Microfiche readers that can be used to review the files are available at most units and supporting military personnel offices (MILPO). Discrepancies are to be reported to the local MILPOs. However, soldiers should be aware that recently submitted authorized documents may not appear yet on the fiche. Documents not submitted recently but missing from the fiche OMPF will be forwarded through the servicing MILPO to EREC for enlisted records, to MILPERCEN for officer records — for addition to the OMPF.

The mailed copy of the OMPF will belong to the soldier and should be retained for later reference even if discrepancies exist. The master OMPF is maintained at MILPERCEN-EREC and is the one that will be corrected or updated as appropriate.

Rogers orders property, accountability overhaul

Changes in the property accountability system and further study into Army supply problems were ordered last week by Army Chief of Staff Gen. Bernard Rogers as a result of a four-month long inspection and audit that began in April.

The inspection by the Army Inspector General, which included 118 company-size units, revealed an Army-wide inventory of $12.5 billion, if the inspected units are accurate representatives of all Army units. Army-wide shortages for clothing, equipment and tools is estimated at $118.5 million.

In a related effort, the Army Audit Agency collected and evaluated one year's worth of financial and property records from 15 CONUS installations and four division-size units overseas. The agency reported discrepancies of $117 million, $2.7 million of which the Army could establish responsibility.

The reports cite several reasons for inventory and records contradictions, and call for increased involvement and training at all levels in the system; improved security; simplifying the system, policies, methods and publications; and improving management. Some losses were attributed to operational losses, missing parts, use of improper procedures, theft and negligence.

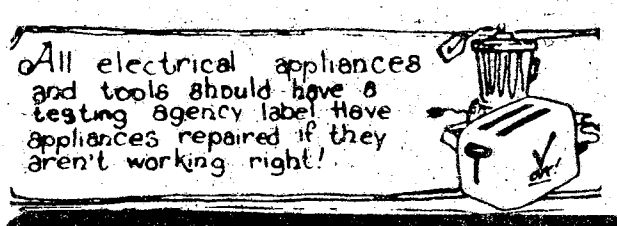
In addition to some units falling short of property inventories, an estimated $89 million of excess property turned up in the inspection.

Wash-and Wear just that

Wash-and-Wear uniforms are exactly that . . . wash-and-wear. Don't send those items to commercial laundries (PX included) to be starched or pressed. The material doesn't take starch well and excessive heat from commercial steam pressers breaks down resin in the fabric. Wash-and-Wear uniforms should be laundered at home using the permanent-press cycle for both washing and drying. They should be removed from the dryer immediately after the cycle and placed on clothes hangers. If any touch-up is needed, use a cool iron.

Re-up bonus regs change

Enlisted soldiers who voluntarily fail to complete service obligations or who are not technically qualified to remain in an MOS will forfeit a percentage of their enlistment bonuses, according to a new policy change governing enlistment and reenlistment bonuses.



Written agreements which specify service obligations for those who receive bonuses will also be required, beginning October 27.

Misconduct or failure to maintain proficiency in an MOS is also grounds for soldiers to refund the percentage of a bonus for the time they do not serve or have no longer qualified in an MOS.

Disqualification in an MOS is determined when a soldier is no longer being classified in the MOS for which he received a bonus, refuses to perform MOS duties, receives disciplinary action which bars working in that MOS, or sustains injury or illness as a result of misconduct or loses a MOS-required security clearance because of the soldier's misconduct or fault.

Exemptions under the new policy are reassignment to other duties as a result of compassionate reassignment, reclassification, loss of security clearance when the soldier is not at fault, injury or illness not as a result of misconduct, pregnancy (whether the soldier remains on duty or elects to leave the Army), and failure to attain a higher MOS technical qualification.

These new policies will be spelled out in the written agreement, which is also required by the change to Chapter 9, AR 600-200.

'The Army Wife' presented thru song, prose

Much has been said, but little written, about the role of the Army Wife in the history of a country. She has stood beside her husband in the course of history . . . many times fighting side by side with him for her life. Women's Lib is nothing new to her. She has been "liberated" for thousands of years . . . raising a family alone; worrying about survival, alone; moving across a continent, alone; and enduring, alone, the inevitable waiting that is a big part of her lifestyle. She has been kidnapped, ransomed off for cattle or horses by her captors and put in harems. She has dined with royalty, but more often, dined alone . . . waiting for her husband to return.

A presentation through song and narration protraying the role of the Army Wife will be given by Ellen Buckner, soprano soloist, in Marshall Auditorium, Bldg. 4, on November 10 at 8 p.m.

Mrs. Buckner attended the University of Eastern New Mexico where she received her bachelors and masters degrees in Applied Music. During her studies she sang professionally in the Dallas Summer Musicals and was a featured soloist in oratoriol and recitals throughout the Southwest.

As an Army Wife, moving around the world has afforded Mrs. Buckner many opportunities for utilizing her musical abilities in communicating with people in foreign lands as well as the civilian communities in the States. She has organized and directed many military/civilian choruses, women's choruses and variety shows. She has given joint recitals with other professional singers of different nationalities and introduced music of unknown American composers to audiences all over Western Europe. A member of the National Association of Teachers of Singing, she has been a faculty member of Montgomery College, Rockville, Md., and Fayetteville Technical Institute, Fayetteville, N.C.

Variations of "The Army Wife" have been presented several times over the past two years at Army and Air Force installations and at the State Department in Washington, D.C. with numberous military and civilian dignitaries in attendance. Her husband, Col. David Buckner, is Deputy Assistant Commandant, USAIS.

The musical selections of "The Army Wife" are authentic songs of their era. They are songs the Army Wife might have sung to herself or her children. Since it is impossible for Mrs. Buckner to recount the entire history of the Army Wife from the Old Testament period to the present in one evening, she will begin her song and narration from the American Revolutionary days.

The free presentation is sponsored by the Music and Theatre Branch of Recreation Services.

For love or money

By Marie M. Russo

"Do you, Joe Potter, take Susie Jones to be your lawfully wedded wife?" asked the chaplain.

"I do," replied Joe.

"And do you, Susie Jones," continued the chaplian, "take Joe Potter to be your lawfully wedded husband?"

"I do," answered Susie.

Unlike most couples, these two young people were not dreaming of the Florida sun they would be basking in together for the next 10 days. As a matter of fact they weren't even going to spend the next 10 days together; Susie was going home on leave and Joe was going to continue working just like always.

The only thing that these two were having visions of were dollar signs. You see, this marriage is nothing more than an Army convenience marriage (or contract as some call it).

Susie and Joe, both holding the rank of Specalist 4, will each draw about $195 extra every month.

Why?

Because now that they're married they're each entitled to draw BAQ and separate rations.

Susie and Joe drew up an agreement — which would free them whenever they wanted to be released from the ties of a not-so-holy matrimony, received permission to move off post, and began collecting their separate rations and quarters allowance — they were set.

Or were they?

According to Capt. Paul Snell, a JAG attorney, technically a contract can be drawn up to protect both parties, "but there's no telling if it will hold up in court."

Most of the young soldiers who draw up a contract or notorized agreement, do so to protect their personal property and to free each other from support when the divorce is sought.

However, this protection may not be long lasting, points out Capt. Kathryn Forrester, a JAG attorney. "A contract can easily be attacked later based on a change in circumstances."

For instance, if Joe and Susie drew up a contract stating that Susie would not be entitled to any of the money Joe had in his savings account when the divorce is sought, the courts could easily nullify the contract.

A good example of this happening is the Jackie Onassis case explains Capt. Forrester. "By the terms of her marriage contract she was entitled to eight million dollars, but she retained lawyers and was finally awarded 26 million dollars."

"Marrying to collect extra money from allowances is fraud . . . ."

Capt. Snell adds that such contracts and agreements can be very dangerous because they have to be worded carefully. "It is against public law to marry in anticipation of divorce, so there are certain things (like when the marriage will terminate) that can never be mentioned in the contract."

Aside from involving many improprieties, marriage contracts, "really don't do much good at all," according to Capt. Forrester.

When Joe and Susie Potter were asked why they got married they said it wasn't for the money but rather for the peace and quiet. If this sounds like a strange reason for two people to enter into the bonds of marriage, Susie will explain.

"We had both lived in the barracks for at least six months and were fed up with the hassles, but our company commanders wouldn't give us permission to move off post, so we were stuck."

This is the situation that many Ft. Benning soldiers find themselves in. There is no post-wide policy as to who must live in the barracks, except in those cases when adequate housing isn't available. The decision of where the single, enlisted soldier lives, is usually left up to the company commanders and in some cases major commanders.

Joe and Susie met in the mess hall one night while Joe and some friends were complaining about the next morning's room inspection.

"Man, it's just not right for some officer to go poking around in my drawers," commented Sam Nelson.

"You're telling me," said Joe. "I don't mind keeping the floor clean and even keeping my locker straight. . ."

"Do you guys mind if we sit here," asked Susie and some friends who were looking for a table.

"Not if you don't mind hearing about tomorrow's inspection," said Roger Hershey.

Our company doesn't have so many inspections, but the XO is constantly coming through with the dogs," commented Anita Perkins.

And so the conversation went for the next half hour or so, with Joe saying, "Man it's enough to make a guy wish he was married," as he left the table.

"It was about a week later when we met in the mess hall again," explained Susie. "We got to talking about life in the barracks and what Joe had said about marriage."

"The next thing we knew we were setting a marriage date," added Joe.

"It is against public law to marry in anticipation of divorce."

"The money was an added benefit — what we really wanted was to be able to move out of the barracks," explained Susie.

What do people think of Joe's and Susie's "relationship?" When some of their friends, who were aware of the situation, were asked, most of them thought it a wise choice.

"I think it's a great idea," says PFC Sam Nelson. "They wanted and needed to get out of the barracks to save their sanity and they did. They're even getting paid for it this way. What could be wrong with the idea?"

Sp4 Julie Stump, Susie's ex-roommate, says she can understand what made Susie get married. "You just don't have any privacy when you live in the barracks — things are pretty miserable when a man or woman can't even take a shower in private. It's enough to make you sick when there isn't even a shower curtain to be had."

once she thought about it, there really wasn't anything wrong with it. "I was a bit skeptical at first, but after all, it's not as if they'll be living together."

Well, that is — they weren't planning on living together. Even if you are married, you must still get permission to move off post. The permission doesn't have to come from the company commander any longer, but rather the housing office.

Assuming you are permitted to reside off post, there is still the possibility that the housing office can call you back on post to live in government quarters, says a post housing official.

This could turn out to be a sticky situation if the only reason you married your spouse was for convenience and now you have to live with each other.

Capt. Forrester also mentioned that marrying to collect extra money from allowances is fraud to the government and if they had proof of this they could take back all the allowance money already paid and it could result in a court-martial.

Granted, living in the barracks may be rough, but it is the focal point for command information, a good place to meet and get to know your fellow soldiers, and a lot cheaper than paying rent and utility bills. So, taking all this into consideration, are all the concealed hassles of a convenience marriage really worth the risk?

MAH records section temporarily relocated

The Outpatient Records Section at Martin Army Hospital has been temporarily relocated on the first floor across from the patient/visitor elevator in the new clinic wing of Martin Army Hospital.

The relocation is due to the construction for electro-mechanical upgrading which should be completed in approximately two months.

The Outpatient Records Section houses 120,000 records at the present time and was only designed to take care of less than 70,000. With the construction, the records capacity will be greatly increased and the conjestion at the records window should be reduced significantly.

Glad you asked . . .

What would you tell the Compensation Commission?

By Sue Davis

SFC David L. Jones, ARI Field Unit

I feel that the pay for military personnel is not equivalent to that of a civilian with a similar job.

David Jones

Debra Kjer

Sp5 Debra Kjer, Hq Co, HQ Cmd

I enjoy my work although I would receive more money if I were working as a courtroom stenographer in real life.

1st Lt. Nicholas Aleshin, Hq Co, 1st AIT Bde

The President's Commission on Military Compensation should observe how many hours a soldier works and then they would realize that the pay is insufficient.

Nicholas Aleshin

Pvt. Joseph L. Layton, 139th MP Co

I think that a soldier should be paid according to this experience and time in service. Also, the more hours he works, the more pay he should get.

Capt. Roger D. Hershman, 10th Co, 1st Bn, TSB

On an annual basis, pay raises and base pay are not keeping up with inflation rates. Not only does the soldier lose spending power each year, but he also loses a portion of the retirement value of his base pay. Effectively, he retires on far less than 50 per cent of the base pay that he expects.

Roger Hershman

Sp4 Randall R. Ruston, 690th Med Co

I believe that I'm paid enough to live comfortably. Medical and dental work is free in the Army; whereas outside — I pay. I believe the pay is sufficient. If some soldiers were paid for what they did, they'd receive a bill rather than a check at the end of the month.

A drug problem at Benning?

By Marie Russo

Does Fort Benning have drug problems? From the responses of individuals, in varied positions of importance, who were asked, this has turned into a very difficult question to answer.

Maj. Robert Pegg, Military Police operations officer, says that there isn't a problem with narcotics but there is one with marijuana. "Ninety-three per cent of our cases, this year, have involved marijuana."

It should be noted, according to the major, that the number of cases during January-June was 25 per cent below last year's level. According to Military Police statistics, 304 cases were handled during the first half of 1976 and only 228 during the same period of this year.

However, the Ft. Benning Field Office, Third Region Criminal Investigation Division (CID) has had quite a large-size case load this year.

According to agents of the CID Drug Suppression Team close to $57,000 worth of illegal drugs and marijuana were confiscated on or in the immediate area of Fort Benning.

CID statistics are in agreement with Pegg on the fact that marijuana is the biggest problem on Benning. Eleven hundred dollars worth of marijuana plants and $8,000 in processed weed were confiscated by CID during the first six months of this year.

There is a high number of civilian offenders on post, also. "Cab drivers, bus drivers, dependents, it's hard to tell how they get on post, but they do," states one CID agent.

There are some civilians who try to grow marijuana plants on post. "They figure that if they are caught they won't be subject to the state laws because the reservation is on federally owned land," explained Pegg.

Capt. Patrick Gibbs, chief of administrative law, pointed out that this isn't totally true. An offender on federally owned property will fall under federal jurisdiction, or in some circumstances state law, but either way he will be caught.

Marijuana, the most easily available drug in the area, sells for about $20-25 for an ounce. Statistics show that AIT trainees are being taken when they purchase a bag of pot. "Since they (the trainees) are isolated in one area of post and are not free to shop around, they wind up paying twice the amount for half of the quantity," a CID agent added. Prices to trainees start at $40 for a half an ounce.

Phencyclidine (an animal tranquilizer), more commonly known as PCP, is the narcotic that is very popular in the area according to CID. It sells for about $3-4 per pill which is a rip off when you consider that if bought legally, quite a large amount sells for only $9.

Despite furor concerning the use of marijuana, tranquilizers and the hallucinogens PCP and LSD, alcohol remains the drug of choice by soldiers. Fruit flavored wine and beer appear to be the most popular of the alcoholic beverage choices.

"Alcohol is by far a greater problem on Fort Benning than drugs," states Maj. Peggy, and statistics released by the Provost Marshal's Office are in strong agreement with this statement.

Shelving sex in the PX?

By Debra Hilgeman

Last year the Army and Air Force Exchange Service (AAFES) took "adult entertainment" magazines off the display shelves and put them under the counters at checkout lanes.

"This action was the result of complaints from parents who didn't want their children exposed to "obscenity," explained Joseph Robinson, Retail Branch Operations Manager of the Post Exchange (PX).

This policy makes sense but why are there so many equally explicit magazines still being publicly displayed? For instance, a sampling from "confession" magazines sold on the PX shelves revealed such headlines as— "My Lesbian Lover Seduced My Retarded Brother," "I Begged Daddy For Sex — Now I'm Sorry For What We Did To Mom" and "To Save Myself I Let Those Three Guys Rape My Baby Sister." And these are but a few.

The trend in women's magazines is becoming one of open sexuality and the content is as explicit as the so-called men's magazines. Should these be handled differently?

While some magazines make use of centerfolds to provide sexual titillation, others get the same result via sensational headlines. It hardly seems right that certain magazines are excluded from view while equally questionable magazines are allowed to remain on the shelves. It seems presumptuous for AFEES officials to determine what is or is not obscene when no one else in the country has been able to agree on a definition of obscenity.

"We're not censors and we never have been," Robinson pointed out. "We just put what we considered "adult entertainment" under the counter to get it out of sight."

Yet singling out certain magazines to be chucked under the counter discriminates against those magazines and their readers.

Robinson feels, "We're meeting our obligation to the customers in that if a person wishes to purchase "adult entertainment" magazines, he is able to. We're only removing them from sight." Some customers must be feeling the social squeeze, however, because Robinson admitted some people have complained that the magazines of their choice were no longer displayed.

Parents who complain that they don't want their children exposed to "obscenity" have a legitimate gripe. But in determining what is "adult entertainment", (AFFES) officials should take more into consideration than the reputation certain magazines have earned and clear their shelves of ALL comparable reading material.

AAFES has taken the first step down a long road and as Robinson put it, "Where do we stop?"

Colonial Band selected to play at Mardi Gras

The Explorer Post No. 76 Colonial Band has been chosen to represent Georgia, as well as Columbus and Fort Benning at the annual Mardi Gras in New Orleans, February 4 and 5.

"We are one of 18 bands selected from nine states to participate in the festivities," noted Maj. Bill Drollinger, band director. The 103-member band plans to leave post on the evening of February 3 and arrive in New Orleans early the next morning.

They are scheduled to march in the surburbs of New Orleans on Saturday and in the spectacular district parade downtown on Sunday. Both parades are expected to begin at 11 a.m.

The Colonial Band, composed of high school and college musicans representing all the schools in the Columbus and Fort Benning area, originated in 1975 as the Explorer Post No. 76, Fife and Drum Corps. Parading in colorful red, white and blue revolutionary-styled uniforms, the corps attained national recognition during 1976 as one of the leading Fife and Drum Corps in the nation.

"The corps converted to a full band in February 1977, in order to provide a broader musical experience," explained Drollinger.

Based on their origin as the Fife and Drum Corps, band members selected the name Colonial Band and have maintained their reputation for quality music and marching.

Their musical repertoire include, "Columbus, Ga.," march from "Carmen," theme from "Rocky," "Going to Fly Now," "I Write the Songs," "Battle Hymn of the Republic," "Stars and Stripes Forever" and many others.

The band has performed in the Albany, Ga., Pecan Festival and Atlanta's "Salute to America" parade where it was selected as the best community band in the state. The group has also paraded at Sea World and Disney World where it performed as a feature attraction.

Local band enthusiasts will be able to watch the nationally renowned group perform in several concerts within the community during the next few months.

18th Replacement Det makes transition to Benning easier

By Patricia Redmond

Arriving at one's first permanent party station can be a traumatic experience for any new soldier.

Helping to make that transition easier for in-coming transients at Benning is the job of the 35 men and women assigned to the 18th Replacement Detachment, 36th Engr Gp.

This assistance includes providing temporary billets and dining access to a dining facility, processing travel pay and briefing the new soldier on policies at Ft. Benning.

The 18th handles the new permanent party soldier from his arrival at the Columbus Metropolitan Airport, where a liaison NCO will direct him to Benning and the orderly room of the detachment through his final assignment to a tenant unit.

Once the transient soldier reaches the orderly room and reports in he and she can expect to spend three to five days with the detachment. During that time the soldier's hours are cordinated by one of the two platoon sergeants. The transient is first sent to Bldg. 83 where the COMPACT personnel assist in filing of travel vouchers; review finance records; review and update personnel records and provide the new soldier with an outline of the educational opportunities available in the Columbus-Ft. Benning area. The in-coming personnel also are required to take an eight-hour Defensive Driving course prior to their assignment to a Benning unit.

When not processing, transients are given time to take care of their personal needs. The detachment platoon sergeants assist the soldiers in finding the proper offices to take care of family housing; registration of weapons; locating household goods and any other problem that may arise during the transient's processing.

and the1stSgt on down try to help the transient in solving their problems prior to their leaving the 8th to their new units," explains Sgt. John Williams platoon sergeant, "this way the unit is receiving from us a completely functional soldier with nothing preventing him or her from immediately becoming part of the unit on arrival."

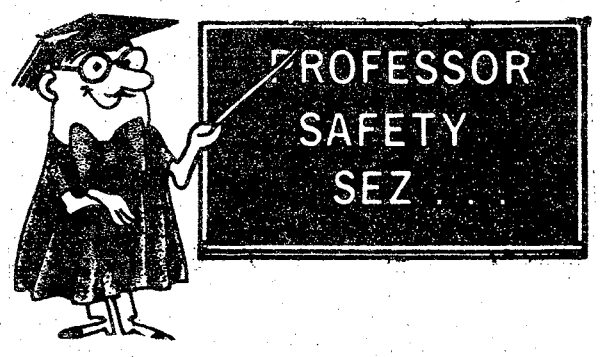
Doughboys vs. Blue Devils tomorrow

The Ft. Benning Doughboys put their 6-1 record on the line Saturday night against the semi-professional Lexington Blue Devils from North Carolina. The Blue Devils are runners up in the Dixie League-Continental League playoffs.

Head Coach Jack Barham and his staff have become philosophical about playing "mystery teams."

"All we know about Lexington is that they trounced the Ashville Bears pretty soundly," Barham said. "We beat the Bears pretty soundly, so on paper, the Lexington team should give us a tough match. We're hoping for a good challenge. I suppose it's very unprofessional for a coach to be optimistic, but right now we feel like we can handle anyone the Recreation Services Division lines up for us. We want the toughest competition we can find. It's getting toward the end of the season and the players want to go out strong."



Finishing strong seems to be a Doughboy hallmark. In the last three games, Benning has scored 136 points against 10 points for the opposition. Coach Barham isn't ashamed of the lopsided scores.

"Had we played poorly, and won by a close score, the spectators might have felt like they'd seen a better game. Because of the ease with which we've handled our last few games, folks believe we've been playing pushover teams. But every team we've met has come here with a winning record in its own conference. We'd like to play more high caliber college teams, but they just aren't available.

"Considering that we practice only three times a week, are directed by amateur coaches, and play athletes who have no incentive other than a love of the game, the semi-professionals should be a real threat to us. The fact that we've handled most semi-pro teams fairly easily is just a credit to the dedication and desire of our ballplayers."

Barham had no apology for "running up the score." "We have players two deep in each offensive and defensive position, with a few left over," the coach said. "It's not like a big college team, where the coach can put in his fourth stringers to hold down the score. Much of the scoring in the second half has come from our substitutes, but the fact is that when we replace our starters with our substitutes, we don't really lose much effectiveness. In fact, we often alternate starters, just to keep playing time fairly even. As for the big scores, that just comes from being in good condition and keeping a strong desire. As a coach, I can't drive a team to put out a hundred per cent in practice and then tell them to 'ease up' during a game."

The Lexington Blue Devils beat seven semi-professional teams on the way to their inter-divisional playoffs. Saturday night the Doughboys may not have to worry about easing up.

Extension Cords

The U. S. Consumer Product Safety Commission estimates that more than 4,000 injuries associated with extension and appliance cords are serious enough to require hospital emergency room treatment each year. The most common cause of injury from extension cords is mouth burns, primarily to children 5 years of age and under. Children 9 years and under account for almost 50 % of all injuries involving extension and appliance cords.

34th Med Bn rewarded Best Mess of Quarter

By Bill Walton

Best Dining Facility of the Third Quarter (large unit catagory) was awarded to the 34th Med Bn Consolidated Dining Facility for the second time in as many years.

Winning the award the second time brought another honor to the dining facility. It has been nominated to represent Ft. Benning in the 10th Annual Phillip A. Connally Award Competition. An inspection team from TRADOC will visit the 34th Med Bn Consolidated Dining Facility later this month to evaluate the efforts of the facility personnel for the award, which is being contended for by 20 Army dining facilities throughout the world.

Teamwork and dedicated cooks are the ingredients for a great dining facility, according to SFC Ernie B. Hamm, manager of 34th Med Bn Consolidated Dining Facility. He and his staff of 42 cooks, including three women and three KP's, strive to give troops the best food and service possible. The 34th operates on a budget, as do all other dining facilities, but careful planning has occasionally enabled SFC Hamm to provide troops dining in his facility with steak.

Every effort is made to enable the soldiers to feel at home and comfortable in the dining facility. If a soldier drops his tray, there's always one of the mess personnel ready to clean it up without making a big fuss.

The short order line, which is required to feature at least eight items, averages between 11 and 15 items on a daily basis. Special monthly "togetherness luncheons" featuring a different ethnic menu each month have become a way of life with the 34th. And when it's birthday time for a regular diner, the facility will bake a birthday cake for the occasion when given three days notice.

"Quiet troops are happy troops . . . at least in a dining facility," says SFC Hamm. "When the food is good we never hear about it, but if it is the least bit bad, that's all we hear about."

Stray animals present problem on Ft. Benning

By Sue Davis

Don't be surprised if, at one time or another, you see a dog with a knapsack slung over his shoulder and a forlorn look on his face. He is probably bound for a comfortable and secure home and two meals a day. This may be a bit of an exaggeration but according to the animal control officers here, there is a problem with stray animals on post.

Animal control, or the physical confiscation of stray animals on Ft. Benning, is handled by the Military Police-Wildlife Branch. They are taking positive steps to control stray animals.

"We have a fairly small work force involved in animal control," commented SSgt. Delmas Shipman, NCOIC of the Fish and Game Section.

"Two individuals work in daily alternating shifts from 7 a.m. to 10 p.m. The MP shifts have men on the job who work from 10 p.m. to 7 a.m.

"In the last three weeks, my people and I have investigated five dog bite incidents. We've picked up 23 stray animals—19 dogs and five cats. Capturing these animals involves using a five-foot long pipe with a noose attached, or else a tranquilizer rifle. Methods of capture depend on the condition of the animal when we see it," Shipman said.

"There are wild dog packs on post," commented Shipman. "However, these dogs rarely venture into the housing areas. Occasionally, someone may see four or five dogs traveling together. These could be wild dogs that are hungry and intent on rummaging through trash cans. But most wild dog packs are farther away from the housing areas because they're frightened of people," he added.

"I'd like to emphasize what assigned persons and dependents can do to help alleviate this annoying problem," commented Captain John Barbee, law enforcement officer from the Provost Marshall's Office. "If an unfamiliar dog is seen in the area, the person is urged to phone in specific locations and descriptions of the animal. We don't want anyone to get bitten, but if it's fairly tame and can be detained, it would be a great help to us. Feeding the animal would be another idea.

"We'd like to encourage people to do something with their unwanted pets when they clear post. Maybe this article will make people more aware that these strays are a nuisance," Barbee reiterated.

The Veterinary Clinic Section will accept all unwanted pets. The animals are kept for four working days and, if they aren't adopted, they are euthanized. Presently, there are about 15-30 strays at the impoundment center. Animal lovers are requested to adopt an animal at the impoundment center, remarked Colonel James Fowler, the Deputy for Veterinary Activities here.

When asked how he felt about people who dumped their pets when they cleared post, Shipman retorted: "If there was any way that we could find out who did it, they should be charged with failure to dispose of the animal properly, say, neglecting to take it to the animal shelter."

DYA Sports

Doughboy League

Patriots defeated the Green Hornets 14-0. Their offense was led by Ricky McGee with super blocking by Joey Hashimoto and pass receptions by Mark Miller and Mark Crites. The first TD was set up when the Patriots went into punt formation on fourth down and 18. McGee faked the punt and ran around left end approximately 65 yards inside the Green Hornet's ten yard line. Two plays later he ran it into the end zone for the TD. He also added the PAT. Patriort's defense led by Mike Brand, Martin Wright, David Cruce, Michael Chase, Robert Buff and Merritte Wilson stalled the Green Hornet's offense. Matt Cole assisted by recovering two fumbles. The Patriots second TD was also scored by McGee when he intercepted a pass and ran it back for a score.

The Bears and Sharks played to a scoreless tie. The Bears had a 35-yard TD run nullified by a penalty. James Higginbottom and Teddy Leonhart played outstanding offensive football for the Bears. While the Bears defense led by John Inks and Lee Ford played superb defense stopping the Sharks inside their own 5-yard line. William Quarterman, the Sharks quiarterback, had a good day on the offense completing 6 out of 10 passes and rushing for 40 yards. On the defense Eric Johnson intercepted a pass for the third game in a row.

The Crusaders defeated the Dolphins 8-6. All the scoring was done in the first quarter. The Crusaders took the opening kick off and marched right down the field with Donny Gales scoring from the eleven-yard line and Eric Thomas adding the PAT. The Dolphins came right back with the Crusaders kick off marching 55 yards in eight plays with Greg Lahr and Mark Gilbert moving the ball. Gilbert going in for the TD from 19 yards out. PAT failed. After that the Dolphins defense led by James Brittingham, Greg Lahr, Jesse Runfola, Jack McCoy, and Mark Gilbert with Kevin Casey recovering a Crusader fumble did not let the Crusaders cross the fifty yard line. At one time the Crusaders Eric Thomas broke loose around end heading for a TD but Jack McCoy knocked him out of bounds with a great side line tackle. Meanwhile the Dolphins offense with superb blocking by Terry Jackson, Bruce Russ, Patrick Dailey, Wayne Jordan, Jimmy Lawrence, James Simms, Brittingham and Runfola moved the ball at will but could not drive it in for a score.

Biddy League

By Wm T. Miller

The Biddy League Raiders downed the Rams in a heart-stopping 6-0 contest Saturday. The first quarter started with two fired-up teams going at each other. Both the Rams and Raiders inched the ball toward the opposing goal line against a tough defense. However, even though the Raiders moved to the Ram 6 yard line with the help of Ken Gonzalez, who recovered a Ram fumble, neither team scored. The second period saw much the same see-saw battle and also ended in no score. Raider standouts for the half included Eric Dalton and Tim Guynn.

As the second half began, it was apaparent to both teams that the side to score first would probably win the game. Again, fans were treated to a thrilling round of football, but no score. Mark Owens joined the ranks of Riader notables.

In the final period, the Raiders began to click, Sparked by Randall Asbury's recovery of a Ram fumble, the Raiders set up key runs by Burnam and Walker to the Ram 6, when Trevor Johnson took the ball to pay dirt for a game winning TD only two plays before the final whistle.

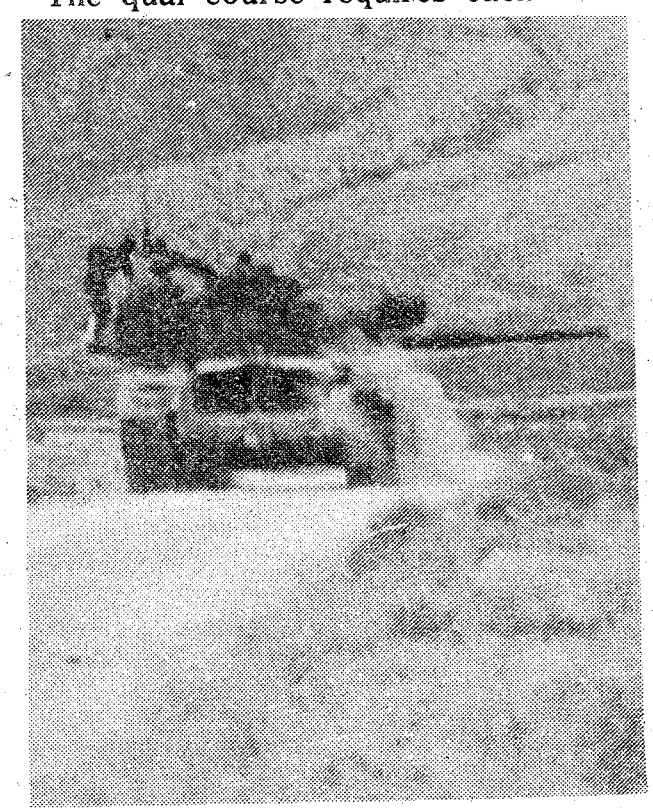
Tank Gunnery '77

After three weeks of intensive desert training at Ft. Bliss, Tex., Tank Gunnery '77 the ultimate test in tank crew proficiency — has come to a close for members of the 197th Inf Bde.

For some of the 600 participants representing the 2/69th Ar and A/15th Cav, it was their first opportunity to qualify as tank gunners. For others it was a chance to update ratings achieved during Tank Gunnery '76 conducted in the jungles of Ft. Stewart last September.

"It was a challenge for all of us," said a soldier from the Cav. "The Tank Tables put our equipment and men to the test and gave us the opportunity to get a feel of what the desert environment has to offer."

The Bliss ranges offered the tankers a chance to do something they had never done before — tackle the Battle Run. According to the 2/69th Master Gunner SFC Edwin Billeck, "It's a platoon live-fire exercise which tests unit teamwork and proficiency while engaging targets with the 105mm main gun, 50 cal machine gun and 7.62 coax in simulated combat manuevers."



After two weeks of day and night training on Tank Tables 5, 6 and 7, reviewing tactics, coordination and teamwork, it was on to the "big daddy" of them all — Tank Table 8 and qualification.

The qual course requires each tank team consisting of a tank commander, driver, loader and gunner to fire 80 rounds of 50 cal, 210 rounds of coax and 8 round of main gun ammo at designated target while achieving an acceptable hit ratio. Almost all the crews qualified on their first run," said Billeck. "It's a credit to the proficiency the crews have developed here at Benning." The remainder of the crews were successful on the second go, the master gunner added.

"There's just one word that describes tank gunnery — hell! It's the ultimate test, short of combat, that any tanker can go through," said Sgt Carl Johnson, Co A, 2/69th Ar as his team prepared to tackle the "big daddy." "It's either do or die as far as we're concerned. If all systems are a go, you do; if one thing is messed up, one setting out of kilter, you die. It's that simple."

"It's a good feeling to know that tank gunnery is behind us," says Billeck. "But now we're faced with the task of addressing and correcting the minor problems discovered while at Bliss.

"We're ready to go now, but in order to stay that way it's going to take training; realistic, intensive training like what we just went through at Bliss," the master gunner concluded.

An M60A1 tank from the 2/69th Ar, 197 Inf Bde fires its main gun during Tank Gunnery '77 held at Ft. Bliss, Texas. The firing was the final test of the tanker's skills learned through hours of training at Benning ranges.

Red Cross Volunteers Wanted

Volunteers are urgently needed by the Benning American Red Cross Field Office. Many interesting and varied positions are open to volunteers at Martin Army Hospital, Dependent Schools, the Veterinary Clinic and with the Field Office. Registration and interviews will be held in the Field Office, Bldg. 1699, November 9 and 10 from 9 a.m. to noon. The November volunteer training class will be held on November 12. This is an excellent opportunity to become involved in and be a service to your community. For additional information concerning the volunteer program and appointments call 544-4122/4123 during normal duty hours.

"A Christmas Carol"

The Springer Theatre will present "A Christmas Carol" December 8 - 18. Adult singers, non-singers and dancers are still needed to fill out the cast. Also, there is always a need for help backstage, painting, carpentry, lighting, publicity and in the box office. Persons interested in participating should call Dae Lane at 322-6112 as soon as possible.

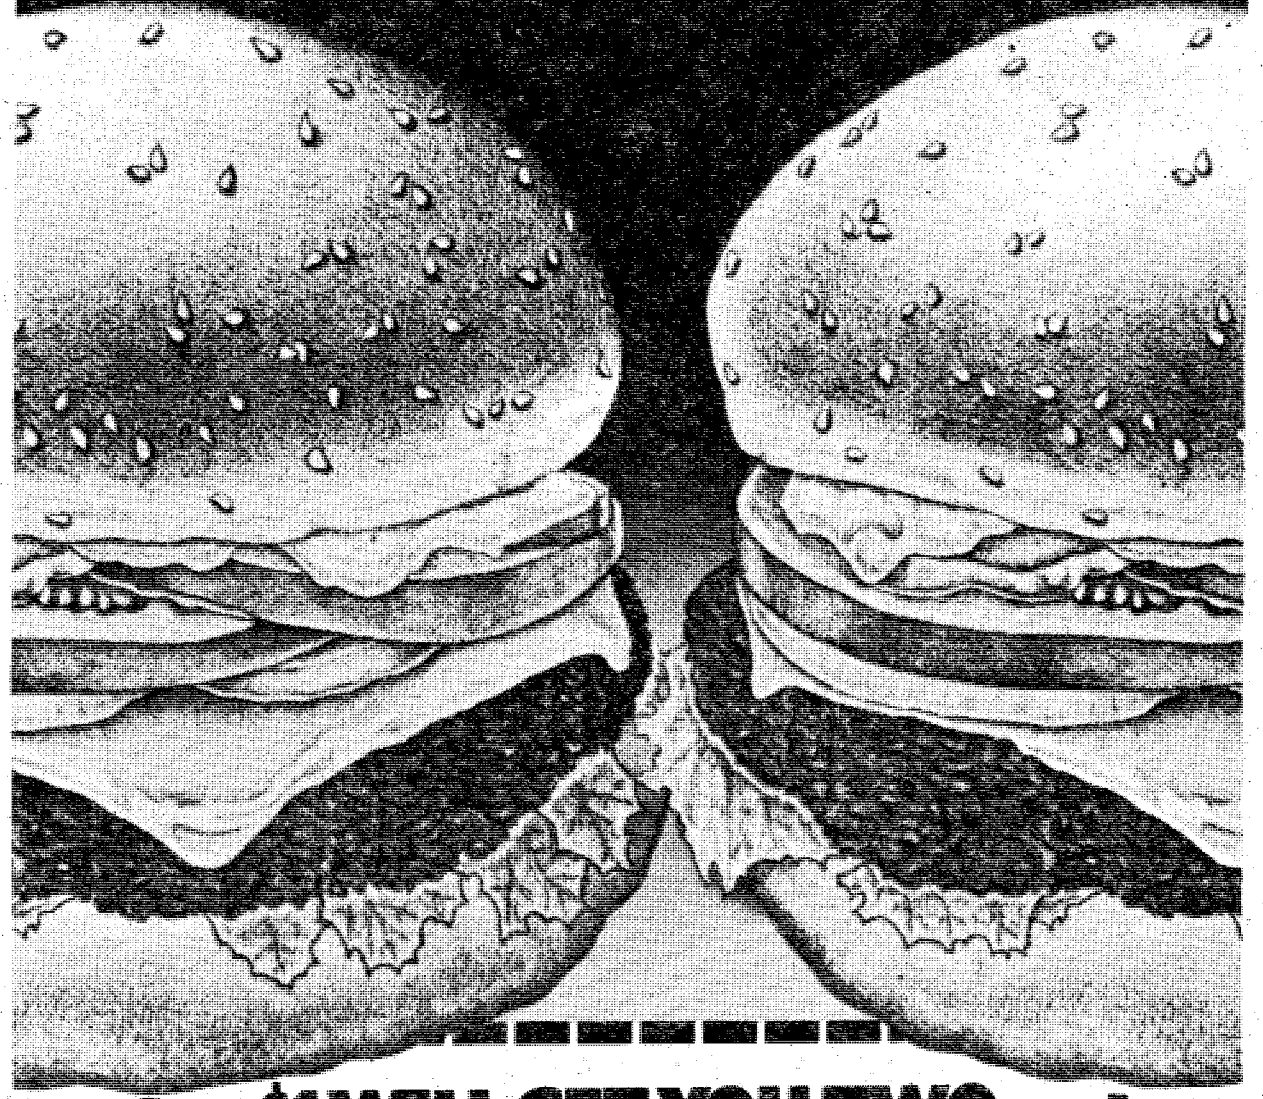
The use of handles by CB operators is almost as old as CB itself. Back when Class D got started on 27 MHz, the FCC banned hobby use of CB radios. So the CBers who just wanted to ratchetjaw had to disguise their identities by using colorful nicknames.

Then when the FCC dropped the hobby ban in 1975 and the CB boom really took off, CBers didn't have to worry about concealing their identities any more. But, by that time, handles had become such an integral part of CBing that it was unthinkable to go on the air without one. The inevitable result was that some CBers found themselves using the same handles. Needless to say, the arguments over who had the right to use a certain handle sometimes ended in violence.

The next development in the history of handles was the outfit which advertised that, for a price, it would "officially" register a CBer's handle. These people ripped off CBers by the thousands. They usually charged from $2 to $20, and all you received in return would be a card with your handle on it. A lot of those organizations are still operating today, some of them selling no more than an "official" membership.



So don't be taken in by an advertisement that offers to register your handle; if you're a licensed CBer, you already have an official identification issued and registered by an agency of the government. It's your FCC callsign.

Intervention--a positive cure for alcoholism

Family members and friends don't have to stand by helplessly while a loved one ruins his or her life by abusing alcohol.

Ft. Benning has begun a confidential program designed to help friends and relatives intervene when an active duty or retired military person or a D.A. civilian employee is having problems with alcohol or other drugs. The same services are available to military and civilian employees to help with their dependent's problems with alcohol or other drugs.

"The notion has been that no one can help the suffering alcoholic until he's ready, until he hits bottom. Too often 'hitting bottom' means a career lost, a family ruined, and a miserable life for everyone concerned. It doesn't have to be that way. We teach concerned persons how to cope with the alcoholic and help them to prepare for a confrontation that will get the alcoholic to recognize his problem NOW and commit himself to treatment NOW," explains 1st Lt. Gordon Threlfall, special projects officer for the Ft. Benning Alcohol and Drug Abuse Control Office.

"There is no magic to the process," he continued. "The victim has been out of touch with himself for a long time. The key to success is for meaningful people, those he loves or respects, to provide him with factual information in a manner he can understand and accept."

To that end, the would-be interveners are taught basic facts. They learn the alcoholic does not drink because he is weak-willed, morally lax or completely uncaring about others. He drinks the way he drinks because he can't stop. He is in the throes of a chronic, terminal illness. Those other ills (mental, emotional or physiological) will remain untreatable until the primary illness — alcoholism — can be arrested. It can be arrested only by a total commitment to total abstinence. There is no cure for it.

They also learn a victim of the disease will go to incredible lengths to prevent its detection and to avoid the help he needs. He minimizes and rationalizes the drinking, hiding it behind a near impregnable wall of self delusion abetted by a memory system gone haywire.

The people that are concerned usually learn that their whole approach to the alcoholic has been wrong. What they thought to be a deterrent to the alcoholic's drinking actually enabled him to continue his destructive behavior. Given such background knowledge, the concerned people are now ready to prepare for the intervention.

"During this period each family or group works closely with an alcohol and drug counselor who will be present at the intervention," noted Threlfall. "The concerned persons train as a team — first in working up the data that is to be presented to the alcoholic, then rehearsing how it is to be presented. Each intervener prepares a written list of particulars about the alcoholic's behavior.

When the interveners are deemed ready, a date is set for the confrontation. The alcoholic will rarely be a cooperative participant. Resentful, defensive, accusatory, he often tries to play interveners off against one another. But if the team sticks to its plan, eight times out of ten it is successful in achieving its goal.

"We use these techniques primarily in the intervention of alcoholism, but they work as well in the intervention of other drug abuse," says Threlfall. "It's anything but pleasant, but when you look at the alternatives — a ruined career, a broken family, a miserable existence for all concerned — it's worth the effort."

Columbus, lift up your prayers. Ask God to deliver us from the evils in our town.

Evil, creeping like deadly cancer, is threatening to engulf our town. Around us is terror, murder, filth, degradation and decay. Our country, our town is dying. We must unite in prayer to God and ask for deliverence in Jesus' name.

AUSA Defense Report

The bureaucracy invents a problem--how to pay commissary baggers

The Federal bureaucracy has been likened to many things—an octopus, an amorphous mass of bodies going in an infinite number of directions or, more gently, an over-protective mother attempting to clutch every member of her vast brood to her bosom. You may make your own metaphoric conclusion in the case of the Civil Service Commission which is seeking to protect the people who bag groceries in military commissaries by cutting their income in half.

The baggers, you see, have been working in the commissaries for years, at no expense to the taxpayers because they get only tips from the commissary patrons. "That's illegal!" said the Civil Service Commission. "They should be hired by the stores and paid the Federally established minimum wage of $2.30 an hour (with back pay to 1974, too)." Now the baggers in the commissaries (where checkout lines are usually long and patrons tip well for help in bagging their purchases) are making a lot more than $2.30 an hour already and have no desire to be brought under the umbrella of Civil Service employment, complete with deductions for taxes, retirement, etc.

And if the baggers are added to the government payroll the money to pay them must be found. It might come from higher appropriated subsidies for commissary operations (thus increasing the stores' vulnerability to criticism) or by raising the surcharge paid by commissary patrons (an increase of 2 percent has been suggested which would result in raising the weekly shopping bill by more than the amount now being tipped).

Congressman Les Aspin (D-Wis.) is constantly searching out what he considers federal fiscal lunacy and, by seizing upon this issue, has put himself in an unusual position of popularity with military people. Aspin has introduced legislation that would clearly set the baggers outside the law compelling payment of the minimum wage with all the related complications. The legislation has been referred to the House Labor Committee and, in the meantime, the Civil Service Commission is taking another look at its original ruling. If it does not reverse itself the Labor Committee will move ahead with Aspin's bill.

The Civil Service Commission is undoubtedly convinced it acted in the best interest of the commissary baggers. We wonder, though, if the commission bothered to ask any of the baggers what they wanted to be done for them. What the commission has done is to take a non-issue and turn it into another bit of evidence that the value of the commissary system to military people is gradually being eroded—and further confirmation that the federal bureaucracy creates at least as many problems as it solves.

Communication is full time job for 478th NCO

By Bill Walton

Communications, both on and off duty, is a way of life with Sgt. Elton W. Kolmetz, 478th IAUN Co, 34th Med Bn. On duty he is Senior Field Switchboard Operator and Training NCO, off duty he is a Baptist preacher, studying for his Masters Degree in Theology.

Sgt. Kolmetz, a native of Hinsons Crossroads in northwest Florida, graduated from Gulf Coast Seminary, Panama City, Florida in October 1974, as a Bachelor of Theology. When he was unable to locate a position as a minister he enlisted in the Army in Dec. 1974.

Following basic training and AIT as a Field Wireman at Ft. Jackson, S.C. he was assigned to the 478th in July 1975. He had hoped to be a chaplain's assistant during his Army service but somehow that never did pan out. Instead, he works in the 478th commo section.

The biggest problem Sgt. Kolmetz encounters is during field duty. The helicopters and other equipment assigned to an aviation unit occupies a big area when in the field. Since internal company communications are by telephone there are several hundred meters of wire to be laid and maintained requiring constant surveillance and repair by the seven man commo section.

Even though he is working on his theological Masters Degree he hasn't neglected his military education. To date he has completed 320 hours of military correspondence courses in the communication and infantry field. On his last MOS test he scored 141 out of a possible 150 which ranks him in the top 6 per cent for his MOS.

Even though he is a Baptist preacher he is licensed to preach at any church in Florida. He has held two seven-day revivals and preached several times at his hometown church, the Miracle Baptist in Hinsons Crossroads.

When asked how much preparation goes into a sermon his reply was "anywhere from eight to 24 hours, including several prayers on the subject matter, normally go into a sermon outline."

Sgt. Kolmetz has written a 250-page book on the ministry entitled "Life of a Baptist Pastor, Obligations and Responsibility to his Church." He recently submitted the manuscript to three publishers for their consideration and publication. To date he hasn't heard from any of them but he isn't giving up hope.

Ministers abound in his family as he has four uncles who are preachers: one Baptist, 2 Pentecostal and one Independent Baptist. To say that Theological Discussions are a subject at family reunions is the understatement of the year. Elton enjoys these discussions and looks at them as another learning vehicle. He notes that "To be a successful minister requires constant learning of new theories and ideas and improved methods of communicating the old ones."

Sgt. Kolmetz believes that the Army religious program is basically sound but there are too few chaplains to allow them to visit and counsel with the individual troops as much as they should. He particularly likes the rather recent innovation of Army Prayer Breakfasts, as it is one more way of bringing spiritual life into the military.

Scheduled for ETS in January 1978 Sgt. Kolmetz plans on becoming a full-time Baptist minister in northeast Florida, However, he is still toying with the idea of returning to the Army as a Chaplain after completion of his Masters Degree and obtaining the necessary experience required for a commission as a U.S. Army Chaplain.

NCOWC News
Bazaar Workshop

Tuesday and Thursday, November 1 and 3, were our final bazaar craft days, as the NCO Wives Club members, put the last minute touches on their handicrafts, which will be on sale today, at the Top 5 NCO Club, starting at 11 a.m.

Everyone's invited, and there are lots of beautiful items available, including baked goods. See You there!

Coffee Call

On Wednesday, November 2, the Chairman and members of the NCO Wives Club, served coffee and donuts to the patients at Martin Army Hospital. We are very happy to have Edith Morgan up and about again.

1/58th Inf
Ladies Coffee

The ladies of the 1/58th Inf held their monthly coffee, on October 18. Mrs. David White was hostess, for this lovely evening.

A warm welcome was given to Mrs. Paul Burrier. Sad farewells were said to Mrs. John Dompi.

Hail and Farewell

The Officers and Ladies of the 1/58th Inf, held their hail and farewell, on October 21, at the Pioneer Lodge. Everyone enjoyed an evening of wine and cheese. The evening, with a touch of class, was hosted by Charlie Company.

LtC. Belan, the battalion commander, welcomed the following: Maj. and Mrs. Paul Burrier, Lt. Willie Langford, and Lt. Richard Stiles.

The "Patriots" and ladies said farewell to: Maj. and Mrs. John Dompi, Lt. and Mrs. Gary Handley, and Lt. and Mrs. Terry Burke.

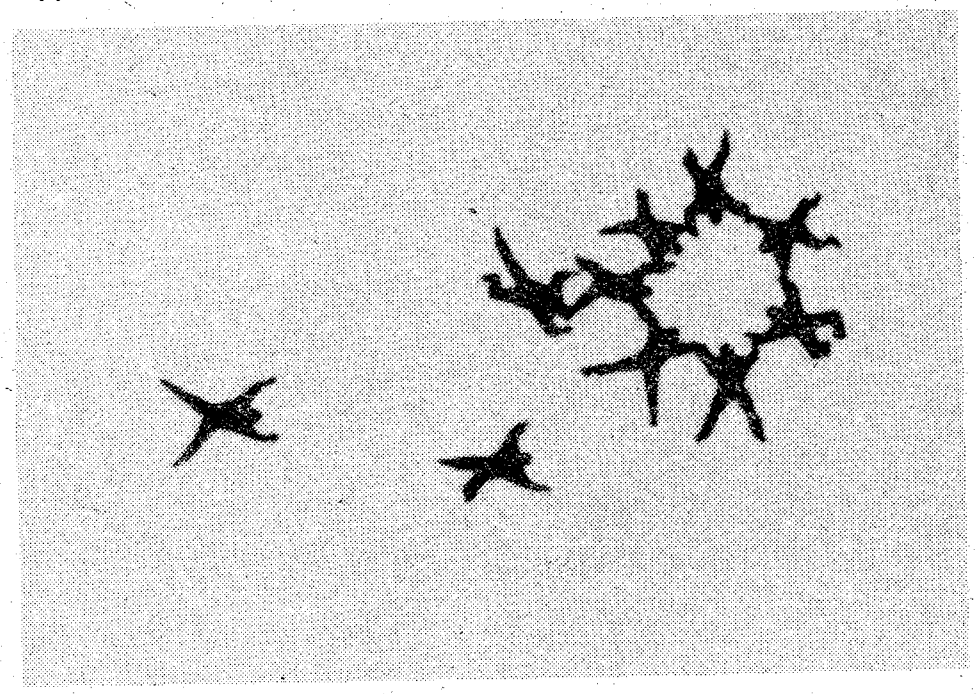
1st AIT Bde

On October 22, the "Professional and Tough" 2nd Bn, 1st AIT Bde, held their Field Day, at Stroup Field.



There were many demonstrations, the most colorful being the Sky Divers. After all military events were over, the families and cadre of the battalion, gathered at Pioneer Lodge, for a pot luck supper. There were games for the kids, and music and dancing for the adults.

Among our guests were: Col. and Mrs. Stiner, and their daughter. It was a very enjoyable day for everyone.

Miss USA, Kimberly Tomes, carefully cuts a piece of cake while trainees of the 2nd Bn, 1st AIT Bde watch. Miss USA was in the brigade area recently visiting with the troops. She also made an appearance at the Doughboy-St. Leo's football game.

Members of the Ft. Benning Sport Parachute Club practice their skydiving techniques in preparation for the world's largest skydiving competition to be held at Zephyrills, Fla., Nov. 19-27. As the "Diving Doughboys", the team will represent Benning in the ten-man speed star event. The event requires ten skydivers to exit an aircraft at an altitude of 8,500 feet and form a circle or star, the team with the fastest formation time wins the event.

Camper facility under construction at Uchee

Construction has begun on a camper service facility at the Uchee Creek Recreation Area and scheduled for completion in April 1978.

The $49,100 contract calls for the construction of a sewage facility for camper waste including a receptacle, sewer lines and a septic tank. An adjacent swamp area will be drained, leveled and graded for a circular drive around the receptacle. A well house will also be constructed to provide drinking water to the site as well as to the sewage facility.

The camper area will be located approximately ¼ mile from the existing Uchee Creek Recreation Center building.

Vol. 37, No. 9
Nov. 11 - 17, 1977

"A Ledger-Enquirer Newspaper published in the Interest of the Personnel of Fort Benning

Compensation the issue

The President's Commission on Military Compensation will visit Ft. Benning the morning of December 12 to conduct interviews with officer and enlisted personnel for attitudes and opinions on military compensation. Focus will be on retirement and military pay issues as well as on fringe benefits such as health care, leave, commissary and exchange.

The Committee is also interested in insights as to why persons joined the Army, what they expected from service, and why they plan to stay or get out.

A public hearing will be held in the civilian community during the afternoon, at a location yet to be determined. Soldiers, dependents, retirees and other interested citizens who wish to present their views to the Commission may testify. Prepared briefs will be limited to 10 minutes after which the Commission will provide time for questions and answers. No questions will be entertained from the floor.

Recommendations for changes in the pay and benefit system, as determined from public hearings and other sources, will be made by the Commission to President Carter in early 1978.

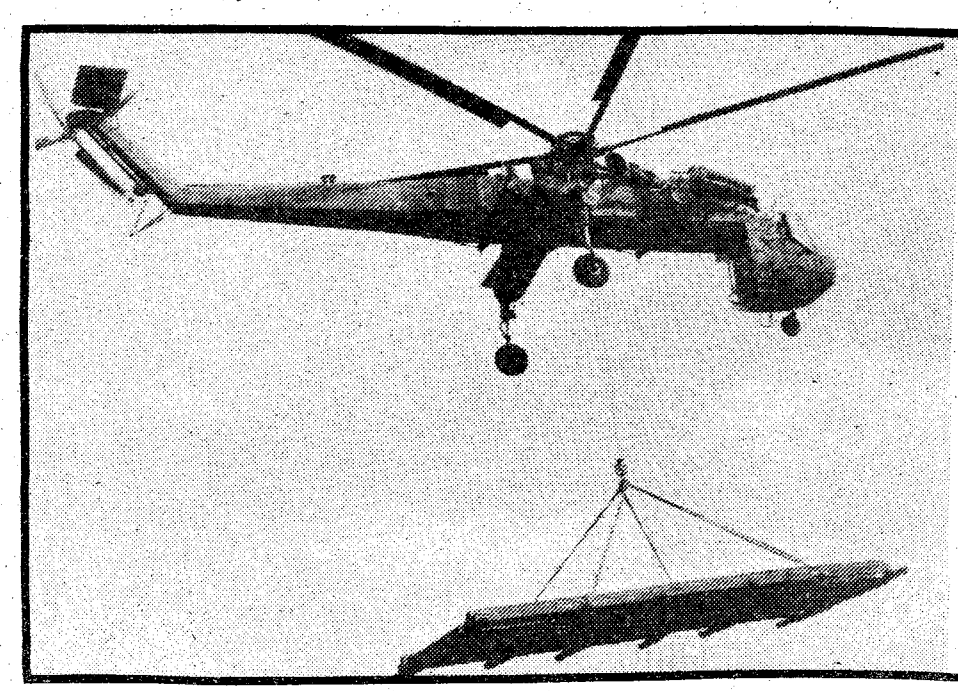
Individuals wishing to testify should:

- Write the Commission at 666-11th Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20001
- Call the Commission at 202-693-1290 or AUTOVON 233-1290 or
- Call the Ft. Benning Project Office at 545-5931 or 544-4811.

Volunteers should give their name, address, telephone number, organization represented (if any), and the subject of their testimony. Final selection of persons to testify will be made by the Commission, and those selected will be notified as to the date and time of their appearance, as well as the exact location of the hearing.

This will be the Commission's final visit to an Army installation; thus the impressions and opinions formed while here could have a profound impact on the Commission's recommendations to the President.

The following is a list of some of the persons by category who have testified, and the topics that have been discussed at public hearing held to date by the President's Commission in Virginia and Texas:



CATEGORY	TOPIC
First term soldier	Insufficient pay
Doctor	Inequity in military physician pay
First term soldier	Basic pay and BAQ
Junior officer	Career financial incentives
Senior NCO	Lower grade compensation
Field grade officer	Compensation for PCS moves
NCO wife	Don't change the system
Retired general officer	Recomputation
NCO widow	Compensation for widows
Master Sergeant (Ret)/GS-3	Double-dipping
Senior NCO	Complexity of compensation
Junior officer	Government housing
NCO	Single vs. married BAS and BAQ
NCO	Recruiter living

Marine Corps Birthday Ball slated

The United States Marine Corps will celebrate 202 years of service to the country on November 10.

It was on that date in 1775 that the Continental Congress authorized the raising of two battalions of Marines who would, "Serve to good advantage on land and sea."

In presenting his traditional "Birthday Message" to Marines the world over, General Louis H. Wilson, Commandant of the Marine Corps, remarked:

"As we join again to celebrate the birthday anniversary of our Corps, it is well to consider the obligation. In fulfilling it, we must insist upon solid quality: in every Marine, in the life we lead, and in the air-ground team we form. Our training must be disciplined, thorough and meaningful.

"Our readiness must be sound and on the mark. And every Marine must give unflagging dedication to both new, well-grounded standards, as well as to those formed during 202 years of experience and tradition. Those who have gone before expect no less. Nor must we today.

"Only a quality, ready Corps can take the hill and entrust it to those who follow. We are unalterably committed to that end, for efforts today, like yesterday, write the heritage for tomorrow."

Since the inception of the Corps, November 10 has historically been the top social occasion of the year for Marines. This "Birthday of the Marine Corps" is celebrated faithfully each year by every Marine in every part of the world.

In keeping with this tradition, the Marines of Ft. Benning will host the traditional "Birthday Ball" at the Officers Club November 12 at 7 p.m.

The highlight of the ball will be the "cake cutting ceremony." Steeped in tradition, this ceremony serves to remind Marines the world over of the proud legacy that has been passed to them by the many thousands of men and women who have borne the title — Marine.

NEWS in BRIEF

Paying taxes bad, but ...

If you think paying taxes is bad, refusing to pay them is worse. According to Internal Revenue Service officials, anyone who refuses to pay Federal taxes, fails to file tax returns, or knowingly files an incomplete return, can look forward to civil and criminal eforcement measures. Federal courts say there's no constitutional right for anyone to refuse to pay income tax on religious or moral grounds or because funds are used for government programs which the taxpayers opposes.

E-4 EERs due November 21

Enlisted Evaluation Reports (EERs) for soldier in grade E-4 are due to COMPACT by close of business November 21.

Commander should insure that supervisors fill out reports on their personnel in time to arrive at COMPACT by deadline.

Late submission could result in delays in promotions, reenlistment, levy, concurrent travel and school assignments.

For additional information on EERs and SEERs contact Sgt. Chapman at Bldg. 83, Room 324 or call 545-1060.

On-duty schooling lives?

On-duty high school education for soldiers is not as dead as it was recently thought when the Department of the Army ended the practice of allowing soldiers to go to high school on duty time.

The program has been divided into two parts as of October 1. Those whose job skills do not require them to have a high school diploma can no longer go to school on duty time. However, those whose occupation requires a high school diploma can still take those classes on duty time.

The high school completion program includes only those courses needed to complete high school.

Army is smaller this year

The Army is smaller this year than last, according to a DA report. The difference, however, is small.

At the end of September 1976, the Army had 782,668 soldiers but finished the month of September this year at a level of 782,246.

DoD reports a similar decline in manpower level from 2,083,581 in the same period for last year to 2,074,541 for September this year.

SGLI worth $20,000 in life

Your Servicemen's Group Life Insurance (SGLI) gives you $20,000 worth of term life insurance. Coverage is automatically given to commissioned, warrant, and enlisted personnel on full-time active duty or on active duty for training for at least 31 days. In addition, ROTC cadets attending field training and U.S. members of the Corps of Cadets performing full-time duty at the U.S. Military Academy receive SGLI coverage.

A monthly deduction of $.85 per $5,000 worth of insurance is taken from your pay as your share of the premium; the federal government pays the balance. SGLI has no loan, cash, paid-up or extended insurance benefits.

You can withdraw from the program or reduce your coverage (increments of $5,000 only) by stating your intentions in writing. Item 18 on DA Form 41, Record of Emergency Data, is provided for that purpose.

For more detailed information see AR 608-2, Servicemen's Group Life Insurance (SGLI) — Veterans' Group Life Insurance (VGLI), or your personnel officer.

No crawling, stooping, running ....

By Marie M. Russo

"Hey, Doc, I'm really beat and don't feel like going to the field, how 'bout a two week profile."

Many people think this is all a soldier has to do and BAM —he has a profile.

Well this isn't so. When a medical officer assigns a profile, whether temporary or permanent, the patient definitely has some type of disabling condition.

For instance, say that Maj. Jones has been treating Sgt. Hill's condition for about nine months. After medical treatment and temporary profiles the condition should have corrected itself, but for various reasons Sgt. Hill is still bothered by it. It is only now, when in the doctor's medical judgment the condition will not get any better, that he starts permanent profile actions.

But even at this point the question of whether or not the soldier really needs a permanent profile is still brought up. It isn't up to one doctor alone to assign a permanent profile.

If the medical officer feels that it is the only alternative his recommendations are presented to a Medical Board at least two other doctors specializing in the same area, i.e. orthopedics or surgey, and the board must agree with his findings. Even after this unanimous decision is reached, still another medical officer, the chief of professional services, must approve the profile.

The system is based on the function of the body systems and their relation to a soldier's military duties

For those of you who still don't believe it isn't easy to get a profile it's probably because you don't understand how the profile system works.

The system is based on the function of the body systems and their relation to a soldier's military duties. Therefore, the functional capacity of a particular organ or system of the body, rather than the medical defect itself, is evaluated.

The functional grading of the profile must be done with great care and, according to Mrs. Joyce Sizemore, assistant Medical Board officer, "Clear and accurate descriptions of medical, physical and mental conditions are essential, since the analysis of the individual's medical, physical and mental status plays an important role in his assignment and welfare."

This information assists the unit commander and personnel officer in their determination of the individual's assignment or reclassification actions.

In developing the system, the body's functions have been considered under six factors and these factors have been designated "P-U-L-H-E-S."

"I'm sorry, top, I can't make the run today. They gave me a T-3 under the P-row and I'll be out of action for two weeks?"

P—Physical capacity or stamina— The factor concerns general physical capacity. It normally includes conditions of the heart; respiratory system, gastrointestinal system; genitourinary system; nervous system, allergic, endocrine, metabolic, and nutritional diseases; diseases of the blood and blood-forming tissues; dental conditions; diseases of the breast; and other organic defects and diseases which do not fall under other specific factors of the system. It is also common to consider build, strength, endurance, height-weight-body build relationship, agility, energy, and muscular coordination.

U—Upper extremities — This factor concerns the hands, arms, shoulder girdle and spine in regard to strength, range of motion and general efficiency.

L—Lower extremities—This factor involves the feet, legs, pelvic girdle, lower back musculature and lower spine in regard to strength, range of motion and general efficiency.

H—Hearing and ear—This factor concerns auditory acuity and diseases and defects of the ear.

E—Eyes— This factor involves visual acuity and diseases and defects of the eyes.

S—Psychiatric— This factor concerns personality, emotional stability and psychiatric diseases.

Four numerical designations are also used when evaluating the individual's medical condition to reflect the different levels of functional capacity.

An individual having a numerical designation of "1" under all six factors is considered to possess a high level of medical fitness and is medically fit for any military assignment.

A physical profile of "2" under any or all factors indicates that an individual possesses some medical condition or physical defect which may impose some limitations on initial MOS classiffication and assignment.

A profile containing one or more numerical designations of "3" signifies that the individual has a medical condition or physical defect which requires certain restrictions in assignment. However, he is physically capable of performing full military duty.

When a numerical designator of "4" is used there are significant assignment limitations which must be fully described if the individual is to be returned to duty. However, in most cases the member is unfit for service because of a physical disability.

"Clear and accurate discriptions of medical, physical and mental condition are essential . . ."

To make the profile serial even more informative, a modifier, "R" or "T", is also used. The modifier "R" indicates that the condition is considered remediable and a "T" means that the condition is temporary.

So, next time you are tempted to say that someone is shamming, based solely on the fact that he may have a profile assigned to him, think twice. This individual may not be dying from a rare disease, but that doesn't mean he isn't suffering from a very real, and often very painful, ailment. There have been excellent soldiers and even some heroes that had profiles.

Free VA tutors available for vets

Uncle Sam is in the tutoring business, the Veterans Administration reminds veterans enrolled in college under the GI Bill.

Without being charged against the veteran's basic educational entitlement, free tutoring help is available to make sure veterans get the most from their college training, VA officials said.

The government did not pay for tutorial assistance for World War II and Korean conflict veterans, but under present law VA will pay as much as $65 a month for such help up to a maximum of $780.

Tutorial benefits are not only available to veterans and active duty service members who are studying under the VA's Dependent's Educational Assistance Program, but also to widows, widowers, spouses and children.

Eligibility depends upon the amount of time school is attended and if those veterans and service members attending school have a deficiency in a subject required in an approved program of education, VA officials said.

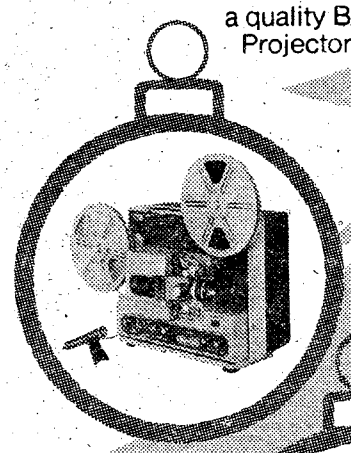
Applications should be made on VA Form 22-19904 within a year of the tutoring and should be submitted to the VA regional office which maintains the veteran's claim folder. Applications should be certified by the school, VA officials said.

VA Q&A

Q — Does the Veterans Administration provide any form of educational loan?

A — Yes; recent changes in the law provide the veteran-student may borrow up to $1,500 per regular academic year. Applications are available with vet-reps at college campuses and campus financial aid offices.

Q. — Are the wives and children of veterans eligible for educational assistance from the VA?



A. — Yes, if the veteran dies of a service-connected condition; or if living, has a service-connected disability considered by the VA to be total and permanent in nature.

Glad you asked . . .

What are your feelings about soldiers getting profiles?

By Sue Davis

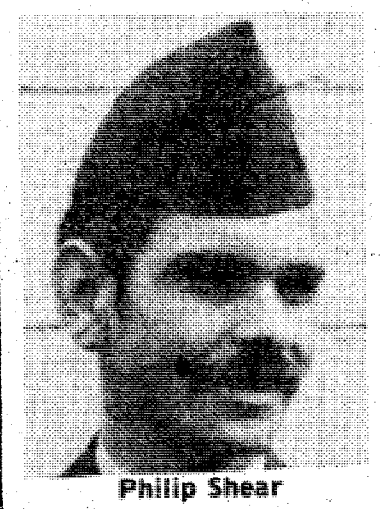
Maj. Willie H. Boyd, 34th Med Bn

I feel that some profiles are valid. However, it is my impression that many soldiers are using the profiles for their own selfish reasons. There is no desire or motivation to do otherwise. The commander must question each profile to determine the exact limitations imposed.

Willie Boyd

Robert Woolley

SSgt. Robert W. Woolley, Hq Co, HQ Cmd



I feel that a profile should be given to a soldier when, due to illness or injury, he or she can no longer perform his duties. This should be the only time a profile should be issued. I also think that when a soldier does have a profile, he should not be harrassed and pressured into doing things covered by his profile.

PFC Becky M. Butson, Hq Co, HQ Cmd

If a soldier has a medical problem that is severe enough to warrant a profile but not severe enough to be released from the Army, the profile should be looked at and respected with no exceptions. They should attend P.T. formations if it is that kind of profile, but should not be forced to do any sort of P.T. (whether stated in the profile or not) that would further the injury. Discretion should be used by all concerned.

Becky Butson

Philip Shear

Sp5 Philip H. Shear, USACC Agency

Profiles are alright provided they are not used to get out of mandatory military duties that are required of them. These include details, physical training and combat situations.

SFC Willis L. Tribble, 34th Med Bn

First, one would have to understand the purpose of a profile and its limitations. The medical profession gives them to the individual who, in turn, takes it to his unit for limited duty. Let us say it is a T-3 profile — no running, jumping, crawling, stooping, standing or marching for more than 10 minutes at a time — for a period of 45 days. Why send him to work? Will this profile make him exempt from combat duty? If not, what is he to do when the enemy attacks?

Willis Tribble

Let doctor do doctoring

Isn't it amazing that every time a unit gets ready to spend some time in the field the rate of sick call attendance rises? Aches and pains that until that time remained ignored become the fore-runner of concern to many soldiers. And of course with an increase in the number of profiles issued by medical officers.

The normal reaction seems to be to tag these persons with names such as — sand bagger, gimp, gold bricker, walking wounded and many other unmentional pseudonyms. Granted these titles may apply to a small minority of these so-called "shamers," but by far the majority are bonafide "crips."

So a soldier's been fighting a cold or a touch of the flu unsuccessfully for three days. He/she works in an office during the normal course of business, has been on sick call and is presently under medication. In the judgment of a medical officer no profile is needed.

Now the soldier realizes the potential health hazard presented by spending a week in the field so he/she returns to sick call for another evaluation. The doctor agrees that a field exercise could result in needless exposure and an unwarrnated determent to becoming well the physician issues a profile precluding participation in the exercise.

The trooper returns to the unit and — wham — he/she is now a gold bricker and a sand bagger. Right?

Wrong! The soldier is ill and as such is entitled to treatment — even if it includes being put on a profile.

Granted there are ways to beat the system and undoubtedly there are a few malingerers who make it bad for the rest. But, until you earn the title of Medical Doctor, stick to soldiering and let the doctor do the doctoring.

What communication gap?

By Marv Davis

There is a rumor going around the country that today's youth can't write very well. It is said that because this generation of "media children" grew up with television that they have become unaccustomed to communicating via the printed word. They are accused of being unable to string words together in some organized manner which make them recognizable to the older, more learned generation.

The older generation, particularly the bureaucratically inclined, is however guilty of even more flagrant violations. The confused meanderings and obfuscations of the average military letter is enough to convince the average reader that the CIA should be called in to translate.

Not long ago, I was relaxing in front of the TV watching an old William Holden movie. You remember the one where he was a former Korean War POW trying to get a job as a test pilot. Well, Lloyd Nolan, played the General who said, "I just received a T-W-X from headquarters." He didn't say "twix" like we used to in the real Air Force. I immediately chastised their technical advisor for such a blunder.

Well, the joke was on me. Later I saw an Air Force film, a real general pulled a piece of paper from his pocket and said, "I just received this T-W-X from the Secretary of Defense . . ." Imagine that all that time we had mistakenly been calling them "twixes."

Being trained in communication and of course wanting to be very precise in the spoken word, I am very careful to make certain the precise message is communicated. For instance, I was sitting in my office minding my typewriter when a friend came in and said, "I really can't get a feel for this can of worms. It's got such a short fuse on it we don't have time to grease the skids. We're behind the power curve already and if we don't get our feet on the ground it might fall though the crack or get wrapped around the axle. I've been trying to pass the buck to the headshed for the whole ball of sax and get them off dead center, but they only gave me additional guidance to bring me up to speed. You know the old man is brown shoe all the way and is as hard-nosed as they come. He said he's locked in concrete. He also said that being the hard charger that I'm supposed to be, it should be a piece of cake. I can't fight the system by myself, so that's why I came to you. Maybe you can clear the air and help me get a handle on it."

