In Congressional benefit battle

Soldiers end with split decision

By Marc Davis

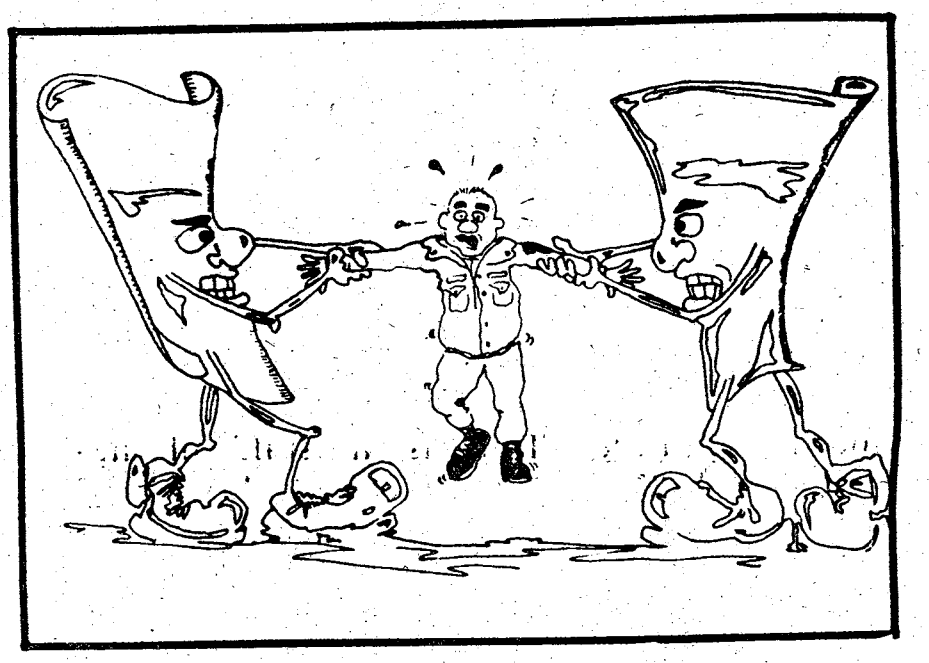
Soldiers won a few and lost a few with the 94th Congress which adjourned on October 1st. Per diem allowance rose to a maximum of $35 per day and higher in certain areas but enlisted members were limited to a maximum of 60 days leave they could sell back over an entire career. The current GI education bill ended for future soldiers but it was replaced by a contributory education program in which the soldier pays for part. And for retirees, Congress ended the one per cent kicker but also assured soldiers who remain on active duty that they will not lose retired pay.

Compensation and Benefits

Many of the legislative measures dealt with the area of compensation and benefits. The increase in per diem rates came in two increments with Congress approving a ceiling of $35. The first rise was a DoD mandated rise to $33 per day last May and a further increase to $35 in October. Certain high cost areas were designated with rates of $40 to $50 per day.

Enlisted members were put on the same level as officers as far as leave sell-back is concerned. Enlisted soldiers now can sell back a maximum of 60 days leave during their entire term of service. Also any leave accrued after Sept. 1, 1976 will be paid at the basic pay rate only and not for BAQ and subsistence.

Congress indirectly affected the October 1st pay raise. Legislation was passed to allow the President to reallocate up to 25 per cent of the basic pay increase to the allowances. The President directed that the full 25 per cent of the pay raise go to BAQ.



Congress voted to continue the full funding of military commissaries. If they had not, costs would have risen requiring soldiers to pay more for commissary goods. Without the full funding measure, commissary patrons would have had to pay the full costs of shipment of goods and salaries for commissary workers thus reducing the savings of shopping at commissaries.

Educational Benefits

During the final hours of the 94th Congress, legislation was passed that terminated the GI Bill for soldiers entering the Army after Dec. 31, 1976 and instituted the Post-Vietnam Era Veterans' Education Assistance Act of 1977. The change had little effect on current soldiers except that the bill set a deadline of December 1989 for use of benefits.

Soldiers entering the Army on or after Jan. 1, 1976, to receive educational benefits, must contribute up to a maximum of $75 per month with the VA matching two for one. For every dollar contributed by the soldier VA will contribute two.

The act also terminated the current Predischarge Education

Program (PREP) which was funded by VA. DA plans to continue a high school completion program which is Army funded.

Retired Pay

Congress ended the one per cent retired pay "kicker" which was originally intended to help the retired servicemember keep up with the changes in the cost of living.

The one per cent was added to the rise in the Consumer Price Index (CPI) to offset the delay from the CPI rise and the actual retired pay rise. The kicker, in fact, raised the military retired pay increases above that of civilians.

The measure established the dates of March 1st and September 1st of each year as the date of pay increases rather than keying the raised to follow the CPI rise. The retired pay raise will still be adjusted by the CPI rise but over a six-month period.

Corrective legislation was enacted that eliminated the potential for military members to face a loss of retired pay by virtue of continued active service. The Retired Pay Inversion measure assured servicemembers they would receive the maximum amount to which they would be entitled.

PCS and Moves

An increase in PCS funding by Congress will allow the Army to terminate some overseas tour extensions. The extensions were necessary to cut down on moving costs.

There may be sufficient funds available to completely terminate the extensions in FY 77.

Legislation was passed making permanent the exemption for military to report moving expenses as reportable income. Had the legislation not been passed it would have placed a severe burden on soldiers making PCS moves in less than 39 weeks and for distances of less than 50 miles.

Movement of dependents in conjunction with a short tour would have been taxable also.

The FY 76 Appropriations Act passed by Congress permits military personnel to move themselves and profit from their own labor if the cost is less than the government estimate of the move.

Reserve Components

Several legislative measures directly affected members of the Reserve Components. The President now has the authority to order up to 50,000 reservists to active duty for a period up to 90 days. This authority will be utilized only when a crisis cannot be met using volunteers.

One measure was important because Congress did not include it in the FY 77 Appropriations Act. That was an effort to end the double pay for reservists holding civil service jobs. The measure was not included in the final bill so Civil Service workers in the Reserve will continue to receive their regular pay check and their reserve pay check for the two weeks of active duty each year.

Civilian Workforce

Federal civilians had a close call with political independence last Spring as a result of Congressional legislation. Congress approved a bill that would have essentially repealed the Federal law, known as the Hatch Act, which prohibits Federal employes from taking an active part in partisan politics.

The President vetoed the bill and Congress could not muster enough votes to override the veto. The President cited subtle pressures which could be brought to bear on Federal employes as his reasons for vetoing the bill.

Other Legislation

New tax reform legislation provides for the automatic withholding of state income taxes from a member's monthly pay. The tax withheld will go to the soldier's state of legal residence and not necessarily to the state in which the member is assigned. States must formally request the withholding and to date eight Legislation was also passed authorizing the Secretary of the Army to collect up to 25 cents more from each enlisted soldier and warrant officer to help pay the costs of running the U.S. Soldiers' and Airmen's Home. The legislation also authorized the Home Board of Governors to collect from Home residents, up to 25 per cent of their retirement or annuity checks. Soldiers now contribute 25 cents per month.

Unresolved Legislation

A number of legislative proposals were not completed prior to adjournment.

- Family Separation Allowance for the lower four enlisted grades,
- Special pay for new Veterinarians and optometrists coming in after July 1, 1976,
- The "Fair Market Rental" system for soldiers in government quarters. Occupants would pay what the house is worth and not just forfeit the quarters allowance,
- The Uniformed Services Retirement Modernization Act (RMA) to revamp the military retirement system,
- A bill to extend enlistment and selective reenlistment bonuses past the June 30, 1977 termination date,
- Several bills which would have permitted women in combat and combat units,
- A bill to authorize expanded flexible and compressed work schedules which go further than the "flexitime" schedules now in use by a number of Army activities,
- A bill to standardize the Services rules for collection for bad checks.

This is the story of Uncle Charlie and the seven CBers.

Once upon a time there were seven CBers who lived together in a large house on the edge of the forest. Their handles were Skipper, Bleeder, Barefoot, Bootleg, Jawjack, Freqout and Pottymouth.

Ever morning the seven CBers would get up and go to the salt mine where they would work all day. Then they would come home in the evening and talk on their radios until the wee hours of the morning. This went on until one day, while they were at the salt mine, Uncle Charlie came to visit.

Now Uncle Charlie was the boss of that forest but he worked at the Friendly Candy Company which was far away on the other side of the forrest.

Uncle Charlie had given the seven CBers permission to operate their radios and had told them that there were some rules that they would have to follow. But that was a very long time ago and although they all knew that Uncle Charlie could come to their house at any time and see if they were following his rules, they thought he had forgotten all about them.

So they began to ignore the rules; Skipper started talking to people a thousand miles away, Barefoot hooked up a linear ampilifier to his radio, Jawjack would talk for hours at a time and Bootleg let his license lapse but kept right on operating. Bleeder's modulation was up so high that he could be heard on all the channels. Freqout worked on unauthorized channels and Pottymouth was extremely rude with everyone he talked to.

Now on the day Uncle Charlie came to visit, the seven CBers knocked off early at the salt mine and went home for a few extra hours on their CBs. Uncle Charlie had hidden himself nearby to see if they were still following his rules. When they started operating in their usual manner, Uncle Charlies became quite upset.

He listened until he was sure that they were deliberately breaking his rules, then he left.

He returned a few days later though, with a posse of assorted sheriffs, marshals and policemen and with several official documents. He confiscated their CB equipment and fined them all several thousand dollars.

When he found out that they couldn't pay, Uncle Charlie threw the seven CBers into his dungeon and told them to make license plates and mailbags until they earned enough money to pay the fine.

This all happened many years ago but the seven CBers are making mailbags and license plates to this very day.

Moral:

Uncle Charlie may live on the other side of the forest, but he does have long ears.

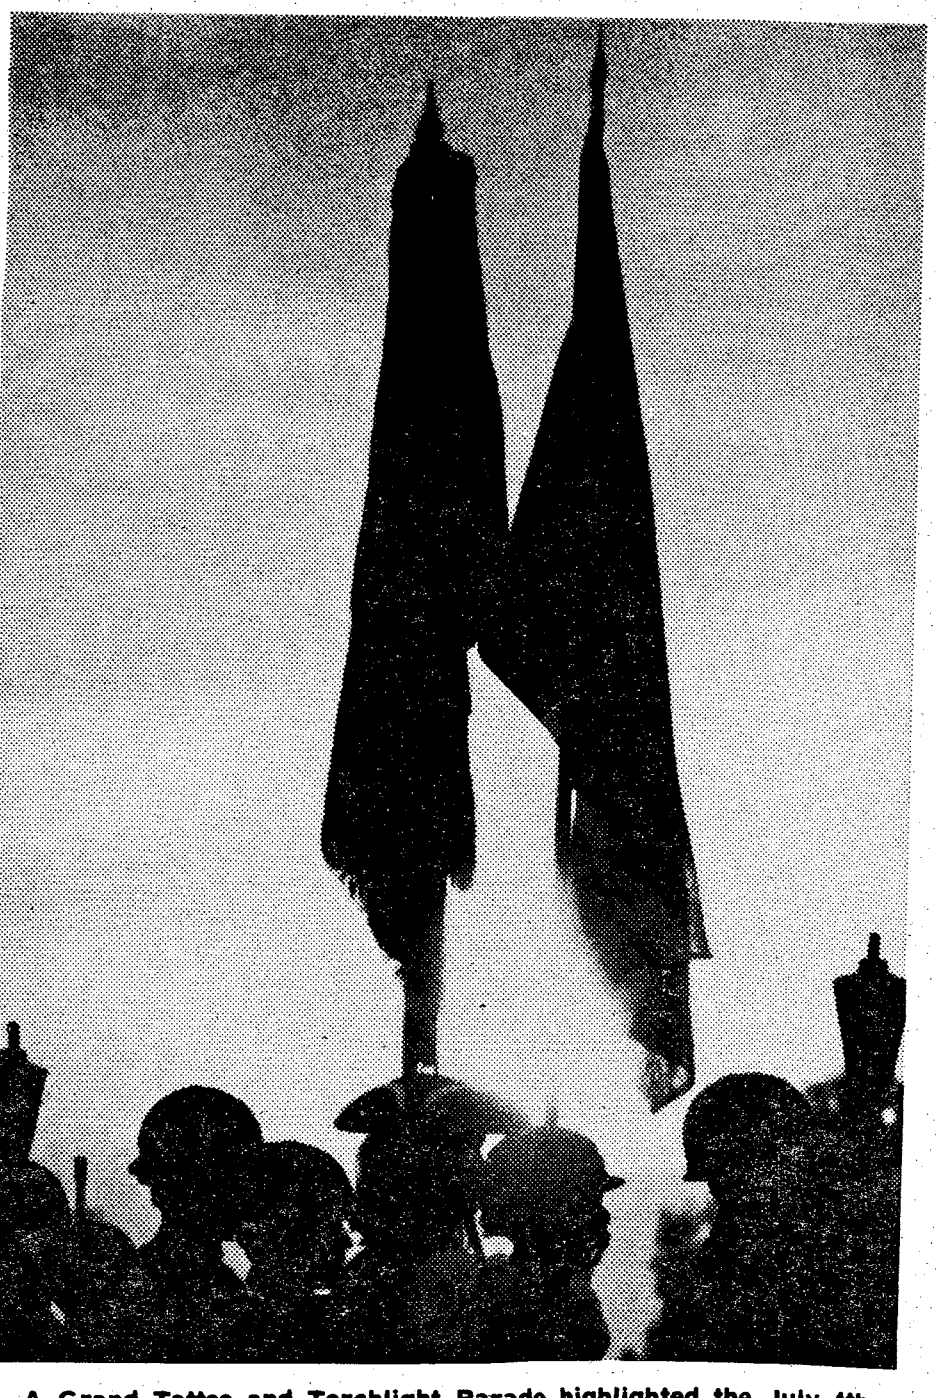
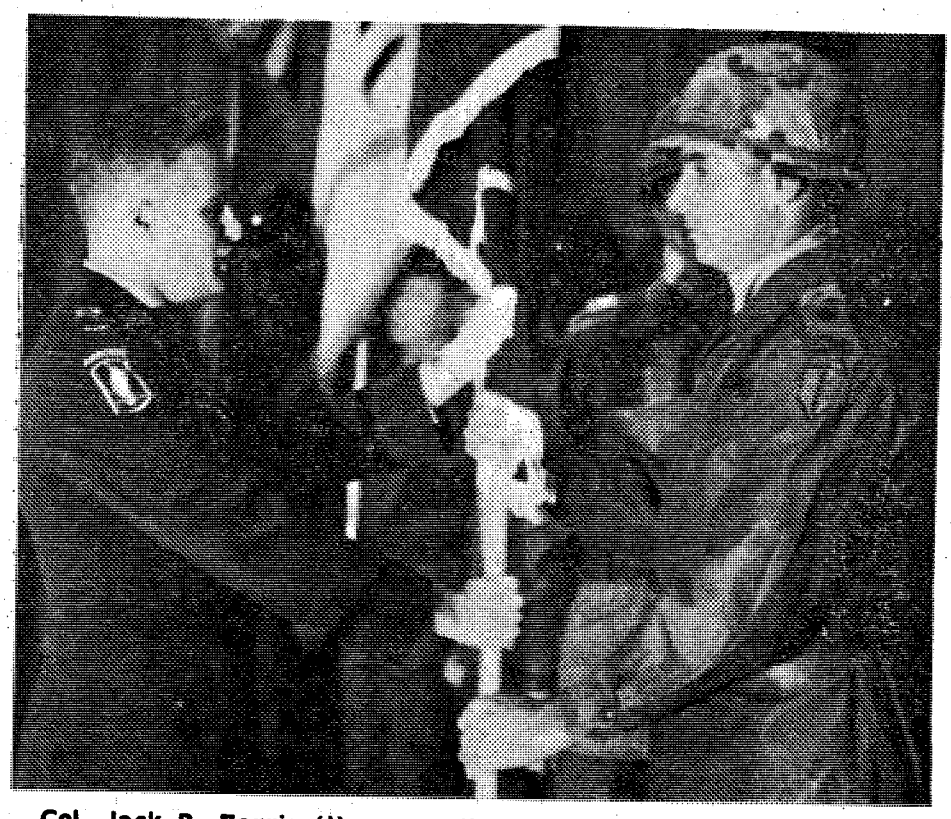
A year in review

Editor's note: 1976 has been a year of progress. A year which will long be remembered in the history of Ft. Benning. Journey with us through some of the highlights of the past twelve months and reflect on days gone by.



JANUARY

A ceremony activating the 1st Advanced Individual Training Brigade (Infantry) was held on York Field. It is envisioned that the brigade will consist of five battalions with a total of 24 companies and 1,650 permanent party support personnel to train approximately 5,000 trainees when it reaches full strength.



A Ft. Benning civilian employe, Mrs. Cam Slomka, chief of the Customer Assistance Section, Property Control Branch, Supply Division, was named the 1975 Boss of the Year by the Chattahoochee Chapter of the American Business Women's Association.

2ndLt. Christopher F. Burton was named the outstanding honor graduate of the U.S. Army Infantry School's 1975 Branch Immaterial Officer Candidate Course and winner of the 23rd Robert P. Patterson Memorial Award.

Some 150 men from the 197th Infantry Brigade flew to the U.S. Army Northern Warfare Training Center at Ft. Greely, Alaska to learn methods of fighting and surviving in the frigid and hostile climate of the northland.

A Grand Tattoo and Torchlight Parade highlighted the July 4th festivities comemmorating the 200th anniversary of our nation's birth.

Col. Jack B. Farris (l) passes the guidon to Lt. Col. William J. Windham, the incoming 4th Battalion commander, of the newly formed 1st Advanced Individual Training Brigade (Infantry).

FEBRUARY

For the second year running, Company A, 1/29th Infantry of The School Brigade captured the post's Best Dining Facility of the Year award in the small unit category.

The National Infantry Museum has been slated for a move. After being housed for more than 16 years in temporary, wooden quarters, Building 396 (the hospital annex) has been designated as the new site for the showplace of the Infantry.

The 34th Medical Battalion unveiled a headstone on the grave of Thomas Wiggins, a world famous blind, black musician known as "Blind Tom."

Sgt. Franklin O. Mills was honored as the Military Policeman of the Year by the Exchange Club of Columbus at its Crime Prevention Banquet held at the Martinique Motor Hotel.

2ndLt. Dale R. Conner was awarded the Army Commendation Medal for saving the life of Sp5 Arthur McCann who suffered a severe reaction to a bee sting, crashed his vehicle and was revived by mouth-to-mouth resuscitation by Conners.

Six new national records were set on Ft. Benning pistol ranges at the year's first outdoor pistol tournament.

PFC Annette E. Keene was selected to represent the post in an upcoming tour with the American Bicentennial Freedom Train.

A nine-man dispensary team from the 676th Medical Detachment, 34th Medical Battalion departed by convoy to Ft. Bragg — destination earthquake-stricken Guatemala.

The Columbus — Phenix City — Ft. Benning Chapter of the AUSA held its annual George Washington Birthday Ball at Harmony Church Fieldhouse with 700 attendees seeing the "200 Years of Readiness Pagent."

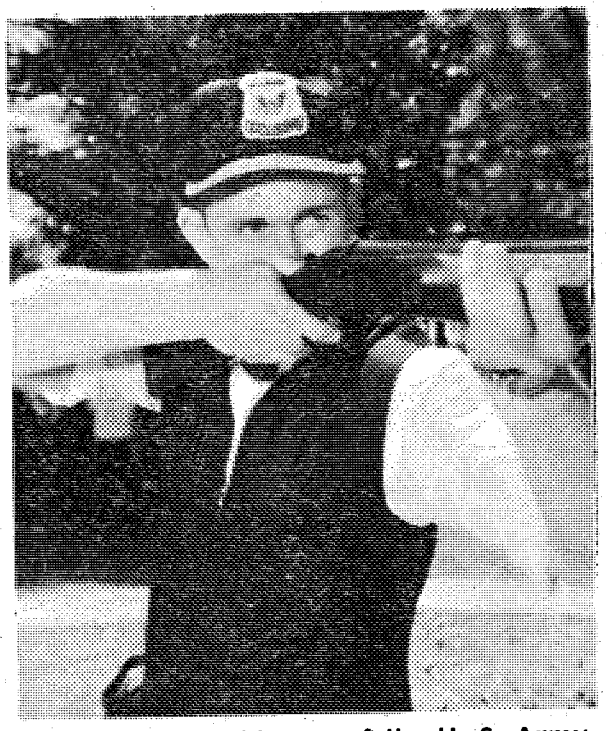
MARCH

Combat Support Company, 2/69th Armor out-played all competitors to capture the post's basketball championships.

Benning broadcaster, Sp5 Chuck Farrell, won second place in the television spot announcement category of the 1975 Keith L. Ware Award competition, a nation-wide Department of the Army contest, for his 60-second TV spot entitled "The Army Birthday."

In a major change of command ceremony, Col. Eldon Carr assumed command of The School Brigade from Col. George Ball and Col. Fletcher Ware assumed command of the 197th Inf Bde from Col. Joseph Wasiak.

The 1st AIT Bde received an initial input of 650 trainees.



Competitive testing between two versions of the utility tactical transport aircraft system (UTTAS) began with a demonstration and display of both prototypes at Lawson Army Airfield.

Seven soldiers died in a helicopter crash near Dahlonega, Georgia. Memorial services for three of the crash victims stationed at Ft. Benning were held at the Infantry Center Chapel.

The 197th Inf Bde celebrated its third anniversary as an integral part of the Strategic Army Force (STRAF) with an organization day.

APRIL

1st Battalion, 58th Infantry (1/58th Inf) departed for three weeks of desert and mountain training in Ft. Bliss, Texas.

Sgt. Donald Haldeman of the U. S. Army Marksmanship Unit won an Olympic Gold Medal in trap shooting.

Make it a prospe

The year, which will shortly come to a close, has been one of significance for the nation as well as for Ft. Benning.

It marked the 200th year of our existance as an independent nation, saw a President of the United State of America elected from the state of Georgia, resulted in the creation of the 1st Advanced Individual Training Brigade at Ft. Benning and set a precedent in furthering goodwill and understanding among all people — regardless of race, creed, national origin, sex or age.

With these accomplishments behind us, it becomes extremely important that each person sets new goals for the coming year. Goals which are realistic, attainable and in the interest of progress. The gains of last year must be used as stepping stones to better years ahead.

This will be no easy task.

It will take the total involvement of all concerned to insure that the future is one of growth and prosperity.

Here the responsibility rests on each of our shoulders, not just on the shoulders of those in high places of leadership. As an individual, you are the captain at the helm of your ship of destiny. To run that ship aground is a failure on your part; however, no ship sails sithout passengers and a crew, just as no one goes through life alone. You, therefore, become responsible for the success of failure or many.

On the other hand, you are also aboard your superior's ship of destiny — a failure to do your part as a crew member endangers the future of all aboard.

As the threshhold of a new year approaches, it becomes important that the successes as well as the mistakes of the past year be reviewed and new goals be set. It is time again to plan a course into the future, analyze the crew and passengers aboard, make adjustments based on the strengths and weaknesses of each and set sail with a well-defined purpose and destination.

Anticipate course changes, rough seas and intermediate stops along the way and make the required adjustments.

Be responsive to your passengers' needs.

Make only course changes that are absolutely necessary and keep those aboard informed.

Solicit the advice of the navigator, bosum's mate and communication experts.

During uncertain times in the journey, let those aboard know by your example that the ship remains sea-worthy and all is well.

Never become so involved in what you are doing that you lose sight of the future — the ultimate purpose of your journey and destination.

Take a moment to reflect the year past. Consider the goods and bads of it. Reflect upon the future for a moment. Decide on the destination you desire to arrive at next year at this time. Plan a course which will take you there.

And now — the most difficult part — follow it. Beginning now!

Make it a Prosperous New Year!!!

Vet income reports due

Georgia veterans and dependents who are on the Veterans Administration's pensions rolls have only a few days remaining in which to file reports on their income for 1976. Income Questionnaire cards which were mailed with November 1st pension checks must be returned to the VA by Jan. 1, 1977.

Georgia Veterans Service Director Pete Wheeler said that the VA must receive this information by January 1st in order to determine the pension amounts for the coming year. "Failure to complete and return the 'IQ' cards by the Jan. 1, 1977 deadline," Wheeler said, "could result in a suspension of payments, or a repayment of some benefits to the VA. In fact, those who fail to return the questionnaire by January 1st will, in lieu of receiving their January check on February 1st, receive a letter from the VA explaining why their pension payments have been suspended.

Veterans and widows receiving compensation for service- connected disabilities and deaths are not required to file income information. Also, veterans and widows receiving pensions, and parents receiving dependency and indemnity compensation (DIC) need not file, provided that they are at least 72 years old, have been on the pension rolls for at least two consecutive years, and have had no significant increases in their incomes.

Although some pensioners are not supposed to receive the "IQ" cards, if for some reason, they have received a card, they should fill it out and mail it back to the VA by the January 1st deadline.

By Denny Blankenship

The hollday season is almost over and most outdoorsmen are trying out their newly acquired outdoor equipment. Although wives are confusing at times, they do come through with the right gifts about this time every year. Thank heaven for that.

Holiday parties have interfered with some outdoor activity. I can't think of anything worse than sitting in a deer stand in 18 degree weather following a good night of celebrating. God, it's torture! I know of a gent who stumbled out of his house one morning following such an event, drove to his deer stand and behold he had forgotten his gun.

Another red-eyed gent got lost in the early morning fog and ran out of gas twenty miles from nowhere. One did not dress properly, probably because he was half embalmed with spirits, a three day flu-ridden bed stay followed. It's tough being a dedicated outdoorsman this time of year.

Ft. Benning was fortunate in having as a holiday hunter, Mr. Alez Montgomery of the Southeast Fish and Wildlife Agency. Mr. Montgomery has held and still does fiil, several important posts with the Southeastern Fish and Wildlife folks. During his stay at Ft. Benning, Mr. Montgomery and his two sons were the house guests of Ruben and Ella Holloway. The Holloways pointed them in the right direction and they managed to bag a couple deer during their three day stay. Visits of this nature can only do good for Benning's wildlife program's.

Well, enough of the straight stuff, lets get on with the bull.

A friend, Dan Terry and I were zipping along down Hwy 27 going hunting awhile back when we saw a half-grown pig running loose beside the road.

I braked my AMC to a halt, Dan jumped out, ran the pig down, gathered it in his arms and returned to the car, "We can't leave this pig out here," said Dan, "sure as hell he'll get run over by a car." "You're probably right," I answered. "What can we do with it though?" Dan asked with a puzzled expression. I thought for a while and replied, "Why don't you take it to a zoo." "Good idea," shot back Dan, "Drop me off at the house."

A week later, I was barreling down Hwy 27 again when I passed Dan driving south with the pig in the front seat next to him. I honked and Dan pulled over. "Hey Dan," I yelled, "What'cha doing with that pig, I thought you were going to take him to the zoo?"

"Oh I did," answered Dan, "and we had such a good time, I'm going to take him to Disney World."

Ponder this until next week: A scorpion, being a very poor swimmer asked a turtle to carry him on his back across a river. "Are you mad?" exclaimed the turtle, "you'll sting me while I'm swimming and I'll drown."

"My dear turtle," laughed the scorpion, "if I were to sting you, you would drown and I would go down with you, now where is the logic in that?" "You're right," cried the turtle, "Hop on." The scorpion climbed aboard and halfway across the river gave the turtle a mighty sting.

As they both sank to the bottom, the turtle resignedly said: "Do you mind if I ask you something? You said there'd be no logic in your stinging me. Why did you do it?"

"It has nothing to do with logic," the drowning scorpion sadly replied, "Its just my character."

Belly dancing troupe highlights McGraw Manor X-mas party

The McGraw Manor Association held their annual Christmas party recently. It went as most Christmas parties go, with lots of food and merriment except for one thing — the entertainment. Troupe Karshlimar, a Middle Eastern dance group, put on its first performance ever, providing many of the guests with a new insight into the increasingly popular art of belly dancing.

The Troupe was formed when a group of women (all from Ft. Benning) headed by Farasha, a professional dancer and instructor in Columbus, began to view belly dancing not as a passing fad but as an ancient art form and a beautifully varied means of self expression. Talk to any one of the members and you'll find they're all very serious about what they're doing.

It's their hope and aim to see the general public also accept the belly dance for what it truly is and accord to it the credit it deserves.

ID cards to get a closer look

Patrons using Ft. Benning facilities can expect to have their military identification (ID) cards checked more closely beginning Monday.

Close checks of ID cards will be conducted at all exchanges, the commissary, Recreation Services activities to include the Follow Me Golf Course, all Officer and NCO Clubs, the Packaged Beverage Branch and MAH to insure patronage by authorized personnel only.

This program will be a continuous one, and all personnel are urged and expected to cooperate with managers and employees who are charged with checking ID cards of prospective patrons of these facilities. The checks will require that you remove your ID card from your wallet or purse and hand it to the ID card checker.

If the ID is deemed valid, it will be returned to you immediately. However, should the checker discover that the card is not valid for some reason, it will be kept by the checker and forwarded through Provost Marshal channels to the Ft. Benning Adjutant General. A valid ID card will have to be obtained before the facility may be used. (The confiscation of invalid ID cards in this manner is authorized by Army regulations).

Persons who have allowed their ID cards to expire without getting new ones are urged to obtain valid IDs as soon as possible. Military personnel, active and retired, should check the ID cards of their dependents to insure they are still current. Authorized personnel may obtain ID cards, including dependents' cards, at the following locations:

The School Brigade — Bldg. 2747
197th Inf Bde — Bldg. 9040
1st AIT Bde — Bldg. 4044
AG Div — Bldg. 83

Dependent ID cards expire on the holder's 21st birthday, unless the dependent is a full-time student in an accredited institution of higher learning, in which case the card expires on holder's 23rd birthday.

Persons who have their ID cards confiscated as a result of this new program may be inconvenienced, but they should realize that this program is designed to protect their fringe benefits and to preclude the use of these facilities by unauthorized personnel.

New PT programs being developed

By Betty Zimmerman

The US Army Infantry School is in the process of developing three new physical conditioning programs for the Army.

The first is the Baseline Physical Training Program which is designed for people who engage in limited physical activity in their job or unit. The second program is for individuals whose jobs requires tasks of a physical nature; and the third is directed towards entire units where the personnel have similar physical requirements throughout.

The Baseline is a variable physical conditioning program designed to provide maintenance of good health and accomplishment of common defensive soldiering tasks. This program applies to men and women, including all enlisted, warrant officer, and officer grades, who are in the baseline category.

Project officers, Mr. James Dawson and Capt. George Sabine, stated that the need for this revised program is based on the premise that everyone in the Army needs to maintain a certain level of physical fitness regardless of individual job requirements.

The Baseline Program should develop and maintain an individual's physical fitness to the point where if and when assigned to a station or unit that has more demanding physical requirements, he/she will be able to adapt to the new standards in a reasonable length of time.

In memory of . . .

Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

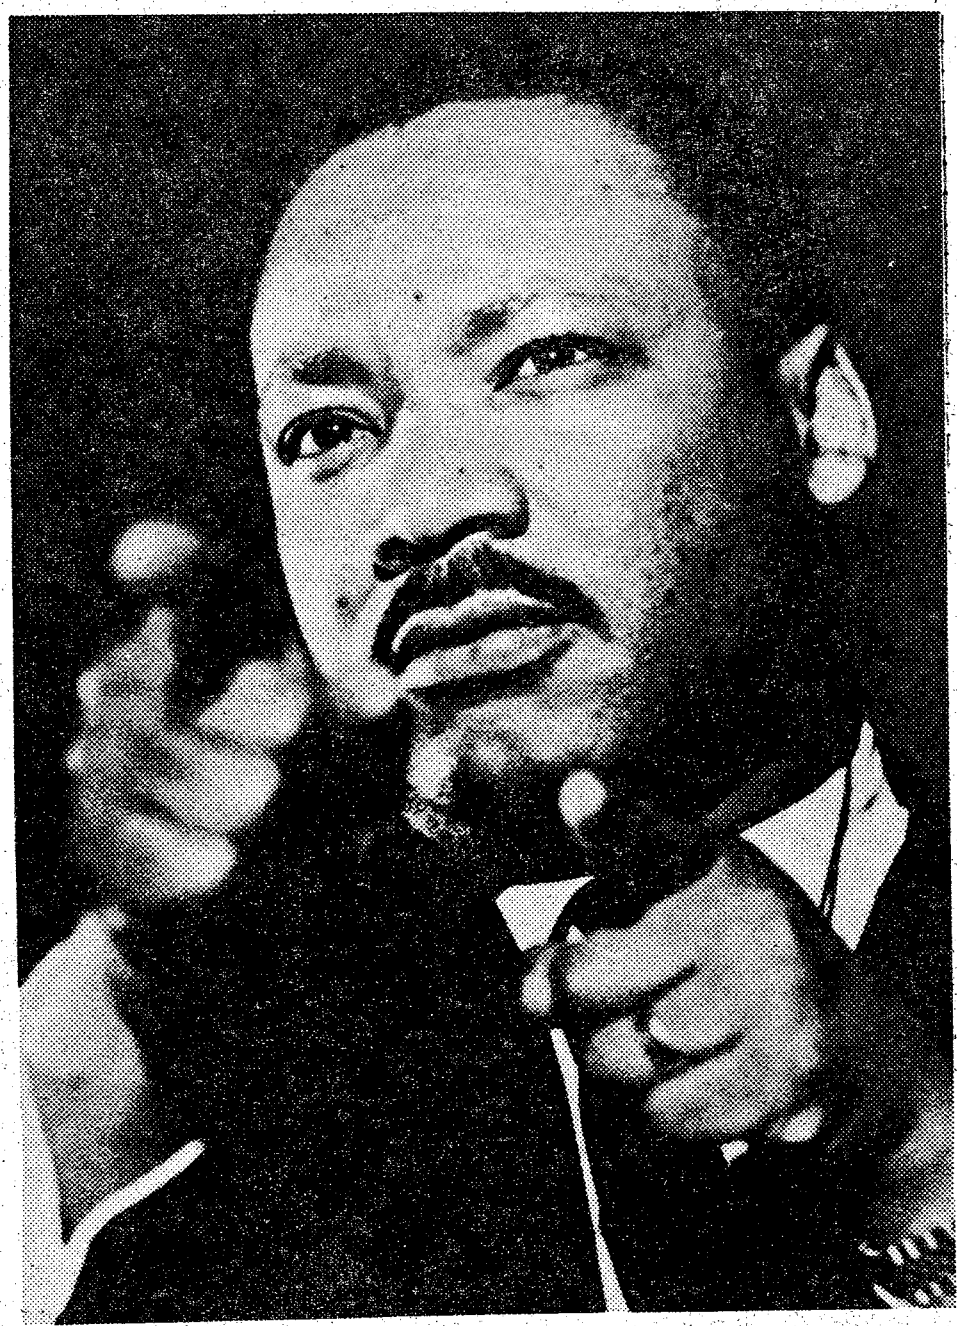
A ceremony commemorating the birthday of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. will be held today at 11 a.m. in the Marshall Auditorium.

Chaplain (Col.) Ronald F. Day, post chaplain, will be the host and principle speaker during the ceremony.

Throughout the day, other units will sponsor their own memorial services.

The 34th Med. Bn will hold a memorial service at 11 a.m. in the 478th's Aviation Co.'s dayroom, (Bldg. 2831). There will also be a memorial service held at the Kelley Hill Theater at 3 p.m. today.

The School Brigade will hold a commemorative service in the Airborne Chapel, Bldg 2766 at 7 p.m. The film, "From Memphis to Montgomery" will be shown.



Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. was born on January 15, 1929 in Atlanta. Growing up in a middle class black family, Mike (Dr. King's birth name) was isolated from the material hardships and more physical results or race discrimination encountered by the poor blacks.

The son of a Baptist minister, he was educated at Morehouse College, Crozer Theological Seminary, studied at the University of Pennsylvania and Harvard University, completing his theological training at Boston University.

While studying in Boston, he met his future wife, Coretta Scott of Marion, Ala. They were married in 1953.

He then went on to Montgomery, Ala., where he became the pastor of the Dexter Avenue Bapist Church.

If it hadn't been for a mild-mannered seamstress, Rosa Parks, who refused to give up her seat to a white man on a Montgomery bus, the world might not have ever heard of Dr. King. Mrs. Parks' action brought on the great Montgomery bus boycott which lasted almost a year. The Montgomery Improvement Association (MIA) was formed and Dr. King was chosen as its leader. It was then that his name became associated with non-violent change and the civil rights movement for Black Americans.

In 1957, he organized the Southern Christian Leadership Conference (SCLC) and was elected its president. SCLC aims were to help other communities fight segregation and discrimination and became the base for future civil rights actions.

In one confrontation after another, Dr. King urged non-violence. Being an effective and moving speaker, he influenced masses of people with his speeches. In 1963, in Birmingham, Ala., Dr. King organized a mass protest for fair hiring practices, the establishment of a bi-racial committee and the desegregation of department stores.

Later that year, Dr. King was the principle speaker at the historic march on Washington, and Time Magazine named him man of the year for 1963. In 1964, he was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize.

When he returned from Oslo, Norway, where he received the prize, Dr. King lead a voter registration drive in Selma, Ala., which ended with the Selma-to-Montgomery freedom march. From Selma it was on to Chicago where he became involved with slum rehabilitation and open housing programs.

In 1967, King announced his open opposition to the war in Vietnam and announced massive non-violent demonstrations against both discrimination and the Vietnam war.

King led nonviolent protest nationwide, disregarding his own safety. In the end, he was the victim of the very violence he abhored. On April 4, 1968, he was in Memphis, Tenn. to lead striking black sanitation men. At 6 p.m., a bullet fired from a high-powered telescopic rifle tore though Dr. King's neck as he stood on the balcony of the Lorraine Motel. He died in the St. Joseph Hospital at the age of 39.

IN MEMORIAM

On January 14th, Ft. Benning personnel will join Americans everywhere in observing the birthday of the Reverend Martin Luther King, Jr.

On this day, we should be reminded of Dr. King's lasting influence on America's society. It is an occasion to rededicate ourselves to the principle for which he lived and died — dignity to all regardless of color, creed, or national origin.

In recognition of Dr. King's many contributions, special memorial services will be conducted in Unit Chapels and Marshall Auditorium. In addition, the local organizations will be sponsoring services throughout the community. All military personnel, their families and civilian employees are encouraged to join in these services.

Members of "Charging Charlie" of the 5th Bn, 1st AIT Bde braved sub-freezing weather Monday during their sixth week of training. They stood a command inspection in dress uniform conducted by Col. Jack Farris, the brigade commander, took their Advanced Physical Fitness Test and finished out the day with a 25-mile road march. Throughout the training cycle it was common to see the commander, Cpt. George Vessell, his cadre and all the men out crawling through the mud on the obstacle course, qualifying with weapon on post ranges and facing the vigors of training as a unit. "Totally involved leadership is what it's all about," commented Vessell. "When the men get out and do it all together, everyone puts out 100 per cent and feels that they are part of the action."

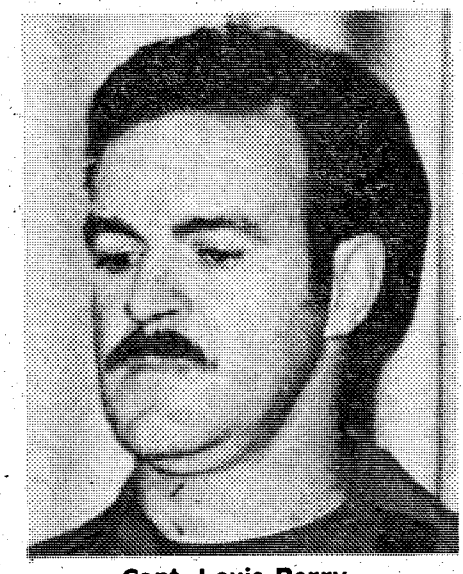
Eight recognized for reaching 'Run For Your Life' milestones

Eight individuals were recognized for reaching milestones in the "Run For Your Life" program at Ft. Benning and were presented achievement patches by Maj Gen. Willard Latham Wednesday.



Reaching the 2,500-mile plateau in the program were Col. Joseph Franklin, LtCol. Donald Hull, Capt. Louis Perry and Sp5 C. W. Bernatovitz. Maj. Vincent Hartman and Maj. Edwin Livingston cleared the 1000-mile mark and Lt.Col. Philippee Guilbaud and SFC William Ball reached the 750-mile plateau.

The "Run For Your Life" program began as an incentive for individuals to get out and run to better their own physical condition and achieve recognition by doing so.

If you have not yet joined the program, ask your first sergeant for the forms and start today for a better tomorrow.

The tactical (?) road march

"The principles of war could, for brevity, be condensed into a single word — 'concentration'"

B. H. LIDDEL HART, 1944

Then

On the morning of Dec. 17, 1944, when it had been thought that the 7th Armored Division would arrive in the ST. VITH area, the division was fighting clogged roads to the west rather than Germans.

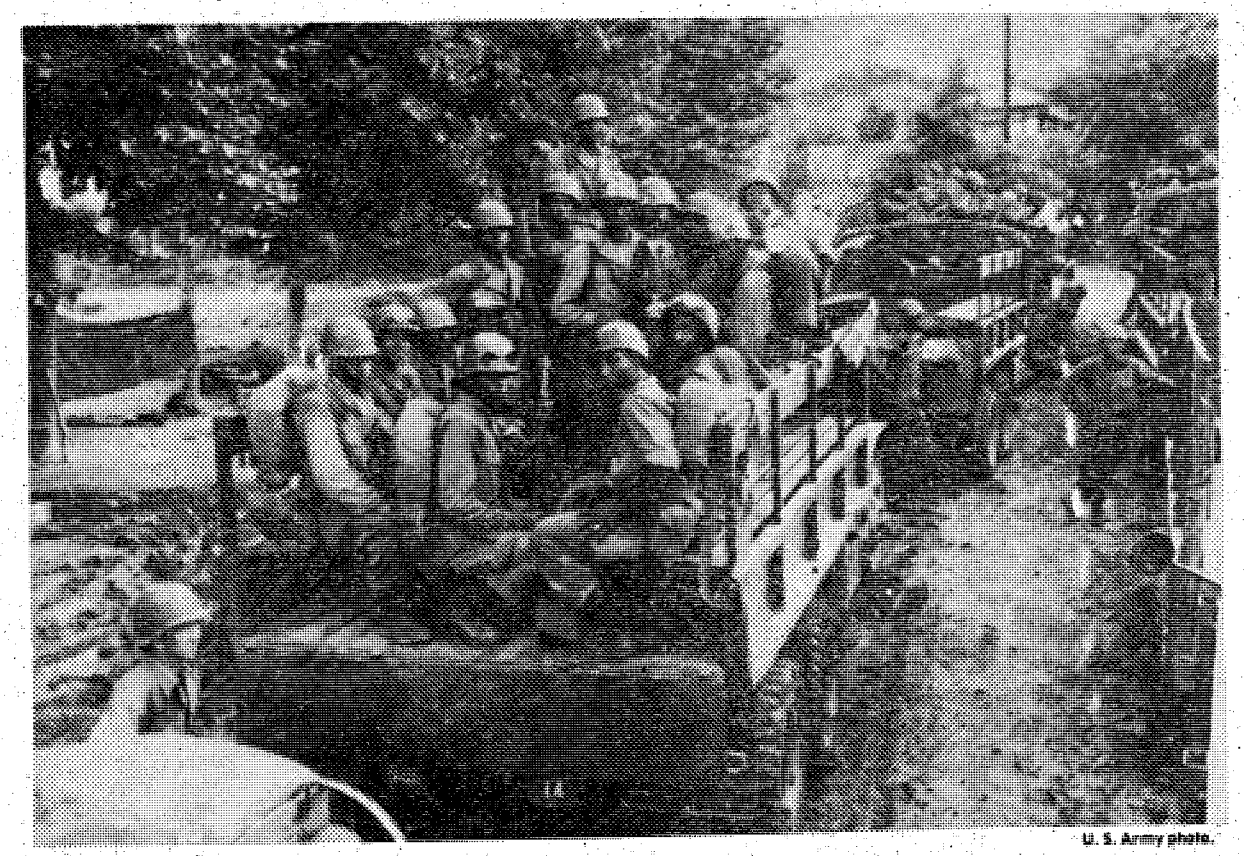
Trouble was encountered from the beginning . . . there had not been time for proper dissemination of information and many staff officers and company commanders did not know their destination until their arrival. . . maps were not available . . . the mission upon arrival was not known . . . and there had been little time to post the routes with guards.

Toward nightfall, the traffic congestion increased, and the . . . column stretching (for more than eight miles to the north) was brought to a complete standstill.

"The strength of an army, like power in mechanics, is reckoned by multiplying the mass by the rapidity; a rapid march increases the morale of an army, and increases its means of victory. Press on!"

NAPOLEON I

Maj. Donald P. Boyer Jr., S-3, 38th Armored Infantry Battalion described it this way:



"As we (he and his driver) arrived at the road junction, we were hit by a sight we could not comprehend, at first; a constant stream of traffic hurtling to the rear and nothing going to the front. We realized that this was not a convoy moving to the rear; it was a case of 'every dog' for himself; it was a retreat, a rout . . .

"It wasn't orderly; it wasn't military; it wasn't a pretty sight — we were seeing American soldiers running away.

"About a mile farther up the road . . ., all traffic had stopped. In fact, it was the most perfect traffic jam I have ever seen. We had run into this hopeless mass of vehicles fleeing to the rear on a narrow road which would barely support two-way traffic at slow speeds. Vehicles streaming to the rear had attempted to pass each other in the intervals between tanks . . . and now no one could move.

General Clarke commented on the traffic conditions as follows:

"The panic of the afternoon of 17 December was so great at the road crossing just west of ST. VITH that an officer I stationed there to stop rearward movement was pushed aside by senior officers and I had to take charge personally to control the traffic."

Ft. Benning, 1977

Movement to concentrate

By Gary Hubbard
Department of Tactics

Now

Technological advancement has provided today's commander with a significant increase in firepower, mobility and flexibility as compared with past conflicts.

However, combat power in itself will not make the difference as to which side wins or loses on the modern battlefield. All indications are that any enemy which faces the United States could have at least as much combat power and potentially more.

In the face of the present austerity of forces, it is unlikely that sufficient depth can be provided across an entire battlefield. Therefore, the ultimate outcome will be determined in part on the speed with which a commander is able to relocate and concentrate his forces to influence the action.

Through an active covering force fight, the major thrust and mass of the enemy's forces must be determined as soon as possible, then combat power must be moved rapidly to counter the thrust at the point of decision. One of the principle means for concentrating combat forces at the point of decision will be the tactical road march.

Up until recently, units placed little training emphasis on this form of tactical maneuver, however in light of the anticipated fluidity of the modern mechanized battlefield and the fact that few if any soldiers have combat experience in actual tactical road marches, the subject has been given added emphasis in the Infantry School's curriculum.

The instruction deals primarily with command and staff planning for the execution, followed by the conduct of tactical road marches through a series of map exercises. Emphasis is placed on security during the march and the tactical organization required for employment on arrival based on the assigned mission. Most often the movement to concentrate combat ready forces will be planned to reinforce in a position behind the anticipated point of contact.

Planning must be complete and timely, taking into consideration all facets of the operation.

Battalions must be moved quickly and efficiently to the point of desired concentration and arrive organized to fight.

There will be no time to fight clogged roads or attempt to organize units after the fighting begins.

The key to the success of a force in combat is in the ability of its commanders to lead, train and prepare their soldiers to face the challenge of the modern battlefield.

The Infantry School is preparing the commanders of the future to meet that challenge.

Advanced NCOES only open for E-6s

MILPERCEN has announced some changes in the advanced NCO education system (ANCOES). Soldiers promoted to the grade of E-7 or now on a standing list for promotion to that grade will no longer be eligible to attend. MILPERCEN officials say that the course will be an "E-6 only" course.

Those soldiers who have become ineligible but are on existing lists for attendance will be given the choice of attending ANCOES or receiving "constructive credit" for the course. If they choose to attend, they must be trained before September 30th.

The prerequisites for consideration for eligible E-6s have also been changed according to MILPERCEN. The following criteria must be met for consideration:

- Be in the grade of E-6
- Have more than two but less than four years time in grade at the time the selection board convenes
- Have less than 17 years service computed from BASD at the beginning of the Fiscal Year of selection
- Length of service remaining after completion of the course must be in accordance with paragraph 11-4A (1) (A) of AR 614-200
- Depending on the course for which selected, additional requirements must be met such as physical examination, security clearance, etc.

Officials added to insure that consideration is fair, the FY 77 board will consider all soldiers in grade E-6 with at least two years time in grade.

At the same time, MILPERCEN announced the zone of consideration for the ANCOES board that will meet March 8th.

- E-6 with a DOR not later than March 31, 1975
- BASD not earlier than Sept. 30, 1960
- Have not been previously selected to attend ANCOES

202 marksmanship clinics given by USAMU

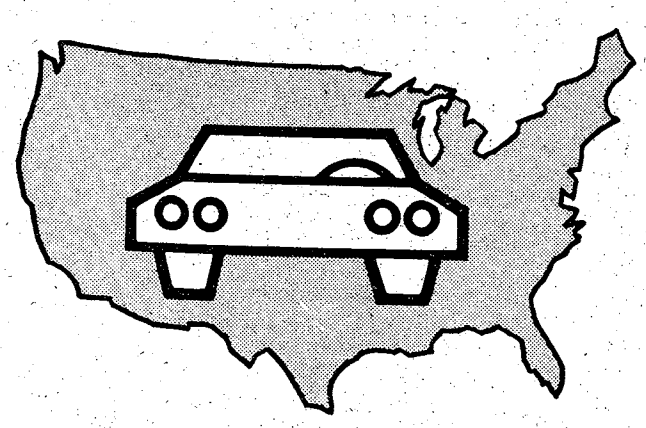
By Bob Nordan

A total of 202 marksmanship clinics were conducted by USAMU and its Marksmanship Training Units at Fts. Ord, Riley and Meade during September through December. These months are considered the "non-competitive" season and emphasis is placed on training.



A majority of these clinics (97) were rifle and pistol clinics conducted for ROTC rifle and pistol teams at colleges, universities and high schools all over the U.S. However, 55 training sessions were conducted for Active Army and Army Reserve organizations. The remainder were conducted for civilian law enforcement organization, civilian gun clubs, or were advanced long-range marksmanship clinics of which there were 15.

USAMU has had a very successful clinic season, moving into areas which have not previously requested marksmanship training assistance. Cadres of the 1st AIT Brigade at Ft. Benning and the BCT Committee Group and Drill Instructors at Ft. Jackson, S.C., received assistance during November. In December, a team from USAMU provided rifle and pistol marksmanship training for representatives of all post organizations at Ft. Stewart, Ga., to help them prepare for their post-level rifle and pistol matches.

Marksmanship Clinics can be scheduled by contracting the Marksmanship Training Unit at 544-4917.

Camellia is an apartment motel. We don't rent rooms, we rent furnished apartments with all the features of a regular motel plus added conveniences that cannot be provided with just a single room — and all at the same, or most times lower rates than the single -room motel. For example, our "standard" unit is comprised of two bedrooms, combination living room-dining room, bathroom and fully furnished kitchen including refrigerator, stove, cooking utensils, and table service for six people. These are some of the "extras" but at no extra cost. Our 150 units are in separate buildings with usually four apartments in each building, which adds to a person's or family's privacy.

PS to gain male pinup

SFC Macon Sparks has just been introduced in the January 1977 issue of PS, the Army's Preventive Maintenance Monthly Magazine.

With his "matinee idol" looks, Sparks will assist Connie, Bonnie and M Sgt. Half-Mast in their instructor duties.

When asked why the addition, PS editor Jim Kidd said, "Until recently our readers were, for all practical purposes, entirely male. So, we employed pretty female instructors. Times have changed. Large numbers of women now have jobs in which they can use PS information. So, a male instructor is a logical step."

PS Magazine has been putting out the word on maintaining Army equipment for more than 25 years. It's long been rumored that PS honcho, MSG Half-Mast, will do virtually anything to accomplish his mission. The addition of Sparks is another step in his never-ending crusade.

Some commanders misusing ARTEP

According to DA officials, the Army Training and Evaluation Program (ARTEP) is being used by some commanders as a test similar to the old Army Training Test (ATT). They have gone so far as to use it as a "pass or fail" situation for units evaluated under the new program.

ARTEP is a tool for the commander to informally evaluate the training status of his untis or sections.

Using the ARTEP, he can develop training programs or correct programs that are already in use. It gives him a "hands on" feel of the training mission.

The ARTEP contains a list of realistic combat tasks that must be accomplished under certain conditions and standards. It is strictly performance oriented.

Commanders who still ascribe to the old ATT philosophy — formal evaluation — should use the tasks in the ARTEP as a basis for developing their own tastks. A formal evaluation of a unit or section based solely on the ARTEP, contradicts the aims of the program.

Central America travelers should get passports, visas

Personnel considering traveling by land through Central America, whether or not on official travel orders, should obtain a U.S. passport and appropriate visas.

According to the American consul in Tegucigalpa, Honduras, most Central American countries require only a tourists card, but Nicaragua requires a passport and visa for entry by both land and sea. In past years many personnel traveling south to the Canal Zone or returning there from leave without passport and visa have been denied entry to Nicaragua and have return to Tegucigalpa to obtain passports.

Commanders should advise personnel with orders to the Canal Zone, planning to travel by car, to have a passport and those visas required by Central American countries.

Number of measles cases on the rise

Soldier-parents are being warned about an increase in the number of reported cases of measles across the country. The number of cases reported in 1976 increased by 64 per cent over 1975. Dr. Lyle Conrad, assistant director of the immunization division of the National Center for Disease Control (CDC) said that there also may be an increase in the number of cases reported this year.

He stated thah the swine flu program has drawn so much attention that immunization programs for other diseases have been neglected. "It has diverted attention, time, personnel and money from other inoculation programs. Measles season usually arrives in the spring and we hope that the flu is done by then and we can focus on other immunizations," he said.

The CDC reported 36,375 cases in 1976, up from 22,754 in 1975. One disturbing item is the fact that the majority of the cases reported for 1976 occurred in the spring, before the swine flu program began.

The CDC estimated about 5 million American children have not been immunized against measles and recommends that they be immunized when they are 12 to 15 months old.

Institutional discrimination in Army declining

Institutional discrimination has long been a problem in any large organization. Race relations and equal opportunity (RR&EO) staffers at DA say that the trend in the Army is away from this. RR&EO officials have just released the 1975 Affirmative Actions Assessment which indicates a trend toward more soldier awareness of the problem.

Staffers do make the point, however, that institutional discrimination is not a thing of the past in the Army, but it is definitely on the decline.

GIs are beginning to see that the program is working. Achievements in the equal opportunity program have gone to the heart of the concern of the young soldier — promotion and his future. During 1975, the Army attained its minority enlisted promotion goals.

During the same period, the Army was able to determine, for the first time, the racial and ethnic make-up of its soldiers. This is a management tool that allows RR&EO managers to identify institutional discrimination affecting specific minority groups.

The minority officer picture has brightened too. The 1975 Army USMA and ROTC enrollment goals for minorities and women were reached. In addition, there was an increase in school selections for minority officers.

These are all steps in the right direction, staffers say. Of 130 objectives set by the RR&EO people, 70 per cent were achieved. The remaining objectives were met with varying degrees of success. These figures are seen to indicate the program is on target and the problems can be overcome.

Enlisted promotions in the senior grades for blacks were up during FY 76. The selection rate for E-7 was 30.6 per cent for blacks and 32.3 per cent for whites. Promotion to E-8 was even closer — 19 per cent for blacks and 19.9 per cent for whites, while selection to E-9 was 21.5 per cent for blacks and 23 per cent for whites.

The study showed staffers there was a need to revamp the race relations training programs. Because of this, three Army regs are being revised and turned into one complete regulation which won't read like a checklist. The reg will focus on achieving results in the program. Training "modules" are being designed to help commanders run their local training programs.

In addition, the quality of students for the DRRI course has received greater emphasis. Efficiency reports are screened for quality. Enlisted students must be on their second enlistment, must score 100 or more in specific aptitude areas and must have passed the last PMOS test. Officers must have had some prior leadership experience. First Lieutenants and above are eligible for the training program.

DA staffers feel it is necessary to emphasize the following points to make the program a continuing success:

- Personal commitment and direct involvement of all commanders
- Effective action to eliminate discrimination and abuses
- The proper selection and use of RR&EO personnel
- Effective unit race relations training

All soldiers must continue to be aware of the developments in the program, say RR&EO officials. Just knowing that the program is "doing something" is not enough. The GI must be aware of the objectives that have been met successfully and those which have not. In doing so, the soldier will be able to determine the action he can take personally to insure the trend — away from institutional discrimination — continues.

By Denny Blankenship

The new year has called around and brought extremely cold weather with it. This doesn't seem to be hampering the preparations of fishermen though. Most folks are breaking out their tackle boxes, rods, reels and the paraphernalia that seems to accompany all fishermen in preparation for Spring fishing. I attended a Post Bass Club meeting last week and was presented the following by one of the members who has been the culprit in earlier articles:

Denny the fisherman

He fishes in the morning
He fishes in the night
He fishes in foul weather
And when the sun is bright
He fishes, fishes, fishes
it's his only thing in life and all he ever catches is Hell from his fed-up wife!

Oh well, gotta give you folks a shot back at me every now and then. Speaking of the Bass Club, if you like to fish or just be around folks that do, then you should check this outfit out. Their meetings are held every second and fourth Tuesday of each month in Classroom 22, Bldg. 4 at 7:30 p.m. Now look gang, you don't need a boat to join. All you need is a love for the sport of fishing. If you're interested, start the year off right by calling M/Sgt. Billy Rumburg at 545-5022 for further information.

I don't have to tell you that fishing around the valley area is slow. For those who can stand the weather, try fishing the mouths of feeder creeks for Crappie fish minnows at 8-10 feet of depth. Crappie fishing will gradually improve over the next three months however, a few nice strings are being caught now.

The Benning Fish and Wildlife folks will be interviewed on TV 3's Sportsmans Lodge Saturday evening the 15th at 6 p.m. Tune in and watch. You may learn something about your wildlife program. You owe it to yourself gang. Remember now, pass on any comments to these folks at 544-6120.

Ponder this until next week: Fishermen wouldn't tell so many lies if their wives would quit asking them questions.

Post movies to cost more

Ft. Benning theaters will be charging more for admission starting January 25th, according to local AAFES officials.

After that date, adult tickets in AAFES theaters worldwide will cost $1 or $1.50. Prices for children under 12 will continue at one-half the adult rate. This higher rate will be charged for some of the new releases on the circuit.

Admission to most pictures recently shown has been $1, although some films carried rates of 60 or 75 cents.

AAFES officials cite increased operating costs for the price hike. The average movie admission price charged by AAFES is well below the current average admission price of $2.30 that commercial U.S. theaters are asking. No new admission price categories have been added. Only the former admission rates of 60 and 75 cents have been stopped.

The new adjusted admiision prices will enable AAFES to get the best motion pictures available, while providing entertainment geared to the varied tastes of its military customers, AAFES officials say.

Della Scott, a third grader at Edward White School, ponders over what to do with a $40 check she received for an essay she wrote on fire safety. Della won second place in the second grade division of a National Junior Fire Marshal contest.

Della Aleta Scott, a third grader at Edward White School, won second place in the second grade division of the National Junior Fire Marshal contest sponsored by the Hartford Fire Insurance Company, in Hartford, Conn.

During a special assembly held in the White School's auditorium on December 8th at 9:30 a.m., the school's principal, Mrs. Pearl M. Brakonecke, presented Della with a check for $40.

William Ashcraft, a member of the Ft. Benning Fire Department invited the young award winning essayist to stop by the Fire Department for a special ride. Mr. Ashcraft was at the school giving a lecture on fire safety at Christmas.

Susan Maynor, Della's second grade teacher, was responsible for entering her essay, "Why Kids Play with Matches" in the nationwide contest. Della is the daughter of Lt. Col. and Mrs. Douglas W. Scott of Ft. Benning.

Why Kids Play With Matches

Children play with matches because they are curious. That means they want to know what matches do. Children want to know how a stick of wood can make fire so they play with matches and strike them.

The fire is pretty but it is very dangerous. It is dangerous because you could be burned.

President-elect Jimmy Carter has said that he wants to be closer to the people and several ideas have been discussed to accomplish this. Well, here's one that's so obvious that ol' Hoss couldn't see it. A tip of the ten-gallon sombrero to Lady Cheerleader for this one.

Why not give the President a CB? He'd sure be able to talk directly to the people then. He wouldn't even have to shell out the four bucks for the license now that the FCC has halted all license fees. But of course, Uncle Charlie would have to lift all restrictions on power and working skip to make it effective.

I can just imagine the President sitting in the Oval Office some afternoon and keying up the mike: "Break 27. This is Peanut Picker in Watergate City looking for a ratchet jaw. How 'bout it?"

If you're troubled by noise in your mobile rig and you're not sure where it's coming from, here's how to make a CB "noise sniffer" to pinpoint the source.

Attach a male coax plug on one end of a 15-foot length of coaxial cable and take off about two inches of braided shielding from the other end. Don't remove the insulation from the center conductor but cover the tip with electrical tape.

Next, disconnect the antenna from your CB and plug in the sniffer. Start the engine and turn on the set. Turn the squelch all the way down and turn off the automatic noise limiter or noise blanker if there is one. Tune to a channel with very little traffic and turn the volume up. Channel 9 would be good for this; don't worry about interfering with emergency messages as you won't be keying the transmitter.

Now you're all ready to sniff out those noises. With everything running, hold the sniffer close to, but not touching the suspected noise source. Some things to try sniffing include the alternator or generator, instrument guages, voltage regulator, tires and wheels and electrical accessories (wipers, fan, etc.).

Your sniffer will make noises seem louder, so if you hear a noise with the sniffer that you never hear in normal operation, don't worry about it. But when you finally track down that hissing, crackling, popping, whining or whistling that was driving you up the wall, then you can fix it.

Safety note — When you're working on a vehicle with the motor running, always block the wheels and be aware of moving parts in the engine compartment.

Florida swamps no contest for 'Rangerettes'

By Sally Connors

Army wives everywhere are curious about the job that occupies their husband's time. This holds true for the wives of the USAIS Ranger Dept instructors as well.

To find out just what their husbands do during the Florida phase of the Ranger course, seven wives decided to spend a day as students at Camp James E. Rudder, Eglin AFB, Fla.

Calling themselves "Rangerettes"; Linda Steverson, Janee Henderson, Greta McPeak, Debbie Ward, Julie Halliburton, Debbie Scarper and Sally Camors reported for tralning attired in fatigues (their husbands), boots and field caps.

After a Ranger-sized breakfast, they loaded two RB 7 Assault boats, 14 Kapoks and themselves into trucks and headed for their first instruction at Basin Island. Under the sharp-eyed guidance of their instructors, they learned how to inflate, launch, steer, paddle and beach their assault boats. After proving that they were somewhat capable of traveling safely down the river, they had a lunch break.

After lunch they started with instruction in setting up and crossing a one rope bridge along with a cram course in tying knots and a lesson on the habits of the hognosed and water mocassin snakes.

