Six Benning aces go for Army tryout

BY JIM HOWARD

Fort Benning will be well represented by six players carrying big bats and golden gloves at this year's Army fast pitch softball trials, to be held August 6-24 at Gowdy Field, Fort Benning.

The trials will decide the make-up of the team that will represent the Army in the inter-service fast pitch softball championships, also being held at Benning.

The fast pitch softball representatives from Fort Benning are George Henry, Melvin Bradford, Robert Berg, Jerry Evans, Randall E. Hamilton and Garry Richey.

George Henry has played baseball most of his life. Henry played two years at the University of Wisconsin where he had a .326 batting average. He joined the Army and played ball on the Third Brigade team in Germany after which he played independent ball with the Columbus Braves. His most recent contact with the game was as centerfielder for the Personnel Company slow pitch softball team. According to Henry "I'm a clutch hitter, I'll get the hits when you need them." He also hopes to have the chance to play pro ball when he leaves the service.

Melvin Bradford also has a broad knowledge of the sport. He played semi-pro baseball at the age of 16 on the Indianapolis Allstars. He joined the Army and has played for Ft. Bragg, N.C., Fairbanks, Alaska, and most recently, catcher on the USAIC softball league championship team at Fort Benning. Bradford said, "I'm a longball hitter but I think my experience will be my greatest asset."

Robert Berg has always been sports-oriented, lettering in wrestling, basketball and baseball in high school. Since he left the service he has still kept his hands in baseball. He played ball in Frafenwohr, Germany for two years and made the league allstars both years. "Maybe when I get out of the service I'll give pro-ball a shot," he said.

Jerry Evans started his baseball career at the age of seven and hasn't quit yet. His semi-pro years were with the American Legion in Mississippi. His most recent ball-playing was here at Fort Benning with the 609th Medical Co. softball team. "I should do all right," said Evans. "I am a player that you can rely on to get on base."

Randall Hamilton's baseball experience was gathered in high school. He was recently a part of the 15th Finance softball team.

Garry Richey has a vast amount of experience in both softball and baseball. His baseball years came in Oklahoma in the American League, while his softball playing has been at the Hillsdale Freewill Baptist College. His most recent participation in softball was on the USAIC League champions Infantry Board softball team. Richey said, "I'm pretty confident about making the team, but I'll just have to wait and do my best. I hope I can keep up my 400 hitting average that I carried throughout this season."

These six players, in addition to twenty others from Army posts worldwide, were selected by the Department of the army from over 50 applications The selections were made on the basis of their past experiences in softball and baseball.

A team comprised of the interservice championship Allstars will travel to Seattle to represent the Armed Forces in the Softball Nationals, Sept. 7-15.

Benning will also be represented at the slow pitch trials being held at Ft. Carson, Colo., July 30-Aug. 17. Players from Benning are Vernon Lewis, Dale Overman and Lawrence Pope. The Interservice slow pitch Championships will also be held at Ft. Carson August 20-24.

Raft race

Down the Chattahoochee

The days of Huck Finn are gone but the Columbus Jaycees are reviving the art of floating a raft down the river. The second Greater Chattahoochee Raft race will be held August 25 from noon until all rafts cross the finish line.

The 12.5 mile race starts at the City Marina on 9th Street and ends at the Bradley landing here on Fort Benning. Capt. Barry Gasdek, a member of the Jaycees, says "The race is open to all soldiers at Benning. In fact, wives are encouraged to enter a raft."

Gasdek went on to say that there are some simple requirements for the rafts to insure safety for all contestants.

1. All rafts must float.
2. No mechanical propulsion may be used. Paddles, oars, poles, sails, rudders, or any combination of these are allowed.
3. Sails cannot be more than twice the square footage of the raft itself.
4. All rafts must have at least one paddle.
5. All rafts must have some kind of illumination visible for 100 yards in all directions (running lights, mounted flashlights, lanterns, etc.)
6. Any raft will be disqualified if it does not have a litter barrel or if it is seen littering.
7. All rafts will be assigned a number by the registration committee. This number will be 12" X 12" and must be displayed from two sides.
8. All rafts will have a Coast Guard approved floatation device for each person aboard (life preserver, boat cushion, etc.)
9. No two way radios are allowed on the raft.
10. Rafts cannot be prefabricated except for rubber inflatable rafts.
11. The rules committee will decide how many people can go on each raft. The minimum number will be two.
12. All participants must be 18 on or before August 24.
13. Rafts with all female crews will be given priority positions on the starting line. "Women's lib" proponents may opt for equal treatment.
14. No swimming from the rafts during the race.
15. All raft captains must submit a release signed by all crew members before 10 a.m., August 25.

By BILL KLOEB

The American sportsman expresses his concern for wildlife in many ways. One of the most beneficial ways is the organization and support of organizations dedicated to the welfare of favorite species. Organized public opinion is one of the most effective ways to motivate those who are in a position to do something for our wildlife. Waterfowl, ruffed grouse, trout and black bass are some species that have reaped great benefits from he effort of fan clubs.

The newest organization with the primary aim of advancing the welfare of a particular species is the National Wild Turkey Federation, dedicated to preserving and propagating the largest of American game birds.

There should be a lot of potential members in this part of the country. Until a few years ago, about 1965 to be more accurate, this part of the country was known as wild turkey country. Hunters came from all over the United States to add the big bird to their trophy lists. Up until that time the numbers of turkey taken on the reservation had been on a steady increase. But that seemed to be the end of the line. In '65 only a few gobblers were taken. Some hunters blamed the situation on all of the helicopters and other low flying aircraft used while the 1st Cavalry Division was training here, but by the end of the following season it was evident that the scarcity of turkey was not going to be a short lived affair. It was also evident that the problem wasn't limited to the Fort Benning reservation. The whole southeast was experiencing a big reduction in the turkey population.

Birds need help

Since '65, few birds have been taken on the reservation. The Fish and Game Unit has carried out plans to improve feeding and living areas for the birds but the process is not a rapid one. A group of organized sportsmen interested in the propagation of the turkey probably wouldn't do any harm and could do a lot of good.

Anyone interested in the National Federal and obtaining a subscription to the Federation magazine should write Tom Rogers, president, the National Wild Turkey Federation, P. O. Box 467, Edgefield, South Carolina, 29822.

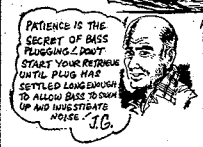
Rod and Gun Fishing Derby

Each month the Rod and Gun Club holds a Fishing Derby. Prizes, usually $15 merchandise orders good at the club sales counter, are awarded to the fishermen registering the largest bream, bass and catfish. The contest is limited to Rod and Gun Club members. They must register at the club each time they intend to compete in the derby, catch their fish from one of the ponds on the reservation and bring the catch to the club for weighing and registration. Fishermen catching fish after the club's closing time may register the fish the following day.

It took some pretty good sized fish to win first place in the Rod and Gun Club July Fishing Derby. According to local experts the months of July and August are slow months. Not too many fishermen are willing to broil in the hot Georgia sun. The fish aren't too cooperative either. They seem content to remain in the deep holes where the water hasn't yet reached the boiling point.

July Winners

CWO Brayton Davis Jr., 3080 Luckie Street took the $15 merchandise order prize for the largest bass registered during August. He took the 8-pound, 2-ounce bass from Harps Pond using a black flip-tail worm. SSFC James Thomas, 197th Brigade, brought in the largest bream. His catch went 1-pound, 2-ounces on the Rod and Gun Club scales. He took it from Patterson Pond. The catfish prize went to M-Sgt. Cecil Richardson, 2706 Morris Road. His catch weighed in at 10-pounds, 8-ounces. He caught it at Twilight Pond using a leach for bait.



With more than 20 ponds on the reservation its amazing how many times the prize winning fish come from these three ponds. Twilight of course was well stocked with catfish and they have been well fed too. Harps is a rather inaccessable pond, closed quite a bit because of its location in a major impact area. This would provide reasons why fish stay in that pond long enough to become lunkers. Patterson has always surprised me though. The pond covers a mere 6-acres. Non winners in the July derby might do well to try these ponds during August.

The Raiders, the United States Army Infantry Board slow pitch softball team, was victorious over Company C, HDQ Command, enabling them to become the league champions of 1973.

They are now in the process of laying their defensive plans for the post slow pitch tournament which begins on August 20th. The Raiders ended the season with an impressive 18-2 record.

According to the team's playing coach, SSG Mel Bradford, "Our team has never looked better. I've had the opportunity to see some of the competition we face in the post playoffs, and I feel that good, defensive ball playing is the name of the game. "To keep the team in shape, we've been playing some of the slow pitch teams from off post. Many of them are really good, and they do an excellent job of keeping us on our toes."

Melvin Bradford and Garry Richey have been selected from the Raiders to try out for the Army Fastpitch softball team that will compete here Aug. 27-31 in the interservice championships.

15 year old Pam Tolson has been zeroing in her M-14 along with 17 males in hopes of being selected for the 10-man, third Advanced Marksmanship Unit ROTC Team that will compete Aug. 12-21 in the Nationals at Perry, Ohio. Miss Tolson said, "It's really exciting firing the highpowered rifles. I competed in the small bore category last year at the nationals but this is the first time I've tried the big guns." The try-outs are being conducted at Easley Range, Fort Benning.

Consider food handling for happier vacation

During the early summer and fall months many military families will have the desire to spend more time out of doors, fishing, camping and picnicking. We all give extensive thought to mode of transportation, purchasing camping equipment, fishing tackle, bed rolls, and so forth. But we often forget about the necessary procedures to properly handle the food we are going to eat.

There are certain foods that can be taken along on the trip that are less apt to furnish an excellent environment for bacteria to grow, and in turn, cause food borne disease. Some of the symptoms of food borne illness include stomach cramps, nausea, diarrhea, vomiting and headache.

Foods such as fresh meats, cooked or uncooked; some processed meats, dairy products or food containing dairy products; salads containing egg products or mayonnaise, meat sauces; should be refrigerated or stored in an ice chest that is below 45 degrees. If this is not possible, this type of food should be consumed within 5 hours after preparing or purchase these items at the nearby food market if one is available where you may be camping.

Foods such as dehydrated foods, canned milk, powdered milk, smoked meats, dried eggs, fruits, vegetables, or canned food which can be opened and prepared immediately, are examples of food that have very little danger of causing food borne disease.

If at any time, children or any member of the party, or especially if a group of people show sickness, medical attention should be obtained immediately at a local physician or a military hospital.

Many types of food that are not properly handled make an excellent environment for toxic producing bacteria to grow which may result in sickness that may take an extensive period from which to recover. It is suggested that everyone planning outdoor entertainment, where food will be consumed, give very high consideration to food handling procedures to help us all have a happy outing or vacation.

Dependent action

Phillies top Red Sox

Clutch base running by Mark Dudek and a 12 strike out performance by pitcher Jimmy Tresley enabled the Phillies to edge by the Red Sox 1-0 in Dependent Major League action this week.

Tresley along with Red Sox's pitcher Jimmy Neill scattered three hits apiece over the six innings of play.

The lone run off Neill came in the bottom of the sixth when Jimmie Tresley started the inning off with a base on balls. Mark Dudek singled but Tresley was thrown out at third base. Dudek advanced to second on the throw. A passed ball then enabled him to go down to third. This set the stage for the Phillies victory. Craig Goolsley hit a shot back to Red Sox's pitcher Neill who fielded the ball cleanly and threw home keeping Dudek from scoring and at the same time hanging him up between third and home plate. A rundown persued but a long throw to third gave the runner the chance he needed. He raced home and slid around the catcher's tage for the game winning run.

The win enabled the Phillies to stay only a game off the pace of the league leading Giants in the final week of Major League action.

CW3 got the ball rolling

And Bowie Kuhn thinks he's got problems. He may have to contend with player strikes and ailing franchises; but I ask you, does he have to worry about counterfeit birth certificates? Concessionaires with sticky fingers? Over three hundred 8-15 year old youngsters? Or, worst of all, over three-hundred fanatic parents of 8-15 year old youngsters.

No. These last could only be among the tribulations of the president of a Little League. CW3 Charles Thornton, 609th Transportation Company, 145th Aviation Battalion, is one those latter-day Sisyphuses who qualifies for those latter tribulations, but not the former, (at least we have hope kids aren't that precocious these days).

Mr. Thornton is President of the National League Little League here in Columbus, one of eight such organizations affiliated with the well known enterprise from Williamsport, Pennsylvania. Elected for a one-year term last November, Mr. Thornton found himself in charge of eight minor league teams (for ages 8-12) and eight major league teams (for ages 9-12).

He had been a coach for one of the major league teams before a tour in Vietnam. But his new responsibilities encompass all the teams, everything from scheduling games to paying umpires. Apparently, two divisions weren't enough of a challenge, because one of his first campaigns was to establish a senior league division (for ages 13-15), the first to be organized in the Columbus District.

Speaking of sorely needed revenue, being so ambitious doesn't come cheaply. Perhaps Mr. Thornton's biggest headache has been raising funds. Parents' contributions, outside contributions, and a TV and Minibike raffle just won't pay for equipping an entire new 6-team league. Next year, without this initial outlay for league equipment and legal fees for incorporation, hopefully all debts will be wiped clean.

Seriously, those of us in the military community benefit immeasurably from the efforts of those like Mr. Thornton. (Half of the National Little League coaches and three-fourths of the players are Army-affiliated.

WOKS Open

Aug. 4-5 at Bull Creek

The seventh annual WOKS Open golf tournament with a purse of $6,000, will be held at the Bull Creek Municipal golf course on August 4-5, it has been announced.

The WOKS Open is being held at Bull Creek for the first time, having been staged at the Victory Drive course during the first six years of its existence.

First prize of $1,200 was won by Henry Chadwick, Atlanta pro, last year and he is expected to be back to defend his title this year in the 36-hole event.

It is also hoped that George Johnson, Columbus native who competes regularly on the PGA tour, will be in the WOKS field and also Nate Starks, an Atlantan who is busy on one of the mini-tours now. He was a two-time winner during the tournament's early history.

There will be a field of 150 players in the tournament, which is open to pros and amateurs. Entry fee for pros is $8 dollars while amateurs may enter for 20 dollars.

John Byrnes, tournament chairman, said that there have already been 25 entries in the tournament.

Other players wishing to enter may send their checks to WOKS Open, Post Office Box 1998, Columbus, Ga.

Beginners keep true spirit of judo club

In the true spirit of the Fort Benning Judo Club, the Beginners dominated the action in a Novice tournament hosted by Fort Benning on Saturday, 28 July.

With only several weeks of training, many of the Judoists got their first taste of competition. Also participating in the tournament was the GO-SAKI Judo Club of Birmingham, Alabama.

The competition, which drew many spectators from the local area and Alabama, was divided into six men pools with each of the Judoka competing against each of the other members of his pool. Winners in the tournament were as listed below (GO-SAKI winners are indicated by an (x):

Whatja wanta Know? ask the BAYONET

CALL 545-4792

DEAR BAYONET

Can I get another V.A. home loan after I get out of the Army and return home? N.M.N.

DEAR N.M.N.

Yes. Veterans who have made use of their GI loan guaranty benefits may, under certain conditions, have their loan-eligibility restored, according to Georgia Veterans Service Director Pete Wheeler. He explained the circumstances whereby a veteran might re-establish his eligibility for a GI loan:

"If the veteran, through no fault of his own, is forced to sell his home for reasons of health, employment, or other 'compelling' reasons;

"If his property is taken over by a government agency for public use;

"If he is in service and he is transferred by military orders and disposes of his home, provided that the Veterans Administration is released from any liability on the property;

"If the veteran disposes of his home and moves to another town because of a new and better job (even though the change in employment is voluntary) providing that the government is released from liability on the loan."

Wheeler emphasized that "the VA must be released from liability on the veteran's original property. If the veteran sells his home and permits the buyer to take over his GI loan on that property, the VA is still responsible for the guaranty on that loan and, consequently, cannot restore the veteran's eligibility for a new loan until the liability on the original loan as been removed."

Complete information concerning GI loan benefits is available at any office of the Georgia Department of Veterans Service.

DEAR BAYONET

Is it true that there will be a civil service retirement cost of living increase and who can I contact for more information? M.A.G.

DEAR M.A.G.

A cost of living adjustment in annuities is presently effective for civil service employes retired before July 1st according to the Civilian Personnel Office.

To be eligible for the increase, an employe must be separated or in non-pay status by June 30 at midnight.

If the cost of living increase is allowed, federal employes who retire on or before June 30 will also receive the increase.

The amount of the increase has been estimated between 5.5 and 6 per cent.

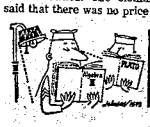
DEAR BAYONET

Is there a Rent-a-Kid Program being sponsored on post this year? R.L.H.

DEAR R.L.H.



There is not a Rent-a-Kid program being sponsored on Post this summer. However, if you are looking for kids to work at part-time jobs you can find help by contacting Mrs. Fraker at 545-3803-3070 at the youth center Bldg. 1055. Kids who are looking for jobs should also contact Mrs. Fraker for more information.

DEAR BAYONET

Can the Clothing sales store raise prices during a price freeze? W.M.

DEAR W.M.

NO. The prices at any kind of sales store is subject to any price freeze that is instituted from Washington. It doesn't matter if it is a government owned store or civilian owned. The clothing store was contacted and said that there was no price increase during the freeze.

Where should home safety begin?

BY BILLY SAMS

Home safety. Where safety should begin. Many people are interested in safety while they are on their jobs, this is logical thinking, especially where there is a risk of danger involved. However we must remember, that most of the safety rules at our places of employment are directed by company supervisors and safety department personnel. At home it is our responsibility, as home owners to protect our families against accidents in and around the home.

There are many good books and lists of rules for home safety. It is a good idea to get one or more of them to study carefully. One of the first things when you make a study for safety is to find out what kinds of accidents are most likely to happen.

We don't have as much information as we would like about accidents that cause injuries, but we do have information about deaths from home accidents. Nearly half of the deaths from home accidents occur to people over 65, most of them from falls; 13 per cent are from fires or burns. Such figures tell us that a special effort is needed to protect older persons.

Here's the information about youngsters, under five, who are perhaps our biggest responsibility. Thirteen per cent of all home accidents occur to them. Two kinds of accidents accounts for half the deaths. One is fires or burns, the other is suffocation. There are a couple of lessons in child care that many of the books overlook.

Now let's take a look at the group that most of us are in, ages 15-64. About one-fourth of the home accident deaths are in this group. Four out of 10 of the accidental deaths in this group are from fire and burns. The next largest group is falls (20 per cent), and the next (13 per cent) is firearms, closely followed by poisons.

So falls and fires are the worst killers of all home accidents. What should we do about it? Well, just knowing it is important. If you know it, you can make an inspection through your house and come up with a good many things to be corrected.

When inspecting for fire you need to think of two important matters, how to prevent fires and how to get people out.

TSB's Soldier of the Quarter

"I was tired of my civilian job as a salesman, so I decided to reenlist in the Army, and make it my career," said Sgt. Frank Mc Cord, of the 4th Stu. Bn., TSB.

It's said, 'action speaks louder than words,' and in Sgt. Mc Cord's case it does. Only one year after reenlisting into the Army on July 31, 1972, he was chosen as TSB's top Soldier of the Quarter.

Sgt. Mc Cord is a graduate of Fort Benning's Airborne Training Ranger School, and is a jump master. He has worked with the 101st Airborne Division and the 12th Special Forces Unit.

He presently works for the 4th Student Battalion Headquarter's, TSB, as the assistant Training NCO, and Intelligence sergeant for the battalion.

"My job as assistant training NCO consists of making up the cadre training schedules. I also handle the security clearances for the Bn., and am in charge of keeping the barracks in battalion secure," Sgt. Mc Cord said.

"I enjoy working for the Army, and unless something goes wrong, I plan to make a 30 year career of it," he said.

Military feels energy pinch

The highways are lined with motor repair shops of all kinds. Frequently the disabled motorist is at the mercy of the nearest shop. Here is an example. While I was driving across the country on U.S. 40, my car's generator light blinked red and stayed on. The nearest town was Kit Carson, Nevada. I pulled in at a service station in Kit Carson, and was told by the attendant that I had generator trouble and the garage across the street would repair it.

I drove across the street to a garage. The generator was removed and the mechanic indicated I needed a new armature. He put another armature in, replaced the generator and charged what I thought was an excessively high price. About forty miles down the highway, once again the generator light blinked red. I pulled into a service station. The mechanic, after examining the generator, indicated the wrong type armature was placed in the generator, destroying the inner parts, rendering the generator useless.

I then had to purchase a new generator, and the mechanic relayed to me that he had received numerous complaints in regards to that particular garage in Kit Carson from highway travelers. This incident occurred in May 1961.

The motorist's membership associations provide some protection and guidance when disabled on the road by directing members to affiliated shops.

RELIABLE BUSINESSES

With all the traps, who do you consult, how do you find a reputable dealer?

First, when you find a potential dealer, invest a dime and call the Better Business Bureau. If any complaints are registered against the dealer, "Stay away." is the best advice. Automobile and motorists' associations are also logical places to check.

Don't buy a "Paint Job," a car newly painted on the outside and shiny chrome, but ready for the junkyard under the hood and frame. "Investigate before you invest", and you will be rewarded with many happy hours of driving pleasure, instead of miserable breakdowns and huge repair bills.

WAC director, Gen. Bailey restates several goals

"More and more of my time has been spent in educating the men in the Army about the role of women in the Army," said Brig. Gen. Mildred C. Bailey, Director of the Women's Army Corps, during a press conference at Fort Benning last week.

She restated several of her past goals and said that her biggest goal this year is to educate men as to who women in the Army are, what their qualifications and capabilities are and what the differences between men and women in the service are.

"The majority of men in the Army have never had any personal dealings with a woman in uniform and they need to be educated as to the proper utilization of the women and the scope of utilization," she said.

She also said that if the volunteer Army is going to be successful, commanders have got to utilize all possible personnel, regardless of sex, race or religion.

Gen. Bailey also talked about the new uniform, which she was wearing as part of the experiment. She called the color spring green and said 500 women are now testing it. She said she has had many favorable comments on it, especially from men.

The fourth woman in American history to hold her rank, Gen. Bailey toured the WAC Detachments and assured the women that she would like to see the new uniforms being issued before she leaves the service.

New pay inquiry

A new pay inquiry program, aimed at solving all pay questions and problems prior to payday, has become effective recently.

Two benefits will emerge from this program. The unit will have more soldiers available for training, since the member won't have to visit the Finance Office, and the Finance Office will use economics of scale to answer inquiries consolidated by the PSNCO.

If you find an error or have a question after you receive your leave and earning statement, see your Personnel Staff Noncommissioned Officer (PSNCO). He will review the statement with you and answer any questions he can. If he cannot answer your question sufficiently he will have you fill out a Fort Benning Form 591 and he will personally deliver it to the Finance Office. They will pull your records and tell the PSNCO when he can return. Upon his return, a pay clerk will discuss each pay inquiry with the PSNCO and provide a prompt answer and-or explanation to each pay inquiry. If a soldier is due cash, the PSNCO will be given a time and date to have the soldier report to the Finance Office to pick up his money. When the soldier reports to the Finance Office, he will not have to stand in line; instead, he will simply be directed to a cashier, where he will receive his money.

Only those members who have received $50 or less at the end-of-month payday because of an error by the unit, the local Finance Office, or the USAFSA will be allowed to personally visit the Finance Office.

Ninety-five officers complete one-of-a-kind two-week course today which was conducted at the special request of CONARC for the benefit of Active Army and Army Reserve Officers representing the new Maneuver Training Commands (MTC).

The MTCs have the responsibility for conducting command post exercise (CPX), field training exercises (FTX), and Army training tests (ATT) for units of the Army National Guard and the U.S. Army Reserve in each of the new Army Readiness Regions.

AT ICS YOU LEARN BY DOING...VALUABLE TRAINING AIDS INCLUDED
Every ICS technical career program includes indispensable professional tools and equipment which you learn to use in practical experiments and do-it-yourself projects—then keep for your new career. Pictured here are just a few.

Multitester and Professional Equipment included with various ICS programs in Electronics.

Matched kit of Proto automotive hand tools (official tools of the Indy 500) and genuine Daytona testing equipment — with the Automotive Technician's Program.

Philco/Ford room air conditioner, plus professional tools, instruments and testing equipment — with the Air Conditioning and Refrigeration Program.

Are you turned on by TV broadcasting? Electronics? Air Conditioning? Accounting? Business Management? Want to earn top dollar or top rating as a skilled electrician? As a draftsman? As a civil, mechanical or electrical engineer? You name it — and today's ICS will teach it to you as nobody else can. During your spare time. Aboard ship. In your barracks. Even in the air.

You can complete your entire career training while you're still in the service. Or you can start now and finish after discharge.

And learning an exciting career with ICS is fun — almost like taking up a fascinating new hobby. You set your own schedule, work at your own pace. Yet you have instructors who comment personally on every lesson or project you do, who answer every question you ask. Most important . . .

SUPPLEMENT TO THE BAYONET

Q: What do these two men have in common?

A: Two years ago, while in service, each of them answered an ad like this.

You'd have to go far to find two men more unlike than Tony Y. and Alvin B. Alvin is short and on the heavy side. Tony is tall and lean. Tony likes his music soft. Alvin digs soul and acid rock. Tony couldn't wait to get out of the service. Alvin is a thirty-year man.

But they agreed on one thing, wearing a uniform is no reason for standing still. It's one of the best times for a man to learn a challenging new career — whether he wants to move on to a high-paying job in civilian life — or to move up in the service. And both of them turned to ICS for help.

Tony's bag was cars and motorcycles — and a dream of owning his own business. So he asked ICS to teach him Automotive Mechanics.

Alvin was into electronics, hi-fi and stereo — so he took ICS training in Electronic Communication.

Uncle Sam pitched in, with GI benefits. Now each of them is doing the thing he likes to do most. One in civilian life. The other in the service.

Tony and Alvin are examples — hypothetical composites of the many thousands of real-life servicemen (and women) who are using today's ICS to help them do what they want to do. They're not waiting for opportunity to happen. They're making it happen. And so can you.

Cottonbalers' FTX

The officers and men of the 3rd Bn., 7th Inf. (Cottonbalers), 197th Inf. Bde. recently participated in a four-day field training exercise near Nininger Range on the southern limits of Fort Benning.

The entire battalion participated in the four-day problem, in which all business was conducted as if the unit was in an actual tactical situation. The problem of a combat situation was aimed at preparing the unit for the 197th's new mission, to maintain a state of combat readiness as a part of the Army's Strategic Forces Command (STRAF).

"I think the FTXX gave the men the opportunity to gain a better understanding of what is going on," explained Lt. Col. Charles O. Arnecke Jr., commander of the battalion. "I think we learned alot."

Auditions for GOOD NEWS, the Springer Theatre Company's opening musical comedy for the 1973-74 season, will be held August 10-11 at 8 p.m. at the Springer Opera House.

Written by Laurence Schwab and B. G. De Sylva, with music by B. G. De Sylva and Lew Brown, GOOD NEWS has an entertaining story-line enhanced by familiar tunes. "The Best Things in Life Are Free", "Varsity Drag", and "Button Up Your Overcoat" are just a few of the melodies to be recalled.

Fred Chappell of Atlanta who directed the Springer Theatre Company's award winning, GYPSY last season will be directing GOOD NEWS.

All parts are open and a cast of twenty-five men and women is needed. Anyone interested in working with the production crew may come and sign-up at the auditions. For further information call 322-6112.

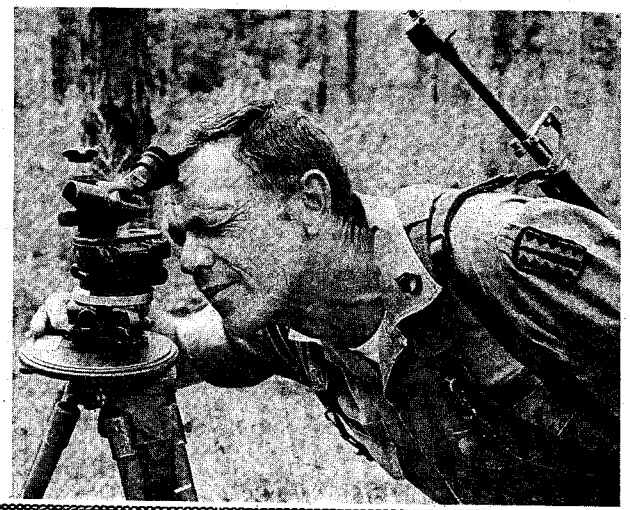
Giants clinch championship, 7-3

Behind Giants pitcher John Nichols' masterful 2 hit, 11 strike-out performance, the Giants blasted the Red Sox 7-3 to clinch the Major League Championship at Fort Benning's Green Field.

The Giants once again displayed their power in the second, third and fourth innings, scoring seven runs while banging out 7 hits to turn back the Sox.

The Red Sox scored their runs in the first two innings, after which Nichols settled down and only allowed the Sox a single hit the rest of the way.



The Giants ended the season Saturday with a 18-2 rout of the Braves. Osvado Font struck out eight while allowing only three hits.

The league champs ended the season with a 12-2 record.

Jim Howard, coach of the League champs, said, "As a whole the season was a good one for us, but next season I hope to liven up practices and instill a little more spirit in the team. I think practice is the key to a great team. It's a time to get out on the field without the pressures of a game and iron out your mistakes or just improve yourself."

PTAC

A new idea to enhance teacher-parent relationships

A new PTA concept for the 1973-74 school year was announced this week by the organization's president, Colonel Joseph H. Masterson.

The new concept involves a separate PTA committee within each school. Called a Parent-Teacher Action Committee (PTAC), the group is designed to enhance teacher-parent relationships at schools where both have a vested interest.

"Every school has its own personality, and problems," said Col. Masterson. "Each school is unique. The new concept will enable parents and teachers to get together and discuss their problems and, hopefully, find joint solutions. Under the old system of general membership meetings, it was almost impossible for anyone to speak out and contribute an idea or lodge a complaint."

Col. Masterson admitted the old system had little to offer those in attendance except entertainment. "We will continue to have general membership meetings, but they will be limited in number. Our first meeting will have to be a general membership gathering so we can lay the ground work for the coming year."

Probably four general membership meetings will be held. An initial orientation meeting, followed by the annual Cirriculum Fair, Open House, and a final general membership meeting at the end of the school year.

"Parent-Teacher Action Committees will be given the opportunity to schedule as many individual meetings at their respective schools as needed. We will establish standing days of the month for each school so that parents won't be going to meetings two or three times a week."

Masterson said each PTAC chairman would be responsible for meeting with the PTA Board to report on his school's activities. During general membership meetings, each PTAC will be given the opportunity to exchange ideas with the entire gathering.

Teachers and administrators like the new concept because it offers the opportunity to focus on individual school problems. Staff members agree the PTAC concept will open new channels of communication with the parents and contribute to the overall betterment of the school system.

"I met with the administrators and faculty, said Masterson, "and let them know we were establishing this new concept to assist them, not to binder them."

Another feature of the new system will be a PTA newsletter published monthly. The newsletter will carry items of interest from each PTAC, matters under consideration by the Board, meeting dates and times, points of contact for each school and the Board and other needed information. The first newsletter will be given to parents who join the PTA during registration. Newsletters and other information will be available at each school during registration on August 16-17.

PTA Board members elected for the coming year are:

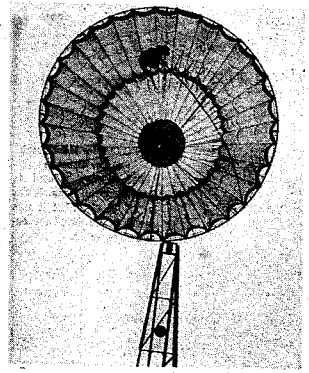
Volunteers are needed for the organization of Parent-Teacher Action Committees. At least one person from each school is needed to assist in the initial preparation of the PTAC at their school. Volunteers should contact LTC Funderburk at 545-5400 during working hours, and at 545-4639 after work.

Martin Army Hospital gets new commander

Colonel John W. White, Deputy Commander of Brooke Army Medical Center, has been named the commander of Martin Army Hospital at Ft. Benning.



He will replace Brigadier General George S. Woodard who has assumed command of Letterman Army Medical Center, Presidio of San Francisco, Calif.

Colonel White has been at Brooke since January 1973 where he has served as Director of Medical Education and Chief of Professional Services, Deputy Commander, and for a short time as Commander.

He is a native of Washington, D.C. and is a 1944 graduate of George Washington University of Medicine. He was Chief of Professional Services and Chief Surgical Consultant in the Office of Surgeon, U.S. Army Europe from 1968 to 1970 and chief Surfical Consultant and Chief of the Consultant Division in the Office of the Surgeon General, from 1970 to 1972.

Colonel White is a Diplomate of the American Board of Surgery (1957), is a Follow of the American College of Surgeons, and holds memberships in the American Medical Society of Vienna (Austria), and the Association of Military Surgeons.

He is married to the former Betty Alden Waitt and they have three daughters: Mrs. Kathryn Elizabeth Seeberg, Mrs. Betty Alden Taylor, and Miss Margaret Marie White.

The Airborne student's first glimpse of future

The 250 foot jump towers that rise imposingly above Fort Benning give the Airborne student his first glimpse of what is in store for him during his training. Students who haven't begun the course, people who work on Main Post, and countless others stop each day to watch as the Airborne students are pulled aloft and dropped from that dizzying height.

During the student's first initial in-processing at the 4th Student Battalion, TSB and throughout his first week of training the reminder is always, "Wait till tower week and the 250's. The Airborne Department instructors will tolerate no mistakes. Their students must think and react to commands, and the 250 foot towers are the prime test of a student's ability to follow orders under pressure.

"You can't escape them," said an Airborne student. "You see the towers all the time, when you're marching to training, eating lunch or just walking around post. Many times I've wondered how I'll feel and act when it's my turn on the big towers."

The first step in riding the 250 is attaching the parachute to the cone which takes it up already open. Only three of the four-arms on the towers are used at one time to allow for the wind. The students waiting to jump are used as riggers. Their job is to attach the parachute to the cone as quickly as possible.

An instructor thoroughly checks out the harness, holding the jumper, the suspension lines, and the canopy. Satisfied, he backs away and the jumper is taken up.

Commands are issued to the jumper as he rises. When he reaches the top he removes his safety line, and the parachute is released. For the next few moments he is in full-flight. An instructor on the ground directs his landing by shouting instructions through a bull-horn. Upon landing, the instructor critiques his jump.

No matter how well he did, he must perform better the next time. Just a few days later he will exit a plane at 1,250 feet, and he will truly be Airborne.

608th helps in CYO clean up and recycle of waste

The 608th Ord. Co. is helping the Columbus Youth Opportunities Group in a solid waste removal program in Columbus this summer.

This project, the second of its kind, brings the community resources, Fort Benning's muscle power and the CYO talents together in an effort to remove the health hazards caused by illegal dumps, abandoned car bodies, and useless old stoves and refrigerators.

There are "target areas" of the city designated by the Public Health Department that have the most accumulated solid waste matter. After the target area bas been chosen, a group of young ladies from the CYO canvasses the area, going from door to door with literature explaining the project and legal release forms to permit entry onto private property. The clean-up effort is packed into a 2-week period and the residents help by placing anything they want removed on the curb in the front of their homes with the help of the youngsters from the CYO.

This effort for the solid waste removal program is handled by Mr. Robert Sanders Jr. who has been working with the CYO for two years.

Assisting in the area of heavy equipment is where Fort Benning comes in. Heavy equipment from the 608th Ordinance Company and the 43rd Engineer Battalion pick up the solid waste and take it to the landfill off South Lumpkin Road. Recyclable waste like refrigerators, stoves and old car bodies are taken to various places to be recycled. In 1972 there were two target areas in which a total of 340 tons of solid waste was removed. The removal of this solid waste helps to eliminate breeding grounds for mosquitoes, flies, roaches, and rodents making the areas healthier, better looking, and more pleasant places to live.

In terms of public appreciation it is a very worthwhile project. The residents of the city are pleased to know that the CYO, the 608th Ordinance Company, and the 43rd Engr. Bn. care enough to help.

For what reason did or didn't you join Airborne school?

Sp4 Paul Rodriguez

In a way I wanted to but I've never had time to take the jump school. I went to clerk school then went from there to Indianapolis for advanced AIT. If I decided to stay in another term I would probably go Airborne.

Sp4 Tyrone Foster

I am Infantry and after taking basic training and Infantry AIT I was pretty tired of training. If I had the chance to do it over again I would take Airborne. I still think about taking it.

I've always wanted to learn how to jump. It was a lot of work but it was worth it. I enjoyed the entire three weeks.

Sp4 Jeff Nuchols

I was skydiving in civilian life, and am still diving in the civilian community, but I hurt my back in basic and couldn't pass the physical for airborne.

I joined the service in Puerto Rico and noticed the picture poster of Airborne. I received airborne as a guarantee when I entered the service. I really enjoyed airborne.

E-2 Bruce Jochims
HHC TSB

I was drafted and didn't have the desire to learn the art of jumping. Also a big fault of mine is that I'm deathly afraid of heights. I easily persuaded myself to stay away from airborne.

Airborne story

'Men of courage and dedication.' How it all began.

"Men of courage and dedication" is a sign that hangs in the Airborne Dept. Ground Training complex. There airborne students undergo rigorous physical training, and learn the basics of jumping. Then they go to tower week where they learn about falling and safety, and drop from a 210 foot tower. Their 3 weeks' training is concluded when the students make 5 jumps from an aircraft at a height of 1250 feet.

Lt. Col. Donald E. Lunday, commander of the 4th Student Battalion which houses and administers all airborne students, doesn't agree with the feelings of some that Airborne warfare is outdated.

"The need today is as great as in 1940. We need airborne unit."

The first Airborne unit was organized at Fort Benning on June 25, 1940, when the Commandant of the Infantry School was directed to organize a parachute test platoon. Two hundred men of the 29th Infantry regiment volunteered, and 48 were accepted into the first test platoon on July 11, 1940. Thirty-five days later on August 16, the first official parachute jump by a unit of the United States Army was made over Lawson Field. The 501st parachute battalion was the first unit of its type, and was organized on Oct. 2, 1940. Members of the test platoon served as the battalion cadre.

"The Parachute School," as it had come to be known, was renamed the Airborne School on Jan. 1, 1946. The unit's name was changed several times and was named the 4th Student Battalion on June 29, 1954.

For some of our nation's most elite fighting men, being airborne qualified is essential. Airborne Rangers, Pathfinders, and Special Forces troops, as well as the regular Airborne Infantry, comprise that portion of the Army which can strike quickly with terrific effect whenever they are called upon.

Lt. Col. Lunday sees no chance that the airborne the versatile capabilities and quick reactions of the soldier will disappear. "It is beyond my imagination that any device or technique could replace the versatility of the Airborne qualified soldier."

He disagrees with those who feel that the training isn't as tough as it used to be. "I invite anyone who believes that the Army has become permissive to come out and view airborne training. It's just as tough and character building as it was in the 40s."

He says, "Above the strategic and tactical value of the Airborne soldier there is the intangible value of the spirit, the pride, and the determination that comes with being airborne, our country's fighting elite."

RESERVE OFFICERS NOW CAN JOIN THE 5 OUT OF 6 ACTIVE DUTY OFFICERS WHO ARE MEMBERS OF USAA

In keeping with the "Total Force Concept" of the Department of Defense, USAA has expanded eligibility for membership to include commissioned officers and warrant officers of the Reserve and National Guard.

If you are a Reserve or National Guard officer, this means you now can apply for all types of money-saving USAA insurance. Savings through discounted initial premiums in States where allowed. Savings through dividends, not guaranteed, but paid every year since 1924. For instance, you may save $20 - $40 - $60 a year on auto insurance, depending on your age, your car, and your location.

To become a USAA member, simply take out a policy while you are eligible. Once you become a member, your eligibility for membership lasts a lifetime, whether you are in the Service or out.

Graduation

For ROTC cadets from the nation

ROTC cadets from 138 colleges around the country are graduating today from Ranger training in ceremonies scheduled for Todd Field at 11 a.m.

Lt. Gen. Donn R. Pepke, Deputy Commander of FORSCOM, Fort McPherson, Ga., will be the guest speaker at the graduation ceremony. Out of 276 students who entered the course, approximately 180 will be graduating today.

Brig. Gen. David E. Grange Jr., Director of the Ranger Department, U. S. Army Infantry School, will be on hand for the ceremony. A band will be provided by the Infantry School, and an honor guard will also take part.

The Merrill's Marauders award consists of a Silva Compass, and is awarded to the individuals in each class who have the highest scores on land navigation and peer ratings.

The strenuous Ranger course, which consists of three phases, lasts for approximately two months. The first phase, conducted at Fort Benning, consists of physical conditioning, land navigation, and instruction in the fundamentals of patrolling.

The second phase takes place at Camp Merrill, Dahlonega, Ga. Called the mountain phase, it is composed of instruction in such things as rock climbing, the fundamentals of rope work, mountain rappelling, and the preparation and execution of all types of patrols, ambushes, and raids. During this phase, students are also introduced to mountaineering techniques.

The cadets travel to Eglin Air Force Base, Fla. for the third and final phase of their training. There they receive instruction in aircraft rappelling, stream crossing, the use of small boats, and day and night river navigation. Airmobile operations and counterguerrilla tactics also receive emphasis during the Florida phase.

The end product of Ranger training is a superbly trained, tough, confident leader who has acquired the skills, stamina, and ability to operate day and night for extended periods of time, over any terrain and in any environment.

Twins

Aggressor forces operating against ROTC Ranger Class 502-2 at Camp Frank D. Merrill, Dahlonega, Georgia had to look twice when confronting the 2nd Ranger platoon during recent patrol operations. Two identical twins, Ed and Jack Moore, are members of the second cycle of ROTC Ranger Training this summer. The two 21-year old Rangers were born in Amityville, New York and are Senior ROTC Cadets from Widener College (formerly Pennsylvania Military College). Both Ed and Jack currently hold three-year ROTC scholarships and plan to make the Army a career. Earlier this year, both graduated from Airborne School together. When asked how people people tell them apart, Jack responded, "I'm better looking," and Ed quickly raised objection to that statement. Actually the only noticeable difference between the twins is a mole on Jack's left cheek. If they both earn their Ranger tabs they will move into an elite standing of Airborne Ranger twins.

Handle checking account in a business-like manner

They can be great providers and alert businessmen during life but fail to leave wills . . . snarling, delaying and eroding the estate for which they worked so hard as a shield for loved ones. They can be the souls of prudence, save consistently for years, then risk it all with a broker they've known for only two weeks or take a flyer on a stock because of a conversation overheard on the 7:57 commuter train.

The checking account is another vulnerable spot. Too few Americans know enough about, or think about, the checking account even though it is one of their most used economic tools.

Barber Henningar, an assistant vice president with United California Bank (UCB) and operations officer at the UCB main Los Angeles office, has thought a lot about checkbooks. And for good reason. Banks in the Los Angeles area annually process more than $2.6 billion worth of checks. Some of them are wrongly used, costing the user substantially in many cases.

To help the careless or inexperienced checkbook handler become more expert in this area, Mrs. Henningar offers some guidelines and suggestions.

When you've opened a checking account and have received the first imprinted checks, make certain the account number is correct. A printing error could delay the crediting of your deposits and cost you money.

Evaluate how many checks you normally write a month. If it is 10 or fewer, you could save up to $2 per month in service charges by getting a special checking account which costs as little as 15 cents a check at some banks.

Carry personal identification papers separate from check book so another person doesn't have "everything he needs," to use your checks in case of loss or theft.

Don't leave excess funds in your checking account. Transfer them to a savings account so they'll earn interest.

Don't time desposits and checks too closely. You could be assessed extra charges each time your despoits reaches the bank a few hours after a check has been received on that account.

Don't borrow another person's blank check or desposit slip or lend one of yours. That magnetic account number can't be erased (not even by blacking it out), so the check or desposit could be posted to the account of the original owner.

C-2-10 changes command

Battery C, 2nd Bn., 10th Field Artillery held a Change of Command ceremony on July 18, with LTC Curtis F. Hoglan, battalion commander, presiding.

Capt. Robert J. Balog relinquished command of Battery C to Capt. Michael C. Wells. Capt. Wells was formerly an Assistant Battalion S-3. Capt. Balog has been assigned new duties as the Battalion S-3.

Both Capt. Balog and Capt. Wells are 1968 graduates of the United States Military Academy.

A farewell luncheon was held at the Goetchius House on July 25, in honor of Mrs. Robert Veen, wife of the departing Battalion Executive Officer. Twenty Officers' wives attended.

After an enjoyable luncheon, Mrs. Veen opened a surprise "gag" gift from each of the ladies, humorous remembrances, of her stay with the Battalion. Finally, Mrs. Curtis Hoglan, wife of the Battalion Commander, presented Mrs. Veen with a warming tray on behalf of all the Battalion ladies.

Maj. and Mrs. Veen will be stationed at Fort Leavenworth where Major Veen will attend the Command and General Staff School.

TSB COFFEES

The ladies of Headquarters, TSB, met for their monthly coffee July 18 at the home of Mrs. Wilson Ray, Sargent Court. Plans were made to begin work on a project for the Christmas bazaar. A warm welcome was extended to Mrs. Tommy Jackson and Mrs. Samuel Patterson. Mrs. Wayne D. Allton and Mrs. Teb J. Stocks were presented silver trays as farewell mementoes.

July 25 the wives of the 1st Battalion met at the Fort Benning home of Mrs. Donald Bowman for a "planning coffee" to discuss the Christmas Bazaar. Sue Cole agreed to be Bazaar chairman for the Battalion. Welcomed to the group were Mrs. Benell Moseby and Jake Collins.

AIRBORNE ICE CREAM SOCIAL

The Airborne ladies met in July at the home of Mrs. James E. Lewis for an old-fashioned ice cream social. Mrs. Mark Ponzillo Jr., and Mrs. James C. Avery were co-hostesses.

Mrs. Gregg P. Walls, wife of the deputy Director, conducted a short business meeting, at which time they bade farewell to Mrs. George Burke, who was presented with a silver Airborne charm. At the same time, welcomed to the small group, Mrs. Duncan M. Thompson and Mrs. Gary Dolan. They each received a green plant.

Next month's hostesses will be Mrs. Robert B. Tully and Mrs. Walls.

BBQD TEA

On July 18, the ladies of Combat Support Group honored their new first lady, Mrs. Russell A. Weathersby, with a tea at the home of Mrs. James T. Dunn on Miller Loop. Assisting Mrs. Dunn was Mrs. Marshall R. McRee.

It was a time for "Hails and Farewells." In addition to Mrs. Weathersby, others welcomed were Mrs. Christus Dovas, Mrs. Joe B. Foster, Mrs. V. J. Girard and Mrs. Larry R. Lipponcott. Farewell charms were given to Mrs. Hinony Crockett and to Mrs. Thomas P. Ross.

SAC "HAIL AND FAREWELL"

Officers and their ladies of Small Arms Committee, Weapons Department, held a "Hail and Farewell," July 27, in the Mirror Room of the Fort Benning Officers' Open Mess. Lt. Col. Jules C. Trepagnier Jr., Chairman, Small Arms Committee, bid farewell to Capt. and Mrs. Heinrich H. Schmidt, Capts. Francis S. Davis, George J. Vakalis, Scott S. Weingeroff, and Thomas P. Remley. A cordial welcome was extended to Maj. and Mrs. Tommy R. Mueller, Maj. and Mrs. Elwyn J. Ball, and Capt. and Mrs. Curtis H. Adams Jr., Capts. Cliff R. Blackerby Jr., and Shirley N. Sprouse.

Excellence is a goal for which most strive but few attain. For the cooks of the 524th Personnel Service Company excellence has been the standard, and for the second year in a row they have been awarded the Best Mess of the Year trophy for the 36th Engr. Gp.

At ceremonies on August 2, LTC William J. Lehner, 36th Group Executive Officer, presented mess sergeant, SFC Mack Graves, with the award for excellence in his field. The 524th won the Best Mess of the Month award all but two times during the past year.

SFC Graves says that he has been in and out of quite a few mess halls during his Army career, but says, "These men are as good a bunch of guys as I've ever worked with. We are responsible for preparing four meals a day to include a meal for 35 to 40 men from the 988th MP's from 11 to 12:30 p.m. each night and the men rarely complain."

The 524th must not only feed their own company, but due to their central location on Main Post, they also feed 15th Finance and the 18th Replacement company daily. In addition, they provide mess for transient personnel at Ft. Benning, rifle teams, Marines, and Reserves, as well as many others. From day to day, the number which are fed can fluctuate by several hundred individuals.

"Service to the soldier has led to the success of the 524th mess," according to their commander. "SFC Graves and the rest of his staff really try to please the soldiers who eat here."

"If the men like a little more of this or that, we try to give it to them if we can," stated SFC Graves. "In the past few months we have had special nights at which we've served 'soul' food, Oriental food, and Spanish food. The men seem to enjoy the change."

The best testimony to the quality of the food comes from SFC Mack Bush, acting first sergeant of the 15th Finance. He says, "I have been in the Army 22 years and have been at Ft. Benning off and on for the last 10 years, and this is the best mess I have ever eaten at. The variety of food available is great, and the preparation is outstanding."

SSG Glennan Alldredge, assistant mess steward, summed it up when he said, "Pride and service are the two things which we use to guide us in our jobs. If we can please the soldiers then we are accomplishing our job."

There is a saying that the Army always buys the best food available but can not always find the best cooks to cook it. This certainly does not apply in the case of the 524th. The 524th is lucky enough to have what the Army calls professionals who like and take pride in their work.

67th Maint Bn. carries on RREO

If you are a member of the 67th Maint. Bn. you have probably heard about RREO or the Race Relations and Equal Opportunity Program.

RREO is an Army wide program set up to help achieve harmonious race relations between the different minorities that make up the Army.

The 67th Maint. Bn. has its own RREO program to help people cope with any problems they might have. Seminars are frequently held within the battalion in which many subjects are brought out to all present. RREO does not deal only with race, problems, but any kind of discrimination a person may bring out at a seminar.

RREO has specially trained moderators to sit in at each seminar to help along discussion and lead people to their own conclusions about discrimination.

If you are required to attend a seminar, do it in hopes of helping to improve a problem the Army is so urgently working on.

JC horse show at fairgrounds

Horses worth many thousands of dollars will highlight the First Annual Columbus Jaycees Horse Show set for August 11 at the Columbus Fair Grounds.

"Rain or shine, there'll be many thousands of dollars worth of horse flesh on hand from all over the bistate area and the southeast participating in some 54 classes," said Robert Hinson, co-chairman of the show.

"There will be some classes of horses rarely seen at the average everyday horse show — let alone on the same day, in the same show," continued Hinson.

Apart from the usual horse show, this one will feature professional, as well as amateur classes, competing for over $3,200 in prize money. Prizes will consist of trophies and ribbons.

Intermission entertainment will be provided by Mike Jennings Jr. who for many years has trained Labrador Retrievers. Jennings will give an exhibition with some of his prize-winning dogs.

"We are expecting to have many thousands of dollars worth of horses at the show. This is a major event and we are proud to have it in Columbus," Hinson said. "It's a magnificent family-style show."

"As usual, profits from this Jaycees function go to the community for a bigger and better community," said Jerry Russell, publicity director for the show. "Therefore, we are inviting everyone out, not only for the great entertainment, but to help us to build a greater Columbus."

Showtime will be 10 a.m.

Airborne

Stories by Ileane Katzker

The socery of DaVinci is now the spirit of men

Who were the some 16,000 men who graduated from Airborne training at Fort Benning during the fiscal year of 1973? As a reporter, that was my assignment. As a female, I had a lot to learn.

I wanted to know why only approximately 87% graduate from each class. And I had always wondered what those little wings meant to a man and why he was considered "elite" for wearing them.

To say the least, the Airborne Department was extremely cooperative. They had a whole schedule of events lined up for me before I had a chance to ask questions. They had produced escorts for me at the three committees. In the course of one afternoon, they had also obtained permission for me to go up in a plane to watch the trainees jump!

"Ordinary people don't go Airborne," Gale Suit of Airborne Operations told me as he aroused my curiosity. "It's just not normal to jump from a plane."

The average class has 400 students and there are about 48 classes a year. The trainees are all ages, ranks, branches of service and are all treated alike.

The first week of the three week course, ground week, begins with a PT test. The majority of men who fail the course, I was told, do so because they aren't in good physical condition. The test includes six chinups, 80 three quarter knee benders within two minutes, 20 situps, 22 pushups and a 1-mile run in formation in eight minutes 30 seconds or less.

Ground week also includes daily PT, Mock Door and Mock Tower Training and the Parachute Landing Fall (PLF.)

Tower week provides additional advanced individual training and mass exit training in addition to having the most realistic training apparatus.

Over 90% of the men are sent forward from this point, according to SFC William D. Devins, acting chief instructor of the Tower Committee. The only drops are usually due to injuries or quitters.

"I tell my students: if you are scared, your throat is dry and your palms are sweaty, look around at your buddy—he looks the same way," he told me. "Actually you can't call it fear, apprehension is the word."

Dressed in my newly acquired fatigues, I headed for McCarthy Hall early in the morning to see the Jump Committee operations. I had to hurry because the men were already boarding the C141. A parachute was quickly strapped on my back and a large helmet placed on my head.

"But what do I do if I need to use it?" I asked.

They assured me that if I needed to use it all I had to do was pull the rip cord. They said that the rest would come naturally, then pointed to the plane and told me to hurry.

"You should have a real chute on so you can feel how agonizing it really is," said the man across from me. As se began to take off he advised me to brace myself.

I sat in front of the doors. Every time they opened them my hair flapped in my eyes. Two wind testers designated to hook up their static lines and prepare to jump from an altitude of 1,250 feet to check the wind drift to ensure that the jumpers land on the drop zone. Just as the command to jump was about to be given, a "no signal was given. It was too foggy to jump and the plane had to land.

Just as the command to jump was about to be given, a "no" signal was given. It was too foggy to jump and the plane had to land.

We boarded again later with the same routine. The men ooked up with a hurried hesitation. One of the jumpmasters had hold of the first trainee in line. The "go ahead" signal was given and the men were exited out of the plane so fast that they didn't have a chance to object. Some of them had open mouths and bulging eyes, as if there was a ghost ahead. Others gritted their teeth. In no time the plane was empty with the exception of the jumpmasters. I knew exactly how one of the trainees felt when he had described the wind testers jumping. "It's a strange feeling to watch the cadre get up, and then they're gone. They actually jumped out! It's hard to believe."

Another day I went in an open jeep to the drop zone. It was fascinating to watch the stream of men falling from the C141. As soon as their feet hit the ground we drove up to them and asked questions. It was their first jump and, breathless as they were as they gathered up their chutes, every one that I spoke with said he loved it and couldn't wait for the next one.

We got to one man just after his chute had malfunctioned and he had used his reserve. "I wasn't really nervous," the Air Force cadet said. "I guess I pulled my reserve by instinct when I realized I had a malfunction. It's the good training they gave us. I sure have a lot of faith in my reserve now!"

While we were on the impact point (IP) MSgt. Harry L. Ikner, chief operations of the Airborne Department, figured that it takes about 100 people to jump a class. This includes ground coaches, bus drivers, emergency medical assistants, instructors, pilots and many more.

Maybe I'll never know the real adventure of jumping from a plane and gloriously floating to the ground. But when I was pinned with honorary Airborne wings I felt a fraction of the pride that every Airborne graduate must feel. As I began to fall asleep that night I could feel the movement of the plane and see the faces of the men as they exited the aircraft. Probably every graduate thought the same thing as I did that night as they drifted into slumber—Airborne!

Where the spirit lies

McCarthy Hall

McCarthy Hall doubles as a briefing room and Airborne museum, but few people know how it came about and the Airborne spirit that lies within its walls.

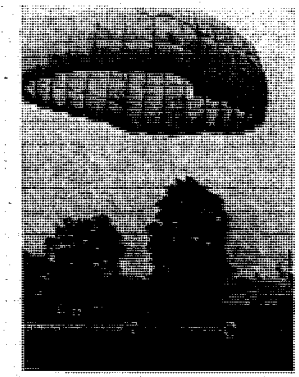
It was an empty hall with benches from 1942-1962. Lt. Col. (ret.) Donald D. Dowei, who was then chief of the jump committee, was said to have been responsible for the transformation of the hangar to its present construc$ tion. He says they begged, borrowed and scrounged plywood for the building. Col. Lamar C. "Wild Bill" Welsh, director of Airborne then, was also an asset to the project.

Because the students represented all 50 states, Col. Dowie and his assistants, who were all instructors, worked hard to obtain a flag from each state. It required writing a multitude of letters and waiting out the results.

Sgt. Charles D. Kirk, an instructor at the time, obtained a large piece of pine wood from Lee Field, the original drop zone, and hand carved a life size parachutist. "The Parachutist" took him some six months, according to Col. Dowie, and presently occupies a place in the showcase.

The hall was dedicated to Capt. Thomas W. McCarthy, who gave his life in Vietnam in 1964. Pictures of his family and data on his life are also displayed in the showcase.

Airborne wings from foreign countries, picturs of distinguished visitors and past directors, and other paraphernalia rest in the hall. Col. Dowie related memorable moments and stories about McCarthy Hall and its contents. He discussed the old "prop blasts", the traditional initiation and acceptance of new jumpers into a unit, whicb no longer take place.



He pointed out various objects in the hall and reminisced of the times and high spirit with which McCarthy Hall came to be. Every man who has gone through Airborne has been part of the hall, and it seems that the spirit of the hall has gone with every man.

Airborne Opinions

What it feels like

"You'll always find a wide range of opinions of Airborne training," said one of the Airborne instructors, "but the majority of graduates from our course will agree that it's the finest training the Army offers."

Very few trainees expressed negative views of the training they were receiving. One of the committee chiefs felt that even if Airborne was tactically and strategically unnecessary to the Army's mission, the course gives a guy a chance to be successful at something. He has more confidence, additional skill, is more self-assured and knows more about himself.

"I'll benefit by the exercise and the Army will benefit because its men are in better condition," said Sgt. Johnnie F. Mauldin, 42d Co., 4th Student Battalion.

"Airborne units are better troops than 'legs' because they have more courage and daring," says Maj. Elmer D. Schwankle of 42d Co. "Also, esprit is developed from this type of unit."

One of the Marines felt it is a novelty going Airborne. "We get to wear gold wings, and only about one percent of Marines go Airborne."

Another man agreed that jumping for the first time is novelty. "The first time you're not scared because you're not sure what it's going to be like. The second time you're scared because you know better this time."

Sgt. Charles W. Moran, 43rd Co., Class 3, summed up the reasons he likes to be the first man in line to jump. "There's something about looking down and not worrying about landing on top of somebody. But when the static lines goes limp, you think, what have I gotten myself into?"

"I've always been smaller than other guys. So I've gone Airborne to prove something to myself. I know I'll walk taller when it's over," said a trainee who had just became the first in line to jump an hour earlier.

SSG Steve Beinert takes several moments to explain the mistakes made by this airborne student on his descent and landing.

Most trainees and instructors agreed that the morale, esprit de corps and discipline is better in Airborne units. "Airborne is a tradition," a graduated trainee said. "I worked for these wings and I'm going to uphold the reputation and spirit of its tradition. It's Airborne all the way!"

Whatja wanta Know? ask the BAYONET

CALL 545-4792

DEAR BAYONET,

I believe the Commissary did not take into account the hours of the people who work. There's only one day during the week when it's open until 7 o'clock, making it difficult for working people to shop. Can it reconsider its hours and be open another night until 7? D.M.

DEAR D.M.

The commissary was forced to cut down the hours of operation because of a reduction in funds. The present hours of operation are a result of a survey taken at the commissary. About 5000 questionaires were handed to customers as they entered. On it was three different sets of hours. The customer was to indicate the set of hours that he liked most. The result of the survey is in effect now. As always, the majority wins.

DEAR BAYONET,

Why doesn't Fort Benning have a trailer park? P.D.L.

DEAR P.D.L.

Fort Benning had a trailer park once at the close of WWII. It was temporary because of the shortage of housing on post and in Columbus. When the housing situation eased the park was closed. With all of the trailer parks and empty houses in Columbus there are no plans for a post trailer park any time in the near future.

DEAR BAYONET,

Why is there a difference in the price of items such as soap, shampoo, toothpaste, hair rinse, etc. between the commissary and the Post Exchange? R.A.P.

DEAR R.A.P.,

The Post Exchange operates on a non-appropriated fund. In other words it has to generate a profit to pay employes and overhead, so there is a mark up in the items. The Commissary is run by appropriate-funds as a profit isn't needed and there is no mark up in the items sold.

DEAR BAYONET,

Some troops get a half day off from work for payday activities and some don't. Is there a post regulation on this subject or does each commander make up his own mind about it? F.R.

DEAR F.R.

I quote from USAIC PAM 600-(Sept. 71) Part 1 para. 38.

"The maximum number of military personnel will be given a half day off on payday to attend personal affairs."

Exercises in water have several advantages; more effective because of gentle resistance

BY JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

When you go swimming this summer be sure to take 15 or 20 minutes to do exercises in the water. Why not hang onto the side of a pool or raft or the end of a boat and begin getting your figure ready for fall clothes?

Water exercises have several advantages. In the first place you do not get all heated up and perspiry because the water keeps you cool. Also, the exercises are more effective because of the gentle resistance the water provides.

Face the side of the pool. Take hold of the edge with your hands. Stretch out in the water. Push yourself away from the side of the pool. Now pull yourself back until your chin touches the side. Continue, slowly, with a smooth rhythm. This is excellent for your arms and chest muscles.

Turn your back toward the side of the pool. Grasp the edge with your hands. Swing your left leg up with a stiff knee. As you lower your left leg lift your right leg up. Continue with one leg moving up as the other moves down. Keep your knees straight throughout and do this briskly. This is firming and slimming to the abdomen.

Face the side of the pool. Hold onto the edge. Swing your legs apart and then together. Separate them as widely as comfortable. Legs must be kept straight. Do the same thing except cross your legs when they come together, with first one leg and then the other in front. These two exercises will firm the thighs and take up the slack.

Turn your back toward the side of the pool. Hold onto the edge. Bend your left knee up close to your tummy. As you straighten your right leg bend your left knee. One leg bends as the other straightens. Do this briskly, pointing your toes.

You will be surprised by how very effective these exercises will be if done in water. Start out doing each one 12 times and gradually increase.

If you would like to learn to swim or teach your children to swim you may want my leaflet "Learn to Swim" which gives you complete instructions. If so send a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Josephine Lowman in care of Register, Tribune Synd., Des Moines, Iowa 50304.

Airborne instructors are super experts

"If there's any such thing as experts, that's the Airborne instructor," says Capt. James E. Lewis, Ground Committee Chief.

Capt. Lewis was referring to some 190 highly skilled men at Fort Benning. These men are going through Airborne training every day, not just three weeks like the students, he explained.

The majority of them have been to Vietnam and have performed there in their primary MOS. Each one of them has been hand picked for their present position. They run about two and a half miles every day and their hours usually are from 6 a.m. to 4 p.m.

"Most of them are older NCO's," says SFC Harry L. Ikner, chief operations of the Airborne Department. "They know how to treat people as individuals and they know how to train them. They are highly skilled and professional in their trade."

These instructors have long been instrumental in producing today's Airborne-qualified men. Their work in this area is obvious by their outstanding products.

Coming to the screen

The Poseidon Adventure

(PG) Based on the best-seller by Paul Gallico, The Poseidon Adventure.

It features a distinguished cast including 5 Academy Award Winners. The story tells of the heroic and dramatic struggle of ten survivors battling to escape fromthe capsized, rapidly sinking, luxury liner The Poseidon, which was struck by a 90 foot tidal wave and wracked with explosions during a gala New Year's Eve celebration.

Little Cigars

(PG) Angel Tompkins, on the run from gangsters, falls in with a mini-mob who stage an open-air medicine show act to divert attention from two of their members robbing the audience's cars.

She becomes the sex appeal of the show, and gradually inspires them to embark upon a big crime spree across the country.

Buck And The Preacher

(PG) — Sidney Poitier a former Union cavalaryman, is wagonmaster of a wagon train of freed slaves heading for homesteads in the West. The Preacher, Harry Belefonte is a charming and engaging con man, who will steal anything or trick anyone.

These two team up to escape ambushes and protect the wagon train against white labor recruiters from the Southern plantations.

Theatre Of Blood

(R) Critics of Vincent Price beware. In the comedy horror chiller, Theater of Blood he's a Shakespearean actor revenging himself on those drama critics who failed to vote him an acting award.

Eight of the nine go to gory endings inspired by the deaths and tragedy of Shakespeare's plays. In an endless variety of disguises and accents rivaled only by his equally diabolic daughter (Diana Rigg), Price has a field day eliciting as many laughs and chills as he methodically sets about exterminating the critics who had not been favorably inspired with his acting.

Each victim becomes a Shakespearean tragedy as Vincent Price and Diana Rigg cavort to an untimely ending in the Theatre of Blood.

Toklat

This is a story about a gigantic grizzly bear Toklat (derived from the Indian tongue, meaning ferocious) and his development from a cub to a giant, during which time one enjoys rare glimpses of a grizzly living, thriving, surviving, in a natural mountain wilderness.

Leon Ames, the only human character in the story, is faced with the sad task of shooting the grizzly for a crime it did not commit — killing sheep in a newly-arrived rancher's herd.

Herds of elk, mule deer, beaver, bobcat, fox lynx and many of the smaller animals and birds are caught in candid action.

Safety Award presented

Once again Delta Company, 43rd Engineer Battalion, has captured the elusive Battalion Safety Award. This marks the fourth consecutive occasion that Company D has won the coveted award. Delta's repeated high performance has prompted discussion on the possibility of permanently retiring the award.

The award is judged on the basis of fire and safety standards demonstrated in the area of the barracks, shops, offices, and motor pool. The Battalion Maintenance Office is responsible for conducting the inspection. A point-sys-

VA takes new loan measures

The Veterans Administration has initiated new measures making it easier for married veterans to qualify for guaranteed home loans.

Administrator of Veterans Affairs Donald E. Johnson said VA regional offices have been told of the July 18 changes.

"In consideration of current social and economic patterns, VA will hereafter recognize in full the income and expenses of both the veteran and spouse in determining ability to repay a loan obligation," Johnson explained.

He noted VA is required by law to determine if the contemplated terms of repayment bear a proper relation to the veteran's anticipated income and expenses before approving a loan.

The spouse's income has always been considered for this purpose, but in the past, local rules which had the effect of discounting the young wife's income were often imposed. Under the new policy, no such local rules will be imposed and the wife's income will be given full consideration.

VA guarantees 60 percent of home loans (maximum $12,500) private lenders made to servicemen, veterans and eligible widows of World War II, Korean and post - Korean conflicts and the Vietnam era.

Comedian welcomed

Troop 237 of Fort Benning was one of the thousands of Boy Scout troops who welcomed comedian Danny Thomas to the National Scout Jamboree-East at Moraine State Park, PA.

Chip Conner is one of the 2,000 Scout news correspondents who are reporting the Jamboree's events for their hometown newspapers.

More than 44,000 Scouts are attending Jamboree-East which is encamped in Moraine State Park about 40 miles north of Pittsburgh. Another 30,000 Scouts are encamped at Jamboree-West which is being held at Farragut State Park near Coeur d' Alene, Idaho.

A squeak

From the 'Mouse that Roared'

We're talking with Professor Kokintz, nuclear physicist at Columbia University and former POW recently returned from Grand Fenwick. Professor, we understand that the late war between the Duchy of Grand Fenwick and the United States all got started over a bottle of wine. Could you explain?

"Certainly. It seems that a company in San Rafael, California, was producing a cheap imitation of the Duchy's only export, Pinot Grand Fenwick, and selling it under a similar label. Because of this Fenwick was floundering economically and decided to declare war against the United States."

And won?

"Yes — by a fluke. They captured my Q Bomb. You see, some dolt by the name of Tully Bascom led an expeditionary force of long bowmen into New York City during a mass air raid drill. Somehow or other they found my office and captured myself and a few others. And I thought they had brought the sandwiches."

Come now, Professor, that's a joke. You mean to tell me that a group of "bowmen" from such a tiny country . . .

"Five miles long by three miles wide."

. . . invaded New York City and captured you and this "Q Bomb."

"Precisely. The President and the Secretary of State thought it was a joke at first, too. But after the bomb, General Snippet and myself were taken under guard to Europe and the little duchy, they realized the situation was serious.

So what did the Presidents do?

The only thing possible: Surrender."

Ridiculous. The United States has never lost a war. Even during the Vietnam war we didn't lose — just negotiated.

"Yes, but you see the North Vietnamese didn't have my Q Bomb. Fenwick does."

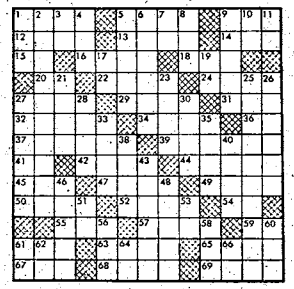
Well what makes this Q Bomb so important anyway?

"It's the most destructive force known to man. The bomb is made from Quadium, a form of Hydrogen. I have isolated a small amount of it but even that amount is capable of destroying the entire East coast from Baltimore north."

Well, do you think that this country that no one's ever heard of should be allowed to keep this weapon?

The how we claim. They've got it and should we ever try to get it back POOF. There goes Columbus, Georgia. But I don't think it will ever be used. It's actually a peaceful weapon."

What?



"Well the bomb is so powerful, who would want to use it? Even the slightest movement could set it off. That's why it's kept on a bed of straw in a dungeon under the grand duchess' castle."

Professor, our time is up but I'm sure our readership would like to know more about this. Anyway they could get further information?

"Yes. Christopher Sergel has written a play about the whole mess called the "Mouse that Roared" and the Fort Benning Drama Guild will present it at 8 p.m. August 23, 24 and 25 at the Fort Benning Playhouse. For reservations, phone 545-2932. Admittance is free to all servicemen, dependents and civilians."

Thank you, Professor Kokintz."

Debbie Chewning wins National Judo title

By JIM HOWARD

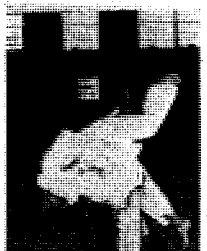
105-pound Debbie Chewning received the distinction of being the first National Champion from the state of Georgia, by taking top honors in her class at the United States Junior Judo Nationals Held at Kalamazoo, Mich., August 4 and 5.

The Nationals didn't come as she had to best a field of 25 opponents to gain the National title. Miss Chewning said "I was frightened when I first saw my muscle clad female competitors before the competition had started. I started planning my attack right then!"



Debbie didn't think she had won the final match after it went the full three minutes. "I was shocked when it was announced that I had won by decision."

Debbie is not only pretty and exceptionally talented in the art of judo but she also shines in her scholastic achievements. She is on the honor roll at Faith School and is participating in the accelerated class program.

Miss Chewning started her judo career at the Fort Benning Judo Club two years ago. "My mother noticed in the Daily Bulletin that judo classes were being given on post, so she enrolled our family," said Debbie.

Since then she has won open Judo meets in Atlanta, Birmingham, Florida and Fort Benning.

She almost missed her chance for the Nationals three months ago when she quit practicing judo to try her hand at baseball. "About three months ago I felt like I had learned everything there was to know about Judo. I stopped practicing and joined baseball but I soon learned that my love was still for the sport of Judo. Since then I have learned that no matter how good you get there is always room for improvement," the champion said.

Debbie has been a member of the Fort Benning's girl scouts, troup 187 since the age of eight and has earned 56 badges, including one challenge, while in the Cadets.

She was picked as one of two girls to represent the Fort Benning Girl Scouts in posing for the American Girl Magazine.

Debbie also has good supervision at home, her father is a Brown Belt in judo and is the assistant coach at the 197th Brigade.

Miss Chewning's goal now is to compete in the YMCA Nationals being held in October she also hopes to gain her Black Belt in later years and compete in the World Judo Championships and at the Olympics if they are ever opened to women.

The Fort Benning Judo Team of nine members traveled to the nationals not only to represent Fort Benning, but also as the sole representatives of the state of Georgia.

The team from Fort Benning was comprised of individuals that were State champions and had gone on to become

BY BILL KLOEB

About this time of the summer a lot of parents are about to give in to the insistence of the youngsters and take a family camping trip.

For some families this isn't a big deal. The family usually goes on several camping trips each summer and sometimes even go during the colder months. For these families camping has become routine. Everyone has details and knows exactly what they have to do in preparation and exactly what to do when they arrive in the camping area. It wasn't always this way though. It took many trips, a lot of bad experiences and a lot of learning before they could take off to the boondocks and actually be able to say they enjoyed the trip when it was over.

Parents who feel that they have to take the youngsters on a camping trip shoud approach the project like a major operation. It is just that for those who are not familiar with problems of living in the field. Dad probably feels he has a head start because he has spent many a night in the field with his unit or overseas in combat situations. Believe me, the project is different when you take away the unit personal equipment shake-down inspection before going out and elimnate that so-and-so supply sergeant and mess sergeant and their services. With the elimination of these two unsung heroes and the addition of three, four, five or more helpless people to take care of you really have a problem.

Recently I had the opportunity to observe the activities of a family during part of what was obviously their first attempt at camping. The family consisted of mom, dad, two boys about eight and ten years old and two girls approximately four and six.

The family arrived at the lake located in the subdivision in which I live at about 9 a.m. on a Saturday morning. Everyone piled out of the car and on Dad's instructions began to gather wood for a fire in one of the brick grills constructed by the subdivision developer. They really brought in the wood. Everything from some broomstraw by the four-year-old girl, to a log about ten feet long and six inches in diameter that the two boys were quite proud about. Of course it couldn't be used in the grill without being cut. Dad hadn't included any instrument to get this job done so the boys took off for something that would fit the grill.

In the meantime Dad set about the task of starting the fire. It had rained the day before and the night had brought a heavy dew. Nothing the children found seemed to want to burn. Dad hadn't included paper or other material to help start the fire and the wrappings he used and the paper sack of matches he had burned out at about the same time. He came over to see if I had any matches. I had two packs and some newspaper in the trunk of the car. This was enough to overcome the stubbornness of the wood and it was soon blazing. He returned with one pack of matches that had about four matches left. It was then that he informed me that they had a tent in the car and intended to stay overnight.

With the fire started things began to look better. Everyone gathered around moving branches and twigs to make sure they all burned and the fire didn't go out.

Then the first emergency happened. The littlest girl grabbed a hot branch and burned her hand enough to need first aid. Mom and Dad returned to the car but after emptying all the contents onto the wet ground failed to come up with the first aid kit. There were recriminations. Dad finally decided that he would take the car and buy something for the burn or go home and get the first aid kit he and mom had forgotten. At this point I offered the one I keep in the trunk of my car. Dad used the burn ointment and returned the kit to me. I explained that they would pass my home on the way out from the lake and prevailed on him to keep it and return it to my home the next day when their camping trip was completed. The oldest boy who was barefooted clinched my argument when he screamed that he had stepped on a thorn and couldn't get it out.

'72 Southern Open victor returns to try repeat

DeWitt Weaver, winner of the 1972 Southern Open Golf Tournament, will be on hand for an attempt to repeat his performance when the 1973 Southern starts at the Green Island Country Club Sept. 6.

Weaver made the commitment at an interview he held for sports writers and broadcasters during Southern Open Press Day activities held last Monday.

Weaver, who won the Southern in a play-off with Chuck Courtney, can hit the ball as far and accurately as anyone but usually lacks the delicate putting touch required to win tournaments on the pro tour.

"Actually I had the four best putting rounds of my career here last year" Weaver says while recalling last year's tournament. He remembers that just before the tournament he made some changes in his putting stroke. "Before the Southern I went out on a putting green and must have stroked more than a thousand balls. I tried to hook each putt, and all of them were curling into the right side of the hole.

"While I was here I seemed to be turning the putter over to get just the right spin and distance but since then I haven't been able to do it. I haven't had but a few rounds since where I had less than 30 putts.

In golf, "The swing is the thing," according to Weaver. Players who seem to hold up best under pressure can do it because a good swing will hold together while a swing with flaws will begin to come apart.

Weaver had opening rounds of 67, to put him in a tie for second place, faded to a 73 during the third round and had a disastrous 79 in the final round on Sunday. He recalled that he had the same problem during the last round of the Southern last year but his lead was enough to keep him in a tie for first place after 72 holes.

Last year Weaver was in first place after every round and went into the 18th hole with a one stroke, lead, then took a double bogey on that last hole to force himself into a play-off with Courtney. Weaver blamed his trouble on the last hole on impatience," a trait good golfers can't afford. I should have waited on that last hole," Weaver said. "I would have played it differently if I had known how Courtney had scored it." Courtney had bogeyed the hole and Weaver had a two stroke lead. He could have played safe for a par but decided to go for a birdie with a good shot to the par five hole. That shot ended in trouble and from there it wasn't hard to end up with a double bogey.

Weaver played most of the course with writers and sportscasters last Monday. He still likes the course layout but predicts it will take some super golf to come out on top with the field the Southern will draw this year.

1st/29th Inf. getting into Chattahoochee Raft Race

The spirit of Tom Sawyer and Huck Finn is alive and well in the 1st Battalion 29th Infantry. The men of the battalion are entering five rafts in the Greater Chattahoochee Raft Race, August 25.

"With so many entries, we are highly optimistic about the 1st-29th winning the race," says Maj. Duane Kook, battalion executive officer. "Rafts are being built by the Headquarters and Support, Alpha, Bravo, Charlie and Delta Companies."

According to battalion commander, Lt. Col. Robert Brumback, "Our motto speaks for itself: "Pioneers lead the way.' "

The first raft under construction is being built by 2nd Platoon, Delta Company. As Sgt. Joe Dolan says, "Even if we don't win, we'll have some fun making it and going."

None of the men have any raft experience, but "Why not go?" asks Pvt. Jim Champlin. "I might drown but it sounds like a lot of fun. Adventure training of a sort too."

Dolan described the raft. "We've got one platform made; we'll add another. We have some smoky oil barrels that we'll attach by cable for flotation.

"After that, we'll put on a steering device and oars."

Spc4 John Shaw says "I won't be going with them. My job is to take pictures when they start and wait at Bradley's landing to help them out of the river. I'm sure they'll make it down but I don't know about winning."

The platoon isn't revealing its secret for winning. "It wouldn't be a secret if we told," says Sgt. Gary Stirewalt. "We will win though. I'm going for the challenge of it."

Stirewalt feels they need to get out on the water and practice, but "We're heavily committed for the next few weeks. We'll be trying hard though."

Platoon leader, 2nd Lt. Robert Martin, says "I feel these guys can win. They're putting a lot into it."

The 12.5 mile race begins with the noon whistle from the city marina on Ninth St. The finish line is Bradley's landing on Fort Benning. Sponsored by the Columbus Jaycees.

Marksmen find mark at Camp Perry

U.S. Army handgunners wound up the pistol competition of the National Rifle and Pistol Matches at Camp Perry, Ohio August 3.

The marksmen had given a good account of themselves among the 788 mixed active military, national guard, reserves, police and civilian competitors on the the northern Ohio lake side ranges SFC Hershel Anderson, Tracy City, Tenn., and The U.S. Army Marksmanship Training Unit won the prestigious national pistol championship and also led his teammates into a decisive victory of the team matches.

SFC Hershel Anderson

Anderson, a Pan American Games gold and silver medalist who had won the Interservice Pistol Championship and Tennessee Trophy Pistol match just prior to the nationals, put together a three day grand aggregate of 2,657-141X to claim the coveted national title.

In serious contention all the way but four points down in the final count, veteran Marine marksman Warrant Officer Francis Higginson, Placerville, Calif., claimed the runner up honors while companion shooter SSgt. Steve Edmiston posted 2,642-111X for the third place laurels. Both shooters are with the U.S. Marines at Quantico, Va.

With all due credit to the individual competitors, highlight of the Army competition was the stalwart achievements of its "Blue" team. The four man squad, led by newly crowned National Pistol Champion Anderson, made a clean sweep of all the team matches. Then to add frosting to the cake, they grabbed a few new national records for good measure.

Probably the greatest record breaking achievement of all by these fired-up marksmen was the grand aggregate team championship where they topped the old mark set by an Air Force team in 1966 by 20 points with their new score of 3,534-161X.

In their sweep toward the grand prize, the "Blues" took the .22 Caliber Pistol match with 1,180, the Center Fire with 1,172 and the .45 Caliber Pistol with 1,182. The Center fire and .45 Caliber Pistol totals were both new marks for the record book.

The team, fielded by the Army Marksmanship Unit, included SFC Bonnie Harmon, SFC Harland Rennolds and SSgt. John Sicinski along with Anderson.

There are a lot of lessons to be learned from just these incidents that happened within an hour of the beginning of a camping trip. The rest of the day must have been taken up with similar problems but about that time it had to leave for a golf game. When I came home at about 4 p.m. my wife informed me that a man had dropped off my first aid kit on his way from the lake. Guess they cut the trip short.

This doesn't paint a pretty picture of camping out, but everyone doesn't have to experience a lot of unpleasant situations if they spend time in preparation. Camping should be approached like cold water. Don't dive in. You are in for a shock if you do. Sometimes the shock can be permanent. Wade into it slowly. It's a little unpleasant getting all wet but after you are in for awhile it becomes quite pleasant.

Fastpitch softball trails

Twenty-six of the Army's best fastpitch softball players will be merging on Fort Benning's Gowdy Field Aug. 6 for the start of the 1973 Army Fastpitch Softball Trials.

The trials will decide the participants of the team that will represent the Army at the Inter-service Fastpitch Softball Championships Aug. 27-31 also at the Benning site.

Fort Benning will be represented at the trials by six members. They are George Henry, Melvin Bradford, Robert Berg, Jerry Evans, Randall E. Hamilton and Garry Richey. Other participants are traveling from countries as far away as Germany, Korea, Thailand, and Hawaii with a range of players coming from throughout the United States.

The trials will last until August 24.

ROTC Ranger Cadets take a refreshing shower after an afternoon three-mile run at Fort Benning.

ROTC Cadet impressed

During his youth, ROTC Cadet Gerald A. Lechliter lived in Wildwood, New Jersey where he graduated from high school with honors in June of 1960. After graduation he went to Lycoming College in Williamsport, Pennsylvania where he graduated with a B.A. degree in history in 1967. He enlisted in the Marine Corps in October 1967. While in the USMC he attended the Defense Language Institute in Monterey, California, completing the basic course in Russian. He worked in Intelligence for the remainder of his tour.

In 1967 he entered graduate school at the University of Pittsburgh. While at Pittsburgh he worked as academic advisor for undergraduates and taught Russian. He received his M.A. degree in Slavic Linguistics in August of 1971, and at the present time is a candidate for the Ph.D.

Cadet Lechliter, as an institutional representative from Pittsburgh at Indiantown Gap Military Reservation, Pennsylvania, was very impressed by the manner in which the officers conducted themselves — their professionalism, understanding and ability to be human while acting as officers at the same time. He then made the decision to re-enter the military. His decision was based primarily upon the fact that the military would allow him to develop the skills which he had acquired in several ways, such as in military intelligence, attache duty, or a teaching appointment at West Point.

When asked why he volunteered for Ranger Training, Cadet Lechliter replied, "I think that one has to periodically test himself, and Ranger School is the ultimate test of one's physical stamina and mental acumen and abilities. Also, I thought it would be interesting to compete with a group of individuals who are for the most part, ten years younger than I am."

Dragging around

The Funny Cars will be back at Phenix Dragway on August 11, Saturday. Two of the nation's best will run a match race. They will be Preston Davis in Raymond Godman's "Tennessee Boll Weevil" and Paul Smith in "Sir Wells". If you like fast, exciting action — these are the cars to watch. Anything can happen when the funnies run.

