T. J. H. Trapnell, 60-year-old commanding general of the Third Army, made his 137th parachute jump at Fort Benning recently, possibly the last one before retirement in November.

With the three-star general on the jump, 15 years after he was graduated from The Infantry School's basic airborne course, was a planeload of airborne students making a second jump.

After graduating from the airborne school in 1947, he assumed command of the 505th Airborne Regiment of the 82nd Airborne Division. In 1951 he commanded the 187th Airborne Regimental Combat Team in Korea, and in 1955 he returned to the 82nd as commanding general.

Ceremonies to Signal Re-Opening of MOOM

A formal dinner dance at 7 p.m. Oct. 25 will signal the opening of the Main Officers Open Mess which has been partially closed since a fire March 15.

Maj. Gen. Ben Harrell, commanding general of The Infantry Center, will cut a ribbon in ceremonies preceding the dinner.

A special menu has been prepared for the opening.

Dance music will be furnished by George Doerner and his Orchestra.

The uniform will be formal to include tuxedo or dress uniform. A dark business suit will be permissible, however, officials said.

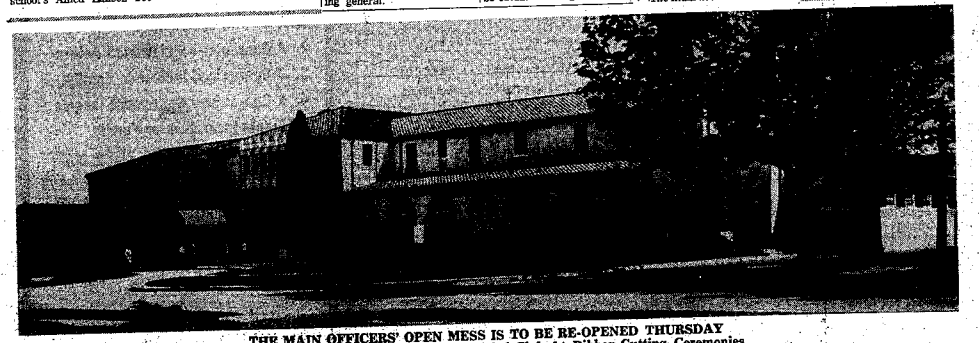
Reservations should be made by telephoning the office of the mess, 545-1420.

The main dining room has been completely remodeled and renamed the "Fountain Room." A large flowing fountain in the center of the room sets the theme for a Spanish motif in the decor. Lacy iron grillwork surrounds the room, accenting a landscape mural on the rear wall.

The dining room has been refurnished with wrought iron tables and chairs. Controlled lighting effects are achieved by adjustable fixtures.

The main ballroom has a new Terazzo floor and a new ceiling.

The kitchen and the hotel areas of the mess also have been refurnished.



Marines Here Sat. Night

Tomorrow night the ever tough Quantico Marines roll into town to see what they can do about stopping the Doughboy winning streak.

The Leathernecks are supporting a four and one record, with their only loss coming at the hands of Miami University (Ohio). Last week the Marines rolled over Fort Dix, 49-7.

Coach Cofield plans no major change in the Doughboy attack. The starting line-up will remain the same.

The game will be played under the lights at Doughboy Stadium, beginning at 8 p.m.

THE MAIN OFFICERS' OPEN MESS IS TO BE RE-OPENED THURSDAY
Maj. Gen. Ben Harrell Will Open Remodeled Club At Ribbon-Cutting Ceremonies

GW President To See Post's HumRRO Unit

Dr. Thomas H. Carroll, president of the George Washington University, will arrive here Monday to visit the Infantry Human Research Unit (HumRRO) and a series of conferences on the local unit's activities.

Accompanying the university head will be Maj. Gen. Richard J. Meyer, deputy chief of staff for individual training, Headquarters U.S. Continental Army Command, Fort Monroe, Va.; Maj. Gen. Chester W. Clark, director of Army research, Office of the Chief of Research and Development, Washington, D.C.; Dr. Benjamin D. Van Evera, dean for sponsored research of the George Washington University, and Dr. Meredith P. Crawford, director of the Human Resources Research Office of the university.

President Carroll's itinerary includes conferences with HumRRO officials on tasks being conducted by the unit.

Included will be Task Offtrain IV, on which Dr. T. Owen Jacobs of Columbus, Ga., task leader, will speak.

Task Offtrain is aimed at improving leadership training of junior Army officers. Results of the task to date have defined leader behaviors that differentiate effective platoon leaders, and have developed measures for evaluating the effects of leadership training on the appropriate behavior patterns of junior officers.

Theodore R. Powers, subleader of Task Rifleman V, will orient the university executive on the findings of his land navigation experiments conducted recently by the unit.

Task Rifleman has the mission of improving the proficiency of the light weapons Infantryman.

The visitors will fly to Fort Rucker, Ala., Oct. 23 to visit the Aviation Human Research Unit.

TSB ASSISTANT S-4 . . . CWO Harry S. Sorenson recently assumed duties as Assistant S-4 of the Student Brigade. He holds the same position as he did at his last assignment with the 2nd Quartermaster Group in Ludwigsburg, Germany.

Cubans May Join Army, Speak Spanish

WASHINGTON (AFPS)—The program permitting Cuban nationals now in the United States Navy has been expanded to include those who do not possess the previously required fluency in the English language.

When the plan to permit voluntary induction or enlistment of Cuban nationals was stated in August, 1961 a number were excluded because of the language difficulty.

Under the new plan these will be organized into Spanish speaking units for basic and advanced individual training. Upon completion, qualified personnel will be permitted to join regular units of the Army and Navy.

The original program was instituted to assist Cuban refugees to maintain themselves and to further develop their skills and abilities by service in the Armed Forces.

Vets Offered Pay for Their Disabilities

Korean veterans may apply for service - connected disability compensation at any time. There is no deadline for making application, Georgia Veterans Service Director Pete Wheeler has announced.

If the application is received by the Veterans Administration within one year from date of discharge, and a compensable rate of disability is established, payments may be backdated to the first day as a civilian. If more than a year has elapsed payment will become effective as of the date he applies.

Wheeler also announced that vocational rehabilitation training is available to Korean veterans with a service-connected disability. In order to meet the requirements for this training a veteran must need it to overcome a handicap.

While in training, and for two months after, he will be entitled to a monthly subsistence allowance in addition to the compensation payment.

Any veteran needing advice or assistance concerning these benefits or any other veteran benefits should contact the nearest office of the Georgia Department of Veterans Service.

Doctors, Dentists Will Be Captains

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Physicians selected for Army internships and recently graduated dentists will be called to active duty in the temporary grade of captain, according to the Army.

Effective July 1, 1963, the new policy will replace the current practice of advancing such officers to captain one year after graduation from medical or dental school.

Airborne Director Is Guest Speaker

Col. Michael Paulick director of The Infantry School's Airborne - Air Mobility Department here, was guest speaker at the graduation of the chemical officers' orientation course at Fort McClellan, Ala., recently.

Col. Paulick, a master parachutist, has been in his present position since August, 1961.

CAA Drive 'Zeroing In' On Post Goal

More than 70 per cent of all civilian and military personnel at Fort Benning have already made their contribution to the annual Community Activities Association Fund Drive, Col. Richard W. Keyes, fund drive chairman announced Wednesday.

"A canvass of department and committee chairmen reveals great confidence that we will meet the financial goal of the drive and achieve 100 per cent participation by all personnel," Col. Keyes continued.

The CAA Fund Drive chairman, who is commander of the 1st Infantry Brigade, said that "participation in this drive is gratifying to all the many workers concerned.

"The contributors," Col Keyes, said, "are showing a keen appreciation for the many worthwhile activities supported by the drive."

The drive will continue through Nov. 9, with each civilian and military personnel urged to contribute on a "fair share" basis. To date, contributions have attained 56 per cent of a projected estimate of donations on this basis, officials said.

The CAA approves fund requests for the operation of three principal Fort Benning community activities. They are the Visiting Nurses, Preventive Dental Health Programs and Youth Activities Club.

The CAA also makes a contribution to the Muscogee and Russell Counties United Givers Fund Drive. The UG fund supports 34 local and National health, welfare and character building agencies, including YMCA and USO clubs in Columbus, Ga. . . . which provide recreation and entertainment for servicemen.

Anti-Religion Drive Shows Red Position

In Russia, under the Soviet Constitution, citizens are guaranteed the right of religious worship.

Yes, that's what the document says. Just like our own Constitution.

Or is it? What's the real picture?

The real picture is that the Communist Party, which holds a steely grip on the Russian people, has launched an all-out campaign for "popularization of atheism." Pravda, the party newspaper, says the anti-religious offensive was urged by the presidium of the Central Council of Trade Unions which controls the mass of Soviet labor.

Press, radio and television are to go all-out in praise of atheism. Atheist reading rooms are to be established and atheist evening lecture sessions organized. Workers are to urge "believing" comrades to abandon their religious faith.

And how will they do this? "Popularization of atheism," says the Trade Unions Council, "must be based on the outstanding achievements of Soviet science and the materialistic point of view."

After all their years of rule, the Red bosses must feel mighty insecure about the appeal of godlessness to the masses. And this is more than speculation. When a group of American churchmen recently made a three-week visit to the Soviet Union, they reported that all the services they attended "were always full".

Said one of them: "The strongest impression I shall take away with me is the vitality of Russian church worship."

Indeed something for Khrushchev & Co. to think about.

Liberty and Communism

Individual Rights

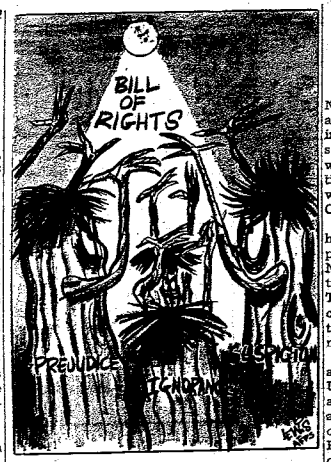
One of the earmarks of modern democracy is the right of individuals to oppose the government. This is based on the fundamental rights of freedom of speech and press. Another corollary right is the liberty of citizens to form political parties that oppose the government.

Modern democracy implies rule by the majority of the people under a constitutional system which, among other things, protects the rights of the minority. Under a two-party system, the party out of power is usually a minority party.

Notable recent exceptions to this rule have been the election of a Republican President and a Democratic Congress in the United States and the election of a Conservative majority to the British House of Commons in 1951 when the Labour Party polled a larger number of the popular votes.

A racial or national group may be a minority, but it is not a political minority unless organized into a separate political party.

All totalitarian regimes, including communism, forbid opposition to the government and outlaw all opposition political parties. The dictatorship is controlled by a single elite party. In the Soviet Union, this party is the Communist Party. In turn, the Communist Party is under rigid discipline, controlled at the top by the Party Presidium.



While the United States has followed the two party system throughout almost all of its political history, there has appeared a long succession of minor or third parties. The existence of these parties is protected by law.

In democracies, the minority party has an important function, in many respects as important as that of the party in power. This function is to examine and criticize the policies of the party in office. Its criticism must be responsible criticism; for, in case it causes the resignation of the party in office, it must be prepared to carry on the process of governing.

In 1903, when Lenin led the Bolshevik faction in the Russian Social Democratic Party, and when he was laying the foundations for the Communist state, he demanded political liberty, the right to form political parties and to elect members of a national legislature.

Lenin declared that political liberty included: (1) free election of a national legislature; (2) freedom of speech

Dental Health Series

Irritation Is Greatest Source of Pyorrhea

By Maj. Charles W. Dobsen
Preventative Dentistry Officer

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The following is the 21st in a series of articles presented in the interests of better dental health.)

Pyorrhea is not a disease of the teeth, and yet it causes the loss of more teeth after age thirty-five than dental decay. Pyorrhea is a disease of the supporting structures of the teeth; the gums, bone and soft tissue surrounding the teeth. It is not a disease of one single origin. It is caused by any condition that weakens the supporting structures. many times several factors may be present in the mouth, all adding together to produce pyorrhea.

The correct term for pyorrhea is periodontal disease. It's greatest single cause is irritation. This means the presence in the mouth of something which irritates the gums. Food debris retained at the gum margin allows bacteria to grow in the crevice where the gum tissue meets the teeth. The gums become red, swollen and tender, rather than pink and firm as they should be.

Mineral deposits from the saliva which collect on the teeth also irritate the gums. These deposits, called calculus or tarter, are soft at first, but if they are not removed, they harden into a rough irregular mass. This irritates the gums and give bacteria something to cling to.

Incorrect or overhanging fillings may contribute to this damage as well as improper use of the toothbrush.

If the gum irritation is allowed to continue the fibers connecting the teeth to the supporting bone are damaged. Finally the bone itself begins to erode. The end result of the process is the loosening of the teeth which may continue until they actually fall out.

Malocclusion or the incorrect alignment of the teeth is another important cause of periodontal disease. In the nor-

U.N., 17 Years Old, Best Hope for Peace

The word from Moscow is that Premier Nikita Khrushchev may do a repeat performance at the United Nations General Assembly in November. If so, that body is assured another session of electrifying drama with the whole world looking on. Cuba's President Osvaldo Dorticos Torrado has already set the tense mood with his attack on the U.S. condemnation of the Castro regime.

What does the passionate oratory and the histrionics of this momentous Assembly session prove? Foremost, certainly, that in the United Nations lies the only hope for a peaceful solution of differences between the great powers. To doubt this is to face a bleak future. Heads of state present diverse proposals for peace, but the heartening fact is that they are talking peace, not shunning discussion of it.

In the eyes of the free world, the eloquence and sincerity with which the President of the United States set forth his program is a reaffirmation of American leadership. Against it, any volume of ranting and reckless distortion of historical facts sounded harsh and hollow. Here was a reaffirmation of the hopes of men of good will everywhere; also an undemagogic statement of our own country's desire to help new and old nations in the development of their economic and social potentials.

The net effect of gross deceit in the floodlight of the great Assembly chamber, under the symbolic olive branch of peace, is to discredit its perpetrators and make them appear meanly treacherous. Beside it, the message of calm voices speaking a language of reason, calling for a continued war against want, disease and ignorance — and threatening no other kind of war — are heard with greater clarity.

Chaplain's Corner

'When Does Your Service Begin?'

By Chaplain (Capt.) Robert C. Harllee

One question that a Chaplain hears many times goes something like this, "What time is the service at your Chapel?" Sometimes one is asked, "When does your service begin?" There are times when the Chaplain should put this question to his questioners, "When does your service begin?" By this I mean to ask in all seriousness when you intend to begin living your religion in your everyday life.

Too many of us are satisfied merely with having our feelings stirred at times of public worship, and do not translate this into meaningful activity outside of the place of worship. The Bible says that we should be . . . "doers of the word, and not hearers only . . ." (James 1:22).

How can one become a "doer" and not merely a "hearer"? First of all, you must be sensitive to the needs of persons around you. You must realize that these needs cry out to you just as does the sound of your alarm clock early in the morning. Then they will not let you rest until you have done something about them.

Next, write down something specific that you will attempt to do. This may be a decision to join with others in some organized project such as overseas relief or missionary support. It might be your determination to be more friendly with your neighbor, or more loving to your children. Be specific. Then, make a start today in carrying out what you determined to do. This is the crucial point. It is like standing at the edge of the swimming pool or lakeside. You'll never swim until you have the courage to enter the water.

Remember that procrastination is the thief of time. Let your service begin today!

Growing Infantry Museum Celebrates Third Birthday

Officials Plan Special Open House Program Depicting The Infantry

Today, The Infantry Museum observes its third anniversary with a feeling of accomplishment. The museum is now contained in a four building complex and the catalogue files reflect over 4,000 collection items for display purposes.

Plans for a special "Open House" at the museum have been made according to SFC James A. Pritchard, non-commissioned officer in charge of the museum.

"The museum will open its doors at 10 a.m. and remain open until 8:30 p.m. today. We plan to have refreshments on hand. The program will include the showing of films which will depict historical events in the history of the Infantry. Actual combat films of World War I and II and the Korean War will be included," SFC Pritchard announced.

The staff of the Infantry Museum extend a cordial invitation to area military and civilian personnel to help celebrate the Infantry Museum's third birthday.

Rapid Expansion

On October 19, 1959, the Infantry Museum formally opened its doors to the public in its present location. At that time, the museum collections were contained in a one-building display hall. These included almost 700 display objects shown in a chronological sequence with the nucleus of each display relating to a major war period involving United States Army Infantry.

By the end of March, 1960, plans for the expansion into the adjoining building were formulated. During the months of July and August, the connecting hallway was constructed and the downstairs section of the second building installed with additional exhibits.

The Museum presents an historical evolution of the Infantry branch portrayed in a series of exhibits in the Hall of Infantry.

The portrayal involves six displays, the periods of the Revolutionary war, the War of 1812, the Mexican War through the Civil War, the Spanish-American War, World War I and II and the Korean conflict.

The Museum also contains Indian artcrafts and objects recovered from the ruins of Fort Mitchell, Ala., near Fort Benning. The articles were made by Indians in the era from 1813 to 1840. Fort Mitchell was erected in 1811 as a military garrison during the Seminole uprising. .

Village Discovery

During the summer of 1955, a dental officer was walking along the banks of the Ochille Creek looking for traces of Indian occupation. Not far from the southern border of the military reservation, he crossed one of the many old logging trails which snake through the thicket and piney forests.

In the eroded and washed out holes which gullied the ancient trail, he found what he was looking for; flint chips, pottery and occasional arrowheads. He later returned to the same place and dug a few holes and uncovered additional evidence of a large Indian camp.

The dentist had not been trained in the science of archeology and was not able to understand the full significance of his discovery. It was not until the summer of 1957 that a systematic field exploration of the site took place under the supervision of the University of Georgia.

At this time, SFC David W. Chase, curator of The Infantry Museum, was placed in direct supervision of the field expedition. Since work could be conducted only on off - duty hours, it took both July and August to excavate the 20-foot square section.

Wide Background

Sgt. Chase, whose archeological background included work in New England, New York State and Central and Northern Japan, the latter being conducted under the direction of Dr. Higuchi, an eminent Japanese archeologist, was appointed as field liaison to the laboratory of Archeology, University of Georgia, for all future work on the Fort Benning military reservation. He was subsequently granted a permit to conduct archeological excavations within the provisions of the Federal Law (Antiquities Act of 1907) by the National Park Service, Department of the Interior.

His work on the Ochille Creek site uncovered evidence of the little known Early Swift Creek Culture which flourished about the time of Christ.

He also found evidence there to indicate that the site had been occupied at least 4,000 years ago by wandering hunters of the Archaic Period. In all, four culture levels were uncovered.

Today, Sgt. Chase is still acting in his capacity of liaison to the University of Georgia for federal land archeology. He also is an informant to the Smithsonian Institute in Washington, D. C., whose archeologists are surveying and excavating some 400 historic and pre-historic sits between Columbus and Fort Gaines, Ga., which by the year 1963 will be covered by the backed up waters of the Walter F. George dam at Fort Gaines. Among the threatened sites in the river high pool areas, 25 are on the Fort Benning reservation.

Many Village Sites

Also within reservation boundaries are over 100 Indian camp and village sites, plus four early European type settler sites of the 1700-1800 period. From time to time, such sites are threatened by road building, range construction or backed up waters of fish ponds.

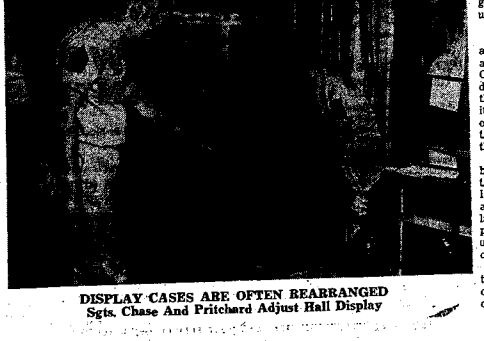
A recent example involved the uncovering of an extremely rich prehistoric Indian village site behind the Main Post quartermaster warehouse area. Nearly 14 deep refuse pits of the late Swift Creek Period were exposed by a ditching machine in the autumn of 1958. The material was excavated on the site by Infantry Museum personnel on weekends and holidays.

Subsequent studies of the thousands of pottery, stone and bone objects recovered revealed that a brisk trade association had existed between the local Indians and those of the Florida Gulf Coast nearly 500 years before the coming of the Europeans to this continent.

All post agencies whose activities extend into remote parts of the military reservation, such as the Fish and Game Association, Forestry Branch, and Roads and Grounds, Infantry Engineer Section, have been most cooperative in reporting evidence of Indian occupation", Sgt. Chase revealed.

Outside Help

"Many Fort Benning soldiers have also helped by bringing in pottery or stone implements found in many areas," he continued. "Such information aids in piecing together the vast picture of human activity in the Chattahoochee Valley over the past several thousands of years."



Sgt. Chase said further, "The Infantry Museum also cooperates closely with the Bradley Museum of arts and Crafts, Columbus, Ga., in this endeavor. Joseph Mahan, Jr., curator of the Indian Hall of the Bradley Museum, is kept continually posted regarding archeological activities at Fort Benning.

Report Card

By Mary Beth Williams

We're Army Brats! We're used to saying good-bye to dear friends. How many times have we moved into new surroundings in the middle of a school year?

It's our life. . .and we love it. Still it's often very hard to let old friends go without feeling that you're losing something very precious. Early next month Benningites will be bidding farewell to a girl who has been a very important part of the post—Leslie Ellen Tritsch.

Though she was born in Brooklyn, New York, Leslie has lived in Kansas, Kentucky, Texas, Louisiana, Japan, and "all over" Europe. Now Leslie, her parents, Captain and Mrs. Arthur Tritsch, her brother, Jeff, and baby sister Laurie are moving back to Germany.

Les has attended Columbus High for the past three years. At CHS, she was an active member of the Pep Club, the Footlighters, and the Junior Classical League.

In her sophomore year, Leslie received a certificate in recognition for her high scores on the National Educational Development Tests. In this year, too, Leslie had "The Portrait", a poem, and "The Cat", a short story written in collaboration with Brian Patterson, published in the "The Sampler", the CHS literary magazine.

The Junior Army Daughters of America have depended heavily on Leslie's capabilities as an organizer and decorator. She has been chairman of the last three JADA fashion shows — arranging every thing from models, to fittings, to background music, to table decorations.

A tall girl, with brown hair, striking features, an abundance of natural grace, and known for her taste in clothing, Les has often modeled in local fashion shows.

In order to do something more personal for the community, in addition to taking part in charity projects sponsored by post clubs, this active teen-ager took training to become a Gray Lady. During the summer, she devoted at least five hours a week to helping the nurses, and entertaining the patients at Martin Army Hospital.

A large part of Leslie's summer was spent "south of the border". She was in a group of CHS students who spent six weeks at the Technicological Institute of Mexico in Monterrey, learning the Spanish language and Mexican customs among the people of the country.

Yes, in the three years Leslie Tritsch has been at Fort Benning, she has made an outstanding record for herself and has been an excellent representative of the post.

When I talked to Leslie, I asked her if she would like to say something — anything — to you, her friends: her opinion of something or a farewell to Benning. Her reply is both of these things. . .and truly comes from her heart.

"I believe everyone should try their hardest to obtain individuality. God made no two personalities, just as no two fingerprints, exactly alike; and we should all have the gumption to stand up for this difference. In this day and age, when the free world is in dire need of strong leaders, teenagers should try to be less a carbon copy of everyone else and more the original of themselves."