With sunny smiles, bright eyes and camouflaged (green) faces, the Rangerettes launched their boat and paddled their way down the Yellow River. One hour and thirty minutes later they reached the drop site. But that wasn't the end of their journey, just the beginning.

Now it was time to cross the swamp. Fortunately for the Rangerettes the swamp was not under as much water as it is half of the time. But without the water on the surface, the swamp becomes what is known in England as "the moor," one step in the wrong place, as Rangerette Scarper discovered, and you sink down to your waist. But, of course, there were various other obstacles around to challenge them; "wait-a-minute" vines, poison ivy, and "dammit stumps" or known more commonly as "cypress knees."

After spending what seemed like hours mucking through the swamp, reaching the Weaver River was a welcome break for the Rangerettes until they had to cross. Snap links in place, hands gripping the rope, they pulled themselves across the river. After another jaunt through the mud, the Rangerettes were ready for the high ground.

By 2 p.m. they were out of the swamp and relaxing in the cool waters of Weaver Creek. With a minimum number of blistered feet and aching muscles they returned to Camp Rudder secure in their minds that they completed their mission . . . to find out what their husbands do for a living.

Winter is here

Adjust driving habits to weather

Way up on the numbers list of traffic accidents each year are those that occur in the wintertime.

That's because a lot of people fail to adjust their summer driving ways to the hazards of the winter season. Poor visibility, ice and snow-covered roads, inadequate car preparation — all boost your chances of having an accident.

But there are ways you can cut the odds. Here are some tips on bad-weather driving recommended by the Committee on Winter Driving Hazards of the National Safety Council. Follow them. They'll help you get through the winter as a winner, not a loser.

WAY TO START — is early. You should have your car ready for winter before the temperature starts to drop. Not just an oil change and an antifreeze check, but go all the way with a complete tune-up and inspection.

You need a hot battery for cold morning starts. Get a charge or maybe it's time for a new one.

Check your tires. Regular tires should have a good tread for the bite you need in snow and ice. If you use snow tires, put them on with the first snowfall warning. You get the best traction from studded tires, but be sure they are permitted where you drive. Keep chains in the trunk if you must contend with severe conditions.

WAY TO SEE — is with alert eyes. The hazards are all around you and if you don't see them you're in trouble.

Clean snow and ice from windows ... windshield, rear and both sides. No peephole driving.

You can't light the way unless headlights and taillights are clean. Roadway spatter cuts visibility way down. Stop and clean headlight and taillight lenses occasionally. Carry a roll of paper towels in the car for just that purpose. Keep windshield washer reservoir filled with anti-freeze solution.

Run your heater and defroster a few minutes before your start out on cold mornings. That way you'll prevent sudden fogging of windshield glass that could blind you.

Bright lights glare in fog and falling snow. Use the low beam. And switch on your lights in the daytime, too, if visibility is poor.

WAY TO GO — is easy, especially in snow. If you do get stuck, here's the best way to get going again.

Don't gun it. You'll spin your wheels and probably dig in deeper. First, turn your wheels from side to side to get snow away from the front tires. Then, in high gear, ease forward gently. Sometimes a rocking motion — alternately shifting from forward to reverse — will provide the way out. Read your owner's manual for advice on that maneuver since it could cause transmission damage.

You can temporarily spray away start-up problems with some of the tire spray-on liquids, but they're more helpful on glare ice than in snow.

When you're on the way, keep speed down. It's not only the safe way, it's the "save" way, too.

WAY TO STEER — is steady. Sudden lane changes or turns can put you into a spin.

Stay well back of traffic ahead on icy roads. You need lots of extra room to stop. Anticipate intersections and expressway exits. Slow down well ahead of them. Remember that intersections may be extra slippery because of the polishing effect stopping and starting has on snow and ice.

Be wary of warming trends. Ice is twice as slippery at 30 degrees as it is at zero. Ice patches in areas shaded by woods, deep highway cuts or underpasses can waylay you, too. If you hit one, steer steady and roll through. Slamming on the brakes will only put you into a spin.

Above all, be wary of the other driver. Conditions are just as bad for him as they are for you. Anticipate, but don't over-react. Allow for errors. — (Courtesy of National Safety Council).

New PT programs being developed

Houston, and Ft. Benjamin Harrison will field test the programs and submit recommendations for improvements in the new approach.

The program consists of 12 packages of specified exercises. Six are designed for individual participation and six for group activities. The participants are to follow the guidelines in the selected exercise package and workout at least three times a week.

They will maintain their own progress chart which enables them to inform their group leader of their standing at any time.

Upon completion of the required steps in the program, they should be able to meet prescribed physical fitness standards.

The Baseline Program can be executed on an individual basis. This idea that many specialists or office workers cannot get together at any one time during the week to perform group physical training. However, they still have a need for a reasonable state of physical fitness. The Army believes that every soldier should be able to accomplish common soldiering tasks, such as to lift and carry, crawl, rush short distance, throw grenades, march, and dig an emplacement.

The field test will consist of a 20-week period. A total of 16 weeks are required for conducting the test and the other four weeks will be used for preparing and terminating the test.

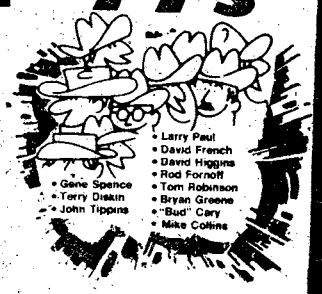
Mental health services extended to Vet families

Veterans Administration mental health services can be extended to family members of veterans, but only under circumstances which are carefully spelled out in the Veterans Omnibus Health Care Act of 1976.

The law, enacted Oct. 21, 1976, authorizes mental health services, consultation, professional counseling and training for family members of a veteran receiving medical care for a service-connected disability, but only if the care is considered essentia to the rehabilitation of the veteran.

Similiar health services may be authorized in some instances for family members of veterans with nonservice-connected disabilities, a VA spokesman said. Family care will be provided on an outpatient basis in those cases where it is deemed essential in effecting release of a veteran from a hospital.



Legal guardians, or an individual, in whose household the veteran certifies an intention to live, also may qualify for VA mental health services the spokesman added. Services will be limited to those which are essential to support rehabilitation of the veteran.

Sp5 James Moore

'Soldier of the Quarter' chosen

Sp5 James Moore, a medic with the 197th Inf Bde has been named as the Ft. Benning Soldier of the Quarter.

Competing against the best soldiers from around Ft. Benning, Moore proved himself as an outstanding, professional soldier. This makes it the third consecutive time a soldier from the "Forever Forward" Brigade has received the honor.

Moore came to Benning for Airborne training last summer where he aggravated a childhood knee injury which caused him to delay completion of the course. He was then assigned to the brigade in August as a medic and hopes to return to Airborne School now that his knee is healed. "I would like to finish my training and return to Korea where I spent 27 months with the 2nd Inf Div," explained Moore.

For his outstanding achievement, Sp5 Moore received a Certificate of Achievement, a plaque from the AUSA, a $25 savings Bond from the National Bank of Ft. Benning, $25 from the Ledger-Enquirer newspaper, a bust bank of John F. Kennedy, a Certificate of Excellence from post CSM Rogiers, a three day pass signed by Maj. Gen. Latham, and a bayonet with his name engraved from the SGMs Association. He will also be an honored guest at many local AUSA functions.

Due to severe winter conditions gripping the eastern half of the United States, and scarcity of heating fuel, it is essential that all family housing occupants reduce temperatures in their quarters to 68 degrees Fahrenheit. See related story, this page.

Infantry Center facing crucial peacetime battle

The Infantry Center is in the middle of another battle which could be it's most crucial peacetime confrontation.

This battle is against the waste of precious fossil fuel resources and is for the conservation of energy. Although the conservation war has been raging for years, energy supplies in many areas are critically low and the energy battle at the Infantry Center will be particularly important over the next two months.

January is the coldest month of the year in the Ft. Benning area. Strong, fast-moving polar fronts sweep through this area on an average of eight times during January, making the average temperature about 37 F. Freezing temperatures can be expected for nine days of the month. During this period, the greatest use of fuel is for heating buildings and for heating hot water. This fact indicates that one of the most significant energy savings can be realized by insuring that building temperatures are at or below those specified in USAIC Regulation No. 420-44. The regulation sets the following temperature levels for installation structures:

80 degrees in operating, delivery,

Gas shortage, severe cold forces post facility closures

Due to a gas shortage brought about by the current severe cold wave, a number of Ft. Benning facilities closed Wednesday. These facilities included the gyms, bowling alleys, recreation centers, craft shops, movie theaters, libraries, the country club building and the youth activities center. Also, all athletic events are cancelled. These facilities will remain closed at least through Sunday.

A spokesman for Directorate Facilities Engineering said that an announcement will soon be made as to when these facilities will be reopened.

Ft. Benning is also taking other steps to conserve gas during the cold wave. The thermostats in buildings have been lowered to 65 degrees and heat has been cut off in non-essential buildings, the spokesman said.

Despite snow flurries and freezing weather, the 586th Float Bridge Co continued training through the day and into the night. Boat operator, SFC Elvin Claudel, was offered little protection from the gusty winds during the operation of a 27-foot Erection Boat on Victory Pond. See related story and picture on page 21.

Benning bids farewell to 'Ma' Fraker

Many of Ft. Benning's top officials were on hand to render a final salute and bid a farewell to Mrs. Daisy "Ma" Fraker, in the ballroom of the Youth Activities Center, Bldg 1054 on January 14th at 9:30 a.m.

During the honorary ceremony, Maj Gen. Willard Latham, post commander, presented "Ma" with the Department of the Army Meritorious Civilian Service Award, which is the highest award given to a civilian employee.

As Ft. Benning's Recreation Specialist, Youth Activities Branch, Recreation Services Division, Mrs. Fraker "distinguished herself by meritorious service during the period May 1971 to May 1976. Her professional competence, organizational ability and mature judgment contributed immeasurably to the welfare and morale of approximately 10,000 dependents of active and retired military personnel."

Aside from receiving the Army's most prestigious civilian medal, "Ma" was bestowed with two other awards.

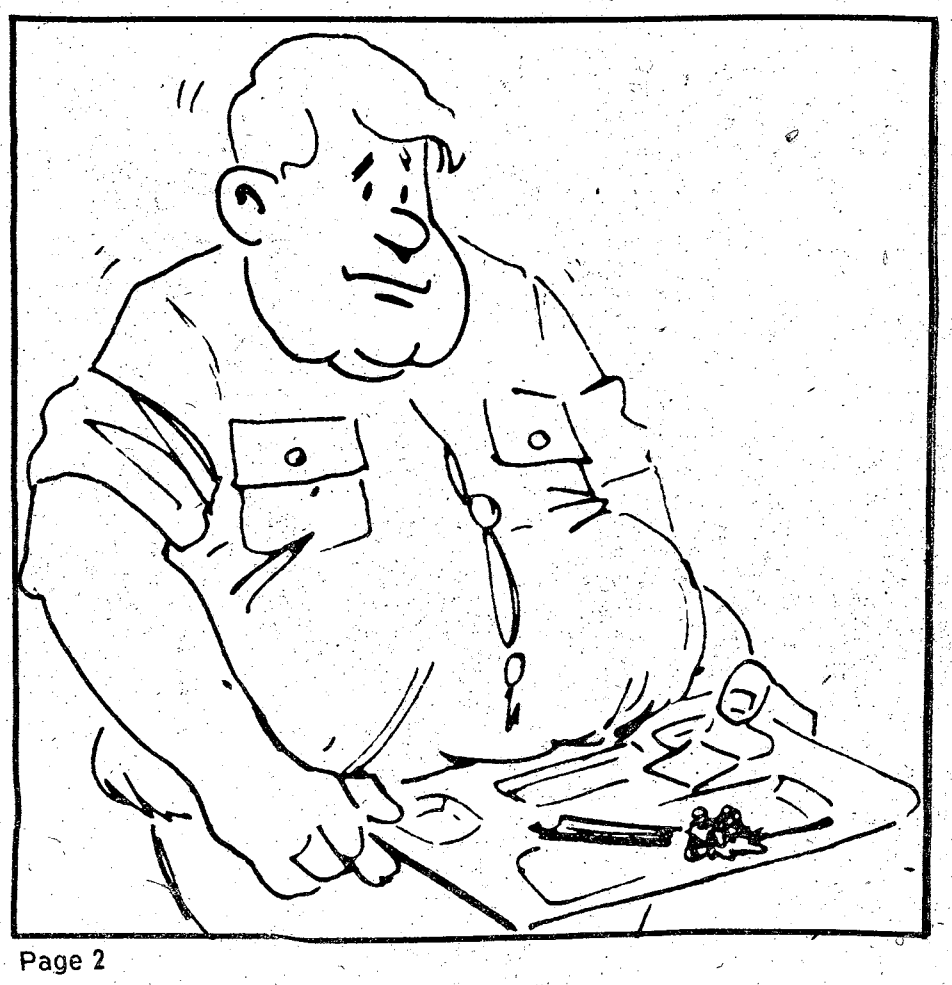
Col. Robert Poydasheff, Staff Judge Advocate, presented "Ma" with the Boy Scouts' Adult Volunteer Award and Mr. Frank O'Malley, Recreation Services Officer, presented her with the Recreation Services and Honorary Lifetime Membership award.

During her 10½ years of service, Mrs. Fraker established, recruited and operated an outstanding volunteer assistance program which provided competent coaches, instructors, officials and chaperones to work in Ft. Benning's diversified Youth Activities program.

A dedicated professional, Daisy was well loved by the Ft. Benning youths who called her "Ma." No matter what the problem, they always felt that they could confide in "Ma" before talking to their parents.

Daisy "Ma" Fraker (l) and Maj Gen. Willard Latham, post commander, look through a photo album depicting various scenes of the activities taking place in the Youth Center during "Ma"'s regime. The album was presented to her during an honorary ceremony held in the Youth Center on January 14th.

More emphasis placed on fitness, appearance



The soldier who tries to stuff a 38 inch belly into 34 inch fatigues is going to find that just buying larger pants won't solve this problem anymore.

Since the Chief of Staff, General Bernard Rogers, assumed his duties, there has been greater emphasis on physical fitness and appearance. The Chief is an old soldier and knows that it is important, "We just have to have soldiers with stamina, who don't get defeated on the battlefield just by fatigue or poor physical condition," he said.

The old PT and Weight Control book, AR 600-9, has been thrown out and the new version will really lay down the law. Some of the items in the new reg will include a new weight scale, one that is tougher and very realistic, every officer and soldier (regardless of age or duty) will get with the PT program on a regular basis and everyone under the age of 40 will take a PT test and be expected to pass it.

Obese troops will find themselves visiting the dispensary to get rid of some of the excess fat. Chapter 2 of the new reg spells out just how much you can carry around. It also divides overweight and obese into two categories. A soldier may be overweight (muscular and big boned) and not be obese. If a soldier is just plain fat with no medical explanation, the doctor will recommend a weight reduction plan. Any GI with a history of obesity who doesn't respond to weight reduction may find himself taking off his uniform for good.

PT and fat are not the only items that the Chief has in mind. He talks appearance too, "We've made a commitment to the public and to our Congress, to our Commander-in-Chief, to the Department of Defense, that today's Army is going to have soldiers that look like soldiers!" As to what the Army is going to do about it, "We are going to hold the officers and NCOs responsible, to insure that their soldiers look like soldiers. Because example starts at the top, you can't have a leader who is an officer or NCO who is trying to implement a weight control or appearance program when he himself is fat and sloppy," he added.

72 degrees in hospital wards and corridors (may be lowered when directed by Director Health Services).

68 degrees in living quarters, lavatories and showers.

65 degrees in offices, hanger lean-to's, and in warehouses, shops and the like where personnel work seated or in a standing position involving little or no exercise.

55 degrees in issue and similar rooms.

50 degrees in shops, hangars, and other buildings or sections of buildings where many employes work in a standing position and exercise moderately.

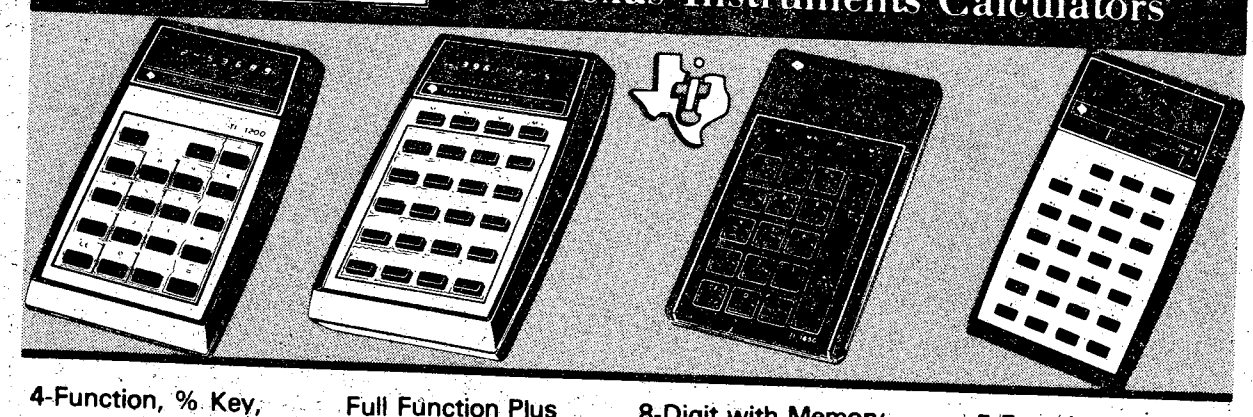
40 degrees in warehouses and the like where employes do work involving considerable exercise.

These temperatures are to be considered maximum settings. Lower settings are authorized if the temperature is consistent with health and mission requirements.

In past years, Ft. Benning has provided a leadership role in demonstrating energy conservation measures. With fuel shortages occurring daily in the more northern portions of the Country (where it is really cold) the Infantry Center is being asked to intensify its energy conservation program. In an energy use situation where a one degree difference in temperature amounts to a five per cent difference in fuel consumption, everyone can make a timely and significant contribution in the battle to defeat energy shortages.

As an added incentive, the Army Energy Program (AR 11-27) authorizes awards for energy conservation ideas through the Army Suggestion Program (AR 672-20). Included in this program are both cash and honorary awards for military and civilian employes. Outstanding achievement in energy conservation may also serve as the primary basis for quality step increases and sustained superior performance awards for civilian employes. If you have an idea, you are encouraged to contact the Management Analysis Division in Bldg 4, Room 608.

Let's get together and defeat the enemy. Paying a little bit now through mild discomforts is much better than paying a whole lot later when our energy resources are exhausted and no alternatives are available.



In 1973, 50 per cent of drivers exceeded 60 MPH. In 1975 this was reduced to 21 per cent. In 1973, 31 per cent of drivers exceeded 65 MPH. In 1975 this was reduced to 5 per cent of the drivers. We are slowing down and right along with the speed reduction fewer lives are being lost.

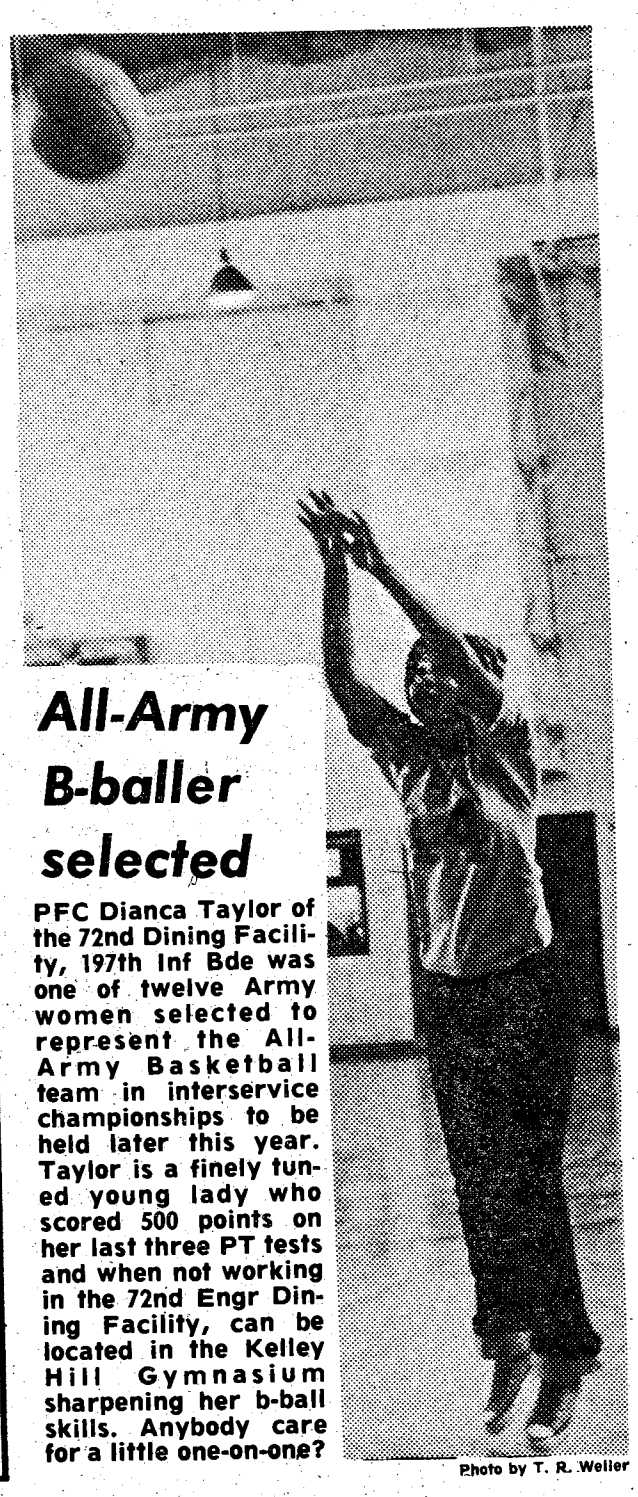
25th winner named

Patterson Memorial Award

By Betty Zimmerman

The top graduate of Ft. Benning's Branch Immaterial Officer Candidate Course (BIOCC) for 1976 has been named the 25th winner of the Robert P. Patterson Award.



2nd Lt. John A. Damoth, Co C, 1st Bn, 21st Inf, 25th Inf Div, will receive the award from Mrs. Patterson in ceremonies at Marshall Auditorium on February 11th.

The Patterson Award was established in 1952 to honor the memory of the late Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson, who entered the military in 1916. He was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross for extraordinary heroism in action in 1918 and later won the Silver Star for gallantry. He also received the Purple Heart. Patterson succeeded Henry L. Stinson as Secretary of War on September 18, 1945.

The award is presented annually to the OCS graduate who displays outstanding qualities, especially in leadership.

Damoth was the Distinguished Graduate and Leadership Honor Graduate of BIOCC class 1-76 on October 21, 1975. During his 7 years and 10 months prior service, he had also been Honor Graduate of High Altitude Low Opening School, Special Forces Reconnaissance School and Combat Reconnaissance School.

The 27-year-old native of Crossville, Ala. wears the Bronze Star with "V" device, the Vietnam Campaign Ribbon with four stars, the Combat Infantryman's Badge and the Master Parachutist Badge.

Military deterrent vital to U.S. security--AUSA

While 1976 was a year of relative peace, there are problems in every corner of the civilized world which could involve the United States in military action to support its long-range external goals. Looking back on 1976, the Association of the United States Army concludes that the need to maintain a credible military deterrent is at least as vital now as it has been anytime in our history.

Opinion polls and surveys conducted during 1976 show increased public understanding and support for military programs to maintain our place in the "real world." In the AUSA position paper The Security of the Nation, 1976—A Year-End Assessment, the association examines the state of the world as influenced by the events of 1976 and evaluates U. S. military forces in the context of that reality.

The association paper emphasizes the fact that the United States is finding it necessary to turn outward for supplies of raw materials and fuel that keep our industries going. This growing dependence on foreign sources puts new emphasis on the need to counter Soviet efforts to bring some of the sources in Africa and elsewhere into their influence sphere.

Calling attention to the growing Soviet advantage in conventional ground combat forces and strategic missile strike capabilities, as well as swelling Russian naval power, the paper concludes that the only plausible reason for this overall growth in war-making potential is the long-range goal of extending political influence into broader areas of the world.

Copies of the Position Paper are available at the Post Public Affairs Office, Room 604, Infantry Hall.

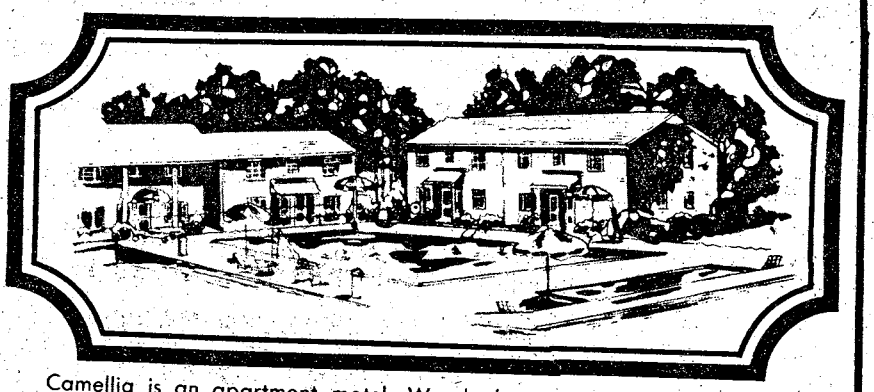
Ft. Benning's world renown 250-ft. airborne training towers were recently commemorated when a permanent plaque was erected and unveiled in ceremonies conducted by the director of the Airborne Department, Col. Frank G. Walton. These towers have been used to simulate parachute jumping in the airborne school for the past 35 years and are the only jump towers of its size and purpose in the world.

"... still some honest people around ..."

By Betty Zimmerman

"Thank goodness, there are still some honest people around," reported a Ft. Benning wife, Betty Kay.



Two employees of the Mall Bowling Center discovered Mrs. Kay's pocketbook, which contained $130, unattended at the bowling alley following the morning women's league.

Ssgt. Harry Donnelly, Hq Comd and civilian Bobby Combs went through the purse to determine the owner and then called Mrs. Kay who was unaware that she had left it at the center.

When Mrs. Kay returned to retrieve the pocketbook, she found that the honest employees wouldn't event accept a reward. "They just wished me a happy holiday," she said.

Race relations ... is it necessary?

By Phil Nesbitt

Not to knock the equal opportunity people, but why can't the Army consider the "soldier" concept?

After all, we are all soldiers; we are in the Army to do a job for our country. A wrench, a typewriter, a rifle don't care whether the person using it is Black, Brown, Red, Yellow or White.

There might be too much awareness in the Army today. Where the guy in the next bunk used to be Joe, he is now Joe, a Black. Remember the guy you got drunk with downtown, Juan, he isn't Juan anymore, he is Juan, a Hispanic American.

Each individual has a background, in fact an ethnic background. Soldiers learn about Blacks, Indians, Hispanos, but what about the Dutch, Germans, Irish, Scots, English, Hungarians, Poles, Italians, etc., etc.

America as we know it began a little over 200 years ago, call it the beginning. In the beginning there were French, Liberians, Souix, Chinese, German, English, Spanish, Arabs ... on and on the list continues.

All of these people came from different ethnic backgrounds; came to America to lead divergent lives; fought, loved, cried, laughed and lived with one another.

It could be that someone, somewhere has missed the point.

The Army can not afford to tell it's soldiers "you are different ..." which is what it does with race relations and equal opportunity. The mere name EQUAL OPPORTUNITY is the opposite of some of the programs it uses. By saying you are Black or Brown, you are different, you are saying that you are not equal, or are differents equal?

It is time that the Army says, "You are soldiers, you are people, you are in the Army, you have a job to do and serve your country. It doesn't matter if you are Black, or White or any other color or religion." We are soldiers.

You bet it is!

By Marv Davis

Is race relations training necessary? You bet it is. About five years ago, the following conversation took place in a race relations class: Young Black: "The military has problems. There is a lot of discrimination here and the system helps the problem." Colonel: "I think you're wrong. There is no discrimination because we have regulations against it."

The conversation brings into sharp focus the root of the problems of years past. The older whites, who had not been exposed to the problems of a minority, did not see the problem. They thought the problem existed only in the minds of the young militant blacks.

In the last five years, the Army and the other military services have made significant advances in minority and ethnic awareness. There are still problems with individuals but the institutional discrimination which has plagued minorities is on its way to extinction. It will still take time to complete the task. It takes many years to change attitudes which have been held for a lifetime.

Much of the criticism of race relations training has been that it was an attempt to tell people how to think and who they would associate with. The problem was really one of awareness. Don't tell people how to think but just make them aware that there was a problem and help them explore ways to find the answer.

Race relations training and equal opportunity offices in the Army have done much to narrow the gap between the races. The problem to confront is the apathy of the soldier who says, "OK, maybe there was discrimination then but not now." There was discrimination then and true there is less now, but the problem is not resolved until there is none.

Much of the progress in the Army over the last five years has been in the narrowing of the disparity of test scores. We still have a lifetime of cultural discrimination in education to overcome.

Only slight differences show up in the selection rates for officer and enlisted grades, and women, although they suffer no discrimination in pay, they were held back from many jobs. They now are represented in almost every field except combat.

There are still some problems to be addressed. Commanders need to show more support for the race relations training programs. Why are so many minority persons assigned to RR and EEO jobs? That in itself helps to perpetuate the differences and results in resistance to the training. Why do more enlisted blacks receive less than honorable discharges? It would be easy to say the blacks get into trouble more but the simplicity of that answer defies logic, particularly in view of the inborn cultural biases we have lived with since birth.

The answer lies within us, but if the problem is not made apparent, we will see no reason to look for a solution. Race relations training can provide the awareness. It's up to us to find the answer.

AUSA Defense Report

In his rush to make good on a campaign promise to grant pardons to unpunished Vietnam-era draft evaders, President-elect Carter may be treading dangerously near foreclosing the possibility of ever again relying on Selective Service as a source of military manpower.

Beginning with the Civil War some form of conscription has been necessary in every major war the United States has fought. It has even been necessary to use the draft during some periods of strained peace. In recent years the pressure of the draft convinced many young men to choose the alternative of service in the Reserve components. As long as this pressure was there the strength of the National Guard and the various service Reserves remained high without any major diversion of effort to recruiting.

Now we have an All-volunteer active military establishment. It is composed of good people who are well-trained and well-equipped but it is very expensive. In fact, because of the expense of the active forces there has been a move to expand the roles played by the Reserve components and to integrate them more closely with regular combat elements. Reserve manpower is a great deal less expensive to maintain.

But, like a tiger spinning around with its own tail in its mouth, this reliance on the Reserves has brought the issue of the viability of the volunteer forces right back to its starting point—the question of whether we can economically keep our total forces up to strength without the draft.

For the first time in many months the Army failed to meet its October 1976 recruiting goal and the Air Force, which has been bathing in a sea of recruiting success for years is reporting more resistence to its recruiters. Concurrently the strength of all the Reserve components is plummeting in spite of all-out efforts by commanders to find recruits and retain trained personnel.

Congress has been critical of the Pentagon's tendency to "throw money" at problems and there is little expectation that simply spending more money will cure all the personnel ills of the total military force. It seems that draft pressure will have to reinforce the recruiting and retention blandishments already available.

By pardoning those who violated the selective service laws the last time they were used, Commander-in-Chief Carter will have established a dangerous precedent for disobedience of the law and avoidance of the tradition of service to the nation. It will be even more difficult for him or his successors to make selective service work in times of real crisis.

New fuel system keeps 34th combat ready

By Bill Walton

The ability of a helicopter to move quickly to another location is of prime importance in the fulfilling of its military requirements, whether it be a medivac, resupply or troop haul mission. However, when it is shut down for refueling it is extremely vulnerable to an enemy threat.

The importance of "hot refueling," that is refueling the helicopter while the engine is running, proved itself countless times during the Vietnamese encounter. Most hot refueling points were set up by battalion or larger size units to service many aircraft. Now the Army has developed a hot refueling system for issue to company size units. The Forward Area Refueling Equipment (FARE) system is presently being issued to separate assault helicopter companies and the 121st Av Co (AH), 34th Med Bn is the first unit on Ft. Benning to receive this system.

Sp4 Jimmy Roberson connects a hose to a pump assembly while Sp4 Melvin Clark stands ready at the 500 gallon fuel bladder to activate the system in a trial run of the Forward Area Refueling Equipment system. Both men are members of the POL section, 121st Av Co (AH), 34th Med Bn.

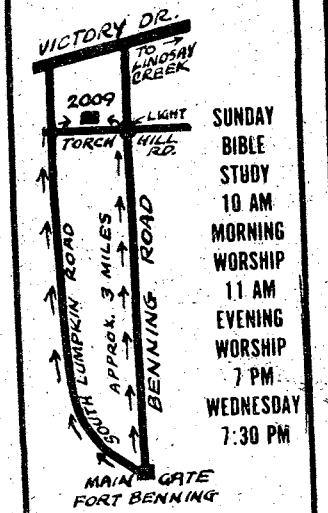
The FARE is simple, lightweight refueling equipment that can be transported by fixed wing and/or rotary wing utility and cargo aircraft. Its primary purpose is to transfer fuel from collapsible drums to helicopters in forward combat areas. Translated into common terms this means that a helicopter unit equipped with the FARE system is independent of POL Tankers with a consequent increase in the mobility of the unit.

The FARE consists of a pump/engine assembly, filter separator assembly, hoses and fittings and collapsible fabric drums. Each assembly is contained within a tubular framework and can be handled by two men. It is designed to operate satisfactorily in temperatures ranging from 25 F. to +125 F. A complete system, minus fuel, can be carried in a UH-1H helicopter. The collapsible 500-gallon fabric fuel drums, which weigh about 3800 pounds when full, are designed to be carried by a medium or heavy lift helicopter. The beauty of the FARE is its simplicity reflected by the fact that six refueling points can be ready to pump fuel within one hour after the POL section moves into an area. The time saved per helicopter refueling compared to tankers will depend on the training and adeptness of the three-man refueling crew but the FARE system should be three times as fast as conventional refueling.



Grenade launcher test ends

The United States Army Airborne, Communications and Electronics (ACE) Board recently tested the XM 174 Grenade Launcher to establish the weapon. The XM 174, currently a Marine Corps experimental automatic capability. Rigging procedures were confirmed by ACE Board test jumpers in parachute jumps from both UH-1H and C-130 AT Platoon, Combat Support Company, 1st Bn, 325th Infy, 82nd Airborne Division, Ft. Bragg, N.C.

Troopers from the 2nd and 3rd Bn, 325th Inf, 82nd Airborne Division, successfully jumped with the XM 174, as individual equipment, during combat assaults into Brave Shield XV on October 12th. The 2nd Bde, 82nd Airborne Division is currently evaluating the combat utility of the weapon to determine firing effectiveness, maintenance requirements and tactical employment. (ARNEWS)

fins, furs, feathers

By Denny Blankenship

I received some interesting things through the mail or in other round about ways. The following was received from an ol fishing buddy recently:

Chain Letter

Dear Friend,

This chain was started in the hope of bringing happiness to all fishermen. Unlike most chains, it doesn't require money. Simply send a copy of this to five fishermen friends, then bundle up your wife and send her to the fellow whose name heads the list. When your name reaches the top of the list, you will receiver 16,250 women and some should be dandies. Have faith, don't break the chain. One man broke it and got his wife back.

Your fishing buddy

A 15 degree temperature and icy winds greeted 24 members of the Post Bass Club last Sunday as they began their monthly tournament on Lake Martin. Due to the frigid conditions, many of these hardy fishermen experienced difficulty in making the 7 a.m. start.

Steering mechanisms froze, engines wouldn't crank and some folks even had problems putting their boat plugs in. All of this didn't seem to dampen the spirit or enthusiasm of these dedicated bassers and the tournament got under way as scheduled. A torturous day of fishing ensued with several boats dropping out along the way. At the 4 p.m. weigh-in, it was obvious that the weather had played an important part again, since the total catch was skimpy. Five fishermen managed to catch one fish each and that was it.

Capt. Charlie Shepard's 2 pound 5 ounce fish won first place honors and big fish for the day. MSgt Dan Hahn's 2 pound, 4 ounce fish won second place with S/Sgt. (Ret) Bob Billman's 1 pound 4 ounce taking third. Congratulations fellows, I think you're all ready for a trip to the funny farm after fishing in that weather. (I quit early and succumbed to the car heater).

Most folks I know are of average intelligence. However, a few are at both extremes of the intelligence spectrum. I'm not sure where my pal and running mate Joe Gorecki fits along this spectrum, so I'll present his case and let you be the judge.

Joe being very interested in the great outdoors and the wonders of Mother Nature, was conducting a jumping experiment with a frog. He marked off an appropriate frog jumping course, placed the frog on the starting line, poised with pad and pencil, and commanded- "Jump!" The obedient frog leaped through the air and Joe scribbled on his note pad, "Frog with two rear legs jumps six feet."

Joe then removed one of the frogs rear legs, placed him on the starting line again and commanded- "Jump!" The responding frog leaped through the air again and Joe busily scribbled, "Frog with one rear leg removed, jumps three feet."

Joe then removed the frog's other rear leg, placed him on the starting line and commanded—"Jump!" The frog didn't move. Joe said, "Uh huh" and scribbled in his pad, "frog with both rear legs removed can't hear!"

Ponder this until next week: An elephant and a flea walked across a wooden bridge together. Upon arriving at the other side, the flea turned to the elephant and said, "We sure did shake that thing, didn't we?"

No more EERs for E-3 and below

MILPERCEN has announced several major changes to the enlisted evaluation reporting system. Some of the changes went into effect on January 1st, and the rest will become effective when the change to chapter 8, AR 600-200 gets to the field in March.

As of January 1st, a DA Form 2166-5, Enlisted Evaluation Report (EER) will no longer be submitted for personnel below the grade of E-4.

An initial report is required when a soldier is promoted to E-4, if he or she has not previously had a report submitted. If the soldier has received an EER in grade E-3 or below, the individual will receive another EER only after promotion to E-4, on an annual basis, or upon a change of rater.

Rating schemes developed in units or sections are now required to include all soldiers in the grade of E-3 and above. This is to insure that the rater, indorser and reviewer will have been designated when an E-3 is promoted to E-4, prior to submission of the initial report.

Another major change allows soldier supervisors in the grade of E-5 to rate E-4s they supervise.

Annual reports will be submitted according to a new schedule: E-4 - September, E-5 - August, E-6 - June, E-7 - April, E-8 - February, E-9 - December. There is the possibility of a change in the reporting month for the E-4 EER, MILPERCEN officials said. This would reduce the number of E-4 and E-5 reports submitted within a 30 to 60 day period.

The printed change to AR 600-200 will outline other changes in the Enlisted Evaluation Reporting System and will be effective upon recipt. (ARNEWS)

Council provides help for Benning youth

By Madonna Simple

In June, 'TR' was picked up by Ft. Benning Military Police for shoplifting a paperback book from the mini-mall. Charged with theft, he was scared, confused and had begun to feel the consequences of violating the law. Now 'TR' was faced with one of two actions that could be taken against him. One, his case could be handled in the juvenile court, or two, it could be handled by the Adolescent Advisory Council.

The Military Police put in a call to the court intake worker, a trained officer for the court, and it was decided that he could best be served through the Ft. Benning community juvenile diversion program. This diversion program takes juveniles out of the courts and channels them through the Adolescent Advisory Council.

Because Ft. Benning is divided between Muscogee and Chattahoochee counties, jurisdiction of a juvenile case is determined according to where the offender lives. Muscogee County has it's own juvenile court to handle cases that fall under it's jurisdiction, however, Chattahoochee County, which does not have its own juvenile court, turns over its juvenile cases to the Georgia Department of Human Resources court division in Columbus.

In 1965, the federal government researched the juvenile court system. They discovered that the courts were overloaded with cases just like 'TR's.' The research also showed that many children were being denied their rights under the Constitution. To correct this problem, they suggested a type of diversion program. This program would channel juveniles (like 'TR') who had minor violations, through community programs that dealt specifically with these types of problems. This system has freed the juvenile courts to handle more difficult delinquents and it provides the youth and his parents the opportunity to resolve the problem as a family unit.

'TR's' experience with the legal system was made possible because of the Adolescent Advisory Council. Ft. Benning in the "Follow Me" tradition, has provided the military community with an adequate diversionary program for juvenile offenders through the Council. The Council is also a command vehicle for expressing support in the handling of juvenile offenders.

The Adolescent Advisory Council was started 18 months

ID cards getting a closer look

Since Monday patrons using facilities on Ft. Benning have been undergoing a close check of their military identification (ID) cards.

Patrons using all post exchanges, the commissary, Recreation Services activities, including the Follow Me Golf Course, Packaged Beverage Store, all Officer and NCO clubs and Martin Army Hospital have been subject to the check.

This program will be a continuous one, and all personnel are urged and expected to cooperate with managers and employees who are charged with checking ID cards of prospective patrons of these facilities. The checks will require that you remove your ID card from your wallet or purse and hand it to the ID card checker.

If the ID is deemed valid, it will be returned to you immediately. However, should the checker discover that the card is not valid for some reason, it will be kept by the checker and forwarded through Provost Marshal channels to the Ft. Benning Adjutant General. A valid ID card will have to be obtained before the facility may be used. (The confiscation of invalid ID cards in this *manner is authorized by Army regulations).

Persons who have allowed their ID cards to expire without getting new ones are urged to obtain valid IDs as soon as possible. Military personnel, active and retired, should check the ID cards of their dependents to insure they are still current. Authorized personnel may obtain ID cards, including dependents' cards, at the following locations:

The School Brigade — Bldg. 2747
197th Inf Bde — Bldg. 9040
1st AIT Bde — Bldg. 4044
AG Div — Bldg. 83

Dependent ID cards expire on the holder's 21st birthday, unless the dependent is a full-time student in an accredited institution of higher learning, in which case the card expires on holder's 23rd birthday.

Persons who have their ID cards confiscated as a result of this new program may be inconvenienced, but they should realize that this program is designed to protect their fringe benefits and to preclude the use of these facilities by unauthorized personnel.

Advisory Council provides help for Benning's youth

ago to meet the needs of the military community in handling juvenile offenders. This Council meets the first Monday of every month at the Sightseeing Road Chapel (across from the 36th Engr Gp headquarters). In these meetings, the council discusses juvenile cases that they are working on and what are some of the possible solutions for these cases.

"We're not in the business of putting children in jail, we're in the business of trying to help them," said Franklin Mills, Military Police Juvenile Investigator.

The Council wants to involve the entire military community and its assets in treating and preventing the causes of juvenile delinquency, thus making the problem a community one rather than merely a police or court function.

The Council's main goal is to treat people like 'TR' as a whole person rather than a collection of offenses and symptoms. As a community based program, the primary processes begin after juveniles like 'TR' first come in contact with the law and also before he is formally adjudicated. Parental input into the program is encouraged before a child is officially cited. The Council reviews and monitors those cases in which final court action is taken to insure community involvement and concern.

The 14 members of this Council include both military and civilian personnel. The Council members are: the Provost Marshal, USAIC chaplain, Staff Judge Advocate, Dependent Schools Officer, Chief of the Army Community Services, Chief of the Social Work Services, Muscogee County Juvenile Court, Chattahoochee and Muscogee Counties Department of Family and Child Services, the Georgia Department of Human Resources, the post CSM, Chief Community Health Nurse, the Chief of Alcoholic and Drug Abuse office and the Chief of the PMO Juvenile Division.

There are numerous ways in which the Council is capable of helping children. Juveniles may be referred to the Council by the court intake worker. The intake worker is the one who decides whether the child should go to court or be handled by the Adolescent Advisory Council.

When a case such as 'TR's' comes before them, each member of the council will look into his specific area to determine how the problem can be solved. After each member has done his individual research, a meeting is held and research is pooled to try to come up with a solution to the juveniles problem.

All decisions reached by the Council are cleared by the installation commander first. This process lets him know what's happening with the juvenile offender.

A child doesn't have to be an offender to appear before the Council. If a parent feels that his child needs help, they can refer their child to the council through one of its members. The Council then referes youngsters to the specific organization that can help him with his problem.

Parental referral to the Advisory Council is lower than those referred by the court intake worker. "I think one reason why this is the case is because most parents don't want to admit that their child is doing something wrong," said Mills.

"The Adolescent Advisory Council is a tremendous tool in the prevention of juvenile delinquency, numerous children face the court system with no alternatives, whereas the Council takes the juvenile out of the court system and helps him with the aid of parents and community resources," Mills concluded.

Numerous cases have recently been discovered in which sponsors of school age children residing on post, who otherwise qualify for free or reduced price school lunches, have not completed the necessary application forms. Eligibility requirements are based on the size of your family and your total yearly income. For example an E-7 with a total income (base pay, quarters and separate rations) of $13,817 and four children would be eligible for reduced price meals for his children. If you think you may be eligible — contact the principal of the school where most of your children attend immediately.

Aviation training programs change

There are some new wrinkles ahead for Army aviators in 1977, according to DA officials.

For starters, the initial entry rotary wing (IERW) training program will be revised starting in May. The program will stress night and combat skill-related training. It will include a dual tracking feature in which about 25 per cent of the students will be qualified as OH-58 aero-scout pilots. Students will receive the self-paced mode of instruction in all phases of the course. Also, greater reliance will be placed on simulator use. The course is designed to improve battlefield survivability and effectiveness.

DA officials said that in addition to the IERW program, TRADOC program planners at Ft. Monroe, Va. will also establish an aviator refresher course. This will allow officers to brush up on aviator skills and update their knowledge. Officers returning to flying duty after serving three or more years in a non-operational flying assignment will attend. The first refresher course is set for April.

Also, an aviation commander's readiness course has been designed for aviation unit commanders and key staff officers. They will receive instruction on management and use of aviation resources. The course will run concurrent with the aviator refresher course. Officers will attend one or the other, not both.

All courses mentioned will be conducted at the Army's Aviation Center, Ft. Rucker, Ala.

10-8 on the warpost

By "HOSS" KACI 4615

Deadline time again. Three hours to go and not a word on paper. I turn to the typewriter, rap out a few words and look down to read them.

"Deadline time again" it says. "Three hours to go and not a word on paper. I turn to the typewriter, rap out a few words and look down to read them."

"Deadline time again" it says."

This fantasy is broken by the editor's shout from across the room.

"Hey Hoss! Is your column done yet? Only three hours left!"

Hoping to get something for the column, I go down to the car and turn on the CB.

"How 'bout it, Mad Doctor. You copy?"

"You may commence pleonastic prolixity."

"Hot enough for you today, Doc?"

"Your cerebral regimen is convoluted. Climatological conditions are sufficiently frigid to crystallize the posterior of the apothegmatical metallic anthropoid."

"Yeah, I know. I was just kidding."

"Algid meteorology is not a matter for harlequinade."

"Say, did you hear about the guy who had to go 10-7 because his antenna froze over and the signals couldn't get through the ice? He finally got back on the air after his XYL knitted him an antenna warmer."

"That approximates a superannuated mendacity."

"No, it's true. It worked so good that he had her knit another one as a nose-warmer for his elephant."

"You are attempting to elongate my pedal extremity."

"Yeah. Well, see you later."

Back at my desk, I check the time; 40 minutes to go. I look at the paper in the typewriter.

"Deadline time again" it says.

Retired military deserve respect

Military courtesy is a part of our national heritage that must be maintained if the Army is to continue to be viewed with the high esteem and respect it now holds.

By tradition and law, retired Army personnel are persons with a continuing military status and are entitled to rights, benefits, and privileges associated with the military — winch includes courtesy. The Army is proud of its retired soldiers and of the titles they have earned, which represent increasing degrees of responsiblity over their active service years. A retiree's rights to bear his or her military title is up to the individual, within the boundries of current directives and good citizenship.

Military courtesy and respect in correctly addressing these valuable members of the Army community are of extreme importance to all personnel on installations and in facilities serving them, and at no time will they be made to feel they are no longer important members of the military community.

Retirees will be addressed by their military titles, unless they specifically state otherwise. When in doubt, the address of 'ma'am' or 'sir' is always good form.

Let's not forget military courtesy.

"Uncle Sam needs me."

Michael A. Mazza

SP5 Mike Mazza is a medic. He works in the emergency room of an Army hospital. "I think this job is great. It gives you a chance to see the real world. Me? I lived in a little town in Virginia for 18 years. Bam! The next thing I knew I was in Japan. Helping people. Like in a hospital ward. You do little things for them. And they think the world of you. I don't consider that kind of job to be work."

The Army needs people like Mike Mazza. People who are committed to doing a better job. If that's you, why not see your career counselor today. You may find out just how much Uncle Sam needs you.

Keep a good soldier in the Army. Reenlist.

Lombardo commands 3/7th

Lt.Col. Roy Lombardo Jr. assumed command of the 3/7th Inf 'Cottonbalers' from LtCol. William Seely in ceremonies held recently on Combined Arms Field at Kelley Hill.

Lombardo comes to the 'Cottonbalers' after an assignment with the Department of the Army in Washington, D.C. He has also served as an infantry leader in Okinawa, Vietnam and Korea.

Lombardo holds a BS degree in Geology from Tulane University, a MS degree in Operations Research from American University and is a graduate of the United States Army Command and General Staff College.

LtCol. William B. Seely has commanded the 3/7th since December, 1975. Prior to that he served as the 197th Inf Bde's Executive Officer. He will depart the 197th for his new position as Commander, U.S. Military Support Group, Honduras.

HREO relates to students

Two members of the 197th Inf Bde Human Relations and Equal Opportunity Office recently related to the students of Carver High School in Columbus, the little known facts of Afro-American history.

Sgts James Brooks and James Moore gave a slide presentation and conducted a seminar with 25 students in Mr. Gene Sharpe's American Origins class. The program is part of a special project of HREO to aid in educating people of the surrounding communities in the area of race relations.

The program began with some little known facts of blacks and their history that amazed the class. One student, Sharon Suloski, said that she never knew Blacks played such an important role in our history. "If it wasn't for classes like this, a lot of people would be missing out on much of the nation's heritage," said Sharon.

Mr. Sharpe feels the program is very beneficial to the class and looks forward to the next time Brooks and Moore visit. "Every time they come here they bring an excellent presentation," said Mr. Sharpe "It would take me years to put together the material they cover."

SMG'S Wives Coffee

On January 5th, the Sergeant Major Wives held their monthly coffee at the TIC Chapel Annex. After the busy holiday season, the wives relished this opportunity to relax and visit with each other. A farewell was given to Mrs. Fred Marshall, whose husband has retired. Mrs. Marshall was also presented with a silver tray. This months hostesses were: Mrs. James Daniel, Mrs. Franklin Kinard and Mrs. Firmen Sawers.

2nd Bn, 1st AIT

On the 13th of January, the 2nd Bn, 1st AIT Wives, met at the Harmony Church Recreation Center, for their final monthly coffee. "Charlie" Co, was the host Company for the affair. Mrs. Horace Harrell thanked everyone for attending and expressed that due to the lack of attendance of the coffees, and much to her regrets, they were being terminated. 43rd Engineers brave weather and road march to build LTR

Exhausted and shivering, the men of HHC and Company A, 43rd Engr Bn demonstrated new heights of physical stamina last week by erecting a light tactical raft (LTR) in conjunction with a 25 mile road march.

This is not a difficult task for combat engineers, but none of the men involved, all mechanics and clerks, had never assembled a LTR before.

Although the LTR is called "light" the newly christened "engineers soon discovered that the components supplied by the 586th Engr Co (Float Bridge) were anything but. The ramp panels and pontoons weighed an even 650 pounds apiece and weighed even more as the effects of 12 miles of marching hampered their efforts. Because of the march the men had to manhandle each piece of the raft without the assistance of any mechanical lifting devices.

While the engineers did not break any records for assemblying the LTR, their effort and performance was outstanding considering the physical demands of the road march coupled with the assembly of the raft.

"We can assemble the light tactical raft in under thirty minutes if we had to do it again," commented SFC Tenery, NCOIC.

Mechanics and clerks of HHC and Co A, 43rd Engr Bn brave the cold weather as they assemble a Light Tactical Raft during their quarterly 25 mile road march.

Which cap should you wear?

Which cap do you wear with Army Greens?

In accordance with AR 670-5, Officers and Warrant Officers should wear their service cap (with bills) unless in a temporary duty status, while operating a privately owned vehicle or when wearing Army tan or khaki uniform as outer garment.

Enlisted personnel have the option of wearing either the garrison or the service cap.

When traveling in military vehicles, caps are not required to be worn when they may result in the unsafe operation of that vehicle. There is no requirement to wear a cap in a privately owned vehicle.

Growth doesn't stop at maturity.

Everyone knows U.S. Savings Bonds reach full maturity in just five years.

But they don't stop there.

Bonds keep accumulating interest year after year after year after year.

So if you're enrolled in a Payroll Savings Plan at work (or the Bond-A-Month Plan where you save), you don't have to rush out and cash your Bonds at maturity.

You can sit back and watch them keep growing.

The older they get, the better they look.

Series E Bonds pay 6% interest when held to maturity of 5 years (4½% the first year). Interest is not subject to state or local income taxes, and federal tax may be deferred until redemption.

Take stock in America.

200 years at the same location.

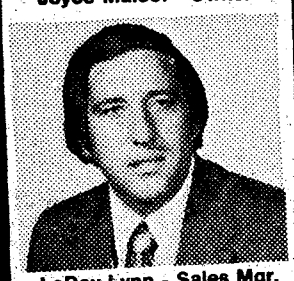
Danger thin ice!

On Tuesday, January 18th, three young brothers in Hiram, Georgia apparently drowned when they fell through ice on a small pond.

The likelihood of the ice on ponds in western Georgia freezing hard enough to support the weight of adults or children is very remote. While a frozen pond may be attractive to children, it is also very deadly. Children should be advised to stay off frozen ponds regardless of their estimation of the strength of the ice.



Don't take chances. Stay off the ice!

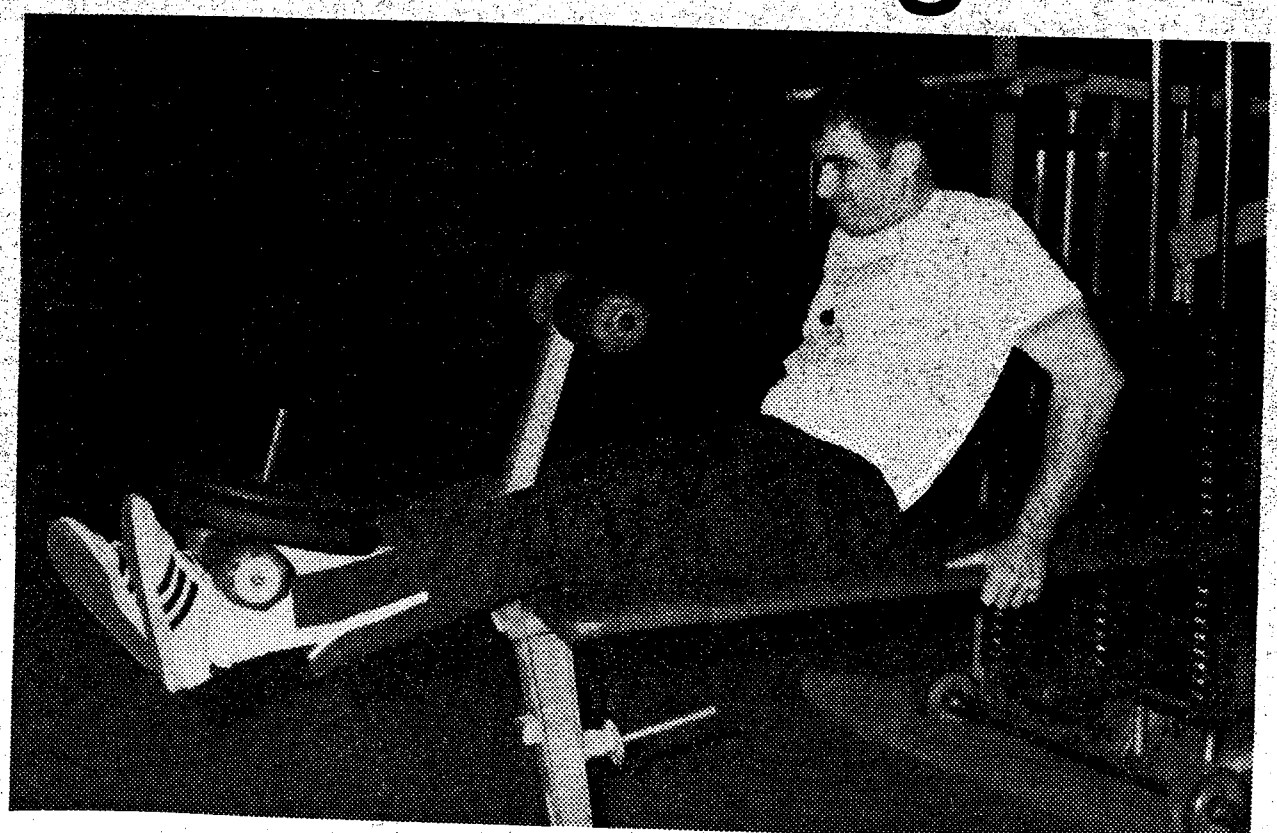
'You may never walk again'

By Betty Zimmerman

Following the fifth serious injury to his left leg in 1971, doctors told Maj. Arthur Parker III, "You may never walk again".

But in 1976 the S-3 officer of the 1st Bn, 29 Inf, TSB, maxed the PT test twice. That's right, he scored 500 points despite a patched-up, pieced-together, bum leg.



It wasn't easy — he wasn't even able to run until January 1974. He said, "I tried and tried, but it was like trying to move a brick wall — my leg wouldn't cooperate. Then one day during the close of the Christmas holidays the leg worked — I ran!"

"I promised myself if I could ever run again, I would never stop. So running is an important part of my life now. I run for fun and in competition, though I don't have to win to be happy. It's enough just to be able to finish".

The modest major kept saying, "I really haven't done anything unusual". But others think he has.

Parker came through his first Vietnam tour unscathed, but just 30 days after his arrival on the second tour, he was in the hospital with a gunshot wound to the left

With determined effort, Maj. Art Parker strengthens his 'bum leg' on a weight machine during a noon break in preparation for his evening run. Parker has injured the leg five times and was not expected to walk again. He has since scored 500 points on two consecutive PT tests.

Gas shortages, cold weather force temperature reductions

Due to current gas shortages and the onset of additional cold weather forecast by the weather services, Ft. Benning residents and employees are faced with further reductions in heating fuels.

The reductions of temperature setting announced last week have resulted in considerable savings in natural gas and heating fuels; however, additional reductions are necessary to insure continued service.

"Since Monday, an average daily savings of 285,000 cubic feet of natural gas has been realized," stated Utilites Chief George Schladensky, "but in light of the predicted cold weather, temperature settings on post must be reduced even further."

The following settings were initiated effective Wednesday: 55 degrees in all recreational facilities, 60 degrees in administrative type buildings, and 65 degrees in post housing and barracks during the day and 60 degrees at night.

All other facilities will follow the setting prescribed in USAIC Reg No. 420-44.

'586th NCOs make the Army go'

By Joe Hilton

"Neither rain nor cold nor sleet nor snow was able to stop the 586th Engr Co from giving a hundred per cent plus in a recently conducted five day field training exercise in sub-freezing weather."

That's the way SFC Wayne Utley, first sergeant of the 586th Float Bridge Co, saw it and 1st Lt Dozier Cain was impressed with the way the exercise was conducted.

"The FTX was planned and supervised entirely by NCOs from the 586th. It gave the officers an opportunity to observe the people who make the Army go. And believe me, they made it go!"

The 586th is made up of experts in assembling, erecting and when necessary, destroying floating and fixed bridges. During the FTX the unit performed many tasks to include: constructing a M4T6 tactical raft and dry span with a trestle, float raft decking, anchorage and rigging and conducting a simulated river crossing.

One of the highlights of the operation occurred on the second day when an M-60 A1 Tank was driven onto the M4T6 tactical raft and floated around Victory Pond.

The 586th is a fully mobile and self-supporting member of the Airborne "D" Pack. As such it must be able to load and transport by air, rail and overland convoy within 72 hours.

The company commander, Capt. James Brown, indicated that, "The high morale of the troops throughout the exercise was a fine example of the leadership capabilities well-trained NCOs can exert."

Although the 586th's primary mission is building bridges as a part of the overall efforts of the 36th Engr Gp (CBT), it supports the Infantry School by putting on river crossing demonstrations and provides safety boats and scuba divers when the need arises.

Three days remain for aliens to report address

January 31st is rapidly approaching and if you are not a citizen of the United States, you have three days remaining in which to report your address to the U.S. Attorney General.

Aliens temporarily absent from the U.S. during January must report their address within 10 days of returning to this country.

Alien Address Report Cards (Form 1-53) are available at all branches of the Ft. Benning Post Office until Monday, January 31st, and are available from the Department of Justice, Immigration and Naturalization Service, Washington, D.C. 20536 and at other INS offices throughout Georgia.

For those aliens filing the card after January, place the card in an envelope and mail directly to the INS, Washington.

The Immigration and Nationality Act provides serious penalties for willful failure to submit the report. Compliance with this requirement is, therefore, of importance to all aliens in the armed forces and alien dependents of members of the armed forces.

Tribute to Dr. King

"I have a dream, and so I go back to the south, not in despair . . ., I go back believing that the new day is coming, I HAVE A DREAM!" Those words of the great statesman, the late Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., echo is the ears, hearts and minds of people everywhere.

Many of Dr. King's thoughts and feelings were conveyed during a memorial tribute conducted recently by the 197th Inf Bde (Sep) at the Kelley Hill Chapel.

Covering Dr. King's entire life, Chaplain (Maj.) Floyd Lacy placed special emphasis on his final years.

Col. Fletcher Ware, 197th Bde Commander described Dr. King's dreams for mankind and the way the Army was instrumental in breaking the color barrier. He went on to describe how black and white work together as a team to get the assigned task accomplished.

The Infantry Chorus and the Friendship Baptist Church of Columbus performed a medley of black spirituals. Two soloists, Mrs. Louise Nickens of Ft. Benning and Mrs. Jammie Thomas from the Ebenezer Street Baptist Church of Atlanta provided special music. Mrs. Thomas knew the late Dr. King in his youth and had the opportunity to listen to him preach at her church. She also sang at his funeral and participated in the historic march in Washington, D. C.

The guest speaker for the service was the Reverend James Carter, who is the pastor of the Friendship Baptist Church.

A special offering was collected at the service and was donated on behalf of the brigade to the Martin Luther King Jr. Center for Social Change in Atlanta.

Physical conditioner practices what he teaches

By Geoff Wilhelmy

Few instructors at the Infantry School practice on their own time what they teach as actively and convincingly as Maj. David Fields.

Fields, the chief of the Conditioning and Drill Branch, can be seen up to three times a day dressed in his familiar light blue sweat suit with light blue nylon running shoes, running with his distinctive short, clipped stride. At age 35, Fields is one of the nation's finest distance runners in his age group.

As an amateur marathon runner, Maj. David Fields practices what he teaches. As chief of the Conditioning and Drill Branch, USAIC, Fields covers 100 miles a week during serious training and enjoys the physical and emotional uplift that running gives him.