Knowing exactly what he meant, I replied without hesitation. "Well, we should be able to smoke something out and check off this block in short order. This whole nine yards can be boiled down without getting it lost in the soup. We laid the groundwork for this turkey when it was further upstream so we should be able to knock something out in short order."

"I know MERDCOM is between a rock and a hard place on this one," I continued, "because DA needs a position-statement ASAP. The answer we buck up to DA might have to be quick and dirty until we have more breathing room to check it out, but at least it will get them off our backs. Our experience factor indicates that we might be able to milk it for all its worth, pad it a little, water it down some, then skim off the cream, and finally ask for more lead time. Then we'll run it by the old man to make certain we don't get hurt if this whole thing blows up in our faces. I think if we cinch up and get with the program it should be a no-sweat situation."

That was just the answer he needed. He thanked me for my help and trotted off smiling with relief. No sweat.

You know if everyone communicated in such precise terms there would be much better understanding between people and we could all get more work done. Also, next time someone makes a movie about the Army and wants to know how real people talk, I hope they ask for my advice. (ARNEWS).

West Point Prep School accepting applications

Interested in attending West Point? The United States Military Academy Preparatory School (USMAPS) in Ft. Mommouth, N.J. is offering an opportunity to qualified enlisted soldiers interested in attending a two semester academic course.

The course, open to both active duty and reserve members, enhances the soldier's opportunity to qualify for admission to the United States Military Academy (USMA) in West Point, N.Y.

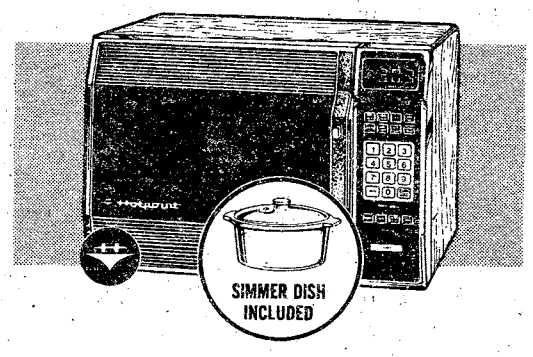
Applications are presently being accepted for the class of 1978-79. Basic eligibility requirements are:

1. A citizen of the U.S. or become a citizen prior to entering West Point.

2. At least 17 but not over 21 years of age on July 1 of the year the student enters the preparatory school.

3. Single with no legal obligation to support a child or children.

4. In good health, no disqualifying physical defects, vision correctable to 20/20.



5. High school graduate or the equivalent with a solid academic background. Ideally, applicants should have four years of English and three years of college prepatory math. An individual with obvious leadership potential and a weaker academic background should not be discouraged from applying since many other factors are considered.

6. Applicants should be highly recommended by their commanders, counselors and teachers.

Final selection will be made in early June, so applications should be completed as soon as possible.

Detailed information may be obtained by contacting 1stLt. James Abcouwer at 544-6769/6839.

Camellia is an apartment motel. We don't rent rooms, we rent furnished apartments with all the features of a regular motel plus added conveniences that cannot be provided with just a single room — and all at the same, or most times lower rates than the single -room motel. For example, our "standard" unit is comprised of two bedrooms, combination living room-dining room, bathroom and fully furnished kitchen including refrigerator, stove, cooking utensils, and table service for six people. These are some of the "extras" but at no extra cost. Our 150 units are in separate buildings with usually four apartments in each building, which adds to a person's or family's privacy.

36th Engineers provide support for mock war

By Joe Hilton and Patricia Redmond

"Service Through Support" — the motto of the 67th Maint Bn (DS) means a daily spectrum of mission activities unequaled by any other unit of comparable size on Ft. Benning.

This support was exhibited last week when combat support and combat service support units from the 67th participated in a mock war between the 82nd Abn Div and Inf Div at Eglin Air Force Base, Fla.

During the nine-day joint readiness exercise the 598th Lt Maint Co and the 608th Ord Co helped facilitate the movement of the "friendlies" (82nd) through tactical support maintenance which included tank armament repair, field vehicle maintenance, generator repair and operating an Ammunition Supply Point.

598th's mission began two weeks prior to the exercise, with supporting elements from the 82nd as they convoyed through Benning on their way to the maneuver area at Eglin, the maintenance specialists completed over 200 individual tasks by termination of the exercise.

The 608th convoyed and airlifted troops onto the simulated battlefield and constructed an ammunition supply point to handle incoming and outgoing ammo. Once at Eglin their primary mission was to support all 82nd personnel involved in the Bold Eagle exercise and receive all types of ammo from the unit involved in the exercise.

"Everyone did an outstanding job," said LtCol Richard Garlick, battalion commander. "The more we're challenged, the better we do."

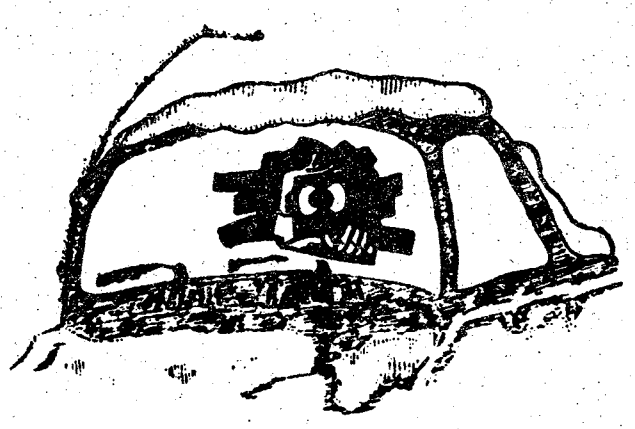
'Why didn't YOU see ME?'

By Bobby Trotter

The alarm clock suddenly shatters the silence and shocks you awake.

It's time to get moving if you're going to make it to work on time. As you throw back the sheets, you feel the morning chill surround you. You ignore it and rush through your morning preparations; then you run outside only to find your car's windows have a thick frost covering them.



Since you're in a hurry, you can't take time for trivia like the side windows. You scrape the icy film from the front window and give the back a quick once-over to open up a space to see through.

Now you're ready. You hop into the car, mutter a few exclamations because the seat is so cold it makes your teeth chatter. You start the car up and, after a few seconds, you pull out and you're on your way.

Approaching a traffic light, you observe another car with all its windows fogged up and think to yourself, "That dummy's going to have an accident trying to drive when he can't see through the front window." A mile or so down the road you spy an accident involving a car with fogged windows. The car had struck a telephone pole.

Aloud you say to yourself, "That's a heck of a way to get back at the telephone company for raising the rates."

As you near the base, you pass a car on the left side, go on a few feet, and then proceed to get back in the right lane. You strike the car and both of you hop out yelling, "Why didn't YOU see ME?" You totally ignore the fact that YOU couldn't see him because the side and back windows are still covered with frost and are fogged up. You scream to yourself. "How can this happen to me?"

What you can't see You CAN hit!

Many accidents each year are caused by people who are "in a hurry," who don't stop to take the necessary time to protect themselves. By following these few precautions, you might save the life of another driver, a pedestrian — or even your own.

- Clean all windows completely to insure complete visibility.
- Warm your car up before setting it in motion to avoid chattering teeth and possible impairment of reactions.
- Make sure all headlights and taillights are free of frost; thus increasing the chance of your being seen.
- Drive defensively — make allowances for the other driver's oversights. And be especially sure to slow down when roads are icy or wet.

Human life is precious. Take the time to safeguard yours.

Jumping dead car battery may be hazardous

Is the old "positive-to-positive and negative-to-negative" advice sufficient for safely jumping a dead car battery?

Many people get by with that approach to jumping a battery, and many of them don't. Improper jumping can result in a powerful explosion and serious injury.

As cold weather approaches, dead car battery problems become more common. Here are a few tips on safely starting a car that has a rundown battery:

● Determine the voltages of the two batteries — they must be the same. Most late model cars are made with 12 volt systems, but double-check older and foreign cars. Check your owner's manual. Do not connect 12 volt and six volt systems together.

● Turn off all accessory switches on both cars and the ignition switch on the car with the rundown battery. Place the cars in neutral or park. Set the hand brake. Allow the booster car to run at fast idle. Do NOT let any part of the two vehicles touch. Arcing can result if you try to attach the cables when the cars are touching. And don't smoke when working near the battery.

● Check your car battery's polarity (+ and - points) in the owner's manual before attaching booster cables. Then clamp the red end of the jumper cable to the ungrounded terminal — usually marked positive (+) of the good battery. Connect the other red end of the cable to the rundown battery terminal with the same (+) polarity, resulting in a positive to positive connection.

● Next attach the black jumper cable to the remaining grounded terminal — usually marked negative (-) of the booster battery, and then to the engine block of the car being jumped. Improper connections can result in sparks and an explosiion of the battery gas.

● Turn on the ignition in the disabled car and then attempt to start it for no more than 10 seconds. If the engine doesn't run, allow the cables to cool for 25 seconds before trying again. If the rundown car doesn't start after three tries, something else is wrong, and you should seek professional mechanical assistance.

● Once the car has started, run the engine at a fast idle to recharge the battery.

● In removing the cables, simply reverse the hookup sequence. Avoid touching the cable clamps together or to other metal while the cables are attached to the terminals.

Roush Barracks named for former Infantryman

Mrs. Frank Shober, widow of Major William C. Roush and MajGen. William J. Livsey unveil a portrait of her late husband at the dedication of the new AIT barracks.

In keeping with Army tradition, the new Advanced Individual Training barracks at Sand Hill has been being named for an Infantryman who dedicated his life to his country under combat conditions.

The first of the modern, brick, five-company barracks to be finished was named for Maj. William C. Roush, an Infantry Officer, during dedication ceremonies November 3.

Roush was posthumously awarded the Distinguished Service Cross for exceptionally valorous actions on January 5, 1968, while accompanying an infantry company conducting a combat mission near Bo Tuc, Vietnam. He was a member of the 25th Inf Div during this action which occurred during his third Vietnam tour.

The $8 million barracks houses 1,120 trainees and 46 cadre of the 6th Bn, 1st AIT Bde. The trainees are quartered in 56-man bay areas, each with its own cadre room, study area and bathing facilities.

Also in the one building are day rooms, arms rooms, equipment scrupping rooms, laundry facilities, administrative areas for the five companies and the battalion and a dining facility. The complex includes physical training and/or drill areas under the cover of the sleeping wings.

So far, in the Sand Hill location, construction has been completed on the gymnasium, post exchange, troop medical clinic, brigade headquarters, chapel and central energy plant. A second barracks is finished, but not occupied yet, and the third is due to be completed in the spring of '78, while the fourth's completion date is scheduled during that summer.

In a candle-lit honors ceremony held recently, a select group of young ladies received rewards which represented a summer and fall full of energetic but enjoyable efforts.

Fourteen dependent daughters of the Ft. Benning community received Cadette and American Red Cross badges and pins earned as members of the Bouton Heights Cadette Scout group.

In the early spring, the young teens adapted and then applied themselves to a theme of fun and safety on wilderness waterways. After special lessons in swimming given in Briant Wells Fieldhouse pool, the group progressed to water safety skills, learning techniques of assisting a drowning victim and practicing swimming rescues.

To further prepare themselves in self reliance and to give assistance to others, they received instruction from a Columbus College Nursing Instructor in emergency first-aid. Individual girls also developed special skills in a variety of subjects, studying nature in the wild, learning and enjoying sports and other games and developing the organizational and leadership skills which permitted the Cadette group to work together as a team and to grow.

Time-out was taken from the tasks at hand for special fun — a spring dance was planned and enjoyed by all, as was a special party given for the girls in reciprocation their previous guests. A camping excursion with hundreds of other girls helped to celebrate the coming of summer.,

The group's final fall fling was a weekend trip to Camp Concharty in the Pine Mountain foothills. There they learned canoeing from Red Cross instructor, Ray Nordwall. Scant showers scarcely dampened the girl's spirits, as they slipped silently across a placid lake or pattled vigorously in competition. Most challenging, and perhaps most enjoyable, was the time spent in capsizing and recovering the canoes in deep water, a necessary safety skill which has prepared these young people for more adventure and fun on the water in the future.

All of the girl's efforts and achievements were revealed in the awards presented last Thursday, which included Red Cross certificates and patches for Advanced Swimming, Basic Rescue and Junior Lifesaving, as well as the Red Cross canoeing certificate.

A myriad of milticolor Cadette proficiency badges were presented to: Jean Walker, Sharon Carter, Kim Cooper, Theresa Craven, Kelly Frank, Melessia Jones, Anna Joyner, Lisa Laird, Shirley Mailman, Kim Nickens, Robin Rackliffe, Kim Schafer, Lindy Vejar and Melinda Vejar.

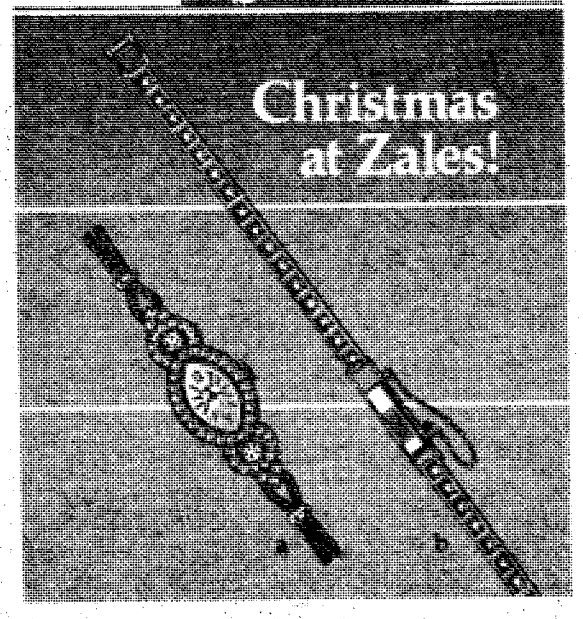
Lindy Vejar, daughter of Maj. and Mrs. Ray Vejar, excelled in proficiency badges — earning awards in a variety of subjects, all of which indicate skills and knowledge mastered and ready for use in daily life.

Challenge Pins were presented to Kimberly Schafer, daughter of 1st Sgt. and Mrs. John Schafer and Ann Joyner, daughter of SFC and Mrs. James Joyner. The awards were for in-depth efforts over an extended period of time in the development and use of Social Skills.

Challenge awards for Social Dependability, Emergency Preparedness, and Active Citizenship were presented to Sharon Carter, daughter of Sgt. and Mrs. John Russ, in recognition of her special efforts while a member of another Cadette group.

The candle-lit ceremony concluded with announcements of future plans that include a cycling trip to Callaway Gardens; a winter of crafts and social dancing followed by a spring-time of camping with trips to the mountains and the seashore.

Boy Scouts slate Annual Adult Appreciation Night



The Ft. Benning District, Chattahoochee Council, Boy Scouts of America will hold its annual Adult Appreciation Night, "Pot Luck Supper," on November 17 at the Columbus Municipal Auditorium.

This annual event is conducted to recognize adult members of the military community who have contributed their efforts and time to provide boys and girls an opportunity to participate and grow through scouting.

The program will feature a concert by the Colonial Band, Explorer Troop 76. The Guest Speaker will be Col Addison D. Davis III, Chief of Staff, USAIC, who has been actively involved in scouting for many years.

Scouters, volunteers and parents are invited to attend. Information and/or assistance can be obtained by contacting the Project Officer, Maj Frank D. Shehulski, 545-5880/544-4167 or the Scout Center, 545-1806.

Wilber gets a new look in playground equipment

Using a little imagination and ingenuity the engineers of the 43rd Bn shaped and molded wood, tires, chains and bolts into playground equipment for the children of the Wilbur Elementary School.

Students from Wilbur Elementary School try the "tire tree" one of four new pieces of playground constructed by the engineers of Co D, 43rd Engr Bn for the school.

The engineers from Co D's second platoon constructed four new pieces of playground equipment: a tire raft, tire tree, lean-to tunnel and balance rail.

"This new concept in playground equipment has helped the children develop muscles they could not have developed before," commented Mr. Rupert C. Nunally, school principle.

Special care was taken by the engineers to prevent the children from hurting themselves while on the equipment. The wood was pressure treated to preserve it and the ends of all bolts were below the surface of the wood to insure the safety of the children.

Material and equipment were paid for by the school while the Army kept costs to a minimum by providing manpower from the engineer battalion.

The project was coordinated through the efforts of Mr. Nunally, the school PTA and the construction section of the 36th Engr Gp.

The engineers recently completed a similar project at the McBride School. These civil action projects, "gave our engineers the opportunity to serve the community and enhance the mental and physical growth of Benning's children," stated Capt. Michael Baber, company commander for Co D.

No shows continue to be a problem at MAH

No shows for clinic appointments continue to be a serious problem at Martin Army Hospital, according to Martin Army Hospital Commander, Col. Anton L. Hitzelberger.

For the month of September, 679 appointments were failed by patients in the various hospital clinics. Hitzelberger said that of the total number of missed appointments, 267 were active duty personnel and 412 were retired personnel and dependents.

"With such a critical doctor shortage, this amount of failed appointments is inexcusable. I feel that health service has to be a two way street. In addition to our responsibility to provide services, the community has a moral responsibility for their health care. This includes taking care of minor illnesses, not abusing the Emergency Room and keeping clinic appointments." Hitzelberger said.

The hospital commander went on to personally thank the 518 patients who called the Central Appointment Desk to cancel their appointments. This enabled other patients to be scheduled for those time slots.

DYA needs volunteers with medical training

The Dependent Youth Activities Office is seeking volunteers with medical training to serve as stand-by medics at Fort Benning Youth Activities football games.

Military medics, parents with medical training, graduates of Red Cross first aid courses all qualify. The purpose of the volunteer medics will be to advise coaches and parents of DYA football players as the the seriousness of any injuries that may occur during football games, to recommend whether an injured player be taken to a medical facility and if so, whether transporation in a POV is sufficient or an ambulance vehicle is necessary.

Only two more weeks remain in the 1977 DYA football season, so the obligation is not extensive. Any person willing to volunteer for this kind of support is requested to call the Dependent Youth Activities Office, 544-4902.

Amateur art fest slated

Kelley Hill Recreation Center is having it's 9th Annual Amateur Art Contest and Exhibition through November 18 and 19 at the center, Bldg. 9079 from 1 to 10 p.m. each day.

The Exhibition will have 11 categories, which will include charcoal, oils, photography, sculpture, water color, pen & ink, open media, pastels, acrylic pencil and mixed media. Only three entries per category will be accepted from each person.

The deadline for entries is November 16, 9:30 p.m. All the art work is to be taken to the Recreation Center.

The show is open to all active duty, retired military and their dependents. The dependents must be over the age of 16. Department of the Army civilians (DAC) and Non-appropriated fund civilians (NAF) are also welcome. Entry blanks may be picked up at Kelley Hill Recreation Center or the ITT office, Bldg. 394 (Doughboy Stadium),

The entries will be judged on the 19th and awards will be presented at 2 p.m. that day.

For further information call the Kelley Hill Recreation Center at 544-1721/3079.

No Jogging on the Golf Course

Recently individual participants in the "Run for Your Life" program have been running in the playing areas of the "Follow Me" Golf Course. This creates a safety hazard for the runners and interferes with play on the course. Runners could incur serious injury if hit by a golf ball. Runners are requested not to run on the golf course during playing hours.

Santa Clause Suits are Available

Santa Clause suits will be loaned out for post Christmas parties by Recreation Services. Units must submit a request on DA Form 2496 to RSO; ATTN: Supply. Request will include: Date and time suit is required; Name, rank and SSN of person to pick up suit and individual responsible for its return. Suits can only be retained for duration of party. Reservations will be confirmed by TELECON.

1977 Stag Bowl

Recreation Services ITT Office, Bldg 394 (Doughboy Stadium) has available for sale, tickets to the 1977 Stagg Bowl, December 3. Tickets cost $4 with the proceeds going to the Lions Club Conservation and Crippled Children Programs. The game will be held in the Phenix City Municipal Stadium. For further information call 545-7414/2281.

Tenth Annual Kelley Hill Cat Show

Cat owners are invited to enter their feline companions in the Tenth Annual Kelley Hill Cat Show, November 12 at 2 p.m. in the Kelley Hill Recreation Center Ballroom. The Center is located on Marne Road.

The show is open to all cats of all breeds as well as kittens (at least 6 to 8 weeks of age). The five major categories to be judged are Kittens, Siamese, Longhair, Shorthair (American Domestic) and Exotic Breeds.

Ribbons will be awarded to first, second and third places winners in each category. Entry is open to civilians as well as military, however, entries are limited to one cat per person. Each person will be responsible for his or her cat. Declawed and pregnant cats are not eligible. Cats must be in good health. Rabies and feline distemper shots are required.

Judges for the show include representatives from the Metropolitan Animal Shelter and the Chattohoochee Valley Humane Society. Judging will begin at 2 p.m.

Call Kelley Hill Recreation Center (544-1721/3079) before November 11, for information concerning registration.

Doughboy League

For the second time this year the Bears and the Green Hornets tied. Both scores were 6-6. The Bears scored first with Teddy Leonhart scoring from 4 yards out. In addition to the TD, Leonhart rushed for over 70 yards. He was assisted on offense by the Foley brothers, Jeffrey and John Darrell. Terrance Black and Napolean Ford stood out on defense. The Green Hornets' Napolean Robinson and Gary Moon each intercepted a pass; Robinson running his back, 35 yards. Robinson also stood out on defense. The Green Hornets had a good day moving the ball but could not score more than one TD.

The Crusaders defeated the Sharks 18-0 to remain one game behind league leading Patriots. The first TD was set up when Danny Denford recovered a Shark fumble. Denford played a terrific game at defensive end. Crusaders first TD was a ten-yard pass play from Eric Thomas to Baxter Barber. The second TD was by Darrin Williams from sixteen yards out. The third was by quarterback Larry Smith who went right up the middle on a four-yard quarterback sneak. In addition to Denford, Alfredo Rundell and Kyle Vavrek played outstanding defense. This defense was given up only 24 points in eight games. The Sharks' Gary Hicks had another outstanding game on defense.

The league-leading Patriots defeated the Dolphins. The first touchdown of the game was a 12-yard pass from Chris Baird to Matt Cole in the endzone. Mark Crites drove in for the PAT. After super blocking by Joey Hashimoto and pass receptions by Mark Miller, Cole carried in from the 2-yard line behind the blocking of Ricky McGee. The PAT was unsuccessful. The Patriot defense unit was led by John Hannon, Martin Wright, Billy Moore, Shannon Smith, Donald Cruce, Robert Buff, Mike Brand and Merritte Wilson.

Hunting safety tips

- Check your weapon and ammunition carefully before leaving and never load a weapon before transporting it.
- Lay the weapon down or hand it to a companion before climbing trees, fences or jumping a ditch.
- Be sure of your target before firing.
- Treat every weapon as if it were loaded. Remember their lethal potential and treat them with the respect they deserve.
- At home or in the field, "bullets and booze" don't mix. The target that is difficult to hit without a drink can never be as clear with one.
- Be sure all weapons are locked up and away from the inquisitive hands of children.
- Keep all weapons unloaded and never assume that it is unloaded or that the safety mechanism is a guarantee.
- Store ammunition separate from weapons.
- Know how to operate each weapon and know its safety features.
- Treat every weapon as if it were loaded.

Shadow on the Green

"Shadow on the Green" a Musical Production of life during the days of our Nations Civil War. Using Mime, Dance Interludes, and Songs of the period the "What You Will" Players will present a fascinating panarama of an experience that was both grim and humorous, tragic and inspiring. It is the intention of "Shadow on the Green" to present an impression of a people caught in struggle.

ACS Sav-A-Toy project begins

Ft. Benning's Army Community Service (ACS) has begun its annual drive for repairable toys in order to have a successful Christmas Sav-A-Toy project again this year.

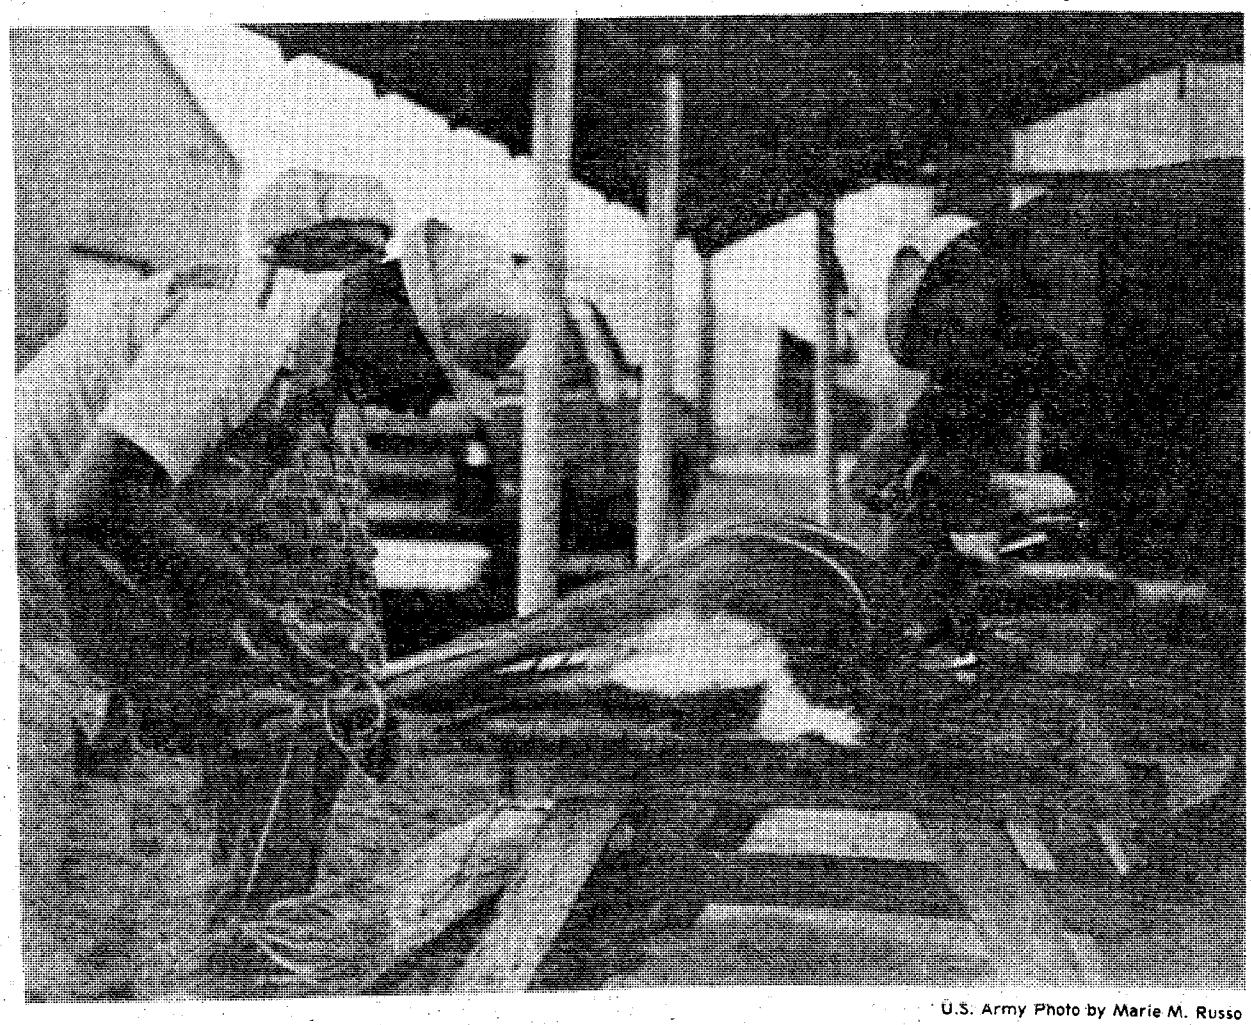
Through contacting Columbus and Phenix City merchants and appealing to the military community in general, ACS hopes to collect a large volume of usable toys.

The project culminates each year with the distribution of repaired toys to families who are in need of them. Many active duty, retired, and dependent families are helped through this annual program, but there are still vast numbers of families who need the aid but don't receive it simply because they don't apply for it. For reasons of pride or embarrassment, many families won't apply to have toys supplied for them at Christmastime and it will be the children who will do without on Christmas Day.

According to ACS Chief, Capt. David E. Ebron, there can be no such thing as a toy that's too old. The Sav-A-Toy project needs as many toys as possible and will accept toys from any organization or individual, civilian or military. Toys should be brought to the ACS Welcome Center in Bldg 83 or can be picked up by calling 545-1233/4679.

If you know of a deserving family in the military community who will not be able to enjoy the traditional Christmas joys, please notify the ACS Welcome Center by calling the above mentioned number. Individuals needing Christmas toys themselves can also come to the Welcome Center to apply without going through their assigned unit.

The simple act of contacting ACS can put a sparkle in the eyes of many children on Christmas Day.



Deer Check Point safest way to go

By Marie M. Russo

"We're concerned about their health and welfare," stated Maj. Lyle E. Zitek.

No, Maj. Zitek is not an AIT battalion commander talking to his company commanders and drill sergeants. He is the chief of food hygiene, safety and quality assurance in the veterinary activities department.

Maj. Lyle Zitek determines how old this deer is by counting its teeth, while the hunters, SFC Barry Browning, USAIB, and Tito Cruz, untie the deer. Their deer was one of 72 deers hunted down Saturday, the first day of deer season, by more than 1,000 hunters.

What is he talking about? Basically, the health of the Fort Benning deer herd. Maj. Zitek and other volunteers from his office field dress deer for the hunters at the Deer Check Point.

The volunteers take external parasite samples, blood and tissue specimens from the deer to determine whether there may be a disease in the herd that is easily transmitted to man.

This information helps them to assess the health of the herd, what the deer is eating and the opportunity also serves as a training exercise for the food inspectors.

"This is a great opportunity for a hands on exercise," commented Maj. Zitek. The meat the food inspectors usually see has already been USDA inspected once it arrives at the commissary the most he can do is re-inspect the meat.

"Being out here is a very down to earth basic job," commented Sp5 James Gilmore, a food inspector. "In a combat situation it would be my responsibility to okay the meat before the troops get it. This is good experience for me."

The volunteers will be at the check point tomorrow; Sunday, November 25, 26, 27; December 10, 11, 17 and 18.

The service they provide is free and is aside from helping the veterinary department activities. It also educates the hunter, as Zitek and his staff dress the deer in front of the hunters and give them instructions so they can do it themselves.

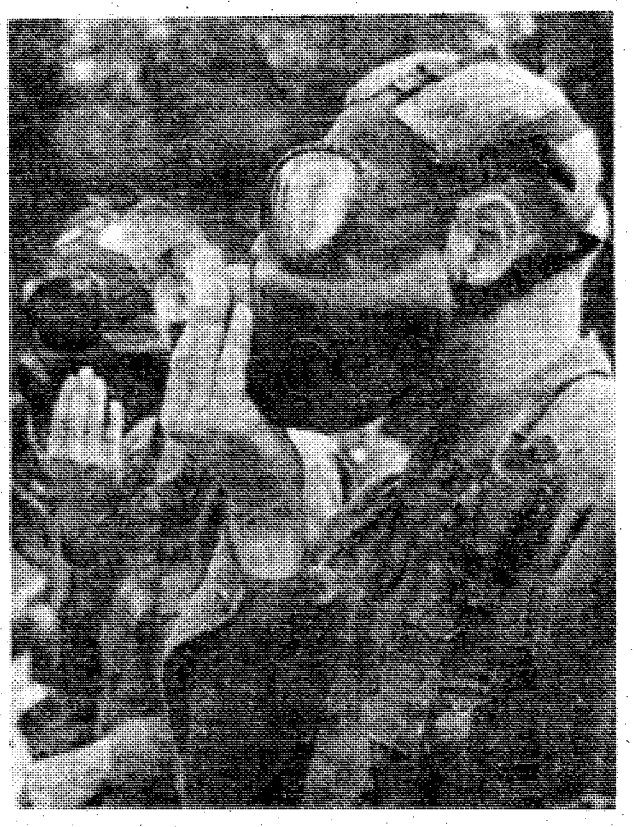
Third week is a gas!

By Lisa D'Luhy



Ortho-Chlorobenzalmalononitrile is still being administered to the Advanced Individual Training (Inf) soldier, in spite of their objections.

But there is no cause for alarm. More commonly referred to as CS Gas, ortho-chlorobenzalmalononitrile is given to the AIT trainee as part of their combat skills training in their third week of the seven week Infantry course.

The soldier is expected to don a M17A1 protective mask; know how to administer Atropine to a nerve agent casualty; be able to decontaminate himself and individual equipment and perform maintenance to the mask and its accessories. He is also expected to know the proper procedure to take cover for protection against an unwarned nuclear attack and shield himself against an NBC spray or large-scale chemical attack.

Combat Skills training consists of four separate periods of instruction consolidated into one integrated training period of eight hours. Besides NBC training, land navigation, communications and first aid are also taught.

The ability to mask in nine seconds and properly seal a protective mask, decontaminate yourself and equipment and administer first aid to a nerve agent casualty, will be the key factor between survival and death on a battlefield in a chemical environment.

Mosaic presented to Infantry Museum

Anneliese Fritts, Columbus artist and naturalized U.S. citizen recently presented a mosaic entitled "Spirit of 76" to the National Infantry Museum.

The mosaic, which depicts an American flag superimposed with an eagle and the dates "1776-1976" set in relief, is composed of Italian glass tile (tesserae) with the eagle and dates done in 24K gold leaf. It took three months to complete.

Mosaics are the specialty for the German-born artist. Mrs. Fritts, a wife of a retired warrant officer, has had an extensive education in art, including study under mosaic specialist James Trice of Vicenza, Italy.

Mrs. Fritts has exhibited work around the world from California to Germany where her mosaic portrait of John F. Kennedy hangs in Berlin's JFK University. The reception room of the Egyptian Embassy in Washington displays another of her works, a mosaic of Georgia's state flower, the Cherokee rose.

Mr. Dick Grube, curator of the National Infantry Musuem accepts Mrs. Anneliesse Fritts' mosaic entitled "Spirit of '76" for display in the museum.

If you've ever noticed your SWR increasing during damp weather, that's a sure sign that moisture is collecting around your antenna's coax leads. With more cold and wet weather on the way, one step you can take to be sure you stay on the air is to winterize your antenna. Procedure is the same for a base or mobile antenna; here's how.

Remove or lower the antenna and disassemble it. If the connections are heavily coated with rust, you may need to use a rust penetrant to loosen the screws.

Clean the antenna itself with fine-grade steel wool (use a plastic Teflon pot scrubber for fiberglass whips). Don't scrape the loading coil. Go over all the electrical connections with emery cloth or fine sandpaper; screws should be sanded bright to improve electrical contact.

Check the coax for frayed insulation or pinched spots. This is especially important for mobile antennas; a tight bend or pinch, for instance where the trunk lid closes on the coax, could cause the wire inside the coax to snap.

Replace any component which is too far gone to repair or clean and reassemble the antenna. Mount the antenna and check the SWR. You should notice some improvement if you have cleaned the connections properly. Make sure the antenna is properly secured; check set screws, nuts and bolts, etc. For base antennas this would also be a good time to check those guy wires and give some thought to replacing them with non-conductive plastic rope.

Once the SWR is set, the final step is to coat all connections with silicone rubber sealant. This will keep out all moisture and insure that the electrical connections don't deteriorate. Remember, it's not nice to let Mother Nature fool around with your ears.

No SQT for 'short timers'

The Army has decided to exclude shortimers from taking the Skill Qualification Test, according to U.S. Army Training and Doctrine Command

The term "shorttimers," TRADOC emphasized, includes only those soldiers who have previously taken SQT and have 90 days or less remaining before separation or discharge.

"This will alleviate part of the tremendous workload associated with administering and scoring the SQT," TRADOC said. "In addition, even with our quick turnaround time on the Individual Soldier's Report (ISR), the separated soldier might never learn how he scored on the SQT."

"It's obvious that neither the soldier nor Army would benefit by administering the SQT to soldiers with so little time left before separation."

"We use SQT as a training vehicle, primarily. It tells us where training should be instituted or emphasized and where we can get help in the way of literature or training aids and devices."

OSHA: Keeping injuries at a minimum

site," remarked Safety Specialist Lynn Clements. "We act immediately on any complaints we receive to determine if a hazardous safety condition actually exists. If so, we recommend what corrective actions are needed to rectify the problem."

Barbara Murrin, Chief, Occupational Health Service, feels "It's imperative that employees know there is someone looking after their health. We want individuals to be aware of potential health hazards so they can protect themselves from any ill effects."

"If a person calls us with what they feel is a health problem in the work environment," said Murrin, "we first see if a previous survey has been made. If not, we visit the site and measure the factors to determine if a health problem exists.

"Whatever the results," she continued, "the immediate supervisor and the employee who made the request are informed of the results. We then take immediate action to eliminate as much as possible the existing hazard. If an individual has been exposed to the hazard, we run medical tests to determine if the exposure caused detrimental effects. It takes time but not necessarily dollars," she emphasized.

"Above all, responsibility for safe working conditions does not rest solely with management," said Clements. "Any safety clothing, equipment or procedures that are deemed necessary by health and safety officials must be used by employees. It's a two-way street," he concluded.

Doughboys destroy Blue Devils, 50-0

The Saturday night football game at Doughboy Stadium ended with the Lexington Blue Devils forfeiting to the Doughboys 50-0 with 9:04 left in the game.

Lexington received the opening kickoff and three plays later watched helplessly as defensive end John Billops recovered a Lexington fumble on the two-yard line. Julian Williams took it over for the touchdown on the next play and David Ward's kick gave the Doughboys a 7-0 lead with 12:02 remaining in the first period.

With 2:43 left in the opening quarter, the Doughboys again had the ball on the two-yard line and it was Arthur Hawkins who took it in for the score. Ward's kick was good for the extra point, increasing the Doughboy lead to 14-0 at the end of the first period.

In second quarter action, Erogies Grigley swept the left end for 24 yards to the 19-yard line. On the next play, tailback Charles Holley took a pitchout from quarterback Joe Duenas and sprinted down the left side for the touchdown and Ward added the extra point. With 10:07 remaining in the second, a Doughboy drive ended at the two-yard line where a fumble gave the ball to Lexington on the five-yard line. In the next play, Billops recovered another Lexington fumble and ran it in for the score. Ward's kick was dead-center and the score stood at 28-0.

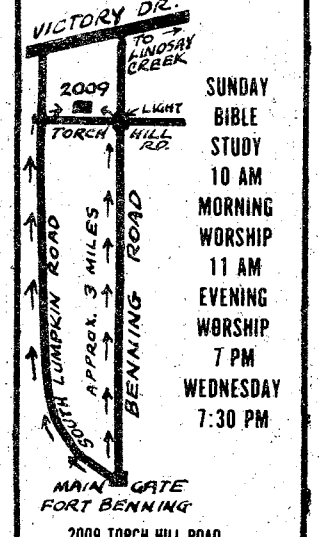
On fourth and one at the 14-yard line, the Doughboys lined up in their usual field goal formation and surprised everyone when Duenas tossed a pass to running back Lewis Taylor who carried the ball to the one-yard line for first and goal. Grigley carried it in for the touchdown and Ward added the extra point.

The final score of the half came with 4:14 remaining when the Lexington quarterback dropped back to pass from his own end zone and was sacked by tackle Carl McKinney for a safety, bringing the score to 37-0.

The Doughboys scored again with 10:11 left in the third period when Duenas threw a 46-yard touchdown pass to split end Rodney Bradley. A Ward kick added the extra point.

The final score of the game came with 7:41 left in the third period when Ben Dudley received a screen pass and raced 28 yards through the opposition for the score.

The score stood at 50-0 with 9:04 remaining in the game when the Blue Devils conceded defeat.



Football fans who braved the heavy downpour to attend the game were presented with a half-time exhibition game by two Biddy League teams, the Cowboys and Redskins. In fifteen minutes of play, the Cowboys managed to trounce the Redskins, 22-0.

Keeping injuries at a minimum

Occupational Safety and Health Act

By Debra Hilgeman

During the month of August this year, 35 military and civilian government employees on this installation suffered accidental on-the-job injuries that resulted in 319 work days lost and a direct monetary lost of $26,795. These figures would undoubtedly be higher were it not for the Occupational Safety and Health Act (OSHA) that was enacted to insure that employees are provided safe and healthful working conditions.

Although OSHA originated in 1970, it was not until 1974 that it included federal employees. Since the scope of OSHA is so large, areas of responsibility are divided among three agencies. The Safety Office determines if unsafe working conditions exist at job sites and makes corrective recommendations. The Occupational Health Service measures health factors at work sites and implements actions necessary for a healthy work environment. Finally, the Engineers execute projects for contract work to correct OSHA deficiencies in building facilities.

One of the requirements of the Act is that all work sites must be inspected annually to determine if all safety standards are being complied with. On Ft. Benning, this means that more than 2500 work sites must be inspected by a team from the Safety Office in order to determine safety related problems in the work area. Safety Specialist Milton Carroli noted, "Inspection procedures established by DA and TRADOC are being followed extensively here."

Last year, the Safety Office and DFAE identified more than $1,877,000 in OSHA deficiencies. The DFAE then obtained the services of a local architect/engineer firm to prepare plans and specifications for correction of OSHA deficiencies in 136 buildings. The plans and specifications were advertised for bids and a construction contract in the amount of $261,881 was awarded to a local contracting firm.

The work consists of providing ventilation systems, mounted electrical systems, mounting fire extinguishers, providing male and female toilet facilities and inclosures, additional hot water capacities to lavatories, as well as other building modifications. "Projects to cover other buildings in which OSHA deficiencies have been identified are of a dollar value which exceeds installation approval authority but, if DA approves, will be accomplished with Minor Military construction funds," said John Baggett, Chief, Engineer and Service Branch.

Another provision of the Act requires displaying the OSHA poster in a conspicuous place at all work sites to inform employees of their rights and responsibilities of employers. The poster details the right of any employee to report any unsafe working conditions, the right to assist in inspections and to appeal any disposition of unsafe or unhealthy working conditions.

"We often receive reports from employees who feel that a hazardous safety condition exists at their work

Pathfinders: First In, Last Out

By Bill Walton

Pathfinders have historically been the first troops into a combat zone. The invasion of Normady in WWII was instituted by Pathfinders who were used to guide Army Air Corps aircraft behind enemy lines to designated drop zones for the insertion of airborne troops.

Organized in 1958 as one of the smallest infantry units at Benning, the 187th Inf Plt's (Pfdr).

Missions is to provide constant navigational assistance to Army aircraft during landing and parachute deliveries in support of USAIS problems. The 187th also assists the Ranger Dept., the Infantry Board, 11th Special Forces Group (Reserve) and works closely with the aviation units in the 34th Med Bn during their field exercises.

The 187th maintains a combat ready posture by training with various units on post. They give classes on the proper rigging of equipment, and use of the Visual Approach Indicator light system to supported units.

"Just a tad to the right and the panel marker will be exactly aligned with the wind direction." A team from the 187th Inf Plt (Pfdr) lays out a drop zone. While Sp4 David Murphy (c) checks the wind azimuth, using a compass, Sgt. Pedro Troche (l) and PFC Steve Roberts position the panel marker, used to designate direction of flight over a drop zone.

Pathfinders may be required to operate in any locale or climate in the world, so the 187th is constantly seeking new skills and training. They recently participated in an airborne operation at Ft. Devens, Mass. in midwinter, where they were taught the skills of cross country skiing and snowshowing by the 10th Special Forces Group.

The southernmost area the unit has operated in was Ocala, Fla., where they supported the 121st Avn Co during Operation COTTONMOUTH. One of their most interesting missions this year was during the ISPR on May 11 when the 187th operated at four locations controlling five different types of helicopters.

With only 15 assigned personnel, the 187th is a small elite unit. All platoon members are airborne qualified and have an average of 30 jumps. The most experienced individual in the platoon is Sgt. Joseph Donahoo who has jumped 57 times.

On normal misions, the platoon operates in teams of three men each. Oftentimes, they have missions in several locations simultaneously so they are occasionally hard-pressed to fill their committments.

The 187th Inf Plt. (Pfdr) strives for professionalism and combat readiness and above all maintains the Pathfinder tradition of Ready Always, First In, Last Out.

Doughboys to face Tuskegee Tigers

The Doughboys play their final game of the 1977 seasons, 7:30 tonight in Doughboy Stadium, against the Tuskegee Institute Tigers.

The Doughboys have managed to crush seven opponents in a row following an opening season loss to Livingston University 22-13, who recently topped the Tigers in a tough battle 13-10.

The game promises to be a challenging finale to a successful Ft. Benning football season.

Compensation hearings slated

Private individuals or group representatives who desire to testify before the President's Commission on Military Compensation the afternoon of December 12 must call the Ft. Benning Project Officer at 545-5931 or 544-4811, and forward a written transcript of their testimony to Personnel Services Division, DPCA Room 623, Infantry Hall, to arrive no later than December 5.

Persons who do not have typing facilities may dictate their testimony and have it typed while they wait. To make an appointment for this service, call 545-2362. About 1½ hours will be required to transcribe the testimony and prepare it in final form.

On the morning of December 12, Commission members will conduct interviews with officers and enlisted personnel in units throughout Ft. Benning.

In the afternoon, a public hearing will be held from 1-5 p.m. at Columbus College in the Fine Arts Auditorium of the Fine Arts Hall.

The Commission was appointed by President Carter to review previous studies of the military compensation system and, if appropriate, recommend changes to current pay and benefit programs. The President also charged the commission to make a fresh review because previous attempts to provide an equitable and efficient total military compensation system failed to achieve general agreement.

According to Mr. Charles J. Zwick, chairman of the President's Commission on Military Compensation, the Commission wants to hear all groups and individudals who wish to testify on the matter of pay and benefits to the military. "We hope to establish an open dialogue with two-way communication," he said.

Of the commision's task, Zwick said, "Our major thrust is to get the current mood of the military, understand the issues, and try to integrate them into a total package."

He said there are three main questions the commission wants to answer: How to pay the military (direct pay? pay and allowances? a mix of services plus salary?) What is the fair level of pay? What is the retirement system? (How does it relate with other systems? How can it be fair to the military and the taxpayer?)

The issues are complex, he said. He cited pay and allowances versus an all salary system as a problem. The commission must first decide if either system contributes to an effective military establishment. If so, then the commission must consider their cost effectiveness or efficiency. "Can we get it," he said, "the same objective, more cheaply by doing it with allowances or without allowances? So, the whole question of efficiency comes in."

Answers to these and other questions will be decided after the commission's tour of major military centers. Their report to the President is due March 15, 1978.

INSIDE:

Turkey time here again

It'll be a far cry from the 1621 Pilgrim feast consisting of venison, roast duck and goose, clams, succulent eels, leeks and watercress with wild plums and dried berries for dessert, but the traditional Thanksgiving feast at Benning has plenty to offer. For a menu rundown and the amount of food to be served on post this Thanksgiving, see page 4.

Mall traffic flow changes

The vehicular traffic pattern in the vicinity of Lindsay Creek By-pass and the Shopping Mall will be altered beginning 10 a.m. November 21 as part of a two-year Corps of Engineers contract to extend the Lindsay Creek Bypass. For a map detailing the changes, see page 18.

VA loan program update

The Veterans Administration's Loan Guaranty Program has been used by 9½ million veterans who have received mortgage fund advances valued in excess of $139 billion since the program began 33 years ago. For an update on the program, see page 2.

'Age of computers' here

In this "age of computers," machines are being used for everything from guiding men to the moon to arranging dates for the lovelorn. Ft. Benning is into computors also, but for quite a different purpose. See page 16.

Barracks woman outraged

Vulgar and tasteless verbosity directed toward women abounds in the barracks according to one writer. The BAYONET addresses the problem on page 6.

VA Loan Guaranty Program reviewed

An informal review of the Veterans Administration's Loan Guaranty Program was conducted at the Georgia Company of Columbus Monday to discuss the program as it operates in the local community.

Tagged as the first of such field reviews by U. S. Representative Jack Brinkley, chairman of the Subcommittee on Housing of the Committee on Veterans Affairs, the meeting will be used "as a guide to other such reviews."

"This has been a record 20-year high for the VA Loan Guaranty Program with 382,586 veterans receiving VA loans guarantees at a value in excess of $13 billion," said Brinkley.

"In Georgia, a total of 11,584 veterans became homeowners through the VA program. The value of these guaranteed loans totalled $383,768,817 in FY 1977," he added.

In the 33-year history of the program more than 9½ million veterans have received mortgage fund advances valued in excess of $139 billion. In Muscogee County 4,454 loans were made to active duty personnel valued at more than $91 million since the program began June 22, 1944.

As Chairman of the Subcommittee on Housing, Brinkley has then a position of leadership in revitalizing the VA Home Loan Programs. With the termination of the Vietnam era, the question arose as to whether eliminating loan guaranty eligibility for post-Vietnam peacetime veterans would be consistent with the administration's goal of eliminating duplicative Federal programs. Under Brinkley's leadership, it was determined that the VA Home Loan Program would continue.

About 53 per cent of all loans — VA and otherwise — have been made on a downpayment basis. However, despite the sharp rise in the prices of homes, 72 per cent of veteran homebuyers continue to obtain no-downpayment loans. The average price of homes obtained with no-downpayment loans in FY 77 was $32,974. The average price of homes purchased with a downpayment was $42,326. Taken in aggregate — both downpayment and non-downpayment loans together — the average purchase price in FY 77 was $35,-716.

In 1977, the VA Home Loan Program was aided by a record flow of savings into mortgage lending financial institutions and by the sharp decline in the cost of mortgage credit. The life-blood of the VA Home Loan Program is private capital. As a result, the availability and cost of funds in the money and capital markets have an immense impact on VA home loan activity.

During 1976 when interest rates were on a downward trend, VA lowered the interest rate ceiling from 8 ¾ per cent to 8 per cent. When the interest rates reversed their direction in April of this year and started to move upward on a broad front, VA raised the interest rate ceiling from 8 to 8½ per cent effective May 31. VA makes every effort to keep the interest rate ceiling competitive to assure lender support of the program.

The success at which veterans have obtained their homes under VA Home Loan Programs is due in a large measure to the efforts of the Committees on Veterans' Affairs and Congress in coordination with the VA and veterans' organizations — as well as private lending institutions — to keep the legislation governing the program attuned to the needs of veterans.

NEWS in BRIEF

Women to buy own fatigues

Enlisted women will have to buy fatigues out of their clothing maintenance allowance beginning in October, 1978. Fatigues have been initial issue items for enlisted women since October 1976. To defray part of the new expense, certain articles of clothing such as overshoes and gym shoes will be deleted from the mandatory clothing list.

Applicants for OCS sought

Officer Candidate School applicants are being sought for two courses next year. Eligible enlisted men and somen must apply by January 30 for the April-August course or by May 26 for the August-December course. Eligibility is spelled out in AR 351-5. Basically, applicants must be less than 29 years old at the time of enrollment and have completed at least two years of a four-year college degree program or its equivalent. After completion of the 14-week course, candidates are commissioned second lieutenants and are required to serve three years of active duty.

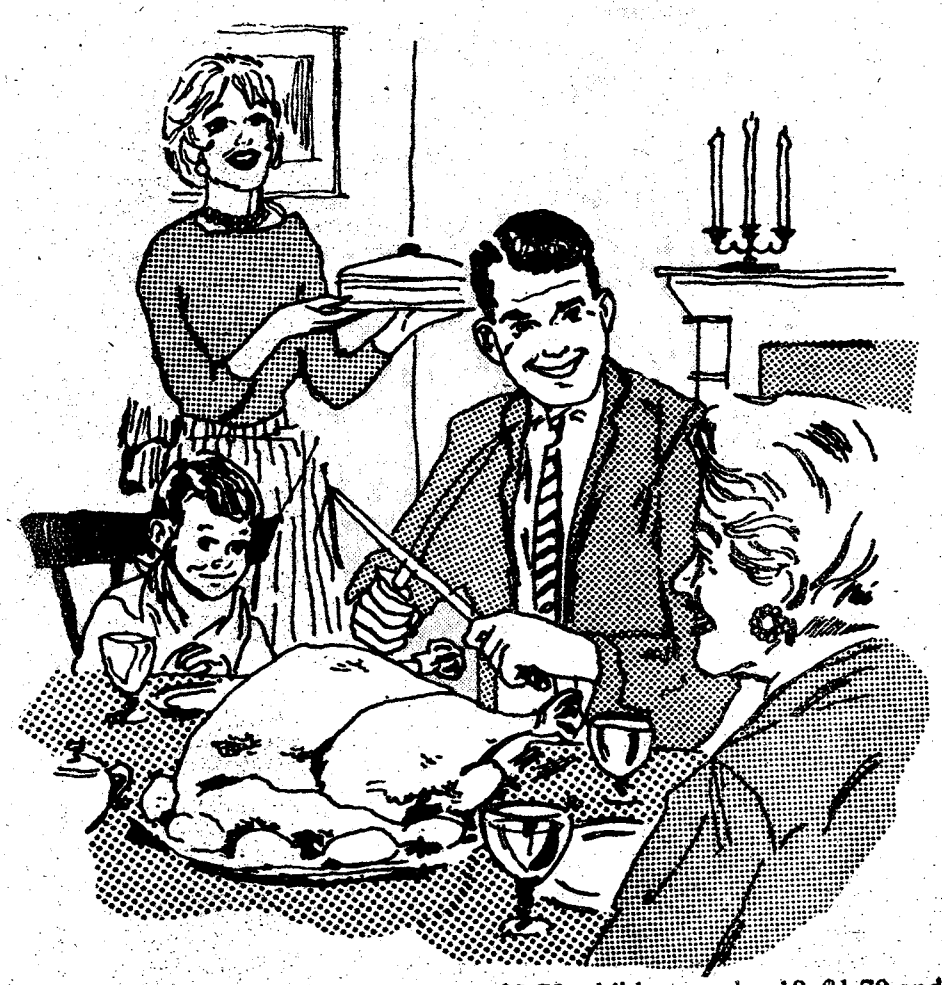
Dining Facilities prepare for holiday

There are no records showing that the long-legged "Turkies" that sped through the New England forest graced the first Pilgrims' table when they sat down to the first American Thanksgiving feast in 1621.

The bushes were laden with cranberries, but scholars doubt that Pilgrims had yet contrived a use for them. Evidence of pumpkin pie listed on the menu hasn't been found either.

Records show that Pilgrim women prepared a simple meal of venison, roast duck and goose, clams and other shell fish, succulent eels, white bread, cornbread, leeks and watercress among other "sallet herbes", with wild plums and dried berries served as dessert. Red and white wine made from wild grapes washed the feast down.



There won't be any wine to wash the feast down — coffee, tea, milk and soft drinks will be served instead — but Ft. Benning's unit dining facilities are preparing for the traditional holiday. According to Mr. James Porter, Troop Issue Subsistance Officer, 4,320 pounds of Turkey and 2,640 pounds of ham along with 1,485 pounds of shrimp cocktail will make up the main attractions November 24.

The exquisite feast will also feature 2,226 pounds of bread dressing, 2,000 pounds of fresh potatoes topped with Giblet gravy, 840 cans of sweet potatoes, 439 cans of lima beans, and 640 pounds of broccoli.

Two thousand, four hundred pounds of lettuce will be served in salads, one with celery seed dressing, another a golden glow salad topped with the individual's choice of dressing.

All the trimmings will include 18,000 butter flaked rolls, 440 cans of cranberry sauce and relish trays.

For those who aren't counting calories — who does on Thanksgiving — there will be 1,950 assorted types of pies, 200 pints of whipped cream, 1,152 pounds of fruit cake, 1,080 pounds of unshelled nuts and 640 four-pound cans of mixed nuts.

The Follow Me Dining Facility will be open to all retired military and dependents, as well as active duty personnel. Retired military and dependents will be charged $2.70, children under 12, $1.70 and soldiers on separate rations will pay $1.70. All dining facilities will be serving from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Thanksgiving safety message

ALL FORT BENNING PERSONNEL

In 1621 the Pilgrims invited their Indian friends to join in giving thanks for a bountiful harvest after a long and arduous year. This became an annual tradition and has continued for more than 300 years.

As Americans we can continue to be truly thankful. We enjoy the pleasures and comforts of one of the highest standards of living in the world. However, many of our modern conveniences have introduced hazards into our lives. The greatest of these hazards is the automobile.

Each year approximately 46,000 Americans die on our nation's highways, and many of these fatalities occur during holiday weekends. If you must travel during the Thanksgiving holiday, use all possible precautions. If commercial transportation is not feasible and you must drive, plan your trip to give yourself plenty of time and make certain your vehicle is in good repair.

Fort Benning has enjoyed six consecutive fatality-free Thanksgiving holidays. Let us all plan on making this another holiday to remember. Think and act safely, use common sense and courtesy, and return to work safe and sound.

Enjoy your well deserved holiday.

Glad you asked

What does Thanksgiving mean to you?

Betty B. Fellenz, Civ. DRM, USAIC
Thanksgiving is a time to be thankful to be living in a country where one can give thanks to God for being alive and free to come and go and to express oneself in his own way. It means on this day particularly, that I need to get on my knees and give praise to our Creator for giving me the many blessings that I have received throughout my life.

Thanksgiving means the thrills and warmth of families coming together and feasting at the same table. But most of all Thanksgiving means the love and unity among the family and for all of us to give thanks to our Savior.

W. A. Ford, Civ. DRM, USAIC
Thanksgiving means football, friends food — not necessarily in that order.

Thanksgiving not only means two days off for a long weekend, but to me it is a time to give thanks to the man upstairs for letting people and families get together over a good meal, and a time to rejoice and be happy with togetherness.

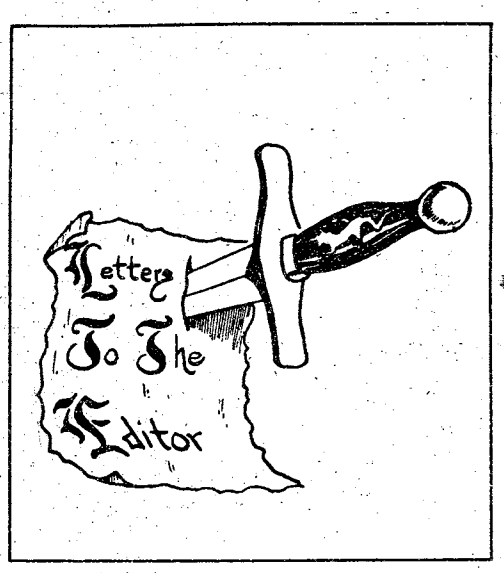
Thanksgiving is a time to give thanks to God for the blessings in one's life.

Dear Trouble Maker,

I am an enlisted woman who has been stationed at Ft. Benning for nearly five months and I am sick and tired of putting up with the continual harassment from the male soldiers here.

My friends and I cannot even walk out of the barracks without hearing some unwanted remark. I never knew it was customary to hail someone from a third floor window with, "Hey, Baby," "Come on over here Mama," or "Look at that meat."



These are some actual word-for-word remarks that have been directed at me.

I never know what to do about such statements. I am afraid that if I say something sarcastic, this verbal abuse will continue and if I ignore their gross and immature remarks, they will think that I am condoning their actions.

It seems that these men feel that women in uniform aren't entitled to common decency and respect. Do they think that they are impressing someone with their crudeness? Because if they do, they are dead wrong.

I respect myself as a woman and as a soldier and I don't feel that I should have to put up with this harrassment and continual annoyance.

Outraged

More than you bargain for

By Marie M. Russo

"How would you like a kid that looks like me?"

"How 'bout a roll in the rack tonight?"

"Why don't you come over here and give me a little of that?"

Crass and tasteless remarks like these are often heard by many of Benning's female soldiers. For some reason or another, enlisted men seem to think that their vulgar and immature comments will attract the attention of woman in uniform.

Well, these juvenile remarks do attract attention, but they come across as a total turn off. As one first sergeant put it, "If I see a nice looking woman, I'll compliment her, but some of these male soldiers must think their foul and abusive language is flattering. It's a far cry from it."

There are very few, if any, women who would take, "Oh mama, you're looking good, why don't you give me some?" as a compliment.

Capt. Paul Anderson, post chief of Military Justice, points out that these "gentlemen" (very loosely used) are in violation of the Uniform Code of Military Justice.

"A man charged with communicating indecent, insulting or obscene language to a female is left in the hands of the commander or court-martial authority, depending on the nature and degree of the offense and will be punished accordingly," states Anderson.

So the next time a male service member wants to let a woman know what he thinks about her, he'd better think before he speaks, because those few crude and meaningless words could possibly ruin his career.

Are you really FAT?

It's hard to get a person to admit that he or she is really fat.

Generally, people prefer to think of themselves as being a little heavy, large boned or muscular and solid. To admit being FAT is to admit failure, to acknowledge that you're on the decline — on a highway marked by declining vigor, declining resistance to disease, declining appeal to the opposite sex and declining longevity.

Many of the ills awaiting at the door of advancing age actually should be blamed on obesity. The public has come to consider a little plumpness as an indication of health. Actually, OVERWEIGHT, even a little, is a health hazard. The more overweight, the greater the hazard.

Think for a moment — if you could lose enough weight to be considered 'average,' maybe for the first time in your life, your only life would be much improved.

You would have less of a chance of getting diabetes, high blood pressure, heart disease, kidney disease and many more such ailments; you would have greater success if you ever needed surgery; have a greater tolerance to exercise; you would look better, feel better and gain more respect from your friends. Finally, you would have less mental discomfort and less anxiety.

Cadette scouts join in environmental program

Cadette Scouts from Ft. Benning participated in the recent "environment Day at Callaway Gardens" and enjoyed a day of biking and hiking with over 100 other young ladies from select groups in the bi-state area. They enjoyed fellowship, the out-of-doors, and learning about their environment through a variety of planned nature activities.

There are two environmental day programs each spring and fall which are presented for teens by the education department at Callaway Gardens. The programs are designed to enhance the young people's awareness and appreciation of the environment through planned nature activities which include nature crafts, greenhouse tours, instruction in edible wild plants and pioneer life, and a nature hike.

"We have had a tremendous response," said Debbie Opalk, the education department naturalist who coordinates the program. "They really enjoy the various activities we have planned for them." Ms. Opalk is planning two more special tour days at Callaway Gardens in the spring, and invites queries to the Education Department, Callaway Gardens, Pine Mountain, Ga. or call (404) 663-2281. Ft. Benning residents interested in the Cadette or other Scouting programs may contact Mrs. Rita Butler at 687-8242.

Man vs. machine

"May the smarter opponent emerge victorious"

By Bev Lockhart

It's been a long hot day and you've been looking forward to that cold soda all afternoon.

You drag yourself up to a vending machine and feed a quarter into its gaping mouth.

You hear a click as it swallows.

You push the button displaying your favorite brand and wait — nothing happens.

You thumb the coin return — still nothing.

You attack another selection button — the alumnium box stares at you blankly, refusing to acknowledge your presence.

By this time, you've become irate — you give the machine a swift kick in the coin box, a la Bruce Lee style — still no response.

You swear silently as you give it another kick, a menacing glance and a 'haiiiiiiiiiiiii" from deep within your thirsty being.

Not only have you lost your quarter, but you've contributed to the destruction of a machine that was put there to serve you.

Getting Your Money Back

According to Mr. Robert Whitaker, vending machines manager, "The majority of our problems with vending machines is people not knowing how to operate them, not reading the instructions, and not collecting their refunds when they lose money."

"But I have to drive all the way to the PX to collect a quarter," one soldier complained. "By the time I've driven all the way there and back, I've wasted at least that much money in gas."

"What most people don't realize is you don't have to collect immediately. You can wait until you're at the gas station, snack bar, or any AAFES activity on other business. All you have to do is go to a cashier and fill out a Vending Machine Refund /Test Voucher (AAFES FORM 6600-9). Don't forget to write down the type of machine and its location or the machine number (printed on AAFES FORM 6600-10 sticker pasted on the front of the machine). Either way is acceptable, according to Mr. Whitaker.

Vandalism

Post vending machines are rarely broken into, according to Whitaker, but the estimated loss, including the cost of repairs and money stolen, is $350 per incident.

If you're thinking about "ripping off" a machine, stop and consider the consequences before you do. Not only will you have to pay back the money you stole from the machine, you must also pay for the damages done. There's more — you may also be charged with destruction of private property and /or larceny, and be subject to nonjudicial punishment or trial by court martial, according to Capt. Paul Anderson, chief of military justice, Office of the Staff Judge Advocate.

One soldier was caught beating the vending machines in the dayroom at his barracks with a chair. His commanding officer took him down to the Vending Machines Office and the soldier had to pay the damages which came to about $150. He also received a bad discharge (due to the fact that he had been in trouble before) which will follow him the rest of his life.

Requesting a Vending Machine

If you would like to request a vending machine be put in at a certain location but don't know how to go about it, contact Mr. Whitaker at 682-0852 or drop by his office above the Ft. Benning Cafeteria, Bldg 1600. He usually tries to honor requests but, "We have guidelines set by the exchange," Whitaker says. "If the location has a limited number of people with access and it's not a VIP location or a hardship area, we can't put one in because of the amount of money it would cost to operate it."

Whitaker's office operates about 1,200 machines on post, bringing in approximately $200,000 in sales per month. "A lot of the machines barely pay for themselves but we leave them there because of the need," Whitaker says.

The next time you find yourself faced with head-on "mortal" combat with a "mechanical menace," weight the battle in your favor — know the rules and follow them.

Stagg Bowl slated for December 3

The fifth NCAA Annual National Football Championship Game of Division III will be played December 3 at 1 p.m. in the Phenix City Municipal Stadium.

This Annual Amos Alonzo Stagg Bowl decides the championship of NCAA College Division III. Eight teams, selected by a Division Committee, participate in playoffs leading up to the selection of opposing teams in the Stagg Bowl. Three of the teams selected for the playoffs are: St. Johns, defending champion; Minnesotta Morris and Central of Iowa.

The halftime program will be directed again this year by Bill Pharris, Glenwood band director. Several bands will perform individually as well as in a mass band performance.

This event is co-sonsored by the Phenix City and Columbus Shrine Clubs. The proceeds from the game go for sight conservation and to the crippled childrens hospital.

This year, as last year, the AUSA will send 200 soldiers free to the event. Tickets are being distributed through Sergeants Major channels based on one free ticket per eight AUSA members in the unit.

For others desiring to attend, tickets are on sale for $4 each and can be obtained from the Recreational Services ITT Office Bldg. 394 (Doughboy Stadium). For additional information concerning tickets call 545-7414/2281.

NCO Wives Club Tour and Luncheon

On Wednesday morning, November 16, members of the NCOWC, took a tour of Tom's Foods. The ladies met at 10:30 a.m., for the tour of the plant, which consisted of a demonstration of candy making and various other products made by the company.

The morning proved to be an interesting one for the ladies, who later met at the Hungry Hunter for their monthly luncheon. The delicious foods served at the Hungry Hunter put the final touches on a full, but enjoyable day for the group.. Thanks to the Program Chairman and her Assistant, Esther Richard and Ethel Wise and the hostesses for the month; Mary Wildman, Lillian Lambert and Diana Navarrete.

OWC Bazaar

The Officers' Wives Club held their annual bazaar, on Wednesday November 9. There were many beautiful and useful items available, portraying the hard work, talent, and enthusiasm of these ladies, and made for a most successful event.

PWC Change of Officers

The Officers Wives Club has a new President. Due to the change of duty station for her husband, the OWC members recently said goodby to their President, Mrs. William Curl III. After a sad farewell to Mrs. Curl the ladies welcomed Mrs. Terry Warner, as their new President. Mrs. Warner has been active with the OWC for some time, and is sure to be an asset to this Organization.

HQ 197th Inf Bde Ladies

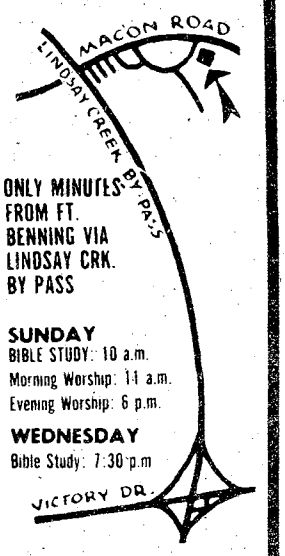
On November 2d, the ladies of HQ, 197th Inf Bde, met at the home of Mrs. James R. Hall, wife of the Brigade Commander, for their monthly function.

Hostesses for this most enjoyable occasion were Mrs. Hall and Mrs. Donald R. Traub. Mrs. Hall welcomed all of the ladies and thanked them for coming.

A warm welcome was extended to several new members to the group; Anneliese Maynard, Nola Roesser, Carmen Wright, Jo Anne Atack and Paula Babicke.

After a brief business meeting the ladies adjourned to the Goetchius House for a luncheon.

2nd Bn, 1st AIT Bde Ladies Coffee



On November 8, the ladies of the 2nd Bn, 1st AIT Bde met at Company C day room for their monthly coffee.

Mrs. Carol Jorgensen and the ladies of Company C sponsored the coffee. The ladies talked about exchanging cookie recipes for their Christmas Party.

Mrs. Kathy Cooper and Mrs. Vermell Harrell welcomed the newcomers. A special get well wish to Mrs. Anna Bell Allyn. We all miss you!

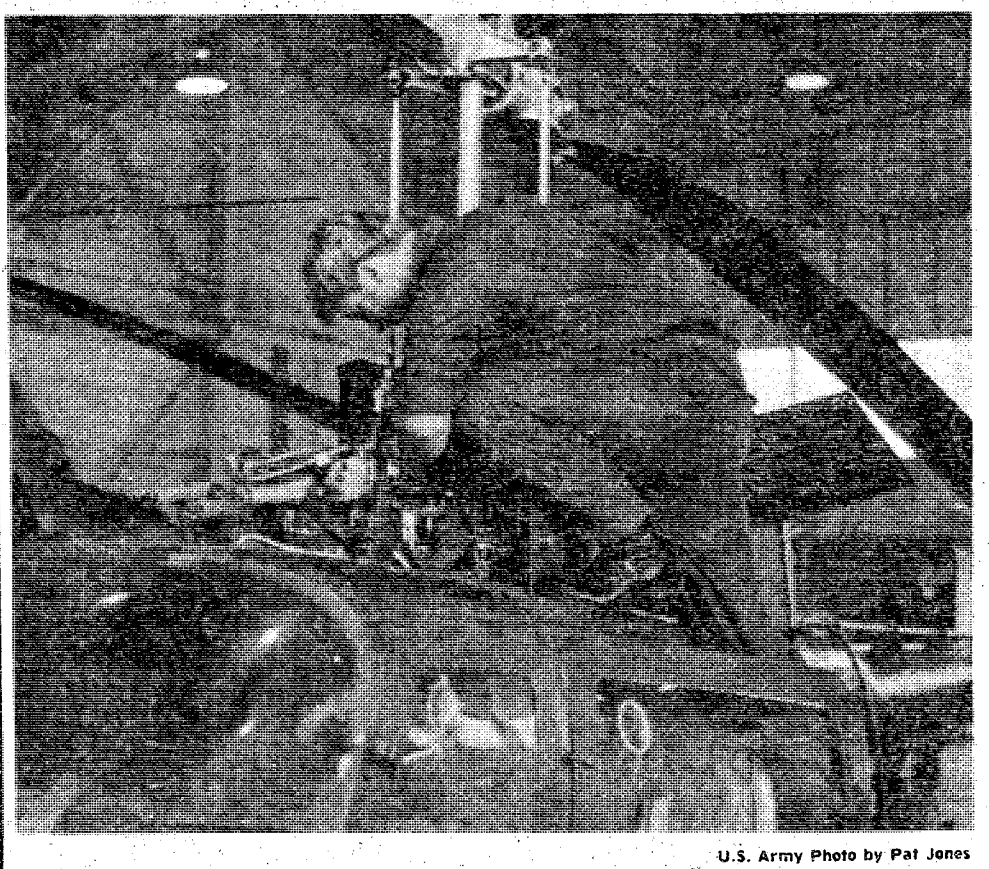
By Pat Jones

It used to be that 8,972 plus 11 plus 31 equaled 9,014, but that's not so as far as the 197th Inf Brigade's "Steel Scorpions" are concerned. With the application of a little "new math" of their own they come up with four—four Infantry Center Aviation Safety Awards that is.



