No disciplinary action in drug program

Deputy Secretary of Defense David Packard has told military members volunteering for treatment under DoD's Drug Identification and Treatment program that they will not be subject to disciplinary action under the UCMJ.

In a memorandum to Service Secretaries, he also said no administrative action will be taken on volunteers that would lead to a discharge under other than honorable conditions solely for drug use.

Furthermore, the Deputy Secretary said, the Defense policy also is applicable to evidence developed by, or as a direct or indirect result of, urinalyses administered for the purpose of identifying drug users.

The policy does not exempt military members from disciplinary or other legal consequences resulting, from violations of other applicable laws and regulations, including those laws and regulations relating to the sale of drugs for sale to others. This is particularly true if the disciplinary action is supported by evidence not attributed to urinalysis administered for identification of drug abusers and not attributable solely to their volunteering for treatment.

Testing started in June to identify service members departing Vietnam who are using heroin. Those identified through urinalysis are referred for detoxification in Vietnam before being airlifted to the United States for follow-on treatment.

'Wizard of Oz' success credited to technical crew, set designs

By Cyndi Lewis

"The Wizard Of Oz," L. Frank Baum's fantasy of the faraway land of Oz, was produced with near professional effectiveness by the Fort Benning Dramatizers. As the final curtain closed Saturday afternoon, equals of delight from the youthful audience rewarded the cast.

The major factor for the success of 'Wizard' rested in the hands of its technical crew. The lighting effects, under the supervision of Jim Hickey, gave a magical quality to the sets designed by Jeff Grandel.

Special effects and well-planned costumes helped the young audience believe that maybe witches and wizards did exist in uncivilized lands. One such instance of special effects and costume-coordination was evident in the scene where Dorothy melted the 'Wicked Witch of the West.'

Clennetta Branch stole the show with her portrayal of the 'Wicked Witch.' It was a truly spooky and realistic performance. So much so, that later, as the characters paraded through the departing audience, one youngster questioned, "If she melted, Mommy, how come she can come talk to me now?"

Very fine performances were rendered by Dorothy's companions on the road to the Emerald City; Bill D'Ella, the scarecrow; Ed Gross, the tin woodsman; and Greig Harbidge, the cowardly lion.

"The Wizard Of Oz" was a very enjoyable experience, and if this caliber of performance is children's theater is what the Dramatizers consistently produce, we can look forward to their October presentation of the Broadway musical, "Carnival."

Libraries' books

The Special Service Libraries have books to help you make-and-keep America Beautiful.

"Garden Book," The American Home: A practical guide for all practicing gardeners — complete from Anemone to Zinnia.

"Rock Gardening," H. Lincoln Foster: A guide to growing Alpines and other wildflowers in the American Garden; and includes suggestions for the use of rocks in the landscape. Includes detail instructions for the selection and placement, grading, drainage, grouping, bank retention, and construction of raised beds and dry walls.

"Keep Your Garden Healthy," Louis Pyenson: A practical guide to help trees, shrubs, lawns, flowers, house plants, vegetables, and fruits, remain free from weeds, diseases, and insects. There are special charts for each group of plants — charts which list the plant, tell what to look for in the way of damage and lists the methods of controlling or eradicating these problems.

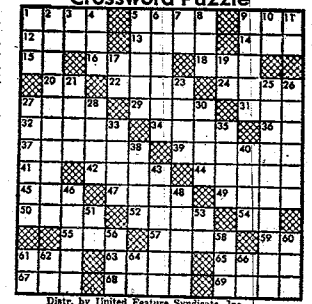
"The Green Thumb Garden Handbook," George Abraham: If your lawn is not healthy and green, here is straight "how-to-do-it" talk and Green Thumb know-how that will make your gardening chores easier, your grounds more beautiful . . . and more valuable.

"House Plants for Every Window," Dorothy H. Jenkins: An up-to-minute revision of "the most popular book on house plants ever written." Covers shelves, trays, and brackets for the window garden; five basic rules of culture; soils, potting, propagation, pests, and summering plants.

"The Max Schling Book of Indoor Gardening," Dorothy Brandon: Everyone who grows indoor plants, and anyone who wants to do so, will find ideas and indispensable practical information in this book. It tells the indoor gardner all he needs to know about moisture, temperature, light and other conditions to keep his plants healthy and flourishing.

"Plant Pruning in Pictures," Montague Free: This volume of "plant propagation in pictures" covers every aspect of pruning, including advice on when not to prune and why.

"The Complete Book of Bulbs," Esther Grayson: A book for everyone who grows, or intends to grow, bulbs of any kind in the garden or in the home. It not only tells you how to succeed with these plants, but shows you how.



"Roses," Wilhelm Kordes: A stimulating book full of fine pictures (black-and-white and color) on "garden design, layouts and especially the home and landscape."

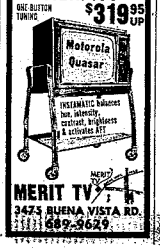
To prove the wetness of Rise, this man shaved without using any water.

And he actually got a smooth, clean shave.

The reason he got such a clean shave is the moisture in Rise®.

A lather needs moisture, needs wetness, so your beard won't dry out beneath it.

And you can't buy a lather that's wetter than Rise.



Slowly it seeps moisture into your beard and holds it there for as long as it takes you to shave.

The point we're trying to prove is this:

If our man can get a smooth, clean shave using Rise with no water, imagine what you can do using Rise with water.

Synopsis

WOODSTOCK (Rated R) is what "Woodstock" was. Capturing those three remarkable days of mud and happiness that seemed to speak for all the young at one time in one place.

Some of the great musical performers of our time bring their unique artistry to "Woodstock": Joan Baez, Arlo Guthrie, Richie Havens, Jimi Hendrix, John Sebastian Sly and The Family Stone, Joe Cocker, Ten Years After, Country Joe and The Fish, Santana, Crosby, Stills and Nash.

"Woodstock," is one of the finest documentaries ever made in the U.S. . . . rock has never sounded - or looked - better than it does in the movie.

FINIAN'S RAINBOW (Rated G) combines Irish whimsy and folklore with social satire and the wonderful music of Burton Lane.

Petula Clark is Finian's (Fred Astaire's) daughter Sharon. There's plenty of dancing, comedy and songs for the whole family.

If all you want out of a movie is a great, big, wonderful time — just follow the rainbow — whistle the songs — and join in the fun.

THE RED TENT (Rated G) takes place in 1928, when General Umberto Nobile (Peter Finch) leads an Artic expedition in the dirigible Italia.

While attempting to turn back the ship gets caught in a blizzard and crashes on an ice pack in the vast glacial wilderness. The survivors battling the harsh conditions of the Artic, find a tent and paint it red in order to attract a search plane's attention.

Norwegian explorer Roald Amundsen (Sean Connery), who introduced General Nobile to the Artic, feels responsible and attempts to find him. Russia sends out the world's largest icebreaker to help in the search.

Claudia Cardinale plays Valeria, a young nurse who hires a freelance pilot to try and find her fiancee who is among the ill-fated missing men.

LITTLE MURDERS (Rated R) is a brutally funny satire which vividly portrays and predicts the conditions of violence that contemporary America casually lives with — and nurtures.

The Newquist family has already lost a son, the random victim of a street sniper, only one of the city's 345 unsolved homicides. Agressive, unbearably wholesome, and endurably optimistic, Patsy Newquist (Marcia Rodd) is the girl-next-door, a successful career woman, who wants to conquer and control her prey, the spineless American male.

Enter Alfred (Elliott Gould), a submissive individual and a photographer by profession. Patsy "rescues" Alfred from muggers and pursues him, determined to mold his character.

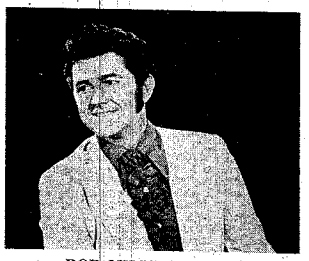
George Gobel to appear at Officer's Club Sept. 19

Lonesome George Gobel heads up the list of entertainers appearing at the Fort Benning Officer's Club Sept. 19.

Gobel, whose comedy routines are familiar to both night club and television audiences, will perform at the Main Club at 8 p.m. and at the Supper Club at 10:30 p.m. Appearing with Gobel will be the Bob Miller Revue and exotic dancer Nora Lee.



Spooky Old Alice and Gobel's guitar are well-known trademarks. Gobel has had several network television series, and, a popular variety show guest, has often been seen with Jackie Gleason, Carol Burnett and Dean Martin.

Tickets, selling for $5.75 per person, include dinner, drinks and the show. Dinner at the Main Club begins at 6:30 p.m. and features Art Digiacomo on the piano and organ. The Supper Club will serve dinner from 8 until 10 p.m., featuring the Randy Englund Trio, and Larry Conklin, vocalist.

Advance tickets will go on sale at the Supper Club Aug. 29 at 6 p.m., where Jack Warner and "Atlantis," of Charlotte, N.C., will provide the music. Capt. Dennis Porsche, assistant club custodian, announced future shows scheduled by the Club. O. C. Smith, whose recording "Little Green Apples," was a national hit, will appear at both Custer Terrance and the Main Supper Club Oct. 24. Jeanie C. Riley ("Harper Valley PTA") is scheduled for Nov. 11, and the popular New Cristy Minstals are booked for Dec. 5. Details will be announced later.

Concert season to open; musicians are needed

The Columbus Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Harry Kruger, will have the first rehearsal of its new 1971-72 season Sept. 7, 7:30 p.m. in the rehearsal room of the Fine Arts Building at Columbus College.

An exciting season is planned, including four subscription concerts featuring outstanding guest artists; three free Family "Pops" Concerts — the first of which is Sept. 26, 3 p.m. at Wernsoba Park; and a free children's concert given at the Municipal Auditorium for the children of the Muscogee County School District.

The orchestra rehearses every Tuesday evening at 7:30 p.m. at Columbus College, beginning Sept. 7. Any qualified musicians, especially string players, who might be interested in playing in the Symphony please contact the conductor, Harry Kruger, at Columbus College (561-5134 ext. 292), or at home (563-4387). For ticket information or information pertaining to the season write P. O. Box 3861, Columbus, Ga., or phone 323-5059.

Lettermen survive by being 'off-beat'

"It wasn't always this way," said Tony Butala of The Lettermen. "I remember our first concert in Columbus, Ohio. There wasn't anyone in the audience."

"Yes, there was" broke in Jim Pike. "There were 31 people in the audience because I used my counter to count them."

Tony accepted the count and said, "Yeah, we were so upset about it that we gave our pay back to the promoter. It wasn't 'til later we learned that there were 10 other things going on that night including an important basketball championship game."

When Tony said, "It wasn't always this way", he was referring to their opening the night before at New York's Waldorf Astoria to standing ovations and rave reviews. And, it was hundreds and hundreds of concerts later where "sellout" has been the rule.

"We've been back to Columbus several times since," said Gary Pike, "and every time it's been a sellout. Matter of fact I think we're due back in there fairly soon. It's one of our better towns."

Since their creation in 1961, The Lettermen have appeared at more than 1,300 colleges and are currently on their 21st cross-country sellout tour. Their very first album (they've made 27) is still selling and there are few dorms or frat houses that don't "stock" The Lettermen.

Why? They are off-beat by the simple virtue of the fact that by all the pop standards they've survived — they've been "square." No rock. No electronics. No underground. They just get up there and sing harmonous — songs people want to hear.

"It's really amazing," Tony told us. "Men and women come up to us at club dates and tell us they fell in love with one of our songs or albums. Those who mention our first single, "The Way You Look Tonight" usually have a family and sometimes bring the children to hear us."

"We decided very early that we were going to be what, we were going to be — a singing group — and we weren't going to follow the fads as they came and went."

It's paid off big. Their back-up men and technicians travel in a bus with the equipment in which the boys figure they've got an investment of almost $200,000. "You should see the burglar alarm system we've got on that. Our production depends on lots of things and our own sound equipment is part of it," said Gary.

"We don't travel any more than 250 miles from one date to the other any more," said Jim. "It's easier on the crew and it's easier on us. In the early years we were traveling hundreds of miles in a little station wagon jammed in with the equipment. I remember that we were always tired and had to really get ourselves up to do our show."

Discipline

"On one hand, we have the several positive and favorable indicators. We would like to believe that these reflect a true picture of the discipline on post," he said.

"On the other hand, a number of key people, to include some small unit leaders, disagree with these findings. We certainly cannot afford to ignore their opinions because in the final analysis these leaders are the key to making the program work."

Another factor has made it more difficult to judge the status of discipline at Fort Benning and that is the Modern Volunteer Army policy that the individual is largely responsible for disciplining himself.

The question of the status of discipline concerns Col. Kennedy and his MVA control staff. It is one of the keys areas that will be closely monitored as the Modern Volunteer Army test continues.

Wage freeze effects both civilian, military

By Cathy Wright

Both military and civilian pay increases within grade have been suspended under President Nixon's wage-price freeze according to 3rd Army directives. Promotions to higher grades, however, will continue with pay increases associated with the new grade.

The Department of Defense has indicated that it will institute no new pay or allowance rate increases in any category during the current freeze. Additionally, longevity increases will be deferred, except to POWs, and hospitalized persons wounded in action, who will continue to receive longevity increases, and other appropriate allowances.

Anyone promoted to a higher rank during the 90 day period will receive pay associated with his new rank, and anyone who qualifies for special or incentive pay, such as hostile fire or sea pay, will receive that pay at the rate in effect prior to Aug. 14.

The military cost of living allowance scheduled for Jan. 1 will be deferred until further notice.

Civilian personnel at Fort Benning will also continue promotions to higher rank, with appropriate salary increases, and all wage and rate schedules with an effective date prior to Aug. 15 will be permitted. Cash awards under the employee suggestion program will also be continued.

Promotions to higher rank as a result of job enlargement, correction of classification error, or change in classification standards will be withheld pending further guidance.

All other regular within-grade increases, as well as quality step increases and sustained superior performance awards, with an effective date on or after Aug. 15 will be suspended. At this time, it is uncertain whether such awards will be enacted following the wage freeze, or whether they will have to be resubmitted. Additionally, there has been no information as to whether or not these increases will be retroactive.

Dates for continued within-grade increases, and for promotions resulting from job enlargements, have not been determined at this time, according to Arthur E. Medlock, civilian personnel officer.

For further information on civilian wage call the Civilian Personnel Office Telephone Answering Service at 545-1592 or 545-4813.

'Infantry' Magazine discusses soldier

What is an Infantryman? How has he developed from the Army of the past to the Army of today, and where does he go from here: This month's INFANTRY Magazine discusses the past, present, and future role of the Infantryman in two feature articles, "Infantry in Retrospect" by Maj. Gen. A. S. Newman, and "Don't Let It Wear Thin," by Lt. Col. Albert N. Garland.

In "Infantry in Retrospect," Gen. Newman traces the changes in the United States Infantry over a period of two hundred years, from the Revolution to Vietnam. He outlines developments in weapons, tactics, and doctrine that have made the Infantryman what he is today. Along the way, Gen. Newman looks at the Infantry as a career, both past and present.

"Don't Let It Wear Thin" looks at the immediate future of the Army in general and the Infantry in particular, taking account the probably cuts in appropriations and force levels which can be expected in the next few years, together with a lower level of public support. Garland points out that the Army has endured similar hard times before, and advises readers not to be overwhelmed by developments in the near future.

Have you ever had the feeling that no one is listening to you? "Ask the Subordinate Commander" is just the thing for you. A copy of this article, tactfully left on the boss's desk, could work for you.

These and many other feature articles, as well as Forum, Infantry News, Career Notes, and the other regular departments, are included in the September-October issue of INFANTRY Magazine, available Aug. 31 at most Post Exchanges and the Bookstore.

By John Davis

Broadway oJe Namath had hardly turned back the sheets in his Lnox Hill hospital bed before New York drumbeaters began proclaiming that the Jets would be just as effective with understudy Al Woodall at the helm.

Substituting Al Woodall for Joe Namath is like Phyllis Diller filling in for Raquel Welch. It's the same as orderingp steak and getting hamburger. It's akin to allowing a .175 hitter pinch hit for Henry Aaron.

Regardless of what the Jets front office says, the 1971 season ended in one agonizing second August 7, more than a month before it was scheduled to begin. Football's golden-armed quarterback, his oft-injured left knee again twisted and torn, limped from the turf of Tampa's new multi-million dollar stadium to be of no more use toh is team until mid-November.

After missing most of last season with a broken wrist, Broadway Joe was attempting a comeback of sorts in an exhibition contest with the Detroit Lions. Namath had just sent Lee White scampering around right end when the big running back fumbled the football. Lions linebacker Lucci, Namath collided with Detroit's Paul Naumoff and his fragile left knee, already scarred by a previous operation, buckled beneath the wright of the linebackers 215 pound frame.

What makes it even more tragic is that New York was ahead at the time 14-0, thanks to Broadway Joe's powerful throwing arm. With five minutes remaining in the first half, Namath had completed 7 of 13 tosses for 116 yards, and his comeback efforts looked good.

Doctors immediately determined that surgery would be necessary to repair the damaged knee, thus giving the green light to Woodall.

It was almost as if history was repeating itself. The Duke University graduate had subbed for Namath last campaign as well, coming off the bench to quarterback the Jets for the last half of the season.

While Woodall's performances was acceptable, the white shoes he had to fill were simply too big. The New York Jets without Joe Namath is like Thanksgiving without turkey or a cowboy and indian flick without John Wayne.

Namath, more than any other performer, was responsible for the old American Football League gaining equal status with the established National Football League.

Fresh off the Alabama campus in 1964, Namath received what was then the largest bonus of any collegiate player in history when he decided to cast his lot with the Jets. New York owner Sonny Werblin went for broke when he signed the Beaver Falls, Pa. native, gambling that the flashy Namath would become a top drawing card, thus boistering the Jets sagging attendance.

That was his first contribution. Joe Willie not only packed the house when the Jets played at Shea Stadium, but also became the top attraction in professional football. Wherever Broadway Joe performed, the people paid to see him.

His finest hour though, came during the 1969 Super Bowl contest in Miami. The cinderella Jets were pegged as heavy underdogs against the NFL's Baltimore Colts, but Namath refused to listen to the oddsmakers.

In what was one of the most stunning upsets in sports annals, the Namath-led New Yorkers shocked Baltimore 13-7, and for the first time the NFL had to pay serious attention to the younger but emerging American Leaguers.

Following his most recent operation, doctors disclosed that Broadway Joe can probably play football again but "probably shouldn't." But Namath, who has already become a sports legend in the nations largest city — and perhaps will be remembered as its most prominent football figure — probably will play again.

Unfortunately for Woodall, fate singled him out as the man to fill in for Namath when in reality an adequate substitute doesn't exist. Woodall could possess the strongest arm in pro football and still not be accepted by Jets followers. He could lead the team to an undefeated season and the fans would still talk about Namath.

Yes, Al Woodall knows exactly how Harry Truman felt when he had to follow Franklin D. Roosevelt into the White House.

Southern Golf Invitational list grows

A total of 58 touring professionals have now officially committed to participate in the $100,000 Southern Open Invitational Golf Tourney to be held at Green Island Country Club, Sept. 6-12.

Assistant General Chairman Sam M. Wellborn III announced the latest 18 golfers to file entries. John Schlee of Palm Beach Gardens, Fla., a sensation of late on the fairways, heads the group which also includes Douglas, Ga. native Larry Hinson, now playing out of Beech Mountain, N. C., and Atlantan George Johnson, formerly of Columbus.

Of special interest to the area is the commitment by Johnson, who needs to win a major title to become the first Negro golfer to claim an invitation to the Masters Tournament in Augusta. Johnson absorbed his first golf lessons as a caddy in Columbus and although he has yet to bring home a major victory this year he has enjoyed some excellent finishes. He nailed down a tie for third in the New Orleans Open, tied for fifth in the Kemper, and only last week at the Massachusetts Golf Classic in Sutton, Johnson tied with Schlee for the top spot at the halfway mark, only to sky to a pair of 75's during the final two rounds.

Get ready

The West German goalie prepares to stop a goal attempt by a Fort Benning player. The action occured last week during one of the three team handball exhibition games played between a tam of West German youths and the Fort Benning Team Handball squad.

The West Germans are visiting United States military installations to promote the Army program for development of Olympic caliber team handball players and team handball interest in the United States. The Germans won the game, 10 to 2.

USAR wins crown

The 12ist United States Army Reserve (USAR) Command Youth Handball Team won four games here last week to capture the 1971 3rd U.S. Army Youth Handball Championship.

The USAR team from Birmingham, Ala. defeated the 120th USAR Command, Columbia, S.C., Ft. Gordon, Ga., and the 108th USAR Training Division, Charlotte, N.C. teams in preliminary games then defeated Ft. Gordon for the second time in the final game for the championship.

Ft. Gordon defeated Ft. Rucker, Ala. twice and Ft. Jackson, S.C. once to gain a place in the final matches.

Seven USAR Headquarters and seven military installations entered teams in the tournament played at Fort Benning's Doughboy Stadium.

Mike Walters, 143rd USAR Trans. Bde., Orlando, Fla. was the highest scorer in the President's Physical Fitness Test administered to all players in conjunction with the handball tournament. Tony Antonella, 143rd USAR Trans. Bde. won second place and Paul Ockoski, 120th USAR Command, Columbia, S.C. placed third.

The physical fitness test team competition was won by the 143rd USAR Trans. Bde., Ft. Bragg, N.C. was second and the 121st USAR Command placed third.

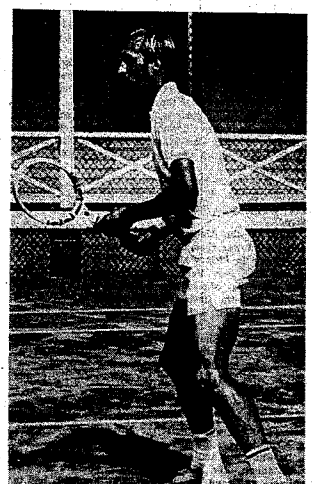
The 3rd Army Championship was the second phase of a program to develop Olympic caliber handball players to compete in future Olympic and Pan-American Game competitions. The United States is committed to enter teams in these tournaments but in the past has not fared too well in the sport which originated and has become popular in Europe but is comparatively new and unknown in this country.

Campbell falls victim to Doughboys, Georgia heat

The Fort Benning "Doughboys" team handball squad maintained their first place position in the Western Division of the 3rd Army Team Handball League with two victories, a forfeiture win Friday (Aug. 20) and a 25-8 shellacking Saturday (Aug. 21) over Ft. Campbell, Ky.

The two wins gave the "Doughboys" a 6-0 won-lost slate in 3rd Army competition.

Temperatures in the mid 90's and superior physical conditioning propelled Fort Benning to a 25-8 romp in the Saturday afternoon contest.



Benning court player Walter Robertson gave the division leaders a 1-0 lead midway through the first half. Player-coach Bill Davis followed with three consecutive tallies while Ft. Campbell could manage but two scores sending the "Doughboys" in front 4-2.

Ft. Campbell managed to stay within two points of Fort Benning at 6-4, but goals by Earl Daniels and three tallies by Franklin Moon spurted the Benning club into a commanding 11-5 halftime advantage.

Fort Benning continued its aggressive play in the second period and opened up a fast-break attack to account for 14 second half scores to round out their 25-point total.

Leading scorers for Fort Benning were court players Walter "Walt" Robertson; six goals — five tallies came in the second period; player-coach Bill Davis, five scores; and Earl Daniels and Franklin Moon with four goals each.

Ft. Campbell court-player Harry Winkler was the only bright spot in Campbell's attack with three goals, but even he fell victim to the Georgia heat and Fort Benning's high-powered offensive attack.

Army champion

All Army Tennis Team member, PFC Stan Smith, practices at Ft. Myer, Va., prior to winning the Inter-Service Tennis competition. Smith won the Riseley Bowl which is presented annually to the top singles player in the U. S. Armed Forces. He also led the Army team which took five out of six titles at the competition. Smith, of Pasadina, Calif., is the second-ranked player in the nation...

Germans top Benning twice in team handball

The Western Division leaders of the 3rd Army Team Handball League, Fort Benning, stepped out of their 3rd Army team handball realm and were upended Sunday (Aug. 22), 14-0, and Monday (Aug. 23), 32-20, by a U.S. touring West Germany team handball squad.

A game relatively new to the American sports scene, team handball was by no means new to the West German club. In the team's Monday night encounter at the Briant Wells Field House, the German team demonstrated to their opponents and the spectators how the game should be played in their 32-20 conquest.

With the score tied at 1-1, the only tie of the game, West Germany reeled off eight consecutive goals and forged ahead 9-3. Fort Benning battled back on two goals by Bill Davis and a score by Earl Daniels. Tom Klein continued Fort Benning's high powered attack with two powerful tallies and brought his club to within two points at 9-7.

The two-point margin turned into a 16-8 West German halftime advantage.

West Germany continued to dominate play in the second period and matched their first-half total with 16 additional scores. Fort Benning attempted a comeback and cut their opponent's margin to seven, 17-10, but the Germans asserted their team handball prowess and forged on to their 32-20 conquest.

Fort Benning court player Tom Klein paced the Benning scoring attack with six goals. Klein was followed in scoring by player-coach Bill Davis and Walter Robertson with three scores each.

The two West German losses placed the only two blemishes on Fort Benning's 6-2 won lost slate.

197th Inf. Bde. supports Talladega '500' race

The 197th Inf. Bde. showed its wares and support during the Talladega "500" Stock Car Race, last Sunday in that Alabama city.

The 1st Bn. (Mech.), 58th Inf., exhibited a recruiting display in front of the main grandstand and four members of the Fort Benning Parachute Club jumped to entertain the thousands of spectators at the annual stock car event.

Every minute for the 30 minutes preceding the race, a 105mm Howitzer fired a salute while the announcer, nailing a countdown. The Howitzer, provided by the 2nd Bn., 10th Arty., was part of the recruiting display. The display also consisted of two armored personnel carriers and a 106mm gun jeep.

The skydivers jumped 2000 feet in stormy weather landing on a twelve-by-eight-foot target which was a representation of the 197th Inf. Bde. Patch. The big "Forever. Forward" patch was painted by artist Sgt. Alfredo Marin, HHC, 1st Bn, 58th Inf.

Leadership in the various categories of the Rod and Gun Club August Fishing Derby changed several times over last weekend. 1st Lt. Joe Bryan, who won the bream contest last month, ended up with the largest fish of that species caught so far this month. Apparently he went to the same spot in the upper part of King's Pond and brought out a 1-pound, 5-ounce catch using red worms for bait.

Pete Swiderek, 2514 Cornell Ave., leads the bass contest bringing in another weighing a little over 7-pounds the firstw eekend of the month. That catch was topped by a few ounces so Pete went out to Harp's Pong again last Sunday and caught a bigger one weighing 8-pounds, 11-ounces. Pete was using a black flip-tailed plastic worm.

SSgt. (ret.) Frank Lach, 4397 Old Macon Road, took over the lead of the catfish contest with a 7-pound, 9-ounce entry he caught at Twilight.

The Rod and Gun Club holds a fishing derby each month of the year open to all members of the club. The only requirements are that the fisherman register his intent to enter the contest each day he goes fishing. Registration must he made at the Rod and Gun Club headquarters, located on First Division Road about one-quarter mile south of Highway 27. All fish entered in the contest must come from one of the post ponds and be brought to the club headquarters for official verification of weight. Monthly prizes are usually 15 merchandise certificates good for purchase of items sold at the club sales counter. The fishermen catching the largest bream, bass and catfish each month receive a prize. The contest runs from the first to the last day of each month except Septemberw hich will be an exception to this policy. The books of the monthly contest will be closed on Sept. 4, 5 and 6, the dates of the Labor Day Fishing Contest. Fish caught during this period will not be credited for the September Derby.

New Deputy Game Wardens

Fort Benning now has 50 deputy game wardens. These officers and noncommissioned officers were officially appointed and received game warden badges during the past couple of weeks.

The deputy game wardens assume these responsibilities in addition to their regularly assigned duty positions. Personnel appointed vary in rank from colonel to sergeant and are experienced sportsmen.

Their appointments were authorized by United States Army Infantry Center Circular 210-2 dated July 2. They have the same authority as military policemen on post and state or federal game wardens when they are carrying out duties as wardens.

They are authorized to enforce regulations concerning hunting, fishing, boating, swimming, wildlife management and littering on the reservation. To do this they have been given federal jurisdiction over all military and civilian personnel within the area of reservation. They have so specified times to be on duty but are considered to be in an official game warden status whenever they are in the field.

Labor Day Fishing Contest

The Labor Day Weekend and the Rod and Gun Club Fishing derby are now only one week away. The club is giving away $500 in prizes during the fishing contest held Sept. 4, 5 and 6.

A special prize, 12-foot jon boat, electric motor and marine battery, will go to someone entering the contest. Members must enter at least one fish in the contest to get their club number in the running for the special prize. The winner will be determined at the Rod and Gun Club grounds Monday, Sept. 6 at 6 p.m. and must be present at that time to bo eligible for the specail prize.

This contest is only for members of the Rod and Gun Club on active duty. Retired military personnel and Department of Defense civilians are also eligible for membership. Memberships along with fishing permits may be obtained at the Rod and Gun Club, located on First Division Road about one-quarter mile south of U.S. 27.

931st flag footballers open season

Preparations are being made for the start of the 931st Engr. Gp. flag football season with the season opener to be held Sept. 7.

The group athletics and recreation officer, Capt. Robert L. Parker held a meeting with unit representatives Aug. 19 to clarify league rules and to get an idea of the number of teams intending to compete.

"As near as we can determine there will be 15 teams this year playing 15 games," Parker said. He also held out the possibility there might be two leagues if enough teams can be formed. That would require a play off between the leagues to determine the group champion. The first and second place teams will then go to the post championship to be held Nov. 5-16.

The group footballers will be playing their games at Bennet Field near Hgwy. 27 and Custer Road. Bennet is large enough to accommodate two fields and will afford a spectator's field day being able to watch two games at once.

Each team will consist of 18 men with only nine taking the field to play. The companies will be called upon to provide their own equipment and to pay the necessary officials out of unit fund coffers.

Special Services will be conducting a coach and official clinic on Sept. 2 and 3 to familiarize the coaches and officials with the rules of the game.

One team which promises to be a real threat this year is HHC, 931st Engr. Gp. which will be under the coaching prowess of Capt. Buford "Buffy" Prater, a former running back from Arizona State University.

Orienteer champion in interservice finals

Sgt. Dale A. Aberle, HHC, 1st Bn. (Mech.), 58th Inf. "Patriots," a man who was told that he might not run again, became the individual Army orienteering champion July 31, at Ft. Belvoir, Va.

Aberle's performance in the All-Army Orienteering Meet paced the Fort Benning team to the All-Army Orienteering Championship and earned him a spot on the All-Army Team which competed in the inter-service finals the second week in August.

A record holder in the mile run at Mobridge (S. D.) High School — a mark that has yet to be beaten, Aberle entered the service for a three-year hitch with the airborne infantry after a year's attendance at Central Washington State College in Ellensburg, Wash. A graduate of the NCO Academy at Fort Benning, Aberle was sent to Vietnam.

While serving (Nov., 1969) with the 173rd Airborne Bde. in Vietnam, Aberle received third degree burns on his right leg. He was told that he might not run again — the decision was left up to him.

For three months he recovered from his injury; then, he was assigned to the "Patriots." Aberle embarked on a redevelopment program for his leg and, after a year of rebuilding, the battalion legal clerk felt ready to test his strength in competition. His first outing resulted in defeat; but, for Aberle it was a personal victory.

Aberle's first competitive orienteering experience came June 22, at the 197th Inf. Bde. orienteering meet. The All-Army champion did not fare as well as he expected — it was only the second time that he had run an orienteering course. He finished in one of the top positions.

One June 26, he entered the Fort Benning orienteering championships and hurtled to a fifth place finish. Aberle's showing in the Benning meet earned him one of twenty-four slots on the post orienteering team. The individual All-Army Orienteering Championship was the eventual result.

Although Aberle did not place high enough in the Inter-Service championships to be selected to compete in the International Military Olympics in Norway, he continues on his redevelopment schedule.

The All-Army champion can be seen running his own cross country course in gym shorts nearly every day.

NATO hears USAIB chief talk on weapons

The President of the US Army Infantry Board (USAIB) spoke at an international conference held at the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) Headquarters in Brussels, Belgium on Aug. 18.

Addressing the NATO Advisory Panel On Operations Research, Col. Charles B. Thomas delivered a paper entitled the development of combat related measures for small arms evaluation.

The theme of the weeklong conference was field trials and acquisition of tactical operational data. The conference brought together representatives of the NATO member countries. Some 29 papers were presented during the course of the conference, only 11 of which were from the United States.

In his introductory remarks, Col. Thomas stated the mission and goals of the USAIB and pointed out one of its fundamental tasks — the conduct of service testing of Infantry material and weapons systems.

"My colleagues and I would like to show you how we protect the kind of neighborhood you want in Florida."

Charles H. Kellstadt
Chairman of the Board, General Development Corporation. Retired Chairman of the Board and Director, Sears, Roebuck and Co. Director, Scott Paper Company; Delta Air Lines, Inc.

Maybe you've already imagined a fresh start in Florida. The sunshine. The sea breezes. The sailfish flying off your line. Gardens and greenery and oranges. A place where winter and summer are only five degrees apart. A place to revive.

But Florida has neighborhoods, too. Problems in your neighborhood back home could even visit this beautiful peninsula. That's why when you're thinking of Florida land, it's good to consider, "What will this community be like in ten years, in fifteen, in twenty-five?"

My colleagues and I, who direct General Development Corporation, are in the habit of looking ahead. We know from experience that we've got to be concerned. We're involved in total communities, in building excellently planned, safe and clean communities that really offer a fresh start for couples of all ages.

You don't want all the houses to look alike, neither do we. So we build a wide variety of designs. We know people have different interests, so we plan and create parks and golf courses and tennis courts. Marinas. Cultural centers.

For the kids there are schools and playgrounds. For the lady of the house, there are shopping centers nearby.

All of these things are planned years in advance right down to the streets and utilities. We don't leave the quality of our neighborhoods to chance.

To our board of directors, the protection of your future neighborhood is of the utmost importance.

We are proud of our communities and would like to tell you more. The information is free. Just send us the card and we'll give you the facts about how you can enjoy General Development's new Florida. We call it our Fresh Start Country.

Assistant commandant welcomed, promoted

Brig. Gen. Paul F. Gorman, new assistant commandant at the U. S Army Infantry School, was welcomed to Fort Benning — and promoted to brigadier general — in ceremonies here Sept. 1.

Presiding at Gen. Gorman's promotion was Maj Gen. Orwin C. Talbott, school commandant and Fort Benning's post commander. The ceremony was followed by a review in Gen. Gorman's honor on York field and an official reception.

Gen. Gorman comes to Fort Benning from the 101st Airborne Div. in Vietnam, where he was 1st Brigade commander. Prior to his assignment with the 101st, Gen. Gorman was a member of the U. S. delegation to the Paris peace talks.

A 1950 graduate of the United States Military Academy, Gen. Gorman has also attended the Army War College and Command and General Staff College, and earned a master's degree in public administration from the Harvard Business School.

Crash fatal to family of five

(L-R) Fred and Emily with their three children Arthur, 3, Becky, 8, and Frederick Jr., 5 are pictured during happier times. The entire family perished in the flaming wreck of their late model station wagon on Interstate 85. They were on their way to visit relatives in Atlanta. Police say it was the most tragic wreck since a similar wreck occurred near Columbus last year. Fred was a soldier stationed at Fort Benning. DON'T LET US PUT YOU IN THIS PICTURE NEXT WEEK. BE CAREFUL. PLEASE.

Off-post guest house facilities expanded by six more motels

By Wendell Cochran

The operation of off-post guest house facilities has been modified and expanded. Camellia Motel, which held the exclusive contract for off-post guest facilities until Tuesday, is now joined by six other motels in Columbus.

Quentin Fagan, the post billeting officer, said basic purchase agreements have been negotiated with Camellia, the Ralston Motor Hotel, Candlelight Motel, Martinique Motor Inn, Colony Inn, Heritage Motel and the Heart of Columbus Motel.

Each establishment has agreed to provide rooms at reduced rates to transient military personnel. In addition, Guest House No. 3 remains open on post.

"We will have far greater flexibility with this arrangement," Fagan said.

A new referral system also has been devised. Formerly persons desiring guest house accommodations went directly to Camellia Motel.

Now, those desiring guest house

'Hey. . .you better hurry up'

By Keith Harmon

"Hey buddy, you better hurry up . . . your meter is running."

That's not the way drivers from the 533rd Trans. Co, 67th Maint. Bn., 901st Engr. Gp, talk to their passengers at Fort Benning, but their work is nonetheless akin to that of taxi drivers. Some 15 drivers, selected for their appearance and courtesy, are chauffeurs for the hundreds of VIP's that visit Fort Benning each year.

One of those drivers is PFC Jackson Beasley, who is convinced that driving sedans is better than driving infantry students in 2½ ton trucks. "I like the job," he says. "The only thing wrong is the cars are not air-conditioned."

Although their chief task is to drive important visitors around the post, Beasley said they sometimes get asked to run what he terms as "off-the-wall errands." Beasley was sent some months back, on a search for a natural-bristle toothbrush. A thorough search of a couple of post exchanges and Beasley had the satisfaction of another job well done.

The 533rd, as does Co. C, 56th S and S Bn., also of the 901st Engr. Gp., provides from two to six drivers a day.

PFC William Marcum, who began driving staff cars six months ago, has been transporting various officials around Benning during the past few

At commissary

Prices may fluctuate

Commissary prices, in some cases, may fluctuate during the President's price freeze, according to information received here from 3rd Army Headquarters.

Commissary prices are generally pegged to a base figure computed during the period mid-July to mid-August. This means certain items could go up in on-the-shelf cost depending on the wholesale cost to the commissary during the July-August period. Seasonal items, such as produce are not affected by the freeze. Details on commissary prices will be furnished patrons visiting the store.

Homework already

These second graders at White Elementary School are preparing their books for homework as the first day of school ends. Approximately 3,500 kindergarten through eighth grade students registered at Fort Benning on Aug. 30. "Be a sharp thinker" is Mrs. Ruth Tessier's message to her second graders.

Small percentage go AWOL for political reasons

Financial, family troubles are the real motivators

WASHINGTON — You may be surprised to know that, when today's soldiers go AWOL or desert, it is for the same basic reasons that soldiers have long given for "going over the hill."

Only a small percentage quit the military scene for political reasons or because of sincere anti-Vietnam feelings. Current statistics show that only about 2.5 per cent of today's AWOLs and deserters are so motivated.

Instead problems of financial or family troubles, or earlier misconduct that led to disciplinary action are the real motivators, the same as they have been since the beginning of military forces. Study of the motivating reasons behind AWOLs and deserters reveal that consultations with the commander, the Inspector General, the Red Cross or the chaplain might have prevented the problem.

Today's news coverage may tend to create the opposite impression, but AWOL and desertion rates now are not excessively higher than might be expected under the circumstances. Over the long haul of Vietnam, less than 2 per cent of the 6.7 million persons who saw some military service between June 1966 and January 1971 stayed AWOL long enough to be administratively designated deserters.

Fewer persons would take what appears to be an easy way out if they only knew more about possible punishments for extended AWOL or desertion or if they knew how long the stigma of these actions can last during their lifetime. Many who succumb to an urge to quit the military scene don't realize either that they may be forfeiting a sizeable legacy in federal benefits earned by honorable military service. Most disillusioning of all usually is the business of living underground in ones own country or as an outsider in a foreign country. Current press accounts indicate that things can get pretty grim whether the place is Sweden, Canada, Mexico — or the good old USA.

Articles 85 and 86 of the UCMJ make pretty clear what constitutes AWOL and desertion. Both are punishable offenses under this code. Further, Department of Defense Directive 1325.2, "Desertion and Unauthorized Absenteeism," provides that when an absentee is AWOL for 30 consecutive days or more he is administratively classified a deserter.

Desertion, of course, must be proved if such charges are made when the person returns to military control. Proved or not, however, it is never a helpful entry to have in ones personnel file.

Such things as the length of time the unauthorized absence continues and stated or otherwise apparent intent to stay permanently in a foreign country contribute to proving an intent to desert. Conviction can result in a prison sentence of up to 5 years, dishonorable discharge, and forfeiture of all pay and allowances. Attempted desertion is a court martial offense, also. Intent to avoid hazardous duty or shirk important service can result in the same maximum punishments as those for actual desertion.

AWOL punishments, although not as severe, still are not to be treated lightly. They can be as severe as a bad conduct discharge, forfeiture of all pay and allowances, and up to 6 months in jail.

Fortunately, an AWOL offender who has been administratively designated as a deserter is not automatically dismissed from the service with a discharge under less than honorable conditions. The soldier who wants to put his military career back on the right road often can do so by personal effort. Current data indicates that nearly 11 percent of those who return to military control after being absent 30 days or more were discharged under honorable conditions.

It almost always works to the person's advantage to voluntarily return to military control. This indicates to authorities that the person recognizes his irresponsible actions and desires to put his record straight.

A variety of civilian and military law enforcement officials can apprehend an absentee or deserter in the United States.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

by Bill Elling

In Japan, one of the leading technological nations, the first appliance a wife often buys — before a washing machine or dryer — is an electric rice cooker.

Mushroom Scramble: Drain canned mushrooms, saving a teaspoonful of mushroom broth for each scrambled egg. Saute the mushrooms gently in butter and sprinkle lightly with flour before adding the egg mixture.

For the tenderest results, choose a steak that is marbled with a little fat, is purplish rather than red and gives in to a little finger pressure.

If a recipe calls for sour milk and you have none on hand, substitute regular milk flavored with a tablespoon of vinegar per cup.

(L-R) BARCH, KIRCHER STAND BESIDE THEIR MEDE-VAC HELICOPTER

Pilots' actions save life of Ranger student

A Ranger student at the Mountain Ranger Camp in Dahlonega, Ga., recently had his life saved by the actions of two 197th Aviation Company helicopter pilots.

1st Lt. Richard G. Barch and CWO William M. Kircher were assigned to medevac duty when they received a routing request to evacuate a student who had been stung by a bee while on patrol. The student had a history of strong reactions to stings, and it was deemed advisable to provide medical care as soon as possible.

The medevac arrived over the patrol long before the patrol could reach the nearest landing zone (LZ). The helicopter circled overhead while the patrol carrying the bee sting victim on a stretcher, waded down a creek which led to the LZ. While the patrol was still a quarter-mile from the LZ, the patient stopped breathing. Because of the extreme urgency of the situation, the pilots realized that it would probably be fatal for the patient to wait to be carried to the LZ. Accordingly, they decided to attempt an approach to the creek, even though the trees overhanging the creek might not allow clearnce for the rotor blades. After easing down between the trees, the helicopter hovered inches above the water while the Rangers placed the patient on board.

During the 20-mile flight to the Dahlonega city hospital, the patient's condition improved greatly, due partly to the injecton given by the Ranger students resuscitation received on the helicopter.

VA extends benefitsto soldiers with 180 days duty

By Tom Tegtmeyer

In December of 1969, educational benefits of the GI Bill were extended to military personnel on active duty. This meant that after completing 180 days of duty, these personnel could receive benefits usually associated with discharged persons for educational advancement.

The GI Bill guarantees to servicemen, whether on active duty or discharged, the right to attend a school of their choice and be paid by the Veterans Administration a certain amount for determent of their costs. The amount paid and the interval of payments depends on the school enrolled in and the amount of hours taken if in a college program. If the student is enrolled in a correspondence course, the payments are made quarterly, that is once every three months, rather than once every month if he was attending college full time. Since the paymens are made at such intervals, the student will have to accept the full costs of the program for at least three months before he can expect to receive any help.

What must be stressed is that the person seeking help from the Veterans Administration to attend a school, must realize that they are entitled to one program under the GI Bill for the completion of their final educational goal. The maximum length of this program is determined by the goal which each man sets for himself on his application to the VA. The total months of GI Bill support is based on the length of service but the soldier, with the aid of a counselor, plans his final educational goal.

He may decide to change his program after it has been approved and he may elect one change of program at his own option. If a second change is required, he must see a Veterans Administratin counselor and prove his need. But the one program limitation applies and this is where the education center's services help.

What those eligible people do is up to them, but by all means, applicants for an education program should talk to an education service counselor before making any contract to a school, no matter how reputable the school or the program may be.

The counselors are experienced in helping a man combine several types of training and schooling into one long range program. They help each man make the maximum use of his service experience, his formal education, tests, and evaluations to each his maximum performance. The soldier may do correspondence or extension work in combination with school training or he may do both college level work and vocational work under the same program if it is required to meet the final goal which he has set for himself and which the VA has approved.

Through the GED program of the United States Armed Forces Institute program, many varied courses are available to the Serviceman in both the vocational and academic fields. Courses are available to applicants for either high school equivalency or college credit, and these are at a very minimal cost. Through the USAFI program, the student pays $10 per course and after completion of that course, can if he wants, go into another. There is no large sum of money spent for a series of courses and the student can stop taking courses at any time.

Project Transition is another way in which the Army sponsors courses for military personnel. A person who is to be discharged and does not have the education or a skill to make a good living, or wishes to acquire another skill, can register in a class which will cost him nothing. These classes are taught by competent civilian teachers on regular duty hours. These classes are available to military personnel who have six months left in the service and who can obtain the permission of their company commander to attend these classes which last from 4 to 6 weeks during normal duty hours. An extra benefit of these courses is that the student involved does not have to worry about room and board expenses.

Byline Bayonet

(Byline Bayonet welcomes questions of general interest about Fort Benning and the Army. Within space limitations all reasonable questions will be answered. Questions of a purely military nature which obviously could be answered more properly by commanders or supervisors within the chain of command will not be accepted. All questions must be signed with current unit of assignment indicated. Send questions to the Bayonet, ATT: SFC Bob Edwards, Room 602, Infantry Hall or telephone 545-4792.

Q—How much additional pay does a Prisoner of War receive, and how are his regular pay and allowances handled?

A—A Prisoner of War is authorized $5 per day for each day he was in this status. It's payable following release upon application to the Foreign Claims Settlement Commission. His dependents receive that percentage of his normal pay and allowances as reflected on his record of emergency Data Form (DA Form 41). Changes can be made on dependents behalf based upon application and review by an Army Board.

Q — How much did the Army spend for research projects at the university level in fiscal 1971, which university received the largest amount of money and what university was awarded the largest number of contracts?

A — In fiscal year 1971 the Army spent $31 million in this category. This consisted of 141 contracts and 272 grants in aid. The largest expenditure was $3.4 million at the University of Illinois. Massachusetts Institute of Technology was awarded 57 contracts which represents the highest number of contracts.

Q — Will the Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services (CHAMPUS) assist with payment for educational services, regular, special and or vocational programs for a handicapped child?

A — Yes, under the program for the handicapped, in-patient or out-patient, CHAMPUS will assist with payment for all educational services necessary to treat or correct the handicapping condition or to alleviate, overcome, or adjust to deficiencies resulting from the handicapping condition. Normally CHAMPUS will not share in the cost for educational services in lieu of suitable and available public school services, nor provide for regular educational services past the high school level. Special educational services are authorized for pre-school age children.

The judge says

Customers' safety required by law

USAIC LEGAL ASSISTANCE OFFICE. When good business leads to crowds, the owner may have special duties to protect his customers. Take the case of Goldie Gormay who went with her husband to a popular restaurant. They were asked to wait in the foyer until their table was ready. The place was jammed with patrons. Leaving the restaurant, one couple happened to jostle Goldie who was standing near the door. Her hand got caught in the door hinge. When the door closed, her hand was crushed.

Goldie sued the restaurant. The trial court said that she could not collect for an injury caused by jostling from other customers. She appealed. The court ruled that Goldie could recover if the restaurant did not act reasonable in anticipating the crowd and possible injury.

A businessman has a duty to make his premises reasonably safe for his customers. If certain dangers are obvious, the customer must recognize them. The businessman has only to act "reasonably." He is not an insurer of safety to his customers.

In another case a restaurant foyer was being remodeled. The place was dark and a bit crowded. The plaintiff stepped back to allow another person to pass. In moving back, she fell into an unfinished open planter box. The box could be seen if the plaintiff had looked. But the court said that in a crowded, dark restaurant, persons are not observant. The owner has to protect the patrons from being jostled, bumped, or stepped on.

The owner has no duty to protect his patron from the sudden unexpected actions of other patrons. The customer who gets into a fight with another customer over a personal incident can't hold the store owner responsible. But if the owner is a contributing cause, for example, by encouraging the fight, the owner is liable.

There may be differing standards of liability as well as tests for reasonable activity. A public utility, like a bus company, owes a high degree of care to his customers. On the other hand, a business that deals only with wholesalers may expect its customers to be more cautious and knowledgeable to look out for their own safety.

VOLAR definition diverse, vague

By H. Parra

VOLAR. How well are these initials understood?

Probably, for many readers, this subject has been brought up long enough. But if you ask an average soldier to define its meaning, their definitions would be diverse and, at the same token, vague.

Some will tell you that under VOLAR, the lawful orders of their superiors are open for debate. Others will take the cynical approach and will tell you that all the improvements made under his program are a mere gimmick designed to "ensnare" young people into the service. Still others will say that discipline has finally capitulated to their demands and that its quality can't be compared to the discipline they encountered while going through basic training.

But how wrong can they be?

For those who'd think that the lawful orders of their superiors are open for debate they are finding that the reality is quite different. Regarding the improvements made by the Army, they were not made to "ensnare" young people into the service. They were made because it was determined that it would improve existing conditions.

If a system of operation is going to be changed, then it must be for something of value.

Discipline has not changed, nor will it capitulate. It's there, just as it was during your basic training days. What has changed is the individual, he is no longer a trainee, from now on he'll be known as a soldier and as such he'll be responsible for his actions, anytime, anywhere.

That's what VOLAR is all about.

What VOLAR is really doing is merely placing the responsibility where it belongs, on the individual's shoulders.

Needless to say, the actions of their superiors will have a great impact on the junior rank's behavior. The leadership required on the part of the officers and noncommissioned officers must be beyond reproach for it is on this echelon that the VOLAR program relies heavily.

Naturally, there will always be individuals with the negative attitude, those that no matter how attractive the life in the service may be made, their obtuse minds will not let them see beyond.

So far this writing may seem aimed for young people only but the fact is that under VOLAR everyone benefits. To the family man, many services are now available to their dependents that were not before.

This writer had an opportunity to use the dental facilities of Harmony Church, and the quality of service and the courtesy shown by the staff were really outstanding.

These are some of the benefits already established under VOLAR, many more suggestions for improvements are continually being taken into consideration.

But despite all the arguments, pro and con, as long as a variety of misunderstandings exist about this program, VOLAR will continue to be explained. Only until we understand it completely and fully cooperate, will its implementation be a success.

VOLAR is a great program that was long over due, all we have to do now is give it a chance.

SFC DOVER (C) DISCUSSES MENU WITH COOKS — Keith Harmon

931st mess hall receives praise for food preparation, services

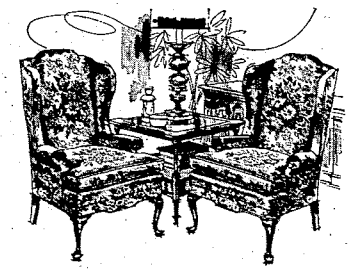
According to an old adage, the way to a man's heart is through his stomach. If any part of that statement is true, then SFC Travis Dover, 608th Ord. Co. (Ammo), 67th Maint. Bn., 931st Engr. Gp., may find himself rivaling many a future wife.

Dover is the ordnance company's mess steward, and since assuming that role last year he has transformed a once mediocre mess hall into an award-winning dining facility. The food is prepared better, and the service has improved, making each meal a little more enjoyable.

Although Dover doesn't claim to be able to compete with home cooking, he and his crew take a great deal of pride in their mess hall and their finished product reflects that pride.

Since the first of this year, the 608th dining facility has been selected by the 931st Engr. Gp. Food Service team as the best mess in the group for every month except May. That month the dining hall of Co. C., 43rd Engr. Bn., was picked as the best of the lot.

According to CW2 Everett M. Howard, Food Advisor for the engineer group, Dover's dedication to his job is the chief factor in making the 608th the best mess hall in the 931st group. "They don't have the most modern equipment of the units we inspect," Howard said, "but the 608th Ord. Co. continually does the best job with what they have."



Howard added "The biggest part (of a good mess hall) is the supervision by the mess steward. If he can motivate the people that do the work, then he's accomplished the hardest part. Supervision and motivation is the real key to the operation of a good dining facility."

Judging by the frequency that the 608th wins the Best Mess of the Month awards presented each month by group commander Col. Robert J. Standley, Dover must certainly be called a "professional" when it comes to the tasks of "supervision and motivation."

Fort Benning tiny tots begin school

By D'Anne Rogers

It takes a person with years of experience as a teacher and a mother to quality as principal of the Pre-Kindergarten program, and that is exactly what the program has.

Mrs. Delbert Leffel, who is replacing Mrs. Gregory Brickhouse as principal, has taught young children for 7 years here and knows the problems as well as the joys of the teachers, children and parents.

"We are looking forward to one of our best years ever," said Mrs. Leffel. "We are, for the first time, able to develop a program of words and numbers and have also purchased new and innovative teaching aids."

This year Pre-Kindergarten is taking children who were born in 1967-68. There are 9 classes in the entire program with the youngest group only having 12 children per class, adding 2 children in October and 2 in November and a maximum of 21 in the older group.

Pre-Kindergarten began Sept. 1 and will follow the same holiday schedule as the regular school system on post. New people can register their children at any time during school hours and will be placed on a waiting list. "The wait is not long usually, due to the frequent turnover here at Fort Benning," said Mrs. Leffel.

Children are accepted for a two-week probationary period. At the end of this time, parents of children who are unhappy or having a problem with adjusting are called in for consultation in order to work out a solution for the child. "The first concern of our teachers and the school is the child," commented Mrs. Leffel, "and we make every possible effort to help them enjoy themselves."

The school has a nurse on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. Children who are absent due to illness can see the nurse for an excuse instead of going to the doctor for one.

The whole Pre-Kindergarten program is totally self-supporting which includes teacher's salaries, administrative salaries and supplies. Fees, which are paid monthly, are $25 for one child or $45 for two from the same family.

Each teacher is supplied with a flannel board, a globe, books, toys and other teaching aids designed especially for children of this age.

The school is governed by the Fort Benning Pre-Kindergarten School Board which, among other things, approves the supplies to be purchased and the programs to be taught.

A typical day in the life of a pre-kindergartener begins at approximately 9 a.m., with cars unloading and children going to their assigned classrooms. The roll is taken and they recite the pledge of allegience. Then they begin work on their projects which include finger-painting, easel painting, nursery rhymes, community safety, colors, animals, music and more. The school has a full-time music teacher with a degree, who visits each classroom every day to give a fifteen minute lesson.

At 10 a.m. the older group goes out for a 30-minute recess. When the bell rings, they line up and go in for refreshments at which time the younger group goes out to play and have their refreshments.

The children begin loading to go home at 11:25 a.m. A teacher is on hand at all times to supervise the loading and unloading of the cars. On Friday, which is "Fun Day" for the children, all the classes get together to sing. Also on "Fun Day", movies are shown and a special treat for refreshments is milk and cookies.

Each month a different theme such as back-to-school, Thanksgiving or Valentines Day, is presented to the children. (Mrs. Leffel remembered that it was the space program that created the most excitement and interest among the children last year.)

Along the fem line

By Carol May

A new feature being planned for the Women's News is a section on cooking and sewing. You can be a part of this project by submitting your favorite recipes and pattern numbers to the Bayonet through the Fem-Line boxes in the commissaries. If you don't mind parting with the picture from the pattern envelope, please include that too. Attach a note with your name, address and phone number and any special instructions or suggestions you may have. This special feature will surely be welcomed with interest and enthusiasm.

Leadership Department

Mrs. Jim L. Hunt was the hostess of the Leadership Committee, Leadership Department, wives' coffee at her home Aug. 24.

Small, bright, yet delicate orange flowers formed the centerpiece on a table spread with hot sausages and pineapple bits, warm raisin-bread and cookies. Iced tea was served as everyone chatted before getting to the business part of the meeting.

Business included bidding farewell to Mrs. Tyrone P. Fletcher, whose husband is leaving the Leadership Dept. to take on the job of director of Personnel here at Fort Benning. Mrs. Fletcher was presented with a small hand-painted plaque and a farewell scroll.

Happier business included the welcoming of Mrs. James D. Williams to the committee. Her husband has recently returned from a tour of duty in Vietnam.

Weapons Department

The officers' wives of the Weapons Department met Aug. 18, for a "Get Acquainted" coffee in the Benning Room of the Main Officer's Open Mess. Mrs. Vernon Aldrich and Mrs. Anthony Martin were hostesses.

Many newcomers were welcomed to the department. Introduced were Mrs. Robert Nelson, wife of the new deputy director, along with Mrs. Anthony Martin, Mrs. George Hooker, Mrs. Richard Holt, Mrs. James Stone, Mrs. Timothy Broberg, Mrs. Gaylord Schaub, Mrs. James Tinley, Mrs. Matthew DeMaria, Mrs. William Page, and Mrs. Francis Drake.

Farewell was said to Mrs. Melvin McCallister, whose husband, Maj. McCallister, will be retiring in a few days.

Special guests were Mrs. William Flaherty, mother of Mrs. Daniel Devore, and Mrs. Heinrich Schmidt's sister, Mrs. Ernst Wencel, visiting from Germany.

The next department function will be a luncheon in October. Hostesses will be the ladies of the Headquarters Committee.

197th INF. BDE.

With summer coming to an end, the ladies of the 1st Bn. (Mech.), 58th Inf., 197th Inf. Bde., had a chance to try new looks in preparation for the new season. At their monthly coffee, Aug. 12, the ladies were presented with a wig and hair-piece demonstration by a wig consultant from a leading Columbus department store. Some amazing transformations occurred as the members of the group tried new hair styles and hair colors.

The coffee was held at the home of Mrs. William McDonald, with Mrs. Robert Steiner as co-hostess. The special guest of the evening was Mrs. Willard Latham, wife of the brigade commander.

Farewells were said to Mrs. Thomas Griffin, Mrs. Joseph de Blanquiere, and Mrs. Richard Gallager. Maj. Griffin is leaving the battalion to join brigade S-3, and CSM Gallager will become the new brigade command sergeant major.

New arrivals were introduced by Mrs. Stephen R. Pawlik. New members are Mrs. Myron Davis, Mrs. Felix de Toro, and Mrs. Fred Heath.

A buffet of Swedish meatballs and finger sandwiches was followed by a short business meeting. Idea for the Christmas Bazaar and the purchase of literature for the Protestant Sunday School were discussed.

An informative talk on ecology was on the agenda for the ladies of the 5th Bn., 31st. Inf. (the "Polar Bears"), when they gathered at the home of Mrs. Donald A. Tapscott for their August coffee. Co-hostess for the get-together was Mrs. William D. Benline.

Lt. Andrew McAuliffe, of the Environmental Management Division, spoke on the importance of preserving natural resources by means of recycling reusable waste. He focused attention on such items as newspaper and glass and reminded the ladies of ways to support programs right here at Fort Benning.

An arrangement of suspended flowers added festivity to the table of refreshments. Punch was served from the beautiful silver Shanghai Punch Bowl, borrowed from its place of honor in the battalion headquarters building.

Mrs. Tapscott welcomed Mrs. Joseph S. Lahnstein as the newest member of the Polar Bear Wives' group. Mrs. Tapscott also welcomed, as a special guest, Mrs. James Gallagher, wife of the newly appointed command sergeant major of the brigade. By presenting Mrs. Gallagher with a ceramic polar bear, Mrs. Tapscott made her an honorary "Polar Bear" wife.

A thank-you was extended to both ladies for their services to the club.

"Diaper Pins and All Those Little Things" was the word at the surprise shower in honor of Mrs. Ronald McDaniel who is expecting the stork in September. The shower, given by G Company, 69th Armor, was held at the home of Mrs. Robert Miller.

Lovely baby things were the setting and Mrs. McDaniel expressed her appreciation for the gifts and a most pleasant surprise.

NCO Wives

The Black Angus Restaurant at the Traffic Circle was the scene Aug. 18 of a luncheon by the NCO Wives' Club members and their guests.

The buffet style luncheon honored two special guests: Maj. Gen. Orwin C. Talbott, commanding general of Fort Benning and the post command sergeant major, John F. Lavoie.

The United States flag, the Infantry flag, the Fort Benning flag, the NCO wives' organizational flag and the General's flag were displayed for the occasion. The receiving line included Mrs. Henry Guilbeault, club president, Mrs. John F. Lavoie, CSM Lavoie and Gen. Talbott.

The program began with the invocation given by Mrs. Charles Brown. Organ music was played throughout the program by Mrs. Gerald Fitzgerald. Mrs. Guilbeault welcomed the members and guests. Floral arrangements of red, white, and blue carnations were used with lighted candles to accent the white linen tablecloths.

Seated at the head table were Gen. Talbott; Mrs. Guilbeaut; CMS and Mrs. Lavoie; Mrs. John Dyer, 1st vice president; Mrs. Clarence Newton, 2nd vice president; Mrs. James Raymond, recording secretary; Mrs. Gerald Fitzgerald, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Donald Case, treasurer; and Mrs. Joseph Todd, assistant treasurer. The ladies wore corsages of red, white, and blue carnations.

The program continued with Gen. Talbott speaking to the ladies about the new Welcome Center and Army Community Service on post. Gen. Talbott urged the ladies to familiarize themselves with the new center, visit it with their families and newcomers to the post, and become a volunteer of the ACS Program...

The president presented three of the members with engraved silver trays. Those who received the trays were Mrs. Charles Brown, NCO Wife of the Year, and Mrs. John Eschler, who are both leaving for Germany; and, Mrs. Robert Smith for serving as the assistant chairman of the ceramic shop.

The president ended the program by thanking the honored guests and paying special recognition to one of the members, Mrs. Donald Case, who spent hours making the NCO Wives' Club organizational flag.

POW-MIA people hear Son Tay vet, former POW

Mrs. Thomas V. Parrot, Georgia state coordinator of the national League of Families of POWs and MIAs, was one of several speakers at a meeting held Aug. 27, at the Royal Crown Auditorium honoring Georgia Prisoner of War and Missing in Action Families.

Other speakers included Lt. Col. Elliot Sydnor, a participant in the raid on Son Tay in Nov. 1970, and MSgt. Dan Pitzer, a prisoner of war from Oct. 1963 until Nov. 1967. Welcoming the speakers and families were Columbus Mayor Pro Tem A. J. McClung, Chaplain (Col.) Albert F. Ledebuhr, USAIC chaplain and Roy G. Lumpkin, master of ceremonies for the evening.

Mrs. Parrot, whose husband is one of about 1700 known prisoners of war in North Vietnam, said that "over 1300 families are unsure" about the fate of their husbands. Mrs. Parrot considers herself fortunate because she has seen her husband, Maj. Parrot, on a national news broadcast in Feb., 1968.

Commenting, she said "at least we know he's alive and although it's hard for us, for him it's a lot worse."

She continued, relating the personal agony and despair and the endless list of unanswered questions faced by the waiting families.

Sydnor, speaking about the raid on Son Tay, said that "the attempt to free prisoners puts them in hunger, but if I were a prisoner, I'd want someone outside to try."

He discussed the intricate planning, training and secrecy behind the mission which ended in disappointment within an empty prison compound in North Vietnam.

Highlighting the evening was Pitzer's account of his four years as a prisoner of the Viet Cong. Pitzer, who is currently assigned to the information office of the John F. Kennedy Warfare Center in Ft. Bragg, N.C., considers the greatest problem for captured Americans to be the enemy's total disregard for the Geneva Convention and similar international agreements on war conduct.

"As far as our POWs go, we're in a bind in getting them out of there," according to the Green Beret. "This is an undeclared war, and they carry you as a political prisoner."

"You're not a prisoner of war, so they don't feel an obligation to the Geneva Convention, which the North Vietnamese have signed. They consider you a criminal against the Vietnamese."

Calling his confinement "inhuman, subhuman . . . more like keeping an animal caged than a human being," Pitzer recalled the frustration, agony, pain and filth he encountered as a prisoner of a culture that considers capture to be a disgrace to a family, military and country.

Because of this attitude, they believe that America really does not want its POWs back; "they think they don't want to go back."

According to Pitzer, "it will take a strong indication of American feeling to change this."

The wives enjoyed a light luncheon and then proceeded with the business of the month. Of major importance was the forthcoming activities and Christmas Bazaar of OWC. Also discussed were suggestions to improve commissary service and products.

A list of suggestions for the commissary has been placed in the OWC box in the commissary in hopes that the improvements will be considered. The ladies were also informed of "Operation Toy Shop" sponsored by the Army Community Service and the Provost Marshal Division.

The officers' wives of te 197th Avn. Co. enjoyed their monthly coffee in the home of Mrs. Peter Gallimore. Mrs. Michael Reeve and Mrs. George Bedsole also assisted as hostesses.

Mrs. Jon Stillman conducted the business meeting and reminded the women of the forthcoming OWC tea on Sept. 8, and of the Projects which the command will make for the Christmas Bazaar. Of interest to the ladies is the ecology seminar being offered by OWC, since their group was instrumental in the formation of this project.

Cupid wins on post

It looked like a sure defeat for Cupid, but as mythology would have it, the little bowsman triumphed over all.

When Capt. Buford Prater, communications officer of the 93ist Engr. Gp., discovered he was scheduled for duty on the night of his fourth wedding anniversary he was indeed a little depressed. He and his wife Sharon were married Aug. 18, 1967, and they had planned a little celebration for the two of them on the fourth birthday of their marriage.

But the Praters were not alone in their disappointment. Capt. Robert S. Poe, also of group headquarters, found he was scheduled for staff duty officer on Aug. 17, the same day he was married to his wife Sue in 1968. It looked like their plans for their third wedding anniversary also had to be cancelled.

But, Prater and Poe swapped duty nights, and families Prater and Poe celebrated their respective anniversaries. And Cupid, if you believe in such things, floated away with heart a-flutter, taking full credit for another happy ending.

Officer student receives $100, Thinker from CDC

Capt. Peter J. McGregor, of Burlington, Vt., a student in the Infantry Officers' Advanced Course 6-71, was awarded a Certificate of Achievement, $100, and a statuette of Rodin's Thinker by Maj. Gen. Orwin C. Talbott in ceremonies held Aug. 20.

The Creative Thinking Award Program, established by the U.S. Army Combat Development Command and administered at Fort Benning through the Infantry Agency, is designed to encourage meaningful contributions to combat developments efforts from Army officer-students in advanced courses at branch and service schools.

McGregor's recommendation involved implementation of a "Strategic and Tactical Delivery System for Operational Rotary Winged Aircraft" (STADSOR) which would provide the ground commander with rotary winged assets in the objective area during initial employment of STRAC (Skilled, Tough, Ready Around the Clock) forces in world contingency missions.

Through STADSOR, cargo aircraft, within limitations of speed, distance and altitude, could airlift helicopters to the objective area for in-flight launch and use within their operational ranges.

712 choose 197th under 'unit-of-choice'

"Unit-of-choice" recruiting for the 197th Infantry Brigade totaled 282 new recruits in the first two-weeks of August. Of this number, 194 signed up specifically for the 197th.

Some 1200 men have been recruited by the brigade teams between February and Aug. 23. Of these, 712 chose service with the 197th, 167 choe service with other units and 325 selected options other than armor, artillery or infantry.

The 1st Bn. (Mech.), 58th Inf. led the brigade in recruiting during the period Aug. 1-23 by signing up 54 young men for service in the 197th. The 2nd Bn., 10th Arty., was responsible for the enlisting of 53 men, and 37 individuals wre recruited by the 197th Support Bn.

Thirty-one were recruited by the 1st Bn., 29th Inf.; and 19 new recruits were enlisted by the 5th Bn., 31st Inf.

Under the unit-of-choice option plan a man can enlist with the guarantee of spending 16 months in the brigade after his initial training. The 16-month plan is in effect until Sept. 30. The Department of the Army will then study the new option after the first quarter of FY 1971 to see if it should be continued.

If a new recruit chooses to enter on the delayed entry program he must have an active duty date prior to Sept. 30 to take advantage of the new option. Under the old option, an individual could enlist for the 197th for a minimum guarantee of six months service with the brigade.

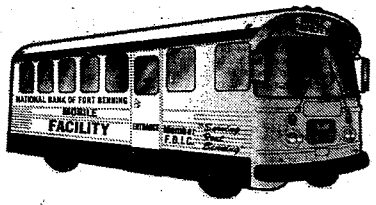
Accident Prevention, Labor Day



Labor Day has become one of our most significant holidays. The Labor Day weekend is a time when numbers of people are away from home on trips to the seashore, the mountains, or some other vacation spot. Many are taking their last vacation of the season.

As is true of any holiday or boliday period, accidents are numerous. The majority of these fall into two categories — those resulting from motor vehicles and those involving water sports. Don't let an accident spoil your holiday. Obey all safety rules and take every precautionary measure to avoid obvious hazards. Remember, accident prevention is up to YOU.

There are many local attractions, including those on post sponsored by Special Services and Youth Activities. I urge you to enjoy them. They are convenient, less expensive, and sometimes more satisfying than a hurried trip to some distant place.

Whatever you do during this Labor Day weekend, STAY ALERT — STAY ALIVE.

Advance Course Writing Program slates changes

There are some challenging changes in the Advance Course Writing Program. The program, developed by the Management Committee of the Leadership Department, now includes a military letter, a staff study, a memorandum and a monograph.

Beginning with Advanced Class 1-72 each student will write a military letter requesting a topic for their staff study. The staff study will be a problem solving paper. The topic must be selected from a pre-established list.

The memorandum will request a topic for the monograph. The monograph is to be equivalent to a thesis in length and in depth of scholarship. The subject of this paper can be any military related topic.

The purpose of this new program is to provide the student with the opportunity to conduct extensive research in a field of his choice and to develop a life long interest in that subject. It will also give the USAIS an opportunity to evaluate the students' ability to express himself in writing.

Army teams help detect horse sleeping sickness

The Army is providing surveillance teams to assist the U.S. Public Health Service in detecting the spread of Venezuelan Equine Encephalomyelitis (VEE), the mosquito-borne disease occurring primarily in horses.

The virus, known as horse sleeping sickness, has recently spread northward from Mexico into some of the southern states, killing thousands of animals and infecting some humans.

Army survey teams use battery-operated light traps with dry ice as an attractant. The mosquitoes are attracted to the carbon-dioxide given off by the dry ice and are drawn into a bag by the suction of an electric fan. A single trap can collect several thousand mosquitoes in one night.

The mosquitoes are sent to the 5th Army Medical Laboratory, Ft. Sam Houston, Tex., where they are identified as to species. They are then shipped by air to the U.S. Army Medical Research Institute for Infectious Diseases, Ft. Detrick, Md., for attempted virus isolation.

Developed largely through the efforts of Army Medical Department scientists, millions of doses of the vaccine against VEE have been provided for horse inoculation since 1968 to Colombia, the Central American countries and Mexico.

65 employes join club

Sixty-five employes of the Supply Division, Directorate of Industrial Operations, US Army Infantry Center, have become members of a new club that has been established at Fort Benning by Lt. Col. Charles W. Rock, recently assigned as Chief of the Supply Division.

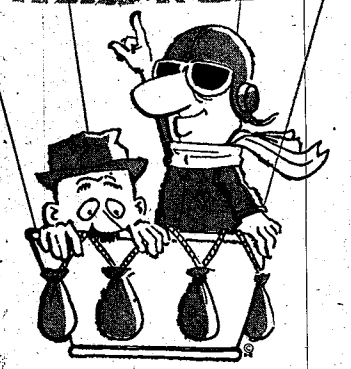
Five employes are now members of the 2,000 Hour Club; Joseph B. Batastini, William L. Durham, Grover M. Inglett, Eddie L. Dixon, and Flavious W. Kelley.



Sixty employes have become members of the 1,000 Hour Club.

Events ranging from an exhibition parachute jump to a greased pig contest are also scheduled as part of the picnic events.

Sports enthusiasts will enjoy the running of the 197th Olympic's.

Economical, balanced meals target of ACS pilot program to help troops

Army Community Service (ACS) is able to help eligible servicemen and their families stretch their food dollars and provide more economical and balanced meals according to Maj. Donald A. Myles, Chief of ACS.

The new ACS pilot project will provide on-post application and certification facilities for the Department of Agriculture's two food service programs — the Food Stamp and Food Surplus Commodities Programs. In cooperation with Russell County, Ala., and Muscogee County, Ga., ACS will assist eligible personnel in applying for these programs.

The Surplus Commodities Program is the food service program for Muscogee County. The purpose of the program is to provide staple food products free of charge to eligible families and thereby increase their buying power. Generally provided on a monthly basis, staples include flour, meal, rice, oatmeal, cornmeal, butter, peanut butter, canned fuits or juices, powdered milk and other items.

Muscogee County, through its expanded nutrition program will provide wives of servicemen who qualify with special recipes and, upon request, send trained aides to homes of participants to demonstrate them using the supplemental foods to prepare wholesome meals. Recipes and demonstrations are free of cost under the county's program.

A final decision on the Russell County Food Stamp Program is expected by Sept. 8. Servicemen who are residents of Russell County could be eligible for the program which operates on a cash basis. Eligible families purchase a set amount of stamps determined by their family income and size which can double or triple their food buying power in the commissionary or local participating supermarket.

ACS personnel and county agency teams will be available to interview applicants and assist in filing the necessary forms for servicemen in Muscogee County eligible for the Food Stamp Program have not yet been determined pending action on the program.

A Muscogee County serviceman may be eligible for the Surplus Food Stamp Program if he is an E-1 with two children; E-2 with three; E-3 with four; E-4 with five; or E-5 with eight children.

A serviceman in Russell County could be eligible for the Food Stamp Program if he is an E-1 or E-2 with one child- an E-3 with two; E-4 with three; or E-5 with five children.

Anyone who may qualify can apply in person at the Army Community Service Office, Bldg. 35, or call Capt. Donald F. Gilbert, 1st Lt. Kevin J. Hendrickson or PFC George E. Robinson at 545-1233 or 545-1633.

Chances are you probably have Serviceman's Group Life Insurance; $15,000 coverage for $3 a month, guaranteed by the U.S. Government. You know it's a good beginning for your total insurance program. But do you know about the other low cost group life insurance program for officers?

As a member of the Armed Forces Relief and Benefit Association, you'll receive an additional $20,000 group life insurance coverage plus member benefits. It's a logical step when you're building your insurance program. Take a minute now and see why.

Here are the AFRBA facts.

Low-Cost Life Insurance
As an AFRBA member, you receive $20,000 group life insurance coverage for just $9 a month, $12.50 a month if you're a flying officer. And, annual refunds reduce the cost to members even more.

AFRBA's low cost plus the refunds reduced the annual net cost for each thousand dollars of insurance in 1970 to just $2.95; $5.24 for flying officers. Compare this cost per thousand of group life insurance and you'll find out why AFRBA is one of the largest organizations of its kind in the world. All AFRBA members have the same coverage, regardless of age, rank, length of service or duty station.

Worldwide Coverage
No war restriction once you join.

Emergency Death Benefit
Immediate payment of $2,000 upon notification of death.

Optional Dependents Program
For just $1.50 a month, you can cover all of your eligible family members.

Continuous Record of Refunds
Each year since AFRBA was founded in 1947, active duty members have received a refund. Although they cannot be guaranteed, refunds are determined by the Board of Directors based on the year's operations and the dividends received from the Underwriters.

Educational and Emergency Loans
Members are eligible for low interest (simple 5% interest) loans for educational and emergency purposes.

Retired and Separated Program
AFRBA has a special program for members when they retire or separate after at least one year of active duty membership.

Here's How To Join. If you're a commissioned or warrant officer on active duty, in good health, and not presently receiving hostile fire pay or under orders to a hostile fire area, you're eligible to join now. (After you become a member, your insurance coverage is in effect regardless of where you're stationed or the cause of death.)

There are many associations and organizations which can sell you insurance; but there's only one Armed Forces Relief and Benefit Association. Get all the facts. Just mail this coupon today. No obligation; no salesman will call. You'll soon see why 68,000 Armed Forces officers have chosen AFRBA to round out their insurance and benefit program.

Lawson weathermen provide information on local conditions

By Mark Riener

Work is purely routine for the 10th Detachment of the 16th Weather Squadron stationed at Lawson Field until the weather turns foul, then their life gets interesting. The weather inside a circle extending from Atlanta in the north to south of Dothan and east from Macon to west of Montgomery is the direct responsibility of these men. In the future perhaps the weathermen could alter the weather; however, now they man their office 24 hours a day to provide weather information of the entire United States not just the local flying area outlined above.

The detachment consists of about eight weather observers, four weather forecasters, and three maintenance men. The observers do just that, observe the weather. Their office is on the eighth floor of the control tower where they monitor the weather with a battery of specialized meterological equipment. These men measure the wind speed, direction, and other observable information in the vicinity of Lawson Field. The maintenance specialists repair and keep the myriad of equipment running. Their work spans the gamut from relatively simple mechanical instruments of their FPS-77 severe weather radar which measure the position, height, and range of storms likely to produce rain. Both of these groups of men support the forecasters who combine all of the information from the observers as well as teletype information coming in continually from all military bases in CONUS and use it to compile and issue a 24 hour weather forecast three times daily. The forecasters also issue preflight weather briefings and clearances to pilots can submit their light plans. The forecasters also update three times daily a recorded 24 hour weather forecast available to everyone by calling 545-5281.

The 16th Weather Squadron has its headquarters at Ft. Monroe, Va. This squadron supplies weather personnel for all CONUS Army airfields and is part of the 5th Weather Wing which supplies personnel for all military CONUS airfields.

CHAMPUS offers eligible beneficiary wide range of civilian health services

Offices are now being established at Army installations to provide information and assistance to beneficiaries of the Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services (CHAMPUS).