For Maj. Fields, distance running was the end product of years of frustration and physical pain. Good enough in basketball to be actively recruited by colleges and good enough in handball to finish in the top 10 in the Midwest Regionals, he found both sports emotionally draining, tempermentally unsettling, and eventually, physically disabling. Afflicted with swollen, aching knees in 1972, he began distance running to keep his weight down and restore his legs. Within a year, Dave was running 10 miles a day and had entered his first marathon, the Peach Bowl in Atlanta. Three years later, Fields ran that same 26-mile, 385 yard distance almost 40 minutes faster.

Though his race pace often approaches five minutes a mile, he never runs faster than seven minutes a mile in training. Running at this comfortable speed allows the body to increase its capacity to utilize oxygen allowing a much faster pace during racing.

Fields covers 100 miles a week when in serious training, an amount, by modern standards, that is no more than ordinary. Increasingly, competitive distance running has become a time consuming, often full time occupation. America's premier marathon runner, Frank Shorter ran 140 miles a week, for a year, in preparation for the Montreal Olympics. England's extraordinary Dave Bedford, world record holder at 10,000 meters, trains up to 200 miles a week.

At 5'10", Fields weighs a slender 145 lbs that is carefully maintained with a vegetarian diet. Initially he changed to a vegetarian diet on the advice of a physician who prescribed it for chronic stomach and side cramps while running. The stomach cramps disappeared but the additional effects were even more startling; his weight dropped by 28 pounds in five months and he seemed to simultaneously acquire an inexhaustible supply of energy. Fields, who leg. Three weeks later, he was back to duty when he stepped on a mine and seriously injured the same leg.

Well, the doctors got him back on his feet in January 1971 and the first thing that happened was a hand grenade wound to you guessed it — the same leg. The final touch came in May 1971 when a helicopter crash again injured the the left leg.

That finished Parker's Vietnam tour and he was assigned to graduate school at Tulane University in New Orleans.

But New Orleans turned out to be just as dangerous for Parker's left leg as Vietnam was.

One night he was helping a good friend move into a neighboring townhouse when fate struck again. They had backed the truck up to the sliding glass patio door and were carrying the things down the truck ramp into the house when someone closed the glass door. It was too late to stop his momentum when the major noticed the closed door and through it he went.

His left leg was severed to the bone just above the knee and if it hadn't been for the fact that his friend was an emergency room physician, he would have died from loss of blood. But his neighbor saved his life and probably his leg.

A two-month stint in the hospital left him able to walk, but in his words it was "something like a 100-year-old man".

At the end of 1973, he finished grad school and came to Ft. Benning where he continued his efforts to run again. In fact, he set up progressive goals for himself and reaching them meant many hours of exercise and many ounces of effort but the fulfillment came in 1974 when he ran once again and in 1976 when he maxed the PT test.

In a year of command in A-2-1, Capt. J. Alan Cartwright activated and developed an outstanding unit which has been responsible for the training of over 1,000 qualified Infantrymen with the 1st AIT Bde. Additionally, he runs five miles in under 34 minutes, has logged over 700 miles in the "Run-For-Your-Life" program and scored a 497 on his PT test.

Military Unions—Let's Settle the Question, NOW!

For the past several weeks there have been reports that various locals of the American Federation of Government Employees have begun efforts to sign up military members. This action is apparently in response to a vote by the AFGE membership in its annual convention to remove bars against including the military in its ranks.

Strangely, these reports from McGuire Air Force Base and Fort Dix in New Jersey, and from Fort Devens, Massachusetts, have been met by exclamations of surprise by the AFGE national leadership. The new union president, Kenneth Blaylock, now says that although the AFGE headquarters has been "inundated" with inquiries from military personnel since the convention gave the green light to expanded membership, the union hierarchy must still address many unanswered questions before beginning any military membership drive.

It is interesting, too, to note that at Fort Dix AFGE has been joined in its organizing efforts by the Enlisted People's Organizing Committee and the Friends Military Counseling Service, groups that were born in the anti-Vietnam, anti-military, anti-establishment, anti-everything days. In a meeting with the press these groups expressed their concern over the real "gut issues"—the length of a military man's hair and whether he can be required to exchange salutes with his fellow soldiers.

AFGE president Blaylock expressed many reservations about moving ahead with military organizing efforts, including the fundamental ability of the union to represent a new category of members with unique problems. He also wondered if there had been sufficient "dialogue" between the union and its potential military members to provide an understanding of their problems.

We may be able to help Mr. Blaylock answer that last question. Our information indicates that AFGE has been "inundated" with a trickle of no more than 2000 letters from a total military population of over two million. If this is considered a form of dialogue, the military participants amount to less than one tenth of one percent of the total population—a miniscule representation.

AFGE is welcome to its second thoughts about military unionization. In the meantime, however, it is still incumbent of the Congress to address the propriety of such a move by AFGE or any other organizers. No one in Congress has offered any pro-union encouragement but none of the concerned committees has seen fit to act on the various anti-union bills that have been submitted. The 95th Congress must quickly search for and find a constitutionally acceptable answer to the problem.

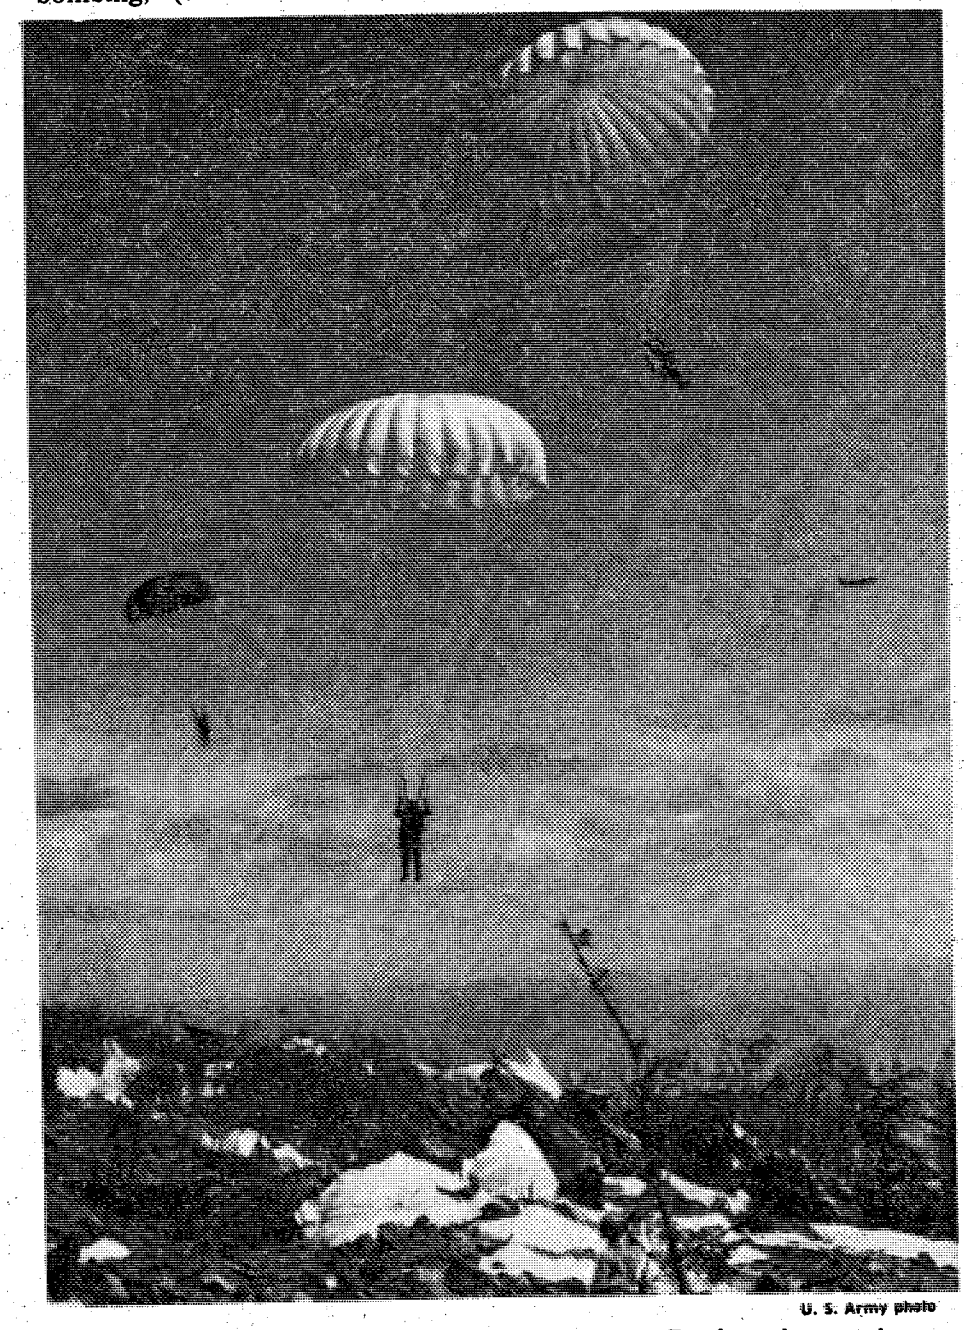
Airborne operations--Corregidor,1945

By J. Gorecki

Corregidor was an unusual airborne operation. The landings took place directly on top of the defenders, the drop zones were inadequate by accepted standards, and the landing period of each battalion was extended over a period of hours instead of the normal minutes. Despite this, in some respects, the operation enjoyed a greater measure of success than any other airborne operation of the war.

James M. Gavin



Editor's note: The following article highlights the problems encountered in the retaking of Corregidor Island from the standpoint of parachuting equipment. It does not address the tactical aspects, communication requirements or the need for joint coordination of Army and Air Force assets.

Then

Corregidor is the key to Manila Bay, which is a landlocked harbor with Corregidor Island in the middle of its narrow neck of entrance. He who would use the harbor must first own this island fortress guarding it.

It is a mass of rock that rises abruptly from the sea to a height of over five hundred feet and is 2,-500 yards wide and, except for a tail that gives it a tadpole outline, barely twice as long.

The most difficult part of the operation was the accurate placing of paratroopers in the drop zones (the largest being) ... 300 by 150 yards and covered with bomb craters and debris of bombing, (the other was) ... hardly 250 by 150 yards ... and completely ringed with hazards. On the approach ends of the drop zones there was a precipitious cliff that dropped off abruptly into Manila Bay.

Members of the 503rd Parachute Infantry Regiment recapture Corregidor which fell to the Japanese in 1942. Its liberation climaxed the recovery of the Philippines by U. S. Army forces.

Decisions in battle are made based on many factors ... surprise is considered by far one of the most important.

There was a stiff northerly wind blowing across the island which made the drop even more difficult, (and) ... the descent from the minimum reasonable jumping altitude of 400 feet was 20 to 25 seconds. It took the airplanes only 10 seconds to cross the entire drop zone (which) ... was so narrow that the drop could be made in no other way than from aircraft in a trail formation ... it was impossible to drop more than a stick of eight parachutists on one pass.

To staff officers who were veterans of the wartime airborne courses at the Command and General Staff School the situation must have been reminiscent of the jumps planned for the top of the First National Bank of Kansas City.

The landings caught the defenders by surprise (however) ... the first serial suffered 75 per cent of the total injuries of the whole Combat Team. Landing losses had been heavy, amounting to 10.7 per cent of the entire force — mostly injuries caused by rough terrain, buildings, etc., where the unluckiest troopers landed.

By (the second day) the tactical situation was such that it was not deemed necessary to take the risk of jump casualties and the balance of the paratroopers were transported to Corregidor as part of an amphibious force.

Airborne training--Ft. Benning, 1977

Now

By J. Gorecki

The requirement for stamina, durability and top physical conditioning in the airborne soldier of 1977 has varied little since the World War II era. What has changed significantly are the tools of the trade which now provide the ability to maneuver while in a descent and insure increased safety with which an airborne operation can be conducted.

"With the equipment available today, an operation similar to the drop on Corregidor Island, assuming the same tactical situation, could be conducted with considerably less jump casualties and in a matter of minutes," stated Maj. Mel Jenks, the chief of the Parachute Training Division in the Infantry School's Airborne Department.

"The introduction of the MC1-1B maneuverable parachute makes it possible for an airborne drop to be staged in a situation even more adverse than that experienced at Corregidor. And the anti-inversion net virtually eliminates the possibility of a chute failing to open. Since its introduction into the Basic Airborne Course in 1975, there have been no parachute malfunctions," he added.

Of prime concern in the initial phase of the training is attaining a high level of physical fitness, becoming familiar with the techniques of parachute landing fall (PLF) and learning the basics of airborne operations.

Prior to actually jumping from an aircraft, the student goes through numerous ground training exercises which prepare him for the first jump.

From the stable platform PLF in the first week, the student advances to the lateral drift apparatus (LDA) which provides experience in coping with lateral drift conditions up to five miles per hour. The LDA consists of a hand-held trolley which is traversed along a 70-foot cable from which the PLF is practiced. After many drops from the LDA, the student transitions into the swing landing trainer which provides PLF practice in varying attitudes. Next comes training in aircraft exiting techniques for mass jumps and the opportunity to experience 'parachute opening shock' on the 34-foot jump tower.

"After successfully completing the preliminary requirements, the student is ready for the 250-foot free-fall tower where all the training and hard work pays off," Jenks emphasized.

"From 1941 to 1976 this phase of the training was conducted with the old J-1 canopy which has limited control capabilities. This created a transition problem when the student performed his 'live' jumps from Air Force aircraft with the new MC1-1B maneuverable parachute, as he had no experience with it."

The student is required to make two successfully graded jumps from the 250-foot tower before he is considered qualified to make a 'live' jump. One of these graded jumps is still done with the J-1 canopy, but the second is with a modified MC1-1B or J-3 canopy which is maneuverable.

"The major difference between the MC1-1B used for 'live' jumps and the MC1-1 used on the 250-foot tower is the requirement for the anti-inversion net. Since the chute is already open on the tower drops, it is not needed. This also results in considerable savings on the wear and tear of the equipment," the airborne trainer explained.

Maj. Jenks concluded by saying, "Even though the training techniques and equipment have changed over the years, the tactical requirements have varied little. I think Lt. Gen. (then Maj. Gen.) James A. Gavin summed it up when he said:

" 'If there is a lesson to be learned from the Corregidor operation, it is that orthodoxy and mental inflexibility have no place in airborne tactics. Established and accepted tactical principles must be applied with common sense. Blind adherence to stereotyped forms of attack and unquestioning acquiescence to a system of rote can only spell, in the long run, disaster. For a defender organizes his defense so the attacker must plan his attack. The attack must adapt itself to the peculiarities of the defense. And then, if the form of the attack turns out to be peculiar or startling, well and good.' "

Keep records on PCS moves

When Uncle Sam decides to move you to another post, it's usually to his benefit to do so. He does, however, provide you assistance in making a permanent change of station (PCS).

If you are in grade E-4 with more than two years service or in grades E-5 and above, the government pays a certain portion of your expenses including movement of household goods, travel for yourself and dependents and temporary quarters allowances where appropriate.

It is to your advantage to keep receipts and accurate, itemized records of your expenses.

Before making your moving arrangements, it's a good idea to visit the transportation office (Bldg 280) for specific information of PCS procedures and allowances.

Dislocation allowance

Soldiers who received a Dislocation Allowance (DLA) during calendar year 1976 must report it as taxable income on both the long and short form tax returns.

DA legal officials say that if the soldier reports DLA on the short form it increases the total amount of taxable income, meaning more taxes. If DLA is reported on the short form, moving expenses associated with a PCS should first be subtracted from the taxable income shown on the W-2 form. This would balance the amount of the DLA.

When reporting taxes on the long form, the soldier must list the DLA as taxable income but can itemize moving expenses as deductions.

Officials went on to say that some soldiers in the past have considerd Separation Allowance as taxable income. This is not the case. Separation Allowance is not taxable and need not be reported to the Internal Revenue Service.

Soldiers are reminded to file early. (ARNEWS)

SQT report card helps soldier with skill training

Every soldier who participated in the SQT System Validation Program (Oct-Dec) will be receiving an Individual Soldier's report (ISR) approximately 30 days from the day he took the final SQT component. The score will not be placed in the soldier's permanent records or used for any personnel actions. TRADOC is testing the system, not the soldier. However, the report will be useful in helping soldiers prepare for the SQT record testing which will begin later this year.

The ISR provides valuable information for the soldier and his commander, including scoring results on verification and qualification. In addition to the overall SQT score, the ISR lists each task, by number, that the soldier failed; these are the same task numbers as those in the soldier's manual. The ISR identifies specifically those areas which need further training.

By comparing the soldier's score to the standard score and using the soldier's manual as a study guide for those tasks failed, the soldier as well as the company commander can begin an individual training program designed to bring the soldier's job skills up to the training standard.

Skeet shooting has been almost non-existant on the reservation for awhile and some concerned folks are doing something about it.

The Post Rifle and Pistol Club has expanded its activities to include skeet shooting. Shooting is conducted on Hooks Range each Wednesday, Saturday and Sunday from 12 to 4:30 p.m. If you like to shoot skeet or think you would like to give it a try, stop by and check with these folks.

Membership in the club is open to all active Army, retired military, civilian employees and dependents. They have a nice Clubhouse with refreshments and ammunition available so lets get out and support these folks. If you need additional information call 689-3371.

Most outdoorsmen I know love to play cards and on most extended hunting and fishing trips, card games flourish. I, like most outdoorsmen, think I'm the worlds greatest card player. And, like most outdoorsmen, I never miss an opportunity to let folks know that I am the greatest and that I offer free lessons at any time. It's with this in mind, and to convince a small group of disbelieving noon-time players, that I hereby offer my first free lesson.

Present day playing cards were designed in 1932 by Jack Gringennenr, count pointer to Charles VI of France. Ol' Jack founded his card deck on a regular system. A deck consists of 52 cards, the number of weeks in a year; there are 13 cards to a suit, the number of lunar months; the four suits represent the four social classes of Jack's time. Spades were for the pikeman or soldier, clubs were designed as a clover-leaf-the emblem of husbandry, diamonds represented the diamond-shaped hat of the artisian, and hearts came from the French word colur, an evolution from chorur, meaning "the clergy."

The first cards used in the United States were brought by the Spanish to their early settlements and since that time we have progressed to my reign as current champ. Keep in mind now, free lessons given at any time. Well, that's enough of that. Let's get on with this weeks bull.

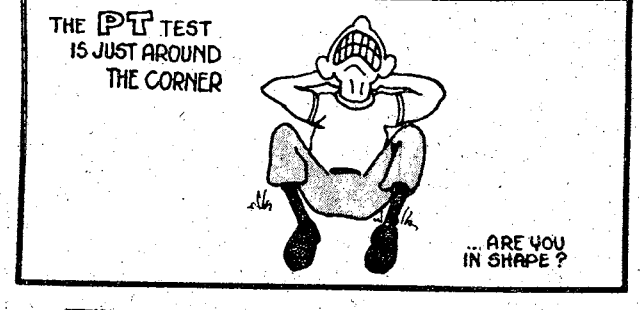
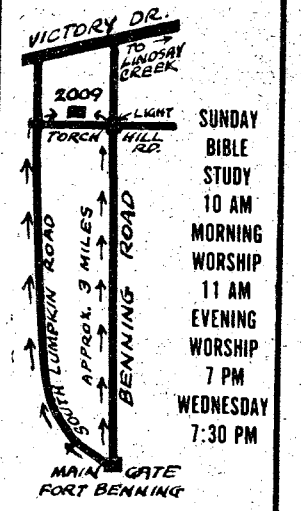
A friend of mine visited a southern Georgia bird hunting lodge two years ago. The lodge owner assigned my friend a hunting dog named "Captain." Three days of excellent hunting followed with ol' 'Captain' working like a champ to deliver a limit of birds each day. Upon my friends departure, the highest praise was heaped upon the hard working dog.



Last year my friend returned to the lodge and asked that 'Captain' again be assigned his dog. The same results followed, three beautiful days of hunting with 'Captain' producing a limit of healthy birds each day. Again the highest praise for the dog.

This year my friend returned to the lodge with high hopes of working with 'Captain' again. "Nope, can't assign you that dog this year," said the lodge owner. "Why not?" asked my astonished friend.



"Well," said the owner, "that dog worked so well these past few years, I decided to promote him to 'Major.' He hasn't been worth a darn since!"

Ponder this until next week: The trouble with most of us is that we would rather be ruined with praise then saved by criticism.

Don't get caught in the retiremei

EDITOR'S Note: Whether you're a first termer or a grizzled veteran approaching the twentieth year of active service, retirement is one of your major benefits. Yet it's amazing that the young soldier doesn't consider retirement benefits when he makes a career decision. And it's equally amazing that a vet can drift through his career without casting a knowing-eye toward those days after he hangs up his green suit. The following articles cover major retirement benefits and discuss how to cope with your retirement.

As an Army careerist, your most visible benefit is probably the opportunity to retire at an early age. You would likely have enough productive years remaining to undertake a second career.

Should you call it quits at 20 years, you are normally entitled to monthly retirement pay at a rate of 50 per cent of your base pay at the time of retirement, plus any subsequent cost of living increases.

Should you make it to the 30-year mark, you would be entitled to 75 per cent of your base pay plus cost of living increases.

Cost of living increases to retired pay have exceeded increases to active duty pay in recent years. This has been called retired pay inversion. This inversion in many cases causes today's retiree to receive less retired pay than a member of the same grade and years of service previously retired.

Put in simple terms, the problems arise from the cost of the program. For example, the estimated cost for retirement pay to military members and survivors in the fiscal yaar 1977 is roughly $8.5 billion. This figure is seven times greater than the cost of the program a mere three years ago. Projections show that it could increase to two and a half times more than this in less than 15 years.

In spite of possible changes and in addition to the early retirement offered by the military, there are still many other benefits derived from 20 or more years' service. Among those best known and most significant are:

- Medical care for you and your dependents and dental care for you — all on a space and capabilities available basis in any uniformed service medical facility.
- Medical care from civilian sources for you and your dependents on a cost-sharing basis under the Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services (CHAMPUS) until age 65 when you come under Medicare.
- Federal benefits administered by the Veteran's Administration, including insurance, education and home loan benefits.
- Post-service employment training and assistance from the Veteran's Administration.
- Unlimited exchange, commissary and theater privileges for you and your authorized dependents.
- Government paid transportaion for final home of selection moves.
- Worldwide space-available travel

Retirement can affect the family

Military retirement differs markedly from retirement from most other occupations. If not properly handled it can have a lasting psychological impact on the retiree and his family. Family members can do a lot toward providing the kind of support and preparation required to prevent the natural anxiety that accompanies the transition to civilian life from turning into a family crisis.

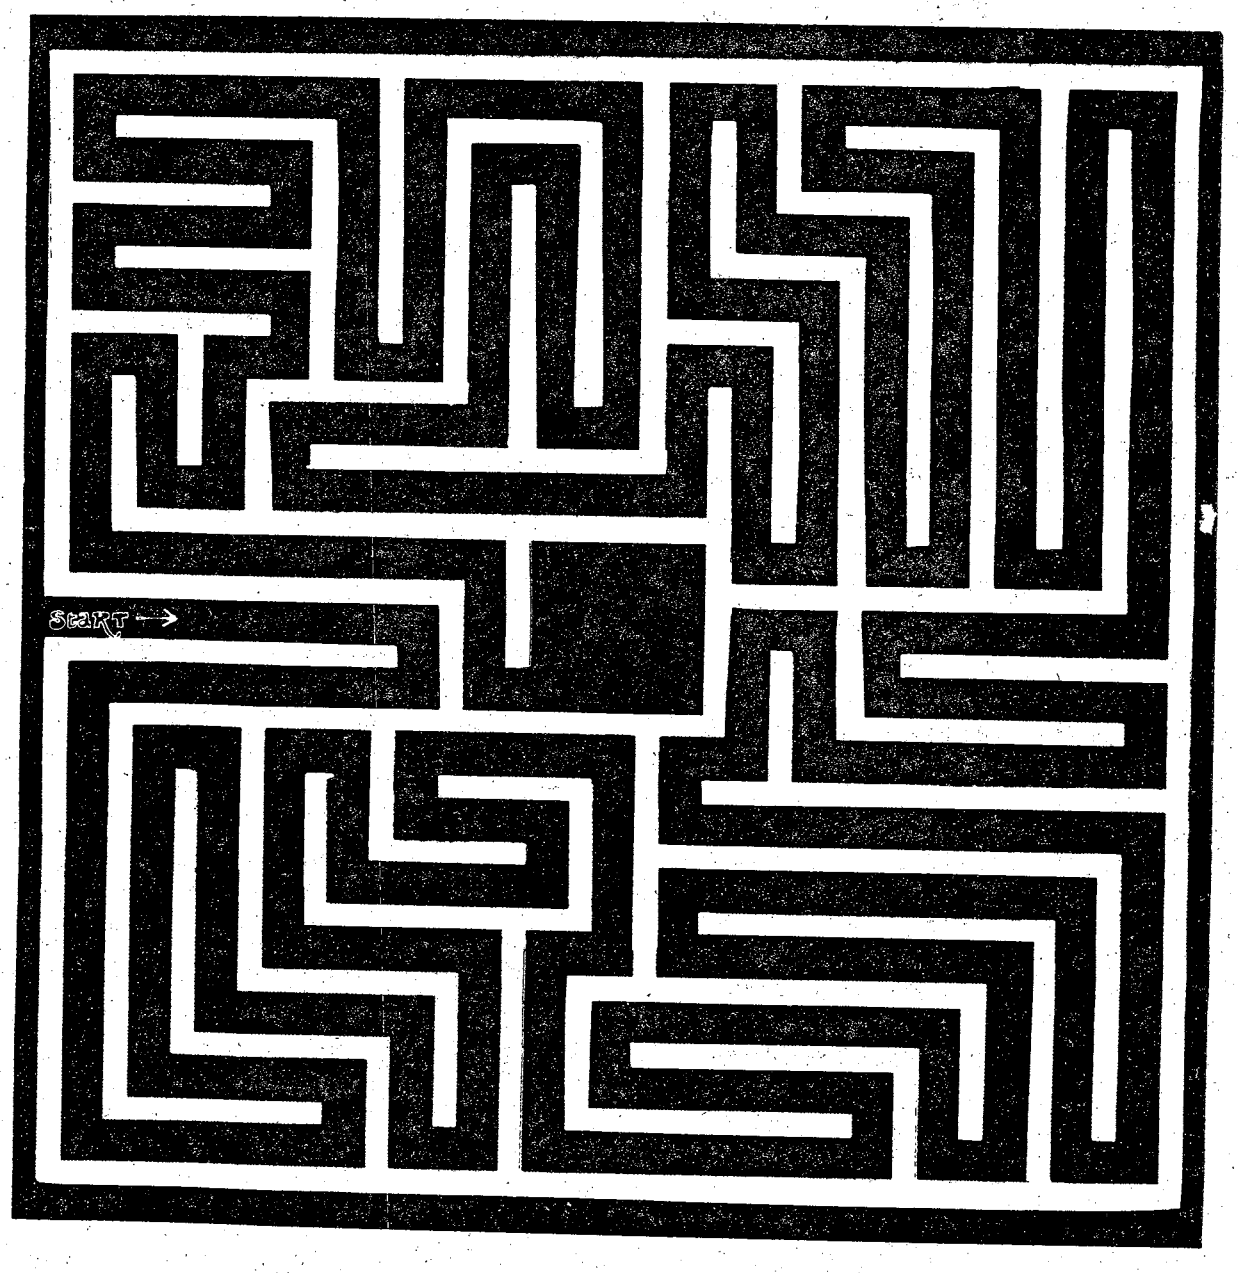
No family is totally unaffected by retirement — because it involves changes in roles. At best, it simply involves a period of adjustment. At worst, it can be a traumatic experience. Sometimes the only difference between the two situations is understanding.

It helps if the family knows what to expect and if they show their appreciation for the concerns of the retiree.

Of primary interest is the fact that the average career military person retires at the same time when most workers are in their peak years of earning and productivity. Many military retirees seek full-time employment to support a relatively young family. And they often start a second career at an income somewhat lower than their former active-duty pay.

The military man facing retirement may harbor other uncertainties as well. He may lack confidence in his ability to compete successfully in a non-military work role. He may be apprehensive about the loss of security that a military career provides and at the prospect of shifting from the military social system to one in which the roles are not so specific. If a wife is troubled by her own changing role and the children are disturbed by what they see as imbalance in the family equilibrium, it can do nothing but add to the uncertainties and apprehensiveness.

How does the family cope with this possible confusion? First, accept the inescapable nature of the transitional experience. Second, try to view it with a positive attitude — as a time of family growth and mutual support rather than a period of disruption and difficulty. Third, develop an aggressive plan of action and work out the details of the retirement well in advance. An important part of your plan is to know precisely what entitlements and benefits accrue as a result of the Army career and which of these benefits continue into retirement.



You can't begin pre-retirement preparations early enough and you can't be too thorough.

Actively involve yourself in a search for a second career that will offer job satisfaction and a reasonable standard of living. Attend all job fairs and employment seminars. They can help map-out a job seeking campaign and develop a good resume. They can suggest ways to brush up on job interview skills.

When deciding on a place to settle, choose an area that your family will be happy with — one where you will be able to develop friendships and community interests. Dissatisfaction with a retirement residence will only serve to magnify the other problems.

With much forethought, planning and support on your part, the completion of your military career need not be an ending, but rather a new beginning for your whole family.

on Department of Defense aircraft for retirees, including dependents when accompanied by the member, to, from and between overseas areas.

- Membership privileges in the club systems.

Medical

One of the most significant benefits military personnel carry with them into retirement is medical care for themselves and authorized dependents.

As a military retiree, you and your dependents are entitled to medical care under CHAMPUS until age 65 at which time you are authorized medical care under the Social Security Medicare program..

Insurance

Congress has passed a "save pay" enactment which provides that no member who retired since Jan. 1, 1971, will receive less retired pay than he would have received if he had retired at an earlier date. However, the member can only be credited with the years of service and grade held at that earlier date. The Army Accounting and Finance Center is responsible for figuring the maximum pay to which an individual is entitled.

During your military career, you pay into Social Security, and, therefore, are entitled to Social Security retirement benefits beginning at age 62 for reduced amounts, or age 65 for the maximum entitlement.

If in your second career you also contribute to the Social Security program, the added years of involvement in the program may increase the amount you receive in later retirement.

Of course, there is the possibility that you may work for someone with a separate retirement plan, which would provide you with a third retirement check by the time that you reach retirement eligibility through the other plans.

Background

In recent years, the military retirement system has come under considerable scrutiny from Congress, the general civilian population and even the Department of Defense since its inception, but most of its fundamentals remain constant. SGLI is term insurance; it has no cash, loan, paid-up or extended insurance values.

Individual coverage extends to a maximum of $20,000. There is also another program called Veterans' Group Life Insurance (VGLI).

Active duty members who have SGLI in force at the time of separation or retirement are automatically eligible for VGLI coverage. It is a non-renewable policy which may be obtained without a medical examination by members leaving active duty. Applicaton and payment of the first premium must be made within 120 days of retirement and VGLI becomes effective on the 121st day.

This program will provide you coverage for five years. During this five-year period the insured has the opportunity to plan his later insurance coverage.

At the end of that five-year period, the retiree has the option to purchase an individual policy of permanent insurance in an amount equal to his VGLI coverage, without a medical examination and written at standard rates regardless of health, from any private insurance company in the program, the same companies participating in SGLI.

The Prudential Insurance Company is the primary SGLI insurer, although there are several other private insurance companies participating in the program. The Veterans Administration supervises the program.

Survivor Benefit Plan

The Survivor Benefit Plan (SBP) provides those Army members who decide to participate upon retirement with a program permitting up to 55 per cent of the participant's retired pay to go to the surviving spouse and/or children with an insurable interest.

Members are automatically enrolled in the plan with maximum coverage when they retire if they have spouses or dependent children at retirement time, unless they elect to use lesser coverage or decline participation before becoming entitled to retired pay.

Changes in cost to the member will occur when retired pay is increased to reflect changes in the Consumer Price Index. The withholding will be increased accordingly even though a member may have elected a specific amount rather than full retired pay as his SBP base. Reductions in retired pay to provide for spouse-only SBP coverage continue for the life of the retiree, even if that spouse should die first.

SBP survivor payments are affected by payment received from other federal sources, such as Social Security.

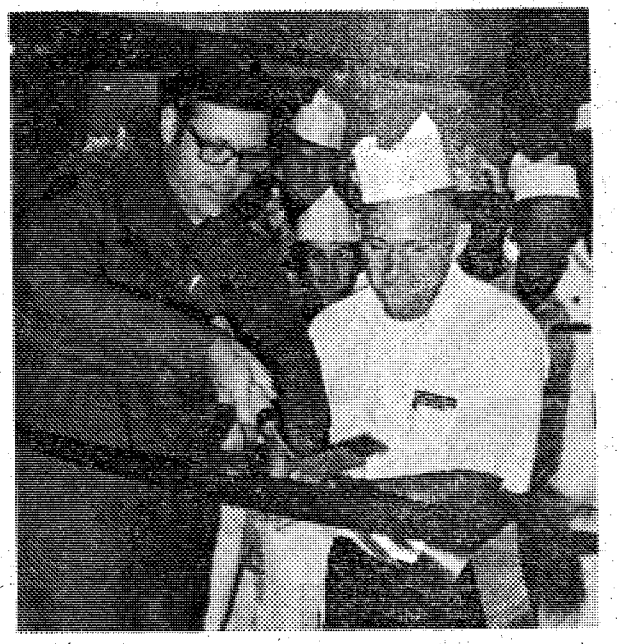
played high school football at 203 pounds, endorses the vegetarian diet as enthusiastically as he endorses distance running.

Fields enjoys the physical exhilaration and emotional uplift that running provides; a feeling that overrides his fierce competitive instinct.

Major road races such as those held at Stone Mountain Park in Atlanta are more social events than sporting events and frequently, just finishing the race is recognized by some award. It is not uncommon for entire families to compete. Dave speaks almost in wonder when he declares, "I have never felt, no matter what my performance, that I have lost."



Maj. David Fields next assignment will be graduate school and then on to West Point where he will teach physical education and work with the Military Academy's marathon team.

Presently, his major project is revising the Physical Fitness Program for the Army. He has also begun training for the most famous marathon in the world, the Boston Marathon, held annually on April 19th. Between then and now, he will run over 1,500 miles, many of them around the Infantry School.

If running is difficult for you and you would like some help, or if you just enjoy running and want some company, call Maj. Fields at 545-1867.

Freedoms Foundation writing contest still open

The 1977 Freedoms Foundation letter writing contest for Armed Forces members opened Nov 1, 1976, with the selection of the theme — "My Responsibilities in Keeping My Country Free."

Individuals on active duty or serving in the Reserve components have until Nov. 1, 1977, to submit their 100 to 500-word essays, poems or articles on the 1977 theme to the Awards Administration, Freedoms Foundations, Valley Forge, Pa. 19481.

All entries from the Armed Forces are in a separate competition called "Valley Forge Patriots Awards" and must include name, rank, Social Security (Service) number, Service designation, military address, and permanent address.

Principal winners will receive the coveted, encased Honor Medal and a $100 U.S. Savings Bond, with other winners receiving Savings Bonds.

Junior ROTC members (high school) are also eligible but they compete separately. The deadline for their 100 to 500-word essay on the same theme is May 15th, and the principal award is a Valley Forge Certificate and a $75 U.S. Savings Bond, with additional Savings Bond awards of $50.

Senior ROTC members (college) compete in the Valley Forge Patriots Award contest along with members of the active military establishment and the Reserve components.

The Freedoms Foundation presents its principal awards each year on George Washington's Birthday in high level ceremonies at Valley Forge.

The foundation has as one of its basic goals to ". . . contribute to the development of responsible citizens and the practice of responsible citizenship, and to make Americans proud of America."

Its intent in sponsoring the contest is to ". . . search for worthy efforts which strengthen an understanding of freedom and the fundamentals of a free society."

Actually, the Freedoms Foundation Awards are many contests, not one, with awards going to individuals, schools, organizations and corporations that advance the concept of American freedom.

This includes every American citizen and even embraces newspaper stories and cartoons from leading print media and radio and TV programs from top American broadcast stations and networks.

The nature of this top level contest dictates using a national awards jury composed of State supreme court justices and national officers of patriotic, civic, veterans, and service organizations.

Judging takes place the week following Thanksgiving. Top awards are presented Feb. 22 at Valley Forge, but other awards may be presented in local ceremonies as soon as suitable plans can be developed following the initial announcement.

In any event, each winner will receive notification of his/her award and be informed as to place and time of presentation.

Army marksmanship competition adds PT requirement

Two-mile runs or four mile forced marches are now part of the competitive marksmanship program of the Army adding a new dimension to the annual competition.

The physical fitness requirements were added to the Combat Rifle Team Match (fired at installation level only), Combat Precision Rifle Team Match, Army Infantry Team Match - M14 (formerly Infantry Trophy Match), The General Patton Matches and the Machinegun Match. Rules for teams organized at installation and FORSCOM Region levels (composition teams) and regular battalion teams differ somewhat.

Battalion teams will be required to successfully complete a four-mile forced march or a two-mile run with field equipment and weapon immediately prior to the match. The forced march must be completed in one hour and the run in 25 minutes.

Composite rifle and pistol teams will be required to complete a two-mile forced march or a one-mile run without field equipment in 30 minutes or 12½ minutes respectively.

The physical fitness requirement will be followed by a "ready phase." Teams not ready to fire at the end of this period will be disqualified.

Each Active Army installation with troop strengths of 4,000 or more will send one composite rifle and pistol team; and, battalion combat rifle, pistol and light machinegun teams to the FORSCOM Regional Championships.

Winning battalion combat rifle, combat pistol and light machinegun teams will maintain their unit and team integrity throughout the matches including the All-Army Matches. The winning teams at All-Army will receive recognition as the best in the Army.

The 50% new shooter rule, which requires that half the team members shall never have fired that team match at that particular level of competition before, is still in effect. This rule serves to increase participation in the program and prevents the confinement of competition to a handful of veteran shooters.

The 1977 Competitive Marksmanship Program is designed to more closely conform to the physical demands encountered in actual combat firing. The addition of physical fitness requirements to the matches was proposed by Col. Sidney R. Hinds Jr., Commander of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit, Forces Command's proponent for competitive marksmanship training. It is expected that these changes will result in increased participation in the competitive marksmanship program and a more acute awareness of the applicability of competitive marksmanship to combat marksmanship training.

Because many installations have already completed their matches, the first matches to be affected by these changes will be the 1977 FORSCOM Regional Matches followed by the All-Army Matches scheduled May 23rd through the 28th.

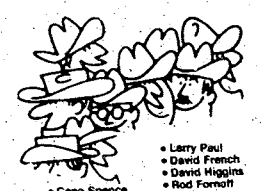
New detection system for mines developed

The standoff detection of surface mines is being achieved with the use of a new radar system, being developed at the US Army Mobility Equipment Research and Development Command (MERADCOM), Ft. Belvoir, Va.

Called METRRA, for Metal Re-radiation Radar, the experimental system being developed by the US Army can detect surface mines from a helicopter or other aerial platform ahead of advancing troops.

METRRA also locates booby traps, munitions, armed troops and vehicles. It can locate targets that do not emit heat and it does not require target movement for detection. METRRA operates through rain, fog and can penetrate dense foliage.

The present Airborne system uses a transmitting and a receiving antenna mounted on the side of a helicopter. Monitoring equipment inside the craft displays and stores terrain and target information.



In operation, VHF radio waves transmitted outward reflect off the surface and return at the same frequency giving a picture of the terraln. Small amounts of VHF energy change to a harmonic frequency as they reflect off the junctions of metal parts or semiconductors of possible targets. For example, electronic parts in air-scatterable mines are detected and displayed on the METRRA monitor.

In addition to the Airborn METRRA, a portable backpack unit is being developed for use by ground troops. This unit is designed to detect surface laid mines and booby traps at safe distances.

For any new CBers who haven't heard yet, here's the word from the Federal Communication Commission (FCC) on CB license fees. Don't send any money with your license application. That's right, Uncle Charlie says keep your money.

Payment of the $4 fee has been halted indefinitely because of a court order. FCC officials stress that although they are no longer accepting the fee for CB licenses, it is still necessary to apply for the license.

Sending the fee will just delay processing of the application. FCC officials say that any checks received with the CB licenses will not be cashed or returned, but will be destroyed. Money orders and cashiers checks will be returned to the applicant. Any cash payment received will be converted to a Treasury check and mailed to the applicant.

This fee cutoff applies not only to CB enthusiasts but to amateur radio operators, radio and television station applicants, telephone and telegraph companies and satellite systems. In addition, applicants from public safety, industrial, aviation, public service and land transportation communications areas need not send the fee.

FCC officials say that CB license applications are still coming in at a rate of about 400,000 monthly. At the end of 1976, there were about 7.8 million licensed CBers.

Remember, don't send any money with your CB license application until further notice.

Good Buddy awards go to Snoopy, Granny Goose, Lady Satan, Annie Oakley and Scooter Pie who were instrumental in providing aid and comfort to the family of Truly Johnson. With good samaritans like these around, we don't have to worry about the reputation of CBers being tarnished.

Be sure and see SSG Jenkins (Archangel) at Bldg 16 and get the form for registering your CB on post. Even if you live off post and only drive a mobile rig on post, AR 105-4 requires you to register it.

In 1975, the principle cause of motor vehicle traffic deaths was the traffic accident which involved two or more vehicles. This type accident claimed 20,300 lives. The two car crash is one of the most deadly. Avoid that head-on collision by maneuvering to safety if you can.

VA Questions & Answers

Q — If a widow receiving Dependency and Indemnity Compensation becomes employed, does she lose her right to this benefit?

A — No. Income is not a factor for DIC.

Q — I have an automobile in which the VA has installed adaptive equipment. If I subsequently purchase other vehicles, will the VA install equipment in them?

A — Yes. However, adaptive equipment will not be provided for more than one conveyance at a time and for not more than three conveyances in a two-year period.

Q — I have signed up for a correspondence course that is VA approved but I'm having second thoughts about the course. If I cancel am I liable for the contract?

A — A contract for enrollment must be affirmed by the student more than 10 days after the contract was signed. If more than 10 days has expired and you have signed the affirmation aggreement, you can be charged for a portion of the course.

Q — I have used my 36 months of educational entitlement but I would like to go to graduate school. Do I have any entitlement left?

A — Effective Oct. 1, 1976, eligible veterans who have served 18 continuous months or more on active duty after January 31, 1955, became entitled to 45 months of educational assistance if they have not been separated for more than 10 years.

Q — If I get a release of liability for a home that I purchase on a VA guaranteed loan, will I be eligible for another VA loan?

A — No. A release of liability protects a veteran if the buyer defaults on his payments. The only way to reestablish eligibility to purchase a home is to pay the loan off or have another veteran substitute his entitlement on the loan.

Q — I am enrolled in vocational rehabilitation training. I have dental problems which cause illness that interferes with my schooling. Am I eligible for treatment by the VA?

A — A veteran who is pursuing vocational rehabilitation training is entitled to a dental examination by the VA. Extent of dental treatment will be determined at that time.

Post conservation teams to visit family quarters

It is imperative that all persons living in family quarters on post do everything possible to conserve natural gas now — today — and in the future.

Your thermostat must be set at 65 in the day time, and 55 at night. In the next few days, a team will visit your quarters with suggestions on how you can help conserve heat, and to be sure your thermostat is operating correctly.

Our supply of gas is running short, and our future supply is questionable. So far, we are holding our own, and we appreciate your past support. If we run out of gas, there is no alternative method of heating quarters. Please give your continued support to this conservation program.

25th winner selected

Patterson Memorial Award

By Betty Zimmerman

Second Lieutenant John A. Damoth has been named the outstanding honor graduate of all the U.S. Infantry School's 1976 Branch Immaterial Officer Candidate Course (BIOCC), and winner of the 25th Robert Patterson Memorial Award.

Mrs. Patterson will present the award to the 25th Inf Div lieutenant in Marshall Auditorium on February 11th. The award was initiated to honor her husband a former Secretary of War and a great leader in his own right.

Damoth completed his OCS class with a combined rating of 95.50 per cent and a standing of first out of 104. Academically, he was sixth in the class but in leadership placed first with a score of 99 percent. Therefore, he was named both Distinquished and Leadership Honor Graduate of BIOCC 1-76 which finished on October 21, 1975.

The 27-year-old Crossville, Alabama native has consistantly accumulating honors since his entrance in the Army as an enlisted man in August 1967.

Concern over gas supply continues

"If the supply of natural gas becomes exhausted, there is no alternative method of heating quarters on post," warned Col. Robert Corley, Director of Facilities Engineering, this week during a meeting on resources conservation.

Ft. Benning's gas demands are higher now than they have ever been. At the same time, Ft. Benning's resources are strained and the supply of natural gas is short.

In order to insure the continuing flow of critical resources, total involvement is necessary. All members of the Ft. Benning community, especially those living in post quarters, must continue to do their part to conserve.

The following gas saving points will result in the savings of natural gas and other sources of energy.

- Thermostats in all post quarters must be reduced to 65 DEGREES in the day and 55 DEGREES at night.
- DO NOT increase temperature settings when you feel chilly. Put on more clothing.
- Shut off heating vents and radiators and close doors to unused rooms.
- Close vents to unheated attics.
- Close fire place dampers when not in use.
- Check windows for cracks and block them with strips of cloth or masking tape.
- Keep outside doors closed as much as possible.
- Don't stand and talk with the door open, or leave it open when shaking out rugs or taking trash outdoors.
- Cover window air conditioners to keep cold air from seeping in.
- During daytime hours, open drapes to let the sun's rays aid in heating the home.
- Close drapes and venetian blinds when the sun retreats. They will serve as insulation to keep the cold out.
- When cooking, use the lowest heating setting to get the job done.
- Plan ahead on frozen foods to allow for thawing time and reduce cooking time.
- Use small appliances to do specialized jobs — toasters, skillets — instead of the oven.
- When washing clothes, use the lowest water temperature to get the job done. Using cold water washing products will help.
- DO NOT use the washing machine until there is a full load of wash to do.
- Use a basin when shaving and avoid letting the water run.
- Dish washers use an excessive amount of hot water. When possible, wash dishes by hand.
- DO NOT use the dish washer unless you have a full load of dishes.

Post conservation teams to visit family quarters

Ft. Benning, along with most of the nation, is experiencing a natural gas shortage. In combating this situation several measures have been implemented, such as the lowering of thermostats, closure of some activities, and curtailing the hours of non-mission type activities.

Not only administrative buildings, maintenance areas, recreation facilities, and non-appropriated fund activities are affected; also family housing is feeling the crunch. The thermostat settings in quarters, by USAIC Reg 420-44, are to be 68 degrees, however, the President has asked that thermostats be lowered to 65 degrees during the day and 55 degrees at night.

In order to insure that specifications are being met in unit areas, Conservation Assistance Training (CAT) Teams were formed for each major command. These CAT Teams insure that their unit complies with the regulation on heating.

To further insure we all get through the winter with as little discomfort as possible, Housing Energy Conservation (HEC) Teams are being formed. These teams will represent their area of responsibility (AOR) commander. It will be their job to check the dependent quarters in their AOR to assist the occupants in the proper utilization of energy.

These HEC Teams will consist of two, one male and one female. They will receive instruction on energy conservation measures and how to assist the occupant in implementing them.

Their purpose in family housing areas will be to assist the commander in fulfilling his responsibilities to the Post Commander. Hours for their energy conservation duties are proposed for 9-11 a.m. and 1:30-3 p.m. If, when they come to your residence, you are too busy at that time it is requested that a mutually convenient time be arranged for them to return.

The teams will be identified by special ID cards issued them for these specific duties. If they do not have the proper HEC Team identification, you are not required to admit them to your quarters. If there is any doubt as to the authority of the person or their card, call the major command they represent to verify their identification.

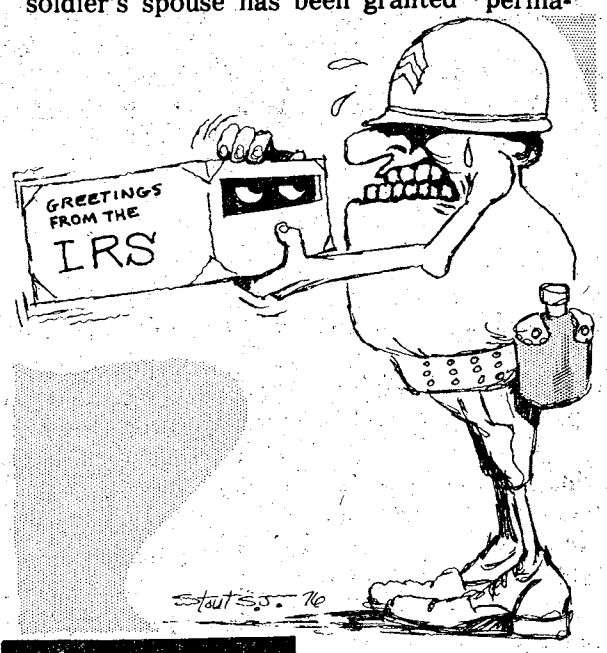
If everyone will practice energy conservation and cooperate, the military community will demonstrate that this present generation of Americans is just as tough and resourceful as our forefathers. If we don't conserve fuel, we will all feel the effects in a very real way.

The tax man cometh April 15th, be ready

Man, you gotta face it — income tax time is here again. Most soldiers should have received their W-2 forms by now. The W-2 lists the amount of taxable income the soldier has been paid for the calendar year. It is from this figure that the total amount of income tax to be paid to Uncle Sam is computed.

"This year," said Capt. Doug Larson, DA SJA Legal Assitance Officer, "the standard deduction is not figured into the tax table found in the tax booklet like last year. The soldier will have to compute the amount of the standard deduction first — before going to the tax table."

There are several other items that may determine the amount of tax the soldier will have to pay. Soldiers who received a Dislocation Allowance (DLA) during the calendar year 1976 must report it as taxable income on both the long and short form tax returns.



DA legal officials say that if the soldier reports DLA on the short form, it increases the total amount of the taxable income, meaning more taxes. Before DLA is reported on the short form, moving expenses associated with a PCS should first be subtracted from the taxable income shown on the W-2 form. This may offset the amount of the DLA.

When reporting taxes on the long form, the soldier must list the DLA as taxable income but can itemize moving expenses as deductions.

On the other hand, Separation Allowance is not taxable income and should not be reported on the tax return.

Soldiers with foreign spouses will find a change in the reporting procedures. If the soldier's spouse has been granted "permanent resident alien" status, the soldier and spouse may file a joint return, using the long form only. If the soldier has a foreign-born spouse and has not returned to the United States since marriage, the spouse is considered a "non-resident alien." In this case both the soldier and the spouse must file separate returns listing all income earned overseas for both parties. Certain deductions can be made for income earned overseas and taxed by the foreign country.

Soldiers with questions concerning tax returns should contact their unit tax assistance officer for guidance.

Firemen to the rescue

By Betty Zimmerman

A crew of firemen from Ft. Benning's Main Station helped to bale out eight Lavoie Manor homes Sunday following a sewage blockage.

While post engineer plumbers worked to repair the system, the eight firemen aided the occupants in sweeping, mopping and bailling out their homes in an effort to salvage carpets and furniture. It was no little task — it took seven hours to restore order.

A grateful occupant, Sp6 Jim Everett, said, "the firemen were a blessing in disguise, you can't believe the mess we had."

The helpful firemen were William Ashcraft, Asst. Chief and crewmembers, Coleman Metts, Joe Davis, Charles Palmer, Robert Wilson, Charles Linden, Douglas Mullins and Gerald Morrow.

- Take short showers. Get wet, turn the water off, soap down, then rinse. DO NOT let the water run needlessly.
- Get into the habir of using cold water for short rinses or hand washings.
- Our natural gas shortage is critical. YOU are the key to getting through this crisis.

A random check was made of quarters this week, and many persons are supporting the program — but others are not. Some temperatures were as high as 74 degrees.

If you have any ideas or suggestions on how to conserve natural gas or other sources of energy, call the Mechanical Branch, Utilities Division at 544-4903.

VD 'superbug' no laughing matter

A potential crippler, contracted through sexual activity, is making the rounds.

It has been dubbed the "superbug" but is no laughing matter. Gonorrhea that doesn't respond to penicillin has arrived in the U.S.

This strain of VD is considered so virulent that some officials are considering the issurance of warrants to bring in and isolate anyone suspected of having the disease.

A civilian employe of the Patuxent River Naval Air Station was the first reported case of the new strain.

At first there was no indication that it was anything other than a more common form of gonorrhea. The individual was treated with penicillin but did not respond until doctors had tried four different antibiotics. It appears that the only antibiotic capable of curing the VD is spectinomycin. It was discovered that the man had contracted the disease in the Philippines and this information was reported to the Center for Disease Control (CDC) which took its search for the source there.

It has been 15 weeks since the first case was reported and the strain has slowly spread.

The organism that causes the disease is a bacterium known as gonococcus and the new strain is slightly different. It has acquired the ability to produce an enzyme that destroys penicillin. Not even massive doses of the drug will kill the bacteria.

Doctors have been aware of the fact that resistance to penicillin was on the increase. When penicillin was first introduced to treat veneral disease, it took 200,000 units for a cure. The recommended dose today is a massive 4.8 million units.

Cases of the new resistant strain have now been reported in Maryland, Virginia, California, Rhode Island, Arkansas, Iowa and New York. The CDC feels certain that other states and countries will soon report the presence of the disease.

The new strain has arrived on the scene in the middle of a national epidemic of gonorrhea. It has been estimated that there are 2.5 to 3 million new cases of gonorrhea reported each year.

This increase in the incidence rate of gonorrhea has been attributed by health officials to the bacteria's increasing resistance to penicillin.

One theory is that the resistance was built up because penicillin was used in low, inadequate doses, especially by prostitutes in the Southeast Asian area.

Dr. Ralph H. Henderson, director of the veneral disease division of the U.S. CDC in*sists that*, "Penicillin is still our best drug. It's safe and effective and we expect a cure rate of 95 percent." He did say that doctors treating gonorrhea cases should have their patients return in 7 to 14 days to insure that the disease is really cured.

The symptoms for the new strain are the same as for the regular gonorrhea. The problem is that many women are not treated for the disease until it is well advanced. This is because women are often free of the usual symptoms. This in turn, increases the chance of spreading the disease through continued sexual contact.

Persons who think that they have a veneral disease should report to a doctor immediately. It is extremely important that the patient give the names of any partners that he or she is likely to have had so that they may be examined. This, along with common sense and good hygiene can help reduce the number of VD cases. (ARNEWS)

Cub Scout Pack 27 off to the races

By Paul Davis

It may not have been the Indy 500 but you couldn't have convinced Pack 27's Cubs that it wasn't just as important. With miniature home-made cars clutched in their hands, 50 Cubs and their parents eagerly gathered at Dexter School recently for the Pinewood Derby Championship. Under the leadership of Bob Gilman and "de Judge" Robert Poydasheff, the cafetorium contained an official race track, flags, pit stop, inspection table and refreshments.

John Bogue (l) and Ed Davis urge their cars on to victory during the first half of the Pinewood Derby Championship. For the past two years, first and second places have been won by either Ed or his brother Paul.

The cub-father teams had all started with a block of wood, two wooden axles, four nails and four wheels. With hours of often tedious labor behind them, father and son finally arrived at 'The Big Day.'

The double elimination process was long and fought with much elation — and despair. When it finally got down to the nitty gritty, all the marbles would belong to either Ed Davis, Justin Courtney or Michael Lanning. In the first heat Ed beat out Michael who took third place. Tension rose as Ed's Yellow Banana Peel and Justin's Red Flash screamed down the track and headed neck and neck to the finish line. It was almost a photo finish but Ed's Banana slipped by Justin's car in the final few inches. Ed's victory ended the Davis boys hold on the Pinewood Derby, as he will leave Cub Scouts this year. For the past two years, first and second places have been won by either Ed or his brother Paul.

Competition was not limited to speed alone. Awards were presented for Best Workmanship and Most Original and were captured by Scott Bechdolt and Allan Brinkman, respectively.

Official Judge, Col. Robert Poydasheff (l) and Maj. Robert Parrish follow Ed Davis' Banana Peel as it approaches the finish line in the final competition of the Pinewood Derby Championship held at Dexter School.

10-8 on the warpost

By "HOSS" KACI 4615

The post Safety Office has passed along a bulletin from the Bureau of Motor Carrier Safety which reports that a number of drivers who were either killed or injured in several accidents were using their CBs when the accidents occurred.

Considering the number of mobile transceivers in use, it's no wonder some accidents are CB-related. The important thing to remember is that it can happen. But it doesn't have to.

Here are a few suggestions from the bulletin for preventing "radio-controlled" accidents:

The CB should be positioned so that the driver does not have to reach across the car or take his eyes off the road to use it. One good spot might be on the console near the driver's right knee where the hand can fall naturally on the unit. Wherever the transceiver is mounted, no stretching should be necessary.

Ratchet-jawing to keep awake or avoid boredom is fine, but don't get so involved in conversation that you neglect driving.

If your mobile rig has an S-meter, be very careful about giving readings while driving. Ideally you should either pull off the road or have someone else in the car read the meter.

I'm not saying that CBs in vehicles are inherently hazardous; the point is: don't let the CB interfere with safe driving.

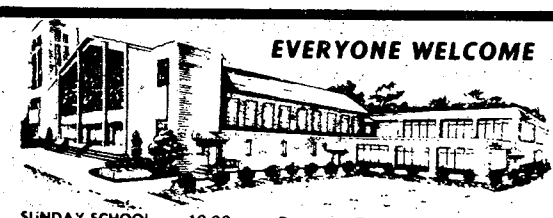
ROTC enrollments up

ROTC enrollment for the 1976-77 school year is up 13 per cent, according to figures released here recently by TRADOC.

Enrollment now stands at about 54,600, compared to 48,400 at the same time last year. Male enrollment rose more than nine per cent with female enrollment up over 27 per cent from 1975. Increases were realized in each of the four academic levels.

The final two years — junior/senior phase — showed an enrollment of 15,000, up more than 2,000 from last year. Minority cadets represented more than 27 per cent of the total senior enrollment. This is the third consecutive year of increased enrollment in senior year ROTC.

The graduation of 150 women from the ROTC program in 1976 marked a milestone in female participation. There were 4,567 male graduates. Most colleges are now offering coed programs.



The junior ROTC program is also growing with four more high schools added during 1976. This brings the total to 650, including five in Germany, one in Alaska, two in Puerto Rico and two in the Canal Zone. (ARNEWS)

'a touch above the best'

Benning 'Super Soldiers'

Training with the heavy bag is only a part of the daily routine for PFC Randy Epps, who finished in 2nd place in the Georgia Golden Gloves Championships held recently.

By Bill Walton

When PFC Randy Epps isn't on the job as an ambulance orderly with the 690th Med Co, he can be found at the gym working out, involved in church activities or studying for one of his evening college courses.

It's a full but rewarding off-duty schedule.

He captured second place in the Georgia State Golden Gloves Championships, made the Dean's List last quarter at Columbus College and sings with the choir at the Benning Park Baptist Church.

Randy has been boxing for the past five years and has won 75 of 83 bouts. His career started in his junior year of high school where he won his first match in the Pee Wee Division.

He earned the right to fight in the Georgia State Golden Gloves Championship by defeating an Air Force opponent in a qualification match in Columbus in December. The state championships were held in Atlanta on January 21st through the 24th and Randy made it to the finals but was defeated in the championship bout in the open class, middleweight division.

He trains every day at the Youth Activities Club at Ft. Benning and feels that boxing is one of the better means of body building and keeping in good physical condition. He backs up his statement by recording a five-mile run time of 33:20.

Epps is just as proud of his scholastic achievements as he is his boxing record. He is studying to be a medical technologist and attends Columbus College four nights a week where he made the Dean's List. He is enrolled under the Army's Project Ahead program and has his college credits from Columbus sent to Clemson University in South Carolina.

Not one to neglect the spiritual side of life, PFC Epps is an active member of the Benning Park Baptist Church in Columbus where he is also a member of the Church Choir and attends practice two nights a week. He started a personal church membership drive within the 34th Med Bn and so far has increased the church membership by three members.

When asked about his duties at Ft. Benning his reply sounded like a reenlistment brochure. "I feel I am in the best platoon, in the best company in the Army, and I want to be the best soldier in that platoon," he stated emphatically.

PFC Randy Epps future plans include applying for an ROTC Scholarship and after graduating from college, he wants to come back in the Army as a Medical Service Corps Officer.

With his enthusiasm and determination Randy is sure to reach his goal.

SGM Emil Heugatter of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit won eight gold medals in the Pan American International Invitational Pistol Championships held in Puerto Rico last week. Heugatter scored victories in every match he entered; winning medals in the individual and team free pistol, standard pistol, center fire pistol and air postol completitions.

Black History theme ...

'Heritage Days: The Black Perspective ...'

February 1st marked the beginning of Black History Month throughout the Army and Ft. Benning. This year's theme is "Heritage Days: The Black Perspective, The Third Century."

The first Black History Month was observed last year in conjunction with the Bicentennial Year. Prior to 1976, a traditional Black History Week was held.

The event is promoted by the Association for the Study of Afro-American Life and History (formerly Negro Life and History) Incorporated, a private historical society founded in 1915 by Dr. Carter Godwin Woodson.

During his career, Dr. Woodson served as principal of the Douglas High School, Supervisor of schools in the Philippines, teacher of languages in high schools of Washington, D.C. and Dean of the Schools of Liberal Arts at Howard University and West Virginia State College.

He earned his B.A. and M.A. degree in 1908 from the University of Chicago and his Ph.D. degree in 1912 from Harvard University. Traveling and studying abroad in Europe and Asia gave him a mastery of several languages.

By this time Dr. Woodson had become convinced that among scholars the role of the black man in American history and in the history of other cultures was being either ignored or misrepresented. The Association for the Study of Negro Life and History was a result of his conviction.

In February 1926, the association launched its first National Black History Week. It was a short period devoted to public exercises emphasizing the notable facts of history influenced by Blacks. These facts had been brought to light by the researches and publications of the association during its first eleven years of existance.

Black History Week was meant to encompass the birth dates of both Abraham Lincoln and Frederick Douglas (the date that Douglass calculated to have been his birthday). There were times when the celebration could only include one date. At such times the Black History Week included only the birthday of the blackman, Frederick Douglass.

The celebration became widespread through the support of the black schools, churches and clubs. Eventually, institutions of other races started supporting the celebration and it is a national observance today.

In support of Black History Month, the Race Relation Coordinating Office, units and other activities on post have scheduled several events during February.