New 'Plasma' Is Created For Army Radio Research

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Army scientists at the Signal Research and Development Laboratory, Fort Monmouth, N. J., have created a flashing column of "plasma" through which radio signals are beamed to explore a communications problem that may plague inter - planetary space ships of the future.

Plasma is a form of electrically charged matter that is difficult to produce in high concentration on earth, but makes up 99.9 per cent of the substance in the universe. The sun, stars, intergalactic clouds of hydrogen in space, and much of the earth's ionosphere are pure plasma.

This substance can distort and even blackout radio waves that would prevent communication between space travelers and civilization for extended periods.

Drs. Rudolf Buser and Paul M. Wolfert used an eight-foot-tall condenser bank that delivers a 10,000,000-ampere jolt of electricity that lasts for a millionth of a second to create their plasma.

The electrical surge, which for that instant is 100 times greater than the output of Boulder Dam, rips electrons from gas atoms in a thick-walled glass container.

A column of plasma three feet high and six inches wide appears with a bright flash of light.

As the plasma forms and disappears, a radio signal is aimed through it and received on the other side. When the plasma is very intense, it completely blocks the signal, reflecting it back like a mirror. In smaller concentrations, the plasma distorts the radio waves.

Lt. Szydio Is 100C Top Grad

A man makes his own choice as to what kind of leader he will be, 189 graduates of an Infantry officer orientation course at Fort Benning were told recently.

Speaking to a class of second lieutenants completing the nine - week Infantry School course was Lt. Gen. (Ret.) Reuben E. Jenkins.

Gen. Jenkins said, "When the going is rough leaders will fall into three groups — those who dare risk life and reputation to accomplish their mission, those who play it safe by participation intellectually only, and those who seem not to comprehend the significance of an emergency."

"From which of the three groups will Infantry leaders be chosen? That is up to you, young men," the general said. "The choice of which group you belong to is always yours."

The speaker was introduced by Maj. Gen. Ben Harrell, commandant of The Infantry School.

Gen. Jenkins presented a letter of academic achievement to the honor graduate of the class, 2nd Lt. Robert B. Szydlo, who graduated with an average of 96.4.

The general also presented a silver trophy to 2nd Lt. Norman D. Grahn, who scored highest in Expert Infantryman Badge tests administered to the class.

Diplomas were presented to the graduates by Gen. Harrell. Expert Infantryman Badge certificates were presented to 90 graduates by Brig. Gen. Royal Reynolds Jr., assistant commandant of the school.

A presentation of the Lebleau "I am the Infantry," preceded the graduation exercises.

Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Arthur J. Estes gave the invocation and pronounced the benediction.

Unit Gets First Aircraft

The first two aircraft of the newly formed 62nd Aviation Company were received here on Oct. 3. The company commander, Maj. John W. Lauterbach, and Lawson Army Aviation commander, Col. Curtis L. Hankins personally traveled to the DeHaviland factory at Toronto, Canada, to receive the two light transport CV-2B Caribou airplanes.

Plans are being made for the missions these Caribou will perform. Although having the ability to take off and land on amazingly short and unimproved runways, this aircraft will carry 32 passengers or up to 10,000 pounds of cargo.

The 62nd Aviation Company was activated on June 1. The first man to be recorded on the morning report was the present commander, Maj. John W. Lauterbach and the second man was the present First Sergeant, MSgt. Harold G. Baskins.

The company will be made up of 16 "Caribou" with 10 commissioned officers, 28 warrant officers, and 102 enlisted men. At the present, there are six commissioned officers, one warrant officer and 73 enlisted men with two caribou. 26th Replaces 38th on 'Rotaplan'

Blue Spaders And Families Now in '2nd'

Completing flights from Germany to the United States this week, the famed Blue Spaders of the 1st Battle Group, 26th Infantry moved into Fort Benning to join the combat-ready 2nd Infantry Division.

With the first plane leaving from Rhein Main Air Force Base, Frankfurt, Germany, at 9 a.m. central European time, a fleet of C-118 and C-135 aircraft carried the troops to three destinations.

Troops and Dependents

Both troops and dependents of the 26th Infantry were included in this move on the Army's unit rotation plan, "Rotaplan."

The 26th Infantry personnel came to Turner Air Force Base, Ga., Lawson Army Air Field, and Charleston, S. C. People arriving at Charleston were there to pick up their automobiles. C-135 jets carrying troops landed in Turner and completed their trip by commercial bus.

Coming to Fort Benning's Lawson Field Thursday on flight 1019, the command plane, were the battle group commander, Col. Arlin J. Kehe and his principle staff offscers.

The 26th's staff officers included, Maj. Leroy W. Smith, S-1 officer; Capt. Dewayne F. Flanigan, S-4 officer; Lt. Peter K. Keogh, S-2 officer; and CWO H. J. Sidenstriker, personnel officer.

He is scheduled to stay with the 9th through November 1, when he will become the guest of the 87th Infantry on Kelley Hill. His visit ends November 16.

Representing Israel is Maj. Y. Dori. His area of interest is the program of instruction for engineer troops. Arriving today, the Israeli major will remain with the division's 2nd Engineer Battalion until Tuesday.

Crowds Say Farewell at Kelley Hill; 'Rock of the Marne' Unit in Europe

BY PETER TATISTCHEFF

Two-year-old Kathy Burns' tears went unseen by many Sunday night at Kelley Hill, but underneath the bustle of departure, tense emotions of 38th Infantry families were a constant reminder to Europe-bound husbands and fathers that they would be missed.

Looking like a grand open-air railway station, the Kelley Hill area of the "Rock of the Marne" 38th Infantry was packed with combat-dressed soldiers, chartered buses, bulging duffle bags, suitcases, Army trucks, children, wives, and more children. A public address system hastily set up on the steps of 38th Infantry headquarters boomed departure speeches above the crowd.

Playing Marches

Across the street, the 2nd Division band, present for every memorable division event, again stirred spirits with patriotic march music.

Clutching a huge bouquet of yellow and white flowers, Col. Maurice C. Holden, 38th Infantry commander, took upon himself the burden of saying farewell to the 2nd Division and to everyone present, thanking everyone for coming to see them off.

Col. John T. Corley, division commander, expressed the division's pride in the 38th Infantry in saying "Bon Voyage" and adding that he had never seen such a well-prepared unit going for overseas duty.

Leaving by bus for Turner Air Force Base, Ga., and closely followed by trucks carrying their baggage, 38th Infantry troops boarded planes that same night and began the flight to Europe. Some were in Germany.

VISITING FROM CONARC . . . A recent visitor to 2nd Division Headquarters was Maj. Gen. Briard P. Johnson, chief of staff, U.S. Continental Army Command, here on a tour of Strategic Army Corps installations. He recently returned from three years in Thailand, where he was chief of the Joint U. S. Military Assistance Advisory Group.

Lt. Col. Taft Here to Head 702nd Ord.

The new commander of the 2nd Infantry Division's 702nd Ordnance Battalion is Lt. Col. Philip H. Taft.

Col. Taft comes to the 2nd Division after nearly three years duty in France as Chief, Storage Section, Headquarters, U. S. Army General Depot.

No Stranger

The colonel is no stranger to Fort Benning. In 1943, after graduating from Boston University, Boston, Mass., Colonel Taft entered the Army and attended the Officer Candidate School here. In 1951, he attended The Infantry School's Associate Infantry Company Officer Course and, in 1953, the Associate Infantry Officer Advanced Course.

In 1944 as a platoon leader with the 302nd Infantry, Col. Taft trained with that unit in the United States and then sailed with the 302nd for duty in the European Theater of Operations. During his World War II campaigns (Northern France, Rhineland, and Ardennes-Alsace), Col. Taft earned the Bronze Star Medal and the Purple Heart.

From March, 1947, to March, 1951, Col. Taft was not on active duty with the Army. Recalled to active duty in 1951, he served for a while in the sonnel officer. With them was the battle group's senior non-commissioned officer, Sgt. Maj. Benjamin C. Franklin.

This will not be the first tour of duty for the 26th Infantry at Fort Benning. The unit started its pre-World War II training in January, 1940, in the Harmony Church area and again participated in field exercises at Fort Benning in May, 1942, before moving overseas in August of the same year as part of the build-up for the invasion of North Africa.

Under "Rotaplan," the 26th Infantry changes places with the 38th Infantry here at Fort Benning.

Advance parties of both units were exchanged one month ago to pave the way for a successful changeover.

An 87th Infantry group, headed by Col. Ralph H. Hughett, and assisted by Capt. Robert G. Matheson, were busy assisting dependents of the newly arrived 26th Infantry this week.

Members of the 87th Infantry greeted incoming personnel, provided refreshments at informal orientations, assisted personnel in clearing customs and provided necessary transportation to temporary post housing. The "greeting committee" met 87 families at Charlston and 65 families at Fort Benning for a total of 615.

Col. Hughett met with Col. Kehe of the 26th Infantry yesterday at Lawson Field and welcomed him to the "Second to None."

Unit's History

The "Blue Spaders" of the 26th Infantry were organized February 22, 1901, at Fort McPherson, Ga., and were first assigned to duty in the Philippines against the island insurgents.

For the past three years, the officers and men of the 26th Infantry have been playing their part in the NATO team in Europe for the defense of free nations.

In 1942 the 26th was with the "Big Red One" First Division which stormed the shores of North Africa for Operation "Torch," the joint American-British invasion. Following the Allied conquest of North Africa and the defeat of the vaunted German Afrika Korps, the battle-hardened 26th engaged in the assault on Sicily and the destruction of German forces there.

After Sicily, the experienced regiment trained for the invasion of Normandy, and on D-Day landed in the vanguard of American troops. In this encounter, the regiment's 3rd Battalion, commanded by Lt. Col. John T. Corley, was honored as the Army's first unit to achieve its objective on schedule.

Swept to Germany

The 26th Infantry then swept through France into Belgium with the Allied advance. Fighting their way through Belgium, the 26th entered Germany as the Wiegried Line crumbled. With the unconditional surrender in October, 1944, of the Achen garrison to Col. Corley, the first major German city had fallen into Allied hands, taken by the 26th Infantry.

Although the German garrison had fought courageously, it had been beaten by a combined American force of half its size.

The victorious 26th rolled across Germany into Czechoslavakia and, with the complete collapse and total surrender of Germany in 1945, fired the last shot of the war, signaling an end to hostilities.

In peace the regiment was assigned to stand guard in Southern Germany for a period of eight years. The 26th Infantry then took part in Operation "Gyroscope," the large-scale rotation of troops between the U. S. and overseas commands.

Under "Rotaplan," the 26th Infantry joins the "Skilled-Tough - Ready - Around - the-Clock" 2nd Infantry Division after three years in Southern Germany with the 8th Infantry Division, 7th U. S. Army.

TEMPORARY HEADQUARTERS . . . The newly activated 4th Battle Group, 7th Infantry, is being housed temporarily in several buildings in the old marksmanship training area, Sand Hill, with headquarters in building 3222. The battle group will eventually be moved to the 4400 block area in Harmony Church.

One Payday Left in Drive For CAAF

Only one payday remains before scheduled completion of the 1963 Community Activities Association Fund Drive.

One major unit and seven headquarters staff sections in the 2nd Infantry Division have reached 100 per cent participation in the annual Community Activities Association Fund Drive, scheduled to end November 9.

The local campaign, including participation at Fort Benning and Georgia's Russell and Muscogee Counties, is designed to give assistance to such organizations as the YMCA and the USO.

Fair Goal

With the division's "fair share" goal set at $29,885, the first major subordinate unit to top its goal was the 38th Infantry. Headquarters sections reaching the 100 per cent mark were the Commanding General Section, Chief of Staff Section, G-1, G-2, G-4, Headquarters Commandant, and the Provost Marshall Section.

The division as a whole has collected 60 per cent of the overall goal as units continue to submit funds daily toward the 1963 Drive.

The 38th Infantry, only major unit to reach its goal, did so in two paydays, rushing to completion before their departure this week for Europe.

Soviet Weapons Are Eyecatchers at Arms Carnival

SOVIET 82 MILIMETER RECOILLESS GUN
Sgt. Deering and Crew Served Weapon

By George W. Anbis

Soviet weapons held the attention this week of 2nd Division soldiers treated to a veritable "carnival" of NATO and Soviet Arms.

The traveling display, an experimental project of the Foreign Technical Intelligence Service, was seen by over 2,500 division troops.

"The importance of technical intelligence to the individual soldier cannot be overemphasized or overpublicized."

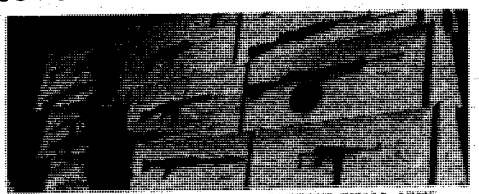
With this statement, Capt. Brookman E. Painter, Chief of the Foreign Technical Intelligence Service, Aberdeen Proving Grounds, Md., introduced his audience to the display of current NATO and Soviet small arms held this week at Knight Field.

Makarov to Missiles

The display consisted of weapons ranging from the Soviet 9-mm "Makarov" Pistol to authentic scale models of Soviet tanks and missiles. Sandwiched in between was a small arsenal of rifles, fmachine guns, hand and rifle grenades, mortars, howitzers and just about anything else that the soldier would be apt to encounter on a battlefield.

Here for one week, it was seen by 140 2nd Division soldiers at a time. Each orientation lasted approximately one hour. The display was divided into four stations with the troops spending 12 minutes at each station.

After Capt. Painter's seven minute introduction on the technical and practical aspects of technical intelligence, the men were split up into four groups in a County Fair setup.



At station number one, SFC Willard Webb of the Foreign Technical Intelligence Service and SFC Carmen A. Pachetti of the 528th Ordnance Detachment (Technical Intelligence) explained and pointed out the main points of the Soviet tanks and missiles on their scale models. The molels are made of plastic and, except for the size, authentic in every detail. Each model costs from $1,500 to $5,000 to produce.

Lt. Richard B. Loomis, also of the Foreign Technical Intelligence Service, carefully pointed out, at station two, that the 7.62mm cartridge M1943 used by the Soviets and the 7.62mm cartridge used by NATO were not inter-changeable, there being a difference in length. He then pointed out on a huge board, the current hand weapons which are being used by Soviet and NATO forces.

At station three, the soldiers were given the chance to actively participate in the display. Under the direction of WO James F. Cope, the men were allowed to disassemble and assemble the hand weapons used currently by the Soviet Infantry. This gave the men of the 2nd Division a chance to feel, handle and familiarize themselves with weapons of Communist powers.

At station four, Sgt. Stanley J. Deering explained the features of the 82mm recoiless gun and other Soviet field pieces.

For those who wanted more detailed information on the displays, an information booth was available to answer questions.

9th Infantry Begins Specialized Training

By 9th Infantry PIO

The 9th Infantry recently began a schedule of specialized and familiarization training in a variety of subjects pertinent to the duties of the well trained infantryman.

This schedule includes a review of all subjects that infantrymen receive in Advanced Individual Training and Basic Combat Training.

Besides specialized training in the operations and weapons common to his unit or section, each soldier will be familiarized with most of the weapons included in the battle group's arsenal, including some of the crew-served weapons normally operated by Combat Support Company.

This is to insure the 9th's ability to fight as an effective unit even after heavy casualties.

The new schedule is based on a 44-hour week, with ample time alloted to troop information classes, physical conditioning, and character guidance.

The purpose of the training is to develop in the soldier the ability to meet any combat duty situation and to accomplish his mission.

Other fields of specialized and familiarization training that Manchumen will undergo are ground navigation, military occupation specialty instruction, crew-served and individual weapon qualification, survey operations, land mine warfare, field fortifications, mortar fire direction, bayonet training, squad, section, and platoon tactics, and emergency medical care.

Distaff Profile

Born in the West Indies, She Reflects its Charm

BY LUCILE BEARD

The gentle, soft spoken manner of Mrs. William O. Morgan is apparent upon entering her home. Her charming hospitality in a background of calm elegance reflects her serenity.

Herself a painter, the first lady of the 7th Infantry, has a love and knowledge of art that is commuted through the fine oriental furnishings of her home.

Was British Subject

Joan Cheesman Morgan was born a British subject in Barbados, British West Indies, where she was reared and was graduated from St. Winfred's Girls' School In 1944, the then Major Morgan was executive officer of Antigua Base Command. Here he met Joan Cheesman, and they were married in July, 1945, at Antigua.

In March of 1947, Mrs. Morgan came to the United States for the first time, to Starkville, Mississippi, wher JoAnn, the older of Colonel and Mrs. Morgan's two daughters, was born, while Major Morgan was at Fort McClellan, Ala.

Surprisingly, the heat of Mississippi surpassed any temperature that Mrs. Morgan had known in the British West Indies, and the memory of that hot summer, without the trade winds that she was accustomed to, is still with her.

When JoAnn was two months old, Mrs. Morgan, joined her husband at Ft. Monroe, Va., where he had been assigned to Army Field Forces, now CONARC. At Fort Monroe, where daughter Kathy was born in 1949, the Morgans lived in converted barracks in an area that is now Wherry Housing.

Leaving Fort Monroe in 1949, Col. Morgan went to Japan, and Mrs. Morgan, with her two children, went to Mississippi, to wait for her naturalization papers. As soon as she was an American citizen, while she was awaiting her port call to join her husband, she took her children to the British West Indies to visit their grandparents. In June of 1950, when Mrs. Morgan was again in Mississippi, her port call arrived. Two days later, the fighting in Korea commenced; Colonel Morgan went to Korea, and not until April of 1952 did Mrs. Morgan join her husband. What was to have been a short wait for orders became a twenty-seven month separation. United again in Tokyo, the Morgan family thoroughly enjoyed their tour in Japan. Here Mrs. Morgan studied Japanese flower arrangement, shopped, and acquired many of her treasured possessions.

In January 1954, Col. Morgan was assigned to the Pentagon, and Mrs. Morgan established a home in Falls Church, Virginia, where they lived until 1958, when Col. Morgan attended the Armed Forces Staff College. Next came Mrs. Morgan's favorite tour, Hawaii. Here she became reacquainted with the beach, so like the beaches she had known as a child. Mrs. Morgan says she was born a beachcomber, and her family shares her love of the water.

Returning to the Mainland in 1961, the Morgans went to Carlisle, Pennsylvania, where Colonel Morgan attended the Army War College. After the school year there, for the first time in twelve years, Col. and Mrs. Morgan, JoAnn, and Kathy returned to the British West Indies for a vacation.

As the wife of the commander of the 7th Infantry, Mrs. Morgan hopes to make the arrival of new members of the battle group as pleasant and comfortable as possible, and both she and Col. Morgan have made definite plans to accomplish this. Her own enviable tranquility and poise will do much to fulfill this wish.

9th is Training a 15-Man Section To Handle Davy Crockett System

By 9th Infantry PIO

Combat Support Company, 9th Infantry, commanded by Capt. Robert S. Sage, is presently training a 15-man section to operate the Davy Crockett Weapons System, a system which employs smooth bore, recoilless weapons designed to give battle group level artillery support and capable of delivering either conventional or nuclear type projectiles.

SFC Unga Johnson, Davy Crockett section leader, and Sgt. Charles H. Joyner are presently conducting a series of classes in the operation of the new weapon at the 9th Infantry motor pool. The classes are being conducted inside one of the motor pool sheds, as most of the information concerning the Davy Crockett is still classified.

Three In Classes

Only three men besides the two instructors are presently involved in the classes; however, by next January, Combat Support Company will have trained a 15-man section capable of operating the new weapons system effectively.

Those presently engaged in the training are Sgt. Joseph Roberts, PFC John W. Browning, and PFC Douglas M. Hall.

SFC Johnson, Sgt. Joyner, and SSgt. Delmar Cox, platoon sergeant of Combat Support Company's Heavy mortor platoon, completed a four-week Davy Crockett Course at the United States Army Infantry School last April. Attending the course were representatives from Army units stationed throughout the United States and Europe.

SFC Johnson received additional training in Nevada.

When these three Combat Support Company men began the course last May, they were the only men in the battle group qualified to attend.

Qualifications take into consideration GT scores, security classification, and military occupation specialty.

A "secret" security clearance is required, and each man is required to have the military occupation specialty of 112.60 (heavy weapons infantryman).

Assigned Two

Although the 9th Infantry has been assigned only two of the new weapons for training purposes, at the end of the training period the unit will be supplied with three. Two of these will be the XM28 (lighter type) and the third will be an XM29 (heavy type).

Each weapon will be served by a five-man crew — a squad leader (an E-6 in the case of the heavy weapon and an E-5 in the case of the lighter one), a gunner (E-4), an assistant gunner (E-5), a loader and driver combined (E-4), and a computer (E-5).

The vehicles required to operate the Davy Crockett section are specially adapted. The heavy weapon is mounted on an M113 armored personnel carrier, and two lighter weapons are mounted on quarter-ton trucks.

In addition to these vehicles are two more quarter - ton trucks and two trailers.

Newest Unit Gets Capt. Of Brigade

By Brigade PIO

Capt. Cary D. Collier, 2nd Division Brigade S-2 (Intelligence) officer, has joined the newly activated 4th Battle Group, 7th Infantry, commanded by Col. William O. Morgan.

The 7th Infantry, which was activated recently at Fort Benning, is assigned as an added force of the 2nd Infantry Division.

Capt. Collier is a graduate of Oklahoma State University, class of 1955, and received his Reserve Officer Training Corps commission August 15, 1955 at Idabel, Okla. He entered active duty at Fort Benning August 20, 1955.

During the period 1955 through 1962, Capt. Collier attended the Basic Infantry Officer Course, Infantry Officer Career Course, the Mountain and Cold Weather Training Command School, at Camp Hale, Colo., and The Ranger School, Fort Benning.

He has had duty with the First Infantry Division, Fort Riley, Kan., from 1955 to 1957, and the First Cavalry Division, Korea, from 1957 to 1958.

Upon his return from Korea, he was assigned duties with the Colorado Intelligence until receiving orders to attend the Infantry Officer Career Course at Fort Benning in 1961. Since his graduation from the Career Course to date, he has been assigned to 2nd Division Brigade as the Assistant S-2 officer and later S-2 officer.

A Secret Ceremony

This Would Have Rocked Foundations

A change of command ceremony that would have rocked the foundations of U.S. Army protocol took place secretly at 2nd Division Trains last week.

Climbing aboard the 2nd Division Trains covered wagon, MSgt Furman M. Reynolds Jr. prepared to be dubbed the unit's new career counselor.

Second participant in the conspicuously unimpressive ceremony was MSgt. Herold T. Hall, who defied traditions by relinquishing his command without fanfare in the Trains Headquarters "back yard."

Shunning public acclaim, Sgt. Hall secretly handed stolen 2nd Division Trains Guidon to Sgt. Reynolds, new career counselor who himself boasts of 21 years service in the Army.

No stranger to this job, Sgt. Reynolds has been in recruiting and reenlistment work since 1946.

Sgt. Hall goes to a new position at Fort Benning.

Descending from the Division Trains covered wagon, Sgt. Hall, clutching Trains Guidon, said, in short, "I can be reached at the Division Trains Career Counselor's office, Telephone: 544-7336."

Clyde Zephyr's Goal Was to Clean Up That Trail

By Bob de Camara

For this story of Fort Benning's "Santa Fe" Trail and the bronzed men who fought the hardships on that trail, we're reaching way back into the hazy mists of Indianhead history, stretching a dusty boot back to the year 1962 and tales of the New Frontier.