CHAMPUS offers retirees and eligible dependents of service members a wide range of civilian health care services which are paid for in large part by the government. DA Circular 40-78 assigns local responsibility for providing CHAMPUS information and assistance to the medical facility of each Army post, camp and station.

On an installation where no medical facility exists, another responsible office will be designated to provide beneficiaries with information and assistance. These offices will receive assistance from the nearest medical facility and the Office for the Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services (OCHAMPUS) in Denver.

Each CHAMPUS advisor will maintain information materials, coordinate a local information program and provide counseling to beneficiaries and their sponsors.

Alcohol beverage transportation polices set on USAF aircraft

WASHINGTON — The Air Force has established new policy on the transportation of alcoholic beverages by individuals aboard USAF aircraft.

Before transporting alcoholic beverages in a USAF aircraft, an individual should determine the amount he may legally transport from the state where the flight originates (military or civilian airport), through any en route stops, and at destination.

In no instance will an individual, passenger or crew member, be allowed to transport an amount in violation of any state law; and under no circumstances will he transport more than one gallon of alcoholic beverages.

The term USAF aircraft includes aircraft under charter or contract to the USAF. Military members and civilian employees violating these provisions may be subject to disciplinary action.

Bulk shipment of alcoholic beverages pruchased from distributors, wholesalers, and other commercial outlets for clubs, messes and other instrumentalities will not be made aboard a USAF aircraft, except when that is the only mode available to meet the requirement.

These policies do not affect present procedures for shipment of these commodities for religious and medical purposes. Such shipments are controlled by the air eligibility criteria of each service and authorized in accordance with applicable regulations.

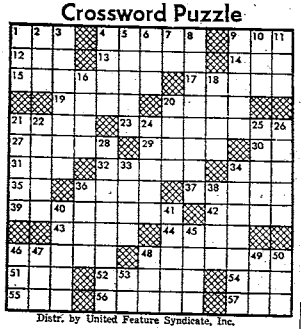
Less sex in Meyer's newest film

"The Seven Minutes" represents a departure for producer-director-writer Russ Meyer in several ways. After producing 19 low cost sexploitation films (top budget was $90,000) which were tremendously successful and so well made that one major critic described Meyer as "the best craftsman and only artist in this field," Meyer was signed by 20th Century-Fox where he created "Beyond the Valley of the Dolls." This film more-or-less followed Meyer's approach in his earlier offerings in that it was lusty, exaggerated, violent, with an added quality of camp humor.

With this background, Mr. Meyer has had plenty of experience with censorship, making him ideally suited for "The Seven Minutes," which is a study of a hypocritical employment film in the areas of sex, nudity and violence although the various characters operate within the framework of today's permissiveness. And, of course, in a story about censorship and alleged pornography there must be something sufficiently provocative to make a prosecution for obscenity a reasonable possibility. However, Meyer makes his point seriously and in this film declined the broad, bawdy, humor that has marked his previous work.

"The Seven Minutes" will be showing soon at a local theater.



Another innovation for Meyer was his making "The Seven Minutes" with experienced actors. Even "Beyond the Valley of the Dolls," his most ambitious previous project, had only a scattering of pros with the vast majority of the cast virtual newcomers. The cast of "The Seven Minutes" ranges from such old pros as Yvonne DeCarlo, Philip Carey, Jay C. Flippen, Lyle Bettger and John Carradine to a pair of relative newcomers, Wayne Maunder and Marianne McAndrew, in the leading roles.

"The Seven Minutes" marks Wayne Maunder's debut in a feature film, though he has starred in two TV series, "Lancer" and "Custer," and has done extensive Shakespeare acting in the American Shakespeare Festival.

Marianne McAndrew first attracted movie attention as the pretty milliner in "Hello Dolly" and was promptly typed as a musical comedy performer. This was rather devastating as Hollywood is no longer making any musicals. In "The Seven Minutes," she has a straight dramatic role and even gets to play a nude scene after being covered from feet to chin in "Dolly."

"The Seven Minutes" is about the censorship problems of a ficticious novel called "The Seven Minutes" by a ficticious writer named J. J. Jadway.

Dramatizers to begin new season

By Edith Simmons

Can you play a musical saw? Do an "old soft shoe?" Recite old limericks? Or, hammer, paint, saw, tote, fetch, sew, and work odd hours? If you can do any of these things the Benning Dramatizers are looking for you.

The Dramatizers are military personnel, dependents, and civilians who give their spare time to the theatre. Always alert for new talent and ideas, they encourage you to stop by the Playhouse, Bldg. 1237 any Monday at 7:30 p.m. Experience is not necessary because the group is composed mainly of amateurs who are learning theatre as they go.

To start the new season, several projects are planned.

First is a work party the weekend of Sept. 11. The afternoon will be devoted to cataloging flats, packing costumes, restocking makeup, and cleaning the theatre. If you have some spare time, drop by and get acquainted — but be prepared to work.

All of this must be done before the first production of the season can get into full swing. The show will be the musical "Carnival." All the parts are not filled and people are always needed backstage, so come.

As part of the learning process of theatre work, the Dramatizers will hold classes in all aspects of the theatre. A definite time has not been set but these classes will be free and open to anyone who is interested. Watch for further announcements.

New officers have just been elected. Serving as president is Jeff Grandel; vice-president, Joann Blanks; secretary, Jessica Hickey; ticket sales chairman, Jose Garcia; and publicity chairman, Edith Simmons.

It's a lot of work, but it's a lot of fun too. If any of this interests you, come by Building 1237, any Monday evening at 7:30 p.m. and join in.

Synopsis

DR. NO (Rated GP). It is James Bond's (SEAN CONNERY) job to find out what's going on in the highly-secret island hideaway of the brilliant if megalomaniac Dr. No (JOSEPH WISEMAN). But first he finds Honey (URSULA ANDRESS) a gorgeous child of nature.

They discover it is the doctor's intention to blow up Cape Kennedy as a prelude to some more sinister surprises he has in mind for the human race.

Honey and Bond are captured and marked for execution. But they manage to escape. And just in time too. For in one gigantic explosion, engineered by Bond, Dr. No, his invention and the threat it poses to mankind, are eradicated forever.

WILD ROVERS (Rated GP) takes place in the 1880's when two simple cowhands, who really don't want to hurt anyone, decide to rob a bank and head for Mexico to make their dreams of an easy life a reality.

Two time Oscar winner William Holden and Ryan O'Neal star as two different generations of cowboys who nevertheless become great friends and partners in the crime.

Karl Malden stars as their boss, a rancher who feels the bank robbery is a personal affront, and sends his two sons after the lawbreakers.

"Wild Rovers" calls for a chase across half the American southwest set against the scenic backgrounds of Monument Valley, the Colorado River, the red-rock country of Arizona, and the snow country in the mountains near Flagstaff.

I NEVER SANG FOR MY FATHER (Rated GP). Writer-teacher Gene Hackman welcomes aged parents Melvyn Douglas and Dorothy Stickney back from a Florida vacation.

Douglas, a self-made man of 80, refuses to acknowledge any lessening of his abilities. Hackman always has tried to gain his father's love and respect, but Douglas, who hated his own father, never told his son he needed him.

When Stickney dies of a heart attack, banished daughter Estelle Parsons comes back East for the funeral. She urges Hackman to assert himself and tell Douglas he's going to marry Elizabeth Hubbard, a gynecologist and live in California.

Hackman thinks he can finally reach his father, but the two have a bitter scene. Hackman is left with the growing strain in his relations with his father as he weighs his responsibility towards him in his declining years.

B.S. I LOVE YOU (Rated R) is a blend of madcap comedy, bittersweet romance and an examination of a youthful personality in transition to adulthood.

The story concerns a young man (Peter Kastner) who leaves his home in Connecticut, leaving behind his parents and high school sweetheart, to take a job with a New York advertising agency as a producer of TV commercials.

CAT O' NINE TAILS (Rated GP) revolves around series of savage and mysterious murders.

Co-starring Karl Malden, Catherine Spaak and James Franciscus, the new high-tension-thriller is guaranteed to keep audiences guessing right down to the last second of suspense.

To preserve the ecology

Army converts waste into food, fuel

An Army discovery may contribute significantly to future efforts to preserve the ecology.

Scientists at the U. S. Army Natick (Mass.) Laboratories have developed a method of converting waste paper to useful products such as food and fuel — without contaminating the air in the process.

The scientists developed the process for exzymatic conversion of waste paper to glucose sugar under the Army In-House Laboratory Independent Research Program.

The process uses discarded cellulose, which is the major component of cardboard boxes, paper bags, correspondence paper, newsprint and any other product made from wood pulp.

The product of the process is glucose, which can be consumed by man, fed to animals as molasses, or converted to single-cell protein such as yeast.

Fermentation can convert it into alcohol (a clean-burning fuel), industrial solvents such as glycerol, or into amino acids or vitamins that can be added as supplements to foods deficient in those compounds.

Army scientists estimate that a 15-gallon reactor would have a conversion rate of one ton of cellulose to one ton of glucose per year.

Much of the basic design engineering for the conversion of cellulose to glucose sugar exists in the starch industry, which uses enzymatic hydrolysis to convert hundreds of thousands of tons of starch annually to glucose. The source of this starch has generally been corn.

Selective retention of enlisted is goal of qualitative management

A qualitative management program has been recently implemented by the Department of the Army to enhance the quality of the career enlisted force.

The program provides for selective retention of personnel, improved career progression and denial of reenlistment to the nonproductive and non-progressive. Individuals must how demonstrate potential and efficiency to be eligible to remain in the Army as a career soldier.

The two-part program consists of a qualitative control portion in which failure to attain an established optimum number of promotion points for each enlisted grade as specified in Chapter 4, AR600-200, results in denial of reelistment.

The second portion, qualitative screening, involved identification of low quality and low potential personnel with subsequent consideration by a review board. Department of the Army data from the Enlisted Master Tape Record and the Enlisted Evaluation Center are used to identify those to be evaluated fur reenlistment eligibility prior to ETS.

Personnel identified in grades E-7, E-8 and E-9 are considered by a Department of the Army Review Board while grades E-5 and below are considered by a Field Review Board convened by general court martial authority.

Only those personnel denied reenlistment are notified. All board decisions are final.

In review sessions already convened, personnel identified in grades E-7, E-8 and E-9 with ETS between January 1 and June 30, 1972 and those in grades E-6 and below with ETS between January 1 and February 29, 1972 were screened.

According to tentative plans, the Department of the Army Board will convene semi-annually and the Field Board more frequently. The program is expected to continue indefinitely.

SPORTS

Southern Hospitality

Although the official title reads Southern Open, many of the top name golfers who will converge on Columbus next week will probably vote to change the name to the Southern Hospitality Open.

The touring pros will receive nothing but the red carpet treatment as they compete for the $20,000 first prize money on the rolling, expansive Green Island Country Club course. Hoping to make the tournament a regular stop on the PGA tour, Southern officials are going all out to insure that the golfers like what they see.

Professional in every sense of the word, tourney workers are devoting much time and energy to making certain the initial Southern Open is successful. The Green Island folks have not only enticed some of the biggest names in golf, but have also taken careful measures to guarantee they return next year as well.

The linksmen will be subjected to various aspects of southern exposure — ranging from mint julips to smiling southern bells. Pretty Southern Airways stewardesses will serve as official hostesses during the week long tournament, making the $100,000 total purse even more lucrative.

Rudolph Defending Champ

When money is lost on a $60,000 business venture, you shouldn't need a financial expert to advise you to abandon the idea and concentrate on something else. But instead of throwing in the towel after last years Green Island Open finished in the red money-wise, the determined tourney committee decided to build a bigger and better tournament.

About that time, Southern Airways came into the act. After conferring with tournament directors, the Atlanta based airlines agreed to co-sponsor the event with the Columbus Chamber of Commerce, and the $100,000 Southern Open was born.

The tournament field is much stronger this year, and not all the credit can be attributed to the richer pot. Southern Officials have been ultra-successful at selling their product, and the results have been impressive.

Heading the players list are Orville Moody, Bob Goalby and Mason Rudolph, the man who won at Green Island last autumn.

Moody, a former Army sergeant who spent 14 years in the service, won the 1969 1969 U. S. Open. Goalby, of course, captured the controversial 1968 Masters' crown when Roberto De Vicenzo signed the wrong score card.

Also highlighting the field are Bert Yancey, Dapper Doug Sanders, colorful Juan "Chi-Chi" Rodriquez, and Green Island's own Hugh Royer.

Green Island Good Choice

It seems only fitting that the Southern Open should be played on Green Island. Tucked away in the rolling hills of north Columbus, the scenic, almost serene 36 hole layoutt ypifies the deliberate southern way of life. Surrounded by towering pines, the course affords a peaceful, bucolic setting that appears as though it were designed especially for the Southern Open.

While Green Island is indeed beautiful, its beauty can be deceiving. The long, winding fairways and tricky greens present a formidable challenge. In fact, Rudolph won last years tourney with a six under par 274 — which means Green Island can be as tough as any course on the pro circuit.

Prior to the championship competition — which is slated to begin September 9 — a $5,000 pro-am tournament has been scheduled. Other events, including a trick shot show by host pro Paul Bumanu will highlight the tournament week.

QUIZ

1. In professional golf, name the "Big 4" tournaments.

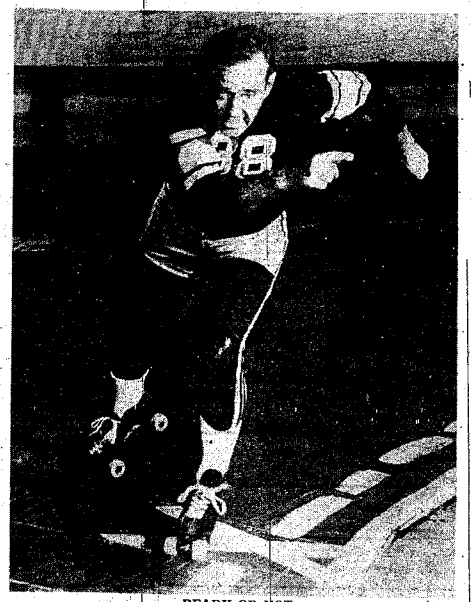
2. Name the pro golfers associated with these gallery nicknames: "Arnie's Army," "Jack's Pack," "Lee's Fleas."

3. In pro golf, what is a "wire-to-wire" victory?

4. What golfer won the most tournaments in 1971 through July?

5. What is a "hand mashie?"

Answers:



1. The Masters, U.S. and British Opens, and the PGA.

2. Arnold Palmer, Jack Nickiaus, Lee Trevino.

3. The eventual winner leading all four rounds of the tournament.

4. Lee Trevino, five.

5. A slang expression for a ball thrown on the green when no one is looking (obviously illegal).

READY OR NOT

Ken Monte is still going strong at 42.

Monte still undisputed iron man

OAKLAND, Calif. — People around Oakland, Calif. are beginning to seriously believe the old adage about "life begins at 40" — and two very good reasons:

Their football Raiders sport the amazing Mr. George Blanda, the 43 year-old quarterback wonder — and their Roller Derby team is fielded by Ken Monte, at 42 the skate-sport's "old pro" and still its undisputed iron man. Both — like good wine — continue to improve with age.

Monte, one of only three active skaters in the Derby Hall - of-Fame, started his banked-track career in Chicago back in 1945 — when Harry Truman was the new President and T.V. just a rumor. A little over three years later, in 1948, he received his first coaching assignment with the then-newly franchised Brooklyn Red Devils. He's been at the helm of one club or another ever since.

Two serious injuries cast dark shadows over Monte's future, but each time he's come back strong enough to take his team to the pennant and pick-up the league's M.V.P. award in the process.

Athletes in the Hall-of-Fame are supposed to be cast in bronze or chiseled out of marble. It's a bit disturbing to the younger stars when a vet keeps turning up on the playing field in flesh-and-blood.

ROD AND GUN CLUB Notes

By Bill Kloeb

Last week this column indicated that the Rod and Gun Club Labor Day Fishing Derby would be open only to active duty military personnel. This is NOT correct. The contest is open to all regular club members and qualified dependents of regular members.

Active duty, retired military personnel and Department of Defense civilians working at Fort Benning are eligible for regular membership.

The annual membership fee is $5 with an additional $1 charge for each dependent over 16 years of age. Those under 16 do not require a membership but must be under control of their sponsor while participating in club activities.

Qualified personnel can join at the club headquarters (Bldg. 4050), located on First Division Road one-quarter mile south of Highway 27.

Contestants Must Register

Club members who intend to compete in the Rod and Gun Club Labor Day Fishing Derby may begin registering at 5:30 a.m. tomorrow morning at the club. Club personnel, located on the back porch of the clubhouse, will register contestants and verify catches until 9 p.m., tomorrow night. On Sunday they will begin operations at 6 a.m. and close at 9 p.m. On Monday registrations will be taken and catches verified from 6 a.m. until the contest closes at 4:30 p.m.

Savings Bonds and merchandise certificates will he given to fishermen catching the heaviest bass, bream and catfish. Six prizes will be awarded for each of the three species. First place winners will receive a $50 Bonds, second place winners a $25 Bond. Third, fourth, fifth and sixth place winners will receive merchandise orders redeemable at the club sales counter.

Winners will be announced 6 p.m. Monday, at the club.

The Rod and Gun Club will also give a special prize, a 14-foot jon boat with electric motor, battery and battery carrying case will be awarded. The winner will be determined by a drawing held on the club grounds. Only members who have registered for the fishing contest and submitted at least one fish for verification will be eligible for this prize. The fish must be freshly caught. No frozen fish will be accepted. THE WINNER MUST BE PRESENT TO CLAIM THE PRIZE AT THE TIME OF THE DRAWING.

All fish entered in the contest must come from Averett, Clear Creek, Harps, Headleys, Kings, Upper Kings, Kirks, Mobleys, Patterson, Russ, Schley, Snelling, Stephens, Twilight, Kings Mill, Victory or Weems Ponds.

Post and state fishing regulations apply in this contest. Fishing Derby committeemen may call for an inspection of any entry and disqualify the entry from competition if a discrepancy is discovered.

Skeet, Trap and Archery

The Rod and Gun Club skeet, trap and archery facilities will be operational during the entire Labor Day Weekend.

Archery ranges will be open for shooting all day each day. The club archery team will hold shooting demonstrations and clinics from 1 until 6 p.m. on Monday.

The skeet ranges will be operational from noon until 11 p.m. Saturday and 10 a.m. until 6 p.m. Sunday and Monday. Experienced instructors will conduct clinics concerning basic techniques of shooting and range safety and procedures. A limited number of shotguns will be available for those who do not have shotguns. Factory manufactured and reloaded ammunition will be available at the ranges.

The club has four skeet ranges, one lighted for night firing. The clinics will not interfere with shooting by more experienced shooters. Adequate operations personnel will be available to operate all of the ranges that are needed.

Pro theory

Caution: artificial turf is dangerous to players

By Jim Wilder

Pro football this year already has the hint of being the year of the injury. The once praised artificial turf has been blamed as the phantom bone-crusher by the hobbled Gayle Sayers. Joe Namath probably has a few words about it and his battered knees. Receivers, running backs and quarterbacks are becoming afraid of the ground they run on rather than the defense. The year of the injury may lead to the year of the defense. With exhibition games underway there have been a number of low scoring games with slim victory margins. The Bear's 2-0 win over the Packers was a game of defense.

But in the sport of pro football you can still win by scoring touchdowns.

If the running backs fare better than their defense opponents, some coaches may solve the offense problem by outlasting the defense. Jim Kiick, Emerson Boozer, Floyd Little and Calvin Hill could start things revolving around the running backs instead of the aerial route.

But who can tell what the pros will do? After all, the only games played so far have been exhibition games. They are only a prelude to see which rookie can hold onto the ball under the big-time pressure.

Country Club dogfighting

The Country Club Course will hold a one day dogfight tournament on Monday. Participants may play in foursomes of their choosing but four man teams will be selected by draw after the last competitors have started play.

Entry fee for the tournament is $3. Free refreshments will be available after the tournament. Starting times may be obtained by phoning 545-4120.

Georgia dove hunters to enjoy three seasons

The first of three dove hunting seasons has opened in Georgia.

This season will run through Sept. 24. The second season will open Oct. 23 and close Nov. 10 and the third season will open Dec. 18 and close on Jan. 15 of next year.

The bag limit will be 12 doves per day with a limit of 24 birds allowed in possession.

Alabama will have two seasons this fall and winter. The first season will open Sept. 25 and close Nov. 13. The second season begins Dec. 20 and runs until Jan. 8 of 1972.

Bag limit in Alabama will be 12 doves per day. The possession limit is the same as the bag limit.

Dove seasons on the reservation are the same as the seasons for the states. During the Georgia seasons Hunting will be permitted on the Georgia portion of the reservation only while the Georgia seasons are open. The Alabama portion will be hunted only when the Alabama seasons are open. Hunting will be permitted from noon until sundown each day.

According to Roy Johnson, chief of the post Fish and Wildlife Management Unit, hunting should be good during the early seasons. He says there are plenty of birds on the Alabama and Georgia sides of the river. He recommends the fields along Cyclone, Hourglass and Sunshine Roads but claims to have sighted birds in just about every area of the reservation.

Southern Invitational tee-off nears

Former masters champion Bob Goalby, a tour veteran of almost 15 years, heads a list of six golfers who Thursday submitted commitments to play in the $100,000 Southern Open at the Green Island Country Club Monday through Saturday. Goalby, from Belleville, Ill., won the famed masters in 1968 with a 277 score, his victory coming after Roberto De Vicenzo of Argentina signed an incorrect scorecard that prevented a playoff. The 40-year old Goalby, who played one season of football at the University of Illinois as a reserve quarterback and a defensive regular, earned $38,998 on the tour last year and went into the current season with career winnings of more than $461,000. He turned pro in 1957 and his tour victories include the 1968 Greensboro Open, 1960 Coral Gables Open, 1961 Los Angeles and St. Petersburg Opens, 1962 Insurance City and Denver Opens, 1967 San Diego Open and Robinson Open.

From a money standpoint, his best year on the tour came in 1967 when he banked more than $77,000.

Thursday's entries also included Atlanta resident Jim Grant, who is enjoying his best year since turning pro in 1967. The other entries came from Paul Barkhouse of Lynn, Mass., Tommy Fonseca of Baldwin, Mo., Bill Garrett of Amarillo, Tex. and Jim Hardy of Killeen, Tex. Garrett, who turned pro in 1964, had his best year on the tour last year when he won $34,005 after collecting only $12,563 in 1968. Beard and local favorites Hugh Royer Jr. and Tommy Aaron, filed early

A host of other outstanding pros on the tour, including defending champion Mason Rudolph, Frank commitments for the Southern Open.

The tournament, which made its debut as the $50,000 Green Island open last year, will get under way with qualifying and practice rounds on Monday. Another practice round is scheduled over the tough Green Island course on Tuesday, with a trick shot show by host professional Paul Bumann on the agenda.

The $5,000 Southen Open pro-am which will pair one pro with three amateurs, will be played on Wednesday. The tournament itself will be contested Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Predicto's picking prelude portrait

A lot of people on this post think they are hot with their football picking. Well, my name is PFC Predicto, and I'll beat any of you, any time.

Each week during the football season my predictions will appear in the Bayonet sports pages along with the selections of lackluster lugubrious lackeys of lucidity. My clairvoyant caprices will leave them and you hindered by hindsight and abject in appreciation and adplation.

The prognisticator's column is open to all who wish to try their wizardry against that of the master. Computers, slide rules, ouija boards, crystal balls, tarot cards or I Ching all may be used to foretell the fortunes of the football forefront.

To get your predictions in, phone 545-4622 or 7841 and ask for Predicto.

Special Services dominate council

Special Services activities dominated the July meeting of the Soldiers Council of Fort Benning.

The Council heard Mr. Jessup, directorate, Personnel and Community Relations Activities, an invited guest, explain the functions of Special Services and what is available to the soldier through available facilities.

As a result of the open discussion that followed, a motion was passed to recommend that the hours of operations of Service Clubs on weekends be extended. The council was reminded that with the implementation of the five day week, more soldiers are off on weekends. Therefore, more soldiers are able to take advantage of these facilities.

In reviewing the minutes of the meeting, the command recognized the club understaffing problems and the inability to recruit professionals. It was ruled that until "shortfalls" can be remedied the present service club hours of operation will be continued.

rooms must come to the Billeting Office in Olson Hall before making guest house arrangements.

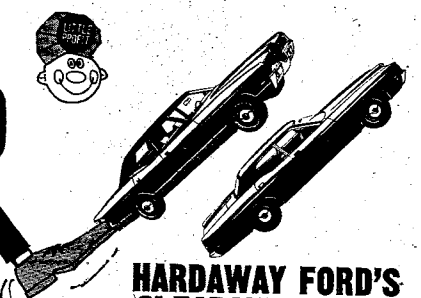
There the person selects the motel or hotel he wishes to use. The billeting section then contacts that establishment to determine if there are any guest house rooms available. If there are, the person is provided with a referal slip and given directions on how to get to the facilities.

Rules for use of the guest house remain the same. First call goes to incoming and departing permanent party military and their immediate family. Relatives of permanent party have second priority, and visiting friends of permanent party military may use the facilities when they are available.

Drivers

weeks. "I'd rather drive for senior officers than anybody else," he said. "They are easier to get along with."

The drivers agree that as a group their passengers are a whole lot better than any taxi driver has ever transported. Pvt. Paul Shepherd recalls the time he missed his lunch because of his passenger's schedule, so the VIP gave him enough money to buy his lunch elsewhere.



Beasley said in spite of a few late hours they have to work, the drivers have it pretty good. "Some of the guys don't want this job because they're afraid the brass will be jumping down their throats all the time. They're intimidated by so much rank in the back seat that they can't be comfortable. I find that senior-ranking officers are great people to work for."

Beasley added that he can't recall anytime that the drivers have been chewed out. "The worst thing I've had to face was a traffic jam," he concluded.

Airborne cubs

Cub Scouts from Pack 27 got a taste of what it might feel like to go AIRBORNE during a recent pack trip to the jump towers at Fort Benning. Pack 27 which is sponsored by the 67th Maint. Bn., 931st Engr. Gp. spent the afternoon of Aug. 24 riding to the top of the 250-foot jump towers and descending in the buddy seats. "The kids went wild over it and it was definitely the high point of our summer activities," said Lt. Col. Garrett V. Sidler, cub master and executive officer for the 931st Engr. Gp. There will be a meeting Sept. 15 at 8 p.m. in the Dexter School Auditorium for all the scouts of Pack 27 and their parents. Any boys wishing to join the pack are urged to attend with their parents.

'Run For Your Life' program may help solve your weight problems

By Roger Pavey

Overweight, tense, smoking too much, or just plain out of shape? "Run For Your Life," a physical conditioning program of distance running started at Fort Benning, Ga., in January, 1970, may help solve your problems.

The "Run For Your Life" program is an innovation of progressive distance running, based on widely accepted principles of physical conditioning which includes progression, developmental plateaus, isotonics, and aerobic theories.

The program is designed to provide a simple, yet effective method of improving the cardio-vascular system; that is, the heart, lungs and circulatory system, by gradually expanding the capacity to handle stress. In order to gear the running program to individual needs, three phases were designed.

The preparatory phase is for those who have recently led a sedentary or inactive life. Personnel initiating this phase may include office workers, housewives, clerks, administrators, instructors, or people who have recently been ill or overweight. Individuals who do not exercise regularly should start in this phase to safely evaluate their level of physical fitness.

The conditioning phase is for those personnel who have completed the preparatory phase or have recently engaged in a vigorous conditioning program, but cannot run or walk a mile in 8 minues, 30 seconds without undue stress or becoming fatigued. The goal is to progress slowly through the conditioning phase and continue running indefinitely with a minimum goal of 7-10 miles per week.

During the sustaining phase, the participants run a minimum of 7 miles a week, varying the time-distance from a mile in 8 minutes, 30 seconds, to three miles in 25 minutes, 30 seconds.

One "jogger," Maj. Bodhan A. Barylak, the first participant to jog over 500 miles and one of the first 1,000 milers says the "Run For Your Life" program is, "a way of relaxing and relieving tension that builds up during the day. It is especially good for people who are not inclined to group sports. They take up jogging and stay physically fit."

A husband and wife team also participate in the program. Lt. Col. Richard McKee and his wife Jean Marie together have run almost 1,100 miles. Mrs. McKee, who was the first woman to break the 400 mile barrier,

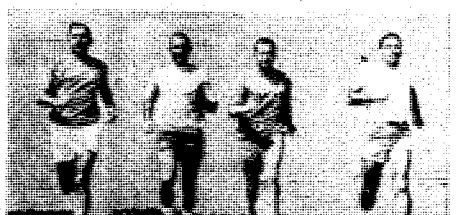
Interest in Infantry surges

This year the number of ROTC cadets who volunteered for Infantry commissions quadrupled over that of a year ago.



With the coming of the new school year several programs, both old and new, have been made available by the Infantry School to encourage Infantry motivation in ROTC cadets.

The most popular of these is Airborne training, which was authorized by Department of the Army in 1969 and is available to all senior Army ROTC cadets under a "no cost to the government" provision. To date, 490 Army ROTC cadets have been enrolled since the initiation of this program. Of these, 444, or 90.6 per cent have received their wings.

Ranger training is also available for cadets. This past summer a special Ranger class, for approximately 200 cadets, was given in lieu of the advanced summer camp usually given between a cadets' junior and senior years.

On the academic side, a ROTC In-

'Civil service' schools privately operated

The government operates no "civil service schools," according to the Office of Consumer Affairs.

So-called "civil service schools" claim to be recognized by the federal government and often guarantee that completion of their course will procure a civil service job for the applicant. The government, however, recognizes no such courses, and no one can guarantee passing the exam or getting a federal job.

Soldiers near their expiration term of service (ETS) are frequently targets for correspondence courses offered by these private "civil service schools."

The government requires no fee in giving the civil service examination, and it offers all information regarding federal jobs free of charge.

Those interested in taking the civil service exam or obtaining information about available jobs can contact their Project Transition counselor, Veterans Administration adviser, Federal Job Information Center, or they may write to Federal Job Information Center, 1900 E Street NW, Washington, D. C. 20415.

Conferees slated to attend are representatives from all the states (except Alaska), Puerto Rico and the District of Columbia.

Discussions will be led by the National Guard Bureau and School Staff Agencies.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

by Bill King

Savory is an herb usually associated with beans of all kinds, but it's also a great addition to a batch of Russian salad dressing.

Deviled eggs take on a new taste if you mix some minced chicken or ham spread with the mashed yolks.

Slice leftover meatloaf, brush each side with a little water, wrap loosely in foil and pop into a moderate oven for about 15 minutes. It will taste as moist as when first served.

For a dessert that's as simple to make as it is refreshing, top scoops of lemon ice with bottled chocolate-mint sauce. For a special occasion, use green creme de menthe.

Italians are fond of the fried, sugared pastry stripes they serve with espresso and give them imaginative shapes and names. One variety is called "lingue delle suocere," meaning tongues of mothers-in-law.

As far us, we love mothers-in-law and every other member of your family, too. And the whole clan will love it if you treat them to a dinner soon here at

Post engineers support reserves at Camp Shelby

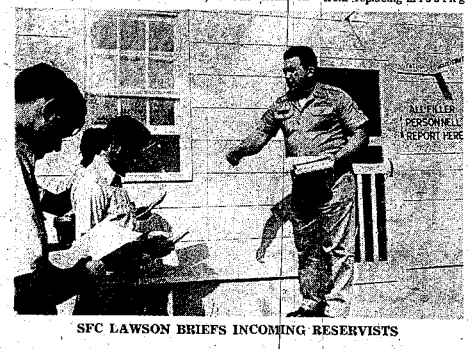
By John Box

A detachment of officers and soldiers from the 931st Engr. Gp. have returned to their normal duties at Fort Benning after spending four months supporting the Army Reserves at Camp Shelby, Miss.

Under the command of Maj. Philip C. Cox, group S2 officer, the 56 soldiers and six officers left Fort Benning for Camp Shelby on April 28 to set up the Reserve Reinforcement Processing Center.

Their duties included the in and out-processing of over 3,000 reservists from mid-May to the end of August. Each reservist entering the 931st processing station fills out an emergency data card, gets reimbursed for travel expenses, receives a pay voucher from the finance section, is issued complete uniforms and receives combat gear, and as the final step receives transportation to the unit.

The 931st soldiers also operated a clothing sales store, a mess hall, a motor pool and, a maintenance section.



The motor pool handled all types of repair work ranging from jeeps to buses. The supply section had over 1,000 line items on hand to effect necessary repairs in the shortest time possible. They handled over 20 jobs a week from replacing missing bolts in drive-shafts to replacing a tank engine.

One of the biggest problems faced by the 931st soldiers was the erratic hours the reservists arerived at Camp Shelby. They arrived on the weekend and started training with their units on Monday. This necessitated a virtual 54-hour operation on both Saturday and Sunday for the 931st.

The erratic hours also created huge problems for the mess hall since they never knew when or how many to expect for dinner. The mess sergeant often had to obtain extra food to feed everyone on short notice.

The 931st personnel didn't object to the long hours on the weekends, however, since they then had at least three days compensatory time during the week. "It was only 100 miles to New Orleans and 60 miles to the Gulf Coast at Biloxi, Miss., we had a good time," said Sp4 John Thomas, HHC 931st Engr. Gp.

The last of the engineers arrived back at Fort Benning from Camp Shelby on Aug. 31.

M. Wolfe - 1st CC grad to complete BIOCC

Michael W. Wolfe, a member of the first graduating class of Columbus College, will also be the first graduate from the local institution to complete the Branch Immaterial Officer Candidate Course (BIOCC) at Fort Benning.

Army life is not new to the twenty-two year old Wolfe, who was born in Tallahassee, Fla. With his father, Lt. Col. (ret.) Thomas J. Wolfe, Army Medical Service Corps, he and the rest of the family have traveled to many Army bases around the world. Following a tour in Japan, the young Wolfe and his parents arrived in the Fort Benning and Columbus area where they spent four years from 1954 to 1958.

After another duty assignment in Germany, the Wolfe family returned stateside for a short tour at Fort Bragg, N. C. When Col. Wolfe was again on assignment to Europe, the family decided to make their home in Columbus while he was overseas. They have lived in the area for the past ten years.

The younger Wolfe, a son of Mrs. B. B. Hudson and his stepfather, Dr. Hudson of 2309 Camelot Place in Columbus, graduated from Columbus High School in 1966.

Afterwards, he enrolled at Columbus College where he received his bachelor of science degree in biology as a member of the college's first graduating class in June 1970.

While attending class at the college, Wolfe was also a member of the Canterbury Club, an Episcopalian church group at the college. Speaking of his alma mater, Wolfe commented on the "really great instructors," especially those who played an important role in his curriculum of studies. A student during the period when the college was converted from a two year junior college to an expanded four year institution, Wolfe reflects on the time as one of "a lot of confusion" for college and students alike, but nonetheless, "a real fine four years."

"In a few years its going to be a fine institution. In my four years there, the number of buildings just about doubled."

Shortly after graduation, Wolfe was drafted into the Army while he was working for Well's Dairies in Columbus where he was employed in a lab doing quality control and bacterial tests on milk and milk products.

After completing basic training and radio operator school at Fort Jackson, S. C., Wolfe enrolled in the BIOC Course at Fort Benning.

As a member of a BIOC Course, Wolfe does not receive any specialized training in infantry, armor or artillery, but rather participates in a broad officer training program.

According to Wolfe, OCS has changed. Candidates are no longer faced with harrassment from tactical officers. In the words of Candidate Wolfe, OCS has become "a growing experience which is entirely worthwhile, especially with the new shortened course." The BIOCC program of instruction, previously lasting 23 weeks, has been reduced to 14 weeks.

Wolfe decided on OCS because of the better pay and advantages available to an officer in the U.S. Army. In addition, graduation from an Officer Candidate course looks good on a military record and enhances job possibilities after service duty is completed.

Wolfe especially enjoys the Senior Status acquired by candidates in their 11th week — attaining a sort of "third lieutenant" rank. Candidates in BIOCC go through a basic phase of training for the first five weeks, followed by an intermediate phase from the 6th to 10th week before acquiring senior status from the 11th to 14th week. Privileges of a candidate with senior status are determined by his grade average in the course.

Wolfe begins his tour in the Army as a second lieutenant in the Medical Service Corps at Ft. Sam Houston, Tex. after graduation from BIOCC. Later he expects to be assigned duty as a coordinator in a field hospital or MEDAVAC Unit.

Strong Medicine

Do statistics give you a pain?
Just hold your nose and take your medicine and we'll give you a pleasant surprise at the end.

A recent edition of a national magazine, citing American Medical Association figures, says that at last count America had 334,628 doctors, but that nearly 17 per cent of them don't practice, 55,927 available to the private citizen, only 50,816 are general practitioners, while the others are specialists. Pediatricians, 10,310 of them for 58 million children under 15, a ratio of one doctor for 5,625 kids. The whole theme of the article was the shortage of doctors and the rarity of a doctor in a rural or small community. The writer cites startling statistics that show doctors leaving the workingman's communities and moving into the highest income areas.

But, there was a reassuring fact for servicemen among the downers. Of that total figure of 334,628 American doctors, nine per cent are federally employed.

You as a military member have access to modern medicine for yourself and your family and it's free! Yes, the military is feeling the pinch of the doctor shortage too, but the per capita rate doesn't come close to the civilian ratio.

How many times have you and the family visited the clinic at your installation this year? How much did it cost?

These facts should prompt you to fill this prescription for a sound future: Reenlist. If you've married while you've been in uniform you may not know that family medical cost in civilian life is a bitter pill to take.

Questions of a purely military nature which obviously could be answered more properly by commanders or supervisors within the chain of command will not be accepted. Q—As a wartime veteran, am I entitled to hospitallzation in any VA hospital for a nonservice-connected disability?

A—Yes, provided hospitalization is deemed necessary; and you are financially unable to defray the costs of the necessary hospital charges elsewhere; and if beds are available.

Q—Does my service-connected disability rating of 60 per cent entitle my children to VA educational assistance?

A—No. A child is eligible for an educational assistance allowance only if his parent died (or is rated totally and permanently disabled) as a result of a service-connected cause, or if he died from any cause while such a disability was in existence.

Q—If a veteran sells his home obtained under a G.I. loan and obtains a release of liability from the VA will he be eligible for another G.I. loan at his new location.

A—No. The granting of a release of liability by the VA does not make the veteran eligible for restoration of his loan entitlement. This can be done only by having the lender release the VA as guarantor of the loan. This is usually accomplished by requiring the new buyer to obtain his own financing on the home, thereby paying off the existing G.I. loan.

Q—I am a veteran of wartime service and need a physical checkup. Will the VA doctors give me one?....

A—No. The VA provides free medical or physical examinations, as necessary, only: to determine whether a condition is service-connected; when needed for Government life insurance purposes; or when application is made for hospital or domiciliary care.

Q—Must the designation of the beneficiary for a veteran's G.I. insurance policy be witnessed?

A—Not usually, but it is a good idea. The witness should not be the beneficiary. If the veteran is blind or signs by mark (x), two disinterested persons should witness.

Q—A local newspaper recently published diagrams and instructions for the construction of explosive devices and firearms. What is the Army's evaluation of the devices so described?

A—The Army will not comment for publication on the reliability or unreliability of these devices or weapons. The Army does honor requests for assistance in these matters from law enforcement, public safety and similar type officials.

The judge says

Courts help shield ecology, health

USAIC LEGAL ASSISTANCE OFFICE. — "No property can be taken without due process of law." This means that there at least must be a hearing. It also means that if property is taken for public purposes the owner must be paid.

But there are important exceptions. This becomes more clear as society begins to stress ecology and health.

In one case the Secretary of Agriculture ordered some fungicides removed from the market. Congress gave the Secretary power to remove insecticides, fungicides and rodenticides from the market if there was "an imminent hazard to the public." The Secretary's action may be reviewed by a court but his order may take effect at once.

A maker of one of the banned fungicides challenged the Secretary's order. Even if the order were reversed later, the manufacturer said that he would be put out of business. He said that this was a denial of "due process." He demanded an immediate hearing or a suspension of the order.

The court upheld the Secretary's action. It said that a court hearing could be held later. Matters of public health and safety always have priority. The government can ban cyclamates, order the slaughter of diseased cattle, destroy a tainted shipment of food, or order recalled cosmetics already sold. The government need not grant a prior hearing or make any compensation for any loss. The government acts within its "police powers."

As a rule there is no right to compensation from the government even if it acts in error. Unless the administrator acted maliciously or in some case with negligence, the injured person or property owner has no right to recovery. For example, a fire chief "on the spot" may order one building destroyed to save the remainder. His judgment is hard to challenge successfully.

Today the government has extended its powers in air, noise, and water pollution. It may close down entire factories under its summary powers. Due process does not require a prior hearing under those circumstances.

The affected person or industry may take steps for a quick judicial determination. But the summary powers favor the government.

Re-up increase continuing into '72

HQ CONARC, FT. MONROE, Va. — CONARC had over 43,900 reenlistments in fiscal year 1971. This reenlistment rate breaks a record which has stood since 1964, when CONARC had a much larger assigned enlisted strength. Indications are that the increase in reenlistments is continuing into fiscal year '72.

The upward swing in the number of reenlistments is one of the most encouraging trends identified so far for the fiscal year just ended. It is still too early to tell just how much the Modern Volunteer Army Program or VOLAR contributed to the reenlistment rate, because evaluations are just beginning to come in. But the Army's commitment to a zero draft certainly did have an impact.

Much of the reenlistment increase can be attributed to increasing command emphasis on the reenlistment effort. Commanding officers at all levels are becoming involved in the attempt to retain quality servicemen. This personal involvement by commanders is resulting in better Army career counselling, and more face-to-face contacts between career counselors and the servicemen. As a result, soldiers are being informed of the many advantages of a military career, and career counselors are better able to tailor career programs to the soldier.

Ft. Belvoir, which has a very high reenlistment rate, provides a fine example of the increased reenlistment effort. Ft. Belvoir innovations include a reenlistment incentive award program and a Commanding General's trophy for reenlistment accomplishments. The career counselors use a soft sell approach, first finding out the soldier's interests, then tailoring a career program for him. The overall program is monitored by highly motivated, professional NCO's.

Reenlistment options, benefits and bonuses played a large role in the reenlistment rate, according to recent analyses by the Continental United States Army.

Yet another factor has been the har to reenlistment program. This program provides the commander a way to increase the Army's selectivity over its personnel. This tool precludes a trouble-maker or poor performer from reenlisting subsequent to discharge. This program is appealing to the quality soldier demanded by the modern Army.

CONARC is emphasizing the retention of first term enlistees and inductees. But at the same time, the quality of the Army's career force is not being compromised for the sake of quantity.

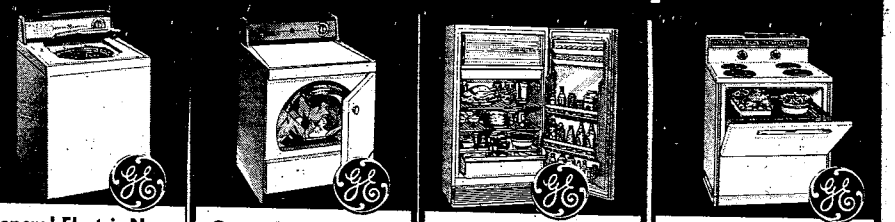
Nixon's wage-price freeze to be followed here

All contracts, purchasing orders and other transactions issued by Fort Benning will be required to contain certification that they are in compliance with President Nixon's wage-price freeze, according to a Dept. of the Army directive.



In a statement from the Fort Benning purchasing office, Mr. Jack H. Blalock, purchasing and contracts officer, said "We have received instructions to include as part of the terms and conditions in purchase orders, delivery orders, new solicitations, and resulting contracts, a clause to the effect that all transactions are in accordance with the President's wage-price freeze. Invoices for payment of contracts due and purchase or delivery orders not containing the above clause are required to contain a similar certification."

At this time, the only exception to the ruling is cash purchasing procedures which will not be changed pending further notification.

In addition to the required certification, the purchasing office has been directed to observe prices closely before awarding contracts and purchase orders.

Further information and copies of the directive may be obtained from the purchasing office.

Mrs. Charles Brown is 'real Army wife'

By Jan Smith
(Member of Fem-Line Staff)

I'm sure the thought has occurred to many other women as it has to me—"What is a real Army wife?" Is she just the everyday wife, mother, and friend or is she a combination of these ingredients plus more? A couple of weeks ago, I read an article naming a woman as "Clubwoman of the Year" and I began to wonder what a person had to do to have such an honor bestowed upon her. This time I decided to do some real investigating and I would like to share with you what I found and what I believe is one example of a real Army wife.

Mrs. Charles Brown, wife of 1st Sgt. Charles Brown, 197th Infantry Brigade, 2nd Battalion, 10th Artillery, was recently the recipient of the NCO wives' "Clubwoman of the Year Award," which is the highest honor for a member of the club. Mrs. Brown hails from Johnstown, Penn., and joined the Army wives some 21 years ago when she married then Cpl. Brown. Through the years, the Browns have lived at several military posts in the United States and have had two tours of Germany. In a couple of weeks, the Browns will leave Fort Benning for their third tour of Germany and a first look at their new grandson, who was recently born in Germany.

It was during their first tour of Germany in 1957, that Mrs. Brown began working with the Red Cross. Her first experience was manning the health room of the elementary school at the post in Gelnhausen, where she did everything from hearing tests to time tests. In addition, she became active in the Sunday School and served as the Sunday School Secretary. Several years later when the Browns returned to Gelnhause for their second tour of Germany, Mrs. Brown met the toughest and most difficult challenge. There wasn't a nursery for military families stationed at Gelnhausen, but, there was definitely a need. So, Mrs. Brown and one other lady, along with the advice of a nurse from the elementary school, spent many hours searching for the proper elements to set up and run a nursery. Mrs. Brown became secretary-treasurer of the nursery and was proud to announce $1,000 profit at the end of the first year of operation.

In addition to her long hours of devotion to the nursery project, Mrs. Brown served as the NCO Wives' Club president. The NCO wives at this time helped the enlisted men's wives, set up a club of their own in Gelnhausen.

Army Community Services (ACS) was a new arrival to Gelnhausen while the Browns were there on their second tour of Germany.

Mrs. Brown, through the outstanding job of the Girl Scouts, was able to acquire more than enough equipment to set up a household goods lending service while new arrivals to the post were waiting for their shipment of personal goods from home.

Outside of Germany, Mrs. Brown remembers in particular a real challenge as a waiting wife in St. Petersburg, Fla. A reserve national guard unit in St. Petersburg had been called to active duty in Vietnam and some one hundred or more girls found themselves members of the waiting wives. You might ask why this experience was a challenge: the majority of these girls were very bitter toward this change in their lives and attended meetings out of spite. Through endless efforts Mrs. Brown, friends and the Red Cross tried to calm the bitterness of these young ladies and give some understanding and friendship so that they might make the best out of their year of separation as a waiting wife.

MRS. CHARLES BROWN

During the past year and a half at Fort Benning, Mrs. Brown has served as chairman of the ACS Hospitality House, 1st Vice-president of the NCO Wives' Club and has been active in the Protestant Women of the Chapel.

Mrs. Brown says she was inspired at her first military post by her husband's 1st Sgt.'s wife. This woman was so warm, sincere, and treated everyone as an equal and offered so much to be admired.

I asked Mrs. Brown if she had any advice for people interested in becoming a real army wife. She said two things in particular. First of all, join your wives' club, become as active as you can because everything spreads from here. Secondly, "don't sit back and watch, you won't accomplish anything."

Mrs. Brown told me she feels everyone has an obligation to do their share of community work, "you can't be a vegetable—do your thing." She feels the "saddest thing would be to leave a post and a month later have someone say, 'gee, I didn't know they were gone'."

Thank you, Mrs. Brown, for helping me find one answer to what a real Arv wife is. You are definitely an inspiration yourself.

Mrs. A. G. Norris feted

Mrs. A. G. Norris, wife of the new commanding officer of The School Brigade, TSB, was the guest of honor at a tea held by the ladies of TSB.

The tea was Aug. 26 in the Corregidor Room of the Officer's Club. The table was centered with a bouquet of garden flowers in tones of green and yellow. The green and yellow theme was carried out in the floral design nametags and in the refreshments of punch, sandwiches, and cakes.

Mrs. Norris, attired in a red silk print dress and matching corsage, greeted the guests at the door. She is a native of West Point, Ga. and recently moved into the Columbus area from Carlisle, Pa. where Col. Norris graduated from the War College.

Special guests for the occasion were Mrs. Orwin C. Talbott, wife of Gen. Talbott, commandant of the Infantry School and Mrs. Kendrick B. Barlow, wife of Col. Barlow, deputy assistant, USAIS. Accompanying Mrs. Talbott was her niece, Mrs. Carla Poteet of Baytown, Tex.

Infantry

fantry Orientation Booklet was published in 1970 and distributed to 283 colleges and universities throughout the country. The purpose of the booklet was to describe the roles and responsibilities of Infantry junior officers so that the cadets might better evaluate the merits of Infantry service when making their branch selection. The results of a follow-up questionaire indicated that the booklet was well received by both cadets and instructors. As a result, a full color booklet was published for the 1971-72 school year.

A similar orientation booklet is scheduled for release in November for use by West Point cadets just prior to their branch selection.

The Infantry School is also producing a ROTC Infantry Orientation Film tentatively titled "Crossed Rifles," that will serve as a motivational vehicle as well as a new insight to Infantry service. The film focuses on the ROTC graduate on active duty for two years. It is designed to provide an insight to Fort Benning, the training available at USAIS, and the opportunities within Infantry branch. The film is slated to be completed in early October, and will be shown at many schools and universities prior to the cadets branch selection.

The ROTC Committee has developed other programs to enhance the image of Infantry as a branch. These include: cadet visits to USAIC, the ROTC Information Newsletter, and the ROTC-Infantry Instructor's Course.

These programs are just a few of the many, offered to the ROTC student while still in college. The Infantry school is constantly at work in an effort to improve the image of Infantry Branch as evidenced by the drastic increase of 17.3 per cent over the past year.

Early out

personnel eliminated from service academies will also be eligible for the extended early-release program.

To qualify for the six-month early release, a soldier's expiration term of service (ETS) must be on or before June 30, 1972.

For details and requirements regarding the temporary six-month early release from the Army, the soldier should consult his personnel office.

Run

nit-pik-six

FOOLING AROUND with fireworks is dangerous business under any conditions, and practical jokers add that much more risk. Use extreme caution this July 4 if you plan to shoot the works. For a quieter diversion, find the six differences in these two cartoons.

ANSWERS

says, "I have slimmed down to the size I was 10 years ago and I feel as good as I did then. The 'Run For Your Life' program also helps me keep up with my teenagers."

Capt. James D. McMonigle, a 10-mile-a-day runner noted that a man must be patient if he wants to get into shape. "It can't be done in one day," he said. McMonigle recommended that anyone who wishes to lose a few pounds around the middle should join "Run For Your Life."

As an added incentive, Run For Your Lifers are awarded certificates of merit and cloth patches for completing 50, 100, 200, 300, 400 and 500 miles. To date there are over 10,000 entrants who have logged nearly 280,000 miles.

A program such as "Run For Your Life" provides several advantages not usually available to individuals. It provides a regular schedule to follow which reduces the need for individual intitiative and technical knowledge. The feeling of doing a "socially acceptable" activity with other people is also emphasized. The program can be adapted to any area where there is a known distance. It requires less than 15 minutes per day as opposed to most exercise programs which either require special facilities or more time.

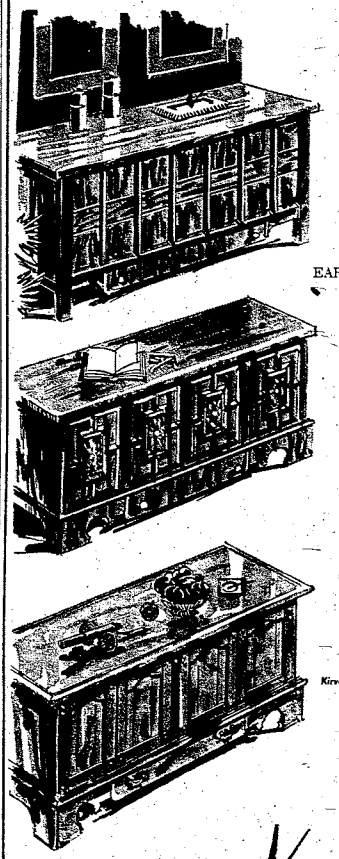
"The "Run For Your Life" program is one of the Army's latest efforts to improve general health and physical fitness — but as a supplement to other activities available. It is hoped that eventually the vast majority of participants will improve their general health through regular, progressive exercise and concurrently enhance the preformance of daily activities.

Both the committee and the participants are enthusiastic over the results obtained from the program, but only you can make "Run For Your Life" a complete success. So come on out and run, your life may depend on it.

Sharp gains in June home loans

The Veterans Administration ended fiscal year 1971 with sharp gains in its home loan activities compared to 1970, including 25,000 guaranteed loans in June and is the highest monthly total since April 1957.

The agency also reported June's loans pushed the fiscal year total to 194,000 the third highest level since 1950, and a six per cent increase over the 186,000 loans guaranteed in fiscal year 1970.



The 704,000 requests for determination of eligibility tallied during fiscal year 1971 were a 42 per cent increase over the 496,000 requests in fiscal year 1970, and the highest since VA started keeping records on this activity in 1957.

Appraisal requests took a 52 per cent jump from 359,000 in fiscal year 1970 to 545,000 in the fiscal year just ended — the most since 1956, it was reported.

The 277,000 loan applications processed during fiscal year 1971 reflected a 38 per cent increase over the 201,000 applications the year before, and were the most since 1957.

On a monthly basis, June's 25,000 loans were 25 per cent above May's nearly 20,000, and a sizeable 90 per cent higher than June a year ago. Veterans' eligibility requests edged up two per cent from 79,800 in May to 81,400 in June.

Benning A.G. section explains awards, decorations

By Malcolm B. Baer

The problems of awards and decorations has always played havoc with all echelons of the military. Recently the Deputy Adjutant General Section explained some of the problem areas. Awards, excluding service medal and badges, are divided into two main classes. They are awarded for heroism or for meritorious achievement of service. It is the act itself that determines the award. There are four medals that may be awarded for achievement or service in CONUS — the Distinguished Service Medal, Legion of Merit, Meritorious Service Medal and the Army Commendation Medal. According to Army Regulations, these medals may be awarded under the following criteria:

DISTINGUISHED SERVICE MEDAL: "OUTSTANDING MERITORIOUS SERVICE IN A DUTY OF GREAT RESPONSIBILITY. THE REGULATION DEFINES "DUTY OF GREAT RESPONSIBILITY" AS DUTY WHICH, BY VIRTUE OF THE POSITION HELD, CARRIES THE ULTIMATE RESPONSIBILITY FOR THE SUCCESSFUL OPERATION OF A MAJOR COMMAND, ACTIVITY, AGENCY, INSTALLATION OR PROJECT.

LEGION OF MERIT: OUTSTANDINGLY MERITORIOUS CONDUCT IN THE PERFORMANCE OF OUTSTANDING SERVICE. THE PERFORMANCE MUST HAVE BEEN SUCH AS TO MERIT RECOGNITION OF KEY INDIVIDUALS FOR SERVICE RENDERED IN A CLEARLY OUTSTANDING MANNER. THE REGULATION DEFINES A KEY INDIVIDUAL AS A PERSON WHO IS OCCUPYING A POSITION THAT IS INDISPENSABLE TO AN ORGANIZATION, ACTIVITY OR PROJECT.

MERITORIOUS SERVICE MEDAL: THE ACTS OR SERVICE RENDERED MUST HAVE BEEN COMPARABLE TO THAT REQUIRED FOR THE LEGION OF MERIT BUT IN A DUTY OF LESSER RESPONSIBILITY. Since this medal ranks just below the Legion of Merit, the duty performed and the position held are not required to be as great as for the Legion of Merit but the responsibility does have to be considerable.

"ARMY COMMENDATION MEDAL:" THE REQUIRED MERITORIOUS ACHIEVEMENT OR MERITORIOUS SERVICE WHILE OF LESSER DEGREE THAN THAT REQUIRED FOR THE AWARD OF THE MERITORIOUS SERVICE MEDAL, MUST, NEVERTHELESS, HAVE BEEN ACCOMPLISHED WITH DISTINCTION AND MUST HAVE BEEN OF THE SAME DEGREE AS REQUIRED FOR THE AWARD OF THE BRONZE STAR MEDAL OR THE AIR MEDAL. Notice that there is no mention of the kind of duty or position that is required.

In summary of the criteria, the Distinguished Service Medal, the Legion of Merit and the Meritorious Service Medal, all require that the awardee be, in a position of ultimate responsibility; a key individual, one that is indispensable to the organization or activity; and have a duty of considerable responsibility. The Army Commendation Medal requires outstanding achievement or service but no particular position.

One of the problems now with deciding whether awards should be approved or not is the English language. There are just not enough words to differentiate between types of achievement or service. The regulation uses, as we have seen, words like "outstanding meritorious conduct," "outstanding achievement" and "outstanding meritorious service" in deciding criteria. There is no difference in the meaning of these adjectives and so the criteria of position has been added. If position was not set forth, it would be almost impossible to decide what medal the achievement or service was wortn. There just aren't enough words. Even with "position" added as a criteria, it is still very difficult to make a decision.

If too many of one kind of medal is awarded, the medal is "cheapened." It is no longer an honor to receive one but almost degrading if you don't. This has happened and the Army is trying to see that it doesn't happen again.

Now as to the procedures for deciding what awards should be made. The commanding General is the approving authority for Army Commendation Medals. He can disapprove the Meritorious Service Medal. The Commanding General, 3rd US Army, is the approving authority for Meritorious Service Medals and can disapprove recommendation for the Legion of Merit. The Commanding General, USCONARC, is the approving authority for the Legion of Merit. The approval-disapproval authority is therefore centered at a certain command level for each award. Each command has a board that looks at each award and makes recommendation to the Commanding General. The Commanding General and his board thus provide standardization. After seeing a few recommendations, they develop an unwritten standard against which all future recommendations are measured. If the recommendations don't measure up, they are disapproved. This means that recommendations for the Metiorious Service Medal and the Legion of Merit that are forwarded to 3rd Army must meet or equal this standard. Each higher headquarters goes through the same process.

This then, is why some recommendations are downgraded the achievements or services that they describe don't meet the standard. Perhaps the individual has done something that merits the award but when the words don't show that merit, the recommendation won't be approved. The words must be direct and describe what the man really did.

There are other awards that can be made when the achievement or service doesn't measure up to the standards for an Army Commendation Medal. The Certificate of Achievement ranks just under the Army Commendation Medal and is followed by a Letter of Commendation and then a Letter of Appreciation. They all go in the individual's file and are considered by promotion boards, etc. They don't require as much paperwork and yet they are tangible evidence that the individual has done an excellent job.

Fort Benning's Catholic Community reaches an historic milestone next Sunday with the election of major unit representatives to the Parish Council. Printed ballots will be distributed at all the Masses celebrated on post. Eligible to vote are all members of the Catholic faith identified with Fort Benning, including teen-agers and retired personnel and their families. First phase construction on partitions for barracks ends; paperwork continues

By John Box

Phase one in the construction of barracks partitions under VOLAR is now completed. The final nail has been driven, the pictures have been taken and the plaudits have all been received. Or have they?

What about all the materials supplied to the 43rd Engr. Bn., 931st Engr. Gp. — the sheet rock, lumber, molding and tons of nails? What about the plans and cost analysis submitted to the U. S. Congress and later the construction blueprints to guide the work?

It all began in the first week of December 1970. VOLAR questionnaires received from the enlisted men at Fort Benning indicated that more privacy was a high priority item. In response, Maj. Gen. Orwin C. Talbott, post commander, ordered the Engineering Office and Project Design to draw plans for partitions in the barracks ranging from sneeze boards to complete enclosures.

The 43rd Engr. Bn. constructed four types of partitions which were inspected by Gen. Talbott on Dec. 20. He decided that the complete enclosure design would be utilized in the brick barracks and that an off-the-floor and off-the-ceiling design would be used in the wooden barracks.

Since the VOLAR test period for Fort Benning was to start Jan. 1 and run through June 30, it was essential that the partitions be constructed as soon as possible for the purposes of funding and evaluation.

Personnel at the Engineering Office and Project Design were told to have plans for the construction project completed by the first working day in January. They had from Dec. 20 to Jan. 4 to draw up a complete cost analysis for two types of brick barracks and four types of wooden barracks. Buildings had to be identified by number with all construction materials costed — the price of lumber, sheet rock, nails and rental equipment had to be determined.

In all, they generated a one foot stack of paper work, working until 8 and 10 p.m. over the holidays to get the work finished in time. It would be impossible to mention all those who contributed to this massive undertaking but to mention a few: Simeon B. Cox, chief of the Engineering Division; George Berdue, chief of the Project Design Branch; John V. Clements, Civil Engineering, and Charles O. Wood, Electrical Section.

Once the paper work for this part of the project was completed it went to Gen. Talbott for approval, then to the 3rd U. S. Army, Continental Army Command, Office of the Corps of Engineers and finally to the U. S. Congress for funding.

It wasn't until April 1 that word was received that funds for the partition construction had been approved. Durward L. Lake, chief of the Supply and Storage Division, was notified that he had money to spend and spend he did, $350,000 in three days.

Approximately 574,000 board feet of two-by-fours and some 34,000 sheets of sheet rock were placed on order. There were also many other construction materials ordered including nails, paint, tape, jointing compound and some 2,000 doors.

However, these materials had to be ordered and it was imperative that work start as soon as possible. It was originally hoped that the project would begin in February but nothing could be done, not one nail could be ordered until the funding was approved. Now it was April, the money was here, the engineers at the 43rd Engr. Bn. were ready to work but no materials.

A call went out from Lake to the General Services Administration (GSA) in Atlanta. The GSA VOLAR project officer, Regenland Alberson, got the ball rolling with the arrival of three truck loads of materials on April 5 and construction began.

Meanwhile, Lake and his assistant, Willis Nutt, were concerning themselves with the arrival of the huge quantities of lumber and sheet rock. "Under normal conditions it would have taken a minimum of 90 days and possibly a lot longer to get that much lumber and sheet rock to Fort Benning," Lake said. But it didn't take that long . . . not by a long shot. Within the week lumber was rolling into Fort Benning with a steady supply coming in in just two weeks. GSA in Atlanta emptied their stock piles to get the project started and within two weeks was shipping a steady supply of sheet rock."

Synopsis

FROM RUSSIA, WITH LOVE (Rated G), based on the Ian Fleming thriller, stars Sean Connery in the role of Secret Service Agent James Bond. Bond is assigned to aid a young Russian girl (Daniela Bianchi, to defect to the West).

SPECTRE, a group of international criminals plan to use the beautiful Russian girl to lure Bond to his death. After eluding several death traps, Bond and the girl board the Orient Express bound for the West and freedom.

SPECTRE has assigned their cold-blooded killer, Red Grant, to kill and discredit Bond. In a chilling hand-to-hand battle, Agent 007 and SPECTRE'S fanatical killer, fight to the death aboard the train.

PATTON (Rated GP), winner of 7 Academy Awards, including Best Picture and Best Actor (George C. Scott in the title role) is a "no-holds-barred" portrait of the legendary General George S. Patton Jr., whose battlefield victories in World War II were among the most spectacular in history — and whose flamboyant and rebellious personality, at the same time, earned his disfavor and loss of command.

Patton is also the story of two men told in counterpoint, contrasting the erratic and theatrical General Patton with the steady, calm and brilliant professional, General of the Army, Omar N. Bradley, who was first subordinate to Patton and later his superior.

THE LADY IN THE CAR WITH GLASSES AND A GUN (Rated R) begins when advertising executive Oliver Reed asks his secretary, Samantha Eggar, to accompany him and his wife, her former co-worker, to the airport and drive the car back.

Returning with the car, Samantha takes a wrong turn and finds herself on the way to the Riviera, she keeps going, only to soon be beset by a strange, disquieting series of events.

Events which convince her she is going mad, make her easy prey for a charming rogue (John McEnery), who lures her into a romantic interlude, then steals the car. She later finds the car and discovers a body and a gun in the trunk.

Suddenly Samantha finds herself caught up in a hideous murder with every clue pointing to one terrifying fact: either she is the killer or the next victim.

PERCY (Rated R) is the story of a very successful transplant. As recipient of the world's most unique transplant, Hywel Bennett is anxious to find out who the donor was.

He traces down the neglected wife of the deceased donor (Cyd Hayman), who urges Bennett to look up the women in her late husband's past (Britt Ekland, Julia Foster and Elke Sommer). Bennett is anxious to find out if the transplant is as good as ever but realizes he can't be unfaithful to his wife (Janet Key).

A TOWN CALLED HELL (Rated R) explodes as a dual manhunt reaches its terrorizing climax and a whole town is held hostage.

PCS moves drop

Army tours more stable

Statistics released by the Department of Defense indicate that stability in assignments has increased significantly in the Army.

A comparison of the projected permanent change of station (PCS) moves for the current budget year with fiscal 1970 (mid-1969 through mid-1970) indicates a 40 per cent decrease.

Lt. Gen. W. T. Kerwin Jr., Army deputy chief of staff for personnel, told a House subcommittee:

"The Army has reduced PCS to the minimum consistent with short-tour requirements and current policies of equity. The one major change which will have a pronounced effect on stability is the troop reduction program for Southeast Asia. Stability will occur when the Army's short-tour requirements approximate those supported in the pre - Vietnam, CONUS-only rotation base.

"To achieve a reduction in PCS does not require new policy changes, but rather full implementation of established policy which has been restricted in use by short-tour demands.

"Turbulence has a deteriorating effect on the morale, discipline and welfare of our soldiers. Our goal is sustainment of forces in both short-tour and other long-tour areas. Sustainment means meeting our overseas replacement requirements with personnel in the proper grades while maintaining a one-year tour policy for Vietnam.

"Combined with this objective, we attempt to provide individuals with at least 25 months in CONUS, or other long-tour areas prior to successive short-tour assignment.

PFC Predicto PICKS!

Welcome back one and all! The precocious prognisticator returns to propound a plethora of pigskin prophesies. This week the sagacious soothsayer senses a satiety of scoring schools whilst he quickly quashes the quixotic quibblers of the Information Office. They'll be mourning their misconceptions Monday while the mirthful minstrel of matchless magnificence mashes the maudlin pencil pushers into puddles of pathos. To enter call the glib gamester of the gridiron at 545-1622 or 7241, but know that you risk the redundant ridicule of the reckless regent of reverses.

Dodgers Combat Drugs

In Los Angeles, where being eccentric is often an asset, a couple of straight guys like Dodgers Wes Parker and Jim Lefebvre could almost be classified as misfits.

These two are strange indeed. Both are members of the establishment and admit it. They have a job, enjoy their work, earn good money, and have no intentions of dropping out. Besides, they enjoy helping people — especially youngsters who are thinking about using drugs.

Parker, a tall, soft spoken Californian who divides his time between first base and right field, and Lefebvre, the Dodgers regular second sacker, spend their idle hours informing Los Angeles school children on the dangers of drug abuse.

"We try to present the facts to the youngsters and let them draw their own conclusions," Parker said. "We don't believe in scare tactics. Both Jim and I have studied drugs and the effect drug abuse has on your body, and we simply pass this information on to the kids. We hope our presentation will assist the students in making intelligent decisions regarding drug use."

Both of the Dodgers stars have studied drug abuse at the UCLA Medical School, and are frequent visitors to junior and senior high schools in the Los Angeles area.

"Their program is so outstanding," reports one L.A. sports writer, "that they often receive standing ovations. And anytime you can make kids stand up and applaud at this day and age, thats quite an accomplishment."

Snake-Bitten Rico

Joe Leonard, a 37 year old racing vet from San Jose, California won $132,089 for one days work Sunday by winning the Indy-type California 500 . . . Leonard drove his Ford-powered Samsonite Special at an average speed of 152.354 in the $721,000 race at Ontario, California.

Rico Carty must be wondering what a fellow has to do to get a break. "The Beeg Boy" as he is known to his fans has missed the entire 1971 season because of a knee injury suffered while playing winter ball.

The affable Atlanta Braves outfielder had almost recovered from his knee ailment when he was brutally beaten last month by three Atlanta policemen.

The three cops were fired following an investigation and hearing, but that doesn't do much for Rico's injuries.

"My knee clicks when I walk," said the Dominican Republic native, "And my ear hurts each time I yawn."

Doctors have now informed Carty that he might have permanent eye damage as a result of his beating.

"It will be a while before they know for sure if I have serious eye damage," last year's National League batting champ explained, "but I do know that it will be a long time before I am ready to play again."

Big Rico just might be the original hard luck guy. One of the most gifted hitters to ever play the game, his career has been marred by injury and bad health.

The 30 year old Carty sat out the entire 1968 campaign because of tuberculosis, and his right shoulder has been dislocated more times than he cares to remember.

And after his recent fracas with the law, Carty probably thought he had run the course with bad luck. But he was wrong. Last weekend a fire severely damaged his restaurant "Rico Carty's Barbeque" — in northeast Atlanta, and his mysterious misfortune continues.

Irish Number One

Probably the only thing more certain than death, taxes and Nguye Van Thieu being re-elected president of South Vietnam is Notre Dame finishing as one of the top ten collegiate football teams in the nation . . . in fact, one of the major wire services has already prognosticated that the Fighting Irish will emerge as the number one team in the land.

If you remember Carl Furillo roaming right field for the old Brooklyn Dodgers you're showing your age. The rifle-armed Furillo, who thrilled many a Dodger fan in Flatbush's Ebbetts Field, has missed out on the post-playing days glory that befalls many athletes. Restricted by only an eighth grade education, he is now an elevator repairman in New York . . . And ditto Don Larsen, the only man to pitch a perfect game in world series play. The ex-New York Yankee righthander, who hurled his gem in the 1956 series against the Dodgers, is a bartender in San Diego, California.

Army captain logs number 2,000 to join select airborne group

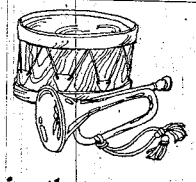
Capt. Claude D. Johnson of 1817 Howe Ave., Columbus, Ga., a U. S. Army career officer, touched down on the Decker Strip Drop Zone on a recent Sunday afternoon (Aug. 29) completing another weekend parachute jump with the Fort Benning Sports Parachute Club.

The jump was not just one of many jumps he had made with the club while attending the Infantry Officers Advanced Course. It was the 2000th officially logged jump the captain had made as a sports parachutist and he joined a very select group of individuals who have achieved this goal. Specifically, at that instant he became the 36th sports parachutist in the United States and the second parachutist in the State of Georgia to officially log 2,000 jumps in the sports parachute program.

Parachuting has practically become a way of life for Johnson who has been jumping from aircraft in flight for more than 13 years. He has also fashioned an impressive record as a military parachutist. He has completed more than 200 military jumps. He is rated a Master Parachutist and has attended all of the parachuting and allied subject schools offered by the Army.

He was the honor graduate of his class when he completed Basic Airborne training at Ft. Bragg, N. C., in 1957. Later that year he was selected class honor graduate when he completed jump Master School in Mainz, Germany. In 1962 when he attended the Infantry School Pathfinder Course at Fort Benning, he was again named honor graduate and selected to remain with the Pathfinder Group as an instructor.

During his career as a parachutist, Johnson has made drops in Canada, Germany, France, Vietnam, Thailand and Malaysia.



The captain, now en route to Southeast Asia for his third tour of duty in that area, first entered the service as an enlisted man in 1954. He served overseas tours in Korea, Japan and Germany and in 1960 was selected as a member of the original cadre of the Army Pilot Model Recondo School at Ft. Campbell, Ky.

He was commissioned a second lieutenant of Infantry in 1964 after successful completion of the Infantry Officer Candidate Course at Fort Benning. He is also a graduate of the Ranger Course at Fort Benning and the Special Forces School at the John F. Kennedy Center for Military Assistance, Ft. Bragg.

His overseas assignements as a commissioned officer include two tours with the Special Forces in The Republic of Vietnam — the first, from 1965 to 1966, as the executive officer of a Special Forces "A" Team and the second as the team leader of a Special Forces Military Assistance Team in 1968 and 1969.

More than 300 compete in Rod and Gun contests

More than 300 Rod and Run Club members and an undetermined number of their dependents spent a large part of the Labor Day Weekend trying to land a fish that would score a win in the club holiday $500 fishing contest.

Some had hopes of winning one of the $50 Savings Bonds and others were just trying to catch one fish to qualify them for the 14 foot jon boat with electric motor, battery and battery case offered as a special prize.

Betty Rinaldo was the lucky winner of the boat. Her name was the first to be drawn and she was there to claim the prize.

Savings Bonds and merchandise certificates were the prizes offered to the fishermen catching the largest bass, bream and catfish. First place winners in each category received a $50 Savings Bond, second place winners a $25 Savings Bond the third largest entry received a $15 merchandise order, fourth place a $10, fifth place an $8 and sixth place a $5 merchandise order.

The Swidereks, father and son, dominated the bass contest. Pete Swiderek led the contest from the beginning. His winning entry weighed in 8-pounds, 12-ounces. His father, Benidict was just behind him with an 8-pound, 10-ounce catch. Both fish came from Harps Pond. Third place went to Frank Shaw with a 7-pound, 13-ounce entry. Fourth place went to Jack Yearty, fifth to Charles Putnam and sixth to Albert Hoolopa.

There were more catfish entered in the contest than any other species. Most of the catches came from Twilight and Victory Ponds but the big prize winners came from Weems and Kings. Donald McKinney brought in the 12-pound, 4-ounce monster that took first place.

There was only a two ounce difference between the second and third place winners. Robert Brown and his 10-pound 2-ounce entry from Weems Pond with an even 10-pound catch from Kings Pond. Bobbie Duggan took fourth place, William Jones fifth and James Covin sixth place.

The winning entry in the bream contest came from Patterson Pond. It was caught by James Deal and tipped the scale at 1-pound, 1-ounce. Second place went to Lawton Walker with a 10-ounce catch from Kings Pond. James Veelin was third. Peter Metasavage fourth. Russel Rohrer fifth and George Conner sixth.

Orienteering team needs new orienteers

What is an Army Orienteer?

Walker also said, "Orienteering challenges your mental and physical capabilities."

The Fort Benning Orienteering Team is composed of individuals who compete on an individual basis in track events and cross country events.

The Team is a special duty assignement which includes lots of running and travel. Some of the training is done in Florida, Tennessee, Virginia, Illinois and Canada.

The Orienteering Team recently took top honors in the All Army Orienteering Trials at Ft. Belvoir, Va. and team members have recently completed in distance running events in North Carolina and Atlanta.

Anyone interested in joining the team phone Walker at 545-6021 or 687-7532.

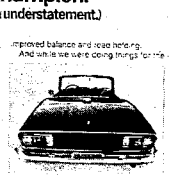
Sports Car Club of America drivers call it a champion.
(Typical American understatement.)



In the SCCA National Championships last year, the Mark III Spitfire took first, second and third in its class.

Champion indeed! That's what the English would call a bit of all right.

But we didn't rest on our laurels. We radically reworked the 1970 champion to make it work even better for 1971. On our new Mark IV, we strengthened the engine bearings, designed a new close ratio all-synchro gearbox and modified the suspension for improved balance and road holding.

And while we were doing things for the inside, inside, Ferrari body designer Pininfarina did a lot for the outside.

As far as we can tell, the car is now—as an American term—A-OK by anybody's standard. Yes, try it at your Triumph dealer. The new improved sports car for 1971.

ROD AND GUN CLUB Notes

By Bill Kloeb

The Federal Bureau of Sports Fisheries and Wildlife wants to increase the cost of the Federal Duck Stamp to provide more revenue for preservation and development of living areas for migratory waterfowl.

According to Dr. Joseph P. Linduska, assistant director of the Federal Bureau of Sports Fisheries and Wildlife, the habitat for migratory birds, is under increasing pressure for destruction by conversion to other uses that destroy or reduce their value to waterfowl. He claims thousands of acres of marshlands have been drained, eliminating nesting and roosting sites for ducks and geese. More Federal money is needed to purchase potholes and marshland areas to be developed into ideal locations for the birds. The Bureau proposes to do this by increasing the cost of the Federal Duck Stamp required for hunting waterfowl from the present $3 to $5.

Area is off Migration Route

Duck and geese hunting is not too popular here because few birds come to this area during fall migrations. There are four principle routes or flyways used by migratory birds in the United States. The Eastern flyway running along the Atlantic Coast, The Mississippi flyway which follows the course of the Mississippi River, The Central Flyway along the Rocky Mountains and the western Flyway along the Pacific coastline. We are located between the Atlantic and Mississippi flyways so the only birds we see are those that become lost or are forced off course by storms. Some of the ducks coming to the area become natives. One duck that has made this area home and increased in numbers is the wood duck. While they are classified as a migratory duck the young born here make the area a permanent home.

The wood duck is a welcome addition to the game bird population of the area. He is a fairly large bird about 20 inches long with a short neck and a long tail. The male is a colorful bird, predominately yellow on his bottom portions and brown on top. His upper feathers are shot with glittering shades of green, blue and purple. The head is capped with a multi-colored mask and a long feathered crest.

His habits are a little peculiar for a duck spending much of his time in the woods away from water where he feeds on nuts and insects and also he makes his home in the woods. Favorite places are in hollow trees, apparently the higher the better. This preference for wooded areas is no doubt the reason the wood duck got his name.

Several years ago the species seemed to be headed for extinction. Lack of suitable nesting places probably had a lot to do with the situation until game biologists found the wood duck would settle for a man-made home of hollow trees large enough to accomodate his size.

Conservation groups all over the country began projects to build houses the ducks could use for nests. Here at Fort Benning the problem is comparatively simple as far as building the house is concerned. Small arms ammunition boxes have the dimensions found to be ideal. The only work that is involved is cutting an entrance hole in the side of the box.