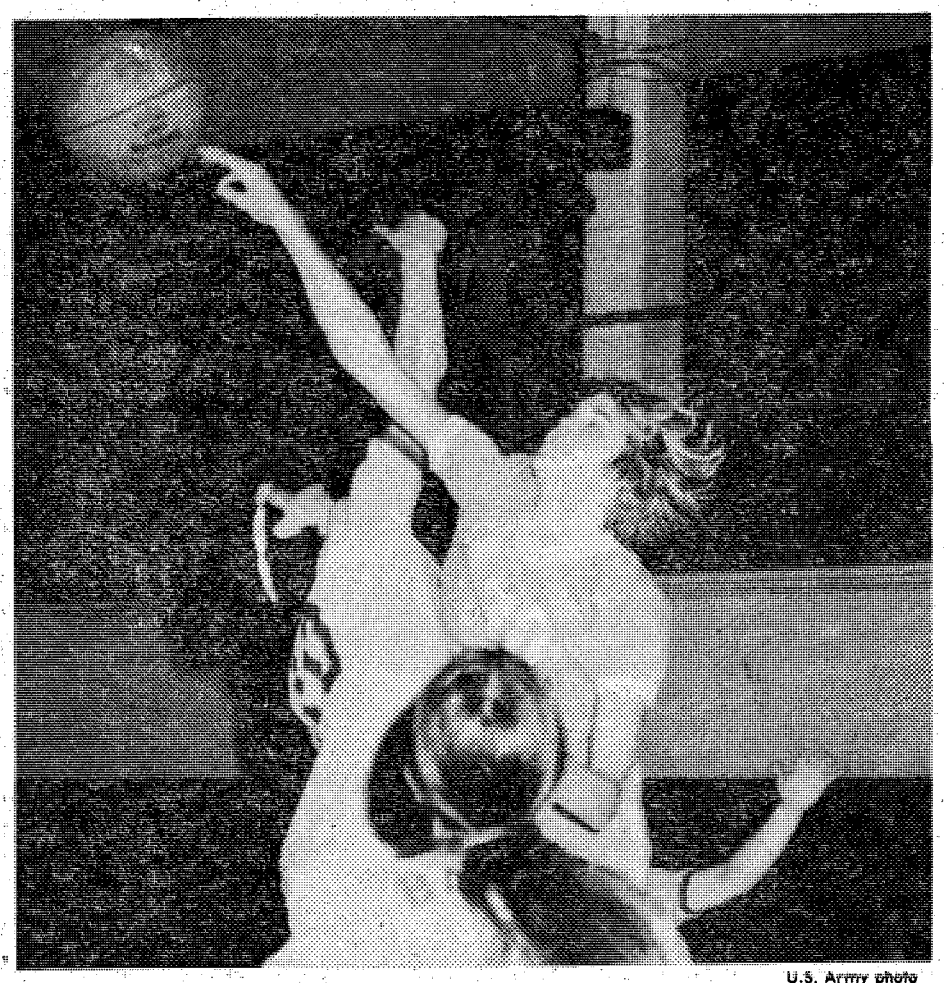
Benning women 2-0 in basketball league play

By Betty Zimmerman

The Ft. Benning women's basketball team won its second game of the season by defeating the Angels 38-20 in the Columbus recreation league last week.



The soldier gals creamed Bi-City Merchants in their first encounter with the score of 49 to 12.

Their second game with the Angels was closer but that was mainly because subs played most of the game.

Gina Johnson and Dianca Taylor pulled Benning out of the hole after a first quarter 6-0 deficit. By the half they upped the score to 20-10.

Bad passing and no rebounding hurt them early in the game, but when Johnson, Taylor and Debbie Bourque went in together, floor-play picked up and the points started adding up. Johnson and Taylor scored 16 points apiece and Bourue added six more.

The coach, Albert McGruder, sends out word that positions are still open to any talented female military personnel that wants to play. For further information call 545-4756/1565.

Vets eligible for government jobs

When military members complete their service and return to civilian life, they become eligible for a number of veterans' benefits. These benefits encompass a variety of areas, including home loans, medical care, education, and employment.

One aspect of the special employment consideration to which veterans are entitled is fairly new. It concerns employment opportunities with employers holding federal contracts or subcontracts of $10,000 or more. These companies are required by law to take action to increase job opportunities for qualified disabled veterans and veterans of the Vietnam era — August 5, 1964 to May 7, 1975.

The Local Veterans Employment Representative (LVER) at each State Employment Service Office has information concerning job openings with Federal contractors. Disabled and Vietnam era veterans receive priority referral to such employment openings.

If a veteran believes that a federal contractor has not acted as required by the law, he or she has the right to file a complaint. The LVER will provide assistance in preparing a written complaint to be sent to the U.S. Department of Labor for investigation.

Additional information on this relatively new veterans' benefit may be obtained by contacting either the LVER at the Columbus State Employment Service Office, 1328 2nd Ave. (568-2094) or Katherine F. Tuve, Regional Coordinator, Veterans Affirmative Action Program, Office of Federal Contract Compliance Programs, U.S. Department of Labor, Suite 729, 1371 Peachtree Street, NE, Atlanta, Georgia 30309; telephone (404)-881-4211.

National Children's Dental Week, Feb. 6-12th

Editor's Note: The following article is the first in a series of seven that are concerned with dental health and your children. These articles are presented in conjunction with National Children's Dental Week, February 6th through the 12th.

I have seen references on television to the child's "Cavity-prone Years." What is this condition?

By the age of 12 or 13, most of a child's permanent teeth are in position. Unfortunately, the teen years are when the highest rate of tooth decay occurs. Statistics indicate that by age 14 the average person has 14 decayed, missing or filled teeth.

There are three major factors that play a role in tooth decay by triggering a chain reaction: plaque, sugar and tooth susceptibility. By paying more attention to these three items, teenagers could make a drastic change in the statistics.

First, plaque is the sticky, almost invisible film of bacteria that forms on everyone's teeth. When sugar is consumer, the bacteria in plaque uses it to form acids that attack the tooth enamel, eventually causing decay. Teenagers often neglect good oral hygine habits. But brushing and flossing once a day to remove plaque can make a big difference.

At the same time, it is wise to cut down on the number of times sweets are consumed. It is especially important to avoid sweet snacks. Parents can make sure that a child has a well-balanced diet at home that will aid in the building of strong teeth and bones. But teenagers spend more time away from home and often choose the wrong foods, including sugary foods and beverages as between-meal snacks. Careful selection of their own foods can also help to reduce decay.

The final factor is susceptible teeth. Scientists are trying to find ways of making teeth more resistant to decay. They have found, for example, that fluoride is a compound that helps to significantly reduce tooth decay. Drinking water containing adequate fluoride from birth is known to curtail tooth decay by about 65 per cent. Both the Ft. Benning and the Columbus water supplies are fluoridated. Another practical way of getting fluoride is to use an accepted fluoride toothpaste.

Kids with learning problems get help

By Carol J. Warner

Children at Ft. Benning who suffer from developmental and learning handicaps are getting help through a Learning Ability Center at Benning's Patch School.

Last June, the executive board and standing committee chairmen of Benning's Officers Wives Club voted to grant a sizeable portion of the club's welfare budget to two officers who had conceived the idea for the learning center.

With funding at hand, Maj. Paul Ellsworth, chief of the Occupational Therapy Section at Martin Army Hospital, and Lt. Ben Atchison, who is in charge of therapy for learning and developmentally disabled children, went to work to make the center a reality.

Maj. (Doctor) Paul Ellsworth, the chief of occupational therapy at Martin Army Hospital, observes Annette Stack as she explains what she has accomplished with the Dukane film strip machine designed to increase perceptual abilities.

"When the OWC first approached me this spring, I was told to outline precisely what I thought was needed to set up a clinic that could provide therapy for all Ft. Benning children who required it," said Atchison. "I spent almost every evening for weeks planning how to utilize the two rooms at Patch School that we were permitted to occupy."

Before the opening of the new center, a clinic for learning problems was housed in one small classroom at Dexter School on post. Lack of space and limited funds for equipment made it a small-scale operation.

At the new center, one of the rooms is designed to deal with problems in coordination, balance and muscle development and is equipped with balance beams, ropes for jumping and climbing, darts, balls, etc. The other room has materials which help children with visual motor problems. "This room is sectioned off into several separate areas providing therapy for different aspects of visual perception," Atchison said.

The center is designed to assist youngsters in developing their maximum intellectual,

A dual responsibility

Teaching a child to read

How well does your child read? Is it the teacher's fault if your child doesn't read as well as he should?

Whether students learn to read and how well they learn to read is the responsibility of the parents as well as school. It is also the joint responsibility of both teacher and parents to insure that a child is provided the best opportunity possible to learn how to read. Success or failure in school is primarily due to reading ability.

Some parents insist that because their tax money is used to pay teachers, it's the teacher's fault if their children can't read very well.

If a teacher did nothing but teach reading, an average of only nine minutes per child could possibly be alloted for individually listening to each child read. After time for physical education, art, music and lunch is considered, only four and one half hours of instructional time remains in the school day. Allowing for required subjects, each child could realistically receive only four or five minutes of individual teacher-time for reading.

Working with groups, the teacher may adequately provide instruction which will enable the student to attain the skills needed for reading, but if the child is to become a proficient reader, other help outside of school is needed.

The teacher has provided instruction which enables the child to attain skills, but only through practice can the child become a proficient reader. The parents' role must include providing the child that practice which is essential to reading and school success.

For the very young child (preschool age and early primary grades) the parents should talk with children and call different objects by name. Every object should have a name. These names later become associated with sounds and the sounds with words which the child will learn to identify. Next the parents should read to the child and talk about pictures with the child. Parents can also provide picture books and story books which will help their children understand that reading is something interesting to learn.

As the child begins to develop reading skills for himself, he becomes naturally excited and likes to demonstrate to parents that he can read. The parents' role becomes

The Theatre Guild presents . . .

The Philippine Dance Company

The Bayanihan Phillippine Dance Company, one of the most exotic, entertaining and successful dance companies from another land ever to visit these shores, is returning to America.

For dance fans who have seen them, for others who anticipate their return, they will be appearing at Marshall Auditorium at 8 p.m. on February 15th, as of part of the Ft. Benning Theatre Guild's current season.

This outstanding dance group has captured the imagination of critics and audiences alike in displaying the charm and vital beauty of the varied Philippine cultural heritage. The eye-ravishing Bayanihan Philippine Dance Company of 28 dancers and 12 musicians made dance history at its first international engagement at the Brussels World Fair. Following sold-out performances in New York in 1959 and 1971, the company made a triumphant transcontinental tour of the United States in 1964.

The company recently toured extensively in Europe with critical accodades following them wherever they performed. The company concluded these successful ventures with appearances in the United States. This is the ensemble's seventh tour of North America.

Advance tickets for the Bayanihan Philippine Dance Company performance are on sale at the Information, Tours and Travel Office, Bldg 394 (Doughboy Stadium). Tickets will also be sold at the door. For additional information, call 545-7414.

physical and social potential. Most of the children have been referred to the center for testing by their teachers, physicians or parents themselves for difficulties which include poor writing ability, writing letters and numbers backward, forgetting visual and auditory information, restlessness and overt frustration among other problems, despite obvious average or above-average intelligence.

In order to detect learning problems early, therapists screened all children in kindergarten through grade four in the Benning school system. Of the 500 screened, 60 were asked to return for further testing and 25 currently are receiving therapy.

Parents play a major role in the program and are required to attend each weekly session. The parents act as co-therapists, guiding and encouraging the child. The system provides for an organized treatment plan and allows for parent-child interaction. The end goal, Atchison said, is to educate the parents in activities they can do at home to stimulate growth in their child's deficient areas.

"We are still in the early stages of development at our new location," Atchison said, "but eventually we should be able to work with up to 75 children each week."

Anticipating that a problem might arise due to limited staff resources when a full complement of youngsters is serviced by the clinic, Atchison has organized a training program to prepare volunteers to work with the parent-child teams that come in each week.

The center has been designed to accommodate eight children at one time. But each parent-child team requires a certain amount of guidance when working with new equipment and, Atchison said, it is important to insure that someone knowledgeable will be available to provide that guidance whenever needed.

Each volunteer who attends the training course spends a certain amount of time each week helping in the clinic. A speech pathologist also has offered her services for consultations.

"We are very proud that the Ft. Benning Learning Ability Center represents the most comprehensive and well equipped clinic of its kind within the Army today," said Ellsworth. "The center's program also has become a popular model for designing similar programs in Columbus and other communities in Georgia."

School Lunchroom Program

Numerous cases have recently been discovered in which sponsors of school age children residing on post, who otherwise qualify for free or reduced price school lunches, have not completed the necessary application forms. Eligibility requirements are based on the size of your family and your total yearly income. For example an E-7 with a total income (base pay, quarters and separate rations) of $13,817 and four children would be eligible for reduced price meals for his children. If you think you may be eligible — contact the principal of the school where most of your children attend immediately.

one of listening to the child read and praising the child for his accomplishments.

The parent should maintain the habit of keeping reading materials on the child's level in the house to indicate the importance which parents place on reading. Also the child should see both parents reading something almost every day. If parents read themselves, to the child and listen to the child read, the child learns to value reading for himself.

Both the school and parent have a responsibility in each child's success or lack of success in learning to read. If either partner fails to provide the necessary phases of development, the child will suffer. Teachers may work to help children develop skills which enable them to read, but only parents can provide the time which will make the child a successful reader.

Parents should strive to provide at least twenty to thirty minutes each day just to listen to their child read.

When this practice is provided in every home, the true partnership between parents and teachers will insure that almost every child will develop the necessary prerequisite reading skills. Only when this prerequisite skill is developed does the child have a reasonable chance at successfully completing high school.

In addition to being the world's greatest outdoorsman and card player, I also excell at giving out free advice. And, as I have mentioned before, I receive some very interesting mail which requires me to draw upon all my great knowledge and advice giving talent. The following was received from a concerned fisherman's wife and, of course, the world's greatest advisor responded promptly giving no slack.

Dear Denny,

I am a housewife who is usually abandoned in winter, as my husband takes strongly to ice fishing. So strongly, that I am left cold and alone in the winter. What would you suggest for me?

Signed,
Cold and alone

Dear Cold and Alone,

I sympathize. I would suggest following him out on the ice candidly, and when he is done chopping through the ice, run up behind him and kick him in the ice hole.

Keep in mind, gang, that my advice is always free and keep those cards and leters coming.

The weather has brought all outdoor activity in the valley to a standstill, so we'll get on with this weeks bull and pick up with the news next week.

Two Command Sergeant Majors I know were out deer hunting recently and killed a nice ten-point buck.

CSM Collier from Ranger Department remarked to CSM Greene from USAIS, "Boy, that's a nice one!" "Yeah, it sure is," replied Greene, "we'd better drag him on back to the car. Here, tie this rope around his horns."

Collier, using all his Ranger expertise, quickly and deftly tied the rope around the deer's horns. Both SGMs grabbed a loose rope and, end, pulled it over their shoulders and began dragging the deer towards the car. After 30 torturous minutes with little headway, Greene turned to Collier and said, "Man, this isn't working out so well, we're dragging this deer horns first and the horns are snagging on every bush and root."

"Yeah, you're right," grunted Collier, "Let's tie the rope around the deers hind legs, that should make it easier going."

This was accomplished in short fashion and the two began dragging the deer again. "See," said Collier," this is much easier." Greene agreed but said there was only one problem. When Collier asked what was it, Greene replied, "We're getting further away from the car."

Ponder this until next week: A person who talks about his inferiors, hasn't any.

'Absurd Person Singular' comes to Benning

"Absurd Person Singular," a hilarious comedy by Alan Ayckbourn and featuring six soap opera stars, will appear in Marshall Auditorium, Bldg 4 on February 12th at 8 p.m.

The place is a town in England, and the time is the present. We will witness three successive Christmases in the homes of three married couples. In the three acts of his play, Ayckbourn focuses the ups and downs of these couples at the different parties. Behind the humor of these three couples, we see the true life and problems that individuals face. The characters are based on different social classes and the play reveals their different moods, tastes and feelings.

Starring in this excellent production will be: Lewis Arlt, who plays David (Sloan) Sutton on "Search for Tomorrow;" William Gray Espy, who portrays Snapper Foster on "The Young and the Restless;" Kate Mulgrew, who appears as Mary Ryan on "Ryan's Hope;" James Pritchett, who plays Dr. Matt Powers on "The Doctors;" Jada Rowland, who portrays Carolee Aldrich on "The Doctors;" and Tudi Wiggins, who appears as Meg Hart on "Love of Live."

The play is a tale of awkward situations and strained relationships, with hilarious results and some powerful glimpses of the way humans fail to communicate.

Brendan Gill of The New Yorker describes "Absurd Singular Person" as "A brilliant little comedy of domestic misadventure in which, if one troubles to listen closely, a sentence of death is pronounced upon the institution of marriage. Mr. Ayckbourn has made his play serve as a proof of Murphy's Law — 'If anything can go wrong, it will' — and has let us glimpse, behind a shining scrim of jokes, sight gags and hilarious reversals of fortune, his view of life as nasty, brutish and short."

Tickets are $5.00 for the main floor and $4.00 for the balcony. Tickets will be available at the ITT Office, Bldg 394, from 8 a.m.-5 p.m. For further information call 545-7414/2281.

Sp4 James Williams, a clerk typist for the 546th Med Co, 34th Med Bn gives the company personnel records a final check prior to a visit from the Inspector General's Office. Williams was named the 34th Med Soldier of the Month for January. Normally Williams handles company status reports and other training room duties. On his free time, however, Williams works on company personnel actions. He handles requests for separate rations, duty rosters, finance requests and directs personnel traffic to a correct source of assistance.

Mr. "B" displays what might be called the "Sunshine" award. Eight lawyers from the JAG section surprised Mr. John Budjinski with an impromptu ceremony and award at the Follow Me Dining Facility where the retired tech-sergeant is a cook. But to these often harried men, he is more than a cook, he is their bright spot of the day. His warmth and genuine concern for everyone that eats in 'his' facility is evident to all who are lifted in spirits by his constant smile and jovial outlook on life.

Defense Report

Strategic Mobility -- The weak link

The first priority in United States military strategy is given to the defense of our NATO partners in Europe. The strategy calls for rapid reinforcement of our deployed forces in the event of a Warsaw Pact invasion.

The reinforcing U.S. Army divisions are trained and equipped to do their job but there is serious doubt that they could be moved from their U.S. bases, across the Atlantic to Europe in time to do what they are supposed to do. The doubt arises from a lack of strategic mobility—the absence of enough ships and heavy cargo planes to move the troops and their equipment rapidly.

Repeated requests from the Air Force for money to improve its own fleet of heavy cargo aircraft and to modify the fleet of large commercial aircraft known as the Civil Reserve Air Fleet for better military adaptability have been the victims of cost-cutting. It now requires an almost total commitment of Air Force strategic airlift to transport the single Army division that is sent to Europe each year to exercise the reinforcement plans.

It must be remembered, too, that equipment like tanks and heavy artillery to support these training exercises is already on the ground in Europe so the real test of the reinforcing machinery would come after those stockpiled weapons are committed to use and the following divisions must bring their heavy gear all the way from Texas, Colorado and California.

This follow-up lift is not the job for aircraft but for cargo ships. The Navy has few and the U.S. merchant fleet is shrinking in numbers each year. Even in a relatively small war like Vietnam the Defense Department had to charter foreign "bottoms" to fill the sealift gap.

And not just any old cargo ship will do the job. If an all-out attack comes in Europe, even without nuclear weapons, one of the first targets for Warsaw Pact bombers will be the ports through which the equipment and supplies must funnel. Assuming that shoreside cranes and other heavy cargo-handling gear are rendered inoperable, each cargo ship will have to be able to unload itself. The need for ships that can unload tanks from their holds is crucial.

Congress and the budgeteers in the new administrations can no longer sidestep the problem of strategic mobility. The Air Force must be permitted to improve its aircraft capability. The U.S. maritime industry must be encouraged, and subsidized if necessary, to improve its emergency capacity.

Bowling once a week with no practice and maintaining a 186 average is quite a feat. But bowling a 299 and laying claim to the highest single game in Ft. Benning history for league play is a thing of beauty. For his efforts, LtCol Fred Wadsworth was presented a 299 patch and a wristwatch with 299 engraved on its face, but we hear tell that he'd do it again for nothing — if only he could.

Free firewood available to Columbus residents

Due to the severe cold wave and current gas shortage, some of the local residents may find themselves searching for another source of heat.

Ft. Benning's Defense Property Disposal Office (DPDO) is offering wood scraps free to the public, according to J. Gunn, Assistant Defense Property Disposal Officer.

The miscellaneous wood scraps ... busted pallets, broken furniture, broken training aids, etc. ... are massed together in a section of the Property Disposal Yard.

Anyone desiring some of the wood scrapings may stop by the DPDO, Bldg 467, Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. For further information telephone 544-4002 or 545-1069.

Domicile and Residence

During this time of year, as with every tax season, the question of domicile becomes a particularly important one. Few legal concepts are of greater fundamental application to the service member than domicile. A determination of domicile is essential to the service member in determining eligibility for voting, holding public office, resident tuition rates for state universities, and paying state income taxes.

It should be noted that much confusion has been precipitated by the improper substitution of the term residence for domicile. Although the two words have been used interchangeably, they have significantly different meanings and legal effects. The distinction is a conceptional one and can be difficult to comprehend. Domicile has been defined as the place where one has his fixed and permanent home and principal establishment to which he intends to return from any interim absence and permanently remain.

Another popular definition is simply that place at which the individual has a present intent to permanently reside regardless of his present whereabouts. Both of these definitions are correct. Residence, on the other hand, connotates temporary physical locality coupled with a lack of interest to permanently remain.

In moving from the theoretical application of the concepts to the practical, several classified factors which are employed by courts in determining domicile surface are frequently referred to as "indica" or indicators of domicile. Although it is theoretically possible to maintain a domicile solely through the intent to return and permanently remain, the indica enhance your chances of actually establishing domicile on a practical level. Since the burden of proof, more often than not rests upon the party seeking to establish the domicile, your chances of establishing domicile are greatly improved with each additional factor that fits your personal situation.

The following are the "indicia" or "factors" considered in determining domicile:

a. Physical presence.
b. Location of family
c. Voting residence
d. Ownership of real property
e. Payment of state taxes
f. Registration of automobiles
g. State of driver's license
h. Entries on official records
i. Bank account locations
j. Business connections
k. Participation in local affairs
l. Filing notices with public officials

As to the service member, the above factors and domicile become especially difficult. Generally, there is a strong presumption that the service member retains the domicile in which he lived upon entering the service. This presumption does not mean, however, that the service member cannot change his domicile in the same manner as a civilian. In any event, the service member must prove that the particular place is the new domicile.

Brookstone school symposium slated

The Social Studies Department of the Brookstone Community Upper School will sponsor a symposium, "Pearl Harbor plus 35 — Can it happen again?", Saturday, February 12th.

Scheduled to begin at 9:45 a.m. in the Brookstone Middle School Media Center, the symposium will be chaired by two well-versed and stimulating authorities Col. Robert Poydasheff, post JAG and Dr. Charles Ferguson, Professor and Lecturer on American Foreigh Policy, Columbus College. The program is divided into two parts. Poydasheff and Ferguson will present their views concerning the gathering of both fact and educated opinion on the current status of America's national security and preparedness, followed by an open invitation to the members of the audience to join into a discussion concerning America's present military posture and defense policies.

There is no charge for the symposium and it is open to all Columbus area residents.

ID card checkers just doing a job

The closer check on ID cards at all Ft. Benning facilities is proving successful, although personnel checking the cards have been subjected to undue harrassment.

These people are only doing their jobs, but are also the ones receiving the feedback, from patrons.

This program is a continuous one and all personnel are expected to cooperate with managers and employees who are charged with checking ID cards of prospective patrons of these facilities. The checks will require that you remove you ID card from your wallet or purse and hand it to the checker.

Persons who have allowed their ID cards to become mutilated or expired without getting new ones are urged to obtain valid IDs as soon as possible. Military personnel, active or retired, should check the ID cards of their dependents to insure that they are still current. Authorized personnel may obtain ID cards, including dependent cards, at the following locations:

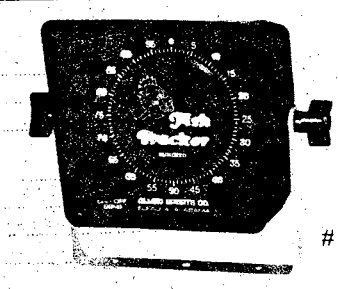
197th Inf Bde —Bldg 9040
1st AIT Bde —Bldg 4044
AG Division —Bldg 83



Dependent ID cards expire on the holder's 21st birthday, unless the dependent is a full-time student in an accredited institution of higher learning, in which case the card expires on the holder's 23rd birthday.

Persons who have their ID cards confiscated as a result of this recently reemphasized program may be inconvenienced, but they should realize that this program is designed to protect fringe benefits and to preclude the use of these facilities by unauthorized personnel.

City operations unlike boonies

By Ron Fowler

Slogging through ankle-deep mud and braving the icy chill of winter winds, the 'Cottonbalers' of Co A, 3/7th Inf, 197th Inf Bde toughed it out last week during company exercises on Military Operations in Built-Up Areas (MOBA) at Harmony Church.

MOBA or 'City Combat' is the method by which a unit conducts tactical operations both offensive and defensive within the confines of a city. It is a far cry from fighting in the 'boonies', which the infantryman is used to.

"The main point we try to bring out in this type of training is the fast pace and close quarters which a city 'battle" will involve," state SFC Fred Kinard, a platoon sergeant in Co A. 3/7th Inf. "There is no room for error, the planning must be precise and all actions must be conducted at the small unit level. The initiative of the squad and platoon leader determines the success in city operations."

The men of Co A were given an introduction to MOBA followed by

"Energy problems far from over"

"The weather may have changed for the better, but the natural gas supply has not." That's the word from Ft. Benning's Utilities Chief George Schladensky.

"The reduction in temperature settings to 65 degrees during the day and 55 degrees at night in post quarters and other measures have resulted in savings. But, funds to buy natural gas and other source of energy are running low. Unless more savings are realized, there will probably be cut-backs in nice to have energy this summer — such as air conditioning in post quarters and troop barracks," Schladensky added.

Housing Energy Conservation (HEC) teams, consisting of one male and one female member, have been formed and are visiting post quarters to give instruction and tips on energy conservation. All team members have received a minimum of 12 hours of instruction on quarters heating systems and are prepared to analyze your quarters and suggest energy saving measures.

The hours of 9 to 11 a.m. and 1:30 to 3 p.m. have been designated as visiting times. However, if you cannot accommodate the team when it visits, make arrangements for a mutually acceptable time for them to return.

The teams can be identified by special ID cards, but if there is any doubt as to who they are, call the major command they represent to verify their identification.

"The HEC teams have been favorably received and the efforts made by post residents so far have been effective. But, natural gas is short and funds to acquire other sources of energy are also low. Our energy problems are far from over," the utilities chief concluded.

"The Black Experience — America: The Third Century" is the theme of this year's Black History Month, which is being celebrated throughout the military services and the Nation during February 1977.

This should be a time to remember the forgotten founding fathers, the black pioneers of East and West, the creators of cities, the builders of railroads, the unsung inventors, theorists and activists.

For a long time now people have tended to identify the American heritage with the Euro-American heritage. Black History Month is a time for observing the influence and contributions of blacks to America and world history.

The history of the black man in America began with the arrival of a Dutch man-of-war at the settlement of Jamestown, Va. in 1619, a year before the Mayflower dropped anchor at Plymouth Rock. Among its cargo were twenty Blacks who were turned over to the colonist in exchange for food and other necessities.

They were put to work as indentured servants — a fate they shared with countless whites at that time — however, some of the initial twenty went on to attain full freedom and some even acquired land and obtained the right to vote. Very few of their many black brothers who were to follow during the next two century were so fortunate. The majority of them arrived in chains and died in chains.

Throughout its history, Black American seem to have profited the most from two of America's major calamities.

With the defeat of the South during the Civil War, it meant the end to the more than 200-year-old institution of slavery. Although blacks exulted in their new found freedom, they still were not free from racial injustices. They were unable to vote in much of the country, or work in certain jobs, or use certain facilities, enjoy equal education and many other privileges. Their fight for freedom had just begun.

World War I, in the long run, also benefited the black man. It speeded his movement out of the South, opened up a whole new job world to him gave his women their first opportunity for industrial training and work.

Blacks are currently undergoing a revived black cultural nationalism, displaying a more intense interest in the historical, artistic, literary and theatrical doings of Black people. They are returning spiritually and psychologically to their African roots.

The Black History Month celebration, through singing, dancing, art displays, speeches, and lectures also strives to bring about this cultural and historical awareness, which through prejudices of the past has been either neglected or ignored.

It is a time devoted to teaching and showing that the present has been built by the accomplishments of both the black and white man and that the future of today will be built by the same.

RETAIN computer assists potential reenlistees

In early March soldiers at Benning will be able to reenlist with the help of a computer system located in the USAIC reenlistment office. The system, called RETAIN, was previously tested at Forts Dix, Knox, Jackson and Carson.

The key to the system, according to SSgt. N.R. Saunders operations NCO, USAIC Reenlistment, is the computer terminal located in the post reup office. Potential reenlistees tell what reup options they want and the unit career counselor will enter the information into the computer. Through the terminal link, RETAIN will check the soldier's qualifications and reenlistment eligibility, look up all available assignments for which the soldier is eligible, and display the results.

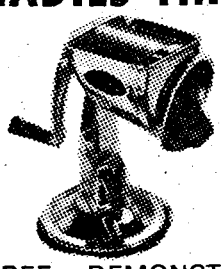
The computer automatically responds with the reup options from which soldiers can choose, matching their desires with the needs of the Army. If the option is available and the soldier wants it, he or she can reserve it and get a reenlistment control number. If however, the soldier wants to think about it, a hold can be placed on the option for seven days.

If the option is not available, the soldier's name can be placed on a waiting list and if the option becomes available, the individual will be notified through the career counselor.

Initially, the RETAIN terminals will be located only at regionally selected installations in CONUS, Alaska and Hawaii. Other installations will have access to the system through those with the terminals.

Overseas locations will be linked to the system by telephone to the Army Military Personnel Center in Alexandria, Va., where additional terminals will be located.

Symposium slated



"Pearl Harbor plus 35 — Can it happen again?," a symposium sponsored by the Social Studies Department of the Brookstone Community Upper School is scheduled tomorrow at 9:45 a.m. in the Middle School Media Center.

Col. Robert Poydasheff, post JAG and Dr. Charles Ferguson, Professor and Lecturer on American Foreign Policy, Columbus College will act as chairmen during the symposium.

The program will be divided into two parts. The first part will feature Poydasheff and Ferguson discussing their views on facts gathered and educated opinions concerning the status of America's national security and preparedness.

Part two will consist of a discussion with members of the audience on the military posture and defense policies of the United States.

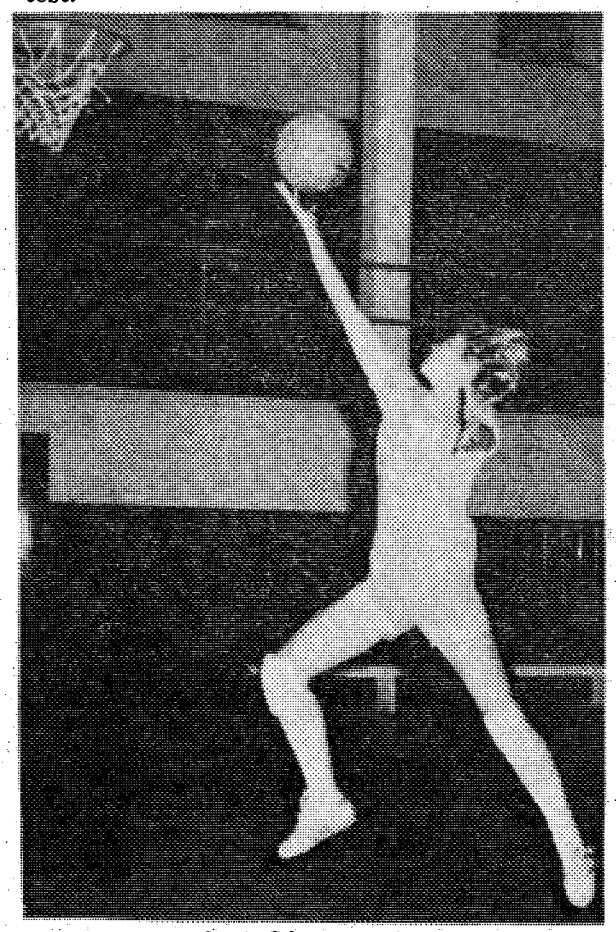
SFC Brian Epperson of the 1st AIT Bde Committee Group captured the top rifle shooting slot in the USAIC Championships with a total score of 358-14Xs. Epperson, who is no stranger to competitive firing, earned the Distinguished Marksmanship Badge in 1965 and in 13 years of military service has been awarded over 200 medals and trophies.

Rec. Spec. - - 'totally involved'

Getting involved in one of Ft. Benning's many sporting activities can pay off. For Sp4 Gina Johnson, Recreations Services Division, her love for and involvement in the sports activities is paying off. Gina's latest accomplishment has been her selection as a candidate for the Women's All-Army Basketball team.



Since her assignment in 1974, Gina has been involved in company, post and TRADOC sports competition. She was high scorer for the 1976 season on the Ft. Benning Women's Basketball team and as a member of the Post Women's Softball team, she tied for high batting average in TRADOC Softball competition. She was also selected as a member of the TRADOC All-Star Softball team.

But Gina is not limited to just women's sports, she also has participated on the Men's Softball team for Co. A, Hq Comd. playing short center for two seasons.

Not only does Gina participate in sports activities, but she also donated her off-duty time as a cheerleader during the recent Doughboy football season.

Gina presently is working as the assistant to the director of Dependent Youth Activities (DYA) and as the director of the Youth swimming pool and also serves as the DYA swimming instructor. Since assuming these multidious tasks she has taught 425 youth non-swimmers to swim and initiated the Youth Gymnastics program.

When she is not working with Benning's youth, Gina attends Columbus College maintaining a 4.0 average. She does not slack off on military abilities either, she scored 135 on her last MOS test and 465 on her last PT test.

A soldier from Co A, 3/7th Inf rushes toward his objective under the covering fire of his squad.

"I've only been with the 'Cottonbalers' for about four months," remarked Pvt. James Williams, "and this is really the first time that I received instruction on techniques of city fighting. It was kind of tough at first but after I ran through it a few times, it became much easier."

The 'Cottonbalers' were also given blocks of instruction and practical exercises on the methods of city defense. They learned to position organic and attached weapons and booby traps to achieve maximum effect.

"I read one time in a book that a group of 45 soldiers held off a force of over 1,000 troops trying to seize a city," commented PFC Robert Briskey. "They were successful because they had their crew-served, organic and attached weapons positioned in such a manner that they were almost impenetrable. You hold the advantage over your enemy when you seize and hold something as important as a city. That's what city fighting is all about."

Communication security

By J. Gorecki

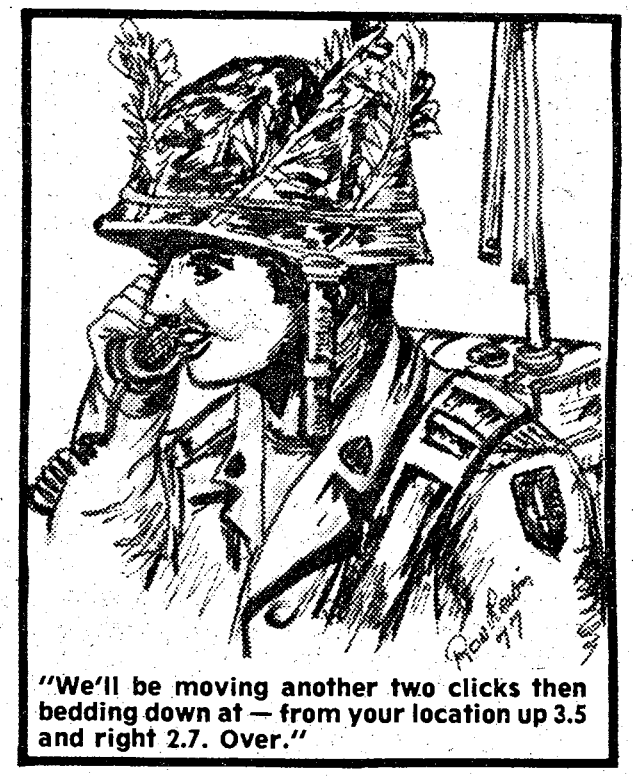
Editors's Note: The following article has been derived from recently declassified documents which depict a real life example of enemy capabilities to exploit a failure to insure communication security.

Then

On December 20th an enemy tunnel complex northwest of Saigon was overrun. It resulted in the capture of twelve enemy personnel, assorted documents and communication equipment. Interrogation of the prisoners and examination of the documents and equipment revealed that the personnel were members of a technical reconnaissance unit.

The fact that the enemy exploits U. S. communications is not a new revelation, but rarely, if ever, has the evidence of such exploitation been so dramatic and detailed.

Included in the captured equipment were two PRC-25s and one PRC-77, a homemade receiver and transmitter, a CHICOM R-139 receiver, several commercial transistor radios modified to pick up tactical FM radio transmissions, sufficient spare parts and components to allow for field repairs of the equipment and several bags of antenna parts.



"Roger, good copy. Out."

The captured documents included booklets containing samples of frequency and call sign allocations with US Army unit designations, training instructions on methods of intercept, information on exploitable weaknesses in communications procedures and over 2100 verbatim English transcripts of intercepted voice transmissions.

Following are some examples of teaching points which were translated and extracted from the captured documents:

- While U.S. units change frequencies, they do not always change callsign suffixes at the same time.
- U.S. operators often make mistakes, such as mixing old and new callsigns.
- Only a few frequencies are utilized by a given U.S. unit.
- Because of activities independent of roads, (U.S. units) usually send messages based on land-marks or points of origin, then from that point they use: left, right, up, down to describe a position.
- U.S. units use point of origin codes which are simple to break.
- All ARVN units have U.S. military advisors. Alongside ARVN communication nets are U.S. military advisory nets. In general the quality of the advisory nets is good; they provide quite a bit of intelligence on ARVN activities especially during combined US./ARVN operations. The intelligence passed over the advisory nets gives a fairly complete picture of the enemy's combat activities and plans.
- Scrutiny of warning nets provides tactical informationn concerning B52 and artillery strikes a short time in advance and forewarnings of operations and troop insertions which allows us to avoid them or cope with them. This information is most valuable to combat units near the enemy.
- By combining information from air warning nets and other sources we can determine areas of activity, and the location of artillery units active on the battlefield. Thus, by following the air warning nets we contribute much to reconnaissance missions and the direction of combat.

"We'll be moving another two clicks then bedding down at — from your location up 3.5 and right 2.7. Over."

Readout of the transmission transcripts, which were written out in longhand English, indicated the probable compromise of U.S. air assaults of up to two and one half hours in advance.

It was determined from captured records that in at least one instance, the six digit coordinates for a B-52 airstrike were known three hours prior to the scheduled strike.

Further readout of the transmission transcripts, revealed that locations of friendly units and future operations plans were frequently compromised through clear text, plain language transmissions and by the use of the unauthorized, locally produced 'point of origin' grid codes.

The weakness of the 'point of origin' codes was shown vividly by the fact that the intercept operator was able to pencil in the true six digit coordinates immediately adjacent to the intercept code equivalent.

Interrogation of the captured personnel revealed that a normal day would reveal about ten significant intercepts and that they were capable of determining exact ambush sites locations as much as 24 hours in advance.

"It appears that they'll be bivouacking at coordinates 684293, Ivan. Let's meet them for breakfast!"

Ft. Benning, 1977

Electronic warfare

Now

Fighting outnumbered on a lethal, extremely complex, modern battlefield will require an effective, highly mobile system of command and control.

Throughout military history, there have been numerous breaches in security recorded on both sides of the line of contact.

These violations range from a failure to maintain noise, light and communication discipline to sabotage, espionage and treason and have resulted in the needless deaths of many soldiers and civilians.

In many cases the basic tenants of security were violated, not intentionally, but rather in the failure to recognize the importance of seemingly insignificant, common sense, protective measures.

"The abilities a unit demonstrates in the area of protective security in a training environment are the same capabilities they take with them to war," stated LtCol. Ernest Marmaras, the chief of Ft. Benning's Tactical Communications Division. "The emphasis a commander places on communications security measures in his daily training relate directly to the performance of his unit under combat conditions."

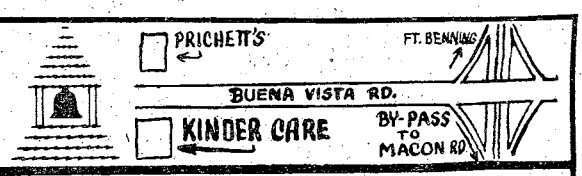
The Combat, Support and Maintenance Department of the U.S. Army Infantry School teaches Electronic Warfare (EW) to resident officer and NCO classes as well as Forces Command units on post.

The instruction places emphasis on what the combat soldier can do to effectively counter an enemy EW threat. Stressed heavily is the enemy's capability to intercept, analyze, locate, deceive and jam command and control communications. By understanding what the enemy can do, the combat soldier is in a better position to counter the EW threat by taking appropriate protective measures.

"In classroom instruction, we cover the need for good command and control planning and operations and what the individual and unit can do to insure it. This is dramatically contrasted with combat examples which show the tragic outcome of a failure to do so. However, the worth of the instruction is determined in the field.

"During training exercises, we assume the role of an opposing force and attempt to jam communications, imitate transmissions to confuse the students and intercept what they say over the air. This is followed up by moae instruction in which their radio and wire conversations are analyzed from the standpoint of worth to a potential enemy," the signal officer explained.

"Most students are amazed at what can be determined about their operations, locations and tactical intentions from these seemingly innocent transmissions," he added.



If you can be heard, you can be located and once located, you can be destroyed.

In order to prevent the likelihood of security breeches, like those of the past, it is necessary that continuous instruction and awareness of enemy capabilities be stressed in all training. The Infantry School, realizing this need, has placed heavy emphasis on command and control communications security.

When asked what he thought was the most important thing the field soldier should keep in mind concerning enemy capabilities, the colonel replied, "What is often overlooked and under stressed is the fact that even the most unsophisticated enemy with unsophisticated equipment by our standards is capable of intercepting, evaluating and disseminating valuable information that can prove detrimental to U.S. operations and personnel."

Past EW indiscretions and mistakes, particularly in Viet Nam, were mostly of the kind that permitted the enemy to take DEFENSIVE action — B-52 strikes were coming, he left — ground forces were moving, he avoided them. A future enemy with tactical air, heavy direct and indirect fire weapons and the ability to mass enormous forces rapidly, will take OFFENSIVE action if similar mistakes are made again.

LtCol. Marmaras concluded by saying, "There can never be enough emphasis placed on communication security."

MARS works for you, for free ! !

By Betty Zimmerman

Have you ever wanted to send a message home in a hurry? Maybe to say ". . . send me some money" or ". . . I graduate from AIT next Friday" or whatever.

Did you know Ft. Benning has the facilities for any soldier or his family to do this — and it's free?

The method is through MARS (Military Affiliate Radio System,) which is a branch of the U.S. Army Command Communications Agency (USACC).

The MARS radio at Benning operates on six nets and its coverage is worldwide Messages can be sent overseas and received from overseas locations as well as anywhere in the states.

Messages are relayed to other MARS stations and then through HAM operators when necessary. The MARS station or HAM operator closest to the receiving party places a telephone call to complete the relay of the message.

The local station is also a part of the emergency network. In fact, at the end of January, they took part in a TRADOC net 24-hour exercise during which several TRADOC east coast installations requested Ft. Benning support to cope with damage caused by a severe winter storm.

MARS NCOIC, SSgt. Emmit Collins reports a current monthly workload of 1,239 grams transmitted, 1,209 received and 176 relayed. But get this — he says his facilities and personnel are capable of handing much more!

"We are here to provide the soldier a service and at the same time it gives our operators practical training," emphasized Collins.

"The limit is 30 words and the hours are from 8 a.m. to 9 p.m., weekdays and weekends are required, he continued. You may call 545-7285 or come by the MARS station in building 84, which is behind the CB&T and 1st National Bank building."

It's time to file

Income Tax 1976

As much as you probably don't want to be reminded, it's time to pay your federal income tax again. And if you've been reading the financial pages of the newspapers, 1976 income tax forms promise a big headache.

Actually, the forms aren't any harder to understand than they have been in past years, if that's any comfort. But, just in case it isn't, The Bayonet has prepared what it hopes is a "typical" tax return, in order to guide you when you file this year.

Follow along by comparing what you read with the form alongside this explanation and you shouldn't have any problems. So with fingers crossed — here we go!

Lines one through six are pretty much self-explanatory. We chose to file a joint return because the odds are that you will pay less tax by filing jointly. However, both joint and "married filing separately" systems should be tried, just in case the other is more beneficial. Secondly you should use your permanent home of record address, and you can also file a joint return even if you did not spend the entire year living with your wife.

Line eight is something only you can decide. Your 1040 instruction book explains what it's all about.

Line nine is the amount shown on your W-2 Form as wages, salaries, tips and other employe compensation. If filing jointly, total both your income and that of your spouse. You may file jointly even if only one of you earned any income.

Assuming that you claim no income from dividends or interest, we'll go on. (Since military personnel aren't taxed on moving expenses and similar areas, it's unlikely that the next few lines will apply either, so we'll go on to line 15 c, which is the amount we started with on line nine.)

Note that on line 15 c, you may be elibigle for a bonus special "Earned Income Credit." A worksheet for computing this is found on Page two of your instruction booklet. It's simple to figure out whether or not you qualify. In this case, since there is no other income to push over the magic $8,000 mark, you would earn $11.50, which is entered on line 23 c. (See "Earned Income Credit" offers special bonus).

(Note that all numbers have been rounded off to the nearest dollar. Amounts from 1 to 50 cents become less and amounts from 51 to 99 cents become a dollar more. This may be done throughout your return, but claiming these amounts from line 23 through 28 may earn a few pennies more.)

Stop here, turn your form over and enter the amount from line 16 on line 43. Check line 44b and follow the instructions for having checked box 2 (married filing jointly). The two figures you may use compute to $2,100 and $1,262; therefore you want to use the greater amount to your advantage. Subtract the difference and you get $5,785 on line 45.

Following the instructions on line 46, you come up with $2,250. Subtracting this from line 45 gives you a new difference of $3,535, which is the income you will be taxed on. Now turn the form over and go to line 16.

If you are not itemizing deductions (which, according to the Internal Revenue Service, probably won't benefit a joint return unless your income is less than $13,125 and your deductions are more than $2,100), check the Tax Table and turn to the Tax Table schedule found on Page 26 of your instruction book.

The Tax Tables show that with a taxable income of $3,353, you owe $539 in taxes. Enter $539 on line 16.

Computing line 17a gives you a total of $105 and line 17b gives you a total of $71. Take the larger figure and subtract it from $539, which gives you $434 on line 18. Since you're not itemizing deductions, skip line 21 and write $434 on line 22.

For line 23a, we'll assume you've had $1,010 previously deducted from your income and left in the hands of the Treasury Department. 23b should not apply unless you did not receive all or part of your claimed 1975 tax return. Line 23c already has the $11.50 bonus (computed after line 15c) and lines 23d and e should not normally apply. Your new total from adding all of the line 23 figures gives you $1,021.50 for line 24. Line 25 does not compute. Having paid $1,021.50 in taxes and only owing $434, gives you a difference of $578,50 on lines 26 and 27. That's how much of a refund you can expect within the next four to eight weeks, depending on how soon you file.

Make sure you sign your names and date your forms, and attach Copy B. of your W-2 Form. Addresses of where to file your return are included in your instruction booklet.

It's really quite simple. And filling out the Form 1040 isn't any more difficult than filling out the new, more complex Short Form 1040A. Now all you have to do is use the figures from your own W-2 Form and perform your own mathematical problems.

If you need assistance, or guidance on which form or procedure is best for you, consult your unit tax assistance officer or legal assistance office. Trained tax assistants are scheduled to have undergone preparation to enable them to assist you this week, and tax forms should be available through your unit or post office.

Remember that the accompanying form and the figures used are meant only to assist you in obtaining a better understanding of filing your own tax forms. But following the procedures outlines here should give you a pretty accurate idea of how you can file your taxes on your own.

The deadline for filing is April 15.

Remember also that your instruction booklet has more detailed instructions and step by step procedures. Good luck!

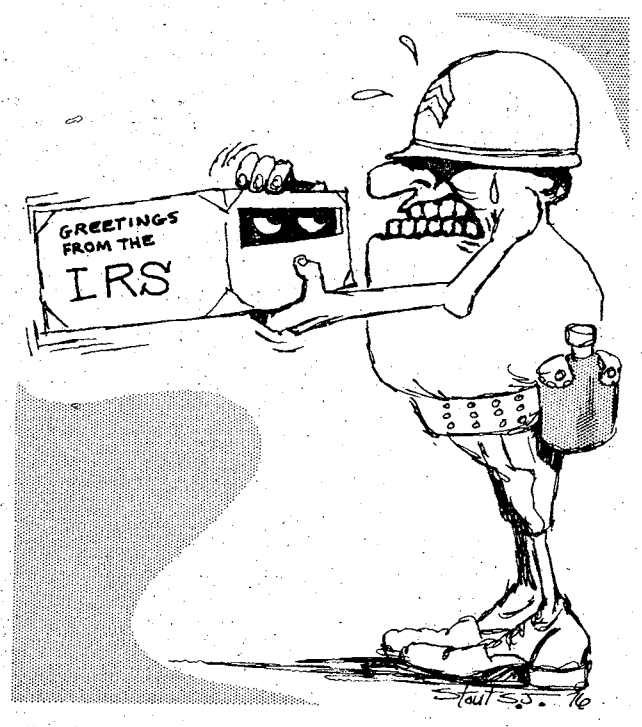
'Earned Income Credit' offers a special bonus



Married couples filing a joint return (exceptions for married, living apart are found on Page seven of your instruction book) may qualify for a special bonus if their income on line 15c is less than $8,000. Page two of your instruction book contains a worksheet that will help you determine whether or not you qualify. Basically, here's how it works:

Write down the figure on line 9 ($7,885). There are several other steps that follow but most people, if any, reading this are not concerned with them.

Take 10 per cent of the $7,885 figure ($788.50), but not more than $400. Since $788.50 exceeds $400, the $400 figure is the one you must use.

Next, you subtract $4,000 from $7,855 ($3,855) and figure up 10 per cent of the difference ($388.50). Subtract the last figure ($388.50) from $400 ($11.50) and you have determined your "Earned Income Credit," which is entered on line 23c.

This figure ($11.50) is money that is being given to you as a "bonus." It will be refunded to you in addition to any money you have coming, or it will be deducted from any money you owe.

State tax issue clarified

As expected, after the passage of the 1976 Tax Reform Act by Congress, 25 states have asked that state taxes be withheld from the military pay of legal residents of those states beginning July 1st.

Legal residents of those 25 states can count on receiving less money in their Mid-month and End of Month July pay checks.

The states requesting that taxes be withheld are — Alabama, Arkansas, California, Colorado, the District of Columbia, Delaware, Georgia, Hawaii, Indiana, Kansas, Kentucky, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri, New Mexico, North Carolina, North Dakota, Ohio, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, Utah, Virginia and Wisconsin.

Michigan, however, does not tax military pay while Missouri, Idaho, Pennsylvania and California only tax their residents when they are stationed within the state, according to officials at the Department of Defense.

Alaska, Illinois, Iowa and Vermont exempt all service pay from taxation.

Servicemen and women whose legal domicile is in Connecticut, Florida, Nevada, New Hampshire, South Dakota, Tennessee, Texas, Washington or Wyoming can relax since their states do not tax personal incomes.

However, Connecticut taxes capital gains, while Tennessee taxes interest on dividends. New Hampshire taxes interest and dividends and also collects a comuter tax.

New Jersey, West Virginia and New York under certain circumstances, also exempt soldiers from state tax. Resident of those states may want to talk to their legal assistance officer or write to their state's treasury department for guidance or assistance.

Formerly, the most common means of designating a legal residence or domicile was to do so on the Internal Revenue Service Form W-4. The Army, Navy and Marine Corps still use the W-4 form, but the Air Force is now requiring members to submit a letter certifying that they meet all requirements for legal residence in the state claimed.

Department of the Army officials also note that some states, even those who exempt military pay from taxation, still require that the servicemenber file an income tax form. They advise anyone on active duty to consult his legal assistance officer or his home state's treasury department, if there is any doubt about tax-filing or tax-paying obligations.

It is illegal for anyone to change his domicile merely to avoid state income tax. There are several "indicators" used to establish legal domicile such as, physical presence in the state, doing business in the state, owning land or personal property in the state, having a mailing address there, a will probated there or a vehicle registered in the state. If you desire to change your legal domicile, it is advisable to first seek legal assistance.

Mr. Angelo R. Ditty, Jr., Engineer-in-charge of the Atlanta District Office of the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) appeared on a TV talk show last week. Here's some information from that interview:

The Atlanta District Office covers all of Georgia, Alabama, Tennessee and South Carolina and parts of North Carolina and Florida. But since there are only six investigators to cover this are, it's very difficult to send an investigating team to location for a couple of weeks at a time. So the FCC relies very heavily on written complaints from the public.

When the FC receives a complaint, it is assigned a priority according to the seriousness of the offense. Some of the more serious offenses include use of profanity, deliberate interference or obstruction of frequencies, threatening people who report violations, etc.

However, in order to apprehend a violator, the FCC must have at least a name (not a "handle"), an address or an FCC call sign. So, the more specific information you give to the FCC, the better their chances are for catching the offender.

On the other side of the coin, the majority of complaints against CBers involves television interference (TVI). The Atlanta District Office receives between one and two thousand complaints per month on TVI alone. However, the interesting statis is that in 80 per cent of the cases, the fault does not lie with the CBer.

If your neighbor does come to you with a TVI complaint, though, you should help him find where the fault is and fix it. Here are some of the steps you can take:

If your base station antenna is on a guyed mast or tower, insert insulators in the guy wires at three-foot intervals.

Install a low-pass TVI filter on your CB set and ground the set to a water pipe.

Suggest that your neighbor install a high-pass TVI filter (sometimes called a 'wave trap') on his TV or FM set.

If the TVI still exists after all the above steps have been taken, then an electronics technician should be consulted.

To sum up then, most TVI complaints can be handled locally with a little cooperation but serious offenses should be reported to the FCC in writing.

To complain to the Federal Communications Commission, write to the following address: FCC, 1365 Peachtree St. NE, Atlanta, GA, 30309.

fins, furs, feathers

By Denny Blankenship

By Denny Blankenship

Crappie, one of America's best freshwater food-fishes, have started their traditional winter-spring run. With the advent of cold weather and the resultant water temperature drop, large schools of these ferocious little battlers are prowling around in search of food and spawning beds.

For those hardy fishermen who want to brave the winter chill, many enjoyable hours of excellent fishing is available on or near the reservation. Try fishing the mouths of creeks in the river with "shiner" minnows at a depth of 6-8 feet, use small hooks and be very careful in setting the hook.

Many nice Crappie are lost due to hooks pulling out of delicate mouths. When you get a bite, just lift your pole or rod up with normal pressure, this is usually sufficient to hook the fish.

If you like to bank fish, fish up Upatoi or Uchee Creeks with small "gigs." The gigs can be rigged singularly or in tandem and should be reeled in slowly. Many folks also use a bobber 2-3 feet above the gigs when stream fishing. This will allow a slower retrieve and possible better lure presentation in some hard-to-reach spots.

I was zippin' along down the river last week when I saw a familiar face fishing a favorite "Hawg" hole. I eased back on the stick, coasted up close and asked, "having any luck Junior?"

'Oh, I'm doing pretty good today," answered Junior Tibbs. "How long you been here?" "I guess about three hours now," Junior replied 'azily. "How many you caught?" "Oh, I haven't caught any yet," Junior hastily replied. "What do you mean?" I almost shouted. "I thought you were having good luck." "See that other boat over there?" Junior pointed. "Yeah," I puzzled, "Why?" "Well he's been here for six hours and hasn't caught anything," said Junior.

Ponder this until next week: Today is the tomorrow you worried about yesterday.

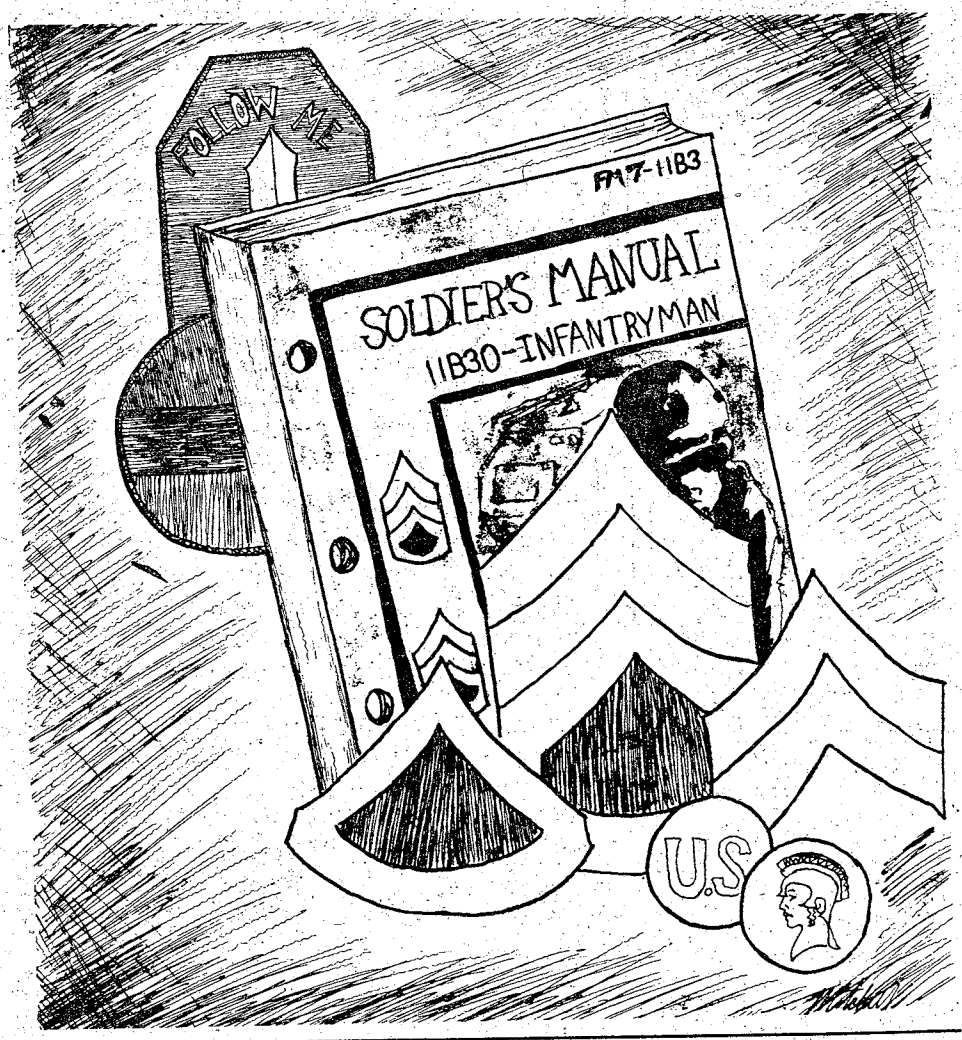
Soldier's Manual must for career advancement

By Pete Hatfield

I am Joe's "Soldier's Manual." That's my name, "Soldier's Manual." "Joe" is a soldier in the U.S. Army.



Physically , I am about average: 7¾-by 10¼-inches in size. I've got three holes in my left side so that I can fit in a three-ring, loose-leaf binder.

Joe and I study a lot. Sometimes we spend hours together. When he is on duty, he keeps me in a safe place — his wall locker, for example.

I am most happy, though, when I am helping Joe to increase his proficiency and prepare for advancement through the Skill Qualification Test (SQT). I am the basis for the SQT.

I can help Joe's career development in a number of ways:

- First, I can define the job to be performed by Joe in terms of critical job tasks in each duty position and at each skill level.
- Second, I can define the conditions under which Joe will perform the critical tasks.
- Third, I can let him know the minimum acceptable standards of performance.

- Fourth, I can tell him where to find reference training courses and other study materials that apply to each task.
- Fifth, I can assist the commander and supervisor in evaluating Joe's performance and serve as a training management aid.

I'm not trying to rub out all of the other attractions in Joe's life. For example, I welcome Joe's interest in my friends; the Army Training and Evaluation Programs, Field Manuals and Training Circulars. They are the primary guides for training Joe. My role is to work with them for Joe's overall good.

As a Soldier's Manual, I carry performance tests linked with the tasks required by that skill level of Joe's MOS. These tests provide a basis for selecting a sample of tasks to be included on the SQT.

I can explain to Joe in clear, concise terms the Enlisted Personnel Management System (EPMS), the Army Training System, the MOS career progression pattern, the promotion system and how I may be used to assist Joe in performing a particular military job and in preparing for a specific SQT.

You can read my life's history in Circular No. 310-87, Headquarters, Department of the Army, dated June 22, 1976. Let me quote a few facts:

"The Soldier's Manual uses a building block philosophy, each building on the preceding one. Skill levels one and two manuals will be issued simultaneously. As soldiers progress to higher skill levels, the appropriate higher skill level additions may be ordered for their manuals. The manual for the next skill level is necessary for preparation for the next level of responsibility. For example, skill level three soldiers need manuals for skill levels one through three to insure competence at their present skill level, and skill level four manuals to acquaint them with the requirements for the next skill level. In essence, soldiers post each skill level manual to their basic manuals, creating for each soldier a composite manual covering information on the critical tasks of several skill levels."

I met Joe through automatic distribution to battalion level. Distribution requirements were based on the assigned strength by MOS and skill levels.

Some of us also made it to MOS Educational Centers. Others went to units that required copies for MOS study programs or for training references. Requisition us on DA Form 17 directly from the U.S. Army AG Publications Center, 2800 Eastern Boulevard, Baltimore, MD 21220.

Joe is responsible for keeping me in good condition. I must be kept up-to-date with changes. Joe's commander has a one-time responsibility to insure that all unit members receive the appropriate Soldier's Manual. Specific distribution instructions are contained inside each Soldier's Manual.

One last thing: as Joe's Soldier's Manual, I depend on him for safekeeing and proper treatment. But don't put me aside and forget I exist. I can be the best friend Joe ever had when it comes to career advancement.

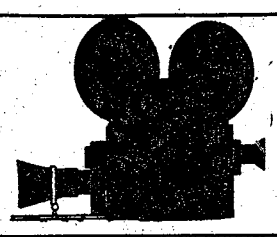
Space required flight available for emergency leave situations

Persons previously authorized only space-available transportation in emergency leave situations may now choose to fly space required and have an advance reservation.



There is only one catch: passengers have to pay for the flight. The fare will be about the same as commercial charter flights but less than regular commercial flights. It will insure that service families can get a flight even when there are no space-available seats. Additionally this option will permit dependents in emergency situations to travel with the servicemember, thus allowing the family to travel together.

Under emergency conditions the following categories of passengers may pay for space-required travel:

- DoD civilians and dependents stationed overseas
- American Red Cross employees
- Command-sponsored dependents
- Dependents of members stationed in CONUS

The change in regulations also provides for space-required PCS travel by some close relatives of soldiers and dependents of American Red Cross personnel. Also included for PCS travel are dependents of members who gain command sponsorship while stationed overseas, thus allowing dependents to join them. Details on eligibility should be checked out with the transportation officer prior to planning travel.

Other passenger categories authorized the space-required reimbursable option include members on permissive TDY and secondary school students when traveling between their sponsor's overseas duty station and the nearest DoD overseas accredited secondary school.

"Uncle Sam needs us."

