5,000 participate in Rod and Gun Club activities

The Rod and Gun Club is the central point for outdoor activities of more than 5,000 men, women and children at Fort Benning.

The clubhouse, located on First Division Road in the Harmony Church area provides a relaxed and rustic setting for reliving exciting moments of a hunting or fishing. Here members relax while they recall the details about the large buck they didn't get or the big bass that got away. Mounted deer heads, turkeys, ducks, various species of fish and rattlesnake skins decorating the club walls offer lasting proof of successful trips to the woods nd waters of the reservation.

Conveniences

Members of the club enjoy numerous conveniences that make outdoor recreation more enjoyable. The lounge is a handy place to pick up a quick sandwich or hot meal before taking to the fields and a good place to relax over a cool drink at the end of the day.

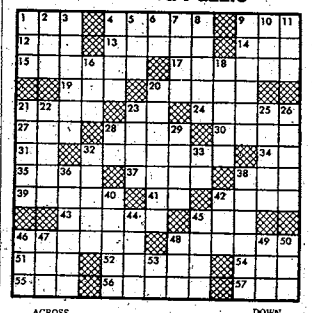
The club sales outlet stocks all types of fishing bait and accessories, shotgun shells and other hunting equipment and has a rental service that allows members to go first class with a minimum expenditure of money.

Members may rent club owned boats located on most of the reservation ponds: Car top carriers are also available for fishermen who want to fish a pond that has no boats. Boat paddles, electric trolling motors, batteries and life perservers are also available on a rental basis.

Competition tough

The club operates four skeet ranges, a trap range and two field archery ranges. The Georgia State archery championships will be held on the ranges July 14-15. Other local, sectional and state shoots have been held on these ranges also.

The club sponsors various types of hunting and fishing contests are held. Each year big deer and small game hunting contests are held. The club also sponsors a monthly fishing contest. Prizes are awarded for the larges bass, bream and catfish. Fishing derbies are held over the weekends of various holidays. Turkey shoots, ham shoots and swap days are some of the other activities to members.



The club does more than enhance outdoor recreation for members. Members actively participate in conservation and ecology programs to improve the fish and wildlife conditions on the reservation. Last year they contributed more than $8,000 toward the Fish and Wildlife program.

The Rod and Gun Club is the post agency for the sale of state hunting and fishing licenses and issue of the post hunting and fishing permits.

Membership open to all

Membership is open to active duty and retired military personnel, civilian government employees working or who retired while working at Fort Benning and their dependents. Civilians not eligible for a regular membership may obtain a limited membership. The limited membership entitles the member to participate in all activities related to the trap and skeet ranges, archery ranges and the clubhouse.

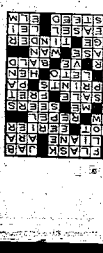
43rd Engineers provide transportation support

A construction engineer battalion is staffed and equipped to move itself. Not only does the 43rd Engineer Battalion (Const) satisfy its own mission requirements, but more and more of the 43E bumper numbers and personnel are being seen throughout the southeast.

Two 10 ton tractors and trailers are carrying an M-60 Tank and Armored Personnel Carrier on the USAIC County Fair Caravan in Mississippi and Louisiana supporting the 197th Unit of Choice Recruiting Program. The Engineers rubbing elbows with the Infantry on this tour are Sp5 Aubrey Newberry and Sp5 Ron Wygal, both of Alpha Company.

The Engineers were also tasked to provide their share of sedan drivers to support the recent Infantry Systems Program Review hosted by USAIC. This committment proved to be quite a challenge for PFC James Carter, a Unit of Choice Draftsman from Bravo Company, 43rd Engineer Battalion (Const.).

PFC Carter and his team escort officer drove around the Infantry Center to acquaint themselves with the areas their VIP would visit. The next step in the sequence of events was to prepare his sedan and himself for a rigorous series of personal inspections. After long hours of work and numerous cans of car wax, PFC Carter signaled to have his car given a No. 1 inspection. With this hurdle out of the way, he stood in line for a final acceptance inspection with the Deputy Post Commander, Brigadier General Latham. When the long awaited inspection began, every man nervously awaited their turn at the proud Infantry Center standards. Once the inspection was completed, PFC Carter picked up his VIP and chauffeured him thru his two day schedule, and finally escorted him to the airport. "This was a great exposure to senior officers, and an experience that more volunteer soldiers should have," said PFC Carter who himself is a Unit of Choice Volunteer.



"YOU'RE RIGHT, HE DOES HAVE CALLUSES ON THE FINGERS. WE HAVE FOR HIM LAST WEEK."

Top notch bricklayer

Pvt. Joseph VanHoozer, Company B, 43rd Engineer Battalion (Const) was recently selected as the outstanding graduate of the Masonary and Bricklaying Class presented by the Portland Cement Company under the direction of the Directorate of Facilities Engineering.

Because of Pvt. VanHoozer's marked enthusiasm and knowledge of Masonary and Bricklaying, he was temporarily promoted to Sergeant (E-5) and was also appointed as the NCOIC of the project to enlarge the brick wall around the Main Post Cemetery. When completed, the five foot high wall will contain some 85,000 bricks.

VanHoozer's enthusiasm, knowledge, and devotion to duty have proven him to be one of the more outstanding members of Company B, 43rd Engineer Battalion (Construction).

Tankers, WACs rap-it-out

The "tankers" of the 2nd Bn., 69th Armor, 197th Inf. Bde. joined Fort Benning's WAC Co. in a unique type of human relations seminar.

A total of 26 participants, from the two units, met in the WAC's "date room" to explore topics of mutual interest and methods to improve seminars in their respective units. The seminar was coordinated by 1st Lt. Mary Paonessa of the WAC Co. and 1st Lt. Triphonia Howard of the 2-69th Armor.

Lt. Col. Watha J. Eddins Jr., commander of the armor battalion, began the program by outlining the educational aspects of the seminars as they are conducted within the 197th Inf. Bde. The 197th Inf. Bde. Race Relations and Equal Opportunity Officer, Capt. Lacy Tyler, talked to the group also in respect to the 197th seminar program.

1st Lt. Curtis Echols of the 2-69th Armor, moderated the discussion between the soldiers and WACs. Many of the participants responded with comments about discrimination between sexes, as well as races. All of those present felt they benefited from the seminar and expressed interest in more programs.

'You grab a line, I'll grab a pole'

The Fort Benning Rod and Gun Club will hold its Memorial Day Weekend Fishing Derby May 26, 27, and 28. Prizes will be offered in three categories: bass, bream, and catfish.

The fisherman with the heaviest fish in each of these categories will win $25 in merchandise at the Rod and Gun Club sales counter. The fisherman with the second heaviest fish in each category will win $20 in merchandise.

Third prize will be $15 in merchandise. A bonus prize of an 11' x 11' tent and four polyester-filled sleeping bags will go to a fisherman who has registered a fish of any size in the contest.

A special bonus prize of a rod and reel and a fishing tackle box will go to a fisherman who has registered for the contest but does not catch any fish.

The contest will begin at 6 a.m., May 26 and end at 4:30 p.m., May 28. Registration must be made at the club before going fishing. Registrations are now being accepted to accommodate those fishermen who want to go immediately to a pond on the morning of May 26.

Entry fees are $1 per individual, or $3 for a whole family. Prizes will be awarded at the Rod and Gun Club at 6 p.m. on May 28. Winners of the bonus prizes must be present at the club at the time the winner is determined.

Those winning merchandize prizes for the heaviest fish caught need not be present. They can pick up their prizes at the club at a later time.

We're building an ideal community for your retirement.

It's strange, but many career military personnel delay thinking about retirement. When they do get around to it, their choices are often limited . . . by many things, including the rising cost of property in desirable areas.

Today, The Deltona Corporation, headed by the famed Mackle Brothers, are building ideal communities in Florida for future retirement . . . with all of the things you'd expect in a hometown . . . and with military hospital, commissary and exchange facilities accessible at a nearby military installation.

The time to make sure you'll have a Florida lifestyle in your future is now. Why? Because you can select the area with greater freedom, you'll deal confidently with a reputable community builder, and you can select a convenient payment plan which will make sure your homesite's paid for and ready when you are. You'll be surprised how little it takes to start. And remember, if tomorrow in Florida is like yesterday, those real estate prices continue to rise. Call, write or drop by today. If you don't plan a sunny future for yourself, who will?

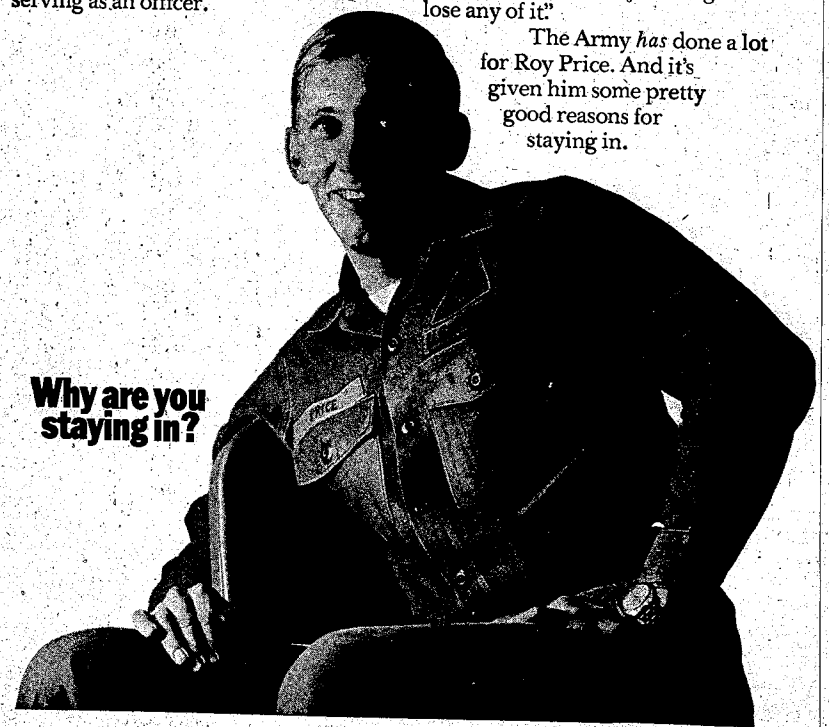
"It's too good to get out."

Sergeant Roy Price has put a lot into his Army career. And he's gotten a lot out of it.

"Maybe it's just me. Maybe I'm lucky. But the more I find out about the Army—what it has to offer, what you can do—the more I'm convinced that staying in was the best move I could make.



"Take college. I've got two years of it already, most of it paid for by the Army. And since I'm reenlisting, I'll be able to finish the other two. When I graduate I'll even have the option of applying for OCS and that'll give me the chance to start serving as an officer.

"The Army tries to help you out in any way they can, from what I can figure. When I finished my tour in Vietnam I asked to be stationed at Ft. Hood, and here I am.

"It all worked out pretty well, because my wife and I just had our first baby—cost about $7.00—and I hate to think what it would've been on the outside.

"When I look at everything—the schooling, the cost of living, where I'm stationed—the Army's done an awful lot for me. I don't know...right now it's just too good to lose any of it."

The Army has done a lot for Roy Price. And it's given him some pretty good reasons for staying in.

BY BILL KLOEB

The Rod and Gun Club Memorial Weekend Fishing Derby starts at 6 a.m. tomorrow morning and will end at 4:30 p.m. on May 28.

This year even those who don't catch a fish will have a chance to win a prize if they come out and register for the contest. The club has allocated $500 in prize money and prizes. Merchandise certificates will go to fishermen registering the largest bream, bass or catfish. A $25 certificate will be awarded for the largest catch in each category, a $20 certificate for the second largest fish and those registering the third largest catch in each category will get a $15 certificate.

A special prize consisting of an 11'x11' tent and four polyester filled sleeping bags will go to some lucky fisherman who registers for the Derby and registers a fish. The special special prize will go to some fisherman who registers for the Derby but fails to catch and register a fish. Winners of merchandise certificates need not be present when winners are announced. All other winners must be present at the club when winners are announced at 6 p.m. May 28.

Complete lists of rules for the contest may be obtained at the Rod and Gun Club located on First Division Road in the Harmony Church Area.

Mother is watching

About this time of the year many people trooping through the outdoors stumble across the young of wild animals. Fawns, beautifully spotted, baby rabbits, racoon, squirrels, foxes, various birds and even baby alligators can be found in the wilds at this time of the year. This is nature's reproduction season. One of the most common reactions is to wonder where the mother has gone. Maybe the young have been abandoned.

They haven't been abandoned in almost every instance. The mother is not around because there are humans around. The mother probably left the area at the first sign of humans to try to decoy them from her young. If the young are not molested and the nest area is not disturbed the mother will return to her young. The chances are she has been hiding nearby all of the time.

Well even if they haven't been abandoned wouldn't they make swell pets? All wild animal young are beautiful cuddly things. The answer to this question is another big NO. Wild animals, even the baby type should not be handled because of many reasons. Humans can be harmed seriously by even a very small scratch from some of these young animals. They can even be harmed by some parasite that has taken the animal as a host. Handling baby racoons, bobcats, foxes and other young of rabies carrier type animals also presents a great danger. Humans who insist on handling the offspring of larger animals run the risk of being attacked by the parent.

There is also risk for the young animals when they are handled. They live a precarious life at best. The mortality rate of young wild animals is very high and a seemingly insignificant handling may tip the scales against them. For every disease we can catch from it seems they can catch two for us. Then of course there is a good chance that the mother will really abandon the young after they have been libetally tainted with human odors. There is also the possibility that predators will be drawn to the area by an extended concentration of human and animal odors.

Wild pets

Wild animals taken as pets very seldom live. They usually die within a few days after taken. Death is probably caused by starvation because they refuse to take nourishment in their new environment. If they do live they are susceptible to disease and rarely grow to be healthy animals. Those who do beat the odds and survive usually outgrow their welcome but would not survive if they were returned to their natural habitat.

In addition to the reasons above there is the law. It is against the law to hold wildlife without a special permit. The Game and Fish Division of the Department of Natural Resources is the only agency authorized to issue these permits. They have placed a definite limit on the number of wild animals that will be held in captivity by establishing a policy that no new permits will be issued.

R-G Club thinks about its members

The Rod and Gun Club tries to furnish their members a wide variety of facilities and privileges to make their membership more enjoyable.

From the front sales outlet, members can purchase post hunting and fishing license, and Georgia State hunting and fishing license.

Members can also rent boats, life preservers, electric trolling motors and batteries.

The front sales outlet also provides members a copy of the map of the reservation, a copy of post and state hunting and fishing regulations.

The front sales outlet is open Monday through Friday, 8 a.m.-5 p.m., Saturdays, Sundays and Holidays, 6 a.m.-5 p.m.

The club's bar and lounge sells snack foods, beer and soft drinks. In the kitchen you can buy short order food; hot or cold.

The lounge is open Mon.-Sun., 11 a.m.-9 p.m. The kitchen is open Mon.-Sun., 11 a.m.-2 p.m.

Two field archery ranges, four skeet ranges and one trap range are also provided to club members. Factory ammo and refreshments are available on the skeet ranges.

The skeet ranges, and the trap range is open Wed., Sat., Sun., and Holidays from 12 p.m. to 6 p.m. The archery range is open from daylight to dark.

Each month the Rod and Gun Club sponsors a fishing contest. Prizes are awarded for the largest bass, brim and catfish.

JUST A NINE HOLE GAME

Golf is wonderful —Golf is great
When you get the urge you just can't wait
To put on your shoes Get you'r club in —Hand
Get out on the tee and make you'r stand
You drive down the fairway
Perhaps into the Rough
Maybe it'll be easy, could even be tough
A chip to the green
Best shot ever made
Right in the hole just like it was played
You've birdied one — Do the same on two
An age old dream is coming true
Number three is a par, four the same
Five is an eagle, Wow what a game
Par, thru Six, Seven, and Eight
Your'e near the End you just can't wait
But whats that Ringing, the familiar voice you hear.

Parachute jump club tells how it's done

The Sport Parachute Jump Club, Fort Benning, is open to active duty personnel and their dependents, retired, reserve components, and government employes.

Recently the club put on a demonstration at Lawson Army Airfield explaining the functions of jumping and facts about the club. Among those attending the demonstration were the Lions Club Wives of Columbus.

The initial fee for the club is $35 and $3 a month which goes for the maintenance of equipment and bookkeeping.

The classroom work consists of training to jump, packing a chute, how to make a fall, and all safety procedures.

Once this is completed, the next step is static line jumps, then free-fall jumps.

The next class for novice jumpers will be held sometime in June. Further information may be obtained by calling SFC Denham, 545-4847, during noon hours.

Benning clinches title

The Fort Benning Volleyball Team took first place in the Third Army tournament held at Fort Rucker, Ala. The tournament was held from May 7-11.

Fort Benning clinched the title on the day before the end of the competition. Each member of the eight man team received a watch and a team trophy. The team included three men from the 1st Bn. (Mech), 58th Inf. (The Patriots), 197th Infantry Brigade. They were: Sgt. Allen Wilkier, Spd Mark Levin and PFC Dave Jackson all of the 1st Battalion's Combat Support Company. Captain of the team was CPT Wayne Smoot, 2nd Bn., 10th FA, 197th Infantry Brigade.

REACH: Designed to increase soldiers' capability

Project REACH (Recreation, Endurance, Agility, Coordination, Health) is designed to increase the Army soldiers physical fitness through athletic participation. A wide variety of sports and activities are offered to help the soldier achieve this goal.

Project REACH is set up in two stages. The first is physical fitness training, the second is sports participation. Jogging is encouraged in physical fitness training in order to build up endurance. Cards are kept so it is possible for the soldiers progress to be charged over a 1½ mile course as suggested by the project REACH coordinators.

After an adequate period of physical conditioning the soldier enters phase two of the program, choosing the desired sport.

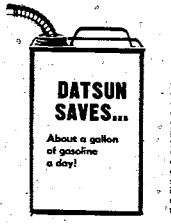
Old ball parks to be remodeled

On May 8, 1973, Delta Company, 43rd Engineer Battalion (Construction) began a new project to upgrade the Special Services Twin Fields baseball complex on Custer Road. Twin Fields consists of two little league baseball diamonds enclosed by chain link fence with a pair of wood frame dugouts for each field. Company D will be utilizing a grader to level the playing fields and will install a new pitchers mound for each field.



The old dugouts will be removed, and new concrete block dugouts installed in their place. The new dugouts will be made of block and reinforced concrete in hopes of increasing their durability. The estimated completion date for this project is June 15.

With the demand for fuel rising faster than the supply, here's one way to help ease our energy crisis. According to the latest U.S. Bureau of Highways figures, the nationwide average for gas mileage is about 13.5 miles per gallon. Our Datsun 1200 gets around 30 miles per gallon. Or, over twice the national average! The average car in the U.S. is driven just over 10,000 miles a year, so you can save about a gallon of gas every day by driving a Datsun 1200. With gasoline prices up, it's a considerable savings of another important resource . . . your money! Drive a Datsun . . . then decide!

HHC, 93rd Engineer Group (CBT), has added a new game to the Physical Training Program. The game is COMBAT PUSHBALL and has proven to be very popular with the men. The game is played with a firmly inflated ball which is six feet in diameter. The playing field is 100 X 60 yards. The objective of the game is to get the ball across the opponents goal line. Some of the tactics used in this endeavor are blocking, tackling, pushing, holding, and wrestling, as long as it is below the neck. The men play every Tuesday and Thursday with no limit to the number of players. Although the game usually gets rough, everyone has a good time and the men get to blow off steam. The men of HHC really get a work out during PT with everyone leaving the playing field all tired out.

Twelve medals copped

The Fort Benning Judo Club won a remarkable 12 medals in Saturday's Region 3 Judo Junior Olympics at Memphis, Tenn.

The first place winners from the Fort Benning club were Mark Keaton (15, heavy), Jesse Chewning (14, heavy), Ronnie Wesley (14, light), Danny Jones (13, heavy) Greg Kirby (10, heavy) and Jeffrey Dean (12, heavy).

Second place winners were Scott Latham (15, light) and Terry Caballero (14, light), while Ross Rappaport (13, heavy) Frank Dean (16, heavy), Eddie Riveria (15, heavy) and Luther Kirby (12, light) won third place medals.

Keaton, Latham, Frank Dean and Riveria will compete in the national Junior Olympics in Salt Lake City, Utah, in August.

States represented were Alabama, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee and Georgia.

Sports

TSB offers plenty of recreation

Recreation is playing an ever-increasing role of importance in daily American life. Sports is a large part of recreation, and people use it as both a means of staying in shape and having fun.

The School Brigade's in handball.

Athletics and Recreation office offers a variety of sports to the soldiers assigned to TSB. They range from the toughest team sports like football to the intense concentration of individual against individual

"The A and R office is here to set up the intramural sports program at the School Brigade" said SSG Melvin E. Lonas, TSB's A and R NCO. He and his assistant PFC Thomas T. Crawford coordinate the sports with the various units, organize the schedules, and maintain the records of participation and results. "We also coordinate Project REACH for TSB," said SSG Lonas. REACH is designed to increase the level of physical fitness of soldiers by maintaining a rigorous PT schedule.

Softball is presently the A and R project for TSB. It is a wide program. There are three leagues, the Ladies league, the Commanders' league, and the company level league. When softball season ends football will begin, and in the winter and spring basketball, volleyball and handball take over.

Recreation at TSB: a year-round program bringing relaxation and physical fitness to soldiers of the U. S. Army.

Takes on many forms in the 931st

By Charles Brickman

The 931st recognizes the need for recreation for its' members and is constantly trying out new programs to satisfy the men so they can use and enjoy the facilities the 931st has.

Recreation in the 931st takes on several forms. If a soldier likes physical activity such as sports he doesn't have to search very hard. If he likes to tinker with cars the 931st has a place for him to work on his car. If he just wants to read a book or listen to music he is well taken care of also.

At Sand Hill the members of the 931st have a variety of places they use for recreation. There is a swimming pool which will soon be open for the summer, an auto craft shop, a craft shop, a theater, a golf course and a fine library. The members of the 931st also have gyms they can use and tennis courts at their use.

There will also soon be another new auto craft shop for the men to use.

For the families of the 931st there are several locations where they can picnic and cook out in the Group areas.

One of the more popular forms of recreation is the recreation area at Destin, Florida, which is available to all military personnel. According to Lieutenant Ralpheal Santaliz, "all major commands are allocated dormatories at Destin. In the 931st we go the companies and ask for volunteers to go. Since we can only send 18 men at a time sometimes it is necessary to pick the men on an equal share basis. The only thing the men are required to have is 20 dollars to defray the cost of their meals, everything else is free. We even provide free transportation there and back."

A new program which will soon begin in the 931st Engineer Group is REACH. This program will be designed for Company level use.

According to Lt. Santaliz, "the purpose of the program is to 'reach' the soldiers who do not usually participate in duty time athletics. Men who do not play will officiate. The program will cover all different sports and games from golf to swimming."

"An A and R Officer and NCO will be appointed at Company levels to be in charge of the program. These individuals will attend classes on sports and other things related to the program. They will be men who have knowledge of sports and recreation and men who care enough to keep the program going. The Company programs will be monitored by Group S-2.

Another program which the men of the 931st are participating is Run For Your Life. This is a physical fitness program based on progressive distance running. It has been adopted through out the Army as a program which men and women can work at on their own time. It is separated into three phases according to an individuals level of fitness.

The first phase or preparatory phase is for personnel who have recently led a sedentary life. This includes all men and women who do not exercise regularly, or are overweight or have had a recent illness.

The second phase is the conditioning phase. It is for personnel who have engaged in vigorous activity but can not run a mile in 8:30 minutes without undue stress or fatigue.

The final phase is the sustaining phase. The goal of this phase is to continue a running program of seven to ten miles a week within the time and distance goals.

The 931st Engineer Group provides its' men with a wide variety of things to do for recreation and is trying to improve upon and broaden the programs which are offered.

American leaders come here to learn of military

Sixty-four civilian leaders and five members of the military will visit Ft. Benning May 9 and 10 as part of a joint Civilian Orientation Conference. They will include corporation and industry executives, bank directors, realtors, educators, and attorneys.

The Joint Civilian Orientation Conferences are sponsored by the Secretary of Defense. The purpose of the visits is to provide a cross-section of American leaders with an understanding of the military establishment.

Before arriving at Ft. Benning, they will visit the U.S. Air Force Academy at Offutt Air Force Base, Omaha, Neb. After leaving here they will travel to Parris Island, S.C.; Pensacola Naval Air Station, Pensacola, Fla.; and the Pentagon.

While at Ft. Benning, they will be welcomed by Maj. Gen. Thomas M. Tarpley, Commandant, U.S. Army Infantry School, and will be briefed on USAIC and USAIS activities. They will also see a presentation of "I Am the Infantry."

Also on their itinerary is a tour of the Combined Arms Tactical Training Simulator; a tour of the Infantry School television studies; a laboratory where new small-group instructional techniques are developed; a tour of classroom 26 and a visit to the Individual Learning Center.

They will observe an Airborne "5000" demonstration on Eubanks Field, and will be at the 197th Infantry Brigade for lunch, a briefing, and a tour of the 197th. They will also watch a "Rangers in Action" demonstration at Victory Pond.

'Super Rat'

Daring young man tells of Motorcross

"Those daring young men in their flying machines" may remind most of us of the early days of aviation, but there are some soldiers right here at Fort Benning that fit that description on flying machines of a different type; motorcycles.

One of those is PFC Kenneth Doddridge of the 18th Replacement Detachment. When he isn't working in his Unit's Supply Section he may be out "flying" over jumps on his Hodaka 100, "Super Rat."

When interviewed he stated that he has been racing motorcycles in Motocross competition for about three years. Motocross is normally a relatively short course with hills, jumps, sharp turns and quite often water and mud. He said that "Although the speeds reached during Motocross racing aren't as high as those in road racing on paved tracks, the courses do test the driver's skill by requiring a great deal of balance and stamina of the driver. The sharp turns and taking the high jumps is where your balance really counts."

Doddridge, a native of Ormond Beach, Florida, has raced in about fifty races during his three years of racing. In addition to cuts, scrapes and bruises he has five wins, six seconds and four third place finishes to show for his efforts. When asked what he likes most about his racing he said "Next to winning, I enjoy "Flying" over the jumps most of all."

He is still in the early stages of his racing career and said he hopes to begin competing in the larger races against the professionals someday. The only thing holding him back at this point is the great expense involved in competing against those pros who are backed by the cycle companies, even so, as he continues to compete in smaller races in East-Central Florida he has set as his goal the winning of the Daytona Motocross in which many foreign driver's compete.

UP A TREE about your future? Better take another look at your military career before leaping down to civilian life. Few jobs in private industry can stack up against the benefits and opportunities found in the Service. Linda Jones of Pensacola Beach, Fla. Would hate to see you out on a limb.....

TSB softball bats thunder

Company Level Softball League has completed its third week of play. None of the five games played this week could be called pitching duels, as is evident by the scores. An average of 23 runs were scored per game.

One of the games played on Wednesday, the 16th of May, between the Infantry Officer Advanced Course (IOAC) 5-73 and C and TD, saw C and TD come out on top 22 to 17.

Headquarters Headquarters company, TSB won decisively over 2nd Battalion, in another game played Wednesday, 15 to 4. HHC secored 11 runs in the first inning, and from then on out coasted to an easy win.

Two other games played on Wednesday night were both decided by a two run difference. A and M defeated 85th Co. 13 to 11, and 3rd Ranger was victorious over TSB Personnel 10 to 8.

Swim team celebrates

A banquet was held in the Youth Activities Center to honor Capt. Fred Paavola, swimming coach who departed Sunday, and swimmers of the Fort Benning Barracuda's Swim Team who earned points in competition during the year.

These points were compiled based on all Amateur Athletic Union Sanctioned swim meets. Plaques were presented by CSM Jubal E. Rodriguez, president of the Swim Team Association to the top three point swimmers in each age group recognized by the AAU for both boys and girls.

In the eight years old and under group Diane Borden, Tricia Lunsford, Sheila Cannan, Jeffrey Warren, Peter Lee and Jimmy Cannan received plaques. Jennifer Warren, Laura Chapin, Gail Otto, Kirby Pilcher, James Lane and Phillip Lee received plaques for the 10 years and under group. In the 11-12 group Linda Borden, Angel Hunt, Grace Kelly, Charlie Frandsen, Tim Tarpley and Edward Kelly received plaques. Thirteen-14 year swimmers receiving them also were Tammy Otto, Jeff Hanson, Michelle Otto, Jonathan Warren, John Misiak and Joe Rodriguez.

Receiving plaques in the 15-17 group were Michele Borden, Carmie Hanson, Paul Borden, Anthony Rodriguez and James Kelly.

Cannabis sativa

Full effects and uses of drugs not yet known

Pot, weed, grass, kif, bhang, hemp; the technical name of the plant from which all marijuana preparations are taken is Cannabis sativa (Latin). The plant is native to large areas of the world and its fibers have been used for the manufacture of twine, rope, bags, clothing, and paper.

The sterilized seeds are occasionally used in various feed mixtures and for bird food. All medical uses of cannabis throughout history have been found to be unsound, inefficient, or without predictable effect.

Therefore, the drug has been removed from the official drug lists of the U.S. and of nearly all other countries. However, medical research into its possible use in a range of functions continues.....

Marijuana's use as a social drug is probably one of the most controversial issues in America today. One side is steadily shouting about the "dangers" of the drug, while another side argues from personal experience that they think the "dangers" are just lies.

A lot of people have driven a car under the influence of alcohol and have never had an accident; yet driving "under the influence" is decidedly risky. Some of the risks involved in smoking marijuana are proven ones:

Tetrahydrocannabinols is a long word that can make a big difference. Better known as THC, it is the psycho-active ingredient in cannabis, and its content varies greatly from plant to plant.

High THC causes trouble

This not only creates problems in controlling laboratory experiments and research; it can spell trouble for the guy who's used to doing four or five joints of low THC grass during the day and then one day smokes some high-THC stuff on the job.

In persons without a history of mental disorder who have never taken hallucinogenic drugs, marijuana may cause simple depressive and panic reactions. Not too long ago a 22-year-old girl, who had smoked occasionally over the past few years, visited some friends in Columbus...

The living room was small with a black light and several "day-glo" posters on the wall. After the third marijuana cigarette had been smoked, she began to get disoriented and became paranoid. She rushed outside, and the crowd carried her back in and put her in bed.

This action only served to reinforce her fears that she was in trouble and her condition deepened. She remained depressed for several days afterwards. Paranoia in itself is not always dangerous, but the girl could have been injured as a result of her disoriented actions.

Flashbacks experienced

Persons who have previously used hallucinogens (LSD, Mescaline, etc.) may experience "flashbacks" precipitated by using marijuana. For those with serious mental disorders such as schizophrenia, grass can cause typical reactions which may require psychiatric care.

Mild ill-effects of marijuana, such as nausea, headache, and transient paranoia, are fairly common to users. Eating marijuana may cause toxic psychosis, a condition in which the brain reacts to a chemcial agent in the body.

Toxic psychosis can result in delusions, illusions, and sometimes even hallucinations, and will persist until the drug has been excreted from the system.

Learning process slowed

Smoking marijuana can increase the heartbeat up to a rate of 140 per minute. Short-time memory is often affected. Marijuana does not significantly interfere with the ability to recall information already present in the memory; however, it does interfere with initial learning.

It does this by affecting acquisition processes involved in the storage of information. Possibly the inability to concentrate is the most likely reason information is not transferred to the permanent memory.

Marijuana may trigger "flashbacks" in some persons. This is not too common, but it could be disastrous on a highway. Marijuana also affects the eyes, turning them red almost every time. It causes a significant delay in glare recovery time, which

First race relations graduation

The first training course for battalion race relations instructors will graduate at Fort Benning, Ga., May 11.

Sponsored by the Continental Army Command, the course here is the first one of its kind in the Army. Fifty students, ranging in rank from E5 to major, are enrolled in the two week program.

The course was designed by the Fort Benning leadership department to prepare soldiers for planning and delivering human relations instruction in their units.

During the course, students cover a wide variety of opinions on the problems of minorities and majorities and their relations with each other.

Seminars, small group discussions, lectures, readings, and guest speakers are the basis of instruction. Reaing material does not come from Army manuals but a wide variety of civilian sources and opinions.

The guest speakers are chosen for their influential work in human relations.

Menial cases hamper emergencies

By Stan Hatkoff

It's 7:15 p.m. in the emergency room (ER) at Martin Army Hospital. The pediatric clinic at the hospital annex is closed. The ER staff is bracing itself for another typical night.

Ring, Ring. A mother asks if she should bring Ricky in. He was exposed to scarlet fever. Bring him in. Ring. "My baby has been eating a corroded battery, what should I do?" Reassuringly, the nurse says, "Bring the baby in." A mother asks for her daughter's routine shots, she says, "The night pediatric clinic is closed." The Corpsman tells her to return to the pediatric clinic in the daytime. A soldier walks in complaining of a pulled muscle. He has suffered from it for a week. "You are supposed to go to the TMC during normal sick call hours for this." says the nurse, controlling her impulse to explain the proper use of the ER in length to the young soldier.

The telephone rings and rings. Another caller wants to know what type of patients are on ward B7. A woman caller complains that her son is having a difficult time breathing and suffers from asthma. The nurse checks with the doctor. The doctor says "Have the lady bring her son in."

The time is now 7:35 p.m.

This parade of calls and people is typical of the problems the ER staff must deal with nightly. Most of these cases do not represent true emergencies. The child who ate the corroded battery and the woman with the asthmatic son represent cases requiring immediate evaluation.

An emergency is, "a sudden, generally unexpected occurence or set of circumstances demanding immediate action." The soldier complaining of a pulled muscle, and the mother wanting routine shots for her daughter are not immediate care situations. These types of complaints can best be handled by the daytime clinics.

Then how do you know if you have an emergency? You could use common sense, but if in doubt, call the emergency room. If it is truly an emergency you will be asked to come in and be treated immediately. If it is not, you will be referred to one of the daytime clinics. There are situations such as bleeding or broken bones which anyone can determine requires emergency care. There are other situations in which it is unclear. Calling the physician at times such as this can provide the necessary answer to whether the individual should be seen immediately or can wait and be referred to one of the clinics in operation during normal duty hours. In other words, if in doubt, there will always be medical advice available to you so that you can receive the necessary medical information and attention.

The use of the emergency room as a general outpatient clinic by many patients — a few of whom have been described — must cease. The emergency room must be used only for the purpose it was intended: the treatment of emergencies.

The emergency room is a busy place. It must be ready to respond immediately to true emergencies. It is one of the most important services performed by Martin Army Hospital. Several thousands of persons are treated in the ER each year, many of whom could have just as easily waited to make an appointment and be seen in the daytime clinics. We must see to it that people who truly need emergency care get it when they need it and are not hampered by people complaining about minor illnesses.

Headaches, sore throats, colds, runny noses — all these appear repeatedly on the charts of patients in the ER each day. All are conditions which could and should have been checked at the daytime clinics. These contribute to the over-loading of the ER and interfere with its proper function: care for those in need of immediate service.

Because of a physician shortage starting 18 June, only one physician will be on duty in the ER from midnight to 8:00 a.m. At other times, a physician will be readily available to treat serious emer-

Dept. of Army announces promotion of Col. Grange

The Department of the Army announced this week that Colonel David E. Grange, director of the Ranger Department of the Infantry School since August 1971, has been selected for promotion to brigadier general.

Colonel Grange served as a paratrooper in Europe during World War II. He graduated from Officer Candidate School in May 1950 and was a platoon leader and company commander in Korea. His last overseas assignment was 3rd Brigade commander, 101st Airborne (Airmobile) Division. On an earlier tour he had served as a battalion cammander in the 101st.

On previous tours at Fort Benning, Col. Grange has been an instructor in the Ranger Department and attended the Infantry Officers Advanced Course. He also is a graduate of Pentagon, Fort Knox and Fort Bragg.

COL. GRANGE

He is a graduate of the Army War College, the Command and General Staff College and the Russian language course.

Col. Grange is a graduate of the University of Nebraska at Omaha.

Among his awards and decorations are the Silver Star with two Oak Leaf Clusters, the Legion of Merit with one Oak Leaf Cluster, Distinguished Flying Cross, Soldiers Medal, Combat Infantryman Badge with two stars, and Master Parachutist Badge.

Col. Grange is married to the former Lois M. Okvist, Lake Ron Kon Koma, New York. They have three children, a son, David L., a 1st Lt. in the Army at Fort Bragg and two daughters, Susanne, 18 and Holly 11.

Brig. Gen. Latham receives second highest award

Brigadier General Willard Latham, Fort Benning deputy commander, received the Legion of Merit, the nation's second highest military award for meritorious conduct in an award ceremony held at Infantry Hall May 29.

General Latham, who will leave the post next month for assignment as assistant Division commander of the 3rd Infantry Division in Germany, accepted the award from Major General Thomas M. Tarpley, Fort Benning commander.

According to the citation, General Latham distinguished himself by exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services from February 7, 1970 to February 15, 1973.

"During his period, he served as Commander, 197th Infantry Brigade; Special Assistant to the Commanding General and Chief of Staff and Deputy Commander, United States Army Infantry Center, Fort Benning, Georgia. He produced almost unparalleled achievements which had profound effects upon the entire Army, which was cited by the Army Chief of Staff, as providing the kind of leadership the entire Army should emulate. Under his exemplary leadership, the Modern Volunteer Army concept was transformed into practical reality. As a United States Army Recruiting Test Unit, the 197th Infantry Brigade became the Army's first all-volunteer brigade-sized unit in the Continental United States."

Other achievements noted were his conspicious success in implementing Military Occupational Specialty (MOS) Satisfaction Training and Adventure Training Programs, which resulted in maximum utilization of all manpower assets and significantly increased unit morale.

Born to Runaway?

The seed should be watered with love and affection!

By Carl King

I remember in the early morning hours last year, a phone call which brought me back to conscious state. "Cindy has run away. Please, is there anything you can do?" As Infantry Center Staff Duty Information Officer, this was an unusual request, especially in light of the fact that I was not then a father and didn't particularly rationalize the situation as being in any way a matter of urgency.

My immediate thoughts were that this fourteen-year-old was rebelling against the establishment, that she had been fed the usual diet of "don't take candy from strangers," and "unchaperoned activities are taboo."

In order to placate this obviously distraught mother, I made a few frail attempts to contact the local FBI, police departments, radio stations etc. Their respective comments were, "We can't do anything unless the mother notifies us personally and unless there is proof that the girl has been transported across state boundaries." The radio stations were a little more receptive — they evidently had need for some juicy news for their early morning programming.

Cindy, it turns out, had run away from home before, three or four times. According to her parents she had never stayed away more than one night and she had returned on her own volition.

This time was to be different, however. For Cindy was gone for four days, had shacked-up with a young 18-year-old man and was experimenting with marijuana. For some reason, my efforts became more concerted as information came filtering in as to her possible location. There was a sort of contagion and I found myslef very much involved seeking to assist these parents in getting their daughter safely home.

After four "frantic" days, Cindy again returned home — voluntarily.

This year's sequence of events has given me a

Did you ever run away from home?

E5 TERRY BARNES

Yes. There was a lot of depression so my friends and I wanted to get away but we didn't have any idea of what we were getting ourselves into. We walked 30 miles and could go no further, we didn't have any idea of where to go, so we finally got tired and called our parents to come and get us. It was a lot of trouble for nothing but I did learn my lesson. I never ran away after that.

E2 ROBERT COOPER
B CO. 3RD OF THE 7TH

No. I lived at a boys home most of my life but it was the same as having parents. We had a den mother and father and they treated us like their own, we were expected to be in before eleven on weekends when we were old enough. We had to have permission to do our special activities and we had a woodwork shop to keep us busy. It was like any other household.

E2 CLARENCE DAY
197th

No. I didn't have a reason to run away. My parents and I talked out most of our problems. I was limited to my activities but it probably kept me out of some of the trouble that I may have got into if I were alone.

E2 RICHARD WALKER
COD. HQSCMD

I always enjoyed my home. I didn't have too many privileges but I was satisfied. I think my strict upbringing helped to mold me into a better person. My parents were always fair.

Kids

Follow your footsteps to maturity

Last Saturday was a beautiful day. The weather was ideal for just about any outdoor activity. I had my usual golf game and plans for working in the yard after that.

About 8 a.m. my 18-year-old son joined me in the kitchen for a cup of coffee. We talked awhile and I began to think that it had been some time since we had actually done anything together so I suggested going fishing in the afternoon at about four o'clock. There was a rather embrassing pause after the suggestion then he said he was sorry but would like to take a rain check. He had other plans for the day.

The small talk just about came to an end and after a few minutes he announced he had to get ready to go out.

My feelings were hurt as I sat there alone. I thought he had acted selfish but then I began to think back a few years and my thoughts didn't do anything to make me feel any better. I was thinking how often a small boy had wanted me to do something with him and I had made other plans.

At one time he had been a hug about fishing. When he was eight or nine hardly a week went by that he didn't ask me to take him. We went a few times but it was really amazing how many turn-downs he took before he stopped asking.

Eight or nine years old was cub scout and little league time. His mother was active in the cub scout program but I wasn't much help in the little league activities. Some of the time he was given a ride to the practice or a game but most of the time walked or bummed a ride from a neighbor. Attend the games? I just didn't seem able to find the time. I came up with the usual excuses of conflicting interests and a heavy work load whenever someone wanted a coach or official. During this time it seems I was also pretty busy whenever he wanted to play catch or throw a football around in the yard.

He had always been interested in shooting and hunting. When he was 11 years he got a .22 rifle for Christmas. We spent a great Christmas afternoon out shooting at targets. When he was 12 he got a 410 gauge shotgun for his birthday and we spent the following Saturday hunting rabbits. I remember those days but can't remember many times that we went out together to use those guns. I was too busy, usually with activities I'd planned with grownups. The guns are in a rack in the den now. They haven't been used for several years.

I was always interested in how he was doing in school. At report card time that is. I could never understand why he didn't get better grades. Between reports I'm afraid I wasn't much help. Of course the "new math" gave me one good excuse. We didn't have that during my school days. When it came to the more complicated stuff like algebra I wasn't much help either. It had been so long that I'd forgotten. As far as the other subjects were concerned I'd always contended that all a student had to do was pay attention in class and read the assignments.

He never lacked for many of the material things in life. I bought him baseball gloves, footballs, basketballs, fishing tackle, guns and an assortment of other things a growing boy needs or thinks he needs. I even bought him an automobile when he became old enough to drive. The car was bought for selfish reasons on my part. If he had a car of his own he wouldn't be using mine or taking my time to haul him around.

In looking back I can see that during his entire growing period I tried to substitute material things for the time and interest I should have been investing. Now I can see they were a poor replacement for an active interest in what he was doing and how he was doing.

Selfish? No I guess he wasn't really being selfish. He's an adult now. He has his life to lead. I didn't give him any real reasons to want to share it with me. (S.K.)

Office injuries should receive medical attention

Have you ever been the victim of an office accident because simple office safety rules weren't obeyed?

If simple safety rules, applied with common sense were used, many of these accidents could have been avoided. These office accidents generally occur, due to the careless actions of the employees.

Certain circumstances have proven, when an employee receives an injury he may feel the injury is not important enough to need necessary medical care. He fails to realize that by ignoring the injury and not taking proper first aid steps, he has left himself open for infection, possibly resulting in blood poison or skin infection.

In the event a serious injury occurs, you should report it to your supervisor. Applying first aid to yourself isn't wise, especially if the injury is one which may need a qualified person to give professional medical attention. If treatment is needed your supervisor will see that you receive the proper care. It is important that you follow the advice given you.

There are many different types of accidents which may occur in office work. For instance, a slight injury to a certain area of the eye may not become infected right away, but given several days of neglect, infection may become evident and cause problems which will need a doctor's attention.

Possibly even more dangerous than letting an injury go until it becomes infected, is that of letting another person remove foreign articles or fluids from the injured area without any knowledge of first aid.

It is almost impossible to judge whether or not an injury will become infected. In cases of accidents, no matter how large or small, you should make it a rule to report all injuries so proper attention can be given.

The Jewish Festival of Shavuot will be observed from sundown June 5 to June 7. Jews are prohibited from performing any form of work June 6-7 as they are days of special obligation. The Jewish Welfare Board will provide home hospitality, an integral part of the holiday, in Columbus and Atlanta for Fort Benning servicemen.

Commanders are authorized to grant leaves and passes to people who desire to attend services. Shavuot services will be held at Bldg. 2622 June 5 at 8 p.m., June 6 at 10 a.m. and at 8 p.m. and June 7 (Memorial Service) at 8 p.m.

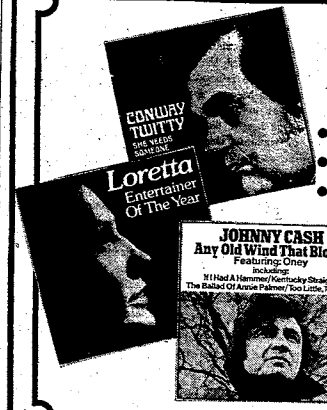
For further information contact the Jewish Chaplain's Office at 545-7843.

Job fair to be held June 20

The Fort Benning Benefits and Employments Fair sponsored by the Retirement and Services Unit, will be held June 20, 10 a.m.-5 p.m., in the Briant Wells Fieldhouse, Fort Benning, Ga.

This is the third job fair of this type to be held at Fort Benning, with over sixty commercial firms being represented.

These firms from the national, state and local levels, will send recruiters and representatives to interview anyone interested in a specific type of business, vocational or industrial job.



The fair will provide information on benefits and employment opportunities for active duty military personnel with a short time left in service, and for retired military personnel.

You can help yourself by checking your personnel records

By Bob Cowles

YOU ARE A PERSONNEL MANAGER

The most important asset the U. S. Army has is its people. How does the Army manage this resource? In many ways, but probably the most important is by reviewing personnel records. Of course the Military Personnel Offices (MPO) are responsible for maintaining these records, but there are requirements that the individual must accomplish. Many things have to be done that may be overlooked by the MPOs; things that are beneficial to the individual soldier. Action should be taken by the individual to insure these things are done.

DA Forms 20 and 66

Individuals are required to review their DA Form 20 or 66 (Qualification Record) annually during the quarter of their birth month. When auditing this form, each block should be checked and corrected if need be. If any item is not understood the clerk should be asked to explain. If you are an officer, your career branch manages your career by utilizing information contained on the DA Form 66. If you are an enlisted man or woman, enlisted personnel directorate manages your career utilizing information on the DA Form 20. Keeping these forms current may make the difference in your being promoted.

This file is to be viewed at the same time as the DA Form 66 or 20. You will find that most everything in your 201 file is recorded on your form 66 or 20. These two forms should agree with each other. Insure that copies of award orders, promotion orders, and letters of commendation are maintained in this file. If something is not in the file and you maintain a personal set of records, give your copy to the personnel clerk. If you do not have copies of the orders, give the clerk all the information possible concerning it, where it happened, who made the award, when it happened and any other helpful information. This will enable him to write for the information.

The DA Form 41, Record of Emergency Data, may be the most important form kept on any individual. Unfortunately, when this form is usually needed, the individual is normally unable to change the information. This form is used when and if a person becomes a casualty. Form 41 is used to assist in notifying the family of the individual's status and how to distribute certain monies and insurance information. This form must be reviewed at the same time as the Qualification Record. Check each item, but pay particular attention to the names and addresses in block 19. Also remember that anytime your family status changes due to marriage, divorce, child birth, death of a member or changes of address, you must have a new DA Form 41 prepared.

Physicals

Normal physical examinations are required in the individual's birth month when he is 18, 21, 24, 27, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and each year there-after. At Fort Benning you will be given a slip of paper at the time the exam is completed. This paper must be returned to your MPO so that the information may be recorded on your Qualification Record and the physical may be filed in your health records.

Retirements

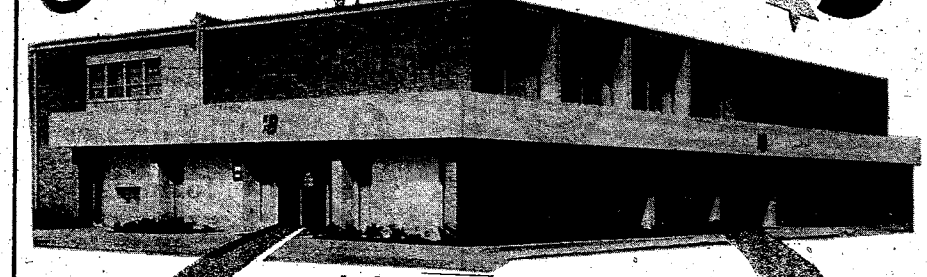
You will eliminate many problems for yourself and your MPO by insuring that pre-retirement activities are conducted in a timely manner.

Not earlier than one year prior to desired retirement date, you must complete DA Form 2339, Voluntary Application for Retirement. If this form is completed within six months of the retirement date requested, it must be accompanied by a completed physical exam.

If the application is submitted between one year and six months prior to the requested retirement date, a physical examination must be completed between six months and three months prior to that date. If the physical is not completed prior to three months, the retirement may be delayed. Essentially, a separation physical is valid for 180 days.

Not earlier than 60 days and not later than 30 days prior to retirement, an option must be made under the Survivors Benefit Plan. It is important that the option be made not later than 30 days prior to retirement, for the election forms must be forwarded to the U. S. Army Finance Center. Any delay in completing the election certificate may result in a temporary decrease in retirement pay. If you do not elect an option you are automatically covered.

Unit commanders should insure that individuals do not attend Project Transition until they have an established separation date or have submitted the voluntary application for retirement.



Remember, if you assist your Military Personnel Office with these items you will assist in managing your career in the Army.

OWC Year Ends With Luau

The final OWC event of the 1972-73 year was indeed the most colorful, with ladies dressed in their favorite mun-mun. The gala Luau Luncheon, hosted by the Ranger Wives on May 23, began with a social hour on the gaily decorated patio of EBOOM.

Mrs. Elvie Smith and Mrs. Margaret Atcheson floated in a flower-filled canoe in the nearby pool, while Hawaiian music played in the background.

After the Polynesian buffet lunch, Mrs. Bill May, outgoing OWC president; welcomed Mrs. Bob Hydrick, wife of Columbus mayor. Seven past OWC presidents were then honored with lifetime membership to the Fort Bening Officers' Wives' Club.

Words of appreciation were expressed by Mrs. May to the outgoing board and standing committee chairmen for their dedication and hard work in the past year. For the installation of officers for the 1973-74 year, each new board member was presented with a lei by her outgoing counterpart.

Mrs. Arthur Richards, new OWC president, commended Carol May on her "contagious enthusiasm" and excellent job as club president. Carol received a well deserved standing ovation by the membership.

An entertaining program followed, with Summer fashions from a local Columbus store, modeled by Mesdames Liz Arndt, Beryl Bowling, Sheila Hennigan, Toni Hill and Vicki Walls. Musical accompaniment was provided by Mrs. Richard K. Rowe.

A fitting finale were the Hawaiian dance performed by Mrs. Frank Spettel and members of the Joe Kekaualua family.

The Year of the BEE is officially over now. Hasn't it been fun to "BEE WITH US?"

Th "Golden Heritage' selection this week is from the Bread Section.

Beer Bread Muffins

Submitted by:
Mrs. Jon C. Stillman (Jane)
and
Mrs. James E. Stone (Frances)

1 12 oz. can beer
4 cups Bisquick mix
6 Tbsp. sugar

Pour beer into large dish and let it sit for 30 to 40 minutes so that it will be "flat".

Stir Bisquick mix and sugar into "flat" beer with a fork. Mix only until all ingredients are moistened. Pour immediately into well-greased muffin tins. Bake. Serve at once. Temperature: 450. Time: 10-12 minutes. Yield; 16 muffins.

These must be served piping hot and fresh from the oven.

The Junior Red Cross (Volunteers) training program is now in full swing. Any teen-agers who will be 15 years old on or before Oct. 1, and who want to fill their summer hours constructively are welcome to join the Junior Red Cross.

Orientation for the Red Cross Youth will be June 7, 8:25-3:30. To register for the class and for more information, call Mrs. William Carter, 687-4541.

OWC Activities

Learn to make soap at the OWC's class on SOAP-MAKING. Biodegradable, glycerin soap decorated with zodiac signs will be the end result of this interesting class. The cost for the two hour lesson is $5 and the cost will include a pound of soap. Call Mrs. James Miller at 323-2506 for more information or to sign up for this fun session.

Evening classes in DECOUPAGE and TOLE PAINTING will begin again on Mon., June 4 at 7:30 p.m. The classes are five weeks long at a cost of $7.50 plus spplies For more information or to sign up for these classes, call Mrs. Edward Maceyka at 545-3507.

BBOD

"Fun in the Sun" was the theme of the luncheon May 10 at the Supper Club, for the ladies of the Brigade and Battalion Operations Department, USAIS. The ladies of Combat Support Group hosted the event.

After the ladies had served themselves at the salad buffet, a fashion show was presented by a local Columbus store.

The models circulating among the tables were Mesdames Marshall R. McRee, Larry W. Tucker, Wayne W. Wright, Robert W. Kimbrough, John T. Lawrence, James R. Siket, John P. Ballenger, Charles D. Caddell, Henry Lee and Thomas P. Ross.

Artillery Committee

On May 12, the officers and ladies of the Artillery Committee attended a "Hail and Farewell" party in the Benning Room of the Main Officers' Club.

Welcomed to the Committee were Maj. and Mrs. V. J. Girard, Maj. and Mrs. Wayne W. Wright, Maj. and Mrs. Joseph B. Spagnoli, Capt. and Mrs. Larry R. Lippincott and Capt. and Mrs. T. Lamar Sleight.

A baby cup was presented to Capt. and Mrs. David L. Carl for their son, Jeffery Davidson.

"Farewell" was bid to Lt. Col. and Mrs. A. E. Stipe. Lt. Col. Stipe has been the chairman of the Artillery Committee and is now on his way to Germany.

Guests were Lt. Col. Russell A. Weathersby, Lt. Col. and Mrs. James T. Dunn, Capt. and Mrs. George W. Aux, Capt. and Mrs. John P. Ballenger and Capt. and Mrs. Thomas P. Ross.

Comptroller-Finance

A pot luck supper was the order of the evening for the officers and ladies of Comptroller-Finance, April 27 at the home of Lt. Col. and Mrs. W. G. Axum of Zuckerman Ave.

A festive air prevailed as the guests assembled after dinner to play parlor games. All were held spellbound by an intriguing game of "ESP" conducted by Capt. and Mrs. Ken Buch.

derson for their May coffee.

Mrs. James Armstrong conducted a short business meeting. Topics of discussion included the OWC cookbook, the Red Cross party, and the group's meeting during the summer months.

TSB

Headquarters

The ladies of Headquarters, TSB, met for their monthly coffee May 16 at the home of Mrs. Lewis E. Jones, Baltzell Avenue, Fort Benning. Mrs. Ira W. Hornbeck was co-hostess. Several members volunteered to work at the Thrift Shop for the month of June.

TSB

Fifth Battalion

The ladies of the Fifth Battalion held their monthly coffee May 16. It was hosted by Headquarters ladies, Mesdames Gordon Hunt, Calvin Sydnor and Theodore Wright and held at the home of Mrs. Wright of Durham Court. A special thank you was extended to Mesdames David Leslie, John Moorman and Dennis Carroll for working in the Thrift Shop for May. After refreshments, everyone worked off calories by participating in white elephant bingo. The June coffee will be hostessed by the ladies of 50th Company.

Leadership Department

Headquarters

The ladies of Headquarters, Leadership Department, met at the home of Mrs. James D. Williams for a coffee on Tues., May 15. The ladies welcomed the new department director's wife, Mrs. John J. Walsh Jr.

Leadership Department

Leadership Committee

The ladies of the Leadership Committee held their coffee at the home of Mrs. Pat Coke.

Mrs. Nathan Vail conducted the business meeting. Tentative plans were made for the Department party in July. The Leadership Committee and CCD are sponsoring the Department function on June 5. The luncheon plans involve a trip to Seale, Alabama and luch at Villula Tea Garden.

The committee said good-bye to two lovely ladies, Mrs. Pat Coke and Mrs. Lana Schoenack. Mrs. Vail presented both ladies with a framed "Follow Me" needlepoint picture of her own design. The ladies also received the traditional "Army Wife" scroll.

Ranger Department

On May 16 the Ranger Officers' Wives' Club held as informal coffee at the Ranger Department mess hall. The guest speaker Col. David E. Grange, Department Director, gave an informative orientation on the recent reorganization of the Ranger Department.

A short business meeting was conducted by Mrs. Grange.

Sad farewells were said to Mrs. Morris E. Price, Mrs. Benny L. Wright, Mrs. Gordon F. Atcheson, Mrs. Michael B. Ranger, Mrs. Jerry R. Barnhill, Mrs. William H. Roe, Mrs. Arthur G. Smith and Mrs. Joseph W. Turek. They were each presented with the traditional Rangerette poem and a silver tray.

Mrs. Jack H. Hayman was welcomed to the group.

197th Inf. Bde.

Headquarters

Mrs. James Howell and Mrs. Bernard Toombs were hostesses for the monthly coffee of the Headquarters Ladies, May 16 in the Normandy Room of the Main Officers' Club.

During the business meeting, conducted by Mrs. Theodore Voorhees, the following announcements were made: The next Brigade function will be a Wine and Cheese tasting affair on Wed., June 20 at the Main Officers' Club, sponsored by the ladies of the 1st Bn., 29th Inf. It was unanimously agreed that the coffees would continue to be held in the Officers' Club, rather than in individual homes. It was decided that the monthly coffees will be held on the third Tues. night of every month.

Mrs. Voorhees welcomed the newcomers: Mesdames Larry Grantham, Russell Calvert, Karl Johnson, William McNeese, Guy E. Foster, Jim Tresley, Stephen Wells, Shelby Brown, John Bolen and Juan-Manuel.

Leaving the group was Mrs. William Harbour. Mrs. Harbour, a very active and talented member of the group also served as 1st vice president of the OWC Board. Maj. and Mrs. Harbour are going to Fort Hamilton, N.Y., where Major Harbour will attend the Chaplains Advance Course.

197th Inf. Bde.

1st Bn., (Mech.), 38th Inf.

The ladies of the 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry held their monthly coffee in the Normandy Room at the Main Officers Club.

Mrs. Phillip Underwood and Mrs. John Firth hosted the event.

The ladies welcomed Mrs. Gary Halstead, Mrs. Frederick Mascl, and Mrs. Raymond O'Neil.

3rd Bn. 7th Inf.

The ladies of the 3rd Bn. 7th Inf. held their monthly coffee in the Normandy Room of the Fort Benning Officers' Club, May 17. Hostesses for the event were Mrs. Howard B. Lavy Jr., and Mrs. Phillip Crawford. Warmly welcomed to the Battalion was Mrs. Irwin L. Davis; with fond farewells going out to Mrs. George B. Lovelace III, and Mrs. Alford E. Russell.

Discussed during the business meeting, were social courtesies in the service, with Mrs. William A. Richards doing a short skit on what not to do in a receiving line. The ladies were reminded of the upcoming 197th Inf. Bde. Formal on May 19 and the Bde. Luncheon on June 20, and of the Battalion Hail and Farewell on June 1. It was decided that in place of the June coffee the ladies of the Bn. would take the Columbus Heritage Tour and go to the Goetchius House for lunch on Wed., June 13. Those desiring to take part should be at the Georgia Welcome Center no later than 9:45 a.m. Also being

Highest scouting award presented to local scouts

The Boy Scout's highest scouting award, the coveted Eagle Award, was presented to Jeff Newcombe and Chris Hall of Troop 237, Fort Benning, during the Eagle Court of Honor ceremony at the Main Post Chapel Annex, May 21.

Jeff is the son of Major Nelson Newcombe, Directoriate of Resident Training Management, U. S. Army Infantry School, and Chris is the son of Warrant Officer Terry Hall, office of the adjutant general, U.S. Army Infantry Center.

Distinguished guests at the Court of Honor were Maj. Gen. Thomas M. Tarpley, post commander and Russell McClain, Chattahoochee Council Scout Executive.

Other awards presented were the Life Scout Awards to Paul Goodenough, son of Maj. Jerry Goodenough, and Keith Hill, son of Lt. Col. T. Hill.

Star Scout Awards were presented to Grey Bryant, son of Lt. Col. Jerry Bryant; Steve Moeller, son of Maj. Lawrence Moeller; Ron Parr, son of Maj. Roland Parr, and Hal Hayman, son of Capt. Jack Hayman.

Five become volunteers

Five women received certification that they are members of the American Red Cross Volunteers in a capping ceremony in the main post chapel annex last week.

Mrs. Mildred Fuller, Mrs. Rhona Grace, Mrs. Janice Rogers, Mrs. Karen Stout and Mrs. Marjorie Williams completed six hours of instruction in history of the Red Cross, the meaning of volunteer service and how to work with other people. They also completed on-the-job training in the hospital, veterinary clinic and the field directors office.

Mrs. Nelson O. Newcombe, post chairman of the volunteers, and Mrs. Thomas M. Tarpley participated in the ceremony.

Whatja wanta Know? ask the BAYONET

CALL 545-4792

DEAR BAYONET:

Why are people with no children living in three bedroom quarters while families with several children are required to accept quarters with two bedrooms or give up their position on the quarters list? R.A.B.

DEAR R.A.B.,

According to the Post Family Housing Branch, quarters are assigned based on family size and availability. If a family refuses quarters too small for its size it does not lose its priority on the waiting list. However, if the family accepts smaller quarters, the cost of a later move to larger quarters must be borne by the family.

Housing cannot set idle indefinitely for the right sized family to come along. This is wasteful and unfair to those who need a place to live.

In the past the Family Housing Branch has run announcements in the Daily and Family Quarters bulletins when large numbers of housing have become available. Anyone who desires to change quarters, such as changing from a three-bedroom duplex to a three-bedroom single home, can put their name on a list then move when that type of quarters becomes available.

Anyone living in housing declared "substandard" is permitted to move to adequate housing for which they qualify at government expense. Those who move off post are not reimbursed for expenses according to current regulations.

Any family who would like to clarify its classification and status should contact the Family Housing Officer, 545-1914.

DEAR BAYONET:

Post regulations prohibit firing fire arms unless an individual is with a unit or performing an assigned duty. How can a father take his son somewhere to teach him to shoot? M.C.

DEAR M.C.,

The post Junior Rifle Association or the Post Rifle and Pistol Club provide range facilities that may be used by young people.

The Junior Rifle Association fires at Parks Range every Saturday morning from 9 until 11:30 a.m. National Rifle Association qualified coaches are available as instructors. Top national and international shooters from the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit also participate as coaches. The .22 caliber single shot rifle may be obtained on a loan basis from the association. Fees consist of a $5 membership fee and a $5 for annual dues. Qualified adults are welcomed as coaches for this program. For more information call SGM Pickle at 545-3294.

The Rifle and Pistol Club operates Phillips Pistol Range. Small caliber rifles may be fired here if the youngster is with a parent or adult member of the club. The club operates from 8 a.m. until 5 p.m. Monday through Friday and from noon until 5 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday. Annual dues are $6. For more information call Mr. Kirkland at 545-3726.

DEAR BAYONET:

Why can't the road to the marina behind the old animal cemetery be policed? There are tons of trash on this road that must have been accumulating for months. It is really an eyesore. R.H.

DEAR R.H.,

This area falls within the School Brigade's "police" area of responsibility: According to Sgt. Maj. Hammil, TSB, current conferences and projects have required manpower in excess of normal requirements. He states that this area has now been policed and he is hopeful that future requirements will enable The School Brigade to police the area on a daily basis.

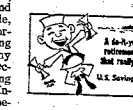
DEAR BAYONET:

My AUSA membership expires in August, can I renew now and take advantage of the lower rates and save $2.50? P.F.C.

DEAR P.F.C.,

Yes!

2/69th hosts 197th's Spring Formal



The honor of hosting the 197th Infantry Brigade's Spring Formal fell to the 2-69th Armor Battalion, who, under the leadership of battalion commander LTC W. J. Eddins Jr. and project officer Maj. Harold A. Thorn, admirably provided for a gala evening's entertainment on Saturday, May 19, at the Supper Club.

After a cocktail hour both inside and on the terrace, the guests were seated in chevron arrangement by battalion at tables decorated with corps colors, candelabra, and the eloquent understatement of creamy magnolia blossoms and glossy greenery. LTC Eddins, flanked by Capt. Ronald W. Tyree, Capt. Michael Maasberg, Capt. Thomas M. Petty, and Lt. Richard Timbo, presented the assembly and honored guests with a sabre salute, followed in candlelight by an impressive presentation of colors, led by CSM Nathan Hoover, marching to the head table and placing the colors behind the honored guests. After introductory remarks, the colors were retired, completing the grandeur of an "Old Army" ritual.

A magnificent dinner of roast prime rib, Rock Cornish hen, baked potatoes, strawberry shortcake, and rose wine, Col. Steele, speaking at his first formal occasion since leaving the United States Army Infantry School as its Secretary and undertaking command of the 197th Infantry Brigade, and special guest Col. Barlow, expressed their appreciation for the arrangements.

An unexpected treat was the toast proposed by the Redlegs and Cottonballers to the Tankers, complete with red and blue mustaches representing the corps colors.

The Sands serenaded the assembly with music of varied periods and styles, superbly assisted by the trumpet artistry of LTC Curtis Hoglan, Commander of the 2-10th Artillery.

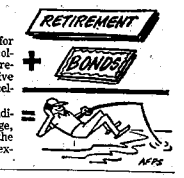
ROTC scholarships awarded

Six four-year Army ROTC scholarships have been awarded to Muscogee County School District students according to an announcement received from the commander of the Third U.S. Army at Fort McPherson, Georgia.



Recipients and colleges or universities they will attend are John R. Jones, son of LTC and Mrs. John L. Jones, 207 Miller Loop, Fort Benning, Montanta State University; Teddy Ramos, son of MSG and Mrs. Theodoro Ramos, 2715 Wise St., Georgia Tech William W. Sydnor, son of LTC and Mrs. Elliot P. Sydnor, 306 Miller Loop, Fort Benning, Florida State; and Augustine Anguio, son of MSG (ret) and Mrs. Agustine Angulo, 142 Torch Hill Road, Georgia Tech. The above winners are all from Baker High School.

Representing Columbus High School is Glenn S. Coburn, son of SP C(ret) and Mrs. Glenn H. Coburn, 6172 Candlestick, who will attend Georgia Tech. Cadet Lt. Col. Robert K. Griswold, son of Col. (ret.) and Mrs. George O. Griswold, 340 Henson Ave. and a student at Kendrick High School, who has been accepted at Auburn University. Young Griswold was also awarded an Air Force ROTC scholarship which he declined.

The certificates of scholarship will be presented by Dr. William Henry Shaw, superintendent of education, at 4 p.m. Tuesday in the Board Room, Administrative Bldg. Mustrict.

The Army ROTC scholarship pays all expenses for tuition, dorm fees, textbooks, and lab fees for the full four years of college. In addition, the recipients will receive $100.00 a month for miscellaneous expenses.

Depending on the individual's choice of college, the total value of the scholarship could be in excess of $12,000.

June 2-3 set aside for MIAs

National M.I.A. Awareness Days, which are sponsored by the MIA Families Committee, will be held June 2-3 at Fort Benning. Sunday there will be booths at the Main Post and Custer Terrace Commissaries and the Thrift Shop for the purpose of passing out literature, selling MIA bracelets and having lists available of senators and congressmen for people with questions. The funds for this organization come from the bracelets they sell.

Sunday all post chapels, and churches across the nation, will conduct special church services for the purpose of underscoring the MIA cause. The last pews will be roped off and at 3 p.m. churches all across the country will ring bells for five minutes to signify the absence of these men.

Presently 1st Sgt. Gobin is the brigade's operations NCO for the brigade's operations section, Gobin is looking forward to a job as company first sergeant in the future. "I have been first sergeant a few times as E-7 (SFC)," said Gobin, "so I'm waiting for a chance to do the same as an E-8 (MSgt.)."

Chargin' Charlie Company of the 43rd Engineer Battalion (Construction) is proud to announce that its choice for Soldier of the Month for the Battalion is the Soldier of the Month for March. He is Sp4 Nathaniel Darrington. Darrington is an Ordinance Equipment Mechanic assigned to the company maintenance section since 9 July 1972. He came to Company C as a Unit of Choice Volunteer who reentered the service after getting out. Darrington hails from Mobile, Ala.

Sp4 Ronald H. Johnson has been chosen Soldier of the Month for April in the 931st Engineer Group.

He is a member of the 669th Ordinance Company where he serves as a legal clerk. Sp4 Johnson was chosen as Soldier of the Month first in the 67th Maint. Bn. then he went on to win honors in the group.

Johnson has been in the Army three years, two of those as a reservist. He feels that the Army is a "good organization with very good retirement benefits which is the reason he joined." He also wanted to go to college and the Army was the only way that he could afford to go to school. He hopes to go to OCS if he decides to stay in the Army.

Mr. Gilbert J. O'Brien, 4975 Glacier Dr., general manager of the Fort Benning Post Exchange, received the Meritorious Civilian Award recently for his contributions to the Post Exchange during the Modern Volunteer Army Program. Among his achievements include the Mod Shop, Fabric Shop, Kiddie Shop and other activities to improve Post Exchange facilities. O'Brien has been assigned as general maanger of the Fort Benning Post Exchange since May 15, 1970, and has completed twenty-six years with the Army and Air Force Exchange Service in Europe, the Far East, and the United States. Presenting the certificate and the $500 award to Mr. O'Brien and his wife, is Maj. Gen. Thomas M. Tarpley, Fort Benning commander. (Photo by Phillip Reid).

Retirees

Chief Warrant Officer Thomas E. Martin, 121st Aviation Co., Aviation Command, was presented the Distinguished Flying Cross during the awards portion of the ceremony. He was awarded the DFC for heroism while participating in aerial flight, as evidenced by voluntary actions above and beyond the call of duty in the Republic of Vietnam.

Mr. Martin distinguished himself by exceptionally valorous actions on 11 June, 1972, while serving with F Troop, 8th Cavalry, 196th Infantry Brigade, flying a helicopter on a visual reconnaissance mission in Western Thua Thien Province. Mister Martin ignored personal safety to attempt the rescue of the personnel of a second scout team in a helicopter which had been downed by heavy enemy fire.

Mr. Martin made numerous attempts to fight his way into the area of the downed aircraft and continued his rescue efforts until he was forced to leave the area due to low fuel levels.

Lt. Col. Michael J. Kotdo, Combat Developments Command Infantry Agency, with 22 years of service, was presented the Legion of Merit. He will reside at 3940 Macon Road, Apt. 31, Columbus.

Over 150 young students performed at the Officers' Wives' Club School of Dance Recital held recently at the Dexter Elementary School Auditorium. Students presented short dances showing progress in their studies of ballet and tap dancing.

Tough terrain slows adventures

Two officers and 12 enlisted men from Headquarters Command, USAIC participated in Adventure Training from April 16 to 18.

The objective of the training was to hike along the Appalachian Trail starting from Unicoi Gap to Neels Gap, a distance of 20.5 miles.

Each individual carried a sleeping bag and rucksack weighing approximately 50 pounds. The basic meals for the trip were LRRP rations. Personnel were transported to the starting point by bus and departed Unicoi Gap at 2:30 p.m. hiked 3 miles to Jacks Knob, and set up bivouac for the night.

The second day's pace was slowed down because of the ruggedness of the terrain, especially Sheep-rock Mountain which was approximately 3400 feet. Another environmental factor plagued the hikers for it rained the entire day making the trail slippery and muddy.

They reached Tesnatee Gap by nightfall, a distance of 11.9 miles. On the third day, the men hiked 5.6 miles in 4 hours, terminating the training at Neels Gap. This Adventure Training proved to be a rewarding experience for the personnel clerks and the bus and truck drivers.

The majority of them had their first taste of LRRP rations and the rigorous trail life was an ideal test for each individual's endurance and physical condition.

Tunnel Rat has hard time

A "Tunnel Rat"

Charles Cato returned to his home in the New York ghetto neighborhood of Bedford-Stuyvesant after spending a year in Pleiku, Vietnam, as a tunnel rat. A tunnel rat is a combat infantryman whose specialty is crawling through enemy tunnels looking for Vietcong.

When he returned to the ghetto, Cato was chided by other blacks there for fighting "the white man's war," but he didn't mind. "I liked my job and found it exciting," he said.

In the beginning, he was bitter about going into the Army because he was free, happy and learning a jewelry trade. But he went when he got his induction notice in 1968.

In Vietnam, many of his friends were killed. He himself shot and killed enemy soldiers because he had no choice. Cato is not bitter, though.

No Job

Charles Cato, like other poor blacks, did not have much to show for his time spent in the service. He wasn't able to find a job or get his old one back, so he went on $33 per month unemployment. He still lives with his mother, brother and sister in a slum apartment. Cato didn't give much thought to the morality of the war while he was over there. The basic thing was to stay alive and come home. After release from the service, he felt that the war should be won and gotten over with.

He did not feel that he fought a "white man's war."

"I don't want to make trouble or feel that I have to hate whitey," he said. "A lot of my friends in Vietnam were white and we had good times together."

David Tuck was a postal worker from a black ghetto in Cleveland, Ohio. Tuck also spent one year in Vietnam as a radio-telephone operator. He was from the same unit as Charles Cato, the 25th Infantry Division, but his outlook on the war and the black soldier differ radically from that of Cato.

Mistake

When Tuck went to Vietnam, he thought the war was "a mistake" from the beginning. After reading and studying the subject, he came to believe that Vietnam was a racial war. "This country uses its minorities to do its dirty work up front in Vietnam — Negroes, Puerto Ricans and hillbillies," he said. "I think it's deliberate. These groups are the same ones that are most despised in American society and who nobody will miss."

Tuck was so upset with what he had seen in Vietnam during his one-year stay that he went to Copenhagen in December, 1967, to testify at the Bertrand Russell International War Crimes Tribunal. There, he told the tribunal of war atrocities committed by American and South Vietnames troops.

"Ironically," he said, "I have to admit I found more democracy among enlisted men in the Army than outside. But this is the only freedom the black people have — to fight and die."

When he returned, Tuck became a member of the activist Black Anti-Draft Union in Cleveland. The group urges blacks to resist the draft by any means.

"If the black man has the courage to fight 10,000 miles away he should have the courage to fight here," he said.

Getting Out

To many blacks and members of minority races, the military is a primary means of escaping the poverty and self-generating caste of the ghetto. Despite the individual prejudices still present in the military, it is still the forerunner in American institutions for promoting racial equality and integration.

Black re-enlistment figures in 1966, a period when the war was approaching its high point, attest to this. During the year 60.5 per cent of blacks in the Army on first-term enlistments decided to re-enlist, a rate more than three times higher than that among whites.

Yet another factor which is puzzling in view of high black enlistments is that a black is more likely to be assigned to a combat unit during his first enlistment because of his lack of skills, poor education and other factors of his ghetto experience. Although this fact has been constantly changing with black gains in education, it still remains an ever-present factor.

Fodder

Black militant see no heroism or pride in the combat performance of blacks in Vietnam. They see the black man and other poor individuals as cannon fodder. Stokely Carmichael once said that it is "clear that the white man is moving to get rid of black people in the ghettoes." That there are many young blacks in the military today, however, proves that not every young black man or woman is a militant.

Otillo Might, former Air Force sergeant with 20 years service and head staff man of the New York regional veterans office in 1968, said this about blacks returning from the war in Vietnam:

"The black veteran is like a cross-section of black America. There are all kinds of guys who has been out of circulation and isolated for two years. I'm not saying he won't ever get involved. If some of the vets use what they have learned over there it won't really be surprising. On the other hand if a lot of others don't do anything I wouldn't be surprised either.

Stations resume hours

All service stations will resume normal operating hours on June 1 with the exception of the small station on Wold Ave. (Main Post) and the Sand Hill station which will remain closed initially. The purpose is to create a small reserve. These two stations may be open at a later date depending on the rate of consumption during the early part of June.

Two local seniors receive Ed. grants

Two Columbus high school seniors, Pedro Dominguez of Baker and Evelyn Hanes of Kendrick, received educational grants from the Noncommissioned Officers Wives Club at Fort Benning Wednesday, May 16, at the NCO Club.

Pedro Dominguez, the son of Staff Sgt. (ret.) and Mrs. Pedro Dominguez of 2323 Pye Ave., Columbus, plans to enter the Georgia Institute of Technology, where he will study aerospace engineering.

Evelyn Hanes, whose parents are SFC (ret) and Mrs. Roy Hanes, 4655 Acorn St., Columbus, will attend Auburn University. She will major in music education.

The grants, which are sent to the school chosen by the recipients, are to be used for tuition, books, and other expenses. They are awarded on the basis of a point system composed of academic average and other factors.

They were presented by Mrs. John F. LaVoie, wife of the post command sergeant major.

Coming to the screen

The Thief Who Came to Dinner

Super-jewel thief, Ryan O'Neal, a computer-analyst dropout, meets Jacqueline Bisset, a beautiful but bankrupt young socialite. Fascinated by O'Neal and by his new profession, Bisset forms a partnership with O'Neal. On each robbery, O'Neal leaves a chess piece with a note which marks him as The Chess Burglar. Warren Oates, an insurance investigator, is hot on the trail of O'Neal and persuades the chess editor of The Houston Post, to challenge O'Neal to a public chess match through the paper. O'Neal beats Pendelton by computer and next plans to use his brains, his technical knowledge and the garb of a priest to checkmate Oates and steal the $6,000,000 (350 carat) Mokinoor diamond on exhibit at the Houston Museum of Natural History. O'Neal's great jewel theft really rocks Houston and shakes Oates quite a bit too.

Two People

Peter Fonda plays an American deserter from combat in Vietnam who, after three years in Moroccan exile, leaves for New York (via Casablanca and Paris) to give himself up to authorities. On the train to Casablanca, Fonda meets Lindsay Wagner, a jaded fashion model, who is immediately attracted to him. At first Fonda rigidly puts her off but love quickly grows in spite of the circumstances. Ms Wagner pleads with Fonda to stay in Europe and start a new life with her. He insists he's through running and ready to face the military.

Winning

The stock cars, sports cars, Indy types — they are all part of Paul Newman's life as one of the top auto race drivers in the country. A race is lost because a 16 cent linkage lock nut breaks or a race is won in a wheel to wheel duel and breaking the curve first. It's racing at its best with unusual excitement and suspense that will thrill auto racing enthusiasts, sports fans and action fans as well.

Black Caesar

Partially crippled by sadistic cop (Art Lund) in his youth, Fred Williamson, grows up as a force in crime. "BLACK CAESAR," (Williamson) takes over a Harlem-South Bronx crime syndicate through his acquisition of a set of payoff ledgers that incriminate New York politicos. Lund, now a Captain attempts to have some of his men kill "BLACK CAESAR," through use of Williamson's former girlfriend and a blood bath ensues in a climatic chase through New York's midtown.

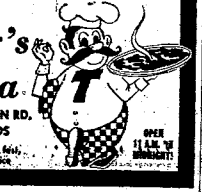
The Honkers

James Coburn plays a rough-and-tumble rodeo cowboy who lives by the code "if you ain't cheatin', you ain't tryin'." Coburn seeks to find himself while enjoying the life of a drifter. Lois Nettleton co-stars as Coburns long-suffering wife, Linda, who is convincingly disillusioned and teary-eyed about her sometimes husband, and to his adoring son Ted Eccles. Slim Pickens, a former rodeo clown, gives a stirring performance as the flinty sidekick who pulls Coburn out of an assortment of scrapes. Anne Archer plays a spoiled, sultry Indian girl who has admired Coburn's prowess from childhood.

Everyone is invited to attend workshops

The Fort Benning Dramatizers invite all interested persons; military, civilian, dependent, member or non - member of the Dramatizers to attend the work shops which are held at the Fort Benning Playhouse, Bldg. 127 on Ingersoll just behind the Infantry Museum and the Beveridge Store, each Saturday.

The workshops run from 10 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. and consist of three separate programs.



The first workshop is a class on the elements of the theatre, including acting and the technical aspects of theatre. The class is conducted by Bob Swain, who has considerable acting experience, who was the associate director for "Edwin Booth" and who has submitted a play for the next production of the Dramatizers.

At 11:45 a.m., Kathy Kerick and Anne Disbrow conduct a workshop in body movement for the stage and dance. The class primarily allows a person to become aware of how to use his body while on the stage.

Sheila Dowse holds a workshop in voice and diction at 12:45 p.m. This class teaches breath and voice control for persons interested in any type of public speaking.

All classes are open to non - members and members of the Dramatizers. In addition to the classes which are held on Saturdays, there is a class on

". . .Often times a father tries to impose military discipline on his children. He may set stern rules for his son's haircuts and rigid curfews for his daughter."

Alcohol is another great factor. "A father stands there with a martini in his hand and tells his kids not to smoke grass," one of the children said.

"Every young person at some time or another, wants to run away," says Gerard Sireci, an investigator for the Drug Education and Juvenile Division of the Provost Marshal's Office. He says that it is not an overnight decision but a culmination of various experiences.

Some 85 youngsters ran away from Fort Benning homes last year and almost 40 have run away so far this year. Between 500,000-one million youngsters in this country run away each year.

They are between the ages of 13 and 17 and most of them are girls. Benning youths usually go to Panama City or Phaenix, Ariz. and are usually gone for two or three days . They usually go during the summer or spring and come back on their own free will. Boys sometimes steal during that time but girls usually don't commit any type of crime. When they still can't cope with their problems at home or school very many of them become repeaters.

Counselors at runaway houses across the nation say that a disproportionate number of the teenagers they see are from career military homes. Peter Quezada, Chief of the Juvenile Division, MPI, says that about 80 per cent of the runaways here come from enlisted families. He attributes part of the problem to lack of education of both parents. "If a father never completed high school the kid says, 'how can he tell me what to do?'

Benny L. Wright, Ray Jaklitsch, Quezada and Sireci, all investigators at the provast marshal's office arrived at the major causes these youngsters leave home.

Parents often fail to listen and try to understand their children. "Children actually have four sets of genes, two from their mother and two from their father. This is a mixture of four people which gives them an individual personality with their own likes and dislikes," says Wright.

A common problem with military youngsters is that often times a father tries to impose military discipline on his children. He may set stern rules for his son's haircuts and rigid curfews for his daughter.

Alcohol is another great factor. "A father stands there with a martini in his hand and tells his kids not to smoke grass," one of the children said.

Breakdown in the home, pushing youngsters to grow up too fast, favoritism of one child, not being there when a child needs to talk and a general lack of understanding are other factors.

"Parents forget that they were once kids. They say they didn't do things that their kids are doing now but they did and just forgot about it. They lose perspective of growing up—it's like history starts when you are 21," says Sireci.

Trust is a key word Jaklitsch thinks. He feels that parents should put a little trust in their children and not be so reluctant to allow them a bit of independence. Working would be good for them because it would team them responsibility and instill in them some pride. But he admitted that it would be hard to find work on post, and getting parental permission might be a problem. He felt that having youngsters work at home for an allowance might alleviate this problem.

"Seven out of every ten runaways that come to the attention of the Military Police have said their parents don't listen to them, that their parents are old foshioned, their parents are too busy with their own activities to care, or a particular teacher has a prejudice against a child and it goes on and on," says Quezada.

One of the men attributed much of the problem to today's media. He said that the television is no replacement for parents, and that it is also no madel for the ideal family. Television programs tend to stress freedom, material objects and acting young rather than better relationships.

"I had always thought of running away," an 18 year old girl admitted. "I finally left for one day and when I came back my father beat me up. I hated him then, but I knew I would never run away again."

Many psychologists say that children like to be reprimanded. The four investigators agreed that waiting up for a child, spanking them (not beating them) and taking mild disciplinary actions make youngsters feel loved.

One of the men said that when a child is spanked he realizes that it is out of love and that his father means what he says.

"When my daughter started packing her bags I was upset, but I knew this was a stage all children go through," said a mother of an only child. "A week later I was a nervous wreck. My husband was in Viet Nam and I couldn't find her. I didn't know where I'd gone wrong. When the police picked her up and we were counseled I realized that I hadn't spent enough time with her and she realized that she couldn't take advantage of me just because her father wasn't home."

"It's not the amount of time you spend with children but it's what you do with the time you have," Jaklitsch says. "A park, a zoo or even a library are fine, but I don't count sitting in front of the television as spending time with them."

The men from MPI have been responsible for counseling many of the Fort Benning runaways and their porents. Quezada says that the parents usually come in with a negative attitude but by the time they've listened to the problem they usually admit some wrong. The object of this counseling is to reach a compromise between both parties.

Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Sterling A. Wetherell has said the following on the subject: "Runaway children may not be the real problem. The problem is mare likely runaway parents. Parents who are too busy in their professional life or too busy climbing the social ladder. The family must be a unit. It must have love, discipline, communication and fellowship. Too often the parents have written off the children because they don't understand their music, their haircuts and interests. It must be the family that provides the needs of the children. Agencies, clubs, youth activities or other agencies cannot provide the love, discipline, communication and fellowship they require. We have a lot of activities on this past and there will be even more during the summer such as bible schools, Girl Scouts, Boy Scouts and sports programs. It seems the parent uses these activities as a baby-sitting service or as an agency to take over the responsibility of the home. This is the way parents lose contact with their children. This is very often the cause presenting the problem of runaway children."

The solution could be in realizing that children are not governed by military regulations, that they should be treated as individuals and should be trusted. Quezada says, "Perhaps the key to prevention of Juvenile Delinquency lies in three words: parents, love and care."

For counseling or advice before a crisis occurs, individuals can call the Army Health Nurse at 545-4041 or 545-5431, the Mental Hygiene Clinic at 545-1718, the Family Counseling Center at 1425 3rd Ave. at 327-3238 or individuals at the Juvenile and Drug Abuse Division in the Office of the Provost Marshal at 545-2016, 5880 or 4924.

Hospital could be "Haven" for mistreated children

A 13 year old girl was seen around Martin Army Hospital for several consecutive days. The alert staff noticed that she was wearing the same clothes and that she appeared to be in distress.

When questioned, the girl readily admitted that she had runaway from home because she had been severely disciplined.

She didn't know where to go, so she came to Martin Army Hospital. She subsisted by obtaining leftover food from the ward tray carts before they were returned to the kitchen.

The runaway girl is in the hospital for treatment now. An investigation is being made as to the cause of her injuries.

Some children run away without a good reason. They are rebelling against reasonable and necessary discipline. Others are victims of abuse and running away is their only way out of a very unpleasant and unhealthy situation. These children need help and it is available when the proper authorities become aware of the situation.

If you are one of these unfortunate victims or if you know of any child that is being mistreated, the Army Health Nurse is the one to help. You can reach her at 545-4041 or 545-5431.

'Mission Reenlistment' stars 58th Inf. Patriots

"Mission Reenlistment" is the title of a new Army film which was made in part at Fort Benning. The filming took place last November. MSG Joseph Dailey, Post Reenlistment Counselor, and SFC Silvester Gallardo, 1st Bn. (Mech), 58th Inf. (The Patriots), 197th Inf. Bde., took part in the 30 minute film.

MSG Dalley and SFC Gallardo were chosen from a possible fifty non-commissioned officers at Ft. Benning. Other NCOs and officers participating in the film were chosen from Ft. Hood, Texas and Ft. Carson, Colorado. Ten men in all were chosen to take part in a group discussion on reenlistment.

SFC Gallardo explained in the film how soldiers of the 1st Bn. (Mech), 58th Inf., were motivated to reenlist: "In our battalion we get the wives of the men directly involved with what their husbands are doing. The battalion Wives' Club meets on a monthly basis to discuss their views on the Army. This enables the wives of the younger soldiers to talk with the wives of the career soldiers and obtain their views on Army life. The wives also attend battalion level race relations conferences when they are scheduled. During such meetings, many misconceptions about the Army are resolved and the women learn of the many advantages of an Army life. This makes for a happier home life for the soldier and his family and many times encourages him to reenlist."

To prepare for the film the men chosen had to go through a "confidence course" set up by Pat Riley, the producer. The course was designed to make the men completely trusting of one another and to talk freely and openly. In order to establish this trust each member of the group was requested to close his eyes while in the center of a circle formed by the other group members and was instructed to assume a rigid position and fall freely allowing one of the other members to catch him as he fell.

"Mission Reenlistment" was filmed in the studios of Infantry Hall and in the motor pool and picnic grounds of the 1st Bn. (Mech.), 58th Inf.

The sequence filmed in the motor pool involved LTC Robert E. Orkand, battalion commander and CPT Ed Kelly, commander of Company C. LTC Orkand and CPT Kelly discussed their views on reenlistment.

The sequence at the picnic grounds involved Sp4 David Workman and his wife Donna, SFC Gallardo's wife, Hilda and 1SG Pink Dillard's wife, Priscilla.

43rd Engr. move 60 ton bridge

How do you move a 60 Ton Steel Bridge? You call on Charlie Compaoy, 43rd Engineer Battalion.

Relocation of a large Bridge - GREASE! - Back from Sand Hill to Co. C's Motor Pool became a reality today. Men of all skills united to move the 60 ton bulk of steel and concrete.

The project began under the leadership of SSG Hicks of the 1st Platoon. Using an air compressor and 45 lb. drill, Pvts. Ferris, Duffy, and Dufresne drilled holes through the three feet diameter support columns so that they could be lifted out of the ground. On three occasions capable assistance was provided by Crane and Dozer operators of the 586th Float Bridge Company. The 586th moved the 6 x 13 feet concrete footers into position for lifting and loaded eight two ton Steel deck members on 25 Ton Low Bed Trailers.