Fish and Game Unit Provides Housing

Last year the Fish and Game Unit located more than 100 houses in remote parts of the reservation known to be typical wood duck country. A recent survey conducted by the Wildlife Unit determined that more than half of the converted ammunition boxes were being used as homes by the wood ducks. According to Roy Johnson, chief of the Fish and Game Unit this is a pretty good percentage. It doesn't mean that the boxes that are not occupied have been rejected by the birds. Its more probable that they just haven't been found by ducks in search of a home. The Fish and Game Unit plans to put out about 100 more boxes this year on the theory that the more there are the more that will be found by ducks looking for a place to build a nest.

The hunter having ideas about harvesting some of the Fort Benning wood duck population should make sure he is doing it legally. The Federal Government sets the open season for all migratory birds. The hunter needs a state license, post permit and a Federal duck stamp before he takes to the field.

USAMTU honors select individuals

The U.S. Army Marksmanship Training Unit recognized select individuals in a unit formation Sept. 3 in which personnel were presented awards for their contributions to the Unit and the U. S. Army's shooting achievements during the past competitive season.

During the ceremony, Col. Robert M. Piper, USAMTU commander, awarded the Meritorious Service Medal to SSgt. Shelva R. Smith, a Senior Small Arms Repairman in the Marksmanship shops, for his support of the marksmanship effort in Korea during 1970-71.

Shooters recognized for their achievements included SSgt. Barbara Hile who was awarded the Distinguished International Badge. She has already been awarded the Distinguished Rifle Badge after winning the Women's National Championship for five years in a row and this year won the National Women's Pistol Championship at Camp Perry.

Another shooter recognized for marksmanship prowess was Capt. Lanny R. Bassham who was also awarded the Distinguished International Badge. Bassham is an International Rifle Competitor and was recognized for his skillful marksmanship during the Pan American Games and CISM Matches.

Col. Piper also presented CISM Certificates to five members of the unit which were signed by the Chief Delegate of the CISM.

Receiving the International certificates and recognition were: SFC Bonnie Harmon, SFC Hezekiah Clark, SFC Harland Reynolds, Capt. Lanny R. Bassham and Capt. Gregory R. Dalton. The first three were for pistol achievement while the last two were for International Rifle. Harmon set a new CISM record in Military Rapid Fire Pistol.

SSgt. John Smith, newly crowned National Pistol Champion, was awarded a Certificate of Achievement for his winning the Interservice Pistol Championship at Lackland AFB, Texas, following his achievement of capturing the National Championships at Camp Perry, Ohio.

Defending champion

Mason Rudolph, winner of the Green Island tournament last year, checks the fairways for this year's Southern Invitational Open. He will defend his title against an impressive lineup of professional PGA golfers.

ACS to begin 'Fun Time'

Fun and pasttime is the name of the game.

The Army Community Service (ACS) is preparing a series of events designed especially for handicapped children. "Saturday Fun Time" will begin on Sept. 25 and will run throughout May to coincide with the school year. Weekly sessions will be held each Saturday in Bldg. 1300 at Yeager St.

The program includes arts and crafts, music, dancing, table games, bowling, gymnastics and sports in general.

The program is open to all children of military personnel whether active, retired, divorced or deceased. The minimum age is 6 years old. Groups will be formed according to their age.

Bus transportation is provided from a child's residence to Bldg. 1300 and back. It is requested that parents accompany their children on the first trip only. For further information call Lt. Peter Hamilton, 545-1633-1233 or Mrs. Raymond Gunderson, 545-1708.

The handicapped children's program is a year-round project and operates under a group of volunteer personnel.

However, ACS needs more volunteers. If you are interested to work in the committee you are requested to call any of the telephone numbers mentioned above.

An Eskimo hello

General W. C. Westmoreland, Army chief of staff, visits with Eskimo children from the village of Akiak, Alaska. The youngsters were receiving medical and dental examinations from Army doctors who had flown in with a Medipod — a mobile clinic carried by a CH-54 "Flying Crane" helicopter. Civilian, military work together to support many aviation units

Civilian and military personnel work together to provide both direct and general support to units throughout the South in the Post Fixed Field Shop located at Lawson Field. In two large hangers work is continually in progress for the general support of all aviation units on post and the direct support of all fixed wing elements on post as well as all satellite units such as the Georgia and Alabama National Guards, and Army posts such as Ft. Gordon and Ft. McPherson. A U-IA Otter, light cargo aircraft, is used by the unit to periodically send technical assistance to these other units. The Fixed Field Shop also does the maintenance on all transfer aircraft. For example, nine OH-6 type helicopters are now being readied for shipment to Puerto Rico.

The Fixed Field Shop is composed of 80 per cent civilian and 20 per cent military labor. Together they handle seven types of fixed wing aircraft and six types of rotary wing aircraft. At present there are only a dozen men utilized in the trade shops, four military and eight civilian. With these men the sheet-metal, machine, hydraulic, paint, electrical, instrument, and engine shops try to keep pace with the workload. Mr. Shirah, foreman of the sheetmetal shop, explained that his shop alone needed two more men to provide complete coverage on each aircraft within a reasonable time, and that about thirty more men were needed throughout the complex to provide complete maintenance. Many persons expressed the need for more manpower.

Because the boss won't accept any excuses, we'll accept any reasonable deal this week. That's what happens when this Little Profit dealer has a clearance. Since we must write so many cars off our books, you can write hundreds of dollars off your deal.

Discuss problems

Members of the 931st Group Soldiers' Council discuss problems in discipline at the company level during a recent meeting with all company level first sergeants. The soldiers contended that enforcement of discipline is not being applied equally on the individual level.

Local Jaycees sponsor Army appreciation night

The Columbus Jaycees hosted a Military Appreciation Night last night at the Ralston Motor Hotel.

The gathering started at 7 p.m. Senior commanders and approximately 100 junior officers from Fort Benning were invited to attend. Maj. Gen. Orwin C. Talbott was an honored guest.

The meeting was the sixth such gathering of junior officers and Jaycees. The military personnel have provided a healthy boost to the Columbus economy and a valuable asset to the community at large.

Two previous meetings were hosted by Fort Benning.

Big Z's son trades in blues

James G. Zumwalt, son of the Chief of Naval Operations, has traded in the gold piping of a Navy ensign for the gold bar of a Marine second lieutenant.

Faced with serving "no command" duty in the Navy because of his inability to distinguish the color green, young Zumwalt applied for an inter-service transfer.

The Marine Corps does not restrict its officers for what is referred to as "color blindness."

Chapter laws discussed

The September meeting of the Columbus Georgia Chapter of the Retired Officers Association will be held in the ballroom of the Fort Benning Country Club Sept. 13.

A social hour will begin at 7:30 p.m. followed by a business meeting at 8.

Local chapter by-laws and goals will be the first items for discussion during the business meeting.

Commissioned and warrant officers retired from the Army, Marines, Air Force, Navy, United States Coast Guard or the United States Public Health Service are eligible to join the association.

All commissioned and warrant officers retired from these organizations are invited to attend the meeting.

For additional information phone Maj. (ret.) Wayne Fuller, 689-5443.

Warrant officer develops EST desk calculator

The concept of Expanded Service Testing (EST) has made more difficult the Project Officer's task of coordinating test resources, manpower utilization, subtest scheduling, and test reporting within the time-frame of his test plan.

CWO T. L. Golden of the US Army Infantry Board Supporting Weapons Test Branch has developed a calculator which enables the Project Officer to determine to the day, the subtest to be performed, the number of personnel needed, and the dates of makpr events in each subtest.

The device, called the Project Officer's Desk Calculator, is based upon the juxtapositioning of two ploar scals in rotary fashion. It is similar to a circular slide rule. The outer scale is the calendar year divided into 5-day work-weeks. The inner scale, divided into 5-day test weeks, depicts subtests to which the test item is to be subjected, conference date indicators, report due dates, and test completion date indicator.

By rotating the inner scale, the Project Officer is able to adjust his test events to any calendar day to allow for advances or delays resulting from holidays or early arrival of test items.

In future application, the desk calculator is seen as a managment tool in predicting calendar date milestones based upon available personnel, resources, material and funds.

Minorities

Monority group business organipations got $1.5 million more in Veterans Administration contracts duraing fiscal year 1971 than during 1970.

Tri-Community Combined Federal Campaign begins

Fort Benning's initial Tri-Community Combined Federal Campaign (CFC) is scheduled to begin Sept. 21 and continue until Nov. 5.

The fund drive, a combination of United Givers, National Health Agencies and The International Service Agencies, will affect all U. S. Government military and civilian personnel in the Fort Benning, Columbus, Phenix City area.

The combining of the three traditional fund drives into one was recommended last year during the United Givers drive, but its use was left to the discretion of each post. However, this year the campaign is mandatory in government agencies.

In an effort to make contributions convenient and easy, Fort Benning has adopted the payroll deduction plan. If an individual wishes to use the payroll deduction plan, the minimum amount that can be deducted per pay period is 50 cents for civilians and either 50 cents or $1 for military depending on whether they are being paid once or twice monthly. The payroll deduction will take effect on the first pay period in 1972 and will continue until Dec. of 1972 or until the deduction is ceased by request.

James F. Schoonover, secretary-treasurer, Community Activities Association, and post project officer for the campaign, noted that the campaign is strictly voluntary. He emphasized that this campaign calls for individuals to give a fair share to help charitable agencies in the community.

Payroll deductions are not the only means available to donate. A check or cash can also be given if the individual feels that it is the best way for him to donate.

An individual may choose to give to a single charity; a list of which is printed in the campaign pamphlet. The donator may designate which agency will receive his donation, and be assured that his money will find its way to the proper location.

Every unit on Fort Benning will have a project officer assigned to head the drive in his area. Under him will be his key men, who will actually approach every man in his area and seek voluntary donations. He will explain to you that if you choose the payroll deduction plan, it may be stopped at any time.

A kickoff ceremony will be held at 1:30 p.m. Sept. 21, in Marshall Auditorium. At that time, Maj. Gen. Orwin C. Talbott, post commander, and representatives from the campaign's participating groups will speak.

The Fort Benning campaign office is located in Bldg. 89, telephone numbers 545-1950, 2526.

Mental Hygiene Clinic helps sort out problems

By Cathy Wright

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first part in a series dealing with mental hygiene.)

Shirley Smith's husband has been in Vietnam for five months. She is lonely and worn out from wearing too many hats. As both mom and dad, she listens to her three kids' problems, and now she needs someone to listen to hers. Sometimes she thinks she's going crazy.

Is she crazy? Hardly, but like many other people, she finds that everyday living gets a little overwhelming sometimes.

Over the past year, Fort Benning's Medical Department Activity (MEDDAC) personnel have been building programs to help Shirley and people like her. The Mental Hygiene Clinic, located in the hospital annex, now offers a variety of services to military dependents who need help in sorting out problems.

The impetus for increased psychiatric services for dependents came from a number of areas. Basically, medical officers believe that the Army community is becoming more aware that an unhappy family produces an unhappy and consequently less productive serviceman.

"All these programs are due to increased awareness of the importance of treating families of active duty personnel to keep them on active duty," said Col. H. Haskell Ziperman, chief of MEDDAC.

With the advent of The Modern Volunteer Army (VOLAR) and MEDDAC's "We Care" program, the role of the family in the service community has become more obvious.

Lt. Col. Herbert G. See, chief of social work services at the Mental Hygiene Clinic explained it this way. "People operate within a system and their actions are interrelated. If a wife becomes depressed, say due to the loss of her mother, it affects the behavior of her husband and children. This sort of depression is a vicious circle, as they withdraw emotional support from each other. The husband

Physicals set for elementary school youths

In coordination with the Assistant Superintendent of Schools in Muscogee County and the Fort Benning Dependent Schools Officer, a schedule for school physical examinations has been established for children of military personnel in the Columbus-Phenix City area.

All Head Start, kindergarten and first grade students will receive a complete examination. Physicals for boys are slated for Sept. 18 and for girls on Sept. 25. Girls and boys will follow the same alphabetical and time schedule on the appropriate dates for reporting for physicals. Children with last names beginning with A thru G will report at 8 a.m.; H thru N at 9 a.m.; and O thru Z at 10 a.m.

Makeup examinations for Head Start, kindergarten and 1st grade as well as any students in the 2nd through 4th grades requiring a physical examination and not previously enrolled in a school in the local area will be on Oct. 2 for boys and Oct. 30

In New Jersey

Army legal assistance officers can represent clients

For many years, armed forces personnel and their dependents have received qualified legal advice from their legal assistance officers. Until recently the legal assistance program was limited to advice. Now under the pilot programs being conducted by the armed services, servicemen who cannot afford the services of an attorney may be represented by a Legal Assistance Officer. The program for the Army, however, is presently limited to the state of New Jersey.

The officers and staff at the Office of the Staff Judge Advocate here at Fort Benning are participating in their own volunteer legal aid program to help qualified servicemen and civilians obtain legal representation through the Columbus Legal Aid Society. On Saturday mornings, these Army lawyers are available at the Columbus Legal Aid Society Office to answer questions and to assist the Legal Aid Staff in providing their clients with a full range of legal services.

Indigent persons often lose their legal rights simply because they either are not aware of them or because they can't afford legal representation. With the new volunteer services available on Saturday at the Columbus Legal Aid Society, more people residing in the Columbus-Phenix City-Fort Benning community should be able to seek qualified legal service when needed.

Since January, Mrs. Rufe E. McCombs, General Counsel for the Columbus Legal Society, has been offering legal services to people of low income.

In need of assistance, Mrs. McCombs, General Counsel for the Columbus Legal Society, together with with Capt. Stephen Lenske of the Legal Assistance Division, Office o the Staff Judge Advocate, Fort Benning, formulated a program wherein attorneys and staff at Fort Benning could render volunteer assitance to the Legal Aid Society.

An August 13, Bayonet article, "Military Attorneys Defend Clients in Civilian Courts," erroneously indicated that military attorneys could represent millary clientele in civilian courts. The military attorneys requested and were granted waivers by The Judge Advocate General to participate in the legal aid program. These attorneys cannot and do not actually practice law. However, they interview clients, research cases, and draft necessary documents for the Columbus Legal Aid Society.

The Columbus Legal Aid Society is one of the two offices affiliated with the Georgia Indigents Legal Services, Inc. The Columbus office services 22 counties and works closely with the Georgia Department of Family and Children Services.

Until last year, free legal services to indigents were available only through attorneys in private practice who volunteered their services when time permitted. Now any serviceman or civilian whose net monthly income is $200 or less, with an additional allowance of $30 per child, is eligible for legal counsel at the Legal Aid Society. The society's office is now open Saturday from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m., at which time it is staffed by volunteering military attorneys, staff, and wives, under the supervision of the Legal Aid Society's General Counsel.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT
by Bill King

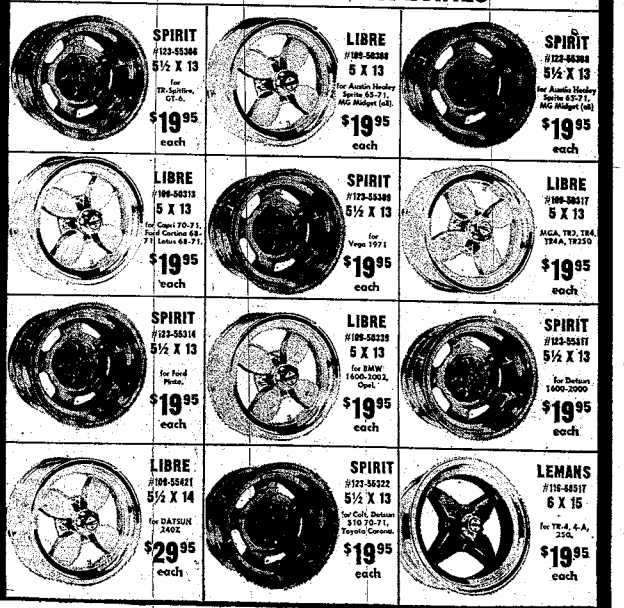
Sprinkle wheat germ — the kind that comes already sweetened — over vanilla ice cream. The kids will love the nutty taste and won't even suspect they're getting important vitamins.

Alcoholic content of liquor used to be tested by pouring some whiskey on a little gunpowder and igniting it. A steady blue flame was "proof" of 50 per cent alcohol, or "just right". Nowadays we would call such a liquor 100 proof and pretty potent.

Swedish meatballs have an extra tangy taste if you add a bit of grated lemon rind to the meat mixture before cooking.

Just before baking brown 'n serve rolls, brush with butter and make a long cut into each roll. Fill with grated cheese and minced onion.

Surprise the family at breakfast this weekend by slicing a canteloupe or honeydew cross-wise instead of in the usual wedges. Trim the center of each slice and fill with berries and banana slices.



You'll discover we always have lots of surprising and tasty ways to serve your favorite foods at

Scout Council to attend Ranger orienteering clinic

By Bill Kloeb

The Ranger Department of the United States Army Infantry School will hold an orienteering clinic for explorers of the Chattahoochee Scout Council in the Ranger Department Area, (Bldg. 4833), Harmony Church tomorrow.

The clinic will begin at 9 a.m. with a welcome by Col. David Grange, Jr., department director.

The clinic will include a briefing on the Explorer Scout Program, a discussion of the history of orienteering, a picnic lunch, map and compass training and a practical exercise in the sport of orienteering. The practical exercise will be a competitive event and awards will be presented at the completion of the program.

Sweden, then spread in Europe. Only recently introduced into the United States it is enjoying a rapid growth in popularity. The Army is especially interested in the sport to develop Olympic caliber contestants for the United States teams competing in Olympic and world competitions.

Orienteering is a sport geared to the Explorer and Scouting programs. It involves outdoor activity and a knowledge of nature and terrain. The orienteer is required to move from one location to another exercising his ability to read a map, follow a compass course and take advantage of natural terrain routes. Each competitor is dependent upon his own abilities and is graded on the accuracy and speed in which he completes the course.

The sport provides a challenge to the individual's mental and physical capabilities. It originated

The program Saturday is being held in coordination with the Explorer Scout Council but is not limited to explorer scouts. Any boy or girl of high school age is invited to attend.

Additional information may be obtained by calling 1st Lt. Harry Sinclair at 545-6211 or 545-6944.

ORIENTEERING CLINIC BEGINS WITH BRIEFING

Engineers take to field for 'Readiness' testing

Elements of the 931st Engineer Group including the 43rd Engr. Bn., 586th Engr. Co. (FB) and HHC, 931st Engr. Gp. have taken to the field this week for their annual Operational Readiness Training Test (ORTT).

The ORTT is an ambitious undertaking considering the personnel employed and the projects undertaken.

The 43rd Engr. Bn., consisting of well over 1,000 officers and soldiers, is the largest element taking part in the exercise. With their heavy construction equipment they worked on bridge building and road improvement.

The 586th Engr. Co. (FB) was called upon to build an M4T6 floating bridge and a light tactical raft. Their area of operation was in the Kings Pond Area.

The entire operation was under the command of Col. Robert J. Standley, 931st Engr. Gp. commanding officer. He was supported by his staff of officer and soldiers from HHC, 931st Engr. Gp.

Agressors for the ORTT were supplied by elements from the 197th Inf. Bde. A huge quantity of artillery simulators and gas cannisters were obtained for the training test and the agressor activities were very effective in terms of added experience for the engineers.

Recruiters obtain assistants from RAP 28

The Recruiter Assistant Program (RAP 28) is one of the new ideas from VOLAR being used at Fort Benning. RAP 28 sends young soldiers back to their hometown recruiting station to assist with recruiting. The Department of the Army initiated the program to provide a real link with prospective enlistees and the Modern Army. A young man considering the Army as a career may feel more comfortable talking to a recruiter his own age. The purpose of RAP 28 is to allow the prospective soldier to discuss his future opportunities and training with a man having similar interests and viewpoints.

Presently there are 11 Army Installations participating in the RAP 28 program. Qualified recruiter assistants are assigned to work with their hometown recruiter for two weeks following their graduation from AIT, Non-Commissioned Officer Course, or Airborne Schools. During this assignment the assistant will help interview and screen interested men and will give speeches to high school and civic groups.

RAP 28 was started at Fort Benning on May 7, in The School Brigade (TSB). TSB operates the program in the 4th Bn. (Airborne) and the 6th Bn. (NCOC). Both battalions submit names of RAP volunteers to Brigade where quotas will be filled.

To qualify for RAP 28 a man must have enlisted in the Army, have a high school diploma, not have a police record, and, finally, he must be a volunteer.

The participating recruiters submitted many favorable reports which verify the success of the program. Likewise, the Recruiter Assistants expressed their enthusiasm with the two weeks spent at the Recruiting Station.

Both recruiter and assistant agree that two weeks isn't enough time to really become involved with the enlistment program and that the period should be extended. Also, it was suggested that future Recruiter Assistants be given a block of instruction in Basic Recruiting Philosophy so that they will better understand their job and know what to expect when they arrive at the recruiting station.

Q—Can the Variable Reenlistment Bonus (VRB) be paid in a lump sum?

A—Yes, provided the request is approved by Department of the Army prior to reenlistment.

Q—How is the VRB normally paid?

A—The VRB is divided by the number of years for which the individual reenlists and that sum is paid to the individual in equal increments on the reenlistment date and on the anniversary of the reenlistment.

Q—I have had a break in service and prior to coming in the Army I served in one of the other Armed Forces. I have never drawn a reenlistment bonus. My MOS has a VRB of 4. Will I be eligible to draw the VRB when I reenlist?

A—Yes, provided you are otherwise qualified and do not have more than 8 years total active federal service.

Q—Can the remaining balance of the VRB be paid in a lump sum?

A—Yes. Again this must be approved by Department of the Army prior to reenlistment.

Q—If an individual's secondary MOS has a higher VRB designator then their primary MOS can the secondary MOS be changed to the primary MOS...

A—Yes, provided the individual is otherwise qualified to reenlist and is eligible to draw the VRB.

Q—I am being denied reenlistment under the Qualitative Management Program, is there any way I can request an early out.

A—Yes, you may request an early separation up to 6 months prior to your normal ETS. Unearned portions of any previous bonus's must be repaid. Persons who elect this early out are not eligible for Project Transition training and may not reenlist at a later date. Department of the Army Message 1516172 has complete details, you should contact your personnel office for further information.

The judge says

Youths have same rights as adults

USAIC LEGAL ASISTANCE OFFICE — Our legal system has nearly always presumed innocence. To convict a person accused of a crime the jury must reach a unanimous verdict based on proof "beyond a reasonable doubt and to a moral certainty."

Why? Because life and liberty rank so high in our value scale.

In a civil suit over property, in contrast, any nine of twelve jurors can agree on a verdict. Civil actions call only for a "preponderance of the evidence" to win one party a victory.

"Preponderance" is just enough evidence to satisfy the jury that one side has offered more convincing evidence than the other.

In contrast, if there is a reasonable doubt, the criminal law gives the accused the benefit of the doubt and the right to an acquittal. In such a case the law presumes innocence which would outweigh the evidence of guilt based on mere preponderance.

For years actions in the juvenile court have been considered "civil," not criminal. A youngster, accused of acts which for an adult would be a crime escapes the taint of a criminal record. Hence the law required only a "preponderance" of the evidence for the youngster to become a ward of the court.

But recently the US Supreme Court declared this improper: A twelve-year-old boy had been before a juvenile court charged with stealing $112 from a purse. Though disputed, a "preponderance of evidence" of his guilt was found by the judge, who sent the boy to a youth camp until he was eighteen.

The boy's lawyer appealed his case to the Supreme Court, which ruled that no judge could sentence a boy on mere preponderance of the evidence. Proof would have to be "beyond a reasonable doubt" to a near certainty.

Once declared a ward, the juvenile court could sentence a youngster for long periods of time, put him on probation, and give him the stigma of a "juvenile offender." Therefore, the Supreme Court held he has a right to an attorney and to all the other rights accorded an accused adult.

Teenager's father missing in action

"I just didn't believe it could really happen to our family."

That was the feeling of an 11 year-old girl when she heard from her mother in 1966 that her father, an Air Force pilot, was shot down over Laos.

But over the next five years young Debi Wood found faith. Her father, Maj. Don C. Wood, is still listed as missing in action and it has meant much spiritual suffering and many sacrifices for her mother and five younger brothers and sisters.

Now as a 16 year-old high school student, Debi is reinforcing her faith by keeping her father's memory alive and those of other American servicemen who are listed as missing in action or as prisoners of war.

"I think that the main thing is for American people to show concern for the prisoners of war and those missing in action — to let the North Vietnamese know we are concerned about our men and want them returned home in safety," Debi said.

Debi has written a poem that describes her feelings and perhaps those of other "waiting" families. Here is Debi's poem:

By DEBI WOOD

I don't know what he suffers there,
I cannot feel his grief, despair —
His agony is only known To men who have been caged — alone
I only feel a selfish pain, A fear that I might pray in vain
And never see again his face or feel again his strong embrace.
I need his love while I am young
With many fears to walk among
With many fears to walk among
I need his help to guide me through —
To him, the dangers are not new.
For how long must I wonder when
My father will be mine again?
How many years can he survive?
Is he, even now, alive?
Before it is too late to try,
Before my life must pass him by,
Please, bring him home, and I'll be then
My father's little girl again

—as appeared in the Congressional Record February 5, 1971.

Catholics plan parish picnic for tomorrow

Catholics at Fort Benning have scheduled a parish picnic tomorrow at the USAIC Recreation Area.

The picnic, scheduled from the early afternoon until 7 p.m., will provide a chance for the parishioners at the post to enjoy a typical parish social. Hamburgers, hot dogs, rolls, relishes and beverages will be provided free by the picnic committee. Families are asked to bring one dish, either salad, vegetable or dessert, enough for their own family plus one bachelor.

Games, foot races and contests have been scheduled for the children. Special entertainment will be provided by the God Squad, a folk singing group from the Main Post Catholic Chapel.

A special feature of the picnic will be the introduction of the new unit representatives of the Parish Council elected post-wide at all Catholic Masses last Sunday.

Following the picnic a Field Mass will be celebrated at 6 p.m. at the recreation site for the parishioners attending the picnic. This Mass will meet the Sunday religious obligation for the persons attending.

Anyone who has not made a reservation to attend the picnic is cordially invited to attend with the committee's assurance there will be plenty of good food and beverages. Lt. Col. Eugene R. Darbonne has been named chairman of the picnic planning group.

Free concert to be given by Columbus Symphony

The Columbus Symphony Orchestra, Harry Kruger conductor, will present a free Family Pops Concert at the band shell in Weracoba Park Sept. 25 at 3 p.m.

Weracoba Park is located in Columbus between 13th and 17th Streets, the band shell facing 18th Avenue. It can also be reached by footbridge from Cherokee Avenue. In case of rain the concert will be held at the same time in Fine Arts Hall at Columbus College.

Featured on the program will be light classical and popular numbers from all periods and styles of music.

Some seating is provided, but most people bring their own folding chairs or blankets. Children are welcome, in fact many budding young conductors are always present. Soft drinks will be on sale, and anyone desiring to bring a picnic meal is welcome to come early or stay late to enjoy it.

The regular symphony season includes, in addition to the free Pops concerts, programs for school children and four subscription concerts, the first of which will be held in Fine Arts Hall at Columbus College on Nov. 2.

Season subscriptions may be purchased at the Pops concert on Sept. 26. Choice seats are assigned on a first-come-firstserved basis, and early application will assure the best location.

Carol Barylak remembers Ethiopia as an 'adventure'

By Carol May
Fem-line Staff Writer

"Living in Ethiopia for two years was a constant adventure, an experience I shall never forget." Carol Barylak used these words to reflect on her Foreign Service career. Assigned to Addis Abada, the capitol of Ethiopia, Carol entered the city on the best road in the nation — from the airport to Haile Selassie's palace, a distance of only several miles. Along the way, Carol saw donkeys hold traffic immobile while their owners chased them across the highway. In contrast to this primitive aspect, high-rise modern buildings were set in the middle of slum areas. Carol later discovered that these structures were built especially for the visit of Queen Elizabeth II.

Carol became interested in the Foreign Service after graduation from college because she wanted to travel. An "army brat," she decided seeing Japan and living in many areas of the United States still left the rest of the world to explore. Her secretarial background made the Diplomatic Corps an obvious choice for an adventurous, single woman.

Assigned initially to the economic division of the American embassy in Addis Abada, Carol later moved to the political section in the compound. "Having to be on my toes constantly" is Carol's way of saying that her secretarial work demanded precision and discretion beyond that of the usual job. Working with classified documents in both her embassy positions required a top security clearance.

Carol moved from the embassy complex into an apartment across the city and was the only American in the building, a rather isolated situation even in a city as large as Addis Abada. During student riots in the capitol one year, Carol was prevented from returning home from work on several occasions as her drive took her directly by Haile Selassie University. Embassy personnel were given instructions to stay where they were in any case of student unrest.

Americans had little contact with Ethiopian natives and Carol's only direct relationship was with her housemaid. Anxious to acquaint herself with native customs, Carol ventured into the marketplace to purchase items handmade by the Ethiopians. She then applied her knowledge of Amharic to barter with the tradesmen. Not required by the Foreign Service to speak the native language, Carol is credited with 100 hours of Amharic study.

Impressed by the beauty of the country, Carol made many side trips to outlying areas from the city. She remembers that cultural life was very limited, with only one English-speaking theater in Addis Abada. The embassy "family" had to depend on themselves for entertainment and theater productions were actively enjoyed by Carol and her friends. Embassy parties and receptions included the secretaries and helping guests feel at ease was part of Carol's responsibility.

At one social event, Carol met Maj. Bohdan Barylak, then captain, who was a member of the U.S. advisory group in Ethiopia. Boh courted her with regularly-sent roses and gifts from his travels into Africa. After their engagement was announced, Carol decided to leave the Foreign Service and bade farewell to Ethiopia in August, 1968.

Carol traveled to Lebanon to select her engagement ring from among those chosen by Boh on a previous trip there. After visiting Rome, Carol went to Las Vegas, Nev., to await Boh's return to the States. The Barylaks were married Dec. 21, 1968, at Fort Benning and are now residing at 145 Wilson Drive, Columbus.

Located near the Milk Bar, signs direct visitors to the OWC complex. Please park near the Thrift Shop and walk down to the Lounge building.

By exchanging ideas and trying to answer any questions, we hope to encourage more contributors to submit their news and write feature stories on individuals that would be interesting to Bayonet readers.

A letter will be sent to each publicity chairman giving more details about publicity for the coming year and ways to expedite the handling of the news. Circle Sept. 22 on your calendar and meet with us

The monthly coffee of the 51st Co., OC, 5th Stf. Bn., was held in the company day room at 9:20 a.m. Sept. 7.

The theme of "That's a hard shine" was carried out through a centerpiece of white gladiolas arranged around a black OCS helmet liner. Trays of cinnamon rolls, coffee cake, and finger sandwiches of egg salad surrounded a punch bowl of orange juice and ginger ale.

Honored guests at the coffee were Capt. and Happy Birthday!

The Military Council of Catholic Women of the Southeastern United States (MCCW, SE, USA) marked its first anniversary recently at a quarterly meeting in the Noncommissioned Officers' Club at Ft. McPherson, Ga. Cutting the birthday cake are (L to R) Mrs. Marshall Stogner of Ft. Bragg, N. C., council president; Chaplain Lt. Col. Michael A. Rusnock, deputy 3rd U. S. Army chaplain who serves as spiritual advisor for the MCCW and Mrs. Ray E. Sovia of Ft. Rucker, Ala., president-elect, who will assume the duties of the presidency in November, 1971. The Council is composed of Catholic wives of all branches of the military services, who are stationed in the 3rd U. S. Army area.

Mrs. Frank R. Vavrek, commanding officer of 51st Company, and the company's tactical officers' wives.

During the coffee, Vavrek conducted a tour through the company barracks and assisted the wives in an inspection of their husbands' quarters. A question and answer period about the OCS program followed the inspection tour.

The meeting closed with a welcome to several new wives in the club: Mrs. Gregory Musfeldt, Mrs. Herman Graham, Mrs. Patrick Flanagan, Mrs. Meredith Fox, Mrs. William Cassidy, and Mrs. Margaret Houg.

Planning and work are underway for the Officer Candidate Wives' Club Bazaar coming Oct. 21 at 51st Company. Open to the entire 5th Battalion, the bazaar will be held from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. on the hard stand in front of 51st Company barracks, or in the company day room, in case of inclement weather.

The light hearted theme of this event is "Jeremiah Was a Bullfrog" and will be carried out exclusively by hand made articles manufactured by the wives of the candidates. Featured at the bazaar will be articles for the household, the Christmas holiday, men and women's accessories, and children's wear.

All proceeds from the bazaar will go toward the graduation luncheon.

For further information, call the bazaar chairman, Mrs. Joyce Rada, 689-7941.

Candlelight, silver and wine set the scene for the farewell coffee for the ladies of IOAC 5-71, 2nd Plt., Sept. 1 at the home of Mrs. William Moat. Mrs. Moat and the squad leaders' wives were the gracious hostesses.

The evening began with some announcements of the social affairs to take place before the class's Oct. 15 graduation. Mrs. Moat, the social leader, thanked all the ladies of the platoon for their help and cooperation during the past months. The ladies then presented Mrs. Moat with an engraved silver celery tray as a tangible "thank you" to her.

Hors d'ouevres and a wine cooler were served. The ladies enjoyed beef fondue, cantalones, tuna puffs, shrimp, relishes and cheese dip.

Special guests for the evening were Mrs. Harold D. Beekley, mother of Mrs. William L. Jackowski and Mrs. Christopher McKenzie, sister-in-law of Mrs. Jon P. Gritz.

The Officers and wives of 2nd Plt., IOAC 5-71, celebrate their approaching graduation with a party Sept. 11, at the home of Capt. and Mrs. Steven M. Francia.

The invitations stated that the fare was a "Spaghetti Supper," so each squad furnished a dinner course — spaghetti, salad, bread and dessert. After filling their plates at the buffet, couples found tables in every nook and cranny of the house and then spilled out onto the patio. Second and third helpings were wanted but could only be borne by a few hardy souls. "That's a some spicy meata balla."

USAMTU

"CHRISTMAS IN SEPTEMBER" was the theme of the USAMTU ladies' meeting which was held Sept. 2 at the OWC Lounge. Why such a crazy theme? The ladies gathered that night to finalize plans, and pool materials and resources for making the bazaar projects which had previously been selected and then were approved by Mrs. Joel Bell, bazaar project chairman. Committees were formed and all materials were dispersed to enable everyone to start immediately upon their projects.

The Christmas colors were evident in the table decorations, for red and green cups and napkins were used and even the punch was a bright Christmas red. A lovely centerpiece of pine cones and greenery graced the table and reminded everyone that Christmas is coming. With all the discussions on the projects and the holiday atmosphere, everyone got into the Christmas spirit and thoroughly enjoyed the evening.

Mrs. Robert M. Bach, a new bride, was welcomed into the group, and Mrs. Spencer Folsom Jr. was presented an engraved silver dish because she and Maj. Folsom will be leaving soon.

Hostesses for the evening were Mrs. Edward Schumacher and Mrs Alan Anderson.

Geographical Wives

The Geographical Wives Club of Fort Benning met in the Tea Room of a Columbus department store Sept. 15 for lunch and a preview of new fashions for fall and winter.

Throughout lunch the fashions were modeled informally, each costume being described by the show coordinator, Mrs. Sally Vaughn. The collection included casual wear, day time and evening fashions as well as the various popular hemline lengths. Hostesses for the event were Mrs. Robert Roberts and Mrs. Sylvester Berduz.

Several newcomers were welcomed by Mrs. Richard Pailand and Mrs. Robert Harman, co-chairmen, during the business meeting held after the fashion show.

Before adjourning, plans were made for a Hallowe-en party in October. Any officer's wife whose husband is serving an unaccompanied tour overseas is invited to join the club. For further information phone the Army Community Service office 545-1639.

MEDDAC

The Pulitzer Prize-winning novel, "All the King's Men," by Robert Penn Warren, was the September selection of the MEDDAC Wives' Book Club. The club met with Mrs. Paul Kirkman, Sept 1, at her home on 101 Dilbeck Street.

The comments on the characters of Willie Stark and his "men" led the group to the conclusion that none of them were completely desirable individuals. The "King" was a Southerner but the group concluded that his type of political dictatorship could take place in any part of the country. The club members discussed how each character in the book was caught in the author's "enormous spider web."

The Book Club enjoyed this book of fiction between last month's reading of "The Greening of America" and the October selection "Future Shock" by Alvin Toffler.

Mrs. John Laszlo will be the hostess for the Oct. 6 meeting. Her address is 5217 Verdun Court, Columbus, and her telephone number is 687-1840. Please call Mrs. Laszlo if you plan to attend the Book Club.

Combat Support Group

The wives of officers of the Combat Support Group, BBOD, USAIS, celebrated "Back-to-School" and the start of their monthly social meetings with a luncheon, Sept. 1, at the home of Mrs. Richard S. Fye, on Lumpkin Road.

The ladies enjoyed a most relaxing afternoon with good company and a delicious buffet of Mexican food.

BBOD STAFF GROUP

Anyone interested in bridge, starting in October, phone Mrs. John F. Dowling, 689-6139.

Gold Star Wives

Arthur E. Avent, chief of the Fountain City Hypnosis Center, was guest speaker at a dinner meeting of the Chattahoochee Valley Chapter of The Gold Star Wives of America Sept. 8 at the Main Officers' Club.

Avent answered questions about hypnosis and its usefulness in dieting, relieving withdrawal symptoms from smoking and drug addiction, and as an aid in some medical and dental surgery. He discussed self-hypnosis for habit control and as a learning device and demonstrated group hypnotic techniques using volunteer members as subjects.

Mrs. Billy J. Nave, chapter president, announced that the club will donate $100 to the Red Cross for postage to send Christmas gift "ditty bags" to servicemen in Vietnam. Another Christmas project will be decorating the pediatric ward at Martin Army Hospital as the club has done for the past two years. Fifteen members volunteered to assist with a party for patients at the hospital Sept. 28.

Hostesses for the dinner were Mrs. Richard Hostikka, Mrs. Walter Johnson, and Mrs. Marvin Roberts. Guests included Mrs. Thomas O'Brien, Mrs. Buck McCaul, and two new members Mrs. D. Diduryck and Mrs. William Elrod Jr.

Mrs. Fred Jackson and Mrs. William McNair will be hostesses for the next meeting to be held Oct. 12. Widows of servicemen who died on active duty of any cause or who died after discharge or retirement of a service-connected disability are invited to attend. For further information phone reservation chairman, Mrs. Hostikka at 689-7034 or membership chairman, Mrs. Roberts at 687-0980.

197th Inf. Bde.

The OWC of the 1st Bn., 29th Inf., 197th Inf. Bde., held their monthly tea on Sept. 9 at 1 p.m. The monthly tea was co-hosted by Mrs. Steve Sharp and Mrs. John Moser.

The special guest was Mrs. Willard Latham, wife of Col. Willard Latham, brigade commander of the 197th Inf. Bde. The wives worked on the Christmas bazaar and discussed their upcoming fall formal.

POWs detained outside N. Vietnam

WASHINGTON — There is a somewhat natural misconception, supported by communist propaganda, that the bulk of American prisoners of war are being held by the North Vietnamese in North Vietnam. The following information helps explain the unique situation Army POWs are in:

The Army currently lists 370 soldiers as missing in action, and 63 as captured — none of whom are known to be held in North Vietnam.

Lists of Americans held outside of North Vietnam have never been released. Of the over 4,000 letters received from U.S. prisoners of war, not one has been received by the next of kin of an Army prisoner.

Prisoners who have escaped or been released from areas outside of North Vietnam, report that they are forced to live under deplorable conditions.

If these facts disturb you, there is something you can do. Army personnel are authorized and encouraged to express their nonpolitical opinions in writing to the Viet Cong representative to the Paris Peace Talks: Madam Nguyen Thi Binh, 49 Avenue Cambaceres, Verrieres-Le Buisson, 91 Essonne, France.

FORT BENNING LEADERS FELICITATE BAYONET

Six Long Felt Need Filled By New Paper

From Post Headquarters

Gayley, Wynne Name 'Bayonet'

Laff Of The Week—

Bulletin

Bayonet celebrates 29th birthday

American troops on World Battlefronts; "Breakthrough Regiment" Arrives; Harpo Marx Pictured by Follies; Aliens Denied Entry to Benning — these were the headlines when the first "Bayonet" rolled off the presses 29 years ago today. See page 12.

With its first issue on Thursday, Sept. 17, 1942, the weekly newspaper began what was to become a long, distinguished period of service to Fort Benning personnel. The newspaper's history has been marked by numerous copy and publishing awards.

For independently submitting the prize-winning name of the new newspaper, 1st Lt. Henry T. Gayley and Cpl. James A. Wynne shared the $25 cash award from the Columbus Ledger. The Bayonet — "the symbol of the infantryman whether he is trudging the roads, rides the jeeps or six by six or is air borne" — became the name of Benning's most popular publication.

Filling what was termed a "long felt need," the Fort Benning Bayonet held special significance as the newspaper of the "crossroads of the Army."

Editorials proclaimed a "Red Letter Day for Fort Benning. . . as the first standard size newspaper in the history of this reservation" made its initial appearance as a "weekly newspaper published for the men and officers of Fort Benning through the cooperation of the Columbus Ledger and its able staff."

The Bayonet's first issue was marked by several eye-catching headlines.

Among them was the arrival of the veteran Tennessee National Guard regiment — the Breakthrough Regiment — which was to become the Infantry School demonstration troop.

Set in a wartime Army camp, the Bayonet featured "Through the Peepsight", a G. I. Summary of World News by Sgt. H. E. Whittemore: "American troops joined their comrades at arms on world battlefronts in increasing numbers this week, as soldiers of many nations fought, killed and died in gigantic struggles for supremacy and existence.".

The Hollywood Follies (a United States Service Organization Camp Show) featured Harpo Marx at Fort Benning Sept. 21 to 24, 1942. Marx, a world renowned pantomimist was joined by such names as ventriloquist Frank Gaby, the Rae and Rudello trampoline act, as well as the 16 Fanchionette. Dancing Girls with their "unusual and effective dancing routines."

The first issue printed a new requirement for thousands of Benning's wartime civilian employees. Col. Walter S. Fulton, then commanding officer of Fort Benning, required all civilians to present passes before coming on post and forbade aliens to come at all.

Non-historic war relics were marked for salvage as the Metal Salvage Drive of World War II intensified.

Lt. Frank Irvine, who portrayed the woodland characters in Walt Disney's "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs", was featured (in a photo) drawing maps, charts and diagrams of Fort Benning.

The Bayonet's first cartoonist, Capt. Paul Troth, inspired a few extra wrinkles under the editor's eyes with his orders for reassignment just as the first issue went to press.

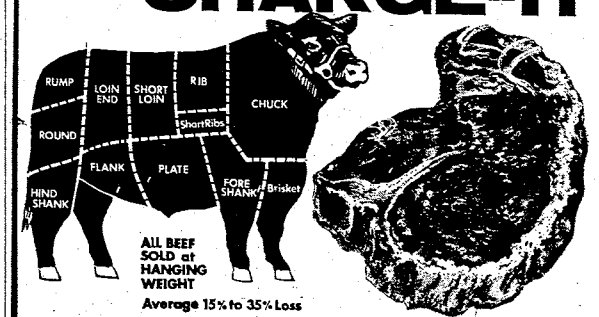
The editorial page sported a cartoon featuring the axis leaders with a cry from Uncle Sam: "Let's All Pitch in for Victory."

The words to the well known song "Call to the Infantry," composed by OCS graduate 1st Lt. Falko M. Schilling, graced the pages of the Bayonet with "If there's a call for the fighting men, you can call the Infantry."

Soft drinks were still only a nickel a bottle when Clark Gable and Lana Turner co-starred in "Somewhere I'll Find You" at the Main Theatre in which he quite appropriately portrayed a wartime correspondent — in keeping with the debut publication of the Bayonet.

PFC Solomon S. Kleindorf represented the Bayonet on a telecast of the Army Hour — a weekly featured broadcast of WRBL Radio in Columbus.

Remember 1700s? That's the time desiguation for 1 p.m. Eastern War Time, which was four hours different from Eastern Standard Time and was used in all messages, orders and reports from Benning to the Fourth Service Command Headquarters.



If nothing else is remembered about the first issue, it will be the fact that members of the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps (WAAC) are "brisk eaters" with a particular distaste for liver and circus water (military jargon for canned fruit juices) and special preference for steak and potatoes. Incidently, they were said to eat five times as much in the service as they did as civilians.

The 1942 Packard was still a popular touring car and in large black type dominated the advertising section.

From sergeant to first lieutenant in 28 days of OCS, Sgt. Robert T. Greene, formerly a reserve lieutenant whose commission expired in 1939, received his appointment to the rank of first lieutenant from the War Department after 28 days in the "90-day course the world's best Infantry School gives its prospective officers."

Brigade picnic caps AER fund drive

KIDS ENJOY THE SHOW

By Steve Partridge

197th Infantry Brigade soldiers, their families and guests, reveled throughout the brigade picnic area (Sept. 4), as the 197th climaxed its Army Emergency Relief fund drive with a fun-filled picnic.

Abundant supplies of food and beverages coupled with the vibrating tones of the brigade's own combo set the stage for the high-spirited celebration.

Afro-American, Latin-American, and Anglo-American serving lines were set up for the accommodation of 197th soldiers and guests. Food, ranging from tortillas to turnip greens, was provided for the enjoyment of all.

Games, rides, and displays decked the recreation areas for the enjoyment of both old and young. A judo demonstration was also part of the high-spirited atmosphere.

While certain segments of the picnic crowd enjoyed the different festivities, others were treated to the running of the 197th Olympics.

At the end of the Olympic competition, the 1st Bn. (Mech.), 58th Inf. "Patriots" had swept five first place positions and five second place slots out of fourteen events and edged the 5th Bn., 31st Inf., for the coveted Commander's Trophy, the symbol of athletic success within the brigade. The women of the "Patriots" were also instrumental in the battalions victory as they out-distanced their competitors for the women's volleyball championship.

Toward the end of the day's festivities, the "Patriots" proved they were as fleet with food as they were on their feet and took first place in the pie eating contest.

George C. Scott portrays gangster in 'Last Run'

Even though producer Carter De Haven couldn't have known the man he selected to star in MGM's "The Last Run," scheduled to begin Sept. 24 at a local theater, would become one of the most honored actors of the year, he was certain George C. Scott was the man to play Harry Garmes, a retired gangster living in Portugal who becomes the focal point of the film.

Now an "Oscar" and an "Emmy" later, plus being named Best Actor by the National Society of Film Critics, the New York Film Critics Circle, the National Board of Review, and the Hollywood Foreign Press Association, Scott's performance in "The Last Run" has even more convinced De Haven that his decision was right. He now considers it a stroke of luck that he was able to get the actor at all.

From Scott's viewpoint, De Haven had a script by Scotsman Alan Sharp, that he liked. In talking about his role, the star said recently, "This is the kind of part Bogart might have played in the forties; a tough, skillful man to whom loneliness has become a way of life."

Harry Garmes spends his time tinkering with his 1957 BMW 503 sports car, and chatting with the man who manages his small fishing boat. Between times he sits and broods and tries to arrest the slow ease of dying he feels retirement represents.

Accepting one last job, Garmes wants to test his reflexes and nerve against life as he once knew it. His two co-stars, Trish Van Devere and Tony Musante become his passengers in a wild chase across the Iberian Peninsula—trying to escape both police and rival gangsters.

Trish Van Devere explains a bit of the plot: "It's a triangle in which two young, callous kids use sex to ensnare an older man who still has enough romance in him for his own selfish ends."

Miss Van Devere was chosen by De Haven after seeing the actress in her screen debut in "Where's Poppa?" Hailed by critics as a clever comedienne, the actress was found working for free in a theater group she helped found called the Poor Peoples Theatre.

Tony Musante is one of the hottest young actors in Europe, and De Haven felt his vital and youthful energy would be a strong contrast to Scott's older, more mature stance as a former gangster.

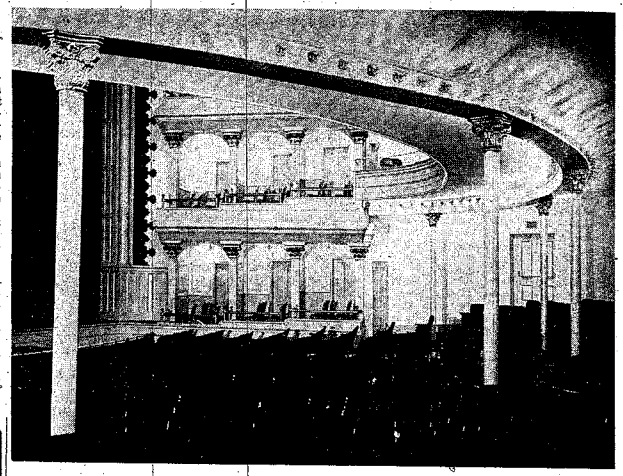
Springer Opera House named State Theater



The Springer Opera House will open its 1971-72 season this year with a new designation beside its name. Governor Jimmy Carter recently named the Springer Opera House as the Georgia State Theater for the 1971-72 season.

Gov. Carter in his proclamation called the Opera House "A Landmark that uniquely reflects the heritage and cultural development of Georgia and the deep South."

The Opera House, which first opened its doors on February 21, 1871, has resounded to the golden voice of Edwin Booth, chuckled at the mordant wit of Oscar Wilde and been assured by the Harvard tones of Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

The Governor's proclamation marks the beginning of the Springer's second, hundred years and the beginning of its 1971-72 season.

Opening the new season for the Springer will be "Kiss Me Kate," a musical by Cole Porter. The show will be presented starting Sept. 23.

Middle-aged job seekers aided by new book

Pre-retirement planning and a realistic approach to job seeking are stressed in a new book, "The Second Time Around — Finding a Civilian Career in Mid-Life," which will be discussed on WRBL's "Viewpoint," Channel 3, Sunday at 5 p.m.

The author is a retired Army lieutenant colonel, Kent J. Collings, who has spent the past ten years doing research and writing on the subject of pre-retirement planning. His book has direct application for military men and women approaching retirement and wide implications for all middle-aged job seekers.

Combining first-hand experience with the computerized results of two comprehensive surveys he conducted and financed without government aid, the author reveals what it is really like to be faced with a career change in mid-life. Not only does he expose the prevalence of discrimination against older workers, but he gives practical advice on how to overcome it. And he deals in depth with the special problems of military retirees in these anti-military times.

Collings followed his own advice in planning a second career.

After retiring from the Army he went on to acquire a Ph.D. Dr. Collings is now Dean of the School of Business Administration at the University of Portland, Ore.

Brig. Gen. (ret.) James H. Burtville of the Retired Officers Association has added his comments in a Foreword. Cartoon illustrations by Gordon Brooks brighten the cover and chapter headings and comments from hundreds of retirees enliven the text. All of the author's advice is soundly based on his research, which is unobtrusively documented.

"The Second Time Around" will be issued as a 7" x 10" paperback of about 200 pages featuring advice, sample resumes and letters and actual worksheets for retirement and second career planning.

Priced at $5.75, the book will be available in bookstores or direct from the publisher, The Carroll Press, 43 Squantum Street, Cranston, R. I., 02902.

Open mess tennis tourney filled with upsets

The Fort Benning Officers' Mess began its annual fall tennis tournament last weekend, with competition in men's and ladies' singles, and men's, ladies' and mixed doubles. By the end of play Monday evening, seeded entrants in both men's singles and doubles had been upset before reaching the semi-finals.

The first reversal for seeded players came Saturday afternoon, in the third match of the day for all four players, when MEDDAC's James Stearns of SJA, 0-6, 6-3, 7-6, Adelman and Knight were down two set points in the final set at 6-5, but were able to rally and pull the games even at 6-6. They then won a tie-breaker game in straight points, and with it, the match.

In a men's singles quarter-finals match Sunday, TSB's John Ashman upset USAIS' Jerry Whittington even after loosing the first set on a tie-breaker. Ashman stayed in to eliminate the fourth-seeded Whittington, 6-7, 6-2, 6-3.

In another quarter-finals match Monday evening, Ronald Johnson of USAIS dropped his first set to third-seeded Allan Matthews, but rallied to down Matthews, 5-7, 6-1, 6-4. Johnson will be playing first-seeded David Koehn of TSB in the semi-finals while Ashman is facing second-seeded Wayne Smoot of the 197th Infantry Brigade.

All of the seeded ladies' singles players advanced in their first full day of play Monday, reaching the quarter-finals. The seeded players are Joan Kennedy, Louise Robinson, and Ellen Adelman.

Final singles matches will be played at the Fort Benning Officers' Open Mess' courts, September

PFC Predicto PICKS!

Gridiron griper grumbles

Drat! Drat! Drat! Some ingrate inmates of the Information Office stumbled onto a sensational shattering shot at the contentious sacr (sucker) whose 54 percent lost to the 55 of the sagacious six. He now serves up a sizzling sequel to the silk sinkers of the Airborne Department. No upset will unhoose the upstart umpire of the uprights from mangling the mercenary madhatters of airmobile mixups! The gabby gridiron gadfly guarantees a galling gambol against the gamey gliding gladiators. I'll drop them a'dither with dispassionate dispatch; I'll dispel the dropsters; I'll dismember their dismal dangling daydreams! If you care to caper against the clapping culprit in a contest of clairvoyance, merely call 545-4622 and ask for the prime prognosticator, PFC Predicto.

Official flag football rules from Special Services listed

Flag football is played under the supervision of three or four officials, a referee, umpire, linesman and if needed a field judge.

Each team manager or coach shall designate to the referee a team captain. He or his designated representative will speak for his team in all dealings with the officials. A field captain's first choice of any option shall be irrevocable.

On each side of the field a team area is designated between the 20 yard lines for the use of the teams, coaches and authorized team attendants. When the playing area is 120 yards long the team area is between the 35 yard lines.

The officials of the game shall inspect the field and the surrounding area and remove, or order removed any obstruction which might prove dangerous to players.

The referee shall be the sole judge of any ball offered for play and may change the ball during play at his discretion.

Players of opposing teams must wear contrasting colors. The referee shall designate which team shall make a change, if necessary.

Each player on the field will wear a belt at his waistline with two flags attached, but not tied thereto, and one flag on each side of his body.

When the flag is cleanly taken from a ball carrier the down shall end and the ball is declared dead. A player who removes the flag from the ball carrier should immediately hold the flag up in the air above his head to assist the official in locating the spot where the capture occurred.

In an attempt to remove the flag from a ball carrier a defensive player may use his hands on the body and shoulders of an opponent but not on his face or any part of his head. A defensive player may not hold, push, or knock the ball carrier down in attempt to remove the flag. Penalty: 15 yards from spot of foul.

The flag may be dropped at the spot of capture with no penalty.

Each team is entitled to two time-outs during each half. Consecutive time-outs are not allowed. One and one-half minutes per time-out.

Excess time-outs are allowed for a designated injured player who must leave the game for at least one scrimmage down.

The referee shall warn both teams 30 seconds before a free time-out expires.

During a time-out one player may confer with the coach on the sideline.

A backward pass or fumble which touches the ground between the goal lines is dead at the spot where it touches the ground and belongs to the team last in possession unless lost on downs.

In case of a tie the ball shall be placed in the center of the field and eight alternating plays played. Upon completion of the plays and no one has scored, wherever the ball lies shall determine the winner depending upon whose territory the ball is in.

The ball carrier shall not protect his flags by blocking with his arms or hands the opportunity of an opponent to pull or remove his flags. Penalty: 15 yards from spot of foul.

The ball carrier may not lower his head and deliberately drive or run into a defensive player.

The following methods shall be used in scoring a game: touchdown — 6 points, field goal — 3 points, safety — 2 points, successful try for point by running or passing — 2 points, by kicking — 1 point, forfeited game 1-0, penetration rule — 1-0.

931st gridiron

586th rambles to early division lead

The flag football season for the 931st Engr. Gp. got underway last week with the 586th Engr. Co. (FB) emerging in as the team to beat. They are leading the league with a 2-0 record and are displaying the ability to move the ball quickly with several fleet backs.

A large group of teams are bunched together with a 1-0 record. They are: 608th Ord. Co., 524th Pers. Svc. Co., HHC 931st Engr. Gp., 598th Lt. Maint Co., 15th Finance, and 18th Repl. Det. Several other teams are sporting 0-1 records including: Co. A, 43rd Engr. Bn., 139th M.P. Co., Co. D, 43rd Engr. Bn., 368th M. P. Co. In the cellar with 0-2 recorded are: HHC, 43rd Engr. Bn. and Co. C, 43rd Engr. Bn.

The season is just getting started but already a few patterns are beginning to emerge. First of all, the scores in these games are for the most part very low with several games being won by slim margins. Good defensive capabilities are the reason and most of the teams seem to have it. Secondly, in this game speed is everything and the one team that has no shortage of that particular commodity is the 586th Engr. Co.

The season promises to be a lot of fun for everyone, players and spectators alike. Anyone interested in attending games can come to Bennet Field on Custer Rd. at Hwy. 27 on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday nights.

Snag a bass weighing in at two pounds or better and you've got some good sport. Land a Red Snapper measuring two feet or better while trying to maintain your balance in a deep-sea boat slipping up and down between swells, manhandling a manually operated deep-sea reel, and friend, you've got a battle.

Deep-sea fishing is tremendously enjoyable and is a comparatively inexpensive sport. A privately chartered boat, with all fishing gear you need (hooks, line, sinkers, bait, etc.) will cost about $125 for an eight-hour fishing day. Most boats hold five or six fishermen. The Fort Benning boat, "Follow Me," anchored at the USAIC Recreation Center at Destin, Fla., costs $70 per day. Reservations for the "Follow Me" must be made at the Post Special Services.

Some fisherman like the party boat system. Some party boats carry up to seventy persons, however, the usual load will average between thirty-five to fifty. It can become a little crowded, however, the advantages of this method of fishing far out-weighs the inconveniences incurred.

The costs on a party boat are small. Normally there are two runs per day from each wharf; one at 4 a.m. for $16 and one at 7 a.m. costing $13. Both runs return to dock at 5 p.m. Fares include everything you need to fish. An electric reel will cost you an extra $3.

Here are several dos and don'ts that may prove quite useful for your first trip.

Ice chests or coolers are not allowed on board. The or three coolers with you to the wharf for they will be needed to carry your fish home. Have a long sharp-bladed knife with you. After taking all the photos you want, clean and filet your fish. This will make them a lot more convenient to carry and some of the fish just won't fit in a small cooler unless they are cleaned and fileted.

Don't carry a camera on board. Leave it in the car. On board it will become quite cumbersome and you won't have time to use it. In addition, the salt water brine will play havoc with a lense and camera body. On one trip this writer made with camera in hand, had it not been for a UV filter the lens group would have been a total loss. Leave the photo taking until you return to dock.

Wear sneakers or rubber-soled shoes. Wet decks can be like a sheet of ice to leather shoes. Be sure to carry a pair of pliers and a pair of leather gloves with you. You will need the both to manhandle any fish you catch. Don't ever stick your fingers in a fish's mouth; they have very sharp teeth and don't mind biting at all. Holding the fish by his lower lip with pliers is safe and most convenient.

If you're a big eater, take several sandwiches wrapped in foil, and plenty of liquid refreshment.

If you're one to get a little seasick, there are sea-sick pills you can buy at the wharf or at a drug store. Take them with you. Even at thirty-five miles out, which is the usual distance for party boats, the sea can become a little choppy. If you do get sick out there, don't worry, there are plenty of rails to bang your bead over and people will give you plenty of room.

Deep-sea fishing is fun, and unlike fresh-water fishing, your guarantee of catching fish is much greater. The boat captain will find fish for you, tell you how deep to fish, and if you ar new at this sport, will teach you how to fish. The ships crew will unhook your catch, straighten lines that become snarled, and render any other assistance necessary. All you have to do is fish to your heart's content.

USAIC golf tournament dates set

The 1971 United States Army Infantry Center (USAIC) Golf Championships will be held at the Fort Benning Country Club Golf Course Sept. 28 through Oct. 1.

All military personnel on active duty at Fort Benning are eligible to participate.

Competition will be held in a mens open and senior divisions and a womens open and senior divisions. Senior division participants must have reached their 45th birthday prior to Aug. 9, 1971. Seniors may play in the open division but entry in the open division precludes competition in the senior division.

Players will also be competing for places on the Fort Benning team which will be entered in the 3rd U.S. Army Championships to be held at Ft. McPherson, Ga. Oct. 18 through 22.

The Infantry Center is authorized to send four mens open division players, two mens senior division players, two womens open division players and one womens senior division player to the 3rd Army Tournament.

The Center may also nominate four retired military personnel to play in a separate retired player division of the 3rd Army Tournament. Retired personnel interested in playing in the tournament should contact the Special Services Sports Section (545-1516). The Sports Section will schedule a playoff if more than four players indicate a desire to compete.

The champion of each division in the USAIC Tournament will be determined by medal scores over 72 holes. At the end of 36 holes the field will be cut and only the 30 low scorers in the mens division, 12 low scorers in the mens senior division, 6 low scorers in the womens open division and 6 low scorers in the womens senior division will continue play. These players will be divided into flights based on their scores from the first two rounds.

Flight winners will be determined by the total scores of the third and fourth rounds.

Special Services will furnish golf balls for this tournament. Equipment, caddy fees, cart and other expenses incidental to the tournament must be paid by competitors.

Awards will be presented to the low medalist and runner up medalist of each division and the winner of each flight.

Entries may be submitted to the pro-shops at the Fort Benning Country Club Golf Course, Sand Hill Golf Course or the Sports Section of the Special Services Divison not later than Sept. 26.

197th flag football season begins

As the softball season came to an end, flag football burst into the sports foreground in the 197th Inf. Bde.

Co. A (Admin.), 197th Inf. Bde., and the 197th Support Battalion got the jump on their flag football competitors in late August. Co. A, defending 197th flag football champions, began practice the last week of that month. The Support Battalion held a pre-season round robin tournament which began Aug. 23.

HHD, emerged the victor of the Spt. Bn's. pre-season play and sported an unblemished 3-0 won-lost state at the end of the competition.

The HHD team squeaked by Co. G, 69th Armor, 27-21; blasted Co. H, 69th Armor, 21-7; and whitewashed the 72nd Engrs., 35-0. Regular company-level flag football competition was scheduled to begin Sept. 8 in that battalion.

Highlight of the Spt. Bn., tourney is a game between the battalion all stars and the battalion champions scheduled for Sept. 19.

The 1st Bn., 58th Inf.; 10th Arty.; and the 5th Bn., 31st Inf., were scheduled to begin play last week.

Following the company-level competition in each battalion, a 197th flag football tournament will be held between the battalion champions. The winner and runner-up team of the 197th tourney will participate in the USAIC flag football championship tournament scheduled for Nov. 8-19.

Following the post tourney, a team of all stars will be selected to play on the Fort Benning team which will compete in the 3rd Army tournament scheduled for Nov. 29-Dec. 2, at Ft. Bragg, N. C.

Post jumpers place second in 'leapfest'

Two Fort Benning sports parachute teams competed in the "leapfest" at Ft. Bragg, N.C., on Sept. 4-6, with one of the teams placing second in overall competition.

Placing second among 26 competing teams were 1st Lt. Michael R. Barnes, SFC Richard Gibbs, SSgt. Mario Borkowski and SSgt. Raymond C. Kinser, all of the Airborne Department. The team has a combined total of more than 3,000 free-fall parachute jumps.

The meet consisted of four accuracy jumps and two jumps from an altitude of 7,500 feet for a four-man star formation.

The second team at the meet consisted of Captains Bruce Wicks and Ed Chamberlain and SSgts. Al Stewart and Mike Steele, all of the Airborne Department.

MG AUSTIN

America's best-selling imported sports car line. And why.

MGB
It brings back the fun of driving.
..... $3201 p.o.e.

MGB/GT
As practical as it is beautiful.
..... $3525 p.o.e.

..... $2395 p.o.e.

MG MIDGET
Lowest-priced of the true sports cars.

Here's the sports car line that has become No. 1 by offering precision engineering instead of frills. And impressive performance instead of impressive price tags. Why be pedestrian when it comes to driving? Pick an MG and pick yourself a winner.

It's little on the outside. Not on the inside.

..... $1985 p.o.e.

On the outside the Austin America is 144 inches long. Which makes it about a foot shorter than a Volkswagen. Yet its bigger on the inside than some big expensive cars.

Try the stretch out while you test take parking spaces that even other little cars can't get into.

But don't just take our word for it. Come in and stretch out for yourself. And America. The big little car.

Clinic

might, perhaps, begin drinking heavily."

Additionally, the hospital has received increased requests for consultations with dependents from Army Community Service (ACS), religious services and other community organizations.

In the past, psychiatric services for dependents have been offered, but these were largely by screening personnel who made referrals to other agencies. The current programs, which have been built almost entirely in the past year, are the beginning in terms of ongoing programs. They are all new, and many of the programs are unique to Fort Benning.

The Mental Hygiene Clinic has been upgraded and expanded as has the Child Guidance Clinic. Serveral new programs have been added including Parent Effectiveness Training, a consultation in adolescent psychology, and teaching programs for both the hospital staff, and for other community groups, such as school faculties.

Currently in the works is a weekly "rap" session for teenagers at Teen Square, to provide them with adequate counselors, and a place to talk things out.

The Mental Hygiene Clinic is headed by See. It is staffed by a psychiatrist, Maj. Lawrence Lifson, and Capt. Gene Wilkinson, social worker officer, as well as counselors and social work and psychology specialists. Counseling is available to dependents, and to retired personnel and their dependents.

Everyone who enters the clinic goes through an elaborate intake process which includes consultation with a staff member, and a review of his or her medical history. On the basis of this information, staff members decide which one of several treatments is best for the individual. The clinic provides individual and group therapy, medication therapy, and referrals to private and public clinics in this area as needed.

"Crisis intervention is our mode of operation. That is dealing with problems as they come up," said See. "An infinitesimal percentage of the people we see here are mentally ill. We see normal people who, because of some circumstance, have had some alteration of family bafance."

"Every family has an equilibrium, assuming there is no gross pathology," he continued, "but some crisis such as loss of a loved one, or a bad job assignment, can lead to problems."

(NEXT WEEK: The Child Guidance Clinic discussed.)

Officer groups to discuss Army problems with Chief of Staff

WASHINGTON — Gen. W. C. Westmoreland, Army chief of staff, will meet with three separate groups of officers each quarter to gain a frank, unfiltered view of problems such as drug abuse, racial tension, dissent and motivation problems.

The meetings will also provide an indication of the effect and influence of DA policies at all levels Army-wide and will allow the chief of staff and the Army staff to discuss with a representative group of officers the actions being taken or proposed, which will affect them in the future.

The consultant groups involved are one group of captains, one of majors and another of lieutenant colonels and colonels.

The officers to participate will be selected on a worldwide basis and brought to Washington on temporary duty at government expense. Funds will be provided by the command to which the selectee is assigned.

The names of the officers selected will be announced as far in advance as possible to provide the opportunity for their contemporaries to suggest topics or problem areas for discussion with the chief of staff.

Following a two-hour meeting with Gen. Westmoreland, the officers will have discussions with selected staff officers.

Four to six officers will be selected for each consultation group, with at least two officers from the combat arms. The remainder of the group may be from combat support and combat service support branches. Composition of the groups will change each quarter and will represent, over a period of time, the maximum diversity of officers by geographic area, type of assignment and branch.

Aviation gets 10 new copters

The 197th Aviation Company recently received 10 new Huey UH-1H helicopters. The aviation company exchanged all of its D model choppers for the new H models. The old models, 14 UH-1Ds are to be distributed to National Guard Units.

In order to make delivery of the new helicopters, 35 officers and 3 enlisted men were sent on temporary duty in Texas, for periods from three to 13 days. During this time the helicopters were tested and then flown to Fort Benning.

Chief Warrant Officer Raymond M. Trott, assistant aircraft maintenance officer of the 197th Aviation Company, and SFC James Stringer tested the aircraft at Ft. Hood and then returned to Fort Benning on the last one tested.

1st Lt. Michael L. Clark and Chief Warrant Officer Charles L. Harper testflew the aircraft in Corpus Christi and then flew them back here.

On the return trip, Chief Warrant Officer Trott had a malfunction in the transmission while refueling in Tyler, Texas. Instead of waiting several weeks for an overhaul, Chief Warrant Officer Trott received permission to exchange the aircraft for another new one.

Two of the UH-1H helicopters will be utilized as the Commanding General's VIP aircraft, replacing two older models which formerly fulfilled this function.

Plug yourself into a great future in or out of the service - learn Electronics on your off-duty hours!

ELECTRONICS TECHNOLOGY • COMPUTERS
INDUSTRIAL ELECTRONICS • AEROSPACE
COMMUNICATIONS • BROADCAST ENGINEERING

WANT more rank and better duties while you are in the service . . . or a job you can be proud of when you get discharged? Want a man-sized paycheck, too? Then, the opportunity of a lifetime awaits you in the dynamic world of electronics.

Every year there is a severe shortage of electronic specialists . . . so, if you really know your electronics, the choice of jobs is wide open in this fascinating field.

What Can I Do?

Getting the training you need is as simple as A-B-C. Many people feel they need a college education to specialize in electronics. But they're wrong. In fact, a high school diploma isn't even needed!

You can train right now on off-duty hours with the special courses of the Cleveland Institute of Electronics. With CIE, you study when you want . . . where you want. Step-by-step lessons make learning easy, even for men who once had trouble studying.

Since 1934, CIE has specialized in home study courses in electronics. We're "No. 1" in our field and currently have more than 52,000 active students.

One sergeant received a $9,558 bonus because of his increased electronic skills. Let CIE show you how you can qualify for choice assignments and higher rank if you decide to stay in . . . or a more rewarding civilian life upon discharge.

FCC License or Money Back

Whatever your goal, an FCC License can help you reach it faster. It opens the doors to exciting jobs that pay up to $12,000 a year or more.

And CIE's easy home study courses can help you prepare for your License exam. They're so successful that we back our license-preparation courses with this famous Warranty: you get your FCC License upon completion of your course or we refund your tuition in full!

With draft bill

Military pay hike passes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate swiftly ended a bitter seven-month struggle Tuesday and sent to President Nixon legislation extending the draft for two years and giving GIs their biggest pay raise in history.

The White House announced Wednesday that the pay raise scheduled to go into effect October 1 would be delayed until President Nixon's wage-price freeze ends November 18.

The Senate approved the draft extension 55 to 30 and sent it to the White House for Nixon's signature just minutes after it decided 61 to 30 — only one vote more than the required two-thirds majority — to shut off further debate and end the threat of a filibuster by draft opponents and Vietnam War critics.

The bill extends inductions — which were ended when the draft law expired June 30 — until June 30, 1973, and ends the practice of deferring college students until they finish school — beginning with this year's freshman class.

The bill contains a provision, however, that all persons who have already been given student deferments will be allowed to keep them.

Actually the bill does not of itself end student deferments, but authorizes the President to. Nixon said in sending the measure to Congress that he would act to do so as soon as given the authority.

It also raises military salaries across the board, from recruits to four-star generals, by a record $2.4 billion a year.

The pay raises largely would go to lower enlisted and officer ranks, in keeping with an intent to induce more enlistments and re-enlistments to pave the way for introduction of an all-volunteer Army.

As a concession to the Senate, the bill carries the strongest stand on troop withdrawal ever written by Congress — calling on Nixon to withdraw all U.S. troops as soon as prisoners of war are released by North Vietnam. And it makes no provision for a permanent residual force in Indochina which the administration feels will be necessary to prevent the Communists from taking over South Vietnam.

Information conference set today

The Third Semiannual Chief of Staff's Forum ended at Fort Benning yesterday and will be followed today by a one-day Commanders' Information Conference.

Gen. William C. Westmoreland heads a list of general officers attending the two events. Also attending are information officers from major installations in the U. S. Continental Army Command.

RRCG begins program to ease racial tension among soldiers

Pvt. Larry Henderson has been in the Army for nine months. He is black and proud of it. The rainbow colored dashiki he wears off duty is adorned with a black power button and African beads. The 21-year-old Henderson is a native of Los Angeles. "Ask him his home town and he replies, "Not LA, man. I'm from Watts." He is a draftee.

Steve Woodall wears a silver bar on his collar. His six-foot frame is topped off by a head of neatly cut brown hair. 1st Lt. Woodall is an ROTC graduate from the University of Idaho. A native of Twin Falls, he is from a comfortable middle-class background. In the language of the day, a member of the establishment.

These two soldiers are a study in contrast, yet they are closer than many of their contemporaries who share both rank and color. For they have begun to share understanding. Each man knows what makes the other tick.

The key that bridges the gap? The Race Relations Coordinating Group (RRCG) of the United States Army Infantry Center at Fort Benning. Under the direction of Maj. Tyrone Fletcher and the Equal Opportunity Officer, Mr. Robert Galer, the RRCG has begun a vigorous program to ease racial tensions in the United States Army at the lowest possible levels.

The heart of the RRCG's efforts for change is the Moderator Training Program, a course of instruction set up to give designated soldiers, regardless of race or grade, the fundamental skills needed to improve communications among the troops.

This is the only program of its kind in the Army. 1st Lt. Phillip Lyman,

CFC members stress importance of individual 'fair share' donations

The kickoff ceremony for the first annual Combined Federal Campaign (CFC) fund drive was held in Marshall Auditorium at 1:30 p.m., Tuesday.

Guest speakers for the occasion were Mrs. Barbara Geddes of Atlanta, representing International Service Agencies, Mr. Jack Leech of Columbus, representing United Givers, Mrs. Lucille Cook of Columbus, who represented National Health Agencies, Col. Robert P. Hatcher, asst. commander and chairman of the campaign, and Maj. Gen. Orwin C. Talbott, post commander.

All of the personnel involved with the program on post and in the surrounding communities were present for the function.

During the brief addresses, the representatives of the individual funds stressed that everyone give his fair share in their donation. The payroll deduction plan was stressed, since it is the easiest and most convenient way available for everyone to make a significant donation. Taken out of monthly checks, the donations amounts to only pennies per day.

After the speakers were finished, there was a movie shown which showed the need and the use of all the funds collected during the campaign.

This drive is the major one to be made on post this year, it combines 3 individual drives into one orderly and appropriate fund drive.

NG, AR early out program expanded

A 60-day early release from the Active Army may now be granted to all qualifying soldiers stationed in the continental United States (CONUS) who enlist with the National Guard or Army Reserve.

The early-release program to boost membership in Army Reserve Component units has been expanded nationwide as a result of its first two weeks' success at two test installations.

Inductees may accept an early release through a combination of two early-release programs — the 120-day release program affecting all CONUS-based inductees and the 60-day early release program available to all CONUS-based Active Army enlisted personnel; the resulting total of 179 days vs. 180 days is to insure retention of VA benefits. The combined program is available to CONUS-based enlisted personnel whose normal separation date is prior to July 1, 1972.

The 12-week test of an inservice recruiting plan originally confined the early-release program to personnel at Ft. Knox, Ky., and Ft. Lewis, Wash. Now, the early-release program has been expanded to all continental United States Army installations and includes enlisted Women's Army Corps personnel.

Army National Guard and Reserve counselors at Ft. Knox and Ft. Lewis signed up 123 Active Army personnel for a minimum of one year's service in a Reserve Component unit in exchange for an early release from Active Army duty of up to 179 days.

The trial period began on August 16 at the two posts with the assignment of an Army National Guard and Army Reserve noncommissioned officer at each post to counsel prospects. Counseling at other posts under the expanded program will be handled by the Active Army for the balance of the trial period pending evaluation of the use of Reserve Component counselors at all posts.

SGT. DAVE KELLEY (L) EXPLAINS COMPASS TO EXPLORER SCOUT

Orienteering becoming the 'in thing'

By Roger Pavey

"Running is my job, its just like being a grunt, a typist, or anything else," said one of the members of Fort Benning's Orienteering Team.

As a soldier coming in today's Army he is faced with many career choices, one of the most unusual is Orienteering. What is Orienteering? "Well," said one runner, "its long distance running over an unfamiliar course with the use of a map and a compass to locate hard to find control markers. The usual course is about five miles long, but the length is really up to the runner. I guess I've run twice to three times the length of a course because I've gotten lost, but that's why I love Orienteering. I have to constantly use my head when I'm running, because if I don't I'll end up running the course nine to ten times, and that's no fun."

"Orienteering is much more than that," says Sgt. Dave Kelley. "It's training two to three times a day, land navigation, administrative work, and long, long trips. But most importantly it's teaching youngsters how to Orienteer."

PFC Don Stanley, a cross country runner while at Ashland College in Ohio, is seriously considering going into the teaching field. Says Stanley, "Orienteering is the best job I could possibly have in the Army. It gives me a chance to be with young people, because of Orienteering I think I'll go back to school and get a teaching degree. I've found that working with kids is much more satisfying than I ever could have imagined."

In a recent Orienteering clinic held here, over 50 Explorer and Boy Scouts took part in the all day event.

The members of the team provided the scouts with information, instruction, and set up a trial Orienteering course. When asked about the day's events, PFC Don Kennedy said, "If we can just get one kid interested enough to try this on his own then we've succeeded. I don't think we can lose, by teaching these kids we train ourselves and the great part about it is, it's my job."

The response to the program has been very encouraging. "The last group ran seven miles out of their way and still loved it. These kids are definately excited. We could have the next world champion here today, you never know," remarked Kelley.

Since its inception here in September 1970 Orienteering has picked up considerably. The Fort Benning team placed first in the All-Army Championships with PFC Don Kennedy taking first place. "I still get lost," says Kennedy, "but that's what makes Orienteering so challenging."

"To me Orienteering is the most rewarding thing I've ever done. It's such a great feeling of accomplishment to find all the control markers without making any mistakes. It's kind of like throwing a touchdown pass in football, but better," says Stanley.

"He sure is right," added Sgt. Eugene Kraszeski. "It's really out of sight to get all the markers in a row. To me that's the real test."

The Fort Benning Orienteering Team has many meets and many more youngsters to teach, and with the enthusiasm these soldiers have for their new job, Orienteering will undoubtedly take its place among the "in things." The scouts themselves must agree for one youngster said astonishingly, "Man, I can't keep all that stuff in my head maps, pace, meters, markers, and on top of all that being so tired, but it's fun. These Orienteers must really be something."