Betty Jordan

When it came time for Sergeant Jeff Jordan to consider reenlisting, his wife, Betty, had something to say: "I told him to reenlist. It's a chance to get out and go places. And Army towns are different. It's not like going some-place and being with strangers. Besides, I like the retirement benefits. Especially when you get to retire early. Jeff will only be 39. Still young enough to do things. You sure won't find us sitting in a rocking chair on the front porch. Sure, I wanted him to reenlist. I guess you could call me Jeff's reenlistment officer."

Maybe your husband should have a chat with his career counselor. He may find out just how much Uncle Sam needs him.

Keep a good family in the Army.

'If you must chew gum...'

Editor's Note: The following article is the second in a series of six that are concerned with dental health and your children. These articles are presented in conjunction with National Children's Dental Week, February 6th through the 12th.

There has been a lot of talk lately about "Sugarless" chewing gun. Is it better to chew this than regular gum?

If you must chew gum, the American Dental Association says it is better to chew the sugarless products rather than those that contain sugar. A number of research studies, the ADA says, point out that some of the sugarless sweetening agents — including mannitol, sorbitol and xylitol — do not contribute significantly to dental decay when they are used in gums and other confections as replacements for sugar.

On the other hand, foods and beverages that contain excessive amounts of sugar invite tooth decay.

How does the decay process work? It begins with bacterial plaque — the sticky, colorless substance that is present in everyone's mouth. Shortly after you consume sugary foods of beverages, the bacteria in the plaque begins to produce acids that attack tooth enamel. With frequent and repeated exposure to sugary substances, these acids wear down the tooth enamel and eventually cause decay.

In order to control this decay process, you must control plaque with proper diet and oral hygiene. By cutting down on sugary foods, beverages and snacks — including chewing gum and other confections — you can break the decay chain.

Four more TRADOC service schools now college accredited

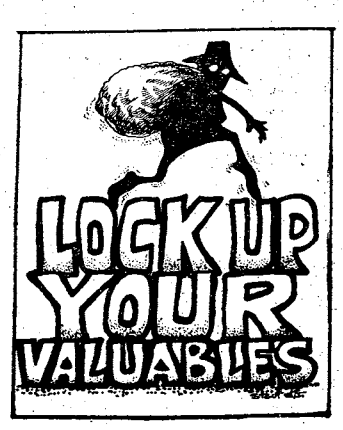
The Southern Association of Colleges and Schools has accredited four more Army Training and Doctrine Command (TRADOC) service schools. This brings the total number of TRADOC schools accredited to 14.

The four schools are the Armor School at Ft. Knox, the Military Police School at Ft. McClellan, the Signal School at Ft. Gordon and the Institute of Military Assistance at Ft. Bragg.

Those TRADOC schools already accredited by the Southern Association are Air Defense, Aviation, Engineer, Infantry, Missile and Munitions, Quartermaster, Sergeants Major Academy, Transportation, and Women's Army Corps. The U.S. Army Intelligence School, Ft. Devens, has been accredited by the New England Association of Schools and Colleges.

Two other service schools are pending accreditation, two more will soon be evaluated and two others have submitted applications.

Accreditation of a school means that it meets the criteria of excellence of the accrediting association. The Army's purpose in seeking accreditation is to secure credit for its training in the civilian community. Training in these schools can lead to a civilian job or to additional credits toward a vocational or technical degree in a civilian college or quniversity.



The military technical training that you received through AIT could be applied to a degree program at the college of your choice, see your education counselor for what credits are available to you.

Accreditation of its service schools is only one way the Army is trying to help its former service members find better civilian jobs. Army training is also available.

Pennsylvania has its Puxsutawney Phil, Columbus has its "Muscogee Goldie." Lacking a groundhog to check the annual animal forecast on February 2nd, CWO4 and Mrs. Bill Walton of the 34th Med Bn persuaded their hamster, "Muscogee Goldie" to make the forecast. After an intelligent exchange in "Hamsterese," Goldie predicted that winter is not over. However, due to our southerly location it will only last another four weeks.

Growth doesn't stop at maturity.

Everyone knows U.S. Savings Bonds reach full maturity in just five years.

But they don't stop there.

Bonds keep accumulating interest year after year after year after year.

So if you're enrolled in a Payroll Savings Plan at work (or the Bond-A-Month Plan where you save), you don't have to rush out and cash your Bonds at maturity.

You can sit back and watch them keep growing.

The older they get, the better they look.

Series E Bonds pay 6% interest when held to maturity of 5 years (4½% the first year). Interest is not subject to state or local income taxes, and federal tax may be deferred until redemption.

Take stock in America.

THE BAYONET

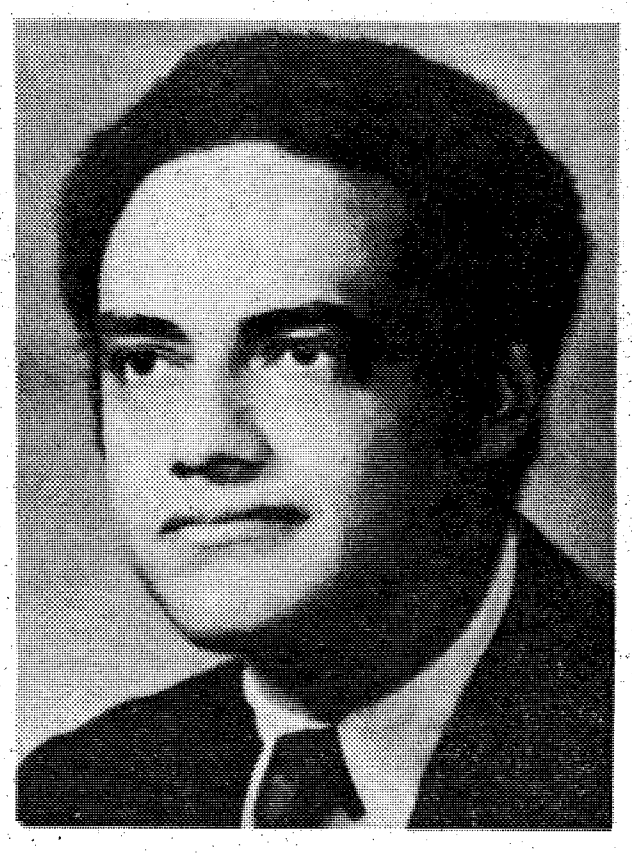
Vol. 36, No. 23 "A Ledger-Enquirer Newspaper published in the Interest of the Personnel of Fort Benning Feb. 18 - 24th, 1977

New Secretary of the Army named

Clifford L. Alexander Jr., was sworn in as the Secretary of the Army on February 15th. Subject to the direction and control of the President as Commander-in-Chief and the Secretary of Defense, he has responsibility and authority for the conduct of all affairs of the Department of the Army.

Born September 21, 1933 in New York City, Alexander received his B.A. in American Government, Cum Laude from Harvard University in 1955. He received his LL.B. degree from Yale Law School in 1958.

Following his graduation from Yale, the Secretary enlisted in the 569th FA Bn, New York National Guard and was called to active duty for six months. He was separated from the active Army at Ft. Dix, N.J. in February 1959.



From 1959 to 1961, he served as assistant District Attorney for New York County. Leaving that office to become Executive Director of the Manhattanville Hamilton Grange Neighborhood Conservation Project. Mr. Alexander was then named program and Executive Director of Harlem Youth Opportunies.

In 1963, he was called to the White House by President Kennedy to serve as Foreign Affairs Officer of the National Security Council. From 1964 through 1967, President Johnson appointed him — successively — Deputy Special Assistant to the President, Associate Special Counsel and Deputy Special Counsel to the President.

Mr. Alexander was chairman of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission during the period 1967 through 1969. In September, 1968, he served as Special Representive of the President with rank of Ambassador, heading the U.S. delegation marking the kingdom of Swaziland. In addition, he served as Special Consulant to President Johnson on civil rights. He was a partner in the law firm of Armold and Porter until 1975. He then became a member of the Washington law firm of Verner, Liipfert, Bernhard, McPherson and Alexander until his appointment as Secretary of the Army.

From 1972 through 1976, the Secretary hosted and co-produced a weekly television program shown in several cities and television commentaries. He was a law professor, teaching courses at both Howard University Law School and Georgetown Law Center.

SQT's to begin

All soldiers in Career Management Field 11 with B (Infantryman) or C (Indirect Fire Crewman) specialties in grades E-2 to E-6 will take a Skill Qualification Test (SQT) during April through June.

Test notices have been distributed. They tell soldiers each task to be performed with Soldier Manual pages where conditions and standards can be found. Training Extension Course (TEC) lessons are available at all post Learning Centers to support many of the tasks to be performed.

If you're an Infantryman (B or C) and haven't received your notice and Soldier's Manual act now!

See your first sergeant and let him know — it's your career.

Editor's note: See next week's BAYONET for an explanation of SQT and what you can expect come April. Included will be a rundown on what will be tested, how to study and where to find the info to help you. Don't miss it!

Conservation efforts getting results

By William Darrell

A word of thanks and congratulations are in order for the dependent housing occupants. Thanks — for cooperating so readily with the Housing Energy Conservation (HEC) Teams and congratulations on reduced energy consumption. Ft. Benning consumed 1,800,000 cubic feet less of natural gas and 1,000,000 kWh less of electricity in January than in December.

For those of you who haven't been visited by a Housing and Energy Conservation (HEC) team as yet, here is a little information for you as to their purpose. The HEC teams were formed and trained to help you conserve energy in your home. They represent an "area of responsibility" commander and report the results of their visits to that headquarters. The teams will show ways to conserve energy and reduce the probability of shortages later this year.

Although February brought in a warming trend with moderating temperatures and sunny days, the cold weather is not over. Weather forecasters are predicing five to six more weeks of bad weather for the nation as a whole. Even though the warm weather will be here soon, parts of the country will not feel relief for two to three months. As a result, short supplies of natural gas can be expected for the near future. The long range outlook also appears grim for natural gas supplies. It is doubtful if the tremendous strain put on the gas supply during the winter months can be alleviated during the summer months, which ultimately means a short supply again next winter.

Conservation efforts have thus far been successful, but this summer electricity must be conserved. While it is true that electricity cannot be stored for future use as fossil fuels are, the amount needed can be reduced.

Even here on the banks of a river which has several hydro-electric dams, most of electricity comes from fossil fuel powered turbines. The more electricity used this summer, the more fossil fuels burned, the less fuel for next winter.

So this summer is the time to prepare for next winter. Go ahead with weatherstripping and caulk your doors and windows. These measures will not only keep you warmer next winter — but also cooler this summer.

Black History Month

The cowboy's role revealed

By Joyce Walker

In mid-twentieth century, the most widely and internationally known character in America was the cowboy. In his day, the cowboy was very important in contributing to the development of our nation. He had charge of the nation's principal source of meat and he helped to blaze many of the trails that helped the nation to spread and at the same time bind it together.

CHARLIE SMITH

The work of Afro-Americans in the taming of the West began in the days of slavery. Ex-slaves, runaways and free Blacks went West as fur trappers and "forty-niners."

After the Civil War, when trail drives from ranches in Texas to Abilene and Ellsworth, Kansas began, most of the wranglers (horse tenders) and trail cooks were Blacks. Many of the Black cowboys became, for varying reasons, celebrated legends.

One such legendary figure was Nat Love. A Tennessee-born ex-slave, he came West at the age of 15 and got a job as a cowhand, after wearing down an unbroken horse belonging to a cattle outfit. Love knew Bat Masterson and was once saved from jail by the celebrated lawman.

The story goes that "having had too much of the bad whiskey of Dodge City, Nat Love tried to lasso a cannon at Fort Dodge and found himself in trouble with the Third Infantry and locked up in the Fort's guardhouse. He was faced with a federal court trial for attempted theft of government property, but luckily the post commander did not want to be bothered and saw a way out when the black cowboy claimed to be a friend of Bat Masterson.

Love was brought before the famous sheriff, who good-naturedly asked him what he wanted with a cannon. Nat, who had just recovered from a Comanche wound said he had wanted to take it back to Texas to fight the Indians. The whole affair ended in a laugh with Masterson intervening and the soldiers letting the black man off on condition that he buy drinks for everyone present. Bat paid for the drinks instead of Nat and let his Black friend off with the assurance — according to Nat Love — that "I was the only cowboy that he liked.'"

Another legendary cowboy was an outlaw known as Cherokee Bill, whose real name was Crawford Goldsby. He was said to have been an all-American killer in whose veins mingled the blood of Afro-Americans, Cherokee Indians, Anglo-Saxons and Mexicans

It was through his weakness for women that Bill was finally captured. His favorite was a half-Negro Cherokee girl named Maggie Glass whose cousin, Ike Rogers wanted the $1,300 reward on Cherokee Bill's head. While visiting Maggie, the mulatto outlaw bent over the fireplace to light his cigar, and Ike swung a poker right down on his head.

In 1896, at the age of twenty, Cherokee Bill ended his two-year outlaw career in the hangman's court in the presence of one hundred invited guests. Asked if he had any last words, he said "I came here to die, not to make a speech."

In 1976, one ex-cowboy was still alive. Charlie Smith had the distinction of being both the oldest surviving ex-slave brought over from Africa and the oldest surviving Afro-American cowboy.

He had been shanghaied from his native Liberia and brought to Texas in 1854. After his freedom he rode the range as a cowboy. As the West tamed he retired from cowboy life and turned to less strenuous pursuits.

AUSA ball slated

Airborne qualified at last

After 2,450 freefall jumps

By Betty Zimmerman

After 2,450 freefalls and five military static-line jumps, PFC Robert Vonderau finally earned his wings at the USAIS Airborne School graduation last week.

The freefalls weren't required but they certainly made the three-week course easier for the 27-year-old soldier who was a sport parachutist instructor in Atlanta before joining the Army.

Vonderau is a champion skydiver, having won the 1973 World and National title in the 4-man team relative work.

Why did he join the Army?

He said: "I always wanted to excel to my fullest limitations as a competitor. In fact, I'd like to be champion in the individual accuracy event.

"Reaching this goal means having good coaches and the time to train extensively without business and financial impediments. I met many of the Army's Golden Knights at various skydiving events and they were continuously trying to convince me that the Army was the best place to accomplish this goal.

"So, here I am — finished with basic, AIT and airborne school — on my way to Ft. Bragg and the Golden Knights."

New commissary management system to $ave

By John Hart

Better management of the Defense Department's commissary stores is expected to produce a $76 million savings by FY 79, according to Congressman Bill Nichols, (D-Ala.).

"This is significant and encouraging," said Nichols, Chairman of the Military Compensation Subcommittee of the House Armed Forces Committee.

Nichols, a staunch defender of military commissaries, in a statement February 9th, commended the Army and Air Force management improvement efforts of their commissary stores.

The Army and Air Force went to centralized management of their stores last year. "This centralization program has already realized about $4 million in savings over the last year," Nichols said.

"I am convinced that the military services are dedicated toward making our commissaries more efficient," he continued.

The improvements in commissary operations led Nichols to comment, "This should demonstrate to Congress that the military services are conscientious and dedicated at reducing appropriated funds as far as possible."

He added, "If successful, many of the arguments against continued commissary funding can be countered."

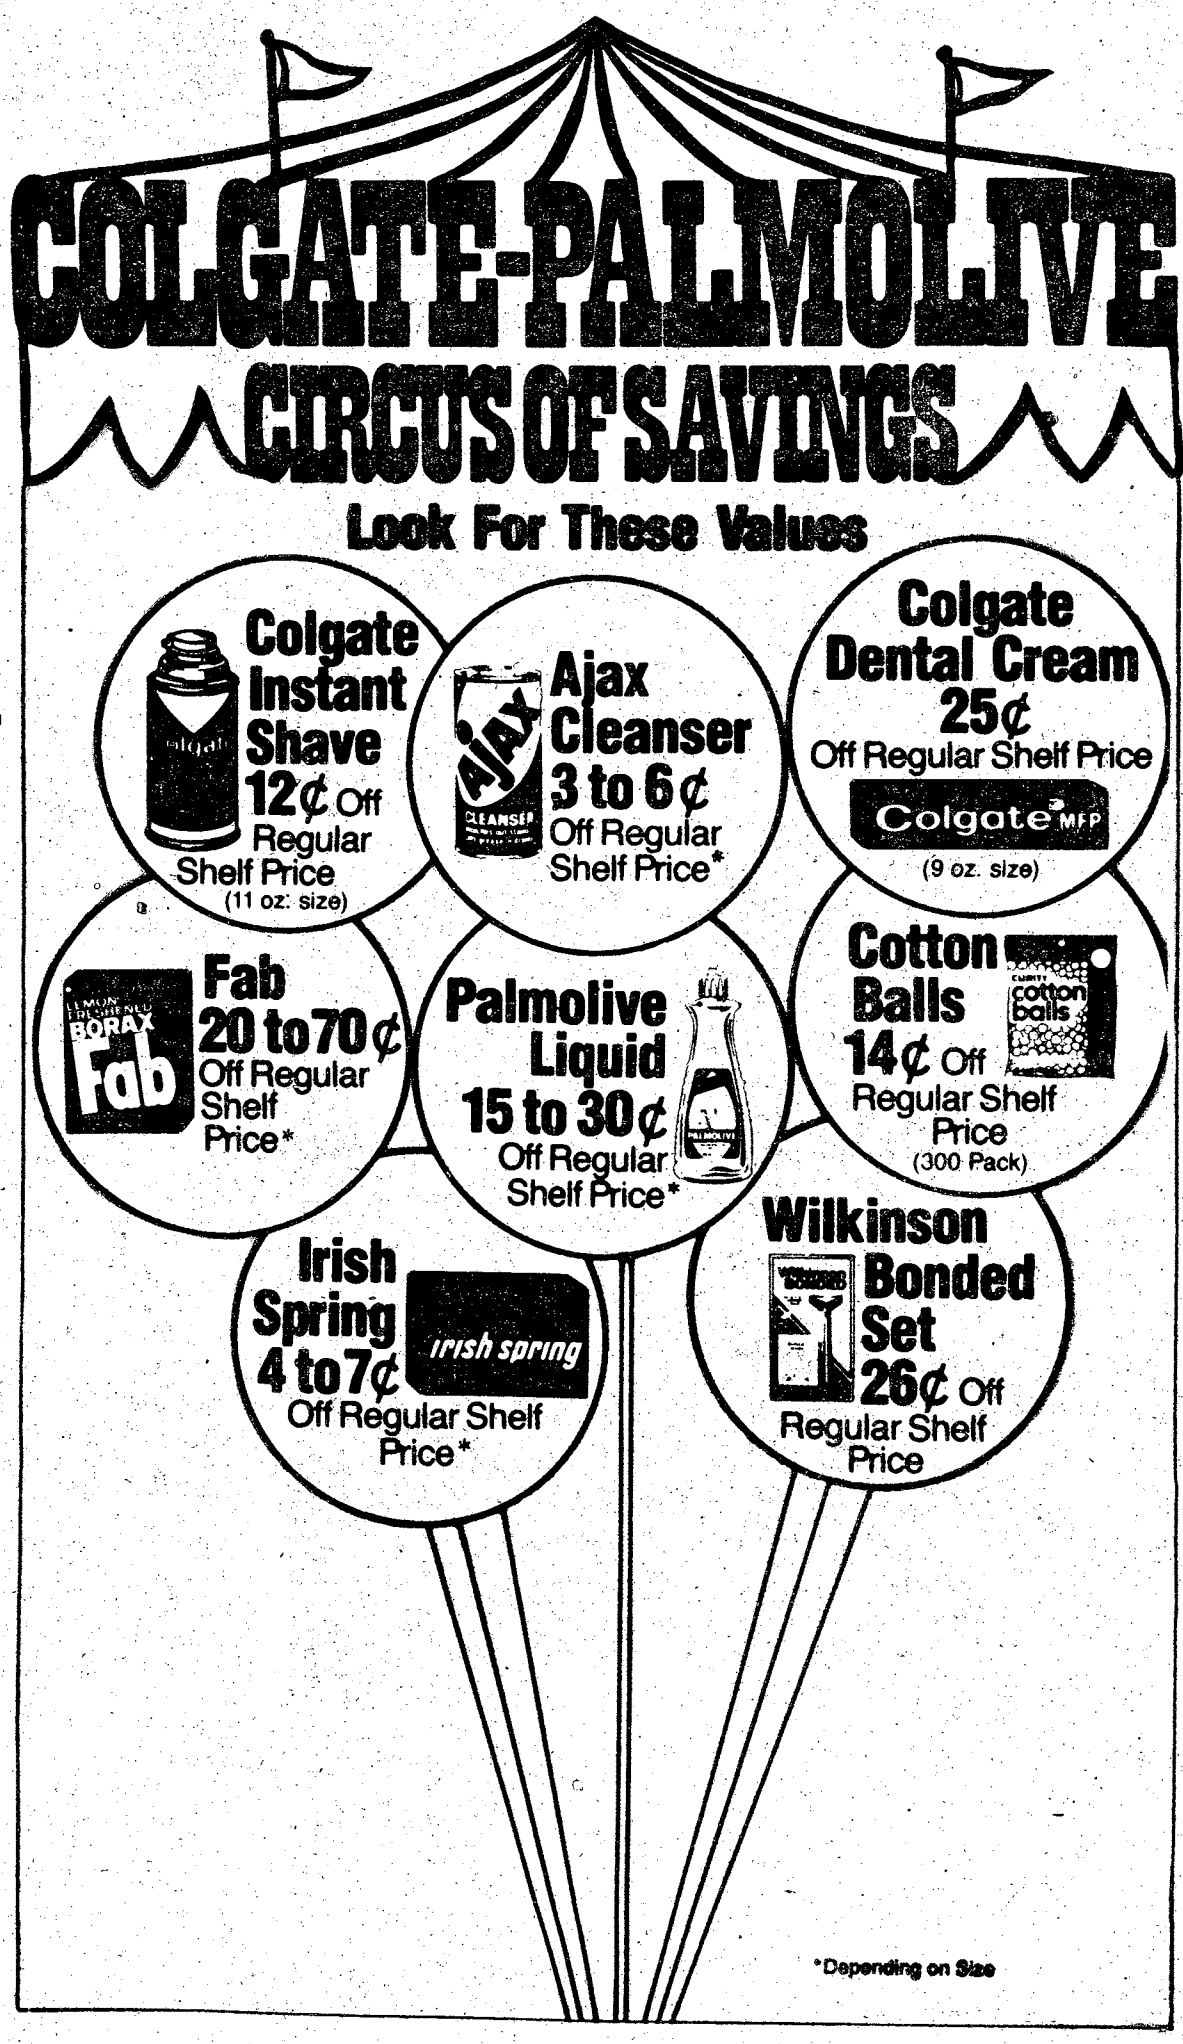
For the past two years Congress has rejected the previous administration's proposals to eliminate the subsidy.

It took a House-Senate conference to give the okay for continuation of the subsidy in FY 77. The Senate had voted to knock out the subsidy while the House gave its approval to continue the appropriation.

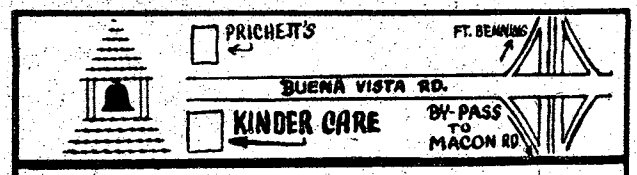
After extended debate in September 1976 between the Senate and House, conferees approved the subsidy for another year.

While the FY 77 Defense Authorization Bill provided for the continued appropriation, it directed that the Defense Department improve management and operations of the commissary in order to reduce the subsidy.

Last year the Defense Department request $312 million for the subsidy and this year's request is for $309 million.



That money is used to pay the salaries of civil and military store workers. The money that pays for the daily operation of the commissaries comes from the sale of food and merchandise.



Nichols said the Defense Department's approach to commissary management "is more businesslike."

He pointed out that there has been a reduction in employee overhead costs in the commissary stores. Savings were achieved with more use of part time and intermittent employees and a reduction in full time employees.

Nichols commended the services for introducing "a stringent training program for commissary managers which is resulting in sounder management of individual commissary facilities."

Nichols said the commissary system is "an integral part of maintaining the military as an attractive career for young men and women of America — supplement to pay, retirement and other compensation."

197th takes to the field in force

Sp4 James Downing, a TOW gunner in the Anti-tank Company, 3/7th Inf, tracks an "enemy" tank.

Story and Photos by Ron Fowler

Every unit from the 'Forever Forward' 197th Inf Bde was represented in the field last week as the soldiers of the 197th embarked upon their first Command Post Exercise (CPX) of the new year.

The major aim of the CPX was to develop proficiency among all headquarters' staff sections in the planning, directing, conduct and support of tactical operations. The goal of each headquarters is a well-trained, cohesive staff that is capable of performing in any tactical situation and in any area of the world where the command might be deployed.

"A large-scale CPX is a sure-fire way of determining how well a staff section is capable of operating in a combat situation," stated Sgt. Gary Bott, safety NCO in the S-1 section of brigade headquarters. "It gives us an indication of both strong and weak points from a tactical standpoint."

The CPX also afforded the 'Cottonbalers' of the 3/7th Inf an opportunity to conduct a battalion-sized Field Training Exercise (FTX) as part of the field problem.

"The field problem that we took part of during the CPX sort of geared us up for a big upcoming event — our Army Training and Evaluation Program," commented Sp4 John H. Eldridge, a gunner in Mortar Co, 3/7th Inf. "It's going to be held at the end of this month. And believe me, it's going to be some kind of field problem!"

So as soon as all the missions were accomplished, the tents, the maps and the typewriters from the brigade's staff sections were returned to Kelley Hill from the woods of Ft. Benning, and some tired but pleased personnel packed up to return to routine duty.

"Working in the field and working in an office are two entirely different things," concluded Sgt. Richard Langley, a legal clerk from the 197th's Legal Office. "But we have to be able to function the same out there as we do here on Kelley Hill. And CPX's like this prepare us for the real thing — it's good training for us."

"Cottonbalers" from Co B, 3/7 Inf take cover before an assault during their FTX held in conjunction with the 197th Inf Bde CPX.

By Denny Blankenship

Warmer weather seems to be responsible for the increase in fishing activity around the valley area. Don't be mislead though, very few fish are being caught. It takes a long time for the water temperature to rise and just because we have a coupla nice days doesn't mean the fishing will improve immediately.

Sonny Harmon, local bass pro and businessman states, "The water temperature is now around 44 degrees. You can count on a one degree increase in that temperature for each day of nice weather we have. So figure it out, when the water temperature approaches 60 degrees, the fishing will be excellent." Thanks Sonny, we'll keep it in mind.

While we're at it gang, let's don't go off half-cocked when conditions do get right. Think back to last year. Where did you catch fish? What were the conditions at the time? If you caught fish last spring in a certain area under certain conditions, duplicate it again this year. Chances are you'll be successful again. For those of you who weren't so lucky last spring, lots of luck.

Seriously now, one thing you should do is keep a fishing log and note all the conditions for a certain area and the circumstances involved. Fish are creatures of habit. Those fishermen who are serious keep tabs on their quary and invariably outsmart him. Fishermen can't remember everything. In fact we're lucky to remember anything. So write it down gang, your catch will improve.

A group of kids were playing in my yard the other day and I overheard the following: "If you give me a piece of your candy my little brother here will imitate a bird." "What does he do chirp?" "Oh no, nothing that fancy, he just eats worms."

A visiting state biologist dropped an unofficial hint to post game officials that there may not be a Spring Turkey season this year. If this pans out, sorry about that folks. I know a lot of you were looking forward to bagging ol gobble beak. Oh well, better luck next year. I'll keep you posted on this.

Ponder this until next week: In a gun factory, a great bar of steel was suspended vertically by a delicate chain. Nearby, a bottle cork was suspended by a silk thread. Could the cork set the steel bar in motion?

The cork was swung gently against the steel bar, the bar remained motionless. But this was repeated again and again. In ten minutes the bar gave evidence of feeling uncomfortable, a "nervous chill" ran over it.

Ten minutes later the chill was followed by vibration. At the end of half an hour, the great bar was swinging like a pendulum. Yet there are people who dare assert that they exert no influence in the world.

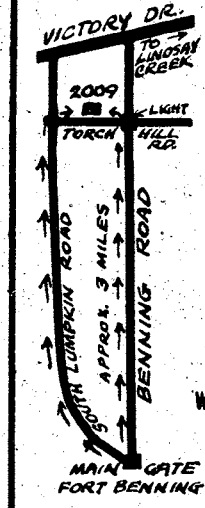
Some Vet benefits tax-exempt



With tax-payers again involved in their annual struggle with income-tax forms, Georgia Veterans Service Director Pete Wheeler this week is reminding veterans and their families that certain benefits they may be receiving are exempt from taxation.

Among these tax-exempt benefits are compensation, pension and educational assistance, including subsistence payments to vocational rehabilitation trainees. These monthly payments do not have to be reported on federal income tax returns.

Also exempt are death benefits paid to veterans' survivors, VA grants to service-connected veterans for specially-adapted homes and automobiles, and special clothing allowances paid to service-disabled veterans whose clothing is subjected to excessive wear due to their use of prosthetic or orthopedic appliances.

Dividends and proceeds from government life insurance policies are also exempt from federal income tax, but the interest earned on insurance dividends left on deposit with the VA is not exempt and must be reported on both federal and state tax returns.

McGraw program provides help for entire Community

By David Myers

The Army looks after its own whether it be military or a dependent. In many cases the services provided to military personnel and their dependents are the result of long hours worked by dedicated volunteers.

Such is the case with the McGraw Manor Community Life Program, which provides services for the McGraw Manor community of 952 families through the work of community volunteers. The aim of the program is to help these families feel they are a part of a real community instead of temporary residents on a military post.

Currently McGraw Manor offers several programs that are very worthwhile to the community. The Tiny Tot program, headed by Myrna DeJesus, assisted by seven volunteers, is designed to teach the three and four-year-olds of the community many of the things that most children don't learn until they are in kindergarten or the first grade. It also introduces the children to what school is going to be like when they start so it's not such a big transition from being home with Mom to being in school with other children.

Dental "plaque," portrayed by Aaron Hudson, and the "Sweet Sisters," Allison Hunt and Kim Lucas (r), attack the tooth in a skit performed by the Faith School Drama Club members this past week at all of the post schools. The play, "A Tooth, The Whole Tooth, and Nothing But the Tooth" was produced under the auspices of Ft. Benning's Oral Health Control Center in conjunction with National Children's Dental Health Week.

The community also has Reception and Welcoming Committees, headed by Cynthia Ivey. The Reception Committee provides volunteers to answer the telephone for the Community Coordinator and the Community Chaplain. The ladies also do typing, filing and serve as an informate to people who call or drop by the trailer needing information or directions.

The Welcoming Committee consisting of eleven volunteers, headed by Jackie Zimmerman, personally welcomes each newcomer to the community. They hand out Welcome Packets containing information about the Tri-city area and answer any questions the incoming families may have.

The community has a weekly newsletter published through the efforts of Mary Nordwall, Association President that is distributed to each resident of McGraw Manor. This newsletter contains happenings on post, in McGraw Manor, also classified ads and other helpful tid-bits of information.

Also there is TOPS (Take Off Pounds Sensibly) conducted on Monday nights by Marie Gallagher and an Exercise Class (Belly Dancing) on Tuesday night by Louise Stone. English Speaking Classes are offered each Tuesday evening for those who are either having trouble speaking English or just learning the English language, conducted by Ann Brandenburg. A Scout program for boys and girls is offered several days during the week headed by Karl Brandenburg and Breeze Farr.

Currently the community is in the process of starting several other programs including a ladies basketball and volleyball league; Saturday morning matinees at Sandhill Theater for the children (transportation to

Washington's Birthday Message

Washington's Birthday is the first three-day holiday after the Christmas season, and many people will be planning extended trips to visit relatives or friends. Many more will stay home and enjoy their vacation locally. Regardless of where you plan to go, the streets and highways will be heavy with vacation traffic.

Privately-owned vehicles continue to be the greatest single cause of accidental deaths, and this holiday period is no exception. Vacationers frequently overextend their driving limits to reach their destinations early, and then leave for home late, driving for long periods of time with no rest. Even if you are a safe and careful driver, there are many on the road with you who aren't. Wearing your seat belts can greatly increase your chances of coming out unharmed, should you be involved in an accident.

People are our most valuable resource at Ft. Benning, and we cannot afford to lose anyone. I urge everyone to buckle up, drive safely and respect other drivers. Have a safe and enjoyable holiday.

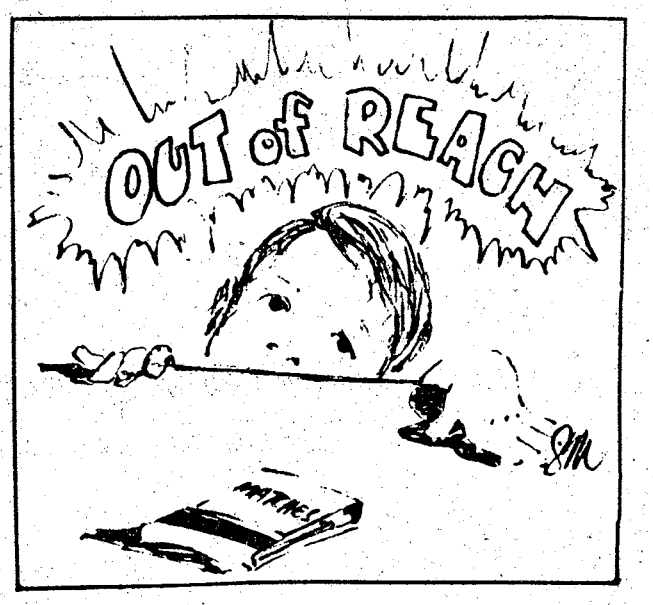
Annual Girl Scout cookie sale begins

In keeping with a delicious tradition, Girl Scouts will be offering cookies for sale to the post population this weekend.

Special booths will be operating in the Mini-Mall from 9 a.m. until 5 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday and at the National Bank of Ft. Benning from 4 to 6 p.m. on Saturday.

Mint, sandwich creams, shortbread and peanut patties will be available.

This annual sale gives the Ft. Benning community a chance to satisfy their sweet tooth.



The proceeds from the sale supplement the individual girl scout troop's funds and make possible an enriched program for the youth of our military community.

Accidents claim highest total of children killed yearly

What kills more children in the United States than polio, heart disease, TB, pneumonia, leukemia, kidney disease and intestinal diseases combined? Cancer? Cerebrovascular disease?

Today's number one child killer is the ACCIDENT. Accidents claim the lives of approximately 15,000 children under 14 years old anually. That's about 40 children per day. What is even sadder is that almost all of these accidental deaths could be prevented, if these children were either protected from, or educated to cope with the hazards they encounter.

When your child is young, he must be constantly watched, since he cannot recognize potentially dangerous situations. He might just as easily put a piece of broken glass in his mouth as a piece of candy. The electrical wall outlet may fascinate him more than his own toys. The handle of the frying pan may look like a great thing to grab, especially if he sees his mother grab it. In fact, anything in and around your house that is within reach will probably be picked up, explored, or tinkered with. You may not notice your child's interest in a particular object until one day you find him seriously injured or even dead as a result of his curiosity.

As your child matures and begins to learn more about objects and their relationships, your responsibility shifts more from protecting him by separating him from the hazards, to educating him in the reasons why he should be careful. In these stages the child must begin to learn why he can't ride his tricycle in the street, and why he must stay away from open wells and streams. If he fails to learn why he must be careful, he will be unable to associate hazards he may encounter later with the proper precautions he must take.

Life is survival, and children should learn about survival at a very early age. If not they may not live to be adults.

The McGraw Manor Family Chapel Program enjoys the services of two Chaplains. The community Chaplain is David Myers, who is officed at the Community Life Trailer, and assigned to 2nd CS Hosp, 34th Med Bn. The Catholic Chaplain, Father Dembicki, is assigned to the 197th Inf Bde and conducts Sunday Mass.

Several programs are offered by the Chapel staff. Regular Sunday Services at McBride School include Protestant Sunday School at 11 a.m. Catholic Religion Classes (CCD) at 10 a.m. and Mass at 11:30 a.m. The Protestant service is at 9:45 a.m. at the McGraw Manor Sandhill Chapel No. 4 at the corner of Scott Avenue and 3rd Inf. Div. Rd. Other programs include counseling, Marriage Growth Groups, Workshops, Retreats, Instruction Classes, Women of the Chapel, and Summer Bible School.

To keep these programs going takes a lot of time away from the volunteers day, sometimes a hundred or more hours a month are put into community work by each volunteer. Many times all they receive in return is a thank you, maybe a letter of appreciation and most of all a warm feeling deep within them knowing they have accomplished something and helped a fellow military family.

Library Children's Story Time

The Main Post Library has a story time for children, ages 2 - 6, every Thursday from 10:30 to 11 a.m. Books may be checked out after the story. It's a great time to teach your child to be interested in books, reading and the library at an early age.

Editor's Note: The following article is the third in a series of six concerning dental health and your children. These articles are presented in conjunction with National Children's Dental Week.

My neighbor has told me about her little girl's dental problem called "nursing bottle mouth." How can I make sure my baby doesn't have it.

Putting very young children to bed with a nursing bottle is a sure way of bringing about early decay of the teeth. It is important to avoid fruit juices, formula and soft drinks in the baby's bedtime bottle. Even milk left in the mouth while the baby is sleeping can cause decay. The sugar in these liquids can be a serious threat to a baby's teeth. When sugary liquids are taken in the bottle, the bacterial plaque that forms continuously on everyone's teeth combines to form acids that attack the enamel of the teeth. Continued, frequent acid attacks eventually cause tooth decay. The longer a child is given a bedtime bottle, the greater the damage to the teeth. If the child must have a bottle at bedtime, fill it with water.

A tip of the stetson to Archangel (ex-Guitar Man) for this story:

You're into CB and going to Germany — can you use your citizens band radio there?

The answer is yes, but first you have to get a Federal Republic of Germany (FRG) license. To qualify for an FRG license, a US soldier, civilian employee or dependent must first have a CB license from the US Federal Communications Commission (FCC). Incidentally, the FRG license for a mobile or fixed station is only good within the boundaries of West Germany. It is not valid traveling to West Berlin or anywhere outside of the FRG.

An application for an FRG CB license (AE Form 3477) can be obtained by a CBer having an FCC license from the 5th Signal Command's Communications Service Branch, Bldg 5813, Taukkunen Barracks, Worms, Germany, APO NY 09056. An agreement between the FRG and 5th Sig Com has cut filing procedures down to this one simple form.

However, you're still not set. The Fernmelde Technisches Zentralamt (FTZ) requires FCC recognized CB equipment be modified to meet their specifications for use in the FRG. The FTZ is the West German equivalent of the FCC. It costs approximately DM 50.00 (about $21) to modify stateside units and to get the FTZ users license.

License fees are handled by the German postal authorities (German Bundespost). Cost is DM 5.00 (about $2.10) a month for operation of a mobile station and DM 15.00 (about $6.30) a month for a fixed station. Fees can be paid monthly to the German Telecommunications Officer upon receipt of the bill.

You are not authorized to use power amplifier units, single sideband systems or directional antennas in the FRG; CB operations are limited to the following frequencies: 27.005 MHz (Ch 4), 27.015 (5), 27.025 (6), 27.035 (7), 27.055 (8), 27.065 (9), 27.075 (10), 27.105 (12), 27.115 (13), and 27.125 (14). Channel nine (27.065 MHz) is used as an emergency channel.

Violation of FRG laws, rules and regulations on CB operation is subject to punishment that may include a fine, imprisonment and confiscation of your equipment.

Selected exchanges in Germany are carrying CB radios and accessories. AAFES Europe is not authorized to grant FRG CB licenses. However, application forms and other pertinent information will be given to customers at the time of purchase.

Benning ID card checks protect your benefits

Some people misunderstand the on-going program of checking ID cards in various locations on Ft. Benning. These checks are being made to insure that facilities which are operated for military persons and their dependents, both active duty and retired, are not being utilized by unauthorized persons.

Further, many people are not aware that these ID cards are the property of the United States government, and that these cards, when found to be invalid, can be confiscated by Commissary and Exchange employes.

All sponsors should recognize their inherent responsibility to insure that their ID cards, as well as the cards of their dependents, are kept current and unmutilated. It is also the responsibility of the sponsor to inform his dependents of this on-going program and to insure that they cooperate with the program.

Once again, the rules of the program are relatively simple. When an individual approaches an entrance to an activity where an ID card is going to be checked, he or she should completely remove the ID card from the wallet or purse and hand to the ID card checker. If the checker determines that the card is valid, it will be immediately returned to the person, who then may enter the facility. If there is something wrong with the card, however, it will be confiscated and a receipt given to the individual. This receipt cannot be used in lieu of an ID at other locations but should be taken to the servicing ID card facility and arrangements made for a replacement card.

New phonecenter to help Benning residents

"By picking up their own telephone sets a customer will be able to save at least 25 per cent on their installation charges," stated Southern Bell District Manager Ben Williams, when describing the benefits of a Southern Bell phonecenter recently established at Ft. Benning.

"The new phonecenter located in Bldg 1687 (on the corner of Gilliespie and Marchant Streets, across from the Bargain Store), will be open Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. and 2 p.m. to 5 p.m. Sam Cannon, a Southern Bell Supply Serviceman will be on duty at the phonecenter to provide the telephones for our customers," Williams said.

Telephone subscribers in the post family housing areas can pick up their individual telephones which are ready to plug in for use in their homes. Eighty-one per cent of all homes have been prewired for these telephones.

The remaining units will have special jacks installed as needed. If Southern Bell receives disconnect order and the home doesn't have a jack, then the installer-repairman will make the necessary changes when he visits the home to disconnect the phone.

Customers may order their telephone service by calling 322-9021 or by using a telephone in the phonecenter which is connected directly to Southern Bell's downtown Columbus business office.

"In addition to being able to pick up telephones on post, arrangements have been made for Ft. Benning customers to pay their telephone bills and deposits at the National Bank of Fort Benning. Being able to make these payments on post should be a great convenience for our Ft. Benning customers," Williams added.

Platoon Sergeant has the ear for leadership

By Bill Walton

"Availability to the troops and learning to be a good listener are keys to successful leadership," notes SFC Leon Dantzler, platoon sergeant, 690th Med Co (Amb), 34th Med Bn.

Listening to both complaints and suggestions pays dividends for all those in leadership positions, especially small unit leaders, according to Dantzler. Dantzler tries to instill independence in his platoon and teaches them that someday they will be the boss and will be making the decisions.

SFC Dantzler has spent 22 years in the medical corps and has held many positions including aidman, wardmaster, cook, platoon sergeant and first sergeant.

Dantzler's present position is that of platoon sergeant. He is responsible for 26 soldiers, 12 ambulances and a quarter-ton truck.

This is Dantzler's third tour at Ft. Benning. One of his previous tours here was as a Drill Sergeant at Harmony Church. He graduated from Drill Sergeant School at Ft. McClellan, Ala. in 1958. His tour as a Drill Sergeant was the only time that he had been away from the medics.

Dantzler's hobbies include softball, handball and ping pong. His main hobby is the CB radio. Dantzler feels that a CB set opens up a whole new world to most people and his biggest enjoyment is the person-to-person communication that the CB allows him. Although his set is mostly for fun, he has used it twice to get help in emergency situations. Once he got help for a man whose car was on fire and another time he used it to get an Army MEDIVAC helicopter to pick up an injured soldier. Dantzler is the farewell committee chairman of the Ft. Benning CB Club.

SFC Leon Dantzler gives some tips on compass reading to PFC Gregory Qually and Pvt. Robert Slayton. As part of their field training, the medics of the 690th are required to locate simulated casualties using a compass and a map.

It's the driver

It isn't the car that begins to whine
When forced to stop for an old stop sign —
It's the driver.

It isn't the car that will take a drink,
Then quickly lose its power to think —
It's the driver.

It isn't the car that fails to heed
The dangers of reckless, discourteous speed—
It's the driver.

It isn't the car that steps on the gas
And causes an accident, trying to pass —
It's the driver.

A car may be bent and twisted awry,
But it isn't the car that will have to die —
It's the driver. (Author Unknown)

VA Q&A

Q — I am a World War II veteran covered by a National Service Life Insurance Policy. In the event I become disabled, must I continue making premium payments on this policy?

A — All NSLI policies issued beginning with World War II, provide for a waiver of premium payments for policy holders who become totally disabled before age 65. If you become totally disabled and are prevented from working for at least six consecutive months, you should apply for a waiver of your premiums.

Q — As a veteran's widow, I was drawing a pension from the Veterans Administration until I remarried. Since my second husband died recently, I wonder if I can get back on the pension roll?

A — Yes. Under current law, a formerly eligible widow can regain her pension if the subsequent marriage ends in death or divorce — provided her income and net worth do not exceed income limitations.

Vol. 36, No. 24 | "A Ledger-Enquirer Newspaper published in the Interest of the Personnel of Fort Benning | Feb. 25 - Mar. 3rd, 1977

Off-post uniform policy clarified

Recent spot checks of downtown facilities have revealed that many Army members at Ft. Benning are wearing fatigues and other work uniforms in civilian establishments in violation of policy.

Only Army Green, tan or khaki duty uniforms are authorized to be worn in establishments off post.

Soldiers living off-post may wear uniforms to include fatigues, mess or hospital whites or flight suits only while traveling between their place of residence and post.

Convenience shoping off post, such as stopping to pick up a quart of milk or to gas the car while enroute is permissible, but only immediately before or immediately after duty hours.

The fatigues are a work uniform, and as such are to be worn only in the performance of duty.

The military police and designated NCOs will conduct uniform checks on a continuing basis and violations will be reported to appropriate commanders.

Dressing for weather key to warmth

By William Darrell

Personnel at Ft. Benning are beginning to adjust to the colder weather and lower temperature settings. Initial indications are that the savings in energy will be significant. In the process of adjusting, we learned something about ourselves; most of us did not know how to dress for cold weather.

In order to keep our bodies comfortably warm, we must dress with the weather in mind. The old adage "more is better" is not always true. The best way to be comfortable is to have insulation clothing next to the skin. Much as in home insulation where loosely packaged fibers have millions of dead air spaces to trap heat, our clothing should serve the same purpose. A snug but not tight-fitting, article of clothing should be worn next to the body. This will allow for dead air space between our body and clothes. Body heat will warm the space and help keep us warm. The clothing article should be made of cotton or quilted nylon; either material has millions of dead air spaces.

Over the cotton/quilted nylon article should be a layer of wool and over that an outer garment that will cut the wind. It is best to dress in layers so one or more may be removed if the temperature increases or when our increased activity causes us to become too warm. Keep in mind what our job will require us to do each day and dress accordingly.

A point to remember is that most body heat is lost from the wrist area, neck, face and head. If we can wear a neck scarf, hat and gloves on our job, then by all means we should do so; especially, if our duties require extended periods of exposure to the elements, such as guard duty, range firing or field exercises.

A good start to keeping warm is a proper diet. Our bodies can't produce maximum heat without the right food. Don't overeat, but eat well balanced meals.

Cooler temperatures will be here for a while longer. Medically speaking, it is healthier for us; and if we follow these simple guidelines, we can make adjustments to the cooler temperatures with little discomfort.

Black women played vital role in US history

By Joyce Walker

Prior to the declaration of the Emanicpation Proclamation on January 1, 1863, a strong character was starting to make her presence known in more than one community. In the history of the United States no more heroic work had been done than that performed by the Black women.

It is natural to mention first, those who were interested in the struggle for freedom. Outstanding among the heroines of anti-slavery was Harriet Tubman. She not only freed herself from bondage, but afterwards made nineteen trips to the South, expecially to Maryland, helping more than three hundreds slaves to make their way to freedom.

She was the daughter of Benjamin Ross and Harriet Green . Of her ten brothers and sisters, she rescued three from slavery. In 1857, at a great risk to herself, she also took to the north her father and mother.

A notable anti-slavery speaker was Sojourner Truth. She not only made eloquent pleas for the slaves, but paved the way for women suffrage as well.

During the Civil War, she helped care for the wounded soldiers, in Washington. She also helped the recently freed slaves who were flocking to the capital half-straved and homeless, to find lodgings and employment.

When the war was over, she perceived that the ultimate welfare of the blacks was to be found not only in the ballot but also in the ownership of land and also education in agriculture and the trades.

During the post-Civil War Years, in a majority of the cities, town clubs were developed that were geared towards working for the good of the black race.

Such organizations received their impulse from the founding, in 1896 of the National Association of Colored Women's Club.

Mary Church Terrell

Mrs. Mary Church Terrell, the first president of the National Association, led the organization during its first five formative years. Choosing as its motto, "Lifting as We Climb", the association and the clubs which were part of it started kindergartens and day care centers for children, schools for nurses and homes for old people. They fought for better schools, worked with deliquent youngsters and provided teachers for the sharecroppers who lived on the old plantations of the South.

In the professions, especially medicine and law, the Black woman has made a rapid advancement within recent years. In 1921, the degree of Doctor of Philosophy was awarded to three women of Negro descent for the first time. They were — Eva B. Dykes, in English at Radcliffe; Sadie T. Mossell, in Economics at Pennsylvania; and Georgiana R. Simpson in German in Chicago.

Jane Cooke Wright-Jones

Another prominent woman, Dr. Jane Cooke Wright-Jones, carried on her father's interest in cancer research. She became director of cancer research, first at Harlem Hospital, then at Bellevue Hospital, New York, and also taught cancer chemotherapy at the New York University Medical Center. In 1960 she received the Spirit of Achievement Award from the Albert Einstein College of Medicine.

In 1939, Jane Matilda Bolin became the first Black woman judge when she was appointed to the court of Domestic Relations in New York City by Major Farello LaGuardia.

Dr. Jane Cooke Wright-Jones

Barbara Jordan, a Democratic representative from the state of Texas, was the first black and the first woman to ever keynote a national party convention.

In no field has the black woman made a greater contribution to American life than in that of education. In the public schools the great majority of the teachers are women. This means that more than half or approximately sixty thousand Blacks now engaged in educational work in the United States are women.

Mary Bethune

One outstanding black woman in the field of education was Mary Bethune, one of 17 children born to poor ex-slaves. With six students and $1.50 she established a Florida College for Blacks and saw it grow into Bethune-Cookman College with a million dollar-a-year budget.

In church work and missions, one has only to look about oneself to see what the Black woman is accomplishing.

Black women have faithfully served in the armed forces from colonial times to the present.

During World War II, 120 black women officers and nearly 4,000 black enlisted women served.

The role of the Black woman has been overlooked in discussions concerning the hertitage of the American Negro, but with time and emphasis, the contributions that have been made through the efforts of Harriet Tubman, Mary Church Terrell, Barbara Jordan and so many others will gain the recognition they justly deserve.

EOD is looking for a few good men

There is presently a shortage of qualified junior enlisted personnel in the Explosive Ordnance Disposal (EOD) field. Because this is an Army wide shortage, EOD has recently launched a major recruiting campaign. This could be an interesting and exciting specialized career opportunity for you.

The EOD field is open to men and women, E-4 and below. The applying service member must have: 1) GT score of 110 if tested prior to 1973, 2) GM score of 100 if tested prior to 1973, 3) Minimum physical profile of 111121; 4) no color blindness; 5) no lost time under Title 10, USC Section 972 within two years of application; 6) no court-martials, past or pending; and 7) at least thirteen months remaining in the service upon completion of EOD training.

In addition, the applicant must be of high moral character and eligible to be granted a secret security clearance. He or she cannot be drawing proficiency pay for a shortage MOS, or serving on an enlistment for which an enlistment or variable re-enlistment bonus has been paid.

EOD training involves two weeks at Redstone Arsenal, Ala. followed by thirteen weeks at Indian Head, Md. After training, a qualified specialist will receive an extra $55 monthly. EOD personnel have the opportunity to work with federal, state, and local law enforcement agencies.

It should be emphasized that, regardless of excellent training and equipment, there remains an inherent danger in handling explosive items. This factor must be given serious consideration when weighed against the advantages and benefits associated with EOD.

If you believe you are qualified and are willing to accept the challenge and risk of this interesting and rewarding career, please call the 89th Ord Det (EOD) at 545-2914/544-4668 for additional information and to arrange for an interview.

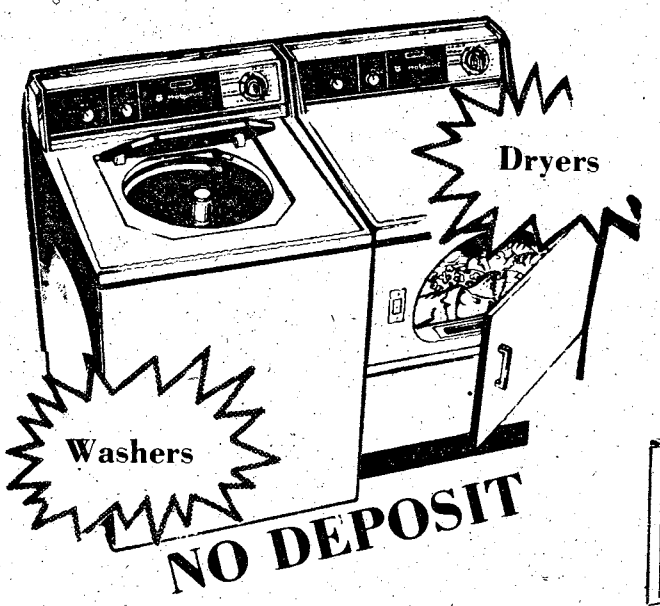
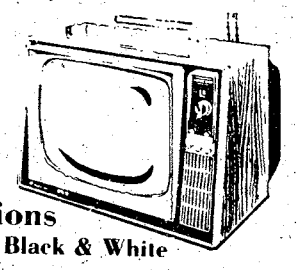
AER benefits covering under graduate educational assistance for unmarried dependent sons and daughters of Army personnel have also been expanded. Loans and scholarships are available to pursue vocational training or to prepare for acceptance by service academies beyond the high school level or to attain a college education.



Application forms are available from the AER offices located in the ACS Welcome Center (Bldg 83) and from the McGraw Manor Community Life Center on Custer Road.

The completed application forms for the 1977-78 school year must reach Headquarters, AER not later than March 15th. Forms may be forwarded without transcripts, but a note must be attached notifying AER that they are following.



For additional information on the educational assistance program and other programs available through AER visit the Ft. Benning AER offices (Bldg 83) or call 545-4043.

PFC David Gottlieb, 690th Med Co, 34th Med Bn, placed 3rd in the light-heavyweight division at the Southern Open Weight-lifting Championships, held 5-6 Feb 77, with a combined lift of 500 lbs. He normally competes in the middleweight class but a miscalculation on the size of his breakfast prior to weigh in put him one pound overweight and he was forced to compete in the next higher class. During the recent Expert Field Medical Badge Qualification test David posted the fastest time (2 hours, 15 minutes) for the 12 mile forced march.

Setting an example for the rest of the battalion and at the same time, looking at it as a personal test, five members of the 2nd CS Hosp, 34th Med Bn recently completed a 25-mile road march in five hours. Sgt. James Morris, Sp4 Theodore Nelson, Sp5 Ray Thrasher, PFC Patrick McIntyre and 2ndLt. Randolph Robbins feel that this particular feat has increased their morale and working efficiency in their sections.

PFC Tom Coniglio, 72nd Engr. A former high school All-State distance runner from New York, Coniglio has been accepted for the All-Army Track Team now being formed in California. Blanket pardon granted for all draft evaders

In keeping with one of his campaign promises, President Jimmy Carter granted a blanket pardon Jan. 21, 1977, to all draft evaders.

This is the 24th presidential pardon granted to members of the Armed Forces since the founding of the United States.

The latest pardon which grants ". . .full, complete and unconditional blanket pardon" to violators of the Selective Service Act, from Aug. 4, 1964 to Mar. 28, 1973, is precedent-setting in its scope. None of the others has approached the scope of President Carter's action.

Persons affected by this pardon total 4522 fugitive draft evaders and 8700 who have been convicted of draft evasion.

The only previous presidential action that dealt with draft evaders was the pardon of selected WWII draft law violators Dec. 23, 1947. Pardon was granted then only after study and recommendation by a three-man screening board.

Prior pardons for desertion have been more frequent and more restrictive.

- Following the War of 1812, deserters were allowed to return to the ranks within four months of the proclamation.
- Proclamations issued in 1830, 1863, 1865 and 1866 stipulated that deserters would be permitted to return to active duty to fullfill their obligations.
- Proclamations in 1924 and 1952 restored citizenship to deserters; however, all sentences were to be carried out.

There are two exceptions to the latest pardon which restores full political and civil rights to individuals who evaded the draft during the specified period. Persons in violation of the Selective Service Act who used force or violence in violating the Act, and individuals who violated the Act as an employee, officer, or agent of the Military Selective Service System are excluded.

Individuals who left the country to evade military service may reenter the United States without fear of prosecution.

In addition, draft evaders who had been offered conditional clemency or granted a pardon under President Ford's Executive Order 11803 or Presidential Proclamation 4313 will receive a full pardon under this latest action.

According to DoD's after action report on the implementation of President Ford's Clemency Program, there are about 10,000 fugitive deserters and 83,000 discharged AWOL offenders; all of these may be eligible for President Carter's pardon.

Get a Load of This

Steel shot loads were required for waterfowl hunting in some areas of the Atlantic Flyway during the recent hunting season, and will be required in certain areas of other flyways in following years. Lead shot is suspected of poisoning some bottom-feeding ducks.

The price of steel-pellet ammunition is much higher, so hunters may plan to load their own shells.

Don't do it, at least not yet, advises the Sporting Arms and Ammunition Manufacturers' Institute.

Key components for hand loading are not yet available. The wads and shot sleeves for current lead loads are not adequate to prevent damage to gunbarrels and possible injury to the shooter.

I want to make sure that my four year old son has good teeth all his life. When should I take him to the dentist for the first time and how should I prepare him for this first visit?

A child should visit the dentist after all of his primary teeth have appeared. The average child will have his full set of twenty primary teeth by the age of three. Because these teeth are so important to a child's future well being and appearance, it is important that the parents brush and floss the younger child's teeth for him. A young child does not have the dexterity or coordination to do a good job of cleaning his own teeth.

You can help your child develop a positive attitude about this first trip to the dentist that will influence his feelings about dental care throughout life. You will want to explain in a very general way what the child can expect. For example, the dentist will examine the child's teeth. He also may clean them and take x-ray pictures to detect any hidden dental problems. During the first visit, the dentist will discuss with you a program for regular dental care for your child, scheduling future visits to meet individual needs.

34th entertains senior citizens

By Bill Walton

"We should not forget our 'first citizens,' the older folks who have contributed so much to our society and way of life, and to whom we all owe a debt," commented CWO2 John Ford, 34th Med Bn Race Relations Officer.

The 34th Med Bn celebrated Black History Week by visiting the first citizens of Pine Manor Nursing Home as a community project. Entertainment and treats were provided to the members of the nursing home.

The entertainment lasted an hour and was well received by the members of the nursing home. Capt. James Sullivan performed feats of magic and card tricks and Sp4 David Williams played the guitar and sang folk music. SFC Felix Miranda also played the guitar and sang Spanish and country music. His rendition of 'Jambalaya' had all the group clapping their hands in unison. The finale was a slide show "Around the world in 20 minutes" by CWO4 Bill Walton.

After the entertainment, the 34th race relations moderators served the patients punch, cake and cookies which were provided by members of the battalion. After everyone had been served, the military personnel mixed with the patients and provided as much personal attention and conversation as possible. The thank yous and compliments from the patients were indicators that the program was a success for all involved.

Last year the battalion celebrated Black History week by erecting a marker on the grave of a famous black musician, Thomas (Blind Tom) Wiggins.

An FCC report currently making the rounds of national publications would have you believe that class D CB radios are going to be rendered ". . . nearly useless for their intended purpose . . ." because of sunspots.

For Sp4 Richard DeMarinis, a CH54 Skycrane crew chief with the 478th Avn Co, it's aviation from the crack of dawn to long after dark. Whether he's fine tuning his 9,000 horsepower helicopter with the 478th or at the Ft. Benning Flying Club where he's a maintenance officer and part time pilot.

What do sunspots have to do with it? Well, it seems that when sunspots hit a peak about every 11 years, coast-to-coast skip becomes possible around the clock. And it'll stay that way for a couple of years.

You see, the sunspot cycle takes only four years to go from minimum to maximum, but it takes seven years to get back to the minimum. A minimum occurred last year and the next peak will come in 1980. So the FCC is predicting that short-range CB communications (the "intended purpose" of CB radio) are going to be greatly interfered with due to the skip which will be present.

To combat this, the FCC is considering opening up new frequencies to the Citizens Radio Service. Frequencies under consideration include the Class E band (around 200 MHz) and the 900 MHz UHF range. However, in the light of past procrastination, it seems unlikely that the FCC will anounce any changes prior to the sunspot peak. And also please note that nowhere has the FCC said that it plans to do away with the present Class D (27MHz) channels.

So regardless of what happens, you can plan on hearing CBers from Petaluma to Poughkeepsie come rolling in with the sunspot skip.

Benning Bowling

Rolling Castle League (Mall)

After 19 weeks of bowling, the Turtles appear to be running away with it as they blasted B.J. & Co. in four tries. The All Stars and Alley Cats remain in a tie for second after dropping three to the Road Runners and Wobbles, respectively. There's only two games separating second and sixth place and it looks like a tight finish in store. Now, if only somebody can slow the Turtles down?

Mary Tennant was the day's top kegler with a 596 series (212 and 203 games) and still holds the high average with a 176. Jackie Carr took the number two slot with a 533 (216), followed by Elizabeth Farmar's 517 (204), Yvonne Hurst's 514 and Betty Crouch who rounded out the 500s with a 504 (209). Clara Daniel managed a 334 series with little effort — but that's rather obvious.

Military Occupational Specialty Test

Editor's note: The Army uses two methods of evaluating enlisted soldiers — tests and enlisted evaluation reports (EER's).

- Tests are intended to be objective and are aimed at measuring the soldier's ability to do specific tasks, and
- Enlisted evaluation reports are intended to be subjective and as such, cover areas which include motivation, leadership and character, that cannot be measured objectively.

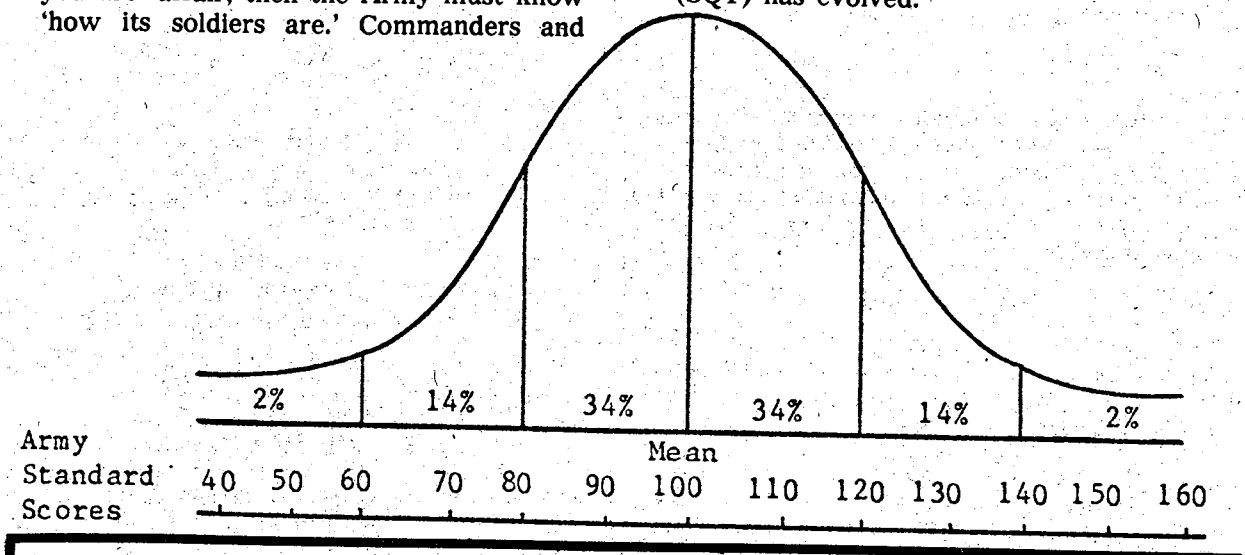
Since the 1950s, the Army has used results of Military Occupational Specialty (MOS) tests to evaluate soldier performance in conjunction with the EER.