The final test came on May 10th when two cranes joined to lift the footers onto 25 Ton Trailers. All three footers were successfully loaded and roaded to the battalion by Sp5 Varnadore and Pvt. Rowland.

Meanwhile, Sgt. Gothard prepared new footer locations back at the 43rd. Assisting in final location of the footers and reconstruction of the rack were Sp4 Marino, McFarland, PFC Berry and Pvts. Wood, Black, Shertze, Ferris, and Duffy. Pvt. Spence was able to safely unload the large footers and deck sections from their trailers and place them successfully using fully extended outriggers and several guide ropes.

Movement of massive structures is just one more capability of the men and equipment of the 43rd Engineer Battalion (Construction).

Classes to be started for expectant parents

Pregnancy and childbirth are normal, natural happenings. It is believed that through a thorough program of education, the expectant father and mother can be prepared both physically and emotionally to make childbirth and parenthood a satisfying and rewarding experience.

The Army Health Nursing Service, in conjunction with the Obstetrics Department, Martin Army Hospital, is beginning another series of Expectant Parent's Classes on 5 June 1973. The series consists of four classes, each two hours long, on four Tuesday nights of the month. Classes are held in the Conference Room on the second floor of Martin Army Hospital.

The sessions improve your knowledge of pregnancy, childbirth, and newborn babies. Movies, slides, short talks, and discussion groups help to explain the physical structure of the male and female, reproduction, body changes, signs of labor and infant care.

The first class includes psychological aspects of parenthood, and exercises. The second class describes labor and delivery and includes a tour of the Labor and Delivery Suite, the third describes Obstetrical anesthesia and the fourth describes infant care, with a special session on breast feeding. It is best to start with the first class in the series and continue with the same group; however, if you should miss one class, you can make it up in the next series.

Particular care is taken to make each expectant mother and father aware of forthcoming events. Fear and uncertainty are results of meeting the unexpected. For assurance and knowledge, you are encouraged to attend a series of Expectant Parent's Classes during your pregnancy. The Obstetrician, Anesthetist, Chaplain, Nursery Nurse, and the Army Health Nurse all participate in the series. It is an excellent opportunity to ask questions

Meals innovated at 524th PSC

The 524th Personnel Service Company Dining Facility, in keeping with its tradition of preparing the best meals possible, has begun an innovation in its meal. Each Thursday the Mess Steward, SFC Mack Graves, will present an "International Supper." These meals are intended to offer a different and exciting touch to Army menus. The first of such meals was a Soul Supper.

This meal featured traditional Southern foods such as chitterlings, pigs feet, barbecued spareribs and other fine dishes. The 931st Eggineer Group Commander, Col. James Thompson, 524th Personnel Service Company Commander, Capt. James Davies and their families were in attendance.

The Mess Officer, Capt. David T. Stanley, SFC Graves and all the Mess Personnel are making every effort to assure that these International meals are a complete success. One of the cooks, Sp5 John Vandewiele comments, "I think the troops accept and enjoy these meals very much. Each cook involved puts forth his best effort to assure that this meal is a complete success." One of the typical comments made about the meal was by Sp5 Amos Conner who said "The food was very tasty. It was very interesting to find a dining hall preparing food different from what is normally offered."

Based on this successful Soup Supper an Italian Dinner and planned Oriental and Mexican-American dinners, the "International Dining Hall" of the 524th Personnel Service Company will continue to offer different meals with a truly international flavor.

Try it. Just stop by any CB&T office and open a "Forget about Saving" account for $5.00 a week. Or any amount, for that matter. Then, just forget it for a while. After a few weeks, check and see how much you've saved. You'll be surprised when you see how fast even $5.00 a week will add up. Especially when your money is earning the highest interest a commercial bank can pay.

But here's what really makes this plan work so well. We make the deposits for you. By transfering whatever amount you choose from your CB&T checking account to your savings account. So come by CB&T, and tell us you want to forget about saving. It'll be the most rewarding thing you've ever forgotten.

Forget about saving...we'll remember for you!

Steve Darah demonstrates his championship form as he captures the Men's open division of the USAIC Tennis Championship held May 21-25 at the Main Post tennis courts. Darah won in hard fought sets 2-6, 6-2 and 6-0 to gain the victory against Wayne Smoot in the open finals. Other winners were Gary Shimizu teaming up with Darah to take the doubles open category. Allan Mathews nabbed senior singles and Francis Nervone teamed with Annan Mathews to capture senior division doubles. The Championship was held to determine post tennis champions and select teams to participate in the 1973 Third U.S. Army Men's and Women's tennis tournament at Ft. Bragg, June 4-8.

Memorial Day golfing results

Two Golf tournaments over the Memorial Day weekend offered golfers of Fort Benning a chance to drag their golf clubs out of the closet and head for the greens.

Seven golfers advanced to the semi finals round of the Fort Benning Country Club Spring Handicap Golf Tournament being held at the Country Club. They are SFC Ozzie Melendez, first flight; Lt. Col. James Volkman, second flight; Maj. Patrick Cannan, third flight; Maj. Robert Thomas, fourth flight; Lt. Col. Sid Anderson, fifth flight; Capt. Doug Main, sixth flight; and Lt. Col. (ret.) Ronald Cannemela, seventh flight. Flight winners will now be matched against each other to determine the club handicap champion.

At the opposite end of the post the Sand Hill Memorial Day Four Ball Golf Classic was underway. Team winners were: Jimmie Gary and Lee Howard, championship flight; George Faulshack and Charles Jones, first flight; D. L. Foramore and Bobby Pounds taking the second flight. Runnerups were William Webb and W. M. Blankenship in the championship flight, William Lutz and S. L. Powell, first flight; and Joe Flynt and Samuel Shaver, second flight. Closest to the second hole was James Muse while. W. M. Blankenship edged closest to the fourth pole.

The Officers Open Mess Memorial Day Golf Tournament was cancelled due to bad weather.

Powerful offense has been key in TSB Softball

Powerful offense has been the key all season long in TSB company level softball, and the latest games are no exception.

IOAC 6-73 battered out 17 hits against 3d Ranger Co., but still had to come from behind in the last inning to beat the Rangers 11-10. The Rangers, who led all the way until the final inning, cracked 13 hits.

IOAC 4-73 jumped off to an early 8-3 lead in the second inning, but it took three more runs to topple HHC, TSB (B) team 11-8.

IOAC 5-73 came close to shutting out the 5th Stu. Bn., however, 5th Bn. managed a run in the 4th inning and IOAC-5 had to settle for a 10-1 win.

USAIS Combat and Training Development used an awesome 20 home runs to dump 2d Stu. Bn. 21-16. All of 2d Bn's. 16 runs came on home runs.

May 17th IOAC 2-73 forfeited to IOAC 6-73.

Baseball tryouts

There will be a final tryout for all leagues June 2, 10 a.m. at Green Field for those who missed the regular scheduled tryouts or registered late.

By Bill Kloeb

Early this week local television and newspapers gave accounts of deplorable conditions at the city dog pound over the Memorial Day weekend. The story and pictures were enough to boil the blood of any dog lover.

From time to time these conditions are duplicated throughout the country. Each time people get up in arms, but who is really to blame. The people who are employed to take care of animals brought to pounds are not necessarily animal lovers. They get paid to do a job and like in any other field of work there are conscientious workers and then there are those who just put in time. The real culprits seem to me to be the so-called animal lovers who abandon a one time pet to fend for itself.

These former pets become real pests as far as the public is concerned. They raid garbage cans for food, bark or howl all night, frighten children and adults alike and provide a real threat in the spread of rabies.

I'm not defending anyone at any animal holding facility that doesn't treat the animals in a humane manner. What I'm getting at is that the animals in all probability wouldn't end up in a pound as their last place if some former owner hadn't turned them loose in the first place.

Dogs are just about the largest threat to our game population according to wildlife rangers. They claim not to have much trouble with sporting type dogs. A few of these dogs are lost from the hunter each year but generally hunters place a high value on their dogs and go to great lengths to get them back. During the non-hunting season they are careful to keep the working dogs penned. Its the people who leave dogs to run that cause the trouble according to the rangers. They say some people just don't seem to care what their dogs do. They won't keep them penned, won't put an identification collar on them and don't bother to follow rules concerning vaccination.

Rangers also say a large part of the problem comes from people dumping their dogs in isolated areas to fend for themselves. Some of these animals die because of the new and strange environment but those that do not are hardy, resourceful creatures that soon find they can live better as part of a pack. That's where real trouble starts. These packs seem to have a special liking for deer. They are quite capable of running down the strongest buck. They have to do this consistantly or they are going to starve to death. A pack of from six to ten dogs require quite a bit of meat each day. That isn't the last of the problem either. These wild dogs breed and according to reports have good success in raising litters. The wild dog problem gets worse each year.

Last year the Georgia Cattlemen's Association reported that wild dog packs had accounted for the destruction of about one million dollars worth of beef. This must have some effect on the price of beef.

These dog packs have been known to attack humans too. Each year there are several harrowing reports of dogs attacking people.

Perhaps the most frightening aspect of the dog problem is the rabies threat. This is one of the most dreaded diseases known to man. Once it has incubated in any susceptible animal it is always fatal. There is no known treatment for the disease. Death is agonizing. The victim may go mad. The only saving factor is that the disease has such a long incubating period in humans that preventive vaccine can be given exposed people before the disease takes hold. Ironically, many people who take rabies shots probably don't really need them. They are taken as a preventive measure because the stray dog that bit them cannot be located and tested for signs of rabies.

This problem has been with us a long time and it gets worse as time goes by. It causes heartaches to parents who have children who must take rabies shots, expenditures of considerable sums of money to control and extreme physical discomfort to the animals and their victims.

O'Brien and company win M16 championship

1st Lt. Bruce E. O'Brien, Jacksonville, Fla., and the U. S. Army in Europe, slammed the door on his near 300 competitors May 28 and won the M16 Service Rifle championship in the All Army Rifle and Pistol Matches.

O'Brien posted a two-day five match aggregate of 619-40X, two points more than his nearest competitor SFC George Floyd and S-Sgt. Earl Waterman Jr.

In the final count, Floyd gained the runner up spot with more X count than Waterman.

Waterman, shooting for the U. S. Army in Europe, overcame the strong gusty winds to turn in two perfect matches of 100 each and a 92 to lead at the end of the first day. O'Brien shared the runner-up position along with SFC Roy E. Stevenson of the Third Army with 290-19X.

Although he failed to win a single match, O'Brien's steady performance, while his many opponents were rising and falling, won for him the championship.

Individual match winners in the M16 championship showed S-Sgt. Ernest Vick taking the initial opener, a 100 yard event by placing all 20 of his shots in the center ring with 15 hits in the X or very center of the target. SFC Norman Clark of Sixth Army performed a similar feat in the 200 yard match with 11 hits in the X.

For Clark, his 206-11X established an All Army record for this match.

In the 300 yard rapid fire match, Sergeant Stevenson overcame his many competitors and the high winds to post the wioning score of 96-5X.

A second All Army record was placed in the record books in the fourth match, the precision combat rifle event, when Floyd set a new high mark of 242-15X in that varied range and position match.

The old mark of 238 was also beaten by runner up S-Sgt. Elmer Mondon of Third Army at 241 and Capt. Ed Schumacher, shooting for the U. S. Army in Europe at 239-17X.

The final match of the series, a 400 yard event, was captured by S-Sgt. Roger Williamson who dropped only five hits from the center ring of his target for a 95-5X. This was Williamson's first time to compete in All-Army.

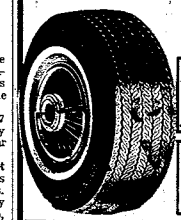
In the M16 team precision combat match, the Third Army "Red" squad placed a composite score of 1,386-67X on the board to win the championship. The team members were: SFC Miroslav Pova, SFC William A. Sawvell, SSgt. Arthur Austin, SSgt. James D. Smith, SSgt. Elmer Mondon and Sp4 Eddie Sines.

The championship of the M16 coupled with the later championship of the M14 as an aggregate make up the All Army Rifle Championship. Defending All Army Champion is SSgt. Arpail Gapol of Sixth Army.

Cop cops class

SSgt. Tom Cain from the 138th Military Police Company, Fort Benning, was the money winner in the ET meet on May 23.

Tom Cain and his '67 Camaro powered their way successfully through four rounds to win his class.



And then he rapidly set down the trophy winners of the other two classes. SSgt. Cain outran Tommy Pollard, Class B champ, on a Kamasaki first with a 12:40 ET and then Melvin Buford, Class C champ, in a Chevy Malibu, with a 12:38 ET (Elapsed Time). That's consistency and that's the name of the game in ET bracket racing.

Forty-nine cars were entered in the ET meet. Some of the other Fort Benning personnel that turned out to try their driving prowess were Buddy Mudl, HHC, 197th Brigade; Ricky Roland, C Co., 43rd Engineer Group; Ken Dodoridge, 80th Replacement Company; and Duke Burwell, Army Community Service.

The next time some guy brags on how fast his machine will go, tell him to bring it out to Phenix Dragway and show you. "Street racing is not Drag racing."

See you tomorrow night if the Jet Cars don't blow us away. Don't forget your earplugs.

Fish

Ponds on Post are loaded

By
James S. Howard

Most avid fishermen and outdoormen at Fort Benning hear about the great fishing in post ponds but usually only learn of three or four major ponds. Most nimrods usually hear of Victory Pond, Kings Pond, Twilight Pond and maybe if they are lucky, Harps Pond. Fishermen are missing a treat if they don't fish some of the other eleven ponds on post.....

Also if you like to make your fishing trips into family outings, or just like to get your family outdoors, several ponds offer picnic areas suitable for the family.

Kings Pond

The largest and most popular pond on post is Kings Pond. It is 75 acre pond located off of Hourglass Road and Black Hawk Trail. It combines a family atmosphere with some of the best fishing on post. The area around the pond has been cleared and planted with grass. Picnic tables, latrine facilities and a lodge have been constructed in this area to make it a perfect picnicing area or camping ground. Bass, catfish and panfish predominate in this pond. It is open seven days a week and harbors 11 boats for fishing. As SFC Don Carr puts it, Since I'm married, it's a good pond for the wife. It's clean and there aren't a lot of snags to worry about.

Harps Pond

Harps Pond probably produces some of the largest fish on the post waters, but since it is located in a major impact area, fishing is limited to weekends and holidays. This pond is located off the beaten path so management has been directed towards clearing of shorelines. It is located on Keystone Trail about eight tenths of a mile south of Buckeye Trail. Fourteen boats are available for recreational purposes at this 56 acre facility. Bass, catfish and panfish are taken from this pond.

SSG Richard Patterson tells of this being his favorite pond because of the wide variety of fish taken from this pond. "When I go to Harps Pond, I'm almost assured of landing some type of fish. When I fish at ponds like twilight, which are strictly catfish, if you don't catch a catfish because they're not biting then you're going to go home empty handed."

Harps Pond is a place that I go by myself because of the snakes, if I'm going with my family I either go to Victory Pond, Twilight or Kings pond. It's safe for the family, I can enjoy myself for the day, picnic, and it really doesn't matter if I catch anything. I have fished most of the ponds on post and caught fish at most of them but everyone has a preference and mine is Harps Pond.

Twilight Pond

Twilight Pond is an excellent area for family enjoyment with it's fishing, picnicing areas and playground available. Catfish are the main fish taken here with a few bass and panfish also present. It is located off Hourglass Road. There are eight boats available for recreational purposes on this 25 acre facility.

Victory Pond is another of the popular, regularly used ponds on post. Victory is a good place for a family outing or a serious day of fishing, being accessible to the waters edge by car and located along 8th Division Road. It is a 25 acre pond mainly used as a catfish pond some estimated over 20 pounds but still producing big bass and panfish. Seven boats are available for recreational purposes.

Weems Pond located on Jamestown Road is accessable on an excellent hardtop road and is one of the favorite bass ponds on the post. The shoreline along the western portion of the pond has been cleared, planted to grass, and picnic tables placed in this area making it an excellent camping and picnicing area.

This Forty acre pond also produces channel catfish and bluegill. Two boats are located at this pond for your convenience.

Averetts Pond a slightly smaller pond at 12 acres but produces good catches of bass, catfish and panfish. This pond is located off Americo Trail and all indications are that this pond is in excellent condition.

For youngsters

Headleys Pond is a good place to take the youngsters to fish. Plenty of panfish keep them busy and interested while you enjoy the day and indulge in some serious fishing. Bass and panfish are taken from this pond. It is located on 10th Division Road.

Another of the smaller ponds but a good bass and panfish producer is Stephens Pond (7 acres) located off the istersection of Buffalo and Red Diamond Roads. It is opened seven days a week.

Patterson's Pond one acre less than Stephens Pond affords a variety of bass, bluegill and redear. Samples of the adults show that these species are in good condition and it also indicated a balanced fish population. One boat is provided at this site for the convenience of the sportsmen. This pond is open 7 days a week and is found east of Christopher Road.

Plenty of ponds

A few more ponds on post that excellent fishing spots are Kirks Pond, McMath, Schley, Clear Creek and Popes Pond.

Off Rinehare Road, You'll find Snellings Pond.

I know most of you are probably saying 'I didn't know there were all those ponds on post', well now you know, so take your rods in hand and try your luck at some of these ponds unfamiliar to you. Why waste any more time, that big one is waiting for you.

Rod and Gun

It's going to take a lot of public opinion to change the tide as far as this problem is concerned. Each of us can do our part by letting other people know how we feel about those who allow their pets to run loose or those who have the idea to dump an animal in the boondocks.

We can also take an active part by informing the proper authorities when we see animals running loose and unattended. Those who do this aren't squeeling. They are just demonstrating that they feel laws enacted to protect the public should be enforced.

If you observe loose dogs on the post call the Provost Marshal Desk Sergeant at 545-5222. Those in Columbus should call 323-7281. In Phenix City call 298-0611. To get help from the Humane Society call 689-7792. These same numbers will get you help if you have an animal that has to be disposed of in a humane manner.

Jill Paasch conquers field for O.W.C. Golfers trophy

The annual Ladies Golf Association tournament for the O.W.C. trophy was played May 23rd at the Country Club. Mrs. Jill Paasch conquered the field and captured the trophy for the next year.

At the luncheon following play, Mr. Howard Holbrook, professional at the club, presented prizes to the following winners: Mrs. Jill Paasch, first; Mrs. Mozelle Dunn and Mrs. Naomi French, tied for second; Mrs. Mary Ann Bell, Mrs. Carolyn Lee, and Mrs. Pat Holtzapple, tied for third; Mrs. Mary Cannan, fourth and Mrs. Lee May, fifth.

A business meeting followed the luncheon and award ceremony. Mrs. Mary Cannan presented the new slate of officers and they were elected unanimously. Mrs. Mary Cannan will succeed herself as president with Mrs. Pat Holtzapple as vice president, Mrs. Pat Hayman, secretary; and Mrs. Alice Keifer as treasurer.

Mrs. Mary Magner, special events chairman awarded charms to the following: Mrs. Lee May, Mrs. Mozelle Dunn and herself, all for breaking 90.

Weekly tournament prizes were presented by Mrs. Betty Pritchard to the following ladies: Silver Cup Day, Mrs. Chinky Sogard, first; Mrs. Helga Brockner, Mrs. Reva Brooks and Mrs. Gladys Fowler tied for second. Point tournament winners were Mrs. Alice Keifer, first and Mrs. Lee May and Mrs. Rachel Rushing tied for second. On Nassau Day Mrs. Alice Keifer won best front nine, Mrs. Florence Heath won best back nine, and Mrs. Mia Harris had best eighteen. On April 17 Silver Cup Day Mrs. Mozelle Dunn won first with Mrs. Rachel Rushing taking second. May 1st Silver Cup Day, Mrs. Pat Holtzapple won the cup with Mrs. Mollie Ross taking second.

Mrs. Helga Brockner sponsored the spertif hour as a farewell to the L.G.A. The group thanked her and wished her well in her new home in Port Charlotte, Florida.

Marksmen do well in competition

Holding on grimly to his hard earned five point lead established during the Center Fire Pistol matches, SFC Harland Rennolds of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Training Unit, posted an .882 in the 45 Caliber Pistol matches May 25 and coasted into the victory circle of the Three Gun 2,700 Grand Aggregate Championship of the Southeastern Regional Rifle and Pistol Matches at this west Georgia Infantry post with his three day total of 2,662-128X.

Rennolds outpointed his nearest opponent, SFC Hershel Anderson by five points in the Center Fire Matches and tied him during the final 45 Caliber Pistol series to keep his lead intact for the championship.

Simultaneously on the high power rifle ranges, Olympic Gold Medalist Maj. Lones W. Wigger, Jr., of the Army Marksmanship Unit, brushed the opposition aside and won the Service Rifle contest with a resounding 987-45X, a ten point spread over his nearest competitor.

Over 500 competitors of mixed Army, Army Reserve, National Guard, Police and civilian marksmen vied for the three day rifle and pistol championships which served as a preliminary to the All Army Rifle and Pistol Matches which commenced May 27.

In the individual handgun matches which served as sub-aggregates toward the grand championships, Anderson won the 22 Caliber Pistol four match series with his 892-46X, Rennolds topped the Center Fire Pistol total with an 890-44X and S-Sgt. Jimmy McCauley earned the top spot in the 45 Caliber Pistol series with his 883-38X.

Results of the handgun team competition showed the U.S. Army "Blue" team fielded by the U.S. Army Marksmanship Training Unit making a clean sweep of the three gun action. The team members included Rennolds, Anderson, Sicinski and SFC Bonnie Harmon.

On the rifle range, Capt. Ed Schumacher, firing for the U.S. Army in Europe, started strong and took the initial match, a 200 yard slow fire off-hand match with 195-7X.

The second match, a 200 yard rapid fire event was claimed by the accurate shooting of SFC Gary Panzer of Fort Riley, Kans., who posted a 200-3X.

Wigger vaulted into the lead during the 300 yard rapid fire prone event with his 200-9X and never relinquished his position through the remaining matches for the championship.

At the 600 yard long range matches, Schumacher claimed a one point marginal victory over Wigger in the first event with his 199-6X but Wigger surged back and captured the final long range match with his 198-12X.

In the three top aggregate spots, S-Sgt. Arpail Gapol of 6th Army gained the runner up spots behind Wigger with his 977-28X while third place honors went to SFC Martin Edmondson with 976-33X.

A U.S. Army "Blue" rifle team coached by veteran coach M-Sgt. Roy Combs, clinched the championship of the Southeastern Regional Rifle matches with their composite score of 1,931-51X. The team, fielded by the U.S. Army Marksmanship Training Unit, included National Service Rifle Champion SFC Martin Edmondson, SFC George Floyd, S-Sgt. Harvey Skinner and SGT Tommy Covington.

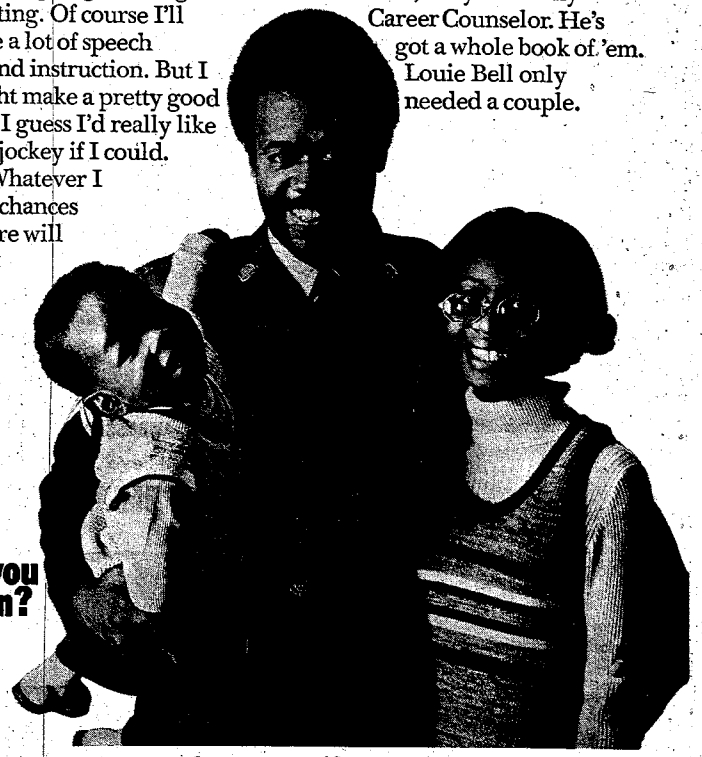
"When I came in I didn't have anything."



Sergeant Louie Bell just reenlisted for the first time. And he had some pretty good reasons.

"Look what I've got now. A steady income, a good job and a family. It's a lot more responsibility.

"I was studying business administration when I came in, but I think I'm going to change to broadcasting. Of course I'll have to take a lot of speech schooling and instruction. But I think I might make a pretty good announcer. I guess I'd really like to be a disc jockey if I could.

"Whatever I decide, my chances for the future will definitely be better now that I've decided to stay in the Army for a while. I'll be getting more education for when I get out. And Martha and Darrell will have a lot more security."

The education. The bonus. The security. Louie Bell found some pretty good reasons for reenlisting. If you're looking for reasons, see your Army Career Counselor. He's got a whole book of 'em. Louie Bell only needed a couple.

Why are you staying in?

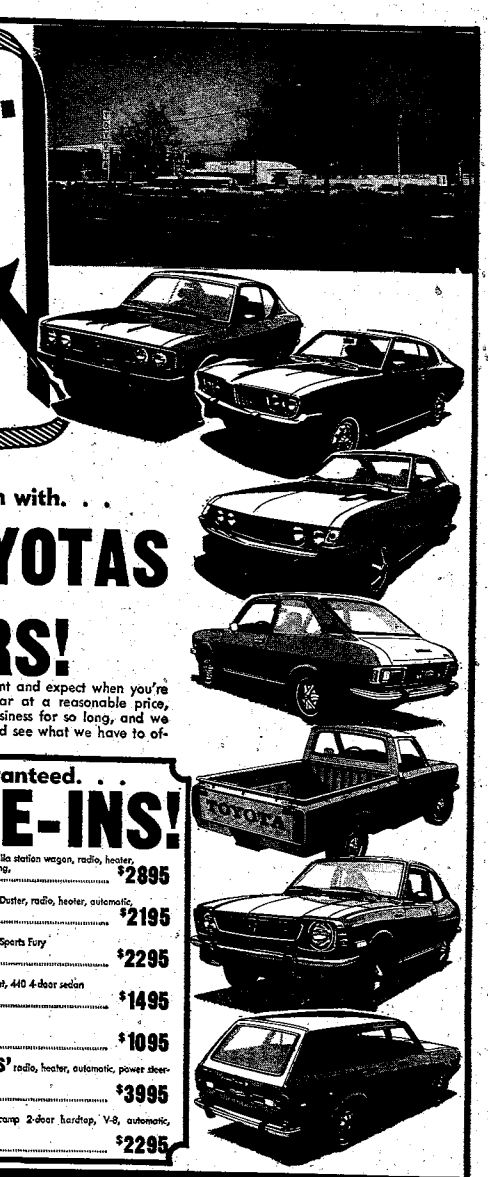
Fishing tourney

First Rod and Gun Memorial Day contest

Anglers tracked throughout the waters of Fort Benning, with thoughts in their heads of hauling in that Big Ole' Fish that would enable them to win the Rod and Gun Clubs first Memorial Day Fish Tournament held over the Memorial Day weekend.

One example of a happy and a disappointing event occurring at the same moment was when Robert Darling entered the Rod and Gun Club with a six pound-eleven ounce bass minutes before the end of the contest hooting. James Wyatt's five pound-two ounce entry out of first place. Frank Shaw and his four pound-six ounce bass copped third place.

In the Catfish category it was Billy Bower taking first with a nine pound-eight ounce catfish. Followed closely with T. D. Murray's seven-pound eleven ounce cat. It was Herold Robinette capturing third place with a six pound-thirteen ounce catch.



L. F. Smith pulled a one pound bream out to win in the bream section of the contest with Sigsbee Mainous taking second with a fourteen ounce catch. Third place was turned in by James Olmstead with a nine ounce entry.

Roy Mercer was the proud winner of the special bonus prize consisting of a rod and reel with tackle box and lures while James Le Gros was the recipient of a 11' x 11' family size tent and four polyester filled sleeping bags for taking the bonus prize.

Experiments hard to conduct

Research is finding more and more about marijuana and its effects each day. Experiments are difficult to control, and the results are often inconclusive. Getting high on weed depends mostly on the situation and individual frame of mind.

These facts really can't be duplicated in a laboratory setting. Meanwhile the research continues, and marijuana is still illegal. This certainly is one of its greatest dangers.

daughter, a beautiful, fragile human being whose only outward emotion thus far is the oft-heard plea for food or change of diaper.

I believe that parents have a very special obligation . . . that of showing genuine concern and love for their offspring. It is more than giving lip service to such ideals as honesty and it is more than dropping their children off at the ball park or the skating rink. Commercial transportation can accomplish the mission but what is lost is the warmth and comfort of sharing experiences.

Parents must set the example in their daily association. If there is turmoil, distrust and anxiety in the parental relationship, the child will tend to develop the same patterns. No child is born to run away. He does so to escape from a home where more often than not, love is the exception rather than the rule.

There are no guarantees no matter how hard parents attempt to rear their children. For society deals with children in the schools and on the playground. Attitudes are developed from these experiences as well as the child's experiences in the home. But where there is attendance at church, mutual understanding, shared experiences and affection — rarely, is there a runaway child.

gencies, but will actually be working in another area of the hospital.

A cooperative effort will have to be made by those being served as well as by those serving to insure that persons urgently requiring medical care receive it. Individuals who make unnecessary demands on the hospital staff only because they feel that professional medical care for even the most minor conditions is their right will only serve to over-extend our limited medical manpower and reduce the care available to those who need it most.

Our intention is not to deny essential medical care to anyone who needs it, but rather to direct our limited resources to those who need it most. At times, this will mean that each of you must ask yourself, "Is my complaint serious enough that I must seek immediate medical treatment?" or "Can I wait until daytime clinic hours to be seen?"

TSB Chaplains have around-the-clock jobs

The School Brigade is one of the largest units of its type in the Army. This puts a special burden on administration and support of the students. For the TSB Chaplains the spiritual needs of its soldiers is an around-the-clock job.

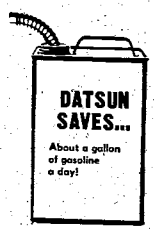
Chaplain (MAJ) Walter Phillips is the picture of minister, soft - spoken, and friendly, he has been with TSB for nearly 2 years. His office is presently at the Sightseeing Road Chapel. He is always busy.

"The First Battalion has 3,000 assigned to it and the workload was heavy." Now it is even heavier because he doubles as 1st Bn Chaplain and at Sightseeing Chapel.

Most of his work is involved in counseling. "I talk to people about everything from Finance problems to marital problems. A great many people come in to talk about family problems, and when you see a marriage dissolving it is particularly heartbreaking."

He explains that when they come at all that is a sign they want to work things out. "Almost invariably the wife is the first to come, then she will see if her husband will come too. If he does then I will talk to each one separately, then together." Doesn't this put a lot of pressure on him, as their marriage may succeed or fail, depending on his advice? "A great deal," he said. "It makes you nervous sometimes, but hopefully things will always work out."

The support of the man in the field is another important mission of the Army Chaplain. "We try to make ourselves as available as possible." The Chief of Chaplains makes it a rule that we must spend 50 per cent of our duty time out with the men, and that is what we try to do. When the soldier needs us, we are here.



Are you putting me on?

Start your own gas war.

Datsun 1200.

DATSUN SAVES...

About a gallon of gasoline a day!

With the demand for fuel rising faster than the supply, here's one way to help ease our energy crisis. According to the latest U.S. Bureau of Highways figures, the national average for gas mileage is about 13.5 miles per gallon. Our Datsun 1200 gets around 30 miles per gallon. Or, over twice the national average! The average car in the U.S. is driven just over 10,000 miles a year, so you can save about a gallon of gas every day by driving a Datsun 1200. With gasoline prices up, it's a considerable savings of another important resource . . . your money! Drive a Datsun . . . then decide!

Capture and Cloth

BY ILEANE KATZKER

Wondrous stars before my eyes
Twinkle to a fresh new dawn
Glittering upon a dark stage
They are there and so soon gone

Diamonds beyond a grasp.
Yet hope and waited dreams,
In silent parade they hang
As golden shooting teams.

Lines plotted on a cluttered map
Make stripes across the sky
Where men reach out for stars
And in attempt they die.

Heaven must lay beyond
Those precious lighted crops
For men to live to touch a million blinding drops.

They took just fifty lights
From far above the earth
And captured them on banner
To show a nations birth.

A flag extending on a pole
That reaches to the sky.
Majestically and silent bound
Yet unseen to passersby.

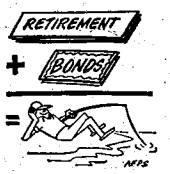
Burglars look for small hints

In spite of reminders and suggestions, many people will do a terrific job of advertising to burglars that they are away on vacation.



The "advertisements" include: a porch cluttered with circulars and newspapers . . . a mail box bulging with mail . . . a lawn overdue for a trimming . . . an empty garage day after day (sometime with the door open) . . . a house with no lights, night after night.

Your BBB suggests it's well worth the few minutes time to cancel all deliveries and discontinue newspapers or have them sent to your vacation address. Have a neighbor or the post office hold your mail. Arrange to have your lawn mowed. The cost to burn one or two lights all the time would be a good investment . . . HAVE A GOOD TIME . . . DON'T GET BURNED.

6.1 per cent raise for retirees

A record pay raise of 6.1 per cent will go to some 900,000 military retirees, effective July 1.

The increase, highest since the automatic pay adjustment system began 10 years ago, will show up in the July paychecks most retirees receive about August 1.

The increase for people retired after Dec. 31, 1972, will be only 2.7 per cent because they shared in the last active duty pay raise which did not affect earlier retirees. The partial raise is based on the rise in the cost of living during the four months, January-April, after the active duty raise.

The same partial increase will also be paid to other people who retire before the next general raise for the active forces.

The full increase for military retirees goes to all who were retired before January 1 this year. (Federal civilian retirees also get the full increase if they retire before the July effective date, but no increase at all if retired after that date.)

The amount of the full raise represents the percentage rise in the cost of living since the last increase, with an extra one per cent thrown in to compensate for the time lag between the rising living costs and the actual start of higher pay.

The Labor Department's Consumer Price Index for April stood at 130.7, fixing the size of this pay raise and establishing a new base month index level for the measurement of future increases.

Engineers aid scouts; put training to use

Members of Company B, 43rd Engr. Bn. have recently completed work on the last phase of a two phase project at Skymont Boy Scout Reservation fear Altamont, Tennessee.

A task force of 17 men headed by 2nd Lt. John Sullivan built a large parking lot, roads and put in numerous water lines. The 43rd Engr. Bn. had already built a guard tower, a boat dock, a latrine, and had constructed tent platforms, a utility shed and reconditioned about 200 table benches.

At a ceremony on the 24th of May recruiters and Boy Scout Officials from around Tennessee were present to see the fine work that had been dooe on the camp.

Mr. Gene Ausley, Assistant Scout Executive and Director of Field Service for the 556 Cherokee Area Counsel said that the camp was a hunting compound until 1968 when the BSA purchased the 2850 acres of land.

"The camp is the finest property available in the U.S. for Boy Scouts," according to Mr. Ausley. The camp will be used by over 1300 scouts this summer.

LTC William Lehner, the 931st Engr. Gp. Executive Officer, was on hand and gave a brief talk thanking the Boy Scouts for the chance to aid the community. He also discussed the types of units and facilities available at Fort Benning to help the recruiters with their job.

PFC Kenneth Davis, a dozer operator for Company B, said "the men had enjoyed the chance to get out and put their training to use."

This $1.50 174 Page Book on WHAT TO LOOK FOR IN FLORIDA is Yours For Only a Quarter Handling Charge.

Perhaps no book has ever been written which is so straightforward about the facts of life in Florida; written by Frank Cowles, Jr. and the Editors of "Florida Trend" magazine. It gives the unvarnished truth about the cost of living, the climate, business opportunities, real estate market, special facilities for newcomers, important legal advice, cooperative vs. condominium apartments, how and where to buy a house, information sources, taxes, government, medical and recreational facilities.
In addition, we will include fascinating material about the magnificent yet modestly priced "Three Seasons" developments of the Deltona Corporation, headed by the famous Mackle Brothers — the only developers commended by a Florida Legislature.
Drop a quarter in an envelope with this coupon and you will receive this extremely valuable information about the "Sunshine State".

Energy crisis becomes reality

BY NEIL DANIEL

Suddenly, the energy crisis is a reality. People everywhere are beginning to realize that only through the combined effort of all, can a solution be found. Here on Fort Benning, we have already felt the effects of the initial shock. The situation can worsen.

There are 49,400 vehicles registered on Fort Benning. It has been estimated that, during peak hours (6:30 a.m. to 8:00 a.m. and 4:00 to 5:30 p.m.), the traffic flow on Main Post involves some 17,000 vehicles. This figure does not take into account the traffic to outlying units like the 43rd Engineer Battalion at Harmony Church.

This traffic problem was a double-edged sword of congestion and pollution. Now the gasoline shortage is threatening to add another dimension to the problem.

The heart of the energy crisis is a lack of economy. If every American used one gallon of gas less each week, there would not be a fuel shortage. One soldier says that although he is "aware of the energy crisis" he does not worry about it. "I drive my car just about everywhere." This is the sort of attitude that has led to the present crisis.

The average car can carry five passengers. Yet most cars, as daily observation will confirm, are used to transport only one person. If every car was used to its maximum efficiency, the rate of gasoline consumption would be cut by more than 50 per cent. At present, America is gulping 17.5 million gallons of petroleum each day.

A quick look at a couple of units in the 931st Engineer Group may serve to illustrate the matter. HHD, 67th Maint. Bn. carries a total of 106 men. Of this number, 90 drive cars to work each day. Each of this number drives his own car. Although many of the men try to avoid unnecessary trips, a car pool would be a good idea.

SSgt. Billy J. Leonard of the 67th owns two cars. The idea of a car pool never occurred to him. He has never been in one. However, he does keep his engine "properly tuned at all times." He avoids "unnecessary trips" and uses the smaller car for trips to work "for economy".

At HHC, 931st Engineer Group, the picture is alarmingly similar. Of a total of 196 men, 161 drive cars to work each day. More than half of that number makes four trips per day.

PFC Jerome Duncan of HHC, 931st, does not believe that there is a real shortage. "They are just afraid that they will not be able to get it to the market on time. The delays in the construction of the proposed Alaskan pipeline is one of the main reasons behind all this."

However, he is trying to cut down on his fuel consumption because, in his words, "gas costs too much. It's just common sense to try and save it."

Surprisingly perhaps, this is the key to the solution. Just plain common sense applied on a day to day basis. Some practical suggestions; combine trips. Traveling at 50 mph instead of 60 mph will cut gas consumption by 10 per cent. Walking a little more can save a lot.

THE BAYONET Inside Front

ROTC cadets from all across country come here for training

Over 550 ROTC cadets from universities and colleges all over the United States will begin arriving at Fort Benning today for a nine-week Ranger course which counts as ROTC summer camp.

The cadets will receive the Ranger tab for successfully completing the course. They are all volunteers, selected from schools with ROTC programs, and many of them have already passed water survival and basic physical fitness tests before coming here.

The ROTC cadets will arrive in two groups of about 275 each. The first group will arrive and begin inprocessing today, and will complete the Benning phase of their training on July 4. They will go from here to Dahlonega, Ga. for the mountain phase, which ends July 20.

After the mountain phase they will return to Benning for one day, and leave for the Florida phase on July 21. When they finish their Florida training, they will return to Fort Benning on August 7, and graduate on August 9.

The second group of cadets will arrive here on May 29 to begin the Benning phase of their training, which ends July 25. They will leave for the mountain phase, which will be completed on August 10, and return to Fort Benning before leaving for Florida on August 11.

They will return to Benning for the last time on August 28, and graduate here on August 30. This is the third year for the summer Ranger training program for ROTC cadets. In 1971, when the program began, one group of about 250 cadets took the training.

Ranger training is designed to provide realistic, tough combat experience under conditions similar to those on the battlefield. Students must be able to withstand physical hardship and strain in order to complete the course.

The Benning phase includes land navigation, instruction in survival techniques including hand-to-hand combat, and emphasizes patrolling. It prepares students for the mountain and Florida phase by giving them strenuous physical training.

The mountain phase covers training in a rugged environment, with day and night patrols conducted, and the students learn such techniques as rope work, rappelling, and rock climbing. They also navigate the rapid Toccoa River and climb Yonah Mountain.

The Florida phase is conducted in jungle or swamp terrain, and begins with a combat parachute assault. Students learn counterguerrilla tactics and combat intelligence techniques, and perform an offensive operations over an extended period of time.

Fort Benning to receive 900 guests from Academy

Fort Benning will welcome over 900 members of the U. S. Military Academy (USMA) Class of 1974 June 7, for five days of orientations, training and observing the environment of an infantry officer.

Among the visitors will be six cadets from the Fort Benning-Columbus-Phenix City area; Charles C. Thebaud Jr., Robert D. Fierro, Ronald H. Miller, Donald H. Dubia, William M. Davis, and Joseph M. Ward.

Thebaud is the son of Col. and Mrs. Charles C. Thebaud, 403 Wickersham St., Fort Benning. Col. Thebaud is the chief of staff at Fort Benning.

Fierro is the son of Mr. and Mrs. S. V. Fierro, 2575 Mesa St., Columbus, Ga.

Miller is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Colvo Miller, of 2917 Emory St., Columbus.

Dubia is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Christain Dubia, 2480 Rice St., Columbus.

Davis is the son of First Sergeant and Mrs. Robert Busch, 3771 Ida Dr., Columbus, and Ward is the son of Col. (ret.) and Mrs. Albert Ward, 2004 Carriage Dr., Phenix City, Ala.

During their stay, they will receive an infantry orientation, including briefings, demonstrations and training.

The cadets will also test their skills on the leaders reaction course; mechanized infantry squad assault course and will receive some preliminary Airborne instruction.

The cadets will observe rangers in action demonstration and a TOW-Dragon demonstration.

A dance at the Fort Benning Supper Club June 8 will be the social highlight of their visit.

Maj. Gen. Thomas M. Tarpley, post commander, will host the annual dance, which will be chaperoned by senior military officers of Fort Benning.

Two bands will be performing at the dance, the "Kingsmen" and the "Fairlanes." The dance will last from 8 p.m. to midnight, refreshments will be served.

Also attending the dance is Tina Perrine, Miss Columbus of 1973.

ARMY BIRTHDAY MESSAGE

On 14 June 1973, the United States Army will observe its birthday and 198 years of service to our nation.

I wish to extend my heartfelt gratitude to all the men and women at Fort Benning whose unequaled devotion to duty, self-sacrifice and determination have enabled us to produce the highest quality soldier the world has ever known.

While we are in an era of complex computers and machinery, the essential ingredient for the deterrence of aggression continues to be the Infantryman...well trained and well motivated. For nearly 55 years, Fort Benning has played a key role in developing such soldiers. We can look back on our record with great pride.

In this transition to a reduced peacetime Army, our challenge is to provide Infantrymen whose qualities of professionalism and leadership cannot be questioned. We proudly accept this challenge.

SOUND OFF!

Do you think there is a lack of patriotism in the Army?

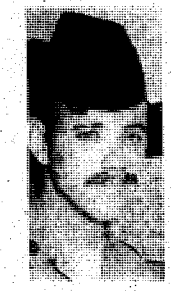
23rd Co. 2nd Student Bn, TSB

I don't think the problem is as bad as it was a couple years ago. With the ending of the Vietnam war and the volunteer army, I think these have helped the soldiers outlook of the Army, especially weeding out those who make trouble for other soldiers. A professional Army, more money with people expecting more for their money and job satisfaction, have all been factors in rewiving the patriotic feeling in the Army.

Gregory Duncan
139th MP

My answer would have been yes. Soldiers are no longer sincere about their patriotism. There is not any type of spirit in the army and no one cares about the other man, only of himself. This pertains to the country as a whole not just the Army.



PFC Greg Phillips
45th Airborne Co.

Definitely. Certain people are forced to join the army to get away from their problems that they faced in civilian life. Now they find out that by joining the Army they have got into bigger problems because it was made to sound like an easy life so they cause trouble and try to get other people involved. They try to make little problems into bigger ones. There is no togetherness and harmony that would bind soldiers together and that is what you need to have patriotism flourish.

Col. Ben Purcell
U.S. Army Hospital, Ft. Gordon, Ga.

I don't see how there could be. After I returned from Vietnam I have been to numerous ceremonies and seen many proud young men marching standing tall, you just can't look like that unless you are truly patriotic. Last week when I was in Washington there was evidence of patriotism at every turn. I am very proud of this uniform that I wear.

PFC Edward Bush
I-58 Co. A

To a certain degree there is a lack of patriotism in the Army. The army isn't what it used to be, its not as hard and the men get away with things they wouldn't even have thought of trying in the brown shoe army. There isn't a common goal with a peace time army.

Dear Editor

Retreat ceremony causes retreat

Flag burning and disrespect for Old Glory is not solely symbolism belonging to the hippy and communistic movements.

The time: 5:30 p.m. The place: Infantry Hall. I was nearly trampled leaving the building recently. I was stampeded not from the rear, but from the front by Retreat ceremony evaders.

The evaders ranged in rank from specialist four to full colonel. Not only was I astonished, but I was embarrassed for my fellow careerists. I could expect something like this from the younger enlisted soldiers, but from careerists?

Not trying to sound like a man in a white hat, I have always been proud to stop whatever I was doing to salute the flag. I have seen career officers and soldiers say "let's hurry before Retreat starts," then haul hindend to their cars and drive like maniacs to get away from the area.

Of course some soldiers ran back into the building once they realized Retreat was under way. They remained there until Retreat ended. Most were more observant — they halted their exit in the first place to preclude joining the ceremony.

The twist to all this is that these same so-called career-minded professionals are usually the loudest critics who so violently oppose long hair, bluejeans and anti-war activists.

A patriot must be patriotic all the time in both his actions and his heart and not when it is merely convenient.

Third annual

Drug and alcohol experts to speak at seminar

Experts on drug and alcohol abuse problems from all over the country will speak at the third Drug and Alcohol Abuse Seminar, which will be held June 11 - 20 at the Infantry School. It will be attended by a total of 36 instructors from CONUS service schools, training centers, NCO academies, and drill sergeants' schools.

The seminar is hosted by the Contemporary Subjects Committee of the Leadership Department. The Infantry School is responsible for all instruction on drugs and alcohol throughout the Continental United States Army. Several of the experts are considered among the foremost authorities in their fields.

Psychoactive drugs

Dr. Oakley S. Ray will speak on psychoactive drugs on June 11. He holds the Ph.D. degree from the University of Pittsburgh in psychology, and is a professor of psychology at Vanderbilt University. He has held industrial and clinical consultantships, and has done extensive research work.

On June 12, Dr. Norman J. Doorenbos will speak on current research on drugs of abuse. He holds the Ph. D. degree in pharmaceutical chemistry from the University of Michigan, and is professor of pharmacognosy at the University of Mississippi. He has published numerous scientific papers, and is a frequent lecturer.

Dr. William F. Geber will speak June 13 on the pharmacolgical aspects of abused drugs. Dr. Geber obtained his Ph. D. degree in physiology from Indiana University. He is a professor at the Medical College of Georgia in Augusta, and has held various consultantships for government, private industry, and the Army. He has also been active in drug abuse prevention on a community level.

Behavior

Rev. James W. Tiller Jr., acting director of The Human Resources Institute — Orange County Drug Treatment Center in Orlando, Fla., will speak June 13 on "Society, Groups, and Deviant Behavior." He has worked in drug and alcohol rehabilitation for some time, and is an ordained Episcopal minister. He received his bachelor of divinity de-

Flags

Proper way to show respect

Many times the flag of the United States is not shown the proper respect. Too often it is flown in the wrong manner and is saluted at the wrong time if saluted at all. The following are a few simple rules to follow that will help you to show the proper respect to the flag.

The flag of the United States does not become obsolete. Flags with either 48 or 49 stars may be displayed until they are unserviceable. These flags will be shown the same respect as a flag with 50 stars.

When to display

The flag of the United States will be displayed at all Army installations. Not more than one flag of the United States will be flown at one time at any Army installation except as may be specially authorized by Headquarters, Department of the Army, because of particular circumstances.

The United States Military Installations have different size flags that are flown during different occasions.

The garrison flag will be hoisted on holidays and important occasions, i.e., New Year's Day, Inauguration Day, Mother's Day, Christmas.

The post flag will be hoisted in pleasent weather.

The storm flag is for use in stormy and windy weather.

A national color will be carried on all occasions of ceremony in which two or more companies, or an appropriate honor guard, participate and represent the regiment or separate battalion to which issue is authorized.

How to display

The flag of the United States represents the living country. The union is the honor point of the flag; the right being the place of honor. The union of the flag, and the flag itself when in company with other flags, is always given the honor position; i.e., the marching right, the flag's own right, or an observer's left.

No flag or pennant will be flown above the flag of the United States.

The flag of the United States when flown at a military post or when carried by troops will not be dipped by way of salute or compliment.

When the flag of the United States and another flag are displayed together from crossed staffs, as against a wall, the flag of the U. S. will be on the right, or the left of an observer facing the wall, and its staff will be in front of the other flag.

When the flag of the United States is displayed either horizontally or vertically against a wall, the union will be the uppermost to the flag's own right; i.e., to the observer's left.

The flag of the U. S. will be displayed flat or hanging free. It will not be festooned over doorways or arches, tied in a bow knot or fashioned into a rosette. When on a rostrum, it will be displayed above and behind the speaker's desk. It is never to be used to cover the speaker's desk, nor draped over the front of the platform.

Saluting the flag

There are many different occasions when saluting the U.S. flag is appropriate or not Following are the times when the flag should or should not be saluted.

Saluting the flag when in uniform, with your head covered or uncovered, either indoors or outdoors, stand at attention and salute with your right hand when the National Anthem is played, the flag is raised or lowered, during recitation of the Pledge of Allegiance, as the flag passes by in a parade or review, a flagged draped coffin is passing, or when "taps" is sounded at a funeral.

When not in uniform during those ceremonies: stand at attention, place your right hand over your heart. Men, if covered, remove hat, hold it over heart.

While the National Anthem is being played, stand at attention facing the flag and salute at the first note. Hold the salute until the very last note is played. If there is no flag or you cannot see it from where you are, face the music. If you can't see the band or orchestra, face straight ahead. When the National Anthem is sung without accompaniment or is a recording, stand at attention but DO NOT SALUTE.

At parades and reviews start your salute when the approaching flag is six paces (about 12 feet) from you. Drop the salute when the flag is about the same distance past you.

When the colors are being raised, stand at attention facing the flagpole. Come to a salute as soon as the flag is started on its way up and hold the salute until it is at the peak. If the flag is to be flown at half-mast, hold the salute until it is lowered to half-mast after being hoisted to the peak.

At retreat, lowering the colors, start your salute at the moment the flag is on its way down and hold the salute until the flag is gathered at the base of the flagstaff. If the flag is at half-mast, salute as it is first hoisted to the peak; hold your salute until it is gathered at the base.

A flag-draped coffin rates the same honor as the flag passing in a parade.

It is customary to salute when "taps" is sounded at a military funeral.

The salute is held during the recitation of the Pledge of Allegiance as you face the flag.

When visiting another country or the United Nations and a formal ceremony is being held, it is proper to extend the same saluting honors that are given to your own country's flag.

Don't salute

There are times when a salute to the National flag is neither necessary nor feasible.

When you are separated from the passing flag by a crowd.

If you are carrying out some duty that requires you to face away from a parade.

While in a motor vehicle waiting for a break in the parade so you can cross the line of march.

If you're helping a youngster see over the heads of a crowd.

At a circus or rodeo where riders gallop past with standards every few minutes.

Pictures of the flag shown on TV or in theaters are not saluted.

When sitting in a well-filled grandstand it may seem awkward to rise and salute each time the national flag is carried past at short intervals. This is a situation that must be handled according to on-the-spot conditions. If constant, unduly, and frequent jumping up and down interrupts the dignity of the occasion, it is best to only salute the leading colors.

The flag of the United States is not just another piece of cloth. It means something to each and every person. It is due the proper respect that should be given any trademark of the United States.

Civil Service retirees receive annuity raise

A cost of living annuity increase of 6.1 per cent will become effective for civil service retirees, July 1.

To benefit from this increase, current Federal employees eligible to retire must be separated or in a non-pay status before midnight June 30.

In pending disability retirement cases, applicants may request to be placed on leave without pay status from and including July 1 to qualify for the increase. If the disability retirement claim is disallowed, sick or annual leave may be substituted retroactively for the leave without pay.

If claim is allowed, accumulated annual leave will be paid in lump sum. Sick leave credit will be allowed in the computation of the annuity rate.

Retirees should get checks within a few weeks after the necessary records are received by the commission.

Further information may be obtained by calling Mrs. Carter, 545-7380.

If you need more information on any of the classes listed above, you can also call 545-2725 or 525-5785.

Heritage Recipe

From the Salad Section of the "Golden Heritage Cookbook," this week's selection is a delectable pastel salad to enhance any dinner table:

Mandarin-Avocado Salad With Dressing
Submitted by:
Mrs. Justin S. Zack (Elaine)

1 head lettuce, torn in pieces
1 cucumber, thinly sliced
1 avocado, seeded, peeled, and sliced
1 11-ounce can mandarin oranges, drained (reserve liquid)
2 tablespoons sliced green onions

Combine vegetables and oranges in large salad bowl.

Just before serving, pour dressing made from recipe below over the salad.

Dressing:

½ teaspoon grated orange peel
¼ cup reserved mandarin orange juice
½ cup salad oil
2 tablespoons sugar
2 teaspoons red wine vinegar
1 tablespoon lemon juice
¼ teaspoon salt

In a jar, combine ingredients. Cover tightly and shake well. Chill until ready to pour over salad.

Meddac

The Executive Board of the Club will be hostesses for a Farewell Coffee to be held Fri., June 15, at the Officers' Wives' Club Lounge at 10 a.m. The cost of the coffee will be twenty-five cents. Reservations can be made by calling the reservation committee members listed in "The Musings."

The Panhellenic group of Columbus and Fort Benning would like to have the names of girls who will be going through rushing at colleges and universities this coming year. They would like to explain rushing to the girls and also provide them with recommendations which are necessary at most schools before a girl can pledge a sorority. Please call Mrs. George Lovejace at 687-4187 or Mrs. Ned Schowalter at 545-2495.

Exercise classes to be held

Ladies day exercise classes will be conducted at Briant Wells Field House Tuesday and Thursday mornings. The area will be available for individual use from 9-11 with calistenic classes from 9-10. The sauna bath will be available for use along with an exercise machine.

Tennis classes will also be held behind Theater 2 Tuesdays and Thursdays from 9-11 a.m.

J. A. Johnson's cooking best out at 197th Inf.

Sgt. Robert Miller, B Batt., 2nd Bn., 10th Field Arty., 197th Inf. Bde., and his battery's commander, Capt. Frank Mimms, explain some intricacies of the 175mm self-propelled gun, to a group of Junior ROTC Cadets from Clearwater, Fla. The group visited Fort Benning last week on a field trip. (Photo by Burt Howland)

PFC James A. Johnson, Company C, 3rd Bn., 7th Inf., 197th Inf. Bde., has been named Cook of the Month at Fort Benning for the month of May.

This is the second time in seven months that Johnson has been named as Post Cook of the Month. He took top honors last November.

In order to be named as Cook of the Month, Johnson was required to win the brigade level competition and go before a post wide board.

The board consisting of six people from the Post Food Services Division asked questions concerning Johnson's MOS. He was required to know the ingredients of different recipies, how long to cook certain foods, menu preparation, etc.

Private Johnson is the second cook of his shift in the Company C, 3rd Bn., 7th Inf., mess hall; he enjoys cooking and takes pride in his work. Evidently all of the cooks of the Company C mess hall take pride in their work, as the mess hall has won top honors almost monthly for being the Best Mess on post, feeding less than 150 people.

Johnson, a draftee, doesn't plan on making the Army a career, however, he doesn't consider the two years he has spent in the Army as a waste. He says, "I was drafted, and naturally didn't want to come into the Army, but I decided to do the best job I could while I was in."

POW visits President

On October 8, 1966, while serving in the Republic of Vietnam, SSgt. Sammie N. Womack, Co. A, 1st Bn. (Mech.), 58th Inf. (Patriots), 197th Inf. Bde., was captured by the North Vietnamese Army and held prisoner for more than four months.

"On that eventful day," Womack recalls, "I was patrolling an area just northeast of Saigon, known as War Zone Three. I was captured and taken to a prisoner check point and finally a POW camp where I was chained to a tree. During the four months I survived on a diet of rice, water and a determination to get home."

Womack was fortunate to have been one of the prisoners released in February 1967 in observance of the Vietnamese Lunar New Year. This day, equivalent to Christmas in this country, was the date when the North Vietnamese traded prisoners with the South Vietnamese.

Earlier this month former POWs were invited to attend a dinner at the White House. Womack and his mother, Mrs. Virginia Womack, drove to Washington, D. C. in answer to the President's invitation. They stayed at the Washington Hilton and attended a number of functions held in honor of the POWs, including dinners and parties. The President spoke to the POWs, shaking hands with each personally, and praised them for their service to their country.

Womack received as souvenirs of his trip, a set of cuff links, and ash tray with the Presidential seal, a set of books on American heritage and an official Presidential pen.

Tornadoes

Death, destruction follow in its path

By Billy Sams

A tornado is described as a funnel shaped cloud, spinning rapidly and extending toward the earth from the base of a thunder cloud and sounding like a hundred airplane engines.

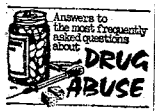
They may occur any place in the United States at any time, but are more frequent in the midwestern, southern, and central states, between March and September, and move in a southwesterly to northeasterly direction.

Tornado weather is generally connected with hot sticky days with southerly winds and dark threatening skies.

If you are in open country, move at right angles to the tornado's path. It usually moves at a speed of about 25 - 40 miles per hour.

In the event there's no way of escape, lie flat in the nearest ditch or ravine.

When a tornado occurs in a city or town seek inside shelter preferably in a steel reinforced building and stay away from windows or any open space.



If in the home at the time of a tornado, take refuge in the southwest corner of the lowest floor, or in a basement, this will offer the greatest safety. People living in brick or stone houses should seek other shelter, such as a cellar, basement or frame house. If time permits all electricity and fuel lines should be shut off and windows on the north and east sides of the house opened to reduce damage to building. By standing against a wall in an office building this may also provide protection.

The Columbus, Phenix City, Fort Benning area has experienced tornados on 12 occasions in the past 25 years, with three causing major damage.

A tornado occurred in Columbus on April 18, 1953 causing damage estimated at $15 million. The area around Lawson Field, Fort Benning, was not affected by the tornado and was determined only as a storm by the time it reached this area. However on March 13, 1954 the same area around Lawson Field was hit by a tornado and damage was estimated at $11 million, with two dead and twenty injured.

Assistance call answered by 197th Inf.

CUTHBERT — Soldiers from the 72nd Engineer Company, 197th Infantry Brigade answered a call for assistance with equipment and manpower for removing Cuthbert, Georgia's, abandoned automobiles recently.

Removal of the abandoned automobiles, a project undertaken by Cuthbert's Lions Club, is one of the first projects to be carried out in the comprehensive Cuthbert Beautification Program.

Assistance from the 197th Infantry Brigade was requested due to a shortage of removal equipment in the area. Police Chief Phillip Van Larell, a former 197th Infantry Brigade staff officer, coordinated the request under the Army's program of community assistance projects, whereby Army units are permitted to assist communities in areas where no other assistance is available.

The 72nd Engineer Company soldiers and members of the Cuthbert Lions Club removed 150 abandoned automobiles that were scattered throughout the city.

Chief Jarrell said, "his opinion of the 197th Infantry Brigade remains as high as when he was a member of the unit. "They are the best soldiers that the U.S. Army has today," he said.

'Family' is theme of Vacation Bible School

"Family" is the theme of the 1973 Ecumenical Vacation Bible School to be held at the Religious Education Center, Bldg. 2606, Dixie Road, 12-21 June, 0830 - 1100 hours, Tuesday through Friday the first week and Monday through Thursday the second week. The "Family" course is a new and exciting study of the Christian's life and in his own family and the world family of today. The curriculum is designed to provide the children with family experiences in the classroom and to guide them to see the uniqueness and variety of the people God created and their families. In addition to the study and instruction classes there will be a time for recreation, refreshments, creative arts, and music.

Bus service will be provided for all areas of government housing except McGraw Manor where a Bible School will be conducted especially for that area July 30 - August 7.

All children of Fort Benning personnel four years of age through those just completing the eighth grade are invited to attend.

Mrs. Bruce Davis is serving as Principal of the school, with Mrs. J. M. McKinzie as secretary, Mrs. Shirley Sines as refreshment chairman and Mrs. John Korhonen as typist. Approximately two hundred (200) teachers and workers are assisting in the school. The following superintendents are leading the seventeen department:

Mrs. Edwin Grove, 8th Grade; Mrs. Edgar P. Shackelford, 7th Grade; Mrs. Harry Treude, 6th Grade; Mrs. Grover Pierce, 5th Grade; Mrs. G. A. Spencer, 4th Grade; Mrs. Charles W. McInnis, 3rd Grade; Mrs. M. R. Standley, 2nd Grade; Mrs. Daniel Smith, 1st Grade; Mrs. B. A. Chattahoochee Valley Jr. Society sponsors contest

The Chattahoochee Valley Junior Society is sponsoring an essay contest entitled "My Favorite Cat" to participate in Cat and Kitten Month in June. First prize in the essay contest will be a book about cats, and a membership in the Kindness Club will be awarded to the best essay winner in each grade.

The contest is open to all children in grades 1-6 and can include humorous, heroic or unusual tales of a family cat or kitten. All entire must be in by June 30 and should include name, age, grade and name of school last attended. A panel of edueators will judge the entries and their decision will be final. Entries should be sent to Essay Contest, Chattahoochee Valley Humane Society, P.O. Box 6752, Columbus, Ga., 31907.

The objectives of Cat and Kitten Month will be to help homeless cats and kittens find good homes, to promote better health care for cats, to encourage more responsible cat ownership, to make the public aware of the growing numbers of homeless and abandoned cats and kittens, to encourage spaying and neutering of cats not owned by breeders of pure-bred cats and to promote kindness and consideration for all living things.

Start your own gas war.

Datsun 1200.

DATSUN SAVES... About a gallon of gasoline a day!

With the demand for fuel rising faster than the supply, here's one way to help ease our energy crisis: According to the latest U.S. Bureau of Highways figures; the national average for gas mileage is about 13.5 miles per gallon. Our Datsun 1200 gets around 30 miles per gallon... Or, over twice the national average! The average car in the U.S. is driven just over 10,000 miles a year, so you can save about a gallon of gas every day by driving a Datsun 1200. With gasoline prices up, it's a considerable savings of another important resource . . . your money! Drive a Datsun . . . then decide!

Coming to the screen

Sounder

Rather liberally adapted by Lonne Elder from the haunting novel by William H. Armstrong, the story tells of a year in the life of a young black family in the deep south, a year during which the father is arrested for stealing in order to get meat for the table, and the son is left to do his father's work. Later, seeking to visit his father in prison, the boy finds instead a friendly black school teacher who presents him with a truly adult problem — whether to abandon his family and raise himself by studying with the teacher or stay at home as the one strong pair of hands about. When his father returns home crippled by an accident in prison and thus of little help from then on, the choice becomes truly wrenching. Nominated for 4 Academy Awards, SOUNDER stars Cicely Tyson, Paul Winfield and Kevin Hooks.

Young Winston

This epic biography recalls the early adventures of Winston Churchill; as a soldier — war correspondent with the 21st Lancers during the Boer War and his later ascendancy to parliament under the over-solietious guidance of his mother. The boyish ambitions and driving determination of Churchill are brilliantly portrayed by Simon Ward while Robert Shaw and Anne Bancroft play Churchill's aristocratic parents. This epic film covers the exciting early years of Churchill's military adventures in the Sudan and Boer Wars and makes "Young Winston" a motion picture as powerful as the man himself.

The biscuit eater

Set in rustic Tennessee in 1946, the story centers around two boys, one black and one white, and an eggsucking dog, a "biscuit eater," whom they train to compete in the Grand National for bird dogs. Oldsters will find this film worth their time as there are lessons on honesty with parents, trust with children, fair play, the way to treat a dog, and hunting with a rifle. This fine Disney family film stars Earl Holliman, Godfrey Cambridge, Johnny Whitaker, and George Spell and is based on the novel by James Street.

Carry on doctor

The "Carry On" adventure takes place in a hospital and features a young Dr. Kilmore (Jim Dale), energetic, dedicated, and concerned with the beautiful nurses surrounding him. Dale is constantly at odds with his supervisors, Dr. Tinkle (Kenneth Williams), and the chief matron (Hattie Jacques), both of whom have a taste for power. Dale is dismissed after a comedy of errors places him in a compromising situation. The patients come to his aid and hand out some horrible medical treatment to force the reinstatement of Dale. Abounding in visual antics by series regulars, the picture also teams with gag-lines from as inept a group of doctors, nurses and malingering patients as could be assembled and is a titilating farce in the Carry On tradition.

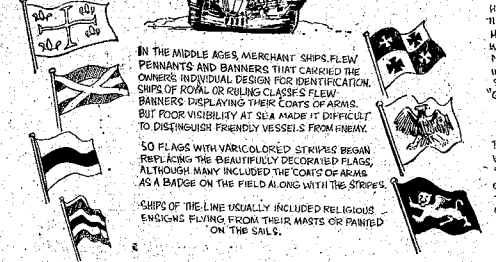
IN THE MIDDLE AGES HERALDS CLOTHED IN THE ROYAL COLORS CARRIED MESSAGES SEALED WITH THE SIGNET OF THE KING. THIS PRACTICE SPREAD TO THE NOBILITY IN THE FORM OF INDIVIDUAL DESIGNS AS PROOF OF THE MESSAGES AUTHENTICITY.

DURING THE CRUSADES MANY SOLDIERS STARTED WEARING A SURPLICE ON WHICH A CROSS WAS DISPLAYED. KNIGHTS, IN ORDER TO BE IDENTIFIED WHEN WEARING A CLOSED HELMET, HAD THEIR FAMILY'S EMBLEM PAINTED ON THEIR SHIELDS. THESE EMBLEMS AT FIRST ONLY A SIMPLE FIGURE OR ANIMAL, BECAME VERY ELABORATE COATS OF ARMS...AWARDED EXCLUSIVELEY TO ROYAL AND CERTAIN NOBLE FAMILIES.



IN THE MIDDLE AGES, MERCHANT SHIPS FLEW PENNANTS AND BANNERS THAT CARRIED THE OWNERS INDIVIDUAL DESIGN FOR IDENTIFICATION. SHIPS OF ROYAL OR RULING CLASSES FLEW BANNERS DISPLAYING THEIR COATS OF ARMS. BUT POOR VISIBILITY AT SEA MADE IT DIFFICULT TO DISTINGUISH FRIENDLY VESSELS FROM ENEMY.

SO FLAGS WITH VARICOLORED STRIPES BEGAN REPLACING THE BEAUTIFULLY DECORATED FLAGS, ALTHOUGH MANY INCLUDED THE COATS OF ARMS AS A BADGE ON THE FIELD ALONG WITH THE STRIPES.

SHIPS OF THE LINE USUALLY INCLUDED RELIGIOUS ENSIGNS FLYING FROM THEIR MASTS OR PAINTED ON THE SAILS.

The Stars and Stripes

"Resolved, that the flag of the 13 United States be thirteen stripes, alternate red and white; that the union be thirteen stars, white in a blue field, representing a new constellation." This resolution was adopted by the Continental Congress June 14, 1777.

During the following 135 years the United States flag was officially changed 24 times because Congress, in their short and hurried resolution, had failed to specify any other details besides the number of stars and stripes and the color of the flag. This resulted in confusion because flags were being designed according to flagmaker's individual preferences.

In 1794 Congress changed the design by adding a stripe for each state admitted to the Union. This 15 stripe flag flew over Ft. McHenry in 1814 and inspired Francis Scott Key to write "The Star Spangled Banner."

Samuel C. Reid, a U.S. Navy captain, suggested to Congress that the stripes be fixed at 13 to represent the original colonies and that a star be added to the blue field for every state coming into the union. July 4, 1818 this became a law, and provided that one star for each new state be added to the flag on the 4th of July following the state's admission.

Finally, President William H. Taft signed an executive order in 1912 giving specific proportions and arrangements of the flag.

The word flag comes from an old Anglo-Saxon word "fleogan", meaning "to float in the wind." Besides this physical aspect though, the flag is an honored symbol of a nation's unity, hopes, achievements, glory and freedom.

The observance of Flag Day began in New York City when George Boch, the principal of a free school for immigrant children, decided that it was an appropriate occasion for patriotic exercises. It wasn't until June 14, 1916, however, that the date was recognized traditionally following a proclamation by President Woodrow Wilson.

Speaking of the flag President Wilson said: "This flag, which we honor and under which we serve, is the emblem of our unity, our power, our thought and purpose as a nation. It has no other character than that which we give it from generation to generation. The choices are ours. It floats in majestic silence above the hosts that execute those choices, whether in peace or war. And yet, though silent, it speaks to us — speaks to use of the past, of the men and women who went before us, and of the records they wrote upon it."

Flag etiquette and respect is merely an acknowledgement that individuals know what pride, love and honor are involved in the flag. Throughout the ages man has developed character, courage and strength by devotion to this flag.

Army marks 198th year

The United States Army was born when the Second Continental Congress voted on June 14, 1775 to adopt the colonial militia in operation around Boston, Mass. It was more than a year before the Declaration of Independence, but the event marked the union of the forces of the 13 separate colonies under one head. The Congressional resolution read:

"Resolved, that six companies of expert riflemen be immediately raised in Pennsylvania, two in Maryland, and two in Virginia; that each company consist of a captain, three lieutenants, four sergeants, four corporals, a drummer or trumpeter, and sixty-eight privates.

"That each company, as soon as completed, shall march and join the Army near Boston, to be there employed as light infantry, under the command of the Chief officer in that Army..."

It was English colonists who settled in North America that started the Army's heritage. Each colony brought with them their civil and military institutions and raised their own militia to maintain domestic order.

George Washington formally took command of the colonial troops on July 3 and found they were largely militia and minutemen of local communities. These men would go home after danger had passed.

The Continental Congress in January, 1776, decided that troops should be separate in organization from those of local communities. These "Continentals" were enlisted for longer terms, were trained more thoroughly and thereafter provided General Washington with a small force to work with. They were the beginning of the Regular Army.

As well as serving as a military institution, the Amry's nonmilitary contributions are no less important. It mapped and surveyed the land west of the Appalachians and contributed to the production of electrical power, flood control and an ample water supply.

General Westmoreland, former Chief of Staff, said the following: "The Army belongs to the people, and it is made up of the people. It draws its officers and soldiers from every walk of life—from every part of America. The Army is a cross section of our free society."

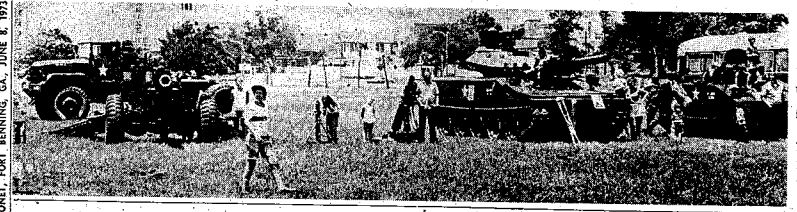
In his anniversary message to the Infantry he continued: "Its members have fought with valor each time our national security was endangered and have won on battlefields worldwide the right for the Infantry to be known as the "Queen of Battle."

"The courage, determination, endurance and pride traditional to the Infantryman form a firm foundation for the Army in this dynamic and challenging period of our military history."

The Army pioneered in conquering typhoid and yellow fever, developed a means of water purification through chlorination and the use of X-rays. They are also largely responsible for the development of freeze dried foods and the use of miniature electronic components in communication equipment.

And as an aid to civilian communities, the Army today offers assistance to victims in natural disaster areas in the distribution of food, clothing and medical supplies. They also provide, in some areas, helicopter ambulance evacuation of automobile accident victims.

200th anniversary in planning stages



A Fort Benning ad hoc Bicentennial Committee has already taken actions to commemorate the 200th anniversary of the Infantry. The committee has submitted recommendatons to the Department of the Army for programs in June, 1975, one year before the nation's Bicentennial.

In AR 360-1775 guidelines of the President's American Revolution Bicentennial Commission have already been set. Selected themes for the Bicentennial Era—1971 through 1976 will be Heritage '76, Festival USA and Horizons '76.

The celebration will examine the role of the Army, recognize its contributions, encourage Army rededication to the ideals that inspired our early leaders and present two centuries of American arms history. It will also demonstrate how the Army has improved the life style and professionalism of the soldier and attempt to instill a deep sense of pride in today's Army.

Army support of community, state, national and in-service events will be required for this major project. Thorough and imaginative planning is also required to assure effective participation on all levels.

Anyone having ideas is welcome to submit them to the Information Officer who will follow them up for consideration.

"$8,000 helped."

Sergeant Roy Smith was going for more than the bonus when he reenlisted.

"The $8,000 helped. But part of my reason for staying in the Army is I can get the rest of my college credits for a degree. I've got 2 years in already.

"I enjoy the job I'm doing now as a drill sergeant. But I'd also like to try military intelligence. And eventually get to go to OCS.

"It's all there. It's completely up to me and my qualifications for it."

Sergeant Smith views the Army as one big opportunity for a guy who wants to get ahead.

There are job and educational opportunities. In advanced electronics. Cryptography. Foreign languages. Data processing.

Communications. Traffic analysis. And lots more.

And travel opportunities. In Europe. Korea. Hawaii. Alaska. Panama. And the time to enjoy it. To live it. In a way no tourist ever could.

And the opportunity to save money on all the everyday things.

Like free housing. Free dental and medical care. Commissary and post exchange privileges. Low-cost life insurance.

It's all here. It's up to you.

Your Army Career Counselor has a whole book of job, duty station and training opportunities just waiting for you. He'll give you lots of reasons for staying in.

Pvt. William Kinney shows off prize-winning bike.

Biking

Marathon freaks age from 5-52

Keep on biking! Ten soldiers from 85th Company, TSB, kept on biking for 200 miles in the Columbus Jaycees-Pepsi-Cola bicycle marathon, and won two first-place trophies. The 24-hour competition was held in Columbus on June 2 and 3.

Two five-man relay teams from 85th Company entered the marathon, which was held on Broadway in downtown Columbus. It was the first such event ever held locally.

Private William Kinney was the winner of the prize for the most unusual bike. His bike was in the shape of a helicopter, complete with rotating blade. He crash-landed his craft after covering a little more than a mile.

The trophy for best uniformed team was presented to PFC Scott Horner, Pvt. Steve Hale, Pvt. Bruce Sheppard, Pvt. Steve Roemer, and Capt. Robert Johnson, the company's commanding officer. Capt. Johnson furnished a 10-speed bike for the race.

To win the prize for best uniformed team, the men passed up their Army tans in favor of red and white athletic suits. They trucked the 200 miles in 15 hours and 30 minutes.

The company's other relay team made the distance in 15 hours and 5 minutes. The members were Pvt. George Stanley, Pvt. Lewie Perrigin, Pvt. Ed Saunders, Pvt. Steve Barret, and Pvt. Oral Johnson. They rented a bicycle for the occasion.

"The bikes gradually fell apart throughout the night," said Capt. Johnson. "We were without brakes after about three hours. It was pretty tough on our feet after the pedals broke off. I wish we had had some spare parts."

In addition to the other awards, each participating team was presented an award for completing 200 miles. Overall winner of the race was an Auburn University mathematics professor, Coke Reed, who traveled 332 miles in the marathon.

Second-place winner was 15-year-old Kirk Eskin, who completed 291 mile-long laps. Kendrick had the largest participation from a local high school, while Auburn University grabbed honors for greatest participation by a college or university.

Oldest competitor was Martha Anderson, 52 years of age, and the youngest entrant was Edith Mae Opry, age 5, who traveled three miles on a tricycle.

Drug experts to speak here

gree in 1967 from Nashotah House Episcopal Seminary, Nashotah, Wisc.

Mr. Marcus Anderson, founder and director of The House of Uhuru in Los Angeles, Calif., will speak June 14 on "Drug Abuse in Minority Cultures." Mr. Anderson, who has held various consultantships, including private industry, government, and the military services, has been active in drug counseling and rehabilitation work.

On June 18 Dr. A. M. Schneidmuhl will speak on "Who, What and How in Alcohol Education." Dr. Schneidmuhl received his M.D. from the School of Medicine at the University of Nancy in France, and his master's degree in public health from Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore.

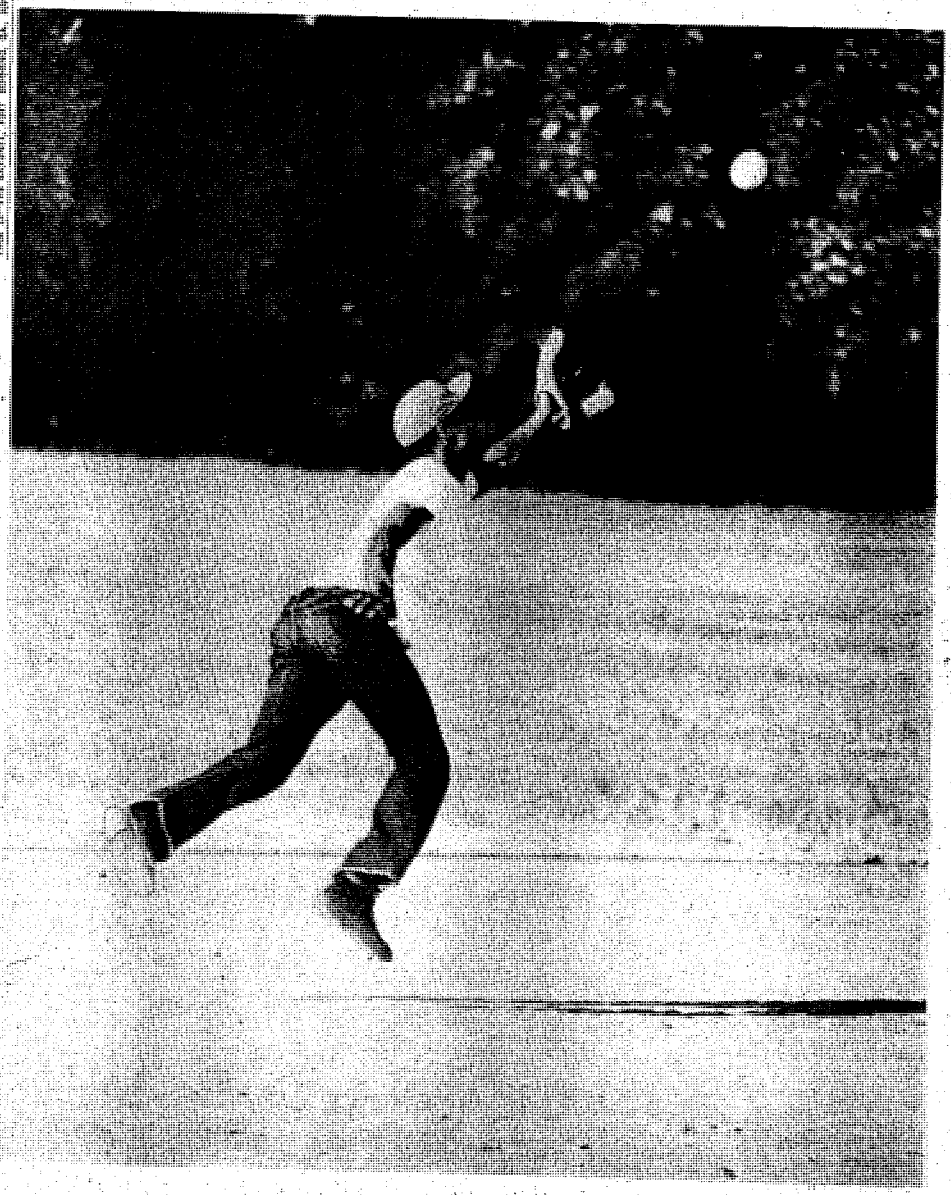
He is a professor of psychiatry and director of the Alcoholism Counselor Training Program at Johns Hopkins University, and has worked closely with all branches of the military in training alcoholism counselors. He has also authored several books.

Alcoholism

On June 18, Mr. Leonard Walker, an alcoholism therapist with Results, Inc., a Pontiac, Mich. therapy firm, will speak on "Modalities of Alcoholism Therapy." Mr. Walker is a graduate of Anderson College, where he earned his bachelor of divinity degree in psychology.

He has been a therapist and lecturer for several institutions and businesses, and is an ordained minister of the Church of God. He has begun several alcoholism therapy programs, and has published numerous articles on the subject.

The seminar will also include field trips to the Altnata Renewal House, a private rehabilitation center, the Columbus Police Department and Benning House, and a demonsration of the narcotics detection dogs used by the Fort Benning Provost Marshal.



Unit-of-choice enlistees begin

The recently activated 2nd Bn., 69th Ar., 197th Inf. Bde. has begun training its first class of unit-of-choice enlistees in an Advanced Individual Training course which will qualify them as tankers in the 11E10 Military Occupational Specialty (MOS).

Numbering 47 students, including two regularly assigned men, the class began May 21 under the auspices of the 197th Brigade's Central Training Command (CTC) headed by 1st Lt. William Benline. CTC will conduct the first four weeks of the training, involving general military map reading, CBR training subjects, survival training, ing and communications instruction.

In the final phase of training, conducted by the 2nd of the 69th, the men are scheduled for instruction in various aspects of the specialties of their skill. This includes tank gunnery, vehicle recovery, tank armament and tactical training.

The AIT students all wear yellow triangles on their field caps, signifying their connection with the "Speed and Power" of the Armor.

Even Luis Aparicio couldn't have snatched this line drive, but Spc. George Davis made a gallant try in a recent 197th Inf. Bde. Softball Tournament game. Davis' team, B Btry., 2nd Bn., 10th F.A., won the contest in spite of this play, beating HHC, 197th, 9-5. (PHOTO BY BOB THOMAS)

ROD AND GUN CLUB Notes

By Bill Kloeb

Royce McGuffy of Griffin, Ga. was high shooter in the Georgia State Archery Shoot held at the Rod and Gun Club Archery Ranges last weekend.

Carl Pritchett, Columbus, was second high scorer in the open division while George Drake, also of Columbus, was the third place winner. Gene Stalcup, president of the Fort Benning Archery Group, had a good day on Saturday but lost too many points on Sunday to score among the top three. His overall score was two points below that of Drake to win fourth place.

Other Rod and Gun Club archers winning events in the meet were Robby Gunn who placed first in the match for first class shooters and Ken Covington who won first place in the second class division.

The women's division was won by Sandy Elott from Atlanta who scored higher than quite a few of the men competitors in the open division.

The shooters in this event came from all over Georgia for an opportunity to become familiar with the Rod and Gun Club field ranges which will be the site of the Georgia State Archery Association 1973 Championships this July 14 and 15.

Anyone who has an idea that he would like to take up archery as a sport or has thought about hunting game with the bow and arrow should make attendance at the championship matches a must. The top bow shooters of Georgia will be here then to demonstrate just how accurate and effective a trained individual can be with the bow and arrow as they compete for state honors over the field course consisting of various types of game animals found in this area.

Rod and Gun Fishing Derby

Captain William Aronow, TSB, took a 9-pound, 8-ounce bass from Harps Pond to win the bass contest in the Rod and Gun Club Fishing Derby for May. Apparently he used up everything he had going for him on that catch. He fished the entire weekend of the Memorial Weekend Contest without a single catch of any kind. Other members of the club haven't let him forget that incident. The captain has the last laugh because he won a $15 merchandise order good for redemption at the club sales counter.

SFC Billy Bower of the Center Marksmanship Unit won the catfish contest with a 9-pound, 13-ounce catfish he took from Twilight Pond and SFC (ret.) H. O. Couch, 927 Brighton Road, won the bream contest with an entry that tipped the club scales at an even 2-pounds.

Winners of the May contest registered fish anyone would be happy to get. The June Derby is starting out to be another month for prize fish. MSgt. Davey Jones registered a 6-pound, 2-ounce catfish from Twilight Pond, and SSgt. William Angelvich has a 4-pound, 4-ounce bass from Harps Pond and David Malner registered an 8-ounce bream from Harps Pond.

The Rod and Gun Club holds a fishing derby each month of the year. Prizes are awarded to the fishermen registering the largest bream, bass or catfish during the month.

Any member of the club is eligible to enter the contest. The rules are easily understood but religiously enforced. The fisherman must register at the club each day he intends to enter the contest, must take his catch from one of the named ponds on post and bring it back to the club for weighing and registration. Fishermen taking fish after normal open hours of the club may bring them in the next day for registration.

Fishing May Be Dangerous

Fishermen or anyone who goes into the boondocks of Fort Benning must always keep in mind that this is a military training area. Live firing is conducted almost every day. During the summer months ranges are usually used on weekends by reserve units. Some areas are dangerous at all times because of unexploded munitions. You owe it to yourself to know about these places. You can get this information from the maps Range Control Office posts daily. These maps are located behind the Range Control Office on Dixie Road, the Provost Marshal Headquarters, Building 215 on Main Post and at the Rod and Gun Club located on First Division Road in the Harmony Church Area.

Somebody is going to Phoenix

Select marksmen from the U. S. Army Marksmanship Training Unit left Wednesday for Phoenix, Ariz., where they will compete in the 15th U.S International Shooting Championships which starts June 10.

The Phoenix matches will pit the Army, Army Reserve, Navy, National Guard, Air Force, Marine and civilian shooters for top laurels and national recognition.

This event serves to select teams to represent the nation in Olympic Games, World Championship Games and Pan American Games. This year the selected team, The U.S. Champions, will be competing in the Tournament of Americas at Mexico City in October.

This is the first time for the Tournament of Americas which just recently received International Shooting Union recognition. Normally on this fourth year, the U.S. Teams are unable to compete in an event in which world records can be established such as the European and Asiatic Championships held this year for those areas of the world.

A total of 28 shooters will probably be selected to the U.S. team, the exact number is yet to be determined. This will include eight rifle, eight hand gun and 12 moving target competitors. The latter includes four trap, four skeet and four running boar.

For the shotgunners, the U.S. International Skeet and Clay Pigeon Championships will be held at Chardon, Ohio in July this year. Normally these events are held simultaneously with the rifle and handgun competition at Phoenix.

The initial competition at Phoenix will be Air Rifle and Air Pistol elimination matches with a three day Free Pistol match commencing Monday.

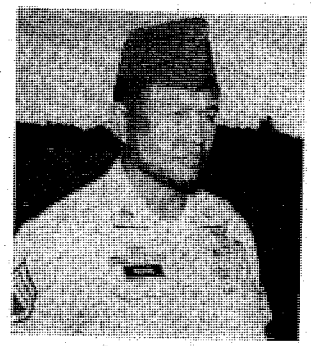
Black captures pistol phase

Sgt. Marvin Black of Laverne, Okla., and the Third Army Area, came from behind May 31 to capture the pistol phase of the All Army Rifle and Pistol Matches conducted by the Army Infantry Center here.

Black, going into the final day of competition one point behind SFC Bonnie Harmon, blazed an incredible 897-57X of a possible 900 points into his target 3,594 for the coveted All Army Pistol crown.



Harmon, experiencing difficulty in the combat pistol course, dropped nine hits from his ten ring for an 891-49X, which was not good enough to place in the individual match but did give him the runner up spot in the 3,600 grand aggregate championship with 3,529.

Missouri National Guardsman SFC Kenneth Buster of Billings, Mo., posted an 896 for runner up honors in the pistol course while SSgt. John Kailer, with the U.S. Army in Europe, was third with two less points.

Black dropped ten points in the first two strings of ten shots on his 22 caliber Pistol slow fire target then recovered from his shaky start to allow only two hits to escape the ten ring in the next 80 shots of the 22 cal. series. In his remarkable recovery, Black won the four match series with an 888-38X, two points better than SFC Harland Reynolds of the Army Marksmanship Unit.

In the pistol team competition, a band of hard shooting handgunners led by Black grabbed three of the four gun matches and with it the Grand Aggregate All Army Pistol Team Championship. The team's only loss was the 22 Caliber contest to a Sixth Army squad.

Members of the championship team included Black, SSgt. Larry Crow, Paragould, Ark., SSgt. Jack McJunkin, Klamath Falls, Ore., and SSgt. John McClellan, Fort Benning, Ga.

Sixth Army marksman claims Rifle phase

SSgt. Arpail Gapol, Sixth Army marksman from Honolulu, Hawaii, claimed the rifle phase of the All Army Service Rifle Championship for a second year in succession compiling the winning aggregate of 1,871-76 1,871-76X.

This was eight points better than his 1972 score and ten more than his nearest opponent, SFC George Floyd, recorded for the week long series of matches in which the competitors fired both the M-16 and M-14 for the Grand Aggregate Championship.

Third place was claimed by 1st Lt. Bruce F. O'Brien, Jacksonville, Fla., who fired a 1,867-60X for the U.S. Army in Europe.