Civilian, Military Council celebrates 25th anniversary

By TOM TEGTMEYER

On the 3rd Friday of each month a special group of Fort Benning military and Columbus-Phenix City civilian community leaders hold their meetings.

This group is known as the Civilian and Military Council (CMC) and it is the oldest Civilian-Military Advisory Group in the country.

This year CMC will celebrate their 25th anniversary on Oct. 29. The group plans to make this a memorable occasion beginning with dinner at the Ralston Motor Hotel in downtown Columbus. Other activities, not yet disclosed, will be featured during the celebration.

The council was formed on Oct. 14, 1946, when the then commandant, Maj. Gen. J. W. O'Daniel, invited 13 Columbus and Phenix City leaders, drawn from various sectors of community life, to a luncheon at Fort Benning.

Gen. O'Daniel was concerned with the declining relations between the civilian and military communities, which had been excellent during World War II.

The general asked that these leaders join with his staff officers in forming a council. He anticipated that such a council "would deal with all matters pertaining to the relations between Army personnel and the civilian population in the community; and, exist for the purpose of settling difficulties which may arise due to either local military or civilian policies."

Gen. O'Daniel noted that the council would not be an executive body, but would act in an advisory capacity to the existing military and civilian agencies.

For the past 25 years, during wartime and peace, the council has been actively participating in and solving problems which could lead to the straining of the community-military relationship. Since Fort Benning was established as a permanent Army post it has enjoyed a warm and friendly relationship with the surrounding communities and the preservation of this is foremost in the minds of the members of CMC.

Fou early members of the council are still active in the organization. They are: T. G. Reeves, who served as chairman during a brief period; J. W. Woodruff Jr., present chairman; Dr. William Henry Shaw; and Maynard Ashworth.

The council chairman serves as chairman of the Military Affairs Committee of the Columbus Chamber of Commerce.

Through the years, the council has had as active members the mayors of Columbus and Phenix City; the chairmen of the Muscogee and Russell County Commissions; the presidents of the Columbus and Phenix City Chambers of Commerce; the presidents of local radio and television stations; and, the leaders of the two cities' ministerial alliances, merchants associations, and school systems.

Generally, the council membership is a counterpart of civilian leaders and key staff positions at Fort Benning. Total membership now stands at 54, 9 of which are military positions.

The council has mediated many differences, and as a civilian-military body, it has served as a model for many other communities.

Gen. Gorman to direct post 'training board'

A study group that wants to hear about your training problems has been established at Fort Benning by Headquarters, Continental Army Command (CONARC), acting at the direction of the Army's Chief of Staff.

The Board for Dynamic Training, a part of the Chief of Staff's drive for heightened professionalism in the post-Vietnam Army, will serve the Army from Fort Benning under the direction of Brig. Gen. Paul Gorman, Infantry School assistant commandant.

"One basic mission of the board will be the forging of a direct link between the training establishment and battalion and lower level unit commanders. An outgrowth of the board will be a catalogue of innovative solutions to problems being encountered by these commanders," according to Col. Robert B. Nelson, deputy president of the board.

First step by the board will be inquiry into "obstacles to stimulating and rewarding training in combat arms units of both active Army and reserve components," according to Col. Nelson.

In order to identify such obstacles, active and reserve personnel are authorized — and encouraged — to write directly to the board (Board for Dynamic Training, Attn: Operations, Fort Benning, Ga., 31905).

Imaginative, innovative solutions to such obstacles will be sought by the board, and disseminated Army-wide through the catalogue and other means. Included will be ideas on organization of dynamic training, as well as conduct of tactical training in units faced with limitations on equipment and training areas.

Develop recreational facilities

Soldiers work to improve community relations

By Bob Wise

A concerned 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry has been making strides towards improving soldier-civilian relations by assisting neighboring Columbus in the development of recreational facilities and social programs.

It is hoped that the programs, which include the renovating of parks, organizing of neighborhood athletic teams and providing tours of Fort Benning for economically disadvantaged children, will strengthen the existing bond of community-post spirit, according to Capt. Donald G. Monk, battalion S-5 (domestic action and recruiting).

The domestic action projects, begun in June, allow 1st Bn., 29th Inf. soldiers to become involved more actively in social and economic aspects of Columbus.

The battalion has provided troops and equipment on a limited basis.

Help from Columbus citizens was requested and received. It was desired that civilians become involved in the projects in hopes that the citizens would develop pride in their accomplishments and protect their investments by maintaining their areas.

The projects have received much praise from many Columbus citizens and civic leaders.

Through the assistance of the Columbus Housing Authority and the Office of Economic Opportunity (OEO), three centrally-located areas in need of rehabilitation were identified by Hubert Stubbs, director of Parks and Recreation. The three areas were Kendrick Quarters, Woodland Park and Farley Homes. The target areas are in the vicinity of Manly Taylor School and the Elizabeth Canty Homes neighborhood.

The first task undertaken by the soldiers of the 29th was the renovation of two baseball fields behind the Woodland Community Center which adjoins Taylor School. After topographic surveys were made, the abandoned playing fields had to be cleared of brush and garbage and smoothed out. Drainage ditches also had to be constructed. With the help of men and equipment from the 72nd Engineer Co., the 29th Inf. soldiers completed the project in about two weeks.

In addition to giving up their time to work in Columbus on the summer projects, the soldiers organized the neighborhood youngsters into work forces to assist them in the clean-up operations.

"They've done wonders here," said Mrs. Lila Mack, director of the Woodland Community Center. "The lots had been cluttered with old refrigerators, tin cans and trash of all kinds and they cleared it all away."

Stubbs, the parks and recreation director, said that the work the soldiers were doing really showed the strong ties between Fort Benning and Columbus. "They've done a terrific job for us in the Woodland Park area . . . we just can't say enough for the great job they (the oldiers) did in reclaiming those abandoned areas." The soldiers also renovated a baseball park in the Kendrick Quarters area.

Another area rehabilitated by the soldiers was the park at Elizabeth Canty Homes, a housing project located near the intersection of Brown Ave. and Cusseta Road. Work was begun by the 43rd Engineers, 931st Engr. Group.

After the engineers surveyed and leveled the area with their heavy equipment, the 29th Inf. soldiers moved in and sodded the park. The park serves 256 families living in the area.

A— Yes, according to a spokesman from the Transportation Division, a person who is an E4 with over two but less than 4 years service and who has a six year active duty commitment will be authorized shipment of 2,000 pounds of household goods at government expense provided that prior dependent travel is authorized by competent authority.

Q — I understand that officer's are now authorized to participate in Project Transition. Is this fact or rumor?

A — Fact. Project Transition is now open to officers as well as enlisted personnel. It's the newest development in the Army's implementation of the tri-service program previously limited to enlisted personnel. Job counseling and placement assistance are getting top priority. Major efforts in Transition training are being targeted toward the combat soldier. Project transition is also being programmed for Army installations overseas. In a related development, the Veterans Administration, in a 3 month cooperative test program sponsored by Department of Defense (DOD) has begun an overseas job counseling program. Department of Labor and the U. S. Office of Education are also participating.

Q — I understand that the Army has a new program out on the training of enlisted medical specialists as physicians assistants. What's the story on this?

A — True, the Army does have a new program where a qualified enlisted medical corpsmen can apply for entrance into the Warrant Officer Physicians Assistant Program. The course is of 18 months duration and the first class is scheduled to begin early in 1972. Two annual 60 man classes are scheduled. E8's with more than two years in grade and E9's will be promoted to CW2 upon graduation. Graduates in lower enlisted grades will become WO1. See your unit personnel office for further details.

The judge says

Dealer can't evict possible customer

USAIC LEGAL ASSISTANCE OFFICE — A big shopping center is a mixed bag. It is private property, yet it takes on many of the qualities of a public area. The Supreme Court has referred to the shopping center as the "modern analogue of the town center."

Recently Harry Hippie went to the shopping center and bought a coke. He sat on a bench there, drinking it and talking to a friend. A store security officer told Harry and his bearded friend to move on. After some heated words the security officer ordered Harry off the premises. When he failed to leave, the officer made a citizen's arrest. Harry was charged with breaking the city anti-loitering law.

Harry's lawyer argued that the city ordinance was unconstitutional. The court ruled that the shopping center does not have absolute power to arbitrarily eject Harry, a would-be customer. But the shopping center could remove him for good reasons. The city ordinance gives the merchant power to arrest and remove the customer who might injure or disrupt his business. But that must be proved. Looks alone are not enough.

For example, no merchant can remove a person because of his color, race, religion or ancestry. Even back in the early days of the common law, certain kinds of business were "affected with a public interest." The laws imposed on them a common law duty to serve all customers on reasonable terms. Discrimination was ruled out.

The more the premises are affected with a public interest — the more the place takes on the qualities of a public premise — the less power the owner has to remove people.

In one case the manager of a race track tried to expel a patron who had a "reputation" as a bookie. The court ruled that the person could not be kept away without some better grounds than "reputation." The person must be involved in some kind of illegal activity.

In another case the bar owner tried to keep "homosexuals" out of his bar and restaurant. The courts said that homosexuals had the right to food and drink as long as they were acting properly. If they were committing illegal or immoral acts then they could be removed.

Often used 'lifer' label, no cause for anger

By Lloyd Leavitt Jr.

One of the most often heard cliches in the Armed Forces today is "lifer." It's an "in" word if you're "out," and an "out" word if you are "in."

"Lifer" flashes back to Class B movies with George Haft shuffling endlessly along cold prison walls. It insinuates that the career man has taken a life sentence, just like some three-time losers at Sing Sing.

It's a word that can easily be shouted by some guy whose biggest moments used to be standing on a street corner and throwing rocks at school buses.

It's a word that irritates many. Why? Because no one likes to be belittled by prejudicial words. On second thought, maybe the word isn't all that bad though. . .

No one is born a "lifer." They became one, step by step. Along the way civilian life beckoned. The grass often looked greener in their neighbor's back yard. "Peacetime" years were not always very peaceful — Korea, China Straits, Lebanon and the Berlin Crisis, Cuban missiles, and then Vietnam.

Many "lifers" sweat out housing, pay raises, operations, readiness inspections, long temporary duty assignments, alert duty and frequent moves. Somehow, the years passed and the sense of belonging grew. Good outfits, good guys and good memories outweighed the bad. So, they became "lifers."

And that's not all had. Most people who accomplish anything in this world are "lifers." They concentrate on their vocation until they do it better than the average person.

Though the "lifer" may march to the beat of a different drummer, the doctor who brought each of us into this world was a . . "lifer." So was your favorite teacher, and so were Vince Lombardi, Franklin Roosevelt, Satchmo Armstrong, Pope John, Billy Graham, Henry Ford and George Patton. Unfortunately, so were Karl Marx, Ho Chi Minh, Mao Tse Tung and most of those who are trying to upset our apple cart.

That's why professionals are needed in the military today and in the future. So a "lifer" label is no cause for anger. . . the professionals have spent too many years earning it, and they're in good company.

DUSA helps 'Army brats' retain 'family identity'

By Carolyn Ingalls
Fem-Line Staff Writer

Any woman who has been around Fort Benning for even a short time has surely run across the name DUSA, especially if she has taken advantage of the nursery facility at Tot Town. The letters D-U-S-A represent a unique sorority called Daughters of the United States Army. It is unusual in that it offers the main link for keeping in touch as the traveling, "Army brat" marries.

A good person to contact to learn more of this organization which affects so many military families, whether members or not, is Mrs. William R. Guthrie, president of the Fort Benning chapter. Mrs. Guthrie (the former Barbara Steinmeyer), is herself an example of the traveling "Army brat." Her childhood and adolescent years were spent in Army posts all over the United States, including Fort Benning. She has been to China twice and to the Philippines. Col. Guthrie was also a military child and they are now enjoying renewed acquaintences with friends they grew up with here at Fort Benning many years ago.

Mrs. Guthrie explained that the, "Purpose of DUSA's getting together as a social group is in the endeavor to contribute to the needs of the Army community." Unlike their civilian counterparts, most military children have no 'hometowns' to return to to meet their old friends and to contribute to civic betterment. For them the Army post where they are stationed is the hometown and through DUSA they can renew old ties as well as aid in the progress and improvement of their "town."

In 1928 about 40 Army wives at Fort Benning began to realize that they shared a common childhood of being daughters of regular Army officers. Under the guidance of Mrs. Charles D. Roberts (formerly Eugenia Bradford) they formed an organization designed to enable Army girls to retain their family identity after marrying, and to meet with friends in each civilian or military community where they were currently living. The National headquarters was established in Washington, D. C., in 1932, and chapters are now widespread from posts and cities in the United States to Germany and Japan.

Membership in the Fort Benning Chapter of DUSA is open to all daughters or grand-daughters of active duty or retired officers of any of the services. They meet on the 3rd Monday of each month and occasionally get together with husbands for an evening social. There are, no doubt, many wives in the area who are eligible for membership but are unaware of DUSA's existance. In past years, this chapter has had up to 60 members but is currently carrying out its projects with approximately 20 ladies.

In 1962, the first infant resuscitator for an Army hospital (and the first in the entire southeast) was funded by the chapter as part of their sponsorship of the pediatric and OB wards. More recently their contributions have included $1,000 to Community Activities Association; $500 for a local scholastic achievement award; and $450 to the dependent dental clinic for special equipment needed for more extensive child dental care, especially for handicapped children.

The funds for all these beneficial projects comes from one "49'er Party" each year. The general theme of the 49'ers has been used for several years and has proved to be a tremendous success. Even with the limited membership, another party is being planned for the spring.

A natural step from the chapter's sponsorship of the OB ward was the assumption of responsibility for a post nursery. In 1959, the need for such a facility became apparent and Fort Benning's DUSA took on the sponsorship and management of the nursery. To Mrs. Guthrie's knowledge, this is the only DUSA sponsored nursery in the Army. Various post groups pooled their money and in 1968 the nursery moved from a converted war-time building to the present Tot Town structure. A professional staff came with the new building. Upon completion, the physical plant became the property of the Army but the operation and management is the responsibility of DUSA. Tot Town is a non-profit, self-supporting organization open to all personnel entitled to use the dependent facilities here. A Nursery Board, made up of five chapter members, meets regularly to update policies and continually oversee the operation.

On Aug. 8, 347 children were cared for in Tot Town. Although the troop strength is down, the nursery population is up, due to the influx of young families on post.

With Tot Town proving so valuable and being popularly used, the need for a nursery annex in the new community shopping area became apparent. However, $152,000 is needed to complete this project. $7,000 has already been raised by the 49'ers Party this year. The rest of the funds must be raised with the help of other groups on post. The annex will be a great convenience to mothers for shopping trips and medical appointments.

Environmental seminars slated by OWC as community service

The public is invited to attend a series of environmental seminars sponsored as a community service project by the Officers' Wives Club. The group will meet every Tuesday at 10 a.m. at the Officers' Wives' Club Lounge to hear speakers and participate in informal discussion.

Presented at no cost to the public, the series is designed to increase public awareness of ecological problems and to explain how individuals can help solve these problems. Project committees will also be formed to focus on particular problems in greater depth.

Each of the lectures may be attended without previous participation or future obligation.

The group plans to work with existing community projects, and will be coordinating their efforts with those of the Environmental Management Division of Fort Benning. This office, which was formed about four months ago, has aided the women of the OWC in setting up the seminars, and is willing to answer questions and help advise individuals concerning environmental problems. Their office can be reached at 545-5933. Anyone wishing further information regarding the environmental seminar series may phone Mrs. John DeWalt at 689-2035.

Programs planned for the near future include; air and water pollution, Sept. 28; "The Quality of our Environment" by Dr. George Stanton of Columbus College, dealing with population, Oct. 5; "Health foods and nutrition," presented by Dr. Agatha Thrash and Mrs. Ruth Mock who represent the local health food stores, Oct. 12; and regional planning for ecological balance, featuring a movie narrated by Professor Ian L. McHarg, an ecologist of national prominence.

The group will concentrate on presenting ways in which individuals can improve the local environment. The series is scheduled to continue throughout the year, and at various times of the day and evening to give everyone who is interested a chance to attend. If you cannot attend the programs but wish to be informed of future programs and projects please notify Mrs. DeWalt or the Environmental Management Division.

Hqs. Cmd. has monthly coffee

The smell of slow, perking coffee and the taste of "coca cola" cake permeated the air of the Headquarters Command's coffee held at the home of Mrs. Arthur N. Zieske, 301D Stewart, Sept. 16. It was a time for the renewal of old acquaintances and a welcoming to Mrs. Bruce Fraser, wife of Hqs. Cmd. commanding officer, Col. Bruce T. Fraser, Mrs. James Root, and Mrs. Perry Hope.

Individual jobs were allocated for the Christmas Bazaar and plans were discussed for making sponsorship of the October OWC Mod Fashion Show an enjoyable occasion.

Retirement orientation scheduled

An orientation for personnel contemplating retirement will be held at 9:00 a.m. on Oct. 6 at Building 83, Section A, 1st Floor, Orientation Room at Fort Benning.

All personnel with over 18 years of active Federal Service are invited to attend with their spouse.

Sept. 26 designated Gold Star Mothers Day

Thursday (Sept. 23) at 10 a.m., Mayor J. R. Allen of Columbus signed a proclamation designating the last Sunday in September as American Gold Star Mothers Day.

It was in 1936 that President Roosevelt first proclaimed the last Sunday in September as Gold Star Mothers Day.

Mrs. W. A. Callahan is president of the local Twin City Chapter of Gold Star Mothers of America.

She said members of the chapter will attend a.m. service at the Infantry Center Chapel Sept. 26, in a group. They will furnish flowers for the altar as a memorial to their sons.

The American Gold Star Mothers, Inc., is a group of women who have lost a son during a war, due to hostile enemy action.

The local chapter was given a charter in October of 1969. The members have been active in the surrounding communities working with the needy and entertaining the patients at Martin Army Hospital.

Once a year, the group finds a family which will have a hard time during the Christmas holidays and furnishes them with the food and toys.

Mrs. Callahan encourages any woman who would like to join to notify her. The group takes members from within a 25-mile radius and is always willing to have extra helping hands. At present the group has 27 members, 2 of whom are charter members, having joined the group within six months after the charter was obtained.

Arts, crafts exhibited for MEDDAC luncheon

The MEDDAC Officer's Wives Club met Sept. 10 at the Supper Club for an Arts and Crafts Fair and luncheon.

The fair, coordinated by Mrs. Eric Larsen, consisted of exhibits by local artists and shops. This included various types of paintings in oils, watercolors and acrylics.

Among some of the more popular displays were the stuffed animals and woven placemats by Lucy Moore and the rock and mineral exhibit by Mike Trask. Glass, art objects by Charles Adams and the wood carvings of C. M. Copeland seemed to intrigue the MEDDAC wives.

Art needlework and "That Place," displaying all forms of paintings and handicrafts, rounded out the fair.

Also present were representatives of the Springer Theater Company, the Columbus Symphony and the Three Arts League. These women were seeking new members for their respective organizations and recruited a number of the MEDDAC wives.

After the ladies shopped and talked a wine punch and buffet luncheon were served.

Newcomers to the MEDDAC OWC were: Mrs. Donald Amano; Mrs. Alan Cross; Mrs. David Cunningham; Mrs. William Demmitt; Mrs. Edwin Douglas; Mrs. Jack Enborn; Mrs. Stephen Factor; Mrs. Thomas Gallegos; Mrs. John Hammett and Mrs. Richard Karn.

Mrs. Robert Kern, Mrs. Kyle Kiesau, Mrs. Edwin Nighbert, Mrs. Joseph Paul, Mrs. Richard Peyser, Mrs. Harold Plank, Mrs. Richard Puhlman, Mrs. Terence Reisman, Mrs. Greer Richardson, Mrs. Richard Schultz, and Mrs. Jack Sheek were also among the newcomers.

Mrs. Carolyn Sarkiss, Mrs. George Clarke, Mrs. Leo Sexauer and Mrs. Stephen Coakley were guests for the event.

Two members were attending their last luncheon. They were Mrs. John Perchalski and Mrs. Luis Oliver.

The hostesses for the September luncheon were the wives of the Orthopedic, Physical Therapy, Podiatry and Radiology departments. The chairman were Mrs. Richard Camp and Mrs. John Wright.

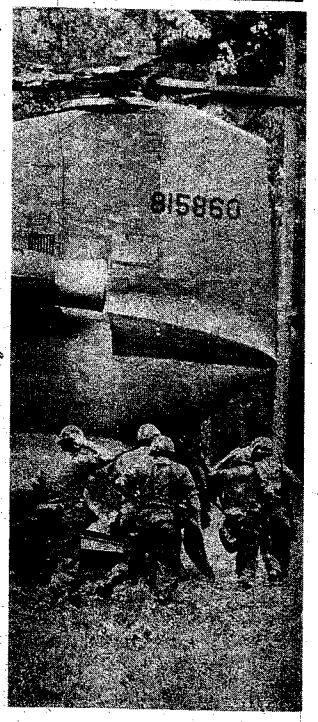
Engineers improve post

during Operational Readiness Training Test

Several units of the 931st Engineer Group, conducted a five-day field exercise last week under simulated combat conditions which resulted in a variety of improvements around the post.

The various units were operating under a simulated "invasion" of three Southern states by a non-existent Latin American country and reportedly handled themselves very well under these conditions.

The 931st took advantage of this Operational Readiness Training Test (ORTT) to conduct several needed construction projects including repairs on a major part of Lawson Army Airfield, installation of 160 ft. of drainage pipe near the Chinook parking area, repair of a bridge over Landry Creek, improvements on the Benning rock quarry, and construction of a two story range tower in the eastern-most portion of the post.



Engineers from Co. B, 43rd Engr. Bn., 931st Engr. Gp. work to repair a bridge over Landry Creek near Lawson Field during their recent ORTT.

Army unit-of-choice program extended

A temporary order allows seven major stateside installations to guarantee combat arms enlistees 16 months' duty in their units upon completion of Basic Combat Training and Advanced Individual Training (AIT).

The option formerly guaranteed enlistees six months with their unit-of-choice following AIT.

The new guarantee will apply not only to men currently enlisting for stateside units-of-choice, but also to the more than 1900 enlistees who signed for the option since it was first offered in February.

Authority granting stateside commanders the right to guarantee 16 months' duty will expire Sept. 30.

The stateside unit-of-choice is available to civilians enlisting in the following combat arms units: 197th Infantry Brigade, Fort Benning, Ga.; 82nd Airborne Division, Ft. Bragg, N. C.; 4th Infantry Division (Mechanized), Ft. Carson, Colo.; 2nd Armored Division, Ft. Hood, Tex.; 1st Cavalry Division (Tricap), Ft. Hood, Tex.; 3d Armored Cavalry Regiment, Ft. Lewis, Wash.; and 1st Infantry Division (mechanized), Ft. Riley, Kan.

'Patriots' hear about the outside

For the men of the 1st Bn. (Mech) 58th Infantry "Patriots," Aug. 19 was a learning experience in preparing for a future. About 35 to 40 Patriots scheduled to separate from the army in August and September of this year were on hand for a reenlistment seminar.

In a relaxed atmosphere, in which beer was served, the Patriots discussed their future as soldiers hearing out both pros and cons. Men who had come back into the Army were on hand to give their individual reasons for returning, and the benefits they attribute to their army experience.

This seminar was initiated by the "Patriots" battalion commander, Lt. Col. Stephen R. Pawlik, who was also the guest speaker. Pawlik discussed the benefits and security afforded the dedicated career soldier today and tomorrow. The Patriots who were in attendance responded very well, and were appreciative of the concern shown for their future by the career soldiers present. After the two hour seminar each "Patriot" went his own way, but, from discussion and responses supplied during the seminar, surely their thoughts were looking to the future.

OFFICER CANDIDATES

participate in new mechanized infantry exercise

A new, more thorough and more realistic mechanized infantry training program is underway at Fort Benning. The program is designed to prepare infantry lieutenants for a mechanized unit assignment, which is a strong possibility for today's young officer. Nearly all American infantry units in Europe and the United States are mechanized. Half of the Korea-based outfits and many infantry units in South Vietnam today are mechanized. The new training stems from a directive issued last spring by Gen. William C. Westmoreland, calling for a 100 per cent increase in Infantry School mechanized instruction. The Company Tactics Committee, of the Company Operations Department, has responded by tripling the amount of mechanized infantry training. Recently an officer candidate class was used to test a new 31-hour mechanized problem. Utilizing the opposing forces concept, the company was split into offensive and defensive teams, opposing each other over a 6½-mile course. During the first day the defensive forces face tank-killer teams employed by the defense, which is conducting delaying operations. At night the offense moves through two miles of darkness in its armored personnel carriers (APC), sets up defensive positions, and fends off tank probes. Teams change roles during the night, with the former offensive platoons conducting the delaying operations the following day. A new feature in the problem includes thirty-one hours of continuous tactical training, using APCs and tanks. Students have "free play" in directing their vehicles, as long as they remain within the problem boundaries. Track vehicle maintenance and recovery are emphasized, so if an APC becomes immobile during the attack, the student commander must decide quickly what to do. Maintenance and logistical support normally available to a mechanized rifle company is present, however, the students must request their water, ammunition, repair teams and other needed supplies. Plenty of time is allowed in the assembly areas for maintenance and planning, so each of the students will know how the operation is to be conducted. The new training attempts to place the student in the role of a mechanized infantry platoon leader, facing a combat situation. Beginning in October, all Infantry Officer Basic Course students will undergo the new training.

The assault begins, with students safely dispersed on their approach on enemy hill. They move up the hill, employing fire and maneuver while cadre officers observe.

Once the hill is secured, student leaders set up a busy defense. Center front, Tom Boling reports the successful assault on the problem commander, and receives orders for continuing the assault against a retreating enemy.

Capt. Chris Ziegler hears the morning's operation of order as the student chain of command. The morning's student leaders issue orders to their platoons, arrange for artillery and logistical support before moving out.

The assaulting force enters a smoke screen, left on top of the hill by an escaping mechanized enemy force. Students show their formation, forthcoming contact until they can move through the smoke.

Drug abuse attacked at Benning

By Cathy Wright

How big is the drug problem at Fort Benning?

No one seems to know. The Army itself doesn't know. It's believed it is roughly the size of the problem which exists throughout the nation. But no one really knows.

We do know this, however. A lot of people at Fort Benning are concerned about the problem and are attacking it in various ways.

For example:

—Benning House provides a half-way house with space for 54 men trying to shake drug abuse. Plans are currently underway to provide facilities for 100.

—Martin Army Hospital, which sponsors Benning House, provides medical services, such as urinalysis, detoxification and medication.

—Post chaplains conduct "rap" sessions for soldiers with drug problems and work closely with Benning House.

—The Provost Marshal maintains a full-time, two-man Drug Abuse Lecture Team, in addition to the investigative work done by the Provost Marshal and the Criminal Investigation Division.

—Some units, such as the 197th Infantry Brigade, are in the process of developing educational and rehabilitation programs to combat drug abuse.

Who is the drug user? There are a lot of different answers. Ask a junkie and he'll tell you the whole world is hooked. Ask a unit commander and he'll tell you that no more than 2 or 3 of his 100-man unit has ever used illegal drugs. Ask someone known as a drug expert, and he'll tell you that he doesn't know.

A report from the Provost Marshal, prepared by Capt. James E. Lucas, seems consistent with the best available information. Most users, according to the report, are young, 18 to 23 years old.

No more than 5 per cent seem to have experimented with heroin, and of those very few are physically addicted. This information is supported by hospital and Benning House staff members, who say they see very few addicts — rather, they see and treat the drug abuser.

Can marijuana lead to harder drugs?

"Sure. The alcoholic starts with a beer or a drink, the drug abuser starts out smoking pot," says Maj. George Trick, chief of Benning House. "But the reason people become alcoholics or drug abusers is that they don't know how to deal with problems in an open, aggressive way."

It is on this premise that Trick and other members of the Benning House staff approach drug abuse. The goal of Benning House is to provide the drug abuser with alternative methods of "feeling good."

The original Benning House program, started in May of 1970, was established to treat alcoholism. The resident drug abuse program was added in July of this year. This combined approach has worked out quite well, according to both staff and residents.

Participation in Benning House is strictly voluntary. Any soldier who has a drug abuse problem can enter the initial 60 day resident program. He may do so by applying for the amnesty program and agreeing to participate in Benning House. Additionally, Vietnam returnees, and other soldiers picked up by urinalysis, may choose to enter Benning House.

During this period, the resident works in his unit during the day but lives in Benning House. He is expected to attend group activities five nights a week, including interaction and discussion groups, and to be available for whatever comes up. "In short," says SFC Jim Henry, one of the original staff members, "we ask him to give up his leisure time for his own rehabilitation."

House rules are simple, but not easy. No drugs. No violence and no threats of violence. Everyone is expected to participate in activities and to demonstrate his commitment to stay off drugs. Benning House does not accept those on methadone maintenance, however.

Violation of these rules are dealt with by an elected House Council which includes both residents and staff. The council also helps guide the program and makes recommendations for passes, and for the readmission of residents who leave the program before they complete it.

The Benning House model is currently being studied by the Department of the Army as a prototype for other drug abuse treatment centers on military installations. Benning House facilities are being expanded to include six buildings and sleeping space for 100. Questions about the Benning House program, and drug abuse in general may be answered by Benning House's LIVE LINE (545-LIVE).

Martin Army Hospital, in addition to sponsorship of Benning House, handles the medical aspects of drug abuse. Hospital personnel administer urinalysis tests to check for the presence of drugs, and maintain a detoxification ward. If it is determined that a man needs some sort of medication during the difficult readjustment period, he may be given tranquilizers or occasionally, methadone. The hospital attempts to complete procedings of drug cases in 48 hours so that the man may be quickly released.

Fort Benning chaplains also approach drug abuse as a social problem rather than a chemical one. Chaplain Lt. Col. Richard Nybro, who is currently part-time consultant to Benning House, describes the drug abuse problem resulting from, "a sense of alienation. All over the country people face the fast pace of life, mobility, and it comes off as a lack of concern. Consequently, drug abuse treatment must replace this sense of alienation with something else."

The Chaplain's Division has requested a full time chaplain for Benning House. At least five Fort Benning chaplains have attended Drug Abuse Education courses offered by the National Institute of Mental Health. Several chaplains, notably Tom Fraker of the Airborne Chapel, have had success with "rap" sessions for soldiers concerning drug abuse and related problems.

Other services include individual counseling on drug abuse, and explaining the amnesty program to those who wish to apply.

The offices of the Provost Marshal and the Criminal Investigation Division (CID) have been involved for about two years in a combined education and detection approach. The Provost Marshal maintains a Drug Abuse Lecture team, and has two telephone lines which offer recorded information on drugs and related issues. Additionally, they have two dogs trained to alert at the smell of marijuana.

The CID has two investigators assigned to the general area of drug abuse, although they have other responsibilities as well.

The Drug Abuse Lecture Team, staffed by investigators Raymond F. Jakitsch and Steven A. Wilborne, is available to speak to military units, civic groups, schools and other organizations. Twice monthly they present a lecture to all new Fort Benning personnel, which is a required part of orientation.

The Dial DRUG and Dial DOPE series, prepared by the lecture team, has received over 54,000 calls in less than a year. At the end of the recorded message, callers are referred to the Drug Abuse Lecture Team, or to Benning House's LIVE line.

Two programs have recently been added to train officers and NCO's in leadership positions to deal with drug abuse, an area in which the drug abuse program has often broken down in the past.

Every identified drug abuser, whether he is on amnesty or picked up on urinalysis, and whether or not he participates in Benning House, is assigned a sponsor in his unit. The sponsor's job is to watch out for the man, and help him solve problems which could lead to undue frustration. Benning House holds weekly briefing sessions for sponsors to help them with whatever problems arise.

Recently initiated briefings for officers and NCO's have been helpful in dispelling misgivings about the operation of Benning House, and the amnesty program in general.

It has also aided unit leadership in understanding and dealing with drug abuse.

The treatment of drug abuse at Fort Benning has begun to take a three-pronged approach — medication, rehabilitation and education. The half-way house approach of Benning House is designed to help the abuser with a strong desire to stop using drugs.

Educational programs have, in the past, been aimed at those groups in which there may be potential users. Now they are beginning to work more closely with those who are responsible for dealing with drug abuse.

While the soldier who has not made a firm commitment to cleanup has few options, Fort Benning is building programs to help anyone who wants to use them.

Bond rates extended

WASHINGTON — Extensions of maturity were announced for the older Series E and H Savings Bonds and Freedom Shares. The action insures that, regardless of when purchased, these Bonds will continue to draw interest.

Series E Savings Bonds purchased from May 1941 through April 1952, the first of which would have begun to reach maturity in May of this year, have been granted a third 10-year extension. This extension will give these early E bonds a life span of 40 years. The Treasury said it intends that this will be the final extension provided for these bonds, but noted that E bonds can be exchanged into current-income H bonds at any time prior to their extended maturity.

At the same time, the Treasury announced that Series E Bonds issued from May 1952 through January 1957, and Series H Bonds issued from June 1952 through January 1957, have been granted a second 10-year extension.

When they retire

REFERRAL matches careerists with civilian jobs

By Cathy Wright

While computers have often been blamed for running people out of jobs the Department of Defense has a computer whose chief business is finding jobs for people. The REFERRAL Program is designed to match the skills of career servicemen and women who are about to retire from active duty with available jobs in the civilian labor market.

REFERRAL, which has been operating for just over a year, was originally instituted as a career incentive. Since most career military people retire between 40 and 45 years of age, there is ample time for them to begin a second career. Frequently retirees are qualified for civilian employment, but many are stationed far away from their retirement home, and are unfamiliar with civilian job opportunities and methods of seeking employment. REFERRAL is planned to overcome these obstacles, and to put the retiree in touch with an employer who can use his or her skills.

The Fort Benning REFERRAL office, located in Bldg. 83, has two REFERRAL counselors. Maj. Clinton Williams, chief Personnel Actions Branch, directs the Benning program. Currently, the office is registering 12 to 15 retirees a month. The figure has gone as high as 300 during peak months.

Servicemen and women retiring after 18 or more years of service are eligible for REFERRAL. Additionally, those eligible for disability retirement, or for disability separation after 10 or more years of service, may register with REFERRAL. Registrants are acceped within 6 months after retirement, or until they find employment, whichever comes first. Disabled veterans may remain for 1 year. Williams emphasized that REFERRAL would serve during this period only. "Retirees may receive only one job through REFERRAL," he said, "then his application is dropped, even if he is dissatisfied with the work. However, he is not obligated to accept any of the offers he receives."

Additionally, any eligible serviceman must register for REFERRAL before retirement, or he becomes ineligible. According to Williams, veterans' employment is a Department of Labor responsibility, and REFERRAL is a Department of Defense program, designed to fill the needs of career servicemen who would like to start looking for a second career before they leave the service. Therefore, once retired, they are no longer within the jurisdiction of REFERRAL.

The REFERRAL program computerizes job opportunities submitted by employes. The employer specifies a number of factors about the job order, which must include the job title, the geographic location of the job, and the investment required (if any). He may also specify a minimum acceptable educational level, and indicate a salary range. For purposes of computer matching, the retiree submits his formal educational level, availability date, wage range, acceptable geographic areas, and his job preferences. The computer then prints a list of all the registrants who meet the qualifications for a certain job and sends the list to the employer, along with a resume giving more personal information about the prospective employee. From this point, the REFERRAL program takes no part in the negotiations. The employer decides which registrants he wants to contact, and all negotiations are between the employer and the retiree he has contacted.

REFERRAL does not guarantee anyone a job. It is simply one of many means of finding a job, and employment counselors caution that it should be used only in conjunction with other methods. While REFERRAL has been a direct benefit to many retirees, in many cases it has not produced jobs. According to a Department of Defense report, as of July 22, 906 retirees had registered with the program, and records showed 1,278 were currently employed. Others had withdrawn without explanation, and 14,590 were still in the computer pool.

Williams explained that there were many reasons for the large number of registrants who have not been placed. "The most desirable people are placed immediately, and the others often float." He explained that now, when so few are being hired, employes are highly selective.

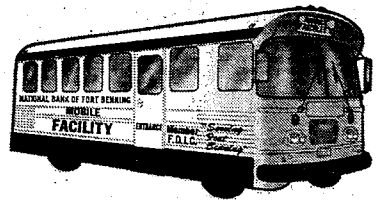
It should be noted, however, that it has been difficult to analyze the success of the program thus far, due to the failure of many registrants to notify REFERRAL when they become employed. Consequently, it has been impossible to make an accurate evaulation.

Most of the benefits of the REFERRAL program, however, are indirect. Counselors feel that the greatest advantage of the program is that it increases communication between military personnel and possible employes. Often deals for other jobs develop through computerized contacts which did not directly produce a job.

Men and women with 20 to 30 years experience are often reluctant to acknowledge the difficulties of job-hunting and therefore frequently ignore pre-retirement counseling. Since counseling is a necessary part of REFERRAL registration, the applicants can be prepared for the adjustment to civilian life.

The summary of job orders printed by the computer on a monthly basis is an excellent method of checking the availability of a certain type of work, or of the employment opportunities in a geographical area. The computer lists the complete inventory of jobs by type and breaks them down into number of jobs of each type, and the location of the job.

Williams also made several recommendations for most effective use of REFERRAL. "First, I can't emphasize too strongly that REFERRAL must be kept in perspective. A person would be foolish to register with REFERRAL and then just go home and wait for the mail. It is just one means of finding a job."



Secondly, the retirement office recommends that the retiree prepare a resume before he registers for REFERRAL. "People come in who don't have the faintest idea what they want to do or could do. Then we hesitate to suggest things because we might talk someone into something they don't have the slightest interest in," said Williams.

It is especially important, the retirement office advises, that retiring men and women think realistically about job levels, starting salaries, and geographical placement. "We try to get them to be as realistic as possible," said Williams, "Many retirees, especially retiring officers, have trouble adjusting to their new status in the labor market."

"Also, we are prepared to make sure that all their REFERRAL preferences are compatible. For example, if there is no market for aerospace engineers in Florida at this time, there is no sense in registering for such a job. It is also important that they indicate a wage range suitable for the job preference in a certain location. Electricians may make substantially more in New York than in Birmingham."

For further information, or an appointment with a REFERRAL counselor, phone the retirement office at 545-7224.

Mental Hygiene Clinic expects to see over 1,000

By Cathy Wright

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second part in a series dealing with Fort Benning's Mental Hygiene Clinic.

The Mental Hygiene Clinic expects to see over 1,000 patients this year. Many are retirees who have not yet successfully made the adjustment to civilian life. Some are married couples with problems. And others are wives whose husbands are overseas, and who are having difficulty managing a family in the absence of one partner.

The response to any of these problems is varied, depending on what the staff feels will be most beneficial to the individual. The few cases which require extensive therapy are generaly referred to civilian agencies. The majority, however, the problem-centered cases, are handled by the clinic staff.

Retirement, for example, can produce a number of problems which bring people to the clinic. Capt. Gene Wilkinson said circumstances surrounding retirement can produce depression in a number of ways. "Servicemen retire fairly young, and often become depressed when they find they are not as productive as before," he said. "Or, a man may be pressured by his family to separate from the military. This strain can produce anxiety."

The clinic staff, in dealing with this situation, for example, tries to identify the source of the problem, and offer the man and his family alternative ways of coping with the stress.

These alternatives may be sought through individual therapy, marital counseling, or the whole family may be brought in to help.

Moreover, the problems which occur around family separation are often handled by the clinic. While the variety of Army life can be very beneficial to families, and broadening for children, family separation, Col. Herbert G. See said, "can be very damaging."

In addition to talking with wives whose husbands are overseas, the clinic, through the Child Guidance Clinic, provides counseling for children ranging from toddlers to adolescents.

A major service of Mental Hygiene Clinic is the Child Guidance Clinic. Staffed by Capt. Charles S. Dresbach, social work specialist Fred Piercy, and Mrs. Helen Horowitz, the clinic deals with children under 12 years old who are referred to the clinic by parents, schools, law enforcement agencies and the pediatrics clinic.

Until Capt. Dresbach began building up the clinic since the first of this year, most cases were referred to civilian agencies. Currently, much like the Mental Hygiene Clinic, Child Guidance provides short-term treatmeot for dependent children, and refers more severe cases to appropriate public and private agencies.

"A child has a behavior problem as a result of a certain life-style and parents have to be involved in any changes that are made," says Cresbach.

To the child who is having difficulty adjusting to a new school or to family separation, the Child Guidance Clinic provides a place to talk things out. Children sometimes cannot communicate their feelings to parents, and a trained ear to decipher the problems can be especially helpful.

For a child with more severe conflicts, for example one who interprets parental rigidity as lack of love, the Child Guidance staff works with the whole family to adjust those elements which are causing trouble.

The Parent Effectiveness Training (PET) course has been one of the most enthusiastically received of the new programs offered by the Child Guidance Clinic. The three-month course, now being taught for the first time, teaches parents to be more sensitive to their children's needs.

Capt. Dresbach, who is one of three instructors including Piercy and psychology specialist Russ Defenbaugh, explained that the purpose of PET is to teach skills which can be used to help children deal with problems.

"We teach parents ways to find out what their kid's problems are. Then they need to determine who owns the problem. If Johnny misbehaves, the parent should define how the behavior affects each individual. It may be that it affects no one but Johnny, so that particular behavior is not the parent's problem. It may be that Johnny just needs someone to listen," Dresbach said.

Participants in the first course have been deeply impressed with results. One young woman told the group that the PET skill of active listening, that is, listening for the feelings behind the words someone uses, has been helpful with "neighborhood children, my husband, in fact, with everyone."

Dresbach now anticipates that the course will be offered quarterly, and will be free to military personnel, both active and retired, and their dependents.

In order to meet some of the most pressing dependent psychological needs, the Mental Hygiene Clinic uses a consultant in adolescent psychology once a week, to confer on cases involving adolescents, and to instruct staff members in this area.

Dr. Estherann Grace, who is currently director of pediatrics at the Columbus Medical Center, works with the Mental Hygiene Clinic on Mondays. She considers adolescence a crucial period in emotional development.

"The key to treatment of the adolescent is trust," says Dr. Grace. "Practically all of our patients come through out-patient clincis with psychosomatic illness, because they couldn't tell anyone what was bothering them."

"Let's face it," she added, "It's difficult to change someone who is 45 years old, but adolescents can still be adapted. They are shortly to be parents themselves, and this is the time to break patterns of disturbed parent - child relationships."

Dr. Grace presents a two-hour seminar on adolescent psychology for the staff of the clinic. This is only one aspect of the teaching program conducted by the staff. Maj. Lawrence Lifson, who is psychiatric consultant to the clinic, says, "We have what is a sort of residency program here. It includes both teaching and close supervision."

There are frequent staff conferences on the disposition of cases, and seminars by staff and others on problem areas.

All staff members emphasized efforts to maintain strict confidentiality of records connected with the Mental Hygiene Clinic. In the past, many families have been mistrustful of dealings with any sort of mental health personnel. One staff member stated the feeling expressed by most of the clinic personnel this way, "I'm constantly surprised at many sponsor's concern for what psychiatric services might do to his record. We go to great lengths to avoid this."

It is true, in fact, that the Mental Hygiene Clinic does not include diagnostic material in health records. Every effort is made to keep the material confidential.

"More people are in trouble with careers because of behavior rather than because they came into the clinic. People get in trouble because of behavior, not because of problems," said Col. See, chief of the Mental Hygiene Clinic.

The type programs available depend to a large extent on the staff. A great deal of work has gone into attempting to stabilize the medical personnel involved in these programs. However, with the training programs described above, Dr. Lifson, says, "It takes six months to prepare someone as a good social work specialist, and then we don't know how long we can keep him. Col. Cesar A. Lopez, chief of professional services, MAH, and Col. H. Haskell Ziperman, chief of medical department activity, have actively supported our requests for stabilization."

Col. Haskell Ziperman has equally comments for the efforts of the Mental Hygiene staff. In citing the relationship between the staff and the type programs which can be offered, he says, "Fortunately we have dedicated psychiatric and social work people. They devote their own time for these programs, and volunteer ideas for new programs and for expansion of existing ones."

The increasing recognition of the role of the family in military service has resulted in some good ideas. Mental Health services for military dependents serves not only the individual serviceman and the general morale of the his family, but promotes service community.

Jimmy L. Franklin, a civilian employee of the Post Engineer works at burying and compacting trash from post pickups with his bulldozer. Environmental Management members hope to see an end to landfills like this by recycling trash such as paper, glass and metal. A proposal to begin recycling is currently under study by Maj. Gen. Orwin C. Talbott, post commander. Recycling is desirable, agree 1st Lt. J. P. Greene and 2nd Lt. Drew McAuliffe, because it saves natural resources and eliminates the problem of having to consider what happens when all landfills have been completed.

ENVIRONMENTAL MANAGEMENT

spots the pollution, does something about it

You're on a proficiency flight in a Huey chopper, floating slowly over the earth like a lazy bird. Lakes, trees, buildings all pass slowly below your feet, and you feel detached from it all.

Detached, that is, until you spot an ugly oil smear floating black on the surface of the Chattahoochee River. And suddenly you're back on earth again, mad about the continual pollution that is gradually turning the face of America into a scar.

But when the chopper actually touches down again, what are you going to do? You saw the ooze on the river, but sitting down and raving about it over a beer will not help.

If you were Maj. Donald Kelsey, however, you might think of Fort Benning's Environmental Management section. A few months ago there would have been no place to go with a pollution complaint, but Kelsey had seen announcements by the environmental section asking people spotting pollution problems to call them.

Kelsey, a senior test officer for the small arms branch of the Infantry Board, was taking a standard proficiency flight in a Huey chopper when he spotted the oil slick described above. He had previously noticed the slick but thought it was nothing more than a small dumping. When he spotted the slick the next day, this time even bigger, Kelsey decided to find the source. Tracing the flow upriver in his chopper, Kelsey discovered a leaking oil storage tank near the river. He returned to Lawson Airfield at Fort Benning and called Col. James M. S. Strickland, chief of the recently formed Environmental Management Group.

Col. Strickland called Columbus authorities to notify them of the spill, and they in turn quickly traced the exact location of the tank and its owner. Another call notified the owner who promptly found and stopped the cause of the problem, an accidentally opened valve.

The following day the slick was gone and Col. Strickland had returned Kelsey's call to tell him that action had been taken to halt the spread of pollution. "When I called the section," Kelsey commented later, "they flat got with the program and then followed up by calling me back twice, once to tell me the tank had been found and again to let me know it had been stopped."

Such explosive action is characteristic of the two-month-old agency. Headed by Col. Strickland, the section includes two foresters, a civil engineer, a biochemist and zoologist among its list of experts. Added to this is the extensive knowledge of Preventive Medicine Section and of the Directorate of Facilities Engineering, the group responsible for the administration of the environmental program at Fort Benning.

The group was formed in response to growing concern for the environment by many members of the command. Independent moves by many commanders showed this. The first such move came last fall when Brig. Gen. (now Maj. Gen.) John T. Carley initiated a two-month cleanup campaign aimed at cleaning up post recreation areas and ponds. The program was successful in netting tons of trash from these areas.

Then, in April, Maj. Gen. Orwin C. Talbott, Fort Benning commander, ordered a preliminary pollution survey of the post with the idea of forming an environmental agency if the need existed. 2nd Lt. J. P. Greene and Sp4 Brian Price, both with bachelor degrees in forestry, were chosen to conduct the survey.

The section is so new, in fact, that the 12 men have spent much of their time identifying problems. Col. Strickland, a 30-year Infantry veteran, began with surveys of the many problems, including a study of morning rush hour traffic coming onto Fort Benning.

Covering each entrance to the reservation, Strickland's surveyors (some of whom became sick from exhaust fumes) reported fully 76 per cent of the cars coming onto post from 6:30 to 8 a.m. were occupied by only one person. Of the remainder, the surveyors discovered, an estimated 35 per cent of the two-occupant cars were driven by wives taking husbands to work, only to turn around and drive back off-post.

Another area Col. Strickland observed was household goods transportation. "These goods," said Strickland, "accounted for nearly 2 million pounds of shipping onto post during July alone!"

"Assuming each individual had shipped only the minimum amount allowable by regulation," he continued, "then the waste packing paper for one month amounts to 100 tons, none of which is currently recycled."

Identification of problems, though, has not been the sole work done so far. PFC Harley K. Jones, a zoologist with the section, surveyed the use of waste oil recently and found that some units were openly dumping it on the ground or into storm sewers, where it was washed into nearby rivers.

After Jones and other inspectors pointed out to commanders the damage done to animal and plant life through such dumping most units attempted a cleanup. "The best units so far," commented Jones, "have been the 43rd Engineer Battalion, which has set the pace for cleanup, and the 2nd Bn., 10th Arty., 197th Inf. Bde."

Jones, who graduated from the University of Georgia in 1970 with a B.S. in zoology, followed up his survey with a report which was sent to Gen. Talbott. "Before-and-after" Polaroid pictures accompanied the report, designed to show the damage that can be done by dumping oil rather than turning it into Property Disposal Branch as required by regulation.

Action also has been the word to describe the group's effort to get a permanent recycling measure adopted at Fort Benning. The idea began with an "Ecology Day" last June when volunteers picked up separated trash. These "trashmen for a day," most from the then infant Environmental Management section and from Preventive Medicine, rode pickup trucks with three separate barrels about the post, collecting separated garbage from interested residents for recycling through the Property Disposal Branch.

Some Fort Benning residents, in fact, were so interested in Ecology Day that many continued to separate and save garbage even after the one-day collection, calculated to stir interest in the movement, was over.

Full time trash separation has been established as an experiment at the 586th Engr. Co. (Float Bridge) of the 931st Engr. Gp. Trash segregation began in early July, and a lieutenant, a buck sergeant and two soldiers have operated the separation and recycling point in the company area. Separated trash is trucked to the Property Disposal Branch.

Col. Strickland commented on the recycling program saying that dumping trash simply cannot go on forever. According to 1st Lt. Drew McAuliffe, another member of the agency, the post's sanitary landfill was estimated to have received between 8,000 and 10,000 tons of waste in June alone!

McAluliffe staes, "We're going to have to try to take the dirt out of trash," meaning, he said, that "people have to get interested in trash and act as their own garbagemen for recycling to succeed."

Adding another comment, Greene, a forestor who was one of the two initial members of the environment unit, said, "Even though it may not be economical to recycle, we're going to have to face the fact that cleaning the environment is going to take a modest investment in recycling if it's gong to succeed."

"The worth of such an investment," Greene continued, "may not be evident for some time to come, but the sacrifice must be made to save the environment."

Members of the group are hopeful that a recycling point can be established at Fort Benning eventually, though the project is still being researched.

Still, the men of the environmental section are enthusiastic about their work, and several stated this has met with similar enthusiasm on the part of many Fort Benning residents and other personnel. The environmental unit receives many calls each day on questions ranging from stream pollution to destruction of wisteria vines by painters. Though the section may not be able to solve each problem immediately, members make every effort to make a return phone call to tell the individual what action was taken and if more is to be expected.

"Still," comments Col. Strickland, "another regulation won't accomplish anything for environmental action."

"Once again," he continued, "it is the action of the concerned individual that will solve the headache of pollution control."

"The problem begs a solution, though," he said, "for America presently spends more than four-and-a-half billion dollars each year for garbage collection."

To report a pollution problem or to obtain more information on environment, call 545-5933 or 545-4292.

Cast announced

Dramatizers to present 'Carnival'

By Edith Simmons

Four talented and experienced vocalists have been cast in the leading roles of "Carnival," a delightful musical about the world of carnivals.

The musical produced by the Fort Benning Dramatizers, is scheduled to be shown Oct. 11 - 17 at the post Playhouse, Bldg. 1237. Tickets for the production cost $1 and can be purchased at the door or reserved by phoning the Entertainment Center at 545-5057.

Lana Robertson, of Columbus, will be singing the lead role as Lili, an orphan who finds a new home with the carnival. Currently reigning as Miss Columbus College, Lana is an elementary education major specializing in early childhood. Summer stock work at Lakewood Musical Playhouse in Pennsylvania kept her busy this summer. Incidentally, she will be returning there next summer in order to play Luisa in the "Fantasticks."

The bitter puppeteer of the carnival is Paul, portrayed by Joel Nitz. From Pennsylvania, Joel was a voice and business management major at Bob Jones University. While there he sang in "Samson and Delilah" and "Rigoletto". Since coming to Fort Benning, Joel has worked in "You Can't Take It With You," "As You Like It," and led "West Side Story" as Tony.

Marco the Magnificent Magican will be played by Tom Lynch. Part of Tom's twelve years of voice study were spent at Boston University as an applied voice major. His most impressive role was Don Quixote in "Man of La Mancha." He also sang in "La Boheme," "Messiah," and "Elijah." Parts in "Becket," "The Andersonville Trial" and several comedies add variety to his acting experience.

Lanie Russell will star as the luckless Rosalie who chases Marco. A two-year member of the Dramatizers, Lanie was in "Guys and Dolls," "West Side Story," and "Blues for Mister Charlie." Her stage experience began with the Lakewood Little Theater in Ohio and took her to Loretto Heights College as a drama and voice major.

In support of the lead roles are two experienced Dramatizers, Bill Heard and Gene Miller. A drama major presently attending Columbus College, Bill is busy as the harried carnival owner. B. F. Schlegel. During his acting career, Bill has played Senex in "A Funny Thing Happened on The Way to the Forum", the miser in "The Miser," and Judd Frye in "Oklahoma."

The carnival's outstanding clown is Jacquot as portrayed by Gene Miller. While with the Dramatizers, Gene played Baby John in "West Side Story" and acted in "Blues for Mister Charlie." Although he sings with the Infantry Chorus, Gene plans a future in forestry conservation.

No carnival could be complete without the sideshow attractions. Taking these parts are: Barry Charter as Grobert, Jo Ann Banks as Olga, Gail Robinson as Gladys, Dave McQueen as Dr. Glass and Edith Simmons as Greta Schlegel.

Chorus members are Shirley Leverett, Debbie Cummings, Marsha Pate, Cindi Lewis, Doug Leverett, Ricky Leverett, Bill English, Chas Boentgen, and Steve Poddard.

Perry's 'Doc' brings Holliday legend up to date

Two young men from the East, director Frank Perry of Manhattan, and noted journalist Pete Hamill of Brooklyn, got together and decided to re-tell the mythic Western tale of Doc Holliday, Kate Elder and Wyatt Earp in terms of the realities of present-day America. The result is the motion picture "Doc" which opened last Wednesday at a local theater, through release by United Artists, an entertainment service of Transamerica Corporation.

Stacy Keach and Faye Dunaway were, from the very conception of the film, Frank Perry's choice for the roles of Doc Holliday and Kate Elder. The role of Wyatt Earp was somewhat more difficult to fill. Both the director and screenplay writer Hamill wished to avoid the cliche Earp image which had emerged from many movies and TV shows, and dozens of actors were tested for the part. It was finally given to Harris Yulin, who had previously fed lines to Keach when the latter was testing for the Holliday part.

Recession runs rampant

Tragedy never seems to assume reality until it takes on a personal note. Although many have been affected by the Platoon Tactics Committee, Company Operations Department did not feel the full impact until the popular, hard charging deputy of the Offensive Committee, Capt. Wayne Alton, became afflicted with the savages of the current recession. Due to the pressures of the long and arduous hours of his present assignment, Alton's hair line has been receding at an astounding rate of one inch per week. Alton, always philosophical in the face of tragedy, summed up his dilemma by saying "Well, after all grass doesn't grow on cement."

Mod comedy features Bette Davis

Veteran dramatic stars, Bette Davis and Ernest Borgnine headline the cast of "Bunny O'Hare," American International's new comedy release opening tonight at a local theatre.

A med adventure which features the venerable pair as a couple of hippie-costumed bank robbers who baffle the police of a southwestern border community, the film is marked by exciting motorcycle and helicopter chases, ingenious hold-up schemes, picketing hippies, and the hilarious frustrations of a bedeviled police lieutenant played by Jack Cassidy. The springboard for the story stems from the determination of an aging but still agile little lady to recoup the money she had contributed to local banks by holdups after they foreclose on her mortgage. With the help of her buddy, an ex-con played by Ernest Borgnine, their raids soon have the entire state constabulary on a bunt for the pair.

A giant step from the dramatic roles which won the pair their motion picture academy Oscars, their portrayals in "Bunny O'Hare" find Miss Davis dressed in a poncho, floppy hat and dark glasses when perpetrating her raids on the banks and Borgnine dons a fake beard, dark glasses and leather vest as his disguise. Together, they make their getaways on a souped up motorcycle.

Synopsis

Taylor.

RYAN'S DAUGHTER (Rated GP) — David Lean, director of "Bridge on The River Kwai," "Lawrence of Arabia" and "Dr. Zhivago," has created this, his most pictorially beautiful film.

Winner of two Academy Awards in 1971, the film is set against a background of war and revolution between the Irish and British in Ireland.

Sarah Miles, in the title role, is a dream-ridden girl living in a remote Irish village who aspires to greater things. Robert Mitchum stars as the man "Ryan's Daughter" weds.

Christopher Jones, as a young officer, completes the triangle by coming between Mitchum and his bride to provide a full measure of excitement.

THE MOONSHINE WAR (Rated GP) is waged in the hills of Kentucky and Tennessee with the revenue agents and the moonshiners feudin' and fightin' over stills of home-made liquor.

Richard Widmark, is the leader of a hijack gang; Patrick McGoohan is a corrupt American revenue agent and Alan Alda is the hapless moonshiner. In 1932 the 18th amendment prohibited drinking. It didn't say a word about killing, double-crossing or blowing things up.

LAWRENCE OF ARABIA (Rated G) — He stormed out of the Arabian desert . . . into the legends of the world! His sword flashing in the sun . . . his rifle pointing the way for 10,000 fierce Bedouin tribesmen. This was Lawrence of Arabia, one of the most savage leaders in the history of guerrilla warfare.

Now, the magnificent legend of this young English daredevil . . . hailed by many as one of the greatest men of our century and denounced by others as a flamboyant "Barnum! . . . explodes across the screen. Here is the thundering fury that trampled mountain strongholds from Aqaba to Damascus!

Here is the white-hot flame that scorched a continent from the Nile to the Mediterranean! Here is the vastness of the desert . . . the violence of blood-thirsty revolt during World War I . . . and the overwhelming victory of Lawrence of Arabia, the fantastic, real-life hero who did what an army could not do!

THE BOATNIKS (Rated G), a Walt Disney Production, is a hilarious yarn about the trials and tribulations of the U.S. Coast Guard int dealing with the weekend yachtsman.

Robert Morse plays an accident prone young Coast Guard Ensign who foils three bumbling jewel thieves who have just pulled a two million dollar heist and are taking it on the lam to Mexico.

The film also stars Stefanie Powers and Phil Silvers and co-stars Norman Fell, Mickey Shaughnessy, Wally Cox and Don Ameche as Commander

George C. Scott: An actor who avoids being type cast

"My aim throughout my acting career," George C. Scott was saying, "has been to try to find parts with some distinctiveness in them and to try not to repeat myself."

"My main motivation in choosing the part of Harry Garmes in 'The Last Run' was that it was the kind of thing I had never done before.

"The Last Run" begins tonight at a local theater.

"I began my career by playing the worst sort of people — utter villains. I played everything from child-molestors to brutes who cut cirds' heads off and the like. If I had continued in such roles much longer, I would have become so sick of it that I would never have worked again. Luckily, though, I was able to get into comedy in films like 'Yellow Rolls Royce' and 'Film-Flam Man' and the variety helped me avoid that particular fate.

"Now, in 'The Last Run,' Garmes is the sort of character Bogart played in 'Key Largo,' an adventurous semi-hero, a lonely man who suddenly commits himself to an impossible undertaking and, usually, winds up face down full of bullet holes. Until now, I've never had a chance to play such a part, so once again, it's a healthy departure for me as an actor."

"The Last Run," directed on location here by Richard Fleischer, stars Scott with Tony Musante and Trish Van Devere, both young New York actors of extraordinary talent, in a thriller written as an original screenplay by Scottish novelist Alan Sharp. Produced by Carter De Haven for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, it is the story of a non-stop chase across the Iberian Peninsula. Scott is an aging Chicago "wheel-man," an underworld driver who has "retired" to a Portuguese fishing village. After nine years of inactivity, he agrees to do one more run, ferrying an escaped prisoner across Spain and into France. Musante plays the young con and Miss Van Devere, his enigmatic girlfriend.

Much of the filming took place in Granada, near the Alhambra and on the cork-screw roads up into the snow-covered Sierra Nevadas. Other locations include the plains and hills that lie between Granada and seaside Almunecar and the fishing village of Nerja, known as the Balcony of Europe for the manner in which it thrusts towards North Africa.

"We've just had a big snowfall here in Granada," Scott mused one day on the set. "But when I was on location with 'Patton,' not far from here, we desperately needed snow for the Battle of the Bulge sequence and had to wait weeks for it. Now we've got it here on 'The Last Run' and we want clear skies. Isn't that film location luck?"

Though it has been nearly two years since the 43-year-old actor filmed his towering portrayal of the World War II general, he still admits to being obsessed by the man.

"Patton was a remarkable human being and an incredibly impressive man personally. I feel that he and I are still very close somehow. His influence on my own life has been enormous. So much of him has rubbed off on me. He stood for self-respect, individuality and professionalism — all qualities lacking in life today.

"I believe that self-respect is the most important human quality, and that it comes out of doing your chosen work as well and as industriously as you can, neither cheating yourself nor anyone else."

Ft. Lewis soldiers climb Rainier

Climbing a 14,412-foot mountain may seem like a hard way to earn a week's pay — unless you're doing it because you want to.

Thirty troopers from the 3rd Armored Cavalry at Ft. Lewis, Wash., wanted to. When the Army offered to make training an adventure, they accepted. On Army time and earning Army pay, they set out to climb Mount Rainier, one of the highest peaks in the continental United States.

As they made their way up the mountain, the adventurers were given classes on cold weather survival, rope-climbing and ice - climbing techniques.

Only seven climbers were left when they reached the peak nearly a week after they started. The others had dropped out because of various problems, but all had learned from the hardships they had encountered.

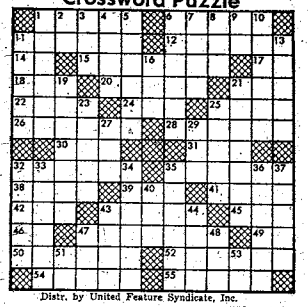
'To prove the wetness of Rise, this man shaved without using any water.

And he actually got a smooth, clean shave.

The reason he got such a clean shave is the moisture in Rise.

A lather needs moisture, needs wetness, so your beard won't dry out beneath it.

And you can't buy a lather that's wetter than Rise.



Slowly it seeps moisture into your beard and holds it there for as long as it takes you to shave.

The point we're trying to prove is this:

If our man can get a smooth, clean shave using Rise with no water, imagine what you can do using Rise with water.

Psychologist visits Leadership Dept.

Dr. James Thomas of the U. S. Army Manpower Resources Research and Development Center visited with the Leadership Committee, Leadership Department and the Race Relations Coordinating Group.

Dr. Thomas, a Research Psychologist, represented the Motivation and Training Laboratory. This Laboratory, which was recently established, is assigned the mission of conducting research on such issues as Drug Abuse, Race Relations, and Dissent in the Army.

The purpose of Dr. Thomas' trip was to get ideas for the development of a Research Program on Race Relations in the Army. On Wednesday, he observed the 4-hour block of instruction entitled "Leadership Aspects of Race Relations." He also sought ideas from the Race Relations Coordinating Group.

Armed with these ideas, Dr. Thomas feels that an adequate Research Program can be established by the Motivation and Training Laboratory.

Program

project officer of RRCG, has put together a package giving students the needed tools to conduct effective race relations seminars and rap sessions in their respective units on a continuing basis.

The five-day course spans a wide range of related topics. Students are trained in the use of audio-visuals, group psychology, and techniques of instruction. A new class is started once a month.

Preventive Measures

The Army today is nothing less than the United States in microcosm. People from all the 50 states are lumped under a single category — GI — bringing with them the attitudes and beliefs that held sway back home. For every soldier, there's a different opinion.

In the case of Steve Woodall, "all the walls were torn down. Everything I knew about race came from the mass media. When I got out of Idaho I really had some awakening. This class tore everything down and reshaped my ideas. The things I'd believed just weren't so."

Clearing up the questions and resolving the differences is what the Moderator Training Program is all about. The Benning program deals primarily with black-white tensions, the most likely basis for conflict. The program is flexible, and moderators will be able to apply their skills at moderating any confrontations in seminars among other ethnic groups as well, whatever the problem. Hopefully, the pilot program at Fort Benning will be instituted at Army installations across the country, and overseas as well.

The moderator's job in identifying and controlling racial problems is basically a preventive measure. He identifies trouble and attempts to find the cause before it gets out of hand.

When several large American cities were shaken by racial disturbances in the late 1960s, public authorities were caught by surprise. Hard pressed to curb the trouble, law enforcement officials treated the symptoms of social unrest, the outbreaks of violence, without touching on the cause. The Army hopes to hit injustice at the grass roots level. So far, the program has proven a success.

Professional Leadership

The Race Relations Coordination Group grew out of a 1969 study ordered by Maj. Gen. Orwin C. Talbott, Fort Benning's comunander. Gen. Talbott convened a series of seminars to determine the extent of racial tension, if any, on post.

When it was discovered that a real possibility of a confrontation existed, immediate action was taken to reverse the trend. All units now regularly schedule meetings with their commanders in order to bring problems out into the open to be dealt with. Brigade-level seminars are held quarterly, and battalion-level seminars are scheduled every two weeks.

The first meetings were effective in making unseen problems visible to commanding officers, but they failed to eliminate racial tension among the troops in all cases.

The Infantry Center has set up its moderator class to take up the existing slack in the area of understanding. The five-day period of instruction was researched and rehearsed for a full six months prior to the first class.

As Others See Them

One of the more popular trends in modern education is role-playing. Just as its name suggests, role-playing is a form of acting out a theme or idea being taught. Much like the theater, each man in the class was assigned a specific character to portray. He was then encouraged to give his own interpretation of the role as he encounters it in real life.

The particular script for the class called for a company-level race relations seminar. Henderson, of Watts, played the part of a white company commander. Woodall acted as a black platoon sergeant. In most cases, blacks and whites traded places for the duration of the class.

The room crackled with charged emotions as the students took their parts seriously. PFC George Daniels, 20 years old and white, took the part of a black NCO. Confronting a "black militant," Daniels rose to his feet and sounded off.

"This Army is OD (olive drab) in color, not black or white. I worked for everything I ever got, and you've got to work too. Man, you don't need a rap session; you need extra duty."

A white sergeant portraying the militant pounded angrily on the table.

"Sir," he shouted, "that platoon sergeant is an Uncle Tom. I can't be black with that dude breathing down my neck."

And so on.

At the end of the session, both officers and enlisted men were able to see themselves as others see them. They observed the best and the worst of their characters at close hand. The lessons learned in this training promote more than human understanding. They also play a large part in upgrading unit efficiency and morale by eliminating obstacles to both.

Detachment

Once the students have a clearer picture of existing problems, their next step is to maintain their sense of fairness no matter how heated the debate becomes.

Group members attend class in civilian clothes, call each other by their first names, and try to rid themselves of distracting qualities such as "officer mannerisms." Guiding them throughout the course are Capt. Richard Kittinger, Capt. Alvin Stroud, and 1st Lt. Phillip Lyman. The instructors make use of TV, motion pictures, phonograph records and personal experience to get the material across.

Doubts About Doubts

All agreed that the neutral role is the hardest to play. In order to absorb the new material, prejudices and long-held beliefs have to be put aside.

"I thought I had all the answers," said Pvt. Henderson. "I was down on the system. Now I'm not so sure. At least I've got some doubts about my doubts. And that's something."

Platoon Sergeant Lacy Straks Jr., a black man from Birmingham, Ala., felt that "even after eighteen and a half years in the service, I've learned that if you want to lead, you've got to know what the kids are thinking. After all, they're the majority of men in uniform."

Gen. Talbott is attempting to keep Fort Benning one step ahead of the game by keeping in tune with younger soldiers of all backgrounds. With the wealth of human resources in the Army today, it may well become a trend-setter in the field of ethnic relations. Whatever the case, the Moderator Training Program has brought more than a breath of fresh air into the field.

Leadership training seminar set

A Leadership Training Seminar to be held at Fort Benning on Sept. 28 through Oct. 2 is intended to instruct key personnel in leadership techniques.

The seminar team will also conduct research to test the Army-wide leadership climate and to inform major unit leaders of their leadership problems.

Col. Max L. Waldrop, chief of training division, department of plans and training, USAIC, said, "The whole concept of the project, at the direction of General W. C. Westmoreland, is to improve professionalism and leadership in the Army. We recognize that society is changing and we want to be prepared to cope with the problems the changes bring."

The original basis of the leadership seminar was developed by an Army-wide leadership board established at the Special Warfare Center at Ft. Bragg, N. C.

USAMTU trap team travels to Quantico

A five-man trap team from the U. S. Army Marksmanship Training Unit traveled to Quantico, Va. Tuesday where they participated in the four day annual Quantico Open Trap Shoot, it was announced today by Col. Robert M. Piper, commander of the marksmanship unit.

The Open meet, which is expected to attract nearly one hundred of the best trap shooters from the East and Southeast sections of the country, will be attended by both military and civilian shooters. Competitive shooting commenced Thursday. The yearly affair serves as a preliminary tryout for the final selection of a Trap team to the Olympics to be held in Munich, Germany in August, 1972. The final selection will be made at the U. S. International Championships which are held at Phoenix, Ariz. in June.

During the 300 bird tournament, the final 200 will be used to determine the preliminary qualification. Each shooter must have a minimum of 180 of the qualifying 200 to receive an invitation to the final matches at Phoenix.

Military teams participating in the International match besides the host Quantico Marine team will include the Fort Benning team and representatives from the Air Force and Navy.

The Fort Benning based team will be lead by Capt. Kenneth Gilbert, chief of the Marksmanship's shotgun Division. Shooters accompanying him on the team include: 2nd Lt. James M. Clawhon, Sgt. Clark Normington, Sp4 Kenneth Blasi and Sp4 Donald Halderman.

Each of the Fort Benning Trap shooters have participated in the last U. S. International Championships except Clawson, a newcomer to the squad. The four veteran shooters have achieved several championships during the 1971 season. Among these, Gilbert won the championship of the 300 bird International match at the National Matches in Camp Perry, Ohio during August.

Prophetic punster prances to pinnacle

The football foreteller has flattened foes of Airborne in a flury of fury! Bouncing back from a bust with a 10-3 record for the week (a 769 percentage) the pugnacious prognisticator was equalled only by SSgt. Greg Jackson of Airborne, but Jackson dropped it on a dazzling display of derring-do in the tie breaker! Predicto's choice of Colorado 40-Wyoming 7 outdid Jackson's 24-7. Overall Predicto plastered Airborne with their pitiable 640 record, giving the punster a score of 654. This week the football huckster hustles hoopla hunters of the 197th Inf. Bde.'s personnel section. The kinetic kid will heehaul the khaki kibitzers in a climactic contest of chairvoyance! You too can challenge the champ by merely calling 545-4622 or 7341 and asking for the pigskin prophet.

Five parties find good fishing in Gulf

By John David
The Hard Fight Back

Unknowingly, the stranger paid Georgia Tech footballers one heck of a compliment.

It was the weekend before Thanksgiving 1967, the day of the Notre Dame game. Some of the players were standing outside the dressing room entrance, still dressed in street clothes and nervously shooting the breeze.

The early arrivals were walking past the conversing athletes, pausing for a second to try and recognize a familiar face. One fan, apparently stunned by the Jackets lightweight size, let his emotions temporarily get the best of him.

They're so small," he blurted out to no one in particular "they don't even look like ballplayers. They look more like students."

Betrayed by boyish grins, the athletes pretended not to hear, bnt it was obvious they were flattered. A Georgia Tech athlete takes pride in the fact that he is a student first and a ballplayer second.

It turned out to be little consolation this warm, brilliant afternoon however. The Engineers should have listened to the well-meaning fan and stayed in the classroom. Notre Dame steamrolled the minuscule Jackets 38-3, but it had been that kind of a year.

Georgia Tech was suffering through its worst season in more than a decade. Tech alumni were afraid to come out of their houses for fear of humiliation. The Yellow Jackets had been trounced by Miami 46-7 for their most embarrassing defeat in modern years, and even lowly Tulane and throttled the Techmen. All in all the Engineers were to finish with a losing 4-6 slate.

Tech Had Both Football And Books

The following winter there was even talk about deemphasizing athletics. Some administrators declared that the Tech would never be able to compete on a big scale again.

As a school that only offers degrees in engineering or engineering related subjects, there wasn't any way an "easy major" could be inserted to bolster the sagging athletic program. Besides, academically oriented officials weren't about to relax rigid entrance requirements.

After much debate and controversy the athletic department finally scored a major victory. Tech's dynamic young coach, Bud Carson — backed by omnipotent Athletic director Bobby Dodd — finally convinced the disbelieving administrators that Tech could have both books and football.

Thanks mainly to the determined Carson, Tech boosters are no longer ashamed to show their faces. The Jackets bounced back with a 9-3 record last fall which included a Sun Bowl victory over Texas Tech. The Engineers have also notched two consecutive wins over arch-rival Georgia, a team many cynics said as late as 1968 Tech would never beat again.

Carson hasn't authoried a book on how to win football games and influence the administration, but if he does Army mentor Tom Cahill will probably buy the first copy.

Cadets Will Be Back

Cahill, who brings his Cadet team into Grant Field tomorrow as heavy underdogs against the host Yellow Jackets, has been having his problems of late.

He was the victim of a 1-9-0 season last fall. Included was a bitter 11-7 defeat by arch rival Navy, and pre-season seers predict much of the same this fall.

Like Carson, Cahill has more good students than outstanding athletes, but Cahill and the West Point Athletic Office refuse to play a soft schedule. Week after week the game Cadets must face opponents who are bigger, faster, and more often than not, more talented.

Even with the murderous schedule, Cahill knows his club will be back. The team what will be on the opposite side of the field is proof that you don't have to be a mental midget to succeed in college football. All you need is a lot of desire and a lot of pride and rest assured Army has plenty of both.

Other schools with lots of class have been down—but usually not for long. You can bet your season tickets Army is no exception.

Army captain takes honors in national

FT. SAM HOUSTON, Tex. — An Army captain has won the 1971 Pentathlon National Championship at Ft. Sam Houston, Tex., with an overall score of 4,809.

In the fencing competition, Capt. Scott Taylor, Portland, Ore., and Sp4 Robert Nash, Ft. Worth, Tex., finished in second place, each scoring 1,038 points.

PFC John Fitzgerald, Skokie, Ill., tied for second in the shooting competition with 943 points.

Sp4 Norman Ferris, Rochester, N. Y., on the running competition with 1,086 points, and Taylor placed third with 970 points.

Richards placed third in the swimming event with 1,196 points.

In the overall standings Fitzgerald placed fifth with 4,490.5 points, Ferris finished seventh with 4,466 points and Sp 4 Mark Driscoll, Long Beach, Calif., placed eighth, scoring 4,422.5 points. Capt. Bill Matheson, Santa Barbara, Calif., finished tenth win an overall score of 4,393 points.

The Special Services deap sea fishing boat 'Follow Me' carried five fishing parties into the Gulf of Mexico last week in search of bonito, king mackerel and sail fish.

According to SSgt. Ernest Green, skipper of the 'Follow Me,' the most successful trips were made by parties headed by Lt. Col (ret.) Sid Anderson and Capt. J. M. Owens. Anderson and his party landed 14 kings and 3 bonito on a trip last Wednesday. Their largest fish was a king mackerel weighing 14-pounds. The Owens party took 12 king mackerel and 2 jack caravelle. The mackerel all went, from 10 to 11-pounds and the caravelle each weighed 20-pounds. The sail fishing trip planned by the Anderson party was unsuccessful due mainly to inclement weather caused by hurricane Edith.

Green who is a member of the 931st Eng. Gr. here at Fort Benning has been the skipper of the 'Follow Me' since April of 1970. He has had a lot of experience in the operation of small craft in coastal waters. Green began his military career in the Coast Guard in 1944, obtained an Able Bodied Seaman certificate in 1949 and served on Coast Guard deep sea tugs in coastal waters all over the world.

The Destin Fishing Rodeo starts Oct. 1. Fishermen will have a chance to win prizes in addition to taking home large catches of fish for home freezers.

The overall winners for the month will also receive prizes. The 'Follow Me' has been registered for the rodeo so any catches made by fishermen who have chartered the boat may be entered in the contest. The 'Follow Me,' based at the U.S. Infantry Rest Center, Destin, Fla., is a 45-foot deep sea fishing boat. It is equipped for bottom fishing and trolling. It may be chartered by active duty and retired military personnel. Applications for charters must be made at the Recreation Office of the Special Services Division (Bldg. 394).

Information concerning the availability of the boat may be obtained by phoning 545-5641.

ROD AND GUN CLUB Notes

By Bill Kloeb

Tomorrow is the last day of the first dove hunting season in Georgia. After tomorrow, Georgia hunters will have to wait until Oct. 23 before they can take another shot at these elusive targets.

Military hunters are more fortunate. They can just move their operation to the Alabama side of the Reservation. The dove hunting season opens in Alabama and the Alabama portion of the reservation at noon tomorrow. This season will run through Nov. 13.

The daily bag limit for Alabama is 12 doves. Shooting is permitted from noon until sunset.

Hunting is permitted daily on the reservation but certain portions of the hunting area may be closed each day because of military training. All hunters must verify that the area they intend to hunt is open. Maps showing open and closed areas are located at the Post Range Control Office (Bldg. 2620), the Rod and Gun Club (Bldg.4050) and the Provost Marshal Office (Bldg. 215). Sign out sheets are located with these maps. Each hunter must sign out and indicate the area in which he intends to hunt.