Since they became a part of the 197th in May 1973, the brigade's Aviation Platoon, dubbed the "Steel Scorpions," have amassed 8,972 accident free flight hours with their 11 aircraft and 31 officer and enlisted assigned personnel.

According to Capt. Clarence Pullman, the platoon CO, "Attaining almost 9,000 accident-free flight hours is the result of the combined efforts of the entire platoon."

"Attaining a good safety record depends a lot on established maintenance and inspection procedures, as well as the work put in by pilots and crewchiefs," adds platoon tech inspector, SSgt. Robert Gafney.

Monthly safety meetings and a quarterly safety council in the platoon provide for constant updates and a chance to discuss and correct problem areas affecting flight conditions and platoon safety practices.

"Safety is a full time job," says Pullman. "If things go as they have, 10,000 accident-free hours will become a "Steel Scorpion" reality."

Cav plays Big Brother role

By Mike Daigle

Getting high school students interested in the opportunities offered in the military is what Hardaway High School Junior ROTC Program is all about and the calvary men of the 197th Inf Bde play a major role.

As part of a Big Brother Program, A Troop, 15th Cav is sponsoring Hardaway's ROTC efforts by telling the Army story through lectures and demonstration geared to generating interest in a military career.

"Our reasons for sponsoring the Hardaway program are twofold," says the troop XO 1st Lt. Peter Guild. "One, we want to help the high school make their ROTC program more interesting and visible to the students, and secondly, we want to enchance the image of the 197th Inf Bde and military service in the eyes of the Columbus community."

So far the 15th Cav has had people talk to the students on the organization and mission of the Army and the role of women in it. There has also been a demonstration by the 139th MP Dog Platoon.

Future plans include a live-fire demonstration and a retreat ceremony at Hardaway High by the Junior ROTC contingent.

"The students have shown a lot of interest in the Big Brother Program so far, and we have received much positive feedback from the students and faculty of Hardaway," Guild concluded.

197th hosts ROTC cadet orientation

Sgt. Vincent Sandy of the Mortar Co, 3/7th Inf shows Cadet Thomas Williamston the deflection markings on the M-53 sighting device on an 81 mm mortar as Cadet Thomas martinson looks on.

By Ron Fowler

Reserve Office Training Corps (ROTC) cadets from the University of Tennessee at Chattanooga got a first-hand look at the Army way of life last week as they visited the 197th Inf Bde.

The week long orientation hosted by the 3/7th Inf "Cottonbalers" gave 27 ROTCers a close up look at the Infantry in action and a better understanding of the Infantry role in the combined arms team.

"Each of the cadets seemed to take a keen interest in the many aspects of Infantry operations," said 2ndLt. David Zamecnik, the cadet escort officer. "They kept us pretty busy asking questions about everything from the operation of the 60mm mortar to the manpower of opposing force motorized rifle regiments."

After an official welcome by the 197th Inf Bde XO, LtCol. Ray Gravett, the cadets attended briefings in Infantry Hall, viewed the Airborne 5000 demonstration at Eubanks Field and observed parachute drops at Fryar Drop Zone.

"I really didn't expect the parachute drops to be as spectacular as they were," said Cadet Thomas Martinson. "They put on a great show for us, and believe me, we were impressed!"

It was an active week for the cadets as they observed company-sized airmobile operations, TOW and mortar training and combined arms exercises in what was for many of the cadets, their first exposure to the "real" Army.

"This has certainly been an exciting week," Cadet Thomas Williamston concluded. "We just hope that we can return in the near future to observe and maybe take part in some of the training."

WC Bazaar Huge Success

The Ft. Benning Officers' ves' Club held their an-al Christmas Bazaar on vember 9 and it turned to be a huge financial cess with net profits of over $6,700 going into the OWC Welfare Fund.

Mrs. Leonard Vowell, Chairman of the Tea Room at the bazaar expresses her sincere appreciation to the following: McDonald's on Victory Drive for orange drink, cups and ash trays; Burger King on Victory Drive for orange drink and cups; Lloyd Smith for ice, time and effort of loading and unloading all the ladies' cars and Floyd Collins for supplying all the ingredients for our spiced tea.

The OWC Annual Christmas Bazaar could not have been the success it was thanks to everyone who donated everything — baked goods, white elephants, sandwiches and pastries — and most important, time, and of themselves. Thank you.

Doughboy to play Tuskegee in final game tonight

When Tuskegee Institute invades Doughboy Stadium Friday night, the Tigers not only renew an old rivalry with the Army, but also provide the Fort Benning-Columbus community with an opportunity to enjoy high caliber athletic competition. The Fort Benning Doughboys, currently sporting a 7-1 record, face a young Tuskegee team (3-6) that appears to be powering their way to a strong season's finish following a sluggish start.

Tuskegee features a wishbone attack that is gaining momentum with the improved passing of quarterback Bobby Shaw and the power running of Robert Watkins and Charles Huffman. Columbus native Johnny Flakes provides an explosive ingredient with his ability to break the long run.

Fort Benning has managed to crush seven opponents in a row following an opening season loss to Livingston University 22-13, who recently topped Tuskegee in a tough battle 13-10. Triple-threat quarterback, Joe Duenas, has sparked the Doughboy multiple attack, completing sixty percent of his aerial attempts to an excellent battery of receivers in Rod Bradley, Tony Nimmons, Dave Simpson and Arthur Hawkins, a speedster who can make things happen with his lightning dashes.

Fort Benning has rushed for an average of 235 yards per contest on the strength of Julian Williams, Charles Holley, and Erogies Grigley. However, the "big playmaker" on post is the powerhouse defense anchored by stalwarts Lonzie McCants, Ronnie Carter, and Jeff Bruckner. The "Wild Bunch" have allowed only four points per game with an extremely stingy and punishing defense.

All in all, the Fort Benning-Tuskegee game adds up to a thriller for area spectators, and post officials are expecting a capacity of 14,000 people. Admission is $1.00 for adults and $.50 for children, with ample parking available in areas that will be designated by military police.

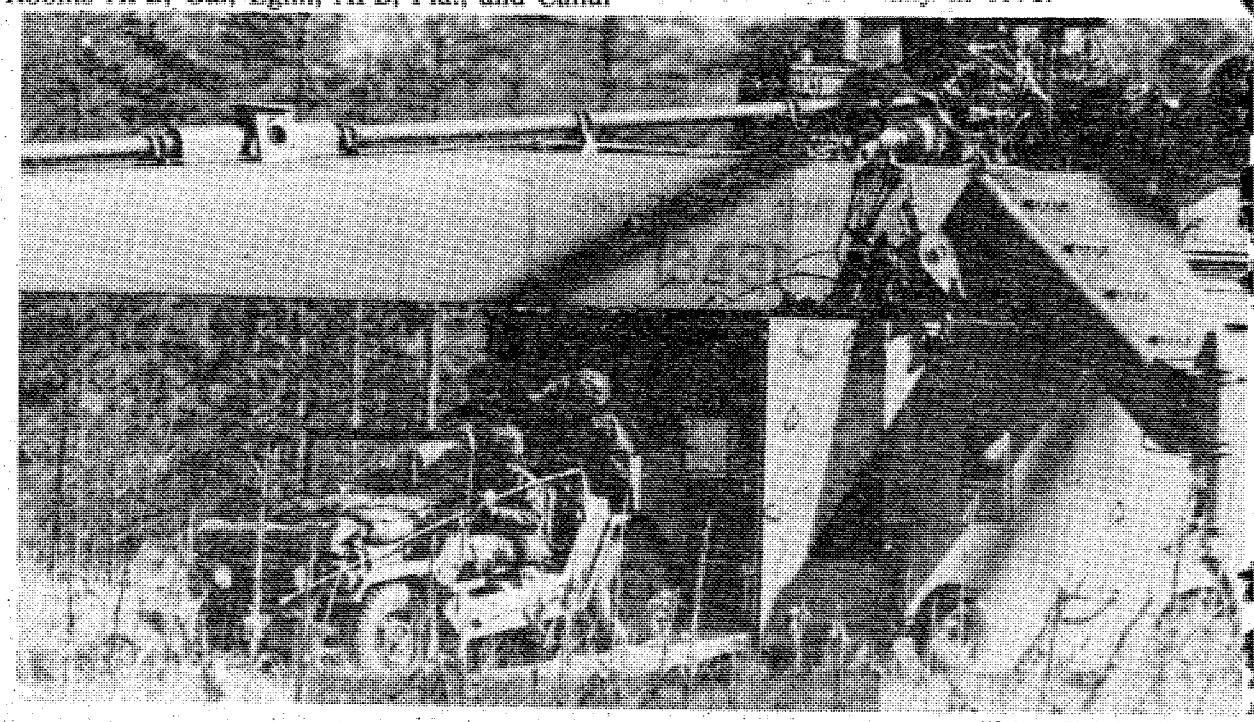
197th units support 101st in EDRE

More than 1,000 troops from the 101st Abn Div (Air Assault) and 30 helicopters from Ft. Campbell, Ky. deployed to Ft. Benning Monday on an emergency deployment readiness exercise (EDRE).

The four-day exercise, dubbed Operation Swift Blade was a tactical mission that simulated combat operations with a reinforced infantry battalion. Elements of the 197th Inf. Bde-Co C and Scout Platoon, 3/7th Inf and Tank Platoon, 2/69th Ar assumed the role of a mock opposing force during the exercise.



The task force included a full complenent of infantry, artillery, aviation, engineers, air defense and maintenance personnel who performed varied missions during the exercise. The task force conducted a battalion-sized assault on a simulated enemy defense and also conducted a live fire exercise, firing all the units organic weapons in addition to Cobra helicopter gun strokes and artillery barrage and Air Force tactical air strikes.

The operations at Benning were part of the 101st's stepped up readiness preparation. The unit on standby, called the division readiness force, is prepared to muster its personnel and equipment and be enroute to a specified destination within 18 hours after activation notice.

Since the Army units deploys via Air Force transportation, these exercises are designed not only to enhance the strategic deployability of units in the 101st, but to hone the Air Force's readiness in support of such missions.

The 101st, the world's only Air Assault Division, has called up its readiness force in the past several weeks to perform mock missions ranging from the rescue of American nationals detained in a foreign country to the capture of a supposed aggressor commander behind enemy lines. Prepared to deploy worldwide on short notice, "Screaming Eagle" units have most recently traveled to Ft. Rucker, Ala., Robins AFB, Ga., Eglin, AFB, Fla., and Canal Zone, Panama, to sharpen their readiness posture.

The Army's largest helicopter-owning tactical force, the division has geared its readiness towards the flexibility, staying power and mobility afforded by its vast internal aviation assets. The division had its first opportunity to display its strategic capabilities as an air assault force on a large scale during Reforger exercises in Germany in 1976.

VA Q&A

Q — I have remarried since the death of my veteran husband. My child is receiving benefits as a result of his father's death. If my present husband adopts the child, will the VA benefits be terminated?

A — No. Adoption does not affect the benefits payable to the child as the result of the natural parent's service.

Q — Is burial in a national cemetery permitted for all veterans or just those who are destitute?

A — Burial in a national cemetery is available to any veteran who was discharged under conditions other than dishonorable. There are no income considerations.

Q — What is the maximum amount of work-study hours available to a GI Bill student for one year?

A — Veteran-students enrolled full time may complete a maximum 250 hours under the work-study program per semester or 750 hours in each calendar year.

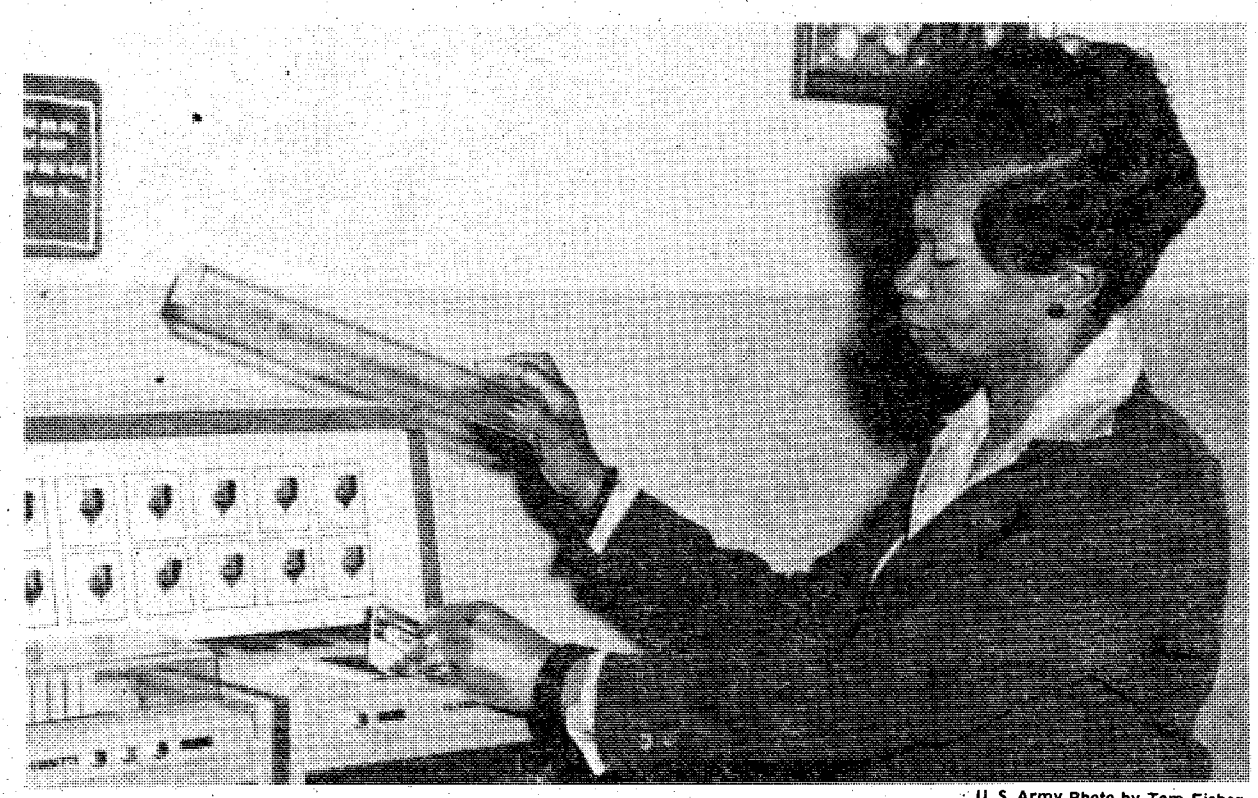
Computer system supports Benning

By Debra Hilgeman

In this 'age of computers', machines are being used for everything from guiding men to the moon to arranging dates for the lovelorn.

Ft. Benning's Word Processing Center (WPC) joined the computer bandwagon by using automated equipment to process paperwork faster and in a more efficient manner. Recorded information is fed into the computer where it is stored until needed. The computer then edits or transmits the information and types it out on high-speed typewriters.



Ron Companion, installation administrative officer, spent three years researching, planning and implementing the system that is now saving over $100,000 a year in manpower, money and additional resources and is rated as the best WPC in the Army.

The system provides centralized support for elements throughout the post by using a computer with ten typing stations and two video terminals to type lengthy texts, messages, letters, orders and other documents. The services range from the production of inventory lists to requests for ammunition; from the simplest of jobs to the most complicated.

In 1974, Benning became the first military installation in the country to utilize this new technology and its success here led to its being adopted by other Army posts and branches of the military.

The key to its success is speed and efficiency. A regular typist can turn out about 600 lines of type per day while a WP operator can produce 1678 lines of type per day. What the WP system is proving, in effect, is that one WP operator can do, on the statistical average, the work of 2.55 clerk-typists in a regular electric or standard typewriter environment.

"A WP typist," said Companion, "must be totally familiar with all aspects of operations for an entire installation — which adds up to several hundred types of communications." This familiarization requires training that can last up to six months before a person is qualified in all aspects of the system. "The training is of the utmost importance since a WP operator can goof just one time and erase 800 pages of text with one flick of the finger," he explained. "However," he continued, "the computer makes human error unlikely by asking the operator if she is sure she wants the order she has given the machine. And if you give the computer an erroneous command it will tell you that you are wrong."

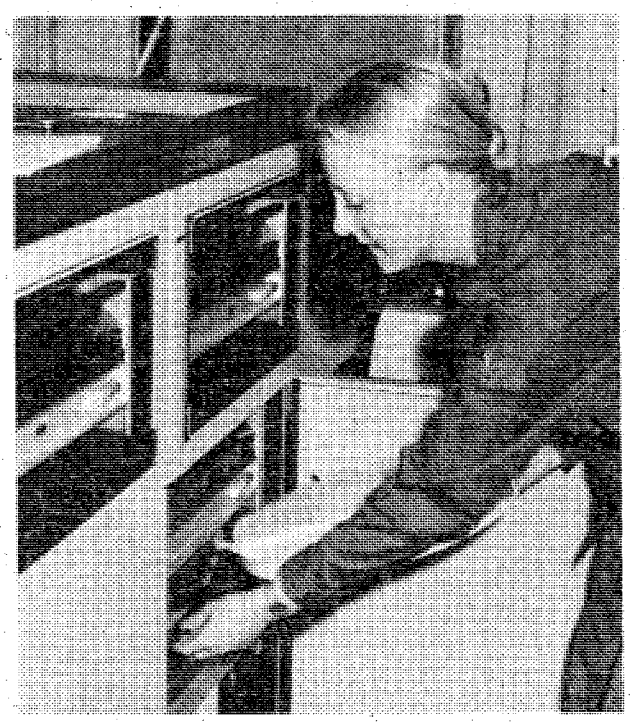
Nana Duffey, computer operator, listens to the taped message through headphones and types the recorded data into the computer.

Although some typing terminals have "suffered" breakdowns, there has never been a breakdown in the computer. If a major problem arises, the computer will say, "Call ICS" (the manufacturer). Translated, that means, "Get help — we're out of control."



An interesting aspect of the WP system is the use of dictation equipment scattered throughout the post. This procedure minimizes time spent transmitting work orders by allowing WP customers to call in their job orders. When orders are required, they may be dictated, typed and ready for the customer in a few hours.

Since the system was installed, routine preparation time for "cutting" orders has dropped 30 per cent, from six hours to four. In addition, cost of personnel, supplies and equipment has dropped $8740 a month.

The dictation system is also widely used by post legal personnel. Legal documents and/or changes to them can be dictated over the phone, thus eliminating the time-consuming wait for papers to travel from one point to another before actual work can begin.

The remote system has been so successful in cutting the time it takes to prepare work orders that it now accounts for 20 per cent of all jobs handled by the WPC.

Training managers have also benefited from the WP system. Repetitive textbook and manual material is stored in the WP system, Sp5 Regina Martinez, a computer operator from Co A, Hq Cmd, removes a recorded disc from the computer. All jobs are recorded on the discs and logged so they can be reused and revised when the information is needed again.

revisions are edited in and new manuals are completed in days instead of months. In keeping with the Center's policy of high-speed efficiency, the computer is even kept busy during hours when employees are on breaks. "For maximum use of equipment," said Companion, "we turn the computer on to run off mailing lists during lunch breaks."

The time saved by streamlining the process of turning out daily volumes of paperwork is practically immeasurable. And with decreasing Army manpower and financial resources, word processing technology has become increasingly attractive to Army installations and activities.

The vehicular traffic flow in the vicinity of Lindsay Creek By-pass and the Shopping Mall will be altered beginning 10 a.m. November 21. The northbound lanes of Lindsay Creek By-pass and the ramp from Marne Road will be re-opened to northbound traffic, and the southbound lanes of the by-pass, previously changed to two-way traffic, will revert to southbound traffic only. This phase of a two-year Corps of Engineers contract to extend the Lindsay Creek By-pass is necessary to permit the contractor to obtain fill material for construction of the family housing access road. Motorist are encouraged to exercise caution in the vicinity of Mall area.

Korea-bound soldiers no longer receive homebase

Some soldiers scheduled for tours in Korea will not receive homebase and advanced assignments prior to departure, DA officials announced.

Since early this year soldiers in grades of E-5 to 0-5 have received assignment instructions for posts or to the installations where they will be assigned upon return from Korea. Assignments are usually made 18 to 24 months before the soldier's return from Korea.

Military Personnel Center (MILPERCEN) officials can no longer give advance instructions to all soldiers because of changing requirements anticipated by the planned withdrawal of most soldiers from Korea.

Officials said that soldiers assigned to Korea will be able to retain military family housing as provided by the homebase assignment policy and soldiers in Korea will receive assignment instructions as soon as possible before returning to CONUS.

"Uncle Sam needs me."

Irene W Monaghan

SP4 Irene Monaghan is a helicopter mechanic. "I think my job is important. And I enjoy it. You learn a lot in this job. For instance, if you are working in a small space inside a helicopter, you have to have patience. If you don't have it, you learn it. And you learn to be exact. The job is a challenge. I like that. The Army has good opportunities. I always tell my friends to reenlist."

The Army needs people like Irene Monaghan. If you're like she is, you may be surprised to find out how much Uncle Sam needs you.

Keep a good soldier in the Army. Reenlist.

If you're planning to submit an application for a CB license, Uncle Charlie wants you to check the application thoroughly before submitting it. The FCC is returning thousands of faulty applications every month, which causes delay to all applicants due to the extra time required to handle the incorrect forms.

Errors seem to appear most often on the following items:

Item 1: Type or print neatly your first name, middle initial and last name.

Item 2: Use your correct date of birth. For example, if your birthday is August 15, 1948, write 8 15 48 in the boxes provided.

Item 6: Check only one box. The "individual" box is to be used for a person applying for a license for himself.

Item 8: Check only one box. If you want to talk on a CB, check "voice."

Each applicant should sign his name exactly as it appears in item 1. Do not sign the application with a "handle" or any other nickname.

The popularity of CB handles has given many CBers the false impression that the FCC assigns handles and many requests for assignment of specific handles have been received by the FCC.

The FCC does not assign or register handles for CBers. It assigns only call signs consisting of three or four letters followed by four numbers. Handles may be used, but the call sign must also be given. This also applies to Unit Number IDs and the SSB numbers which are gaining popularity.

Finally, make sure you use the correct Zip Code. The special Zip Code for CB applications is 17326. Currently, only 16 per cent of the applications received have the correct Zip Code.

After the kick-off, the Dolphins held the Sharks forcing them to punt. The punter bobbled the ball and the Dolphins took over on the Sharks 39 yard line. Two passes to Pat Dailey moved the ball inside the Sharks 5 yard line. Then Gilbert hit Lahr for a TD in the end zone but it was nullifed because of a false start by a Dolphin lineman. The penalty moved the ball to the 8 yard line. On the next play Gilbert dropped back to pass was pressured by the Sharks defense and ran it in for a TD making the score Dolphins 14 Sharks 12.

This was a bitter loss for the Sharks who controlled the ball most of the game, but could not move it in for more points. Paul Rivera and Sean Briscoe played outstanding defense causing most of the Dolphins fumbles.

The Patriots defeated the Bears 16-0. After an interception by Ricky McGee a Mark Crites pass connected with Matt Cole in the end zone. For a TD. Joey Hashimoto plunged in for the PAT. Following a series of pass receptions Mark Miller carried in for the second TD. The PAT was scored by Billy Moore. Super defense was played by John Hannon, Martin Wright, Sherwood Williams, Robert Buff, Mike Brand, Merritte Wilson and Shannon Smith. The Bears offense was led by Napoleon Ford, Teddy Leonhart, Keith Baxter, Steven Anderson and James Higginbottom. The defense that held the Patriots to two TD was made up of Steven and John Inks, Fort, Leonhart, Aklilu Harvey, Earl Gallaugh, Steve Campbell and Terrace Black.

Don't be a turkey this Thanksgiving

In 1621, Governor William Bradford decreed a three-day festival to thank God for the bountiful harvest, of the Pilgrim's first crop.

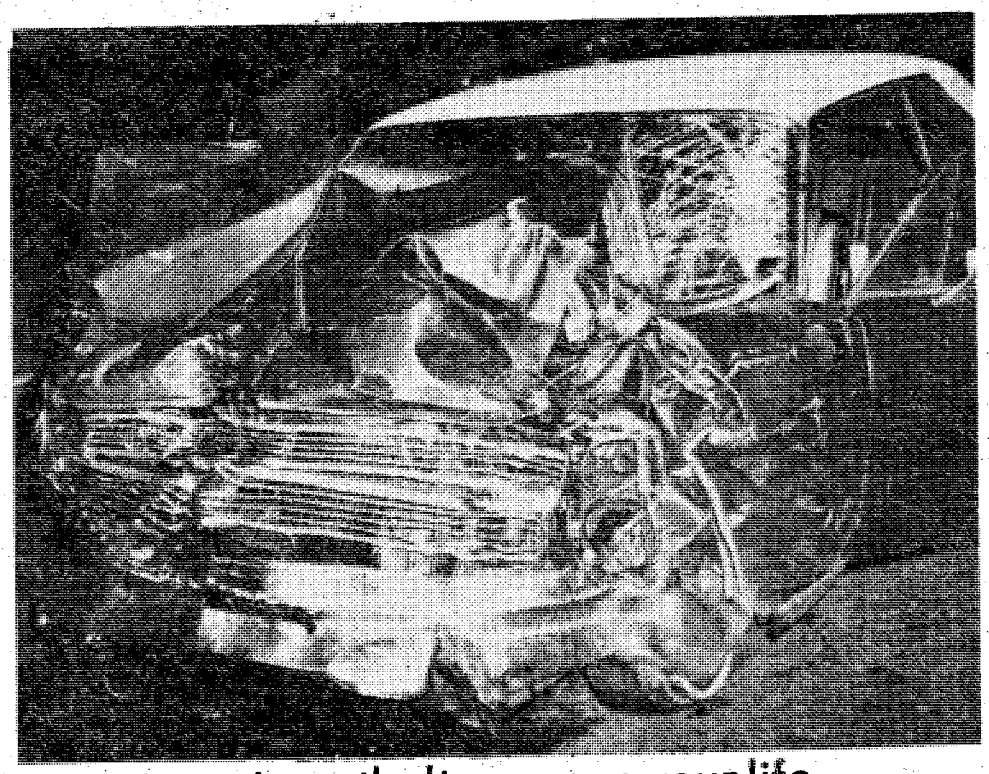
Through the years Thanksgiving has become a family holiday celebrated with large dinners and joyous reunions. These reunions, especially in a military community, mean that more and more people will be heading out on the highways.

One of the greatest holiday hazards is traffic. Each year many fatalities occur on the road because drivers just don't take their driving seriously enough.

At a time when safety should be the driver's utmost concern, many are in a hurry getting to see Aunt Mary or Grandma Smith. They drive at speeds too fast for road conditions, take chances passing on hills and at intersections, cut curves and corners too closely, and try to travel too far in too short a time.

"It is far better to arrive late than not to arrive at all," warns Mr. Bennie Padgett, Benning's safety manager.

He also stated that the holiday weekend is the time to drive defensively due to weather conditions and Thanksgiving traffic. "I just want people to save their own lives," Mr. Padgett added.

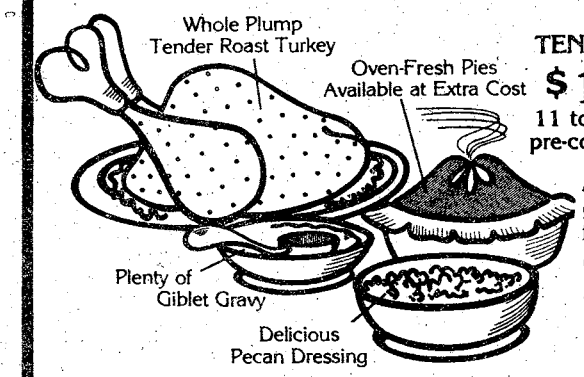


A house full of guests gathered for the holiday reunion means that extra precautions should be taken by the host and hostess. Loose carpet edges and over-waxed floors and stairs could be dangerous. Many serious accidents are the result of someone falling or tripping.

Small children should be watched extra carefully and kept out of the kitchen. A tiny hand can quickly pull hot pots off the stove or grab a sharp knife.

As the weather becomes colder, many people will be lighting up fireplaces which haven't been used since last winter. If you plan to use yours, check to make sure the chimney is in good working order; many homes have burned down needlessly because of chimney fires.

Everyone does things that can cause injury if common sense is not used, even though few people carry on activities that are really dangerous.



During the Thanksgiving weekend make sure you are safer than a turkey. Don't stick your neck out to an accident.

Flyers dominate tournament

Ft. Benning's Flyers were not to be believed according to coach Major Chris Mullane of New Zealand when they won The Southern United States Peach Tree (Rugby) Invitational.

The Flyers took the first game relatively easy 26-0 over the High Country Rugby team.

The competition was held in Atlanta last weekend with 28 teams competing for top honors.

Coach Mullane, who has been connected with Rugby as a player, referee, coach and administrator for almost 25 years said "Despite the fact that half our top players had never played Rugby until August of this year I can honestly say, I have never before worked with such big-hearted players. They will give you everything they've got during a game and then come up with more when it's needed. They hit hard but play fair and have tremendous team and club spirit."

In the second contest, competition was tougher but the Flyers came through. The battle was against a tough Ft. Bragg team. At the end of the game the score was tied at 4-4. Going into overtime, the Flyers with pure determination won 10-7 over the Ft. Bragg team.

The final game was getting close to the limit but again the Flyers won the game scoring 8-4 over the Vanderbilt Rugby team. The field, by now was 90% mud, thus making it very tough to handle the ball. It was a forward game taking on the appearance of the Battle of the Somme. Going into over time the score was 4-4, but with sheer strength, fitness, guts and team spirit the Ft. Benning Flyer broke the deadlock to drive on to an 8-4 victory.

Coach Mullane said emotionally, "It was enough to make grown men cry and some did."

AMU shooters dominate American Championship Matches

By Tommy G. Pool

Three new world records were established recently as members of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit (USAMU) competed in the Championship of Americas Shooting Matches held in Mexico City, November 7-12.

Sp4 Joseph Clemmons, USAMU, got on the record scoreboard first as he powdered 199 out of 200 clay discs in the International skeet event to notch the first new record for the U. S. Clemmons then teamed with SSgt. Al Mullins also of the USAMU, Dan Carlisle, Houston, and Dean Clark, Garretsville, Ohio, to set a new world team record by scoring 586 out of 600 to break the old mark set by the USSR at 579.

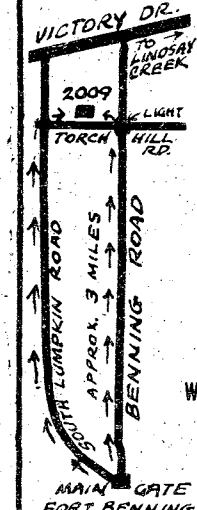
In rifle competion, recently promoted LtCol. Lones Wigger added another title to his sagging list of championships as he won the gold medal and established the new world record during the Games by scoring 1,159 points out of 1200 in the 300 meter free rifle competition. Wigger's score broke the old record of 1157 set by Gary Anderson also of the United States, in the 1968 Olympics. The silver was won by Miguel Valdez of Cuba with a score of 1,148 points, while Lt.Cmdr. Webster Wright, USN, captured third place with a score of 1,444 points. The U.S. team of Wigger, Wright, SP5 David Kimes, USAR, Huntington Beach, Calif., and Maj. John Foster, USAR, Bozeman, Mont., scored a total of 4,566 points to win the gold medal over Cuba at 4,458 points.

In pistol competition, SP5 Kimberly Dyer, USAMU, dominated the Ladies pistol events as she won back to back gold medals. She scored 369 points in the Air Pistol event to defeat teammate Sallie Carroll, Bloomington, Ind., by six points and then won by two points in the Center Fire competition to defeat Sp5 Ruby Fox, an Army Reservist from Park, Ariz., with a score of 574 points to 572 for Fox.

Sp5 Karen Monez, USAMU, narrowly defeated Marisel Sanchez of Cuba by one point (376 to 375) in Air Rifle competition to capture the gold medal, while Gloria Parmentier of Alexandria, Va., finished in third place with 366 points.

A total of 17 countries from North, Central and South America were on hand for the matches with the United States garnering the lions share in the total medal count with 16 gold, 7 silver and 4 bronze for a total of 27, 14 ahead of Cuba with 13, followed by Brazil and Canada with nine each.

VA Q&A



Q — I am a World War II veteran who has never used my GI home loan benefits. Am I still eligible?

A — This benefit is available without time limits on its use to veterans of World War II and later periods since the enactment of the Veterans Housing Act of 1970.

Q — I understand I can have my widow's pension check sent directly to my bank under the Direct Deposit System. How can I accomplish this?

A — Implementation of the Direct Deposit System for VA compensation and pension benefits was effective October 1, 1977. Those interested should take their next VA benefit check to their financial organization. The bank or financial organization will assist the beneficiary in completing the necessary forms.

Doughboy League

The Green Hornets defeated the Crusaders 18-14. This game in reality was made up of two different games. The first half belonged to the Green Hornets and the second to the Crusaders. The first time the Green Hornets had the ball, they drove in for a score, however Chris Johnson fumbled in the end zone and the Crusaders recovered. On the second possession they scored twice, once quarterback Teddy Gallardo ran it in from 20 yards out but it was muliffied by a clipping penalty so on the next play, Maurice Black ran it from 35 yards out.

The second TD was scored on a 55 yard pass play from Chris Johnson to Tino Dennis. The third and final Green Hornets TD was a fumble recovery and a 35 yard run by James Lyons. The score at half time was 18-0 Green Hornets. The offensive line led by Tom Roberts, Mike Scholes and Richard Morton played outstanding.

The Crusaders came back in the second half with their defense ready to play. Their first TD came when outside line backer Alfred Randell picked up a Green Hornets fumble and carried it for 40 yards and a TD. On the next offensive series Eric Thomas went over tackle from 8 yards out and a TD. Anthony Woodard added the only PAT of the game. The Crusaders moved the ball well in the second half but the clock ran out on them. The Green Hornets defense led by Napoleon Robinson, Raymond Parrish, Joel Shumate and Tino Dennis played great holding the Crusaders to 14 points. The Crusader's loss guaranteed the Patriots a first place finish.

The Dolphins played the first 36 minutes of the game on defense and the last four on offense to defeat the Sharks 14-12. In the first quarter Greg Robinson returned a Dolphin punt for 56 yards and a TD. The PAT failed. The rest of the first half, the Sharks spent in the Dolphins territory. The Dolphins had six fumbles losing all of them. It was the Dolphins defense and the punting of Mark Gilbert that kept the Sharks from scoring more points in the first half. The defense was led by Greg Lahr with 11 solo tackles and a fumble recovery and Jack McCoy who made one solo tackle in the open when a Shark ball carrier was TD bound. They were assisted by Mark Gilbert, Kevin Casey (Fumble recovery inside Dolphins 5-yard line) Patrick Dailey, Jesse Runfola, Junior Camargo, Tom Willis, Frankie Wilson, Tim Douglas and Tony Runfola.

The Sharks scored their second TD on a three yard run by Greg Robinson, again the PAT failed. The Dolphins offense finally put it together with four minutes left in the game. Greg Lahr ran 34 yards and set up a one yard plunge for TD by Mark Gilbert. Lahr added the PAT which proved to be the winning edge in the end.

Biddy League

The Biddy League Raiders dropped a squeeker to the Cowboys Saturday, 16-14 Both teams, tied in the league standings, came to Gordon Field to play some hard-nosed football.

The first period showed fans quite a bit of action. After the first series of plays, the Raiders were forced to punt. The Cowboys defense blocked the kick, running it back 30 yards to draw first blood. But with the kick off, the Raiders began to drive and within three plays sprang Trevor Johnson loose to ramble 45 yards for a Raider touchdown. The team failed to convert, however and remained on the small end of a 8-6 score. Outstanding Raiders included Cammargo, Guynn, Cassibry, Wilson and Kelly.

The second quarter seemed to be a busy time for officials with no less than ten penalties. However, as the period ended, "Tornado" Johnson again took the ball to pay dirt and added another two points to put the Raiders in front 14-8.

Miller, Dalton, Jay Harris, Antwan Harris, and Pachler provided the Raiders with some outstanding football during the first half. Plagued with penalties again in the third period, the Raiders were pushed back to the two inch line, and the Cowboys scored again. Despite heroic efforts by Raiders, Wilson, Riccinto, Owens and Hebert, the Raiders were down 16-14.

The final period proved fruitless for both sides and, again, busy for officials with eight penalities. Raiders sidelined with injuries were Asburry, Walker, and Owens.

Biddy League play ends tomorrow with a Raider-Redskin game.

Pony League

In the only Pony League game last Saturday, the Ft. Chargers defeated the combined teams of Ft. Rucker, 22-0.

Ft. Rucker's offense started early with Ed Brown running the ball 45 yards to the 2-yard line, but it was called back due to a clipping penalty. After that the Charger's defense "got tough" and shut down Rucker for the rest of the game.

The first score came as Tony Byers tiptoed down the sidelines 50 yards for the score. The extra point was good by Jimmy Duggins to make the score 8-0 at half time.

In the third quarter, Byers again broke losse, this time for 35 yards and the score. The extra point failed.

The final score of the game came midway through the fourth quarter as Craig Yancey intercepted a Rucker pass and ran it back 48 yards for the score. The extra point was good by John Devitt to make the score 22-0. The Charger defense was led by the hard hitting of Jimmy Duggins, Dave Crites, John Devitt, Tom Langford and Jeff Hickson.

The Chargers ended the 1977 season with a 5-1 record and the Pony League championship.

LEGAL NOTICE
Notice of Application

Notification is hereby given by The National Bank and Trust Company of Columbus, Georgia that an application was filed with the Comptroller of the Currency on October 17, 1977 as specified in 12 CFR 5 of the Comptroller's Manual for National Banks for permission to establish a branch at Fort Benning Shopping Mall, Georgia.

Any person wishing to comment on this application may file his comments in writing with the Comptroller of the Currency, Administrator of National Banks, Sixth National Bank Region, Suite 2700, Peachtree Cain Tower, 229 Peachtree Street, N.E., Atlanta, Georgia 30303. If any person desires to protest the granting of this application he has a right to do so if he files a written notice of his intent with the Comptroller of the Currency within 21 days of the date of this publication. The non-confidential portions of the application are on file with the Comptroller of the Currency as part of the public file. This file is available for public inspection during regular business hours.

Commission to visit Benning units

Members of the President's Commission on Military Compensation will be visiting various Benning units during the morning of December 12.

Soldiers in the 197th Inf Bde, HQs Cmd, 34th Med Bn, 36th Engr Gp and The School Brigade will be interviewed for their attitudes and opinions concerning military compensation. The Commission members are also interested in insights as to why the soldiers joined the Army, what they expected from the service and whether or not they plan to stay in or get out.

A visit by each Commission members to the homes of two married soldiers is also scheduled for that morning.

A public hearing will be held from 1-5 p.m. in the Fine Arts Auditorium at Columbus College.

Except for required military duties, personnel may be excused by unit commanders to attend the hearing. Attendees are requested to wearing the dress green uniform. The work uniform (fatigues) is not permitted. Transportation will be provided to and from various post locations to Columbus College.

Private individuals or group represenatatives who desire to testify before the Commission that afternoon, must call the Ft. Benning Project Officer at 545-5931 or 544-4811, and forward a written transcript of their testimony to Personnel Services Division, DPCA Room 623, Infantry Hall, to arrive no later than December 5.

Persons unable to utilize typing facilities dictate their testimony and have it typed while they wait To make an appointment for this service, call 545-2362. About 1½ hours will be required to transcribe the testimony and prepare it in its final form.

The Commission was appointed by President Carter to review previous studies of the military compensation system and, if appropriate, recommend changes to current pay and benefit programs. The President also charged the commission to make fresh review because previous attempts to prove an equitable and efficient total military compensation system failed to acheve general agreement.

Of the Commission's task, Mr. Charles J. Zwich, chairman, said, "Our major thrust is to get the current mood of the military, understand the issues, and try to integrate them into a total package."

The issues are complex, he said. He cited pay and allowances versus an all-salary system as a problem. The commission must first decide if either system contributes to an effective military establishment. If so, the commission must then consider their cost effectiveness or efficiency. "Can we get it-the same objective more cheaply by doing it with allowances or without allowances? So, the whole question of efficiency comes in," he said.

Answers to these and other questions will be decided after the commission's tour of major military centers. Their report to the President is due March 15, 1978.

The following is a list of some of the persons by category who have testified, and the topics that have been discussed at public hearings held to date by the President's Commission in Virginia and Texas:

CATEGORY	TOPIC
First term soldier	Insufficient pay
Doctor	Inequity in military physician pay
First term soldier	Basic pay and BAQ
Junior officer	Career financial incentives
Senior NCO	Lower grade compensation
Field grade officer	Compensation for PCS moves
NCO wife	Don't change the system
Retired general officer	Recomputation
NCO widow	Compensation for widows
Master Sergeant (Ret)*/GS-3	Complexity of compensation
Senior NCO	Government housing
NCO	Single vs. married BAS and BAQ
NCO	Recruiter living

Power outage scheduled

Power outages have been scheduled for Monday and Tuesday next week. From 8 a.m. til 10 a.m. power will be cut off to Kelley Hill and the Benning Main to permit the contractor to perform tests at the Kelley Hill substation. On Tuesday power will be cut off at NCOA, Rowell Heights and Davis Hill at 7:30 p.m. for five minutes and again at 1:30 p.m. for five minutes, also to allow contractors to test substation equipment.

Holiday leave policies explained

The details of Ft. Benning's holiday leave and Christmas early-out programs for this year have been announced by post officials.

The Christmas holiday period will run from December 21 until January 4 for soldiers and civilians, while personnel scheduled to ETS between December 12 and January 8 will be eligible for early Christmas discharges.

Personnel planning to take leave during the holiday period should review several changes made this year in Army leave policies. These include not taking leave in conjuction with a pass or 'day off'; not leaving the area before signing out on leave and signing in upon return from leave.

The official holiday period will begin at 7 a.m. Wednesday, December 21 and continues until 5 p.m. Wednesday, January 4. Commanders may authorize personnel using commercial transportation to leave as early as noon December 20, with return time extended to midnight January 4.

Unit commanders may authorize up to half of their personnel to be on leave at any one time during the holiday period. Operational and training missions of all units and activities must be fulfilled.

Since Christmas and New Year's Day fall on Sunday this year, Monday, December 26 and Monday, January 2, will be observed as Federal holidays.

Soldiers who ETS between December 12 and December 20 can be discharged December 12, with soldiers leaving the Army from December 21 through December 30 actually getting out of the service December 13.

Servicemembers whose enlistments expire between December 31 and January 3 may be separated December 14, with soldiers ETSing January 4 through 6 becoming civilians December 15. Soldiers who would have gotten out on January 7 or 8 can receive their Christmas drops on December 16.

Those eligible for the Christmas Early Release program have the option of staying in until their normal ETS dates, but those accepting the discharge won't be able to take terminal leave in conjunction with the Christmas drop.

Likewise, soldiers who ETS after January 8, 1978, can't take terminal leave to put themselves within the Christmas drop time frame.

Soldiers retiring at their ETS will still retire the last day of December.

Skill certification available thru Army program

The Department of the Army, in cooperation with the U.S. Department of Labor and appropriate certifying agencies, established the Army Apprenticeship program to help soldiers attain skill documentation while on active duty.

The first registered program involved enlisted servicemembers who worked in heavy equipment, automotive maintenance and food service fields. Thirty-four registered programs are no available to personnel serving in a related primary or secondary MOS, 25 have been developed and are being printed at the Federal Printing Plant and 13 more programs are currently under evaluation for development, according to Mrs. Sue Byrd, Education Counselor.

Each program requires a specific amount of job work experience and related instruction, to include civilian and military resident and correspondence course work.

To enroll in any of the available work programs you must contact an Education Center counselor. The counselor will explain eligibility requirements and assist in the preparation of your application. Apprenticeship logbook forms will also be issued and explained at the time of registration. During your participation in the program you will be required to annotate and verify daily work experiences and related instruction.

It's possible that you may have already completed civilian or military service school credit through resident or correspondence course work. Previously earned related instruction can only be awarded upon certification of course completion or documentation from official military records.

Past participation in an approved Federal or State registered civilian apprenticeship may also earn you work experience credit as long as appropriate documentation is provided. Additional credit may be obtained if your supervisor will validate previous military work processes and satisfactory work performance. All of this experience must be directly related to the occupation or trade in which the apprenticeship is being performed.

Upon successful completion of the program, the U.S. Dept. of Labor will award you with a Certificate of Completion of Apprenticeship. While the award of this certificate will not guarantee you a job, according to Mrs. Byrd, it will certify that journeyman status has been obtained and should enable you to be more competitive with your civilian counterpart, thus enhancing employment opportunities.

If you should leave the service prior to the completion of your program, you will receive documented credit for that portion you did complete. This documentation may be presented for satisfaction of requirements for civilian apprenticeship programs or related trades.

For more information concerning the various apprenticeship programs available and your eligibility for participation, stop by your servicing Education Center at Harmony Church, Kelly Hill or main post.

News in brief

BCT clothing issue changed

Soldiers at TRADOC reception stations now receive only essential clothing items such as fatigues, boots, underwear and gloves during the first half of basic combat training. High-value items such as dress uniforms and overcoats, as well as nonrecoverable items such as dress shoes, headgear and socks are issued during the second half.

The clothing deferred issue program is aimed at reducing the outright loss of nonrecoverable items as well as the cost of collecting, cleaning, classifying and altering recoverable items. TRADOC adopted the program because early discharges or significant weight changes often occur during the first few weeks of training.

SIMOS to begin next month

Units with too many or not enough soldiers qualified to fill certain positions will receive priority consideration and some soldiers will receive retraining under the Space Imbalanced MOS (SIMOS) beginning in December, according to DA officials.

Soldiers with MOSs in the Improved Hawk Weapons System will be assigned under a test program to increase readiness and reduce a common problem among first-termers serving most of their enlistment overseas. An Army-wide program will be developed from the initial test program and is expected to begin late next year.

Under the SIMOS program DA will assign soldiers overseas in their primary MOS at all times. Soldiers returning from overseas and without available stateside primary MOS positions will be assigned in secondary MOS positions.

The program also includes granting Guardsmen and Reservists an opportunity to serve on active duty in imbalanced MOSs.

Another goal of the program is to allow soldiers to serve two years at a stateside assignment before returning overseas.

USMAPS taking applications

The United States Military Academy Preparatory School (USMAPS) is now accepting applications for the class of 1978-79.

Applications should be completed as soon as possible as final selection will be made in early June.

Further information can be obtained by writing: Commandant, USMAPS, Ft. Monmouth, N.J. 07703, or by calling AUTOVON 992-1807 or commercial (201) 532-1807. Information is also available in AR 351-12 and DA pamphlet 351-2.

EM can forfeit re-up bonus

Enlisted soldiers who voluntarily fail to complete service obligations or who are not technically qualified to remain in an MOS will forfeit a percentage of their enlistment and reenlistment bonuses.

Written agreements which specify service obligations for those who receive bonuses will also be required.

Misconduct or failure to maintain proficiency in an MOS is also grounds for requiring soldiers to refund the percentage of a bonus for the time they do not serve or have no longer qualified in an MOS.

Disqualification in an MOS is determined when a soldier is no longer being classified in the MOS for which he received a bonus, refuses to perform MOS duties, receives disciplinary action which bars working in that MOS, or sustains injury or illness as a result of misconduct or loses a MOS-required security clearance because of the soldier's misconduct or fault.

Exemptions under the new policy are reassignment to other duties as a result of compassionate reassignment, reclassification, loss of security clearance when the soldier is not at fault, injury or illness not as a result of misconduct, pregnancy (whether the soldier remains on duty or elects to leave the Army), and failure to attain a higher MOS technical qualification.

These new policies will be spelled out in the written agreement which is also required by the change to Chapter 9, AR 600-200.

What to do after ETS?

Editor's Note: This is the first of a three-part series by Bev Lockhart concerning benefits and services available to personnel upon their ETS. This week's article concerns employment of veterans. Future articles will discuss education and how to go about getting a civilian job.

By Bev Lockhart

Contrary to popular belief, ETS (Expiration Term of Service) is not the highest award a servicemember can get. Every soldier does get a chance at it, though — at least once in his or her military career. The hesitation, uncertainty and countless arguments with yourself (and reenlistment NCOs) over whether to stay in or get out can drive a person crazy.

So the golden date has rolled around — at least — and you've decided to cut your military career short. Whether you've served one term or 30 years, there's more to "ETSing" than meets the eye.

Preparing for your ETS in advance could put you well ahead of the game upon your return to civilian life. "A soldier getting out of the service should start deciding what he wants to do months before ETS," according to Mr. Ralph Meyer of the State Employment Office in Columbus.

"If he wants to return to school, the decision as to what school to attend must be made and the school should be contacted. If he decides to return to work, a resume should be prepared and his local VA representative contacted," Mr. Meyer continued.

If you decide to return to work, you have a lot going for you. With the job market so competitive and unemployment figures soaring, it's reassuring to know that veterans have 90 days after ETS to apply to their former employer for employment if they left a permanent job to go in the service. The possible legal rights to your old job (under Federal law) includes any pay increases or promotions you would have received had you been there, and the time you spent in service must be counted toward seniority. To be eligible, you must be leaving the armed forces with less than four years of active duty service, unless you were involuntarily extended. It doesn't matter whether you were inducted, appointed into or volunteered for military service, but you must have better than a Dishonorable discharge.

State employment offices give veterans preference over non-veterans. The first time you go to the office you will be given a salmon-colored application card to fill out. The salmon color is distinctive from the other cards and shows the employment office that you are a veteran. If you have a disability the "DV" block is colored in red and your limitations are listed. The cards are then filed by occupational code — disabled veterans' registration are filed first, non-disabled veterans second and non-veterans' last.

Before you go to the employment office you should have an idea of the skills you are qualified in and the type of work you want or are capable of doing, according to Mr. Meyer. What if you're not sure what you want to do or you don't feel that you are qualified in any skills? There's still hope for you.

The employment office offers counseling for vets who don't know what job they are qualified for or what type of work they are interested in. Sometimes the General Aptitude Test Battery (GATB), which is administered at the employment office, helps determine what type of work is best suited.

The Education Center on post, Bldg 35 also offers the Strong Campbell Interest Inventory. The test is used to help individuals understand their work interest in a general way and shows some kinds of work they might be comfortable in. The interpretive scoring fee is $2 for a comprehensive profile or $5.50 for an interpretive report.

One of the state employment office's programs is titled "Job Development." If they don't have a job available, counselors will go out of their way and call employers from listings in the telephone book until they find one to refer the vet to.

They also have jobs listed on microfiche. Any individual in need of a job can go to the employment office on a walk-in basis anytime during regular hours to review the cards. The microfiche cards are updated daily and list available employment throughout the state.

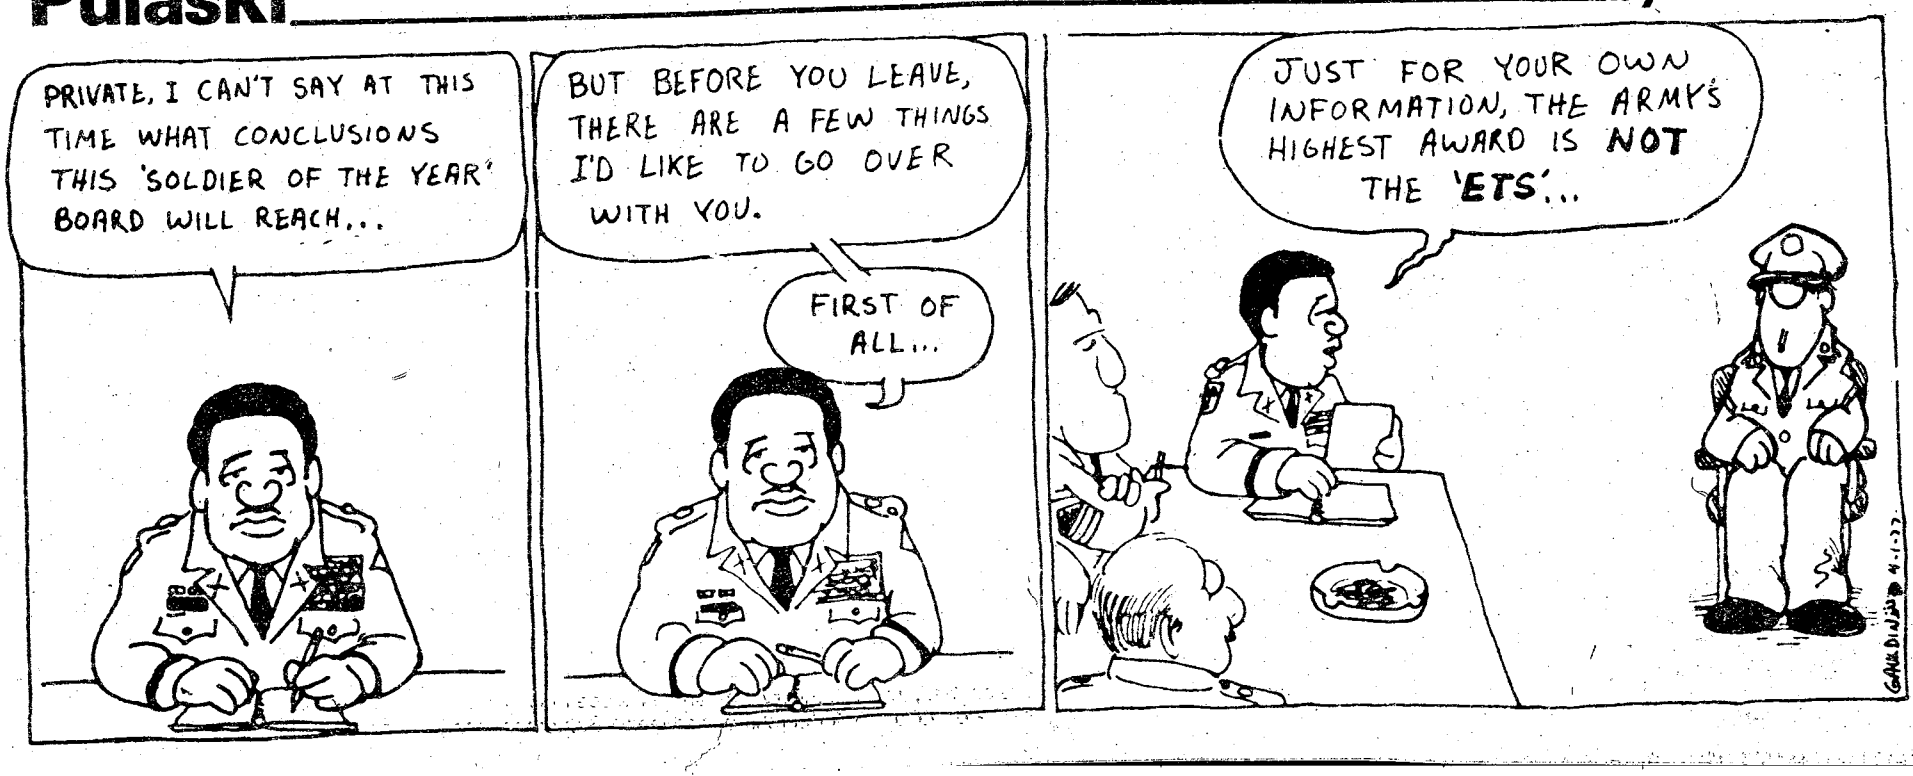
The post Education Center has a job data bank on microfiche cards, too. It offers a monthly composite of jobs available throughout the country, listed by states. It gives you an idea of what jobs are offered in particular areas, the current wages, number of openings and the locations. Other information can be obtained by contacting the particular state employment office.

About three to four hundred vets go through the employment office here monthly, according to Mr. Meyer. Last month they placed 193 vets and 43 disabled veterans. There are currently 10,000 veterans registered at the State Employment Office in Columbus.

The U. S. Civil Service Commission also gives vets seeking Federal employment preference. A network of Federal Job Information Centers (FJICs) are located in metropolitan areas throughout the country. Examination announcements giving details concerning experience, education requirements, job locations and salaries can be obtained by contacting the FJIC in your area. The local toll-free number is 1-800-282-1670. For the FJIC nearest your residence after ETS, consult your telephone directory under "U. S. Government." If there isn't one listed, dial 1-800-555-1212 and ask for the toll-free number for the FJIC in your state.

Recognizing that an economic loss is suffered by those who serve their country in the armed forces, Congress enacted laws to prevent veterans seeking Federal employment from being penalized because of the time they spent in service. Veterans Preference does not mean that only vets are placed in every Federal job existing. Instead, it provides a uniform method where special consideration is given to qualified veterans seeking Federal employment.

Veterans Preference adds five to ten points on passing scores earned by veterans who take Federal civil service exams. It advances veterans receiving VA disability compensation or service disability retirement benefits to the top of registered eligibles in most examinations they pass. It also allows credit for military service toward experience requirements of some Federal jobs, and provides waiver of age and physical requirements, among others.



Application for veterans preference can be made by checking the appropriate box on the Application for Federal Employment (Standard Form 171).

Veterans also have the added advantage of having a 90 day period to file an application under any civil service exam open while they are in military service but closed to the general public, provided a list of eligibles for that examination is still in existence.

Veterans Readjustment Appointments (VRA) is yet another program offered to vets. Designed to assist veterans who need the most help in making a successful transition from military to civilian life, it was authorized by Executive Order 11521 of March 26, 1970 and enacted into Public Law 93-508 by Congress in 1974. The employing agency works out a training or educational program designed to meet the veteran's interests, the agency's needs and the training or educational facilities in the area. Veterans must be appointed within the first year after separation from the armed forces (or release from hospitalization following discharge) unless they qualify for an extension by enrolling in an education program on more than a half-time basis during the first year following discharge or release from hospitalization. Under that exception, eligibility for a VRA is extended for a period of at least six months following completion or discontinuation of the

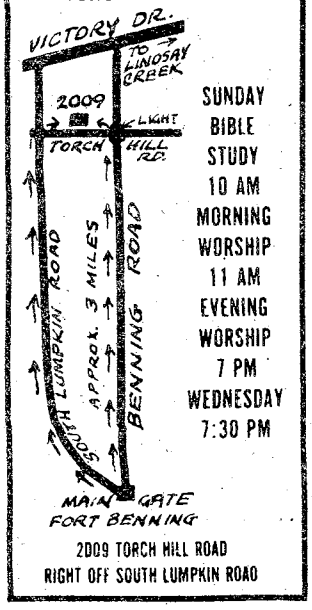
TSB assists hospital kids

The 4th Student Bn (Abn) TSB has initiated a program in which residents of the West Central Georgia Hospital are being hosted in a series of events.



Handicapped children from the hospital made their first visit to the Airborne training area on October 1. The group, lead by Mr. Phil Davis, viewed the Airborne 5000 demonstration and rode the 250-foot tower ride.

On the second visit, casual personnel from several 4th Bn companies acted as guides for the group led by Mrs. G. Hightower and Cindy Rawn. This time the children visited training areas and watched an actual parachute jump at Fryer Field.

The program will continue until the Christmas season and is intended to provide the handicapped children of the hospital with an exciting outing and stimulate a sense of seifworth in the casual personnel of the 4th Student Bn.

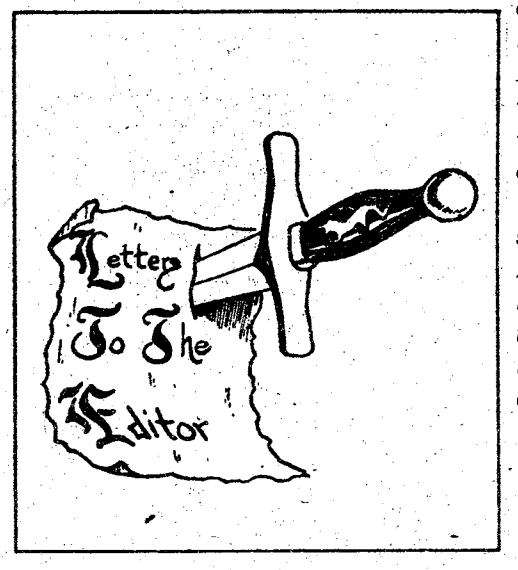
Hospital patient care praised

Dear Sirs:



In light of some of the recent negative things that have been written about the health care that Martin Army Hospital offers, I would like to offer a positive note.

My wife just recently gave birth to a baby boy at Martin Army Hospital and I believe that during the time she was there she received what was probably some of the best medical care that I had witnessed anywhere.

Everyone from the obstetricians to the nurses to the orderlies were absolutely terrific during her stay there. Every question that we asked was answered, every thing that was needed was offered. We could not have asked for more.

My wife and I would like to sincerely thank everyone at Martin Army Hospital that helped us during my wife's stay in the hospital and commend them for what we consider to be a job well done.

Sincerely,
SGT and Mrs. Ron Fowler

A Benning welcome to female soldiers

Dear Sirs;

This letter is to the new females arriving on Fort Benning. WELCOME! This letter is to let you know that someone is concerned about your welfare. By no means are males excluded. You are welcomed too. Speaking from the point of view of a female soldier with two years experience for "newbies" to be aware of upon their arrival at new posts be put out.

One of the first things you will run into are the friendly smiles of the person owning a car. They approach you with questions, helpful information and the offer to "show you around town or post". On familiar grounds you might not give this action a second thought, but being away from home this is a definite NO, NO. Consider the consequences. Probably you're away from family and friends for the first time — responsible for yourself for the first time. When you get into an automobile with a perfect stranger you have put yourself at the mercy of the driver.

Good or bad, whomever it is, you just don't know. It would be better to make your acquaintances in groups — through the arts and craft center, for example. Look and make a note of company sponsored activities. Invite one or more people to accompany you. Volunteering your services to sports programs, church socials of post sponsored organizations may also be helpful for meeting new associates. Even walking or riding the bus are safer modes of travel for checking out immediate surroundings be they post or the connecting town.

Second, when soliciting advice, ask your unit or section sponsor. Directions, locations and phone numbers are the most common questions asked. A slip of paper with a name or number is alway more reliable than memory for the unfamiliar. These tips are as useful for men as well as women. Precautions are time consuming, but may save you from some very unpleasant experiences.

Third, avoid unpleasantness concerning your money. Do not loan money unless you receive a written I.O.U. It may seem suspicious, but this is a time for suspicion. Remember — a friend in need, is a friend indeed, but "intend to pay you" is not an I.O.U. in the hand. The wrotten word carries much more weight. These few precautions will help you to enjoy your stay here. ENJOY!

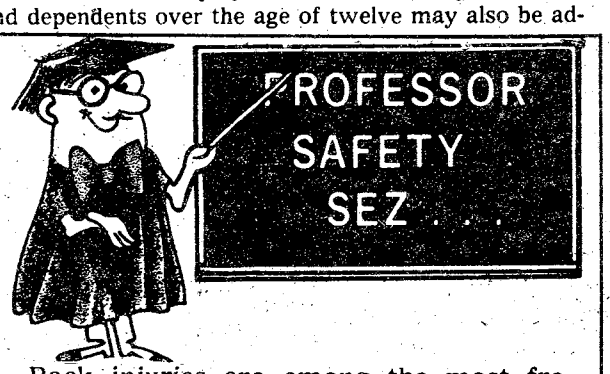
Flu shots to be administered

Martin Army Hospital will begin administering Influenza immunizations at Infantry Hall (Bldg 4) on December 5.

Immunizations are suggested for essential Civil Service employees including firemen, DFAE maintenance workers, airfield key personnel, commo-electronic personnel, division chiefs, key supervisors and school teachers.



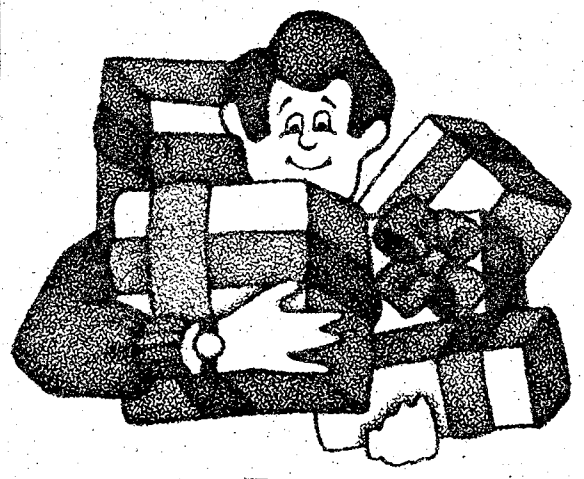
Other civilian employees, retired military personnel and dependents over the age of twelve may also be administered the immunizations voluntarily at this time. Dependents under 12 years of age may be immunized at the Immunization Clinic at Martin Army Hospital on Tuesday and Friday from 8 to 11 a.m. and 12:30 to 4 p.m. and on Wednesday morning from 8 to 11 a.m.

Personnel should bring their ID card, shot records and medical records if available. They will be required to read and sign a consent form at the Immunization Clinic.

Immunization schedule will be as follows:

December 5	9 a.m. to 3 p.m.	Classroom 1
December 6	9 a.m. to 3 p.m.	Classroom 1
December 13	1 to 8 p.m.	Classroom 20

Active duty military personnel will be administered the immunizations at a later date.



Back injuries are among the most frequent and troublesome on-the-job injuries. Many of these injuries could be eliminated if workers learned and practiced proper lifting techniques, and only lifted manageable loads.

Discharge: Your final Army report card; it'll follow you through life

By Bev Lockhart

So you've been in the service all week now and you like it. Or maybe it's been two years and the only thing on your mind is getting out. Either way, when the time comes for ETS, the type discharge you receive will follow you the rest of your life. Now is the time to do something positive to affect your future.

The Army issues five types of discharges; Honorable, General under honorable conditions, Under other than honorable conditions, Bad Conduct (BCD) and Dishonorable (DD).

The five discharges are divided into two catagories; administrative and judicial or punative. Honorable and general discharges fall under administrative while BCDs and DDs are considered judicial discharges.

Both Honorable and General discharges entitle an individual to full Federal rights and benefits, but under other than honorable conditions or a BCD could deprive the individual of veteran's benefits administered by the Veteran's Administration (VA). The VA determines whether an individual is eligible to receive benefits. Each case is considerered individually, but a DD deprives the individual of all veteran's benefits and may even deprive him of some civil rights (such as veteran's preference when looking for a civilian job).

Most soldiers are under the impression that if they complete their enlistment they will automatically receive an Honorable discharge. Not so . . .

Good conduct no guarantee

Honorable discharge requirements are met by honest and faithful service. An honorable discharge may be awarded even if disqualifying entries (i.e. Article 15s, letters of reprimand) are a part of an individual's military records, as long as they are outweighed by subsequent honest and faithful service over a greater period of time.

The majority of soldiers receive Honorable discharges, but just because you complete your enlistment without getting court-martialed doesn't mean that you will.

Most soldiers are under the impression that if they complete their enlistment they will automatically receive an Honorable discharge. Not so, although the majority of people will agree to that statement. As ETS approaches a soldier's files are reviewed and a decision is made as to what type of discharge should be given.

Discharge vs. employment

When the young veteran leaves the "Green Machine" and looks for employment he/she is asked on most job applications, "Do you have an Honorable discharge?" If the answer to this question is "no", few employers show an interest in hiring him/her. Very few employers want to risk giving a job to a vet who was a problem to the Army . . .they figure they're taking a chance on adding another hassle to their business enterprise.

The stigma of a less than Honorable discharge makes it worth looking at real closely. Society has always looked at a person with a less than Honorable discharge as cowardly and disloyal. The majority of employers make no differentiation between the less than Honorable discharges. Society tends to lump them all into one catagory — DISHONORABLE.

Discharges considered individually

The officer effecting discharge considers each discharge case individually. The individual is usually given the benefit of the doubt in cases where the servicemember is on the border line. Even if an individual has a bad military record but is given a personal decoration or separated from service as a result of a disability incurred in the line of duty, he may be awarded with an Honorable discharge.

According to Capt. Paul Anderson, Chief, Military Justice Division, JAG, "A soldier pending court-martial may request to be discharged under the provisions of Chapter 10, AR 635-200. He or she may receive an administrative discharge. The type of discharge is determined by the General Court Martial convening authority — General Livsey in Ft. Benning's case."

Not sufficiently meritorious

A General discharge is the separation of an individual under honorable conditions whose military record is not sufficiently meritorious to warrant an Honorable discharge. Except when discharged by reason of misconduct, unfitness, unsuitability, homosexuality or security violations, the specific basis for such separations will be included in the individual's military personnel records.

A General discharge certificate may also be issued to an individual who has been convicted of an offense by a general court martial in his/her current term of service.

Trainee Discharge Program

Under the Trainee Discharge Program (TDP), commanders may expeditiously discharge individuals who lack the necessary motivation; discipline, ability or aptitude to become a productive soldier when these individuals were voluntarily enlisted in the Regular Army, Army National Guard or Army Reserve, according to AR 235-600.

They must be in basic training, AIT, a service school or On the Job Training (OJT) prior to being awarded their MOS. This type of discharge must take place before their 181st day of active duty is completed.

Except when discharged by reason of misconduct, unfitness, unsuitability, homosexuality or security violations, the specific basis for such separations will be included in the individual's military personnel records.

Pregnancy

Women who are found to have been pregnant upon enlistment will also be discharged under the TDP due to medical disqualification. The Surgeon General has determined that it is harmful to the woman and her unborn child to undergo the physical exertion required to complete basic training.

A woman who becomes pregnant while still in a training status (other than basic) will be involuntarily discharged when the training commander — in coordination with the medical officer (obstetrician) — has determined that the woman cannot fully participate in the training required for the MOS due to her physical condition.

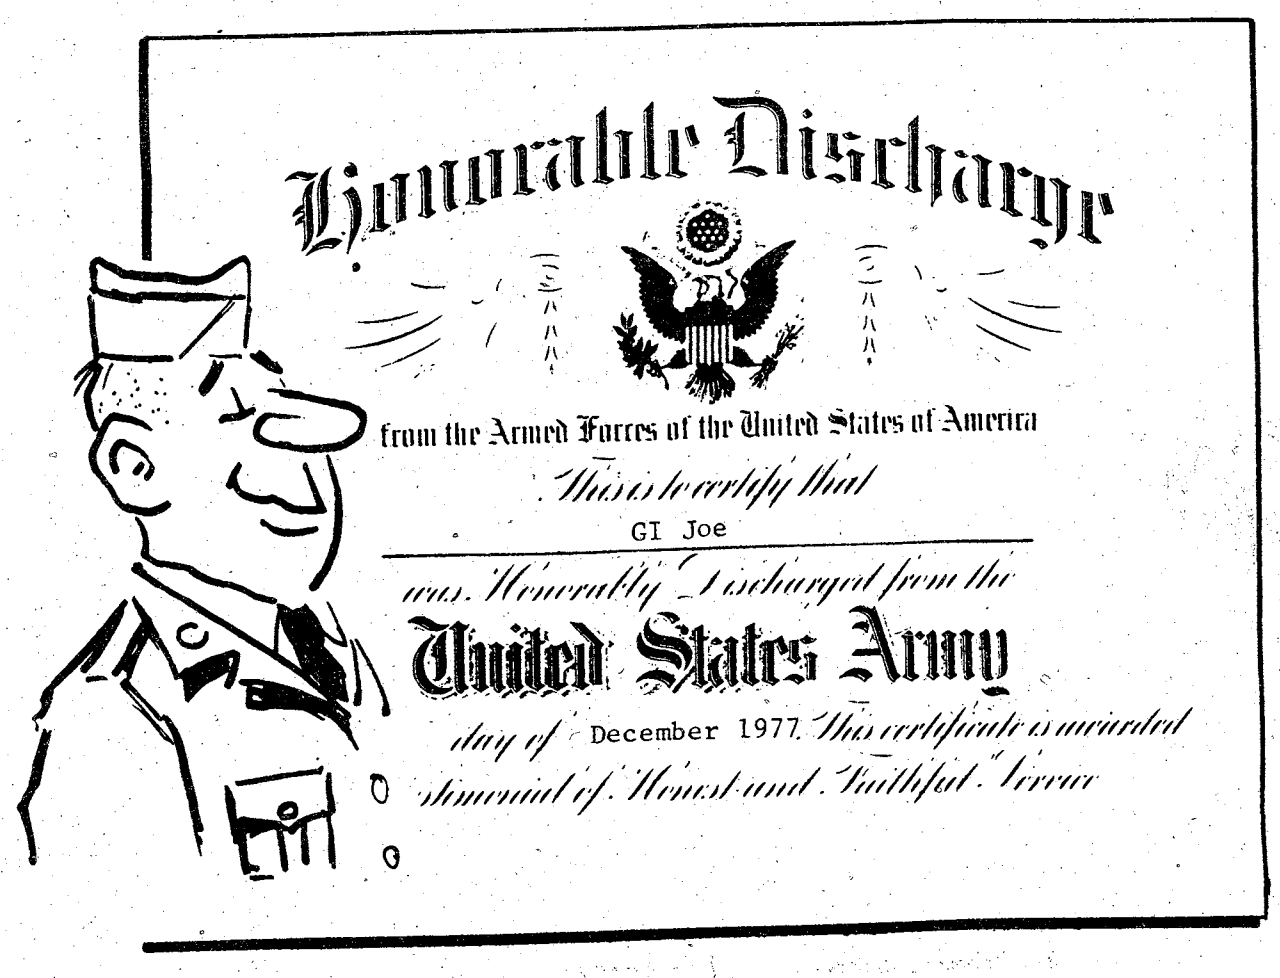
WACs who are discharged under the TDP for pregnancies which occured prior to active duty aren't entitled to maternity care; those who become pregnant after entering active duty status are. Pregnancy care include prenatal, delivery and postnatal care in military medical facilities only.