As you stand at Outpost Four with the music from a honky - tonk piano spilling away at your back and the raucous laughter of cowhands lost in the weight of a desert night, the trail extends far, far ahead, to the horizon and by waste full of dunes and mesas, empfiness, indians and pumas sleek with hunger, the bones of brave men and cowards, courage and fear themselves. You can almost reach out and take it in your hand it hangs so heavy there. But this is not the story of a moonlight trail with soft golden palenesses washing the desert hills. Nor is it a story of cold nights huddled in a saddle blanket's warmth under a blue-black and diamond-sparkling veld. The lore of the trail is the story of Clyde Zephyr, a most peculiar man.

Custer Road

An arrow shot in a westerly direction from the out post would travel a path known as Custer Road, one of the trail's innumerable windings.

Clyde was one of those people who just drifted into Sand Hill Settlement one day. Nobody knew where he came from and nobody asked. He was just there. A large, leathery man with veined hands and a three-day white stubble of beard, Clyde had one ambition which crowded everything else out of his mind. He wanted to clean up the trail.

"Clean up the trail," people snorted. "Ha. Clean up the Santa Fe Trail," they laughed.

Clyde had obviously at one time or another had military training. It was written in his bearing and stamped in his manner. So that in spite of what everyone in the town had to say about the idea, he pushed on, and soon had formed a little group. The outfit was known as the 1st Frontier Police Detail Volunteers, and the only thing that held them together was their mutual desire to see the trail cleaned up and Clyde's oratory — which more than once kept the 1st Frontier "Elbows" from disbanding and the men going their separate ways.

Patiently Clyde drilled them every day, especially in the "quick retrieve," the "jeep and trailer two-man pick-up," and the "lightning paper snatch." With the old trailer and jeep bought with money they all made working at odd jobs, the volunteers kept at it day after day, practicing and rehearsing for that one day that they'd be ready.

Often the townspeople would gather in little knots, talking nervously among themselves, and then, with a group will propelling them, they'd surge towards the volunteers' camp. Here they'd reason with the determined men, even plead.

"Didja see that sign put up a few miles outside a town sez '24th, UTA 8,' outside a town right nexta Wetherby Field. That thar sign don't mean 2nd Battle Group, 9th Infantry, Unit Training Area 8, fella. That thar sign means Ute Tribe Annihilated 8 of the 2nd Battle Group, 9th Infantry." That's what that thar sign means, mistuh, and that un ain't all. Well, them signs is scattered all over. Further down the trail a piece that's one sez 9,' and then that's a spot they killed 10 of them fellers. Those Utes are a mighty rough tribe, 'Clyde."

It was hot the day they left. Hotter than usual. And no one was there to see them go or send them off.

Clyde led the march, proudly, walking alongside the jeep while the driver set the pace on the leader's long stride. Behind the jeep, the trailer, and behind the trailer, the volunteers.

Everyday they kept that same ritual. Up in the clear morning chill, a quick breakfast of beef and biscuits washed down with a little water, no sign of Indians, and the solemn procession. The March. The trailer was, at first, forlornly empty, its olive drab metal gleaming back at the sun. But daily as the men's shadows lengthened on the ribbed sand and on flattened canyon walls and high rock tables, and as the days passed, the trailer filled.

Clyde found the first litter, an empty pack of Lucky Strikes obviously dropped by some careless prospector. This was neatly stowed in the trailer. The ice had been broken, and the men were all confident now of the mountains of trash they'd find before trail's end.

The second hit of refuse found by the little band was due South of a huge range they had been skirting for several days and lay only four days ahead of the underpass where Clyde had found the cigarette pack. The men had been keeping cautiously to the left of some dwellings lining Custer Road. A certain Pvt. Sickly, examining the homes and forgetful for a moment of his mission, had yelped with surprise and pain as his foot struck something half-buried in the sands. What was then unearthed proved to be the greatest treasure of the trail. Hurriedly digging with the help of the other men, Sickly turned up a dozen empty beer cans that sparkled in the sun and threw light on the happy faces.

After that it was easy. Marching along with the cans clocking merrily in the trailer, Clyde and his men found all kinds of trash and soon the cans didn't rattle anymore. Bed springs, a half-burned letter; three wisdom teeth, corporal stripes, a jar with one five-day deodorant pad, these all went in along with the beer cans and the cigarette pack. Every imaginable kind of litter was found by those first volunteers on the trail.

And then one day the men knew it was all over and that they had succeeded. Ahead, standing at the roadside, was a sign announcing "Martin Army Hospital" and civilization again. They'd made it. They'd done what no one thought they could do. They'd cleaned up the trail.

Now it was up to the others who would follow them to keep it that way. The memory of those men still hangs on in that part of the country, and their tradition is the tradition of the police detail. No matter how many others clean up that trail now, Clyde and his men, they were the first.

Undefeated 87th Wipes Out 1st For V-Ball Crown

By Bob de Camara

Some classy teamwork between Warner Johnson and Ronald Guy, plus a little magic out of Chester Berroud's bag of tricks gave the 87th on Tuesday night two triumphs over the 1st Infantry and an undefeated volleyball season.

Fresh from a victory the night before over last place Division Trains, the 87th romped through the first game, 15-2, against a groggy 1st Infantry team, and then had to come from behind and battle the clock against a now-spirited 1st Infantry. The second game also fell to the Conquerors, 12-10, in overtime play.

Tuesday night's game was the last of the season for the blue and gold team, the victory giving the 87th a 12-4 clean season slate. The 1st Infantry now stands in second place with an 8-3 scoreboard. Only one game remains against the 23rd Infantry for the 1st to close out the season.

At 6:30 p.m. before a full-house parking lot crowd and a score or more spectators sniffered about the volleyball court on Kelley Hill, the 87th marched off against an "Always First" team that never got underway. The 87th broke the ice and went on to a 6-0 lead with Guy providing the fifth point on a hard-driving spike. The 1st Infantry appeared to come alive as the Conquerors stood six up and, after changing the serve a few times, managed to smash in for two points. This was their last threat, however, as the big gold team went on to win 15-2. The first game went to the 87th mostly through team effort and their opponents' mistakes.

From the first point in the second game, the 1st Infantry looked like a good well-knit club, wide awake and out for revenge. The blue-and-white spike by the 87th's sparkling number 24, Chester Berroud, brought the serve back to the 87th. Unable to capitalize on this one, the 87th had to wait until they were down five points before bringing in a tally.

Although the 1st led all the way during the regular game minutes, the 87th tightened up here and brought on 6-4, 7-4, 8-6 verdicts as the clock continued to wind out. With the 1st faltering and Guy and Johnson giving the 87th some good combination ball, the gold team looked like they might not give the 1st another chance that night.

The 87th's sixth point of the second game was captured through the backdoor with Berroud using his tricks the way the bigger men use size. Faking an "Always First" man out of position, number 24 tapped one that floated to the court for the softest point of the game. Keeping up a constant chatter ("Here you are Johnson." "I'm comin' with ya, daddy."), the 87th's two big men, 11 and 21, kept the game alive with inspired play.

In spite of all their efforts, it looked with one minute left in the eight minutes or 15 point game like the 87th was going to have to give the awakened 1st Infantry another chance in a third game. Down 10-6 with one minute to play before the 1st Infantry took the game on high points, the 87th ran the score to 10-9 with 20 seconds left and called a time out. Then, back in the ball game, the 87th pulled one out as the second hand swept across the finish mark and sent the tied game into overtime play.

After this the sweat was over for the Conquerors. With a little haggling, the 87th took an 11-10 lead and won as Berroud made the spike of the night and fashioned a 12-10 victory for his squad.

JOHNSON SPIKES ONE FOR THE 87TH INF. Just One Of The 87th's Stand-Out Players

touches the ground it is automatically dead. A fumbled ball cannot be retrieved by the team without the ball, the defensive team. Pile - ups of players after a loose ball are automatically done away with.

Unlike college and professional football, no goalposts are used in flag football. The point after touchdown is picked up by a pass or run play.

SPORT NEWS

Nov. 1st Begins Flag Ball Blasts

Flag football season for 2nd Division unit teams is scheduled to begin November 1.

Previously scheduled for October 25th, the timetable was set back a week to allow the units more time to organize. The schedule is now being set up in the Special Services office. Each team in the league will play every other team twice.

Although the league teams have not been officially entered as yet, probable contenders for this heavyweight autumn sport are the 1st Infantry, 23rd Infantry, 36th Infantry, Division Trains, and Separate Battalions.

The 7th Infantry, newly activated in September, will most likely not be strong enough to field a team. As yet it is also unknown when the 23rd Infantry will return from Mississippi and get back in the Indianhead sports picture.

Separate Battalion Play-offs

The Separate Battalions team is selected by a round-robin playoff of the separate battalions, consisting of the 69th Armored Bn., 122nd Signal Bn., the 7th Cavalry, and the 2nd Engineer Bn. Two players from each separate battalion, other than the winning battalion, also compete in the league games with the winning battalion.

Eighteen names may be submitted for each unit team. This includes the coach and manager who may also play. In past seasons, only 15 men had been allowed per team. The number was upped this year to enable the units to use a nine-man offensive squad and a nine-man defensive squad—two platoon football.

Flag football is a close cousin to touch football. A nine-man team is generally larger-sized, however, than the touch team. In flag football, instead of action being stopped by touching the ball carrier, the action is stopped when the pursuing player snatches a "flag" off the ball carrier who wears three, one on each side and one in back. All players wear flags. This year, rather than tucking colored cloth in players' belts for flags, Special Services has purchased a plastic flag which snaps onto a catch fastened to the belt. This is expected to eliminate players accidentally losing their flags.

Flag Football Rules

Contrary to college and professional football which utilizes 15 minute quarters and stops the clock for incompleted passes and other reasons, the flag football teams will play 10 minute quarters with a running clock will stop is for a time out, three of which are allowed each team every half (or every 20 minutes). Something peculiar to flag football here, however, is the rule that time outs may not be taken in the last two minutes of the half.

One rule adopted by the teams to cut down on possible injuries the "dead ball" rule. Anytime the football

Doughboys Roll Over Fort Lee; Meet Tough Marines Tomorrow

QB-End Combination Accounts for 7 TDs

The combined talents of two former Georgia Tech football players, quarterback Marvin Tibbetts and end Fred Murphy, are one big reason the Fort Benning Doughboys are undefeated in the 1962 season.

The impressive Army team, which will meet the Leathernecks Saturday has collected a total of 173 points in copping their first six encounters while ripping off 25 touchdowns.

Tibbetts and Murphy, both native Atlantans, have collected seven touchdowns for 42 points. Even more impressive is the fact that nine of Fort Benning TD's came in its opening tilt, a 61-0 shellacking of Gordon Military College in Georgia when Coach Leaton C. Cofield got everybody into the act with both Tibbetts and Murphy seeing limited action.

Against the Pensacola Navy Goshawks at Fort Benning Sept. 29 the two standouts accounted for 18 of the Doughboys total points in their 30-7 victory.

Tibbetts, a 6-foot, 200-pound quarterback, is a constant threat with the football in his hands. If he's not unlimbering his throwing arm tossing strikes all over the field he's running with the ball for needed yardage.

The signal caller is adept on the option play and his faking ability leaves little to be desired. Tibbetts also is a fine punter, booming one 70 yards against Pensacola.

A star in high school at Fulton High in Atlanta, Tibbetts entered Georgia Tech and played three years of varsity competition with the "Rambling Wrecks." Against Duke University in the 1959 Gator Bowl, he raced 57 yards for a touchdown.

While at Tech he married the former Janice Austin of Atlanta in August, 1960. Last March he was commissioned a second lieutenant and assigned to the 29th Infantry, 1st Infantry Brigade.

Tibbetts said, "I think we have a real good ball club here at Fort Benning this year and I think if we can get by Quantico and Fort Campbell we'll go all the way."

Tibbetts was referring to the Doughboys' tomorrow's clash with the marines from Quantico and the Dec. 1 battle with the "Screaming Eagles" of

Doughboy's Toughest Foe In Town Tomorrow Night

The Fort Benning Doughboys, fresh from a 33-0 routing of Fort Lee, Va., take on the perennially powerful Marines from Quantico, Va., at 8 p.m. tomorrow on Doughboy Field, in a football game that promises to be a titanic Interservice clash.

Riding a 11 game winning streak that extends from the sixth game of the 1961 season, the Doughboys will be out to gain their seventh win of the 1962 season.

Coach Leaton Cofield says the task won't be easy.

"The boys are rough," he stated pointing to a roster of their team, "and they're good. It's going to take our best effort of the season to beat them."

If past Quantico teams are any indication of their strength then Coach Cofield is speaking the truth.

Last year, before their winning streak began, the Marines dumped Fort Benning by the sad score of 33-2. Over the years the Leathernecks hold a 4-1 record against Doughboy teams.

This year the Marines have a 4-1 record, their only loss coming at the hands of Miami University of Ohio, recent conquerors of nationally ranked Purdue.

The score in that game was 16-0.

Their victories have been over Fort Dix, N. J., North Carolina A & T College, Fort Lee, and the always powerful Screaming Eagles from Fort Campbell, Ky.

In the only game between mutual opponents Quantico barely squeaked by Fort Lee, 13-7.

Cofield maintains this doesn't indicate anything since a rash of illness just before the game considerably weakened the Marines.

Quantico is led by quarterback Tom Singleton, who made an outstanding collegiate record while guiding the football fortunes of Yale. Herman Brauch, former Colgate University star, a 215 pound half-

Jeter's Long Aerials Propose New Threat

Utilizing a versatile ground and aerial attack and a virtually impenetrable defense, Fort Benning rolled over an outclassed Fort Lee, Va., eleven, 33-0, in a football contest at the Virginia post last Sunday.

In tuning up for the game next weekend against the Juantico Marines, the undefeated Doughboys waltzed to their sixth straight win by scoring 13 points in the first quarter, six in the second, and 14 in the final period.

The first period scores were accounted for via a pass from quarterback Marvin Tibbetts to end Fred Murphy, and a 20-yard run by halfback Brewster Hobby, former University of Oklahoma athlete. The pass from Tibbetts to Murphy, both former Georgia Tech stalwarts covered 28 yards, Wallace Johnson converted.

In the second stanza, second string quarterback Wayne Jeter, former Virginia State College quarterback, added to the woes of Fort Lee by hitting Murphy with a 20-yard scoring strike.

The half ended with the Doughboys leading 19-0.

After a scoreless third period, Jeter again demonstrated his mettle by launching a lofty 50-yard aerial strike to former Bethune Cookman end, Robert Dickerson, who scampered across for the score. Johnson, noted more for his crushing running from the halfback slot, booted his second extra point.

Halfback Bobby Towns, out of the University of Georgia, added the final touchdown, scampering 40 yards after taking the handoff on a double reverse. Guard Sam Sellatella, Penn State, booted the final point.

Returning home for their game against the Quantico Marines tomorrow, the Doughboys will be facing what coach Capt. Leaton Cofield terms "Their toughest game."

If last year's game is any indication then Cofield is probably right, for the Marines trounced the men from The Infantry Center, 32-2.

However, the 1962 Doughboys bear little resemblance to the 1962 edition, who at this point were laboring under a 2-4 record.

Little Miami University of Ohio seems to be the talk of the week with area football fans. The Ohio team were given headlines across the country when they dumped the high-riding Purdue Boilermakers.

The victory, the fifth of the year in as many games for the Redskins, suddenly pushed them into the nation's top twenty. This, however, is not the first time they have won national ranking. Back in 1955, the Ohio school was awarded the 16th position for a short time.

Purdue, who was ranked ninth last week, outgained the 'Skins in every department except the one that counted — the score.

Miami's football play has more of a local twist than many local fans realize. The Red and White is the only team that has managed to beat Quantico Marines, the Doughboys next opponent.

Army is appearing to be one of the nation's most unpredictable teams. The Black Knights of the Hudson knocked off third ranking Penn State last weekend but only the week before were soundly beaten by a mediocre Michigan team. Army took continued advantage of Penn State's errors, pouncing on the ball at every opportunity, made the Nittany Lions look completely outclassed.

The win gives the Cadets a three and one record for the year, which should be an indication that they are headed for a greatly improved season.

The Associated Press weekly football pool was severely altered for the fourth straight week. Texas was awarded the top spot, while Alabama's defensively minded Crimson Tide slid back to the number two ranking.

Alabama showed that they are definitely not to be counted out last Saturday as they moved to their fifth straight victory of the season and their 22nd game without a defeat.

By the way, Alabama will be seen on T.V. this Saturday when they bump heads with Tennessee.

Southern Cal hung on to the third slot by staying out of action.

'Longest Day' Is Star-Filled

Movie Producer Daryl F. Zanuck, when he decided to storm the beaches of Normandy, enjoyed one advantage Gen. Eisenhower didn't have 18 years ago — Zanuck had the Germans working for him.

He also had Fabian, Paul Anka, Tommy Sands and Sal Mineo — not to mention such old pros as John Wayne, Robert Mitchum, Robert Ryan, Henry Fonda, Richard Burton and a flock of other big names.

So, not unexpectedly, Zanuck's "The Longest Day," derived from Cornelius Ryan's book about the events of June 6, 1944, is a big war movie — perhaps the biggest ever made. It runs three hours; it blasts the eardrums with the most thunderous sound track ever whipped up, and it leaves the spectator shaken and numb. Undoubtedly Mr. Zanuck had just that audience reaction in mind.

As a semi-documentary war epic, "The Longest Day" is inevitably episodic, shuttling from intimate scenes of individuals in combat to command decisions (General Eisenhower is portrayed by Henry Grace, a non-pro) and vast panoramic scenes of the invading armies.

Result: few members of the star - crammed cast have a chance to establish themselves as distinct personalities. Wayne as Lt. Col. Ben Vandervoort of the 82d Abn. Div., Mitchum as Brig. Gen. Norman Cota, Burton as an RAF pilot and Curt Jurgens as a German general come on strongest with fine performances.

Military people surely will put this huge, exciting movie on their must-see list. As films about WW II, go, its in a class by itself.

Army Increases Reservist Quota

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — The Army has stepped up enlistment quotas for the six-month Army Reserve program in order to offset a loss of paid drill strength resulting from last year's extensions of active duty.

Overall enlistment quotas for September through December will be approximately 26,000. The quota for January through June of next year will be about 44,500.

The Army said the increased quotas are necessary to maintain Reserve paid drill strength at 300,000. Extensions of active duty during the Berlin crisis, by increasing active duty and shortening the Reserve obligation, brought about the loss.

RECEIVES AWARD . . . Foy M. Adams (R), career counselor of the 2nd Howitzer Battalion, 10th Artillery, 1st Infantry Brigade, considers September a bonus month for himself. During the month he won the 1st Infantry Brigade's Quarterly Reenlistment Plaque, completed 24 years service, celebrated a birthday, and completed 14 years of Recruiting and Career Counselor assignments. Sgt. Adams is pictured as he accepts the award from Lt. Col. Wallis E. McClain, 10th Artillery commander. In the same ceremony Sgt. Adams was sworn in for three more years.

TOP CAREER COUNSELOR . . . SFC Lloyd R. Cornwell (R) career counselor for the 151st Engineer Group, is congratulated by Brig. Gen. John E. Kelly (C), deputy commanding general of The Infantry Center, for being TIC's best in obtaining first term re-enlistments on a command level. Col. Mahlon E. Gates, commander of the 151st, holds the plaque his unit received for its highest retention in the first term personnel category during the fourth quarter, fiscal year 1962.

Civilian Pay Raise Official This Sunday

Approximately 1,350 civilian employees here will receive a raise in salary, effective Oct. 21, as a result of a bill signed by President John F. Kennedy recently.

The pay raise will effect all post employees who are subject to the Classification Act, usually referred to as "graded" employees.

The raise will be applied in two phases, according to William A Buzbee, chief of the Position and Pay Management Branch, Civilian Personnel Section, The U. S. Army Infantry Center.

The first phase will become effective with the pay period beginning Oct. 21. The second becomes effective Jan. 1, 1964.

The combined phases of the pay raise will amount to an average increase of 9.6 per cent, Buzbee said.

The pay bill includes a provision for an annual survey of government positions under the direction of the President. The results of the survey and the President's recommendations will be submitted to Congress for pay adjustments.

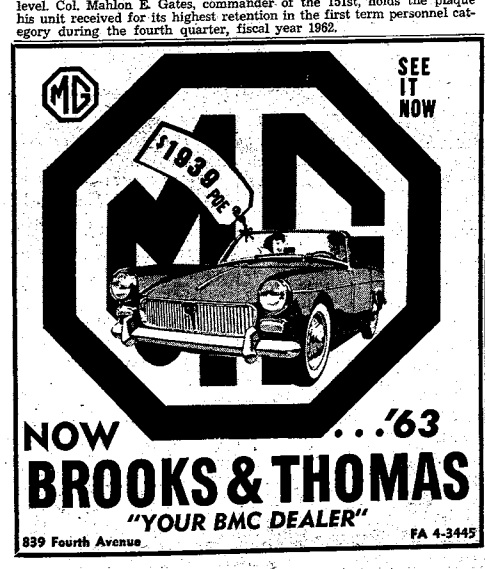
HORSEPOWER

Used car dealer in Greenville, S.C., lost his driver's license for speeding offenses and bought a horse and buggy. He explained that now all they can get him for is blocking traffic.

INTELLIGENCE NCO . . . MSgt. John C. Koon recently assumed the duties of Intelligence NCO, S-2, The Student Brigade. He will replace SFC Edward G. Bunn who is retiring. Sgt. Koon's assignment before coming here was Operations Sergeant for the Training Committee of the Special Subjects Department of The Infantry School.

THE ROCK

The 10th Artillery acquired its nickname "The Rock's Support" for outstanding battlefield performances in support of the 3rd Infantry "Rock of the Marne" Division during World War I.



'New Home' Established For Officers

WASHINGTON (ANS) — The Officer Personnel Directorate (OPD) has been established in Washington as a new home base for developing the careers of all Army officers and warrant officers except Chaplain, Judge Advocate General and Army Medical Service.

Within OPD, all officers below the grade of colonel have been placed in three major groupings — the Combined Arms Division, the Combat Support Division and the Special Support Division. The fourth grouping, called Colonels Division, will have the responsibility for the career management and assignment of all colonels regardless of branch.

OPD is a major element of the Officer of Personnel Operations (OPO) established as the principal operating staff agency of the Army's military personnel system.

Direct Dial Radio Unit Developed

WASHINGTON (AFPS) —A portable communications unit, which permits telephone-type direct dialing radio service, was shown publicly for the first time at the recent Association of the United States Army annual meeting in Washington.

The light-weight unit, slightly heavier than a desk telephone and smaller than a cigar box, is carried in a chest harness and permits finger-tip operation with all controls in full view of the operator. It is powered by a two and one-half pound battery carried on the hip.

Called RACEP (Random Access and Correlation for Extended Performance) manpack, the system was developed to provide a highly mobile, easy-to-operate, dependable communications unit for guerrilla-type forces.

The new unit has a transmission range of two miles and can receive ground-to-ground signals over distances in excess of 15 miles from a RACEP vehicle unit. It will bring in air-to-ground signals from even greater distances.

The system will accommodate scores of simultaneous conversations and provide service on a single network for as many as 200 users.

Col. Nett to Attend Medal Of Honor Society Meeting

One of three Medal of Honor recipients assigned to Fort Benning will attend the annual convention of the Medal of Honor Society in Detroit Oct. 25-27.