The three top marksmen took a large number of the individual matches toward the grand championship with O'Brien winning the M-16 individual championship with his 619 of 650, Gapol taking the M-14 top spot with 1,264 of a possible 1,300 and Floyd grabbing the M-16 combat rifle match with a new Army record high of 242-15X.

Wagon wins

Would you believe that a stock Chevrolet Kingswood Estate Wagon took the hodors at the Wednesday night "ET" meet May 30?

Jimmy Parker, who usually drives a SS-R car, managed to successfully climb through a field of 64 entries.

Tommy Pollard, on a Kawasaki, Class I winner, ran Class II winner, Bill Cobb in a Super Bee. But the Kawasaki broke out by going too fast. He went more than 1-10 of a second faster than he had dialed in. Therefore Bill Cobb went on to the semi-finals against Jimmy Parker. Jimmy had won both Class II and Class IV with his Chevy wagon. The money went to Jimmy Parker as he again made the finish line first.

Fort Benning personnel that entered were SSgt. Tom Cain, 139th MP Co.; Roy Nininger, 2 69th Armor, 197th Bde.; Ricky Rowland, C. Co., 43rd Engr.; John Stringer, 3rd Ranger Co.; and WO-1 Alan Pangburn, HHC, 145th Avn. Bn.

Judo tournament slated tomorrow

The Fort Benning Judo Club is sponsoring an open judo tournament tomorrow at Bryant Wells Field House.

Exhibitions will begin at 10 a.m. with regularly scheduled competition starting at 11:30 a.m.

According to Fort Benning judo coach LTC Charles T. Keaton, this open judo tournament is expected to draw competitors from throughout Georgia in addition to some well known judo clubs from Alabama, Louisiana, Mississippi and northern Florida. Trophies and awards are to be given.

Admission to the public is free and everybody is cordially invited. Come out and see the kids in action, your support will be appreciated.

AUSA

Sponsors Flag Day Golf Tournament

Fun, golf and patriotism will be the main ingredients of the Association of the United States Army (AUSA) sponsored Flag Day Golf Tournament.

The one day tournament will take place Saturday, June 16 at the Sand Hill Golf Course. Local civilian courses have been invited to hold similar events.

Each participant who enters the tournament receives a small American flag. The flag will be placed in the ground where his golf shot stops on the stroke equalling par plus his handicap. If more than 18 holes is required the golfer starts the round over until he reaches that shot. The persons whose flag is farthest along the course wins.

There is no charge to enter the tournament. Anyone who is eligible to play on the Officers or Sand Hill course or their guest is able to enter the event. AUSA will provide the flags and trophies for the top three places finishers.

Civilian rif on

A reduction in the civilian appropriated fund work force announced for Fort Benning will begin immediately and be completed by August 17, a spokesman in the Civilian Personnel Office said today.

The reduction will involve separation of approximately 49 permanent employees.

The last day of work for permanent employees to be separated will be August 17, according to the spokesman.

Maximum assistance will be provided affected employees in obtaining employment with other Federal agencies and private industry.

Talent show contest

Special Services, Music and Theatre Branch, is sponsoring a talent show and contest as part of the entertainment scheduled for the Independence Day Carnival, July 4, at Marshal Auditorium, Infantry Hall, Fort Benning, Ga.

The contest will be open to all military and civilian personnel in the Fort Benning, Columbus, and Phenix City area.

The competition will be in three categories, vocal, instrumental, and specialties.

First, second, and third prizes will be awarded to the winners, either listed individually or as a group. The first prize will consist of $100, second prize $75, prize $75 dollars, and $50 for third prize.

For anyone wishing assistance with background music, there will be a house band available. The speciality category is open to anyone not emphasizing music in his or her performance.

Entries will be judged on originality, technical appeal.

The deadline for entry blanks will be June 22. Registration forms and additional pockets are available at all Special Services facilities on post and at selected areas in Columbus and Phenix City.

Information may also be obtained by calling 545-2932 or 545-5052.

It's carnival time at Fort Benning

BY BILL SAMS

HURRY. HURRY. HURRY. It's carnival time. Great midway, rides, parades and fireworks, all at the Fort Benning Fourth of July Carnival.

Opening ceremony and parade begins at 11:45 a.m., July 2, at York Field and Eubank Field.

Evening hours bring even more excitement with the Share the Wealth drawing. The holders of tickets which have the same last three digits as the ticket drawn, will each receive a five dollar prize.

From an estimated 150,000 tickets sold, there will be about 150 possible five dollar prize winners. That means your chances of winning are just as great as the next guys.

Some of the greatest prizes you've ever seen are up for grabs.

Just imagine driving away in a brand new 1973 Mustang Mach I, with luxury extras, or picture yourself and that favorite gal or guy, truckin' down the road on two Kawasaki trail bikes.

Departing on an Eastern Airlines Jet, you're off to one of the most beautiful fun and sun capitals of the world, Acapulco, Mexico, trip for two with all expenses paid, including reservations and accommodations.

Is music your bag? Do you dig, Allman Brothers, George Harrison, Grand Funk, Henry Mancini, or even Lawrence Welk? Well, clear that space in your living room or bedroom and get ready to spin those big black disc, because you may be the lucky music lover who wins the complete stereo component set.

Two 19 inch Zenith color television sets, one for the bedroom or the den, or maybe it's that extra T.V. you've been wanting for your office. Well both will be given away absolutely free.

The next time you go to the country club golf course, maybe you'll be the one sporting that complete set of golf clubs with bag. It's all for you.

No matter what your game is, your aim will get even better with the 12 gauge or 16 gauge shotguns to be given away.

Cycling has fastly become one of the most popular family or individual sporting activities around today, and those two 10 speed Jaguar racing bikes would be excellent for the physical conditioning everyone needs to stay in top shape.

You'll never have to tell about that "big one" that got away again, if you're the lucky fisherman who wins the fishing gear outfit.

Love, duece, or ade in, it doesn't matter, your game will improve with each forehand smash or backhand return, by using one of the two Wilson tennis rackets to be given away.

Don't forget to be there and join in all the fun and excitement. Maybe you'll be one of the big winners.

Pageant tickets reduced

Military personnel can buy tickets to the Miss Georgia Pageant at reduced prices this year. The pagent will take place at the Municipal Auditorium on June 20, 21, 22 and 23.

According to the Special Services Office af Fort Benning, tickets are available to military personnel for $2, $3.50 and $4.50. The pageant will begin at 8 p.m. on June 20, 21 and 22, and at 8:30 p.m. on June 23.

For more information, call Mrs. Stewart at the Special Services Office, 545-3380.

Hqs. Cmd. boat race

Headquarters Command is holding it's second Great Upatoi Creek Canoe and Jon Boat race Thursday, 28 June 1973. The race will be approximately 14 miles long. If you wish to enter the competition contact your Unit Commander or First Sergeant. Boats will be assigned on a first come first serve basis. Closing date for entries will be COB2 26 June 1973.

There will be a party at the finish line for participants and spectators. All Headquarters Command personnel are invited to attend the party.

Cpt. Whitehead receives DSC

The Distinguished Service Cross, our nation's second highest military award, will be presented to Cpt. John B. Whitehead III, U. S. Army Combat Arms Training Board, by Maj. Gen. James F. Hamlet, commanding general, Fort Carson, Col., June 18, 8:30 a.m., York Field.

Capt. Whitehead was nominated for the Medal of Honor by Maj. Gen. Hamlet, who was at the time, the commanding general of the Third Separate First Calvary Division Airmobile.

Whitehead's aircraft was designed to carry only four personnel. However, while under intense enemy fire, risking his own life, he and his crew chief managed to save the lives of four South Vietnamese soldiers and three American advisors. They landed in the surrounding enemy area and rescuing the seven involved in the enemy attack.

Keeping up with changes is greatest challenge

Adventure training in the modern Army is exciting but the greatest challenge facing today's soldier is planning his career to keep up with or stay ahead of the changing Army's needs.

Where will the MOS that you now have carry you in the future? Are you presently qualified and "bull headedly" holding on to a specialty that leads to nowhere? Each career oriented soldier owes it to himself to analyze the future needs of his MOS and make plans to discard it when it is no longer in demand or when it becomes over saturated with personnel.

Likewise, some individuals may become incapable of performing in a much needed MOS. The MOS is in demand, yet, you are denied a promotion in the MOS based on your physical limitations. Are you prepared to discard the MOS and become reclassified into one that will offer you future advancement?

The Army capitalizes on every technological gain that has military significance. For this reason, the need for a particular MOS today may be ones that is discarded tomorrow. It is logical that with withdrawal of troops from Vietnam, reduction of the Army's strength posture, removal of outdated weapons from its arsenal, in addition to a possible change in your physical capabilities, that changes in military occupational specialties are required.

DA Circular 611-14 provides a composite list of MOS which are in demand. It also provides a list of MOS that are over saturated with personnel. CONARC provides specific guidance in OJT and school course procedures to follow in order to become qualified in a needed MOS.

Caution, the MOS shortage list is adjusted as soon as the shortages are filled and no others may be reclassified into the MOS. What does this mean? It simply means that those with initiative will respond without delay while the shortage list offers a variety. Those who lack initiative and wait for the reclassification board will be positioned basis on the needs of the Army — and rightfully so.

Consideration will be given to the desires of the individual as much as possible in retraining and reclassification; however, individuals holding overstrength, (Career Management Field-Military Occupational Specialty; and grades are advised that unless overstrengths are eliminated through voluntary retraining and reclassification, DA directed action will be necessary. This headquarters has authority to stabilize for 12 months any EM who is reclassified from an overage MOS and grade that may be utilized at this installation. Reclassification action and position stabilization must be completed no later than 30 June 1973.

It is highly recommended that you review the need for your MOS — not yesterdays need, but tomorrow's need — where does it lead? There is no need for "mule shoers" today. There was a time however, when it was an important MOS. What about yours? Does today's Army need Helcopter Repairmen (67,68 career troup)? Certainly not in quantities presently available. In fact, those personnel holding career groups 67 and 68 may be reclassified at installation level into any other shortage MOS.

Voluntary reclassification is desirable; however, it is anticipated that reclassification boards must eventually determine those who must be retrained. If you are marginal it is again recommended that you not feel overly secure simply because you have been qualified in the past. Classification boards seek the most qualified until positions are filled — all others must go. Review your status. Then seek an appointment with your personnel management officer. Secure an MOS that is needed in today's Army.

SSgt. Harris and SFC McWilliams of the headwall at Sewelson Creek Culvert. Co. C, 43rd Engr. Bn. inspect forms for Three times, man, three times

What happens when you start a job, then get wiped out three times? Charlie Company, 43rd Engr. Bn. (Const) says you start over again and keep at it until the job is finished.

The second platoon of C Company was assigned the job of building a new concrete pipe culvert with headwalls at Sewelson Creek on River Road. The platoon started the job in late February, but when the Chattahoochee River came up twice during March due to heavy rains, the half finished job was washed out each time. Each time the platoon went back to the site to work again.

Eventually the platoon had to call on the same Mother nature who bad frustrated them to help them. In order to evacuate trapped silt in the bottom of the excavation a temporary culvert was laid below the site bypass and the dam blocking the stream flow through the culvert was opened to allow the water to flow through the excavation to clean out the silt. Once that was accomplished the excavation was again cleared and work proceeded.

With a new head of steam the platoon went full speed ahead to place the section of concrete pipe and form the headwalls. Finally the headwalls were placed on the 18th of May and traffic was cleared across the new culvert. Shortly the platoon will take out the old culvert and finish a new channel line for the stream. Soon work will begin on an asphalt treatment for several more miles of River Road.

Mobile homes can be a rip-off

By Bill Brownell

If you are contemplating buying a mobile home, there are a few things that you should investigate first. While there are some distinct advantages, there are also several disadvantages.

When everything is considered like buying costs, transportation, resale, safety, utilities and lot rent, the prospective mobile home owner should take a close look, then decide.

Total Costs Staggering

With all of the talk these days about the high cost of building or buying fixed homes there is little wonder why the attractiveness, comfort, neighborhood and price make mobile home living a booming business.

Prices on new mobile homes vary from $3000 to $15,000. Unless the home is paid for in cash, financing can be costly. Most lending firms won't touch a mobile home loan only to those buyers who go through a mobile home dealer.

One local loan firm in Columbus offers independent loans at an annual rate of six per cent but the loan must be paid in seven years. Another firm charges more than 13 per cent for seven years. Those buyers who finance the loan via a mobile home dealer can finance the cost up to 12 years at varying interest rates.

Since the dealer gets a cut of the interest, he may have several interest schedules which he can select based on what he thinks he can get from the buyer. Usually, these rates are several percentage points higher.

VA Loans

Veterans Administration (VA) loans are now available at controlled rates, but there is usually a time-lag to check the buyers credit and close the loan. Many buyers become too anxious to wait on VA. Most dealers are quick to point this out to the prospective buyer.

The price of furnishings is also controlled by VA. According to James F. Carson, chief of loan processing at the VA reginnal office in Atlanta, "There is a 20 per cent markup limitation on the price the dealer can add to the manufacturer's invoice price."

The loan guarantee is also another problem. VA guarantees only 30 per cent up to $3000 on a mobile home loan whereas the fixed home is guaranteed at 60 per cent up to $12,500.

"Not only are these mobile homes constantly depreciating in value, but they are extremely difficult to sell," continued Carson. "In the long run, the total cost of buying a mobile home is just about as expensive as a regular home."

"The man who buys the mobile home should be doing so for that purpose, — mobility living and not out of investment," added Carson.

It takes nearly four years for a buyer to break even on resale. Since most mobile homes depreciate 75 per cent in the first three years, it takes at least four years for the buyer to sell the trailer for the balance of the mortgage without incurring an additional loss just to unload the home.

According to Col. (ret.) E. W. Schroeder, director of civil defense in Columbus, most mobile homes are moved only once — from the factory to the mobile home lot.

Carson advised that if anyone has any questions regarding VA financial assistance should call 536-3586 and ask for someone in the loan processing section to return the call. "We can provide valuable assistance before you take a look," he said.

Transportation Twist

The real bag of worms for the military buyer may come when it's time for a change of station.

If the home is moved within the state of Georgia and the trailer meets all moving size requirements, the owner will normally break even.

Out-of-state movement is a whole new ball game. Every state has its own regulations. The length of both the truck and the home must be figured for shipment. Some states, such as Georgia, have a minimum size truck which can be used to haul a mobile home.

Mr. A. W. Bethea, chief of Household Goods Section, Post Transportation Office, says, "The best thing to do before buying a mobile home is to contact this office for guidance. There have been some soldiers who bought mobile homes only to discover later they are not shipable."

'Inherit Vice'

There is also an "inherit vice" stipulation which places the burden of loss on the owner if the home comes apart at the seams due to poor workmanship and materials or the tires blow out and have to be replaced.

Some states require an escort, special lighting and special permits for overlength or overwidth homes. Other states simply do not allow passage into or through their territory. This may cause the route to be lengthened in order to bypass the state. This expense is borne by the owner.

Currently, the government allows mobile homes to be shipped, but the allowance for shipping household goods is forfeited. In most cases the dislocation allowance, too, is relinquished. Two movers in the Columbus-Phenix City area both charge approximately one dollar a mile for interstate movement. Both offer a three-cent military discount. Uncle Sam pays 74 cents a mile leaving the owner to absorb the difference of 23 cents. The owner must also bear the burden of all state permits enroute and escorts. The above rates vary according to the size of the home and where it is being shipped. East coast rates are more expensive since there are more toll roads, bridges and tunnels.

Military shippers have a list of mandatory instructions which must be followed in order to ship at government expense. Bethea recommended that anyone thinking of buying a mobile home should take just a few minutes and contact the Household Goods Section in Bldg. 230 or call 546-4594. This office will assist any prospective buyer in what to look for before taking that giant financial step.

Safety Questionable

Col. Schroeder added, "Mobile homes are quite vulnerable to high winds. Although there is no law currently in Georgia requiring tiedowns, many loan firms and insurance companies require them or offer reduced rates, if used."

None of the mobile home parks questioned in the Columbus-Phenix City area required tiedowns or provide tiedown anchors. The manager of one of these parks feels tiedowns are useless and expensive. He thinks that if a tornado strikes, it will take more than tiedowns to save the home and its inhabitants.

The high winds of both hurricanes and tornadoes can cause flying debris to penetrate mobile homes. An explosive drop in pressure as a tornado passes directly over a mobile home can also contribute to heavy structural damage or destruction.

When selecting a mobile home lot, positioning the width towards the prevailing winds, windbreaks, tiedown anchors and storm shelters should be considered. Few parks have these features; all of those parks questioned had no storm shelter.

Fort Rucker, Ala., suffered a tornado disaster in January 1972, when 91 of 200 mobile homes in one trailer park were destroyed by the crushing winds. Investigators revealed that 61 of 91 homes would have been saved if they had been tied down.

Before buying or renting a mobile home, you should contact the Civil Defense Office located at 1908 N. Expressway or call 324-4146. There are pamphlets available on tiedowns and shelters as well as valuable advice for your personal situation.

CONSUMER PROTECTION FOR SERVICEMEN

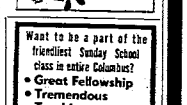
Domestic Weapons

BY VIRGINIA KNAUER
Special Assistant to President Nixon for Consumer Affairs

What domestic appliance do you know of that can cut like a knife, shoot like a gun or explode like a bomb?

Your rotary power lawn mower can if it is carelessly used.

The most hazardous part of your mower is the fast rotating blade, but you should be aware of other hazards too. Rocks and other debris can be hurtled from the discharge chute at high speeds. A mower gas tank being filled while hot can explode. A mower running in a closed garage can emit poisonous carbon monoxide fumes. Or loose clothing — even long hair — can be caught in a mower's exposed moving parts.



The power mower is a valuable tool for the modern homeowner, but it is not a toy and should be taken seriously. In 1968 an estimated 140,000 injuries were caused by mowers. Fortunately, there are two ways to reduce the injury toll: design a safer mower and increase consumer awareness about safety.

Improved safety features are becoming available on many models, such as discharge chutes that minimize ejection of dangerous objects and guards that keep the operator's feet away from the blades.

Look on your mower for the triangular silver - colored safety seal, sponsored by the Outdoor Power Equipment Institute, which indicates that the mower has been certified by an independent laboratory to meet standards set by the American National Standards Institute in 1968. In small print you will read: "ANS B71.1—1968." The standards have been upgraded in 1972 so that later in the year you may see a new gold-colored seal labeled "ANS B71.1—1972."

However, the ANSI standard is voluntary and is only a minimum standard.

To report a mower accident, write a letter to OPEI and send a copy to Food Drug Administration, Bureau of Product Safety, Room 222-C, 5401 Wesbard Ave., Bethesda, Md. 20016. Include the manufacturer's name, the model number and the serial number. This will aid FDA in its efforts to gather data about product-related injuries.

BEEF KABOBS WAIKIKI

Serves 5

Marinade
¾ cup soy sauce
1-3 cup salad oil
1-3 cup lemon juice
2 tablespoons ground ginger
4 teaspoons prepared mustard
½ teaspoon freshly ground pepper

4 pounds round steak

Kebobs
1 pound small onions
1 pound fresh mushrooms
2 or 3 green peppers, cut into chunks
1 pound cherry tomatoes
Skewers
Reserved marinade

Combine soy sauce, salad oil, lemon juice, ginger, mustard, and pepper in shallow pan.

Cut steak into 1½" or 2" cubes. Place meat into marinade. Refrigerate for 4 to 5 hours or overnight, turning meat occasionally.

Put meat cubes on skewers, separated by alternate portions of onion, mushroom, green pepper, and cherry tomatoes. Grill over a charcoal fire until done, basting occasionally with the reserved marinade.

Commissary hours

Reduction in funding and manpower levels necessitate a change in hours of operation of the Commissary. In order to provide the least impact to the customers, an analysis of customer load in the Commissary was made. Additionally, individual customers were consulted and the desires of the Commissary Advisory Council considered before arriving at a new schedule of hours. In consonance with the foregoing, the following operating hours for the Main Store and Custer Terrace Commissary beginning 1 July 1973 are announced.

Main Store	Custer Terrace
Monday thru Friday 1100 - 1900	Tuesday thru Saturday 0900 - 1700
Saturday and Sunday 1000 - 1800	Sunday and Monday Closed

The Milk Bar will be closed COB 15 June 1973 permanently. Milk Bar items are available in the Main Store and Custer Terrace as usual.

Night Clinic

The night clinic in the Martin Army Hospital annex will no longer operate after June 15. It is necessary due to the reduction in the number of physicians assigned to MEDDAC.

News

A news program at the Infantry School for students, faculty and staff will be aired over the Closed Circuit Educational Television System each Wednesday at 7:45 a.m. and 1 p.m. Interested people can turn their TV receivers to channel 5 or 13. The program will be repeated at the same time on Thursday.

Boxing

Post boxing has been fading away due to lack of interest in the sport. People who would like to participate or even come out to watch should call PFC Earl Williams or Staff Sgt. Oliver at Special Services at 545-1516.

Guitar lessons

The Special Services Music Center is now enrolling military personnel, civilian employees and their dependents in new guitar classes beginning late June. In the new Multi Media Guitar Lab, you will be working with the newest audio-visual aids and a proven programmed text with experienced instructors to guide you along the way. Several levels of guitar will be meeting one hour two evenings a week for a total of twelve one-hour lessons. A fee of $9.00 is charged per student to cover the instructor's fee and music materials that are needed. Saturday classes including Special Classes for Children are also available. For more information and enrollment call Sp5 Miller, 545-1870, Bldg. 1684.

Forget $5 a week at CB&T...
Try it. Just stop by any CB&T office and open a "Forget about Saving" account for $5.00 a week. Or any amount, for that matter. Then, just forget it for a while. After a few weeks, check and see how much you've saved. You'll be surprised when you see how fast even $5.00 a week will add up. Especially when your money is earning the highest interest a commercial bank can pay.
But here's what really makes this plan work so well. We make the deposits for you. By transfering whatever amount you choose from your CB&T checking account to your savings account. So come by CB&T, and tell us you want to forget about saving. It'll be the most rewarding thing you've ever forgotten. MEMBER FDIC

Special Services sponsors beauty contest

The Special Services Division is sponsoring a beauty contest during the Independence Day Carnival, July 4, 3 p.m.-4:30 p.m., Marshall Auditorium, Infantry Hall, Fort Benning, Ga.

The entrants must be between the ages of 16-24 and must be residents of the Fort Benning, Columbus or Phenix City area.

The entrants will be judged on poise, personality, intelligence, charm and beauty of face and figure.

The emcee will ask each contestant a question concerning special interests, hobbies or her plans for the future.

Contestants will be judged in several different categories such as swim suit, evening gown, and street attire competition.

In the swim suit competition, a one piece swim suit with shoulder strap will be worn to judge poise and grace.

For the evening gown competition, a long evening gown will be worn. However the gown itself will not be judged, but should be worn to accent your appearance and movements.

The street clothes competition should consist of dress fashion or pant suit. Rehearsal shorts and hot pants are not allowed.

Rehearsal will begin at 7:30 p.m. - 9:30 p.m., July 3, at Marshall Auditorium, Infantry Hall.

Due to the time factor of the beauty contest (1½ hours) there will be no talent presentation.

$100 cash will be given to the first place winner, the second place winner will receive $75, and third place will receive $50 cash prize.

For further information contact Special Services Division 545-1270 - 545-1975.

New clinic opens for families

Under the Family Practice Program, begun last year at Martin Army Hospital, a new clinic for Fort Benning personnel and their dependents will open June 18.

Members of the "Blue Group" will be served in a new clinic, located on the main floor of Martin Army Hospital, instead of in the Hospital Annex where it has been located until now. The new clinic is Family Practice Clinic No. 2, and personnel eligible to use it should inquire at the hospital's information desk for its exact location.

The clinic will serve all retired persons and their dependents, including children of all ages, whose terminal social security number ends in 3, 4, or 0. It also will serve all active duty waiting families, including children of all ages, with terminal digits 3 and 4.

All dependents of active duty personnel whose sponsor reports to Troop Medical Clinic No. 2 for sick call, including children of all ages, should use Family Practice Clinic No. 2 beginning June 18. Families of IOAC and IOBC students will remain in the "Blue Group," even if the sponsor's Troop Medical Clinic is changed to No. 9.

The hours of the clinic are from 9 a.m. to 12 noon and from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday. The same physicians that have been providing medical care for the Blue Group during the last year will be located in this clinic.

All non-emergency medical problems will be seen by appointment only. For an appointment, call 544-2091 and ask the secretary to make an appointment for you from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. on weekdays. If you have an emergency medical problem, call 544-2091 from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. on weekdays, ask to speak to a nurse or doctor, and explain the problem to them.

If you have an emergency medical problem after hours, on the weekend or on a holiday, call the information desk at the hospital at 544-2041 and they will give your number to a doctor who will call you back. This includes all day and night on weekends, after 5 p.m. on weekdays, and all day and night on holidays.

Every attempt will be made to see that your medical records will be transferred to the new clinic area. Active duty personnel will continue to be seen at the Troop Medical Clinic that they are assigned to. As has been announced, there will be no evening or Saturday morning clinic.

All the physicians in the Blue Group have been trained in family medicine, and wish to provide personal medical care for the whole family, emphasizing preventive medical care. They feel that the definition of "We Care" should be expanded to include the military family as well as the physician.

Georgia veterans urged to up-date G.I. insurance

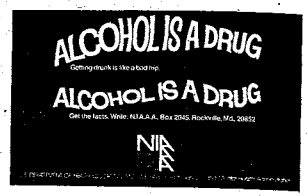
Georgia veterans should be sure that their G.I. insurance policies are kept up to date with regard to their chosen beneficiaries. The word of warning comes from Georgia Veterans Service Director Pete Wheeler who said that neglect in keeping beneficiaries current often results in the "wrong person" receiving insurance benefits after a veteran dies.

"In some instances," said Wheeler, "deceased persons still are listed as a veterans's beneficiaries, and when the veteran dies his insurance benefits will be paid into the estates of these deceased persons.

"Another common oversight occurs when a veteran marries and simply fails to list his wife as beneficiary. More often than not," said Wheeler, "the parents of the veteran would still be listed as beneficiaries.

"Still another error frequently is made by the veteran who gets a divorce, then remarries but forgets to name his new wife as his beneficiary. In a case like this, the first wife can collect the veteran's insurance when he dies."

Wheeler said that a lot of headaches and heartaches can be avoided if veterans would take the time to check their insurance policies periodically and bring them up to date. He said that any office of the Georgia Department of Veterans Service will be glad to assist veterans in taking care of this all-important matter.



"Veterans should remember," Wheeler cautioned, "that changes in beneficiaries cannot be made by a 'last will and testament.'"

Whatja wanta Know? ask the BAYONET

CALL 545-4792

Dear Bayonet,

I have heard that the Top Five noncommissioned officers club will be closing down soon and moving to a new location. Is this true? E.L.R.

Dear E.L.R.

According to SFC Orvil L. Colwell, manager of the Top Five Club, this club will close after business 24 June and reopen 27 June at Sand Hill Annex Eight . . . the Sand Hill NCO Club.

Crane Hall will move to the Top Five NCO Club facility due to "tremendous" operating and maintenance costs and due to excessive costs projected for the renovation of the Crane Hall facility.

"A new NCO Club has been approved and will be constructed sometime in the near future," SFC Colwell said.

Dear Bayonet;

Why is it that Post Exchange employees that work in Building 4 can buy items from the exchange branch located in the cafeteria while other civilian employes working in the building are not permitted to buy these items? T.S.B.

Dear T.S.B.;

According to Robert W. Bonner, Services Operation Manager, Exchange employees are given limited exchange privileges UP AR 60-20. This regulation permits exchange employes to purchase PX items that are nontaxable, i.e. items such as cigarettes and alcoholic beverages may not be purchased.

Dear Bayonet;

How many airborne qualified soldiers are there on active duty? How many draw Parachute pay? M.E.C.

Dear M.E.C.

As of April 30, 1973 18,656 officers and 31,472 enlisted men on active duty were airborne qualified. There were 3,924 officers and 27,882 enlisted men who drew parachute pay.

Dear Bayonet;

Is Fort Benning the largest Army Post in the United States? G.H.P.

Dear G.H.P.

Fort Benning is sometimes called the largest Infantry School in the world but it is far from the largest post in the United States. White Sands Proving Grounds, New Mexico heads the list as far as real estate is concerned. It encompasses more than 2 million acres. There are several other posts which claim more real estate than the 182,580 acres at Fort Benning. Fort Bliss, Texas has more than a million acres of training area, Fort Wainwright, Alaska has 656,351 acres and Fort Hood, Texas has 218,580 acres.

ROTC cadets throughout country begin nine week ranger course

Approximately 276 Reserve Officers Training Corps cadets, the first increment of more than 500 ROTC cadets from colleges throughout the country, have begun a challenging nine-week U. S. Army Ranger course here.

The cadets have completed inprocessing, witnessed a Rangers in Action Demonstration and are receiving arms training prior to the actual start of the Ranger Course on Tuesday, June 12.

The Benning phase of their training will be completed July 3 and the cadets will depart for the rugged mountain phase at Dahlonega July 4. The second increment of cadets will begin inprocessing June 29.

Those cadets successfully completing as much as six weeks of the program will meet their summer camp requirement. Cadets who finish the strenuous 63-day course will be awarded the coveted Ranger tab.

The special Ranger school classes for ROTC cadets is a substitute for the summer camp requirement placed on all ROTC cadets who plan to become commisioned officers in the Army and Reserve Components.

Selection of volunteers for the Ranger program is accomplished by the professors of military science at each college, from a limited allocation, according to Maj. William R. Dean, Jr., ROTC Evaculation Group Operations Officer.

The Army pays the transportation cost for the cadets selected for the program. Each cadet also receives a salary equal to one-half that of a second lieutenant while he is attending the course.

The Ranger course the cadets receive is the same as that operated for regular members of the armed forces. There are a few minor changes, such as extra time spent on learning and firing the M-16, but basically, the 1,061 hours of training the cadets receive will be the same, according to Dean.

Explorers get taste of the wild

Seventeen Explorer Scouts from Carver High School in Columbus got a taste of the wild recently when they canoed down the Chattahoochee River to Uchee Landing, 20 miles south of Columbus.

For Capt. Jerome O. Faust, commander of HHC, 1st Bn. (Mech.), 58th Inf. (Patriots), 197th Inf. Bde., who supervised the trip, it was a sort of adventure training. And Lt. Richard Lake, of the same unit, also went along.

Youth Choir to perform

The Guess Road Baptist Church Youth Choir will appear in a program of sacred music at the Infantry Center Chapel on June 24 at 11 a.m.

The choir's program, about an hour in length, will feature sacred musical arrangements from composers Otis Skillings, Jimmy Owens, Ralph Carmichael, John F. Wilson and others.

This group has appeared in a number of churches in North Carolina, Virginia, Maryland, Washington, D. C., and last summer they toured in South Carolina, Georgia and Florida. The choir composed of some sixty members will be under the direction of David R. Pierceall, music and youth minister of the Guess Road Baptist Church.

The Chinese Connection

The Stranger (Clint Eastwood) is a cruel gunfighter, hired by the corrupt citizenery of the Sodom-like frontier gold mining community of Lago, in the southwest of the 1870's. Eastwood is hired to protect the townspeople against three gunmen who will be released from prison. The Stranger drills the cowardly townspeople in the rudiments of combat, turns the town into a place called Hell, and sets a reception for the released criminals. In a climactic confrontation involving a night gun and dynamite battle with the outlaws, the entire town goes up in flames.

High Plains Drifter

Bruce Lee, modern expert in the ancient art of Kung-Fu demonstrates the deadlines of old skills as he seeks to solve the mystery of the untimely death of his beloved mentor. Competition between the ancient schools of Martial Arts has become a serious business and Bruce Lee as Chen Chen has his hands full as he kicks, chops, claws, mauls and slugs his way thru a maze of oriental intrigue and skullduggery. With an amazing display of physical dexterity and stamina he avenges the death of his teacher and preserves the ancient honor of his school. This is a sometimes violent film filled with unbelievable displays of the Kung-Fu arts which are often akin to Judo and Karate and yet more lethal.

. . . and Hope to Die

A band of crooks living outside Montreal is hired for one million dollars to kidnap a mentally retarded girl. Although they know the girl is dead, they carry out the raid on the 18th floor of a skyscraper, hoping to pass off a bogus girl. The gang is a weird set of characters, with Robert Ryan as the leader and Aldo Ray as a fat, moronic muscal-man. Jean-Louis Trintignant, who is pursued by some gypsies because he once accidentally crashed his plane into some gypsy children on the beach, is forced to join in the plan.

Ben

In this exciting sequel to WILLARD, BEN is befriended by Danny (Lee Montgomery), a small boy with a heart condition. Danny's neighbors and the city's exterminators are doing their best to turn the army of rodents away, but they keep on striking in health spas, candy factories and cheese shops. A fiery battle in the sewers of the city is waged between the exterminators, the police and the rats. Audiences are in for startling surprises as Ben and his army face challenges both human and non-human.

Frenzy

A sex killer is loose in London and former RAF pilot, Jon Finch, is accused of a series of murders. Finch is convicted for the murder of his ex-wife and his sweetheart barmaid (Anna Massey). He escapes from jail seeking revenge. Alfred Hitchcock is on target all the way in his most graphic and devastating film in years as he keeps you in a state of FRENZY in this gripping suspense shocker.

VA Pays The Vet

Family Benefits

Widows, widowers, and families of U.S. Army veterans are eligible for a variety of benefits under the Veterans Administration.

Widows, widowers, and dependents can receive Dependency and Indemnity Compensation. Some widows, widowers, and children of servicemen who die of non-service-connected causes can also receive pensions, depending on the period of service, duration of the marriage, size of estate left by the veteran, and income of the widow or widower of the veteran.

Additional amounts of compensation may be payable for minor children. The widow or widower and children of military personnel who are killed in service, or who are disabled, may be eligible for $220 monthly for education beyond the secondary school level.

In some cases, this money may also be available for high school education. Wives, widows and children are also eligible for apprentice and job training.

Payments are based on the rank of the serviceman or woman at the time of his or her death.

Home Loans

The VA will guarantee a home loan for eligible veterans to purchase a home, farm, mobile home or condominium. This benefit may be used while on active duty.

Payments are made from date of separation if a disability claim is filed within one year. The VA will pay compensation for disabilities incurred in or aggravated by military service.

Complete hospital care is provided by the VA to cover the full range of medical services. Drug treatment is also available for veterans in need of help for drug dependence.

Dental treatment is provided for a limit of one year after separation from the service. This time limit does not apply for veterans with dental disabilities resulting from combat wounds or service injuries or to former prisoners of war with Service-connect noncompensable dental conditions.

Low-cost life insurance, up to $10,000, is available for veterans with Service-connected disabilities up to one year from the date of notice of a VA disability rating. Servicemens Group Life Insurance is also available for 120 days or up to one year if totally disabled. It may be converted to an individual policy with a participating insurance company.

Assistance is available in finding employment in private industry, in Federal service and in local government. The Local and State Employment Service, the U.S. Civil Service Commission and any VA office would be helpful in this assistance.

Unemployment compensation and re-employment benefits are some of the other major veteran benefits offered.

Many Changes Since '66

WASHINGTON - The Vietnam-era GI Bill has undergone sweeping changes since it was first passed in 1966, including several hefty raises in allowances.

In educational benefits alone, the single veteran who received $100 monthly when the program began almost seven years ago now is eligible for $220.

Anyone with 181 or more consecutive days on active duty, any of which came after Jan. 31, 1955, is eligible for most veterans benefits.

The service must have been terminated "under conditions other than dishonorable," according to a summary of benefits published by the House Veterans' Affairs Committee.

Home Loans are available to anyone with 181 days of military service. There is no time limit on when a veteran may use his GI loan entitlement.

Some people think VA actually lends money for a home, but that is not the case. It will guarantee a commercial lender that it will pay up to $12,500 or 60 percent of the loan, whichever is less, if the veteran does not pay.

In a few remote areas, VA does actually lend the money — but in most cases it is only a guarantee—not a loan.

The VA, however, does not expect to lose money. Should a veteran default on his loan, the money which VA had to pay becomes a debt of the veteran.

The guarantee may also be used for repairs, alterations or improvements of homes already owned and occupied, or to refinance existing mortgages.

On-the-job training benefits are limited to two years.

Servicemen and veterans also can receive GI Bill aid for flight training. The training, however, must be part of the veteran's vocational goals. Some Army fliers have used this benefit to qualify as fixed-wing pilots.

If flight qualification is part of the generally recognized requirements for a job, VA will pay 90 per cent of the tuition and fees.

The VA also will pay 90 percent of the cost for approved correspondence courses, but soldiers and veterans should check with VA before enrolling in any of these courses to confirm they are approved.

Farm cooperative training is another way for the veteran to take advantage of his educational benefits. This consists of agricultural courses while working in an agricultural job.

There is one catch — you must attend classes and work in agriculture at the same time to get the aid.

People on active duty and certain veterans can take courses toward a high school diploma, or equivalent, and can take remedial or refresher courses, to prepare for entering college. The time will not be counted against their eligibility.

Veterans in college may change their major one time without penalty. A second change may be made without penalty but special approval is necessay, and one final change is authorized for circumstances beyond the student's control.

Veterans in college can get $50 a month for nine months' tutorial aid.

To get the money, the college must certify that tutoring is required, the tutor is qualified and that charges do not exceed normal charges for the same service.

The maximum total for this kind of aid is $400, without charge against the 36-month entitlement.

VA is barred by law from making payments to servicemen whose education is paid for by the armed forces or to federal employees being paid full salary and educational allowances under the Government Employees Training act.

No GI Bill payments may be made to veterans, for example, who desire to attend radio, bartending or personality development classes.

Servicemen and veterans also are eligible for GI home loans.

Veterans with nonservice-connected medical problems may also receive treatment in a VA hospital, if they sign a statement which says they cannot pay for the care any other way. The "pauper's affidavit" doesn't apply to veterans over 65 or those getting VA pension. Care in these cases is on a bed-available basis.

Those people who develop an active psychosis within two years of discharge and within two years of the end of the Vietnam war are considered to have a service-connected problem.

Dental Care on a one-time completion basis is available to veterans with service-connected conditions within one year of separation.

People who develop a drug problem while on active duty also can receive help from VA.

Disabled vets may also receive a grant of up to $2800-plus adaptive equipment, toward the purchase of a specially built car. The money is paid direct to the seller of the car, after VA has authorized the transaction. (Servicemen on active duty may also be eligible for this grant — if the disabling injury took place in the line of duty.)

The VA also runs a big insurance business. People on active duty may be surprised to learn the $2.55 taken out of their check each month for $15,000 worth of Servicemen's Group Life Insurance is VA-connected.

SGLI is run by the VA.

The $15,000 policy may be converted to an individual policy if the soldier makes an application within 120 days of separation. If the serviceman is totally disabled he has one year to convert.

The coverage remains in effect for 120 days in any case.

Any veteran with service since Aug. 4, 1964, may receive up to $250 for burial expenses and an American flag which may be given to a relative or close friend.

This is also available to veterans of certain other periods.

The wife and children of soldiers who are killed or disabled in service may get $220 monthly to help educate themselves beyond the secondary level. In some cases this also may be available for high school education. Wives, widows and children also are eligible for apprentice and job training.

Widows are also eligible for VA dependency and indemnity compensation (DIC). Additional amounts are payable for minor children.

Payments are based on the rank of the serviceman at the time of death.

Employment benefits are also available to the veteran. For instance, they receive special consideration for civil service jobs.

Many states also pay unemployment compensation to returning veterans.

Veterans in the market for a mobile home may get a loan for as much as $10,000 for the mobile home only, and up to $17,500 when purchase of a lot is included. VA guarantees 30 percent of a mobile home loan.

When a mobile home loan has been repaid, a veteran may use his GI loan benefit to buy a conventional home.

Before shopping for a house, however, the VA cautions people to talk to a VA counselor and read a pamphlet called "Determination of Eligibility and Available Loan Guaranty Entitlement."

Disabled Veterans who need a specially adapted house may get a grant from VA for $17,500 or 50 percent of the cost of the house, whichever is less.

People eligible for this cash are limited to:

- Veterans who are legless (or have lost the use of) both legs and cannot move around without the aid of braces, crutches, canes or a wheelchair.
- Veterans who are blind and have lost the use of one leg.
- Veterans who have lost (or cannot use) one leg and have an organic disease or injury and need a wheelchair.

Disabled veterans also may buy low-cost, decreasing term, mortgage protection life insurance.

VA also pays compensation to disabled veterans. Monthly amounts range between $28 and $1222 — with additional payments for dependents if the disability is 50 percent or more.

Veterans who develop a tropic or other chronic disease to a degree of at least 10 percent disability within one year of discharge are considered to have a service-connected disability.

People who have been on active duty for at least 90 days who become totally disabled — not as a result of service — may also draw a pension.

These payments vary between $28 and $260 monthly, depending on income, number of dependents and requirement for regular aid.

The VA administers hospitals that provide outpatient care for all service-connected medical conditions.

For information about any of these programs call or write any VA office, any veterans group, or the Red Cross.

Educational Benefits

Most veterans use their educational benefits by returning to college. Almost 300,000 people have taken advantage of this program since 1966.

The amount of money a veteran can receive varies in individual circumstances. The basic figure is $220 per month or the cost of the course, whichever is less. A full or partial work load also determines the amount of the entitlement.

Each eligible person may select one program of education, an apprenticeship, on-the-job, farm or flight training. It must be at any approved educational institution or training establishment which will accept and retain him as a student, apprentice or trainee in any field he is qualified to undertake.

Educational institutions within and outside of the United States are available. Farm cooperative training, flight training, high school training and the predischarge education program (PREP) are some other areas available to veterans.

Mr. Lester O'Riley of the Education Center suggests that all individuals see an educational counselor for their individual educational needs. Educational and vocational counseling will also be provided by the Veterans Administration upon request.

Burial Benefits

When a U.S. Army veteran dies, he is entitled to a number of benefits under the Veterans Administration.

The VA pays $250 towards his burial expenses, if he was discharged under conditions other than dishonorable. He must also have been a veteran of World War II, the Korean Conflict or Vietnam, or receiving service-connected compensation.

Veterans may also be buried in national cemeteries if grave space is available. A headstone or grave marker can be supplied if the veteran's survivors make application for one.

For deceased veterans who served either during wartime, after June 26, 1950, or who served at least one peacetime enlistment unless released for disability, an American flag may be issued to drape the casket.

The family of a veteran who is missing in action and later presumed dead may also receive an American flag. The flag is usually given to the next of kin or a close friend of the deceased veteran after the funeral service.

When a veteran dies, his widow or next of kin or Martin Army Hospital usually notifies the Survivor Assistance Office at Fort Benning. They immediately appoint a survivor assistance officer, who contacts the widow or next of kin of the deceased.

The survivor assistance officer informs the widow of all the benefits she is entitled to, and helps her take care of service-connected matters such as Social Security and Veterans Administration benefits.

If a funeral with military honors is desired, the Survivor Assistance Office makes arrangements for military personnel to serve as bearers. The survivor assistance officer is there to help the widow and family of the deceased take care of all matters pertaining to the military.

Chargin' Charlie Co. trips down Upatoi

On Saturday morning, May 19th, seven members of Chargin' Charlie Company, 43rd Engineer Battalion (Construction) set out from the company area under the leadership of their Company Commander, Capt. Joe M. Dietzel, to try their skills at canoe handling on the Upatoi Creek.

The seven men, Sp4 Schwalback, Sp2 Robert Thomas, PFC Larry Holt, PV2 Ronald Fahrenkoph, PV2 Philip Hubis, PV2 Henry Hudson, and PV2 Donald Schertz, were the volunteers charged with being the advanced party for planned future canoe trips on a large scale.

Using canoes supplied by Fort Benning Special Services, the party put into the creek near the USAIC recreation center about 9:30 that Saturday morning. Some four hours later and ten miles downstream, the crew put out near the bridge at Sante Fe Road.

Two members of Co. C, 43rd Eng. Bn. paddle their way down creek.

Five consecutive awards, matter of pride

For SFC Howard Garrett, dining facility steward for Co. C, 3rd Bn., 7th Inf. (Cottonbalers), 197th Inf. Bde., winning five consecutive post level awards for food excellence is just a matter if simple pride.

"Pride in their work is all it is," Garrett claimed. "If something is worth doing at all, it is worth doing right. That is the way we all feel."

His dining facility has won the Fort Benning "Best Dining Facility" award for units serving 200 people or less, a total of five times. That gives him a perfect record since the award was established on a monthly basis in January. He has also captured the competitive 30th Inf. Bde. award for the last four quarters in succession.

"From the privates who eat here all the way up the brigade commander," Garrett explained, "everyone contributes to an award like this."

However, Garrett had some special praise for the dozen cooks who put in long hours at the Co. C dining facility. He admitted that they are not really different from any other cooks, but said they take a lot of pride in everything they do. It was to this simple pride that Garrett attributed the success.

Garrett has been in the Army for 19 years and is serving his third tour with the 197th Inf. Bde. Originally from Murphy, N. C., Garrett calls the 197th his second home. He recently reenlisted for his present duty assignment.

An Army paid education

Specialist Four Michael J. Robishire of the Race Relations Coordinating Group has been approved for a two year degree completion program at the Army's expense.

Sp4 Robishire is a social worker in charge of research and development in the education and training department of RRCG. He will be assigned to the Third Army Student Detachment and will attend Florida State University in Tallahassee, Fla. to get his master's degree. Robishire will reenlist for six years in order to attend the program.

Battle of the Bands

An invitation is extended to all musical groups in the Fort Benning, Columbus, and Phenix City areas, interested in participating in the Battle of the Bands Contest to be held during the Independence Day Carnival, July 4, 5 p.m. - 7 p.m., in Marshall Auditorium, Infantry Hall, Fort Benning, Ga.

Cash prizes will be given to the top three bands selected for best all around performance. The first place winner will receive $200, second place receives $100, and third place $50.

Each band will be given a time limit of twelve minutes to perform on stage and will be judged on technical excellence, showmanship, originality, and selection of material.

All bands participating in the Battle of the Bands should have their entry blanks turned in no later than June 26. Registration forms are available at all Special Services facilities on post or at selected areas, including music stores, in Columbus and Phenix City. Additional information may be obtained by calling the Music Center, Special Services, 545-1970.

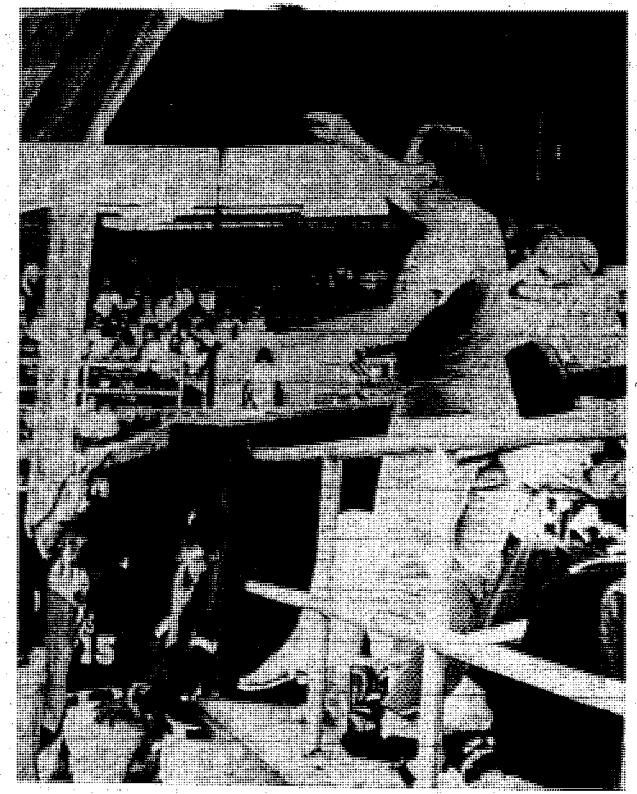
931st Night at Golden Park

A team made up of officers and NCO's from the 931st Engr. Gp. (CBT), defeated the Preston Raiders from the Civil Affairs Section of the Columbus Chamber of Commerce. In four innings, the Engineers came out on top, with a score of 9-3. The event was billed as a double-header, with the Astros playing a regular league game after the exhibition game.



Pitching for the Engineers was Col. James M. Thompson, Commander of the 931st. PFC Thomas Harvey of HHC, 931st made one of the three home-runs hit, and PVT Kennan Meeks of the 988th MP's made the other two, one with all bases loaded.

Both teams provided bat-girls for the game. Serving as bat-girls for the Engineers were Barbara Tiggs, Carol Craft, and Debbie Roberts, daughter of Master Sgt. Leonard Roberts, Group S-4 Section.

LTC Herman Betke, 67th Maintance Battalion Commander, announced the game.

Also on hand was the 931st Unit of Choice "Recruiting Van". The van has toured all over Georgia and parts of Alabama and Florida as part of the 931st's recruiting program.

931st Engineer Group Night was topped off as Col. Thompson threw in the game ball to start the Astros' game, and settled back into his seat to enjoy the ball game, this time as a spectator. Story by Gary Cathcart.

"Not too hard sir, the outfielders aren't ready yet." Fresh from the preceeding game, Colonel James M. Thompson, throws out the game ball to the Astro game, and then sits back to rest for the remainder of the evening.

NEED A BAT? Three important reasons why the 931st defeated the Preston Raiders. (left to right) Miss Debbie Roberts, Miss Carol Craft, and Miss Barbara Tiggs were the bat-girls for the Engineers. The 931st Engineers were the favorites from the outset. With these lovely girls on their team, who could go wrong?

NCO recalls fighting light-heavyweight

Sp4 Robert Evans, HHC, 197th Inf. Bde. makes a rapid throw to first. The talented shortstop leads his team with a perfect fielding average. HHC is the defending champion in the Kelley Hill softball league, but lost two games early in the season and are now in fourth place. (Photo by Bob Thomas)

"Foster was fast and deceptivt, and could punch hard with both hands. He probably hit me harder than anyone else ever has.". Bob Foster is now Boxing's light-heavyweight champion of the world. SSG Melvin E. Lonas, The School Brigade's Athletics and Recreation NCO recalls his fight against a man many consider to be the greatest light-heavyweight of all time.

"I lost on a split decision," said SSG Lonas. "He broke two nerves in my jaw which had to be removed." It was the toughest fight I was ever in."

SSg Lonas was no beginner when he met Foster in the Southern AAU championships in 1962 at Jacksonville, Fla. He had aleady won seven major championships since 1959, including the light-heavyweight championship of Fort Benning, the Third Army light heavyweight championship, the Southern AAU championship, and the Southern Golden Gloves championship. SSG Lonas fought his last fight in 1967, at the age of 28. His career record was 107 wins and 7 losses.

An accident made necessary the insertion of a steel pin into his wrist, ending his career. What he has now are a lot of trophies, and some fine memories.

"One time in 1963 I was at home in Toledo Ohio when they were holding the AAU Nationals. I almost entered as a light-heavyweight, but didn't. If I had I might have gotten a chance to fight Cassius Clay" (now Muhammad Ali).

SSg Lonas nearly turned professional in 1962 but reenlisted and went to Panama. "I wanted the security the Army offered, and who knows how long I would have been able to box." He was the Panama Armed Forces Champion in 1962 and 1963.

In 1967 while stationed in Alaska, he won his last championship. Fighting heavyweight he battled his way to the Alaskan Army Command championship, and was also crowned the Alaska state Golden Gloves champion.

VA pays veterans

Although G. I. Bill education benefits for thousands of Vietnam Era veterans will expire May 31, 1974, the Veterans Administration emphasized today the May 1974 expiration date does not affect G. I. Bill job or farm cooperative training, apprenticeship or flight training benefits for these veterans.

This clarification was made by Administrator of Veterans Affairs Donald E. Johnson. He pointed out that most education benefits for those discharged prior to June 1, 1966, would expire on May 31, 1974, the eighth anniversary of the current G. I. Bill.

The 1966 law allows each veteran eight years to complete his training. The time is computed from the individual's date of discharge or from the date of the law, whichever is later.

Johnson explained that the original bill did not include flight, apprenticeship, on-the-job and farm-cooperative training, so eligibility for these benefits will not expire for Post Korean veterans until August 30, 1975, which is eight years after the date they were authorized by law.

The Administrator noted that 1.4 million, or 33 per cent, of 4.1 million veterans made eligible by the 1966 law have used all or part of their education benefits.

The current G. I. Bill provided eligibility to all veterans discharged since January 31, 1966, many of whom had been out of service several years before they became eligible, the VA chief pointed out.

The overall participation rate for Vietnam Era veterans is about 46 per cent.

Veterans whose benefits may soon expire, or any eligible veteran interested in G. I. Bill benefits, are urged to contact any VA office or representatives of local veterans service organizations.

Dinner at the Chapel

YOU'RE RIGHT, HE DOES HAVE CRUTCHES IN THE PICTURES WE HAVE FOR HIM LAST WEEK.

On June 24, the Sand Hill Chapel No. 5 will sponsor a "Dinner On Grounds." It will be for the church congregation and their friends.

The meal will be provided by families living off and on post who attend the Chapel services. Each family is urged to bring an additional meal for one of the single soldiers who attend the services alone.

The Regular Chapel Program will begin at 11:00 a.m. and will end at 11:15. Chaplain Burnett stated "the purpose of the dinner is to encourage a back-at home-type atmosphere with the community."

BY BILL KLOEB

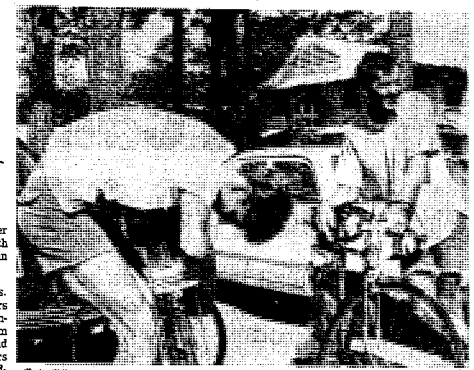
You read a lot about fishing for trout, salt water big game fish and other glamor type fish but the truth is there are more blue gill or sun fish fishermen than all the others combined.

The sunfish family of fish covers a lot of varieties. The bass we find in local waters are actually members of the sunfish family but most people associate the sunfish with the smaller variety of fish. Crappie, bream and shellcracker found in southern ponds, lakes and streams are most commonly known as sunfish. Others in this family of fish are known as green fish, redbreasts and pumpkinseeds. These last are actually considered a part of the bream group of fish.

All of these species are plentiful in Georgia waters and provide great sport as well as a fine meal. They aren't as set in their feeding habits as some of the other fish unless you want to consider a willingness to eat or strike a bait at any time a habit.

These fish not only make themselves available at all times of the day or night they also provide a good fight on light tackle.

Bream are distinguished by the dark bars running vertically along their sides. The shellcracker is a lighter fish, light green in color and has an orange or reddish border on the trailing edges of the gills with a round reddish spot at the top of the gill. The shellcracker gets a bit bigger than the bream and those who really fish hard for him claim he will put up a harder fight before coming out of the water.



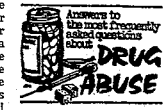
The shellcracker eats things that inhabit the bottoms of ponds, lakes or streams. He has a set of teeth that were designed to crack open snails and other crustaceans. While these make up his primary diet he seems to prefer other fare on a fishing hook. Worms are considered to be the best bait for this fish. Those who claim to know say you can't beat a red wiggler fished on the bottom. Most fishermen prefer a No. 6 or 8 short shank hook with a single shot fastened about a foot above the hook. They use a slip-cork to let the weight take the bait all of the way to the bottom. The slip-cork rigged in this manner still sends the message to the fisherman when a fish begins to mess with his bait. This rig plus a cane pole or other type pole is all you need to get into business. Nothing elaborate or costly but a sure combination for a lot of fun.

Most of the ponds on post have been stocked with bass, catfish and bream. Where bream have been stocked they were usually in a combination with the shellcracker. Usually the stocking consisted of 20 shellcracker for each 80 bream. This makes for good propagation and also makes better use of the food provided by the water because the feeding habits of the two fish are different.

The shellcracker goes on the spawning bed earlier than the bream or the bass. This gives him an edge on the small bass. He is usually too large for a meal for them. But even with this edge the shellcracker has trouble maintaining his numbers. Poor reproduction or hybridization with other members of the sunfish family take a heavy toll. Fishermen need not get disheartened about this. Mother nature is probably just doing her thing to keep the pond or stream fish population in balance.

Fishing for blue gill doesn't provide all the thrills of deep sea fishing but a lot depends on who is doing the fishing. A grown up can use the sport as a way to just cop-out and do some serious thinking or just goof-off. For a youngster it can be one of the most memorable days of his life.

It doesn't seem to make any difference whether any fish are caught. If he does catch one you will hear about it for days with the fish getting bigger with each telling of the story. You will probably enjoy the day too even if you aren't an avid fisherman. Give it a try this weekend. You can get your license, post permit and bait at the Rod and Gun Club. The whole thing won't cost any more than a dinner at a restaurant.



Sgt. John Thompson, Combat Support Co., 1st Bn. (Mech), 58th Inf. (Patriots), 197th Inf. Bde., secured his tool kit as he and Spc Ken Hofer, of the same unit, prepared for a 100-mile bicycle trip recently. The pair peddled to Eufaula, Ala., "for the fun of it." Both California natives, they have been riding for distance about two years and made the trip in less than 12 hours. (Photo by Lester Yamaguchi)...

Cottonbaler bikes in marathon

Sgt. John A. Miller Jr., the training NCO of Co. A, 3rd Bn., 7th Inf., (Cottonbalers), 197th Inf. Bde. recently entered the Columbus Bicycle Marathon sponsored by the Columbus Jayeees.

Miller, of Thomasville, Ga., completed 74 miles in the event before being sidelined just past the five-hour mark by mechanical problems. The 30-year-old Miller did manage to complete more than 50 miles in the first four hours of the event and received a patch for his effort.

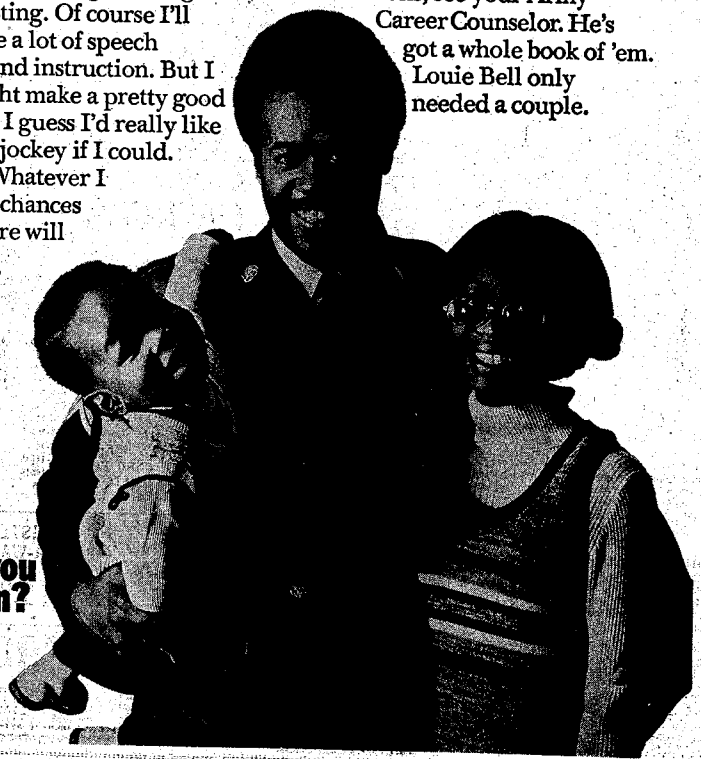
"When I came in I didn't have anything."



Sergeant Louie Bell just reenlisted for the first time. And he had some pretty good reasons.

"Look what I've got now. A steady income, a good job and a family. It's a lot more responsibility.

"I was studying business administration when I came in, but I think I'm going to change to broadcasting. Of course I'll have to take a lot of speech schooling and instruction. But I think I might make a pretty good announcer. I guess I'd really like to be a disc jockey if I could.

"Whatever I decide, my chances for the future will definitely be better now that I've decided to stay in the Army for a while. I'll be getting more education for when I get out. And Martha and Darrell will have a lot more security."

The education. The bonus. The security. Louie Bell found some pretty good reasons for reenlisting. If you're looking for reasons, see your Army Career Counselor. He's got a whole book of 'em. Louie Bell only needed a couple.

Father-son, Father-daughter golf tournament

The 10th Annual Father-Son and Father-Daughter Golf Tournament will be held Father's Day (June 17) at the Fort Benning Country Club.

There will be a shot gun start with three age group categories, 10 - 12, years old, 13-15 years and 16-18 years of age competing in the Tournament. A 9 a.m. briefing will inform golfers of rules and starting points. Scoring will be announced after tee off.

At the conclusion of the tournament chicken, pizza with refreshments will be served. A color movie of the 1972 Masters Golf Tournament will also be shown.

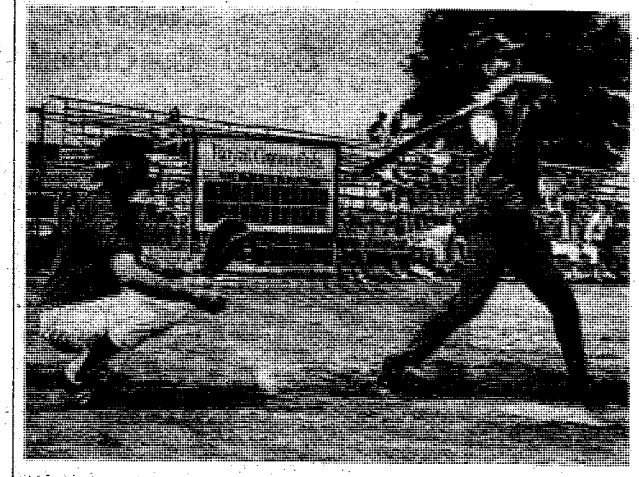
Any child who wishes to play but does not have a father present can pick one of his or her choice, or can have one assigned at registration. All players must be signed up by July 16.

Trophies will be given for the top two players in each age category along with a special trophy to the top girl.

For further information contact the Country Club pro shop at 545-4120.

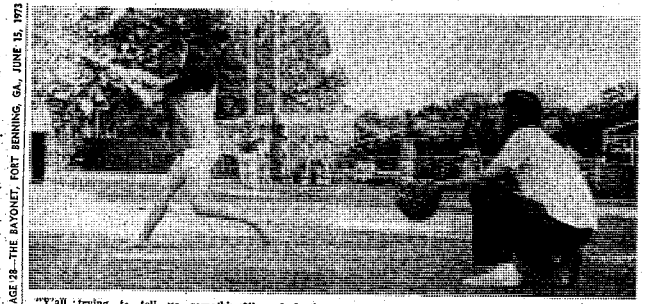
Top Army rackets at Southeastern

Two top seeded Army tennis players are playing in the Southeastern Invitational Tennis Tournament held at the Columbus Country Club through this weekend.



Larry Turville and Georges Amaya who are favored to win the All-Army tournament next month come from the Washington D. C. area to compete with top players from eight foreign countries as well as top seeded American players.

Players from Switzerland, Chile, Brazil, New Zealand, Hungary, England, Columbia and Canada have been entered in the tournament.



Matches begin at 4, 5:40 and 7 p.m. on Thursday, Friday and Saturday. Matches on Sunday will start at 2, 3, and 4 p.m.

General admission is $2. Admission for military personnel is $1. Today wives or dates of military personnel will be admitted free. Individuals from foreign countries represented by contestants will also be admitted free.

Military personnel need not be in uniform. Identification is sufficient for admittance.

Sgt. 1st. Albert Sipes gets ready to connect.

"Y'all trying to tell us something?", asked the pitcher of the Columbus Team as Debbie Roberts (one of 93ist's bat-girls) steps up to bat and hits a single. The game was an easy one for the Engineers that night.

Benning Judo Club dominates local meet

Fort Benning Judo Club members dominated a judo tournament at Fort Benning Saturday which attracted 19 clubs from Georgia, Alabama, Tennessee, Florida, Mississippi and Louisiana.

Post entries took 19 first places, 11 seconds and 10 thirds with 15-year-old Mark Keaton picking up a first in his own division — the 15-year-old lightweight class — and then stepping up to the men's 139-pound division and finishing third.

Also competing yesterday was the U. S. Military Academy team which was visiting the post and joined the Fort Benning team.

There were 26 classes of competition.

Fort Benning entries taking firsts, seconds and thirds were as follows:

First Place Winners

Eric Boeheilen, 6 lightweight; Bryan Boeheilen, 8 lightweight; Terry Jones, 8, heavyweight; Ferris Williams, 9 heavyweight; Gregory Kirby, 12 heavyweight; Perry Cabalero, 14, lightweight; Cadet Steve Stevenson, 139-pound man; Lt. John Healy, 154-pound men; PFC David Reeves, 176-pound men; David Jones, open heavyweight; Mary Ann Salaman, lightweight girls; Marsie Putman, lightweight women.

Second Place Winners

Jerry Trew, 8, lightweight; Jerry Jones, 8, heavyweight; Joe Valenzuela, 10, heavyweight; Rose Hasapport, 10, heavyweight; Perry Caballero, 14, lightweight; Cadet Steve Stevenson, 139-pound man; Lt. John Healy, 154-pound men; PFC David Reeves, 176-pound men; David Jones, open heavyweight; Mary Ann Salaman, lightweight girls; Marsie Putman, lightweight women.

Third Place Winners

Darrin Tucker, 6, lightweight; Scott Kirby, 8, heavyweight; Terry Lind, 8, lightweight; Ronnie Wesley, 14, lightweight; Vince Caballero, 15, lightweight; Jesse Chewning, 15, heavyweight; Mark Keaton, 139 men; Cadet Doug Patrick, 20-Pound men; PFC Arellous Mayo, open heavyweight; Barbara Jones, middleweight girls; Tussie Pierce, heavyweight women, and Kathryn Maxey, lightweight women.

Draggin around

Wednesday night at Phenix Dragway surfaced a new name in the winner's circle. Dana Eiland, normally a roundy-round racer, drove his Plymouth to the victory circle at his first time ever running on the drag strip.

Dana had to first defeat previous winner Jimmy Parker in the semifinals and then another prior winner SSgt. Tom Cain. It was very close — the difference at the finish line was only 1-100th of a second.

For one dollar the "ET" winner can now win fifty dollars. As soon as the entrants build up in number the prize will be built up to one hundred dollars.

Phenix Dragway brings out the Super Stocks and Modified on Saturday night with the "ET" cars.

Bob Dennis in "Banana II," a SS-PA beat out Roger Popham in a SS-O to take home winner's money. Then Roger won second round money by defeating SFC Donald Matheson in the "Gold Miner," a SS-OA.

Sgt. Reuben Cash, on leave from Panama lost out to Robert Newsome in the semifinals. But SFC John Stringer, 3rd Ranger Co., eliminated Newsome's Chevy Biscayne. Then Stringer's '57 Ford Pickup red-lighted in the finals which gave the victory and the "Et" money to R. D. Dempsey of Columbus in a '65 Chevy wagon.

Handicap Golf tourney

Lt. Col. James Volkman defeated SFC Ozzie Melendez 7-6 in the 18 hole finals. Volkman took the handicap championship during the 1973 Officers Open Mess Spring Handicap Tournament held at the Fort Benning Country Club.

Flight winners in the Handicap tournament were SFC Ozzie Melendez, first flight; Lt. Col. James Volkman, second flight; Maj. Patrick Cannan, third flight; Maj. Robert Thomas, fourth flight; Capt. Anderson, fifth flight; Cpt. Dough Main, sixth flight; and Lt. Col. (Ret.) Ronald Cannemela, seventh flight.

To advance into the finals Volkman had to defeat Thomas in a semifinals match while Melendez defeated Anderson and Cannan.

Sand Hill Tourney

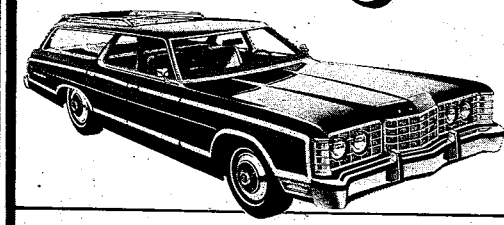
Sand Hill Golf course is hosting the 1973 4th of July Golf Tournament June 30 through July 1.

The tournament will be a 36 hole, 2 man lo-ball tournament with individuals selecting their own partners. At the end of the first 18 holes teams will be divided into flights according to scores.

Entries must be submitted no later than 4 p.m. June 29 at the Sand Hill Pro shop.

Awards will be presented to all flight winners.

For further information contact the Sand Hill Golf course pro shop at 544-4131.



Timers needed for Olympics

A large number of volunteers are needed to act as timers for the Junior Olympic Swim Meet June 22. Anyone interested in volunteering for this amateur athletic union-sanctioned meet should report to Sgt. Maj. Jubal Rodriguez at Carey Pool on Thursday, June 21, between 4 and 5 p.m. or call the Information Office at 545-3512 for further details.

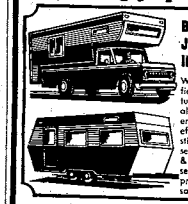
Trial camps set up for selection of Army softball teams

The Department of the Army will conduct trial camps to select outstanding softball players for the Army teams (fast and slow pitch) to compete in the 1973 Interservice Tournaments.

Fort Benning will host the trial camps for fast pitch competition 6-24 August and to 1973 Interservice tournament 27-31 August.

The DA slow pitch trial camp will be hosted by Fort Carson, Col., 30 July-7 August 1973.



Softball players participating in the USAIC intramural program who have the potential to represent the US Army in Interservice and National championships are encouraged to submit applications through their major unit athletic and recreation officers to the sports branch of Special Services, USAIC, Building No. 833, not later than June 22, 1973.

For further information contact the sports office at 545-1516.

Post hosting Junior Olympic swim meet

SWIMMERS GET YOUR FINS IN SHAPE. Fort Benning is hosting the 1973 Junior Olympic Long Course Swimming Championship June 22-23 at Carey outdoor swimming pool.

This championship meet will provide competition for approximately 300 swimmers at a state level and also prepare them for the regional and national competition in the Junior Olympic Program. First through sixth place finishers will qualify to go on to the regionals at Decatur, Ala. Winners from that meet will go on to the National Meet held this year in Ann Arbor, Mich.

Participants in the standard Junior Olympics Division of Midgets (10 years and under), Junior (11 and 12 years) and Senior (13-17 years), will compete in this Georgia Association of Amateur Athletics sanctioned meet. Competition is open to all registered AAU members throughout Georgia.

Officials and timers are urgently needed. For further information contact special services at 545-1902.

SUPPLEMENT TO THE BAYONET

Q: What do these two men have in common?

Tony Y. Ex-marine-rifleman. Now running his own repair shop in Atlanta, Georgia.

Alvin B. Ex-engineman. Now a communication specialist in the U.S. Navy.

A: Two years ago, while in service, each of them answered an ad like this.

You'd have to go far to find two men more unlike than Tony Y. and Alvin B. Alvin is short and on the heavy side. Tony is tall and lean. Tony likes his music soft. Alvin digs soul and acid rock. Tony couldn't wait to get out of the service. Alvin is a thirty-year man.

But they agreed on one thing, wearing a uniform is no reason for standing still. It's one of the best times for a man to learn a challenging new career — whether he wants to move on to a high-paying job in civilian life — or to move up in the service. And both of them turned to ICS for help.

Tony's bag was cars and motorcycles — and a dream of owning his own business. So he asked ICS to teach him Automotive Mechanics.

Alvin was into electronics, hi-fi and stereo — so he took ICS training in Electronic Communication.

Uncle Sam pitched in, with GI benefits. Now each of them is doing the thing he likes to do most. One in civilian life. The other in the service.

Tony and Alvin are examples — hypothetical composites of the many thousands of real-life servicemen (and women) who are using today's ICS to help them do what they want to do. They're not waiting for opportunity to happen. They're making it happen. And so can you.

Just mail in the card below — and we'll tell you how!

When you drive

Watch out for the other guy

Nonpreventable auto accidents occur all the time, usually due to the carelessness of one or more persons involved.

For example, suppose a man in a parked car opens his door and bangs the side of your car while you are driving down a narrow street. This type of accident is one which is very hard to say could have been avoided. But is it really a nonpreventable accident, and who is to blame?

A lot of drivers get busy watching traffic in front of them, to their rear, and in the oncoming lane. (That's fine. They should be keeping an eye on these spots.) But they neglect to scan those vehicles parked in the curb lane.

Every vehicle, moving or not, is potential trouble. Any one of these parked cars may suddenly pull right out into your path. Any door may swing out, followed by somebody who hasn't bothered to look.

You can see it's not enough just to watch the moving traffic. As your eyes constantly shift, looking ahead, behind, to the left, they must regularly glance right to scan for possible hazards developing.

What do you look for? What are the tipoffs that clue you to be especially cautious?

Look for people. Look for somebody in the driver's seat. He may be getting ready to pull out or get out of his vehicle himself, right in your path. Even a person in the back seat can be dangerous. If it's a four door car he may open the rear street side door right out into traffic.

Scan right down the line for front wheels that are turned out. This may indicate a vehicle is about ready to edge out.

ROTC students begin Ranger class

For the third year in a row selected ROTC students from throughout the United States and Puerto Rico are attending the U.S. Army Ranger School at Fort Benning.

This year 550 cadets will attend two cycles of Ranger Training. The first cycle began on 9 June with an initial enrollment of 276 cadets from 139 different schools, including 36 cadets from West Point. The second cycle will begin on 29 June and will include only ROTC students.

The popularity and success of the ROTC Ranger Course during the first two years of the program have dictated the need to expand the course from one to two cycles and from 230 to 275 cadets per class. The Director of the Ranger Department, Colonel David E. Grange Jr., noted in his initial address to the cadets that "The entire Ranger Department looks forward to the two summer classes with the ROTC Cadets. We have found that the ROTC Ranger graduates have returned to their colleges and universities to become the Corps Commanders, Ranger unit leaders, and major staff officers."

"As Ranger school volunteers you have demonstrated a willingness to accept the challenge of the most difficult training the U.S. Army has to offer. Whether you plan on entering the Army for 90 days active duty for training or 30 years of career service, the physical and mental challenge you have met and overcome in Ranger school will prove to be an invaluable experience throughout the rest of your life, an experience of which you can be justly proud. When you have the Ranger Tab pinned on your uniform at the end of nine weeks arduous training you will then join the elite ranks of 25,000 other Ranger qualified officers and enlisted men who have successfully completed this course since 1951."

The ROTC Ranger classes will undergo the same training as a regular Ranger class, although 5 days have been added to the course to accomodate normal ROTC summer camp requirements not conducted in Ranger training. The first increment of cadets recently completed 30 hours of marksmanship training and are now beginning the Ranger Course.

Although motivation for attending the course varies, most students queried stated they volunteered for the course because they heard it was the most difficult and demanding course in the Army. As one cadet, Pete Famos, from Texas Christian University observed "ever since I received a brochure on the TCU Ranger unit and the U.S. Army Ranger school before starting my freshman year, I've wanted to attend the Ranger Course. It looked like a real challenge and so far I have not been disappointed. The Ranger Cadre are true professionals and I know the training I receive here is the best I can get."

Counselorettes

Four Counselors await the arrival of the Summer Youth Resident Encampment. The two-month encampment will provide disadvantaged Columbus children with the opportunity to attend summer camp. The Columbus Recreation Department will provide a group of 50 boys and 25 girls each week. (Photo by S. Serra)

Patriots spend 6 days in the field

Although they were drenched by daily rain showers and worked from dawn to dusk, 240 men from the 1st Bn. (Mech.), 58th Inf. (Patriots), 197th Inf. Bde. supported the West Point cadets, recent visitors to Fort Benning, in a mechanized infantry problem.

The Patriots, mostly from Co. A and the Combat Support Co., performed various mechanized assaults and maneuvers over a six day period, living out of hammocks, sleeping bags, shelter halves and ponchos. More than 85 vehicles were involved in the operation which was under the leadership of Capt. Larry Pogue, Co. A's commander.

"I have nothing but praise for the men," Pogue emphasized. "Under these conditions their performance could be considered nothing but excellent."

Periodic rain showers soaked the 1st-58th soldiers but it failed to dampen their spirit. The vast majority of the men seemed to enjoy the outing, which began on a Monday morning and did not end until Saturday afternoon. There was little free time, but when the opportunity arose, many of the soldiers spent time improvising to make living in the field a bit easier.

The food was prepared at the bovouac site by personnel from the Co. A, 1st-58th dining facility. The men who ate it consistently said it was the best they had had in the Army.

Midway through the week, barber James Lewis of the Harmony Church barber shop traveled to the area to give haircuts. Many of the men, including Capt. Pogue, took advantage of the opportunity to get their hair trimmed in the field.

Post Exchange barber James Lewis, from the Harmony Church barber shop traveled to the northern perimeter of Fort Benning last week to give haircuts to men of the 1st Bn. (Mech), 58th Inf. (Patriots), 197th Inf. Bde. Among those who took advantage of this rare opportunity to get a trim in the field was PFC Joseph M. Cerce, Co. A, 1st Bn. (Mech), 58th Inf. (Patriots). Kids

Benning hosts Resident Encampment

Lt. Col. Edward B. Bendit welcomed the Summer Youth Resident Encampment for their two month project, at Bldg. 4471, South Harmony Church, at 9:45 a.m. on Monday, June 18.

The encampment will provide disadvantaged Columbus children, ages 9-13, with the opportunity to attend summer camp. The Columbus Recreation Department is selecting the eligible camp participants and will provide a group of 50 boys and 25 girls each week.

The objectives of the encampment are to use the resources at Fort Benning for recreation and learning experience. The program will include daily swimming periods, competitive games, camp fires, an Awards Day and other activities. The youth will also see various phases of military training here each week.

Fort Benning will provide billets, rations, transportation, recreational facilities and equipment, emergency medical service, telephone service and fire protection. It will serve as a support of Fort Benning's Domestic Action Program.

The Columbus Youth Organization will be responsible for the funding, planning, organization and supervision of the encampment.

Medics go diving

34th Medical Battalion has taken to the water in adventure training. In the last few months fifteen personnel from the battalion have undergone 15 hours of instruction in scuba diving. The students received 7 hours of classroom instruction and 8 hours in a swimming pool.

The scuba diving course is designed to develop interest in water sports and qualifies the student to meet Army standards of scuba diving. Although a civilian certification is not issued, a student should be qualified once tested. The instructors for the scuba diving course at Fort Benning are NCO's of the 588th Engineer Company. Both instructors, Sgt. McKay and Sgt. Roper, are qualified Army salvage divers and both have civilian certification.

The students from the 34th Medical Battalion will complete their final dive, which will be held in open water, at the end of June in Troy Springs, Brandford, Florida.

Telephone inquiry system

A new telephone inquiry system will be initiated July 1, on a one month trial basis, with infantry branch, officer personnel division, military personnel center.

The system, called code-a-phone will permit infantry officers to call Infantry branch at any hour of the day, including weekends, and leave a message or query pertaining to assignments, professional development, or other career type personnel action.

Queries will be researched promptly and a complete answer will be dispatched by telephone or letter within seven working days or sooner depending on the urgency of the query.

Telephone numbers of the inquiry system are: commercial lines, area code 202, 325-8111 - 8124 — Autovon 221 - 8111 - 8124. Emergency actions only should be called directly to branch officers during this trial period.

Those calling should be prepared to speak clearly and slowly, giving their name, spelling last name phonetically, SSAN, mailing address and telephone number to include Autovon perfix or area code for commercial line numbers, and the questions, brief and concise.

Further information concerning the system will be published in infantry branch newsletter and also in other commercial media.

What type of adventure training would you like your unit to participate in?

E-6 LEROY BETHUNE
1-58 Combat support

I would enjoy just getting outdoors, camping and fishing. I work in communications and seldom receive the chance to go camping or wet a line.

MARTIN PACE
A Co. 3-7 Inf.

Floating down the river just fishing and camping would be my idea of a relaxing adventure training expedition. It would give the people in the unit a chance to meet each other in an enjoyable atmosphere.

E 2 GARY MILLARD
3-7 Infantry

I enjoy mountain climbing and any type of water sports, especially scuba diving. Any type of activities out of the office would be a change, just go out to have a good time.

E-2 CARL VASQUEZ
Co. B HQD

We're having a boat race next month that I will assist in setting up. I'm from Puerto Rico and the beach is close to us so my favorite sport is swimming. I would like to see my unit participate in the swim for fun.

PFC TOMMY YARBROUGH
Head Bn. 2-10 197th Infantry

I would like staying in the field for about four days, just to be able to fire my weapon and enjoy the outdoors. I rarely have the chance to fire my weapon to keep proficiency at an acceptable level.

E-6 DAMON CAMPBELL
608th Ordance Co.

Going down the Chattahoochee River for about three days would be fun and enjoyable. I like to fish but the big thing would be giving the unit personel a chance to get to know each other and work together as a team.

'It'll make a man out of you'

By Dave McQueen

Approximately 2,000 years ago, a scene like this was probably taking place between a father and son. "Join the Legions, Eronious, it'll make a man out of you." A conversation like this can be heard down through the ages.

The term "It'll make a man out of you," has been been picked up by the military for advertising and recruiting purposes. Eronious and all trainees have heard; in one form or another, from their centurion to their drill sergeant, the comment, "We will make a man of you, or you'll die trying."

The whole idea is the attaining of manhood. What is manhood and how does a person attain it?

Many American Indian tribes had tests for a boy to pass before he could be called a brave. Many cultures have had rites of passage for a boy to prove himself and pass from boyhood to manhood.

Now, of course, mankind is too sophisticated to use physical tests as a proof of manhood. All a child has to do is wait around until he has reached a certain age, and those about him will proclaim him a man by law.

But, what about the individual? Does he accept his attainment of manhood by age? Many people do accept it, but there are many who do not. There are always stories in the papers of someone who has climbed a mountain, swum a river or driven a race car; these are all ways in which a person is trying to prove something to himself or to others.

The ways a person proves himself are as varied as are people. A man's goals can be as extreme as climbing a mountain to the seemingly simple goal of finding a satisfying job and doing well at it.

The Army provides many different ways in which a person who would like to prove himself to himself or to others may do so. The many ways available may all be labeled, broadly, under Adventure Training, although all of the training relates directly or indirectly to the performance of each individual's mission.

Sp5 E. Linton Gross III, the entertainment specialist at the Fort Benning Playhouse, had done little in theatre except act prior to his joining the Army. He spent two years in the Infantry before he was able to become part of Special Services. He feels that he has gotten "fantastic experience" that he probably wouldn't have gotten outside of the Army. I had proved to myself that I could do

National AUSA Headquarters has recently explained its position and recent actions in regard to two issues of great importance to the active and retired military members: proposed non-disability retirement and recomputation.

Proposed Non-Disability Retirement

The proposed new non-disability retirement system has been objected to by a great majority of local members who have made their feelings known in meetings and Commanders' Calls.

At present, two staffers from the National Headquarters are working on a study of the complex DOD proposal. They are preparing a fact sheet to outline the proposal and develop its advantages and disadvantages as a basis for obtaining member reaction.

AUSA members have voiced most objection over two particular features of the proposed system — reduced 20-year retirement benefits and integration of future social security benefits attributable to military service.

Members objecting to the proposal have asked that AUSA establish a position. But the national association is reluctant to do so until the bill is in its final form and actually introduced on the floor of the House.

AUSA would strongly object to the inclusion of the above two provisions into the legislation.

A local member who is a colonel on active duty and now approaching 30-years retirement said, "I stand to make more money under the proposal. But I oppose it anyway. To me, it represents a breach of promise to those who enlisted in the Army in the last ten years, who did so with the tacit, though unwritten agreement, that they would be eligible to retire in 20 or 30 years with a retirement of 1½ per cent of salary for each year served.

Major General Robert F. Cocklin, USAR, Director of Public Affairs, said that AUSA intends to study the proposal carefully. He said, "We want to know precisely what is being introduced and then we will be able to take a stand in a responsible manner that represents the whole Army."

Recomputation

To those members already retired, a common concern is the issue of recomputation of retirees pay.

AUSA continues in its belief that those who have served honorably and faithfully in the military services of our country are entitled to a just retirement which should reflect the great change which has taken place in the rates of pay for those in uniform. Says AUSA, "The national defense of our country must always come first, and we must support as a first priority an adequate strength and adequate equipment for our armed forces as a matter of the greatest urgency. Having supported this, we would hope that it would also be possible to provide for more equitable treatment for those already retired from the military service."

Feedback Needed

Do you have an Army-related issue on which you feel the AUSA should take a stand? If so, let your representative know your feelings.

The SGM of each major command is a member of the local AUSA Board of Directors. He is there to represent all the soldiers of his unit.

In addition your local officers would like to hear any of your comments. They represent the Columbus-Phenix City-Fort Benning Chapter in forming the national resolutions and objectives of the AUSA. Here are their names and addresses of local representation.

Don't forget that the annual election of officers and General Membership meeting is scheduled for June 27 at 6:30 p.m. in the Supper Club of the Fort Benning Officers Open Mess. All members are encouraged to attend. There will be free beer and hors d'ouvres from 6:30 to 8 p.m.

The program will be headed by Bob Hydrick, Mayor of Columbus, and the theme is "Honor the Vietnam Veteran." The Mayor is very concerned that there has been not enough attention given to the Vietnam returnees.

USMA joins 197th for picnic

More than 900 cadets from the United States Military Academy at West Point visited Fort Benning last week and among the many activities they experienced here was a picnic at Victory Pond, sponsored by the 197th Inf. Bde.

Nearly 70 soldiers from the 197th prepared the barbequed chicken and hamburgers to feed the cadets. Officers and NCOs joined the cadets to talk about Fort Benning and the 197th.

"This is one of the hungriest groups of people I have ever seen," said 1st Lt. Arthur Kellum, HHC, 3rd Bn., 7th Inf. (Cottonbalers), 197th Inf. Bde. The cadets had been out on field problems most of the day and looked it as they scrambled off the buses.

The cadets were broken down into five groups with each group going to a separate food station. Each station, managed by a different 197th unit served chicken, hamburgers, various side dishes and cold draft beer.

"This is the best food we've had all week," one cadet exclaimed. His appetite might have had something to do with it. All of the cadets were urged to eat as much as they could, and they did.

Nearly 125 officers and NCOs from the 197th joined the cadets, to offer friendship and answer questions. The communications platoon from HHC, 197th set up a loudspeaker system and broadcast music during the picnic.

Pvt. Robert Martin fills a cadet's cup during 197th sponsored picnic.

CROOKNECK SQUASH
Submitted by:
Mrs. Donald J. Shannon (Mary)

Serves 8
40 whole crookneck squash (size of an egg)
½ cup butter
½ cup finely chopped onion
1 tsp salt
¼ tsp. pepper
Finely chopped Parsley

Cook 40 squash in boiling water for 20 to 30 minutes, until almost tender. Drain and run cold water over squash. Cut 1-3 off squash and scoop out the inside pulp. (Some squash will break but 24 are needed whole). Mash pulp and broken squash with onion, butter, salt and pepper. Saute the mixture in a large skillet until light brown. Use to stuff 24 squash. May be done a day ahead to this point and refrigerated and covered. Bake in lightly greased large baking dish. Temperature: 350 Time: 15 minutes. Top with parsley before serving. This recipe is beautiful when served on a silver platter on tray with broiled tomatoes and broiled herbed mushrooms.

Nurse Clinicians graduate

Clinicians

Eight graduate from MAH Course

Eight Nurse Clinicians graduated from Martin Army Hospital's Clinician Course recently in a MEDDAC ceremony.

HISTORY

The Nurse Clinician concept is not new. The civilian community has been experimenting with the role and using nurse clinicians in an expanded role since the early 1960s and the number of programs preparing nurses to function in this way is growing yearly.

The MEDDAC program of instruction was developed by an Army Nurse Corps consultant at the Office of The Surgeon General after on site visits to many of the existing civilian programs. It therefore reflects the basics of these programs but is tailored to suit the specialized needs of a military population.

The first group of eight students began an 18-week course in February, 1972. The members of the class ranged from 22 to 35 years of age and had from 1 to 15 years of nursing experience.

It was a period of stressful soul-searching for both faculty and students as they worked closely together in bringing the POI (Program of Instruction) to life on a very tight schedule. That they succeeded is amply attested to by the performance of the four graduates who remained here at Martin Army Hospital.

Within six months of assuming their new roles, they had gained physician and patient acceptance based on their contribution to the delivery of health care and their ability to work collaboratively with the physician and other health care professionals in providing this care. They continue to show every evidence of potential for further professional growth.

The second class began in July, 1972, with four students who satisfactorily completed a course that was lengthened by six weeks to allow more time for role practice in a variety of clinic settings. They all received PCS orders upon graduation in December, 1972, and are developing their role and functions at William Beaumont, Fort Leonard Wood, Mo.; Madigan, and Fort Knox, respectively. During thiss ame period a counterpart of th s course began functioning at Fort Ord and graduated five clinicians.

COURSE CONTENT

The three separate clinician programs are 24 weeks in duration and are conducted at selected military hospitals. Only the ambulatory care course is conducted at Martin Army Hospital.

— All programs reinforce and augment the nurses' prior knowledge of assessing and meeting social, emotional and health education needs.

The "typical" nurse clinician patient most often demonstrates a need for these traditional nursing functions that out-weighs his need for specific medical therapy.