If it is determined than an enlisted woman in a training status (other than basic training) can fully participate, she will be retained unless she requests to be discharged under provision (UP), Chapter 8, AR 635-200. As long as she isn't in basic training or in a training status for her primary MOS where her pregnancy will interfere, she may elect to be discharged or remain on active duty.

Now is the time to do something positive to affect your future.

An honorable discharge may be awarded even if disqualifying entries (i.e. Article 15s, letters of reprimand) are a part of an individuals military records, as long as they are outweighed by subsequent honest and faithful service over a greater period of time.

Expeditious Discharge Program



The Expeditious Discharge Program (EDP) is for individuals who have demonstrated that they can't or won't meet acceptable standards expected of them. Conditions include poor attitude, lack of motivation, lack of self-discipline, the inability to adapt socially or emotionally, or a failure to demonstrate promotion potential.

Enlisted personnel who have completed at least six (but not more than 36) months on continuouse active duty are eligible for the EDP at their immediate commander's recommendation.

The policy provides for expeditious elimination of substandard soldiers before board or punative action becomes neccessary. It relieves the commanders of the administrative burden normally associated with processing eliminations for cause through administrative discharge boards.

A commander shouldn't force the separation of individuals who possess a potential for rehabilitation or who decline discharge under the EDP, according to DA. Neither should he/she use the EDP as a substitute for appropriate administrative or disciplinary action.

Discharges — there are many types to choose from. Your actions, attitudes and abilities do it for you. Now is the time to do something positive to affect your discharge. After all, the type discharge you receive will follow you the rest of your life.

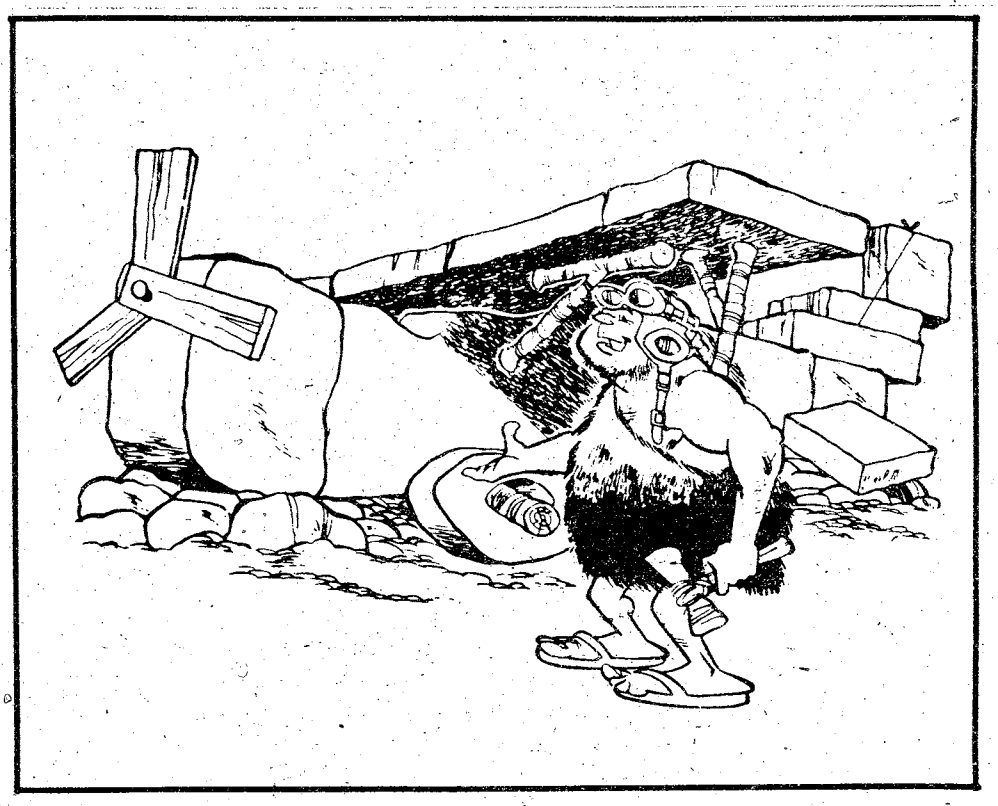
Flights of fancy

How many soldiers imagine visiting exotic places while on leave? Ideas of flying to far-off Spain, England or the Middle East may intrigue the soldier with pay in hand and leave on the books.

There are ways to see the world without blowing three months' pay if the traveler is willing to plan well in advance. Among the ways to travel for less money are Space Available (Space A) on military aircraft, Advanced Booking Charters (ABCs), and Overseas Military Personnel Charters (OMPCs).



Space A travel can help soldiers take their dependents on trips anywhere except in the continental United States. The soldier may catch flights from the US to an overseas destination, or from one overseas destination to another. Space A on military aircraft is free air transportation. The Military Airlift Command (MAC), which handles most flights, does, however, charter commercial flights to meet part of its military requirements. Passengers who fly Space A on MAC charters must pay a $3 federal tax and a $2 surcharge.

All Space A travel works the same, though, and here are the basics:

- the soldier must appear at the MAC terminal Space A counter in Class A uniform, and must present a valid ID, an up-to-date shot record (International Health Record), a DA Form 31 showing authorized leave and, when required, a passport.
- dependents must be accompanied by sponsors, must show IDs, and must present shot records and passports.
- each traveler is authorized 66 pounds of luggage
- soldiers may request up to five destinations when they sign in on the MAC Form 53 for Space A transportation; space on a flight is never guaranteed, but a traveler may elect to accept a flight going to a destination that can be used as a jumping off point to another.

Patience Pays

After seats needed for official military business are filled, Space A passengers grouped into four categories are seated in those remaining. Seats are given out within the categories on a first-in, first-out basis — date and time of sign-in are imporant. Here in general terms are the four categories:

- Cat One: dependents of military members, civilians and their dependents on emergency leave (active members on emergency leave to Space Required)
- Cat Two: accompanied on unaccompanied military members on ordinary leave
- Cat Three: dependent students
- Cat Four: retired military personnel and their dependents

Use of Advanced Booking Charters and Overseas Military Personnel Charters requires planning; and the savings in time and money are usually worth the effort. Applications must be made a month or two in advance of the scheduled trip. Flights are economical, saving about 30 per cent over fares on regular commercial flights, and the soldier's money is protected because each charter must be accepted by the US Civil Aeronautics Board. Send applications early

For specific information on Space A travel, contact the nearest MAC passenger terminal for a copy of MAC pamphlet 76-37. This pocket guide will answer many specific questions. Full information on ABCs and OMPCs is available from travel agencies.

Space A calls are made 1½ hours before a flight, and anyone who does not answer is dropped from the list. It pays to stay close and listen because there may be last minute openings making available seats not open during the first call.

There are disadvantages. Travelers are sometimes caught in MAC terminals for days when space on flights to selected destinations is unavailable. Sometimes passengers actually get seats and then are bumped in favor of persons or things with a higher priority. Travelers may end up taking commercial flights at unexpected expense and should carry sufficient funds to cover the trip back to their respective duty stations. Bear in mind that a soldier traveling alone is far more likely to catch a military hop than a soldier traveling with dependents.

Commercial Charters

Traveling on commercial charter flights has fewer built-in problems than Space A. Charters are not free, but neither will a soldier spend time in terminals using up leave that could be spend at the desination.

OMPCS are scheduled specifically for military members and their immediate families stationed overseas and may be purchased as oneway fares. ABCs must be booked for the round trip and are available to CONUS-based soldiers and their families.

Soldiers may fly on charters to and from specific destinations and try to get Space A flights to other places during the leave period. For instance, a charter to Germany would save time. Once in Germany, soldiers could sign up for Space A seats to make interesting side trips. Flights from the MAC terminal at Ramstein, Germany, go to Spain, Greece, England, North and East Africa, Italy, Scandinavia, and the Middle East. It is still important to remember that Space A seats are usually very limited in number. Soldiers determined to use Space A may find figures 1 and 2 helpful, which lists fights out of the U.S.

Whatever the decision, ABCs, OMPCs or Space A all the way, soldiers and their families can, with patience and planning, make dream vacations realities.

Sex no credit barrier

Law guarantees equal credit policy

Women supposedly hold the "purse strings" in our credit-based economy, but until recently women have often been denied credit on the same terms as it has been granted to men.

To stop this from happening, Congress passed the Equal Credit Opportunity Act that prohibits creditors from discriminating on the basis of sex or marital status in any aspect of a credit transaction.

Here are some provisions of the law:

- You cannot be denied a separate account because of sex or marital status if you are a credit-worthy applicant.
- A creditor can ask you about your spouse ONLY when your spouse will be using or will be liable for the account, or when you are relying on your spouse's income or property.
- Alimony, child support or maintenance payments must be considered as income to the extent that these payments are likely to be consistent.
- Income from part-time employment cannot be discounted as long as the employment is shown to be reliable.
- A creditor cannot ask about birth control practices or child-bearing plans or assume that because of your age you may drop out of the labor force to have a baby, causing an interruption of the income.
- A creditor may not use unfavorable information about an account you shared with a spouse or former spouse if you can show that the unfavorable history doesn't reflect on your willingness or ability to pay.
- If you ask for it, a creditor must provide the reason for any denial of credit. And, if you believe you've been discriminated against, you can sue the creditor for actual and punitive damages up to $10,000.

This looks fine on paper, but how has the Act actually affected women seeking to establish or extend credit? According to some financial organizations used by post personnel, the passage of the law had a minimal effect on their credit policies.

Stanley Fillion, Assistant Cashier of National Bank of Ft. Benning feels, "It might be entirely different with other companies but we've always had an open policy. The requirements for credit are the same whether you're male or female."

Stan Smith, Assistant Manager of the TIC (Federal Credit Union), said, "We really weren't doing anything that much different before the law was passed. We follow the Act closely and are even updating back records to comply with the law."

In considering whether or not to grant a loan, post creditors follow a guideline based on an individual's income, character, the amount asked for and the capability of repaying the loan. Other considerations are the length of time you've been conducting business with the institution and how long you have been on your job.

Active duty military personnel may find that being in the service is an advantage when applying for credit. "When considering a loan application," said Fillion, "we take into account an individual's military obligation."

Depending on where you go to apply for a loan, a previous credit record may be another determining factor. Fillion said, "It would help an individual who is applying for a loan at our bank to be a depositor and have past credit references. My personal opinion for a person who has no previous credit is to start with a small loan and have enough money in a savings account to secure the loan."

However, lacking previous credit will not necessarily prevent a loan being granted. According to Smith, "No previous credit is not an adverse factor. You have to start somewhere," he concluded.

With the passage of the Equal Credit Opportunity Act that starting point is now the same for men and women.

educational program, with the provision that no VRA may be made after June 30, 1978.

A written agreement incorporating the terms of the veteran's approved education and training program is required. It specifically states that satisfactory progress in the program and satisfactory performance on the job are conditions to the employee's retention and the later change in his appointment. After two years under a Veterans Readjustment Appointment the appointment is changed to a regular appointment automaticaly, provided the vet's performance on the job is satisfactory and he or she has participated in the training or educational program agreed upon in the beginning.

Last, but not least, there is a "Separation Orientation" each Wednesday afternoon at 1 p.m. in Bldg 85 at the Transfer Point. The orientation is for soldiers approximately one month short of ETS. Don't miss it! It is a bevy of information that can make your ETS and whatever follows much easier and definitely less confusing.

A VA representative is available to personnel "ETSing" who have questions that weren't answered at the Separation Orientation. He is at the Education Center every Tuesday and Thursday from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m.

When that golden date rolls around — at least — be prepared. It could put you well ahead of the game upon your return to civilian life.

The Ft. Benning Citizens Band Emergency Assistance Association will be electing a complete board of directors at their next meeting at the Kelley Hill Recreation Center, December 2 at 7 p.m. The club is planning a membership drive to bring in 60 new members by February 1978.

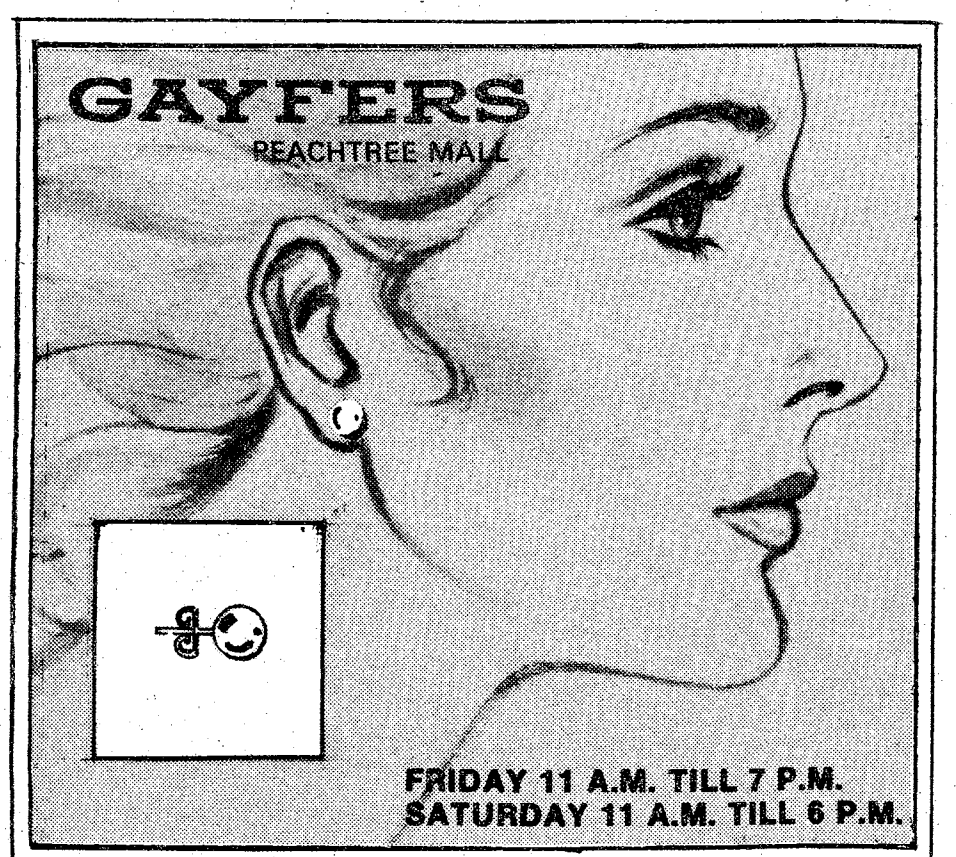
Persons interested in joining the organization may do so at the December meeting. The club is open to active duty and retired military, DoD civilian employees (GS, WGS, NAF) and dependents. Please bring a copy of your FCC license or temporary permit. You may fill out an application, pay the initiation fee of $5.00, the first month's dues of $2.00 and be accepted for membership at the December meeting.

The current temporary board of directors consists of: Charles McVey, Roger and Joyce Aldous, Diane and Bernard Shaurette, Matthew Basdin, Joyce Myers and Ken Schultz.

The purpose of the club is to provide emergency highway assistence to motorists in an around Ft. Benning in the form of directions, hotel/motel information and other assistance as may be needed and within the resources of the membership. The club plans to monitor channel 9 eventually, however this will not begin until the club membership is large enough to do it properly.

SGLI beneficiary is your choice

You have the right to select the SGLI beneficiary of your choice.



With SGLI, Servicemen's Group Life Insurance, you are permitted to designate any person, firm, institution or legal entity, including your estate, as beneficiaries either individually or as trustees.

Remember when making your selection that a principal (first) and contingent (second) beneficiary must be named. Your contingent beneficiary could be the person or persons who would receive the insurance should the principal beneficiary die before you do.

Suppose you decide against selecting a beneficiary? Write "By Law" in item 16 of DA Form 41 and the insurance will go to the surviving spouse, children, your parents, your estate or next-of-kin, in that order.

Your beneficiaries remain in effect until you change them or until the policy is cancelled or terminated. You can change or cancel a designated beneficiary whenever you need to and without the consent of the beneficiary.

It is important to keep the designated beneficiary current because the insurance will be paid only to the name(s) stated on the policy. (FORSCOM)

12,500 hours of voluntary work recognized

Certificates recognizing more than 12,500 hours of voluntary service was presented to 25 Army Community Service (ACS) members by MajGen. William J. Livsey, during the annual ACS awards ceremony held recently.

Many of the social services available at ACS are provided by a large corps of volunteers. It is through their membership that various agencies such as the Army Emergency Relief, Big Brother, Casualty, Emergency Food Locker, Family Services, Special Children, the Lending Closet and welcome packets are realized.

Mrs. Livsey received an ACS momento from Capt. David Ebron, ACS chief, for all the work she has done and for her service as the honorary chairperson.

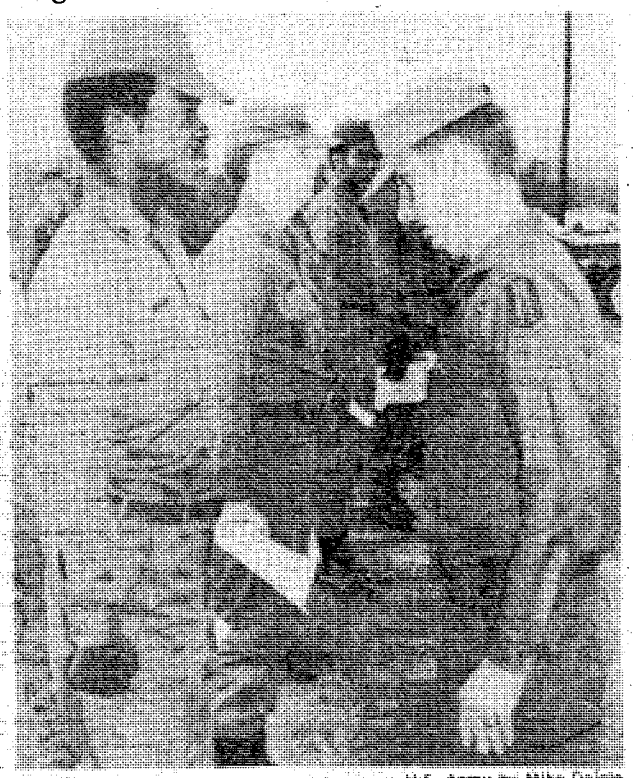
Those honored were: Alice Geary, (3000 hours); Ann Brandenburg, (1900); Dorothy Drach, (1550); Donna Cline, (1200); Myrna DeJesus (850); Ann Baker (700); Mary Ortiz (650); Cynthia Brown and Ruth Lewis (500); Joanne Peary, (350); Joyce Dodd (200) and Bob Lawton (100).

Those receiving orientation certificates and 50 hour pins were Betty J. Balsley, Linda Barmore, Ruth Brister, Dorothy Cunningham, Don Crach, Jean Davis, Linda Hopkins, Anita Jones, Judith Markelz and Ursula Tetzloff.

Training future Army leaders mission of 197th NCO course

By Mike Daigle

Training future leaders for the Army is the job of SFC Robert L. Sawyer and the other members of the cadre in the 197th Inf Bde's Non Commissioned Officers Development Course.



"We are here to dedicate the NCO Development School to total professionalism in order that the Brigade soldiers trained at the school will be, tough, proud, motivated, and disciplined!, explains SFC Sawyer.

Training starts every morning with an inspection of haircuts and uniforms and progress to classes in map reading, primary leadership and practical exercises in compass courses ambush patrols and ranger tactics. The students are also instructed in the principles of physical training, leadership and Drill and Ceremones. Training is equally divided between the classroom and practical exercises.

"The students really find the course getting tough with the long hours they have to put in because of the night compass course and recon patrol and the going straight to classes the next day," notes Cpl Scott L. Walton, a member of the cadre.

The NCO Development Course also train selected personnel for SGT, weapons familiarazation and operate the only hand grenade assault course on the reservation.

"Our goal is to train outstanding NCO's who will be able to keep the 197th the Army's finest Brigade."

The military style of life

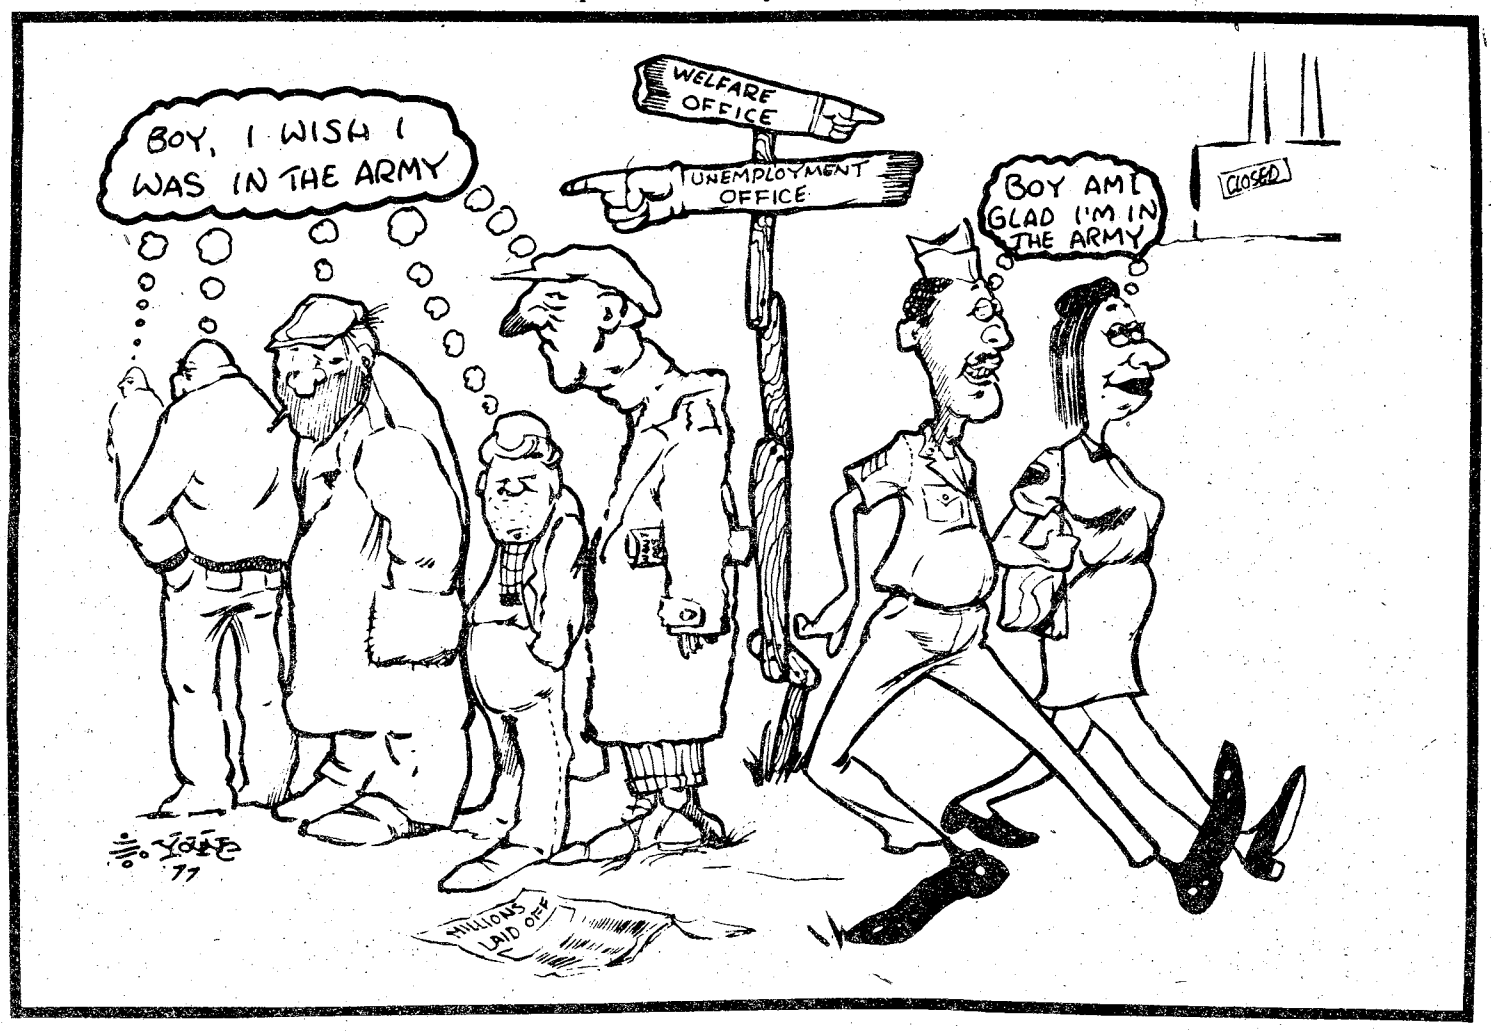
Editor's Note: Col. Carl Stracener recently retired from the Army. A physician, at his retirement he was Chief of the Pediatrics Department, Madigan Army Medical Center, Tacoma, Wash. As he prepared for the transition to civilian life, Colonel Stracener had some thoughts about military life style and the military community. We pass them on to you.

By Carl Stracener

The military family is the product of American culture as well as the "Military Life Style." Military life is deeply rooted in bureaucratic organization and a hierarchy of authority. The lines of authority in military society are more clearly defined than in civilian life and are reflected in rank, which is visibly shown by uniforms and in other ways.

The armed services have only advertised themselves as protectors of democracy, not as models of it; it is ironic that in some cases they have actually been more democratic than the civilian sector. Military bases and posts may be the only segment of American society where, even if prejudice has not been eliminated, military family housing is at least completely racially integrated.

Unlike civilian communities, military communities have no unemployment problem and everyone has the dignity of a job. This is no guarantee that there is no poverty. Though pay (including benefits) is generally good for those who have received some promotions — and is better than several years ago — there still remain some enlisted soldiers with families who are entitled to food stamps because they are below the federal poverty levels. In contrast with nearly every civilian community there are few ultra-rich.



The federal credit union and the finance officer replace the civilian bankers; the staff judge advocate and his military attorney are the corporation lawyers, district attorneys, legal aid societies, and Perry Masons of military life. The police chief is the local provost marshal. The city building inspector is the safety officer. Physicians are not only "doctors," they are captains, majors, and colonels. The local supermarket and department store on a military base are not owned by the commissary and exchange officers. Clergymen come in three brands, Protestant, Catholic and Jewish. The local travel agent is the transportation officer, who also takes care of the company's business. The housing officer fills in for a dozen real estate agents, but he only rents. School principals are school principals, unless they operate a military school for troops; there they are commandants. Directing all these activities is not the mayor or city manager, but the post commander.

Together all these people make up the "town fathers" and they have one thing in common: they are salaried employees who realize no personal financial profit from their individual and collective enterprises. The post is a total community in nearly every respect, and operating as it does there is very little of the "politics" one sees in civilian government. The leaders are not appointed or elected, and it is not essential that they hold favor with the citizenry so long as they can command its respect.

Though members may hold different views, certain values tend to exist more in military life than the civilian sector. Patriotism and loyalty to country are expected and respected more. That is what it's all about, and even those who do not speak it still seem to feel it. There is a higher regard for discipline than might be seen in some segments of civilian life. Since it has high value, it also has strong sanctions against violations. Another high value area is that of sacrifice. This is true not just for military personnel, but also for family members. Families are expected to move anywhere at any time. Sometimes this involves uprooting children from school and friends, personal inconvenience, or other disruptions in life style.

Those who make it successfully through these stress periods appear to regard the experiences as opportunities for travel, new adventures, escape from boredom, and a chance to meet new friends. Some, however, interpret the

Biddy League

The Biddy League Raiders lost their bid for a break-even season, Saturday, by losing a hard fought battle to the Redskins 12-0.

The first quarter promised fans plenty of action. The Raider kickoff was returned by an extremely powerful Redskin offense and met by a tough Raider defense. After three plays Raider, Trevor Johnson intercepted a Redskin pass. The Raiders then seemed to be well on the way to paydirt when a fumble returned the ball to the Redskins and the quarter ended in a 0-0 tie.

The second period showed the same unstoppable Redskin offense against an immovable Raider defense. As the see-saw battle continued, however, the Redskins drove 30 yards, a few yards at a time, and finally scored. With no conversion, the half ended 6-0 in favor of the Redskins.

The third period renewed the pitch battle fought by both teams. The Redskins ran the ball to the Raider 8 yard line. There the Raiders held them until the end of the period. After sides were changed, the Redskins scored on the first play. Again the "Big Red" failed to convert, leaving the Raiders on the small end of the 12-0 score.

The Packers came to play Saturday, as they ended their undefeated season by beating the Cowboys, 22-8. The tone of the game was set on the opening kickoff as the Packers' Tyrone Hudson took the ball on his own 35-yard line and scampered 65 yards for a touchdown. The extra point failed and the Packers led 6-0.

The Cowboys failed to move the ball against the Packers and were forced to punt the ball away. Good defensive play by Cowboys and a little help from penalties and the Packers were forced to punt from deep in their own territory. The punt went off the side of Philip Florence's foot and the Cowboys recovered on the Packers' 15-yard line and went in for a touchdown. The extra point was good and the Cowboys led 8-6.

On the ensuing kickoff, little Tyrone Hudson once again took the ball on his own 32-yard line and raced down the field for a 68-yard touchdown. Good blocking by Ben Gresham and Ricky Bush made the touchdown look easy. Philip Florence converted the point after and the Packers led once again, 14-8.

As the second quarter started, the Cowboys fumbled on their own 35-yard line and the ball was recovered by the Packers' Jay Bryan. The Packers began to drive to the goal line again and after two plays Florence darted 30 yards for yet another Packer touchdown. Tyron Hudson made the point after and the Packers led, 22-8. The half ended with no change in the score.

The second half was dominated by both defenses and neither team was able to mount a sustaining drive for the remainder of the game.

This game ended a perfect season for the Packers. Coach Davis was glad to have this game over with as the Cowboys were the only team to have previously scored against the Packers.

Notable on defense throughout the season for the Packers were: Junior Ware, Mark Gilliland, Micah Mullen, Sammie Huston, Kenneth Coleman, Matt Gresham, Orlando Jones, Jose Valentine, Darren Mishaw and Luke Yancey. The Packer defense allowed only 14 points throughout the eight game season.

On offense for the league champions were: Doug Fredericks, Donny Allison, Reggie Bush, Terry Phoenix, Craig Releford, Patrick Danford and Ben Samuels.

The coaches of the Packers credit their successful season on hard work by the young boys and their great spirit and team work. "Our game plan for the season was to work on basics and teach the boys the game of football," noted Coach Davis.

The Packers were coached by Coaches Davis, Bryan, Moore and Wade.

Doughboy League

The Bears won their first game at the expense of the Dolphins 8-0. The Dolphins scored in the second quarter with Greg Lahr going in from the one-yard line. The touchdowns was set up by a 25-yard pass play from Mark Gilbert to James Brittingham. The PAT failed. In the closing minutes of the first half the same combination was good for a 40-yard play but the half ended before the Dolphins could capitalize on it. Ironically it was the same type of play that gave the Bears a TD. A Dolphins' pass was intercepted by James Higginbottom of the Bears who returned it back 45 yards and a TD. The PAT, a pass from Higginbottom to Terrance Black, was good.

Besides the interceptions, the Dolphins defense kept the Bears in check throughout the game. It was led by event as intrusion into their privacy separation from friends, and trauma caused by a bureaucracy which doesn't care about families and personal life. Most people feel a little of both, but all of them recognize that sacrifice is involved.

Military families expect, in exchange for their sacrifice, some degree of reciprocity in terms of benefit. They get these, and much more than they realize or appreciate, so some of the sacrifice may not be bad; but, unfortunately the sheet really never balances out for many. Nevertheless, the government does provide a comprehensive range of services and supports for its armed forces and their families. These range from free aspirin to expensive medical care at little or no cost to the family. As rank and tenure increase, some of the benefits also increase in terms of better housing and status in the community.

Since mission is a primary consideration in all military life, emphasis tends to be placed upon active duty service personnel more than on family members. The military leader of a large military installation will view himself as military commander more than as a "mayor" or city manager. Community management will be conducted by his staff of military and civilian personnel who also handle military matters.

This system may be more efficient than a civil government system in many respects, because decisions can be made without regard to political or pressure group influences. Where it may fall short is in the area of citizen input and broad community considerations. Intramural sports programs for active duty personnel may receive proportionally more attention than playgrounds for children. Day care centers will usually be housed in buildings cast off from military mission requirements. Adult mental hygiene clinics will be better staffed than child guidance clinics, if they exist at all. And while military community life offers nearly every community support available in civilian life, it occasionally finds it has blind spots that simply have not been considered.

The military service has not entertained the idea that it might indeed need some kind of welfare department. These services are provided instead by a loosely organized system of chaplains, Army Emergency Relief, American Red Cross, military social workers, and health nurses. There are no juvenile courts on military installations and these problems are considered to be command problems, to be handled between the military police and post commander, the family, and sometimes a federal magistrate or the FBI. Sometimes there are juvenile disciplinary or control boards, but their powers are advisory. The problems of these blind spots become more apparent in the child protective area.

If military life poses problems, why do people remain in it? The answer is that it also offers many distinct advantages aside from the more obvious fringe benefits. One of them is a strong sense of belonging to a community. Both formal and informal codes exist among military families, reinforcing a sense of belonging to a large "primary group." Army families on the move are provided sponsors (another service member and his family) to assist them in making the transitions to a new assignment. They may be interantional travelers, but they can move around the world without ever leaving the "group." Like early pioneers, they cross the country, jumping from one military installation to the next, resupplying and exploring. They may have a friend in any state, and their homes are reflections of their wonderings around the world.

Military families are normally well supported and that's why they remain in military life. At the same time there is a subtle and constant awareness that they are receiving these benefits more as privileges than rights. From a commander's viewpoint they are a necessary and even desirable logistical burden, but nevertheless a burden.

The military family marches to a different drummer than civilian families and they hear two theme songs: one is, "The Army takes care of its own," and the other is, "If the Army wanted you to have a wife it would have issued you one." Since the music will probably not change, they must learn some steps most civilians never know. How well they make it is largely dependent upon their ability to do their own dance without losing step to the cadence created by the system, and our support and knowledge of the system. (ARNEWS)

Adjust driving habits to weather

Way up on the numbers list of traffic accidents each year are those that occur in the wintertime.

That's because a lot of people fail to adjust their summer driving ways to the hazards of the winter season. Poor visibility, ice and snow-covered roads, inadequate car preparation — all boost your chances of having an accident.

But there are ways you can cut the odds. Here are some tips on bad-weather driving recommended by the Committee on Winter Driving Hazards of the National Safety Council. Follow them. They'll help you get through the winter as a winner, not a loser.

WAY TO START — is early. You should have your car ready for winter before the temperature starts to drop. Not just an oil change and an anti-freeze check, but go all the way with a complete tune-up and inspection.

You need a hot battery for cold morning starts. Get a charge or maybe it's time for a new one.

Check your tires. Regular tires should have a good tread for the bite you need in snow and ice. If you use snow tires, put them on with the first snowfall warning. You get the best traction from studded tires, but be sure they are permitted where you drive. Keep chains in the trunk if you must contend with severe conditions.

WAY TO SEE — is with alert eyes. The hazards are all around you and if you don't see them you're in trouble.

Clean snow and ice from windows . . . windshield, rear and both sides. No peephole driving.

You can't light the way unless headlights and taillights are clean. Roadway spatter cuts visibility way down. Stop and clean headlight and taillight lenses occasionally. Carry a roll of paper towels in the car for just that purpose. Keep windshield washer reservoir filled with anti-freeze solution.

Run your heater and defroster a few minutes before you start out on cold mornings. That way you'll prevent sudden fogging of windshield glass that could blind you.

Bright lights glare in fog and falling snow. Use the low beam. And switch on your lights in the daytime, too, if visibility is poor.

WAY TO GO — is easy, especially in snow. If you do get stuck, here's the best way to get going again.

Don't gun it. You'll spin your wheels and probably dig in deeper. First, turn your wheels from side to side to get snow away from the front tires. Then, in high gear, ease forward gently. Sometimes a rocking motion — alternately shifting from forward to reverse — will provide the way out. Read your owner's manual for advice on that maneuver since it could cause transmission damage.

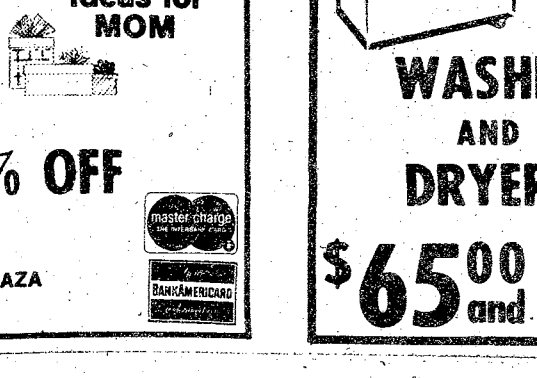
You can temporarily spray away start-up problems with some of the tire spray-on liquids, but they're more helpful on glare ice than in snow.

When you're on the way, keep speed down. It's not only the safe way, it's the "save" way, too.

WAY TO STEER — is steady. Sudden lane changes or turns can put you into a spin.

Stay well back of traffic ahead on icy roads. You need lots of extra room to stop. Anticipate intersections and expressway exits. Slow down well ahead of them. Remember that intersections may be extra slippery because of the polishing effect stopping and starting has on snow and ice.

Be wary of warming trends. Ice is twice as slippery at 30 degrees as it is at zero. Ice patches in areas shaded by woods, deep highway cuts or underpasses can waylay you, too. If you hit one, steer steady and roll through. Slamming on the brakes will only put you into a spin.



Above all, be wary of the other driver. Conditions are just as bad for him as they are for you. Anticipate, but don't over-react. Allow for errors. — (Courtesy of National Safety Council).

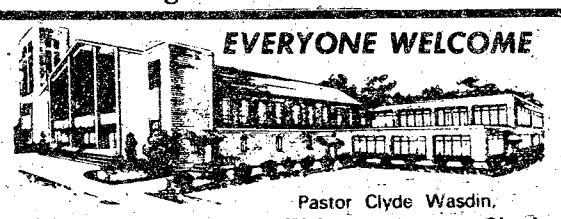
Honored Servicemembers

Merrell Lane, a Ft. Benning street dedicated May 15, 1950 in the name of Pvt. Joseph F. Merrell, Medal of Honor recipient, runs northwest-southeast across the loop made by Kessler Drive in the Custer Terrace Housing Area. Private Merrell was awarded the Medal of Honor for his courageous actions while serving with the 15th Infantry Regiment, 3rd Infantry Division near Lohe, Germany on April 18, 1945.

19 inducted into OCS Hall of Fame

Nineteen active duty, reserve and retired Army officers became members of the Officer Candidate School (OCS) Hall of Fame in a ceremony conducted in Wigle Hall November 18.



Ten recipients of the honor, including two officers assigned to Benning, were on hand to accept their certificates of membership from MajGen. William J. Livsey.

Those in attendance were: MajGen. Lee Lawrence, Col. (Ret.) Shirley M. Castle, and Colonels John L. Jones Jr., Joseph R. Koehler, James W. Mitchell, Galen W. Radke, Othar J. Shalikashvili, John Temperilli Jr., Joseph A. Villa and Charles E. Weddle.

Col. Jones is chief of the Committee Group, Staff and Faculty Company, 1st AIT Bde here. Col. Villa is secretary and director of support of the U.S. Army Infantry School.

Inducted in absentia were: Colonels Robert S. Bell, Gilbert Beltran, George N. Ivey, Robert John Meese, Gilbert Procter Jr. and Ronald J. Zahm and Colonels (Ret.) John P. Brown, Howard H. Craig and Seymour L. Goldberg.

To qualify for the Hall of Fame a candidate must be a graduate of OCS here or at Ft. Riley, Kan, or commissioned in the Infantry through a recognized Department of the Army OCS; — be a recipient of the Medal of Honor, regardless of rank or have attained the rank of colonel or higher while serving on active duty or have been elected or appointed to an office of prominence in national or state government or be recognized and recommended by the commandant of the U.S. Army Infantry School for outstanding service.

The Sharks defeated the Green Hornets by the same score and in the same manner as they did in their first meeting on 15 October. A bad snap from Green Hornets' center on a fourth down gave the Sharks a first and goal inside the Green Hornets five yard line. Paul Rivera scored the TD and Shelby Shipman added the PAT. The Sharks defense led by Eric Johnson and Paul Rivera kept the Green Hornets outside the Sharks 40 yard line throughout the game.

The Patriots went undefeated in the 1977 season after winning 32-18 over the Crusaders.

Ricky McGee punched off-tackle behind excellent blocking and pulling guards to score three touchdowns and PAT.

Chris Baird and Mark Miller each made a trip into the end-zone for TDs behind outstanding offensive blocking and team effort. Matt Cole picked off a fumble and Mark Crites and Martin Wright connected on long yardage pass plays.

Joey Hashimoto, Merritte Wilson, Billy Moore, John Hannon, Channon Smith, and Donald Cruce kept the Patriots offense series on the go.

The defensive unit was led by Mike Brand, Martin Wright, Robert Fuff, and Sherwood Williams.

The game was dedicated to the Patriot's parents, who supported the team effort every inch and split-second of the season, according to Patriot coach, Maj Cole.

Columbus College has become part of SOC

Columbus College is one of the founding members of the recently initiated Servicemen's Opportunity Colleges' Associate Degree Program.

Columbus College in joining the program becomes one of forty-nine institutions of higher learning forming the largest formal network offering civilian degrees to military personnel.

The SOCAD program is being implemented this fall on all major Army bases in the Continental United States and is designed to serve over 200,000 combat personnel who have high school educations but who generally have not been able to have military training and experience credited toward academic degrees.

This network, expected to be expanded to all major Army bases worldwide by fall 1978, is a logical extension of the SOC concept and was developed with member institutions during a series of conferences conducted during the early summer by SOC Director James F. Nickerson and Associate Director Harry K. Miller Jr.

Although SOCAD is at pesent a project for the Army, it is designed as a model that can be used by other services as well, according to Col. Robert Waggener, Director of Education, Department of the Army.

Institutional acceptance into the program requires a written commitment to follow basic SOC criteria including a letter of agreement with each candidate for a degree spelling out requirements and ways to meet those requirements; continuous counseling during the candidate's progress; opportunities for continued educational progress regardless of duty station; acceptance of the American Council on Education's Guide recommendations for military training and experience; a flexible curriculum, with no more than half the credits prescribed; limitations of residency requirements to no more than one-fourth of the total educational program; awarding of the degree by the contracting insitution; participation in third-party evaluations of on-base educational programs.

The objective of the program is for the Army to be able to say to a recruit: "With a high school diploma, and with reasonable effort on your part, you are guaranteed by the service the opportunity to make progress toward an associate degree from an accredited college or university regardless of the type or location of your military assignment."

SOC is jointly sponsored by AASCU and AACJC with the assistance of ten other higher education associations and the military services. SOC is supported by funds from Department of Defense and a grant from the Carnegie Corporation of New York.

Doughboys defeat Tuskegee in final minutes, 32-24

By Debra Hilgeman

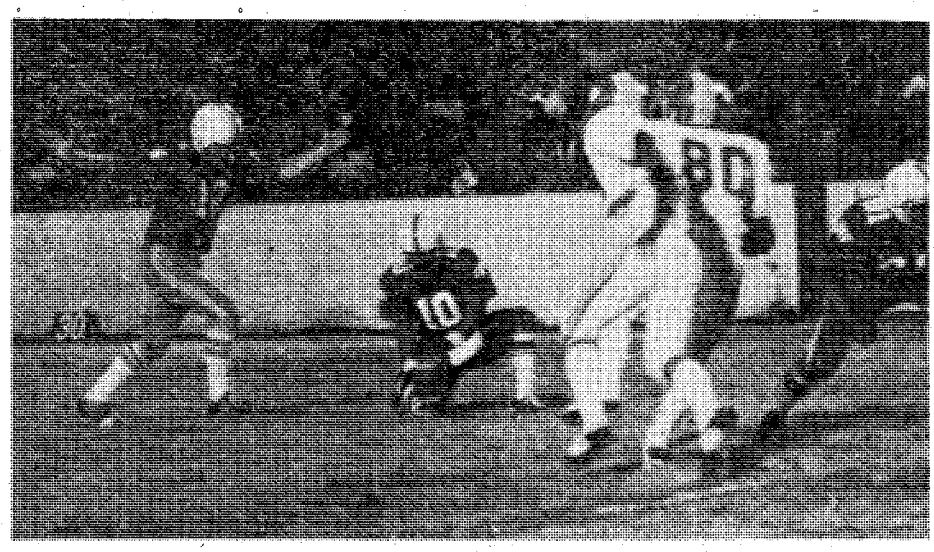
In the last game of the season, the score was tied with three minutes remaining in the game when the Ft. Benning Doughboys erupted for a touchdown that edged them over the Tuskegee Golden Tigers, 31-24.

In a fast-paced first quarter, the Golden Tigers were on the board first with a 39-yard field goal early in the period. With 6:27 left in the quarter, they scored again with a well-executed option pitch-out to the right for the touchdown. The extra point gave them a 10-0 lead at the end of the period.

After an apparent Tuskegee score was called back on a penalty, the Doughboys rallied back in the second quarter with two touchdowns and a field goal. Early in the period, Doughboy quarterback Joe Duenas threw a 16-yard pass to split end Rodney Bradley, who took it in for the score, with David Ward adding the extra point. Seconds later, the Doughboys recovered a fumble on the five-yard line and running back Charles Holley ran it through two plays later. Ward came through for the point and followed it up with a 30-yard field goal that gave the Doughboys a 17-10 lead at the end of the first half.

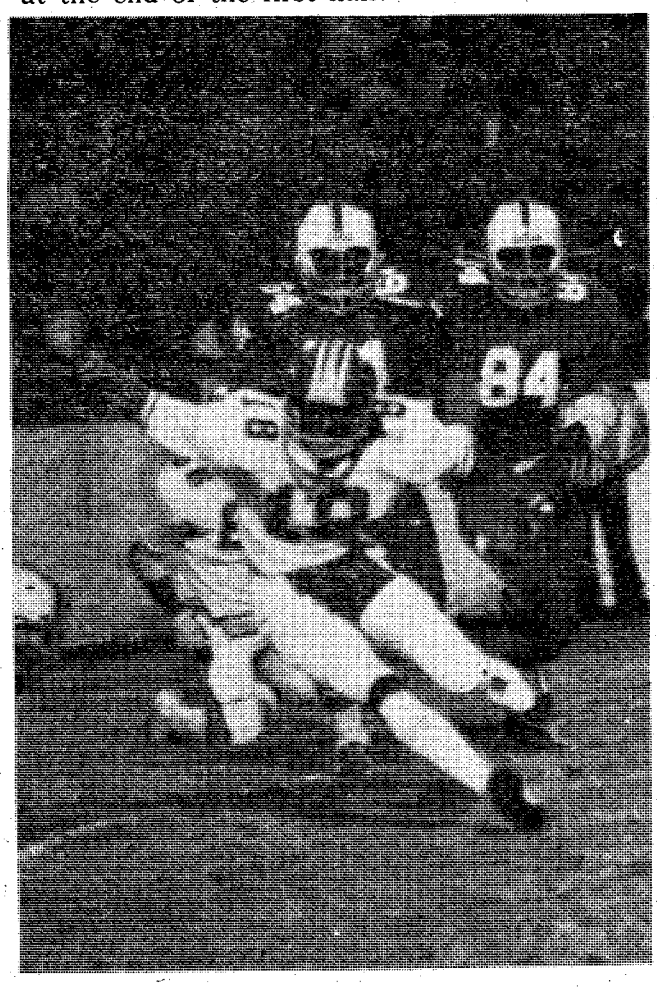
In third quarter play, Tuskegee held the Doughboys scoreless while they put two touchdowns of their own on the board. A 39-yard touchdown pass evened the score 17-all and a 24-yard run to pay dirt slid Tuskegee into the lead, 24-17, with 2:45 left in the quarter.

The Doughboys came back to tie the score with 7:27 remaining in the final period. A field goal attempt from the five-yard line was nixed and Duenas carried the ball through the line for the points. Ward's kick set the score at 24-all.

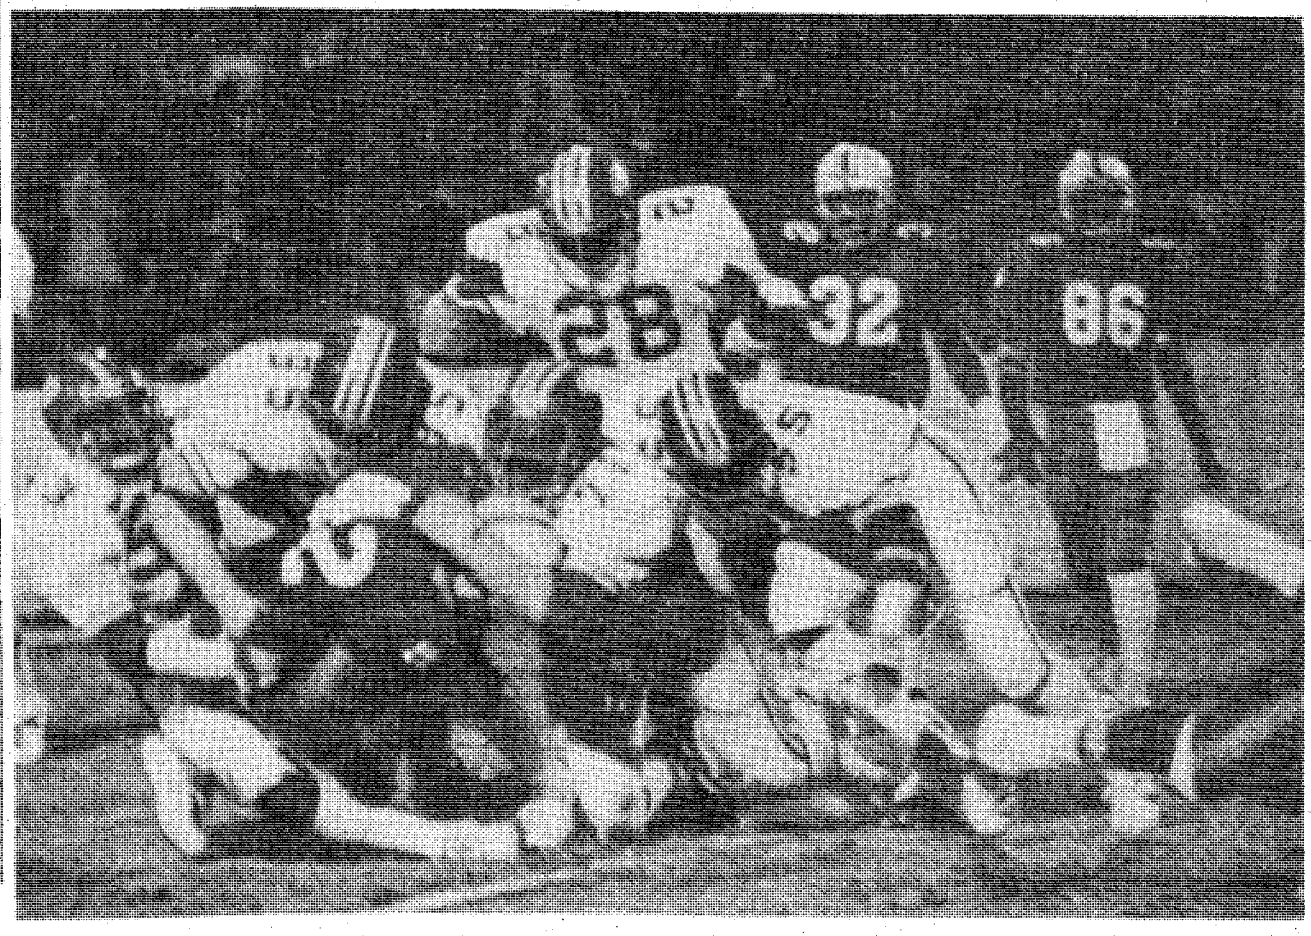


It was anybody's game in the final minutes of play with the Doughboys possessing the ball on their own seven-yard line. With 1:28 remaining in the game, running back Arthur Hawkins took a 30-yard pass from Duenas and his dash took him to the 15-yard line before being brought down. On the next play, Duenas broke through the line and Ward added the extra point, clinching the victory for the Doughboys.

Approximately 6,000 cheering fans turned out for the Doughboys final game of the 1977 season. The spirit of the ballplayers, and the enthusiasm of the fans added up to an exciting game that was summed up by MajGen. William L. Livsey as, "Fantastic!"

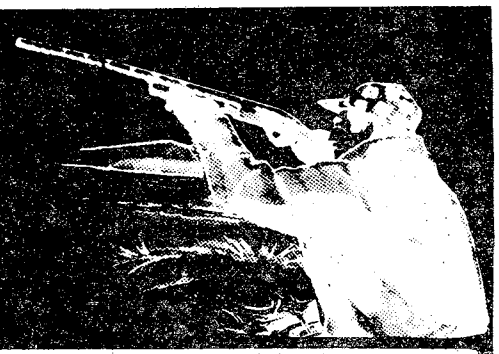


U.S. Army Photos
by Marie Russo



Stretching to block a Tuskegee pass is Jeff Bruckner. The Doughboy defense allowed only one TD through the air, in Friday's victory.

Doughboy kicker David Ward had a good night with a 30 yard field goal and going 3 of 3 in extra point kicks.



All was not easy for Tuskegee quarterback, Gerald Bess as Doughboys Michael Dawkins (64) and Rudolph Gordan (84) close in for the tackle.

Doughboy runners found the going rough at times, as Running back Erogies Grigley (42) is mobbed by Tuskegee tacklers.

Writing to Congress: A last resort

By Joyce Walker

While undergoing the rigors of Advanced Individual Training (AIT), a Ft. Benning soldier decides that the Army way of life might not be what he wants after all.

Desiring a discharge, he writes to his Congressman, explaining to him that he feels it would be in the best interest of the Army if he were to be released from the service.

Before his congressman can respond to the soldier's letter, it is forwarded to the office of the Chief of Legislative Liaison (OCLL), Department of the Army. The congressman must know the complete circumstances before he can take action, if any.

OCLL then forwards the inquiry to the Congressional Liaison Representative (CLR) at Benning who follows up on the investigation.

"When a soldier writes to his congressman," says Mrs. Ann Garrett, Benning's CLR, "he feels the congressman can perform a miracle and get him discharged. This isn't so."

When Mrs. Garrett receives the inquiry from OCLL, she forwards it to the AIT Brigade commander to find out if the service member actually meets the criteria for discharge under Army regulations.

The brigade commander, in turn, forwards the letter to the individual's unit commander, who calls the service member in to counsel him and see what can be done to help him adjust to Army life.

The commander then submits a proposed reply for the member of Congress to the AG. Mrs. Garrett forwards Ft. Benning's reply to OCLL, who in turn contacts the congressman involved. The Congressman must then send his findings and advice to the soldier.

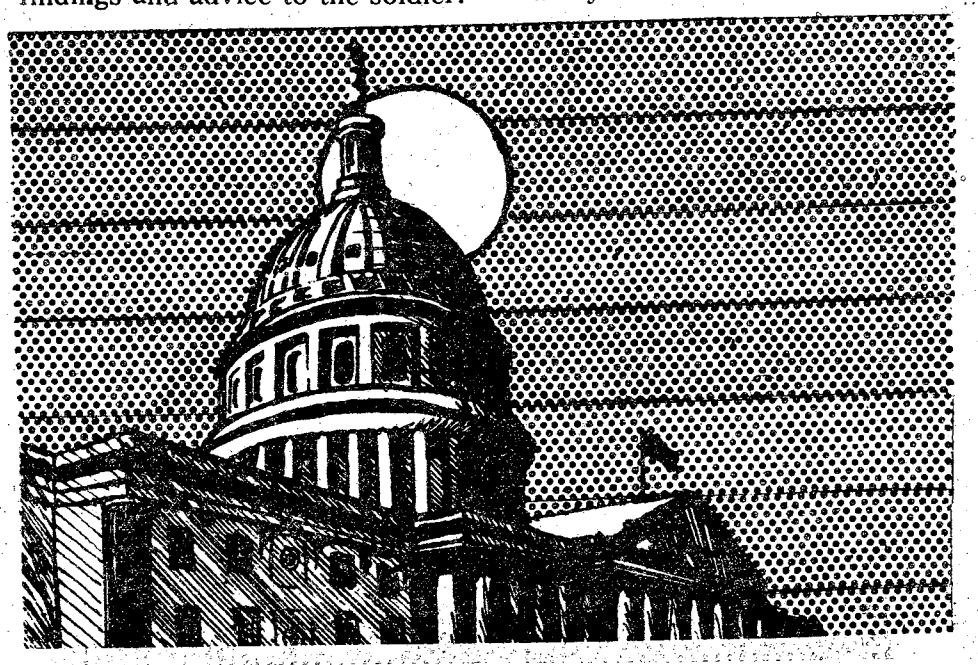
The response that the soldier receives from his congressman will, more than likely, be the same answer that he has already received from his unit commander.

Had the service member used his chain of command, he could have just as easily have had his problem solved at a lower level and possibly, a lot quicker. His problem didn't really require an investigation at the congressional level.

Mrs. Garrett states that "the majority of congressionals handled at Ft. Benning are from individuals who, for some reason or other, simply refuse to use their chain-of-command."

She went on to say, "They do not realize that nine times out of ten, they could get their problem solved or be directed to appropriate solutions at the company or unit level."

"However", Mrs. Garrett added, "we must remember that it is the soldier's inalienable right to write his congressman if he deems it necessary and that no reprisals will be taken against him if he decides to take this course. But the soldier must also remember that congressmen cannot work miracles, they cannot work outside of regulations, and that in most cases, he would get an identical answer had he stayed at a local level rather than gone the congressional route."



According to Mrs. Garrett, who has been Benning's CLR for three years, Ft. Benning handles approximately 50 congressionals per month. Although the majority of the cases are unnecessary, some are very justifiable. For example, an individual may neglect to write home and tell the family how he or she is doing. Efforts by the family through commanding officers, etc. have failed to net results so the family becomes a third party and decides to write their congressman.

Mrs. Garrett also maintains that some of the individual problems are indirectly caused by the individual's chain-of-command. "The service members may have presented their problem through the proper channels of command, but did not receive a satisfactory answer if any answer at all. "The person may then become frustrated and say 'the heck with it' and write his congressman."

"The types of inquires that we handle is undefinable," says Mrs. Garrett. "They range from hardship discharges, pay and allowance problems, to maltreatment and poor condition grievances."

Congressionals are not all initated by service members and their families. Some are also from civilians who may have complaints against Ft. Benning. "For example, they don't like being stopped by military policepersons on highway 27, which they feel is a public highway," says Mrs. Garrett. "Retirees may write to complain about their disintegrating medical benefits," she added.

"We are always receptive to all congressional inquiries," says Mrs. Garrett. However she strongly advises that if an individual decides to write his congressman, he/she should attempt to receive an answer through his chain-of-command.

Joggers advised on running habits

By Julie Casey

It was a quiet evening and the road you were driving along was dark and narrow. Suddenly, there was a darkly clothed figure jogging right in front of you. You tried to stop, but there wasn't time to react. Under the sounds of screeching tires your heard this sickening thud.

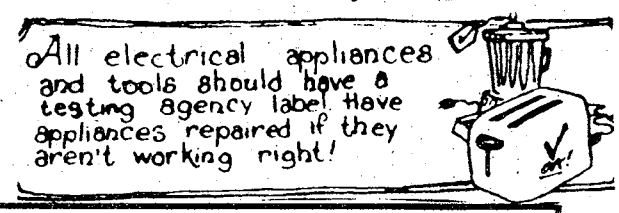
You flew out of the car to find a runner crumpled into a pile on the road. You kept saying to yourself, "I didn't see him. Why was he wearing such dark clothing."

Recently a similar accident happened, when a soldier, wearing dark clothing, was struck while running in the early morning darkness. To compound the situation, there was a slight rain that even further impared the driver's vision. Fortunately, the jogger was not seriously injured.

- Wear brightly colored, high visibility clothing or reflectorized material.

- Keep in mind that roadways are designed primarily for vehicular traffic.

Use only road shoulders, sidewalks, grassy area, and PT fields.



- Pedestrian traffic rules apply to joggers. Runners must face oncoming traffic and use roads off the main thoroughfares. Joggers should yield to all traffic prior to crossing a throughfare.

- Drivers should be alert to the fact that troop movements and pedestrian traffic may be encountered at any time, day or night.

- Drivers should hold their speed to a level consistent with appropriat conditions. In heavily congested areas, drivers should adjust their speeds to allow enough reaction time to slow down.

To prevent further accidents, Mr. Bennie Padget, Benning safety officer suggests that joggers and drivers follow these precautionary measures.

Padgett also emphasized that joggers should stay off the pavement, especially on the main throughfares during the early morning hours and at dusk when visibilty is limited.

Tour of Macon Mall

On Friday, November 18, members of the NCO Wives Club journeyed to the lovely Macon Shopping Mall to begin their Christmas shopping. It was a full and most enjoyable day for the ladies who departed at 8:15 a.m. and returned at 7:30 p.m.

Harmony Church Recreation Center

The NCOWC donated cakes and baked goods to the Harmony Church Recreation Center on Sunday, November 20. Special treats are provided by members of the NCOWC each third Sunday of the month as one of their many charitable gestures.

Breakfast

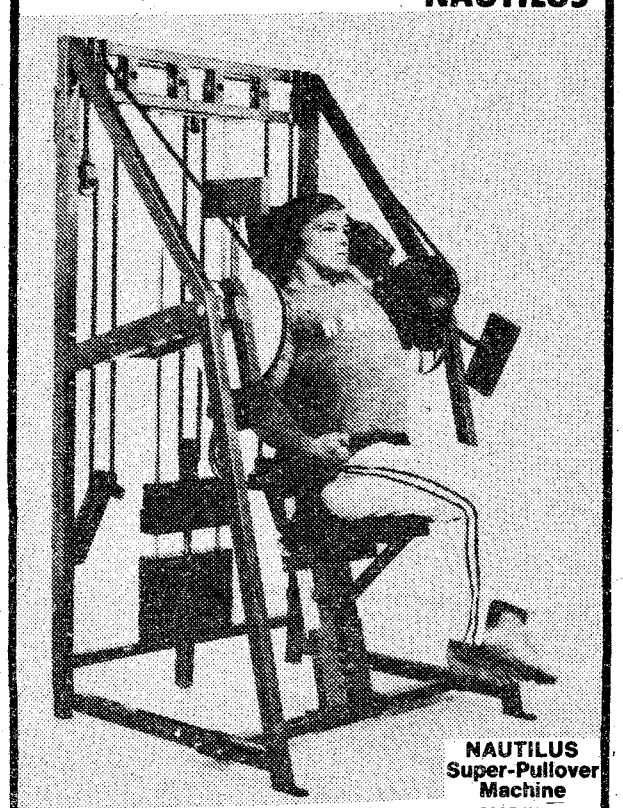
Members and guests of the NCO Wives Club met at the Top 5 Club on Monday, November 21 for breakfast and games instead of the usual third Wednesday, due to the Thanksgiving holidays.

After enjoying a hearty Southern breakfast served in the dining room at 9:30 a.m. they adjourned to the ballroom for the remainder of the morning for fun and games. Hostesses of the breakfast were Lillian Lambert, Diana Navarette and Mary Wildman.

Newcomers Coffee

The President and members of the NCOWC met at the NCOWC clubhouse on Tuesday morning, November 22, to welcome newcomers.

Coffee and donuts were served by the Hospitality chairman, Rowena Cherry and her assistant, Ann Cogar.



All interested ladies are invited to join us at the next fourth Tuesday of the month event on January 24, 1978.

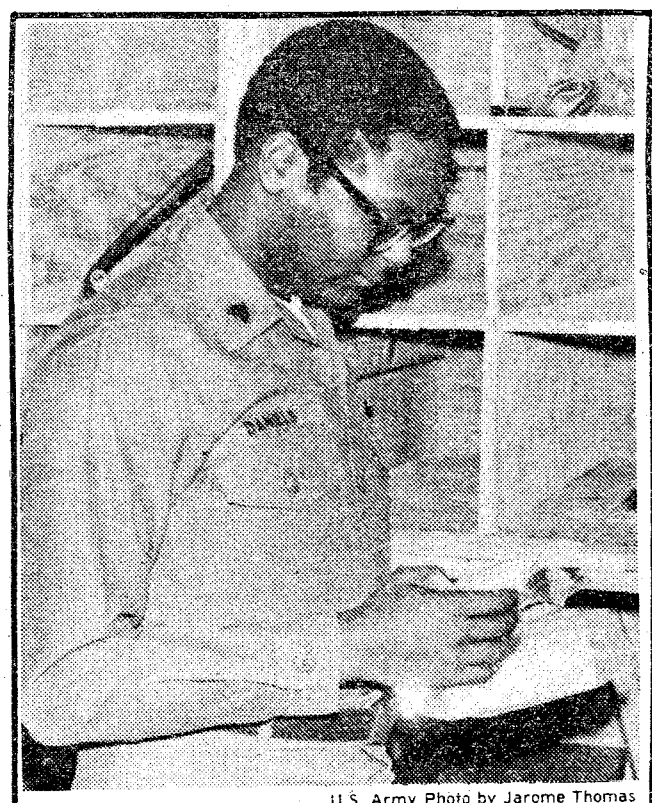
Report filed on Lawson Indian sites

By Marshall Jones

The first draft of a report on the significance of Indian cultural sites discovered near Lawson Army Airfield has been delivered to the chief of the Environmental Management Division of DFAE.

Division Chief Gary Robinson said the report identified two sites, both bordering on Lawson Field, as having "cultural significance."

The larger site contains relics of several civilizations. Artifacts from prehistoric times were found, as well as the partial remains of two persons who were apparently buried there in a much later period.



Objects from the second site, which is near the first, date from the first part of the nineteenth century before the removal of the Indians from the area, says the report.

Robinson said the sites will be preserved as the report has yet to be drafted. The final report, which should be in the hands of post officials by the end of November, will include completed forms for the nomination of the site to the National Register of Historic Places, officially assuring their preservation. The National Advisory Council on Historic Preservation judges such nominations.

Robinson said the preservation of the sites would not interfere with military operations, and might even help airfield activities, since plans would probably call for keeping the areas cleared of trees. The relics were originally discovered this summer when engineers from the 43rd Engr. Bn. 36th Engr. Gp. were clearing out vegetation that was interfering with the use of some of Lawson's radar equipment.

The report was drafted by Dr. John Cottier of Auburn University's Department of Sociology and Anthropology. The study was submitted to the Atlanta office of the Department of the Interior which forwarded it to post officials and made recommendations as to its final form.

No further digging is planned for the sites.

Calculators may explode

With the increasingly small dimensions of the highly popular personal calculators, there may be a tendency to carry one in a pocket.

But the Journal of Environmental Health has recently warned that an improperly shielded pocket calculator can explode.

Researchers have found that any metal object that inadvertantly comes in contact with the unprotected battery charge contact points will cause a "thermal runaway." This in turn shorts out the nickel-cadmium batteries, resulting in an explosion with enough force to knock a person down. Even the lead of a pencil can cause such a thermal runaway.

The best way to prevent such an accident: carry the calculator in a case so metal objects can't touch it.

VA Q&A

Q — I am an Army retiree and waived my retirement pay in lieu of VA disability compensation. May I have an allotment withheld from my compensation check to pay premiums for a commercial insurance policy?

A — No.

Q — I am a widow of a Korean War veteran who died as a result of a service-connected disability before using his GI home loan entitlement. Am I eligible for this benefit?

A — Yes; if not currently married, widows or widowers of veterans of World War II and later periods who died of service-connected causes are eligible for this benefit.

Q — I am a World War I veteran. I had a heart attack recently and my doctor says I cannot work anymore. Is financial aid available from the Veterans Administration?

A— You may apply for nonservice-connected pension benefits by completing VA Form 21-526 and returning it with medical evidence of your disability and proof of service to the nearest VA office. Your annual income may not exceed $3540 if you have no dependents, or $4760 if you have a dependent. If you or your wife have been previously married, you must submit a copy of your marriage certificate.

Plastic money brings easy credit

In this country some 370 million credit card accounts are in use. The figure includes credit cards issued by retail stores, banks, oil companies and those cards used for travel and entertainment purposes. Wise use of credit cards can enable us all to enjoy the use of a product while we earn the money to pay for it.

Your Better Business Bureau wants you to remember that credit costs money — most of the time customers pay more for something if they buy it on time rather than pay cash for it. But it used to be that the customer who preferred to pay cash rather than use a credit card was at a disadvantage. The merchants who honored "third-party" credit cards (banks or travel cards, for instance) paid the credit card firms a certain percentage of the sale each time a customer used his card. The additional costs were taken into account when the merchants set their prices for goods and services. The resulting higher costs were shared by all customers, including cash customers who did not use credit cards.

The Fair Credit Billing Act, covers all users of "third-party" credit cards. It declares unlawful any restraints onthe merchant's freedom of offer lower prices to customers who prefer to pay cash. The Act also offers the buying public more protection in resolving billing disputes. Here is some information you should know about the act:

The retailer is permitted, but not required, to give a maximum discount of 5 per cent on cash purchases. Those retailers who do give discounts must post a sign explaining the discount.

When you have both an account and a credit card with a bank, the Fair Credit Billing Act prohibits the bank from automatically collecting credit card payments from your account to "offset" the debt if your bill is overdue. This rule does not apply, however, if you instruct the bank to extend this service to you.

If you have a complaint with a store or credit card company, write it within 60 days to the company. Then, within 30 days of receipt of your letter, the firm must acknowledge your letter and, within 90 days, resolve the dispute. During this period you do not have to pay the account in question or and finance charges on the amount.

And, if you have returned an item which you have charged to a credit card, the stor must notify the credit card company of the return and the credit card company must credit your account.

Your Better Business Bureau urges you to be aware of the responsibility which accompanies the use of a credit card. If you are presently using a card, look carefully at the information enclosed with your next bill. The form which is titled "In Case of Errors or Inquiries About Your Bill" lists the procedures and the instructions which cover the loss of your credit card for future reference.

Your BBB offers you, the consumer, reliability reports on both local and national businesses and on charitable organizations. For information, simply call toll free from the entire Ft. Shuttle buses available for Commission hearing

Buses will be available to transport military personnel, dependents, and Department of Army civilians from Ft. Benning to the President's Commission on Military Compensation public hearing at Columbus College, December 12.

Twelve buses will transport interested individuals from locations on post to the Fine Arts Hall at 11:45 a.m. All buses are scheduled to arrive at 12:40. The hearings will begin at 1 p.m.

In addition, two of the buses will continue to provide a shuttle service from the Fine Arts and to Ft. Benning on an as required basis from 1:45 until 4:15.

All buses will be marked with numbers and signs showing their pickup points for their return after the hearings at 4:45 p.m.