He is Lt. Col. Robert B. Nett, chairman of the Platoon Tactics Committee of The Infantry School.

The other Medal of Honor holders on post are Maj. Edward E. Schowalter Jr., an instructor on the Leadership Committee of the school's Special Subjects Department, and Capt. Ola L. Mize, who will graduate Oct. 18 from an Infantry associate officer career course at The Infantry School.

The convention will feature the 100th anniversary of the Medal of Honor, as proclaimed in July by President John F. Kennedy.

The President set aside July 12 through March 25, 1963, as Medal of Honor Centennial. The dates commemorate the establishment of the award by Congress July 12, 1862, and the first presentation of the medal March 25, 1863.

In the past century the Army has awarded the Medal of Honor to 2,185 persons.

Col. Nett received the Medal of Honor for action Dec. 14, 1944, near Cognon, Leyte, Philippine Islands.

From entrenchments around a three-story concrete building, an enemy reinforced battalion had held up the American advance for two days, according to reports.

Col. Nett, then a first lieutenant, spearheaded an assault using Company F, 30th Infantry, 77th Infantry Division, which he commanded, another Infantry company and armored vehicles, they continued.

Twice he was seriously wounded, but continued to lead the assault, unwilling to retire until the capture of the objective was assured, the reports added.

After incurring a third serious wound in the final assault, "he calmly made all arrangements for the resumption of the advance, turned over his command to another officer, and then walked unaided to the rear for medical treatment," according to the citation.

Col. Nett entered the Army as an enlisted man more than 21 years ago.

He attended Officer Candidate School at Fort Benning, graduating as a second lieutenant Dec. 28, 1942.

In addition to the Medal of Honor, Col. Nett's awards and decorations include a Bronze Star Medal with "V" Device and Oak Leaf Cluster, Purple Heart with Oak Leaf Cluster, Expert and Combat Infantryman Badges.

Col. Nett is a qualified Ranger and wears a Gliderist Badge.

Mom Sticks With Army

SAN FRANCISCO (AFPS)—She married a former Navy captain and she has three sons one a veteran of Navy service and the other two Navy officers still on active duty.

But when Sp7 Marion Cronemiller Mortenson retired recently at the Presidio of San Francisco she could look back on 20 years of Army service.

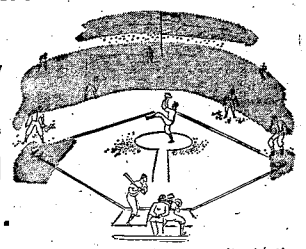
One of the first enlisted women in the Armed Forces to "get in her 20," Specialist Mortenson joined the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps in 1942 and took basic with the first enlisted WAAC training company at Ft. Des Moines, Iowa. Later she was a member of the first WAC unit to serve at Gen. Douglas MacArthur's Australia headquarters.

Navy or no, her three sons are proud of their diminutive mom who almost had to stand on tiptoe to meet the five-foot height requirement of the WAAC. One, Budd K. Cronemiller, is a former naval aviator. A second, Capt. Phillip D. Cronemiller, is a doctor assigned to the San Diego Naval Hospital.

EM Offered Low Rate Insurance

NEW YORK (AFPS) — The Armed Forces Enlisted Personnel Benefit Association is selling automobile insurance policies at lower than usual rates to enlisted personnel, aged 21 and over.

Approved by the Defense Department, the standard policies meet requirements set down by all 50 states. Auto accidents in any part of the Continental United States and Canada are covered by the policies and claims offices have been established throughout the nation.



Complete auto insurance coverage is available through the association including liability, collision, comprehensive, and medical payments.

In addition, a safe driver plan with a 15 per cent lower premium is available to qualifying drivers in certain states. Credit is given to those who successfully complete an accredited driver training course.

Premiums may be paid in three installments within six months. Premium rates, applications and a booklet on the insurance plan are available from AFEPBA, Ninth Floor, Warner Building, Washington 4, D. C.

The Surgeon Says

Should I Quit Smoking?

By Lt. Col. Forrest Pitts
Chief, Dept. of Medicine
MAH

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This the first of two articles appearing in the Bayonet concerning the effects of smoking.)

This question is asked with increasing frequency by smokers who are concerned about their health or confused by conflicting reports and interpretation of statistical data. A large segment of the public is concerned about this controversy but does not know what to believe or what to do.

In some cases the answer may be obvious.

White thickened patches on the inner surface of the lips, gums, tongue or cheek area have been called "smokers' patches" or Leukoplakia. Experience has shown that this is a precancerous change in the oral mucosa and major disease can be expected to follow in subsequent months or years if cigarette, cigar or pipe smoking is continued.

Buergers Disease is a rare abnormality of blood vessels of males who are heavy smokers. The circulation to the arms and legs is often impaired to the extent that multiple amputations may be the only therapy available for the late stages of the diseases which is characterized by gangrene. The most important measure which may avoid this type of disaster is complete cessation of exposure to all forms of nicotine.

More common than either Leukoplakia or Buerger's Disease as an absolute contraindication to smoking is a serious condition of the lungs known as emphysema. Loss of electricity of lung tissue and excessive inflation with air may exist as a primary threat to health or appear as a complication of chronic bronchitis, bronchiectasis or asthma. Emphysema is a disease which causes progressively severe shortness of breath with less and less physical exercise with the passage of years and decades. Although the cause of emphysema is not well understood, the evidence is overwhelming that cigarette smoking plays a major role in causation and/or progression.

In summary, physicians do not equivocate in advice to patients who manifest any degree of leukiplakia, Buerger's Disease, or emphysema. The sooner these conditions are recognized and the sooner the individual stops smoking, the better the prognosis for a long and happy life. Experience has shown that little or nothing is accomplished by changing brands or "cutting down" on the amount smoked per day.

DOD Issues New Contract to Test Missile System

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — The Army has awarded a $146 million contract for continuing development and testing of the Nike-Zeus antimissile missile system extending work for another year.

The Defense Department said the contract did not include funds to produce and deploy the system.

Nike-Zeus is the only weapon in advanced development designed to provide active defense against ballistic missile attack. It uses advanced radar and electronic computers in a fully automatic operation to detect, track, intercept and destroy attacking ballistic missiles.

The Zeus scored its first intercept of a special ICBM-type target in a test at Kwajalein Island in July.

back, paces a formidable ground attack.

The Marine coach, Maj. James Quinn, favors a pro-type split offense, and Cofield indicates they place a heavy accent on passing.

The Doughboys have their own potent offense led by quarterbacks Marvin Tibbetts and DeWayne Jeter, fullback Wallace Johnson, and halfbacks Bobby Towns and Ron Quillen.

In six games they have scored 173 points.

The starting line is equally as potent and is perhaps one of the most significant factors in Fort Benning's rise to the top of service football.

The talented seven of center, Elliot Moseley, guards Sam Sellatella and Joe Wendryhoski, tackles Lindell Loveletta and Wayne Everhart, and ends Fred Murphy and Dan House, have been instrumental in holding opponents scoring to 31 points.

This is an average of only slightly over 5 points per game.

"The leather will pop out there Saturday night," Cofield said glumly, "I'll be satisfied if we can walk off there with a one-point victory".

and press; (3) freedom of the people to call meetings to discuss state affairs, commonly called the right of assembly; and (4) freedom to form associations and political parties.

As soon as Lenin had made his conquest of power in the Bolshevik Revolution of 1917, he destroyed all of these political liberties and used the notorious Cheka to arrest, shoot, or sentence to concentration camps all active members of non-Communist parties. Stalin and Khrushchev followed Lenin in advocating the one-party system.

As a result, there are no articulate political minorities in the Soviet Union. All political parties and groups outside the Communist Party have been crushed.

sippi, were named to the fourth and fifth positions, while Ohio State climbed from the 10th position last week to the sixth slot this week. OSU made the big jump by beating a winless Illinois team but setting a new Big Ten rushing record while they did it. The Bucks piled up 517 yards breaking the old record of 465 yards.

Arkansas, Northwestern, Washington and Wisconsin round out the AP poll.

One of the big games this weekend could prove to the northwestern — Ohio State fray. It will be a battle of the North's top two offensive machines. A solid victory for either team could move them into the top three.

Fort Campbell.

Quantico upended Fort Campbell 22-19 Oct. 6.

At the other end of the passing combination is the 6-foot, 3-inch, 205-pound Murphy. Murphy was an All-State selection for two years while at West Fulton High in Atlanta before entering Georgia Tech.

After playing three years of varsity competition at Tech where he blossomed into a fine pass receiver, Murphy was signed by the Cleveland Browns of the National Football League. Later he also played with the Minnesota Vikings before entering the Army as a commissioned second lieutenant last February.

He is assigned to Special Services Section, The Infantry Center.

"We have a tough defensive line and our offensive is capable of scoring in any situation," the big athlete said about this year's Doughboy squad.

If these two talented players can continue to play the brand of football they have so far, the Doughboys may find themselves in the championship slot come December.

Dental

mal mouth the teeth are arranged so that the forces of chewing are spread evenly throughout the mouth. The teeth are polished and shaped so that food debris does not collect around them. In malocclusion the tilted or rotated teeth subject the supporting structures to undesirable stress which may eventually lead to erosion of the supporting bone. Improper spacing between the teeth may cause food debris to collect.

When a tooth is lost the teeth next to the space may tend to drift into this space and thus loose their proper position and result in a malocclusion.

Nervous habits such as clenching the teeth or cheek biting may put too much stress on the teeth, thus damaging the supporting structures.

It must be emphasized that although general body disorders may play a part in some cases of periodontal disease, the great majority of these cases are due to local conditions in the mouth.

The greatest single cause of poor mouth hygene and the best method of prevention is to maintain good cleaning habits. It is noticed more after age thirty-five because the accumulative effects of years of poor cleansing habits has finally created a condition severe enough to be noticed.

TIS Officer Will Serve As Umpire

Schroeder is an instructor in airborne techniques pith the department's Basic Airborne Committee. A qualified parachutist, he has been with the department since January.

He is expected to return early in November.

FORT BENNING, GEORGIA, HOME OF U.S. ARMY INFANTRY CENTER

VOL. 21, NO. 7 — FRIDAY, OCTOBER 26, 1962 — FORT BENNING, GA. — 36 Pages

Efficiency Aim of Assignment Plan

Major policy changes in the assignment of enlisted personnel to stateside and overseas commands have been announced by the Department of the Army, aimed at developing the Army's abilities and skills.

Revision of current regulations also will insure more equitable tours for career enlisted personnel and decrease changes of stations, according to officials.

The savings will be achieved by keeping career enlisted personnel to have enough time in service remaining or committed before departing for overseas assignments to allow completion of the overseas tour.

This requirement will increase the time between overseas tours for most military occupation specialities and grades and will decrease the frequency of permanent changes of stations.

The new policies will become effective Jan. 1 and will apply to all enlisted personnel with more than four years of service for pay purposes.

After being chosen for an overseas assignment, enlisted personnel will have to re-enlist or extend for 24 months for any of the longer enlistments authorized. The enlistment, extended or amended, will insure that the men will have sufficient time remaining for the overseas tour to complete his prescribed tour.

Enlisted personnel may sign a declaration of intent to re-enlist at an overseas station upon their expiration time of service. Men who do not re-enlist within 24 hours, for their current duty assignments.

Personnel in a transit, trainee or patient status will be re-enlisted only for Regular Army service.

The Department of the Army also announced that permitting draftees to "reenlist" and paying them a re-enlistment bonus will be discontinued immediately. Such payments were for the purpose of re-enlistment until completion of their two-year tour of active duty. They also will not be re-enlisted unless they meet the stated requirements for re-enlistment in the Regular Army.

Effective Jan. 1, available to enlisted personnel with over four years of service will be limited to immediate re - enlistment, within 24 hours, for their current duty assignments.

Only if the individuals are re - enlisted in accordance with the new regulations will they be paid the re-enlistment bonus.

BOAT BUILDER . . . Building a 15-foot boat in the Arts and Crafts Shop is PFC Eldred A. Scheifels (L) while Hugh E. Cook, director of The Infantry Center Special Services Section, looks on. Boat building is one of the leading hobbies of post personnel who use the crafts shops. A boat can be built in two months during off-duty hours.

Infantry Center Will Mark Its Anniversary Thursday

The Infantry Center will mark its 16th anniversary Nov. 1.

Originally designed as a combined headquarters for The Infantry School and the Airborne School, The Center has grown to become the focal point of all Infantry activities. The Infantry School has been in operation on the post since 1918.

With the organization of The Infantry Center, the commandant of the school became commanding general of the center also, a position now held by Maj. Gen. Ben Harrell.

The mission of TIC includes supplying accommodations, logistical, training and administrative support to The Infantry School.

The school is charged with the responsibility to develop Infantry doctrine, tactics, instruction techniques and training principles. The post serves as a testing ground for new developments in such fields as psychological aspects of combat, clothing, equipment and rations.

Principles of modern warfare and capabilities of the Army's modern structure are nowhere better taught and practiced than at Fort Benning, officials agree.

Lt. Col. Wells Named TIC Provost Marshal

LT. COL. WELLS

Lt. Col. Howard B. Wells has been named provost marshal of The Infantry Center.

Lt. Col. Wells comes to Fort Benning with a number of assignments which include the Military Police Officers Advanced School at Fort Gordon, Ga., and the Command and General Staff College at Fort Leavenworth, Kan.

Col. and Mrs. Wells have two sons, Richard, 22, and Robert, 18.

Sands Missile Range, White Sands, N. M.; 1955 to 1958 with the Office of the Provost Marshal General in Washington, D. C.; from 1958 to 1960 provost marshal of the Yokohama Port Command in Japan.

He succeeds Lt. Col. James E. Farmer who has been assigned as chief, Criminal Investigation Division, 6th U. S. Army, Korea, and from 1950 to 1953 he was provost marshal of the New Army Europe.

Col. Farmer has been post provost marshal since Jan. 1, 1961, and during that time has been active in cooperating with local law enforcement officials. He is a past president of the Chattahoochee Valley Peace Officers Association and was recently named to the Reception Committee of the Georgia Peace Officers Association of Georgia.

During the Korean conflict he was with the 8th Army.

100 Per Cent Goal Reached By Post Units

Nine units have contributed 100 per cent or more of their estimated "fair share" of the current Community Activities Association Fund Drive, officials said.

Other units attaining or exceeding their goal are the Main Officers' Open Mess, 100 per cent participating and 106 per cent of the goal contributed; Inspector General Section, 100 per cent participating and 101 per cent of the goal contributed, the Infantry Center Troop Command, 95 per cent participating and 103 per cent of the goal contributed; U. S. Army Infantry School Command and Staff Department, 100 per cent contributing and 106 per cent of the goal contributed; American Red Cross, 100 per cent participating and 139 per cent of the goal contributed; Post Exchange, 76 per cent participating and 100 per cent of the goal contributed; Signal Section, 100 per cent participating and 102 per cent of the goal contributed and Chemical Section, 100 per cent participating and 100 per cent of the goal contributed.

The National Bank of Fort Benning made a donation to the drive.

MOH Winner Still Recalls '99 Campaign

Minneapolis, Minn. (ANS)—Time has not dulled the memory of one of the oldest Medal of Honor holders still living.

Frank LaFayette Anders, 86, a retired major in the Army Reserve at Fargo, N.D., still remembers that May day in 1899 in the Philippine Islands when he and four other scouts charged an enemy force 60 times their strength.

"We were scouting five miles in advance of the American column," the then Corporal Anders recalls, "when we encountered 300 enemy troops entrenched behind the rice paddies.

"One of the men with us cried 'Come on, boys, let's get them.' We charged and took them on in hand-to-hand combat. The man who called the charge was killed right away, but we continued and drove the enemy out of their defenses.

"When they started running, we followed them over a bridge into the city of San Miguel and then took refuge in a church and fought from there for some four hours before troops from the division arrived."

For his actions that day, in which 43 dead enemy were counted, he was awarded the Medal of Honor. He received notification of the award by registered mail from President Theodore Roosevelt and was awarded the Medal in 1906 at Ripon, Wis.

During his 12 months of duty in the Philippines, he participated in 51 encounters with the enemy.

It is in honor of Maj. Anders and men like him who have earned the nation's top military award that July 12, of this year through March 25-1963, has been set aside to commemorate the centennial observance of the Medal of Honor.

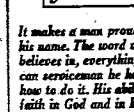
Quality of Equipment Reflects a Ready Unit

Success on the modern battlefield is based on many factors, none more important than the "instant readiness" of the combat equipment to be used. Warfare demands that both men and their weapons be prepared to function on a moment's notice.

Proper maintenance of the equipment with which the soldier will fight or be supported is fully as important, then, as the tactical training which he receives in preparing him for combat. But proper maintenance can be achieved only if adequate time is provided for it.

What is meant by "adequate time for maintenance"? It means time for maintenance training, time to perform the required maintenance, and time for maintenance inspections. It is the commander who must determine how much is enough, based on his particular unit and the materiel with which it is equipped. In short, he must recognize the need for maintenance time, then provide for it in the training program on a daily basis, and finally insure that the time is fully and effectively utilized when scheduled.

The goal of all maintenance training is to develop a sense of personal responsibility in each soldier for "his" equipment. The maintenance-trained soldier will recognize his responsibility for performing user maintenance, and will also understand the need for keeping unit repairmen informed of maintenance requirements beyond his own capability.



Materiel readiness, in the final analysis, requires maintenance management. This management includes the publication of concise, easily understood maintenance directions, the provision of men, time, money, materials, and facilities to implement them, and a realistic review and inspection of work in progress to assure that the directions are both understood and implemented.

Keeping equipment in a "go" condition at all times, then, is the business of every individual in the Army. Each officer and enlisted man must meet his maintenance responsibilities head-on. Materiel readiness must become the watchword; a way of life. Attainment of materiel readiness requires time, effort, and patience, but the reward is the sure knowledge that the unit is ready at all times to fulfill its mission.

MAKE IT

It makes a man proud to write "American" after his name. The word wraps up everything the man believes in, everything he fights for. As an American serviceman he has a job to do and he knows how to do it. His ability and dedication, based on faith in God and in his country, always bring the American fighting man out on top.

CODE OF CONDUCT: 6. I will never forget that I am an American fighting man, responsible for my actions, and dedicated to the principles which made my country free. I will trust in my God and in the United States of America.

Anchors Aweigh

USSR Youth Ignorant Of Our Wartime Aid

Americans who visit Russia nowadays hardly have time to swallow a spoonful of caviar before they're harangued about the glories of the Soviet educational system. Seems that Russian youth has it all over us in the schooling they're getting in science and history and other liberal arts.

Well, just what is being crammed into Ivan's little head? Take history — what does he know about WWII? Sure he can rattle off for you the exploits of the Glorious Red Army, but does he know what kept that army fighting? You can bet a copy of Das Kapital he doesn't!

Here are some statistics to make Ivan's head spin if he ever meets up with them—not, of course, in a Soviet classroom:

We sent the Russians 7,000 tanks, 14,000 planes, 2,000 railroad locomotives, 8,000 tractors, 200 torpedo boats, 8,000 antiaircraft guns, 135,000 machine guns, 100 submarine chasers, 10,000 freight cars, 100 merchant ships, 300,000 tons of explosives and one billion dollars worth of heavy machinery.

We sent the Russians 400,000 trucks, 8,000 marine diesel engines, 100,000 railroad wheels and axles, 500,000 tons of rails, 50,000 jeeps and 600,000 tons of chemical products, including medicine.

We sent the Russians 35,000 motorcycles, 400,000 field telephones, 150,000,000 yards of cotton and woolens, 17,000,000 tires and 1,250,000 miles of telephone wire. Ivan's dad on the Eastern Front didn't have boots, so we sent 15,000,000 pairs of them.

CHAPLAIN'S CORNER

Where Are We Going?

BY CHAPLAIN (COL.) SILAS DECKER

Where are we going?" This is a question so simple there is great danger in missing its true meaning. It has a definite relation for those planning a weekend trip or taking a vacation. Usually we obtain a road map, if transportation is by car, or consult a travel agency if commercial transportation will be used.

When the life's purpose of a young man is involved, the question is not a simple one, nor the means to obtaining the goal of life so near and so easily accessible.

It is of paramount importance that life's ambitions be understood early, before college age, and a plan to arrive be clearly defined. Fortunate is the young person who has the guidance of wise parents, and understanding pastor, and the professional concern of teachers and friends.

A goal for life involves an early understanding of its nature, the training required, a plan of education and progress toward its maturity.

A careful consideration of "Where Are We Going" may be applied to the Fort Benning Chaplain program. Our plan is essentially the church calenders, but to be always available whenever we are needed. We use the mechanical tools provided by our government and which are made available by our commanders. We use volunteers as they become available. Serving alone, our program would be totally and completely inadequate.

Our activities are for the welfare of military personnel and their dependents. They will contribute to the good of the community only in relation to the response they receive by our people. No one person can afford to go through life a religious illiterate. As such, many avenues toward happiness and contentment will be closed.

"Where Are We Going?" Each and every one of us contributes an answer.

Liberty and Communism

War and Peace

One of the ideals of modern democracy is the hope of international peace. In wars of aggression, as Jeremy Benthan pointed out, it is the ordinary citizen who sacrifices most and gains least. But on numerous occasions democracies have been compelled to battle for their very existence.

Modern democracy has long been under attack from authoritarian dictatorships. A dictatorship can plan a war, soften up its intended victims by propaganda and subversion, and launch a sudden assault more readily than can a democracy.

In contrast to modern democracies, communism insists on the "inevitability of war." This doctrine is implicit in the thesis of the class struggle which Marx and Engels formulated. They assumed — though they never clearly stated — that the inevitable conflict was nothing less than war, both civil and international.

But Premier Khrushchev, recognizing that both the United States and the Soviet Union possess weapons of mass destion, has declared that war between the capitalist and the communist nations are not inevitable.

Khrushchev said the Communist countries must "combat both world wars and local wars." He made it clear, however, that Communists do not oppose all wars.

He drew a distinction between world or local wars and "wars of national liberation," and cited the Communist - led revolt in Vietnam and the Algerian rebellion (both against France and the Cuban revolution under Castro as examples of just "national liberation wars," which the Communists fully support.

Peaceful coexistence, as Khrushchev has described it, means an intensification of the cold war—an unremitting effort to win Communist domination of the world by all means short of general war. But civil war is not ruled out.

President Kennedy, in his inaugural address on Jan. 20, 1961, stated the Western position:

"To those nations who would make themselves our adversary, we offer not a pledge but a request: that both sides begin anew the quest for peace, before the dark powers of destruction unleashed by science engulf all humanity in planned or accidental self-destruction.

"And if a beachhead of cooperation may push back the jungle of suspicion, let both sides join in creating a new endeavor, not a new balance of power, but a new world of law, where the strong are just and the weak secure and the peace preserved."

To Do Nothing Greatest Danger President Kennedy Tells Nation

Following is the prepared text of President Kennedy's speech to the nation Monday night:

Good evening, my fellow citizens:

This government, as promised, has maintained the closest surveillance of the Soviet military build - up on the island of Cuba. Within the past week, unmistakable evidence has established the fact that a series of offensive missile sites is now in preparation on that imprisoned island. The purpose of these bases can be none other than to provide a nuclear strike capability against the western hemisphere.

Upon receiving the first preliminary hard information of this nature last Tuesday morning at 9 a.m., I directed that our surveillance be stepped up. And having now confirmed and completed our evaluation of the evidence and our decision on a course of action, this government feels obliged to report this new crisis to you in full detail.