— All programs include instruction in techniques of the physical examination and the medical history, with tailoring appropriate to te specialty being pursued.

— All programs provide intensive physician instruction in the medical therapy regimens for health problems common to the specialty area in question.

— All programs provide the nurse with the time and opportunity to practice the primary care role, working cooperatively with the physician and referring to other health professionals as appropriate.

ROLE AND RESPONSIBILITY

The nurse clinician has her own patient load, derived from three sources: 1) referral by a physician 2) selection from the walk-in population 3) direct patient request.

CALL 545-4792

DEAR BAYONET
I was discharged about ten years ago before the current G. I. Bill passed. Did I lose out on educational benefits altogether? A.J.

DEAR A.J.
Not necessarily. For on-the-job training, apprenticeship, farm cooperative and flight training, you have until August 1975 to use your eligibility. Other education benefits expire May 31, 1974, the eighth anniversary of the current G.I. Bill. All eligible veterans have 8 years to take advantage of education benefits. Time is computed from the date of discharge or the date the benefit first became available, whichever is later.

DEAR BAYONET
What is VA doing to help the severely disabled Vietnam veteraus get jobs? R.D.

DEAR R.D.
In addition to providing medical care and compensation, VA is hiring many handicapped veterans including some who must work in wheel chairs or are blind. In addition, VA is working closely with universities, other government agencies, and businesses and industry to help disabled veterans get jobs. For more information call 324-6646.

DEAR BAYONET
Does time served in a National Guard or Army Reserve unit count toward the four years service required for an E-4 serviceman to qualify for on-base housing? S.F.C.

DEAR S.F.C.
A recent change to Army housing regulations includes such service in the four-year requirement.

DEAR BAYONET
A friend tells me that when a Reserve captain serving on active military duty is caught in a reduction-in-force, he may then join up as an enlisted man to compete the required 20 years for retirement and go out as captain. True or false? O.L.D.

DEAR O.L.D.
If he had served at least 10 years on active duty as a commissioned officer, he could retire in officer grade. Otherwise, he retires in the enlisted grade he held at retirement, and is advanced to the former officer grade when total service, active and retired, totals 30 years.

DEAR BAYONET
Where may an individual go for help in getting into a college, if previous applications have been rejected because of lack of space? L.O.

DEAR L.O.
One source are the admissions clearinghouses which try to place students in schools which have openings. The major admissions center are: College Admissions Assistance Center, 888 Seventh Ave., New York, N.Y. 10019; National Association of College Admissions Counselors, 9933 Lawlor Ave., Suite 500, Skokie, Ill. 60076; American College Admissions Center, 1601 Walnut St., Philadelphia, Pa. 19103; and Private College Admsion Center, 1740 N. St. NW., Washington, D.C. 20036. A fee of $10 to $25 is charged at the time of registration.

DEAR BAYONET
What medical treatment is available for dependents now that the night clinic at the Martin Army Hospital Annex has been closed. S.U.

DEAR S.U.
Non-emergency medical problems will be handled by appointment only. For an appointment call 544-2901. Appointments may be made from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. on weekdays. For emergency medical problems call 544-2091 from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays. Ask to speak to a doctor or a nurse. Emergency medical problems after duty hours, weekends, or holidays call information desk at the hospital (544-2041). Your phone number will be given to a doctor who will call you back.

2nd Battalion, 10th Field Artillery

The lovely home of Mrs. Charles Ames on Gettysburg Way in Columbus, was the gathering place for the June 12 coffee of the ladies of the 2nd Bn., 10th Field Artillery. Mrs. Larry Aaron was the cohostess.

Mrs. Robert Veen introduced a new comer to the group, Mrs. Ron Buechler. Unfortunately, good-byes had to be said to Mrs. William Echols, and Mrs. Curtis Hoglan, wife of the battalion commander.

Forthcoming events were discussed, including the battalion Organization Day on June 14 and the Brigade Ladies Wine and Cheese Tasting on June 20. And since many of the ladies had attended the recent OWC Luau, they were pleased to learn of the Brigade Luau, which is planned for July 28.

Finally, Raye Aaron demonstrated how to make unique hors d'oeuves from fresh pineapple.

On June 13, a group of ladies from the 2nd Bn., 10th Field Artillery went on the Heritage Tour, a guided bus tour of some of the historic homes which are found in Columbus. They were able to view and to learn the background of these home, some of which date from the earliest settlement of Columbus in 1828.

Beta Sigma Phi Sorority

Members of the Beta Sigma Phi Sorority, Alpha Gamma Chapter and their families met at the home of Cpt. and Mrs. Gerald Sharpe of First Division Road for an "Ice Cream Social". More than two dozen children delighted in tasting five flavors of homemade ice cream.

Guests were Cpt. and Mrs. Robert Kimbrough and family, Miss Renate Weatherman and Miss Sue Albrecht, both girls visiting from Michigan.

The next social is planned for July 21.

PX times change

Reduction in funding and manpower levels necessitate a change in hours of operation of the Main Post and Custer Terrace commissaries, beginning July 1.

According to Major Lyle E. Blank, chief, services division, in order to provide the least impact to the customers, an analysis of customer load in the commissary was made. Additionally, individual customers were consulted and the desires of the Commissary Advisory Council considered before arriving at a new schedule of hours.

The following hours of operation for the main store and Custer Terrace beginning July 1 are: main store, Monday-Friday, 11 a.m.-7 p.m.; Saturday and Sunday, 10 a.m.-6 p.m. The Custer Terrace commissary operation times are 9 a.m.-5 p.m., Tuesday-Saturday. Sunday and Monday the Custer Terrace commissary will be closed.

Co. A's newest arrival

Pvt. Walter E. Thomas, age 17, is the newest arrival at Company A, 43rd Engineer Battalion (Construction). Pvt. Thomas from Abbeville, South Carolina is one of the many OJT's that omc eet A Company for training in a specified MOS.

Pvt. Thomas, who volunteered for thre years in the service, entered the Army on Jan. 11, 1973, completed basic training and AIT in 71B10, personnel specialist, at Fort Jackson, South Carolina. Now he is one of the fortunate enlisted personnel to participate in the OJT program with Company A, 43rd Engr. Bn. where he will be trained as a 52A10, generator mechanic.

Pvt. Thomas says that the Army is OK, but there are a few people who take advantage of privates because of their rank. He considers A Company to be a good company and that he has no immediate problems there.

Adventure Training

things I wasn't aware I could do. I've now directed a show, taken of technical theatre, including light and sound, and I'm now working on the 4th of July Carnival. I think that the best thing about it is that I have gained confidence in myself."

Sp5 Philip M. Schaffer, 3rd Ranger Co., is a local resident who enlisted for the 197th Infantry Brigade. He spent eight months as a tank crewman before deciding to try something much more difficult. "I said to myself that I might not make it through the Airborne and Ranger training since it's the hardest training the Army has to offer. Now that I have completed the training I find that I can work with people better; I have gained self-confidence. Right now, I am thinking about continuing my training with the Jumpmaster and Pathfinder schools.

Pvt. Ileane Katzker, Information Office, came in the Army to help establish her goals. "It is a man's world and Army and by doing the job I'm now doing, I feel that I have made a great accomplishment. Also I feel that anyone who has attained the right to put on their uniform every day has accomplished a great deal. Anyone coming into the Army is taking part in an adventure."

The Army has many training activities and jobs in which a person can find a way to prove himself. A person's proof may lie in the difficulty of the task, such as Airborne or Ranger training or winter training in Alaska; or in the satisfaction of the task, as in the theatre or as an Information Specialist or as a Scout leader. Each person can find his own way to prove whatever he wants to prove, to himself or others.

Dramatizers plan next production

The Fort Benning Dramatizers announce that the next production at the Fort Benning Playhouse will be "The Mouse That Roared," written by Leonard Wibberley and adapted for the stage by Christopher Sergel.

Bob Swain, the director of the show, will be holding tryouts for the 14 male and 14 female roles on June 27, 28, and 29 at 7 p.m. at the Fort Benning Playhouse, Bldg. 1257, behind the Infantry Museum and the Beverage Store on Ingersoll.

The play is scheduled to be presented Aug. 17, 18, 23, 24, and 25 at the Playhouse. All performances are free and open to anyone who wishes to attend.

Tryouts for Dramtizer productions are open to all military personnel, civilians and dependents who live in the Columbus-Phenix City-Fort Benning area. Also available are many jobs on the technical crews needed to put on any performance.

Further information may be obtained from the Playhouse or by calling 545-2932 or 545-5057.

Coming to the screen

The Legend of Nigger Charlie

THE LEGEND OF NIGGER CHARLEY, with ex-football star Fred Williamson in the title role, focuses on the plight of a freed Southern slave who kills his overseer and flees the plantation. Charley and two other escaped slaves head West, seeking their rightful place on the Western Frontier as free men. Ex-slaves after the Civil War, they take on all comers in a Western with soul.

The Gospel Road

Counteracting the present trend of rock-religious musicals, Johnny Cash's reverent THE GOSPEL ROAD features a country and western score. With Cash as narrator and wife June acting as Mary Magdalene, the film was short entirely in the Holy Land. Christ is played by director Robert Elfstrom, blond, bearded, and highly traditional with some added touches of earthliness so that he is seen as a man who can feel the emotions of pain and anger.

Deliverance

Four city businessmen, led by Burt Reynolds, spend a weekend canoeing down a wild river in the Georgia wilderness. Reynolds, is out to prove his superiority and endurance over nature. His best friend, Jon Voight, has brought along two friends, Ned Beatty and Ronny Cox, to counterbalance Reynolds' over-confident leadership.

Napoleon and Samantha

That magical screen combination of children, animals and nature is excitingly brought together in Walt Disney's dramatic and touching adventure feature Starring Michael Douglas and Will Foster and co-starring Johnny Whitaker and Jodi Foster, in the title roles. The unusual tale centers around two youngsters, who, rather than part with an old pet lion who was once a circus performer, go on a perilous mountain rek to stay with a recluse friend.

586th rafts down Chattahoochee

Forty soldiers from Headquarters Command went on a 127 mile adventure training trip from Uchee Creek Marina, to Sneeds Landing, Fla. The boat trip down the Chattahoochee began on May 21.

Six of the soldiers were WACs led by 1st Lt. Leslie Snyder from Hq. Command.

The trip was designed to acquire experience in camping, boat handling and water safety. Emphasis was placed on outdoor cooking as preparation for the summer season.

Light tactical rafts, motors, and operators were provided by the 586th Engineer Company (Float Bridge).

The noon meal was eaten on board while under way. Fresh fish for the evening meal were only for those lucky enough to catch any. The others dined on "C" rations.

The following morning, the group proceeded to the Walter F. George lock and dam, whre they were lowered approximately seven stories to the base of the dam. Capt. John R. Biddle commented that it was like sitting in a deep bathtub and having someone pull the plug.

Practical experience in boat handling, was gained by paddling three-fourths of a mile to the next marina.

Supervised water activities included skiing, racing on air mattresses, and swimming and diving instruction. Specialist six Charles Roper, 586th Engineer, water safety expert, indicated that the trip was helpful in receiving additional training while on a support mission.

Another adventure training trip is now in the planning stage on the Appalachian Trail this month.

931st Takes Plunge

BY CHARLES BRICKMAN

Adventure training is used to not only give the men some extra training which will benefit them, but it is set up to get the men away from monotony and give them the chance for some fun. At least that is what the 931st Engineers try to do.

Recently the men of HHC 931st underwent some adventure training at the Sand Hill swimming pool.

To start with the men took swimming tests on June 8 to find out who were the swimmers and who were the sinkers. This was done with the men in fatigues with web gear and carrying an M-16 rifle, so it just was not as easy as it looked. Everyone participated in this test, from the First Sergeant to the Group Commander Col. Thompson.

After all the men had been tested they were given the chance to participate in a scuba diving class on June 15.

There were many in the company who did not think they would be interested but some gave it a try anyway. On the morning of June 15, the men of HHC were given a class on scuba diving. The class was taught by Sp6 Tom McKay with help from Sp6 Charles Roper and Sp4 John Nussbaum, who are divers for the 586th Float Bridge Company.

The class lasted from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m., and when it was over, not many of those participating in the training wanted to leave.

Scuba equipment was brought to the class by Sp6 McKay and Sp6 Roper, and as McKay gave the men instruction, Roper and Nussbaum gave demonstrations of the various pieces of gear on hand.

Captain Mike Nelson, the company commander of HHC, also brought some of his equipment along, such as under water scooter which was demonstrated.

The men were given demonstrations of snorkeling, buddy breathing and other facets of diving.

Specialist 6 McKay explained to the men, "Always check your equipment before going into the water. You must also be familiar with your equipment, this is most important. Never go diving alone, because that is a major cause of divers drowning. Go in pairs of two or four but never one or three."

After the instruction and demonstrations it was time for the real fun to begin. The highlight of the training was when the men were given the chance to go into the pool with scuba gear on.

One of the participants, Sp4 Jennings Taylor, stated, "I have seen a lot of movies with divers and I've seen it on TV but I never thought that it would be so much fun. It was fantastic! I can't wait until the next class. I think I may try to get my certification for diving."

Another of the men, PFC Gary Cathcart, stated, "I didn't realize how much diving was." PFC Cathcart was there to cover the class for the Group PIO office but when he saw the others with the scuba gear he could not resist. He went in the water in his fatigues.

Capt. Nelson stated, "The main purpose of the class was as an introduction in scuba diving. We had hoped that it would go over well with the men but it went over even better than expected. Everyone who participated had a good time while receiving very good training. We had just the right number on hand for this class.

I'm sure that next time we will have even more men on hand. We felt that if enough interest was generated we might take the men in mass to join the post scuba club. There was quite a lot of interest shown here; in fact, most of the men expressed interest in getting certified."

Adventure

Many Types of Training for Infantryman

BY BOB THOMAS

Adventure training, in forms that vary from entering a river raft race to learning SCUBA diving, has been prevalent in the 197th Inf. Bde.

This type of unique Army training allows the individual soldier the opportunity to participate in activities that are not a part of his normal daily routine. Many times, though adventure training is Army training common to other soldiers in other units. Recently a battery of men from the 2nd Bn., 10th Field Arty, the 197th's artillery battalion, were given a class in rappelling by a few men in the unit who had recently learned the skill in Ranger training. The class was concluded with each student getting his chance to rappel from the roof of their three-story barracks.

Something as common as a 12-mile road march to an infantry soldier can be considered adventure training to the men of HHC, 1st Bn., 29th Inf. (Pioneers), 197th Inf. Bde. These men, who spend their daily routine as clerks in their battalion headquarters, actually enjoyed an afternoon of walking around Fort Benning.

Adventure training, on the other hand, can take more unique forms. Several men from Co. A, 1st Bn., (MECH), 58th Inf. (Patriots), 197th Inf. Bde. have had the opportunity to learn SCUBA diving from the 1st Sgt., Fred A. Van Peski. The water oriented "lop" has more than 20 years of underwater experience and is a registered instructor of the sport.

On several occasions Van Peski and his students have been joined by a group of divers from the 2nd Bn., 69th Armor, 197th Inf. Bde., and have made trips as far as the Florida Keys. Van Peski likes the Florida waters for his students because "they are safer and there is so much more to see."

At times, adventure training has been carried to local civilian affairs, mostly physical contests such as Columbus' recent bicycle marathon and the Columbus Jaycee sponsored river raft race last August. Individual soldiers or small groups often enter such events under the name of their unit.

Sgt. John A. Miller Jr., the training NCO for Co. A, 3rd Bn., 7th Inf. (Cottonbalers), 197th Inf. Bde. entered the first annual Columbus Bicycle Marathon, a 24-hour event held recently in downtown Columbus. Miller won an award for riding more than 50 miles in the first four hours of competition. He wore a 197th Inf. Bde. sweatshirt in the event.

Last August the Columbus Jaycees held their first annual Chattahoochee River Raft Race and a number of Army units entered rafts, including a platoon from Co. C, 1st Bn., 29th Inf. (Pioneers), 197th Inf. Bde. Out of more than 80 entries, the two 197th rafts finished 3rd and 4th, and the men are already talking about entering this year's event, in which officials are expecting 300 entries.

Now that summer is in full swing, adventure training is becoming more and more popular with the men of the 197th Inf. Bde. A number of companies have already begun making plans for adventure training to include fishing trips, mountain climbing, canoe trips and other outdoor activities.

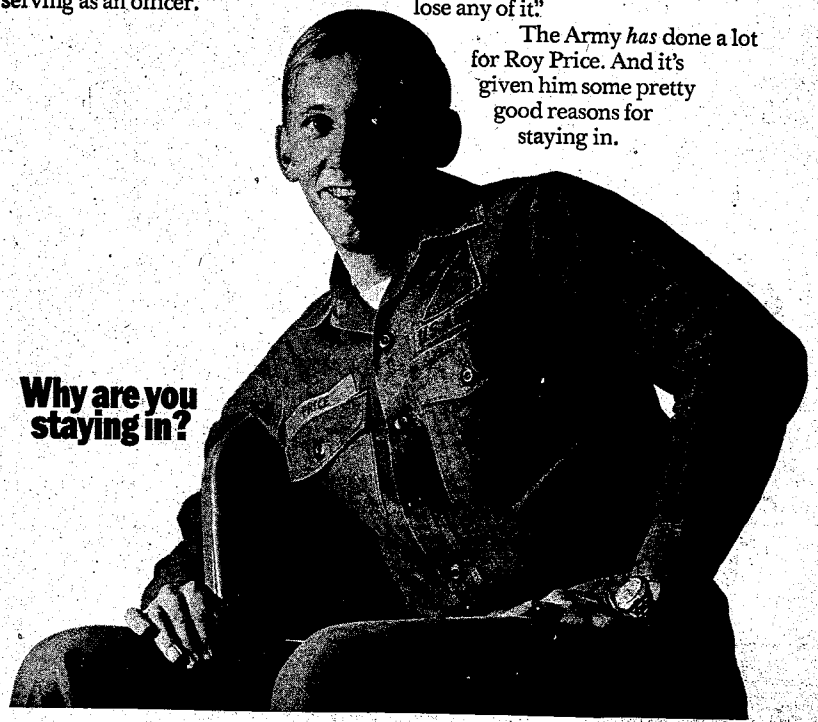
The theory behind adventure training is two-fold. First, of course, it gives the individual soldier a chance to change his routine. It cuts down the boredom that often accompanies an everyday job.

But adventure training also teaches the soldier things that could prove helpful to him in future life. SCUBA diving, for example, is as much a rescue technique as it is a sport, and the physical training that is gained in a 12-mile road march is obvious.

"It's too good to get out."

Sergeant Roy Price has put a lot into his Army career. And he's gotten a lot out of it.

"Maybe it's just me. Maybe I'm lucky. But the more I find out about the Army—what it has to offer, what you can do—the more I'm convinced that staying in was the best move I could make.



"Take college. I've got two years of it already, most of it paid for by the Army. And since I'm reenlisting, I'll be able to finish the other two. When I graduate I'll even have the option of applying for OCS and that'll give me the chance to start serving as an officer.

"The Army tries to help you out in any way they can, from what I can figure. When I finished my tour in Vietnam I asked to be stationed at Ft. Hood, and here I am.

"It all worked out pretty well, because my wife and I just had our first baby—cost about $7.00—and I hate to think what it would've been on the outside.

"When I look at everything—the schooling, the cost of living, where I'm stationed—the Army's done an awful lot for me. I don't know...right now it's just too good to lose any of it."

The Army has done a lot for Roy Price. And it's given him some pretty good reasons for staying in.

Why are you staying in?

Water survival training a must for Army Aviation

Escape and Evasion courses and survival courses have long been an important aspect of Army Aviator training.

Army Aviation, by its very nature, has concentrated primarily on land survival. But with the ever-increasing role of Army Aviation, more and more missions require flight over water. In addition, should a flight crew find themselves in a survival situation in a remote area, the fastest and easiest, or possibly the only, means of reaching civilization might well be through utilization of water routes.

To prepare for this eventuality, the men of the 209th Aviation Company, Aviation Battalion at Fort Benning have established a water-survival-escape and evasion training program in conjunction with the Aviation Battalion's emphasis on Adventure Training.

The high point of the program is an expedition down the Chattahoochee River by raft to an island in Lake Eufaula, where the crew establishes a camp for the night. The next day the men and their raft are recovered by CH-47 "Chinook", the men boarding the aircraft by troop ladder while it is at a hover. The raft is transported back to Fort Benning as a sling load.

The men of the 209th have constructed their own rafts from aircraft wing-tip fuel tanks as well as scrap wood and metal. An effort is made to use only those materials which would be available to the crew of a downed aircraft.

The feasibility of the project was put to a test on September 3, 1972. A single raft under the command of Captain James D. Davis, Aviation Battalion S-4, departed Fort Benning at noon. The raft was crewed by CW2 Donald Garnto, SFC Harry E. Jaynes, SSG Donald J. Gorske, SP6 Kenton H. Minor, and SP6 Stanley W. Steger.

197th slo-pitch softball

PFC Ed Fields, A Co., 197th Spt. Bn., 197th Inf. Bde. throws his fingertip pitch, as his team beat HHC, 197th in Kelley Hill softball play. Field's team is currently running second in league standings, behind B Batt., 2nd Bn., 10th Field Arty, 197th Inf. Bde. The "A Admin" have lost only one game and it was to the undefeated league leaders...

BAYONET SPORTS

Kelley Hill led by B. Batt., 'Patriots' lead Harmony Church

In Kelley Hill Softball Tournament play it is B Batt., 2nd Bn., 10th Field Arty., as the surprise leader at mid season.

The darkhorse team from the 197th's artillery battalion has (10-0) record and has already beaten the second and third place teams, A Co., 197th Spt. Bn. and Central Training Command (CTCO). The "A Admin" have come the closest to stopping B Batt. so far, as they went down with a score of 6-5 last week.

"Nobody really expected them to be that good," commented Sgt. Larry Pence, HHC, 197th's team captain. "We got caught by surprise the first time we played them, but we'll be ready for them when we meet again on June 26."

HHC, 1st Bn., 58th Inf. is currently leading the 197th's Harmony Church league. The Patriots are undefeated with 13 wins. The Combat Support Co. of the 1st-58th are in second place with a 7-1 record while A Co., 1st-58th and the 72nd Engr. Co. are tied for third at 7-3.

The 197th Softball Tournament is comprised of 25 teams in the two leagues. They play Monday through Thursday evenings at both Kelley Hill and Harmony Church.

By Bill Kloeb

Last Tuesday evening Lon Marlowe who apparently divides his time between fishing and golf invited me to attend a meeting of the Fort Benning Bass Anglers Sportsmens Society. It was enjoyable and I learned a lot about reservoirs.

Marlowe had made arrangements for Dick Collier, of the University of Georgia Extension Service to be guest speaker at the meeting. Collier's presentation was going to provide information on fishing conditions at the Walter F. George Reservoir.

The speaker proved to be a well informed source of information on the subject. He has spent most of his life and most of that time fishing in this area. He knew the Walter F. George area before it was covered with water.

He began by discussing the general condition of the lake and answering a much repeated question concerning the lake being "fished out." He said he doesn't believe any body of water can be "fished out" but admitted the Walter F. George reservoir has not been producing fish in quantity and quality as it did a few years ago. According to him this could be caused by several conditions. Pollution of the water could have retarded reproduction, increased numbers of rough fish could be taking an exceptionally large toll on game fish or unusual weather conditions could be causing temperature ranges and fluctuations harmful to the fish. This last condition had an extremely adverse effect on this years spawning.

According to Collier, marine biologists are researching all angles but he pointed out similar conditions were noted in older impoundments when they were at the approximate age of the Water F. George. He pointed out too that the history of these impoundments indicated that after a few years of low production nature took a hand and fish production increased to a satisfactory level.

The operation of the hydro-electric turbines cause a drastic change in the water level of the reservoir. Sometimes changes up to 12 or 14 feet during extended peak use. According to Collier these peak times are the same each day. The generators start in the morning at 6:30 and run until about 9 a.m. They are started up again at about 11:30 p.m. and run until 1:30 p.m. and the final run each day begins at 6 in the evening and lasts until 9 p.m. According to Collier the times might vary a little on weekends but generally remain the same. Exact times can be obtained in advance from the Corps of Engineer personnel at the dam. These people can also tell you how to get topography maps of the reservoir.

Collier had a word of caution about traveing in boats while the water is at a low level. During the periods the reservoir is at a low water level there is a much greater danger from stumps and other objects that can wreck a boat. Another danger is from fishhooks and lures that are hung up on trees and branches. During the low water periods some of these obstacles are above water and an unwary fisherman passing under them may be caught on a dangling hook.

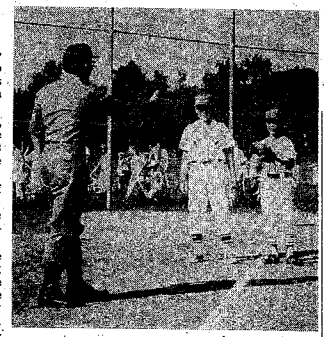
Collier spoke briefly on Lake Harding and Lake Oliver. The dams for these lakes are operated by the Georgia Power Company. The power company operates the dams according to company requirements but is very much aware of conservation practices. Both lakes produce fish in quantities and size to be expected from impoundments of this type. He closed his presentation with a few remarks on the West Point Dam now nearing completion. The target date is November of this year. The reservoir should reach pool stage by next February. When this happens the water will cover approximately 28,900 acres.

The business meeting that took place after the presentation by Collier was equally informative. With Gregg Wallis, the new president presiding several internal club items were discussed then Dan Hann gave a detailed critique on a fishing contest several members had competed in last month. I was impressed by the details he covered. Just like a critique on a tactical operation. The good points and the bad points received equal time. I'm sure everyone got several teaching points from that presentation.

I got one good one myself. With a bunch of professional bass fishermen like the BASS Club members on post I'm not going to write any "how to" bass fishing stories without a lot of research and coordination.

Father-son, Father-daughter golf

The 10th Annual Father-Son and Father-Daughter Golf Tournament was held at the Fort Benning Country Club, June 17.



Winners in the 10-12 age group were Capt. Muniz and son Ricardo, Maj. Michael L. Donahue and Joe Cargo. Both teams had a score of 71.

In the 13-15 age group, Lt. Col. Duane E. Ingram and son Mark had a score of 71. Lt. Col. Robert O. Rushing and Steve Dudik also had a 71.

First place winner in the 16-18 age group was Roy B. Burnes and son Jay with a 71. Second place went to Lt. Col. Donald S. Amano and son Dean with a score of 72.

First place in the daughter tournament was taken by Lt. Col. Henry E. Hall and Mary with a score of 74. Second place winner was Capt. John Ramos and Lorraine with a score of 78.

Trophies were given to the top two players in each category along with a special trophy given to the top girl.

Texan ties world record

PFC David N. Smith, Dallas, Texas and the U. S. Army Marksmanship Training Unit, blasted an incredible 297 of a possible 300 to grab the championship of the Peach State International Open Skeet Tournament held at Benning June 16 and 17.

Opening the two day tourney with precision marksmanship, Smith knocked each of the 150 clay disc from the skies as they catapulted from the high and low houses during the first day and then added 50 straight on Sunday to give him 200 of the first 200 birds.

During the final 100 birds, the pressure and constant pounding began to take its toll as he dropped one bird from each of the first three rounds of 25 until the final round when he maxed the course once more for his 297.

Smith's first two hundred straight tied the present world record and beat the Olympic and National records.

Claiming the runner up honors, Maj. Kenneth Gilbert, a companion shooter from Laurel, Miss., allowed eight birds to escape in the 300 aggregate for a 292 total and Sp5 Louis Sembrowich, Oxford, Conn., posted a 289 for third overall.

High civilian honors in the National Rifle Association sanctioned match was claimed by Will Gonzales, a student from Louisiana State University, who garnered 284 of the 300 possible while Evelyn Volkringer, Pompano Beach, Fla., posted a commendable 254 to take the high Ladies honor.

For the champion Army shooters, the Open International match served as a preliminary and warm up for their participation in the Armed Forces Skeet Championships at Colorado Springs, Colorado, June 25. The Colorado tourney, sponsored by the U. S. Air Force, will include both American and International style Skeet with the Army squad competing only in the latter.

Playboy 'bunnies' coming to Benning

SWING? You might strike out if you suddenly take up baseball, and other strenuous summertime activities after hibernating by the fire all winter. Ease into summer. Sunken Gardens Fla. Model Kathy Matteson obviously kept in shape all-year long...

Thirteen lovely "Bunnies" from the Atlanta Playboy Club will be arriving at Gowdy Field at Fort Benning on July 1st to play a fund raising softball game with the 931st Engr. Gp. (CBT). Gametime for the event will be 2:30 p.m.

The Atlanta Bunnies, some of whom have been featured in "Playboy", will be bringing some "impressive figures" into the game as they have never lost a game. They "figure" to win this one too as the officers and enlisted men composing the 931st team just don't "measure up".

Project officer and coach for the 931st team, 2LT Ralph Santáliz says that he has been scouting the bunnies and says that the secret to winning is concentration. "It is most difficult for the opposition to keep their minds on the game."

Following the game, the girls will auction off articles of their bunny uniforms.

Tickets will be on sale for $1 throughout the 931st Engr. Gp., at the Main PX and Commissary, and at the gate on July 1st. Proceeds from the auction and ticket sales will go to the Boy Scouts of America.

The 524th Personnel Service Company will be host to the Atlanta Bunnies for chow before the young ladies return to Atlanta.

All military and civilian personnel in Fort Benning Benning and Columbus are invited to attend this afternoon of fun.

Draggin around

It was a big night at Phenix Dragway on Wednesday, June 13. The purse was $75 for the "ET" winner. And the winner once again was SSgt. Tom Cain, 139th MP Company. With the exception of Bill Cobb, all of the trophies went to Army personnel. Ken Doddridge, 80th Replacement Co., took runner up and $25, Duke Burrell, ACS, and Tom Cain were the other trophy winners.

Saturday, June 16, Betty Zimmerman, brought an end to a long dry spell, and managed to womanhandle a '67 Mercury Colony Park wagon to a $50 victory. The semi-finals consisted of Gordon Clark in a Ford Ranchero, Capt. Chris Scammon in a Chevrolet Caprice, WO-1 Alan Pangburn on a Kawasaki, and Betty Zimmerman from Martin Army Hospital. Pilot Pangburn blasted to a 12 second win over Capt. Chris Scammon and Betty Zimmerman dusted off Gordon Clark. In the finals, Pangburn didn't fly low as usual and therefore lost out to Betty Zimmerman.

Super STock brought out a field of ten. Hilton Holley in a SS-NA Camaro won first place. Roger Popham driving a SS-O Chevrolet Convertible came up second round winner.

Modified Eliminator went to Carl Ogle with his E-MP Camaro and second round winner was Mike Goulet with his E-MP Chevy II.

Pro Stock consisted of a two out of three match race between Ellis Milner's "Big Daddy" Vega and Russell McDonald's "Golden Rule" Camaro. The Vega blew the Camaro's doors in twice in a row.

Don't forget we run every Wednesday and Saturday night.

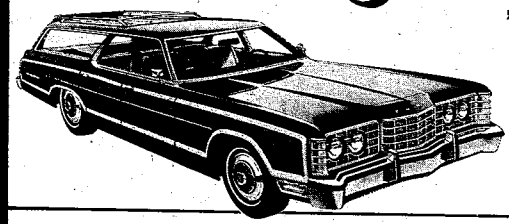
Students get jobs

Fourteen college students from the Columbus-Phenix City-Fort Benning area have been hired to fill clerical positions under the Summer Employment Examination Program.

They will work at Martin Army Hospital, the Directorate of Communications-Electronics, and other sections on post. Two summer aides have also been hired by Fort Benning.



Columbus Youth Opportunity is providing part-time employment on post for 130 area youths. These enrollees in the CYO program are hired and paid through the program itself, not from Fort Benning funds.

Museum gets orders

An original set of landing orders for D-Day, June 6, 1944, were presented to the National Infantry Museum Tuesday, June 5, at the 4th National Bank. The set includes orders from each of the major commanders Eisenhower, Montgomery and Bradley. Mr. Floyd Mitchell, who read the orders to his unit before the invasion, gave the orders to Lt. Col. (ret.) Dick Grube, Museum curator.

Jackie and Gents at Kelly Hill Club

Jackie and the Georgia Gents is one of the finest Country and Rock Country bands in this area. This band has performed at Golden Park several times and has always been a crowd pleaser. They backed Red Sovine (Nashville Recording Star and member of the Gran Ole Opry) on stage.

This band has two recordings out — one prompted by Bright Star out of Nashville and the other one by Little Richy Johnson out of Belin, New Mexico.

Jackie and the Georgia Gents are very versatile with their music all the way from rock to coutry to old standards. Also they have a fine comedy act.

This seven piece band with their fast moving entertainment has something for everyone and it would be a real treat for anyone to attend their show on Sunday, 24 June at 1:30 p.m. at the Kelley Hill Service Club.

Flag Day Golf

Over 400 golfers and five golf courses participated in the AUSA sponsored Flag Day Golf Tournament held at courses throughout Fort Benning and the Columbus area.

The Fort Benning Country Club and the Sand Hill course held 18 hole handicap golf tournaments. Col. Norman Williamson took the honors at the Country Club of Fort Benning while Bill Blankenship conquered his opponents at the Sand Hill course.

In Columbus, the Green Island course and the Country Club of Columbus both participated in the flag day festivities with 18 hole handicap tourneys. Sid Dykes was the winner at Green Island Club and the trio of Lawrence Mosley, Charles McLaughlin and Lee Grose all received the trophies at the Country Club of Columbus. Bull Creek held a match with the trophy going to the person making the closest shot to the third hole. John Drew was the person making that skillful shot to cop the trophy.

The AUSA provided the trophies and flags to the golf courses around the Columbus area as part of the observance of Flag Day.

Patriots take third with song

Two soldiers from the 1st Bn. (Mech), 58th Infantry (Patriots), 197th Infantry Brigade placed third in the Third Army Entertainment Contest held at Fort Bragg recently.

Sgt. Michael J. Eddy, Combat Support Company and Spc4 Charles Johnson of HHC, 1st Bn, 58th Infantry teamed up to make a guitar playing and a singing duo for the contest. They sang "Helpless Helpless," and "Punkies Dilemma" to win third prize.

Johnson also entered the vocal soloist portion of the contest and walked away with second prize in that category. He sang, "Lady From Baltimore" and "Simple Song of Freedom."

All about having a baby

Pregnancy and childbirth are normal, natural happenings. It is believed that through a thorough program of education, the expectant father and mother can be prepared both physically and emotionally to make childbirth and parenthood a satisfying and rewarding experience.

The Army Health Nursing Service, in conjunction with the Obstetrics Department, Martin Army Hospital, is beginning another series of Expectant Parent's Classes on 10 July 1972. The series consists of four classes, each two hours long, on four Tuesday nights of the month. Classes are held in the Conference Room, second floor of Martin Army Hospital.

The sessions improve your knowledge of pregnancy, childbirth, and newborn babies. Movies, slides, short talks, and discussion groups help to explain the physical structure of the male and female, reproduction, body changes, signs of labor and infant care.

The first class includes psychological aspects of parenthood, and exercises. The second class describes labor and delivery and includes a tour of the Labor and Delivery Suite, the third describes Obstetrical anesthesia and the fourth describes infant care, with a special session on breast feeding. It is best to start with the first class in the series and continue with the same group; however, if you should miss one class, you can make it up in the next series.

Particular care is taken to make each expectant mother and father aware of forthcoming events. Fear and uncertainty are results of meeting the unexpected. For assurance and knowledge, you are encouraged to attend a series of Expectant Parent's Classes during your pregnancy. The Obstetrician, Optometrist, Chaplain, Nursery Nurse, and the Army Health Nurse all participate in the series. It is an excellent opportunity to ask questions.

Because of limited space, you are asked to pre-register for these classes by calling the Army Health Nursing Service, 545-5431, Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. - 5 p.m.

Officers cop twin bill

A steady drizzling rain did not daunt the spirits of the HHD, 67th Maintenance Battalion officers softball team as they defeated the 43rd Engineer Battalion, 16-3 and 7-6, in a double header.

ILT John Selfe, who played second base for HHD, knocked in the first home run of the game in the top of the fifth inning. The 43rd Engineer Brigade's first run came when LTC R.J. Rappaport knocked in SSG S. J. Robey in the sixth inning.

In the second game, LTC Herman R. Betke slammed a three run homer in the third inning.

Local TV station produces films on 197th

A Columbus television station has completed production of a documentary film about the 197th Infantry Brigade's new mission.

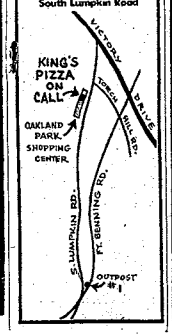
Sponsored by the National Bank of Fort Benning, the feature, entitled "Mission-STRAF: A New Direction for the 197th," is scheduled for airing at 8 p.m. July 10 by channel 9. Jim Hickey, a member of the station's news department, wrote, produced, photographed and narrated the documentary.

Hickey said the cinematic endeavor concentrates on the major change in the 197th Brigade's mission, brought about on March 21 when the unit was reorganized from a support unit for Fort Benning's Infantry School (under the Training and Doctrines Command) to a Strategic Army Forces unit (under the Forces Command) charged with attaining and maintaining a combat-ready posture.

The half-hour broadcast contains an overview of life in the 197th, with interior and exterior scenes of various troop living quarters.

Training sequences in the film show such activities as 4.2 inch mortar crewmen in action and Advanced Individual Training students engaged in infantry field maneuvers with live firing of individual weapons.

Col. William B. Steele, commander of the 197th Infantry Brigade, appears in the film during an interview in which he discusses the units new mission and its plans for conducting appropriate training to comply with readiness requirements.



In a segment of the film taken on location in Jesup, Ga., the activities of a recruiting canvasser are shown and described. He is one of the many canvassers who are assigned to the 197th Infantry Brigade and temporarily on duty contacting prospective recruits for enlistment in the 197th.

Ya'll come

Holiday happiness is at Benning

A special invitation is extended to everyone in the Fort Benning, Columbus, and Phenix City areas to participate in the holiday celebration's gala festivities and action packed events, to be held during the Independence Day Carnival, July 4, at York Field, Eubanks Field and Infantry Hall, Fort Benning.

The day's activities get under way at 11:45 a.m. with Maj. Gen. Thomas M. Tarpley, Fort Benning commander, acting as the reviewing officer.

Several major units will be represented in the reviewing parade. Acting as the honor guard will be Company C, Third Battalion, 7th Infantry, 197th Infantry Brigade. The Salute Battery will be carried on by Battery A, 2nd Battalion, 10th Field Artillery, 197th Infantry Brigade.

Other units also paricipating in the parade will be the 586th Engineering Company, 36th Engineer Group and the 5th Student Battalion, Officer Candidate School, (OCS) with two marching platoons.

The aerial "fly-by" demonstration will be performed by the Aviation Battalion, with nine helicopters performing flight exhibitions.

After the reviewing parade has ended, the Carnival's giant midway will open at noon, with many surprising and exciting attractions, to entertain the whole family.

This year's Independence Day Carnival is expected to be one of the best ever with more entertainment available to all who attend.

Beginning at 1 p.m., the Talent Contest gets under way with some of the area's finest talents to entertain you. Prizes include a $100, $75 and $50 purse.

Girls, girls, girls and more girls, the most beautiful and charming in the entire town, will compete for the title of Miss Fort Benning, and cash prizes of $100, $75, $50 for the top beauties. The contest will begin at 3 p.m.

The Battle of the Bands is next on the agenda at 5 p.m., with the area's most popular rock and roll and soul groups, to keep you reelin' n' rockin' with your favorite songs and instrumentals. Cash prizes wil be given to the top three groups chosen for outstanding performance.

With the holiday fading to an end, don't forget the last but not forgotten event, the fireworks display, to begin at 9:20 p.m., topping off the day's activities.

For the time of your life, young and old alike, be sure to attend this year's Fort Benning Independence Day Carnoval. See you there and have a safe and enjoyable holday.

2-10th celebrates Organization Day

BY BOB THOMAS

Nearly 1,000 men from the 2nd Bn., 10th Field Arty., 197th Inf. Bde. and their families enjoyed the recent Organization Day activities of the artillery unit held on Kelley Hill.

The 2-10th has a colorful history dating back to 1917 and the soldiers and officers of the battalion celebrated Organization Day with a large picnic and competition between batteries. B Batt. was the overall winner, taking the softball contest and egg throwing.

Service Batt. took top honors in the popular tug of war and also the Howitzer competition for having the best looking artillery piece. The volleyball game was won by HHB while C Batt. took the marching competition.

Joe Windsor elected AUSA President

Joe V. Windsor, Vice President and General Manager of WTVM Television Station, was elected 1972-73 President of the Phenix City-Columbus-Fort Benning Chapter of the Association of the United States Army at the general membership meeting held June 27 at the Supper Club of the Officer's Open Mess.

He succeeds Charles Daley as President of the world's largest AUSA Chapter.

Other officers elected were: Roy Browning, First Vice President; James Blanchard, Second Vice President, Col. Allen W. Goodson, Secretary-Treasruer.

Col. Kendrick B. Barlow, Mrs. Rozelle Fabiani, Leonard L. Leavell, Vincent F. Bergquist, Alton Russell and Dennis Mitchell were elected to the Board of Directors for a three year period.

Before joining WTVM in 1963, Windsor served as assistant manager for the Columbus Chamber of Commerce for 18 months. He was the 1966 Chairman for the United Givers Appeals Board and the 1967 President of the Columbus Better Business Bureau.

The theme of the meeting was "Honor the Vietnam Veteran." Mayor Bob Hydrick was principal speaker and spoke on this subject. Mayor Hydrick presented General Tarpley with a proclamation proclaiming June 27 as "Honor The Vietnam Veteran Day In Columbus."

Daley presented certificates of commendation to the retiring members of the board of directors.

Daley was presented an Infantryman Statue by Major General Thomas M. Tarpley in appreciation for his service as President of AUSA.

931st becomes 36th

The 931st Engr. 6 Plt. (CBT) will inactivate today at 11:25 a.m. and the 36th Engr. 6 Plt. (CBT) will be activated in a ceremony on Marne Field.

Col. James M. Thompson, the 931st Group Commander will become the Commander of the 36th Engineer Group as it is activated.

The major reason for the inactivation of one and activation of the other unit is that "The Army is making an effort to keep the more illustrious and older units active," according to Col. Thompson.

The ceremony will be attended by a number of distinguished guests. Among those attending will be Col. Jack Cox, the last Commander of the 36th in Korea.

Also attending will be Maj. Gen. Thomas Tarpley, post commander and assistant school commandant Brig. Gen. W. Richardson.

Parade to start carnival

A parade on York Field at 11:45 a.m. will start the 4th of July festivities off with a bang. Two marching platoons and a color guard, carrying the brigade colors, from the 51st OCS Company will represent The School Brigade in the parade.

After the parade, the action will shift to Eubanks and entertainment will be provided. The ticket booths for all concessions will be manned by OCS Candidates from the 53rd Co., TSB.

A raffle will be held in the afternoon. Major Frank C. Willoughby from the 4th Stu. Bn., TSB, is in charge of ticket sales for Fort Benning.

Among the prizes to be given away is a 1973 Mach I Mustang, two 125cc Kawasaki trail bikes, and a trip for two to Acapulco for 4 days and 3 nights. Fifteen prizes in all will be given away.

With all the food, rides, and entertainment offered, there will be something for everyone at Fort Benning's 4th of July Carnival.

51st OCs sponsor picnic

The Senior Candidates of the 51st OC Company, The School Brigade, sponsored a picnic for nineteen children from the Ann Elizabeth Shephard Home in Columbus, June 23.

The day started for the children at 9 a.m. in the Officer's Club Swimming Pool, with games like water keep away and horseback water fights.

The children left the pool at noon and proceeded in cars driven by the Candidates to the 197th picnic area on Kelley Hill, where games of softball, football and badminton were introduced to the children. When the games ended, the children were served a lunch of barbecued hamburgers and hotdogs, a salad, and plenty of sods.

To conclude the day, the candidates hung a pinata filled with candy from a tree limb. Each child took a turn at trying to break the pinata with a stick while blindfolded.

July 4

Holiday filled with distinction and celebrations

BY BILL SAMS

"—the embattled farmers stood,
And fired the shot heard round the world."

Even today, 196 years later, the echo of that defiant shot still rings out, symbolic of the freedom shared by all Americans.

July 4, 1776, is a day to be recognized by Americans from coast to coast and border to border. The chance for everyone to stand up and be counted, and to show his own individual patriotism and national pride in a country which has withstood many conflicts over the years, and has evolved triumphant over agressors who have threatened our freedom.

This day, set aside from all other American holidays of the year, is one filled with distinction and celebration, marking that faithful time in American history, in which brave American patriots took up arms against tryanny and injustice, and pursued the freedom to live in peace.

In Philadelphia, the Continental Congress met, and when the meeting was over, the final action had been taken, a document, declaring that this country be free from British rule, was set forth, and became known as the Declaration of Independence. The American colonists were no longer rebels against their country, but were a free people fighting for what they believe in and the right to live as they wished, without any outside interference.

Great leaders, then, lead the way for a new country's birth. Such as Thomas Jefferson, the man established ash eing responsible for the Declaration of Independence.

John Adams, another great statesman once wrote, "I am apt to believe that this day will be celebrated by succeeding generations as the great anniversary festival of this country."

Even at that time in history, it became evident that this day would continue to live in the hearts of the men everywhere.

Common men, born and raised to work the land and gain it's riches provided by this country's natural resources. Rich plantation owners, politicians and statesmen all joining in a common bond to represent the people as a free state.

Again, as in the past we will celebrate the holiday with parades, bands, flying flags and marching soldiers, all echoing the soundof tbe shot heard round the world.

A final word to all American citizens, Let freedom-ring, throughout the land and carry forth on this day once again the tradition of our ancestors who made it possible for us to live as free Americans.

Independence Day

". . . that all men are created equal . . . that they are endowed with certain rights."

Life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness, that's what July Fourth is all about. The fireworks . . . the parades . . . the speeches . . . and the prayers. They're all to remind us that our nation is based upon individual freedoms, thankfully cultivated, cherished . . . and very carefully guarded. It's time once again to pledge ourselves to protect our God-given rights with our lives, our fortunes, and our sacred honor.

CONCEPT OF ORGANIZATION

FORSCOM activates July 1

Headquarters, USARMY Forces Command, Ft. McPherson, Ga., (FORSCOM) will be activated on July 1, 1973, and commemorated by a special activation and assumption of command military review on Hedekin Field, Ft. McPherson, at 2 p.m., July 2.

The honorable Howard H. (Bo) Callaway, Secretary of the Army and Gen. Creighton W. Abrams, US Army Chief of Staff will be co-host for the ceremony. Guest of honor will be Gen. Walter T. Kerwin Jr., Command USARMY forces Command, who will receive the Command Colors from Bo Callaway during the review.

Reorganization

Benning to undergo several alterations

The new fiscal year marks the beginning of a massive change in Army reorganization. Terms like CONARC (Continental Army Command) and TUSA (Third U. S. Army) will be replaced with words like TRADOC and FORSCOM.

Fort Benning will not endure any massive changes as will several other installations, but it will undergo several important alterations that promise to modernize, reorient and streamline Fort Benning's work style.

DIRECT REPORTING

Probably the most dynamic change will be that the Commander of Fort Benning will report directly to TRADOC (Training and Doctrine Command) instead of TUSA. Contact with FORSCOM (Forces Command) will be through management of STRAF units on post such as the 197th Infantry Brigade and the 931st Engineer Group (Combat.)

MEDDAC will come under Health Services Command. It will be redesignated as a tenant unit, but the commander will continue to serve a dual role as a member of the Commanding General's principal staff.

The 34th Medical Battalion will no longer be subordinate to MEDDAC. Rather, it will become a STRAF unit under the command and control of the installation commander. This means it will be a unit of equal prominence as the 197th or 931st.

In a move to keep the oldest units activated in the Army, the 931st Engineer Group (Combat) retires its colors on June 29. The group will be redesignated the 36th Engineer Group,(Combat) without effecting assigned or attached units.

STEADFAST

The overall project was dubbed "STEADFAST." This reorganization planning brought about additional changes within the Infantry School as well as those previously listed.

The responsibility for combat developments, formerly with CDCIA (Combat Developments Command Infantry Agency), now rests with the Infantry School. The School is now proponent for all combat Infantry doctrine.

The Infantry School retained a deputy assistant commandant for combat developments. His responsibilities are essentially long-range in such areas as material development and test and evaluation.

A new office entitled, Director of Doctrine and Training Development, will be established. It will concern itself with current doctrine, training doctrine and training management.

Current doctrine for such things as field manuals have been integrated into the instructional departments.

Two previous departments, Command Maintenance and Communications-Electronics, will be consolidated. The new department will be known as the Command Maintenance and Communications Department.

The priority of instruction has shifted from basically Vietnam orientation back to the more conventional threats.

There has also been a major shift in how to teach classes at the Infantry School. The emphasis has changed from small unit tactics to tecniques on how to train. The student then returns to a unit to teach other soldiers. There has also been a transition to get more instruction out of the classroom and into the field in form of practical exercises.

EARLIER CHANGES

"Reorganization will not occur overnight." Many changes began in the spring of this year. Others will occur near the end of the calendar year. Of course, this doesn't mean there will not be any changes after that point. The Infantry School will continue to alter its training and doctrine to continue making the American Infantryman the best in the world.

In March the Department of the Army announced changes in troop units at Fort Benning which became effective on March 21.

The 197th Infantry Brigade was reorganized as a division forces Strategic Army Forces (STRAF) brigade with the primary mission of attaining and maintaining a combat readiness condition. The Brigade had been a general support force with the primary mission of US Army Infantry School support.

To replace the Brigade as the major school support force, a separate table of distribution and allowances (TDA) composite support battalion was organized concurrently. The TDA unit was manned as the 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry. The table of organization and equipment (TOE) battalion with this title, now a part of the brigade, was inactivated and replaced by the 3rd Battalion, 7th Infantry.

Other units activated in the reorganized 197th Infantry Brigade were the 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor; Troop A, 15th Cavalry; 298th Signal Platoon and the 179th Military Intelligence Detachment. Old units remaining organic to the STRAF brigade were the 197th Support Battalion; 2nd Battalion, 10th Field Artillery; 1st Battalion, 58th Infantry and the 72nd Engineer Company.

PFC Randy Caouette reads the latest copy of PS Magazine, an official Army maintenance publication. The collection he stands in front of was put together by CW3 Dave Garnett and Capt. John Routen, motor officer of the 2nd Bn., 10th Field Arty, 197th Inf. Bde. The collection represents a complete set of PS Magazines from Number 1, Volume 1, to the present, a total of 247 books. The project of collecting the books "from various sources" took them several months to complete. (Photo by Bob Thomas)

Traffic deaths increase

Motor-vehicle travel and traffic deaths continued to increase in 1972. Preliminary reports from the National Safety Council indicate 1.25 billion miles were travelled in the United States alone, an increase of five per cent over 1971.

Partially because of the greater number of miles travelled, the actual number of accidental traffic deaths was three per cent higher in 1972 than in 1971. The number of deaths per 100 million miles driven, however, was 4.5, the lowest rate on record.

By age group, the greatest number of people killed in motor-vehicle accidents were between 15 and 24 years old. The fewest number of people killed were infants up to age 4 and those 75 and over.

By region, the mid-Atlantic states were the only ones to have a decrease in the number of deaths. All other regions had an increase in the number of deaths ranging from one-half of one per cent in New England to a whopping 13 per cent increase in the Mountain States.

The greatest increase of accidental vehicular death involved bicycle accidents in which 1,100 people were killed. The total represents an increase of 29 per cent over 1971.

But, though the numbers, categories, and interpretation always change, the total always gives the number "dead." That number, approximately 56,300 is the highest annual total in history.

Cigarettes blamed for fires

Approximately 4,030 cigarettes per person are smoked each year in the United States. To reach a total of 200,000 fires each year, only one out of every 3,000,000 smoked need start a fire accidentally.

One of the many causes of cigarette-initiated fires is the poorly designed ash tray. Many of the more "decorative" types have narrow edges on which a burning cigarette balances precariously. As the burning end is consumed it loses weight, and the heavier end tilts more and more away from the tray. Finally it falls out of the tray, and spends the rest of its life looking for something to ignite.

On the other hand, too many people fail to use the ash trays in their cars. The person who habitually throw lighted cigarettes out of the car window while driving on city streets will probably do the same when driving in a brush or forested area on a vacation.

Whitehead receives nation's 2nd highest award

Capt. John B. Whitehead III, Armor Team, Combat Arms, Training Board, was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross, the nation's second highest award, by Maj. Gen. James F. Hamlet, commanding general, Fort Carson, Colo., in a ceremony at York Field, June 18.

Whitehead, serving as a pilot of a light observation helicopter, displayed exceptional heroism while rescuing four South Vietnamese soldiers and three American advisors which were surrounded by enemy forces.

According to the citation, Whitehead received the award "for heroism while engaged in aerial flight in connection with military operations against a hostile force: Capt. Whitehead distinguished himself by exceptionally valorous actions while serving as pilot of a light observation helicopter which was part of a flight assigned the task of locating elements of a Viet Cong regiment which had ambushed a popular forces company in the vicinity of Long Thanh, Republic of Vietnam. As Capt. Whitehead began his reconnaissance, his aircraft was subjected to enemy automatic rifle and rocket fire. Capt. Whitehead maneuvered his aircraft through the hostile fire and marked the enemy positions with smoke grenades, for strikes by the cobra gunships. These strikes forced the enemy to retreat leaving behind their dead and wounded soldiers. Capt. Whitehead's actions were in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service and reflect great credit upon himself, his unit, and The United States Army."

In January, 1966, Capt. Whitehead graduated from Armor Officer Basic Course and in October of the same year entered service on active duty. He became platoon leader of the 187th Airmobile Company, Fort Benning, February, 1967, and graduated from the U.S. Army Aviation School in December of that year.

Whitehead was assigned to the Observation Helicopter Team in Vietnam from May 1968-69 and was also the company commander of the 132nd Armor Division from November 1969-70.

In September, 1971, he graduated from the Armor Officer Advanced Course, Fort Knox. Between December 1971-December 1972 he served as operations officer, A troop, 1st Aviation Battalion, Aeroscout Platoon Leader, D Troop, 228th AAB, 1st Cavalry Division, and Aeroscout Platoon Leader, F Troop, 9th Cavalry Division, Republic of Vietnam.

Among the awards Whitehead has received are the Distinguished Flying Cross, Bronze Star Air Medal with 31 Oak Leaf Clusters, Army Commendation Medal, First Oak Leaf Cluster with "V".

931st sign painters

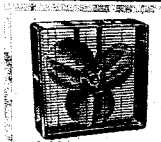
SSG Grant Williams and PFC Greg Wilson are taking part in the preparations of the redesignation of the 931st Engineer Group to 36th Engineer Group. Their job is to change all of the signs and paintings which have 931st Emblems on it.

SSG Williams and PFC Wilson are both artists and drafters from the group S3 office and they take pride in all the work that they do.

One of the jobs they have been working on is the 36th Engineer Lodge, located at Sand Hill. PFC Wilson painted a mural while SSG Williams redesigned the rest of the lodge. There are many signs around Sand Hill which will have to be repainted and the Group has definitely chosen the right people for the job.

First aid provided at carnival

The Medical Department Activity will provide three aid stations at the 4th of July Carnival. An aid station will be located at each end of the midway and one aid station will be on the 1st floor of Building 4, Classroom 59. There will be an ambulance at each aid station to transport patients to Martin Army Hospital if the need arises. These aid stations will be augmented by male and female personnel from Martin Army Hospital, 675th Med Det., 676th Med Det., 2d Evac Hsp, 546th MED Co. and 690th Ambulance Co.



The Preventive Medicine Division will inspect all food areas for sanitation.

A color guard will be provided for the opening ceremonies with the colors from MEDDAC and the 34th Med Bn.

Declaration was written by famous 'Committee'

In the upper room of a house at Seventh and Market Streets, Philadelphia, the famous "Committee of Five" gathered to mark a significant event — the writing of the Declaration of Independence.

Their different types of personalities was an interesting balance. Benjamin Franklin represented wisdom, experience and a man of many sides — printer, publisher, inventor, scientist, diplomat and public leader. He was universally honored and respected. As an advertiser, propagandist and humorist he was responsible for many firsts in America — the first organized fire department, water — tight compartments for ships, the first public library and more. At the time of this event he was 71 years old.

Thomas Jefferson, then 33 years old, was chosen by the Committee to do the actual work of drafting the Declaration. He was tall and slender, and a fanciful dresser. He entered public life a rich man and died poor. Besides being elected President, he was responsible for the Lewis and Clark Expedition, the suggestion for the dollar as the unit of our currency and the founding of the University of Virginia.

John Adams, 41 years old, was an earnest and eloquent advocate of the Declaration. He proposed George Washington as Commander-in Chief of the Army, and later became the second President.

Roger Sherman began life as a shoemaker, then studied law and rose to be judge of the highest court in Connecticut. He was thrifty, practical, keen and alert. He seldom spoke but when he did, he left a profound impression. Jefferson once said that Sherman never said a foolish thing in his life. He has the distinction of being the only man to have signed all the foremost important state papers of American history — the Articles of association of the First Continental Congress, the Declaration of Independence, the Articles of Confederation and the Constitution of the United States. At the time of the meeting of the Committee he was 55 years old.

Robert R. Livingston, at this time, was 29 years old, rich, well educated, very fastidious about his personal appearance and a man of great power and ability. He was Chancellor of New York and later became Minister to France, where he materially assisted in the negotiation that led to the Louisiana Purchase.

Aviation Carnival support

In addition to providing Aviation support for the Fort Benning Fourth of July Carnival, the men of the 145th Aviation Battalion will coordinate and operate festivities at Marshall Auditorium.

This includes the battle of the bands, the talent contest, and the beauty contest, as well as the carnival activities of the Fourth.

The Battalion will provide aircraft and crews for a 'Fly-By' demonstration. These units will also provide aircraft and crew members for a static display of military equipment.

A life saver

Mr. Kenneth Davidson of the Weapons Pool rescued Mr. Trinidad Villegas, Weapons Pool, after Villegas fell down a 30 ft. embankment into a swift flowing stream recently at Ochillee Creek, at the southwest section of the post.

The men had been fishing when Villegas fell. He tried to swim away from the water fall and then tried to climb up the embankment. He noticed his left foot was swollen and bleeding, and in shock lost some of his strength.

Davidson, a non-swimmer, threw down some rope and a small life preserver, which wasn't enough assistance. So he climbed down and grabbed Villegas by the belt while holding onto a tree branch. He called to a third man who went for help.

Villegas suffered a broken heel and is presently back at work.

Summer classes and activities are underway for the members of the Officer Wives' Club. You are invited to join the OWC in:

BRIDGE: Party Bridge is played every Wed. at 12:30 at the Country Club. The first Wed. of each month is novice duplicate. Call Mrs. John Hassig at 689-9765.

DUPLICATE BRIDGE is held on Thursday at 12:30 at the Country Club. If you are interested, please call Mrs. Serff at 689-6087.

OWC CHORAL GROUP meets on Tues. at 10 a.m. at the Infantry Center Chapel Annex. If you would like to raise your voice in song, call Sandy Burk at 545-1297.

BELOW-THE-BELT: Mrs. Norbet Otto will teach you how to sew men's slacks and Bermudas in only four lessons. The classes will be held on Tues. and Thurs. from 9:30-11:30 starting July 10. They will be held at the OWC Lounge and will cost $8. Call 545-1307 for more information.

MACRAME: You can learn decorative knotting from Mrs. James Miller. The four lessons and the supplies for learning the various knots are included in the cost of $10. Classes are held on Mon. at 9:30-11:30 beginning July 9, in the OWC Lounge. Mrs. Miller can be reached at 323-2505.

Of special interest are the following classes which are open to dependents of both officer and enlisted personnel:

TEEN SEWING classes will be held on Wed. from 9:30-11:30 at the OWC Lounge starting July 25. The six lessons at a cost of $12 will be limited to 12 lucky teens, so you better not put off calling Nancy Billings at 687-9600.

TYPING FOR TEENS AND ADULTS: Themes and reports go faster and are easier to read if they are typed. Learn from Mrs. David Frank in two weeks for $12.50. Classes begin July 16 from 9:30-11:30. Call 689-4929.

MACRAME FOR TEENS: See the information listed above for Macrame and call Mrs. Miller at 323-2505.

GARBAGE ART FOR KIDS 8-12: You will be able to finish two entire projects in only three classes and all you need to bring is interest, imagination and scissors. The classes, which cost only $5, will be held July 9, 11, and 13 at the OWC Lounge from 1-3. They will be limited to 16 kids, so hurry and call Mrs. Dane Maddox at 545-2725 or Mrs. Hugh Socks at 545-3729.

BATON TWIRLING: Classes begin Wed., July 11, for children 7 years of age and up. Mrs. Jerry Hines will teach Beginners' classes at 9:30-10:15, Intermediates at 10:15-11:00 and Advanced Students from 1:00-11:45. The cost of the lessons is $12.50 for the seven weeks of classes, which will be held at the School of Dance. If you are interested, please call Mrs. Hines at 687-1403 for more information.

INSTRUCTORS NEEDED

OWC needs instructors for summer classes in Childrens' Art and in Charm and Modeling. Please call 545-2725 or 545-5785 if you would like to teach either of these classes. Or if you have a talent or craft you would like to share, call the above numbers and maybe we can set up classes for you to teach in the fall.

This weeks recipe is from the Desert Section of the "Golden Heritage Cookbook."

LEMON ICE CREAM
(in ice cream freezer)
Submitted by:
Mrs. Donald C. Bowman (Cynthia)

2 quarts half and half (or all cream, if desired)
3 cups sugar
6 large lemons

Thinly slice 2 lemons; squeeze the juice from 4 lemons, combine lemon slices and juice with sugar. Let stand 2 hours in refrigerator. Prepare ice cream container with ice and salt. Chill the cream in the freezer can; add lemon slices, lemon juice and sugar mixture and turn til you can feel the pressure of hardened ice cream. In electric freezer the motor will begin to slow down—about 30 minutes. Remove dasher and pack more ice and salt around ice cream and let ripen for about 1 hour. Pack in plastic freezer containers and freeze.

"GARDEN PARTY"

The wives of the 931st Engineer Group met recently for a "garden party" at the Engineer Lodge. Hostesses for the coffee were Mrs. James Wigglesworth and Mrs. Bill Girtman.

They had made the decorations of bright crepepaper flowers which brightened tables of handmade crafts and needlework. Attention was drawn to the refreshment table which had a flower garden complete with picket fence alongside the apple punch, melon basket and cupcake flower pots.

Neacomers to the group, Mrs. Alonzo Method and Mrs. Den Morrison were introduced by Mrs. James Thompson.

During a short business meeting which followed it was announced that a mid summer coffee would be held at the Army Community Service Building. Also the ladies decided to take a tour of the beautiful historic homes in Columbus later in the summer.

It was announced that Mrs. Jim Powers, one of the Group's hardest and most enthusiastic workers would be leaving next month with her husband for their new assignment in Germany. Mrs. James Thompson presented her with a book signed by the ladies of the group and a rose. A toast was then made to Mrs. Powers, followed by one to all the ladies of the 931st.

The ladies were then invited to enjoy the cool refreshments and browse around the tables of handicrafts.

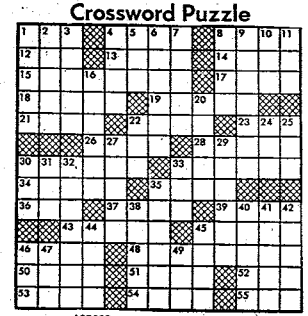
NOW convention held in Atlanta

Several Fort Benning woman, including military wives and members of the Army Nurse Corps, leave today, for the Southern Regional Convention of the National Organization for Women.

Among them are Mrs. Susan Socks, Mrs. Susan Acker, Mrs. Betty Hart, Susanne Bostick and Lt. Col. Sally M. Stallard and Lt. Col. Louise J. Vandever of Martin Army Hospital.

The convention is being held in Atlanta tomorrow and Sunday. It will be attended by men and women from an area covering the state of Texas to Washington, D. C.

Founded by Betty Friedan, NOW is one of the oldest and largest women's organizations in the United States. It has worked through education and the political system to achieve equal pay and job opportunity for those women who want them.



Men and women in the Columbus-Fort Benning-Phenix City area who are interested in convening a local chapter of NOW are invited to attend an organizational meeting July 2.

The meeting is being held at the Gas Light Company of Columbus, 1421 4th Avenue, at 7:30 p.m. All military and civilian personnel interested in joining NOW are welcome.

Lander, Operations and Training Techniques Committee; Maj. and Mrs. Joseph C. Liberti, Intelligence Committee; and Maj. and Mrs. Dennis J. Pounder Jr., Logistics Committe.

July 1-7 is Boating Safety Week

As more and more Americans in all parts of our Nation turn to boating as a leisure time activity, we need to give increasing attention to the safety requirements of millions who participate in this healthy challenging outdoor sport.

The week of July 1-7 has been proclaimed National Safe Boating Week by President Richard Nixon. He urges everyone to further his knowledge of boating by taking advantage of literature and safety courses offered by governmental and private organizations. The novice and the occasional boatman, who operates a small boat on only a few weekends of the year, should consider his own and his family's safety and be prepared for the unexpected by taking advantage of the sound safety procedures this literature and instruction offers.

Safety books pertaining to canoeing, boating and sailing may be obtained at the Muscogee County chapter of the American Red Cross in Columbus, while the Coast Guard Auxiliary gives safety motor boat inspections that are recognized by state and federal agencies. If your boat passes the inspection you will receive a decal. The Muscogee Power Squadron also offers boating courses in safety and boating education twice yearly.

Project Transition

A Radio and TV Repair Class is being offered by Project Transition beginning July 9 through August 17. It is an open ended class and students can be accepted at any time for a 6 weeks period of training. Any interested personnel who are within 6 months of their ETS or retirement date should contact Project Transition at 545-2178 or come by Bldg. 35, Room 241.

Junior NCO Housing

298 family housing units now specified for living quarters for senior NCO's (E-9, E-8, E-7) have been redisignated for living quarters for junior NCO's (E-6, E-5, E-4). These units are located in the Main Post and Custer Road areas. The present occupants already residing in these areas will not be required to move. Changes in occupancy will be accomplished gradually.

AUSA Membership Dues

A scheduled increase in AUSA membership dues will be postponed temporarily because of Prsident Nixon's 60-day price freeze. The dues were scheduled to go up to $10.00 for a one-year membership and $26.00 for a three year membership starting July 1. They will remain at the present cost of $7.50 for one year and $20.00 for three years until further notice.

Selling Gas

Gasoline sold at Exchange Service Stations is sold solely for private, non-commercial use of authorized customers. It cannot be used in the pursuit of a business for production of income and will not be dispensed in any customer's vehicle displaying signs advertising a commercial business.

Commanders Conference Note

Recent project transition training abuses indicate a requirement to re-emphasize the procedures required to preclude program training inadequacies and to assure proper administration consistent with allocated resources.

All separating or retiring military personnel are eligible to participate in transition training during the last six months of active duty except reservists serving six months active duty for training and personnel to be separated for disciplinary reasons with other than an honorable discharge. Prior to the start of any individual in a transition training program, his need will be determined in consultation with a transition counselor who will prepare written recommendations for the most appropriate training program (s) for the individual and certify in writing the need for training. The request must then be approved by the appropriate commander. Disapproval authority remains the perogative of field grade or comparable level commanders. Additionally, all requests for transition training by officers in the grades of 05 and 06 must be approved by the commander, USAIC.

When the need for training is equal, transition training will be offered in priority order as specified in paragraph 35, Change 9, AR 621-5. Commanders approving training requests must use utmost discretion to insure that higher rank does not preempt greater need.

988th MPs add dog

The white-hatted protectors at Fort Benning have done it again. They have added a new staff member to help fight crime.

Smokey is his name and he is a patrol dog; the only kind here.

"Smokey is a seven year old ex sentry dog, obeys only my orders and is trained for tracking, on and off leash attacks, and building searches," said his handler, Spt Bobby Hayes, 988th Military Police Detachment.

The main job of a patrol dog is to aid commanders in security and aiding handlers in apprehension of felonies.

Hayes and Smokey went to Lackland Air Force Base Texas where they went through 12 weeks of training.

"We went through a lot of physical training but it was worth it. We were honor graduates."

"The main thing they stressed during training was attacking and building searches."

The two have been here since April and their job is patroling housing areas, PX's and commissaries.

145th Avn. Bn. mess receives excellent rating

"Just great. It's the most beautiful thing I've ever seen," said SFC James D. Lee, 145th Aviation Battalion Mess Steward, as he accepted the Fort Benning award for Excellence in Food Service from Col. Bruce H. Fraser, assistant post commander.

The trophy, presented each month to the outstanding dining facility, is awarded on the basis of food quality and quantity, sanitation, storage facilities, decor, personal hygiene, administration, and command interest. Judging is by a team of experts who constantly evaluate each Mess facility on post.

The trophy was presented during ceremonies at the 14th Aviation Battalion dining facility, and is now on display at the entrance to the facility. Mess personnel are justifiably proud of their accomplishment. In the words of Sp5 Charles L. Wooten, "We worked hard for it. From now on we're going to take it every month."

Swim test

Only the strong survive rugged training

By Gary Cathcart

The soldiers of HHC, 931st Engineer Group (Combat), were given a "Swim Test." The purpose of the test was to weed out the soldiers of HHC and determine who were the "strong, weak, and non-swimmers in the company."

The test was also excellent practice for all soldiers in case they ever encountered the situation in a combat zone," stated Capt. Mike Nelson, Commander of HHC.

In order to pass the test each soldier had to accomplish four tasks: swimming free style for 20 meters, swimming underwater for 10 meters, recovering the M-16 from the bottom of 11 feet of water, and jumping off the high dive to tread water for two minutes. The uniform worn for all events was the fatigues, with field gear, and the M-16 Rifle, which was carried in any position the individual desired. The test was given at the Sand Hill NCO Club Swimming Pool.

In case of any emergencies that might have happened, plans were made to call the Medivac helicopter by the PRC-77 (a portable two-way radio) that was on hand. Smoke grenades were also available to aid the helicopter in spotting the location of the emergency. Fortunately, there were no major emergencies, but lifeguards were on hand to tackle the minor problems which did exist, such as a few people who were out of shape and over-extended themselves.

The test was divided between the company so that half of the men would take it this week and the remainder of the company would complete it next week, on the 15th of June.

Col. James M. Thompson, commander of the 931st, stated that the exercise was "really great training for all concerned." Col Thompson was the first person in line for each event and passed each one with flying colors.

1Sgt. Edward Grerr, of HHC, stated that "training such as this should be a part of our regular unit training."

Many of the men of HHC really enjoyed the test and felt that training like this would actually benefit someone in a real situation. PV2 Charles Brickman stated "that a couple of the events that looked pretty easy, turned out to be much more difficult than I thought they would be. If a person thinks he's in good shape, this swimming test is one way to find out for sure!"

Clubs relocated with new times

The NCO Club Annexes have been relocated and new operating hours have been posted, to provide better service and quality.

Sponsors Independence Day Carnival

This years Independence day carnival is being sponsored by the 931st Engineer Group and they are going all out to insure its' success.

The project officer for the carnival is Maj. Allan Matthews and his assistants are Capt. James Wigglesworth and SFC Larry Craig. According to SFC Craig "it has been a great challenge coordinating all facets of the carnival."

The 931st will have a static display at the carnival with the 43rd Engineers displaying a water purification set and a 12 ton crawler mounted crane with shovel. The 586th Float Bridge company will display a bridge erection boat, a 50 foot section of floating foot bridge and a 15 ft. dry span bridge.

The 43rd Engineer Bn. has done the major share of the work for this years carnival. The 43rd has built 53 booths in all with 30 game booths and 23 concession stands. These structures range from 6-12 ft to 24-36 ft.

The 43rd is not only responsible for erection of the booths but for all games which the carnival will have. They have been fixing up and testing everything to make sure it is all in proper working order.

After they transport everything to the midway the 43rd will have three men operating each game booth. They will also be in charge of keeping the area clean. To help accomplish this they have painted 100 trash drums which they will place throughout the carnival area.

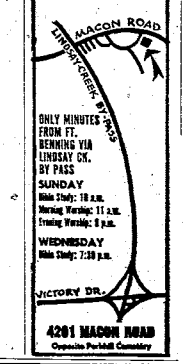
Finally when the carnival is over the 43rd has the thankless task of disassembling everything and then cleaning the whole area.

According to Capt. Donald F. McCullough, the officer in charge of the carnival for the 43rd, "the individual soldiers have put forth an extra effort to insure the carnivals' success. We started work on the project in the middle of May and the men from all our companies have done an excellent job. They have put in a lot of extra time on details to make sure everything goes smoothly.

We have had very effective coordination from everyone in completing our job, not just the 43rd but every unit on post who has anything to do with the carnival.

A lot of effort has been put in attractively decorating the midway this year to attract more off post personnel."

There will be fun for everyone, with a new Ford Mach I as the grand prize.



There will also be two motorcycles given away and two color TV's. For those who are not lucky enough to win one of the grand prizes there will be over $2700 dollars worth of stuffed animals and other goodies which you might win at one of the game booths.

There will be a talent contest, a battle of the hands and also a beauty contest at this year's carnival.

It all begins at 11:45 a.m. at York Field, on the 4th of July, with a parade and the opening ceremonies. The midway will open at 12:15 p.m. and remain open until 7:30 p.m.

There will be something for everyone so come on out and have a good time.

Motorcycle fatalities increasing

In recent years we have seen a tremendous increase in the number of motorcycles on the nation's highways. (For this discussion, the term motorcycle will be used to represent all two-wheeled motorized vehicles.) Between 1960 and 1971 the number of these types of vehicles increased from 575,497 to 3,238,400.

During the five-year period, 1961 to 1966, there was a steady increase in fatalities involving motorcycles, with over 2,000 persons killed in 1966. The years 1967 through 1969 saw a slight decrease from the 2,080 figure, however in both 1970 and 1971 fatalities again surpassed the 2,080 mark. In 1971 more than 2,400 persons were killed in motorcycle accidents—the highest total yet recorded.

Whenever a motorcycle is ridden for pleasure, or as a means of economical transportation, it is essential that the operator has adequate initial instruction and training. Therefore, it is imperative that good habits be formed in the initial stages of motorcycle riding.

Although motorcycles are relatively easy to ride, the operation involves different skills from those needed to drive an automobile. The motorcyclist assumes more responsibility than an automobile driver because the motorcycle has two characteristics that make the rider extremely vulnerable; motorcycles are small and difficult for a motorist to see; a motorcycle offers no structural protection in a collision.

The following is a list of basic "musts" for safe motorcycling:

a. Several states require periodic safety inspections of motorcycles; be certain you know your state's laws regarding inspection.

b. Correct clothing for cyclists to wear includes a helmet, eye protection, sturdy shoes, and substantial clothing, preferably light in color at night.

c. Beware of road hazards for cyclists—potholes, gravel, mud, stones, manhole covers, oil, ice, and railroad tracks.

d. Find your lane and stay in it—stay to the left of your lane except when turning right.

e. Keep your distance—allow yourself maneuvering room to steer and brake safely.

f. Pass with caution—signal, pass with moderate speed, wait until you can see passed vehicle in your rear-view mirror, or check over shoulder before you cut back.

g. Follow maintenance instructions in the manufacturer's operating manual.

h. Make periodic safety inspections a matter of routine. Check tires for proper inflation and damage. Check to see that all controls and the lighting system are properly functioning. Make certain headlights and taillight lenses are clean.

i. Look out for vehicles making left turns without warning.

j. Think ahead—reduce speed before reaching such trouble spots as traffic signals, intersections, and repair zones.

WHO WHAT WHERE

BY JUDY JAKUBOWSKI
197th INF. BDE.
3d Bn. 7th Inf.

The ladies of the 3d Bn. 7th Inf. enjoyed a most pleasant day as they toured Historic Columbus as part of the Heritage Tour on June 13. They departed the Ga. Welcome Center on Victory Drive at 10 a.m. and returned at 1 p.m. and proceeded on to the Goetchius House for lunch. Mrs. William B. Steele, wife of Col. Steele, the Commanding Officer of the 197th Inf. Bde., joined the ladies for the luncheon. Mrs. Tom Curtin and Mrs. David New were welcomed to the Bn.

The next coffee for the Bn. ladies will be on July 19 at 1 p.m. at the Main Officer's Club, and the ladies are requested to bring nonperishable food items for stocking the ACS Emergency Food Locker to the office.

The Officers and families of the 3d Bn., 7th Inf. had a million laughs as they enjoyed themselves at Skateland in downtown Columbus on June 18. The young and the not-so - young all had a great evening as they skated to their hearts' content. It was a different and fun outing for the Bn., and many were heard to say "Let's do it again sometime."

BBOD

Staff Group, BBOD wives met at the home of Mrs. Eugene Lednicky for a cheese and wine-tasting event, June 7.

Guests attending the evening gathering were Mrs. Allen M. Buckner, Mrs. Hal G. Mann, and Mrs. Edward Lednicky, mother of Maj. Eugene Lednicky.

Farewells were extended and "follow-me" charms were presented to Mrs. Jame Yelton, Mrs. Curtis Landers, Mrs. Tom Pansing, Mrs. Edward Cramer and Mrs. Peter Turner.

Welcomes were extended to Mrs. James Norton, Mrs. Joseph LiBerti, Dennis Pounder, William Holston, and Michael Kosolapoff.

Mrs. Lednicky will be leaving Staff Group wives to join Tactics Group wives. Mrs. Robert B. Lander will be joining Operations Committee wives.

Assisting Mrs. Lednicky as hostesses for the evening were Mrs. Gluck, Mrs. Pansing, Mrs. Ronald Crosby and whrs. Brian Yeager.

Don't become holiday stats

The month of June has been a tragic month for deaths of Fort Benning personnel.

Four persons were killed in privately owned vehicles, (POV) and one drowned in a nearby lake.

Statistics for Fiscal Year 73 revealed that 21 Fort Benning soldiers have been killed in accidents. An additional 17 soldiers were killed in POV accidents in FY 72.

The Fourth of July Holiday coming up will result in many persons from post departing for recreation purposes.

Many drivers will be on the highways headed for the beach or the mountains. Be careful. Use your head. If you are driving, plan your trip so you won't feel the need to rush. Get a good night's rest and do your driving during the safer hours, that is, when there is daylight. Make sure you and all your passengers buckle up.

Coming to the screen

Lady Sings The Blues

Billie Holiday (Diana Ross), who died at the age of 24, was one of the best blues singers America ever produced. Her problems were the same as the young and old of today: alcoholism, immoral sex, drug abuse, and the on-going trials of life itself.

Diana Ross captures the Billie Holiday mood in the title role and was nominated for Academy Award — 'Best Actress' — for her performance.

Fear Is The Key

Barry Newman is part owner of a small freight airlines whose wife and son are killed when the plane they're in is mysteriously shot down. Discovering that the plane was also carrying about $8 million in currency, Newman spends the next four years becoming a technical expert in the operation of underwater equipment so that he can operate a stolen bathyscaphe and recover the money from the downed plane and exact his revenge on the thieves.

Army's largest command being disestablished

FT. MONROE, Va.—The Continental Army Command is now in the process of taking its place in Army history.

The Army's largest command, which came into being in 1955, two years after the signing of the Korean Armistice, is being disestablished. Its passing is part of the Army's reorganization designed to modernize, reorient, and streamline the Army within the Continental United States.

CONARC's more than 18 years of Army service will not officially came to a close until December 31. However, Forces Command (FORSCOM) and the Training and Doctrine Command (TRADOC) which were created as part of the reorganization are in the process of taking over COMARC's mission.

FORSCOM will be activated July 1 in the former Third Army facilities at Fort McPherson, Ga. It is a single field headquarters which will supervise the unit training and combat readiness of all Army units, to include the Army Reserves and Army National Guard.

TRADOC will be headquartered at Fort Monroe. It will assume that portion of CONARC's mission relating to direction of all Army individual training. In addition, it assumes the mission of developing new organization and doctrinal concepts to meet the demands of modern warfare formerly assigned to the Combat Development Command, also disestablished as part of the reorganization.

During CONARC's short history it faced many dramatic challenges. They include the 1962 Cuban Crisis, the 1965 crisis in the Dominican Republic and training of troops for Southeast Asia. Although each of these challenges placed great demands on CONARC, they were solved in a manner which reflected great credit on the entire Army.

CONARC was charged with the general direction, supervision, co-ordination, and inspection of all matters pertaining to development of tactics, techniques, organization, doctrine, and material for use by the Army in the field. In addition, it was completely responsible for the training and training inspection of the Army in the field within the Continental United States.

As a result of the Theater Army Concept adopted by the Department of the Army by 1957, CONARC's role increased. This concept assigned to a major Army commander the control over all resources required to exercise effectively his command responsibility. Under this concept, authority of the commanding General, CONARC, was expanded to include direction and control over the personnel, intelligence, logistics, comptroller, and administrative activities of his command.

A major expansion of CONARC's role in the Army School System took place in July 1962.

Open House set for retirees

Retired Army personnel and their dependents are invited to the 1973 Retired Army Open House to be held here July 4.

This is in conjunction with this years Independence Day celebration being held at York Field.

Retired personnel may sign guest registers at the Main Officers Club or the Senior Noncommissioned Officers Club. The club personnel will have directions for all post facilities and the carnival.

Another register wil be available in the Retirement Services Center, Classroom 57, Infantry Hall.

The Center will provide individual personalized counseling on veterans administration affairs, social security administration affairs, Army retirement services, the new survivor benefit and CHAMPUS.

This Center will be open from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. and is sponsored by the Adjutant General's office.

Retirees and their families are also invited to attend the Independence Day Carnival July 4. The celebration will be held in front of Infantry Hall beginning at 11:45 a.m.

Included in the festivities will be a battle of the bands contest, beauty contest, talent contest, game booths and food concession on the midway.

"$8,000 helped."

Sergeant Roy Smith was going for more than the bonus when he reenlisted.

"The $8,000 helped. But part of my reason for staying in the Army is I can get the rest of my college credits for a degree. I've got 2 years in already.

"I enjoy the job I'm doing now as a drill sergeant. But I'd also like to try military intelligence. And eventually get to go to OCS.

"It's all there. It's completely up to me and my qualifications for it."

Sergeant Smith views the Army as one big opportunity for a guy who wants to get ahead.

There are job and educational opportunities. In advanced electronics. Cryptography. Foreign languages. Data processing. Communications. Traffic analysis. And lots more.

And travel opportunities. In Europe. Korea. Hawaii. Alaska. Panama. And the time to enjoy it. To live it. In a way no tourist ever could.

And the opportunity to save money on all the everyday things.

Like free housing. Free dental and medical care. Commissary and post exchange privileges. Low-cost life insurance.

It's all here. It's up to you.

Your Army Career Counselor has a whole book of job, duty station and training opportunities just waiting for you. He'll give you lots of reasons for staying in.

525th wins scoring duel

In a high tension game last Thursday night the 524th Personnel Service Company managed to defeat the HHD 67th Maint. Bn. in the 931st slow pitch softball league with a close score of 12-10.

Batting first was the 524th PSC who started off with two runs in the first inning. All hope seemed lost though for the 524th when HHD came back at the bottom of the first and knocked in six runs. Sgt. Thomas Hinton of HHD slammed a two run homer to contribute to three of the six runs for HHD in the first inning.

In the third inning the 524th came through with five runs to put the score at 8-6 plus a little excitement back into the game. With the seventh inning came two runs for the 524th giving them their total of twelve.

Tension built as HHD came up for their last crack at the bat with the score 12-9. HHD came through three runs short which left the final score 12-10 and the 524th victorious once again.

Operation Beach Duty: Eastern vacations as incredible as the airfares that get you there.

Everyone knows servicemen get to fly cheaper than civilians. But now, Eastern can help you get some pretty incredible discounts at dozens of hotels throughout Florida, the Caribbean and Mexico. Vacations like these:

The Caribbean Beach Club in San Juan for $8 per day.

Swim and fish in crystal clear waters. Relax on beautiful white beaches. And in the evening, Puerto Rico's famous casinos and exciting night clubs are waiting for you.

One way reserved military air fare from Washington/Baltimore to San Juan runs you $43.50 plus security charges and you don't have to wear a uniform.

The Jolly Roger in Ft. Lauderdale for $8 per day.

You can cruise the canals of the Florida Gold Coast Capital. Or play a set of tennis on one of Fort Lauderdale's many courts. Or simply watch the whole thing from the rooftop lounge of the Jolly Roger.

One way reserved military air fare from Atlanta is $35, plus security charges.

The Fontainebleau at Walt Disney World for $8 per day.

Take a friend or your family to Walt Disney World just outside of Orlando, Florida. Explore the Magic Kingdom, a new world of fun and excitement.

One way military reserved coach from Washington/Baltimore is only $46 plus security charges.

Hotel prices above are for one person sharing a room with someone else. They're good until December 15, 1973. Meals or local taxes not included.

Military fares are good anywhere in the U.S. and any time except from 2 p.m. to midnight on Fridays and Sundays.

If you have any questions, call your SATO office or Eastern. Or you can mail us the coupon and we'll send you a free brochure on these and many other vacations we have.

Soldiers dominate Bi-City Tourney

Three Fort Benning golfers swept first through third places to dominate the 1973 Bi-City tournament held at the Bull Creek Golf Course, Columbus.

Spec. 5 John Sale dodged all the sand and water, hit almost all greens and putted well enough to win the tournament with a score of 72-73—145.

Sale, a 26 year-old pharmacist at Fort Benning, won by a single stroke over Ozzie Melendez after trailing Melendez and Tom Anton by one shot after the first 18 holes. Melendez finished second with Anton taking third.

Melendez works in the special services office at Fort Benning and Anton is the post junior champion.

Terry Anton, twin brother of Tom, never able to recover from a horrendous triple bogey eight at No. 12, finished in a tie for fourth with Jackie Copelan.

Sale was a surprise winner, since he qualified with a 78 which didn't raise any eyebrows. "I was playing conservatively when I qualified," he said, explaining the 78. "And I as carrying my own bag and got kind of tired."

I thought I had a good chance to win it," Sale said. "I've been playing well the last couple of weeks."

He knew he had to avoid the sand to win, and he landed in it only once during the tournament. That was Sunday at the fourth hole. But he blasted out and sank a 25-foot putt to save par.

"I hit 16 greens," Sale said, describing his play Sunday. "I as hitting the ball good. I didn't make too many putts, but a lot of them were close. I missed some three-and-four-footers I usually make.

Sale parred the first six holes before taking a bogey on No. 7, when he three-putted from 25 feet. But he came back even at No. 10, hitting a wedge 45 yards to within four feet of the pin and dropping the birdie putt.

He also birdied No. 14 with a seven-foot putt. But at the 15th, Sale said he took his "only bad shot of the day. I hooked my tee shot into the rough and bogeyed when I missed a five-foot putt".

Sale bogeyed the next hole also, but he came up with pars when he needed them on 17 and 18.

Giants shutout Braves in dependent action

Orlando Font, Jackie Pomeroy and Lester Brown drove in a combined total of seven runs leading the Giants to a smashing 10-0 victory over the Braves in dependent Major League baseball action on post.

The Giants, after losing their first game with the Braves, 23-5, came back and ripped 18 hits, nine of them doubles, off of four Brave pitchers.

The game was scoreless until the top of the third when Osvaldo Font started things going with a single. After oneout Orlando Font and Brown both hit doubles. Bobby Williams flied out and with two outs Greg White smacked another double to make the score 3-0.

The Braves were easily held scoreless in their half of the inning by the excellen pitching of Orlando Font.

With two outs in the Giant's fourth, Jones, Orlando Font, Brown and Williams each hit a double to boost the score to 6-0.

Four runs were added in the top of the sixth with Orlando Font's third double, Brown's single, Larry Phelps' and Pomeroy's doubles.

Orlando Font gave up all four Brave hits while fanning seven batters.

Brave hits came from Jim Anderson, Darryl Thomas and Jay Mercer.

In other Major League action, the Phillies nipped the Cardinals 8-7, the Dodgers edged the Redsox 4-3 and 8-7. The Cards came back and ripped the Indians 11-8.

ROD AND GUN CLUB Notes

BY JOHN GAUSE

I have no idea how effective Fort Benning's Bass Anglers Sportsman Society is as a fish-catching group. But they have convinced sports writers like Bill Kloeb (who usually writes this column) that he had best be careful of his facts in future articles about bass fishing. Bill says these guys are experts, and he will, he says, check his facts on all future "how to" stories about catching bass.

Unfortunately, he didn't have time to check out this week's column, so he asked me to help out. I'm happy, of course, to get Bill off the hook. After all, I'm considered a local expert by Winky (12) and Kenneth Gause (10). I've also fished with Lon Marlowe, Chick Haley, and Tom Mann. And finally, I don't pretend to disguise the pronouncation of the "a" in Crappie.

With this said, I intend to tell those interested "how to" catch bass using my method, trolling. This wouldn't interest the tournament guys, but for the weekend angler it's a pretty reliable way to catch "something," and that includes bass.