Jimmy Parker is monopolizing "ET" bracket racing. He won the money over trophy winners Mary Ann Adcock, Sandra Parker and Marvin McBride on July 26. And then again on August 1, he put down the challenges of trophy winners—Bill Cobb, Marty Rogers and Sandra Parker. Sandra Parker is Jimmy's wife and a relative newcomer to racing herself, but has caught on and is driving like an old pro.

How about all you would be super drivers coming out to Phenix Dragway on Wednesday nights or every other Saturday night and let's gang up on Jimmy Parker. It doesn't take a souped-up car to win, just a consistent one.

Tea for new teachers

An Ecumenical Tea on Sunday afternoon, August 26, hosted by the Chaplain Division and the religious-oriented women's groups, will welcome new teachers to Fort Benning's Dependent School System.

The US Army Infantry Center Chaplain, Chaplain (COL) Sterling A. Wetherell, and his wife, Anne, will greet the new teachers, "old-timers", parents, Dependent School Staff, Board of Education officials, and PTA leaders this Sunday from 3 until 5 p.m. at The Infantry Center Chapel Annex on Sigerfoos Road, Main Post.

Almost two hundred teachers from the Fort Benning Schools have been invited, with an emphasis on those who are new in the community. Protestant Women of the Chapel and the Catholic Women of the Chapel who are sponsoring the tea, emphasize that the purpose of the tea is to acquaint these newcomers with the warm fellowship of the Chapel "families" at Fort Benning.

Fort Benning families send their children, up through the eighth grade to schools on post. These parents, as well as other interested persons, are invited to attend and greet the staff and faculty of the Dependent School System.

Anton twins win

The Anton twins from Fort Benning fired their way to second and third places in the Georgia State Junior PGA Championships held August 1 and 2 at the Bull Creek Country Club.

Terry received $500 for his second place finish. He ended play with a 146 wo strokes behind the winner, Tim Simpson from Atlanta. Tommy Anton finished aith a 147, four stokes off the pace.

Terry doubled bogied the first hole which ended up costing him $500 and the championship. Terry said "I was afraid it was going to rain and would break my momentum."

Simpson and the Antons will be back next year to compete as they still have a year of high school remaining.

67th delivers truck load of food

The soldiers of the 67th Maintenance Battalion, 36th Engineer Group, have put into action the statement that "the Army takes care of its own." Last week, a truck load of canned goods, baby food and basic food commodities valued at approximately $500 was delivered to Army Community Service (ACS) for its Emergency Food Locker.

The combined effort of everyone in the 67th produced the largest donation ever received by ACS.

The project began in mid-July when it was learned that there was a great need for food to supply the ACS Emergency Food Locker. The first sergeants from each of the five companies in the 67th briefed their troops on Army Community Service programs and told them of the vital service that the Emergency Food Locker provides to families in need. The soldiers of the 67th then went to work. As enthusiasm spread, the men conducted contests between platoons and energetically collected food donations from every available source.

On 8 August, a 2½ ton truck driven by PFC Gary Loyd (444th Trans. Co.), 67th's Driver of the Month, arrived loaded with food which was unloaded and personally delivered by the following outstanding soldiers from the 67th: SP4 David G. Winch (Soldier of the Month-HQ and HQ Det.), SP4 Alvin Bonner Jr. (Soldier of the Month-533rd Trans. Co.), SP4 William R. Closson (Soldier of the Month-598th Lt. Maint. Co.), PFC Ivan D. Garcia (Soldier of the Month-606th Ord. Co. Ammo.) and PFC Hallie Dwyer, 67th Battalion's Soldier of the Month from 444th Transportation Company.

Because of the efforts of the soldiers in the 67th Maint. Bn., many families here at Fort Benning who are in emergency situations will be able to have well-balanced, nutritious meals.

Time running out for women

More than two-thirds of the women veterans believed to be eligible for education and training under the current GI Bill have not yet used these benefits, and time is running out for those discharged before June 1, 1966.

This warning came from the Veterans Administration, which also noted most of these VA education benefits for veterans discharged before June 1, 1966 will expire on May 31, 1974, although this expiration date does not apply to on-the-job or apprenticeship training.

The remainder of the veterans eligible have eight years from the date of their discharge to complete their training.

About 100,000 of the 144,000 women who left military service since January 31, 1955 have not yet taken training under the GI Bill, according to VA.

This date (end of the Korean Conflict) marks the beginning of the period of military service making veterans eligible for benefits under the current GI Bill, which became law May 31, 1966.

About 30 per cent of the 144,00 women potentially eligible have used all or part of their education benefits.

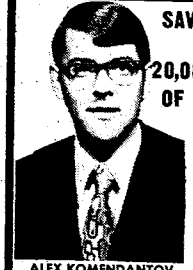
The spring 1973 semester enrolled 16,600 women veterans under the GI Bill. Most of those who have trained have been in college. As of April, 27,440 of the 44,000 who have used their GI Bill had chosen college, and about 300 were job training.

To date, Air Force leads the services with 13,157 women veterans who have enrolled under the current GI Bill. The Army has 11,814; Navy, 10,895; the Marine Corps, 3,863; the Coast Guard, 17; and the Public Health Service, National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, and others 4,443.



VA reminds women veterans that their military experience, especially in the health care field, often provides an excellent basis for further education and training, and that VA is a leader in university-affiliated health care training and in equal employment opportunity for women.

Women serve as VA hospital directors and as chiefs and directors in VA medical and allied health care fields, including the top agency posts in pathology and allied sciences, medical administration, allied health training, nursing and dietetics.

Women also hold many non-medical administrative posts in VA, including jobs as personnel officers in VA hospitals and regional offices across the country.

Capt. Smith, former POW, receives DSC award

The Distinguished Service Cross, our nation's second highest military award, was presented to Capt. Mark A. Smith, a former POW who is currently stationed at Fort Benning.

Maj. Gen. Thomas M. Tarpley, Fort Benning commander, made the presentation in a ceremony held Wed., Aug. 15 on York Field.

Smith, who was a prisoner of war from April, 1972, until February, 1973, earned the DSC while serving as senior battalion liaison officer to the 9th Infantry Regiment, 5th Infantry Division, Army of the Republic of Vietnam.

According to Smith's citation; on April 5, 1972, North Vietnamese and Viet Cong forces launched a major offensive with the objective of capturing Binh Long Province in military region three.

The 5th Viet Cong Division launched a massive coordinated ground attack against Loc Ninh beginning early on the morning of April 5. The attack was supported by artillery and tanks.

Smith skillfully directed tactical air strikes and helicopter gunships in support of the 9th Infantry Regiment and other South Vietnamese forces in the area. To inflict the maximum casualties on the enemy and to bring the fire as close as possible to the friendly forces, he left the safety of his bunker and moved throughout the area seeking strategic vantage points from which he directed friendly fire.

Time and time again he directed the fighters, bombers, gunships, and artillery fire on top of his own position to drive off the attacking enemy. The combination of Smith's courage and professional skill coupled with all available fire power kept the numerically superior enemy at bay for more than two days.

An honor guard from the 197th Infantry Brigade and the 283d Army Band will also participate in the ceremony.

Smith is currently assigned to 12th Company, The School Brigade, Fort Benning.

No Beef?

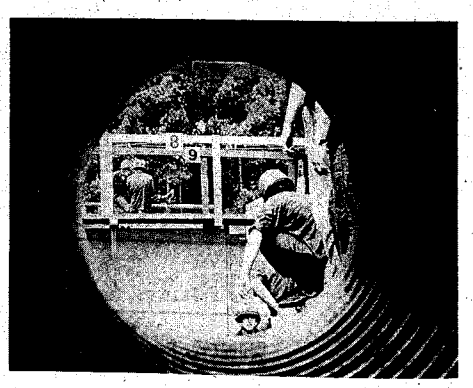
The shortage hits AAFES food outlets

The all-beef hamburger temporarily will be absent from many AAFES food outlets.

Major General C. W. Hospelhorn, Army and Air Force Exchange Service commander, announced that due existing beef shortages and the growing specter of complete out-of-stocks at many locations, AAFES will be forced to offer burger products with a soy protein additive wherever the need arises.

"The beef shortage has reached crisis proportion in many areas," the general stated, "and AAFES has no choice but to introduce the soy ingredient now being used by many larger food chains throughout America."

The two steaming controversies facing Fort Benning Commissaries and AAFES food outlets is the shortage of meat and skyrocketing food prices.



Not only is there a critical beef shortage, but also a shortage of pork and poultry, and the price continues to rise.

Many shoppers wonder why meat on post shows a significantly lower price range than that sold off post. The commissary is able to sell at a lower price because they buy and sell meat, poultry and seafood products at cost. As far as quality is concerned, it is the same high quality sold off post.

Because of the meat situation now present, meat rationing has taken place. There will be three packages of meat per customer, the choice being meat, poultry or seafood.

The Post Commissary and other AAFES food outlets are doing everything possible to allow the customer the best buys on meat and other foods available at the lowest price while the price freeze is still on.

"Let me assure all patrons that the burger product AAFES will offer will be the highest possible quality and subject to the same rigid inspections and standards applied in the past," Gen. Hospelhorn pledged.

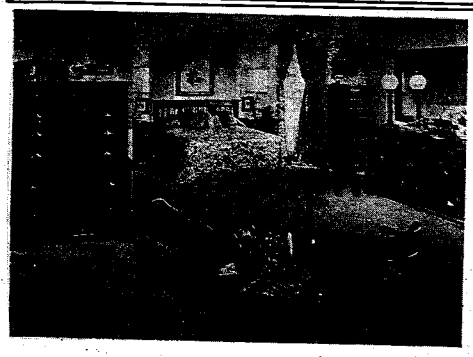
598th changes command



At a short change of command ceremony recently Capt. Thomas A. Bolt Jr. took command of 598th Lt. Maint. Co.

Capt. Bolt replaces Capt. Clyde Wiseman Jr. who commanded the 598th from January 15, 1973 to July 15, 1973. Capt. Wiseman performed his duty as commander in an outstanding manner and many will feel his absence.

Capt. Bolt's former job was with HHD 67th Maint. Bn. as the S-2-3 officer. Capt. Bolt was with HHD from February 3, 1972 until be officially became the new commander of the 598th. Capt. Bolt is now looking forward to his new command with enthusiasm.

How did Ranger training help you in the Army?

Lt. Col. (Ret.)
James Anderson

Airborne Dept.

It gave me an all around picture of the Infantry and a Esprit De Corps in the service. It gave me a feeling of being part of a closely molded high caliber group that can rely on each other in any situation. Being a Ranger I am also able in time of war to help others that haven't been able to take the course through my knowledge and former training.

3rd Ranger Co.

It established a great deal of self pride and confidence, plus a pride in the Ranger Tab itself. It's undoubtedly the hardest military course that is offered and that gives you a pride to look good and it motivates you to be a better soldier. The Rangers are more of a symbol of excellence in soldiers. If you are a Ranger, people expect more out of you.

Lt. Col. Lynn Steverson
School Staff

It has been fifteen years since I took Ranger Training but throughout my military career it has given me a confidence to be able to succeed in anything.

1st Lt. Bill Pigott
15 Sinf. 19 7Brigade

I think that the Ranger Course is a confidence builder. It produces a better breed of men by pushing them hard under pressure, pressure, in the constructive sense of the word. After taking the course you're just about able to handle anything. You know that you have been able to handle the worst and anything else will come easier.

BAYONET OPINION PAGE

Ranger

Army's ultimate weapon

Throughout the history of the American Army there have been soldiers known proudly as Rangers. What are Rangers? They are probably the toughest, best trained soldiers in the Army today.

Rangers were first organized in 1756 by Major Robert Rodgers, who recruited nine companies from among the Continentals. Their techniques of operation were characteristic of the American Frontiersmen before the American Revolution.

At that time the British Army was engaged in fighting the French and Indian War. The Rangers were the scouting force to provide information on enemy positions and to capture prisoners.

But that was all in the American past. Rangers as we know them today were first organized during the Second World War by Major (later Brigadier General) William O. Darby on June 19, 1942, in Northern Ireland.

The first company Maj. Darby organized was composed of 6 officers and 44 enlisted Rangers who fought decisive battles against the Germans. The Rangers also collected valuable intelligence data during these operations on their methods of fighting. This intelligence proved to be of great value to the allies in later battles of the war.

The present Ranger training program being taught at Fort Benning, has been built on Ranger mistakes as well as victories. The course is 57 days in length and consists of approximately 1,020 instructional hours.

The training is broken up into 3 phases; One: Combat Conditioning, two: Mountain Training, and three: Counserguerrilla Operations. All three phases are exacting and demanding both physically and mentally.

The first phase of training, taught at Fort Benning by the Benning Ranger Committee is designed to develope the confidence and physical and mental endurance, which the small unit leader must possess to successfully accomplish a mission.

Ranger students are taught proficiency in Basic Combat skills. They must demonstrate their knowledge of basic squad and platoon tactics, organization, formations, battle drill, movement techniques, fire and maneuver, artillery support, demolitions, tactical survival, and aircraft support.

Each of the three phases in the Ranger Course build upon one another. By the time the Ranger student completes the 3 phases he has the knowledge, stamina, and ability to operate for extended periods over all types of terrain. He learns to defeat the enemy in either a conventional or counterguerrilla war. He truly becomes the Army's ultimate weapon, "The Army Ranger!"

18th Replacement holds race seminar

An experimental race relations seminar lasting two days was recently conducted at 18th Replacement Company. "We felt that the black ethnic group wasn't offered an environment where they could speak freely," said Capt. Robert M. Dodge, commanding officer of the company.

Each of three different ethnic groups had its own moderator and met in segregated groups. The six men in each group spoke out more freely within these groups, Capt. Dodge said. The moderators probed and extracted views from their men.

A combined group of all the men met on the second day of the seminar and discussed the results of their individual meetings. The 36th Engineers race relations staff was represented and the other men in attendance included officers, men ranking from E-2 to E-6 and the first sergeant.

Capt. Dodge would like to see the adoption of this type of program by all units to stimulate the race relations program. "A unit must have a good moderator, otherwise the race relations program leaves much to be desired," he said.

This type of seminar will be held at 18th Replacement on a quarterly basis and the regular race relations meeting will still be held once a month.

ROTC Rangers

ROTC Ranger Class 502-73 has completed its first week of training in Florida, where it will put to use the skills and techniques learned in the Benning and Mountaineering phases of U.S. Army Ranger training. The class, now 200 strong, begins an 11-day, continuous field exercise today to complete the rugged Ranger course. During this exercise the Cadets will participate in small boat operations, river crossings and amphibian assaults, helicopter rappelling, tactical aircraft support exercises, airborne operations, and extended, platoon-size operations in a guerrilla environment. They will return to Fort Benning for graduation on August 31.

AAFES prepares 'Toy Chest 73'

The Army and Air Force Exchange Service will take the lid off its 1973 toy chest next month, and value-conscious shoppers are invited to visit AAFES Toylands to see what's inside.

"Toy Chest '73," this year's version of the annual Christmas toyland sale, will open 17 September. For the first week, twenty-six specially priced toys and games will be offered to encourage early shopping.

Tabloid describing opening week specials have been distributed to main exchanges in the United States. Overseas areas have also prepared tabloids announcing local specials.

Everything from infant push-pull toys to chemistry labs can be found: adventure toys to stir the imagination, educational toys to develop the mind, or dolls and wagons and animals and trikes that just let children be children.

Customers are invited to use the no-charge exchange layaway plan to reserve that special gift.

Although a wide selection of toy items will be available right up to Christmastime, rain checks will be available only for advertised items sold out before the end of the week-long sale period.

LTC Howard J. Guba assumed command of the 43rd Engineer Battalion (Construction) last month at Fort Benning. In a ceremony conducted at the battalion headquarters the colors of the unit were presented to LTC Guba by Col. James Thompson, Commander of 36th Engineer Group.

While addressing the men of his new command, LTC Guba stated, "The achievements and accomplishments of the 43rd Engineers are something of which each one of us can be justifiably proud. Our mission is to maintain our equipment in a high state of readiness, to be trained individually and collectively to accomplish any mission assigned the battalion, and to help the battalion complete its jobs so that they are quality jobs, performed in a safe and timely manner." He emphasized, "The battalion motto, 'POWER FOR PEOPLE,' tells all that we possess the capability to do great things."

LTC Guba's last assignment was with the Office of the Chief of Research and Development, Department of the Army. Previous assignments included two tours to Vietnam and tours in Korea and Alaska. His awards include the Bronze Star Medal with two oak leaf clusters, the Meritorious Service Medal, the Joint Service Commendation Medal, and the Army Commendation Medal. He is a graduate of the U.S. Army Command and General Staff College and has been awarded the degrees of Bachelor of Civil Engineering from Brooklyn Polytechnic Institute; Bachelor of Science from the University of Maryland; Master of Civil Engineering from Texas A and M University; and Master of Science in Engineering Management from the University of Alaska. LTC Guba is a Registered Professional Engineer.

Banner held 2nd month

Delta Company of the 43rd Engineer Battalion has been awarded the Company of the Month Banner for the second straight month.

The competition is based on the overall performance of each company. The companies are judged on such things as safety, projects completed, soldier of the month, driver and operator of the month and other awards given to outstanding individuals. Each company is given points for the various awards it receives.

As is customary at all battalion parties, Lt. Brook McCain acted as wagon master. Now the wagon sees all, hears all, and knows all that happens in the battalion. As wagon master, Lt. McCain makes the wishes and observations of the wagon known to the battalion. His comments often prove interesting to many of the Pioneers. By a unanimous vote of those present Lt. Gary Mitchel will succeed Lt. McCain as wagon master.

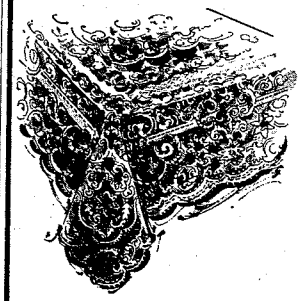
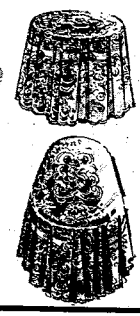
Springer plans ballet workshop



The Springer Ballet Theater will hold a dance workshop from August 18th until August 20th. Classes will be given each evening from 6:00 to 7:30 for juniors and 7:30 to 9:00 for seniors. All dancers in the community, whether or not they are members of the Springer Ballet, are invited to attend. Mr. Ted Adkins, who created the dances for the Springer Theater summer production of "Annie Get Your Gun", will give several classes to the seniors in jazz and modern.



If anyone is interested in joining the company or merely interested in finding "what it is all about," they are free to participate in or observe a class in session. The ballet director is not interested in just how many years of experience dancers may have but also how they perform and what potential talent they may have.

Ballet classes at our studio begin with pre-ballet students. Mrs. Sonja Manzi, the ballet director, who can be reached at 563-2544, and Mrs. Donald Ford, 561-8322, will be happy to furnish additional information to those who are interested.

SFC Edward A. Leeson Sr., of HHC, recently re-enlisted for four more years. Leeson has been in the Army for over nineteen and presently serves as the Section Chief in the Group Communications Office. In addition to his duties with communications, he has numerous other responsibilities, including operation of the Group Message Center, Group Publications, and Assistant Forms Management Officer.

* * *

PFC Roosevelt Merriweather, a wireman at the Group Commo Shop, says that "SFC Leeson is a flexible person, but one who does an outstanding job in all of his areas of responsibility."

When asked how long he would stay in the Army, SFC Leeson replied, "As long as I can keep re-enlisting."

He has made the Army a tradition in his family as he has a son who has been in the Army for almost a year.

Leeson plans to retire some day in Columbus, Georgia.

* * *

SFC Lindsey Brown, Career Counselor for the 43rd Engr. Bn., has received a Certificate of Achievement for FY 73 for obtaining the highest 1st term re-enlistment rate at battalion level, within the 36th Engr. Gp. He obtained 300 per cent of the Dept. of Army objective.

* * *

Sp6 George D. McGuire, Unit re-enlistment NCO Co. B, 43rd Engr. Bn., received a Certificate of Achievement for the 4th quarter of 73 for obtaining the highest 1st term reenlistment rate at the unit level within the 36th Engr. Gp. He obtained 333 per cent of the Dept. of Army objective.

* * *

SSG Orville E. Short, unit reenlistment NCO 533rd Trans. Co., received the Certificate of Achievement for FY 73 for obtaining the highest 1st term reenlistment rate at unit level within the 36th Engr. Gp. He obtained 189.4 per cent of the Dept. of Army objective.

* * *

Sp5 Elwin Robinson of Company B, 43rd Engineer Battalion (Construction) recently regained his rank of Sp5. After one year of trying to relearn the art of civilian life, Robinson decided that the Army offered him the life style he was seeking.

Since his reenlistment, almost one year ago, he has more than proven himself capable of handling the difficult tasks required of a mess hall cook, as demonstrated by the fact he was selected June "Cook of the Month" for both Battalion and Group.

Robinson was granted a 3 day pass and a 25 dollar savings bond. Robinson's promotion came after many long hours spent preparing food for four companies in the 43rd Engineer Battalion.

Maj. Allen O. Beasley recently received an award for meritorious service while assigned as Operations and Training Officer with the sixth Army.

He was presented the award for his high degree of professional knowledge, his example of competence, aggressive leadership and the sense of responsibility he instilled in his subordinates to excell in their endeavors.

Beasley has been with the S-4 section at Group Headquarters, 36th Engineers since March 15.

Before coming to Fort Benning he was stationed with the 6th Army, Presidio, San Francisco.

The 36th Engineer Group is extremely proud to have an officer of Major Beasley's achievements and ability in its organization.

TSB

SSG Thomas E. Fish, of the 14th Co., 1st Stu. Bn., TSB, has reenlisted for 3 years for his present duty.

* * *

MSG Fred E. Proske, of 10th Co., 1st Stu. Bn., TSB, has reenlisted for 3 years for his present duty.

SSG Ernest L. Shaw, of 14th Co., 1st Stu. Bn., TSB, has reenlisted for 5 years for his present duty.

Sgt. David M. Soncek, of 14th Co., 1st Bn., TSB, has reenlisted for 4 years for duty in Thailand.

SFC German Silva Torres, of HHC, TSB, has reenlisted for 4 years for his present duty.

Sp4 Daniel A. Daniel, of 22nd Co., 2nd Stu. Bn., TSB, has reenlisted for 6 years for his present duty.

SSG John A. Baer, of 14th Co., 1st Stu. Bn., TSB, has taken a 36 month extension for his present duty.

Company C, 3rd Battalion, 7th Infantry, of the 197th Infantry Brigade has done it again. They have managed to produce the post cook-of-the-month for July in the form of Sp4 James F. Williamson.

Williamson, who finds his reward cooking for the men, is not a newcomer at holding this title. This is the second time that he has won the post cook-of-the-month title. Add this to the two times he has won Brigade cook-of-the-month, and he has something going for himself.

Company C Dining Facility, headed by SFC Howard Garrett, has quite a reputation at producing cooks-of-the-month. They have won the Brigade title six times and the post title four times. It's easy to see why they have won the Best Dining Facility Award at Fort Benning for the last six months.

TROOPIN-THE-LINE

586th Eng.

The sounds of bodies hitting the water mixed with the cheers and jeers of their comrades were heard on the morning of July 24th and 25th as the 586th Engineer Company (Float Bridge) ran through Fort Benning's Leadership Reaction Course, located off of Dixie Road adjacent to Lawson Army Airfield. The course is designed to improve the individual's leadership ability by confronting him with a specific mission-type situation, the minimum of materials to accomplish the particular mission, and a fifteen minute time limit. The solution depends upon the individual's ingenuity and resourcefulness. The 586th is one of the first companies stationed at Fort Benning to utilize the Leadership Reaction Course as part of their unit Adventure Training, and the overall feeling of the men after completing the course was that it definitely was an enjoyable adventure. The men welcomed the change of pace from their daily work schedule, and the three day pass awarded to the highest scoring team on each day was certainly an added incentive.

PFC Gary Cathcart, who observed all of the tasks, stated "A lot of the tasks that looked easy, turned out to be quite complicated. By watching the men of 586th tackle these obstacles, I noticed that a lot of teamwork was required to complete each mission.

"The men who took their time to think over the situations and planned their routes, were the ones that were most likely to complete their missions."

Pv2 Charles Gallion, of the 586th, said "This course sure wasn't the easiest thing I've done since I have been in the Army, but it sure was a lot of fun."

Not much longer to enroll for SBP

Retired members of the uniformed services must enroll in the Survivor Benefit Plan (SBP) by Sept. 20 of this year or lose right to participate in the program.

The SBP provides the widows or widowers of career service members, and their dependent children, a survivor income of up to 55 per cent of retired pay.

Until the law went into effect in September 1972, the retired pay of a member ended with his or her death, unless the member had elected voluntarily to participate in the Retired Serviceman's Family Protection Plan.

As a result, surviving members of retirees' families often found themselves with little or no income following the deaths of retirees.

Under the SBP, members who retire on or after the Sept. 20 effective date will be automatically in the plan if they have spouses or dependent children at retirement time. A member who does not have a spouse or dependent child at retirement can participate in SBP either at retirement by naming another person as his beneficiary or at a later date should he or she acquire a spouse, or a child after retirement.

The plan also has a special provision benefiting women who were at the time of its enactment widows of deceased members of the Uniformed Services who were receiving, or were entitled to receive, retired pay. The provision assures these widows of annual incomes of at least $2,100.

A widow who is entitled to a Veteran Administrations widow's pension and whose other income is less than $1,200 per year will be able to receive an SBP supplemental payment to bring her income up to that figure.

Persons who retire within 180 days after the effective date (Sept. 20) of SBP have a special grace period of 180 days after their retirement dates in which to finalize either automatic or voluntary participation in the plan. Persons retired before Sept. 20, 1973, have up to the first anniversary of that date to advise their services that they wish to enroll in the plan.

Participating in SBP at the maximum level (55 per cent) of full retired pay as the survivor payment, the average enlisted member retiring today can provide a monthly survivor payment to a spouse of about $220 per month at a tired pay of $17.50. The average officer retiring now can provide about $520 as a monthly survivor payment, with reductions in retired pay of $72 per month. Protection for dependent children is also available at a small cost, based on the retirees' age and the child's age.

A certain kind of individual

"It takes a certain individual to be satisfied with working conditions such as those that are found in the Ranger Department; but the key is in job satisfaction," Maj. Dean W. Knox, Operations Officer of the Third Ranger Co. said, referring to some 90 Ranger instructors at Fort Benning.

It is the hardest leadership course the Army has to offer, he feels, and a man chooses to instruct it because it's a challenge, just as it is to the student.

A number of the instructors have had multiple tours in Vietnam, are bilingual, have Special Forces background, are expert mountaineer and scuba qualified and are combat veterans. Also, a man had to be a good student to come back as cadre.

"There are no 8 to 5 hours, no weekends and there's no such thing as holidays a lot of the time for the instructors," Capt. George J. Johnson, team chief of the city team said.

Capt. Johnson feels that mutual understanding and attitude minimizes hardship where family life is concerned. "The Army wife is a different breed. She recognizes the fact that there is preserverance and separation. And she has to realize her husband's job has its importance," he said.

SFC Aubrey M. Batts, senior instructor, says that it's hard to pin point exactly how many hours a man puts in a day because it always fluctuates. "My wife understands my job. Men do this for professionalism, but they also have a responsibility to their families," he said.

"Sure I don't like the hours," one wife said, "but I know how important that Ranger tab is to my husband and how much he likes his job. That's what really counts. Knowing that it won't last forever also helps."

Being a Ranger instructor requires a strong dedication to duty. The men must undergo constant demands to put out qualified trainees. These volunteers must make continuous sacrafices. But, as many of them agreed, the prestige factor makes it a good assignment.

"When you like what you're doing, you don't mind the sacrafices," one man said. "If you're not happy with what you're doing, you don't belong there."

Ranger

America's finest makes Army's best soldier

Personnel from the Fort Benning Ranger Department work around the clock training young men to be the Army's best soldiers.

How do they do it! Through Ranger training.

BENNING PHASE

The first phase of Ranger training starts here at Benning. The Benning phase is divided into two sub-phases. The first is conducted in the Harmony Church area.

During this phase, and all other phases, both the student and instructors are on the job about 17 hours a day.

During the Benning phase, the student is instructed on demolitions, hand to hand combat, and the weapons a Ranger must be prepared to employ.

The major emphasis here is on land navigation, distance determination, terrain association and route selection.

The second portion of this phase is conducged at Camp Darby, Ga. During this portion, the students are taught survival, the use of communication, and how to employ arterilly and aircraft in support. The major emphasis here is on patrolling.

Of course, the students aren't doing this training on their own. The instructors, who leave their homes and families, are with the students, training them.

"I feel the course gives the individual the opportunity to make leadership decisions," said SFC Robert E. Spencer, senior instructor, Camp Darby. "The job for me is a challenge. My wife realizes that I've got a job to do and she doesn't mind." Spencer went through Ranger training in 1964 and believes that students wanting to take Ranger training should be prepared mentally and physical before coming and want to stay once they start.

SFC Robert J. Weaver, senior instructor, Camp Darby feels that the course develops good leaders. "My wife knows why I'm out there and understands. My children are too young to know."

Throughout the entire Benning phase, Ranger students are subject to progressive programming of physical training exercise, combatives, road marches, conditioning runs and confidence tests.

MOUNTAINEERING PHASE

The second phase of Ranger training is the Mountaineering phase at Camp Frank D. Merrill, Dahlongea, Ga. During this phase the student becomes increasingly proficient in the fundamentals, principles and techniques of employing small combat units in a mountain warfare environment.

Students are continually challenged by severe weather, rugged terrain, periods of hunger, mental and physical fatigue and emotional stress.

Day and night patrols are directed against emplaced aggressors. These patrols are from two to six days long and end in a series of combat patrols which infiltrate the agressors front lines, move cross-country over the mountains, across the rapid Toccoa River, raid aggressor missile sites and continue operations in the aggressor rear area for an extended period of time.

In addition to his patrolling, instruction and field exercises, the student receives instruction in military mountaineering techniques which instills in him a high degree of confidence in himself and his fellow students.

Captain John C. Grimsley, senior tactical officer, Ranger Department, feels that Ranger training is the most realistic, most demanding leadership training the Army has. Grimsley went through Ranger training last year.

"We combine in eight weeks and two days a very compact, realistic and rugged course of instruction that is designed to teach invididual student leadership. The way we do this is to place him under emotional stress, hunger and fatigue in all conditions of weather, and require that he conform to Ranger standards," said Major Rowland L. Pettit, sub committee chief, Camp Darby.

"In addition to the benefits of having developed student leadership," Pettit added, "We instill in him prompt obedience, self-discipline, resourcefulness and determination."

FLORIDA PHASE

The third phase of Ranger training, the Florida phase, is at Eglin AFB. This phase is conducted entirely against an irregularly organized force in junge-swamp terrain.

Technique training presented to the student is the use of small boats, aircraft repelling, expedient stream crossing, artillery adjustment, day and night rive navigation, and all aspects of support from Army and Air Force aircrafts.

"A man's got to have an awful lot of dedication to pull away from his family to train the students, said Robert F. Gilbert, Sgt. Maj. of the Ranger Department. "If we were to run the course on a 40-hour work week, Ranger training would take about six months to complete," he added.

The last portion of the Florida phase is a 12 day Field Training Exercise. This includes such operations as raids, ambushes, area surviellance, combat and reconnaissance patrols, platoon combat operations, and company-sized combat assaults using helicopters.

During this operation, the students occupy combat bases, patrol bases, and are required to coordinate and receive arieal resupply missions.

Upon completion of their last phase, the Ranger student will be thoroughly familiar with environmental requirements of small unit operations in guerilla infested areas. He will have been thoroughly exposed to essential integrated training to include combat intelligance, counterintelligence, individual and small unit security, personal hygiene and field sanitation.

All of this is achieved by the dedication and desire to train the Army's best, from the personnel at the Fort Benning Ranger Department.

So, since the first Ranger class graduated February 29, 1952, the Fort Benning Ranger Department has proudly produced 29,155 Rangers.

Camp Darby

Rangers get down to basics

A primary mission of Ranger training is to instruct students in the most effective means of inflicting casualties on enemy forces.

Immediate action is one training technique the Ranger Department employs to develop the students instincts for survival, and ability to damage the enemy. In this realistic drill, Ranger students encounter 10 different types of ambushes, and learn the methods needed to survive them.

Camp Darby is the site for this phase of the Ranger program. It is named in honor of BG William O. Darby, who initiated the Ranger concept in WWII.

In order to execute the ambushes, aggressor forces are provided by soldiers assigned to the 1-29th Infantry. Sometimes ranger student patrols set up ambushes to attack other patrols. A different student volunteers to act as patrol leader for each station. They are responsible for how the unit reacts to the situation.

One such operation is called "V" ambush. One patrol of ranger students deploys on a hill or ridge and takes up a V position. They are arranged so that no member of the patrol will be firing on another when they ambush.

When the trap is set each man lies deathly still to avoid being seen. Soon the patrol to be attacked is spotted moving up the pathway. Unsuspecting but alert they move on up the hill. Suddenly the patrol leader of the hidden forces throws a ground burst simulator into an open area where no one can be injured. This signals the attack. Suddenly blank M16 rifle rounds can be heard firing as the mock battle begins to rage. The M60 machinegun opens fire on the men below who have fallen into the trap. After several moments the instructor blows his whistle. He stops the battle and explains to the patrol the mistakes it made, and the action the unit took correctly. After choosing a new patrol leader, the instructor moves them over the hill towards still another ambush.

How a man fares on tests like these prove whether the man is worthy of wearing the black and gold tab of the Rangers.

Rangers

Most effective Army fighting force

The Rangers are one of the most effective fighting forces ever assembled in the U. S. Army. They are able to infiltrate behind enemy lines, climb mountains, operate in jungles, and perform countless more tactics designed to defeat the enemy.

Rangers must be highly trained soldiers in order to accomplish these critical and often dangerous missions. Ranger instructors are the most efficient and capable in the infantry school. One of the top Ranger instructors is SSG Gary L. Cupit, 3rd Ranger Co., The School Brigade.

SSG Cupit has been an instructor with 3rd Ranger for two years, ever since he returned from Vietnam. His dedication is admired, by both student and fellow Rangers. "Cupit is a fine soldier" said 1SG James Clark of the 3rd Ranger Company.

SSG Cupit blends into his instruction situations he encountered while in Vietnam. He mixes praise with criticism as he attempts to teach Ranger students to react, and react correctly, to any type situation they might face.

"It's good when the men make mistakes. When they do, it's easy to explain to them how they can be corrected," said SSG Cupit.

Originally a draftee, SSG Cupit reenlisted and went to Ranger School because, "I thought it would teach me the latest techniques of conventional warfare."

When he watches his Ranger students encounter aggressor forces of other Ranger students he is sometimes amused, sometimes angered, but always alert and watchful for any errors the men may make.

"It's important to these men that I be thorough in what I do," he said, "because someday, their lives may depend on how well I taught them."

Put your leisure time to work

Fact is, when the Baron enlisted in 1914 we had already completed some 30 odd years of service, helping men and women just like you solve problems just like yours. And we're proud of our record. So if you have a financial problem —big or small—stop in or give us a call. With more than 1700 offices coast to coast, you'll always find us nearby and ready to help. Borrow up to $2,500 from HFC . . . an equal opportunity lender.
We've been helping more people solve more money problems for more years than any other company of our kind.

Sharkey receives letter

SP4 Russell Sharkey has been presented a letter of appreciation for his outstanding performance, initiative, mission orientation, professionalism in seeking additional responsibility, and his intense desire to get the job done which contributed immeasurably to the championship shooting matches (3rd Army, Interservice, Southeast Regional, and U.S. Army Rifle and Pistol Championships) held at Fort Benning from March 20 through June 2, 1973. Making the presentation was the commander of the 145th Aviation Battalion, Lt. Col. Lawrence A. Bell.

Specialist Sharkey, an aviation maintenance technician with the 47th Aviation Company (Heavy Helicopter), served as one of the Pistol Statistical Operation Personnel during the preparation and conduct of the Matches.

The Cowboys

They run into traveling prostitutes and their Madam Colleen Dewhurst, a stolen bottle of whisky on which they get drunk, and finally Bruce Dern and his band of rustlers. When Dern tries to take the herd, Wayne beats him savagely in a fist fight. The rustlers then take the herd.

At this point, the "cowboys" turn into "cowmen" and, along with trailcook Roscoe Lee Browne, set out after the rustlers to get back the herd.

Pete, Pearl And The Pole

(R) In the 1930's, gangland killing reached its peak. Al Capone, Dillinger, Bonnie and Clyde, and other public enemies made the headlines. But the meanest, dirtiest, rottenest bunch of them all was really PETE, PEARL AND THE POLE . . . in 1931 they had the biggest and bloodiest time of their lives.

This film stars Tony Anthony as Pete, newcomer Lucrelia Love is an eyeful as Pearl, and Adolfo Celi is the bad-tempered, vengeful, jealous Pole; with choice cameo appearances by Richard Conte, Irene Papas, and Lionel Stander.

Love And Pain And The Whole Damn Thing

(R) A writer of Pulitzer Prize-winning historical novels Charles Baxter has little use for his teen-aged son Timothy Bottoms. The youth who has no goals or any real interest is about to undertake a bike tour of Spain.

Unable to keep up with the group, he joins a busload of other tourists and meets British spinster Maggie

Operation Beach Duty: Eastern vacations as incredible as the airfares that get you there.

Everyone knows servicemen get to fly cheaper than civilians. But now, Eastern can help you get some pretty incredible discounts at dozens of hotels throughout Florida, the Caribbean and Mexico. Vacations like these:

The Caribbean Beach Club in San Juan for $8 per day.

Swim and fish in crystal clear waters. Relax on beautiful white beaches. And in the evening, Puerto Rico's famous casinos and exciting night clubs are waiting for you.

One way reserved military air fare from Washington/Baltimore to San Juan runs you $43.50 plus security charges and you don't have to wear a uniform.

The Jolly Roger in Ft. Lauderdale for $8 per day.

You can cruise the canals of the Florida Gold Coast Capital. Or play a set of tennis on one of Fort Lauderdale's many courts. Or simply watch the whole thing from the rooftop lounge of the Jolly Roger.

One way reserved military air fare from Atlanta is $35, plus security charges.

The Jamaica Inn at Walt Disney World for $8 per day.

Take a friend or your family to Walt Disney World just outside of Orlando, Florida. Explore the Magic Kingdom, a new world of fun and excitement.

Hotel prices above are for one person sharing a room with someone else. They're good until December 15, 1973. Meals or local taxes not included.

Military fares are good anywhere in the U.S. and any time except from 2 p.m. to midnight on Fridays and Sundays.

If you have any questions, call your SATO office or Eastern. Or you can mail us the coupon and we'll send you a free brochure on these and many other vacations we have.

Please send me complete information on Eastern's Beach Duty discounts and vacations:

AUSA

By Randy Boose

Joe Windsor, recently elected president of the Columbus-Phenix City-Fort Benning chapter of AUSA, vowed to keep it the "biggest and best" in the coming year.

Windsor, vice-president and general manager of WTVM, noted at his first board meeting as president that the chapter "has a tradition of being a leading chapter because of the closeness between the civilian and military communities and their awareness of the need for a strong voice in military matters." At the board meeting a chapter overall program was also approved, to include the annual picnic and the George Washington Dinner-Dance. In addition to the chapter's traditional general membership meetings, two new meetings are being planned. One will feature a demonstration by the "Silver Eagles," the U.S. Army helicopter precision flying unit, and will be held at Lawson Field in November. The other is an AUSA golf day at Fort Benning planned for next spring.

Your other elected AUSA officers are Roy Browning, first vice-president; James Blanchard, second vice-president; Colonel Allen Goodson, secretary-treasurer; and Major Patrick Cannan, assistant secretary-treasurer.

In addition to these local officers, a former local chapter president, Joe Flowers, is Third Region president. Colonel William S. Guthrie, Director of Non-Resident Instruction, is Third Region secretary-treasurer. Jim Woodruff Jr., also a former local chapter AUSA president, is a member of the National Council of Trustees.

PROPOSED NON-DISABILITY RETIREMENT

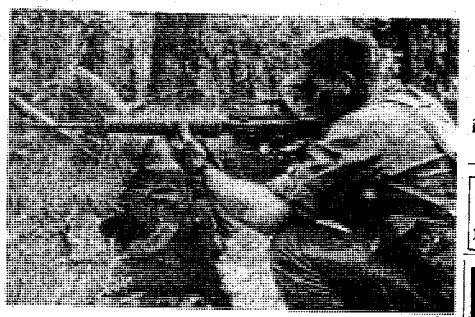
The August issue of Army magazine contains an AUSA white paper entitled "Military Compensation: Pay, Benefits and Retirement." It is an indepth analysis of the proposed DOD non-disability retirement plan. The white paper states that "the proposed system meets the test of an effective retirement plan; it is fair and attractive to the service member; it is more competitive than the plans of employers in the civilian sector while reflecting the unique requirements of military service." AUSA feels "that after a mature consideration and a clear understanding of the total compensation package, support of this proposal will be widespread." Read your Army magazine and keep abreast of this far reaching plan.

DUES TO INCREASE SEPTEMBER 1

The increase in AUSA dues to $10 per year and $26 for three years, originally scheduled for July 1, will now become effective September 1, 1973. The change in dues had been suspended during the price freeze which ended on August 12.

AUSA EXERTS INFLUENCE

Columbus Enquirer military analyst Charles Black recently wrote a news column on how AUSA exerts influence on behalf of the military; on belonging to AUSA, he said "one of the most important reasons for people with an interest in the Army and in national security — and everybody certainly should have some — to be in AUSA is that it makes them a part of something which influences major decisions." Most members are not aware of just how much prestige AUSA's voice holds nationally. A recent AUSA white paper, "Manpower for Defense," provided the background for national headquarters' response to a request from a House Armed Services subcommittee for a statement to be read in recent manpower appropriations hearings. In the statement, AUSA warned against further reductions in Army strength, and took issue with a General Accounting Office recommendation that enlistment standards be lowered, supporting the Army's goal of 70 per cent high school graduates among enlistees.



UPCOMING EVENTS

Sept. 1 — AUSA membership dues increase to $10 for a one-year membership; $26 for a three-year membership.

Sept. 22 — AUSA Picnic with Ranger, Airborne and parachute demonstrations.

Oct. 14-17 — National Convention at Washington, D.C.

Nov. 2 — AUSA sponsors free performance of U.S. Army Field Band at the Three Arts Theatre.

CALL 545-4792

Dear Bayonet,

According to the phase IV economic policy, major companies must submit a thirty day notice of intent to raise prices to the government. In my estimation the army and air force exchange service is a "major company." Why then has the price of food gone up in the cafeteria of Infantry Hall?

Just Another P-F-C

Dear Just another PFC,

Under the Phase IV ECONOMIC STABILIZATION PROGRAM, the Post Exchange is required to raise prices in its food outlets when products costs are increased by suppliers. The program calls for increases on food prices to be on a penny for penny basis. Therefore, odd penny pricing during this phase will become necessary. The Post Exchange regrets any inconvenience which may be experienced by its patrons as a result of this policy.

Dear Bayonet,

Can you tell me how many Spanish-American war veterans are alive and what their average age is? PLT

Dear PLT,

There are less than 2000 living Spanish-American War veterans out of the original 392,000 participants in the conflict that ended in 1902. The average age is 93.3, according to VA.

Dear Bayonet,

I am going to college under the GI bill, but my 36 months of education entitlements will end two months before I receive my degree. Will VA discontinue my allowance checks?

Dear JLW,

The Veterans Administration will discontinue the allowance checks at the end of the school term.

Dear Bayonet,

As an enlisted man what is the longest 'early out' I can get? SA

Dear SA,

It seems that a 90 day drop is the longest possible at the present time. You can get this if you join the National Guard or Army Reserves for 12 months. Also you can get a 90 day drop if you are going to go to school or to work with an established law enforcement agency.

MEDDAC

On August 8th, the Goetchius House was the gracious setting for the farewell luncheon given by the Meddac Wives Group of Fort Benning honoring Mrs. George S. Woodard Jr.

Mrs. Woodard was presented with a farewell gift by Meddac President Mrs. Herbert Gamber, and also a Cymbidium Orchid corsage compliments of Mr. and Mrs. James W. Lowery of Acme Florist.

The luncheon was well attended by many Meddac wives who extended their best wishes for every success in the future.

Brigadier General George S. Woodard Jr., formerly Commander of Martin Army Hospital, has assumed command of Letterman Army Medical Center, Presidio of San Francisco, California.

All-Army fast-pitch trials at Gowdy

The All Army Fast Pitch Softball Team is practicing long and hard in preparation for the up coming Interservice Tournament to be held at Gowdy Field Aug. 27-31.

According to Tim Griffin, Fort Benning's last hope for a berth on the All - Army roster, "If I get my hitting down pat, then I will do alright. In a practice game we played against Maxwell Air Force Base I did a lot better than I thought I would have. This is my first exsoftball and I'm satisfied perience with fast pitch with my performance. The team is starting to play together and getting to know each other's move. By the time the Championships arrive I feel we will be ready and a contender."

BY BOB THOMAS

When the post-level slow pitch softball playoffs get under way Monday, August 20, two teams from the 197th Inf. Bde. will be among the favorites for the title.

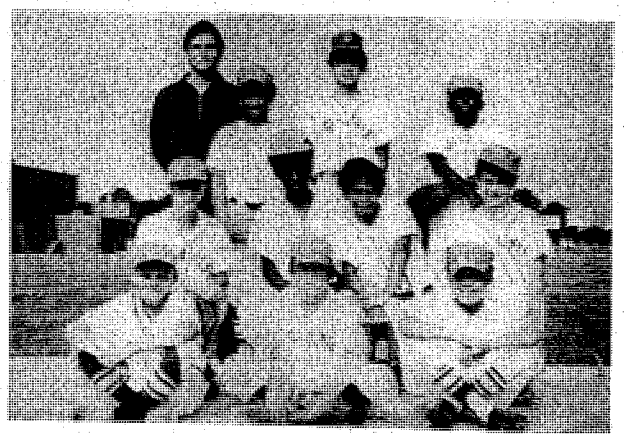
B Batt., 2nd Bn., 10th Field Arty. and Co. A, 197th Spt. Bn. will represent the "Forever Forward" brigade in the four-day series that is scheduled to take place at Gowdy Field and Main Post Field No. 1. Nine teams from various units on post are set to participate in the championships.

The "Redlegs" of B Batt. go into the tournament with an impressive 13-3 record and the 197th Inf. Bde. championship title under their belt. Co. A, 197th Spt. Bn., sporting a 13-5 record so far, turned up the bridesmaid in the 197th playoff although they were a pro-season favorite.

"I'm satisfied with our record," said Sp4 Bob Mayhew, playing manager of the Co. A team. "I feel we profited from our mistakes and have improved all season long." However, he refused to predict a victory at post level.

"There is a lot of competition at Main Post and I've heard that some of the teams are pretty good," he explained. "I do think we'll be able to hold our own. We are definitely not underdogs."

Mayhew added that he did not think the grass infield at Gowdy Field would make any difference to his players. Both 197th teams ave played all their games on the dirt infield at Essebagger Field on Kelly Hill.



Sp4 Dwight Kittinger, shortstop for B Batt., said he felt his team has a good shot at the post title. It is the first time in several years that the "Redlegs" have represented the 197th in a major sport playoff.

"We have a well balanced team," Kittinger explained. "Our defense has been good as well as our hitting."

"I think we have a better ball team," Kittinger flatly predicted. "When we went into the 117th playoffs, everyone said we would lose. Our playoff record was 3-1 and we beat every other team and won the championship." B Batt. was a darkhorse when the season began and no one gave them much of a chance at taking the 197th title. Some were surprised when they won.

Among the more serious contenders for the Fort Benning title are the 546th Med Co., defending post champions, and the 139th M.P. Co., 36th Engr. Group. The playoffs are scheduled to begin at 6 p.m. each day (Monday thru Thursday), with two games being played at each field. Admission is free.

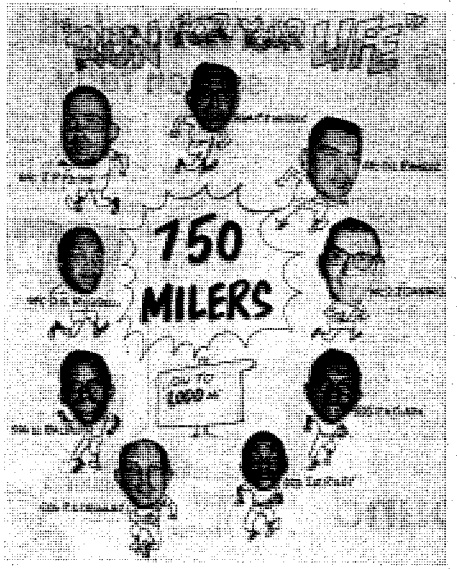
New match record

QUANTICO, Va. — A fired-up U. S. Army ten-man marksmanship team from the Army Marksmanship Training Unit, Fort Benning, grabbed the championship of the annual Interservice Rifle Team Matches here Friday from the grasp of a challenging Marine Corps squad when they fired a combined score of 4893-171X of a possible 5000 points.



Their score establishing a new Interservice Match record by two points over one set by the Marines in 1970, was 24 better than the leathernecks placed on the score board this year while a U. S. Navy team was third with 4748.

Winning the distinction of "king of the military rifle teams" over the best the other sister services could place against them, the Army champions broke a long series of interservice rifle defeats. The dethroned champions and winners for the past seven years was the top Marine squad which was defeated on their home range here Friday.

The prestige championship team match culminated a week of intense rivalry among the service teams in which many individuals turned in outstanding marksmanship results.

In the individual Interservice championship match, Marine Warrant Officer D. R. Bartlett of Quantico plucked the top laurels for his service branch with a five match aggregate of 983-37X. Defending champion was SSgt. Terry Daugherty of the Army Marksmanship Unit.

Wigger's winning ways

CAMP PERRY, Ohio — Making a clean sweep of the Smallbore Rifle Match Championships in the national competition this year for the second time in his shooting career, Maj. Lones W. Wigger, Jr., Carter, Mont., and the U. S. Army Marksmanship Training Unit, Fort Benning, Ga., grabbed the National Smallbore Rifle Position Championship August 10 with his four match aggregate of 3,154-170X to complete his domination of the annual events here. He won the Smallbore Rifle National Prone Championship two days earlier with a new record score of 6,396-545X, just nine X count short of the record set in 1970 by Capt. David Ross III of the U. S. Army.

Defending national position champion Marine Warrant Officer David I. Boyd, II, Belleville, N. J., settled for the runner up honors in the highly contested matches at two points back.

Football official clinic

The Fort Benning Sports Officials Association will conduct the officiating clinic covering Flag Football and Little League Foothall at the following times.

Tuesday — 4 September - 1830 - 2030 hours) Doughboy Stadium.

Thursday — 6 September - 1830 - 2030 hours)Doughboy Stadium.

All personnel who desire to officiate in either of the two sports must attend this clinic for certification. Apply at Bldg. No. 394 Sports Office 0800-1700 hours daily or call 545-1516-1902.

Draggin Around

Sp5 Norman Jackson, B Company, Hq. Command, almost collected the bounty on Jimmy Parker at Phenix Dragway on Wednesday the 8th. Of course, drag racing isn't horseshoes, so almost doesn't count.

Trophy winners were Jimmy Parker (he won three), Bill Cobb, SFC John Stringer, 3d Ranger Company, and Sp5 Norman Jackson. During eliminations for the money, Parker beat Bill Cobb; John Stringer beat Parker; and Norman Jackson beat Parker. On the next round Parker got the bye-run and Norman Jackson beat John Stringer. On the last round Jackson just couldn't take Parker again.

Both cars broke out (you're not supposed to run more than 1-10 of a second faster than you are dialed in on) but Parker was only .02 of a second under and Jackson was .15 of a second under. The car with the least amount of a break-out is the winner when both cars break out. So Jimmy Parker did it again.

Saturday night the 11th, Phenix Dragway hosted funny cars "Sir Wells" and "Tennessee Boll Weevil." Paul Smith drove "Sir Wells" to a three out of three win over Shirl Greer driving "Boll Weevil." His best elapsed time was 7.28 seconds. Both cars had a hard time running straight. And the tow truck of Raymond Godman's was almost lost when the big battery in the pickup bed caught on fire.

Only one bracket of "ET" cars was run. And you guessed it, Jimmy Parker won. The finals came down to Bobby Strong and Jimmy with Jimmy winning.

Ellis Milner won modified with his B Gas Vega over Carl Ogle in his E-Modified Camaro.

Hilton Holley's SS-NA Camaro managed to eliminate hard - running Sherman Adcock in his SS-P Malibu. Second place went to Butch McLoud in a SS-Q.

ROD AND GUN CLUB Notes

BY BILL KLOEB

Fishermen who like quiet and solitude when they go fishing had better stay away from Lake Eufaula this weekend. On the other hand, if you like excitement and thrills, that's the place to be.

Lake Eufaula has been selected as the site for the 1973 National Championship Races of the American Power Boat Association. The event is scheduled to begin today and run through Sunday in conjunction with the observance of the 10th Annual Lake Eufaula Festival.

Activities begin with the Miss Lake Eufaula Beauty Contest. More than 25 beauties from Georgia, Florida and Alabama will compete for the title.

Last year more than 20,000 spectators crowded the race site at Old Creek Town City Park to view a regional race. Much larger crowds are expected for the running for the national championships in the Outboard Performance Classes.

The American Power Boat Association is the largest, oldest and most prestigious of its type in the world. It was organized at the turn of the century and has membership in all of the 50 states. Boats competing in the nationals will come from all over the nation. They will be competing for the coveted Governor's Trophy and thousands of dollars in prize money.

Visitors can also expect to see displays of the latest marine equipment of all types. Plan for a time of fun in the sun. Eufaula goes all-out for this event.

August Fishing Derby

Some good-sized fish have been registered in the Rod and Gun Club August Fishing Derby. Sergeant J. R. Stearns, Headquarters Command, brought in the largest bass so far this month. His catch tipped the club scales at 6-pounds, 5-ounces. Stearns took it from King's Pond on a Lazy Ike Lure.

The Largest bream came from Hedley's Pond. SFC James Thomas, 1st Battalion, 58th Infantry, used a Busy Bee Lure to hook the 15-ounce catch.

Kings Pond was also the home of the largest catfish. SFC Angelo Floris used a catalpa worm to entice the 12-pound, 3-ounce prize.

There is still time to top these entries. Any member is eligible to enter the contest. All he or she has to do is register at the club before going fishing, catch the fish from one of the post ponds and bring it back to the club for weighing and registration.

Rod And Gun Facilities

The sales counter, incidentally, is in need of member patronage. As a matter of fact, all of the club facilities are in need of patronage. Business is usually poor during the summer months but this summer is something else. There is hardly enough business to make it worthwhile for the club to stay open.

Just in case members have forgotten, the kitchen is open and hot meals and sandwiches are served from 11 a.m. until 1 p.m. Monday through Friday. You can get cold sandwiches Saturday and Sunday.

The bar is open every day from 10 a.m. until 9 p.m. The sales counter is open from 8 a.m. until 5 p.m. Monday through Friday and from 6 a.m. until 5 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday. All types of hunting and fishing supplies and baits are available at the sales counter. Boats and electric motors can be rented.

The club trap and skeet ranges are still open from noon until 6 p.m. on Wednesday, Saturday and Sunday and the archery ranges can be used any time.

Some members may want to use the club camping ground. It has plenty of shade, his and hers latrines, and running water. There are 16 camper plug-ins located in the area. Groups wishing to pitch tents are also welcome. Or if you just want to come out for a picnic, that's fine too.

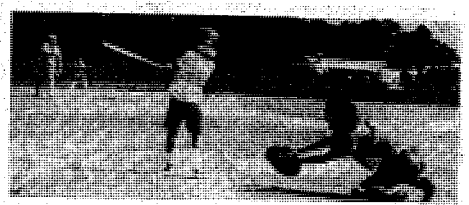
New USBA president elected



KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Maj. Gen. William A. Dietrich, U.S. Air Force, was elected President of Uniformed Services Benefit Association (USBA) at the annual membership meeting of the organization held here August 7. USBA is the country's largest non-profit association providing life insurance to officer and enlisted personnel of the armed forces.

Gen. Dietrich, who is deputy chief of staff, plans — Military Airlift Command at Scott Air Force Base, Illinois, is a native of Oklahoma City. He is a command pilot with more than 12,000 hours of flying time.

National Headquarters for USBA are in Kansas City, Missouri. Its members are insured for $1.5 billion. Since its founding in 1959, more than $20 million in claims have been paid to members and their families.

Elected to the Board of Governors were Lt. Gen. John R. Deane Jr., U.S. Army; Maj. Gen. John J. Hennessey, U.S. Army and Col. Phillips N. Gordon, Army National Guard. Re-elected as a member of the board was Herbert M. Swarthout, cofounder of USBA who serves as executive director of the organization.

Continuing on the board are Rear Adm. William S. Guest, U.S. Navy; Lt. Gen. Harry J. Lemley Jr., U.S. Army (ret.); Col. Max L. Pitney, U.S. Army (ret.); and CMSgt. Marvin L. Allbrook, U.S. Air Force (ret.).

Last Saturday it was the Dads vs. the Sons as the Minor League Athletes took on their fathers. The boys couldn't quite keep up with the handicapped cross-handed batters. The Dads took it 4-3 in four innings.

Benning's Troop 237 back from jamboree

Fort Benning Boy Scout Troop 237 returned home last week from National Jamboree-East held at Moraine State Park, Pa.

Troop 237, whose Scoutmaster is Lt. Col. (ret.) Lem Thomas, along with 45,000 other Scouts spent seven days at the Jamboree participating in dozens of activities, meeting widely-known personalities and seeing a number of special shows.

Among the famous personalities were entertainer Danny Thomas, astronaut Charles G. Fullerton, Pittsburgh Pirates slugger Willie Stargell, former Miss America Vonda Kay Van Dyke and Kentucky Fried Chicken King, Col. Harlan Sanders.

Special shows were staged by the Army's Golden Knights parachute team, the Navy's Seal parachute team and a group of civilian "Skytyping" pilots who wrote Scout symbols in the sky above the sprawling campsite.

More important to the Scouts was the opportunity to go canoeing, sailing, rowing, swimming, hiking, shooting and fishing. Additionally, thousands of Scouts competed in an eight-event athletic contest and eight individual athletic events.

Others competed in arts and science contests, including literature, painting, sculpting, music, engineering, and other disciplines.

Soldier of the Quarter once civilian salesman

"I was tired of my civilian job as a salesman, so I decided to reenlist in the Army, and make it my career," said Sgt. Frank McCord, of the 4th Stu. Bn., TSB.

It's said, 'action speaks louder than words' and in Sgt. McCord's case it does. Only one year after reenlisting into the Army on July 31, 1972, he was chosen as TSB's top Soldier of the Quarter.

Sgt. McCord is a graduate of Fort Benning's Jump School, Ranger School, and is a Jump Master. He has worked with the 101st Airborne Division and the 12th Special Forces Unit.

He presently works for the 4th Stu. Bn. Hq's TSB, as the assistant Training NCO, and Intelligence Sgt. for the Bn.

"My job as assistant training NCO consists of making up the cadre training schedules. I also handle the security clearances for the Bn., and am in charge of keeping the barracks in the Bn. secure," Sgt. McCord said.

"I enjoy working for the Army, and unless something goes wrong, plan to make a 30 year career of it," he said.

Beverage store's new hours

The Consolidated Packaged Alcoholic Beverage Store located on Ingersoll St. is expecting their hours of operation.

According to Lt. Col. Robert K. Hartley, installation club manager, the new change will provide greater shopping convenience for our customers.

Effective Aug. 27, the new hours of operaton will be: Monday, noon to 6 p.m.; Tuesday through Friday, noon to 7 p.m.; and Saturday, 11 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Warning about bad checks

Th Army and Air Force Exchange Service has issued a warning to delinquent customers who are writing bad checks.

The warning comes amid strong counteractions to what is known in banking circles as "check kiting." The term refers to the practice of writing checks and later making deposits to cover the checks prior to their clearing the bank.

Aided by automation, clearing houses and banks have become more efficient in lessening the odds of an individual succeeding in check kiting.

In the past, an individual could cash a check on Monday and not have to make an actual deposit until Wednesday or Thursday. Sorry, not anymore. If a customer cashes a check on Monday, there is a very good chance it may clear on Tuesday.

The practice can lead to suspension of check-cashing privileges. Also, repeated instances can be considered evidence of fraud. In such cases, a civilian can be prosecuted in the civil courts and a military customer is subject to court-martial.

Pathfinders

The Pathfinders are a specially trained, extremely mobile group of men whose critical mission is to direct Army aircraft and paratroopers into the safest and most effective landing zones in combat operations.

Present pathfinder training consists of 297 hours of instruction in a five-week course. They spend approximately 80 per cent of their time in the field doing practical work, and 20 per cent in the classroom. All pathfinders are Airborne qualified, and must be able to do such things as rappel from helicopters and up and down cliffs. Their equipment is some of the most advanced in the Army arsenal.

The pathfinder school at Benning is the only one of its type in the U. S. Army. It is under the direction of the Airborne Department. The students are housed and administered by the 4th Sudent Bn., The School Brigade.

The need for a soldier of the pathfinder's capabilities in Airborne and Airmobile operations became evident during WWII. When allied forces invaded Sicily on July 9, 1943, adverse weather conditions caused paratroopers dropped in the assault to land as many as 40 miles away from their intended target. On July 23, 1943, two battalions of the 82nd Airborne division were dropped on Salerno, Italy. This time the drop zones had been marked beforehand, and 80 per cent of the jumpers landed on the drop zone.

From this experience came the Pathfinders. The first school was set up in Witham England in 1924. After the war it was moved here.

Their mission, as outlined in the Pathfinder orientation is to "provide navigational assistance and to control Army aircraft in areas designated by the supported unit commander." Pathfinders select pare these zones by employing electronic and visual navigational aids, and by using demolition charges to clear minor obstacles in the drop zone. They also assist in deploying airdropped troops, supplies, and equipment.

For these reasons and many more Pathfinders have become down through the years an essential part of any airborne operation. Their symbol is a the way for bis fellow soldiers to follow.

67th monthly awards

The 67th Maint. Bn. (DS), held its monthly award ceremony Tuesday, August 7 on the battalion grounds.

The battalion has the ceremony, called "Honor Day" for the purpose of honoring outstanding officers and enlisted men within the battalion of five companies. The outstanding company during the month is awarded the battalion commander's trophy. The winning company for the month of July was the 444th Trans. Co.

Citations, diplomas, and Medals were awarded to the following individuals. A letter of commendation was presented to PFC Hallie Dwyer from the 444th Trans. Co for Soldier of the Month of July. To be selected as Soldier of the Month one must go before a board which selects the soldier on his overall appearance, his knowledge of general military subjects and his attitude.

Sp5 Lawrence R. Haley, also from the 444th was presented with the Purple Heart for wounds received in Vietnam. Sp5 Haley also received the Army Commendation medal. Letters of appreciation were presented to PFC Napoleon Hart, PFC Eddie Brown, and Pvt. Steven A. McClanahan for driving in a special project here at Ft. Benning. All are from the 444th Trans. Co.

The 44th captured the Commander's trophy from the 508th Ord. Co. for the month of July. This award goes to the unit that each month compiles the best overall pertaining to AWOLS, blood donors, AUSA memberships, monthly savings bond applications, and monthly re-enlistment rates.

"A SECRET"
- A big 170 ft. from the street to be away from the noise of traffic.
- On Lockwood Court off Buena Vista Road.
- Within walking distance of American Family Life Assurance Co. and other Macon Road offices.
- You cannot see the front of Ansley from Buena Vista Road, because these architecturally designed apartments face a large Open Court, swimming pool, Gazebo, trees, lawns and beautiful shrubbery.
- Two or three bedrooms
- Total Electric with all built-in kitchen appliances.
- You need to turn off the Buena Vista Road onto Lockwood Court to see the front entrance of Ansley Apartments. That's why it is a "Secret" you may enjoy for only $150 per month.

Verification for high school assignments

Verification for Fort Benning High School assignments for 1973-74 will be held in all the high schools in Muscogee County School District from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Aug. 28-29.

The majority of pupils enrolled in school last year have been reassigned to the same schools they attended last year for the 1973-74 school year.

Pupils who received assignments in the mail since June 1 should report to the school assigned.

High school pupils living on the Fort Benning reservation will register and attend schools in Muscogee County under an agreement between Fort Benning officials and Muscogee County School District.

Pupils must present an Approval Slip, issued by the School officer here, to the principal.

Baker High School: eleventh and twelfth grade report at 9 a.m. Aug. 29. Ninth and tenth grades report at 9 a.m., Aug. 29. Telephone number is 687-2883.

Carver High School: twelfth grade report from 9 a.m. to 10 a.m., Aug. 28; ninth grade report from 10 a.m. to 11 a.m., Aug. 29; eleventh grade report from 9 a.m. to 10 a.m., Aug. 29; and tenth grade report from 10 a.m. to 11 a.m. Aug. 29. Telephone number is 327-4557.

Columbus High School: twelfth grade report 9 a.m. Aug. 28; ninth grade report 10 a.m. Aug. 28; eleventh grade report 9 a.m. Aug. 29; and tenth grade report 10 a.m. Aug. 29. Telephone number is 324-3794.

Hardaway High School: Twelfth and eleventh grade report from 9 a.m. to noon, Aug. 28; tenth and ninth grade report from 9 a.m. to noon Aug. 29. Telephone number is 327-4522.

Jordan Vocational High School: twelfth and eleventh grade report from 9 a.m. to noon, Aug. 28, and tenth and ninth grade report from 9 a.m. to noon, Aug. 29. Telephone number is 324-3782.

Kendrick High School: eleventh and twelfth grades report 9 a.m., Aug. 28 and tenth and ninth grades report at 9 a.m. Aug. 29. Telephone number is 561-7772.

Spencer High School: twelfth and ninth grades report from 9 a.m. to noon, Aug. 28; tenth and eleventh grades report from 9 a.m. to noon, Aug. 29. Telephone number is 327-6044.

If parents and students cannot visit the school on Aug. 28-29, they must contact the school to be advised as to their assignment.

Pupils of all grades entering schools for the first time must present a birth certificate and a physical examination, including a certificate of immunization from a practicing physician or from the Health Department.

If a birth certificate is unavailable, report to the principal of the school and get permission for temporary enrollment.

All special education pupils should report to the school to which they have been assigned on Aug. 28 and 29.

In cases where additional time is required to finalize the assignments of Special Education children, parents are advised to work with the school on Aug. 30 and 31 to make certain that proper arrangements are made.

If you have further questions please call Delores Seiser, Coordinator of Special Education, 324-6480.

Handicapped pupils unable to attend school may register by telephone in the school in their neighborhood. Teachers will be assigned to teach physically handicapped children who are "homebound."

Parents should request this service from the principal of the school at the time of registration. All pupils are encouraged to bring their promotion cards when enrolling in order to save time and speed up registration.

Pupils will report to their assigned schools for classes Sept. 4.

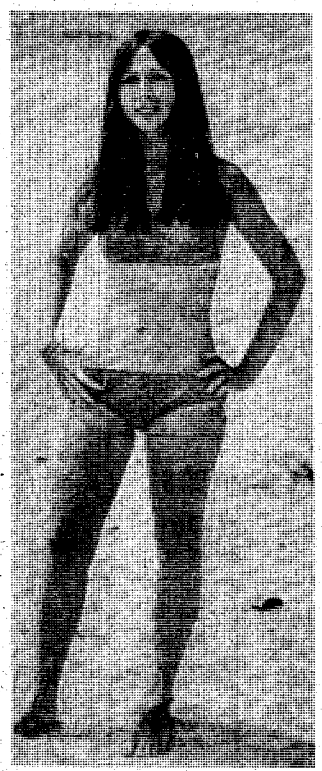
Hibbard completes PREPcourse

Sp5 John M. Hibbard, a radio repairman for the Maintenance Division, was the first soldier to successfully complete the Predischarge Education Program (PREP) at Fort Benning. He participated in a graduation ceremony at Headquarters Command last week.

"Every person who doesn't have a high school diploma should participate in this program because an education is really needed in today's Army," he said after the presentation of his diploma from Township High School, Rock Falls, Ill., and a letter of commendation for his participation in the program.

The PREP program was initiated to provide needed remedial, refresher, preparatory or review work for further academic or vocational-technical goals beyond high school, for military personnel who have been on active duty for 180 days.



Non-high school graduates can earn Carnegie units toward a high school diploma from an accredited secondary school. They can also complete the State Department of Education General Educational Development Test Battery (GED).

High school graduates can enroll in similar studies with a secondary school or college in courses which are college credit. They do not receive baccalaureate credit but prepare for work beyond the high school level.

Columbus College provides a special curriculum of classes for high school graduates who are preparing to enter a degree program. The Muscogee County School District offers General Review programs in math, English and reading comprehension.

All out crackdown on speeders with new anti-speeding device

The Military Police at Fort Benning have a new device to keep speeders from terrorizing post roads.

"In the use of radar, many motorists found that aluminum foil in their hub caps prevented radar from getting the right reading," said Staff Sergeant Robert H. Clark, post traffic section NCOIC. "Also, along with the speed gun we carry a recharger. The speed gun works up to 18 hours a day."

"There is no way speeders can use devices in or on their cars to counteract the speed gun," Clark added.

The speed gun, which has only been in operation at Benning for a week, has been in use on some Army posts for about 18 months.

Shaped like a pistol, only larger, the speed gun gives a digital mile per hour reading through a window in the back of the gun.

Since one man can operate it, he can stand off the side of the road, aim the gun at a car up to 250 meters away, pull the trigger and get the m.p.h. reading through the window. The gun can be used not only on cars, but on any moving objects.

A tuning fork is used to check the gun before using it. The fork is struck against an object and then held in front of the gun. If the gun reads 50, it's ready to catch speed demons.

And, forget fighting it's use as evidence. Under a Supreme Court ruling it can be used as evidence in a court of law.

Two guns are in operation here. They may be mounted on the back seat of a car pointing out the rear window or can be attached on the side of the MP vehicle. Since an MP can sit in his car off the side of the road, pull the trigger, and get the same results as he would if he were outside the car, it can be used in inclement weather.

"Our operation with the speed gun will start in full force Monday," Clark added. "We will mostly use the gun in school zones, housing areas, and heavily traveled business areas."

"One of the main concerns is Benning Blvd. About one third of the Fort Benning accidents occur along this road."

The military police will also use the speed gun to help drivers. Sometime in September they'll set up a check point for drivers who want to check the accuracy of their speedometer. This operation will be performed twice a year, according to Clark.

So, the military police are going to use the speed gun in a showdown with Fort Benning hot rodders.

Staff Sergeant Robert H. Clark demonstrates how simple it is to use the speed gun. The operator can tell in an instant exactly how fast a car is moving. He can even hold the reading and show it to the driver if he has any question. The speed guns will be used extensively in school zones after school starts on Monday. (Photo by Jim Swyilok)

People trouble needed for research

The U. S. Army Training and Doctrine Command is trying to find out what problems exist in Army training programs or training techniques to establish a research program for next year.

One of the best sources of input on the need for improvements and changes has always been at the training level. The people being trained, and the people doing the training, know the problems and may have the best possible solutions to the problems. The Army values experience, and is now actively seeking this experience to help improve training techniques and equipment.

Suggestions for the use of different or improved techniques will be considered by research specialists for inclusion in the research and development program for fiscal year 1975. Suggestions will be screened to prevent duplication and overlapping with current or proposed projects, and a set of priorities will be established once all the proposals are received. The Human Research Unit will help anyone who has a suggestion for a research project to prepare it properly for submission.

This is an excellent opportunity to help the Army improve its training programs with the aid of experts. For more information, contact the Human Research Unit at P. O. Box 2086, Fort Benning, Ga. 31905 or call 545-3734-545-1278.

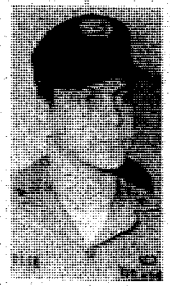
SOUND OFF!

Do you think that the Army distributes enough information on the dangers of drugs?

PFC Arie Childs
209 MP CO.

There could be more. I think that classes and seminars should be conducted as a unit. If the drug problem is to be solved everyone is going to have to help each other. I think it will take more seminars or classes to solve the problem not just posters.

E-5 Michael Outler
Head and Head Co.
4th Student Bn. TSB



Yes, I think that there is quite a bit of information distributed. I am familiar with Cpt. Fraker who used to be the airborne chaplin and is now with the Alcohol and Drug control office. I have seen him on TV and during drug abuse seminars. There has been an effort put forth by the Army using counselors and publicity to give soldiers and their families a better knowledge and understanding of the dangers of drugs.

There will never be enough information on drug abuse. I worked with addicts in Cleveland and to help these people they have to want to quit themselves or else it is a losing battle. Sometimes you get the younger people that are trying to convince or make a good showing with their parents so they come for help but they don't have any idea of quitting drugs. I think the parents have to be educated as well as the children then they will have the knowledge to talk facts and not just a bunch of fables to the children. I also think that ex-addicts are the only people that should give classes or lead seminars on drug abuse. "A male doesn't try to tell a pregnant women what it's going to be like to give birth".

E-5 Robert Moser
14 co. TSB

No, I don't think so. I think that they should go into more detail about the consequences they face after being caught and also the health aspects and effects of drugs on the body. I worked in the drug program while I was in the Marines before joining the Army. I think to be effective the program should be mandatory with monthly classes and seminars given. It should also be known what happens when you are caught and how your record affects you once you're out of the service.

A drug user's reasons for drug abuse

In spite of increased awareness, the America's drug problem is still very much the same.

What causes a man to become a drug user? A young person's curiosity, impulsiveness, and willingness to take chances, readily lead him to drugs. Many of today's youths are fascinated by mind-changing drugs, especially the new ones.

"Rebellion is also one of the reasons," says SSG Kelver Dowlen, the Drug Abuse NCO for HHC, 36th Engineer Group. "The individual is going against authority; whether it be members of their own family or superiors in their jobs."

"I started smoking marijuana out of curiosity some time ago," says an anonymous user. "I'm not going to say that marijuana is good for you, but there is no proof of any ill effects, such as tobacco and alcohol can give you."

The anonymous user went on to say, "The older generation is hypocritical. They hold a can of beer in their hand and at the same time say that marijuana is dangerous and is a threat to society."

How easy is marijuana to get? Another anonymous user says, "Well, you know if I can get as much as I want in my hometown of 350 people, I can get many times more here at Fort Benning."

PFC Roosevelt Merriweather stated, "A prime consideration for the increase of users within the ranks is availability of the drugs. It is so easy for the soldier to get any type of drug he wants."

PFC Chuck Brickman, says, "Today's society says we should prosecute the user and make an example of him in order to control abuse, but this is no way to solve a growing problem. I agree that controls are necessary, but they should be applied at the smuggler-pusher level rather than the user level."

Controls over the abuse of chemicals are necessary, but simply passing laws is rarely a final solution. The amount of public support is one part of the answer. Whether or not the substance is socially accepted is another. The third part is to teach the young how to live in a changing world and how to establish new goals when the old ones become irrelevant.

"I'm in light vehicle maintenance. And every day there's something different. That's what keeps it interesting.

"Whenever I go home, my friends are always complaining about their jobs. And some of them aren't even working!

"But I like what I do. And my wife and I like the life. The shopping's good. The schools are good. And the medical service is great. So we're making it fine."

RIGHT: Ranger Cadets in Class 04-73 participate in small-boat operations as part of the Florida Phase of Ranger training. The cadets are in the final weeks of training and will return to Fort Benning on August 28 for graduation.

ROTC

Rangers wind up Florida phase

Behind the ROTC Ranger training scene are certain personnel who play a very important role in the over-all program. They are the ROTC Evaluators, who work hand in hand with Ranger Department Cadre. Accompanying Ranger students day and night in all phases of training, they advise, counsel, and provide remedial instruction to the individual students.

Each Ranger class is organized with a six-platoon configuration. There is a platoon evaluator for each platoon and a major as company evaluator over all six platoons.

These evaluators are very essential in the ROTC Ranger training course. After volunteering from ROTC Instructor Groups from various colleges around the country, these men are carefully screened and then only the finest are selected. All are very highly academically-qualified, with most of them either having, or working toward, an advanced degree. They are also highly skilled military specialists. All of the evaluators have earned the Ranger Tab themselves and most are airborne-qualified. Several of the men are trained in Special Forces and Pathfinders. Over 50 decorations of valor have been awarded among the 16 evalustors.

The main task of the evaluator is to evaluate the performance and determine leadership potential of each ROTC cadee. After working with the Ranger students for almost 24 hours a day as they go through Ranger Training, the evaluators then must prepare a narrative of leadership on each cadet. These narratives are placed in the cadet's scholastic records and play a very important part indetermining his future military career.

By the end of the Ranger course it perhaps can be said that the Ranger Evaluators have earned their Ranger Tab a second time.

OWC OPENING TEA

You are cordially invited to attend the OWC opening Tea on Wednesday, Sept. 12, from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. at the Officers Club. The OWC Executive Board has been working hard to make this a gala event. We are looking forward to seeing all our old friends and greeting newcomers. We know that you will want to take part in one or several of the many activities that are planned for the 1973-74 season.

New "Highlights" are Quilting, Wine-Making, Weight Watchers, Picture Framing also popular ones from last year — Candlemaking, Decorative Painting, Slim N' Trim and Deco-Purse. This is just a part of the exciting agenda. Activities chairmen will have displays at the Tea for everything offered during the year and members will be able to register for the one you are interested in taking.

So — Circle This Date . . Sept. 12. Watch for more news about the many classes offered in coming weeks.

OWC Executive Board

OWC REVIEWS YEAR

Welfare projects of the Fort Benning Officers' Wives' Club are many and varied.

Heading the list of projects is the annual scholastic achievement awards to dependents of OWC members. Awards this past year totaled $3,500.

Other welfare projects for the past year and amounts include: Martin Army Hospital (including incentive award for blood donations, Red Cross coffee and cookie fund, layette materials for needy service families) $705; ACS (including Food Locker, Christmas dinner, and handicapped children) $367; Teen Club, $500; Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts, $500; The Army Distaff Foundation, Inc., $250; Infantry Museum, $246; National League of Families, $100; Metropolitan Animal Shelter, $100; Valley Schools, Inc., $100; Music Scholarship to Columbus College, $396; Flowers for Faith School, $15; Scholarships to Learning Foundation (for 2 sons of enlisted man killed in Vietnam), $150; Children, Inc., for "adoption" of American Indian boy, $144; Birthday gift for "adoptee", $18; Community Organization for Drug Abuse Control, $100; Social Service Bureau (for Christmas baskets for needy families), $50; National League of Families of American Prisoners and Missing in Southeast Asia, $100; Retarded Children in Columbus area to attend Salisbury Fair, $50; Hiring of teenagers during summer at Thrift Shop, $750; Renovation of OWC Lounge, $749; Printing of the OWC Golden Heritage Cookbook, $7,000. Donations made through May 1973 totaled $15,872.

The chief source of income for the Welfare Fund this year included the Christmas bazaar and profits from the Thrift Shop.

Many benefits are given to OWC members from the OWC's general fund. All IOBC wives are given honorary memberships (non-paying) to the OWC. Benning's Allied Officers' Wives are also given honorary memberships, and this past year were guests of the OWC at all social functions.

There were several complimentary social events for the members to include a tea in Sept. and Jan. A Golden Heritage Cookbook Coffee, and Welcome coffees were held throughout the year for all new officers' wives on post.

THRIFT SHOP COMPLEX

The Thrift Shop and Talent Tree will be CLOSED Sept. 1 and will not be opened ANY Saturday during the month of Sept.

The Thrift Shop will accept winter clothes for consignment starting Sept. 15.

BBOD

The ladies of Tactics Group, BBOD, met for coffee Aug. 8 at the home of Mrs. Steve Siegfried, Austin Loop. Plans were made to begin work on a project for the Christmas bazaar. Mrs. Robert Zion agreed to be bazaar chairman for the group. The new Thrift Shop chairman for Tactics Group will be Mrs. Steve Siegfried. A warm welcome was extended to Mrs. Eugene Lednicky and Mrs. Randall Ford.

197th Inf. BDE. 10th Field Artillery

The wife of the new executive officer of the 2nd Bn., 10th F. A. was honored at an evening coffee on Aug. 7, in the home of Mrs. Curtis Hoglan, wife of the battalion commander. Mrs. Richard Noack greeted the ladies of the battalion. Special guests of the evening were the wives of the executive officers of the other battalions in the 197th Inf. Bde., Mrs. Duane Kocky, Mrs. Myron Davis, Mrs. Harold Thorn and Mrs. Robert James.

3d Bn. 7thInf.

The ladies of the 3d Bn. 7th Inf. joined the Officers of the Bn. at Officers' Call on Aug. 10, at the home of the Bn. Commander, Lt. Col. Charles O. Arnecke Jr., on Yeager Avenue. The ladies, much to the surprise of the officers, performed a skit for their benefit pertaining to some humerous events experienced by the men during their recent FTX. The ladies, dressed in fatigues, held a Review of Troops and proceeded to imitate the men in their various field exercises. It was definitely an Officers' Call not soon to be forgotten in the 3d Bn. 7th Inf.

TSB

The 50th Company Officers' Candidate Wives' Club sponsored two Bake Sales on July 31 and Aug. 2. The baked goods were sold to the men of the 50th and 53rd OCS Companies. Both Companies were very generous and made each sale a great success. Proceeds from these sales go toward the wives' graduation luncheon to be held in mid-September.

* * *

The 50th Company Officers' Candidate Wives' Club met for their third coffee on Aug. 8 in the company's dayroom. The coffee was hosted by the wives of the first platoon.

Mrs. Gordon Hunt and Mrs. Robert Farris were the club's guests, and Mrs. Hunt gave an interesting talk on some of the customs and courtesies in military life.

Refreshments were then served followed by a short business meeting in which the progress of each of the luncheon committees was discussed.

Mrs. Farris will be taking Mrs. Hunt's place as club advisor.

MEDDAC LUNCHEON

On Aug. 8, the Goetchius House was the gracious setting for the farewell luncheon given by the MEDDAC Wives Group of Ft. Benning honoring Mrs. George S. Woodard Jr.

Brig. Gen. George S. Woodard Jr., formerly Commander of Martin Army Hospital has assumed command of letterman Army Medical Center, Presidio of San Francisco, California.

Mrs. Woodard was presented with a farewell gift by MEDDAC President Mrs. Herbert Gamber, and also a Cymbidium Orchid corsage, compliments of Mr. and Mrs. James W. Lowery of Acme Florist.

Piano, guitar lessons

The Special Services Music Center is now starting classes in Piano, Guitar and the new Bass Guitar. Classes will begin August 27 and end on October 4, 1973, from 5 to 8 p.m. Mondays and Wednesdays or Tuesdays and Thursdays.

Classrooms are located at Special Services Music Center, Bldg. No. 1684 on the corner of Vibbert and Gillespie Street. Cost for each of the six week courses is $9, which must be paid no later than August 23, 1973. The Music Center is open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday, for student practice. All military personnel and their dependents are eligible to enroll in these courses. For further information and enrollment, call Sp5 Miller at 545-1870.

Citizenship classes

A six-week citizenship class for foreign born wives of servicemen and military personnel will be given by Army Community Service. The course will begin at 10 a.m. Sept. 8 at the Welcome Center, Bldg. 83. Selected aspects of US history and government will be covered, to prepare the student for the naturalization examination. To register, telephone ACS at 545-1233 or 545-1633.

TSB reorganized

The School Brigade was reorganized on Friday, August 17th as the 8th Stu. Bn., was inactivated and merged with the 5th Stu. Bn. during ceremonies at Wigle Hall.