Private individuals or group representatives desiring to testify before the Commission must contact the Ft. Benning Project Officer at 545-5931 or 544-4811, and forward a written transcript of their testimony to the Personnel Services Division, DPCA, Rm 623, Infantry Hall, to arrive no later than December 5.

Persons who do not have typing facilities available may dictate their testimony and have it typed while they wait. To make an appointment for the service call 545-2362. About 1½ hours will be required to transcribe the testimony and prepare it in final form.

In addition to the hearing in the afternoon, members of the Commission will be visiting various Benning units during the morning. Also scheduled are visits by each Commission member to the homes of two married soldiers.

The Commission was appointed by President Carter to review previous studies of the military compensation system, and if appropriate, recommend changes to the current pay and benefit program. The Commission was

AMIC to open on weekends

Martin Army Hospital's Acute Minor Illness Clinic (AMIC) is seeking a more responsive and meaningful sick call operation for weekends and holidays.

Commencing tomorrow, all active duty personnel will be seen at AMIC due to the discontinuation of all external weekend and holiday sick call activities.

Chronic medical problems, dietary advice and veneral disease complaints will be referred to normal duty day sick call at the service member's assigned Troop Medical Clinic (TMC). Personnel seeking shaving, orthopedic or allergy profiles will not be seen or provided medical disposition on these days due to the non-availability of typist clerks.

E-6's and below are still required to obtain a sick slip from their unit before attending sick call.

Flu inoculations start next week

Influenza shots will be available in Bldg. 4 for the following categories of civilians:

1. Essential service civilian employees — firemen, maintenance workers, airfield key personnel, commo-electonic personnel, division chiefs, key supervisors and school teachers.
2. Other civilian employees
3. Retired military personnel
4. Dependents over the age of twelve (dependents 12 years of age or younger may be immunized at the Immunization Clinic, MAH.)

The shots will be available on the following times and dates:

Dec. 5	9 a.m.-3 p.m.	Clsm 1
Dec. 6	9 a.m.-3 p.m.	Clsm 1
Dec. 7	1 p.m.-8 p.m.	Clsm 20

Individuals should bring their ID card and shot records. A signed consent form will be necessary before the shots can be administered to children.

For further information, contact the Immunization Clinic at 544-2788.

'78 CFC: an outstanding success

TO:CFC 78 Participants

The Tri-Community Combined Federal Campaign for 1978 was an outstanding success at Fort Benning with contributions exceeding $364,000 against a goal of $240,000, or 152% This is an achievement of which we all may be justifiably proud!!

This contribution will be of great assistance to the health, welfare and service agencies which benefit from this fund drive. The generosity displayed by both military and civilian personnel is indicative of the appreciation and understanding they have of the humanitarian roles of the participating agencies.

Please accept my congratulations and appreciation for your exemplary support, particularly keypersons, project officers and committee members throughout the Tri-Community area who contributed to the success of this fund campaign.

Thank you for a job "Well Done"!!

Civilian leave

Use it or lose it by year's end

For federal civilian employees, December 31 is the "use or lose date" for annual leave this year.

Employees with more than 240 accrued hours of "annual" must use the extra hours by the 31st or forfeit them.

Each employee earns so many hours of leave each pay period. How many hours will depend on the number of years an individual has been employed with the federal service.

An employee with less than three years federal service earns four hours of leave each pay period, or 13 days per year based upon eight hour days.

Those having three but less than 15 years with the government earn six hours of leave each pay period, including 10 hours for the last complete period of the calendar year, for 20 days a year. Workers with 15 or more years of service earn eight hours each pay period, for 26 days.

Plan ahead

Leave should usually be scheduled in advance to allow the supervisor to plan work and effectively use all employees. If an employee loses annual leave because the number of accrued hours exceeds 240, he can, in some cases, request leave be restored.

Whether or not leave will be restored will depend on the reasons the employee was unable to take leave.

First, the individual must plan leave six weeks before the end of the year, around the second week of November, and submit an SF 71, request for leave, for approval.

Failure to schedule leave in advance will result in the permanent loss of the excess leave with no chance for restoration.

Special reasons

The reasons for an individual's inability to take leave may be due to an administrative error which may occur when an employee switches leave categories, going from four hours per pay period to six hours per pay period and the change is not recorded; or a crisis may cause the employee to be directed to return to work because of an emergency situation within the organization and finally, incapacitation due to an accident after which the employee is unable to work.

In the latter case, the person is on sick leave and as a result may lose his excess annual leave.

These circumstances are taken into consideration when an employee requests his leave be restored.

After the lost leave has been restored, the employee has one year to use it. If not used, that leave will be lost with no further chance for restoration. (ARNEWS)

News in brief

G.I. Bill benefits upped

President Carter recently approved changes increasing benefits available to veterans under the G.I. Bill.

The law, signed last week, provides a 6.6 percent increase in veterans' education benefits, increasing full time allowances retroactive to October 1.

The full time allowance for a single veteran student increased to $311 per month; students with one dependent will receive $370; students with two dependents will get $422. An additional $26 per month is paid to veterans for each additional dependents.

Other features of the bill provide an extended eligibility period of two years for Vietnam era veterans, expanded coverage of the accelerated payment program and tuition assistance above standard monthly allowances for veterans in high education cost areas.

G.I. Bill benefits should not be confused with VA disability and compensation payments which also increased 6.6. percent and became law last month. (ARNEWS)

Army SGM on pay panel

An Army sergeant major has been named as one of four enlisted staff members of the Presidential Commission on Military Compensation.

SGM Manley S. Warrick, formerly finance operations chief with the Intelligence and Security Command at Arlington Hall Station, Va., will serve as a research analyst with the task force for service pay and benefits.

In addition to the four enlisted staff members on the Commission, two Army officers are included among seven armed forces officers with the commission.

The Commission's report to the President, scheduled for completion in March, may have significant impact on the future of military pay and benefits. (ARNEWS)

Members of Commission will be visiting Benning units on the morning of December 12.

Homebase-advanced assignments affected by authorization changes

Current and projected authorizations and force structure changes are used to project homebase-advanced assigned assignments for enlisted soldiers.

However, authorization changes, currently under consideration, have made it impossible to provide homebase-advanced assignments to all eligible soldiers going to Korea. Therefore, effective immediately, those soldiers not provided specific homebase-advanced assignments prior to departure for Korea will receive advanced assignment instructions prior to return to CONUS and will be permitted to retain military family housing.

After ETS: the job interview

Editor's Note: This is the second of a three-part series by Bev Lockhart concerning benefits and services available to personnel upon their ETS. This week's article concerns how to go about getting a civilian job. The third and final part will discuss educational opportunities under the G.I. Bill.

By Bev Lockhart

For many, ETS (Expiration Term of Service) means finding a civilian job. It can be the hardest integral of the transition from military to civilian life — unless you know the right way to go about it.

Job hunting requires an all out effort on the part of the person who must sell himself to a civilian employer. It was different when you enlisted in the Army. You didn't have to sell yourself to the recruiter. Instead, the recruiter had to sell the military to you.

Selling yourself to an employer can be compared to an advertizer trying to sell any other product. The "product" has to be packaged neatly and presented as attractively as possible into an area where the demand is greater than the supply.

Job Location

Location is one of the greatest factors to consider when looking for a job in the civilian community. Certain areas of the country have higher unemployment rates than others. It's best to avoid those areas due to the high competition — it lessens your chance of obtaining a job.

If you have made a career of the military, you may have to take a salary cut when you obtain a civilian job. Try not to set your goals too high . . . but don't underestimate yourself, either. You may have to work your way up in a company just as you did in the military.

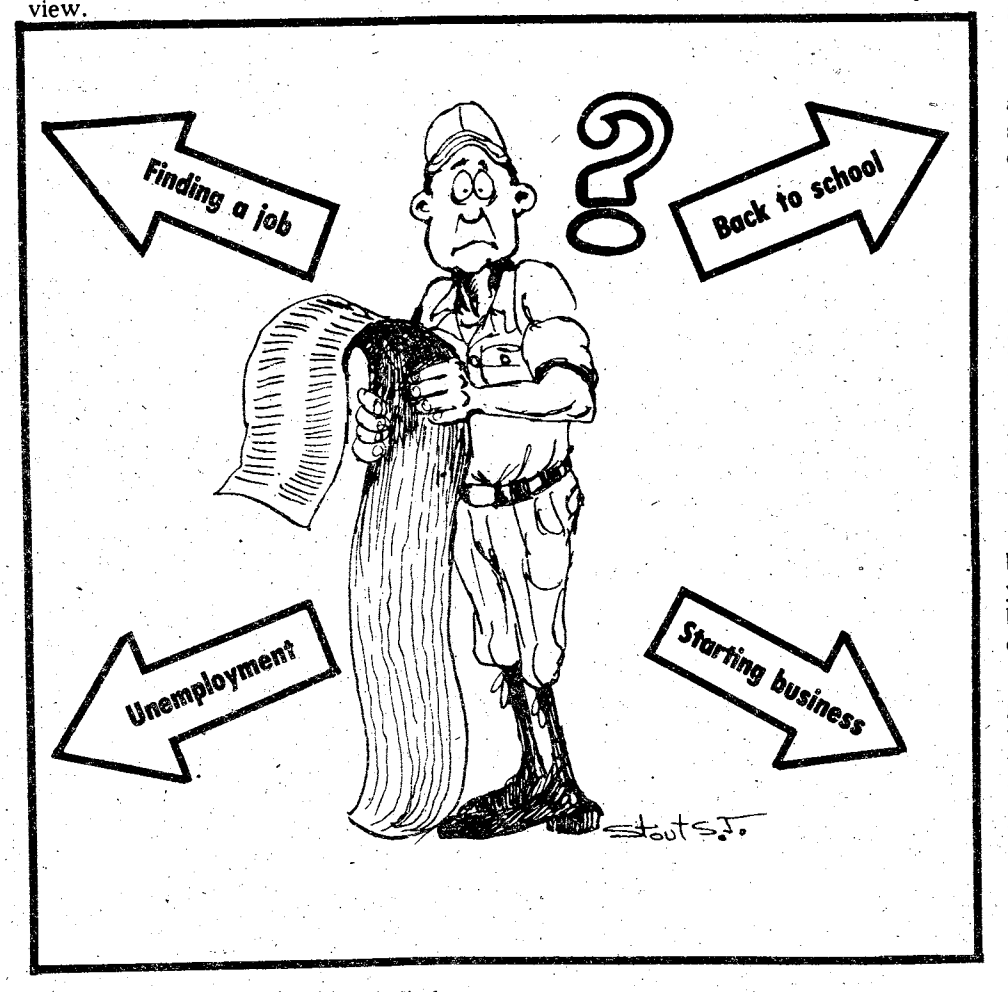
Once you've decided what type of job you would like, you can begin your hunt; answering ads in newspapers, registering with government employment agencies or their civilian counterparts.

Commercially owned employment agencies charge a fee for finding its clients jobs. The fee is usually deducted from your pay for the first few months (usually within six) you work on the job. Before enlisting an employment agency's help you should decide whether you will have enough money to make ends meet during the months they are deducting the fee from your paycheck. You may even be able to obtain a job without an employment agency's help, thus saving yourself the fee.

Filling out Application Forms

Application forms should be filled out neatly in ink. Employers not only look at the information on the form; but neatness, spelling and grammer are also used by employers to determine the prospective employee's character prior to an interview.

Don't stop with the application forms. Oftentimes submitting a resume along with your application will catch the employers attention and give you the edge over the "other guy" when it comes time for hiring.



If your resume and application show the employer that you might be the right person for the job, he or she will probably schedule you for an interview. That's when the going gets tough.

Preparing For an Interview

The employment interview is one of the most important events in the average person's experience. The 20 to 30 minutes the individual spends with an interviewer may determine the entire future course of the person's life.

Interviewers are continually amazed at the number of applicants who drift into job interviews without any apparent preparation and only the vaguest idea of what they are going to say. Their manner often says, "Well, here I am," and that's often the end of it — in more ways than one.

How can you avoid creating that impression? Marks of inexperience can be easily avoided by knowing a little of what is expected of you and making a few simple preparations before the interview.

The first thing you should do is find out the exact time and place of the interview and write it down. Don't rely on your memory. Get the full name of the company straight, along with its address.

Be certain you have your interviewer's full name and find out how to pronounce it if it looks difficult.

Research the Company

Do some research on the company interviewing you. Try to find out how old the company is, where its plants, offices or stores are located, what its products or services are, what its growth has been, and how its prospects look for the future. This will provide material to form the questions you should ask, thus giving you something besides yourself to talk about during your interview. It will also help protect your own interests. A manufacturer of buggy whips might be recruiting for a new employee, but you would want to know something about his potential market before choosing that field as your career. Prepare your questions before you go in for the interview.

There are a number of publications available to help you research a company. Most of them can be found in any college or public library. Among those most helpful are:

- College Placement Directory, by Zimmerman and Lavine
- College Placement Annual, by the College Placement Publications Council
- Thomas' Register of American Manufacturers
- Moody's Manuals
- Fitch Corporation Manuals
- MacRae's Bluebook
- Standard and Poor's Corporation Records
- Poor's Register of Directors and Executives
- Dun and Bradstreet Reference Book
- Company annual reports

School placement offices and post Education Centers are also an excellent source for booklets and other material prepared by various firms for recruiting purposes. You may find detailed information in the company's own literature that is unavailable in general registers.

A brokerage office may also be able to supply you with the information you want. If you use library texts, don't wait until the last minute to do your research.

When you finally arrive for the interview, be sure to have a sharp pencil and a pen that writes neatly and is full of ink. Asking the interviewer for something to write with is often the biggest mistake you can make. It shows that you are unprepared.

Take some kind of note paper with you, but keep it out of sight. You may be asked to take something down. If not, you should make a few notes immediately after you leave the interview.

Plan to arrive at the designated place at least 15 minutes early, if possible. Your interviewer may be ahead of his schedule and you should hold yourself subject to his convenience. A few extra minutes will also help take care of unexpected emergencies. Late arrival for a job interview is almost never considered excusable, even though the interviewer himself might be late.

Appearance Important

The essentials of neatness and cleanliness are a very important factor. A woman should use cosmetics conservatively and wear a neat hair style. Men should pay careful attention to details such as hair and fingernails. As far as clothes go, your own good taste is your best guide. The most important thing to remember is that you are looking for a job — not going out to a disco. A woman should wear conservative clothes most appropriate to the occasion. She should be careful that her accessories are in quiet good taste and complimentary to her outfit.

A man should also dress conservatively and, ordinarily, in a suit. His accessories should complement his suit — not contrast with it.

Although each of the above suggestions are meant to be helpful, it would be a mistake to become unduly worried over too many details. A genuinely attractive personality and a good military, school and employment record will overcome most small errors. Friendliness, honesty and a sincere manner will contribute to a good impression.

The Interview

Since you don't know what cues will be given you, it's impossible to rehearse your role in an upcoming interview. Your best guide is to rely on your own native courtesy and good sense.

It's normal for you to be nervous when going for an interview. Many interviewers won't mind a little bit of nervousness. Often, in the eyes of the interviewer it is better than being too sure of yourself.

When you enter the interviewer's office, greet him by name, as long as you are sure of the pronunciation. Take your cues from him at the start. If he moves to shake hands, do so — but not unless he makes the first gesture.

Wait until he offers you a chair before you sit down, unless, in a very small room, he remains seated or sits down immediately. Don't chew gum, and don't smoke unless he invites you to do so.

An interviewer will usually start out the interview with one of the following questions: "What can I do for you?" or "Tell me about yourself " or maybe even, "Why are you interested in this company?"

If you think those are easy questions to answer without some previous thought, think again. You don't have time to flounder around . . . this is where preparation will come in handy.

Bring references from your previous section chief or company commander. Project confidence in yourself, but don't be overly confident. Keep following his lead and remember not to answer in just yeses and noes. On the other hand, don't talk too much. If you find yourself talking in a lengthy monologue, give the lead back to him by saying, "Perhaps you have some other questions to ask me?"

If an employer offers you a job at the end of an interview, don't immediately

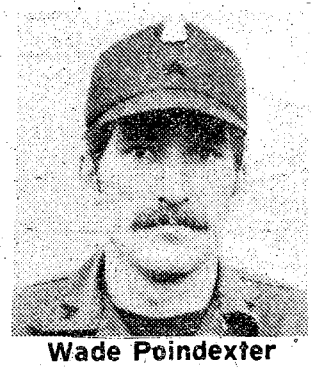
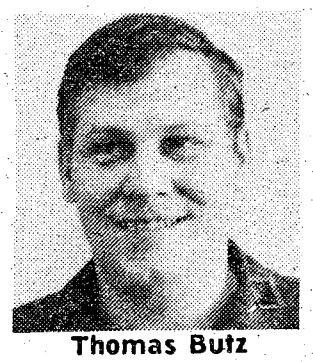
Glad you asked ...



What would you tell the Compensation Commission?

Mary Ann Martin

Sp5 Mary Ann Martin, HHC, 34th Med Bn



I feel that military pay is adequate, but not excessive. Pay raises being given in the housing allowances is not fair to the career soldier or to the soldier in the billets and should be changed.

Wade Poindexter

Cpl. Wade J. Poindexter, Co A, Hq Cmd

My opinion is that the pay and benefits are satisfactory. The Army has treated me quite well while I've been in.

Thomas Butz

Capt. Thomas R. Butz, HHC, 36th Engr. Grp

I hope to discuss the differential in married vs. single pay and compensations. For example, the household goods weight allowance and BAQ.

Michael Schwank

Sgt. Michael A. Schwank, 197th Inf Bde

I feel that the facilities are adequate at Martin Army Hospital but the number of personnel is insufficient. The pay vs. hours in a combat MOS is, to me, an important issue. Quality people result only from quality incentives.

Emory Wise

CSM Emory D. Wise, TSB

My feelings are that the pay should be concentrated into the basic pay structure rather than be divided between BAQ and Separate Rations. Also, a pay raise should be given to the lower ranking individuals — E-1 through E-4.

Sadie Davis

Sp4 Sadie Davis, 444th Trans Co

My opinion is that military pay is more than sufficient. The Army is a guaranteed job and in civilian life jobs are difficult to attain. Servicemembers have it made because of the free medical and dental benefits.

Commentary

Incentive for professionalism

By James Ruby

The Army today has reached a fork in the road. Its decision as to which road to take will determine the quality of our national defenses for years to come, and by extension the effectiveness of the United States in world affairs.

It is now an established fact that, due to economic conditions, the military will no longer be receiving carte blanche when it comes to preparing the defense budget. Now more than ever, every appropriation will come under increasingly close scrutiny. Reductions in needless spending must and will become a way of life. The question of where these reductions will be made is the crucial issue.

Much has been said about the erosion of benefits while needless waste continues. The abolition of proficiency pay for most soldiers, the loss of regular reenlistement bonuses, the sharp curtailment of variable reenlistment bonuses, efforts to end federal funding of commissaries, limitation of pay increases to a level far below the rate of increase in the cost of living, and the disappearance of many other benefits all go hand in hand with the military vehicle left in a parking lot with the engine running, consuming costly fuel while its occupant is inside on business; or with the food that is daily thrown out by mess halls because regulations prohibit its use for charities or by individuals.

Today's soldier is more aware of the world around him. He is more cognizant of discrepancies between our economic situation and waste such as described above. He is certainly aware of the erosion of benefits to which he is morally entitled by virtue of enlistment promises and public relations programs, but which have been reduced by legal technicalities. As private enterprise has become increasingly incentive oriented, the military seems to have taken an opposite turn. Admitting the differences between military and non-military life, it remains a fact that people without incentive simply do not perform beyond minimal levels. The "captive audience" syndrome of the soldier of an earlier time, who worked for nothing except the occasional praise of his superior, is no longer applicable. Many qualified soldiers are leaving the service, drawn to the civilian world by more alluring incentives of pay and fringe benefits and by the simple desire to maintain the high standard of living to which they are accustomed. The attrition of highly qualified and dedicated men and women can only lead to their replacement with less qualified people, many of whom cannot perform adequately in their MOS.

One sergeant interviewed, a Vulcan crew chief with two years at Bliss, complained of the need for constant supervision of many substandard soldiers in order to accomplish even the most basic tasks. A staff sergeant from the same unit concurred, referring to the need for "baby sitting in order to get anything done around here at all." He went on to say that after 14 years in the service he was strongly tempted to ETS this summer. The First Sergeant of a Vulcan line battery summed up,

34th Med units help validate medical ARTEPs

By Bill Walton

During the past two weeks units from the 34th Med Bn have been engaged in a project for the Academy of Health Sciences, Ft. Sam Houston, Tex.

The 546th Med Co (Clearing), 675th Med Det (Dispensary) and the 690th Med Co (Ambulance) have been testing and validating Army Training and Evaluation Programs (ARTEP) for medical units developed by the Academy. Benning was one of four CONUS posts selected to conduct the test of the draft ARTEPs.

A team of observers from the Academy went to the field with each unit along with evaluators from Benning who conducted and graded the ARTEP validations.

The 546th and 675th were the first to go to the field under the testing program on November 8. Ordinarily the 546th is comprised of three clearing platoons, each capable of providing emergency life-saving care to 80 patients in a 72 hour and a headquarters platoon. The draft ARTEP called for only two clearing platoons and the headquarters platoon to deploy augmented by personnel of the remaining platoon.

Starting at 8 a.m., the 546th with the 675th attached fought their way through an enemy ambush and negotiated a mine field on the 20 mile tactical truck convoy to the selected field site. The units established their small hospitals and were operational by 1 p.m. Shortly thereafter, "battlefield casualties" began arriving at the 546th clearing stations and at the dispensary established by the 675th.

During the three day exercise each platoon saw an average of 35 patients a day, both real and simulated. Each platoon was tested on its ability to care for patients while experiencing an NBC attack; the ability to relocate by day and by night and defense of its perimeter.

There is no reason not to stay warm in the field, even if you are on guard duty. Sp4 Barbara Bain, 546th Med Co, 34th Med Bn, pulls a stint of guard on the unit's ammunition trailer during the ARTEP validation.

The 690th went to the field after the return of its sister units. The purpose of its exercise was to determine the ARTEP's suitability in testing company personnel in tasks specific to their individual MOS and mission as well as basic soldiering skills and knowledge.

During the deployment of the unit, each platoon (consisting of 12 ambulances) occupied a different grid square to carry out their respective mission, area preparation and reconnaisance. For a half day the personnel of 690th operated their ambulances in an NBC environment, at other times the men and women of the unit put all their skills to the test in the proper treatment of patients and maintaining a defensive perimeter against an aggressor force. They also had to cope with the handling and evacuation of prisoners of war as well as the evacuation of friendly forces' sick and wounded.

All three units received favorable comments on their performance and on their state of readiness to testing from the observers of the Academy of Health Sciences.

Immediate, required first aid is given to patients in the receiving and disposition tent of a medical clearing company. SFC Warren (l), SFC Robert Mckay and Pvt. James Jackson, 546th Med Co, apply a Thomas leg splint on the simulated broken leg of patient Sp4 Ivan Ramirez, Hqs Co, 1st AIT Bde, during the "patient play" part of the ARTEP validation.

Doughboys finish their second winning season

By Debra Hilgeman

The 1977 Doughboy football season drew to a close last week as approximately 6,000 cheering fans watched as Tuskegee Institute fell to the Doughboys, 31-24.

"The victory over Tuskegee was the highlight of the season," exclaimed Head Coach LtCol. Jack Barham. "It proved we could play and win against college competition."

After an opening game loss to Livingston University, the Doughboys went on an uninterrrupted winning streak and emerged with an 8-1 season record. Their opponents this year ranged from semi-professional teams to college teams to other Army teams; game scores ran the gamut from shutouts to upset victories to scores so close even Jimmy the Greek couldn't have predicted the outcome.

One thing that did remain consistent throughout the season was the Doughboy determination to be a winning team. Despite job duties and military obligations, ballplayers and coaches put in long hours at practice sessions. And the reward wasn't a million-dollar contract or a four-year scholarship; just a love of the game and the satisfaction of doing something difficult and doing it well.

Although it was the players who braved the punishing tackles while the coaches sweated it out on the sidelines; that, however, is only the tip of the football iceberg. The staff at Recreation Services did everything possible to insure that a thousand-and-one details were in order to keep everything running smoothly. And none of this would have been possible were it not for the high level command support of the Benning football program.

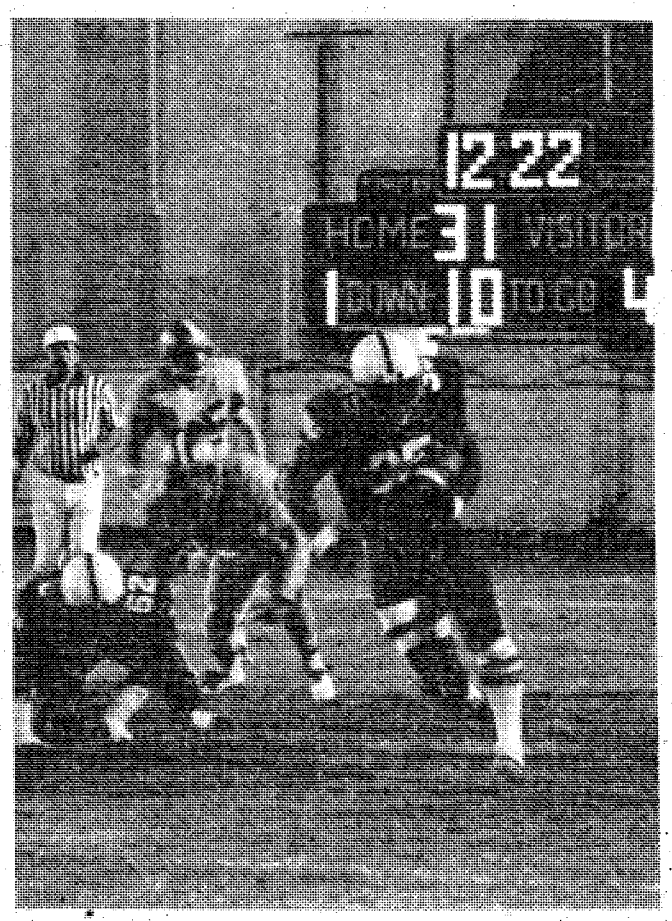
The Doughboy football program was revived last year after a 14-year lapse. The team finished a four-game undefeated season under Head Coach LtCol. John Boles in 1976 and many of the players and coaches returned this year.

Some of this year's players showed outstanding talent that did not go unrecognized by the civilian community. Placekicker David Ward will be competing for a spot on one of the pro teams next year and seven other team members have been contacted by college teams. These are: running back Charles Holley, running back Julian Williams, linebacker Lonzie McCants, defensive tackle Timothy Davis, tight end David Simpson Jr., defensive end Rudolph Gordon and split end Rodney Bradley.

Now that the season is over and the uniforms and equipment are collecting dust in winter storage, the time has come for reminiscing with Coach Barham to the tune of, "I'll never forget the time . . ."

"When Arthur Hawkins caught a touchdown pass from Joe Duenas that permitted us to overcome the Citadel team."

"When Jeffer Johnson, the smallest lineman on the field, always defeated the opponents."



"When Michael Dawkins blocked a punt against Augusta to insure a victory against the number two semi-professional team in the nation."

"When David Ward, wearing his Little League shoulder pads, made a touchdown-saving tackle against Ft. Bragg."

"When Coach Ross smiled during a game (the score was 52-0 at the time, by the way)."

Coach Barham also feels that thanks and appreciation are deserved by other individuals who gave of themselves to make this football season successful. "Above all, I want to acknowledge the tremendous amount of work put in by offensive coordinator Maj. John Ross and defensive coordinator 1stLt. Dave Bankston. Not only for having served as coaches but they also helped build the locker room, lined the football field for each game, arranged all the promotions and did everything but carry the first down chains."

Coach Barham added that Sp4 Johnny Lefler and Sp4 Derrick Fields deserve special regard for the many long hours they spent as volunteer managers for the team.

Julian Williams takes off for the 90-yard run that gave the Doughboys another touchdown and set a new stadium record during the Doughboys' sixth game of the season. It was the fifth straight win for the Doughboys as they trampled the St. Leo's Monarchs, 38-3.

Although Coach Barham's future at Ft. Benning is in some doubt at this time, he feels there will be no problem finding qualified coaches for next year's team and went on to predict another successful Doughboy season. "We're hoping for a ten-game season next year against top-notch competition," said Coach Barham. "We expect many of this year's players back plus a lot of new talent attracted by our 1977 success."

When asked to sum up his feelings about his coaching experience with the Doughboys, Coach Barham replied thoughtfully, "serving as head coach of the men associated with the 1977 Doughboys has been one of the most rewarding experiences of my life. Being a head coach is a lot like being a commanding general — you take all the blame and get all the glory — and somebody else does most of the work. The men who worked to make the 1977 Doughboys a credit to Ft. Benning have accomplished a tremendous task. I hope they feel as good about it as I do."

In the third game of the season, the Doughboys edged Augusta, 9-7.

Foreign travel difficult for non-citizen dependents

Dependents who are not U. S. citizens may experience problems in trying to travel to places other than their homelands or the U. S., in military personnel center officials warn.

Although dependents of many nationalities experience these difficulties, there is an "acute" problem when Vietnamese dependents try to travel with sponsors to Germany, Korea or other third countries, DA officials say.

Officials advise sponsors and foreign dependents to consider the advantages of applying for early naturalization when sponsors are assigned to overseas areas. AR 608-3 and DA Cir. 608-59 provide information on applying for naturalization. Local assistance is available through personnel offices, immigration and naturalization offices or U. S. embassies.

DA officials advise dependents seeking U. S. citizenship that they must be in the U. S. at the time naturalization documents are issued.

While DA officials say they are not attempting to push dependents into seeking U. S. citizenship, they issued the warning to make dependents aware of travel problems and to encourage them to consider the advantages of citizenship. (ARNEWS)

"While I admit that these men are giving up a lot by getting out early, and while I regret seeing these qualified NCOs leave the service, they are, as a whole, family providers, and as such are genuinely concerned over the effects of the benefits programs on the welfare of their families."

Here at the fork in the road the Army must come to grips with itself and make the decision that will affect its future and the quality of its personnel. It must decide to eliminate waste to save funds for providing the incentive needed to attract — and most importantly, retain — men and women who, as representatives of the American people, will be a credit to the military service and an example to others — rather than the object of scorn and derision. On this, the eve of my ETS after two enlistments, I wish it well.

General Membership Meeting

The Columbus-Phenix City-Ft. Benning Chapter of the AUSA will hold its Annual Fall Membership General Meeting on December 6 at the Ft. Benning Officers' Club and Supper Club. A social period will begin at 6:30 p.m. in the Officers' Club Ballroom, with a prime rib dinner at 7:30 p.m. in the Supper Club.

AUSA members and their guests are invited. Dress will be coat and tie. Tickets are available from unit Sergeants Major for $7.50, tickets are also available by calling 545-1516.

The guest speaker will be Maj. Gen. (USA-Ret) Winant Sidle, director of regional activities at National AUSA Headquarters. General Sidle will discuss "A Bill of Right for Those Who Serve!

General Sidle is a native of Springfield, Ohio and a graduate of Hamilton College. He has a Master's Degree in Journalism from the University of Wisconsin.

He enlisted in the Pennsylvania National Guard in December 1940 and served with the unit after it was federalized in 1941. He also served in Korea and Vietnam and has held positions in the field and the Pentagon.

In February 1966, he was selected to be Special Assistant for Southeast Asia to the Assistant Secretary of Defense (Public Affairs) and in October 1967, General Sidle became Chief of Information, U.S. Military Assistant Command, Vietnam. In March 1969, he assumed command of I Field Force Vietnam Artillery.

From October 1969 until August 1973, he served as the Army's Chief of Information leaving that post to become Commander of the Army Readiness Region VII with concurrent duty as Deputy Commanding General Fifth U.S. Army at Ft. Sam Houston, Texas.

In September 1974, General Sidle returned to Washington to become Deputy Assistant Secretary of Defense for Public Affairs, his fifth tour of duty in the Pentagon. He retired from active duty in August 1975, but was immediately recalled and served an additional sixty days until his final retirement in October. In November 1975, he became the Special Assistant to the Executive Vice President of the AUSA. He became AUSA's Director of Regional Activities in October 1976.

LEC celebrates first year of combined MP operations

December 1 is the first anniversity of Benning's Law Enforcement Command (Prov.)

The LEC, commanded by Col. Robert Reinke, post Provost Marshal was formed last year to provide command, staff planning and control for the 139th and Military Police Companies. Promotion authority, training, administrative and logistical support for the units are also responsibilities of the LEC.

The command also operates the Provost Marshal Section and provides military police teams to support all law enforcement functions on post. The military police elements of the 197th Inf Bde are under LEC's operational control when they are on MP duty.

The post's law enforcement reorganization was one of the first in the Army's Training and Doctrine Command, following the formation of several LECs within Army Forces Command. The LEC concept is under study at the Department of the Army level, according to Col. Reinke.

The provost marshal said he felt the LEC had "gone a long way to assist the morale and effectiveness of the MPs" here. "We're convinced this is the most efficient way to handle it," he added.

MAH records section temporarily relocated

The Outpatient Records Section at Martin Army Hospital has been temporarily relocated on the first floor across from the patient/visitor elevator in the new clinic wing of Martin Army Hospital.

The Outpatient Records Section houses 120,000 records at the present time and was only designed to take care of less than 70,000. With the construction, the records capacity will be greatly increased and the conjestion at the records window should be reduced significantly.

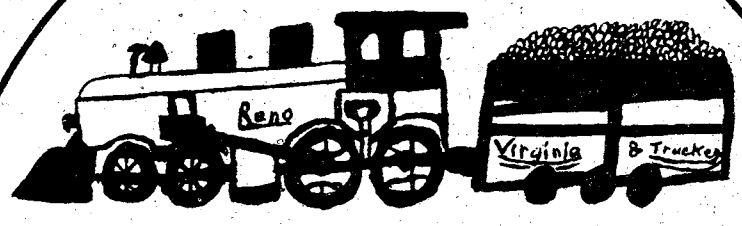
Playing the game of 'priorities'--
Someone always gets the short end

At the recently concluded Annual Meeting of the Association of the United States Army General Bernard Rogers, the Army's Chief of Staff, announced that men and equipment will be diverted from stateside units to bolster the combat readiness of troops on the NATO front lines in Europe. Active Army units, the Chief of Staff said, will lose equipment and get fewer men while the reserve components will give up equipment.

It was tough to make this drastic decision and yet the Army leadership had few options open to meet the concurrent thrusts of Congressional criticism over the readiness of U.S. units in Europe and the realization that opposing Warsaw Pact forces there are continuing to outstrip NATO forces in conventional firepower and overall preparedness for war.

Much note has been made of a report issued by Senators Sam Nunn (D-Ga.) and Dewey Bartlett (R-Okla) which paints U.S. forces in Europe as deficient in their ability to meet a surprise Warsaw Pact attack, badly outgunned in artillery and outnumbered in tanks and unable to sustain themselves in the expected violent combat of an invasion into NATO territory. The Army stopgap plan would correct some of those deficiencies but at the expense of the readiness of the backup forces stationed in the continental United States. The equipment to be diverted will include some that is already in the hands of stateside units and some that is scheduled to go to them directly from current production.



The Army did not work its way into this predicament through bad management or planning. Much of the shortfall in readiness in units in Europe can be traced back to severe drawdowns of tanks and ammunition to support Israel in 1973—shortages that have not been made up by extra appropriations in the intervening years despite Army requests for the additional money. The Fiscal Year 1978 Budget, which came into force on October 1, 1977, cut the Army's request for M-60 tank production from 859 to 780 and assessed a $275 million cut in ammunition procurement. More specifically, no administration and no Congress since the 1973 raid on Army assets has seen fit to provide for recoupment.

General Rogers' announcement was met with a grim silence on the part of Army Reserve and National Guard leaders who are struggling to make their forces a functioning part of the Total Army. The hard choice the Chief of Staff has made will not make the reservists' job any easier.

Leadership and tough decisions go hand-in-hand. The time has come for President Carter and the Congress to face up to their leadership responsibilities and make the tough decisions that will give the Total Army the tools to do the jobs it has been assigned.

Commission hearings

also charged with the task of making a fresh review because previous attempts to provide an equitable and efficient compensation system for the entire military failed to reach general agreement.

The Commission has stated that its major thrust is to get the current prevailing mood of the military, understand the issues and try to integrate these into a total package. The three main questions the Commission wants to answer: How to pay the military? (direct pay, pay and allowances or a mix of services plus salary) What is the fair level of pay? What is the retirement system? (How does it relate with other systems; How can it be fair to the taxpayer and to the military).

Commission members must first decide if a pay and allowances system or an all salary system will contribute to an effective military establishment. Then the Commission must consider the cost effectiveness or efficiency of the system.

In doing so the Commission needs input from all segments of the military establishment. Through hearings such as the one at Columbus College, open to all interested citizens, civilian and military, the Commission can find the answers to these questions and other questions and be able to file their report to the President on March 15, 1978.

CFC contributions top goal by 152%

The final report on the 1978 Combined Federal Campaign has been issued and the combined total of contributions from the post, downtown federal agencies and confidential sources is $364,-792.

The report details totals as of noon, November 28. The final figure represents 152 percent of this year's goal of $240,000. Most of the contributions were made by the payroll deduction method.

Shoplifting:

Ripping off th

A FIRM POL
POST EXCHANGE AND

By T.R. Weller

Shoplifting means different things to different people. To some it's thrilling to believe they are getting away with something. To others, it's a means of going on a cheap shopping trip and then there are always some who think it's a way of showing courage to their friends.

Years ago, shoplifting was considered a not-so-serious violation of the law. But staggering increases in recent years have resulted in a heavy crackdown by the Army and Air Force Exchange Service (AAFES).

Ft. Benning is no exception, shoplifting incidents occuring at Post Exchange facilities are rapidly approaching an epidemic rate according to 1stLt. Kavan Stull of the Provost Marshal's Crime Prevention Section, "Since August, shoplifting has accounted for over 25 per cent of all reported crimes against property. In fact," he continued, "one out of every four military police reports involving theft of property on the reservation concerns a shoplifter."

While shoplifting is a reccurring problem on every military installation throughout the year, the Christmas season seems to bring out the shoplifting urge in people as they do their holiday shopping. With the Yuletide season upon us, PX officials are beefing up their efforts to catch the potential shoplifter.

Additional personnel

"At Ft. Benning we have hired additional security personnel for the Christmas season," notes Mr. Thomas J. Martin, general manager for the entire Ft. Benning Exchange system. "A customer may be very surprised, when the woman in the mini-skirt next to him turns out to one of our security force."

Higher prices

Martin went on to explain that, "the reason we are interested in preventing shoplifting is that everytime an individual steals an item from the exchange, they are taking money out of every exchange shopper's pocket. Also shoplifting results in increased prices for exchange items in order to cover the losses."

The fight against shoplifters has traditionally been waged by the store security and employees, but at Benning as well as other posts efforts against shoplifting are being reinforced by a third element, the customer.

"Our customers have actually been responsible for pointing out a number of shoplifters," explained Martin. "People who help in this way are concerned about the every spiraling cost of living. They have come to realize that it's really the customer who is "being ripped off" when the shoplifter goes undetected."

"There is no pattern to the shoplifting at the PX, according to Martin, "the offenders are military, dependents and retirees. They cover all age groups and they steal any number of different items."

At Benning, the largest group of offenders are juveniles notes Lieutenant Stull, "latest statistics show that 35 per cent of the shoplifting is done by juveniles, followed closely by active duty personnel accounting for 30 per cent. Dependent wives and high school teenagers comprise nearly 25 per cent, while retired personnel represent about 10 per cent of all offenders."

The reason a person shoplifts is usually not determined. The first thing the shoplifter will normally say is, "Can I pay for the item now," after he or she is caught. The person usually has the money on his person, but just attempts to steal the item anyway.

Stiff penalties

What are the consequences; "The policy of the Benning exchange system is for all cases of shoplifting are turned over to the military police," explains Martin, "without exception I have directed my security people to contact the MPs in all instances of shoplifting." You can see that, whether you are a smooth-talking GI or an alluring young dependent in a sexy dress — it matters not. If you rip-off the PX they're going to prosecute!

"Upon apprehension for shoplifting regardless if the individual is a dependent or on active duty," explains Stull, "his or her ID card is confiscated and retained by the military police. The following day, Military Police Investigators (MPI) deliver the card to the post ID card Section for holding."

Nursing Home Visit

The Chairwomen and members of the NCO Wives Club visited the Muscogee Manor Nursing Home on November 25 for an afternoon of fun and games with the patients there. This monthly visit has proven to be as rewarding for the ladies as it is for the patients. The ladies also gave special treats to the patients, donated by the NCOWC.

Gift Wrapping

The NCO Wives Club's Annual Christmas Gift Wrapping Booth opened on November 26 at the Main PX Shopping Mall. This marked the third year that the NCOWC have manned this service, which is a scholarship fund raising event.

This year's booth is headed by the First Vice President, Diana Navarrette. All members are urged to contact Diana to take their turn working at the booth. This is a month long project to end on December 24.

Federal Women's Program discussed

Students of the Unit Discussion Leader's Course conducted by the post's Equal Opportunity Coordinating Group were given some insight into the Federal Women's Program during their block of instruction on discrimination against women November 15.

The FWP presentation was designed to increase the students' understanding of the inequities for women in traditional hiring and promotion practices, to correct sterotyped views of women, and to enable the students to distinguish fact from myth in common beliefs regarding the employment of women.

Mrs. Norma Christian, coordinator for Ft. Benning's Federal Women Program (FWP), and Mrs. Peggy Hardaway, committee member, talked to the class about the purpose and accomplishments of the local group.

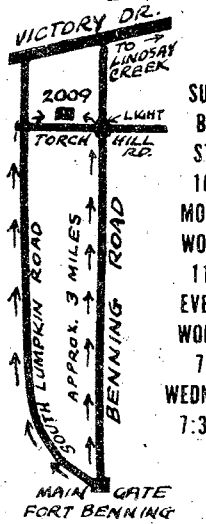
Job books to be in the field soon

Some soldier supervisors will be getting their first look at the Army's new Job Books this month, reports U.S. Army Training and Doctrine Command officials. The books are designed to fit their specific job specialties.

The Job Books hitting the field are the first of 400 different manuals covering 35 career management fields. They are for Armored reconnnaisance Specialists, Armor Crewmen and Field Artillery Cannoneers.

The books will allow supervisors to make frequent checks on the individual soldier's proficiency. They cover critical tasks in both job specialty as well as those skills needed for battlefield survival.



Supervisors are encouraged to use Job Books as they become available during lulls in training and daily work, TRADOC officials noted. Commanders, supervisors and, most of all, the individual soldiers benefit from its regular use.

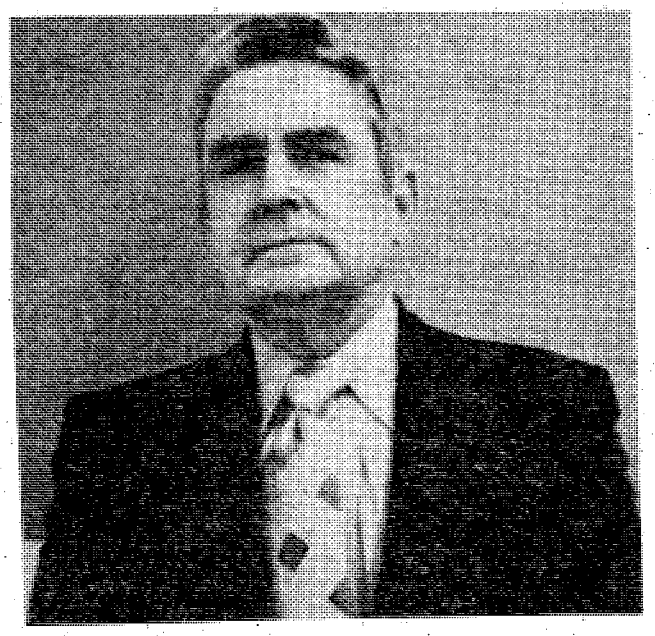
Benning maintenance officer retires

A retirement ceremony for Thomas W. Bass, the first civilian ever to be named Installation Maintenance Officer, will be conducted today at 2 p.m. in the Small Armament Shop.

Bass began on the bottom rung of the ladder as a Small Arms Repairman for the government after serving in the military during World War Two. In May, 1955, he moved into a management position by replacing a military maintenance officer during "operation teammate."



After years of hard work and dedication, Bass was selected to serve as Installation Maintenance Officer. Bass's job was to insure that all military equipment—including uniforms, duffel bags, tanks, helicopters and weapons of all kinds — were in mint condition.

Bass also served as an advisor to the Directorate of Industrial Operations and the Commanding General regarding maintenance matters.

"Customer service," stressed Bass, "has always been my philosophy. If we have a dissatisfied customer, I don't think we've done our job."

Bass plans to reside at his present home on Victory Drive and spend his leisure time hunting, fishing and socializing.

Bass, who has over 35 years of service, and his wife, Helen, are the parents of three sons and a daughter.

SAMPLE

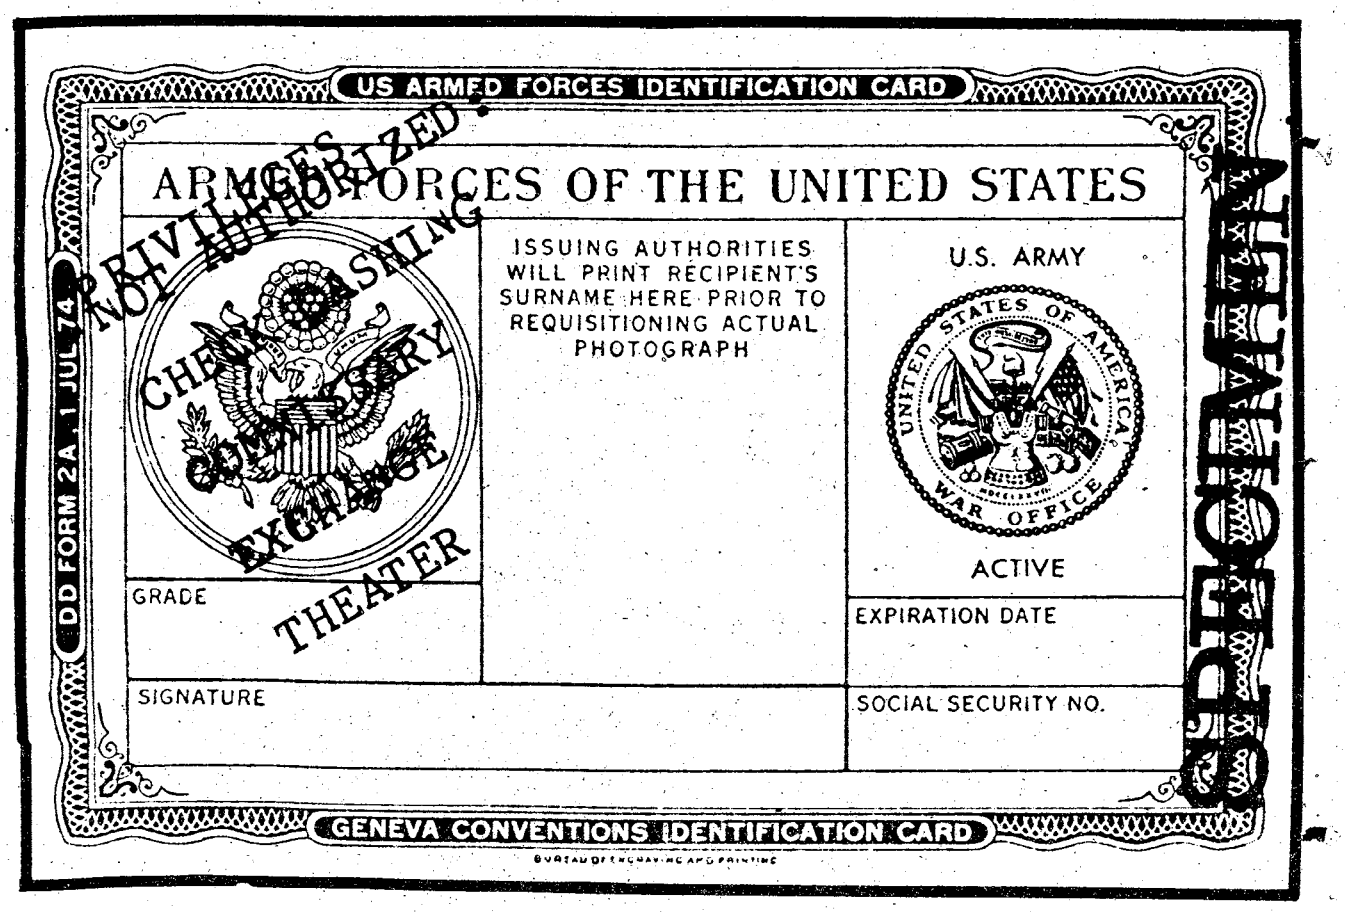
DA FORM 1 DEC 72 3997 REPLACES DA FORM 19-50, 1 NOV 56, WHICH WILL BE USED.

Many kids take items on a dare. Military personnel usually have no excuse. Whereas in civilian life excuses range from 'I don't have a job' to 'my husband isn't working now and we have no money'. This isn't the case with the soldier and his family, since everyone receives a check at the end of the month. People maybe are just trying to stretch the dollar, but they fail to think of the consequences until after they are caught."

For the juvenile offenders, "they are referred to the Ft. Benning Adolescence Advisory Council, chaired by Col. Robert Reinke, post Provost Marshal.

Other shoplifters are given the opportunity to offer evidence in their behalf before a Staff Judge Advocate hearing officer. If the hearing officer recommends that the individual's post exchange privileges be revoked, a new ID card is issued with an overstamp voiding Post Exchange privileges for a period of six (6) months for first offenders. Repeat offenders are subject to permanent revocation.

"Because Ft. Benning is a military reservation shoplifting is in violation of Federal Law," notes Stull, "all cilivian, retired and dependent personnel, except juveniles, apprehended for shoplifting are reported to the Federal Bureau of Investigation.



Active duty soldiers caught ripping off the exchange are turned over to their respective unit commander after being processed by the military police. At the commander's discretion, the soldier can receive a warning, an Article 15 or even a trial by Courts Martial.

"If the items taken amount to $25 or more in values, retired civilian personnel will receive a an ejection order signed by the Provost Marshal," continued Stull, "the same emphasis is placed on active duty and dependent personnel who are repeat offenders, penalties can include forfeiting post housing privileges.

Limited future

Why limit your future for such a stupid mistake? If you are thinking of going back to school when you ETS, not likely with a criminal record. Some colleges and universities today refuse admittance to anyone with a criminal background. And for those of you that have been convicted of shoplifting, that's just what you are — a criminal.

The message here is simple: if you shoplift on post expect to get caught and convicted. And you can hang up your future. Worth the risk? We think not.

News in brief

SF volunteers needed

Volunteers are needed to fill special forces and ranger battalion jobs in CONUS and at overseas areas according to MILPERCEN officials.

Special forces volunteers in grades E-1 - E-7 are needed in MOSs 05B, 11C, 12B and 91B, to fill assignments at Ft. Bragg, N.C.; Ft. Devens, Mass.; Germany and Panama.

The 1st (Ft. Stewart, Ga.) and 2nd (Ft. Lewis, Wash.) Ranger Battalions of the 75th Inf are looking for E-6s and E-7s to fill 11B slots. The 1st Bn wants E-7s and below in MOSs 31G, 76Y and 94B; E-6s in 11C, 13E and 91C; E-5s and below in 11B, 05B, 71B and 75B. The 2nd Bn wants E-7s and below in MOSs 31G and 76Y; E-6s and below in 94B; and E-5s and below in 05B, 71M and 91B.

MILPERCEN officials said soldiers completing a normal ranger tour of 18-24 months will receive overseas area assignment preference with guaranteed homebase assignments back to their previous ranger battalion.

Special forces volunteers should read Chapter 12, and ranger volunteers should read Chapter 18 of AR 614-200 on qualification for the assignments. Requests for assignment should be fowarded through unit personnel offices. (ARNEWS).

Jam Night at the Music Center

Every first Saturday of each month the Music Center (Bldg 229) provides an opportunity for local musicians to get together. The bands work on material that will eventually be presented in performance at the Center.

Tomorrow night the jam will begin at 7:30. Everyone is welcome to the free session. Equipment is supplied by the Music Center.

Talented AIT Trainees to Perform

The Foxhole Recreation Center will present a musical performance by the trainees of the AIT Bde Sunday at 3 p.m. The trainees will perform some of the latest hits.

More information may be obtained by calling 544-6074.

Christmas Workshop

If you've run out of ideas for Christmas gifts and decorations, the Kelly Hill Recreation Center's Christmas Workshop may spark your imagination. The workshop will be held today and tomorrow from 7 to 9 p.m.

Christmas Parade

The annual Phenix City Parks and Recreation Christmas Parade starts at 10 a.m. tomorrow. Nineteen marching bands and numerous floats will start at the Broad Street Extension of the 280-Bypass. If you don't have the energy to go out and fight the crowds, you can stay home and watch the parade live on WRBL-TV.

Run Out of Paper?

Even if you haven't, the Kelly Hill Recreation Center is providing Christmas wrapping paper and plenty of ribbons for those who want to try their hand at creating pretty packages for their family and friends. Mailing paper will also be provided at the December 8 wrap up scheduled to start at 7:30 p.m.

Christmas Accoustical Coffee House

A group of touring minstrels from Ft. Benning and the surrounding community will come together December 10 at 8 p.m. to share the music of the holiday season with G.I.s. The performance at the Harmony Church Recreation Center will be given by Theresa Williams, Pam Kayanan, Greg Mosley, Ken Winkles, Marshall Woodard, George Landes, Jr. and Madonna Lovegrove.

Ecumenical Christmas Music Festival

Get Rid of It!

Goodwill Industries Volunteer Services is sponsoring the Holiday Bargain Barn tomorrow at Rustin Oldsmobile. Here's your chance to sell those handcrafted items you've spent so much time and effort on . . . or maybe you have odds and ends you no longer need . . . or stuff you consider just plain junk. Whatever it is, others may have a need for it.

Reservations for tables are available for $10. The cost covers admission charges and police security. For more info call 561-2765 or 322-4401.

Amos Alonzo Stagg Bowl

The NCAA Division III Championship will kick off at 12:30 p.m. tomorrow at the Municipal Stadium in Phenix City.

Tickets are still available at $4 per person at the trailer in Village Green Shopping Center or from any Phenix City Shriner or Lions Club Member.

Dramatizers

The Ft. Benning Dramatizers meet every Monday evening at 7:30 p.m. A presentation on an aspect of theatre follows each meeting, which is held at the Music and Theatre Community Center, Bldg 229 (corner of Ingersoll St and Dixie Rd). The next meeting will be held December 5.

Trick Shot Pool Contest

Display your pool skills at the Kelly Hill Recreation Center's "Trick Shot Pool Contest" on December 9 at 7:30 p.m. Prizes will be awarded for the best shots. For info call 544-1721/3097.

Deck the Hall

Don't miss out on Christmas decorating this year! The Kelly Hill Recreation Center will be decking its halls with boughs of South Georgia pine and trimming the tree with gardlans and holly on December 10 starting at 7:30 p.m.

Christmas Tour of Homes

A nine stop Christmas tour of homes, featuring eight private residences and the Loachapoka Museum, will run tomorrow and Sunday in Auburn and Opelika, Ala. The tour will start at the Auburn Depot tomorrow at 10 a.m. (CST) and run until 6 p.m. On Sunday the tour will be held from 1 to 6 p.m. CST.

Every effort has been made to convey the spirit of the United State's early days in the Christmas decor of each home by using natural and handmade materials.

Allegro Series III, the new Wedge, Model JR596W

Built together to go together—Zenith Allegro® Modular Stereo Systems

Now you can forget about the confusion, the uncertainty and, even more important, the risk of wasting your money by trying to match up different brands of complicated, expensive audio components.

With Zenith Allegro Modular Stereo Sound Systems all functions are matched and balanced for you.

And because each Zenith modular stereo is designed around Allegro's Tuned-Port speakers, it would take comparable-size air-suspension speakers fully twice the amplifier power to match a Zenith's overall sound performance.

Zenith re-invents the Wedge. More powerful. More professional. And introduces the Mini-Wedge.

Presenting the new, more powerful Wedge

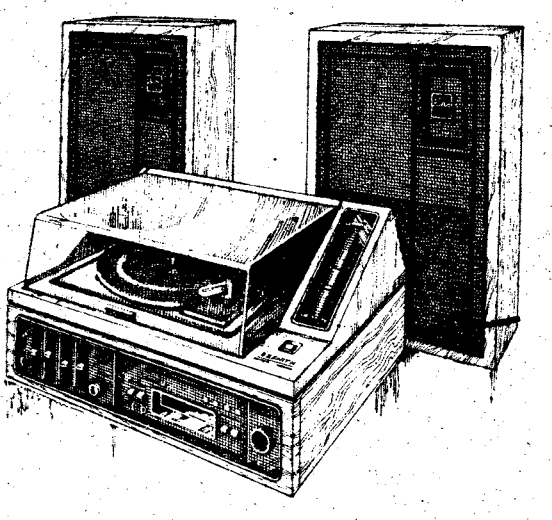
As a result of a new, high-performance AM/FM Stereo FM Tuner-Amplifier, the new Zenith Wedge with automatic record changer and built-in 8-track player-recorder delivers 15 watts minimum RMS power per channel with no more than 0.5% total harmonic distortion, from 40 to 18,000 Hz into 8 ohms.

More professional features, too

A Shure magnetic cartridge and diamond stylus for precise record tracking is now built into the Wedge's low-mass tone arm. And its 3-speed automatic-manual changer still features a smooth-performing, viscous-damped Cue Control.

New is a Lo Filter designed to remove low frequency noise such as rumble. A Hi Frequency Filter, FM Muting, and a Tuning Meter add extra convenience and better sound reception just as they did with the Wedge original.

And a microphone is yours, too, with this new Wedge. Plus a 3-position speaker switch to let you choose regular stereo sound from two Allegro speakers . . . or from an extra pair of remote Allegros . . . or both.



Introducing the all-new Mini-Wedge

It's new, all-new inside and out. Inside, a solid-state AM/FM Stereo FM Tuner-Amplifier with 3-speed automatic-manual record changer and built-in 8-track tape player-recorder.

Outside, you'll recognize at once styling dramatics that, though uniquely Mini-Wedge, still reflect innovations originally achieved in the now classic lines of its illustrious forebearer.

Truly surprising when you hear it perform is a price so comfortable you'll find it hard to resist this great, new Mini-Wedge.

See and audition both of these and Zenith's other new Allegro Modular Stereo Sound Systems at your Exchange soon. Or check, now, with your Special Order Desk.

Allegro Series I, the new Mini-Wedge, Model JR587W
* Also available, as Model JR588W, with built-in cassette tape player/recorder

All Zenith Allegro Stereo Sound Systems are engineered, balanced, and assembled in the U.S.A.

Christmas Military Postal Service to Turkey

The government of Turkey has authorized the reopening of APO parcel services to and from Turkey during the Christmas period. The mailing period is effective immediately and will be terminated on February 15, 1978. To insure delivery within Turkey, parcels must bear a postmark on or before the 15th. All parcels are subject to Turkish customs control. The following APOs are located in Turkey: 09040; 09051; 09117; 09118; 09133; 09224; 09254; 09289; 09294; 09320; 09324; 09338 and 09380.

Metallic Silhouette Match

The Ft. Benning Rifle and Pistol Club is sponsoring a Metallic Silhouette Match at McAndrews Range on December 10 and 11.

On December 10, a 40-shot match with any caliber rifle (except magnum) will be featured. The following day another 40-shot match will be featured; any caliber pistol may be used.

Metal knockdown type targets of chicken, turkey, javelina and ram will be placed at 200 through 500 yard intervals.

Call Mr. McQuien, Ft. Benning R&P Club, 689-3371, for further information concerning awards, entry fees,

The government of Australia is now issuing licenses for the newly established Citizens Radio Service. The licenses, which cost $20 a year per CB set, will authorize Australian citizens to operate on 18 channels in the 27 MHz band. In the accompanying chart, please note that two channels used for Radio-Control modeling in the US are authorized for communication use in Australia.

Although Australian base stations may not communicate over distances greater than 20 miles, mobile units may broadcast over any distance within Australia but talking with stations outside Austalia is prohibited. US-made 23-channel sets may be used on the Aussie CB channels but 40-channel rigs are prohibited. Also, gain-type antennas are prohibited except in special circumstances.

Australian CB call signs consist of three letters followed by three numbers. The first lettter designates the state in which the licensee resides (for instance QZA 199 would be the callsign of a resident of the state of Queensland). The callsign pertains to the transceiver, not the operator; a person with a base station and three mobile units would be issued four call signs.

Good luck to the good buddies Down Under.

Falls Are Not Funny

There's nothing funny about a fall. They are the number one killer of people in the home, accounting for 8,400 home fatalities in 1975.

An extraordinary amount of energy is generated in a fall — even a simple fall resulting from tripping over a wrinkled carpet, for example. When a force of 200 pounds is concentrated on an area half an inch square, such as an elbow or some point on the head, the result is a blow of 800 pounds of force. That's more than enough to break an arm or fracture a skull.

Six 20 year vets retire in November ceremony

Six soldiers, all with at least 20 years service, were honored November 29 at a retirement ceremony on York Field.

Major Abraham L. Bain, SGM John H. Haynes, 1st Sgt. Eddie L. Hunter, SFCs Charles R. Bullard and Joseph Kekaualua and SSgt. Carl W. Mayne each received the Meritorious Service Medal from Brig Gen Fred K. Mahaffey, assistant Inf School commandant. It was the second award of the medal for SFC Bullard.

SGM J. Haynes, SFC Kekaualua and SSgt. Mayne plan retirement homes in Columbus. Bain will reside in Baton Rouge, La., Hunter in Durham, N.C. and Bullard in Daleville, Ala.

Other soldiers retiring to Columbus at the end of November are: CSM Firemen L. Sowers, SGM Wardell Smith, MSGs Charles W. Bryan and Edward A. Leeson Sr., 1st Sgts Wallace David and Eduardo L.G. White, SFCs Robert S. Correia and Charles H. Wildhagen Jr. and SSgt. William B. Patterson.

Retirees planning to reside elsewhere are: CWO4 Kirk L. Lane, Modesto, Calif.; MSG William R. Black, Mobile, Ala.; MSG Edil Lamboy, Vargas, Orlando, Fla.; SFC Joe W. White, Hopkinsville, Ky.; and Sgt. James M. Thomas, Birmingham, Ala.

PX to sell tires

The Army and Air Force Exchange Serive (AAFES) is now offering automobile tires for sale to customers at either the main post or all service stations.

"We are offering top quality, brand-name tires at low, low prices," said John Delaney, AAFES personal services manager.

Tires are ordered by the customer and can be picked up within 24 hours. No deposit is required when placing an order and Delaney does not anticipate any problem meeting the demand. "The tires are bought locally," he explained, "so there should be no waiting."

Tires may not be put on layaway and trade-ins will not be accepted. The tires are new — not retreads — and are available in all sizes.

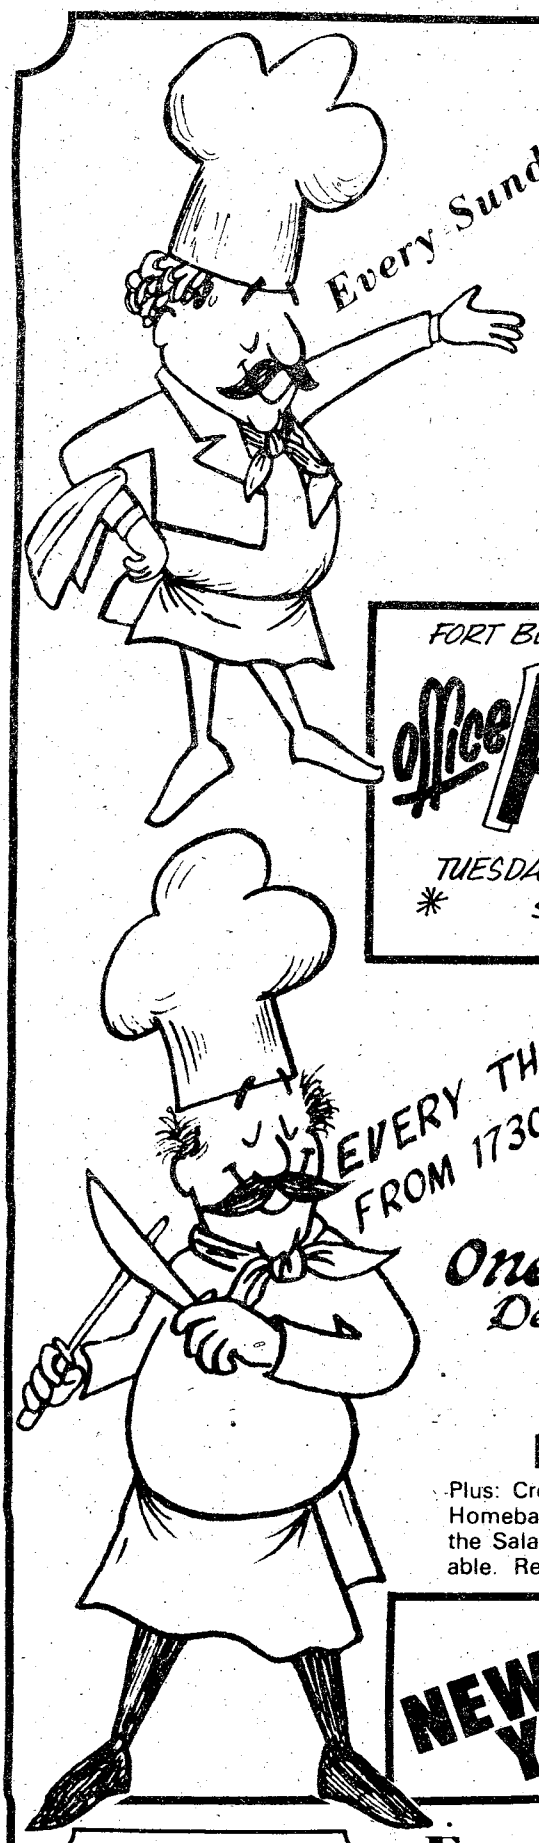
December promotions up

Planned promotions during December increased by 1,980 over November totals to 7,656, DA officials have announced.

Allocations for all grades from E-5 through 0-6 increased from November figures except for CWO4 and E-7 grades.



Total enlisted promotions number 7,033 and will include 4,875 to E-5; 1401 to E-6; 492 to E-7; 204 to E-8 and 61 to E-9. After December hikes, 6411 will remain on the E-7 list and 2051 on the E-8 list. The December promotions will deplete the current E-9 list. Effective December 2 1,000 E-8s will be on the new E-9 list.

Promotions to E-5/6 are made from local lists per published monthly promotion cutoff scores for the individual MOS.

DA officials have also forecast that December officer hikes will total 623. This is an increase of 210 from the November promotions.

Officer promotion schedules call for 35 hikes to colonel; 111 to lieutenant colonel; 162 to major and 204 to captain. There will be 24 promoted to CWO4 and 87 to CWO3.

After officer promotions, 558 will remain on the 0-6 list; 1,308 on the 0-5; 1,235 on the 0-4; 256 on the 0-3; 118 on the CWO4 list and 610 on the CWO3 list.

Field hospital to supplement active duty care

Personnel from MEDDAC and elements of the 2nd CS Hosp., 34th Med Bn will join forces Dec 12 thru the 16 for a Combined Medical Exercise (COMEDREX).

The exercise is designed to provide an orientation to field medical service for MEDDAC personnel and to maintain combat readiness for the 2nd.

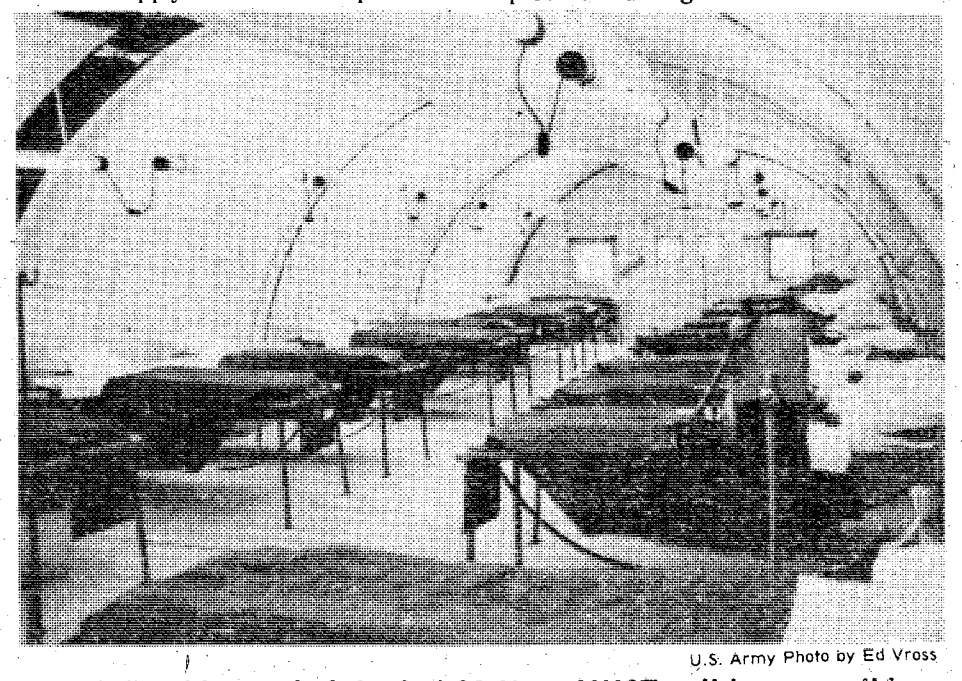
For the exercise elements of the 2nd (Medical Unit Self-contained Transportable) MUST unit will be set up adjacent to Martin Army Hospital.

According to Maj. John Kamenar, Chief of Plans, Operations, and Training at MEDDAC, the MUST Hospital will be an extension of Martin Army Hospital. "The hospital will have a 52 bed capability, a fully operational lab, x-ray section, emergency room, pharmacy section and some dental capability. Patients will be admitted, treated, and discharged from the MUST," Maj. Kamenar explained. He added that only minor surgical procedures will be conducted and any actual emergencies will be brought to the MAH Emergency Room. Only active duty military will be treated at the MUST during the exercise.

Col. Anton L. Hitzelberger, MEDDAC Commander, commenting on the exercise noted, "I think the soldier today is very realist about his job. He trains hard, under the most realistic conditions possible and he is very realistic about the possibility that he will have to do his job under battlefield conditions. I want the soldier to know who and what type of medical care is behind him in combat."

The type of medical care backing up the soldier in combat is a completely modern field hospital known as the MUST. It is 100 percent transportable by air and is made up of three basic modules, the inflatable, the expandable modules, and the utility pack units.

The inflatable modules, two of which will be utilized during the exercise are 52 feet long, 18 feet wide and 15 feet high. They will be used as an emergency treatment room and as a 20 bed intensive care ward. When used as a ward, the unit comes complete with the equipment normally found in a hospital ward, including beds, sheets, toilet items and a complete nurses station including blank forms. The power lines and hoses are connected to the ward. It is equipped with receptacles for refrigeration, respiration, suction equipment and specialized medical diagnostic equipment.



There will be six rigid expandable modules used during the exercise. They include the x-ray room, operating room, medical supply room, central material section a laboratory and pharmacy.

The operating room module features a fully equipped operating room including built in operating table, swivel surgical lighting, emergency lighting, anesthesia equipment and all of the instruments that are required by modern surgical techniques. It also has built in cabinets, work tables and can be kept free of harmful bacteria through use of positive pressure filters and air locks.

The third component and heart of the module concept is the utility pack assembly, two of which will be utilized during the exercise. The utility pack is a turbine-driven, multi-purpose unit that furnishes the hospital with electric power, hot and cold running water, suction, air conditioning and heat. It also houses the compressor used to inflate and maintain the rubber sections of the hospital. The pack is a virtual mini giant producing 120,000 BTU's per ten ton unit and can supply all facilities required for four inflatable or six expandables.