Trolling speeds

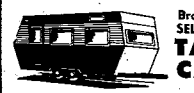
Trolling speed is important. The slower the better is a good general rule. I use a 12-foot Sears with an electric motor when it's convenient to drive to a bank and put in. I also use a 14-foot aluminum boat with a 10-horse Johnson with some success. The larger rig is more comfortable. The smaller rig is more productive, provided some impatient "expert" doesn't swamp me in his Bomber. Thus my rationale for saying the slower the better for productive trolling. I don't troll with an electric motor on the 14-footer. That's too slow. I use the smaller boat for Uchee and Clear Creek (Ihagee), and lakes. I've also met with some success around the points at River Bend and near the sawdust pile. I use the larger boat in the impoundments above Columbus and in Lake Eufaula.

What about bait? If I had to fish for food for the rest of my life and could choose only one bait, it would have to be a Rapalla. And the smaller the better. (Remember, I'm trolling, so weight doesn't matter.) It's effective for bass, crappie and white bass. I start with the Rapalla, then I go deeper with a Rebel. If this doesn't produce, I add a couple of splitshot about 12-inches up the line. When this arrangement fails, I go to the Hellbender as a last resort. Personally, I don't like these deeper bait because they rarely catch anything but bass. And I like to pick up a few crappie or stripers while bass are making up their minds.

If at first...

Not unlike many fishermen, I change baits until I'm satisfied all options have been offered to whatever fish may lurk underneath. But about the only exception to those bait I've named is some sort of spinner. Mepps are extremely effective when fish go for spinning noises. Again, the smaller the better. All right, you say. What about the bigger-the-bait-the-bigger-the-fish argument? To that one I say the smaller bait does not diminish your chances for larger fish, but increases your chances for the smaller variety. Larger baits do not increase your chances, but do virtually eliminate the little guys. Lunkers do take smaller bait. And they take it trolling.

Trolling has several obvious advantages over casting. It's less tiring; it's much more comfortable on a hot day. It enables you to cover a larger area. Within reason, almost any size rod and weight line can be used. However, if you're using small bait, use the smallest swivel your line will accommodate. The greatest advantage, however, is trolling frees your hands to (1) clean fish while riding; (2) drink beer; and (3) plot hot spots during BASS tourneys.



So there, you members of BASS. And quit intimidating Bill Kloeb.

Was he safe or out? HHC, 197th catcher Spc Tracy Sweeney made this successful home plate defense against a would-be run for C Batt., 2nd Bn., 10th Field Arty. (Photo by Bob Thomas)....

Eight state swim records broken at meet

Eight state records were broken at Fort Benning during the weekend in the Junior Olympic Swimming Championships.

Steve Lundquist of the Forest Park Swim Association broke the 100-meter breaststroke record with a 1:23.1 and also established a new 100 butterfly mark of 1:09.6. Both records came in the 11-12 age group as Lundquist won two other events.

Kyle Miller, swimming unattached, broke the 13-14 state record in the 1500 free-style with a 18:35.4

Martha Gray of the Atlanta Swim Association won five events and broke the state mark in the 15-17 100 breaststroke with a 1:25.6.

One of her teammates, Tom Jacobson broke the 15-17 200 individual medley mark with a 2:21.2 and won two other events.

Mike McArdle of the Windsor Park Swim Team took individual honors with five events won and three state records set.

His records came in the 15-17 age group. They were: 400 freestyle, 4:28.9; 200 freestyle, 2:06.1, and 1500 freestyle, 18:11.2.

He also won the 100 breaststroke and the 100 freestyle.

Some 289 swimmers competed in the meet with the top six finishers in each event qualifying for the regionals at Decatur, Ala., in July.

Winners from the Fort Benning Barracudas that will advance to the regionals at Decatur, Ala., were: Jonathan Warren taking a fourth in the 100 meter freestyle, sixth in the 200 meter backstroke, 400 meter freestyle and 400 meter individual medley; Paul Borden finished second in the 200 meter breaststroke and third in the 100 meter breaststroke and John Misiak took a sixth in the 100 Meter freestyle.

Free swimming lessons

The Federal Government is funding a program this summer (1973) to teach as many disadvantaged children as possible to swim. This program is for non-swimmers between the ages of eight and fourteen years old. We urge parents to help us get their children to the pools for these free lessons. Lessons will be given five days a week, Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. til noon.

This is the third summer that the Government has sponsored such a program.

Please bring or send your child to the nearest pool listed below:

From June 25 through July 13 lessons are being given at pools Alexander, North Highland, Tillis, North Columbus, Elizabeth Canty, Eighth Street and Boxwood.

From July 16 till August 3 — North Star, Edgewood, Eighth Street, Benning Hills, Woodland, BFW, and Rose Hill Heights.

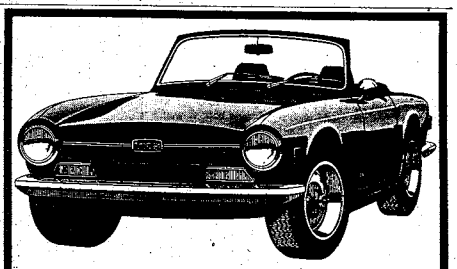
Lt Keith and take it you have nothing else to do. Soozie Nelson policed up the trash around her beach on Pensacola Beach, Fla. She deserves to relax. Do you?

Super stock car

Winston Cup Grand National race fans no longer have to jump the pit wall to get a first hand look at a super speedway stock car.

Winston No. 1, a fully prepared Plymouth race car, will be on display on July 11 at the Main PX 2:30-7:00 p.m. and Custer Terrace 9-1 and 10:00-7:00 p.m. July 13 at Main Post PX, giving local racing fans a good look at what it takes to make a Grand National stock car tick.

The red and white stocker was built by Petty Enterprises of Randleman, N.C., and, according to Maurice Petty, chief mechanic for Petty Enterprises, every detail that goes into building a highly competitive stock car is included in Winston No. 1.



The Road Runner's body, chassis, suspension, cooling system, rear end and fuel tank are all either modified or reinforced to meet both the top performance as well as safety standards demanded on the NASCAR Grand National circuit.

Talbott ran all the way

Maj. Gen. Orwin C. Talbott, deputy commander of TRADOC, received his 1,000 mile patch at Fort Benning today for his participation in the "Run for Your Life" program.

Gen. Talbott was here when "Run for Your Life" was initiated in January, 1970. He placed command emphasis and personal involvement in the physical fitness program and played a key role in the adoption of the program as a volunteer supplement to be used Army wide. Since then, attention has been given to the program by the CONUS Command, Far East Command and European Command.

About 75,000 people have participated in the "Run for Your Life" program at Fort Benning. Of these, about 70 have received their 1,000-mile patch.

Draggin around

Phenix Dragway will run the regular Wednesday night "ET" meet on July 4th. All military personnel with ID cards will be admitted for only fifty cents. Here's your chance to make fifty dollars for a fifty cent investment. Gates open at six-thirty and competition starts at nine.

Interest is definitely building and the competition is getting stiffer. June 20 had 55 "ET" entrants and June 23 had 73 "ET" entrants. That means a lot of runs must be made and won to decide the eventual winner. But the action is fast and furious and everyone can get into the game.

On a wet Wednesday, June 20, the trophy winners were Lewis Wheeler in a '67 Camaro, James Andrews in a Mustang, R. D. Dempsey in a Chevy Wagon, and Betty Zimmerman in a Mercury Wagon.

Andrews had previously lost out to WO-1 Alan Pangburn 145th Aviation Bn. But Pangburn's Kawasaki couldn't return so Andrews was brought back in.

In the money runs — Lewis Wheeler eliminated R. D. Dempsey, and James Andrews eliminated Betty Zimmerman. PFC James Andrews, HHC, 2-69th Armor, put down Lewis Wheeler and took home the $50.

Saturday night was a beautiful dry night and the "ET" field was outstanding. Most of the super stocks and modified in the area were absent however, due to a big meet at Warner Robbins, Georgia.

Five brackets were run and the trophy winners were Dwight Martin in a Chevy Wagon, Gordon Clark in an El Camino, SFC John Stringer in a Ford Pickup, Don Lamee in a Baracuda, and Betty Zimmerman in a Mercury Wagon.

Martin got the bye run while Stringer eliminated Clark and Zimmerman put out Lamee. Martin then ran and beat Stringer and Zimmerman. Dwight Martin got there first and took home the $50.

Ladies Demolition Derby tops Tri-County slate

Some would tell you women drivers do it on the road but Friday night ladies at Tri-County Speedway will have a chance to legally demolish everything in sight as a ladies Demolition Derby for all willing headlines the card.

The females also will take part in a footrace and a bikini contest. They are each open to participants 16 and over.

Two drivers along with TV sportscasters George Cheeringer and Dan Greene and The Enquirer's Richard Hyatt will serve as judges in the bikini contest with $100 going to the winner.

A Cadet and Sportsman Race is on tap as usual with $500 going on the line for the winner of the feature. Races at the Phenix City track begin at 9 p.m.

Army wins shoot out

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colorado—Bolstered by the one - two punch of Maj. Kennedy Gilbert and PFC David Smith of Fort Benning, a U.S. Army five man skeet team grabbed the championship of the Armed Forces International Skeet Championship at nearby Ent Air Force Base, Monday.

The championship team, fielded by the U.S. Army Marksmanship Training unit, fired a composite score of 474 of a possible 500 with both Gilbert and Smith posting 96. Other members of the championship team included Capt. James Whitaker, Sgt. Maj. Byron T. Akers and Sp5 Louis Sembrowich.

Runner up honors in the prestigious and highly competitive military tournament fell to a U.S. Navy quintet which was eight points back. Third place overall was claimed by a U.S. Marine Corps squad with their 453 birds total.

Bantam Bowling League

David Kennedy and Erin Wright have won high average honors in the Fort Benning Bantam Bowling League.

Kennedy led the boys with a 129 and Miss Wright the girls with a 11. Kennedy also led Team No. 4 teammates Ken Doctor and Dainne Robly to the league championship.

Miss Wright led her Team No. 1 teammates, Evelyn Jones and Tessie Pierce, to runner-up honors. Team No. 8, composed of Eric Ray, Charlie Green and Cindy Vines was third.

Green's 449 and Miss Pierce's 370 were the high scratch series, while Ray's 527 and Barbara Purse's 489 were the high handicap series.

Built from the ground up with 4-Wheel Drive.

Adams chose 1st anniversary

There are actually three dates that could reasonably compete for the designation of Independence Day.

John Adams had designated the second of July as the anniversary. In a letter to Mrs. Adams he wrote: "The second day of July, 1776, will be the most memorable epoch in the history of America. I am apt to believe that it will be celebrated by succeeding generations as the great anniversary festival. It ought to be commemorated as the day of deliverance, by solemn acts of devotion to God Almighty. It ought to be solemnized with pomp and parade, with shows, games, sports, guns, bells, bonfires and illuminations, from one end of this continent to the other, from his ime forward for evermore."

The fourth of July is the day the 13 colonies chose to become an independent nation. The ceremony of signature took place on the second of August.

If the day of American Independence would have been derived from the ceremony of signature, and the real date of what has been preserved as the legal original of the Declaration, it would have been celebrated the second of August.

If it was derived from the legal act of separation from the British Crown which was contained in the resolution of Congress rather than its Declaration of Independence, it would have been the second of July.

But common consent has determined to date the great anniversary from the event of the passage of the Declaration on the Fourth of July.

TALAVERA
by Drexel

The Mediterranean of old. To the south... Moorish kingdoms, richly ornamented palaces, the Sword of Islam! To the north...the Spanish Court, Granada, the Alhambra! A never-to-be forgotten world of romance and intrigue...of riches and pomp.

Famous Drexel delves deeply, authentically. The result... Talavera, an awe-inspiring collection of dining room, bedroom and occasional treasures, embracing the full flavor and meaning of the period. Deeply sculptured as if by chisel, subtly curved and amply moulded as only the hands and eyes of master craftsmen can create. Talavera exudes a drama and elegance second to none.

Witness its authentic features: heavy brass plated hardware, wrought iron, shaded glass, simulated slate. . . the complements of pecky pecan veneers, combined with pecan and oak solids, finished in highly distressed brown. And always liveable, marvelously comfortable for today's busy life! Give your home this wondrous look by Drexel now. You'll be delighted with the moderate price, too.

Two new traffic laws in effect for Georgia

Two new traffic safety laws went into effect at Fort Benning and throughout the State of Georgia, July 1, one of which makes it illegal to raise or lower the front or rear end of an automobile more than two inches off the manufacturers standards.

The other requires daytime headlight use by cars in rain or foggy conditions.

Another law which had been in effect at Fort Benning is the mandatory burning of motorcycle headlights during daylight hours.

Daylight headlight use by automobiles in rain or foggy conditions may help reduce the number of accidents which occur in inclement weather, according to Col. Ray Pope, Public Safety Commissioner.

Studies of accident data relating to motorcycles show a disproportionate number of motorcyclists were being injured and killed by motorists who have difficulty in seeing them, Pope said.

Also, the number of registered motorcycles had been increasing steadily in Georgia and now number more than 75,000.

The new laws are important, Pope said, in reducing chances of traffic accidents in Georgia.

High jinks

Hqs. Cmd. has boat race down Upatoi Creek

BY CHARLES BLACK

The office staff looking a bit bored? Demeanor of the file clerks getting stodgy? No spirit, esprit, elan?

Try the new Army formula. Get them out, mix up violent exercise with high jinks, competitive endeavor, and a company outing at the end of it. Col. Leon Livingston, headquarters command, has his folks do it all the time.

Capt. Ed Bensman, commanding Co. D of Livingston's command, came up with a feat of management of his contribution to the method of livening up life for administrative types. He borrowed a dozen John boats, a dozen canoes, and laid on a combination foot race, boat race and company picnic which manages to provide adventure, exercise camaraderie and esprit enough to do any company for a month between races.

And along with esprit, there also are sunburns, blisters, aches and four to seven hours worth of paddling, portaging and general tussling gained.

WAC's are involved, canoe handling being their favored event. They get a small head start in the beginning. Otherwise, they're on their own.

A Bensman start for a race consists of having the crews stand by their boats in the middle of a dirt road a long 200 yards up a rutted trail from the creek. On a blast from a car horn, they gallop. They pull the chain, they push the stern, they converge on the little path in a sound of metal, feet and soldierly language.

The approach to the water is slower after the ing battle on the path to get there. A crew off toa real racing start, however, will gallop right on down the creek (it's shallow now) with a paddler in position to take up the momentum. There are flounderings involved here and early leaders can get left at the start while somebody finds a lost shoe, a dropped paddle, or simply gets back up from under the water and gropes for the boat again.

The WAC's don't have to endure this part. They take their canoe — the canoe race is started the same as the other but there is more grace involved, the boats being lighter, but also more physical contact as the charge to the river is made — down to the edge and start with the car horn is blown. They are saved from the physical bashing on that trail, as well as from some of the shouts of anguished contestants in the last 50 feet, or when they're cut off by gamesmanship at the first bend in the path.

Usual best time for the race is about four hours to make 12.5 miles worth of this sort of water sport. (Portaging in the shallows has the same football tactics involved as the start, contestants report.)

Two WAC canoeists, Sp4 Rose Richmond and Sp4 Barbara Francoeur, finished fourth in a gaggle of 10 canoes. Sp4 Kathleen White and PFC Francis Strain were another WAC team entered in the event.

Bensman said the John boat and canoe races have caught on as a sport as well as an esprit builder. He said speed actually picks up on down the stream.

"I think that after an hour of work on that creek on a hot afternoon, they get motivated toward that finish line, where the refreshments are and where there is some cool shade under a pine tree," Bensman said.

Ready, get set -- go!

Local scouts do their part to clean up area

By JOLIENE HUTTO
AND BEVERLY THOMAS

Cleaning cemeteries may not be the most popular American pasttime, but for the Boy Scouts of Troop 28 it proved quite an experience.

The Scouts accepted the task of cleaning the Esquiline Heights cemetery owned by Mrs. Sol Schapiro, as a goodwill project last fall but foul weather and a tight schedule delayed the project until a few weeks ago.

Mrs. Schapiro called the local Scout center and was referred to Emmett McKay, district Scout executive for the Fort Benning area.

McKay in turn, called Captain Tom Hiter, scoutmaster of Troop 28, and asked him if his troop could clean up the cemetery.

The Scouts, led by Mark Cushing, senior patrol leader, Bill Caulder, assistant patrol leader, Mark Caulder and Billy Hayes, both patrol leaders spent three Saturdays in June cleaning and setting the place in order.

Other members of Troop 28 are Larry Gross, Roy Cushing, Tom Knighten, Don Miller, Dale and Carlos Perez and Willie Blanco.

According to McKay, the cemetery had not been cleaned in more than five years and was what McKay called a real "jungle." Despite the condition of the land, the boys, sponsored by the Women's Club of Columbus, spent about 20 hours cutting thick weeds and removing accumulated debris from the area.

The old graveyard has quite a history. Dating back to the early 1800s it is the burial place of Moses-Levy families of Columbus. The oldest grave is that of Mrs. Deborah Moses, wife of Isreael Moses. She was born in the year that America won her independence, 1776, and died at St. Joseph, Fla. in 1848 at the age of 72.

Her son, Maj. Raphael J. Moses was a distinguished attorney, soldier and statesman in the 1800s. After coming to Columbus from Applachicola, he bought a plantation in 1884 and named it Esquiline for one of the seven hills of ancient Rome.

He and his wife, Eliza also are buried in the old plantation cemetery.

A monument erected in honor of Lt. Albert Luria, the third son of Issac and Isabel A. Moses is also found in the burial site. A civil war cannon ball which rested atop the monument was stolen long ago. Luria, while in confederate service reportedly snatched the cannonball from the ground and raced with it to a nearby creek to insure the safety of his fellow soldiers. His friends later retrieved the cannonball for his monument.

Mrs. Schapiro, is the former Ina Levy and is the great-granddaughter of Maj. Raphael J. Moses.

The Boy Scouts were so fascinated by the history in the old graveyard that they have committed themselves to its upkeep and have decided to clean it as a continuing project. They are planning to return and resume their cleaning in August and again later in the fall months.

The cemetery is located in Esquiline Heights near Fort Benning and has more than 32 graves.

SOUND OFF!

Do you think there are sufficient activities on post for military dependents?

PHYLLIS JONES

Yes, I think there are enough activities on post to keep me busy. I'm active in the teen center and enjoy the dances. I also like to swim.

GREG MORGAN

I don't think so. We need more amusement centers near housing areas. I would also like to see YAC to be extended to bring more people into the program. I would also like to see a skating area built on post.

RICHARD FROST

I don't. Most of the activities on post are oriented towards younger children. If you are above fifteen years of age it's very hard to find a sports team to enter. I wish there would be the same sports, just for older people also.

PEGGY JORDAN

Yes, I use the swimming pool regularly and enjoy the dances that are put on by the teen club. Every so often I'll participate in a game of basketball. If you want to keep busy you can on post.

MARTHA JORDAN

There could be more. There really isn't much to do in Bouton Hill I would like to see a center put up there, or at least some sort of recreational facilities available to the youths of this area. I would enjoy tennis, badminton or any type of teen-type games.

How to raise a delinquent child

1. Begin with infancy to give the child everything he wants. In this way he will grow up to believe the world owes him a living.

2. When he picks up bad words, laugh at him. This will make him think he's cute. It will also encourage him to pick up cuter phrases that will blow off the top of your head later.

3. Never give him any spiritual training. Wait till he is 21 and then let him 'decide for himself.'

4. Avoid use of thw world 'wrong.' Im may develop a guilt complex. This will condition him to believe later, when he is arrested for stealing a car, that society is against him and he is being persecuted.

5. Pick up everything he leaves lying around — books, shoes and clothing. Do everything for him so he will be experienced in throwing all responsibility onto others.

6. Let him read any printed matter he can get his hands on. Be careful that the silverware and drinking glasses are sterilized, but let his mind feast on garbage.

7. Quarrel frequently in the presence of your children. In this way they will not be too shocked when the home is broken up later.

8. Give a child all the spending money he wants. Never let him earn his own. Why should he have things as tough as YOU had them?

9. Satisfy his every craving for food, drink and comfort. — See that every sensual desire is gratified. Denial may lead to harmful frustration.

10. Take his part against neighbors, teachers and policemen. They are all prejudiced against your child.

11. When he gets into real trouble, apologize for yourself by saying 'I never could do anything with him.'

12. Prepare for a life of grief. You will be apt to have it.

Law hinders GI loans for getting condominiums

Georgia Veterans Service Director Pete Wheeler said he is urging Congress to enact legislation that would overcome "inequities which now exist in the GI home loan program with regard to condominiums." Wheeler said that the Veterans Housing Act of 1970 (Public Law 91-506) made the first mention of condominiums on the GI Loan program.

"This law provides that before a condominium can be purchased unde the GI entitlement, the Federal Housing Administration (FHA) must approve at least one loan in the project. So far," said Wheeler, "the FHA has not approved a single such loan in Georgia."

The FHA requires that 80 per cent of the project must be sold under contract before they will approve any loan. "It appears that the GI loan program was tied to a 'dead horse,' which," said Wheeler, "places an unnecessary restriction on those eligible veterans who may want to use their loan eligibility to purchase a condominium.

"Condominiums are

43rd helps scouts

The Boy Scouts of the Chattanooga, Tennessee area are now much closer to their goal of opening a new camp, thanks to the efforts of the Earthmoving Platoon of Company B, 43rd Engineer Battalion (Construction).

Under the direction of Lt. John Sullivan and SSG Ulysses Wright, the platoon spent four weeks, May 9 to June 6, preparing a road network and laying water pipelines. Skymount Boy Scout Camp, a 2750 acre plot, is a former hunting reserve.

Company B's Earthmoving Platoon lived in the hunting lodge, which had two-man rooms, a living room, a complete kitchen, and an adjacent lake.

SOLDIER CHANGES CREST DURING CEREMONY

The 36th

Benning family activates a new member

BY CHARLES BRICKMAN

The 36th Engineer Group has joined the Fort Benning family. The 36th was originally activated on June 1, 1941 as an Engineer Combat Regiment at Plattsburg Barracks, New York. It remained a regiment until March 1945 and was then redesignated the 36th Engineer Combat Group.

During World War II the unit performed all types of combat engineer projects, often fighting side by side with the infantry.

The 36th campaigns begin with its support of the Army into Algeria, French Morroco and Tunisia which included a beachhead landing. The 36th also helped take General Patton's Seventh Army into Sicily, again via beachhead. The 36th was then assigned with the Fifth Army in the Italian campaign to include Naples and Foggia.

At Anzio the 36th had the distinction of holding a seven-mile defense perimeter for two long hard months. They subsequently helped put the Seventh Army into France once again by beachhead in Southern France. The 36th was also prominent in the Rhineland and Ardennes-Alsace campaigns.

The 36th continued to get in the action in the Korean conflict at Pusan in 1950, being assigned to the IX Corps and performing a variety of engineer projects and supporting several offensives.

Most people think of the infantry being on the front line and doing all the fighting and other dirty work; but the 36th Engineers have had more than their share of combat fighting right along side of the infantry.

In October of 1954 the 36th was attacked to the I Corps by Headquarters Eighth Army. Since the Korean conflict the 36th has served continuously supporting the I Corps and executing several million dollars in construction annually.

The colors of the 36th Engineers are distinguished by twenty battle streamers with five bronze arrowheads representing assault landings, plus several outstanding unit awards. These include the Republic of Korea Presidential Unit Citation, streamers embroidered KOREA 1950-1952.

The 36th was inactivated on May 30, 1972 at Ft. Lewis, Washington after long and illustrious service to the Army. The colors had been brought from Korea by a special color guard. One of the members of that color guard, CSM George W. Ratliff, currently is assigned to the 43rd Engineer Battalion here at Ft. Benning.

The 36th Engineer Group, which now displaces the 931st, will continue to give the outstanding service to Ft. Benning and the Civilian Community that the 931st has become so well known for. It will also add more glory on to its already impressive history.

The 931st was first assigned to Ft. Benning in 1968. Later in July of 1970 it was designated as a major command.

Perhaps one of the most distinctive features of the 931st is its diversity. Within the Group can be found an Engineer Float Bridge Company, a construction battalion, a maintenance battalion, military police, a public information detachment, a finance section, a replacement detachment, and a personnel service company. All of these different elements of the 931st playing an important part in the operation of Ft. Benning.

The 931st Group motto has been "We Do For Others First," and it is a good indication of the spirit of the Group as a whole in its daily support of Ft. Benning and the Infantry School.

Another facet of the 931st is the community relations activities it has participated in. During 1972, 931st units accomplished over $94,000 worth of community relations activities with over twenty projects being completed.

One of the major projects completed by the 931st in 1972 was in Selma, Alabama. Soldiers and civilians worked shoulder to shoulder removing junk from streets and vaccant lots of Selma. Engineer effort and talent was then used to improve the streets after the clean up. This project cost over $63,000 and took over 2000 mandays to complete.

In Alexander City, Alabama in August of 1972 the 43rd Engineers cleared some 15 acres of land for the Temple Baptist Church. In Atlanta, Georgia the 931st remodeled an old home for use by the underprivileged and wayward children.

During June to August in 1972 the 43rd Engineer Battalion served as the host mess facility for the weekly summer action maneuvers (SAM) encampments sponsored by the city of Columbus and Ft. Benning. In this project the underprivileged children from the Columbus area spent a week in class at Ft. Benning attending summer camp. The gratitude of the civilian heads of SAM was immense and thru their recommendation, the post and the 931st received a note of commendation from the Army Chief of Staff for their efforts.

This is by no means a complete list of the total community aid which has been rendered by the 931st; but projects such as these as well as the everyday support provided to Ft. Benning are what the 931st is all about.

Through the dedication of its soldiers the 931st has made a name for itself throughout the Southeast. No project being too large or small, from helping the boy scouts out in Tennessee to clearing the snow during last sinter's record snow fall in Columbus. The 931st has served this area with distinction.

BEEF JERKY
(Teriyaki Steak)
Submitted by:
Col. Lyle D. Bundt,
Dental Corps

To survive the grueling trek across the Sierra Nevada, "mountain men" often relied on leathery morsels of sun dried meat. Beef Jerky is still a staple in the packs of today's backpackers, skiers, and campers - and a popular snack for armchair sportsters, too. This modern version from the oven is a favorite snack treat...

3 to 4 pounds round steak, 1½ inches thick
1 bottle liquid smoke
Garlic salt
Pepper

Preparation: Slice beef into ¼ inch thin strips, removing excess fat. Pour liquid smoke into dish. Place one layer of beef strips in pyrex dish. Using pastry brush, brush evenly with liquid smoke. Dust with garlic salt and pepper. Place a layer of beef strips on top of that. Repeat process brushing liquid smoke, dusting garlic salt and papper. Proceed in this manner until all beef is used up.

Drying Process: Remove oven racks from oven. Place beef strips over 2 or 3 rungs of rack, depending on length of beef strip. Beef should not touch, ends can hang freely over edge. Use both oven racks. For gas oven, crack oven door with spatula or wooden spoon and dry on pilot for 2 days. For electric oven, set on "warm", crack oven door, dry for 3 to 4 hours. Turn oven off, close door and finish drying the rest of the day.

Testing: Beef should be chewy, not brittle. If too moist or tough, dry it longer. If too brittle, chew it anyway, its tasty.

Storing: Use brown paper bag, it will keep indefinitely. Since no preservatives are used, it would mildew in plastic wrap.

Variation: Add Tabasco sauce to liquid smoke before brushing on meat.

Tips: Partially freezing meat before cutting makes it easier to slice evenly. Cut with the grain of the meat for a chewy jerky; cut across the grain for a more tender, brittle product.

MEDDAC

The Meddac Officers' Wives' Club will have a coffee on Fri., July 3, at the home of Maj. and Mrs. Lloyd B. Sampson, 1408 Third Ave., Columbus, Ga. Their twenty room Victorian-type home is one of the historical sights in Columbus. The charge for the coffee will be seventy-five cents and reservations should be made by Tues., July 10, with your regular reservation chairman. The wives of the Orthopedic Dept. of Martin Army Hosp. will be in charge of the coffee with Nancy Genovese and Joyce Fein as co-hostesses. Car pooling is suggested since this home is in downtown Columbus.

Whatja wanta Know?
ask the BAYONET
CALL 545-4792

Dear Bayonet;

It is evident that some commissary items are being bought for one price and resold for another. For example, ham which is labeled according to price per lb. and poundage has recently been labeled 2 lbs. at 82 cents per lb. which costs $1.64. However the cost is scratched through and become $3.28 meaning the ham now costs $1.64 per lb. This leads us to believe the commissary paid 82 cents per lb and is selling it for twice that. Isn't the commissary a nonprofit organization and how can these discrepancies occur? S.R.S.

Dear S.R.S.

According to Charles L. Canington, commissary officer, commissary meat is sold at cost with absolutely no profit being made. Due to the "spoilage" factor, sometimes meats are sold at below cost to preclude the total loss of said meat. Other perishable meats are sold slight above costs to compensate for the meats sold under-cost. "There is no profit," Canington stressed. "Sometimes price changes occur when the Defense Personnel Support Center changes their price lists. This requires us to change our prices."

"There is a possibility that a "human" error was made," Canington said. "However, the Commissary is strictly a non-profit organization and our objective is not to make money."

Dear Bayonet:

When I got my first disability check, I was disappointed to find it was only for one full month. When do I get the back pay for the first 5 months I was disabled? R.L.D.

Dear R.L.D.:

There is no back pay due. Your benefit started with the 6th month, after a full 5-month waiting period had been served. This waiting period is set out in the Social Security Act as a reasonable period needed to see if your condition will improve or if you will be able to return to your old job, or perhaps finds another type of gainful employment.

Effective 1-1-73, changes in the law reduced the waiting period from 6 months to 5 months, but it is still a "no pay" period that has to go by before benefits will start.

1ST BN. 29TH INF.

The Officers and ladies of the 1st Bn. 29th Inf. met on the patio of the Officers Club, June 16, for an evening Battalion Pool Party.

The week that followed was a busy one fo the ladies of the Batalion. On June 20 they hosted a Wine and Cheese Tasting Party at the Officers Club for the ladies of the 19th Brigade. Mrs. Geoffrey D. Ellerson was chairman of the afternoon event. Helping her with the arrangements were Mrs. John L. Mitchell and Mrs. Jesse T. Wheeler. The ladies were entertained by two speakers, Mr. Rodney Parke and Mr. Truce Livengood, who had some interesting comments having to do with wine and cheese and other types of tasting parties. Helping with the serving of the wines were Mrs. Herb Strasser, Mrs. William MacPherson, Mrs. Phil Underwood, and Mrs. Bryan Campbell. There were five different wines and many kinds of cheeses available for tasting, and a lot of good chatter and fun for the ladies of the brigade.

EMPLOYMENT

Georgia residents who are interested in Federal employment can now get job information at no cost through a new toll-free telephone service, Guy Benefield, Area Manager of the U.S. Civil Commission, announced today.

By dialing 1-800-342-9643, anyone located in Georgia can obtain information on current Federal job opportunities, on procedures for applying, special programs for returning veterans and other information about Civil Service jobs. Applications, job announcements, and information pamphlets will be mailed on request. Information Specialists in the Federal Job Information Center located at Macon, Georgia, will give accurate and reliable information to all callers.

SWIMMING

The only places authorized for swimming and wading at the US Army Infantry Center, are swimming pools. Swimming or wading in creeks is prohibited. Military police are patrolling the creeks, ponds and the river, and will cite persons violating this regulation. For more information call the Safety Office at 545-3312.

GAS SHORTAGE

Because of the current fuel shortage people are carrying extra gasoline in the trunk of their car. This could be hazardous because of the high temperatures this time of the year. Gas exposed to heat will expand and create an explosion hazard in unvented containers. Vented containers fill the trunk with explosive vapors which may easily spill and burst into flame in case of an accident. It is suggested not to carry spare gas in the car.

The Tree

Number one Lakeside is where she proudly stood
Looking down on all golfers, the band and the good

Majestically tall, supremely she waved
To all who arrived for some golf to be played

In storms she had sheltered, cars that stood beside her,

From the beating sun-rays she had made them feel safer

It was her place in life and she filled it with grace

As her branches she waved to each smiling face

And then came the Day when no longer she'd stand,

Straight and erect like an Infantryman
For lightning saw fit to tear her asunder
She went out with a Roar—Mighty as thunder.
The cars that she sheltered on her final day
Were battered and torn as she split their way.
But she did her job well, this wonderful tree
I'm sure Joyce Kilmer loved her as much as me.

The 51st Company Wives Club held their Transportation Coffee on June 20 at Wigle Hall. The theme for the coffee was "Time to Bee Buzzin' Along." Mrs. William Boland, Mrs. Mark Jones, Mrs. William Knarr, and Mrs. David Francis were hostesses for the coffee.

Guests were Capt. and Mrs. Dan Johnson and Lt Hampton Dews. Capt. Johnson told the wives how to get their household and accompanied baggage shipped correctly. A film was also shown on the same subject. Capt. Johnson also told the wives about finances and answered any questions that the wives had on transportation and finance.

COMBAT ARMS TRAINING BOARD

The ladies of the Combat Arms Training Board held their monthly coffee June 14 at the home of Mrs. William Highlander, Dilbeck St., Fort Benning. Among the special items of business discussed were projects for the Christmas Bazaar.

Newcomers, Mrs. Harold Smith and Mrs. H. Thatcher Linke were welcomed to the group.

Co-hostesses for the coffee were Mrs. Van Lowe and Mrs. Charlas Williams.

LEADERSHIP COMMITTEE

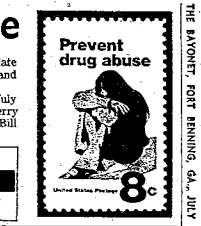
The ladies of the Leadership Committee attended a coffee at the home of Mrs. Nathan Vail with Mrs. Ginny Bunns as cohostess.

Farewell was bid to Mrs. Cecil Thomas who, with her husband, will be returning to civilian life shortly, and settling near Pittsburgh, Pa.

Ladies of 58th hold June coffee

The ladies of the 1st Bn. (Mech.), 58th Infantry held their June coffee in the Corregidor Room at the Main Officers' Club. Hostesses for the event were the ladies of the S-3 Shop.

Mrs. Robert Orkand introduced special guests, Mrs. William Steele, wife of the Brigade Commander, Mrs. Ronald Formulak, Miss Kim Gustafson, sister of Mrs. Peter Vanderwerf, and Mrs. Viola Nedham, sister-in-law of Mrs. Roy Hollins.



Three new members were welcomed to the group: Mrs. Donald Tilton, Mrs. Jess Ramos, and Mrs. William Diehl. Each of these newcomers was presented with a plant on behalf of the wives. Goodbye was said to Mrs. Henry Haga. She was presented with a silver tray as a Farewell gift.

The raffle was held and Mrs. Viola Nedham won a beautiful shawl crocheted by Mrs. Donald Tilton and Mrs. Peter Vanderwerf won an arrangement of "Dip 'Em" flowers made by Mrs. Bernie Muller-Thym.

After the business meeting, everyone enjoyed refreshments consisting of a watermelon basket filled with melon balls, chocolate eclairs, orange punch and coffee.

Hostasses for the July coffee will be Mrs. Jerry Faust and Mrs. Bill Strong.

Scouting

Benning kids benefit by postwide interest

By Tim Purdon

The Boy Scouts of America have become the free world's largest youth organization.

Presently, one out of four boys of Scout age is a member of BSA.

The Boy Scouts of America are separated into three groups: Cub Scouting, Boy Scouting and Exploring.

Cub Scouting is a family-and-home centered program of the BSA for boys who are in the third grade, or 8-9-10 years old.

The purpose of the Cub Scouts is to develop a boy's character and spiritual life; to encourage good citizen habits and attitudes; and to improve communication and understanding.

Boy Scouting is a program for boys ages 11 through 17 designed primarily to achieve objectives in character development; citizenship training; and mental and physical fitness. It seeks through a vigorous outdoor program to teach boys concepts of honor; duty to God and country; service to others; and self-respect.

Exploring is a contemporary program for high-school-age young adults that provides opportunities to explore adultlike roles.

Run by elected youth officers, the Exploring program emphasizes leadership responsibility; developing social skills; learning about a variety of vocations; community service; and encouraging personal fitness and an appreciation for the outdoors.

Exploring is used by business, industrial, professional, and religious organizations to provide young people with a flexible and relevant program of investigating vocational and avocational subjects.

The Boy Scouting program started on July 29, 1907. Twenty-one boys and two men arrived on Brownsea Island in a sheltered bay off England's southern coast. There, along the shore, they set up makeshift camping gear and established a campsite in an area that would be their home for the next 2 history-making weeks.

One of the men was Lord Baden-Powell, a British hero of the Boer War, who was gripped by the vision of a new and different organization for youth. The boys were from the streets of England's cities and from her most exclusive schools. They were the first Boy Scouts, all unaware, for Baden-Powell did not tell them that the encampment was a test of his vision.

Two years later Boy Scouting came to the United States in the mind and baggage of William D. Boyce, a Chicago newspaper and magazine publisher. Boyce had been on a business trip to England in the fall of 1909, and one day he had lost his way in a London fog.

As he groped to find his bearings, a boy materialized out of the murk and asked if he might help. Boyce explained his predicament, and the boy offered to take him to his destination. The lad refused a shilling tip, explaining that he was a Scout and that he could not accept a fee for doing a Good Turn. Intrigued, the publisher questioned the boy and learned where Baden-Powell could be found. wthe next day he interviewed Scouting's founder and was captured by his drea.

When he boarded the steamer for home, Boyce was afire with zeal to establish Boy Scouting here. In his hand was a suitcase crammed with material about Baden-Powell's Scouts. And so, on February 8, 1910, Boyce incorporated the Boy Scouts of America in Washington, D. C. A Federal Charter from Congress was granted on June 15, 1916.

The tremendous time and talent volunteered by Scout leaders are not enough to make Scouting go. Like any good program it takes substantial amounts of money. There are three primary sources of income; the boy himself, the chartered institution, and the community in which the boys and Scouts are located.

The ninth point of the Scout Law is a Scout is thrifty. In living that Law, the boy pays his own way as much as possible. Often he earns small dues that go each week into the treasury of his pack, troop or post. This money is used for such Scouting expenses as program supplies and material, camping equipment, and other ordinary costs.

Scout units are also supported by their sponsors who provide meeting places and necessary maintenance costs. Often they provide program facilities and materials.

Communities voluntarily support Scouting through gifts, United Funds or community chests, sustaining membership enrollments, bequests, and contributions that are made to Boy Scout councils.

Homes

comparatively new to Georgia," Wheeler said. "Until fairly recently ample land areas were available for construction of single dwellings. But as land shortages developed the price of land has skyrocketed, and is still rising. Thus the construction of condominiums seems to be the answer to builders and prospective veteran homeowners as well, because a much smaller land area is needed on which many families can be accommodated. And the condominium construction itself is handled on a mass-production-like basis which substantially reduces the cost. On today's market a condominium, in most instances, is the only type of home that many veterans can really afford to buy."

Wheeler said that since condominiums are generally accepted as another form of home ownership, he is asking the Georgia Delegation in Washington, D.C.

Benning scouts to be busy in July

The Scout coordinators at Fort Benning have many activities planned for the month of July.

Since July 1, Troop 120, under Scoutmaster Captain Fred Sieg and Troop 238, Scoutmaster Leon Elder, have been attending Summer Camp at Camp McKenzie.

July 8-14 marks the fourth week of summer camp at McKenzie with four Fort Benning troops attending.

Troops 28, 37, 217 and 242 will attend the seven day camp.

The Chattahoochee Council Executive Board meeting with wives will be held July 9 at Camp McKenzie. The meeting begins at 6:30 p.m.

The Cub leaders and Scout leaders round table discussion will be held July 11, at the Fort Benning Scout Center, beginning at 7:30 p.m.

The Cub leaders discussion will be in Building 2524 and the Scout leaders discussion will be held in building 2530.

The Fort Benning District Committee meeting will be held in the Headquarters Command Conference Room, Bldg. 2827, beginning at 7:30 p.m.

July 25 marks the Scout committee meeting held in Building 2530, starting at noon.

The week of July 30-Aug. 3 is the Cub Scout second Day Camp session at Camp McKenzie.

Attending the camp will be over 200 Benning Scouts.

Coming up for August is the National Jamboree to be held at Moraine St. Paul, Pa., August 3-9.

Troop 237 and Troop 120 will be attending from Post.

7 soldiers go adventuring

Seven soldiers from the various units within Headquarters Command hiked 37 miles along the Appalachian Trail in North Georgia recently as part of the Headquarters Command Adventure Training Program.

The hikers took the bearest of essentials with them and improvised bedrolls and shelters from the two ponchos they carried with them. Each man carried a 25-30 pound Rucksack with all their rations and equipment to sustain them for a five day period.

The hikers stayed overnight at the 2nd Ranger Company, Mountain Ranger Camp, on June 10 started their hike from Tesnatee Gap going west along the trail.

After covering some very scenic country and getting the feet of their "Rucks" they spent the first night atop Blood Mountain along with three civilian hikers going from Georgia to Maine. Subsequent stops were at Woody Gap, Cooper Gap, and Hightower Gap. Throughout the trip the men learned different ways to improvise shelters and prepare the "LRRP" (Long Range Recon Patrol) Rations, which they either acquired a taste for or did not.

The trip proved quite an experience for some of the men who have not done any hiking or camping since they were young boys. The experience and knowledge they gained far outweighed the physical exertion of the long climbs. The troops really enjoyed the hike, the people they met along the trail, and the beauty of North Georgia.

You don't have to pay

BY MARGARET DANA

Nearly everyone, at one time or another, is annoyed and troubled by receipt of something coming through the mail that was not ordered and is not wanted.

Merchandise that comes in this way creates problems for the recipient. What do you do, if you don't really want or need it? Send it back at your expense? Pay for it? Let it sit and do nothing?

The problem has a much simpler solution than most people understand. The plain clear answer is: You do not need to do anything about unordered merchandise. Keep it and use it. Throw it out. Give it away. Or ignore it. Suit yourself.

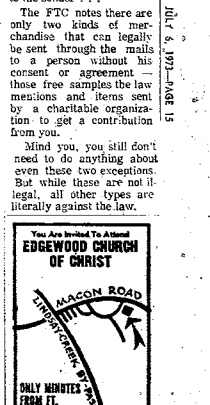
However, many people ask me for the actual rule, law or regulation on this, so they may quote it to other concerned consumers. So, here is the whole story, and an interesting illustration it is of the fact that when consumers raise their voices to protest something — if their protest is based on facts and good sense — they get action.

Back in June 1970 the Federal Trade Commission (FTC) issued a public notice that there would be a hearing and opportunity to submit data, views or arguments regarding a proposed trade regulation rule. That rule dealt with the practice of sending merchandise to a person without his previous request or consent. The FTC proposed to rule that recipients would be free to ignore such goods and could not be held responsible for paying for them or returning them.

A couple of months later, on August 12, 1970, to be exact, Congress passed the Postal Reorganization Act, and enthusiastically incorporated in that law the FTC's proposed regulation on unordered goods. Plainly, both the FTC and Congress had had enough firsthand complaints from the people back home to persuade them this was not only wanted by consumers but needed.

So, the FTC now administers this new law, and if companies violating the low do not voluntarily stop their mailings or agree to the FTC "cease and desist" order, they can be taken to court and the result can be pretty steep fines.

Here is exactly what the law says:



"Except for (1) free samples clearly and conspicuously marked as such, and (2) merchandise mailed by a charitable organization soliciting contributions, the mailing of unordered merchandise . . . constitutes an unfair method of competition and an unfair trade practice . . . Any merchandise mailed in violation of this section, or within the exceptions continued therein, may be treated as a gift by the recipient, who shall have the right to retain, use, discard or dispose of it in any manner he sees fit without any obligation to the sender . . ."

The FTC notes there are only two kinds of merchandise that can legally be sent through the mails to a person without his consent or agreement — those free samples the law mentions and items sent by a charitable organization to get a contribution from you.

Mind you, you still don't need to do anything about even these two exceptions. But while these are not illegal, all other types are literally against the law.

Is the Army Brat a strange animal?

"THE MILITARY BRAT"!

The Army brat is a strange animal. He is a civilian in every respect except one-he's blood related to the military. He is conscious of the changes in regulations and the inception of new orders, because they indirectly affect his way of life.

The "brat" makes friends as easily as any other child, but the similarity ends there. The military brat is always subsonsciously afraid that before too long, his or her father (or friend's father) will be transferred; and that their friendship which took so long to grow will disappear into thin air, or at best become a pen-pal relationship.

Another hazard of being born into a military family is getting used to the different types of schools that come with the perennial move. For example, a student who completed his first two years of high school in a military dependent school in Germany would have had to work extra hard in maintaining a "C" average. Yet, this same student, after transfering to Florida, Georgia, or Alahama, for his last two years, would scarcely have to touch a book the entire two years and still maintain that C average. But this comparison works in reverse too. Some of the military brats that have gotten used to the lack of decent education standards in the South would have to struggle just to get out of a high school in Germany.

In spite of its drawback, however, the military brat has some definite advantages over his civilian counterpart. What better way to see Europe, the Orient, or even exotic Hawaii, than free of charge, courtesy of the U.S. Army? The tours vary in length from one to four years, and being raised and schooled on foreign soil can only increase the horizons of the military dependent. In some instances, the Army brat can even pick up the language of the country he is stationed in, and utilize it in some way in the future. One thing the brat does learn soon is the law of the land! In most foreign countries, the legal age for drinking is sixteen. However, the military authorities don't agree with this age. So it is up to the individual brat to use his good judgement in what is a very compromising situation. Though the foreign authorities have no objection to serving American dependents, frequent raids on local "Gasthauses" make beer consumption a cloak-and-dagger type affair for Army brats overseas.

When two people first meet one another, the first question they usually have for another is, "Where are you from?" This seemingly simple question requires is a difficult one for the military brat to answer. It is difficult to say you are from one place when you have been travelling around the world all of your life. Often the best answer to this question is, "I'm from everywhere."

The 1st Bn, 29th Infantry (PIONEERS), can boast at least three genuine military brats now on active duty, all three men have something in common with one another. Capt. William (Sandy) Macpherson is the assistant adjutant of the 1st Bn, 29th Inf. His father, Col. William J. Macpherson, is the commander of the Ordnance Center and School at Aberdeen Proving Grounds, Maryland.

Sp4 Steven Schuppener is the company clerk of Btry C, 83rd Arty., in the PIONEER battalion. His father, Col. Paul Schuppener, has recently retired from active duty.

Sp4 Rick Wasser is a clerk typist for the 1-29th commander, and his father, Lt. Col. Roy Wasser, has also recently retires. What connections do these three have with one another? For one thing, all three men have primary Military Occupational Specialtie in Field Artillery, from 1963-65 Capt. Sandy Macpherson was an Army brat living at Redstone Arsenal, (RSA) Alabama. His father was the commandant of the Missile and Munitions Center and School. When he first arrived at Redstone, Sandy Macpherson was in the 10th grade and attended Butler High School. He spent his final two years at Sewanee Military Academy and college at The Citadel. During the summers, he utilized his spare time by working part-time at the Redstone Officers Club. When Col. William Macpherson relinquished his command in 1965, it was to Col. Paul B. Schuppener's son Steve, now on active duty with the 1-29th, also attended Butler High School, graduating in 1969. During the summer months and over the Christmas holidays, he also found part-time employment at the Redstone Officers Club. In 1968, Lt. Col. Roy Wasser arrived at RSA to become the director of the MMCS Television Dept.

His son Rick, who is currently serving with the PIONEERS, also graduated from Butler High, but in 1970. While attending the University of Alabama in Huntsville, he also worked part-time at the Officers Club.

Three military brats, and all were stationed at the same post, all attended the same high school, all worked at the same Officers' Club, and are all currently stationed with the 1st Bn., 29th Infantry (PIONEERS).

Even more unique is the fact that none of these men knew each other before coming to the PIONEER battalion. All of the men, though, Macpherson, Schuppener, and Wasser, are in agreement about one thing: being an Army brat was a rewarding and unforgetable experience, and none of them would trade it for anything in the world.

Brat ?

Or is he special

Ileane Katzker

"Now that my father has retired from the Army, I realize that being an Army brat was really something special,"a 19 year old girl said.

Mr. James E. Henry, assistant chief of the Benning House and a retired serviceman with two children, outlined the differences between military dependents and civilian dependents.

As a group, he felt that military children are generally more knowledgeable about the world they live in. They seem to him to be better educated based on their exposure to different educational systems here and abroad.

"Much of my kid's studies he's already lived through," Mr. Henry said, referring to the travel and relationships one of his sons has encountered.

Military dependents are often more self-sufficient at an earlier age due to periodic absence of the father. Dr. (Maj.) Ronel Lewis, a child psychiatrist at the hospital annex, feels that absence of the father could affect the child because the mother is forced to carry the full load of responsibilities. But he said if the family unit is strong, a problem shouldn't occur.

The biggest problem, Dr. Lewis felt, was the problem of military families moving so often. There are pros and cons to this constant moving. Although it gives dependents an opportunity to see more of the world, it can cause insecurity, Dr. Lewis says.

"I got to travel a lot and other kids have just stayed in Columbus all their lives. I liked traveling, but I just made friends and had to leave," 16 year old Toni Teatler said.

This constant travel often results in young people being multilingual. It can also be beneficial because a youngster can compare his homeland to someplace else and learn from it. And often, he has a more sophisticated personality by the time he's an adult.

"The price a military dependent pays is that he is seldom afforded the opportunity to establish roots and say 'this is home'," Mr. Henry commented. "He has no life-long friends. And he doesn't live around the block from grandmother and can't go fishing with grandfather."

But he admitted that the Army tries to compensate for this by their wide range of recreational activities. "I'd rather be an Army brat than a civilian because of the privileges, like swimming and bowling on post. But getting a job on post is hard," said Yolanda Kornegay, a bag girl at the commisary.

The dependents living on post seem to maintain better discipline, although military and civilian youth do encounter problems, such as drugs, truancy, drinking and misbehaviour, Mr. Henry says.

Civilians and their dependents seem to accent religious activities more, whereas their military counterparts participate more in health and recreational activities, especially overseas.

"Besides going places that other kids can't go, I get to do a lot of other things on post, like seeing a movie for 25¢," said Russ Huddleston, a 13 year old.

Moving to different areas exposes children to different races, religions and cultures. It makes the child a more experienced individual and generally better equipped to interact with other people, Mr. Henry felt.

"In school we never had racial problems while my father was in the service. Kids just seemed more together," said Kathy Roth, daughter of a retired enlisted man.

Danny Jackson, KP at the 524th Mess Hall says, "Sure there are advantages to being a military dependent. Things are cheap and free and you get to travel. But I wouldn't want to be in the Army myself."

"I couldn't have done as much, like travel, if I was a civilian dependent. And I wouldn't want to be, unless my dad was a millionaire," 18 year old Stan Cobur said.

Coming to the screen

World's Greatest Athlete

Coach John Amos and his assistant Tim Conway leave Merrivale College and journey to Africa after a disastrous losing streak in all sports. They discover Jan-Michael Vincent, a youth with remarkable athletic ability. Vincent was the son of missionaries and is now the godson of witch doctor Roscoe Lee Browne. Through trickery, Vincent is brought back to campus by Amos and Conway and coached to be a star in every sport. The witch doctor godfather is summoned from Africa to watch Vincent's exploitation. His Black Magic nearly causes Vincent's defeat at the national track and field events but he manages to salvage the honor of Merrivale College. This is an uproarious stroy that will tickle funnybones, young and old.

Dirty Harry

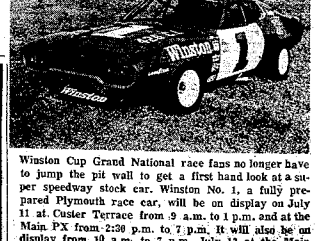
San Francisco is being terrorized by sniper Scorpio who kills a young girl swimming in a pool. Cunical cop Clint Eastwood, nick-named Dirty Harry, gets the order to bring Scorpio in. Scorpio threatens to kill a black and a priest if the city doesn't give him $100,000. Nearly caught, he doubles the ransom and uses a 14-year-old girl as a hostage. Eastwood tracks down Scorpio to Kezar Stadium and forces the killer into revealing the girl's hiding place. Later released, the ever-psychopathic Scorpio robs a liquor store and hijacks a school bus full of kids, demanding money and an escape from the authorities. After a chase and gun battle Eastwood and the maniacal Scorpio confront each other in a violent and exciting climax.

Ace Eli

ACE ELI AND RODGER OF THE SKIES deals with Eli Walford (Cliff Robertson) a World War I pilot who likes to remember himself as a hot shot (whether or not he actually was), who has trouble adjusting to the realities of life in a peacetime society when the hero image begins to fade. When his wife is killed in a plane crash, Eli and his 11-year-old son Rodger barnstorm the midwest in their homemade two-cockpit biplane. One begins to suspect that perhaps the more emotionally mature of the two is the son. The day Rodger takes the plane up without asking permission, and proves himself a magnificent natural pilot, his father experiences a traumatic awakening with which many parents will empathize.

Dramatizers looking for new members

The Fort Benning Music and Theatre Center, (Playhouse) is seeking new members to join the dramatizers theatre club.



The club is free and is open to both military and civilian personnel. No background in the theatre is needed. Present members range from amateurs, professionals, college trained and people who "always wanted to try it."

The purpose of the club is to provide an opportunity for all interested people to participate in all phases of the performing arts, to provide purposeful outlets for theatre minded people, to furnish audiences with high quality entertainment; and to promote post - community relationships.

In addition to producing plays, the dramatizers also sponsor a series of Saturday morning workshops. These too are open to anyone interested without charge.

Weekly Monday meetings are held at the Playhouse, Bldg. 1297, beginning at 7:30 p.m.

For further information, call the Playhouse, 545-3932-5057.

Dramatizers offer Sergel's 'Mouse'

The current endeavor of the Dramatizers is "The Mouse that Roared", written by Leonard Wibberley and adapted for the stage by Christopher Sergel. This enormously popular comedy has been performed more often and successfully in recent years than any other play in print.

The play concerns a monetary crisis in the miniscule monarchy of Grand Fenwick, founded in the 14th century by a roving band of English bowmen. For 600 years, the Duchy has thrived on the proceeds from its sole export, a famous wine.

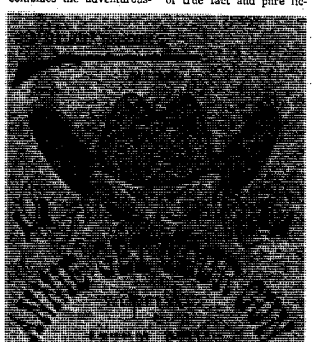
But the 20th century, a mild population explosion, and a California imitation of Pinot Grand Fenwick have wreaked havoc with the Fenwickians' balance of payments. Twenty-two year old Gloriana XII has the awesome responsibility of salvaging her country from financial ruin.

Gloriana's recent study of world politics (culled from Machiavelli and from a college text left by an American tourist; yields a solution. Since the United States rehabilitiates any country it defeats in a war, Grand Fenwick will declare war on the United States.

U. S. State Department officials ignore Fenwick's elaborate declaration of war, thinking it a prank of "the boys in the press room". What recourse has Gloriana but to form an expeditionary force and invade the United States?

The attack by a band of 14th century yeomen, led by woodsman Tully Bascom, ends in a victory for Grand Fenwick, and this unwelcome development causes further hilarious complications.

Also successful in the screen version with Jean Seberg and Peter Sellers, "The Mouse that Roared" provides an evening of thoroughly enjoyable entertainment for the entire family.



Productions at the Playhouse are scheduled for August 17, 18, 23, 24, and 25 at 8 p.m. In the meantime, anyone interested in working with the Dramatizers, on stage and off, should call 545-2932, or attend the weekly meeting any Monday at 7:30 p.m. at the Playhouse. Auditions for the play have been extended, and will be held through Friday, July 6, at 7:30 p.m. each evening.

Springer

Rehearsals underway for 'Annie Get Your Gun'

Casting has been completed and rehearsals are under way for ANNIE GET YOUR GUN, the Springer Theatre Company's summer musical for 1973.

Scheduled to open July 12 at the Springer Opera House, ANNIE GET YOUR GUN is rugged but romantic — a saga which combines the adventurousness of a Western with the even greater hazards of show business. The romance is anything but ordinary — it centers around an expert rifle shot, Frank Butler and Annie Oakley, a backwoods but by no means backward creature who had learned to shoot by doing what comes naturally. Inevitably — blend of true fact and pure fiction — there is a basic rivalry. The rivalry builds and its frustrations and problems, highs and lows are expressed brilliantly by the catchy and familiar tunes of Irving Berlin. Ultimately the rivalry ends when Frank and Annie discover that falling in love truly is wonderful.

Heading the Springer Theatre Company's large cast will be Lois Greene and Phil Courington in the roles of Annie Oakley and Frank Butler. Mrs. Greene is a newcomer to the STC and will be making her Springer debut in the hilarious role of Annie. Phil Courington is a Springer veteran and has just returned from a singing tour of Europe with the SINGING IRISH of Notre Dame University. Phil is probably best remembered for his roles of Lt. Cable in SOUTH PACIFIC and Curly in OKLAHOMA. Springer veteran, Peggy A. Blow and Jared Davis will be seen as Dollie and Charlie, two of the feature comedy roles with which ANNIE abounds. Others in featured roles are: Bill Miller as Sitting Bull; Ken Phillips as Buffalo Bill; and Herman Wallner as Pawnee Bill.

ANNIE GET YOUR GUN will not only delight adults but will also thrill children, as there are four devilish, delightful and hilarious children's roles. Portraying these mini-characters will be: Phillip Green as Jake; Laura Fessenden as Nellie; Julia Fessenden as Jessie; and Cindy Hines as Mimmie.

Ron Jacoby, who comes to the Springer via New York and most recently Kalamazoo, Michigan is directing ANNIE. Choreography of the show's many dance numbers is being done by Ted Adkins. Set design and other technical effects are being designed by Jim Othuse. The musical director is Bob Lee and the choral direction is under the guidance of Emily Simpson. Marge Lea is the production coordinator and Bill Frey is stage manager.

Others chosen for the cast include: Jeff Burgess, Larry Bush, Penny Shafer, Robert Behr, Bill Zacharias, Barbara Hall, Carol Frey, Mary Anne Koepsell, Charlie Reich, Billy Kendall, Jimmy Bennett, George Sabordo, Betty Britto, Jule Stahl and Ralph Manzi.

ANNIE GET YOUR GUN will be presented at the Springer Opera House July 12 through July 29. Performances will be at 8:30 p.m. with matinees July 15, 22 and 29 at 2:30 p.m. The Box Office will be open July 2 and will be open Monday through Friday. Reservations can be made by calling 327-3688 or 327-3689.

DCE personnel have new title

When the 125 personnel of the Directorate of Communications-Electronics reported to work July 2, they had a new title, a new emblem, and a new command channel. Military members of the activity are sporting a new shoulder patch: The orange-and-gold globe and lightening shield of the U. S. Army Strategic Communications Command (USASTRATCOM).

As part of the major Army reorganization now under way, C-E functions at Fort Benning and 100 other locations around the nation now come under the management of STRATCOM. This portion of the reorganization is designed to streamline communications management, standardize C-E operations, and provide the most effective use of C-E personnel and equipment in the operations of post communication centers, telephone exchanges, and other C-E functions.

Col. William J. Jones, Commander of the USASTRATCOM Agency, Fort Benning, also serves in a dual-hat role as the C-E Officer on the staff of Maj. Gen. Thomas M. Tarpley, post commander.

USASTRATCOM-CONUS is the major subcommand responsible for STRATCOM missions and operations within the continental United States (CONUS) and is headquartered at Fort Ritchie, Maryland. In addition to the 101 newly assigned elements, the 8,000-plus personnel of CONUS also operate:

— Major telecommunications activities at Carlisle Barracks, Pa.; Fort Detrick, Md.; Fort Leavenworth, Kan.; Hancock Field, N. Y.; and at the Pentagon.

— Satellite communications stations at Camp Roberts, Calif., and Fort Dix, N. J. Another satellite terminal is under construction at Fort Detrick, Md.

— Civil Defense Communications Systems and Area Frequency Coordinator offices at about a dozen locations around the country.

— C-E management for the Health Services Command and the Intelligence Command.

— Fort Ritchie, Md., as a class II installation.

Previously existing STRATCOM elements at Army Air Defense Command and Military Traffic Management and Terminal Service also became part of USASTRATCOM-CONUS, July 1.

FRANK NORSBURY JR.

Post teenager makes his first parachute jump

Frank Norbury Jr., age 16, made his first parachute jump recently from Lee Drop Zone at an altitude of 3,000 feet. He jumped from a UH1 helicopter from the 121st Aviation Company of the 145th Aviation Battalion.

Frank is the son of Sgt. Maj. and Mrs. Frank Norbury Sr. of the Directorate of Plans and Training. He was the first military dependent to jump at Fort Benning from a military aircraft under a new Army regulation which allows dependents age 16 and older, military retirees, Reserve components, and Department of Defense civilian employes to make sport parachute jumps from military aircraft.

Sgt. Maj. Norbury is a veteran of over 20 years of Airborne duty, having accumulated well over 1800 parachute jumps of which 1200 have been free falls. He is a Master Parachutist and has received the U. S. Parachute Association's gold wings, awarded to people who have made 1000 free fall parachute jumps.

Frank Jr.'s comments were: "I've been wating for the past couple of years to be able to make a parachute jump.

Soldier of Month named by 36th Eng. Gp. for June

Soldier of the month for the 36th Engineer Group (Combat) for June is Spc Leon L. Newsome. Specialist Newsome is a bulldozer operator from Company D, 43rd Engr. Bn.

Since coming to the 43rd in January of this year he has worked on several projects; the most recent being the demolition of buildings on Main Post.

Specialist Newsome joined the Army in February of 1971 and spent a 10 month tour in Vietnam. After his tour in Vietnam, Newsome separated from active duty to join the Reserves under the Reserve early release program.

After being out of the Army for a while Newsome said, "I didn't have the financial security that I enjoyed in the Active Army, so I made the decision to re-enlist. The benefits that the Army offers are hard to beat."

Specialist Newsome says that he likes his job, but doesn't know whether he'll make the Army a career this time. "The Army has taught me a skill that pays well in civilian life," says Newsome.

With 2½ years left on his committment he says that should he decide to leave the Army, he will be much better prepared because of the training he has received in the Army.

Volunteers have same dreams as predecessors

Does anyone know how old the Red Cross Volunteer Program is at Fort Benning? Files and scrapbooks at the Field Office indicate that the Red Cross opened an office at Fort Benning in July 1925, and while volunteers are not mentioned at this time, it is assumed they were on the job too.

The scrapbooks are old and yellowed and one gets a mild jolt in recognizing Red Cross Field Directors of the time who now occupy high positions in the Red Cross. The volunteers themselves were wives of junior officers who bore names that years later would be known throughout the world.

The pictures in these oldtime scrapbooks have caught them in their youth with all their hopes and dreams ahead of them. The volunteers of today may wear modern uniforms and hairstyles and have modern ideas and attitudes but they have something in common with the volunteers of years ago besides their youth. They too are full of hope and great promise.

It is interesting to think that years hence someone at Fort Benning will open a Red Cross Volunteer scrapbook and receive the same satisfaction we have in looking at past years. Perhaps the names will not be familiar but the idea they represent will be the same: That each of us in his own way and own time is trying to realize the potential we were born with and put it to use in a way that will make us happy and others less unhappy.

Henry Dunant, the founder of the Red Cross, put it this way, "The moral sense of the importance of human life; the humane desire to lighten a little the torments . . . all these create a kind of energy which gives one a positive craving to relieve as many as one can."

USAIC golf championship to be conducted this month

Attention, all you self-acclaimed golf pros. The 1973 USAIC Golf Championship will be conducted during the period July 16-20 at the Fort Benning Officer's Open Mess Golf Course.

All military personnel on active duty at Fort Benning are eligible to participate. Individual entries must be submitted to the Golf Pro-Shops at the Fort Benning Officer's Open Mess and Special Services Golf Course, Sand Hill or the USAIC Sports Office, Bldg. 394 not later than July 11 for participation in the initial 36 holes of this tournament.

The low 32 scores in the men's open division, the low 12 scores in the men's senior division and the low 6 scores in the women's open and senior division will continue to play an additional 36 holes.

At completion of the initial rounds, divisions will be divided into flights as follows: Open Division; championship flight, first flight, second flight, third flight, senior division; championship

Army marksmen ready for CISM trials in July

U.S. Army marksmen, both rifle and pistol, have their sights on the forthcoming Conseil International du Sports Militaire (CISM) trials to be held during the month of July. A five man team from each division will be selected at the specific trials to represent the nation in the CISM matches which will be held this year in Kungshagen, Sweden.

The first of these trials, the rifle division will be hosted by the U. S. Army Infantry Center at Fort Benning July 10 through 12 with the pistol trials, which are hosted by the U.S. Air Force, being held at Lackland AFB, San Antonio, Texas, July 16 through 19.

An annual affair, the CISM matches pits the best military marksmen of the near 40 member nations in what is normally called the "the military olympics." The 1972 matches were held in Cairo, Egypt.

Initiated in 1948, the matches were first held in Nice, France. An antique pair of 6th Century silver flintlock "dueling pistols" are presented to the winning national team by King Paul of Greece upon the inauguration of the international matches as a rotating championship trophy. The near priceless pistols were won by the U.S. team last year making their fifth consecutive year of winning the coveted championship and trophy.

The three days of trials of the three positions. The Infantry post will include a 900 point combination slow fire and rapid fire total each day. The first 60 shots will be fired with the Army standard "big bore" rifle over a 300 meter course, 20 shots from each prone, standing and kneeling positions. The remaining 30 shots will be fired as military rapid fire, ten shots from each of the three positions. The championship will be awarded on the high aggregate of the three day 2,700 Grand total.

ROD AND GUN CLUB Notes

BY BILL KLOEB

Winners of the Rod and Gun Club June Fishing Derby turned in some really good ctaches last month.

First Sergeant (ret.) P. D. Murray, 1219 Brandywine Drive, won the catfish contest with a 13-pound, 10-ounce monster he took from Twilight Pond while using a cricket as bait.

Herman D. Couch, 927 Brighton Road, took the largest bass honors with an 8-pound catch from Clear Creek Pond. That is the first time in some time that anything taken from Clear Creek has won anything. It used to produce some good size bass and bream. They are probably still there too. Not much is ever said about this pond but it's a joy to go out there even if you don't catch anything. I think it's one of the most picturesque places on post.

There was a tie in the bream contest this month. Roy Johnson says it couldn't be true but SSgt. James Buck of the 58th Armor has witnesses that he took a 1-pound bream from Victory Pond. The other man who had an entry weighing exactly the same was SFC Robert McGee, 538 Oakley Drive, who took his catch from Hedley Pond.

The Rod and Gun Club conducts a fishing derby each month of the year. Prizes are awarded to fishermen registering the largest catfish, bream or bass at the club. The contest is open to any club member authorized to fish on post. The rules are few but they are rigidly enforced. You have to register for the contest each time you intend to compete. Fish must be caught from one of the ponds on the reservation and brought to the club for weighing. Fishermen catching fish after operating hours of the club may bring in catches the next day.

KILLING WITH KINDNESS

There have been several instances where people have found fawns dropped this Spring and taken them home. This is a bad thing that doesn't do the wild animal population any good. People who do it usually have the best intentions. In most cases they do it because they are afraid to think about the young thing starving to death out in the woods. In all probability that wouldn't happen if the animal were left alone. The mother will not show herself while humans are around but will come back to care for her young when the humans leave if they don't fondle the animal. Actually thinking about the animal starving is better than what happens to most people who take wild animals home. They not only have to think about the poor animal starving to death they also have to stand by and watch it happen. It's rare that a person will accidentally duplicate the formula of the milk the fawn or other animal gets from its mother. If the formula is not compatible with the digestive system of the animal the animal will not take it or if it does take it when forced the stomach will not hold it. The animal starves to death more surely than if it had been left in the woods.

YOU WOULDN'T LIKE IT

Even if the animal survives against all the odds it is doomed to an unnatural life. A grown deer couldn't be satisfied in a back yard, raccoons and other wild animals couldn't be happy in a cage and a squirrel certainly doesn't want to spend life on a treadmill. Besides, it's against the law to subject animals to these conditions. In the state of Georgia it is against the law to keep wild animals unless the State Game and Fish Commission has given approval. The commission has recognized the harm done by taking animals from their natural habitat and recently announced that it would not grant this permission in the future.

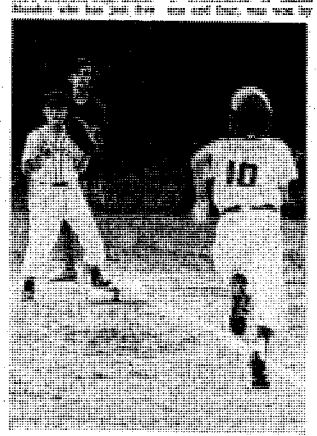
LOOK BUT DON'T TOUCH

It may seem like a good idea at the time and it may provide an unforgettable experience for the children but in almost every case it will be an unpleasant memory. Do yourself, the kids and the animals a big favor. Let them alone in their natural surroundings. Let nature take its course. Enjoy looking but don't touch. When you are fortunate enough to come across some animals in their natural surroundings, leave things as you found them. You can bet someone is watching you and in most cases its going to be the parents of the animal or bird you are watching.

State High Power Rifle Championship won by Army Champ SSgt. Arpail

All Army Service Rifle Champion SSgt. Arpail Gapol with the U.S. Army Marksmanship Training Unit, fired an impressive four match aggregate of 784-27X to win the Georgia State High Power Rifle Championship Match on McAndrews range in a two day match ending July 1.

Gapol, winner of the recent Southeastern Regional and All Army Championships, was in contention all the way although he failed to win any of the individual matches. He placed in two of the events, one of which he was tied with the winner, and then won the rapid fire aggregate on his way to the championship.



Runner up honors in the two day tourney was captured by an outstanding [illegible] Hiner [illegible] with a [illegible] of [illegible] [illegible] was [illegible] by SSgt. Daniel Krammes while Gapol prevailed in the rapid fire combination of match two and three.

In four man team action into the forefront as he led tion, Gapol again surged an Army Marksmanship Unit squad into the victory circle with their combined effort of 1,944-54X. Members of the championship squad, coached by MSgt. Burl Branham, in addition to Gapol included MSgt. James McQuien, SFC Martin Edmondson and Krammes.

The weekend marksmanship tourney hosted 55 shooters including ten civilian competitors, six Marines, two Army Reserves and 37 Army marksmen. In addition to the State Championship match, an Excellence - in-Competition match or "leg" match was offered the non-distinguished shooters, 1st Lt. David Soelle of New Bedford, Mass., won the event and the accompanying points toward his Distinguished Rifleman Badge.

Individual match results showed 2nd Lt. Stephen Carder winning the initital event, a 200 yard slow fire match with his 197-7X, Mandon taking the 200-yard rapid fire match with a perfect grouping of all 20 shots in the ten ring for a 200-8X, Capt. Ed Schumacher claiming the 300 yard rapid fire with 197-5X in a decision after a tie with Gapol and a talented civilian marksman Robert Relbor, Atlanta, Ga., grabbing the long range 600 yard match with his 197-4X.

The slow fire aggregate, a [illegible] of [illegible] was [illegible] by Indians scalp Braves

Walks and errors by Braves players enabled the Indians to beat the Braves 6-1 in dependent Minor League action on Post.

The Indians lost their previous meeting with the Braves, 9-1.

The Braves took the lead in the top of the first on a double by Chris Gill and a single by Clarence Rhymes.

Braves pitcher Gary Cody held the Indians scoreless in their first inning, but the Indians tied the game up in the bottom of the second on two straight base hits by Bill Hoffer and Mike Brake.

In the Indians' fourth, Brake led off with a single and stole second and third and came in to score on a passed ball.

The final runs scored by the Indians came in the fifth inning.

WAC swimmers slated July 12

Gasp. Glug-glug. Gasp.

Remember the old days when Buster Crabbe rescued Esther Williams from the toils of a ufeshia sea-serpent? A bit of nostalgia will be resurrected for Fort Benning and the Columbus area when the Women's Army Corps Synchronized Swim Team performs here.

The program consists of a melodrama skit, a Russian skit, a hoedown skit, and a finale entitled "America." It will last about one hour. The presentations will be held at Carey Pool on July 12 at 7 p.m.; July 13 at Kelley Hill Pool at 7 p.m. and again at Carey Pool on July 14 for two final performances at 2 p.m. and 7 p.m.

Under the leadership of Capt. Dorothy Baetche, the group consists of officers, enlisted women and civilians. They execute precision movements and delicate ballet variations in the water, making their prospective visit to Fort Benning one to look forward to.

The precision aquatic group, presently stationed at the U. S. Modern Pentathlon Training Center, Fort Sam Houston, Tex., is making a nine-post tour and will arrive at Fort Benning on July 11 for six performances.

flight, first flight, Women's Division; championship flight (open) and championship flight. Competition in the women's divisions will be held only if sufficient entries warrant. Should a tie exist in any position for which an award is being given a sudden death playoff will be held.

Awards will be presented to the medalist of each division and winner and runner-up for each flight.

Senior Division participants must be 45 years of age or more on or before July 16. Seniors may compete in the open division; however, entry in the open division will preclude competing in the senior's division. Selection of divisions will be final wth acceptance of the entry. Competition will be governed by the 1973 United States Golf Association Rules as modified by the local golf committee.

All playing equipment except golf balls will be provided by individual participants.

For further information contact the sports office at 545-1516.

Draggin' around

Phenix Dragway had the biggest "ET" meet of tte season on Wednesday, June 27. There were 116 entrants and eight trophy winners.

Bill Cobb in a Fairlane Wagon came out the money winner over the other bracket winners. They were Ray Vasquez (Camaro), Dwight Lake ('62 Chevy), Tom Cain (Chevy Pickup), "Little Jack" (Volkswagen), Mary Ann Adcock ('65 Valiant), Jimmy Parker ('65 Chevy), and Bill Cobb who won two trophies.

Not one of these cars was hopped up. Just ordinary street cars. All that you have to do to win is to be able to run the ¼ mile in the same or very nearly the same time — every time.

It sounds easy -- but sometimes your tires spin on the starting line — this slows your time down. In a straight stick, you might not shift at the same time every time — which effects your elapsed time (ET). Even in an automatic, it doesn't necessarily shift at the same time. And the most important facet of all is — how close you can cut the starting light without red-lighting. The speed of your car is not important because everyone is handicapped in pairs. If it takes your car 20 seconds to reach the finish line and my car 15 seconds, then when we run in the race, you would get a 5-second head start.

Saturday's crowd slacked off for some reason. There were only 54 entrants. Jimmy Parker won 2 trophies. His wife, Sandra, won one and James Andrews won the other one. Jimmy Parker put out James Andrews.

July 4 results

The duo of Lee Howard and Jim Gary defeated Jerry Johnson and Don Bincent to take home the championship flight trophy and merchandise award during the Sand Hill Golf Course's Fourth of July Golf Tournament. The tournament was held June 30-July 1 at the Sand Hill facility.

32 two-man teams vied for trophies and awards in this 36 hole tourney.

Other winners were: Henry Wilson and Willie Lewis in the first flight and runners-up William Webb and Bill Blankenship; Joe Pearsey and William Lutz in the second flight with runners-up James Mize and Larry Howell, George Heider and John Heider in the third flight with runners-up Larry Craven and David Iglehart. Closest to hole two was Robert Vinning with Sandra then beat Jimmy for one lost and he forfeited the next run to her. So the Parker's took home the $50.

Modified eliminator was the Parkers took home the won by Speedy Ball from Anniston, Alabama in a D-Gas Willys. Super Stock eliminator consisted of SS-N Mustang with Barry Parmer, SS-X Chevy with Tom Carroll, and SS-D Camaro with Jimmy Parker. Jimmy Parker defeated the other two and took home theis money also.

Matthews is best on nets

Major Allen Matthews of the 36th Engr. Gp. S-3 Section recently won the 3rd Army Seniors Singles Tennis Championship at Fort Bragg, N. C.

The week long tournament hosted participants from all over the 3rd Army area, with the Seniors Division being composed of all those over 40 years of age.

After a week of competition, Maj. Matthews made it to the finals and defeated CSM Caneda, from Ft. Gordon in straight sets to win the singles portion of the tourney.

Maj. Matthews almost made a clean sweep of the tourney, but lost in the doubles competition after making it to the finals.

A frequent visitor to the FBOOM tennis courts here at Fort Benning, he says that he has only been playing tennis for six years.

As a result of his victory at Fort Bragg, Maj. Matthews has been nominated to play in the All-Army Tournament in Washington, D. C. to be held later this summer.

Don't quit!

When things go wrong, as they sometimes will.
When the road you're trudging seems all up hill,
When the funds are low and the debts are high
And when you want to smile, but you have to sigh,
When care is pressing you down a bit
Rest if you must, but don't you quit.
Life is queer with its twists and turns
As everyone of us sometimes learns.
And many a failure turns about
When he might have won had he stuck it out;
Don't give up though the pace seems slow —
You may succeed with another blow.
Often the goal is nearer than
It seems to a faint and faltering man,
Often the struggler has given up
When he might have captured the victor's cup.
And he learned too late, when the night slipped down
How close he was to the golden crown.
Success is failure turned inside out—
The silver tint of the clouds of doubt.
And you can never tell how close you are,
It may be near when it seems afar;
So stick to the fight when you're hardest hit—
It's when things seem worst that you must'nt quit.

Jasper helps out

Capt. James Jasper, ROTC Committee of the Department of Army Wide Training Support, has been the scoutmaster of about 15 underprivileged Columbus boys for about seven months.

The troop, which is part of the Weracoba District Chattahoochee Council of the Boy Scouts of America, camps, swims and plays basketball on post for many of their activities.

They are attending camp July 18. This was financed in part by their candy sales.

Craker returns to the good life

Your time of separation is getting closer each day as you settle back and relax just dreaming abut that high-paying job that's waiting for the day that you can get rid of that uniform you've been wearing for so long. The final day comes, you hop on the plane for home and when you get there you find out that someone has had your job for the last two months. What do you do? You take what you can get.

This was the case of Sp4 Daniel W. Craker. The reason he E.T.S.'d is because he had a managing job waiting for him. But someone had already taken the job two months prior to his day of separation. So he got a job as a cabinet maker. After a period of time he began to miss Army life, so he decided to get back into the uniform that he proudly displayed before he got out.

At this time he was in his hometown, Jamestown, New York. When he decided to re-enlist, CPT Mike Nelson, commander of HHC, 36th Engineer Group, contacted him and then went to New York to swear him in.

The reason that Craker chose CPT Nelson to swear him in is because of their personal friendship. SP4 Craker was a medical supply specialist at Martin Army Hospital in Ft. Lewis, when CPT Nelson was medically evacuated from Vietnam. With CPT Nelson's injured leg, the doctors said it was doubtful whether he could ever recover completely, but SP4 Craker who's off post quarters were right next to CPT Nelson's, spent all of his extra time trying to get him walking again. Soon they were walking, exercising, and even running together.

Benning Flying Club provides rare thrills

THOMAS K. PHIFER

Glance up in the sky toward the Lawson Army Airfield area about any day and as likely as not you'll see the sun glint off of the silver wings of a small civilian airplane as it noses its way skyward above the tree tops. It will most likely be one of the Fort Benning Flying Club aircraft, piloted by a member out for an exhilarating, fun-filled flight. Or it may be a fledgling student pilot receiving flight instruction from one of the flying club FAA instructor pilots.

Later on, after the flight, if we could be down at the flying club office, building 2416, we'd probably see a big smile on that pilot's face as he raps with fellow pilots. Like all pilots he will undoubtedly be doing a little "sign language flying" with his hands to portray his flight maneuvers to his friends.

The Fort Benning Flying Club has a rather impressive fleet of aircraft. Come on, let's take a stroll around the flight ramp where the aircraft are and have a look at some of them.

Over there is a Cessna 150. It's a two place airplane. That's the type that most of the club members learn to fly in. It's easy to handle and sweet to fly. There are four Cessna 150's for club use.

The red and white one is a four place Cessna 172. It's a real nice cross-country airplane, just right for trips. The club has four of these. The fact that there are two converted U. S. Army Cessna T-41's included in the fleet of 172's might be of interest to the Army Aviators in the crowd. These two aircraft are on loan to the Fort Benning Flying Club for use by members. A lot of the members learning to fly on the VA use the Cessna 172's for their cross-country flights.

Some of the more advanced members get their multi-engine rating in that twin engine beauty over there. It's a Piper Apache.

Hey, have you ever wished you could get away from it all and buzz up there in the big blue? Well, you can. Sure you can. If flying has been your dream, there's no better time to start than now. Come on down to the club at Lawson Army Airfield, building 2416, or give 'em a ring at 545-2949 for the full story. For those interested, there is also a very active VA flying program through the club. Or perhaps you're one of those who has been away from flying for awhile and misses the thrill. No matter which one you are, you have the opportunity by joining the Fort Benning Flying Club.

Membership is open to active duty or retired service personnel, and military dependents. You ladies are strongly encouraged and welcomed. We already have several aviatrix members who love to fly. They proudly possess their pilots' licenses and use them.

Come FLY with us. Put yourself in the cockpit and experience that rare and unforgettable thrill as you climb skyward above the tree tops, the sun glinting off your silver wings.

Pre-WWI veteran dies

One of the few servicemen who served as a pre-World War I vet and a veteran of both World Wars and the Korean conflict died here last week at the age of 76.

SFC Alexander M. Hunter enlisted in the Marine Corps in 1916. He took part in many battles and was gassed twice and discharged in 1919.

He returned to the farm and coal mine that had been in his family since the Civil War. His gassed lungs began to give him trouble and he was treated in a veteran's hospital for two years.

Sgt. Hunter returned once again to the family home and resumed farming and mining until his father's death. The remainder of the family sold their holdings in 1936 and Hunter went west to prospect for gold. He started at a place called Superstition Range in Arizona and found no trace of gold. He moved on to Weaver Creek, Arizona and panned $780 worth of gold.

When Pearl Harbor was bombed in 1941, Sgt. Hunter tried immediately to enlist in the Marines but they would only give him a limited duty assignment in the States. He was accepted into the Army for duty in the Southwest Pacific.

The equatorial regions had made him ill and Hunter had to return to the states. He was discharged when he recovered and immediately reenlisted for the ETO to finish out the conflict in Europe.

When the fighting was over, he married the daughter of a judge of Trebintz, Silesia, Germany (New Poland) and was assigned here. He was then sent to the front with the outbreak of the Korean conflict and returned o

Sgt. Hunter served as Fort Benning in 1953.

Thanks!

DEAR EDITOR,

Last Wednesday, 20 June, around 2300 hours my husband and I were stuck at the Main Post Bowling Center without any lights in our car. Whoever said that chivalry is dead and there are no more good Samaritans left does not know the young soldier who came to our rescue.

He was in the process of escorting us to the Provost Marshal's Office when an M.P. came along and took over. Unfortunately we did not have a chance to thank him. I know of no other way to do so but through your paper. I only hope he reads this. Thank you so much Good Samaritan, whoever you are.

Most sincerely yours,
Captain and Mrs. Robert H. Taylor

Thirty-five Old Guard soldiers finish airborne

BY BILLY SAMS

Thirty-five soldiers of the 1st Battalion, 3rd Infantry (of the Old Guard), the oldest active unit in the Army today, stationed at Fort McNair, Washington, D.C., and Fort Myer, Va., recently completed airborne training at Fort Benning, Ga.

The Old Guard is the first unit of its kind in the history of the Army to go through airborne training. It is also the first time the Airborne Training Unit at Fort Benning has ever trained a unit of this type.

Since there are no jump slots open in the unit, all of the men that took part are volunteers. The airborne training was only one degree of special adventure training, in which the unit will participate in the future.

While undergoing training, the Old Guard was assigned to the 43rd Company, 4th Student Battalion. The 43rd Company is under the guidance and supervision of Cpt. Earl N. Steck and 1st Sgt. William G. Smith.

The unit of the Old Guard consists of seven companies. Col. Harry H. Perritt is the commander, and command Sgt. Maj. Nathanal R. McElroy, as the battalion cmd. sgt. maj.

Among the duties performed by the Old Guard, are guarding the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, serving as the President's personal honor guard, and acting as honor guard for special visiting dignitaries in the Washington, D.C. and surrounding areas. They also attend and participate in burial ceremonies at Arlington Cemetery and host special ceremonial events.

Because of the historical background of the Old Guard, they are the only unit in the Army authorized to pass in review with fixed bayonets.

Each year, beginning in March and continuing through April, the Old Guard participates in a pageant held at Fort Myer, Va., in which historical displays of the unit are represented.

This pageant, held in March and April, is called "The Spirit of America". In it, the unit depicts the Army as it appeared in 1775, the year the U.S. Army began.

A second pageant and shorter version of "The Spirit of America", is also held from June through August at the Jefferson Memorial in Washington, D.C.

In an interview with the training NCO of the old Guard, SFC Lacy McDougald is training NCO of the old guard. He is a specialist in airborne training, with a master parachutist's rating and over one hundred jumps to his credit. A professional soldier in every respect, he stated, "The men of the 1st Battalion, 3rd Infantry (of the Old Guard) are the mostly highly trained ceremonial soldiers in the Army today."

He also pointed out, "Each and every man in the unit of the Old Guard displays a great deal of pride in being a member of the oldest active unit in the U. S. Army."

High School students make friendly invasion

High school students from Columbus have invaded Benning this summer. The invasion is a friendly one, as these kids are here working for the U. S. Army. Helping in the administrative section of The School Brigade are four teen-agers who find their first time working with the military a new and interesting experience.

Sekena Harper 17, Nita West 17, John Winstead 14 and Ralph Richardson 17, all found summer employment with TSB through the Columbus Youth Opportunity (CYO). The CYO places students in jobs around Columbus each summer.

Sekena Harper or "Kena" as she likes to be called, will be a senior at Kendrick High School next year. She works in TSB's S-1 Section, helping with administrative and clerical work. "This is the second year I've gone to CYO for a summer job, and I like this job the best." Although nervous about it at first, she finds she enjoys working with military people. "I've never done it before, so it's a brand new experience. I did not think the people would be as nice as they have been."

Nita West will be a senior next year at Baker High, she has been helping in TSB's Race Relations Equal Opportunity office. "I especially like answering the phones and typing," she says. "Meeting new people and learning the military method of doing things could also be a big help in the future."

John Winstead sees a possible military career on his horizon, "I'm on the rifle team at Baker High. What I'd like to do is come in the Army after I graduate and do the same thing." A sophomore, Winstead helps with the administration and typing of reports.

Sharing up the Message Center is Ralph Richardson, a junior at Baker. He adjusted right away to working with the military and finds that he enjoys it. He runs the copying machine, a daily TSB operation. "I'm not sure about any future military career, but for right now I like working at TSB."

Big, Little Brothers meet

Fifteen pairs of Big and Little Brothers and other unassigned men and boys went to Tamarack Estate in Midland, Ga. for their monthly group activity Saturday.

Col. and Mrs. Coyles provided the estate, which included horses, dogs, a pool and patio and game facilities.

Class Q allotments converted for EM

According to a message from Department of the Army, personnel in grades E1 to E4 are no longer required to establish Class Q allotments for dependents. All present Class Q allotments will be converted to Class T (Temporary) allotments and will be continued until the soldier elects one of the options now available.

The soldier may continue his allotment in the same amount by changing the Class T to Class E. He may also increase or decrease his allotment by stopping the Class T allotment and initiating a Class E for the desired amount. He may terminate the allotment by executing a statement to the effect that he has been counseled regarding his responsibility to his dependents, and does not desire an allotment for their support. Under the provisions of the Department of the Army message, unit commanders are charged to counsel all soldiers assigned to their units that are currently assigned a Class Q allotment.

The counseling must be completed and documentation submitted to the Finance Office by August 10, 1973 to be effective at the end of August 1973. The Finance Office is currently preparing a list of all soldiers who are presently receiving a Class Q allotment. This list will be provided to the unit commanders on or about July 20, 1973.

As a result of this change, personnel in the grades E-1 through E-4 will be able to obtain authorization for quarters allowance in the same manner as all other individuals. That is, the individual must present a certified copy of his marriage certificate to the local Finance Office. At this time he will be given the opportunity to obtain a Class E allotment for support of his dependents.

Woodard selected for BG

The Surgeon General of the Army and Maj. Gen. Thomas M. Tarpley, Fort Benning commander, announced this week that Col. George S. Woodard Jr. has been selected for promotion to Brigadier General. Col. Woodard has been commander of Martin Army Hospital and MEDDAC since January, 1973.

He served as chief of orthopedics at the U. S. Army Hospital, Fort Campbell, Ky., at the 24th General Hospital, Orleans, France, at Womack Army Hospital, Fort Bragg, N.C., and at Tripler General Hospital, Honolulu, Hawaii.

Col. Woodard served in the Office of the Surgeon General, and in the Canal Zone. He was chief of the department of surgery, deputy commander, chief of professional services, and director, medical education at Brooke General Hospital, Fort Sam Houston, Tex., from 1970 to 1973.

He graduated from the University of Missouri School of Medicine, Columbia, Mo., with a B.S. degree, and received his M.D. degree from Washington University School of Medicine, Washington, Mo.

He attended Command and General Staff College and the Army War College.

Col. Woodard is a member of the American Medical Association; the Association of Military Surgeons; the Aerospace Medical Association; the Society of U. S. Army Fligyt Surgeons; the American Academy of Orthopedic Surgeons.

MAH Dentist is a lady

Many of us often dread the thoughts of having to go to the dentist, but if you add beauty and charm to your mental picture of the dentist, it might make things a little easier for you.