Lt. Col. Robert I. Farris, Commander of the 8th Stu. Bn., assumed command of the consolidated 5th Student Bn. from the departing commander, Lt. Col. Gordon M. Hunt. Lt. Col. Hunt also received the Meritorious Service Medal from Col. Allen M. Goodson, TSB commanding officer.

The decision to deactivate the 8th Bn. rather than the 5th Bn. was made because of the longer history and traditions of the 5th Bn., which has been in operation since March 23, 1884.

The 8th Stu., Bn. was organized in 1965. It began as an Officer Candidate School battalion to help supply officers for the Army buildup during the Vietnam conflict. Its OCS mission ended in 1966, when it was redesignated a Non-commissioned officer training unit.

The 5th Bn. has long been responsible for students attending Officer Candidate School. Until the 8th Bn. was inactivated as an OCS unit and took over the Non-commissioned Officer Training program, it was under the control of the 8th Bn. also. Now with the consolidation of the two units NCO training and OCS programs again fall under the banner of a single unit.

Lt. Col. Hunt, after receiving his award, moved to the podium for a short speech. He praised those who worked within the battalion while he was commander. "I want to thank all those who made this possible," he said, as he tapped the award pinned to his chest. In his speech, Lt. Col. Farris recounted some of the accomplishments of the 8th Bn., and added, "I pledge my entire efforts toward maintaining and improving one of the finest units in the U. S. Army, the 5th Student Bn."

Pat Garrett And Billy The Kid

Later, Kris escapes jail, killing two deputies and Governor Jason Robards then assigns Coburn to the chase. Garrett stalks Billy the kid across the American southwest at a time when the West, as these men knew it, was rapidly changing to make way for the Money Men from the East.

Sleuth

(PG) Laurence Olivier, a celebrated writer of detective novels, invites his wife's lover, Michael Caine, over to his home to participate in a crime, the theft of his wife's jewels.

The idea is that the husband of the unfaithful wife would get the insurance money and the lover, with the money acquired from the fence, would be able to support the wife in a manner to which she has become accustomed. It turns out, however, that that is not what Olivier has in mind for Caine at all.

Deep Thrust--The Hand of Death

(R) DEEP THRUST-THE HAND OF DEATH is the first of the kung fu features with a female star, Angela Mao.

Angela seeks revenge against Chang Yi, the man who had wronged her sister. He has a score also to settle against a crime ring. Learning the deadly Tai-Chi combat method from an elderly teacher, Chang Yi uses it to kill off his opponents.

Undaunted by Chang's deadly combat strokes, Angela, mistress of the death-blow, challenges Chang Yi in bare hand combat, to avenge her sister's honor.

Blacula

(PG) In 1780 Transylvania, African prince William Marshall and wife Vonetta McGee ask Count Dracula (Charles Macaulay) to help in ending the slave trade.

Dracula curses Marshall to a life of vampirism. In 1972 two decorators buy all the bricabrac from Dracula's castle and unwittingly turn loose Marshall who kills both of them.

When the decorators are discovered to be vampires, Dr. Talmus Rasulala and Lt. Gordon Pinsent try to avert an epidemic of modern day vampires.

Military records burned

WASHINGTON — Except for individual cases, the fire at the military record center at St. Louis shouldn't turn out to be as big a disaster as first feared. It won't affect most veterans at all.

However, with the center shut down for so long, it will delay the processing of applications for such things as Reserve retirement and replacement of lost discharge papers, even if a man's file is o.k.

None of the Army reserve's active or retired records were damaged.

Chairman Vance Hartke, D-Ind., of the Senate Veterans Affairs Committee, has promised to take whatever action is necessary in Congress to be sure a veteran doesn't lose any benefits because of the fire.

The big problem will arise when a veteran applies for service-connected disability compensation and his records are among those destroyed or damaged. The medical records in his files would normally have been needed to establish the service-connection of his disability.

However, since the files on the fifth floor where the fire raged for three days were those who served before 1960, most of those with service-connected disabilities would already have applied for compensation.

There is an added problem in that, with World War II veterans growing older, more are applying for pensions for non-service connected disabilities. Many try to bolster their cases by ifcluding all that happened to them in service, and the VA has to check whether the veteran might be entitled to service-connected compensation.

World War I pension applications have dropped off to about 100 a year.

Even if the medical records are not duplicated elsewhere in the military service, VA administrator Donald Johnson says the VA has ways of processing a veteran's claim.

Okay, Veteran:

now let's see what your country can do for you.

Civilian life can be a different kind of jungle, unless you have the training to take care of yourself.

That's the kind of training Phillips College gives you. Practical. Relevant. Thorough. There's no wasted time at Phillips. Here's what Uncle Sam will pay you per month while attending Phillips College.

NUMBER OF DEPENDENTS	None	1	2	3	Each additional

MENTAL HEALTH

Mental Health Services at Fort Benning are conducted through the psychiatry and social work services of MEDDAC. The "We Care" attitude is demonstrated by the close co-operation of these two services to provide inpatient hospital and outpatient (Mental Hygiene Consultation Service-"MHCS")., mental health services to the military, both active and retired.

The psychiatry section provides diagnostic service, care, treatment and rehabilitation for all eligible patients. It is currently staffed by three fully-trained child psychiatrist..

This is Fort Benning's "community mental health center." It is here the team concept is employed with psychiatrists, psychologists, social workers, and social work-psychology specialists as members of the team. The primary thrust of the team is the "front line work" of social work service, in consultation with psychiatry and psychology sections. This is accomplished through a field team, a dependent team and a hospital team.

The field team deals primarily with active duty personnel who show signs of emotional disturbance and assists unit commanders in the application of mental health principles:

Problems of the soldier may involve homesickness, worry about loved ones, marital and family problems or adjustment to the difficulties of training.

The dependent team is responsible for screening, referral, and counseling for retired personnel and dependents. All new dependent and retired patients are seen on a walk-in basis or may call for an appointment. When a patient comes into the clinic, information is obtained concerning the problem, the people involved, surrounding circumstances, and personal resources for solving the problem.

Social workers then assist the patient in achieving self-confidence, self-determination, and self-help. The importance of family life in the development of the individual is also recognized. Individual differences are appreciated warmth and understanding are offered, rather than criticism and judgement; the individual is considered as a whole person; and the need to understand causes and the deeper meanings of human behavior is recognized.

Depending on the needs of the patient, individual, family or group counseling may be offered. At present, a group of women with similar problems has been formed and sessions are held on a regular basis. A group for married couples is also planned.

Many problems will require family counseling and after the initial session,other members of the family are invited in for an interview. If referral is appropriate, a number of military and civilian agencies may be used, depending on the problem. Some individuals may be referred to Psychiatry Service for consultation or treatment. Other agencies frequently used are Army Community Service; JAG: and in Columbus, the Family Counseling Center and the Bradley Center.

The hospital team, located in Room C800 (544-2702) at Martin Army Hospital, works to promote good mental health for individuals and their families. Several members of the social work team have offices on the Psychiatric Ward B-4 (544-1179) and work directly with the hospitalized psychiatric patients and their families.

Another integral part of the MHCS team is the psychology section. This section offers a specialized consultation service which tries to solve problems of human ineffectiveness, maladjustment and emotional disturbance.

The majority of the psychology section's time is devoted to marital and family therapy. The contemporary view is that individual problems are often related to the larger family system. The psychology section also offers group therapy.

Such efforts are designed to help individuals who want to achieve better personal and social development and adjustment. Many individuals who seek assistance through such means are not "disturbed" or "sick", but are healthy people looking for additional ways to enhance their growth potential.

The psychology section also contributes to the development of mental health programs in the military community.

The psychiatry inpatient service attends to the diagnosis and or treatment of patients with acute, severe disease. It provides medical, psychological, and psychiatric evaluation in addition to its social work and psychology staff. It employs specialists in other areas of medicine when appropriate, and provides psychiatric consultations to all other services. Its methods of treatment include medications and therapy. Emphasis is placed on intensive, short term treatment. The goal is early return to work or administrative disposition.

The child psychiatry section provides outpatient evaluation and treatment for emotionally disturbed children and adolescents and their families. Where residential treatment is necessary, referral is made to appropriate CHAMPUS qualified centers.

Consultation is also provided to other agencies and organizations that deal with children. This includes the dependent schools, MAH pediatric service, the Children's Protective Services Committee ("Child Abuse Board"), and the Juvenile division of the PMO.

A close working relationship exists between child psychiatry and occupational therapy section because of their extensive and valuable work in perceptual-motor difficulties of children. Referrals are accepted from all quarters, or parents may call direct (545-1717/1718.

Benning House

Having a good time without "chemicals"—that's the aim of Benning House. This unique mixture of drug and alcohol rehabilitation has proven to be a success for many individuals.

There are three sections to Benning House, the Resident, Nonresident and Intake sections. Staff members in each section aim for this rehabilitation through informal relationships and rigid rules, combined with the fact that it is a self-help program.

Initial interviews and drop-ins begin in the In-take section. Besides being the first stop for all people, this section handles rap sessions at such places as the service clubs and troop units. "It's a good asset," Phoebe Dawson, Intake chief says, "because you can reach people there that you wouldn't ordinarily reach. People come in as a result."

The Nonresident section involves an eight-week program in which living in isn't necessary. The people live and work in their own homes and offices, but are involved in group and individual counseling sessions. Five sessions a week are available in this program.

The Resident section is rather unique in that alcoholics and drug addicts are usually roomed together. Newcomers to the program are escorted wherever they do during their free time until they become senior members. The two-man rooms are kept in very orderly condition.

The live-ins make Benning House their home for 60 days. They live under rigid rules which they enforce themselves. Five reisdents make up the Resident Council, and a chief acts as the governing body of the house.

"If a man can keep off (drugs or alcohol) for 60 days, that is a success," Dub Loyd, chief of the Resident section, says. "Sixty days is a short term rehabilitation, but our primary purpose is to make a man aware of himself."

The Benning House is responsible for interaction groups, seminars, exposure of the men to Alcoholics Anonymous and Narcotics Anonymous, softball games between staff members and residents and other group outings.

"These are things they haven't done in the past, at least not while they were straight," says Mike Dutcher, chief of Benning House. Almost 300 people were formally involved in the program during fiscal year 1973. The average completion rate is 34%, according to Mr. Dutcher. The age group has ranged from 13-71 years of age.

There are four basic rules: no drugs (or alcobol), no violence or threats and talk to one person at a time.

A 53-year old staff member, a former participant in the program, says it's never too late for a guy to start living again. "It's certainly been an education for me with my own children. I understand them a lot better and I've learned they're a bunch of good kids underneath."

"I'm rooming with an E-9," says 22-year-old Ladd, a resident in the program. "I like it because he knows more than me, so I can learn from him. He even turns on my radio station when he walks into our room. You form what they call a "contract" when you room with a guy your own age."

Ladd told his story of how he came to Benning House. "I had asked for help many times because I was a heroin junkie. Some places helped a little, but not nearly as much as this place. I was also a compulsive liar. I catch myself more and more now because of the program."

Seventeen-year old Danny has been in the program three weeks. "I can benefit by having an older man (alcoholic) in my room. They learn from me, that's what made me feel so good," he said. "We're all one big family here. That's what's great. There are no guarantees, but they helped me out so much that I couldn't believe it."

The 34-year-old president of the resident council, who was a participant in the program, admitted the program here is better than the one at his former post. "You learn what your problems are and how to cope with them," he said. "I roomed with a 16-year old and learned a lot from him because he was younger. All problems relate to the same thing. You can learn something from anybody; age makes no difference."

Twenty-year old David, who just started the program, has been involved with drugs since age 14. "I'm here to learn how to say no. The majority of people who have a problem bring it into the Army with them; the Army doesn't cause it," he said.

"I like to be called an abuser rather than an addict because of the social connotation," he continued. "Already I feel accepted as someone who needs help, not as a patient. I'm here because David is sick and tired of being sick and tired. Drugs stripped me of self-confidence, human warmth and kindness. I'm here to learn how to live."

Drug programs

The Army is currently waging an intensive campaign to educate soldiers, both officers and enlisted men, on the hazards of drug abuse.

Students who are assigned to The School Brigade and attending Infantry School classes receive a drug education class during their course of instruction.

The type of class depends on the people being taught. Officers in command positions are responsible for seeing that dangerous drugs are kept out of their units. In order to deal effectively with a problem of this nature, a commander must understand its background.

The Infantry Officer Advanced Course students receive a 4 hour class entitled "Leadership Actions on Contemporary Issues-Drug Usage" on drugs. The student learns the various forms of drugs most frequently abused, their harmful effects, and the steps an effective leader needs to take to counter drug abuse problems in his unit.

The class is presented by a team of experts, including a doctor, an attorney, an enforcement officer, and a member of the USAIS leadership department. Senior NCO's can encounter the same problems an officer can when dealing with soldiers and drugs, so each advanced and basic NCOES class receives the same instruction as the officer in the advanced course.

Young officers in the Infantry Officer Basic Course receive a slightly different type of course in drugs and how to combat them. They are taught to understand why people use drugs. They plan their own drug education program, and decide how they would use Army programs to rehabilitate drug abusers. IOBC students also determine what type of judicial or nonjudicial punishment to use for drug offenders.

Other courses, such as Airborne, Ranger, and Mortar, receive briefings on drug abuse from knowledgeable people in the field. These briefings, as well as the other programs, are all designed for one purpose; teaching the soldier the physical and social dangers of drug abuse.

Gary Player gives Southern Open its biggest name

There has always been something lacking at the Southern Open. Namely, a big-name golfer. The tournament did have Lee Trevino a few years back, but that was before he became a truly big name.

But this year's Southern Open will have Gary Player, one of only four golfers in history to win golf's four major titles.

Sam Wellborn, general chairman of the Southern Open, announced Player's commitment in a press conference.

"We have had several indications that Gary would be here," Wellborn said, "but his commitment became official only late yesterday (Wednesday) evening."

The Southern Open, won last year by DeWitt Weaver, will be played at Green Island Country Club Sept. 6-9.

Wellborn said that the addition of Player to the field is "what we have needed in the past — that is a superstar. He will definitely be the biggest name in golf that we've ever had before at the Southern Open."

Player has not seen much action this year on the PGA tour, because he started late after slowly recovering from an operation to remove a cyst from his left leg and from treatment of a bladder ailment.

His first PGA appearance of the year was in the Atlanta Classic in May. Although Player has said on numerous occasions, "I'm fit as a fiddle," he admitted he tried out at the PGA championship last week.

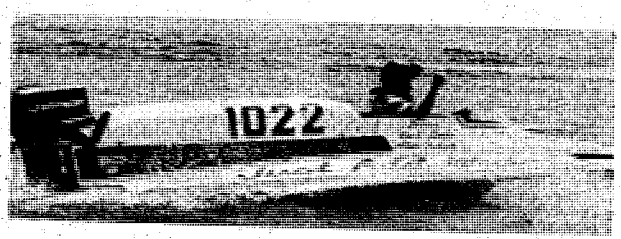
He won the PGA last year, but this time he shot a 78 on the final round to fade into the middle of the pack. So far this year he really has never been in a threatening position to win a tournament.

Last year, however, was one of his best. The 5-8, 160-pound South African won the PGA and the New Orleans Open, finished second in the Atlanta Classic and fourth in the Kemper.

He won $120,000, ranking fifth on the money list, even though he played in just 15 tournaments. Player also won the World Series of Golf, taking home an additional $50,000.

Player, who plays out of Macon (Ga.) International Golf Course, stands with Gene Sarazen, Ben Hogan and Jack Nicklaus as the only golfers who have won the four major titles.

Player won the U. S. Open in 1965; the British Open in 1959 and 1968, the PGA in 1962 and 1972 and the Masters in 1961. He has had 14 tour victories during his career.



Although his size limits his distance off the tee, he is one of the tour's more accurate drivers. He is also an exceptional putter, and he plays out of the sand better than anyone with the possible exception of Lee Trevino.

"This is the most exciting thing that has ever happened to the Southern Open," Wellborn said of Player's commitment.

"When we sat down before the year, we listed the big names that we really wanted to go after. Gary Player was one, Lee Trevino, Jack Nicklaus and Arnold Palmer were the others.

"Nicklaus, by winning the PGA, eliminated himself, and Palmer will be doing TV commentary on the World Series of Golf. That leaves only Trevino and at this time we just don't know."

The World Series of Golf, played the same time as the Southern Open, occupies the winners of the PGA, Masters (Tommy Aaron), British Open (Tom Weiskopf) and U. S. Open (Johnny Miller).

Eufaula races, world's largest

For the first time ever, the American Power Boat Association's National Championships ran over the exacting course in the lake off the shores of beautiful Old Creek Town Park just north of Eufaula. The Outboard Performance Class was thrilling and exciting for spectators, as well as the large number of pit crews that operated with split-second timing along the lakefront.

The races really went big time this summer. The Eufaula races were the largest power boat races run in the world during 1973. The crowds that attended this sports spectacular were record-breaking.

According to the festival planners, "the American Power Boat Association is the largest, oldest and most prestigious of associations of its type in the world. It was orgonized around the turn of the century and boasts of thousands of members from all 50 states."

Racing experts from all over the United States came to the Bluff City, competing for the covated Governor's Trophy, thousands of dollars in prizes and the National Championships.

All Army

Fast pitch team ready for playoffs

The All-Army team "is ready" to meet the best the other services have to offer as the Inter-service Championships close in on Fort Benning Aug. 28 thru 30.

"This year's All-Army team has put together experience, teamwork, an excellent pitching staff and a good hitting club to form a contender for this years championships," said Gerald Moore, veteran two time All-Army member.

Other returnees from former All-Army teams are George Reynolds, 1969, and Richard Eley 1972.

Eley, according to his teammates, is the type of person who trips and falls flat on his face running to first, lands on the bag and beats the throw. But luck wasn't involved in his being picked for All-Army. He was also most valuable player for the Okinawa Rangers of the Pacific league in Japan in 1972. He is a big factor in the hitting punch that the Army team has produced for the 73 championships.

Among the team's newcomers is Larry Scott, a three time participant in the World Softball Tournament. "This year's team is very strong defensively and is also able to put runs on the scoreboard when you need them. I think we've become a complete team and our spirit is always high," said Scott.

Vern Robinson, tobacco chewing coach of the All-Army team, explained "We have played a host of difficult exhibition games, from city leagues to the Georgia State Champions, and in most of the games we have showed steady pitching, good defense and hitting and a high rate of spirit and teamwork. I think we have a chance to take it all this year."

Other members of the All-Army team are: Paul Bullard, Fort McClellan; Charles Horton, Elroy Henley, John Kuhn and Jesse Sanzo Germany, Jerry Taylor, Mississippi University, ROTC instructor; Timothy Arnold, Hawaii; Rufus Rundles, Ft. Devens; Douglas Ashford, Korea; Gil Untermeyer, Ft. Sill; and Jerry Jones, Ft. Bragg.

The winner of the Inter-service Championships will progress to the World Tournament to be held in Seattle, Wash.

Game time for the Inter-service Fastpitch Softball Championships will be 1:30 p.m., 3 p.m., 5:30 p.m. and 8 p.m. from Aug. 28-30 with a playoff on Aug 31 in case of a tie.

All games will be played at Gowdy Field.

Get out to the ballpark and see an exciting softball championship involving the Marines, Navy, Air Force and the Army. Admission is free . . .

Paul Bullard, All-Army's first sacker, makes a beeline for first base after laying down an almost perfect bunt. Unfortunately for Bullard, almost only count in horseshoes as Rebels catcher, Al Sarver was able to fire the ball to first to nip him. The All-Army team will compete against All-Service teams from the Marine Corps, Navy and the Air Force during the Inter-Service Fastpitch Softball Championships to be held at Gowdy Field Aug. 28 thru the 30. Help on your equipment by calling MAIT for a visit Units. Is your equipment falling apart? Paperwork got you down? Or is your maintenance shaky? Well, you need help and the Maintenance Assistance and Instruction Team (MAIT) can help you.

MAIT, located in Bldg. 2114, has a trained staff of trained personnel to assist units in areas such as operation requirements, preventive maintenance and equipment repair, equipment condition and serviceability, proper use of publications, safety and shop operations.

"Most people believe that our job is inspecting," said Jack Price, chief, MAIT. "That's not our purpose. We assist and instruct in problem areas."

MAIT is designed to help units upgrade Army equipment material readiness standards which are necessary to carry out their assigned missions, its purpose is to provide effective and responsive assistance and instruction for units and activities who request and need the service.

You can request MAIT on either of four types of visits.

A requested visit can be arranged by requests from units requiring assistance, normally company level and parent units requesting assistance for subordinate elements.

A directed visit is directed by higher headquarters for a special organizational element, based upon a determination that assistance is needed.

The programmed visit is planned annually for all supported units and the followup visit insures equality control of the MAIT Program. Followup visits provide additonal assistance and instruction to units experiencing special material readiness problems.

At least seven calendar days notice may be required prior to a MAIT visit.

The commander of a unit to be visited and the MAIT chief decide the date the visit will take place, known areas requiring assistance, the approximate number of people to receive instruction, location and facilities where assistance will be performed.

So, if you need or require assistance and instruction, give MAIT a call at 545-3218 3159. They're there for you.

"The team Fort Benning has will give expert advice," Price added. "They

Whatja wanta Know? ask the BAYONET

CALL 545-4792

Dear Bayonet,

I joined the Army after receiving my guarantee of a unit and school. Granted, I got my unit and school just like the contract said, but I haven't worked in my MOS since getting out of school. I want to know if I can get out of the Army since I wasn't placed in my MOS? I know the contract doesn't say that I will work in it, but I really feel I was led astray by a sly recruiter, out to make his quota, instead of telling the truth about all of the Army's square pegs in round holes. Pvt.

Dear Pvt.,

It seems you already answered your own question. The contract didn't state you were guaranteed a job working in your MOS. If there is a job opening in your MOS on post you should be able to get it, so see your commander and ask about it.

Dear Bayonet,

I am a student at IOBC and am assigned to Fort Benning on TDYY orders. I was told that a new regulation limits TDYY assignments to 5 months or less. If I volunteer for both Airborne and Ranger training will I lose my TDY pay? Lt.

Dear Lt.,

Personnel assigned to one location for 20 weeks or more are considered on PCS status. So with the total of 21 weeks for all the training, you would lose your TDY pay. For more information contact the travel section of Finance.

Dear Bayonet,

My August compensation check from the Veterans Administration for a 30 per cent peacetime service connected disability was for the same amount as my buddy's for a 30 per cent wartime service connected disability. In the past, his checks were always larger. Why did we receive the same amount in August? TAH

Dear TAH,

In 1972, Public Law 92-328 increased peacetime rates to levels of wartime rates, effective with checks mailed in August 1973.

Dear Bayonet,

I recently returned to the states after a tour of duty in Korea. I applied for reassignment there but was turned down. Why is it I can't do another tour of duty there: BGR

Dear BGR,

An Army regulation states that after a tour in a foreign country a soldier must serve 18 or more months before he can qualify for reassignment to Korea.

ROD AND GUN CLUB Notes

BY BILL KLOEB

As a transplanted Yankee from Ohio, I have never had any doubts of the superiority of the Georgia climate. I've also had many occasions to appreciate the abundance of game and fish in the state I picked as home. But I never really appreciated the natural resources of the state and what a fisherman's haven the state is until I chanced to read a brochure published by the Georgia Department of Fish and Wildlife.

According to the brochure, the state has 17 major reservoirs covering more than 300,000 acres of land. Eighteen major warm water streams have their source in Georgia or flow more than 2,500 miles through the state. Tributaries of these streams make up more than 700 miles of productive trout streams in north Georgia.

More than 60,000 public or privately owned smaller lakes have been located and catalogued.

These inland lakes and streams alone make Georgia a fisherman's paradise, but the state also has a bonus in the Atlantic Coast. The irregularities of the Georgia coastline provide approximately 1,000 miles of salt water fishing, and hundreds of docks and warves for salt water party and charter deep water fishing.

One of the greatest assets to fishing in Georgia is the variety in types of fishing and game species. The streams in North Georgia in the Southern Appalachian and Blue Ridge Mountains support all three species of mountain trout. These fish exist in naturally reproducing populations with a good supplemental stocking program to offset fishing pressure. Small mouth and Coosa bass fill in the marginal waters as you move south.

Middle Georgia is the area of large reservoirs, slow moving streams, and small lakes. Further south, stream fishing becomes more prevalent. The southern part of the state is known for its black water streams that are rarely muddy. These streams end in a brackish water area along the coasts, where there is a blending of salt and fresh water fishing.

Fishing along the coast is seasonal and depends a lot on tides and climatic conditions. The irregular coastline with inland waterways, sounds and close-in islands is a highly productive area for sports fishermen. Spanish mackerel, king mackerel, blue fish, dolphin, bonita and sail fish are the species most often found during the summer months. Channel bass, speckled trout and striped bass are the mainstay for late fall, winter and spring fishing.

From a geographic standpoint a fisherman can't lose. There is some kind of water and some kind of good fishing wherever he is located in the state. The type fishing and the species he wants are really the main factors he has to consider.

The principal game fish in the state are the large mouth bass, crappie, bluegill, redear and redbreast sunfish, white bass and chain pickerel. Trout, walleye and smallmouth bass fishing is popular in the northern parts of the state.

The large mouth bass is the unquestioned king of Georgia game fish. The species is plentiful throughout the state and grows to trophy sizes. The world's record bass of this species came from Georgia waters back in 1932.

Other types of fish are just as plentiful in the state. Fish and Game authorities and other responsible agencies have taken positive action to arrest water pollution, and the state has a highly successful hatchery program that provides various types of game fish for stocking new impoundments or balancing the fish population in the older lakes and waterways.

The creature comforts of fishermen have also been considered in the development of fishing areas. Hotels, motels, trailer parks and camping sites have been developed in just about all of the fishing areas, except possibly a few of the trout streams in the more remote areas in the northern part of the state. Fishermen from all over the country look forward to a fishing vacation in Georgia. These fishing areas and related activities have become one of the prime sources of revenue for the state.

You can get all kinds of information on recreation facilities from the Georgia Welcome Center located on Victory Drive. It's just great but it does pose problems. I start two weeks leave Monday and can't decide where to go or what to do.

SGM Frank Norbury, representing the U. S. Army and the Fort Benning Sport Parachute Club, parachuted into the Talledega speedway carrying the American Flay for the flag raising ceremony and the playing of the National Anthem, signalling the start of the Talledega "500." Upon landing in grandstand center, SGM Norbury, although sustaining a slight ankle injury, presented the National Colors to the Grand Marshal, Bart Starr, a former NFL all pro and star quarterback of the Green Bay Packers. Starr then presented the colors to a local boy scout troop for the actual flag raising. Accompanying SGM Norbury on the jump was LTC Bob Lundy, assigned to the Alabama National Guard as a special forces advisor. Bob is the brother of LTC Don Lundy, commander of the airborne battalion. TSB, SGM Norbury and LTC Lundy, between them, have amassed a total of well over 3,000 parachute jumps. SGM Norbury is assigned to the Directorate of Plans and Training.

TSB ladies split pair with Commander Realty

The School Brigade ladies softball team closed out their season in a tournament held on Fri., August 17, and Sat., August 18, at Rigdon Park.

TSB started slowly, losing their first game to Commander Realty 8-3, despite home runs by Tammy Thompson and Constance Pierce. Errors were the big problem for TSB, as hits which should have been singles for Commander Realty squirted through the outfield for extra bases.

Immediately after that disastrous game the TSB team played a second game against the Edgewood ladies team and walloped them 24-5.

TSB's bats cracked out 19 hits, including 4 home runs. Dot Dowdell hit two curcuit blasts, and drove in 6 runs. Eddie Acord hit a home run and drove in four runs, and Constance Pierce got 4 hits, including a homer, to drive in 4 more runs.

In their final game, TSB missed playing in the tournament finals by just one run. TSB was down 11-4 against the Dawson ladies' team until the final inning, when they scored 6 runs to lose a heartbreaker 11-10.

ACS holds 6th Day Camp

Army Community Services sponsored its sixth consecutive day camp for special children at Camp Hideaway from August 6-17. The 20 children who participated swam, bowled, went on field trips, picnics and worked with arts and crafts.

Col. Kendrick B. Barlow, representing Maj. Gen. Thomas M. Tarpley, Fort Benning commander, presented certificates of completion to the children on their last day. Some 17 volunteers, including seven Fort Benning teenagers, worked with the children for the duration of the camp.

"Without this program, he might never have experienced being in the water in a pool," said Spc4 Gary Bunch, from ACS, of a young boy who has no muscle control. "The other children took him into the water and helped him every day," he said.

Ten receive awards

Nine men received 500-mile "Run for Your Life" awards in ceremonies held at Infantry Hall Aug. 17, 1973. Presenting the certificates of achievement was Col. Paul H. Mueller Jr., Deputy Assistant Commandant, U. S. Army Infantry School, Fort Benning.

Among those receiving awards were Maj. Mark Ponzillo Jr., Capt. James W. Bond, Capt. Elroy L. Garcia, 1st Lt. Hamilton M. Henson Jr., SSgt. Frank Eaves and SSgt. George F. Ledford, all from the Airborne Department.

Others who received the 500 mile patch were Lt. Col. Robert J. Bryant, chief of the Optometry Section, MEDDAC; Canadian Army Maj. Richard M. MacIntosh, Laison Officer to the Infantry School; and Capt. Eugene J. Hanratty III, 12th Company, 1st Student Battalion.

67th bowling leagues

The 67th Maint. Bn. men's bowling league met again last Monday night to test their skills in bowling.

There are two teams for each of the five companies in the 67th Maint. Bn., making a total of ten teams. Every Monday night at 7 p.m. the teams from the Battalion meet at the Kelley Hill Bowling Center for competition.

Last year the 583rd Trans. Co., coached by Cpt. Ron Meinhart, took the winner's trophy and are leading the league with their teams again this year. SSG Bobby Williams, the league president, from the 583rd Trans. Co., rolled a 234 to chalk up another win for the 532rd.

If you are interested in bowling, contact SSG Bobby Williams at 141-7314 or Cpt. Robert Russell at 545 6201 to get in on the action.

Triumph need we say more?)

The twin carburetor, long stroke 2.5-litre six-cylinder engine give the TR6 its special character. A throaty vroom from twin tailpipes fades to a gentle murmur as the TR6 lopes along at any legal cruising speed. With massive torque (142 pound-feet at 3000 rpm, its the middle of the speed range where you use it often, the TR6 has a satisfying excess of power. But you'll rev to its 5,500 rpm redline just for the fun of using its light and quick gearbox.

The Triumph Spitfire has everything a true sportscar should have. 4 speed synchromesh gearbox, independent suspension, rack & pinion steering, full instrumentation...

And it has everything a true economy car should have. Great gas mileage (27 mpg.), gets into the tightest parking spaces...And best of all you get all of this, with sports car performance, at the low Spitfire price.

Drug abuse hypocrites

By Matthew St. Clair

After spending eight years in the Army as both an enlisted medic and a Special Forces Officer (and falling victim to the latest RIF), I feel it is time to voice my opinion to the people of this post on the subject of drugs as they relate to the military.

Having been stationed in Europe, Asia and Central America, as well as the United States during my all too short career, I have been exposed to any and every illicit drug. Opium, grass, smack, acid, speed, alcohol and downers. You name it, I've seen it. I've seen your sons and daughters, fathers and mothers, girlfriends and boyfriends strung out, blown away, drunk, spaced out, and generally out of their minds. All of this was caused by the abuse of some drugs.

I've heard your mothers and fathers, husbands and wives, moan about how they just don't understand the drug problem we have today with the kids. They complain while they wash down the morning "diet pill" with that third cup of coffee followed by that fifth cigarette of the day, or while they wash down that first tranquilizer of the day with a shot of 100 proof "mouth wash." I've heard dear old dad, sitting in the club having his customary three can "lunch," threatening to beat the hell out of the kids if he ever catches them messing around with drugs. Then later I've sat down with his kids for a rap over a little wine and a joint, and heard them moan about their hypocrite parents who pop pills, drink excessive quantities of alcohol and coffee, and smoke two packs of cigarettes; all while preaching to their kids with a "don't do as I do, but do as I say" attitude. Then I have to wonder why parents don't realize that their kids are exactly what their parents make them, either by example or by lack of it.

To be frank about the subject, I'm tired of hearing the hue and cry, and threats about drugs. The drugs are not the problem, it is the people themselves, and it seems that the people in this country have the perfect solution to every problem, "pass a law." Strange as it may seem, we have plenty of laws to cover almost everything. A law is at best an abstract thing covering an abstract concept. Unfortunately drug abuse is neither abstract nor a concept, it is a real life problem dealing with real life people, in a real life world. That junkie you want to hang, dear old dad, is a human being, someone's son or daughter, maybe even your own.

At this point I could cover old ground and describe for you all the drugs that are commonly abused today, but it's already been done a thousand times, and the list goes on and on. Any drug can be abused, and most drugs are, often by people who would never consider themselves drug abusers.

Try and convince that man or woman drinking every day that he or she is abusing a drug, and listen to the static you get. "I'm not an alcoholic." "I just drink to pass the time." "I just drink for the pleasure of drinking." Excuses. Everyone has an excuse.

Try and convince that dude doing smack he's got a problem, and listen to the static you get. "Aw man, I'm cool, I only shoot up every couple of days." "Dig man, I can handle it, I'm only chipping." "Get off my back, man, it's my life and I'll do what I want to with it." Right on, dude, more excuses, but then everyone has an excuse.

OK, I've had my say, and I'm sure there are those who will agree, those who will disagree, and those who just don't give a damn one way or the other. All I can say is fine; it's your life, live it the way you want. But before you go condemning anyone else in this world for what he does, examine your own life first.

Post schools result of bad roads

The Dependents' Schools were founded in January 1921 in response to requests from parents. They did not want their children to make the trip to Columbus by bus, since roads in those days were very bad. There were sixty children and three teachers.

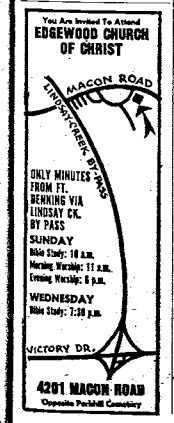
The School occupied a mess hall which had been converted into classrooms and which was used as a night school for enlisted men. The building was located east of Sigerfoos Road which had a large sales store on the west. As the number of pupils increased, the school overflowed into the sales store.

The rooms of the original school building were very long and narrow, and had stoves in the center. The desks were man-sized, not child-sized, and were not adjustable like the modern desks used by pupils today.

The funds for the maintenance of the school were derived from tuition fees, contributions from different organizations and proceeds from ball games, dances and other activities. This gave every person on the Post the opportunity to contribute in some way to the welfare of the school. In recent years, the Department of Health, Education and Welfare provides the funds for the schools' operations and under Public Law 815 the capital outlay program is funded. Attendance at Post Schools is limited by law to dependents of personnel residing on the military reservation.

On Aug. 27, more than 50 years after their beginnings in a single building, the seven Dependents' Schools will open their doors for the 1973-74 school year. More than 3200 children will be in attendance with 121 classroom teachers and 27 special area teachers, according to Dr. Joseph T. Conforti, Superintendent of the Fort Benning Dependents' Schools.

Each of the seven Dependents' Schools on Post is named for some famous infantryman. Faith and Wilson Schools are named in memory of Medal of Honor recipients, LTC Don C. Faith and PFC Richard G. Wilson.



Wilbur, Loyd, White, McBride and Dexter Schools are named in memory of Distinguished Service Cross recipients, 2LT William H. Wilbur, Jr., 2LT Frank R. Loyd, Jr., 2LT Edward A. White, CPT Morris R. McBride and MAJ Herbert J. Dexter.

The fact that the schools are fully accredited by the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools and by the Georgia Accrediting Commission attests to the high standards maintained in the system.

In addition to the basic elementary subjects, the Post Schools offer a variety of subjects ranging from art to music, physical education, home living and industrial arts. An important resource for each school is a system of seven libraries, which provides a great variety of learning experiences for the pupils.

In the areas of specialized teaching and assistance for the pupils, each school will have a full-time reading specialist to assist in a diagnostic reading program, and two speech therapists will assist in a speech improvement program. Special classes for the educable mentally retarded are provided, and a staff of four registered nurses for nursing care and health instruction is maintained.

Scoring in the streets

Hey, man, how'd you like to score some outa sight THC, chocolate mesc, or coke? Or if you're into chemicals how about a lid of Columbian Red for $20 or Afhanistan Black Hash for $25 a gram?

Soldiers probably hear this kind of rap (put a c in front of the r and you've really got what it is) more often than anyone else. Why? For a start, short hair is considered by some people to be a sure sign of being straight or an easy take, and soldiers aren't known for having long, flowing locks so they're like flies in a bowl of milk. Ever walk out of a "freak" store in town and get offered everything from marijuana to imported Turkish smack? Freaks don't usually get the same treatment since they're supposed to know better than to deal with strangers. That's not always the case either.

Copping anything that can be hit up, snorted, smoked, or popped to show where your head's at is something soldiers do to say, "Listen, man, just cause I look straight doesn't mean I am."

Want to meet some local people or the heads in your company? Buy a four way hit of, say, "grape mescaline" and you'll find three people to help you split. Just hope that some of your new found friends aren't undercover or you'll have more associates than you need at the local penal institution. Or the grape mescaline may be grape koolaid. Whatever the reason for scoring, you want to get your money's worth, right? Well, scoring around here is like contributing to a lost cause, because nine out of ten times you won't get half of what you thought you were getting. For your information here's a run down on what's being sold in the streets.

PURE THC:

If the dealer's pulling a refrigrator unit behind him that's vacuum sealed at 19 degrees F. and the substance is dark and oily, you can be reasonably assured that it's THC. How much a hit? Considering it cost the government a quarter of a million dollars to produce one-third of an ounce, I'd say it would cost a good bit. Street THC breaks down like this:

If it's white crystal or granule going for approximately $110-900 an ounce, or $40-50 a gram, it's probably the real thing. "Cocaine" sold in the following ways is not as yet an identifiable drug: Crude brown paste, green and white beads in clear capsule or white powder in a clear capsule.

This should give you an idea of what's happening with the street drugs to keep you from being totally ripped off.

If you buy from the street and find out that you have been taken, I hope that it's only the money that you lose. Not too long ago, "black acid" was being sold on the streets. Some kids took it on someone's word that it was just acid, but they found out they got some stuff like strychnine, belladonna and speed thrown in for free. Two of them are still in mental institutions.

If you've got something you're not sure of, check it out. Call 545-5774 - 1884-7714 and we'll help you identify it. Better to take it on good faith, than on blind faith.

YOU'RE RIGHT, HE DOES HAVE CAVITIES IN THE PENTAGON'S WE MADE FOR HIM LAST WEEK.

Smoking

A disease in our society

Smoking is a communicable disease the non-smoker should be protected from. It seems society has offered us shields against about every nuisance there is except for this one. Since smoking is a personal addiction associated with other addictions such as alcohol and drugs, it shouldn't be permitted during working hours in any facility.

Windowless buildings with central air conditioning many times do not really have very good circulation. Infantry Hall is a good example of this problem. The first thing you get a whiff of when you enter is cigarette smoke. This probably isn't too recognizable to the smoker, because he is so accustomed to the smell.

Cigarette smoke is known to aggravate allergies some people have. One case that received nationwide publicity was that of singer Vikki Carr coming down with a sore throat. Vikki was informed she was allergic to cigarette smoke and that the smoke in a nightclub was more than enough to cause her a great deal of pain and affect her throat badly. As a result of this, she has to ask her audiences to refrain from smoking during her performances.

Cigarette smoke has been proved to affect the children of smokers and cause premature births of babies. A non-smoker in a room filled with smoke inhales enough tobacco by-products in a day's time to equal four or five cigarettes. Enough evidence of the hazards of tobacco has been discovered in the recent past to justify some type of controls on its use in public places. Some steps that have been taken are the banning of cigarette smoking on public buses in New York City, and closer to home in Atlanta.

A nationwide motel chain is practicing discrimination at two of its facilities, one in Los Angeles, the other in Indianapolis. They are boasting about their unusual form of segregation. Nothing racial involved, just separating the smokers from the non-smokers. In Oakland, California smoking has been banned in the city's big department stores as a result of a smoking ordinance approved by the City Council. One supporter urged it to be extended to food markets and restaurants as well.

Other countries are taking steps in this area. In Jerusalem, Health Minister Victor Shemtov introduced a bill in Parliament to limit cigarette and other tobacco advertising. He said he began his anti-smoking campaign by kicking the habit himself.

The Army should consider some anti-smoking moves too. Since PT and good health are such important parts of the Army's program, some steps to curb this disease would be in order. Thanks would come from non-smokers as well as smokers from throughout the Army if such a measure were taken.

Marauders 27th reunion

The Infantry School's Ranger Department will host the 27th Reunion of the Merrill's Marauders Association, Aug. 30-Sept. 1.

While here the Marauder veterans and their families will see an Airborne Ranger demonstration, and will visit Camp Darby to observe Ranger training. A Ranger Department Dining-In, a Reunion Party, and attendance at the graduation exercises for ROTC cadets completing Ranger training are also on the agenda for the convention.

Merrill's Marauders, officially designated the 475th Infantry, gained fame in the China-Burma-India Theater of Operations during World War II. Commanded by Brig. Gen. Frank D. Merrill, they fought its way through the mountain jungles of Burma to capture the airstrip at Myitkyina in one of the most difficult and hazardous missions of the war.

MILITARY MARRIAGES

"Published each Friday by the R. W. Page Corporation, Columbus, Ga., a private firm in no way connected with the Department of Army. Opinions expressed by the publisher and writers herein are their own and are not to be considered an official expression by the Department of the Army. The appearance of advertisements in the publication does not constitute endorsement by the Department of the Army of the products or services advertised."

An example of professionalism

A promotion is a fairly common story in the U.S. Army today, one that could hardly be considered newsworthy.

Professionalism, on the other hand, is very much in the news, and a promotion that is the direct result of a professional attitude is newsworthy. Such is the case of 1st Sgt. William McGinty, HHC, 197th Inf. Bde.

Recently promoted to his present rank, McGinty has been serving in the 197th as a first sergeant for nearly two years, a job that is generally considered one of the toughest the military has to offer. In McGinty's case the difficulty was amplified, since HHC, 197th Inf. Bde. is the largest company in the "Forever Forward" brigade.

"You know you can depend on him for help when you need it," stated PFC Roland Hall, who has been in HHC, 197th Inf. Bde. for 12 months. "As long as I've been in the Army, I've never met a better 'top'."

"You have to show a man like that a lot of respect," Hall added. "He is just a great leader."

McGinty has earned somewhat of a reputation in the 197th. When he was assigned here over two years ago, he was a platoon sergeant in HHC, 1st Bn., 29th Inf. Before long he was that unit's first sergeant and within a matter of months he was picked to be 'top' of the 197th's headquarters company.

"He always shows a deep concern for his men," said Sp4 Gerald Schroeder. "Time and again I've seen him stick up for soldiers to make sure they get a fair shake."

"I've talked to a lot of first sergeants," explained Sp4 Teryl Porter, "and he is the best by far. He will do anything he can to help you out." Porter has been assigned to HHC, 197th for 16 months.

"Fair is the one word that describes him," stated PFC Robert Sapp. "When a soldier has a problem, he always assumes the man is right until it is proven otherwise."

Sgt. Larry Pence is the personnel specialist NCO of HHC, 197th Inf. Bde. Because of his job, Pence works close to McGinty every day of the week.

"He is one of the best first sergeants I've ever worked for," stated Pence. "Because he treats his men with respect, they respect him. There isn't a man in this company that wouldn't follow him, anywhere. He's the type of leader that you just can't help looking up to."

Highest on Post

The 478th Aviation Company (Heavy Helicopter) believes it has the highest aviator experience of any aviation unit at Fort Benning.

The average "years rated" for "Flying Crane" pilots is 7, and the average flight time is 1885 hours. The CH54 Flying Cranes are the most sophisticated aircraft at Fort Benning, and are capable of lifting over 18,000 pounds.

Military travelers warned

WASHINGTON (ANF) — Military travelers on official government business are warned not to use the airlines reduced leave fare rates. Abuse of the privilege may result in disciplinary action by their unit commanders as well as payment to the airlines for the balance legally due.

Currently the airlines are making periodic checks with the military to establish the authenticity of the statement, signed by the individual, indicating he was on leave and traveling at his own expense.

Aviator's short fielder Henry Mateo takes a rip at a pitch during action in the finals of the USAIC Championship held at Gowdy Field Aug. 20-24. The big hats of the Aviators drove in a total of 23 runs in the final two games to give the wingmen the post championship over second place 197 Support Co.

Aviators strafe 197th for post softball crown

By JIM HOWARD

Robert Kirce led the hitting attack and Penn Papini pitched 6-hit ball in the finals as the 121st Aviation Co. bombarded previously unbeaten A Co., 197th Support Bn. 10-5 and 13-3 to become the 1973 USAIC Post Champions.

The Aviators trotted on to Gowdy Field for the finals at a disadvantage, as they already had one loss recorded in the tourney while A. Co. had a clean slate. The stage was set as the 197th support only had to win one out of the two games to take the championship in the double elimination tournament.

The aviators showed they were not to be underestimated as they smothered the 197th 10-5 in the first game to force the tie breaking game to be played.

It was do or die in the last game for both teams.

The 197th drew first blood, scoring their first run in the first inning on a single by George Harrison and a costly error by the wingman's third baseman.

In the second, the Support Bn. again marched down the basepaths on singles by Bob Mayhew, Steve Frasier and Eddie Fields but could only manage to produce a lone run as Pancho Tirado grounded out to end the inning.

The tide turned in the bottom of the fourth, as back to back singles by the Aviators' Kirce and Everett Stull, followed by three support errors, enabled the airmen to go on top 5-3.

The legman's last run came in the top of the fifth on back to back singles by Steve Frasier and Steve Smith to close the gap to two runs, but from there on it was all aviation. They massed an attack on the Infantry Unit that included five more runs in the fifth and three runs in the sixth inning, on nine hits including two homeruns by Kirce, while the Airmen's pitcher Penn Papini cracked down on the Infantry to claim the victory.

"We had already lost one game but I knew that our hitting would win it for us," said Aviator's standout Robert Kirce. Among Kirce's achievements for the 2 championship games were 3 homeruns, a triple, 2 doubles and a single for a total of seven hits in eight trips to the plate. He also collected 10 of the 23 aviation runs in the final two games.

Gen. Tarpley proclaims September as ACS month

September has been proclaimed Army Community Service Month by Maj. Gen. Thomas M. Tarpley, Fort Benning commander.

The proclamation recognizes ACS's eight years of services, including information, assistance and guidance to military personnel. It states that "Army Community Service aids commanders and staff in solving problems, increases performance and career satisfaction of servicemen, and enhances the quality of living at Fort Benning . . ."

It also urges the support of ACS through the volunteer program and goods to aid servicemen in emergency situations. Included in the 12 ACS committees are the linen closet, the food locker, citizenship classes and the Big Brother program.

The September activities include the Neighborhood Association Picnic (Sept. 1), ACS volunteer-staff coffee (Sept. 5), Fall ACS citizenship class (Sept. 8), ACS Sunday (Sept. 9), special children's Saturday Funtime (Sept. 15), Volunteer Awards Ceremony (21 Sept.) and the Big Brothers outing (Sept. 22.)

18th century weaponry mastered by post soldier

Did you ever get the feeling you should have been born 200 years ago? I'm sure SSgt Jack Fields of the 609th Transportation Company has had that feeling. George Washington could probably have used him at Yorktown or Andrew Jackson at the Battle of New Orleans. With a flintlock or a caplock rifle in his hands he's something to reckon with. He's the current Tennessee Gun Collectors' Association champion caplock rifle man.

For those of you who aren't familiar with 18th century weaponry, a caplock rifle is a musket made of wood and iron that uses a small percussion cap under the hammer to set off the main charge of gunpowder on the other end of a small aperture in the barrel.

Flintlock rifles differ only in the priming charge. In a flintlock a flint attached to the hammer sends a spark onto the small priming charge of gunpowder, which in turn ignites the main charge.

Both caplocks and flintlocks are muzzle - loaded. The main charge, of course black gunpowder, is poured into the end of the barrel, followed by either a minieball or a patch and round ball (a round ball is rammed into the barrel with a patch or piece of coarse cloth around it to insure a tight fit and truer aim.)

SSgt Fields uses two caplock rifles and one flintlock rifle he made himself for contests. Whether his willingness to set off a gunpowder charge separated from his head by only the product of his own two hands indicates a supreme self confidence, iron guts, or sheer idiocy is debatable. At any rate, he says he's never had a misfire from one of his rifles and he doesn't anticipate one.

DO YOU always go along with your crowd? Too many individuals are willing to lose their identity in a group and find themselves caught up in trouble like taking drugs. Then, when in too deep they realize it's not the group, but the individual who must pay.

524th completes Florida canoe trip

Seven clerks from the Company of the 36th Engr. Gp. have completed a week-long adventure training trip down the Chattahoochee River to Appalachicola, Florida.

The clerks became the first group from Fort Benning to complete the 240-mile trip in canoes without the aid of a power boat. Sp5 Nathan Privette said, "A group of Rangers left on the same morning we did and also completed the trip, but they had a power boat to pull them when they got tired of paddling.

The crew was composed of SSgt. Canute Tinney, Sp5s Warren Dillard, Nathan Privette, Bill Strout, Sp4 Garry Troyer, PFC Ronald Hilman and Pvt. John Walters. Planning for the trip started months prior to their departure.

"Sp4 Troyer and myself had planned to go earlier this year but had to cancel the trip," stated Sp5 Privette. "I got the idea from trips we used to go on at my last duty station in Hawaii. We used to take 15-mile trips for fun, so I thought it would be fun to do the same thing here on a larger scale."

Preparations for the trip included contacting the Coast Guard and police and working out a plan for the crew to stop at night. In addition, since most of them were inexperienced at canoeing, they practiced with the canoes on the Upatoi two weeks prior to their departure.

"We practiced paddling and maneuvering the canoes to get the feel of things. We even swamped a few so we could get experience, should we have such an emergency," said Strout.

Pvt. John "Rocks" Walters, so named because he was the only one who couldn't swim, said he was never worried about the trip. "I knew they would take care of me, and we were life vests all the time."

Every morning the men would get up at daybreak, have a light breakfast and start down river. Some days the men traveled further than 30 miles before they would stop in the evening to set up camp.

"The paddling was hard work, but it wasn't all that bad," stated PFC Walters. "We were pretty lucky, I guess, that it didn't rain, although it was awfully hot."

One of the highlights of the trip was the break the men got from their regular diet of C-rations when SSgt. Tinney caught some catfish. According to the crew, one of the fish weighed about 15 pounds and made a nice meal.

In reflecting on the week long trip, Sp5 Strout said, "It was a great experience and we really got to know each other better. The adventure training trip gave us a chance to break away from the daily routine to do something new." Although the week was strenuous, the seven clerks felt that given the chance, they would probably go again.

Is the Army helpful in solving family problems?

Sp5 Sidney Macarages
B-2 Martin Army Hospital

I wouldn't know. I don't ask for help, I take care of my family problems myself . . .

E-2 Lionel Bell
C. Co. 1-58th Inf. 197th

I think joining the Army and not having to put out large hospital bills since my wife has been sick has helped me greatly. Also any time I need off to take care of problems that arise I get it. The chain of command has always helped in solving difficult personal problems.

E-7 Francis McDonald
324th Personel Service Co.

I think NCOs go out of their way to help younger EM that have personal problems. I try to take an active interest by tryirig first to help him solve his problem. If I can't satisfactorily solve it I'll take the man to the next in line in the chain of command. But here is where a big problem lies, you don't stop here, you make sure that the problem has been solved. If it hasn't, try to find some way to get results.

I think the main problem is that you can't get them to confide in you.

E-6 David Levine
D. Co. Headquarters Co.

At times, yes, but other times I think they interfere with your domestic life. My wife received a DR and instead of trying to help they tried to give me a Article 15. It was dropped after I talked to the company commander. The Co. helps me to solve my problems with the chain of command also helping out.

E 7 William Skinner
18th Replacement Co.

Yes. The Army has taken great strides with the Army Community Service. I think more now than ever the Army is trying to help the men by assisting in all family problems and doing a good job at it.

E-4 Floyd Young
11 Co. TSB

I would have to say yes. If you have personal problems, you are referred to professional help. You are also given time to straighten up any problems that you have. You also have Emergency relief and the American Red Cross at your disposal.

Tips for Labor Day safety

Do you know that the Army wants and needs you? Each and every one of you, military or civilian, is necessary for accomplishment of Fort Benning's mission. On Tuesday after Labor Day, if one of you fails to return because of a fatal accident you will be sorely missed.

Mr. Ralph C. Andrews, the USAIC Safety Director, offers the following information to assist you in staying alive and accident free through the long Labor Day weekend. He says the two main hazards to be watchful for are automobile accidents and drownings. Two other areas which injure or kill are lightning and sports activities.

Mr. Andrews emphasizes there are many things you can do to avoid being involved in an accident this holiday weekend. In the four hazardous areas mentioned he suggests the following accident prevention measures be taken.

If you operate an automobile or motorcycle, inspect your vehicle for safety defects and correct as appropriate. Drive defensively — make allowances for the mistakes of others. Avoid excessive speed. Do not drink and drive. Wear your lap and shoulder belts. Don't drive if fatigued or sleepy. Refuse to ride with an unsafe driver.

In water activities always swim using the buddy system. Swim only in authorized areas where lifeguards are on duty. Don't swim immediately after eating or after fatiguing exercise. Don't dive in strange waters. Don't overload a boat. Have a life preserver for each person in a boat and have children and non-swimmers wear them at all times. If pulling a skier, have at least two people in the tow boat. One to drive the boat and the other to continuously observe the skier.

If you participate in other sports, use proper protective equipment. Avoid excessive physical contact. Refrain from over exertion. Don't get over heated. Limit activity if not in proper physical condition.

During thunderstorms, stay off high ground when lightning is imminent. In most lightning deaths, they were caused by the first bolt of lightning to strike the area. Do not stand under trees. If in a building, stay in the center of the structure, and by all means, keep away from windows and lead-in water pipes and electrical and telephone lines.

Have a happy holiday by making it a safe holiday for yourself, your friends and your family. Accept safety as a state of mind and you can prevent accidents.

ROTC Cadets go Ranger

To receive AUSA award

DISTINGUISHED HONOR GRAUDATE. Cadet Frank G. Whitehead will be awarded the Camp Commander's Leadership Award as the most outstanding cadet in the ROTC Ranger class. He attained 886 points, the highest number of points earned during the nine-week Ranger Course. The Distinguished Honor Graduate will also receive the Ranger Class Guidon, the A.U.S.A. Plaque and Ribbon and the William O. Darby Plaque. (Photo by Phil Reid)

Graduation ceremonies today

ROTC Ranger Class 502-73 graduates in ceremonies scheduled for Todd Field at 11 a.m. today.

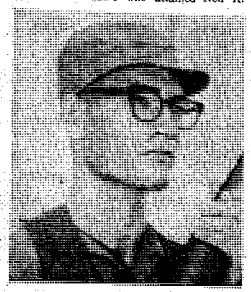
Lt. Gen. Orwin C. Talbott, deputy commander of TRADOC, Fort Monroe, Virginia, and former command of the U.S. Army Infantry Center, will be the guest speaker at the graduation ceremony. Out of 252 students who entered the course, approximately 150 will be graduating today.

Brig. Gen. David E. Grange Jr., the Infantry School's Ranger Department diector, will be present at the ceremony, as will many members of the Merrill's Marauders Association who will be at Fort Benning for their 27th Reunion. Former astronaut Frank Borman, retired U.S. Air Force colonel, will also be present to watch his son, Edwin, graduate.

Distinguished honor graduate for the class is Cadet Frank G. Whitehead, from Carteret, New Jersey, a student at Rutgers University. Honor Graduate for the course is Cadet Robert R. Sigl of Tacoma, Washington, and the University of Washington. Winners of the Merrill's Marauders award are Cadets James D. Cambron, a student at the University of South Alabama from Mobile, and Timothy A. Scully, who is enrolled at the University of Florida and from Titusville, Fla.

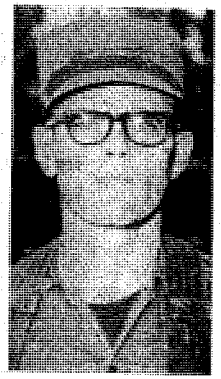
The Merrill's Marauders Award, a Silva Compass, is presented to the individuals in each class with the highest scores on land navigation and peer evaluations. An AUSA plaque and ribbon will be awarded to the Distinguished Honor Graduate who attained the highest number of points during the nine-week Ranger course. He will also receive the Camp Commander's Leadership Award, and the William O. Darby Plaque.

The Phyisical Proficiency Award will be awarded to Cadet Richard M. Reiss of the University of Houston, who attained a perfect score of 500 on the Basic Physical Fitness Test.



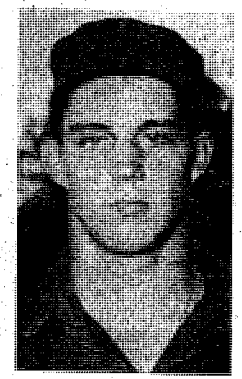
Platoon Leadership Awards will go to Cadets James D. Cambron, University of South Alabama; James E. Simmons, Arkansas State University; Edwin C. Parrish, Penn State University; Richard W. Mills, Sam Houston State University; Robert G. Sigl, University of Washington; and Allen R. Taylor, University of Minnesota, each the most outstanding cadet in platoons one through six.

Fourteen Military Proficiency Awards will bo given to cadets whose combined scores on Land Navigation, Rifle Marksmanship, Comprehensive Exam, and Patrolling are within the top five per cent of the class. Cadets who will receive this award are Philip E. Bradford, Michigan State University; Kevin B. Jones, Eastern Washington State College; Jeffrey C. Reynolds, Bucknell University; Nathaniel H. Hardy, Texas A and M University; Michael J. Berry, Toledo University; Montie S. Johnson, East Tennessee State University; and Benjamin F. Collins III, Columbus College. Also receiving the Military Proficiency Award were Kenneth L. Rago, University of Massachusetts; James D. Cambron, University of South Alabama; Neil A. Brill, University of Montana; John D. Berry, Georgia Tech; Jack M. Chiapuzio, Northern Michigan University; Timothy W. Connor, Oregon State University; Timothy A. Scully, University of Florida.



This graduation completes the ROTC Ranger training program for 1973, the third year that the course has been offered to select volunteers from colleges across the nation in lieu of the regular six-week ROTC summer camp. More than 800 cadets reported for Ranger training this summer from 138 colleges and universities throughout the United States and Puerto Rico. The number included an exchange student, Cadet Masateru Kawamura, a native of Aomori City, Japan. The Clemson University student will be graduating today.

The Ranger course stresses the combat conditioning of the student and the development of good basic combat habits. The emphasis is on practical, realistic, and strenuous field work. It is divided into three phases: the Benning phase at Fort Benning, the Mountain phase at Camp Frank D. Merrill, Dahlonega, Georgia, and the Florida phase at Eglin AFB, Florida. Each phase lasts approximately 18 days.



High standards are a must in Ranger training. The motto of the Ranger Department is "Prompt obedience, self-discipline." The Ranger graduate is a superbly trained, tough, and confident leader who has acquired the skills, stamina and ability to operate day and night for extended periods over any type terrain in any environment, and defeat the enemy.

MILITARY PHYSICAL PROFIENCY AWARD will be awarded to Cadet Richard M. Riess who attained a perfect score of 500 points on the Basic Physical Fitness Test. (Photo by Robert Sanders)

HONOR GRADUATE for ROTC Ranger Class 502-73 is Cadet Robert A. Sigl who scored 868 out of a possible 1000 points for the Ranger course. Cadet Sigl will also be awarded the Platoon Leadership Award as most outstanding cadet in the fifth platton (Photo by Phil Reid) Reid)

MERRILL'S MARAUDERS AWARD will be awarded to Cadets Timothy A. Scully (pictured), and Jame D. Cambron (not shown), whose combined scores on land navigation and peer evaluations are the highest in the class. In addition to this recognition they will each receive the Military Proficiency Award and Cadet Cambron will be given the Ptaloon Leadership Award for the fourth platoon. (Photo by Phil Reid)

Images for Army brats

(This is only one example of the type of problem that is presented to Mental Hygiene, and represents only a small number of Army families. It is in no way meant to imply that all Army families have this problem.)

Everyone knows that a son usually patterns himself after his father, whether subconsciously or consciously, and a daughter after her mother. In psychiatric terminology, this is referred to as "identification."

Well, what happens when the father is an Army man and absent from the home a good part of the time? Sometimes nothing unusual happens and a normal family situation is maintained. But sometimes images get all twisted around.

Out of necessity, an Army wife is often an independent, strong-willed, domineering woman. Some of these qualities are necessary for her to survive the many years of running the household alone. But sometimes these qualities come on too strong, even when the father is present. It's not easy to turn on and off. And if the father happens to be a passive individual, the problem may be compounded.

This can have a real effect on children, especially on teen-agers. Sometimes boys that have continuously looked to their mothers for strength and leadership, especially in the absence of an effective male figure for identification, may develop feminine qualities. Some may even become homosexuals; others may choose domineering wives or at least a wife to continue this "mothering" pattern. These wives are often Army brats too, and frequently a girl that has grown up in an environment where her mother was always boss, will be a bossy domineering wife herself.

The ball can swing the other way too. Sometimes a boy will have to suppress agressive feelings at home so much that these feelings break through in his social environment away from home (for example, school), and he becomes a bully. He is determined to let no one rule him as he feels he is "ruled" at home, whether it is real or imagined.

There are exceptions, of course. Many offspring manage to develop right regardless of upbringing. And many families manage to keep the parental roles straight, even though the Army wife's job is so different from a civilian wife's.

Army kids are usually very intelligent. School grades don't always show this due to some emotional problem. But when you see the world in person, live under all conditions, in all types of environments, with all kinds of people, you're bound to have more general knowledge than a person who stays in one town all his life.

In the final analysis, it is the strength of the basic family unit, upon which a child must rely in times of stress, that determines the emotional health of the child.

Outstanding Aircraft Mechanic of month chosen by 145th Bn.

Flying has been defined as "hours and hours of boredom punctuated by moments of stark terror." To anyone who enjoys flying, however, it is far from boring.

Yet, as enjoyable as flying is, there are those moments of discomfort, if not terror. After all, that totally unique vehicle known as the helicopter is nothing more than a machine, albeit an extremely sophisticated machine.

Like all machinery, helicopters require continual and diligent attention to keep all the parts moving in harmony. It is the job of the aircraft mechanic to ensure that his helicopter is properly functioning and that the moments of terror are as nonexistent as humanly possible.

In recognition of this important job, the 145th Aviation Battalion (Combat) has established a program to honor the Outstanding Aircraft Mechanic of the Month.

Sp5 Bruce C. Forsyth Jr., an OH-58 Crew Chief with the 36th Aviation Platoon, 145th Aviation Battalion, has been selected as the outstanding mechanic for July.

The 1969 graduate of Hueneme High School, Oxnard, California, entered the Army in August of the same year and completed basic training at Fort Ord, California. From June, 1970, until January, 1972, he served with the 25th Corps Aviation Company at Long Binh, RVN. During that tour, he earned the Army Commendation Medal with Oak Leaf Cluster.

Living in a revolutionary world

We are living in revolutionary times that challenge existing values and institutions in our country. This revolutionary world is one of rapid change that will not go away. We must learn to master the forces of change or be captured by them. This means that we must find techniques of human relations that will enable us to keep our dignity and usefulness as persons in these unstable times. This line of reasoning leads to a question that cries out for a clear answer. HOW CAN AN INDIVIDUAL MAKE A CONTRIBUTION TO A PEACEFUL AND ORDERLY SOCIETY IN THE MIDST OF TODAY'S REVOLUTIONARY WORLD?

FIRST, respect for others must be developed in the lives of individuals. An unspoken assumption in homogeneous groups is that to show respect for outsiders is to betray the group. This goes back to the commonly held belief that one group of humans is somehow basically better than another. This polarizes us into competing factions. Respect for others leads us to experience a common humanity which transcends the things that divide people into competing groups. Several ideas may assist us in this task: self-respect is the key to respecting others; respect for others is strengthened through communication; and, barriers dissolve in shared experiences.

SECOND, a working democracy rests on respect for others. We need to have clear ideas about what an individual can do to make the ideals of justice and equality work in the modern world. The most basic thing a person can do is show respect for others. We can do this by realizing that no two Americans are alike and that it is the business of every American to defend and protect the rights of other Americans to exercise free choice in every area of human activity.

THIRD, respect for others enriches our lives; it leads a person to an increasing "openness to experience." This means that a person is moving away from defensiveness.

By Judy Jakubowski
CWC Calendar of Events for 1973-74

"Getting Better" is the theme adopted by the new OWC Board. Since June the board has been diligently at work making plans for an action packed, fun-filled year ahead:

The opening tea, Sept. 12, will offer members an opportunity to register for classes in arts and crafts, for activities of their choice, or for volunteer work in the field of their interest.

* * *

"Sew-your - own-fashion" will be featured at the Oct. 10 Luncheon, with our own army wives as models.

* * *

Come browse, visit and shop Nov. 28 at the annual Christmas Bazaar.

* * *

A shopping spree in glamorous Atlanta will fill the December slate. Mark Dec. 11 on your calendar for this event.

* * *

The Jan. 9 Tea will offer another chance to sign for the courses you desire.

* * *

A "Now and Then" fashion show will highlight February, followed in March by a brunch with local decorators as guest speakers, as well as our nomination of officers.

* * *

Election will be included April 10 with our traditional "Tour of Homes," and the OWC year will come to a close with a "show and tell" to review all the past year. Officers will also be installed at the May luncheon.

OWC Activities

Baton Twirling Classes begin soon for children ages 7 and up. Group lessons will be taught by Mrs. James Wigglesworth in 45 minute sessions, once a week. The cost will be $7 a month for one child with reduced rates for additional children in the family. Semi-private lessons will also be available. To add a little spice to the lessons, the Baton Twirling classes will twirl at the Youth Football games this fall. For more information and to sign up your child for the classes, please call Mrs. Wigglesworth at 544-3058.

* * *

The first meeting of OWC Sponsored Weight Watchers will be Wed., Sept. 5 at 7:30 p.m. at the OWC Activities Bldg. Call Mrs. Larry Bell at 545-1498 for more information. This group is open to the OWC members and their families only.

NCO Wives' Club

Thanks to the hard work of Treasurer Mary Houseal, there are now some big changes at the Clubhouse. The main room has been enlarged by removing a partition and the carpeting has arrived. We are now ready to begin painting, so if you have a spare evening, call Mary Houseal, 687-1705, as she can use help.

* * *

Sept. 19 is the luncheon at the Goetchius House, so check your Sept. bulletin for details.

* * *

On Sept. 15 at Columbus Square Mall will be "My Fair Lady" day. Ninety-five different clubs and agencies will have booths to show opportunities for women. The hours will be from 10 a.m.-6 p.m. The NCO Wives Club will have a booth, so look for it. Working on it will be Publicity Chairman, Trudy Leschak; Publicity Assistant, Elfriede Henry; Membership Chairman, Karen Kelly and Membership Assistant, Pinky Brown.

* * *

NCO Wives' Club would like to extend an invitation to NCO Wives at Fort Benning to join us. Our weekly meetings are an enjoyable way to have fun and meet new people. For information, please call Karen Kelly, 545-3237 or Janelle Bramlett, 545-5046.

MEDDAC Officer's Wives Club

The September meeting of the MEDDAC Officers' Wives' Club will be a luncheon-fashion show to be held at the Supper Club of the Fort Benning Officers' Club on Friday, Sept. 14, with the sherry hour beginning at 12 noon, Luncheon will be served at 12:30 p.m. The wives of Dental Clinic No. 6 and Family Practice under the supervision of Mrs. Kenneth E. Holtzapple and Mrs. Harold E. Plank will have the latest fall fashions from Kiralfy's to model. Reservations should be made by Tuesday, Sept. 11, before 6 p.m., with your reservation chairman listing in The Musings.

* * *

Attention DET Ladies.

DET "Chairlady," Joyce Rutherford, is anxious for the group to share in all their activities. For the OWC Sept. 12 Tea, the group will meet at Mrs. Rutherford's home, 400 Wickersham Ave., Fort Benning, and go as a group. Be sure to be there.

DUSA

Join the Society of the Daughters of the United States Army. We invite all daughters, granddaughters, stepdaughters, and adopted daughters of commissioned officers of any branch of the Armed Forces to Join DUSA. A good way to make new friends and renew old acquaintances. Sign up at the OWC Tea on Sept. 12.

DUSA meets on the fourth Friday of each month. The next meeting will be held at the Ramada Inn of Phenix City on Sept. 28. For more information call the President, Marna Brumbach at 545-5735 or the Secretary, Roz Taylor at 544-3226.

Expectant Parent's Classes

The Army Health Nursing Service, in conjunction with the Obstetrics Department Martin Army Hospital, is beginning another series of Expectant Parents' Classes Tuesday.

The series consists of four classes, each two hours long, on four Tuesday nights of each month. Classes are held in the conference room on the second floor of Martin Army Hospital.

Preganancy and childbirth are normal, natural happenings. It is believed that through a thorough program of education, the expectant father and mother can be prepared both physically and emotionally to make childbirth and parenthood a satisfying and rewarding experience.

Because of limited space, you are asked to pre-register for these classes by calling the Army Health Nursing Service, 545-5431, Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. - 5 p.m.

Dr. Cox appointed principal

Dr. Jerome C. Cox has been appointed principal of Faith Junior High School. He comes from Waycross, Ga. where he was superintendent of the Board of Public Instruction.

Dr. Cox views his new position as being head of a "small United Nations." He always wanted to work with a select faculty and children from various backgrounds. Although new in this area, he is not new to the field of education, as he brings to his new position 12 years of experience.

College has race relations workshop

Columbus College will offer a three-session community workshop beginning September 4 for all ethnic and racial groups to stimulate discussion and determine facts about group and individual human relationships.

Entitled "Are Racial Problems in the Columbus-Lower Chattahoochee Valley Area Myth or Reality?", the workship will be aimed especially at young people between 18 and 24 years of age however, the public is invited, and the audience will be encouraged to participate in the discussions.

The second and third sessions will be conducted September 11 and 18; all meetings will be held in the Illges Building on campus from 7:30 to 9:00 p.m. There is no admission charge and registration forms are required.

John W. Childs, president of the local chapter of the NAACP, will conduct the first session. He is Social Service Representative at Martin Army Hospital and a former school teacher. Childs will lead a panel discussion of race relations problems troubling the nation and their influence on society.

The second session will be chaired by Alberto Garcia, Jr., assistant professor of criminal justice at the college; he holds a master's degree in his specialty from Georgia State University. Garcia's group will discuss racial problems in the Columbus area.

The final meeting will be conducted by Dr. Richard J. Amundson, chairman of the Social Science Division at the college. His panel will concentrate on the discussion of issues raised in the first two meetings with a view toward problem solving.

The workshop is funded in part by a grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities through the Georgia Committee on Public Programs for the Humanities.

Additional information is available from the Office of Community Services at the college, 561-5134, ext. 308.

Okay, Veteran:
now let's see what your country can do for you.

Civilian life can be a different kind of jungle, unless you have the training to take care of yourself.

That's the kind of training Phillips College gives you. Practical. Relevant. Thorough. There's no wasted time at Phillips. Here's what Uncle Sam will pay you per month while attending Phillips College.

	NUMBER OF DEPENDENTS None	1	2	3	Each additional
Full-time (Day)	$220	$261	$298	$316	$18
Half-time (Night)	$110	$131	$149	$158	$ 9

There are short-term diploma programs in Data Processing, Computer Programming, every branch of Accounting, and Business Administration. Also technical diploma programs in Industrial Instrumentation and Automation, and Medical Electronics.

But, you get more than a diploma at Phillips. Through our placement service we get you a job.

Call your Admissions Representative now. Visit Phillips College. See the fine equipment you'll be using. Meet our instructors.

Don't let anything stand in your way. Not even money. We've got several plans that will see you completely through your program. Our placement service will have you working before you even begin repayment.

Whatja wanta Know? ask the BAYONET

CALL 545-4792

DEAR BAYONET,
My son, presently stationed in Korea, will be getting out in a few months. I have heard that you can get an early out if you are going to attend school or join the Reserves or Guard for a year. Can he take advantage of this? SHORT

DEAR SHORT,
That option is available only to those soldiers stationed in the continental United States and Hawaii.

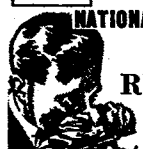
DEAR BAYONET,
I would like to know why there are no military bus schedules posted anywhere on post. MAJ

DEAR MAJ,
Bus schedules have been distributed to every unit and organization on post. It is up to the different places to post the schedule on their bulletin boards. If you need a schedule you can get one at building 222.

DEAR BAYONET,
Can a veteran make any changes of program under the GI Bill? VET

DEAR VET,
Most veterans and servicemen are allowed two changes of program. However, Public Law 520, 92nd Congress, authorized a third change if it is caused by circumstances beyond the individual's control. Before such additional changes can be made, the veteran must obtain counseling from the Veterans Administration.

DEAR BAYONET,
I am interested in scuba diving. Could you give me some information on where I could get instructions on post or in Columbus? KFO



DEAR KFO,
There is a Scuba club on Fort Benning. Only military personnel and their dependents are eligible to join. For more information you can contact William Orr, the chief instructor, at 544-4575. If you are not eligible to join the Fort Benning club you may contact Jerry Howard or Frank Crane at the West Georgia Skin Diving School, 327-5718.

Soviet Authority to address AAAA

Jack R. Hunt, Embry-Riddle Aeronautical University president, Daytona Beach, Fla. will address the Fort Benning chapter of the Army Aviation Association of America on Wednesday, September 5, 1973. One of the free world's foremost authorities on Soviet Aviation, he makes an annual trip to the Soviet Union to meet with leaders in soviet aviation.

Hunt served with the U.S. Navy Aviation Force from 1942-1946 and again from 1951-1958 and was awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross in 1957.

In 1958 President Eisenhower presented the Harmon International Trophy to Mr. Hunt for piloting and commanding a successful non-stop flight from South Weymouth, Massachusetts, to Europe and Africa, and return to Key West between March 4 and March 16, 1957.

The AAAA meeting, open to all interested personnel, will be held in the Officer's Supper Club at 7:30 p.m.

Military Marriage

By Edith Martin

The Private First Class

Ken and Debra Reed

Ken is a PFC in Delta Company, 1st Battalion 29th Infantry, and Debra works part time at McDonald's. Ken has been in the Army 14 months and they have been married for 10 months.

Finances: Debra: "Money is the biggest thing when you first marry. We're making it just barely. I work and he has some savings we lean on occasionally.

"We know couples who come up short all the time. It can't be their fault every time; I don't know anybody who doesn't have the problem."

Ken: "Now the commissary is almost as high as downtown. I get $51 separate rations to feed me three times a day. That's unrealistic with food prices going up and with me married.

"What makes it worse is you can't count on Finance to not mess up your pay."

Debra: "There's another hardship. I don't know about other jobs but Ken's infantry and he's gone a lot. It puts a strain on our marriage. I got a job because of it. Working fills in the time when he's not at home."

Ken: "When we get home, we're both beat. That way, we don't even feel like fighting much less going out or anything."

The Army Wife:

Debra: "From what I've seen the average Army wife is a working mother. She's thrifty to the max. And, she's lonely--her husband is gone most of the time. Most of the girls I know are married to E2s, E3s, Sp4s.

"The ideal Army wife whould be able to cope with loneliness. I don't know if having children really makes it different, but I do feel some have them just to keep busy. I almost fell into that before I went to work."

Ken: "We can't afford a child now. Her salary is helping us to make it through and a kid needs a lot more to be taken care of properly."

Ken: "I think the Army looks at Army wives as people who just don't exist. From what I hear, officials trying to make the Army professional tend to forget her. They dropped the Q allotment to wives. Now, she has to depend on her husband to take out a separate E allotment.

"I think that's bad because she gives up quite a lot to be an Army wife. The Army should give her the money for doing the stuff that helps me get my job done--picking me up at odd hours, not getting a regular job herself. She gives up being near her family and friends to be near her husband. She has no real say about where they go if she wants to be with him."

Army marriages:

Ken: "Marriages that start with him in the Army are hit-and-miss. Traveling around, he doesn't get a chance to really know a girl but he gets married because he's lonely."

Debra: "We knew each other before he went in so that helped. But a lot of Army men marry girls they've known all their lives. After that, they're apart so much, they grow apart. He has his work. She has the children. If she is mother and father a lot, the children become her life. He doesn't know her or the children."

Benefits:

Debra: "Other than the regular benefits (commissary, health) we can go overseas if he gets a station there.

Being in the Army makes you independent. And that's a plus. We're 3000 miles from home and if we need anything, we depend on ourselves."

Future: Ken:" Cutbacks have me worried. I don't have a high school diploma nor any skills. If I got out right now, I'd have a hard time."

The Second Lieutenant

Marcus and Anni Disbrow have been married almost two years.Of that time, 20 months have been spent in the Army. Both are active members of the Benning Dramatizers.

Anni: I believe that we have less time together because of night duty, etc, than we would in civilian life. There is also less freedom of choice and more social pressure. We moved on post because of "involuntary assignment of quarters." It isn't where we would have chosen to live. By social pressure, I mean that freedom of association with people of all ranks is frowned upon.

Marcus: We have many friends in lower ranks and they visit our home. We've heard about it from our neighbors.

Marcus: The Army is chauvinistic and its policies keep it that way.

Anni: Some examples: Whether or not a woman is employed, she is labeled her husband's dependent; her mistakes-traffic violations, overdue library books, etc.--are blamed on her husband and reported through his chain of command.

Marcus: There is also an attempt to force the Army wife to be a social butterfly, i.e. "the perfect Army wife" to result in a perfect OER for him.

Anni: I object to the rigid programming of a wife's activities with coffees, teas, luncheons. Nonparticipation can bring censure upon the husband.

Marcus: Coed social functions turn into Shakers Sunday Services with men and women on opposite sides of the room. These are about as real as an aluminum Christmas tree. There's a hostile reaction to Anni's participation in male discussions at these affairs.

Anni: I have nothing in common with the women. I spent four years of my time learning to do what I now do with the Dramatizers. As an activity, it is at least as important to the Fort Benning community as the women's gatherings are.

Marcus: Too many wives are an on-program computer. They attend social functions and discuss diapers, scratch about ecology, talk of wives not present and volunteer for every volunteer project going. Swapping recipes is the highlight of their daily contact with other Army wives.

Anni: We also get a lot of comments about not having children. We don't have any and don't plan on any. People want to know what I do with my time.

Marcus: Church is another area. Great emphasis is placed on your attendance when your unit is sponsoring the service. That's not right.

Another area of pressure is material objects. For many, objects have become the goal of their lives rather than personal relationships. We get comments continually on when we're going to get rid of our old car. We've been told "An officer shouldn't drive a car like that."

Marcus: That's just living up to what we expect of ourselves. Here we find people who relate on a first name, person-to person basis.

Anni: We're united by personal interest rather than rank, sex or academic achievement.

The Colonel

Charles and Penny Reidenbaugh have been in the Army for 30 years. He is currentyl serving as director of personnel and community activities while she is involved in volunteer and community work.

Chuck: As I see it, the husband doesn't make an adjustment in his life style. I went when and where the Army said. Adjustment is done by the wife and children when they take up the full burden of caring for themselves and getting all the necessary things done.

Penny: Any young woman entering marriage should realize that while marriage is first for her, it is secondary to him. He wants to succeed. A military marriage is complicated only by the separations.

Chuck: If I'm in the states, I can do the normal things a husband does to help out his family. If I'm not with my family, who does it? She does.

Penny: Marriage and the American family are the greatest business in the U.S. Many of the participants are frequently unprepared.

Chuck: My wife is the financial manager. That fact escapes attention of a lot of people. How can a man overseas manage the finances at home? In my experience many unhappy military marriages occur when the man tries to dominate household affairs from afar.

A husband must see that his wife is brought into financial management, so that a "culture shock" doesn't develop.

Penny: Many women in my group were not ready for this. We went straight from family to marriage and never had to plan these things. Today, young women are going on to school and living on their own. This experience will help.

Chuck: An Army wife who's been around for a while begins to think in the same time frame as her husband. No wallflower butterfly can move a household by herself.

Penny: A man who's up at 5 and not back home til 9, and who's been solving problems all day, doesn't want to come home to face her small problems.

Chuck: If you ain't flexible, you don't belong in the business. A good mother can be cleaning floors in one set of quarters one day and be decked out like a Vogue princess next--that takes quite a lady.

Penny: The greatest thing a mother can do is put stability into family life. She has a lot to do with the point of view the children take about moves and hardships.

Chuck: The military mother has a far greater influence n the child than the civilian mother. The average military guy can't go to work at 8 and return at 5 if he's doing a good job.

Penny: The experience can be beneficial. Traveling overseas and in the states, meeting new people, adjusting, languages, and cultures is educational. Our daughters have gained poise.

Chuck: They're sophiscated in the sense that they have an awareness of culture and geography that other children never get.

Penny: There's another advantage to Army life. That's the involvement in Army community life, ACS, PTA. The OWC groups have something to offer-experiences, new friends. But, you can only get out of them what you put into them. We've still always had plenty of time to participate in our children's activities.

Chuck: It's impossible for a young wife to escape pressure to join wives groups. But look what Army wives did. Army daughters who became Army wives built Tot Town nursery.

Penny: We're now entering the liberated age of our society and that's good. Women have a long way to go, but I want to do it with my husband. If a young wife wants to participate in these functions, that's good. But she herse" has to be motivated by herself.

Chuck: The Military family must recognize that it enjoys a certain degree of security civilian families don't enjoy. There's no need for accident insurance for one thing, and that can be a big burden if someone is hurt.

Penny: The fraternity of the Army family can't be beat if you participate, but you can't watch it go by. If you dive into it, it amazes you what it can give and what you can give.

Chuck: We sound like we're recruiting. We're not at the end of our career.

Penny: We just want to share how good it has been for us.

The Sergeant Major

Frank has 24 years in service and is the SGM for the Directorate of Plans and Training. Jackie works at Beanty Salon Custer Terrace.

Jackie: "I was used to the Army because I had heen in four years myself."

Frank: "What has affected us most has been the separations. Children need both parents present."

Jackie: As far our child is concerned, he seems to have adjusted well. Separation is actually worse on the mother. She has all the responsibility for the household, finances, children, and health."

The seperations do something else too. They make a mother closer to her children. I don't believe in a mother working unless necessary until the children can do without her.

Frank: As far as the children's education is concerned, their education is broader because they traveled and met children from varying backgrounds.

Frank: The real burden does fall on her. Men adapt more easily to a life of solitude because of their job , training exercise, and combat situations. Women do theworryingg'

Jackie: The main point is she has to accept his carrer as coming first.

Frank: "That's the big factor in whether a man, commissioned or noncommissioned,does an outstanding job. It's hard for many marrieds to adjust to the fact that the Army comes first."

Jackie: A wife must accept what her husband chooses to do. She maynot like it, but it is his career.

Frank: I really believe that behind every successful man there is a woman. She's been wholeheartedl in her support.

Jackie: A wife in the army has to learn to be strong. When she marries she must accept his career as coming first. An Army wife learns to be independent.

Living within your means is another big lesson most Army wives have to learn.

Frank: Financially, this will be easier with today's pay rates.

Social Life:

Whether it's the working relationships of the men or the hardship the women bear, the relationships in the Army are greater and tighter than in civilian communities.