Nothing is wasted under the MUST concept. The boxes used to store and transport the inflatables will perform secondary duties as a pharmacy and an office/dressing room during the exercise.

Additional medical wards, administrative offices, dental clinic, kitchen and dining facility will be set up in tents. The dining facility under the direction of SFC Rudy Gauthier, assisted by the Food Services Division from MAH, will be providing both normal and special dietetic meals to patients and hospital personnel during the exercise.

The inflatable ward of the 2nd SS Hosp MUST unit has everything that a normal hospital ward has except solid walls, floor and ceiling. The 20 bed section has hot and cold running water, heat and air conditioning and receptacles for refrigeration, respiration suction and specialized medical diagnostic equipment. Two of the inflatable wards will be used during the five day exercise.

Pack 39 Scout members receive high awards

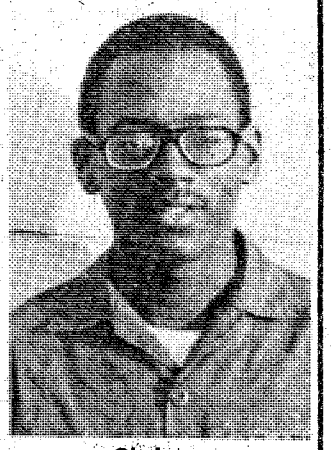
Two members of Pack 39 (Sand Hill McGraw Manor) received one of the highest scouting awards at a Special Pot Luck Dinner at Columbus Municipal Auditorium on November 17.

SFC Karl Brandenburg, Cub Master, Pack 39 received the District Award of Merit and Mrs. Linda Maxwell, of Pack 39, Den 4 was named Den Leader of the Year.

Brandenburg, operations sergeant, U.S. Infantry Board, has been involved in Ft. Benning's scouting program for 5½ years. He was the Chairman for the Council Pow Wow and coordinated this year's annual Webloe Field Day. When asked his feelings concerning the award, Brandenburg replied, "I was shocked, I didn't expect it, there are a lot of qualified people at Benning and it's rough competition. I don't consider it work when I'm doing something I enjoy though."

Mrs. Maxwell has been a den mother one and a half years. She became involved when her son joined. Along with her husband SSgt. Larence Maxwell, an instructor with the 36th Engr Gp Intermediate Leadership Course, she has actively participated in the program. She has been involved in major pack and council events, along with providing needed assistance and enthusiasm. "I've been with the scouts a long time and I am still learning. I learn more and more every day," she noted.

To qualify for the awards, three written letters are submitted by pack members to the District Selection Committee. The Committee then evaluates each set of letters and chooses the individual best suited for the award.



Best of cycle selected

Companies B, C and D, 3rd Bn, 1st AIT Bde graduated yesterday in ceremonies held on Dickman Field in Harmony Church. The reviewing officer for the graduation was Col. Todd Graham, commander of The School Brigade.

Pvt. Frank Clyburn, C-3-1 was selected as the Distinguished Graduate. A native of Methuchen, N.J., he is a student of World War II history. His brother Jeffery is in the final week of training Brigade and will graduate next week.

The Drill Sergeant of the Cycle was also from C-3-1. SFC James Edmunds is from Cleveland, Ohio. His platoon was named honor platoon for the cycle.

Sgt. Timothy E. Armstrong, a native of Mountville, Ohio was selected as the Outstanding Instructor of the Cycle. Armstrong is an instructor in Military Operations in Builtup Areas (MOBA).

Davis captures second shooting title

MSgt. Charles Davis, of the US Army Marksmanship Unit, came from two points back to defeat a field of 21 entries in the Southern Running Target Championships held recently at Ft. Benning's Hibbs Range.

Davis put together scores of 566 and 577 out of a possible 600 for a total of 1,137 points to defeat teammate SFC Martin Edmondson who finished at 1,135. SSgt. James Reiber, also of the USAMU, claimed third place honors with 1,123 points after a first day lead with Edmondson.

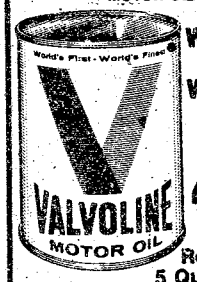
Mr. Pedro Ramirez of San Juan, Puerto Rico, captured high civilian honors in the tournament with 1,081 points. The four man national team from Puerto Rico was competing in the Southern Target Matches for the first time.



In the final Mixed Run Championship, Davis again finished first with 385 points which unofficially tied the world mark set in 1974 by V. Postoianov, USSR. Edmondson placed second at 380 points while LtCol Harry Lucker, USAMU, claimed third place honors with 375 points.

The US Army Squad of Davis, Edmondson, Reiber and Lucker combined for a score of 1,506 points to win the team match, two points short of their own national record of 1,508.

TIMES THEY ARE A CHANGING — and for the better as far as transportation for the sick and wounded is concerned. SFC Leon Dantzler dressed in World War II garb stands in front of the old "crackerbox" which offered little in the way of comfort for passenger and crew alike while Sp4 Randall Ruston poses with the modern day M886 Ambulance. The vehicle belonging to the 690th Med Co, 34 Med Bn which is easier to maintain than previous models offers many patient comfort modifications, to include: a larger litter compartment with heater, a warning light on the instrumental panel to indicate that the rear door is not closed, automatic transmission, improved suspension and on/off road radial tires for a better ride.

Felines invade Kelley Hill

The Kelley Hill Recreation Center was transformed into a cats' meow recently when 22 felines were entered in the 10th Annual Cat Show sponsored by the center.

Judging the show were Miss Susan Black, a representative from the Chattahoochee Valley Humane Society; Ms. Jean Ewing and Mrs. Dennis Sullivan, both of the Metropolitan Animal Shelter.

Five classes were available for judging. The winners in the Exotic Class were; 1st place — Mrs. Crescioni with Max, a Manx. 2nd place — Ellen Rogers with Moon Shadow, a Havana Brown.

The Siamese Class winners were: 1st - Amy Coffman with Chester. 2nd - Dianne Wimberly with Sonny Boy.

Longhair Class Winners included: 1st - Sandra Jones with Lord Maximillian Blue. 2nd - Patti Williamson with Shiraz. 3rd - William Dillard with Charlie. 4th Wayne Davis with Sir Cedric.

VA Q&A

Q — Are the Supplemental Security Income benefit payments administered by Social Security Administration considered income for pension and/or death pension purposes by the Veterans Administration?

A — No; the yellow check received from Social Security under the SSI program is not income for pension purposes for veterans, death pensions for widows or widowers, or dependency and indemnity compensation payments for parents who lost a son or daughter in serivce, or whose death following service was due to a service-incurred disability.

Q — I am the spouse of a veteran who has service-connected total and permanent disabilities, and I have been entitled to dependents' educational assistance since the law was enacted. How long do I have to use my entitlement?

A — Your termination date of eligibility for dependents' educational assistance will be Nov. 30, 1978, which is ten years from the date of enactment of Public Law 90-631, Dec. 1, 1968.

accept it unless you are absolutely sure it is the one you want. Other jobs may come up offering higher wages or better working conditions. Let the employer know that you have other offers you would like to consider, but you will let him know in the near future. Whatever you do, don't take too long with your answer. The employer can't wait forever and may place someone else in the position offered to you.

If you don't get a job immediately after your first interview, don't get discouraged. Remember, interviewers, companies and jobs differ greatly. You will learn a lot from your first interview and will most certainly do better in succeeding ones. The important thing to do is keep trying. After all, you'll be a civilian . . . you're the one who has to sell yourself this time.

Don't let this happen to you or to someone you know. Join the Ft. Benning Citizens Band Emergency Assistance Association. Their next meeting will be held at the Kelley Hill Recreation Center on December 2nd at 7 p.m. To join, bring a copy of your FCC license or temporary permit and be prepared to pay the initiation fee of $5.00 and $2.00 dues. The purpose of the club is to provide emergency highway assistance to motorists in and around Ft. Benning. A board of directors will be elected at the December meeting.

The President's Commission on Military Compensation will hold its public hearings for the Columbus-Phenix City-Ft. Benning area at Columbus College on December 12. Hearings will begin at 1 p.m. in the Fine Arts Auditorium.

Topics to be included in the hearing will include military compensation; retired medical benefits; retirement pay; military doctor shortages; compensation of career NCOs; junior officer retention; dental care; cost of PCS moves and dual compensation. A variety of other topics will also be included in the hearings.

Twelve shuttle buses will be available to transport interested military personnel, dependents and Department of the Army civilians from various locations on Ft. Benning. Buses are scheduled to depart from pickup points at 11:45 a.m., to arrive at Columbus College at 12:40.

All buses will be clearly marked with numbers and signs showing their pickup points for their return at the conclusion of the hearings.

Individuals taking private transportation to the hearings are requested to arrive at the Fine Arts Auditorium before 12:45 p.m. in order that everyone may be seated prior to the opening of the hearings.

Except for those personnel required for essential military duties, individuals may be excused by unit commanders to attend the hearings. Attendants are required to wear the Class "A" uniform. The work uniform (fatigues) will not be permitted.

The Commission on Military Compensation was appointed by President Carter to make a study of the military compensation system, and if appropriate, recommend changes to the current pay and benefit program.

The commission is making a tour of all major military centers, and will report its findings to the President by March 15 of next year.

State tax on post housing?

At least two states are currently attempting to impose a type of real estate tax on occupants of military housing, according to Department of Army officials. And a tax controversy in California could set a legal precedent that other states may follow.

Although attempts to tax on-post residents are being made in California and New Jersey (and off-post attempts were recently made in Maryland), officials view the California case as a challenge to current military tax exemption benefits.

California first took an active interest in taxing military housing tenants in 1971 and a recent U.S. Supreme Court decision has given state officials new ammunition for their case. The decision, made last January against the Forest Service, held that civilian employees of the service could be taxed on housing they occupied on federally-owned land.

That decision has given California a new approach to its claim that military housing is fair game. The Court ruled that the Forest Service employees could be taxed on their "possessory interest" in the housing (that which the state considers a resident's "private interest" in the property). The Court ruled that the individual residents, not the government, are liable for tax assessments against housing on federal property, furnished in return for part of the employees' salaries.

The ruling applied to only civilian employees, state and military officials are preparing for a court battle early next year to decide whether the ruling applies to members of the armed forces. The military services are being represented by the Justice Department.

While Defense officials cannot comment on the case or speculate on its outcome since it is pending litigation, a DA official outlined the basis for the military's claim that on-post residents are exempt from the possessory interest tax. The joint service suit, filed against Humbolt County, Calif., will based on three key points, according to the official. They are that taxation of military personnel on federal property directly interferes with U.S. government operations; that certain housing is ex-

"A Ledger-Enquirer Newspaper published in the Interest of the Personnel of Fort Benning

'Individual' termed key to success of renewed energy drive

By Phillip R. Howell Jr.

The individual soldier and civilian will be the centerpiece of a renewed emphasis on energy conservation at Ft. Benning, according to MajGen. William J. Livsey, post commander.

"Individual awareness and responsibility," said General Livsey, "are the foundations of our energy conservation program at Ft. Benning. The Army has long been conscious of its responsibility in the conservation of fuels and has made great strides in achieving its energy goals. But the demand for fuels has increased at such a rate that conservation at command level alone is no longer enough. Only through the individual efforts of each soldier and civilian at Ft. Benning will we be able to meet the critical challenge which faces us."

The general's remarks followed the release last week of Ft. Benning's first comprehensive regulation governing energy conservation.

Along with extensive unit and activity-oriented conservation guidelines, the new regulation, USAIC Reg. 11-27, pays particular attention to the self-discipline of the individual consumer as a cornerstone of an effective energy policy at Ft. Benning.

The spirit of the new regulation follows closely the objectives of President Carter's National Energy Plan, announced earlier this year. Conservation was then noted as the key to the success of the entire National Energy Plan, because conservation is cheaper than production of new supplies and can lead to quicker results.

The importance of individual effort in the national energy plan was apparent when President Carter noted that success of the plan will depend on the participation of Americans "in

OBGYN services to be curtailed

Maternity care for dependents at Martin Army Hospital is expected to be curtailed during July and August of next year, according to hospital officials.

Dependents expected to give birth during those months are being referred to civilian physicians under the CHAMPUS program.

According to Maj. (Dr.) William A. Kjellstrom, Chief of OB-GYN Services at the hospital, the cutback in services is unavoidable because of an expected shortage of obstetricians during those two months.

"Even by September of next year, we will

empt from taxation by law; and that the Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act (SSCRA) prohibits such tax if a military members' legal residence is outside the county imposing the tax.

The first point may not be endorsed by the courts since Forest Service employees were not exempted by a similar claim. However, applying it to military personnel instead of civilians could produce a different legal conclusion, according to officials.

The law mentioned in the second point applies only to Capehart housing or duplex housing constructed about 15 to 20 years ago. This housing is specifically exempt from state taxation by federal law. Other housing involved in the California is not specifically exempt and Capehart housing makes up only a small part of family housing on U.S. installations.

The SSCRA does protect military personnel from certain taxes by states when personnel are required, by military orders, to serve in that state. But it also granted home states, as opposed to host states where military personnel do not legally reside, certain tax rights. The third point exempts non-residents from paying possessory interest taxes, but California counties could conceivably tax their legal residents. This may allow the state, for example, to also tax its residents who reside on federal property in another state, if Humbolt County wins its case.

Although the attempt to tax military personnel in California is current and aggressive, DA officials are quick to point out that the state is not singling out military personnel in applying the provisions of state laws. An official explained that the state has an obligation to tax all residents, regulated by the state constitution. Ignoring military residents would be unfair to other California taxpayers in the opinion of the state and a county cannot exempt itself from the state requirement, the official added.

Officials declined to predict the outcome of the California federal court's decision, which is expected early next year.

A decision against either party will likely end up in an appeal to a higher court, an official stated. The case may even reach the U.S. Supreme Court and a final trial court decision could come as early as next spring, according to a California official.

County officials in the central California area, which includes Ft. Ord have been exploring a tax against residents there. Ft. Ord is a major western Army installation with more than 3,200 family housing units serving the 7th Inf. Div. While no tax bills have been presented to residents there as of this writing, according to post officials, soldiers have been advised to report any assessments to the post's legal assistance office.

Twelve enlisted families residing in the Old Bridge, N.J. government housing, under the jurisdiction of Ft. Dix officials, recently received tax bills of about $2,000. The bills represented property assessments for a two-year period. New Jersey is attempting to tax the families under a leased housing tax, but officials are appealing to the courts on grounds that military housing is not leased and, therefore, the tax cannot be applied.

Another state's attempt to tax military residents was recently discontinued because the tax law in question was repealed. The case involved a Maryland renter's tax against military personnel living in off-post civilian apartment complexes. About two years ago, a federal court ruled that the tenants were not protected under the SSCRA. This was a unique case because rent taxes are usually levied against landlors who pass the tax on in hidden rent charges.

DA officials say that no other states are known to be actively interested in taxing military personnel. However, one official speculated that some states are waiting for the outcome of the California case before deciding on a similar attempt.

Meanwhile, state and military officials are pondering technical problems that might arise, regardless of the court outcome. Assuming the Justice Department wins its battle, the question of taxing civilian personnel residing in military government quarters will have to be answered. Although these employees are relatively few, it is uncertain whether or not state officials will attempt to tax them under the decision handed down by the court in the Forest Service case.

The landmark California case is being watched to determine the future extent of that protection. (ARNEWS)

Junior EM welfare focus of Pay Commission

By John Hart
S&S Washington Bureau Chief

The welfare of junior enlisted service members is a preeminent concern of the President's Commission on Military Compensation.

Dennis Gray, Associate Director of the nine-member commission, said Monday "This has to be a preeminent concern in the findings and recommendations."

The need to have travel entitlements for the dependents of junior enlisted grades was one point made in an interview with Gray and four NCOs serving on the Commission.

Navy Fleet Master Chief Robert L. Evans, Marine Gunnery Sergeant Lawrence Blum, Army Sergeant Major Manley S. Warrick were appointed to the commission in October.

They each voted strong support for improving the financial status of the junior enlisted grades.

Evans called the junior enlisted grades "The most underprivileged group in the services."

He pointed out that some of the young married service members when they received transfer orders go into debt to move their families. Others moonlight, have working wives, and draw food stamps to make it financially, Evans said.

"It is time that junior enlisted people be considered full fledged members of the military," Warrick said.

Each of the four NCOs believes they may be the first enlisted men assigned to a Presidential Commission with duties other than clerks. Their job is to assess the "Institutional Impact" of pay and benefits and to advise the commission and its staff.

Warrick describes the job as one of "Interfacing with the Commission . . . providing the staff with up-to-date-information on the concerns of the troops in the trenches."

Next month Warrick will travel with two commissioners to Germany for discussions of pay issues with service people.

The pay panel members will have meetings at Ramstein AF Base and at three Army locations not yet named, Gray said.

One area of compensation that needs improvement, according to Warrick, is the establishment of a cost-of-living allowance for service members stationed in high cost-of-living areas in the States.

"Nobody should lose purchasing power because of a transfer to such an area," he said.

Service members have a "long laundry list" of concerns about pay and benefits issues, Binnicker said.

"Their greatest concern is the uncertainty of the future, when pinned down they talk to you about dollars and cents, he said.

When service people see anything with a cash value like bonus pay whittled away, Binnicker said, "They say there goes another benefit."

He thinks that the American public has been brainwashed (by the media) to believe that military people should realize that the commission is working to do something for them and not to them."

One comment echoed by each of the NCOs is that career military people are not asking for any more compensation but only what was promised to them at the beginning of their service.

Gray would not speculate on what direction the commission may be considering on recommendations.

"The commissioners are still learning about the problems. They won't be getting into accelerated work on considering specific recommendations until January, Gray said.

Whatever the Commission recommends, Warrick said, "The Military Compensation System must be fair to everyone — military people, taxpayers, the defense establishment and individual services."

every city, town, village, farm and home."

The new regulation describes this participation as individual self-discipline, and urges consumers to follow a "Code of Conservation Conduct," or "CCC."

Basic to the concept of CCC is individual awareness of conservation objectives, and the adoption of energy conservation as a daily practice by Ft. Benning personnel.

"Improved awareness is the key to an overall improvement in conservation," notes Mr. George Schladensky, chief of utilities division, DFAE. "The savings potential, notably in utilities such as natural gas and electricity, is considerable. Determined individual effort, in work areas as well as in quarters, will pay off in the reduced consumption of energy and a reduction in the total cost of energy," said Mr. Schladensky.

Often, consumers are unaware of just how much energy can be wasted by careless habit. Typical of the efforts being made by the Army to educate its members in the conservation of fuels is the Ft. Benning Facilities Training School. Operated by Utilities Division, DFAE, the school provides information and training in utilities conservation in both work areas and post housing.

Mr. M. M. Hodge, Chief Training Instructor of the Facilities Training School, described his "Occupant Self-Help Program." "All incoming occupants of family housing here at Ft. Benning receive an invitation to attend our self-help class," said Mr. Hodge. "Occupants should receive notice of the class about three weeks after their arrival in post quarters. The class is given to one adult member of each household, and runs about two hours. The sessions are held each Thursday afternoon, and include instruction on the care and maintenance of quarters equipment such as major appliances, and heating and cooling equipment.

"We also show a film on utilities conservation," said Hodge, "which offers helpful hints on how to save energy around the home. Through our program, we're able to offer people a new outlook on conservation. People are often surprised at just how much can be saved by eliminating some of the unnecessary and unnoticed waste around the home or office."

The school is also responsible for training mobile teams designed to assist post personnel in utilities conservation. Conservation Assistance Training Teams (CAT Teams) assist unit commanders in the effective utilitzation of energy in troop billets and areas. Housing Energy Conservation Teams (HEC Teams), are co-ed teams which visit family housing units on post to provide tips on home energy savings and to solve spot problems involving utilities use.

All team members receive a minimum of 12 hours of instruction on utilities utilization and are trained to analyze family quarters and provide suggestions for saving energy.

"Part of our job is to encourage personnel at Ft. Benning to become involved in the conservation of energy — to become part of the solution rather than being part of the problem," said Mr. Hodge.

With the introduction of Ft. Benning's new energy regulation, responsibility for the success of conservation efforts rests with every individual on post.

"Daily energy conservation can be successful, and largely painless, if we make ourselves aware of energy waste — and work to eliminate it," said Hodge.

To provide the information necessary to combat the waste of our energy resources, THE BAYONET will make available to its readers on a regular basis stories and features on energy and suggest ways we can all work to help conserve it.

Energy saving tips can reduce bills

Thanks to the Federal Energy Commission. We are able to pass along these interesting and most useful energy saving tips.

● Turn that thermostat back. And save on your own energy costs, too. You can save from two to five per cent for every degree you lower your heat over a 24-hour period.

● You can save gas or electricity by using glass or ceramic dishes in the oven. They generally require temperature settings about 25 degrees lower than you would need for metal pans.

● A well-tuned car can give you an average of six per cent better mileage than an untuned one. Have you had your car tuned up lately?

● Don't let cold air seep into your home through the attic access door. Check the door to make sure it's well insulated and weatherstripped. Otherwise you'll be wasting fuel to heat that cool air.

● If you have a forced air heating system, prevent heat loss by checking the ducts for air leaks regularly — especially at connection points. Leaks can be repaired simply by covering holes or cracks with a cloth adhesive tape.

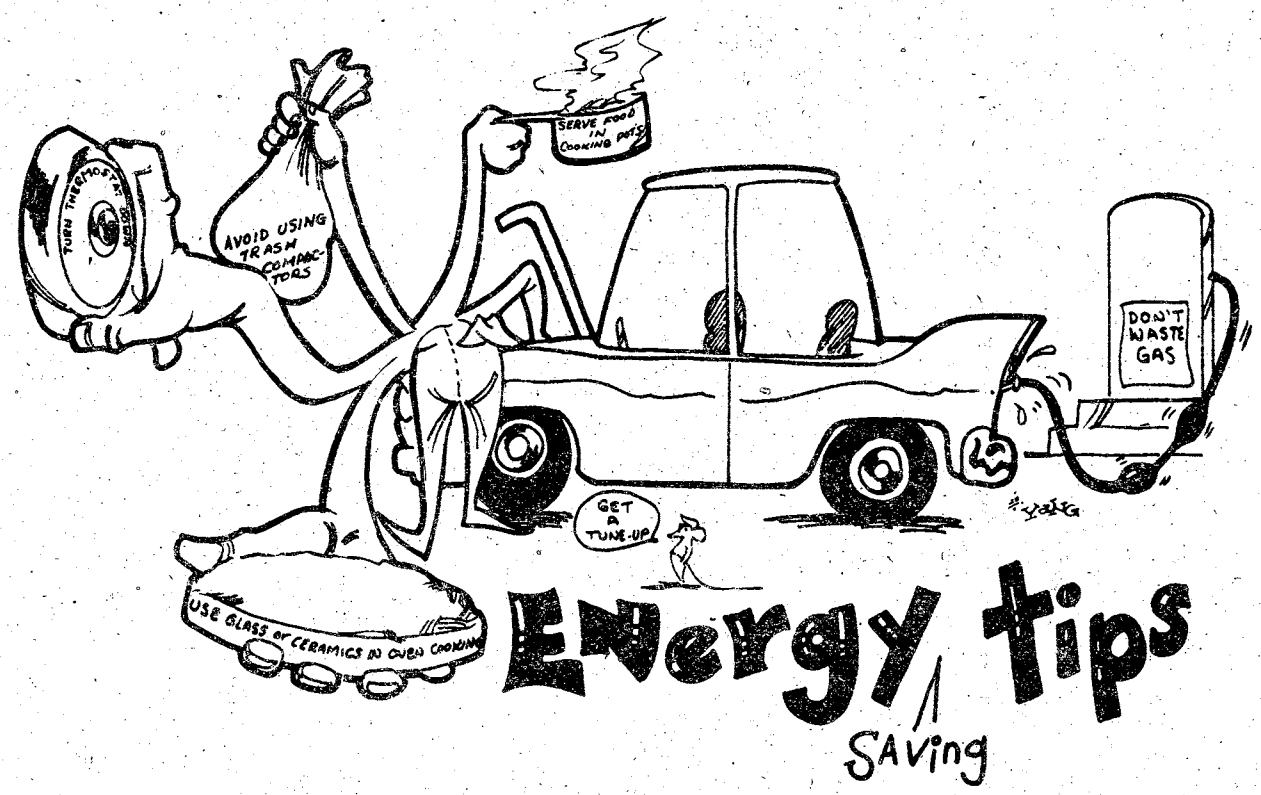
● Chances are you won't have to wash heavily soiled clothes twice if you presoak them, or use the soak cycle in your washing machine. You'll save the energy required for the second washing.

● Is the frost in your freezer thicker than one-quarter of an inch? Defrost! Frost on freezer walls makes the motor work harder, wastes energy, and takes up usable space.

● If you have a trash compactor, don't operate it more than you need to. Wait until you have a full bag. You'll only save small amounts of electricity each day — but they'll add up over a year's time.

● Buy slightly less than a full tank of gasoline to prevent overflow. The gasoline you use is pure waste.

● If you have attractive portable appliances such as electric skillets, use them as serving dishes at the table. You'll save energy two ways: by cutting down on energy used for cooking; and by saving hot water because you'll have fewer pans and dishes to wash.



● Keep windows near thermostats tightly closed. Otherwise, cold drafts will lower the thermostat reading. And your furnace will produce more heat than you actually need.

● Do you want to keep your home temperature at 65 degrees, but find it uncomfortable? Consider using a humidifier, or putting a pan of water on or behind the radiator. Humidified air is more comfortable at lower temperatures than dry air, and healthier, too.

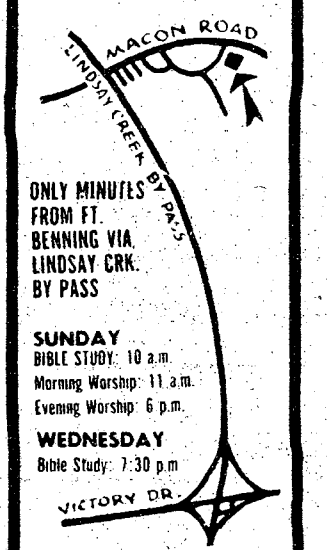
● If you serve a lot of meals with dishes that require long cooking, a pressure cooker or microwave oven may be a good investment for you. These devices cook foods faster, and can save considerable amounts of gas or electricity in the course of a year.

● Check the tire pressure on your car frequently in cold weather. Air contracts in cold weater and your tire pressure may go down without your realizing it. Underinflated tires put an extra drag on the engine and can increase gas consumption by about two per cent per pound of air pressure below the recommended pressure.

● In areas where you need a lot of light, save electricty by using one large bulb instead of several small ones. A 100-watt bulb, for example, produces the same amount of light as six 25-watt bulbs but uses less electricty.

Clothes pick-up slated tomorrow

Put your serviceable clothes and any repairable items you plan to donate to Goodwill in bags or boxes on your front porch tomorrow for pickup by the Ft. Benning District Scouts. The pickups, depending where you live, will be made from 8-12 on post and 1-5 off post. If you wish to take the items to a central collection point, there will be trucks stationed at Wilson School, McBride School, Custer Terrace Chapel, the Infantry Museum parking lot, the PX Mini-mall and the PX main mall.



ID Card section to change hours

Effective immediately, the COMPACT ID Card Section (Bldg 83, Rm 139) operating hours are changed as follows: Monday thru Thursday - 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.; Friday - 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. This extended service is available to those personnel normally serviced by this section (retired personnel and their dependents; active duty personnel whose records are maintained at Bldg 83 and their dependents).

All active duty personnel applying for their own ID cards and personnel in pay grades E1-E6 applying for their dependents' ID cards must report to the personnel records section (Officers - 336; Enlisted - 332) prior to 5 p.m. for initiation/verification of application for ID cards.

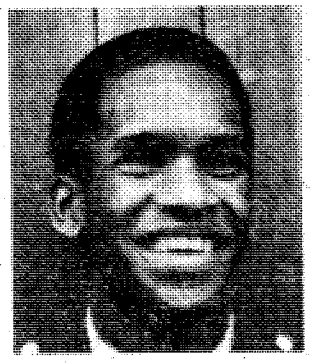
What are you doing to conserve energy?

2ndLt. William H. Davis Jr., Hq Co, HQ Cmd
I'm turning down the thermostat and stocking up on decongestant tablets. Also, I'm bathing less and using lots of deodorant. I expect a Ban roll-on shortage.

William Davis

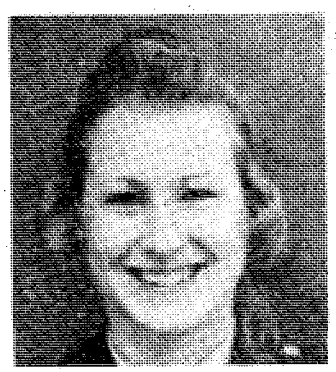


Jon Montoute

2ndLt. Jon Montoute, Co B, HQ Cmd
Our family keeps the thermostat at 65 during the day and sets it at 68 in the evening. I have already cut a large supply of firewood for our fireplace. Basking in the warmth of a warm fire has brought my family closer together. We also turn out all unnecessary lights and run one T.V. instead of the normal three.

1stLt. Michele E. Simmons, 598th Maint Co
As Energy Conservation Officer, daily utility inspections are made to prevent misuse of electricity, water, heat and air conditioning. At home, as a mother of two, advice is repetitiously given to the children to use daylight as long as possible and cold water when hot is unnecessary. These, among other habits, conserve energy as well as the family budget.

Michele Simmons



Lester Martin

PFC Lester D. Martin, Co A, HQ Cmd
I don't use my car when I go to the gym or the mess hall — I walk. Also, the lights in my room are turned off at 9 p.m., without fail.

PFC Scott A. Krall, 197th Inf Bde
I maintain the thermostat at 65 degrees and turn out any unnecessaary lights. Awareness is vital in order to conserve energy. As an individual, I'll do my part, however, I feel that solar energy units should be readily available to any consumer at an affordable price.

Scott Krall

Gwen Townsend

Sp5 Gwen L. Townsend, MEDDAC
Our various conservation measures include: keeping the thermostat at 68 degrees, burning candles at night, turning the heat off before going to work, using small watt light bulbs and trying not to cook so many meals.

Commentary

Call it the 'Readiness Force'

Despite its conceptual importance to the total Army force, the Army Reserve has both literally and figuratively a bad name.

"Weekend warriors," the sometime soldiers serving more often than not with inadequate equipment, are bemoaned in Pentagon private and public pronouncement as being understrength, inadequately trained, unready for deployment.

They are not only the butt of sharp-tongued criticism. They are a favorite target of some members of Congress and Cabinet members and, when the public is at its most anti-military, the Reserves get its lowest respect.

"Weekend warrior" has become a universal term of derision.

What these important forces need is a new image, an infusion of new respect and purpose — a spirit of awakening. Reenlistment and retention are best in those round-out and affiliated units that maintain a high state of readiness and purpose in conjunction with their active duty comrades.

This should tell us something about the dedication of these men and women and about the single-minded purpose of their willingness to be ready when called.

The Reserves don't deserve their bad name. The very word "reserves" connotes something kept back, set apart for later use, the "second team."

The Reserves aren't a second team. Contingency plans in the Pentagon, in fact, have some of these so-called Reserves set for deployment before some active units.

They are important. They are vital to the nation's defense. It behooves the Army to keep up with societal changes and reflect the Nation's attitude toward all its defense forces in times of peace. It should begin by eliminating the very name "reserves" and think of and refer to Reservists as "soldiers."

Readiness is of paramount importance to our military forces. Secretary Alexander and General Rogers listed it as the first of their recently announced goals for the Total Army.

Why then should we not begin to transform the Army's extended body, increase its pride, espirit and self-respect by giving this vital force a new name. Call it the "Readiness Force."

What's in a name?

In this case, a new burst of pride!

CommissiontomeetMonday

The President's Commission of Military Compensation will hold a public hearing Monday at the Columbus College Fine Arts Auditorium beginning at 1 p.m.

The Commission was appointed by President Carter to review previous studies of the military compensation system and, if appropriate, recommend changes to current pay and benefit programs. The President also charged the Commission to make a fresh review because previous attempts to prove an equitable and efficient compensation system for the entire military failed to reach general agreement.

Commission members must first decide if a pay and allowances system or an all salary system will contribute to an effective military establishment. Then the Commission must consider the cost effectiveness or efficiency of the system.

Testimonies from servicemembers, dependents and retirees will be submitted to the Commission at the hearing and will be a determining factor in the report the Commission will file with the President on March 15, 1978. Similar hearings have already been held by the Commission in Virginia and Texas.

Shuttle buses will be provided to transport individuals to the hearing from various post locations.

Letters! We want letters

The BAYONET invites letters from readers on topics of interest to the military community. The following rules are observed:

1. Letters must be signed. However, names will be withheld from publication on request.

2. Include your address or unit designation and telephone number with the letter. This information will not be published, but will be used for verification or clarification of letters selected for publication.

3. Keep letters short (about 200 words). The BAYONET reserves the right to condense letters or to use excerpts from letters, so that more may be printed.

4. Typewritten letters, double-spaced, are preferred.

5. Longer articles by recognized authorities on particular points of view, or treating specific topics of importance to the post, are also welcomed.

6. All letters will be answered. However, those letters lacking in properiety or substance will not be published.

7. Mail or bring letters to Editor; BAYONET; Public Affairs Office; Rm. 602; Bldg 4; Ft. Benning, Ga. 31905.

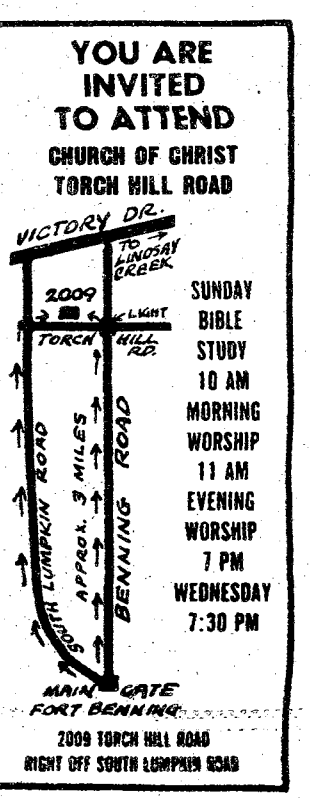
Korea-bound soldiers no longer receive homebase

Some soldiers scheduled for tours in Korea will not receive homebase and advanced assignments prior to departure, DA officials announced.

Since early this year soldiers in grades of E-5 to O-5 have received assignments instructions for posts or to the installations where they will be assigned upon return from Korea. Assignments are usually made 18 to 24 months before the soldier's return from Korea.

Military Personnel Center (MILPERCEN) officials can no longer give advance instructions to all soldiers because of changing requirements anticipated by the planned withdrawal of most soldiers from Korea.

Officials said that soldiers assigned to Korea will be able to retain military family housing as provided by the homebase assignment policy and soldiers in Korea will receive assignment instructions as soon as possible before returning to CONUS.



Benning units participate in Xmas parade

A color guard from the 197th Bde, the Infantry Chorus, the 283rd Army Band, floats sponsored by three post units and an antique vehicle from the Infantry Museum joined Columbus merchants and organizations in heralding the spirit of the season in Thursday's Christmas parade.

Chief of Staff Colonel Addison D. Davis III, representing the commanding general, accompanied Columbus mayor Jack Mickle in the VIP vehicle.

"The Night Before Christmas" was the theme of the float from the 36th Eng Gp. It depicted Santa in his sleigh, reindeer, a fire place and Christmas tree with children around it.

ETS: Educational opportunities

Editor's Note: This is the third and final part of a three-part series by Bev Lockhart concerning benefits and services available to personnel upon their ETS. This week's article concerns educational opportunities under the G.I. Bill.

By Bev Lockhart

That golden date—your ETS—has rolled around at last. But instead of taking the competitive role of job-seeker, you've decided to take advantage of the G.I. Bill. That degree or certificate of completion is foremost in your mind — and you're ready to go for it.

The post Education Center (Bldg 35) provides valuable assistance in finding the right school for you and informing you of your benefits under the G.I. Bill.

College catalogs on every Regional Association accredited four-year (along with some two-year) institution in the United States can be viewed at the Education Center. An Occupational Outlook lists the jobs with the most openings in the near future, giving you an idea of the type of degree that would give you a better chance at temployment.

Exams, Inventions and Tests

If you have no idea what type of work you'd be happiest in, the Education Center offers a test to show what types of work you'd be most likely to succeed or be happiest in. The Strong Campbell Interest Inventory is available for a minimal scoring fee.

CLEP examinations are also available through the Education Center.

You can spare yourself the cost charged by civilian institutions by taking the CLEP examinations while you are still in the service. CLEP tests can earn non-traditional credit in place of classroom study. The amount of credit given varies depending on your scores and the college granting the credit.

The Education Center also offers the SAT (Scholastic Aptitude Test) which is required by most colleges before you can be accepted. A $7.25 fee is charged for the test.

GED (General Education Diploma) tests are offered to those who don't have a high school diploma or the equivalent.

Credit for MOS Skills and Military Experience

The American Council of Education awards credit for MOS skills. Most colleges will also award credit for military experience toward bachelor degrees. For instance, Troy State awards 20 credit hours to E-4s and below; E-5s and above are awarded with 45 hours of credit. Most colleges award what is termed non-traditional credit (comparable to credit earned through CLEP examinations) versus traditional credit which is earned through classroom study.

Educational Assistance Eligibility

Servicemembers who served at least 181 days of continuous active duty after January 31, 1955 and before January 1, 1977 are eligible for the old G.I. Bill as long as they were discharged under other than dishonorable conditions. Each eligible person with more than 18 months active duty is entitled to 45 months of full-time benefits; those with less than 18 months (but not more than 181 days) receive one and a half months of full-time benefits for each month of active service.

Educational Institutions

An educational institution approved for training may include any public or private elementary, high, vocational correspondence, or business school, junior or teachers college, normal school, college or university, professional, scientific or technical institution, or any other institution which furnishes education at the secondary school level or above, according to the Veterans Administration.

Generally, a program of education outside the United States may be pursued only at an approved educational institution of higher learning.

Veterans who have already qualified in a program of education may receive educational assistance for up to six months to pursue refresher training to update skills acquired prior to or during service with a charge to their entitlement.

High School Training

A veteran required to complete high school training or pass the GED examination to qualify for higher education may receive education assistance allowance without charge against basic entitlement. VA also permits educational assistance without charge for additional secondary school training (such as refresher or deficiency courses) needed to qualify for admission to an appropriate education institution.

Veterans who haven't completed the eighth grade may also receive educational assitance allowance without charge to their basis entitlement.

Flight Training

An eligible veteran may receive educational assistance for an approved course of flight training if the course is necessary to attain a recognized vocational objective in the field of aviation or if is required in the pursuit of another vocation.

The veteran must first possess a valid private pilot's rating and meet the necessary medical requirements.

Educational assistance allowance for flight training is computed at the rate of 90 per cent of the established civilian rate for tuition and fees. Entitlement is reduced at the rate of one month for each $270 paid to the veteran.

Flight training is also available as a part of an approved college degree program.

Tutorial Assistance

Veterans or service personnel needing tutorial assistance while pursuing higher education on a half-time or more basis may qualify for tutorial payments not to exceed $65 per month. A maximum amount of $780 will be paid without charge against basic entitlement.

Current Education Assistance Payments

Currently, the going rates for veteran students attending school under the G.I. Bill is $311 per month for the single veteran student; $370 per month for students with one dependent; $422 for students with two dependents. An additional $26 per month is paid to veterans for each additional dependent.

Not Enough to Live On

The money a veteran receives from VA is not enough to live on, though. Unless you're one of the few doughboy football players offered a four-year full-ride scholarship from a university, you will probably end up needing a part-time job. Remember, you have an advantage when you go down to the employment office. Veterans receive priority over non-veterans, whether they need a full or part-time job.

Working part-time while continuing your education is also a good way to gain job experience along with helping to impress future employers. A lot of college students, both veteran and non-veteran, enlist in the National Guard or Reserves to bring in a little bit of extra money. The committment only requires one weekend a month and two weeks during the summer out of your time. You can enlist at the same rank you ETSed as, are eligible for promotion, receive additional training and a choice of location.

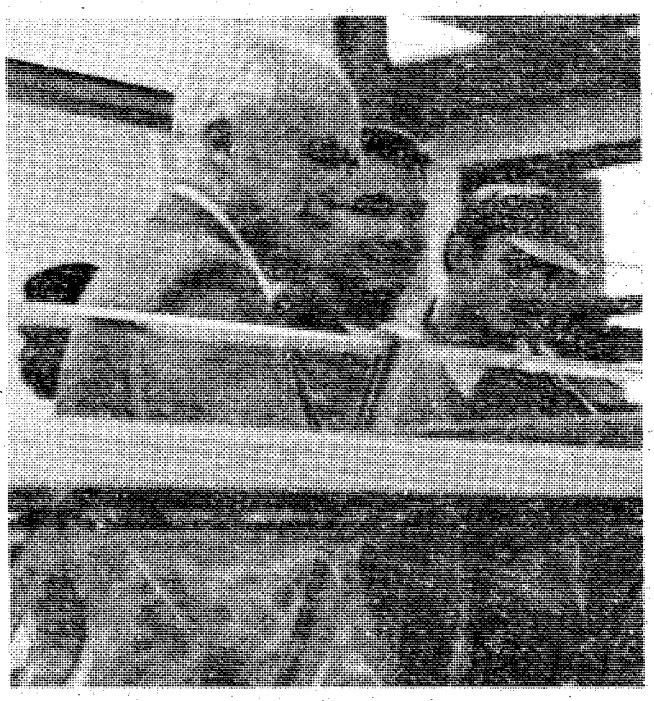
Work Study Program

Veterans attending school on a full-time basis may receive an additional allowance by performing services for the VA. Jobs may include VA outreach services under the supervision of a VA employee; Preparation and processing of VA paperwork; VA domiciliary and medical treatment services; or any other activitiy of the VA approved by the Administrator.

The more the student works, the more money he or she receives. If 100 or more hours are agreed upon, $250 is paid in advance. A student who agrees to work 250 hours receives $625. The hours are worked during or between a specific enrollment period.

The program gives preference to veterans with a service-connected disability rating of 30 percent or more.

Residency Determines Tuition Cost



If you decide to attend a school that isn't in your state of residency, you might want to check on the requirements for establishing residency in that state. State funded universities and colleges usually charge higher tuition to non-residents. If you really want to attend an out of state school, it may be wise to change your state of residency. This usually entails living and working in the state for a specific period of time (usually six months to a year) after you submit a request for residency. Information concerning residency may be obtained by writing to the capitol of the state you are interested in residing. Most states don't count the time you are attending school as time towards residency requirements. You must be working at a full time job while establishing residency.

Consulting VA Important

Every campus has a VA representative. It's important to make sure the courses you are planning to take are approved by the VA. The administration will alllow one change in your program of study; if a student makes more than that, he or she will be required to submit to counseling by a VA psychologist. It is important to determine what you want before you commit yourself.

By contacting the Education Center a few months before your ETS date, you can put yourself way ahead of the game.

Thermos bottles

Innocent as they may look, vacuum thermos bottles are potential bombs looking for a time and place to explode.

The National Safety Council recently issued a notice urging all persons who use vacuum bottles to treat them with tender loving care. They recommend following these safety guidelines in the use of vacuum thermos bottles:

- Never insert metal utensils or other objects inside vacuum thermos bottles.
- Avoid sudden temperature extremes, such as pouring boiling hot coffee into a thermos containing ice cubes.
- Handle with care as you would any other glass object.

The information is there if you want it

By Bruce S. Jasurda

You might not know Delbert D. Dimwit, but he or one of his running buddies is in your unit. Your first sergeants know who he is. He has only two excuses for everything he fouls up — (1) "Top, my alarm clock didn't go off" or (2) "I didn't know that first sergeant."

Now, the Command can't help old Delbert on the first count, but it does make a concerted effort to destroy his second excuse.

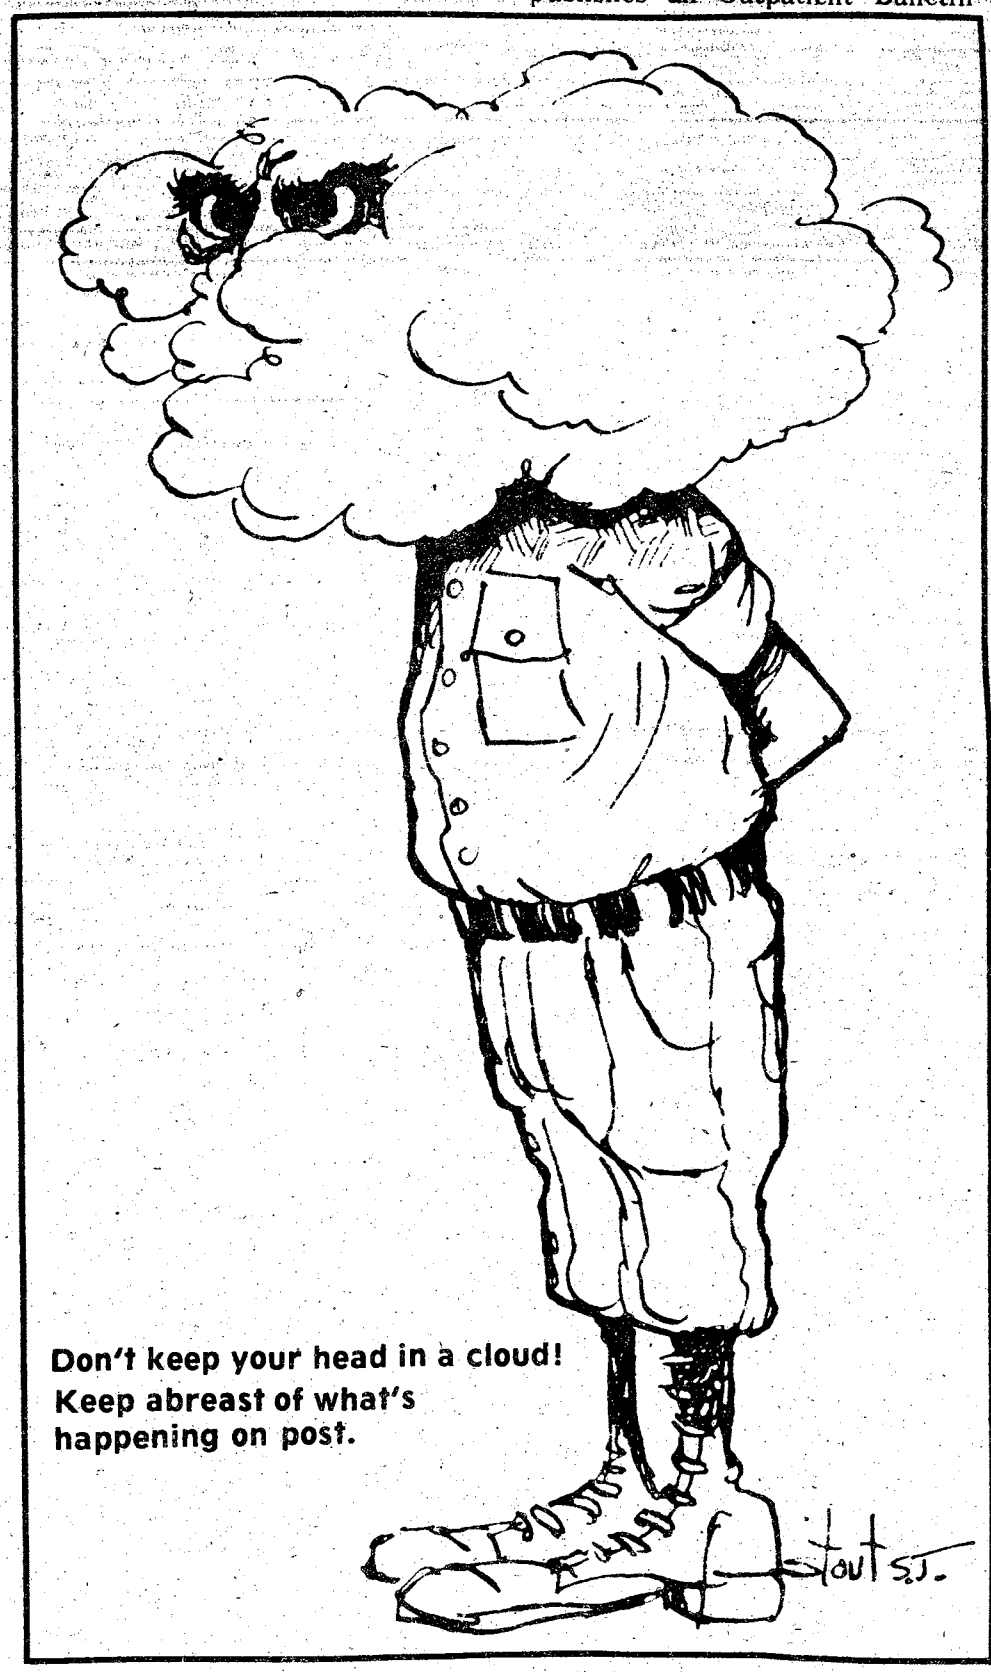
There are many agencies and activities on post who do all they can to keep the Benning soldier and his family abreast of items particularly important to the military community.

You don't believe that? Well, you're holding one of the best sources of information right now in your hot little hands . . . yep, the BAYONET.

The BAYONET is a newspaper written by, for and about the Benning community. Whether you're looking for information on training, holidays, uniform changes, unit sports or just plain area news, the BAYONET has it all.

There are things that happen daily, not that Delbert and his buddies care, that need to be brought out as soon as possible. The Benning Bulletin is a timely compilation of short bits of information which are distributed to each unit. It provides personnel with info on items for sale, details and leave.

But Delbert isn't going into his orderly room to ask for the BB. No, sir. His first sergeant is going to ask him about that decrepit alarm clock of his.



His first sergeant isn't a bad guy, though. He looks out for guys like Delbert who don't have the initiative to look out for themselves. He continually updates the unit bulletin board with a variety of news items of direct interest to the soldier.

The unit bulletin board is a 24-hour bank of valuable information. Off limits areas, training schedules, church service schedules, reenlistment options, education programs — all that and more are displayed on the bulletin board.

If you had to pick one source of information that's really geared towards the service member and his family, the Army Community Service's "Action Line," has to be right up there at the top of the list.

A quarterly publication, the "Action Line" is the military community's index to service and recreation on post. Projects, committees, awards and various postal information will be available in the upcoming publication.

In order to keep the community informed of the everchanging status of the medical activities available on Benning, the MEDDAC Patient Affairs Office publishes an Outpatient Bulletin each month. The bulletin provides the reader with the latest information concerning child, dental and retiree care in the Benning medical facilities. Bulletins are available in the hospital, commissary, PX and libraries on post.

As in any community, the library is always a hub of information. There, a person can browse through more than books, magazines and daily newspapers. There are also record albums and reference materials available.

As in any community, the local civilian newspapers are your direct line to what's happening in the world around you. The Columbus Enquirer and Ledger regularly run articles of interest to the Ft. Benning population.

There's another information source that enables the curious person to let his fingers do the walking — the post locator, 545-5216. These people work in conjunction with the post office and in a matter of seconds can tell you what unit one of your buddies is in on the post. Bear in mind that the post locator can't give you a person's duty phone, only his unit. Directory assistance, on post 113 or from off post 545-1011, can provide you with the phone number of his unit.

Old D.D.D. is also the kind of guy who doesn't like to read. He'll walk right under the huge sign at the Civilian Personnel Office, right in the door marked "private entrance" and ask the first person he sees if he's in the dental clinic. We're all guilty of just not reading signs. We seem to have gained an aversion from reading them unless we're driving a car.

Delbert D. Dimwit doesn't exist but many of the problems encountered in this story do. Don't be among those persons who "don't know" something simply because they didn't bother to find out. Your chain of command and many agencies on post have done their best to keep you informed.

If you really want to be informed, you will be. But don't fall back on the old excuse "I didn't know." And, top, don't accept that puny excuse!

10-8 on the warpost

By "HOSS" KACI 4615

Dear Hoss,

Last Sunday morning at about 2 a.m. I was monitoring channel eight when I heard an individual calling that he had been in an accident on Old Cusseta Road just past Upatoi Creek. He said his car was upside-down in a ditch. I called the Military Police and they notified the Harmony Church Fire Station and Martin Army Hospital.

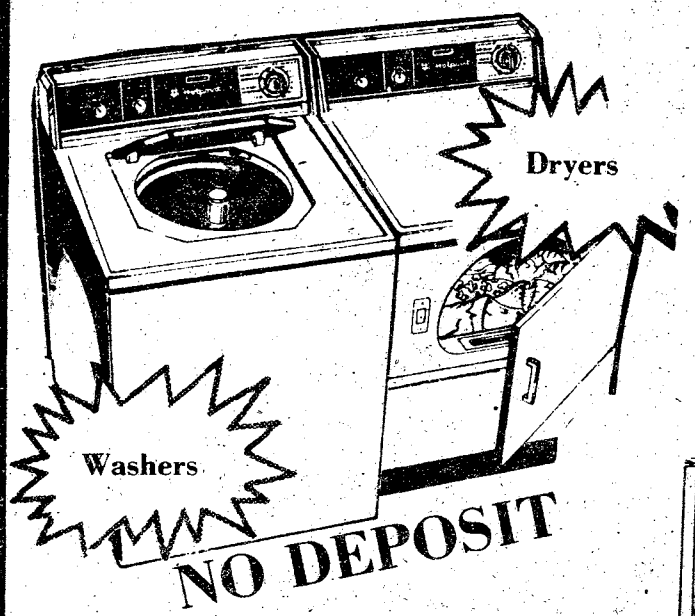
When the MPs arrived at the scene they couldn't find a thing and a search instituted. The search covered a radius of about a mile from the spot of the alleged accident and involved at various times some 45 people in 19 vehicles. It lasted from around 2 a.m. until about 5:30 a.m. and no evidence of an accident was ever found.

Hoss, this individual probably thinks it was very funny to have caused all those people to go running around in the middle of the night, so I'd like to address a few personal remarks to him through you.

You're not just playing around with Part 95 of the FCC Rules and Regulations, fellow; it is a violation of federal law to transmit a false distress signal. Title 47, Section 325(a) of the Wire and Communications Act of 1934 states: "No person within the jurisdiction of the United States shall knowingly utter or transmit, or cause to be uttered or transmitted, any false or fraudulent signal of distress, or communication related thereto . . ."

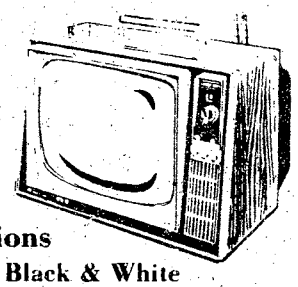
Should you be caught and convicted, you could be sentenced to from one to ten years in a federal prison and be fined up to $10,000.

A suit may be filed against you to recover the expenses (salaries, wear and tear, fuel cost, etc.) incurred by the agencies responding to your false signal. This case would include one ambulance with two attendants, two fire trucks with 12 firemen, one fire rescue vehicle with one person and four Military Police vehicles with eight MPs.



A suit may also be filed against you by any private citizen who incurred expenses in looking for your alleged accident. In your case, that would involve 22 people in 11 vehicles.

So, if you're very rich and have money to give away, be my guest and transmit another false accident report. You may get away with it for now, but sooner or later you'll be caught. And when you are, I hope I'm one of those who can sock it to you.



Thanks for the opportunity to sound off, Hoss.

MUST exercise to begin on Monday

By Marshall Jones

Personnel from the Army Medical Department Activity (MEDDAC) and elements of the 2d CS Hos (CSH), 34th Med Bn will join forces December 12-16 for a combined medical exercise. The exercise is designed to provide an orientation to field medical service for MEDDAC personnel and to maintain the combat readiness of the 2d CSH.

Elements of the 2nd CS Hop. MUST (Medical Unit Self-contained Transportable) unit will be set up adjacent to Martin Army Hospital the week of December 11.

The field hospital will have a 52-bed capacity, a fully operational lab, x-ray section, emergency room, pharmacy section and some dental capability. Patients will be admitted, treated and discharged at the 2d CSH.

Only minor surgical procedures will be conducted and any actual emergencies will be brought to the Martin Army Hospital emergency room. Only active duty military will be treated at the MUST unit during the exercise.

The MUST is 90 percent transportable by air and is made up of inflatable and expandable modules and a utility pack unit.

The inflatable modules, two of which will be utilized during the exercise, are 52 feet long, 18 feet wide and 15 feet high. They will be used as an emergency treatment room and as a 20-bed intensive care ward.

Four rigid expandable modules will be used. They include an x-ray room, fully equipped operating room, medical supply room, central material section and a laboratory.

The third component, and heart of the modular concept, is the utility pack assembly, of which two will be used. The pack is a turbine-driven multi-purpose unit that furnishes the hospital with electric power, hot and cold running water, suction, air conditioning and heat. It also houses the compressor used to inflate and maintain the rubber sections of the hospital. The ten-ton unit can supply all facilities required for four inflatable or six expandable modules.

The boxes used to store and transport the inflatable modules will perform secondary duties as a pharmacy and an office/dressing room throughout the week.

Additional medical wards, administrative offices, a dental clinic, kitchen and dining facility providing normal and special diets will be set up in tents.

Heavy duty construction is not required when the MUST hospital is erected. Personnel from the 2nd CS Hosp move an inflated section into position for further assembly during a recent exercise.

20,000 to be 'shot' by post medics

"It's not the shot that hurts, its the anticipation!" Sp4 Eve Corley, 1st AIT Bde prepares herself to receive her annual flu shot from Sp4 William King, 675th Med Det, 34th Med Bn. The annual immunization program will continue thru December 16 for Ft. Benning personnel.

Two units of the 34th Med Bn, the 675th and 676th Med Det (Dispensary) of the 2nd CS Hosp (CSH), joined forces this past week to form the Ft. Benning's Influenza Immunization Team.

Working under the direction of Maj. Lowell Dollander, chief nurse, 2nd CSH Hosp and SSgt. Lawrence Williams, NCOLC 675th Med Det, the Immunization Team has been giving flu shots to active duty and retired military, military dependents and Department of Army civilians. Approximately 20,000 people will have been immunized by December 16, the completion date.

Before the immunization program began, each medic underwent refresher training in cardiopulmonary resusitation (CPR) and in the use of the automatic jet injection appartus at Martin Army Hospital.

The only problem surfacing in the program so far is the reluctance of personnel to sit out the 20-minute observation period. This waiting time is essential, because of possible allergic reactions to the immunization.

Monday's weather set records, left destruction

By Bev Lockhart

Monday afternoon's temperature was a record high for the month of December. 84 degrees, according to Det 10, 5th Weather SQDN, an Air Force weather unit located at Lawson Army Airfield.

At 4:30 p.m. the weather was warm and breezy ... an unusually beautiful December day. Early in the evening, though, the weather took an abrupt change.

The Air Force Weather unit was ready for it. At approximately 11 a.m. they realized the atmosphere was extremely unstable and the radar was showing evidence of thunderstorms developing. Residents and personnel in the area were notified of the approaching storm. Aircraft was housed in hangers; all but one, that is ... the Air Force's own C141. It doesn't have a hanger.

When the power went out at 6 p.m. in various areas on post, Lawson Field wasn't spared. Although the partial commercial power kept the lights on at the airfield, it didn't supply enough to keep all of the weather equipment working properly.

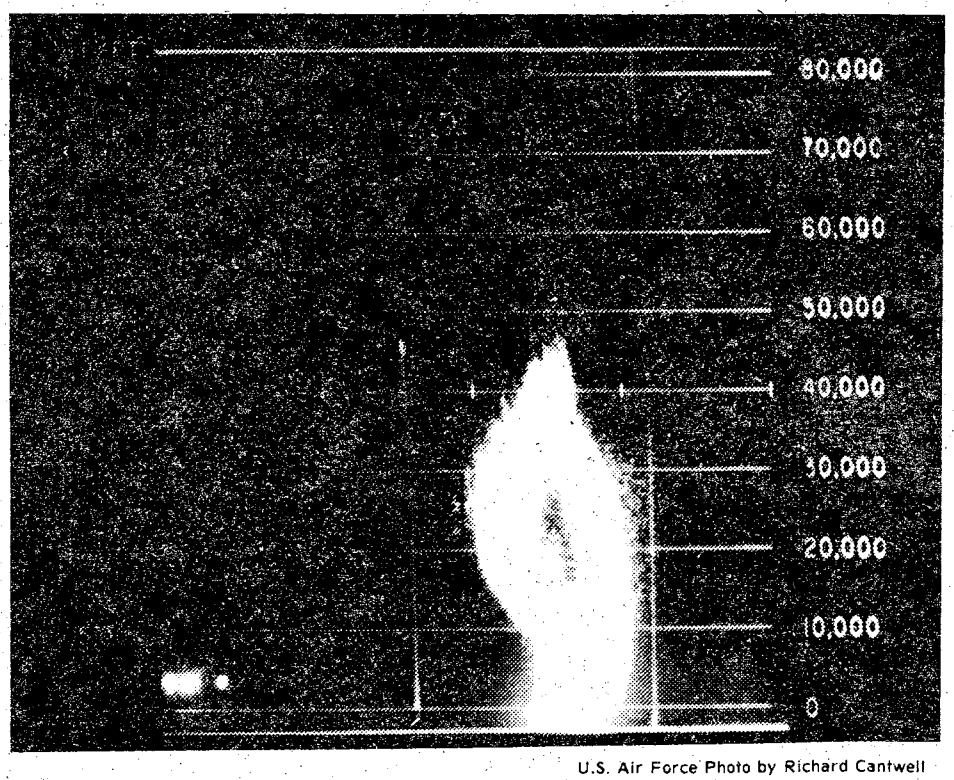
The Air Force personnel weren't working by candlelight, but they might as well have been. Without their equipment in proper working order, they had a hard time figuring out what course the storm was taking. Fortunately, radar works up to 200 nautical miles (although only 120 are really effective) and Ft. Rucker was used for back up assistance. By keeping in touch with the weather detachment there, Benning personnel were able to keep a pretty close eye on what was happening.

"Since the equipment was out we didn't know exactly what category we were in, but we do know that it wavered between blue and red," according to 2ndLt John Brown, forecaster and weather officer.

Category blue means severe thunderstorms with maximum wind gusts of 50 knots or greater; or hail with three quarters of an inch or greater diameter and locally damaging windstorms.

Category red means tornadoes, severe thunderstorms and locally damaging windstorms.

"We were looking for tornadoes. There weren't any watches in effect, but the conditions were favorable," according to Airman First Class Richard Cantwell.



Another record was set on Monday — winds were measured at 47 knots, the highest recorded for the month of December here.

Three storms passed through Benning between midnight Sunday and midnight Monday, bringing 2.28 inches of rain. The first storm hit early Monday morning. The second — and worst — hit about 6 p.m. It brought one and a quarter inch diameter hail which fell for 13 minutes. According to Maj. Terry Warner, commander of the Air Force weather unit, "That's the largest hail I've ever seen and I've been here for almost four years."

The third storm, striking a few hours after the second one, brought down half inch diameter hail for sixteen minutes. The total rainfall for the two evening storms was 1.48 inches.

It wasn't a tornado, but it left destruction in its wake. Capt. Edward Kelley, a pilot assigned to Aviation Section DPT, was dismayed when he received a phone call from the airfield operations officer bearing bad news.

His camper trailer, which Capt. Kelley had parked at the Lawson Army Airfield operations building, had blown over in the strong winds. The 28-foot Coachman 5th-wheel camper, weighing in at approximately 6,500 pounds, was overturned by the strong gusts between 6:15 and 6:30 p.m.

A radar picture taken at the Air Force Weather Station at Lawson Airfield of the thunderstorm which hit Ft. Benning Monday. It topped 40,000 feet. The grainy area between 45,000 and 58,000 feet above the thunderstorm represents hail spewing from the top. The black area in the center of the thunderstorm is the area of greatest intensity where hail is probably also present.

Teenager copes with fire, saves four children

Andrew Rudd, age 13, likes football.

He also likes to play chess, build mini-computers, read science manuals, science fiction and mystery books, and when he grows up, he wants to be a veterinarian.

He's a good listener, too. When post Assistant Fire Chief William Ashcraft visited Faith School, where Andy is a seventh-grader, during Fire Prevention Week, Andy listened to what he had to say.

"He told us how to 'cope' with fires," says Andy, the son of Sergeant First Class and Mrs. James E. Rudd.

And because Andy listened and knew how to cope, he was able to rescue four unattended children—all under age seven — who had started a fire in a paper-filled carton in the dining area of their family quarters on the evening of October 7.

Then he and a companion put out the fire.

Andy's had a lot of experience coping. He's been coping with a heart defect since birth — one that causes him to tire easily and become breathless when he exerts himself, and that requires him to go to Walter Reed Hospital, Washington, D.C., every six months for several days' of tests.

But Andy wasn't thinking about that the night he 'coped' with the fire. He and his family had just recently moved into their quarters at 228 Lavoie St., and Andy was outside talking to some new companions about football. He can't play football because of his heart, but he knows a lot about the game anyway.

Andrew Rudd, who led four small children to safety and put out a fire in their family living quarters, examines a fire-fighting ax held by post Fire Chief Samuel Morgan.

"We were talking about strategy," recalls Andy, "when one of the guys pointed to a house near us and said 'there's a fire in there!' "

At first, Andy thought they were just seeing the reflection of a charcoal grill in the window but then, "I saw a curtain fall down and I knew there really was a fire!" Forgetting he wasn't supposed to exert himself, he raced toward the house. Passing the window, he saw the four children alone so he burst through the front door and led them to safety. Then he and another boy, whose name he did not then know, tried to put out the fire.

"We couldn't get the fire in the box out," said Andy, "so I carried it outside and put it under the water faucet."

Andy had coped.

A few weeks later, Andy, his mother and his father, who is commander of HQs Co, NCOSI, were invited to Fire Station No. 1 where USAIC Chief of Staff Col.

AER offers education assistance for dependents

Is your son or daughter now attending college or planning to pursue post secondary level study in September of 1978? If the answer is yes and your children require financial assistance to attend school, now is the time to obtain further information and your application form in order to be considered for educational assistance for next year from Army Emergency Relief (AER).

Army Emergency Relief has an educational assistance program for dependent children of Army members — active, retired or deceased. Dependent sons and daughters of Army members, who will now have attained their 22nd birthday by August 1, 1978 and who need financial assistance to pursue undergraduate schooling, are eligible to apply for a loan or scholarship for the school year beginning September 1978.

The funds available for loans and scholarships are limited. The maximum amount for assistance for a school year is $1,-500 with a maximum total of $6,000 for four years. Need is the primary criterion for a scholarship and is considered also for a loan; in all cases merit and ability are evaluated in the review of applications by Headquarters, Army Emergency Reflief.

AER educational loans are made available under the United States Higher Education Act of 1965, as amended. These loans are administered by United Student Aid Funds, Inc., a private nonprofit-organization which manages and endorses the loans based upon AER approval and sponsorship. The loans are actually made by banking institutions which have agreed to participate with AER in this program

Eligibility for Academic Year 1978-1979

- Unmarried dependent sons and daughters of Army members — active, retired or deceased, who need financial assistance to pursue undergraduate schooling, or will not have reached their 22nd birthday before August 1, 1978.

Loan repayments

- Arrangements must be made within 3 months after graduation or other termination of studies.
- First monthly payment is due on first day of 11th month after leaving school.

Yule Logs and Greens Hanging

Tomorrow, Westville visitors are welcome to join in the hunt for the best Yule log. After hanging the greens, the Yule log will be set afire and Wassail and Yule log cake will be served.

Residences and businesses in Lumpkin will be decorated in Christmas finery according to the year they were built, ranging from 1835 to present.

Westville is open daily from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and on Sunday from 1 to 5 p.m. Admission is $2.50 for adults; $1.50 for senior citizens; and $1 for school-aged children. Westville is located just off U.S. 27 approximately 38 miles south of Columbus (near Lumpkin).

Christmas Accoustical Coffee House

A group of touring minstrels from post and the surrounding community will congregate at the Harmony Church Recreation Center tomorrow night at 8 to share the music of the holiday season with G.I.s.

Deck the Hall

If you can't make it to Westville to hang the greens, do it at the Kelley Hill Recreation Center instead. The center will be decking its halls with boughs of South Georgia pine and trimming the tree with garlands and holly tomorrow starting at 7:30 p.m.

Ecumenical Christmas Music Festival

The Ft. Benning Gospel Community Choir will present an Ecumenical Christmas Music Festival at the Music Center, Bldg. 229, Sunday at 3 p.m.

Lloyd School presented 'Treasures'

Larry R. Bowling, chairman, Frank R. Lloyd School PTA, presented Mr. M. Todd Yates, principal, and Mrs. Annie P. Adams, librarian, a complete set of the Treasures of Tutankhamun for the Lloyd School Library.

The set consists of a booklet, 40 slides and a 35-minute cassette tape narrated by Thomas Hoving, director of the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York City.

The slides display beautiful and representative objects from the tomb of the boy-king Tutankhamun (1334-1325 BC.). Included are statuettes, masks richly inlaid with jewels, and funeral jewelry and furniture.

The complete set was purchased with the Lloyd School PTA Funds. SFC Bowling, who made a recent trip to the Museum of Art in New Orleans, Louisiana where the exhibit is on loan from the Cairo Museum of Egypt, was responsible for obtaining the set for the Lloyd School.

Fire

Robert J. Corley, post Fire Marshal.

The letter praised Andy for his "willingness to take immediate action" and his "concern for humanity," and stated, "Your exemplary perfomance reflected total disregard for your own safety and welfare in the rescue of the children."

After the ceremony, post Fire Chief samuel Morgan commented, "The parents (of the children) were lucky. If it had been for Andy, there coul have EEN A REAL TRAGEDY. As it was, the children were unharmed, and total damage was less than $100."

Chief Morgan continued, "One of the things we stress over and over is the danger of leaving children unattended."

For Andy, the story has an additional happy ending. He was concerned because he wanted the boy who had helped him to receive recognition. Chief Morgan promised him that as soon as the boy was located, he too would receive a letter.

And so, on November 30, Michael Wilson, 20 Lavoie St. was also commended for the part he had played in helping Andy 'cope.'

Primary leadership course based on actual job requirements

A new primary leadership course (PLC) has been developed at Ft. Benjamin Harrison, Ind., for E4s and selected E5s in combat support and combat service support MOSs.

The PLC is based on actual job requirements for junior enlisted soldiers in leadership and supervisory skills. The PLC will be offered at NCO academies and at most major installations beginning in January, 1978. On a few installations, the PLC will not begin until February or March because of space limitations.

The NCOA courses will last three to four weeks depending on local policy and will allow students to learn to train, lead and supervise soldiers. The course will also emphasize NCO duties at the primary level. Other self-paced courses, specifically designed for extension use in armories and Reserve centers by National Guardsmen and Army Reservists, are being tested by selected USAR schools and National Guard units this fall and winter. Instructor training for Reserve Component instructors began last month. The most successful version will be offered to all Reserve Component soldiers late next year.

The PLC, developed by a team of training and leadership experts at the Army Administration Center, is equivalent to the primary non-commissioned officer course (PNCOC) for combat arms soldiers, PLC. is the first DA approved course being offered Armywide at NCO academies to combat support and combat service support troops under EPMS and is one of the first courses to be implemented simultaneously in Reserve Component units and the active Army.