Through the efforts of Col. Leander Gallegos, director of Dental Intern Training at Martin Army Hospital, these impossibilities have become a reality in the person of Captain Barbara Sias, the first female Dental Intern in the entire U. S. Army.

CAPT. BARBARA SIAS

Captain Sias, a graduate of Meharry Medical College; School of Dentistry in Nashville, Tennessee is undergoing a vigorous program at Bernheim Dental Clinic which will give her that quality of expertise that should go hand in hand with a degree. Although an internship is not a mandatory step to a private practice as a dentist, she insisted on it instead of the lucrative offers that she had after finishing Dental School.

The Army Intern Program was initiated in 1947 and after twenty-six years the much needed touch of a female dentist was finally added. In this program, Captain Sias will be mainly concerned with (1) Periodontics (which deals with structures around the teeth) and Preventive Dentistry, (2) Examination, diagnosis and treatment planning, (3) Fixed Prosthodontics (which deals with complete dental plates) and Restorative Dentistry, (4) Removable Prosthodontics (which deals with partial plates) and (5) Oral Surgery.

A first impression of Captain Sias on the non-professional side might cause one to think that she is a Women's Lib Activist but after getting to know her, you will find (like I have) that she is a pretty "HEAVY" lady who has it all together.

ROTC cadets becoming Rangers

ROTC Cadets are rapidly becoming Rangers at Fort Benning, Georgia this — the third year — the opportunity has been offered to future Army Reserve Officers. Some 138 colleges and universities and 47 states, including Puerto Rico, are represented this year.

The ROTC Cadets undergoing Ranger Training not only volunteered for, the course, but were screened by their respective Professors of Military Science, based on motivation, maturity, and knowledge. Those selected are among the most outstanding cadets in ROTC.

The regular Ranger Course is 58 days in length; however, in order to include those classes which are required in ROTC summer camp, such as rifle marksmanship, the ROTC Ranger Course was lengthened by five days.

The demanding 63 day Ranger course is divided into three phases, each of approximately the same duration. The first phase is conducted at Fort Benning. During this phase the Ranger student concentrates on physical conditioning, land navigation, and the fundamentals of patrolling.

The second phase of the course takes place at the Mountain Ranger Camp, Camp Frank D. Merrill, Dahlonega, Georgia. During this phase the Ranger student operates in a conventional environment while assigned long-range patrolling missions. Also, the Cadet is introduced to mountaineering techniques.

The final phase of the training takes place at the Florida Ranger Camp, Biancur Field, Eglin Air Force Base, Florida, where the student takes part in counterguerrilla, airmobile, and small boat operations.

The students do not receive some of the training their counterparts do in regular ROTC summer camp, but the stress-oriented leadership situations presented to the students in the Ranger course are without equal in the military. The vast majority of student comments continue to be praiseworthy about the course and the instructors.

Cadet Lisle Brook from Texas Christian University summed up the feelings of all the cadets when he observed, "The Ranger Course has been a real challenge. The officer and NCO instructors are obviously the best in the Army. Their professional competence and sincere interest in the students is a real tribute to the Army and the Ranger Department."

Troop housing improved

Something is really being done at Fort Benning about present troop living quarters.

A Barracks Modernization Project began here in June, 1972, to accommodate major units more adequately. Buildings on the 2700 block, 2800 block and in Kelly Hill will be affected by the improvement efforts.

Some 22 barracks are scheduled to be renovated by the end of 1974, and will cost about $9 million. In addition, two buildings have been completed and will be available for occupancy when the air conditioning has been installed. The renovation of these two barracks cost about $776,000.

The rooms in the new barracks are designed with separate color schemes and will hold one or two people. Individual mail boxes will be provided for the occupants in another area.

Included in the modernization will be the improvement of mess and dining facilities. Decorator packages, including different motifs, will also be available.

Future needs were considered in the planning of this project. Easy access to supporting facilities, such as recreation, post exchange and transportation, were taken into consideration.

Locating individuals close to work and housing units relatively close together were other aims of the project. Planning also included a consideration to keep moves to a minimum.

TIC increases dividend rate

Mr. George Leamon, Manager of the TIC Federal Credit Union, announced today that the Credit Union's Board of Directors has increased the dividend rate from 5.5 per cent to 5.75 per cent. Dividends at the new rate were credited to deposits on 1 July 1973.

SOUND OFF!

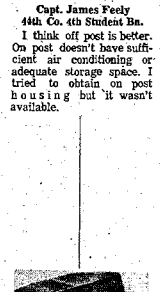
Do you prefer on post or off post housing for you and your dependents?

Sp6 Samuel Davis
598th Lt. Main.

I prefer on post. It's close to my job and the people around me are oriented towards my job. My neighbors and I have more in common and at some posts the on post housing is considerably better than the off post. Also my wife made me.

Capt. James Hoffman
12 Co. TSB
Advance Course

On post housing wasn't available when I wanted it, but I like off post housing better anyway. The duplexes on post don't give you enough privacy. As for being close to the commissary, my wife and I do the shopping on the weekends.



E6 Curtis Stewart
Co. B. Headquarters Command

I enjoy off post housing better because I have more freedom. I live in a mobile home and it is cheaper than what I would be paying on post.

E5 Harvey Kaminski
Co. B. Hq. Command

I like off post housing. I live in a trailer and am able to save a portion of my quarter's allowance for future use. I think the quarters here at Fort Benning are good.

Capt. James Feely
44th Co. 4th Student Bn.

I think off post is better. On post doesn't have sufficient air conditioning or adequate storage space. I tried to obtain on post housing but it wasn't available.

E-6 Cary Rutland
HHC 4th Student Bn.

I prefer off post housing and living. There is more privacy and I'm buying my home now and the money is going into my investment. I plan on retiring here. Over in Germany I lived on post and there were too many children and the noise level was tremendously high. There was a Senior NCO in each apartment building that would tell you when and how to keep up your apartment. Now I take care of my home myself and am responsible to myself.

How to develop esprit

Esprit refers to the spirit that exists in members of a group which has enthusiasm, devotion, and a strong regard for the honor of the group. Championship teams, victorious political parties, and military units with high morale can be said to possess esprit. This is a quality that is needed in all groups — both military and civilian. The following are ideas that are worth thinking about in connection with developing esprit.

FIRST, social mobility weakens esprit. A fundamental change in our society has been the increase in technology which has made our lives more impersonal. We move around more, and feel fewer ties to any one place. We meet more people but have fewer lasting friends. This has led to loss of esprit for such groups as home, church and neighborhood. Mobility is one of the factors which undermines esprit in military units unless special attention is paid to overcoming the results of rootlessness.

SECOND, cooperation is the framework within which esprit can be developed. COOPERATION is a social process that involves the mutual actions of individuals seeking a common goal. In the military we are constantly talking about "operations;" what is really meant is COOPERATION between many elements to accomplish a mission. It is within this framework of cooperation that esprit is developef in the military of any other group.

THIRD, the basic longing of people today seems to be for a sense of community. We can have this sense of belonging in the military service when we see that individual welfare is linked with our willingness to work for the betterment of the whole group. Perhaps the most profound measure of esprit in a military unit is the extent to which individual soldiers are willing to trust each other. Such willingness to depend upon each other is the heart of the meaning of esprit. It underscores our need to develop a feeling of mutual trust with the people we live and work with in the Army as well as in the stress of combat.

Drug Abuse

Benning Chaplain speaks out on problem

Chaplain (Capt.) Thomas R. Fraker, presently in the Alcohol and Drug Abuse Control Office, came to Fort Benning in February, 1969. Before that, he spent 12 years as the local pastor in a Methodist Church, three years as a Conference Director of Youth Work, nine years part-time in Special Police work for drug abuse, six years military active duty and three years in the Reserves.

Chaplain Fraker is a veteran of Vietnam and qualified as a Master Parachutist and Pathfinder. He began his work in the Drug Abuse Control Office in January, 1972.

In this first part of a three part series Chaplain Fraker will discuss his experiences in working with youth over the past several years. He has become convinced that there are three basic reasons why will try to satisfy; if society does not provide satisfactory acceptable ways of satisfying these needs, they will try by deviant ways. Satisfaction of basic needs of affection, worth and adulthood will be attempted until satisfied or until the initiative of the kids experience most deviant behavior such as drug abuse, street-gang fighting, theft, sexual promiscuity, etc.

This series of articles deals with one of these causes and is based on the premise that people have basic needs which they individual is destroyed.

Rites of Passage

One of the grossest flaws in our social structure is the absence of rites of passage. The fact is that there is little or no place for kids to realize adulthood, to have a responsible cause, to work for a "now" goal, to conquer their mountains. There are few jobs available (who needs one, anyhow, with parents' affluence?), and playing all day gets boring. The fight kids are waging for the establishment is to take a hard look at itself is also filling a desperate void for kids in our social structure. The very fight itself gives them something to do, a way to belong, to feel important. The attitudes and actions of many adults convey the impression that kids from twelve through twenty are worthless — worse than worthless, a real burden—to modern families. Kids often band together to fight the establishment and thereby fill a void in their growth experience. The rebels with whom I have talked seem to be saying:

We have found a cause, an idea, a principle, a belonging for which to fight. Here we feel important: here we are needed: here we can be worth something.

Another group of kids "tune in, turn on, and drop out" with drugs rather than engage in the struggle for living highs. These become the emptiest, most pitiful persons in our society. Those who completely drop out with drugs are accepting the voids as a way of life and using chemicals as a panacea. Drugs then become either an escape from meaningless community relationships or a means of personal involvement in community life. To be spanked is better than to be ignored, to be failed for rebellion is better than to be left out. But what young people really want is to be a real, useful part of society, of life. Instead, they feel they are being pushed out onto the fringes of life.

We have wined them, and dined them, and danced with them, and made life one big party, and not allowed them the maturation process of planning, practicing, cooking, paying, cleaning up, and being sober enough to drive home. Can we really wonder that they think life is all flowers, and dancing, and magic pills, and temper-fits?

We have made adulthood seem to be Olympus, and adults seem to be gods beyond reproach. We lead kids to vaguely expect to wake up one day and suddenly be adult with no doubts, fears, flaws, hurts, and loneliness; but they have seen our feet of clay, and know that adults are not perfect. If only we would say, "I hurt, too," or, "I get lonely," or, "I'm tempted to (and do) cheat." But we seldom let them know us for real; and kids with dreams of perfection demand actualization now. Frustrated and not understanding the impossibility of their de-

Hqs. Cmd. housing is with the troop

Headquarters Command enlisted troop housing is as diversified and spread out as the duty sections in which the personnel work. Companies A-D of Headquarters Company are housed in two buildings, Bldg. 2814 still has troop bays and is scheduled for remodeling. Partitions offer the troops some degree of privacy. Bldg. 2819 has individual and two-man rooms and was constructed as part of the VOLAR project.

The Project Transition Company, 16th Company, occupies old World War II wooden barracks in the Harmony Church Area. The area has a dayroom for the Students and was recently worked on and painted.

The Wac Company is split into two areas. Women occupy individual or two-women rooms in Bldg. 223, behind the Hospital Annex; and the BEQ by Martin Army Hospital.

The 283rd Army Band and the Personnel Control Facility are housed in old wooden barracks in the 2200 block. These buildings are scheduled for destruction in the fiscal year 1975.

All units of Headquarters Command have adequate dayroom facilities, either in their buildings or in adjacent buildings. They use mess halls of other units within their areas. One of their biggest desires is to have washers and dryers in the barracks.

Study cites drinking problem

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nearly half the one million youngest and lowest-ranking Navy and Army men around the world say they have a real or potential drinking problem, according to two new Pentagon studies released Monday.

In the American Army, one survey said, "The junior enlisted men have an exceptionally high rate of binge drinking, belligerence while drinking, and job, police and financial problems related to alcohol."

Moreover, where drinking among Navy men and civilians tends to tail off when they leave their mid-20s, high-ranking Army enlisted men admit to hitting the bottle heavily even as they reach more mature ages.

The studies — one a survey of 9,500 Army officers and enlisted men and the other a survey of 1,600 sailors — were released at a Pentagon news conference by Dr. Richard S. Wilbur, assistant secretary of defense for health and environment.

Wilbur said the studies confirmed his belief that the services' biggest drug problem is not marijuana or heroin or pills, but alcohol.

In the Navy, Wilbur said, 7 per cent of those questioned from among the first five enlisted grades said they had a critical drinking problem. Another 16 per cent rated their problem as very serious and 20 per cent termed their drinking habits as "serious."

In the Army study, which set out slightly different categories, 29 per cent of those questioned said they were heavy or binge drinkers. They are defined as those who regularly poured down at least five drinks at least four days a week or persons who could stay drunk for over a full day while suffering no immediate negative consequences.

Another 14 per cent admitted to having a psychological dependence on alcohol and were rated as having a potential booze problem.

Still another whopping 44 per cent of young Army enlisted men fell into the category of "problem drinkers," or those who at least once over the last three years had some personal or professional problem related to alcohol.

In both the Navy and the Army, only 4 per cent of the young enlisted men claimed to be teetotalers.

Not surprisingly, the surveys found that men assigned to overseas posts without their families drink more than those given jobs in the United States.

In both the Navy and Army, Wilbur said, young officers tend to drink more than their seniors. But he noted that officer drinking patterns tend to follow those of the civilian population.

Wilbur said even before results of the two studies were announced the military services had begun increasing the cost of liquor, traditionally a cheap item in any serviceman's budget. "Happy hours" and unit parties where heavy drinking was encouraged and even required are also being deemphasized, he said.

Suggestions save over $1,000,000

Civilian and military individuals saved Fort Benning over $1 million through the Army Suggestion Awards Program for the fiscal year 1973.

Some 842 suggestions had been taken in during that period. Over $7,000 was paid out for the adoption of many of these suggestions.

The program has many advantages. An individual may receive a cash award for a suggestion or idea. It may improve his or her job and if the idea reduces costs, the individual will benefit again as a taxpayer.

Ideas can be simple or complex. They can relate to improving troop dining facilities, barracks, service clubs, libraries or other service-type facilities. They can improve accountability for care of supplies and equipment, improve relations with host nation governments and people, promote new concepts of military training and readiness and improve unit personnel procedures and morning report administration.

Any ideas to improve safety, health, welfare and morale should be considered. Ideas that are adopted for a cash award can even go to other posts, perhaps earning more cash awards for the individual. And an individual can get up to $25,000 for a suggestion.

On-post housing facilities rated good for soldiers

On post housing facilities for senior and junior officers and NCOs have been rated as good. Compared to the 3590 families assigned, there are 3624 quarters available.

For the senior officers' housing units, there are 74 3 bedroom units and 31 4 bedroom units.

For field grade officers, major and lieutenant colonel, there are a total of 303 units, including 169 3 bedroom units and 134 4 bedroom units.

There are a total of 1150 housing units for company grade officers, captains, first and second lieutenants, and all warrant officers. Included in this total are 254 2 bedroom units, 870 3 bedroom units, and 26 4 bedroom units.

For junior and senior NCOs, a total 3624 housing facilities are available.

Dwellings for junior NCO's, include 60 2 bedroom units, 1382 3 bedroom units and 194 4 bedroom units. Housing for senior NCO's, consist of 74 3 bedroom units and 354 4 bedroom units.

The only requirement for payment of BAQ is nonavailability of adequate quarters of military necessity to live on post which is very minimal at Fort Benning.

BLACKBERRY COBBLER

Submitted by:
Mrs. Duane G. Cameron (Bea)

Serves 12.
No. 8 cast iron skillet
3 pints fresh Fort Benning blackberries (may use frozen)
½ cup margarine
1 cup sugar
½ teaspoon cinnamon
3 tablespoons lemon juice
¼ teaspoon salt

In large pot, combine berries, margarine, sugar, cinnamon, lemon juice and salt. Bring to a boil. Simmer while making pastry (recipe below). (Vary measure on sugar, cinnamon, lemon juice and salt according to taste.)

PASTRY

2 cups flour
1 teaspoon salt
¾ cup Crisco shortening (be generous)
¼ cup cold water

Combine flour and salt. Cut in shortening with pastry blender. Add water and gently form into ball. Let pastry rest a few minutes. Divide into 2 balls. Roll out on heavily floured board. Line skillet with crust.

Drop "dumpling" (cut from pie crust trimmings) into gently boiling berries. Pour into prepared skillet. Top with pie crust, seal crust and cut slits on top. Bake. Temperature: 350. Time: 30 to 45 minutes.

Serve in bowls — pouring heavy cream over top.

Drug Abuse

mands, they turn to any relief-escape available. They turn to the only real world they know, the only real people they can experience—their peers.

No drug abuser I have known had a close relationship with a responsible adult. The rite of passage to be fully viable must take place in an intimate responsible relationship with an adult who guides and accepts the youth into his responsible world. For a youth to have a dynamic personal hero to whom to belong is a salvation experience of both selfhood and responsible belonging, and thereby fills the basic dual need of growing up. Kids will reach toward the highest example they know. One young man said of his "hero on the block," He never told me not to do drugs. He never lectured me about being straight. He just lived an exciting life. He was real, honest, and I wanted to be like him.

This is filling the void with a viable alternative. This is being the priest at a youth's ritual of passage to adulthood. When youths do not have strong adult companions to guide the passage to adulthood, they often are thwarted in their growth and become emotionally immature. Some seek substitutes, such as marriage, drugs, or communes, and some just drop out.

Inquiries

Effective 1 July 73, a new telephone inquiry system will be initiated, on a one month trial basis, within Infantry Branch, Officer Personnel Division Military Personnel Center.

The system, called "Code-A-Phone," will permit Infantry Officers to call Infantry Branch at any hour during the 24 hour day, incuding weekends, and leave a message or query pertinent to assignments, professional development, or other career type personnel actions. (Query will be researched promptly and a complete answer dispatched by telephone or letter within 7 working days or sooner depending on urgency of matter).

Telephone numbers of the inquiry system are: COML (202) 325-8111 and 325-6124; AUTOVON 221-8111 or 8124. Emergency actions only should be called directly to Branch Officers during this trial period.

Those calling should be prepared to speak clearly and slowly, giving information in the exact following sequence:

Full name, rank and SSAN (Spell last name phonetically),

Mailing address and telephone number to include AUTOVON prefix or area code for commercial number,

The questions, brief and concise.

Mental health care program added to Columbus College

Columbus College will inaugurate a new associate of arts program in mental health work this fall that will be partially supported ir its first year by a federal grant of $32,160.

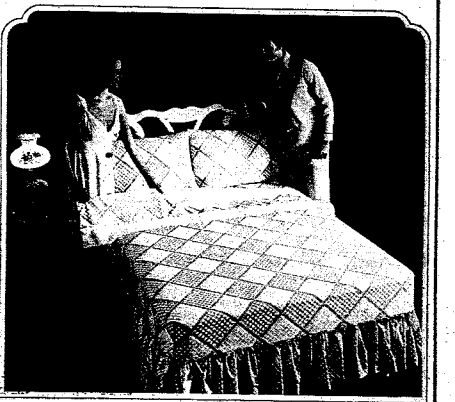
The two-year program will train "generalists" in mental health work who will be qualified to care for mental patients in an institutional setting and also assist more advance professionals in their treatment of mental illness.

Dr. George Panos, the program director and associate professor of psychology who has just reported to the college to assume his duties, explained that gradnates will be essentially trained "to help people." He continued: "This is a new and rapidly growing field. There is a great need for mental health workers, and the need is apparent in Columbus."

Dr. Panos referred to the area mental health facilities such as The Bradley Center, The Medical Center, Martin Army Hospital, the West Georgia Regional Hospital, now under construction on Schatulga Road, and the Columbus Health Department. He said all of these facilities would cooperate to help train students and all had endorsed the program as beneficial to the community.

There is also a need for mental health workers in clinics, nursing homes, day care and rehabilitation centers, the courts, schools, and correctional institutions, Dr. Panos added. "There is definitely a shortage of qualified mental health workers.

Canines graduate



The Canine Basic Obedience Class graduated 30 May 1973 at Main Post Service Club. Thirty-four dogs and handlers completed the 14 hours course and were awarded certificates. Ribbons were awarded to the three top dogs and the blue ribbon winner also received a trophy.

Top dog was a German Shepherd named "Brandy", owned and trained by Mrs. Susan Rehm. Second place went to "Windy", a Great Dane owned and trained by Mrs. Wilma Crawford and Third place went to "Cochise V" a Siberian Husky owned and trained by CPT Gary E. Dolan.

A Junior Achievement award was given to Miss Kathy Popp and her Beagle "Queenie". Instructors for the 14 hours course were SFC Leonard R. DeLuca, SFC John W. Hood, and SSG Robert L. Cook, all from Military Dog Detachment, Company Operations Department. Judges for the graduation competition were SFC David, SFC Harris and SSG Harriston, also from Military Dog Detachment. A second class will probably be taught in the fall but no definite plans have been made as yet. The class will be announced by Main Post Service Club at a later date.

Local NCO remembers 36th Engr.

With 93lst Engineer Group (CBT) redesignated Sergeant First Class Lupe Diaz, A Company, 43rd Engineer Battalion (Const) will once again be serving under the 36th Engineer Group (CBT).

SFC Diaz first served in the 36th when he was stationed in Korea. He was assigned to the 36th Group in December 1972 where he served as the Equipment Platoon Sergeant, Headquarters Company. SFC Diaz remembers the Group because his platoon consisted of one platoon leader, one E-7, two E-6 truckmasters, one PFC, and 71 Katusa equipment operators.

Sp5 Anthony Rawls does it all at 93lst

Sp5 Anthony Rawls, an OH-58 helicopter mechanic with the 93lst Aviation Platoon, 145th Aviation Battalion, doesn't find the time to be bored. In addition to his military duties, he holds an evening job with the fuel service contractor at Lawson Army Airfield.

In spite of holding down two jobs, Rawls still found himself with an occasional odd moment or two, so he volunteered for the position of Battalion AandR NCO and now administers the Athletics and Recreation program for the entire 145th Aviation Battalion.

He also coaches the 93lst Aviation Platoon Football and basketball teams as well as playing as a member of these teams.

Rawls joined the Army in June 1966, and completed basic training at Fort Bragg, N. C. After assignment to Fort Belvoir, VA, in November, 1966, he served as an assistant A and R NCO until June, 1967, when he was assigned to C Co, 15th T.C., 1st Cavalry Division, RVN.

Following his Vietnam tour, Rawls was assigned to Fort Benning, Ga. He has been involved in A and R programs here for the past four years. "I get an out of sight feeling knowing that I am doing a small part in helping boost the morale of my fellow soldiers," Rawls seated.

RESERVE OFFICERS NOW CAN JOIN THE 5 OUT OF 6 ACTIVE DUTY OFFICERS WHO ARE MEMBERS OF USAA

In keeping with the "Total Force Concept" of the Department of Defense, USAA has expanded eligibility for membership to include commissioned officers and warrant officers of the Reserve and National Guard.

If you are a Reserve or National Guard officer, this means you now can apply for all types of money-saving USAA insurance. Savings through discounted initial premiums in States where allowed. Savings through dividends, not guaranteed, but paid every year since 1924. For instance, you may save $20 - $40 - $60 a year on auto insurance, depending on your age, your car, and your location.

Small wonder 5 out of 6 active duty officers are already members of USAA.

To become a USAA member, simply take out a policy while you are eligible. Once you become a member, your eligibility for membership lasts a lifetime, whether you are in the Service or out.

Fill out the coupon below for information on the type of insurance you need. No obligation. We pay the postage.

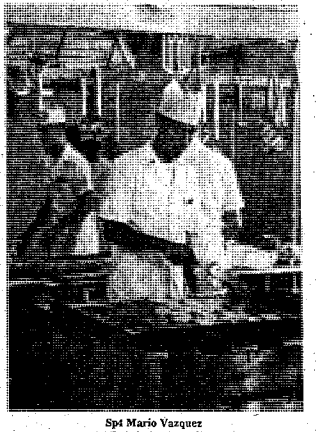
On the morning of May 25, 1973, Sp Babe F. Fix signed a contract for six more years of service. Sp5 Fix entered the service in 1964 and attended AIT for cook training, after which he received orders for Korea.

After 14 months in Korea he was reassigned to the 65th Combat Engineer Battalion, and was stationed in Scofield Barracks, Hawaii while awaiting movement to Vietnam. He received OJT in the 12B1 6MOS, combat engineer, while he was in Hawaii. After spending his year in Vietnam, he was sent back to Korea, where he stayed until the end of his enlistment.



After a three month vacation, Sp5 Fix decided that civilian life was for others and enlisted in the Navy as a Sea Bee. While in the Navy he spent time in Okinawa and Guam, and in engineer schools where he acquired a skills on all engineer equipment.

After his enlistment in the Navy was up, Sp5 Fix decided that the Army offered what he wanted, so he enlisted in the Army for the second time. He was assigned to the 43rd Engineer Battalion where he has held such jobs as grader operator, squad leader, CBR NCO and supply sergeant.

USAMTU

In a formal awards and promotion ceremony held by the U. S. Army Marksmanship Training Unit, July 3, five men were presented awards while seven were recognized with promotions.

Leading off in the awards department, Capt. Robert M. Bach, an International Rifle Instructor and shooter with the Marksmanship Unit was decorated with the Bronze Star Medal for valorous duty performed against the enemy in the Republic of Vietnam. His decoration was the only combat award made during the ceremony.

The other awards presented for outstanding performance of duty, included a Meritorious Service Medal presented to Maj. Ivan Flowers, Officer in Charge of the Marksmanship Shops. Major Flowers, a recent assignee to the unit, was cited for his superior performance of duty in the coordination and direction of marksmanship at national levels.

Two Army Commendation Medals were awarded by the Commander, Col. William H. Harper. The first, a second oak leaf cluster to the ACM was presented to SSgt. Jimmy McCauley for his meritorious service and professional acumen as an instructor and shooter in the pistol division. During the period of time covered by the award, Sergeant McCauley also represented the United States in CISM Matches in Cairo, Egypt, where he won a Gold Medal in pistol competition.

The second Army Commendation Medal was presented Capt. Ed Schumacher for his meritorious service and exemplary manner of instructing and shooting in the International Rifle Department.

The final award was a sustained superior performance rating presented Mr. Joe Mills for his outstanding achievements in his field of maintenance. A check accompanied his award.

Promotions to PFC were made by Barry Maness and Jaime Ibarra while four PFCs were advanced in grade to Specialist Four. Those receiving the honor included David N. Smith and Michael Ward of the Shotgun Division and Brian Sterk and Benny Williams in the Personnel Division.

A lone officer promotion was awarded to Capt. David Soelle, an Army Nurse who is a member of the 1973 All Army Rifle Team assigned to the Marksmanship Unit. An

What'ja wanta Know? ask the BAYONET

CALL 545-4792

Dear Bayonet;

Q: During every duty day, parking violations at Infantry Hall cause serious safety hazards for moving traffic. Why don't the military police do something about this? Will it take a serious accident to make the MPs enforce the parking regulations? W.E.S.

A: According to Lt. Col. Clarke, operations officer, MP, the parking lots at Infantry Hall are not policed by the MPs. By traditional agreement, the School has responsibility for the West side and the Center has the East lot and the area in front of the building. Clarke says the MPs have not policed these lots on steady basis by request from the School and Center. It is up to the Center or School to initiate a request for the MPs to check the lots or issue tickets.

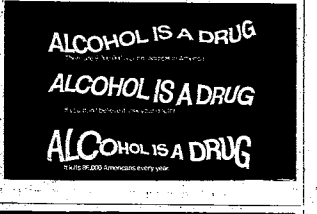
Referring directly to large vehicle campers, trucks with camper beds, long cars — Clark says the MP office is running a Daily Bulletin notice to encorage these vehicles to use the center areas of rows instead of the end spaces.

The problem of large Army buses blocking the view of drivers leaving the lot is being solved now Clarke said.

By regulation, parking violations include parking on the sidewalk, within 20 feet of an intersection, double parking, and where no parking signs are posted (as on the streets around Infantry Hall).

The first violation is a warning; the second, a 30 day suspension of post driving privileges; the third, a six month suspension of post driving privileges.

Q: Why didn't they air condition the new Audie Murphy gym? Are there any plans to air condition the facility and make it useable in the summer.



A: According to Mr. Odom, of special services there were never any plans to air condition the new gym. He noted that gyms are not usually air conditioned because it is detrimental to good physical training. However, to make it cooler in the shower rooms fans are being used.

Dear Bayonet;

I retired at age 65 and started getting social security then, but I was in pretty good health at the time. I am now 70 and totally disabled. Can I get disability too? T.O.S.

Dear T.O.S.

No. Disability benefits are provided for workers who become unable to work before they reach 65. You might say it is a forced early retirement — anway, disability payments that are paid before age 65 are stopped at 65 and converted to retirement benefits in the same amount. No one can qualify for a disability payment and a retirement payment for the same month.

Camp winterized

Recently D Company 43rd Engineer Battalion did some work at the Ranger Camp, Camp Frank D. Merrill. Their job was to winterize the ranger student billets at the camp.

The job included plywooding the exterior walls, installation of a vapor barrier envelope between the new and old siding, fabrication and installation of new doors and windows and painting the remodeled billets.

The work was accomplished by dividing the second platoon into four crews. The work was to be done in two weeks but with hard work the men finished two days early.

Post Wives Assess Army Housing

BY EDITH MARTIN

Every wife has wished at one time or another that she could be chief of staff and "fix" military housing to satisfy the needs of herself and her family.

"Housing is mostly too small. There's no way two kids can comfortably fit in a small room." (A master sergeant's wife)

According to George Perdue, acting chief of the engineer office here, "size is the single largest complaint about housing." The square footage is determined by Congress for each rank, Perdue explained. Therefore, quarters size can increase only, if Congress changes the footage.

"If I were designing it, I'd select more two family buildings and single family dwellings. There's more privacy." (A staff sergeant's wife.)

The cost factor determines what kind of units are built. Heyward Bush, deputy chief of family housing, explained that Congress has placed an average cost limit on housing at $24,500 per unit. That unit can be a single family, two, four or eight family unit.

In figuring out the cost of a unit, Bush said, the total cost for an acceptable dwelling place must be found. So, any grading done to get a level site, bringing in utilities lines, playgrounds, landscaping, and parking areas are averaged against the cost of the unit. This obviously brings down the amount of money spent on the unit itself.

"However," Bush continued," there is another factor involved. The location within the United States also affects the cost limit. $24,500 is the average that can be spent."

What this means is that in areas where labor and materials cost less, the southeast for example, Bush went on, the average unit costs less to build than where construction costs are higher. Thus, a unit at Fort Benning might cost only $18,500 as compared to $25,000 for the same unit in the northeast.

"More closets, please! There's never enough storage space, inside or out." (A lieutenant colonel's wife).

Because living space is at a premium, Bush explained, "closets and storage space are nicety items." Without an increase in square footage, modern housing will not contain storage space desired by occupants."

"Why can Army housing not be standard from post to post Whatever rank." (A sergeant major's wife).

We go, windows, doors, an size will change . . . even if we're still the same rank."

"When an individual post plans housing construction, the engineers must select plans that fit their budget and construction problems. Thus, housing will vary from post to post because of the cost factors. For example, NCO quarters were built at Fort Rucker, Ala., at the time we built our eight family units. The Rucker units are two family dwellings. The basic factor was the flatness of Rucker and the hilliness here. Benning had to spend more for grading and couldn't afford the two family units."

Bush continued, "another factor also makes a difference now. In the past, contracts have gone to the lowest bidder who meets the required standards. The lower the cost per unit, the more units that can be built."

"Now," he went on, "Benning is part of the "turnkey" experiment. Under this experiment, the contractor submits his own technical proposal and costs. This is reviewed by the engineers, and the contract is not necessarily given to the lowest bidder. This promises more variety in plans but none will be available before 1975 because the program is just getting underway."

I know construction is slow; What's being done to improve the houses we're in now?" (A captain's wife)

"Last fall" Bush explained, "an architect and engineering firm surveyed existing family housing to determine what was needed for modernization. The figure was $29 million."

Bush's list for planned improvements include central air, addition of half or full baths, carports or garages where possible, Playgrounds and sidewalks, more parking spaces, privacy screen, landscaping, modernized bathrooms, and modern kitchens. Kitchens modernization includes better functional arrangement, dishwashers, garbage disposals, extra cabinet space. Plans also include some changes in the interior functional arrangement to increase room size, closet space and storage.

These improvements are not immediate. Bush explained that the total $29 million has been broken down into a tentative five year construction program. Work actually to be done depends on what Congress will appropriate.

"Why aren't families questioned about what they would like in housing?" (A major's wife)

According to Bush, the family housing survey is made every year. It attempts to determine adequacy by asking families what they would like, determineing what military families living in civilian housing have. Other factors taken into consideration are rents, utility rates, number of bedrooms, size, and configuration of floor space.

"From last fall's survey, we came up with the $29 million construction program." Bush pointed out.

The housing section takes comments from the survey and plans for improvements. For example:

"The dark colors are gruesome." (A colonel's wife)

"As we paint, we're changing back to standard white or cream color. Over the years, we've found these colors please more people," Bush said. But, there are still problems.

"What about washable paint. With small children, everything should be easy to clean." (A staff sergeant's wife).

"Washable paint costs more and there's not money for it. We do paint quarters every three to four years, based on a regulation. This covers the time of most stabilized tours. Exceptions are made for fires, leaks, and blisters but there has to be money for the paint."

In addition to the local survey, the Construction Engineering Research Laboratory did a survey three weeks ago. This Army approved study took an extensive questionnaire into many of the houses on post. Their suggestions will be used in future designs.

The prospect for future is glum. In a peace time Army, there will be less funds available for the extras such as family housing. Even the push for a volunteer Army does not promise an increase for housing construction.

Increase construction costs point to a future trend of more multiple unit dwellings. "These multiple units save on labor, materials, utilities and other expenses," says Bush.

Troop Housing Improved

BY CHARLES BRICKMAN

With the advent of Volar, a project was initiated at Ft. Benning, in April 1971, to improve housing for the men who lived in the barracks. The existing troop barracks were to be converted into living quarters which would afford more privacy to the soldier.

In order to accomplish the objective, the Department of the Army approved a major construction project. The project would turn the old type barracks, with large bays, into barracks with two-man rooms.

The 43rd Engineer Battalion of the 931st Engineer Group (CBT), (now the 36th Engineer Group (CBT), was given the job of converting the barracks into living quarters. They were to do the construction for the entire Infantry Center. The work was completed at a cost of $1,250,000 and 2700 two man rooms were built.

The first phase of the project, Volar I, lasted from April to August of 1971, with construction being done on those barracks actually being lived in.

Volar II was completed in September of 1972 and so was the work on more barracks soon to be used as living quarters.

What is the troop housing like now? Is it comfortable and does it offer privacy?

At Sand Hill, where the headquarters of the 36th Engineer Group is, the men who live in the barracks are quite a ways from main post. The barracks are old but inside they are fixed up enough to be comfortable.

The average living quarters for the men at HHC 36th Engr. Gp. consists of two rooms and a bath. The way the rooms are fixed up depends on the individual.

PFC Danny Joe Holman is one of the men at HHC who live in the barracks. His quarters consist of a living room, a bed room and a private shower. He has gone to a lot of trouble and some expense to make his quarters just like home.

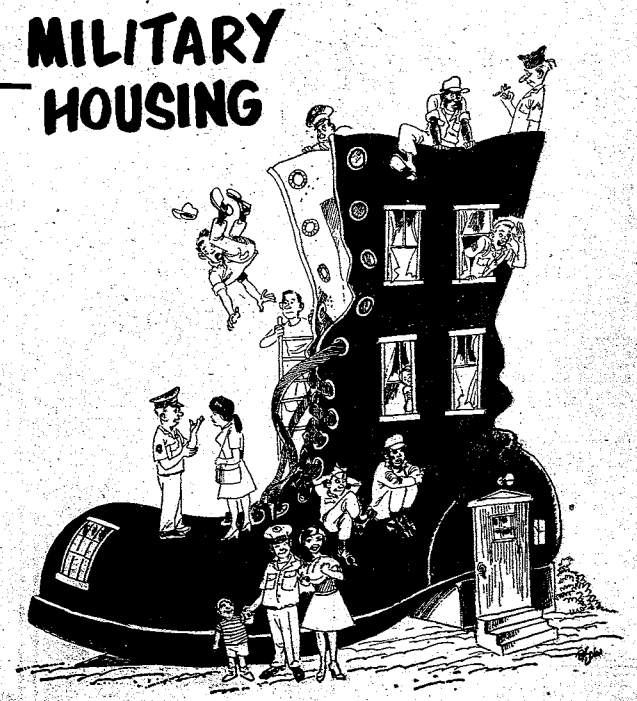
Danny Holman has in his quarters a couch, two easy chairs, a TV, a stereo, refrigerator, air conditioner. He also has the rooms decorated by posters on the walls.

According to Holman, "I have everything I need right here. The rooms are old but if a guy wants to spend a little time fixing the place up he can make it nice. I have always had a lot of privacy in the barracks, at least until everyone found out about my air conditioner and refrigerator. Here at Sand Hill we have just about anything I could want. We have a library, swimming pool, theater and other types of recreation.

"I don't think the barracks are as nice as they could be. In the summer this place gets awfully hot and in the winter it can be chilly!

"I do know that we have it much better than they used to though with those bay type barracks. I lived in one like that in basic training and I didn't care for it at all. With 26 men in one room a person just cannot get any privacy no matter what he does.

"There are things that I do not like about living in the barracks, such as inspections, which tend to be a hassle. But I guess everyone has to put up with some little inconveniences. There are things that could be improved but we have it pretty good.



"There is one problem we seem to have, though, that never came up much in the old style barracks, and that is theft.

"You have to be careful to lock things up tight when you are not around. If you do not, there is a good chance of getting ripped off. It is not necessarily the men in the barracks doing it, though. A lot of times you have to be careful about strangers in the company."

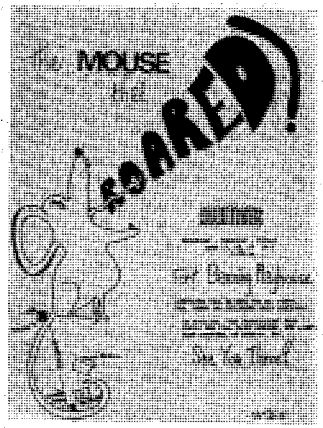
One man who seems to agree with Holman about living in the barracks is SFC Edward Lesson. "The rooms in these barracks are much nicer than what we had when I lived in them. I lived in an open bay type barracks for three years and I liked it; but it was not as nice as what they have today. One thing, though, we never had much trouble with thieves because there was always someone there to watch the place."

Although these are the feelings of only two men, most of the soldiers who were interviewed felt pretty much the same.

They realize that the barracks here at Ft. Benning are old and could use fixing up; but they are comfortable and supply a soldier with privacy. How comfortable? That is up to the individual. They are, however a, vast improvement over the past.

BAYONET ENTERTAINMENT PAGE

Dramatizers announce comedy cast



The cast of the Dramatizers' summer production of "The Mouse That Roared" has been announced by director Bob Swain.

The hilarious comedy about a small country's declaration of war against the United States will be presented August 17, 18, 23, 24 and 25 in Fort Benning's Theater 3 at Sand Hill Reservations for tickets may be made at the Fort Benning Playhouse, phone 545-2932.

Heading the cast will be E. Linton Gross III as Tully Bascom, the leader of the Duchy of Grand Fenwick's tiny army, and Anni Tufts Disbrow as Gloriana XII, the 22-year-old ruler of Fenwick.

Both Linton Gross and Ann Disbrow have extensive background in the theater. Ann Disbrow currently is president of the Dramatizers, a group of both military and civilians interested in theater, and has been costumer for several of the productions at the Benning Playhouse. She has a bachelor of arts degree in speech and drama from Ripon College, Ripon, Wis. Gross, entertainment specialist at the Playhouse, has been in charge of the technical crews and has acted in several of the Dramatizers' productions, including "Edwin Booth," which he also directed.

Others in the production are Cheryl Crowley as Mary; Jane Linnane, Jane; Debbie Powell, Fran; Yolis Green, Pam; Yoland Green, Ann; Carol Montgomery as Miss Johnson; Leanne Gomez as Norman and the Page; Sue Gross, Mrs. Reiner; Kelly Ruddy, Jill; Carolyn Williamson, Debbie; Ileane Katzker, Mrs. Bascomb; and George Miceli, Professor Smith.

Also Mike Rumschlag as Count Mountjoy; Keko Swain, Henrietta Bentor; Fred Plank, Mr. Beston; Sam Moorehead, Professor Kokintz; Helen Stanley, assistant; Marcus Disbrow, President of the United States; Frisky Harsham, Gen. Snippet; Jake Cox, Will Tatum; and Tom Selvig and Frenchie Blanchette as Fenwickian soldiers.

The trouble begins for Grand Fenwick when it is discovered that California is producing a cheap imitation of Pinot Grand Fenwick, the wine upon which the entire economy of the grand duchy is based. Gloriana decides, therefore, to declare war against the United States, hoping to lose, since it is well-known that when the United States wins a war it helps the nation it has defeated to recover its economy.

Unfortunately for Grand Fenwick but fortunately for the world, the little nation somehow wins the war and confiscates the Q bomb, the most destructive weapon ever developed by the U.S. With the Q bomb Fenwick preserves the peace of the world and the salability of its wine.

Although casting has been completed, there are "parts" open for anyone interested in working on the production in a technical capacity. Don't let a lack of expertise deter you — come to the Playhouse

Puff, puff, puff that cigarette

By Reed Hopkin

The U. S. Army should establish a policy against smoking in indoor areas where non-smokers have to work. Evidence has been discovered that non-smokers suffer from the cigarette smoke of the smoker. Dr. Donald A. Dukelow of the American Medical Association's Department of Education was asked:

"Is there evidence to support the recent claims that a non-smoker with an all day exposure to a smoke filled room inhaled as much smoke as though he himself had smoked a pack of cigarettes?"

In reply he said, "Concern about the hazard of exposure to a smoke filled room is supported," and cited several studies of effects of cigarette smoke on non-smokers.

One study cited found that smoking cigarettes in a closed room soon makes the concentration of nicotine and dust particles so high that the non-smoker inhales as much tobacco by-products as a smoker inhales from four or five cigarettes. One study found that smokers' children are ill more frequently than non-smokers' children, usually because of respiratory disease; another showed that "the smoking environment's effect upon the children in an environment is similar to the cigarette smoke's effect upon the smoker on a reduced scale."

Another found that "Smoke from an idling cigarette contains almost twice the tar and nicotine of smoke inhaled while puffing on a cigarette."

Dukelow concluded: "It is becoming increasingly apparent that the non-smoker who must be present in the traditional 'smoke-filled room' characteristic of many conferences and social gatherings has an exposure to tobacco by-products quite similar to the exposure of the smoker."

It is strange why people insist on ruining their health with cigarettes, and even more strange that the Army, which is so up about physical fitness sits idly back and watches a large percentage of its members ruin their health and does not do a thing to stop it. I do not like the idea of my health being threatened by other people's habits. I suggest that smoking be permitted in certain indoor areas like designated "smoking rooms" and that these areas not be areas where the presence of non-smokers is required.

Forest fires burn more than trees.

Coming to the screen

Jeremiah Johnson

Jeremiah Johnson is the story of a man who drops out of society to find peace and tranquility in the desolate Rocky Mountains shortly after the Civil War. We see him learn the rigors of living in the mountains as he learns to sustain himself from the land. When it's all over Jeremiah is what he wanted to be: a mountain man, but he is also a legend.

Black Gunn

Black Gunn features Jim Brown as a posh nightclub owner who is drawn into a confrontation with the 'mob' when his younger brother, a member of a black militant group, knocks off a numbers parlor and is in turn murdered by the mob. Brown moves into revengeful action and along with friends shoot it out with the Landau's gang.

What's up, Doc?

Ryan O'Neal is an absent-minded musicologist whose plaid suitcase full of rock samples gets mixed up with three identical suitcases, two of which contain secret papers and stolen jewels. Free spirited fulltime kook, Barbra Streisand, falls for O'Neal the moment she sees him. Eventually, after discovering the mix-up, hero and heroine grab the bags and flee the scene on a grocery bike while being chased by the jewel thieves, a government agent, the document thief and numerous other bystanders.

Robey helps out

SSgt. Sylvester J. Robey, Company A, 43rd Engineer Battalion was called upon again to lend assistance to the 269th Engineer Company Construction Support (National Guard) in Live Oaks, Florida.

The 269th Engineer Company which was recently a dump truck company has been changed to a construction support company. Robey's expertise in the operation and maintenance of the new equipment was badly needed.

Robey was first called to give support to the 269th Engineer Company in the middle of last year. During that time he conducted classes on maintenance of the equipment and proper operating procedures when the 269th had their annual field training, annual training 1973, Robey was needed again for his knowledge and experience of paving operations and the maintenance of the equipment in the field.

To insure, as much as possible, the success of the FTX, it was necessary for Robey to fly back by helicopter to Ft. Benning and Company A, 43rd Engineer Battalion to procure vital equipment needed for the next day's operation.

Many words of thanks and appreciation has been written to SSG Robey for a job well done to include those from Capt. James A. Brown, Jr. Commanding Officer of the 269th Engineer Company Construction Support.

Kelley Hill

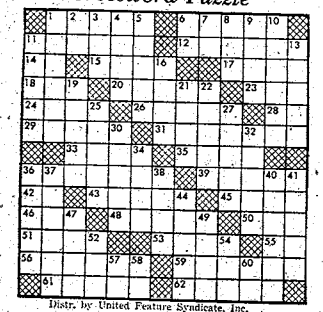
Troop housing renovation for today's volunteer

A major troop housing modernization project, now underway on Kelley Hill, is the nucleus of a concerted effort to provide optimum level living conditions for the volunteer soldiers of the 197th Infantry Brigade.

Affecting 12 buildings on Kelley Hill, the renovation porject involves such drastic improvements as the installation of central air conditioning, new partitions (to provide two-man rooms in addition to private rooms with baths for senior non-commissioned officers), interior and exterior painting, accoustical tile in rooms and corridors, vinyl tile in aisles, corridors and administrative areas, installation of washers and dryers, landscaping and arms room improvements.

Scheduled for completion in May of 1974, the refurbished housing facilities will comply with Army plans and construction specificifications constantly scrutinized by the Corps of Engineers.

Meanwhile, in Harmony Church, which long has been the home of the 1st Bn. (Mech), 58th Inf. (Patriots) and the present 2nd Bn., 69th Ar., (both of the 197th Infantry Brigade) two new units are in the midst of renovating the ancient World War II billets they have been assigned to occupy.



These units — the 197th Support Batalion (197th Infantry Brigade) and the 1st Bn., 29th Inf. (Pioneers) (part of the 197th Infantry Brigade until October) — were recently pleased to learn that a contract has been approved for renovating their billets to conform to standards, (such as private rooms) existing in the area of Harmony Church occupied by the 1st of the 58th.

This work is scheduled for completion early in 1974. Until then, however, the units have made self-help the byword in attempting to create comfortable living conditions for their soldiers.

With the soldiers working to improve their own housing and the addition of such accessories as office partitions, desks and wall lockers, a semblance of the semi-private room concept has been attained, with the 197th Support Battalion still working to complete some areas.

A recently opened Post Exchange retail store has enhanced living conditions in this portion of Harmony Church.

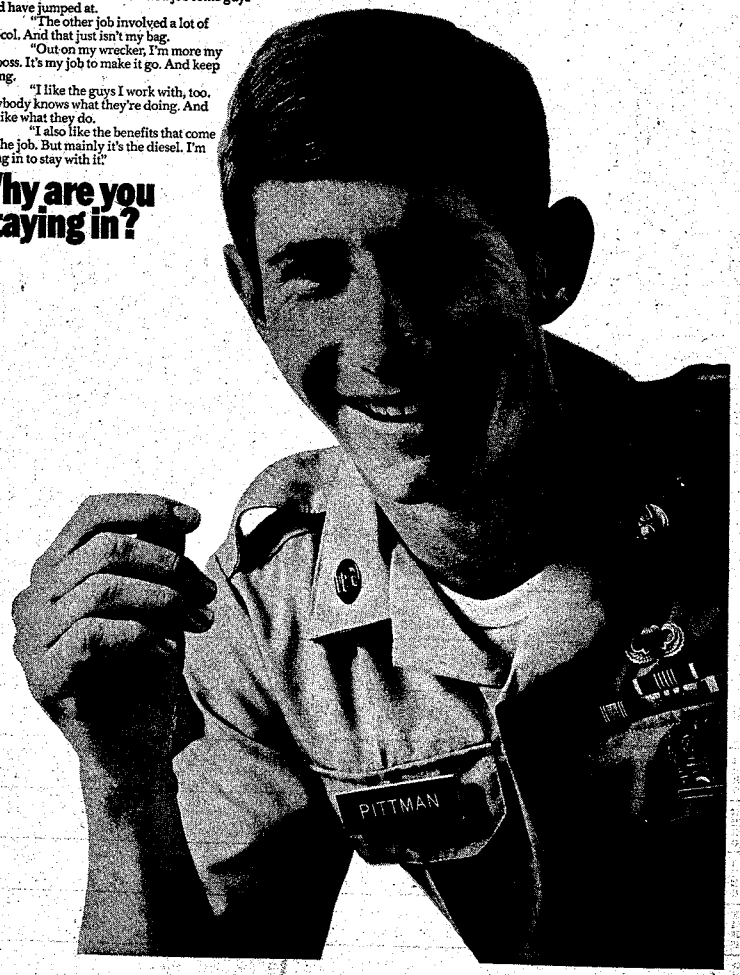
"I love that big diesel engine."

SP/4 Larry Pittman digs diesels. So much in fact, that he turned down a job some guys would have jumped at.



"The other job involved a lot of protocol. And that just isn't my bag.

"Out on my wrecker, I'm more my own boss. It's my job to make it go. And keep it going.

"I like the guys I work with, too. Everybody knows what they're doing. And they like what they do.

"I also like the benefits that come with the job. But mainly it's the diesel. I'm staying in to stay with it."

Why are you staying in?

The water explodes as Allan Kempton, two time winner, glides over Robin Lake in preparation for this year's Master's Water Ski Tournament to be held at Callaway Gardens, Ga., July 13-15....

Master's Water Ski Tournament

Callaway Gardens 15th annual meet

Story by Jerry Gibson

This year's 15th annual Master's Water Ski Tournament scheduled for July 13-15 at 65-acre Robin Lake, Callaway Gardens, offers another star-studded field.

Liz Allan Shetter of Groveland, Fla., has accumulated three world overall championships and is a five-time winner at the Masters. Canadian George Athans is currently the world titleholder among the men skiers and will be out to improve his third-place finish in the 1972 Masters.

Wayne Grimditch is the defending overall champion and last year set a world's jumping record with a leap of 169 feet at the Gardens.

Ricky McCormick, who has a tourney in Missouri named in his honor, is the only man to take back-to-back championships in the Masters (1970-71). He's finished no lower than second place in the overall standing for the last four years.

Mike Suyderhoud, a former owner of the world jumping mark and world overall crown, is hoping to put an end to many years of frustration at the Masters.

The muscular Californian has placed either second or third overall in five of the last six tournaments. He trailed 1968 winner Frankie Deis by a mere 1.47 points.

Christy Lynn Wehr of McQueeney, Tex., returns after being sidelined last year by a knee injury. Christy is a former member of the U. S. ski team and the 1971 Masters champion.

The women's division also includes veteran Lisa St. John, holder of the world jumping record of 116 feet.

Competition at the Masters is tough as any other water ski tourney in the world, but that's exactly what Howard (Bo) Callaway had in mind when he organized the meet in 1958.

Callaway, who is now Secretary of the Army, wanted a contest format similar to the Masters Golf Tournament in which only the elite participated.

And the water ski Masters quickly rivaled that of its cross-state neighbor, becoming part of a "grand slam" that also takes in the National and World tournaments.

Her top contenders will be St. John, Weir, Christie Freeman and Barbara Cleveland, an "old-timer" at 31.

The men's shootout, as usual, will be a pot-luck affair. Grimditch, McCormick, Athans, Suyderhoud, two-time champion Alan Kempton and greatly improved Robbie Kempton share the role of favorite.

The Masters offer somewhat of a bonus for the spectators.

At what other competition can you watch the battle to the wire while lying or jogging on the beach? If the heat gets to you, take a dip in Robin Lake. If you really feel energetic, get up a football game on the beach and run plays between skiers.

Or, if you prefer a closer view, there's always the ski pavilion that extends about 100 feet into the water.

It's an enjoyable way to watch the master skiers at work.

The Masters Water Ski Tournament many times has been highlighted on ABC's Wide World of Sports, attracting announcers Bud Palmer and Bill Fleming to the area.

All of the top skiers in The United States will be competing this year since tryouts for the U. S. ski team will be held there July 16 - 17. Four men and two women earn the right to compete in the world meet which will be staged later this year in South America.

But there is no guarantee that the beautiful Masters cup will remain in this country. The destination of the top award in the men's division could be Canada, England or Italy.

Giving the tourney an international flavor are Athans, Paul Seaton of England and Italian champion Max Hofer.

But skiers have flown in from as far away as Australia to bid for the coveted Masters title.

Mrs. Shetter, who, along with her husband Bill, operate a school for competitive skiers. She will have to rank as the favorite to walk off with her sixth crown in seven years.

"Bill and one of the instructors say that I'm skiing better than ever," she reports. "I've felt real good."

The Fort Benning Rod and Gun Club will be the site of two important shooting matches this weekend.

The Chattahoochee Archery Council of the club will be host club for the Georgia State Archery Championships, and the Skeet Group is sponsoring a national and state registered shoot. Shooting will begin at 9 a.m. Saturday and Sunday. Both events are expected to draw top shooters from throughout the state.

State Archery Championship

Royce McGuffy of Griffin, Ga., who was top shooter in the state archery pre-shoot held at the club ranges last month, is expected to be on hand for the state championship competition. Other winners in the pre-shoot who will compete in the state championships include Carl Pritchard, who placed second in the open division, George Drake, third place winner, and Gene Stalcup, who placed fourth. These last three shooters, all members of the Fort Benning Club, are expected to give McGuffy a lot of competition for the state crown.

Other Fort Benning shooters expected to win or place high in their divisions are Robby Gunn, who won the pre-shoot first class division competition, and Ken Covington, winner of the second division.

The lady archers will all be competing to upset Sandy Elott of Atlanta, winner of the ladies competition in the pre-state shoot.

Contestants will be competing over some of the best field archery ranges in the southeast. The Rod and Gun Club ranges have been put in top shape for this event. Brush clearing has been extensive to provide shooters good sighting on targets and to provide spectators good fields of observation. Anyone who has an idea that he would be interested in archery as a sport or has had thoughts about hunting with a bow and arrow can learn a lot this weekend.

Registered Skeet Shoot

The Rod and Gun Club Skeet Group registered skeet shoot is open to any shooter who is registered with the Georgia or National Skeet Shooters Associations. The two day shoot will feature competition in the 410, 28, 20 and 12 gauge guns. Tomorrow competitors will shoot at 100 targets with the 410 and 20 gauge guns. Sunday the competition will consist of 100 targets with the 20 and 12 gauge guns.

Top guns from the entire southeastern states are expected to compete, providing the records of some of the Rod and Gun Club shooters in the Georgia State Championships last month don't scare them away.

The club was well represented in this competition, with Mark Holloway taking the State Junior Championship, and Kathy Spradley taking runner-up honors in the same event. The club also placed shooters in other events. Bill Tracy took second place in the 12 gauge Class "C" competition, and third in the Class "B" 20 gauge shoot. Larry Cook was another local competitor placing high in two events. He was second in the Class "E" competition with the 12 gauge gun and placed third in the 20 gauge Class "C" event.

This shoot should also be an interesting one for spectators who would like to learn something about skeet shooting. Some families might want to spend the day. The club grounds are shaded and make a fine picnic area and the snack and beverage bars are right at hand for those who forget some important items.

July Fishing Derby

Individuals not interested in skeet or archery might take some time to top the leading entries in the club July Fishing Derby. In the bass contest Robert Horn, a retired sergeant first class is the man to beat. He has registered a 6-pound, 5-ounce bass he took from Kings Pond. SFC Billy Bower leads the catfish contest with a 5-pound, 6-ounce catch he made at Twilight Pond and the bream contest leader is SFC James Thomas with a 1-pound 2-ounce catch from Patterson Pond. You can register for the contest and get all the fishing equipment in one stop at the club. You'll find bait, tackle, and boats available. The club has a limited number of electric motors available for those who want to take it easy.

TSB girls split 4 games

Since the midseason tournament the TSB girls softball game has split four games, and their record is an even 2-2.

In their first game after the tournament break they dropped a 4-3 squeaker to the Twin City girls team. The game was tied 2-2 the end of the regulation seven innings, and in the ninth Twin City scored two runs to win.

Their next game was against Cobb Hospital and was a 10-6 victory. TSB jumped off to a 6-run lead thanks mostly to a three run homer by Eddie Acord.

TSB had trouble in its next game against Dixie Merchants, as they were clouted 13-5. TSB was tied until the 3rd inning, but then Dixie Merchants ra off five runs in the 4th to take the victory.

Against W. C. Bradley the TSB turned Eddie Acord loose again and she blasted a 3rd inning grand slam homer as TSB won 10-7.

Pony League action

With a barrage of runs and hits in the first three innings the Giants were able to outlast a come-back-minded Indians team with a score of 8-5 during Fort Benning dependent Pony league action.

Joe Smith, after being given a 6-0 lead by his teammates while holding the Indians scoreless for four innings, needed relief help from his brother, Krop, in the sixth to preserve the win.

The Indians made their bid with two runs in the fifth, two in the sixth and one in the seventh but ran out of innings. Joe Smith received the win for the Giants with Steve Santana took the loss.

Marine SSgt. wins

NORCROSS, Ga.—Marine Corps Reserve SSgt. John Comley, Rochester, N.Y., outpointed Columbus William Krilling by 12X (X-Bullseye) Sunday to claim the championship of the Southeastern Regional National Rifle Association Smallbore Rifle tourney on the River Bend ranges.

Battling down to the finish line in a duel of master riflemen, Comley posted a 3,200-278X to win the coveted championship after placing all of his 320 shots in the ten ring. Krilling, a retired M-Sgt. and Instructor with the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit, accomplished the same feat but had less hits in the very center of the bullseye or X which is used to break the tie.

Third place in the gruelling duel of smallbore rifle greats which featured seven past national champions was claimed by Maj. Presley Kedall of Atlanta.

USAMTU traveling to Texas

Army handgunners from the U.S. Army Marksmanship Training Unit will be in San Antonio, Texas, this coming week where they will be competing with the best military marksmen of the four sister services for the Grand prize of the 14th Annual Interservice Pistol Championships.

The Army handgunners shooting for the service crown will have on their roster National Pistol Champion SFC Bonnie Hamon, All Army Pistol Champion Sgt. Marvin Black and the 1972 National Indoor Pistol Champion SFC Herschel Anderson. The three talented handgunners, all from the Army Marksmanship Unit, will be the central figures in the Army's effort at defending the coveted title which they have won the past two years.

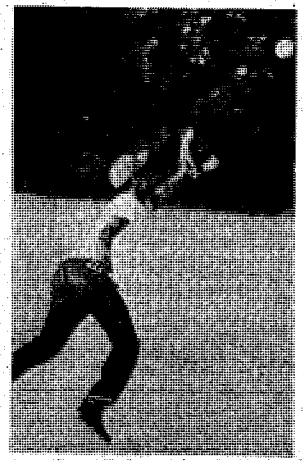
Pony Club

Scores in appearance and showmanshhip



The Benning Pony Club recently won the Southern Regional Rally in Tallahassee, Fla. for outstanding appearance and showmanship.

Horses and riders are judged in several categories such as, Best Showmanship, performances in stadium jumping and cross country jumping, a written test is also given for stable management.

The Benning Pony Club will be represented by four well qualified riders at the National Rally to be held July 25-29, in Omaha, Neb. The team captain will be Terry Lahnstein, others are Betsy Tully, Laurie Pennisi, Debbie McKenzie. Stable manager is Monique Schoonover.

In an attempt to raise enough money to send the girls to the National Rally, the club is asking for donations from interested persons in the Fort Benning, Columbus, and Phenix City area.

For further information about the club, contact Mrs. Gordon Sinclair, club advisor, or Mrs. Robert Tully, District Commissioner of the Benning Pony Club, at 545-4244.

Anderson wins state championship

It was Hershel Anderson Day at Phillips Range Sunday as the talented handgunner overcame a determined band of 75 marksmen and claimed the championship of the Georgia State Pistol tournament.

Anderson, a Pan American Gold medalist and one of the top pistol marksmen in the nation today, won two of three sub aggregates on his way to the Three Gun 2,700 Grand Aggregate Pistol Championship and walked away with the top prize with his 2,666-149X. This was 12 points better than his nearest competitor, Sgt. Marvin Black placed on the score board while a companion marksman, SFC Harland Reynolds posted a three gun total of 2,645 for third place overall.

In addition to winning the Center Fire Pistol sub aggregate with his 891 and the 45 Caliber Pistol four match series with an 885, Anderson was the runner up by four points in the 22 Caliber Pistol series behind the outstanding shooting of Black at 894.

Following his supremacy in the individual match competition, Anderson led an Army "Blue" team in a clean sweep of the three gun team matches. The team, composed of Anderson, SFC Bernie Harmon, SFC Harland Reynolds and SSgt. John Sicinski, won the 22 Caliber match with 1,178, the Center Fire Pistol with 1,170 and the 45 Caliber Pistol with 1,173 point. There was a possible 1,200 points in each match. The team was fielded by the U. S. Army Marksmanship Training Unit.

Following the three gun championship matches, the many gunners were offered the opportunity of participating in a 45 Caliber Service Pistol four match individual championship and team championship.

Are your quarters adequate?

What are the living conditions like for people on Fort Benning? What are the advantages and disadvantages of on-post housing? What are some of the pros and cons of living in the barracks?

These questions were asked in a random sampling of School Brigade soldiers during the week of July 2-6.

SFC Hubert A. Acker, TSB S-1 NCOIC who lives in the Sand Hill complex believes that living on-post has paid off for him. "My quarters are adequate," he said. "They have central air-conditioning and heating, and all my utilities except the phone bill are paid for by the government. It's really cheaper and nicer than anything I could have gotten off post for my quarters allowance."

SpS Raymond Eckel, who also lives in the Sand Hill housing area, thinks his quarters are great. "We've got air-conditioning, a dishwasher, it's big enough, and I save money. What more could I ask for?" He also finds that one of the big advantages is that he's only 10 minutes from his job as TSB operations specialist. "The only thing the housing people bother me at all about is keeping my grass cut, and that's no problem."

Barracks life has its good and bad points. Great improvements have been made, but some are still in the future. PV2 Albert Smith of HHC, TSB has his opinion. "I don't like the barracks too much. They're always too hot, even at night. Air conditioning would help a lot. How can you sleep when you're sweating?"

PFC Johnathan C. Stiles of HHC, TSB finds that he enjoys living in the barracks. "I'm close to duty so I don't have to travel a long way to work. The dayroom and reading room give you a place to relax, and at night you can watch television in the T.V. room," he said.

Making a house a home;

The challenge

BY EDITH MARTIN

The Army wife makes her home knowing that she'll have to move it in a few years. This creates problems in planning decors that will last through a series of moves into unfamiliar houses.

Experienced Army wives have some tips to offer new wives on how to prepare for frequent moves and how to decorate with some flair.

The key to Army decorating is versatility. Several wives emphasized that the more ways a thing can be used the longer a family can do without replacements.

Trudy Leschak, an Army wife of 15 years, says "Always buy portable units. Wall shelf units which can be put in any room can move to a lot of different quarters before they wear out.".

Furniture is a major problem for many young wives. Liz Pujol suggested "No expensive furniture. That way you can move in a hurry without worrying about damage."

Betty Jones found "a wooden dining table can go in the kitchen or living room."

Vicky Partin offered the idea of going to Army surplus sales. "Army furniture is usually solid mahogany. Even slightly damaged, it's still of very good quality."

For beds, Mrs. Partin definitely recommends "Avoid king and queen sizes. Rarely will they fit the bedrooms."

For wall units, she suggests "Stick to open units. They serve as bookcases or room dividers."

These ladies also had several suggestions for drapes. Mrs. Jones buys "several pairs of curtains in the same size, type and print. They're interchangeable."

"Use cafe curtains," says Mrs. Pujol. "Very seldom are two places alike. Cafe curtains are easy to make and put up."

Mrs. Partin says "Bedspreads and sheets in colorful patterns make interesting curtains and room highlights."

In discussing rugs, once again versatility was the key. Jane Stillman suggested buying seconds from carpet outlets. "When you move to the next place, they can be cut to fit your needs without breaking your heart or budget."

Mrs. Leschak has learned that "Throw rugs are important. Small rugs make rearranging and moving easier."

Mrs. Leschak believes "Avoid accummulating things. If you can get by on two sets of sheets, do so. It means so much less to lug around."

Mrs. Stillman had several ideas for decorating inexpensively. "Contact paper can do a lot of things. It can cover trash cans, highlight walls, or make cornice boards. If you make cornice boards of a standard size, you can put them on any window."

"Other wall coverings can be the vinyl self stick which comes off when you move. Or, you can cover plywood strips one inch wide in a variety of things and place them 6 to 8 inches apart on a wall. This gives a room depth and a nice special effect."

After work PFC Danny Holman relaxes in his quarters playing cards and having a beer. He has everything in his quarters at the barracks that anyone else has at home. (Photo by Gary Cathcart)

New recruiting film on Benning training

The Fort Benning Station of Choice Recruiting progaam, operated by The School Brigade, has a new twist to help convince young men of Georgia that the U.S. Army and Fort Benning is the right place for them.

The twist is a 9 minute full color television film that SSG Stan W. Turner, Station of Choice (S.O.C.) NCOIC, hopes to show some 200 times throughout Georgia during the next fiscal year.

"The film is done in block segments of each unit so a prospective recruit can walk in at anytime and know what's going on," said Sgt. Turner.

The film shows action packed scenes of Infantry training, Airborne and Ranger schools, and Army aviation. Footage of tank "slide for life," and a view of a paratrooper as he goes out the door of a lane are the highpoints of the unit deseriptions.

Other scenes to heighten interest follow motorcycles along the Fort Benning motorcross course, SSG Terner putting his Jaguar XKE through its paces on the sports car club track, skydiving, fishing, and other recreational opportunities on post.

The idea for the film was originated by Capt. James Sparks OIC of the S.O.C. program. Together tonbaiers), 197th Inf. Bde., finds cleaning his weapon a part of the everday professionalism in the 197th. Sgt. Sgt. Charles Whitted of Co. B, 3rd Bn., 7th Inf. (Coldiers in the "Forever Forward" brigade are beginning to feel the change taking place in their unit under it's new mission to maintain a state of combat readiness. (Photo by Bob Thomas)

Drug Abuse

Benning Chaplain speaks out, part II

Chaplain (Capt.) Thomas R. Fraker, presently in the Alcohol and Drug Abuse Control Office, came to Fort Benning in February, 1969. Before that, he spent 12 years as the local pastor in a Methodist Church, three years as a Conference Director of Youth Work, nine years part-time in Special Police work for drug abuse, six years military active duty and three years in the Reserves.

Chaplain Fraker is a veteran of Vietnam and qualified as a Master Paratrooper and Pathfinder. He began his work in the Drug Abuse Control Office in January, 1972.

From his experiences in working with youth over the past several years, Chaplain Fraker has become convinced that there are three basic reasons why kids experiment with most deviant behavior such as drug abuse, streetgang fighting, theft, sexual promiscuity and so forth. This series of articles deals with these causes and is based on the premise that people have basic needs which they will try to satisfy; if society does not provide satisfactory acceptable ways of satisfying these needs, they will try deviant ways.

In this, the second of a three-part series, Chaplain Fraker explains what makes kids experiment with drugs.

Much of this ritual is wrapped in muscles, bravery, and daring for boys and very ill-defined feminity for girls. In our sterile, bland, safe society we force boys to dare on motorcycles and girls to test their femaleness in bikinis and hot pants. By making drugs seem dangerous through scare tactics we encourage kids to seek adult identity in them. If they can do drugs and not succumb to the dangers desribed by most drug educators, then they feel powerful (adult); they beat the adult system. the greatest honor he can now imagine. Guests are very special powerful people.

The major reason for using former addicts is to scare kids out of using drugs. This method of drug abuse prevention is counterproductive. Kids thrive on challenges, they mature facing danger, and they dream of being victors over anything.

Moreover, how many adults recognize what is taking place? Seldom do we notice in our society, until it is too late, that our children have painfully

Drug education is often its own worst enemy and makes drug experimentation appealing in two ways: it causes the young to look for their hero in "one who knows how to guide the explorer;" and it gives the challenge to "climb mountains and dare the unknown:" a tantalizing promise of self revelation.

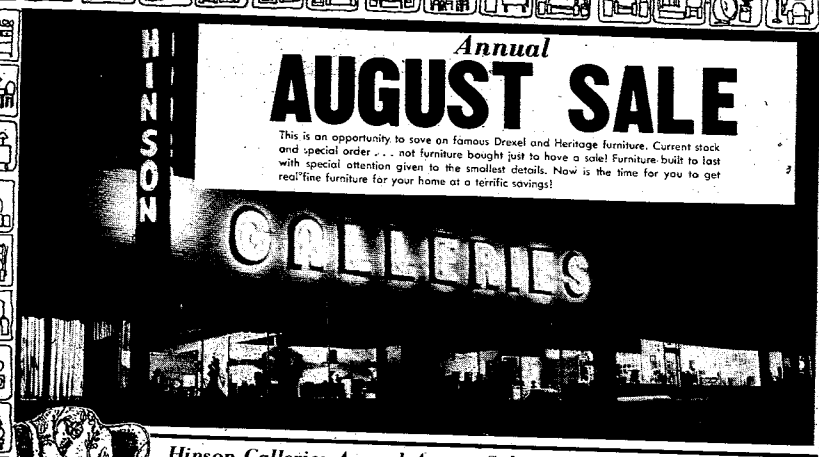
The heros and heroines of every generation are those who seem just a little braver and smarter than everyone else. In our chemically oriented, feel-good-all-the-time society, is it strange that the heroes are often (though short-lived) drug-abuser oriented? They have discovered a little greater high in a little more dangerous drug. They have dared the unknown and survived (without explaining the years old discipline and training that made this possible). his is one of the greatest dangers of the drug scene. When athletes, pilots, military veterans, and scientists were our heroes there were built-in checks on kids getting hurt by imitating them. With drug and revolutionary heros this check is gone. It takes no training to take pills and break windows. We can instantly become heroes ourselves.

Every time we parade a former addict into a classroom we further drug abuse for the above reason. We make heroes of them. We unconsciously say, no matter what story he tells, 'He is a hero because he won the fight with drugs. Drugs are terribly destructive, but this person is a rare, powerful person. He got off of them. Don't you dare try them; you aren't strong enough to win." The student hears a challenge and sees a chance for him-her to someday be a guest in the classroom—made the transition to the adult world. Often we go on for years 'babying' them and talking down to them, when outside the home our kids are living mature, responsible adult lives.



Primitive cultures did have rites of passage. The energies of youth were accepted and used for the good of the community. The most important people of the tribe participated in the rites with the youth. The rites became a symbol of the giving of responsibility by adults to the youth, and the acceptance of that responsibility by the youth. The youth became intimate allies with adults.

The whole process of maturation hinges on adult home and community leaders allowing and encouraging youth to earn and experience the dangers and privileges of responsibility. When youth prove worthy they must be recognized and openly rewarded in a celebration rite, be it words of praise or a full scale honors party, by the leaders at the level of victory, whether it be a father presenting a drivers license, a mayor rewarding community service, or the president holding a national honors ceremony. Maturation is a continuous process of challenge, opportunity, acceptance of responsibility, achievement, reward, larger challenge, more opportunity. . .with youth and adult sharing the total process.

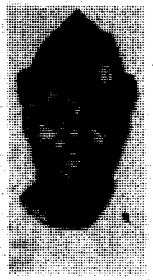
Yes, I think it's very easy to con a G.I. They are away from home in a strange place and want to get to know people. Just go downtown and you can just watch these young soldiers get off the bus. Watch the way they act.



Spc Claud Myers
Dental Co.
Not really. Unlike soldiers of yesteryear the young soldiers of today have minds of their owns. They can't be lead as easily as before.

E-7 John J. Santoro
I.M.P.C.
I think it depends on where they come from and how naive they are. If he's been raised in a city I think he's probably seen most ways con artists work.

2nd Lt. Clyde Gibson
Head and Head co. USAIC
Yes, I think it would be pretty easy to con them. They rush into too many financial decisions without seeking advice first. This along with their lack of experience makes them easy targets for con artists. They should seek assistance on any large purchase.

E-2 Roberson Paul
599th Lt. Maint.
Maybe during basic or on their way to their first duty station I would say yes but once a young G.I. of today is settled at his first station and gets adjusted he knows what's going on and usually can smell a con artist. Also if you take the advice of an NCO or friend and use the buddy system your chances of being ripped off are greatly decreased.

Hall of Fame set for today

An induction ceremony will take place at 10 a.m. Friday in Wigle Hall, Fort Benning, for the Infantry Officers Candidate School Hall of Fame.

Among the 21 men being inducted are Arthur Bolton, Georgia State Attorney General, and Colonel Donald F. Hanson, deputy commander, The School Brigade, Fort Benning.

Other inductees attending the cermony are Colonels DeWitt Cook, Charles T. Hamner, Joe B. Lamb, Albert D. Neely, Irving C. Pahl, Brandon L. Parker and Colonel (ret.) Glenn R. Bowles.

Those being inducted but are unable to attend are Maj. Gen. Robert L. Fair, Brig. Gen. Joseph R. Jelinek, Colonels Fredrick D. Banse-fay, Thomas D. Burke Jr., Ellis L. Fuller, Henry H. Jackson, Myron B. Lee, Werner E. Michel, William T. Rogerson, John W. Thomas, Frank J. Walton, and Sherman Weisinger.

Wigle Hall is named in honor of second Lieutenant Thomas W. Wigle, an Officer Candidate School graduate who distinguished himself in battle by his heroic action in the seizure of a strongly fortified hill position and the capture of 36 German soldiers during World War II. Lt. Wigle was killed in the vicinity of Mote Frassino, Italy, on Sept. 14, 1944, and was awarded the Medal of Honor.

Membership to the Hall of Fame is open to graduates who have received the Medal of Honor; been elected to a high position in the Nation; attained the grade of colonel while active duty; or who have been nominated for the honor by the commandant of the Infantry School.

Carnival's midway flavor credited to 43rd Engr. Bn.

For the second successive year, the 43rd Engineer Battalion (Const) constructed, manned and operated the midway for the USAIC Fourth of July Carnival. As a result of the success of last year's carnival, the 43rd was again assigned the Midway operation with the challenge to do bigger and better things.

Under the guidance of the Battalion Project Officer, Capt. Don McCullough Operation RAPSOWN was initiated on June 1. Throughout the month of June, members from HHC and Company A worked on their assigned games and Charlie Company carpenters constructed the prefabricated booths. The overall police and security were handled by B. and D Companies. On the morning of July 2 the task force moved from Harmony Church to Eubanks Field and began the closely coordinated Carnival construction.

The entire Midway was planned in a schematic manner, utilizing timely support from outside agencies as well as sophisticated engineer equipment during the construction phase. By noon on July 3, the entire Midway was in place and the game and concession booths ready for their tenants.

Early on the morning of the Fourth, senior NCO's and soldiers from HHC and Company A began arranging their games and prizes and putting the finishing touches on the Midway. In total, 325 Engineers were committed for the entire Carnival operation on the Fourth.

As the Carnival opening approached, more and more dignataries inspected the Midway and their commants of a job well done set the pace for the overall attitude of the Carnival.

After being quickly assembled, the raft is now ready for its entry into the water. The men help guide the crane as it goes thru the assembly line, on its way to becoming a part of the platform. (Photo by Bill Girtman)

Carnival's best booth

Six soldiers from the 43rd Engineer Battalion (Construction) were rewarded for the efforts in connection with booth operation at the 4th of July USAIC Carnival.

Twenty dollar monetary awards for best booth, measured by decorations imagination and enthusiasm went to SP5 Hatfield, PV2 Jefferson Dailey, and PV2 William Heathcoe of Alpha Company.

ROTC Rangers

ROTC Ranger class 501-73 recently completed the mountain phase of the demanding Ranger course. While in the mountains of North Georgia the ROTC Rangers were introduced to mountaineering techniques and conducted long range recon and combat patrols. The mountaineering techniques taught included climbing, rappeling, relaying, rope-bride construction and knot-tying. Concluding the mountaineering techniques the ROTC Rangers were transported to Yonah Mountain where they were required to put into practice the fundamentals they had been taught. Throughout the mountaineering phase the Cadet Rangers were evaluated on their leadership ability in stress-oriented situations. They were required to function when they had not slept in several days, when they had received little food, and when they were continually walking up and down the mountains of the Tennessee Valley Divide. Throughout this rugged training Class 501-73 continually met the challenge. The cadets now move on to the last phase of training at the Florida Ranger Camp, Eglin Air Force Base. During this final phase the Cadet Rangers will be exposed to operations in a counterguerrilla environment, small boat operations and river crossing techniques...

WATERMELON WINE PUNCH
Submitted by:
Mrs. G. Norman Batten (Claudette)
Makes 2 quarts

½ medium watermelon, cut lengthwise
½ cup sugar
½ cup water
½ 6-ounce can (1-3 cup) frozen lemonade concentrate, thawed
1 fifth bottle dry white wine, chilled
Reserved melon balls
1 28-ounce bottle ginger ale, chilled

Using rim of cup as guide, trace scallops around cut edge of melon. Carve scalloped edge following pattern. Using a melon ball cutter, cut out 2 cups small melon balls; set aside. Scoop out remaining pulp to use another time; cut thin slice from bottom of melon half to steady.

In saucepan, combine sugar and water; boil 5 minutes. Add lemonade concentrate and wine. Chill 2 hours or more.

* * *

Pour chilled wine mixture into melon half. Add reserved melon balls. Carefully add ginger ale, mixing with an up-and-down motion.

OWC ACTIVITIES

Another new class has been added to the OWC roster of summer classes and activities. If your child likes to study or watch butterflies, ants or frogs or collects leaves and wildflowers, maybe he or she would like to join Mrs. Theodore Schmidt's class.

EXPLORING NATURE WITH CHILDREN: The class starts on July 31 through August 16 and is on Tues. and Thurs. from 1-3, for children 1st grade through 6th. Six lessons are $8 for the first child and $6 for each additional child in the family. They will study wild life, insects and plants of the local area so should wear sturdy shoes, socks and long pants as much of the lessons will take place outdoors. If interested in the class, call Mrs. Schmidt at 545-4598.

Other summer classes starting soon are:

CROCHET: Mrs. H. A. Furman will begin new classes in crochet on August 8 from 1-3 p.m. at the OWC Lounge. The classes are four weeks in duration at the cost of $3 plus supplies. Call 563-5469 for more information.

TEEN SEWING: Classes will be held on Wed. from 9:30 - 11:30 at the OWC Lounge starting July 25. The six lessons at a cost of $12 will be limited to 12. Call Nancy Billings at 687-9600.

For more information on any of the classes offered, call 545-2725 or 545-5785.

WHO WHAT WHERE

By Judy Jakubowski

The ladies of the School Brigade welcomed Mrs. Allen M. Goodson, (), wife of The School Brigade Commander at a tea on July 10 in the Normandy Room of the Officers' Open Mess. Serving Mrs. Goodson punch is Mrs. John F. Prout.

Mrs. Goodson was presented with a corsage upon her arrival, then was joined by special guests, Mrs. Thomas M. Tarpley and Mrs. William R. Richardson in a receiving line to greet approximately 68 ladies.

Hostesses for the tea were Mesdames William Duncan, Donald Bowman, Alvin Walker, Donald Lumday, Gordon Hunt, Robert Farris, and Robert Brumbach.

IOAC 4-73

The ladies of the IOAC 4-73, 4th Platoon, met July 11 for a salad luncheon at the home of Mrs. Robert Ruth, Arrowhead, Ft. Benning.

Mrs. Ruth graciously provided the salad greens, rolls and dessert. Each lady brought a delicacy to add to the greens making a large gourmet salad.

97th INF. BDE.

2nd Battalion, 10th F.A.

The officers and ladies of the 2nd Bn., 10th F.A. held a hail and farewell at the Metro Building in Harmony Church on July 7. The pot luck supper was sponsored by B battery.

Welcomed to the group by Lt. Col. Curtis Hoglan, Battalion Commander, were Capt. and Mrs. Jim Smith, Capt. and Mrs. Bob Kromer, and 1Lt. and Mrs. Ron Buechler. Unfortunately, farewells had to be said to Maj. and Mrs. Bob Veen, Maj. and Mrs. Jim Pongonis, Capt. and Mrs. Bill Echols, and Capt. and Mrs. Wayne Smoot. Each of these couples was presented with departing gifts to remind them of their stay in the battalion.

OWC awards soldier $25 for June blood donation

The Fort Benning Officer's Wives Club has awarded the first $25 incentive award for blood donors. The winner for June was Spc Bobby W. Armstrong of the 586th Maintenance Company, 36th Engineer Group. The names of all donors are deposited in a box and the winner's name is drawn on the last Friday of the month.

Unlike many blood donor programs the Army relies on all volunteer donors. No monetary compensation is offered. Most donors at the Center come from Fort Benning units; however, all donors are welcome at the Center — retired, dependents and civilians. The Center is located in Troop Medical Clinic No. 9, Building 2265, on Indianhead Rd. at Lawson Field. This air conditioned facility is open for donors every Thursday from 1:30 to 7:00 p.m.

Donors must be in goood health, and cannot be taking any medication. They must not have donated blood in the past 8 weeks, and must not have returned from South East Asia in the past 36 months. Donors with a history of malaria or hepatitis cannot be accepted. Time required for donation is usually 45 to 6 0minutes. For further information call Martin Army Hospital, Plans and Training Div. 544-1318 or 544-2591.

The Blood Donor Center is operated by Martin Army Hospital's Pathology Service. The Center provides for the needs of Fort Benning patients and also ships whole blood to the Department of Defense for world wide usage. During an average month 10 to 130 units of blood are transfused at MAH.

Benning officer's fight for freedom

Fighting for freedom for some men is a continuous lifelong struggle. For Major Luis Barcena, Executive Officer of the 2nd Student Bn., The School Brigade, that struggle has lasted over the past two decades, from the Bay of Pigs to the Republic of Vietnam.

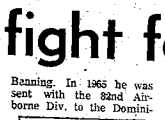
Major Barcena joined the United States Army in 1963. For eleven years prior he fought against oppression and tyranny in his homeland of Cuba.

Fulgencio Batista took control of the Cuban government on March 10, 1952. "Batista was a cruel dictator," said Major Barcena," and I helped oppose him until Castro took over in January, 1959."

Like many of his countrymen Major Barcena wasn't pro-Castro. However, Castro promised democracy and free elections and these factors helped keep him in power in the early days of his regime.

"We accepted him," says Major Barcena, "because we expected him to make good on his promises. Then we started to see some strange things." These strange things developed into communist political policies.

"Castro began confiscating companies and property. He placed Communists in high government positions. He said there would be no free elections after the revolution because the revolution never ends. The real indication of what was happening was when he brought people to trial for being anti-communist."



On July 27, 1960, Luis Barcena went underground. He worked secretely against Castro for several years. Several others who worked with him were captured, and were sentenced to as many as 15 years in prison.

On Demember 6, 1960, he escaped to the United States in a 14 foot boat with 10 other people. "Our boat was leaking, we ran out of gas, and Castor's patrol boats were chasing us," said Maj. Barcena. Miraculously they were intercepted by a U.S. Navy Submarine which stayed with them until a coast guard cutter arrived.

He then trained and took part in the Bay of Pigs invasion, which ended in defeat for the invasion force. He escaped and found his way back to the U.S.

In March 1963 he joined the American Army and attended the Infantry Officer Basic Course at Fort Benning. In 1965 he was sent with the 82nd Airborne Div. to the Dominican Republic. In December 1966 he went to Vietnam with the 25th Inf. Div. He served two tours in Vietnam. In his second tour with the 198th Inf. Bde, his Bde. commander was Col. William R. Richardson, now Brig. Gen. Richardson, Assistant commandant of the Infantry School. Maj. Barcena was assigned to the 2nd Bn. on November 1, 1973.

He is a man who has been in all different types of action all over the world. As he himself put it in one of the great understatements, "I have seen a lot of action."

Bridge removed

The Bailey Bridge spanning the gap across Standing Creek outlet into the Chattahoochee River has been disassembled and returned to Benning.

The bridge was put in by the 586th Float Bridge Company, then of the 931st Engr. Gp., now of the 36th Engr. Gp., in November of 1970 when an overload damaged the existing bridge. The Columbus, Georgia community was served by this 140 Foot bridge until July of 1973.

Golden Heritage

OWC Cook Book on sale July 27

BY ANNE HAMPTON

If you have eaten in restaurants here and abroad, if you have read all the popular cook books and clipped recipes from leading magazines and newspapers, you could hardly come up with more interesting, more up-to-date and more workable recipes than those found in the "Golden Heritage" Cook Book.

Under the direction of editor, Joan Stoltz and assistant editor, Claudette Batten, the "Golden Heritage" has evolved into a unique publication with a professional polish and dimension seldom found in strictly volunteer ventures. To produce this cook book, nearly one year elapsed before all the recipes were collected, tested, selected, standardized and edited to fit the page formats. In addition to the hundreds of recipes, the cook book committee endeavored to make the "Golden Heritage" more spectacular by punctuating the book with impressively illustrated period pen and ink drawings.

To order your exclusive copy of the "Golden Heritage" Cook book, mail your check or money order for $5.00 per copy to "Golden Heritage" Cook Book, Officers' Wives Club of Fort Benning, P. O. Box 1975, Fort Benning, Ga. 31905. (Cook book price includes 50 cents for postage and handling.) Make your checks payable to the Officers' Wives Club and enclose your name and address so that the cook book can be mailed to you. If you will be leaving Fort Benning before July 27 and cannot attend the presentation ceremonies, please use your permanent address so that your order will not be delayed. Don't wait — order now.

Illustration by Anne Hampton

Every recipe submitted by Fort Benning hostesses and well-known personalities such as General of the Armies, Omar N. Bradley has been prudently tested and proven for success and palatibility in the OWC kitchen and in various Fort Benning homes.

Variety is the keynote stressed throughout the "Golden Heritage." All-time favorites like "Country Captain Chicken" and "Grandmother's Lemon Chess Pie," plus unusual "Roast Pheasant with Brandy and Cream" and "Indian Tondoorie Chicken"... classic "Gold Souffle Grand Mariner... heavenly desserts like "Brandied Peach Ice Cream" and beverages of many flavors are part of the culinary collection presented in this book.

The "Golden Heritage" Cook Book is a smorgasbord of delectable dishes styled for today's kitchens. Recipes are organized into sections such as the familiar: appetizers, breads, salads, entrees, vegetables and desserts. Original categories include one on "Riverside"— recipes from past and present Infantry School Commandants and their wives; "Officers' Call" — for and by men chefs and "Southern Hospitality" — cherished and time-honored recipes that are an integral part of the South's heritage.

Discover for yourself how rewarding the "Golden Heritage" Cook Book can become. Reserve a copy for yourself and order several extras for special gifts and Christmas presents. This cook book commemorating the 50th anniversary of the Fort Benning OWC will undoubtedly become a treasured collector's item in the years to come.

Be cautious on fast land deals

CHICAGO (CDN) — If you can correctly guess the direction of future population growth, you might profit by carefully buying and holding the right land. There's just enough truth in that observation to cost you a lot of money the next time somebody offers you a "free lunch." Same goes for a free airplane ride to Florida or Arizona, a free weekend vacation — anywhere, or a free cocktail and dinner party at a hotel near your home.

These are the come-ons that give some really high pressure salesmen a chance to go to work on you. They'll use every trick in the book (and some yet unpublished) to get you to sign up in buy raw, undeveloped land in some swamp, jungle or desert. For all you know, the land may be entirely under water part of the year — or so dry it's always parched. Or virtually inaccessible. Possibly it may never have any economically practical use and by just a raw, undeveloped place on a map. But that's not the way they'll describe it.

They'll try to convince you that what they're offering is the opportunity of a lifetime to share in the development of a wonderful vacation retreat, a dreamed-of retirement home for your golden years or an exciting chance to make some really fantastic profits.

The promoters of these schemes are pretty successful, judging from the number of complaints made about them. Thousands of people have complained that they've been cheated, lied to, deceived and stuck. Stuck with something they didn't want when they bought it, don't want now and probably never would want.

That proves that money can be made by investing in raw swamp in Florida, raw desert in the southwest and even in raw jungle on some tropical island. But it's made by the promoters, not by the suckers like you and me that they try to sell it to right after that free lunch.

I'm not really discussing investment in land. This is not an investment advice column. I'm just trying to warn you about being cajoled, pressured, hypnotized, deceived or even embarrassed into signing to buy something you may regret if you don't first carefully examine all the facts.

Federal law requires that the promoter furnish the potential buyer with a detailed factual report on the property. But this property report isn't going to do you any good unless you have a chance to carefully read and understand it before you decide to buy. If it's included in a large kit or promotional materials, you may not even know you've got it.