The characteristics of these new missile sites indicate two distinct types of installations. Several of them include medium range ballistic missiles, capable of carrying a nuclear warhead for a distance of more than 1,000 nautical miles. Each of these missiles, in short, is capable of striking Washington, D.C., the Panama Canal, Capa Canaveral, Mexico City, or any other city in the southeastern part of the United States, in Central America or in the Caribbean area.

Others Planned

Additional sites not yet completed appear to be designed for intermediate range ballistic missiles — capable of traveling more than twice as far — and thus capable of striking most of the major cities in the western hemisphere, ranging as far North as Hudson's Bay, Canada and as far South as Lima, Peru. In addition, jet bombers, capable of carrying nuclear weapons, are now being uncrated and assembled on Cuba, while the necessary airbases are being prepared.

This urgent transformation of Cuba into an important strategic base — by the presence of these large, long-range and clearly offensive weapons of sudden mass destruction—constitutes an explicit threat to the peace and security of all the Americas, in flagrant and deliberate defiance of the Rio pact of 1947, the traditions of this nation and hemisphere, the joint resolution of the 87th Congress, the charter of the United Nations, and my own public warnings to the Soviets on Sept. 4 and 13. This action also contradicts the repeated assurances of Soviet spokesmen, both publicly and privately delivered, that the arms buildup in Cuba would retain its original defensive character, and that the Soviet Union had no need or desire to station strategic missiles on the territory of any other nation.

Cites Falsehoods

The size of this undertaking makes clear that it had been planned some months ago. Yet only last month, after I had made clear the distinction between any introduction of ground - to - ground missiles and the existence of defensive anti - aircraft missiles, the Soviet government publicly stated on Sept. 11 that "the armaments and military equipment sent to Cuba are designed exclusively for defensive purposes," that "there is no need for the Soviet Union to shift its weapons . . . for a retaliatory blow to any other country, for instance Cuba", and that "The Soviet Union has so powerful rockets to carry these nuclear warheads that there is no need to search for sites for them beyond the bounderies of the Soviet Union." That statement was false.

Only last Thursday, as evidence of this rapid offensive build-up was already in my hand, Soviet Foreign Minister Gromyko told me in my office that he was instructed to make it clear once again, as he said his government had already done, the Soviet assistance to Cuba "pursued solely the purpose of contributing to the defense capabilities of Cuba," that "training by Soviet specialists of Cuban Nationals in handling defensive armaments was by no means offensive," and that "if it were otherwise," the Soviet government would never become involved in rendering such assistance." That statement also was false.

Deliberate Deception

Neither the United States of America nor the world community of nations can tolerate deliberate deception and offensive threats on the part of any nation, large or small. We no longer live in a world where only the actual firing of weapons represents a sufficient challenge to a nation's security to constitute a maximum peril. Nuclear weapons are so destructive, and ballistic missiles are so swift, that any substantially increased possibility of their use or any sudden change in their deployment may well be regarded as a definite threat to the peace.

For many years, both the Soviet Union and the United States — recognizing this fact — have deployed strategic nuclear weapons with great care, never upsetting the precarious status quo which ensured that these weapons would not be used in the absence of some vital challenge. Our own strategic missiles have never been transferred to the territory of any other nation under a cloak of secrecy and deception; and our history — unlike that of the Soviets since World War II — demonstrates that we have no desire to dominate or conquer any other nation or impose our system upon its people. Nevertheless, American citizens have become adjusted to living daily on the bull's eye of Soviet missiles located inside the USSR or in submarines. In that sense, missiles in Cuba add to an already clear and present danger — although, it should be noted, the nations of Latin America have never previously been subjected to a potential nuclear threat.

Unjustified Change

But this secret, swift and extraordinary build - up of Communist missiles — in an area well-known to have a special and historical relationship to the United States and the nations of the western hemisphere, in violation of Soviet assurances and in defiance of American and hemispheric policy this sudden, clandestine decision to station strategic weapons for the first time outside of Soviet soil — is a deliberately provocative, and unjustified change in the status quo which cannot be accepted by this country, if our courage and our commitments are ever to be trusted again by either friend or foe.

The 1930s taught us a clear lesson; aggressive conduct, if allowed to grow unchecked and unchallenged, ultimately leads to war. This nation is opposed to war. We are also true to our word. Our unswerving objective, therefore, must be to prevent the use of these missiles against this or any other country, and to secure their withdrawal or elimination from the western hemisphere.

Our policy has been one of patience and restraint, as befits a peaceful and powerful nation, which leads a worldwide alliance. We have been determined not to be diverted from our central concerns by mere irritants and fanatics. But now further action is required — and it is underway; and these actions may only be the beginning. We will not prematurely or unnecessarily risk the costs of world-wide nuclear war in which even the fruits of victory would be ashes in our mouth — but neither will we shrink from that risk at any time it must be faced.

Acting, therefore, in the defense of our own security and that of the entire western hemisphere, and under the authority entrusted to me by the constitution as endorsed by the resolution of the Congress, I have directed that the following initial steps be taken immediately:

1. First: To halt this offensive buildup, a strict quarantine on all offensive military equipment under shipment to Cuba is being initiated. All ships of any kind bound for Cuba, from whatever nation or port, will, if found to contain cargoes of offensive weapons, be turned back. This quarantine will be extended, if needed, to other types of cargo and carriers. We are not at this time, however, denying the necessities of life as the Soviets attempted to do in their Berlin blockade of 1948.

2. Second: I have directed the continued and increased close surveillance of Cuba and its military buildup. The foreign ministers of the OAS in their communique of Oct. 6 rejected secrecy on such matters in this hemisphere. Should these offensive military preparations continue, this increasing the threat to the hemisphere, further action will be justified. I have directed the Armed Forces to prepare for any eventualities; and I trust that, in the interest of both the Cuban people and the Soviet technicians at these sites, the hazards to all concerned of continuing this threat will be recognized.

3. Third: It shall be the policy of this nation to regard any nuclear missile launched from Cuba against any nation in the western hemisphere as an attack by the Soviet Union on the United States requiring a full retaliatory response upon the Soviet Union.

4. Fourth; as a necessary military precaution, I have reinforced our base at Guantanamo, evacuated today the dependents of our personnel there and ordered additional military units to stand by on alert basis.

5. Fifth: We are calling tonight for an immediate meeting of the organ of consultation under the organization of American states, to consider this threat to hemispheric security and to invoke articles 6 and 8 of the Rio treaty in support of all necessary action. The United

Rumors Thrive On Idle Talk

With the threat to this Nation's security imposed by the Kremlin-sponsored offensive arms build-up in Cuba comes new emphasis on the need for more responsible observance of security within the Armed Forces.

From grades E-1 through E-9, from the youngest second lieutenant to the general officer, there is the constant possibility of a breach in security — a breach that, in perhaps 99 per cent of the instances, is not intentional.

These slips of the tongue, regardless of how minute they may seem, can be pieced by a clever enemy to form an intelligence report that may cost an important diplomatic victory or even human lives. There is no need and no gain in discussing military activities of one's unit or office, unless that discussion comes within the line of duty.

Under a directive from President Kennedy, the Armed Forces have been put on alert status which has caused increased activity here. As a result of this increase in activity, rumors have spread throughout the post making allegations which have been termed "ridiculous" by officials. Rumors with no basis whatever caused unwarranted concern and alarm.

Where these rumors originate is unknown. But experience has proven that rumors can be extremely harmful in time of crisis. Take the example of a rumor begun by the Japanese in the South Pacific during World War II which contended certain vaccines being administered to troops would render them impotent. As a result of these rumors, completely unfounded, men refused to accept the drugs, and consequently, were struck by the disease from which the drug would have saved them.

There are more weapons than rifles, bombs and artillery during time of crisis. Rumor and idle talk are two.

Red Promises Are Like Pie Crust; They Are Rolled Out to Be Broken

"Promises are like pie crust. . .made to be broken." So stated V. I. Lenin, one of Russia's heroes. In the case of the communists his words are unfortunately true.

Since the Bolsevik revolution of 1917, the Russians have left a trail of broken promises in the dust of history.

Soviet theory about the performance of treaty obligations has proven to be shaped entirely by national necessity, never by international ethics or interests in human welfare.

Freedom of the press, one of the basic rights of Americans, was abolished three days after the Nov. 7, 1917, revolution which put the Communist regime into power. The people were promised, however, that the decree would be rescinded just as soon as the new regime was firmly established.

The order still applies today.

One of the Soviets' cruelest, most beartless deceptions also was incurred upon the Russian people.

During a 30-year period prior to 1957, Russian workers contributed money from their earnings to virtually compulsory bond drives. Many of these people, hopefully accepting the regime's promises of a return on their investments, counted on the return to support them in their old age.

But, in 1957, the regime revoked its promise by ordering a 20 to 40-year freeze on repayment of the funds collected through the bond sales.

A capsule history of broken Soviet promises includes:

PROMISE — An agreement signed May 7, 1920, with the independent Georgian Republic, pledging no interference in Georgia's internal affairs.

RESULT — Soviet troops invaded Georgia on Feb. 11, 1921 — a step leading to the absorption of the republic into the USSR.

PROMISE — Czechoslovakia and the Soviet Union made a friendship agreement on June 5, 1922, while on Dec. 12, 1943, the USSR and the Czech government-in-exile signed a treaty of friendship and mutual assistance.

RESULT — A communist ultimatum on Feb. 25, 1948, was forced on the Czech government as the Russians completed arrangements to include the country in its satellite empire. The ultima-

Infantry Board Wives Hold Lunch

Wives of the Infantry Board officers and their guests met Oct. 16 in the Corregidor Room of the Main Officers' Open Mess.

A farewell was said to Mrs. John McLaren, wife of the British liaison officer who will soon be returning to England.

Farewells also were said to Mrs. Joseph Estes and Mrs. Stewart Cromwell who are leaving Fort Benning for overseas in the near future.

Mrs. Frederick Harris, a guest of Mrs. Warren Walters, and Mrs. Rutland Beard, a guest of Mrs. George Johnson, joined the ladies for lunch.

Each group of six ladies was supplied with colored tissue paper and pins. A costume was conceived, created and modeled within 20 minutes. The combined efforts of each group was a ghost, two mummies, a princess and a 1920-"flapper."

First prize was awarded to Mrs. Joe I. Martinez who modeled a costume, the 1920 "flapper," designed by Mrs. McLaren, Mrs. Robert Williams, Mrs. Beard and Mrs. Johnson.

Mrs. Walters, Mrs. Estes, and Mrs. Monroe King, Mrs. Cromwell, Mrs. Durward Gosney, and Mrs. Johnson were hostesses for the luncheon.

At the conclusion of the affair, it was announced that the monthly bridge group will meet on the fourth Tuesday of the month.

COSTUME PARTY . . . Mrs. Joe I. Martinez, third from left, wears a 1920 "flapper" costume which won first place in a Halloween costume design contest at a recent meeting of the wives of The Infantry Board officers at the Main Officers' Open Mess. The flapper costume was created by Mrs. John McLaren, Mrs. Robert Williams, Mrs. Rutland Beard and Mrs. George Johnson. Left to right are two "mummies," Mrs. George E. Hudson and Mrs. Roy L. Inman, Mrs. Martinez, Mrs. Gordon A. Gunton, dressed as a ghost, and Mrs. David C. Smith, a "princess."

Com. Dept. Monthly Coffee Held

The ladies of the Communications Department held their monthly meeting at a coffee in the Normandy Room, Main Officers' Open Mess, recently.

Mrs. Hubert E. Strange, wife of Col. Strange, the departmental director, introduced the guests, all wives of members of the Associate Career Course. They were Mrs. Michael J. Lally, Mrs. Jerome Kosmowski, Mrs. Walter F. Wall, Mrs. Gregor T. Young and Mrs. Young's mother, Mrs. Loretta Murphy.

A farewell was bid to Mrs. Eugene D. Skaggs, wife of Maj. Skaggs. Maj. Skaggs has been reassigned to another section of Post.

Hostesses for the coffee were Mrs. Jack O. Gardner and Mrs. Walter L. Watkins. Mrs. Strange poured.

In keeping with the day, the table was decorated with red and blue streamers. A centerpiece of red, white and blue Fuji mums, gladioli and carnations carried out the theme.

TIS Wives Hold Monthly Coffee At Youree Home

The Wives of the Cadre of The Infantry School Battalion, The Student Brigade, held their monthly coffee recently at the home of Mrs. James F. Youree.

A welcome was extended to Mrs. Clinton C. Carr, wife of the commander of The Infantry School Battalion.

Good-byes were extended to Mrs. Gerald W. Smith, Mrs. Edgar W. Duskin, and Mrs. Wilbur M. Greene. Each of the ladies received a silver card tray engraved ISB as a token of remembrance from the Cadre ladies.

Special guests were Mrs. Herbert D. Siegmeier and Mrs. Howard L. McAllister.

After a brief business meeting, Mrs. Youree served cake, coffee, and tea for the social hour.

MTU Fall Luncheon Is Given

A luncheon was enjoyed by the Marksmanship Training Unit officers' ladies last Friday at the Black Angus Ranch. A seasonal scheme was played through-out with autumn leaves and flowers. The centerpiece was made of beautiful autumn flowers. Mrs. William L. Bassham and Mrs. John R. Walker Jr. served as hostesses.

Welcomes were extended to Mrs. Leon B. Mayer and Mrs. Joan W. Flowers and farewells were given to Mrs. Tommy G. Pool and Mrs. Robert B. Trew. Mrs. Pool will accompany her husband on his new assignment to Germany while Mrs. Trew will accompany her husband to Pittsburg, Pa., following his discharge from active service.

There was a short business meeting where suggestions were made concerning the coming Christmas projects. It was noted that Distaff Foundation dinner-dance tickets can be obtained from Mrs. Robin G. Montgomery, wife of the unit's commanding officer.

The luncheon was brought to a close by a clever idea of choosing the next month's coffee hostesses. On each name card appeared a number and a corresponding number was in an envelope from which Mrs. William S. Brophy Jr. drew out two. The ladies holding these numbers, Mrs. James R. Clark and Mrs. John W. Torbush will give the next coffee on Nov. 16. All MTU officers ladies are invited.

LAAC Women Guests of Post Weather Bureau

The Lawson Officers Wives' Club were the guests of the Weather Detachment of LAAC recently.

The women viewed a film entitled "The Unchained Goddess," which gave a humorous and informative description of weather and the elements that make it up.

The tour included all phases of taking, recording and disseminating surface and upper air observations along with a description of the forecasting and pilot briefing section. After the tour, the ladies enjoyed a question and answer period along with their coffee and cake.

Lt. Col. Ernest Francis, deputy commanding officer of LAAC, welcomed the ladies. The tour was supervised by Capt. Michael Titrec chief forecaster.

Officials Will Study Post Schools In Move for SACS Recognition

Fort Benning Children's School will undergo an evaluation Wednesday through Friday for accreditation by the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools, according to officials.

A visiting committee of prominent Georgia - Alabama educators will conduct an intensive study of the post dependent schools with a view to recommendation for accreditation.

Chairman of the committee will be Dr. Lutian R. Wooten of the University of Georgia's College of Education at Athens.

The committee also includes: Dr. W. Theo Dalton of Auburn (Ala.) University College of Education, who has served as consultant to the post schools during a two-year "self study," a prerequisite to the evaluation.

Others who will serve on the committee are Mrs. Sara Divine, co-chairman of the State Elementary Committee of the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools, Dr. Arthur J. Benson, area supervisor, Georgia State Department of Education, both of Atlanta, and Dr. Oscar Jarvis of the College of Education at the University of Georgia.

Mrs. Ophelia Alsobrook, curriculum director of Talbot County Schools; Mrs. Thelma Byars, curriculum director of Clayton County Schools; Kenneth Cadenhead of Auburn, a Troup County elementary principal, and Miss Malissa Cox of College Park, Ga., a classroom teacher.

Mrs. Gladys Darling, principal of Crawford Street Elementary school; Herman Dollar, principal of Richards Junior High School; Mrs. Barbara Goodwin of Atlanta, classroom teacher; Miss Audrey Herod, supervisor of Walker County Schools; Clyde Kimball of Atlanta, principal of Cox Elementary School, and Mrs. Celia Moore of Macon, Ga., library supervisor of Bibb County Elementary Schools.

Dr. James Y. Moultrie, assistant superintendent in charge of instruction of the Muscogee County School District; Mrs. Howard Smith of Atlanta, a classroom teacher in the Decatur, Ga., School System, and Mrs. Bess Underwood of Thomaston, Ga., elementary principal of Community Center School.

Invited to attend the three-day evaluation are Mrs. Hazel Lewis, president of the Georgia Education Association; Durell Ruffin, coordinator of the Cooperative Program in Elementary Education of the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools, Hal W. Clements, director of the Division of Instructional Materials and Library Services of the Georgia State Department of Education, and R. G. Williams, an area representative of the Georgia State Department of Education, and Marion Thompson, chairman of the State Accrediting Committee of the Cooperative Program of the Southern Association, all of Atlanta.

The post elementary schools have been affiliated with the association since 1955, when the Cooperative Program for Elementary Schools was established.

The association cannot accept elementary schools for full membership until certain changes are made in its constitution. However, it maintains an accrediting service for elementary schools, officials said.

One of the primary requirements for accreditation is a detailed self-study of an elementary school system by its own personnel conducted to improve the instructional program.

The post dependent schools completed a self-study, recently, aimed at stimulating interest of school personnel and parents in continuous evaluation and revision of the school program, implementing school community relations and seeking accreditation by the association, according to Mrs. Hazel J. Scudder of Lexington, Ky., superintendent of schools on the post.

Dr. Joseph T. Conforti of Lexington, director of instruction of the dependent schools, served as coordinator of the self-study. He was assisted by a local steering committee and other committees to study specific areas of growth and development of the Children's Schools.

A pre-conference meeting at 7 p.m. Tuesday at the office of the superintendent of schools, Bldg. 880-A, will be attended by Dr. Wooten, Dr. Dalton, Dr. Conforti, Mr. Ruffin and Mrs. Scudder.

The three-day evaluation will open Wednesday at 9:30 a.m. at Loyd School Auditorium. Orientations for the visiting committee to provide a background for the evaluation will be presented by the local self-study committees.

Visits to the schools will begin at 11 a.m. Wednesday and continue through Friday.

The visiting committee will prepare a written report of the evaluation Nov. 2. The report will be sent by the post schools to the association with a request for accreditation, officials said.

NEW AT TSB . . . First Lt. Leo D. Mault was recently assigned as S-4, 5th Student Battalion, The Student Brigade. Since being here he has been promoted to First Lieutenant.

Student Brigade Marks 20th Year

By Pvt. William Smyser

The Student Brigade celebrates its 20th anniversary this week.

In its past are many experiences which have molded it into the institution for Infantrymen it is today.

On its rosters are men from every state in the union and many foreign countries. At one time or another all Army Infantry officers are assigned to The Student Brigade. While here, they learn anything from the intricacies of wheeled vehicles and missile firing to the extremes of Ranger training in the Georgia mountains and Florida swamps.

Here also they learn the basic principles and problems of leadership in the Modern Army, and the complexities of the battle group organization and staff.

Beginnings in 1826

The Student Brigade had its beginnings in 1826, when an Infantry School was attempted on the western frontier around St. Louis, Mo. Since few qualified instructors were available, the school was dropped in 1828.

Another Infantry School was not attempted until 1881. In that year the War Department authorized a school for Infantry at Fort Leavenworth. This school was so small that it gave few officers or enlisted men an opportunity to attend and was not expanded.

In 1907 the School of Musketry was established at the Presidio of Monterey. This was the nearest thing yet to a real Infantry School. It was subsequently moved to Fort Sill, Okla. where it was closed because of trouble on the Mexican border in 1916.

The Infantry School of Arms was opened here in 1918, and was an attempt to bring all Infantry Courses under one command. Before 1940 the Headquarters staff and all personnel connected with the School were from the 24th Infantry and the 29th Infantry Regiments.

ISD Formed

In 1940 the Infantry School Detachment was formed and operated both the school and post headquarters. This was changed to The Infantry School Service Command in 1941.

The Student Training Brigade was formed as part of the reorganization of the Infantry School Service Command and was composed of three student training battalions, each of which had about 800 men. They were charged with giving logistical support to the students of The Infantry School.

During the post-war years there were various designations and the size of the cadre changed with the accelerations and decelerations in the student training.

On Sept. 1, 1947, The First Student Regiment was redesignated The School Brigade, with four student battalions and the Infantry School Detachment, which housed the officer and enlisted instructors of the Infantry School.

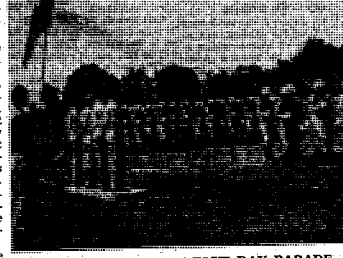
In October, 1959, The School Brigade was redesignated The Student Brigade, and in February of the next year The Infantry School Detachment became The Infantry School Battalion.

Today The Student Brigade is composed of the 2nd Student Battalion, the 4th Student Battalion, the 5th Student Battalion and The Infantry School Battalion.

State Mission

TSB has as its mission, keeping the hundreds of students of the Infantry School fed, billeted, counseled, guided and disciplined by means of the finest facilities, physical and human, the Army offers.

In fulfilling this mission, TSB has received an enviable collection of acknowledgements. Awards presented in the past year have included the Army Infantry School Management Improvement award for improved efficiency, effectiveness and economy with the brigade.



The highest educational development award for personnel within the unit, and the Minute Man Trophies for Savings Bond drives.

In addition TSB has won the Post Softball Championship and, for the third time the Post Baseball Championships.

TSB personnel have received incentive awards for suggested improvements, and the USAIC all categories re-enlistment award. Certificates of achievement of successful graduates for the year in the following courses: Officer Candidate School, Airborne, Officer Career and Associate officer Career Courses, Rangers and Orient Courses.

In this spirit, The Student Brigade looks to the future knowing that it has met the challenges of the past and is looking forward to greater accomplishments in the future.

Col. Otto B. Koch Jr. is commander of TSB.

Arts, Crafts Week to Be Observed Nov. 1-7

The 1962 Army Arts and Crafts Week will be observed here Nov. 1 to 7 and will be conducted at all Army installations and off-post activities in conjunction with American Art Week.

The program will introduce military personnel, dependents and civilian employees to the opportunities available to them through participation in the Army Crafts facilities.

On display in the south wing of Doughboy Stadium will be exhibits of skilled craftsmen who will be awarded prizes for the articles they have made in the post's nine crafts shops.

The articles will be entered Nov. 1 and 2 and the exhibit will be open to the public from 1 p.m. to 10 p.m. Nov. 3, 4 and 5. Instructors will be present to answer questions and assist visitors.

Entries Limited

Entries will be limited to articles constructed in the crafts program after Nov. 1, 1961, in woodcrafts, leathercrafts, ceramics, model airplanes and boats.

Cash awards for items built in these categories will be given to the winners. First prize will be $25; second prize, $20, and third prize, $15.

Arts and Crafts Week was established by the Department of the Army in 1945. However, the program was not conducted at Fort Benning until 1956. In that year Hugh E. Cook, of the Crafts Division of The Infantry Center Special Services Section, initiated the week-long program.

The Arts and Crafts at Army posts will be conducted this year in conjunction with the national Arts and Crafts Week.