Jackie: There's no pressure to join the NCO wives or SGM wives.It's a nice thing to have, but I haven't joined becauseI don't have time.

Frank: Senior officers wives we've had a chance to associate with are wonderful, but the junior ones do discriminate some.

Jackie:From what I see, there's more pressure on officers not to associate with lower ranks. We've never felt that way, we enjoy having friends of all ranks .

Frank: Face it, you have a caste system in all walks of life. As you get higher in the army, you lose close relationships as you gain rank and responsibility. Command is the lonliest job in the worldg

Coming to the screen

The Lost Horizon

(G) THE LOST HORIZON is an updated version of the James Hilton classic novel and the 1937 classic film starring Ronald Coleman. The tranquil land of Shangri-La lives again and will bring its magic to a whole new generation. Escaping Baskula in Southeast Asia during a guerrilla attack are Peter Finch, a UN diplomat; Michael York, his reporter brother; Sally Kellerman, correspondent for Newsweek; George Kennedy, an engineer; and Bobby Van, a USO comic. Their plane crashlands and they find themselves in Shangri-La, a valley paradise where disease and poverty are unknown. Everyone lives to a ripe old age, High Lama Charles Boyer being over 200 years old.

Lady Ice

Filmed on location in Miami and Nassau, with a quick jaunt to Chicago for a jewel robbery. Action centers around Ms. O'Neill as a master jewel fence who turns on to diamonds and Sutherland as an insurance investigator with the instincts of a crook. She's LADY ICE and he's the one guy who makes her melt.

Charley One-Eye

Before long a bond of friendship has formed, culminating in one saving the other's life. During their travels, Thinnes becomes fond of a one-eyed rooster whom he names Charley One-Eye. While pausing in their flight from bounty hunter Nigel Davenport, who has been silently trailing them. Davenport captures Thinnes and binds Roundtree, intending to bring him back to the Union Army for the reward money. Davenport overplays his hand when he coldly and viciously kills Charley One-Eye. The Indian is possessed with rage and seizes the shotgun and takes his revenge.

Symphony Orchestra rehearsal

The Columbus Symphony Orchestra, Harry Kruger, Conductor, will have the first rehearsal of its new 1973-74 season on Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in the rehearsal room of the Fine Arts Building at Columbus College. An exciting season is planned, including four subscription concerts featuring outstanding guest artists; three free Family "Pops" Concerts — the first of which is Monday, September 17, at 7:00 p.m. in downtown Columbus; free children's concerts given for the children of the Muscogee County School District, and certain special concerts. The orchestra rehearses every Tuesday evening at 7:30 p.m. at Columbus College beginning September 4.

Any qualified musicians, especially string players, flute, or French horn, who might be interested in playing in the Symphony please contact the conductor, Harry Kruger, at Columbus College (561-5134, extension 282), or at home (563-4367). For ticket information or information pertaining to the season write P. O. Box 5361 or call 323-5069.

Officers' Club makes changes

The Fort Benning Officers' Club is making changes to serve its members better.

In order to provide bigger and better entertainment, the Custer Terrace operation will be moving to the Supper Club when the annex is closed on Sept. 3. Dress will remain casual. According to Lt. Col. Harold M. Carter, Officer Club manager, some excellent entertainment has been booked for the Supper Club. The Love Distinction, a versatile group of young men and women, will be on hand for the first show Sept. 8. Band performances each week will be from Thursday-Sunday.

Food service will be available in the Country Club ballroom each Saturday night beginning Sept. 8. Two or three different entrees will be offered and a small band or trio will be provided.

A "special menu night" dinner will be offered each Wednesday night in the Fountain Room. Food offerings will run from "Italian night" to "Steak night". At the same time, ala carte service, which was Tuesday - Thursday night will be discontinued.

The Fountain Room will close permanently Aug. 31 for noon food service, but the Coffee Shop and Country Club food operation during noon hours will remain the same.

To support these changes in various operations there are presently several on-going improvements being made in the decor and appearance of the Officers Club.

Installation of new bars in the Supper Club is almost completed. The club's exterior is being repainted and both the Fountain Room and the Supper Club are being refurnished with new rugs, draperies and furniture.

Other improvements include the recent installation of air conditioners in the Coffee Shop. A micro wave oven is being installed in the main kitchen to provide faster service and help eliminate food waste.

Carter went on to say, "Other changes in the future include replacing the carpet in the ladies lounge at the Main Club, the relocation of the Infantry Bar to the basement on the Supper Club, and resurfacing of the tennis courts."

According to Carter, every effort is being made to resume scheduling of go-go girls which was temporarily discontinued June 15.

"We feel that the club has come a long way in the last 12 months but we still have some internal control problems to solve," said Carter. "The Officers' Club has showed a net profit for the first seven months of 1973.

Membership is reminded that the Main Club swimming pool will remain open on Saturdays and Sundays through Sept. 30. The Custer Terrace pool closes for the summer at 7 p.m., Sept. 3.

"We encourage members to let us know their feelings, opinions, or suggestions through the use of the suggestion boxes located throughout various clubs or through their representative on the Officers' Club advisory council."

Inexpensive hiking becoming favorite sport

Hiking is rapidly becoming one of America's favoaite sports: it doesn't require great athletic prowess, it's rewarding and it can be inexpensive.

The Army and Air Force Exchange Service encourages would-be back-packers to consider each piece of equipment in terms of weight, warmth and weather resistance. Although quality equipment does cost money, the hiker still will find back-packing one of the least expensive sports — especially with equipment bought at low exchange prices.

AAFES recommends that boots should be large enough to accommodate two pairs of socks. Serious walkers buy specially designed hiking boots and break them in gradually before hiking.

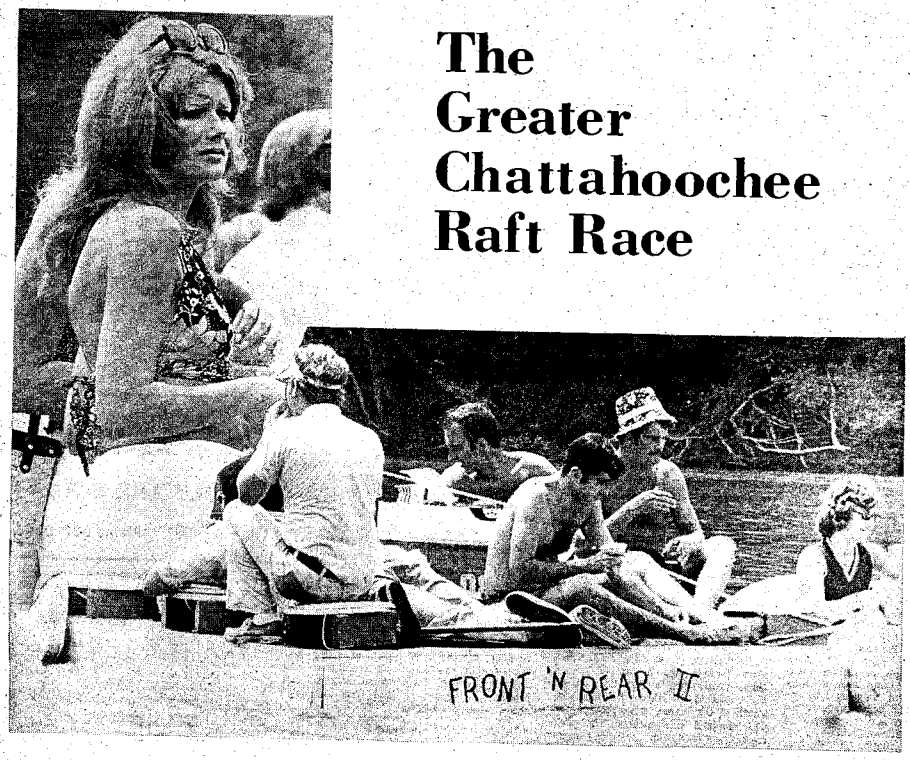
Day packs should be lightweight with water-repellant fabric, adjustable straps, extra pockets and a tapered wedge shape to conform to the body. Back packs should be three quarters the length of the frame, water-proofed and with zippered side pockets. The pack frame itself should be the lightest possible type, body-countoured with adjustable padded straps.

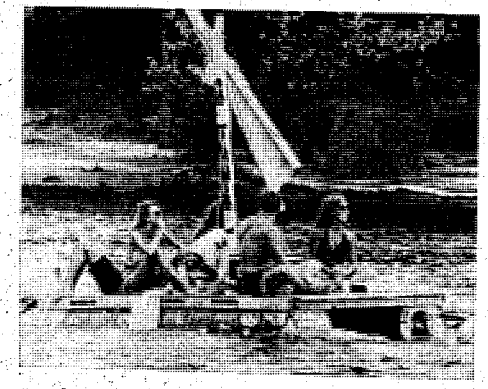
Tents for back-packing should be lightweight, preferably of nylon, and should be easy to assemble and take down. Plastic tube tents, weighing only a pound or two, are especially good for short overnight trips.

The best lightweight sleeping bags are those filled with goose or duck down. They give good insulation but are expensive. Synthetic fillings, cheaper but not as efficient, are good for summer. A serious back-packer will check the cold-weather rating on a sleeping bag before buying. It is a rough guide to help match the bag to the conditions under which it will be used.

Other items to remember when hiking allow two pounds of food per person per day; use lightweight, convenient-to-pack canteen and eating equipment; carry a full-length poncho with hood for rainy weather; use the layer system of clothing — piling on or off as conditions change; and don't forget personal care products, a repair kit and first aid needs.

The back-packer's oath as any infantryman can tell you, is "keep it light." A good rule of thumb is that the total load of a hiker should not exceed 20 per cent of his weight.





The Greater Chattahoochee Raft Race

Above are some serious contenders in the Greater Chattahoochee Valley River Raft Race, a group from the Fort Benning Information Office.

BY DAVE DEUTSCHER

With Bill Kloeb on vacation, this gives me the chance to tell a few war stories of my own. I spend approximately three days a week fishing local ponds and lakes but my weekends are reserved for fishing "trips". There is something about traveling that makes an angling excursion seem just a little better, a little more important.

A favorite spot is the Okefenokee Swamp at Fargo, Georgia. The swamp here forms the headwaters of the Suwanee River and the scenery is breathtaking. Alligators, deer, exotic birds and tranquil flora make the boat ride from Stephen C. Foster State Park to the Suwanee spillways a vacation for both fisherman and family.

Motors larger than 10 hp are not allowed on the water, and it only takes one trip through that swamp to understand the reason. Fishing with large, slow-bladed spinning lures consistently fills stringers with bass, warmouth, and pickerel from the main channel.

EARLY BIRD

The man who starts fishing at dawn should reach the spillways around lunchtime where his boat can be beached. That's where I like to switch from artificials to live crawfish. Laying this morsel on the river bottom off the spillway should entice the first of many bream in the double-hand category to hit. And I mustn't forget to mention the tasty catfish that seem to have an unquenchable appetite.

For the sports minded angler, the next world record Bowfin swims in that black pool below the dam. I know because I've hooked him a half-dozen times. Want to hear more? Call me anytime for next to catching and eating them, "talking" fish is one of my greatest loves.

Another weekend jaunt I enjoy is up to Callaway Gardens. Even though it's not far to travel, the atmosphere of Mountain Creek Lake provides that special "something" that classifies it as a trip.

It'll cost you and a partner a total of thirteen bucks to fish there, but it's well worth the money. Fishing from the bank and with live bait is prohibited but the fee includes use of boat and motor.

Even the average fisherman should be able to take his limit of two-pound bass by tossing Rapalas towards the shoreline near bushes and weed beds. Lunker seekers will probably want to work heavy spinner-baits or plastic worms around the deep structure half-way up the left side of the lake. Earlier this year I pulled a bigmouth out of that hole which tipped the scales at more than eight pounds. Recently my wife, using a small white Rooster Tail, boated a 29-ounce shellcracker. Mountain Creek Lake is one of the best managed ponds I've seen in this part of the country, and the fish do grow big there.

ACROSS THE LINE

Last weekend I drove to Vicksburg, Mississippi, to try my hand at some White Bass. Most Crappie fishermen have tangled with a few of these "stripers" and can vouch for their battling ability. A non-resident tourist license in Mississippi costs about three dollars and can be obtained just about anywhere in the state. We fished a place just outside of Vicksburg called Steel Bayou Drainage Project.

Travel north on US61 to highway 465 then hang a left for about six miles. You can see the dam on the right side of the road. Fishing in the rapids below the dam, we got strikes on at least 90 per cent of our casts. My brother-in-law was using a white Shyster on a spinning outfit and I was fly-casting a small jig.

We kept only the fish that weighed more than a pound, and the results speak for themselves. Saturday we strung 39 white bass in less than two hours. Four hours on Sunday provided an additional 91 suitable for freezing.

The white bass is a vicious killer and it's not uncommon to see several fish try to snatch the lure from another's mouth. By the way, in Mississippi I saw a fish scaler that looked like a commercial clothes dryer. Just load your catch, insert a few quarters, then drink a beer while automation does the dirty work for you. With enough requests from interested members, I bet we could procure a similar device for our Rod and Gun Club.

Raft Race

Pioneers take first

"I really don't care if we win the raft race or not. What is really important is that we're all going out to have a good time, and take part in a community sponsored activity."

Two days before the 2nd Annual Jaycees Chattahoochee Raft Race, Pvt Paul Burgess made this statement to his teammates as they were all preparing their raft for the upcoming race.

Only 48 hours later, Burgess skippered his crew of 10 from HQ and Spt. Co., 1st Bn., 29th Inf. (TH EPIONEERS), to a first place victory in their division.

Along with skipper Burgess were 1Lt Maxwell Carter (First Mate), Pvt Tim Echols, Sgt. Edgar Ross, PFC Sam Kincaid, Sp4 Robert Hallbrook, PFC William Sheffield, Sp5 Thomas Jones, Pvt Richard Nunley, Pvt Richard Christopher and PFC Kelly Imamura.

As the weary crew finished up the 12½ mile-trek down the Chattahoochee River, HQ and Spt Co. commander, Capt. John Patterson and first shirt Richard Fields were both on hand to greet the PIONEER representatives. Capt. Patterson congratulated the men on an outstanding job, while 1st Sgt. Fields passed around beer to the sun-drenched crew.

The HQ and Spt Co crew finished first place in division 2, which was the rubber raft class, 5-man and over, and an astonishing over-all third.

The men were awarded a first place trophy by the Jaycees. It will be engraved with all the team members' names, and will then take its place on the trophy shelf in the HQ and Spt Co orderly room.

586th supports Eufaula races

The 586th Engineer Company (Float Bridge) again supported the annual Lake Eufaula Festival this year, from Aug. 16-20. Their mission became a little more involved, however, as Lake Eufaula was the site selected for the 1973 National Championship Races of the American Power Boat Association, held in conjunction with the Lake Eufaula Festival.

Forty-five members of the 586th arrived with their equipment on Thursday to set up bivouac and begin preparations for the weekend festival. With them they brought four 1-man pneumatic assault boats to be used for the recovery of drivers of overturned boats, and four 27-foot bridge erection boats, for towing overturned boats to safety.

The 586th diving section was also on the job, with a diver stationed in each of three rubber recovery boats positioned around the course, ready to go into the water and assist any injured boaters.

The divers were called upon at least a dozen times during the three day races, not only to rescue drivers, but in some cases the boats themselves. Sp 6 Tommy McKay, one of the divers said, "We welcomed the opportunity to combine practical diving experience with the emergency situations that arose at Eufaula."

In addition to providing boats, operators and divers, the 586th also provided much of the radio communications network that coordinated the beginning of each race and kept the various safety boats in constant contact with the control barge, in the center of the race area.

PVT2 Charles Gallion, one of the men in the recovery boats, remarked, "I enjoyed the races and getting in on the rescues. It was about the best training I've been on."

Navy off to fast start in interservice battles

The Navy used timely hitting and solid pitching to take the lead after the first day's action in the Interservice Fast Pitch Softball championship being played at the U.S. Army Infantry Center.

After beating the Army on a 2-0 two-hit shutout in the afternoon, the Navy stopped the Marines in the nightcap, 4-1, to take the only perfect 2-0 record into the second day of the double round robin tournament.

The Marines had earlier upset the Air Force, 1-0, before losing to the Navy. The loss left the Marines tied with the Air Force for second place in the standings as each had 1-1 records going into the second day. The Air Force's win was a 13-2 rout of the host Army team which is winless after two games.

Billy Drummond Jr. proved the difference for the Navy against the Marines. The third baseman clobbered a two-run homer in the first and added a two-run double in the fifth with two outs to account for all four RBIs.

Navy earlier found Army tough to crack as loser Elroy Henley went through four scoreless innings with winner Wayne Noah. Then in the fifth Kelly Hampton's run producing single broke the ice. Navy added another in the sixth when Thomas Carter tripled and Clarence David sacrificed him home.

The Marines won the tournament's opener in an extra inning contest with the Air Force, the 1972 champions. Dan Simpson doubled and Calvin Reeves tripled him home with the only run.

Draggin around

No military personnel won at Phenix Dragway 22 August 1973, but neither did Jimmy Parker. Sam Knox won three trophies and the money with his Chevrolet wagon. Max Thomas of Montgomery and R. D. Dempsey of Columbus won trophies but were unable to defeat Knox for the money.

Ron Phagan of Columbus had the fastest elapsed time of the meet. His '55 Chevy, with a 268 cu. in. power plant, covered the quarter mile in 12.40 seconds. Van Lake, in a big block Camaro, ran close behind with a 12.58 and Ron Gates, on a Honda motorcycle, was running in the high 12-second bracket.

BAYONET SPORTS

The 11th Annual Ed Seymour Golf Tournament will be held at the Lakewood golf course, Phenix City, Sept. 3.

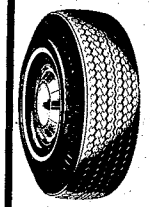
The tourney will be a 27-hole match play, except for the championship flight, which will be medal play. The flights will be set at the time of registration by the participant's average score.



The tournament will be open to the first 96 golfers who sign up. Deadline for registration is Sept. 1.

Silver prizes will be awarded to flight winners. Tee off will be 8 a.m. on Sept. 3. There is a $2 entry fee.

Barracudas

Fort Benning Baracuda Dependent Swim team tryouts will be held at the YAC outdoor pool Sept. 17 - 30 from 6-8 p.m.

Coach Gary Boulton will be looking for experienced swimmers who have competed in the past as well as those swimmers who have never previously been on a team before.

Boulton, a Columbus College professor, is new to the Barracuda team, but has coached youth teams in Washington and Nebraska.

He was a swimming standout in the Pacific 8 Conference while competing for Washington State University from where he graduated in 1967.

Practice for swimmers in "A" category time groups have already started.

The Barracudas are looking forward to the return of many of the outstanding swimmers of the 1972-73 season.

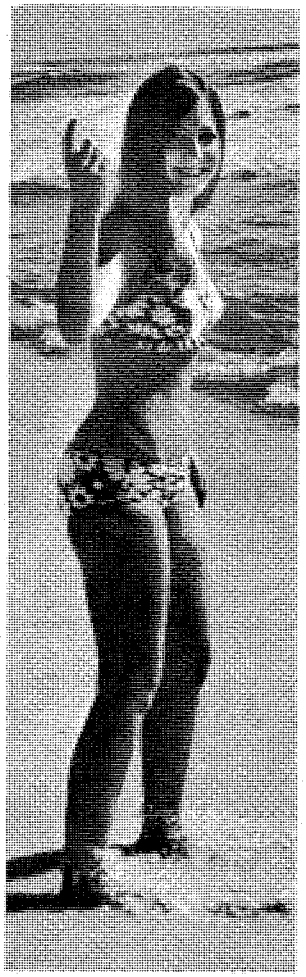
Basketball getting started

With the softball season coming to a close, it won't be long before basketball season begins. The cadre and students at 50th Co. 5th Stu. Bn., of The School Brigade got a jump on the season as the 50th Co. cadre clouted the company's Officer Candidates 84-63.



A students vs. teachers game is played each OCS cycle, and this one belonged to the teachers from start to finish. Sparked by Virgil Hooe, the cadre built a 13-point 42-29 lead. In the third period the candidates pulled within six at 55-49, but could get no closer.

Hooe led all scorers with 25 points. Teammates Loren Ellis and 8th Bn. commander Robert I. Farris poured in 20 and 15 points respectively. Tom Christianson topped the candidates scoring with 20 points.

Talk about military marriages

There are pros and cons to military marriages and opinions will vary from one extreme to the other. However, few couples have the opportunity to evaluate the military marriage from the viewpoint of SSgt. Bernon E. Owens, of Co. C, 3rd Bn., 7th Inf. (Cottonbalers), 197th Inf. Bde., and his wife, Sp4 Dawn Owens.

They are both in the Army and have been married for 16 months. With their first child only a few months away, SSgt. and Sp4 Owens are able to voice first hand opinions of the merits of a military marriage.

"The Army has been good to us," recalled Mrs. Owens. "When we got married I was on orders to White Sands, N.M., while my husband was returning to Fort Benning from school. I had little trouble getting my orders changed so that we could be stationed together."

SSgt. Owens has been in the Army for five years. He was on TDY to Ft. Lee, Va. when he met his wife, who was in supply clerk school. SSgt. Owens is the supply sergeant in his unit while his wife is a supply clerk, so both have the same specialty field.

"I definitely plan on making a career out of the military," stated SSgt. Owens, "but my wife is still undecided."

"I'm not sure if I'll stay in after the baby or not," explained Sp4 Owens. "It is a big decision and I want to wait to see how things work out. I like my job and if I can manage, I'd like to stay in."

The Army gives expectant mothers three and a half months off to have a baby. Two months before the child is due the mother goes on leave status. When the baby is six months old, the mother must then either return to duty or leave the service.

"It used to be that when a girl became pregnant, she had to leave the service and was given no alternative," Sp4 Owens explained. "Now I can stay in if I want. I feel this is a lot fairer to married women in the Army."

"They do everything they can to station you together," SSgt. Owens pointed out. "The medical benefits are obvious. Of course, we would have them even if Dawn was not in the service."

"We live off post but do most of our shopping at the facilities on Fort Benning," said Sp4 Owens.

A really military marriage

By George Korda

The institution of marriage can be a beautiful lifelong partnership between two people, or it can be a rocky partnership which has little chance of surviving.

A military marriage has a number of advantages which make a marriage more likely to become, and remain, a beautiful relationship.

One facet of marriage which can develop into trouble is finances, and the Army has a variety of means for making the soldier's dollar go farther. Marcia Korda, married for three months to Sp4 George Korda of HHC, TSB finds the benefits of being an Army wife both plentiful and helpful.

"The money we save by buying household items at the commisary is great. Also, when I went for a physical exam and to pick up some medicine, I forgot it was free. I tried to pay for it, and the doctor just laughed."

Medical expenses can cripple any family, and a newly-married couple can be ruined by this experience. If the husband or wife is in the military service, however, their worries about high medical or dental bills can be dismissed.

One problem military marriages face that most civilian marriages do not, is the possibility of the husband or wife being reassigned overseas.

Overseas assignments can be enjoyable experiences for married couples when they can be together. For those times when they can't, Sp-5 in TSB who is presently undergoing a divorce has some advice for people in this situation. "It is important that couples be sure that if they are separated they'll be able to overcome the problems involved. They must understand that sometimes their whole outlook on life can change in the time they are apart. If this happens they misunderstand each other and work together to maintain a successful marriage."

Annual AUSA picnic

The annual picnic sponsored by the Fort Benning chapter of the Association of the U. S. Army will be held at Victory lodge on September 22.

Barbecue chicken, refreshments and entertainment are planned. The entertainment includes a Ranger demonstration, sky diving and an airmobile exhibition.

The general public is invited to the affair. Tickets are $2 for adults and $1 for children.

OWC sign-up tea

Back to school time for the children and this is your opportunity to begin "Getting Better" by joining the OWC in it's Back to School Activities Tea. Wives of active duty and retired officers are invited to the OWC opening tea, Sept. 12, from 1-3 p.m. at the Officers' Club. The tea offers an opportunity for all interested ladies to sign up for activities for the 1973-74 year.

There are 43 classes and activities offered this fall. An OWC membership card and a minimum deposit of $2 for each class is required in lieu of total payment when signing up.

The tea requires no reservation and is a free event. Membership tables will be at both entrances of the Main Club. Individual tables for each activity will provide more information and enable the members to sign up for the classes. Hostesses for the event will be the wives of the Directorate of Doctrine and Training Development.

There is a class, activity or volunteer work to interest every Army Wife.

Emotional problems of average drivers

A majority of the people operating vehicles on the highway can be classified as average drivers, although most of this group consider themselves above average. The following statistics derived from a recent survey support this interpretation.

.82 per cent of drivers involved in auto accidents blame the other motorist.

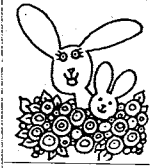
Only 5 per cent think their driving could be improved through a driving course.

53 per cent feel there is nothing they can do to avoid another accident.

In another study, nine out of ten drivers (and 100 per cent of those with a record of traffic violations) rated themselves above average in driving skills and also claimed that they were better than average in obeying traffic laws — views which cannot readily be accepted as conforming with facts and expert opinions.



Ordinarily, they may be drivers who get a traffic ticket on an average of one each five years and who just escape having an accident in the same period of time. These persons occasionally display the same characteristics as an emotionally disturbed group. An argument with a wife or husband may leave the driver brooding over the unfairness of the other's behavior. As long as this mood continues, the driver will be as great a hazard in traffic as the chronically disturbed person who retreats into his own thoughts. He is not alert to the traffic situation so his perception of possible danger is weakened. Any worry, whether over a serious illness of some member of the family or over money troubles, can have the same effect. The good driver puts such trouble out of his mind when he drives a car.

In another type situation, a man's boss may have bawled him out for something he did (or didn't) do. If the man feels that he was treated unfairly, he may become very angry but not dare show his anger before the boss. But when he leaves work and gets into his car, the pent-up hostilities may at last be released, and the anger is freely turned on anyone who gets in his way. The power of the car and the impersonal driving situation may have a disasterous effect upon the angry or frustrated driver.

Another hazard develops if the family takes untrained youngsters in the car on long trips. Constant action, shouting, crying and jostling can create a strain on the driver that will distract him to the point that he will not only be a 'careless' driver but possibly even a desperate one. As one lady puts it, "Children should be housebroken before they are taken in a car."

While drivers describe in these paragraphs are temporarily disturbed, they are much more accident prone than under normal conditions. They should stay out of the car, or if they have to travel, drive very cautiously. Enforcement action for these drivers probably does more harm than good. It produces hostilities both toward law enforcement and toward members of their family. A warning and explanation of the dangers of their behavior would be much more effective.

Forest fires burn more than trees.

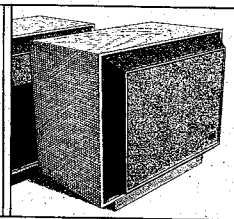
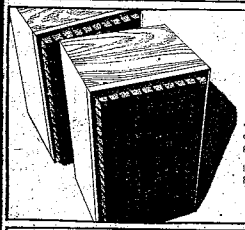
REPUTATION SPEAKS FOR ITSELF!



JBL

JBL's Aquarius 4

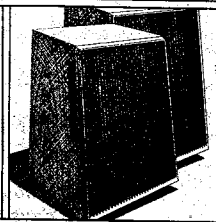
Don't let the quiet good looks fool you. Aquarius 4 started a revolution.



It's a different sound, an everyone here stands ready if you want to lift a room with sound, not furniture. If you're even thinking about 4-channel sound, start here. $186.

JBL's Flair 45

Classic contemporary design with sound to match. Deliberately understated to enhance any interior environment. Distinctive, straight-line furniture grain veneers on attractive cabinets. Use in a vertical or horizontal position.



JBL has what you think is the right sound system for this four enclosure, but for the impressionable left, JBL offers seven other sound systems for Flair. Some for more, some for less. Come listen to ours first. $426.

JBL's Century 100

The most successful loudspeaker ever made; and it's not even an original. It's a copy. JBL stole it from the leading maker of professional-recording studio monitors: JBL.

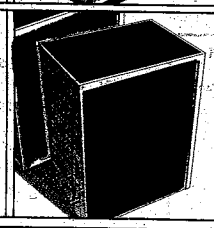
JBL's Studio Master 200

It's JBL's big studio Monitor dressed up for company: oiled walnut enclosure and sculptured grille in Smoke, Raven, Aegean, or Burgundy.

Chances are eight out of ten that the next sound you hear — rock, Bach or Bacharach — was recorded, played back, mixed down and mastered using a speaker like this. Come hear why. $597.



JBL's New 88 Plus

JBL's 88 has been around for years. It's one of the most successful loudspeakers they make. So what's the "Plus"?

The "Plus" is a way to buy a great two-way bookshelf speaker (the JBL 88) that has specifically been designed for conversion to 3-way (the JBL 100). All you'll need is $69, fifteen minutes and a screwdriver.

Fantastic. $213.

JBL's Lancer 55

It's gorgeous.

Sculpted, glass top. Hand-rubbed oiled walnut finish. Mandarin or Coffee or Indigo grille.

And behind this pretty face is an incredibly efficient two-way sound system with more presence, more richness, more sound than you'd believe possible just looking at it.

Take our word: a pair of JBL Lancer 55's and your 10-watt amplifier are everything you need to get evicted. $276.

AUSA picnic

The annual picnic sponsored by the Fort Benning chapter of the Association of the U. S. Army will be held at Victory Lodge on September 22.

Barbecue chicken, refreshments and entertainment are planned. The entertainment includes a Ranger demonstration, sky diving and an airmobile exhibition.

The general public is invited to the affair. Tickets are $2 for adults and $1 for children.

Finance

Cash payments stop in October

As part of a pay improvement action, Fort Benning will no longer make cash payments to soldiers starting with the end of month payment for October and the middle of month payment for November.

The U.S. Army Infantry Center was selected for the test due to the number of facilities available for cashing checks and the relatively small group of soldiers who are now being paid by cash.

All soldiers now being paid by cash must convert to the check method by filing Election of Pay Option Forms (DA Form 3685) no later than Oct. 10. These forms are available in all of the units. They will be forwarded to Finance and Accounting by the unit.

There are three pay options available under the check method. The first, and usually the best, is the check-to-bank option. This means the check will be sent directly to the soldier's bank — either locally or in his home town. Most banks now are on a guaranteed deposit program and the Leave and Earnings Statement (LES) is an automatic deposit record for the soldier.

If the soldier chooses this option, he is assured that his pay will be deposited in the bank and available if he is on leave, TDY, pass, or in transit during a PCS.

The second best option is the check-to-address method. This type of check will be mailed to an off-post address for the soldier or even to a relative. The only problem here is that the soldier, or whoever receives the check, must deposit it. The money would not be readily available if the soldier were on leave — unless someone else deposits it for him.

The third option is to have the check sent to the unit. The only advantage to this method over the cash payment is not having to stand in line on paydays. If a person isn't available on paydays, the check will be held in the mailroom for five days. After those five days it will be returned to Finance and Accounting.

The best option is naturally to have the check mailed directly to the bank. That way the money is readily available wherever you are when you need it.

For those who do not convert by the deadline of Oct. 10, the check-to-unit method will be automatically selected.

Send it to the bank!!

36th Engineer team to visit King Center

Commanders and race relation moderators from the 36th Engineer Group will visit the Martin Luther King Jr. Center for Social Change in Atlanta on September 11.

The commanders and moderators will tour the centers, see portions of the film "Montgomery to Memphis," and talk with Mrs. Coretta Scott King, the doctor's widow. The group will use the Center's library to expand the reference material in the 36th Group's race relations program. A soul dinner is planned. Also while in Atlanta they will tour Ebenezer Church, which Martin Luther King Jr. attended as a youth, and then visit his crypt.

The visitors want to learn about how the center functions and about its goals. This will help commanders and moderators to improve the 36th Engineer Group's race relations program.

Medical announcement

The Chattahoochee Valley Council of the Association for Children with Learning Disabilities will meet Wednesday, September 12, at 7:30 p.m. in the Dexter School auditorium.

Capt. Riggan, occupational therapist from Martin Army Hospital, will speak on perceptual motor dysfunction and its effects in the classroom. All concerned professionals, educational and medical personnel, are especially invited to attend.

Parents, civilian and military, of confirmed or suspected learning disabled children are urged to attend this program.

Pollution

Noise definitely a problem

By Tim Purdon

Pollution. Dead fish floating in dirty streams and rivers, smoke billowing out of factory chimneys and trash scattered about our nation's highways.

Pollution is definitely a problem, but have you ever considered there might be another form of pollution? Sound pollution may be the most hazardous pollution men face in the Army.

What is Fort Benning doing about it? The Infantry School, in fighting this problem, conducts a Sound Advice Program directed at the Infantryman and his hearing.

"Our display consisted of hearing tests and counseling," said Lt. Col. Richard B. Stoltz, chief, Office of Medical Staff and Operations.

"During the four days the display was up, we tested and counseled more than 250 Infantrymen. We also provided professional ear plug fittings. The entire counseling and test took about 20 minutes per person," he explained.

Of those tested, about 50 per cent found they had a slight hearing loss. The great majority of the hearing problems was attributed to noise induced situations common to the infantryman.

"We were overwhelmed with the response to the display," added Stoltz. "There was a considerable amount of interest shown."

Stateside swap

He is stationed at Fort Jackson, S. C.

Mickey Hargrave
Welcome Reception

Originally I came here to give me something to do and I've found the work challenging. It's satisfying to be able to help people who so desperately need help, in some cases. I'm doing something where I'm really needed.

Nancy Lanning
Social Worker

I volunteered mainly because I got a chance to work in the area for which I'm trained, like counseling and family education programs. ACS depends on volunteers and I feel I'm an integral part of it without being just given busy work.

I didn't want a full-time job and this is the one volunteer place where I could do what I knew how to do. It's been a challenge.

Joe Ann Brayles
Works with Special Children

I volunteered because I love children. Any kind of attention you give these children they appreciate. It's the small things you do that they like. When I leave, I feel I've accomplished something. These are nice people to work with and it makes my job nice. It gives me a chance to meet people and also gives me a chance to help. All this time (three years) has been well spent.

Sp4 William R. Clark
ID Branch and a Big Brother

The main reason is because I like to work with children. I saw children less fortunate than I was who couldn't do things because they didn't have a father. I wanted to help by providing them with male companionship.

We do things like going to wrestling matches, going to Six Flags, seeing Atlanta Braves baseball games, swimming, and going to Callaway Gardens. It's helped me to realize how much children do need fathers. ACS is helping children in the community to do things that normally a father would do with them.

What made you become an ACS volunteer?

Carolyn Lee
Supervisor of Volunteers

I became a volunteer because I think a GI can easily get lost in the Army with problems in different organizations. We try to provide him with a solution to his problem or refer him to another agency who can better help him.

We offer services which are not found elsewhere in the Army. I wanted to find a means of contributing to the military community. When you work with other people's problems, yours diminish in size.

Juanita Choate
Secretary to ACS

I wanted to get to know the Army because my husband is an IOBC student and the Army was new to me. Working here has given me an opportunity to meet people and become familiar with the post.

It's given me a better viewpoint of how Army people live. Before I thought that Army people had no problems because they had a steady income and other benefits, but now I see that they do. It's made me feel a part of the community.

Pamela Vick
Teenage Volunteer

I came with a friend to help with the special children program and they told us about all the other programs, so that's how I got involved. I was interested in meeting different people.

I liked the two-week day camp. I want to be a nurse after high school and it helped me to decide what I wanted. Also, it helped me to get over my fear of meeting people.

Drugs

A way of life for many but a hard road to travel

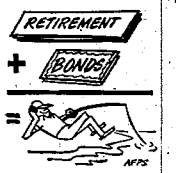
BY K. KARL KRUEGER

One Fort Benning soldier, whom we'll call Spc4 John Doe, can tell you about it. Doe comes from a very unique background. According to his 201 file, he is a model soldier: no record of Courts Martial, no Article' 15's, and no trouble of any kind since entering the service in 1971. What the record doesn't show however, is the trouble background that this soldier came from before joining the Army.

John Doe has a police record. It shows eleven arrests and two convictions. The first conviction was for possession of marijuana.

He was fined $1000 and sentenced to 5 years in prison with the sentence suspended. "This," says Doe, "was the turning point of my life. If I had been imprisoned then, and taken out of the drug route, perhaps I wouldnt have gotten mixed up with hard narcotics." But his parents paid the fine for him, and Doe continued to use drugs, graduating to halucinogens only two weeks after his arrest. Said Doe, "I experimented with psychedelic drugs like LSD and Mescaline because of my involvement with a mind group that I had joined. They advocated using LSD to 'help find yourself.' "

It was in his last year of high school that Doe first tried hard narcotics; specifically heroin. Again, Doe explains his reason for trying 'snack' or 'junk' as experimental. "I wanted a really big high, and I figured that I could just try it once, and quit," said Doe. "But it didn't work out that way," he continued. "I wasn't physically hooked on it at first, but it made me feel so good, that I continued using it, with the doses getting bigger, naturally." It wasn't long before Doe was a regular user of heroin, but his savings soon became exhausted, and he couldn't justify the amount of money he needed to his parents. Doe started stealing things from his neighbors houses, their lawn furniture, items in the garage, and finally even a motorcycle, to support his habit. Eight months after his first experiment with heroin, Doe succumbed to the fear of all addicts: he overdosed. According to the hospital that treated him, Doe was within minutes of death when he was discovered by his parents in a small room adjoining the attic of their house.



The next year Doe spent in Lexington, Kentucky, at a drug rehabilitation center trying to kick the habit. According to Doe, "I agreed to the 'cold turkey' treatment. At the time, curing addicts with methadone, was still experimental, so I went 'cold turkey'." "They took me off the junk immediately, that is no gradual reduction in the amount I had been using. What I went through was pure hell, and if you've never experienced withdrawal symptoms, it's impossible for you to imagine what torture it really is. I went into convulsions for hours at a time, and I really thought I was going to die. I vomited for so long at times, I would go several days without food or water because I was heaving all day long. My body ached continuously for a couple of months, but finally my day came, and I was told I could go home."

"My parents were really good about the whole mess," said Doe, "they didn't try and pressure me a lot after I got home, and I think that helped me to think my way through things."

Doe thought his way clear to an Army Recruiting Station, and told his story to the local recruiter. Convinced of his rehabilitation, the recruiter helped Doe obtain the necessary waivers required before he entered the service.

John Doe has found a home. He plans to re-enlist in October and says he really likes Army life. "I guess I just like the idea of conforming to certain rules and regulations," says Doe, "its something I never had to do as a civilian." Doe hopes to see Europe or Hawaii in the future with the Army, but confesses that he wouldn't mind spending his entire twenty years at Ft. Benning.

Sp4 Doe is sure of one thing, he's finished with the drug scene forever. He's been the whole route, and didn't like what he found. His advice to others who may be experimenting with 'pot' and such: "There's a lot of controversy as to whether 'pot' leads to other drugs or not, and I really can't say one way or the other," said Doe. "But I do know that I started smoking marijuana just for kicks, and eventually I was shooting 'horse', (heroin) for kicks too, so you can draw your own conclusions.

The Big Green Recruiting Machine

What is red, white, blue, and olive-drab, weighs over seven tons, goes beep-beep, and helps recruit soldiers for the U. S. Army?

The Fort Benning Station of Choice recruiting van is the answer, and it's at work right now, helping to enlist volunteers for a stabilized tour of duty at Fort Benning.

Operated by The School Brigade, the van has been driving in high gear the past several weeks.

During the first two weeks of August the van was driven to the Armed Forces Exposition 73 held in Quincy, Ill.

The vehicle is outfitted with photos, models of various buildings on-post, and a color television set that shows a film depicting the advantages of enlisting for duty at Fort Benning.

PFC Charles M. Nemkevich, who along with PFC Dennis B. White drives the van to and from the commitments it must meet, said "We easily had the best and biggest display there. More people came to see our van than went to any of the other service displays."

The Quincy trip took the van through Kentucky, Tennessee, Mississippi, Indiana, and Illinois, and covered over 7,000 miles. The van made frequent rest stops and detours for exhibit purposes in various cities along the way.

On Friday, Sept. 7 the van will be on display at the North Georgia State Fair.

Survivors Benefit Plan

To survive means to remain alive after the death of a loved one; not to be left holding an empty bag. In two short weeks there will be many dependents in the greater Fort Benning area left "holding the bag" unless their retired husband-soldiers act now.

While it's true that many retired soldiers have insurance to cover their deaths, few have sufficient, if any, plans of protection for their survivors.

The new Survivors Benefit Plan (SBP) provides benefits up to 55 per cent of the retiree's pay to widows, widowers or dependent children. Soldiers retiring after September 21, 1972, are automatically allowed to participate in the program. Under SBP the retiree pays for the protection through monthly deductions in his retirement pay until his death. The rates are quite low considering the overall returns. The rate is 2.5 per cent of the monthly base pay up to $300. Anything above $300 is 10 per cent of the difference (for example, if a man's retirement pay is $400 a month, take two and a half per cent of the first $300 which equals $7.50. Then take ten per cent of the $100 difference which is $10.00 and add the two amounts together for a total of $17.50 a month).

Until this program takes effect survivor dependents have stopped receiving retirement pay and have become solely dependent upon insurance policies, post-retirement jobs and VA benefits.

According to 2nd Lt. Jeff Leetun, SBP Officer at Fort Benning's Adjutant General's Office, "There are approximately 8,000 retired military personnel serviced at Fort Benning. A third of these have signed for SBP thus far. This places Fort Benning just about par with the overall Army response."

"Approximately a third of the vets have yet to respond," he continued. "This may be due in part to vets who feel they're already nickel-and-dimed to death or are too lazy to read the fact sheets previously mailed them. Regardless of the reason, their dependent's welfare will take the rap, not them.

Getting the vet to read articles and fact sheets seems to be the answer. We must get them to respond.

"As far as the vets with whom I have spoken are concerned, the majority are enrolling because of the low cost. Enlisted soldiers percentage-wise are outnumbering officer enrollments. Evidently not all of these men and women feel the cost is low," Leetun added.

Three things excuse the overall poor response. There are many retirees who have no families, no dependents, and there are those vets who feel they are now too old for SBP to do them any good. The newspaper publicity until mid-August has been light. The current onslaught should reverse the trend.

Time is running out. Vets who have yet to respond to the new SBP should contact 2nd Lt. Leetun at 545-1803 or 545-7224 without delay.

New concept in medical care
Patient participation

We need your help.

Martin Army Hospital's goal is to get YOU, the patient, well and to keep YOU well. But YOU must cooperate. You must help us conserve our scarce medical resources by properly utilizing available facilities.

First Lt. Dorothy A. Cocke, Army health nurse, has been assigned as the Community Health Educator for Fort Benning. She has a difficult job to change people's habits, combat their indifference, and educate them in self treatment, so that they may safely treat minor medical conditions at home.

Her first effort was to publish the "Patient Medical Advisor", a pamphlet of guidelines to self treatment of minor illness.

Physicans will have more time to spend with the seriously ill or injured patients if you can successfully diagnose and treat these minor problems at home. Granted you might feel just as had with a cold as someone else with pneumonia, but you don't need the medical attention that an individual with pneumonia needs. Nothing but rest, liquids, aspirin and time are going to help you feel better. Isn't it simpler to decide this yourself, rather than to take up a doctor's valuable time?

The "Patient Medical Advisor" gives you the signs and symptoms and proper treatment of some of the most common minor problems that can be self treated by an informed patient. It also includes medications available at the pharmacy without a doctor's prescription. It also recommends when to seek professional advice. The pamphlets are being distributed at all clinics, in welcome packets at the ACS Welcome Center, and through the Retired Officer's Association and other media. The idea is to get one "Patient Medical Advisor" in every home.

Video tapes will be shown in the outpatient clinic and the emergency room waiting areas for patient education.

A survey is being made to learn the patient's feelings about problem areas. An effort is being made to educate people on the proper use of the emergency room, the outpatient clinic and the appointment system. Appointments will suffice in most cases. The walk-in clinic is for illnesses of sudden onset and severe enough nature that an appointment the next day would cause undue suffering or danger. The emergency room is for accidents or critical conditions that require immediate attention and treatment.

Too many people use the emergency room for minor illnesses because they think that they won't have to wait as long. Or they will come to the doctor just to get medicine without having to buy it.

Your health is your responsibility — we are here to help you protect and preserve it. But you must be a participant and make an effort to join us in our concern.

Bonnie Roynon, a secretary at the North American Air Defense Command facility in North Bay, Ontario provides eye appealing dressing to one of the world's largest mushrooms. The mushroom, the mascot of the Brotherhood of Underground Mushroomers (BUMS), is made from two pieces of the 300,000 cubic yards of 2½ billion year old rock that were excavated in building the caverns that house the air defense control center.

BUMS are personnel who have worked at least 1800 hours underground. The brotherhood was formed ten years ago when the SAGE (Semi Automatic Ground Environment) complex opened.

Distinguished visitors to the subterranean defense center, such as the Prime Minister of Canada, are made honorary BUMS.

OWC theme is 'Getting Better'

What's your fancy? Garbage Art? Ballroom Dancing? Quilting? Furniture Refinishing? Wine Making? Members of the Officers' Wives' Club of Fort Benning will have the opportunity to enroll in over 40 different courses at the club's Kick-Off Tea September 12 from 1 to 3 p.m. at the Officers' Club. The theme for the tea and the coming year is "Getting Better."

Wives of all active duty and retired officers are invited to attend the free event. Instructors of each of the club's various activities to be offered this fall will be on hand, along with representatives from Fort Benning and Columbus community service organizations. OWC memberships for the coming year will be sold at several locations during the tea.

The Officers' Wives' Club offers an activity, class, or volunteer work to interest every Army wife.

Learn bridge and develop a skill that will provide years of enjoyment. Mrs.

There will be a Flea Market on Nov. 3.

AMERICAN RED CROSS

"Summertime, and the living is easy" — but summer is almost over and it's time to get back into the swing. Why not begin your wintertime activities by becoming a Red Cross Volunteer? Volunteers are needed in all areas of Martin Army Hospital, the Vet Clinic, and in the Field Office. There are many opportunities to use your free time in valuable service to others.

The Red Cross Volunteer training class begins Sept. 25, 8:45 a.m. at the Main Post Chapel Annex. But act now to assure your place in this class — call Mrs. Anthony Slovacek, 545-2235, before Sept. 19.

ALL ABOUT EVE

Columbus College Community Service Program is planning an extensive program for the week of Sept. 7-15. The ALL ABOUT EVE program will offer a major event each day focusing on a specific aspect of women's lives.

Various organizations such as the Columbus Museum of Arts and Crafts, the Cooperative Extension Service, the League of Women Voters, and the Business and Professional Women's Clubs are co-sponsoring specific activities.

The EVE program will culminate in a one day MY LADY FAIR at Columbus Aquare Mall on Sat., Sept. 15 from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. Ninety-five different agencies and organizations will have booths in Columbus Square in order to serve as a community showcase of opportunities for women.

NCO WIVES' CLUB

Aug. 25 was the Club Picnic at King's Pond and a good time was had by all. Jim Houseal and Cy Robke were the cooks and made sure that everyone had plenty of meat. About 130 people attended. The highlight of the day for the children (and some adults, too) was an Army tank giving free rides all day. Many thanks to Mary Houseal, Joan Johnson, Jackie Robke, and Bonnie Fitz for a great day.

The Non-Commissioned Officers' Wives of the 1st Bn., 29th Bde., met for their first coffee at the Dining Facility of C Company. The coffee was hosted by Mrs. James E. Musgroves, wife of A Company's 1st Sgt.

Plans are in the making for having each Company host the coffee for the month.

Plans were made to have a Potluck supper Sept. 21 at 7:30 p.m. at C Company's Dining Facility.

Plans are also in the making for a Halloween Dance at Victory Pond, date to be announced. All officers and their ladies will be invited to this function.

COMBAT DEVELOPMENTS, USAIS

The ladies of Combat Developments met Aug. 22 for fond farewells, hearty hellos, and general goodwill. The gracious hostesses, Mesdames Bruce Davis, John Korhonen, and Robert Thompson, highlighted the refreshment table with various projects for the OWC bazaar.

Fond farewells were hid to Mesdames John Daniels, Roger Watson, and Donald Oswald. Mrs. Daniels was presented a gold charm for her services.

Hearty hellos were extended to Mesdames Jay A. Hatch, Walter Ginger, Vincent Oddi Jr., James McCartt, Douglas Hughes, and Richard Knutsen.

Mrs. John McCleary shared a letter from Mrs. Robert Siegrist, whose husband recently retired as CDI's commander, telling of their exploits as they adjust to a new lifestyle.

Plans were made for the coming year and all of the vacancies for Chairwomen were filled by volunteers.

Hostesses for the Sept. coffee will be Mesdames James Hughes, Douglas Hughes, and Joseph Binkewicz.

* * *

Combat Developments held a Hail and Farewell on Aug. 23 in the Main Officers' Club ballroom. Testing and Evaluation division were the hosts for the evening.

Newcomers include Col. and Mrs. Jay A. Hatch, Col. and Mrs. Vincent J. Oddi Jr., Lt. Col. and Mrs. Walter Ginger, Lt. Col. and Mrs. Lawrence Hamberlin, Lt. Col. Darrell Basom, Lt. Col. and Mrs. James McCartt, Maj. and Mrs. Richard Knutsen, Maj. and Mrs. Douglas Hughes, Cpt. Arthur Parker III, and 2 Lt. Wayne Guazzo.

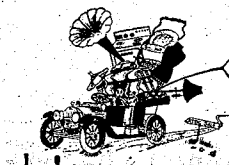
TSB

The ladies of Headquarters, TSB, met for their monthly coffee Aug. 15 at the home of Mrs. John L. Lowe Jr., Kessler Drive. Everyone agreed to meet Sept. 10 to work on projects for the Christmas bazaar. A warm welcome was extended to Mrs. Duane C. Ingram and Mrs. Edgar P. Schackelford.

197th INF. BDE.

It was the 1950's all over again at the Hail and Farewell attended by the officers and ladies of the 3d Bn. 7th Inf. on Aug. 24 at King's Pond Recreation Area, Fort Benning. It was a really fun evening, with a Disc Jockey spinning the old records while the energetic danced the limbo, the stroll, and the jitterbug. The highlight of the night was a hilarious skit based on the poem "Casey at the Bat", performed by the "Charlie Art Players" of C Co.



Lt. Col. Charles O. Annecke Jr., Bn. Commander, extended a warm welcome to Maj. and Mrs. Charles Barnes, Cpt. and Mrs. Jimmy Arnold, Cpt. and Mrs. Thomas P. Curtin Jr. and Lt. and Mrs. James Mitchener, wishing them the best during their stay with the Battalion. Farewells were extended to Lt. Bruce M. Likins and Lt. Jerry A. Coley, along with a plaque for each, as a remembrance of their tour with the 3d Bn. 7th Inf. The affair was sponsored by C Co., commanded by Cpt. Bruce A. Blake.

Tryouts for 'Rashomon'

The Fort Benning Dramatizers have announced tryouts for "Rashomon," the fourth production of the 1973 season. Tryouts will be held September 12, 13 and 14 at 7:30 p.m. in the Fort Benning Playhouse (Bldg. 1257) behind the Infantry Museum. The play is to be presented November 15, 16, 17, 23 and 24.

Set in ancient Japan, "Rashomon" centers around an incident where a Samurai officer and his wife meet a notorious bandit in the forest. The wife is assaulted and the husband killed. Three completely contradictory versions of the slaying are given in court. Which is true? Is any one of them true?

There are roles for three women and six men, plus crew openings in make-up, costumes, lighting and set construction. The production will be under the direction of Anni Tufts Disbrow. Tryouts are open to military and civilians in the Fort Benning, Columbus and Phenix City area.

For further information, call 545-2932 or come by the Playhouse.

Coming to the screen

Oklahoma Crude

(PG) Woman against the world Faye Dunaway, plans a bitter woman determined to bring in an oil well on her own. John Mills, her father who is aiming to help her out after years of parental abandonment, recruits George C. Scott from the hobo jungles.

The three of them joust with Jack Palance, snarling provocateur of the oil trust which wants Dunaway's property. Bone hard oil weller Dunaway and scruffy drifter Scott take on all comers, plus each other, in a battle for survival in an attempt to bring in their "gusher" which promises them independence from the oil combine.

The Family

(R) Jeff (Charles Bronson), a professional killer whose victims had always been impersonal targets, falls in love with Vanessa (Jill Ireland), a top photographer's model. She is the girlfriend of Coogan, a wealthy racing car enthusiast. It was Coogan who gave Jeff his last contract on his uncle in order to inherit the estate. After Jeff kills the uncle, Coogan uses Vanessa to lead Jeff into a trap where he is supposed to be killed.

Jeff escapes, exacting his revenge on Coogan in a spectacular crash scene at the Canadian-American races. Next he locates Vanessa only to discover that she is married to Webber (Telly Savalas), the head of the syndicate. Again Vanessa is the bait used to frame Jeff and force him to join "The Family."

5 Fingers of Death

(R) FIVE FINGERS OF DEATH is an exciting study of Kung-Fu, the ancient Eastern art of self defense which was the basis for both Judo and Karate. The story follows Lo Lieh, a young student of the martial arts, and the hurdles confronting him as Lo advances to the final tournament in which he becomes the champion of China.

Highlighting interest, of course, is the fighting itself, which characters beset by almost insurmountable odds in lethal action characterized by such tactics as kicking, butting, chopping and giant leaps.

Nikki takes honors at YAC dog show

The dog was judged best cared for, longest ears and best pal and was given a second in tricks for three firsts and a second in seven categories.

Mike and Kathy Blackburn's Charley took firsts in the tricks and waggiest tail categories, while Diane Barry's Fremont took first places in Most Obedient and Friendliest.

The show was inspired by Mrs. Muriel Anderson, Fort Benning Environmental Worksbop chairman, and sponsored by YAC staff members. Entrants began by studying tips on grooming, means of training, general respect, love and care for their dogs.

Winners in the contest were judged by Charles Fricke of the Chattahoochee Valley Humane Society; Captain James McGill of the Post Veterinary Clinic and Staff Sergeant Renard Booth of the Military Dog Detachment.

BEST CARED FOR — 1. Tracy Taylor (Nikki), 2. Sue Ann Buckley (Chris), 3. Kari Erikson (Fluffy).

ACS month at Fort Benning

Salute ACS

Jo Ann Broyles hands out equipment for the ACS Saturday Fun Time for special children which begins September 15. This recreation program is for any child who has a mental, physical or emotional disability. It provides such activities as arts and crafts, music, sports and field trips for these children.

Spt. William R. Clark teaches his pair of Little Brothers, Dale and Carlos, the basics of football. It is one of many activities that the three of them enjoy doing together, not to mention the monthly Big Brother outings that they participate in with other Big and Little Brothers.

Service, Self-Help and Stability. That's the Army Community Service motto, but what does it mean?

It means many volunteers working on many committees which bring life to these words. It's these people, with their broad variety of skills and the gift of their time, who make the ACS program come to life.

It's these volunteers who are being saluted during ACS Month at Fort Benning. Service and social activities have been planned throughout the month to emphasize the programs and services offered.

The Fort Benning ACS program includes the work of 12 committees:

★ ★ ★

Army Emergency Relief (AER)--Volunteers assist the AER administration staff by filing loans, calling worldwide for loan collection from a file of 1800 cases and other jobs necessary to keep the program going.

★ ★ ★

Big Brothers--Soldiers provide companionship, personal attention, understanding and recreation for boys between the ages of 6-13 whose fathers are not in the home.

★ ★ ★

Emergency Food Locker--Food supplies are maintained through coordination and supervision of food donations made by post wives' organizations. Food is distributed to families in emergencies or crisis situations.

★ ★ ★

Family Services--Individuals are counseled to assist in the resolution of personal or family problems and volunteers assist with special community family service programs.

★ ★ ★

Financial/Home Management--Volunteers offer counseling and guidance on budgeting and home managment to personnel with recurring financial problems.

★ ★ ★

Special Children--Volunteers conduct and assist in programs designedfor special children, develop resource files, and serve as teachers' aides in the Fort Benning schools' Special Education Program.

★ ★ ★

Newsletter--Action Line is the monthly newsletter which contains information on ACS activities. It is written and coordinated by ACS volunteers.

★ ★ ★

Public Relations--ACS programs and special projects are publicized through all types of news media.

★ ★ ★

Welcome Reception Services—New arrivals are greeted and provided with information and assistance in becoming familiar with the post. Volunteers also prepare records, conduct allotment and locator inquiries and refer clients to ACS helping services or other agencies for assistance.

★ ★ ★

Neighborhood Association--The Community Life Center has welcome reception and administration.

★ ★ ★

★ ★ ★

Welcome Packets--Volunteers assemble the Fort Benning ACS welcome packets for distribution to newly assigned personnel with information about facilities, activities and services on and off post.

That's the 12 committees and a capsule about each. But, how about an example? Here is one case which demonstrates how ACS can help you:

Sergeant Smith received overseas orders. He relocated his wife and three children offpost. In Germany, he started the allotment for his family. However, it took three months which is normal for an allotment to get started. Meanwhile, Mrs. Smith has had her rent, utility and telephone bills due. What did she do?

Mrs. Smith called ACS. "I took the call, "explained Mrs. Kitty See, Social Services committee chairman. "The first thing we do is get in touch with the serciceman to see if the allotment has started. We then call the schools and have the children put on the school lunch program and also phone the telephone and utility companies to explain the situation to them.

"If there is an immediate need and the allotment is slow in coming," she added, "we can wire the sponsor to authorize an AER (Army Emergency Relief) loan for up to $250. AER provides emergency financial assistance in the form of grants and loans to dependents of a sponsor on active duty.

"If a loan is authorized, we can get started on the paperwork. Then she will have enough money to meet the financial needs of her family until her allotment checks start coming."

"In this case we recommended the Big Brothers program, "added Mrs. See." Our committee is mainly a referral agency. Through our initial interview we are able to determine the problem and then decide which of our available resources would best solve the problem."

In this case Mrs. Smith was met by Mrs. Charles (Penny) McInnis, Food Locker committee chairman, and given a food bag contining enough food to last four people three days. Stapled on the bag was a suggested nutritionally balanced menu for two breakfasts, three lunches and three dinners.

Mrs. Smith's bag contained four quarts of powdered milk, cereal, four cans of vegetables, peanut butter, jelly, canned fruit, soup and a treat for the children--pudding. She also received a pound of hamburger and a loaf of bread.

"We feed about 150 people per month, "explained Mrs. McInnis. "Our committee probably has the most immediate impact by meeting the most critical need."

"Our most needed donations are the four basic vegetables, ready-to-prepare dinners and jello or pudding. We are always in need for volunteers to make up the bags. It doesn't take much time and can be lots of fun, "she added.

Next Mrs. Smith and her son went to Sp4 Gary Bunch, Big Brothers head. "I always meet the boy and his mother to explain that the program places a Big Brother with a boy 6-17 to provide an adult male image for him to grow with and gain strength from" he reported

"I tell them about our activities, " he continued, " and then find out some of the boy's interests and hobbies. I match Big Brothers according to compatible interests, with no regard to age, creed or race. I try to build a firm foundation for a good relationship."

The Big Brother selection is based on a personal interview with the volunteer, but this time in much more detail. "We ask the motive for being a Big Brother and look for desirable traits such as honesty, genuine concern, reliability and friendliness. We also check out backgrounds and talk to commanders."

The time and money extended is up to the Big Brother. "If for any reason friction should develop between the two, I meet with the boy, his mother and the Big Brother to try and work out the differences. If this is not feasible, I look for a possible rematch." Bunch explained. "The thing we stress is the Little Brother finding a lifetime friend, not just a companion for now."

So, Mrs. Smith has discovered that ACS is a crisis intervention organization with many ways to come to her need. It can also come to yours!

As you see, ACS is truly an organization that lives up to its motto--Service, Self Help and Stability.

It's people helping people.

Mrs. Jaqui Willey (left), Mrs. Denise Grizzell, and Mrs. Mary Reeves make up welcome packets to be distributed by ACS workers to new families on post. The packets contain information on all types of facilities available at Fort Benning, and can be a big help to those who are unfamiliar with services here.

What's your bag?

Commissary bags cost plenty

By Jane Macpherson

"The Fort Benning Commissary system could be saving $72,600 per year," claims Mrs. Paul Anderson, chairman of the OWC Environmental Workshop. "This is the amount spent annually on paper grocery bags in post commissaries and convenience stores."

Mrs. Anderson and four members of the Environmental Workshop have been participating in a pilot project of the Environmental Management Division of Fort Benning. Each participant was provided with six sturdy canvas shopping bags constructed by the Post Canvas Repair Shop. These experimental bags were used for normal grocery shopping for a period of one month. At the end of the testing period, the shoppers reported their reactions to LTC Harvey Foster, Deputy Commanding Officer of the Environmental Management Division and James Cannington, Commissary Manager.

"We found the reusable bags convenient to use and, because of their handles, easier to carry than paper bags" says Mrs. Anderson. "Our group suggested that in the future the canvas bags be made smaller in size and constructed on a wire frame to support heavy groceries."

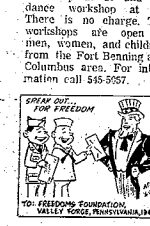
Use of the canvas bags could result in significant savings to the commissary and, ultimately, to the shopper. According to the Environmental Management Division statistics, Fort Benning commissaries spend $1400 per week, or $72,800 annually, for paper bags. Each bag costs about 1¾ cent.

"It takes 17 large trees to make one ton of paper," explains Mrs. Anderson. "With the commissary using 5 tons of paper bags a week, this amounts to 4420 trees a year we could be saving." Mrs. Anderson suggests, "If shoppers would save paper bags in good condition and return them to the commissary, we could begin to see a reduction in these high figures."

Environmental Management Division officials are studying the findings of the test group to determine the feasability of a post-wide program in which reusable shopping bags would be issued to commissary shoppers. In the meantime, Mrs. Anderson and her team of enthusiastic shoppers continue to carry their canvas grocery bags on trips to the commissary in an effort to conserve our valuable resources.

Anyone interested in joining the Environmental Workshop and becoming more aware of threats to the environment should contact Mrs. Paul Anderson at 545-5925.

Dramatizers re-open workshop



The Fort Benning Dramatizers will re-open their Saturday workshops on Sept. 8. Included will be the drama workshop with Bob Swain directing again.

He recently was the director of "The Mouse That Roared," the latest Dramatizer production. A veteran actor, he had major roles in almost all the productions his alma mater, V.P.I., produced while he was there.

He has been in two Dramatizers shows since being here and was assistant director for "Edwin Booth." During the workshop he works with beginners as well as seasoned actors to improve their theatre skills.

The dance workshop will have a new director, Frisky Harshman. Frisky was a professional dancer for several years and has taught. She may be remembered for her role of the WAC general in "Mouse." The workshop includes ballet, modern dance, and body movement on stage.

Both workshops will be held on Saturdays, starting Sept. 8, with the theatre workshop at 10 and the dance workshop at 11. There is no charge. The workshops are open to men, women, and children from the Fort Benning and Columbus area. For information call 545-5057.

Photographers compete for title

To be eligible for the contest, photographs must have been taken between January 1, 1973 and December 31, 1973. All entries must be postmarked not later than midnight, February 1, 1974. Competition is open to all branches of the Armed Services. Civilian employes of the Armed Services are not eligible.

All prints must be mounted on a 16x20 bard, either horizontal or vertical. Captions, or other necessary explanatory material, are restricted to the back of the mount only. No more than 20 boards may be submitted by any one contestant. Picture stories will count as one board when counting total boards submitted. However, the picture story may be presented on up to three boards. If more than one board is used for the picture story, they must be taped together in proper sequence.

Subject matter of photographs entered in all categories must be directly related to military life or activity, with the exception of the Sports, Pictorial and Feature (Non-Military) categories.

The eight different categories for the contest will be news, portrait-personality, sports, picture story, feature (Military), feature (Non-Military), pictorial and portfolio. No more than one photograph per board will be allowed in the categories with the exception of picture story and portfolio.

Awards will be made to the first, second, and third place winners in all categories and to honorable mention entries as appropriate.

To be eligible for the overall title of Military Photographer of the Year, a portfolio must be submitted with entires in at least five categories, one of which must be the picture story. Judging in the portfolio category will be based on the variety of subject matter presented and the method in which it's presented, with emphasis on military subjects versus non-military subjects.

Judging will take place at the University of Missouri School of Journalism in Feburary or March and winners will be notified in early April.

The Military Photographer of the Year will share honors with the Newspaper Photographer of the Year, Magazine Photographer of the Year, and Picture Editor of the Year during Journalism Week events at the University of Missouri.

Each entry package must be accompanied by a contest entry form (available at the post craft shops), filled in and signed by the contestant. Entry packages should be limited to the work of one man and mailed prepaid to: Military Picture of the Year, Photojournalism Division, Defense Information School, Fort Benjamin Harrison, Indiana, 46216. No entires can be returned.

19th Annual Attic Sale

The 19th Annual Attic Sale, sponsored by the Junior League of Columbus, will be held Friday and Saturday, Sept. 28-29, at the Columbus Municipal Auditorium.

On sale will be furniture, books, jewelry, antiques, records, shoes, toys, both winter and summer wear and accessories for the entire family.

The sale will be from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. on Friday and from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. on Saturday.

The attic sale is the chief money-raising project sponsored by the Junior League each year. All proceeds are placed in the Commlnity Trust Fund and returned to the community in various services and opportunities available to the public.

Among the major projects that were researched, funded, or served by Junior League volunteers have been; Columbus Museum, Heritage Tours, Listening Eyes School, Springer Opera Museum, Columbus Girls Club, Columbus Boys Club, Rankin House, and the present project-funding for the Pediatric Intensive Care Unit at the Medical Center.

"Today's Army is a family of families."

Today's Army means many things to many people. Here's what the Wheelers and the Carnleys had to say about it.

"I like the shopping," said Mrs. Mary Wheeler. "I couldn't believe the difference in prices, the first time I shopped in the commissary."

Mrs. Vanessa Carnley liked the medical benefits. "I think the Army's facilities are excellent. I'm never worried about getting good care for me and my family."

Private First Class Harold Carnley liked the cost of Army medical care, as compared to civilian expenses. "Our baby only cost us $7.50. I almost said, 'I'll take two.'"

"To me, it's more than the obvious benefits," said SP/4 George Wheeler, Jr. "I feel that today's Army is a family of families. And I'm proud to be a member."

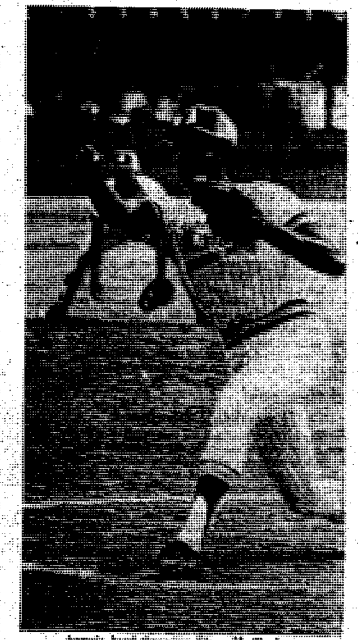
Air Force dominates softball scene

Army's entry in the Interservice Fast Pitch softball championship last week decided it had rather fight than quit.

Army's crew, coached by Vern Robinson, dropped its first two games in the double round robin affair in the opening day's action losing to Navy and Air Force.

Things changed on the second day as the hosts bounced back to stop the Marines and Navy and take a 2-2 record into the final day with a chance to win it all.



However, Air Force soon wrapped up the title with a 2-0 decision over Army. The champions lost only their first game of the tournament before winning five straight for the crown. Army again came back after the Air Force loss. That win gave the soldiers a 3-3 record and second place in the tournament.

Navy, after winning its first two games, went into a tailspin which sent it to third place with a 2-4 record. In last place were the Marines, who ironically handed the Air Force it's only loss.

Army finished second only pitched but also contributed some power to the team. Here he delivers to home plate during the interservice tournament held at Fort Benning, Aug. 28-30. U.S. Army Photos by PFC David Siples.

ROD AND GUN CLUB Notes

By Dave Deutscher

An unexpected Duty Roster change sort of dampened my plans for the big Labor Day fishing trip, but the weekend was definitely not lost.

I can't brag about Saturday; my oversleeping was just the beginning of a series of curses. By evening, my arm was paralyzed from a day of paddling against gale winds; my underwear was still reminding me of a sudden rain shower; my styrofoam ice chest lid was comfortably nestled in a nearby bush much to the discontent of some huge wasps; a waterlogged fly line seemed to have developed a strange yet consistent liking for the back of my neck; and my fish basket held only one bluegill that must have weighed a mere two ounces.

I was miserable to say the least. Raising my anchor, the rope snapped and the wind all but picked up the frail aluminum boat and carried me back to my car. Somebody up there was trying to tell me something.

Wait a minute

I examined my conscience and made a mental note to go to confession next Friday night. By now the ice had melted in my exposed chest and the temperature of the beer was approaching boiling point.

Packing up my gear I decided to stop by a nearby place for a sandwich. This little cafe lounge sits on the banks of Lake Milt-Ann just north of Shiloh, Georgia. Entering, I immediately picked up bits of conversation concerning all the fish that had been brought in that day.

It seems Lake Milt-Ann had just opened for the first time this summer. Anglers pay 50 cents per pound of fish kept. But considering the cost of meat these days, it wasn't too bad. I decided to return the following morning.

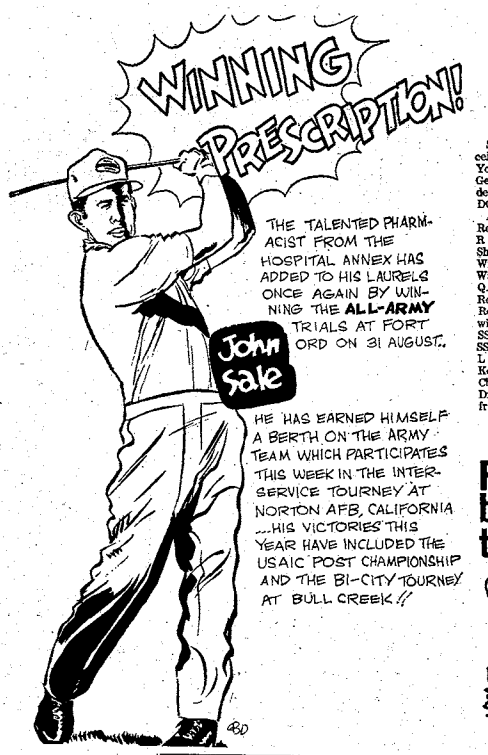
And they said, 'It couldn't be done'

Squeezing a 12-foot boat into the rear hatch of a Vega isn't the easiest trick in the world, but my partner and I finally made it and were soon headed for Lake Milt-Ann early Sunday morning. The wind was a repeat of the previous day's performance so we anchored at the closest "bassy-looking" pot.

Gary flipped a plastic worm towards a dilapidated dock piling and a largemouth cleared the water to greet it. On his next jump Ole Bucketmouth returned the purple imitation. With hopes high, I cast to a semi-submerged bush. Nothing.

I gave it an active twitch. Nothing. A little squirm for a few feet. Nothing. I began rapidly cranking in the untouched worm for another try.

At boatside the lake exploded and I almost lost my rod in surprise. I don't know how it happened, but I ended up playing that three-pounder in the middle of the boat between tackle boxes and spare poles. My buddy had connected again and we strung the twins with optimism. The next few hours were unbelievable.



From that one hole we continuously boated good size bass. Even with Bank Americard, our budget wouldn't allow us to keep them all. A non-productive cast was almost a rarity. I've never seen better bass fishing than at this lake.

Shortly before noon the sun came out in blinding glory and the bass simply disappeared. I then threaded a night crawler onto a medium size hook with slip-sinker hoping to catch a nice channel cat for supper. The bait settled to the bottom and I leaned back to stretch my legs. There was no preliminary tapping, my rod just doubled over and held there. It didn't feel like a catfish, nor a bass, yet it was truly a good size something. A few minutes later I netted what had to be one of the largest shellcrackers I'd ever caught. We emptied that box of worms, seldom having time to replace the lid. Even the smallest bream we boated Sunday was bragging size. How much is a day of such fishing worth to you? Your pocketbook is the only limit. Lake Milt-Ann will reopen its gates at 7 a.m. Saturday morning

From Fort Benning, head out Lindsay Creek Bypass to exit number 5. Travel east on the Manchester Expressway through Ellerslie and Waverly Hall. Take U.S. 85 West into Shiloh then start looking for the lake on the left side of the road.

The Homefront reports the winners of the August fishing derby at the Rod an Gun Club were ———.

Chewning selected by state

Fort Benning's Debbie Chewning has been selected by the Georgia AAU as the state's outstanding girl athlete in judo.

The 13-year-old Miss Chewning was a recent winner of the nationals held in Kalamazoo, Mich. She was the first national judo winner to come out of Georgia.

Debbie hopes to compete in the Olympics if women are allowed to compete in judo in the future. She is a student at Faith School, and is a member of the Fort Benning Judo Club, coached by Lt. Col. Charles Keaton. She also wants to obtain her black belt.

Four Post soldiers compete in matches

Four Fort Benning soldiers will be competing against 40 of the best U.S. Armed Forces judo artists for spots on the Armed Forces team which will compete at the CISM Championships September 24-28 at Hammelburg, Germany.

Fort Benning members are Aurelius Mayes Jr., Andrew Connelly, Charles Bodgers Jr., and Francis Garren, a former Pan-American Gold Medalist.

The Army members were chosen to go to the trials by Lt. Col. Charles Keaton the All-Army coach, based on past performances by the All-Army team.

The trials consist of four tournaments in which the 40 will be competing against military and civilian counterparts. The military members compiling the most points will represent the U.S. military in Germany.

Competing with the U.S. participants will be representatives from 38 foreign countries.

The role of 'E.V.E.'

Fort Benning is taking an active part in "All About E.V.E.," a week of women's activities in Columbus that begins today, Sept. 7. Mrs. Betty Hart, wife of Lt. Col. Franklin A. Hart, is project coordinator for the program. She is employed by Columbus College as a consultant for women's programs in the Community Service Program.

The purpose of "All About E.V.E.," jointly sponsored by Columbus College and the National Endowment for the Humanities (Georgia Committee), is to focus on the role of women in the community and to show the variety of opportunities available to women in the areas of Education, Volunteer work and Employment.

Mrs. Allison Christie, who did much of the art work for the Officers Wives Club cookbook, "Golden Heritage," will be featured in an art show beginning Sunday, Sept. 9 at the Columbus Museum of Arts and Crafts. This is a special showing of work by 10 Valley women artists. The museum will be open from 2-5 p.m. on Sunday, and the exhibit will continue during regular hours until Sept. 30.

Mrs. Penny Reidenbaugh, wife of Col. Charles Reidenbaugh, will be narrator at a fashion show and luncheon scheduled for 12:30 p.m. Monday, Sept. 10 at Columbus College. Kirally's will provide fashions. Tickets, at $2.50 are available at both Kirally's stores and Columbus College.

Fashion show models include Mrs. Ellie Dickey, an Army wife who is director of the Cooper Creek Day Camp in Columbus; Mrs. Carol May, wife of Maj. Bill W. May and immediate past president of the Officers Wives Club; and Mrs. Sheila Plank, who has worked with both the Springer Opera House and Fort Benning Dramatizers productions.

At 7:30 p.m. Thursday, Sept. 13 at Columbus College, there will be a panel discussion, open to the public and especially for high school age girls, on women in the professions. Members of the panel will include Dr. Micki Souma, chief of the obstetrics-gnecology section at the Medical Center and wife of Dr. John Souma of Martin Army Hospital, and 1st Lt. Nancy Zizunas, the first WAC instructor in the U.S. Army Infantry School.

On Tuesday, Sept. 11, Joan Green, Women's Bureau, Regional Director will speak at Columbus College at 7:30 p.m. She is cosponsored by the area Business and Professional Women's Clubs. Her speech is free and the public is invited. She will be the guest of the Fort Benning Officers Wives Club's fall tea on Wednesday from 1-3 p.m. at the Officers Club.

The National Infantry Museum will have a special display featuring art by Fort Benning Army wives on view all week. The display will begin Sunday, Sept. 9 and continue through Sun., Sept. 16. The museum's hours are Tuesday's through Fridays, 10 a.m. - 4:30 p.m., and Saturdays and Sundays, 12:30 p.m. - 4 p.m.

The museum, along with Army Community Service and the Fort Benning Environmental Workshop, will have a display at a day-long women's fair on Saturday, Sept. 15 at Columbus Square. "My Lady Fair," featuring 100 Valley women's groups and other social, civic and volunteer organizations, will be open from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. It is open to the public.

The National Infantry Museum's display at the fair will include a collection of Women's Army Corps uniforms and related items pointing to the important role women in service play in the defense of our nation. "My Lady Fair" is the highlight of "All About E.V.E." week, and will have displays of interest to all women, whether they are civilian or military-connected.

Other activities scheduled for "All About E.V.E." week include a "Sew-a-rama," sponsored by the University of Georgia Cooperative Extension Service. The commercial firm demonstration of home sewing techniques and fashion trends is today from 10 a.m. - 9 p.m. It will be held at the Fine Arts Building at the Fairgrounds behind the Municipal Auditorium, and will be free and open to the public.

New commader for local Naval Reserve Unit

Last month, the Naval Reserve Center, 4th Street and 4th Avenue, Columbus witnessed a change of command ceremony, in which Lieutenant Paul H. SCHNEIDER relieved Lieutenant Commander Ben R. HOPSON as Commanding Officer.

Lieutenant Schneider enlisted in the Naval Reserve while attending the University of Tennessee in October 1963. He graduated with a Bachelor of Science degree in Industrial Management in June, 1966. Subsequently, he received his commission, having had completed the Naval Reserve Officer Candidate Program at Newport, Rhode Island during the summers of 1964 and 1965.

Mr. Schneider has served in various positions since he began active duty. Some of these include Auxiliary Division Officer; Anti-submarine Warfare Officer, First Lieutenant, and Weapon's Officer. He has served aboard USS TALLADEGA (LPA-208), USS EUGENE A. GREENE (DD711) and two Naval Reserve Force Destroyers, USS HANK (D-702) and USS JOHNSTON (DD-821).

In honor of the Change of Command, a hail-farewell party was given for both the incoming and departing Commanding Officers at the home of Master Chief Hospital Corpsman and Mrs. Lex P. McClellan of Phenix City. Attending the affair were the active duty Naval Personnel stationed at the Reserve Center, their wives, and the local Navy and Marine Recruiters. A briefcase and plaque were given to Lieutenant Commander Hopson as a token of the local Navy's application for his three and one half years service as Commanding Officer of the Columbus Naval Reserve Center.

Lieutenant Commander Hopson has been transferred to the Amphibious Forces Atlantic Fleet in Norfolk, Virginia for staff training. His new assignment is with Commander Amphibious Squadron Six aboard the USS NASHVILLE (LPD-13).

Lieutenant Schneider, a native of Kingsport, Tennessee, and his wife, Patricia, a native of Trezevant, Tennessee, will reside at 7701 Knollview Drive in Columbus. Mr. Schneider has just completed a two and one half year tour homeported at Philadelphia Naval Shipyard.

Medals awarded

Two Meritorious Service Medals and four Army Commendation Medals were awarded during retirement ceremonies held Thursday, Aug. 30, on York Field.

Lt. Col. James E. Miller, Headquarters Company, Headquarters Command USAIC, who is retiring with 20 years service, will be presented the Meritorious Service Medal. He plans to reside at 5614 Winyelly Dr., Columbus.

Platoon Sgt. James A. Works, Headquarters Company, 36th Engineer Group, retiring with 30 years service, received the Army Commendation Medal, first Oak Leaf Cluster. PSG Works will make his home at 3227 Urban Ave., Columbus.

CW4 Charles R. Brown, also of Headquarters Company, Headquarters Command, USAIC, retiring with 30 years service, was presented the Meritorious Service Medal. Mr. Brown plans to make his home at 1130 North Church St., Jacksonville, Ala.

SFC Edward L. George, 3rd Ranger Company, TSB, was awarded the Army Commendation Medal and will make his home at 4122 Dudley Ave., Baltimore, Md. SFC George is retiring after 20 years of service.

SSG John D. Cox, U.S. Army Transfer Point (16th Co.), who has 20 years of service, received the ARCOM and resides at Rt. 1, Box 189, Perote, Ala.

SSG William E. Newton, Headquarters Company TSB, retiring after 20 years in the service, was awarded the Army Commendation Medal, first Oak Leaf Cluster. Newton will make his home at 5703 Jeanine Dr., Louisville, Ky.

Contracts for timber harvesting

Two sales contracts covering timber harvesting at Fort Benning have been awarded by the Savannah District Army Engineers for the total sum of $74,995.43.

The Georgia-Pacific Corp. of Monticello, Ga., bought 4,875 tons of pine and yellow poplar trees, 150 tons of hardwood trees and 200 tons of hardwood pulpwood for their total bid of $71,651.75. The other successful bidder was R. F. Newman, Inc., of Opelika, Ala., who received a sales contract in the amount of $3,343.68 covering purchase of 1,376 tons of pulpwood.

There are also 11 wood frame buildings at Fort Benning to be sold Sept. 19 to the highest bidder.

S.B.P. Deadline

Wanted: Retired military personnel in the Fort Benning area.

Did you retire before Sept. 21, 1972?

If you did, you need to contact Lt. Jeff Leetun at Fort Benning, phone 545-1803, concerning the new Survivor Benefit Plan. And you only have until Sept. 20, 1973.

Under this plan, widows, widowers, or dependent children of military retirees are provided lifetime benefits of up to 55 per cent of the retiree's pay.

Participation in the program is automatic for those who have retired after Sept. 21, 1972. However those who retired before that date must sign up for the program. The deadline is Sept. 20, 1973.

Under the SBP, the retiree pays for the annuity through deductions from his retirement pay until his death. The deduction rate is 2.5 per cent of the base monthly pay up to $300, and 10 per cent of anything above $300.

Of the several thousand retired veterans in the Fort Benning area, only approximately 28 per cent have acted. This compares to a similar average in an Army-wide survey.

All retired military who have left the service should contact Lt. Leetun at the Retired Services Office located in Room 109, Building 35, at Fort Benning. Those who wait to Sept. 21 are out of luck. By law, the deadline is Sept. 20, 1973.

Campaign opens with $150,000 goal

With a goal of $150,000 for a target, the 1974 Tri-Community Federal Campaign (CFC) opens at 1:30 p.m. Monday, Sept. 17, in Marshall Auditorium at Fort Benning's Infantry Hall.

This is the third-year the campaign at Fort Benning has combined drives for the International Services Agencies, the United Way Agencies and the National Health Agencies in the Fort Benning-Columbus-Phenix city area.

Speakers at the kickoff will include Major General Thomas M. Tarpley, Fort Benning commander; Colonel Kendrick Barlow, the assistant post commander who is the campaign chairman; Joe Windsor, Columbus' United Way campaign chairman; Mrs. Pauline Archer, Atlanta's International Service Agencies fund chairman; and William Myers, Atlanta's National Health Agencies fund chairman.

Some 44 local, national and international health and service agencies finance their projects through contributions made during the drive.

The six-week campaign is organized so that each office and major unit has "a keyman" who will accept contributions an prepare receipts for the donor's tax records.

According to James Schoonover, post project officer, more than $190,000 was collected from last year's campaign. He hopes this year's campaign will be as successful.

Donations may be made by check, cash or through a payroll deduction plan.

Since military pay is computed on a once a month basis, the minimum monthly deduction is $1. For bi-weekly civilian paychecks, the minimum is fifty cents.

The donors may make a blanket contribution which would be divided among the agencies or he may specify which agency or agencies he wants to receive all or part of his contribution.