All the government can do is make sure that, along with those beautiful dreams in full color, the promoter gives you the required facts in black and white. But for you to know what you're doing, you've got to read and understand them yourself or at least get somebody who is on your side to do it for you.

Try to learn some of the important details that they might not tell you about — like what it might take to make this land livable and how much extra this might end up costing you. Be especially careful that you know and fully understand what catches there may be to any refund promises the salesman makes. That's usually the trickiest part of the whole deal.

But you should first decide if you really do want to spend your retirement years living in a Florida swamp or on a New Mexico desert, because there's no guarantee the land will be fully developed and livable by the time you retire.

Furthermore, if you do buy, and you later decide to sell, how are you going to do it — by giving a free cocktail party of your own?

TSB

In an awards ceremony conducted on 6 July 1973, at Headquarters, The School Brigade, Colonel Allen M. Goodson, TSB Commander, presented an incentive award to 1 Lt. Roger D. White, 13th Company, First Battalion, TSB in recognition for a suggestion Lt. White had submitted. Lt. White proposed the elimination of field feeding of hot meals to students in the Infantry Officers Advanced Course when scheduled training required absence from the contonement area during the noon meal. Adoption of this suggestion alleviated a severe management problem, provided an alternative solution to feeding hot meals in the field, and reduced feeding support requirements, and resulted in an estimated annual saving in manhours of $3,171. 1 Lt. White received a Department of the Army certificate signed by Brigadier General Richardson and a check for $210.00. Also attending the ceremony were 1st Battalion Commander, LTC Donald C. Bowman and 13th Company Commander, CPT Harry C. Morton.

Major George Moss, race relations coordinating group, Fort Benning, was presented the Meritorious Service Medal recently during a ceramony on post. Moss, received the award for meritorious performance as chief, race relations-equal opportunity here during the period February 4, 1973 to June 30, 1973. According to his citation, Moss' dedication to duty, professional ability and personal motivation contributed directly to the success of the maintenance and instruction team effort. Maj. Gen. Thomas M. Tarpley, commanding general, Fort Benning, presented the award. With Moss was his wife and child.

Sgt. Kenneth R. Bohannon of the 138th Military Police Company has just received a Letter of Commendation, a Certificate of Academic Excellence, and above all, a promotion to Staff Sergeant.

SSG Bohannon entered the Army in September of 1957. He worked with Missiles until 1964 and then got out of the Army. While he was out he went to work with the Air Force as an Electronics Technician. Since he wasn't making enough money he decided to reenlist in 1967.

* * *

Staff Sergeant Bohannon has been in the Army for 12 years now, with 8 years in the Infantry, 5 years with Missiles, and the rest with the Military Police. He enjoys being an MP because it is interesting, it has a wide variety of work, and you're "mostly on your own."

* * *

SSG Bohannon has one year left in his present term and is undecided as to whether he will make the Army a career.

His hobbies include stamp collecting, and playing softball. He is married to Betty Jane Bohannon and has two children. Although he is currently residing in Cusseta, his hometown is Pitts, Georgia.

Sp6 Arthur Webster of the Maintenance Platoon, A Company, 43rd Engineer Battalion (Const) recently returned from Fort Jackson, S. C., where he graduated from the Third U. S. Army NCO Academy.

Avn. Cmd.

Capt. Alfred B. Rodrigues has assumed command of the 36th Engineer Group Flight Platoon, 145th Avn. Bn. (C BT). Captain Rodrigues received his B.S. degree from the University of San Francisco in 1969, and was commissioned a 2nd Lt. in Field Artillery.

In addition to being a rated rotary wing Aviator, Rodrigues is Airborne, Ranger, and Pathfinder qualified. His awards include the Bronze Star with "V" and three Oak leaf clusters, the Air Medal with "V" and Oak Leaf cluster, the Army Commendation Medal, the Purple Heart with one Oak Leaf cluster, and the Combat Infantryman Badge.

Prior to assuming command of the Flt. platoon, Rodrigues was the supply officer for the 121st Aviation Company, 145th Avn. Bn.

Capt. Clifton Gunter Jr. has assumed command of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 145th Aviation Battalion (Combat). A 1960 graduate of Dothan High School, Dothan, Ala., Captai nGunter joined the Army in September, 1968, and completed basic training at Fort Dix, New Jersey. He is a graduate of Infantry Officers Candidate School and a rated Army Aviator. Prior to assuming command of Headquarters Company, Captain Gunter was the Gun Platoon (AH-1G Cobra) leader for the 121st Aviation Company (AH). He served as a Cobra pilot in RVN from June 1971 until May 1972.

A Family Affair

David and Richard Ross of Company C, 1st Battalion (Mech.), 58th Infantry (Patriots) consider the Army to be a family affair. Both are AITs in Company C who enlisted for the 197th Infantry as their unit of choice. The Ross Brothers are from Northeast, Pennsylvania. David Ross explains why they chose the 197th: "We wanted to be down South because we have some relatives here and also because we like the warm weather."

"You get a better understanding of how to work with people as a team," explains Richard when asked how he likes AIT with the 197th.

The brothers have found that they have become closer to one another since coming into the Army. "We thought that if we came into the Army together," explains David, "we would get to know each other better."

Richard feels that there is no respect dhown for the leaders in the Army. "But," states Richard, "I'm looking forward to working in the Battalion once I graduate from AIT."

David is looking forward to goind o nto Airborne training after graduation.

43rd hosts cadets for summer training

The 43rd Engineer Battalion (Construction) is again serving as host for 16 USMA Cadets, class of '74, this summer during their Army Orientation Training (AOT).

Each Engineer Cadet is assigned an active duty Lieutenant as a sponsor and in turn serves a primary duty as a platoon leader. Thru this medium the Cadets are exposed to planning, organizing, and supervising a myriad of construction projects in support of the Infantry Center. Additionally, the Cadets will participate in Community Relations Projects in support of the Fort Benning Station of Choice Program.

The Cadets are treated as an officer and will have the opportunity to participate in Race Relations Seminars, Drug and Alcohol Abuse Programs and serve as instructors in the Physical Training Programs. Cadets will accompany their sponsor to all duties, to include participating with the sponsor on Battalion Staff Duty Officer. So that the Cadets are exposed to all facets of active duty, they will also have the opportunity to participate in intramural sports and attend social functions, to include a monthly battalion officers party.

The entire program is patterened after last years activities which met with a huge success, and all indicators point to this years Cadets having an even more outstanding AOT.

Operation Beach Duty:
Eastern vacations as incredible as the airfares that get you there.

Everyone knows servicemen get to fly cheaper than civilians. But now, Eastern can help you get some pretty incredible discounts at dozens of hotels throughout Florida, the Caribbean and Mexico. Vacations like these:

The Caribbean Beach Club in San Juan for $8 per day.
Swim and fish in crystal clear waters. Relax on beautiful white beaches. And in the evening, Puerto Rico's famous casinos and exciting night clubs are waiting for you.

One way reserved military air fare from Washington/Baltimore to San Juan runs you $43.50 plus security charges and you don't have to wear a uniform.

The Jolly Roger in Ft. Lauderdale for $8 per day.
You can cruise the canals of the Florida Gold Coast Capital. Or play a set of tennis on one of Fort Lauderdale's many courts. Or simply watch the whole thing from the rooftop lounge of the Jolly Roger.

One way reserved military air fare from Atlanta is $35, plus security charges.

The Jamaica Inn at Walt Disney World for $8 per day.
Take a friend or your family to Walt Disney World just outside of Orlando, Florida. Explore the Magic Kingdom, a new world of fun and excitement.

One way military reserved coach from Washington/Baltimore is only $46 plus security charges.

Hotel prices above are for one person sharing a room with someone else. They're good until December 15, 1973. Meals or local taxes not included.

Military fares are good anywhere in the U.S. and any time except from 2 p.m. to midnight on Fridays and Sundays.

If you have any questions, call your SATO office or Eastern. Or you can mail us the coupon and we'll send you a free brochure on these and many other vacations we have.

Leases and Deposits

There are two points to understand when renting an apartment — leases and deposits. These problem areas make up a majority of complaints in renting or leasing an apartment.

Most apartments require a lease because they offer protection to both the consumer and the apartment owner. It spells out exactly what both parties will do.

One should check a lease for its exact terms before signing. Most of them are for 12 months. The apartment owner, under certain circumstances, can cancel a lease at any time. The lessee rarely can.

Even the military tenant is not exempt from a lease unless there is a military clause within it. In case of unexpected TDY, permanent change of station or other Army orders come through, it is best to contact the apartment owner and attempt to negotiate a settlement. Most apartment owners will meet the tenant halfway, but one should realize in order to stay in business, the owner must make a profit. If an individual moves out without informing the owner, he may be sued for the amount of time left that the lease specified.

Unless the consumer notifies the owner in writing, his lease will be automatically renewed. This is usually done 30 days before the expiration date and should be sent by registered mail.

The second common problem is difficulty in obtaining deposit refunds. A deposit should never be made unless the individual has definitely decided to move into it.

Many lease agreements have a provision which reads: "If upon vacating the demised premises, lessee does not leave same in a clean and rentable condition (except for reasonable wear) lessor may clean up the demised premises and charge the reasonable expense of such cleaning to lessee, or against lessee's deposit. . ."

If an apartment is clean and doesn't require redecorating, some apartment owners will readily return a deposit. Others are very strict in their intepretation of the provision. They may deduct the cost of shampooing carpetting, repairing, repainting and so forth.

To protect oneself as far as returning deposits is concerned, an individual should ask the apartment manager what the policy is. It is also helpful to talk to former tenants of the apartments.

Bait and Switch

There are several sales and advertising gimmicks used on consumers time and time again. Of the multitude of techniques, some sewing machine dealers are a good example.

In their selling operations, the purpose of their sales practices is to "bait" consumers with "too good to be true" offers, and then "switch" their interest to higher-priced sewing machines. They do this in order to sell more expensive models.

Two types of "free" award letters are sometimes used by a number of sewing machine dealers. One type offers a "free" sewing machine if the consumer will purchase a cabinet for it. The other offers a "free" machine if the consumer agrees to purchase a service contract and to "maintain it" for a certain number of years.

Often, the selling price of the cabinet covers more than the cost of both machine and cabinet. "Maintaining" the service contract usually means that the individual must pay the entire cost of the contract in advance, in cash or on a time-payment basis.

These letters are intended to build store traffic. Various offers of this type may be used to entice the consumer to buy a higher priced sewing machine.

Sewing machine "checks", which "offer the recipient a sum of money which must be applied toward the purchase of a new sewing machine" is another gimmick. And "low price" ads are still another. Consumers should learn to detect this bait advertising with "too good to be true" offers. It is suggested that they ask about the servicing and availability of parts, understand any guarantee, learn what comparable merchandise sells for at other stores and be sure to do business with a responsible company.

Con Artists?

Con artists who participate in unscrupulous business operations create problems for consumers and legitimate industry as well. Fort Benning only receives a few of these cases a month, according to R. C. Kolb, chief of the Provost Marshal's Investigation section. But there are actions that can be taken to prevent such acts in the future.

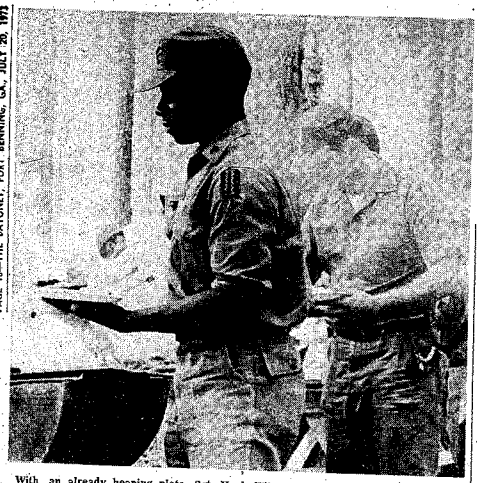
Fraudulent business affairs occur in areas from renting an apartment or house to selecting a pest control service. A few deceitful sales people prey on the consumer with false tales and disguised sales pitches.

The repairing and selling of motor vehicles and mobile homes are the biggest problems here, Kolb says. "A lot of commands don't inform their soldiers that when they get shafted downtown they can go to the Armed Forces Disciplinary Control Boards (AFDCB)," he said.

The AFDCB was established to deal with matters pertaining to the health, morals, welfare and discipline of members of the Armed Forces. Some of the goals of this off-installation enforcement are to reduce the number of offenses, to enforce the Uniform Code of Military Justice and other regulations and to enhance efforts to maintain good public relations. When there is a conflict between a member of the Armed Forces and an off-installation establishment it is investigated and the matter is taken up with both parties. When the proprietor of the establishment fails to make restitution, the board votes on what action should be taken. It could result in the establishment being put off limits. For any problems, call Investigator Porter at 545-2016/4424.

Another agency in consumer assistance is the Better Business Bureau. It is a private agency that serves the public interest by maintaining ethical practices in the advertising and selling of products and services. They combat fraud and curb the activities of a small minority of con men.

The National Better Business Bureau suggests that individuals do not send cash through the mail. It is subject to loss or theft and it does not establish proof that the company has received payment. A check or money order is preferable because there is proof tha the company was paid for the merchandise. Individuals can call 327-2671 Monday-Friday from 9 a.m. for BBB assistance.



There are a number of products that are advertised and marketed using a "free merchandise" letters to get the attention of consumers. The Federal Trade Commission considers an item "free" only if it is being given away without any obligation or when it is given away with the purchase of another article.

But using "free merchandise" as a gimmick is deceptive because, generally, nothing is literally free. Usually something must be purchased. To do this, the agreement may include service contracts which must be maintained, a cash-in-advance clause, or some type of time-payment plan.

As for door to door salesmen, the practice is illegal on post. Although it is illegal, many do come on post and usually sell legitimate merchandise. Salesmen must have a solicitation permit to phone post personnel.

It is suggested that if a business firm is unknown, an individual can check with the BBB to determine its business performance record, at no charge. Also, any contract should be read through throughly. Terms of any guarantee, warranty or service agreement should be read and understood.

Call 327-2671

With an already heaping plate, Sgt. Hugh Wilson of Combat Support Company, 1st Battalion (Mechanized), 58th Infantry (Patriots), appears to be enjoying himself at the picnic which the "Patriot" Battalion held on June 26. In addition to the food, the 197th Infantry Brigade Combo was on hand providing music.

MP's to check uniforms

Increased emphasis will be made by the military police on the citing of off post uniform violators.

Current regulation permits the wearing of duty uniforms other than the Army Green, Army Tan and the Army Khaki uniforms only while enroute between off post quarters and post, and while conducting personal business and convenience shopping between off post residence and post immediately before and after duty hours.

This authority pertains to all duty uniforms including fatigues, white work uniforms, field uniforms and flight uniforms, providing that the uniform is clean and presentable.

Such uniforms will not be worn off post in places of public entertainment such as theaters, lounges, bars, dining rooms, and restaurants.

Senate Watergate Hearings May Preclude Daytime Programming

Used cars can be a hassle

The following list of terms and definitions are part of everyday life for a used car salesman, and should be well known to all who are in the market for a "used car." The Better Business Bureau of Columbus welcomes any calls or inquiries regarding any questions a prospective buyer may have.

At one time or another, almost everybody decides that it is about time that their old faithful "tin lizzie" was laid to rest, and a newer model in better condition was purchased.

Where to go? What to look for?

On the strip "Honest John" advertises in bright, sometimes flashing letters, Name Your Own Deal — NAME YOUR OWN TERMS — WE BEAT ANY DEAL IN TOWN — BEST DEAL IN THE CITY — GREATEST SALE EVER KNOWN. These and other phrases greet your eyes as you drive around and shop.

There are countless traps, cleverly hidden, to ensnare the unwary, the gullible, the sucker, the mark.

BAIT ADVERTISER

There are many schemes and methods of "Bait Advertising."

The idea is to advertise something at an attractive price, not for the purpose of selling it, but to attract customers so that they may be persuaded to buy something else, usually at a higher price.

BUSHING

Bushing is the scheme of inducing a deposit on an order, or making a trade-in offer by offering an attractive price or deal on a car, and then later raising the price or lowering the trade - in allowance. The purpose is to keep the prospect from shopping around with the hope of later switching him to a higher price, or a lower trade-in.

WOULD YOU TAKE $?

This is the trick of sticking a card under the windshield wiper, bearing the name of an auto salesman offering an attractive amount for your car. Sure you'd take it, if you were ready to buy — if you could get it. The purpose is to ensnare a good prospect.

CONTRACTS

Contracts should be filled in completely before signing. Look for listings such as down payment, finance charges, number and amount of weekly, monthly, or installment payments, and various other important conditions. When such listings are filled in completely, concealed charges are avoided. READ BEFORE YOU SIGN — AND GET A COPY, when you sign.

GUARANTEES

The term "Guaranteed", alone means nothing. A guarantee should be specific as to its terms, meanings, and conditions, and should be in writing on the contract.

Is it a guarantee as to the condition of the car, or merely that repairs will be provided?

A verbal guarantee is not provable, or enforceable, if it is denied or refused. A guarantee in any form is no better than the one who gives it.

CONDITION

No dealer can afford to tune-up or recondition all his used cars. That may be done with selected cars where the dealer figures it would help the sale and he could get his money back in the price. Most cars are sold on the "as is" basis.

Some are sold in excellent condition with or without guarantee. Some may be repaired or reconditioned and sold with a reasonable guarantee. Some are repaired just to the extent to hide the major deficiencies. Others, although they need it, may not be repaired, and are sold "as is".

All of this means that it depends on the type of dealer you deal with, and his general policy.

GENERAL APPEARANCE

Most used car purchasers depend on the dealer — even to the extent of limited examination, and no test drive. Thus depending upon a reputable dealer can be satisfactory, bearing in mind that all dealers are not reputable. Unscrupulous dealers lurk everywhere, particularly around military installations to prey upon the unwary soldier.

Purchasers must realize that they are assuming the responsibility unless the condition of the car is warranted or guaranteed in the purchase contract.

Coming to the screen

The Day of The Jackals

(PG) Having failed in an attempt to kill General Charles de Gaulle, the hard line French Secret Army Organization (OAS) under the leadership of Colonel Rodin (Eric Porter) in early 1963 decides to hire a top foreign professional assassin to do the job. The man reputed to be The Jackal (Edward Fox).

Fists of Fury

(R) Bruce Lee arrives in his uncle's billage in Bangkok to find work. He has vowed not to fight and remains passive when cousin Paul Tien battles four obnoxious toughs.

In the local ice factory Lee accidently finds a small packet of dope which leads to the death of two workers on orders from the big boss Han Ying Chieh. Then Tien is killed while investigating the workers disappearance. Lee is furious and so is his skill . . . kung fu.

Molly and Lawless John

(PG) Johnny Lawler (Sam Elliott) is a jailbird destined for the gallows. The sheriff (John Anderson) is a cold indifferent man. The sheriff's wife (Vera Miles) is hungry for love. Molly believes John is innocent and helps him to escape. Later they find an Indian woman, who dies in childbirth. Over John's objections, Molly takes the baby along, for some ride.

Swain to produce Benning's 'Mouse'

The Fort Benning Dramatizers' next production "The Mouse That Roared", Directed by Bob Swain, will be presented on August 17, 1 8- 23, 24, 25th at Fort Benning's Theatre.

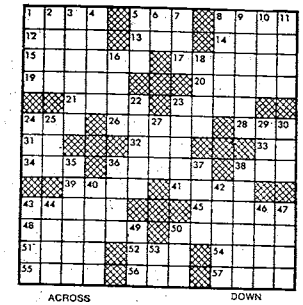
When asked why he chose such a play for our theatre, Bob replied, "The play is an outstanding comedy for young and old, a parody on today's situation. Even in the midst of impending world disaster we can still laugh at ourselves. The Fort Benning Playhouse has a flexible set-up — you can give your imagination free reign. The enormous enthusiasm displayed by the Dramatizers makes working on a production a gratifying experience."

Bob is a man who has had much experience in all aspects of the theatre. He graduated from Virginia Polytechnical Institute with a B.S. degree in Biology and a minor in Education.

He prefers the Stanislavsky method of acting to bring out the best in his actors. Stanislavsky, one of the true "Fathers of Modern Acting Technique" denotes "realism of character", not "theatricality of actors".

From his actors, Bob expects concentration, relaxation, and a willingness to work hard for the end result. "A production in which the characters are real and exist as people, not merely bodies filling the span of the stage." As for his analysis of a Director's Function, Bob stated "The Director is an actor's mirror. He must objectively and accurately describe the actor's pictorial and vocal qualities, have the neccessary knowledge and skills associated with production and staging, and be a well organized and competent administrator."

An experienced actor himself, Bob has portrayed Paris in "Tiger at the Gates" and Kenneth Dowey in "The Old Lady Shows Her medals" at Stratford University. At his Alma Mater, V.P.I., he played the Boy in "The Fantastics" and Von Geldern in a world premiece of "The World at January."



Some of his recent endeavors include Syme in "1884", the silent boy and the boxer in Fort Benning's production of "The Cave Dwellers". He was the associate director of "Edwin Booth" in the Third United States Army Tournament of Plays, 1972.

He is currently conducting an active theatre workshop on Saturday mornings at 10:00 A.M. at the Benning Playhouse. In the near future Bob hopes to expand the workshops to include vocal and music training along with some technical aspects of the theatre such as, lighting and sound.

He also wants to produce and direct a short movie, finish graduate school and get his masters and Doctorate degree in Directing. From there he'll alternate between professional directing and education at various universities and theaters throughout the United States.

That's a rocky road to a big, bright future, but with his stamina, courage and a pure desire to fulfill his quest, he'll have no trouble getting there.

Pony Club

Prepares for National Rally in Omaha

By TIM PURDON

The Fort Benning Hunt Club members are attempting to raise money to send their Pony Club team to the National Rally held July 25-29 at Omaha, Neb.

The team will consist of captain Terry Lahnstein, Betsy Tully, Debbie McKenzie, and Laurie Pennesi. Stable manager is Monique Schoonover.

Recently, the Pony Club won the Southern Regional Rally held at Tallahssee, Fla. for outstanding appearance and showmanship.

Pony Clubs in the United States were modeled in the British Horse Society and the British guides on horsemanship.

The ideal is to "promote a thoroughly happy, comfortable horseman riding across a natural country with complete confidence and perfect balance on a pony equally happy and confident and free from pain or bewilderment."

The National Pony Rally will consist of five events — three riding events and two dismounted tests.

Dressage (rhyming with massage) is a riding event held in an arena where the horse and rider must complete compulsory figures within a time limit.

The cross country riding event is over a two mile trail with 18-25 natural obstacles like hedges and fences. The horse and rider must complete the trail within a time limit and in good order.

Stadium jumping is held in an arena. Horse and rider must jump 12 pole obstacles in a set pattern.

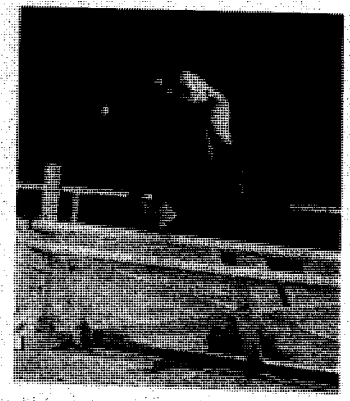
The two dismounted tests are on stable management and general horsemanship knowledge.

Over the past several years the Benning Pony Club has been an active member of the United States Pony Club.

Equestrian activity at Fort Benning dates back to the era of the horse and cavalry.

During that era, polo was the most active off-duty sport and Saturday was scrimmage day for polo on French Field. Then on Sunday, match day, the field was lined with spectators out in their Sunday finery to view the riding and horses.

Behind each goal the field was open where each team picketed its horses and walked them to cool them after each 7½-minute chukker.



As a match was six chukkers ,each rider had a string of at least three horses he rode in rotation through the match. So each team had picketed at their end of the field over twenty horses.

In 1947 the last polo match was played on French Field and in August 1947 the last of the government mounts were sold.

Ten years after that sale, the Fort Benning Hunt Club was formed to preserve the "gentlemanly friendship" of horse and rider.

The object of the Benning Pony Club is helping young people ride while learning to enjoy all kinds of sports connected with horses and riding; to instill in the members the proper care of their animals; and to promote the highest ideals of sportsmanship.

Anyone interested in donating money towards the National Rally or who want to find out about the club may contact Mrs. Gordon Sinclair, club advisor, or Mrs. Robert Tully, District Commissioner of the Benning Pony Club, at 544-4244.

Terry Lahnstein, of the Fort Benning Pony Club jumps "Patinote" over an obstacle during a recent Pony Rally. Terry, along with Betsy Tully, Debbie McKenzie, and Laurie Pennesi, will be competing in the National Pony Rally to be held July 25-29, at Omaha Neb. (U. S. Army Photo by PFC Jim Sywilok)

BY BILL KLOER

If you have ever caught a fish you can stop reading this column right now. You probably know too much about the sport to be interested in the basic ideas that I'm going to put down here.

This column is for those who have just taken up the sport or have never fished before.

Friends of mine who are avid fishermen claim that since God created six times more water than land He intended for man to spend six times as much time on the water fishing. The newcomer to the sport won't feel this strongly about this but many people are surprised at how fast the fishing bug can bite. It doesn't take long before the hooked human wants to spend all his time at the sport.

Years and years

It's been that way for years. Initially the existence of some tribes depended on the fish and other edible matter taken from the water. For these people fishing wasn't exactly fun but being good at it gave them a certain amount of prestige and certainly a better standard of living than their neighbors. Cave dwellers in France recorded fishing activities with drawings on the walls of their caves some 15,000 years ago. Drawings also show that the Egyptians fished with rod and line as early as 3,000 years before Christ.

Artificial lures were first mentioned in writing about the year 200 B.C. The use of artificial lures was first described in a book entitled "The Book of Saint Albans". It was written by Dame Julian Berners of England and printed in 1846. It later served as the basis for another book "The Compleat Angler" by Izaak Walton who is considered by some to be the inventor of artificial lure fishing. Ike was about 200 years behind Dame Berners who in turn came on the scene pretty late.

Most fishermen today go fishing for the fun and relaxation. Fishing is a salubrious pastime. It provides the opportunity for peace and quiet and a chance to think. Fathers find it a good means of doing something with that small son. It is something they both can enjoy while they are doing it and later enjoy talking about. Husbands find it a good thing to take the wife fishing to keep her from nagging and wives find that going on a weekend fishing trip makes the husband easier to get along with for the rest of the week.

You don't have to be an expert to enjoy fishing. Just getting into the outdoors is a pleasure in itself. Catching fish is a nice bonus to add to a day of pleasure.

If you are really interested in learning all you can about catching fish, keep your mind, eyes and ears open and you will observe much that would otherwise pass you by. Talk with experienced fishermen. Be friendly but don't ask too many questions. You won't have to prompt your informant much once he finds you are a good listener. You don't have to match any of his stories either. The worst thing you can do is demonstrate a know-it-all attitude. Many a fisherman who was right on the verge of learning a real fishing secret ruined the whole thing by talking too much.

Good luck

Luck frequently enters into fishing success but knowledge of fish habits, the topography of their homes and ability to handle your fishing equipment are more important. Learn all you an about fish and perfect your casting techniques. Go where the fishermen are — at the fishing places. Join the Rod and Gun Club. Talk with fishermen there. Talk a little but listen a lot. You can learn in a short time things it took others years to learn only after much experimentation.

Fishing is enjoyable. Even the bad days can be fun. Of course you want to catch fish as well as enjoy the scenery, fresh air and companionship but sometimes you will go home empty handed. It happens to the most experienced fishermen. Don't let it bother you too much. Successful fishing has one basic requirement. You have to outwit the fish. You have to figure out where the fish will be and what type bait will tempt his appetite. You have to deceive him into taking your lure. When you aren't successful you can always console yourself by telling yourself you just weren't thinking like a fish.

Judo Club dominates Atlanta meet

The Fort Benning Judo Club completely dominated the Junior Open Tournament held in Atlanta, winning 19 of the 33 trophies presented. The club has at least one competitor finish in the top three places in nine of the eleven divisions; however, there were no Fort Benning entries in the 16 Year Old Open Division.

Sixteen year old heavyweight Charles Williams Jr. set the stage for the day in the first round when he caught Winston Mattox of the Black Belt School of Judo, Atlanta, with a blazing left side shoulder throw. The break balance and execution were so well done that Mattox traveled almost half way across the contest area before landing on his back for the point and loss.

In the sixteen year lightweight division, Mark Keaton, Danny Jones and Ross Rappaport methodically eliminated all the competition and then fought it out among themselves to finish one, two, three as listed. The club also had a clean sweep in the 15 year lightweights with Vince Caballero, Ronnie Wesley, and Terry Caballero finishing in that order; and in the girls' medium weight division with Barbara Jones, Dalleata Pitts and Denise Caballero finishing in that order.

The highlight of the finals was a very close and hard fought match between Bob Hill of Memphis, Tenn. and Jeffrey Dean of Fort Benning in the 13 year-old lightweight. The close and controversial decision was awarded to Bob Hill for first place while Jeffrey Dean had to settle for second.

The Tournament Director, Mr. Bruce Toups of Atlanta, remarked, "Any kid who finished fourth, fifth or sixth today can be happy with his performance. This was the toughest competition I have seen in this area; for instance, Ira Harrison, who lasted five rounds in the National Championships, was beaten by both Dean and Hill."

Other top finishers from Fort Benning were: First Place — Crystol Chewning, lightweight girls; Kim Pitts, 8 yr. heavyweight boys; Charles Williams Jr., 16 yr. heavyweight boys. Second Place — Tessie Pierce, medium weight girls; Perry Jones, 8 year light boys. Third Place — Mary Ann Salzman, lightweight girls; Debbie Chewning, heavyweight girls; Jesse Chewning, 16 year heavyweight boys; Jerry Jones, 8 year lightweight boys.

Hall assures team of tournament trip

By MIKE JOHNSON

With a flick of the wrist, Sp5 Ralph Hall, HHC, 1st Bn. (Mech.), 58th Inf., assured his company of its third trip to the 197th Inf. Bde. slow-pitch softball tournament.

Hall hit a towering homerun in the 8th inning of a a tie ball game with Co. C, 2-69th Armor during the game played last Tuesday night, July 10. With Sgt. Spurlin pitching a tight ball game, HHC overcame loss of players and a more than willing Charlie Company, 2-69th to stay in the game 2-2 until Hall's homer in the top of the 8th.

The game brought HHC's record to a credible 17 and 2 record to qualify them for the Brigade tournament.

HHC is coached by SFC "Sly" Gallardo. The company finished 2nd in last season's Brigade tournament.

Junior PGA

Georgia golf championship

Based on entries received to date, the seventh annual Georgia Section Junior P.G.A. Golf Championship scheduled for July 31-August 1 at Bull Creek Golf Club in Columbus will have an all-time record turnout, tournament officials said today.

Officials reminded Georgia's junior golfers that entries for the event close July 19, or when the first 160 entries have been received.

Sponsored by Royal Crown Cola Co. as part of its continuing sports program the tournament is open to boys from 13-18 who will compete for a first place $1,000 college scholarship. The runner-up will receive a $500 scholarship award. Additionally there will be ten trophies awarded for performance in the 13-14, 15-16, 17-18 year old age groups.

Each entry must be endorsed by a Georgia section P.G.A. member and accompanied by a $10 entry fee check. Entries should be addressed by Hugh Royer, golf professional at Bull Creek Golf Club, Lynch Road, Columbus, Ga. 31907.

The golf program will get underway on Monday, July 30 with a Pro-Junior tournament that will see foursomes made up of one professional and three juniors between 13-18. Maximum handicap for the juniors in this event is 18.

Previous winners of the junior event are: Marc Blumberg, Athens-1967; Wade Mayo, Atlanta-1968; John Godwin, Columbus-1969; Tom Stacy, Savannah-1970, Bob Hoyt, Rome-1971; Bob Young, Atlanta-1972.

Seventh inning stretch for TSB softball player

The School Brigade Company Level Softball League is entering its final stretch of the season, which closes August 8.

All but two games last week were decided by at least a four run margin. HHC, TSB, team "A", defeated HHC, TSB, team "B", 7-2, the 8th Stu. Bn. beat the Weapons Dept., 10-3, and IOAC 4-72 was victorious over the 2nd Stu. Bn. Hq., 12-8.

The 5th Stu. Bn. Hq wiped up the 4th Stu. Bn., 20-5, and likewise HHC, TSB, team "A" was victorious over USAIS, 13-3.

The two games with close scores were decided by one run apiece. A-M Com. came out on top of IOAC 6-72, 8-7, and MTU beat 3rd Ranger 15-14.

Army marksmen blaze through CISM trials

Four Army marksmen, led by Olympic Gold Medalist Maj. Lones W. Wigger Jr., Carter, Mont., and the U. S. Army Marksmanship Training Unit, blazed their way into slots for the five man Conseil International du Sports Militaire (CISM) rifle team July 12 when they were among the top selectees of the combined military services in the three day CISM trials.

One Marine shooter filled out the team while a Navy shooter, number six in the field of competition, was named an alternate member.

Capturing the number one spot on the U. S. Rifle Team, Wigger compiled a three day total of 2,500 of a possible 2,700 points with his bolt rifle over the 300 meter course.

Grabbing the runner up spot with 19 points less, Marine Chief Warrant Officer David I. Boyd, Quantico, Va., was the only non-Army shooter to make the prestige team.

The third, fourth and fifth positions were won by Army marksmen Capt. Boyd Goldsby, Little Rock, Ark., Capt. Ed Schumacher, Maysville, Ky., and Maj. John Foster, Columbus, Ga. All three men are members of the U. S. Army Marksmanship Unit. The number six man or alternate shooter spot was claimed by Lt. Commander Webster-Wright of the U. S. Naval Academy.

Of the five man team, three are repeaters from the 1972 team, which won all the gold medals in Cairo, Egypt, Wigger, Boyd and Goldsby.

In the three days of competition, Wigger was the top shooter in the first two days with his 837 and 835. The final day's aggregate fell to the unerring aim of Boyd who compiled an 835.

No hitter foiled by errors

Phillies errors erased a brilliant no-hit performance by pitcher Jimmy Tresley and handed the Red Sox a 2-1 victory at Faith Field.

The Red Sox currently in third place in Fort Benning's Dependent Major League Action scored their pair of unearned runs in the bottom of the first. Mike Stevenson walked and scored their first run after John Crowley's sacrifice but was followed by a three base throwing error.

Crowley later scored the Sox final run when the Phillies' third baseman mishandleld a sharp grounder off the bat of Steve Rodgers.

Jimmy Neil, Red Sox hurler, had a no-hitter going into tbe top of the fifth, and Phillies Randall Powers walked and came home on Joe Kinder's infield shot, the only hit of the game.

Tresley whiffed eleven Red Soxs batsmen while Neil was doing the same trick on nine Phils.

Wins 1st archery meet

Staff Sgt. Bob Gorbam of Fort Benning, in his first Tournament Style Archery meet and a "Veteran" of only a month and a half, took first place in class C in the Georgia State Archery Championships held at Fort Benning's Rod and Gun Club July 15 and 16.

Bob Gorham, presently assigned to the 3rd Ranger Company at Fort Benning, has been practicing at the Rod and Gun Club in his spare time and was advised to enter the tourney by Gene Stalcup, president of the Fort Benning Archery group. "Since this was my first tournament, I was nervous but as I compete in more meets I will become more relaxed. I knew I had a good chance of winning this tourney and it gave me the confidence I needed. I have been hunting with a bow for three years but tournament style archery is completely different." Bob ended with an aggregate score of 857 points that will advance him to Class B in future meets.

The husband and wife team of Jerry and Geneva Eaton of Atlanta won the men's and ladies' championships during this state tourney. Following Eaton closely and taking second was Royce McGeffery with 1095 points.

Other winners in the State Championships were A. L. Grant competing in the class B Freestyle; Jim Baxley was Bowhunter Champion with Robbie Gunn taking second.

Bruce Bunn of Griffin took the top honors in the youth champion category. In men's barebow Harrell Coggle took first with Janice Beverley copping beth the ladies Barebow and National Championship.

Softball queens club opposition

The School Brigade's ladies softball team is flexing its muscles and overpowering the opposition as evidenced by their 21-3 victory over the Rigdon Road ladies team on July 12.

TSB pounded out 20 hits, including 4 home runs. Rigdon Road could manage only 3 hits in the seven inning contest.

Katrina Archie supplied the big punch, driving in seven runs with two homers, including a grand slam.

A privilege not a right

The pass

The Army's policy on pass privileges has been clarified in a recent message by the Chief of Staff of the Army, General Creighton Abrams.

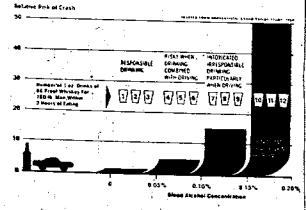
"The pass is a privilege and not a right for our soldiers," according to Gen. Abram's statement.

The message is a reminder that we are not an 8 to 5 Army and that a commander platoon sergeant or other supervisor can pull a man's pass whenever such an action is appropriate.

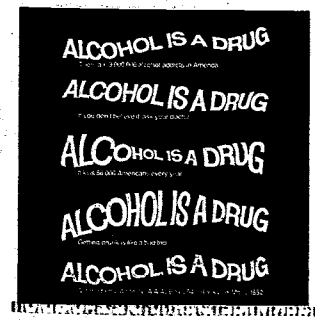
The general's words are also a reminder that the pass privilege must sometimes be withheld to insure that a unit's readiness is maintained as required.

"Some soldiers will be denied the privilege as a result of their conduct," Gen. Abrams stated. "Others may not be permitted to be on pass in order to meet operational requirements or for temporary administrative control."

The requirement to sign out on pass each day or for the weekend was eliminated at Fort Benning approximately two years ago. This was never intended to mean that a man's pass was guaranteed during off-duty, or that it could not be withheld. Perhaps this was misunderstood by some.



The message, dated May 30, 1973, clears the air on this issue. Elimination of signing in and signing out has succeeded in increased personal responsibility in the individual soldier; but it does not eliminate the prerogative of the small unit leader to keep a man in the unit area if he does not accept this and other responsibilities in an acceptable manner.



Every freedom which was granted to the soldier in the past several years was accompanied by an additional responsibility.

Most men have shouldered these responsibilities the way it was expected. Hard work during duty hours results in no hassles after duty.

But those men who do less than a good day's work can expect something less than full pass privileges, and those men serving in units having an operational mission can expect to serve the necessary time to insure the success of that mission. When looked at closely, it is substantially the same as the Army has always been.

World's largest jamboree planned by Post Scouts

"Jamboree or Bust" is the cheer that Fort Benning Scouts will give next week as they head for the world's largest Scout jamboree, held the first week in August.

Troop 237, sponsored by the 2nd Student Battalion, The School Brigade, will attend jamboree-east at Moraine State Park, Penn.

Thirty-seven Scouts and three leaders will make the trip leaving here July 21 from Blue Field at 5 p.m. Scoutmaster for troop 237 is Lt. Col. (ret.) Lem M. Thoxas. Assisting him is Major Nelson Newcombe and Warrant Officer Terry Hall.

Troop 120, sponsored by St. Mary Magdelene's Episcopal Church, Columbus will be represented with 10 Scouts and two leaders. Scoutmaster is Captain Fred Sieg and assisting him will be Malcolm L. Lathers. They will leave for jamboree-east July 29 at 6:30 a.m. from Sieg's home, 4043 Country Side Dr., Columbus.

More than 45,000 Scouts and leaders are expected at this jamboree. This is the first time that a national jamboree has been held at two different locations. Jamboree-west will be held August 1-7 at Farragut State Park, Idaho. This is also the first time any registered Scout can go, with no age or advancement requirements.

At the jamboree, the Scouts will live in a huge tent city and will cook their own meals, including mountain trout and steak.

For activites, there will be a lot to do, including swimming, boating, canoeing, fishing, several miles of scenic hiking trails and many areas of sports competition for the individuals and troops.

Extensive ecology experiments and demonstrations will be available, plus the big new Arts and Science Expo.

Flying Cranes back at Benning

The Flying Cranes (478th Avn. Co.), commanded by Major Jerry L. Watson, are back home at Fort Benning and attached to the 145th Aviation Battalion. The unit's Sikorsky CH54 helicopters, normally referred to as "Flying Cranes" are capable of lifting over 18,000 pounds of cargo or 45 combat equipped troops in a "POD" that can be attached to the helicopter.

The 478th Flying Crane Company was originally activated at Fort Benning, in February 1963. Redesignated the 478th Aviation Company (Heavy Helicopter) in July 1965, and attached to the 1st Air Cavalry Division, the unit departed for Vietnam a month later. While in Vietnam the unit provided heavy lift helicopter support for the 1st Cavalry Division, 101st Airborne Division (Airmobile) and other services, including the U.S. Navy Seabees.

Their areas of operations was from the Mekong Delta to the DMZ and west to Thailand.

Normal missions for the flying cranes included hauling equipment such as graders, dozers, tractors, trucks, end-loaders, 175mm gun tubes, 155mm Howitzers, 105mm Howitzers (two at a time), and disabled aircraft such as the Army's Chinook (CH47) and the U.S. Air Force Jolly Green Giant (H-53). The flying cranes were also used in Vietnam for such missions as lifting bridge spans, placing 65-foot-high guard towers in position, and moving house trailers.

The 478th Aviation Company (Heavy Helicopter) has been awarded the Vietnamese Cross of Gallantry with Palm, the Vietnamese Civil Action Honor Medal First Class, a Streamer embroider VIETNAM 1967-68 and a Streamer embroidered VIETNAM 1968-1970.

Puerto Rican Rangers complete Airborne training

By Billy Sams

Sixty-two soldiers of Company E (Rangers), 65th Infantry, National Guard, Puerto Rico, compete three weeks of Airborne training, here, July 20.

The sixty-two men of Company E are the only Ranger company in Puerto Rico. Company E has been a Ranger company for 2½ years and was formerly assigned to a transportation unit.

Capt. Angel L. Reyes Jr., company commander, of Company E, remarked, "Company E is the best unit in the guard today. He went on to say, "Our men are well qualified and are proud of being in a Ranger company. The company as a whole has more initiative and drive than any company I have been in command of."

The men of Company E range in age from 19 to 48 years old. One of the men, Staff Sgt. Angel R. Majica, 48 years old, said, "In my twenty-six years of being in the National Guard, this has been the most challenging company I have been associated with." Staff Sgt. Mojica has also spent one year on active duty.

Company E has been a Ranger company since May 1971. After becoming a Ranger company, Company E began its first phase of adventure training with the 20th Special Forces in Puerto Rico.

This is not the first time Company E has trained at Fort Benning. The company trained for fifteen days during the summer of 1972 at Camp Darby and according to Capt. Reyes, the company will be continuing their training next summer also, in jungle survival and training in Panama.

The history of the 65th Infantry dates back as early as 1920, when it was incorporated with a mounted Infantry regiment which was part of the regular Army. The 65th was smaller than most regiments of its type, such as the Philippine Scouts, and contained two battalions instead of three. Its man power came strictly from the island of Puerto Rico, except for the commanding officers, who were from the United States.

During the Korean conflict Puerto Rican units were restricted to the Caribbean Command. In Sept. 1950 the 25th Infantry, organized with Puerto Rican enlisted personnel, was assigned to the 3rd Infantry Division and sent to Korea to replace other major replacements.

The 586th way

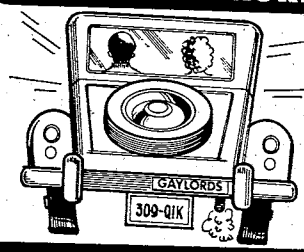
The 586th Float Bridge Company is involved in a joint project at the Municipal Marina with the city of Columbus.

Members of the 5th Platoon spent several days at the first of July, putting in an 80 foot platform from which the city of Columbus will operate equipment for dredging operations to deepen the marina.

2nd Lt. Fred VanVurst, the OIC for the 586th portion of the project, explained that the rafts supporting the platform (M-4T6 Causeway) were assembled on land then lifted into the water by a crane. Each section was then moved into position using a 27 foot bridge erection boat.

The job required two days of back-breaking work, but as one soldier said, "it's good to get away from the motor pool for a few days."

With platform in place, the 586th can relax while the City of Columbus does the dredging.



197th NCOs to march

The Non - Commissioned Officers of the 197th Bde. will conduct a pass-in-review on Essenbagger Field Monday at 3:30 p.m.

Under the direction of 197th CSM Harvey Parrish, the ceremony will include a parade and awards presentation. The only officer scheduled to participate is the brigade commander, Col. William B. Steele, who will present a number of awards and medals.

The public is invited to attend this event, in which nearly 2,000 participants will pass-in review wearing combat equipment.

A valuable tool: 197th Race Relations Seminar Gets down to grass roots

BY BOB THOMAS

The words "race relations seminar" are nothing new to the men in the 197th (Forever Forward) Inf. Bde.

The seminar has been used as a tool by the 197th race relations and equal opportunity (RREO) office for more than a year, and every man in the brigade, officer and enlisted, has attended at least one or two of these siminars. Capt. Lacey Tyler, head of the 197th RREO office once called the seminar the heart of his program.

However, something was wrong with the siminar program. Although the problem was difficult to pinpoint, many soldiers expressed their opinions of the seminar, naming what they felt was wrong with it.

"I've been to several seminars," stated Sp4 Rick Wasser, HHC, 1st Bn., 29th Inf. (Pioneers), 197th Inf. Bde. "I can understand why they have them, but I don't think they serve their purpose very well. If you've ever been to one, everybody comes off as phoney."

Although this has been a major criticism of the seminars, it should be pointed out that not everyone feels this is the main problem.

1st Lt. Arthur Kellum, HHC, 3rd Bn., 7th Inf. (Cottonbalers), 197th Inf. Bde. recently completed a two-week course in unit race relations instructor training. He is responsible for race relations work within the 3rd-of-the-7th and has his own ideas as to what the major problems are and how to solve them.

"To begin with," Kellum explained, "what is supposed to happen at the typical race relations seminar never does. In other words, by the time it gets down to the company level, the seminar has degenerated and is really no longer a seminar on race relations."

Kellum went on to give reasons for this degeneration.

"There is a serious lack of trained moderators," he emphasized. "I'm not saying that all moderators are bad, but there are simply not enough good ones. Because of this, many of the seminars are centered around the wrong theme, and end up being company bitch sessions rather than the seminar-class they were meant to be."

The Army has realized that the seminar was not getting the job done and a new educational program was recently initiated to improve the situation. The program is a mandatory 18-hour block of instruction on race relations, and the first group to complete the course at Fort Benning were from HHC, 197th Inf. Bde.

The course lasts for five afternoons and is taught in the 197th by 2nd Lt. Marcus Disbrow and SSgt. Harold Middleton, both products of the Department of Defense Race Relations Instructors Course at Patrick Air Force Base, Fla.

"The curriculum of the course is very nonstructured," Middleton explained.

"We try to keep the atmosphere as informal as possible," Lt. Disbrow added. He explained that the informal atmosphere permits a more open and honest discussion of the race relations topics. One student from the first class agreed.

"I think the informality is a good idea," stated Sp4 Harold Carnley, of HHC, 197th Inf. Bde., a student in the first race relations course. "You can relax and concentrate more what people are saying, rather than how straight you are sitting in the chair. Overall I thought it was a good course and I feel I learned a lot."

Carnley compared the course to a race relations seminar he attended and said that the class was much more beneficial. The seminar, he felt, needed improvement.

"I believe I benefited from the only seminar I've attended here in the 197th," stated Sp4 John Brown Jr., a company clerk in HHC, 197th. Brown has not yet attended the 18-hour course, but indicated he is looking forward to it. "The main problem I can see is that they don't have enough of them (seminars.)"

Admittedly, there are not enough seminars to meet the Army requirement of one per quarter for each individual. Brown has been in the Army for more than a year, yet he has attended only one seminar. This problem relates back to the problem that there are not a sufficient number of trained moderators.

The success of the race relations program lies not in the hands of a unit's commanders, nor does it rest upon the shoulders of the RREO office. The success of the Army's and the 197th's race relations program depends upon the "Forever Forward" soldier. He must want to learn. Carnley, a student in the first class, stated, "You can have the best course in the world, but it does no good if the student does not go in with an open mind.

"You have to go in with an open mind."

Drug Abuse

Benning chaplain speaks out, part III

Chaplain (Capt.) Thomas R. Fraker, presently in the Alcohol and Drug Abuse Control Office, came to Fort Benning in February 1969. Before that, he spent 12 years as the local pastor in a Methodist Church, three years as a Conference Director of Youth Work, nine years part-time in Special Police work for drug abuse, six years military active duty and three years in the Reserves.

Chaplain Fraker is a veteran of Vietnam and qualified as a Master Paratrooper and Pathfinder. He began his work in the Drug Abuse Control Office in January 1972.

From his experiences in working with youth over the past several years, Chaplain Fraker has become convinced that there are three basic reasons why kids experiment with most deviant behavior such as drug abuse, streetgang fighting, theft, sexual promiscuity and so forth. This series of articles deals with these causes and is based on the premise that people have basic needs which they will try to satisfy: if society doesn't provide satisfactory acceptable ways of satisfying these needs, they will try deviant ways.

In this last of a three-part series, Chaplain Fraker discusses the requirement for a definite period when a boy realizes he's become a man and when a girl realizes she's become a woman.

In the search for self-esteem and belonging, everyone needs a "war story," not of a combat-shooting war, but of conquest and victory relating to a difficult, dangerous, and fulfilling encounter — fulfilling in the context and personal concept of being shared and admired by at least one other important person. It is progressing from one level of maturity to the next through crisis encounters.

Most war stories are not just one-time experiences, but they are "success breeding success." When one challenge is conquered and praised others follow. However, each person, in order to experience individuality, needs that one-time "ritual of passage" from boy to man, girl to woman. This does not mean that suddenly in one experience all childish ways and feelings are left behind. Quite the contrary — none ever leaves all of himself the child behind. It means that individuality demands a pivot-point from which to look backward and forward [illegible] from youth to adulthood. Reaching a desirable level of self-esteem is parallel with and almost identical to attaining a desirable level of maturity.

As our social mores make adult ways more plausible at an ever younger age, adult identity becomes more and more nebulous. As kids start driving sooner, putting on football pads younger, wearing hose, military, graduating from school, etc. at earlier ages, the achievement is less marked, and its responsibility less relevant. hTis has two major effects on people: adults feel less need to work for and accept responsibility; and youth experience a vague, fleeting awareness of what "adult" really means. It is awfully difficult to mature under these conditions.

There is a beautiful and viable theory of maturation that says that we progress through stages in growing up and if any stage is missed or vulgarized then the person is uncomfortable in the next stage. When one stage is by-passed completely the person will likely come back to it later — "second childhood"? Or when a person does not find the means of transition and becomes stagnated in a stage, maturity is thwarted.

The term "flower-children" is no misnomer. The group "temper-tantrums" on college campuses are symptomatic of frustrated maturation. Are they acting like children? Yes, or rather they are reacting like children who have reached the time for transition youth to adult and the wall has no door in it. We have demanded that they grow up fast; have denied them access to confrontations that lead to emotional responsibility; have said for them to act like adults but demand that they stay out of the world of danger and social responsibility.

Free Day Camp for dependents

A free day camp for special children, including two weeks of arts and crafts, music, outdoor games and activities, and a field trip, is being planned for August 6 - 17.

The day camp is for school age dependents of Army personnel and civilian employes who attend special education classes or a special school.

Day Camp will be held Mondays through Fridays from 9 a.m. to noon. Registration will begin August 6 at 9 a.m. at the Special Children's building (1803) across from the tennis courts on Anderson Street. Bus transportation will be provided for children living on post.

Some of the crafts planned for the children include drawing, painting rocks, weaving placemats, pouring sand candles, making paper kites and hanging baskets of flowers, and using paper mache.

Swimming, bowling, miniature golf, and horseback riding are planned for outdoor recreation.

A tour of historical Westville, Ga., the restored antebellum city of the early 1800's, is also scheduled.

The Special Children's Committee of ACS, made up of both adults and teen-agers with the assistance of trained professional ACS personnel, will staff and manage hte day camp. The committee also holds a Saturday afternoon recreation program during the school year.

Contact Mrs. George Lovelace, 687-4187, chairman, for further information.

New wife welcomed

The officer's wives of the Office of the Secretary held a welcome coffee on July 19 at the home of Mrs. Kenneth Pond in honor of Mrs. Dan Richard, wife of the Secretary of the Infantry School. Also welcomed to he group were Mrs. Jack Oliver, Mrs. Leonard Ragus nd Mrs. Thomas Vaden. Special guest at the coffee was Mrs. Willaim Richardson.

Mrs. Rickard got right to business, mainly plans for the OWC Christmas Bazaar. Projects were decided upon and work will begin August 9 at Mrs. Rickard's home.

SOUND OFF!

Do you feel the Army really offers an equal opportunity to all races?

E-2 Derrick Johns
18th Re.

I would have to say so. I haven't had any problems racial or otherwise. So far I've received most anything I wanted within reason.

E-6 David Nelson
CCDC Leadership Dept.

With the program the Army has now if you are qualified you're not denied the station or school that you want if it is open. I feel that in the past the Army tried to lure more blacks into the combat units.

I've attended several schools and have never been denied if I was qualified. The griping is usually aimed at an individual not the system.

I feel the system is as good as it's going to get.

Capt. John Ware
3rd Aviation Det. Korea

Yes, I am presently stationed in Korea where I am equal opportunity officer. The new program that the Army uses is pointed towards equal opportunities in all fields.

E-7 Emil Konzman
10th Co. TSB

Definitely. You can see it happen everyday. There are few racial problems in the Army compared to the outside. There has been a great change since 1955 in equal opportunities for races.

Sp4 Herald Lopez
988th MP Co.

What I have seen so far, I would say yes. The biggest change has been in the schooling. If you are qualified I feel that the Army wants to educate you as much as possible. I feel that an individual brings trouble on himself by a bad attitude not his race.

E-7 Morris Dillard
USAIC Post Reenlistment

I sure do. I've seen it practiced for many years. I can't see where any race is offered anything that another race isn't offered. I work in reenlistment and I see the assignments and the people that receive them. The assignments are distributed by qualifications only.

Minorities

Relations comfortable

"Is the Army doing all it can to make all minorities comfortable", was the subject of a recent series of interviews of personnel from the various minority groups within Headquarters Command, USAIC.

As a result of these interviews it was felt that a great amount of effort and improvements have been accomplished by the Army and in particular Fort Benning, in eliminating or alleviating prejudice towards minority groups, through understanding of different histories and social atmospheres, and the availability of on-duty English courses to help the non or weak English speaking personnel to enhance their military careers and opportunities.

It was further felt that the working atmosphere on the job has improved considerably with the increased awareness and education on prejudice which is given through the monthly unit and command conducted seminars. Two of the areas that were felt could use more emphasis and improvements were that native foods should be provided in the messhalls on more of a regular basis and that there is misuse of authority and position by some personnel at Fort Benning, on an individual basis, to degrade and antagonize an individual from a minority group.

Nevertheless, the overall feelings were that they do feel comfortable at Fort Benning, and that the Army is making very positive efforts to enhance and better understand minority personnel.

Minority groups hold more Federal jobs than ever before

Minority group Americans now hold more Federal jobs and a greater proportion of the total jobs than at any previous time, the Civil Service Commission announced this week. The number of middle and upper level jobs held by minorities is also at an all-time high.

Gains for minorities have occurred despite a continuing decline in overall full-time Federal employment, the Commission said.

As of Nov. 30, 1972, Negroes, Spanish - surnamed Americans, American Indians and Oriental Americans held 509,307 government jobs and comprised 20.0 per cent of the Federal civilian work force, up from 19.5 per cent or 502,752 in November 1971. During the same period, total full-time Federal employment decreased by 31,703.

Minorities showed significant gains in white collar positions. Total employment in white collar positions under the General Schedule and similar pay plans increased by 21,974 positions and minority group employment accounted for 14,982 positions or 68.2 per cent of this increase. In all grade groupings under General Schedule and similar pay plans, both the number and percentage of minorities increased, indicating an accelerated movement into better paying white collar jobs.

Minority gains from 1971 by General Schedule grade groupings were as follows: GS 1-4, an increase of 5,356 jobs, up from 27.9 per cent of total employment in these grades in 1971 to 28.4 per cent in 1972; GS 5-8, an increase of 5,200 jobs, up from 18.8 to 19.8 per cent; GS 9-11, an increase of 2,581 jobs, up from 8.9 to 9.7 per cent; GS 12-13, an increase of 1,250 jobs, up from 5.2 to 5.7 per cent; GS 14-15, an increase of 331 jobs, up from 4.2 to 4.9 per cent; and in the top grades, GS 16-18, an increase of 52 jobs, up from 2.3 to 3.7 per cent. In addition, the number of minority employes earning $26,000 or more per annum under other pay systems increased to 212, 29 more than the 1971 figure.

ROTC Ranger student finds challenge

When Masateru Kawamura was born in Aomori City, Japan, twenty - seven years ago, few, if any, of his neighbors would have thought that he would be seeking the challenge of his life in the United States Army Ranger School.

As a matter of fact, Kawamura, even in his wildest imagination, didn't conjure up such a possibility. However, after growing up and graduating from high school in Aomori City, 500 miles north of Tokyo, Kawamura, began to search for the greater challenges of distant and unknown horizons. Accordingly, at age twenty, he applied for a college exchange program and soon found himself on the long journey from Aomori City, Japan to Clemson University, South Carolina in January 1966.

Kawamura's sponsor and guardian was Mr. Luren P. Booth, Vice Chairman, County Commissioners, Saweter County, South Carolina. Mr. Booth, a graduate of Clemson University provided the mental strength and financial assitance for Cadet Kawamura to pursue a degree in engineering.

MASATERU KAWAMUZA

In refelcting on the period, Kawamura warmly acknowledged Mr. Booth as being "a man of big caliber, and of couse a southern gentleman." While gratefully accepting Mr. Booth's kind assistance, Cadet Kawamura's strong sense of independence led him to feel that he was depending on his sponsor's assistance too much. So in May of 1970, Kawamura decided to venture out on his own and enlisted in the U.S. Army.

Kawamura's quest for independence, coupled with his desire to be challenged and his determination to excel, enabled him to be selected not only as the outstanding trainee of the week, but also as the outstanding trainee of the cycle.

Upon completion of Basic Combat Training, Cadet Kawamura attended and graduated from the U.S. Army Airborne School and assigned to the elite 82d Airborne Division's Pathfinders Detachment.

Upon completion of his service commitment, Kawamura was certain of one thing: he wanted to make the Army his career. So he reenrolled at Clemson with a dual objective: completing his dgr and to arning a commisson as an officer through the Army ROTC Program.

Continuing to seek challenge, and striving to be among the best, Kawamura from Aomori City, Japan is preparing himself for the challenge of leadership at the U. S. Army Infantry School's demanding ROTC Ranger Summer Camp.

Ranger class 501-73 underway

As ROTC Ranger Class 501-73 completes its first week of training in Florida, Class 502,73 begins mountaineering instruction in North Georgia.

Class 501 will participate in small boat operations, river crossing techniques, amphibian assaults, helicopter rappelling, and extended platoon-size operations in a guerrilla environment. They will return to Fort Benning for graduation on August 10. Meanwhile, the second group of ROTC Ranger students has begun the mountaineering portion of their training. This will include rappelling, belaying, climbing, rope bridge construction, and long-range patrolling in a conventional environment.

Driver of Month

Pvt. Marcus D. Reeves, of A Company, 43D Engineer Battalion (Construction), took his 1¼ Ton truck to the United States Army Infantry Center Driver of the Quarter Competition. The outcome of Pvt. Reeves' efforts was second place in the competition. It all started at the 43D Engineer Battalion (Construction) where he won the Battalion award, Driver of the Month, for May.

Pvt. Reeves did not stop there, but continued to show his initiative and technical proficiency by winning Driver of the Month for May in the 36th Engineer Group competition. For his outstanding effort in this competition, Pvt. Reeves received commendations throughout his chain of command, an engraved plaque and a cash award totalling fifty-five dollars.

11 outstanding students will receive recognition

The United States Army Infantry School has announced the winners of the 4th Quarter School Year 1973, special recognition program for correspondence course students who excel academically while carrying a heavy course schedule.

Nearly 30,000 students are enrolled in the program, studying a wide variety of subjects ranging from drill and command, weapons, to leadership and brigade tactics.

Sgt. John M. Spencer, HHC, 4th Student Battalion (Abn), TSB, USAIS, was named the distinguished correspondence course student Battalion (ABN), TSB, USAIS, was named the distinguished correspondence course student during the 4th Quarter. The period spans from April 1 to June 30.

Spencer will receive a letter of congratulations frm Maj. Gen. Thomas M. Tarpley, Commandant of the Infantry School. He also will receive a citation announcing his selection as distinguished correspondence student for the 4th Quarter.

Ten other students were selected as outstanding correspondence course students for the 4th Quarter. The group was cited for an average rating of ex cellent or higher in order of number of hours completed. BG William R. Richardson, Assistant Commandant of the Infantry School, will send a letter of congratulations to the ten outstanding students.

In addition to the 10 outstanding students, 97 additional students were entered on the United States Army Infantry School Correspondence Course Honor Roll for the 4th Quarter. This honor is limited to students who complete 100 or more credit hours in each quarter with an average rating of excellent or higher.

Each honor roll student is to receive a personal letter of commendation from Col. William R. Guthrie, Director of the Department of Army-Wide Training Support. They will also receive a United States Army Infantry School Honor Roll Certificate.

Receiving certificates of academic excellence for earning 50 or more credit hours with an average of excellent or higher during the 4th Quarter were 513 students in the program.

NEWCOMERS

The 1973-74 Officers' Wives' Club Board began its social season with a welcome coffee in the OWC Lounge on July 11. Over 110 newcomers attended.

Mrs. Art Richards, OWC President, extended a warm welcome to all the new board members, explained their individual responsibilities, and answered questions about OWC for the newcomers.

Special guests were Mrs. Thomas M. Tarpley, honorary President; and Mrs. William R. Richardson, honorary advisor.

A special treat for all from the OWC Publicity Committee was the first showing of "Know Your OWC" a slide presentation which highlights all of the OWC activities.

The coffee was concluded with a tour of the Talent Tree.

If you are new on post and missed the Welcome Coffee, the OWC would like to extend a welcome to the next Newcomers Coffee, which will be Aug. 22 at 10 a.m. at the OWC Lounge.

Allied Liaison Committee

Do you like meeting and working with interesting people? If so, The Allied Liaison Committee is the place for you. The purpose of this group is to greet and welcome the wives of allied sudents attending courses at Fort Benning and to interest them in our OWC acrivities. If you speak a foreign language or have lived overseas and want to return in a small way the courtesies extended you by the people in other countries, please inquire about the Allied Liaison Committee. Call Mrs. Sylvia Holloway at 545-2387 or Mrs. Trudy Goff at 545-1920.

Pre-Kindergarten

The Fort Benning Pre-Kindergarten is now accepting applications for employment for the coming year.

The positions will entail a half day's work, five days a week with emphasis on early childhood education.

Any person interested in these positions should send a resume including name, address, telephone number, qualifications and previous experience by July 30 to: Pre-Kindergarten, P.O. Box 1852, Ft. Benning, Ga. 31905.

Pre-Kindergarten summer registration will be Aug. 15 from 9 to 11 a.m. at Patch School on the corner of Baltzell and Lumpkin. Children born in 1969 and 1970 may be registered for attendance.

ery, Mrs. Allen M. Buckner, Mrs. Paul Schulz, Mrs. Johnny J. Johnston and Mrs. Joseph R. Franklin.

A short business meeting was conducted by Mrs Sanders A. Cortner, which included warm welcomes extended to Mrs. Ben LaGree and Mrs. William Holston. Farewells were said and "follow-me" charms were presented by Mrs. Cortner to Mrs. Donald Gluck and Mrs. Purdy B. McLeod.

Plans were made to exchange the monthly coffee date from the first Thurs. to the first Wed. of each month. It was also announced that Staff Group wives would hostess the Sept. BBQD Luncheon.

Those who assisted Mrs. McLeod as hostesses for the coffee were Mrs. Russell Miller and Mrs. Peter A. Gray.

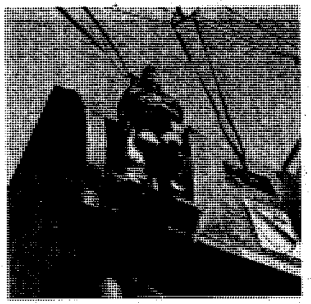
Combat Arms Training Board

The ladies of Combat Arms Training Board met at the home of Mrs. Dane Maddox, Miller Loop, for their July coffee.

Many of the ladies bought their OWC membership cards in anticipation of all the classes and other activities available this Fall. They also formed Committees to work on projects for the Christmas Bazaar.

Newcomers, Mrs. Richard Diehl, Mrs. Benjamin Buckley, and Mrs. Jack Lowe, were welcomed to the group. Good-byes were said to Mrs. Bill Thompson. Co-hostesses for the coffee were Mrs. John Stone and Mrs. Ronald West.

Leadership Dept. Contemporary Subjects



The ladies of Contemporary Subjects enjoyed their monthly coffee at the home of Mrs. Gregory Miner. The ladies were glad to welcome Mrs. William Brauder. A sad farewell was said to Mrs. Glenn Youngsted.

Mrs. James Tarpley brought everyone up to date on the plans for the Christmas Bazaar, after the business meeting refreshments were served

Mrs. Leny Forte will host the August coffee.

197th Inf. Bde.

The Officers and ladies of the 1st Bn. 29th Inf. met on the patio of the Officers Club the evening of June 16, for a Battalion Pool Party. After a Barbequed chicken dinner some chose to go swimming. And soon some who didn't choose to, found themselves in the watery depths.

Mrs. Jaymee Dunlap, wife of 2nd Lt. Keith C. Dunlap, strapped up, eyes closed and ready for action, is about to take her last big step out of the 34 foot Airborne Mock Training tower. The Action took place on the Airborne Ground Training Field on July 20, 1973.

Wives check-out airborne

Eight wives of Airborne Students of the 43d Co., 4th Stu. Bn., TSB, visited the Airborne Dept. ground training complex to see and participate in what their husbands encounter in airborne training July 20.

The wives were issued the invitations through the Airborne Dept. Both officers' and enlisted mens' wives attended the orientation.

After 15 minutes of watching their husbands jump from the 34 foot mock tower, the wives decided to try it too. Putting on their husbands harnesses and helmets, the airborne wives became tower qualified.

First they practiced their exit on the mock door, then they moved to the towers where each one made a single jump. As each one leaped from the tower they were cheered by airborne students undergoing ground training.

Army Community Service greets officers' wives

The officers' wives of the 36th Engineer Group were given a friendly welcome by he Army Community Service when they held their summer coffee at the Fort Benning Welcome Center. Hostesses for the coffee were Mrs. John Bacher and Mrs. Robert Dodge

Mrs. James M. Thompson, wife of the 36th Group Commander, welcomed newcomers Mrs. Charles Shoul, Mrs. Michael Nelson, Mrs. Jim Key, Mrs. Daniel Smith, and Mrs. Stephen Fitzgerald to the Group. Also present at the coffee were Mrs. Richard Rappaport of the 43rd Engineer Battalion, Mrs. Herman Betke and Mrs. John Seife of the 67th Maintenance Battalion.

After everyone had some refreshments and a chance to meet the newcomers, the ladies were invited to meet ACS.

The Chief of ACS, Capt. Donald Gilbert, and supervisor of volunteers, Mrs. Inge McNeese were on hand to explain the many worthwhile activities the ACS is involved in. Mrs. McNeese urged the ladies present to involve themselves in the volunteer program of the Army Community Service. She painted out the ever-present need for volunteers. Following the discussion by Capt. Gilbert and Mrs. McNeese, the ladies talked individually to the two ACS staff members.

36th Engineer Group sends recruiter's aid

PFC Thomas Gallo Jr. of Company A, 43D Engineer Battalion left for Peoria, Illinois, June 8. His mission is to aid Army Recruiters of the 5th Recruiting District in attracting new recruits in enlisting in the 36th Engineer Group (CBT).

PFC Gallo attended a three day conference at the Peoria Hilton Hotel with Army recruiters from the 5th Recruiting District in attendance.

The purpose was to abolish old and worn out Recruiting ideas. Another highlight of the tour was a seven day publicity venturo in the Pekin Mall.

The space in the mall was donated for public relations use by the Army as well as the other armed forces.

A selective ribbon display case showing awards and medals of the past was on display in the mall. Films of Army jobs and achievements were shown continuously for public viewing.

Many young and old people had questions on all aspects of the Army. According to the types of people who talked with me," PFC Gallo stated, "I would say many people are interested in the Army."

Benning troops help upgrade post road

Charlie Company of the 43rd spent a week in the field early in June. During this time they accomplished a great deal of work. The company was involved in the operation of upgrading Sunshine Road to a secondary highway.

The EM platoon at the Sewelson Creek worksite, in particular, achieved fantastic results. Here the level of a stretch of road which passed over Swelson Creek had to be raised. C Company's EM platoon and attachment from the rest of the battalion under Lt. Sullivan worked at a frantic pace to meet the work deadline. Platoon SFC Spears, vehicle operator, and the attacbed vehicle operators worked with spirit. SSG Herford and Sgt. Donner directed the traffic in the whirlwind of activity that was the worksite. The efforts of all involved made possible the 8.7 foot rise along the stretch of road so that asphalting could begin the following week.

Also working on the project was A Company of the 43rd Engr. Bn. They helped pave 3 miles of roadway on Sunshine Road. The two companies worked long and hard to complete the project. Once again, they proved that a little cooperation and teamwork goes a long way.

Togetherness

36th makes adjustments for soldiers and their problems

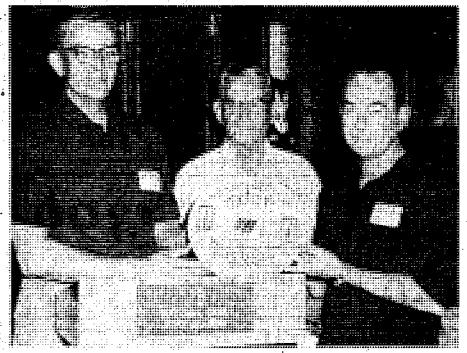
BY WILLIAM GIRTMAN

Within the 36th Engineer Group can be found soldiers who come from all of the major ethnic backgrounds and races. When any group of people with such diverse backgrounds are brought together, there is going to be a need for adjustments to be made.

According to Capt. Gordon Olson of the 36th Group Race Relations Office, "the main thrust of our race relations program is to educate both the officers and enlisted men within the Group. Until everyone understands the feelings and problems of his fellow worker, there is going to be some degree of prejudice."

In addition to the staff at Group, each company has two race relations moderators. All of these moderators have attended a course taught by the Group on Race Relations before assuming their present duties.

Every individual coming into the Group, regardless of rank, is given a two hour orientation on race relations in order to provide him a better education in this area from the very first.



The main tool here in the race relations program is its seminars. SSG William Brown of Company A, 43rd Engineer Battalion is one of many men throughout the Group who hold the job of race relations moderator, in addition to their other duties. SSG Brown said, "We hold seminars twice monthly at battalion level and once a month at company level. At these seminars, we try to promote a relaxed atmosphere. The men can forget about rank because once inside that seminar there is no rank, everyone is equal, and they may express what is on their minds. We often show a film to get things started and then try to have a free exchange of ideas and problems."

Most agree that the seminars are of some value to them, even if only to gain a greater understanding of the feelings of those in the minority or majority.

PFC Roosevelt Merriwether of HHC 36th Engineer Group is one of the young soldiers who was skeptical of the seminars when he reached the unit. He says, "At first I didn't think the seminars would do any good, but after attending a few, I saw that they can be useful. We are able to discuss our feelings on different situations and, although we do not always agree, we can try and look at the other man's point of view.

"The main thing is that we get a chance to explain ourselves and our feelings to someone who doesn't understand, rather than just taking the view that he won't understand anyway. Most of the time he can at least get a look at my views as well as his own."

What about the guy who for one reason or another doesn't wish to express himself in seminars? According to Capt. Olson, "He can always contact one of the moderators on a personal basis, or he can call Dial-Command. Dial-Command is a number that can be called 24 hours a day and provides a means through which problems and questions can be answered.

The 197th Infantry Brigade was the subject of a 30-minute television documentary recently which explained the unit's new STRAF mission. Sponsored by the National Bank of Fort Benning, the television show was made into a film and presented to Brigade Commander Col. William Steele, right, shown here accepting the film from E. G. Sparks, left, and William Lyman.

43rd task plt. helps Fort Mac

Reacting to a cry for engineer help at Fort McPherson the 43rd Engineer Battalion dispatched an Engineer Task Force Platoon to the new home of the United States Army Forces Command on June 6, 1973.

Under the outstanding leadership of Lt. Gene S. Radau and SFC Dalton L. Robertson, the soldiers set about assisting the Fort McPherson DFAE in recovering from a backlog of roads and grounds work in preparation for the 3rd Army inactivation ceremony on July 2, 1973.

More than 3000 cubic yards of debris had been piled up and were removed as a result of numerous storms that had pillaged the small, but scenic post. Additionally some 1700 cubic yards of undergrowth were removed from the four miles of perimeter fence and repairs and painting accomplished on the fence.

Working closely with DFAE and the post fire department, members of the Engineer Task Force rehabilitated and color coded some 102 fire hydrants throughout the post and updated facilities maps.

Brig. Gen. Richardson guest USAIS speaker

Brig. Gen. William R. Richardson, Assistant Commandant of USAIS, was the guest speaker at recent ceretinonies held at Fort Benning's newly activated United States Army Strategic Communications Command Agency.

The ceremony marked the transition of the former Directorate of Communications-Electronics to an agency member of USASTRATCOM Headquartered at Fort Huachuca, Arizona.

The ceremony, attended by major unit commanders and heads of principal staff directorates, was held in Building 16, Agency Office, July 12 at 3 p.m.

On-duty pilot donates blood

Nearly everyone in the Army is familiar with the terms "Med-evac" and "Dust-off", and is well aware of the tremendous service provided by the Army's flying ambulances. These flight crews have long been noted for their dedication and concern for the sick and injured.

Recently, however, a pilot with the 145th Aviation Battalion became more personally involved in the rendering of emergency medical assistance. WO1 Raymond E. Watts, Sr., a rotary wing aviator with the 36th Aviation Platoon, was flying the Military Police Visual Recon (MPVR) mission, when the call for help arrived over the MP FM net. The MP VR is the night helicopter surveillance of the Fort Benning area.

Martin Army Hospital required immediate donors of type O positive blood to deal with an emergency involving an accident victim. As Warrant Officer Watts has type O positive blood, he immediately requeste dclearance from Lawson Tower, landed at the hospital helipad, and donated blood.

His copilot, WO1 Dudley Meier returned the aircraft to Lawson. Mr. Watts, of course, had to return to his operations by automobile, as pilots are forbidden to fly for 72 hours after donating blood.

"Jack Boles belongs."

That's the way Staff Sergeant Jack Boles sums up the kind of job satisfaction he has.

"I had a lot of options before I came in the Army. But I don't think I could have gotten as involved, with my work and with people, as I am now.

"You see, talking is my thing. And in the Army I get to do plenty of it. As a re-enlistment NCO, a member of the post's Race Relations Advisory Board, and as a high school speaker.

"I think that a man has to feel that he's making a contribution, and today's Army gives you that opportunity. That's why I'm staying in."

Why are you staying in?

A look at Benning's RR-EO program

EDITOR'S NOTE: Maj. Lawrence Hurst has been selected as USAIC RR Officer upon the departure of Maj. George Moss who is bound for Europe. Major Hurst was recently interviewed by reporters for The Army Hour, a nationally broadcast radio program. Some interesting questions were asked and Hurst had some answers that were even more interesting. The interview went like this:

Q: Major Hurst, what qualifications led to your selections as RRO at Fort Benning?

A: I've been in the Army for 11 years, 2 of which were spent with the IG in Berlin. The IG is frequently involved with many of the same types of problems which may be encountered in Race Relations and Equal Opportunity. I also have a Masters Degree in Guidance and Counseling from Wayne State University in which a great deal of interest was directed toward the minorities.

Q: Major Hurst, can you briefly describe the function of the Race Relations Coordinating Group?

A: Basically, the RRCG is in a role of advice, assistance, and, as the name implies, coordination. We provide advice to Commanders in the formulation of RR-EO policy and assistance to each Command's RR instructor team in the development and presentation of RR Education and Training. Additionally, we monitor each Command and Staff Agency for compliance with RR-EO policy, directives and regulations from higher headquarters.

Q: Does RRCG handle complaints?

A: We do receive complaints of discrimination. These complaints are then forwarded to the appropriate agencies for investigation. RRCG insures that each complaint is properly investigated and the complainant is advised of action taken. We coordinate with the investigating agency to insure that the action taken is appropriate and correct.

Q: What sort of complaints do you receive?

A: We get complaints of discrimination in off-post housing and public accommodations as well as on-the-job complaints by soldiers. Complaints filed by dependents aren't infrequent either.

Q: What can be done to resolve complaints by servicemen and their dependents?

A: A great deal. As a member of the Commanding General's personal staff, I have direct access to the CG. General Tarpley has stated he flatly

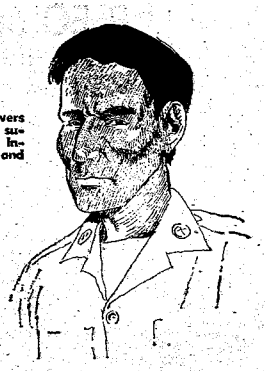
BLACKS — good athletes, fine dancers, wine drinkers, jive talkers, full of hate, gather in groups, sensuous, proud, loud clothes, militant, negro, nigger, boy, blood, jungle bunnies, coons, oreo, Uncle Tom.

ASIANS — rice lovers, chop sticks, folded hands, thick glasses, slanted yellow eyes, torturers and sadists, very intelligent, cunning, unemotional, sly, gooks, chinks, Japs, very religious and respectful to family and elders.



WHITES — sophisticated, uncoordinated, inadequate lovers, individualistic, war mongers, physically weak, greedy, introverted, superiority complex, honkey, beast, T-shirts, crackers, rednecks, devils, WASPS.

LATINOS — sleazy, artistic, long mustache, lazy, hot-headed, thieves, family pride, accent, carry knives, dumb, wetbacks, Meskins, Porty-Ricans, spic, machismo, tortilla makers and eaters, fat wives.

INDIANS— proud heritage, alcoholic, lovers of nature, not very prejudiced, savages, superstitious, humorless, passive, redskins, Injuns, papoose, squaw, good hunters and trackers, corn growers, easily duped.

Stereotypes

The great American pastime!

BY

MARCUS DISBROW

The listings of words following the above pictures are stereotypes. Some of the words may make you angry, others may cause you to chuckle or throw up. Nevertheless, they are stereotypes. But what exactly is a stereotype?

The word itself was created by Walter Lippman over five decades ago. Lippman understood it to mean a fixed and unchanging image in the mind. His definition, however, varies from person to person.

Joshua Pohl, a dependent and a second-year student at Columbus College, believes it "is a process which allows people to classify and place into familiar boxes those people whom they do not really know. It does not demand that they find out who the people really are before classification. After placing a person into a familiar category, one does not have to deal with him on a personal, one-to-one level."

A senior non-commissioned officer suggests that "when preconceived traits are placed, through ignorance, onto another human being, the process of stereotyping has occurred."

Corporal Glen Sandy figures that a stereotype is "a label put on a particular type of person. Most often races are stereotyped; however, various professions can also be. Such-as — all theatrical persons are conceited and stuck-up, policemen are Irish, and so on." Corporal Sandy concludes that stereotypes are "a preconscious image of what a certain type of persons are supposed to be."

Leonne Gomez, a young dependent, says that stereotypes are used "to look down on races such as Blacks, Indians, etc. Everybody is prejudiced in some way or another, and I think that people hate other people because they might be a different color or have a different background. People just cannot seem to accept that fact that everybody isn't exactly like them."

Businesswoman Keko Swain thinks that "stereotypes are used because "people have to feel better than someone else. The fewer their marks of personal distinction, the greater the tendency to look down on groups. Racial groups are convenient because they are usually visible and there is always someone handy, usually a WASP, to give them sympathetic support. Why do people use them? Probably because it is easy to get into the habit of going along with such remarks in a group. That way you don't disturb the group's feelings. Then you yourself may begin to use them. It is a vicious circle."

One soldier proclaimed that "those stereotypes are the white man's way of making him feel superior to everybody else."

Tim O'Reilley, a civilian employee, offered this idea. "A stereotype is a preconceived idea of how certain groups of individuals with some common, easily discernible characteristics behave. They are used to instill a fear, dislike or a like of certain groups. This can be done consciously or unconsciously."

And yet another idea is Kathy Kettrick's. She opinionizes that "people stereotype themselves. Regardless of what they say, they WANT to be different, want to be individuals in their own right. But rather than be distinguished by race or color, they group themselves and develop their own language, style of dance, mode of dress, etc. Consequently, in striving to become an individual, the person joins a group and has lost his individuality — thus he is stereotyped."

An officer offers that "stereotypes always were, always have been, and always will be, because that is the way it is. You cannot really change them."

Bill Spaniel hypothesizes that they "are one-dimensional characters who fall under that omnipresent classification of 'all'. Such as 'all blacks love watermelons', 'all southern whites are rednecks' or 'all cops are pigs'. In other words, pick a category and then state that an opinion about said category."

Perhaps you will be able to relate your own feeling that stereotypes and stereotyping to some of the above understandings.

In the military such words as nigger, spic, honkey, Injun and gook are supposedly not allowed. However, the sad conclusion is that such terms are not only in use, but all too often condoned by a person's peers. To illustrate, just walk through Building 4 during the student breaks and listen to the non-Asian officers using the term "gook" in reference to Vietnamese. Evidently in Vietnam, as well as in Korea and other Asian areas, the word "gook" was readily accepted. However, consider how an Asian-American military man and the allied Asian military personnel feel when they hear such language.

The American Indian has too long been the gag line of jokes, such as "Indian giver", "honest Injun", "give it to the Indians", "drunk as a wild Indian". Such terms and visions are continually reinforced by the television and movie media. When was the last time you ever saw the Indian win over the so-called "good guys"? And let's not forget the infamous words of W. T. Sherman, who is honored with the saying, "the only good Indian is a dead Indian."

If any ethnic group knows about a stereotype is and its severe consequences, it is the Blacks. For over three hundred years they have been labeled everything but men. This image is portrayed on the Sunday Shirley Temple movies and that disgusting nursery rhyme, "Eenie, meenie . . .". Consider the word "black" and then check it out in the dictionary. Compare its definitions with "white". Need anything more be said?

The Latino has suffered from such advertising campaigns as the 'Frito Bandito' which crept and flashed across the boob-tubes of the U.S. Even the Spanish language is too often thought to be an inferior language and not to be spoken. Have you ever seen a Latino as a hero on the screen? Ponder the thoughts of the Latino child when all he sees and reads concerns non-Latinos. What inferiorities and questions grow in his mind?

The white race has also suffered from stereotypes. The very image of something white is associated with purity and goodness. To many, he is a blue-eyed, blonde haired devil who must be exterminated like a deadly disease. Yet, what group initiated the stereotypes? Probably the one in power, both now and in the beginning of the nation.

Throughout history, stereotypes have not been constant; that is, they change over time. Consider, for example, the image of the German during World War II and his image today. Or the image of the young black man in the 1940's compared to today. Or the Indian of a few years ago contrasted to the events during and after Wounded Knee and the BIA takeover.

Even through time does seem to influence the stereotype, many people are not satisfied with the waiting that a long period of time demands. So, what can be accomplished today?

In the 197th Infantry Brigade, a group of officers and NCO's are attempting to break through the time barrier in changing stereotypes. The 197th is presently training race relations moderators for their units. The instructors include SSG Harold Middleton, Lt. Tri Howard, Lt. Mike Johnson, SSG Walter Crenshaw and Lt. Mark Disbrow. It is the responsibility of SSG Crenshaw to strip down the stereotype in one of his blocks of instruction.

"After the students have examined a number of sterotypes for various ethnic groups, we discuss their meanings and how they are learned. We want the moderators to recognize that the usage of stereotypes is indicative of prejudice, whether it be unintentional or intentional. It is their responsibility to inform others about the types of stereotypes and how their use hinders good race relations," explains SSG Crenshaw.

But people need not wait for the 197th instructors; instead, they can start doing away with stereoptyes now by using effective two-way communication and two-way feedback between members of similar and different races. This type of genuine inter-racial communication is the key to better racial understanding and harmony.

Let us hope that someday the stereotype will be buried in history as an American pastime.

RR-EO answers some popular questions

will not tolerate any form of discrimination directed against Fort Benning's soldiers or their families, and he intends to actively pursue the goal of Equal Opportunity as outlined in the Army Regulations on Race Relations.

Q: What Army Regulation covers Race Relations and Equal Opportunity?

A: AR 600-21, which is presently being revised and should be in the field around 1 September. The new regulation is extensively revised and puts new teeth into the Army's RR-EO Programs.

Q: Maj. Hurst, what do you feel is the primary cause of racial tension?

A: The primary cause has to be insensitivity to the values, needs, and goals of minority group members — insensitivity on the part of people who are in a position to do something about the problem. Naturally, old prejudices, stereotypes, and misinformation all play a part in creating racial tension.

Q: What is being done at Fort Benning to deal with the problems you've just mentioned?

A: We believe the most effective tool in eliminating racial prejudice is education. And in the Army we have the ideal framework for providing education and training. When a soldier arrives at Fort Benning he has already been introduced to RR Education in Basic Training. We continue this training through our recently implemented 18 hour Race Relations Education Course. This course was developed by graduates of the Defense RR Institute (Patrick Air Force Base, FL). The course was first presented to several experimental classes. The results were evaluated by the DRRI and shown to be positive to a significant degree. We then proceeded to implement the program in each major command on Fort Benning.

Q: I understand there is a Race Realtions School at Fort Benning?

A: Yes, the URRITC, which is run by the Leadership Committee, of the USAIS, is a two-week course for training battalion level Race Relations personnel.

Q: What are the prerequisites for attending the school?

A: To attend URRITC a man must be an E5 or above who is assigned as a unit race relations instructor or discussion leader at Battalion or comparable level, and has demonstrated leadership qualities and an awareness of current social issues. Enlisted personnel must have 9 months or more active duty remaining after completion of the course.

Q: What about the seminar program?

A: The seminar program is used to continue the awareness-building process that is initiated in the 18 hour course. It allows the participants to further develop their discussion abilities. The seminar is also valuable in that it helps bridge the inter-racial communication gap sometimes created by racial polarization.

Q: What is racial polarization? Is it bad?

A: Polarization is merely grouping along racial or ethnic lines. An example might be blacks grouping together in one part of a mess hall with whites in another. Polarization is not necessarily bad nor is it a reliable indicator of racial tension. If the purpose of polarization is to join with others of common interest, that's fine. But if the purpose of polarization is the exclusion of or protection from members of another group, then you have an undesirable situation. The disadvantage of polarization is that it can reduce the communication among the different racial and ethnic groups.

197th AIT graduates

The 197th Infantry Brigade's 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor graduated its first Advanced Individual Training (AIT) class since being activated in March when the new tankers gathered for a graduation ceremony near the battalion's Harmony Chruch headquarters.

The 25 graduates, now part of Co. B, 2nd of the 69th, received their diplomas near the historic building in which Army planners structured.

Keep inventory on all property

Every day, you read or hear about a fire loss, burglary or robbery — or see it on TV. Ever stop to think that after a loss, the burden of proof is on the loser? Regardless of how complete your records may be, the insurance adjuster will still determine how much compensation you'll receive. Two important steps beforehand can help you get an equitable settlement:

Inventory your possessions, room by room. List everything of any real value. Put the list in an envelope along with receipts and other proof to worth and ownership and put the envelope in a safe place outside your home — like your safe deposit box. It is also a good idea to photograph each room. Stand in the middle of the room and take several pictures at different angles.

Have your valuables appraised. Anything costing enough to schedule under an insurance "floater" policy should be professionally appraised. If it turns out that your prized possessions aren't worth as much as you thought, you save by not over-insuring. If they are worth more — you can buy coverage that is really adequate.

Remember, in the event of a loss, be prepared to prove what you have lost.

145th's Lyman Driver of Quarter

One seldom considers an aviation unit in any context other than that of aircraft and airerews. But there is considerably more to aviation than just helicopters and fixed wings, pilots and crew chiefs.

Support and maintenance of aircraft require many vehicles and drivers to operate them. The 145th Aviation Battalion (Combat) is extremely proud of its drivers, and justifiably so.

Sp5 Robert J. Lyman Jr., an Avionics Communication Repairman with the 609th Transportation Company, 145th Aviation Battalion, has captured the title of Fort Benning Driver of the Quarter for the fourth quarter of fiscal year 1973. This is the third time a man from the battalion has won this award in FY 73.

Lyman came to the 609th in July 71 following a tour with the 361st Aviation Detachment in RVN.

A 1966 graduate of Auburn High School in his hometown of Rockford, Illinois, Lyman joined the Army in September, 1969 and completed basic training at Fort Jackson, South Carolina.

In November 1971, he re-enlisted for six years. "I enjoy my work," he said. "That's why I'm in the Army, although I haven't yet decided if I will make the Army my career."

Since his assignment to the 609th, Lyman has maintained the radio equipment on a helicopter mock-up used to train Infantry Officers in the exercise of command and control from a helicopter.

Dramatizer's prepare for new play

How to lead her small country into war with the United States and costume a play at the same time are two problems which face Anni Tufts Disbrow.