Know The Regulation

Complete details concerning licenses, permits, weapons and ammunition regulations and general regulations concerning hunting on the reservation are contained in Infantry Center Regulations 210-2. Regulations concerning seasons for various game and fing limits are outlined in Infantry Center Circular 210-4 dated Aug. 26. It will be worth your time to study these and follow the rules. Failure to do so may cause embarassment, a lot of inconvenience and loss of hunting privileges.

Doves Are Unpredictable

Hunters out on their first dove hunt are in for a new thrill that will be repeated on each hunt. Several doves skimming over an open field can cause as much blood pressure increase as a covey of quail on the rise. Dove hunting will provide thrills and a lot of frustration. Doves who have been frightened are one of the most difficult targets in the world. Hunters expend more ineffective ammunition on a dove hunt than in any other kind of hunting. The dove moves fast. Beginners have a tendency to shoot behind the target in the beginning then end up leading the target too much after the first shots miss.

If your shot goes high the dove will dive down if it is low he will zoom upward but if its going in front or to his rear he may go down, up or just stay on his original direction of flight.

Best Fields In Alabama

According to Roy Johnson, chief of the Post Game and Fish Unit, the best area on the Alabama side of the reservation is the 250 acre field located where the hunting dog field trials are held. To get to this field cross Eddy Bridge from the reservation, take a left turn onto 101st Airborne Division Road then a right onto the first improved dirt road. After traveling about three-quarters of a mile on this unnamed road you will run into the field.

The second field recommended by Johnson is located just south of Fryar Field. Turn off 101st Division Road at the road to Fryar Field, turn right off this road at the first intersection and travel this road until you come to a large field on the right side of the road. The third field is just a little farther south on this same road but the field will be located to your left. It can be further identified by the power line running diagonally through the open area.

If you lose your way don't worry. Just about every car on the Alabama side of the reservation will be loaded with dove hunters heading for a field. That's the big problem with opening day. Too many hunters for the hunting space available. You'll find it difficult to locate shooting position where you can shoot without endangering another hunter. Keep this in mind. Downing a low flying bird isn't worth running a chance of dusting another hunter with birdshot. Most hunters don't appreciate this and some get real nasty about it.

The Fort Benning Team Handball Squad will travel to Ft. Campbell, Ky. this weekend for a two game series against the Campbell Eagles.

The Doughboys are currently tied for first place with Ft. McPherson in the Western Division of the 3rd Army Handball League.

After the Campbell series the Benning squad will have four games to play to finish league play. They play a two-game series with the third place Ft. McClellan team next Friday and Saturday and wind up league play Oct. 8 and 9 with two games against Ft. McPherson. The games with McClellan and McPherson will all be played here at Doughboy Stadium.

Jackson with 8 wins 8 losses, Ft. Stewart 7 wins and 7 losses, Hunter Army Air Base 3 wins and 11 losses and Atlanta Army Depot with no wins and 14 losses.

Benning OCS program 30 years old

Monday marks the 30th anniversary of the graduation of the first Infantry Officer Candidate School class at Fort Benning, Georgia. Since the graduation of the first class, the OCS program has stood ready to produce highly qualified Infantry platoon leaders as the needs of the Army dictate.

The idea for an Infantry Officer Candidate School, which was to become a model for Officer Candidate schools later on June 14, 1938, when Brig. Gen. Asa L. Singleton submitted a plan for an Officer Candidate training program to Maj. Gen. George A. Lynch, then Chief of Infantry. The plan was not given animation until June 4, 1940 when the chief of Infantry directed the Infantry Board at Fort Benning to revise the 1938 plan. On July 26, 1940, Brig. Gen. Courtney H. Hodges, then Assistant Commandant of the Infantry School, submitted a revised plan to the Infantry Board which was subsequently programmed for Infantry Officer Candidates.

In July 1941 the first Officer Candidate class began a 13 week (90 day) program of instruction. General Hodges' mission was to train and graduate selected individuals as Second Lieutenants qualified to command Infantry Platoons.

Brig. Gen. Omar Bradley, who became Commandant of the Infantry School in March of 1941, established the principles and standards of leadership and discipline that are in effect today. The Honor Code, administered by Officer Candidates themselves, was also installed under the guidance of Gen. Bradley. The purpose of subjecting the Candidates to a rigorous Officer Candidate program was expressed by Gen. Bradley in these words; "Early in the course the fact must be brought out to these Candidates that they must stop thinking as enlisted men and start thinking as Officers. As enlisted men, someone else worries about looking after the men; as an Officer they must plan and think of their responsibilities. The discipline must be of a very much higher type than that of an enlisted company."

Initially, classes were to report at 5-week intervals, but the onslaught of World War II necessitated such a rapid expansion of the OCS program that the phrase "90 day wonder" soon became accepted military terminology. The Infantry Officer Candidate Program saw more than 100,000 candidates enrolled in 448 classes from July 1941 until May 1947. Although 67 per cent of these candidates graduated quality was never sacrificed for quantity, and on battlefields from Anzio to Okinawa the "90 day wonder" showed that he had what it took to lead men in combat.

During the period June 1947 to December 1950 all Officer Candidate training was transferred to the Army's Ground General School at Ft. Riley, Kansas which graduated Branch Immaterial Officers.

Early in 1951, mobilization for the Korean conflict again made a drastic expansion of the Officer Candidate Program necessary. Subsequently Officer Candidate School was returned to Fort Benning with the establishment of the 1st Officer Candidate Company at Fort Benning by the Infantry School, General Orders no. 9, dated January 25, 1951. During the height of the Korean conflict the Infantry OCS program was graduating more than 7,000 second lieutenants annually. The program of instruction during this period was expanded to include 968 hours of academic instruction to be accomplished during a 22 week period.

With the cessation of hostilities in Korea the OCS program was again reduced in size, and from 1953 until October 1964 the Infantry OCS program graduated about 6 classes annually.

In October 1965, with increasing hostilities in Vietnam, the OCS program was again expanded toward a goal of 33 Officer Candidate companies graduating over 10,000 second lieutenants annually. After reaching a peak strength in 1967, the program began to gradually contract until today only the 5th Student Battalion (OC) with 4 operational companies remains. The Officer Candidate program again stands ready for rapid expansion to meet the Army's needs.

Haircut regulations to be strictly enforced

Present haircut policies will be strictly enforced at Fort Benning and Army-wide as a result of "personal observations" made by Gen. William C. Westmoreland, Army Chief of Staff.

Fort Benning unit commanders have been reminded that photograph depicting "legal" hair styles are intended to establish LIMITS; in other words, they depict a soldier who should be just about to get his hair cut, not one who has just come from the barber.

Gen. Westmoreland has noted through "personal observations, inspections and reports" that haircut regulations, liberalized in recent months, are being exceeded by many men.

The general puts some of the blame on supervisors who have neglected to enforce prescribed standards.

As a result, Fort Benning commanders will be taking a closer look at haircuts in coming weeks — and taking corrective action against wearers of unauthorized styles.

Baptists plan pot-luck dinner

Dr. William L. Clark, director of chaplain ministries, Baptist Home Mission Board, Southern Baptist Convention, Atlanta, will be the guest speaker at a Baptist pot-luck dinner Oct. 1.

The meeting, designed to organize a Baptist fellowship for Fort Benning personnel, will be held at 7 p.m. in the social hall of the Main Post Infantry Center Chapel.

Participants are asked to bring food for family and one guest. Drinks, cups, plates and eating utensils will be furnished at the chapel.

Soldier's handbook has traveled history

After almost 58 years, a well-worn and well-traveled copy of a 1913 Soldier's Handbook tried in vain to assume its place alongside other historic books, papers and relics in the Fort Benning Infantry Museum when 1st Sgt. Arthur Pue of the Medical Holding Company turned over the brown, hardback edition to musuem officials on Sept. 14.

Its long history began when Robert Pue, an Irish born immigrant, made his way to the United States in 1913 as an eighteen-year-old apprentice stone cutter.

Hoping that he would find the cavalry more exciting than stone cutting, Pue enlisted, a decision that was made within two hours after arriving at Ellis Island, New York. With his enlistment, Pue received the copy of the handbook during basic training as an indispensible set of guidelines for the American soldier.

When the Mexican War broke out, Pue saw duty during the time when Douglas MacArthur and John J. Pershing were chasing Mexico's Pancho Villa. Pue was always proud of the fact that he could boast of knowing Douglas MacArthur.

With the beginning of the first World War, Pue turned in his horse and saddle for a pair of combat boots and a bayonet, serving with the 42nd Infantry Division in France. Undoubtedly, the handbook, now five years old, was somewhere to be found in the dingy, dark trenches that crisscrossed France and the rest of Western Europe in the "war to end all wars."

With the end of the fighting, Pue returned stateside to join the ranks of the 29th Infantry. Of course, in his locker and forever with him was that copy of the Soldier's Handbook.

The years went by, 1st Sgt. Robert Pue left the Army, and the Handbook was buried for many years in the bottom of one of his old trunks.

With Robert Pue's recent death in July, 1st Sgt. Arthur Pue, his son, inherited the Soldier's Handbook and turned it over to the Infantry Museum as another momento out of the Army's past.

Unfortunately, the museum already had two other copies in better condition according to John Hunter, museum director, and the 1913 Soldier's Handbook was turned away.

First Sgt. and Mrs. Arthur Pue will make their home at 5847 Eula Dr., Columbus, following his retirement.

Veterans face tough job situation

The rising unemployment rate made 1971 a lean year. Thus, last week's news that 6.1 per cent of the nation's work force is jobless made things appear leaner still.

A sluggish economy combined with large numbers of discharged veterans have contributed heavily to the dilemma many Americans are finding themselves in. As for ex-servicemen, the jobless rate is estimated at over 11 per cent, almost double the national average.

MANPOWER TRAINING

The Army has, so far, been coping fairly well with the problem here at Fort Benning through Project Transition. Initiated by the U. S. Continental Army Command in January 1968, Project Transition is aimed at military personnel with six months or less active duty time remaining and whose military training has not prepared them with suitable civilian job skills.

Under the project, servicemen are eligible to receive classroom and on the job training in a number of areas. Such courses as automatic data processing, welding, law enforcement, meat cutting and restaurant management represent the many diverse opportunities available.

FOOTING THE BILL

Under the Manpower Training Development Act passed by Congress, most of the job development courses are taught by civilians. The U. S. Department of Labor maintains the program. Only three courses are taught by Army personnel.

In addition to general instruction given on the job and in the classroom, Project Transition vocational counselors have given individual counseling to over 37,800 servicemen.

All courses at Fort Benning are taught in the Harmony church section. On the job training is administered wherever the individual performs his specialty.

KEEPING TABS

Project Transtion officer Gus Schlitzkus, a retired Infantry lieutenant colonel, has attempted to keep track of all Transition graduates in order to guage both successes and failures.

Questionnaires are mailed to the discharged veterans 60 days after they leave Fort Benning. Of the 41,712 men who had completed the mailouts as of August, 89.3 per cent had found employment. Of the 10.7 per cent unemployed, many have returned to school under the G.I. Bill, which has not expanded its benefits to pay for vocational education. The total unemployed is up .7 per cent over last month. Coincidentally, the return on questionnaires has also increased .7 per cent.

WHERE THE JOBS ARE

Jobs are scare for many Americans, and Transition has not been flooded with job offers for departing servicemen. However, the Office of the Assistant Secretary of Defense (for Manpower and Reserve Affairs) compiles all available job opportunities in the form of a data sheet, and sends it to the Transition offices across the country.

Jobs range from $5,500 per year for positions requiring little skill to as much as $200 per week for high-skill slots in construction and electronics related industries.

Schlitzkus cited lack of mobility on the part of the veterans as a chief stumbling block to finding employment.

"Most people want to go back to their home towns and work," he said. If it's a small town, chances are that jobs are few and far between. The veteran has a better chance if he's willing to move where the work is, and that's usually in a metropolitan area.

THE FUTURE

Project Transition will receive further help from the Department of Labor in the near future. By 1972, it is hoped that a job data bank will be created in Washington, D. C. Jobs available and skills available can be matched by computer, eliminating much of the struggle to find just where the jobs are at any given time.

Those using the system will have ready access to information listing jobs by location or by skill required.

Canadian liaison officer happy at Post

Maj. Richard W. McIntosh, of the Canadian Army, has already spent more than a year at American military posts, and he's happy to be spending a few more years.

"Fort Benning is considered a very good post, especially for a family man," the young staff officer says.

McIntosh arrived at Fort Benning with his wife and three children last month to assume duties as liaison officer between the U.S. Army Infantry School and the Canadian Army.

The airborne-qualified infantry officer earned his knowledge of American military methods first hand. He attended the U. S. Army Ranger Course here in 1960, the Jungle Warfare School in Panama in 1962 and the Armor Officer Advanced Course in 1967.

McIntosh's new job will require him to monitor Infantry School activities and keep the Canadian government advised of new projects and doctrine. He also briefs the Infantry Board on Canadian military operations.

The major lives on post with his wife and three boys, aged 9, 6 and 4. "It's an extremely good family post," McIntosh says. "The two older boys can walk to elementary school and the younger child is in the nursery school."

The older boys also face an interesting assignment at Fort Benning. "They went to an all-boys school in Canada," McTosh says. "They'll have to get used to having girls in class."

McIntosh received his commission in 1959 through the Regular Officers Training Plan, the Canadian equivalent of R. O. T. C. "Unlike American officers," he says, "Canadians are commissioned into a particular regiment. Mine was the Princess Patricia Light Infantry."

Comparing Fort Benning to posts in Canada and West Germany, the major gives the American facility a rating of "excellent."

Laser missile test successful

REDSTONE ARSENAL, Ala. — The Army has successfully tested a research missile launched from a helicopter and guided by a laser beam to a point target on the ground.

The new guidonee technique is known as semi-active laser guidance and makes possible pinpoint accuracy.

The research missle was the first laser-guided test missile to be launched from a helicopter. Fired from an altitude of 800 feet, the missile flew to a target bull's-eye which was reflecting the laser energy.

JUMPS recalls longevity hikes

During the wage-price freeze you may be paid some money you don't have coming to you — but don't worry, the computers will take it back again.

Under the wage-price freeze announced by the President in August, all longevity increases in basic, special and incentive pays which do not have an effective date prior to Sept. 1 will be frozen.

Due to the complexities of computer programming, those personnel who are being paid under JUMPS — Army and reach the date they would normally be eligible for a longevity increase will have this increase handled in a special manner during the freeze.

If a soldier becomes eligible for a longevity increase during the freeze he will receive the normal monetary increase at the end of the first calendar month of eligibility. This is due to automatic longevity computation by the JUMPS-Army computer. However, the amount paid plus the amount the soldier normally would be entitled to for the second month automatically will be collected from the second month's regular pay voucher.

Each month thereafter, until the freeze is terminated, the increased longevity pay will automatically be collected on the leave and earnings statement for that month.

As a result of the payment of the increase the first month of entitlement and the double deduction at the end of the second month, all personnel are cautioned not to alter their current spending habits.

Personnel who qualify for hostile-fire pay, prisoners of war, those missing in action and those hospitalized for wounds resulting from hostile action before or during the freeze will not be affected by the freeze.

Commissary, PX observe spirit, intent of freeze

The commissary and post exchange are observing the spirit and intent of President Nixon's executive order relating to the price freeze.

Although price fluctuations may still be evidenced on certain commissary and PX items, price ceilings have been established in accordance with government costs. Prices will not exceed these costs.

In cases where contracts were made prior to the price freeze, if the selling price of an item is higher than the set ceiling price, that item has been marked down to the cost price and the loss is being absorbed by the government.

Prices on approximately 50 items have been reduced in the commissary stores, according to C. L. Cannington, commissary manager.

'Patriots' reclaim 2 cemeteries

By Rob Fraser

The men of the 1st Battalion (Mech.), 58th Infantry "Patriots" spent two weeks in Opelika, Ala., working with local citizens to reclaim two long-forgotten cemeteries.

Both the Rosemere Cemetery and the Oakbowery Road Cemetery were overgrown with brush, trees and weeds and had not been kept up for generations. Both burial grounds dated back to the early 19th Century.

The project began Sept. 13 when the first platoon of Co. A, 1st Bn. (Mech.), 58th Inf., invaded the undergrowth at the six-acre Rosemere Cemtery with swing blades, machetes, and heavy mowing equipment.

After Rosemere Cemetery was completely renovated, citizens of Opelika showed their gratitude by treating the "Patriots" to an old-fashioned, southern-style dinner at the local V.F.W.

On Sept. 20, the men from the Scout Platoon of HHC, 1st Bn., 58th Inf., began work on the abandoned Oakbowery Road Cemetery. It, too, was hidden by years of unchecked growth of East Alabama flora.

When the undergrowth had been cleared, the "Patriots" loaned two dump trucks to the people of Opelika so they could haul dirt to level the ground of both cemeteries.

The platoon from Co. A was led by 1st Lt. Charles A. Pollut who explained that the domestic action program was intended to give the men a break in the usual training and involve them in a project that would make a worthwhile contribution to the community.

The project was chosen at a conference between Opelika Mayor Lewis Cooper Jr., and 1st Lt. Ronald S. Campbell, assistant S-5 (domestic action and recruiting) of the "Patriots." The conference had been preceded by a rap session among battalion soldiers in which they discussed the type of project they were interested in undertaking.

Off-duty PFC saves life of small boy

"Had it not been for PFC England's action, my son may have died," stated Mrs. Bain, Mitchell Bain's mother.

PFC George E. England is credited with rescuing a small boy, Mitchell Bain, from a trailer court swimming pool. The boy was floating unconscious in the pool and was in danger of drowing. England, then off duty, saw that there wasn't a lifeguard in the area and immediately dove into the water and pulled the child to safety. Despite other people standing around the pool, England took the decisive action to not only rescue the boy from the water but also to aid the lifeguard in giving the victim artificial respiration until the rescue squad arrived. Mitchell was taken to the emergency room where he recovered.

England was presented an USAIC Certificate of Achievement by Col. A. G. Norris, Commanding Officer of The School Brigade, and was commended for his quick and responsible initiative and action. England, HHC, TSB, is currently assigned to the Personnel Section of TSB.

Airborne unit redeployed

FORT CAMPBELL, Ky. — The 173rd Airborne Brigade has returned to Ft. Campbell, Ky., from the Republic of Vietnam.

The brigade was deployed to Vietnam more than six years ago as the first U. S. Army ground force committed to assist the South Vietnamese.

The 173rd has participated in 12 Vietnam campaigns, and 11 members of the brigade have been recipients of the United States's highest award, the Medal of Honor, for heroism in Vietnam.

Tiger Tactics

The 23rd Co., 2nd Bn., The School Brigade (TSB), was presented the coveted "Tiger Tactics" Award on Sept. 3. The award represents some 20 weeks of exceptional performance by an IOBC class. 23rd Co. was commended for their motivation, alertness, cooperation, proficiency, and military bearing during the period of instruction with the Company Operations Dept.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

by Bill King

Crullers, the twisted pastries that are a favorite breakfast treat, were named by 19th Century Dutch-Americans from the Dutch word "crullen", meaning to curl.

Frozen fruit juices will taste best if mixed and poured a few times from one container to another to develop their flavor. If you have a bleander, by all means use that.

"Green wine", a term often heard in connection with the newly popular Portuguese wines, refers to wines that are red or white in color. In this case, green means young.

After greasing a coke tin, add some flour and bang the tin on a hard edge until all insides are coated. The coke batter will rise more evenly.

After the host has carved enough slices of a roast to go around the table, he should turn it cut-side up so that the juices can't run out.

You'll be the perfect host whenever you treat your family or friends to a great dinner

CRANE Cams $29.95 for any cam listed here.
These Prices will expire Oct. 31, 1971

A racing cam if properly selected and installed can provide more horsepower, greater torque and increased engine rpm. The camshaft is designed to open valves before the piston starts a stroke and to close them after the completion of the stroke in order to utilize the inertia or momentum of the fast-moving gases to fill and empty the cylinder more efficiently.

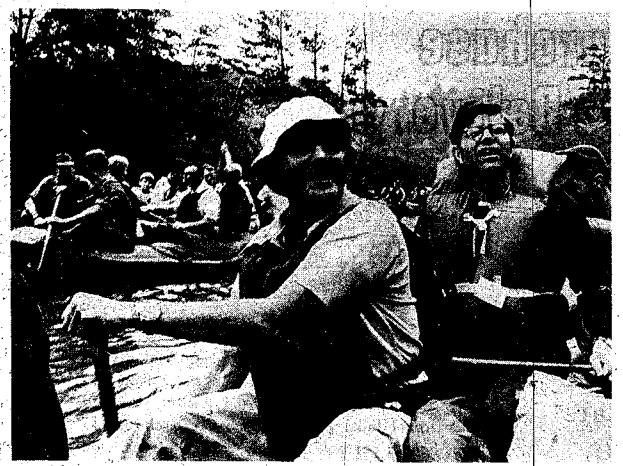
Gen. Westmoreland talks at local AUSA luncheon

Gen. William C. Westmoreland, Army Chief of Staff was the featured speaker at a luncheon meeting of the Columbus-Phenix City-Fort Benning Chapter, Association of the U. S. Army (AUSA) held on post last week.



Gen. Westmoreland was visiting Fort Benning to attend the Third Semiannual Chief of Staff's Forum and the Commanders Information Conference.

While here, Gen. Westmoreland presented a personal contribution to the building fund for the proposed new Infantry Museum to be constructed on post. Accepting the general's check was Jim Woodruff Jr., president of the Infantry Museum Association, Inc.

At the luncheon Gen. Westmoreland spoke of challenges faced by today's Army and of the AUSA's role in supporting Army objectives.

Brig. Gen. Robert F. Cocklin, director of Public Affairs for AUSA, attended a business meeting of the board of trustees of the local chapter which preceded the luncheon. He announced that the local chapter has won three national awards for 1971. The awards — best chapter overall during 1970-71, largest membership, and greatest membership input — will be presented at the national AUSA meeting to be held in Washington next month.

In his address Gen. Westmoreland talked informally about the Army's problems and the role of AUSA in attaining the goals of professionalism, improved living and working conditions and greater public support.

ECOLOGY ON THE MOVE

Members Of The Georgia Conservancy, Inc. And Their Special Guests Tour The Chattahoochee River North of Atlanta With Assistance From The 586th Engr. Co., 931st Engr. Gp.

Provide men and boats

Engineers assist state conservationists

For the 3rd time in as many months the 586th Engr. Co. (FB), 931st Engr. Gp. has been called upon to assist the state's leading ecologists and conservationists.

In July and August the float bridge company provided the necessary men and boats for the Georgia Natural Areas Council to study the ecological impact a series of dams would have on the Flint River near Thomaston, Ga.

On Sept. 25 the 586th journeyed to Atlanta at the request of the Georgia Conservancy, Inc., to provide seven boats for a float trip on the Chattahoochee River.

Under the command of 2nd Lt. James Norris, 14 engineers together with the necessary equipment left Fort Benning early Saturday morning enroute to Atlanta.

The purpose of the trip was to show visiting dignitaries, including various state legislators, county commissioners and department heads, a stretch of the river affected by the Chattahoochee River Park Plan.

The plan calls for the preservation of 8,000 acres of river front property along a 48 mile stretch of the Chattahoochee north of Atlanta.

The idea for the park grew out of the Parks to People Program initiated by the Secretary of the Interior last year. Fourteen metro sites have been chosen for possible federally funded parks and the Atlanta site on the Chattahoochee is one of them.

Ecologists and conservationists are pushing hard for this site because the river north of Atlanta is undisturbed, but the same cannot be said for the river south of Atlanta. The ecologists argue that unless the park is designated, the river north of Atlanta will become polluted with the constant onslought of industrial expansion.

It is the hope of the Georgia Conservancy that the Chattahoochee will open the park plan up to discussion so that something concrete will develop.

The trip lasted five hours and covered some eight miles. The engineers from the 586th were thanked for their fine help individually, but the same cannot be said for the Conservancy officials.

$138,000 CFC goal to be discussed today

The Commanders Conference for the Combined Federal Campaign (CFC) will be held here today to discuss the allocation of the $138,000 goal CFC officers hope to achieve.

The money will be divided among some 43 agencies associated with the United Givers, the National Health Agencies, and the International Service Agencies.

This is the first time federal employees in the Columbus — Phenix City — Fort Benning area will be able to make one contribution, through payroll deduction, check or cash, to all three of these organization.

Mr. James F. Schoonover, post project officer for the campaign, is stressing the use of the payroll deduction plan as the most convenient way to make a donation. "People have been asking for a single campaign to cover all of these funds," he said, "Now they can make one donation and make it in a convenient way."

Donations may be unspecified, or the contributor may specify which of the 43 agencies will receive his donation.

Funds designated for the United Givers Agencies serve 28 agencies in the local community. They support, for example activities such as Boys Clubs and Girls Clubs scouting groups, and the YMCA. Other recipients are Red Cross, and the Columbus Legal Aid Society which gives legal assistance in civil cases at a reduced fee or without cost to those who could not otherwise afford it.

For further information, see your project officer, or call the Fort Benning campaign office in Bldg. 89, telephone 545-1950.

Historical papers

Mrs. Myra Stilwell of Columbus recently presented to the Infantry Museum at Fort Benning, papers of her late father-in-law, Gen. Joseph Stilwell. Atetnding the presentation were, (L-R), Gen. William C. Westmoreland, Army chief of staff; John Hunter, museum curator; Mrs. Stilwell, and Maj. Gen. Orwin C. Talbott, post commander. The hand-written papers give Gen. Stilwell's estimate of the situation he faced in Burma during World War II. The papers are regarded as a "classic" example of a military scientist at work, sizing up his problem and reaching a final decision. The framed papers are now on display in the Infantry School Library.

DOD shifts drug, alcohol responsibility

The responsibility for drug and alcohol-abuse control in the military has been transferred from the assistant secretary of defense for manpower and reserve affairs to the assistant secretary of defense for health and environment.

The Department of Defense (DOD) shifted the responsibility because problems of drug and alcohol abuse are essentially medical problems.

A new Office of the Deputy Assistant Secretary of Defense for Drug and Alcohol Abuse has been formed and will have a Directorate for Prevention and Identification, and a Directorate for Treatment, Rehabilitation and Disposition.

The assistant secretary for health and environment will provide policy guidance, management control and coordination for the DOD Drug-Abuse Control Program and the DOD Alcohol-Abuse Control Program. These programs include preparation of educational and informational materials on the dangers of illegal or improper drug and alcohol use.

Manpower policy and disciplinary aspects of drug control will continue to be the responsibility of the assistant secretary of defense for manpower and reserve affairs.

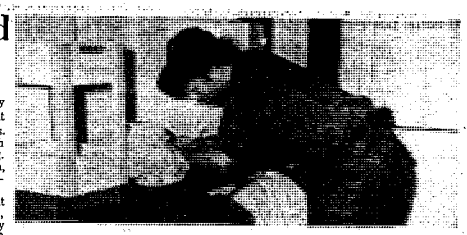
Quick service, low prices featured at Post Quartermaster Laundry

Quick service and low prices are features of the Fort Benning Quartermaster Laundry, according to Mr. David Allen, manager.

The laundry, which currently handles more than 20,000 items a day, can return laundry in about 2 days.

"We want business," said Allen, "And we have the most up-to-date equipment available. We could handl about triple our present load."



Although the laundry does not have pick up and delivery service, troops can turn in laundry through company supply.

"Troops turning laundry through supply can have 104 pieces of clothing laundered a month for $6.20. paid through the payroll deductions," said Allen.

Laundry is also handled on a piece basis for active and retired military personnel and their dependents.

The main plant is located on the corner of Indianhead Road and Marchant Street, and is open Monday through Friday from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. Laundry may also be deposited at one of two pick-up points. The Harmony Church point is located in Bldg. 4850 in the 58th Bn. area, open Monday through Friday from 1 p.m. to 6 p.m.

The second point is at Kelly Hill in Bldg. 9046, and is open Monday through Friday from 10:30 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Byline Bayonet

(Byline Bayonet welcomes questions of general interest about Fort Benning and the Army. Within space limitations all reasonable questions will be answered. Questions of a purely military nature which obviously could be answered more properly by commanders or supervisors within the chain of command will not be accepted. All questions must be signed with current unit of assignment indicated. Send questions to the Bayonet, ATT: SFC Bob Edwards, Room 602, Infantry Hall or telephone 545-4792.)

Q — I understand that the state of Georgia is accepting military licenses in lieu of the regular license when applying for a Georgia license. Is this true?

A — According to a spokesman from the Georgia Highway Patrol License Division, military personnel in possession of a valid military driver's license, who desire to obtain a Georgia driver's license, are not required to take the driving portion of the license examination. Applicants must have the military license in their possession and exhibit it to the license examiner. Individuals taking the driving examination are required to furnish the vehicle and the vehicle must have a valid state inspection sticker as the vehicle will be examined by the inspector. In addition one must have their social security card in their possession at the time of examination.

Q — I hear that the Social Security Office has initiated a teleservice program. What are it's advantages. I am nearly ready to reitre?

A — There are many advantages in doing busines with the Social Security Office by telephone. First, you won't have to get off from work to visit the local office two or three months before you retire. Second, you can talk in the privacy of your home while you relax. Third, when asked how much money you made last year, you can go to your records file and give this information immediately. Fourth, you won't have to hunt for a perking place or feed a parking meter. Fifth, you won't have to wait your turn to be interviewed. There are many more advantages I could name, but I guess the best one is your claim will be completed and paid quicker.

Q — I entered the Army under the delayed entry program and prior to coming on active duty I went back to work with my former employer at a reduced salary. What salary would I be able to start at upon my release from active duty?

A — A specific answer to this question depends upon the circumstances in each individual case. Generally, a person who leaves employment to serve in the Armed Forces, and who serves four years or less (plus any additional period imposed by law), and is honorably seperated, is entitled to reinstatement with his former employer if he applies within 90 days of his release from the service. His seniority will be determined just as though there had been no interruption in employment. For information regarding a particular set of circumstances an individual should consult a convenient government employment office, and preferably such an office in the geographic area involved.

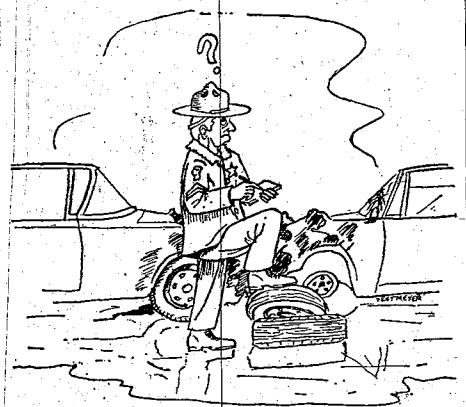
The judge says

Defendant must prove mishap rare

USAIC LEGAL ASSISTANCE OFFICE — Where Charles Frost lived winter temperatures often fell below zero. One day he scraped the frost from his windshield and headed to work. Near a bridge, he saw a car coming toward him. Braking to slow down, he skidded his car into the oncoming car which Shirley was driving.

Shirley sued. Charles told the court that ice had made the road slick and through no fault of his own, he lost control of his car.

But the court awarded Shirley damages for her injuries. While in legal terms, ice, wind, and rain are "Acts of God," winter ice where Charles lived was so common he should have allowed for it. Besides, Charles had often crossed the bridge and should have been prepared for a slick road. He'd have to pay for Shirley's injuries.



For a defense of "act of God" to stand up in court, the defendant must show that the cause of the accident was extraordinary and unforseeable, a hard thing to prove.

A hurricane where they are unheard of, an earthquake where they are unknown, a heavy snowfall where snow has been unknown before, might well be a defense against a suit for damages brought about by the 'act of God."

Likewise, sometimes a person can claim "unavoidable accident" to defend a law suit. An apparently healthy young man who has a sudden heart attack and drives his car into another car is not likely to be held liable if he lives.

Sometimes, things are so unusual that no one could foresee an accident. In one case a woman was waiting on the platform to board a train near the scales. Some distance away, trying to help a man catch a train, a conductor shoved him as he boarded a crowded train. The shove dislodged a package of fireworks from under the passenger's arm. When they landed the fireworks blew up and overturned the scales which fell and injured the waiting woman.

The woman sued and lost. No one could possibly have foreseen such a chain of events, the court said. Plaintiff — poor woman was a victim of an "unforeseeable accident." Nobody was to blame.

Serviceman proves himself capable

HQ CONARC, Ft. Monroe, Va. — There were less traffic injuries and fatalities involving servicement within the United States Continental Army Command in fiscal year 1971 than in the two preceding years. And there has been a recent decrease in CONARC's AWOL rate. These are heartening signs for the Modern Volunteer Army Program and its field test, VOLAR.

When the Modern Volunteer Army became an official Army program in January 1971, it was met with some premature misgivings about certain life style changes. Although the main thrust of professionalism was well received, many experienced military men feared that the elimination of reveille and lifting of pass and travel distance restrictions would leal to more servicemen being injured or killed on the highways, or AWOL. But the statistics from the last half of fiscal year 1971 have not borne out these fears.

Increased freedom of travel during off-duty hours has not produced a corresponding increase in accidents. To the contrary, among soldiers stationed with CONARC there has been a steady decline in the traffic injury rate from 10.3 per 1,000,000 mandays in FY '69 to a rate of 9.1 in FY'71. The fatality rate has dropped from 2.1 per 1,000,000 mandays in FY '69 to 1.6 in F.Y. '71.

The command's AWOL rate, which peaked in the second and third quarters of fiscal year 1971, has dropped from a monthly average of 28.6 for each thousand soldiers to a present average of 26.4. Although it is too early to tell statistically whether this downward trend is influenced by the new Army changes, the trend appears to be continuing.

Another charge which has been laid to rest was that beer in the barracks would lead to breaches of discipline. To date, no incidents in the barracks have been reported to CONARC which are attributed to the availibility of beer in the soldiers' living area.

The MVA changes mentioned are only three of many which increase the Army's recognition of the soldier as a mature individual. In CONARC, the thrust of the MVA is to duplicate the trust in garrison which is shown to the battlefield soldier by increasing the professionalism of the Army while removing inequities and irritants.

That the traffic injury and fatality rates for CONARC are down and AWOL rates have dropped does not mean that the MVA and VOLAR are unlimited successes. But the trends tend to show that the soldier can handle the responsibilities and privileges being extended to him by the Modern Volunteer Army.

Answers to the most frequently asked questions about DRUG ABUSE

WHAT IS ADDICTION?

Addiction is physical dependencence upon a drug. Its scientific definition includes the development of tolerance and withdrawal. As a person develops tolerance he requires larger and larger amounts of the drug to produce the same effect. When use of the addicting drug is stopped abruptly, the period of withdrawal is characterized by such distressing symptoms as vomiting and convulsions. A compulsion to repeat the use of the addicting drug is understandable because the drug temporarily solves one's problems and keeps the withdrawal symptoms away.

What are the psychological effects of marijuana?

The psychological effects of marijuana are variable. They include distortions of hearing, vision and sense of time. Thought becomes dream-like. The belief that one is thinking better is not unusual. Performance may be hampered or unchanged. Illusions (misinterpretation of sensations) are often reported, but hallucination (experiencing non-existent sensations) and delusions (false beliefs) are rare. Unfounded suspicion may occur, and this may be accompanied by anxiety. More often the feeling is one of a passive euphoria or "high." The individual tends to withdraw into himself. Occasionally, uncontrollable laughter or crying may occur.

TSB

A field day was held at King's Pond for candidates of 51st Co. 5th Stu. Bn., OCS, and their families.

Some 300 people attended the outdoor activity sponsored by the Officer Candidate Wives' Club and the OCS Student Council. Wives furnished an array of pot luck dishes which were served buffet style.

Honored guests include Lt. Col. Donald A. Bliss, commanding officer, 5th Bn, and family; Capt. Frank R. Vavrek, commanding officer, 51st Co., 5th Stu. Bn. and family; 1st Lt. and Mrs. William D. Smith; 1st Lt. and Mrs. Gary W. Quick and family; 1st Lt. and Mrs. Kenneth Caswell. Also attending was incoming commanding officer Capt. Renshaw, who will assume command of 51st Co. Oct. 1.

The afternoon was filled with competition between platoons and officers in egg relay races, potato sack races, watermelon eating, peach bombing and egg throwing contests. The 5th Platoon emerged victorious in total points. There were also short football games pitting platoons against Col. Bliss, Capt. Vavrek and the Tactical officers.

197th Inf. Bde.

What do carrots, peas, oranges and eggs have in common with Christmas? The ladies of the 1st Bn. (Mech.), 58th Inf., 197th Inf. Bde., found out at their monthly coffee Sept. 16, when the Christmas Bazaar projects were displayed. Exactly how these items spark the Christmas spirit will remain a secret for the next few months, but, believe me, it's worth waiting to see.

Mrs. Robert Akers and Mrs. Fred Bayrd were welcomed into the group by Mrs. Stephen Pawlik.

Trays were presented to departing members, Mrs. Robert Brown and Mrs. Charles Stanfield. Mrs. Stanfield turned over the treasury records to Mrs. Byrad, the new treasurer.

Plans were discussed for the brigade's October luncheon. The 1-58th, as the sponsoring unit, has arranged for a local ballet company to provide the afternoon's entertainment.

The group's interest in sports was not satisfied with just having a brigade championship volley ball team or a weekly tennis clinic, so a new ladies bowling league was established at the coffee.

Mrs. Cecil Calloway was the hostess for the evening, and Mrs. Fred Heath served as cohostess. Refreshments of finger sandwiches and cakes were served.

Mrs. Phillip Jarrell and Mrs. Thomas Plunkett entertained the ladies of HQ, 197th Inf. Bde. at a coffee held Sept. 15 in the home of Mrs. Jarrell.

A colorful arrangement of fall flowers was used as a centerpiece. The hostesses served a variety of home baked cookies, finger sandwiches, coffee and punch.

Mrs. Henry Doctor conducted the business meeting and announced the forthcoming trip to Atlanta, Nov. 9. A luncheon will be held Oct. 20, sponsored by the ladies of the 1st Bn., 58th Inf. Mrs. Doctor informed the group that there will be a fall formal. The date will be announced later. The ladies discussed the OWC Christmas Bazaar. Mrs. Fredrick Bissell will be Bazaar chairman.

The monthly coffee of the Officers' Wives, of the 197th Sup. Bn., was held at the home of Mrs. Michael Lynch Sept. 16. Cohostess for the affair was Mrs. William Kinfry.

The business meeting was brought to order by Mrs. Hollis Messer. A discussion was held on the battalion contribution to the annual OWC Christmas Bazaar. Plans were also made for Santa's helpers to start work on their projects. Reservations were taken for the OWC luncheon which is to be held in October.

Mrs. Cleone Wible, whose husband has recently been assigned to the battalion, was welcomed into the group. With regret, adieu was bid to Mrs. Donald McConnaughhay who is leaving to spend the next 12 months in Kentucky while her husband is serving in Vietnam.

The highlight of the evening was our special guest speaker, 1st Lt. MacAuliffee of the Environmental Management Division here. MacAuliffe explained the kinds of pollution and stated the division's objectives.

The lieutenant stressed the need for help from Fort Benning and Columbus residents. He stated that the people will have to give in order to get this major problem under control.

The Environmental Management Division is a newly-created department which welcomes any help or suggestions relating to the Fort Benning ecology program. We urge all the wives of Fort Benning to get behind this important project.

It should be a fun-filled day, and we hope to have all the ladies attend.

OWC adopts new reservation policy

By Carol May

The Officer's Wives' Club (OWC) has revised its policy for making reservations for various club functions.

The OWC, like most clubs, has had a problem with "no shows." Due to the size of the club, it cannot afford to have this problem.

The changes, made under the supervision of Mrs. Gordon Hunt, reservations chairman, are as follows:

Each unit reservation chairman will be given a block of CB and T Bank-Americard chits. At each unit function a member desiring a reservation will fill in a chit and sign it. This guarantees that she will be charged if she does not cancel and does not attend. Each chit should contain:

a. Husband's name

b. BankAmericard number (club number)

c. Signature of wife

In order to have a cross reference, each member will also be required to sign her name, OWC card number and telephone number on a separate sheet as she makes her reservation. When the chits are handed in to the committee, the number of chits should correspond to the number of names on the list.

If a lady plans to bring a guest, she should note the total number she will be charged for on the chit and on the separate sheet. If she plans to bring one guest, she would fill in the number two (2) under "quantity."

If a wife does not attend the unit coffee but wishes to make a reservation, she is asked to go to the home of her respective reservation chairman to sign a chit.

If the member does not wish to charge, she still must fill out a chit and sign it. She may then "buy back" her chit at the event by paying cash.

The unit reservation chairman will be responsible for turning in the chits to a member of the committee no later than noon on the Monday preceding the function. The reservation chairmen are asked to phone the committee member to insure that she will be home to receive the chits. The chits cannot be left in the mailbox.

The OWC committee members are as follows:

Mrs. Gordon M. Hunt (Ann), chairman
102 Dilbeck Street
545-7349

Mrs. Powell Johnson (Betty), co-chairman

687-5130.

Mrs. James Hoover (Anetta)

545-2068

(Located on Main Post behind Patch School.)

Good Samaritan remains unknown

The kind deed of a Fort Benning soldier has earned the gratitude of the family of PSgt. Finnis D. McCleery.

Their 13-year-old daughter was involved in a two-bike collision last week on the way home from cheerleader practice.

The soldier, who was riding a motorcycle, stopped to see about the two young riders involved in the accident, and give them money to call home. The "Good Samaritan" has not been identified.

3-D illusions tested as camouflage

Optical illusions giving the appearance of depth may have applications in camouflaging and counter-surveillance, according to the U. S. Army Mobility Equipment Research and Development Center at Ft. Belvoir, Va.

Certain optical conditions can produce the illusion of depth, and more recent developments produce the depth illusion in a thin way.

Flexible blankets or sheets giving the illusion of depth could be used by personnel and equipment to reduce detection and identification or could be displayed to present optical illusions that would flat, self-contained package, similar to the "3-D" photographs gaining widespread use in commercial advertising.

The technique is described as "Flat-Optics" and deals with lenticular, omnidirectional and moire systems and combinations of these systems where no external mechanism for viewing is required.

The engineer group and its subordinate units contributed some $4,292.68, nearly $90 more than its goal of $4,205. The amount gave the 931st 102 per cent of its AER goal.

According to Capt. Gary DeWindt, project officer for the fund drive, several units within the 931st made commendable contributions during the drive since it began July 22. "The 586th Engr. Co. (FB) attained the highest percentage, achieving almost 200 per cent of its goal, giving a big boost to the group's total participation. Right behind them was the 67th Maint. Bn. which donated more than $1,500 to the fund," he said.

Other units gave generously to the fund, he added, including the 43rd Engr. Bn. which donated $1,426, and the 89th Ord. Co. (EOD) which achieved 169 per cent of its assigned goal.

Americans instruct Thai Army in use of trained dogs

By Tom Teglmeyer

The use of scout, mine and tracking dogs has meant a lot of saved lives to the American forces overseas. These dogs have the ability not only of finding enemy forces, but detecting enemy booby traps before they have been tripped by one of our soldiers.

Earlier this spring, three men of the United States Armed Forces were sent April 1 and ended on June 27. Included in the program were 9 men who acted as a support team. In addition, each of the three groups was assigned a Thai lieutenant a an observer.

The first week of training was a conditioning period for men and dogs.

TEGTMEYER

The weather was extremely hot, so the periods of outdoor training were confined to the morning hours, when the sun was not at its bottest. In the afternoons, classroom instruction was provided. Also included in the first week was basic obedience.

Warner noted that the Thai students displayed good morale and in intense desire to learn. The training areas were outstanding: the terrain was densely vegetated and crossed by many streams. Part of the training was conducted near the Summer Palace on Dousi Ted Mountain, in the second highest mountain range in Thailand. The mountain training was noteworthy in that it provided the handlers with ideal preparation for frontier operations. The Thai students received specialized training such as cliff and helicopter rapelling, river crossing and night operations.

On the final day of training, a demonstration was held for the King and Queen of Thailand and high-ranking military personnel. The King presented the instructors and students with specially-made gold pins to commemorate the project and its success. On the final evening, the instructors were invited to dinner at the Summer Palace with the King and Queen, who were most appreciative of their work.

Due to the success of the training, Warner will return to Thailand in October of this year to continue the program for Thai dog handlers.

on temporary duty to Thailand in an experiment concerning the use of these dogs in the Thai Army.

SSgt. Barry J. Warner, Scout Dog Instructor, Military Dog Committee, Company Operations Dept., SFC Thomas Nunn, Combat Tracker Dog Instructor, CT Div., SPTA, USAMPS, Ft. Gordon, Georgia, and SSgt. James W. Reali, USMC, Mine-Tunnel Dog Instructor, Military Dog Committee, took five each trained combat tracker dogs, mine-tunnel detection dogs and off lease dogs to Bangkok, Thailand. From there, they traveled 750 km north to the training area near Chalegmai.

MPs trained to roll with the punches

By Keith Harmon

PFC Miguel Fernandez, an MP with the 139th M. Co., 93ist Engr. Gp., routinely put on his white gloves and braced himself for a little more abuse. It was shortly after 3 p.m. and the first group of students to cross his street corner were already on their way from their last class of the day.

"Hold it right there . . . don't come out into the crosswalk until I stop the traffic. Stay back on the curb, I say."

They didn't listen. It was the second day of school and the youngsters were anxiously longing for a little of the summertime freedom they had known for three months.

"You'll have to get off your bike and walk with it across the intersection," he directed. As he spoke this time a girl about 11 or 12 years old snapped back: "You can't tell me to get off. My daddy's a colonel." Another girl joined in: "I don't have to get off either, my father's a first sergeant."

Fernandez grimaced, but dutifully held up a rigid arm to the oncoming traffic so the students could cross the thoroughfare safely. "I hear talk like that all the time," he said. "Nobody likes an MP to tell them what to do, and nobody appreciates that what we're doing is for the safety of those who live and work here," he explained.

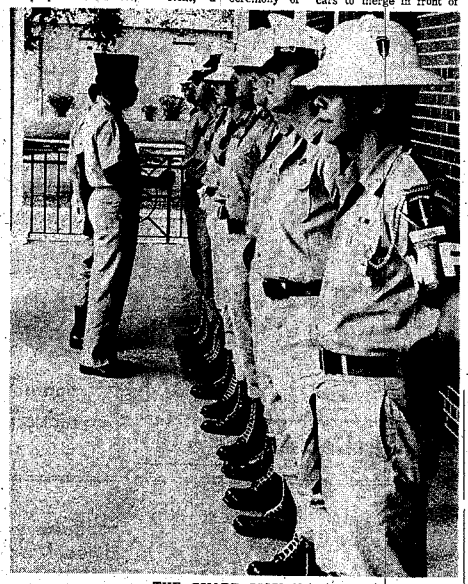
Fernandez, like the other MP's who work in the traffic section at Fort Benning, works 12 hours a day and complains very little about the long hours and the frustrating moments of directing drivers who do not follow signs and students who do not follow instructions.

The Cuban native is trained to be courteous, helpful and to "roll with the punches" without complaining. One thing that does bother him though, is that a lot of people interpret his actions as harrassment.

Like the time a driver was caught for speeding for the second time in about two hours. He was snared by radar the first time as he was leaving Fort Benning, and he was pulled over again on his return trip to the post by traffic supervisors who just happened to be cruising in the area. There was no conspiracy by the MP's to single out that particular driver, he simply just got caught twice the same day.

"The MP's get abuse from people on the street," said traffic officer Capt. George Galloway, "and as you see we ride them all the time. We're always training them because we want them to be professional." Fernandez reflects that training — he's professionally polite and systematically courteous, even in the most difficult situations.

His day begins at 5 a.m. so he can prepare for the first of three guard mounts he stands each day in which he's closely inspected for appearance. He then assumes a post on one of Fort Benning's main arteries to help the flow of traffic as people drive to work. When that's done he hustles to a school to aid pupils across busy streets.



Next, a ceremony or large meeting will usually keep him busy until it's time to direct heavy traffic at noon. Shortly after that's over it's time to assist the students returning home, followed by a street corner assignment as the afternoon commuters make their way off the post.

When he's finished at 6 p.m. he's put in a full 12-hour day, spending most of that time on his feet.

Getting traffic safely on and off Fort Benning is frustrating at best. "The drivers coming to work in the morning are all right," said Sgt. Otis Holcomb, "but every one is in such a hurry to get home at night that they abandon all courtesy. They'd rather let another lane of traffic tie-up than allow a few cars to merge in front of them."

MPs TAKE A COOL BREAK IN THE SHADE

THE GUARD MOUNT
Three times a day the MPs are inspected for haircuts, boots, neatness

Faced with stringent demands that the traffic police always appear neat and remain courteous in the face of occassional verbal abuse, the 139th men remain remarkably impersonal and polite in their daily contacts with less amiable drivers and pedestrians. "We have too much work to do, we just don't have time to complain," explained SFC George Anderson, traffic section NCOIC.

Spc Earl Thomas was honest in his evaluation of what it's like being a traffic patrolman. In one day he ushered traffic onto Fort Benning, directed pedestrians across busy streets, attended the parking lot at the Officer's Club for an annual wive's club tea, directed congested traffic at Tot Town, and then aided drivers in getting home at night.

"Sure, I'm hot and tired, but I wouldn't trade this job for any other. I love being a cop."

Social Security offers speakers

"The Social Security Administration wants to keep the public informed and up to date about all of the provisions of the Social Security Law," stated Robert E. O'Neal of the Columbus Social Security Office. One of the ways of informing the public is by providing social security speakers at civic clubs and organization meetings.

Usually a telephone call to the social security office to request a speaker is all that is necessary. "What we are interested in at present is making the availability of this service more widely known," O'Neal stated.

He adds that perhaps the most important function of the Social Security Administration is to protect the rights of persons under the Social Security and Medicare Laws.

O'Neal invites all interested clubs and organizations to call the social security office at 324-5461 and take advantage of this free service.

VOLAR soldier

Lt. Gen. George I. Forsythe, Special Assistant of the Modern Volunteer Army (L), presents jump boots to PFC Samuel Scott, 47th Co., 4th Bn. (ABN), TSB. Scott and PFC Joseph T. Massey, 43rd Co., 4th Bn. were selected as best exemplifying the VOLAR soldier within the 4th Battalion. The presentation was made on Sept. 23 in the 4th Bn. area while Gen. Forsythe was attending the Chief of Staff's Forum.

Says SMA Copeland

Pay raise, VOLAR make 'a big change in the Army'

"I feel the new pay raise will be a tremendous help in attracting new personal to the army and keeping those that are already in," said Sergeant Major of the Army, Silas L. Copeland.

During his recent visit to Fort Benning Copeland said that any time soldiers received a pay raise it greatly improves their morale.

"The pay raise is not the only factor that has made a big change in the Army. VOLAR has to be given a lot of the credit as one of the most important factors in today's Army," said Copeland.

"VOLAR has been a great success so far," he continued, "and in the past year of operation it has been a great morale builder for the soldier. It lets him know that his superiors are taking better care of him. It shows them that his superiors are aware of his condition and are trying to do something to improve it."

"Fort Benning has to be one of the best examples of the VOLAR system," stated Copeland.

With June 30, 1973 set as the objective date for the total voluntary Army, Copeland said, "If it is not reached by then we will be a long way down the road to obtaining that objective."

"It depends on the amount of effort and how much money that can be spent in this area as to how soon we will reach that objective, the all voluntary Army," said Copeland.

Lanie Russell trades 'tomboy' tag for acting

By Edith Simmons

As the Benning Dramatizers prepare for their next show, "Carnival," the familiar face of Lanie Russell is part of the bustle. Lanie has been with the Dramatizers two years and is the only member of the original group left.

Back in Bay Village, Ohio, Lanie's mother little suspected the consequences her decision to take Lanie out to the YMCA would have. She was afraid that Lanie was too much of a tomboy. To correct this, she encouraged Lanie, at 10, to work with the Lakewood Little Theater. When college time came, a major in Voice and Drama was the natural selection; Loretto Heights College, in Denver, was the place. While there, she played Lady Margaret in "A Man For All Seasons" and Nancy in "Oliver." Lanie laughs as she remembers that her first important part received an excellent review, but was credited to someone else.

Since coming to Benning, Lanie has worked in five of the eight Dramatizer productions. Starting as Sarah Brown in "Guys and Dolls," she also protrayed Rosalia in "West Side Story;" Penny in "You Can't Take It With You;" Hazel in "Blues for Mister Charlie;" and, Domina in "A Funny Thing Happened On The Way to The Forum." In the October production of "Carnival," Lanie, as the luckless Rosalie, will chase and moan over Marco the Magician.

As she continues her theater work, Lanie hopes to broaden her experience with some dramatic roles. Hopefully she can, for she will be here another 13 months.

In between shows, Lanie is a busy wife and mother. Husband Steve is an instructor at BRC, 3rd Ranger Co., and they have two boys.

"Carnival" is scheduled to be presented Oct. 13-17.

Ege-citing

Julie Ege accompanies Tony Bonner during a Stone Age stalk through the woods during this scene from "Creatures the World Forgot," a Hammer film which begins tonight at a local theater.

'J.C.' filmed in Atlanta

They preached peace but lived violence. Thus is told the bizarre story of "J. C.," the son of a visionary who grew up to lead a motorcycle gang on a mission which led to destruction.

Filmed on location in Atlanta by the multi-talented William McGaha, "J.C." is an action-packed adventure film featuring the currently popular religious rock music form. McGaha, who plays the title role, also produced, directed and co-wrote the screenplay with Joe Thirty.

Lovely Joanna Moore returns to the screen in the role of J. C.'s sister, and a cameo role as the sheriff of a backwoods town in which J. C. and his disciples meet their fate is played by Slim Pickens.

The Aevo Embassy release in color opens tonight at a local Theatre.

'Love Story' is coming to post

"Love Story," based on Erich Segal's screenplay, is coming to Fort Benning.

This story of two college students from widely differing backgrounds, stars Ali MeGraw and Ryan O'Neal.

It is scheduled to be shown as follows:

Theater No. 1 — Oct. 22-25.

Theater No. 3 — Oct. 26-28.

Theater No. 5 — Oct. 29-31.

Theater No. 9 — Nov. 1-4.

Theater No. 2 — Nov. 5-6.

The farce by Arthur Kopit is an hilarious, surrealistic, ambivalent nightmare. It is not always easy to maintain the proper balance between its terrifying implications and its excruciating farce. Kopit is "absurd" primarily in the sense that he is shocking, irreverent, daring, unorthodox, and thus far in his career disinclined to take human existence very seriously.

"Oh Dad, Poor Dad" ran for 454 performances on Broadway when it was presented featuring Jo Van Fleet as Madame Rosepetle. In 1963 a touring company starring Herminone Gingold opened in Chicago. The movie version starred Rosalind Russell and Jonathan Winters.

The Auburn University production is directed by Leo A. Comeau, with scenery and costumes by R. C. Torri and lighting by Terry Cobb.

Togetherness

A jubilant Dooley family (Lee Montgomery (L), Dean Jones and Sandy Duncan) celebrate a court ruling that they can keep their pet gold egg laying duck, Charley, after it almost disrupts the monetary system of the world, in this scene from '$1,000,000 Duck,' which will be showing Thursday at Main Post Theater No. 1.

Synopsis

INVESTIGATION OF A CITIZEN ABOVE SUSPICION (Rated R) — Florinda Bolkan taunts her lover, Gian Maria Volonte, with the question, "How will you kill me today?" He replies by slitting her throat as they make love, then leaves clues to his identity.

Formerly chief of homicide, Volonte is taking office as head of Political Intelligence and feels confident in his being above suspicion. While holling himself above the law, however, he wants to test its effectiveness and actively takes a part in the investigation.

Volonte gives a chilling performance as he fascinatingly portrays a complex character entirely dedicated to upholding the law and yet capable of using his authority to his own ends. In a corrupt world,he's more corrupt than anyone else.

BEEN DOWN SO LONG, IT LOOKS LIKE UP TO ME (Rated R), is set in the late 1950's and chronicles the emotional struggles of Grossos Pappalopoulis, who returns to a college campus after a series of disenchanting exercises on the road.

A member of the so-called "Beat Generation," Grossos is involved with drugs, still a rarity in that decade, and approaches the revolution in Cuba with trust and innocence.

$1,000,000 DUCK (Rated G) — Professor Dean Jones feels sorry for a behavorial test duck dropout in his laboratory and takes it home to his wife. Radiation exposure and a mixed-up applesauce lunch, prepared by Jones' kooky wife Sandy Duncan, causes the duck to lay solid-gold eggs.

Jones' son Jimmy claims the duck as a pet and names her Charley. Since the bank will not accept the golden eggs, Duncan cashes them in at refineries. In turn, the Treasury Department is alerted as a threat to world economy is seen.

Jones, Duncan and the T-Men become involved in a wild car chase as they pursue Jimmy who, fearful of losing his pet to the more then interested tax assessors, has run away with Charley.

THX 1138 (Rated GP) — The 25th Century is a world of computers and total conformity. In this subterranean society, men and women alike have shaved heads and dress similarly. Drugs dull the minds into submission.

THX 1138 (Robert Duvall) is a technician whose work is suffering due to his avoiding drugs. He's failing in love with roommate LUH 3417 (Maggie McOmie) and that is forbidden. Chrome robot policemen separate the lovers and THX 1138 is jailed surrounded by an infinity of white making escape virtually impossible.

THX 1138 and SEN each steal a monstrous jet-car and they race though substructural tunnels pursued by robot police on jet-motor bikes in a heart-stopping chase. Control Center uses every means at their command to stop their attempt to reach the outer atmosphere.

'Polar Bear' efforts seen in YMCA camp

A YMCA camp in northern Georgia may soon become a major attraction for camping and other outdoor activities thanks to the efforts of Co. B, 5th Bn., 31st Inf. ("Polar Bears"), of the 197th Inf. Bde.

Thirty members of Co. B spent the week of Sept. 13 clearing land and developing four picnic areas at the YMCA camp at Lake Allatoona, near Ackworth, Ga.

Under the supervision of the company commander, Capt. John L. Throckmorton, the "Polar Bears" also spent time developing fishing areas along the Lake Allatoona waterfront.

When the soldiers were not involved in the clean-up and construction operations they participated in Adventure Training activities. The Adventure Training included fishing, swimming, boating and camping.

1st Lt. Peter Griffin, assistant battalion S-5 (domestic action and recruiting), said that the brigade undertook the project to become more identifiable with domestic activity in the Atlanta area.

The work at Lake Allatoona was the 4th such project in the Atlanta area to be performed by the "Polar Bear" battalion since June.

The lake lies about 30 miles northwest of Atlanta. The camp is an extension of the Butler Street YMCA in Atlanta.

When the men of Co. B finished their phase of the project, a group from the 72nd Engrs., moved in with two, ten-ton tractors, a bull dozer and a road grader to build a drainage ditch for the camp swimming pool. They also leveled a hill and redistricuted tons of soil.

When the Allatoona project was completed, the engineers traveled to Archer High School in Atlanta. The engineers terraced the hill surrounding the school, renovated the football field, and installed a drainage ditch.

"I'm no draftee . . . I followed the sergeant home and the C.O. let him keep me!"

(ABOVE) BOY SCOUTS HIT THE WATER AT THE START OF THE THREE-DAY BOAT RACE DOWN THE CHATTAHOOCHEE RIVER

Photos and story by Keith Harmon

The Boy Scouts of the Fort Benning District held their annual Chattahoochee River race last Friday, a three-day race spanning 91 miles from Fort Benning to Lake Walter F. George.

The event was organized and supervised by the 40th Engineer Group, which also sent troops from the 46th Engr. Co. (FSE) ahead to erect bivouac sites for the scouts. The units, in addition, sent two boats and their operators along on the trip to load and haul the canoes.

The winning team in the 13-14 year old class covered almost the entire 91 miles in 22 hours and 10 minutes of their time after the starting gun sounded. The team averaged better than five miles per hour.

The winners are from Troop 76. Ralph and Randy Finch, Alfred Sheffer, and John Brooks. The boat was under the direction of Commissioner Ed H. John Beaver.

The second place team of Roger Ford II earned a time of 22 hours and 31 minutes. That four-man squad consisted of John Segal, Bill Anderson, Jim Anderson and Frank Flinn.

The third place team, just four minutes behind the second place team, was Raymond Kinlaw, Woody Spears, Daniel Chinn and Norman Price.

In the 15-16 year old division, a team from Troop 81 took first place with a time of 21 hours and 44 minutes. At the helm was Max Hastings, Chuck Wright, Scott Elliott and Dave Knight.

Second place honors were from Troop 76 with Fred Rue, Bobby Hebert, Tony Hamilton and Derek Davis doing the row work.

Tangent trackers test prophet's picking power

Well, the magnificent master of maverick maneuvers has routed the rabble again in a challenging championship of choosing against chumps (another seer, Sp5 William Dotson, also 11-2. But Predicto's tie-breaker score of 40-13 in the Ariz. St.-Tex. (El Paso) game solved the confusors of the Infantry School's Land Navigation section. The muddled magmen will need more than radar to ditch the dashing dean of dropkicks; in fact they oiled the omens of outrage by assuming names that tout their temerity, but the telepathic touchdown truthsteller will temper the teetering tangent trackers. Also playing is SSgt. George Daley of the 67th Maintenance Battalion. Hope against hope, mechanic less prognistentor, simply call the Saturday soothsayer at 545-4622 or 7841.

608th Ord. Co. new league leaders

The 608th Ord. Co. (Ammo) has become the surprising league leaders in the 931st Engr. Gp. company level football league. Although the ordnance company has participated in only one flag football contest so far, the 608th nonetheless boasts a 4-0 record due to three victories by forfeit.

Apparent strong contenders for the league championship appear at this point to be the 598th Lt. Maint. Co., which holds a record of three wins and one loss and is in sole possession of the 13-team league's second place.

Highlighting last week's action was the upset of the strong 586th Engr. Co. (FB) by the smaller but quicker 15th Fin. squad. The victory helped 15th Fin. into a three-way tie for third place and pushed the float bridge nine into fourth.

A rematch is scheduled this week between rival teams of 15th Fin. and HHC, 931st. Both teams hold identical records of 2-1 after a victory by the finance team was protested last week and ordered to be played again.

The first and second place teams from the engineer league will represent 931st in the Fort Benning flag football tournament later this year.

Co. A, HHD set paces in 197th flag football action

The 197th Support Battalion and Co. A (Admin.), 197th Inf. Bde. paced the play in 197th flag football action for September.

Co. A, last season's 197th champions, shellacked the Medical Department Activities team, 20-2, in a tune-up contest for both clubs. Co. A also defeated a team from the 5th Bn., 31st Inf., 35-0.

Action was plentiful in the 197th Sp. Bn. Nine games were played through Sept. 23. HHD, the champion of the Support Battalion's pre-season flag-football tourney, emerged as the pace setter in that battalion with a 4-1 won-lost slate.

The HHD team was followed in the standings by Co. H, 69th Armor, 3-1; Co. G, 69th Armor, 1-4; and, the 72nd Engr. Co., 0-4.

HHD squeaked by Co. G, 6-0; blasted the 72nd Engr. Co., in two contests, 52-0 and 19-6; and took a 7-6 overtime victory over Co. H. Co. H handed HHD their only loss, 19-13.

In the 2nd Bn., 10th Arty., HHS Btry. whitewashed Btry. A, 24-0.

Looking From The Bottom up

Sunday afternoon, Philadelphia rooters were being assured that the Eagles opening day loss to Cincinnati was no fluke. At the same time New York backers were becoming convinced that the Giants stunning upset of Green Bay the week before was just that.

In the City of Brotherly Love more than 65,000 paying customers, who obviously enjoy good comedy more than bad football, watched the hapless Eagles do everything wrong in a 42-6 loss to Dallas. The week before the Philadelphians had been as equally non-convincing in a 37-16 setback at the hands of the Cincinnati Bengals.

The Eagle fans haven't cornered the entire market on funny football, however. Just up the road the New York-New Jersey Giants finally began to live up to preseason billing after a surprising win the weekend before.

Called by one writer the worst team in pro football (he obviously hasn't had the opportunity to see the Eagles go though their paces), the Giants couldn't manage a touchdown as the Washington Redskins minus Sonny Jurgenson even-clobbered the punchless New Yorkers, 30-3.

Not to be outdone by their offensive counterparts, Giant defenders turned in an equally mediocre performance. Perhaps the recent uninspiring news that they will soon be departing the polluted air of New York for the smog-filled skies of New Jersey helped to uninspire the unenthusized Giants.

Don't Play That Song Again

Hopefully, Giant fans haven't forgotten the words to the song "Good Bye Allie," the stirring little melody that used to greet ex-New York mentor Allie Sherman each time he walked on the field. Sherman, like present day field boss Alex Webster, had his problems while he was holding the Giant reins.

With only a little alteration the song can be beautifully adapted for Webster's use. Like his predecessor, the current New York head man will be treated to many long, song-filled Sunday afternoons at Yankees Statium. He will soon know by heart the words to "Good Bye Alex."

Misery loves company, or so they say, and if that is the case then Gotham will have many unhappy residents who are gregariously inclined. This year Jet backers are crying in their beer as often as Giant followers.

With Joe Namath sidelined with another knee injury, the Jets are about as productive as an afternoon session of the Paris peace talks.

Al "Who?" is adequate at quarterback, but then so are 25 other backup signal-callers in the NFL. The Namathless Jets have managed only 10 points in two games thus far, and the only hope for the muscleless New Yorkers is for Broadway Joe to get a knee transplant and return to the starting lineup.

Its still to early to tell about Pittsburgh. The perennial NFL doormat looked true to form in an opening day loss to Chicago, but showed signs that it may be ready to become a mere mediocre team by downing favored Cincinatti 21-10.

Holbrook announces golf tourney

Golf professional Howard Holbrook announced that the Fort Benning Country Club Golf Course is holding its annual Fall Championship Tournament until October 24.

The format for the tournament this year is the same as for preceeding years. Players are placed into flights according to established handicaps. The lowest handicap players will play in the first flight and each succeeding flight will be filled with players having approximately the same handicap.

Competition will be match play within flights. A match will consist of 18-holes played on the Pine Side Course. Matches ending even at the competion of the regular round will be continued on the first hole and played until one player wins a hole. Each player will be required to play one match each week until he is eliminated or becomes the winner of his flight.

The championship will be decided by 36-holes played between the last two players remaining in the first flight.

Consolation flights will be made up of players who lose first round matches. Awards will be presented to the club champion, and runner up, the winner and runner up of each flight and the winner of each consolation flight.

The 1971 tournament will be the 43rd playing of the Fall Championship Tournament at the Country Club. Play began in 1926 and has been played every year since with the exception of 1943 and 1944.

Names of the champions and runners up are listed on a plaque hanging on the wall at the entrance to the club. Some of the names have become nationally and internationally known in military circles. In 1933, when the tournament was still young as a captain named Omar N. Bradley took the runner up place. He went on in his military career and became one of the nation's few five star generals and at this time is the only living man who carries this rank.

In 1934 Capt. George H. Becker won the championship and was runner up in 1935. This captain finished his Army career as Chief of Staff of the Army. Over the years many young officers who became generals before retirement had had their names engraved on the plaque.

Two players whose names are already on the plaque will be playing in the tournament this year. Maj. (ret.) Robert Himes won the championship in 1954 and 1960 and was runner up in 1968. Lt. Col. (ret.) George Hargrove, the other man has his name on the plaque more times than any other golfer. Hargrove won the tournament in 1959, '61, '64, '65, '66, '68 and '70. He will be the defending champion and the favorite to repeat for the seventh time.

USAMTU scores high in Quantico trap shoot

Sp4 Kenneth Blasi of the U.S Army Marksmanship Training Unit, (USAMTU), dropped only 13 birds in the four day, 200 bird annual Quantico Open Trap Shoot and grabbed the championship for the U.S. Army, Sunday.

Runner-up in the regional meet was Harry L. Skalsky of Bradley, Ill. a former member of the Marksmanship Unit with 282 while Capt. Kenneth Gilbert, Chief of the MTU Shotgun Division, placed third with 279.

Blasi gave his mixed field of top civilian and military competitors a hint of the final outcome during the firing of the first 100 birds when he posted a four point lead with his 97 birds, after two perfect rounds of 25 each. Skalsky was holding the runner-up spot with 93, while Rick McPherson of Eugene, Ore. was in third with 92.

The second day of individual competition saw a scramble of the leaders with McPherson porting a 97 and taking the lead with his total of 189. Blasi was one point back in the total but fell in the day's posting with his 91. Sp4 Donald Haldeman of the MTU grabbed the second day runner-up spot with his 94 while Jeff Williamson, a Pennsylvania contender, also fired a 94 for third. Skalsky who also fired a 94, was third in the total run with 187.

In the final 100 birds, Blasi breezed by his competitors and posted three rounds of perfect shooting while dropping only one bird as they hurdled from the bunkers for a 99, giving him his grand total of 287 and the championship. Gilbert was in the runner-up spot with his 97 while Skalsky was third with 95 birds.

U.S. Army four-man and two-man teams also grabbed the championships during the final day of shooting when they out classed a civilian team led by Skalsky. The four-man Army team consisted of Blasi, Haldeman, 2nd Lt. James M. Clawson and Sgt. Clark Normington.

The two-man U.S. Army team of Blasi and Haldeman outperformed a team of Art Goodman and Skalsky.

Some Of The Local SCCA Members Who Collected Trophies At Talladega

Local SCCA brings home 15 trophies

Alabama International Speedway, Talledega, Ala., Sept. 18-19, The Sports Car Club of America (SCCA), Southeast Division, held its first Solo II Championship competition on the infield road course here at the home of the Winston 500 over the weekend. The local SCCA chapter, CHAVAGA Region No. 38, entered 16 cars and 18 drivers in the 10 classes of competitors.

When the scream of high revving engines, screech of tortured tires, and the smoke of the racing gasoline faded into the Alabama sunset, CHAVAGA owned two 1971 SEDIV Championships, two second place finishes, and a host of other high finishers. All in all, the club brought home 15 trophies which are now sitting in places of honor in homes throughout Columbus, Fort Benning, and Albany, Ga.

This competition is unique in the automotive racing fraternity, true amateurs driving stock production cars (8 stock classes, 2 modified classes) which even include the exhaust emission control system if the car was produced with one installed.

Drivers run a road course which is structured to emphasize driving handling and skill as well as car performance, must offer no higher speed or hazard than is encounterd on public highways, and only one car is on the course at a time, running against an electronic timer which measures their times in thousands of a second.

Lt. Col. Al Malone of Fort Benning's USADC Infantry Agency who drove his Datsun 2000 roadster to the SEDIV 1971 Championship in Class C Production said, "At the end of the first day, we had 10 cars with drivers from seven states, all top Regional drivers, and only 4.6 seconds separated the first and the slowest car."

Seaman Richard Aid of the Albany NAS, who drove his Mazda R100 sedan to the SEDIV Championship in B Sedan, said, "I've only been driving in competition since early this summer; my car is just like it was the day I drove it out of the dealer's lot, and I thought this would just be a lot of fun and good experience to drive against the top drivers from throughout the Southeastern United States."

Capt. Bill Roe of Fort Benning drove his Triumph TR 6 to second place in D Production and Larry Callaway of Columbus drove his Austin Healey Sprite to second place in B Production.

Capt. Chuck Merrill, Porsche 356SC, and Capt. Doug Frey, Datsun 2000, both of Fort Benning, placed 3rd and 4th in C Production.

CHAVAGA Region thus placed 1st, 3rd and 4th in that class, the highest finish in any class for a Region's three allowed entries.

Lt. Col. Malone, Capt. Merrill and Capt. Frey, engaged in a hard fought battle for the yearly club championship in Class C, said that they welcome competition in the local meets held at Fort Benning and at Albany NAS, visiting drivers can be assured that they are competing against the best in the southeastern U.S.

Capt. Lynn Stover, of Company Operations, USAIS, is the regional executive (president) of CHAVAGA and was justifiably proud of the records established by club drivers. (Stover's wife, Nancy, brought home a trophy in Ladies Class). He emphasized the safety aspect of the driving competition, the enjoyment for both drivers and spectators, and was quick to note that SCCA feels that perhaps the most important aspect of the competition was often overlooked, the training for the drivers. "With the emphasis on driver skill and conditions encountered on the public highway, driver skill is enhanced by participation in this Solo II Competition," he said.

Stover also pointed out that his is the same type of course that several driving schools use for training and that a number of state highway patrols teach their patrolmen defensive driving.

Collins' party lands 14 pound mackerel

The Special Services deep sea fishing boat "Follow Me" carried five fishing parties into the Gulf last week in search of bonito and king mackerel.

According to SSgt. Ernest Green, skipper of the "Follow Me," the best catches were made by parties arranged by Col. Ceasar Lopez, Martin Army Hospital and MSgt. (ret.) Benjamin Collins, 2941 Emory Street, Columbus.

The party headed by Collins brought in 18 king mackerel and 12 bonito while Col. Lopez landed 17 kings and 8 bonito.

Largest of the fish landed was a 14-pound king mackerel taken by Collins and his party.

Some hunters seem to be confused concerning the daily opening hour for dove hunting on the Alabama portion of the reservation. Opening hour for hunting is regulated by the official time for the time zone in which hunting is to take place. Hunting is not permitted on the Alabama side of the reservation until noon Central Daylight Savings Time. Georgia is now using Eastern Daylight Savings Time which is one hour earlier than the Central time. After 2 a.m., Sunday, Oct. 31 when Standard Time goes into effect hunters will be governed by the official Standard Time of the time zone in which they are hunting.

Archery Deer Seasons Open

The special deer season for archers opens on Georgia side of the military reservation today and on the Alabama side Oct. 15.

The bag limit for Georgia is two bucks or one buck and one doe or anterless deer. The Alabama bag limit is two bucks. The antiers of the deer must be three inches or more before it can be classified as a buck.

The deer seasons and bag limits get complicated especially when you try to keep up with the regulations for two states.

The special archery season will end in Georgia on Oct. 31. The regular season opens Nov. 6 and closes Jan. 1. Bows and shotguns may be used for hunting during the regular season. The bag limit during the regular season is two bucks. Georgia will have two "either sex seasons" both falling within the period of the regular season. During these seasons hunters may take one buck and one doe or anterless deer. The "either sex seasons" will run from Dec. 18 to Jan. 1 in the reservation areas falling within the geographic limits of Chattahoochee County Georgia and from Dec. 25 until Jan. 1 in all parts of the reservation within the Georgia state boundaries.

Archers may hunt deer on the Alabama portion of the reservation from Oct. 15 through Jan. 15. From Nov. 15 until Jan. 15 hunting with shotguns is also permitted. The bag limit for Alabama is two bucks per season except during the period Dec. 25 to Jan. 1. During this period hunters may take one buck and one doe or anterless deer.

All this sounds like a lot of deer in the freezer but these open seasons and bag limits don't mean you can take deer during each of the seasons. EACH HUNTER MAY TAKE TWO DEER FROM THE ENTIRE RESERVATION DURING THE 1971-1972 HUNTING SEASON. When you get two of any type you are through hunting deer for the season.

Follow Administrative Procedures

Personnel who intend to hunt on the reservation should be familiar with the rules and regulations. These are outlined in United States Infantry Center Regulations 210-2 and Circular 210-4.

Be sure you have all the permits required before you take to the fields. All of these may be obtained at the Rod and Gun Club located on First Division Road about one-quarter mile south of Hwy. 27 in the Harmony Church Area. The club is the only place authorized to issue post hunting and fishing permits. They also have all the other permits, licenses and deer tags required by post regulations. You have to stop here for the post permit so you may as well get all of the other papers at the same time. Tell the man at the counter what you intend to do and he will know which permits you need. He can also brief you on the procedures to follow if you are one of the fortunate hunters who get a deer.

The regulations concerning these procedures are often violated. Many hunters are not aware that all deer regardless of where they are taken on the reservation must be tagged immediately with Georgia State Deer Tag. Another regulation often violated is the one requiring that hunters bring all deer harvested on the reservation to the check point operated by the Post Fish and Game unit. This check point is located at Bldg. 5883, just off First Division Road in the Harmony Church Area. The Fish and Game Personnel weigh the animals, inspect them to detect signs of disease in the post deer population and keep a record of the number of animals brought to the station. Data compiled at the check station is considered when open seasons and bag limits for succeeding years are determined.

Doughboys sweep Campbell pair

The race for the Western Division championship of the 3rd Army Handball League continued to be a three team contest as all three leaders won two games from opponnets over last weekend.

The Fort Benning Doughboys won two games from the Ft. Campbell Eagles by scores of 20 to 17 and 24 to 11 while the Ft. McPherson team, tied with Benning for the Western Division lead won two games from Ft. Rucker by scores of 29 to 19 and 19 to 9. Ft. McClellan, the other remaining contender was awarded two wins by forfeit from Redstone Arsenal.

Fort Benning and Ft. McPherson are now tied for first place with records of 13 wins against 3 losses. The McClellan team is just one game behind with 10 wins and 4 losses. Ft. Rucker and Ft. Campbell are now mathematically out of the running for one of the first two positions in the division. Rucker has had 6 wins and 8 losses and Campbell has 4 wins and 10 losses.

Benning wasn't first Army post in this area

Fort Benning was not the first Army post in this area. Ft. Mitchell, just across the Chattahoochee River on the Alabama side, was the first infantry post built here.

The fort, named after David Brydie Mitchell, the governor of Georgia from 1811 to 1812, hasn't been used since the 15th Alabama Regiment had a brief training period in 1861.

During the Creek Indian uprisings in 1813 Gen. John Floyd and 1,200 Georgia militiamen crossed the Chattahoochee and built Ft. Mitchell. The post served as a staging area for attacks on Indian villages along the Tallapoosa River.

After the Battle of Horseshoe Bend, all the Indians were settled in a narrow strip between the Chattahoochee River and the Line Creek just east of present day Montgomery. For the next 10 years an uneasy peace prevailed.

In the 1820's white settlers began to move into this area taking land, crops and hunting refuge from the Indians. The government sent regular troops to Ft. Mitchell in 1825 to help protect the Indians. Men of the 4th Infantry regiment were stationed here from then through 1837 to protect the Indians.

Ft. Mitchell was more than a military post and Indian Agency, it was also the home of Crowell's Tavern. The famous tavern was a stop on the federal road which ran from Augusta across Georgia and Alabama to Mobile.