Those receiving funds through the United Way Agencies are: Columbus Boys Club, East Columbus Boys Club, Phenix City Boys Club, Phenix-Russell Boys Club, South Columbus Boys Club, the Chattachoohee Council of the Boy Scouts, Cerebral Palsy and Rehabilitation Center, Columbus Legal Aid Society, Fort Benning Community Acitivities Association, Traveler's Aid, Shepherd Home, an YMCA.

Others receiving funds include: Diabetes Association of Columbus, Family Counseling Center, Fifth Avenue Community Center, Phenix City Girls Club, Girls Club of Columbus and Garrard Memorial Branch, Concharty Council of Girl Scouts, Goodwill Industries, Listening Eyes School for the Deaf, Metro-Columbus Urban League, Inc., Muscogee Mental Health Association, Russell County Mental Health Association, Red Cross (Muscogee), Red Cross (Russell), Russell County Crippled Children and Adults, Salvation Army for Columbus and Phenix City and the American Social Health Association.

International Service Agencies to receive funds include; CARE, Project Hope, and American-Korean Foundation, and Planned Parenthood-World Population.

Among the national health agencies are: National Kidney Foundation, National Multiple Sclerosis Society, National Easter Seal Society for Crippled Children and Adults, National Society for the Prevention of Blindness and American Cancer Society.

Others are: American Heart Associations, Arthritis Foundation, Muscular Dystrophy Associations of America, National Association for Retarded Children, National Cystic Fibrosis Research Foundation and National Foundation for the March of Dimes.

CID's 2nd anniversary

Case solved

BY TIM PURDON

According to police reports, two Fort Benning soldiers were walking in one of the Harmony Church parking lots at Fort Benning on the evening of May 31, 1973 when they were approached by two armed men.

During the subsequent robbery, one of the soldiers was shot in the back and the other had $3 taken from his wallet. The one soldier was dead on arrival at Martin Army Hospital.

Soon afterwards the Fort Benning Criminal Investigation Division went to work compiling leads as to the identities of the men through witnesses and development of physical evidence.

Within 30 hours the identities of the two men were known as a result of the CID's professional efforts. Only two days after the crime, the first man was apprehended in his Columbus home. The other man was apprehended the next day. The two are now serving sentences — one for life and one for 10 years — at the U.S. Army Disciplinary Barracks at Fort Leavenworth, Kans.

This is only one of many cases handled by the Fort Benning field office of the U.S. Army Criminal Investigation Command (USACIDC). The command celebrates its second anniversary on Monday Sept. 17.

"This wasn't the easiest case we've had," explained Capt. Robert E. Lee, the Fort Benning field office's commander. "We put quite a few manhours into the extensive investigation which made the quick apprehension possible."

The Army's Criminal Investigation Command is responsible for investigating a variety of serious crimes. Murder, fraud, sexual offenses, larceny, housebreaking, narcotics robbery which occur on Army installations and in civilian communities are a few of the crimes. These are investigated in coordination with civilian law enforcement agencie swhen Army personnel are involved.

The command with headquarters in Washington, D.C., is divided into four regions which are strategically located worldwide. Throughout the regions are independent field offices, crime laboratories and liaison offices.

The Fort Benning field office is under the third region which has headquarters at the Atlanta Army Depot in Forest Park, Ga.

The third region is responsible for rendering criminal investigative services to commanders of more than 300,000 military and dependent personnel. This region has boundaries by Kentucky on the north, the Gulf of Mexico on the south, Texas and Oklahoma in the West and the Atlantic Ocean in the east.

In total there are 12 field offices and seven resident agencies including a Puerto Rico office in the third region alone.

Lt. hangs up pistol

JAG recruits for minority groups

With the reading of Letter Order 08-31784, Lieutenant Edwin C. Scott hung up his crossed pistols and put on the wreath with quill and sword. He also became Captain Scott.

By so doing, the Fort Benning officer became one of the few black officers in the U.S. Army Judge Advocate General Corps. Of 100 officers in the corps only 10-12 are black.

"This is why the corps has a recruiting effort for officers from minority groups," explained Col. William Harris, Fort Benning's Staff Judge Advocate. "We are very happy that Captain Scott decided to use his talent for us and change from the Military Police Corps."

The Alexandria, La. native received his Juris Doctor degree from Southern University in Baton Rouge, La. He had received his BA in political science from the same school.

He passed the Louisiana state bar exam in April 1972 while on active duty. He received his commission through ROTC the previous May and attended the Military Police Officer Basic Course at Fort Gordon.

He was assigned to the 139th MP Company at Fort Benning before going to the legal section of the post's headquarters command.

"I felt my talent could be best used as a JAG officer," said Scott, "and I want to render a certain service. This was the best way for me to do that. One of my goals is to look back over the next two years and say that I did something. I want to say that I attempted to insure that due process was had.

Pvt. Pamela Jackson
Company A, Headquarters Command

No, so far as working we work equally and we're all getting paid. Wacs get paid by rank and in a way civilian women get paid by rank too. We're all working together. The only difference I see is that once a Wac gets into a field she can't change her mind, but a civilian can.

PFC Marjorie Kleibacker
Quality Assurance Branch

No, because when civilians work overtime they get paid for it. We get no compensation. The work load is the same, but civilian women get compensation or time off.

Also, if civilian women don't show up to work they don't get in near as much trouble, whereas we are marked AWOL.

PFC Wilma A. Buzzard
Finance Control Unit

No, we have these ugly uniforms that civilians don't have to wear. A civilian can quit if she gets tired of her work. If she gets pushed around she can do something about it. All we have is medical and dental benefits. If we don't like our job we can try to change it, but chances are we'll get something worse.

1 Lt. Bunny Z. Brogdon
Chief of the Juvenile Section

Yes, financially we have more opportunities. I taught school with a masters degree for six years and I'm making more now than I did then. I can see definite advantages.

We can rise in the ranks more now. There are more Wac generals now than before, so girls figure they can make it too. Look at the branches that are open that weren't previously open before.

I couldn't do all this in civilian life. The opportunities are tremendous. The doors are open.

Do you think WACs have advantages over women with civilian jobs?

Elaine Blackburn
PX cashier

Wacs have more room for advancement. They get schooling and more pay raises than civilians. They also get to travel and their medical care is taken care of. The retirement is better because they get more to retire on.

PFC Laverne H. Morrell
Allotment Clerk

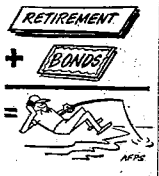
Not really. As far as Wacs and civilians, we're all equal and we all do our share of work. One of the advantages of civilian women is that they can call in sick without having to go on sick call. The medical benefits for Wacs are really great though, and we don't have to worry about getting fired.

PFC Nancy Abrams
Juvenile Investigator, PHI

Yes, because a Wac at least knows she has a steady job. Her section may be changed but she knows that she'll get paid at the end of the month. As a civilian you don't get to use the GI Bill, you don't get pay for dependents, you don't get housing or BAQ and you get no clothing allowance. I couldn't make as much starting out in civilian life. Also, you get no privileges as a civilian.

THE ARMY WIFE — The mainstay of the Army Family. She raises the children and pets, provides the family with well balanced meals and keeps their appearance presentable. She provides a cleaning and custodial service, second to none, for all types of quarters from shacks to castles, in addiion to making each one of them into a home. She learns new sports to be a "buddy" to her old man. She also likes music but seldom has time to go to a dance due to the aforementioned committments. And above all, she is already to pack up and move, in a matter of hours, to new assignments, which explains her presence all over the world. To accomplish her tasks, she sometimes needs more than two arms and one suggestion is shown above. (Photo by Bill C. Walton)

ACS



Plans Fun Time for Special Children

Fall is upon us again and September 15 marks the beginning of ACS Saturday Fun Time for Special Children.

For the past six years each Saturday during the school year ACS volunteers conduct a recreation program for children who have mental, physical, and emotional disabilities. Any child who is a military dependent (active or retired) or dependent of a civilian employed at Fort Benning who attends a special education class or school is eligible. Children of all ages are welcome.

The program provides such free activities as arts and crafts music, sports and field trips. Bus transportation can be provided for children on post. Off-post children must arrange for their own transportation.

The first Saturday Fun Time for this year will be September 15 from 1-3 p.m. at Bldg. 1803. Parents can register their children that Saturday or any of the following Saturdays. Children who are registered will be notified each week of our upcoming activities. For more information call Mrs. Lovelace 687-4187.

WAC husbands

Now claimed as dependents and receive full benefits

Until recently, any female member of the Armed Services could not claim her husband as a dependent for such benefits as medical and dental care, unless she could prove that her husband was dependent on her for more than half his support.

All that was changed, however, by a U.S. Supreme Court case entitled Frontiere V. Richardson. The court decided earlier this year that women in service are entitled to the same benefits as their male counterparts.

This landmark case will affect the lives of about 6,000 other married servicewomen in all branches of the Armed Forces. Lt. Sharron Frontiero, a member of the Air Force, won the rights for herself and her husband, who is in college, but the case sets an important precedent.

To WACs, this will mean that they are now equal to soldiers in qualifying for benefits. Men in the service could receive benefits for their wives, whether or not they were actually supporting them. But women had to prove that they were supporting their non-military husbands before they could receive the same benefits given to men.

The court case also applies to housing benefits. A WAC married to a non-serviceman can receive the extra housing allowance previously given only to servicemen for themselves and their wives and families.

The case did not decide how married couples with both members in service would be affected. That question is left open to future court cases or the ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment.

Dr. Kissinger

To receive AUSA's highest award for public service

The Association of the United States Army (AUSA) has announced that Dr. Henry A. Kissinger, presidential advisor on national security affairs, will receive its highest award for public service, the George Catlett Marshall Medal. The Presentation will be made on October 17, 1973 at the George Catlett Marshall Memorial Dinner which culminates the Association's three-day Annual Meeting. Dr. Kissinger will also be the principal speaker at the dinner.

Approximately 60 members of the local AUSA chapter are expected to attend the annual meeting in Washington, D. C., October 15-17.

During the three-day convention the Columbus - Fort Benning - Phenix City chapter will be recognized as the World's Largest Chapter and for having provided the greatest input of memberships.

Dr. Kissinger has been cited by AUSA for his contributions to national security over the past thirty years, but particularly for his effort to effect the peace agreement in Vietnam and his role in the presidential visits to the People's Republic of China and the Soviet Union, which have contributed to the lessening of world tensions.

The Marshall Medal was established to provide recognition for "selfless and outstanding service to the United States of America." The medal has been awarded to 13 outstanding Americans since its inception in 1960. Recipients of the award have included former Presidents Harry S Truman and Dwight D. Eisenhower, former Secretary of State Dean Rusk, The Honorable Robert A. Lovett, The Honorable John McCloy, and Generals Omar N. Bradley and Maxwell D. Taylor.

AUSA, with a membership of over 90,000 military and civilians worldwide, is an educational and professional organization in the field of national defense and dedicated to the principle that an adequately equipped and manned Army is vital to national security. The Association's headquarters is in Washington, D. C.

SHRIMP FOO YUNG

½lb. mushrooms, chopped
¾ C. chopped onion
¾ C. chopped celery
2 Tbs. butter
4 eggs
¾ tsp. salt
Pinch pepper

SERVES 4-5

¾ C. chopped shrimp, cooked or canned
¾ C. bean sprouts, drained cooking oil
2 Tbs. flour
1 C. water (or less)
Soy sauce

Saute mushrooms, onion and celery in butter, stirring often, for 5 minutes; remove from heat. Beat eggs until light, season with salt and pepper and combine with sautéed vegetables, shrimp and bean sprouts. Pour oil into a skillet to a depth of 1 inch; heat oil and drop in egg mixture by spoonfulls to form large patties. Brown egg patties on both sides, drain on paper towels, stack and keep warm. Drain off all but 2 Tbs. oil from skillet, blend flour in the 2 Tbs. oil, slowly stir in water and simmer, stirring constantly, until sauce is smooth and thick. Season to taste with soy sauce. Pour sauce over egg patties and serve.

BROWN RICE PIQUANTE

1 ½C. raw brown rice
2 Tbs. butter
3 C. water

SERVES 4-5

1½ tsp. ground ginger
½ tsp. pepper
½ C. seedless raisins

Wash and drain rice. Melt butter; saute rice in butter for 3 minutes. Add water and bring to boil; lower heat, cover and simmer for 20 minutes. Add remaining ingredients; toss until raisins are heated.

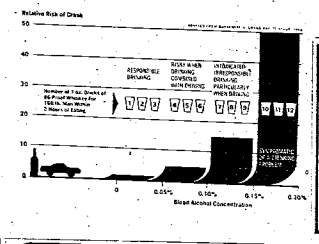
Special Emphasis Subjects

What are SES subjects? Members of the 36th Engr. Gp. have a good understanding of what they are.

POR training, now refered to as SES or Special Emphasis Subjects, are all the important subjects that you would have normally received during the period of a year by attending classes within your own unit. Now you can attend these classes in one week or four-day period.

Subjects covered include: drug abuse, race relations, CBR or CBN, arms qualification, code of conduct, safety, financial matters, Geneva Convention, plus a few more. As you can see these subjects aren't unimportant in your everyday life. In fact, they can be of great help.



There is only one test given in SES training, which is in CBN. Don't feel bad; the Russian soldier receives 40 hours a month in CBN training. Since the average class size is approximately 70, cooperation is necessary for the instructors to do their job. A person is only required to attend once a year.

The training committee that gives SES training is also responsible for ILC or the Intermediate Leadership Course which is for E-6's and above and worth five promotion points. Another course is the BLC or the Basic Leadership Course for E-4's and E-5's which is worth three promotion points.

So if you are required to attend SES training, or as some still say, POR training, go ahead and knock it out. Maybe you will learn something.

In case of FIRE, Dial 117

In case of fire, dial 117.

This is the type of sign you see in every building on post, but did you ever stop to think about what happens when you call this number?

During the past year seven men have left HHC, 36th Engineer Group to be stationed at Eglin Air Force Base in Florida. The seven men, all volunteers, are members of the 520th Fire Fighters Detachment.

These men are on standby for 24 hours a day. They help other units with the job of supporting the Rangers as they complete their Florida training phase.

Their fire station is next to an old abandoned helipad used for the transportation of Rangers. When all of the helicopters stop for refueling, the 520th Fire Fighters Detachment is close by in case a fire occurs during the process.

The men of the 520th also have an assigned area of responsibility, in which they have to keep a watch for fires at all times.

Fortunately, for Eglin Air Force Base, fires don't occur everyday, but just to keep in practice, the 520th pulls drills twice weekly.

When an alarm occurs within the area, they must load all equipment and get to the destination in less than three minutes.

Even though they are 30 miles from main post, the men do not complain about the long trips for shopping, laundry and other purposes. PV2 Cornell Bush stated, "I like working down here because there is NO harrassment and therefore more time to devote to my job. My mission here involves two jobs; saving lives, and protecting property."

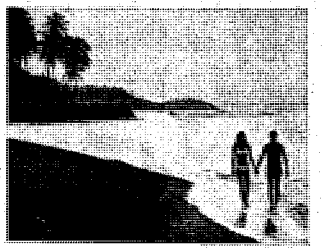
Operation Beach Duty: Eastern vacations as incredible as the airfares that get you there.

Everyone knows servicemen get to fly cheaper than civilians. But now, Eastern can help you get some pretty incredible discounts at dozens of hotels throughout Florida, the Caribbean and Mexico. Vacations like these:

The Caribbean Beach Club in San Juan for $8 per day.



Swim and fish in crystal clear waters. Relax on beautiful white beaches. And in the evening, Puerto Rico's famous casinos and exciting night clubs are waiting for you.

One way reserved military air fare from Washington/Baltimore to San Juan runs you $43.50 plus security charges and you don't have to wear a uniform.

The Jolly Roger in Ft. Lauderdale for $8 per day.

You can cruise the canals of the Florida Gold Coast Capital. Or play a set of tennis on one of Fort Lauderdale's many courts. Or simply watch the whole thing from the rooftop lounge of the Jolly Roger.

One way reserved military air fare from Atlanta is $35, plus security charges.

Take a friend or your family to Walt Disney World just outside of Orlando, Florida. Explore the Magic Kingdom, a new world of fun and excitement.

Hotel prices above are for one person sharing a room with someone else. They're good until December 15, 1973. Meals or local taxes not included.

Military fares are good anywhere in the U.S. and any time except from 2 p.m. to midnight on Fridays and Sundays.

If you have any questions, call your SATO office or Eastern. Or you can mail us the coupon and we'll send you a free brochure on these and many other vacations we have.

Please send me complete information on Eastern's Beach Duty discounts and vacations:

RESERVE OFFICERS NOW CAN JOIN THE 5 OUT OF 6 ACTIVE DUTY OFFICERS WHO ARE MEMBERS OF USAA

In keeping with the "Total Force Concept" of the Department of Defense, USAA has expanded eligibility for membership to include commissioned officers and warrant officers of the Reserve and National Guard.

If you are a Reserve or National Guard officer, this means you now can apply for all types of money-saving USAA insurance. Savings through discounted initial premiums in States where allowed. Savings through dividends, not guaranteed, but paid every year since 1924. For instance, you may save $20 - $40 - $60 a year on auto insurance, depending on your age, your car, and your location.

To become a USAA member, simply take out a policy while you are eligible. Once you become a member, your eligibility for membership lasts a lifetime, whether you are in the Service or out.

Fill out the coupon below for information on the type of insurance you need. No obligation. We pay the postage.

Coming to the screen

Godspell

(G) GODSPELL is an adaptation of the internationally popular stage musical with a score that is rock contemporary and a sense of high spirits that is timeless. In movie musical precedent, there have been only two instances, in WEST SIDE STORY and THE SOUND OF MUSIC, to approach the visual magic that is achieved in GODSPELL. Two of the songs by Stephen Schwartz "Day By Day" and "Prepare Ye The Way Of The Lord," already have become standards. The updated musical version of the Gospel according to St. Matthew is set in modern day New York City and the talented cast of ten principals brings music and comedy for many viewers.

The Last Ten Days

PG) Adolf Hitler (Aelc Guinness) celebrates his 56th birthday on 20 April 1945, in a bunker below the bombarded city of Berlin. Surrounded by his high command, Der Fueher realizes World War II has been lost but he continues on without a thought for anyone but himself as the Russians advance. Unaware or not caring that his forces are unable to fight anymore, Hitler berates his top aides, Goebbels, Bormann, Krebs, Jodl, Burgdorf and Keitel. After wedding longtime mistress Eva Braun, Hitler commits suicide with her. Instead of following him in death, the others in the bunker begin smoking, which he had forbidden them to do.

The Legend of Lobo

(G) Turning to high adventure, Disney presents one of the most unusual live-action western animal adventures ever filmed. Full of suspense, THE LEGEND OF LOBO is a powerful film about a wolf king that drove Southwestern ranchers to one of the greatest animal hunts of all time in a true adventure.

Dumbo

(G) Disney's cartoon classic DUMBO is a poignant tale of a baby elephant with over-sized ears, who with the help of a little mouse named Timothy, learns to use his ears as wings and becomes the world's only flying elephant and the wonder of the big top.

One stop shopping for uniforms

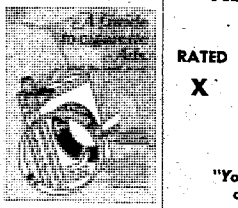
An agreement between the Army and the Army-Air Force Exchange Service will provide Fort Benning customers with one-stop-shopping for military uniforms and accessories during a nine-month test period.

Effective October 3; the AAFES Uniform Store and the Post Clothing Sales and Issue Store will merge into Bldg. 1608, now occupied by the Clothing Store.

Under the new operations, the Military Clothing Store will be open for both sales and issues seven days a week, Mon. - Sat. from 10 a.m. - 6 .m., and Sunday from 1 p.m.-5 p.m.

Shoppers will be able to make an on-the-spot, comparison of the quality and cost of merchandise provided by the two activities. The combined facility will continue to provide customers with services that were previously provided by both facilities. Alterations, special measurement clothing and footwear, exchanges or alterations and requests for orthopedic footwear will continue to be offered by the AAFES Test Store. Used serviceable clothing will be available and will be priced at 50 per cent of the Federal Supply Pricing Catalogs. An official current price list will be available at the new facility.

USAIC Aviation Bn. looks at Lockheed



The USAIC Aviation Battalion has developed a program of Adventure Training for the men assigned to the Aviation Units here at Fort Benning. Adventure Training is a concept developed by the Army to provide interesting and meaningful training to troops. It is often an attempt to do something that hasn't been done before.

The first of a series of Aviation Battalion Adventure Training expeditions was a tour of the Lockheed facility at Marietta, Ga., the plant that produces the 16-130 Hercules, the C-141 Starlifter, the four-engine Jetstar, and the giant C-5 Galaxy, the world's largest airplane.

The group of 29 men enlisted and 2 officers left Lawson Army Airfield at eight a.m. in a CH-47 Chinook furnished by the 205th Aviation Company. When they arrived at Dobbins AFB, adjacent to the Lockheed Plant, they were met by a representative of the Lockheed public relations department and conducted to a conference room where they saw a movie on the C-130 Hercules and talked with the chief engineer of the C-5 project.

Following a briefing on the plants operation, the group toured the assembly and repair areas. The high point of the trip was unquestionably the C-5 Galaxy, which they were able to examine in detail. Test pilots and engineers were on hand to answer questions and explain the unique aspects of this most extraordinary air craft.

Additional tours of the Lockheed facility are planned for the near future as well as expeditions to other areas of interest to aviation personnel.

Women
In today's Army

The roles filled by women in today's Army are expanding at a rapid pace. Where women have served in the past mainly in clerical and administrative positions, they now are being assigned to jobs as data processing equipment operators, air traffic controllers, and military police officers.

WACs at Fort Benning serve in all of these positions. Specialist Four Constance Pasukinski operates data processing equipment at the 624th Personnel Services Company, 36th Engineer Group (Combat). Staff Sgt. Ann Standeven and SP5 Carol Eby are air traffic controllers at Lawson Army Airfield, and 1st Lt. Bunny Brogdon is chief of the Provost Marshal's Juvenile Division.

According to Brig. Gen. Mildred Bailey, WAC Director, who visited Fort Benning recently, "If the Army is to succeed in forming a volunteer force, commanders must utilize all personnel resources at their disposal. Loyalty comes in all shapes and sizes."

The general reported that 434 out of a total of 482 MOSs for enlisted personnel are now open to women. "Non-combat positions," she said, "are now interchangeable as long as privacy is maintained." In her view, women will continue to fill a supportive role, but a greatly expanded one.

"In the past," she added, "The Army has had to be very sensitive to public opinion. After World War II public opinion was opposed to the idea of WACs continuing to fill all the jobs they had performed during wartime, so this role had to be much more narrowly defined once more."

The public opinion is changing. With the women's rights movement moving more and more into the forefront of American life, women's roles in society are expanding. As B.G. Bailey noted, "The Army has led in equal opportunities for women." But an army is a reflection of the society it serves, and until recently that society saw its women as being more or less confined to filling a few roles.

As the roles of women is society expand, so will their roles in the Army. Woman's time has come, both in the Army and out of it.

Women
Are needed

Fort Benning will be taking part in an effort to recruit more women for specific vacancies in jobs open to them in the near future, and special efforts will be made to be sure that all jobs interchangeable between the sexes have been identified as such.

This new recruiting effort came about as a result of a change in policy at Department of the Army and TRADOC levels. "Until now, WACs have been filling jobs as they were opened to women, but recruiting programs have not been intensified to enlist women for specific jobs open to them," said Col. Charles Reidenbaugh, Fort Benning's Director of Personnel and Community Activities.

Special efforts will also be made to see that every job is examined to decide whether it can be adequately filled by a women. "A great many jobs in today's Army can be filled by members of either sex without adversely affecting performance levels," Col. Reidenbaugh added.

"Ability to do the job is the important qualification," said Col. Reidenbaugh. "There are few jobs that women cannot do, and it is only a matter of time until qualified women are available to fill jobs open to them."

Several hundred jobs at Fort Benning have already been identified as interchangeable between males and females, and a special effort will be made to fill these jobs with women as they become vacant. Col. Reidenbaugh cited personnel management positions as an example of a type of job that is especially suited to women.

"As more jobs are opened to women, the Army will become more attractive to larger numbers of women," Col. Reidenbaugh concluded. "Previously, the limited numbers of jobs available to women also limited the number of women who wanted to enlist. As the variety of positions available to women increases, so will the number of women who enlist."

Lists of vacancies at Fort Benning that can be filled by WACs will be sent out to recruiters all over the country, and these vacancies will receive special attention by recruiters seeking women to enlist for them.

Women
Helped by courts

If the Equal Rights Amendment to the U.S. Constitution is ratified, will women be drafted?

This question has often been raised in opposition to the amendment by people who feel that women should not be conscripted into military service and forced to leave their homes and families.

But women have been eligible for military service ever since the establishment of the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps in 1942. They volunteered in large numbers during World War II and succeeding conflicts, and would probably do so again if they were needed. Women have never been afraid to serve their country.

Congress has always had the power to draft women, and was on the point of doing so when World War II ended, making it unnecessary. There is no draft at the present time, at any rate, since June of this year, and women certainly could not be drafted unless men were drafted once again.

Only a small percentage of all soldiers serve in combat positions, and the policy of the U.S. Army at the present time is for women to fill all enlisted MOSs except those "associated with combat, close combat support, unusual hazards or strenuous physical demands."

Another consideration is the fact that women have already served in combat zones as Army nurses, and have received combat pay as recently as the Vietnam conflict. Also, in this age of pushbutton atomic warfare, a 'combat zone' may be control panel somewhere in the U.S.

So the answer to the question "Will women be drafted if the ERA is ratified?" is not a simple one. In the first place, no one is being drafted right now, men or women. In the second place, there is very little chance that women would be serving in combat positions in the event that they were drafted. In the third place, women who want equal rights must accept equal responsibility, and with that responsibility goes the chance that they will be asked to serve their country if it needs them. In the case of a national emergency or state of war, what patriotic citizen, male or female, could honestly say that he or she would not want to serve his or her country?

Sp5 Harvey Lee and his wife, Patricia, were both presented individual awards by Colonel Walter E. Meinzen, President US Army Infantry Board, during a ceremony conducted in the Board Conference Room.

He was awarded the Army Commendation Medal for outstanding meritorious service during his tenure with USAIB as a mathematics statistics assistant in the Data Reduction Section of the Methodology and Instrumentation Branch.

She was awarded a Certificate of Achievement for her work as a Clerical Specialist in the Human Factors Branch.

The couple arrived at Fort Benning in December 1971 from Fort Gordon, Georgia, where he was assigned as Assistant Operations Sergeant with the US Army Southeast Signal School. He was assigned to the Infantry Board upon arrival and she was subsequently employed in February 1972.

They both graduated with honors from Bemidji State College, Bemidji, Minnesota in June 1970 and both received a Bachelor of Science degree in mathematics. They were married a year later while Harvey was assigned to Fort Gordon.

The Lees are going to Lafayette Indiana where Harvey will attend graduate school working for his doctorate at Purdue University, majoring in Mathematical Aspects of Operations.

Harvey was also active in sports during his tour of duty at Fort Benning, competing on the Infantry Board and Post softball teams.

The 67th Maintenance Battalion has received its first chaplain since 1967.

Captain Lawrence R. Kelly is the new chaplain. He was assigned to the 67th in 1967 with the 18th General Support. From Ft. Benning, he went to Vietnam and was assigned to the 173rd Airborne Bde.

After Vietnam, Captain Kelly went to Ft. Gordon until 1971. Then he went back to Vietnam with Hq. MACV.

Ft. Hamilton was his last stop before returning to the 67th. He attended the U. S. Army Chaplain School, Chaplain Officer's Advanced Course, there.

Captain Kelly served as an enlisted man in the Navy and spent a year in Korea before attending college. He graduated in 1960 and went on to Duke University from which he received his masters degree in guidance and counseling.

Captain Kelly is married and has four children. He holds Sunday services at the Sand Hill Chapel No. 4.

After almost 30 years at Fort Benning, the Radio Mechanics Course has graduate its last class at the U.S. Army Infantry Center.

The course was moved to the U.S. Army Field Artillery School at Fort Sill as part of the recent reorganization and consolidation program. The last class at Fort Benning graduated on August 22.

It is estimated tha more than 20,000 students were graudate during the 30 years at Fort Benning, from a low of six weeks The course length ran during World War II to a high of 21 weeks in the 50's. Presently it runs nine weeks.

The present course consists of learning the fundamentals of electrouics in four weeks and then applying this kuowledge during the last five weeks on tactical communications equipment found in field units.

The Electronics Committee's Command Maintenance and Communications Department, under the direction of John W. Pierce, conducted the course.

Redlegs on FTX

Becoming more of a regular duty

During August each battery in the 2nd. B., 10th Field Arty., 197th Inf. Bde., conducted two or more field training exercises.

This training schedule was devised so the unit could accomplish its mission of attaining and maintaining a state of combat readiness, as a part of the U. S. Army Strategic Forces (STRAF).

Each battery conducted separate reconnaisance selection and occupation of positions (RSOP) operations, designed to train and test the ability of the unit to move and shoot with speed and accuracy.

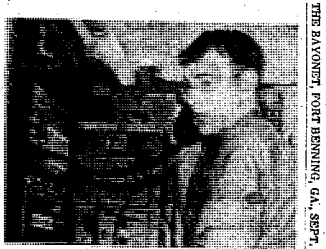
"This was the first FTX I've participated in," stated Pvt. Jeff Conrad, a recent AIT graduate from B Battery. "It was a real challenge."

Each battery moved to the field in two separate sections, forward observers and firing teams, comprised of six 105mm howitzers. Once a fire mission was completed, the battery quickly deployed to move to another position and a new fire mission.

"The rapid movement was the most difficult thing about the FTX," stated B Battery's Sp4 James Morris. "No sooner did we get set up than we were firing and moving out."

During the training a great amount of emphasis was placed on defending the position against attack. Each artilleryman must be trained to fight like infantry should his position fall under attack.

"I liked it," said Pvt. Robert M. Grillot, also from B Battery. "It was hard but fun. I'm looking forward to the next one." Grillot recently completed AIT in the 197th, becoming an official member of the Redleg battalion.



No effort was spared in adding realism to the FTX as patrols of aggressor forces were used to stage ambushes. Fire missions were conducted both during daylight hours and at night.

"Night firing was the most difficult part," expressed Grillot. "Making adjustments is difficult enough during the day. Darkness just makes everything a little more difficult."

Since the 197th Inf. Bde. was reorganized this spring, becoming a STRAF unit and a part of the Forces Command (FORSCOM), this type of training has been increasing as a part of the normal duty of the 197th soldier.

Dick D. Grube, Infantry Museum curator, accepts a Civil War uniform from Cadets John T. Dillard and Robert D. Beene, recent Ranger School graduates from the University of Tennessee. The uniform, worn in 1862 by a Union major, had been inherited by Professor Frank W. Prescott, University of Tennessee. He donated it to the museum last week.

TSB adds twist to race relations

Race Relations and Equal Opportunity is an important subject in the military service as well as the civilian world.

The 2nd Stu. Bn., TSB, put an added twist to their regular monthly Race Relations meeting by inviting the Columbus Community Relations Commission (CCRC) to hold its meeting in the 2nd Bn. area.

The CCRC has existed since 1963. Members of the commission, headed by Mr. Robert F. Galer are appointed by the Columbus mayor for a term not to exceed five years.

The organization discussed a summary of racial tension during the third year of integration in the city school system and different incidents of alleged brutality with respect to the city police department.

At the meeting's conclusion, the CCRC invited members of the 2nd Bn. for a discussion. During this period, the 2nd Bn. Advisory Council members were able to determine how the CCRC deals with racial complaints and other community affairs.

The meeting was beneficial to both groups. Each had a chance to see what is being done in the field of Race Relations and Equal Opportunity on Fort Benning in Columbus.

BAYONET SPORTS

1973 Football Season

Spc4 Vern Lewis, HHC, 2nd Bn., 7th Inf. (Limnibuckets), 197th Inf. Bde., quarterbacked the 197th All-Stars against the Athletes in Action, a group of professional football players on tour. Lewis proved his scrambling ability of evading one All-Star and tripping up two others. PFC William "Slim" Dottery, HHC, 197th Inf. Bde. attempts to help his teammate with screen blocks. Games for everyone, everywhere, even here!!

This year when Joe Namath fades back to unload you can bet your last dime that you want have to worry about Heidi to come tip-toeing through the end zone on a network special.

Football has not only become a commodity but a religion with more fateful followers than Pete Rozell ever dreamed about.

Religious services at Fort Benning are conducted faithfully on Tuesday and Thursday night with plenty of Flag Football action between companies.

Each company at Fort Benning has their own football team. Very seldom does a coach have to call a game because of lack of interest.

Post football fans can enjoy double headers, games without ties because of position rules, Post games, title games and maybe even a powder puff game. Last year at Doughboy stadium it was the real thing with pads in the Band aid and Liniment Bowl.

The local area is blessed with one of the toughest conferences around, in the Southeastern league (SEC). Auburn over in Alabama, Georgia in Athens, and Georgia Tech in Atlanta plus scores of junior colleges and high schools.

PFC Predicto will be back next week in the sports pages for the Bayonet prevailing once again in pigskin picks for the coming season. The magician of the midfield will "dazzle and destroy the pitiful pickings of the 13th PID, his first victims next week. If your unit or section dares to duel the Oracle of the oval - dial 545-4622 or 7841 and prepare to loose. Predicto picks from college and pro games that have top billing.

Football fans from around the country that are serving Uncle Sam can look to the Bayonet for Flag results on Post and for the top 20 standings in college. PFC Predicto sees the top ten as - Southern California, Alabama, Nebraska, Texas, Tennessee, LSU, Notre Dame, Ohio State, Michigan, and Auburn.

So Football fans and widows get ready for the 1973 Football Season.

BY BILL KLOEB

Dave Deutcher was very depressed by ome reactions to the story he wrote in his column last week. It seems that several fishermen at the Rod and Gun Club were overheard voicing doubts as to the existence of a body of water that could produce fish like Dave claimed came from Lake Milt-Ann.

To make sure the whole thing wasn't a dream or a trick of his imagination, Dave went out to Lake Milt-Ann again last weekend. This time he took one of the post chaplains along to verify any hard-to-believe story that might come from the trip. Sure enough, he, Chaplain Fraker and the chaplain's son came away with another hard-to-believe catch that included a multitude of bragging-sized bream, bass and a 14-pound catfish.

After this second successful trip, some of you who doubted the veracity of Deutcher's column may be more interested. Just in case you want to find out for yourself, here are the directions again. From Fort Benning, head north on the Lindsey Creek Bypass to Exit No. 5. Travel East on the Manchester Expressway through Ellerslie and Waverly Hall. Take Highway 85 West into Shiloh, then start looking for the lake on the left side of the road.

Incidentally, the boat and motor Deutcher used came from the Rod and Gun Club. According to Tom McCallough, club custodian, the club has six boats that may be rented and taken off the reservation. Small electric motors and batteries are also available.

If you decide to try Milt-Ann bring along plenty of bate and money. You pay 50 cents a pound for the fish you take home. This may seem a little expensive, but have you bought fresh fish at a market lately? The lake price is better and you know these fish are fresh.

Two Hunting Seasons Open Soon

The high cost of meat and fish will bring out quite a few more hunters this year. If you are going to believe pre-season talk, a lot of people who haven't hunted for years plan to augment the meat supply in their freezers with game.

We'll soon find out how serious these people are. The post regulation on seasons and bag limits won't be published until next week, but according to Roy Johnson, chief of the post fish and wildlife unit, two seasons will open on the reservation at the end of this month.

The first opening will be for dove on the Alabama side of the reservation. This first season will open Sept. 22 and close Nov. 7. The second season for dove in Alabama will open Dec. 24 and run through Jan. 15.

Deer hunters who use the bow and arrow will get an early start on hunters using guns. The season opens Sept. 30 and ends Oct. 28 on the Georgia side of the reservation. On the Alabama side the season opens Oct. 12 and closes Jan. 15. Bow hunters in Georgia will also be permitted to hunt during the Georgia gun season, which starts Nov. 4 and closes Jan. 1.

More Days To Hunt

The situation gets complicated when you start dealing with opening seasons in two state areas. In the case of dove hunting, which is not permitted prior to noon during the season, it gets even more complicated because you have to observe the different time zones in the two states. It's worth the effort to get it all straight in your mind. The different seasons give hunters on the reservation more hunting days each year.

This year the dove hunters in this area get a real break. The state has established open seasons for the northern part of the state with other dates open in the southern part of the state. The season for the northern section opened Sept. 8. The western part of the dividing line is Highway 80 in the north part of Columbus. Hunters fortunate enough to know property owners north of this line have it made.

Other hunters still have a short time to get ready for the deer and dove seasons. Both require planning for good results. Anyone who intends to get dove or deer must know locations of the game. Then you have to be able to shoot it. Archery shooting for deer and wing shooting at doves takes practice. You can get practice in both at the Rod and Gun Club. Call 545-6026 for information about these facilities or come by the club on first Division Road for a personal reconnaissance.

Scuba Diving

Classes scheduled to begin next week

Are you a struggling icthyologist? Do you enjoy watching fish whilst navigating through uncharted fathoms?

Or perhaps, though reality has never led quite past the bathtub, have you always dreamed you were Lloyd Bridges? Then, friend, the Fort Benning Scuba Club is for you.

The next scuba diving class, beginning Sept. 19, will be held at Briant Wells Field House. It is a six-week course with instruction twice a week lasting approximately 2½ hours.

PFC Bill Orr will teach the class, which is open to all military personnel and dependents in and around the Fort Benning Area. He comes to Fort Benning with a depth of experience in diving, having taught the fundamentals of scuba to students in the Gulf of Mexico, Florida Keys and in the Bahamas.

The native Pennsylvanian, is a graduate student at Georgia State and presently assigned to 586th Engr. Co.

Prospective students need provide their own water masks, fins and snorkels. All other equipment will be furnished by the club under the auspices of Recreation Services. For further information, please contact the Fort Benning Scuba Club vice president, PFC Tom Daniels, at 545-3615.

Some of the contestants of the greater Chattahoochee Raft Race were not to interested in winning. They just wanted to enjoy the sun, fun, and refreshments.

Army marksman outshoots competitors

QUANTICO, Va. — Army's unheralded Running Board shooter, 2LT Louis M. Theimer III, with the Army Marksmanship Unit at Fort Benning, slammed the door on his many tri-service competitors Sunday here in the final day of competition in the Marine Invitational moving target tournament.

He posted a 557 of a possible 600 point for the high daily score and grabbed the Grand Aggregate Championship with his three day total of 1,655 points.

The Wichita Falls, Texas native, in his first season of moving target competition, put together daily ag-557 to win his first tournament prize. His Friday and Sunday scores earned the young marksman the high daily honors.

The Army four-man team, led by Theimer, also took high honors each day and with it the grand prize on Sunday with a combined aggregate of 4,361. A Marine Reserve team was runner-up with the big Marine team from Quantico settling for third place.

The championship team, fielded by the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit, included Theimer, SFC Charles Davis, SFC Edmund O. Moeller Jr. and SGT James Reiber.

In the individual honors, Olympic competitor SFC Charles D. Davis, Hazard, Ky., gained the runner-up spot with a three-day total of 1,645. He overcame the stalwart second-day performance of Air Force marksman T-Sgt. Arlie Jones of San Antonio, Texas. Jones put a 535 slow and fast-run aggregate together Saturday to win both events and the day's top honors. This also put him in a tie for the running aggregate with Theimer going into the final day's competition.

Four post Judo artists compete against services

Four Fort Benning soldiers are competing against 40 of the Armed Services' best Judo Artists for spots on the Armed Forces Judo Team. The Armed forces team will be competing at the CISM Championships Sept. 24-28 at Hammelburg Germany. Fort Benning's members are Aurelius Mayes Jr., Andrew Connelly, Charles Rogers Jr., and Francis Garren, a former Pan-American Golf Medalist.

The trials will consist of four tournaments in which the 40 judo enthusiasts will be competing against both military and civilians. The military contenders compiling the most points will be picked to represent the U.S. military in Germany.

Competing along with the U.S. will be 38 other countries vying for the gold, silver and bronze medals to be given at the CISM Championships, also called the Military Olympics.

Many of the Euorpean CISM tournament teams are made up of the same individuals who compete in the International Olympics, making the level of competition nearly equal.

Army finishes behind Air Force

The Red Cross The good neighbor.

John Sale, who had won the Fort Benning and Army golf titles, found the going rough in the California roughs during the interservice Golf Championships at Norton Air Force Base, Calif.

Sale, who had won the All Army title the previous week, last week shot a 298 total to finish fifth behind the Air Force's Jimmy Gough, who fashioned a 287 over the familiar course.

"The Air Force team had been playing on that course for two weeks during the All Air Force competition," explained the Fort Benning soldier, "and knew the terrain much better than we did after two days of practice. However, we (the Army team) simply had a bad week and didn't play up to our capabilities."

Army's team finished in second place behind the Air Force hosts. The Navy was third in the team standings and the Marines fourth.

"It was a disappointment after having fired the eight-over par 296 to win the All Army championship by some four strokes," added Sale.

Wanna lose weight

The beat goes on, but the pounds come off.

That's what Recreation Services' Sports and Athletic Training Branch says can be done. And, they plan to prove it to those Fort Benning ladies who care to give it a try.

Mrs. Marti Martin will lead all those who accept the challenge in one-hour rhythmic slendering exercises to the happy beat of some of the latest tunes stretching and relaxing, bending and twisting, rolling and kicking, doing set-ups or the stomach, bouncing for the hips and burning up lots of calories. And, the beat goes on the whole time.

These classes, free of charge, are scheduled for 9-10 a.m. each Tuesday and Thursday at Briant Wells Gymnasium (next to the post office) starting on Sept. 25.

Pop Warner

Season begins Sunday at Bobby Ray Field

Fort Benning's band will help open the 1973 Pop Warner football season Sunday in activities at Bobby Ray Field in Britt David Park near the Columbus Airport.

Guest speaker will be Columbus Mayor Bob Hydrick. Also attending will be Hubert Stubbs; Lt. Col Bill Spence, president of the Columbus Pop Warner league and Douglas Nelson, the area representation of the national Pop Warner league.

Special guest will be Miss Janice Reeves, Columbus' Miss Teen-age America.

Entertaining the crowd will be the Fort Benning band and the Shrine Club clowns. Immediately following the opening ceremony two opening games are scheduled.

A Tiny Tot contest, boys 7-8 years old, will feature teams from Edgewood against the Northwest. A midget game, boys 11-12, will have Eastway playing South Columbus.

Barracuda tryouts

Dependent youth tryouts for the Barracuda swim team will be held for the next two weeks at the youth Activities Center outdoor pool.

Swimmers interested should report to coach Gary Bolton on Monday, Sept. 17 at 6 p.m. Daily workouts for the new swimmers will be from 6 to 8 p.m.

Boys golf clinic

A Golf Clinic for boys, aged 13-18, will be sponsored by the Fort Benning Officers' Club. The clinic will be held at 5 p.m. each Wednesday beginning Sept. 12 at the Country Club.

Interested players should contact Terry Cochran, Assistant Golf Pro, at the Country Club Pro Shop or call 545-4120. Clubs and golf balls will be furnished by the pro shop. No cost is involved.

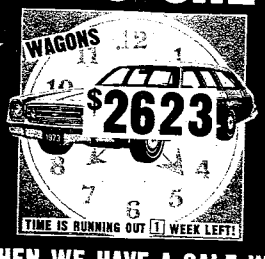
U.S. Army handgunners returned recently victoriously from Pensacola, Fla., where they made a clean sweep of the top laurels in the Annual Fiesta of Five Flags Pistol Tournament.

Dominating the action in the Three Gun 2,700 Grand Aggregate Championship, SFC Hershel Anderson, National Indoor Pistol Champion of the U. S. Army Marksmanship Training Unit, vaulted into an early lead the first day when he captured the sub-aggregate championship of the 22 caliber Pistol four match series with his 893-55X. Companion marksman, SFC Bonnie Harmon was six points back for runner up.

The US Army shooters continued to rule supreme as Anderson led an Army "Blue" squad fielded by the MTU into a clean sweep of the three gun team matches. They combined their talents to win the 22 Caliber match with 1,176, the Center Fire contest with 1,175 and the 45 Caliber event with 1,177.

Supporting Anderson with their championship firepower was Harmon, Sicinski and Rennolds.

The tourney which annually attracts many of the best handgunners in the nation, was opened with one day of International pistol competition which served as a preliminary for the 1974 World Championships.



In this three match series, Sicinski captured the championship of the Standard Pistol event with 580 and was eight back for runner up to Anderson in the Free Pistol at 552 while SFC James McNally claimed the Rapid Fire Pistol with 592.

The overall aggregate was won by Sicinski with his combined score of 1,717 eleven better than Anderson. Rennolds was third overall with 1,703.

In a "follow-on" 45 Caliber Service Pistol "Hard Ball" match, S-Sgt. Marvin Black, a talented Third Army bandgunner, won the championship with his 297 of the 300 points National Match Course. Harmon was second with 293 and Rennolds grabbed the third place honors with two less total points.

43rd in Alabama

Members of Delta Company, 43rd Engr. Bn., recently completed an important Civic Action Project for Brewer High School in Florette, Alabama. At Brewer, utilizing two bulldozers and a road grader the engineers carved out of woods, a baseball field, a practice football field, and a rifle range. Additionally, improvements were made on the existing track and football field. All the construction was much needed by the high school and the NCOIC of the project, SSgt. Jimmie L. Watson, considered the entire project an excellent training ground for enhancing skill levels of his platoon.

In addition to the NCOIC, the construction crew was comprised of Sp6 Glen O. Parker, Sp5 James Bunker, PFC Willie Hicks, PFC James A. Parker, PV2 Grover Roberts, PV2 Clarance Davis, PV2 Charles Smith and Sp5 Marsh of A Company, 43rd Engr. Bn.

Keep on Truckin'

Sp5 John W. Newell and Pvt. Marcus D. Reeves of Alpha Company, 43rd Engineer Battalion (Construction) were triumphant in the recent Battalion and Group Driver and Operator of the Month Competition. Sp5 Newell was victorious with his 12½ Ton Crane, which was brought in from the field for the competition. Pvt. Marcus took his 5-4 Ton truck thru the battalion and group-level competition with an equally low number of gigs. Both soldiers will receive a $25 dollar bond for each level of competition, plus be in line for the USAIC Competition.

Disbrow an exception?

Dear Editor,

I wish to extend my sympathies to Marcus and Anni Disbrow for the situation they have found themselves in. If things are as bad as they say, it is indeed unfortunate. But I also firmly believe it is the exception and not the rule.

My wife and I have been married three years and I have been in the Army 27 months, spending the last 21 months with the 3d Battalion of the 7th Infantry. During that time I have not encountered any of the Disbrow's problems to the extent they have.

My wife and I do not feel the "social pressure" they mention. We have a very close Battalion but through individual choice, not pressure. We socialize with whomever we please outside or within the Battalion, anywhere we wish. I have never been approached by anyone for socializing with people of all ranks for, indeed, we do.

While I will not speak directly for my wife, I know that she does not have to be "the perfect Army wife" for me to receive a perfect OER. My OER is just that: mine, not hers.

I'm very surprised at their statement of being criticized for not having children. Anyone with nerve enough to even inquire as to your reasons is probably rude at best. That matter is your personal business. We also have no children but have never been asked why nor do we expect to be asked.

I am especially saddened to read their remarks regarding church. I do not feel "great emphasis" is placed on church attendence for the weeks our Battalion sponsors church services at the Kelly Hill Chapel. I believe that almost all of our participants go to church for Christian fellowship, not social acceptance. Those that do not go are not chastised. It is their religious freedom and choice of expression, not the Battalion Commander's.

I do not wish to ramble but I do want to repeat myself and say that I believe the Disbrow's situation is not representative of most Army Lieutentants.

Your Army situation is almost always what you make of it, either socially or professionally. Most of the old social mores of Army life have been retired, and those that remain almost always help make your Army experiences more memorable and meaningful.

MILITARY PERSONNEL ONLY! In PGI Communities you are only 99 miles from Tampa, home of MacDill Air Force Base, with its commissary, PX, hospital, NCO Club, Officers Club and other facilities all available for your use. YOUR FUTURE STARTS TODAY AT PGI PARK LANE "GREEN BELT" COMMUNITIES. AD 9522 730701

IT'S CALLED PARK LANE.

Which may sound like a strange name for a space program. But the space here is green and growing. For privacy. For pleasure. And you'll find plenty of it.

Today.

Tomorrow, it will be a great deal more scarce. Because Florida will be a great deal more crowded.

That's why we planned and built Park Lane Communities in a special way. By leaving a large part of this prime residential land in its natural state. Which means that every home-site borders a wide, wandering belt of natural foliage.

So you can look out your windows and see beauty. Instead of somebody else's back yard.

And so you'll have spacious lanes for strolling, riding, picnicking. With streams and lakes and ponds for fishing and enjoyment.

And none of it will ever be threatened by progress. Because Park Lane's meadows and lakes will be jointly owned by all the residents of the community.

But man cannot live on park land alone. So Park Lane Communities offer other advantages.

Like golf and tennis and yacht clubs where you can apply for membership. Harbor marinas which provide easy access to the Gulf of Mexico. All the conveniences you'd expect from an established community.

And one more thing.

The Park Lane concept was created by Punta Gorda Isles, Inc., one of Florida's prestige water-oriented community builders. In Charlotte County, on Florida's Southwest Gulf Coast. Where 17% of the land is dedicated to the beauty of Nature. And is free from harmful pollution.

All of which makes a Park Lane Community a beautiful, peaceful place for your future. Your own private place in the sun.

So mail the postage-paid coupon now. We'll provide you with complete information on something unique in Florida.

A space program that offers peace and quiet and privacy.

In a very down-to-earth way.

Interservice Photo Contest

Specialist Four Rick Wasser, HHC, 1st Bn., 29th Inf. (Pioneers), 197th Infantry Brigade, took second in the close-up color print category with "Bumble Bee" and received an honorable mention in the same class with "King Leo."

Major Raymond T. Webber of the Dental Co., MEDDAC, who placed 12 entries at post level, took two third places and one fourth place, with a slide picture story "Burma and Her People," and two scenic slides, "Philippine Fishing Village" and "Tranquility."

Specialist Four Robert Sanders had fourth place in the TRADOC competition with his color close-up entitled "Hi Grampa." Sanders is a staff photographer in the USAIC photo branch.

Captain David C. Howery of 14th Co., TSB, took two honorable mentions with his scenic color slide "Rivers Mouth" and an experimental color slide "Brown Eyes."

All nine entries will be forwarded to the next level of competition, the All-Army Photo Contest. Awards will be forwarded to the individuals through Army channels.

Co. D best in 43rd

Delta Company has proven themselves to be the leader of the Best in the 43rd Engineer Battalion competition for Company of the Month, Soldier of the Month, and the Battalion Safety Award. Although the competition for these awards is sometimes stiff and time consuming, the various construction projects are always up to date and on time. The men of Delta Company pride themselves in the fact that the job is finished first and time to reset comes later. Although some meh may complain that they are doing an unfamiliar job they are still willing to undertake it and they always eventually excell in the job assigned. Along with the Battalion Motto of "Power For Service," the motto of "We Do For Others First" could be given to Company D, 43rd Engineer Batallion (Construction).

'Project Save-A-Toy' is given boost by PX

"Project Save-A-Toy" got a boost from the Post Exchange during September. The Post Exchange was holding a sale on bicycles, and customers got an additional 10 per cent discount off the price of certain models by turning in old bikes, or parts of old bikes, as trade-ins.

These old bikes and parts were then turned over to Chaplain (Lieutenant Colonel) Edward J. Karnis, the U.S. Army Infantry Center deputy chaplain who collected and delivered them to the men of the 4th Student Battalion, TSB, the Mortar Committee, Weapons Department, U.S. Army Infantry School; and the Post Confinement Facility for repair.

Repaired bikes will be given to Army Community Service for distribution to needy families through "Project Save-A-Toy." ACS, the post chaplain's office, and the units on post locate families. These are then screened by ACS and assigned a project officer from one of the units who visits the family and delivers the toys.

The sale at the Post Exchange will continue through the end of September, and anyone who wants to save money and help the Save-A-Toy Project at the same time can bring in an old bicycle or part of one for the discount.

Cash and letter awards received for ideas and services

FORT BENNING, Ga. — Some civilians and military working in the Directorate of Industrial Operations here are all smiles.

That's because 20 of them received cash and letter awards for ideas and services from their chief, Colonel Henry E. Hutcheson.

In the procurement division, Robert L. Wisor was presented a $135 award for proposing that the Armed Services contract for mortuary services be expanded to include air shipment receptacles.

In the services division, Frida S. Fleenor, accounting clerk was presented an Outstanding Performance Award. Nancy F. Shehane was presented a $115 award for a proposal which simplified operations with the commissary branch and improved the morale of clerical personnel.

Sp4 Robert J. McNamara was presented a $220 award for proposing that parachute packing books which break during repack operations be repaired locally for further use.

In the supply division, Albert L. Hall was presented an Outstanding Performance Award. Neil P. Russell was presented a $150 Superior Job Achievement Award. Betty W. Jones was presented an award of $60 for proposing that the Self Service Supply Center stock styrene chopping boards in addition to hardwood chopping boards for use in dining facilities throughout the post.

In the maintenance division, Robert W. Craft was presented a $250 Superior Job Achievement Award. Edmund H. Keierleber was presented an Outstanding Performance Award. Charles A. Piper was presented a Letter of Appreciation.

James C. Shores and Osiel Lunsford were presented awards of $90 each for proposals which increased efficiency and improved cleanliness and safety in their working area. Charles F. Hancock Jr. was presented a $50 award for proposal which prevented damage in the wiring system of the power supply modulator.

In the transportation division, William Young and Clyde M. Baker were each presented a $130 Superior Job Achievement Award.

Statham W. Huff and John A. McCoy were presented $200 Superior Job Achievement Awards.

General Tarpley kicks off community campaign

Major General Thomas M. Tarpley, Fort Benning commander, kicked off the 1974 Fort Benning Tri-Community Federal Campaign Monday in a ceremony at Marshall Auditorium.

"Those people less fortunate then ourselves need our full support to make this year's campaign the most successful one ever," he told those in attendance.

This marks the 23rd year that Fort Benning has joined the people of Columbus and Phenix City to raise funds for the International Service Agencies, the United Way Agencies and the National Health Agencies.

Fort Benning's goal this year is $150,000 for the six-week drive. Donations may be made by check, cash, or through a payroll deduction plan. A donor may also make a blanket contribution which would be divided between the agencies or may specify which agency he wishes to receive all or part of his contribution.

Other guest speakers at the ceremony included Colonel Kendrick Barlow, the assistant post commander, who is the Fort Benning campaign chairman. Others were Joe Windsor, Columbus United Way campaign chairman; Mrs. Pauline Archer, Atlanta's International Service Agencies fund chairman and William Myers, Atlanta's National Health Agencies fund chairman.

How did the reorganization of the Army effect you and the mission of your unit?

SFC Larry Little
D-C-E

As far as myself all I had to do was to change units. Since the reorganization of the Army there has been a lot more work in the office. I work in communications and a lot of messages pretaining to the reorganization have been pouring into our section. We are now a unit of our own where before we were under the STRAT-COM Battalion.

SFC Northern Brown
NCOES Advanced

The change has affected me very little. The Infantry has transfered the AIT and Basic completely to Ft. Polk, La., but the input will be the same. Most of the schools will be transfed to other posts to make room.

Sgt. Robert Thornton
HHC 197

Now we have to stay in top shape since our mission is to be combat ready at all times. Being in top shape means a lot more running. Before we were school support unit.

CW2 Billy Weary
1-58 Infantry
Main. Sect.

I think the effects have been very good. I think we are getting much better training. We are more mission-oriented and have a better concept of knowing what our job is. It gives the Army a more closely-knit organization under one major command instead of five or six commands.

BAYONET OPINION PAGE

Dear Editor

One of the greatest paradoxes of all time

In one of the greatest paradoxes of all times, nothing so frightens and motivates the Army as does change. Millions upon millions of dollars are squandered each year to up-date weaponry and related systems, to keep abreast of the war-market, to keep up with the Jones, lest they build a bigger bomb, a better gun, or a faster missile with which they will blow us all to kingdom come. I would venture to say, that in this particular area, the rate of change within the military is at least as fast or faster as that of say, fashions, in the civilized world. At the same time, in the more important areas of troop morale and the general well-being of the lowly soldier, the Army remains sorely behind the times. They speak of volunteer enlisted, increased salaries, overseas tours, etc, etc, etc, all in a futile effort to lull the lowly into that false sense of freedom which they must maintain, if they are to insure themselves that men such as we will continue to function for them. What they fail to realize is that as they broaden such a basis for contentment, they also create a greater need. Once they start the ball rolling, they must keep it moving and sweep away all the trivialities which have ever been their bane. The Army may well be better than it ever has been . . . but that does not change the fact that it is still sadly behind the time.

There is something sadly humerous about a GI being told how well off he is, how much freedom he has, how much money, and in the same soothing breath to be told to go get a haircut. I have never been able to figure out what it is about one's hair that people cherish so much, but such affection is nonetheless very real, and the military refuses to recognize this. Regardless of the reasons, it is now more than ever, painfully evident that the length of one's hair carries with it some mystic measure of self-pride. There's just something about our hair that we feel justly possessive about. It's ours, given us by God, and like our health and our minds, it is ours to do with as we please. If it is a maintenance of God's gifts that the Army wishes to occupy itself with, then should they not force us to eat three meals a day as well? Just as they provide us with mess halls for the care of our body, they also provide us with barbers for the care of our hair. To one, we come and go according to our desire; to the other we are lead by the hand of some benign, concerned Sergeant Major, or a loving, father-like Colonel. But, inequity has ever been the military by-word.

The Army has indeed "come a long way baby" . . . but as is usually the case, they stop too soon, again snatching defeat from the jaws of victory. The manner in which one conducts himself, the degree of productivity he is able to achieve, the unrequired lengths he may or may not go to, are all related to his state of mind. If he is happy with his work, his surroundings and himself, it's safe to say that you would at least be sure of a full days work for a full days pay. But if he is unhappy, discontented, frustrated or demenaded, it is childish logic to assume that this man, or any like him, would ever lift a finger to aid the source of his dejection. To many of us, the Army is precisely that source. Now, I'm not suggesting that by merely relaxing its control over the length of our locks, that the Army will find its troubles solved. Longer hair is no panacea, but it is certainly the most obvious remedy to one of the Army's more lingering maladies: frustration. A GI gets off work on Friday afternoon, and heads for the city for a weekend of fun and relaxation. However, the DA pamphlet entitled Your Personal Affairs does not tell us how to go about feeling relaxed or enjoying one's self, while bearing the brand of the U.S. Army, stamped upon us as indelibly as a tatoo. In the world of long hair, only the Army (ie military) remains out of step. To what purpose, must ever remain a mystery. True, there were times when such policy could be sensibly justified. Reasons of health and cleanliness being the most frequently cited. But such reasoning is no longer valid, and since the lack of logical justification is sorely evident, I think it is only safe to assume that the maintenance of such obscure policy is based only on the whims of those in a position to dictate such absurdities. The PX shelves are stuffed with all manner of hair-care items. Showers abound in barracks and off-post housing. Combs are still only a dime. And in the civilian world, hair stylists have slowly been inching out the barber.

Sam, times are changing, and if you want happy little troopers' you're going to have to come up with some better reasons than "just because" for some of your outdated regulations. If you can prove that people with short hair type faster than people with long; if they think clearer or reason with a greater degree of insight; or if those with long hair in any way inhibit the goals and achievement of the military; then I'll shave my head for you. But if appearance is your only rebuttal, if you can only combat rational expression with irrational stubborness, if you haven't even got the common sense to take off your uniform and go out into the world and see what "real" people look like, then I'm afraid I must deny you my re-enlistment . . . and there are many like me. Many.

Stan Yarbrough

Canoe race down Chattahoochee River

Approximately 160 Fort Benning Boy Scouts will take off at 4 p.m. today for a 44-mile, three-day canoe race down the Chattahoochee River.

Two age classes will be competing in the race, 14 and over and 13 and under.

The race from Bradley Landing to Old Creek Town Park, Eufaula, Ga. will consist of three legs. The first leg will go from Bradley Landing to River Bend Park where they will camp overnight. The second leg will be to Florence Marina. The Scouts will spend the evening there with a big campsite and an Order of the Arrow ceremony. On Sunday, the last part of the race will be run to Old Creek Town Park.

Teams will consist of four Scouts with two starting the first leg while the The first two Scouts will finish the race.

There will be safety boats traveling along with the Scouts on their long other two team members canoeing the second leg journey as well as scoutmasters and assistant scoutmasters.

Trophies will be awarded to first place winners in each class with second and third place team winners receiviog plaques. All Scouts who complete the race will be awarded a patch.

Special trophies will be presented to the Scout and team which best exemplifies the idea of scouting. Colonel James M. Thompson, 36th Engineer Group commander, will present awards.

.... Diabolical ....

By Clifford Sherer

It was past midnight. Top military commanders were huddled in the Emergency War Room of the Capitol Building located just off the Peoples Square in Comradeland. They had been hastily summoned by the director to evaluate new intelligence.

The men scrambled to attention as the door opened and the director walked into the room. "Set down comrades." He mentally took roll call of those present. "Our most trusted agent in the United States, Dumbsky, has discovered the code name for a new operation that is being mounted. From the emphasis that it is receiving, it constitutes a threat to all freedom-loving nations such as ours. Command emphasis is being placed on the operation at all U.S. military installations and that many of the largest industries are also involved."

"But, what is the threat"? inquired the Supreme Commander of all Red and Pink forces.

The director continued, "Not only are the U.S. military and industrial leaders attempting to accelerate this operation, but they are urging all of their citizens to join."

"This smells of the Chinese method of mass civilian propaganda to prepare the populace for a major crises," stated the naval commander.

"A grave undertaking by the capitalistic warmongers to surprise us when our fur coats are turned and they talk peace," declared the army commander.

"Hit them first!" yelled the air force commander.

"Diabolical," whispered the intelligence commander.

The director continued, "The propaganda stresses that their environment, and even their lives, are threatened and their days are numbered unless they give the operation their total cooperation. Some of the most widely acclaimed educators in the states have joined in the theme and have published articles and books on the operation. They have even gone so far as to make predictions when the end will come."

"Have we threatened them again?" asked the naval commander.

"Hit them first!" yelled the air force commander.

"Diabolical," whispered the intelligence commander.

The director leaned over the table as if to whisper in each man's ear, and continued, "I'm going to give you the code name of the operation as discovered by our agent, then discuss the actions that are taking place. I must warn you that no word of what is being said here must leave this room until we know more about the threat and what we are going to do about it."

"But, what is the threat?" shouted the supreme commander of all Red and Pink forces.

"The code name is 'Recycle,' " continued the director.

"Diabolical," whispered the intelligence commander.

"Recycle. What does this 'Recycle' mean?" the commanders inquired of each other.

The director continued, "We know the word recycle means an event or operation that recurs regularly and usually leads back to the starting point. That is how the word itself is defined. Exactly what the whole operation entails we do not know at this point."

"They've done it! They've perfected the atomic hand grenade and found a volunteer to throw it," declared the army commander.

"Hit them first!" shouted the air force commander.

The director continued, "We know that the United States has only six per cent of the world's population, but uses 50 per cent of the world's resources. At the rate they are consuming their natural resources, they'll soon be gone and the Americans will be at the mercy of the rest of the world."

"Through our highly intricate intelligence system we have discovered that the Americans to produce a ton of paper must cut 17 trees 50 feet tall! With the way they waste their paper and other solid waste products, soon they will have no trees. Their military installations will be easy to spot and the soil erosion will be severe that the United States will be like looking at pictures of the moon. By infiltrating their statistical departments we have discovered that between 1955 and 1965, the average American used 475 pounds of paper each year and 140 bottles and jars."

"My wife should know they have bottles and jars to throw away," moaned the supreme commander of all Red and Pink forces. "She cans tomatoes in old Vodka bottles."

The director continued, "On one military installation, Fort Benning, 41,160 cubic yards of rubbish were accumulated during the month of August alone."

"Soon they will be up to their necks in it!" gleamed the army commander.

"Then we'll hit them!" yelled the air force commander.

"Diabolical," whispered the intelligence commander.

"Besides the paper and bottles, another large contributor to the piles of waste are the numerous tin and aluminum cans thrown away," said the director. "They are publicizing to the people that the aluminum cans they buy beer and other products in are worth about $200.00 a ton. In addition, they are telling the people that one ton of paper turned in to a specified location can be recycled, and that in turn, will produce one ton of usable paper."

"Very tricky!" whispered the intelligence commander.

"Our agents have been keeping tabs on the industrial complex as well as the military," revealed the director. "He has discovered that millions of dollars are being poured into the building of machines and plants that supposedly enable them to re-use many of those products that are presently being thrown away. Of course we know that those dollars and the construction is not intended for that purpose as stated in the propaganda but in reality, the construction is a part of this operation called "Recycle."

"We have been able to monitor the majority of the activities at Fort Benning. This installation we know is disguised as a training center and labeled 'The Infantry Center,' but is actually one of their key control centers which uses the code name 'Disneyland East,' beamed the director. "We have discovered they have set up what they call a 'Recycle Point' that is located on Gaudetts Street, one block west of their commissuary parking lot, adjacent to the car rental lot. Once again our superior snooping techniques revealed that the operating hours of this so-called 'Recycle Point' are from 8:00 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Monday thru Friday. Our satellite photos have revealed there is a large wooden box next to the main entrance where people are encouraged to deposit their items in the event that the gate is not open."

"Diabolical," whispered the intelligence commander.

The director added, "A special division has also been created at Fort Benning called 'The Environmental Management Division.' It is attempting to persuade all personnel living and working on Fort Benning to wash their bottles and cans and bring these with their papers and magazines to the 'Recycle Point.' They are telling the people that these items will be sold throught the Base Property Disposal Unit and that the profits will be funneled back into the U.S. Treasury, which will amount to a saving for the government, and in the long run, to the individuals themselves."

"That division is supposedly working on environmental control, monitoring erosion, the dumping of trash on the post and numerous other programs concerning ecology. Of course, we know that this is a disguise and that the division has actually been created for a strategic reason. But, what their real mission is, we have yet to discover. We do have evidence that the division has placed some huge metal containers labeled 'Dempsty Dumpsters' near the Officers BOQ's and intend to place more near each of the dependent schools. They are telling the people that these containers are to be used for waste paper and that the paper will be delivered to the 'Recycle Point.' Undoubtedly those containers house some form of secret weapon and through our untiring efforts we will eventually discover the real purpose."

"This is all the information that we have at this point, but it appears that this 'Operation Recycle' is being given top priority within the states. We have yet to discover these warmongers' true intentions. Based on the reports and the obvious international plot, do you have any suggestions as to what our actions should be?" asked the director.

"How about opening a junk yard outside of this post?" whispered the intelligence commander. "We'll make a fortune!"

BBOD

The officers' wives of Staff Group, BBOD, attended a coffee at the home of Mrs. Sanders A. Cortner on Sept. 5. Co-hostesses were Mesdames Peter Boukalis, Thomas L. Patterson and Fred Stepaniak.

Mrs. Cortner welcomed guests, Mrs. Lawrence L. Mowery, Mrs. Allan Buckner and Mrs. Willie Skinner. Mrs. Skinner was belatedly presented with a follow-me charm as a farewell token from the group.

A warm welcome was also extended to the following newcomers: Mesdames John P. Jackson, John T. Ball, Douglas L. Boling, Robert B. Simpson and William F. Kohler.

Several announcements were made, among which were a Bazaar Workshop to be held at the OWC Lounge on Sept. 27 at 7 p.m.

Plans for Oct. include the Heritage Tour in Columbus and lunch at the Goetchius House.

NCO WIVES' CLUB

Sept. 5 the NCO Wives' Club had a Hail and Farewell Coffee. It was a pleasure to welcome Mrs. Robert Kearnes, the wife of the new Post Sergeant Major. All who attended were impressed by the appearance of the newly redecorated Clubhouse. The largest share of the credit goes to our Treasurer, Mary Houseal. Thanks to Mary and all the people who helped her — CPO James Houseal, Mr. and Mrs. Forest Allen, SFC and Mrs. Oliver Williams, MSgt. and Mrs. Hayford Watson, SFC L. C. McCalla, SFC and Mrs. Charles A. Spencer, SFC and Mrs. Jesse Bramlett, MSgt. and Mrs. Cyril Rohlke, SFC and Mrs. Leland Jones, CySgt. and Mrs. William Leschak,

Exercises to music

All Fort Benning Ladies are cordially invited to attend an open house and coffee introducing Recreation Services' newest activity "Exercises to Music". The coffee which will be held at Briant Wells Fieldhouse on 25 September at 0930 is also to welcome Mrs. Marti Martin to Fort Bennitg, Mrs. Martin will instruct these classes.

Exercises by themselves can be a rather gruesome affair but Marti adds a zest to the process by recorded accompaniment in the form of the latest tunes.

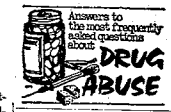
Classes will be offered Tuesdays and Thursdays from 9 to 10 a.m. beginning 25 September. Mrs. Martin asks that ladies bring leotards preferably or loose fitting, exercise-type clothes.

All Fort Benning ladies are most welcome to come to the new and free exercise classes.

OWC

Back-to-school Tea

By Marsha Graham



Ladies of the Officer's Wives Club found there was something for everyone at the OWC Back-to-School Activities Tea on Sept. 12.

Members enrolled in activities, volunteer work programs and classes to learn new skills.

Mrs. A. E. Richards, OWC president, welcomed the members and thanked the ladies of the Directorate of Doctrine and Training Development for hostessing the tea. Gen. William R. Richardson was the guest speaker for the event.

Mrs. Thomas F. Schatzman, program chairman, and Mrs. Edgar D. Maddox, second vice-president, coordinated the tea. Mrs. Valmore Girard provided music for the group.

The next OWC function will be a "Sew Your Own Fashion Show" on Oct. 10.

PWOC

New year of Bible studies and meetings begin

Protestant Women of the Chapel (PWOC) have started their new year of Bible Studies and meetings. A study of the book of Luke will take place on the first three Wednesdays of each month.

The study is held in the Adult Sunday School building at the Religious Education Center on Dixie Road from 9-11 a.m. There is also a time of worship to God through prayer, singing and testimonies.

On the fourth Wednesday of the month there is a special meeting at the Main Post Protestant Chapel. Next week, on September 26, the new officers will be installed at the Protestant Chapel at 10 a.m. For further information call Jo Hughes, 545-7608 or Ann Wilson, 689-8648.

Dramatizers looking for scripts

If you have a play and would like to direct it, the Fort Benning Dramatizers are looking for you.

Ms. Ann Disbrow, Dramatizers president told the Bayonet that prospective directors should present their script, from Shakespeare to Lerner and Lowe to an original work written with a Bic banana — complete with their interpretations — to her at the Fort Benning Playhouse, located in building 1237, behind the Infantry Museum.

Scripts and treatments may be submitted anytime, according to Ms. Disbrow, who recommends prospective directors to stop by the Dramatizers weekly meetings on Monday at 7 p.m. in the Playhouse.

Scripts and treatments will be voted on by the general membership and the executive council for presentation after their current presentation "Rashomon" closes the end of November.

Rosh Hashanah

Chaplain (Capt.) Glenn M. Stengel has arrived at Fort Benning just in time to conduct Rosh Hashanah services.

Rosh Hashanah is both a universal and a personal holy day. It has a lesson for all humanity and at the same time guides the individual in his own conduct. It calls man's attention to his weaknesses and urges that he look to the realities of life.

The Zodiac sign of Tishri, the month in which Rosh Hashanah occurs, symbolically reminds man that his deeds are weighed and judged in the Book of Life. Yom Kippur is the culmination of the 10 days of repentance. It is a day for prayer and meditation, known as the Day of Atonement.

High Holy Day services will be held on post Sept. 26 at 8 p.m., Sept. 27 at 9:30 a.m. and 8 p.m. and Sept. 28 at 9:30 a.m. with a lunch-buffet at 1 p.m. Yom Kippur Kel Nidre services will be held Oct. 5 at 6 p.m. and all day services will be Oct. 6 beginning at 9:30 a.m. with a Break the Fast at 1 p.m.

The Jewish Center is located in Bldg. 2622 in the Religious Education Center at Dixie Rd. and Collins Loop. The number for Chaplain Stengel is 545-7843, 4942.

Chaplain Stengel invites everyone to the services on post. He came here from the Panama Canal Zone after a three-year tour there with his wife and four children. Before that he spent a tour in Vietnam and Fort Bragg, N. C.

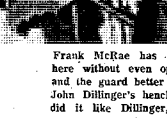
The Man Who Loved Cat Dancing

(PG) Ex-Army Capt. Burt Reynolds stages a train robbery, aided by Jack Warden and Bo Hopkins. They are forced to take along Sarah Miles, who is running away from her husband George Hamilton, a rich mine owner. Hamilton joins Lee J. Cobb's posse, while Reynolds and his band find refuge at a ranch. Hopkins tries to force himself on Miles and is beaten by Warden. Under attack by Indians, Reynolds and Miles discover they love each other, he later reveals that he wanted the money to buy back his children by Indian wife Cat Dancing.



Reynolds had killed her supposed lover and is accused of having caused her death also. After a vicious fight with Warden, Reynolds is wounded by Hamilton in the mountains.

Little Laura and Big John

(R) Florida had its shoot-'em-up runners, bank holdup gangs and Bonnie-and-Clyde type of backwoods characters in the 1920s. Karen Black and Fabian Forte are seen as Little Lauro and Big John, leaders of the infamous Ashley gang who terrorized the state of Florida in the 20's.

The film will be halarious and amusing to today's hot-rod enthusiasts as they see the vintage 1912 to 1920 vehicles used as getaway cars, in almost a creeping pace, with the clumsy and bumbling sheriff and deputies shooting with rifles as the cars careen at 25 miles an hour.

The French Connection

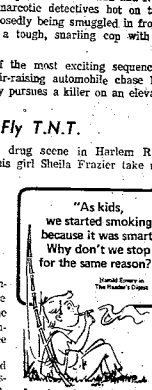
(R) The story, based on Robin Moore's book, with overtones of two real life cops, Gene Hackman and Roy Scheider, finds the two narcotic detectives hot on the trail of some heroin supposedly being smuggled in from Marseilles. Hackman is a tough, snarling cop with a short fuse.

The highlight, one of the most exciting sequences since BULLITT, is a hair-raising automohile chase by Hackman as he recklessly pursues a killer on an elevated train.

Super Fly T.N.T.

Having deserted the drug scene in Harlem Ron O'Neal (as Priest) and his girl Sheila Frazier take up residence in Rome. O'Neal is a big winner at the nightly poker sessions run by Jacques Sernas, gambler and gun runner. Dr. Roscoe Lee Browne, representing the small African nation of Umbia, needs guns to help his country gain independence.

Government troops have been stopping shipments of arms reaching the revolutionaries. When Browne appeals to O'Neal's sense of brotherhood, the ex-dope pusher refuses but then reconsiders. He forces Sernas to cooperate and flies the guns into Umbia. O'Neal is captured and tortured. Escaping, O'Neal defines T.N.T. "Taint Nothin To It."



Canine Classes

The second annual canine basic obedience course will begin Oct. 2 at the main post Recreation Center (formerly the Service Club).

Canine classes are slated each Tuesday and Thursday from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. for four weeks. Classes are open to all military and DA civilians providing their dogs are at least eight months old and have had all shots.

Dependents between 10 and 15 years old are welcomed to escort their dogs however, the post Scout Dog Committee, which will supervise the classes, requests that only dogs under 40 pounds be accompanied by young persons.

Those interested may sign up at the post Recreation Center before Sept. 30. For further information call 545-4404 or 545-1375.

TRADOC

FORSCOM

Reorganization background

The succession of major command and control organizations that has now culminated in today's Army could be considered to have begun in July 1940, when the War Department established General Headquarters U.S. Army.

During the War Department reorganization of 1942, the War Department's functions within the United States were given to three new major commands — Army Ground Forces, Army Air Forces, and Army Service Forces. Personnel assigned to Army Ground Forces wore the same red, white and blue shoulder patch that is worn today by the men and women of the U.S. Army Forces Command headquarters.

In 1946, following the end of World War II, the War Department again reorganized the Army. Six Continental Armies and the Military District of Washington were organized, and Army Service Forces was abolished. Department of the Air Force was created as a separate service as a result of the National Security Act of 1947, replacing the Army Air Corps. In March 1948 the Army formed the Office, Chief of Army Field Forces to replace Army Ground Forces.

Army Field Forces was redesignated as Headquarters, Continental Army Command effective February 1955. In January 1957 the name was changed to United States Continental Army Command (USCONARC).

During 1956, the Department of the Army had changed the title of General Reserve and designated an emergency strike force for limited wars to be known as the Strategic Army Force. The following year these terms were replaced, respectively, with Strategic Army Forces (STRAF) and Strategic Army Corps (STRAC).

In 1961, the Joint Chiefs of Staff obtained approval to organize the U.S. Strike Command (STRICOM) and USCONARC's commanding general was designated Army component commander of Strike Command with the additional title of Commander in Chief, U.S. Army Forces, Strike Command (ARSTRIKE).

As a result of the 1962 Army reorganization, USCONARC assumed command of all U.S. Army Reserve units and individuals in the United States, while retaining control of STRAF units. Another step toward developing Department of the Army's strategic force concept was taken in 1965 when the designation "U.S. Army's Reserve Reinforcing Units," was replaced by the terms "Selected Reserve Forces" and "Combat Service Support Units for the Field Army."

In 1971, the Joint Chiefs of Staff further realigned the command structure and in January 1972 the U.S. Readiness Command (REDCOM) was activated to replace U.S. Strike Command. Consurrently USCONARC became the Army component of U.S. Readiness Command (ARRED).

The reorganization of the Army completed last July eliminated Continental Army Command, Combat Developments Command and Third Army through deactivation.

U.S. Army Forces Command is now responsible for the combat readiness of all units and the U.S. Army Training and Doctrine Command is responsible for individual training and combat development activities. The establishment of these two organizations, along with a major realignment of the Army Materiel Command and activation of a new Health Services Command, will provide improved readiness, more effective use of resources, a more responsive combat developments process and improved management.

What happened to "Patton's Third?"

Under an Army reorganization some units must phase out into history. Such was the case of the third U.S. Army, inactivated under the Army reorganization effective July 1 of this year.

The Third Army, which has been called "Patton's Third" and "The Lucky Third", was originally organized from combat units of World War I and activated at Ligny-en-Barrois, France on Nov. 15, 1918. It was assigned to occupational duty on the Rhine in Germany following the surrender of the Kaiser's Army November 11.

After this duty of policing a defeated nation, the Army reverted to an inactive status July 2, 1919 and the troops were returned to the United States. The Third Army was again reactivated as a part of this country's National Defense Plan on Aug. 9, 1932.

Howdy General

Third Army Headquarters, located in Fort Sam Houston, Tex. in January, 1944, was alerted for overseas movement to the European Theatre of Operations and was met in England by Lt. Gen. George S. Patton, Jr., who had been designated Third Army Commander.

"Your names and the name of the Third Army will go down in history — or they will go down in the records of the Graves Registration Bureau," he told his men.

Third Army units, under what was considered the dynamic and brilliant leadership of Gen. Patton, chose the first alternative and immediately began training for the vital role they were to play in the liberation of Europe. They dashed through France, Belgium and Luxembourg and on into Germany, Austria and Czechoslavakia. The Third Army was awarded battle honors for World War II Campaigns including Northern France, Normandy, Rhineland, Ardennes and Central Europe. Some 34,840 men won decorations for that period.

Picking Peaches

Third Army was transferred to Atlanta, Ga. in March 1947, where Ft. McPherson was selected as the headquarters site in December of that year. Its nine class 1 installations included Fort Benning, Ft. Bragg, N.C., Ft. Campbell, Ky., Ft. Gordon, Ga., Ft. Jackson, S.C., Ft. McPherson, Ga., Ft. McClellan, Ala., Ft. Rucker, Ala. and Ft. Stewart, Ga.

At one time statements and comparisons indicated the extent of activities and operations of the Third U.S. Army:

The square feet of building space utilized by Third Army was equal in floor space to 25 Empire State Buildings.

Roads, runways and surfaced areas in its installations more than equalled a four-lane highway from Atlanta to Los Angeles.

Each month its aircrafts were flying an average of 3,200,000 miles each year, or over 50 times the distance around the world.

The number of line items in the Army Ordnance Depot Systems was six times the number of items in the Sears Roebuck catalog.

Closing the pages of their history the Third U.S. Army was deactivated under the command of Lt. Gen. Melvin R. Zais. Under the new organization the Continental U.S. Armies have been reduced to the First, Fifth and Sixth Armies, and the Third Army has joined other units whose exploits are now recorded in the military archives.

What's What!

The New Army

"Now that Fort Benning is a TRADOC post. . ."

"What's TRADOC?"

"That's the headquarters that replaced the U. S. Continental Army Command."

"I just learned that CONARC was short for Continental Army Command. Why did they change it?"

"The end of the draft, the rapidly decreasing size of the active army and a greater need for reliance on reserve components set the stage. The Army responded with a new organization designed to make maximum use of its resources, improve combat readiness, and provide a combat development system to plan for the Army of the future."

"That's a mouthful but it might work. How does it affect me?"

"It's going to effect you in a lot of ways. For one thing you may be sewing on some new shoulder patches, and it could affect your pocketbook if you don't know the new organization. Members of promotion boards are going to be asking questions about the organization, and the chain of command and you can bet any pro-pay test you take in the futuee will include these questions.

"Some units from most of the new major commands are located at Fort Benning. You should be able to recognize individuals of these units by their shoulder patch. You don't want to look dumb if someone asks you about them."

"OK, so now what is TRADOC?"

"TRADOC is short for Training and Doctrine Command. It's one of the major commands that make up the new Army. General William E. Depuy is the chief and Lieutenant General Orwin C. Talbott, who used to command Fort Benning, is the deputy chief. The headquarters is located in the old CONARC headquarters at Fort Monroe, Va. TRADOC replaces CONARC and the Army Combat Development Command. The name gives you a hint concerning its functions — training and doctrine. TRADOC directs all individual training, establishes material requirements and developes new doctrine.

"TRADOC commands 19 installations, three military schools and colleges, 16 branch schools including the Infantry School, four specialist schools, and seven training centers. All of these facilities are training oriented. It is also responsible for all training of the Reserve Officer Training Corps."

"What about the research and development?"

"The combat development functions of TRADOC are coordinated by three centers — the Combined Arms Center is located at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., the Logistics Center at Fort Lee, Va., and the Administrative Center at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind. There are also eight special activities that do research, experiments and tests. Two of these, the Combat Arms Training Board and the Infantry Human Research Unit are located here at Benning."

"So, TRADOC supervises individual training. How about the unit training?"

"I'm glad you asked me that. I was just about to cover that aspect of the new Army. This mission is handled by another major command — the U.S. Army Forces Command, also known as FORSCOM. It has been charged with the combat readiness of all units of the Active Army, Reserve and National Guard. It commands the First, Fifth and Sixth Continental Armies."

"Wait a minute. What about the Third Army at Fort McPherson, Ga.?"

"The Third Army was a casualty of the reorganization. It was inactivated, and First Army assumed its area of responsibility. The old Third Army Headquarters now houses the FORSCOM Headquarters. You should know that General Walter T. Kerwin Jr. is the FORSCOM commander.

"To get back to the FORSCOM mission. You should also understand that the continental armies are no longer in the chain of command for Active Army units. The armies concentrate on the training and readiness of the Army's Reserve Forces. FORSCOM headquarters directs training of active Army units.