It is expected that the equivalent combat arms primary NCO course (PCNOC) may soon become mandatory for promotion to E5 for the nine combat arms MOSs eligible to attend. The PLC is also under study for a similar mandatory promotion requirement, but a final decision is many months away. (ARNews)

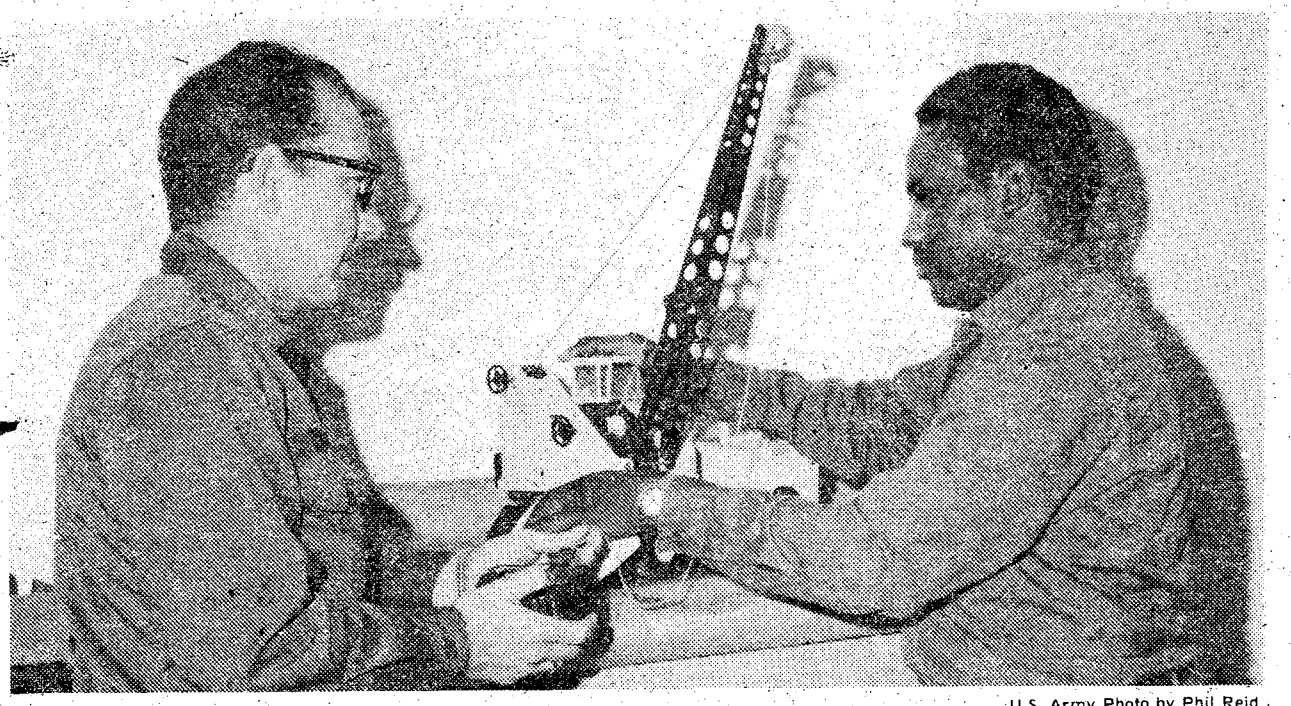
Signal platoon 'elves' help with Christmas project

By Joyce Walker

Santa Claus has opened a workshop on Kelley Hill under the direction of his chief helper, SSgt. Ralph Danford, 298th Sig Platoon, 197th Inf Bde.

Danford and other members of the 298th have been busy gathering and repairing toys for distribution to underprivileged children of active duty and retired military personnel in the local area at Christmastime.

This is the first year the 298th has coordinated with the Ft. Benning Army Community Services in its annual drive for repairable toys, Project Sav-A-Toy.



How did the 298th become involved? Danford modestly admits that the platoon's involvement originated with him. "Last year," he remembered, "some of the families in my neighborhood didn't have anything for Christmas. I thought that collecting and repairing toys for re-distribution would be a nice thing to do."

He has the wholehearted support of his wife, Nancy and the entire platoon. All the work of repairing broken parts, cleaning and painting the gathered toys is performed voluntarily by platoon members in their spare time during off-duty hours.

Renovation of bikes and dolls is done in Danford's home. Repairs include fixing flats, replacing wheels, pedals and harndle grips on the bikes. Money for repairs comes out of the sergeant's own pocket.

"Nancy helps out by crocheting and sewing dresses for dolls and cleaning the stuffed animals," says Danford.

Thus far, the 298th has one room in the company area filled with repariable toys donated from the community. Once rejuvenated to almost brand new condition, these toys will bring much joy to children who might otherwise not have much Christmas.

Cemetery final resting place for man's best friends

By Sue Davis

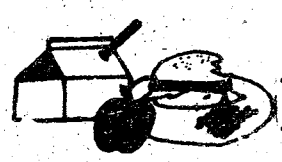
When your favorite pet dies, you don't have to worry about providing the animal with a decent "final resting place" because there is a pet cemetery here at Ft. Benning.

The burial cost is $15 which includes cremation and a headstone. According to Sp4 Karen Arnold, the NCOIC of the Veterinary Clinic Section, "there's an Army regulation stating that all pets buried in the pet graveyard be cremated." This method provides more space for other animals.

A plaque with the pet's name, dath of birth and death is optional. Plaques are not furnished by the Veterinary Clinic, but they may be purchased downtown.

"Last year a man found a dog that had been hit by a car and left alongside the road," Arnold mentioned. "He brought the dog in but we couldn't treat it, so he rushed the animal downtown. The dog his distemper, a broken pelvis, a couple of broken legs and was about half dead, but the man was willing to spend his last cent to have the animal nursed back to health."

"Unfortunately, the dog had to be put to sleep. He chose to have the animal buried in the pet graveyard. He included a plaque with this message inscribed: 'A friend although I did not know you.' "



If your pet has died, or it is in need of medical attention, call the Veterinary Clinic Section at 5454444, Monday through Friday between the hours of 8 and 11:30 a.m.

Post pet cemetery provides the Benning military community with a final resting for their beloved pets.

Tuesday morning the 478th Av Co uprighted the camper trailer with a rough terrain forklift. Damage to the camper was estimated at $6,700 according to Capt. Kelly.

The window on the passenger side of an automobile owned by Pat Jones, Co A, 197th Sp Bn, was broken when the biggest hail fell during the second storm.

Trees were uprooted all over post, but the biggest damage occurred on main post, where a tree fell across both lanes of Lumpkin Road, blocking traffic until Tuesday morning when engineers removed it.

School attendance means possible longer service

Some soldiers will be required to serve up to 36 months after having completed attendance at service schools, instead of the former 24-month obligation. The length of a service school or service schools and the service obligation required after course completion are: 30-32 weeks, 25 months; 33-36, 26; 37-40 27; 41-45 28; 46-50, 29; 51-55, 30; 56-60, 31; 61-65, 32; 66-70, 33; 71-75, 34; 76-80, 35. Courses running 81 or more weeks will require the full service obligation of 36 months.

HELP! STOP CRIME!

WARNING

Property protected by permanent marking . . .

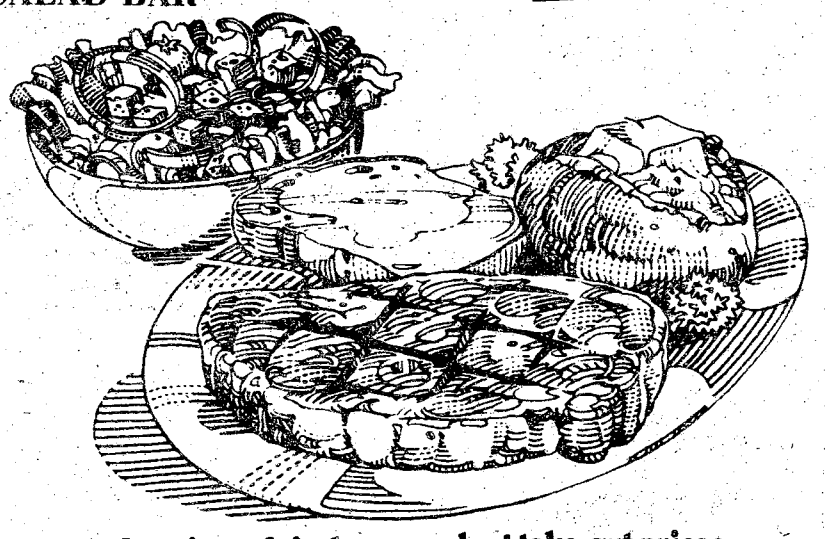
OPERATION IDENTIFICATION

One of the most pressing problems facing the Military Police and other law enforcement agencies today is the identification of stolen property. A large percentage of stolen property is never recovered and the individual(s) responsible for the theft is not apprehended, due to the victim being unable to positively identify the stolen property.

Operation Identification, a part of the Provost Marshal Crime Prevention Program, is a method in which an individual's property is marked with an engraver using the social security number as the identifying mark. Common items to mark are television sets, stereo equipment, appliances, cameras, watches, and etc.

Operation Identification is effective, it makes stolen property easy to identify and makes it difficult for a criminal to dispose of it. When the perpetrator is caught with this marked property in his possession it becomes solid evidence of possession of stolen property. Operation Identification assists Law Enforcement in contacting you when property is recovered and plays an important part in the speedy return of your property.



The Military Police Crime Prevention Section will mark your Christmas gift items at the entrance to the Main Post Exchange every Friday and Saturday until Christmas We Hope you will participate in OPERATION IDENTIFICATION."

Sidle speaks at AUSA fall membership meeting

The annual fall membership meeting of the Columbus-Phenix City-Ft. Benning chapter of the Association of the U.S. Army (AUSA) was held Tuesday night at the Ft. Benning Officers' Supper Club.

Over 300 AUSA members attended the dinner banquet and later listened to Maj Gen. (Ret.) Winant Sidle, director of regional affairs for the AUSA, speak on the future of military benefits. MajGen. Sidle's topic reflects the concern felt by many individuals associated with the military who feel their benefits are being threatened by federal legislation.

This increasing concern is a possible factor in the recent hike in membership in the local AUSA chapter. Nationwide, the AUSA has over 100,000 members and the local chapter alone boosted its membership from less than 2,000 to more than 3,500 in just the last two months.

The AUSA's widely publicized paper, "A Bill of Rights for Those Who Serve" was explained by MajGen. Sidle as being the only formal proposal for restructuring military compensation that has been presented in the last two years.

The general felt the future of military benefits will be largely determined by the President's Commission on Military Pay and Compensation, which is due to hold an open hearing in the Columbus College Fine Arts Auditorium on Monday. The Commission will be accepting testimonies from servicemembers, dependents and retirees about their feelings on the present military pay and benefit system. Based on the testimonies they receive during this visit, the commission will submit a report to President Carter by early 1978.

MajGen. Sidle urged everyone concerned by the issues to make every effort to present their views at the Commission's hearing.

Vets should check on medical help prior to overseas travel

Veterans traveling overseas may do themselves a favor by checking with the Veterans Administration about limits on the availability of veterans benefits abroad.

Certain VA benefits cannot be provided in foreign countries and informed veterans will be able to plan more wisely, VA counselors advise.

For example, a veteran with a military disability should obtain a statement to that effect from the VA office which has his medical records.

This statement will entitle the veteran to paid emergency hospitalization when it and a proper application for medical benefits is presented to the United States embassy or consular office in the foreign country. The application should be made within 72 hours of need, VA explained.

Overseas care for veterans with nonservice-connected disabilities is available only at Veterans Memorial Hospital in Manila.

As is the case in the U.S., those veterans will be admitted to the Manila hospital only on a space available basis and only if they are unable to afford other hospitalization, VA said.

Certain VA education benefits are available in some overseas areas to eligible veterans, their spouses and children. The type and availability of these benefits should be ascertained before traveling or moving abroad.

While compensation and pension checks will be mailed to most overseas locations, veterans cannot obtain GI home loans for overseas residences, VA said.

Full information may be obtained at the Veterans Administration Regional Office F30 Peachtree St NE, Atlanta or call 324-6646.

43rd Engrs meet challenge, deadline in reconstruction of old building

One of the largest building relocation projects on Ft. Benning is nearing completion under the direction of engineers from the 43rd Engr Bn.

The project, located at the USAIC Ammunition Supply Point, involves the reconstruction of a fabricated metal building which had previously been dismantled and moved piece-by-piece to its new location. According to Capt. Stephen L. Baber, commander of Co D, 43rd Engr Bn, his men have been working 12 to 15 hours a day, six days a week in order to meet their construction deadline.

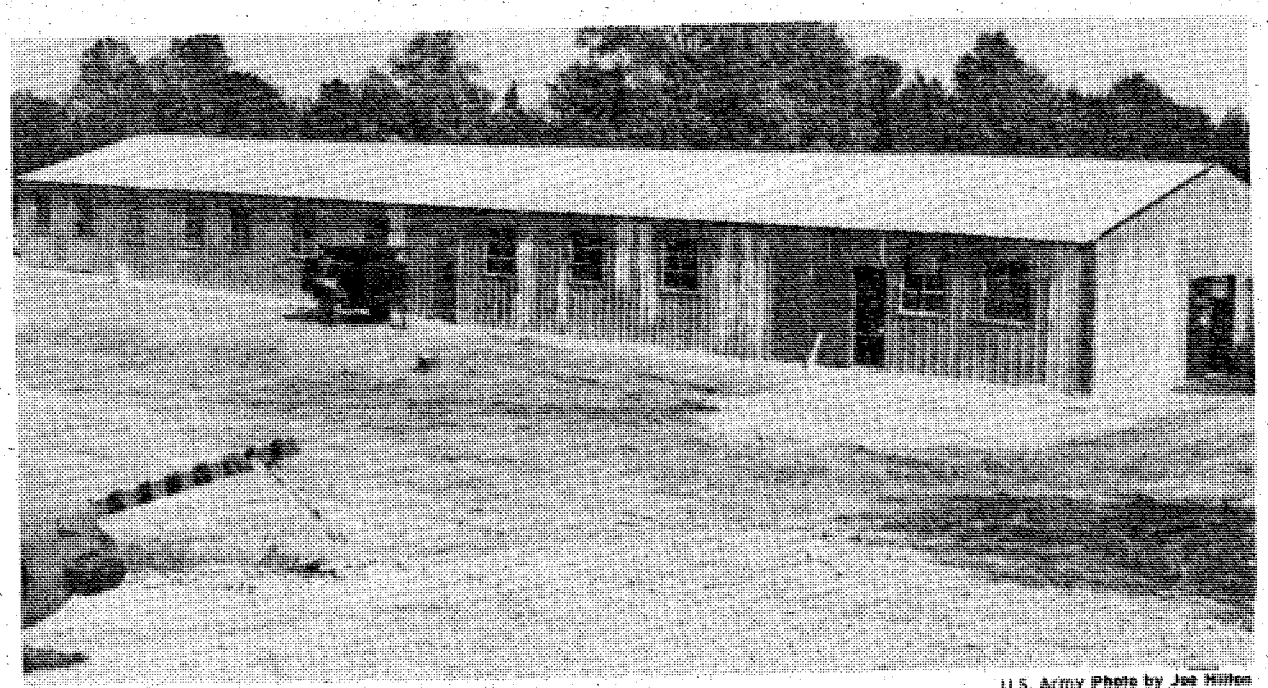
SFC Dudney Bennett places a piece of sheet metal on the exterior of the building.

"The men are doing a fantastic job," said 2ndLt. Andrew Terrill, project officer. "They're working long, hard hours. And despite the hardships, they're meeting the December 23 completion deadline."



When completed, the new structure will provide personnel of the Ammunition Supply Point a more adequate working area.

According to engineering officials; carpenters, plumbers, electricians and masons, as well as the Earthmoving Platoon of Co D are involved in the reconstruction.

The renovation of the structure is expected to save the Army money over the purchase price of a new building.

Besides being a moneysaver, the relocation project provides the engineering personnel with valuable building experience in a variety of career fields.

When completed later this month, the new building will house the operations of the Ammunition Supply Point.

NCOWC Gift Wrapping Booth

These are busy days for the NCO Wives who are volunteering their time and efforts at the gift wrapping booth. So far, the booth in the PX Mall has been attracting many customers in the military community.

The wrapping paper, ribbon and decorations are beautiful this year. In addition, you can make your own selection on how you want your Christmas package decorated. The ladies will be happy to wrap and create a lovely package for your loved ones.

Each year the proceeds of this tremendous project are specifically set aside for the scholarship fund.

The booth opened officially on November 26 and will continue each day until December 24. The hours of operation will be the same as the PX hours.

Diana Naverrette, 1st vice-president of the NCO Wives Club is heading up the booth assisted by Mary Wildman, 2nd vice-president.

Members not already scheduled to help with this activity should call either 561-3370 or 689-0885.

Craft shop eases Xmas rush tension

Ceramic items or ornaments make perfect Christmas gifts. Materials and instructions are available at the Arts and Crafts Center (Bldg 2783).

Christmas is just around the corner and now is the time to think about preparing presents and Christmas leave. The Arts and Crafts Center is offering facilities and instruction to make this Christmas rush simpler.

Get in the Christmas spirit by creating your own gifts for family and friends at the Arts and Crafts Center, Bldg 2783.

Instructors will be available to assist individuals interested in making candles. The molds are available and materials are on sale at the sales counter. Wax crayons are used to make the candles and patrons may bring their own crayons.

If ceramics is your thing, the ceramics shop has a good selection of molds. Instructors Ed Sparks and Ramon Hoffman will be on hand to give instructions on glazing and pouring the decorations.

The ceramic shop has molds for Christmas trees and stars, lights and electrical connections for the trees can be purchased at the sales counter.

The leather shop offers you the opportunity to create hats, belts and purses for the favorites at the top of your list.

Save money on printing up photos of the holidays by doing them yourselves at the shop's photo lab. Paper and chemicals are available for purchase at the sales counter. Black and White and Color film can be printed.

When preparing to disembark on leave, drop by Craft Shop No. 8 on main post or Craft Shop No. 6 on Kelley Hill and have the auto checked out. Save money and time by doing it yourself. Having this done before leaving may ensure personal safety.

For more information on operating hours, building locations and services call the Craft Center at 545-3677 or 544-4624. The Automotive Craft shop numbers are 545-2564 or 544-1467.

German liaison likes Benning's wide open spaces

By Julie Casey

The German liaison officer at Ft. Benning, LtCol. Enst Lissinna describes Benning as "a clean and lush military reservation."

"I wish we had such an excellent training area for our troops," he continues. "The training areas here are so limitless and vast, with so many chances for live-firing exercises."

After two and a half years here, Lissinna described his duties as first, to take care of the mutual exchange of information between the German and U.S. infantry, including information on the areas of tactics, techniques, leadership, weapons and technical combat methods. Second and thirdly, he gives lectures to different departments in the Infantry School and troops heading for Germany, and acts as the "military attachee" for this area.

As a young boy in Germany, Lissinna fled with his parents from their farm in East Prussia in 1944 when the Russians overran Germany at the end of World War II.

"For me it (the war) was a difficult situation," he said. "When we had to flee the Russians I was ten years old. I remember everything that happened.

"For the first ten years, we used our own horses, and I had been riding since the age of 5," he said remembering, "finding everything you need, and the countryside over there, hot in the summer, steamy cold in the winter. You live like that for the first ten years and then you have to flee, leaving all your property."

small town outside of Hamburg. Everything was destroyed from the bombings and food was scarce. All the schools that remained were being used as hospitals to care for wounded soldiers, according to Lissinna.

Lissinna also commented on how much American foreign aid helped put Germany back on its feet after the war.

His 23 years in the service began in 1954. He was commissioned as an officer cadet from the German Border Guard in 1956.

"Everyone knew the German forces were going to be formed again ," he said explaining, "That is why I started out in the German Border Guard. That is a bit of a strange beginning, but it is explained a bit by the political situation at that time."

From 1960-64 he served as a company commander in a Mechanized Infantry Battalion. Then in 1971 he became the battalion commander of the Pazgren Lehr Battalion 92 for four and a half years.

During his command, the battalion was first to be equipped with the new German Infantry Fighting Vehicle (IFV "Marder"). His battalion was especially used for training demonstrations and test programs in the Armor Combat Arms School.

After his four year tour here, Colonel Lissinna hopes to return, with his wife Rosemarie and their two children, to Germany and assume the position of Deputy Commander of a Brigade, and work on the "Program Partnership" between the U.S. Army and German forces.

LtCol. Ernst Lissinna, German Liaison Officer

Policy changes for retirees

Soldiers scheduled to retire and E9s serving overseas are affected by recent changes in personnel policy. Soldiers who receive assignment instructions for an unaccompanied overseas tour on or after January 1, 1978 will be required to serve at least five-sixths or 12 months of the tour, whichever is longer, before retiring. Soldiers currently serving overseas or with orders before January 1are not affected by the change.

Also effective January 1 is a requirement for E9s serving overseas to have retirement date.

Military Personnel Center has also established a system of providing written acknowledgment of alerts for assignments for soldiers with 19½ years' service. The system provides for application for retirement in lieu of reassgnment.

have only three obstetricians assigned and they will only be able to care for a limited number of patients. Any approach that is taken at that time will have to be flexible and depends upon the number of physicians assigned," Dr. Kjellstorm.

Costs to dependents of active duty military personnel are expected to rise only slightly under the CHAMPUS program, averaging about twenty-five dollars compared to military medical costs of about fifteen dollars. For retirees, CHAMPUS will pay 75 percent of reasonable charges incurred.

CHAMPUS guidelines for maternity care differ from other forms of medical services. CHAMPUS maternity care benefits start when a woman becomes pregnant and may continue through the end of the sixth week after termination of the pregnancy.

Each patient requiring maternity care under the CHAMPUS program must visit the CHAMPUS representative, Martin Army Hospital, located in the Patient Administration Division next to the main lobby. A CHAMPUS fact sheet will be given to all maternity patients to assist in making the transition to a civilian physician as "painless as possible," says hospital officials. hospital officials.

Failure to visit the CHAMPUS office before receiving care may cause a loss of benefits under the program, warn officials.

According to a hospital spokesman, the shortage of OB-GYN physicians is a problem now under study by Army officials. For the present, full gynecological services will be available, along with "well-baby" care. Additionally, prescriptions obtained from civilian physicians under CHAMPUS will be filled at the Martin Army Hospital pharmacy whenever possible.

If you're going to drink and drive ...

December marks the start of the winter holiday season — for many, a season of companionship, parties, and good cheer. However, all too often, the good cheer that is IMBIBED at a friend's home sets the stage for tragedy on the highway.

Half of all traffic fatalities are alcohol-related. That makes alcohol the largest single contributing factor in the traffic death picture.

Ideally, motorists who have to drive should not drink, and motorists who intend to drink should not plan to drive. But from a practical standpoint, many motorists will drink and drive. Consequently, the most realistic defense motorists can take against alcohol-related traffic accidents is to understand what alcohol is and what effect it has on them and to know their limitations and stay within them.

Depressant

Alcohol is a drug that affects the central nervous system of the user. Although its exhilarating effect leads many people to believe that it is a stimulant, it is actually a depressant that acts much like an anesthetic to slow the body's reactions and dull the user's thought processes. That dulling leads many drinkers to forsake their normal caution, and given many drivers a false sense of condidence behind the wheel.

Unlike most drugs that are taken orally, alcohol doesn't need to be digested in the stomach. It is absorbed directly into the bloodstream where it is carried to all parts of the body. The percentage of alcohol in the blood determines the degree of impairment.

.10 percent

In most states, a driver is presumed to be intoxicated when his blood contains .10 per cent or more alcohol. To get to that level, most of us would have to drink five to six ounces of 90-proof liquor in an hour. But actually, driving ability starts to suffer and the driver's chance of having an accident greatly increases well before he reaches the legal limit.

Traffic statistics show increased accident probability at .04 per cent alcohol content in the blood. For most drivers, that percentage would represent 1½ to 2½ drinks in an hour. By the time a driver gets to the legal limit, he is at least six times as likely to have an accident as when he was sober.

The motorist's key to staying in control of his alcohol intake and his driving skills lies in spacing drinks.

Wait an hour

Alcohol is eliminated from the body at the rate of above .018 per cent an hour. That means the body can get rid of the alcohol contained in an average drink in about one hour, and a driver should wait an hour for every drink he takes before he gets behind the wheel.

Once you've become intoxicated, there is no quick remedy to sober up. Black coffee, cold showers and fresh air won't help — they'll only make you a more wide-awake drunk.

Another important factor in staying sober has to do with eating a hearty meal before drinking. It's a fallacy to think that you can have a few drinks then sit down to a big meal and get up without feeling any effects of the alcohol. By the time you sit down to dinner, the alcohol will already have been absorbed into your bloodstream. But if you eat before you start drinking, the food in your stomach will absorb the alcohol and it will be released into your bloodstream more slowly, as the food is digested.

For example, 160-pound man would have to drink ten average drinks in an hour after eating a full meal to reach a blood-alcohol concentration of .15 per cent within two hours after eating. The same man could reach the same state of intoxication with one-third less alcohol if he drank on an empty stomach. Starchy foods, like bread and potatoes, are especially effective in absorbing alcohol.

Beware of mixed drink

Some drinks, like Martinis and Manhattans, pack nearly twice the alcoholic punch of normal drinks because another alcoholic beverage, like vermouth, is mixed with the basic liquor. Drinks made with carbonated beverages can have even more immediate intoxicating effect than straight liquor because the carbonation speeds the absorption of alcohol into the blood.

The only way you can guarantee that you'll be able to drive home safely is to take precautions to keep from becoming intoxicated in the first place. Either plan not to drink, or eat before drinking and space your drinks to be sure that you won't be under the influence of alcohol by the time you have to drive.

Those are the only reasonable alternatives that a driver can choose from to make sure that his happy holiday season will be followed by another one.

Getting more than you bargained for?

"In only six days I lost four inches off my waist and seven pounds of weight."

"In only five weeks I added two inches to my bust line."

"Two full inches in the first three days!"

These are the kinds of testimonials used in magazine, newspaper, radio and television ads, promising new shapes, new looks and new happiness to those who buy the preparation, the device or the prescribed program of action. The promoters of such products claim they can develop the bust, shape the legs, wipe out double chins, build muscles, eradicate wrinkles or in some other way enhance beauty or desirability.

Often, such devices or treatments are nothing more than money-making schemes for their promoters. The results they produce are questionable, and some are hazardous to health.

To understand how these products can be legally promoted to the public, it is necessary to understand something of the laws covering their regulation. If the product is a drug, the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) can require proof under the Food, Drug and Cosmetic (FD&C) Act that it is safe and effective before it is put on the market. But if the product is a device, FDA has no authority to require pre-marketing proof of safety or effectiveness.

If a product already on the market is a hazard to health, FDA can request the manufacturer or distributor to remove it from the market voluntarily, or FDA can resort to legal actions, including seizure of the product. In such cases, FDA must prove that the device is adulterated or misbranded, and that the product is dangerous to health when used in the dosage, manner, frequency or duration prescribed, recommended or suggested in the labeling.

Although FDA has taken legal actions resulting in the removal of many hazardous products, most of the devices on the market have never been the subject of court proceedings, and new devices appear on the scene continually. Before buying, it is up to the consumer to judge the safety or effectiveness of such items.

When it comes to any treatment, device, program or product being promoted to reshape the body in any way, buyers should beware. They should be especially leery of products or treatments that promise amazing reults in a very short time. the human body cannot be reshaped overnight.

—VA Q&A—

Q — I served on active duty for two months. Am I eligible for admission to a Veteras Administration hospital?

A — A veteran who has served at least one day of active duty other than for training purposes, who was discharged under conditions other than dishonorable, is eligible for VA hospital care.

Q — I am training under vocational rehabilitation. My instructor says I need additional tools. Will the VA pay for them?

A — All books, equipment and supplies needed by all students taking the same course will be furnished to a disabled veteran pursuing a course under vocational rehabilitation.

SALES MANAGER

We represent General Development Corp., listed on New York, N.Y. stock exchange with assets exceeding $400 million.

We are looking for a real estate professional, preferably retired military to head up our Columbus organization. The earnings are substantial, as we will share profits on a 50/50 basis with the right individual.

We have developed a unique pre-retirement program, that now makes owning a home in glorious Florida affordable to most everyone. For many, our rental program even covers the ful cost of monthly mortgage payments.

This is a lifetime career as over 20,000 homes have been built to date in our community.

For confidential interview call Mr. J. J. Medney at Sheraton-Ralston in Columbus at 322-2522 on December 12th, 13th, and 14th.

THE BAYONET

Vol. 37, No. 14 — "A Ledger-Enquirer Newspaper published in the Interest of the Personnel of Fort Benning" — Dec. 16 - 22, 1977

Tree lighting ceremony today

The official lighting of Ft. Benning's Christmas Tree will be held today in front of Infantry Hall at 4:30 p.m.

The public is cordially invited to attend and participate in the ceremony which will include Christmas music provided by the 283rd Army Band and caroling led by the Infantry Chorus.

MajGen. William J. Livsey will conclude the 15 minute ceremony with a few remarks and the lighting of the tree.

Trees available to post residents

Nine reservation areas have been designated by the Ft. Benning Facilities Engineer for post residents to cut down their own Christmas trees next Tuesday.

Individuals desiring to cut down trees must obtain clearance from either the PMO, Bldg 215 or the Range Control Office, Bldg 2621 or the Fish and Wildlife Office, Bldg 5884 prior to entering the areas. Maps are posted in each office showing the location and access roads open to vehicular traffic.

MPs offer take home service

Courtesy Transportation will again be offered by the Military Police during the holiday season.

The service is a "take-home" policy instituted last year to help drivers who have consumed too much alcohol to drive themselves home safely.

The service can be obtained by calling the MP desk at 545-5222 and asking for transportation to one's quarters. The only restrictions are that the individual must have driven a car, is at an on-post facility, and is returning to post quarters.

The Courtesy Transportation is confidential and can save the drinker the possibility of becoming involved in an accident or being charged with Driving While Intoxicated (DWI).

The Military Police will also provide a wrecker to haul away cars that have broken down on post. The car will be towed to either the individual's company or quarters. For additional information call 544-4343.

A message from the commander

I have been here several months now. It is time to tell all of you at Fort Benning—soldiers and civilians— how much I appreciate the superb job you are doing. Things are going very well.

I have said since I came here that what we must do is to give the citizens of this country every bit of combat readiness that we can for the taxpayer's dollar. This "readiness" takes many forms—in the Infantry School; in the FORSCOM units, the 197th Infantry Brigade, the 36th Engineer Group, the 34th Medical Battalion, and in the AIT Brigade. I think we are doing okay in this regard, but we must do better.

I have just finished reviewing our next year's budget. I need all of your help if we are to perform our mission in the face of austere resources. We are in "crunch" times. Every saving will count! There are many things that we can all do. Just a few follow:

First, we are using too much energy at Fort Benning. Utilities costs are skyrocketing. If you all will help, we can cut costs considerably. Turn out lights! There are too many on—both night and day. We will not sacrifice security in this regard but there is much needless waste. It is not intentional—we just must think about it and turn off those lights we don't need.

Fuel costs are high. Everyone must cooperate to keep thermostats at a bare minimum. Sweaters should be the rule rather than the exception. Energy must be off in unused areas! I am talking about troop billets, offices, work areas and family quarters. We have 4000 plus family quarters on post. Here is a great chance for a cooperative effort to make a great contribution to our savings.

Fort Benning is a beautiful post. I deeply appreciate all your individual efforts to keep it that way and indeed to improve it. We can, however, do better with the police of our post. It takes time and money to pick up litter. Many times soldiers are used for this task. This is unproductive time—time that could be spent on mission accomplishment or at home with the family or doing those things we enjoy. So, I challenge us all to "stamp out police call." If we don't litter, we will not waste time and money to pick it up. I hope all of you as citizens here will consider it a personal affront to see beer and pop cans, paper cups and hamburger wrappers on our grounds. I know you will help with this simple way of conserving resources and at the same time keep our post beautiful.

We have made considerable progress in reducing our crime rate — ANY crime is too much. I promise we will continue to come down hard on offenders and will also continue our efforts at prevention. You can help by securing your property and reporting immediately when you suspect something may be amiss.

There are many other things I could talk about and will from time to time. I just wanted to mention a few points now and "thank you" for all you are doing.

What I see generally—I like. The best thing that I see is a positive attitude. This, I consider essential. Things will just get better if we continue this postive approach. And I have said from the first that I have never found hard work and having a good time mutally exclusive.

So "thank you" again. Let's all do better and have fun while we are doing it. And do have a most happy and joyful holiday season.

Report due March 15

Commission hearings provide input to President

By Bev Lockhart

When the President's Commission on Military Compensation held its public hearing for the Columbus-Phenix City-Ft. Benning area Monday, the 20 individuals chosen by the Commission to testify publicly were not the only people testifying.

The Fine Arts Hall at Columbus College was nearly filled to capacity, its lobby a hubbub of informal testimonies. Officers, NCOs and first termers, along with dependents and civilians from the community found themselves caught up in heated arguments and calm discussions over the testimonies given before the Commission.

The news media was in attendance, some with video cameras perched upon their shoulders, a few with only pen and paper in hand, and still others toting cameras, shutters snapping incessantly.

The public hearing was last, but certainly not least, on the Commission's agenda during its visit to the area.

The three Commission members and their staff of nine began their day at 7:15 a.m. with breakfast at the Follow Me Dining Facility where they talked informally with officer and NCO students. After breakfast, they were escorted to Infantry Hall where MajGen. William J. Livsey welcomed them to Ft. Benning.

They then split up into five groups and went to various units on post where they had the opportunity to talk to soldiers on an individual and group basis. The groups also visited military families residing both on and off post.

Providing an incentive for an NCO to retire after 30 years in the service instead of just 20 is one of the issues the Commission was exploring. SFC David Carpentier, HHC, 36th Engr Gp, told the Commission he'd be willing to stay in for an extra ten years if he was given a cash bonus. "I'd be willing to sign some type of contract, even," Carpentier told the Commission. The way it stands now, people don't want to stay in for 30 years because the job market gets tougher as you get older.

There's no way I could live off my retirement alone," he continued, I'd have to start another career, which would be very hard at age 47, whereas at 37 I'd have a better chance. Employers just aren't interested in hiring someone at that age."

Carpentier also noted that a cash bonus would tempt him to stay in, get his bills paid off and kind of "get my life in order." He also pointed out that soldiers retiring after 30 years get 75 percent of their salary in retirement instead of 50 percent after 20 years.

News in brief

Special Medicare ends for some CHAMPUS eligibles

Individuals who will lose their CHAMPUS eligibility at the end of this year because of recent decisions about Medicare coverage have until December 31 to sign up for Medicare's supplemental medical insurance (Part B) during a special enrollment period.

The following persons are eligible to sign up for Part B during this special enrollment period:

- persons under age 65 and older who are entitled to Medicare's hospital insurance on the basis of their wives' employment, but not on the basis of their own employment.

NOTE: This reminder does not apply to dependents of active duty service-members because they are not affected by the recent decisions about Medicare coverage.)

Affected individuals will lose their eligibility for all CHAMPUS benefits at the end of the year even if they do not elect to enroll for Medicare's Part B during the special period.

To take advantage of the special enrollment period, call or visit a local Security Administration office. A retiree's or dependent's Uniformed Service Identification Card is required to establish eligibility for the special enrollment period.

Code of Conduct changed

The Code of Conduct, governing service-members while prisoners-of-war (PW), and the Manual for Courts-Martial have been amended by two executive orders signed by the President on November 3.

Article V of the Code has been changed to read, in part, "I am required to give name, rank, service number, and date of birth." Previously, this section read, "I am bound to give only name, rank, service number, and date of birth."

Also in regard to wartime situations, a second Executive Order established the senior ranking individual of any Armed Service (except for medical officers of chaplains) in a prison camp as the lawful superior of all lower-ranking personnel, regardless of branch of Service. This amends the current Courts-Martial Manual and the Uniform Code of Military Justice (Chapter 47 of Title 10, U.S. Code) which did not specifically delineate the senior ranking individual in a joint Service prisoner situation.

A Department of Defense Review Committee for the Code of Conduct, chartered in March 1976, recommended changes to the President after conducting some 22 meetings and hearing testimony from 50 individuals.

The Committee felt the article of the Code about disclosure of information to a captor should be changed for increased clarity; the wording in the Courts-Martial Manual needed strengthening in regard to the senior ranking PW; and Code of Conduct training programs in the military Services should be made uniform and consistent.

Holiday safety message

The approaching holiday season will be spoiled for many Americans by injuries and deaths caused by accidents which could have been prevented.

To exclude Fort Benning personnel from the holiday accident toll, I urge each of you to recognize and fully appreciate the increased accident potential, especially in highway driving, and take appropriate safety precautions. Your safety consciousness can mean happy holidays for yourself, your families and friends.

If you must drive, remember to do it defensively and with your seat belts fastened. Expect the unexpected, and be prepared to act quickly to avoid an accident.

I wish each and everyone of you a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year. Enjoy yourselves, play it safe and return alive and well.

Commission

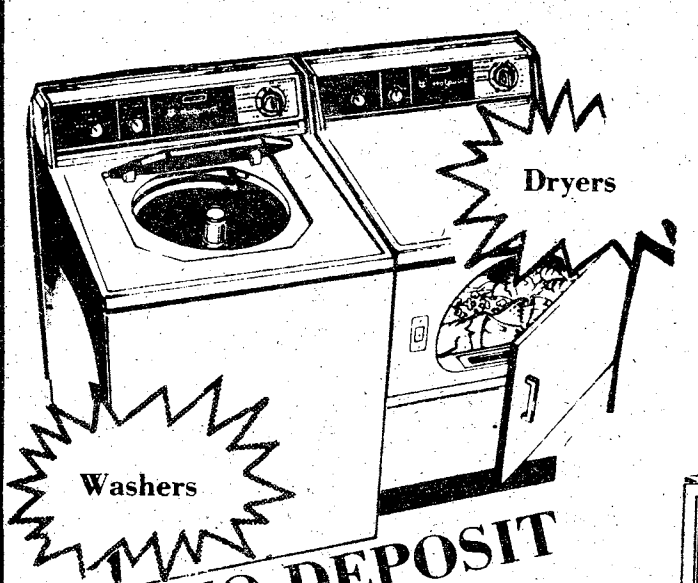
After lunch in the units, the Commission proceeded to the Columbus College auditorium where the public hearing began at 1 p.m. sharp.

Testimonies heard at the formal hearing were chosen from 57 written transcripts given to the Commission. Although the Commission could hear a maximum of only 20 persons at the open hearing, topics covered were representative of the entire group of testimonies. Whether or not they were aired at the public hearing, all testimonies were forwarded to Washington, D.C. where they will be reviewed again, according to project officer Mr. Norman L. Williamson, Personnel Services Division, DPCA.

Retirement and Medical benefits were two areas of primary interest on the part of both active duty and retired military, but testimonies ran from the Cost of PCS Moves to Marriages of Convenience.

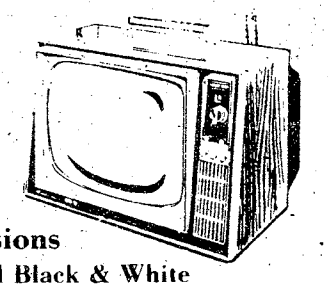
According to Col. Richard W. McKee, who spoke on the Military Compensation Effect on Quality Soldiers, the slogan "The Army Takes Care of Its Own" is no longer as valid as it once was. He pointed out that soldiers no longer feel that they can depend totally on the Army to take care of them and their dependents.

A dependent wife, Mrs. Maureen Pineau, testified on the problems she had encountered with CHAMPUS and medical care from Martin Army Hospital. She gave the Commission three possible alternatives to the current military medical benefits:



- A substantial increase in base pay giving the servicemember the opportunity to buy a civilian health care plan suitable to the needs of his family, and at the same time maintaining the existing medical facilities for active duty only.
- Maintenance of Army facilities in overseas areas for both active duty and dependents, if need be, with charges levied on dependents on a cost only basis.
- A cost sharing program between the government and the servicemember on a payroll deduction basis.

Later, LtCol. J. Varnado, Chief of Family Practice Residency, MAH, told the Commission, "The inability for the physician to achieve professional satisfaction is secondary to the physician shortage." Professional satisfaction is their main complaint, with pay a close second, according to Varnado. He suggested equal pay for equal work, pointing out that physicians shy away from the military due to the vast difference between military and civilian pay. "If we are to retain physicians, we must be competitive with the civilian market."



"The attendance at the public hearing was the largest they (the commission) had to date," according to Col. Addison D. Davis III, Chief of Staff. "The commission members commented on the diversity of the presentations that were covered at the public hearing."

The Commission, appointed by President Carter, is conducting a study of the military compensation system and will report its findings to the President by March 15. The President will be asking them for recommendations on changes to the current pay and benefit programs.

41 people provide Benning with sound 24 hours-a-day

By Marshall Jones

Chances are that whenever sound is amplified on post, whether it's a speech by a visiting general, an Infantry Officer Basic Course (IOBC) class or a demonstration of weapon firing on a range fifteen miles from Main Post, the Sound Branch is on the spot, doing their job.

It may be a musical performance that lasts till midnight or a group of students heading out to the range at 2 a.m., but the Sound Branch will be there.

Part of the Support Division, DIO, the Sound Branch consists of 32 enlisted personnel and nine civilian employees. Richard Burroughs runs the operation.

The branch's sound technicians consist of about half military and half civilians. According to branch NCOIC SFC Earl Burt, the civilians provide continuity in the branch, since military personnel don't stay at one duty station as long, and the military assigned make it possible to operate on a work schedule longer than 40 hours a week — something that's very common for the branch personnel.

Fourteen vehicles are assigned to the branch, including one maintenance truck, two "Airborne trucks" and two "Special Sound" trucks. The rest are standard sound trucks. In addition to its main mission, the branch is also responsible for the normal maintenance of these vehicles.

Besides setting up an operating sound amplification systems, the branch personnel must maintain the equipment and in most cases, must actually make the equipment themselves out of component parts. Because each application of sound equipment is different, the particular type of set-up needed is rarely found ready-made on the market. So most of the branch's speakers, amplifiers and other equipment are made right in its own shop.

The type of equipment used depends on the type of job it's needed for. For a small group outside, a commercially manufactured bullhorn does the job. For large groups, the branch has portable speakers with a 20-watt amplifier mounted on a board. For bigger jobs, bigger amps and more speakers are available.

The power output of the branch's equipment ranges from just enough to amplify an instructor's voice in an Infantry School classroom to the huge volume of the speakers used to guide Airborne students safely earthward from the Air Force jets over Fryar Drop Zone.

The Airborne Trucks, as branch personnel call them, are perhaps the branch's most critical piece of equipment, since in some cases, the life of an Airborne trooper could depend on his getting the proper instructions. Therefore, these trucks pull a trailer with not one but two generators to make sure the amplifying units get power. Inside the truck, there are four 100 watt-amplifiers to run three sets of speakers, with one back-up.

Even the more mundane jobs of the branch can be complicated. At a recent conference held in Clsm 6, Bldg. 4, 200 conferees had to be supplied with desk microphones so they could contribute to the conference. That job required alert monitors from the Sound Branch to make sure whoever was talking had sound and that the others did not. The background noise from a group that size, all with a working microphone, would have made the proceedings impossible to follow.

Anoter of the branch's responsibilities is the sound system in Marshall Auditorium. Since that's where the sound-and-light presentation "I am the Infantry" is given, the branch runs that show too. The soldier who takes off his helmet and kneels in silhouette for the Infantry Prayer at the end of "I am the Infantry" is probably the most visible member of the Sound Branch.

Work at the sound branch consists of (sometimes) long hours, little recognition, and often a critical responsibility. Some sound personnel jokingly complain that the only time they're noticed is when something goes wrong with the sound. But the business of running a school for Infantrymen and a giant Army post would certainly be a lot harder without them.

Sp4 David Humphrey sets up a microphone for a practice ceremony in the 6th Bn, 1st AIT Bde. Ceremonies are only part of the tasks assigned to the Sound Branch.

Sp4 Lutor Vega adjusts the amplification on Branch equipment in the back of one of the new "Special Sound" trucks. The new trucks are usually committed to provide sound support for the many ceremonies on Ft. Benning.

Have you ever been chucky; have you ever been thin, or just in between? It doesn't matter, all camera-shy-or-not E-6's and above are required to maintain up-to-date photos in their Official Military Personnel Files (OMPF).

Your OMPF wants two photos from you, as specified by AR 640-30. Regular Army and WAC second lieutenants must have photos taken at the time of their appointments. First lieutenants through lieutenant colonels, including chief warrant officers, must submit photos on the month of their birth every fourth year.

Colonels must have current photos taken on their birth month every third year. Upon promotion, all officers are required to submit updated photographs.

Enlisted members, grades E6 through E9, must also feed their files with two photos every fifth year, during the month of their birth.

Military photographs, 8 by 10 full length, are taken at the Post Photo Lab, Bldg 468 on Wednesdays from 8-12.

Personnel requiring an up-to-date photo usually receive a letter from officer or enlisted records or from MILPERCEN notifying them of the fact. Personnel having under gone a significant appearance may request a current photo by calling the Photo Lab, 545-4434 for a date and time.

Glad you asked ...

How will you celebrate this Christmas holiday?

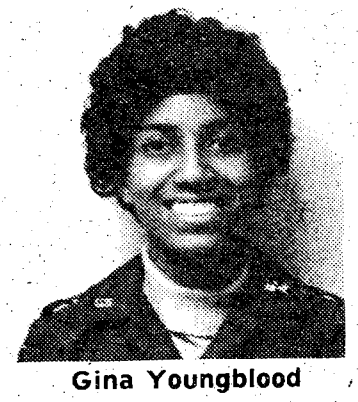
By Sue Davis

Mary Jo Wright

PFC Mary Jo Wright, Hq Co, HQ Cmd

I'll be working at Lawson Airfield during the holidays. However, I'll be spending my off-duty time with good friends I've met here at Ft. Benning.

Ralph White



SFC Ralph G. White Jr., 10th Co, TSB

I plan to spend this time with my family at Ft. Benning. It will be very special to me because last year I was in Korea. My best present would be peace on Earth and goodwill to all. Merry Christmas to all at TMDD!

Maj. Richard Whiteside, Tactics Dept, USAIS

I plan to catch up on small, but important items that seem to always wind up on the back burner — read, white and get ready for a flying start into the new year.

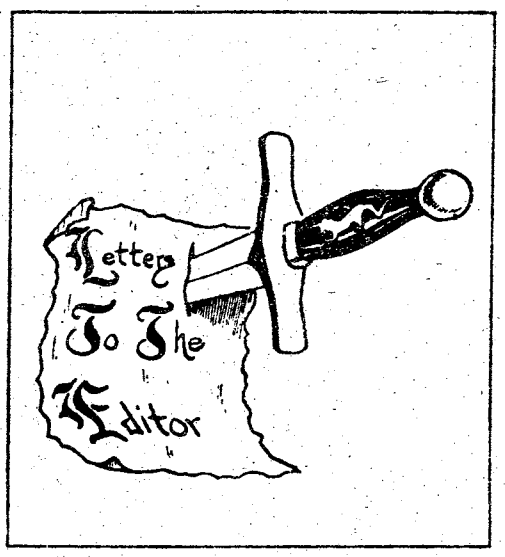
Gina Youngblood

2ndLt. Gina Youngblood, DTD Ext Br

My immediate plan is to fly home to Colorado to hit the slopes skiing and party hardy on New Year's Eve.

Richard Meyer

2ndLt. Richard Meyer, Co B, HQ Cmd



I intend to stay in the local area and take it easy.

Peter Przygode

SGM Peter K. Przygode, German Army Liaison

This is my fifth and last Christmas at Ft. Benning. My family would not enjoy Christmas Eve in a motel or hotel, therefore, we never travel during Christmastime. We will celebrate Christmas Eve at home in the German manner — opening presents, playing Christmas music, attending midnight mass in the Catholic church and eating the traditional fish dinner.

AN OPEN LETTER TO MY HOST:

It usually takes me a month to get over the Christmas — New Year's holiday season. Some years I have had my doubts that I would ever get over them. The night after night and day after day marathon of parties is just too much for me.

I hope this year is going to be different. I'm not going to drink as much or stay out so late. My intentions are good, but I'm not blessed with an abundance of will power. I need your help and understanding.

If I arrive at your house and decline you offer of a drink, take me at my word. Despite my track record of never refusing a drink, I'm going to mean what I say. Don't treat my refusal as you would an announcement that I have just returned from the moon. Astonishment or remarks about "one never hurting anyone" won't do me any good. You may change my mind.

There are a few things you can do to make it easier for me during my stay.

Lay in a small supply of various types of soft drinks. The usual coke, ginger ale, sparkling and guinine water just don't do much to turn me on. Coke and ginger ale have too many calories and I hate drinking sparkling and quinine water straight.

Augmenting these mixers with some Diet sodas, orange and grape drinks and even a pot of coffee might activate my taste buds.

If you can have hired a bartender for the affair, have him stack a can of each type on the top of the bar so I know they are available.

If my resolve breaks down or if I have already had a few before I arrive at your party, there are still a few things you can do to help me.

Don't shove my favorite drink into my hand as soon as I arrive. Don't insist on "topping off" my drink every time my glass gets half empty — and when I get ready to leave, please don't insist that I "have one for the road."

I may drink too much despite all my good intentions and all your help. Don't let me drive under these conditions. I know I get obnoxious when I drink too much. There will probably be a bad scene if you take my keys or incapacitieate my car. Neither of us will appreciate it at the time, but it won't be nearly as bad or lasting as the remorse both of us will suffer if I clobber myself or someone else on the way home.

I've started the holiday season with these same good intentions before. Until now the results haven't been too good. Maybe this year with your help and a little help from my fellow guests, I may be able to wake up the morning after your party with some of my self respect intact.

Hopefully —

4. Typewritten letters, double-spaced, are preferred.

5. Longer articles by recognized authorities on particular points of view, or treating specific topics of importance to the post, are also welcomed.

6. All letters will be answered. However, those letters lacking in properiety or substance will not be published.

7. Mail or bring letters to Editor; BAYONET; Public Affairs Office; Rm. 602; Bldg 4; Ft. Benning, Ga. 31905.

Use golden rule when on telephone

By Kristi Arnold

Telephones are beginning to be regarded as a somewhat "necessary evil." "Necessary" to maintain the fast-paced, highly technological society we live in; and "evil" in the amount of headaches and frustrations they can cause.

Perhaps it is a bit unfair to place blame on the instrument itself — there's nothing but the highest praise for the noble accomplishment of Mr. Bell. The evil of the telephone lies, in truth, with the people who use, or misuse it, for both business and personal reasons.

Surely, we have all experienced, at some point, the "accidental" cutoff, the 20-minute "hold" and the thoughtless "hand-overthe-receiver" shouter. Not to mention the callers who believe it is unnecessary to identify themselves, and who become belligerent when asked to do so; "ring-once-opps — dialed-the-wrong-number" quick hang-up artist and the uncertain callers who wait for a familiar voice to say hello or identify the dialed office and wordlessly disconnect if the voice on the receiving end doesn't meet with their expectations.

It is unfortunate that Mr. Bell did not issue a book of rules to go with his clever invention that unbeknownst to him, would drastically alter the speed of communications. Then if rules were broken, telephones and telephone privileges would be revoked until the violator could demonstrate his or her ability to use the phone properly. But, such a book is non-existant, and if it were, enforcement of it would be, at best impossible. So, instead, we must rely on our common sense and courtesy in operating such a delicate instrument.

Accidential cut-offs on business calls are usually the result of carelessness and are easily preventable, unless there's an equipment foul-up. If necessary to place a person on hold, they should only be there for a reasonable, absolute minimal amount of time. After all, the caller probably has other things to do besides sit immobilized, with receiver glued to ear, listening to dead air. This is an all too common, but avoidable, every day frustration. Most would prefer to have their call returned, rather than wait endlessly wasting incredible amounts of time.

Every effort should be made to press the hold button or put the receiver down and walk away (at home) before yelling to so-and-so to answer the phone. Holding a hand over the mouthpiece and simultaneously exercising the lungs is not only a rude habit, it's probably a major source of America's headaches!

Courtesy alone dictates that we identify ourselves to whomever answers the phone, and if it is overlooked, indignation is not the proper response when asked, "Whom shall I say is calling?" And really, if the phone is ringing and suddenly you realize you misdialed, stay on the line long enough to tell the recipient you made an error.

In short, "Dial unto others as you would have them dial unto you."

Want to call home; call MARS first!

Would you believe there's a free service on post that needs customers? No, it isn't the dental clinic, the immunization clinic or some other dread service — it's the MARS station.

MARS (Military Affiliate Radio System), a branch of the U.S. Army Communications Command Agency (USACC), has the capability of sending radio and teletype messages worldwide. This service is available not only to active duty and retired personnel, and their dependents, but also to residents in the local area, who may have a member of their family in service stationed elsewhere. It's much the same as sending a telegram, only it's free. The MARS station also receives messages from anywhere in the world for people in this area.

Sgt. James Mock, NCOIC of Benning's MARS station, reports that his staff normally handle 400 to 500 messages each week, but most of the outgoing requests are from the 1st AIT Bde. Since the brigade is closing for the holidays, Sgt. Mock is expecting a significant lull in business and therefore, wants other to be aware of the service and hope they will make use of it.

Messages can say most anything as long as it does it in 30 words or less. Delivery time is usually within four hours.

These operators provide this service to practice their skills and maintain their proficiency. Presently, a team of 197th Inf Bde teletype operators help the MARS station staff by also sending messages from their radio teletype van parked behind the station. All you have to do is call 545-3059 or go by Bldg 84 located behind the CB&T and 1st National Bank building, Main Post.

If you have the telephone number of the party you are calling, your message will be delivered by telephone. Any long distance charges from the receiving station to the recipient must be born by the recipient. If a telephone is not available or feasible, then either local ham operators are used or the message is mailed from the recipient's closest MARS station.

Sending messages over the MARS station radio network saves soldiers and their families the cost of telegrams or telephone calls. Sp4 Rose Brown, USACC, and Sp4 Michael Maxie, HHB, 2/10th FA keep proficient and busy sending Christmas wishes, times of arrival, and messages of any type to anywhere in the world.

Faith School student wins Xmas Seal contest

By Sue Davis

Gasp! Choke! Hack, hack! According to the Surgeon General, smoking is hazardous to everyone's health.

"It's really true," agrees Elaine Owens, a 7th grader at Faith School. To prove that she felt strongly about the effects of smoking, this enterprising young student won first prize in a poster contest last May which was sponsored by the American Lung Association.

"It's the first thing I ever won in my life," she exclaimed while pointing to the anti-smoking T-shirt etched in red lettering.

The Lung Association, which sponsors Christmas Seals, urges schools and other organizations to participate in their frequent projects.

A poster contest is the last item on the agenda of events initiated by Mrs. Sue Coleman, a 6th grade teacher and Ft. Benning Christmas Seals Chairman.

Each year, Mrs. Coleman instructs a two-week course to her science class which pinpoints the dangers of cigarette smoking.

After 14 days of teaching and group discussion, she administers a lengthy written test ot see how much they absorbed from the course.

"It's hard if you don't study," Elaine retorted slyly.

When asked to expound on her newly-learned knowledge on the subject of smoking, Elaine emphatically, "Smoking causes

Twin brothers serve together on active duty

By Marshall Jones

For identical twins Lt. Col Herbert and Maj. Martin Siegel, it was the first time they had worked together since they attended Officer Candidate School 17 years ago.

Maj. Siegel is a reservist who spent recently three weeks on active duty with the U.S. Army Infantry School's Nuclear, Biological and Chemical Division, Combat Support and Maintenance Department . Lt. Col. Siegel is an active duty officer with the school's Directorate of Combat Developments.

For the duration of Maj. Siegel's assignment, the two worked just one floor apart in Infantry Hall.

Both brothers entered the Army on July 8, 1958, took basic training at Ft. Jackson, S.C. and completed the Artillery Officer Candidate School together in 1960. At that time, their paths diverged.

Lt. Col. Siegel has been in the Army ever since, serving in Vietnam and receiving the Bronze Star, two awards of the Meritorious Service Medal and two awards of the Army Commendation Medal. His brother chose the Army Reserve and is now an employee of the Ciba-Geigy Corporation of Greensboro, N.C. living in Jamestown, N.C.

The brother's serving together goes back farther than their Army career, however, since they're both 1953 graduates of the same high school and both received their B.S. from the University of Miami in 1958.

The twins' resemblance confused many people at the Infantry School, including one woman who asked Maj. Siegel if he'd been demoted. Most people just stared with a puzzled expression, said the major.

Out of pure coincidence, both men are married and both have wives named Betty. Mrs. Herbert Siegel lives with her husband on post.

Accurate data, mission of 179th image analysts

By Ron Fowler

In a combat situation, data compiled about the enemy can sometimes make the difference between successfully accomplishing a mission or failing in it.

Helping to provide data for that difference is the job of the soldiers from the Image Interpretation Section of the 179th MI Det (MID) 197th Inf Bde.

"We have three specific missions as image interpretors in the 197th," explains CWO3 Daniel L. Boone, Image Interpretation Technician for the 179th. "First, we help aerial reconnaissance efforts for the brigade; second, we conduct intensive terrain studies prior to unit mobilization to help in planning movement and locating suspected enemy positions and last, we help to provide camouflage training and provide critiques to all Brigade units in their camouflage operations.

"The majority of these missions are accomplished through the use of Image Interpretation, or taking photograph of something and relating it to something three dimensional in the area you're analyzing."

Image interpretors use a variety of equipment in their jobs, the most interesting being the light table with a stereoscopic viewing device. The light table projects a light source up through a plate of glass where a photographic transparency is placed. The transparency is then analyzed by the 179th Image Interpretors through a stereoscopic viewing device, which works much like a scientist's laboratory microscope.

"By using the stereoscope we are able to bring out the three-dimensional effect in all of the photographic transparencies," notes Boone. "This allows us to see the things that are on the photograph exactly the same way as they are on the ground."

Depending upon the mission of the Brigade, the Image Interpretators look for a number of things while interpreting what each photographic transparency contains.

Boone comments, "We usually look for objects like equipment and vehicles in the open also the sizes of buildings in the area, types of terrain, and locations of any fuel or ammunition storage points in the area.

Sp4 Jim Schreck, 179th MI Det analyzes a photographic transparency with a stereoscope on a light box as part of his job as an Image Interpreter.

All of these bits of information are important to the commander in the planning, conduct, and support of tactical operations."

"In our job we deal in actualities," concluded Boone, "we have to be able to provide the commander with a bevy of information that must be up to date, related to his mission, and most of all, accurate. At the 179th MID we take pride in being able to do just that."

Degree available for all soldiers

Soldiers can now earn an associate degree in management or general studies under a program sponsored by the Servicemen's Opportunity College (SOC), beginning this fall.

College credit for military schooling and experience and transfer of credit between 32 colleges are available under the SOC Associate Degree Program.

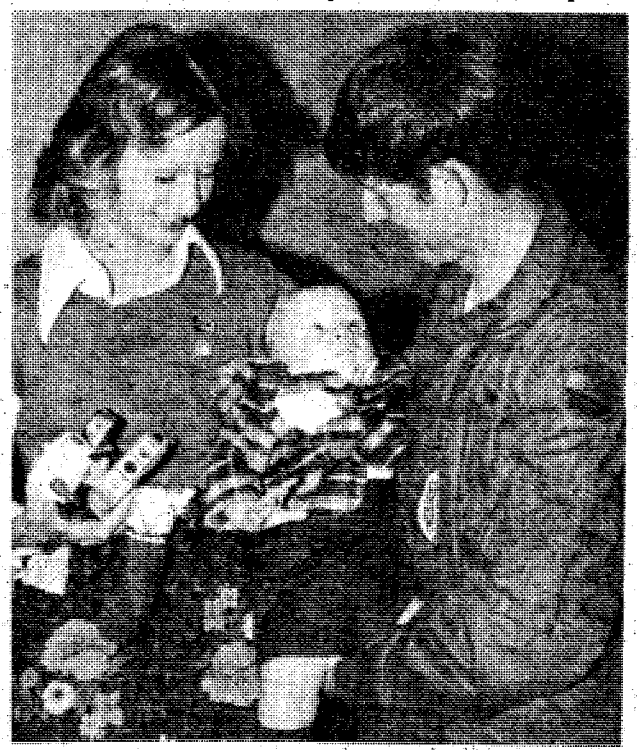
The program, for example, gives seven credit hours to an 11B10 (Infantryman) and additional credit for higher skill levels, When the soldier is transferred to another major installation, his credits are transferred to a participating institution, allowing his education to continue uninterrupted.

Credit is also given to soldiers for successful completion of College Level Examination Program (CLEP), U.S. Armed Forces Institute SAFI) Defense Activity for Non-Traditional Educational Support (DANTES) courses.

An associates degree is available by completing a maximum of 65 semester hours. No more than 15 semester hours need to be completed by attending on-campus courses.

Tuition assistance, financing 75 per cent of education costs, is available through education centers and 100 per cent financing is available to qualified GI Bill recipients.

FIRE!



According to the National Fire Prevention and Control Administration, household fires peak sharply between 1630 and 1800 hours. Forty percent of these fires result from cooking in the kitchen. Kitchen fires, cooking and non-cooking, account for 65% of the household fires. Appliances were involved in starting 62% of the household fires.

Medics, patients get together for unusual Christmas party

The High Risk Nursery, Columbus Medical Center holds an annual Christmas party, "Celebration of Life," for Alumni Babies. As the 498th has been responsible for transporting 504 babies for the High Risk Nursery as part of the Military assitance to Safety and Traffic (MAST; mission, which began at Ft Benning in May 1974, the unit is always included in the guest list.

Sp4 Robert Bickford, 498th Med Co talks things over with one of his former patient, Jerrod Suddeth and his mother. The last time they met was on MAST mission 465, January 29, 1977, when Jerrod, only weighting 3 pounds, 15 ounces was transported from Talladega, Ala. to the High Risk Nursery, Columbus Medical Center by the 498th.

Door prizes were awarded to babies in various categories and the baby who came the farthest distance to the party, Kerry Reynolds of Bainbridge, Ga., was transported by the 498th from Bainbridge to the Medical Center lin Last January.

His grandmother, Mrs. Charles Bell, expresed the thanks of the family for the efforts of the High Risk Nursery and the 498th Med. "Before Kerry was born MAST was just a word we had read in the newspapers," she explained," but now we realize just how important these Army men and their equipment are to parents, grandparents and hospitals all over the area."

Reunions between the flight crews and families are the best part of the annual party. "It's almost impossible to recognize the babies, as most of them are so small when we transport them," explains flight medic Sp4 Tobert Bickford, "but, I remember the names and it is sure good to see the little folks are doing so well. The best part is knowing that we played a part in their survivial."

Duenas, McCants top Doughboy award dinner

By Debra Hilgeman

The 1977 Doughboy Awards Banquet was held recently at the Benning Golf Club as driving rain and howling winds raged outside in one of the worst storms of the season.

The guest speaker, defensive coordinator Coach Ron McCrone of the University of Tennessee (Martin), said he was, "very impressed with the Doughboy team" and complimented the coaches on, "instilling unity between the players." Several Doughboy players have been offered athletic scholarships to the U.S of Tennessee (Martin) and are expected to accept.

The award-winning players were selected by a ballot cast by the coaches and players before the Doughboy's last game against Tuskegee Institute. Assisting Head Coach LtCol. Jack Barham present the awards was Chief of Staff Col. Addison D. Davis, Ill., who spoke on behalf to, "the teams, most enthusiastic supporter, MajGen. William J. Livsey."

Coach Barham offered these comments about the players chosen for the 1977 football awards:

"Our Most Valuable Player, Joe Duenas of 24th Co., 5th Bn, TSB was the cornerstone of the Doughboy offense. His experience and determination, as well as his football skills, were the ingredients that had to be present if a group of young and relatively inexperienced ballplayers were to meld into a cohesive, effective football team."

"The Outstanding leader this season, Lonzie McCants of Co C, 1/58th Inf, supports a great deal of football talent with a sense of dignity and spirit that makes people naturally look to him for leadership."

"The teams' Most Valuable Defensive Lineman, Eddy Smith of CSC, 1/58th Inf, rarely talks on the field. The only way the coaches can tell if he's around is by the noise of his shoulder pads against an offensive ballcarriers' back."

"Our Most Valuable Offensive Back, Julian Williams of Staff and Faculty, 1st AIT Bde, is the most difficult back of his size to bring down of anyone I have ever seen."

"This years' Best Defensive Back, Ronnie Carter of HHC, HQ Cmd, is one of the best natural athletes I have ever know. He could play virtually any position on the team and do it well."

"I'm very proud of our Best Offensiveman, Jeffer Johnson of the 598th Maint Co. Because of his small size, he had to work his way into the starting lineup by being twice as tough as anyone else."

The Outstanding Leadership award is presented to Lonzie McCants by Chief of Staff Col. Addison D. Davis III. McCants, a linebacker this season, has the attributes "that make people naturally look to him for leadership," according to Coach Barham.

By "HOSS" KACI 4615

The FCC has proposed rewriting and simplification of Part 95 of the Rules and Regulations in order to make the CB rules easier to understand. Also certain changes have been proposed. If the new rules are adopted, some of the following could become effective:

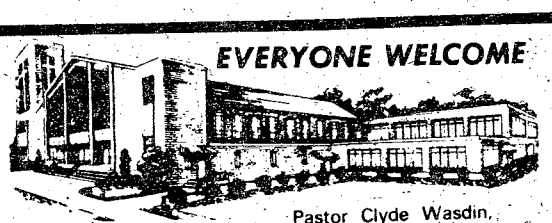
Station Identification. A CB station must be identified by the official FCC callsign at the end of each communication. The callsign must be given in the English language; however, a phonetic alphabet may be used (for example, KOD-1234 could be given as "Kilo Oscar Delta Twelve Thirty-four" or "King Ocean David One Two Three Four").

The use of a handle or unit number is permitted only "in addition" to the callsign, not in place of it.

Transmission Limit. The five-minute transmission time limit followed by a one-minute silent period would apply to both interstation and intrastation communications.

Radio Paging. A CB station may transmit one-way communications for the purpose of "voice paging."

Antennas. Both directional and omni-directional antennas would be allowed to extend up to 30 feet (10 meters) above a tree or building of any height, or 60 feet (20 meters) above the ground.



Channel Numbers. Channel numbers (1-40) would be designated for all CB frequencies. Present rules do not refer to frequencies by channel number.

Station Units. Each CB station license would automatically authorize up to 25 units. Written permission would be required for more units.

Repairs. All internal repairs and adjustments to a type-accepted CB transceiver could be made only by, or under the supervision of a licensed First or Second-Class Radio-telephone Operator, even when the unit is connected to a nonradiating, artificial antenna. An unlicensed person may adjust his own antenna and make radio checks.

Remote Control. With written permission from the FCC, a CB base station could be controlled from a remote location.

Remember, these are only proposed changes.

Father joins son in airborne school

When Pvt. Wendell Williams of Dalls went through airborne training here, he got the most personalized advice (and criticism) a student could have. His father, Dallas Police Sergeant Elton W. Williams, went through the course right along with him.

It's not that the elder Williams needed the training: he's already completed more than 200 parachute jumps and earned the Army's Master Parchutist Badge. His rank of staff sergeant in the 36th Airborne Brigade of the Texas National Guard allowed him to fulfill a dream he's had since Wendell turned sixteen: to go through Airborne school with his son.

The sergeant made three of the five required jumps from an aircraft with Wendell. It was the first time they had jumped together since Wendell's sixteenth birthday, when his father let him make a sport parachute jump. Then the father told Wendell he would have to go through jump school and learn to "do it right" before he'd let him do it again.

Formerly an Army officer, SSgt. Williams entered the National Guard as an enlisted man a year ago with the single purpose that he just fulfilled. Now, he says, he's trying to get his son into German airborne school, of which he himself is a graduate.

For now, eighteen-year-old Private Williams is off to the 82nd Abn Div at Ft. Bragg, N.C., the same unit his father joined after jump school. He also plans to volunteer for the Ranger course as soon as he can. His enthusiasm for the Army and parachuting puts to rest any suspicion his father is pushing him into a military career. "Tough and exciting" are the words he uses to describe the training he received here.

Pvt. Williams had been preparing for parachuting since his first jump by running three miles a day as a high school student. He enlisted in June when he was seventeen and took basic training at Ft. Leonard Wood, Mo.,

EER/SEER: Am that

By Madonna Simple

What document can effect a soldier's promotion or assignment?

What is an indication of a soldier's weak and strong points?

Give up? Why it's the Enlisted Evaluation Report (EER) or Senior Enlisted Evaluation Report (SEER).

An EER/SEER is a performance report that is a permanent part of the soldier's Official Military Personnel File. An EER is a report on E-4s and E-5s, the SEER for E-6s and above.

The purpose is to monitor the performance of a soldier in relation to others of the same grade. It points out the strengths and weaknesses in a soldier's skills, leadership ability and how the soldier performs on the job.

It's effects

"Raters and indorsers sometimes ignore the impact that an evaluation report may have on the individual, which is unfair to the soldier and the Army," notes Sgt. Robert B. Chapman, NCOIC, EER Section, COMPACT.

An EER or SEER can effect promotion, special school selection and possibly reenlistment. If the individual keeps getting oustanding EERs, he or she may be up for promotion sooner.

Types

There are five types of EER/SEERs:

- Initial
- Annual
- Change of rater
- Special
- Other

Initial

Initial EER/SEERs are the first report that the individual receives. They are prepared as soon after pormotion to E-4 as qualifications are met. Service as an E-3 count towards this qualification. The period of report for the initial EER is the beginning month in which the soldier came under the supervision of the rater. The ending date is determined by when the report is rendered.

Annual

Annual EER/SEERs are submitted according to the following schedule after the initial report has been submitted.

Pay Grade	Closing Date
E-4	October
E-5	August
E-6	June
E-7	April
E-8	February
E-9	December

Annual EER/SEER isn't required if a special or change of rater EER/SEER has been submitted within 60 days for E-4/5 and 90 days for E-6 and above. The ending period of report is determined by regulations and the beginning of the report is verified by COMPACT.

Who ma

Change of Rater

Change of rater EER/SEERs are submitt when either the soldier or the rater change jo or when the individual departs a TDY unit. If t TDY is for a period of less than 20 days, a chan of rater EER/SEER is not required. Closing da of the EER/SEER will be the month the chan occurs. This includes PCS, ETS, retirement, e Raters or indorsers relieved for inefficiency misconduct will not complete an EER/SE COMPACT is responsible for coding the beg ning of the month of rating for these report

Special

Special EER/SEERs are submitted only wh the soldier's performance has been so outst ding or so deficient as to clearly warrant report before the annual is due. These repo may be for a period of 30 days and the rep must be reviewed by a field grade officer in direct line of supervision of the rated individu

Special reports must have ample justificat and shouldn't be submitted when it violates criteria outlined in AR 600-200.

Other

This report is directed by HQ, Departmen the Army only. This is for special purposes t are set by DA.

'Rating Game' has few winners

By Phil Nesbitt

Walking on water, able to leap the Pentagon in a single bound and various other impossible feats seemingly best describes some of the people in the Army today. Not to say that there are not many excellent professionals in the Army.

The topic of contention is the Enlisted Evaluation Report. This handy dandy little item comes in two sizes, junior and senior. It is a fact of military life that the results of an EER can make or break a military career. It is possible for a soldier to produce excellent results on his MOS test and then receive a below average rating on the combined score (EERWA), just because of the EER.

It also works in the reverse fashion.

Take Sp5 Smith, who didn't study for his MOS test as an admin specialist. Smith has been responsible for Congressional correspondence only, and upon taking his MOS test finds that he has no idea of what his specialty is all about.

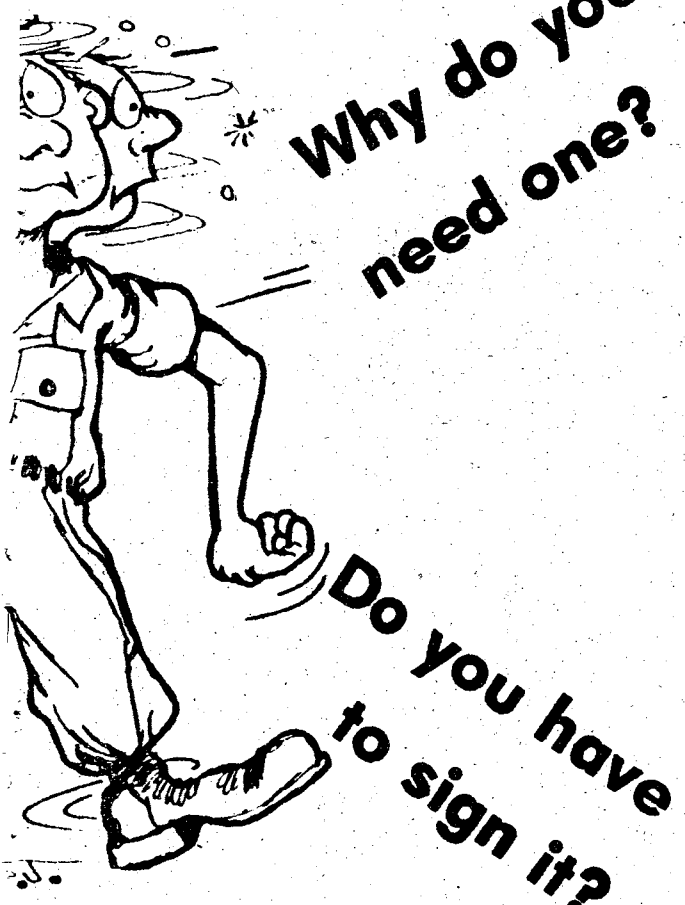
Capt. Jones, his boss, has never had any problems with Smith and his duty performance and knows that he plans on remaining in the Army. Jones has the job of rating Smith. "He's a good soldier, never late, does his job and never complains . . .", so the captain gives Smith a maximum EER.