Anni plays Gloriana in the Dramatizers' production of "The Mouse That Roared." Gloriana rules a tiny grand duchy which declares war against the United States so it can reap the benefits of post-war aid once it loses. But Gloriana is also head costumer for the play and must design and furnish costumes for 24 cast members including herself.

How can she do it all?

"It's going to be an awful lot of work," Anni says, "but the majority of the costume work — such as making the patterns, cutting out and stitching together each garment — will be done during the daytime by me and those members of the crew who are available. That will mean the minor finishing touches on the garments will be done by those members of the crew who come in the evenings during rehearsals. I intend to have all my lines learned as fast as possible so I won't have to devote my daytimes to that."

Anni estimates that between now and Aug. 17, when the productinn opens at the Fort Benning Playhouse, she and her associates must make 15 costumes from scratch — everything from a peasant's dress to a duchess' gown. Fortunately, other costumes can be supplied from the Playhouse's wardrobe collection.

However, Anni's duties don't stop at stitching lace and memorizing lines for the 75-minute comedy; she still must find time to devote to her responsibilities as president of the Dramatizers, an organization of servicemen and civilians interested in theatre. Anni has been president of the group since December and recently was re-elected to a second six-month term.

Because of the play, Anni and her husband Marcus (who, incidentally, portrays Gloriana's direct opposite, the president of the United States, in "Mouse") can be found almost daily at the Playhouse. Though they came to Benning in November 1971, it wasn't until the following April that they realized the Dramatizers existed.

"A friend suggested we come to a rehearsal of 'A Midsummer Night's Dream' and before the rehearsal was over, I was working on the costume crew and had a walk-on part in the play," Anni recalls of her introduction to the Dramatizers. "I originally thought it was a much more formal group but I found out it was quite different — so easy going."

Anni has been head costumer on every Dramatizer production after "Dream" and finds the work both demanding and rewarding.

"I really enjoyed doing 'Winnie the Pooh'," she relates. "It was such a fun show and it was the first one I costumed here. But as far as the most challenging show, that had to be 'Edwin Booth'. We designed and made everything except the men's shirts. That was a lot of work and a terrific bond developed between the cast and crew."

ANNI DISBROW

Surprisingly, aside from her bit part in "Dream", Anni's acting talents haven't been tapped again until now. Anni says she is reluctant to audition for plays because she feels there are few parts which she can portray well and, too, she would rather work behind the scenes.

Even in school at Ripon College, Ripon, Wisc., Anni concentrated on such things as directing, set designing, costume designing, production coordination and stage management rather than acting to earn her bachelor of arts degree in speech and drama. The few performances she gave then were mostly in plays expressly aimed at a children's audience.

18 hour course initiated

The School Brigade's Race Relations and Equal Opportunity Office had initiated a new 18 hour race relations course as directed by the Department of the Army to assist in increasing understanding between racial groups.

The Army is a fighting unit, and harmony between races is necessary to insure combat readiness. Periods of instruction contained in the 18 hours of instruction are Minority Life and Feelings, Orientals and Women, institutional and personal racism, and combating racism.

MSgt. Ralph Jackson, NCOIC of TSB's RREO office says "what we're doing with this course is attempting to increase the individual's knowledge and understanding of ethnic groups which is essential to good race relations."

Other instructors in the course are Capt. Edwin Lutz, TSB RREO officer 2nd Lt. Samuel Patterson, and Sp5 Jerry Jenkins.

Soylent Green

(PG) New York in the year 2022 is typical of the pollution engulfing the earth, which suffers from a constant heat wave, overpopulation and lack of food. Soylent green is the main food substance. Joseph Cotton is murdered and Police Detective Charlton Heston and researcher Edward G. Robinson investigate Cotton's bodyguard Chuck Conners who is implicated, while Leigh Taylor-Young, Cotton's "furniture," provides an outlet for Heston. Brock Peters orders Heston to drop the case and assigns him to riot control.

Kid Blue

(PG) "Kid Blue" is a western of the no-so-old west. The Off-beat comedy stars Dennis Hopper, a reformed outlaw who can do no right . . . except with women. Hooper's attempts to straighten up are foiled over and over. So he goes to his best friends to help him rob the factory payroll. Hooper escapes using an aerocycle (a flying machine).

The 1,000,000 Duck

(G) Professor Dean Jones feels sorry for a behavioral test duck dropout in his laboratory and takes it home to his wife. Radiation exposure and a mixed-up applesauce lunch, prepared by Jones' kooky wife Sandy Duncan, causes the duck to lay solid-gold eggs. Jones' son Jimmy claims the duck as a pet and names her Charley. Since the bank will not accept the golden eggs, Duncan cashes them in at refineries. In turn, the Treasury Department is alerted as a threat to world economy is seen. Jones, Duncan, and the T-Men become involved in a wild car chase as they pursue Jimmy who, fearful of losing his pet to the tax assessors, has run away with Charley.

Capt. Larry Aaron, commander of B Batt., 2nd. Bn., 10th Field Arty., calls attention to a close play he thought the umpire missed, as his battery captured the 197th softball championship. The "Redlegs" soundly defeated both teams they played from the Harmony Church league, stretching their record to 18-2. (PHOTO BY BOB THOMAS)

B Batt., Co. A. cop 197th softball titles

The teams of B Batt., 2nd Bn., 10th Field arty. and Co. A, 197th Spt. Bn. emerged victorious from the 197th Inf. Bde. slow pitch softball championships this week.

The tournament turned into a rivalry Monday between Harmony Church and Kelley Hill, when two teams from each league began the three-day battle for the two 197th play-off berths in the post championships. HHC, 1st Bn. (Mech), 58th Inf. (Patriots) scored the first win, beating Co. A, Spt. Bn. In Monday's second match-up, B Batt. trounced its opponent, Co. A, 1st-58th.

Tuesday's action saw Co. A Spt. Bn. beat Co. A, 1st-58th, knocking the Patriot team out of the double elimination tournament and insuring that at least one Kelley Hill unit would go on to the post tournament. In that day's second game, the "Redlegs" of B Batt. stretched their season record to 18-2 as they defeated the headquarters team of the 1st-58th. This win gave the artillery unit their first brigade championship in several years.

As the tournament moved into the final day, one team from Kelley Hill, Co. A, Spt. Bn., was pitted against one team from Harmony Church, HHC, 1st-58th. In their first meeting, the Patriots had won in a close game that was actually decided by a number of errors on the part of A Spt. A large number of spectators gathered to watch the final match-up.

A Co., Spt. Bn. won the game, 9-8, in the last half of the final inning, scoring two runs on what should have been an out. With the bases loaded and no outs, the batter hit a soft grounder to the pitcher. In a hurry to get the force at home and possibly the runner going to first too, the catcher lost the ball, letting the tying run score, making the score 8-8.

Louis Tirando, of A Co., Spt. Bn., had started thee play on second base and easily made it to third on the grounder. His heads-up base running brought home the game winning run when he realized the Patriot catcher was confused, and streaked home before the other team recognized him as a threat.

Tickets on sale

Southern Open starts Sept. 6

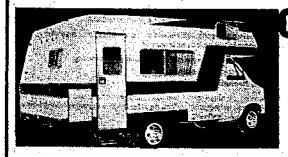
Tickets can now can be purchased for the Southern Open, to be held at Green Island Country Club Sept. 6-9.

A "gift pac," costing $10, contains four coupons exchangeable at the gate for daily tickets. This is a half-price value, since tickets otherwise will cost $5 per day at the gate.

These advance tickets can be purchased by calling the Southern Open office at 324-0411, by writing the Southern Open at P. O. Box 2056, Columbus, Ga. 31902, or purchased at the Fort Benning Special Services office (Bldg. 394), the Sand Hill Golf Course or the officers Country Club Golf Course.

Daily tickets can also be purchased in advance, at a price of $5 per day. The daily ticket, as well as the gift pac, will not admit the ticket holder to the clubhouse.

In order to gain clubhouse admission, a clubhouse badge, costing $20, is required. It is good for the entire week.



The practice round for the Southern Open will be held Tuesday, Sept. 4, with the pro-am tournament set for the following day.

The first round of the four-day Southern Open starts Thursday, Sept. 6.

Dewitt Weaver of St. Simons, Ga., is the defending champion of the $100,000-event. The tournament, which is only three years old, has previously been won by Mason Rudolph (1970) and Johnny Miller (1971).

Miller will not be playing in this year's Southern Open, however, since he has won a spot in the World Series of Golf, which is played the same time as the Southern.

BY BILL KLOEB

July is early to start thinking about hunting. With the Georgia sun baking out the pea patches and other food patches the Benning Fish and Wildlife Unit have planted for doves and other game birds, most of the hunters have taken cover at the TV set or the beach. The time does creep up on us, though, and besides, the Georgia Game and Fish Division of the Department of Resources has just announced open seasons for migratory birds. The news concerning the dove seasons is something every south Georgia dove hunter will want to hear.

After many years of experimentation and testing of all kinds of other plans, the Federal Bureau of Sports Fisheries and Wildlife have permitted Georgia to zone the state and into two sections, with two shooting sections for each section. This system should provide seasons more desired by hunters from the south and north portions of the state.

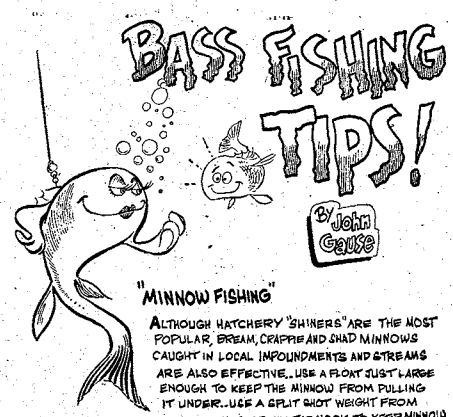
In the past hunters in the south claimed the seasons started too early. They claimed there were still nesting birds at the time the season started, and that shooting parent birds doomed these birds. There was also the matter of migration. At the time the first part of the season began in early September none of the birds had begun their southern migration. Southern shooters had only local birds to shoot. As a northerner, one of my main objections was getting my nose sunburned standing along the edge of a dove field while it was still summer.

Of course the hunters in the north wanted an early season so the migrating birds would not have all passed through their area before the season actually started. The Federal Sports Fisheries and Wildlife people were interested in keeping the dove population high all over the country, so they didn't seem to worry too much about the problems of the north or south part of the state until this year. There should be more doves killed this year in Georgia under the new system and it's doubtful that the plan will stay in effect.

The first North Georgia season will open Sept. 8 and close Oct. 27. The second period will run from Dec. 15 through Jan. 3. The first half of the Southern season will open Sept. 29 and close Oct. 27. The second part of the season will open Dec. 6 and run through Jan. 15.

Benning hunters get lucky

Dove hunters from Fort Benning and the Columbus area get an extra break on the line dividing north and south Georgia. The line starts at Columbus and runs east along U. S. Highway 80 to Macon, along Georgia Highway 16 from Sparta to Warrenton, then along Highway 278 from Warrenton to Augusta. This division will allow local hunters to hunt all seasons with a minimum amount of travel.



Shooting hours have been established statewide. They begin at noon and end at sunset of each day seasons are open. The bag limit per day is 12 birds with a total of 24 birds in possession at any time.

The Bureau intends to clarify the regulations on baiting, too. These regulations haven't been finalized, but they should be published about the middle of August. With all this progress in the dove hunting regulations there will probably be more dove hunters this year. I'd be inclined to get a bit interested myself if someone figured a way to avoid getting rained by lead shot from a nearby hunters gun, kill all the jiggers in Georgia by Sept. 1 and invented a really burn proof sun lotion for my nose.

Do it yourself?

Everyone knows it's illegal to seine for minnows in the ponds on post, but not many people know it is legal to seine for bait minnows in the creeks running through the reservation, providing any game fish taken in the

Barracudas

Twenty-two swim teams from Florida, South Carolina and Georgia competed in the Twentieth Annual Tobaccoland Invitational Swimming Championship in Moultrie, Ga.

In the girls' category, the Benning Barracudas freestyle relay teams in the 10 and under, 11-12 and 13-14 year class dominated the meet with first place victories. Chris Rogers, also of the Barracudas, bested the field in the 100 yd. breaststroke in the 13-14 year category.

Other winners from the Benning team were: Diane Borden, Sheila Cannan, Laura Chapin, Leigh Lunsford, Kirbey Pilcher, Linda Borden, Michelle Otto, Karen Otto, Dorothy Clark, and Ann Rogers in the girls' competition. In the boys' competition winners were James Kelly and Anthony Rodriguez.

All women dependents can now register for the ladies tennis classes being held at the Main Post Tennis Courts, Tuesdays from 9-11 in the morning. The classes offer basic instruction with supervision on the court practice sessions. You can register at the Bryant Wells fieldhouse or call Albert MacGruder, tennis instructor, at 545-5602.

WE ARE HIRING
EDS is looking for a special kind of individual — not a specialized set of skills.
EDS is a young, growing, successful commercial data processing company that can offer you an outstanding business opportunity NOW.
EDS is interested in aggressive individuals that are skilled in or meet the qualifications to be developed as businessmen in:
1. Commercial systems design and programming
2. Computer operations
3. Recruiting
EDS needs men and women who have high personal goals and are willing to work hard to make them materialize. You must be flexible in your working hours and be willing to travel and relocate.
EDS has a special type of environment where advancement is based solely on performance without regard to degrees, seniority, or any other artificial barriers. Rewards are directly proportional to the individual's contribution to EDS' growth and profitability.
If you would like to explore a career opportunity with EDS, contact:
The Project Transition Office, Phone 545-2178 or
F. Marion Johnson, Phone 404-351-6318
We will be interviewing in this area August 14th and 15th.

Ole hat trick

Tommy Lee Bassett and R. F. Heshizer both pulled the hat trick and shot holes-in-one last week at the Sand Hill Golf Course, Fort Benning. Both golfers pulled the trick on hole 2, a par 3, 127 yard shot.

160 junior golfers to compete

COLUMBUS — Approximately 160 of Georgia's finest junior golfers, from all over the state, each endorsed by a Georgia section P.G.A. member, will tee off Tuesday and Wednesday, July 31 and August 1 at Bull Creek Golf Club here as the seventh annual Georgia section Junior P.G.A. Golf Championship gets underway.

The junior tourney will be preceded by a Pro-Junior event on Monday that will see Georgia's golf pros each teaming up with three juniors between 13-18 for a go at each other and the Bull Creek course.

In the individual championship the junior golfers will be competing for a $1,000 college scholarship to the winner, a $500 scholarship to the runner-up and 10 trophies for each 13-14, 15-16, 17-18 age group.

The tournament is sponsored by Royal Crown Cola Co., as part of its youth and sports program. Royal Crown will also provide golfing souvenirs to each constestant.

Previous winners of the event include: Marc Blumberg of Athens, 1967; Wade Mayo, Atlanta-1968; John Gowdin, Columbus-1969; Tom Stacy, Savannah-1970; Bob Hoyt, Rome-1971; and Bob Young, Atlanta-1972. Young presently is a member of the University of Georgia golf team.

Draggin Around

Saturday was a big night at Phenix Dragway. Since Buck Todd has started swapping off Saturday nights with Bobby Boyd at Warner Robins Dragway, the entries in Modified, Gas and Super Stock classes have increased considerably.

Every Wednesday night is still "ET" bracket night. But on Saturday nights, it will only be every other weekend. "ET" cars run on the Saturdays that the regular classes run too.

Last Wednesday, Jimmy Parker won "ET" money — in the rain yet. The wet pavement drove most people off, but a few diehards stayed. Parker's superb driving skill pulled him through despite the traction problem.

Saturday night, Jimmy Parker again won "ET" money. The finals came down to trophy winners — Bill Cobb, Betty Zimmerman and Jimmy Parker. Parker eliminated Betty Zimmerman and then shut down Bill Cobb.

Ellis Milner won Modified-Gas class with his B-Gas Vega, turning a 10.02 second run.

Gordon sweeps series

It was all Gordon this past weekend as the visiting WACs amassed 39 runs on 49 hits in taking a two game series from the Benning women. The Ft. Gordon WACs won 12-9 and 21-19 in Women's Army Softball League action at Gowdy Field.

In the first game on July 22, home runs by Genie Ball and Sheila Glover of Ft. Gordon powered the visitors to a 12-9 victory. Benning's Patricia Cagle clobbered a tremendous home run in the losing effort.

In the second game, played July 23, Gordon once again poured across six runs in the first and lead throughout the game while collecting 32 hits in the 21-19 win. The Benning women tried to come back in the late innings but ran out of time.

"We were just overanxious and nervous causing us to make mistakes that we normally wouldn't have," said Benning standout Patricia Cagle.

Pat started playing softball while in civilian life, and after joining the Army, continued playing ball while stationed with the 8th Army in Chicago. Her last clash with the softball came in Frankfurt, Germany where she played for three and a half years. She is a dental assistant at Dental Clinic No. 6.

Vickie "Shortie" Camp, catcher for the Benning WACS softball team puts the ole tag on Gordon runner Sheila Glover. The out didn't stand in the way of Gordon as they trounced Benning twice 12-9 and 21-19.

Sp5 fires 73 to cop golf title

Sp5 John Sale fired a sparkling 73 in the final round to win the 1973 USAIC Golf Championships at the Fort Benning County Club.

Sele, a pharmacist at the Martin Army Hospital Annex, said, "It was a long hard course, and the way the pin placement was set added to the difficulty of the course."

Sale ended the tournament eight strokes ahead of second-place finisher Ozzie Melendez. Talking about the tourney, Melendez said, "John played bad but I played extra bad. It's a course that demands your best game and my game was off."

Randall Shaw fired a 75 to finish in third place, two strokes ahead of Jim Cyrus. James Gary, after firing a 75 in the third round, had extreme troubles with the Benning course Friday. He ended up in fifth as he could only manage a 85.

In other Open Division action, Dan Vincent captured the first flight, and James Hughes was the winner of the second flight, with Bobby Pounds taking the honors in the third flight.

Col. Louis Harris dominated play in the senior division as he fired a 79 and 83 respectively. He finished 13 strokes ahead of Alan MacDonald.

Stephan Beck was the winner in the first flight in the senior division.

Sale, a former member of the 1968 NCAA championship golf team at the University of Florida, had trouble getting his game together the first three rounds. He came back in the final round though as he birdied three of his last four holes to chalk up his 73, low score for the tourney.

Sale, runner - up in last year's inter-service golf tournament, hopes to be heading for Ft. Ord, Calif. and another shot at the top spot with other outstanding Benning golfers on August 27-31. The Army team won the tournament last year.

Sale will also be trying out for the U. S. Amateur golf tournament in Atlanta on August 13-14.

Dependent action

Giants comeback

An outburst of four runs in the fifth inning enabled the Giants to come back from a 3-2 deficit. They beat the Red Sox 6-3 in dependent Major League action on post.

The Giants had lost to the Red Sox in their previous meeting, 6-4. They took an early lead in the second inning when Bobby Williams singled and scored on a base hit by Greg Rosher.

The Red Sox came back in the third to go ahead 3-1. William Tarpley and Tony Guthrie walked and scored off of John Crowley's double. Jimmy Neill singled to score Crowley.

The Giants closed the gap to 3-2 in the fourth inning.

Then came the fifth inning. Lester Brown led off with a double and was followed by Osvaldo Font, Orlando Font, Williams and Rosher, each getting singles to go ahead 6-3.

The Giants' pitcher Mike Harding settled down and kept the Red Sox batters scoreless and hitless in the last two innings. Harding gave up only two hits while striking out nine.

There are several places on the Upatoi between Engineer Bridge and the junction with the Chattahoochee River that have been productive. The best place used to be just below the infiltration plant dam behind the Hunt Club. While you are there you might give a try for bream or crappie. A few years back this was considered to be about the hottest crappie pool in the area.

Black Brothers

Letter to the editor speaks of solidarity

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The following article by Maj G. R. King appeared recently in a letter to the editor sectio nof the Hahn AB, Germany, base newspaper.)

Now all you white brothers reading this newspaper can move on to other action; like crossword puzzles, playboy magazines, or the sports pages. I want to rap with my black brothers especially, at this time.

If what I say angers you and gets you up-tight, then so be it. The time has come especially for the young black airmen to stop fooling yourselves. Stop fooling yourselves into believing that following sheepish "fads" is "black solidarity." It is time to stop swallowing this marlarkey or shall we call it "bull," that freedom is found in expressing yourself by the styling of your hair and the wearing of a beard. Dig it, now the fad is to have from 20 to 25 nappy plaits lined on your head with your scalp skin showing. That is the condensation of 'racial pride' and black heritage?

Recently, "Ebony" magazine had a feature article called "Is the Afro On the Way Out?" It suggested that the college students in America didn't find enough "black pride" in the old Afro; so the young blacks have now resorted to the ancient African hair-styles such as the "tree corn row." This is a model that looks like he got his head caught in a corn-shucker. They don't even wear their hair like this in Africa today.

This is to put it as decently as I can, it is 100 per cent nonsense for a professional airman in the Air Force to attempt to follow such fads. Black Americans can let their hair grow to the ground, they can shave their heads till they outshine cue balls, they can even straighten or tease or orocinole or curl or process their hair.

They can buy wigs until their money runs out and they can wear a beard one-half, one-fourth or one-eighth inch in length, but there isn't going to be any meaningful "black pride." For lasting and influencing black pride more black military personnel must make solid achievement in competition with the white military majority. Here on the rock we need some "brain power." Have you visited your education office and discovered what is there for you that will help you to emerge as a first class professional airman, and eventually a professional civilian that can generate wealth and occupy high policy-making positions in our society? Man, that's where it is, get it and that's "black solidarity."

Nothing is more nauseating than to see a black dude sitting around crying. He never reads a newspaper, or a magazine, or a book (especially on black history.) He won't hold on to a decent job, doesn't come to work on time and will not even attempt to help some newly assigned brother get squared away. He is loud, and all he talks about is his "rags" or his fro, his beard or his hair and how "the man" is on his back and in his case.

No Greek, no Jew, and no Gentile ever designed enough rags or grew enough hair to cover any of his failures. Hair alone cannot be passed on for "racial pride." Black airmen in the Air Force face a grueling challenge of survival and advancement against the most powerful forces in the world. These forces are arrayed against us now, some openly and some secretly. So we need to get down to the nitty-gritty. No nonsense or bull . . . get about the business of manning the ramparts for equality in a democratic society.

A lot of young black airmen think they are snowing the white man. They are going through the Air Force without taking advantage of their academic opportunities. They are just drinking wine, and running the "hammers." These young blacks are snowing themselves, sometimes destroying themselves. (That's what some of the rednecks want you to do.) That's "Uncle Tomming."

No one group in the world today has so much power and pride of ancestry as to be able to assert itself as a superior to all others. This young black generation should be prepared for and demand political, legal and economic equality. This will revolutionize the world, our American society and our institution, including the Air Force. Are you ready for the revolution Bro.????

Let's face it; we don't have enough firepower to take the country, we don't have enough manpower to dominate the world, we don't have enough dollar-power to buy it, so we will fall short of all these powers until we develop a lot more brainpower . . . (Remember Shaft) in today's world, the thing is greenpower. Brainpower is the one power that we can develop rapidly, with zeal, with effort and with time. Now is the time. Over and beyond the search for racial pride is "personal pride."

Let's get our stuff together: Prepare the mind and let's say "to hell" with this nonsense about the hair and beard being the in thing concerning "black solidarity." Education is where it is, think it through and school it. Do you have the guts????? or do you have the hair?????

Repairman stays in

The 478th Aviation Company (Heavy Helicopter) has reenlisted its first first-termer since being reorganized here at Fort Benning.

Sp4 James L. Robinson, an Avionics Repairman with the 278th, re-enlisted for four years in his present duty assignment. Robinson was sworn in by Maj. Jerry L. Watson, commander of the 478th. When asked why he re-enlisted, Robinson replied "I know that I've got a job now. If I got out, things might be different.

Discrimination good?

According to Mr. Webster, discrimination is "making or perceiving differences and distinctions; a showing of personal favoritism in treatment." It's a personal characteristic. One that can invoke a sense of pride — a person of discriminating taste.

Discriminating between things is acceptable. Discriminating between people is acceptable. That's right, it's acceptable. The military has done it for years — NCO Clubs and Officer Clubs. Each of you shows "personal favoritism in treatment" among the people you call your close friends.

So what's this big fuss about discrimination? Well, the acceptability of discrimination quickly ends when it is based on race, sex, religion, or national origin. When these "things" become the basis for "making differences," "personal favoritism," then discrimination is not acceptable. Not now. Not ever.

Discrimination — the wrong kind — exists in two forms; obvious or overt discrimination, and subtle or covert discrimination. You don't see much obvious discrimination today. The laws passed in recent years have taken care of these things for the most part. The signs on the restrooms doors: Men, Women, Colored. The "White Only" motels, hotels and restaurants.

These laws have also tried to erase the subtle discrimination. And to some degree it has been successful. But subtle discrimination is a very difficult thing to eliminate. It's difficult because everyone does it — everyone. Each of us has, does and probably will continue to some degree to discriminate because of race, religion, sex or national origin. Because everyone does it, certainly doesn't make it right. If you disagree with this, try being on the receiving end of discrimination some time. You'll quickly get the point.

Many of us don't realize that we do discriminate. We say and do things that are discriminatory without knowing it. Without knowing it. That's where most of the problem lies, lack of knowledge. The more you know about people around you, the easier it is to accept them for what they really are — a person. When you look at everyone as a person and know them as a person, then you can intelligently make a "distinction" about them. But base that distinction on who and what they are, not something over which they had no control. Such as race or sex. Don't judge another just because they are different from you. It would be a very dull world if we were all exactly alike.

ROTC scholarships now available for EM

HQ. CONARC, FT. MONROE, Va. — Army enlisted men and women now have a chance to complete their college education and earn a commission through the Army ROTC scholarship program.

In the spring of 1974, the Army will offer 50 two-year ROTC scholarships to selected enlisted members who have already completed or received credit for two years of college studies. Scholarships will be effective at the start of School Year 1974-75.

Enlisted members who win the competitive scholarships may attend any of the more than 290 colleges and universities offering Army ROTC. They may take any course of study leading to a baccalaureate degree, except theology.

The scholarships pay for the students' tuition, textbooks and lab fees. They will also receive a $100 monthly subsistence allowance each month they are in school for up to ten months of the academic year.

In addition to the scholarship benefits, selectees may be eligible to receive GI benefits from the Veterans Administration. General requirements for enlisted members seeking Army ROTC scholarships are:

— Have completed or received credit for two years of college studies.

— Have completed at least one year of active service.

— Be accepted by a college or university offering Army ROTC.

— Be under 25 years of age on June 30 of the year in which they become eligible for appointment as an officer.

— Serve as an active duty Army officer for four years following graduation from college.

Scholarship winners will be honorably discharged from active duty and enlisted into the Army Reserve.

Details on the enlisted personnel ROTC program can be obtained from Army ROTC Scholarship, Fort Monroe, Va. 23651.

NOT ONCE SINCE 1928

Have we tried to fool you in our ads. Since the founding of this dealership in 1928, we have tried to be straight forward and correctly present our products and terms. We have never offered to sell at cost or lower, nor have we tried to attract you with a constant series of "Gimmick Sales". It has paid off. Your satisfaction with the "Jno. A. Pope Way" has made us our reputation and we are proud of it! When we say something we mean it!

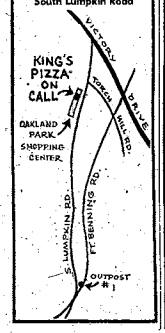
67th wives hold fete

The home of Mrs. Gene Redondo was the setting for a Spanish dinner given recently for the officers wives of the 67th Maintenance Battalion of the 36th Engr. Gp. Hostesses for the meal were Mrs. Redondo and Mrs. Glenn Anderson.

The delicious dinner was complete with tacos, tamales, enchiladas, Spanish rice, refried beans, and a congealed salad. The ladies enjoyed ice cream with chocolate sauce for dessert.

Business and pleasure were mixed as plans for the Christmas Bazaar were discussed. The wives will soon be getting preparations underway.

Newcomers to the 67th were Mrs. Harvey LaReau and Mrs. Larry Graziani. Mrs. Jim Root, was bade goodbye as she and Lt. Root will be leaving Ft. Benning at the completion of his tour of service.



The get-together for July was held at the home of Mrs. Charles Rosengren along with a baby shower for Mrs. Linda Day, wife of Capt. Day of the 444th Transportation Company.

Marksmen win center fire honors

CAMP PERRY, Ohio — U. S. Army handgunners continued to pluck the top laurels in the heated second day of competition in the National Rifle and Pistol Matches here Tuesday as the Army "Blue" team along with All Army Pistol Champion Sgt. Marvin Black of Fort Benning, Ga., grabbed the Center Fire Championships.

Black, a Laverne, Oklahoma pistol expert with the Army Marksmanship Unit, captured the four match Center Fire Pistol aggregate with his 886-44x while the Army "Blues" did the honors with their combined 1,172-42x.

Former National Pistol Champion Marine Warrant Officer Francis Higginson, Placerville, Calif., was down two points for runner up honors in the Center Fire contest while National Guardsman Sgt. Kenneth Buster, Billings, Mo., posted an 883-38x to claim the third place slot which put him in the drivers seat in the three day — three gun match with a 1,772 total.

The Anderson led Army "Blue" squad also placed a new record in the books with their Center Fire score of 1,172 which beat the old mark by one point. The team, fielded by the Army Marksmanship Unit, included SFC Harland Rennolds, SFC Bonnie Harmon and S-Sgt. John Sieinski along with Anderson.

Highlight of the Center Fire competition Tuesday was the records turned in by Army contenders. Black posted a near perfect 300-20x in the 30 shot national match course to equal the national record and better the national championship record set at Camp Perry of 298-18x. He placed all 30 shots in the ten ring with 20 in the very center or X.

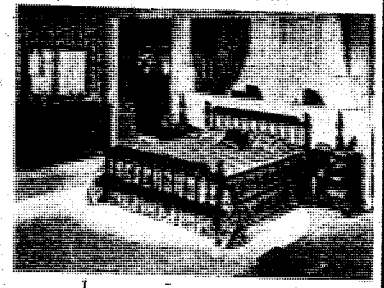
Day-long festivities for reorganization

On July 2 the 197th Military Intelligence Detachment, and guests observed Military Intelligence Organization Day with day-long festivities at King Pond Lodge.

The Military Intelligence Branch was created July 1, 1962, as the United States Army Intelligence and Security Branch, and later as the Military Intelligence Branch. As a Combat Support Arms Branch it is now one of the larger branches of the Army.

The 197th currently supporting the 197th Inf. Bde., began the day's events with a thorough police of the picnic area retaining all recyclable waste materials for turn-in at the Benning Recycle point. The guests spent the morning in various athletic contests including volleyball, badminton, and horseshoes.

The afternoon was spent in a fishing contest and general relaxation. The ladies and dependents joined the men of the 197th for a cookout, beginning at 4 p.m. and lasting until 8 p.m. The 197th Inf. Bde., representatives to the occasion, included LTC Richard D. Gillem, Brigade Executive Officer, and Maj. Robert Kelley, Brigade S-2.



Members of the 4th platoon, 586th Floatt Bridge Company, prove by the looks in their face that it is no easy task to assemble a bridge. Teamwork is the key as these soldiers prove. (Photo by Bill Girtman)

Cancer

Do something about it if you are concerned about your health

By RANDY BOOSE

Would you think of putting off something that might save your life? Would you want your wife to? Of course the answers to these questions are no. Unfortunately many wives put off worrying about their health and cancer.

Most types of cancer, such as cancer of the liver and cancer of the lung, are highly deadly for everyone. The two most common types of cancer among women, cancer of the breast and cancer of the uterus, however, when detected and treated early, have a very high cure rate. When treated promptly, uterine cancer has a 81 per cent cure rate; breast cancer has an 85 per cent cure rate.

These cure rates lose some of their impressiveness when you consider that 30,000 women died last year of breast cancer alone. Many of them died needlessly. Why? Because many women don't know about the precautions they should take concerning breast and uterine cancer, or in many cases they just didn't take the time to seek help.

REGULAR HEALTH EXAMS

Knowing that breast and uterine cancer have high cure rates when discovered early is important. To aid in early detection, women should have regular health examinations. The Martin Army Hospital Ob-Gyn Clinic sees on the average 3,000 women a month for routine exams.

PAP TEST

All women at Ft. Benning who visit the Ob-Gyn Clinic receive a Pap Test if they haven't had one in recent months. The Pap Test is an effective, simple, and painless weapon for detecting early signs of uterine cancer. A sample of cervical mucus is obtained and examined. If anything unusual shows up, further study is needed. At Martin Army Hospital, if a woman's test indicated further study, she is cared for in the Ob-Gyn Clinic or in the hospital. If a maligancy (cancer) is diagnosed, she is referred to Walter Reed Hospital in Washington, D. C. for further evaluation and treatment. The Pap Test not only gives an early warning of uterine cancer but it also warns against hidden infections in some cases.

MOST WOMEN DISCOVER THEIR OWN BREAST CANCER

Though breast cancer is highly curable when discovered early, it is the number one cancer killer among women. There is no reason why so many women should die from this cancer. 95 per cent of all women discover their own breast cancer. Too often, however, they wait to go to their doctor after the cancer passes the stage when it can be easily cured. Often they do so because of the fear and stigma involved with breast cancer and the possible surgery from it. Unfortunately, cancer is a disease that doesn't go away. The husband who understands the apprehension that is often involved with breast cancer will be better able to persuade their wives to seek medical advice should she discover any unusual change in her breasts.

FIVE MINUTE CHECK

The best insurance against discovering breast cancer too late is a monthly five minute self-examination. This monthly check will allow a woman to spot any change in her breasts as it occurs. Pamphlets and films which show women how to examine their breasts properly are available by calling the nurse clinicians office at Martin Army Hospital.

MAMMOGRAPHY

Some women have a higher risk of becoming inflicted with breast cancer than others. These women have a family history of breast cancer, or have already had cancer or irregularities in one breast, and are usually middle aged. These high risk women can take advantage of a new test for discovering a beginning breast tumor. It is called mammography. It involves x-raying the breast and it detects a tumor before it can be seen or felt. The radiology department at Martin Army Hospital currently handles mammography patients though not on a routine basis.

CANCER DETECTION CLINIC

If your wife is not already involved with her health and cancer, Martin Army Hospital offers an easy way for her to do so. It is their Cancer Detection Clinic where she can receive a cancer check-up. The check-up consists of a questionnaire to obtain her health history and physical examination. The clinic concerns itself with all forms of cancer. If any unusual symptoms are discovered, she is referred to the proper specialty clinic. Appointments for the clinic should be made two to six weeks in advance unless there is an urgent need to have it sooner. The exams are held Tuesday and Thursday afternoons. A cancer check-up should become an annual event for your wife for her safety and peace of mind.

HOW THE HUSBAND CAN HELP

There are some things modern medicine can't do to decrease breast and uterine cancer deaths. It can't make women have a regular health physical. It can't remind a woman she needs a Pap test. It can't nag her to check her breast regularly for cancer and it can't convince her to seek a doctors advice when she first suspects something is wrong. Medicine can't help in these situations but an informed husband can. He can encourage his wife to take these necessary precautions against breast and uterine cancer if she is not already doing so.

Grange promoted to Brig. Gen.

Col. David E. Grange, director of the Ranger Department, U. S. Army Infantry School, was promoted to Brigadier General, Wed., Aug. 1 at Fort Benning.

Brig. Gen. William R. Richardson, Assistant Commandant, U. S. Army Infantry School, pinned on the insignia of rank in a ceremony in Room 647, Infantry Hall.

At 4:30 p.m. on York Field, an honors ceremony was held for Brig. Gen. Grange. He was the reviewing officer, and Brig. Gen. Richardson was host officer.

The new General served as a paratrooper in Europe during World War II. He graduated from Officer Candidate School in May 1950 and was a platoon leader and company commander in Korea. His last overseas assignment was 3rd Brigade commander, 101st Airborne (Airmobile) Division. On an earlier tour he had served as a battalion commander in the 101st.

On previous tours at Fort Benning, he has been an instructor in the Ranger Department and attended the Infantry Officers Advanced Course. He also is a graduate of the Ranger course and the Airborne course.

The Ranger director has also served in Europe, the Pentagon, Fort Knox and Fort Bragg.

New hours listed for commissary

Since Wed., Aug. 1, the Main Commissary Store has been operating under new hours to provide added customer convenience. The new hours of operation are as follows:

Sun., 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.; Mon., 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.; Tues., 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.; Wed., 11 a.m. to 8 p.m.; Thurs., 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.; Fri., 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.; Sat., 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Custer Terrace hours of operation will remain unchanged.

Where problems are put in writing

"It can assist the chain of command like nothing else for the junior enlisted man," says Command Sergeant Major of the School Brigade George H. Hamill of TSB's Soldier's Council, which held its first meeting on Friday, July 20.

The Soldier's Council is designed to open lines of communication between the E-4 and below and the chain of command. Soldiers who have constructive suggestions, legitimate criticisms, or problems which cannot be taken care of through the chain of command can take them to the council. Suggestions and criticisms should first be discussed with the unit 1st Sgt. or Company Commander.

Topics brought before the council are discussed by the representatives from the four TSB battalions, and a representative for Headquarters, TSB. Evaluations of the suggestions or problems are written into resolutions which are reviewed by CSM Hamill and Col. Allen M. Goodson, TSB Commander.

Sp4 George Korda of HHC, TSB was elected President of the TSB Soldiers Council. Other members are Sp4 Gilbert Lujan, 1st Bn. PFC Tom Lennon, 2nd Su. Bn., Sp4 Frank McCord, TSB's Soldier of the Quarter, 4th Stu. Bn., and PFC Nathan Milton, 9th Stu. Bn.

CSM Hamill emphasized one point during remarks he made at the first meeting. "The Soldier's Council is not to take the place of, substitute for or override the chain of command," he said, "but it can be a very important part of communication between the soldier and his commander."

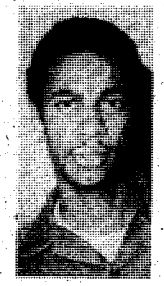
SOUND OFF!

What should you do if you suspected that you had contacted a venereal disease?

Sp4 Samuel La Touche
Co. A HQD Command

I would waste no time and run to the doctor's. There's only one way to find out if you have contracted the disease and that is to take corrective action. Everyone should do the same, that's the only way we're going to get rid of all venereal diseases.

Sp4 Robert Scott
A Co. HQD Comman



I would go immediately to sick call to have tests taken to tell positively if I had it. I would tell them where I suspected I had contacted it. The longer you wait the longer and harder it is to cure. A lot of people think that pills and waiting will cure it but they don't know that the symptoms will disappear after the first stage but will return later in a more severe stage.

Sp4 Robert Bennet
139th MP Co.

As soon as I suspected that I had contracted if I would see a doctor. I've taken too many chances with my health so far; I wouldn't take another one, especially with a disease that contagious.

E-4 Odavie Burford
669th Trs. Co.

I would make it to the nearest hospital annex. If the tests were positive I would then personally advise the person I had caught it from to do the same.

E-2 Charles Prager
45th Co.

I would go on sick call. If you think you have it you shouldn't wait especially in the army you are in touch with a large amount of people that could easily contact it from you. The main thing would be for my own health.

E-6 Jimmy Sanders
DPT Photo Lab

I'd go to a doctor. He would know what to do. There used to be repercussions if you contacted V.D., either an article 15 or some sort of punishment. Nowadays you don't have to worry about any sort of actions being taken against you, so the best thing to do is get checked by a physician if you think you have this disease.

Prepare

Guidelines for a better future

It is vitally important that a person have a job which contains the possibility of personal fulfillment and achievement. This means that we ought to prepare for the kind of work that holds these possibilities. The following are guidelines that should help a person find the vocation that suits him best.

FIRST, have a firm understanding of what your REAL interests are. Careful studies have shown that people who are happy and satisfied in a given occupation have the same interest patterns. Similar interest patterns are the basis for congenial friendship and teamwork. If your interest pattern closely resembles that of most office workers, it is a good indication that you might enjoy being an office worker. If your interest pattern is close to that of career military people, you are likely to find personal satisfaction in being a soldier.

SECOND, understand as much as possible about your abilities. No matter how interested a person may be in a particular line of work, if he does not have the abilities it requires, he is headed for frustration and heartache. This makes it important for each of us to know as much about our real abilities as possible. Wishful thinking is not a substitute for honest self-evaluation at this point.

THIRD, we must be aware that there is a MORAL DIMENSION to the way we do our jobs. We need to realize that the intensification of our interests and the development of our abilities is left squarely up to us. The decisions we make are moral because we are dealing with the only life for which we have full responsibility. Our own. If we could become exactly what we want to be and if we could do exactly what we want to do there would be no moral problem related to our jobs. But we can't. We have to make the best of life as it comes to us. We have to make decisions every day about how we will work at our jobs, and how we will use our interests and abilities. This is one of the deepest moral dimensions of life which we all have to do something about.

The 598th Light Maintenance Company received its first female member who will help add a little bit of home to their cooking. PFC Phyllis Mary Stewart who is assigned to the 598th enlisted nine months ago as a cook and attended Basic Training at Ft. McClellan, Alabama. Upon completion of Basic she then went to Ft. Ord, California for training as a cook. Phyllis Stewart has been with the 598th for 2 weeks. She is the first WAC to be assigned to the company and is presently the only WAC in the company. She doesn't mind the part of being the only WAC in the company, but as she said, "I would like to see more WACs in this field of work." PFC Stewart enlisted in the Army because she enjoys the traveling and the pay. She is presently planning to stay in the Army because she enjoys her job. PFC Stewart is not married and spends her spare time roller skating or playing football.

Rangers experience mountain warfare

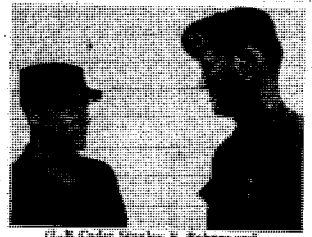
Walking up and down the Tennessee Valley Divide is certainly no hiker's holiday, but to ROTC Ranger Class 502-73, long range patrolling operations over the lower Blue Ridge Mountain chain have become a daily occurance.

Since arriving at Camp Frank D. Merrill two weeks ago, the ROTC Rangers have successfully confronted the challenges of military mountaineering. Employing skills taught during the first few days of training, the cadets now confidently navigate, day and night, over mountain ridges that exceed 5000 feet in elevation.

While in the Mountain Ranger Camp the ROTC Rangers are placed in a conventional warfare environment requiring long-range patrolling and utilizing airborne and airmobile tactics to enhance their mobility. Those Ranger students who are airborne qualified may make as many as two jumps while in the mountains. Parachuting from an aircraft flying between the mountains of the Blue Ridge has provided an unforgettable thrill to the novice cadet jumpers. On most drop zones used in the mountains the aircraft must drop the student at an altitude less than that of the highest peaks.

Aching muscles, blistered feet and ever-present drowsiness continually plague the cadet Ranger throughout the mountain phase. Despite their lack of experience, members of Class 502-73 have adjusted well to the rigors of mountaineering. According to the class tactical officer, John R. Reitzel, "The cadets make up for their inexperience with enthusiasm and aggressiveness. They're eager to learn and they respond exceptionally well to rapidly changing situations. Considering the transition they've recently made from college campus to the wilds of North Georgia, the cadets have responded to the challenges with remarkable success."

Class 502-73 completes the mountain phase of training on August 10. From Camp Frank Merrill the cadets will conduct an air movement to the Florida Ranger Camp located at Eglin Air Force Base.



While Class 502-73 has been operating in the mountains, Class 501-73 has been initiated to the swamps of Florida, and is currently engaged in platoon-size counterguerilla operations. The cadets have received training in airmobile and small boat operations, helicopter rappelling, and navigation in swampy terrain. Concluding the Florida phase is an extended combat operation encompassing all of the techniques taught thus far.

Auburn's Sgt. Maj. meets ole war buddy

It was a pleasant surprise for Sgt. Maj. Ralph W. Dunahoo to meet ROTC Ranger Cadet Stanley E. Rohner again. The first time they met was in 1968 in Vietnam with the 101st Airborne Division. Dunahoo was then the First Sergeant of "E" Company, 2nd Bn., 502 Inf. and Rohner was Sp-4 Rohner, a forward observer for the Recon Platoon of "E" Company.

Rohner is now in the Florida phase of ROTC Ranger training with Class 501-73, and is scheduled to graduate August 10th. During the Benning phase of Ranger training Rohner was declared the champion in hand-to-hand combat training in a class of 275 Cadets. That feat further confirms Dunahoo's opinion of Rohner as the outstanding, young soldier

Cadet Stanley E. Rohner and Sgt. Maj. Ralph W. Dunahoo

Northern Illinois University and is undergoing Army Ranger Training in lieu of the regular, six week ROTC summer camp. He holds the Bronze Star, Army Commendation, Air, Vietnamese Service, Vietnamese Campaign, and the National Defense Service Medals.

Dunahoo is a native of Cuthbert, Ga., and resides with his family at 2829 Hawthorne Drive, Columbus, Georgia. With 24 year of active duty, he has served 15 years with the Ranger Department at Fort Benning. Dunahoo is assigned as Sergeant Major of Auburn University ROTC. This summer he is serving as Sgt. Maj. of the ROTC Ranger summer camp.

Army Bulldogs

Attending Ranger School are (T) Michael P. Stewart, (B) Peter K. Swiderek, cadets at the University of Georgia, Athens. They are two of almost 500 cadets from all over the nation who volunteered and were selected, after meeting strict requirements, to attend this school in lieu of ROTC Summer Camp. Ranger School is a nine-week course divided into three phases of three weeks each and is designed to develop the student's leadership under extremely difficult, stress oriented conditions. Training is conducted at Benning, the mountains of North Georgia, and the swamps of Florida at Eglin Air Force Base. Rangers undergo tough physical conditioning, difficult land navigation and intensive patrolling during which they receive little sleep or food. Ranger Training is considered to be the most difficult military schooling of its kind in the world and those who successfully complete this training are awarded the coveted black and gold Ranger Tab to wear on their left shoulder. Cadets Stewart and Swiderek hail from Columbus, Ga. They are also members of Scabbard and Blade, an honorary ROTC society, and the University of Georgia Ranger Company...

Spanish Dinner delight

The home of Mrs. Gene Redondo was the setting for a Spanish dinner given recently for the officers wives of the 67th Maintenance Battalion of the 36th Engr. Gp. Hostesses for the meal were Mrs. Redondo and Mrs. Glenn Anderson.

The delicious dinner was complete with tacos, tamales, enchiladas, Spanish rice, refried beans, and a congealed salad. The ladies enjoyed ice cream with chocolate sauce for dessert.

Business and pleasure were mixed as plans for the Christmas Bazaar were discussed. The wives will soon be getting preparations underway.

Newcomers to the 67th were Mrs. Harvey LaReau and Mrs. Larry Graziani. Mrs. Jim Root was bade goodbye as she and Lt. Root will be leaving Ft. Benning at the completion of his tour of service.

The next get-together is scheduled to be held at the home of Mrs. Charles Rosengren and will be a baby shower for Mrs. Linday Day, wife of Capt. Day.

36th Engr. Gp. introduces REACH

By Charles Brickman

In the Army there is a constant need to reinforce physical training within all units. There is also a need to avoid the monotony of constant repetition as well.

In the past, units have maintained a physical training program in many different ways. Some units use the "Army Daily Dozen"; other units have used more diversified programs. To supplement the different programs, most units now have adventure training as well. This is one way to get more men to participate in something which will help them.

With all the programs offered, though, there are still many areas where a good number of personnel do not participate in any active sports program.

According to Lt. Ralph Santaliz, the OIC of the 36th Engineer Group A and R office, "The current Army sports program is basically sound; however, it is deficient in satisfying the goal of sports for all. The most significant weakness is its lack of appeal to the men with little or no skill in sports.

"This lack of appeal is further intensified by the off duty character of intramural sports programs. The reason for this is that only the better athletes get a chance to play in intramural athletics."

The 36th Engineer Group is doing something about the problem with the implementation of REACH.

REACH stands for Recreation, Endurance, Agility, Coordination and Health. It is a program in which the unit engages in organized sports as one means of maintaining physical fitness.

According to Lt. Santaliz, "This program will be conducted during duty hours and should benefit physical conditioning and participation by all personnel. Team sports will receive primary emphasis, but not just the regular team sports. The men will learn all types of sports that they did not even know existed. They will be given instruction in some of the lesser known games.

"We want to REACH all individuals, especially those personnel who have not previously participated in sports. We will have classes on fundamental sports skills. The classes will be given by men who have already taken a seminar on the different team games which can be used."

The personnel who do not wish to play in the different games will be used as referees.

Lt. Santaliz and SFC Carl J. Holmes held a week long clinic with representatives of the different units in the 36th to help prepare them for jobs as unit REACH instructors. The men were taught everything from flickerball to speedball. They were given instruction in kickpin baseball and other, better-known sports such as golf and tennis.

These men are sports lovers and will take their job of incorporating REACH into their units seriously. They will be supplied equipment and everything necessary to make their programs successful.

524th Per. crew plans 236-mile canoe trip

Two cooks and nine clerks from the 524th Personnel Service Company of the 36th Engineer Group will be leaving Fort Benning Saturday morning, August 4, on a 236-mile canoe trip down the Chattahoochee River.

The Adventure Training trip will begin at seven o'clock Saturday morning at the boat landing by Eddy bridge, and hopefully will end where the Chattahoochee River flows into the Apalachicola River at the town of Apalachicola, Florida.

According to 1st Lt. Jim Key, Executive Officer of the 524th, "The men have done some extensive planning and preparation for the trip. They will be traveling in five canoes and hope to make 30 to 35 miles per day in order to accomplish their goal.

"To my knowledge no other group here at Fort Benning has completed the trip in canoes. Two other groups tried, but had to cut their trips short."

Armed with insect repellent, snake bite kits, flashlights, C-rations and their high spirits, the men will depart on their journey. As one man said, "We've prepared long and hard for the trip and I think we have a good chance to make it all the way."

Students register for band

Students in the 6th, 7th, and 8th grades interested in registering for the Band Program should contact Mr. Jim Evans at the Don C. Faith Junior High School beginning 14 August.

Beginning Band is being offered to all 6th, 7th, and 8th graders at each of the Fort Benning Dependents' Schools. Interested parents and students should call Mr. Evans at the Don C. Faith School (545-5594 or 545-2802) between 0600 and 1200 hours on 14 August to arrange for an appointment. Individual appointments for Beginning Band students accompanied by a parent will be scheduled to try out the various band instruments and to acquaint them further with the program.

Students with at least a year of experience in band should also call the morning of 14 August to schedule an audition for placement in the Advanced or Intermediate Bands at the Don C. Faith School.

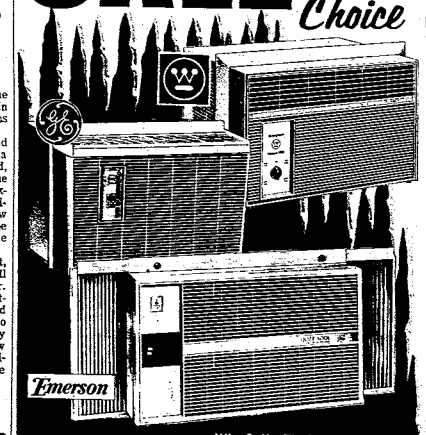
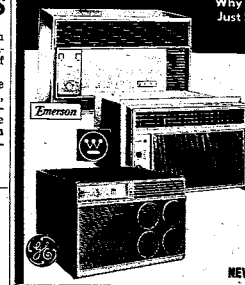
Husband and his wife assigned to Rangers

Stationing husbands and wives who are on active duty together is a promise the Army keeps whenever possible. In the case of Spc Olaf and PFC Deborah Thorson 2nd Ranger Co. TSB, stationing them together made Deborah one of the few women in Army history assigned to the Rangers as a permanent party member, and the first for the 2nd Rangers.

The 20-year old clerk-typist enlisted originally to become a chaplain's assistant. After graduating from basic training at Ft. McClellan, Ala., she attended clerk-typist school at Ft. Dix N. J. and Chaplians Asst. AIT at Ft. Hamilton, N.Y. From AIT she was sent to Ft. McNair Va. where she worked in the office in charge of the chaplains program at the Pentagon.

She and her husband live off post in Dahlonega Ga. "It's a little isolated, but nice," she says. She isn't nervous about working with the Rangers either, even though few women do. "I love it. The people are nice, and the country is beautiful."





She isn't positive yet, but she believes she will make the Army a career. "My husband just reenlisted for six more years, and I believe I might want to stay in. With the Army opening up so many new fields to women, opportunities are increasing all the time."

Water line in the plans

The First Platoon of Delta Company of the 43rd Engineer Battalion has been assigned the task of constructing a water line system for the Wash Rack at the Auto Craft Shop in the Battalion area. This new water line system will provide for an adequate, stabilized water supply and drainage system which will drain into the drainage ditch in the rear of the Craft Shop.

In conjunction with the water drainage system, power poles and light fixtures, which will improve security of the Battalion parking lots, will be relocated.

AQUARIST SOCIETY
Membership Drive

DO YOU . . .

1. like topical or marine fish?
2. have a goldfish in a bowl?
3. have an aquarium with fish?
4. have a backyard pool with fish?

Would you like to learn more about fish and how to care for them?

If you have answered yes to one question and are 16 years of age or older, living in the Columbus, Phenix City, Fort Benning area, you should be a member of the Chattahoochee Valley Aquarist Society (CVAS).

The CVAS is made up of amateur fish hobbyists who keep fish for enjoyment, show and even breeding. The objective of this organization is to further the study of all forms of aquatic life, to promote interest, exchange ideas and distribute information concerning the hobby, and to encourage the breeding and displaying of aquatic life. The CVAS is a nonprofit, educational organization.

Anyone interested in amateur ichthyology (the study of fish), or in any of its applied phases, may become a member of the club. Adult membership consists of those 16 years of age or older; Junior membership is for those under 16.

2-69th social activities

The ladies of the 2-69th Armor Battalion enjoyed their monthly coffee at the home of Mrs. Harold Thorn on Austin Loop July 12. Mrs. W. J. Edding, Jr., wife of the Battalion Commander, welcomed newcomers to the group: Mrs. Harry Irwin, Mrs. Billy Fowler and Mrs. Wayne Smith. The hostess' hospitality included assorted cakes, cookies, sweets and frozen daiquiries.

A backyard barbecue at the home of Maj. and Mrs. Harold Thorn provided the setting for the 2-69th Armor Battalion's Hail and Farewell party.

The evening of July 20, the officers and their ladies from the 1st Bn. 29th Inf. met at Shakey's Pizza Parlor. Company C, with Capt. Jack Petri, Commander, were hosts for the evening of pizzas and good ol' piano playing and lots of enjoyment.

The 50th Co. OC SWives had a coffee July 18 in the Dayroom of the 50th Co. The theme of the coffee was "Growing Together" and was presented by the wives of the 2nd Platoon, with the help of Mrs. Edward L. Grant, wife of the platoon's Tactical Officer.

The wives got an opportunity to tour the company barracks under the direction of 2nd Lt. Virgil D. Hooe, the company's Executive Officer. Lt. Hooe also gave a talk on the OC program.

RANGER DEPT. FAREWELL

Present and former officers, NCOs and wives, of the Patrolling Committee gathered at Shakey's Pizza Parlor, July 23, to say farewell to SFC Michael Ward and his wife Betty. SFC Ward is leaving for duty at West Point as NCOIC of Tactics Committee. As one of the most respected and admired members of the Committee, "Pop Ward" will truly be missed. Personal good wishes to them both.

DIO LUNCHEON

The ladies of DIO were entertained for lunch on July 20 at the home of Mrs. James Thomas, 1st Division Rd., Fort Benning.

During a brief business meeting, Mrs. Henry Hutcheson welcomed Mrs. Berry Henderson to the group and bid farewell to Mrs. Norbert Otto.

Special guests for the luncheon were Mrs. Robert Hall and Mrs. John Sagul.

197th Inf. Bde. Coffees

The ladies of HQs, 197th Inf. Bde, held their July coffee in the home of Mrs. Harold E. McClelland, Zuckerman Ave., Fort Benning.

Ladies attending their first unit coffee were warmly welcomed: Frankie Gillem, Susan Rivers, Marline Rosin, Judie Mayfield, Carolyn Hill, Jean Reehm, Jill Plat, Kathye Matalesri, Susan McClain, Joetta Foster, Sandy Matt, Donna Lushbough, and Billie Stewart.

Farewells for the evening were: Cheryl Plotner, Verdna Kelly, Ramona Short, Mary Goulet, and Dot Toombs.

Mrs. Robert Ariyoshi conducted discussions on suggestions or improvements for the commissary facilities and the availability of a slide show on the many facets of the OWC, for presentation at a future coffee.

* * *

The ladies of the 3d Bn., 7th Inf. held their monthly coffee on July 19 in the Normandy Room of the Fort Benning Officers' Club. Hostesses were Mrs. Ronald J. Smitherman and Mrs. James M. Davis. Theme of the coffee was "Creative Hats," with each lady wearing a hat she had designed.

Prizes went to Mrs. Charles Barnes for the funniest and to Mrs. Arthur L. Bradshaw Jr. for the prettiest hat.

A short talk on "Courtesy to the Flag" and "Reviews and Parades" was given by Mrs. Robert B. James. Food items donated by the ladies, for the ACS Food Locker were collected.

Welcomed to the battalion were Mrs. Barnes, Mrs. Joe T. Hatfield Jr., and Mrs. Jimmy Arnold. The ladies bid a fond farewell to Mrs. Douglas H. Snell, wife of the former Bn. Executive Officer.

The next battalion coffee will be at The Talent Tree (in the Thrift Shop complex) at 2:15 p.m. on Aug. 16.

TSB ACTIVITIES

On July 19, the ladies of the 1st Bn. 29th Inf. met in the Columbus home of Mrs. Jack Petri, for a mid-day snack.

All of the Pioneer ladies extended a big welcome to Mrs. Charles Horner, a newcomer to the battalion.

Different foods were collected for the ACS Food Locker, and the ideas were shared on crafts that might be used in the Christmas Bazaar.

Golden Heritage Cookbook debut

By Judy Jakubowski

A presentation coffee at the Fort Benning Officers' Club was the scene of the "Golden Heritage" Cookbook debut, Aug. 27. The cookbook commemorates the 50th Anniversary of the OWC of Fort Benning and "reflects the proud traditions and historical significance of our organization (OWC) and its home."

Mrs. Thomas M. Tarpley and Mrs. William R. Richardson were presented with complimentary copies of the cookbook by Mrs. Bill May (OWC president 1972-73) as was Sara Spano, Columbus Ledger-Enquirer Food Editor.

But this was really the cookbook committee's day. Under the direction of Mrs. Richard B. Stoltz, editor of the cookbook, they worked diligently for one year to put "this treasury of favorite recipes" together so beautifully. They have reason to celebrate.

The committee members: Mrs. Jack C. Conn, Mrs. Frank L. Garrison, Mrs. Donald J. Shannon, Mrs. Jeffrey A. Boynton, Mrs. Robert M. Grow, Mrs. Marshall R. McRee, and Mrs. Duane G. Cameron were all honored with complimentary copies of the "Golden Heritage." Special "Thanks!" from Mrs. Stoltz went to her associate editor, Mrs. G. Norman Batten: Mrs. John A. Maske, typist; artists Allison Christie and Capt. James R. Siket, for the inside historical drawings and the rendering of Riverside on the cover, respectfully. Also honored at the coffee were Mrs. Thomas P. Ross, art consultant; Mrs. Robert D. Hampton for the historical text within the "Golden Heritage"; Mrs. William J. MacPherson Jr., for the special text on spices; and Maj. Robert D. Yearout, wine consultant.

Mrs. May and Mrs. Arthur Richards, present OWC president, also received copies of the cookbook.

If you were unable to attend the Presentation Coffee to purchase your copy of the "Golden Heritage" Cookbook, be sure to stop by the Book Store of The Talent Tree, where they will be sold for $4.50.

You may order them by sending a check, or money order, for $5 (includes postage and handling) payable to the OWC, for each copy to:

"GOLDEN HERITAGE" COOKBOOK, Officers' Wives' Club, P. O. Box 1978, Fort Benning, Ga. 31905.

All proceeds from the sale of the cookbook benefit the OWC Welfare Fund.

58th Inf. ladies hold July coffee in Officer's Club

The ladies of the 1st Bn. (Mech). 58th Inf. held their July coffee in the Corregidor Room at the Main Officers Club. Hostesses for the event were Mrs. Jerry Faust and Mrs. Bill Strong.

Mrs. Robert Orkand introduced special guests, Mrs. Chastain, mother of Mrs. Don Tilton and Col. and Mrs. William B. Steele.

Four new members were welcomed into the Battalion: Mrs. Lawrence Wilkerson, Mrs. Robert Walsh, Mrs. Robert Banning, and Mrs. Michael Ward. A special hello was given to Mrs. James Nappier as this was her first coffee.

Following a discussion on new business and upcoming events, Mrs. Orkand introduced Col. William B. Steele, Brigade Commander, who spoke to us on "Mission STRAF" and the vital roles our husbands will play. His presentation was most informative and very interesting to all the ladies.

The raffle was held and Mrs. Bill Diehl won a decorative plaque and Mrs. Michael Ward won a necklace.

After the program everyone enjoyed refreshments consisting of lime sherbert punch, an assortment of summer fruits, pastries, and coffee.

Hostesses for the August coffee will be Mrs. Larry Pogue and Mrs. Rafael De Jesus.

A unique coffee at the Talent Tree brought together the wives of the 2nd Bn., 19th F.A. on July 17. Mrs. Jerry Nowels and Mrs. Richard Bray were the co-hostesses for the evening function.

Mrs. Robert Veen, wife of the departing battalion executive officer, introduced four new ladies to the group, Mrs. Richard Noack, wife of the new executive officer, Mrs. James Smith, Mrs. Bob Kromer and Mrs. John Griffin all were welcomed. Farewells were said to Mrs. Veen, Mrs. James Pongonis, Mrs. Wayne Smoot and Mrs. Allan Baldwin, with Mrs. Curtis Hoglan, wife of the battalion commander, presenting each of these ladies with gifts to remind them of their stay in the battalion.

At the coffee, non-perishable food was collected for the ACS food locker. The proposed battalion project for the OWC Christmas bazaar was also discussed. And Mrs. Larry Aaron explained to the group the materials which would be needed to make a macrame plant hanger, a project to be undertaken at the next coffee.

Finally, Mrs. Thomas Ross, who is on the art board at the Talent Tree gave a short talk and answered questions about Fort Benning's exclusive handicraft shop, and the ladies were given the opportunity to purchase items in the shop.

The ladies of the 3d Bn. 7th Inf. attended a Farewell Brunch on July 11 in honor of Mrs. Douglas H. Snell, wife of Lt. Col. Snell, departing Bn. Executive Officer. The brunch was given by Mrs. Charles O. Arnecke Jr., wife of the Bn. Commander, at her home on Yeager Avenue.

Mrs. Snell was presented with a book from Mrs. Arnecke and a lovely fresh flower arrangement from all the ladies of the Bn., in grateful appreciation for her innumerable contributions to the Bn. members and their families. It was a lovely affair to honor a lady who has done so much for so many.

TSB

The OCS wives of the 50th Company, 5th Student Battalion, had their first coffee, July 12.

Honored guests at the coffee were Lt. Col. and Mrs. Gordon M. Hunt and Chaplin and Mrs. Calvin C. Sydnor.

Lt. Col. Hunt presented an orientation program with slides for the wives. Chaplin Sydnor acquainted the wives with the different religious activities on base.

The OCS Wives' Club business meeting was held afterward, and included the election of officers: Chairman — Mrs. Michael Maher; Co-chairman — Mrs. John McPhillips Treasurer — Mrs. Jane Warren; Publicity — Mrs. Leith Wyman; and Hospitality —. Mrs. David Basham.

Ladies wreck credit

The School Brigade Ladies Softball team won one game last week with their strong hitting, but lost another game with a weak defense.

TSB routed Columbus Credit on July 24, 23-8, in a rain-shortened five inning contest. TSB scored 5 runs in the first inning and 9 in the second to put the game out of Columbus Credit's reach.

TSB pounded out 14 hits in the conest, including a triple by Eddie Acord, which was the big blow of the game. Dot Dowdell drove in five runs with a double and a single.

In their next game against the Dawson ladies team TSB scored the runs, but their defense collapsed. Dawson scored 9 runs in the first inning and held on for a 23-15 win. Eddie Acord drove in 4 runs on two hits, and Tammy Thompson blasted a two run homer in the fifth inning. TSB now carries a 5-2 record for games played in the second half of the season.

Army Nursing Service plans parent classes

Pregnancy and childbirth are normal, natural happenings. It is believed that through a thorough program of education, the expectant father and mother can be prepared both physically and emotionally to make childbirth and parenthood a satisfying and rewarding experience.

The Army Health Nursing Service, in conjunction with the Obstetrics Department, Martin Army Hospital, is beginning another series of Expectant Parents' Classes on August 7, 1973. The series consists of four classes, each two hours long, on Tuesday nights of each month. Classes are held in the conference room on the second floor of Martin Army Hospital.

The sessions improve your knowledge of pregnancy, childbirth, and newborn babies. Movies, slides, short talks and discussion groups help to explain the physical structure of the male and female, reproduction, body changes, signs of labor and infant care.

The first class includes prenatal care, psychological aspects of parenthood, and exercises. The second class is Martin Army Hospital procedures and a tour of Labor and Delivery, the third is labor and delivery, and the fourth is infant care, with a special session on breast feeding. It is best to start with the first class in the series and continue with the same group; however, if you should miss one class, you can make it up in the next series.

Particular care is taken to make each expectant mother and father aware of forthcoming events. Fear and uncertainty are results of meeting the unexpected. For assurance and knowledge, you are encouraged to attend a series of Expectant Parents' Classes during your pregnancy. The Obstetrician, Pediatrician, Pediatric and Obstetric Nurse Clinician, Physical Therapist, Head Nurse, Obstetrical Ward and the Army Health Nurse all participate in the series. It is an excellent opportunity to ask questions.

Because of limited space, you are asked to pre-register for these classes by calling the Army Health Nursing Service, 545-5431, Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. - 5 p.m.

Photographer needed for trip

C Company (Ranger) 75th Infantry is looking for a photographer who would like to take an inexpensive vacation traveling down the Chattahoochee River.

The company has lined up 17 Rangers and a medic who will shove off in canoes at 9 a.m. tomorrow morning for a five day trip to Eglin Air Force Base, Fla.

The photographer will be expected to take pictures of interesting happenings and keep notes that can be used as the basis for a story when the trip has been completed.

Anyone interested should contact Sgt. Brinker, Company C at 545-6017 or 565-6484.

Time to plan for your fall garden now

In our climate it is possible to produce at least two vegetable crops a year on the same ground. Practice has centered around planting a spring garden and a fall garden. Thus, in midsummer while you are still eating produce from the spring-planted garden, it is nevertheless time to plan and prepare for the fall garden. The fall garden is designed to mature vegetables in the fall and on into winter in some cases.

The truth is, fewer peple are enthusiastic about a fall garden. In spring the excitement of renewing your contact with the soil is irresistible. But during the doldrums of summer, when you're in the middle of gathering tomatoes, shelling butterbeans, and spraying Japanese beetles on the okra, who cares about creating more work for the fall?

But those who don't plant again seem to be a bit wistful and regretful in the fall to see their friends still shelling butterbeans while they are shelling out dollars for beans at the supermarket.

Everything for the fall garden is not planted on one set date. Planting may be governed by maturity dates, the weather, or availability of plants. Thus, some gardeners planted their fall corn patch in mid-July, although early varieties could be planted later.

As for the weather, its usually best not to deplore during a dry spell, but to get out and get new rows cleared and prepared. Once a rainy spell starts, you see unable to work the soil and may be delayed two weeks while the weeks continue to grow.

Availability of plants may also not be as likely as in th past, so buy your shallots, onion sets, and collard plant when you see them on the market. These can be set out any time now.

Fall rutabags were planted in July in some cases, and can still be planted. Regular turnips can provide both greens and turnips. If August is hot and dry you may as well plant these later in the month. The same can be said for mustard and carrots. Radishes, lettuce and spinach are other cool season crops that you may delay until early September can be planted in an irrigated garden that will respond earlier than in a non-irrigated one. There have been no tomato plants available to speak of for the fall garden. Any plants set now should be of an early maturing variber, unless you have made successful plantings of them earlier under your conditions.

Dollar shortage hits American GIs

By BILL GRISWOLD

It still beats Vietnam, but Europe is not what is used to be for American servicemen.

In the good old days when the U. S. economy was strong and the dollar was king, a tour in Germany was considered a glamorous assignment, but no more.

American soldiers who have returned from Germany in recent months are telling a new kind of war story, stories of the battle to make ends meet in an economy made hostile by the devalued dollar.

Maj. Ben Legare, who came to Fort Benning May 27 from Germany, relates a typical example.

"I purchased a Volkswagen when I got there for about $2,500," he said. "The dollar was worth about 3.80 Deutschmarks then and it was a good deal.

"When I left a few weeks ago, the dollar was worth less than 2.80 marks. The same car would cost $700 more over there now."

For Maj. Legare, a career officer who lived in government housing, the auto purchasing was a luxury, an incidental bargain.

For many other soldiers, the dollar devaluation is much more serious.

"It hits worst at the noncommand - sponsored guys, that is, short-term enlisted men who can't get government housing and have to live on the economy if they bring their wives and families over," Legare said.

"These guys have to pay rent in marks, of course, and as the dollar drops, their rents have just skyrocketed."

Another obvious effect of the devaluation, Legare said, is that it costs more to eat out in German restaurants.

"We used to be able to take our family of four out to a local 'gasthaus' for a good meal for about $6. Now you can't take a family of four out for less than $10 or $12," he observed. "So now almost nobody goes out to eat."

Other less obvious effects, according to Legare, are a reduction of goods and services available in government commissaries and stores.

At the post where he was stationed, Legare said, officers have been asked not to use the quartermaster's laundry. The laundry workers were paid in marks, he said, and their wage levels went up as the dollar dropped, so many had to be dismissed and the laundry service was slowed down.

American soldiers in Germany are coping with what amounts to a loss of income in a variety of ways, the major said.

"I know some of the enlisted men were contemplating sending their wives and kids home," he said. "There was a tremendous increase in the number of people who ate in the officers' clubs instead of in town."

Americans also have stopped going to German service stations to buy gas and there has been a decline in the number of servicemen who are buying automobiles in Europe.

"Why should they buy one there when they can come back home and buy an American car with more power and more comfort for less money?" he asked.

Legare speculated that the dollar devaluation could have a good effect on the U. S. balance of payments with European nations.

The flow of dollars to European nations should be reduced, he said, since American soldiers no longer can afford to spend their money abroad.

Miss Fort Benning, Kit Smothers says, "Hi," to all the guys in the Avn. Cmd.

Saving gas during the shortage

HQ, TRADOC, Ft. Monroe, Va. — Anyone who owns or operates an automobile has been struck with the stark reality of the energy crisis. Military personnel, like their civilian counterparts are feeling the pinch of less available fuel, and less time in which to get it.

According to a survey giving an overview of the ground fuel situation, matters may even get worse. The Defense Fuel Supply Center (DFSC), the central procurement agency, estimates that contract prices will increase about 40 per cent over last fiscal year's level. Also the ground fuel contracts for the installations include price escalation clauses so that the supplier can pass on price increases paid for crude oil or wholesale products.

Another channel of procurement shows that local purchases of petroleum, oils and lubricants (POL) promise to be more difficult to make and the prices paid were not much greater than contractual prices.

As a result of the higher costs, the Department of Army has directed the major commands to reduce the present fiscal year's fuel consumption at least 10 per cent below last year's. When compared with the projection for this year Training and Doctrine Command (TRADOC) installations will receive roughly 16 per cent less fuel for ground vehicles.

To counter the fuel shortage and increasing costs, conservation measures must be taken. Here are some gas-saving tips for drivers of military vehicles that could also be adapted to privately-owned vehicles:

— Warm up engine before driving — cold engines use more fuel
— Avoid "jackrabbit" starts — They eat up gas
— Drive as steady a speed as possible.
— Avoid congested traffic if possible
— Reduce speed in highway driving
— Combine trips for administrative-housekeeping functions
— Keep tires properly inflated
— Don't overuse air conditioners
— Check gasoline mileage periodically
— Keep engine properly tuned

TRADOC will also experience a shortfall in jet fuel because of the 10 per cent reduction. This could mean a cutback in combat readiness flying. One measure to counter this reduction would be close control of training schedules and flying hours for minimum fuel consumption.

Until the total energy crisis eases, fuel conservation on land and in the air will be important to the soldier and the Army.

Band radio operator

1st Lt. Jaque Davison, a 1st Platoon section leader with the 121st Avn. Co. (AH), 145th Avn. Bn. (CBT) has found an interesting hobby to occupy his spare time. A licensed citizen band radio operator, Davison operates both a base station and a mobile unit. His base station is a Johnson 223 transceiver with a ground plain antenna. The mobile station is a Robyn XL-1, with two fiberglass quarter-wave antennae, bumper mounted and cophased, an arrangement that gives the greatest range in the direction the car is facing.

Although he usually monitors channel 14, the primary channel of the Fort Benning Citizen Band Club, he also monitors the emergency channel when necessary. Davison has found his CB set useful for reporting traffic accidents and for calling assistance for other emergencies. During the snow storm that blanketed Columbus last winter, Davison and the other CBers served as relay stations and monitored the emergency frequeny, greatly assisting emergency operations.

Davison's interest in CB was aroused about 12 months ago. Most of his knowledge of radio communications has been self-taught, or learned from other CB operators. He is now fully capable of performing maintenance on and trouble shooting his equipment.

Lieutenant Davison operates with the call sign KEV 4794 under an FCC class D license. He is currently working on gaining his HAM operation license.

VD..IS DEADLIER!

America's Epidemic Explosion . . .

Venereal Disease

By John Bailey

VD is running out of control. Every 15 seconds, someone in this country contracts venereal disease. Venereal diseases are America's number one enemies among diseases that can be passed from person to person. It is strange that at present we have more knowledge to prevent, treat and cure VD than ever before and yet VD in this country has exploded into an epidemic.

Your reaction to all this might be—"SO WHAT IF I GET VD. It is no worse than having a cold. I'll just lay off for a while until it goes away." Actually VD can cause you more trouble than you imagine. Gonorrhea, the most common of the venereal diseases (sometimes known as "clap," "strain," "dose," "drip") can result in blindness, sterility, arthritis, heart disease and even death if untreated. The other common venereal disease is syphilis, sometimes called "pox," "siff," "bad blood." Syphilis has been responsible for millions of the world's crippled, blind, insane and dead. Today VD is spreading most rapidly among young people ages 15-25, although it can occur at any age. WHO CAN GET VD? Anyone engaging in close body contact with an infected person. You ask "WHAT CAN I DO ABOUT VD?" Learn the facts, be aware of its symptoms and help educate others about VD dangers.

First of all lets clear up some common myths about VD. MYTH: You can get a quick, easy guaranteed cure for VD from a drug store or a friend.

FACT: VD can be cured only by medicines so strong that they must be prescribed by a physician. And you must take all the medicine. If you give half your pills to a friend so he won't have to visit the doctor, neither you nor your friend will be cured.

MYTH: Gonorrhea can turn into syphilis.

FACT: These are separate diseases caused by different kinds of germs. While one doesn't turn into the other, you can catch both diseases at the same time. And even though you are treated and cured, you can catch VD over and over again, as many times as you are exposed to an infected person.

MYTH: I am safe if I have sexual relations with a person who looks healthy.

FACT: The germs that cause VD can be dangerously active without causing visible signs or symptoms. This means you can contract VD from someone who looks healthy or free of disease. Or you may have the disease yourself and not notice any ill effects. It is possible for an infected person to transmit VD for many years.

MYTH: You can catch VD from toilet seats, or from lifting heavy objects.

FACT: The germs that cause VD die when exposed to air. So sexual contact accounts for virtually all VD. Syphilis can also spread by transfusions of infected blood or contaminated hypodermic needles. Mothers can pass venereal disease on to their babies.

MYTH: Venereal disease when the chancre (the sore where the syphilis germs enter the body) disappears or when the drip or discharge stops.

FACT: It is the natural course of the disease for these signs to disappear even without treatment. But you are kidding yourself if you think the disease is cured and you "lucked out." The germs have just gone underground and are still being carried by the blood stream to all parts of the body, ready to cause worse damage later on.

MYTH: You can get VD only from someone of the opposite sex.

FACT: VD can be passed through relation between two men or between two women. The rate of VD infection among homosexuals is increasing.

MYTH: It's a demonstration of manhood to get VD; it shows that you have guts or courage not to seek treatment.

FACT: The only thing a person who gets VD is demonstrating is his ignorance and he is being utterly stupid to think that it will go away by itself and not hurt him.

MYTH: Only "bad" guys get VD

FACT: VD is no respector of race, rank or social class. Whites, blacks, officers, enlisted men, the wealthy and peasants—anyone who has sexual contact—can get venereal disease.

MYTH: "The pill" or IUD prevent VD transmission

FACT: These things will prevent pregnacy but they do not prevent VD transmission. For a number of reasons they actually increase the possibility of getting VD.

MYTH: Most VD is contacted from prostitutes.

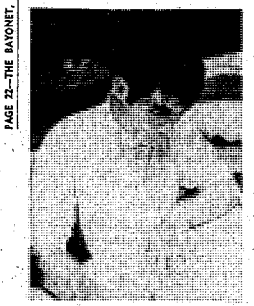
FACT: At Fort Benning more VD is reported as being picked up from friends, or acquaintances than being contacted from prostitues.

HOW CAN YOU PREVENT YOURSELF FROM GETTING VD? Although you're not apt to change your sex habits, you can be more careful. The best preventive is the condom often called "rubbers" or "skins." Washing sexual organs after contact and urinating as soon as possible after intercourse might help a little but is not guaranteed protection.

SUPPOSE YOU HAVE BEEN EXPOSED TO VD. HOW WILL YOU KNOW IF YOU HAVE IT? The usual signs of gonorrhea are a discharge from the penis of a thick white or yellow material or a painful burning sensation when you urinate and a feeling of frequent need to urinate. Men will develop these symptoms more often than women. Up to 80% of women who have gonorrhea may not be aware of it.

The first signs of syphilis in either sex is a sore called a chancre which looks like an ulcer, or pimple or a blister. It is not painful and usually occurs 10 or 90 days after infection at the site where the germs enter the body. Most often the chancre is located on the sexual organs but may occur in the mouth or lips. Later signs of syphilis are rashes, fever, sore throat, bad headaches.

It is impossible to diagnose VD yourself because these signs are similar to those caused by other diseases. The only safe thing to do is use common sense by being suspicious of VD if you think you have been exposed. Then go to a doctor or clinic and find out for sure. It is highly dangerous to besitate or put off altogether finding out.



IF YOU SUSPECT YOU HAVE VD, WHAT SHOULD YOU DO ABOUT IT? Seek medical treatment immediately. And tell your doctor that you suspect you have VD. A special VD Clinic is located at the Martin Hospital Annex, Building 396 and is open weekdays from 8:00 a.m. to 11:00 a.m. for active duty personnel and from 1:00 p.m. to 4:00 p.m. to dependents. This is a walk-in clinic and no appointment is necessary.

Minors can be treated by their doctors without their parent's knowledge or permission.

If you do have VD, you will receive prompt and effective treatment. In the meantime, don't expose others. And when you go for treatment, inform the doctor about those you have had sexual contact with so they can get effective treatment too. This information is held in strict confidence. Your name is not mentioned as a referral source. The important thing for you to understand is that all venereal diseases can be effectively treated if treatment is begun soon enough. But don't forget that VD, if not treated, can cause damage that can never be repaired.

Sp5 handles set for Dramatizers

E. Linton Gross III ponders set design

The theater lights dim, the audience settles in its seats, the stage hums with activity, the sound begins and the lights shine. This is the theater, this is the life on stage.

Everyone knows that a play demands actors and actresses; however, few people understand the importance of the set. Sp5 E. Linton Gross III is the set designer for the next Dramatizers production, "The Mouse That Roared."

Gross recently explained the first step in designing a set. "The play must be thoroughly read and understood. The initial reading is for general impression. Then each scene is re-read to determine its peculiarities and needs. The first decision is whether or not the show can be done in one set with different lighting to denote different locations. That sort of design and technique was used in our 1972 Third U. S. Army Tournament of Plays entry, "Edwin Booth."

The decision to have more than one set requires that numerous elements be considered. "Ideally," comments Gross, "a set change should take no longer than fifteen seconds. Changes are made in the dark, of course, so as not to detract from the play's theme."

There will be eight separate scenes with a total of fourteen changes for the current production. In order to solve the difficulty of such an undertaking, Gross will employ "a series of revolving platforms and wagons with pieces of suggestive scenery to be rolled into position by the stage crew."

"The beauty of the live theater compared to the television and movie industry is that the theater permits the audience to become mentally involved with the set. Their imagination takes the suggestive scenery and transforms it into a totally believable and acceptable setting. In this way, each person is individually affected by the theater's design and his own."

Are sets designed differently for dramas and comedies? "Definitely," said Gross. "In a comedy like 'Mouse' the very mood of the play is reflected by the sets. If it were a drama the colors, for example, would be less colorful and bright and more somber. The color combination must be coordinated with both the costume designer and the lighting designer. You can see that all factors must be interrelated to produce an effective production."

What about the person who wants to work on set, yet doesn't have the background? "One of the great things about the Dramatizers and our productions is that every play is a learning experience for the old hand and the novice.

"The Mouse That Roared" will be presented on August 17, 18, 22, 24 and 25 at the Fort Benning Playhouse, Bldg. 1237, located behind the Infantry Museum. The tickets are free to military, dependents and civilians, and may be picked up at the Playhouse. For further information, call 545-5057.

(PG) Burt Lancaster is an ace CIA man who wants out of the spy game. The problem is his superiors think, considering the Top Secret knowledge he has stored, the only way, he should be let out is feet first.

Wattstax

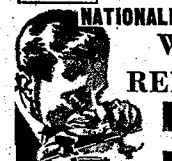
(R) Depicting the Black American experience music, "WATTSTAX" is based on a seven-hour concert in the Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum attended by more than 100,000. The concert performances of songs from gospel, to pop, to jazz takes its audiences through 300 years in history, demonstrating the vitality of a people who have created a rich culture out of the leftovers of a nation and transformed it into power. For those who appreciate soul music, WATTSTAX is a soulful expression of the living world.

Play Misty for me

(R) Disc jockey, Clint Eastwood, receives telephone requests while on the air. One feminine voice constantly asked that he "Play 'Misty' for me." The girl is Jessica Walter.

Sometimes later, Eastwood awakes in his bedroom to the music of "Misty" being played on his phonograph, just in time to avoid being stabbed by a crazed Jessica who escapes.

The Creeping Flesh



(PG) Three years after returning to London from New Guinea with the skeleton of a primitive man, scientist Peter Cushing is in need of help. He believes that the cause of evil in a human being can be cured by a serum derived from the blood of an evil person. The serum enables flesh to grow over the huge skeleton which comes to life. Returning to Cushing, THE CREEPING FLESH rises from the dead.

Chato's Land

(PG) Taunted by the white sheriff of Arillo, New Mexico, Chato (Charles Bronson) kills him. Jack Palance, the town's saloon keeper and a former Confederate soldier, organizes a posse to track Bronson down. The posse captures and rapes Bronson's Apache wife. Chato sets her free and painstakingly kills off the evildoers one by one.

VA develops 144,000 new jobs

Some 144,000 new job opportunities for veterans have been developed by the Veterans Administration through a cooperative program with private business firms across the country. An estimated 59,000 openings will be developed this fiscal year alone, VA has reported.

Under the agency's job-training "outreach" program, started in July 1971, VA specialists visit employers to suggest that qualified veterans be placed in training "slots" to develop skills tailored to their needs.

VA pays the trainees G.I. Bill benefits starting at $160 monthly for single veterans, with higher rates for those with dependents. Employers must start trainees with at least one-half the monthly wage the veteran will earn when he completes training. The training period normally lasts from six months to two years.

As the training progresses, VA decreases the veteran's allowance every six months, while the employer increases his salary on a regular schedule. By the last full month of training, the employer must pay at least 35 per cent of the wage of the job for which he is training.

It is estimated that 340,000 veterans have participated in on-job training programs under the current G.I. Bill since the program was initiated in 1967.

During May 114,000 veterans were in training.

Col. William B. Steele, commander of the 197th Infantry Brigade, presented medals to three members of the Brigade's Headquarters and Headquarters Company at an awards ceremony and review on Essebagger Field July 30.

He pinned the Meritorious Service Medal (second award) on Maj. James T. Short, the Brigade S-3.

The commander also presented the Meritorious Service Medal to Sgt. Maj. Floyd Collins and the Army Commendation Medal to SSgt. Bobby J. Phillips.

The awards ceremony and review was wholly planned by non-commissioned officers of the 197th Infantry Brigade.

The Brigade's soldiers, garbed in fatigue uniforms, also wore combat field equipment and carried M-16 rifles during the afternoon's activities. They marched in a pass-in-review for the final part of the observance.

Some mess halls go all out to feed their patrons well

BY RICK WASSER

One of the most important operations in any Army unit is the mess hall, or dining facility. Yet it is often taken for granted and goes virtually unnoticed in the eyes of those who pass out the "attaboys" in the command.

The 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry (PIONEERS), has a primary mission of providing troops and equipment in support of the United States Army Infantry School (USAIS). The PIONEER battalion has earned a reputation of doing an outstanding job in accomplishing its mission since it was organized in March 1973. But all of the missions that are accomplished daily, and all of the glory that is bestowed upon the troops and their commanders could not be possible without the superb performance of the Co. A (Mech), 1st Bn, 29th Inf. mess hall.

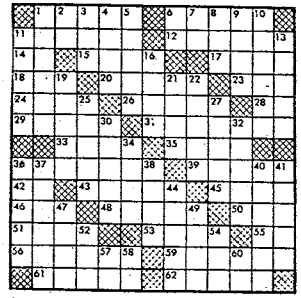
In order for a soldier to perform to his maximum capability, it is generally accepted that he should be happy. And everyone knows that the best way to get a man to do anything is to feed him well, so he will be happy. This is obviously the premise that the Co. A dining facility operates on, because the soldiers in the PIONEER battalion are very happy about the food and service they receive.

The Co. A dining facility is one of two facilities in the battalion, but it feeds more soldiers than the other facility, and in fact, more soldiers per capita than most dining facilities anywhere. Though initially set up as a 140 man capacity mess hall, the Co. A facility feeds an average of 225 men per day at the noon meal alone. This includes soldiers and officers from seven different companies, three of which are from the neighboring 197th Support Bn.

A quick analysis of the figures above might lead one to conclude that the performance of the dining facility isn't up to par.

This simply isn't true, though. Both the quality and quantity of the food are as fine as any Army dining facility anywhere could boast. Even more important, however, is the attitude of both the military and civilian employes in the Co. A facility. Each of them is faced with the task of feeding a vast amount of soldiers in a relatively short period of time every day. Yet their devotion to duty and impeccable appearance defies belief.

Dining facility manager SFC Clifton Edwards credits their outstanding attitudes to the spirit that is generated throughout the PIONEER battalion as a whole. "Everyone is aware of the job that everyone else is doing, and we all want to contribute as much as we can to help out the other guy," a spokesman for the dining facility said.



Certainly an important contribution to the Co. A dining facility in recent months has been the addition of SFC Benjamin Ross to the PIONEER Battalion as battalion food advisor.

SFC Ross comes from The School Brigade with a record of outstanding service as a food advisor. Since arriving at the 1-29th, SFC Ross has made it a point to scrutinize personally every detail about the Co. A mess hall, and what little improvement it needed has been taken care of.

It was only a year ago, that a 197th Inf. Bde. dining facility was runner-up in the 4th Annual Phillip A. Conely Award for food excellence. HHC, 197th Inf. Bde. dining facility was the recipient of the award last year but has since then dropped its standards of food excellence.

With the experience of men such as SFC Ross working with the Co. A dining facility, and the esprit de corps generated throughout the entire battalion, coupled with the fact that there are some really good cooks who really care about what they are doing, it would be no surprise if the Co. A dining facility is high up in the competition for best dining facility in the world this year.

Quick thinking saves Benning soldier's life

One of the first things the Army teaches a soldier in Basic Training is first aid and the value of a comrade's life, on or off the battlefield.

Both Lt. Lynn S. Hansen, of 27th Co., 2nd Stu. Bn., TSB, and Sp-5 Tyauan Renfroe learned their lesson well, and were called upon to prove one Saturday while swimming at the Cross Keys Apartments in Columbus, Georgia.

At 10:30 p.m., Sp-5 Renfroe noticed a dog standing by the side of the pool, barking at the water. He looked to see why the dog was barking and saw SSg. William Warren, lying on the bottom of the pool in eight feet of water.

Specialist Renfroe dove into the pool and pulled him out. Warren's pulse, heartbeat, and breathing had stopped.

Immediately Lt. Hansen began giving mouth-to-mouth resuscitation to the victim. Nancy Hein, a nurse who lives in the apartments, arrived to assist shortly after. She took over Lt. Hansen's place while he administered cardiac massages.

All three alternated giving Ssg. Warren first aid until the Columbus Rescue Squad arrived, at which time the victims' breathing and heartbeat had been restored.