"We have six of those active Army units here on post. The 197th Infantry Brigade, 36th Engineer Group, 145th Aviation Battalion, 35th Medical Battalion, and the marksmanship units."

"Having just two commands should make things a lot simpler for the Pentagon."

"Well that isn't quite the whole picture. There are more commands involved.

"A new Health Services Command has been established with headquarters at Fort Sam Houston, Texas. The mission of this command is to improve health and provide medical support for all elements of the Army. The post Medical Department Activity comes under their jurisdiction.

"The Army Materiel Command is also still in operation but it got a major realignment which included consolidation of the Munitions Command and Weapons Command into a new command known as the Armaments Command and a consolidation and realignment of the Army Depot System. The Infantry Board and the Army Materiel Command Infantry Research and Development Liaison Office here at Fort Benning belong to the Army Materiel Command."

"Well I sure appreciate the information. You seem to be right on top of this reorganization. How come?"

"Next month I come up for promotion and I have to take my pro-pay test in December. I intend to be ready. Will you?"

PIG

They used to call him "cop"
Now it's "pig".
But, who do "they" turn to in time of need and trouble?

They call for his aid, and still call him "pig" for not being there sooner or preventing the trouble from happening.

But, that's the life of the law enforcement officer in today's society. As you may see, it isn't always an easy one. However, it has its rewards — if you don't mind standing on the hot pavement and directing an endless flow of traffic.

PIG

And, that's where most of those who live and work at Fort Benning see the military police. And, when the traffic flow blossoms to its overflow capacity — or crunch room only — stages during the 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. rush, these people may have a few unkind things to say about the man in the white hat.

Yet, he stands there doing the best he can to keep everyone moving at a steady pace. Remember, he didn't build the roads or plan the traffic flow on or off post. He can't construct additional lanes of traffic. He can just stand there and try to keep it moving.

But, next week be a little kinder to the Military Police. And, when you see one of these men in the white hats, smile . . . it's his birthday.

The Corps of Military Police was activated as a separate branch under the Provost Martial General's supervision and control some 22 years ago this Sept. 26. Public Law 581, 81st Congress, established the Corps as a permanent, basic branch of the Army and designated it the Military Police Corps.

AUSA

'We'll get you' on 22 September

BY RANDY BOOSE

The "we'll get you" cliche is a familiar television advertisement that can be applied to the AUSA picnic that will take place tomorrow Sept. 22, at Victory Lodge.

Whether AUSA gets you with their barbeque chicken, pony rides, games, refreshments or the ranger demonstrations, sky divers, and air mobile exhibitions, it will get you.

It is an event for the whole family, so get your tickets for a day of fun. Tickets can be obtained at the Chambers of Commerce and Fort Benning Information Office.

Free admission to hear The United States Army Field Band

Last year's Fort Benning-Columbus presentation by the United States Army Field Band was a standing room only success. In response to the community's support for this patriotic type entertainment, AUSA is again sponsoring the band's appearance at the Three Arts Theatre on Nov. 2.

This year's show is completely new and features the "Satin Brass," the band's newest component, as well as the Soldiers Chorus. The theme of the presentation is "Sing Out for America." See the BAYONET for information on obtaining free tickets.

What can you do for AUSA?

Your local AUSA chapter is continually working to promote better understanding of the Army's needs by bringing top military and governmental speakers to its meetings; by disseminating AUSA fact sheets on important military topics to the local media; by recognizing those who make outstanding contributions that further the objectives of AUSA; and by bringing the civilian and military communities into closer contact through such events as their picnic and George Washington Dinner-Dance.

Your membership supports these activities as well as the chapter's overall programs such as ROTC scholarships and rifle and drill meets, and their awards program. People in the tri-community have responded to the chapter's membership drive with an enthusiasm that has kept the Columbus-Phenix City-Fort Benning chapter the largest in the world for the past several years.

Now you have an opportunity to help influence the direction AUSA will take during the coming year. National headquarters is currently asking for chapters to submit suggestions for new resolutions to be considered for adoption at this year's annual convention.

Resolutions from last year include such things as: support of a realistic deterrence strategy with stress on a strong Army; support of a continuation of Selective Service Induction Authority; support of appropriated actions to obtain reasonable recomputation for military personnel; support of an expanded world-wide military housing, construction and leasing program; and support of the SALT agreements.

You can obtain a copy of the resolutions and objectives that AUSA already supports from the Fort Benning Information Office. If you have any suggestions you would like the chapter to pass on to the national headquarters, send them to the Assistant Secretary-Treasurer, Major Pat Cannan, Box 2036, Fort Benning, Georgia 31905.

Benning Soldiers' Council

The Fort Benning Soldiers' Council is not a griping session, a complaint department, or a token organization that exists just for show.

The council is an effective vehicle for junior enlisted soldiers (E4 and below) to make constructive suggestions and recommendations. These ideas are then reviewed to see how they can be used to make Fort Benning a better facility.

Representatives from each major unit — The School Brigade, MEDDAC, 145th Aviation Battalion, 197th Infantry Brigade, Headquarters Command and the 36th Engineer Group — meet once every month to review the recommendations submitted by individual units. Finance, MOS problems and appearance standards are just a few of the aspects of military life on which the council has recently passed recommendations.

Possibly the biggest project ever tackled by the council is in its initial stages. It's an AWOL study designed by junior enlistees for junior enlistees. Sp4 George Korda, TSB's representative and council president, explains its purpose, "What we're trying to do is research and write a report that will assist commanders and NCO's to recognize the factors causing today's young soldiers to go AWOL."

"The study will take a period of several months to organize, analyze, and develop. It will involve going directly to the people who have gone AWOL and learning their reasons for doing so.

"If we are able in some way to keep just one person from ruining his military career because of AWOL, then all the time and effort will have been worth it," said Korda.

Redskins scalp Cowboys

In the first scheduled game of the 1973 YAC football season, the "Biddy" league Redskins dominated the action by running up a score of 34-12 against the Cowboys at Doughboy Stadium.

The leading scorer was John Teachy with three touchdowns for the Redskins while their quarterback Bryan Bouchelion was scoring two. Teddy Gallardo and Jimmy Morgan bulled across the extra points.

Scoring for the Cowboys were by Roger Watson and Steve Mann.

Biddy League Redskin's Johny Teachy (51) heads for open country and his first touchdown of the day behind Bryan Bouchelion (18). Teachy scored three touchdowns and quarterback Bouchelion added two in a 34-12 route of the Cowboys. (U.S. Army photo by Bob Sanders)

BAYONET SPORTS

By BILL KLOEB

For most dove hunters tomorrow will be the first day of a long dove hunting season. The first part of the Alabama season opens at noon tomorrow. Remember that is noon Central time. Any hunter starting to hunt according to Georgia clocks will probably have a short lived season.

The first part of the Georgia season opened a couple weeks ago in areas north of Highway 80. I haven't given it a try but according to all reports hunters from this area haven't been doing too well. There are a lot of built up areas north of here and of course a hunter should get permission from the land owner before he hunts. That narrowes hunting areas available. Land owners of most of the good hunting areas allow hunters on their land only on a "pay to hunt" basis. I talked to some hunters who had tried these places and apparently the situation was bad. Ray Rolf who tried the "pay as you hunt" plan claimed he downed six doves during the course of the afternoon. Normally this would be good but he complained that each time he downed a dove there were at least four other hunters on the spot to claim it before he could get it in his game bag.

If you plan to hunt on the Alabama portion of the reservation don't figure on being lonesome. There will be plenty of other hunters out there and dove fields are limited. Over the past years there have been about six fields that were good for dove shooting. Routes to any of these fields can get complicated and its never certain that any area is open until the Range Control Offices posts the range map for the coming day. I'd suggest that anyone who is not familiar with the Alabama area go with a hunting partner who is or go out to the Rod and Gun Club. Jim Carter who works at the sales counter knows the reservation. He will be happy to give advice and directions.

Check Range Maps

The range maps are something every hunter should know about. They are made up and posted daily by the Range Control Office. They show which areas are open for unofficial use and which areas are closed because of training or for other official reasons. The maps are posted at the Provost Marshal Office, Range Control Office and outside the Rod and Gun Club Headquarters. Hunters, fishermen, hikers, picnicers or anyone who intends to go into training areas on the reservation must verify that the area is open by checking one of these maps. Its an important procedure established for the safety of people who use areas on the reservation. The regulation is enforced too. Military police or game wardens apprehending individuals in off-limits areas will issue tickets. Ignorance will not be considered as an excuse.

Administrative Details

There are a few more administrative matters involved before you take to the field. You need licenses. Everyone who hunts on the reservation must have a Post Hunting And Fishing Permit. This permit can be obtained only at the Rod and Gun Club.

You also need a state Hunting and Fishing License. All active duty military personnel stationed at Fort Benning may purchase a resident Georgia Hunting license. Civilian personnel authorized to hunt on the reservation who reside in Georgia must, prior to hunting on the Alabama portion of the reservation, possess a non-resident Alabama license. Civilian personnel who are authorized to hunt on the reservation and who reside in Alabama must, prior to hunting on the Georgia portion of the reservation, possess a non-resident Georgia license. Remember that if you are not an active duty military person assigned to Fort Benning you can only use a resident license of the state in which you reside.

There are quite a few other administrative matters a hunter must complete before he is ready to hunt. To be on the safe side and sure you are complying with the regulations get a copy of USAIC Regulation 210-2, Post Hunting and Fishing Regulations and USAIC Circular 210-4, Installations Hunting and Bag Limits. These documents are also available at the Rod and Gun Club. You'll enjoy hunting more when you know you are obeying the laws.

Who really won the women's title?

An error was corrected and a wrong righted with a telegram from the National Rifle Association in Washington, D. C. to the U. S. Army Marksmanship Training Unit.

The telegram corrected a mistake the Association made earlier this year when it designated Sergeant First Class Barbara Hile as the National Women's Indoor Pistol champion instead of Captain Sharon E. Best. Both ladies are with the Army Marksmanship Unit.

The error was an easy one to make. Barbara has dominated the women's division of both rifle and pistol competition over the past decade and one would assume that she was naturally the 1973 champion. She won the Women's National Rifle Championship six consecutive years and has been the National Women's Pistol Champion the past three years.

But such was not the case when the Sectional Indoor match was held at Fort Benning on Jan. 19. Captain Best wrested the title from Barbara's grasp with an 857. This was the same score that Barbara had won the national championship with in 1972 and two points better than she posted this year.

The NRA expressed their regrets for the error and requested that the appropriate awards, which they had mailed to Barbara, be turned over to Captain Best.

"Eighty feet down is a whole new world." That's the feeling five members of the Fort Benning Scuba Club expressed after their September dive off the coast of Destin, Florida. Captains Dana Huseman, Jessee Mendoza, Dennis Popp, Will Rorie and Tony Whittier, all assigned to TSB, dove into the Gulf coast reef on Sept. 8. The five had recently qualified as scuba (Self-Contained Underwater Breathing Apparatus) divers through the Fort Benning and West Georgia training programs. (New divers must complete a water safety course before they may participate in a similar cruise.) Senior divers SP 4 John Nussbaum, 586th Engrs, and CPT. Hank Noring, TSB, were responsible for the safety of the divers during the Gulf dive. Steve Mitchell, president of the Fort Benning Scuba Club and Vice-president Tom Daniels invite anyone interested in diving to call 545-1041 or 689-6778 for information.

"The Army lets me be myself."

Sergeant Dean Williams was involved in a lot of different things before he joined the Army. Radio. Journalism. Photography. But he's been even busier in the Army. And that's the way he likes it.

"Besides my full-time job, I'm also a referee on post, a coach in town, a college student at night, and I'm taking Army courses.

"The Army really lets a man expand, and go as far as he wants to. That's why I reenlisted. My wife and I have a good life here. There's plenty to do, and all the opportunity in the world to be yourself."

89th EOD

Can save you from a big boom

While riding around on post you may have seen the men in the trucks with red fenders. Who are these men? Well they are not M.P.'s as most people think. They are members of the 89th EOD (Explosive Ordinance Disposal), 36th Engineer Group (CBT).

These highly trained technicians of the 89th at Fort Benning and the 40th Ord. Det. at Camp Shelby, Miss., stand ready around the clock to respond to a suspected bomb on an airplane, an actual bomb in a federal building, live hand grenades in a garage or dynamite in an abandoned building. In addition EOD men support the U. S. Secret Service in its activities as well as assisting local, state, and federal law enforcement officials on incidents involving explosives or hazardous chemicals.

They are able to perform these tasks efficiently and safely because the training they have received requires high "standards and stability" from individuals.

The training for their jobs is extensive and demanding. They are taught to handle all types of explosives from the smallest ammunition.

They are trained over a period of 21 weeks in which they learn everything there is to know about explosives.

Training is begun at Redstone Arsenal, Alabama with two weeks of training in the destruction of chemical and biological agents. From there they go to Indian Head, Maryland for 19 more weeks. The first 13 are spent learning how to handle and disarm every conceivable conventional type weapon. The last six weeks they learn the handling and disarming of nuclear weapons.

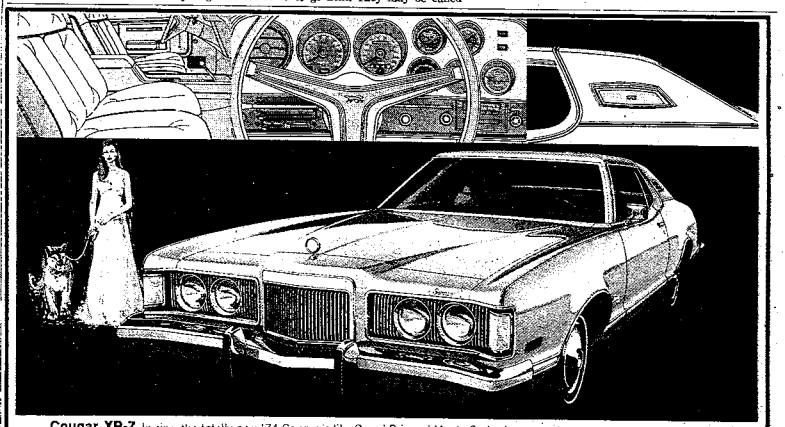
After a volunteer completes his EOD training he is awarded the Silver EOD Badge and is assigned to one of the many disposal detachments located throughout the world. A detachment is comprised of one officer and nine enlisted men. They are a very close knit outfit who work as a team.

They not only handle explosives but teach classes to all types of law enforcement agencies, federal and local.

According to SSG Carey Daniel, one of the men at the 89th EOD, "We get all types of calls, from handling old dynamite found on an abandoned bus to shells found on the Fort on an old firing range."

When asked how dangerous his job really is SSG Daniel stated, "With what you learn during your training in school if you combine that with common sense I feel that I am as safe working with explosives as I am on the highway driving to Miami."

According to Sp4 John E. Tatro, "Sometimes we can't blow the explosive that we are working on and we have to render the fuse harmless. Then it may be a little dangerous but that doesn't happen often."



These men are safe at their job because they are professionals and they know what they are doing.

The men of EOD units such as the 89th are volunteers. They have an exciting job never knowing where they might be called on to go next. They may be called to work on Ft. Benning or maybe Florida, anywhere in the south, but each day is new and exciting.

EOD volunteers are needed. If you are interested in responsibility, advancement, additional pay, varied duties, and travel with pay then [illegible] Requirements may be seen [illegible] for in this [illegible].

SP4 Robert D. Joslin of the 89th E.O.D. of the 36th Engr. Gp. examines a "suspected item" which may have some type of detonation device. Risking their lives is routine for the men of the 89th and that's why only volunteers are allowed to join. (Photo by Gary Cathcart)

Whatja wanta Know? ask the BAYONET

CALL 545-4792

DEAR BAYONET,

I received treatment for a service connected injury at a Veterans Administration hospital about two years ago. I need treatment again, and wonder if VA will give it to me? VET

DEAR VET,

Yes, and if, as you indicated, you have already established a service connection, all you need do is apply for treatment again.

DEAR BAYONET,

How many troops are presently at Fort Benning? Interested.

DEAR INTERESTED,

At the present time there are 18,664 troops stationed here.

DEAR BAYONET,

Where may my son ride his mini-bike on post?

DEAR MOM,

There is only one authorized place to ride mini-bikes on post. The place is in Sand Hill on 1st Division Road by the ammo dump.

DEAR BAYONET,

Why have you got so many ads? Can't you put in more sports, pictures, and newsworthy articles instead of all the ads? Tom

DEAR TOM,

The Bayonet publisher, the R. W. Page Corp., has an agreement with Fort Benning to print the newspaper weekly and to pay for this printing by selling advertisements. The agreement further stipulates that advertisements cannot exceed 60 per cent of the newspaper. Thus, available editorial space will be 40 per cent or more. Fort Benning's agreement with the publisher conforms to Department of the Army requirements for publication of a civilian enterprise newspaper.

Infantry is the foundation of the Army. Sgt. Jimmy Reed, Co. B, 3rd Bn., 7th Inf. (Cottonbalers), 197th Inf. Bde. is in the Infantry and says he likes it. As a part of the U.S. Army's Stategic Forces (STRAF) and FORSCOM, the 197th Inf. Bde. conducts Infantry training to maintain a state of combat readiness. (Photo by Lenwood Spells)

Westville features a living museum

By Beverly Thomas

The wonderfully slow paced life of the good "good old days" can be experienced in 1973 with a visit to Westville, "where it's always 1850."

Weaving, churning, open-fire cooking and basket-making are only a few of the daily chores performed in this authentically re-created village, where one can get a unique sample of early American life.

From the simple existence in a log cabin to the elegance of an ante-bellum mansion, Westville is a living museum of Georgia, just waiting to be recaptured.

The Randle-Morton Store, a combination gift shop, refreshment stand and information center, is the visitor's first stop. Here, tickets can be purchased and copy of the Westville Guide which contains a map and information about the sites can be obtained.

As one enters the Singer Gates, a replica of the triple gates at Milledgeville, the buildings face a dirt street and are situated around the town square. The visitor is at leisure to follow the map in the guide or to choose his own course.

The Grimes-Feagin House, built in 1892, is one of the first sites. The building is a typical example of a middle class home and contains plain, unadorned furnishings of the period. Here a guide not only explains the art of quilting but is also well versed on the history of most items throghout the house.

Further down the road, is the doctor's office, which was built in 1845. It contains an examining table, an apothecary chest and a Franklin chest. Dental instruments, medicine bottles and an afaradic battery for arthritis are also displayed in the office.

In the Shingle and Basket Arbor, the almost forgotten skills of preparing splits for weaving baskets and riving boards for shingles are demonstrated. These processes are carried on by craftsmen who use the instruments exactly like ones used in 1850.

The cotton baling press offers another educational experience. It shows the process for bailing cotton before the invention of electricity. Mules were hitched to long poles and the top of a building turned as they went around.

The art of pottery making is featured at Westville. A draft animal pulls a pole and turns the mill to mix the clay in a pug outside the shop. The potter uses a wheel in much the same way the Egyptians did. The clay is later fired in a wood kiln outside.

The market farm complex depicts yet another view of life in early America. The house does not reflect poverty, but rather family life where money was not always available so everything was grown at home. Gingerbread samples are given to visitors by a guide who cooks it on an open fireplace in the kitchen.

Watch the fire forced by the bellows and see the sparks fly as red hot pieces of iron are pounded on an anvil in the Cobb Brothers Blacksmith shop. The shop which is based on the design of the 1850s is run by two brothers who represent more than one hundred years of experience.

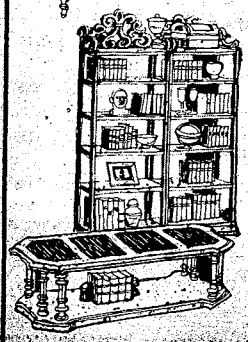
TALAVERA
by Drexel



The Mediterranean of old. To the south... Moorish kingdoms, richly ornamented palaces, the Sword of Islam! To the north... the Spanish Court, Granada, the Alhambra! A never-to-be forgotten world of romance and intrigue...of riches and pomp.

Famous Drexel delves deeply, authentically. The result... Talavera, an awe-inspiring collection of dining room, bedroom and occasional treasures, embracing the full flavor and meaning of the period. Deeply sculptured as if by chisel, subtly curved and amply moulded as only the hands and eyes of master craftsmen can create, Talavera exudes a drama and elegance second to none.

Drexel

Witness its authentic features: heavy brass plated hardware, wrought iron, shaded glass, simulated slate. . . the complements of pecky pecan veneers, combined with pecan and oak solids, finished in highly distressed brown. And always liveable, marvelously comfortable for today's busy life! Give your home this wondrous look by Drexel now. You'll be delighted with the moderate price, too.

PAYROLL WITHHOLDING PLAN

Payroll withholding is again being made available in the TriCommunity. All eligible Federal employees, civilian and military personnel, are urged to use the payroll withholding plan.

Federal civilian employees who sign the necessary payroll withholding authorization form will have the indicated amount deducted as specified each pay period beginning in January, 1974 and ending in December, 1974.

Military personnel, even though they elect to be paid twice monthly, will have only one (1) deduction per month during the year 1974. Minimum amount is $1.00.

Those who wish to make a cash or check contribution may do so. Make all checks payable to COMBINED FEDERAL CAMPAIGN.

If you wish to designate all or part of your contribution, you may do so by personally entering the agency/ies number and the amount in the space provided on the reverse side of the contribution form.

Confidential contributions can be made by completing the right portion of the contribution form and enclosing the form with cash or check in an envelope. Seal and give to your Keyman. This envelope, unopened, will be forwarded to the CFC Central Accounting Point.

Gas Less

Army having its share of petrol problems

HQ TRADOC, FT. MONROE, Va. — The Army is beginning to feel the pinch caused by rising fuel costs, according to the Defense Fuel Supply Center (DFSC).

The DFSC, central fuel procurement agency for the military, estimates contract prices for fuel will increase about 40 per cent over the past fiscal year level, DFSC says installation ground fuel supply contracts this year include price escalation clauses which allow suppliers to pass on price increases paid for crude oil and other wholesale products.

The Army also is finding it more difficult to acquire petroleum, oil and lubricants through local procurement channels.

As a conservation measure, DA has ordered a six per cent cut in projected heating fuel supplies for FY 74. There is no predicted problem in meeting the reduced requirement at this time.

During FY 73, TRADOC installations consumed 60 million gallons of fuel oil. Large numbers of heating plants now have converted to fuel oil due to the Clean Air Act (Public Law 91-190).

The conversion from coal to fuel oil is expected to result in a consumption of 80 million gallons of fuel oil during the current fiscal year. With the six per cent reduction ordered only 75 million gallons of fuel oil will be allocated for TRADOC installations.

Following is an outline for fuel conservation:

— Eliminate obvious waste; encourage greater economy

— Consolidate activities and eliminate little used buildings

— Cease operations of marginal benefit to mission

— Increase operating efficiency of equipment and systems

— Reduce heating temperatures to minimum required

— Eliminate overheating through use of automatic control

— Replace clean filters as required

— Convert boiler and heating plants to other fuels if economically feasible.

— Insulate buildings-pipes to reduce heat loss if economically feasible — Eliminate steam and condensation losses.

Possible stricter regulations would:

— Control oil supplied to family housing and administrative offices

— Consolidate troops into buildings with central heating systems

— Lower thermostat degree setting

— Reduce operating hours of selected activities (i.e., PX, Commissary, Clubs, etc.)

— Close certain WW II mobilization buildings

— Enforce existing conservation program.

The fuel problem must be tackled by all. If the programs set out by DA are strictly followed, any effects of the reduction in fuel will be minimal, if visible at all.

SAFETY PROGRAM

Inspection holds roadside checks

BY BOB THOMAS

Soldiers who work or live on Kelley Hill had best insure their privately-owned vehicles are safe, or they might find their next pass or leave request turned down.

The 197th Infantry Brigade Maintenance and Inspection team has recently started conducting roadside inspections of POV's prior to each holiday weekend, as a part of the "Forever Forward" brigade's safety program.

Those soldiers whose cars fail the roadside check, must have the deficiencies corrected before they are permitted to sign out on leave and travel in the vehicle.

"The units have been conducting inspections like these for some time," explained Sergeant First Class Karl Berch, "but the check-ups have been on a company level with little consistency. We can not get everyone, but we hope to get a cross section of the 197th."

The week preceeding Labor Day, the inspection team conducted their first roadside inspection of POV's, checking a total of 147 vehicles in the Kelley Hill area. Each car was tested for proper lighting, brakes, horn, windshield wipers, muffler and tires. Some 88 cars failed the simple test — a 60 per cent failure rate.

"The biggest problem was tires," pointed out Sergeant First Class Roy Saxton. "It was actually frightening as to the number of cars that were running on bald tires. And the majority of those drivers were planning on taking long trips over the weekend."

Headlights and brakes were other major problem areas. The horn seemed to be the least vulnerable to the inspection — only four vehicles failed due to faulty horns.

"All of these drivers had signed a statement saying they would keep their vehicles in a safe condition when they were issued post parking decals," added Berch. "Less than half of them, far less than half, passed a test not even as comprehensive as a state inspection."

The team plans to make the roadside inspection a regular practice on the days prior to a holiday. Drivers of military vehicles in the 197th are familiar enough of the maintenance team and soldiers of unsafe POV's had best beware.

SOUND OFF!

Some congressman recently said that the commissary system is outdated and should be eliminated!! Do you think he is right????

Mrs. Celeste Beall

I save a substantial amount on only a few products, such as milk, cigarettes and bread. I shop mostly off post because for the savings I receive on post it's not worth fighting for what you get.

Mrs. Jenny Kovalsky

I don't believe it should be eliminated because I use it and there are substantial savings shopping there. I use the commissary regularly.

Judy De Maria

I think it is worth the hassle... You receive good savings, not on everything, but on a majority of the products sold.

La Vern Morrell

I don't shop at the commissary because I don't like waiting all day in line and fighting the crowds for merchandise that have prices that compare with the stores off post, where I do my shopping.

Vicki Davis

Definitely not.... We realize about a 25 per cent savings shopping at the commissary. As a rule, I do all my shopping there. Occasionally, I shop downtown for products that the commissary does not carry.

Dorothy Jackson

I really think it pays to shop at the commissary. I do all my shopping at the commissary because I can't find any better savings off post. My husband is retiring next month and we will be driving 360 miles round trip to shop at the commissary (it is the closest one to me in Tennessee) and we will still be saving. My brother owns a store and I have a chance to compare prices and he can't beat the Army's prices.

PREGNANCY

Education program helps expectant mothers

Pregnancy and childbirth are normal, natural happenings. It is believed that through a thorough program of education, the expectant mother and father can be prepared both physically and emotionally to make childbirth and parenthood a satisfying and rewarding experience.

The Army Health Nursing Service, in conjunction with the Obstetrics Department at Martin Army Hospital, is beginning another series of Expectant Parents' Classes on Oct. 9, 1973. The series consists of two hour classes on four Tuesday nights of each month. Classes are held in the second floor conference room at Martin Army Hospital.

The sessions improve knowledge of pregnancy, childbirth, and newborn babies. Movies, slides, short talks and discussion groups help to explain the physical structure of the male and female, reproduction, body changes, signs of labor and infant care.

The first class includes prenatal care, psychological aspects of parenthood, and exercises. The second class involves Martin Army Hospital procedures and a tour of Labor and Delivery. The third covers labor and delivery, and the fourth is on infant care, with a special session on breast feeding. It is best to start with the first class in the series and continue with the same group; however, if you should miss one class, you can make it up at the next series.

Because of limited space, you are asked to pre-register for these classes by calling the Army Health Nursing Service, 545-5431, Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. - 4:30 p.m.

Project Transition

No Cost—Just a willingness to learn

By Bill Brownell

Contemplating a return to civilian life? Are you faced with that age-old dilemma of what field you will choose to pursue?

According to Mr. Jack Neal, assistant director of Project Transition at Fort Benning, "This program meets or exceeds the needs of servicemen or servicewomen who do not possess a skill to carry them along in the civilian world. The soldier can earn this skill at no cost. His only need is to possess a willingness to learn."

"Project Transition should be much more than a place for a unit to rid itself of problem soldiers or to award soldiers for meritorious performance, it is a program which counsels and places men of need in logical training courses," continued Neal.

"It is the responsibility of leaders to identify those soldiers who lack the education or job skill necessary to successfully compete with the civilian labor force. Although it is recognized that missions must be accomplished, a commander must eventually face losing the man and should not deprive him of this opportunity because of selfish aims. To help discourage such a situation, the policy has been set — only a field grade officer can disapprove a request. I must emphasize, however, that this program is not guaranteed to anyone."

Bennies Galore

The benefits of Project Transition include an acquired, marketable skill, security, personal satisfaction and a meaningful, productive future. "Quite often, these factors are shrouded with blinding pride, laziness or simply being afraid to admit that a change of life is around the corner," he added.

Varied Eligibility

Officers, warrant officers and enlisted soldiers are eligible to apply. Eligibility standards and priorities have been established to insure that the benefits apply first to those who have the greatest need.

An individual must have from one to six months service remaining, must volunteer and be able to complete a course of instruction prior to separation.

First priority is with the disabled assigned to medical holding units or hospital or those processing for physical disability discharges or retirement. Second priority goes to personnel ineligible to re-enlist or to continue on active duty other than personnel being separated for disciplinary reasons. Third priority is with those soldiers assigned a combat military occupational specialty (MOS) while the fourth priority is with men and women whose previous experience and training has limited application in civilian life. The last priority are those with a marketable skill or trade. These individuals are not authorized on-duty training.

How to Apply

When a soldier approaches the date six months prior to his ETS, his name, service number and date of separation are furnished to the Transition office. Each individual is furnished a questionnaire which is completed at the servicing education center. Through counseling, specific educational and vocational needs of the servicemen are determined together with other related information.

Processing includes notifying both the individual and his company commander of the training scheduled, including the hours and inclusive dates.

Counseling Decisive

"Educational and vocational counseling is the most important part of Project Transition since it explores the soldier's potential," Neal explained. "The number of educational and vocational counselors at Fort Benning have been increased to insure that all interested individuals are provided counseling to help make a realistic decision."

Counselors also have many specific job listings. Considerable information is available on how to look for a job and apply for it, how to prepare a resume and a cover letter for the resume and related information.

Education At All Levels

A sound academic program is of prime importance for those who have not completed the eighth grade before entering the service or those who have yet to earn a high school diploma.

When a high school diploma is possible during the six-month Project Transition period, the serviceman should strive to satisfy the educational requirements of some future employer. The serviceman or servicewoman who is already near his or her maximum skill in sciences, reading or mathematics is usually more interested in the occupational aspects of Project Transition than in a long-range academic program.

A high school diploma of GED equivalent should be given priority over job training. A GED advisor at one of the education centers should be consulted concerning the "course completion" approach to a diploma or the "test approach" to a high school equivalency.

Those lacking a high school diploma, but desire to attend college after they are discharged, may use their transition training period for the additional course work to satisfy admission requirements. This pre-discharge education program (PREP) is funded by VA and is offered through post education centers, by the Muscogee County School District and by Columbus College.

Vocational Training

Outside help is used in providing most of the vocational training. All shops, equipment and instructors are some of the best found anywhere. Close liaison between the Army and the other government agencies, civilian industries, labor unions and the Department of Labor has been established to better this program.

Key To Your Future

"Project Transition can develop future security of separating servicemen or servicewomen. Private industry, labor unions, and governmental agencies do not budget programs or training for jobs which do not exist. The Fort Benning program has helped to take up some of the slack."

"It is well known that the soldier already possesses many of the individual and personal qualities employers are seeking. He is better disciplined, more mature, and in many areas better trained and motivated than the average civilian. It is up to the servicemen or servicewoman to take advantage of these qualities and to achieve a marketable skill before ETS."

Officers and NCO's at both organizational and unit level are in an excellent position to give encouragement to those individuals who need Project Transition services.

Mrs. James Miller, at right, exhibits the art of decorative knotting called Macrame!!! An OWC fashion show hosted by the 36th Eng. Gp. wives is planned for Oct. 10.

Along the feminine

OWC Publicity Chairman: Marsha Graham; Co-Chairman: Jane Macpherson; Editor: Judy Jakubowski; Typist: Pat Rice.

Editor's Note:

Ladies your comments and-or suggestions about the "women's pages" are always welcome. Do you have ideas to improve them? Let us know what you'd like to read about. Feel free to call me or drop your notes in the yellow "Femline" boxes, near the front doors of each commissary. Judy Jakubowski — 322-3596.

BY THE WAY . . . Did you know that 16 ladies lost a total of 79 pounds in one week with "Weight Watchers?" Do you need to lose a few pounds? If so, join the OWC sponsored "Weight Watchers." The goal is to change your attitudes and eating habits through sensible diet patterns. It's open to OWC members and their families, and meets each Wed. at 7:30 p.m.

For further information, call Mrs. Lawrence Bell at 545-1498.

OWC'S FASHION

Highlighting the OWC's luncheon to be held Oct. 10 will be a "Sew Your Own" Fashion Show, taking place at the Main Officer's Club. The wives of the 36th Engineer Group will be hostesses.

After the sherry hour, starting at 11:30 a.m., guests will move to the Supper Club for a luncheon followed by the Fashion Show.

Mrs. James P. Hughes will be the commentator for the fashion show. She is also programs chairman for this event. Spotlighting the show will be ensembles for lounge, day and evening wear and pant suits, quilted hostess skirts, jumpsuits, capes and bathrobes. Outfits for children and teen-agers also will be included. Wide displays of crewel and embroidery work will be shown. Knitted and crocheted articles, like ponchos, hot pants, and place mats will be on display.

To coincide with the theme "Sew Your Own," guests may wear outfits they have sewn themselves. Special name tags will be given to those who wear outfits they have made.

Telephone reservations will be accepted until Oct. 5 for this event. Call your unit reservation chairman immediately or any one of the following people: Mrs. Benjamin C. Burkley, 545-3708, Mrs. Wayne T. Boles, 545-1625, or Mrs. William G. Carter, 545-3246. Cancellations should be made no later than 10 a.m., Mon., Oct. 8. Tof Town reservations should be made in advance.

Boxes will be set up at the Main Officers Club for collection for the ACS food locker, all canned goods donated are appreciated.

BBOD

The BBOD, Tactics Group wives met for coffee Sept. 19 at the home of Mrs. Bruce E. Wilson, Zuckerman Ave. The ladies spent the morning on the patio while busily working on the Christmas bazaar project. Mrs. Eugene Lednicky discussed program plans for the next BBOD luncheon which promises to be most unusual. Welcomed to the group were Mrs. Larry N. DeJarnette and Mrs. George Swife.

On Thurs., Sept. 13, the ladies of the Artillery Committee held their monthly coffee at the home of Mrs. Larry W. Tucker. Mrs. Thomas Fitzgerald, wife of the Artillery Committee Chairman, welcomed Mrs. Russell A. Weathersby, and announced that the monthly coffees will be scheduled for the first Thurs. of each month at 9:30, for the winter. However, the ladies will continue to play bridge on the 2nd and 4th Thurs.

MEDDAC OWC

On Sept. 6, the Meddac Officers Wives Bowling League met for coffee at the home of Mrs. Robert J. Bryant.

Officers of the league for 1973-74 were introduced as follows: Mrs. A. N. Diodene Jr., president; Mrs. Anthony W. Adams, vice-president; and Mrs. Robert J. Bryant, secretary-treasurer.

Substitutes with low averages are especially needed. Anyone interested and a MEDDAC member are invited to contact Mrs. Bryant at 545-4498.

The theme of the Sept. luncheon of the MEDDAC OWC, "Wishing You Well" was carried out in centerpieces of miniature wishing wells and a large wishing well used on the runway where models showed many coordinated fall fashions from Kiraly's.

The hostesses for the luncheon were from the Family Practice Clinic and the Dental Clinic No. 6 headed by Mrs. Kenneth Holtzapple and Mrs. Harold E. Plank.

Mrs. Herbert Gamber, president of the Meddac OWC introduced Mrs. John White, wife of the new commander at Martin Army Hospital. She also welcomed the following new members — Mrs. Dick Webb, Mrs. Gregory Thomas, Mrs. X. M. F. Prugh, Mrs. Gerold Overly, Mrs. David Friedman, Mrs. John Bowman, Mrs. Robert Pursley and Mrs. Millard DeYoung.

sale, at the dining facility of "C" Co. All EM and Officers' wives generously contributed their cakes and cookies and made it a tremendous success. The money raised will be used for a Halloween party for the whole Batallion.

The group now has its officers, consisting of president-Doris Musgrove; vice - president - Connie Woodfill; and treasurer-JoAnn Scott.

All wives of enlisted men are invited to join the monthly coffee, which will be held every first Wed. of the month at 9:30 a.m. We will try to have a guest speaker every month.

The Pioneer officers traveled with their families to Destin, Fla., on Sept. 14, for a week-end in the sun. The group stayed at the Army's Recreation Center. Fishing, boating, and swimming were the orders of the day.

Everyone met on the patio of the Ramada Inn, Sat. evening, Sept. 15, for dinner. Special guests that evening were Capt. and Mrs. Bill Waitham, Miss Watson, sister of Lt. and Mrs. Elijah Mitchell, and Mrs. Donna Patterson. The Pioneers returned home the next day.

USAMKTU

This coffee was the first in several months and the wives enjoyed having this informal gathering. Mrs. William Harper, wife of the unit commander, introduced plans for contributions to the Officers Wives' Club Bazaar. The wives discussed what to make and arranged to have a workshop.

38th ENGINEERS GROUP

Despite the heavy rain and lack of electricity, the Sept. 10 evening coffee had a record attendance. Karin Thompson, the group commander's wife, and Margie Davies hosted this delightfully different event. Spiked punch replaced the usual coffee and candles provided the only light. With a setting like that, some regretted not having brought their husbands along.

Newcomers welcomed at this first fall coffee were Christine Casey, Judy Terry, Starr Sohns, and Betty Grace. A sample of the project to be made for the Bazaar was shown and explained at the meeting. Anyone interested in attending any of the workshops should call Silvia Pilcher, 687-6408.

The most imminent undertaking by the 38th Group wives is the hosting of the OWC Luncheon, Oct. 10. The main event will be a fashion show. Pam Girtman is in charge of decorations and Betty Burnett is the fashion show coordinator. This is a good chance for this group to show its talents and willingness to contribute.

The new secretary for the wives group is Lois Method. Pam Girtman was chosen as the new publicity chairman. Judy Terry and Margy Burchell will be the hostesses for the next coffee, Oct. 2.

NCO WIVES' CLUB

Breakfast Bingo was held at the Sand Hill Club on Sept. 26 at 9:30. Breakfast was free to all members. Hostesses were Catherine Pickel, Rosa Datson, and Trudy Leschak.

The commentator-coordinator for the fashion show was Mrs. Plank and the models were, left to right, Mrs. Billy D. Burk, Mrs. Cesar Lopez, Mrs. Erick D. Cragg, Mrs. William Frazer, Mrs. Jerry D. Hahn and Mrs. Timothy Swisher.

The coveted award of 36th Group Soldier of the Month was won by a member of Delta Company, 43rd Engineer Battalion (Construction) for the fourth time in the last six months. PFC David A. Cady (083-34-8472) is the most recent soldier to win this much sought after title. PFC Cady's first step toward obtaining this award was winning the Battalion Soldier of the Month Award for the 43rd Engineer battalion (Construction). He then participated in the Group Competition where his demonstrated ability in the areas of current events, first aid, military knowledge, and military bearing showed he was the outstanding soldier who deserved recognition as Group Soldier of the Month.

SFC Alfred Hereford received his promotion to the rank of E-7 from Lt. Col. Guba, commander of the 43rd Engineer Battalion and SGM Ratliff. SFC Hereford is currently the platoon sergeant of the Earthmoving Platoon with C Company, 43rd Engineer Battalion at Harmony Church. Prior to his assignment with C Co., SFC Hereford was stationed in Waegeon, Korea where he also served with a construction engineer unit.

Upon arrival at Ft. Benning, SFC Hereford attended ILC from which he graduated with honors. After completing ILC, SFC Hereford was then assigned to Ft. Jackson, S. C. where he attended the U. S. Army NCO Academy. At the termination of his four week course, SFC Hereford graduated in the top 18 per cent of his class.

SFC Hereford is to be congratulated for his outstanding performance ot the NCO Academy and for his promotion to the rank of E-7.

Booster Club Formed

Parents of band members at Spencer High School have formed a Booster Club and elected officers. The next meeting is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. on Oct. 4 in the school's band room.

Major V. K. Hansen, of the U. S. Army Infantry School's C M a n d C Dept., was elected president of the club and Lieutenant Colonel T. H. Hill vice president. Mrs. James T. Bramlett was elected financial secretary-treasurer and Mrs. V. K. Hansen the recording secretary.

The club's goals are to arouse and maintain an enthusiastic interest in the various phases of the instructional music department at the school. It also plans to lend moral and financial support to the general instrumental music programs in the school.

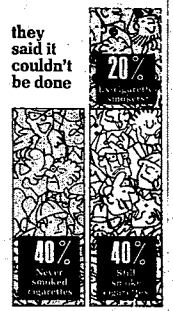
MP anniversary

Military Police anniversary week had a special meaning for 23 members of the 193th MP Company at Fort Benning. They were wearing new rank insignia after being promoted last Friday.



All but two of the men, who are cooks, are military p n l i c e confinement specialists. The two cooks are Specialists Four Ortiz Santos Vasquez and Robert Crutcher.

The o t h e r 20 men promoted to Specialist Four were B u r e l L. Ballard, Charles G. Flood, Donald L. Haley, Dennis P. Hagerty, Brian L. Hannigan, Charles W. Haney, Fred Caron, Jon C. Elphic, Dale W. H o c k i n g, Glenn D. Stewart, Robert A. Marks, William H. Card, Lawrence K. Patrick, Robert A. Rappazzo, Ronald E. Schroeder, Wayne H. Polson, Richard S. Burkhalter, Rickey Mitchell Richard Widby and Michael W. McRoberts.

William A l l e n was promoted to sergeant during the ceremony. The men were promoted by Colonel E. J. Murdock, Provost Marshal, and Captain Virgil Cocke, 193th MP Company commander.

"We have learned not to be over-anxious, and not to try to go in all directions at once," Chaplain McRoberts concluded. "The people who live in McGraw Manor have made the program what it is."

Mcgraw Manor

A community of homes

McGraw Manor means many things to many people. To the children who live in the housing area off Custer Road, it means buses that take them to Saturday afternoon matinee every week at Sand Hill Theater. It means Little League baseball and Pee Wee League football for the boys, and dancing classes for both girls and boys during the summer. It means Vacation Bible School, and cleaner, well-kept playgrounds.

To the mothers of these children, it means softball and volleyball teams organized especially for them. It means that when they are new in the neighborhood, a member of the welcoming committee will visit them, explain the services available to them, and leave an ACS welcome packet full of useful information.

To fathers, it means Delinquency Reports won't be written up and forwarded to their company commanders when the grass isn't cut. On a trial basis, the residents of McGraw Manor have been doing their own grounds maintenance inspections instead of the Directorate of Facilities Engineering.

To mothers and fathers, it means classes in family life education called "Children: The Challenge," where in weekly discussion sessions, they can learn how to be better parents.

To the families in McGraw Manor, it means Independence Day and Labor Day picnics, with game booths and refreshments, and Sunday School, catechism and church services every week.

All of this changes, and more, have been brought about by the formation of the McGraw Manor Neighborhood Association. Started last spring as a combined project of the USAIC Chaplain and Army Community Service, its purposes was to provide a community life for the residents of McGraw Manor. From all appearances, the program has been even more successful than its planners hoped it would be, and it shows no signs of slowing down.

The original intent of the program was to let the residents run it themselves, and this has been carried out by Chaplain (Captain) Marvin A. McRoberts and Sergeant First Class William E. Johnson. Chaplain McRoberts is the USAIC Chaplain's representative, and SFC Johnson was a link between Army Community Service and the area residents.

The first meeting was held in May at McBride School. At one of the early meetings, officers were elected and a constitution was drawn up and approved. The association's headquarters moved in June from the family housing area to a trailer across Custer Road, next to McBride School.

It is the committees that carry on the real work of the association. There are several standing committees whose chairmen, along with the elected officers, make up the executive board. The board meets once a month to discuss proposals that will be brought up before the general membership at quarterly meetings.

Mrs. Ann Bradenburg is chairman of the Adult Activities Committee. This is one of the most important committees, since many of the association's activities begin here. The Adult Activities Committee sponsored the Independence Day and Labor Day picnics for the McGraw Manor families.

There were children's games at these picnics, along with refreshments and a gifts auction. The Cub Scouts (Pack 39) sold refreshments and had game booths, and the Teen Club also participated. The picnics also raised money for McGraw Manor, which is self-supporting.

A flea market was held last spring to raise funds, and another is planned for October. Residents and downtown merchants donated items, and table space was rented out. The Teen Club also held a car wash at the same time, and homemade food was sold at a bake sale.

The Athletic Committee, headed by Mrs. Sharon Melton, coordinates activities such as ladies' softball and volleyball teams, and Little League and Pee Wee League baseball and football. Ladies volleyball has been one of the most popular activities.

The Youth Activities Committee, in charge of the Teen Club, has taken over the old Sand Hill NCO Club and remodeled and refurnished it. It sponsors dances and bowling nights, in addition to other fund-raising activities. Chairman of this committee is Mrs. Jo Ann Broyles.

Chairman of the Public Relations Committee is Staff Sergeant Jerry Riemersma. His wife Kathy is chairman of the Newsletter Committee. The newsletter is a vital link in the life of the community, since it provides a means of communication between residents, and keeps them up to date on the association's activities. It also contains "for sale" and "job wanted" ads submitted by residents.

The Welcoming Committee, headed by Mrs. Dot Seagraves, visits newcomers to the area, distributes ACS welcome packets to each family, and tells them what services and activities are available to them at Fort Benning.

The Volunteer Committee furnishes workers to staff the Neighborhood Association offices at the trailer on Custer Road. Chairman of the committee is Mrs. Mary Reeves, and the volunteers are all McGraw Manor residents who donate their time.

Other committees are Race Relations, headed by Sergeant First Class August Klamar; Area Improvements, and Security and Welfare. President of the Neighborhood Association is Staff Sergeant Bob Yelton. Vice-president is Staff Sergeant Jesse Galvin, while Mrs. Marianne Frost is secretary and Mrs. Lydia Atkinson is treasurer.

SFC Johnson, who will be leaving for Germany soon, has worked with the program from the beginning as its coordinator. "I feel we have accomplished a majority of our goals in this initial period," he said.

Chaplain McRoberts agreed. "Our program has succeeded where those at other posts have failed because the people themselves have had the responsibility for getting things done," he added. He credited the USAIC Chaplain with the idea for getting Army Community Service and the area

"One of our biggest successes has been the Saturday matinee for children," said Mrs. Ann Bradenburg. "It was started on a trial basis in June, and was so popular it has been continued. As many as 400 children have attended on one afternoon, and three Army buses pick up the children at the Neighborhood Association trailer and return them there when the movie is over."

The movies are well-chaperoned, and children from all over Fort Benning, as well as dependents who live in Columbus, attend them. The chaperones do not leave any children waiting alone at the theater. They see that the child is taken home, even if they have to do it themselves.

By Susanne Bostick

The matinees have been so successful that the Sand Hill Theater (No. 3) has started opening on Friday nights for adults. "We encourage parents to plan their children's birthday parties on Saturdays and bring them to the matinee," added Mrs. Brandenburg.

One of the biggest successes of the whole program has been the increased sense of working together that the residents have achieved. "We don't just work," she continued.

"We have fun doing it."

"It's a help-yourself organization. We try to do what the people want, and we find that community residents can often get things done faster themselves," explained SSG Yelton.

At McGraw Manor, the emphasis is on people. "They are sorry to leave here. One resident who needs to move to a one-story floor plan for health reasons refuses to move unless a set of one-story quarters is available within McGraw Manor," said Chaplain McRoberts. The program started during a period when numerous families were leaving for overseas assignments, and has continued to grow in spite of this apparent obstacle.

The religious side of family life is also provided for at McGraw Manor. Protestant and Catholic services are held at McBride School every Sunday, along with Sunday School for Protestants. Catechism is also taught to Catholic children. More than 50 per cent of the children in the area attended Vacation Bible School in August, and about 25 per cent attend Sunday School every week.

Mrs. Bernice Stubbs, a McGraw Manor resident, babysits several children in her home. Here she plays with her daughter, Cheryl Stubbs, and Stacey Baker, son of Sergeant and Mrs. Randall R. Baker. Babysitting is one of the ways McGraw Manor residents help each other out. They often run ads offering their services in the McGraw Manor Newsletter, published by the Neighborhood Association. (U.S. Army Photo by Bob Sanders)

What do the residents of McGraw Manor have to say about the Neighhorhood Association? Here is a sampling:

Sergeant First Class Gerald DeClouet says, "I think it's a good thing. They have begun a lot of good projects, like the matinees for the kids and the local Sunday School. It's a much better place to live since the association was formed."

Mrs. Dot Seagraves commented, "The projects are an asset to the community. The welcoming committee makes people feel like someone realizes they're there. If we can get to the door with maps, information and a guided tour, it makes the Army wife feel more at home, whether she'll be here for six weeks or six years.

"The first thing the association did was help clean up this area. The area improvement committee has the right to knock on doors and say 'pick up your garbage'," she continued. Mrs. Seagraves is chairman of the welcoming committee.

"As a committee chairman for Cub Scout Pack 39 in McGraw Manor, I was already interested in the activities of the young boys that live there," said Sergeant First Class Charles P. Smith. "Now there are others interested in providing activities for the entire family. We have worked together on the Cub Scout Carnival and the association's Labor Day picnic.

"The association's welcoming committee furnishes us with names of new families who might be interested in scouting. We also work with the association on area beautification projects. The association would be even better if more families would become actively involved," he concluded.

It's not uncommon to see Mrs. Bernice Stubbs with a house loaded with children. She feels that babysitting for neighbors is her own way of contributing to the association. "They have buses taking the kids to the movies on Saturday, they teach various classes and they provide religious activities at the school. Wherever it's beneficial for my kids and family, I help."

"The association is one of the best things I have ever seen happen to a military community," observed Sergeant First Class Edward E. Alderson. "A few months ago everything was centered on main post. Now we've established a sports program for the ladies and other adult activities, a teen club, a community newsletter, and a chapel program. Protestant and Catholic chaplains have also been assigned to the community." SFC Alderson is superintendent of the Protestant Sunday School.

"Perhaps the most important thing about the whole project is that except for four people, everything is accomplished by volunteers. SFC Johnson, our community coordinator, gave excellent guidance when we were forming the association. We have also received fine support from the post. In most cases all valid complainis were taken care of immediately. The most important thing now is to get everyone involvdd," he continued.

Mrs. Janice Hawkins says, "The association helped us meet more people and become more aware of what was going on in the community. Without it we would never have known the chaplain, and we would never have received counseling. It's nice to have someone visit."

"Although I'm not a member of the association," said Sergeant First Class Earl Knepley, "I believe that a lot of good can come from it in the race relations area. I also think the association can work through the Post Engineers to help us keep our quarters up to standards. I find the newsletter very informative and interesting."

Mrs. Lydia Atkinson feels that the association has turned out well. "It gives us something to work with. People have learned that there are others who share their interests. It doesn't seem quite as military this way, either." Mrs. Atkinson is the association's treasurer.

Mrs. Mary Reeves, chairman of the volunteer committee, said, "There are pros and cons, but Fort Benning has done pretty well by trying to bring people together. I'd like to see it spread to other posts."

"It's good to know I can go to the coordinator or the chaplain for help," commented Mrs. Jo Ann Broyles, chairman of the Youth Activities Committee. "Compared to other posts, the Neighborhood Association is the best thing going. I didn't think it would work, but it did. It gave me a chance to get out and help, too."

Coming to the screen

Emperor Of The North

(PG) It is 1933-America's trauma of the Depression. Men from many walks of life find themselves hopping freight trains to the next hobo jungle. But in Oregon's Willamette Valley they steer clear of Number 19 and its ruthless conductor, The Shack, (Ernest Borgnine). Hobo lore says he kills to keep tramps off his train.

One does hop aboard, a tough loner named A-No. 1 (Lee Marvin), who'd have made it undetected if a punk kid, Cigaret (Keith Carradine), hadn't followed. Now both are trapped and A-No. 1 must free both.

The sadistic Shack and A-No. 1 battle atop the rolling freight car in a life and death struggle.

The Soul Of Nigger Charley

(R) After the Civil War, ex-Confederate Colonel Kevin Hagen kills everyone in a small town which refused him food for his men. Only survivor is young Kirk Calloway, orphaned in the raid. The boy and his new friend, big George Allen, are found by Fred Williamson and D'Urville Martin. The legendary Williamson learns that Hagen is catching black people to be used as slaves in a Mexican fort. The four blacks find a settlement of ex-slaves and Quakers who are warned by Sgt. Joe Henderson and Denise Nicholas of Hagen's impending raid.

Williamson decides to steal the $100,000 in gold which Hagen is to bring to the Mexican fort and bargain for the slaves.

Mexican bandit Pedro Armendariz, Jr., henchmen become allies in return for gold.

Let The Good Times Roll

(PG) Excellent presentation of the Rock explosion and the entire experience of the Fifties. More than a brilliant Concert film, it is a vital, involving chronicle of the era, using choice clips to make its point. The old and the new are blended into a lively, salute to the past.

Dramatizers

Casting completed for 'Rashomon'

The Fort Benning Dramatizers have completed casting for "Rashomon." The play, set in ancient Japan, will be presented Nov. 15-17 and Nov. 23-24 at the Fort Benning Playhouse.

Captain Fred Plank and Specialist Four Mike Rumschlag will appear as the priest and the woodcutter, respectively. Both made debuts with the Dramatizers in the August production of "The Mouse That Roared." A newcomer to the Playhouse, Specialist Four Harvey Jackson, will portray the cynical, iconoclastic wigmaker.

The deputy who announce in the Police Court will be Tim Tarpley, who has appeared in school plays, and has worked backstage with the Dramatizers.

Specialist Five Ed Gross will play the bandit, Tajomaru. This will be his 30th show with the Dramatizers and he had extensive experience before coming to Fort Benning.

Turq Brown, who appeared in "The Cave Dwellers," will play the husband. He has worked as a sound technican at the Playhouse on several productions.

Yolanda Green, an active Dramatizer who has participated in the weekly workshops and appeared in "The Mouse That Roared," will play the mother.

Byrdi Moore, a recent graduate of Averett College where she worked extensively with the Averett Players, will play the wife.

Gwen Day, stage manager for "The Mouse That Roared," will play the Medium. She has attended the American Academy of Drama.

The Dramatizers still need people to work backstage on all the technical aspects. For information, call 545-5657, or stop by the Fort Benning Playhouse (behind the Infantry Museum) any weekday.

Six new members have been elected to the Non-Commissioned Officers' Association Board of Trustees. Elected were Master Sergeant Cyril E. Robke, DPCA, chairman; Sergeant First Class William Payton, Small Arms Committee, Weapons Department, USAIS, vice chairman, and Specialist Four Barbara Zwecker, data analyst, aljutant General-Military Personnel Accounting Section, treasurer.

Also elected were Sergeant First Class Luther Kirby, ANCOES student; Staff Sergeant Howard Alpaugh, chief analyst, Adjutant General - Military Personnel Accounting Section; and Sergeant First Class Jack Childers, plasergeant, Headquarters and Headquarters Command, 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor.

The NCOA Ladies' Auxiliary appointed these officers — Mrs. Herme Whitley, chairman; Mrs. Raye Alpaugh, vice chairman; Mrs. Hilda Holmes, treasurer; Mrs. Gussie Crowell, secretary; and Mrs. Sharon Boyette, publicity chairman.

There are about 1400 NCOA members at Fort Benning. All enlisted individuals, E4 through E9, active duty or retired from any branch of the Armed Forces, may apply for membership. Anyone who holds an honorable discharge from the military service may also join.

The Ladies' Auxiliary will hold its next meeting at 7:30 p.m. Oct. 3, in Building 3155. For more information call the NCOA Counselor Service, 2223 South Lumpkin Road, at 689-5811.

Cash Payments End

Remember the significance of April 15?

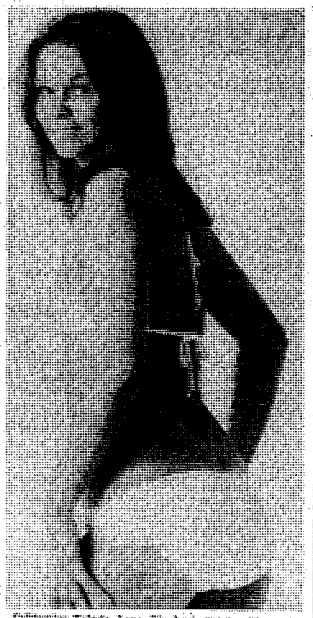
Now, how about Oct. 10? It also involves money.

This date should ring a bell for those soldiers who are currently being paid by cash each month. It's the deadline for filling out an Election of Pay Option Form (DA Form 3665).

Effective with the last payment of October and the mid-month payment for November, all soldiers at Fort Benning will be paid by check — no exceptions. Approximately 2,000 soldiers are currently being paid by cash.

These 2,000 must fill out DA Form 3665 by Oct. 10 or be paid by the check-to-unit method. The checks for those who select, or are automatically placed in this method, will be sent to the mail room. If not picked up in five days, the check will be returned to finance.



The best option is generally the check-to-bank method. The check can be sent to a local or home town bank. If this option is chosen, the soldier is assured that his pay will be deposited in the bank and available to him even if he is on leave, TDY or in transit on a permanent change of station.

The second best option is the check-to-address method. The check can be sent to an off-post address or even a relative. This type of check will also be issued when a soldier is on leave. However, the check would not be readily available unless someone deposited it for him.

Because the soldier must actually pick the check up at the unit, and has only five days to do so before it's returned to Finance, the check-to-unit method is the least attractive method.

That's why Oct. 10 is an important date to some 2000 Fort Benning soldiers now being paid by cash.

Valentine Valerie Lunt, Playboy's October Playmate, has been styling men's hair since shortly after graduation from high school in Long Beach. She does her cutting and crimping at Mr. Ron's in Newport Beach, but she doesn't plan to stay forever. Valerie thinks that she will eventually open her own shop. "In fact," she says, "I'd like to open a couple of them, and I sometimes fantasize that if they were successful enough, I'd have other people run and staff them. That way I'd have to work in the shop only a few days a week. That would be ideal." Perhaps for Valerie, but it's certainly not the way her customers would prefer it.

Tomorrow is the Day of the Archer. Deer season opens in Georgia for those hunters who intend to limit their weapons to bows and arrows.

The archery hunting season will remain open until October 27. Then there are a few days when no deer hunting is allowed. On November 3 the deer gun season opens in Georgia. This season closes January 1. Archers may also hunt during the gun season. Archers get a bonus in additional hunting time before the gun season starts and also get a break on the sex of the deer. Archers may take a doe during the early archery season. The doe season is also open for archers and gun hunters during the period December 15 until January 1.

Newcomers to the post are cautioned that the above applies only to the Georgia portion of the reservation. Real estate controlled by Fort Benning lies in Georgia and Alabama. Hunters must observe the opening dates and bag limits established for the different state areas. The Alabama deer season doesn't open until October 12. Alabama also has different open dates for archers and gun hunters and different bag limits.

Archers who intend to hunt in Georgia or on the Georgia portion of the reservation must have a special archery license. That's right. Get them at the Rod and Gun Club.

No matter how you hunt or where you hunt on the reservation, you can only take a total of two deer. Only one of these animals can be a doe, taken during one of the authorized doe seasons.

All deer killed on the reservation must be tagged immediately with a Georgia Deer Tag. The deer must then be taken to the Deer Check Station for registration and examination.

These are just a few of the regulations most frequently violated. Every hunter should know all of the regulations. They are outlined in USAIC Regulation 210-2 and USAIC Circular 210-2. You can get copies at the Rod and Gun Club. Study them and if there is something you don't understand check it out at the club or at the Fish and Wildlife Unit.

September Fishing Derby

The leading catches in the Rod and Gun Club September Fishing Derby are going to be hard to beat.

Major Frank Shaw, Dental Company, has the largest bass registered this month. His prize weighed in at an even nine pounds on the club scales. Shaw took the fish from Harp's Pond, you have to believe Shaws' story. There are some monsters there. If anyone wants to top Shaw's entry he would be best off concentrating on Harp's or King's Ponds.

The top catfish came from Twilight Pond. Lloyd Smith, 2068 Mason Street, a retired civil service employee, used a leach to entice the eight-pound, nine-ounce cat onto his hook.

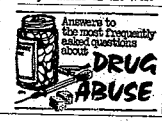
A Rare Catch

First Sergeant (Ret.) John Zebreski, 4005 Bowman street has registered the largest bream. The fish weighed in at eight-ounces. Not too large for a bream in this area but the fish was really unusual. According to Tom McCullough, Rod and Gun Club custodian the fish is called a chinkapin in Georgia. Jim Carter, who also works at the club, volunteered the information that the fish is known as a stump knocker in Florida and as a punkinseed in Louisianna and Alabama. A native of Mississippi allowed that from the discription the fish might be what they call a silversides in his home state.

Fishermen are bound not to agree on the name but everyone who has seen one agrees the punkinseed-chinkapin or whatever name you want to use is the most beautiful fish they have evern seen. The fish has the same configuration as an ordinary southern bream but the scales are the odd feature of the fish. When held in strong light they act as mirrors, reflecting every color in a rainbow.

Fishermen also agree that the fish is extremely tasty on the dinner table. Zebreski can no doubt verify or discredit this by now. However, anyone interested might try Upper Kings Pond. That's where Zebreski got his. He was using a cricket for bait.

SFC snags shootout showdown



QUANTICO, Va., — National Pistol Champion, Sergeant First Class Hershel Anderson of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Training Unit, Fort Benning, punched out winning scores in two of the four individual events of the Virginia State International Pistol Championship here Sunday.

He led his Army team in collecting three of the four team matches.

Pistol contest and in the highlight of the weekend match, set a new national record score of 595. The Army quartet picked up the top honors also in these events.

A newly-organized International pistol tournament,

Anderson claimed championships in Standard Pistol and Free Pistol with his 582 and 568 scores. Teammate Sergeant First Class James McNally of Columbus grabbed the honors in the Rapid Fire the Virginia State Championships hosted by the U.S. Marine Corps, was one of the first competitive events in this field since the U.S. International Championships at Phoenix, Ariz., in June. It served as a training base for the many U.S. military and civilian marksmen in their preparation for the "Tournament of Americas" at Mexico City in early October. They will be competing against the best of the many nations in the Western hemisphere. The competition will include all Olympic marksmanship events with 33 Americans representing the U.S. Of these top shooters, 12 are from the U.S. Army, six Army Reserve, seven civilian marksmen, four Air Force, two Marine Corps and two Marine Reserves.

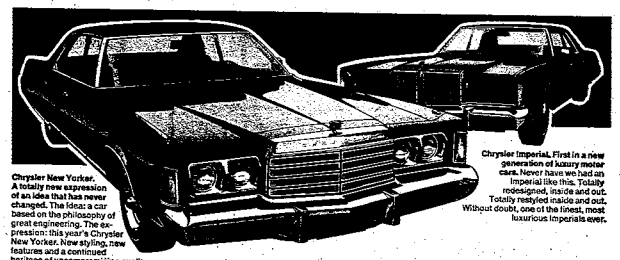
CHAMPUS bits

DENVER — CHAMPUS beneficiaries have been penalizing their own pocketbooks by delaying the submission of claims for reimbursement of authorized health care charges. These delays slow down payment processing, according to officials of the Civilian Health and Medical program of the Uniformed Services.

Normally state CHAMPUS fiscal administrators strive to process claims within fifteen working days of receipt.



Delayed submission claims involve charges that range from a few dollars to several thousands of dollars. A CHAMPUS study reveals that some of the explanations submitted with the delayed claims include that they were lost in doctors' offices; that there was a lack of knowledge of the provisions of the program by the military member at the time the care was received; and that the claims had been lost by the sponsor.

NEW DIRECTOR

Army Col. E. R. McCandless has been named Director of the Civilian Health and Medical program of the Uniformed Services (CHAMPUS). Col. McCandless assumes command of the multi-services health care agency upon the departure of Brigadier General John E. Haggerty who has been designated as chief of the Army's Medical Service Corps.

The veteran medical administrative officer comes to Denver from Washington, where he was most recently Deputy Director of Personnel in the Army Surgeon General's office.

Chrysler New Yorker. A totally new expression of an idea that has never changed. The idea: a car based on the philosophy of great engineering. The expression: this year's Chrysler New Yorker. New styling, new features and a continued heritage of uncompromising quality.

Chrysler Imperial. First in a new generation of luxury motor cars. Never have we had an Imperial like this. Totally redesigned, inside and out. Totally restyled inside and out. Without doubt, one of the finest, most luxurious Imperials ever.

Handicap Golf Tourney

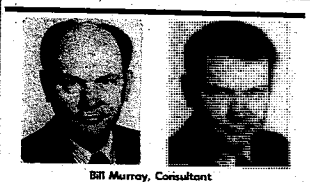
And, possibly win a weekend of golf at Callaway Gardens in a pro-am including such professionals as Masters champion Tommy Aaron?

Yes, it is true. All active duty military personnel at Fort Benning are eligible for a special handicap golf tournament scheduled for the Fort Benning Officers Club lakeside golf course on Oct. 6-7.



Entry deadline for the tournament is Oct. 1. The competition is being staged to select three golfers to represent the U. S. Army Infantry Center in the annual Boy Scout Pro-Am Golf Tournament slated for Callaway Gardens on Oct. 22.

Non-members of the Fort Benning Officers Club are invited to play one free practice round between Oct. 1-5 in preparation for the tourney. The entry forms for the Fort Benning tournament are available at the FBOC pro shop, the Sand Hill pro shop and the Sports and Athletic Training Office at Doughboy Stadium.

Activities scheduled for dependent youth

October, the month set aside for visits of pint-sized goblins, witches, dragons, ghosts and an occasional space man, is no different at Fort Benning.

The Dependent Youth Activities Center will hold its annual Halloween Party and Parade on Oct. 30 for children ages 6-12 from 5-7 p.m. at the Youth Center.

Young adults will not be forgotten. A dance will be held at the center on Oct. 27 for those between 13-19 years old.

All fun, games, crafts and socials at the Dependent Youth Activities Center are designed to be entertaining, educational and relaxing for children of all ages.

Here is the October schedule:

Oct. 2 — Ping Pong instruction (4-6 p.m. age group 10-12)

Oct. 5 — Bridge lessons (6-11 p.m. age group 13-19)

Oct. 7 — Teen Council meeting (2-4 p.m. age group 13-19)

Oct. 12 — Pop Corn Pop (2-4 p.m. age group 6-12)

Oct. 12 — Bridge group lessons (8-11 p.m. age group 13-19)

Oct. 14 — Band audition (2-4 p.m. age group 13-19)

Oct. 20 — Nature hike and drawing (1-3 p.m. age group 6-12)

Oct. 26 — Magazine scavenger hunt (8-10 p.m. age group 13-19)

Oct. 27 — Dance (8-12 p.m. age group 13-19)

Oct. 30 — Halloween party and parade (5-7 p.m. age group 6-12)

Pioneers

29th Infantry joins Infantry School

The 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry (Pioneers) will leave the 197th Infantry Brigade and become part of the U.S. Army Infantry School in ceremonies beginning at 2 p.m. Monday at York Field.

After the changeover ceremony the Pioneers will officially assume the new role as the principal troop and equipment support unit for the U.S. Army Infantry School and will come under The School Brigade.

Presiding at the ceremony will be Major General Thomas M. Tarpley, Fort Benning commander and U.S. Army Infantry School commandant. Other officials at the ceremony will be Brigadier General William Richardson, the School's assistant commandant; Colonel William B. Steele, 197th Infantry Brigade commander; Colonel Allen Goodson, The School Brigade commander; and Lieutenant Colonel Robert M. Brumback, commander of the 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry.

Reasoner Report

ABC news team visits 197th

Smile, you're on Candid Camera. Well not really. The name of the game was "tell it like it is" last week when an ABC news team visited the 197th Infantry Brigade to film a segment of the "Reasoner Report."

The team, headed by correspondent Frank Reynolds, with Phillip Burton Jr., field producer and Ms. Phyllis Gura, associate producer of the "Reasoner Report," visited the 197th Brigade Headquarters; 2nd Battalion 63th Armor; 3rd Battalion 7th Infantry; 2nd Battalion 10th Field Artillery and the 1st Battalion, (Mech) 58th Infantry (Patriots) during filming.

According to Burton, the "Reasoner Report" is developing material for a segment to give the public the "pros and cons of the Modern Volunteer Army."

First Lieutenant Roger C. Duckworth, executive officer, Battery B, 2nd Battalion, 10th Field Artillery, was interviewed and stated, "I believe today's soldiers like their present living condition and the realistic training the Brigade is now undergoing. We have some fine soldiers in our battery."

Private Charles A. Davis Jr., Company B, 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor, told Ms. Gura, "I am a unit-of-choice volunteer and my civilian occupation as a bulldozer operator is in line with my present assignment as a tank driver. This assignment will also be of value when I finish my Army tour and return to my civilian job."

Sergeant First Class Socrates Dawson, Company A, 1st Battalion, 58th Infantry, told Reynolds, "Today's soldier is just fine. He loves the hard field training he is undergoing in the battalion." His comment was made during squad training exercises being conducted by the battalion.

Most of the interviews were conducted in the field. However, the ABC team was impressed with living conditions in the barracks and several interviews were conducted there. In one such interview, Specialist Four David W. Shifflett, Company C, 3rd Battalion, 7th Infantry, stated, "I believe the old Army was better. I am an 'Army brat' and I believe discipline needs to be improved in today's Army."

Not all soldiers were truly happy about military life but the consensus was, "I volunteered for this unit and I am going to make the best of it."

According to Mr. Reynolds the telecast date for the program has not yet been established by the network.

During interviews with soldiers of Battery B, 2nd Battalion, 10th Field Artillery, SSgt. Socrates J. Miles explains the use of the gunner's quandrant to Philip Burton Jr. (far left). SSgt Miles was also interviewed and stated: "I like the old Army best but I have adjusted to the changes in the Volunteer Army and I believe today's soldiers will be able to carry out their mission in combat."

CALL 545-4792

DEAR BAYONET,
Could you give me the name of the doctor doing acupuncture on Governor Wallace and where I could write him? TIM

DEAR TIM,
The doctor's name is Dr. Ling Sun Chu Hai. His address is 185 Park Row, Chinatown, New York, N.Y. 10038.

DEAR BAYONET,
Will the Veterans Administration replace adaptive equipment for a car purchased by a service disabled veteran with a grant from the agency? VET

DEAR VET,
VA will pay for installation, maintenance and replacement of adaptive equipment, but the car grant is a one time benefit.

DEAR BAYONET,
I am in the HQ Command. Why does the Bayonet carry sports standings for other football leagues but not for ours? PFC

DEAR PFC,
League standings are submitted by the Unit A and R personnel to the Recreational Srvice Office and then to the Bayonet. If yours are not included, your A and R officer is not submitting them. See him.

DEAR BAYONET,
Where do I write to obtain a copy of my child's birth certificate? He was born at Fort Campbell, Kentucky approximately 6 years ago. NED

DEAR NED,
You need to write: Kentucky State Department of Health Office of Vital Statistics, 275 East Main Street, Frankfort, Ky. 40601. You should send $2.00 along with the child's name, county of birth, date of birth and name of father.

Auditions being held for play

Auditions for the Springer Theatre Company's production of "THE LITTLE FOXES," will be held at the Springer Studio, 910 Broad St. Saturday and Sunday September 29th and 30th.

All parts are open and a cast of 10 is needed. Eight attractive men and women in their 40's and 50's including one male and one female servant, and the Daughter and Son in their early 20's.

"THE LITTLE FOXES" a drama written by Lillian Hellman, will be directed by Jim Way of Atlanta, who is remembered by Springer audiences for his direction of two shows at the Springer last season, DRACULA and TAKE HER SHE'S MINE.

"THE LITTLE FOXES" is scheduled to open November 1 and play through November 10.

Volunteers are also needed to help in the backstage area so if you are interested in working in any capacity of the production please come and register with us at the auditions.

On equipment and information

Pioneers display

The Pioneers, following the ceremony, will present an information and equipment display on Gardner Field adjoining York Field. Each of the battalion's six companies will have an organizational chart with a narrator to explain details as well as equipment characteristics.

Highlights of these displays are expected to be a demolitions demonstration, a Ranger operations exhibit, TOW weapon system display, 4.2-inch and 81-millimeter mortars mounted on tracked vehicles and an artillery display featuring the 105-mm howitzer, the 155-mm howitzer, the 175-mm howitzer and the 9-inch gun.

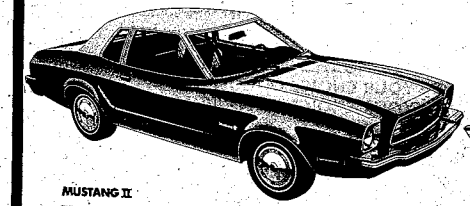
The historic Pioneer wagon, the unit's symbol, will be pulled by a mule team and serve as the final element in a pass-in-review conducted by the battalion during the ceremony.

The public is invited to attend a reception in Wigle Hall slated to begin at 2:30.

The 1-29th was assigned to the 197th Infantry Brigade on Jan. 4, 1963, just a few months after the brigade itself had been organized as the primary troop and equipment support unit for the Infantry School. Since then the Pioneers, as the only straight infantry battalion in the 197th Brigade, have been called upon to supply a large part of the support for the Infantry School.

When the 197th Infantry Brigade was reorganized on March 21, 1973 the 1-29 was redesignated as the 3rd Battalion 7th Infantry (Cottonbalers). The new Pioneer battalion was established concurrently to start collecting men and equipment and fully organizing itself as the chief Infantry School support unit. The new Pioneers moved rapidly in its new role and completed organizing ahead of schedule.

"It is with mixed emotions that I bid farewell to the 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry. Naturally, I would like to retain this fine battalion as a part of this brigade. However, I realize the requirement and necessity for a full-time school support unit at the U.S. Army Infantry School," explained Col. Steele.



"The officers and men of the battalion have done an outstanding job in getting ready for the school support mission and the 197th Infantry Brigade wishes the battalion the best of success in its new role," added the 197th Brigade commander.

"What you should know before you buy land" is the title of a 12-page booklet you should send for today. Simply fill out the coupon and mail the postpaid card. We'll send you your booklet without cost or obligation.

You'll find it filled with answers to questions you'll be asking yourself as a prospective landowner. Plus other valuable information. Why are we making this offer? Because we want you to be more knowledgeable about how, when, where and what to buy. And we figure the more you know about land, the more you'll appreciate what Horizon Corporation has to offer.

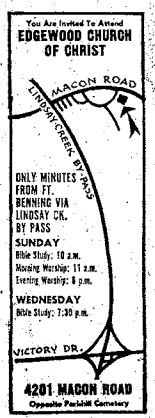
Medics examine children

Staff Sergeant Earmon L. Sessons, ENT Clinic, Martin Army Hospital, checks an audiometer before taking it to Atlanta to conduct hearing tests on disadvantaged Atlanta school children.



SSG Sessons, Sergeant First Class Homer L. Durham, Dental Company, and Specialist Four Andrew L. Davis, Medical Company, will spend 10 days in Atlanta helping the Public Health Department give medical examinations to these children.

Durham will make dental checks to determine the need for dental care, and Davis will conduct eye examinations.

Engineers Hold Diving Classes

The 586th Engineer Company (Float Bridge), 36th Engr. Gp. diving section is currently conducting an adventure team training class on basic scuba diving in the Sand Hill area.

Eleven members of the 586th and the 598th light Maintenance Company are taking advantage of the class, not only to pick up valuable scuba diving knowledge and experience, but also to cool off in the Sand Hill pool and escape the late summer sun.

The instruction will include nine hours of classroom work, 12 hours in the pool gaining practical diving experience and finally an open water qualification dive in Florida. The last portion of instruction will be the true test of the men's newly acquired knowledge, as they will be required to skin dive, scuba dive at shallow depths, and as their final test; perform a deep dive in Troy Springs at Branford, Florida.

"The thing I like about the class is that it teaches you to depend on yourself," he explains. "We always dive in pairs, but there is still a great deal of personal confidence and expertise required. You must not only be familiar with your equipment, but with yourself as well."

Participants will be awarded an Adventure Training Card, which entitles them to many of the privileges and rights that licensed divers receive.

MEDDAC Celebrates Founders Day

The United States Army Medical Department Activity, (MEDDAC) celebrated the second annual Army Medical Department Founders Day yesterday. This celebration provided MEDDAC members the chance to join other medical personnel world-wide in observing the establishment of the U.S. Army Medical Department.

The U.S. Army Medical Department is made up of six corps. To promote unity and support the team effort, only one of the corps is honored each year on Founders Day. This year, the honor Corps was the Army Nurse Corps.

Although the Army Nurse Corps did not become a permanent member of the Army Medical Department until Feb. 2, 1901, the Army nurses have served since 1775 in war and peace, caring for the sick and wounded on the field of battle and on the home front. Through the many years, men and women of the Army Nurse Corps have devotedly served mankind, caring for the victims of disaster and disease throughout the world.

The six corps rotate as honor corps for the annual Army Medical Department Founders Day celebration in the order which they were founded — the Medical Corps, July 27, 1775; Army Nurse Corps, Feb. 2, 1901; Dental Corps — March 3, 1911; Veterinary Corps June 3, 1916; Medical Service Corps — May 13, 1917; Army Medical Specialist Corps April 16, 1947.

A reception for the MEDDAC staff was held yesterday in the MEDDAC Officer's Dining Room to honor the occasion.

THE BAYONET Inside Front

Patricia Amos, wife of Captain Albert Amos, 610 Gibson Drive, Custer Terrace, tells her daughter Amy not to touch or eat the berries. The purple colored berries, known in this area as koke or ink berries are toxic. Several small children in the Custer Terrace area have required medical attention after eating them. Symptoms of persons who have ingested the berries are a burning and bitter taste in the mouth; persistent vomiting; difficulty in breathing and in severe cases tremors or convulsions.

The midnight hour change

One minute after midnight this Saturday, Oct. 6 (actually Sunday, Oct. 7), all Class "B" telephones (those installed in quarters, concessions, and non-appropriated fund activities) at Fort Benning will have their numbers changed.

Number plates for those telephones affected by the change are being mailed this week. If a caller dials an old number, a recording will tell the caller to dial directory assistance in Columbus (411) to find out the correct number.

New telephone directories will also be delivered this week to offices and quarters. They will include the new telephone numbers for those telephones affected by the change.

Fort Benning callers will not need to call directory assistance, since their new telephone books containing the new numbers will be delivered before Sunday.

Post Commissary Bulletin

The Main Post Commissary will be closed Oct. 8 in observance of Columbus Day. The Custer Terrace Commissary will be closed Oct. 6.

MP's birthday cakes

The Fort Benning Military Police received three homemade cakes as an anniversary gift on Sept. 26. The cakes were made by Mrs. John Dykes, Mrs. Tom Blain, and Mrs. Gary Border, and were presented by them as a gift from the wives of Infantry Officer Basic Course 2-74.

The three cooks read about the Military Police Anniversary in The Bayonet, and decided to make the cakes to show their appreciation for the work done by the military police at Fort Benning.

Kathy Dykes, Anita Blain and Julie Border took the cakes themselves to the office of Colonel E. J. Murdock, Provost Marshal, who said in a letter of appreciation, "It was a lovely gesture on their part and a most unexpected tribute to the local military police. We all enjoyed the delicious cakes."

'Helping Those In Need'

There's an old custom in the Army — 'helping those in need'.

The combined efforts of the men of the 298th Signal Platoon, 1st Bn., 58th Inf. (Mech.), 197th Inf. Bde., spearheaded by Specialist Five Lawrence W. Coan, upheld that custom in an enthusiastic manner.

The platoon of 43 men, more than tripled its goal of $394.44 by contributing a total of $918.06 for the Combined Federal Campaign (CFC). This set the average contribution per man at $21.35.

Paving the way for this figure was Specialist Five Coan who donated $240.00.

Three other above average donors were Staff Sergeant James E. Williams donated $63.00, while Sergeant John M. Brown Jr. and Sergeant Charles W. Nickell each gave $36.00.

CFC

Makes early progress with 14 per cent of goal

With the Combined Federal Campaign barely under way, Fort Benning has reached 14 per cent of the post goal of $150,000 with less than half of the units reporting in.

Early this week, more than $20,000 had been turned in by 11 units. Other units indicated they have more money collected but have not turned it in.

Of those who have donated so far, 85 per cent are paying by the payroll deduction plan. This percentage is about the same as it was last year.

This is the third year the campaign at Fort Benning has combined drives for the International Services Agencies, the United Way Agencies and the National Health Agencies in the Fort Benning-Columbus-Phenix City area.

Some 44 local, national and international health and service agencies finance their projects through contributions made during the drive.

The six-week campaign is organized so that each office and major unit has a "keyman" who will accept contributions and prepare receipts for the donor's tax records.

According to James Schoonover, post project officer, more than $190,000 was collected from last year's campaign. He hopes this year's campaign will be as successful.

What can be done to make people more fire prevention conscious?

SFC Eliza J. Boyd
Co. C, 1-58 197th

You should take it upon yourself to become aware of fires such as checking overloaded sockets and plugs.

Capt. Bobby Simmons
121st Aviation Co.

I think the only way to make people more fire prevention conscious is to bring out the after effects burns have on you. I've seen many magazines which made good usage of that. As far as fire drills, I think that is just a form of harrasement. In the 121st we have monthly safety meetings.

SFC Arpad Iamas
Personal
Confinement Facilities

More advertising would help out a lot. I think that every command information class should show safety films at the end of the month. Our company just showed a film on fire safety which brought out a lot of things I didn't know such as how dust accumulation can cause fires. These safety films should be shown every month.

Sp5 Freddy Gachette
Youth Activities

There ought to be more fire drills. Just enough to substantiate a meaning. As long as it can save a life, it ought to be done.

Sp4 Robert Barnes
HHC 197th

There ought to be more advertising on fire prevention and the Army should provide for periodical safety checks by the fire inspector to your home. Everyone should have a fire extinguisher for their home and their car. The Army should put out more directives about fire safety which also should include where to store combustionable items.

BAYONET OPINION PAGE

Stay Alive

October is a treacherous month for traveling

October, with two three-day holidays could prove to be the most hazardous month of the year for travelers.

Many people will take off for the warm beaches of Florida where summer driving conditions prevail year round but, many other people will be traveling north where winter driving conditions are apt to appear suddenly. This sudden change of driving conditions can have a disastrous effect upon the unfamiliar driver and could result in a serious accident. The potential for an accident occurring is even higher when travel time is limited to a holiday period.

Fort Benning personnel have achieved enviable holiday safety records over the past several years. The death and injury record is about half that of non-holiday periods. It appears that Benning personnel conduct themselves safely as the result of having been forewarned of holiday hazzards. This is not generally true in civilian communities.

A detailed study was made of 400 of the 500 traffic deaths occurring during a three-day holiday period by the National Safety Council. This study reflected that not a single traffic victim was wearing a seat belt. Investigators were of the opinion that 62 per cent of these 400 deaths would have been prevented had seat belts been worn.

The first few hours of a holiday period usually produce traffic deaths at a high rate. Nearly half of the three-day holiday toll will occur in the first 24 hours. It seems that the impact of this toll, reported by news media, shocks drivers into driving more carefully during the remainder of the period. Fort Benning drivers should take this factor into account by driving more carefully so as to protect themselves from irresponsible actions of other drivers. Learn the proper emergency procedures in situations forced upon you by other drivers. For example: driver coming toward you on your side of the road; brake with a pumping action and pull gradually to the right onto the shoulder.