After the Indians were moved to Kansas and Oklahoma the fort lost its importance and troops were moved out in 1840. It was not used again until the beginning of the Civil War when the Alabama regiment used it for the brief time in 1861.

Among the most famous men to visit it, were Lafayette, the Revolutionary War hero and Francis Scott Key, author of the wrds to our National Anthem.

Today the Russell County Historical Association is seeking to restore Ft. Mitchell.

Col. (ret.) Albert Taylor, county engineer and David W. Chase, archeologist and first curator of the Infantry Museum started work July 20.

The excavation has found footing lines of the 1825 post, ditches of the 1813 post and over 10,000 artifacts both military and nonmilitary.

Artillerymen support civic action program

A group of soldiers from HHC, 2nd Bn., 10th Fld. Arty., of the 197th Inf. Bde., spent seven days during mid-September preparing a vacant lot for use as a city park in Tifton, Ga.

The soldiers, under the direction of Sgt. Wilson Dent, cleared the lot of brush and litter, then leveled the plot.

The soldiers finished their phase of the project Sept. 21 so that volunteer workers from the First United Methodist Church of Tifton could begin installing playground equipment. Eventually, the people of Tifton hope to erect concrete tennis and basketball courts on the site.

Shortly after the artillerymen began the project, Lt. Col. James W. Wurman, 2nd Bn., 10th Fld. Arty., commander, spoke to Tifton Rotary Club members on unit-of-choice recruiting, domestic action, and other aspects of the Modern Volunteer Army.

Rangers hold formal dinner

The officers of the Benning Ranger Committee, Ranger Department, U. S. Army Infantry School, took a step backward by reviving the Dining-In, an old Army tradition of formal dining of the old Regimental Officers Mess.

The Dining-In was held in the Benning and Corregidor Rooms of the Main Officers Open Mess. The guest of honor was Col. David E. Grange, Ranger Department director.

The Dining-In was complete with a ceremonial posting and retiring of colors by NCOs of the Benning Ranger Committee assisted by a bugler and drummer from the Infantry Center Band.

CHAMPUS forms needed for new fiscal year

With a new fiscal year beginning July 1 beneficiaries of the Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services (CHAMPUS) must obtain their new annual outpatient deductible certificates before the government can share in the payment for outpatient health care received in the new fiscal year.

Under the CHAMPUS cost-sharing concept, the deductible must be met by the beneficiary each fiscal year (July 1-June 30) before the government can begin paying its share of the cost for outpatient care.

Under the outpatient portion of CHAMPUS, services of physicians and other authorized health care personnel and the cost of prescription legend drugs and insulin are covered.

Annual deductible certificates are issued by the various CHAMPUS fiscal agents in each of the states, Washington, D. C., Canada and Mexico, upon receiving itemized bills or receipts for authorized health care and services.

All CHAMPUS beneficiaries must pay for the first $50 of outpatient health care received each fiscal year. If benefits are claimed for two or more members of a family the maximum deductible charge is $100 per family group each fiscal year.

Dependents of active duty personnel then pay 20 per cent of the charges in excess of the deductible for outpatient care, while retirees, their dependents and dependents of deceased active duty and retired personnel pay 25 per cent of the charges in excess of the deductible.

2 Columbus residents get 50-hour pins

Two Columbus residents recently received their 50-hour service pins for their volunteer work in the Army Community Services ACS Welcome Center here.

Mrs. Phyllis Traynham, a widow and mother of 3 school-aged children also does volunteer work for the Columbus Medical Center, the Columbus Boy Scouts, and with the children's choir of her church. Mrs. Traynham learned of ACS through the papers and does her volunteer work for enjoyment, to be useful, and to be around people.

Mrs. Agnes M. Davis, also a widow, is the mother of 3 married children. She is resident manager of Midtown Square Apartments and does volunteer work for St. Francis Hospital, the Columbus Medical Center, and her church.

Post engineers take part in civic affairs

A group of men from the 72nd Engr. Co., 197th Spt. Bn., 197th Inf. Bde., spent a week at the Boys Club in Gainesville, Fla., in late September clearing a vacant lot to be used as a recreation area.

Eight of the engineers used a front loader, a road grader, a bull dozer and two dump trucks to level the undeveloped plot into baseball fields and a playground.

The men were doing the domestic action project in an attempt to become more involved in the civic affairs and problems of the civilian community.

Rover Junior

Pvt. Roland Torralba, TSB, tries out the "Seat Belt Convincer," Rover Junior. Post Safety had the contraption built to emphasize the importance of wearing seat belts. The demonstration vehicle reaches a speed of eight miles per hour and comes to an abrupt and complete stop which not only rattles the rider's teeth but also makes him appreciate the seat belt. The Bayonet hopes you won't forget to wear your seat belt if you travel during the upcoming three-day weekend but we hope you stay on post where it is safer and take advantage of the Special Service activities listed on page 17.

President OKs military pay raise

President Nixon has signed the draft extension bill, H.R. 6531, which also includes a military pay raise amendment.

The bill authorizes the extension of the draft—which expired June 30—for two additional years, and makes provisions that could reinstate the draft authority immediately.

The pay proposals approved by the President represent the most significant improvements in military pay to be developed since the military pay schedule was restructured in 1958.

White House sources have indicated that this pay raise for military personnel designed to stimulate enlistments and the move to volunteer armed forces would go into effect Nov. 13 when the wage-price freeze ends.

While the increase focuses mainly on first-termer pay (86.2 per cent of basic pay and 71.1 per cent of total compensation) careerists are not ignored.

The bill substantially improves service attraction and will concurrently have an important impact on retention of expensively-trained, highly-skilled personnel.

First termers will find their basic pay increasing an average of 60 per cent. Basic pay for E-1 will increase 100 per cent from from $134 per month to $268.

Some 50,000 junior officers and 1.4 million enlisted men on active duty will be affected by the basic pay raise.

In addition to basic pay raises, H.R. 6531 provides an appropriate Dependents Assistance Act allowance increase for some 270,000 junior enlisted personnel in pay grade E-4 and below, and provides single and married rates in much the same manner as the increases in Basic Allowance for Quarters provided for the remainder of the force.

Since the bill came to the Senate floor May 6, it was the subject of 64 amendments, 400 speeches and hours of debate, delay and threatened filibusters.

Its passage was termed a major victory for the bill's floor manager, Senator John Stennis (D-Miss.), chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, who had backed it for more than half a year of committee and floor deliberations.

Birth control questions answered by telephone family planning service

By Nancy Willard

The results of a recent survey indicate that many military wives have questions about birth control methods.

The Army Health Nursing Service, has instituted a Telephone Family Planning Counseling and Information Service to answer some of these questions. Monday through Friday, from 8 a.m. to noon and 1-5 p.m., family planning information and assistance can be obtained by dialing 545-4041.

This service will not replace any of the services now offered by the OB-GYN Clinic. Every woman is encouraged to have regular physical examinations and to seek medical attention when problems arise.

The telephone service is for those with questions or problems that can be handled by a nurse over the telephone. The Army Health Nurses are being prepared for this by the OB-GYN staff, and they will refer to a doctor, problems which are beyond their scope of information.

Bond participation

Brig. Gen. Paul F. Gorman (L), assistant commandant of the Infantry School, receives the Minuteman Flag from Mr. Roy Cousins, deputy director, Savings Bond Division, State of Georgia, U.S. Treasury Department. The award was presented Sept. 24 in recognition of the 96.4 per cent participation in the Savings Bond Program of the 5th Battalion (OC), TSB. The battalion was also the recipient of the Secretary of the Army's Savings Bond Award and the 3rd Army Savings Bond Award.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

by Bill King

The addition of a little citrus juice or vinegar to the cooking liquid cuts down on fish odors in the kitchen.

In the trade, a bunch of bananas as it is cut from the stalk is called a "hand" and the individual bananas are referred to as "fingers".

A cup of chopped bean sprouts mixed into a pound of hamburger adds extra nutrition as well as a pleasant new taste. Season with soy sauce instead of salt.

Eggs scrambled with sauteed green pepper strips provide a satisfying snack for the midnight kitchen-raider in the family.

When choosing a pumpkin for pie or other eating purposes, pick a small one that is deep yellow-orange with a fine-grained shell.

Oral maintenance program begins

The Army's Oral Health Maintenance Program for the seven Fort Benning Post Elementary Schools will begin Oct. 18. The self-application program will start in the Edward A. White School and continue until early in November.

Each classroom will be visited by personnel from the USA Dental Unit of Fort Benning. They will supervise the self-application brushing and will also present proper methods of home dental care, such as good brushing habits and use of disclosing tablets as means of dental plaque control, which in turn means controlling the rate of dental ills.

Each student will be provided with a toothbrush, the special stannous fluoride preventive dentistry paste, a cup of water for mouth and brush rinsing, an empty cup for waste water and paper towels for use at the child's desk.

CTC set up to inprocess, help

By Steve Partridge

The 197th Infantry Brigade has launched a two-fold program to aid soldiers by establishing the Central Training Command (CTC).

Located in the Harmony Church area, CTC has two main functions—aiding 197th in-processing soldiers and assisting drug abusers.

Orientation classes concerning the 197th and a rigorous physical training program are also conducted during the two-week course.

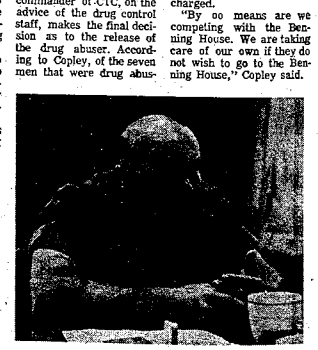
For the newly assigned 197th soldier, CTC has eliminated many time consuming in-processing days. During the first week, the man completes his 197th in-processing procedure and is counseled on his personal problems by the CTC staff. The second week of training consists of orientation classes, a final physical training test, and a graduation exercise.

Upon graduation from the course, the man joins his unit and assumes his regular unit responsibilities.

The drug abuser follows a slightly different schedule, although he, too, must graduate from CTC before assuming his regular unit duties.

Individual counseling, classes on drug abuse and control, and group therapy sessions are conducted during the drug abuser's stay at CTC. The classes and counseling sessions are given by the four-man CTC drug control staff, three of whom are former drug abusers.

Upon verification that the man uses drugs, whether freely admitted by the individual or by the urinalysis test, the soldier, if assigned to the 197th, can choose between the Benning House or CTC training.



If the man enters the Benning House, he participates in the 60-day resident program. The 60-day program consists of 30 days restriction and 30 days limited restriction. The drug abuser works with his unit during the day and stays at the Benning House at night during the 60-day period.

If the soldier chooses to attend CTC, his desire to readjust to Army life constitutes the basic factor that will determine his release from CTC.

In CTC no restrictions are imposed on the drug abuser although he is encouraged to place limited restrictions on himself. If the drug abuser leaves the CTC area, he is accompanied by one of the drug control counselors.

Capt. Jay C. Copley, the commander of CTC, on the advice of the drug control staff, makes the final decision as to the release of the drug abuser. According to Copley, of the seven men that were drug abusers, four soldiers are back in their units performing regular duties. One man chose to attend the Benning House. One soldier is attending CTC training. The remaining soldier has been discharged.

"By no means are we competing with the Benning House. We are taking care of our own if they do not wish to go to the Benning House," Copley said.

Questions of a purely military nature which obviously could be answered more properly by commanders or supervisors within the chain of command will not be accepted. All questions must be signed with current unit of assignment indicated. Send questions to the Bayonet, ATTN: SFC Bob Edwards, Room 602, Infantry Hall or telephone 545-4792.)

Many calls have been received by Byline Bayonet relating to the effect the Wage Price Freeze has on longevity increases, for members who are paid under JUMPS-Army.

In order to put some light on the subject, the following excerpts are quoted from Department of the Army Message 021900Z, for your information.

Part I, paragraph 2. "Due to computer programming requirements, members who become eligible for a longevity increase during September 1971 and who are otherwise not exempt from the provisions of the wage price freeze (e.g. in a hostile fire zone) will be paid the longevity increase in their September end of month pay.

"A collection action will be placed against their October pay to recoup the September overpayment. Simultaneously, a second collection action will be placed against the member's October pay to recoup the amount of additional longevity being paid for the month of October. In effect, the second collection action results in no impact to the member.

"For months subsequent to October, or until the end of the wage-price freeze, the computer will both pay and collect the amount normally due to a member entitled to a longevity increase."

Part I, paragraph 3 — "The same procedures will apply to members who become eligible for longevity increases in subsequent months until termination of the wage-price freeze."

Part I, paragraph 4 — "Commanders will insure that members paid under JUMPS-Army, who become eligible for longevity increases and are not exempt from the wage-price freeze are advised promptly of the above procedures. To prevent undue hardship, members should be advised to adjust their personal budgets accordingly."

Unquote: Effective as of September 1, personnel who are on duty in a designated hostile fire zone or hospitalized as a result of hostile fire, to include members re-hospitalized as a direct result of wounds incurred in a hostile fire zone, are exempt from the wage-price freeze.

Q — How does a veteran or serviceman go about getting a loan?

A — He should, 1) Obtain a Certificate of Eligibility from the nearest Vetrans Administration Regional Office, 2) Find a mobile home of his choice which meets VA standards, 3) Arrange for rental or purchase of a mobile-home lot, 4) Apply to a lender for a loan.

Tips offered to potential car buyers

USAIC LEGAL ASSISTANCE OFFICE — The automobile industry has grown in such leaps and bounds since its conception 50 years ago that we Americans now consider the automobile a necessity rather than a luxury. However, it is a statistical fact that the automobile is the 2nd largest purchase the average American will ever make, second only to his home. It is for this reason that particular care and time should be taken before purchasing the family car, or that "drea mcar."

The following are some tips to potential car buyers:

a. Buy within your price range. Don't buy a Cadillac on a Volkswagon salary.

b. Determine what your budget will allow in monthly installments. Remember that if you finance your car most financing agreements provide for an acceleration in payment upon default, i.e., if you are delinquent in paying any of your installments, the balance becomes due immediately. These agreements further provide that the secured party may repossess and sell the car to obtain the payment. The buyer remains liable for any remaining deficiency.

c. Buy only from reputable dealers. You can verify this by checking with the Better Business Bureau and Automobile Dealers Association in your area.

d. When buying a used car, check the book value of the particular year and model you are considering. You may not be getting the "deal" the salesman would have you believe.

e. Have a qualified mechanic examine and test drive any used car you wish to buy. The few dollars he charges for such a service may save you a great deal of money and anguish.

f. Any agreement made with the dealer should be reduced to writing. Verbal promises are seldom enforceable and often broken.

Should the serviceman encounter difficulty keeping up his payments, the Soldiers and Sailors Civil Relief Act affords certain protective measures. If he has purchased the car before entering military service, the Act provides that the buyer may obtain judicial relief if his ability to pay has been "materially affected" by his military obligation. However, such relief is only temporary and at such time as he returns to civilian employment he must pay the current installments and make good any deficiency in his account. If the service member buys his car while in the military, the Acts provisions are less protective, on the theory that the buyer is entering the agreement with a full awareness of his financial position.

Consider the above facts when buying your car. If you have any questions at all concerning such a purchase, see the legal assistance officer for advice.

Race relations, a serious problem

By Keith L. Christensen

It seems that every periodical we pick up these days contains hundreds or thousands of words directed at the inadequate way our society has dealt with race relations. There is a very valid reason for that, I think. It is the most serious problem our generation will ever confront.

The tenets of our republic, the very basic freedoms upon which this country is founded are being tested by the issues involved in our admixture of blacks and whites.

We must learn how all can be afforded the equalities guaranteed us without violation of those equalities to any. It is a challenge which each of us should consciously face in all our activities. The many failures which have marred our progress in recent years must teach us to do better in the months and years immediately ahead.

I think all of us in uniform can be justly proud that our military forces have led the way in American society in guaranteeing equality of treatment to all our citizens.

Despite that, we are painfully aware that we must continue to make progress — that despite the great strides which have been taken, we must quicken our efforts—that much remains we can do.

Perhaps some wonder what, how, where? And, of course, that's the guts of the problem. I have enough faith in our society to believe that if a majority in this country had recognized inequality of opportunity for what it was, restitution would have begun sooner and without violence. We have just now reached the threshold of understanding that inequality has, in fact, existed.

We have just now reached the point where public admissions are made that elements of our society have not always enjoyed all the freedoms they were guaranteed. And all we need to continue our progress is communication. There are better solutions to problems than those which are reached through violence. It is important to all of us that we collectively seek those solutions.

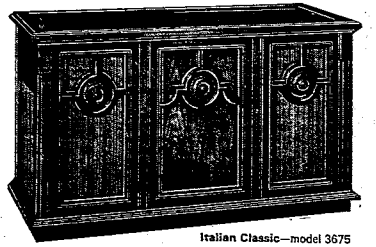
Drug Abuse Prevention

President Nixon proclaimed the week of Oct. 3-9 as the second annual Drug Abuse Prevention Week.

All Army commanders are urged to disseminate drug information to anyone having a drug problem. The Benning House number is 545-LIVE.



In the strongly worded proclamation President Nixon appealed to Americans to ". . . rededicate ourselves to the well being of America's youth: that we may so teach them, so guide them, so reach out to them in understanding and compassion, as to help them avoid the problems that rise while seeking maturity."

Advance course wives hold U.N. luncheon

"World Through a Keyhole" was the theme of the United Nations Smorgasbord luncheon sponsored by the wives of the Infantry Officer's Avanced Course (IOAC) Class 6 - 71 Sept. 30.

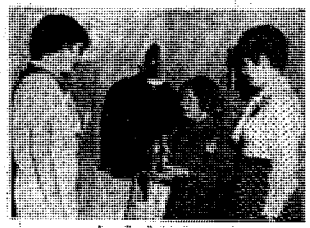
The decorations portrayed the scenic beauty and interesting products of Europe, Latin America, the Orient, Middle East, and Africa. To accent the international tour, Latin American and Japanese dancers performed in their native costumes. United Nation's flags and a centerpiece of fall flowers adorned the head table.

Special guests included Mrs. Orwin C. Talbott, Mrs. Paul F. Gorman, Mrs. Kenneth Barlow Jr., and Mrs. A. G. Norris.

Mrs. Boyd Burkholder, the student wife hostess, arranged an interesting and enjoyable luncheon at the Supper Club for the 120 ladies in attendance.

'Patriots' congregate for fall church social

What could be better than a big Sunday get together over dinner with friends after church? Especially when the dinner is a feast with more than 100 friends.



This was the case for the personnel and families of the 1st Bn. (Mech.), 58th Inf., "Patriots" Sept 26.

Following church services people started gathering at the "Patriot" picnic area with sights set on a hearty Sunday dinner.

Sponsoring the church social was HHC, whose mess hall provided beans, potato salad, and drinks.

The wives prepared a feast of chicken, ham, and roast beef and other entrees. Food was served buffet-style, so everyone had their plates loaded down with a little of everything.

Ice-cream and popsicles were on hand for the kids, along with games to keep them happy.

And this is. . .

385 attend fall family picnic

On Sept. 26 the Platoon Tactics Committee, Co. Opns. Dept., held their fall family picnic at the USAIC recreation area. Approximately 185 adults and 200 children attended the picnic according to the program director, Capt. Curt Chismark.

The program was kicked-off when the committee chairman Lt. Col. Duane Cameron, tapped the first keg of drought beer and tasted its contents to insure that its quality was appropriate for consumption. There were plenty of soft drinks for the younger set.

A buffet serving line was prepared which included hamburgers, hot dogs and fresh fish aplenty. Chicken and all of the trimmings was also served. The wives of the instructors provided all of the covered dishes including a variety of salads baked beans, cakes and pastries.

Games were arranged for the younger set from infants to teen-agers. There were toys and prizes for both girl and boy participants.

Following the games, the free fall team from the Fort Benning Sport Parachute Club jumped into the recreation area from an helicopter. One man, 1st Lt. Michael R. Barnes, Tower Committee, Abn. Dept., made a water jump into the Upatoi Creek. Athletic contests were held throughout the afternoon including volleyball, horseshoes, beer drinking and badminton. Each Sub-Committee was represented by a team for each contest. Winners were awarded engraved plaques for their efforts.

The Offense Sub-Committee won the volleyball and horseshoe competition, while Headquarters won the badminton and Defense won the beer drinking contests.

Chismark said, "the entire day just couldn't have been better for all concerned, because the women and children enjoyed themselves throughout the day with games and prepared food. And the men didn't even miss their Sunday afternoon football games, due to the efforts of the recreation committee's prior planning in having a portable television on the spot."

Tot Town nursery reassures mom

By Kathy Wright

Ask a child what he did at the nursery, and he's likely to mutter something about red jello, fully satisfied that that is all mom needs to know. There are, however, many other things to reassure mom that her children are well cared for at Fort Benning's Tot Town nursery.

The nursery, under the direction of Mrs. Diana (Edgar M.) Kelley, provides babysitting service for children from age 6 months, and has some day care children for working mothers. Mrs. Kelley, a matter-of-fact-lady, recommends that parents bring their children in and look over the nursery before leaving children.

"Then if they like it, they can use it," says Mrs. Kelley. "If parents are happy with the nursery, the child can feel it and is more content."

Children entering the nursery are divided into three groups, according to age — babies, toddlers, and school-age children. Activities and staff-child ratios are arranged accordingly.

Tot Town is stocked with toys and games, and has two out-door playgrounds. The nursery is not a school, and no teaching progfam is offered.

When a child is checked into Tot Town, his registration card is punched in a time clock. The card also contains any special instructions about snacks, naps and meals.

Nursery attendants range from college students to grandmothers. Tot Town conducts its own training program for nursery workers, who are largely military dependents. Mrs. Kelley handles staffing and training for the nursery.

"We don't look for college degrees," says Mrs. Kelley, "Those we hire have to like children, and have the sort of personality which blends well with children, and the patience of Job."

The training program consists of a number of workshops for the new attendants, including sessions in handling children, relations with parents and activities such as toys and games.

There is also a semi-annual workshop in first aid for children, conducted by Martin Army Hospital staff.

In addition to its regular program, Tot Town has several extra services for parents. Children can be taken to and picked up from post schools if prior arrangements are made. The nursery runs a regular pick up service from White, Dexter, Patch and Pre-Kindergarten schools.

Any group who would like the nursery to be open later than usual may make arrangements with the nursery at least 48 hours in advance, and they must guarantee the nursery at least $10 an hour.

Tot Town is open from 7:30 a.m. to midnight on Monday and Wednesday and from 7:30 a.m. to 7 p.m. on Tuesday and Thursday. Friday's hours are from 7:30 a.m. to 1 a.m. and Saturday from 9 a.m. to 1 a.m. Sunday the nursery opens at 8:45 a.m. and closes at 1:15 p.m.

The general rate is 50 cents an hour per child. However, a registration card can be purchased for $1 a year which entitles parents to a lower rate.

Children of military personnel, civilian employes, and their houseguests are accepted by the nursery if the child is at least 6-months-old. Smaller babies are only kept for the mother's six-week check up, and on Sunday mornings. Exceptional children are accepted after consultation with Mrs. Kelley. All children must have up-to-date shot records.

Tot Town is a private, non-profit organization sponsored by the Daughters of the United States Army (DUSA). Plans are currently underway to build a second nursery in the PX-Commissary complex to be built on Santa Fe Road.

RIVERSIDE

The Home Of The Commanding General, Riverside, Was One Of The Homes Visited By The Ladies Of BBOD

BBOD

"Oh, Isn't that unusual," was heard over and over again on the morning of Sept. 24, when some 100 ladies of BBOD took the first tour of post homes to be held in recent years at Fort Benning.

The tour was the high point of the fall luncheon, sponsored by the Tactics Group of BBOD. The homes of Mrs. Orwin C. Talbott, Mrs. David B. Conard, Mrs. Edwin L. Standley, Mrs. Robert P. Hatcher, Mrs. James E. Miller, and Mrs. James L. Davies Jr., all differently decorated and depicting varied Army life, were graciously opened to the ladies on the tour.

The ladies left the Country Club early in the day and returned tired, but enthused, for a social hour before lunch. The honored guest was Mrs. Paul Gorman, wife of the assistant commandant of the Infantry School. Special guests were Mrs. Richard Stoltz and the ladies whose homes were open for the tour.

Mrs. Douglas E. Haviland was in charge of decorating for the luncheon. The handsome items of home furnishings that were located on the tables were loaned to her by local Columbus merchants. Mrs. Lawrence L. Mowery introduced the newcomers to BBOD, and gave special thanks to Mrs. James F. Cochran, Mrs. Robert B. Carmichael, Mrs. J. H. Johnson, and Mrs. Alvin T. Wilson for their assistance.

USAMTU

Mrs. Robert K. Hartley was the hostess for the USAMTU ladies' monthly coffee held recently. The hostess' artistic touch was demonstrated in name tags decorated with bright, vari-colored leaves, which she distributed to the guests as they arrived at her home.

Fall leaves seemed to reflect a note of reluctant farewells to Mrs. Willis L. Powell, Mrs. Robert K. Hartley and Mrs. Gregory L. Dalton. As a gesture of fond memories and best wishes for the future, Mrs. Robert M. Piper, representing the ladies of the USAMTU, presented each with an engraved silver dish.

An enthusiastic welcome was extended to Mrs. James M. Clawson, whose hometown is Missoula, Montana. Mrs. Clawson and her husband have just arrived from Ft. Gordon Ga.

Approximately 15 ladies attended the Sept. 21 event. Discussions concerning rapid progress on a number of unique bazaar projects were held.

In closing the meeting, cold, refreshing sherbet balls of various flavors and variety of delectable pastries were served with a choice of coffee, iced tea or coke. A tantalizing centerpiece of sugar glazed fresh fruit garnished the table.

CO. OP. DEPT.

On Sept. 28, the officers' wives of Department Headquarters held a monthly luncheon for the Company Operations Department in the Supper Club.

Following the luncheon, a fashion show was presented through the courtesy of Loveman's. Twenty separate ensembles were modeled, ranging from casual to after-five wear, with Mrs. Pemberton acting as fashion commentator, and Mrs. Holmes as fashion coordintor.

Models were chosen from each committee, and included Mrs. Kevin Corcoran, Mrs. Richard Heroux, Mrs. William Hopkins, Mrs. Jerry Martin and Mrs. Lesley Witmer.

Welcomed into the group were Mrs. Robert Fallett, Mrs. John J. Gannon, Mrs. Fred Gruhe and Mrs. Malcom Montgomery.

Farewells were extended to Mrs. Richard Bradbury and Mrs. Dennis Moquin. Guests included Mrs. Frank Garrison and Mrs. William Warren.

LEADERSHIP DEPT.

"An Evening in Hawaii" was the theme chosen by the ladies of the Hq. Com. Leadership Department, USAIS, for the Nov. 2 department wives' function. Mrs. Patrick J. Lalley was hostess for the evening coffee on Sept. 23 in which the ladies of headquarters planned the up-coming November function.

Mrs. William B. Steele, wife of director of the Leadership Dept., welcomed Mrs. Edward F. Flora Jr. to the committee and said farewell to Mrs. Billy E. Rutherford who is joining the ladies of Leadership Committee.

An arrangement of dried flowers centered the dessert table which offered apple pie ala'mode, mixed nuts and fruit candies.

Mrs. Victor Russell volunteered to have the next coffee scheduled for Oct. 19.

Telephone reservations will be accepted for the Oct. 13 luncheon. Please notify your unit reservation chairman immediately and "Follow Us" to the mod fashion show. Any questions concerning new reservations policies will be answered by Mrs. Gordon M. Hunt, 545-7349.

Pediatric patients were entertained by the Baker High School Gamma Tri-Hi-Y Sept. 29. The students also brought refreshments and decorations for the children on Ward A2. Arrangements were coordinated by Emilia Butts, community project chairman. Shown are (L to R) Gordon Evans, son of SFC and Mrs. Donald E. Artist 'captures likenesses, emotions' in silhouettes

By Fm-line staff writer

Silhouette cutting is almost an extinct profession. Best described as the outline of an object filled in with a uniform color, generally black, these portraitures were fashionable substitutes for the more expensive paintings in the 18th century.

Fortunately, several silhouette artists are still at work. One is Kathie Housel Bogue whose silhouettes are realistic enough to make a portrait seem unnecessary. A remarkable cutter, who works entirely freehand with doubled paper and scissors, Kathie requires only minutes to produce a design ready to frame.

Kathie, a new resident of Fort Benning, inherited her talent from her mother, the renowned silhouettist, Katherine Marsh Housel. Kathie is one of four daughters of the Housel family who has developed her artistic talents into a profession. She has "dabbled" in cutting since childhood.

Only when her husband, Capt. Hardy Z. Housel III, "harassed me to do this — or rather, encouraged me," did Kathie really apply herself. Her scrapbook is filled with features about her unusual talent. In one article Kathie is credited with producing not only "remarkable likenesses of her subjects, but she also captures their emotions."

Kathie developed her own technique of silhouette cutting through experimenting and watching her mother work. "I discovered I could make an exact replica of a subject," Kathie explains, "by beginning to cut at the front of the neck, going on to the face, then to the back of the head and to the back of the neck." By using the reverse of her mother's method, Kathie snips away while her subject is being put at ease with relaxed chatter. The finished product is the result of only a few minutes spent with the artist and seemingly little effort.

"Children sometimes are easier to work with as they are usually more relaxed," says Kathie, and she doesn't insist that they keep still. Even down to the last curl, Kathie is so precise in her work that she gives the viewer an exact idea of her subject's frontal expression. This is an incredible accomplishment since only the profile is seen in the portrait. Such details are partly achieved by Kathie's equipment: "I use iris scissors — the kind the doctor uses when he operates on people's eyes."

Does her talent extend into other fields of art? Kathie insists not, but does find satisfaction in painting and sketching. "I get the engineering wrong in sculpture," she contends. Vitally interested in antiques, Kathie prefers to "cut" in the midst of a cultural event such as an antique or art show. Much of her knowledge about antiques has come from attending shows and listening to the buyers' conversations while pursuing her work.

Custer Road-Lindsay Creek

931st Engineers construct series of detours

Engineers from Co. D, 43rd Engr. Bn., 931st Engineer Group are presently working to construct a series of detours connecting Custer Rd. to the Lindsey Creek By-Pass.

According to 1st Lt. Robert Tillman, Co. D. construction officer, the project is being completed in two sections.

The first section consists of constructing a four-lane asphalt topped detour road to take traffic coming down Custer Rd. from the Custer Terrace area out to the Lindsey Creek Bypass. Work on this section is due to be ready for paving on Oct. 11.

The other section of the project is to construct a two-lane detour road taking the Sand Hill traffic on Custer Rd. to the Lindsey Creek Bypass. Construction on this phase is due to be completed and ready for paving on Oct. 15.

The engineers will also be constructing 90 feet of 72-inch culvert for drainage purposes on the Sand Hill side.

Tillman said the engineers are working double shifts to get the work completed in time for civilian construction on the bypass to begin on schedule. The civilian phase of the construction calls for the building of an over-pass taking Custer Rd. over the Lindsey Creek Bypass.

Some 40 engineers from Co. D will be working double shifts with their heavy equipment.

Motorists traveling Custer Rd. should expect some delays for the next few weeks while the work is going on.

A day with AUSA

Last Saturday some 3,000 people gathered at Fort Benning's Victory Lodge for the annual AUSA picnic, and all came ~~[illegible]~~ for entertainment.

If the children weren't content watching skydiving, Rangers in Recon Team demonstrations with their parents, they ~~[illegible]~~ to explore the mysteries of the fire engines, tanks and jeeps. The ponies, playground and various other amusements kept the children "on the go."

When the "munchies" struck, or the penetrating sun reached up a thirst, the logical solution was to head for the refreshment table for hot dogs and hamburgers or a cool, bubbly beer or soft drink.

By 7 p.m., though feet were sore and energy was at a premium, there were some reluctant to hop in their cars and head for home.

World's fastest cars featured in 'Le Mans'

Cinema Center Films' "Le Mans" captures on film the personal intrigue and the death-defying sportsmanship of the world's most famous and dangerous racing competition.

Steve McQueen, himself a champion racer, is joined by 45 internationally-renowned professional drivers in a realistic, nerve-shattering re-creation of the toughest test of men and machines on earth.

Filmed on actual locations in France, "LE MANS," which will be showing this week on post, explores the sheer force and endurance of the race that annually attracts 500,000 spectators from every corner of the world.

McQueen, who last year placed second overall in the grueling Sebring 12-Hour Endurance Test, did most of his own driving in the motion picture, often at speeds exceeding 200 miles per hour on the harrowing 8 and one-half mile course. It is a film McQueen has wanted to make for years, allowing him to combine his acting and racing abilities as never before. McQueen, who proved his physical prowess by performing his own spectacular stunt work in "The Great Escape" and "Bullitt" says this is the toughest picture he has ever made.

Over a million dollars worth of the world's fastest, best engineered cars were used in the filming, with specially-mounted cameras in the cars providing the viewer with as spellbinding a glimpse as they'll ever get of how it feels to challenge the force of speed.

Beyond the intensity of the race itself, "Le Mans" examines the women who are part of the man's world, and the Woodstock-type atmosphere that surrounds the competition as a mass of humanity gathers to watch men facing unmatched dangers.

Every effort was made to insure total authenticity in all phases of production. Over 20,000 items ranging from the high-priced wristwatches worn by the drivers to the small promotional decals of component cars, were assembled for the filming.

It's 'Carnival' time at Benning playhouse

By Edith Simmons

A drab, rundown, traveling-circus troupe is winding its way to the Benning Playhouse stage Wednesday. The troupe is "B. F. Schlegel's Imperial Cirque de Paris." Headliners of the carnival are Marco the Magician and the incomparable Rosalie, his assistant. Supporting acts are Jacquot the clown, Olga the Hugarian snake-charmer, and Paul's Puppets.

This is the openipg of the Michael Stewart-Robert Merrill classic musical "Carnival." Into this rundown world is introduced the freshness and vitality of the orphaned Lili. Because Lili believes in enchantment and magic, the carnival acquires a new hustle and enthusiasm. Part of this excitement is generated by the rivalry between Marco and Paul. Each wants to add Lili to his act and capture the center ring. Flamboyant Marco dazzles Lili with "Magic, Magic" and his woman-chasing ways. While Paul's only persuasion are his puppets.

Pulled between the two men, Lili often feels that the zany and cheerful puppets are her only real friends. Scenes between Lili and the puppets create many of the show's special moments.

Lana Robertson (Lili), Joel Nitz (Paul), Tom Lynch (Marco), and Lane Russell (Rosalie) will be joined by a large group of Benning Dramatizers for this production of "Carnival."

Opening night is Wednesday, at the Benning Playhouse. Tickets may be purchased at the door or reserved by calling 545-5057. Show time is 8 p.m.

Three Arts League announces new season

The Three Arts League will mark the beginning of its 1971-72 season with a symphony, opera, and musical.

On Oct. 27 the league will present, on its first American tour, the Spanish RTV Symphony Orchestra of Madrid. Established in 1965, the orchestra has contributed to Spanish musical life, reviving traditional music and giving expression to the contemporary.

On Jan. 31 the Vienna State Opera Company is scheduled to appear in Johann Strauss' "Die Fledermaus." The opera company is also making its American debut.

"Promises, Promises," an award winning musical, will be shown on March 21. The story is based on the movie "The Apartment," which won an Oscar in 1960. The music is by Burt Bacharach, Walter Kerr of the New York Times said of "Promises, Promises," "it seems perfect, the smartest, sunniest, most delightful new musical in town."

Season tickets are now on sale at the Three Arts Theatre on Talbotton Rd. The ticket office, located in the lobby, is open Mondays through Friday from 1 - 5 p.m. Phone 323-5511 during those hours for further information.

Synopsis

BIG JAKE (Rated GP), stars John Wayne and is set in the Texas badlands in 1909.

Wayne's grandson, John Ethan Wayne (in real life, his 8 year old son), is kidnapped by Richard Boone and his band of killers. A ransom note for $1 million is left with Wayne's wife, Maureen O'Hara.

The killers' threat is not an idle one since they leave a path of blood and murder as proof. O'Hara contacts her estranged husband who hasn't been seen in nearly ten years.

While the Texas Rangers hunt down the kidnappers in an auto caravan, Wayne travels on horseback with the money. An unexpected change of events provides a new ending to a 20th century western.

TWO-LANE BLACKTOP (Rated R), James Taylor and Dennis Wilson are driving their 1955 souped-up Chevrolet across country. They have no particular destination and meet up with Warren Oates in his GTO. Oates strikes up a deal with Taylor and Wilson whereas the first car to reach Washington, D.C. will entitle the driver to possession of both vehicles.

Laurie Bird, picked up along the way by Taylor and Wilson gloves Oates for the ride. Oates plays an amusing character who tells each person he meets a different story of his life.

THE HOUSE THAT SCREAMED (Rated GP), is set in a girl's school deep in the country around the turn of the century and will provide plenty of goose-pimple-lovers.

Lilli Palmer portrays the headmistress at a semi-correctional school for teenage girls where bizarre events continue to occur, as one by one students disappear.

THE LIGHT AT THE EDGE OF THE WORLD (Rated GP), Jules Verne has done it again. He lives up to his reputation with all the excitement he gave us in "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea," "Journey to the Center of the Earth," and many others.

"The Light at the Edge of the World" is the name given to a lighthouse at the tip of South America by seamen and pirates. In 1865 the lighthouse is inaugurated and manned by Fernando Rey, Kirk Douglas and Massima Ranieri.

Pirates invade the lighthouse hoping to detour ships, kill the passengers and take their gold. From the moment the pirates arrive, the suspense builds.

Kirk Douglas must outwit these bloodthirsty buccaneers in order to survive. The nooks and crannies of the lighthouse and surrounding caves are his only refuge and each step could be his last.

WILLY WONKA AND THE CHOCOLATE FACTORY (Rated G). Poor but honest paper boy, Peter Ostrum, wins the Wonka Chocolate contest by finding one of the five Golden Tickets ina bar of candy.

Being a wiuner entitles him to a life-time supply of chocolate and a tour of the Wonka factory. Bringing his grandfather with him, the two run into a crooked rival of the Wonka Chocolate factory.

The story is geared for the young and should leave a very favorable impression with them. Disobedience is frowned upon and the punishment dealt out to misbehaving youngsters in the story should make youngsters think twice.

Lt. Col. James Marr (center) consults a map as he directs the itinerary which takes his organization to the Far East. Paul Revere and The Raiders.

'Raiders' former manager recalls 2 year tour with the rock group

"I thought it was probably another crank call but a few minutes later they found the sticks of dynamite in the bathroom," said 1st Lt. James Marr as he recalled an incident which occured while he was managing "Paul Revere and the Raiders." "The call came in just before show time and no one knew what to do, whether to ignore the threat and allow an expensive rock performance to continue or to evacuate an audience numbering in the thousands. Finally, it was decided to evacuate and as the last person left the auditorium the police began to search every corner and what might have been a useless waste of time and money proved to be a wise decision.

Working as a road manager for "Paul Revere and the Raiders" certainly provided a wide range of experiences for Marr, now executive officer of 53rd Co., 5th Bn. (OC), TSB.

He traveled with the nationally popular rock group for almost 2 years prior to entering the Army.

"Managing the 'Raiders' was a great experience," said Marr. "Both the band members and their music conveyed a feeling of professionalism and quality that just isn't found in the average rock band." The "Raiders," whose hit songs include "Kicks," "Baby, Please Don't Go," the original "Louie, Louie," and, recently, "Indian Reservation," require a 3-man team of managers to keep a tour schedule running smoothly.

Marr was one of the road managers ("Roadie") whose job was to assure that each performance was properly set up and supported in each town. This involved motel reservations, transportation and stage arrangements, and of course, making sure the equipment was set up. "Vox Electronics would provide all of the amplifiers and speaker systems for each show. The 'Raiders', used some of the best electronic systems available. Nine 'Super-beatle' amps and many speakers totaling over $10,000 in value were required for each show," Marr explained. "Small details also required attention, such as checking the frequency of our cordless microphones to prevent an unintentional broadcast over local FM stations."

Marr's responsibilities not only included managing the "Raiders" but also required studying for his college courses. He successfully toured with the band and managed to earn his degree in Physical Education, Health, and Recreation from East Kentucky University.

Early returns show CFC well under way

If the present trend continues, Fort Benning and federal agencies in the Columbus - Phenix City area should have no difficulty in reaching the $142,000 goal for the Combined Federal Campaign (CFC), according to James. F. Schoonover, post project chairman. Fort Benning's share of the goal is $138,000.

Early returns indicated that donations are running $13.11 per capita, with at least one organization having reached 100 per cent. Regulations prevent naming the unit while the drive is in progress.

Schoonover urged all employees to conside the payroll deduction plan. "It is the easiest way to make a contribution," he said. "People should remember, however to fill in all information on their payroll authorization form, so that we can process them accurately."

Proceeds from the drive support the United Givers, sponsoring local agencies, the National Health Agencies, which sponsors such groups as the American Heart Association; the Arthritis Foundation and the March of Dimes.

By John Davis

Poets write about it, Tom Jones sings about it, but Doug Dickey wishes he had never head of it, much less seen it.

Yes, the proverbial "green, green grass of home" has badly been inspirational as far as the frustrated Florida mentor is concerned. In fact the head football Gator believes the grass has never looked greener in faraway Tennessee.

In fact, Dickey probably wishes he were still employed in the Volunteer state. His job was as secure as an RA colonel's with 18 years service when the call came from his alma mater. The warm breezes and bending palms were beckoning and Dickey decided to return home.

As if a bad omen, his coaching career at Florida began on a sour note. Amid rumors, innuendos and denials that Dickey was leaving Tennessee for his alma mater, the Vols were surprised by the Gators 14-13 in the 1969 Gator Bowl match.

The press had detected a leak and was exploiting it to the fullest. Dickey was secretly negotiating with Florida officials even as his team was training for its post season clash. Although the reports were emphatically denied by both Florida and Tennessee, the Vols appeared flat and disheartened in losing to the Gators.

In the off season came the confrontation with Carlos Alvarez. Alvarez, a sure-handed All America receiver as a sophomore, was the ring leader of a small but vocal group of athletes who protested the hiring of Dickey. The group Alvarez headed was pushing for a top Florida aide to get the number one job.

When Dickey was hired instead, the Cuban born flanker wasn't bashful in his protest. Simply, he and Dickey have never been the best of friends.

Bleak Year Ahead

With the club divided into factions, Dickey's first year as a Gator ended none too soon. Included in the 7-4 season was a humilitating 46-15 loss to Alabama, a 63-14 pasting at the hands of Auburn, and the most bitter pill of all, a 38-7 crushing by Tennessee in Knoxville.

Things haven't improved this year either. The Gators are off to their worst start in more than 20 years, and Dickey is suffering most of all. Florida has dropped its first four contests, in this a year when the Gators are pegged to show their stuff.

After all, besides Alvarez, Florida has a bonafide Heisman Trophy candidate in quarterback John Reaves. A much improved offensive and defensive line were to greet Dickey this fall.

Perhaps more importantly, there had been a reconciliation between the warring factions and Dickey and Alvarez had squared their differences. There was good reason to be optimistic.

But Reaves hasn't been connecting with much regularity, and when he has its even money a guy in the wrong colored jersey does the catching. Alvarez hasn't come close to his 1969 form, and consequently the Gators aren't winning.

There is an abundance of high school football talent in the sunshine state, and when Dickey's own recruits begin to filter their way to the varsity, the situation will improve. Until then though, don't get caught singing the "green, green, grass of home" around Doug Dickey. That's not his favorite song.

Marksmanship unit sponsoring first school for instructors

The U.S. Army Marksmanship Training Unit (USAMTU) is sponsoring the first Army level school for instructors on the M-16 rifle during this week, it was disclosed today by Col. Robert M. Piper, marksmanship commander.

The idea of a M-16 course of instruction to increase the effectiveness of the weapon is one of the brainchilds of the Marksmanship's commander. He masterminded the proposal in 1970, drew up the overall plans and submittedthe "blueprint" to the Continental Army Command for their review and inclusion into Army training.

This first class of 37 instructor-students, who arrived at Fort Benning from the four Army areas, received a 40 hour course of instruction which will prepare them for instructing within their home units and areas and raise the level of performance in M-16 marksmanship.

Students in returning to their respective Army areas, will serve as the vanguard of an Army wide effort to standardize a more effective M-16 training. The instructors will be the nucleus of this indoctrination which should improve, to a high-degree, the training effectiveness within the Training Centers and troop units armed with the M-16. As new M-16 instructors, they are charged with the responsibility of raising the individual soldiers performance level and improving the effectiveness of his primary weapon.

The week-long course of instruction presented by the Army MTU included periods of lectures and demonstrations on shooting techniques which have been proven by the Fort Benning based Army unit. The curriculum also provided extensive field firing by the students under the close surveillance of MTU instructors. This includes both daylight and night time firing.

YAC judo club captures 11 gold medals in tournament

Fort Benning's YAC Judo Club hosted an Invitational Judo Tournament last Friday at Briant Wells Field House in which 99 contestants entered the "belted" contests for a share of the honors.

The afternoon elimination tourney featured the simultaneous operation of four mats in which 18 classes of competitors participated. Of the large group, 30 of the contestants were in the adult category with more than 60 junior comhatants, each pitting their skill and stamina for gold medals.

Four visiting clubs from the southeast area participated in the class event in addition to the host club. Two of the clubs were from Tallahassee, Fla., one of which claimed the Grand Champion while one club was sponsored by Florida State University and the remaining club was from Ft. Rucker, Ala.

The Fort Benning club came away from the afternoon's contest with a majority of the honors, capturing 11 of the 18 gold medals, while the Ft. Rucker Club won three and the Florida Clubs took four among them.

Besides claiming the tourney championship, the Florida clubs also captured the Heavy Unlimited weight class in the tourney. This was the only "open" or unlimited class in the tournament and was picked up by Ed Poole of the Florida State University. Poole is also the East Coast Collegiate Champion for 1971 while one of his team mates, Kenneth Keller, the 1970 Collegiate Champion, was a gold medal winner in his 139 pound weight class.

Classes for youth in the tourney were determined by both age and weight while for adults, the weight was the only determining factor for class.

In the double elimination events, the ladder of championship for the contestants was mounted quite rapidly by the eventual champion. Grand Champion or tourney winner was captured by David Frisby, a member of the visiting Florida Capital team and a Tallahassee policeman. He is a second degree black belt holder.

Lt. Col. Charles Keaton, Fort Benning coach, stated that he was highly pleased with the performance turned in by his club. Despite the fact that the young judoists were relatively inexperienced, they had winners in several closely contested classes.

Six-year-old Billy Doty from Benning continued his winning way when he won his class. He has won in every tournament since he commenced Judo in March.

Another local champion was seven-year-old Earl Richmond who has won gold medals in the three tournaments and 15 matches in which he has participated.

In the heavier class, Jerry Rhodes and James Tucker of Fort Benning, white belts who started judo in July, finished a first and second in the 154 pound and 205 pound class respectively while competing in the highly experienced brown belt classes. In addition Anthony Nathan, a Fort Benning brown belt who was entered by the coach in the heavy unlimited class made a good showing and was only defeated by a close margin by the champion, Poole.

The Fort Benning club is open for all interested personnel who wish to participate in judo. Presently there are 153 students in the club registered with the USJAA while total participation numbers 265 students.

The Rod and Gun Club has several projects and events in various stages of development that should be of interest to a large majority of the membership.

A turkey shoot, weapons sight-in or zero for those who intend to hunt deer during the coming season, construction of a range to meet National Rifle Association specifications and promote a Junior National Rifle Association program here and a deer hunting contest are priority projects for the club at this time.

The two most eminent events will take place the last weekend of this month. The turkey shoot will be held at the Rod and Gun Skeet Ranges Oct. 30 from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m. The weapons sight-in will be held at Brinson Range on Jamestown Road Oct. 30 and 31. Brinson Range will be open for firing from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m. on Oct. 30 and from noon until 4 p.m. on Oct. 31.

Know Your Weapon

Sighting in a weapon is probably the most important part of the preparation for deer season. Each year thousands of hunters go into the field as unprepared as if they were carrying an unloaded gun. They don't know if the weapon they are carrying will shoot where they aim it. Here where shotguns are the only weapons legal for deer hunting this is especially true. Very few shotguns will throw a slug or a load of buckshot where the hunter points the gun. Each shotgun has its own characteristics and the shooter has to know if the gun is going to shoot high, low, right or left so he can compensate for this difference in aim and bullet strike. Most rifles have sights that are adjustable but the shooter has to know the adjustments to be made at various ranges before he can be sure that the weapon will shoot where he is aiming. Failure to know these facts has cheated many hunters out of game and some lose the chance for once in a lifetime trophies.

Some hunters don't miss completely and this creates another problem. The deer is wounded, escapes and dies later. Granted that this can happen to a hunter who knows the capabilities of his weapon but it's much less likely when the hunter knows where to aim and doesn't try to stretch the effective range.

The Rod and Gun Club is holding these sight-in days as a public service. Anyone who intends to hunt this year is invited to come out and determine how to aim his weapon so it will put the round on target. He can also make sure the weapon is in condition to fire. Raising a weapon to shoot a deer after a long wait opening day morning only to find it won't fire would be even more frustrating than a missed shot.

Cardboard Turkeys

You don't shoot at turkeys at a turkey shoot. At least not at the shoots held at the Rod and Gun Club. They still shoot turkeys at some of the shoots in the eastern mountain regions but here the contestant shoots at cardboard targets. The winners get 10 to 12-pound frozen turkeys for Thanksgiving.

The shooter, using shotguns, competes with nine other contestants. The target has a horizontal and vertical line bisecting the center of the target. The shooter who has a pellet closest to the intersection of the two lines on his target wins a turkey.

Post Has New Boat Ramp

Special Services is operating a new boat launching ramp on Uchee Creek. The facility is located on the Alabama side of the reservation about 200 yards from the Chattahoochee River. "Boat Ramp" signs beginning at Eddy Bridge will guide personnel to the site.

According to SSgt. James F. Bruce, supervisor of the operation just about any type vessel used on the river can be launched at the facility. Anyone having special requirements for larger craft should contact Bruce at 545-7414.

Other facilities available at the launching ramp are a hard top parking area, personnel loading docks, latrines, a picnic and camping area.

An attendant will be on duty at the launching area on Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays during the month of October. He will have gasoline available for cash purchase from 4 until 8 p.m. on Friday and from 6 a.m. until 8 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday.

Benning scuba club classes slated to begin

For those who enjoyed T.V.'s "Sea Hunt" or Florida's Marineland, an opportunity to join the underwater world is now available. The Fort Benning Scuba Diving Club is currently holding classes which teach and certify members to scuba dive. Five weeks after classes start the students make their final dive at a depth of 60 feet off the coast of Florida. Upon graduation the students are eligible niques of buddy-breathing, for the certified divers card.

Capt. Douglas Wright, a master instructor of scuba diving, is the able teacher of the club's diving course. Wright has been an avid diver for many years and, professionally, for two years operated the Special Forces Underwater Operations School in Key West, the Infantry Officer's Advanced Course, 7th Bn., TSB. Assisting Wright are CSM Kenneth M. Cox, 4th Bn., TSB, and the club president, Sp-6 Don Hissom, 205th Avn. Co.

Orienteers earn $128 for CFC in marathon

The Fort Benning Orienteering Team earned $128.50 for the Combined Federal Campaign (CFC) last weekend in a grueling 24 hour Relay Marathon Race held at Eglin Air Force Base, Florida.

The 12 man team headed by Fort Benning Champion, PFC Don Kennedy covered a total of 257 miles and easily outdistanced the second place Eglin AFB (Blue Team). In the five team race each runner ran approximately 25 miles with an average time of a little more than five minutes.

As an added incentive 50 cents a mile was pledged to the Combined Federal Campaign of the winner. Also awards in the form of certificates were presented to the winners.

Positions open for 100 cadets at West Point

One-hundred West Point cadetships have been allocated for sons of career military personnel this year, the United States Military Academy has announced.

The 100 openings in the Cadet Class of 1976 have been reserved by law for sons of career personnel of the Army, Navy, Air Force, Marine Corps, and Coast Guard, whether active, retired, or deceased.

Sons of members of Reserve Components currently serving eight years or more of continuous active duty and retirees receiving either retired or retainer pay are also eligible for the cadetships.

Interested young men who are sons of career military personnel, U. S. citizens, between the ages of 17 and 22, and have never been married, should make application for the 100 cadetships of the Presidential category by writing HQDA (DAAG-PSA-M), Forrestal Bldg., Washington, D. C. 20314, no later than Dec. 15.

Military testing forum hears technical paper

Richard S. Kneisel, Special Assistant-Educational Advisor, USAIA, and Lt. Col. Bryce R. Kramer, chief, Evaluation Division, Office of the Director of Instruction, attended the 13th Annual Military Testing Association (MTA) Conference, Sept. 20-24, held at the Statler-Hilton Hotel, Washington, D.C. At the conference they presented a paper entitled "Systems Approach to Evaluation and Quality Control of Training," which they had jointly prepared for the conference.

The MTA is an organization of the U.S. Military services (Army, Navy, Air Force, Marine Corps, Coast Guard) and has military representation from Canada, Australia, and the United Kingdom. The organization has been in existence 13 years and, while having a loose configuration and a rather informal structure (i.e., there is no continuing executive secretary or board of officers, no journal, or no constitution), it is rather important in providing a forum for disseminating information on testing and evaluation. Each year a different service is named to chair the organization and to sponsor the annual testing conference which is the basic means for information exchange. The conference this year was sponsored by the Marine Corps. Next year it will be sponsored by the Navy and will be held at Lake Geneva, Wis.

The theme of the 13th MTA Conference was "Improving Techniques and Procedures in Personnel Evaluation." The conference proceedings will be published in about six weeks by the Marine Corps and will be forwarded to each participant. A partial list of the presentations at this year's conference are listed below:

"Some Implications of the Supreme Court Decision, March 1971 (Civil Rights Act, 1964)"

"USAF Officer Evaluation System — Review and Research Recommendation"

"The Use of Logic Trees in Military Performance Testing"

A new approach

Re-enlistment shopping center open

By Bob Wise

The 2nd Battalion, 10th Field Artillery, of the 197th Infantry Brigade, has begun a new approach to getting re-enlistment information to the troops.

The "re-enlistment Shopping Center," located in an abandoned mess hall in the 10th Artillery area, "contains a concentration of more re-enlistment information than any other place at Fort Benning," said Maj. Robert J. Thomas, executive officer of the 10th Arty.

"We found that too many of our soldiers eligible for re-enlistment were unaware of the options open to them, so we brought together every available piece of re-enlistment information and consolidated it into one area," Thomas explained.

In the "Shopping Center" a man can "shop" for a specific option or a specific benefit. There is a career counselor on duty at all times to answer questions. The "Shopping Center" is open from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. daily.

Free coffee and soft drinks and pastry from the brigade baking school are available all day. Battalion soldiers are encouraged to come in as often as they can, but once a week, they can register for a three-day pass in the center.

October Jump Fest set for today, tomorrow

By Tom Tegtmeyer

Have you ever seen over 150 men jump from an aircraft? Or over 50 parachutists glide to earth under various and brightly colored chutes? Today and tomorrow you will have a chance to see just that.

The Airborne Association, Sport Parachute Club and 4th Student Bn. are sponsoring an October Jump Fest which is to be held on Fryar Field over the holiday weekend.

Today at 10:30 a.m., military personnel will compete for trophies. All jumps of the day will be static line jumps. A CH-47, supplied by the 197th Aviation Co. will drop the jumpers in three man teams. There will be approximately 25 teams entered. The object of the competition is for the team to land, pack their gear and gather in an assembly area in the shortest amount of time. The stop watch will start when the last man is out of the plane, and will stop when all team members have assembled in the designated area. Incorrect landings and injuries will disqualify a team. Landing close to the assembly area will be a tremendous advantage to team members.

Tomorrow at 9 a.m. the Sport Parachute Club will start their competition. The various types of chutes will be brightly colored and equipped for different uses.

Over 50 sport parachutists will compete, all making three jumps a piece. This competition will be target jumping, the object being, landing closest to the center of an assigned target.

Lt. Col. James L. Anderson, Ranger Dept., president of the Airborne Association and a member of the board of Governors of the Sport Parachute Club and Maj. Kenneth Johnston, formerly of the Ranger Dept. and chairman president of the Sport Parachute Club, have been instrumental in planning the program.

All the jumping will simulate normal training conditions, and activities, with the 197th Pathfinders on the ground as a support team.

Other units which will support the event in various ways are the Jumpmaster Committee, who will provide the jumpmasters and safety NCOs on the aircraft; Military Police will handle the traffic control; 38th Med. Bn. will be on hand for any needed medical treatment; and the Riggers from the Airborne Dept. will handle the parachute issue and safety checks.

This is one of the very few times that the Airborne and Ranger Department jump together. All personnel on active jump status are also eligible to compete.

This free program is for the enjoyment of all military and civilian personnel and everyone is invited to attend the function and bring a picnic lunch. Picnic tables are available.

All personnel involved in this project have spared no energy in trying to present to you the best possible showing of their airborne talents.

Columbus Day now a legal holiday for the first time

By Frank Webb

Columbus Day, Oct. 11, is now a legal national holiday in the United States for the first time since Columbus landed on the coast of San Salvador in the West Indies nearly 500 years ago on Oct. 12, 1492.

In all the time between the discovery and the celebration Columbus Day has been observed as a holiday in name only. The first observance of the day began with the organization of a celebration by the Tammany Society, a political organization, in New York in 1792, 300 years after landing. In the time between those two dates there is no record of any celebrations of Columbus' discovery of what he thought was India.

It was not until the beginning of 1971 that Columbus Day finally became a legal holiday, allowing many employes a holiday. What caused this sudden concern for a former unofficial holiday?

The answer probably lies in a controversy that began in October of 1965. Yale University library published new information on the 1117 A.D. voyage by Leif Erickson to the coast of North America. Though many were sure that Erickson had made a voyage to the American coast before Columbus, his voyage was never confirmed.

But the publication of "The Vineland Map and the Tartar Relation" by Yale University in 1965 (one day before Columbus Day) showed a carefully authenticated map of the known world, including Greenland, Iceland and the unmistakable outlines of Hudson Bay and the gulf of St. Lawrence in North America. The map has been dated at about 1117.

Italian-Americans were immediately outraged, and many responded by deriding Yale's discovery. In Boston a brick wall had been chalked "Leif Erickson was a fink." The chairman of the Chicago Columbus Day Parade, Victor Arrigo, denounced the Yale map as a "Communist plot."

Italian papers carried angry editorials also denouncing the new book. But the Spaniards, who claim Columbus as a Spanish citizen, were the most outraged, according to Time magazine of Oct. 22, 1965. Spanish newspaper editorials, claimed Time, "denounced Erickson, Yale and Italians all at once, claiming, 'Italy's claim to Columbus is equivalent to crediting Germany with victory in World War II because Eisenhower is of German descent.'"

Response in the House of Representatives equalled the fury of the tide of ion in the nation, for New New York Democrat Benjamin Rosenthal introduced a bill to make Columbus Day a legal holiday. And it was from this beginning in 1965 that the declaration of Columbus Day as a legal holiday probably began.

Regardless who was here first, however, it is indisputable that Columbus was the popularizer of the discovery, for this brilliant though eccentric sailor from Genoa undoubtedly began the colonization of the entire Western hemisphere. If any attempts by the Norsemen had been made to colonize the area, there is no record of it.

Columbus was probably in his early 40's when he set out with three ships from Palos, Spain on Friday, Aug. 3, 1492 to sail for India, which he thought was located approximately where America actually is. Turned down repeatedly by the governments of Portugal, Genoa (his home town) and England, Columbus got only encouragement from Spain, which was unable to finance an expedition while it was at war with the Moors.

But the persuasive Italian sailor finally was granted his request, and he began preparations immediately. After more than two months sailing and a threatened mutiny the expedition was on the verge of disaster when, at 2 a.m. of Oct. 12, a cannon shot thundered the news of land sighting to the crews of the three ships.

LT. COL. SALVAN

Liaison officer familiar with heat

Lt. Col. Jean G. Salvan, the new French liaison officer to the U. S. Army Infantry Center, has reassuring words for the sweat-soaked officers and men of Fort Benning.

"I served tours in the Congo and in Chad," the seasoned French paratroop officer says. "I find the climate here quite similar."

The liaison officer is no stranger to hot climates. After graduating in 1954 from Saint-Cyr, the French military academy, he served with an airborne battalion in the French Congo for 27 months. He then went to an airborne regiment in Algeria where he was seriously wounded during a battle on the eastern border of that county.

Salvan spent a year in various hospitals, then returned to Algeria, serving as an instructor in the Reserve Officer Infantry School, and as a company commander in western Algeria, close to the Moroccan and Syrian deserts.

The Frenchmen feels his experience as a "desert specialist" may be useful to personnel at the Infantry Center. "A liaison officer has two missions," he says. "First, to keep his own government abreast of American infantry developments; second, to advise the American Army on his own country's experience and capabilities."

Salvan says desert warfare differs greatly from the kind of war being fought in Vietnam due to the glaring lack of cover and concealment. "But for people well-trained and well-seasoned," he says, "there are a lot of possibilities to be used to fight and survive in the desert."

Following his service in Algeria, Salvan attended the French equivalent of the Infantry Officer's Advanced Course.

"In France," he says, "our 'advanced course' is also nine months long, but it is broken into two parts. The first three months are devoted to combat training with an emphasis on company level problems. The remaining six months are spent at Saint Maixent in Paris where first lieutenants and captains from all branches undergo staff training."

Salvan also served tours in Germany and Madagascar, and attended French War College in Paris before coming to Fort Benning.

Mrs. Salvan and four of the colonel's five children will join him this month in a house on post which has been occupied by French liaison officers for the last 10 years.

"My oldest son is preparing to enter Saint-Cyr," Salvan says. "My wife and the other four children will join me after his semester begins."

Salvan says he is quite satisfied with the facilities here. His children will devote half of their time to classes in American schools on post and half of their time to correspondence courses in French. The colonel says his wife will enjoy Fort Benning.

"Quite frankly, I was very impressed by the beauty of the post," Salvan says. "I hadn't expected so many green lawns and trees in this part of the country."

Daily services

All military and civilian personnel are invited to attend daily religious services in Marshall Auditorium.

The services, conducted by the post chaplain's office, are held Monday through Friday from 12:10 to 12:25 p.m.

High school exam offered

WASHINGTON — The Veterans Administration now offers high school equivalency examinations to hospitalized veterans at 97 locations, and eventually will make them available at all hospitals where the need exists.

Administrator of Veterans Affairs, Donald E. Johnson said "the broadened educational service would expedite patient rehabilitation."

Johnson reported that 1,115 veterans earned diplomas in hospitals last calendar year, and estimated that at least twice that number will take the examinations this calendar year.

In January 1969 only 69 hospitals were authorized to give high school equivalency examinations, he said, but by January 1971, 93 could administer them.

Four hospitals added to the list recently are in Cleveland and Dayton, Ohio, Bay Pines, Fla. and Hot Springs, S. D.

The VA Administrator said the expanded education service grew out of negotiations last year with the Commission on Accreditation of Service Experience of the American Council on Education. The Commission sets standards for accreditation of nontraditional study with traditional schools.

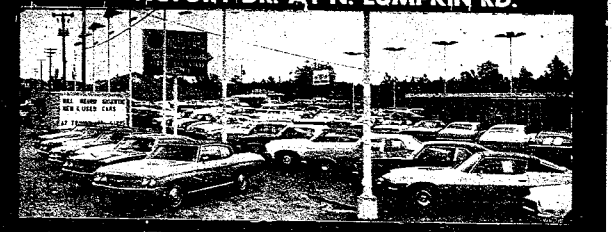
New Army vaccine cuts illness

The U.S. Army has developed a new vaccine which has prevented two common causes of sniffling, hacking and congestion in tests among recruits at all eight basic training centers.

Use of the vaccine proved so successful that all recruits will be immunized for the respiratory disease season this fall and winter.

During the test period acute respiratory disease at the centers occurred at about half the rates of previous years. This represents an estimated saving of about $1.5 million in performance time usually lost in bed rest and recuperation.

The vaccine, which protects against two types (four and seven) of adenoviruses, was developed by the Walter Reed Army Institute of Research in Washington, D.C.



More than 20 different types of adenoviruses are known, but types four and seven historically have caused much of the severe acute respiratory disease in Army recruits.

The vaccine is taken orally and produces a harmless infection in the gastro-intestinal tract that is not transmitted to others. After a few days, the soldier is protected from the disease.

Benning soldier tops MOS test

By Keith Harmon

A 93lst Engineer Group soldier has been lauded for achieving a score on his military occupation speciality (MOS) test that "equaled or exceeded" the highest score made by any other soldier in the Army.

Sp5 Mark J. Marty, 608th Ord. Co. (Ammo), was commended for his "outstanding achievement" in a letter from Maj. Gen. F. W. Boye Jr., chief of Personnel Operations, Dept. of the Army.

The letter noted that Marty's test score "equaled or exceeded the highest score made by any other individual in the PMOS throughout the entire U. S. Army." The letter added the crane operator's remarkable score "attests to the depth of knowledge" Marty has of the duties of his military occupation specialty. "This fact was reflected," Gen. Boye continued, "in the results of (his) written test combined with a truly exceptional duty performance reported on the Enlisted Efficiency Report prepared by (his) supervisors."

Capt. Carey Sheperd, Marty's company commander, said "The supervisors who've worked with Marty say he's most reliable to work with. He knows his job and he does it well."

In addition to the letter from Gen. Boye, Marty was commended for his "outstanding performance" by Col. Robert J. Standley, 93lst group commander.

The Cullman, Ala. native is married to the former Frances Adler of Orlando, Fla. and has two sons, Mark Jr. and John.

Marty is planning to make the Army his career and is currently on the promotion list for staff sergeant.

Howitzer section travels to Waycross

A howitzer section from Btry. C, 2nd Bn.n 10th Fld. Arty., 197th Infantry Brigade, is spending two weeks (Oct. 4-15) in Waycross, Ga., preparing a city lot for use as a baseball field and playground.

The artillerymen are helping city workers clear the lot and pour concrete for swings and other recreational equipment. Next week (Oct. 11-15), the soldiers will help erect a backstop for the peewee baseball field.

The traingular-shaped lot is located in a section of Waycross which is short on recreational facilties, according to Capt. Kenneth A. Owen, 2nd Bn., 10th Fld. Arty., S5 (domestic action and recruiting).

A 105mm Howitzer accompanied the soldiers to the domestic action project to be displayed while the men were working.

The soldiers, under the leadership of Sgt. Phillip E. Kirkman, plan to finish the two-week project next Friday (Oct. 15).

BAYONET SLOAN BENNING WINS PLACE IN ARMY HANDBALL CHAMPIONSHIPS.

The Fort Benning team handball squad assured themselves of a playoff spot in the 3rd Army Team Handball Championships by taking two games from Ft. McClellan last weekend.

The Fort Benning team now has sole possession of first place in the Western Division of the Army League with a record of 15 wins against 3 losses. Ft. McPherson, tied for the lead last week won one game and lost one game in a two game series with Ft. Campbell. McPherson has a record of 14 wins and 4 losses.

Fort McClellan holds third place in the division with a record of 12 wins and 6 losses.

League play ends this week with the Doughboys playing two games against Ft. McPherson at Doughboy Stadium. The first gam will begin tonight at 7 p.m. and the second tomorrow at 1 p.m. The third place McClellan team meets Ft. Campbell for a two game series.

The 3rd Army championships to he played by the first and second place teams in the two divisions of the Army League will be held here Oct. 12 through 15.

Ft. Bragg has the Eastern Division Championship tied up with a record of 18 wins and no losses, Ft. Gordon is in second place with 12 wins and 6 losses and Ft. Jackson holds third place with 11 wins and 7 losses.

The race for second place in the Eastern Division is close but it appears that Bragg and Gordon will be the two teams to represent the division in the Army Championship. Jackson must play two games against the league leading Ft. Bragg team while Gordon should have an easier time with Ft. Stewart which bas a record of 9 wins and 9 losses.

Sp4 Richard J. Huck, Bloomsdale, Mo., was the Distinguished Honor Graduate of the Track Vehicle graduated in ceremonies Sept. 22 in Infantry Hall.

Leadership Department offers financial course

"It is doubtful that officers gain an understanding of budgeting, accounting, and related financial management processes through the limited exposure in the career courses." Through these and other words, the Haines Board, which was convened to review and evaluate all CONARC training, has indicated a need for all officers to understand the Army Budgeting Process.

To fulfill this need as identified by the Haines Board, the Management Committee of the Leadership Department, USAIS, is offering a new elective in Financial Management to all Advanced Course Students. This course which begins on Oct. 7 will delve into all aspects of the budgeting process.

The course will begin with basic background information on the organization of the Army for budgeting purposes. Then the students will study the international balance of payments, the Army budget cycle above installation level, and budgeting for military construction. Finally, the course will end with a 20-hour block of instruction on statistics.

The students will be expected to make a budget for the Nth Army based on information provided by the instructor. The class will be taught by the discussion method and should be interesting and informative to all officers who choose this elective.

AUSA meets in Washington D.C.

The 17th annual convention of the Association of the United States Army (AUSA) met this week at the Sheraton-Park Hotel in Washington, D.C. About 6,000 members of the AUSA's 150 chapters were present at the convention.

The program, a study of stars and brass, started last Monday morning with a keynote opening address by Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird and ended Wednesday night at a formal dinner. Highlights of the dinner were a speech by Secretary of the Army Robert Froehlke and presentation of the George Catlett Marshall Medal to former Secretary of State Dean Rusk, now of the University of Georgia.

Gen. William C. Westmoreland, chief of staff, spoke at a luncheon Tuesday. Adm. John F. McCain, commander-in-chief Pacific, spoke Wednesday afternoon on "Collective Security in Asia."

Results of the Volunteer Army's (VOLAR) Program to date were discussed Monday by a panel headed by Lt. Gen. George I. Forsyth, special assistant to the chief of staff for the VOLAR program. The panel included members in every rank from brigadier general to sergeant and journalist member George C. Wilson of the Washington Post.

A panel discussed "Contemporary Concerns," to include racial and drug problems Tuesday under the direction of Lt. Gen. Walter Kerwin Jr.

Maj. Gen. Orwin C. Talbott, Fort Benning commander, one of the panelists, said that a dual program to cope with the drug and alcohol program at Fort Benning brought good results.

"The biggest thing we have learned in the process of solving these problems is that there are no experts. People just don't have pat solutions to solve these problems," Gen. Talbott said. "We also found a lack of desire from those with a problem to volunteer for the program."

Lt. Gen. John J. Tolsen, deputy commander for Continental Army Command, pioneered drug programs at Ft. Bragg, N.C., while commander of the XVIII Airborne Corps.

"An army fights with young people, not the old. We call on the young people to make the sacrifices," Tolsen said. "Not many people in our country realize how the drug problem is growing in our 12, 13 and 14-year-old groups. These kids are going to be your future manpower to defend this country."

Tolsen said the military may "have to spearhead this fight for the entire country and it may require a moral re-awakening because it is a moral and spiritual fight."

Panel conclusions were that massive education for all persons, as well as drug users; rehabilitation programs with changes in legal areas making them less risky for participants to be tripped up by present laws because of technicalities; and, dramatically increased law enforcement programs to smash the drug traffic aimed at pushers and suppliers rather than users, are elements of any solution.

One of the highlights of the convention was a discussion Wednesday on "The Military and the Media." Maj. Gen. Winant Sidle, chief of information for the Army, led this discussion with Charles Kordry, The Baltimore Sun; Robert Geralski, NBC television correspondent; Fred S. Hoffman, Associated Press; and John Mulliken of Time Magazine.

Two Columbus - Phenix City - Fort Benning AUSA chapter members were prominent figures in awards ceremonies during the convention. Foy J. Smith, Phenix City, a past president of the local chapter, received the President's Gold Medal for service to the U.S. Army. Oscar Betts, also past president, was given a national AUSA award for service to the association.

The local chapter served past tradition by winning three major awards of the convention. It was named best overall chapter, the largest chapter in the world, and the chapter which obtained the most new members last year.

Jake Riley, president, Joe Flowers, immediate past president, and CSM James Gallagher, accepted these awards.

1st Cavalry Division Association presents $400 scholarship award

The First Cavalry Division Association presented a $400 scholarship award to Cynthia (Cindy) Joyce Radcliff last Saturday in the commanding general's office.

The award, the General George Casey Scholarship, was presented by Col. Malcolm Baer, adjutant general and active member of the association. The presentation was the first of its kind to be made at Fort Benning.

Cindy came here from the University of Georgia where she is currently enrolled as a senior in the public relations field. Her father, Maj. Donald Radcliff, was executive officer for the 11th Air Assault Division when it merged with the Second Infantry Division to form the First Cavalry Division in 1965.

The major was sent with an advance contingent to gain tactical experience with in-country forces prior to the departure of the newly formed Division to Vietnam. He was killed in action in August 1965 while flying a helicopter gunship in support of U. S. Marine operation "Starlight" — the first time American forces had a major encounter in Vietnam.

Radcliff was credited with knocking out three enemy machinegun nests while making repeated low level passes over ground upon which the enemy was firing. He was killed on the fourth pass by enemy small arms fire. He was the first man of the Cavalry Division to die in Southeast Asia.

Subsequently, the First Cavalry Division base camp at An Khe was named Camp Radcliff in his memory.

The First Cavalry Division Association was formed to honor the memory of the gallant dead, to preserve comradeships formed in the crucible of battle, and to develop cavalry espirit.

The Association formed the Foundation of the First Cavalry Division Association with the task of managing a scholarship program to provide financial advanced educational assistance to selected children of "Skytroopers" killed as a result of hostile action in Vietnam.

4 units exceed 100 per cent of CFC goal

The Combined Federal Campaign (CFC) is now in its third week and four units have already exceeded 100 per cent of their goals, says campaign chairman, James Schoonover.

Contributions presently total more than $15,000, roughly 10 per cent of the goal of $138,000 for Fort Benning in the campaign.

Schoonover also stated that of the 80 organizations set up for collections on post nearly half have sent in part of their contributions.

The Combined Federal Campaign, which closes the first week in November, is the "one big fund drive of the year," according to Schoonover, "and contributions go to 43 different agencies." Of those 43, 25 are agencies in the Columbus-Phenix City area and four are national or international charities.

Post personnel may use the payroll deduction plan to contribute to the campaign if they wish. Under this plan the deductions, covered by the "fair share" plan, begin in January 1972 and end in December 1972.

The campaign, says Schoonover, is now standard procedure in all federal agencies including the Department of Defense.

Coffeehouse is loose

Fort Benning has a place for today's uptight soldier

By Frank Webb

Any evening you can walk into the Fort Benning coffeehouse and relax. If that doesn't sound too dramatic, then that's the way it's supposed to be.

Relaxation is the word at this cavernous black room—with 20-foot high dayglo paintings boiling over into the atmosphere. It's perhaps a funny way to relax to some, but to today's uptight soldier it's his kind of place.

The coffeehouse is in the back of the main post service club near the intersection of Sightseeing Road and Eckel Street. Entry is strictly back door only.

It's a strange place to visit: The entire room is painted black and dayglo, and the paintings seem to throb in the overhead blacklight to the sound of music pouring through the sound system. On any day you can walk in and perhaps see several soldiers painting their own personal statement on the walls.

And every day it's free. Free entertainment, including live rock bands or recorded sounds, free popcorn, free cokes and free punch. That may not sound very dramatic either, but it's not intended to be. It might be described as "loose," and that is just what it's intended to be.

It's so loose, in fact, that Chaplain (Capt.) Bob H. Mask, nominal head of this "environment," allows soldiers to bring in their own records and tapes to be played on the sound system when programs aren't scheduled.

It's so loose that the stage is nothing more than five giant telephone wire spools laid flat, and programs don't even have to end with closing hours, for Mask states that he has no objection to extending he closing hours when there is a good session happening.

Perhaps the best way to categorize the place easily is to say it's the soul of variety. Programs vary from occasional rap sessions with commanders to rock and soul groups playing on the stage. It is open to both enlisted and officers also. Lt. Col. John Walker, commander of 1st Bn., TSB, liked the place so much that he formed his own country and western band, and the group plays occasionally at the coffeehouse.

"We're trying to emphasize the individual and his creativity here," says Mask. "The Army," he continues, "depersonalizes the individual, and here we can 'personalize' it for him. The way we can do this," says the chaplain, "is to give him a chance to express himself."

And expression there is aplenty. Dayglo paints are provided free for individuals to paint on the walls. One recent night featured a freeform race relations discussion with an audience of more than 60, equally black and white in attendance and a drug abuse presentation by the Provost Marshall highlighted another evening.

Sunday evenings are reserved for religious services for those wishing to attend the non-denominational services. The coffeehouse is more than a place to come for relaxation. Mask states that he or his chaplain's assistant are available from 2 p.m. until closing for rapping on any subject or problem.

The success of the house has been dependent on voluntary help, for Mask was originally assigned only three people to help him. But during the first three months of its existence the coffeehouse was built up by volunteers, most of whom learned about the place by word of mouth after Mask asked for volunteer helpers at a monthly character guidance class at TSB.

Now, after more than four months of work, the coffeehouse is completed with lighting and a luxurious sound system. The system was put together by Spc Herb Mitchell and his boss, Mr. Odelle C. Adams, at the Infantry School sound branch, and it provides modern entertainment when programs are not scheduled.

Experimental swimming class holds first graduation ceremony

The Conditioning, Combatives and Drill Committee (CCDC), Leadership Department, completed an experimental swimming course for nonswimmers in the Branch Immaterial Officer Candidate Course (BIOCC) graduating 24 of its first class of 26 students.

Recognizing that the ability to swim is a desirable trait for all soldiers, a diagnostic swim test and remedial swimming program were introduced into the BIOCC program of instruction on an experimental basis.

The diagnostic swim test, requiring students to swim 25 meters, was administered to BIOCC 19-71 (53rd Co.) on June 16. Of the 211 students tested, 26 were unable to swim the required distance and were subsequently enrolled in a 16 - hour remedial swimming program, taught by qualified lifeguards and water safety instructors of the CCDC.