At Fort Benning the Crafts Shop is partly supported by proceeds of sales of crafts merchandise. Distributed among the post crafts facilities are $130,500 worth of equipment and materials on the Main Post, which includes Lawson Army Air Field, and the Sand Hill and Harmony Church areas.

The public is invited to the displays, Cook said. "I expect some 5,000 visitors during the showing," he added. "Last year we had more than 4,000 people to see the exhibits.'

The exhibits will be of special interest to Columbus and Phenix City school teachers of industrial arts and vocational subjects, Cook said.

The mission of the Army Crafts program is to improve morale and increase the efficiency of skills of military personnel through active participation in constructive crafts activities during off-duty time.

Fort Benning's craft shops have five enlisted men who are assigned for full time duty, 15 attached or on full time special duty, and 16 who are instructors in off-duty hours. The crafts shops also have six civilian advisors.

The average attendance of post personnel and dependents who use the facilities of the nine crafts shops is 30,000 a month, a total of 360,000 a year.

The national Arts and Crafts Week this year will be conducted in United States in libraries, theaters, museums and in all branches of the armed services.

Students Laud Scout Dog Platoon Show

A demonstration held recently at Baker High School by the 26th Infantry Platoon (Scout Dog) has brought a letter of appreciation from the school's Student Council.

In a letter to The Bayonet, Tommy Younce, president of the council said:

"On behalf of the Baker High School Student Council, I would like to thank Lt. (Richard) Earle and the men of the 26th Scout Dog Platoon for the wonderful demonstration at our school.

"We were most impressed with the efficiency of the soldiers and their fine dogs.

"We deeply appreciated your taking time from your busy schedules to help us in this community project."

Narrated by 1st Lt. Earle, the demonstration entertained approximately 100 spectators on the school's football field with displays of basic obedience, off-leash obedience, and a running of the obstacle course.

SFC Robert Bennett and his highly - trained dog, Chris, showed the depth to which the dog-handler relationship can be carried.

The 26th handlers were SSgt. Robert Schmidt, SSgt. Rueben Klimeck, Sgt. Charles Workman, Sp4 Joseph Bevineau, Sp4 Oscar Hughes and Sp4 Randolph Lowe.

Mail Your Holiday Gifts Now

The Department of Defense suggests that Christmas gifts for Armed Forces personnel overseas be mailed between Nov. 1 and Nov. 10.

Gifts should be securely packed in cartons of wood, metal or double-faced corrugated fiberboard. Fragile items should be surrounded by tightly packed cushioning materials such as excelsior or shredded paper.

Matches, lighter fluid and smaller flammable items are prohibited. Tobacco products and coffee may not be sent to certain APOs.

Mailers should consult their local post office for details on these and other restrictions and for size and weight limitations to certain areas.

Mailers are urged to mail their gifts as early as possible during this period to minimize possibilities of non-delivery before Christmas day.

Col. Lattin Takes Jump Club Post

During the eighth annual meeting of the board of directors of the Airborne Association, six new national directors were selected for a three year term beginning in 1962. Among those elected was Col. John H. Lattin, commanding officer, The Infantry Center Troop Command.

Col. Lattin's association with the Airborne has been long and rewarding. During his military career he has been assigned to the 11th Airborne Division as a battalion commander; to the 504th Airborne Infantry Regiment, 82nd Airborne Division, as commanding officer; and to XVIII Airborne Corps as deputy chief of staff and later as chief of staff.

Col. Lattin wears the Master Parachutists Badge, the Chutists' Wings and holds a Class C Sky-Divers license.

Boast a Proud Record From 1917 to 1962

BY BOB DE CAMARA

Happy birthday, men of the Indianhead Division! Today's your day.

On this day 45 years ago, out of necessity and purpose, a division was born. Since that October day in 1917, the 2nd Infantry Division has built a distinguished history of valor in battle and strength in peacetime to be proud of.

In October 1917, shortly after the entry of the United States into the first international conflict, a division was organized in Beauregard, Louisiana, that was destined to be little resembled in future generations. The Indianhead was not to be designed until later in that war. The division was a combined force of the Army and Marines.

In the campaign, Chateau-Thierry. The division was rushed to Chateau-Thierry to aid in halting and counter-attacking a full-scale German drive on Paris. Next: Belleau Wood, Soissons, the St. Mihiel salient, and Blanc Mont, Argonne Forest, and Meuse-Argonne, an offensive that broke the German back and extinguished any further serious German threats.

Now a battle-hardened and veteran division, the 2nd had taken part in every major campaign, the 2nd had captured one-fourth of all prisoners taken by the American Expeditionary Forces, and the division had suffered one-tenth of the American casualties.

In World War II, the division landed on Normandy Beach on June 7, 1944; D-Day plus one. Encountering determined enemy opposition, the "Second to None" Division drove steadily Flash!

Organization Day activities of the 2nd Infantry Division previously scheduled for tomorrow have been cancelled.

In a special announcement from division headquarters, Brig. Gen. Charles Billingslea, division commander, said, "in view of the current situation, it does not seem appropriate for us to take time out for such a celebration."

For Decades a Symbol of Gallantry

TO THE MEMBERS OF THE 2D INFANTRY DIVISION

Friday, October 26th, marks the 45th Anniversary of the organization of the famed "Second to None" Indianhead Division.

BILLINGSLEA

For more than four decades, the 2d Infantry Division has been a symbol of combat effectiveness and gallantry. From the decisive battles of World War I, to the beaches and hedgerows of Normandy, and then in war-torn Korea, the Division has established a distinguished tradition of valor and accomplishments, often in the face of heavy odds. As we celebrate our Organization Day activities, let us remember the thousands who went before us.

The Division has, and will continue to reflect, an intense pride and esprit de corps in fulfilling its mission as a member of the Strategic Army Corps. The missions accomplished in the past year are another indication that any job delegated to the Division will be accomplished "Second to None."

I feel certain that the men who have trained, fought, and died in the ranks of the Indianhead Division would be proud of their unit today.

forward, overran the Wehrmacht's vaunted 3rd Parachute Division, and liberated Teichenbrasy, France. Continuing its thrust, and after days and days of the most bitter house-to-house street fighting, Brest, Belgium, also fell to the 2nd's assault. The division then manned a defensive sector along the Siegfried Line in Belgium and later captured the key German towns of Helenthal and Gemund. It had reached Pilsen, Czechoslovakia, when the war in Europe ended.

August in Korea

The "Second to None" Division arrived in Korea in early August 1950 and was utilized as a fire brigade, moving swiftly to counter enemy thrusts. It was cited by the Republic of Korea president for its role in breaking out of the Pusan perimeter in September 1950.

When the Chinese Communist forces entered the fight, the 2nd Division kept the route open over the Changchon River until the rest of the Eighth Army had retired to the south. The 2nd Division later halted the Communists' winter offensive in January 1951 at Wonju and then launched a twin-pronged killer attack toward Hoengsong and Chipyong. The division stayed off a Communist counteroffensive, thus allowing United Nations Forces to continue the offensive.

The division later participated in the battles of Heartbreak Ridge and Old Baldy. It remained in Korea until the end of hostilities.

From the Korean Conflict to the present time,the 2nd Division has filled a variety of assignments, first at Fort Lewis, Wash., and now at Fort Benning. From 1957 until June 14, 1958, the division was inactivated. Reactivated here, June 14, 1958, the division began anew as a training division, teaching both the basic and advanced cycles of modern warfare.

In mid-August 1961, the Indianhead Division discontinued its training mission and prepared itself to become a member o fthe Strategic Army Corps. A build-up of men and equipment and an intensified combat-readiness training program assured the division a place in STRAC in February of this year.

As a member of STRAC, the 2nd Infantry Division fills a vital spot in America's power for peace. Always ready, combat-qualified, the division can wheel at a moment's notice to meet threats to the nation's security from whatever source, "Skilled - Tough - Ready-Around-the-Clock."

This is the heritage of the United States Army's 2nd Infantry Division. These are the traditions which the 2nd Division celebrates annually on October 26.

23rd Selected Next Battle Group to Rotate to Germany

By 23rd Infantry PIO

The 2nd Division's 23rd Infantry has been selected by the Department of the Army to follow the recently departed 32th Infantry as the second battle group from the Division in the experimental unit rotation plan which began this month.

The 23rd Infantry, commanded by Colonel Lucien F. Keller, will leave for Europe on or about the 1st of February 1963, exchanging places with the 2nd Battle Group 4th Infantry (Mechanized), of the 8th Infantry Division, in Bamberg, Germany.

The rotation plan, known as "Rotaplan", provides for the rotation of three battle groups to Europe, with one rotating to the U.S. every two months. The battle groups returning to the states will be replaced in Europe by a battle group in the U.S.

One significant fact involving dependents of the 23rd Infantrymen is that movement of dependents will not be authorized to Germany. Also, further relocation of dependents in the U. S. at government expense will not be authorized during the period their sponsors are involved in the six month overseas tour. However, dependents occupying government quarters will be permitted to continue such occupancy, with privileges such as medical care continuing unabated.

The purpose of "Rotaplan" is to improve the capability of the Army to respond rapidly to any situation throughout the world. The plan calls for airlifting U. S.-based units to their overseas stations, where they will be attached to the overseas command for deployment within the theatre.

The 23rd Infantry, since becoming a combat-ready STRAC unit in February 1962, has undergone extensive field training, including training exercises at Fort McClellan, Ala. and Fort Stewart, Ga. In addition, this past summer the unit underwent amphibious landing training at the U. S. Naval Station, Little Creek, Va., and as part of the 2nd Division, participated in Exercise Swift Strike II in the Carolinas, the U. S. Strike Command's largest exercise of the current year. The 23rd just recently returned to Fort Benning from the Oxford, Miss., area, where it was involved in the crisis at the University of Mississippi.

An advance party of 23rd personnel will depart for Europe in January

23rd Chooses Sgt. Haralson Best Soldier

By 23rd Infantry PIO

Chosen 23rd Infantry Soldier-of-the-Year this year is Platoon Sergeant E-7 Walter E. Haralson, a veteran of 14 years active duty with the U. S. Army.

Sgt. Haralson, reenlisted this month for his own vacancy in the 23rd, is assigned to Company C as a platoon sergeant. He has been at Fort Benning since October 1958, when he began an assignment with the 30th Infantry, followed by an assignment with the 2nd Administration Company. After this, he was assigned to The Infantry School's Student Brigade and in 1961 served as special assistant instructor in the Small Arms Firing School at Camp Perry, Ohio.

The native of Barnesville, Ga., is a graduate of the Gordon Military College in Barnesville. He is the holder of the National Defense Service Medal, the Korean Service Medal, the United Nations Service Medal, and the Good Conduct Medal with two clasps.

TO: COMMANDING GENERAL,
2D INFANTRY DIVISION

All members of the 1st Cavalry Division join me in congratulating the members of the 2d Infantry Division on the occasion of their Organization Day, 26 October 1962.

The history of the 2d Infantry Division since its activation in 1917 has been replete with numerous instances of outstanding achievements, exemplified by the numerous battle honors earned in both world wars and the Korean Conflict. Personnel of your command can take justifiable pride in their fine organization.

Once again the "First Team" extends best wishes for continued success in the future.

Division Calendar Book Tells the Whole Story

With the 45th Organization Day of the 2nd Infantry Division being observed today, it gives one an opportunity to reflect upon the past year's accomplishments. It is also the appropriate moment to review this history, the fame, the glory of each unit comprising the "Indianhead" Division.

The 2nd Division Officers' Wives Club had this in mind as they compiled the 2nd Infantry Division Engagement Calendar for 1963 which contains the whole story of the famed Division and its individual units. Each fighting unit is represented in the book by its past history, a replica of its crest and a written description of the crest, plus a photographic story which visibly tells of the unit's accomplishments during the past year thus telling the story of the Division.

The remaining portion of the book is a week-by-week record of 1963 with ample space provided to keep track of all appointments and engagements.

This Engagement Calendar was published with thought and care in hopes that it would be a welcomed addition to any military library, a way of telling family and friends of your unit's proud heritage, and a unique item for everyone's telephone table or desk.

The Book will be available at the various units on payday.

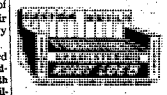
Given Inflight 'Lift' 10,000 Feet Above

By 26th Infantry PIO

Editor's Note: The Bayonet welcomes a new unit, the 26th Infantry, with this initial release. This formidable battle group joins the 2nd Infantry Division team after three years with the 8th Infantry Division in Germany. Look for more news in the Bayonet as the "Blue Spaders" make news at Fort Benning.

High above the Atlantic Ocean recently, Sp5 Paul Tilley, Headquarters Company, 26th Infantry, received an "inflight promotion" to his present rank as he was enroute to the "Blue Spaders" new home at Fort Benning.

The actual promotion took place at eight degrees west and 36 degrees north at an altitude of 10,000 feet on Flight AAM 1076-18 heading for Lawson Army Air Field. The plane, enroute from Rhein-Main Air Force Base near Frankfurt, Germany, was bringing the last elements of the 26th Infantry to Fort Benning under the Army's "Rotaplan."



First Instance

This is believed to be the first instance of a promotion of an Army man aboard an Air Force plane, flown by a Navy crew.

The ceremony was conducted by Lt. Col. Lewington S. Pounder, executive officer of the 26th Infantry, and Commander William C. Kerber, USN, the aircraft commander.

Sp5 Tilley, who had no idea he was to be promoted, was surprised and a little "shook up" when told Lt. Col. Ponder wished to see him. His apprehension turned to joy as he was presented with the insignia of his new rank.

The 22-year-old native of Portsmouth, Va., entered the Army in February 1960 and completed basic training at Fort Jackson, S. C. He came to the 26th Infantry in October 1961 and has been serving as ordnance parts specialist with the battle group S-4 section.

Bomber Pilot With Brigade To Head S-2

By Brigade PIO

A new S-2 (Intelligence) officer has been assigned to 2nd Infantry Division Brigade, from a previous assignment with the 26th Infantry, in Germany.

Maj. Frank Y. Bowland Jr., Brigade's new S-2, is a graduate of Pasadena Junior College, California, and has attended the U. S. Army — Air Force Pilots' School, in 1944, the Basic Infantry Officer Course, 1950, and the Advanced Infantry Officer Course, 1954.

Was Bomber Pilot

Maj. Bowland was a B-29 bomber pilot in World War II, during which time he flew nine missions over Japan. His assignments during World War II were with the 27th Division, U.S. Army, Pacific, from January 1942 to September 1943, the U. S. Army - Air Force Training Command from September 1943 to June 1945, and the 20th Air Force from June 1945 to the end of the war.

His more recent assignments have been with the 40th Division in Japan. Beginning duty with this division in April 1951, he moved with it to Korea in January 1952, remaining with the 40th until September of that year.

He was assigned to the 24th Division in Japan for a short period, and rotated with the 24th back to Korea until his reassignment to the U. S. in December, 1953.

He later served as a U. S. Army Reserve Advisor and Third U. S. Army Liaison Officer with the Atomic Energy Commission in Oak Ridge, Tenn.

His last three years of service have been in Europe with the 26th Infantry, 8th Infantry Division, until his recent return to the U. S.

The major's decorations and awards include the Bronze Star Medal, Purple Heart, Air Medal, Korean Presidential Unit Citation, Army Commendation Medal, Combat Infantryman's Badge, United Nations Medal, Korean Campaign Medal, Reserve Medal, and American Defense Medal.

Sacrifice Made Them Famous

BRIDGE STORMING
In SWIFT STRIKE

These are the men. . .the outfit. . .and the places where. . .with glory and sacrifice, the Second Infantry Division became famous as "Second to None."

In the mud and slush, America's youth, barely out of basic training, were rushed to the front in France to serve in the bitter trench warfare of World War I. With all the romance of French legends and "Mademoiselle from Armentieres" and "Over There" still ringing in their ears, they entered combat with a zest and spirit hardly equalled in military history. They were part of a brand new outfit, unheard of before those days, called "The Second Infantry Division."

Emerged Tired

Five campaigns later, they, the survivors, emerged tired and battleworn, the weary victors of many great battles which they fought across the face of three nations. . .and they were proud . . . darned proud . . . that they were "Second to None."

After 24 years of garrison life, most of it spent in Fort Sam Houston, Texas, the Second Infantry Division was once again preparing for war.

In the spring of 1944, the Indianhead Division was poised for invasion of the French mainland. This, indeed, was their finest hour.

While the German radio beamed the strains of "Lily Marlene" and the Italians were playing "I Can Get Along Without You Very Well," the Second Infantry Division moved to Southampton, England.

On June 7, 1944, D-plus-one, the "Indianhead" Division crossed the submarine - infested English Channel and landed on Omaha Beach in Normandy, while shells were still pouring onto this thinly held beach-head.

Across Hedgerows

Following the historic battle on the road to St. Lo, the Indianheads fought their way across the hedgerows of France and were deep into Central Europe when final victory came.

These were the men. . .the outfit. . .who lived and died in the name of freedom. . .and they were called "Second to None."..Six Indianheads became Medal of Honor winners . . .Distinguished Unit Citations were awarded the major units . . .These and many other honors tell only a fraction of the story of glory and sacrifice in which the nation's youth fought as Indianheads in every major European engagement of the Second World War.

In the summer of 1950, the cry of "war" again chilled the world as events in Korea culminated in the outbreak of hostilities, involving a small garrison of American troops.

The World feared an all-out Third World War, but in the twisted shape of things, a localized conflict spread over the Korean Peninsula. Again with the democratic way of life imperiled by the Communist hordes, the Second Infantry Division set sail for Korea.

From 1950 until 1953, the Second Infantry Division fought in all engagements of the Korean Conflict and was cited in numerous Orders of the Day in addition to receiving the Republic of Korea Distinguished Unit Citation and the Presidential Unit Citation.

This is the story of the men . . .the outfit. . .who wear the famous Indianhead patch. . . whom they call: "Second to None."

Today Their Spirit Carries On

This year the combat - ready 2nd Infantry Division has built an impressive record to celebrate its 45th anniversary and its first year as a member of the "Skilled-Tough - Ready - Around - the - Clock" Strategic Army Corps.

Specialized combat training, Army exercises and joint Armed Forces maneuvers have readied members of the "Indianhead" division for any mission anywhere in the world, from a show of force to general war.

Combat Training

The year began with an intensified combat training program taking the division's full-strength units to the field four days out of every week. Throughout the winter, squad, platoon, company and battle group size units practiced tactics in preparation for Army Training Tests.

Reaching its most important phase in November, the training program was climaxed by a four-day full-scale division exercise.

The first major exercise of the year came in January when, on two separate occasions, division elements under the command of 2nd Division Brigade, traveled to Fort McClellan, Ala., to practice logistical and administrative support of units under simulated combat conditions.

The call to become a member of the Strategic Army Corps came February 15.

In April, the division packed up and moved by road, rail and air to Fort Stewart, Ga., and Exercise SENECA SPEAR. Led by their commander, Maj. Gen. Charles H. Chase, the division formed two forces and fought on unfamiliar terrain to perfect concepts of modern warfare tested in previous training.

In early May the 2nd Division Brigade took to the sea at Charleston, S.C. and made an amphibious landing in Exercise QUICK KICK, the first all-service field exercise held by the joint forces of the Atlantic Command.

Amphibious Warfare

During a three-month period beginning in May, five battle group task forces were introduced to amphibious warfare at the joint Navy - Marine amphibious training site at Little Creek, Va. A realistic amphibious assault landing culminated each two-week training phase.

Called by the U. S. Strike Command to assist in conducting a joint service training exercise, elements of the division moved to Eglin Air Force Base, Fla., to make up a total of 7,000 Army and Air Force personnel fighting in Exercise CLEAR LAKE. Lasting from May 23 through June 10, the exercise spotlighted live fire and airborne operations, developing joint operational tactics and techniques.

Following a growing trend, the 87th Infantry settled itself in the Chattahoochee National Forest outside Blairsville, Ga., for more specialized training—a ten-day guerrilla warfare exercise involving both military and civilian personnel. The remainder of the Division continued with specialized training, including air mobility, counterguerrilla, river crossing, and rail movement training.

Units of the 2nd Infantry Division are presently conducting operational readiness training following the biggest effort of the year — exercise SWIFT STRIKE II, a joint Army-Air Force exercise directed by U. S. Strike Command in North and South Carolina. Picked to test new "aggressor" uniforms, the entire division simulated battle conditions to participate with the best equipped, combat-ready units stationed in the continental U.S. in the largest and most realistic maneuver ever conducted by the U. S. Strike Command.

The 4th Battle Group, 7th Infantry was activated as a part of the 2nd Infantry Division in September. The 7th Infantry has established itself as the most highly decorated infantry organization in the Army.

The 2nd Infantry Division was chosen to initiate the Army's new U.S. - to - Europe unit rotation system, "Rotaplan." On October 15, the 1st Battle Group, 38th Infantry, left for Germany for six months European duty. In its place arrived the 1st Battle Group, 26th Infantry, previously assigned to the 8th Infantry Division in Germany.

Today the 2nd Infantry Division, under the command of Brig. Gen. Charles Billingslea, looks forward to another year full of continued challenges in training and battle exercises as it grows in stature, living up to the reputation that made it truly "Second to None."

The 2nd Division Insignia Is Born

Members of the Second Infantry Division have worn the Indianhead Patch in three wars. This is the story of that patch.

The insignia had its origin during World War I as the identifying insignia on the vehicles of division supply trains.

At Division Trains

The commanding officer of the Division Trains held a contest in March 1918, to select a distinctive identifying symbol for use upon the vehicles after he had seen vehicles of adjacent French units decorated in this manner.

Through his adjutant, he sent out a memorandum authorizing prizes for the best designs submitted, with a first prize of 40 francs.

The winning insignia, which obtained the final approval of division headquarters for use only upon supply vehicles in April, 1918, was the striking red-and-blue Indianhead superimposed upon a white star. The head covered the angles of the star and exposed only the points.

THE INDIANHEAD INSIGNIA

Major General Omar Bundy, then division commander and his chief of staff, Colonel Preston Brown, later Major General Brown, were riding in a command car one day in April when General Bundy's eye was caught by the insignia, emblazoned on a truck.

According to a letter from General Brown written some time later, General Bundy stopped the driver, asked the meaning of the device, and was told by the driver that it enabled him, to find his vehicle in the dark.

The letter does not tell that the insignia had been authorized and was probably common use on all the vehicles of Trains at that time. At any rate, the general and his chief of staff promptly sent their cars to the area to have the insignia painted on them.

Associated With 2nd

In this manner, the Indianhead became associated with the Second Division as its identifying insignia some time before it became the standard shoulder patch so proudly worn by men of the division.

In October 1918, the commanding general of the American Expeditionary Forces requested suits to furnish insignia for approval. Major General Le Jeune, USMC, in reply to the request, submitted the red-and-blue Indianhead upon a white star as the insignia of the 2nd Infantry Division. The head was contained within a circle three and one-half inches in diameter.

As the Indianhead in the representation was somewhat crudely constructed; it was designated that the St. Gaudens Indian, in use on the five-dollar gold piece, be substituted.

On November 14, 1918, an order was published by Headquarters, Second Division, announcing that the insignia as described had been made official. The color background of the insignia was of varying shapes and colors, designating the major unit to which the individual wearer belonged and the subordinate unit. The background for Division Headquarters was the black shield.

'The Hill' of Sand Hill Is the Center of STRAC Second Infantry Division Operations

In closely - grouped wooden buildings on Fort Benning's Sand Hill, the commanding general and staff of the Strategic Army Corps' 2nd Infantry Division plan and supervise the activities of a "skilled, tough" Army unit.