Six of ten fatal accidents involve only one vehicle. The driver lost control and overturned or crashed into a fixed object near the roadway. He lost control because he was driving too fast, using intoxicants, distracted by passengers, or in some cases too sleepy and tired to control his car. Most Fort Benning accidents follow this pattern. Unfortunately, in many of these cases there was a passenger killed rather than an irresponsible driver.

In cases in which the accident was caused by drinking or speeding, over half of such drivers have a previous record of traffic violations. This is generally true of Fort Benning in which about 50 per cent of traffic accidents involve the 10 per cent of the Fort Benning drivers who have a previous violation record.

Three out of five fatal accidents occur on roads with which the driver is familiar. For Fort Benning drivers most accidents occur within a ten mile radius of the post. It is not just the long trip that is hazardous.

The vast majority of drivers will enjoy the holiday free of accidents. Safe driving requires only that the driver exercise the same caution and consideration that he would normally be expected to exercise. A safe holiday requires that you inspect your vehicle and insure that it is in a safe driving condition and remember that driving long distances at highway speeds requires good tires.

Plan the trip to avoid night driving and high speeds. Driving more than 300 miles in a 24-hour period is asking for trouble. If you mus tdrive at night or longer than an eight-hour period, compensate for the unsafe practice.

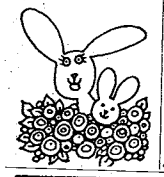
Leave side windows open to assure plenty of fresh air. Insist that passengers stay awake. Eat sweets for quick energy. Stop occasionally. Get exercise and if your passenger has a driver's license and can be trusted, let him relieve you when you become tired.

If you feel sleepy and must continue driving, wedge a toothpick between your teeth so as to set up a slight irritation that will keep you awake. Remove your shoes, and the feel of the accelerator on the bare toes will help keep you awake.

Life Saving Action

When Clothing Catches Fire . . . Children and elderly persons are fire's favorite targets. Both age groups are frequent victims of clothing fires, in particular.

To help a person whose clothes are burning, get him into a horizontal position as quickly as possible. Then roll him on the ground or floor, first wrapping him in a blanket, rug or heavy coat if it is handy.



Once the flames are smothered, notify the fire department and see that the victim has proper medical attention without delay.

Check Heating Equipment Now — Before the season's first cold wave. Have furnace, pipes, flues and chimneys cleaned and repaired, and be sure that any fixed or portable room heaters are in first-class operating condition. Dirty, defective heating equipment is the most frequent cause of dwelling fires, accounting for nearly a fourth of all home fires each year.

Fire Prevention Week marks the anniversary of one of America's worst fires, The Great Chicago Fire of Oct. 9, 1871. A true conflagration, that tragedy cost 250 lives, 17,450 buildings and $168 million.

In commemoration of the date, Fire Prevention Week — internationally sponsored by the National Fire Protection Association — always takes place during the Sunday-through-Saturday period which includes the Oct 9 date.

Forest fires burn more than trees.

Hunting:

Can be a real bag

By TIM PURDON

It may be the beginning or the end for some Fort Benning hunters now that the dove and deer seasons are here.

Hunters should become aware of the basic rules of firearm and hunting safety, as well as the dangers of food poisoning from wild game.

Common Sense Rules

Several rules should be appplied before hunters go tramping out in the fields. First, you should get yourself into physical shape, then check with Range Control or the Provost Marshal to prevent stumbling into an impact area. Also, make sure that your weapon is clean and is on the proper state of repair.

When you're finally out in the field, keep certain basic rules in mind. Always assume the weapon is loaded. Rifles or shotguns carried into camp, car or home should be unloaded, taken down or have their actions opened.

Make sure you're loading the proper size ammunition and keep the safety on until it is time to fire.

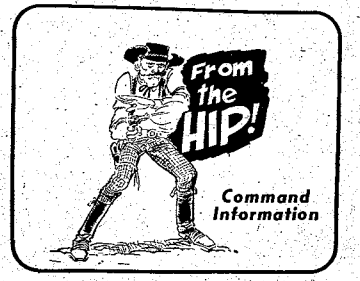
Other rules include making sure of your target, making positive identification before firing, never shooting at the surface of water or any flat, hard surfaces, never Climbing trees or fences or jumping a ditch with a loaded weapon, practicing conservation, observing bag limits and controlling campfires, cigarettes, hot ashes or matches so as to prevent destructive forest fires. Above all, avoid alcoholic drinks before and during hunting trips.

The Hunter — His Own Worst Enemy

According to a one-yeear study by the National Safety Council, 37 percent of all hunting fatalities were caused by mistakes in the hunter's judgment, such as the victim being mistaken for game, walking into the line of fire and shooting into blind spots. 27 percent of the accidents were caused by stumbling, loading, unloading and being caught in a foreign object. Violating common sense accounted for 14 percent of the hunting accidents. This would include horseplay with a loaded weapon and improper crossing of obstacles. Defective weapons caused only 3.9 per cent of the accidents.

Art by Bill Dolan

Cleaning and Dressing Important



The possibility of meat items causing food poisoning is especially ture in the case of wild game where the product has been prepared by an amateur with hasty cleaning procedures.

Great care must be taken in the cleaning and dressing of all game soon after being killed. The first step in the proper preparation of game is to bleed the animal before the blood hardens. Next, the entrails of the animal must be removed to prevent contamination of the carcass with any intestinal contents.

Bleed a game bird by severing the neck arteries and forcing the blood by squeezing the bird with the hands, using light pressure. Do not pile birds in the car or trunk. Instead, spread them out as much as possible to allow air circulation, making every effort to remove the body heat as quickly as possible. Pluck and draw game birds, wash thoroughly and wrap in a vapor resistant material as you would poultry. If camping overnight, hang them from a tree or where the cool air will circulate around them.

It's Your Life

Thousands of hunters die throughout the nation each year on weekend hunting trips because of careless mistakes. Common sense is your best weapon to safeguard you and others against these ridiculous, wasteful mishaps. If you use your good common sense and always remember tha a weapon knows only how to kill, your hunting outings will be enjoyable, it not productive.

Manpower chief reviews success of Volunteer Army

WASHINGTON, D.C. — With the conclusion that the Armed Forces "ended the year in quite good shape," Army Lieutenant General Robert Taber, Principal Deputy Assistant Secretary of Defense for Manpower and Reserve Affairs was "optimistic" for the success of the All-Volunteer Force during a recent worldwide news conference broadcast over the American Forces Radio and Television Service.

"We ended the year for total Defense about 1.1 per cent short in manpower, or about 25,000 short in a force of approximately 2.3 million," General Taber said. He indicated that active planning to go off the draft began about four years ago at Defense.

The manpower expert explained that while the Army may have a recruiting problem during the next year, its requirements will be for "almost half" of all personnel taken into the armed forces. He added that increased recruiting efforts and continue development of inducements — barracks improvement and improving the life of the soldier and his family and other incentives should help meet manpower needs.

The General discussed in detail the quality of those entering the armed forces and stressed that "the true measure of quality in an armed force is a man's performance in the job he's assigned to." A high number of high school graduates is desirable because they have lower disciplinary rates than those who have not graduated, but pointed out that the Army has to look at the total market. "We do not disqualify all those who have not completed high school," he said, "because four out of five non-graduates complete their tours of enlistment satisfactorily and are valued members of the armed forces."

General Taber admitted that there may be some problems with a shortage of professional people: doctors, lawyers, and dentists. He indicated hope that special pay proposals, scholarship programs and other special incentives will overcome this.

While much of the news conference was concerned with enlisted personnel, the question of officer procurement was raised. General Taber made clear that in the long run, "We do think we can meet our officer requirements with quality officers." ROTC scholarships are "fought after," the General said, noting that non-academy commissioning programs have been significantly reduced to match the reduction of the armed forces.

The General also stated that women will have an important and expanding role in the All-Volunteer Force. The present plan is to greatly increase the number of women in military service so that beginning with FY 78, ". . . we will have, by present projections, about 88,000 women in the armed forces."

Discussing the reserve components, General Taber noted that during the years when the draft was a major source of military manpower, many young men were attracted to the Guard and Reserve as a means of avoiding active military service. "Those days are gone," he said. While reserve strength is down by a small percentage, he indicated that with new recruiting and requirement efforts, along with pay proposals and greater public support, strength figures will "level out and start back up."

General Taber revealed that he, along with some other Defense leaders have been looking at the British all-volunteer force program. However, while the British have ten years of experience with their program, the General was quick to point out, "they need 40,000 volunteers a year, while we need that many every month."

WHO WHAT WHERE

OWC Publicity Chairman: Marsha Graham; Co-Chairman: Jane Macpherson: Editor: Judy Jakubowski; Typist: Pat Rice

The Fort Benning Officers' Wives' Club sends a sincere "Thank You" to the members of the Fort Benning Chapter of the Warrant Officers' Association. The chapter chose to install the new carpeting in the OWC Lounge as one of this year's projects.

Everyone who uses the lounge surely appreciates the time and effort these men gave.

The ladies of 1st Bn., 29 Inf., met for a morning coffee on Sept. 20, in the Columbus home of Mrs. Morris E. Price.

Of primary importance was the reassigning of some battalion responsibilities. Mrs. Jesse Wheeler volunteered to be the battalion reservation chairman. Mrs. Charles Horner will write the monthly newsletter, and Mrs. John Mitchell is the new historian. Mrs. Phillip Underwood volunteered for a new position: battalion field trip chairman.

Mrs. Robert Brumback gave a grateful thank you to all the ladies who helped make the projects for the Christmas bazaare. All of the ladies extended a warm welcome to Mrs. Robert Georgecink.

The officers and ladies of the 2nd Bn., 10th F.A. held their monthly hail and farewell at the King's Pond Lodge on Sept. 21. The battalion staff officers were the hosts for this informal pizza party. During the evening, the group was entertained by the unique piano playing of Mrs. Wilbur Whaite, affectionately known as "Mom". Her rendition of "Hard-Hearted Hannah" was the highlight of the night. Lt. Col. Curtis F. Hoglan, battalion commander, presented her with a scroll making her an honorary "Cannoneer".

Lt. Col. Hoglan also welcomed some new officers and ladies to the battalion: Capt. and Mrs. John Tanzillo, Capt. and Mrs. Ed Loflin, 2ndLt. and Mrs. Ed Bridges and 2ndLt. Hal Sharpe. A silver tray was presented to 2ndLt. and Mrs. Gary Carlson, who were recently married, and silver cups were given to Capt. and Mrs. Robert Balog and 1stLt. and Mrs. Ronald Buechler, who recently welcomed new additions to their families.

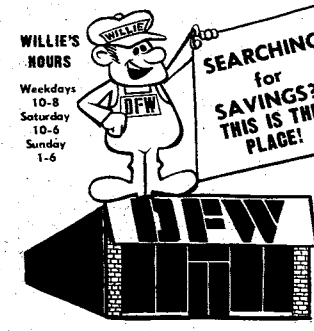
The ladies of the 197th Inf. Bde. attended a luncheon on Sept. 19 at the Supper Club at Fort Benning. Hostesses for the affair were the ladies of the 3d Bn. 7th Inf. (Cottonbalers). Special guests attending were Mrs. William Richardson, Mrs. Charles Thibaud, and Mrs. Hugh Price. The theme of the day was "This is Your Horoscope", as evidenced by the Zodiak Wheel, the Fortune Teller's Booth, the art of Palmistry, and the lovely table decorations depicting the signs of the Zodiak. The ladies were seated according to their sign of the Zodiak, and listened as a few words were said to describe each one.



Mrs. Charles O. Annecke, Jr., wife of the bn. commander of the 3d Bn., 7th Inf., welcomed the special guests and introduced the guest speaker, Dr. Charles Logue, Professor of Humanities at Columbus College. Following Dr. Logue's presentation, door prizes reflecting the Theme were rattled off to the lucky winners.

The ladies of the 3d Bn., 7th Inf. attended a coffee on Sept. 20 in the Normandy Room of the Fort Benning Main Officers' Club. Hostesses for the affair were Mrs. Bruce A. Blake and Mrs. Thomas H. Whitley. Mrs. Charles O. Annecke, Jr., wife of the battalion commander, thanked the ladies for all their hard work on the 197th Inf. Bde. Luncheon on Sept. 19. Warmly welcomed to the battalion were Mrs. William J. Windham and Mrs. Jerry D. Jackson, with a fond farewell going to Mrs. Ronald J. Smitherman. Following the business meeting, Mrs. Richard A. Bennett gave a demonstration on creating a flowered afghan made on a loom. The next coffee for the battalion ladies will be held in the evening on Oct. 18 at 7:30 p.m. at the home of Mrs. Robert B. James on Oaklane Ave., Columbus.

Piano and guitar lessons offered

Have you ever thought yourself to be another Van Cliburn, Erroll Garner or perhaps even a budding Jerry Lee Lewis? The Recreation Services Music Center is offering classes to turn your musical aspirations into a reality.

New instruction in piano will begin Oct. 15. Classes will be given to beginners, intermediate and advanced students. Students will be taught from John W. Shaum series of piano studies, teaching both basic theory as well as basic through advanced keyboard. Instructors will be Miss Patricia Lovegrove and Specialist Andrew Fuller.

In addition, beginning Oct. 15, the Music Center also presents guitar classes. These studies are part of a system devised by General Music Corporation which offers a programmed course initially coordinated by Miss Helen Elliot. In addition, these classes have an instructor, Specialist Robert McGraw, who is already familiar to Fort Benning audiences through his appearances in the July 4th Talent Show.

Both piano and guitar lessons are open to all military and DA civilians and their dependents 8 years old and older. Anyone interested may receive more information by contacting the Music Center (across the street from the Airline Tickets Office) phone 545-1870.

Arts and crafts week

The United States Army has designated Nov. 18-24 as Army Arts and Crafts Week. The Fort Benning Arts and Crafts Centers are celebrating the event with a crafts fair, Nov. 23-24.

Highlight of the fair will be a "Crafts Swap." Participants will be invited to display their wares and trade with others. In addition, all those interested will be able to visit booths where items such as vases and paintings are actually being created. Onlookers will receive valuable hints in their own fields and will be given the opportunity to learn something new.

During the coming weeks, articles will be featured presenting different areas of the Fort Benning Arts and Crafts Program which will interest all those creative personnel in this area. All crafts shops are open to military personnel and DA civilians.

The following crafts and craft shops are available at Fort Benning. Craft shops are open six days each week, with the exception of shops indicated below. All shops are closed on non-holiday Mondays.

'Sing out for America' at Three Arts Theater

The United States Army Field Band's Satin Brass and Soldier's Chorus will perform "Sing Out For America" for the people of Columbus, 7:30 P.M., Friday, November 2, 1973 at Three Arts Theater.

The 18-piece Satin Brass is the newest concept in musical organizations not only for the Army Field Band but for any Army Band. This idea is in keeping with the Field Band's tradition of being the standard bearer for daring musical innovation.

The Satin Brass is teamed with the 25-voice Soldier's Chorus, one of the senior components of the Army Field Band. For 27 years, the chorus has traveled throughout the world lending its special brand of excitement to performance before audiences numbering in the hundreds to the tens of millions.

This special admission-free concert by the official touring musical representative of the Department of the Army is being sponsored by the Association of the United States Army (AUSA) in conjunction with the Chief of Information, Department of the Army.

Coming to the screen

The Battle For The Planet Of The Apes

BATTLE marks the finale of the fantastic "APES" saga. Roddy McDowall again stars as Caesar, leader of the simians, supported by his wife, Lisa (Natalie Trundy), Virgil (Paul Williams), an orangutang philosopher, and MacDonald (Austin Stoker), a black human who was sympathic to the apes' cause prior to devastation by atomic warfare. Caesar journeys to the subterranean ruins of a nearby metropolis to find a video taped interview with his parents who were said to have the gift of prophecy and is anxious to know what they have said of the future. They find and view the tape which predicts apes will destroy the world in another millenium. They then become aware that the molten city is still inhabited by some humans, grotesquely scarred and weakened by radiation. The mutants attack Caesar and his companions in a battle between man and beast.

Book Of Numbers

Noted actor Raymond St. Jacques is the star, producer and director of this comedy-drama about a black numbers operation in a small Arkansas town during the Depression. St. Jacques is a perfect father figure as the shrewd numbers man who'll go to great lengths to protect the operation and the people involved. Singer Freda Payne makes her acting debut as the pretty local society girl who falls in love with a handsome operator of a numbers bank. Violence and raw language of the mob and the life style of the times may prove offensive in this comedy treatment on the popular "numbers game."

SSSSSSS

Designed to thrill, chill, and horrify, SSSSSSS (don't say it- hiss it) is a spine-tingling story of a demented scientist (Strother Martin) who is very ecology minded. He devises a method to turn a man into a King Cobra, feeling that the mind of a man in a snake's body is the only way to survive the violent geologic change of pollution. The complications principally involve Martin's daughter (Heather Menzies) who takes a liking to Martin's assistant, (Dirk Benedict), his latest unknowing subject for experimentation with the King Cobra serum that Martin has developed to achieve the reptillian transformation. There are enough life and deadly snakes on camera to deliciously chill the imagination of the horror buffs; however, the squemish should be on guard.

The King of Marvin Gardens

A late-night radio personality, known as "the philosopher" (played by Jack Nicholson), is summoned to Atlantic City by his brother (Bruce Dern), who is involved with black racketeers there. The latter has a grandiose scheme to retire to an island in the South Seas and wants his brother to come along and thus fulfill a lifelong dream they have shared. He also plans to take his wife and her stepdaughter along, but his plans all come to naught when the former goes berserk as they are packing to leave and shoots her husband.

SIGN UP FOR A WEEKEND IN ATLANTA

Be our guest for a weekend in Atlanta, and we'll show you a lot more than Atlanta.

We'll show you Lake Arrowhead, our new residential resort community just north of Atlanta.

We have 8,000 acres of some of the most beautiful mountain property in Georgia. And on it, we'll soon have an 18 hole golf course, tennis courts, a 500 acre lake, a marina and a lot more.

So sign up now. If you qualify, it might be one of the best weekends you've ever had.

Fire Prevention Week

President Nixon has proclaimed October 7-13 Fire Prevention Week to emphasize the year-round need for fire safety and to stress that nearly all fires are preventable.

Fort Benning Fire Department personnel have planned an educational program designed to make everyone more conscience of actions to take to reduce the hazards of accidfntal fires.

Fire prevention talks and exhibits will be held at all post dependent schools and various other locations on post. Fire Department personnel will demonstrate the use of fire fighting equipment and explain the principles of fire prevention. More than 400 students in the firth grades of McBride, Loyd, White, Dexter and Wilson schools will receive a conducted tour of the Post Fire Prevention Museum, located in Building 1819. All interested individuals are invited to tour the museum any weekday between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m.

Other demonstrations which the public may attend have been scheduled as follows:

On Oct. 9, demonstrations will be held at the 43rd Engineer Battalion Motor Pool, Harmony Church, at 8:45 a.m. and at the Softball Field near Building 83 on Main Post at 1 p.m.

A demonstration will be held at the 608th Ordnance Battalion Motor Pool in Harmony Church Area at 9:30 a.m. and at the softball field adjacent to Building 2459, Main Post on Oct. 10.

Demonstrations will be held at 8 a.m. in the Roads and Grounds Section of the Motor Pool, Main Post, and Patriot Field, Harmony Church at 1 p.m., on Oct. 11. On Oct. 12, demonstrations will be held at the softball field adjacent to Building 9046, Kelley Hill at 9 a.m. and on Kunzie Field, Harmony Church at 1:30 p.m.

Education is just the beginning of solving our problem. Most people know the fundamentsl of fire safety. Usually destructive fires are caused by someone who becomes careless or someone in a hurry who is willing to take a chance," said Clyde L. Cadenhead, Post Fire Department Chief.

Accidental fires cause the loss of billions of dollars ecah year. The loss of life runs into the thousands. An accidental fire strikes one American hoje each minute around the clock. The toll in human sorrow, shattered dreams and plans, pain and fear overshadow the property losses.

The monetary loss at Fort Benning due to destructive fires was $99,176 for fiscal year 1973. Property damage caused to family quarters was more than $8,000. The Post fire Department responded to 328 calls. Of these, 81 were responses to emergencies at family quarters.

Primary causes of accidental fires were ildren playing with matches or fires unattended by responsible persons, fires caused by unattended kitchen stoves, defective electrical appliances, and careless use of combustible cleaning fluids.

Observations by firemen at the scene of these fires bear out Chief Cadenhead's statement that most fires are caused by carelessness or taking unnecessary chances. Just about every fire produces an unhappy property owner. While none of the victims care to be quoted, the refrain runs generally the same. "I didn't think it could happen to me. I keep giving myself mental kicks for all the things I could have done, but it's too late now. This will cost me a bundle."

Attention:

fire prevention starts at home.

People cause most fires and people can prevent most fires. Not "the other fellow," but you . . . and you . . . and you!

Attention to fire prevention starts at home, then carries through on the job or in the classroom, durng leisure-time activities and while traveling, everywhere and at all times. In other words, "Never give fire a chance to start!".

At home, get rid of possible fire hazards and try to change habits which could be dangerous.

Tour the house to weed out and discard everything no longer needed, especially from storage areas where all sorts of "stuff" tends to accumulate. Then check throughout the house and correct all hazards like faulty electrical appliances and worn cords, combustibles stored too near sources of heat, defective cooking equipment, a heating system which hasn't been cleaned or had a safety inspection since last used. Next, make a conscious effort to correct habits like carelessness with smoking materials, smoking in bed, leaving matches and lighters where small children can too-easily get hold of them, or smoking while handling gasoline-powered equipment like the lawn mower.

On the job, help stop fires by being careful with smoking materials and obeying all "No Smoking." signs without fail. Report faulty electrical equipment, follow regulations for safe storage and disposal of combustible materials, cooperate fully with the fire safety program.

Do your share to help stop the fires.

Pre-plan In Case of Nighttime Fire

Between midnight and daylight, when nearly everyone at home is sleeping, is the time most fatal residential fires break out. Many of these fire deaths could be prevented by pre-planning.

Here is a five-point program to help everyone escape safely:

1. Carefully figure out at least two routes to the outside from every room in the house, especially bedrooms. For upper floor escape, allow for fire blocking stairway or hall and instead plan to use porch or garage roofs or approved escape ladders.

2. Be sure exit windows work easily, are low and large enough to climb through, and are not blocked by hard-to-move furniture.

3. Get everyone in the habit of sleeping with bedroom doors closed. This will hold back flame and smoke for those few extra moments vital for escape.

4. Pre-arrange an alarm signal to rouse others if fire is suspected — bang on wall, blow bedside whistle.

5. Pick an outside assembly point where the family will meet to "count noses." Always observe the rule, Once Out, Stay Out. Once everyone is out safely, summon the fire department from a neighbor's telephone or a street alarm box. Never stay inside a burning house to make the call.

NBC Report on 197th

The national news media is showing an intense interest in today's Army as evidenced by recent visits to the 197th Inf. Bde. during the past two weeks.

The first of these visits was by ABC. The second visit, last week, was by NBC. The NBC news team, head by Bob Rogers and Ms Peggy Rhoades, visited the brigade for three days. Their area of interest was unit-of-choice enlistments, reenlistments, AWOL and Article 15 rates, and the educational level of today's soldier.

After compiling the data gathered in the 197th Inf. Bde. and data from other Army installations, NBC will telecast its program on Nov. 4 on the "NBC Report."

The numbers game

Did you know that the last digit of a military person's social security number determines where he and his family receives outpatient medical treatment?

There are some changes in the making. Some are improvements found to be necessary due to problems in the system and some will come when the new hospital addition is completed.

But presently the system works as follows. If the retired sponsor's social security number ends with 3, 4, or 0, then the entire family's treatment site is Family Practice Clinic No. 2, located on the first floor of Martin Army Hospital. Appointments are made by calling 544-2091.

All retired personnel with social security numbers ending in numbers other than 3, 4, or 0, and their families are treated at the Outpatient Clinic in the Hospital Annex, Building 396, for treatment. Appointments for this group are made by calling 544-1064.

Whatja wanta Know? ask the BAYONET

CALL 545-4792

DEAR BAYONET,

Why doesn't the Main Post Commissary stay open until 8 or 9 p.m. after the mid-month and end-of-month pay days? SHOPPER

DEAR SHOPPER,

We're glad you asked that question. The Company Grade Officers Council also made the same recommendation during its August meeting. It is certainly desirable to adjust hours to the needs of the majority of shoppers, however, new schedules cannot be made every month to coincide with pay days. This would require different schedules every month for employes and make it almost impossible to give them a set work schedule. Commissary employes are scheduled by day of the week, for two complete pay periods by Union agreement. It would not be feasible to adjust these every month to coincide with pay days.

Post Headquarters has conducted a survey to determine if any objections of the current hours is warranted. The survey recorded hourly customer transactions and dollar sales plus the desires of shoppers.

DEAR BAYONET . . .

Could you give me some information on the 21-gun salute? I would like to know some of the history behind it. RWG

DEAR RWG,

The firing of gun salutes dates back to the early days of the British Navy. At the time guns could not be loaded quickly so the act of firing one in a salute indicated that the saluter had disarmed himself in deference to the person being saluted. The larger the number of guns which were fired, the greater was the degree of disarmament. Since 21 guns was the number found on one side of the larger ships of the line", firing all of them became the highest mark of respect. Fewer guns are fired in salutes to people of lesser importance but only odd numbers are used, reflecting an old seagoing superstition against even numbers. This form of saluting was first recognized by the United States in 1875. Heads of state are accorded the highest salute—21.

DEAR BAYONET,

Can I pay more than market value for a home I'd like to buy with a GI loan from the Veterans Administration? VET

DEAR VET

Yes, provided you pay the difference in cash between the VA appraisal and the price of the home. The agency cannot approve a loan which exceeds the reasonable value of the home.

533rd goes to Eglin

During the past months the 533rd Transportation Company of the 36th Engineer Group (Combat) has been completing missions in many parts of the southeast. They also participated in Operation Reforger IV in Germany.

One trip was a Ranger support mission in Eglin Air Force Base, Eglin, Fla. The primary mission of the company was to provide transportation for the Rangers during their 21-day training cycle. The 533rd provided nearly 100 per cent of the Ranger transportation.

Second Lieutenant Charles Stan, officer in charge, and Sergeant Thomas Gee, the noncommissioned officer in charge and 18 men were involved.

Private First Class Richard Johnson, of the 533rd, stated "I enjoyed driving down in Eglin, because driving was the reason I came into the Army."

"Doing my job was the reason I liked it," said Private First Class Ronald Knight, "there are a lot of people in the Army that never get a chance to do the job that they were trained to do, but assignments like this really give a driver plenty of practical exercise."

Navy man George Hartline has been "strung up" for three months in traction. He credits the PX services as excellent.

Mobile PX

Mobile cart serves patients

Have you ever ever been confined to a hospital bed and run out of cigarettes or something to read — or just wanted a snack? It's frustrating.

The patients at Martin Army Hospital don't have this problem because the hospital post exchange has a mobile cart. Clyde Boswell visits all of the wards on Monday and Friday with his carefully selected wares.

Navy man George Hartline from Glenwood Springs, Colo. has been "strung up" in traction for more than three months since being injured in a motorcycle accident.

"The PX services are excellent. If I want something that he doesn't have on the cart, the PX employe will go downstairs and get it for me. I have been able to procure anything I need," he explained.

Captain Patrick Ellis was happy about the variety available — toothpaste, shaving cream, books, cigarettes, and many snack items. Ellis, bedridden since Aug. 31, said, "It is a fine idea. And if I do discover I need something in between his visits, the Red Cross Volunteers will go to the PX for me. However, I prefer making my personal selections from the cart. It is very considerate of the PX to have such an arrangement."

Hamburger Prices Increase

Hamburger prices at Fort Benning Post Exchange food outlets have been increased due to high food costs. The large hamburger has been increased to 45 cents, and the cheeseburger now costs 55 cents.

Mr. Robert D. Henry, Food Supervisor for the Fort Benning Post Exchange, said the prices here are not the only ones to increase. "Post Exchanges all over the world have been forced to increase their hamburger prices," explained Henry.

"The price of hamburger meat has increased locally by a large percentage," he added, "and all other ingredients used in the hamburger have also increased in price over recent months."

According to Major General C. W. Hospelhorn, Army and Air Force Exchange Service commander, price increases for hamburgers are necessary to offset the many increasing expenses common throughout the food industry today.

The general stated that the new prices were reasonable when compared to those implemented by most national food chains which have taken similar measures.

"The skyrocketing wholesale beef costs and other products have forced AAFES to take this step," Gen. Hospelhorn explained. "If we did not do so, the Exchange Service would suffer an earnings loss of nearly $2 million."

"We do not expect a reduction in the cost of beef, but if a reduction comes, Exchange prices will be reduced accordingly. Our customers can be assured of that," Henry added.

Benning WAC doing home-town-recruiting

Specialist Five Lavone Johnson of the Kelley Hill Dental Clinic recently returned from a recruiting trip to Louisiana, sponsored by the 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor, 197th Infantry Brigade, where she was responsible for enlisting 38 men and women for Fort Benning and the brigade.

The trip was in conjunction with unit-of-choice recruiting in which Fort Benning units help recruiters throughout the Southeast.

Born in Monroe, La. and educated in Little Rock, Ark., Specialist Johnson joined the Army in March, 1971 and completed training at Fort Sam Houston.

She was also a member of the former Third U. S. Army Soldier's Show and has traveled to Fort Bragg, Fort Jackson, Fort McPherson, the Republican National Convention in Miami and Alcorn University in Mississippi.

Childs Guest at 197th

John W. Childs, president of the Columbus NAACP and a Social Service Representative at Martin Army Hospital, was a special guest to a recent 197th Infantry Brigade race relations seminar.

Soldiers from all ranks and units in the brigade attended the seminar, which was sponsored by the 1st Battalion, (Mech), 58th Infantry (Patriots), 197th Inf. Bde. This quarterly seminar is one part of the brigade's Race Relations and Equal Opportunity program.

Childs spoke to the soldiers about the philosophy of his organization and discussed some of the changes it has been instrumental in creating.

Cash Payments End

October 10 is the deadline for some 2,000 soldiers to fill out an Election of Pay Option Form (DA 3685). Effective with the last payment of October and the mid-month payment for November, all soldiers at Fort Benning will be paid by check — no exceptions.

Checks will automatically go to the individual's unit unless a new pay option if filed. The best option is generally the check-to-bank method. The check can be sent to a local or hometown bank. If this option is chosen, the soldier is assured that his pay will be deposited in the bank and available to him even if he is on leave, TDY or in transit on a permanent change of station.

The second best option is the check-to-address method. The check can be sent to an off-post address or even a relative. This type of check will also be issued when a soldier is on leave. However, the check would not be readily available unless someone deposited it for him.

Because the soldier must actually pick the check up from his unit, and has only five days to do so before it is returned to Finance, the check-to-unit is the least attractive method.

PFC Predicto PICKS!

The mere likes of a woman — the opposite sex — is going to challenge PFC Predicto this week in the first Battle of the sexes to be conducted in a prognostication war.

PFC Predicto was so busy anticipating the big battle, that he let three members of the Directorate of Plans and Training — Major William Schuler, Sergeant Ken Walder and Captain Alfred Sanders — beat him out last week.

This week the combat Arms Training Board challenges Predicto, one member is Mrs. Merriam Kitchen who claims along with her football predicting to have seen flying saucers, have been on a field goal unit for a semi pro baseball team and to be an excellent back seat driver. Good Luck Merriam and Good Luck CATB. You too can try to out do the great predicto by dialing 545-4622/7841.

AAU
Judo Club tops meet at Decatur

The Fort Benning Judo Club outclassed 27 other Southeast clubs to win 13 awards in the Southeastern Open Amateur Athletic Union Judo Championships held at Decatur, Ga. Sept. 29.

Lieutenant Colonel Tom Keaton, the Fort Benning head coach pointed out that the club only had 24 entries in the tournament and that the nine who failed to make the finals in most cases were eliminated by a Fort Benning teammate.

Mark Keaton recovered from a first round loss by a controversial decision and proceeded to work his way through the rest of the 139-pound men's division. While Keaton was securing first place in the morning competition, David Jones worked his way into the finals of the 165-pound men's class and came off with a third place award.

In the afternoon Junior competition, Fort Benning placed in every division in which it entered. Mark Keaton became a double winner, taking second place in the 15-16 year old lightweight division, losing only to Robert Winston of the Black Belt School of Judo in Atlanta.

Ronnie Wesley scored first in 13-14 lightweight division while Debbie and Crystol Chewning took first places in the middleweight and lightweight girl's divisions respectively.

Other second places went to Danny Jones in 13-14 heavyweight, Tessie Pierce in the girl's middleweight and Barbara Jones in the girl's lightweight. In third places were Dan Mansman in the 15-16 heavyweight, David Nelson 11-12 lightweight, William Fox 9-10 heavyweight and Denise Caballero in the girl's lightweight division.

The club has started a new Junior beginners class and interested dependents may register on Monday or Wednesday night at building 2592 at 6 p.m. Soldiers and dependents interested in adult classes may register any Monday or Wednesday at the same time.

Football tickets

The Post Recreational Service Offices has general admission tickets for the Tuskegee-Morehouse football game to be held at the Columbus Memorial Stadium at 8 p.m., Oct. 12.

Tickets may be purchased for $3 each at the Special Services Reservation and Ticket Office in Building 396.

For additional information contact Mrs. Sanders, 545-1720 or 545-7414.

Sutton is champ

Lois Sutton has fired a three-round total of 254 to win the Fort Benning Country Club Ladies Golf Championship for the fourth time.

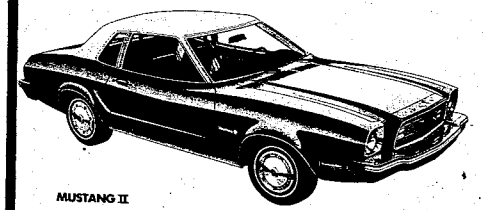
She had previous wins in 1967, 1968 and 1971. Beverly Mullins won second place honors.

Sequel Wood, a five-time winner of the championship, scored 84 in the first round to take medalist honors.

Draggin around

The site — Phenix Dragway, the time — September 25, the occasion — ET Drag Race, the winner — Sandra Parker.

Among those she defeated were Sergeant First Class John Stringer, Specialist Five Norm Jackson, Sergeant Duke Burwell and SFC Troy Richardson.



There were six bracket runs. Trophy winners were Max Thomas, Sam Knox, Ron Phagen and Sandra Parker. Jerry Hilliard had two bracket wins. Sandra put Ron Phagen down; Jerry eliminated Sam Knox first and then came back to eliminate Max Thomas. That gave him two chances to defeat Sandra, but he couldn't do it. On the first run, Jerry Hilliard red-lighted (jumped the gun too fast) and on the second try, Sandra just plain outdrove him.

The next races at Phenix Dragway will be tomorrow, October 6 and Tuesday, October 9.

ROD AND GUN CLUB Notes

BY BILL KLOEB

The newly elected Rod and Gun Club Board of Governors held the September meeting at the club Sept. 27.

The meeting was chaired by Colonel Jack G. Whitted, deputy director of Company Operations. Colonel Whitted replaced Brigadier General David E. Grange as the board president. General Grange is leaving the post for assignment to the 4th Infantry Division at Fort Carson, Colorado.

Board members were assigned committee positions based on their interest in activities of the club.

Captain Milo Abercrombie, (545-3793) representative for Medical Activities, has been designated board vice chairman. He is also committee chairman for archery activities.

Captain Donald F. McCullough, (545-6403) 36th Engineer Group, has been designated chairman of the Facilities Committee.

Captain Thaddeus J. Davis (545-5657) is chairman of the Skeet and Trap Committee.

Master Sergeant Julian Guzman, (545-2071) The School Brigade, will chair the Membership and Entertainment Committee.

Sergeant Major Albert M. Kane, The School Brigade, (545-4913) is chairman of the Fishing Committee.

Sergeant First Class Jimmie A. Olmstead, Headquarters and Headquarters, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry (544-2878), is in charge of the House Committee.

Norman J. McCullough, retired (545-2745), heads the Finance Committee.

Bill Kloeb (545-4622) is chairman of the Publicity Committee. Norman McCullough or Kloeb are the board members military retired people should contact when they have information they want the board to consider.

Michael E. Brickner, Directoriate of Industrial Operations (545-4803) heads the Hunting Committee. He is also the Department of Defense Civilian workers representative on the board.

Be an active member

I've listed these names, organizations and telephone numbers to provide members with a ready reference of people to contact when there are suggestions and gripes. There is someone to represent all of the major populations on post. The board members were elected because they are interested in activities of the Rod and Gun Club. They represent the membership but they can't do too good a job if they have no ideas as to the desires of the membership. I'm sure they will welcome any suggestions or handle any gripes. Contact them. Give them your suggestions or gripes. Let them know if you are available to help out in club activities. It's your club. Have something to say about how it's operated. Help operate it.

Coming events

The new board had a large number of items on the agenda. Those of primary interest to club members were discussions of plans for the move of the club to the old Noncommissioned Officers Club at Victory Lodge, the club deer hunting contest and the operation of ranges for zeroing hunting weapons.

According to Tom McCullough, custodian, the move will be started about the middle of this month. He hopes the club can be operational at the new location by November 1. The present location will be operational as long as possible during the move.

Archery hunters will be happy to know that any deer they bag during the special archery season can be entered in the club Big Deer Contest. The club will award shotguns to members who register the heaviest deer and deer with the most antler points. Deer must be taken on the reservation and brought to the club for weighing and registration. You can get all the details out at the club.

The club will operate the Brinson Range Compexes on Jamestown Road on October 27 and 28 to provide a range for zeroing or sighting-in weapons.

The ranges will be operated for the convenience of all hunters each day from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m. Bring your rifle or shotgun out and shoot it enough to know what it will do. Knowing your weapon will increase your chances of killing a deer if you see one.

There's no reason why city life should frustrate you one more day.

Your place in the Florida sun is waiting for you in Port Charlotte, where the living is relaxed.

Here "fishin' stories" come true.

Sailing is a year-round recreation.

One of 70 home styles available.

Located on Charlotte Harbor, residents can boat and fish on the Gulf of Mexico.

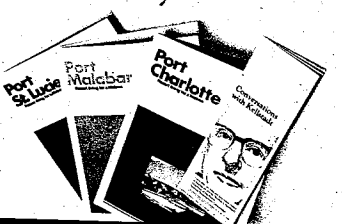
One of Port Charlotte's two championship 18-hole golf courses.

General Development communities are near all the fun in Florida, including new Disney World.

Too often, the city's problems and pressures seem to close in on you from all sides. Coping with them can leave your body tense and your spirit troubled.

No wonder you're dreaming about leaving them behind and heading for a place like the totally planned community of Port Charlotte, Florida.

When you own a homesite in Port Charlotte, living the good life is easy. You're surrounded by blue skies, clean waters and lush gardens and trees everywhere. And our master planners are making sure that this community stays the way you want it—clean, beautiful, unspoiled.



Here, you can settle back and really enjoy the good things in life. Golf on championship courses. Boating and fishing on the Gulf of Mexico. Swimming. Tennis. And over 100 fascinating recreational activities and courses at the million-dollar Port Charlotte Cultural Center.

Port Charlotte's established neighborhoods and 25,000 nice neighbors are already waiting for you. So are a variety of homesites and homes at affordable prices. Not to mention complete shopping centers, schools, houses of worship, and lots more. So, what are you waiting for?

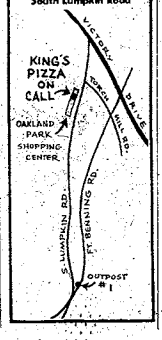
Reserve Center to Celebrate Navy Birthday

The Naval Reserve Center in Columbus will celebrate the Navy's 198th anniversary tomorrow by participating in a cleanup project at the Boy Scout Camp in Columbus.

They will also observe the Navy Sabbath Sunday. All men at Fort Benning are asked to wear their uniforms to church services in memory of the returned Prisoners Of War and Missing In Action. In 1966, the Naval Reserve Association designated the second Sunday of each October as the Navy Sabbath to recognize all men in uniform.



The Navy was formed when Congress appropriated funds for two ships some 198 years ago. It has grown to about 600-700 ships in present times, according to Lieutenant Paul H. Schneider, commanding officer for the Naval Reserve Center in Columbus.

Polaroid's new SX-70.

Just touch the electric button and whoosh!
A color picture is ejected and develops before your eyes.

Here is your picture, minutes later, fully developed.

Forget everything you've ever known about photography.

The SX-70 Land camera is here.

Just frame, focus and touch the red electric button. Your picture emerges outside the camera, hard and dry. There is nothing to peel, nothing to throw away.

Bayonet

A service to the soldier in its 32nd year

The BAYONET is now in its 32d year of publication. It ranks as one of the best military newspapers in the country by virtue of the number of awards it has received from higher headquarters.

This is American Newspaper Week and we are all reminded of the role of newspapers in our lives. The soldier looks at the BAYONET as a source of information, and the commanders look at it as an important link in the command information chain.

To properly serve its public, the military newspaper must do many of the same things done by its civilian counterpart. It must give due recognition to individual recognition and unit accomplishments. It also addressed civilian employees and dependents. It should present all sides of the issues that are controversial in the mind of the soldier and provide a forum for reader's comments and replies.

Recently, the staff carried a survey to its military readers, find out whether the newspaper is read, and also to get an idea of what kind of information the solider looks for in it. Dependents and civilian employees are also served by the BAYONET and will be selected for future surveys.

It was learned that most post soldiers (77%) read the BAYONET. Of those who do not read the BAYONET regularly, the most common reason is that they do not receive it.

The most popular features, according to the respondents, has been the Sports Section and information on "What's Happening for Entertainment On and Off Post."

The least popular seemed to be "Femline," but no dependents were included in the survey.

Over 300 randomly selected soldiers filled out the questionnaries.

"Sound Off" was determined to be a very popular feature, but many felt the questions asked were often not timely or interesting.

The survey is a good source of feedback to the many writers from all post units who contribute to the post newspaper. Another source is the letters to the editor which are received.

Readers are encouraged to write to the BAYONET (Room 602, Infantry Hall) with their comments on present articles or suggestions for improvement.

Awards Received

The BAYONET received a Department of the Army Award at the end of 1972 as "the most improved Army newspaper." And efforts are continually being made to make it even better.

In 1973, the paper has received its eighth and ninth "Copy Desk Award" from TRADOC Headquarters. The most recent award was received last month for a three part series written by Chaplain Thomas Fraker, edited by PVT Ileane Katzker and illustrated by SSG Bill Dolan.

The paper serves the entire post and also solicits information, articles and photos from everyone on post.

The last question on the survey asked each person what he (she) would to see in a post newspaper.

Here are a few sample answers:

"A Dating column to help a guy or a WAC find a date."

"What can be done as far as education is concerned. . not enough information is given on it."

"Perhaps interview a POW."

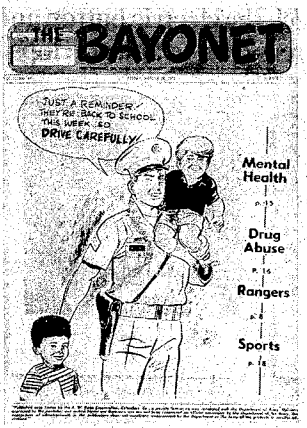
"A chess column."

"More articles that concern lower ranking individuals and not so much about officers and E-5 and above."

"More information pertaining to units at Fort Benning other than infantry. Believe it or not, there is another world besides that of a 'gravel agitator.'"

"Comics."

"I don't care that much because I see all of the Army I care to see in the daytime."



"A more diversified sports presentation. Have equal space from all major units on post."

"Girls."

"Promotion information, cut-off scores, etc."

The BAYONET says thanks and gives a friendly salute to all those who took the time to fill out the survey.

And to anyone else, write us a short note to let us know your feelings on the subject. We'll do all we can to get you as a regular reader.

Army helps your children

Hearing, vision and dental tests are being given to children in DeKalb County, Atlanta, by Army medical people to assist the schools in finding those who have trouble learning because of physical problems. (Photo By George Korda)

Medical personnel from Army Posts scattered throughout the county are at work during October helping to give physical exams to school children in Dekalb County, Georgia.

Many school children believed to be slow learners actually are not, but instead are suffering from some form of physical disability. Some who can't read or understand what the teacher is saying simply can not see or hear as well as other children. This problem is compounded when the child's family cannot afford physical exams for their children.

Captain Ray Brownlee of the Atlanta Recruiting Main Station conceived the idea of the Army assisting in examining underprivilaged children. "Last year the schools and health department were only able to examine about 700 children. We'll be able to examine 5,000 in just the month of October."

He revealed that the idea had come to him during a discussion with his wife. "We were talking about how some kids don't learn as fast as others. We decided some of them didn't learn because they had physical problems. Then I decided to see what I could do to help."

He got on the phone and soon had commitments for equipment and medical personnel from five Army posts — Forts Benning, Campbell, Rucker, McClellan, and Carson. Fort Benning sent three medics and the Fort Benning Station of Choice van. "The van is an important part of this project," said Captain Brownlee. "It will transport equipment and medics from school to school. Hearing tests will also be conducted in it."

The one thing I like most about the Army is meeting a lot of different people. I like to talk to people who are from different states and who have been to other countries and their experiences in different situations.

Sgt. Dave Gulbergh
C Co. 75th Rangers, 197th

What I most like about the Army is the opportunity for advancement. Plus you've got a lot of security and you get a lot of benefits. It is better in a civilian community in many ways but as long as you do your job right in the Army you get these benefits. The Army is really fantastic but it does have its fauls just as a big civilian corporation would.

PFC Dave Verbenec
Co C Hdq. Cmd.

One of the things I do not like about the Army is the ceremonies held in front of Infantry Hall. It seems to me that the time put in by various honor guards and bands could be spent promoting the Army image throughout the country. Also, when attendance at these ceremonies is mandatory, a lot of work time is wasted. These ceremonies should be eliminated.

What do you like or dislike most about the Army?

Spc4 Walter Hunter
608th Ordnance

The one thing that I most dislike about the Army is the finance system. I'm married with children and they've messed up my pay and now they're taking money out of my pay. Finance has been doing that for several months.

Pvt. Linda Young
Dental Clinic 2

Being married you get a lot of benefits such as quarters allowance, medical care and others. I'm working inthe field I want to make a career of plus I can get a college education at the same time. I dislike the Army pay system. I've made quite a few trips to finance about my pay.

Dramatizers

Background on a play

People often ask, "Why did you choose that play and how are you going to put it on?"

The answer the first question, why Rashomon, there are three good reasons. First, the story content is excellent. Not only was it a stage success when it opened in the early 50s on Boradway, but it went on to become a successful motion picture and won the Cannes Film Festival Award.

The story, which tells of four different accounts of the same event, creates visions and conclusions in the minds of the audience. In short, it's a suspense filled story that keeps one guessing all along.

The second reason concerns the number of people in the cast. With people going and coming as often as they do on a military post, it is difficult to mass a large troupe for the plays. Quality, not quantity is what we're got in the cast of Rashomon.

The third answer concerning, "why Rashomon" is in the cultural background it offers. The setting is in ancient Japan and has posed many ideas to our set designer. Together with the director, reference materials, and a "little help from our friends" in the Japanese community, our show is taking on the look of the far East.

The answer to "how" is simple. With the efforts of all the dramatizers and interested people who'd like to join us. We not only act, sew skirts, fix lights, paint props, type envelopes, hammer nails, and make phone calls, but we also keep the Pizza On Call in business.

Rashomon will be presented free to the public Nov. 15-17 and 23-24. Performances will be 8 p.m. at the Playhouse on Ingersol St. (behind the Infantry Museum). Anyone wishing information may call 545-5057 or 2922.

Save-A-Toy

AUSA takes part in project for needy

The Columbus-Phenix City-Fort Benning Chaper of AUSA again is taking part in Project Save-A-Toy this year, along with Army Community Service, the Mortar Committee, the 4th Student Battalion, Martin Army Hospital, the Post Confinement Facility, and the USAIC Chaplain Division.

These organizations collect and repair toys and gather clothing and provide food to needy families selected by Army Community Service. According to Captain Donald F. Gilbert Jr., Army Community Service Chief, Project Save-A-Toy gave 425 Fort Benning children a merrier Christmas last year.

"About 3,000 toys were given to 125 Fort Benning families," Capt. Gilbert said, "and 2,100 toys were donated to the Valley Rescue Mission and Mercy mission to be given to needy families in the Columbus-Phenix City area."

Project Save-A-Toy began 18 years ago, when one sergeant in the Mortar Committee began repairing toys for one needy family, and has continued to grow through the years. Now toys are gathered from all over post, repaired, and distributed to both families and orphanages.

"AUSA has helped us out for the past several years," Capt. Gilbert added, "and without their assistance it would be difficult to buy all the supplies we need to repair the toys. We want to thank AUSA for all their help."

"Now is the time of year when people should start turning in old toys so we can repair them and put them to use on Christmas Day," he closed.

Ethnic groups served by AAFES

In the continuing effort to provide for the specific needs of ethnic group patrons, the Fort Benning Exchange Service is revising its store stock assortments. Toiletry items that prove to be slow sellers are being dropped. Items with good track records so far as sales are concerned are being expanded.

In all Post Exchanges, eight black-oriented products are considered to be "must items" — merchandise that should be available at all times. These include two popular brands of hair conditioners, and "easy comb" product, a spray sheen, lift combs, folding combs with metal teeth, a depilatory shave powder and an after shave cream.

In the six state areas served by the Southeast Exchange Region, Montgomery, Alabama, black customers can find twenty-six different hair care items from seven popular brands in all main stores and most troop stores. Also available are thirty-one facial cosmetic items and three depilatories. In addition, the stores have a range of black and Spanish-oriented greeting cards. Twelve popular magazines for black are available, as are eight Spanish language publications.

About ninety popular records and pre-recorded soul music tapes are available at all times, along with more than forty Spanish titled recorded music tapes. Most of the record titles are selected from national hit charts and are changed as the charts change.

Many main exchanges now have mod clothing shops where style change frequently. Young customers now can find high-fashioned slacks, coordinates, wide-brim hats, colorful ultra-mod shirts and accessories. The Fort Benning Exchange Mod Shop is located in Building 1227 opposite the Main Commissary and carries a complete line of latest styles and fashions for ladies and men.

Local AUSA Members depart for Washington

More than 50 members of the local AUSA are departing this weekend for the annual AUSA meeting scheduled for Oct. 15-18 in Washington, D.C.

The chapter is sponsoring the trip, to include hotel accommodations for 30 Fort Benning soldiers.

Captain Tom Curtin, 3d Battalion 7th Infantry attended as a delegate last year and said of the experience, "I learned that AUSA is not a closed military club, but a group of concerned individuals with a genuine interest in our nation's security. I hope the young soldiers' interest in AUSA will continue both in the remainder of their active duty tours and long into their civilian careers."

Specialist Four Daisy Jackson, Headquarters Command, attended and said, "Meeting people actually was the most worthwhile part. There were a lot of people you would like to meet, but never before had the opportunity."

Delegates this year have been chosen from all major units on post and include individuals of all ranks, from PV2 to Lt. Col.

Those attending will have a chance to meet both the secretary of the Army, Howard "Bo" Callaway, and the Chief of Staff of the Army, Gen. Creighton W. Abrams.

Dr. Henry Kissinger will be in attendance on Oct. 18 and will receive the AUSA's highest award for distinction, the George Catlett Marshall medal.

With the Combined Federal Campaign in its third week, Fort Benning has reached 43 per cent of the post goal of $150,000.

More than 4,000 people have contributed an average of $15 to the campaign.

According to post project officer, James F. Schoonover, the average contribution is the same as last year at this time but the number of contributors is slightly down.

"Even though the total number of contributors is down, we should have no problem in obtaining the post goal," Schoonover said.

Some 44 local, national and international health and service agencies finance their projects through contributions made during the drive.

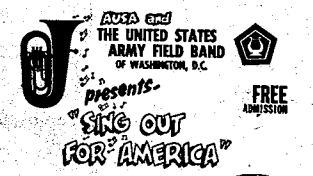
The six-week campaign is organized so that each office and major unit has a "keyman" who will accept contributions and prepare receipts for the donor's tax records.

Colonel Kendrick Barlow Jr., assistant post commander s the chairman of the campaign Warranty Officer Chester Owens is the assistant post project officer and Peggy Duke is the secretary of the Community Activities Associaton.

According to Schoonover, more than $190,000 was collected from last year's campaign. He hopes this year's campaign will be as successful.

Benning Golfers will play in Pro-Am

Six Fort Benning golfers won the opportunity to play in the first annual Chattahoochee Council Boy Scout Pro-Am Golf Tournament to be held at Calloway Garden's on Veteran's Day, Oct. 22.



The winners were divided into two teams to represent Fort Benning in the tourney. The first team will be Fred Wadworth, Steven E. Wadell and Kenneth Canup with the alternate Timothy Debey. The second team will be Allann Beasley, James Tucker and William Johnson, with the alternate Lafayett Sale.

The participants were low scorers in the USAIC postwide handicap golf tourney held at the Lakeside Officers Club Oct. 6-7.

Army Times Goofs

The Oct. 17 issue of Army Times reported Major General Eugene Forrester was being assigned to Fort Benning. Maj. Gen. Forrester's new assignment should have read Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind.

The Bayonet is happy to clarify this report.

The U.S. Army Field Band's 18-piece Satin Brass will perform in the Three Arts Theatre, 1020 Talbotton Road, at 7:30 p.m. on Nov. 2, 1973. The show will also include the Soldiers' Chorus and the original Field Band.

Since 1946 the Field Band has performed throughout the world. The Satin Brass, created out of 13 brass and five rhythm instruments by the band's commanding officer and conductor, Lieutenant Colonel Hal J. Gibson, extends the limits of conventional brass-playing concepts so that they become almost a complete orchestra.

Free tickets for "Sing Out For America," the U.S. Army Field Band concert, may be obtained from the Information Office, Room 604, Infantry Hall; the Recreation Service Office at Fort Benning; and from the Columbus and Phenix City Chambers of Commerce.

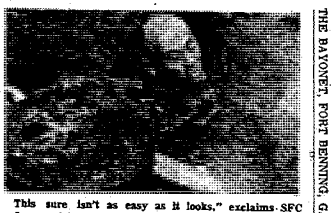
Tickets may also be obtained by sending the attached coupon with a self-addressed, stamped evenlope to AUSA, P.O. Box 2036, Fort Benning, Ga. 31905.

36th Adventure Training

In today's Modern Volunteer Army, Adventure Training is one of the most popular ways of breaking the everyday work routine. The leaders of HHC, 36th Engineer Group (Combat) know this, and they see that their troops get to go on frequent Adventure Training exercises.

Several weeks ago, the men of HHC went to Victory Pond to get a small taste of what Ranger Training is really like.

The first event the men participated in was the Land Navigation Course beside Victory Pond. The men were divided into two-man groups, given a compass, protractor, a map, a set of instructions, and then set on their journey.



The instructions consisted of the very minimum amount of information required to get to a specific location, such as an azimuth, and-or a certain number of steps from a given location.

The starting area was clear and quiet for approximately 90 minutes and then sounds of commotion broke the silence as the men began to find their way back.

An hour later they were off to the other side of Victory Pond to the Ranger Demonstration Area.

The men were disappointed to find out that they could not ride the "Slide-for-Life," but they were able to cross on the "Log-walk."

The log-walk stood approximately 45 feet above 10 feet of water, and once you climbed up the first pole and walked across the log, there was only one way down.

This sure isn't as easy as it looks," exclaims SFC James Olive as he enters the water from the log walk. SFC Olive is a member of HHC, 36th and he participated in some adventure training at Victory Pond at the Ranger Training site. SFC Olive said, "I have been shot at in combat, but I was never as scared as when I got up on that Log Walk and looked down. But it feels good to conquer fear." (Photo By: Gary Cathcart)

Engineers Dig Playground

A task force from Company C, 4rd Engineer Battalion, 36th Engineer Group is working on a playground project for the McGinnis School for retarded children in Montgomery, Ala.

Soldiers of Company C began grading and filling the new playground area for the McGinnis School with the use of heavy equipment.

Construction equipment used on the site was also furnished by the 42rd Engineer Battalion.

Sergeant James C. Rawls said, "The 20 men under Lieutenant Wayne Albert enjoy a chance to get out on the job and put their skills to better use. Projects of this type not only benefit the men by providing excellent training, but also the civilian community."

USAIS KICKOFF

The ladies of Combat Developments ushered in the football season at the Sept. 19 coffee. Participants were greeted by players 34- Irm Binkewitz, 52- Joe Hughes, and 21- Noreen Hughes. The team served pre-game refreshments consisting of cheese straws, polish pineapple-oatmeal cake and date nut bread. The center attraction was a football field cake.

Announcements and business were half-time activity following a rousting Dolphin football record.

The hostesses for the Oct. coffee will be Mrs. Keith Bissell and Mrs. Wade Whitley.

DDTD COFFEE

The ladies of DDTD held their Oct. coffee at the home of Mrs. Michael H. Evernham, Dial Street, Ft. Benning. The co-hostess was Mrs. William G. Carter.

Mrs. James E. Armstrong conducted a short business meeting at which time workshops were set up for the bazaar projects. Also sign-up sheets were passed around for bazaar workers and thrift shop volunteers.

Newcomers attending the coffee were Mrs. Michael H. McCormick, Mrs. Phillip L. Brown, and Mrs. Daniel M. Shamski.

The group is tentatively planning a brunch or luncheon for their Nov. meeting.

TSB EVENTS

The ladies of Headquarters, TSB, met for their monthly coffee Sept. 19, at the home of Mrs. William A. Duncan Jr., Miller Loop, Ft. Benning. A special project was the donation of food items for the ACS Food Locker. Mrs. Allen M. Goodson expressed her sincere appreciation to the group for their many hours of work expended in completing TSB's Christmas bazaar project. A special welcome was extended to the ladies of the Allied Student Training Division: Mrs. Frederic L. Shean, Mrs. Gary R. Watson, and Mrs. Jerry W. Ward. Mrs. Michael J. Brennan and Mrs. James E. Fusha were also extended a warm welcome.

On Oct. 1, the Columbus home of Mrs. Jake Collins was the scene of a cadre coffee for the 12th and 13th (IOAC Companies, 1st Bn., TSB. These monthly meetings give the IOAC class commanders' wives a chance to exchange ideas with the company commanders' wives as well as the wives of the battalion CO and XO.

One topic of discussion, of interest to all was the donation of $228 by the IOAC 5-73 to the Association for the Prevention of Crib Death. The money was raised by the wives with a bazaar and "Silent Auction", held Aug. 7.

The ladies of the 5th Stu. Bn., TSB, formerly the 8th Stu. Bn. and the 5th OC Bn., met at the home of Mrs. Robert Beard for a coffee on Sept. 20. The Christmas bazaar items and plans for the School Brigade luncheon were discussed.

197th ACTIVITIES

Instead of a coffee, the ladies of the 1st Bn (M), 58th Inf. 197th Inf. Bde., held their monthly meeting, as a luncheon, at the picturesque Goetchius House Restaurant. The river front scene was hosted by Mrs. CarlGustke and Mrs. Howard Yellen. A lovely fall flower arrangement graced the meal of Country Captain Chicken.

Mrs. Robert Orkand introduced Mrs. Elva Halstead, mother-in-law of Mrs. Gary Halstead. When questioned on how she enjoyed her week visit at Ft. Benning, Mrs. Halstead replied, "It has all been very lovely."

Two new members were welcomed into the battalion, Mrs. Russ Zink and Mrs. Peter Trzop.

During a short business meeting, Mrs. Orkand announced that Mrs. Holstead has been appointed as the new battalion hospitality officers, and Mrs. Jesse L. Johnson Jr., as the new battalion secretary and the publicity chairman.

The date of the Oct. coffee will be announced at a later time.

The ladies of the 2nd Bn., 10th F.A. met for a "dessert coffee" on Sept. 25 in the home of Mrs. Michael Bellino on Munson Drive in Columbus. Mrs. Roger Duckworth was the co-hostess.

Mrs. Curtis Hoglan, wife of the battalion commander, welcomed several new ladies to the group: Mrs. Ed Loffin, Mrs. John Tangillo, Mrs. Jack Kennedy, and Mrs. Gary Carlson. At the business meeting, Mrs. Richard Noack volunteered to instruct anyone interested in the art of making pine cone wreaths. The various items which the battalion ladies had completed for the OWC Christmas bazaar were passed around. The ladies were asked to save bottles, cans and newspapers for the next coffee, and a prize would be given to the person who brought in the greatest number of recyclable items.

Major and M. Richard Noack, the battalion executive officer and his wife, entertained the officers and ladies of the battalion at their home on Sept. 26 and 27. The guests enjoyed sampling a wide variety of wines, cheeses, and breads, along with many other gourmet delicacies.

of the 3d Bn., 7th Inf. attended a Hais and Farewell on Sept. 28 at the USAC Recreation Area, Ft. Benning. Spoosors of the affair were the members of Co. B, commanded by Capt. Paul Tiberi. Everyone came dressed in their "country garb" and barbecued their choice of meat over the oven grill. Lt. Col. Charles O. Arnecke, Jr., Bn. Commander, welcomed Maj. and Mrs. William Windham, Capt. and Mrs. Jerry Jackson and Lt. Nicholas Utter to the Cottonbalers. Farewells were said and gifts, including engraved Cottonbales, were presented to Lt. Col. and Mrs. Douglas Snell, Capt. and Mrs. Ronald Smitherman, and Lt. Alan Harvis. Capt. and Mrs. Alfred Burer were presented a pewter baby cup for their new son, James Edward, born Sept. 5. The country-western theme provided a relaxed atmosphere and a good time for all.

BBOD COFFEES

The ladies of Combat Support Group attended their monthly coffee on Oct. 3 at the home of Mrs. Russell A. Weathersby.

Though there were no new faces to welcome, the group bid sad farewells to Mrs. Robert W. Kimbrought, Mrs. Poland E. Sasser Jr., and Mrs. James L. Kirsch and presented a "Follow Me" charm to each of them.

Following the brief business meeting, the ladies summoned up their creative talents for the workshop on the group's project for the OWC Christmas Bazaar.

On Oct. 4, the ladies of the Artillery Committee met at the home of Mrs. Marshall R. McRee for their monthly coffee.

Mrs. Thomas E. Fitzgerald welcomed Mrs. Russell A. Weathersby, from Combat Support Group, and Mrs. James T. Dunn as guests and bid farewell to Mrs. Robert W. Kimbrought. Mrs. Kimbrough received a medallion bearing the likeness of St. Barbara, patroness of the Artilleryman.

2/69th officers and ladies enjoy late summer fling

The officers and ladies of the 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor and their children gathered for a fall pilgrimage and extramilitary maneuvers at the Army Recreation Center in Destin, Florida, Sept. 21-23.

Friday evening saw the vacationers enjoying the cuisine and nightlife of Destin and Fort Walton and a midnight bonfire and moonlight swim on the beach.

Fishing, scuba diving, crabbing, sailing (interspersed with capsizing), swimming, sunbathing, and a pot-luck dinner of shrimp, pompano, red snapper, salads, and snacks filled Saturday's daylight and twilight tours, while the evening was punctuated once again by the sounds of a score of tankers with two guitars singing the first two lines of nearly every song published since Girl Scouts, church camps, sock hops, Hoagie Carmichael, and Redd Foxx became part of musical Americana.

The waterlogged stragglers packed up and headed back to Fort Benning Sunday with only two resolutions for improving the next trip: (1) Lieutenant Colonel W. J. Eddins Jr., battalion commander, was tasked with bringing tracks for the sailboats to make the tankers feel more at ease on them: and (2) Captain Christopher Sauter was assigned the mission of procuring a songbook so that — just once — the group could sing one melody all the way through.

Laymen's Sunday

Fort Benning will join with many Protestant churches across the nation Sunday to celebrate Laymen's Sunday. Christian laymen and women will conduct the services at many of the chapels on post.

At the Infantry Center Chapel, Brigadier General William R. Richardson, Assistant Commandant, United States Army Infantry School, will speak at the 9:30 p.m. and the 11 a.m. services. Other laymen and women will be assisting the general.

Immediately following both services, an appreciation reception will be held in the Infantry Center Chapel Annex, Building 101. The public is cordially invited. In this way the Protestant chaplains wish to express their appreciation to all who serve and participate in the Protestant Parish program at Fort Benning.

OWC PUBLICITY CHAIRMAN: MARSHA GRAHAM; CO-CHAIRMAN: JANE MACPHERSON EDITOR: JUDY JAKUBOWSKI; TYPIST: PAT RICE

WELCOME!

The OWC Publicity Committee wishes to welcome Lucy Lee and Kathy Kokozynski, to its staff. Mrs. Lee, a fashion illustrator, has had her work appear in Women's Wear Daily. She'll be working on posters and sketches for the committee. Mrs. Kokozynski, with a background in journalism, will assist in feature-writing.

The committee would also like to acknowledge and thank, D'Anne Stone, OWC Activities Co-chairman, for her publicity write-ups for OWC classes.

There are still jobs to be filled on the Publicity Committee and Femline staff, if you're interested in this field contact Marsha Graham, 544-4369.

INFANTRY MUSEUM

An organizational meeting of the Infantry Museum Guild will be held on Oct. 23, at 8 p.m. in the National Infantry Museum, Fort Benning. There will be a slide presentation by Lt. Col. (ret.) Dick D. Grube, Museum Curator.

Everyone is welcome, civilian and military personnel alike. Volunteers and ideas are needed for proposed museum services, such as a gift shop, library, tours and educational programs. Receptionists and researchers are also needed. If your interests lie in design or graphic arts, there's a place for you too.

ART SHOW

The oil paintings of Diane Pasquarelli will be featured at The Talent Tree. The show opens with a reception on Thurs., Oct. 18, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. and continues during those hours on each successive Tues. and Thurs. ending Sat., Nov. 3.

The Talent Tree is located in Bldg. 1241 of the Thrift Shop complex on Main Post. The phone number is 545-ARTS.

OWC MAGAZINE

The Officers' Wives' Club of Fort Benning is adding another dimension soon to their already large number of activities, classes, and welfare projects. They will begin publishing a monthly magazine whose first publication date will be Jan 2, 1974. The sixteen page magazine will be mailed to the wives of all officers permanently assigned to Fort Benning. New editor, Muriel Parrish says the magazine will inform its readers not only of OWC events, but will include articles and features about all organizations on post whose activities may be of interest to women. A small nuclear staff has already been formed and they hope to attract authorities in various fields of education, drama, ecology, and other areas who will write monthly columns in future issues.

Mrs. Parrish commented, "With a post as large as Fort Benning we know there is a vast untapped source of talent just waiting for a medium in which to express itself. We hope our magazine will be that medium." The magazine is yet unnamed and details of a contest to determine a name will be announced soon.

NCOWC NOTES

Our thanks go to Joyce Rolle, Mimeograph Chairman, who printed the booklets the NCO Wives' Club distributed at "All About Eve" at Columbus Square.

Having guests for breakfast or brunch? Try this fancy but easy idea to go with your favorite breakfast meats:

French Toast Fondue
1 loaf French bread
2 well-beaten eggs
¼ tsp salt
½ C. milk
1 tsp salt
Cooking oil
1 ½ c sifted powdered sugar
½ C butter or margarine
½ C maple-flavored syrup
1 egg yolk
1 stiff-beaten egg white
Serves 4-6

Cut bread into 50 bite-size cubes, leaving crust on each cube. In mixing bowl, combine the beaten eggs, milk and ½ tsp salt. Pour cooking oil into fondue cooker to half capacity or to depth of at least 2 in. Heat on range to 375. Add the 1 tsp salt to oil. Transfer fondue cooker to base of fondue set over burner. Spear a bread cube through the crust with fondue fork; dip in egg mixture, letting excess drip off. Cook in hot oil till golden brown (about 1-2 min.) Transfer to dinner fork; dip in maple BUTTER or favorite syrup.

MAPLE BUTTER — Thoroughly cream together the powdered sugar, butter, syrup and egg yolk. Fold in beaten egg white. Chill. Makes 2 cups.

GOURMET COOKING — Do you need new recipes for entertaining or just enjoy good food with pleasant company? The Gourmet group meets each month for a luncheon prepared by the members with the recipes and menus available to all. Call Ann Knutson at 689-7421.

JAZZ EXERCISE — Mrs. Richard Martin will lead one hour classes of rhythmic exercises to the beat of the latest tunes on Thursdays at 6:30, for $4 monthly. Call 687-4925.

QUILTING — Only a few openings are available in the class which begins Nov. 1. Mrs. Arthur Richards will teach patchwork, applique, design quilting, and the fun technique of yoyo designs. Projects completed will include a purse, two pillow tops and a small wall hanging. The classes are held on Thursdays from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. for $12. Call Mrs. Richards at 687-2942 or Mrs. James Cook at 687-1181.

CREATIVE STITCHERY — Learn 25 or more stitches in making two pictures and a wall hanging. You will also learn to make and transfer your own patterns and to mount and finish your needlework. Supplies will be available in class at a minimal cost. Classes will be held on Thurs. or Fri. from 1 - 3 p.m., beginning Nov. 1, and will cost $12 for six lessons. Call Mrs. Richards, 687-2942 or Mrs. James Stone 687-8853.

GARBAGE ART — Ecology minded? Convert your empty cereal boxes and bits of string, rope, grass and dried flowers into decorations for key chains, purses or wall plaques. Classes begin Wed. Oct. 31 with 3 sessions for $7.50. Call 687-2967, to get in either the morning or afternoon session.

NEEDLEPOINT — Classes will begin on Nov. 5 from 8:30 to 10:30 p.m. Mrs. David Billings will teach you how to design your own pictures and pillows, to do 12 different stitches and to block and finish your project. A small fee will be charged for the canvas and yarn for learning the stitches. Call Mrs. Billings at 687-9600 to sign up for the 4 lessons at a cost of $10.

Teaching Workshop

A workshop to teach people to teach English to non-speaking people will be conducted at the Religious Education Center at Fort Benning on Oct. 15-17.

The training, conducted in Building 2606, will prepare a person to teach in the English classes for non-English speaking people. These classes are held each Tuesday from 9:30 - 11:30 a.m. at the Religious Education Center. They will start at McBride School in McGraw Manor on Oct. 17.

More than 50 people are currently enrolled in the classes, representing some 17 countries. There are 16 teachers in the program at this time.

Mrs. Ruth Holmes of Marathon, Fla., will be the workshop leader. She has previously conducted four such workshops at Fort Benning using the methods developed by Dr. Frank Laubach in his fight against illiteracy.

Workship classes will be held from 9:30 - 12:30 each day with a lunch break. A free nursery for small children will be available in the building. Those interested should contact the Fort Benning Religious Education director at 545-7432 or 545-4334.

YOU'RE RIGHT, HE DOES HAVE CRUTCHES IN THE PICTURES WE MADE FOR HIM LAST WEEK.

Photo Lab

Arts and Crafts Week, Nov. 18-24, will feature something for everyone in the Crafts Shop Photo Lab. Individual instruction will be offered and a complete encyclopedia of photography will be on hand as a reference.

The photo lab has facilities for the complete photo production process, including equipment for processing ectachrome color slides and black and white film. There are 14 enlargers and a studio room for taking portraits.

There is also a Photographer of the Month contest in which a featured artist will be honored. Mounted prints, 8x10, or 11x14 borderless, of general interest and good technical quality may be submitted to David Greenburg, photography supervisor, at the Main Post Craft Shop.

A Crafts Swap will be held Nov. 23-25 for photographers to swap photos, equipment and ideas. For more information call 545-2342.

OWC School of Dance

Mrs. Sonja Manzi will return this year as director and instructor in ballet for the Officers Wives Club School of Dance.

A native of Mannheim, Germany, she began dancing at the age of four and by the time she was eight, had been accepted into the ballet school at the Mannheim Opera. She performed in ballets, operas and operettas and "turned professional" at 16. She was a solo performer at 20.

After her marriage to an American Army officer in 1956, Mrs. Manzi came to the States and devoted herself completely to being a wife and later a mother. When the Army sent Major Manzi to Fort Benning in 1966, Sonja began studying with Terrell Faulk, then OWC School of Dance director.

She began to teach with Faulk at the OWC School of Dance and in 1967 began performing with the newly-formed Springer Ballet Company. She was the Pigtail Girl in "Graduation Ball" and also danced the Snow Queen in "The Nutcracker."

She soon became the assistant director of the Springer Ballet and when Faulk accepted an invitation from the National Ballet of Canada, Mrs. Oanzi took over as both director of the OWC school of Dance and The Springer Ballet Company.

A full schedule of preballet for four and five year-olds, ballet and tap is available weekly and there are still some openings in the classes. If anyone desires to register or wishes further information, OWC School of Dance chairman Mrs. Sanders A. Cortner can be reached at 545-1130. Although the School of Dance is sponsored by the OWC it is not restricted to officers' children. All military dependents are welcome.

IOAC wives contribute to 'crib death' research

The wives of Infantry Officer Advanced Class 5-73 have elected to contribute the balance of their treasury to the Foundation for Sudden Infant Death Syndrome.

Since March 1973 the Wives have accumulated more than $200 through luncheons, teas, and brunches which were organized and supported by the wives. The highlight and primary fund raising social activity was a silent auction bazaar. The wives donated art, crafts, baked goods and homemade jam and jellies for a silent action held in August. The proceeds from the auction contributed greatly to the treasury.

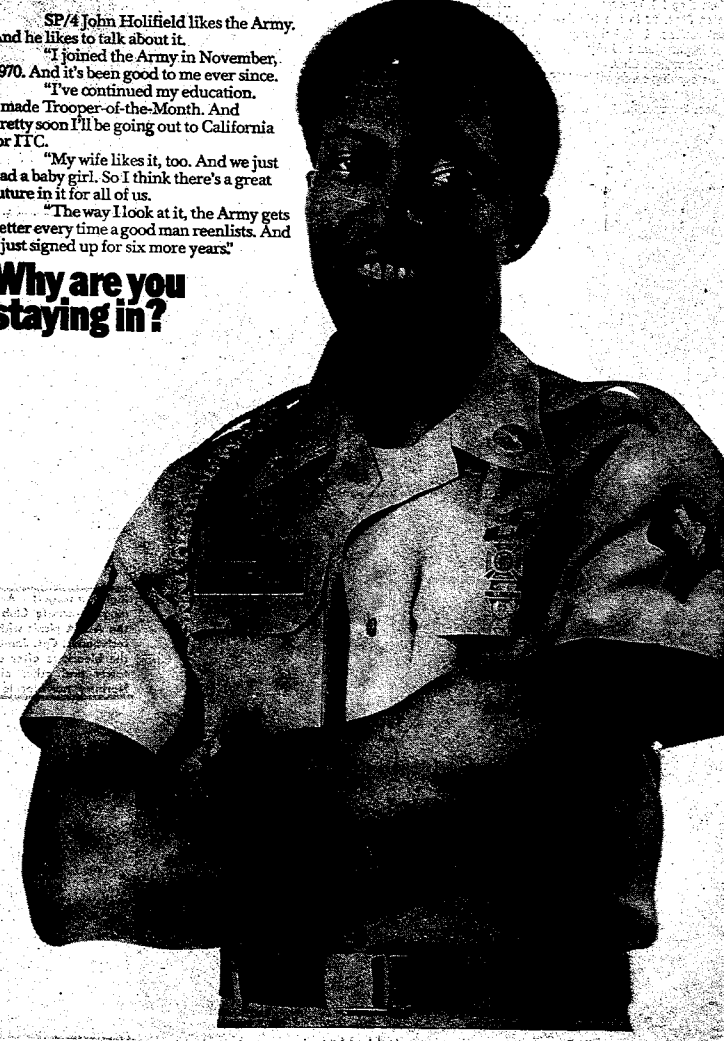
Sudden Infant Death Syndrome (SID), popularly called "crib death", is a fatal respiratory disease which strikes three out of every thousand infants born in the U.S. each year. SIDS is the leading cause of death in infants between the ages of one week and one year of age.

This disease strikes infants in all segments of society, regardless of race or economic status, without warning while the infant sleeps. There is no known cause or preventive measures for the disease, thus making research very necessary. The necessity for extensive research by highly trained physicians and scientists prompted the wives of IOAC 5-73 to offer financial assistance toward further research of this fatal disease.

AUSA

"The Army gets better every time a good man reenlists."

SP/4 John Holifield likes the Army. And he likes to talk about it.



"I joined the Army in November, 1970. And it's been good to me ever since.

"I've continued my education. I made Trooper-of-the-Month. And pretty soon I'll be going out to California for ITC.

"My wife likes it, too. And we just had a baby girl. So I think there's a great future in it for all of us.

"The way I look at it, the Army gets better every time a good man reenlists. And I just signed up for six more years."

Why are you staying in?

AUSA Picnic

More than 1,500 persons attended the AUSA picnic on Sept. 22 to see the Army in action. Demonstrations included rapelling by the Ranger Department and skydiving by the Fort Benning Parachute Club.

In the opening ceremonies, AUSA President Joe Windsor gave special thanks to the Infantry School for coordinating the event. He said it is a good chance for civilians to keep in touch with the Army and be reminded of their vital role.

John Schultz, master of ceremonies, introduced the AUSA officers and special guests, Columbus Mayor Bob Hydrick and President of the Columbus Chamber of Commerce, Bill Heard.

Kit Smothers, Miss Fort Benning, picks a lucky number ticket and hands it to Master of Ceremonies, John Shultz. More than $1000 worth of prizes were donated by Columbus and Phenix City merchants for the annual AUSA picnic.

Right on target! Members of the Fort Benning Parachute Club dazzled the crowds at the AUSA picnic with their precision jumping techniques. Cpt. James Lewis lands in front of the bleachers after avoiding wires, rapelling tower and other obstacles as SGM Frank Norbury, narrator, looks on.

A crocodile was among those who attended the AUSA picnic. He didn't get to eat any of the barbecued chicken, but he had a good time just looking at all the 1500 people who attended. The Ranger Department fed him before the picnic, so he didn't try to eat Staff Sergeant Terry Godwin, shown here with him, or any other AUSA members.

Some 600 children were on hand for the AUSA picnic. They found hot dogs, hamburgers, cold drinks, fire engine rides, weapons displays, horse rides, a band, skydivers, and more. But this young man seems satisfied with a toy airplane and an AUSA balloon.

Visitors keep a cautious distance from the reptile display put on by the Ranger Department of the Infantry School. Many of the snakes are deadly poisonous, but they do not seem to bother Ranger First Leiutenant Chris Kearns.

AUSA to receive three awards

The Columbus-Phenix City-Fort Benning AUSA chapter will receive three awards at the annual meeting on October 15.

It will receive the Lieutenant General Milton G. Baker Award for being the world's largest chapter. This will be the fifth straight year the chapter has captured this award.

Presentations will be made at the opening session of the annual meeting by the national president, Edward C. Logelin.

The chapter will also receive the General Lyman L. Lemitzer Award for the chapter most active in telling the Army story and, for the fourth straight year, the award for greatest membership input.

Receiving the awards for the chapter will be president Joe Windsor, immediate past president Charles Daley, and secretary-treasurer Col. Allen Goodson.

Awards received in the past four years include the following:

1972 — World's largest chapter;
Greatest membership input.

1971 — Best overall chapter;
World's largest chapter;
Greatest membership input.

1970 — Best overall chapter;
World's largest chapter;
Greatest membership input.

1969 — Best overall chapter;
World's largest chapter;
Most active in pursuit of AUSA objectives.

Coming to the screen

Tom Sawyer

Mark Twain's familiar classic TOM SAWYER has been brought to the screen as a delightful musical adventure featuring a cast of talented performers. The Academy Award winning team of Robert B. Sherman and Richard M. Sherman who earned their Oscar with the score for MARY POPPINS penned the music and lyrics for TOM SAWYER. Young Johnny Whitaker is endearing as the mischievous but lovable Tom Sawyer and Celeste Holm is a perfect Aunt Polly while Warren Oates does a great job as Muff Potter. Jeff East, a Kansas City boy of 14, is really impressive in his film debut as Huckleberry Finn. TOM SAWYER is adventurous family film entertainment sure to please audiences of all ages.

The Last American Hero

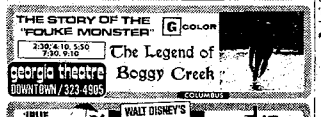
The Getaway

Steve McQueen and Ali MacGraw play Doc and Carol, a husband and wife reunited after his parole from prison. They plan and execute a bank robbery with the help of crooked politician Ben Johnson and brutal gunman Al Lettieri. Things go wrong and several people are killed. Doc and Carol net a half million dollars and it seems that everybody else is planning a double cross. Violent and bloody action involving chases in cars, across rooftops, in train terminals and shootouts with police; and a climactic shotgun duel in a seedy Texas hotel will keep audiences excited and tense. The violent action of THE GETAWAY may offend.



The Daring Dobermans

This is a sequel to THE DOBERMAN GANG which saw five Doberman Pinchers, under human control, rob a bank only to turn on the humans and flee into the bush with the loot. Three young unemployed playboy-types, Warren, Steve and Greg, are staying at a desert hotel and decide to hunt down the dogs who are reported in their area. Greg, an electronic expert, manufactures a device that only the dogs will respond to, as they did to the whistles in the first picture. They finally locate the dogs, and $59,000, and the animals are friendly, so they start to train them for another robbery. While working at a deserted hangar in the desert, a young Indian boy named Billy joins them and he becomes the most important trainer of the dogs.

The AAFES menu Soul Food

In the continuing effort to provide for the ethnic group patrons, the food activities of the Fort Benning Post Exchange try to provide foods to meet the desires of all personnel. Soul food is no longer peculiar to the black persons' taste, nor can it be defined as poor man's food.

Contrary to popular belief, soul food originated in America — not some faraway shore. It was born in 1619 when black slavery was first introduced in the state of Virginia.

Soul food was born out of necessity on the plantation in slave shacks and shanties. It was the slave woman who, using her God-given talents, prepared substantial meals for her hungry family who had toiled in the fields all day. It was that same woman who somehow managed to create soul suppers from all of the scraps that came from the plantation house tables and discarded parts of animals.

Plantation owners and slavemasters did not entertain the thought of eating such things as pig feet, ribs, and guts (chitterlings). These were passed on to the slaves. Discarded parts of fowl, chicken feet, wings and backs also were plentiful. Using ingenuity and a little bit of flour, chicken and dumplings emerged from the skillet.

Tops of greens were never on plantation house tables. Vegetable roots were served instead. It was the slave soul sister who recognized that by boiling and simmering the discarded green tops, using bacon dripping (because of the lack of meat) to enhance the flavor, she had an appetizing dish for her family. She also discovered that these greens stuck to the ribs when served with corn bread and enabled the slaves to have a full stomach when working in the fields.

Soul food today is a way of cooking rather than a type of food. Chicken is chicken; pork is pork greens are greens, and beans are beans. This is what makes soul food.

Diners in AAFES facilities at Fort Benning can enjoy soul food and Mexican dishes in the Main Cafeteria, Building 1600, Main Post, daily including Saturdays, Sundays and holidays.

Bridge Training for 18th Airborne

By WM. D. SAMS

The 586th Engineer Company, 36th Engineer Group, is training soldiers of the 27th and 307th Engineer battalions, 18th Airborne Corps, Fort Bragg, N. C., in "Floatbridge Construction" at Victory Pond.

Five companies from each battalion will complete the training. Company B, 307th Engineer Battalion completed the training Sept. 10-17. Company C, 27th Engineer Battalion completed training Sept. 17-21.

Each company participating in the field training exercises will travel from Fort Bragg by air, parachute jump onto Fryar Field, then move by truck to the Victory Pond area, where the training and bivouac areas will be located.