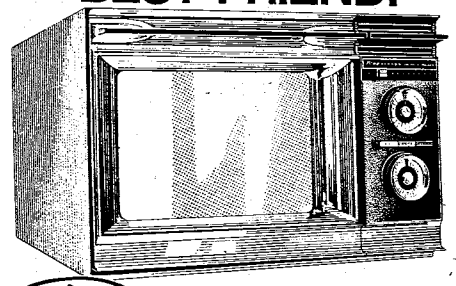
Engineers to construct recreational facilities

Engineers from Co. C, 43rd Engr. Bn., 93ist Engr. Gp. are currently working to construct a series of ball parks and football fields near the Muscogee County Airport.



Co. C, under the command of Capt. George Moon, started work on the project Oct. 6 by leveling several rolling hills in the area. Heavy earth moving equipment was used as tons of earth were moved from the ball park sites to a drainage ditch. Along with the construction of the parks the engineers will also correct a drainage problem in the area by filling the ditch and then sloping the area to prevent erosion.

The City of Columbus Parks and Recreation Dept. requested the help of the engineers to construct the badly needed ball parks. In all, the engineers will construct four ball parks and two football fields.

The work will take the engineers approximately ten days to clear the 5.7 acre site. Another four days will be spent shaping the ground and completing the drainage work.

Public awareness essential to POW-MIA plight

By Roger Pavey

"Lucky? I guess you could say I was lucky, at least I got away. But, for three long years luck was just another word I used to day-dream about," recalls an escaped prisoner of war.

This soldier was lucky, he escaped, but for 1,615 other POW and MIA's who haven't, life can only be described as bleak, and lonely. The living conditions are deplorable and life itself seems meaningless. Fear, hunger, and despair dominate their world, a world that is confined to only a few square feet.

The families of POW-MIA's are also affected by this situation. They can only wonder about the destiny of their loved ones.

In the Columbus-Fort Benning area there are 13 families whose husbands or sons are POW-MIA's. One of these families is headed by Mrs. Benjamin H. Purcell whose husband has been held prisoner by the North Vietnamese since February 1968.

Mrs. Purcell has been extremely active in the Columbus-Fort Benning area in the fight for the prisoners' release. She has attempted to keep the community aware of the POW situation by distributing literature to the residents. Mrs. Purcell is also one of the sponsors of local letter writing campaign to Hanoi and a member of the Paris delegation.

For her efforts, Mrs. Purcell was named Fort Benning's Military Wife of the Year in 1970. More importantly, she learned that her husband was among the 455 POW's listed by the North Vietnamese government.

According to Phillip C. Habib, U. S. Ambassador to the Paris Peace Talks, "We've made some progress, but the protection provided by the 1949 Geneva Accords has been completely ignored by the other side."

When asked to describe the living conditions of men in solitary cells or bamboo huts, an escaped POW replied, "Think of the smallest room in your house. In your mind, strip it of all it's furniture. Turn off the heat and air-conditioning. Black out it's only window, except for a tiny area across the top. Remove the doorknob and plug the keyhole. Now add a bed of crude boards stretched across wooden sawhorses, a small bucket for your toilet, rats, a bare light bulb and the smell of a sewer."

You have just built a cell. Now, put yourself inside it, and imagine that you must stay there day after day for years on end, living in constant uncertainty and dread, barred from your loved ones, always hungry, and steadily deteriorating in both mind and body."

Because of these facilities many prisoners have attempted escape. Of these, only a few have succeeded.

"More than a dozen men have escaped or have been released in South Vietnam," says Mrs. Iris R. Powers, Department of the Army prisoner consultant, "and all have related the same treatment: being kept in leg stocks and small bamboo cages. Some have reported puncturing their veins with back and twigs to write messages in blood to other prisoners."

Mrs. Powers, whose own son has been listed as missing since a helicopter crash two years ago, became the DA consultant for the next of kin and missing personnel to make the problems easier for the families affected.

Since her appointment Mrs. Powers has visited each of the major Army headquarters and more than 700 POW-MIA families.

Mrs. Powers and Mrs. Purcell have jointly advised Fort Benning officials on the problems and complications surrounding the POW situation. A conference held in April produced many suggestions and implementations of both dedicated ladies.

Some of the local activities concerning the POW's and MIA's have been highly successful in arousing public meeting. A meeting held at the Royal Crown Auditorium in August honored the Georgia Prisoner of War and Missing in Action families.

Speakers at the meeting were Mrs. Thomas V. Parfet, Georgia State coordinator of the National League of Families of POW's and MIA's; Lt. Col. Elliot Sydnor, a participant in the raid on Son Tay Prison Camp in Nov. 1970, and MSgt. Dan Pfitzer, a prisoner of war from Oct. 1963 until Nov. 1967.

Another group, the Citizens Assistance Program for Prisoners of War, is seeking humane treatment for POW's by sending letters to Congress. During the Southern Open Golf Tournament the group sponsored a booth to obtain signatures for letters in support of the POW's.

When asked if the letters really accomplished anything for the POW's Mrs. Powers replied, "The need for public awareness of the plight of POW's and MIA's has never been greater. The Communist government in Southeast Asia appears to be sensitive to American public opinion. The recent appeal from private individuals for humane treatment of the prisoners seems to have had some success."

School receives conservation award

The commanding general's Resources Conservation Program award, "The Infantryman" plaque, was presented to Col. Kendrick B. Barlow, deputy assistant commandant, who accepted it for Brig. Gen. Paul F. Gorman and the Infantry School. Maj. Gen. Orwin C. Talbott, post commander, made the presentation recently, during a Commanding General's Conference.

The Infantry School has distinguished itself during the past year by saving through the program, $627,400 versus an assigned goal of $183,500 — an achievement of 341.9 per cent of the projected savings goal. In addition, 33 Management Improvement Projects were completed out of 44 scheduled during the fiscal year.

Determination of the recipient of the award was made jointly by the Comptroller and the Director of Industrial Operations.

The factors considered were the amount of savings in comparison to the projected goal, and the number of time phased Management Improvement Programs scheduled and completed by individual organizations during fiscal year 1971.

Good cook

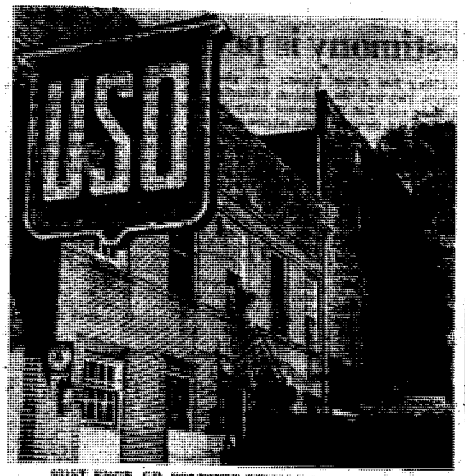
Things looked bleak for the Fort Benning soldier who inadvertently left his wallet, containing $350, in the Lawson Field cafeteria. Lucky for him the wallet was found. Freddie Stephens, a cafeteria employe found the wallet and turned it into the Provost Marshall. Did Freddie ever think of keeping the money? "Well, no," Stephens said slowly. "I thought maybe he had kids or needed the money for something. But, $350. Sure is tempting."

'Rock 'n Bonds A-Go-Go' to begin Monday

"Rock 'n Bonds A-Go-Go," a contemporary production to promote savings bonds participation, will start Monday at the Main Post Service Club. Two shows, one at 3:30 p.m. and one at 7:30 p.m. will run Monday with a show at Theater No. 3 at Sand Hill beginning at 3 p.m. Tuesday.

There will be a show Wednesday at 3:30 p.m. at the Harmony Church Field House, followed by another show Thursday at Kelly Hill Service Club also at 3:30 p.m.

The last two shows will be at Marshall Auditorium Friday at 3:30 p.m. and 7:30 p.m.



Performers will include Labrenda Wilson, a singer who has played leads in the Fort Benning Playhouse; Jerry Brown, a professional dancer; Buddy Nash and Sandy Olmon, who played leads in "Kiss Me Kate" and have often sung in Columbus; and the Infantry Chorus doing a skit from "South Pacific."

Influenza inoculation begins

A post-wide influenza immunization program is being conducted during October. Department of the Army policy requires all military personnel receive the annual anti-influenza immunization. Only soldiers who have a medically documented allergy to egg protein or an acute illness are excused.

The "flue shot" is recommended for all retired personnel, civilian employes and dependents over the age of 13. Pregnant women will not receive the shot.

"Flu shots" will be administered without charge to civilian employes on a voluntary basis at the nearest Troop Medical Clinic or Dependents Immunization Clinic, Martin Army Hospital Annex.

Fifth Avenue USO closes its doors for very last time

A bit of history died this week when the doors closed for the last time at the Fifth Avenue USO, a Columbus landmark and recreation center for soldiers for more than 30 years.

The Fifth Avenue USO, built in 1941, was closed because of a lack of funds, according to Bill Vann, USO executive director.

Men from the 608th Ord. Co., 931st Engr. Gp., have moved the USO furniture and equipment into the present downtown YMCA building at 14 West 11th Street, and the USO will combine its activities with the "Y" until a new location is erected sometime next year.

Vann said the monetary deficit was created when the City of Columbus was informed by the city attorney it could not legally donate city funds to organizations such as the USO. For years, he said the USO was able to maintain its former location with the help of USO, United Givers's Fund (UG) and city monies.

The city has not totally abandoned the USO, however, since Columbus will resume support of the servicemen's center next year by allowing the organization to locate in a new city-built complex.

Since 1964 the establishment has been operated and supported by the USO Council of Muscogee County with the assistance of UG and the City of Columbus.

Located at 841 5th Ave., the building was erected with money from the late Mrs. Lizzie M. Lunsford, a prominent Columbus business woman, who then leased it to the servicemen's organization.

In 1964 the USO underwent major renovation, including the purchase of new furniture, the addition of air conditioning and the installation of modern lighting facilities. Those improvements, costing almost $9,000, were paid by the National USO Building Services.

According to an official USO history, thousands of "military personnel, dependents and civilian volunteers have gone through its doors and thousands of helpful deeds have been rendered."

Byline Bayonet

(Byline Bayonet welcomes questions of general interest about Fort Benning and the Army. Within space limitations all reasonable questions will be answered. Questions of a purely military nature which obviously could be answered more properly by commanders or supervisors within the chain of command will not be accepted. All questions must be signed with current unit of assignment indicated. Send questions to the Bayonet, ATTN: SFC Bob Edwards, Room 602, Infantry Hall or telephone 545-4792.)

Q—I understand that I can purchase a home through FHA and have the government pay my mortgage insurance for me. Is this true?

A—Under Section 222 of the National Housing Act, which is intended to provide housing accommodations for service personnel and their families, the Federal Housing Administration (FHA) operates a program of mortgage insurance specially designed for the military. Any member of the Armed Forces who has been in active service for more than two years may be eligible for a Section 222, FHA-insured mortgage loan. What the FHA program actually does is insure that mortgage payments will be made to the lending institution should a soldier-buyer default in his payments. Your first step should you be interested in this program is to obtain a Certificate of Eligibility from your commanding officer. This certificate, DD Form 802, which you will receive in triplicate, establishes your "in-service" eligibility.

You must then contact the nearest FHA office to find out the fair market value of the property in which you are interested, then you apply for your loan through any lending institution (bank, savings and loan association, mortgage company or similar money-lending organization) that makes FHA-insured loans. For further information on this program, contact your personnel officer.

Q — I just reported in to Fort Benning and in order for me to register my car permanently I understand that I must complete a Defensive Drivers Course here. I attended one at my last Post, will they accept it here?

A — Yes, provided you have in your possession a certificate of completion for a Defensive Drivers Course. All personnel under 26 years of age are required to attend the Defensive Driver's Course prior to being issued permanent post tags.

Q — Under the GI Bill who is eligible for a Mobile Home Loan?

A — Veterans of World War II or the Korean Conflict, veterans of service on and after January 31, 1955, and active duty servicemen who have maximum home loan guaranty entitlement available in the amount of $12,500, are eligible for mobile home loans.

Q — How is eligibility determined for a Mobile Home Loan?

A — A veteran or serviceman may request a Certificate of Eligibility from the nearest Veterans Administration Regional Office. This request should be made on VA Form 26-1880, which should be accompanied by discharge or separation papers, or evidence of current active duty status.

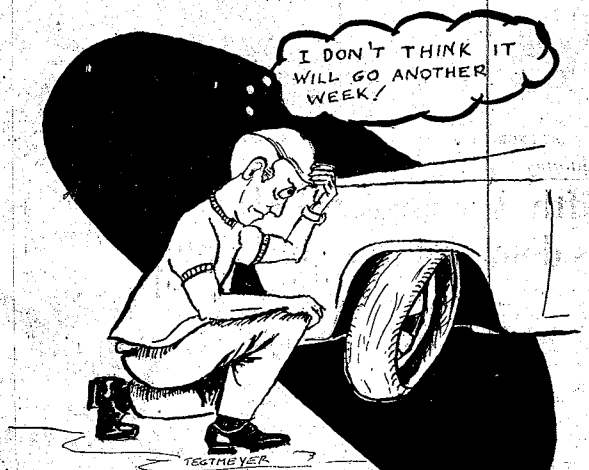
The judge says

Expert's testimony is persuasive

USAIC LEGAL ASSISTANCE OFFICE — Five customers who regularly had lunch at Sam's cafe came down with hepatitis within a few days of each other. The restaurant's cook also came down with the disease.

The cook sued Sam's cafe. He said the facilities in the restaurant were not clean. He claimed Sam violated the health and sanitary rules from time to time. But the cook lost his suit. Medical testimony was his undoing.

The doctors called by Sam testified that there was little chance that the cook got hepatitis from handling food at the restaurant. They put the odds at no more than 10 per cent. In fact, the usual case of hepatitis is caused by person to person contact and not from a common source outbreak such as food and water. "Food borne outbreaks" are very rare said the doctor. Besides the incubation period for infectious hepatitis was much longer than five days. The judge concluded that the cook must have gotten his hepatitis some other way.



Expert testimony on the crucial issue in the case can be quite persuasive. Experts can give their opinions. Ordinarily a witness can only testify to facts, not give opinions.

The experts may be any kind of person who has a special skill or knowledge that is helpful in deciding an issue. The "expert" must qualify as an expert before he testifies and gives an opinion. But the judge or jury may disregard an opinion if it does not appeal to their "reason."

All people are experts in some ways. For example, when we see certain people often, we come to know what is special about them, like the sound of their footsteps or their voices. Based on this, the lay witness can testify and give an opinion.

Also from knowing a person well, a lay witness may testify about this person's sanity. He may know whether the person always acts a certain way or is acting irregular.

Moreover, every one has some competency to give an opinion as to speed, distance, size or sounds. Age of others, values of property, even handwriting in some cases, are all matters to which one can testify.

THINK SAFETY!

PFC reflects Army's changing face

By Cathy Wright

How is VOLAR working out? If PFC George C. Grady is any indication, the changing face of the Army is making progress.

Grady, who is assigned to the 524th personnel company as a flexo type operator, finds the idea behind VOLAR and such concrete steps as Race Relations Seminars positive steps. Grady was selected by his company commander to attend a week-long training course as a race relations moderator. "This training made a real impression on me," says Grady. "I wish everyone could take it. It really made me wonder about a lot of things."

"For example," he continued, "we did some role playing in the course, in which we each took different military roles. I hadn't noticed before how difficult it is for the white man to understand the black man's position.

"When I played a black militant E2, I didn't know how to act, but the blacks in our group could switch easily from Black E2 to white E4.

"I think civilian companies will devote more and more time to this sort of training, too. Not only is it good human relations, but it's a good business investment because it promotes efficiency."

Grady says that as a result of this experience, he is now considering returning to school in psychology.

Grady, who once received a single paycheck for 8 different jobs, was an experienced bartender before entering the service. "I worked my way through school as a bartender, he says. "I worked in one hotel where I met Ed McMahon, and Mr. Block of H and R Block."

He now works part time as a bartender around Columbus for private parties.

Drafted following his graduation from Fort Lauderdale (Fla) University, Grady says he entered the Army with some suspicion.

"I had a lot of misconceptions about the Army," he commented. "I had read books about the harassment in basic, and I was shocked when a lot of it just didn't materialize."

He says he learned to make a distinction between lifers and career soldiers.

"I respect the career soldier," he says, "but lifers are just to be avoided.

"The important thing is that the Army stay willing and open. If they are willing to listen, the VOLAR thing will be all right."

'The Trial of Lt. Calley' offered by local paper

Production is complete on The Ledger - Enquirer Newspapers' book, "The Trial of Lt. William Calley" and copies are now being mailed to pre-publication subscribers. Sketches for the 50 - page book were selected from over 200 made on the scene by Ledger-Enquirer art director Angelo Franco. Narrative was written by Ledger military writer Tom Dunkin. The two covered the trial from the beginning.

Only 1,000 copies of the book have been published with each copy numbered to assure a limited edition. The book is printed on quality offset papers with a color cover. Orders are being filled for pre-publication subscribers with the balance of the copies now available at the following locations: Ledger-Enquirer reader service counter, first floor, main office, 17 West 12th Street; Ledger-Enquirer branch offices at 1517 5th Avenue in Phenix City and in Columbus Square, opposite Sears-Roebuck; Kirven's book department (downtown); White's Book Store, Cross Country Plaza; and Columbus Square Card and Book Shoppe. Newcomers welcomed through hospitality program

By JAN SMITH

"Hi Neighbor." These two words, we hope, will be the beginning of a most enjoyable tour at Fort Benning to all the new arrivals in the officers' family quarters. Through a new hospitality program, under the leadership of Mrs. Jere O. Whittington and the Officers' Wives' Club of Fort Benning, newcomers will be welcomed within a week of their move into quarters.

The new program is being instituted so that each new family can be personally welcomed by their neighbors and the OWC.

The new program originated in June and has been developing since, however the program is not in full swing as yet. Many long hours of planning were spent on the part of Mrs. Whittington and her committee. Members of the OWC board, feeling there was a need for this hospitality program, developed it to complement the individual units' hospitality program in hopes that each newcomer will feel an immediate part of her neighborhood and Fort Benning.

The program encompasses the entire post and is being conducted by area and block chairmen. There are 14 areas throughout post housing sections and approximately six blocks in each area. Twice a week Mrs. Whittington obtains a list of new families that have just moved into their quarters. Mrs. Whittington then calls the respective area chairman and tells her the new arrivals name and address. The area chairman then notifies the block chairman of the new arrival.

Within a week the block chairman will make a personal visit to the new neighbor. In her visit the new neighbor will be offered a folder from Army Community Services (ACS) which offers information on Columbus and Fort Benning and a booklet from OWC. In addition, possibly one of the most important features of the hospitality program, is the block chairman will try to answer questions and offer information concerning post exchanges, the OWC and its program, and schools; in general — just being a good neighbor.

This is just the beginning of the hospitality program for the OWC. In the future they hope to expand into the area of waiting wives throughout the Battle Park area, and eventually into welcoming newcomers in the Columbus area.

There are still openings for area and block chairmen. If anyone is interested, especially in the studen tapartments, Gibson Drive and Kessler Drive areas, please contact Mrs. Whittington at 545-2220. OWC needs volunteers and it is as simple as saying, "Hi Neighbor."

Club searching for wife of year

A preliminary search for the Fort Benning nominee for the 1972 Military Wife of the Year is now being conducted by Fort Benning women's clubs.

The purpose of the program is to recognize the efforts of military wives in fostering better human relationships around the world, and through participation in public service projects.

The current 1971 title holder, a sparkling, vivacious petite brunette, Mrs. Jan Squires, wife of Personnel man First Class Jim Squires, stationed at Lowry AFB, Denver, Colo., became the first Navy and enlisted man's wife to win the honors. Mrs. Squires led a campaign to clean up the Grand River in Lansing, Mich. by recruiting both local civilians and military personnel from nearby bases. Her extensive list of personal involvement in voluntary activities include leadership in Project Concern "Walk For Mankind" which brought her a citation from Michigan Governor Milliken.

Each service selects a Military Wife of the Year to represent them in the final competition held in May of each year.

Nominations will be submitted by each club on official entry forms. The final selection for Fort Benning will be made in November by a panel consisting of representatives of military and the civilian communities.

The 1971 Fort Benning Military Wife of the Year is Mrs. Benjamin H. Purcell, whose husband is a Prisoner of War.

In order to be considered, a woman must be a military wife active in post and community activities. She should be active in programs that promote better people-to-people relationships, and she must be poised and capable of speaking before large audiences.

Further information may be obtained from Fort Benning's women's clubs.

PFC Leroy Patton shows the form that helped his team win post softball championship.

Concerned MP interested in his job

From well-kept mustache lodged on his upper lip to soft eyes which bellow compassion, PFC Leroy Patton portrays a concerned military policeman.

As a correctionist specialist at the post stockade, Leroy works in the minimum section supervising clean-up details, answering the telephone, and keeping track of prisoners.

"It's an interesting job in that I learn a lot from the prisoners . . . about their problems and their way of life," Leroy, from the 139th Military Police Company, says. "Prisoners are placed in one of three 'custody' grades — medium, minimum, and parolee," he explained.

"Prisoners are placed in these custody grades depending upon the amount of supervision required to maintain discipline, law, and order."

When Leroy is not attuned to problems plaguing prisoners, he participates in athletics with the 139th.

As a freshman and sophomore, Leroy attended Edinboro College near Erie, Pa., on a football scholarship. "I like the competitive spirit prevalent in sports activities . . . not just football, but all sports," he commented.

Playing left field for the 139th slow-pitch softball team, he was part of the victorious team that won the post championships in August.

Leroy attributes the victory not to any one man, but, to a "team" effort. "Teamwork provided cohesion and unity of spirit that led our team to win this championship game," he said proudly.

Leroy sees one of the major problems in the Army as a lack of communication and a lack of faith in the words of senior enlisted men and officers. "In basic training and advanced individual training promises were made that were not kept. For instance, in basic training we were promised a day off for achieving a high score in Basic Rifle Marksmanship and we never received any time off. Commanders place so much value on scores that they sometimes make promises they are unable to keep," he continued.

"The new VOLAR concept will do much to alleviate problems in the Army," the MP contends. "Better pay and privileges will be necessary to make the Army more suitable as a career."

"When I was drafted, my view of the Army was somewhat stilted," Leroy said. "I had preconceived ideas from listening to guys I knew in college . . . guys who had already been in the service and didn't particularly enjoy the experience."

Army aviators rescue downed Navy aircraft

Mission accomplishment is the name of the game to the men in the 205th Assault Support Helicopter Company and the 609th Transportation Company.

When a Navy UH-1D helicopter was forced down four miles south of Warner Robins AFB, Ga., men from the 205th and the 609th combined their efforts for a successful recovery and evacuation of the downed aircraft. Because of the absence of access roads leading to the crash site, SFC Robert Heitger and Sp6 George Shimko of the 609th had to be transported to the area by boat in order to "rig" the aircraft for extraction.

The recovery aircraft, a CH-47A Chinook helicopter from the 205th, piloted by Maj. George Twiggs and CWO Thomas Brooks, had the difficult task of hovering the huge helicopter 100 feet above the wreckage while Sp6 Harry Frazier, flight engineer, lowered a 100-foot strap through the trees to the disabled aircraft. After the "hook-up" was completed, the downed aircraft was airlifted to Warner Robins AFB.

Warren Beatty more than superstar

With "Bonnie and Clyde," Warren Beatty became a producer, as well as a superstar. And because everything about that picture was special and successful Beatty has become more deeply involved in all aspects of film-making. In his current film, "McCab and Mrs Miller," which opens today at the Georgia theatre, he made his presence felt in the entire production.

Although he has never said so, there is no doubt that the day will soon come when Beatty turns acting over to somebody else and takes a firm position to stand behind the camera, as a director or a producer or both.

The "McCabe and Mrs. Miller" set was a town built in the woods near Vancouver. Julie Christie co-starred in the Warner Bros. picture which Robert Altman directed and David Foster and Mitchell Brower produced.

Although he is a superstar, Beatty resents any kind of fuss being made over him. He stays cool and remote and although he is invariably friendly and civilized and considerate, he hardly qualifies for the "good guy" trophy. When he is at work on the set he brooks absolutely no distraction.

PTA begins meetings

A speech by Maj. Gen. Orwin C. Talbott, post commander, highlighted the opening meeting of the Fort Benning chapter of the Parent Teacher Association (PTA) Oct. 5.

Following a short business meeting conducted by 1971-72 PTA president Col. Jack L. Conn of Weapons Dept., Dr. Joseph T. Conforti, schools superintendent, introduced administrators and principals of the post school system.

Conforti also explained the on-post bussing system, explaining that some pupils had to be sent to different schools on post in order to balance teacher load.

Conforti continued, "No child on post will have to walk to school as a result of being assigned to another school."

Gen. Talbott then spoke, urging parents to become interested in the PTA program and to participate in the many activities offered by the PTA.

'Carnival' showing three more times

Only three more performances by B. F. Schlegel's Grande Imperiale Cirque de Paris. Only three days left to see the colorful clowns, the crazy puppets, the peppy Siamese twins, the seductive snake charmer, the mystifying magician. All the glamour and excitement of a real carnival right here at Fort Benning.

The Imperiale Cirque de Paris is using the stage of the Benning Playhouse as their midway. In return, the troupers are helping the Benning Dramatizers do a musical production based on the glittering world of traveling shows. This joint effort is Robert Merrill's "Carnival."

The story they will be enacting is one of the carnival world's favorite legends. The now renowned Lili was once a pitiful orphan who came to the troupe looking for a home. She becomes a pawn in the struggle between the magician (Marco) and the puppeteer (Paul) for the center ring space. While being pulled, she has to puzzle out what is real and fake. Finding friendship with the puppets, Lili stumbles into and helps develop what is now the most famous puppet show in the entire world of circuses and carnivals.

Members of the Cirque de Paris and the Dramatizers are playing the various parts.

Lili: Lana Robertson.
Paul: Joe Nitz.
Marco: Tom Lynch.
Rosalie: Lanie Russell.
Jacquot: Gene Miller.
B. F. Schlegel: Larry Conklin.
Grobert: Barry Carter.
Olga: Jo Ann Blanks.
Dr. Glass: Dave McQueen.

Carnival roustabouts: Steve Silver, Doug Liverett, Ricky Liverett, Bill English, Dan Ortego, Chas Boentegen.

Carnival girls: Shirley Liverett, Cyndi Lewis, Edith Simmons, Gail Robinson, Marsha Pate, Debbie Cummings.

B. F. Schlegel and Larry Conklin who are co-directing this extravaganza give a lot of credit for its success to the technical production crew: Jeff Grandel, set design; Tom KOBER, Barry Carter, Bill Chapman, Bart Pearl, Dan Oretego, Jose Garcia and Edith Simmons.

No musical production is complete without musicians, Mrs. Anna Gaston and Randy Englund give stirring support to the musical numbers.

Remember. The Grande Imperiale Cirque de Paris and the Benning Dramatizers present "Carnival" Friday through Sunday at the Benning Playhouse. Midway lights go on at 8 p.m. Entrance to the grounds is one dollar and after that all the acts are free.

Synopsis

LOVE STORY (Rated GP) is a story about young love and will be enjoyed by anyone young at heart.

Ali McGraw and Ryan O'Neal meet in the library at Radcliffe. O'Neal comes from a wealthy family while MacGraw is the daughter of a Rhode Island baker. They fall in love and, over the objections of O'Neal's father (Ray Milland) they marry.

Without family wealth, O'Neal and MacGraw must make it on their own. It is a simple story which puts into pictures what sometimes cannot be expressed by words.

"TORA! TORA! TORA!" (Rated G) in Japanese means "Tiger! Tiger! Tiger!" This was the code signal flashed by Lt. Cmdr. Mitsuo Fuchida back to the Japanese carrier Akagi to signify his attack squadron had achieved complete surprise in the strike against the U.S. Naval Base, Pearl Harbor.

Telling the story from both sides as it occurred on the highest diplomatic, political and military levels, "TORA! TORA! TORA!" traces the events culminating in the attack of December 7, 1941 — "the date of infamy" — that catapulted America into World War II.

SLEDGE (Rated R) James Garner is a leader of a strangely garbed band of badmen whose goal is a $200,000 gold shipment which is being guarded by 40 armed men. men.

Sledge decides that the best way to get at the gold is to get himself locked up in the same prison where the gold is stored overnight on its journey to the mint. Onee inside, he organizes a jailbreak and the guards are so busy gunning down the fleeing prisoners that the gang succeeds in making off with the loot.

But the greed for gold takes its toll on the gang and Garner, the only one left, decides it wasn't worth it all anyway.

THE HIRED HAND (Rated GP) Peter Fonda stars in this "now" western which deals with more than just cowboys and Indians.

After seven years of traveling the west with saddlemates Walten Oates and Robert Pratt, Fonda decides to return to the wife (Verna Bloom) and daughter he deserted.

Before reaching his destination, Pratt is killed by cantina owner Severn Darden for allegedly attacking his woman and Fonda in turn, shoots Darden. Fonda and Oates arrive at the farm and sign on as hired hands as Fonda gradually wins back his wife's love.

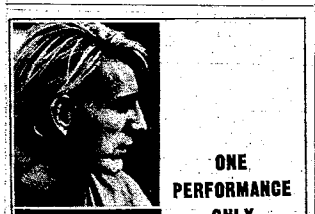
Oates finds himself attracted to Bloom and finally decides to leave. A grisly turn of events prompts Fonda to settle one more score before he can live in peace.

10 RILLINGTON PLACE (Rated GP) In 1949, Attenborough rents a flat at 10 Rulington Place to a young couple, Judy Geeson and John Hurt and their baby. Geeson learns she's pregnant again and decides they can't have another baby.

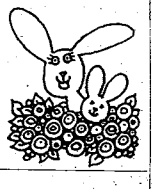
Hurt agrees to an abortion performed by Attenborough who murders Geeson and then kills the baby. Hurt goes to the police and is held for murder, because of his lies and Attenborough's testimony.

Hurt is hanged, an innocent man. This miscarriage of justice led to the abolition of England's death penalty.

"GOODBYE, MR. CHIPS (Rated G) one of the unforgettable love stories of all time, stars Peter O'Toole as "Mr. Chips," the shy dedicated schoolmaster at a British public school.



Petula Clark is Katherine, who gives up her glamorous life as a London music hall actress to become his bride.



Sir Michael Redgrave is the Headmaster in MGM's new screen version of the classic James Hilton novel.

History-Making Howitzer Fires Millionth Round For Battalion

WASHINGTON (ANF)—The 155mm artillery piece "Calamity Jane" recently added another milestone to its unit's history by firing the one millionth round in Vietnam for the 2d Battalion, 11th Artillery, 101st Airborne Division (Airmobile).

Named after the well-known, gun-toting cowgirl of the old West, the first "Calamity Jane" fired the last round of World War I in 1918.

The present "Calamity Jane" was a part of the shore defense at Pearl Harbor during World War II. It was the first 155mm Howitzer to be used in the Korean War and also had the honor of firing the last round in that conflict.

Coming to Vietnam in 1966, "Calamity Jane" opened a new page for the "On Time" 2d Battalion's history by firing the first round there, for the battalion.

The showdown between 931st Engineer Group flag football league leaders last week left the undefeated 608th Ord. Co. in undisputed possession of first place after eight straight wins.

The ordnance company downed the smaller but speedy nine from 92nd Pers. Ser. Co., pushing the personnel clerks into third place with a record of six wins with two losses.

Rising into second place was 15th Finance, which now boasts a 7-2 record. The finance squad is being challenged for that runner-up slot by the strong teams of Co. C, 43rd Engr. Bn., and 524th, with both teams winning six and losing only two.

Tied for fourth place are the two teams from Sand Hill, the 586th Engr. Co. (FB) and HHC, 931st. Both teams have identical won-loss totals of 4-3. Although the record doesn't show it, the HHC team is a much improved ball club, bouncing back from a discouraging 2-3 record.

Receiver Kim Henson of HHC, 43rd Engr. Bn. picks up about 12 yards on this down-and-out pass pattern against the league leaders 608th Ord. Co. The ordnance company defeated the engineer squad and maintained its undefeated streak.

Fantastic Fanatic of Football Fortune Merely Foolish

Ah yes, once more the mighty medium of the midfield made mud of the opposition. This time the psychic seer of the stadium scored unmercifully over the 3rd Hanger Co., with a muddled mark of .769 to .695. The pigskin prophet roved once again victorious over the foolish foes of football fevered Fort Benning. This week the statistical star of stadium stats will out-duel Lt. Hensler of the O.D.D.L.P. The WELL-oiled ornery oracle will undoubtedly out-score the opposition in this weeks duel of dastardly drudgery. You too can attempt to teeter the terrific totaler of the touchdown traffic. By dailing 545-1544 or 545-4792, and phoning the fantastic fanatic of football fortune. Just ask-for the gridiron GYPSY.

Being from Pittsburgh I naturally lean towards sports teams from the Steel City. Winners have been few and far between, but amazingly enough the fans never faltered.

Blessed with the remembrance of 1960 when Bill Mazeroski toppled the seemingly unbeatable Yankees with his tenth inning homer. The Pirate fans have held on for 11 long years in search of another winner.

Now, in this the tenth month of 1971, the Pirates once again have found themselves in much the same situation. They are the underdogs once more, and they have to face a team that in some circles is being compared to the 1972 Yankees.

The Baltimore Orioles have, since 1966, dominated the American League. They are strong in every position with the possible exception of relief pitching. But with four twenty-game winners who needs the late inning firemen? Hitters of the caliber of the Robinsons, Boog Powell, Don Buford, and newcomer Merv Rettenmund surely must appear awesome of the tired and overworked moundsmen of Pittsburgh.

The Orioles are also old hands at the business of World Series play, whereas the young Pirates must go with such inexperienced players as Richie Hebner, Manny Sanguillen, Dave Cash, Bob Robertson and Al Oliver. Oldsters such as Roberto Clemente, Willie Stargell and the hero of '60, Bill Mazeroski, were supposed to be the stabilizing element in the Pirates quest for the World championship.

But . . . Ah yes, but . . . The series, is now three games old and all the progrostication in the world can't change what's happened, nor I might add, what will happen. Through games one and two it seemed as if the Pirates were relying on their regular season record coupled with the series jitters. Starters Dock Ellis and Bob Johnson were bombed out early as the opportunist Orioles were riding the crest of a 16 game winning streak.

But . . . Like all streaks they must come to an end. And so it was in the third game that th ePirates realized the Birds were not the ghosts of the old Yanks. They pounded on crafty left-hander Mike Cuellar for two runs early and had him on the ropes most of the game, but in the sixth inning Bob Robertson, hero of the playoffs, hit a towering home run to the opposite field. As the ball reached the stands one could almost sense that with that home run the Bucs' were again themselves.

Just what are the Pittsburgh Pirates, they are true professionals. They battled back from the late season surge of the St. Louis Cardioals and won handily. They have been besieged by late season injuries, Ellis' elbow, Stargell's knee, and Nelson Briles' leg. All this seemed to dominate their thoughts during the first two gams, as they missed chance after chance to score runs and make the series more interesting.

The Orioles on the other hand were reacting to the Pirates awe by cashing in on every opportunity. Time after time the AL Champs made the Pirates suffer from their miscues. Whereas the Orioles made mistake after mistake and never paid so much as a run for them. The Birds, a usually slick fielding team have committed seven errors in the short span of three games. Could it be that they are overplaying the slump ridden Bucs or are they just human too?

These and many more questions will be answered during the remainder of the series. The experts say that in a short series pitching is the key, but with Stargell only producing one single in 22 at bats, odds are that if he gets hot, no pitching staff in the world could contain his powerful bat. The Pirates are a team that streaks and when it does screwballs, sliders, curveballs, and fastballs seem to be nothing more than balls thrown at batting practice by Iron Mike.

My guess is that the Pirates will make a game out of it yet and put to rest many of their critics. The Birds became too overconfident by winning the first two with comparative ease. Now with a win under their belt the Pirates can play their game, and by the virtue of being at home in Three Rivers Stadium they will overcome much of their early series nervoosness.

I look for the Baltimore to win in seven, mainly because of the advantage of winding up at home, hut as long as "Maz" is still wearing number nine anything can happen. The unbelievable happened in 1960, ask the Orioles, excuse me I meant the Yankees.

Fishermen catch sail fish 6 ft.-6 in.

By Bill Kloeb

Catches made by fishermen aboard the "Follow Me" deep sea fishing boat included a sail fish over six feet in length, bull and school dolphin, king and Spanish mackerel, trigger fish and bonito.

The "Follow Me" based at the Special Services operated Infantry Center Rest Camp, Destin, Fla. made seven trips into the Gulf of Mexico last week to record some of the best catches made this year.

The most spectacular catch was made by Capt. E. G. Hodgedood and his party. Last Friday they took a sailfish six-feet, six-inches long, one bull dolphin, two king mackerel, three bonito and two Spanish mackerel.

Roy Johnson, 65 Clearview Drive, Columbus, chartered the boat on Tuesday and again on Thursday. On Tuesday his party caught 58 school dolphin, two bull dolphin and two bonito. On Thursday the catch was even more varied, but not as large in numbers. The boat came back with 14 king mackerel, two bonito, two trigger fish and one bull dolphin.

The other trips made by the "Follow Me" were half day charters but on each trip the fishermen aboard took good catches.

Monday afternoon 1st Lt. Richard Overmeyer and his party took 37 king mackerel and one bonito. According to SSgt. Ernest Green, skipper of the Follow Me, this could have been a record trip if the party had been able to stay longer. He said they could have caught at least a hundred of the mackerel.

Other half day trips were made by Col. Paul Walnes, Martin Army Hospital, Sgt. Jimmie Agan, 1019 Brooks Road, Columbus and Capt. Warrn Garlock, 302 Mays Circle, Eglin Air Force Base.

Col. Walnes and his party brought in 12 king mackerel and 5 bonito on Sunday. Agan and his party caught 10 king mackerel and one bonito and the Garlock party landed six king mackerel, five bonito and 14 school dolphin.

The Follow Me may be chartered on a half day or daily basis by active duty and retired military personnel. Reservations are made on a first come first served basis but during this time of the year it is not difficult to arrange a charter. Reservations may be made at the Post Special Service Division Recreation Office or for additional information call 545-7414.

ROD AND GUN CLUB Notes

By Bill Kloeb

Recently the Post Daily Bulletin published a notice of interest to all personnel authorized hunting and fishing privileges on the Fort Benning Military Reservation. The notice which pertains to licences was published in the official section of the Daily Bulletin on Oct. 6. Since it will affect almost all hunters and fishermen it is quoted below.

"Recent decisions of the Georgia Game and Fish Commission and the Alabama Department of Conservation necessitate the following changes in license requirements for the Fort Benning Military Reservation.

a. All Active Duty military personnel stationed at Fort Benning may purchase a resident Georgia hunting and or fishing license.

b. Civilian personnel who are authorized hunting and fishing privileges on the Fort Benning Military Reservation and who reside in Georgia must prior to hunting or fishing on the Alabama portion of the reservation possess non-resident Alabama lipenses.

c. Civilian personnel who are authorized hunting and fishing privileges on the Fort Benning Military Reservation and who reside in Alabama must prior to hunting or fishing on the Georgia portion of the reservation possess non-resident Georgia licenses. (Engineer, 545-6120)

Another notice published in the official section of the Daily Bulletin is of interest to Alabama residents. It was submitted by the Provost Marshal Division and reads "This office has received notification that effective Oct. 1, the state of Alabama will require that all personnel hunting and fishing within Alabama have a valid hunting and or fishing license in his possession. This includes servicemen who are residents of Alabama. (PMD, 545-2942)."

According to the Provost Marshal Division the regulations outlined in both announcements are in effect now. Anyone having questions concerning the announcements may obtain additional information by calling the telephone numbers listed at the end of the announcements.

Turkey Shoot Plans Are Firm

Plans have been completed for the Rod and Gun Turkey Shoot on Oct. 30. The shoot will be held at the club skeet ranges from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m. Winners will receive frozen turkeys weighing from 10 to 12 pounds. The club will have the turkeys at the range on the day of the shoot. Winners can pick up their turkey immediately after shooting. Those who want turkey for Thanksgiving don't have to go to the club to have a chance for one. All unit representatives on the club board of governors have segmented wheels which give everyone an opportunity to get a turkey even though they can't get out to the club to shoot.

October Fishing Derby

MSgt. George J. Burke, 1033 Fleming Avenue leads two categoriesо f the Rod and Gun Club October Fishing Derby. He registered a one-pound, three-ounce bream and a five-pound, eight-ounce catfish. Both were taken from King's Pond. The largest bass registered this month came from Harp's Pond. SFC James F. Benton, 93ist Engineer Group caught it early this month and it weighed in at five-pounds, nine-ounces.

At this time of the year fishing usually takes a back seat for hunting on the reservation but according to experienced fishermen the best time of the year for fishing is right now. Since the water has cooled the fish have given up the deep holes they went to to keep cool and are moving around quite a bit.

We haven't mentioned the Fishing Derby for some time and there are probably enough new people on the post to warrant an explanation of the contest.

The Rod and Gun Club holds a derby each month of the year. Merchandise prizes are awarded to the fishermen registering the largest bass, bream or catfish during the month. A $15 merchandise order good for purchase of items at the club counter is the usual prize.

Participants must be members of the Rod and Gun Club, register their intent to enter the contest at the club prior to going fishing and bring the catch to the club for weighing. All fish must come from one of the post ponds. Fish caught in the Chattahoochee River and streams may not be entered.

High Power Rifle Match scheduled

The U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit's Service Rifle team will sponsor the Fort Benning monthly High Power Rifle Match which opens at Easley Range on Dixie Road tomorrow.

An individual aggregate and four-man National Match Course team tournament, the NRA sanctioned two-day series of matches will include varied position, timing and range of events. The four individual matches will be an 800 aggregate championship, 20 shots in each event.

Sponsored by the Fort Benning Rifle and Pistol Club, the week-end match is expected to attract approximately 50 competitors from the South and Southeast. The U.S. Army Infantry Center team, Third Army Marksmanship team, Ft. Bragg, N. C. MTU team and Ft. Rucker, Ala. MTU team have indicated they plan to compete. In addition, a Marine Corps team from the Jacksonville, Fl a. Naval Air Training Center will enter the events along with some of the top high power civilian rifle shooters from the southeast section of the country. Some of the select local civilian shooters entering the matches include Mr. James Cannington and Col. (Ret.) William Horan of Columbus. Cannington won the Championship of the Air Force Cup match in the National Rifle and Pistol matches at Camp Perry, Ohio in August when he fired a 198-TX.

Ft. Rucker outshoots Benning

The Ft. Rucker skeet team, competing in the Invitational Shoot at Benning in early October defeated the Benning team by a score of 226 to 218.

The win avenged a loss last spring when Fort Benning downed the Aviation Center shooters in the first Invitational Shoot which the U. S. Army Skeet and Trap Teams of the U. S. Army Marksmanship Training Unit at Fort Benning sponsor.

Shooting two rounds of skeet, each round consisting of 25 birds (clay pigeons), the Ft. Rucker team's scores were: Col. Harry Harper, 49; Maj. Theron Talbot, 48, Capt. Bob Pierce, 45; Capt. Rodger Williamson, 44, and Lt. Col. Dick Dixon, 40.

Talbot is assigned to the Department of Graduate Flight Training, Army Aviation School. The other team members are all from the Department of Standards and Instructor Training.

Fort Benning's try at regaining the traveling trophy, symbol of the winning team, will come in November when Ft. Rucker will have a shoot at the Dave Forte Skeet Range.

Congressmen observe mortar demo

Congressman John T. Flynt Jr. (Ga.) and Congressman Jack Brinkley (Ga.) observed a firing of the "Jet Shot Silent Disposable Mortar" here Oct. 1, at Brann Range.

The weapon system was developed by a Belgian contractor, S. A. Poudreries Reunies de Belgique, who provided the demonstration at no cost to the government.

The "Jet Shot" is a totally new approach to weapons. Present configurations are designed for a munition of one and one-fourth pounds fired at a range of 430 meters.

The system is adaptable to current shoulder weapons making every rifleman a mortarman as well as allowing him to initiate his mission in silence.

New warhead geometry and sophisticated explosive compositions complete this major breakthrough in field weapons.

Double national average

Ex-servicemen's jobless rate now 11 per cent

The rising unemployment rate made 1971 a lean year, thus, last week's news that 6.1 per cent of the nation's work force is jobless made things appear leaner still.

A sluggish economy combined with large numbers of discharged veterans have contributed heavily to the dilemma many Americans are finding themselves in. As for ex-servicemen, the jobless rate is estimated at over 11 per cent, almost double the national average.

MANPOWER TRAINING

The Army has been coping with the problem here through Project Transition. Initiated by the U.S. Continental Army Command in January 1969, Project Transition is aimed at military personnel with 6 months or less active duty time remaining and whose military training has not prepared them with suitable civilian job skills.

Under the project, servicemen are eligible to receive classroom and on the job training in a number of areas. Courses in automatic data processing, welding, law enforcement, meat cutting and restaurant management are a few of the many courses available.

FOOTING THE BILL

Under the Manpower Training Development Act, most of the job development courses are taught by civilians. The U.S. Department of Labor maintains the program. Only three courses are taught by Army personnel.

In addition to general instruction given on the job and in the classroom, Project Transition vocational counselors have given individual counseling to over 37,800 servicemen.

All courses at Fort Benning are taught in the Harmony Church section. On the job training is administered wherever the individual performs his specialty.

KEEPING TABS

Project Transition officer Gus Schlitzkus, a retired Infantry lieutenant colonel, has attempted to keep track of all Transition graduates in order to gauge both successes and failures.

Questionnaires are mailed to the discharged veterans 60 days after they leave Fort Benning. Of the 41,712 men who have completed the mailouts as of Aug. 21, 89.3 per cent had found employment. Of the 10 per cent unemployed, many have returned to school under the GI Bill, which has now expanded its benefits to pay for vocational education. The total unemployed is up .7 per cent over last month. Coincidentally, the return on questionnaires has also increased .7 per cent.

WHERE JOBS ARE

Jobs are scarce for most Americans, and Transition has not been flooded with job offers for departing servicemen. However, the Office of the Assistant Secretary of Defense (for Manpower and Reserve Affairs) compiles all available job opportunities in the form of a data sheet and sends it to Transition offices across the country.

Jobs range from $5500 per year for positions requiring little skill to as much as $320 per week for high skill slots in construction and electronics related industries.

Schlitzkus cited lack of mobility on the part of the veterans as a chief stumbling block to finding employment.

"Most people want to go back to their home towns and work," he said. "If it's a small town, chances are that jobs are few and far between. The veteran has a better chance if he's willing to move where the work is, and that's usually in a metropolitan area.

TRANSITION GRADUATES

Many on the job training graduates of transition have found work, both in Columbus and in their own parts of the country. In air conditioning and refrigeration and in electricity and electronics, demand has been fairly good. Veterans are usually preferred for police forces, and law enforcement training graduates that meet the prescribed standards have found work on police forces in a number of places.

Administrators and job foremen are another example of occupations tailored for military personnel. Employers look favorably on the management capabilities of many former officers and NCOs.

FUTURE

Project Transition will receive further help from the Department of Labor in the future. By 1972, it is hoped that a job data bank will be created in Washington, D. C. Jobs available and skills available can be matched by computer, eliminating much of the struggle to find just where the jobs are at any given time.

Those using the system will have ready access to information listing jobs by location or by skill required.

Honor grad

2nd Lt. Michael N. Grabowski was the Distinguished Honor Graduate of the IOBC Class 2-72 when the 24th Co., 2nd Bn., TSB, graduated in ceremonies Sept. 27 in Marshall Auditorium.

Col. Leonard R. Deams Jr., director, Command Maintenance Department, USAIS, delivered the commencement address to the 202 graduates.

Grabowski is a native of Pensacola, Fla.

'Dynamic Training' introduced to Benning

Gen. W. C. Westmoreland, Army chief of staff, has directed the creation of a Board for Dynamic Training to help commanders train their men.

In June the Department of the Army canceled most requirements for mandatory individual training and gave responsibility for training management to commanders of battalions and separate companies.

The new board is designed to form a link between the managers of combat arms training and the Army's extensive training establishment.

According to Gen. Westmoreland, "Through such a link, each training manager should be able to draw on the experience of those who have encountered and overcome training difficulties in the past, to tap into the impressive expertise at your service schools for solving new problems and to become acquainted with innovative solutions devised by contemporaries afield."

The board will be located at Fort Benning, Ga., and will be chaired by Brig. Gen. Paul F. Gorman, assistant commandant of the Infantry School. Members of the board will include representatives of the infantry, armor, field artillery and air defense artillery center teams, active Army divisions and separate brigades or regiments, corps artillery and the Reserve Components.

Every training manager in the Army will complete a survey telling the board what help he needs or wants to assist him in training dynamically: concepts, ideas, techniques, training literature, devices or other support.

Members of the board will meet for a four- to six-week session to evaluate the surveys, record innovations commanders have devised for dynamic training and carry back to their units the best thought of the Army's training establishment on solutions to their particular training problems.

The board will work with the commanders of the infantry, armor, field artillery and air defense artillery schools and of the Command and General Staff College.

The Board for Dynamic Training will prepare revisions or supplements to training literature and produce a catalog of ideastimulating material on how to organize and conduct effective, stimulating, adventurous training, and how to conduct training on tactics and weapons despite limitations on training areas or conditions of understrength.

'One-miss' policy tested

A new "one-miss" policy is now being tested for all space-available travel world-wide for soldiers receiving transportation on military aircraft.

The prospective space-available passenger must now arrive, ready to travel, at the terminal and remain until his name is called for a flight.

The soldier may register for five destinations simultaneously, but he must take the first flight for which his name is called.

The names of passengers who fail to respond will be removed from the register for travel space available.

Those passengers will be required to re-register if they still wish to travel space available, and their names will be placed at the bottom of the appropriate register.

Under the registration system previously used, travelers could register for scheduled flights a week in advance and call the terminal during the week to check their position on the space-available roster.

That system tended to inflate the number of listings on the space-available registers and many seats were not being used.

Under the new system, passengers will be able to determine more accurately their chances of movement and the approximate waiting time involved.

EVERYBODY DRIVES A USED CAR!

A drug display assembled by Chaplain (Capt.) Thomas Fraker draws the attention of the Problem-Solving Seminar participants.

Techniques for dealing with drug abuse and related emotional difficulties were discussed during three Problem Solving Seminars recently held by the 4th Bn. (Airborne), TSB: The seminars, organized by Chaplain (Capt.) Thomas R. Fraker, were a pilot project for future problem solving seminars to be presented to unit leadership.

"The 4th Bn. is acutely aware of the drug problem, not because of its magnitude, but because of the critical type of Airborne Training," said Fraker. "It is important that we immediately identify the drug abuser and get him out of potentially hazardous training."

The seminar included instruction in Pharmocology, directed by Maj. Henry J. Waters, Medical Services Corps; the amnesty program. Col. Robert M. Lathrop, staff judge advocate; and the role of leadership in drug abuse, Capt. Mac Rodgers, instructor; leadership committee. Additionally, Lt. Col. Richard Nybro, assistant post chaplain, and Sp6 Dan Bradshaw, presented seminars in crisis counseling.

Capt. Leonard B. Scott, one of 276 personnel attending the seminar, commented, "Commanders are legally set up to deal with drugs, but only in a sense of attacking the person with a drug problem. Through the seminar, we have learned how to either communicate with the soldier, or to direct him to people who can help him solve his problem."

CDC uses old methods to encourage ideas

The Creative Thinking Award, established by the U. S. Army Combat Developments Command (CDC), Ft. Belvoir, Va. to encourage meaningful contributions to combat developments efforts from students at the Army's officer advanced courses at branch and service schools, is one of the Fort Benning CDC's primary sources of new uses for "old ideas."

Winners of the Creative Thinking Award will be presented a replica of Rodin's statue of "The Thinker," a $100 Savings Bond and a CDC Certificate of Achievement.

Papers that are not winning submissions, but which warrant future consideration, will be forwarded to USACDC for staffing and evaluation. Ideas adopted at a later date will be credited to the author and a letter of commendation provided by the commanding general, USACDC, will be awarded.

All officers presently attending the Command and General Staff College or Officer Branch Advanced Courses are eligible. Officers currently enrolled in the Infantry Officers' Advanced Course where can obtain further information by phoning Maj. Truman C. Johnson at 545-2319.

Scout Dog class 2-72 honors Scott Harrison

The 21 students of the Scout Dog Handlers Course Class 2-72 graduated Sept. 29 in Infantry Hall. PFC Scott A. Harrison, Spokane, Wash., was the Distinguished Honor Graduate and was awarded a trophy from the 17th Co., 1st Bn., TSB. Col. John J. Powell, deputy for the Veterinary Activity, MEDDAC, USAIC, presented the awards and the commencement address.

Seventeen weeks of intensive training prepare the students to handle and appreciate the abilities of a Scout Dog. Class 2-72 is the second group to complete an experimental program of instruction that uses new techniques of training both the Scout Dog and its master. The emphasis is placed upon positive reinforcement when handling the dogs as opposed to the old punishment methods used for some 25 years.

The program is broken down into five phases: conditioning a dog to obedience, basic, intermediate and advanced scouting techniques, and special training (river crossing, rapelling and search methods).

In the course of instruction the students learn to effectively employ their dogs in tactical situations and to be familiar with the extra responsibilities that come with a Scout Dog.

Harrison is currently on orders for Vietnam.

2nd Lt. Joseph F. Skeele, Columbus, Ohio, was the distinguished Honor Graduate of the Infantry Officer Basic Course Class 1-72. 23rd Co., 2nd Bn., TSB, Graduated in ceremonies Sept. 13 in Marshall Auditorium, Infantry II.

For 65,000

Early release scheduled

Some 65,000 officers and enlisted men will be released from active duty by June 30, 1972, according to Department of the Army spokesmen. Many of these will be released before their normal ETS, as the Army moves to cut its manpower to the lowest level in 11 years.

Most of those to be released are in grades and skills in which the Army is overstrength, or whose tours of duty are almost completed.

Included are career enlisted personnel in grades E3 through E9 and some 4,000 reserve company grade officers, as well as first-term personnel.

Those affected by the reduction will be notified between October and January.

The Army times quoted Army spokesmen as saying all non-regular officers, warrants and enlisted people with ETS or release dates betweeo Dec. 18 and Jan. 2, 1972 inclusive "will be separated or released", between Dec. 8 and 17 or as soon as possible thereafter.

The Army will permit piggyback of the holiday and other early-out deals as long as the total drop does not exceed 179 days.

RA first termers qualifying for the new drop whose ETS falls between Nov. 1 and Dec. 31 will be separated in the first 10 days of November or as soon as possible thereafter.

The following release schedule has been established for others. The first column represents the original ETS, and the second the early-out date:

Jan. 31, 1972	Nov. 1971
Feb. 29, 1972	Dec. 1971
March 31, 1972	Jan. 1972
April 30, 1972	Feb. 1972
May 31, 1972	March 1972
June 30, 1972	April 1972

These actions are in keeping with plans to reduce current Army strength from 1,120,000 to 892,000 by June 30 of next year.

Types of early release include:

Continuation of 120-day early out for

Gen. DePuy to be guest of 1st Inf. Div.

The Fort Benning Branch of the Society of the 1st Division will hold a social hour at 5:30 p.m. on Oct. 27 at the Lawson Field Officers Club.

Lt. Gen. William E. DePuy, deputy vice chief of staff, U.S. Army, and a former division commanding general of the "Big Red One" in Vietnam will be a guest.

Anyone who has served with the 1st Infantry Division in peace or war is invited to attend. Free beer and snacks will be served. For information call Maj. Howard Stanfield at 545-5564.

More stabilized tours planned for some senior enlisted men

By Wendell Cochran

More stabilized tours are in the works for many Fort Benning soldiers, particularly senior noncommissioned officers.

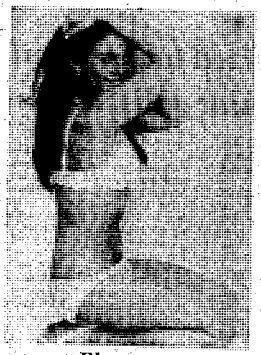
A new policy just announced this week also guarantees a 12-month assignment at Fort Benning for first term personnel re-enlisting for their present duty assignments. This test, being run through June 30, 1972, is also being conducted at Ft. Bragg. The Fort Benning re-enlistment office said the 12-month stabilization is automatic, but reminded unit personnel offices to be certain to record the proper FSA (foreign service availability) code in the re-enlistee's records.

According to Army News Features (ANF), new policies also have been formulated regarding stabilization of senior NCO's.

Under the new guidelines, command sergeants major will have 18-month minimum stabilized tours, with 24-month duty assignments preferred.

For first sergeants, the minimum tour is 12 months with 18 months assignments preferred, ANF reported.

Desirable stabilization is based upon the needs of the Army, the requirement for stability of key personnel with units, the need for availability of career progression assignments and the availability of qualified personnel.



Key NCOs will not be reassigned locally before they complete a minimum stabilized tour or solely because they have completed a stabilized tour, ANF reported.

Come the down sounds

Playmate

Danielle de Vabre, PLAYBOY'S November Playmate of the Month, is a voluptuous, brown-haired, green-eyed French-Canadian, who likes Montreal as her home base. Her writing ambitions were sidelined when she became a ski instructor at Colorado's Steamboat Springs ski area. She kept a promise, however, to her family to stay only four months at the winter wonderland; after a highly successful season of teaching rosy snow bunnies what it's all about, she returned to Canada. Danielle's leave from college wasn't to end, however, for the athletic astrology fan then took off to visit Norway with friends. Stateside admirers look forward to her early return. 'Light boat' repairs made

Fifty-one weeks of the year, the 609th Transportation Company repairs aircraft, but, every fall for one week it becomes a "light boat" repair company.

This year, the sheet metal shop of the Shop Platoon tested and repaired 47 canoes for the annual Boy Scout Canoe-A-Thon from Fort Benning to Lake Eufaula, Ala.

The canoes were all tested in the Chattahoochee River to determine what repairs were needed. After the repairs were made, the canoes were again "river tested" and all pronounced seaworthy by "Admiral in Charge" SSgt. Charles Evans and his crew, Sgt. Lowell McCracken, Sp3 Joseph Matlock, Sp4 Harvey Chisby, Sp4 Donald Harpe, PFC Gary Fridley, Pvt. Otto Gruber and Pvt. Stephen Dec.

Col. Kaufman new MAH XO

Col. Paul Kaufman, has been assigned as the new executive officer at Martin Army Hospital. He will replace Col. James H. Snelling, who is retiring from active duty at the end of October. Col. Kaufman's most recent assignment was as executive officer at Darnall Army Hospital, Fort Hood, Tex. He was stationed there from 1968 to 1971.

Col. Kaufman has had two overseas assignments, the first in the European Theater of Operations during WWII, and then in Germany from 1953 to 1956.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

by Bill King

The next time you make an apple pie, try sprinkling an ounce of cointreau over the pie mixture before adding the top crust.

To boil a cracked egg, first wrap it in foil and twist the ends closed. Be sure to remove foil as soon as egg has reached desired "doneness".

The term "salad days", meaning a time of youth, innocence and inexperience, comes from the Shakespearean line, "My salad days, when I was green in judgment, cold in blood."

Speaking of cold green salads, when the recipe calls for onion rings, try using sweet red onions, which add eye appeal and a more delicate flavor.

Diet tip: substitute quarter-inch slices of cucumber for the usual cracker or toast base in your favorite canape.

Army investigates methods to sink oil spills

VICKSBURG, Miss.—The U.S. Army Engineer Waterways, Experiment Station, Vicksburg, Miss., is investigating materials and methods to sink floating oil in marine waters.

The scientists and engineers at the Waterways Experiment Station are developing laboratory test procedures to evaluate all "sinking sorbers" presently offered by manufacturers.

A "sinking sorber" is a material that, when applied to floating oil, creates by chemical or physical action a lump with a density higher than that of water, causing the newly-created lump to sink.

Sinking agents would be used only after other control methods proved inadequate, the oil remaining uncontained at sea and in danger of polluting the shoreline. Sinking sorbers, however, cannot be used in marine waters less than 100 meters deep because of the danger to shellfish and other marine life.

Engineers construct LZ near Yonah Mountain

The 608th Ord. Co., 67th Maint. Bn., 93ist Engr. Gp., is constructing Landing Zone Westmoreland at the base of Yonah Mountain near Dahlonega, Ga.

The LZ will be used by helicopters picking up injured Ranger students who train on the steep rock cliffs of the 3,300 feet high peak.

To date, the only clearing on the mountain large enough to allow helicopters to land was on the very top, a narrow peak which houses an observation tower for forest rangers.

Those students injured while scaling the upright cliffs had to be carried up the steep inclines to medevac choppers waiting at the mountin's highest point. The new LZ, named after Gen. W. C. Westmoreland, Army chief of staff, will allow faster and safer evacuation of injured students.

The upper portion of Yonah Mountain is maintained by the National Forest Service, and the lower portion, where the new LZ is being constructed, is owned by Mrs. Laura Black Chambers. The Army is leveling timbers and carving out the LZ at the base of the mount with the permission of Mrs. Chambers.

Earlier, the land was believed to have been owned by Dahlonega area resident Paul Westmoreland, a third cousin to the Army general. However a check of claims files proved the LZ is being positioned on property owned by Mrs. Chambers.

The 608th assigned SSgt. Clarence Eller and Spc5 John Shirey to the difficult task of clearing the LZ area. Earlier a civilian engineer from the Mountain Ranger Camp a few miles away attempted to clear the huge boulders and trees but was unable to do so with limited equipment.

Yonah Mountain is used for two days out of the Ranger's five days of mountain climbing expeditions. The area is practically inaccessible due to its rugged terrain and extremely steep slopes, making the job of clearing difficult for the bulldozer operators from the 608th.

Eller has to hike about one mile down and back up the hillside to get to his dozer from the only road of Yonah Mtn. He's not convinced that the Ranger students are the only ones undergoing rigid mountain training.

Congress changed date of Veterans Day

Veterans Day falls on a new day this year — Oct. 25 — the fourth Monday in October.

Originally known as Armistice Day and celebrated on Nov. 11, it marks the armistice of World War I in 1918. In 1954 the name was changed to Veterans Day, and now, in 1971, the date has been changed by an Act of Congress.

Through all the changes the propose remains the same to pay tribute to more than 28 million veterans who have defended America for almost 200 years.

Veterans Day is set aside as a time to remember those who fought and those who died for our country.

SUBJECT: The Army Suggestion Program

All Fort Benning Personnel

1. During the past four years, the combined efforts of civilian and military personnel at Fort Benning effected savings of approximately ten million dollars. This unprecedented achievement has been acknowledged by the Department of the Army and is a source of great pride.

2. In this period of transition to a Modern Volunteer Army, the challenge and opportunity for change are even greater. To insure maximum efficiency and productivity tomorrow, our best efforts are needed today.

3. It is essential that our work procedures in relation to requirements be reviewed for better methods of accomplishment. Further, every constructive idea, large or small, should be submitted for consideration. The price and wage freeze directed under the President's New Economic Policy has not suspended payment of cash awards under the Army Suggestion Program.

Dynamic Training Board encourages suggestions

Approximately 50 members of the Army's Dynamic Training Board from Army posts all over the world were welcomed to Fort Benning by Brig. Gen. Paul F. Gorman, assistant commandant, USAIS, and president of the board, during an orientation in Infantry Hall Oct. 18.

The board, made up of representatives from each of the combat arms is meeting here to consider suggestions, from officers and enlisted men, designed to improve training management, techniques and devices.

The board is encouraging all personnel to submit ideas for increased effectiveness in training.

Currently under consideration is an idea for improved training management submitted by Capt. Jerry W. Thurman, a student in the Armor Officers Advanced Course, according to a Board spokesman.

As a battery commander, Thurman was faced with a shortage of experienced officers and noncommissioned officers. To correct this probelm, he instituted a rotational leadership program which gave all of his men, E5 and above, experience as chief of the firing battery.

At the end of the training period, Thurman found that all personnel had increased proficiency in their regular job. "I found that the junior leader's ability to communicate with his subordinates was greatly increased. The period of training gave him an appreciation of the job demands for a chief of the firing battery, and, most important, the technical proficiency required to do the job."

Suggestions, such as this one, which could be applicable in other units, are being reviewed by the board for possible implementation. Recommendations and suggestions may be submitted to: Board for Dynamic Training, Fort Benning, Ga., 31905.

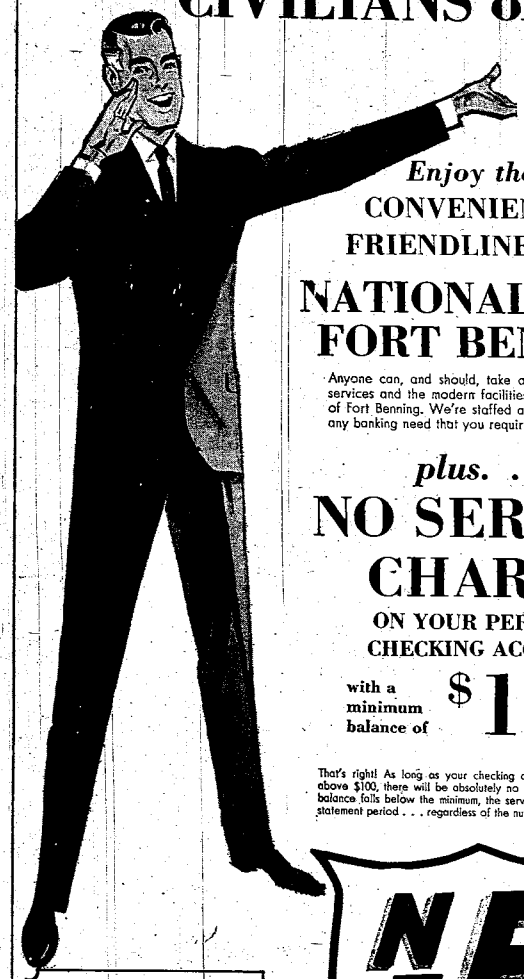
CFC fund drive shows progress

The Tri-Community Combined Federal Campaign (CFC) fund drive is well under way on post.

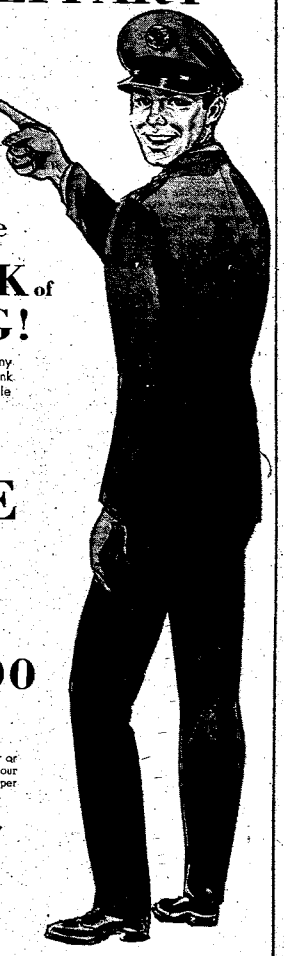
Fund drive officials reported that military and civilian personnel at Fort Benning have contributed $26,118.24 towards the post's final goal of $138,000.

Seven of 19 reporting units on post have reached or surpassed their invidiual goals, and 12 have not yet reported. The average per capita contribution has been $8.58. "If this rate continues, we will reach our goal," a drive spokesman said.

Driving safety urged on holiday



Monday we celebrate our national holiday, Veterns Day. Hopefully, we will all enjoy ourselves and return on Tuesday rested and refreshed and ready to resume work once again.



Unfortunately, for the relatives and friends of at least 500 Americans it will be a sad memory. It will be remembered as the day they lost a loved one in a traffic accident. The holiday prediction is nearly always confirmed. This loss affects us at the Infantry Center.

Our losses in POV accidents are mounting higher and higher. Since July 1, we have lost eight personnel and 39 more men were hospitalized. The irony is that many would have survived had ordinary, safe driving practices been followed. Just the simple act of buckling safety belts would have saved the lives of some of them.

If you plan to drive or ride, be rested, sober and alert. Take rest breaks.

Q — What is the deadline for mailing parcels overseas for Christmas?

A — According to Department of Defense and the U.S. Postal Service the dates for 1971 Christmas mail to servicemen overseas is as follows: Surface Mail, Oct. 12-Nov. 8; Space Available Mail (SAM) which includes parcels weighing less than 5 pounds — Oct. 19-Nov. 22; Parcel Air Lift (PAL): Oct. 26-Nov. 29. Air Mail: Nov. 30-Dec. 13. Postal officials advise that using SAM and PAL will result in substantial savings.

Q — I have just returned from Vietnam and now my CO tells me that I have to take an MOS test prior to Nov. 15. Since I was in Vietnam I thought that I was exempt from these tests until the next regular test period. What's the story?

A — Department of the Army requires a current enlisted evaluation score for every career enlisted man and woman by Nov. 20. Tests will be administered not later than Nov. 15 to all enlisted personnel specified in paragraph 5-4, AR600-200 who were not tested during the November 1970 test period or after. Those not tested by the Nov. 15 deadline will be considered as having failed their MOS test. And as an exception to normal policy, sergeants major and personnel currently assigned to Vietnam, Thailand and the U.S. Embassy in Laos, are required to be tested. Additional information on the mandatory testing can be found in DA Message 122128Z August 1971.

Q — What is the minimum notice that a person must give his landlord if he has signed a lease and is on PCS orders?

A — If you are renting a house or apartment in CONUS and are an enlisted man or woman, you must provide your landlord with at least thirty days written notice of your intention to move. The notice must be accompanied by a certified copy of your PCS or separation orders. This is required even though leases may contain military transfer clauses.

Q—Since I am stationed here at Fort Benning and live off post, am I liable for personal property tax in the State of Georgia?

A—Under the Soldier's and Sailor's Relief Act of 1940 you are not liable for levy of personal property tax by the state in which you are stationed, that right is held by your home state.

The judge says

Politicians open to public scrutiny

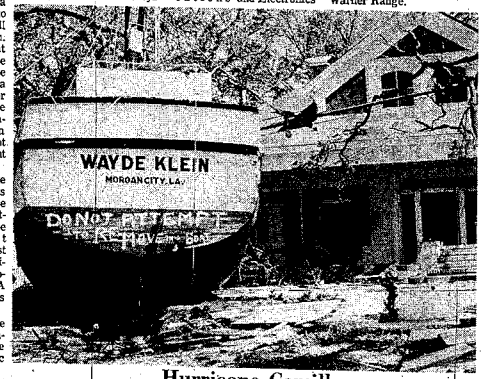
USAIC LEGAL ASSISTANCE OFFICE "Politics is too serious a matter to be left to the politicians. Yet the politician who is too serious may find it hard to survive in the political world.

Take the recent case of Bill Blowhard who was a candidate for the legislature. His opponent called him a "small time bootlegger." He even repeated it several times in his campaign ads. Bill lost the election and was very mad that he had been called a "Bootlegger".

Bill sued his former opponent but lost. Truth is a defense to a claim of defamation. But more important, when a person runs for public office he is a "public figure" because of his candidacy. As long as his opponents comment about his official conduct as opposed to his private conduct, they have a right to do so unless they are knowingly reckless or false.

A candidate is open to public scrutiny as to his fitness for office. Just about any criticism of a public official will tend to affect his private, as well as his public reputation. However, there is a great interest in allowing a free flow of information to the public. It is difficult for a person to prove malice or reckless disregard for the truth. A mistaken accusation can be retracted. An "innocent mistake" is not knowingly false statement nor is it reckless.

"Public figures" include more than office holders and candidates. A police detective, a famous football coach, a garbage company owner that serves the public, just about anyone whose activities greatly affect the public is a "public" figure. A wide range of comment is permitted.



A former public figure may regain his private capacity after a long time removed from the public light. For example, making a movie 30 years later about persons involved in some newsworthy activities and going into their current private activities could be cause for action.

Generally statements made during the course of a judicial proceeding, allegations is pleadings or other letters exchanged during the course of a trial are privileged. Accusations and misstatements in such cases may not be the basis of separate court action.

Sometimes nature does as strange things to man's environment as man does himself.

Man's actions affect environment

By Robert A. Shurtleff

This is an open letter to the people of Fort Benning concerning the quality of our environment. I don't claim any particular expertise as an environmentalist, my comments are those of a concerned observer.

The problem seems to be our society's inability to accept the fact that man is just another organism and that man's actions, all of them, have an impact on the environment. The automobile, for example, is a major cause of environmental problems. The problems begin with mining of iron and coal for steel production and end with the problem of disposing of junk cars. In between, the effects of road building, exhaust fumes, and the petroleum industry create environmental impact problems almost beyond comprehension. This example is only one of many that can be found in our present society.

It seems incredible to me that the majority of people in the U.S. (including those on Fort Benning) can ignore the destruction of their environment by the growth-oriented technocracy under which we live. They seem to think the same technology that created the problem is its panacea. The continued growth, expansion, and increased production that is necessary for the perpetuation of our life style is inconsistent with conservation and the maintenance of a quality environment.

We must begin to look upon ourselves as part of our environment, a component of an ecosystem. We cannot continue to treat the environment as a piece of property, something that we use but don't have any moral commitment to protect. The alternative is that we continue on as we have been with the very possible result of the human race going the way of the Dioosaur.

Expansion of the 150-day early out program to 179 days for RA career personnel other than first term enlistees who return to CONUS from other areas with less than 179 days before their projected ETS.

Separation of first term and retirement eligibles on compassionate reassignment whose release will not compound their problems.

Those released from medical holding with less than 180 days before their ETS will be separated on release from the hospital.

Current planning calls for a cutback to between 820,000 and 840,000 men by mid-1975, when the Nixon administration hopes that the Army will be on an all-volunteer basis.

This reduction in force is in part responsible for the reduced draft call of 10,000 men between Oct. 1 and Dec. 31.

Good photography means extra cash for Fort Benning specialist

Good photography can turn into a little extra spending cash and a great deal of satisfaction as Sp5 Donald G. Stanley, of the 609th Transportation Company, well knows. Stanley was just awarded 2nd place ($20), 3rd place ($15) and Honorable Mention for his entries in different categories of the U. S. Army and Interservice Photo Contest Installation Level.

Stanley became interested in photography, from a friend, while stationed in Germany during 1969. Since that time, he has learned not only the skills of good photography, but also the techniques of developing, reproduction, and enlarging of photographs.

Stanley pointed out that a good picture says something or tells a story to the viewer and that most good photos are spontaneously taken rather than planned or staged. Mrs. Stanley, also, is very interested in photography and aids her husband in their darkroom.

Stanley, currently working in the Quality Control Section as a Technical Inspector, has accrued fourteen years in the Army and plans to go into portrait or free-lance photography upon retirement.

'Expectant parents' classes slated

The Army Health Nursing Service, in conjunction with the Obstetrics Department, Martin Army Hospital, is beginning another series of 'Expectant Parents' Classes Nov. 2.

The series consists of four classes, each two hours long, on the first Tuesday night of each month. Classes are held in the conference room on the second floor of Martin Army Hospital.

The sessions are geared to improving understanding of pregnancy, childbirth, and newborn babies. Movies, slides, short talks, and discussion groups help to explain the physical structure of the male and female, reproduction, body changes, signs of labor and infant care.

The first class includes prenatal care, psychological aspects of parenthood, and exercises. The second class covers labor and delivery. The third deals with Martin Army Hospital procedures and a tour of Labor and Delivery, and the fourth class is infant care, with a special session on breast feeding.

It is best to start with the first class in the series and continue with the same group. However, if you should miss one class, you can make it up in the next series.

Particular care is taken to make each expectant mother and father aware of forthcoming events. Fear and uncertainty are results of meeting the unexpected. For assurance and knowledge, you are encouraged to attend a series of 'Expectant Parents' Classes during your pregnancy. The obstetrician, pediatrician, dentist, optometrist, chaplain, nursery nurse, and the Army health nurse all participate in the series. It is an excellent opportunity to ask questions.

Because of limited space, you are asked to pre-register for these classes by calling the Army Health Nursing Service, 545-5431, Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. - 5 p.m.

Alvin Toffler's "Future Shock" was a challenge to the Book Club of the Officers' Wives' Club of MEDDAC. Mrs. Charles Gatty, the group leader, pointed out at the beginning of the discussion that it would be impossible to cover the entire contents of the book. The members of the Bock Club seemed enthusiastic about the book, even though the contents were at time frightening.

According to the author, "Future Shock" is the human response to overstimulation. The members taking part in the discussion agreed that they, and the country as a whole, were suffering from "Future Shock." Our "transient, throw-away society" was discussed at length by the group. Ways to deal with future shock and how to survive it were also touched upon.

Mrs. John Laszlo was the hostess for the meeting of the Book Club at her home in Columbus.

Mod styles highlight OWC fashion show, luncheon

By Carol May

Approximately 340 guests attended the Officers' Wives' Club luncheon and fashion show Oct. 13 at noon. The sherry hour in the Main Officers' Open Mess ballroom opened the event.

Mrs. Richard B. Stoltz, OWC president, welcomed the members and thanked Mrs. Bruce Fraser, the ladies of Headquarters Command, USAIC, Mrs. Paul Gorman and the ladies of the Academic Staff, USAIS, for co-hostessing the luncheon.

SENSATIONAL IN SUEDE

Mrs. William Caskey Models Blue And Brown, Suede Hot-Pants Ensemble

Mrs. Stolz bade farewell to the hospitality chairman, Mrs. Jere O. Whittington, and presented her a remembrance of the OWC.

Honored guests were the past presidents of the OWC who reside in the Columbus area. Mrs. Stoltz paid tribute to these women and gave each a lifetime honorary membership in the OWC of Fort Benning.

Those honored were Mrs. Charles Hunt, Mrs. Charles Pence, Mrs. Marcus Bell, Mrs. Paul Serff, Mrs. James Morris, Mrs. Malcolm Baer and Mrs. Raymond Gunderson.