The tests were developed by Department of the Army MOS Test Boards and designed to include a cross-section of the duty requirements of a particular specialty — many of which were grouped together under one title. It was a paper and pencil, question and answer type test which required the soldier to select the correct answer from four possible responses.

The soldier's test results were then compared with all other soldiers taking the same test and distributed within the grade range of 40 to 160 with a mean score of 100. (See illustration). The soldiers scoring in the top 50 per cent could expect MOS test scores of between 100 and 160. (The lower 50 per cent — between 40 and 100).

The results of the test did not show how well the soldier could perform the tasks that were required either to survive on the modern battlefield or to contribute to the effective completion of the unit's mission.



While this type of testing is useful to rank soldiers for personnel management and other purposes, the ranking has no meaning unless it is keyed to some criterion or standard of performance required.

Editor's note: By using this type of testing, referred to as 'norm-referenced' testing, it was possible for a soldier to record 50 per cent or less correct responses and still achieve a satisfactory grade (say above 100) when compared with the results of his peer group. The soldier would verify his MOS and also be eligible for promotion even though knowledge of his assigned MOS would appear questionable.

When test results are forced statistically into a 'standard score,' such as the case with the MOS test, it is impossible to determine whether the soldier has met or surpassed a standard which demonstrates the ability to perform job tasks that are critical to combat performance.

If the next war is likely to be a 'come as you are' affair, then the Army must know 'how its soldiers are.' Commanders and leaders at all levels must know whether soldiers can perform their critically important job tasks under combat conditions. A well-constructed test can help to provide this information.

The MOS test is not suited to meet this need; therefore, the Skill Qualification Test (SQT) has evolved.

Ruggers win one, lose one in first home games

By LISA D'LUHY

Rugby, considered one of the most continuous physically demanding sports today, is very much well and alive in the United States, this is especially true with the Flyers Rugby Union Club of the Columbus-Phenix City-Ft. Benning area.

The Flyers RUC played two strenuous double-headers on Saturday and Sunday against hard-driving teams from the University of Georgia and the High Country RUC. The Flyers lost the first game 4-3 against the collegians but bounced back Sunday to defeat High Country RUC with a devastating score of 26-0.

Penalties against the Flyers and a fine team performance by the University, effectively stopped the Tri-City ruggers offense.

The University of Georgia was the first to score in the game when Randy Askins ran in for a try, which is worth four points.

The Flyers first and only score came when Jim Mohney booted a successful penalty kick, the ruggers never got another chance to score against the tough defense of the Georgia team.

A hard driving University of Georgia player trys to dodge Flyer defenders during Rugby match last Saturday at Blue Field. The Flyers were unsuccessful in preventing Georgia from penetrating their line, and were defeated 4 to 3 in their first home game of the spring season. The Flyers bounced back in their second home game against the High Country RUC of Atlanta winning 26 to 0.

The Flyers second team began by scoring early and dominated the rest of their game with good passing, quick speed and timely kicking. They defeated the University of Georgia's 'B' team 10-9. Scoring for the Flyers were Don Hassin, Bard Mansager and Buster Hagenbeck each with a try and Leland Stedge with two conversions.

Sunday's first game against the High Country RUC of Atlanta proved to be more successful, with the Flyers scoring almost at will and successfully keeping the Atlanta team out of the goal. The final score was an astonishing 26-0.

Scoring for the Flyers were Howard Kuschick, Gary Alexander, Bruce Barlow and Tom Greco (scoring twice). The additional six points came from conversions when Jim Mohney made three out of five attempts.

In the second game, the Flyers B team beat High Country by the score of 18-0. Scoring trys for the Flyers were Don Hassin, Casey, Crowder, Don Tibon, Jim Sevster and Buster Hagenbeck, with conversions made by Leland Stedge.

The Flyers Rugby Union Club is still looking for more players. If you are the type of person that would rather play rugby than watch it from the sidelines, contact Russ Bolling at 545-4662 during duty hours or 687-3618 at home.

Skill Qualification Test(ing): What it's

By J. Gorecki

After extensive development and six months of favorable field testing, the Skill Qualification Test (SQT) has become a reality — a viable replacement for the MOS test.

Unlike the MOS test with which commanders were unable to determine whether soldiers could perform their critically important job tasks under realistic conditions, the SQT meets this need.

It consists of a three-part package, but individual tests include one, two or all three of the major components. Each SQT will have a written component and may include a hands-on component as well as a performance certification. (For Career Management Field (CMF) 11, all three major components apply.)

Written Component

The written component of the SQT will consist of 30 to 50 "scorable units" or tasks taken directly from the Soldier's Manual. In most cases, the soldier must work through a problem, using the same skills as would be necessary to do the task on the job, then record the response on an answer sheet. (The size of the written component will be decreased as more hands-on component tests are developed to replace them).

Hands-on Component

The hands-on component is carefully designed to test actual job task performance under conditions close to those a soldier would experience on the job, while not placing an unacceptable burden on the unit conducting the test administration. The tests to begin in April for both Infantrymen (MOS 11B) and Indirect Fire Crewmen (MOS 11C) will consist of six tasks. (More tasks will be added as they are validated through testing.).

Performance Certification

The performance certification portion of the SQT will be completed by the commander for skills which cannot be tested in the hands-on or written portion of the SQT, each commander will certify that the critical skill was performed successfully during the previous 12 months. Such tasks include those which are best observed over a period of time, are impractical to test or are difficult to simulate. Examples would include such tasks as individual weapons qualification or physical combat proficiency.

Responsibility

Commanders and noncommissioned officers, particularily squad and section leaders, are actively involved in the SQT system. They are the key trainers in each unit and must see that all soldiers can perform the tasks contained in the Soldier's Manual.

Commanders must work closely with the local test control officer (TCO) to iron out local testing requirements and conditions. They are also responsible to insure soldiers to be tested receive their SQT Notices promptly so that maximum time is available for training the soldier.

Though soldiers may study on their own time using Soldier's Manuals and TEC lessons after duty hours, the bulk of preparation for SQT will be hands-on training conducted during normal duty hours. This is a major change from the MOS test concept under which commanders often told their soldiers to prepare on their own time.

In short — commanders must insure that time is not only made available for noncommissioned officers to train their men, but that time is available for the training of the NCO's.

A Two-fold Benefit

The time allocated by commanders to preparing for the SQT also serves to increase the proficiency of their units. Since many of the tasks in the SQT are directly related to the Army Training Readiness Evaluation Program (ARTEP), soldiers who are able to perform well on the SQT will help insure overall unit proficiency on the ARTEP.

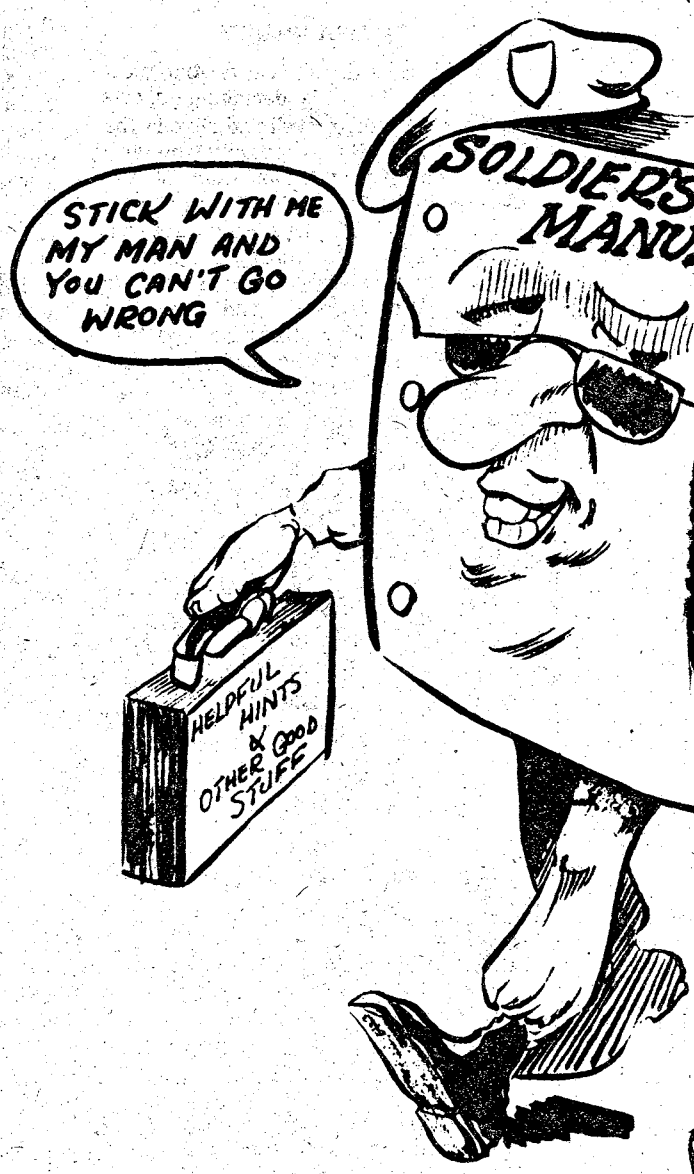
The NCOs Role

"The goal of the corps of NCOs, whose duty is the day-to-day business of running the Army so the officers corps has time to command it, is to continue to improve our Army at every turn."

SMA William G. Bainbridge
Sergeant Major of the Army

"It should be understood by every command sergeant major, every first sergeant, every platoon sergeant and every first-line NCO supervisor that he is personally responsible for the individual training of every soldier within his span of responsibility and control, and that he must train each to the standards set forth in the Soldier's Manuals for the skill level in which the soldier now serves. Moreover, he should see to it that the soldier trains toward earning the next high skill level."

GEN William E. DePuy
Commander, TRADOC



Standards

The SQT scores will reflect GO/NO-GO standards which have been determined by the proponent service school commandant and aproved by TRADOC. Based on his SQT score, a soldier will be classified as not verified (not job qualified), verified (job qualified) or qualified for award of the next higher skill level (eligible for promotion).

Soldiers receiving a "verification" score (60 to 79 per cent) will be considered qualified at the current skill level. Soldiers achieving a "qualification" score (80 per cent or above) and meeting the "on-the-job experience" or noncommissioned officer education system (NCOES) requirements as well as other time in grade and time in service criteria will be eligible for promotion.

If the soldier fails to attain even a "verification" score, he or she will not be considered qualified at his or her current grade, will be required to take the test again in one year and may be barred from reenlistment. Those who fail again will be reclassified or may be eliminated from the service.

Each MOS will be tested annually. However, the soldier will have to take the SQT only every other year (unless he fails to verify). Soldiers desiring to try for a higher score can volunteer to take the test each year.

SQT "shakedown" results revealed

In November 1976, Skill Qualfication Tests were administered to 1,017 Ft. Benning soldiers as part of an Army-wide SQT "shakedown." The results were as follows:

- Only 16.6 per cent verified their MOSs (a 60 to 79 per cent test score).
- None qualified for promotion (80 per cent or above on the test).
- Most failures were on the Written Component.

On the hands-on component for CMF 11, the results were:

Hand grenades	59 per cent GO
Protective mask	60 per cent GO
Claymore mine	39 per cent GO
M-60 machine gun	21 per cent GO
LAW (M-72A2)	78 per cent GO
PRC 77 (radio)	67 per cent GO

In the Army-wide tests, the use of Training Extension Course (TEC) lessons has proved to be a key resource for training individual soldiers. The value of TEC is indicated as follows:

Type Lesson	Pretest Post	Test No.	Tested
Common	32.4%	89.1%	1.722
Armor	39.5%	86.6%	1,098
Field Arty	40.6%	92.6%	1,023
Infantry	45.2%	87.0%	690

l about!!!

Noteworthy

TRADOC has urged soldiers not to fool themselves into thinking the SQT will be only hands-on. SQT includes a written test, but the beauty is that the questions come right out of the Soldier's Manual.

"If a soldier can perform the critical tasks listed in the Soldier's Manual, the SQT will not be difficult. Questions on the written portion are realistic and every effort has been made to provide simulation devices or tools that normally would be available to the soldiers in a real job situation."

Feedback

The SQT has the advantage of being a tool to determine needed training by the test results provided to both the commander and the individual soldier. NO-GO's on specific tasks show that extra emphasis is needed on those critical tasks.

Success of the unit mission is based on the proficiency of each team member doing his or her job to the standards established in the Soldier's Manual.

The key to SQT is training. With everyone involved; soldiers, noncommissioned officers and commanders, working together, each soldier can perform well.

"There's no way the unit commander is going to pass his ARTEP, unless his soldiers pass their SQT's."

How to prepare for the SQT

Maintain year 'round proficiency in your MOS and skill level. Do not wait until "test time" to prepare for the test.

Make sure that you have the required Soldier's Manuals for your MOS and skill level. In addition to your present skill level manual and the ones preceding it, you must also have the manual for the next skill level (the one you will be promoted into).

Obtain a copy of the SQT Notice for the SQT you will be taking. The SQT Notice is distributed to the Test Control Officer (TCO) of every installation and division. From there the notices are distributed through the chain of command down to the individual soldier. Let your supervisor know if you have not received yours.

Train for the SQT. Though you have been training year 'round you will want to focus on those tasks in the notice during the 60 days prior to the test. Your immediate supervisor should conduct during duty hours training which will allow you to prepare for the test. That should include time for training for tasks in the written portion of the test also. After duty hours you may use your Soldier's Manual and TEC lessons to increase your proficiency. The most common error in training is a failure to practice the task until it is mastered. Just like an athlete, you must practice to be good.

Take the SQT. Having practiced the tasks to be tested, you will arrive at the test site confident of your ability to do well. Relax, there will be no trick questions. You will simply have to show that you have mastered the tasks identified in your SQT Notice.

Learn from your mistakes. Within 30 days after you take the SQT, you will be given an Individual Soldier Report (ISR) which contains your personal score on the SQT. In addition to telling you your overall score, it will also tell you whether you passed or failed each task tested.

If you failed a task you should use your SQT Notice and Soldier's Manual to conduct remedial training. Whether you take the same test or another test during the next test period, you are very likely to encounter the same task again.

Practicing the task will not only improve your score next time, but it will make you a better soldier on the job. More important, you will be more ready for combat.

Girl Scouts host International Fair

Folk dances, singing and colorful costumes will highlight the Ft. Benning Girl Scout International Fair tomorrow at the youth activities gymnasium (Bldg 1054) from 10 a.m. until 2 p.m.

Each of the 18 post troops will present songs, folk dances and costumes of a different country that also has a Girl Scouting program, depicting that country in past or present. The girls also will have a Tasting Tea that will permit guests to sample the foods and drink of other countries. Wives of the allied officers attending the Infantry School will be helping the Girl Scouts prepare the food and drinks.

The program is designed to weave a network of friendship among girls around the world. Girl Scouts all across America will be participating in simular programs. The public is cordially invited to attend, for additional information contact the Scout coordinator 545-1806.

"Uncle Sam needs me."

Lawrence J. Ruley II

Lawrence Ruley is a Vulcan crewman.

"Why did I reenlist? The travel is fantastic. And I like field duty. For me, you can't beat the excitement of going out in the field. You know the Army. Every day has a different reason for reenlisting. A real soldier is someone who goes out and does a job. And when he does a good job, he looks for ways to do it better. I'm shooting straight for the top. Command Sergeant Major of the Army is my goal."

Have a chat with your career counselor. You may be surprised to find out just how much Uncle Sam needs you.

Keep a good soldier in the Army. Reenlist.

What is it like to be a soldier ?

In an effort to determine how soldiers view themselves and their careers the Army recently conducted a survey of men and women scattered at far-flung bases all over the world. When the results were tabulated it was found that two thirds of the personnel who responded thought a military career ". . . is special and demands more devotion than most careers."

What part of their Army life bothers them most? Well, frequent changes of station and a perceived lack of social status are bothersome. Long and irregular working hours, occasional isolated duty and overseas tours without their families are considered drawbacks to a military career. Strangely the prospect of being killed in combat is not particularly bothersome. It just "goes with the territory."

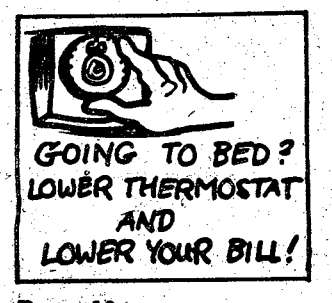
In exchange for 24-hour, 7-day-a-week duty and limited control over his own comings and goings the soldier accepts a generous retirement system and other benefits for himself and his family. Although Congress intended his pay to be "comparable" to that received by someone who might be considered his civilian counterpart, the soldier is convinced he is getting the short end. In fact, it is estimated that 137,-000 career military personnel (mostly in the middle enlisted grades with families and school-age children) "moonlight" at a second job.

Among the younger soldiers the opportunity for "adventure, travel and new experiences" is a prime contributor to the decision for a military career. As they grow older the perception changes to an emphasis on the retirement system as the motivator to continue serving. Most who leave the service prior to retirement cite erosion of benefits as the reason.

Slightly less than half of the soldiers who responded to the survey would recommend a military career to a relative or close friend. An almost identical number felt they had made the right decision and would "do it again." Fifty-five per cent of the respondents believed the Army had at least as many favorable aspects as civilan life while 36 per cent were convinced that Army life was better.

The perception of military service begins long before a recruiter makes his sales pitch. The benefits package is an assumed advantage of military service that has been visible to young people for many years, is reinforced by the recruiter and locked into place in the first enlistment. If, in the name of economy, the administration or the Congress destroys this perception, the Nation will pay a price in increasingly difficult recruitment and dwindling retention. (AUSA)

Work-Study program aids Vet schooling



Veterans who may need additional financial assistance in order to continue full-time schooling under the GI Bill might be eligible for increased benefit payments under the provisions of the Veterans Administration's "work-study" program.

Georgia Veterans Service Director Pete Wheeler said eligible veterans may earn up to $625 by working for the VA a maximum of 250 hours during a calendar quarter. The VA work-study program provides for a number of veterans enrolled in schools under VA educational programs to hold part-time jobs in the agency. Veterans who are service-connected disabled 30 per cent or more are given preference in selection for the work-study program.

Whenever possible, the jobs may relate to a veteran's chosen field of study. In some cases, veterans assist other veterans in the VA's "outreach program," which is designed to acquaint former servicemen with the various benefits available from the VA.

Now in its fourth year of existence, the work-study program last year had more than 47,000 participants nationwide. Currently, in Georgia there are 289 students participating in the program.

Veterans interested in further information about the VA's work-study program should visit their nearest Georgia Department of Veterans Service office.

fins, furs, feathers

By Denny Blankenship

Lake Seminole, a well-known bass producing impoundment located on the Georgia/Florida border generally provides good year-round bass fishing. With this in mind, members of the Post Bass Club loaded up their vehicles, boats, families, friends, dogs, cats, chickens and several tons of fishing paraphernalia and traveled there last weekend to participate in a two-day bass tournament.

Despite high winds which buffeted these dedicated bassers for two days, some pretty good catches were weighed in. M/Sgt. Bill Rumburg caught a 7 pound 7 ounce "hawg" using a Cordell "Spot" to take big fish honors for the tournament. Rumburg caught seven additional fish and captured first place money with a total weight of 14 pounds.

S/Sgt. (Ret) Ted Burzynski "wormed" standing timber for two days and his efforts paid off with 10 pounds of fish. This was good enough for second place. Maj. Ken Collins rounded out the winners by using a top water "Bang-o-Lure" to catch 9 pounds 4 ounces of fish. This weight gave him third place.

That's the serious side of reporting on the Seminole tournament. Now let's get down to the nitty gritty and look at the amusing moments that all fishing tournaments seem to produce, this one being no exception.

During the first day of fishing, SGM Bob Babcock was toolin' along worming some standing timber when he received a hefty strike. In fact, the strike was so hard that Babcock watched in horror as his rod and reel, which had been yanked from his hand, slowly disappeared into the water.

Responding with the enthusiasm of all bassers, Babcock leaped into the water, grabbed his rod and handed it to his startled fishing partner, who was standing in the boat and said, "reel him in." Unfortunately the fish was of sufficient size to straighten Babcock's 5-0 hook and escape. Although he didn't catch the fish, we'll gladly award SGM. Babcock the world's broad jump record into the water.

During the second day of fishing Capt. Jim Wyatt (Ranger Dept) also received a nice strike on a worm. Ol' Jim reeled in the slack line, bent forward and heaved back with all his might to set the hook on "Hawgie John." Jim's heave was so powerful that he toppled out of the boat backwards, entering the water head first. Jim's partner did manage to land the fish though, a whoppin 8 incher.

I know all Rangers are good swimmers and will prove it at any opportunity, but in 52 degree water? You must be kidding!

Most folks are probably wondering whether this was a fishing contest or a swimming contest.

Don't put this down yet gang. There's more. While these events are occurring out on the water, Kate Shepard, the wife of Capt. Charlie Shepard, and my wife Dee are strolling outside their cabin. Lo and behold, what do they find, a set of false teeth. Now these gals are smart and using their heads, they reported to the Park Ranger's office, teeth in hand, in an attempt to find the owner. Not only would the Park Ranger not accept the teeth, neither would any of the bassers.

Now I know this is an embarassing situation for someone and I'm not saying any drinking was going on down there, but you know how fishermen are when they get together. Come on guys, if one of you want to claim your teeth, they're laying on the top of the refrigerator in Cabin No. 5, Seminole State Park. Kate Shepard was even kind enough to write you a note, the contents of which can't be printed.

Ponder this until next week: Always behave like a duck — keep calm and unruffled on the surface but paddle like the devil underneath.

Vol. 36, No. 25 — "A Ledger-Enquirer Newspaper published in the Interest of the Personnel of Fort Benning" — Mar. 4 - 10th, 1977

Heating cuts yield big $aving$

According to Post Utility Chief George Schladensky, Ft. Benning has saved $400,000 within the past four months due to tight restrictions on thermostat settings in post facilities and homes.

More than half the savings have come since January 21st, when emergency fuel operations went into effect.

The emergency operations which are still in effect call for maximum thermostat settings of 60 degrees in administration and office buildings, 65 degrees in family housing and barracks by day and 60 at night, 55 in recreation facilities and 50 in hangars, shops and garages.

Schladensky also announced that the starting date for using air conditioners in post facilities will be delayed to add to the savings. Natural gas is used to run the six power plants which drive most of the post air conditioners.

Annual starting date for air conditioners has been May 15th but it will be slipped as much as possible, and the use of air conditioners may be restricted to certain temperature levels.

The utilities chief added that emergency thermostat settings will be "routine from here on out." He credited post residents with contributing to the savings since October by voluntarily keeping the heat down, but emphasized that "we're not out of the woods yet."

"It's going to take a conscious effort by all personnel on post to insure that our precious resourses are not wasted," he concluded.

Lineman, "Swede" Swiderek, hooks a new telephone line into the ready access terminal as part of his duties with USACC's outside maintenance plant.

By Betty Zimmerman

In recognition of the U.S. Army Communications Command Agency's (USACC) 13th anniversary, March 1st was proclaimed as Communications-Electronics Appreciation Day at Ft. Benning.

Oldtimers would better recognize it as Post Signal, then Office of Communications-Electronics, then U. S. Army Strategic Communications Command (USASTRATCOM) Agency and finally USACC, as their title changed through the years.

Ft. Benning's agency, under the direction of Lt. Col Raymond Elderd, handles the multiple methods of communication on post with its roster of 150 personnel, both military and civilian.

Their diverse duties cover such areas as the MARS station, communication center, air traffic control tower and the dial central office of the telephone exchange. They also register and control all "CB" and amateur radios operating on post, as well as managing and assigning 672 radio frequencies to Ft. Benning units.

The communications center utilizes the UNIVAC DCT 9000 computer to send and receive messages through one of three modes: magnetic tapes, data cards or narrative. They handle approximately 320 messages in an average day, which means 24 hours as the office is manned day and night.

The MARS station has been handling

● Post schools to remain open 2 additional days

Ft. Benning dependent schools will add two days to their calendar this spring to make up for lost time during closures forced by natural gas shortages earlier this year.

The extended school year suggested by Calvin Roush, dependent schools officer, was approved by the Ft. Benning School Board Monday night. As a result the last school day will be June 9th.

Roush cited the requirements for overtime pay for bus drivers and double sessions of kindergarten as key reasons for the decision.

"The approach taken by the Muscogee Schools System which calls for an additional hour of schooling per day to make up lost time just wouldn't be practical in our (Ft. Benning's) situation," concluded Roush.

● Home-basing, advanced assignment policy to continue indefinitely

The Army has extended its "Home Basing and Advanced Assignment Policy" for NCOs and officers indefinitely.

Under the policy, soldiers in grades E-5 through lieutenant colonel who receive orders to short-tour areas where they can not take dependents are told where their subsequent CONUS assignment will be before they leave on their short tour. Whenever possible, the Army says it tries to return a soldier to his current stateside installation.

● Cost-of-living increases 4.8% effective March 1st

Military and federal civil service retirees will get a 4.8 per cent cost-of-living increase effective March 1st. The raise is based on a 4.8 per cent increase in the Consumer Price Index from December 1975 to December 1976. The higher rates will be reflected in checks mailed April 1st.

● Interviews for volunteer Red Cross workers slated

A Red Cross Volunteer training program will be conducted at the Infantry Center Chapel Annex March 15th and 17th at 8:45 a.m.

Interviews will be held in the Red Cross Field Office from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., March 9th-11th. Volunteers can serve in many areas — hospitals, field offices and schools.

The alternative high

By Chaplain Roland F. Day

No one person, discipline or modality has the whole answer to the multi-faceted and complex problem of chemical (drugs/alcohol) abuse. Yet as people concerned about our fellow man, we must help those 'hurting souls' who can respond to a spiritual dimension in their lives to help escape the dilemma of chronic chemical addiction.

Chemical abuse is not just a 'chemical' problem. It is a 'People' problem since people elect or drift into it. In reality the proper and prescribed use of drugs is the basis for many medical miracles including the cure of malaria, tuberculosis, etc. We have been called a drug oriented culture with a 'pill for every ill,' from 'pick me ups' to 'put me downs' that make us feel better fast . . . fast . . . fast.

Our dependency on drugs to avoid suffering and for relief from physical pain unlocks the potential and insidious threat to depend on chemicals to alter mind and mood . . . to make us 'feel good' without really dealing with ourselves and the real problem. Given the quickness of chemical agents and an 'I want it now' philosophy; given the rational that symptomatic treatment by alternating mind and mood helps us to deal with reality; given a spiritual and emotional deficit and group pressure that 'blowing your mind' is the 'in thing' to do; and given the availability of chemical mind altering agents . . . with these given circumstances the results are highly predictable.

Granted life does not perpetuate a 'high' in us. Life has ups and downs, bumps and holes like an unpaved road. However, the dead end street of chemical abuse is not the only alternative. Every human needs some form of 'outside help,' but the negative high of chemical abuse is not the only shot in the arm for those who seek sheer inspiration in life and zest for living. The positive high of 'turning on' to other people and goodness and life itself is the alternate high.

THE NEGATIVE HIGH

A quick chemical 'cop out' to avoid coping with self, life and problems. An escape from reality characterized by:

- Loneliness: A complete turning inward to self and withdrawing from others.
- Distress: Absolute impotence to act, perform or behave in a productive manner satisfactory to self or others.
- Death: The ever-living possibility of a double cross by 'dirty works,' O.D., or physical disability.

23RD PSALM (-)

King Heroin is my shepherd, I shall always want, He maketh me to lie down in the gutters. He leadeth me beside the troubled waters. He destroyeth my soul. He leadeth me in the paths of wickedness for the effort's sake. Yea, I shall walk through the valley of poverty and will fear all evil for thou, Heroin, art with me. Thy needle and capsule try to comfort me. Thou stripest the table of groceries in the presence of my family. Thou robbest my head of reason. My cup of sorrow runneth over. Surely Heroin addiction shall stalk me all the days of my life and I will dwell in the house of the Damned forever. (1).

1. "The Psalm of The Addict," Faith Mission Publishing, 3601 W. Maplewood Avenue, Bellingham, Wn.

THE POSITIVE HIGH

A creative and constructive life force designated to deal with and face reality by enjoying its pleasures and overcoming its difficulties. Characterized by:

- Love: In the midst of loneliness, finding and sharing love with others.
- Action: Getting off the 'dead center' of self pity and moving toward helping others in distress.
- Life: The assurance of self, and the "Faithful" that eternal God is life in all its beauty.

23RD PSALM (+)

The Lord is my Shepherd; I shall want nothing. He makes me lie down in green pastures, and leads me beside the water of peace; he renews life within me, and for his name's sake guides me in the right path. Even though I walk through a valley dark as death I fear no evil, for thou art with me, thy staff and thy crook are my comfort. Thou spreadest a table for me in the sight of my enemies; thou hast richly bathed my head with oil, and my cup runs over. Goodness and love unfailing, these will follow me all the days of my life and I shall dwell in the house of the Lord my whole life long. (2).

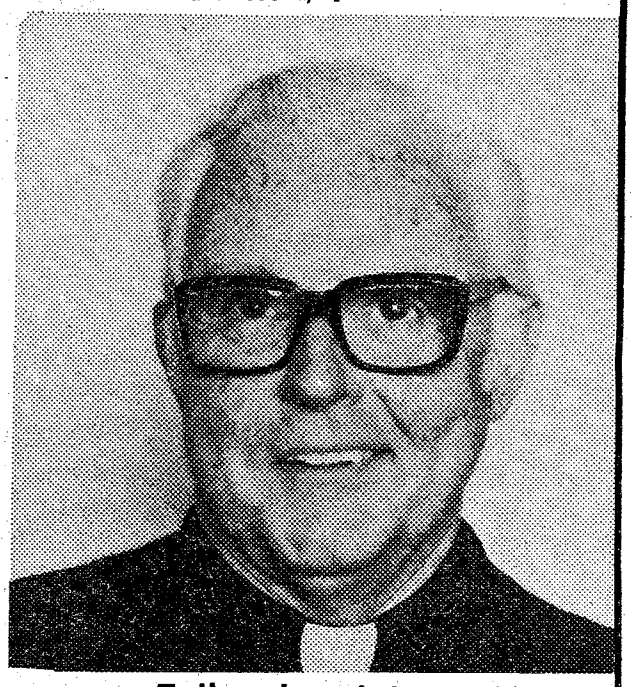
Alcoholism workshop slated

A workshop on alcoholism, featuring Father Joseph Martin, associate pastor of St. Joan of Arc Church in Aberdeen, Md., will be held on post March 7th.



The workshop is sponsored jointly by the Ft. Benning Chaplain Section and the Alcohol and Drug Control Office (ADCO).

The morning session will open at 8 a.m. in the TIC Chapel Annex with an explanation of the operation and structure of the Alcohol and Drug Control Program at Ft. Benning by ADCO Chaplain James Holiday and James Henry, deputy director of the ADCO clinic.

At 9 am the session will be devoted to an address by Father Martin, who will place special emphasis on the social and spiritual dimensions of prevention, addiction and rehabilitation.

Father Martin will present a lecture on the nature of alcoholism at Theater No. 1 beginning at 1:30 p.m. The afternoon lecture is planned especially for unit commanders, non-commissioned officers, other leaders and professional people at Benning. However, the general public is invited.

Father Martin is a noted authority on the subject of alcohol abuse, having been involved in alcoholism prevention since 1959.

Woodruff memorial concert slated

The Columbus Symphony Orchestra will dedicate its March 8th concert to the memory of Columbus business and civic leader James Woodruff, Jr.

The concert will be held in the Three Arts Theater, 1020 Talbotton Road, Columbus, beginning at 8 p.m.

Leonard Pennario, world-reknowned pianist, will be soloist with the orchestra, which will be conducted by Harry Kruger.

Woodruff, who died Oct. 17, 1976 of injuries received in an automobile accident, was active in a myriad of community activities. He was chairman of the board of the Historic Columbus Foundation and national president of the Association of the United States Army at the time of his death. His widow, Peggy, is a former president of the symphony's sponsoring organization, the Columbus Symphony Guild.

The memorial concert is part of the orchestra's regular season and season ticket holders need only present their tickets. Tickets for those who are not season members will be $6.50 for adults and $3.50 for children. There will be no reserved seats.

Tickets will be on sale Saturday, March 5, at Kiralfy's in Columbus Square and Peachtree Mall. The ticket booths will be open from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. at both stores. The box office at the Three Arts Theater will be open Monday, March 7, and Tuesday, March 8, the day of the concert, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., and from 7 to 8 before the concert Tuesday night.

Re-up program places emphasis on quality

If the FY76 Army reenlistment program could be summed up in a few words these would probably be "emphasis on quality." And according to the recently released FY76 reup statistics, this emphasis on quality is working.

DA reenlistment officials say that the education level of first termers and careerists has increased while the number of waivers requested for prospective reenlistees who do not meet basic eligibility criteria has decreased.

During FY76, 80.9 per cent of first terms and 91.7 per cent of careerists who reenlisted had either a high school diploma or GED certificate. In FY74, only 69.5 per cent of the first termers and 75.8 per cent of the careerists had the same education. The number of waivers granted during FY 76 was down about 10 per cent when compared with FY74.

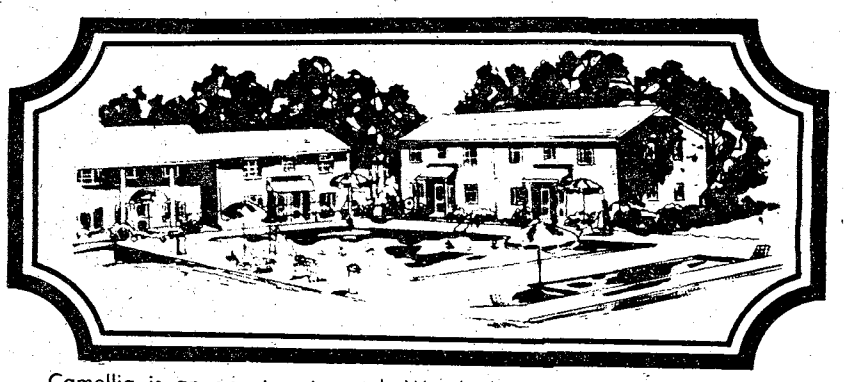
Although quality has improved, only 78.8 per cent of the desired first term reenlistments were accomplished in FY76. DA officials noted three factors that appear to have influenced this shortfall:

- the separation of potential reenlistees into two categories — group I and group II — based on their qualifications
- changing reup eligibility to within 90 days of ETS
- an improved national economy

Group I soldiers were required to have a high school diploma or GED certificate, 100 or higher MOS score, no waivers, and were allowed to process their applications telephonically. Soldiers not meeting these qualifications were placed in group II and were required to apply for reups in writing. It is possible, DA officials say, that soldiers categorized as group II did not like the "group II connotation" and because of that chose not to reenlist.

Although data is not available to make an accurate evaluation, reduction of the reup period of 90 days may have contributed to the loss of some qualified personnel. Some of these persons might have stayed in the Army if they could have reenlisted earlier than 90 days prior to ETS, according to DA officials. (The 0-90 day reenlistment period was designed to reduce turbulence and also reduce PCS costs). Another factor that may have resulted in fewer reups is the improvement of the economy and the declining unemployment rate.

On September 1, 1976, the Army stopped using categories I and II. Soldiers who would have been in these categories are now managed based on the strength status — over, balanced or short — of the MOS in which the reups are desired. Reenlistment applications are now handled telephonically with few exceptions.



DA officials say that although there are currently no plans to change the 90-day reup period, the greatest reenlistment success occurs where both the commander and the career counselor begin to discuss reenlistment options with the soldier well in advance of 90 days.

The 90-day policy, combined with the improving economy and declining unemployment rate, will continue to make the meeting of reenlistment objectives an important challenge, DA officials say. (ARNEWS)

By Betty Zimmerman

The sign on the camouflaged quonset hut at Camp Darby reads "TACTICAL OFFICER," but right below it another sign reads "SFC DAVID R. DALTON."

It's not a mistake. For the first time in its history, the Ranger Department has an NCO as a tactical officer. The 3rd Ranger Co instructor was recommended for the job by the Benning Division Chief and selected by the Department Director.

They cited his outstanding qualities in leadership, knowledge and technical expertise as justification for the unusual appointment.

The senior tactical officer, Capt. John Vines, described the 35-year-old Dalton as "the epitomy of an airborne ranger. Dalton performs his duties in an exemplary manner and his physical fitness, bearing and knowledge set a goal for the Ranger students to strive to achieve," he continued.

Dalton, as class 5-77's "tac," is responsible for their morale, discipline and training. He stays with the class right through all three phases of ranger school. They have completed the "Benning Phase" and are now in the "Mountain Phase" at Dahlonega. Their next stop will be jungle swamp training at Eglin Air Force Base, Fla.

Although he has been in the Army for ten years and has spent 24 months in VietNam, Dalton just completed Ranger School in 1975. His supervisors and his peers agree, he certainly learned his job well and hence earned the selected honor and designation — "tac."

Spies honored by local Jaycees

By Betty Zimmerman

The Phenix City Jaycees honored Assistant Ranger Director Maj. William Spies at their Annual Community Distinguished Service Awards Banquet at Lakewood Golf Course Restaurant recently.

Spies was awarded the community "Outstanding Physical Fitness Leadership Award." Lieutenant Governor Jere Beasley was the keynote speaker at the event in which recognition was bestowed on various community leaders.

Despite a below-the-knee amputation of one leg, Spies is active in youth programs, a leader of men through demonstrated abilities and an inspiration to all who have known and worked with him.

The School Brigade's 5th Bn commander, Lt. Col. Dick T. LeClere, recently won a George Washington Honor Medal and a $50 U.S. Savings Bond from the Freedoms Foundation, Valley Forge, Penn. His award winning letter concerned the integrity and public trust of all leaders both civilian and military. LeClere is responsible for producing future military leaders through the officer candidate program.

By Denny Blankenship

The top seven fishermen from five area Bass Clubs meet this Sunday on Lake Walter F. George. This annual affair, known as the "Super Bowl" to local bassers, brings together the area's finest bass fishermen for a one day tournament.

A lot of prestige is at stake for these anglers (also the right to lie for a year) and you can, but they'll be going all out trying to win.

Boats will launch from Chevella Marina at 7 a.m. and the weigh-in is scheduled for 6 p.m. at the same Marina. Drop by at the weigh-in if you want to see some nice fish.

Representing Ft. Benning in this year's contest are SSgt. (Ret) Bob Bellman, Capt. Bob Kramer, Capt. Arch Caldwell, Jack Tibbs Jr., SSgt. (Ret) Ted Burzynski, Capt. Denny Blankenship and 1st Sgt. (Ret) Willie Goble. Since I'm included, I'm going to short you out this week. Gotta hit the ol fishing hole and find some fish. I'll treat you to the results next week.

The 608th spend the day loading and tying down various vehicles, to include a 25-ton Low-Boy, a D-8 Dozer and a 10-ton tractor. When the plane is fully loaded with cargo, this massive aircraft weighs approximately 764,000 pounds.

Separation reg changed

A change to AR 635-200, the reg on personnel separation, has been sent to the field by DA. The change is intended to clear up some recent problems related to separations.

A few soldiers discharged for "personality disorders" were separated as a result of mental status evaluations made by medical authorities. In these cases there was no indication in the commander's comments that soldier performance or conduct was below honorable standards.

The reg change requires that type of discharge and character of service be determined by a soldier's overall performance of duty and conduct during the last period of enlistment. Mental status evaluations and other medical evaluations made during that enlistment will not be used in determining character of service.

If a soldier is found unsuitable for military service because of a personality disorder, a psychiatrist must make the diagnosis. Formerly, psychologists and social workers had been able to diagnose personality disorders and recommend discharge.

about 60 radio messages a day but due to a new set-up in the AIT area, this amount is steadily increasing. USACC has included blank radio message forms in the AIT soldier inprocessing procedure and last week received over 200 additional requests.

USACC indoor maintenance worker, Al Almendares connects a number on the 6,000 line main distribution frame in the main-post telephone exchange center.

This free service is a troop morale booster as well as a means to keep the radio operator's training current.

The air traffic control tower at Lawson Army Airfield is run by 25 military personnel and two civilians from USACC. They control from 350 to 400 flight operations per month, as well as maintaining and operating the NAV-AIDS (systems used for monitoring, testing and evaluating the tower and radar operations).

Ft. Benning has three telephone exchanges run by USACC — main post, Harmony Church and Milliken, which is near the hospital. Main post and Harmony Church exchanges are automated while Milliken has operators. The main distribution frames are huge; for example, there are 6,000 lines connected in the main post exchange alone.

Naturally there are maintenance people involved in this operation which includes installing maintaining and controlling all military telephones on post. They have what they call the inside plant, which maintains the batteries that power the telephone exchanges, the distribution frames and other equipment located in the centers. Then the outside plant covers the linemen, cable splicers and repairmen.

Put them altogether and you have the USACC Agency where communicating is their business.

Faith school magazine wins scholastic award

The Magazine Journalism class at Don C. Faith Junior High School, here, has won the First Place Certificate for the second consecutive year in the Columbia Scholastic Press Association's magazine contest.

The Faith Review, a magazine the students publish for the student body, rated first out of twelve other junior high school publications, including those that had won certificates in earlier contests.

"I would like to compliment the advisor and staff for their dedicated work which produced two such ambitious, interesting publications in one year," the contest judge said of The Faith Review's December 1975 and May 1976 (Bicentennial Edition) issues.

The publications are judged on four significant areas. Editing, makeup, and page layout, content coverage, art, and general considerations including representation of the student body and community awareness. From a maximum score of 1,000, The Faith Review received 884 winning credits.

Honored Servicemembers

McGill Street, a Ft. Benning street in the Custer Terrace NCO housing area dedicated Feb. 27, 1958 in the name of Sgt. Troy A. With the advent of the energy crisis, more people are turning to their fireplaces as a main source of heat. If you do, keep the following safety tips in mind:

Check to make sure the fireplace was constructed to be used as a fireplace and that it has all necessary lining and clearances.

Don't use gasoline or other flammable liquids to kindle a fire; the flammable vapors can explode. Keep volatile liquids far from the fireplace.

Keep the fireplace damper open to provide for efficient burning and to prevent the accumulation of explosive gases.

Don't burn charcoal or styrofoam packaging in a fireplace. They can produce deadly quantities of carbon monoxide.

If artificial logs — those made of sawdust and wax — are stacked in a fire, they can explode. Never burn them in free-standing metal fireplaces.

Always use a screen around a fireplace. Keep combustible materials, including carpets and furniture, at a good distance.

Warn the entire family, especially children, about the hazards of a fireplace.

Check fireplaces regularly to make sure that all vents and chimneys are functioning properly.

Be sure that all ashes are thoroughly cooled before you dispose of them.

The fire should be completely out before you go to bed.

Benning to celebrate National Nutrition Week

By Betty Zimmerman

Ft. Benning is joining the rest of the country in celebrating National Nutrition Week from March 6 to the 12th.

The Chief of Food Service Division at Martin Army Hospital, Maj. Marcia L. Beasley, and her staff of four dieticians are preparing a post-wide awareness program.

At the USAIC, where physical fitness is expected to be a way of life, sound nutrition of the individual is a basic concern. Service members and their families are encouraged to increase their own knowledge and practice good nutrition in making food choices as a means to fitness. The individual's bonus is weight control.

The week's theme is "Nutrition — Foodway to Fun and Fitness". The attention here will be focused on the fact that a sensible balanced diet, together with exercise, will enable one to achieve and maintain ideal weight and good muscle tone.

Throughout the post, flyers, posters, buttons, and banners will be displayed. At the hospital, a videotape on nutrition will be shown in the lobby and tray placemats depicting the week's theme will be on each patient's food tray. Also radio and television are being used to create awareness as is a booth on weight control to be manned in Peachtree Mall on March 12th from 1 to 5 p.m. This last effort is in conjunction with the Columbus District Dietetic Association.

Altogether, the week's efforts are to emphasize the necessity of good nutrition for the health of all people.

Dexter playground gets a new look

By Arthur Parker

Three years ago the parents and teachers of Dexter School children began a combined effort to raise money for playground equipment.

Realizing that the existing outdoor recreational facilities were geared toward older children, the goal of the campaign has been to provide equipment for kindergarten, first and second year students.

Kindergarteners from Dexter School try the TP swing during recess. The swing is part of the playground equipment purchased by the teachers and parents of Dexter's students.

Spurred on by the possibility that Dexter may have as many as six mini-day kindergartens in the 1977-78 school year, this year's fund raising activities, highlighted by the "Halloween Happening," produced the necessary money to purchase the equipment for the first phase of the multi-year construction program.

Each piece of the new equipment is constructed of pressure-treated, splinter-free wood and is specially designed to develop a child's individual expression as well as physical ability.

The first phase of the program was installed on February 24th consisting of a TP Swing, balance logs and a tire raft.

The purchase of equipment for phase II, next year, and phase III, the following year, will bring larger and more imaginative equipment to the Dexter School playground. Among the pieces that have been selected are a swinging bridge with slide pole, a mini-basketball court and a tree-house.

The spirited cooperation between the parents and teachers has been the single most contributor to the success of the campaign. This is the kind of cooperation that has made phase I a reality, and will make phase II and III a certainty.

Youth programs need more support

A very small number of dedicated volunteers, many with no small children of their own, are keeping alive a great variety of youth activity programs involving hundreds of Ft. Benning children. They could use some help.

LtCol. Jack Barham, Chairman of the Ad Hoc Youth Activity Advisory Committee cites these examples.

SGM Jubal Rodriguez and Mrs. James Kelly have managed the youth swim team, "The Barracudas," for the past six years. The activity has taken countless hours of their free time, and not little expense — transportation, snacks and other little necessities — that mounts up over the months.

LtCol (Ret.) and Mrs. C. T. Keaton have served as coaches, managers and every other capacity for the youth judo team for the last eight years. Under their leadership the team has won many national awards in youth judo competition.

Maj. Lones Wigger, Olympic marksmanship champion, spends two or three nights each week teaching youngsters how to shoot safely and well. His pupils have placed high in many national competitive events.

SFC (Ret) Gilmer Davis coaches the YAC boxing team, which — though less than a year in being — has placed several finalists in the State Golden Gloves competition. Davis's problem is that it is difficult to pay sufficient attention to the young novices who want to learn to box while concurrently working with his advanced boys.

Mrs. Bonnie Schowalter has served in a variety of positions with the youth program since her arrival at Ft. Benning, and spends several hours a week "just helping out."

Maj. Bob Parrish coached 8-year-old baseball for two years, and is serving his second consecutive term as chairman of the

Editor's Note: The following article is the fifth in a series of six concerning dental health and your children. These articles are presented in conjunction with National Children's Dentral Health Week.

My four-year-old daughter still sucks her thumb at bedtime and we are concerned that this habit will prove harmful to her teeth. How does the dental profession feel about this?

During the child's early years, thumb sucking — which gives pleasure and emotional comfort — should be considered normal behavior. In most instances, such sucking is relatively harmless and most children stop the habit by the time they are four or five years old.

There are degrees of sucking. A light resting of the thumb between the lips at bedtime probably will not have much of an effect on the child's teeth and jaws, but heavy sucking done several times a day or all night long can affect the position of the permanent teeth and the shape of the jawbone.

The dentist should be consulted as early as possible as he is the only one who can diagnose the seriousness of your child's habit and advise you concerning ways to help her overcome it.

Boy Scout Sustaining Membership term as chairman of the Boy Scout Sustaining Memership Fund Drive, which will require many off duty hours spent in the uncomfortable activity of asking people for money. Maj. Parrish has no children in scouting.

"Folks like these are the reason we can have a youth activities program," Barham said, "but a little participation from a few more parents would greatly ease the strain on those who do so much. We have tremendous facilities for young people here, and they are well used. Yet children in certain areas of the post rarely get to take advantage of the youth programs because they lack transportation and are too young to use the shuttle bus service. An arrangement among parents of the various housing areas to drive a carload of children to the YAC Center a couple of days each week would greatly increase participation."

"Many times there will be two hundred teenagers at a YAC dance, and no parent chaperones. This required the assigned recreation services people to serve as both managers of the event and chaperones, and seriously cuts into the time they can spend doing their assigned jobs."

The YAC Advisory Committee is calling for help. "We're not asking for a lot of time," Barham advises. "Except for the scouts, who desperately need adult leadership, most of our programs are well handled by people willing to spend a lot of time helping other people's children. But we'd sure appreciate some volunteers who, on an occasional basis, would be willing to drive a car full of kids someplace, chaperone a dance or help teach a child the fundamentals of some sport. We certainly aren't looking for experts, just some supervisory help."

Anyone willing to contribute a little time is requested to call the youth activities center at 544-4902. Just leave your name and number, and the type of duty you might be willing to perform The "Old Faithfuls" could use a hand.

Girl Scout bakers test their skills

Girls all over Ft. Benning are cooking up something good. Junior Scouts, the 4th, 5th and 6th grades are participating in the Annual Girl Scout Junior BakeOff. This statewide competitive event in making cakes, creates an interest in cooking and develops skills at home for entertainment. After witnessing a demonstration, each girl selects one of three recipes for banana, fudge or pound cake and prepares the dessert in her home. Then a panel of impartial adult judges will select the best cake from each category in each Junior Troop.

Baking and judging at troop level is taking place now. After the best bakers in each troop have been selected, those girls will represent their units by entering cakes in a contest to find the best cooks on post. Judges for the final post-level contest will be Mrs. Winston McColl, Capt. Don Blake and Mrs. Christine Bass. The first, second and third place winners for each type of cake will receive awards, furnished by the NCO Wives Club. The first place winners from each category will then bake against the winners from twelve counties that comprise Concharty Girl Scout Council.

Winners from that event will take part in a final baking contest that will pick the best cake in the entire state. The annual competition furnishes fun for girls who learn while cooking, and fun for their families and friends who get to eat the cakes.

10-8 on the warpost

By "HOSS" KACI 4615

A high power, supercharged jacked up speed machine with roaring pipes show down the highway. How fast? Anybody's guess. It doesn't matter . . . he has his "ears" to protect him from bears.

"This is Lead Foot." he tells his CB radio mike. "How about somebody giving me a weather report?"

"Right on, Lead Foot," another CBer answers. "An all-clear from Greased Lightning. Keep on truckin' good buddy."

"Ten four, Grease. Thanks a lot, man."

Five minutes later a blue light flashed in Lead Foot's rear view mirror. Lead Foot pulled his car to the curb.

The Bear walked over to Lead Foot's car with a wide grin. "Let's see your drivers' license and registration . . . Lead Foot."

"Look, man, give me a break. I was in a hurry."

"That's too bad, man. I was in a hurry too. I got off-duty five minutes ago." The Bear whipped out his pad.

"This is the first time," complained the CB freak. "Can't you just let me off with a warning."

"A warning?" The Bear looked around himself, then pointed to a sign. "That's your first warning. It's called a speed limit. See that slow sign beside it? She's your second warning. What more do you want? Down the road is another warning. They call it a cross-walk. I'm glad I got you before you passed up that one. There's children getting out of school just a ways from there."

The policeman handed Lead Foot a slip of paper. "This is an invitation to a special party the judge is holding for you. I hope it does you some good."

"I heard that you usually let people go if they're only a little over the limit," said Lead Foot. "Is that true?"

"Right on, good buddy, but that's only under ideal driving conditions. We sometimes let them go as fast as 10 miles per hour over the limit, but I think there's something you don't quite understand, friend. A speed limit doesn't mean round and about that rate. It means no faster than that. If you can't hold steady to the speed, you should pick one a little slower."

"How fast was I going?"

"You don't know?" Smokey smiled again. "You really are a winner. You don't qualify for a warning, if that's what you're wondering."

"It isn't fair. You must have been listening to my CB. There's got to be something unconstitutional about that."

"Take it easy, Lead Foot," returned the policeman. "You got it all wrong. Sure, we listen to your band, but we're only trying to keep you alive. I'm not out to get you. I'd rather let you get away if that will help. A lot of times I want you to know where I am so you don't get caught.

"Last week, I had my rig set up across from the high school. I heard you telling your friends where I was, but that's alright. I wanted them to know. That school is a hazardous area. It wouldn't have done any good to give your buddies a ticket after they ran over somebody.

"Not a single car went past me over the limit that week. They were driving carefully for the wrong reasons, but that's okay.

"You had a bad run of luck this week, Lead Foot. I've been cruising around with a portable unit. There's no way to beat those things, although I really don't know why you'd want to."

"Okay, okay, I understand. Just let me out of here."

"Sure, good buddy, but one more piece of advice. Fasten your seat belt."

SQT update

Skill Qualification Test (SQT) Notices for soldiers in Career Management Field 11 with D (Armor Reconnaissance) and E (Armor Crewman) specialties in grades E-2 to E-6 will be distributed beginning today. Tests will be administered starting in June.

The Notices tell soldiers each task to be performed with reference material to be studied. Training Extension Course (TEC) lessons are available at all post Learning Centers to support many of the tasks performed.

If you're a Combat Arms soldier (MOS 11 D or E) and you haven't received your Notice and Soldier's Manual by early next week, see your first sergeant and let him know — it's your career.

Accelerated payment of reup bonuses possible

Soldiers receiving selective and variable reup bonuses (SRB and VRB) who face legitimate financial hardship are entitled to apply for accelerated payment of one or more annual bonus installments. This also goes for troopers experiencing compelling compassionate reasons. That's the word from officials at the MILPERCEN Monetary Incentives Management Branch (MIMB).

However, officials caution that these requests are not approved automatically. As final approval authority, MIMB evaluates each request for accelerated payment on an individual basis.

An accelerated bonus payment is not intended to alleviate indebtedness caused by gross financial management by the soldier or his dependents. Instead, the accelerated payment is designed to help the soldier return to a position where he can meet his monthly expenses without financial strain.

Accelerated bonus pay

Cases of severe financial hardship generally will warrant accelerated payment of not more than two bonus installments. For example, let's say a soldier reenlisted for six years on Oct. 1, 1975. In March 1976, he applied for accelerated payment because he experienced a financial setback: his mobile home was destroyed by fire. What's more, his wife was injured seriously and won't be able to work for at least a year. MIMB reviewed his application and approved accelerated payment of the two installments he eventually would receive in October 1979 and October 1980. The three remaining installments will be paid on schedule — that is, on the anniversary dates of his reenlistment in October of 1976, 1977 and 1978.

Emergency situations

Occasionally a soldier is confronted with situations or emergencies involving a family member or even a close nondependent whom he is morally obligated to assist financially.

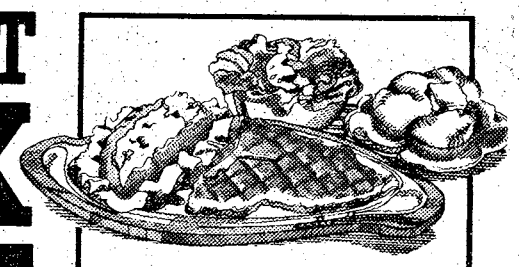
Depending on individual circumstances, accelerated bonus payments may be approved for compassionate reasons. Examples include an immediate need for financial assistance to cover funeral expenses or to pay medical costs covered by military or commercial insurance plans.

To qualify for accelerated payments for compelling compassionate reasons, MIMB requires applications supported by verification statements from doctors, lawyers, Red Cross representatives, clergymen or the soldier's Commanding Officer. If approved, either one advanced installment or two accelerated payments normally are authorized and paid in the manner already described.

No-go requests

MILPERCEN officials offer the following guidelines concerning types of requests for accelerated payment that are most often turned down:

- All requests which are intended solely for investment purposes — down payments on homes, autos, land purchases.
- All requests to alleviate large debts incurred in anticipation of MIMB approval of advanced payments immediately after reenlistment.



How to apply

Each request, MIMB officials say, must be accompanied by DA form 4474-R (Request for Accelerated Payment of SRB — Hardship or Compassionate). Completion instructions are outlined in Change 57, AR 600-200. Improperly documented applications are returned through channels without action. All others will be processed quickly for the sake of the soldier suffering the financial hardship. Since all requests must be initiated at the installation level, local authorities may disapprove requests that clearly do not meet the criteria.

MILPERCEN officials remind soldiers that effective budgeting sometimes precludes the need to apply for accelerated payments.

11th Co captures company-level basketball title

By T. R. Weller

Led by a 26 point effort from Donald Wells, the 11th Co, TSB defeated Co A, HQs Cmd, 66-56 in the final game of the USAIC Company Level Basketball Tournament.

But the final score doesn't reflect the tension of the hard-fought contest as the two teams battled evenly until the last minutes of the game.

Hampered by a multitude of violations in the first quarter, neither team mounted a serious offense as the quarter ended in a 15-15 tie.

In the second quarter both teams began to show the tenacity that brought them to the finals. With Wells dropping in 25-foot jump shots and Michael Parkett controlling defensive rebounds, TSB began to pull away from A. Co cagers. But they were not in the clear even at the half as Henry Thompson found the range, keeping Co A in the running. The half ended with 11th Co holding a slim three point lead, 27-24.

11th Co steamed out into the second half controlling the ball at both ends of the court allowing Co A only 14 points in the third quarter while putting 21 on the board.

For the fourth quarter it was Co A playing catchup ball and 11th Co maintaining their hard-fought lead. The last five minutes of the game proved to be toughest for TSB as the Co A cagers began to fight their way back coming to within five points with 2 minutes remaining. But with Wells sinking five of five free throws and Parkett contributing six straight points from the floor, TSB wrapped up the game 66-56.

As the Ft. Benning Company Level Basketball Champions, 11th Co, TSB will represent Benning in the 1977 TRADOC Basketball Tournament to be held March 6 - 12th at Ft. Knox, Ky. The team will go as a unit and will not augument with additional players.

Font top scorer in freethrow contest

Winners of the annual TRADOC Basketball Freethrow contest for Ft. Benning dependent youth were announced recently by the Youth Activities Director.

One hundred and seven youngsters took their best shots at the basket on February 5th at the YAC Gymnasium. Winners were determined on the basis of best percentage of scoring shots.

In the boys class, Orlando Font took first place in the 15 - 16 age group with a 68 per cent success rate. Charles Jones was second with 60 per cent. In the 13 - 14 year group, Randy Tramel was first with 60 per cent, folowed by David Hickman with 45 per cent.

John Tannehill won the 11 - 12 year class with a resounding 84 per cent hit rating. Bryan Hight was second with 64 per cent. The 9 - 10 year class was taken by Dirk Steen with 76 per cent, while second place went to Edmond Davis with 44 per cent.

The only girls class with enough competitors to hold a shoot-off was the 11 - 12 year olds. Sharman Jones won first place with a 52 per cent scoring pace, while Donna Maddox was second with 48 per cent.

The President of the NCO Wives Club would like to thank the members who worked so diligently to make the Bake Sale a success. A special thank you goes to the ladies who worked 'over and above the call of duty tomake an outstanding showing at our Ceramic Games, and to all others who donated. Our 1st, 2nd, and 3rd place winners in the Ceramic Show were: Mrs. Gerlinde Belcher, Mrs. Berta Dinnell and Mrs. Susan Bozarth. Congratulations Ladies, and special mention to Mrs. Eva Crimmel!

Craft Day

Tuesday March 1st, was not a regular meeting day for our craft making, but since the Hail and Farewell was discontinued, the ladies took this opportunity to continue their crafts. It is very heart warming to see the enthusiasm everyone is showing at these craft classes.

Ladies Coffee

On Tuesday evening, February 22nd, the ladies of the 2/10th FA, met at the home of Mrs. Jack Hyde, for their monthly coffee. The hostesses: Mrs. Hyde and Mrs. Heldur Liivak, warmly welcomed everyone upon their arrival. After a period of socializing and enjoying the delicious refreshments, Mrs. Paul Makowski, wife of the Battalion Commander, discussed several items of importance and announced the schedule of upcoming events.

Mrs. Makowski also extended a warm welcome to Mrs. Jim Lyon. Capt. and Mrs. Lyon have recently arrived here from Ft. Sill, Okla. and have been assigned to the 2/10 FA. The ladies were honored to have two Special Guests: Mrs. Fletcher Ware, wife of the 197th Inf Bde commander, and Mrs. Cross, the mother of Mrs. Makowski, who is visiting from Silver Spring, Md.

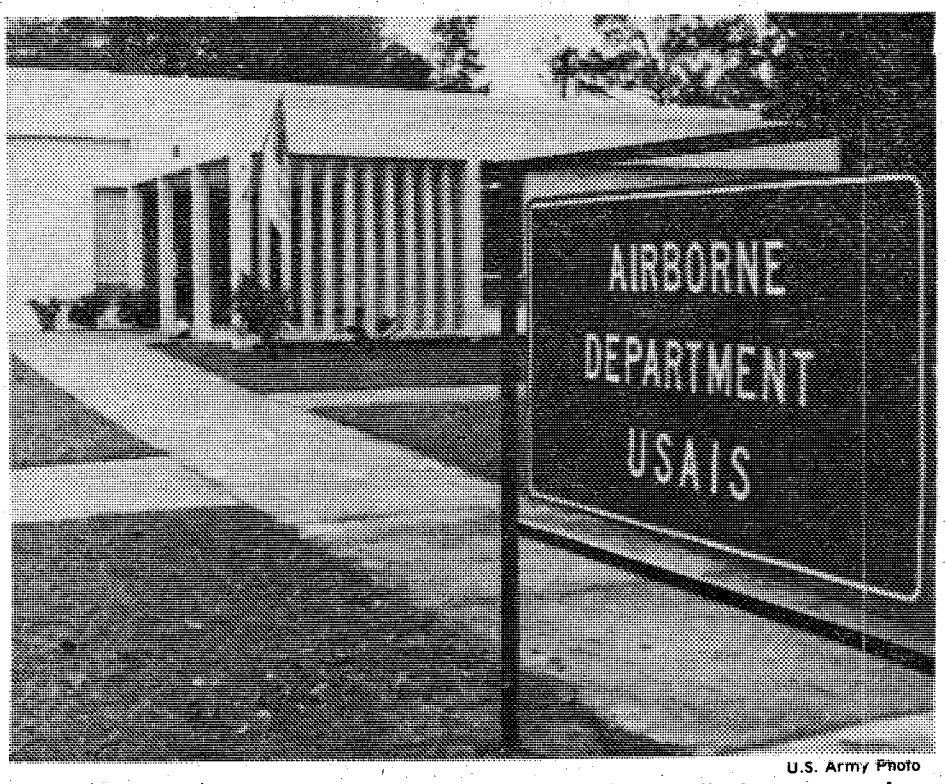
Visits Senior Citizens

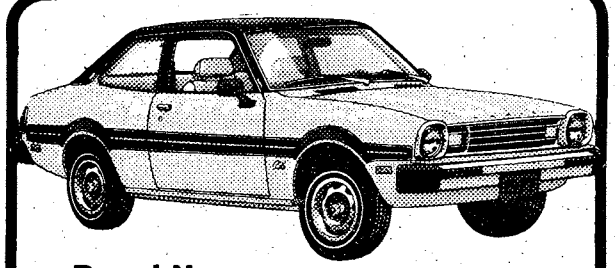


On February 24th, five ladies from the 43rd Engr. Bn., a Dental wife, and a wife from the USAMU, visited Oak Manor, in the early afternoon. The ladies who could not come with us, baked cookies and cake for refreshments. For their entertainment, we sang songs from the 30s and 40s, after which, the audience sang hymns with us.