An organization with more than 13,000 combat-ready soldiers, incorporating a total of 31 assigned and attached units, the division boasts of members highly skilled in everything needed to keep an Infantry division a lethal weapon in peace and war.

Orders From Headquarters

From division headquarters at Sand Hill radiate orders to six Infantry battle groups — home of the foot soldiers, the indispensable fighters whose actions are motivated by one mission — to attack and hold.

Not far away, six artillery battalions under a division artillery headquarters are ready to support the infantrymen with the most awesome and up to date fire-power the Army possesses.

To keep the infantry division on the move, vital support units, overseen by Division Trains headquarters, embody a key link in this command. Trained medics care for the wounded and sick, drivers of the transportation battalion provide the necessary "wheels," mechanics of the ordnance battalion maintain vehicle readiness, men of the administration company look out for the mountains of data in personnel records, quartermaster personnel feed, clothe and supply the whole vast complex.

Known as Separate Battalions, four division units expand and bolster the 2nd Infantry Division's potential power. Engineers, a reconnaissance and tank cavalry squadron, tanks of an armor battalion, and the cables of a signal battalion communications system, expand the potential of the division.

Separate Companies

Four separate companies: one to support division headquarters, the second, an aviation company; growing in importance as infantrymen more and more take to the air, the third, a transportation detachment to maintain these aircraft, and the fourth, a military band — these breathe a life of their own into the constantly expanding 2nd Division team.

Attached to the 2nd Infantry Division are four little-known but essential units: a military intelligence detachment, a chemical detachment, an Army Security Agency company and a chemical platoon.

This sprawling complex of men, machinery and weapons rests in the hands of the division's commanding general, Brig. Gen. Charles Billingslea.

To assist the commander in carrying out the many and diversified responsibilities with which he is charged are two principle assistants and a staff known in the Army as the general staff.

The assistant division commander of the 2nd Infantry Division is Col. John T. Corley, a brigadier general designate. His responsibilities are many, the majority dealing with training within the division. He is also the division brigade commander. In time of war the brigade can be utilized as an alternate division headquarters or to command a task force to accomplish a specific mission.

The 'Big Guns'

The "big guns" supporting the infantry are normally commanded by a general officer. Controlling artillery support for the 2nd Division at this time is Col. Stanley L. Harding, a brigadier general designate. Responsible for artillery training within the division, the division artillery commander maintains a vital source of power — the division's nuclear capability.

In brigade headquarters, the deputy brigade commander is Col. Frederick V. Harris. His primary duties are to check training and assist the assistant division commander. If, in the event of war, the brigade is thrown into action as a special task force, he becomes the deputy commander of the task force.

Coordinating the activities of all the general and special staff officers in the division is the chief of staff, Col. Louis A. Kunzig. This position is the hopper for recommendations, suggestions, approval and disapprovals.

Coordinating and implementing policy pertaining to the division is Lt. Col. Jack E. Compton, assistant chief of staff, G-1. All activities pertaining to personnel and manpower is the responsibility of this officer.

This includes matters ranging from uniform requests to requests for Army Emergency Relief. He is particularly interested in any facet pertaining to personnel action, welfare and morale of the individual soldier.

Lt. Col. John B. Wine is the assistant chief of staff, G-2 of the division. He is responsible to the commanding general for intelligence activities. Responsible for the intelligence training throughout the command, he is, in effect, officer in charge of the division's military intelligence detachment.

Some of the duties under his supervision are security clearances of personnel, conducting necessary investigations, and providing the commander with intelligence reports during training exercises. Lt. Col. Wine serves also as division historian.

A big operation in war or peace, is the function of the assistant chief of staff, G-3, (training and operations). Holding this position in the 2nd Division is Lt. Col. James M. Connell.

This assignment calls for formulating the plans for training and maintaining the division's combat-ready STRAC designation. He is also responsible for general operations during the time of war. This includes deployment of troops, recommendation of tactics to be used and coordination of firepower and other elements pertaining directly to the battle field.

Logistics and supplies are coordinated for the commander by the assistant chief of staff, G-4. This key position in the 2nd Infantry Division is held by Lt. Col. Edwin T. O'Donnell.

All logistics activities pertaining to the division, which run the gamut from toothpicks to tanks, are his responsibilities. The task of keeping the division fed, clothed and equipped makes this a very important job, and one of continued interest to the commander.

These key officers and many others work hand-in-hand with one another, coordinating their particular functions and making recommendation for policy and procedure for the division.

These officers are as vital to the commander as a cabinet is to the president of the United States.

'Spaders' Hopes Are High For More Sports Awards

By 26th Infantry PIO

The 26th Infantry "Blue Spaders", newly arrived member of the 2nd Infantry Division, are looking forward to the upcoming division sports activities with optimism and confidence.

The "Spaders" have always been a sports-minded unit and have a fine record in competitive activities.

While in Europe with the 8th Infantry Division, the 26th excelled in all sports activities in which it participated. A number of Baumholder Post, 8th Infantry Division, and USAREUR titles were captured by "Blue Spaders."

In the field of touch football, the "Spaders" won the Baumholder Post championships and went on to be the runnerups in division competition this past year. In addition, the 8th Infantry Division football team that won the 1961-62 USAREUR championships, boasted four "Spaders" in key positions.

The "Spader" bowling team that was victorious in the most recent 8th Infantry Division tournament is here at Fort Benning intact to rattle the pins, and teams, in the 2nd Division. The "Keglers" have set their sights on the division trophy and are currently keeping in shape for the competition.

This year's 5th Division Company Level Softball Championship went to the men of Bravo Company, 26th Infantry, who in the process picked up the Baumholder Post title. Sgt. Frank L. O'Dell, the team coach, has expressed confidence in his team's ability this year.

In volleyball this past year, the winners of the Baumholder Post title and runners up to the Division title were none other than the 26th Infantry "Blue Spaders". The "Spader Spikers" are awaiting their new challenge with confidence.

Still another Spader strongpoint is golf. 26th Infantrymen captured the most recent 8th Infantry Division tourney and went on to the finals of the USAREUR competition.

87th's Bravo Wins 18-7 To Clutch Flag Laurels

By 87th Infantry PIO

The flag football tournament ended at the 87th Infantry last week as Company B swept over Company C in a thrilling finale played at Essebagger Field.

Although the final score was 18-7, Bravo was ahead by only two points at the half. The game, seen by battle group commander Colonel Ralph H. Hughett and almost 200 spectators, was characterized by clean, aggressive play.

The first half saw a defensive battle between the two rivals. Company B, listing eight men on the battle group team as opposed to Charlie's six, could only manage a safety as Ron Brooks caught Michael Rhodes in the end zone.

In the third quarter, Company B quarterback Brooks found Harold Taylor in the end zone which upped the score to 8-0. Despite some long gains by Company C's Major Lincoln, Bravo's passing attack proved too much for Company C's defense.

Bravo company commander Captain Raymond E. Murphrey is expected to receive a trophy for his team's fine effort in the near future.

Football Not Crystalball For DivArty

By DivArty PIO

The 2nd Division Artillery football team is watching with a sober eye the recently published prophecies of other unit football teams regarding their first-place potential in the coming flag football season.

But the artillerymen refuse to flinch before the amateur prophets, and their coach and spokesman, MSgt. Dorman Crawford, convincingly insists that his role is coach, not prophet: his game: foothall, not crystalball.

"We'll wait until the season's over and then blow our whistle," he says. "When we speak, it will be fact."

18,000 Witness First Doughboy Win Over Marines Since 1945

BY PVT. DAVE BRAUN

Unbeaten Fort Benning, behind by three points in the third quarter, came thundering back to grab an electrifying 14-3 victory over the powerful Quantico Marines last Saturday at Doughboy Stadium.

Believed to be the largest crowd ever at the stadium, 18,000 plus, spectators whooped it up in anticipation of Fort Benning's first victory over the Leathernecks since 1946 when it won 15-6.

On hand for the game was Lt. Gen. E. W. Snedeker, commandant of Marine Corps Schools, Quantico, and Brig. Gen. Lewis W. Walt, also of the Marine Corps.

Once again the Fort Benning team used a devastating ground game and a rigid defense to streaking to its seventh straight win of the season.

The first half of play was a battle of punts since both squads were unable to cash in on the scoring department.

The Doughboys threatened once in the second stanza when rabbit-fast Ron Quillen raced from the Fort Benning 42 to the 20-yard line.

From here Brewster Hobby bolted to the 11 before fumbling the ball to the Marines.

Quantico also threatened moments later when quarterback Tom Singleton scampered all the way to the Doughboy 15-yard stripe, only to have a clipping penalty set the pigskin back on the Marine 42.

The Leathernecks struck swiftly in the third quarter after taking the kickoff. After Ray Ratkowski returned the kick 32 yards to the Quantico 40, Herman Brauch dashed all the way to the Fort Benning 23.

The Doughboys stopped the Leathernecks on the 15, but James Davis, a former Oklahoma University standout, booted a field goal to put the Marines in front 3-0.

Poised and powerful in the style of an unbeaten team, Fort Benning bounced quickly back, moving the ball from its own 12 to the Quantico 35 before being halted by a pass interception.

A break came moments later when the Marines fumbled on their own 19. On third down DeWayne Jeter sent Brewster Hobby in motion and then hit him on a 20-yard touchdown pass that brought the crowd to their feet.

Sam Stellatella kicked the extra point and Doughboy Stadium was transformed into wild confusion of cheers.

It the fourth stanza Fort Benning got the ball rolling again starting from its own 47. Marvin Tibbetts keyed the attack as he sped all the way to the Marine 32 on a keeper play.

Quillen then scooted to the 24 and Bobby Towns went to the 16-yard stripe.

After Wallace Johnson and Quillen moved the ball to the two-yard line, Jeter snuck in for the score.

Stellatella arched the extra point kick through the uprights and the final score was 14-3.

The Doughboys, who jerked the throttle on a versatile Marine offense, picked up 14 first downs to the Marines' 8.

On the ground Fort Benning gathered 218 yards to the Leathernecks' 157. The Doughboys picked up 31 yards though the air while the Leathernecks garnered 74.

Fort Benning hit on 3 of 13 pass attempts and the Marine team 8 of 22. Both teams had one pass intercepted.

The Army team picked up 35 yards in penalties and the Virginia team, 50. Fort Benning recovered two Quantico fumbles and the Leathernecks pounced on one Doughboy bobble.

Dietzel's Secret Of Army Victory Is Spizzerinctum

WASHINGTON (AFPS) —No matter what happens at West Point during the rest of the football season (except the Navy game) the Academy's new coach, Paul Dietzel, can call it a successful first year.

Dietzel says the reason for the upswing in gridiron prowess can be attributed to "Spizzerinctum." The coach calls it a West Point word meaning 100 per cent effort.

Webster's Dictionary lists the word as "United States slang" meaning "energy, ambition the will to succeed."

"Spizzerinctum" by either the Webster or the West Point definition was much in evidence when the Cadets downed Penn State in their Oct. 13 tilt.

PROPER FIT . . .

When choosing an alley ball, you should be sure that you have a proper fit. A proper fit insures you against dropping the ball and discomfort. It also helps curb blisters. There are two specifics to watch when fitting ball: finger holes and thumb hole. The finger holes are correct for you when thumb is placed in the thumb hole and the middle finger is over the inner edge of finger hole. Thumb hole is correct when the thumb fits neither too tightly nor too loosely.

Shough's Sports Scope

By Pete Shough

The big football powers of the South are dominating the press polls this week.

Texas, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana State and Auburn all have been named to valued slots.

In looking around the country, one can see that this is justified. The South is the only section of the country in which college teams are coming close to matching preseason predictions.

Alabama, Mississippi and LSU were picked high in national rankings — all have lived up to expectations. Only Auburn may be considered a freak, but with their outstanding performance so far this year, they certainly deserve all the credit they can get.

It is easy to see in which part of the country preseason picks might as well be thrown to the wind.

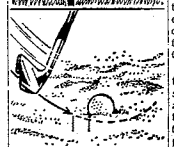
Out West, so called "weak" Southern California was considered a very, very dark horse for the Big Six championship, but now they are holding down the top slot and also the fifth slot in the United Press International poll.

Another dark horse, UCLA, is playing erratic ball. First, they defeated preseason No. 1 ranked Ohio State, but the next weekend, they were dumped by a weak Pittsburgh team.

Washington was picked to be the only bright spot in the West, but they are going to have to go a long way before it can top Southern Cal.

Up North, football fans still can't believe what is happening. Ohio State is struggling to play .500 per cent ball, while stroog Michigan State and Purdue both have suffered unexpected defeats.

Northwestern, picked to be in the middle of Big Ten standings, is leading the league. Another 'mediocre' team, Wisconsin, is undefeated and waiting for a Northwestern mishap.



Penn State was moving nicely until they met what preseason polls called a 'weak' Army team. We all know the results of that nationally televised mix up. Since then, Army is hanging on to the Eastern Big Five top slot, but not looking too good doing it.

The first half on the '62 football season has shown fans startling action and many upsets, but the toughest half of the season is yet to come.

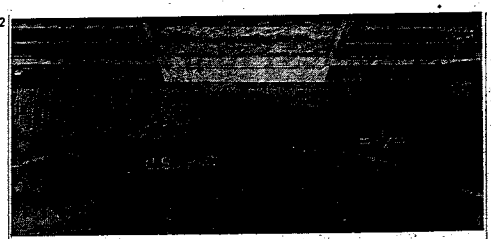
Most of the teams across the nation appear to taking a first-half break in their schedule this week. There are only a few games that may have some effect on the standings. The Ohio State-Wisconsin game and the Northwestern - Notre Dame test could cause some excitement. The under - dogs may have a little more to say this season than the experts let them.



GOOD GOLF

HIT BEHIND THE BALL . . . Bugaboo of many golfers is the sand trap shot. It need not be. Follow these fundamentals faithfully with profit: use a wedge; set feet firmly in sand and open stance; play ball back from the left heel; clubhead is open, so that back of the wedge, rather than front part of the blade, contacts the sand; hit one-quarter to one-half behind the ball; take sand with your shot; if the ball is almost buried in loose sand, aim an inch behind the ball.

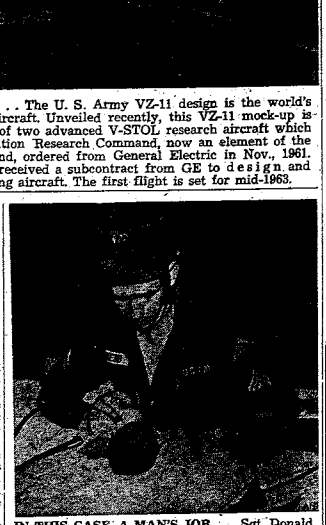
Ryan Aeronautical Co. received a subcontract from GE to design and build the two fan-in-wing aircraft. The first flight is set for mid-1963.



Fort Benning Is Considered For Bowl Bid

The unbeaten Fort Benning Doughboys are being considered for a berth in the annual nationally - televised Missile Bowl, in December, played in Orlando, Fla., according to unofficial reports.

The Missile Bowl pits the top two interservice teams each year. Fort Eustis, Va., copped the title last year in a thrilling 23-24 victory over the Quantico, Va., Marines.

Coach Leaton C. Cofield of the Doughboys stated that Missile Bowl representatives were at last Saturday's game with the Quantico Marines and that their intentions were to propose a possible bowl bid to the winner. Fort Benning won 14-3.

The committee will be on hand to witness a Doughboy practice session on Friday.

Colonel's Drink Is A Stinger

STUTTGART - VAIHINGEN, Germany (AFPS) — "Bee as in beer" — Col. Howard E. Hamilton, Seventh Army Comptroller, could be pardoned for feeling he got stung.

Because he did.

Col. Hamilton, on a recent weekend, decided to tackle the lawn around his quarters. Armed with a lawnmower and a stein of foaming German lager, he sipped the brew before getting to work.

Zowie! Says the colonel: "After the second gulp I quit for the day if not forever. Seems like a yellow jacket or bee was enjoying a swim in my brew and I raised the stein without looking. The aggressor lodged between my upper teeth and lip and let me have a real Achtung!"

The lawn could wait. You don't cut grass with your mouth packed with ice cubes.

A new course at a Louth, England, evening institute is called survival for men. It eals with cooking, laundry and mending.

Generals See Gala Benefit

NEW YORK (AFPS) — There were more stars in the audiance than on the screen at the benefit showing of "The Longest Day" for the International Rescue Committee here on Oct. 3.

More than two dozen of the commanding officers in the Normandy invasion were together again for the first time since June 6, 1944, at the reception and dinner that preceded the showing of the picture.

In the gathering of more than 700 people were General of the Army Omar N. Bradley and Generals James M. Gavin, Clarence R. Huebner, Matthew B. Ridgway, John B. Medaris and Anthony C. McAuliffe, who will live in history as the man who said "Nuts" to the German demand to surrender during the Battle of the Bulge.

Six Medal of Honor holders from the New York area also attended. They were Maj. Charles W. Shea, 350th Inf. 88th Div.; Lt. Stephen R. Gregg, 143d Inf., 36th Div.; MSgt. Nicholas Oresko, 302d Inf., 94th Div.; Sgt. John W. Meagher, 305th Inf., 77th Div.; and Sgt. Thomas J. Kelly, 48th Inf., 7th Armd. Div.; all of whom won their medals in WWII; and Lt. Richard W. O'Neill, 156th Inf., 42d (Rainbow) Div., WWI.

Frances Cardinal Spellman, Military Vicar of the Armed Forces, read for the first time a prayer commemorating the men of D-Day, composed for the occasion.

In the audience that packed the theater to the rafters, besides the officers who had participated in the D-Day landing, were many of the men, who had hit the bloodbathed beaches on that memorable day. As their various outfits passed on the screen they got up and cheered, and the audience applauded wildly. Also applauded was each general as he appeared on the screen, played by a well-known actor.

Congress Out; Several Laws Affect Troops

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — The 87th Congress has adjourned its second session leaving behind it several pieces of legislation certain to be of benefit to the American servicemen.

Probably of greatest significance is the Basic Allowance for Quarters bill, increasing quarters allowances for members of the Armed Forces as of Jan. 1.

(PS 87-790), another law, provides for temporary suspension of duty on personal and household effects brought into the United States under government orders.

A further piece of legislation (PS 87-771) prohibits imposition of personal property taxes on a serviceman's property after he has been transferred out of a state.

Other legislation of interest to servicemen included the authorization to issue a gold medal to General of the Army Douglas MacArthur (PS 87-760).

Officers are affected by a law (PS 87-777) that requires forfeiture of retired pay if a retired officer of the Navy or Marine Corps engages in selling to the Department of Defense within three years from retirement.

(PL 87-776), which increases allowances for the official transfer of house trailers of Federal employees, could have an indirect effect on servicemen.

Another important piece of legislation was (PS 87-648), which provides for disciplinary punishment for minor offenses without the intervention of a court-martial. This bill was signed into law on Sept. 7, 1962 by President Kennedy.

Also important was the law increasing the rates of compensation for veterans with service-connected disabilities. This became PL 87-645 on Sept. 7, 1962.

Regulations Set Identity Of Aircraft

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Uniform means of identification of military aircraft came closer, to realization recently with the publication of a joint Army-Air Force - Navy regulation.

The new designations will consist of a basic mission or type symbol preceded by a modified mission symbol, if appropriate, followed by a design number to identify the basic model and a series symbol to indicate any significant change in the basic model.

For the most part, the mission and type symbols correspond to the first letter of the plane's description: Among the exceptions to this rule will be "K" for tankers, "X" for research and "Z" for self-propelled, lighter-than-air aircraft.

The regulation also provides for the assigning of popular names to conform with the aircraft's characteristics.

CLOSE EYE . . . MSgt. Francis Redfern, U. S. Marksmanship Training Unit, keeps a close eye on Cpl. Alonzo Connors of the Black Watch Regiment, as he squeezes a round down range. Selected members of the Canadian Army are receiving practical experience in U. S. Army shooting techniques while they are here to compete for the Brown Bess Trophy, which goes to the winner of the annual match between the U.S. Army and the Canadian Army.

New Dam Is Aid to Area, AFMA Told

Columbus will have a doorway to the world when the Walter F. George Lock and Dam project is completed, 60 members of the Armed Forces Management Association were told here recently.

Speaking at a dinner meeting of the association at the Custer Terrace Branch of the Main Officers' Open Mess was Lt. Col. William Ledbetter, deputy district engineer of the Mobile (Ala.) Engineer District.

"The 270 miles from Columbus to Apalachicola (Fla.) will be more than a waterway," the colonel said. "It will be a virtual doorway to the world, tying in with inland waterways and connecting with ocean-going vessels."

"When the Corps of Engineers considers a development, the benefits must be weighed against the cost. Development of the Chattahoochee River from Columbus to Atlanta is feasible from the engineering point of view, but industry along the river north of Columbus does not justify the expenditure," the speaker said. "The Chattahoochee Valley with its excellent climate is well on the way to great development. New industry will come in with an increase in population," Col. Ledbetter continued.

TOP SOLDIER . . . Spt Carl D. Hale, 42nd Company, 4th Student Brigade, was selected by a board of non-commissioned officers as "Soldier of the Quarter" recently.

"A million tons of cargo will pass through the locks by 1975 and twice that amount by the year 2000," the speaker predicted.

Capt. Don B. Huff and Mrs. W. A. Moncrieff presented reports of the national conference of the association in Dayton, Ohio, Sept. 25-27.

Presiding at the meeting was Col. Dale D. Dixon, chapter president. Col. Riel S. Crandall, Infantry Center engineer, introduced the speaker.

Special Forces Has New Recruiter Here

FORT BRAGG, N.C. — Special Forces recruiters left the U.S. Army Special Warfare Center this week for twelve of the largest Army installations in the nation.

Assigned to Fort Benning was SFC Donald H. Davis of Company B, 7th Special Forces Group.

The recruiting sergeants will not only solicit volunteers for the elite Special Forces, but will help to screen thousands of applicants desiring to wear the green beret.

One of the recruiters' primary missions is to clear up popular misconceptions about the Army's most highly trained experts in unconventional warfare. They will emphasize to possible volunteers the seriousness of the mission of Special Forces and the necesity for maturity in the Special Forces man.

They will explain that the wearers of the green beret are neither cut-throat guerrillas nor glamorous cloak-and-dagger saboteurs, but are serious soldier whose mission is to teach others the skills of unconventional warfare that are so vital in the struggle against communist insurgency. They are men who must undergo months of intensive mental as well as physical training before they are ready to teach these skills.

The recruiters are looking for highly qualified, mature men. An applicant for Special Forces must be 20 years of age or older. He must have an exemplary service record and personal history, and make a score of 380 or better on the Special Forces Selection Battery Tests.

Physical requirements for Special Forces volunteers are 250 points on the standard Army Combat Proficiency Test and an ability to swim 200 yards.

All men desiring to become Special Forces qualified must also volunteer for parachute training.

The Special Forces recruiters will assist serious candidates in every way. The recruiter will follow the application of a mature, acceptable volunteer through until the man is assigned to the Special Forces Training Group (Airborne) at the Special Warfare Center.

Trench Mouth a Foe Of Soldier in Field

TWO DIVISIONS LOST

A startling headline? If you had seen this in your newspapers at the end of 1950 during the Korean Conflict it would have been even more startling. Yet it was true!