Our specialist gets his EERWA back and finds that he has almost bottomed out on the test with a tremendous score of 81 . . . but . . . the EER has saved the day! With the maximum that the captain has given, Smith walks away with a 112, not bad . . . above average at that!

Normally, Smith should have been rated as a soldier who "exceeds or meets duty requirements" which is to say that he is average or slightly above average.

The sad thing about the system is the fact that a career soldier who receives an EER rated in this manner may find himself waiting a long time for promotion and his career plans may be marred until he gets out.

The commander, section chief or platoon leader who rates his soldiers conscientiously may in fact be sealing their fate as far as career development is concerned. In addition there are commanders who use the EER as an unwitting tool of destruction. In marking the column "needs improvement" the commander can, in effect, force the soldier out of the Army.



The "Rating Game" has been a topic considerable debate for years. Such factors as personal bias and prejudice have a way of playing in important role in the commander's consideration.

There have been cases when the rater feels that the individual soldier deserves an average rating and the indorser has other ideas. In the discussion over the individual's duty performance, the indorser's feelings usually lead to a higher or lower rating from the rater.

If ever rater and indorser rated fairly, there would be no problem with the system, but this would rule out human nature. Of course the perfect system of rating has not yet been invented, there are those who advocate no rating at all, only a series of performance tests to show the capability of the individual soldier. Hopefully, the SQT program of testing and "hands on" evaluation will solve some of the inherent problems in the existing system.

Until such time, there will still be superficial supermen in the Army, who will continue to perform impossible feats within their limitations.

anagement tool is often abused

es it out?

The rater must be an E-5 or a GS-5 civilian and one grade higher than the individual. Your indorser must be senior to your rater in pay grade or date of rank. He/she must also be in the direct line of supervision. The reviewer must be in direct line of supervision and senior over the indorser. The reviewer must be a commissioned officer or warrant officer. The reviewer can refuse to sign the EER/SEER if he/she feels that the rating is not fair or complete. The reviewer can also demand an explanation of the ratings. A common misconception is that the reviewer is only responsible for signing it and sending it forward. The reviewer can add any opinions to the EER (in a form of a letter) about the rated individual based on actual observations. The reviewer's job is to make sure the rating is fair and valid in his or her opinion.

When the individual receives an EER/SEER, he should make sure the rater and indorser have counseled him and have informed him about the rating. The rater should complete his/her portion and counsel the individual as with the indorser.

This is all done before the soldier signs. Also the rater/indorser should counsel the individual during the rating period, this is in the form of performance coaching. A person being rated shouldn't be hit with their weak points at the last minute. All efforts should be made to point out weaknesses so corrections can be made before rating time.

Guidelines

Raters/indorsers should always have immediate access to DA pam 623-1 or change 58, AR 600-200 when preparing the EER/SEER. They contain all the information needed for a fair and effective evaluation. "The EER/SEER is a management tool. Like any other tool, if it isn't used properly, you can do damage. If you don't counsel the individual on his/her weaknesses, then give them a bad EER, then you didn't use the tool properly," stated Chapman.

Common errors

"There are no uncommong mistakes on EER/SEERs. It seems like every mistake that can be made is actually made everyday," Chapman remarked.

A common mistake is that the rater/indorser rates the individual on his PMOS or SMOS. The EER should be based on the Duty MOS.

Another is the comment block. Make sure that the typist hasn't left out any words. Read and make sure that what you said is typed on there. Also make sure that the numerical scores and the comments correspond. Many times a soldier will receive low numerical ratings and receive outstanding comments.

The next common error is made in Block I. The rater must be sure to list the specific course or school. There are several NCOES or Leadership Schools on post.

"We make the determination as to whether to kick it back or forward it. Some of the simple mistakes we correct here. If it is a major one, it is sent back. When it leaves Ft. Benning, it should be perfect. Our job is to ensure it meets that standard before sending it out," Chapman remarked.

Rating Schemes

Regulations state that a copy of the unit or office rating scheme must be posted. Each soldier should be made aware of who rates and indorses his/her EER/SEER. COMPACT uses it to determine if the rater, indorser and reviewer are actually in that position.

Is the system fair?

"The system is fair but it is very often abused. If it is used the way the regulation dictates it would be perfectly just. There is no excuse to complete the EER/SEER in say, five minutes. The rater and indorser need to spend time on it and need to do it carefully and fairly as regulations demand," said Chapman.

"Inflated EER/SEERs are a problem at Army level, not post. Inflated EER/SEERs really effect the EER Weighted Average (EERWA). This problem is everyone's problem especially when it comes to promotions," Chapman added.

EERWA

EERWA is computed by intervals of time that are readjusted and divided into 12 month segments to include both rated and non-rated periods. Each 12 month period is assigned a descending weight over a 60-month time span. For additional information on EERWA's check out Figure 8-1, AR 600-200.

They can be appealed too!

The number of incorrectly appealed EERs and academic reports can be reduced, say officials at the United States Army Evaluation Center (USAEREC). Officials at the center offer tips on how to properly appeal defogatory reports.

Soldiers wishing to appeal an EER or academic report should first understand that they must provide substantial evidence to support a charge of injustice or an administrative error. And, officials say, the burden of proof rests with the soldier.

In following these guidelines, USAEREC cautions, you may either appeal directly to: USAEREC, ATTN: PCRE-OP-A, Ft. Benjamin Harrison, Ind. 46216, or you may appeal through command channels.

"We believe it to be in the best interest of the individual to submit appeals directly to USAEREC, after we advise them on how to accomplish this," stated Sgt. Robert B. Chapman, NCOIC, EER section, COMPACT.

Gathering your marbles is the first step to an appeal. Make certain you have:

- A copy of the report being appealed.
- A verified true copy of your DA Form 2-1.
- A verified copy of the unit, activity or section rating scheme, or verification that one cannot be obtained.
- Statements from responsible people having knowledge of your performance during the rated period or of the specific incidents to support the appeal (Statements from subordinates should be avoided. Other commanders' or supervisors' statements will help more.)
- Your personal statement.
- Any additional, documented information which applies to the case.

There are also restrictions on when an appeal can be made. EERs (DA Form 2166-4) submitted before Oct. 1, 1975, can be appealed until the end of September 1980. EERs and Senior EERs (Forms 2166-5 and 2166-5A, respectively) from Oct. 1, 1975 and later can be appealed up to two years from the month a soldier signed Part V, or, if not signed, from the month a personnel office certified Part VII

Academic Evaluation Reports (DA Forms 1059 and 1059-1) may be appealed up to five years from the report's ending period, if the beginning date of the report was earlier than July 1, 1973. If the beginning date was Jul. 1, 1973 or later the report may be appealed up to two years after the end of the report period.

Officials said that approved appeals or corrections will be made part of official records. Disapproved appeals and all related paperwork will also become part of the official record.

Additional guidance is in Chapter 8, AR 600-200.

For information concerning appeals, call 545-1060 or stop by Blds. 83, rm. 324.

As of September 1977, the average EERWAs by pay grade were:

E-4 — 107.37; E-5 — 115.04; E-6 — 118.87; E-7 — 121.29; E-8 — 123.12; E-9 — 123.99.

Another thing to keep in mind. Enlisted persons who have reserve component commissions must receive an OER (Officer Evaluation Report) each time they receive an EER/SEER.

EER/SEERs play an important part in your military career. They can effect promotions, assignments and schools. Adverse EER/SEERs can delay favorable actions on the individual. Raters and indorsers should always take time and think about all aspects of the soldier before rating him/her. Remember their future is up to you.

Brinkley speaks to MOWW on U.S. defense system

By Debra Hilgeman

"Unless the present trends which are clearly in favor of the Soviet Union are reversed, they will achieve their national goal of attaining military dominance over the United States by the turn of the century," was the prediction of Representative Jack Brinkley, Third District Congressman from Georgia.

Brinkley, a member with ten years standing on the Armed Services Committee, addressed 85 members of the Military Order of World Wars at the Ft. Benning Supper Club Monday night concerning the defense posture of the U.S. in comparison to that of the Soviet Union.

The congressman cited several areas of specific interest in the U.S. defense system that have suffered recent criticism or cancellation in light of defense spending.

Brinkley pointed out, "In the NATO theatre, the Soviets outnumber us by some three to one in tanks, four or five to one in artillery pieces, and somewhere between three and four to one in tactical aircraft." Although the congressman agreed that eliminating poverty and strengthening our domestic economy are of utmost importance, he added, "There is little good in affording every citizen of this country the good life if we do not provide the means of defense to preserve it."

According to Brinkley, "The key to our survivability is the M-X Advanced Missile System." The congressman admitted that modernizing our strategic forces would be costly but argued that it is necessary if we are to keep abreast of Soviet technological advances. Recent defense studies indicate going forward with the B-1, the M-X and the Trident would amount to about $12 billion during a ten-year period over the cost of maintaining our existing strategic forces.

Brinkley also voiced concern over, "The poor track record of the U.S. in the development and deployment of a new modern tank." Despite spending almost half a billion dollars developing a new tank, the U.S. still has only a handful of prototypes — some old MBT-70 prototypes and some new XM-1s. "The man in the field," said Brinkley, "the man who has to fight, still does not have a modern tank."

Regarding the controversy over the 105mm gun versus the 120mm gun, the congressman doubted the need for the 120mm gun since the 105mm round, "will kill any Soviet tank in the Warsaw Pact Inventory for at least another decade." According to Brinkley, the primary consideration of this issue is that all NATO members adopt a standard weapon. "I only hope that whatever gun we choose will result in our tank forces having the best gun in the shortest timeframe," he said.

Finally, Brinkley argued that an agreement such as SALT will not adequately curtail Soviet technological advances. "How can we prevent an engineer or scientist in a Soviet laboratory from making a qualitative improvement in guidance and control theory and application? The answer is, we cannot," he concluded.

Congressman Jack Brinkley (C) talks with LtCol (ret) Frank Nichols (l) president of the Military Order of World Wars (MOWW) and Col. Addison D. Davis III, USAIC Chief of Staff. Brinkley was the guest speaker at the MOWW meeting in the Ft. Benning Officers' Supper Club Monday night.

SP5 Johnnie Small is a machinist. When reenlistment time came around, it was an easy decision.

"I was a machinist before I came in the Army. I thought I'd come in, gain some experience in my field, and get out in three years. Who'd have thought I'd like it. Things are going so great I just reenlisted. It's not the security or the money either. I work on my own. I'm pretty much my own boss. You can't beat that."

The Army needs people like Johnnie Small. People who do a better job.

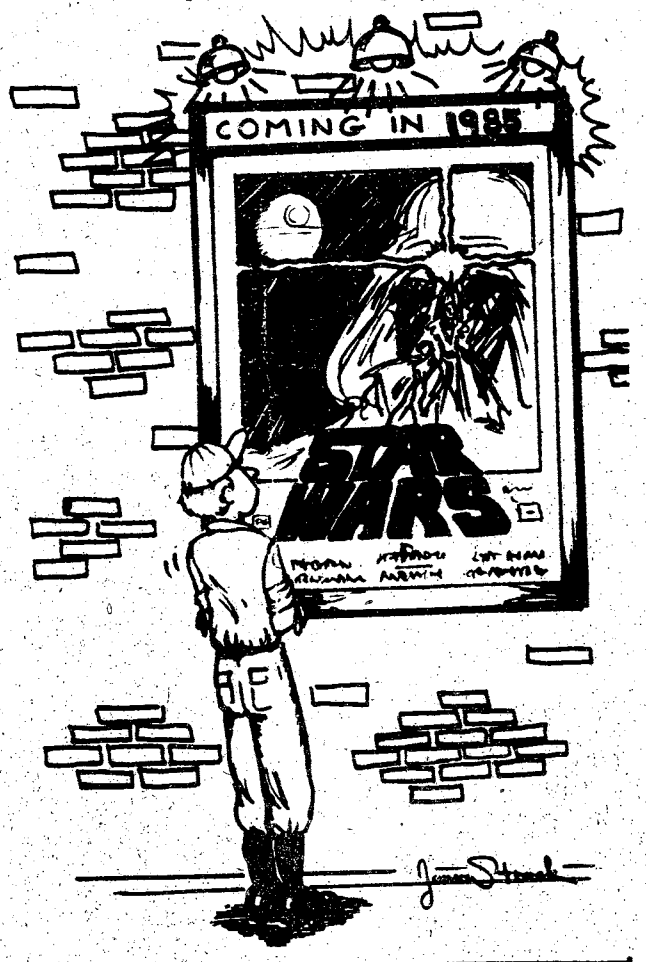
Why not 'Star Wars'?

By Madonna Simple

Have you seen "Star Wars" or "The Lincoln Conspiracy"? Perhaps you're waiting for them to play here! Or when will it play and will the Army-Air Force Exchange Service (AAFES) select them?

"Films are screened by AAFES Motion Pictures Division Headquarters in Dallas. They are chosen for their entertainment value in regards to troop interest," stated Robert Bonner, AAFES Service Operations manager for the southeast area.

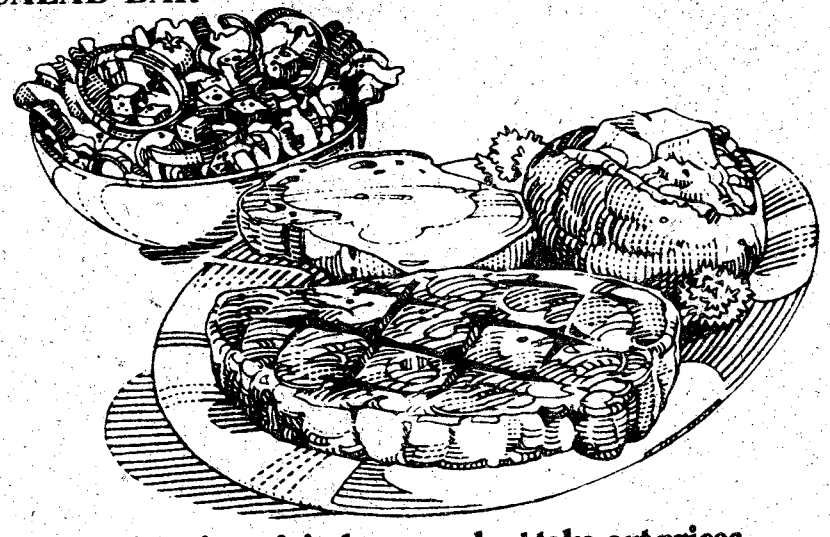


"AAFES negotiates for a film with its distributors after the film has been shown where requested. When an agreement is made copies of the film are made available to AAFES which schedules it for post theater," explained Bonner.

"The five Benning theaters show 10 movies a week. Saturdays and Sundays are the highest attendance nights, these days are reserved for popular first-showing movies," Bonner stated. On these days, children's matinees are also shown.

The AAFEW Headquarters also schedules the prices, dates and times that movies will be shown. Prices are much cheaper at post theaters. Downtown movies range from $1.75 to $3.00 whereas an on-post movie costs $1.00-$1.50.

"There is a suggestion box at the theater and we are more than happy to receive customer recommendations. If a customer has a suggestion on the movies being shown, he shouldn't hesitate to mention it to us," Bonner continued.



It does take time for the popular movies to be shown on post. AAFES' main concern is troop entertainment, so perhaps "Star Wars" and other top movies will play here soon.

Free emergency leave from remote posts a possibility

By John Hart

A study is underway to determine the feasibility of making emergency leave travel a "funded entitlement" for service members stationed in remote areas, a Pentagon official said last week.

The Army has been assigned as "executive agent" for conducting the study.

"Some commanders in the field think such a program is warranted," the official said. "but whether one is adopted remains to be seen."

An "action officer" assigned to the study, Cap. Ronald Fitch, said that the Army started looking for ways of "correcting inequities" in the current emergency leave program in January.

He explained that under the current program a military member can get "space required top priority" transportation on MAC planes.

"That's a service, (provided by the military), not an entitlement for the soldier," he said.

He pointed out that one inequity that now exists occurs when a service member stationed in a remote or isolated area has an emergency leave.

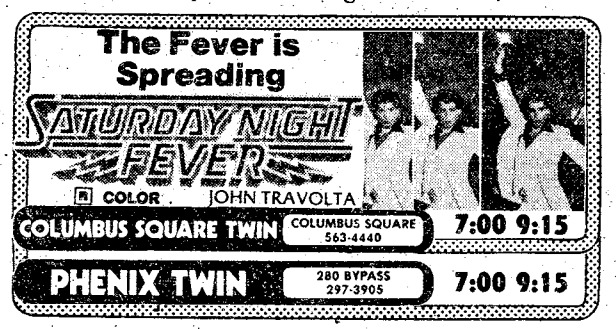
"At times, MAC transportation is not available or is scheduled infrequently," he said.

In such cases round trip transportation costs from a remote area to a port "can be very high, like $1,000 to $1,500," he said.

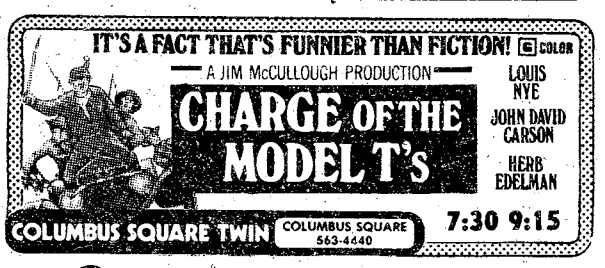
Should the program become official, it would essentially pay for round trip transportation costs from the remote area to a port, according to Fitch.

The program would be for either service members or their command-sponsored spounses for emergencies in their immediate families:

"There is one exception," Fitch said, "and that is in 'Blue Bark' cases." Such a case is a code name for a deceased member of a military household.



Fitch said in Blue Bark cases "All bona fide members of the soldier's household in the overseas area would be authorized space required transportation."



Some of the situations considered sufficient for emergency leave are:

- Death of a member of the household or immediate family.
- Circumstances where failure to return home will cause severe or unusual hardship on the service member or his/her household or immediate family.
- A life threatening situation or serious family problems which impose important responsibilities on the service member or spouse.

He said, "Cost estimates from the services and their comments on the concept are needed before the study can be completed."

Should the study be adopted by Defense officials and approved by the Administration, legislation for the program could be introduced in the second session of the 95th Congress. (ARNEWS)

Military taxi provides easy mode of travel

The Ft. Benning military taxi service provides a fast and convenient means of travel for approximately 175-200 customers per day, according to Mr. Ronald Brown, supervisor of the Military Taxi Section.

Established in December 1954, the taxi system has 10 civilian drivers on its staff. "We usually keep seven cars on the road daily," Brown added.

Drivers are responsible for the maintenance of their vehicle, its appearance and the safety of their passengers. "Every morning the vehicles are checked before they begin their run." Brown continued. All passengers are required to fasten their seat belts while being transported in a military taxi."

"The military taxi system may be seen as a supplement to the post shuttle bus system," according to Mr. Leonard Pate, motor transportation officer. However, the cab system provide a faster and more direct mode of transportation.

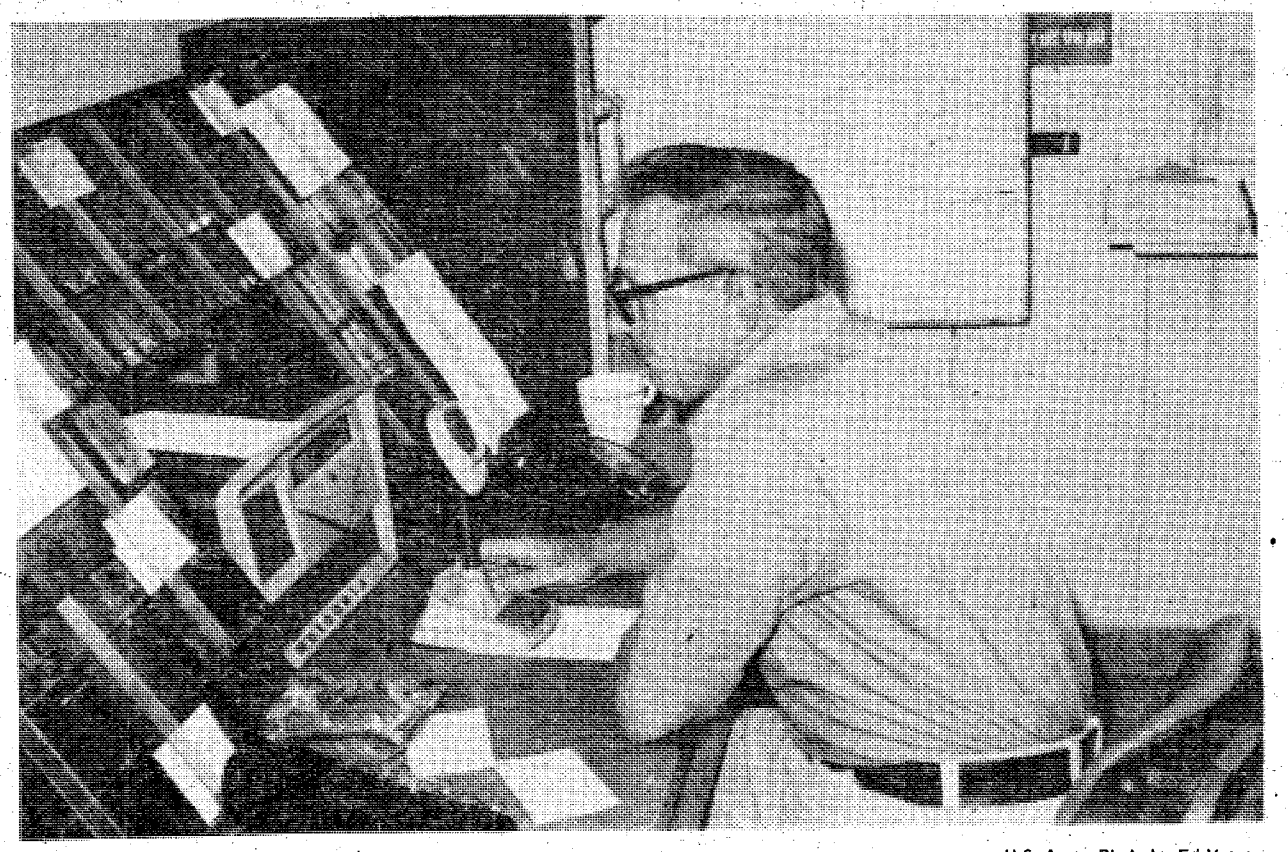
Pate cited as an example, that it was more convenient for an officer who had to attend a meeting, to use a taxi rather than wasting time riding around post on the shuttle bus before reach his destination.

He went on to explain that the cab service has also saved many soldiers from being AWOL. "Taxis have picked up soldiers stranded out at the airport without any money and brought them back to post," he said.

It is necessary to maintain some kind of control over the cab system. Therefore vehicle operators are required to call into the central dispatcher whenever they pick-up or discharge passengers and give their locations. In this way, the dispatcher can assign each new commitment to the driver nearest the pick-up point.

Destinations are recorded giving the dispatcher continuous control over the entire cab system. The dispatcher's board provides instant information as to the location of every vehicle in system.

Only personnel on official business have access to the taxi system. Soldiers with the rank above sergeant and civilian employees with a rating of GS-5 and above are the only ones who may requisition a vehicle. All military and civilian personnel, regardless of rank may ride in the taxis.



Any person on post can call a taxi in case of an emergency. The drivers have instructions to discharge other passengers if necessary, to answer emergency calls.

"Normally, another taxi will come along and pick them up shortly thereafter," says Brown.

"All pick-ups are restricted to the main post area; however there are a few exceptions," says Pate, "A taxi will not pick anyone up and take them to the banks, the credit union, mall or the housing areas."

Taxi service is provided Monday through Friday from 7:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. excluding holidays. Transportation will not be provided if the distance is less than ½ mile from the pick-up point to destination. Exceptions may be made for emergencies, official visitors and passengers with items that cannot be easily carried.

Military taxi service may be requested by telephoning 545-5156 during duty hours.

The Society of American Military Engineers

The December meeting of the Society of American Military Engineers will be held in the Benning Room of the Ft. Benning Officers' Club on December 21. The meeting will begin at 11:30 a.m. with a brief social period. After the luncheon, Mr. Bruno Ulrich, principal planner for the consolidated government of Columbus, will speak on the Columbus Land Use Plan.

"No-Fee" Passports

Military personnel and their dependents on overseas orders may apply for "No-Fee" passports at the Personnel Travel Section, Bldg 18 between 8 a.m. and 3:30 daily. Applications should be submitted a minimum of 60 days prior to travel date.

Temporary Allied Officer Sponsors Wanted

Officers with free time to act as temporary sponsors for Allied officers arriving at Ft. Benning in the latter part of December. Allied officers from Ghana, Greece, Indonesia, Japan, Jordan, Nigeria, Philippines, Sudan, Tunisia and Turkey will be here December 20 through January 2. Some of the officers may bring their family with them and the sponsor may be asked to assist in locating off-post housing. Officers who can spare a little time and want to help can call Capt. Dolan or Mrs. Osterburg, Allied Student Training Div. 545/4212/1815 or 544-4202.

Payment of BAQ to Military Spouses

There are three categories of military spouses. Procedure to affect payment of Basic Allowance for Quarters (BAQ) for each category is as follows:

a. Only one spouse assigned to Ft. Benning: If spouse has no dependents in his/her right, that military member is considered the same as a bonafide bachelor and can only be paid BAQ as stipulated by USAIC Supplement 1 to AR 210-16.

b. Spouses assigned to Ft. Benning and one or both are eligible for family quarters: Statement of nonavailability issued at Family Housing for both spouses.

c. Spouses assigned to Ft. Benning and neither is eligible for family quarters: Payment of BAQ can be arranged as a personnel action between the unit commander concerned and Finance without a statement of nonavailability from either the Billeting Officer or Family Housing.

Getting away from it all - - - legally

There are many ways that a soldier can be absent from his job, most of them legal.

The most common form of absence is ordinary leave. Every soldier is authorized 30 days of leave a year, accrued at the rate of two-and-a-half days a calendar month.

DA policy encourages soldiers to take leave just about anytime they wish unless to do so would interfere with the unit mission. Soldiers may even request leave in conjunction with Temporary Duty (TDY) but must insure that military transportation is used only for the TDY portions of their travel.

Advance leave. If a soldier uses all of his or her accumulated leave and needs more time to take care of an emergency or personal problem, the commander may authorize up to 45 days advance leave. This leave will be taken from possible future accumulated leave.

Excess leave. If a soldier faced with an emergency doesn't have enough ordinary and advance leave, the commander can authorize excess leave until the emergency is taken care of. The maximum combined leave that the soldier is allowed is 60 days (ordinary + advance + excess). Soldiers will receive no pay and allowances while on excess leave. Of course, excess leave will not be deducted from accumulated leave balances.

Convalescent leave. Commanders may authorize convalescent leave to soldiers under medical care not fit to return to duty. Convalescent leave is not chargeable to accumulated leave.

Environmental and Morale leave. Soldiers stationed in areas of extreme hardship overseas may be authorized environmental and morale leave. This is deducted from accumulated balances as ordinary leave.

Rest and Recuperation leave (R&R). R&R is authorized from hostile fire areas where ordinary leave is not possible. R&R is charged against balances as ordinary leave.

Passes are not counted as leave and may be authorized for up to 96 hours. A regular pass is not issued for more than 72 hours (3 days). A 96-hours pass may be granted by commanders on special occasions or in special circumstances such as:

- compensation for extra work ("comp-time").
- compensation for long or difficult deployment from home station.
- compensation for duty in an isolated location where normal passes are inadequate.
- special recognition for exceptional performance, such as Soldier of the Month, Year, etc.

A pass may not be combined with a holiday period, nor may a 96-hour pass be combined with a regular pass or holiday period when the length of the time off exceeds 72 hours.

Other types of authorized absences include:

"Administrative Absence" which may include permissive TDY and is not chargeable as leave. Some of the cases where Admin leave may be granted include: attendance at meetings which deal with military duties; attendance as a member of the Board of Directors of a DoD credit union; participation in competitive sports events; attendance in response to a subpoena, summons, or jury duty; and participation in other official or semi-official programs of the military where TDY or TAD is not appropriate. These programs must enhance the soldier's value to the military or increase the soldier's understanding of the service.

"Proceed time" is not chargable as leave and is authorized for the preparation of PCS orders for soldiers entitled to transportation of dependents or shipment of household goods.

Leave and pass are one of the many benefits that the soldier is entitled to. In all cases it is the commander who determines what type of absence the soldier is authorized. There are very few civilian firms that allow employees 30 days vacation a year, and the soldier should take care not to abuse the leave and pass system. (ARNEWS)

USAIC crime watch

The most common recurring crime for November was the theft of money from wallets and purses. Of the fifteen reported incidents, fourteen involved wallets or purses left unattended and no preventative measures had been taken to insure safe keeping.

This type is the easiest for you, the individual to prevent and the most difficult for the Military Police to solve. There are usually no witnesses and no investigative leads that can be pursued to catch the thieves.

The incidents listed below were reported to the Military Police during the month of November 1977:

DATE	ITEM	CONTENTS	LOCATION
1 Nov 77	Wallet	$39.	Unsecure trousers in barracks.
1 Nov 77	Purse	$85.	Unattended in a desk at MAH.
1 Nov 77	Money	$30.	Closet in Olsen Hall.
2 Nov 77	Purse	$65.	Unattended on a table in the barracks.

27 Nov 77	Briefcase	$48.	Unattended in barracks.
28 Nov 77	Wallet	Money & Credit Cards	Unattended in Kelly Hill Recreation Center.
30 Nov 77	Purse	$100.	Vehicle in parking lot.

PREVENTATIVE TIPS

●Never carry an excessive amount of cash.

●Record all credit cards by number to include the name of the companies to insure prompt notification in case of loss.

CRIME PREVENTION REQUIRES SOMEONE TO DO SOMETHING POSITIVE TO STOP THE CRIMINAL. This can be done by increasing the offender's risk to gain his prize and by not affording him ready-made opportunities. CRIME PREVENTION IS EVERYBODY'S BUSINESS.

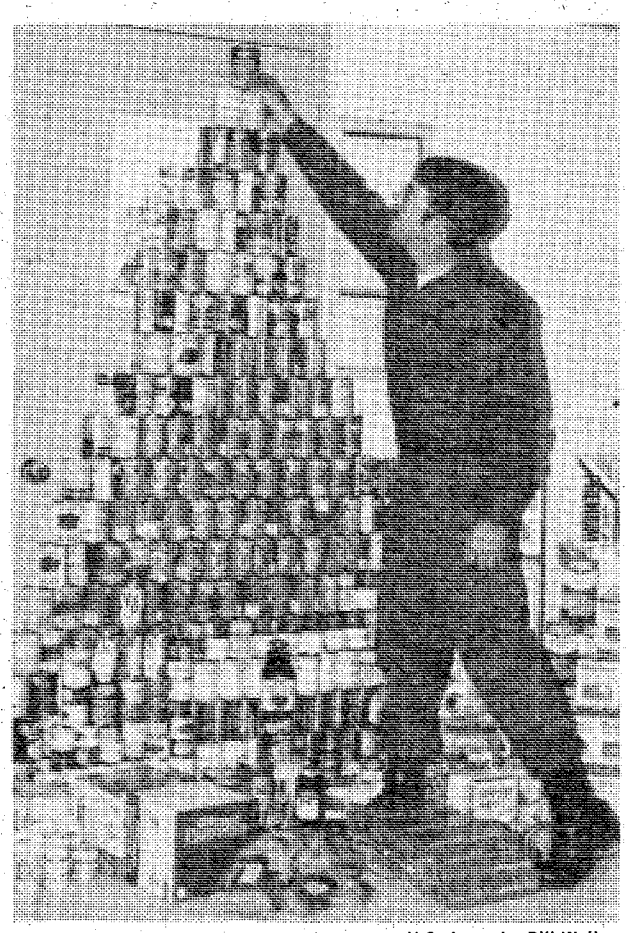
While she spoke, I was secretly relieved that I had quit smoking — and had visited the dentist before our interview!



"And the habit is getting to be rather expensive!", she insisted, forefinger in air.

"That's for sure," I thought, while I jingled the coins in my pocket.

"Elaine, what's your overall opinion of the course?", I inquired.

"Oh, it was great! I learned so much more than I knew before about ecology and pollution."

And by the way she spoke, one could tell.

NCOWC News

Board Meeting

On December 12, the Board and Chairwomen of the NCO Wives Club met for their monthly meeting at the NCOWC Clubhouse. The ladies discussed their last order of business for the year, to be brought before the membership.

Business Meeting

The members and board of the NCO Wives Club, held their final business meeting of the year on December 14, at the NCO Wives Clubhouse. The meeting convened at 7 p.m. with the President, Christine Bass, presiding. There were many items of discussion concerning their December activities and welfare projects.

Dinner Dance and Nursing Home Party

A 2 p.m. today the NCOWC will sponsor their Nursing Home Christmas Party at the Muscogee Manor Nursing Home. The patients will receive gifts and refreshments donated by the NCO Wives Club and their members.

At 7 p.m. members and guests of the NCOWC will have their Christmas Dinner Dance, at the Sand Hill NCO Club. Hostesses for the month are Roxanna Campbell, Ernestine Holmes, and Eleanor Scott.

Gift Wrapping Booth

NCO Wives Club members are into their third week of gift wrapping at the Main PX Mall.

The President and the first Vice President would like to remind the members that they are needed even more during the week of December 18 thru 24. Please respond!

Athletic uniform adopted

A standard gold and black athletic uniform set has been adopted by the Army, according to DA officials.

The five-piece uniform will replace athletic uniforms using the traditional branch colors. The new uniform is available for purchase by major commands when current uniforms are worn out or no longer useful.

The decision to make the gold with black striped uniforms standard came after major commands endorsed the idea submitted by a California soldier about a year ago. The idea netted the soldier an $800 suggestion award and initially saved the Army $22,900 in the cost of maintaining several types of uniform accounts.

Regulations permit local commanders to purchase athletic uniforms from appropriated funds. They are authorized for team sports participants and for individual sports activities (jogging, etc.). Local — not DA — Funds can be used to pay for the official Army athletic uniforms if commanders authorize the expense.

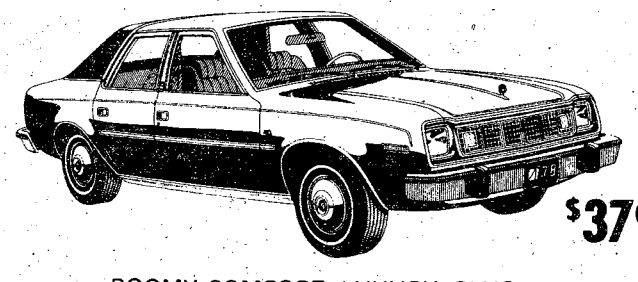
AUSA Defense Report

The success of the All VolunteerForce --wishing won't make it so

The Rand Corporation, one of the nation's premier "think tanks" has recently issued a voluminous study which concludes that the All Volunteer concept of manning the active Army, Navy, Marine Corps and Air Force has "worked." The press, almost without exception, covered the release of the report with euphoric comment. They reflected the general wish that the idea will be a success and that a return to a draft environment can be avoided.

Unfortunately most of the reportage was based on the news release accompanying the report rather than on detailed scrutiny of the 400-page report itself. Admittedly, it is asking a lot to expect a hard-pressed newsman to digest a thick report loaded with academic gobbledygook but one cannot escape the notion that they might have reached a somewhat less confident conclusion if they had done so.

If a judgment on the success or failure of the All Volunteer Force is limited to active elements alone, yes, the idea is a marginal success. Through hard work and the expenditure of hundreds of millions of dollars in advertising costs the active services are getting enough men and women of sufficiently high caliber to keep their ranks substantially filled. But what the Rand Report and the resulting news coverage failed to do was to look at the Total Force—the amalgamation of active and reserve forces that we have devised in the recent past to meet our far-flung security obligations without help from Selective Service. The report almost totally ignores or glosses over manpower problems in the reserves and our rapidly dwindling ability to mobilize in timely fashion.



To varying degrees all the reserve elements of the services have experienced a decline in enlistments in the absence of the draft. The situation is particularly bad in the Army Reserve, Army National Guard and Marine Corps Reserve. The pool of individual reservists, known as the IRR, is so depleted that by 1980 it will be more than 300,000 below mobilization requirements. Personnel in this pool are those whose six-year service obligation was partially fulfilled by draft or volunteer service. The draft machinery itself is so emasculated that it could not come close to fulfilling service requirements for draftees to reach training centers within 60 days of a mobilization order. It would be at least seven months before the first drafted replacements could reach forces in combat.

As much as we all may want the All Volunteer force to work we cannot ignore these realities. Only one segment of the concept is working. The rest of it—the part that must provide mobilization muscle—is not. Wishful thinking won't make it work. Only drastic action and greater manpower procurement costs can do that.

Liquid protein diet could be harmful

By Sue Davis

Fat. Everyone wants to lose it, but one of the quickest methods of dieting has proven to be harmful.

The Food and Drug Administration (FDA) has announced that 31 people, both men and women, have died from cardiac complications attributed to the liquid protein diet.

The all-protein weight reduction diet, introduced by Dr. Robert Linn in his book "The Last Chance Diet," is a rapidly growing method of inducing weight loss and weight control. This substance, available in a variety of brands, may be readily purchased "over the counter" from most drug and health food stores.

Liquid protein has been employed for years by athletes as a diet supplement — that is, those utilizing the liquid protein diet also are regularly. Unfortunately, many people who desire to lose extra weight quickly, use it solely as a means of dieting.

U.S. Army medical facilities have been directed by the Surgeon General to discontinue prescribing the liquid protein diet if they have been prescribing it.

Martin Army Hospital (MAH) personnel are concerned about anyone who may be using the liquid protein diet without a doctor's supervision. Likewise, they have been advised to urge any patient now utilizing the diet to discontinue it until sufficient investigation reveals whether or not the diet is safe.

The hospital has also requested that all medical treatment facilities report any known cardiac or other complication(s) associated with the use of the all-protein diet. To assist (MAH) with this task, they ask that any military member, dependent or retiree who may be using the all-protein diet without the guidance of a physician, call the Chairman, Nutritional Care Committee, 544-1542 or 544-1974.

LtCol. Marcia L. Beasley, Registered Dietitian and Chief, Food Service Division, stresses. "We're most concerned with those who are taking only the all-protein diet rather than those who use it as a supplement," "Liquid protein used without the ingestion of other foods may result in potassium depletion which in turn affects regulation of the heart muscle. This mineral is vital for muscle control."

As difficult as it may be to accept, there is only one way to lose weight and control it afterwards. Says LtCol. Beasley, "We try to incorporate behavior modifications so that the effective means of dieting is by change of behavior. When, where and why you're eating may be more important than what you're eating."

So forget the fad diets and think thin!

Vol. 37, No. 15 | "A Ledger-Enquirer Newspaper published in the Interest of the Personnel of Fort Benning | Dec. 23 - 29, 1977

CHRISTMAS: Battlefield diaries recount a bleak winter 200 years ago

It was two centuries ago this year that a ragged army of 9,000 men under the command of General George Washington crossed the Schuylkill River in Pennsylvania and stopped in the wintry windswept hills of Valley Forge, not far from Philadelphia. Although ill-clothed and starving, they called upon their last reserves of strength and built almost 1,000 cabins in less than two weeks.

Today, not one of those cabins remains. Visitors will find a well-kept national park occupying more than 2,100 acres of the original campsite. Paved roads, bicycle paths and horse trails allow visitors to see the inner and outer line of entrenchments, the star redoubts, redans, rifle pits, brigade hospital, and such monuments as the Washington Memorial Chapel and the Bell Tower.

But during the encampment of that frigid December of 1977, the atmosphere was not so pleasant.

"Had there fallen deep snows. . .the whole army must have inevitably perished. We arrived at Valley Forge in the evening. I lay there two nights and one day and had not a morsel of anything to eat."

—Private Joseph Martin

A dozen so of the old stone houses where the Commander-in-Chief and his generals were housed have been carefully restored, along with the little one-room schoolhouse, built in 1705, which was used as an army hospital. Replicas of the log huts occupied by the soldiers stand along the cleared hillsides.

"We. . . are now building huts for our winter quarters without nails or tools so that I suppose we may possibly render ourselves very comfortable by the time winter is over."

—Colonel Henry B. Livingston

Visitors may see at the Museum of the Valley Forge Historical Society a collection of Washingtonia and other military relics of the Revolution. Among the items are Washington's battered field tent, the Commander-in-Chief's original flag with its six pointed stars, and two of the twelve priceless silver drinking cups out of which Washington drank, his only luxury at Valley Forge. None of the tattered uniforms

Lighting policy

In the interest of saving energy, the following lighting policies have been announced for all activities on Ft. Benning:

- Exterior displays in unit, troop billets and family housing will be non-electrical.
- Interior decorative lighting will be prudent and limited to a minimum of displays.
- Interior and exterior decorative lighting will be lit only during the evening hours of 6 until 10 p.m., except on Christmas Eve, lighting is authorized until 2 a.m. December 25.

Compliance with these policies will enable the Infantry Center to save on its energy expenditures over the holiday season; every little bit helps.

Christmas: Internationally speaking

Christmas is celebrated world-wide in various traditional ways. Two members of the USAIC Liaison Office describe how Christmas is celebrated in their country.

In Germany, explains SGM Peter Przgode of the German Liaison, "Christmas is celebrated on the 25th and the 26th. The area you come from determines how you celebrate it."

On Christmas eve in Silesia, Father Christmas pays the children a visit as they gather around the Christmas tree. He has with him a large book, a sack full of gifts and a strap.

The book contains all the good and bad deeds the children have committed all year. Father Christmas questions each child on his behavior and will check it against what is written in the book. After the children say a little Christmas ode, he distributes gifts to the good children and administers the strap to the naughty ones.

"I've never seen him whip any of them," Przgode said with a smile.

"My wife is from lower Saxony," he continued. "There, the Christ child comes. He will ring the bell atop the Christmas tree lit with real candles and the children come in and unwrap the gifts he has left there."

After the gifts have been unwrapped, the family will have the traditional Bluefish dinner while listening to Christmas music. "Following dinner, the family attends Midnight Mass as they do in the United States," said Przgode.

"The 25th is a real festival for the family and normally no guests are present. Friends usually come over the next day."

LtCol. Jacques Hatte, French Liaison Officer, talked about a French Christmas.

In France, family celebrations begin with the decoration of the Christmas tree a few days before Christmas. Each year, the family usually set up a Christmas Crib (Nativity Scene) on a small platform in a prominent part of the house. This crib displays a donkey, ox and a small replica of the Holy Family but the manager remains empty.

On the evening of the 24th, the family attends Midnight Mass. When they return from Mass, they put the Christ child in the manager, and there is a late supper known as the "reveillon." The meal varies according to the region of France. In Alsace, for example, the traditional goose is brought in on a platter and given the place of honor on the table.

In Burgandy, turkey and chestnuts are served. The favorite dishes in Paris and the Ile de France are oysters, foie gras and a traditional cake in the form of a yule log, called "Buche de Noel," loosely translated as Christmas Log Cake. It is a roll cake, especially decorated to look like the trunk of a tree, garnished with decorative holly leaves.

Before going to bed, the children put their shoes before the chimney with hopes of finding them stuffed with gifts. While they are asleep, small toys, sweets and fruits are hung on the branches of the tree, adding to the gifts that Father Christmas leaves in the shoes by the fireplace.

News in brief

Washington club open to all servicemembers

Enlisted members of the Armed Forces visiting Washington, D.C., at Christmas — or any time of year — can find bargain-rpiced accomodations at the Soldiers, Sailors, Marines, and Airmen's (SSMA) Club.

Centrally located at 1015 L Street, Northwest, the SSMA Club is open to active duty enlisted men and women, Service academy cadets, enlisted Reservists on active duty for training, and enlisted men and women from other nations. The club is open 24 hours a day, seven days a week. A Servicemember's ID is the only membership card required.

The SSMA Club offers convenient, comfortable lodging in the heart of the Nation's Capital for as little as $5 a day. In addition, the Club has recreation complete with ping pong and billiards, a well stocked library, a friendly television lounge, and a canteen that serves meals and snacks at budget prices.

The SSMA Club is supported by a non-profit organization. Active financial support from honorary memberships and donations keep the Club's remarkable services at very low prices.

The well-run, comfortable SSMA Club is a pleasant change from the impersonal atmosphere of the average motel or hotel. Especially during the holidays, it offers a homelike "home away from home." Servicemembers planning to visit Washington, D.C., can obtain more information about the SSMA Club from Mrs. William H. Beard, SSMA Club, 1015 L Street, NW, Washington, D.C. 20001, or calling (202) 234-0141. (AFPS)

'Yes, Virginia, there is a . . .'

"Yes, Virginia, there is a Santa Claus — but a 35-foot one!"

If you had a coat rack, a roll of chicken wire, lumber, about 200 packages of crepe paper, and the Christmas spirit, what would you make? Well, with a little forethought and innovation, you could turn that into a giant Santa!

The Ft. Benning Officer's Club is interested in having "super" decorations and Maj. Barry D. Gasdek is interested in assisting them. Gasdek, now at the Army Transportation Center, Ft. Eustis, Va., with the Army Training Board, built the super Santa just before his transfer. He was a member of the Combat Arms Training Board, which was abolished in October to form the ATB.

What initially started out to be something a little extra for a Christmas party (decorating a ballroom) has almost turned into a yearly tradition for Gasdek.

"I've always enjoyed being creative at least once a year," explained Gasdek. "I think internally everyone has a need to create something. This could be done by carpenters on the houses they build, or landscapers by the way they arrange shrubs and plants — but at times, it is a little more difficult for an Army officer to do this."

The giant Santa took two days to construct. The first day the frame was built, and the second day it was stuffed with paper. Some elves, however, were necessary to assist with the paper stuffing.

Gasdek has always had an interest in art and enjoys doing things with his hands. These, however correlate very little with his job. Helping occasionally decorate a part of the Officer's Club fulfills two needs. The clubs by having decorations and his by having a chance to create!

In college, he used to work on making parade floats. This concept uses chicken wire to mold things into any shape and one can make about anything they desire. The wire is then stuffed with crepe paper, using various colors to add realism, contrast, and aesthetic appeal.

He had previously assisted with many creations at the Benning Officer's Club. They ranged from 35-foot Santas and snowmen at Christmas, to 15-foot German figures for Octoberfests; Cameo's for Mother's Day; Cornucopias for Thanksgiving and even one year a giant three-dimensional egg for Easter! All of this is done on his own time, usually on weekends.

Maj. Barry Gasdek stands along side of his 35-foot Santa Claus. The giant Santa is made from a coat rack; a roll of chicken wire and a lot of crepe paper and it stands in the Ft. Benning Officers' Club.

Battlefield diaries

have survived the passage of the years, however, so none are on display.

"There comes a soldier, his bare feet are seen thro' his worn-out shoes, his legs nearly naked from the tattered remains of an only pair of stockings, his breeches not sufficient to cover his nakedness. His whole appearance pictures a person forsaken and discouraged. He crys, 'I am sick, my feet lame, my legs sore, my body covered with this tormenting itch'."

—Surgeon Alebigence Waldo

Another attraction of Valley Forge is the Washington Memorial Chapel. Its lectern is the only monument at Valley Forge to a British soldier, Major General Edward Braddock, who was Washington's commander in the French and Indian Wars. Also noteworthy are the statuettes of Colonial soldiers in the choir stalls and the brilliantly colored windows which depict the origin and early history of our Nation.

Valley Forge has been a Pennsylvania State Park since 1903, and in March 1976, it became a National Historical Park under the National Park Service.

One of the first visitors to the area after the American Revolution was George Washington, then a civilian. He, perhaps more than anyone, realized the significance of the area.

"To see men without clothes to cover their nakedness, without blankets to lie upon, without shoes (for the want of which their marches might be traced by the blood from their feet), and also as often without provisions as with them, marching through the frost and snow, and at Christmas taking up their quarters within a day's march of the enemy without a house or hut to cover them until these could be built, and submitting without a murmur, is proof of patience and obedience which, in my opinion, can scarce be paralleled."

—General George Washington

*SINGLE OCCUPANCY

Camellia is an apartment motel. We don't rent rooms, we rent furnished apartments with all the features of a regular motel plus added conveniences that cannot be provided with just a single room — and all at the same, or most times lower rates than the single-room motel. For example, our "standard" unit is comprised of two bedrooms, combination living room-dining room, bathroom and fully furnished kitchen including refrigerator, stove, cooking utensils, and table service for six people. These are some of the "extras" but at no extra cost. Our 150 units are in separate buildings with usually four apartments in each building, which adds to a person's or family's privacy.

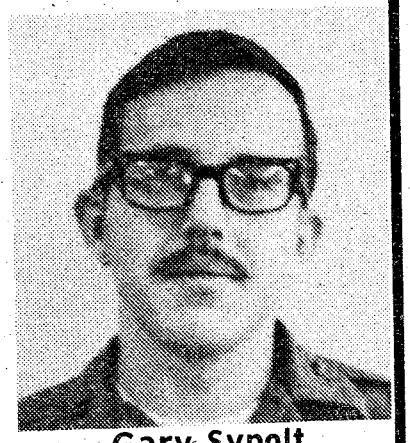
Glad you asked . . .

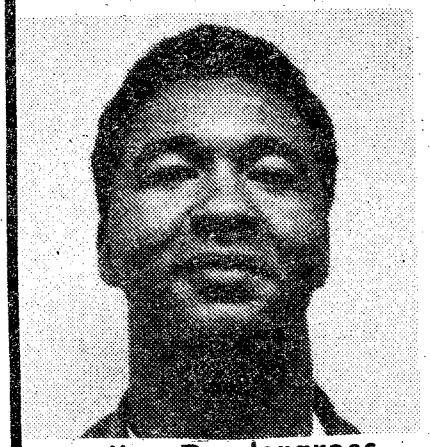
What does Christmas mean to you?



By Debra Hilgeman

Marguerite Morris

Marguerite Morris, DAC , Tactics Dept.



Christmas is a lovely season, with friends and family coming together to enjoy each other's company and sharing good food.

Gary Sypolt

Capt Gary Sypolt, 12th Co, 1st Bn, TSB

Christmas is a time of love and peace and a time of sharing. It is also a time to be together with those we love. It is a time to reflect on our accomplishments of the past year and plan for the year to come.

Kelley Pendergrass

Sgt. Kelley Pendergrass, HHC, 4th Stu Bn, TSB

Christmas to me is going home and eating Mom's cooking, seeing old friends and exchanging gifts with the family and friends.

Kathy Withrow

Kathy Withrow, dependent

Christmas is when families and friends get together to express their love, thanks and appreciation.

Connie Wertzbaugher

Sgt. Connie Wertzbaugher, Instructor, Airborne School

Christmas to me means seeing people that I have not seen in a long time and going home to see my family. Most of all, it means the time for sharing and giving and remembering the birth of Christ.

Gennie Grant

SSgt. Gennie Grant, 11th Co, TSB

Christmas is a time to pray and thank God for being able to rejoice with my family. The season means so much to me, I can't seem to find the words to express what I feel. Happiness and peace to all.

Don't take the 'merry' out of Merry Christmas

Unfortunately for many Americans the Christmas-New Year holiday season changes from one of merriment to deep sadness because a loved one has been killed or injured in an accident. The principle hazard is exposure on the nation's highways. Personnel planning to travel long distances are urged to use commercial transportation as their chances of safe arrival are much improved by leaving the driving to the experts.

If you do plan on driving or riding with someone else in a privately owned vehicle, consider the following safety tips:

- Plan the trip in advance.
- Be sure the vehicle is in a safe operating condition.
- Check the weather report between points of departure and destination.
- Plan rest stops and use them.
- Use the Interstate highway system as much as possible since you will be much safer on these controlled high speed arteries. You will also make better time.
- Insist on no drinking. Save your drinking and merrymaking until after you arrive.

While on leave remember to obey the rules of defensive driving. You can get killed after you arrive through only a moment's carelessness.

If by chance you find yourself exposed to the very serious danger of riding with a reckless, careless or drunken driver, you must remove yourself from this very serious situation. If you can do so safely, turn off the ignition, remove the switch key and get out after the vehicle stops. Above all, remember, you have only one life, don't let some fool squander it for you.

Plan your return trip as carefully as you did the trip home. If you are going to be late, accept it. Call your unit. They would rather have you back late than not at all.

Christmas can be merry for you and your loved ones if you will think and act safely.

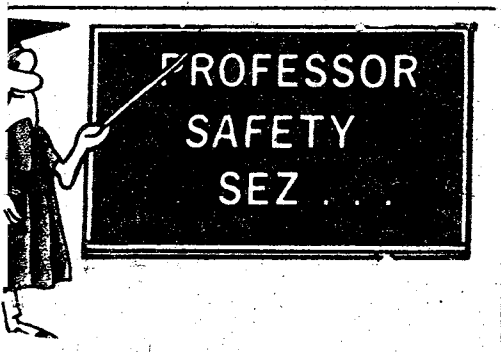
On the average, 50 people have attended each of the last three sessions and have viewed films, participated in athletics, encounter sessions, comparative religion seminars and generally had good times and fulfilling experiences.

Many casual personnel that have dropped or resigned from training for various reasons who are awaiting assignment or return to training find themselves in a military limbo. The retreats are designed to give some meaning to the time the soldier spends at Ft. Benning and instill a feeling of self-worth in each person by giving them the opportunity to better know themselves and those around them.



The theme of the last outing, held at the Blessed Trinity Retreat Center in Alabama, was friendship. The uniform was civilian attire and the food and drink was provided by the Chaplain's Office.

According to Pvt. Bill DeLong, attached to the Holding Detachment, 4th Bn, "We had things like a 'Trust Walk' where you are led through the forest with your eyes closed by someone you don't know. We then discussed how we felt being led by someone we had never met before."

Transportation to the site in Alabama was provided by B Co, 1/29 Inf. The driver was Sp4 James Mayo. Mayo was so impressed with the retreat he obtained permission to stay and participate. He explained that, "The retreat helped people express themselves and get along better with other people."

The Chaplain's Office has received numerous favorable comments as to the effect of the program on morale of the troops and intends to continue its efforts.

In addition to the location in Alabama, a retreat has also been held at the Uchee Creek Recreation Center and Chaplain Ortiz hopes to hold a future retreat at Callaway Gardens.

3rd Bn, 1st AIT Bde Christmas Party

Some two hundred cadre and dependents of the 3rd Bn, 1st AIT Bde celebrated Christmas with a visit from Santa Claus in the battalion consolidated dining facility on December 10. The occasion marked the completion of the battalion's move from Harmony Church to Kinsman Barracks at Sand Hill.

While the battalion cadre readied the new barracks for occupancy by AIT trainees, the cadre wives led by Mrs. Shirley Shugart, Mrs. Rosie Black, Mrs. Joyce Walsh, Mrs. Karen Larson, Mrs. Irene Bates, Mrs. Eula Thomas and Mrs. Marie James bought and wrapped gifts. They also assisted Santa Claus in distributing the gifts to each battalion dependent child.

Dining Facility Manager, SFC James A. Archuleta and his cooks decorated the dining room for the Christmas party and also provided refreshments for all the kids.

MERRY CHRISTMAS to all of our readers, and the happiest and safest holiday ever!

COMEDREX: MEDDAC pers 'hands-on' tra

By Jon Kissane

In a new and innovative field training exercise, units of FORSCOM and the U.S. Army Health Services Command joined forces in a Combined Medical Readiness Exercise (COMEDREX), conducted December 12-17 at Ft. Benning.

The participants, Martin Army Hospital and the 2nd Combat Support Hospital, as well as other units of the 34th Medical Battalion, conducted the exercise in which active duty soldiers were provided outpatient, inpatient and surgical care in a modern combat support hospital.

The field training exercise, the first of its kind conducted on such a large scale, served several functions crucial to the readiness of the AMEDD units and personnel. In providing an opportunity for MEDDAC personnel to treat actual patients in their own facility, using their own equipment, it upgraded experience and skill in caring for the soldier.

Further, it provided MEDDAC personnel with an orientation and training experience in the type of facility and equipment they would be required to use in a combat situation or a civil diaster. An added benefit of the exercise was that it gave the soldier patients a realistic idea of the type medical facility available only minutes from the battlefield, should it ever be needed.

The COMEDREX was conceived and coordinated by the major units involved: LtCol. Peter Iber, commander of the 2nd CSH; Col. Anton Hitzelberger, commander MEDDAC; and LtCol. Mayo Ellingson, commander, 34th Med Bn. The 2nd CSH provided the hospital facility including wards, operating room, laboratory, X-ray, pharmacy, sterile preparations, power, hot and cold water, and mess and billeting for t participants. MAH provided and nursing staff as well a supply account, ration point hygiene support.

Support provided by other 34th Med Bn included air am port by the 498th Med Co, am port by the 690th Med Co, am tion familiarization flights b Avn Co. In addition, training didactic and practical, were hours-a-day by the professio both hospitals, as well as rep from USAIC. Over 600 p ticipated in classes.

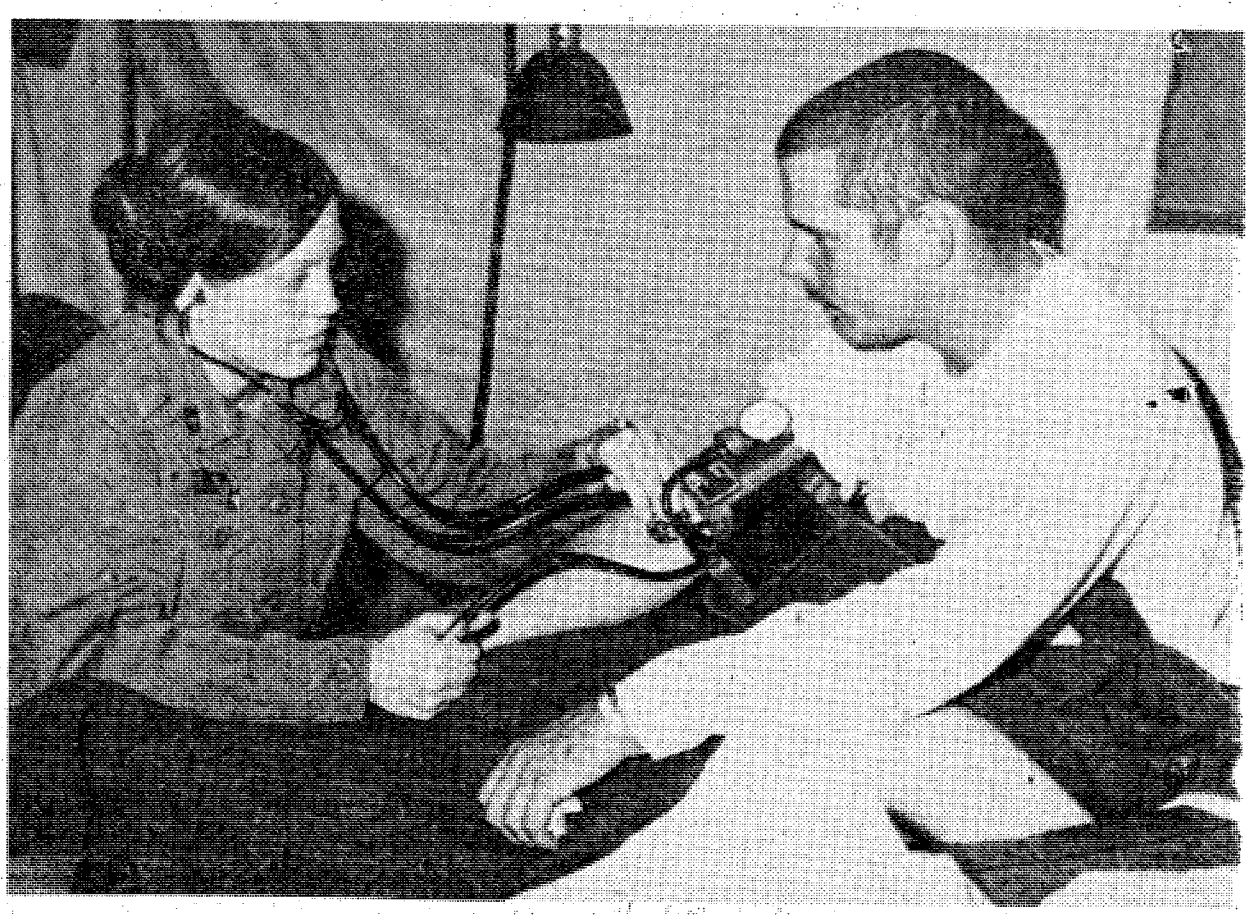
facilities, complete with temperature and humidity controlled environment and comprehensive surgical equipment as close as possible to the wounded soldier. The hospital is completely self contained and when broken down for movement consists of four basic components that can be either towed or carried away by helicopter. The expandable shelters, which contain a specific modern hospital service such as X-ray, operating room or laboratory, unfold like a puzzle box and contain all the equipment, including wiring and plumbing, that a small hospital would have.



Inflatable shelters provide the wards for the CSH. These rubber structures can be rolled up like huge air mattresses for movement, but when inflated they provide surgically clean shelters that measure 12 feet high by 24 feet wide and are 52 feet long. The ward boxes, like travel trailers, are packed with all the equipment used in the wards such as florescent lights, sinks, beds and other standard hospital equipment. The power source for the MUST hospital is a turbine-powered utility pack that provides heating and cooling, electricity, and hot and cold water.

During the exercise, the CSH, operating as an extension of MAH, cared for an average of 30 patients in its wards each day, with problems consisting of anything from the flu to injuries sustained in a night parachute jump. The patients were admitted through the outpatient clinic or the emergency room, both of which operated in the field.

Once admitted, all the patient care and support was provided by CSH's services and equipment. X-ray, laboratory and emergency room services were operated round-the-clock. The field mess even provided specially modified patients' diets, as prescribed by physicians.

In addition to the MUST inflatable ward used for intensive care, two conventional tent wards were used to care for minimal and intermediate care patients. The staffing on all the wards and in all services was provided by MAH and the 2nd CSH. Corpsmen and technicians from both hospitals worked together on each shift under the supervision of nurses, physicians and dieticians from MAH.

Other personnel critical to the success of the exercise were the facilities engineers of the 2nd CSH, who set up and operated the power packs and maintained all of the utilities used by the hospital. On call 24 hours-a-day, they insured there was refrigeration for perishable foods and drugs, and power for lights, equipment and temperature for the MUST complex. The unit communications section installed telephones and maintained a switchboard for the entire hospital complex. They handled an average of over 400 calls per day, as well as maintaining radio communications with MEDEVAC helicopters.

The initial reaction to the CSH by most personnel was surprise at how far Army field medicine had developed. The clean, well-lighted MUST shelters and the fairly comprehensive services provided in field are a far cry from the image p trayed by a certain popular televis series.

COMEDREX was such a success was met with such enthusiasm from units involved, that another such exerc is already being programmed. The bene of medical readiness exercises apply only to the units participating, but m importantly to the individual sold whose life may someday depend upon teamwork and skill of the Army's medi forces.

Income report due

Only a few days remain for Georgia veterans and dependents on the Veterans Administration's pension rolls to file reports on their income for 1977.

Income Questionnaire cards were mailed with November 1 pension checks; these cards must be returned to the VA by Jan. 1, 1978.

Georgia Veterans Service Director Pete Wheeler notes that the VA must receive this information by January 1 to determine the pension amounts for the coming year.

"Failure to complete and return the 'IQ' cards by the Jan. 1, 1978 deadline could result in a suspension of payments, or the repayment of some benefits to the VA," Wheeler said.

"In fact," he added, "those who fail to return the questionnaires by January 1, will receive a letter instead of a check from the VA on February 1 explaining why their pension payments have been suspended."

USAIC crime watch

Christmas time is a Busy time for all. Everyone is going out and do- a lot of Christmas shopping, right? Well it is also a very active and sy time for the Burglar. We would like to urge you to take steps to ep the Burglar outside of your home, and not invite him in. We, Ft Benning Military Police have come up with some little common ise tips which we would like to pass on to you. This could very ll remind you of some little thing that you may have forgotten out security of your home and the ever prevalent fact that unless u take an active role your home may be entered and your Christ- s ruined. We are interested in creating an environmental non- ndusive to crime — and we ask you to help us help you.

AFEGUARDING YOUR RESIDENCE DURING THE HOLIDAY

E AND LOCK ALL DOORS AND WINDOWS IN YOUR HOME WHEN GO OUT. If the intruder cannot enter your house ugh the door, statistics show that he will try to r through a window.

CKED WINDOWS AND DOORS MAKE ENTRY SIMPLE TO EVEN LEAST EXPERIENCED THIEF.

MBER: No structure is 100% secure. The harder you it to gain entry, the more likely the potential uder will go elsewhere.

MAKE YOUR RESIDENCE LOOK OCCUPIED

one inner light (Bathroom or Hallway) burning. will give the impression that someone is home.

d those actions which will attract the Burglar: l Newspaper Delivery Service. your neighbor to collect your mail daily.

leave notes indicating your absence from home.

t "HIDE" the key to the door in such places as ail box or under the door mat. IF YOU CAN HIDE E BURGLAR CAN FIND IT.

PROTECT YOUR VALUABLES

Record the Description and Serial Numbers of such items as your Radios, ameras, Television Set, and small appliances. This will aid Law Enforcement Officials in obtaining recovery.

PERSONAL PROPERTY RECORD

DESCRIPTION/MODEL NUMBER	SERIAL NUMBER

Small valuable items as Jewelry and negotiable Securities should be kept in a secured container under lock and key. USE A SECURITY DEPOSIT BOX AT YOUR BANK. Minimize the amount of cash to be maintained in your home.

KNOW YOUR NEIGHBOR

Don't be an Island. NEIGHBORHOOD WATCH IS THE KEY. Develop and maintain, with your neighbor, a mutual plan for keeping your home under surveillance. The Military Policeman patrolling your neighborhood may not recognize a stranger in your yard, BUT YOUR NEIGHBOR WOULD.

Mail embargo lifted

The U.S. Postal Service has announced the lifting of the embargo on International Surface Mail due to the end of the dock workers' strike at East and Gulf Coast ports.

This means surface mail to all destinations now will be accepted at all post offices. The Postal Service says that mail to formerly embargoed areas will be competing for space aboard vessels with other commodities which are backlogged at the East and Gulf Coast ports in the millions of pounds.

Since the suggested Christmas mailing deadlines for most of the embargoed areas have passed, the Postal Service advises mailers sending Christmas packages by surface mail to notify the recipient by Air Mail letter that the possibility exists the parcel may not be received by Christmas due to the aftereffects of the dock strike.

An alternative for mailers is to use Air Mail, which will insure parcels will reach recipients in time for Christmas.

The Postal Service says outgoing surface mail in the system after the strike began was moved by routing it through Canada and sending it on non-container ships that were not affected by the strike.

Aliens must report address

Aliens residing in the United States and its possessions are reminded that they must report their addresses to the Attorney General during the month of January, according to the Immigration and Nationality Act.

Aliens temporarily out of the country during January should not report their addresses until they return to this country. They have 10 days to report their addresses following their return.

The U. S. Post Office has the necessary cards for aliens needing to report their residence. After filling out the card, the writer must sign it before mailing.

Aliens failing to report their addresses to the Attorney General will face serious penalties. Resident service members and relatives of service members who are not citizens must remember to submit their reports.

10-8 on the warpost

By "HOSS" KACI 4615

Once upon a time, there was a man named Scrooge. He was a crotchety, penny-pinching old miser who thought that people who collected for charities were money-grubbing parasites.

"Humbug" he would rumble. "They're all a bunch of phonies."

Now Scrooge happened to have a CB in his car, but only because it had come free with the car. He had grumbled about the extra paperwork, but had dutifully filled out the license application. He never talked much on it because he thought there were too many "phonies" and "do-gooders" using it.

Scrooge also disliked Christmas.

"Trees, presents? Bah! Humbug!"

So it wasn't unusual for him to be working late one Christmas Eve. When he left his office that Christmas Eve long after dark, snow had been falling for some time and the streets were quite slick.

As he drove toward his house, Scrooge turned his CB on to find out if any of the roads were closed by the snow. However, when he turned to channel 19, he heard a group of people discussing a coffee break. Thinking that he could use a little warming up, Scrooge reached for his mike.

"Break 19. This is Mr. S. Where's the coffee break?"

"Good evening, Mr. S. This is Lonesome Polecat. We're having a coffee break down at the Elite Truck Stop all night tonight.

You see, there's a young fellow called Tiny Tim who needs an operation so he can walk and we're trying to raise enough money to finance the operation as a Christmas present. We only need a few more dollars to make it and any contribution would be welcome, 10-4."

Scrooge didn't even bother to reply.

"Another bunch of do-gooders," he thought as he snapped off the CB. He had become so engrossed in anger that he didn't notice the curve until he was already skidding on the icy pavement. Before he could recover, he went crunching through the guard rail and down a hill.

When he came to, his first thought was to get out of the car. But when he tried to move, he found that his legs were crushed and caught in the wreckage. He panicked and began to beat the window seeking a way out. Then, nearly exhausted, he noticed the CB.

Gratitude was not a normal emotion for Scrooge, but he felt it when he saw the power light come on in that CB set. Turning to the emergency channel, he keyed the mike:

"Break 9. Emergency! Somebody help me!"

"This is emergency monitor KCDE 2253. What's the trouble?"

"My car went off the road, please help me!"

"We're calling the Highway Patrol now, sir. Please give me your location and the extent of any injuries."

"I went through the guard rail on Highway 19 about five miles south of the Beltway. There's nobody else here and I can't move my legs."

"Please remain calm, sir. The police and an ambulance are on the way."

Even through his agony, Scrooge marveled at the voice.

Though sounding cool and professional, it was the voice of a teenage boy. The voice continued:

"Don't worry about your legs, sir. I know many doctors and they can work wonders. I'm sure you'll be walking again in no time."

Then as he watched the flashing red and blue lights approach, Scrooge realized who the emergency monitor was, and a great change came over him. Silently vowing that, no matter what happened to himself, he would see that one other person would walk again, Scrooge keyed the mike one final time.

"God bless you, Tiny Tim."

"God bless us all, sir. Merry Christmas."

January promotions down

The January promotions (E-5) outlook is better for some officers while planned enlisted promotions took a dive from December's figures, according to a list released by DA last week.

The total enlisted promotions number 4,681 and include 3,173 to E-5; 862 to E-6; 436 to E-7; 160 to E-8 and 50 to E-9. After January hikes, 5,969 remain on the E-7 list; 1,863 remain on the E-8 list and 947 on the E-9 list.

Promotion lists for E-5/6 are maintained by field promotion authorities.

DA officials forecast that January officer hikes will total 600.

Officer promotion schedules call for 36 to colonel; 111 to lieutenant colonel; 175 to major, and 278 to captain.

After January officer promotions, 522 will remain on the 0-6 list; 1187 on the 0-5 list and 1059 on the 0-4 list.

Promotions for 0-3 will exhaust current list; A new list has not yet been published. (ARNEWS)

Today Kelly Blixton works as an electrician. She used to be a waitress.

Kelly enjoyed traveling and working at odd jobs, but it wasn't always fun. "I went through a long period of feeling dissatisfied with myself and what I was doing. I hadn't achieved anything."

Kelly decided to go to a technical school. Now she's an apprentice electrician and loves it.

Over a million such technical jobs are waiting to be filled. And usually it takes only two years of technical training to qualify.

If you feel confused or dead-ended, take a tip from Kelly: "You can be more than you are. Write to 'Careers' for a free record-brochure full of entertaining, unbiased information that tells you how."