Refreshments were served immediately after the program, and that gave us a chance to chat with the patients. We all felt a sense of inner reward after this visit.

Our society needs Grandma and Grandpa. Though the faces be a bit wrinkled and their steps a bit slower the hearts of our older people are filled with love — a love of which we could all use more of.

The patients thanked us again and again, and would like us to visit Pine Manor next.



It was an afternoon, well spent.

The Airborne Department recently moved into its first permanent type building since airborne training began at Ft. Benning. The department is programmed to train over two-thirds of all the students that come to Ft. Benning and has graduated well over 500,000 paratroopers since the original test platoon of 48 volunteers completed training in 1940. Over the last 27 years, numerous changes have occurred that continue to improve the mission capabilities of airborne forces. Today, graduates of the only US military basic airborne course are thoroughly prepared on the most up-to-date equipment and techniques. The new headquarters building will symbolize the continuing role that the airborne soldier and airborne force will play in national defense planning.

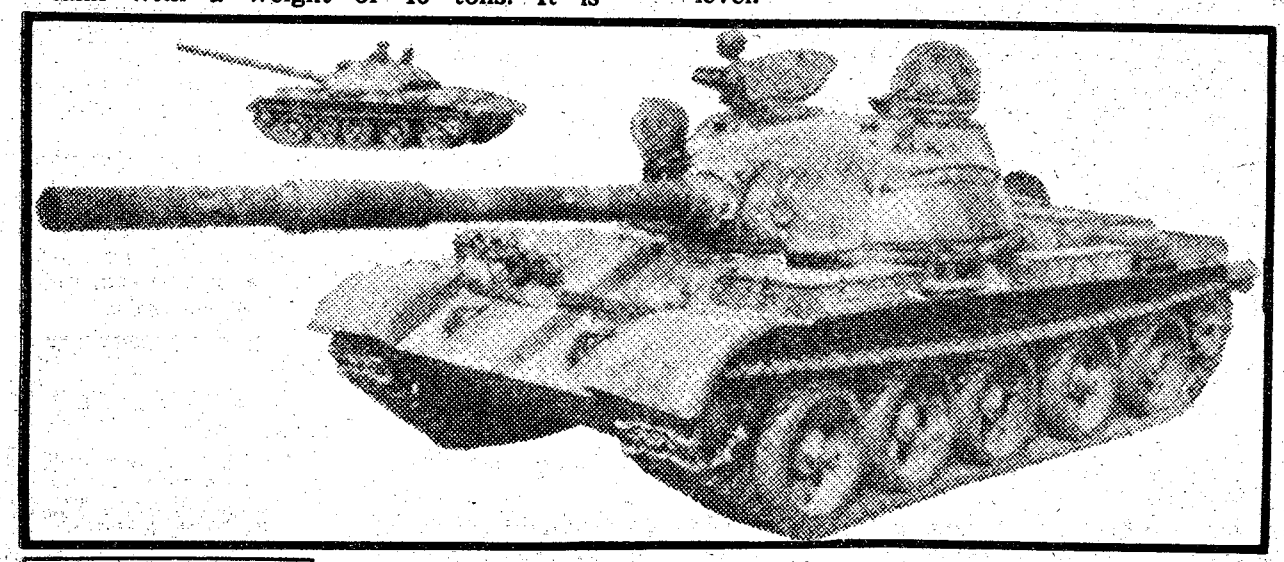
The Soviet T-62 Main Battle Tank



The Soviet T-62 tank was designed to meet the needs of the Soviet armored forces as a successor to the older T-54 and T-55 tank series. Although the newest Soviet tank, the T-72, is beginning to see service with Soviet and Warsaw Pact forces, the T-62 is expected to be the main battle tank for both the Soviet Army and the Warsaw Pact for the next few years.

The T-62 is a heavily armored medium tank with a weight of 40 tons. It is characterized by simplicity of construction and ease of operation. It is also relatively simple to maintain and lends itself well to mass production.

The main armament is a 115mm smoothbore gun that fires four types of fin-stabilized ammunition. An experienced crew can fire up to three rounds per minute. One of it's vulnerabilities is that the main gun can only be depressed to four degrees below level.

T-62's produced after 1970 mount a 12.7mm antiaircraft machinegun on the right side of the turret. Additionally, a 7.62mm coaxial machinegun is mounted on the right side of the main gun. The tank is also equipped with a snorkel that allows it to operate in water up to 18 feet deep.

The T-62 is operated by a crew of four and is powered by a 580 horsepower, water cooled, V-12 diesel engine. It has a maximum speed of 50 KMH and a range of 450 KM. For additional information concerning the T-62, contact the Intelligence Branch (Room 344, Building 4), Command, Staff and Leadership Department, Telephone 545-3393.

MALOOF'S-MALOOF'S-MALOOF'S-

Will you please listen?

By Marv Davis

How many times have you talked to your supervisor about something important and felt that he was only half-listening? You had the impression that he had more pressing matters to get to and couldn't wait to get rid of you. He might have even taken a telephone call in the middle of the conversation, picked up a piece of paper off of his desk to look at, or just looked off in the distance.

All of these are symptoms of a failure to listen. They tend to make the person with the problem feel unimportant and finally wonder why he ever bothered the boss with the problem. At the worst the situation caused a lack of trust on the part of the subordinate. "If the boss doesn't think I'm important enough to listen to why should I bust myself to help him out." That thought may only be subconscious, but the chances are it will impair any future relationship between the two people.

Another problem situation which is almost as bad is the supervisor who is talking when he should be listening. How many times have you heard, "Yeah, that reminds me of the time . . ." from a supervisor when he was presented with a problem. Off he went on a nostalgic journey far away from the real dilemma you brought in.

The trouble with all this is, if you've ever had a supervisor who does that, the chances are pretty good that you do that yourself when confronted with a problem from one of your subordinates.

Listening is one of the most neglected aspects of communication. It is assumed that everyone knows how to do it, so little effort is made toward sharpening our skills. After all, how much intelligence does it take to sit there with your mouth shut? Well, in reality it takes a lot more. A smart supervisor will find that he will have more time for supervision and directing if he listens and lets his people find their own solutions to their problems.

Many people, after visiting a psychiatrist for the first time, remark, "He just sat there. He didn't help me with my problem at all." Supervisors and psychiatrists, if they're doing their job right, should not be solving problems but helping the person solve his own problem. A person, when he is allowed to talk will usually arrive at the answer with an insight few supervisors can provide.

Of course, the supervisor doesn't really sit there with his mouth closed. He should ask questions which allow the subordinate to question himself. One way is the rewording of the statement of the subordinate. For instance, the subordinate might say, "I don't like the way the detail roster is run." Then a supervisor might reply, "You don't like the way the detail roster is run?" The subordinate will then usually respond with another statement which will be closer to the real problem. It may not have anything to do with the roster at all.

The supervisor can keep the subordinate talking with short replies like, "You don't say," "That's interesting," or "Would you like to talk about it?" One that always works is, "How do you feel about that?"

A supervisor who conveys a sincere, interested attitude toward a subordinate's problems will do a lot toward building trust and confidence in himself and the organization. But to do that he must listen.

Grocery ad or math lesson? Both!

Teachers who use The Columbus Ledger or The Columbus Enquirer know that advertisements are really gold mines of lesson materials. Some, like this grocery ad, are perfect to illustrate many different math principles. Others can teach language arts, metrics, economics, consumer education and even art. So if you're looking for a great way to take a new slant at school work, we'll be happy to discuss how a newspaper can do just that.

JCS Chairman defends servicemember benefits

Mounting concern among servicemembers for their benefits and standard of living is threatening the readiness of the U.S. military force, the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff has warned Congress. "These volunteers freely commit themselves to the defense of our nation," said Air Force Gen. George Brown. The top U.S. military officer went on to say that servicemembers "expect their leaders to commit themselves to the servicemember in insuring that they have an adequate standard of living."

Brown pointed out that, since 1972, there have been repeated attempts to "reduce, eliminate, transfer, and transform" military benefits which in the past have helped attract young Americans to the Service and to keep them in uniform once they have joined.

Other hard facts of military life today, said Brown, are that "pay raises have been held below the rise in cost of living, resulting in reduced purchasing power. Medical benefits have been modified, reduced or eliminated." The senior military officer added, "Threats of further reductions are constantly highlighted by private publications targeted at the servicemembers."

Gen. Brown called for a one year moratorium on changes to the military compensation and benefits system, saying that "During this period, we can address the various recommendations of study groups." Brown identified the study groups as the Third Quadrennial Review of Military Compensation and the Defense Manpower Commission. After a one year study, said Gen. Brown, a detailed plan for changes could be presented to Congress.

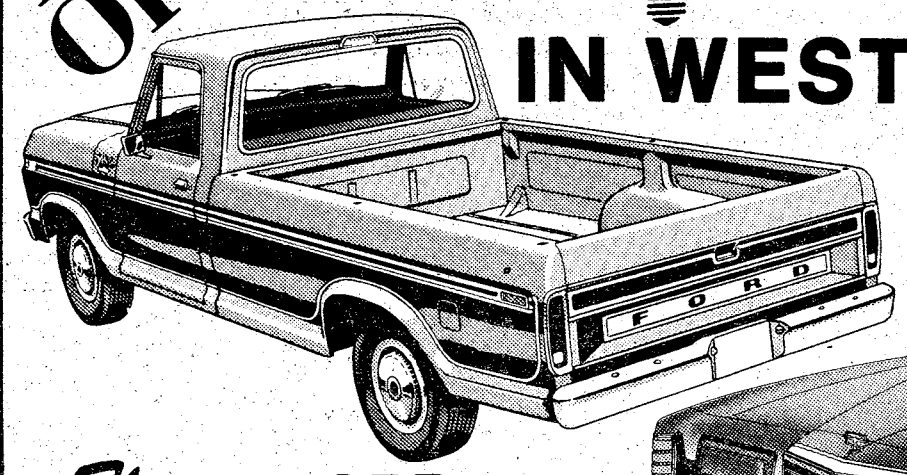
Brown reminded the lawmakers that over 60 per cent of current enlisted personnel have entered the service since 1972. "Since they enlisted they have in effect, experienced only losses in their purchasing power and benefits," he said. The general concluded by saying, "We must defuse this issue before it severely impacts on our readiness."

Undesirable discharges no longer issued

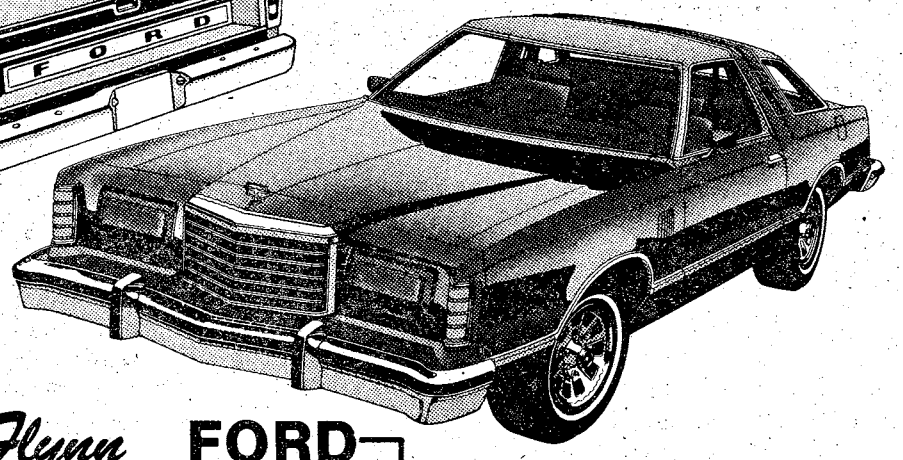
The undesirable discharge is dead. It has been replaced with a "discharge under other than honorable conditions."

DA stopped issuing the DDForm 258 as of January 1st, as a result of an order from (then) Secretary of Defense Donald Rumsfeld.

Since January 1st, DA officials have been issuing the new type discharge to soldiers administratively separated for misconduct or security reasons. Also soldiers who resign or request discharge for the good of the service when their conduct has made them subject to trial by court martial, will be issued a "discharge under other than honorable conditions" certificate. This certificate has been used in the cases of officers since 1954.



No change is being made in regard to the issuance of "honorable" or "general" discharge certificates to those who perform successfully in the service of their country. Also, no change is being made to "dishonorable" and "bad conduct" discharge certificates, which may be issued as a result of court-martial.



Starting in June, former military personnel with undesirable discharge certificates (DD Form 258) will be issued DD Form 794, upon application to their former service, in a manner to be announced later.

Hot Line can help you--dial 545-5555

In the past four months that Hot Line has been in service, 270 calls have been received, 41 of those calls were received in February compared to 57 calls in January.

Fewer calls in February can be attributed to a variety of reasons.

There has been a reduction of crime and other incidents on post during February, and IG complaints are also down. Commanders are encouraging service members to use the chain of command rather than Hot Line or IG channels. It has also been four months since Hot Line began, and the normal changeover on post has resulted in many new members of the command who are not yet aware of Hot Line, as proved by the IG inspection team.

The largest users of the Hot Line service were dependent wives for the fourth consecutive month followed by Sp4's and DA civilians. Action agencies responding to calls in February were led again by DPCA followed by PMO and DIO.

The Hot Line is still here for you if a question arises or you have a compliant and don't know where to turn. Just call 545-5555.

All-Volunteer Force facing problems

Last fall, Senator Sam Nunn, Chairman of the Senate Armed Services Subcommittee on Manpower and Personnel, selected an individual outside the government to do an in-depth study on the All-Volunteer Force (AVF). Dr. Wr. William R. King, a professor of Business Administration at the University of Pittsburgh, reported his findings to the Subcommittee on March 2nd.

Dr. King listed the major areas of the study as follows: a review of the history and rationale for the transition from a mixed force (volunteers and draftees) to the AVF, a study of information on the performance to date of the AVF, an anlaysis of numerous studies, reports, surveys and articles on AVF, and a study of the alternatives to the AVF such as universal military training, a "Reserve only" draft and a variety of programs of national service.

In presenting his study to the subcommittee members, Dr. King stated, "I have, as far as possible, attempted to assess such intangible items as the morale of our troops, the impact of the AVF on the nation and its impact on the attitudes of the young people who will be the potential recruits of the future." He added that the Department of Defense had on the whole, performed admirably in implementing the AVF even though his report was in many ways critical of the program.

Six major conclusions were drawn by Dr. King concerning the AVF. First, while combined recruiting and force level figures show that the AVF is functioning, there are some doubts as to the overall cost and effectiveness of the force.

SQT is here

Are you ready?

If you're an Infantryman, Indirect Fire Crewman, Armor Reconnaissance Specialist or Armor Crewman in grades E-2 to E-6, you must have:

- a Soldier's Manual for your skill level,
- a Soldier's Manual for the next higher skill level,
- an official Skill Qualification Test (SQT) Notice from DA and
- an SQT Preparation Guide (pocket-size) from USAIC.

The SQT for Infantrymen and Indirect Fire Crewmen will be conducted beginning in April. Armor Recon Specialists and Armor Crewmen will be tested beginning in June.

If you haven't received an SQT Notice or the appropriate Soldier's Manuals, act now!

See someone in your chain of command and let him know. It could mean $$$$$ in your pocket!

Energy still an issue

Ft. Benning will soon take another step in the direction of energy conservation.

Weather forecasters indicate that by the middle of March the average daily temperature will signal the end of the "heating season." However, long-time residents of this area are familiar with late cold snaps which are likely to occur at brief intervals into the month of April.

With this possibility, you should be prepared for cold mornings by dressing warmly during these periods.

Early indication are that air conditioning will not be started until late in May. This is a change from previous years in which air conditioning systems were turned on in early May.

Everyone's cooperation and understanding in necessary to insure that our energy problems are solved.

Uniform change slated

Starting on Monday, April 4th, the changeover from the winter to the summer uniform takes place. There is no transition period. Commanders should inspect personnel in summer uniform prior to April 4th to insure serviceability and proper fit. Particular attention should be given to the fit of the trousers in the waist and proper length.

Officers may wear the garrison or the service cap with the Army Tan or Army Khaki summer uniforms. Personnel who rollup fatigue sleeves during the summer uniform season will insure that they are neatly rolled above the elbow.

Rogers discusses NATO Posture at Senate hearing

Army Chief of Staff, Gen. Bernard W. Rogers, appeared February 8th before the Senate Armed Services Committee hearing on the NATO Posture.

"The Warsaw Pact is putting a much higher emphasis on defense than the United States," Rogers stated. He told Committee Chairman Senator John Stennis that the Army's major problems today are "insufficient ammunition, insufficient war reserve stocks, unit readiness, and problems in the Reserve Components."

Rogers added that NATO is not keeping pace with the Warsaw Pact and that the United States needs to provide a "strong and credible deterrence." To achieve this deterrence, Rogers said that $4.7 billion had been included in the FT 78 defense budget for the Enhancement of European Capability (ECAP) program. "In all, over 100 issues have been considered to enhance Army capabilities in Europe," he said.

He noted that problems will not just go away, stating that "We know there is much to be done—it will take time and patience and resources."

Virginia Senator Harry F. Byrd asked Gen. Rogers if the Army in Europe was prepared now to fight a chemical or biological war in Europe. Rogers replied, "No, Sir."

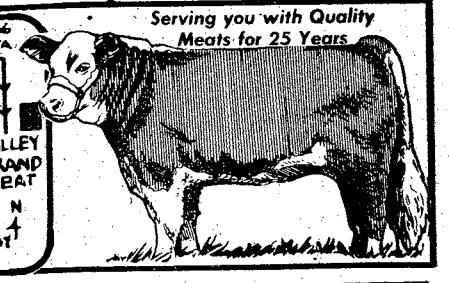
In response to a question by Senator Sam Nunn of Georgia, Rogers said that the United States was "not less prepared" than the Soviet Union to fight an atomic war in Europe.

Replying to a question from Senator John C. Culver of Iowa concerning the improvement of European readiness, Gen. Rogers said the Soviet Union has done more than the U.S. to improve its readiness in the past several years.

Senator Strom Thurmond of South Carolina asked if the U.S. is "outgunned by the Soviets?" Rogers responded, "Yes, we are outgunned," but added "the situation is improving. We have enhanced the ranges for the field artillery, we have additional field artillery capabilities, and the Lance missile with non-nuclear warheads."

Rogers described all the challenges facing the Army in Europe as very important. "The fortunes of the United States cannot be separated from those of Europe," he said.

In describing the Soviet threat, Rogers said, "Soviet doctrine calls for a short, violent campaign in Europe emphasizing surprise and offensive operations. Their modern forces are structured, trained and exercised to support this doctrine."



He went on to say there is good reason to believe that the Warsaw Pact has concluded that, in certain situations, their forces are "not only sufficient to defend against a NATO attack, but also are capable of starting offensive operations against NATO without prior reinforcements from the Soviet Union."

Gen. Rogers emphasized that whatever the cost, the United States and its NATO allies must present a strong deterrent force to oppose the Warsaw Pact. (ARNEWS)

Several major changes made on E-6 promos

Several major changes concerning promotion requirements to E-6 were made recently. The Time in Service (TIS) requirement has been extended from six to seven years. TIS with a waiver has been upped from four to five years, according to DA officials.

Now that the Army is advancing with the Skill Qualification Test (SQT) program, the only record used for promotion consideration for many soldiers will be the Enlisted Evaluation Report Weighted Average (EERWA) reported on the DA Form 10. GIs in some Career Management Fields (CMF's) won't begin taking the SQT until 1979.

To reduce the difference in EERWA's, DA has announced a drop of 20 points in the MOS cutoff score with a waiver for promotion to E-6. The new cutoff score is 80. The non-waiverable score of 110 went down to 100.

DA officials stress that this doesn't necessarily mean a large number of E-5s will be promoted. MSgt. Jim Hughes, Enlisted Promotion Branch, ODCSPER, DA notes that, "We are right where we want to be at the E-6 level. The drop in the cutoff score means only that more soldiers will be considered during a period of no MOS testing."

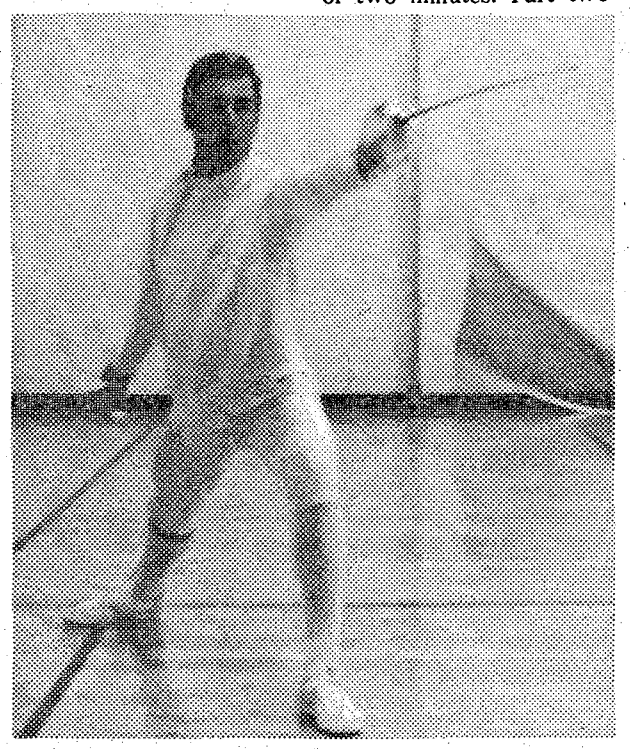
By Geoff Wilhelmy

Of the many individuals who have attended the Infantry School, few can be rated with Capt. Greg Losey. For the past three years, Losey has been ranked as one of the US's finest pentathalon athletes and a member of several medal winning national teams.

The pentathalon is a sport that dates back to the Napoleonic era. The sport hosts five events that span over a five day period.

The competition begins with an 800 meter horseback riding course requiring 18 jumps with a minimum completion time of two minutes. Part two includes fencing. Each athlete must fence against every competitor.

The third portion calls for firing a .22 pistol at silhouettes 25 meters away that are exposed a mere three seconds. Next comes the 300 meter freestyle swimming competition that must be completed in a minimum time of 3:54. The competition ends with a 4,000 meter cross country race that must be completed in 14:15.



Losey was first introduced to this exacting sport while attending West Point. There he participated in its modified collegiate form of three events: swimming, running and shooting. His success earned him a tryout with the national pentathalon team after graduation. Since 1973, he has been with the national team, training at Ft. Sam Houston. Capt. Losey presently is taking six months away from the national team to attend the Infantry Officers' Advance Course. He is scheduled to return this June to begin preparing for the 1980 Moscow Olympics.

Meanwhile, he is maintaining a rigorous schedule. Every morning before classes, he runs five to eight miles with marathon runner Maj. Fields. During his lunch hour he practices fencing and, after classes, heads for Columbus College's indoor pool to swim two to three miles.

On weekends, Losey becomes a wandering gypsy, traveling across the country to compete in swimming, fencing or road racing. Though this would appear to be sufficient exercise, it should be noted that when he is in training with the national team, Greg practices 10½ hours a day.

Capt. Losey looks optimistically to the future. After three years without a great deal of prior experience, he has mastered the skills and gained the experience in the equestrian and shooting events. Under the tutelage of Maj. Fields, he has made considerable progress in his cross country running and the closely related swimming event. His fencing, the key event in the pentathalon has steadily improved with the assistance of his training partner, Capt. Phil Petersen, an accomplished college fencer, also attending the Advance Course.

One can only hope that this gifted Infantry officer's extraordinary efforts will be rewarded at Moscow in 1980.

Sp5 Charles Farrell, HQs Co, HQs Cmd, recently placed third in the television spot announcement catagory of the 1976 Keith L. Ware competition. The Ware awards are presented annually to the finest in Army print and electronic media world-wide. Farrell's award winning entry was "The Association of the United States Army Picnic", a 60-second television spot for the AUSA annual event at Ft. Benning. This makes the second year that Farrell has placed in the contest, he won second place for his TV spot, "The Army Birthday," last year. Farrell is in charge of the Radio and Television section of the post Public Affairs Office.

Five area Bass clubs held their annual "Super Bowl" of bass fishing last Sunday on Lake Walter F. George. The contest pitted the top seven fishermen from each club against each other with an impartial observer in the back seat. Nasty weather prevailed from the 7 a.m. "ooze off" to the 4 p.m. weigh-in, accounting for skimpy catches by all fishermen.

Dolphin Bass Club, led by Lanny Britton's total catch of 7 pounds 7 ounces, won the contest with a total team weight of 14 pounds, 14 ounces.

Benning's team gave it a good effort and captured second place with a total weight of 14 pounds, 6 ounces. Five Benning team members managed to catch fish with "Junior" Tibbs leading the team with 4 pounds, 6 ounces.

Jerry Head of the Oswega Bass Club caught the "Hawg" of the day, a 9 pound, 2 ounce monster, but his total weight of 10 pounds, 8 ounces couldn't get Oswega more than third place with a team total of 12 pounds, 7 ounces.

Dr. Allen Shaw's total catch of 7 pounds led the Bi-City Club to fourth place with a team total of 12 pounds, 2 ounces. And last but not least, the Georgia-Alabama Bass Club brought up the rear with a total weight of 2 pounds, 15 ounces.

These catches may seem small, folks, but considering the conditions, they're outstanding. My partner, a very admirable gentleman by the name of George Williams, and I gutted it out for a while, then succumbed to the pleasure of Chevella Marina and a car heater. I must be getting old. I can't hack these torture tournaments like I used to.

I can't leave you without a funny this week, so here goes. It was noticed that SGM Collier (Ranger Dept.) was driving around and around Bldg. 4 last Friday morning. After about an hour of watching him patiently at his endeavor, I yelled, "Hey Sgt. Major, why are you driving around the building like that?" Whereupon Collier replied, Aw Captain, can't help it, my turn signal's stuck."

Ponder this until next week: There once was a man who complained because he had no shoes, until he met a man who had no feet.

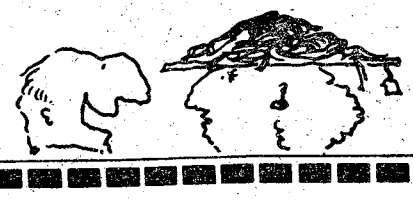
The Federal Communications Commission (FCC) has changed the name of the Citizens Radio Service and its subdesignations and has reorganized Part 95 of the FCC Rules.

The Citizens Radio Service is now called the Personal Radio Services; the former Class A Citizens Radio Service is now the General Mobile Radio Service, Class C is the Radio Control (R/C) Service and the old Class D is now officially the Citizens Band (CB) Radio Service.

The reorganized Part 95 contains four subparts, one for each of the three Personal Radio Services and a fourth containing technical standards applicable to all the Personal Radio Services. The Rules have been revised to require that licensees in the Personal Radio Services must have in their possession only those subparts which are applicable to them, instead of the complete Part 95. Also, only the new Subpart D is required to be furnished with each new CB unit sold. The FCC says that the new names are more descriptive of the nature of the services than the previous designations and that the reorganization of the Rules is an interim measure to assist licensees in understanding those rules which they must know.



You can expect more changes to the FCC's Rules in the future.

"Two feet to the left and a little forward" the flight engineer explains to the pilot as the gun crew directs them as to where they want their 105 set down.

A preflight checklist for a CH-54 Skycrane consists of 106 items which the crew must check to insure that the helicopter is ready for flight. While CWO4 Ken Jacobsen (r) reads the checklist, CWO3 Glen Drummond

2/10th A

In field training exercises conducted last week on the reservation, aviation assets of the 478th Avn Co. (HH) put the lift on the 2/10th FA Bn.

It was training as normal for the artillerymen, but for the CH-54 Skycrane jockeys it was the real thing. A chance to get out and do their thing.

The mission, a practice Reconnaissance, Selection and Occupation of Position exercise, called for the rapid, pinpoint deployment of Charlie Battery from Munson Heliport to a field site 20 miles away. All flying was done at low level following designated routes, selected after careful coordination with range control to insure air crew safety.

The pickup time at Munson Heliport was slated for 0800 hours, requiring aircrews to be at the flight line by 0600 hours for mission briefing, map reconnaissance planning and pre-flight of the aircraft.

The artillery advance party, with their jeep and trailer were moved to the field site by a "pod" equipped CH54. After a reconnaissance of the site, firing points were designated and the skycranes carrying the weapons were called in.

Normally two 105 mm howitzers are carried by each CH54, which has a 10 ton capacity. However, for this mission it was decided to utilize the capabilities of the skycrane in a different fashion to cut down the time and movements required to prepare the howitzers for firing after "drop."

A single 105 mm howitzer was carried by

Artillery mobility

The times they are a changing

Editor's note: Prior to the introduction of lift helicopters such as the CH-47 Chinook and the CH-54 Skycrane, the movement of artillery support behind friendly lines was a confusing, time consuming affair.

The chief of section of the last howitzer in the column put his hand on the shoulder of the man driving the tractor to indicate that he wanted the driver to slow down through the town of Kujang-dong. The driver, thinking that the section chief wanted him to turn left, turned down a small side street. There was a delay of five or ten minutes while the crew turned the tractor and howitzer around, knocking down several buildings in the process. This section was now separated from the rest of the column and it was impossible to catch up because of the solid line of vehicles.

Since the set up time for an artillery unit varies little, a prime factor to be considered is the time it takes to arrive at the emplacement site.

When morning came . . . Colonel Lavoie's 92d Field Artillery Battalion (a self-propelled 155mm howitzer unit) moved back battery by battery to a new position near the Pukhan River. Batteries registered as soon as they were laid.

Late in the afternoon the last howitzer was laid and ready to fire.

In order for the artillery to achieve maximum capability, it is imperative that it be at least as mobile as the force it is supporting.

With the advent of the helicopter, providing artillery support to a highly mobile force is a reality. The pace of a battle can be matched move for move, continuous fire support can be made available and the rapid deployment of artillery to influence the conflict in the advent of austere forces can become a deciding factor as to the outcome.

checks the "hydraulic sled" and the flight engineer, Sp6 Rock McAllister, stands by to assist and advise on any last minute maintenance problems.

Routes of flight are selected to insure safety and concealment for the mission as Capt. Thomas Vasilou, the air mission commander, covers the "enemy situation" and communication and logistic procedures.

each helicopter and lowered directly into firing position, in the edge of a tree line by use of the hydraulic wrench while the aircraft hovered above the trees. Gun crews directed the Skycranes into position while rotor blades generated 100 mile-per-hour winds in the loose sand on the landing zones.

Teamwork between the aircrews and gun crews paid off. Most weapons required only minor adjustment after they were set in place, to make them ready to fire.

While the weapons carrying aircraft were picking up their second and third loads, the pod equipped skycrane transported the remainder of the gun crews and other personnel of Charlie Battery to the field site.

The mission was completed with no delays. After the last of the six howitzers had been placed in position, the aircraft returned to Lawson Field and Charlie Battery conducted its defense.

IN POSITION AND READY TO FIRE! Cpl. Nathan Ferebie (l), Sp4 Jerry Conklin, Sp4 Joe Howard and SSgt. Ben Robinson (r) of Charlie Battery make last second adjustments before firing their assigned 105mm howitzer.

"Uncle Sam needs me."

Steven M. Clellen

SP4 Steve Clellen is a Quartermaster Light Equipment Repairman in charge of the repair shop at Hunter Army Air Field. "I love my work. I like the guys I work with. It's a two-way street. We help each other out. I'm in charge of the engineer section. 102 different pieces of equipment. We've never flunked an inspection yet. We're very proud of that. Our company really couldn't operate without our section. If it weren't for us they wouldn't have lights to see what they do. The Army is for me. That's why I reenlisted."

The Army wants people who take pride in their work. People like you. Why not see your career counselor today. You may find out just how much Uncle Sam needs you.

Keep a good soldier in the Army. Reenlist.

Local AUSA chapter celebrates 20th Birthday

Persons attending the 20th Birthday Ball of the Columbus-Phenix City-Fort Benning Chapter, Association of the U.S. Army (AUSA), Saturday, March 19th, will be treated to a variety of musical entertainment.

The Ball begins at the Harmony Church Field House at 6:30 p.m.

The newly-formed Columbus-Ft Benning Colonial Band will give a 20-minute concert of popular music and the "Benning Belles," will present another musical interlude during the evening.

Music for dancing will be provided by Buddy Bair and his orchestra.

This will be the first public appearance of the Colonial Band. The full band of 85 members is an expansion of the award-winning Explorer Post 76's Drum and Fife Corps that won the Valley Forge Freedoms Foundation Scout Unit Award for best displaying the Bicentennial theme.

At the AUSA ball, the band members will march in as a Drum and Fife Corps following dinner. They will then switch instruments to play popular band music for 20 minutes.

A sampling of the band's orchestrations are "Ease on Down the Road," "Way Down in Columbus, Georgia," "Free Ride," "The Army Song" and "The Battle Hymn of the Republic." The Colonial Band is directed by Major Bill Drollinger.

Directed by Ellen Buckner, the "Belles" will present show tunes and folk melodies such as "Getting to Know You," from "The King and I," "Day by Day" from the popular musical, "Godspell," and "Mother Country," a folk rock tune.

Ann Wall will accompany the "Belles" on the piano and Lou Nickens will be soloist.

Approximately 20 officers' wives now perform with the Benning Belles, meeting one morning a week to rehearse. Persons wishing to become members are asked to telephone Ellen Buckner at 687-2231.

"Bosses Night"

Want to show someone that you care? That's fairly easy to do now that the NCO and Officers' Club systems feature a "Bosses Night" each month during a happy hour period.

On March 11th, enlisted personnel and civilian members of the Ft. Benning NCO Club will sponsor "Bosses Night" within their club system. All three clubs, the Top Five, the Hidden Door (EM) and the Hideaway, will host the event. Finger buffets and happy hour prices will be featured at all three clubs.

Enlisted club members, military and civilian, are encouraged to invite their superiors, as appropriate, to further enchance the success of this monthly event.

School Lunchroom Program

Numerous cases have recently been discovered in which sponsors of school age children residing on post, who otherwise qualify for free or reduced price school lunches, have not completed the necessary application forms. Eligibility requirements are based on the size of your family and your total yearly income. For example an E-7 with a total income (base pay, quarters and separate rations) of $13,817 and four children would be eligible for reduced price meals for his children. If you think you may be eligible — contact the principal of the school where most of your children attend immediately.

Contaminated mascara can cause eye infections, warns Atlanta ophthalmologist Louis A. Wilson. Dr. Wilson advises consumers to throw out their mascara after four to six months. Beyond that time the preservatives in the product may break down, leading to the rapid growth of bacteria.

When the contaminated mascara is applied, an infection may result, causing redness along the eyelid, eye irritation and loss of lashes. Even worse results can occur if the eye itself is scratched by a contaminated mascara brush. Dr. Wilson reports four cases in which scratched, infected eyes became permanently blinded.

SFC Arthur Boddie, manager of the 598th LEM Co Dining Facility checks Sp4 Larry Gray's meatloaf as part of his constant checks to insure that the facility serves only the best food. The dining facility recently received the post Best Dining Facility Award as the finest small unit mess for the second consecutive quarter.

Second, present problems of the AVF indicate potential future problems that may have significant negative impact on our ability to maintain an effective defense in the future at reasonable cost.

Third, while many alternatives other than the pre-1973 draft are considered impossible, a program of national service could be developed and implemented.

Fourth, other alternatives, such as a "better managed" AVF complemented with a back-up draft, or a Reserve-only draft, might lessen some of the current and future problems.

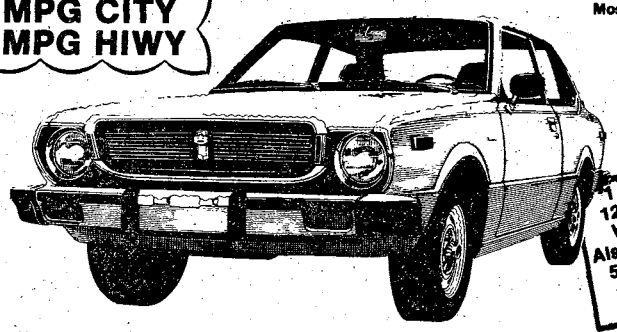
Fifth, there is no assurance that these simple alternatives would provide the nation with an adequate defense at reasonable cost in the late 1980's.

Finally, a "better managed" AVF would require broad programs for enhancing the supply of, and reducing the need for the ever-harder-to-recruit qualified young male.

Dr. King stressed recruiting as an important part of the AVF, saying, "The ability to attract sufficient recruits is the key to the success of the AVF. In the first year of operation, there was difficulty in attracting adequate numbers of high quality recruits." It was shown that at the end of fourth quarter, CY 1976, for example, the Army had a six per cent recruiting shortfall, the Marine Corps was 15 per cent short of its goal.

The future recruiting situation is even less bright, according to Dr. King. This is because the number of 18-year old males is declining and employment opportunities are increasing. "These factors indicate very grave recruiting difficulties for the military in the future. They will become apparent in the form of recruiting shortfalls, lower recruit quality and higher costs," he said. Even that, ". . . the 'total force' of active forces and reserves will need to recruit one of every two qualified and available male youths in the mid-to-late 1980's.

Looking at problems associated with raising forces in the event of an emergency, Dr. King estimated that it would cost $29 billion more to increase strength to the Vietnam War level through volunteers than through a draft.



In concluding his remarks before the subcommittee, Dr. King told the members that the AVF is essentially a "peacetime force" and its future is likely to be worse rather than better. It is his contention that when "The perception of it as a peacetime military force becomes widespread among our citizens, our allies and our potential adversaries, it will become increasingly ineffective as well as more difficult to maintain."

Grocery ad or math lesson? Both!

Teachers who use The Columbus Ledger or The Columbus Enquirer know that advertisements are really gold mines of lesson materials. Some, like this grocery ad, are perfect to illustrate many different math principles. Others can teach language arts, metrics, economics, consumer education and even art. So if you're looking for a great way to take a new slant at school work, we'll be happy to discuss how a newspaper can do just that.

Army Emergency Relief fund campaign underway

Throughout the years, we have given assistance to members of our Army family when they have been confronted with financial emergencies. In the last year the local Army Emergency Relief Fund, acting as your personal agents, rendered financial aid to 1448 active and retired military personnel and dependents in the Fort Benning area. A total of $136,650.53 was disbursed in loans and grants. This material assistance cannot begin to measure or express the overall benefit that has accrued through your compassion and concern for the welfare of others.

The continued financial support for members of our Army family is possible only by your contribution to the Army Emergency Relief Fund. I urge each of you to be generous in your support of the Fund Campaign to be conducted at this installation during the period March 14th-May 2nd.

"Army to have soldiers that look like soldiers"

Army Chief of Staff, General Bernard W. Rogers, recently emphasized the way the Army will deal with soldiers who have fat hanging over their belts. According to General Rogers, "We've made a commitment to the public, to our Congress, to our Commander in Chief, to the Department of Defense, that today's Army is going to have soldiers that look like soldiers,". He added, "And you don't look like a soldier when you've got a potbelly hanging over your belt."

As part of this tighter control for overweight personnel, effective January 3rd, when an individual has been placed in a weight loss program and fails to achieve satisfactory progress in losing weight because of apathy, lack of self-discipline, evasive performance, or other character deficiencies, the individual will be recommended for a bar to reenlistment or discharge from the service in accordance with appropriate regulations.

Also, enlisted personnel will not be permitted to reenlist if they do not meet the physical conditioning, weight and military appearance criteria set forth in AR 600-9. Personnel at ETS may extend their enlistments up to six months to comply with these provisions. Extensions for this purpose may not be accomplished on or after August 3rd.

Haig testifies on NATO readiness, reliability

In a hearing, March 1st before the full Senate Armed Services Committee, Gen. Alexander M. Haig Jr., testified on NATO reliability and his job as Supreme Allied Commander of NATO forces.

In his opening remarks, Gen. Haig stated that "Today, the greatest single threat to that (European) stability and peace continues to reside — as it has for 27 years — in the immediate presence of massive Soviet military power." Haig went on to say that through determined effort, the military posture of the Soviet Union is quantitatively superior to that of the west in many key areas and that the west's traditional qualitative advantage is rapidly evaporating. "This has not been a sudden change in Moscow, but a steady year in - year out increase in allocation of priorities and resources," Haig stated. He added his concern to that of the NATO ministers about the "relentless growth of sheer Soviet power."

The general also told the committee that he felt that Soviet forces, once continental in capability, have become increasingly offensive in character and global in reach. Because of this, their impact on European security is no longer limited to the direct threat of land invasion but an expanding threat to political and economic relationships. In this respect, Haig made a point stating. "Accordingly, it is clear that neither the European allies nor the U.S. can any longer afford to apply artificially restrictive criteria to the definition of North Atlantic interests." Haig later added, "To survive, NATO must be collective in fact, not merely in appearance."

Haig concluded by telling the committee, "It must be clearly understood that the interests at stake are not exclusively European; they are also American interests. Our commitment to the security of Western Europe is no act of charity, but simply a reflection of the link between that security and our own."

Post firemen assist sheriff

By William Darrell

Quick response and the fire-fighting expertise of the men of Ft. Benning Fire Station No. 4 (Lawson Field) recently provided a timely solution to what could have been a disastrous situation.

A tanker truck containing 7,300 gallons of gasoline had overturned near Seale, Ala., on Highway 431, spilling fuel over the highway. The Russell County Sheriff's Department realizing the hazardous circumstances contacted Ft. Benning officials requesting assistance.

A three-man crew from Station No. 4, Bernard Baker, Frank Davis and Tommy Hill, was dispatched with an airfield crash truck to the accident scene. The truck, designed for aircraft crashes, carries special equipment to combat gasoline and oil fires including a new addition, Aqueous Film Forming Foam, when applied to gasoline or oil covers it completely preventing the possibility of it catching fire.

Upon arriving at the scene, the firefighters immediately disconnected the battery to prevent the possibility of a spark igniting the gas fumes. Then they covered the spilled gas with foam preventing an accidential fire from beginning. Then it was just a matter of waiting until a wrecker showed up to right the tanker and tow it away.

This is not the first time that the crews from Station No. 4 have been called to cover a gasoline or oil fire or a similar incident. The Ft. Benning Fire Department provides a backup for the various county volunteer fire departments that surround the post, when they have a situation that calls for more sophisticated equipment.

SGM honored

An Army sergeant major, who was killed during an airborne exercise at Ft. Stewart, GA in November, 1976, was honored March 2nd at Ft. Benning's Wigle Hall.

CSM Henry Caro's widow, Frankie, and two daughters, Lisa and Rita, were presented the Legion of Merit award by Ft. Benning's Assistant Commander, Col. Edward Schowalter.

Caro had been stationed at Ft. Benning's School Brigade several times and his family lives in Columbus.

He had the distinction of being the first enlisted company and battalion commander while assigned to the Non-comissioned Officer's School of Infantry at Benning.

At the time of his death, Caro was the CSM of the 1/75th Inf (Ranger) Ft. Stewart, GA.

With your help, AER helps you

The Annual Army Emergency Relief (AER) Fund Drive has already begun and will continue to May 2nd with a goal of $20,-000.

The AER has been helping provide emergency financial assistance to deserving Army members — both active and retired — for 35 years.

Funded by donations from Army members, the AER is one of the Army's ways of taking care of its own. Ft. Benning personnel will be asked to contribute generously when contacted by their section AER fund drive keyman.

In the past year the local AER has given emergency financial assistance to 1,448 individuals totalling $134,485.09. The recipients of these funds are not strangers. Many of them may be working with you now or have in the past. These loans are given to all military personnel including retirees, dependents and military intransients. Loans are made for emergency situations and are repaid by allotment without interest.

Project officers have been appointed by each major unit activity and office throughout the installation to collect contributions for the drive.

Chairman for this years compaign is Col Richard McKee, Director for DPCA. Assistant to Col McKee is 2ndLt John Williams, AER custodian and the Secretary-Treasurer of Community Activities Association.

Military personnel are requested to make their contributions at their unit, while retirees living in the Tri-City are asked to send their donations to the AER office, Ft. Benning, Ga. 31905 or bring them in person to Rm 112 of the Welcome Center, Bldg 83.

Early ETS to reup OK for some first-termers

First-termers who are nearing their separation date from the Army soon will be able to whack away a 120- to 180-day chunk from their time remaining. There are strings attached, however.

A just-released DA message informs that AR 601-280 (Interim Change 12) has been undergoing revision. This Army regulation pertains to discharge eligibility points awarded to servicemembers who are nearing the expiration of their first service term, but contemplating immediate reenlistment. According to the DA report, the changes will be established in three phases.

Phase I, effective since Mar 1st; first termers who are within four months of normal ETS date may request discharge for the purpose of immediate reenlistment.

Phase II, taking effect April 1st, will authorize first-termers within five months of normal ETS date to request discharge for the purpose of immediate reenlistment.

The last phase (Phase III), taking effect May 1st, states that first term personnel who are within six months of normal ETS may request discharge for the purpose of immediate reenlistment.

Other rulings were directly highlighted by the regulation change. They are that:

- Personnel discharged under the above provisions are eligible to reenlist for any option listed in AR 601-280 for which qualified. However, personnel serving overseas will not depart the oversea area earlier than their original DEROS unless otherwise directed by DA, MILPERCEN;
- Personnel discharged earlier than three months prior to normal ETS for purpose of immediate reenlistment are not eligible for payment of unused accrued leave; and
- The unserved portion of the enlistment from which discharged will be counted as obligated service for purpose of selective reenlistment bonus computation.

The new policy change will not affect provisions for discharge and reenlistment to meet a service-remaining requirement. Persons who are serving a second or subsequent term of active service are not eligible for the early ETS-for-immediate reenlistment option.

TDY meal assumed available unless statements obtained

Travelers should be reminded that meals and quarters are assumed to be available, whether or not utilized, at the point of TDY unless statements of nonavailability (or impracticability) are obtained from the TDY station. When no statement is obtained, deductions from the per diem rate are made at $4.50 per meal for enlisted, $2.25 per meal for officers and $19 for quarters (officer and enlisted). Most TRADOC installations have either an officers' field mess or an enlisted dining facility in which officers may eat.

Benning 'Super Soldiers'

Former 'Roly-poly" wages fat war

SSgt Kenneth G. Harbin, Operations Sergeant, U.S. Army Infantry Board, would rather run than eat.

By Joyce Walker

Some battles are fought and won off the battlefield. One such battle was waged by SSgt Kenneth Harbin, Operations NCO at the U.S. Infantry Board. His enemy was FAT!!!

"I've had a problem with fat ever since I was a kid. No matter what I eat, it all seems to go to that spare tire around the middle," Harbin said.

Two years ago, when Harbin first arrived at Ft. Benning, the 5'11" soldier weighed 248 pounds. According to the Army revised weight table, if you are 5'11", you should weigh between 127 and 197 — whether you are 18 or 48 years old.

Being 51 pounds in excess of his weight limit caused 30-year-old Harbin to score 195 points out of a possible 500 on the Physical Fitness Test and run the five miles in 65 minutes.

"After many hours, days, weeks and months of dodging PT programs, making excuses as to why I was justified in being fat, I finally took a good look in the mirror and saw just what I really was — a roly-poly in uniform!!!" Harbin said.

He added, "It was at that particular moment that I decided that I had had enough and it was time for me to get with the program.

In April 1976, SSgt Harbin began his war on fat. His first course of action was to attend the diet class at Martin Army Hospital and check with a physician on his health. He was simply told. "The only problem you have is fat!!"

The hospital staff had suggested that Harbin go on a 1500 calorie diet but he cut it by 500 calories and supplemented the diet with all kinds of vitamins.

His regimen consisted mostly of fruits, juices, fish and boiled eggs. "I've gotten to the point where I hate boiled eggs," he chuckled. "Skim milk was the only beverage that I allowed myself and I drank on the average, a quart a day."

Once having started his diet, he was faced with the agony of combating hunger. "When those hunger pains start slapping at your stomach, you develop a urge to rush to the refrigerator, fling open the door and devour everything in sight," he exclaimed.

What to do? "If I watched television, I was used to a snack and if I stayed up late I was used to a snack," he said.

Harbin's weapon of defense was to exercise. "I would change into my running gear, dash out of the house and run for two or three miles hoping for a release from the pain that kept shouting — EAT FOOD!!! I started making bets with another guy to

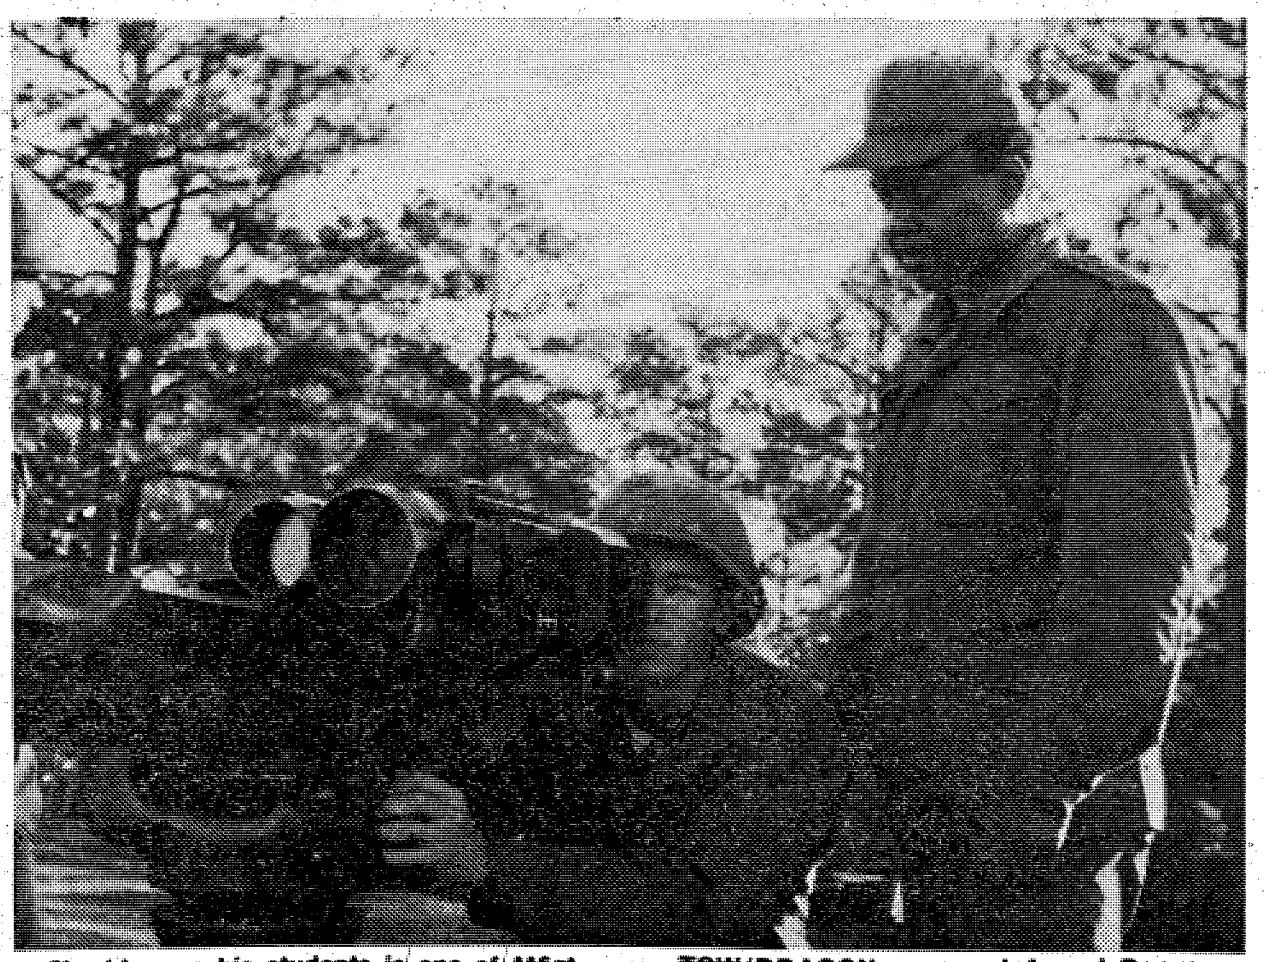
Noncom holds officer slot at 'tank-buster' range

By Betty Zimmerman

A Weapons Department, USAIS, NCO has held down a captain's job since April 1976 and quite capably according to his superiors.



MSgt. Eli Barber is in charge of Aparri Range where TOW/DRAGON classes are held. He and 25 instructors train a new class each week on these sophisticated 'tank-busters'.

The majority of their students are straight out of AIT while a few come from post units such as the 3/7th. Few are volunteers for the course, but Sgt. Barber said that usually by the second day the students become impressed with the capacity of the weapon and hence enthusiastic.

Not only does Barber supervise his staff, but he must prepare his own lesson plans, take care of systems enginering, and coordinate equipment readiness, transportation and support with his training schedules.

"The paperwork is staggerng, but I enjoy the challenge and especially the opportunity to do things my way," he remarked.

"For instance, I require every new instructor assigned to me to go through our course before he attends the Instructor Training Course. I think he should know how it feels to be the student before he learns to be the teacher."

Checking on his students is one of MSgt. Barber's many duties as chief of the TOW/DRAGON course at Aparri Range.

AUSA issues defense budget assessment

The defense budget for Fiscal Year 1978 proposed by former President Ford and recently amended by President Carter will not get the United States back on the road to an adequate national defense, according to the Association of the United States Army.

The association has just issued A Look at the Fiscal Year 1978 Defense Budget, its annual assessment of the strengths and weaknesses of administration proposals for the defense establishment in the upcoming year.

The report is particularly critical of the contradiction between what new Defense Secretary Harold Brown has been saying about the need for adequate general purpose and conventional forces to raise the threshold of nuclear war and the adequacy of financial support planned for those forces by the Carter administration. Of the total $2.8 billion reduction recommended by the new administration, $2.3 billion is to come out of funds for the conventional forces.

Two other aspects of the Carter-recommended changes to the Ford budget are also singled out for sharp criticism: the plan to make a 50 per cent cut (from $200 million to $100 million) in funds available for the Army's new tank-killing helicopter, the AAH, and a $105 million cut in money to be spent to replish stocks of ammunition still badly depleted by assistance to Israel in the Yom Kippur War.

With concern growing over the swelling conventional war-fighting capability of the Soviet Union and its Warsaw Pact allies, this is not the time to be cutting back on the supplies and equipment that would be needed to fight a successful conventional war in Europe and to avoid the need for the use of nuclear weapons, the association maintains.

Copies of this position paper are available at the Post Public Affairs office, room 604, Bldg 4, or call 545-1516.

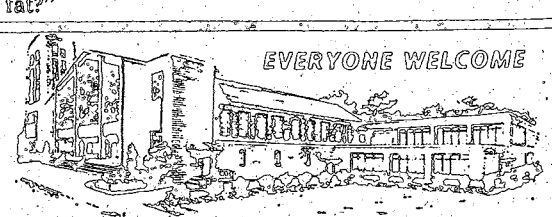
see who could do the best in PT, running, marathons, in just about anything that concerned exercise.

"It got the point where I became upset whenever I thought I had been cheated one second on a PT run. I was frustrated and mad if the commander canceled PT because of inclement weather. I would run anyway on my own."



He continued, "I was out to prove to myself that I could do it. I was tired of being fat! I hated being fat! And never again will I be fat!!!" he declared.

During his struggle Harbin began to doubt his sanity. It was very frustrating losing a pound and then gaining a pound. "I found myself wondering if I could get a surgeon to cut it off," Harbin jokingly remarked. He was fortunate to have a friend with whom he could talk and who understood what he was going through.

By August 1976, Harbin had the beast of fat contained. Down to 195 pounds, he could run, dance, sing and enjoy what he had been missing for years. On his last PT test, he scored 452 and ran five miles in 36:36.

On February 26th, representing the USAIB at Auburn University, he came in first in the 1½ mile race for his age group.

"For me, the battle is only halfway over. I know that if I ever let up my guard, the beast of fat will attack and destroy what I've fought so long and hard to attain," said Harbin. "It was a hard struggle both mentally and physically, but after all, whose fault is fat?"

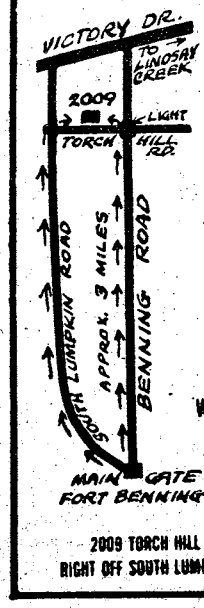
"No-deposit, no return" generation

Ours is a "no-deposit, no-return" generation: it was nursed with disposable baby bottles, pampered with disposable diapers; it learned to write with disposable pens, to shave with disposable razors and to find its way with disposable flashlights; it even learned to bundle its used disposable trash in plastic disposable bags.

The Environmental Protection Agency estimates that Americans annually toss out 71 billion cans, 38 billion bottles and jars, four million tons of plastic, 7.6 million television sets, seven million cars and trucks and 35 million tons of paper.

Is it any great wonder, then, that Americans waste about half of their energy?



Americans are natural switch flippers and knob turners, probably because they get so much practice at flipping and turning. There's no escaping all the knobs and switches on lights, thermostats, TVs, radios, stereos and appliances. They're shiny or dull, round or square, instant-on and instant-off. Some glow in the dark and pop on automatically by prearranged signal.

Next time you reach for that switch or knob — think first. Are you acting through habit or is there a genuine need to turn, flip, plug-in, start or switch? If there isn't, don't. The energy you use is non-returnable.

Waste not, want not!

1/29th creates training teams for SQT preparation

By Bev Lockhart

Due to the varied tasks assigned to the unit, the 1/29th Inf (Pioneers) has established mobile training teams to prepare their troops for the upcoming Skill Qualification Test (SQT).

The Pioneers' mission of providing troops and equipment for the Infantry School instruction and the distance between the different instructional sites makes it difficult for the individual soldier to take time out for organized SQT training.

After evaluating several alternatives, the idea of forming and training mobile training teams was adopted.

With the new program, a team of platoon sergeants and squad leaders from each battalion unit are exposed to an intense training program in the written and hands-on components of the SQT. They then go out to the small support elements at the various instructional locations and train their troops during the time gaps in daily support.

An SQT training package has been developed to make the teams more effective. Each package contains a Light Antitank Weapon (LAW), a claymore mine, a radio, a protective field mask, hand grenades, an M60 machine gun, and a written test for 11B (infantry) skill levels 1 and 2.

1st Lt. Robert Simpson is in charge of the hands-on (practical) part of training the mobile teams, while 2nd Lt. Larry Nichols developed the 1/29th test booklets, which are a condensed version of the soldier's manuals.

The written test is to be used as an aid in identifying weak areas in the soldier's skills.

Equipped with these instructional tools, the platoon sergeant and his squad leaders can move from one duty site to another and teach, test, and record their troops' progress toward passing the SQT.

Post Fife and Drum Corps wins award

By Joyce Walker

Ft. Benning's Explorer Post 76, Fife and Drum Corps has been presented the George Washington Honor Medal award from the Freedsoms Foundation at Valley Forge, Valley Forge, Pa. , according to Maj. Bill Drollinger, Senior Advisor and Director.

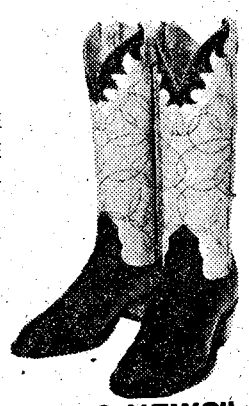
The post received the award for its support of National Themes of "Spirit of 76," Heritage 76, Festival USA and Horizons 76 and for supporting US Army and Ft. Benning's objectives in community service during the period August 31, 1975 to August 30, 1976.

A scrapbook which was forwarded to the foundation documenting the post activities with photographs, sample materials, printed brochures, newspaper clippings and copies of letters of commendation, is being placed in the Awards Library at the Freedom Foundation. The award-winning material will be available to teachers, researchers and visitors and will be used for displays, conventions and by the staff to help individuals and organizations in developing future programs.

The Explorer Scout Unit Freedoms Foundations award is designed to recognize and draw public attention to the Explorer posts which best support America, suggest solutions to basic problems, contribute to responsible citizenship and inspire love of country.

Explorer Post 76, organized in April 1975, is a coeducational activity of the Boy Scouts of America, Chattahoochee Council No. 91, Ft. Benning District. The unit, sponsored by the School Brigade, is an activity for young adults between the ages of 14-20 in the tri-city area.

The red, white and blue clad colonial Drum and Fife Corps has won 12 honors for its music and marching performances and has appeared on local and national television. The unit has made over 60 public appearances in the states of Florida, Georgia and Alabama in its brief history. Twelve of these performances have been in support of the national American Revolution Bicentennial Administration sanctioned activities, thirty-nine in support of locally sanctioned Bicentennial activities.



"In less than two years, this group of experienced Scouts has performed for the President of the United States, represented the U.S. Army in the featured Torchlight Parade of the 200th U.S. anniversary, at Ft. Benning won 12 marching competitions and performed over 60 times in military ceremonies in the absence of the 283rd Army Band," noted Drollinger.

One of the many highlights of the unit's record is its performances at Walt Disney World and Sea World in 1976. They performed in Disney World's "Liberty Square" in lieu of the Disney World Fife and Drum Corps. And then represented the United States Army at the annual Sea World Armed Forces Week which featured performances by military service band, Drill Teams and Drum Corps.

Eeeyyy--you're not even "COOL"

By J. Gorecki

Hear any new four-letter words lately? I'm referring to the vulgar ones that seem to permeate the environment and burn the listener's ears. By now it's quite possible that you've heard them all, but that shouldn't mean you are duty-bound to add to their circulation in an attempt to educate the multitudes.

We are what we say. Our words reflect our personalities and our ability to communicate with others. Have you ever evaluated your ability to communicate and the vocabulary you use to get a message across?

Maybe it's time that you did. You might be unfavorably surprised.

The use of vulgarity may give you the impression that it adds flair and emphasis to a story and that you are coming across as being 'COOL.' The 'Fonz' doesn't resort to a four-letter word vocabulary and we all know that he's 'COOL.'

"Eeeyyy — you don't need it."

Next time your temper flares and the urge to spurt forth vulgarities becomes overwhelming; consider the people in hearing range. Not only are you polluting their environment but you're also demonstrating a lack of maturity and a disrespect for your position in the service.