The field training exercise includes several hours of classroom instruction in addition to field construction of the bridge.

The 586th Engineer Company, 36th Engineer Group, provides on the job supervision, and training support, and classroom instruction for the training units during the field exercises.

The 586th also provides administrative support for approximately 90 soldiers during the period the Fort Bragg units are here.

The 2d and 3rd platoons of the 586th supply equipment for bridging and the Support Platoon furnished an Aluminum Footbridge and Light Tactical Raft (LTR).

The 444th Transportation Company provides trucks to take the men to and from Victory Pond, and into Main Post.

Instruction is given in different subjects dealing in construction. Some of the subjects are taught during classroom periods and also during the actual construction of the bridge.

Before actual bridge construction begins, a safety briefing is given. Construction training begins with the overhead cable, followed by the assembly of single float, end section, and the normal two floats.

Construction and removal of different types of bridges such as the M4T6 Bridge, Light Tactical Raft (LTR) Footbridge, and Expedient Raft with Footbridge are given in the last phase of instruction. After instruction in the construction and removal of the bridge, the instructors of the 586th provided a critique or summary of the training unit's completed work.

During interviews with several of the soldiers, the men were showing more than a minimum degree of enthusiasm, self discipline, and pride in doing their job.

The men of Company C, 27th Engineer Battalion were anxious to give their opinion of the supervisors and the instruction given them, and spoke highly of both. As Sergeant Terry Horten stated, "I think the instruction in the classes was excellent it gave me ea basis by which I could incorporate what I had learned in the classes with actual field situations. More training of this type could prove very beneficial to the soldier interested in becoming an engineer."

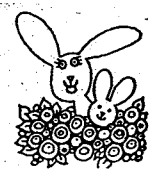
Specialist Four George Kister, Company C, voiced his opinion by stating, "This type of training wasn't what I had imagined it to be. I found myself learning new methods during each class." According to Kister, this was his first field training exercise and he was looking forward to another training session of this type.

It would be easily assumed that turn about is fair play, so equal time was given to the instructors from the 586th Engineer Company.

When asked to describe the men of Company C, Sergeant William White, instructor for the 586th Engineer Company, said, "These men are the most highly spirited young men I have had the pleasure to be associated with during my time as an instructor." Possibly one reason for such a high degree of morale may be due to the fact that these men are all airborne qualified, and are in an Engineer Battalion, which makes them a special breed of soldier."

Sergeant First Class Jimmy E. Wise, 586th was asked his views on instructing the men of Company C.

"To be perfectly honest the men showed more initiative and willingness to accept a challenge than I had expected." Soldiers of this caliber make my job much easier and the men get more out of the training," Wise stated. "On the behalf of myself and the other instructors of the 586th Engineer Company, we are looking forward to training more men of the same quality."



During recent "Floatbridge Training" at Victory Pond, two members of Charlie Company, 27th Engineer Battalion 18th Airborne Corps of Engineers, Fort Bragg, N.C., are taught correct assembly procedures for attaching ropes to the guy wire atop an anchorage tower. First Intern Completes Training at Fort Benning

Willie D. Varner, the first Department of the Army career intern to complete his entire training program at Fort Benning, was recently promoted to employee relations specialist. Varner is also the first such intern to be permanently assigned to this post after completion of the training program.

Varner graduated from Alabama State University in Montgomery with a B.A. degree in business administration. Before entering Alabama State, he served in the Air Force for five years, then completed his college education in three years by attending classes all year long.

"The opportunities for rapid promotion, the type of work, and my prior military service all helped me decide to enter the career intern program," Varner stated. "I worked in all the branches of the Civilian Personnel Division here, then narrowed my choices of a specialty area down to two."

Varner entered the intern program in August, 1970. He worked in training and development, technical services, position and pay management, recruitment and placement, and management-employee relations. He decided to specialize in the last area, and is now a GS-11 employee relations specialist permanently assigned to Fort Benning.

The Lanett, Ala., native is married to Vera K. Varner. The Varners have one son, and live in Columbus, Ga.

Run for your money

Commanders and top non-commissioned officers in the 197th Infantry Brigade are prepared to keep a collective promise made to soldiers in the "Forever Forward" brigade when the Combined Federal Campaign began.

Speaking on behalf of his subordinate unit commanders and their sergeants major or first sergeants, Colonel William B. Steele gave his word that if the soldiers contributed enough to meet the brigade's goal of $27,925, they would be rewarded with the opportunity to see unit commanders and their top NCOs engage in a continuous 100-mile relay run through post brigade areas.

Responding to their commanders' promise, the men quickly began pumping donations into the fund and, by the afternoon of Oct. 5 had contributed $29,636, surpassing the objective and earning the chance to see their commanders and top NCOs pounding the turf and pavement throughout troop housing areas at Kelley Hill and Harmony Church.

The run will be completed this afternoon.

Columbus native Crew Chief of the month

A Columbus, Ga. native has been selected as the Outstanding Crew Chief of the month for the 145th Aviation Battalion at Fort Benning.

Specialist Five Bruce O. Fuller, a graduate of Baker High, is an OH-58A crew chief with the 36th Engineer Group's aviation platoon.

Spec. 5 Fuller completed Basic Combat Training at Fort Polk, La. and Crew Chief Mechanic School at Fort Rucker, Ala. He served in the Republic of Vietnam from 1968-1970 with the D Troop, 2d Squadron, 1st Cavalry Regiment "Dragoons."

After completing that tour he instructed at Fort Rucker's Door Gunner's School until being assigned to Fort Benning in March, 1971.

Soldier of the Quarter

"I was so surprised when the Sergeant Major said I'd won that I had to ask him to repeat himself."

That was the reaction of Specialist Four George S. Korda upon hearing he had been chosen The School Brigades' Soldier of the Quarter.

The competition for the honor was between five junior enlisted men from units within the brigade.

Korda is the brigade's information specialist. His duties include writing newspaper articles and taking photographs for the Bayonet newspaper, and overseeing the brigade's massive hometown news release program.

He is President of Fort Benning's Soldiers' Council and "The School Brigades' Soldier's Council. Both organizations exist to further communication between commanders and junior enlisted soldiers; and to make recommendations and suggestions to Commanders on how to improve various situations.

Korda will be attending this year's AUSA convention as a delegate from Fort Benning.

"Joining the Army has turned out to be one of my best decisions," said Korda. "What I have learned will help me the rest of my life."

Sand Hill Golf Tourney

There will be a Veterans Day Golf Tournament at the Sand Hill Golf Course Oct. 20-21.

The contest will be a 36-hold, medal play tournament and will be open to active and retired military. At the completion of the first 18 holes of play, participants will be divided into flights according to score. Flight winners will then be determined based on the low medal score for the 36 holes of play.

Tee off time will be 3 a.m. each day. No entry fee will be charged. All players must have a current membership card at the Sand Hill Golf Course or pay the prescribed daily green fee.

Entries must be submitted to the Sand Hill Golf Course Pro-Shop no later than Oct. 19.

Trophies will be presented to the winner and runner-up in each flight. For more information call 544-4131.

Fabian takes Golf Tourney

Sara Fabian won the Interclub women's golf tournament Wednesday for the third time in five years.

She has won the Elebash Trophy for the Columbus Country Club in 1969, 1971 and 1973, while Lois Sutton and Sequel Wood have won the cup for Fort Benning in 1970 and 1972 respectively. Each of the five years, the champion has won on her home course.

Mrs. Fabian's 39-96—175 beat Fort Benning's Beverly Mullins 92-88—180 by five strokes. Ruby Willett was third in the A Division of the championship flight with a 183.

Mary Cannan won the B Division with a 198, while Lou Kearns was second at 202 and Chinky Sogard was third at 205.

In the first flight, Betty Starhuck beat Gladys Fowler 4-and-3 for the championship and Denice Gree downed Em War 2-and-1 for third lace.

In the second flight, Lucy Hartley defeated Francis Bradley 2-and 1 in the finals and Bobbye Kiersey edged Carol Lee 1-up in the consolation match.

Mary Ann Bell took third place.

In the speciality events Lou Sutton was closest on holes number 5 and 8. Lydia Langdon was closest to the hole on hole number 13. Pat Tully had the least number of putts.

Professional Automatic Turntable

With the 1229, Dual has achieved what many audio experts have called the "no-compromise" automatic.

The most dramatic example of this is the Mode Selector—a feature that shifts the entire tonearm base—down for single play, up for multiple play. Thus the stylus tracks at precisely the correct angle in both modes of play.

The 8¾" tonearm (longest of any automatic) is centered within a true four-point ring-in-ring gimbal. And all four pivots have identical low-friction bearings. Tonearm tracks flawlessly at as low as ¼ gram.

AT Seban HOME ENTERTAINMENT CENTER

The Georgia open season for hunting deer with a gun is only about 20 days from now. It's time for serious hunters to begin making preparations.

Opening day is usually the best hunting day of the year. Hunters who have taken the time to reconnoiter the woods for deer plan on taking that deer just a few minutes after sun-up. Quite a few of them do.

They get a deer because they know where deer feed and where they bed down for the day. Deer are creatures of habit. If they are not spooked they can be depended upon to do the same things about the same time each day. Most deer do all their grazing and foraging at night. Comes the dawn they head for a spot to bed down. Experienced hunters take advantage of these habits. The advanced knowledge is usually good only for opening day. After all the shooting that goes on that day the deer become wary. They may even leave the area altogether if the shooting is heavy.

Knowing where the deer are located is just part of the preparation. Hunters, especially hunters on the reservation who must use a shotgun, need a good shooting stand. Sometimes this stand will be a spot behind some bushes or a tree. More often it requires a few hours preparation. Sometimes a tree stand is required for a good clear field of fire over a trail or grazing area.

Those who build these type stands should mark them with their name to discourage other hunters from believing they were made by nature. A real sportsman will respect the prior rights of another and find another place for himself.

Be Careful About Details

There are also a few administrative details a hunter must take care of before he takes to the field. They should be handled early. Late comers usually run into waiting lines.

One of the first items on this agenda is to get your hunting weapons registered. All weapons brought on post must be registered at the Provost Marshal Registration Division located in Building 83. The weapon must be brought in for inspection. Provost Marshal personnel will check the weapon and verify any identification information on the weapon. The gun owner will receive a registration card. He should keep this registration card with the weapon. Law enforcement personnel check hunters for this identification.

There is also a requirement to re-register weapons. The registration card has a date in the upper right hand corner. To register the weapon after the first registration expires bring the card to the Registration Office. If you have any questions concerning the legality of your weapon, call 545-4591.

Get Licenses And Permits Early

Be sure you have the proper licenses and permits. Everyone needs a state hunting license of some sort to hunt on the reservation. Active duty military personnel can use a Georgia state license for all hunting on the reservation. All others must comply with the laws of the state. Georgia residents who intend to hunt on the Alabama portion of the reservation need an Alabama nonresident license. Alabama residents hunting on the Georgia portion of the reservation must have a Georgia nonresident license. All hunters who intend to hunt deer on any part of the reservation nee ddeer tags and all hunters also need a Post Hunting and Fishing Permit.

It all sounds difficult, time consuming and confusing, but it needn't be. The Rod and Gun Club has a one-stop service for all of these permits except the Alabama Hunting Licenses. The men working at the club are all old timers on the post. They will make sure you are legal wherever you intend to hunt.

While you are out there pick up some of the free publications the club hands out. Available are post maps, state regulations and copies of the post hunting regulations. Study these regulations and abide by them. You'll be glad you did when you get out into the woods and see the game wardens moving toward you.

At Retail Level

Gasoline Price Hikes OKd

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Cost of Living Council Friday approved increases in the retail price of gasoline ranging between about 1 and 2.5 cents per gallon.

It also approved increases for prices of heating oil that could range from one to two cents per gallon.

The changes are effective immediately, the council said in a statement.

Increases in the wholesale prices of gasoline charged to service station dealers who sell the original

The new price rules he added, he hoped would help to keep down the price of gasoline costs Americans motorists about $1 billion per year.

Cost of Living Council Director John T. Dunlop has said that prices including gasoline, have contributed disproportionately to inflation.

He said in a letter to Sen. John L. McClellan, D-Ark., this week that during the summer, gasoline shortages in some retailers subjected motorists to price disadvantage of the shortages, and one of the council's goals was to roll back those increases.

"For the first time since World War II," said Cost of Living Council president G.

The rule exempts service stations that sell fewer than 1,000 gallons a month, and allows refiners to pass along increases in the cost of crude oil imported from countries that have imposed export taxes.

The rule also exempts small refiners, those with crude oil runs of less than 175,000 barrels a day, from the requirement that they sell a certain percentage of their crude oil production at prices below the ceiling price level.

The Council estimated that each motorist increase in the price of gasoline costs Americans motorists about $1 billion per year.

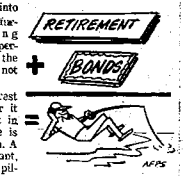
Talent Tree discovers hidden talent

The Talent Tree is renewing its' Featured Artist Program. The first offering of the 1973-74 season will be the paintings of Diane Pasquarelli, a local artist new to the art scene.

The show opens Thursday, Oct. 18, with a reception from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. and continues each Tuesday and Thursday through October, ending on Saturday, Nov. 3.



"Hidden talent" is the phrase that comes to mind when describing Diane's work for she had never painted until taking painting classes offered by the Officers' Wives' Club last year. That was the beginning class and this year she is enrolled in the intermediate class. Diane's instructor, Jane Ellithorpe, says that she has a feeling for painting and the desire to learn and improve.

Diane works boldly and quickly in oils with brush and palette knife, often mixing her colors directly on the canvas. Her favorite subject matter is seascapes — reminiscent of time spent on the Oregon coast. However, she hasn't ignored the challenge of still life and landscape. The show will feature a wide sampling of paintings, large and small.

The artist's family — Frankie, 10, and Kelly, 4, and husband Tim — have helped out. They have turned the living room into a painting studio. Tim further helps by making frames. The girls co-operate by staying out of the studio when mommy is not there.

This new found interest and her enthusiasm for it is not an unusual trait in Diane's character. She is not a do-nothing person. A trained dental assistant, Diane has her private pilot's license, has tried skydiving, enjoys skeet shooting, painting, bridge, ACS "Actionline", of which she is editor, and to the wives' group of the Company Opening and hunting.

Come out to the Talent Tree — located in the Thrift Shop complex off Yeager Ave., Main Post — and see Diane's paintings. Maybe you have "hidden talent" and will be inspired to do something about it.

Catch a fish

The Recreation Services cabins, boats, trailer and camping sites within the USAIC Recreation Area in the 25th annual Destin-Gulf Coast Deep Sea Fishing Rodeo. All active duty and retired military using the area are eligible to win prizes in the contest. The festivities are being sponsored by the Destin Community Center.

There is no entry fee for contestants fishing aboard any boat officially registered in the rodeo or for pier, bridge, jetty and surf fishermen. More than $10,000 consisting of trophies, U. S. Savings Bonds and merchandise will be awarded in seven divisions of competition. Awards are presented to daily, weekly and overall winners.

In the Grand Prize Competition, a contestant may win up to $1,780 in bonds for the largest king mackerel and $1,750 in bonds for the largest red snapper.

The famous rodeo was first held in 1948 and has grown through the years to its present status as a major fishing event with thousands of anglers participating from all over the United States.

Pioneer Football

Company A, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry handed Company B its third loss of the season, 19-6, last week. A Company A win lifted its season record to 4-3 and a tie for third place with Co. D in the PIONEER football league. The loss left Company B in second place with a 5-3 record.

The winning offense, led by player-coach Eddie Thomas, scored two quick touchdowns in the early stages of the contest. Quarterback Morris Davis threw two of his three touchdown passes to Thomas for the only first half scores.

Late in the second half, Company B rallied for a touchdown, making the score 12-6. But moments later the magic Davis passing arm connected again for a touchdown

Biddy League Scores

Recovering from a 16-14 loss at the hands of the Falcons, the Biddy League Redskins soundly defeated the Chiefs, 28-6, at Doughboy Stadium. Leading scorer for the Redskins was Teddy Gallardo with 12 points. John Teachy and quarterback Bryan Bouchelion each scored 8 points for the victorious Redskins. Pat Burns scored the Chiefs' only touchdown.

In other Biddy League action, the Falcons and Cowboys roughed it out to a 6-6 tie.

Engineers checking for safety

The 36th Engineer Group is doing its part to keep the military vehicles safe and in top running condition.

Weekly road side spot check teams assemble on 1st Division Road and Cusseta Road, depending on the flow of traffic and conduct safety inspections of every vehicle which passes and belongs to the group.

Sergeant Major Willie J. Simmons explained that the major gig or fault result not with the vehicle itself, but the dispatch. "Most gigs come from an unauthorized dispatch." Simmons stated there is an average of eight gigs per vehicle.

If a vehicle is deadlined for safety it is held at the inspection point and the unit where the vehicle came from is contacted and told to pick it up.

Veterans Day

marks 20th anniversary

Veterans Day, established to honor those citizens who have served in the armed forces of the United States, marks its 20th anniversary Oct. 22 with a national ceremony at the Arlington Memorial Amphitheater. The holiday was first designated by President Eisenhower in 1954 to replace Armistice Day, identified with the ending of World War I.

The ceremony will pay tribute to America's more than 29 million living veterans with a stirring program of pageantry and music.

The Amphitheater is located at Virginia's historic Arlington National Cemetery where moments before the Veterans Day tribute, a Presidential Wreath will be placed at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

Serving as host for the event, a role rotated annually among the ten national service organizations chartered by Congress, will be the Disabled American Veterans. Their national commander, John T. Soave of East Detroit, Mich. will deliver the principal address. Another DAV member, Michael R. Johnson, 25, will lead the audience in the Pledge of Allegiance. The Provo, Utah veteran of Vietnam was recently named DAV's outstanding disabled veteran of 1973-74.

Actor George Montgomery will narrate the program to be attended by an estimated 3,000 persons, many of whom will be high-ranking government and military officials. Montgomery, who is also a well-known designer and creator of wood furniture, is in the midst of a nationwide tour of Veterans Administration hospitals where he lectures on his craft for the benefit of rehabilitation patients.

The Marine Corps Band, which has come to be known as "The President's Own," will provide music.

Veterans Day activities are coordinated by a national committee chaired by VA Administrator Donald E. Johnson. "Peace With Honor," the Veterans Day official theme, was selected by the committee at its founding meeting in 1954.

Regional ceremonies for 1973 are scheduled in Alameda County, Calif., Albany, Ore., Indianapolis, Ind., Birmingham, Ala., and Milwaukee, Wis. Many traditional state and local Veterans Day observances will also be held on Nov. 11.

Scout troop reactivated

Fort Benning's Boy Scout Program gained another unit Oct. 2 when Troop 39 was reactivated at the Custer Terrace Scout Hut under the sponsorship of the 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor, 197th Infantry Brigade.

The troop's scoutmaster is Warrant Officer Dwight Brown. He initiated the effort leading to the troop's reactivation.

Among officials participating in the ceremony were Major Charles O. Woodson, chairman of the district scout committee, Emmett McKay, Fort Benning scout executive, scoutmaster Brown and 2nd of the 69th representatives, Second Lieutenant Daniel Flemming and First Lieutenant Delane F. Moeller.

Boys interested in participating in scouting may call Brown at 545-8778 or 689-5189.

Advisory Council

The Fort Benning Race Relations Advisory Council, chaired by Colonel Kendrick Barlow, assistant post commander, met Oct. 12 to discuss the racial atmosphere at Fort Benning.

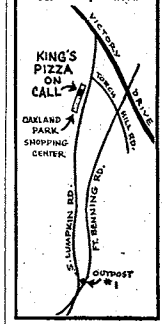
Items on the agenda at the meeting were an evaluation of race relations programs on post, including plans to revise a current pamphlet and distribute it to units, and plans for the Martin Luther King annual memorial services to be held in January, 1974.

Race Relations Instructors complete three-day workshop

Race relations instructors from units all over Fort Benning are attending the closing session of a three-day workshop today in Brown Hall. Most of the instructors have already attended the Defense Race Relations Institute or the Unit Race Relations Discussion Leaders Course.

Colonel Kendrick Barlow, Fort Benning's assistant commander, opened th workshop with an address encouraging race relations instructors to sharpen their skills in small group methods of instruction.

The workshop included sessions in small group instruction, exercises for building discussion leader skill, and dividing the participants into groups, then assigning each group a task in planning a specific race relations education activity which was then presented to the entire group for criticism and discussion.



The highlight of the closing session will be an address by Major General Thomas M. Tarpley, Fort Benning commander, at 2:30 p.m. in Brown Hall.

AUSA Chapter receives awards

WASHINGTON, D.C.—The Columbus-Phenix CIty-Fort Benning chapter of the Association of the U.S. Army again dominated the opening ceremonies of the national convention.

Three awards and a certificate of appreciation were received by chapter members—more than any other chapter. And, approximately 50 members of the chapter were on hand to witness the presentations.

For the fifth straight year the chapter was presented the Lieutenant General Milton Baker award for being the largest chapter in the world. Joe Windsor, the chapter's president, accepted the award for the chapter.

Colonel Allan Goodson received the General John Hull award for having the greatest membership input. The School Brigade commander accepted the award, representing the chapter as its secretary. This is the fourth straight year the Columbus-Phenix City-Fort Benning chapter has received this award.

Colonel William R. Guthrie accepted the General Lyman Lemnitzer award on behalf of Charles Daley, the chapter's immediate past president. This award is for being the most active chapter in the world.

Daley, who was unable to attend due to a death in the family, was also presented a certificate of achievement as past president of the world's largest and most active chapter. Accepting the award from the national AUSA president, Edward C. Logelin of Chicago, for Daley was Joe Flowers.

Members of the Columbus-Phenix City-Fort Benning chapter also heard the Secretary of the Army, Howard "Bo" Callaway address the convention on opening day. He told the delegates that the Volunteer Army was working.

He cited visits to Army posts and conversations with young enlisted men and NCOs in the past few weeks in saying that the Army is better now than in the last days of the draft.

72% of goal reached

Fort Benning has reached 72 per cent of its $150,000 Combined Federal Campaign goal with more than $105,000 contributed after the third week of the drive.

According to post project officer, James F. Schoonover, nine out of 26 activities on post have surpassed their goals.

More than 7,500 people have contributed an average of $13 to the campaign.

"The average contribution is a little bit lower than last year but the total contribution is more," said Schoonover. "I feel that we will go over our goal by the end of this week," he added.

Eighty five percent of the contributors will make payments by the payroll deduction plan.

Some 44 local, national and international health and service agencies finance their projects through contributions made during the drive.

Each office and major unit has a "keyman" who will accept contributions and prepare receipts for the donor's tax records.

This is the third year the campaign at Fort Benning has combined drives for the International Services Agencies, the United Way Agencies and the National Health Agencies in the Fort Benning-Columbus-Phenix City area.

The donor may make a blanket contribution which would be divided among the agencies or he may specify which agency he wants to receive all or part of his contribution.

Celebrate Veterans Day at York Field Ceremony

A formal retreat ceremony will be held at Fort Benning's York Field at 4:45 today to mark the 20th anniversary of Veterans Day.

The holiday was first designated by President Dwight D. Eisenhower in 1954 to replace Armistice Day, identified with the ending of World War I. It was established to honor those citizens who have served in the Armed Forces of the United States.

The Friday ceremony will be held as a part of the Fort Benning observance of Veterans Day. Major General Thomas M. Tarpley, Fort Benning commander, will be the host officer. Guest of honor will be Columbus Mayor Bob Hydrick who will review the troops.

Participating in the ceremony Friday will be the 283rd Army Band, a platoon from the Officer Candidate Battalion, a platoon from the 608th Ordnance Company and two platoons from Company C, 1st Battalion, 58th Infantry.

Maj. Gen. Tarpley will also take part in Monday's reginal observance of Veterans Day at Birmingham, Ala. The 283rd Army Band and an honor guard from the 197th Infantry Brigade will also be at that observance.

Scout-A-Pal

Approximately 250 Boy Scouts from all over Georgia will be at Fort Benning tomorrow, Oct. 20 for the annual Scout-A-Pal festivities.

Each of the Scouts will accompany a handicapped or retarded child to the event here.

The Scouts and the handicapped children will meet at the Columbus Municipal Auditorium Saturday morning then go to Fort Benning's York Field.

At York Field they will be welcomed by Major General Thomas M. Tarpley, Fort Benning commander. They will also see a sports jump and a Ranger rappelling demonstration.

From York Field they will tour the U.S. Army Infantry Museum and then have lunch in a parking lot across from the museum. A display of military equipment, a fire truck and a state police car will be on exhibit.

After lunch, an Indian dance team from LaGrange, Ga. will give the Order of the Arrow ceremony.

This event is sponsored by the Columbus Jaycees in conjunction with the Chattahoochee Council of Boy Scouts.

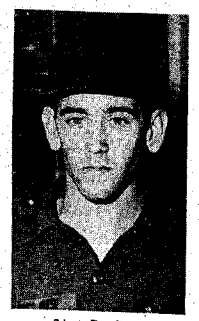
I'm in favor of it, as long as it isn't abused. I've seen many people who get in the mess halls for free who are on separate rations. I think everyone should be on separate rations but once you abuse it, it should be taken away.

Private First Class
Jerry Chaney
A Co. 1/29 Inf.

It wouldn't work at all. People would spend too much money if they were on separate rations. By mid-month, many would be completely out of money and then they wouldn't be able to eat in the mess hall.

Specialist Four Steve Landreth
Co. B, 2/69 Armor

No, because a lot of soldiers would not be able to control their money. They would be out of money before the end of the month.



Would you be in favor of all persons drawing separate ration allowances as now being tested at some installations?

Private Waymond Miller
Special Services

It depends on what the soldier's living condition is. If he is living in the barracks and is without transportation, food is easily available in the mess hall. If he does have transportation, and is living on post, separate rations would be great. I think that it's necessary for people living off post.

Private First Class
John Laglois
Weapons Dept.

Yes. I was missing about 60 per cent of my meals until I got separate ration allowance. Many people are in the same situation so I think it would benefit everyone.

VETERANS DAY

Fort Benning proudly takes this opportunity to join in a nationwide salute to veterans. We are keenly aware of the contributions of these legions of dedicated Americans and honored to count ourselves among their ranks.

We are reminded that freedom is priceless, and the price already paid by millions for the freedom we now enjoy must never be forgotten. Our challenge is that as veterans of both the present and future, we must continually work to see that America remains strong.

The Fort Benning salute to veterans will be expressed in a ceremony on York Field at 1640 on 19 October. All military and civilian personnel are invited to attend this program.

The heart of the Unit

By RICK WASSER

S-3 — operations and troop requirements — the heart of any military unit. It is here that the complexities of daily missions for a unit are carried out.

The 1st Battalion 29th Infantry, (THE PIONEERS), has an average of 73 troop support problems per week and, in some instances, as many as 90 problems per week. This involves an average of 250 men from the battalion, which includes two mechanized infantry companies, one straight infantry company, an artillery battery, a Ranger company, and a headquarters company.

The PIONEERS mission includes all of these: supporting the Ranger camps in Georgia and Florida, providing troops, equipment, artillery and mortar fire, and the agressor element for a problem.

According to Sergeant First Class Robert Glen, troop requirements NCO, "dedication is like the plague . . . if you come in contact with someone who has it, it's going to spread. I think it's important that we of the S-3 shop show the unit operations sergeants just how dedicated we all are to our jobs, so that they will pass it on to the people actually working on the commitments."

SFC Glen summed up the mission of the troop requirements section as: "identification evaluation, coordination, and dissemination. Once the problem has been identified," he said, "it is thoroughly evaluated, and we decide who and what will be needed to complete the mission. Then we coordinate the problem with those parties involved in it, and finally we disseminate, or task it, to a particular unit within the 1-29th."

While the problem is taking place, the S-3 shop is monitoring it to see that all goes smoothly. Once completed, it is examined and re-evaluated to see if any changes will be necessary.

Working alongside him in troop requirements is Sergeant Harold Gibson, operations specialist. Gibson prepares the status report each morning. The status report lets the higher headquarters know what every soldier in the battalion is doing on that day. Gibson is also responsible for dispatching all vehicles in the battalion. This in itself is no small task, and it occupies a minimum of four to five hours of his day.

Troop requirements are only one half of the S-3 section. The other half, operations, is headed by Sergeant First Class Leon Roy who is also noncommissioned officer in charge of the entire S-3 section. As overall supervisor, Roy is responsible for everything that happens in the S-3 section. He has to "stay one step ahead of everybody else, in this job. Few people," commented Roy, realize the responsibilities involved in being in charge of the Battalion S-3 shop. In company level operations, you can make a mistake once in a while, and get away with it, but at battalion level, we just can't afford to make any mistakes, as it could conceivably upset the production of the entire battalion."

Post observes Education Week

Education Week, Oct. 22-26, will be observed with Open House Activities in Fort Benning schools and at the Post Education Center, Bldg. 35.

Parents are invited to come to dependent schools from 8:15 a.m. - 3:15 p.m. each day. There will be displays in the classrooms including volcanoes, rocks, sea shells, ceramics, poetry, insects and ecology. There will also be an art display by the students at the Infantry Museum. Parents can also purchase lunch at the schools for one dollar.

The public is invited to become better acquainted with education available to servicemen and their dependents at the Education Center, Oct. 26 at 10 a.m. Supervisors, teachers and counselors will be available to answer questions concerning program offerings which include pre-high school, high school, vocational - technical, college undergraduate, graduate and occupational speciality related course work.

Rites of Passage

by Chaplain Thomas Fraker

EDITOR'S NOTE: This three part series of articles on the problems of young people was originally published in the Bayonet last July. They cause much comment in the community and won the TRADOC Copy Desk Award for "Highest Journalism Standards." The series is published again for the benefit of those who missed the first edition.

Chaplain (Capt.) Fraker, presently in the Alcohol and Drug Abuse Control Office, came to Fort Benning in February, 1969. Before that, he spent 12 years as the pastor in a Methodist Church and was a Conference Director of Youth Work and worked part-time in Special Police work for drug abuse. He served six years military active duty and spent three years in the Reserves.

Chaplain Fraker is a Vietnam veteran, a Master Paratrooper and Pathfinder. He began his work in the Drug Abuse Control Office in January, 1972.

From his experiences in working with youth over the past several years, Chaplain Fraker has become convinced that there are three basic reasons why kids experiment with most deviant behavior such as drug abuse, streetgang fighting, sexual promiscuity, theft and so forth. This series of articles deals with these causes and is based on the premise that people have basic needs which they will try to satisfy; if society does not provide satisfactory acceptable ways of satisfying these needs, they will try deviant ways.

In this, the first of the series, Chaplain Fraker discusses social conditions contributing to these problems. In the second he will discuss why young people experiment with drugs and the challenges of maturation. The third article deals with the requirement for a definite period when a boy realizes he's become a man and when a girl realizes she's become a woman.

★★★

One of the grossest flaws in our social structure is the absence of rites of passage. The fact is that there is little or no place for kids to realize adulthood, to have a responsible cause, to work for a "now" goal, to conquer their mountains. There are few jobs available (who needs one, anyhow, with parents' affluence?), and playing all day gets boring. The fight kids are waging for the establishment to take a hard look at itself is also filling a desperate void for kids in our social structure. The very fight itself gives them something to do, a way to belong, to feel important. The attitudes and actions of many adults convey the impression that kids from 12 through 20 are worthless — worse than worthless, a real burden — to modern families. Kids often band together to fight the establishment and thereby fill a void in their growth experience. The rebels with whom I have talked seem to be saying:

"WE HAVE FOUND A CAUSE, AN IDEA, A PRINCIPLE, A BELONGING FOR WHICH TO FIGHT AND HERE WE FEEL IMPORTANT: HERE WE ARE NEEDED: HERE WE CAN BE WORTH SOMETHING."

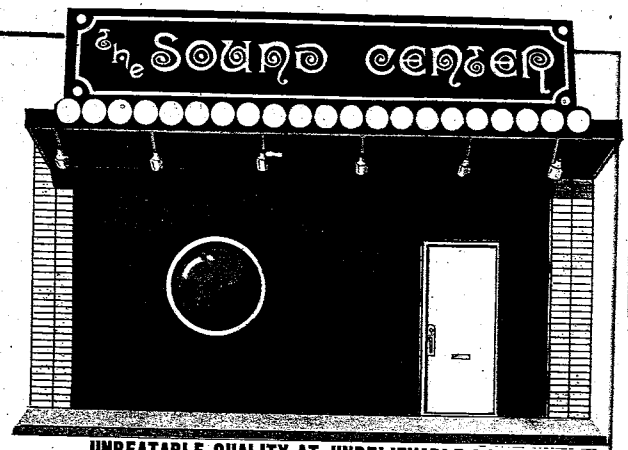
Another group of kids "tune in, turn on, and drop out" with drugs rather than engage in the struggle for living highs. These become the emptiest, most pitiful persons in our society. Those who completely drop out with drugs are accepting the voids as a way of life and using chemicals as a panacea. Drugs then become either an escape from meaningless community relationships or a means of personal involvement in community life. To be spanked is better than to be ignored, to be failed for rebellion is better than to be left out. But what young people really want is to be a real, useful part of society, of life. Instead, they feel they are being pushed out onto the fringes of life.

We have wined them, and dined them, and danced with them, and made life one big party, and not allowed them the maturation process of planning, practicing, cooking, paying, cleaning up, and being sober enough to drive home. Can we really wonder that they think life is all flowers, and dancing, and magic pills, and temper-fits?

We have made adulthood seem to be Olympus, and adults seem to be gods beyond reproach. We lead kids to vaguely expect to wake up one day and suddenly be adult with no doubts, fears, flaws, hurts, and loneliness; but they have seen our feet of clay, and know that adults are not perfect. If only we would say, "I hurt, too," or, "I get lonely," or, "I'm tempted to (and do) cheat." But we seldom let them know us for real; and kids with dreams of perfection demand actualization now. Frustrated and not understanding the impossibility of their demands, they turn to any relief-escape available. They turn to the only real world they know, the only real people they can experience — their peers.

No drug abuser I have known had a close relationship with a responsible adult. The rite of passage to be fully viable must take place in an intimate responsible relationship with an adult who guides and accepts the youth into his responsible world. For a youth to have a dynamic personal hero to whom to belong is a salvation experience of both selfhood and responsible belonging, and thereby fills the basic dual need of growing up. Kids will reach toward the highest example they know. One young man said of his "hero on the block":

"HE NEVER TOLD ME NOT TO DO DRUGS. HE NEVER LECTURED ME ABOUT BEING STRAIGHT. HE JUST LIVED AN EXCITING LIFE. HE WAS REAL, HONEST, AND I WANTED TO BE LIKE HIM."



This is filling the void with a viable alternative. This is being the priest at a youth's ritual of passage to adulthood. When youths do not have strong adult compaions to guide the passage to adulthood, they often are thwarted in their growth and become emotionally immature. Some seek substitutes, such as marriage, drugs, or communes, and some just drop out.

UNBEATABLE QUALITY AT UNBELIEVABLE LOW PRICES!

PIONEER SX-525

Stereo on a budget can have a lot of the power and a lot of the frills of very expensive stereo, as this superlative new AM-FM receiver from Pioneer so amply proves. Offering the music listener up to 72 watts of music power, sensitive FM tuner reception, highly advanced circuitry and a full choice of program sources, the SX-525 offers more important extras than many receivers priced much, much higher. It features finely balanced, dynamic stereo sound — and gives you more power than you'll ever really need to fill a large room with music. Moreover, it is Pioneer-built and Pioneer-guaranteed, and in stereo that says just about everything. $259.95.

Dual 1216

AUTO STANDARD TURNTABLE

The 1216 should probably be considered Dual's "best buy!" In addition to all of Dual's "standard" features, it has an anti-skating system with two separate calibrations; one for conical-styli, one for elliptical styli. (This is identical to the system used in the 1218 and 1229.) The 1216 platter is a one-piece die-casting that weighs a full four pounds. Dual's powerful hi-torque motor brings the platter to full speed in less than a quarter turn, and maintains speed within 0.1% throughout a wide range of line voltage variations. Special low-friction bearings assure flawless tracking at as low as 0.75 gram. $139.50

A real family - favorite recipe doesn't require a lot of work or prior planning. It can be quick, easy and economical. Try this one for lunch, dinner or campouts:

SLOPPY-JOES

1½ lbs. ground beef
1 can Chicken Gumbo Soup
½ jar Chili Sauce
Small onion, chopped
½ teaspoon mustard
for 4 to 6

Brown meat, season with salt and pepper if desired. Add remaining ingredients, mix well. Heat thoroughly.

Serve on hamburger buns or bread, as open or closed sandwiches. A simple or fancy green salad goes well.

If you can't make up your mind between making your husband's favorite cherry pie or your favorite peach pie, combine them with this tasty. . .

CHERRY-PEACH PIE

3 C peeled, sliced peaches (fresh or canned)
2 C pitted tart cherries
¾ C sugar
¼ C cornstarch
1 Tb. lemon juice
2 Tb. butter or Margarine
(Recipe for double pie crust)

In bowl, combine peaches, cherries and sugar. Let stand at room temperature for 1½ hours. Drain fruit, reserving syrup. Add water to make one cup liquid.

In saucepan, combine cornstarch and syrup. Cook and stir until thickened and boils. Remove from heat and stir in lemon juice.

Fold in drained fruit and turn into pastry lined 9 in. pie plate. Dot with butter.

To make basket-lattice top, roll out remaining pastry, cut 18 strips ¾ inches wide. Weave lattice on baking sheet, generously sprinkle with sugar, keeping strips very close together. Tilt baking sheet over far edge of filled pie and slip lattice onto filling. Trim, seal and flute edge. Bake at 400 oven about 35 min. Cool, serve topped with peach or vanilla ice cream.

197th has first WAC

Sergeant Betty L. Stephens, HHC, 197th Infantry Brigade, became the first WAC to be assigned to the "Forever Forward" brigade since it was reorganized into a Strategic Forces (STRAF) unit last spring.

The only woman assigned to the brigade works as an administrative specialist in the S-1 section. She entered the Army in January 1968, after graduating from Okeechobee High School in Okeechobee, Fla.

Prior to coming to Fort Benning, the 23-year-old WAC served as an administrative supervisor and platoon sergeant at Fort McClellan, Ala. She has also served tours in Japan and at the Pentagon as a communications center specialist.

"I'm not exactly sure if I'll be making a career out of the Army or not," Sergeant Stephens said. "I think I'd like to go back to school and get into nursing."

Meanwhile she spends her spare time sewing and going to sports events.

"So far I'm more than satisfied with the 197th," she said. "Being the only female in the unit doesn't bother me much."

USAIS

The officers' wives of the Office of the Secretary, USAIS met on Oct. 4 for their monthly coffee at the lovely home of Mrs. Gerard Miller in the Woodville Apts., Columbus. Co-hostess was Mrs. Scott Berry.

Mrs. Dan Rickard brought the group up to date on OWC activities and plans. Christmas Bazaar projects were turned in and the ladies are now anxiously awaiting the sale.

Also discussed with great enthusiasm was the trip to Destin which the officers and their families will be taking the end of this month.

The Nov. coffee will be held at the home of Mrs. Paul Mueller.

197th

"The Rock's Support," 2d Bn. 10th Arty, was well represented in Florida, Columbus Day weekend. Nineteen officers, accompanied by their wives and 27 children brought the total number of those enjoying a sun and fun filled vacation at the USAIC Recreation Area, Destin, Fla., to 65.

One of the larger cabins served as a gathering place for games, conversation, and even a shrimp boil Sat. evening. Some of the braver "redlegs" led by LTC Hoglan enjoyed sailing, a few others skied, but most worked hard at just plain relaxing in the sun. Chaplain Bell, the battalion chaplain, led a chapel service on the beach Sun. morning where Communion was offered.

Of those not in attendance at Destin, approximately six couples attended the West Point vs. Georgia Tech football game in Atlanta.

TSB

The monthly coffee of the 1st Bn. 29th Inf. Pioneers Wives Club was held Oct. 3 at C Co. Dining Facility.

New appointments were made to the following, Mrs. Mary Debey, Hospitality Chairman and Mrs. Rita Flagg, Publicity Chairman.

Plans were made for our Halloween party to be held at Kings Pond on Oct. 26 at 8 p.m. It will be a costume party for couples only. All ranks of the 1st Bn. 29th Inf. Price for the tickets will be $3 per couple.

* * *

Our thanks to all the wives of 1st Bn. 29th Inf. who donated their time and baked goods for our bake sale last month. All money from the bake sale will go towards the party.

NCOWC

NCO Wives' Club Ceramic Bingo was held Oct. 3 at the Clubhouse. A covered dish supper was followed by Bingo. Over 100 people attended. Many thanks to Jim Houseal who acted as caller and to all the ladies of the Ceramic Club, who worked so hard to make all the prizes for the evening.

"NOT JUST FUN and GAMES"

The Fort Benning Officers' Wives' Club isn't just a group of women meeting for bridge, luncheons, cooking or sewing classes. True, these activities are part of the OWC, along with many other creative classes and workshops that have been advertised through newsprint, radio and TV.

But a very important OWC committee gets very little coverage, it's Welfare. This very busy group has a year round job looking into requests for financial assistance, gift and clothing items, scholarships or volunteers. There is also the raising of funds for the projects adopted by the OWC Board.

The annual bazaar draws thousands of Christmas shoppers each year, its profits make up a great portion of the funds. Thrift Shop profits are also designated for Welfare projects.

This month the OWC contributed $1000 to Faith School on Fort Benning for the purchasing of band jackets, and the Girl Scouts received $200 for paint and needed supplies for the Girl Scout Hut on Main Post.

A $700 grant went in Sept. to the Douglas School for handicapped children in Columbus. In Aug., the Fort Benning Pony Club received $200 to send "B" team to represent the Southern Region at the National Rally in Omaha, Nebraska.

The OWC also supports Coffee Call at Martin Army Hospital one day a month and supply 36 layette sets to the MAH Nursery to be given to needy families.

GET INVOLVED

The OWC Publicity Committee, headed by Chairman, Marsha Graham and Co-Chairman Jane Macpherson is responsible for informing the public of all OWC activities. The committee publicizes events through newspaper articles, radio and television coverage, the weekly Femline column, and posters.

According to Mrs. Graham, "We get the news to the people." Working with the publicity committee is an exciting way to become involved and meet many of the interesting personalities here at Fort Benning. The rewards are very satisfying.

"A journalism background is not necessary to work on the committee, just a willingness to volunteer a little time and energy. We have a place for anyone interested in writing, interviews, TV and Radio shows, artwork, or typing."

Anyone interested in working with the publicity committee should call 682-0655 or 687-8501 for further information.

PICTURE FRAMING CLASS BEGINS. Taught by Mrs. Herman Petke, this course saves you money by teaching you to make your own frames for needlepoint, crewel, canvas painting, watercolors and prints. You will learn to construct frames that are unique and individual from stock molding, to mat pictures, to construct frames for glass and various finishes for frames. You will buy your own equipment for constructing the frames but materials will be furnished from the $12.00 fee for the class. Three sessions are scheduled from 9 a.m-noon, beginning Tues. Nov. 6.

Other classes offered by the OWC follow, for further information on the class of your choice, call the appropriate phone number.

CROCHET. Mrs. H. A. Furman, Classes begin Oct. 31 and run for 4 weeks for $3.00. Sign up by calling 563-5469.

Fall Rally

Protestant Women of the Chapel schedule workshop

Miss Lisa Sergio, Washington, D. C., will be the Protestant Women of the Chapel Fall Rally speaker and workshop leader on Friday, Oct. 26, 9:30 a.m. until 2:30 p.m. at The Infantry Center Chapel Annex. Her theme will be "The Feminism of Jesus".

Miss Sergio, born in Florence, Italy, was Europe's first woman commentator and official English interpreter for the Facist dictator, Mussolini. When his despotic objectives were revealed, Miss Sergio became one of Facism's loudest opponents. The following year, through the aid of Marconi, the inventor of radio, she escaped Italy and reached the United States.

She then became NBC network's first woman commentator on broadcasts from the Metropolitan Opera in New York and, according to Variety's list, one of the nation's 20 leading news commentators.

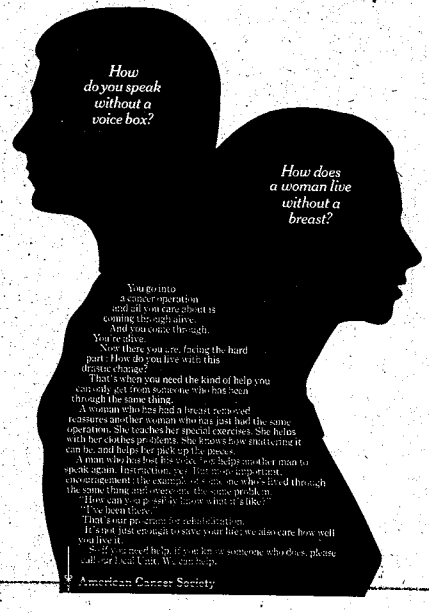
While serving as a Danforth Visiting Lecturer from 1961 - 1972 under the Association of American Colleges, she lectured at more than 175 colleges and universities in the United States. She has lectured throughout India and Pakistan and in several Latin American countries. For the U. S. Department of State in 1968 and 1970, under the sponsorship of Protestant Women of the Chapel, she spoke at U. S. military installations throughout Europe.

Miss Sergio has served on two Presidential committees on International Cooperation, and currently conducts a weekly Sunday morning broadcast in Washington, D. C. called "Prayer Through the Ages". She has served on the National Board of Church Women United and the Department of Information of the Episcopal Diocese of Washington, D. C.

Her books include an anthology of Prayers of Women, I Am My Beloved, And A Measure Filled.

The recipient of broadcasting and other awards, Miss Sergio holds three honorary degrees from American universities and was made a Chevalier of the Legion of Honor of France by the French Government in recognition of her work as a news commentator.

During Miss Sergio's visit to Fort Benning, she will also lead a retreat for the Senior High Protestant Youth of the Chapel (Follow Me) Oct. 26 at 5 p.m. in the USAIC Recreation Area. She will speak at TIC Chapel worship services on Oct. 28 at 9:30 a.m. and 11 a.m. on the Role of Faith in the Age of Technology; and, after a family lunch at the Chapel Annex, she will conduct a question-and-answer period on Christian Freedom Involves Responsibility.



Environmental workshop films

The last four films in the Fort Benning Environmental Workshop's Fall Film Festival will be shown on Oct. 24 and Oct. 31 at 10 a.m. in the Officers Wives Club Lounge.

On Wednesday, Oct. 24, two films entitled "There Will Be A Slight Delay" and "Auto Environment" will be shown. According to Mrs. Muriel Anderson, chairman of the Environmental Workshop, "These films should better help us understand the causes and possible solutions to our transportation crisis. None of us is willing to give up our family car. But we don't like traffic jams, gas rationing, or polluted air, either. Ride your bike to this one."

On Oct. 31, the last two films of the series, "Buddhism, Man and Nature" and "Man and the Environment: Primitives to Present" will be shown. Mrs. Anderson said, "These films ask the questions: what is man's relationship to nature? Must even civilized man live in harmony with nature?" She added, "We hope to come up with some good philosophical thoughts, both Eastern and Western, from these films."

A 50 cents fee will be charged for each film to cover the cost of film rental. For more information, contact Mrs. Muriel Anderson at 687-4979.

Wives Club announces Arts and Crafts sale

Columbus College Faculty Wives Club is happy to announce its annual Fall Market, Arts and Crafts Sale. This year's market will be held on Nov. 10, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the Columbus College Davidson Center cafeteria. Tables are $5 each, and backdrops are available upon request. Food service will be available.

Bring paintings, household articles, ceramics, toys, decoupage and other articles to sell or buy. Individuals or groups may participate. This is an excellent opportunity to buy those holiday gifts in advance or use this sale as a fund raising event for your club.

Proceeds from this sale will be contributed to the club's scholarship fund.

Details concerning the Fall Market may be obtained by calling Mrs. Fred Scanling, chairman — 322-3549; Mrs. Albert VanCleave — 322-7042, or Mrs. John Talburt — 563-4452.

Engineers lead the way

Hq. and Spt. Co., 1st Bn., 29th Inf. (THE PIONEERS) believes practical exercises area an important part of the learning process.

One of the classes that the Engineers support is Field Fortification and Camouflage. It in these classes that students from the Infantry School learn the techniques and skills of Engineers. Students are taught to tie various types of barbed wire, the construction of foxholes, how to use obstacles to avoid detection, and a myriad of other tactics involved in field fortification. In addition, the Engineers provide demonstrators to illustrate Teaching Points.

One of the first demonstrations students see is the proper and improper method of using tactics, and natural surroundings for camouflage.

Staff Sergeant James Turner, non commissioned officer in charge of the engineer platoon for this problem, said, "When you are learning something like field fortification, you just have to teach the course in the field." There is nothing as effective on a student, as practical application of what he has learned, a two hour block of instruction in the bleachers prior to beginning the physical aspect of the problem is enough 'classroom' time in my opinon. . ."

In addition to teaching classes such as this one, the Engineer platoon supports other school problems with flame support and demolition support. But if all their troop support missions, the Engineers seem to have a preference for teaching field fortification, according to Second Lieutenant Darrell Winterton.

"Field fortification and camouflage is not just another problem to the men, they really get involved in it. They know that what they are helping teach the students, may very well save their lives one day, and they really put out an extra effort for this class."

Winterton takes a lot of pride in his Engineers. He personally supervises every phase of their training tactics. Whether the Engineers are constructing double apron fences or shaping charges at Brown Demolition Range, they do it in the highest of the PIONEER traditions. The unit crest, each soldier proudly displays on his fatigue cap exemplifies the way in which they carry out their mission: it reads, "WE LEAD THE WAY."

Older autos present problems when shipped overseas

Unless you are planning to transport an auto parts store with you, beware of shipping personally owned vehicles overseas, if they are six years or older. According to information received from Training and Doctrine Command Ft. Monroe, Va. You will run into some headaches trying to obtain repair parts.

Studies by overseas processing ports show that 10-15 per cent of all POVS shipped overseas by members of the armed forces are six years or older. At the end of their tour, most owners of these older vehicles sell them to other service personnel. As a result, approximately 65 per cent of the privately owned vehicles of military personnel in Europe are six years old or older. A similar ratio exists in the Pacific areas.

Overseas exchange systems DO NOT maintain inventories of repair parts for these older vehicles. They do however, attempt to obtain them for customers on a special order basis. These special orders usually are subject to a long delivery time lag.

This supply problem does not apply to "Parts common," such as, spark plugs, points and condensers, light bulbs, thermostats, etc., which have a wide application to many makes and models, old and new.

197th soldier receives Incentive Award

Specialist Four Craig Bailey, Company D, 197th Support Battalion, 197th Infantry Brigade, has received a Bailey suggested a way to save time and manpower in the removal of the heads and manifolds of 2½-and 5-ton truck engines. Bailey's idea cut the number of man hours required for this operation from 12 to two.

"Men used to miss lunch or work late at night trying to repair all the engines that needed manifolds and heads removed," explains Bailey. Now they can complete work on six engines in the time it used to take to complete one.

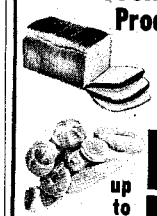
Bailey rigged a hoist on an I-beam and connected it to the engine. By loosening a few bolts, he could remove both the manifolds and heads at the same time.

The Department of the Army estimated that the first year savings from this idea would be $34,937.50.

Bailey's citation from Department of the Army read, "His positive participation in the Army suggestion program has immeasurably contributed to the economical accomplishment of maintenance operations and reflects great credit upon himself, the Directorate for Maintenance of the Army Incentive Award Program. ceived $871 under the Denance Operations and The United States Army.

Family practice change

After-duty hours for Family Practice Clinics No. 1 and No. 2 have been changed by Martin Army Hospital. Before 8 a.m. or after 4:30 p.m. on weekdays, or any time on weekends and holidays, patients should call the information desk at the hospital at 544-2041 for service.



When calling, give your name and the Family Practice Clinic you visit during duty hours. The clerk at the information desk will call the Family Practice physician on duty, who will then call you and discuss your problem.

If he feels it is necessary for you to see a physician, he will arrange to see you personally within a short time in the Emergency Room of the Hospital. If he does not consider it essential for you to see a physician at that time, he will give you advice as to when and where to see a doctor.

Family Practice Clinic No. 1 is located in Building 324, next to the hospital annex, and Clinic No. 2 is on the first floor of Martin Army Hospital.

Reserve Training is Profitable

Joining the Army Reserve gives a soldier who has just been discharged from active duty a chance at some benefits he may not know about.

If you enter an Army Reserve unit when you leave the active Army, you come into the unit with the rank and rate of pay you have at the time of your separation.

A corporal or specialist fourth class (E-4) with three years of active duty receives $59.40 for 16 hours of work a month, usually on a weekend, or $712.80 a year. He also draws his present rate of pay for his rank in the two weeks of annual training held each year, bring the total to around $1,000 a year.

Promotions come rapidly because there are many openings for qualified veterans, both men and women. Friends in the Reserve Unit in your town may be able to help you find a civilian job that makes use of your Army skills. They know their way around, and can help you get settled in your civilian life.

The Reserve is especially interested in veterans these days because they are familiar with the military and can be helpful in training people without prior service in the ways of the Army. PX and commissary privileges are available during monthly unit training assemblies and on annual training.

Servicemen's Group Life Insurance is also available for members of the Army Reserve during the time they spend at training assemblies or on annual training.

There are opportunities for Reservists in more than 3,000 units across the country, in specialties including combat, combat support, medical, civil affairs, military police and transportation units and many others.

For more information, call Sergeant Major Leonard Brubaker, Fort Benning's Army Reserve in-service recruiter, at 545-4132 or 545-2710, or go by his office in Building 35 any time from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Mondays through Fridays.

Drug Prevention Week

President Nixon's Special Action Office for Drug Abuse Prevention has designated Oct. 21-27, Drug Prevention Week, in a nationwide effort to activate public interest in the area of drug abuse prevention and control.

The Fort Benning Alcohol Drug Abuse Control Office (ADCO) reports that it will be "business-as-usual" at this installation. Experience has indicated that "large, one-shot crash programs" are not really effective in the long run unless the community can perpetuate the motivation. Fort Benning has operated a viable drug-alcohol program with outstanding results for more than two years. And "business-as-usual" does not mean just sitting around waiting for something to happen.

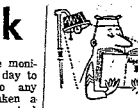
Drug abuse is a community concern and requires community action. To help promote and maintain liaison and cooperation between military and civilian agencies, an ADCO representative will speak at the Metro Exchange Club during the week and the chief of the Columbus Alchemy House will be the guest speaker at the next meeting of the Fort Benning Alcohol and Drug Dependency Intervention Council.

The 34th Medical Battalion will conduct a Problem-Solving Seminar to become more knowledgeable concerning street drugs being abused in this area; to become aware of the reasons for drug abuse; and to better understand what is being done at Fort Benning in support of the Army drug programs.

The Alcohol and Drug Control Office will also support discussions on drug abuse prevention at East Highland United and Saint Marks United Methodist Churches.

The crisis phone lines will continue to be monitored 24 hours a day to lend assistance to any caller who has taken a drug overdose, is on bad acid trip, makes threats of suicide, or just wants to ask a few questions. Immediate service is obtained by simply dialing 545-LIVE.

Traditionally, the communications gap between parent and teen has been staggering. Today, the subject of drugs has made it seem even wider. Hopefully, Drug Abuse Prevention Week will serve as the catylist for open-minded, honest discussion on both sides.



Recycling more convenient

The Environmental Management Division has placed containers for recyclable paper, glass and cans at the Custer Terrace shopping area. Instead of taking recyclable materials to the Recycle Point on Gaudette Street.

Families who want to contribute to the post recycling effort may leave them in the containers there to be picked up later.

Dempster Dumpsters have also been placed at Wilson, Wilbur, Dexter, White and Faith schools to be used for discarded recyclable paper from each school. More dumpsters will be made available to the other schools as soon as possible.

The Recycling Point is open weekdays from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. and containers have also been placed outside the fence around the area for people who want to leave recyclable materials there after hours.

Field problem provides challenge

What started out to be a routine field problem, turned out to be a challenging experience for the members of the 2nd Evacuation Hospital, of the 34th Medical Battalion.

An alert was called about 3:30 a.m. Sept. 25. Lieutenant Colonel Jerry D. Hahn, 34th commander met with First lieutenant Richard R. Beauchemin, 2nd Evac commander to discuss location of the field hospital and preferred route of travel. Upon his return to the company, Beauchemin briefed his commanders and other key personnel.

After the hospital personnel were deployed to the training area chosen as the site for the field hospital, they established a headquarters and a defense perimeter. Their next mission was to erect staff tents, to shelter equipment necessary for a hospital to function efficiently. Tents were provided for admission and disposition, X-ray, preoperative ward, surgery, laboratory, medical wards, laundry service, and supply service. Hospital food service personnel provided meals and dining facilities.

During this period of organization, and throughout the entire exercise, the hospital was hit repeatedly with gas attacks, small arms fire, air strikes, simulated nuclear attacks and mass casualty situations.

Hospital staff worked around the clock in 12 hour shifts receiving patients which had sustained all type of injuries.

"Despite the long working hours and the constant threat of aggressor attacks, the medics continued to perform their duties in an outstanding manner, in the tradition of the Medical Corps," said Beauchemin.

Other battalion units involved in the problem were the 498th Medical Detachment, the 926th Medical Detachment, the 546th Medical Company, 690th Medical Company, 5th Medical Detachment, 261st Medical Detachment and Headquarters and Headquarters Detachment.

Under headquarters came S-1, S-3 and S-4. S-1 was responsible for taking care of all actions and requisitions for replacing personnel and any other administrative work.

S-3 was in charge of the overall training, plans and operation during the problem and advised the commander of the situation taking place and made plans for the battalion approval such as medical commitments,and the training the battalion underwent.

"Personnel from S-3 did exceptionally well. We acted as the control center for the battalion headquarters. This field problem was mere realistic in giving the men the feeling of what actually happens in the field," said second lieutenant Lee Driggers, battalion S-3.

S-4 helped units with supply problems and provided guidance in that area.

"The field problem presented a unique challenge for S-4 in that coordination and control had to be exercised among its members, many of whom had very little or no field experience, in providing the logistical needs of the administrative sections, ensuring proper and expedious transporting of equipment of all sections said First lieutenant Curtis Tribble, battalion S-4.

The 546th Medical Company provided emergency treatment for patients until they were evacuated.

The 690th Medical Company transported patients back to the hospital by ground and the 498th provided air evacuation. The determination to use ground or air transportation depended on the ground and air situation and the condition of the patient.

Providing glasses and prescriptions for glasses was the job of the 5th Medical Detachment. The 251st Medical Detachment took care of the medical equipment such as repairing of the X-ray machine.

The 926th Medical Detachment checked field sanitation and mess areas to insure proper sanitation.

Most of the simulated casualties taken were evacuated by air. Upon arrival at the hospital the extent of injuries were determined and the wounded soldier was sent to a ward. From the ward he was released or sent to surgery. Emergency dental work was also provided.

More than half of the patients were stretcher patients in the surgical ward. In the orthopedic ward most injuries were fractures. Some of the patients were taken to the operating room during the middle of the night. All the paperwork done throughout the whole problem was accomplished just as it would be in a regular hospital.

Although attempts were made to hinder the hospital's mission by enemy air strikes and ground attacks, the 2nd Evac kept its bearing and proceeded to carry on with their job.

"The field problem over-all showed the soldiers of the 34th Medical Battalion what the unit looked like in the field, what problems can arise, the proper use of a protective mask during gas attacks, the proper procedures in loading the field gear on the trucks and how to set up the unit in the field," said Ira F. Myers, battalion sergeant major.

Medics receive awards

Soldiers from the 34th Medical Battalion are medics first, but many of them have varied interests and activities in which they excel.

First lieutenant Dale R. Overmann of the 546th Medical Compnay recently returned from a five-week TDY trip in which he represented the company, as well as Fort Benning, on the All-Army Slow Pitch Softball Team.

After spending three weeks at Fort Carson, Colo. at the Army trial camp, Overmann was selected to represent the Army in the Interservice tournament held at Kelly Air Force Base, San Antonio, Tex.

Although the Army team didn't fair very well, Overmann played well enough to take the Interservice All-Star team which made the journey to Cleveland, Ohio to participate in the National Softball Tournament.

Captain Lanny R. Bassham, 690th Med. Co. commander, will represent the United States in the shooting championship of the Amerieas held at Mexico City, Oct. 20-28.

Bassham qualified for the championship by placing second in the National Championship at Phoenix, Ariz. held in June. Bassham was a silver medal winner in the Munich Olympics, 1972.

First Sergeant Johnny L. Portwood, also of the 690th, received the Army Commendation Medal recently for meritorious service by the U.S. Army Health Service Command, Fort Sam Houston, Tex.

Privates Lloyd Davis and Jeffery Crawford, both of the 2nd Evacuation Hospital received a Letter of Appreciation for outstanding professional medical support to the Leon Association for Retarded Children during the period Aug. 12-18.

During that week they spent long hours preparing medication for some 30 children.

They were also on hand for any emergency which came up medically. The letter was sent by Colonel James E. Coleman, professor of military science.

34th Medical Battalion supports post

The 34th Medical Battalion, commanded by lieutenant colonel Jerry D. Hahn, provides command and control for medical units at Fort Benning. It also coordinates field medical support and evacuation for post activities to include Ranger training sites located at Dahlonega, Ga. and Eglin Air Force Base, Fla.

The 34th and its attached units also assist the staff at Martin Army Hospital. During the summer months, the battalion plays a large part in assisting and evaluating the training of Reserve and National Guard units on active duty for training at Fort Benning.

Units assigned to the 34th Battalion provide a variety of medical services in a combat situation and here at Fort Benning each unit has been assigned specific missions in support of the Infantry Center.

In combat, the 2nd Evacuation Hospital is responsible for providing hospital services for all classes of patients within its zone of responsibilities. Here at Fort Benning, it has a mission of providing medical support for Airborne training, Ranger training, firing exercises, tactical exercises and other activities where medical support may be needed.

There are three medical companies under the battalion which have specific post missions.

The 690th Medical Company supports the same type training activities as the 2nd Evacuation Hospital. It provides basic medical treatment and ground evacuation for patients.

The mission of the 498th Medical Company is to provide air evacuation of patients in critical condition and quick movement of medical personnel and accompanying equipment and supplies to meet critical requirements.

The 546th Medical Company mission is to provide emergency treatment for patients until evacuated. It furnishes drivers and medical aidmen to the training area where injuries are most likely to occur.

The battalion has five medical detachments, each with a specific mission at Fort Benning.

The 675th and the 676th medical detachments are capable of providing dispensary service for approximately 1,000 troops. Each company alternates working with the 2nd Evacuation Hospital and Troop Medical Clinic 2 on main post.

The 5th Medical Detachment's mission is to furnish personnel and equipment for the repair of spectacles in combat. Here at Fort Benning it provides equipment and personnel to assit the optometry staff of Martin Army Hospital.

In combat, the mission of the 261st Medical Detachment is to perform maintenance on medical equipment for medical facilities that support a force of 50,000 troops. Their post mission is to provide medical maintenance support for all units authorized medical equipment.

The 926th Medical Detachment's mission is to investigate, evaluate and recommend actions to improve sanitation of food services, facilities, troop housing, water supplies, waste disposal, industrial hygiene, and other environmental problems. In addition, personnel assist post facilities in the prevntive medicine control program.

Last year, the 34th Medical Battalion furnished field medical coverage for more than 19,000 military troops and is well ahead of that pace this year. In addition to the above, critically sick or injured civilian personnel are transported, usually by air, for humanitarian reasons.

"The 34th strives to maintain the highest degree of proficiency in support of the U.S. Army Infantry Center as well as constantly preparing for our combat mission," said Lt. Col. Hahn.

Live and Let Die

When three British agents are murdered, the head of British Secret Service assigns the case to James Bond (Roger Moore) who jets to New York and narrowly escapes an ambush. Bond tails his adversary Kananga (Yaphet Kotto) and his tarot-reading seer, Solitaire (Jane Seymour), into Harlem. In a far-reaching search, filled with every conceivable device for mayhem, Bond, with his usual aplomb, locates Kananga and proceeds to blow him to bits. This is Bond at his best, pure unadulterated entertainment with action in every scene. There is some dialogue that is a bit mature in this film.

Man of La Mancha

During a religious festival at the time of the Spanish Inquisition, author Miguel de Cervantes (Peter O'Toole) is jailed for offending the church. He is imprisoned and then given a mock trial. Cervantes enacts his tale of Don Quixote, an aged man who fancies himself a knight. Cervantes becomes Don Quixote and prisoner Aldonza (Sophia Loren) plays the barmaid whom the knight regards as his fair Dulcinea. This is an entertaining film of the ageless classic that contains music which made such a successful stage presentation.

40 Carats

Vacationing in Greece, fortyish Liv Ullmann meets Edward Albert, 22, and has a night of love. Back in New York, she pursues her realty business, contends with ex-husband Gene Kelly, an actor and precocious Deborah Raffin, their 17-year-old daughter. Albert re-enters the picture as an escort for Raffin. He tells Ullmann he loves her and she decides to return to Greece and marry him. A meeting with his parents causes Ullmann to change her mind blaming the age difference as a major factor.

The Boy Who Cried Werewolf

Kerwin Matthews portrays a business man who is attacked by a werewolf. His son is aware of what has gone on but no one believes him since he has recently been traumatized by his parent's divorce. Matthews wreaks much havoc whenever he turns into a werewolf. His estranged wife goes with them on a mountain trip and soo nrealizes her so nwas right about his werewolf story. This campy horror film is not suitable fare for the younger set.

173rd Airborne

'Sky Soldier' monument to be unveiled

"This Memorial is dedicated to the 173rd Airborne Brigade (SKY SOLDIERS) — Those who served, those who fought, those who have fallen and those who continue to serve. TIEN BIEN 25 June 1963 - 12 January 1972."

FORT CAMPBELL, Ky., —A monument in memory to the "Sky Soldier" 173rd Airborne Brigade, was unveiled at ceremonies in front of the Robert F. Sink Library on Oct. 4.

The memorial was erected by the 173rd Sky Soldier Association. It's inscription reads "AIRBORNE ALL THE WAY" and is dedicated to Sky Soldiers who served, fought and fell in combat, with the Brigade from June 25, 1963 until January 14, 1972.

Two former commanders attending the ceremonies were Lieutenant General John R. Deane Jr., commander from December 1966 until September 1967, presently assigned as deputy director, Defense Intelligence Agency, Wash. D. C. and Major General M. C. Ross, the brigade's last commander from September 15, 1971 until deactivation on January 14, 1972. He is presently assigned as deputy director of Operations, Department of the Army, Wash. D.C.

The 173rd has 11 Medal of Honor winners — nine awarded posthumously. The other two were invited to the ceremony. They are: Sergeant Lawrence Joel, retired and residing in Winston Salem, N. C. and Staff Sergeant Charles B. Morris assigned with the 82nd Airborne Division at Ft. Bragg, N.C.

Following the unveiling ceremony an informal luncheon hosted by the Sky Soldier Association was held at the Camelot Club for former members of the 173rd and invited guests.

The brigade is a lineal descendant of the 173rd Infantry Regiment, organized in August 1917 as a part of the 87th Infantry Division. The brigade became airborne on the island of Okinawa on June 25, 1963 when it combined with the 2nd Airborne Battle Group, 503 Infantry Combat Team.

On May 5, 1965, the 173rd Airborne Brigade became the first American combat unit to be deployed to the Republic of Vietnam. It was also the first American unit to fight in the infamous War Zone D, a long known Viet Cong stronghold.

During its six and one-half years of service in Vietnam, the brigade compiled an impressive record in combat operations and proved itself an exceptionally worthy U. S. fighting unit.

The 173rd was the first unit to be deployed from Vietnam to the U. S. with men and equipment intact. They were formally welcomed back by the Secretary of Defense Melvin Laird on Sept. 2, 1971 at Ft. Campbell.

On January 14, 1972 the brigade was redesignated the 3rd Brigade, 101st Airborne Division, and is the airborne brigade of the airmobile division.

Drive carefully

Monday we celebrate Veterans Day. Hopefully, we will all enjoy ourselves and return on Tuesday rested, refreshed and ready to resume work once again.

Unfortunately, this weekend will bring sadness to the relatives and friends of at least 500 Americans. It will be remembered as the day they lost a loved one in a traffic accident.

Our soldier losses in automobile accidents are mounting higher and higher. Since July 1, we have lost six men in automobile accidents. Four would have survived had ordinary, safe driving practices been followed. Buckling safety belts could have saved the lives of some of them.

If you plan to drive or ride, be rested, sober and alert. Take rest breaks and wear seat belts.

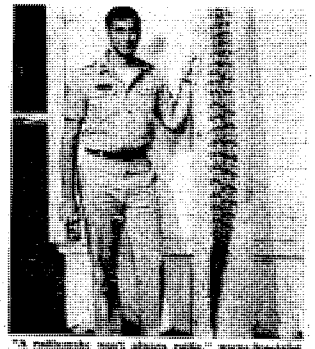
Safety demands sober drivers

Do you think you can drive after drinking alcoholic beverages? Let's see. Scientific experiments with average sized men, weighing 160 pounds, show conclusively that alcohol in the human body slows down reaction time. Reaction time is that period required by the body muscles to react to the impulses of the brain. Alcohol is absorbed quickly and directly into the blood-stream. It affects the brain within a few minutes after drinking. The brain controls our behavior, our driving ability, or vision. Hence, reaction time and behavior are affected soon after drinking.



After drinking 2½ ounces of whisky, the average person is 15 per cent less efficient. His reaction time is lowed. It will take more time and longer distance to stop his car than if he had not been drinking.

Alcochol has four effects on the vision. It causes blurred and double vision. Alcohol reduces side vision. As he becomes intoxicated, the drinkers field of vision is narrowed and shortened. Alcohol reduces the range of vision, so that distant objects are not sighted until he is nearly on top of them. Alcohol interferes with color discrimination, causing an effect similar to color blindness. Confusion of traffic signals is a common cause of accidents involving drinking drivers.

Alcohol creates over-confidence. Drinking drivers think they can make the curve in the road at higher than safe speeds. They are falsely confident that they can pass a car before the oncoming vehicle gets too close.

The solution to the problem of driving under the influence rests with you, the driver. You must decide, in advance of a drinking situation, whether you intend to drink or drive. Decide in advance that you will not drive after taking a drink. Even small amounts of alcohol will influence your driving judgment and reduce your driving performance and lower your driving efficiency.

Don't DRIVE after drinking alcoholic beverages and don't DRINK when you DRIVE.

Four Ennis R. Brooks, psychologieal research specialist of the Infantry Human Research unit, as he displays the hide and head of a rattlesnake. He spotted the five-foot, seven-inch rattlesnake three miles east of Sand Hill last weekend. "This one didn't rattle until he was killed," Brooks reports. . .

Three new Scouts and two tenderfoot Scouts were recognized and 22 skill awards were presented to 10 Scouts and 49 merit badges to 13 Scouts.

New Scouts recognized were Timothy Jenkins, Phillip King and William Richardson. Tenderfoot Scouts were Jan Cunningham and James Sandlin.

Receiving the skill awards were Roy Haskall, Terry Wright, Curtis Wilson, Helmut Schmidt, James Sandlin, William Richardson, Phillip King, Jan Cunnington, David Geoffrion and Timothy Jenkins. Bob Clements, assistant scoutmaster, presented the awards.

Those receiving merit badges were Curtis Wilson, John Sandlin, James Sandlin, Dwight Pinkley, Wayne Mitchell, Marion Lawhorn, Russell Lathers, Michael Geoffrion, David Geoffrion, Jan Cunnington, Rick Clements, Rodney Barham, and Roy Haskall. Presenting the awards were A. A. Clements and R. J. Geoffrion, Scout committee representatives.

In other awards, Curtis Wilson received the Star award, David Geoffrion received his First Class award and Russell Lathers received his Second Class award. Captain Frederic Sieg, Troop 120 Scoutmaster, presented the awards.

Staff Sergeant George N. Robinson, construction foreman of the 43rd Engineers Battalion, discusses landscaping plans with Mrs. Lynn Lovelace, chairmao of Army Community Services' Special Children's Committee. The 43d Engineers are now helping ACS to clean up and landscape the grounds surrounding the Special Children's Activity Building. They have provided 13 men, and equipment to level the grounds, lay new topsoil and seed the area. After the grounds are cleaned up a fence and some recreational equipment will be erected with a $750 donation from the Daughters of the United States Army (DUSA.)

Fort Stewart is located 40 miles south of Savannah, near the small town of Hinesville, Georgia. The reservation, covers about 290,000 acres. The post population varies from several hundred to thousands, with the peak period occurring during the summer when National Guard units are in training.

A fisherman does not need a boat to enjoy the excellent fishing. The Post Outdoor Recreation Section maintains over 30 boats, 20 of which are on trailers. Electric motors and batteries are also available. A post permit is required.

Fishing areas on post include Glisson Pond (over 400 acres) Pineview Lake (200 acres) Pond 20 (2 acres) and Canoochee Dam (600 acres). The Canoochee River on post is wild, full of snakes, gators, and fish. Any of these areas are bass havens, with 8-10 pounders not unusual. Since the lakes are small and shallow the plastic worms, top water plugs and live minnows will produce well, with the six-inch purple Creme Worm being the best bet.

If you're a brim fisherman you owe it to yourself to visit Fort Stewart when the spring rains come. You won't believe the size of the bluegills caught in the spillway overflow from the ponds on post. I saw a number of bluegills that weighed over two pounds. One sergeant had 10 brim, the largest weighed 14 pounds — 2.3 pounds per brim.

Fort Stewart permits camping on several ponds, or motel accommodations are available in nearby towns. The city of Glennville has many motels at reasonable rates; it is also closer to the fishing areas. Fishing tackle required is no different than that used in the Fort Benning area.

Bass fishermen will find better fishing off post than on post, with the exception of the Canoochee River. Local pond owners normally charge $1 and it's well worth it. Two ponds that will make a bass fisherman's tongue hang out are Grovers Pond (40 acres) and Sands Pond (200 acres).

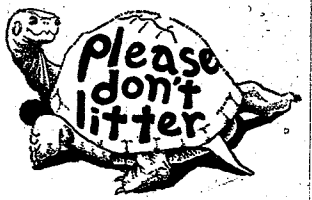
In these two ponds the bass stick close to cover, either cypress trees or moss, or both. A technique that has been very successful is using the small worm with a light weight fished right in the moss. Throw it as far as possible back into the moss and work out slowly, snaking it across the top allowing it to fall free in the open pockets. The majority of strikes will come as the worm falls. Both ponds have plenty of big cypress trees. Cypress trees have tremendous root systems. Cast to both sides of every tree, set the hook hard and quick or you'll be wrapped around the roots. One caution — The cotton mouths are plentiful and like these root systems so be careful when retrieving hang ups.

If your visit is during winter or early spring, a spinner bait worked around the available cover will result in a broken arm if you're not careful. These ponds have some big bass that will hit a spinner bait so hard they set the hook themselves. How big are the bass? Well, the largest one from Grovers Pond was caught a couple years ago — it weighed 17½ pounds. At Sands Pond there is at least one bass that is over 12 pounds — I know because I saw him come up and wallow in the moss as he threw my worm back. Both ponds offer excellent fishing.

Brim fisherman should not overlook the Ogeeche River on Highway 17 between Fort Stewart and Savannah. The brim abound in the eddy dark water. One can load the boat by easing along the bank, pitching crickets around the flooded tree tops. This is brackish water that goes up and down with the tide from the nearby ocean. At low tide the tree tops and logs are exposed and easy to fish. Fish bite best as the tide comes in or goes out. Redbreast are the prevailing species and they generally run bigger than your hand. A day's fishing along the Ogeeche should result in at least 50 brim plus a few catfish. Again though, keep an eye out for old "Charlie No Shoulders" (Snakes). They are plentiful.

Fort Stewart is, to put it simply, a super fishing area.

The Fort Benning Rod and Gun Club will hold a sporting weapons zero and sight in at Brinson Range to help hunters get ready for the coming hunting season.



Hunters will be able to zero hunting rifles or sight in shotguns from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 27 and from noon until 4 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 28.

Hunters need only to bring guns and ammunition. The club will furnish targets and other equipment. Experienced personnel will be available to assist new shooters.

Hunters do not have to be a member of the Rod and Gun Club to use the range. Hunters who do not know where or how their gun is shooting are likely to wound deer that are not recovered. The club feels that the chances of this happening should be reduced to the absolute minimum.

Mike Brickner, chairman of the Rod and Gun Club Hunting Committee said. Every year quite a few deer are shot and wounded by hunters. Most of these deer are never recovered. They escape from the hunter but die somewhere in the woods. We feel that anyone who intends to hunt should be familiar with his weapon. The use of Brinson range is not limited to members of the Rod and Gun Club. We want all hunters to use the facility."

Brinson Range is located on Jamestown Road in the Harmony Church area of the reservation. From Columbus travel south on Highway 27. Turn right on to Eighth Division Road at the second bridge over Highway 27. Turn right on Eighth Division Road to the fire station at the Junction of Jamestown Road. Turn left onto Jamestown Road and proceed to the Brinson Range Signs.

Dependent football

In Pony League action the Tigers blanked the Bears, 9-0, in a hard fought defensive game. In the first quarter kicker John Betke booted a 23 yard field goal to put the Tigers out in front 3-0. The only other score came in the third quarter on a 67 Yard pass play from quarterback Ron Patrick to tight end Tim Karonovich to give the Tigers the victory. Robert Gould recovered two fumbles and Kevin Hicks added an interception to lead the Tiger's defense.

The Pee Wee League Raiders romped over the Vikings 22-0 in dependent football action at Doughboy Stadium. The game was scoreless until the third quarter when John Erickson went in for the score and then added the extra point on a three-yard run. The last two touchdowns came in the fourth quarter. Bobby Mickle scored on a end run. The last score of the game came when quarterback Billy Tarpley ran around end for the score and Bobby Yearout added the extra point to give the Raiders the 22-0 win.

In Doughboy football action the Packers remained the team to beat as they outscored the Warriors 26-20 at Doughboy Stadium.

Tony West started the scoring by running through the Warrior defense for 63 yards and the score. The six point lead didn't last very long as the Warrior's Greg Lang bulled two yards for the touchdown.

In the second quarter Dwight Burnett pulled a quarterback sneak for the Packers' second score but this lead again didn't last very long as a well-executed fourth down pass play caught the Packers sleeping. Maymon Boxter raced 60 yards for the score. Mark Drab ran the extra point in to give the Warriors a 14-12 halftime lead.

Joe Kinder took the second half kick off, faked a reverse, and outran the warriors 67 yards to the goal for a 20-14 Packer lead. The Warriors came back with a score on a 60-yard run by John Mitchell, but the Packers returned with one of their own on a 13-yard run by Martinese Tarrance and then capitalized on the extra point by Tony West to win the game 26-20.

The Biddy League Redskins ended the first half of their season with an impressive 40-0 win over the Bengals. The Bengals, having won the toss, elected to receive and maintained ball control for nearly three minutes of the first quarter, but were unable to score against the Redskin defense.

From the first turn-over until the game ended, the Redskin offensive and defensive elements completely dominated the action. Leading scorer for the Redskins was quarterback Bryan Boucihelion with 14 points. Running backs Teddy Gallardo had 12 points while John Teachey contributed 10 and Jimmy Morgan 2.

Pioneer football

Co A, 1st Bn., 29th Inf. (THE PIONEERS), surprised Battery C, 83rd Arty., in PIONEER flag football League at Harmony Church.

The Artillerymen from C Battery went into the game boasting a first place record of seven wins and one loss. The only loss was to Co. A, two weeks ago, yet the Co. A team has only been able to muster a 5-3 record thus far, for a third place spot in the league standings.

Co. A led by Eddie Thomas, has been awarded the nickname of 'Artillery smashers', as they have been the only team to beat the first place Btry C, 83rd Arty. team, and they have done it twice so far this season.

In the opening minutes of the contest, Battery C, penetrated Co. A territory on two long passes, and got within ten yards of the goal. But the touchdown was not to be for the Artillerymen, as the impregnable Co. A defense held them to the 10-yard line for four consecutive downs.

The game remained scoreless for the duration of the first half, but five minutes into the second half, the Co. A passing team of Davis-Thomas connected for what was to be the only score of the game. Quarterback, Morris Davis got the Co. A team to within 40 yards of the goal line, before he let loose a 38-yard bomb to teammate Eddie Thomas.

The Co. A team, made their xtra point, and led by a score of 7-0. The rest of the game proved uneventful for either side, though both teams put up tremendous efforts for another score.

Engineer Football

One of the more exciting games within the 36th Engineer Group flag football league was played between 15th Finance Company and HHC, 36th. The two teams, although bringing records of 2-3 and 3-2 into the game, played a thriller.

The teams were scoreless until the second quarter when HHC's Bobby Cross intercepted a 15th Finance pass and carried it 30 yards to the end zone for the score. HHC failed to convert the point after touchdown and the score stood at 6-0.

The six point lead held up until 20 seconds were left in the first half. Quarterback Bobby Jones for 15th Finance launched a 40 yard aerial which was tipped by an HHC defender and landed in the hands of 15th Finance receiver Sinclair Calle. He raced the final five yards to the goal to tie the score at 6-6. 15th Finance was also unsuccessful in their point after attempt, leaving the score knotted at 6-6.

The remainder of the game was a defensive battle with both teams threatening, but failing to score. To break the tie at the end of the game, the ball was placed on the mid-field stripe and the two teams alternately ran four plays with the one gaining the most yards being awarded the victory. It appeared as though 15th Finance would be the victor, but on the last play, HHC's Rodney Hartley passed to Larry Woods for 15 yds. to give HHC 36th the necessary yardage to win the game.

PFC Predicto PICKS!

Once again I, Preeicto outdid my unworthy foes, not letting one miserable moron best my unearthly talent for prognostication.

This week I see in my crystal football that those madcap medics from the 34th Medical Battalion will try to put their forceps to this Magician of the midfield but I'll be doing a little operating of my own.

You too can try to outdo the sorcerer of the scoreboard by dailing 545-4622/7841 and asking for PREDICTO!!!

AAU swim meet

The Fort Benning Barracuda Swim Team will host the first Georgia AAU Swim Meet for the 1973-74 season in Briant Wells Field House on Oct. 27-28. Coach Gary Bolton's Barracuda Team will be competing against at least 10 other teams from three states. Outstanding swimmers returning from last year's Barracuda squad include Joe and Anthony Rodriquez, Grace and James Kelly and Kirby Pilcher. They will be swimming against 300 of the best swimmers from the Southeast. It is a developmental swim meet with no cutoff times for entrance. The starting gun for the first race will be at 9 a.m.

Miss World U.S.A. '74 scheduled for Benning

The United States entry in the Miss World competition, Marji Wallace will visit Fort Benning on Wednesday, Oct. 24 to meet and talk to soldiers.

During her visit she will have lunch with the men of the 197th Infantry Brigade, tour Martin Army Hospital, the 36th Engineer Group, and visit the soldiers of the 145th Aviation Battalion at Lawson Army Air Field.

Miss Wallace, a native of Indianapolis, Ind., a former championship swimmer, was selected Sept. 20 as the 1974 Miss World USA.

The 5-foot-4 Miss Indiana World, chosen from among 50 contestants at the annual beauty pageant was crowned by the outgoing Miss World-USA, Lynda Curtis of Arizona.

Miss Wallace will travel to London for the Miss World contest on Nov. 22.

Children in other parts of the world may not have as much as pets. Every month letters are received at the Bayonet office from children who want a pet more than anything else in the world. Some want a pet for a pet than a dog or cat. (Photo by Gary Cathcart).