Mrs. Jon Stillman, program chairman, coordinated the fashion show presented by Fort Benning's newest post exchange facility, The Mod Shop. Commentator was Mrs. Sidney Linver, a Canadian television actress and member of the Academic Staff wives' group.

The styles included an array of dresses and pants in varied lengths; knickers of lavender print, slacks, pants suits, and a blue and brown hot pants ensemble topped with a blue, brass-trimmed cape which stole the show. Men modeling jackets and sweaters over wide-collared shirts with coordinated pants added a new dimension to the usually "for women only" fashion occasion.

The models were Mrs. Michael Biddle, Mrs. James Cravens, Mrs. Robert Hall, Capt. Jay Ball and Capt. Larry Craven, of Headquarters Command, Mrs. William Caskey, Mrs. Michael Tryon, Mrs. Joffre Filion, Mrs. Joseph Windle, Mrs. Bruce Brown, Mrs. William Vossler, Mrs. Kevin Carroll, Mrs. Paul Ruchalski, Mrs. Claiborne Randall and Lt. Robert Wright, of the Academic Staff.

The psychedelic backdrop on the stage framed the models as they walked before giant figures of the sun and geometric designs on black. Maj. J. B. Cummings was the artist.

Table decorations were black square bases, which held up silver wire "fountains" topped with flat-tented multi-colored jelly beans. These mod creations were arranged on the yellow-clothed tables placed on three sides of the red runway.

Pre-marriage counseling slated

Pre-marriage counseling seminars will be offered by the Main Post Chapel beginning Nov. 1. The 4-week course is designed to provide young couples with realistic attitudes about marriage.

The seminar will be held each Monday evening from 7:30 to 9:30. Topics will include the legal, financial, emotional and physical aspects of marriage. Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Richard Nybro, and Chaplain (Maj.) Edgar P. Shackelford, are currently scheduling lectures by experts in each of these areas.

In addition to the lectures, the course will include group discussions, films, and self-help tests.

The sessions are open to active and retired military personnel and their dependents. Couples who are planning to be married, or who have been married less than 6 months, are invited to participate.

For further information phone the Main Post Chapel, 545-7634 or 545-2050.

As refreshments were served, the women discussed activities, plans for the year. A cookout with their husbands was proposed.

The socially oriented group will have afternoon meetings on the second Friday of each month. Mrs. Schumacher extends a welcome to all sorority women who are military-affiliated.

Soldiers prepare site for civilian construction crew

Lindsay Creek Bypass is growing. The Department of the Army has awarded a civilian contract to extend the road to Martin Army Hospital. A section of Custer Read must be closed during the construction. This section of road will then be elevated to pass over the new extension.

Co. D, 43rd Engr. Bn. (Const.), commanded by Capt. Charles W. Jones, is working to prepare the site so that work may begin.

The objective of Co. D's work, as stated by 1st Lt. Gene Radau, earthmoving platoon leader, is to construct a temporary bypass of the closed portion of Custer Road to allow continuation of the Lindsay Creek Bypass.

To accomplish this, the men of Co. D, under the supervision of Radau and SSgt. Major Cooper, are hauling fill and grading the area to construct temporary roadways which will allow the continued use of Custer Road and he section of Lindsay Creek Bypass between Highway 27 and Custer Road.

When work is completed, a two lane asphalt road will run from Custer Road to the Lindsay Creek Bypass when approaching from Sand Hill. On the other side of the intersection, a four lane asphalt road will connect the bypass with Custer Road.

Radau reports that his men are doing a fine job and that soon the new roads will be ready for public use.

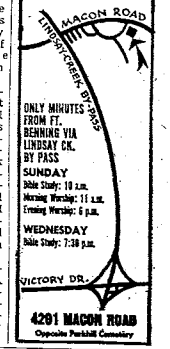
Cav. Div. gets trophy



CSM John J. Adams Jr. received a silver trophy in the name of the 1st Squadron, 9th Cavalry, 1st Cavalry Division, on Friday, October 15.

The unit was named the winner of the "Outstanding Army Aviation Unit Award" for 1970-1971, during ceremonies held at the Thirteenth Annual Honors Luncheon of the Army Aviation Association of American (AAAA) at the Sheraton-Park Hotel in Washington, D. C.

In May 1970 the squadron spearheaded the 1st Cavalry Division's initial thrust into Cambodia, its air cavalry troops providing constant reconnaissance for the division's task forces throughout the 60-day campaign. In February it again penetrated deep into Cambodia and on several occasions, backing up RVN units, helped turn the tide of battle with the firepower it provided.

Also accepting the trophy with Adams was Col. Robert H. Nevins of Ottumwa, Iowa, who commanded the unit from August 1970 through January 1971.

MOH awardees inducted into OCS Hall of Fame

1944 — 1st Lt. Eli Whiteley receives the Medal of Honor from President Harry Truman. With one eye and his left arm rendered useless in house-to house fighting, Whiteley continued to attack enemy strong points with grenades and a submachine gun, killing nine of the enemy and capturing 23.

The names of five recipients of the Medal of Honor will be added to the Honor Roll of the Infantry Officer Candidate Hall of Fame in ceremonies here Oct. 26.

The induction ceremony will be held in conjunction with the Medal of Honor Society convention being held in Birmingham, Ala.

Four of the inductees will be personally inducted into the Hall of Fame by Maj. Gen. Orwin C. Talbott, Fort Benning commander.

Unable to attend will be Maj. Kern Dunagan, currently serving on active duty overseas. Dunagan was awarded the nation's highest award for valor in 1969.

Present at their inductions will be Capt. James Taylor (active duty), who won the award in 1968; Dr. (then first Lieutenant) Eli Whiteley, associate professor at Texas A and M University and current president of the Congressional Medal of Honor Society, who won the medal in 1944; Mr. (then) Carlos Ogden, director of the Selective Service System in California, who won the award in 1944; and Mr. then) Frank Burke of Jersey City, New Jersey, who won his award in 1945.

Membership in the Hall of Fame is open to any graduates of Infantry Officer Candidate School who achieve the grade of colonel while on active duty; who are elected or appointed to a position of governmental prominance; who are nominated for the honor by the commandant of the Infantry School; or who are awarded the Medal of Honor.

1969 — Capt. James Taylor receives the Medal of Honor from President Lyndon Johnson. Though wounded himself, Taylor braved intense enemy fire to personally rescue the wounded crews of three damaged and burning armored vehicles, and destroyed an enemy machine gun emplacement.

1944 — 1st Lt. Carlos Ogden received the Medal of Honor. Ogden had singlehandedly assaulted and silenced two enemy machine guns and an 88 mm gun, although twice wounded, thereby allowing his pinned-down company to continue to advance.

1945 — 1st Lt. Frank Burke received the Medal of Honor from President Harry Truman. As a battalion transportation officer searching for a new motor pool, Burke noticed an enemy counter-attack forming. He borrowed a weapon and grenades and, in four hours of continuous street fighting, singlehandedly killed 11 and wounded 3 enemy soldiers and p l a y e d a leading part in engagements in which 20 other enemy were put out of action. It is not recorded whether or not he found his motor-pool site.

Marital monotony causes crisis in 'Stockbroker'

"The Marriage of a Young Stockbroker," beginning today at a local theater, is the story of a young man, William Alren (Richard Benjamin), who finds his life and his marriage at a point of crisis. He and his wife, (Joanna Shimkus), are going through the motions of a marriage without feeling anything. Alren finds selling stocks to be a way of making a living, but without meaning. His reaction against the dullness of his existence leads him a little harmless girlwatching. However,when his wife leaves him over one particular incident of voyeurism, he faces the fact that he must take a stand in his life. That is the only way he can gain self-respect.

As Alren tries to win back his wife and set his life upon a course of positive action, his progress is constantly hampered by his meddling sister-in-law, Nan (Elizabeth Ashley), who looks upon the possible success of William's and Lisa's marriage as a threat to her own marriage, in which she totally-dominates her husband, Chester (Adam West).

"The Marriage of a Young Stockbroker" isn't just about an automatic marriage in a sterile society. It is about all young people who are searching for something in their lives which will make them feel that they are alive and not just existing.

It's the story of that particular kind of bum-drumness which sets into a person's life in the late-twenties, when he suddenly realizes that if he is to change his life he must do it now before it is too late. They must find their own power to impress their personalities upon life, rather than just compromising and conforming to the things life so easily hands them.

Synopsis

VILLAIN (Rated R). — Richard Burton portrays a homosexual gang chief whose bed partner, Ian McShane, is a pimp who mingles with the upper classes.

Anthony Sagar tells Burton of James Cossins, a self-styling worker who'll set up the payroll robbery of a plastics factory in which he works.

Fingerprints lead to the arrest of one of the robbers and Burton, with the help of Elizabeth Knight, whose boyfriend he carved up, blackmails a member of Parliament into providing an alibi. Police are one step ahead of Burton when he attempts to recover the hidden loot.

THE BUTTERCUP CHAIN (Rated R). — Hywel Bennett and Jane Asher play cousins whose affection for each other goes beyond blood relations.

They meet Sven-Bertil Taube and American Leigh Taylor-Young. The four spend a holiday in Spain, where Leigh rooms with Hywel.

Jane puts off Sven at first and although in love with Jane, Sven agrees to an affair with Leigh. When she becomes pregnant, Sven weds her.

A year later the four get together in Sweden at the home of Sven and Leigh where tragedy separates the group and efforts to reunite the foursome are futile.

PINOCCHIO (Rated G), — and his friend Jiminy Cricket are back to delight another generation with their funny and exciting adventures in that beautiful make believe world.

The story begins when Jiminy Cricket, who is the narrator, takes refuge from a storm in the shop of a kindly old woodcarver named Gepetto, who lives there with his cat, Figaro, and goldfish, Cleo.

Gepetto is lonely for a family, and when he carves a delightful puppet, which he names Pinocchio, he wishes it were a real boy. That night the Blue Fairy appears and grants his wish, making Jiminy the boy's conscience since he does not know right from wrong.

Jiminy helps Pinocchio out of many scrapes with danger as Pinocchio trys to prove he is worthy of becoming a real boy. Adults will enjoy this picture as it carries them back to the days when they knew that all these lovable characters were real people.

Blacktop trio

Mechanic Dennis Wilson (L) hitchhiker Laurie Bird and driver James Taylor smile as they watch a rival they passed on the road in "Two-Lane Blacktop." The film, a drama of hopped-up cars and itinerant drag racers, will be playing tonight at post Theater No. 9.

AAFES offers layaway plan

WASHINGTON — With Christmas not very far away, the Army and Air Force Exchange Service (AAFES) reminds customers of its convenient layaway program.

The layaway service allows authorized customers to have merchandise held aside for future purchases by making partial payments.

Layaway purchases are handled at the customer service area of the main retail branch and other specifically designated areas in smaller branch stores.

No minimum dollar amount is required in initating a layaway purchase; however, the customer pays an initial deposit of at least 10 per cent of the total purchase price.

The customer may spread the payments over a maximum period of 90 days, with each payment due in three equal installments 30 days apart. Partial payments, other than those scheduled, may be made at any time during the 90-day period.

Layaway deposits and payments are refunded whenever a sale is canceled or a customer fails to meet the installment payments.

IOBC adopts peer rating system

A peer rating system was incorporated into the IOBC program of instruction beginning with class 4-72. A briefing was presented during the initial orientation explaining the scope of the system.

During the course, each student will rate the other students in his platoon on selected leadership traits. These ratings are recorded on a student worksheet.

A class, which explains the peer rating system in greater detail, is presented during the sixth week of the course. A second class is given during the eighth week in which the students transfer the ratings recorded on the worksheet to computer forms. An average grade for each student is computed and individual results are given to the student and to the company tactical officer.

A two-fold counseling program is incorporated in the peer rating system. Students may discuss their results with their company tactical officer. Any student who scores low in the selected leadership traits will undergo mandatory counseling.

The counseling program will give each student the opportunity to discuss his leadership ability with an experienced officer and therefore develop his leadership to the highest degree possible.

Chicago grandmother, mother visit Benning

Driving to Fort Benning from Chicago to see her son is enough for any mother's enjoyment, but to also witness her son receive an unexpected award is just icing on the cake. This was the case for Mrs. Lucille Lyman, mother, and Mrs. H. W. Meyer, grandmother, of Spc Robert Lyman. Mrs. Lyman and Mrs. Meyer drove from their home in Rockford, Ill. to visit Sp5 Lyman who is currently assigned to the 609th Transportation Company.

Their visit was highlighted by a family type cookout for the Avionics Section of the 609th Transportation Company hosted by CWO Bryce Gordon. The afternoon's activities included eating hot dogs and hamburgers, baseball, volleyball and the presentation of Army Commendation Medals to four members of the section by Capt. Monty Febuary, acting company commander.

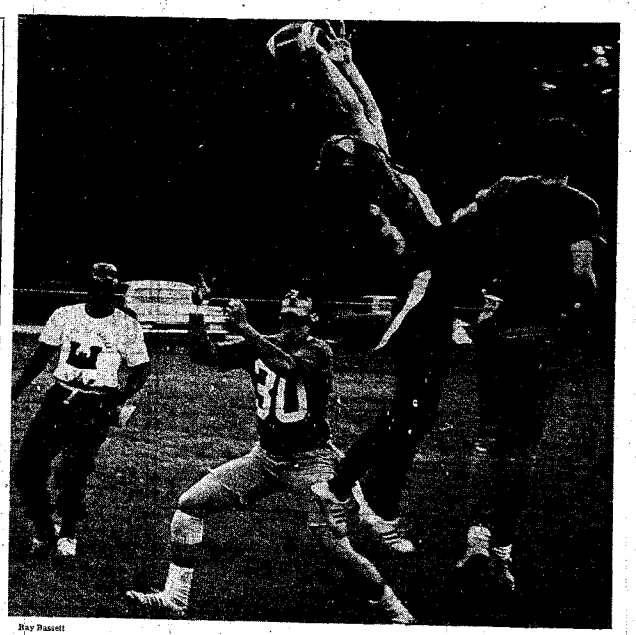
Second place teams close in on 608th

An upset victory by the 586th Engr. Co. over the league leading 608th Ord. Co. highlighted the week's 931st Engr. Gp. flag football play.

Time and again the 586th defense stopped scoring drives by the 608th, one time with the 608th on the 586th one yard line. The two teams battled to a six all tie at the end of play with the 586th finally winning the game on penetration. (Penitration provides for each team to get the ball for two downs in a four downs series at the end of a tie game to determine the winner. The team gaining the most yardage on their respective plays wins the game.)



The 608th continues to lead the league, however, with a nine win and one loss record. The 586th, meanwhile, is in fourth place with a seven and three record.

Tied for second place in league competition are the 524th Pers. Svc. Co. and the 15th Fin. Dis. Sec. with eight wins against two losses. The 524th lost a chance for a tie for first place when they were forced to forfeit a game with HHC, 931st Engr. Gp. The 524th attempted to play the game with an ineligible player and forfeited the game following a protest.

Co. C, 43rd Engr. Bn. is all alone in third place with seven wins and two losses.

HHC, 931st Engr. Gp. and the 18th Repl. Det. are in a tie for fifth place with five and four records.

In sixth place with three wins and seven losses are Co. A, 43rd Engr. Bn. and the 556th Lt. Maint. Co.

REACH OUT

The 586th Engr. Gp., which pulled off a surprising upset over the previously undefeated 608th Ord. Co. last week, sends out two receivers for this pass from quarterback Harry Feick during this contest with Co. A 43rd Engr. Bn. Appearing to let this pass slip through his hands is Ray Carr and waiting below for the reception is Wel Medeiros. Defending from Co. A are Charles Sanders and Frank Smith.

Statistic star, smashing success

Ah yes, once again the brokenfield baffler of the bombistic battlefield made mud of the opposition. This time the mighty medium of the midfield murdered the meddling menaces of the O.D.D.L.P. The psychic seer of the stadium scored a smashing success with a .712 over-all mark to .472 for the squad led by Lt. Col. Hensler. This week the statistical star of the stadium stats will out-point SFC Allen of the Company Operations Dept. The well-oiled oreuery oracle will undoubtedly out-score the opposition in this weeks duel of dastardly drudgery. You too can attempt to teeter the terrific totaler of the touchdown traffic. Just dial 545-4622 and phone the fantastic fanatic of football fortune. Just ask for the uncanny UMP!

The World Series is over, but with the ending of the October event went the Orioles' chance at immortality. Believed by many to be the next dynasty of the sports world they suffered a bumiliating defeat at the hands of the Pittsburgh Pirates.

True the Birds have won the American League pennant four of the last six years, but they also fell to the foes of the rival National League two of those four years. This is not the mark of a true champion, the Yankees of old, to whom Robinson's and Co. are compared, thrived on pressure games, whereas the Orioles seem to fold.

Credit must be given to the men of Earl Weaver for they have truly been an outstanding club. They had four 20 game winners, a feat not accomplished in 31 years, and they have won over 100 games three years running, but as Brooks Robinson said, "The records are nothing without that flag waving in Baltimore."

Other teams have flirted with the dynasty label but none have really come close. The Knicks, darlings of the NBA, were tagged heir apparent to the Boston Celtics, but their string lasted just one year. A poor substitute for the great Boston teams that won the world title nine out of ten years.

The Milwaukee Bucks are now being tabbed as the next Celtics, but my guess is that they will fall far short of the fantastic record set by the old Celt's. Dynasties are not made in the short span of one or two years, they take time and patience. They also take youth, luck and above all leadership. There must be someone for the youngsters to look up to, someone who will not wilt under the pressure of a championship game.

In the world of football many teams have been picked to become immortal, but the closest was the Green Bay Paekers. Under the helm of the Invincible Lombardi they dominated professional football like no team before them. Led by Bart Starr, Paul Hornung and Jimmy Taylor the Packers made mincemeat out of the rest of the league. But the disappearance of youth and the failure to win consistantly led to Green Bay's doom, and the phrase "the Pack will be back."

In their place arose the New York Jets, a youthful team led by the flamboyant and colorful Broadway Joe Namath, but their brief fling at glory lasted but one short year. Now the Jets are mired deep in the cellar of the Eastern division and Joe Namath, their leader, has gone by the way of last year, the disabled list, and unable to help his injury-prone teammates.

Why have these seemingly great teams been unable to latch onto the everlasting greatness of the Yankees or the Celtics? Well, it is my contention that money and expansion have been the culprit in many unsuccessful attempts towards building a dynasty.

In the past the team with the most money signed the best athletes. Now, more and more teams are risking bankruptcy in an all out effort to compete with the winners. During the recent merger wars involving both football and basketball, money floated in and out the hand of—both players and management. College stars had the luxury of being drafted by two teams in two different leagues, thus spreading the talent more and more.

Draft choices have become more and more sacred to the owners. No longer is management willing to give away their precious draft choices for proven yet older performers. Teams are much more reluctant to part with anyone and seem much more patient in waiting for college stars to bloom. Too many teams have been burned by their own draftees who were just not mature enough at the time to help their club.

In baseball every major league team has to take part in the annual high school and college draft. This eliminates the possibility of one club signing all the top prospects in any given year. Now every team has an equal chance and money is not so much of a tool as it once was.

With expansion coming to sport in the early sixties the number of teams in all sports combined have doubled. The talent on any given team has to be inferior, injuries too are far more frequent and with more teams the odds are significantly greater than they once were. No, I think the dynasty is a thing of the past, something left to the record books, and the oldtimers.

197th basketball practice continues

Basketball practice continued at the Kelley Hill Field House as Kelley Boyum, 197th Inf. Bde. basketball coach, searched for a club to represent the brigade in Fort Benning basketball competition.

Scheduled to end the latter part of September, practice sessions continued through today. September one-a-day workouts turned into strenuous two-a-day practice sessions.

Only five men participated for slots on the squad in September. An additional seven men were added to the October tryouts beinging the total in number of players to twelve. A team was to be selected from these twelve men and any possible additions after the October practice sessions.

The 197th begins Fort Benning basketball competition Dec. 1. An exhibition game with the Medical Department Activities team is scheduled before league play. Other exhibition games were to be added before the brigade embarked on its quest for a second consecutive USAIC basketball crown.

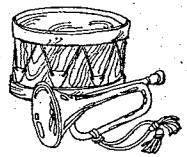
Good fishing continues in Gulf; 'Follow Me' makes seven trips

King mackerel fishing in the waters of the Gulf of Mexico continued good as the deep sea fishing boat "Follow Me" made seven trips into the water near Destin, Fla. last week.

The Infantry Center Special Services boat made good catches each trip and boated the largest king mackerel entered in the Destin Fishing Rodeo on Sunday.

The fish weighed 18-lbs., 4-ounces. It was caught by W. G. Wyrock, 3429 Pontiac Dr., Columbus.

Wyrock's party headed by Lt. Col. Billy Arthur, of the 197th Inf. Bd., also landed the most varied catch of the week. Their take included 10 king mackerel, 10 bonito, two wahoo weighing about 30-lbs. each, two sharks weighing about 20-lbs. and they had a sailfish on the line but lost it when the fish broke the line.



According to SSgt. Ernest Green, skipper of the Destin based "Follow Me," two other all-day trips each produced king mackerel catches of 50 or more.

On Wednesday Capt. Larry Bond, 5th Special Forces, Ft. Bragg, N. C. and his party landed 51 large king mackerel and one bonito. On Saturday, Capt. William Goodman, 306 Merril Lane, Fort Benning caught 56 king mackerel and 10 bonito.

The "Follow Me" made four half day trips last week. Thursday morning 1st Sgt. (Ret.) William Bestland, manger of the Infantry Center Destin Rest Camp tried his luck and took 40 king mackerel. In the afternoon 1st Lt. Wayne Chimarusti, of the Infantry Center Florida Ranger Camp and his party caught 33 king mackerel.

Other half day trips were made on Friday by Col. Robert Lathrop, Infantry Center Staff Judge Advocate and Maj. (ret.) Jack Sherwood, 3021 Avondale Ave., Columbus. Colonel Lathrop caught 10 king mackerel and two bonito and the Sherwood party boated 20 king mackerel and four bonito.

Reservations may be made at the Special Services Division Recreation Office or for additional information call 545-7414.

Every Volvo has six steel pillars supporting the roof. Each one is strong enough to hold up the weight of the entire car.

Of course, this kind of strength isn't built into a Volvo just so it will hold up a lot of cars.

The Volvos we sell are built strong so they'll hold up a lot of years.

Turn that over in your mind. Then come in, look at our Volvos and decide if you're honestly in the market for a hardtop. Or if what you really want is a hard top.

ROD AND GUN CLUB Notes

By Dan Long

Summer has just drawn its last breath, and as it exhales in chilly breezes we hear the call of a new season — "hunters" — man your weapons." Every man, woman and child caught up in the hunting frenzy takes to the field with high hopes of bagging the best trophy. In all their excitement they will get a trophy, but unless precautions are taken, that trophy could be another hunter.

Unlike safety in the home or automobile, hunting safety is absolutely non-habit forming. We confront this type safety only once a year and then for just short periods of time. This causes even the professional hunters to be a little accident prone. In addition, each new hunting season reaps a harvest of people who have never hunted in their lives and safety is the farthest thing from their minds. Add these together and you can well understand how each year our wooded areas become "charley" country.

Now that we've determined that gun or hunting safety is a must for everyone, lets examine the basic rules, that if followed, would assure each of us a most successful and accident free hunting season.

The rules listed here are by no means listed in order of importance. Each one is just as important as the next.

1. It is imperative that you know your weapon and its capabilities, particularly how to load and unload safely. I have witnessed many new hunters (and some old) loading their weapon with the muzzle pointed right at someone.

2. When not in the field, make sure your weapon is unloaded.

3. Never, I repeat, NEVER point a weapon at anyone, be it loaded or empty. If you develop the habit of not really caring where a weapon is pointing when it is empty, you'll follow that habit after you've loaded it.

4. Once in the field, always make sure the safety is on.

5. Always identify your target before firing. Many a rustling bush has caused a trigger-happy hunter to kill or wound another hunter stalking game. There's also the story where a hunter was shot while back-packing his kill out of the woods. And still another story about two guys bird hunting. One hunter was leading a low flying bird and just as he pulled the trigger his partner was right in the line of fire.

6. Keep the maximum range in mind when shooting. Remember, that in the event of a miss, the bullet or shot charge keeps on traveling.

7. When crossing obstacles, natural or man-made, or passing through difficult underbrush or other risky places, open the guns action. In crossing a fence, hold your partner's weapon until he is over and then hand him both weapons, one at a time, with the muzzles pointed in a safe direction.

8. Upon departing the hunting scene, be sure to unload your weapon, and store it and your ammunition in separate safe places.

These are the basic gun rules to follow no matter where you hunt. If, however you plan on hunting at Fort Benning there are a few other items of information you must be aware of and other safety precautions you must take. They are:

1. Your weapon must be registered at the Provost Marshal's office, and the registration certificate must be in your possession when hunting.

2. You must wear headgear of a bright red color.

3. You are allowed to hunt in authorized cleared areas only. Due to training requirements, areas cleared for hunting change every day. Maps depicting areas cleared are displayed at the Rod and Gun Club and the Provost Marshal's office and they are posted every day by the Post Fish and Game people.

There are several other safety factors you can and should consider, however, if you just follow the ones listed here you will assure yourself of a successful hunting season and quite possibly someone else a longer life. By insuring that others are aware of these rules you will be doing them a tremendous favor. If you have a child that is interested in guns and hunting, by setting the example you will teach him to follow the same rules. Remember, a gun shoots no one until a man takes hold of it. If you own a gun, give it the respect it is due — for the safety of all hunters.

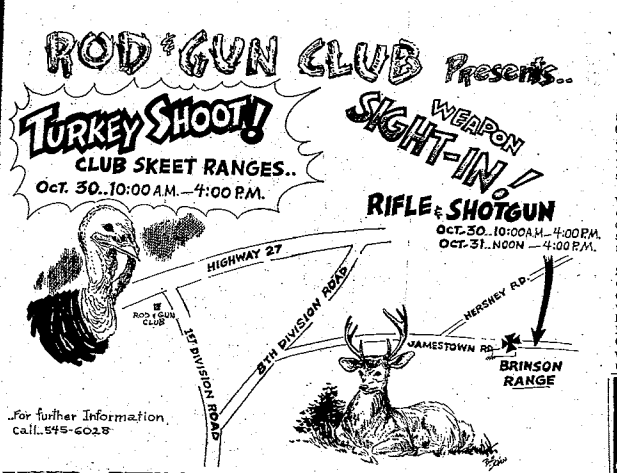
Gilbert claims championship

Capt. Kenneth Gilbert of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Training Unit (USAMTU) overcame a three point deficit and came from behind to tie front runner Elwood Hunsberger during the final day of the 300 bird International Skeet match Oct. 16 and then in the shoot-off, with the pressure on, shot a perfect round to edge the left hand shooter Hunsberger, who dropped two birds. Gilbert won the championship with a 289 total.

Gilbert and Hunsberger each scored in the first set Saturday. Then in the second round, Gilbert fired a perfect 25 while Hunsberger dropped one. It was here that the pressure seemed to get the southpaw from Philadelphia, Penn. as he proceeded to drop two birds during the third critical round while Gilbert again knocked every bird from the sky as they catapulted from the high and low houses. This tied the two top-seeded shooters going into the final round.

Then in the final 25, each shooter dropped a bird, bringing the official score of 289 for each at the end of the 300 bird match.



In two-man and four-man matches, the team of Whitaker and Rector won the first with 381 while Hunsberger, Rector, Ed Petroff of Bloomfield Hills, Mich. and Army Maj. Gary Chittester of Ft. Riley, Kan. teamed up to win the latter with 723.

HHD, HHC claim championships

HHD, 197th Sp. Bn., and HHC, 1st Bn. (Mech.), 58th Inf. "Patriots" claimed their battalions' flag football championships as the 197th flag football season headed to a climactic finish.

Paced by quarterback K. T. Williams and flanker George Gooden, the Spirit Bn. champions took three lopsided wins over the 72nd Engrs., 20-2, 52-0, and 19-6; struggled to take two victories over Co. G, 63th Armor, 60 and 14-6 and squeaked by Co. H, 69th Armor, 7-6, in overtime. HHD's only loss came at the hands of Co. H, 913.

The "Patriot" champions swept undefeated through the opposition to clinch the battalion crown. After ascending to their football throne, HHC embarked on an exhibition schedule and defeated HHC, 43rd Engr., Bn., 7-0. An exhibition game with Co. D, 43rd Engr. Bn., was scheduled for last week.

The 197th flag football tournament is scheduled to begin next Tuesday. The tournament will be played by the battalion champions and the top team among the separate companies.

Co. A (Admin.), last season's 197th flag football champions, set their sights on another football championship. Formerly known as the "Bearcubs," Co. A, picked up a new name, "Art's Animals," and continued their winning ways. The "Animals" swept undefeated through four games. Included in their victory string was a 20-2 decision over a Medical Department Activities team; a 34-0 whitewash of Co. D (Maint.); a 53-0 blasting of HHC, 197th Inf. Bde. and a 27-12 win over HHC, 5th Bn., 31st Inf.

In the 1st Bn., 29th Inf., a game to be played between HHC and the winner of the contest between companies B and C was to decide their battalion champion.

Battalion championships had not been decided in the 5th Bn., 31st Inf., and the 2nd Bn., 10th Arty., as of last Friday. In artillery action during the week (Oct. 4-Oct. 8) Btry. B walloped Btry. C, 20-0; and, HHS Btry., defeated a Medical Department Activities team in overtime, 12-6.

609th leading Avn. Cmd. in flag football action

Having won their first three games, the men of the 609th Trans. Co. have a real good start in the winning of the Av. Cmd. Flag Football Championship.

Coached by Sgt. Richard Williams, the 609th has displayed the needed coordination, teamwork and sportsmanship of a winning team.

Not far behind are the 205th Assault Support Helicopter Company and Headquarters Command, each with a 2-1 record. Next in line are the 399th Trans. Det. and the 331st Eng. Gr. (Aviation Plt.) each with a 1-2 record. Bringing up the rear, is the 197th Avn. Co. with a 0-3 record.

Anyone wishing to see the games are reminded that they are held on Wednesday and Friday of each week at Field 1.

Army Ambulance Service Takes On New Look

MEDICAL CARE—A Civil War ambulance (left) evacuates wounded soldiers over one-hundred years ago, while medical specialists (above) demonstrate the use of the most recent addition to military ambulance design—the "ambubus." The experimental ambulance being tested at Walter Reed Army Medical Center, Washington, D.C., can carry 36 ambulatory and wheelchair-bound patients along with four attendants. The "ambubus" is just one example of how the Army has made strides to make patient transportation more comfortable and safe.

To keep current

Eufaula mayor visits Inf. brigade

By Bob Wise

Eufaula Mayor E. H. Graves, Jr., and 10 officials from that east Alabama city, spent an entire day touring Fort Benning as guest of the 197th Infantry Brigade.

The Eufaula delegation was invited to Fort Benning by Lt. Col. Stephen R. Pawlik, commander of the 1st Bn. (Mech.), 58th Inf. "Patriots," of the 197th Inf. Bde., after Mayor Graves expressed an interest in coming to Fort Benning because of a desire to keep current on military situations.

After arriving at Kelley Hill, the VIP's were briefed at 197th headquarters by Brigade Commander Col. Willard Latham on all aspects of the brigade.

Following the briefing, the nine men and two women were treated to lunch at a 197th mess hall. Mayor Graves said he was especially impressed by the "VOLAR burger" and the hotdogs. Under the VOLAR (Volunteer Army) Plan, soldiers can enjoy hamburgers and hotdogs for lunch instead of the traditional menus. Thus, the name "VOLAR burger."

A short tour of brigade facilities was then conducted by Lt. Col. Robert E. Orkand, executive officer of the brigade.

The highlight of the day was a helicopter tour given by Lt. Col. Henry Doctor, Jr., deputy brigade commander. Mayor Graves and his group thought the helicopter tour was most enjoyable.

After landing at Infantry Hall on Main Post, the group was given the Infantry School briefing and took a tour of the Infantry Museum. John Hunter, curator of the museum, personally conducted the tour.

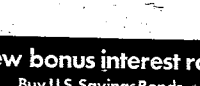
The others accompanying Mayor Graves were: Jim Bradley, executive director of the Eufaula Chamber of Commerce; Dr. Glenn Griffin, head of civil defense; Billy Huston, city council member; Horace Williams, Eufaula attorney; Ralph Garrison, lumber company president; Donald Comer, III, Cowikeee Mills president; Jim Scarborough, city planning commission member; Mrs. Gracie Franklin, city clerk; Mary Brown, secretary of the chamber of commerce; and John Blount, car dealer in Eufaula.

Scouts practice survival on weekend trip

To most people at Fort Benning, whether civilian or military, survival training means time with the Ranger Department or TDY to Panama. But, for the boys of Boy Scout Troop 98, it meant a weekend trip to Uchee Creek.

Under the leadership of Mr. Ben Renieri, Scoutmaster of Troop 98, the boys paddled canoes seven miles up the Chattahoochee River, to the mouth of Uchee Creek. Their personal equipment was limited to a pocket knife and sleeping gear. Everything they ate during the weekend came from either the area around their camp site or the Chattahoochee River. Their entire diet for the weekend consisted of edible plants such as wild onions, water cress, hog peanuts and sumac combined with fish, soft shelled turtles and water plants.

Mr. Renieri had the boys clear brush and clean the area around the camp site to ensure that they would have hearty appetites.



As the boys left their much improved camp site Sunday, Capt. T. A. Pisani, PIO, Special Services, asked Mr. Renieri how the boys had fared during the weekend. He said most of the boys had eaten more than they would have at home and had learned that it is easier than they thought to live off the land.

In conjunction with the survival training, there is a week long survival camp planned for November and most of the boys are looking forward to it.

Engineer leaders take leadership training

To improve the quality of leadership among the E5s of the 43rd Engineer Battalion (Construction), the 43rd has begun a course of instruction aimed at the squad leaders.

The program is headed by Capt. Charles Ingram, former training officer of the battalion. He is assisted by SFC William F. Armstrong and SSgt. Eugene Monroe.

Although these men are the primary personnel at the school, they do receive a helping hand when it comes to the actual instruction. Everyone from the battalion commander, Lt. Col. Beverly McGruder, to the company supply sergeants teaches a specific subject.

The day begins early for a soldier attending the three day course. He rises at 5:30 a.m., polices his area, and goes to chow. After breakfast, instruction begins. A typical morning may include physical training, drill and ceremonies, first aid, leadership and chemical warfare refresher courses. After a break for dinner, it's back to class. The squad leader learns of supply procedures, reenlistment responsibilities, maintenance supervision and inspection, company administration, drug abuse, and many other subjects necessary to a good leader in today's Army. In the evening, there are inspections to include everything from dress greens to a full field layout. The long awaited lights out comes at 10 p.m.

At the end of the three days, a man returns to his unit hopefully as a greatly improved leader. He is ready to use the tools he has been given.

This example of self-improvement is another stride forward for the 43rd.

197th, Ft. Bragg unit lead recruiting efforts

The 197th Infantry Brigade, and the 82nd Airborne Div., at Ft. Bragg, N. C., continued to far outstrip all other units in unit-of-choice recruiting, according to statistics released by the U. S. Army Recruiting Command.

The USAREC figures showed that, 1,228 young men had been recruited for the Army's largest brigade from Feb. 1 to Oct. 1. The 82nd was chosen by 1,269 civilian men during the same period. It marked the first time in several months that the 197th was not the sole leader in recruiting.

The other five recruiting units in CONARC were running at a distant pace behind the 197th and the 82nd. All seven units work in conjunction with USAREC recruiters.

Although school began in September for the age group that the Army desires to recruit, unit-of-choice recruiting of the 197th showed an increase over August. In September, 452 young civilian men signed up for Army service due to the efforts of 197th and USAREC recruiters, according to the brigade S-5 (domestic action and recruiting). Of this number, 286 enlisted specifically for the 197th. The total number enlised by the brigade for the month of August was 423.

There were 109 unit-of-choice recruits present for duty in the 197th, Oct. 1.

CHAMPUS details some pay polices

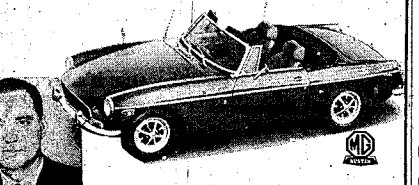
DENVER — Payment for abortion referrals by purely administrative agencies are not a benefit of the Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services (CHAMPUS) according to officials of the hospital and medical benefits programs.

Legal therapeutic abortions authorized by state law and performed in a civilian medical facility are payable as a CHAMPUS benefit, the officials note and authorized charges can be paid from government funds. Charges incurred by a beneficiary attributable to the services provided by a non-medical referral agency remain the sole responsibility of the beneficiary. These agencies normally assist by establishing contacts, arranging transportation and hotel accommodations but provide no medical services.

The beneficial legislation which provides health care and services under the CHAMPUS limits payments from government funds for bona fide medical expenses for services and supplies ordered by physicians and allied health personnel.

It's tough to do your best when you're worried about money.

A man performs well only when his mind is free of problems — problems like a lot of unpaid bills.



We consolidate bills. Pay them off. Cut monthly payments. And still give people extra cash. For a trip home. Emergencies. Color TV. Whatever.

Don't let money problems hurt your performance on the job. Visit or call Avco Financial Services.

VOL. 30, NO. 6 FRIDAY, OCTOBER 29, 1971 40 PAGES — 10c

"Published each Friday by the R. W. Page Corporation, Columbus, Ga., a private firm in no way connected with the Department of Army. Education Center schedules Open House activities

The post General Educational Development Office has scheduled Open House activities beginning at 10 a.m. today at the Education Center, 3rd Floor, West Wing Bldg. 35, in observance of National Education Week.

This is an opportunity for post personnel, both military and civilian, to become better acquainted with opportunities in education and facilities available to servicemen and their dependents. Supervisors, teachers and counselors will be available to answer questions concerning program offerings which include pre-high school, high school, vocational-technical, college undergraduate, graduate and occupational specialty related course work.

The basic philosophy of General Educational Development in the Army is that any individual can improve himself through study; this process does not stop with completion of formal schooling at an early age, but is a lifelong process. Continuing education is essential if military personnel are to achieve maximum career potential and develop desired creative, intellectual and leadership abilities.

There is an increased awareness of the role of education in the success of the Army. Leadership at all levels of command requires new methods and increased technical skill.

Minimum goals of high school completion for all non-commissioned officer personnel, two years of college for warrant officers and senior NCO's, and baccalaureate degrees for all officers have been set by Department of Army. Every effort is made to assist each individual in the development of his maximum potential for assuming greater responsibility and for professional advancement.

Eligibility for participation is not restricted by length of service commitment. In January 1968, Project Transition was added to these opportunities to assist terminating service personnel in the development of a salable job skill for the civilian labor market. These programs are incorporated into the formal education program and provide for either group study or on-the-job training in selected skills.

Standard U. S. Armed Forces texts are used for high school and pre-high school classes. Remedial and refresher courses are provided in basic educational skills. Standardization of texts permits interruption of course work at one education center and resumption of the program at other centers throughout the Army. Over 200 USAFI courses are available for organized group study or correspondence. Forty-four state colleges provide over 6,000 correspondence courses at high school and college level at minimum cost to service personnel.

Columbus College and Georgia State University operate branch facilities on post. Columbus College offers undergraduate level courses while Georgia State provides courses leading to graduate degrees in Business and Education.

These programs are conducted as evening classes and are available to both civilian and military personnel.

Museum sets demonstration by guest artist

The Museum of Arts and Crafts will present Irving Shapiro, director of the American Academy of Art, in a demonstration of watercolor painting Nov. 8 at 10 a.m.

Several watercolors will be exhibited prior to and during Shapiro's demonstration.

Shapiro will be in Columbus to jury the annual Columbus Square Art Show which will be held in the Mall at Columbus Square Nov. 6 and 7.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT
by Bill King

Ripening cheeses like Liederkranz, Camembert or Brie will mellow more slowly in the refrigerator than at room temperature. Depends on how you like them.

Johnny Appleseed, the American folk hero said to have roamed the countryside planting the seeds for today's rich apple orchards, was actually John Chapman, a New England nurseryman.

For a different vegetable treat, cook and serve boiled leeks as you would asparagus. A cheese sauce makes them extra special.

A calming thought for the holidays: among meats, roast turkey is one of the richest in proteins and B vitamins and one of the lowest in calories and cholesterol.

Jean-Jacques Rousseau once defined happiness as "A good bank account, a good cook and a good digestion."

For An Extra 25 HORSEPOWER INCREASE Over Stock—Install A
SHELBY CAMSHAFT KIT

If you own a Ford product, or a Ford-engined anything, no other company can offer you the performance available from each Shelby Camshaft manufactured by Autosport Products. The reason is simple. We are one cam manufacturer that doesn't dilute ability and talent over different makes of engines. We specialize in Ford engines and the result is the best, the most powerful selection available for each and every Ford engine.

221-351 W CID ENGINES

STREET HYDRAULIC CAM KIT
A substantial boost over stock power. If you're looking for a power gain throughout the rpm range of your small-block Ford, this cam has it. You will enjoy 25 HORSEPOWER with the smoothness of hydraulic lifters. The only way to tell it isn't stock is to floor it. High-rev lifters allow 6000+ rpm. For best results, get our springs and increase revs to 6300+.

	Mfg. List	Your Cost
#6006-Cam &Lifters: 221-351-W	$104.50	$52.20
#6009-Cam, Lifters & Springs: 221-289	$130.50	$62.20
#6108-Cam, Lifters & Springs: 302 cid	$130.50	$62.20
#6207-Cam, Lifters & Springs: 351-W cid	$130.50	$62.20

STREET/STRIP SOLID CAM KIT
Strong torque and power for the small-block Ford. A great cam for the weekend warrior. Mild enough to live with on the street, yet gives 25+ HORSES over stock for the weekend trip to the track. Torque increase is outstanding. Solid lifters give high rpm limits; buy with our Competition Springs and Retainers for 6500+ rpm.

	Mfg. List	Your Cost
#6016-Cam & Lifters: 221-351-W	$72.50	$36.20
#6019—Cam, Lifters & Springs: 221-289	$98.50	$49.20
#6118-Cam, Lifters & Springs: 302 cid	$98.50	$49.20
#6217-Cam, Lifters & Springs: 351-W cid	$98.50	$49.20

RACING SOLID LIFTER CAM KIT
High-rpm power for the guy that's serious. This one knows its way around the winner's circle. Autosport's engineers designed it strictly for competition, although we've seen a few brave souls use it on the street. An extra 35-HORSEPOWER boost comes on strong between 3000 and 7000 rpm. Combine this cam with multiple carburetion for best results. Competition Springs (inner and outer duals) and Aluminum Retainers are furnished in complete kits for 7000+ revs. NOTE: Valve lift is 0.508 inch; flyvcut pistons must be used for adequate valve clearance.

	Mfg. List	Your Cost
#6026-Cam & Lifters: 221-351-W	$317.50	$99.50
#6029-Cam, Lifters, Springs, Retainers: 221-351-W	$161.50	$81.00
#6128-Cam, Lifters, Springs, Retainers; Spring Seats; Boss 302	$190.00	$95.00

351 CLEVELAND ENGINES
The following camshafts are the result of long hours at the computer and on Autosport Products' dynos. The 351-Cleveland (351-C) engine features extremely large valves and ports with a high flow rate. This demands special cam profiles to maintain the velocity of the incoming fuel/air charge. No cam-shafts are more successful in this engine than the Shelby Cams listed below.

STREET HYDRAULIC CAM KITS
A substantial power increase tamed for the street. Pick up an honest 50 HORSEPOWER over stock with easy installation and the bonus of quiet operation. 197th honors veterans of all wars with ceremony

The 197th Infantry Brigade saluted the veterans of all wars last Friday in a prelude to "Veterans Day" ceremony.

Conducted on Presidential Field at Kelley Hill, the event included a performance by the 263rd Army Band, a brief narrative history of each unit in the 197th, and an address by Col. Willard Latham, brigade commander.

Special guests attending the ceremony were Columbus Mayor J. R. Allen, and three members of the Chattahoochee Valley Gold Star Wives.

In his address, Col. Latham outlined the tasks of the new veteran of American service when he stated, "We are the trailblazers for a type of military life which the veterans of yesterday have never known. Our job and our obligation to those veterans before us is to consistently utilize all possible resources in the building of a quality Volunteer Army."

In his closing remarks, the brigade commander called for all to rise and "to remember the veteran and his contribution to the cause of freedom, not only on Veteran's Day, but for all the days of our lives."

A 21-gun salute to veterans by Battery A, 2nd Bn., 10th Field Arty., followed Col. Latham's closing remarks.

Represented in the ceremony were the 1st Bn., 29th Inf.; 5th Bn., 31st Inf.; 2nd Bn., 10th (Field) Arty.; 1st Bn. (Mech.), 58th Inf. "Patriots"; Companies A (Admin.), D (Maint.), and HHC, 197th Inf. Bde.

Benning man foils holdup

SEC Dewey C. Johnson of Fort Benning, who foiled a Phenix City holdup and is credited with saving the holdup victim's life, was awarded the Soldier's Medal yesterday for his actions.

The Wetumka, Ala., native, who is a 14-year Army vet, received the Army's highest non-combat award for bravery for his heroism in an incident last December.

According to Johnson, he was sitting in his brother's Phenix City service station when he learned that a station across the street was being held up by armed robbers.

"I borrowed my brother's gun," remembers Johnson, "and ran across the street. I fired the gun once to make sure it would work," and that scared away one of the two hold-up men.

The other would-be thief was holding a service station attendant whom he had stabbed several times, and whom he was about to stab again.

"I took his knife away, and held him for police," states Johnson calmly, as though the procedure were quite routine.

Has Johnson engaged in other heroic activities? "Only the normal duties in 'Nam," replies Johnson.

Gen. Palmer to attend Avn. review

Gen. Bruce Palmer, vice chief of staff of the Army, will head a list of general officers who will be at Fort Benning Tuesday through Thursday for a Combined Infantry Army Aviation Program Review.

The purpose of the review is to provide a platform for a general discussion and review of the role of the infantry and aviation in today's Army.

GIs say Airborne one way to get your head straight

No doubt most people don't think of Airborne training as a philosophical experience. But at least two young GIs maintain that it is one way to get your head straight.

The two soldiers, both of whom used drugs since they were 15, claim that the challenge of Airborne, and the help of Chaplain (Capt.) Tom Fraker, gave them a chance to beat drug use.

So when Col. A. G. Norris, the School Brigade commander, pinned their wings on last week, it was an indication not only that they were Airborne, but that they had kicked a long-standing drug habit.

Both men, call them Dave and Bill, came to Airborne with remarkably similar backgrounds. One from the Northeast, and the other from the Midwest, they both left home at 14, drifted, and got into drugs. When they entered Airborne, Dave was addicted to heroin, and Bill had been dropping acid regularly.

Dave, the older of the two is 19 and a PFC. When he left home, he went to Greenwich Village, and got a job. "And that," he says, "is enough to [illegible]

L.A. on the Strip for a while, and hitched all over the West. I was just looking for something. One day I was in Albuquerque, New Mexico, and I just knew something had to change. So I joined the Army.

Bill, 18, has essentially the same story. He left home at 14, headed for L.A. He found a job on the Strip at a car lot and then got into drugs. "I was strictly into acid. Acid is funny, it's sort of a search in itself. I was traveling around digging Thoreau and Hesse. It was a great education and I can't say that acid wasn't a part of it."

He too decided one day that something had to change, and joined the Army.

Neither had any idea what the Army would accomplish. "I just had to get away from the whole drug scene," said Bill. "I just needed a change."

Throughout basic and AIT, nothing changed very much for either. Drugs were still readily available, and friends were still tied up with drugs. It was not until they reported for Airborne training that things began to happen.

"But it wasn't acid," said Bill. "The best I can tell, it was some of the purest speed I've ever seen. After several days I was still speeding and I started to get a little paranoid. Finally, about 2 a.m. I went to see the duty officer, and asked him to put me on amnesty."

The next step was a confrontation with Chaplain Fraker. "I expected to get the usual chaplain bit, said Dave. "You know 'you're such a nice kid, why do you want to do something like that?' I wasn't prepared for Fraker!

"He really put me down. He said I was nothing but a junkie, and that I didn't have the will power to be Airborne.

"Naturally, the only way I could show him, and myself, was to go through with it."

Two weeks of training an soul-searching at Fraker's direction followed. When they qualified physically, and satisfied Fraker that they could take it, they were returned to

Infantry School at Fort Benning, including Lt. Gen. (ret.) John W. O'Daniel of San Diego, Calif., under whose guidance the council was formed in 1946. Other former commandants who have indicated they will attend are Maj. Gen. (ret.) Joseph W. Harper of Atlanta, Ga.; Maj. Gen. (ret.) George E. Lynch, Columbus, Ga.; Gen. (ret.) Paul L. Freeman Jr., Carmel Calif., and Lt. Gen. (ret.) Charles W. G. Rich, Hilton Head Island, S.C.

Maj. Gen. Orwin C. Talbot, present commandant of the Infantry School and commanding general of Fort Benning, will attend as a member of the council.

The purpose of the CMC at the time of its formation was to eliminate friction between the military and civilian public which Gen. O'Daniel felt might result as an aftermath of World War II.

In October 1946 Gen. O'Daniel invited 11 prominent civic leaders to meet with him and certain key members of his staff in an effort to increase cooperation between Fort Benning and the Columbus-Phenix City area. The result was the organization of CMC.

The council was organized as an advisory body to deal with matters pertaining to relations between Army personnel and the civilian population in the community; and, for the purpose of settling difficulties which may arise due to either local military or civilian policies.

The CMC membership is composed of the top echelon officials from Fort Benning and the civilian communities who can, in practice, take the positive action necessary to prevent any rupture in the civilian-military relationship.

The colonel, the moderator, the Golddigger

Getting together to talk about the Modern Volunteer Army were Col. Willard Latham, commanding officer of the 197th Infantry Brigade, Charlie Welsh of the Today in Georgia Show on WSB-TV, and Francie Mendenhall, one of the Golddiggers. Since October has been declared MODERN VOLUNTEER ARMY MONTH it was a good time for the commander of the largest infantry brigade in the Army, as well as one of the first VOLAR units, to answer questions put to him by moderator Welsh and lovely Francie. Francie, who showed a surprising awareness of the soldier and his problems, provided a background of inquiry which kept the interview meaningful; a surprising assist from a lady who also sings and dances.

Q — If a serviceman is killed in Vietnam and he has handicapped children at home will they still remain eligible for financial aid under CHAMPUS?

A — Yes, in accordance with a new CHAMPUS regulation, handicapped dependents whose sponsors are killed in Vietnam are eligible for financial aid until they reach the age of 21 under a law signed by the President July 29.

Q—I am covered under the Serviceman's Group Life Insurance Program (SGLI), in the event I die would my beneficiary have to pay taxes of any sort on the proceeds she receives on my policy?

A—According to a spokesman from the Judge Advocate General's Office on Post your beneficiary would not be liable for the payment of any taxes on your SGLI policy.

Q—What does the alphabetical prefix on the Enlisted Post tags indicate?

A—The only reason for using an alphabetical prefix is to be able to utilize more numbers according to a spokesman from the Vehicle Registration Branch of the Provost Marshal's Office.

Q—I am due to be separated from the Army in the near future. What is the time limit for applying for Veterans Administration Dental care and how long do I have to apply for unemployment compensation?

A—A veteran has one year from the date of discharge to apply for VA dental care or to request unemployment compensation from his local state employment service.

Q—What if a beneficiary under CHAMPUS obtains care from a physician or other source of health care who chooses not to participate in the program?

A—Under these circumstances, the patient would have two choices: he may pay the bill and obtain an itemized receipt from the provider of care; or he may obtain an itemized unpaid bill or statement from the provider of care. The patient can then submit a claim for reimbursement for the Government's share of the allowable charges. To do this he should complete the first 13 items of the claim form, sign it, attach the receipt or bill and mail it to the appropriate fiscal agent. Visit your medical unit for further information.

Q—Do all civilian sources of health care participate in the Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services (CHAMPUS)?

A—No. Participation in the program is strictly voluntary for the physician and all other sources of health care.

Chapter XIII stops creditor's harassment

USAIC Legal Assistance Office.

Harassment of a debtor may cause him to lose his job and he may go into bankruptcy.

Financial advisers, proraters, or private consultants sometimes help such a debtor to stem his creditor's demands. Even so, any private plan which allows the wage earner to work out his debts can fail if just one of his creditors refuses to accept a plan to delay payment.

But a wage-earner can ask a federal court for a "Chapter XIII" proceeding instead of bankruptcy, and gain time to finance his debts. He can keep his job and his creditors cannot attach his wages. Meantime, the court can work out a plan to allow him up to three years to pay off his debts, sometimes longer.

Once the debtor seeks a Chapter XIII proceeding, the court keeps creditors from trying to collect under state or federal law. It stops repossessions of furniture, autos, or items bought on time. It suspends lawsuits in process, and keeps creditors from filing new suits.

The law limits interest payments to 10 per cent on those debts where security is posted. If the debt or borrowed without security, then the court holds up interest completely.

Creditors gain also. They are likely to collect more during the three years than if the debtor went through bankruptcy. The court forbids the debtor to run up certain future debts, for instance, for more than $100 without court approval.

Some debtors fail anyhow and must go through bankruptcy. The court then dismisses most of his debts, but not debts such as taxes, alimony, child support, or debts incurred through fraud.

Even the bankrupt can still keep a modest family home, tools, a small savings account, his insurance, household furnishings, and a few such things.

An estimated 900,000 newly enfranchised voters may sound off in the '72 election.

Pencil sketch by Tom Tegtmeyer

Does anyone listen to today's generation?

The following article appeared in the Sept. 3 issue of the USAPERSCEN TIMES, Oakland, Calif.

Today is lived in a compressed world, timed by a racing clock. Dissent, poverty, war, social and economic strife scream from the headlines. Current public attention is often centered on a small micority of what has been termed the "Turned-on, dropped-out" generation.

Much is being said about that generation of Americans. Depending on who speaks the words, and why they are spoken, they either praise or condemn. But they often seem to point to one theory; this generation has abandoned the old values of the past.

That generation today makes up 53.7 per cent of America's armed forces. They deny that theory. Many of them are beginning to stand up to be counted. They asked questions. Often they supply the answers. They want to know "Is anybody listening?"

Their comments, revealing a deep insight, are often surprising to those who believe they lack traditional values.

"We're not a mirror image of the older generation," Sp4 Craig Weigand said, "Perhaps our values aren't the same. If anything, we believe they're stronger. If our forefathers had believed in some of the things we do, there would have been no need for an Emancipation Proclamation."

In spite of a changing world, the youth of today are deeply committed to idealism, equality, justice and freedom. They are beginning to mold and solidify their concepts. They have an active desire to participate. However, many of them feel that they are often judged by the acts of a small minority of their generation.

"These clowns, because they promise shock entertainment, have captured the eyes and ears of mass media throughout the world," one young soldier said. "They also seem to have brainwashed a lot of people into thinking that everyone under 30 is some kind of a nut.

"I think every generation has had the tendency to look at the younger one and mutter, "What hath God wrought?" However, we ask one thing. That we be judged by how we serve and by the actual values we hold, rather than by the actions of the malcontents or attention seekers or by how closely we follow the outward appearance of the older generation."

"How do we serve and what do we believe in," he said. "There have been a lot of posthumous Medals of Honor awarded during the past few years, most of them to men under 30. When the chips were down, they put their life on the line. You don't have to ask what they believed in.

"Look at the clerks, mechanics, artillerymen, and infantrymen who keep the routine gears running every day. There may be little or no glory to their job but they're doing it and doing it right."

Other young soldiers spoke of doing the job and doing it right. "Job satisfaction is what it's all about, one man said, "You've got to feel that your potential is being challenged to the limit, that you're trusted to get the job done no matter how tough it is."

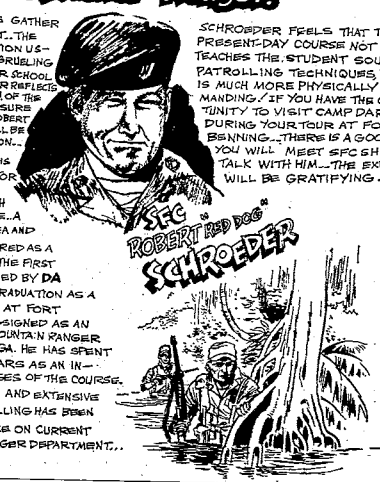
Another grinned. "VOLAR" may be all right and everyone wants more pay and better living conditions, in or out of the Army. However, that's not the key.

"Good morale doesn't mean that everyone is happy, happy, happy, and out of trouble. Man, you find people like that in straight-jackets. The biggest thing in morale is to have a sense of challenge, to feel a sense of accomplishment when you slam the door at the end of the day."

"You don't mind working hard when the work is organized, you've got some clear objective and you can see the result of your work. But you need the challenge and the recognition."

That recognition is harder to achieve today. A Sp5 said, "The dialogue of today seems to blame everything from pollution to the crime rate in Vietnam on the military. In that same dialogue, the soldier often feels cut off from those he serves.

"Because of this, it is much more difficult to feel that pride in being a soldier, in wearing the uniform." He paused briefly, then said, "In spite of that I believe the young soldiers still continue to offer their hearts, their minds and often their lives for what they believe in. We haven't envolved any new values. We're only trying to live up to the ones that have been passed down to us. It has always been tough. Today it is also confusing."



Today's soldier is more vocal, dress and hair styles have changed, but the man himself asks for challenge. In a turmoil of domestic and international change, he still stands ready to defend equality, justice, and freedom.

Today, the true young individualist is found in the quiet majority of this generation — those who serve.

The Talent Tree

Fine art featured at Benning's new boutique

By Carol May
Femline Staff Writer

Fort Benning will once again have captured a "first" with the opening of The Talent Tree, an outlet for personally handmade items by all military personnel and dependents.

Scheduled to officially open in January, 1972, the shop will be located in Bldg. 1241 near the Thrift Shop. Consignments will be accepted for reviewing by an art council on Nov. 22 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. The following three Mondays, Nov. 29, Dec. 6 and Dec. 13, will be for consignments after The Talent Tree officially opens.

Examples of the items to be sold at The Talent Tree are sculpture, paintings, jewelry, graphics, crocheted tablecloths, decoupage, papier-mache' items and other handcrafted articles.

The Thrift Shop has generously agreed to lend its support in establishing this newest post project. The Talent Tree has been organized as an extension of the Thrift Shop and will be open on the same days: Tuesdays and Thursdays, from 10 a.m.-2 p.m.

Consignments will be received only on Mondays. The Talent Tree will retain 15 per cent of the selling cost, the same amount received as the Thrift Shop. Welfare causes in the Fort Benning-Columbus area will benefit from profits from the art boutique.

The Talent Tree will strive to maintain the highest degree of workmanship and thereby obtain quality craftsmen to display their items. An OWC Thrift Shop innovation, The Talent Tree encourages all Fort Benning residents to participate. The concept of this art boutique has so far generated enthusiasm from the Fort Benning community.

The Talent Tree also needs volunteers interested in carpentry, painting, panelling walls, or paint scrapers.

Tomorrow the first work call will sound. Everyone is welcomed to help "get it all together" to insure a new year's grand opening. Muscles are especially needed, but a willing hand will be just fine.

Phone Mrs. Richard Stoltz, 545-1845, Mrs. Thomas McGregor, 545-2226 or the OWC Lounge, 545-3505, for more information or to volunteer your time.

CARE--For Adults Only

The opening meeting of the Catholic Adult Religious Education (CARE) was held Oct. 21 at the Infantry Center Chapel Annex.

CARE was established to show adults their place in the modern church, facing modern problems; to emphasize learning by discussion and by asking questions; and, help them study the real values and gain insights toward the solution of contemporary personal and social problems.

The Most Reverend Thomas A. Donnellan, Archbishop of Atlanta, was the guest speaker.

During his keynote speech the arch bishop said, "Childhood is an apt time to learn of Christ, and commencement from high school or college is just a beginning of education."

However, "In adult religious education there is an element of sharing that a teacher-child relationship cannot have."

Archbishop Donnellan also emphasized the need for "Hope when the tempest of ideas and questions break upon our doors."

The Religious Education Commission of the Parish Council at Fort Benning, said, "Modern Man is living in a new consciousness. He has discovered that he is an evolving being. His experience is much like that of a man who thought he was actually winging through the air in a supersonic jet.

"Vatican II gave full recognition to certain realities that face the Church in the modern technological world."

Projects of the CARE program are discussion groups, small groups of about 12 persons with a discussion leader who has attended a six-hour block of instruction; a Pre-Cana Program, held the first Sunday of each month at the Catholic Chapel Annex for young couples who wish to marry in the church; a Guest Lecturer Program bringing special speakers of interest; retreats, scheduled for give and take in small groups; and Pre-Sacramental Classes for parents whose children will be receiving certain sacraments, to allow the parents to understand questions and problems that their children might have.

Accompanying Archbishop Donnellan to Fort Benning was Chaplain (Col.) Leonard F. Stegman, the recently appointed 3rd Army Chaplain.

PWOC Fall Rally planned

The P.W.O.C. Fall Rally will be held Wednesdaay at the Infantry Center Chapel. The day will begin at 9:15 a.m. with the theme, "What the world needs now".

Lunch will be served during the noon hour in the Chapel Annex, followed by an afternoon session which will end at 2:15 p.m.

Free nursery will be provided at Tot Town. Those desiring to use the nursery are asked to make their reservations early.

CBS documentary to include 197th

By Carol May

"How did you react when you learned your husband had received orders to go to Vietnam? Do you find it difficult adjusting to new civilian communities and new military installations?" Those were among the questions asked at the Headquarters, 197th Inf. Bde. monthly coffee by an unexpected, but most interesting, guest, B. Bearnbaum, CBS producer, who is currently filming a CBS documentary in which the 197th Inf. Bde. is a participant. Bearnbaum was introduced by Lt. Col. Henry Doctor, deputy commander of 197th Inf. Bde.

Mrs. Henry Doctor was hostess, and Mrs. Thomas Griffin was co-hostess. After delicious refreshments were served, the business meeting was brought to order by Mrs Doctor. The following announcements were made: Donations are needed for handmade items, baked goods, and white elephant collection for the Christmas Bazaar..

Any donation will be appreciated.

Welcomes were extended to Mrs. Jay C. Copley, Mrs. Frank Wilson, Mrs. Stephen E. Fitzgerald, and Mrs. Dan D. Gritton.

A silver charm was presented to Mrs. Richard Newberry who is leaving the group.

Military Wife of Year begins at post level

The search for Fort Benning's Military Wife of the Year is currently in the preliminary stages.

Nominees of Fort Benning women's clubs will be considered by a panel representing both the military and civilian communities. The Fort Benning Military Wife of the Year will then compete at the 3rd Army level.

The 3rd Army winner will be considered, along with nominees from other major Army commands for the title of Army Wife of the Year. The winners of the military service titles are announced in March and the women participate in a host of activities that culminate in the gala annual awards banquet held in Washington, D.C. in May.

The Military Wife of the Year is selected by a prominent panel of judges before an audience of official Washington representatives.

Following her selection, the 1972 Military Wife is taken on a whirlwind tour across the United States, visiting military installations and major cities. She will be greeted by governors, mayors, and civilian and military dignitaries. Television and radio interviews, and press conferences are scheduled wherever she goes.

The Military Wife of the Year competition, now in its sixth year, is designed to recognize the contributions of military wives toward better understanding around the globe, through involvement in public service program.

LEADERSHIP

The ladies of the Management Committee discussed and traded ideas for yuletide at their coffee, Oct. 18. Further plans for the Christmas luncheon and bazaar were also made. Mrs. Robert Thomas demonstrated how to make an inexpensive and decorative Christmas wreath from ordinary "baggies" and a coathanger.

Banana spice cake, tuna puffs, and fruit punch were served by the hostesses, Mrs. Don Franklin and Mrs. David Clappier. The ladies welcomed newlywed Mrs. David Keifer and guest, Beverly Thomas, for the evening.

Witches, goblins and a variety of treats greeted the ladies of Headquarters, Leadership Department to their coffee Sept. 19 in the home of Mrs. Victor Russell.

A pumpkin and black-candles centered the Halloween table which offered brownies, finger sandwiches, mixed nuts and an oh-so-spirited cherbet punch.

Mrs. William B. Steele, wife of the department director, welcomed Mrs. Douglas Emery to the committee. Also welcomed was little Jamey Smith, new son of Capt. and Mrs. John H. Smith. On a sadder note, Mrs. Steele said farewell to Mrs. Patrick J. Lalley who has been with the committee since the department was formed two and a half years ago. Judy was presented the traditional army wife scroll.

Final plans were made for the Hawaiian party and fashion show on Nov. 2. The ladies of headquarters will hostess for the department wives. We hope to see all the ladies who have muu-muu's wear them that evening and add to the Hawaiian atmosphere.

Mrs. Emery has offered to have the November coffee in her home.

31ST INF.

Mrs. Herbert Townley and Mrs. William Massy were hostesses for the 5th Bn., 31st Inf. ladies' monthly coffee Oct. 14, in the Mirror Room of the Main Officer's Club. The women presented each guest with a name tag made of bright vari-colored leaves.

CO. OPNS.

The OWC Lounge was the setting for a delicious dessert coffee for the ladies of Platoon Tactics Committee, Company Operations Department Oct. 13.

After sampling pieces of "sweet potato pie," "cherry-o-cream cheese pie," "German chocolate pie," "crazy crust apple pie,"—we're not through yet folks—and—"German covered apple cake"—it's a sure bet that the OWC Slim and Trim Class will have some new participants.

A hearty welcome was extended to Mrs. Michael A. Arida, arriving from Ft. Land Navigation Committee.

After hearing reports from the various committees, Mrs. Duane Cameron presented a welcome letter to the ladies. The letter, compiled by Mrs. Osteen, will be given to all newcomers. Mrs. Osteen also provided each committee with a Hostess Handbook, a helpful guideline to all hostesses for future coffees and luncheons.

Mrs. Cameron announced that Mrs. Osteen will entertain the ladies of Platoon Tactics with a coffee and a tour of Col. and Mrs. Osteen's lovely home in November.

Mrs. Paul G. Evans volunteered to be Platoon Tac's "Sunshine Girl."

Ballet is characterized by simplicity and beauty and the wives of the 1st Bn. (Mech.), 58th Inf., 197th Inf. Bde. tried to capture this feeling in the decorations they made for the coming brigade luncheon.

Where the wives met for their monthly coffee Oct. 14, the luncheon was the major topic of discussion. The decorations planned for the event are indeed impressive.

Mrs. William Strong was welcomed into the battalion by Mrs. Stephen Pawlik. A farewell tray was presented to the departing Mrs. Ronald Campbell.

Hostess, Mrs. Charles Pollut, and co-hostess, Mrs. Thomas Moss, chose a Halloween theme for the coffee. Seasonal refreshments and decorations were used.

GOLD STAR WIVES

Patrick Morris, assistant manager of the local Social Security District Office, was guest speaker at the dinner meeting of the Chattahoochee Valley Chapter of the Gold Star Wives of America, Oct. 13, at the Main Officers' Club.

Cecelia LaVoie, Social Security claims representative, assisted Morris during the question and answer session that followed his presentation.

Morris announced that Social Security cards will soon be issued automatically to all Social Security beneficiaries, including children, if they don't already have a number.

Chapter president, Mrs. Billy Nave, announced that the 51st OCS Company will sponsor a Halloween picnic party for Gold Star children on Oct. 30.

The next meeting, Nov. 10, will be a fashion show coordinated by Mrs. William Black and Myrick House of Fashions.

Widows of servicemen who died on active duty of any cause or who died after discharge on retirement of a service-connected disability are invited to attend. For further information phone reservations chairman, Mrs. Richard Hostitka, 689-7084 or membership chairman, Mrs. Marvin Roberts, 687-0968.

Share your impressions of the book with the Book Club at the Nov. 3 meeting. Mrs. Perry Savage will be the hostess at her home, 453-B Craig Drive.

ODDLP

Oct. 6 was the date for a baby shower held for Mrs. Steven Maruska. It was held in the home of Mrs. Thomas Hensler. A corsage of yellow baby mums was presented to her as she arrived. A stork, cradle and baby buggy were the main decorations with white daisies and yellow mums.

The many gifts included knit jump suits, giraffe clothes hanger, diaper bag, sweater sets, blanket warmer and knitted crib sheets. Refreshments of coffee, punch, cookies, fruit cake and sandwiches were served.

A short business meeting was held and it was announced that the next gathering would be held at the home of Mrs. David Pearson. Welcome was extended to two new ladies: Mrs. Alejandro Mercado and Mrs. Arthur Osborne. Mrs. Brandon Parker, whose husband was formerly deputy of ODDLP, was a guest.

After the meeting, the ladies worked on the Christmas Bazaar projects.

TSB

Kings Lodge pulsated to the rhythm of the "Metal Circus" as IOAC I-72 held its first class party the evening of Oct. 1. Most of the class attended the party which was planned as an opportunity for class members to become acquainted on an informal basis.

The theme of the party was "Hobo" and the decorations were in keeping. A buffet was prepared which included sliced ham rolls, relishes, chips and pretzels.

A special guest was Maj. Waters of the Medical Service Corps, who kept the party "in stitches" as he shared his favorite medical teaching techniques. Another special guest was Susanne Vossfeldt, Miss Columbus of 1971. She recently won the added title of Miss Columbus, U.S.A.

DIO

Mrs. Thomas McGregor was the hostess for the monthly Directorate of Industrial Operations (DIO) ladies' coffee Oct. 15. An aire of ghosts and goblins was present in the Halloween decorations.

The ladies discussed plans to take refreshments to Martin Army Hospital and to stock the ACS Emergency Food Locker with grocery items.

Mrs. McGregor graciously displayed her creative art work in papier-mache.

BBOD

Goblins and fall flowers set the mood of the Oct. 14, coffee for the wives of the officers of the Artillery Committee, BBOD, USAIS.

The coffee was held at the home of Mrs. John Ballenger on Arrowhead Rd. For the first time in many months there were no welcomes or farewells. The wives enjoyed an evening of conversation highlighted by taste treats of meringue and pecan puffs, cheese balls, and pineapple cake.

Mrs. Ballenger and Mrs. Toney Strickland were hostesses for the occasion.

Inf. Board wives gain insight to husbands' work

"I wish that for just one time you could stand inside my shoes. . ." so go the words to a contemporary melody.

For 40 U.S. Army Infantry Board (USAIB) wives and secretaries, Oct. 21 was a day for standing in their husbands shoes. They were invited to the Infantry Board's ranges to observe the various test facilities.

Maj. William Shackelford, plans officer for the event, said that the annual outing is a project designed to give the wives a better understanding of the work being done by their husbands.

Following an official welcome by board president, Col. Charles B. Thomas, the outing began with a trip to Sandy Patch Test Area. There the ladies were briefed by Col. Thomas on the test facilities at that site.

The party then proceeded to Farnworth Range, where the ladies observed demonstrations of items currently under test, ranging from Men's Cotton Drawers to the M 203 Grenade Launcher.

After a bus ride over rugged back roads along the Chattahoochee River, the party arrived at the Griswald Test Range, a computer instrumented test facility.

Lunch in the field followed at Griswald Range mess area where the ladies were served the Army favorite cuisine, better known as C-rations, embellished with relishes and cheeses.

Following lunch, the ladies were briefed by test officers of the board on the purposes and workings of the attack, defense and quick-fire automated ranges. Live-fire demonstrations were also given to show the capabilities of the defense facilities during a simulated test.

The ladies were asked their opinion of the day's activities. Among them was Mrs. Kathy Pifer, a clerk-typist, who summed up the feeling of the ladies group.

"I now, better understand the board's work. I feel proud to have even a small part in helping to insure that our troops have only the best equipment."

Hall of Fame gets 5 new members

By Charles Black

Five Medal of Honor holders — four of them present for the occasion — were inducted into the Infantry Officer Candidate School Hall of Fame here, Oct. 26, by Maj. Gen. Orwin C. Talbott, commanding general.

The new members of the Hall of Fame brought to 544 the number of Infantry OCS graduates so honored of the more than 100,000 lieutenants the school has graduated in its 30 year history.

One of the honorees, Capt. James A. Taylor, is an Armor officer, who may be the first of that branch put into Infantry's most elite company.

"Five years and eight months ago I graduated from OCS at Fort Benning, and those six months were an expeirence I cherish today," Taylor said. "I can truly say that the Infantry School made a firm and solid foundation for me."

Taylor, who attended Infantry OCS rather than Armor OCS on a branch exchange program, said he had been an enlisted man for nine years serving in armor units, but that when "armor men ask me where I was commissioned, it is an honor and a privilege to tell them the Officer Candidate School at Fort Benning, Ga."

The captain, now a student at the University of Tampa, Fla., was awarded his Medal of Honor in 1967 while serving with the 1st Squadron 1st Armored Cavalry, attached to the Americal Division near Que Son, Vietnam.

Another Vietnam hero, Maj. Kern W. Dunagan, not present at the ceremony because he is stationed in Germany, graduated from OCS here in June 1963 and served at Fort Benning until 1966 with the Airborne Department, went to Vietnam, returned in 1968 to attend the Infantry Officer Career Course at Fort Benning, then returned again to the Indochina War where he won his Medal of Honor as a company commander.

Dunagan, like Taylor, served with the Americal Division. He spent both of his tours in Vietnam with that unit and was awarded his Medal of Honor near Quang Tri, Vietnam, for heroism on May 13-14, 1969.

Three of the Hall of Faine inductees were awarded their Medals of Honor during World War II while fighting in Europe.

Gen. Talbott noted that two of them, Dr. Eli L. Whiteley, a professor at Texas A and M University, and Carlos Ogden, State Director of Selective Service, Sacramento, Calif., were decorated for service with the 3rd Infantry Division commanded by Gen. "Iron Mike" O'Daniel, who returned from the war to command Fort Benning in 1945."

Gen. Talbott said Lt. Gen. (Ret.) John W. O'Daniel, who founded the post-World War II community relations program which grew to weld Fort Benning and the Columbus-Phenix City area into a unique total community, will visit Fort Benning today, accompanied by Mrs. O'Daniel.

Frank X. Burke, a New Jersey insurance executive who retired as a major from the New Jersey National Guard in 1955, was an Infantry OCS graduate who became a transport officer in Europe, voluntarily entered a battle and won the Medal of Honor for tremendous individual combat exploits and for leadership he gave to other infantrymen involved.

Burke, Ogden and Whiteley had been attending a convention of the Congressional Medal of Honor Society in Birmingham and were brought to Fort Benning from there for the ceremonies.

"I can't help but note the differences between when I was here 29 years ago and today," Burke said. "One of the differences is that they drove us here from Birmingham. In those days they would have made us hike it."

Dr. Whiteley, past president of the Congressional Medal of Honor Society, said he hoped there would be few such honorees in America's future.

"We need a time of peace," Dr. Whiteley said.

He said "a country is only as good as its people. Your institution (the Army) will only be as good as the leaders you produce, and as good as he people who enter it."

Ogden said that the Infantry motto "Follow Me," applies not only to the Infantry today, but to our society as a whole . . . "certainly the time has come when there is a demand for leadership in our country."

Lt. Col. Don Bliss, commander of the 5th Officer Candidate School battalion, traced the history of the OCS program here. He said 50 OCS graduates have become generals.

VOLAR partitions continue to go up

Phase Two of VOLAR partition construction in barracks by the 43rd Engr. Bn., 931st Engr. Gp. is currently underway throughout Fort Benning. The second phase of construction will provide semi-private rooms in barracks not included in Phase One which ended Aug. 12.

The engineer battalion began Phase Two construction on Sept. 27, and expects to complete the 44 buildings included in the second phase by Nov. 22, barring unscheduled delays.

Companies B, C, and D of the 43rd are working on the project, with each company doing a specific task in the barracks in an assembly-line operation. Platoons from each company specialize in one area of construction, thus improving the quality and speed of the work.

The second portion of the VOLAR partition project includes mainly the older, wooden barracks which were not included in the first stage. The partitioning will give soldiers permanent semi-private rooms which will be enclosed with sheet rock over wooden frames.

Red Cross develops way to freeze blood

WASHINGTON — The American Red Cross has developed an improved method of freezing red blood cells.

The new process involves the addition of glycerol followed with subsequent freezing and storage.

The frozen red cells have an almost unlimited shelf life, and after thawing the glycerol is removed in a series of simple washing steps before transfusion into the patient.

The Red Cross plans to have the freezing process available in 18 of its 59 regional blood centers by the end of 1971.

Mayor praises 197th Inf. Brig.

SSgt. Richard Hines (L), SSgt. Willie Ingram (R) won praise from Mayor J. R. Allen and the Columbus Council for their leadership in the work the 197th Infantry Brigade in developing several recreation areas in Columbus. Mayor Allen told the two Infantry veterans they exemplified the standards of mutual cooperation Fort Benning and Columbus have enjoyed through the years, and "spoke well for the new Army concept." Hines said the effort was worthwhile since it had contributed to developing "young adults who are going to be leaders of our world tomorrow."

PX guarantees everything sold

The Army and Air Force Exchange Service (AAFES) guarantees the merchandise it sells and the services it offers with liberal refund and adjustment policies. At the exchange no sales are final.

Exchange policy provides for refunds, adjustments and partial refunds.

A refund is reimbursement of the full purchase price paid for an item of merchandise and return of the merchandise to the exchange facility.

An adjustment is reimbursement of a part of the purchase price with the customer retaining the merchandise.

A partial refund is a "refund prorated," taking into consideration the amount of use obtained by the customer, the merchandise being returned to the exchange.

The refund and adjustment policy applies to exchange activities worldwide, including those operated by concessionaires.

If possible, the customer should present a cash register receipt when requesting a refund. If a receipt is not available, the purchase price will be verified through exchange records.

When a returned item of U.S. manufactured merchandise purchased in an overseas exchange and returned in the United States is not authorized for sale within the continental United States, the exchange will help the customer attain satisfaction by contacting the manufacturer or distributor for repair or replacement or by making an adjustment or refund.