This is a little known fact which should concern every member of our fighting forces. A preventable non-contagious disease — Gingivitis and its more advanced state commonly known as Trench Mouth — caused 32,672 casualties in Korea in 1950.

Each of these cases required from one to several hours in treatment at a dental installation. The time lost in transportation is unknown, but the total non-effective time can be imagined. This need not have happened!

This disease is preventable by thorough brushing of the teeth and gums after each meal. If, in rare circumstances this is not possible, vigorous rinsing with plain water will help to protect you temporarily until you can use your brush again. Save yourself the discomfort of gingivitis and enjoy the added advantage of helping to prevent tooth decay by brushing the gums and teeth after each meal or snack. Brush up on the lowers, down on the uppers and back and forth on the biting surfaces.

If you have questions about your dental and oral health which you would like answered in this column, address them to Preventive Dentistry Officer, Dental Section, U. S. Army Garrison, Fort Benning, Ga. Telephone: 544-5812.

Lieutenant's Imagination Brings New EIB Test Area

By SFC George McBurney

The imagination of an officer of the 1st Infantry Brigade has resulted in the construction of a new and complete test area and facilities for Infantrymen who compete for the Expert Infantryman's Badge.

First Lt. James L. O'Brien, a member of the brigade since December, 1960, had desired since he joined the unit to develop a new site and improve equipment for the testing.

Late in the spring, Lt. O'Brien, troop requirements officer in the S-3 Section, conceived the plan to develop Peden Field for use in the tests. The former testing area, behind Peden Field, had become run down and unsuitable.

His idea was quickly accepted by his superiors and he began the project. The lieutenant and a number of sergeants did virtually all the work. After clearing off the swampy field and filling in recessed areas with the aid of the brigade engineers, they dug foxholes, set up outdoor classrooms, built and erected map mounting and terrain boards, and obstacle course and a puddle jump site.

Meanwhile, the ambitious Lt. O'Brien had planned a new and improved type of test for candidates for the coveted badge.

The comprehensive Expert Infantry test covers such activities as patrolling, cover and camouflage, military intelligence, map reading, adjustment of artillery fire, demolition, mines and booby traps, hand grenades, field sanitation, first aid, signal communications and military courtesy.

In addition, Infantrymen being tested are required to complete a forced road march of 12 miles within three hours while carrying the normal Infantry equipment except the horseshoe roll.

They also must be able to take apart their basic Infantry weapons and reassemble them in a given time. Then they are required to do the same job on crew-served weapons such as the machine gun, mortar and bazooka.

Each part of the written and practical examination has maximum value of 100 points except the physical training which provides a top score of 500. The total points an Infantryman could score is 1,900, though no one has attained this figure.

Since the first group began the tests in the new area April 21, some 360 men, 90 per cent of whom were officers, have completed all the 15 subjects.

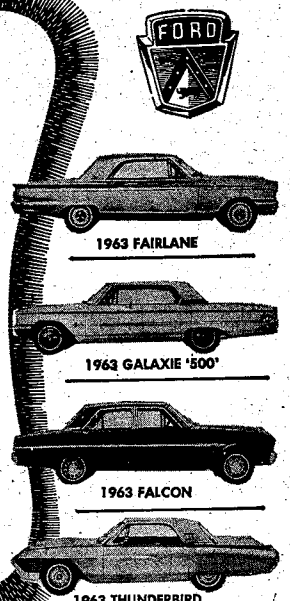
All the testing has been accomplished during off-duty hours, at night and on Saturday afternoons. However, the Infantry Officer Orientation Class No. 3 was conducted during duty hours.

Successfully completing the course which was given almost entirely for U.S. Military Academy graduates, were 189 second lieutenants. Of them, 90 completed the EIB test. All future orientation courses will include the EIB tests.

Lt. O'Brien, who has been in charge of most of the tests, is planning to have future testing staged during duty hours for the men who vie for the honor of wearing the badge.

To be eligible to compete in the tests each volunteer must have a character rating of excellent. An officer must be assigned or detailed to the basic branch of Infantry.

A warrant officer is required to have an Infantry military occupation specialty, and his career must be monitored to the Infantry.



An enlisted man must have an Infantry primary military occupation specialty. All participants must be on active duty or assigned to an active unit in the Infantry.

The volunteers must qualify as sharpshooters or better with their individual weapons or as first class gunners with crew-served weapons if they are authorized to fire them. They also have to be proficient in the use of the bayonet.

In addition to developing the testing site, Lt. O'Brien also devised a kit consisting of training and instruction charts and a booklet, "Conduct of the EIB Test." Part of the written instructions was prepared by the Department of Nonresident Instruction of The Infantry School.

Since the completion of the new testing site and the availability of training and testing instructions, the prestige of the entire program has been widely circulated.

Infantrymen who completed the tests and then were assigned to other units extolled the value of the program to their commanders.

President's Cuban Crisis Report

Nations charter allows for regional security arrangements — and the nations of this hemisphere decided long ago against the military presence of outside powers. Our other allies around the world have also been alerted.

Asks For Meeting

6. Sixth: Under the charter of the United Nations, we are asking tonight that an emergency meeting of the security council be convoked without delay to take action against this latest Soviet threat to world peace. Our resolution will call for the prompt dismantling and withdrawal of all offensive weapons in Cuba, under the supervision of UN observers, before the quarantine can be lifted.

7. Seventh and finally: I call upon Chairman Khrushchev to halt and eliminate this clandestine, reckless and provocative threat to world peace and to stable relations between our two nations. I call upon him further to abandon this course of world domination, and to join in an historic effort to end the perilous arms race and transform the history of man. He has an opportunity now to move the world back from the abyss of destruction — by returning to his government's own words that it had no need to station missiles outside its own territory, and withdrawing these weapons from Cuba—by refraining from any action which will widen or deepen the present crisis—and then by participating in a search or peaceful and permanent solutions.

To Present Case

This nation is prepared to present its case against this Soviet threat to peace, and our own proposals for a peaceful world, at any time and in any forum — in the OAS, in the United Nations, or in any other meeting that could be useful — without limiting our freedom of action. We have in the past made strenuous efforts to limit the spread of nuclear weapons. We have proposed the elimination of all arms and military bases in a fair and effective disarmament treaty. We are prepared to discuss new proposals for the removal of tensions on both sides — including the possibilities of a genuinely independent Cuba, free to determine its own destiny. We have no wish to war with the Soviet Union—for we are a peaceful people who desire to live in peace with all other peoples.

But it is difficult to settle or even discuss these problems in an atmosphere of intimidation. That is why this latest Soviet threat — or any other threat which is made either independently or in response to our actions this week — must and will be met with determination. Any hostile move anywhere in the world against the safety and freedom of peoples to whom we are committed — including in particular the brave people of West Berlin — will be met by whatever action is needed.

Addresses Cubans

Finally, I want to say a few words to the captive people of Cuba, to whom this speech is being directly carried by special radio facilities. I speak to you as a friend, as one who knows of your deep attachment to your fatherland, as one who shares your aspirations for liberty and justice for all. And I have watched with deep sorrow how your nationalist revolution was betrayed by those who would destroy your fatherland, as one who fell under foreign domination. Now your leaders are no longer Cuban leaders inspired by Cuban ideals. They are puppets and agents of an international conspiracy which has turned Cuba against your friends and neighbors in the Americas — and turned it into the first Latin American country to become a target for nuclear war — the first Latin American country to have these weapons on its soil.

These new weapons are not in your interest. They contribute nothing to your peace and well-being. They can only undermine it. But this country has no wish to cause you to suffer or to impose any system upon you. We know your lives and land are being used as pawns by those who deny you freedom.

Many times in the past, the Cuban people have risen to throw out tyrants who destroyed their liberty. And I have no doubt that most Cubans today look forward to the time when they will be truly free—free from foreign domination, free to choose their own leaders, free to select their own system, free to speak and write and worship without fear or degradation. And then shall Cuba be welcomed back to the society of free nations and to the associations of this hemisphere.

Dangerous Course

My fellow citizens: Let no one doubt that this is a difficult and dangerous effort on which we have set out. No can forsee precisely what course it will take or what costs or casualties will be incurred. Many moths of sacrifice and self-discipline lie ahead—months in which both our will and our patience will be tested — months in which many threats and denunciations will keep us aware of our danger. But the greatest danger of all would be to do nothing.

The path we have chosen for the present is full of hazards, as all paths are — but it is the one most consistent with our character and courage as a nation and our commitments around the world. The cost of freedom is always high — but Americans have always paid it. And one path we shall never choose is the path of surrender or submission.

Our goal is not the victory of might but the vindication of right — not peace at the expense of freedom, but both peace and freedom, here in this hemisphere, and, we hope, around the world. God willing, that goal will be achieved.

Five-Cent Stamp Is Traditional

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — When the new five-cent stamp for basic first-class postage goes on sale next Jan. 7 it will continue a tradition that dates from 1847 when stamps were first issued.

The blue stamp carries a likeness of George Washington who has appeared on more than 70 U.S. stamps since 1894 when the Bureau of Engraving and Printing took over the production of stamps from commercial printers.

From that year to the present, says the Post Office Department, a total of more than 405 billion Washington stamps have been issued.

The likeness of the Father of His Country that adorns the new stamp marks a return to the classic style. It derives from the bust sculptured in 1785 by the French artist Jean Houdon. Washington's contemporaries considered it the best of all depictions of him.

The Houdon portrait also was used for a three-cent Washington stamp issued in 1851.

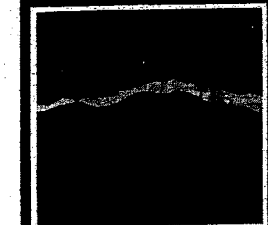
Parents of Faith 5th Grade Class Head P-TA Roll

A fifth grade classroom at Faith School is the first on the post to reach 100 per cent enrollment of parents in PTA, according to officials.



The class, taught by Miss Colleen O'Brian will receive $10 at the November meeting of the PTA.

For a classroom to be 100 per cent, the Fort Benning PTA requires that both parents join the organization. A parent who is overseas is exempt from this requirement.

Several other classrooms are nearing the goal of 100 per cent and are expected to qualify for an award before the next PTA meeting, according to Col. Edward M. Foxworth, president of the organization.

RESULT — Soviet troops invaded Poland on Sept. 17, 1939, setting for only a portion of that nation following an agreement with Nazi Germany.

PROMISE — Rumania's sovereignty was guaranteed on June 9, 1934, by the Russians.

RESULT — A crushing, four - day invasion of two Rumanian provinces was launched on June 27, 1940, while an invasion of Rumania itself came on April 2, 1944. The nation later became a Soviet satellite.

PROMISE — Along with Iran and Britain, the Soviet Union signed a treaty of alliance on Jan. 29, 1942, providing for military use of Iranian territory only until the end of military operations against Germany.

RESULT — At the end of World War II, the Soviet Union refused to withdraw its troops from Iran.

PROMISE — Under provisions made at the Potsdam conference, the USSR agreed there should be uniform treatment of the German people throughout Germany.

RESULT — East Germany today continues to be a rigidly controlled Soviet satellite, with its people being denied free elections — victimized by the same regimentation, police rule and economic restrictions imposed on the people of all the Soviet satellites.

PROMISE — In a Council of Foreign Ministers meeting March 10, 1947, it was agreed that all German prisoners of war should be repatriated by Dec. 31, 1948.

RESULT — Data was furnished the West German Red - Cross reporting the whereabouts of only 20 of the approximately 14,000 German known to be still in the USSR.

The list of broken promises runs on and on. . .through Korea up until the present. Soviet promises that offensive military facilities would not be erected outside of the USSR have proven false, as have promises to restrict the Cuban arms build-up to a defensive nature.

Practically every teenager at Benning has somewhere to go tomorrow night. Brat Barracks will be the scene of a "Snuffy Smif" party from 8 p.m. to midnight. Guests are invited to come "Hillbilly" style and dance to the music of The Abstracts, a popular area combo. Would-be moonshiners are warned however, that "revenooers", in the forms of Mr. and Mrs. Max Spurlin will be on the scene all night.
The Woman's Club building (Behind the Pizzaria, on Running Avenue) will be the haunt of ghosts, goblins, witches and pumpkins as the JADA Halloween party gets into swing. Plans have been made for a fortune teller, a fishing pond, and apple-bobbing contest as well as dancing to old and new records.

FORT BENNING, GEORGIA, HOME OF U.S. ARMY INFANTRY CENTER

VOL. 21, NO. 8 | FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 2, 1962 | FORT BENNING, GA. | 44 Pages — 5c

Honors Ceremony Will Welcome Tripartite Conferees on Monday

IN BOTH COUNTRIES, A TRUE WEAPON . . . Col. Robin G. Montgomery (R), commanding officer of the U.S. Marksmanship Training Unit, points out facets of the M1 rifle to Lt. Col. Ronald J. Wilkerson, assistant commandant of the Royal Canadian School of Infantry, Camp Borden, Ontario. Canadian riflemen recently observed MTU shooting techniques and fired with U.S. shooters for the Brown Bess Trophy. The Canadians will play host to MTU marksmen next year in the annual session attended by top marksmen of both Armies.

A colorful honors ceremony on Eubanks field at 9 a.m. Monday will welcome 60 senior Army officers from Canada, Great Britain and the United States to the Fifth Biennial Tripartite Conference to be conducted here Monday through Friday.

The ceremony will be followed by the presentation of a tableau, "I Am the Infantry," staged at the foot of The Infantryman statue.

Lt. Gen. John P. Daley, commanding general of the U. S. Army Combat Developments Command at Fort Belvoir, Va., will officially convene the conference, which is part of the standardization program among the Armies of the U.S., Great Britain and Canada.

After an introductory address by Gen. Daley, Maj. Gen. Ben Harrell, commanding general of The Infantry Center, will welcome the delegates. Gen. Harrell will speak in his capacity of official U.S. Army host and senior U. S. delegate to the conference as well as post commander.

Responding to the welcome address will be Maj. Gen. P. Gleadell, director of Infantry for the British Army, and Col. William De N. Watson, director of Infantry, Canadian Army.

Morning and afternoon sessions for conferees and official observers will be conducted at Building 2755 B on Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday. On Wednesday afternoon a firing demonstration and static display will be staged at Hook Range for the conferees by the U. S. Army Infantry Board.

The demonstration will include U. S. developmental weapons and other materiel. Only authorized personnel will be admitted.

Other events scheduled in connection with the conference include a reception by the U. S. delegates for the British and Canadian representatives at 6:30 p.m. Monday at the Main Officers Open Mess.

The British and Canadian delegates will in turn be hosts at a reception for the U. S. representatives at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday at MOOM.

There will be an official dinner for the British and Canadian conferees and other official participants at 6:30 p.m. Thursday at MOOM, hosted by U. S. delegates.

Approximately 20 conferees have already arrived on post. Expected to arrive Sunday are 20 U. S. observers representing U. S. installations, Department of the Army, Combat Developments Experimental Center at Fort Ord, Calif.

The agenda for the conference includes future Infantry operational concepts and requirements for equipment, both current and future, to be used by the three represented armies.

Purpose of the conference is "to insure that there will be no operational, materiel or technical obstacles to full cooperation and collaboration among American, British and Canadian armies," according to Lt. Col. Paul E. Nottage, conference secretary and member of the Infantry Combat Developments Agency.

Final Push Is Urged In '62 CAA Campaign

With seven days left in the Community Activities Association Fund Drive, scheduled to end Nov. 9, Fort Benning personnel have been urged to get their "fair share" contributions in without delay.

"As the final and most important days of the CAAF Drive rapidly pass. . .officials are anxiously anticipating a successful and booming conclusion of this charitable three month endeavor," commented Col. Richard W. Keyes, fund drive chairman.

"The post "fair share" percentage has now reached 63 per cent, with a participation figure of 73 per cent," he continued. "The officers of the commanding general, the Main Officers' Open Mess, Inspector General, Quartermaster, Signal Section, Supply Center, U. S. Army Advanced Marksmanship Unit, Command and Staff Department, Data Processing Office and American Red Cross have all received 100 per cent contributions."

The campaign opened Aug. 24 with 900 team captains undertaking the responsibility for canvassing both civilian and military personnel of the post for contributions to the fund.

The aim of the team captains has been to inform the people as to the purpose of the drive. Contributions, in some cases have been far in excess of the estimated fair share.

Extension Hits Navy, Marines

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — The crisis in Cuba has caused the Navy to extend all regular and reserve officers' and enlisted personnel of the Navy and Marine Corps who were scheduled for separation before Feb. 28, 1963.

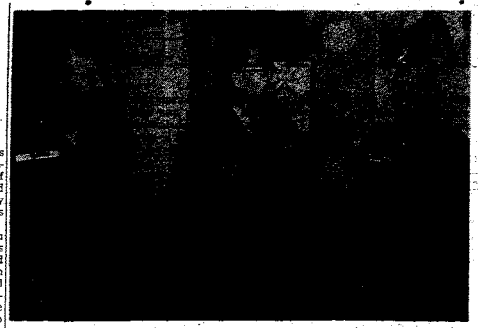
Secretary of the Navy Fred Korth's message to all units of the naval establishment read as follows:

"Under provision of Public Law 87-736, the Secretary of Defense has authorized the Department of the Navy to extend enlistments, appointments, periods of active duty and periods of obligated service. Effective 0600, 24 Oct. 1962 all regular and reserve officers and enlisted personnel on active duty whose periods of enlistment, appointment, periods of active duty, periods of obligated service, or other military status expire before 28 Feb. 1963 are hereby extended.

"Criteria for exceptions will be forwarded separately."

Competition Joins MTU, Canadians

Riflemen and handgunners from the Canadian Army recently completed their week of practical experience in United States shooting techniques by competing for the Brown Bess Trophy.



The annual event between the U.S. and Canadian Armies consisted of individual and team events. Each rifle team consisted of three U.S. and three Canadian Army shooters and the pistol teams were composed of two U.S. and two Canadian handgunners.

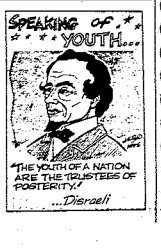
In the rifle event, Sgts. W. R. Lee, J. E. Fallis, and Sp5 E. L. Howell of the U.S. Army, combined with Cpl. R. Ruttan, L-Cpls. J. Mathews, and R. Labrecque of the Canadian Army, to compile an impressive score of 1443-101 v's to capture that event. The "v" ring is a smaller circle inside the bulls-eye that is used for tie breaking.

SFC R. L. Jones and SSgt. F. D. Thomsoe, U. S. Army, and WO-2 R. Buxton, SSgt. L. A. White, Canadian Army, compiled a score of 2274-69 to win the three-gun pistol aggregate.

Sgt. Willie Jordan won the rifle aggregate total with a 546-37. Sgt. Jordan is a member of the Marksmanship Training Unit.

Shooters from MTU will return the visit to Canada next year where they will be guests of the Canadian marksmen.

TIC RE-UP AWARD . . . The 151st Engineer Group has received The Infantry Center Re-enlistment Incentive Award for Outstanding Re-enlistment Effort. Col. Mahlon E. Gates (L), commander of the 151st, holds the plaque given him by Brig. Gen. John E. Kelly (C), deputy commanding general of The Infantry Center. At right is SFC Lloyd R. Cornwell, career counselor of the 151st. The engineer unit was awarded the plaque for re-enlisting the most men in all categories from July 1 to Sept. 30.



Veterans Days Plans Are Slated

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara will deliver the principal address at Veterans Day ceremonies to be held at Arlington National Cemetery on Nov. 11.

(Monday, Nov. 12, will be observed as a legal holiday at Fort Benning.

This is the ninth observance of the country's newest holiday, which is dedicated to peace with honor throughout the world.

John S. Gleason Jr., Administrator of Veterans Affairs and Chairman of the Veterans Day National Committee, will represent President Kennedy at the observance by placing the presidential wreath at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

High School Match Here

Six Tampa, Fla., high school smallbore rifle teams will converge on Fort Benning Nov. 17 to meet an equal number of Columbus school teams in a competition for the TAM-CO cup.

Three schools from each city, which include Jordan Vocation-High School of Columbus, and Hillsboro, Jefferson and Plant High Schools of Tampa, will each send two four-man teams against each other at the Running Deer Range on the post.

Maj. Leon P. Johnson, professor of military science for the Muscogee County School District, will be co-match director, along with Maj. M. R. Beck, professor of military science for the Hillsboro area.

David Ward of Jordan High, last spring's individual winner of the Annual Southeastern Regional Smallbore Match in which some 50 teams competed, is the man to beat in this tilt, Maj. Johnson predicted.

Post Hospital Visiting Hours Are Released

Martin Army Hospital has released its schedule of visiting hours for friends and relatives of patients.

Visitors will be permitted in all wards between 2 and 4 p.m. and 6 and 8 p.m. daily. Children under 14 years of age are not permitted to visit in ward areas unless authorized by the commanding officer or his representative.

The obstetrical section (Ward B-3), children's ward (Ward A-3) and the special care ward (Ward D-2) will be subject to exceptions.

The obstetrical section will be open to visitors between 3 to 4 p.m. and 7 to 8 p.m. daily, with a limit of one visitor per patient at a time. Babies will be shown during visiting hours at 7:30 to 8 p.m.

The children's ward will be restricted to parents of the patients only. Hours will be from 2 to 4 p.m. daily.

In the special care ward, ordinary patients in the recovery room, only for the duration of postanesthetic, will not be permitted to have visitors until they return to the regular ward. Patients who are to remain overnight may have one visitor at a time. Visitors may remain for a time period of five minutes between 7:30 and 8 p.m.

For patients on the "seriously ill" list, one visitor at a time is permitted between 2 and 3 p.m. and 7 and 8 p.m. daily.

When a patient is in critical condition, and in danger of imminent death, immediate members of the family will be admitted at any time, but never more than two at a time.

Tough, Humane Soldiers Sought By Sec. Vance

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Today's Army must be young in mind and body; it must be friendly when the occasion calls for it, but with an adversary, it must be tough.

This is what the Secretary of the Army Cyrus R. Vance told delegates at the 1962 Association of the United States Army Annual Meeting.

"I'm looking for an Army that is young, tough, lean, hungry and alert," he said in the meeting's keynote speech.

A former Navy man, Vance said he was convinced that never in the Army's 187 years has its future looked brighter.

Speaking of the Army's future he said it will require increased mobility. "To gain mobility, the Army in the coming decade will move strongly into the air. We do not intend to take over anyone else's job, but simply to do our own better," he explained.

Where Was Castro? Where Is He Going?

Conspicuously absent in negotiations in the Cuban crisis is the man who alleges to be the ruler of Cuba . . . Fidel Castro. He has termed his nation "independent" and "sovereign."

But, Castro has no power other than what is allowed him by the Soviet Union. And, if the current crisis is any indication, that is not too much.

While Castro told his literally captive audience any observers entering Cuba to survey weapons sites would have to come prepared for combat, Nikita Khrushchev was shuttling notes to Washington proposing the withdrawal of Soviet arms from Cuba under United Nations observation. Whose word will stand as law? Without a doubt if the word of any communist is to be believed it is Khrushchev's.

According to foreign news analysts, it was the hope of the USSR to build Cuba as the perfect Communist nation. Cuba was to receive top billing in Communist advertisements aimed at potential followers in Latin America. It was to be the big red showcase of the Western Hemisphere. And Fidel Castro was to play the role of the hometown boy made good, leading his people to a new and better way of life. This ad will have to be cancelled because intelligent Latin Americans will be basing their decision on fact, not the fiction of Soviet propaganda.