Many times it's not a woman being victimized by a foul-mouth man. It might be women's lib or a lowering of moral values but there are a few women who could put the men to shame.

The impression received when overhearing a woman expressing herself with a four-letter word barrage of profanity is that she lacks human dignity, is cheap or ignorant and is probably not the type person to bring home to meet the folks.

The same impression holds true for the man who is unable to communicate in other than obscenities.

Consider the following as a check to determine whether your vocabulary is fit for aural ingestion.

- If what you say were said to you, would you consider it an insult?
- If your mother overheard you speaking, would she be offended?
- When you speak, do people tend not to listen or avoid your conversation?
- When your children repeat what you say, do you feel compelled to take remedial action?
- Have you ever been asked not to speak in front of a group?
- When you are talking or writing a letter, do you find it difficult to express yourself without resorting to your vocabulary of four-letter words?

If you answer yes to any of the above questions, you have problems. You're a foul-mouth, %!#%!# and offensive person.

"Eeeyyy — you're not even 'COOL.'"

Organization Day slated

The 197th Inf Bde will celebrate Organization Day today.

There will be special events on Kelley Hill to include a band concert at 9:30 a.m., followed by an awards ceremony, sports events, food and beverages.

Col. Fletcher Ware, Brigade commander, cordially invites the general public to join the families of the 197th Infantry Brigade for this special day.

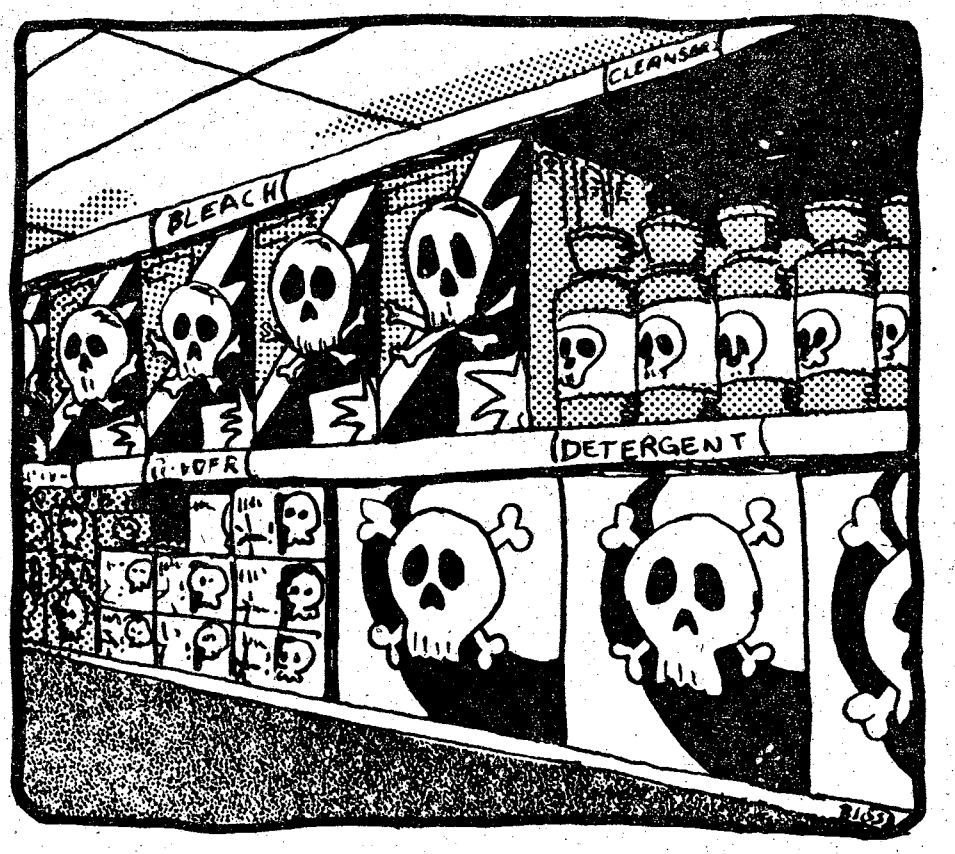
Thousands of lives lost to accidental poisoning

Each year thousands of Americans die as a result of accidental poisoning. In view of this, March 20-25th has been proclaimed as "National Polson Preventation Week" throughout the United States.



Chemicals in the home pose the greatest threat to young and old alike. Many of the chemicals used in our homes today for cleaning polishing, exterminating and gardening contain potential killers. These chemicals poison in three ways:

Ingestion. A particular threat to young children and the elderly. Ingestion results from household products with dangerous chemicals being left within the reach of small children and in the elderly as a result of poor eyesight and subsequent improper self-medication.

Inhalation. Caused by gases and vapors with carbon monoxide being the main culprit. Car engines running in closed garages or cars, charcoal grills being used indoors, paint and varnish thinners, oven cleaners, glues and pesticides all present inhalation hazards.

Absorption. Poisonlngs through absorption or contact resulting in skin irritations, are probably the most common

March heralds tornado season

By Lisa D'Luhy

March has arrived and with it the tornado season. Tornados are the most frequent of the natural disasters in the U.S. and are not uncommon in the South.

The Ft. Benning Storm and Shelter Plan has the steps you must take to protect yourself and your family should a well-defined storm with dangerous wind velocity be expected to the strike the post.

There are three different storm warnings given when such a storm is expected to strike. The Blue Warning is given when gusty surface winds in excess of 39 mph are expected. The Green Warning is for sustained surface winds in excess of 55 mph or gusts in excess of 69 mph are expected to occur within six hours, but not before one and a half hours. Post sirens will give a series of two steady two-minute sounds interrupted by one silent period of one minute. Residential areas are notified by Mobile Public Address sets. A Black Warning is given when sustained surface winds in excess of 55 mph or gusts in excess of 69 mph or tornadoes are forecast to occur within one and a half hours. A steady sound of post sirens for three minutes will follow with residential areas being notified by Mobile Public Ad-

Editor's Note: The following is the final article in a series concerning dental health and your children. These articles were presented in conjunction with National Children's Dental Health Week.

My next door neighbor has a handicapped child and was asking me about taking her to a dentist. Are there any special problems regarding dental care for the handicapped?

Certain children with special physical or medical conditions often require special dental treatment. There is no group for whom optimum dental health is more important than the handicapped. Yet, oral health is often neglected because of the pressures of more immediate health problems.

Dental disease is preventable, and this is especially important for the handicapped. It may be harder for them to get to the dental office for treatment, but restoring the mouth may be done under routine conditions. If this is not possible, the dentist can recommend a colleague who does treat handicapped patients, and will give the child the attention he or she needs.

Newcomers invited to join scouting program

This year marks the 65th anniversary of the Girl Scout movement in America.

In celebration, the young ladies and adult leaders on Ft. Benning have launched a campaign to share the fun and adventure of scouting with others in the military community. At this time there are 17 different troops operating in all of the housing areas of Ft. Benning. These groups include Brownies (ages 6-8), Juniors (ages 9-11), Cadettes (grades 7-0) and Seniors (grades 11-12).

As spring approaches, all of the girls are looking forward to outdoor camping at rustic Camp Hideaway on Ft. Benning and on a nearby lake at the Council's Camp Concharty.

To enable more girls to take part in the rewarding and enjoyable experiences of scouting, four new girl scout troops are presently being organized on post and the established troops are accepting new members. This is the last opportunity for young people to join the program prior to the camping season.

Young people seeking enjoyment and adults interested in assisting with a meaningful, enjoyable program are invited to contact the Scout Service Center, 545-1806 or Diana Curl 687-9697 and start along the fun-filled path of scouting.

Thousands of lives lost to accidental poisoning

maladies caused by household products. Agents involved in this type of poisoning are strong acids, alkalines, insect and weed killers, solvents, cleaning fluids and certain cosmetics.

Food poisoning is also a serious hazard. Consumption of harmful plants, berries, shellfish, or mushrooms can lead to this type of malady. Poisoning may also result from eating edible plants that have been contaminated with pesticides and not thoroughly washed.

Every year thousands of young children meet death through accidental poisoning. As long as we have active, inquisitive children and poisonous substances in our homes, the threat of accidental poisoning will be there. Perhaps we can't eliminate the threat entirely but we can take some simple steps to reduce the chances of this happening. Here are some precautions to observe in your home:

- Never store potential poisons with foodstuffs.
- Never store potential poisons in pop bottles, drinking cups, or other food containers.
- Never save prescriptions or other medications after patient has recovered.
- Never transfer, poisonous substances to unlabeled containers.
- Never re-use containers of chemical substances.
- Never tell children you are giving them candy when you are actually giving them medicine.
- Never use chemical products without reading the label.
- Never give or take medicines in the dark.
- Never keep unlabeled preparations.
- Never store poisons with first-aid supplies or in medicine cabinets.
- Never permit perishable foods to stand without adequate refrigeration.
- Never drink doubtful water without first boiling or purifying.
- Never leave children at the home of sitters, friends, relatives, or neighbors unless you are sure their home is as safe as yours.
- Never underestimate the reaching distance or climbing height of a child.

Although President Carter has proclaimed the week of March 20th as "National Poison Prevention Week," to protect our children we must practice poison prevention every day of the year.

dress sets. All clear is given when the severe storm danger is past.

During a tornado warning, you are advised to remain indoors and keep away from windows, structures with large, poorly supported roofs such as auditorium and gymnasiums, the upper stories of office buildings, house trailers and automobiles should be avoided.

If there is no time and no underground or upright shelter available, you should seek protection by lying flat in the nearest depression such as a ditch or ravine.

If you are in an office building, stand in interior hallways on the lower floors, preferably in the basement. In maintenance areas, workers should move quickly to the section of the plant offering the greatest protection in accordance with advance plans.

In homes, a basement usually offers the greatest safety. If no basement is available, take cover under heavy furniture in the center of the house against strong inside walls. Covering yourself with a rug provides some protection against flying glass and debris. Opening windows and doors on the side of the house away from the winds may help equalize dangerous variations in air pressure.

In the event it becomes necessary to evacuate families because of damage to buildings, they will be housed in Bldg 83. If damage to quarters occurs, and it becomes necessary to house families over an extended period of time, quartering will then become the responsibility of the Family Housing Officer.

On a Green or Black Warning, children will be placed in designated shelter areas within the individual school. The same procedure will apply to the Post Nursery. Children will remain in designated shelter areas until "All Clear."

Don't use the telephone unless it becomes absolutely necessary, as all lines must be left open for emergency use. And keep a battery-powered radio with you to listen for weather information.

Personnel living in family quarters should have a copy of USAIC Pam 500-1, Storm and Air Defense Instructions for Dependents, if you have not received your copy contact the Family Housing Office immediately. The information could save your life.

Army captures Interservice Basketball crown

By Betty Zimmerman

Army toppled Air Force 99-87 to capture the Interservice Basketball Championship at Ft. Benning's Briant Wells Fieldhouse March 10th. The victory gave the GI's an unblemished 3-0 mark in the three-day round robin tourney.

The Marines swamped Navy in the night's first encounter, 131-98, which gave the Marines a 1-2 record and Navy 0-3. Air Force finished with a 2-1 mark.

Six Army players were selected for the Armed Forces Team along with four from Air Force and one each from Navy and the Marine Corps. These best of the tournament players will compete in the National AAU Tournament to be held at Delray Beach Florida on March 29th.

The selections were: Eddy Brown, Jyrona Ralston, Alfred Forney, James Penn, Pierre Russell and Robert Sherwin - Army; George Hester, Jerome Bennings, Bobby Young and Ron Brown - Air Force; Richard McGuire - Navy; and Leon Haskins - Marines.

High scorer for the tournament was Army's Robert Sherwin with 92 points in three games. Right behind him was Richard McGuire from Navy with 82 points. He was also the tournament's top rebounder with a total of 35.

The Flyers next home game is March 26th against the Georgia Select Rugby Club, rated the best Rugby team in Georgia.

The Flyers are still looking for anyone interested in playing rugby and hold their practices on Tuesdays and Thursdays at 5:15 p.m. in Doughboy Stadium.

This is an election year too!!

Elections for state office will be held this year in Wisconsin, Kentucky, New Jersey and Virginia. There will also be local town, county and municipal contests too numerous to list.

Each year elections come and go with many soldiers failing to exercise their right to vote. In some cases, a lack of knowledge of local issues and candidates contributes to non-participation. DA voting officials offer the following suggestions on keeping informed on the local scene:

- Subscribe to a local newspaper while serving away from home.
- Request information on local candidates and issues from family members.
- Write the local or state political organizations. Request information on candidates and issues. Most state political organizations can aid military members and dependents in obtaining necessary voter registration forms.

The only Federal elections this year will be special elections for the Senate or House of Representatives if any of the seats are vacated by death, retirement or resignation of a current officeholder.

If and when any elections are scheduled, information will be sent to voting counselors. DoD and DA information media channels will also get the word out. Check with your unit voting counselor for more information. (ARNEWS)

Old Caddie Masters don't fade away when they retire. They come back to work. At least that is what Freddie McKnight did. After serving as Caddie Master at the Ft. Benning Country Club for 31 years, McKnight retired earlier this year. But it was more than he could stand. This month the personable McKnight returned to his familiar surrounding at the insistence of his new boss, club pro George Cliff. Now McKnight works for Cliff and his title is "Club Storage Manager." So Freddie's retirement was short lived, and to his many golfing friends that is good news indeed.

SQT test answers

1. Response D is correct — If the target fills or exceeds the stadia lines, it is within range. With the target moving toward or away from the gunner, use the vertical crosshair and either stadia line. Once the target is determined to be within range, place the crosshairs on the selected aiming point on the target.

2. Response C is correct — If the target falls within the area between the stadia lines, it is out of range.

Note: This question will not be on the SQT; however, questions similar to these will. Each week the BAYONET will run articles related to SQT which could help you score well come test time. In the meantime, use your Soldier's Manuals and TEC to get ready.

The ceremony, held in Benning's Marshall Auditorium, culminated three weeks of arduous training for the new Army paratroopers. Medical rates rise overseas

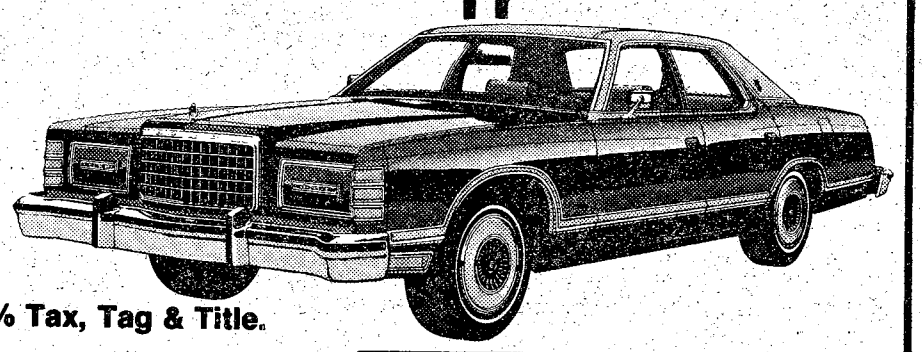
New rates for overseas medical care provided by military treatment facilities will go into effect on April 1, 1977, except where a local union contract or an agreement with a foreign government that calls for the current rate is in effect. These contracts and agreements will be honored until their expiration.

Non-U.S. citizens and their dependents will pay $168 per day for inpatient care, the same rate now paid by U.S. citizens and their dependents. The present rate for non-U.S. citizens is five dollars per day.



Each outpatient treatment, examination, or consultation for either a U.S. citizen or non-U.S. citizen will cost $20. Currently, the cost for both citizens and non-citizens is one dollar per visit overseas, and $20 per visit in the United States.

The decision to increase overseas reimbursement rates was based on Congressional requirements for full cost recovery, increases in the cost of providing medical care, changes in international economic conditions and improvement in the Federal Employee Health Benefits Program. The rates are based on worldwide average costs.

34th Med lunches emphasize "togetherness"

By Bill Walton

Bringing the personnel of the 34th Med Bn closer together and permitting the cooking staff to display their culinary skills is idea behind the "Togetherness Luncheons" started recently by SFC Ernie Hamm, 34th Med Bn Dining Facility manager.

"Togetherness Luncheons" featuring ethnic menus are held on a monthly basis. The first luncheon featured a German Menu consisting of stuffed cabbage, sauerbraten, cauliflower, knackwurst, sauerkraut, bratwurst and wienerschnitzel. Future menus will include oriental, spanish-mexican and soul food.

"I think it was an outstanding meal, particularly the sauerkraut. It is wonderful that the battalion has started these ethnic luncheons and I am looking forward to the Spanish-Mexican Luncheon," commented Mrs. Felix Miranda.

A total of 437 people consisting of military and families of battalion personnel were served during the first luncheon. Decorative ice carvings and German music highlighted the luncheon.

"The cooks whipped up a great German Luncheon. I tried the wienerschnitzel and stuffed cabbage and they were very good. I think the cooks deserve a lot of credit for preparing such a good meal," said Sp4 Willie Lewis, HHD, 34th Med Bn.

To further increase family involvement in the "Togetherness Luncheon", wives of the 34th Med Bn personnel are encouraged to submit their favorite recipes for possible future use, to SFC Hamm.

All you Gobbler hunters can oil up the ol' shootin' irons and go bag your bird this weekend. Turkey season opens on the Alabama portion of the reservation this Saturday, the 19th.

The state of Georgia has no turkey season this year so hunt on the Alabama side only. I'm told if you're a good enough caller, you can call them across the river anyway. Keep safety in mind and make sure its a bird turkey you're shooting at and not some "turkey" turkey caller.

Members of the Post Bass Club seem to have the knack for picking good tournament days. During last Saturday's roaring thunderstorm, 24 members fought the elements as they fished Lake Walter F. George for their monthly tournament.

Well, I can't leave you without a funny this week, so here goes. These two Marines wanted to impress everybody because they were tired of people laughing at them. So they decided to build the longest bridge in the world. The only problem was that they built it across the Sahara Desert.

Just before hammering in the last nail, they decided to take a trip across it to make sure everything was okay. Well, they were walking along and they came upon two Rangers happily fishing.

10-8 on the warpost

By "HOSS" KACI 4615

The Ft. Benning Provost Marshal's Office (PMO) has a CB radio they use to monitor channel 9 unofficially. The CB belongs to a privately licensed CBer and was placed in the PMO to assist the MPs in keeping track of emergencies.

However, since the Military Police frequencies must be given priority coverage, channel 9 is monitored only sporadically.

If you spot an emergency situation on post requiring the presence of MPs, break for them on channel 9 and describe the situation. If you get no response after two or three breaks, your next best bet is to go to another channel and have a base station relay for you on the telephone.

All post CBers are invited to Flat Rock Park this Sunday, March 20th for a picnic. It'll begin at 11 a.m. in Friendship Hall, it's pot luck, so bring a covered dish, salad or other appropriate dish to share. I've also heard that there might be a convoy leaving the Post Mall around noon for those who don't know the way to the park. Call Snoopy on channel 1 for details.

SFC takes first place in Art Contest

SFC Weston Butler, 2nd Bn, 10th FA, 197th Inf, captured a first place in the recent Ft. Benning Arts and Crafts Exhibits.

His mixed media drawing "Ashanti Mother and Child" took first place honors in the mixed media category.

For years SFC Butler has enjoyed a "love affair" with Art. He has received first prize and honorable mention for numerous of his paintings exhibited in Ft. Benning, North Carolina and Boston. SFC Butler also has done extensive work in Commerical Decoration in Columbus.

The Raleigh, N.C. native works in the operations section of Ft. Benning's only artillery battalion. "To me, art is a creative expression" Butler stated, "a means of displaying my inner thoughts, or the principles of making things of form and beauty."

SFC Butler plans on attending the New England School of Art in Boston before he makes a career of his creative hobby.

With your help, AER helps you

The Annual Army Emergency Relief (AER) Fund Drive has already begun and will continue to May 2nd with a goal of $20,-000.

The AER has been helping provide emergency financial assistance to deserving Army members — both active and retired — for 35 years.

Funded by donations from Army members, the AER is one of the Army's ways of taking care of its own. Ft. Benning personnel will be asked to contribute generously when contacted by their section AER fund drive keyman.

In the past year the local AER has given emergency financial assistance to 1,448 individuals totalling $134,485.09. The recipients of these funds are not strangers. Many of them may be working with you now or have in the past. These loans are given to all military personnel including retirees, dependents and military intransients. Loans are made for emergency situations and are repaid by allotment without interest.

Project officers have been appointed by each major unit activity and office throughout the installation to collect contributions for the drive.

Chairman for this years campaign is Col. Richard McKee, Director for DPCA. Assistant to Col. McKee is 2ndLt. John Williams, AER custodian and the Secretary-Treasurer of Community Activities Association.

Military personnel are requested to make their contributions at their unit, while retirees living in the Tri-City are asked to send their donations to the AER office, Ft. Benning, Ga. 31905 or bring them in person to Rm 112 of the Welcome Center, Bldg 83.

In combat support roles

MAX WAC testing women soldiers

By Thomas Lopez Jr.

While the controversy rages over the female role in the combat arms, women have already created an enormous impact on many combat support units.

Just how much of an impact is what the Department of the Army intends to find out.

One method for testing the impact of women in units is through a program termed — MAX WAC. By varying the percentage of women in the unit and conducting specially scheduled Army Readiness Training and Evaluation Programs (ARTEPs), the effect on unit proficiency and performance can be determined.

Of the 40 company-sized units participating in the tests, Ft. Benning's 598th Light Maintenance Co of the 36th Engr Gp is the post's only unit among Medical, Maintenance, Military Police, Transportation and Signal Companies Army-wide.

Skeptics who don't have many good words for women in the Army generally aren't too hard to find. However, 1stLt. Jerome Johnson, commander of the 598th Lt Maint Co, has nothing but praise for his female soldiers. "I can't speak for anyone else, but the women in this unit, officer and enlisted, do an outstanding job."

According to Johnson the last MAX-WAC ARTEP was the best ARTEP his unit has conducted. Although the percentage of women in the 598th is small, they were instrumental in completing 45 maintenance job orders over the three-day exericse.

Most of the Army career types are used to seeing grizzled old maintenance warrant officers whenever they visit a Direct Support maintenance outfit. Well the 598th has a few of those too, but also very much in evidence are two attractive Women Maintenance Officers. Although the ladies are nice to look at, Johnson proudly states that if you were in either officer's platoon, they would definitely set you straight.

So while tests will continue concerning MAX-WAC and the controversy over women in combat arms rages, the women and men of the 598th are doing very well, thank you.

'Army wants soldiers, that look like soldiers'

By Lisa D'Luhy

When was the last time you were able to see your feet when standing in the position of attention?

Do you find yourself blaming the laundry for shrinking your uniform? Are your seams starting to stretch apart more and more?

If any of these sound familiar to you, it's time you decide to lose weight. Yes, you with that pastry that contains more calories and less nutrients than you need. All it takes is a little will power and a lot less calories.

Sure, everyone enjoys a good meal and most people have a sweet tooth that they tend to pacify more than they should. But remember that new Army standards on weight control are tough and Gen. Bernard Rogers, Army Chief of Staff, wants soldiers that look like soldiers.

Can you measure up to the new weight standards? Do you know what they are?

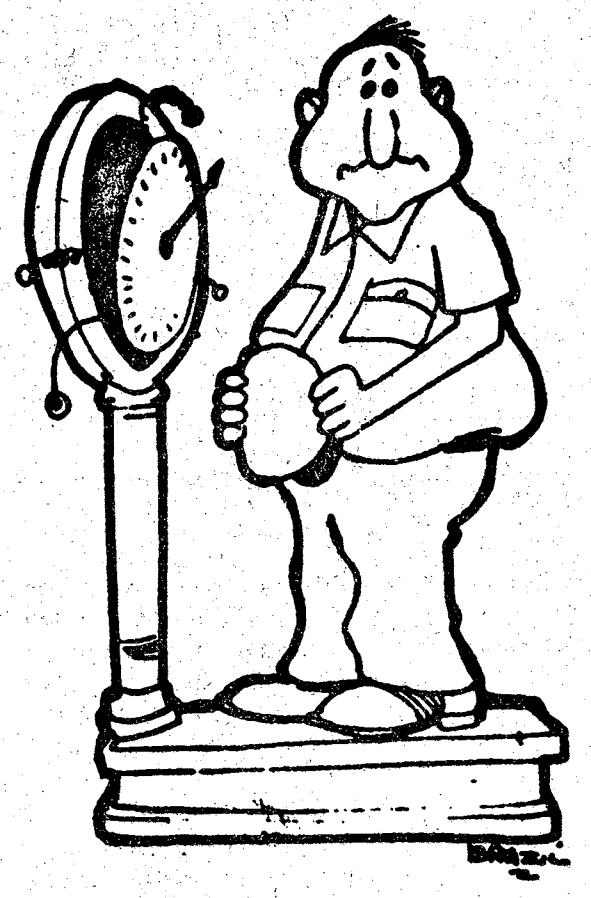
Let's take a look at them and also what is in this program for you. If you don't 'weigh' up to these new standards, you may find yourself barred from reenlistment.

Taking a look at AR 600-9, you can find out all there is to know about the Army standards on weight control and the physical training program.

There is a vast difference in being overweight and obese, as explained in paragraph 3-4.

When a soldier exceeds the maximum for his or her height it does not classify him as obese. Obesity is determined by a physician at the medical treatment facility. You must study the body build, muscular development, and bone structure figure out the weight requirement for the individual.

And don't give yourself an extra five pounds for being big boned if, in reality, you are really small. How do you determine what bone structure you are? Simply take your middle finger and thumb and grasp your wrist. If your finger extends over your thumb, you are classified as small boned. When your thumb and finger join together, you are medium boned and if you cannot reach your finger, you can classify yourself as large boned.



If you find yourself overweight according to the charts, but are physically active, muscular, evidently vigorous and healthy, you should not classify yourself as obese as long as you present a satisfactory military appearance.

Pot bellies detract from your military appearance and also give you a better chance of getting diabetes, high blood pressure, heart disease and many other medical problems if you are overweight and not physically fit.

How do you get rid of that prized pot that took you several years and a few dollars to accumulate?

Unit commanders now look upon overweight troops with the inability to present a proper military appearance and maintain a satisfactory level of physical fitness, as a failure to the U.S. Army and if something isn't done soon to alleviate this problem, the troops will find themeselves barred from reelistment.

Sound a little drastic? It isn't. The Army wants soldiers who are physically fit and ready for combat and that excludes obesity. Even in the job you are performing right now your physical conditioning has to be up to par. If a weight problem hinders you from completing an assigned task or doing it well, something must be done.

How?

At Ft. Benning, as well as other military installations, there are people here to help you if you find that you can't do it yourself.

Your Troop Medical Clinic (TMC) can give you the initial instruction and a prescribed diet to help you on your way, but it's up to you to follow it. You can also enroll yourself in the Diet Clinic at Martin Army Hospital. Currently, there are 300 people enrolled in the clinic, one-third of them are active duty. This program studies your medical records and your eating habits to try to pinpoint where the problem is. Then they establish a diet for you, along with exercise that will help you lose if you follow it properly.

"Some people drastically need to lose weight, said Capt. Karen Hodson, Chief, Clinical Dietetics, "Food was a center part of their life and now they must change their eating habits and know how much food is consumed and when. Physical activity is equally important."

If you are in the weight program at your TMC and after three months are not progressing, your commander will then direct you to the Diet Clinic.

For those who are severely obese, there is a behavior modification class that gives sessions where people talk about other problems that attribute to their eating habits. They talk about eating as a learned behavior and after several weeks of discussion, they begin a diet program.

With stricter regulations on weight control and physical fitness, a person enrolled in a weight reduction program and fails to progress sufficiently denotes apathy, lack of self-discipline, evasive performance or other character deficiencies, will be recommended for a bar to reenlistment or discharge from the service in accordance to appropriate regulations.

Enlisted personnel will not be permitted to reenlist if they do not meet the physical conditioning, weight and military appearance set in AR 600-9.

Remember, when losing weight, set realistic goals for yourself and know that there are people here to help you. "It's an individual responsibility to lose weight and become physically fit for your own health and well-being," concluded Capt. Hodson." There are more explicit regulations than in the past, which means more responsibility. I can only help them plan their diet . . . I can't follow them home."

So all of you soldiers out their with those pot-bellies, and for those of you who know you are overweight, take heed. If you don't shape, be prepared to ship out.

Red Cross provides military personnel assistance

by Bev Lockhart

President Jimmy Carter, as Honorary Chairman of the American Red Cross, has declared March, National Red Cross Month.

Since Clara Barton started the volunteer organization in 1881, the Red Cross has furnished aid in wartime to sick and wounded soldiers and provided valuable assistance to American prisoners of war. In peacetime it has assisted servicemen and their families in acquiring grants and loans in emergencies and has acted as a liaison between servicemen and the Department of Defense.

The Red Cross at Ft. Benning performs a variety of services to the assigned personnel and their dependents.

There are two offices on post to help them meet their needs. The main office is located next to the Credit Union in Bldg. 1699. The other located in Martin Army Hospital is run by Miss Janet Baker, hospital field director. She helps all assigned hospital personnel and patients. Each office provides specified services to meet the needs of all personnel assigned to Benning and their dependents. The offices are open during normal duty hours, but a duty person is available around the clock to service emergencies after duty hours, weekends and holidays.

According to the Senior Field Director, Mr. J. C. Jackson, the knowledge that a Red Cross agency exists on post with the capability of servicing a report on home conditions or a doctor's report, usually within one to three hours, does much to maintain high morale and relieve the anxiety of servicemen and the dependents. "In 1976 a total of 9,543 persons received assistance through the Red Cross at Ft. Benning," explained Jackson.

Some of the more common services available relate to emergency or convalescent leave, leave extensions, sending or receiving communication concerning personal or family problems and financial assistance.

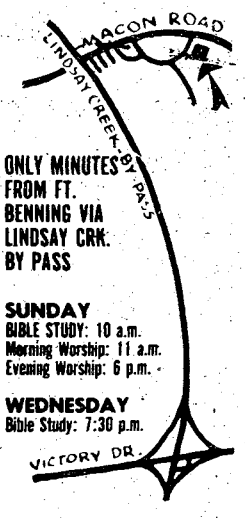
"Military personnel sould make sure thair families have all the identifying information, such as social security numbers, units available in the case of emergency, this will help the Red Cross in speeding the request for assistance greatly," explained Jackson.

Out of 1,387,515 world-wide volunteers, more than 150 are at Ft. Benning, Jackson said. He added that volunteers are always needed at the hospital, veterinary clinic, safety and recreation services. The Red Cross has a summer youth program, under which young people help out at the hospital, library, Youth Center and various other places.

Anyone interested in becoming a Red Cross volunteer should contact Mrs. Jane Harvey, chairman of volunteers, or Mr. Jackson at 544-4122 or 544-4123.

SGM Academy good for undergraduate credit

Senior noncommissioned officers completing the non-resident course of the U.S. Army Sergeants Major Academy can collect up to 18 semester hours of undergrate credic, according to a recent decision by the American Council on Education (ACE).



ACE recommends that graduates of the non-resident course receive 18 hours of credit in the upper division of the Baccalureate Degree Program. This brings the non-resident course in line with the resident course.

The ACE recommendation is retroactive to July 1974.

The Academy is also accredited by the Southern Association of Colleges. Many colleges recognize the undergraduate credit in certain degree programs.

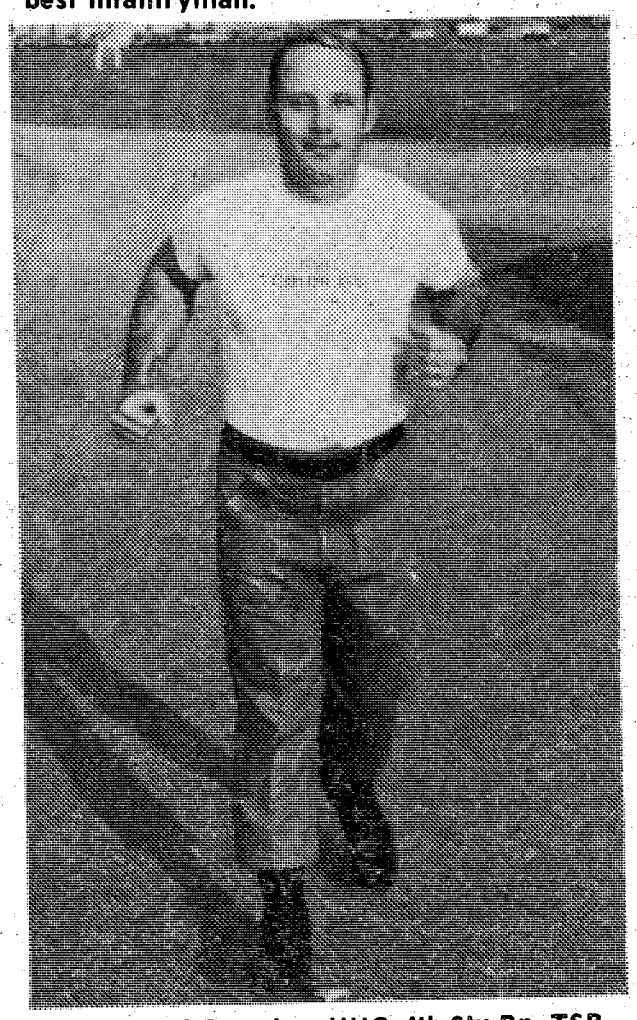
By Ron Fowler

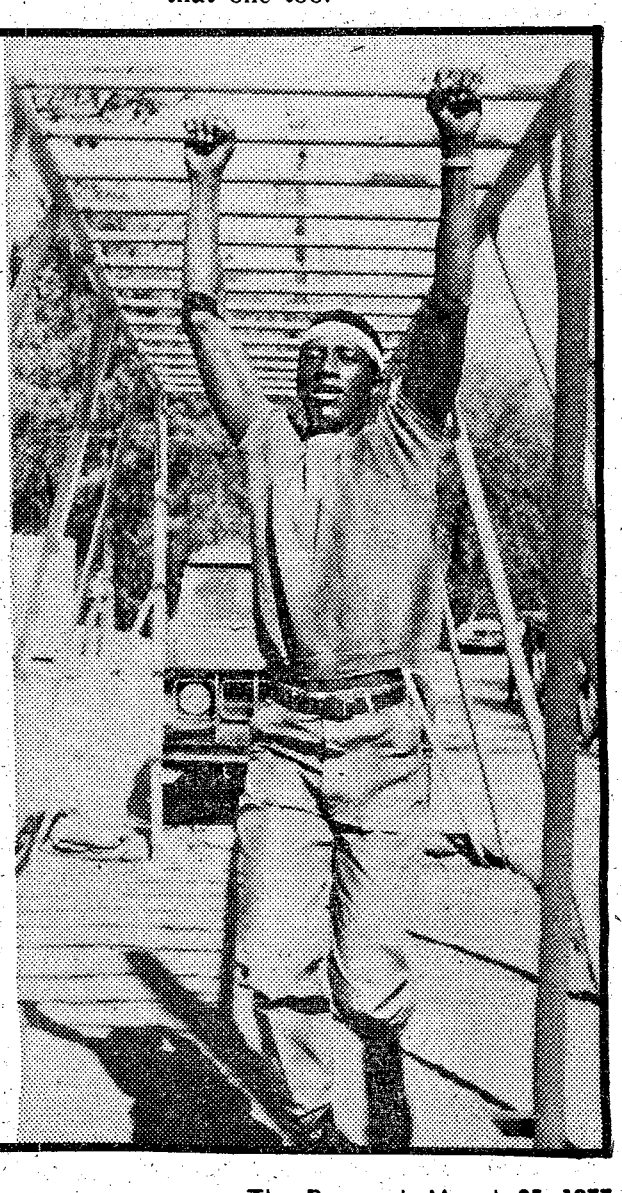
Amid flags and guidons slapping in the air in the brisk spring breeze, PFC James Carter of Co B, 3/7th Inf, 197th Inf Bde was honored as the 'best infantryman' in the 'Forever Forward' brigade in ceremonies conducted last Friday at Combined Arms Field on Kelley Hill.

PFC Carter earned the title of 'best infantryman' after intensive Skill Qualification type testing in many infantry skills. This testing was conducted as part of the Special Military Skills competition held by the brigade last week. He also finished as runnerup in the Radio Telephone Operator competition.



"I was probably the most surprised person around when I was told that I had won the award," said PFC Carter. "I felt that I didn't perform as well as I should have in some areas, but with a little study and practical exercise, I'll be able to correct those problems, no sweat."

PFC Carter, who proudly proclaims Anniston, Alabama as his hometown, joined the Army on February 19th, 1976 and completed his Basic Combat Training at Ft. Jackson, S. C. From there it was off to Ft. Benning where he took his Infantry Advanced Individual Training (AIT).



"AIT here at Ft. Benning was pretty tough because of the intense heat and humidity in the summertime," commented PFC Carter. "Some of the blocks of instruction we received were very challenging, especially the compass and map reading course."

Maj. Gen. Willard Latham, post commander, presented PFC Carter with an engraved plaque proclaiming him the brigade's 'best infantryman' during the activities Friday.

"I'm very proud to have won an honor like this," PFC Carter concluded, "and you can believe that I'll be right there in the thick of things when the next competition rolls around. I want to win that one too!"

SSgt. Fred Crumley, HHC, 4th Stu Bn, TSB recently received his 2500 mile patch in the Army's Run for Your Life program. Crumley started the program in 1971 and has logged most of the 2500 miles while assigned to the Tower Training Committee of the Airborne Dept.

Staying fit comes easy to 2ndLt. Abraham Turner, Co B, 1st Bn, AIT Bde. He starts every day with morning PT with the trainees of the company, including the two mile. Then he runs an additional three miles in the afternoon followed by a run through the 1st Bn Fixed Strength Circuit course. Having graduated from South Carolina State College as a music major, Turner plays all brass instruments and has formed a miniature drum and bugle corps to provide martial music for ceremonies.

Chemical Warfare--Ypres, 1915

"Ypres, April 22, 1915: Try to imagine the feelings and the conditions of the (French) colonial troops as they saw the vast cloud of greenish-yellow gas spring out of the ground and slowly move down wind toward them, the vapour clinging to the earth, seeking out every hole and hollow and filling the trenches and shell holes as it came. First wonder, then fear; then, as the first fringes of the cloud enveloped them and left them choking and agonized in the fight for breath — panic. Those who could move broke and ran, trying, generally in vain, to outstrip the cloud which followed inexorably after them."

Maj. S. J. Auld from the book 'Gas and Flame in Modern Warfare'

". . . we saw . . . figures running wildly and in confusion over the fields . . . The story they (the retreating soldiers) told we could not believe; we put it down to their terror-stricken imaginings — a greenish-gray cloud had swept down upon them, turning yellow as it traveled over the country blasting everything it touched, shriveling up the vegetation. No human courage could face such a peril.

Then there staggered into our midst French soldiers, blinded, coughing, chests heaving, faces an ugly purple color, lips speechless with agony, and behind them, in the gas-choaked trenches, we learned that they had left hundreds of dead and dying comrades. The impossible was only too true.

It was the most fiendish, wicked thing I have ever seen."

From a personal accounting by the Reverend O. S. Watkins

With the advent of mustard gas the battlefield environment changed:

Its use in concentrated doses could make any position untenable. A gas mask was no longer sufficient protection as a soldier could be disabled by vapor or liquid contact anywhere on his body. It would contaminate weapons and rations. Casualty figures reflected the new role of chemical warfare after July 1917: the British had slightly over 20,000 gas casualties from 1915 until the initiation of the use of mustard; from July 1917 to November 1918, they had over 160,000.

H. L. Gilchrist, 1928

Chemical training and operations--Ft. Benning, 1977

By J. Gorecki

The U.S. will not be the first to use chemical weapons, but, if attacked with chemicals, the U.S. retains the right to retaliate in kind

Geneva Poison Gas Protocol of 1925

When considering the negative aspect of public opinion concerning the use and effects of chemicals in warfare, the question most often asked is:

Why U. S. Chemicals?

As explained by the Joint Chiefs of Staff, the reasons for maintaining a chemical warfare capability are to deter the use of chemical weapons by other powers and to retaliate in kind with chemical weapons if attacked with them to avoid certain defeat or having to cross the nuclear threshold.

Since the nation initiating chemical warfare could gain a substantial advantage by forcing its opponent into protective equipment and clothing, it makes sense, claims the Pentagon, to force the attacker into the same position. A credible retaliatory deterrent and good defensive posture, say the Joint Chiefs, limit an attacker's temptation to use chemical weapons.

As Reichminister Albert Speer pointed out at the Nuremberg War Trials, the reasons Germany did not resort to gas warfare in 1944 and 45 were simple. Military men feared Allied retaliation and Germany did not want to be held accountable for gas warfare after losing the war. The threat of retaliation in kind was not the least subtle. During World War II, President Roosevelt threatened the leaders of the Third Reich with immediate devastation if they resorted chemical warfare.

"In light of U.S. policy on the use of chemical weapons, primary training emphasis at the Infantry School is placed on survivability and how to operate on the battlefield in the event of chemical attack," stated Maj. Stahlman, the chief of the NBC Division at Ft. Benning.

"As evidence by the enormous quantities of Soviet-supplied chemical defensive equipment captured during the 1973 Yom Kippur War, an immense potential enemy threat exists in the area of NBC (Nuclear, Biological and Chemical) operations."

Chemical warfare in the Soviet Army is taken very seriously. By way of comparison, the U.S. Chemical Corps was nearly phased out of existence several years ago, until it was realized how far ahead the Soviets had gotten.

Commanders Call

Added emphasis on chemical operations is evidenced by an Army-wide increase in the size of the Chemical Corps. DA recently approved and is in the process of fielding a Chemical Defense Company in each of its active duty divisions. Three of these companies will be fielded in Europe this year. And according to Maj. Stahlman, "The Army is considering assigning a full-time Chemical Corps NCO to each combat arms company."

"In the past, each unit assigned an NCO and officer the additional duty responsibility of maintaining a viable NBC program, but with the renewed emphasis on chemical operations, full-time NBC assignments at all echelons are likely."

"Until recently, the majority of NBC training conducted in The Infantry School was in the classroom environment. However, with this underlined concern and the fact that additional DoD funding has been made available for equipment, we have taken more of the training to the field," says Capt. John Gatti, a primary instructor in the NBC division of the school.

"In the Infantry Officer Basic Course, students conduct simulated chemical decontamination exercises in the field, which require them to take appropriate action on Armored Personnel Carriers. The conduct of this exercise was acclaimed by trainers and students alike, as some of the most valuable training received by the basic officers."

"It is planned to expand this exercise to other courses within the school," said Gatti.

Stahlman added that, "As funding becomes available, plans are to increase the field application of NBC operations training to include the use of full-protective overgarments and simulated agents and detector kits, which will require students to identify the chemical agent being used and then take the appropriate decontamination actions."

Ft. Benning's Inspector General is also examining unit capabilities of assigned NBC personnel more closely. As the individual Skill Qualifications Test and the Army Readiness and Training and Evaluation Program stress many tasks on NBC, this renewed emphasis is two-fold — it reinforces DA concern about the NBC threat and aids the unit in meeting its readiness goals.

"The Army is well on its way to insuring that its soldiers and units can survive in an NBC environment. The next step is to achieve a level of training that not only promotes the ability to survive, but also the ability to operate and win on the NBC battlefield," Stahlman concluded.

If you are on active duty or a dependent and possess a Georgia Motor Vehicle License, you must renew it every four years, says the Georgia State Highway Patrol.

Georgia no longer allows military personnel, and dependents, to operate vehicles with expired drivers licenses.

Since Jan. 1, 1976, all Georgia drivers, including military personnel and dependents, have been required to renew their licenses by their date of birth every four years.

Military personnel, and dependents, may initate renewal of their Georgia Drivers Licenses by sending a request to — Supervisor of Driver Services Division, Georgia Department of Public Safety, ATTN: Military Renewal, P.O. Box 1456, Atlanta, Ga. 30301.

777 ENROLL defensive driving course

National Safety Council

Editor's Note: The following article is the first of a series of three concerning defensive driving. The articles are presented in conjunction with National Defensive Driving Week, April 3-9th.

The National Safety Council has declared the week of April 3-9th as "National Defensive Driving Week" in an effort to bring attention to defensive driving as a means to save lives, prevent human suffering and economic waste by reducing traffic accidents.

Traffic accidents are the leading cause of accidental death in the United States. They claimed more than 45,000 lives in 1976. Cost to the national economy resulting from deaths, injuries and property damage due to traffic accidents was about $20 billion for 1976, one of the highest in history.

Driver error is still the major cause of traffic accidents and accounts for approximately 85 per cent of all traffic accidents. Since the first recorded motor vehicle death, over two million persons in the U.S. have died.

The campaign slogan for 1977 is "Traffic Safety Begins With Me." This slogan emphasizes the personal responsibility motorists must have for themselves, their passengers and to others to do their utmost to prevent accidents from happening.

Remember, the responsibility for the nation's great loss of life and the high cost of property damage from motor vehicle accidents rests with us — the drivers. We must constantly be on the defense against traffic situations and conditions which bring about accidents. (TNS)

Girl Scouts host Campers Reunion

The sounds of marching feet will be replaced by laughter tomorrow at the Army Reserve Center, 3001 Macon Rd, Columbus, when over 500 Ft. Benning Girl Scouts, their families and fellow scouts from adjacent communities come together for their annual "All Council" Camp Reunion from 2 to 4 p.m.

The scouts will renew old friendships with counselors and campers, trade autographs and share their camp pictures taken at Camp Conchary (a 145 acre mountain woodland bordered by Roosevelt State Park and Callaway Gardens).

The girls will share memories of canoeing, backpacking, horseback riding, woodland adventures and inner tube floating down a scenic Georgia river.

The young ladies will present a program of songs, dances, games and skits.

Activities for this summer include making a movie and becoming a part of another country's culture.

The public is invited to attend the annual Campers Reunion.

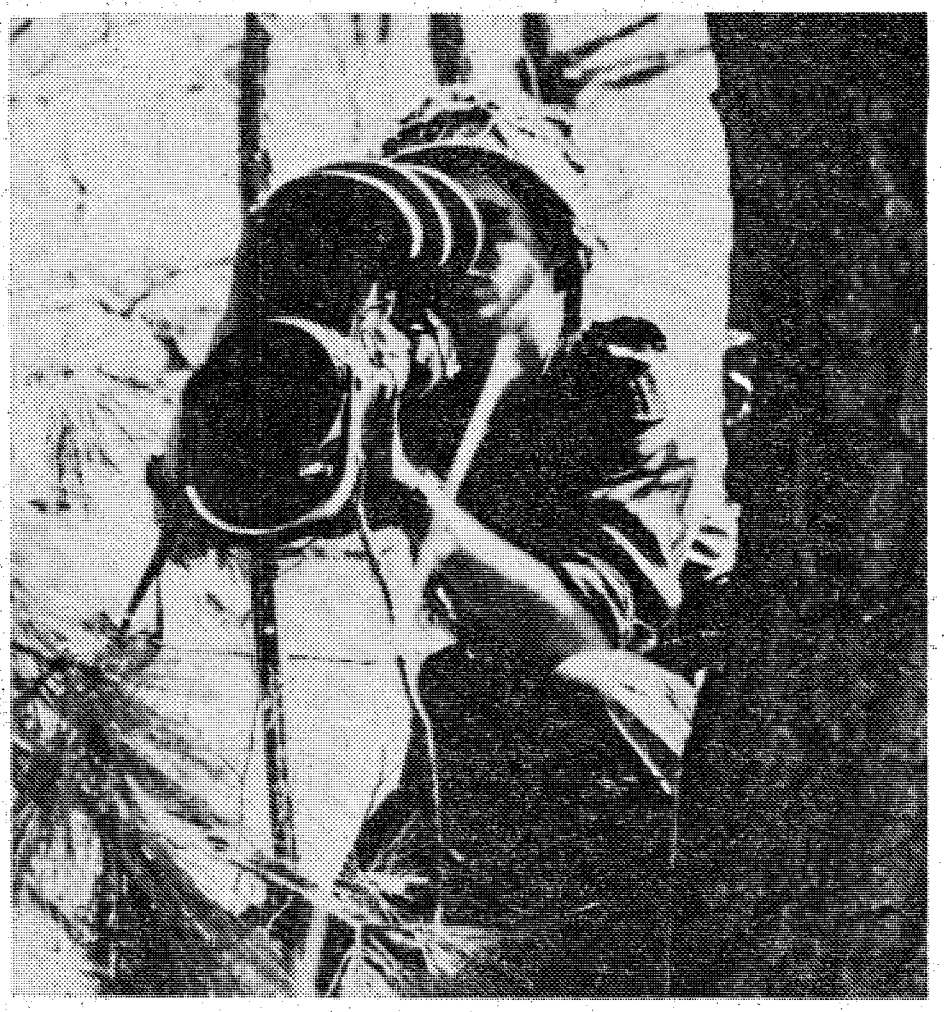
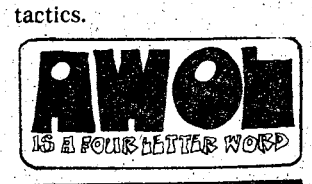
3/7th Infantry goes 'LITE'

By Betty Zimmerman

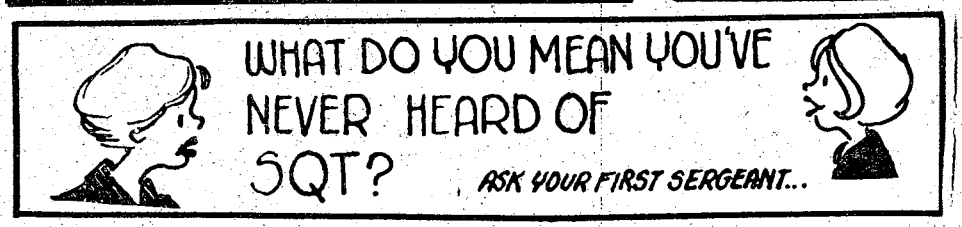


The 3/7th Inf recently conducted a week-long exercise entitled "Project LITE." The LITE stands for light infantry test and evaluation.

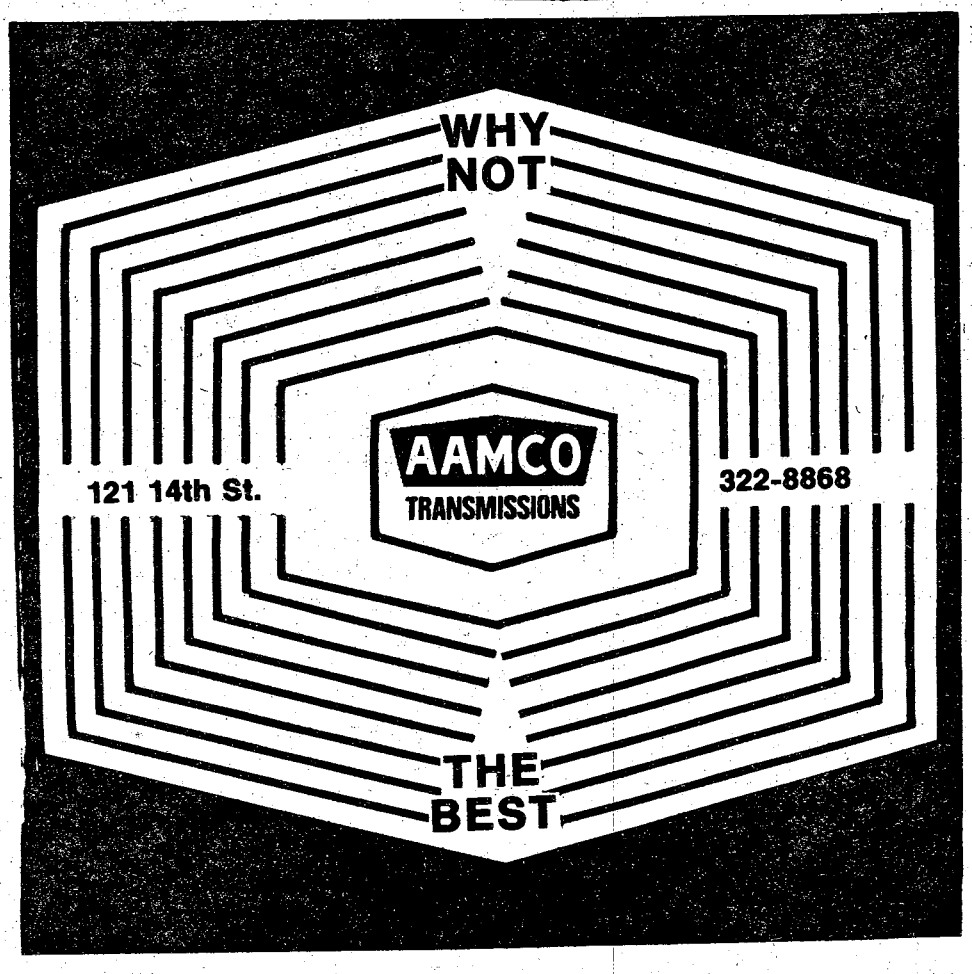
The Infantry School and the 197th Inf Bde evaluated the capabilities of the light infantry battalion as reorganized under the Division Restructuring Study (DRS). They also assessed the status of training in the terms of criteria prescribed by ARTEP 7-15, which is based on individual task accomplishments.



There were six phases of the exercise. The battalion made a road march to the assembly area and were thrown right into contact with the enemy. Next, came a delay followed by a night withdrawal action.



Phase V was a test of their defensive actions and VI called for a deliberate daylight attack.



The maneuvers included air strikes, chemical bombardments, tank attacks, airborne action, as well as the standard infantrymen tactics.

Sp5 John Amos 3/7th Inf takes aim with a DRAGON during "Project LITE" Exercises conducted by the 197th Inf Bde unit.

Parachute club looking for members

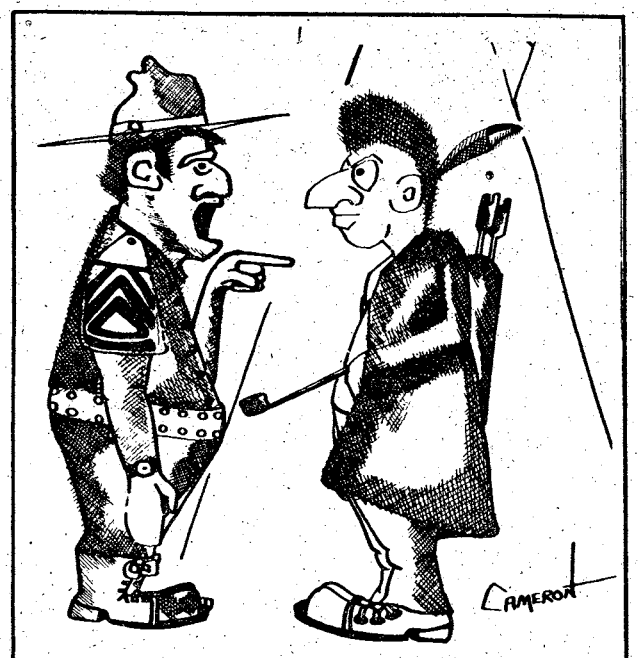
By Bev Lockhart

You don't have to go airborne to jump out of an aircraft. That's what I found out when I decided to make sky diving my newest interest.

The Ft. Benning Sport Parachute Club is offering night classes for new club members April 4th to 8th at their clubhouse, Bldg 2195. Cost for the training classes is $30.

Classes for the new parachutist include a brief orientation on the club, instruction on exit and stability, malfunction procedures, hazardous landing such as trees, water, and power lines, control of the canopy, aircraft emergencies, and emergency exits. After "ground" training is complete, the jumper must make a minimum of five satisfactory staticline jumps before the instructor decides whether his student is ready to make a freefall.

Membership is open to active duty, retired and dependents at least 16 years of age, and employees of the Department of the Army. Dues are $5 monthly.



Previous members of other military parachute clubs are only required to pick up dues from where they left off.

Since flight time and funds were cut off for military aircraft use in sport parachuting, membership of the club gradually dropped from 70 to 15, according to 1st Sgt. Richard Riley, club president.

The club started contracting civilian aircraft for under $5 per jump when they were no longer able to use military aircraft, which caused many members to terminate their membership. A new provision is being brought up to the club's board of governors allowing the club to pay half of each club member's jump fee, which will cut out much of the expense to the sport parachutist.

"We're doing everything we can to keep the club from folding," Riley explained.

For additional information call 687-7070 or write to P.O. Box 1528.

So your recruiter promised you a scout or Redeye assignment, eh?

DYA Soccer Scores

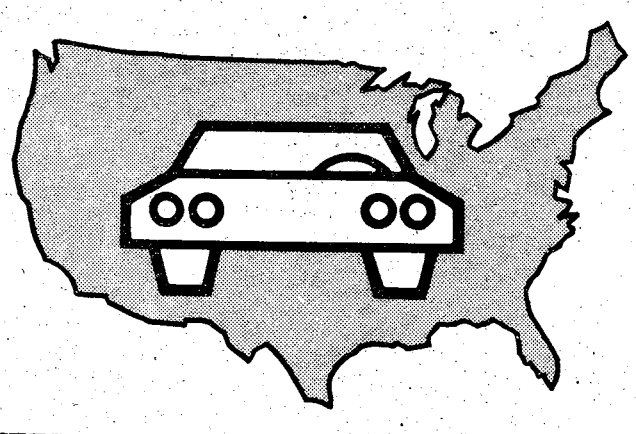
Dependent kids in shorts and knee socks can be seen on practice fields all over post chasing a black and white ball around these days. It's soccer time again at Ft. Benning.

Over 190 boys and girls are participating in the two Youth Activity's soccer leagues this spring. The junior bracket, 7-9 years, began their season the week before vacation, and the senior league, 10-13 years, began their games on March 25th.

Results thus far in the junior league are:
Knicks 4, Jaguars 1
Jaws 3, Bearcats 0
Cobras 4, Flyers 1

Umpires Needed

The Ft. Benning Officials Association is accepting applications for softball and baseball umpires for the post leagues this spring.



The umpiring duties cover company level softball and youth activity T-ball, baseball and softball. Nearly all games are played during the week in the evening hours.

Experience in these sports is not necessary if you are willing to learn. Clinics will be run on April 5th and 6th and training will be provided for personnel needing it.

Any military, retired, or Ft. Benning civilian workers are eligible. Contact the association secretary, SFC Allen Fluellan, at the post Sports Office in Doughboy Stadium or call 544-4516 for more information.

Top soldiers selected by 197th Bde

By Ron Fowler

Three days of intensive and grueling competition dubbed 'Special Military Skills Week', came to an end for the soldiers of the 'Forever Forward' 197th Inf Bde last week as winners were chosen from each separate category.

The Special Military Skills Week, which was a prelude to the 197th Inf Bde's Organization Day, was held in order to provide each soldier in the brigade an opportunity to prove to the other soldiers of the 197th that he, his section, or crew were the best in the brigade in their particular jobs or duties.

"We had a total of 23 events that made up the Special Military Skills Week," stated 1st LT. William Miller, project officer of the skills competition. "We broke these down into two different categories; the individual events, such as the best medic or the best radio telephone operator, and the group events, like the best M60 machinegun crew and the best 4.2 inch mortar crew. It was one of the most challenging competitions that we've come up with yet."

Competition in each of the different events was fast paced and close right up to the very end where many of the winners were decided by the margin of only a few points. Each soldier in every category gave it their best as they vied for the top spot in their particular competition.

"I felt that our particular phase of competition was more unique than any of the individual events," said SP4 Dennis Wilson of AT Co, 3/7th Inf, crew chief of the first place Ground Surveillance Radar crew. "In the crew or team competition, you have to blend and work together as a unit or you won't get anything at all accomplished. There's an art to doing that and I feel that our crew has that ability to mold together and accomplish any mission given to us. That's why we placed first in the skills competition."

The Special Military Skills Week culminated in Organization Day activities in which Maj Gen Willard Latham, presented each winner and runner-up in each category with a specially engraved plaque.

"I'd like to see more competition like this taking place in the future," concluded PFC James Carter of Co B, 3/7th Inf, winner of the best infantryman award. "It gives each of us just that much more incentive to try harder."

I don't know why it is, but it just seems to me that when some people key up on a CB rig they start talking as though they had a mouthful of marbles. Or else they affect an exaggerated corn pone drawl that distorts their words. And then there's the CBer who turns his power mike up to the max and splatters over six or eight channels; he's kin to the guy who holds the mike right up against his mouth and yells into it. And how about the CBer who can't say three words in a row without inserting a whistle, "Hey", "Doggone", or "Cotton-picker" in between. The channels are crowded enough without this kind of verbal pollution.

Kinda reminds me of the time my friend, the Mad Doctor tried to talk some of that "Rubber Duck" style gibbersh:

"Well Doc, been nice talking to you. I'll see you later."

"Indeed. Consign the beneficent digital integers to the denizens of your domestic habitation. Have a propitious present concomitant with an emendatory future. Maintain the refulgent laterality scandent and the oleaginous quarter decursive. Be sure that your conveyance is interjacent to the marginal moats and that the ursine gendarmes are extrinsic of your knickers. I shall endeavor to reeffectuate declamatory discorse during the reciprocal moiety of this excursion."

EER, SQT, TEC, POT -- EMP

By J. Gorecki

Whether you've been in the service for 15 days or 15 years, you've no doubt had some "POT." Performance Oriented Training that is!

You've heard it many times and have probably asked the same question as do many soldiers.

What is POT?

By the book it's — " a systematic procedure concerned with developing skill or critical tasks." In other words, training which will prepare you to do your job in combat. Put more bluntly — those tasks which will keep you and your buddy alive in battle. "Critical" tasks from subject areas such as land navigation, radio communication procedures and weapons qualification are but a few. Now in order to know what tasks are "critical" to your job in combat, the Army took the POT approach to the field to soldiers just like you — the guys who do the job. They picked out tasks which were key to combat success, came up with tests and trained soldiers to pass those tests. When the tests were passed, the training objectives were met.

Sound simple?

Well, it is once you realize its all tied into the same porgram — the Enlisted Personnel Management System (EPMS).

As you know EPMS provides for two methods of checking soldier performance — the Enlisted Evaluation Report (EER) which is written by your immediate superior and the score you earn on your Skill Qualification Test (SQT).

With good scores on both, you're on your way to promotion.

Since you know pretty much how the EER system works and what you have to do to get good scores, an explanation of SQT might help to tie it together.

SQT

The SQT is a POT approach to testing. What you can do on the job, you'll find on the test, so the better you can perform in your MOS, the better you score.

You'll be tested in three different ways on performance-based written tests, through hands-on performance and by the proficiency you've proved during the year. In all cases you get to demonstrate your ability to perform jobs in your MOS.

So far so good.

Now you're thinking — "There must be hundreds of tasks I've got to know in my speciaialty."

"How can I learn all of those tasks?"

Well, first of all, many of the tasks you do everyday in training are the same tasks you can expect on the SQT.

Secondly, the Soldier's Manual ior your MOS and skill level include all the tasks which can be tested on the SQT. Each task is spelled out with the conditions and standards expected along with reference materials.

Thirdly, you'll get an SQT Notice from DA at least 60 days prior to taking the test. The Notices will explain exactly how the test will be administered and what will be expected of you.

You'll also receive a pocket-size SQT Preparation Guide from the Infantry Center which will tell you the Training Extension Course (TEC) lessons that will help you study.

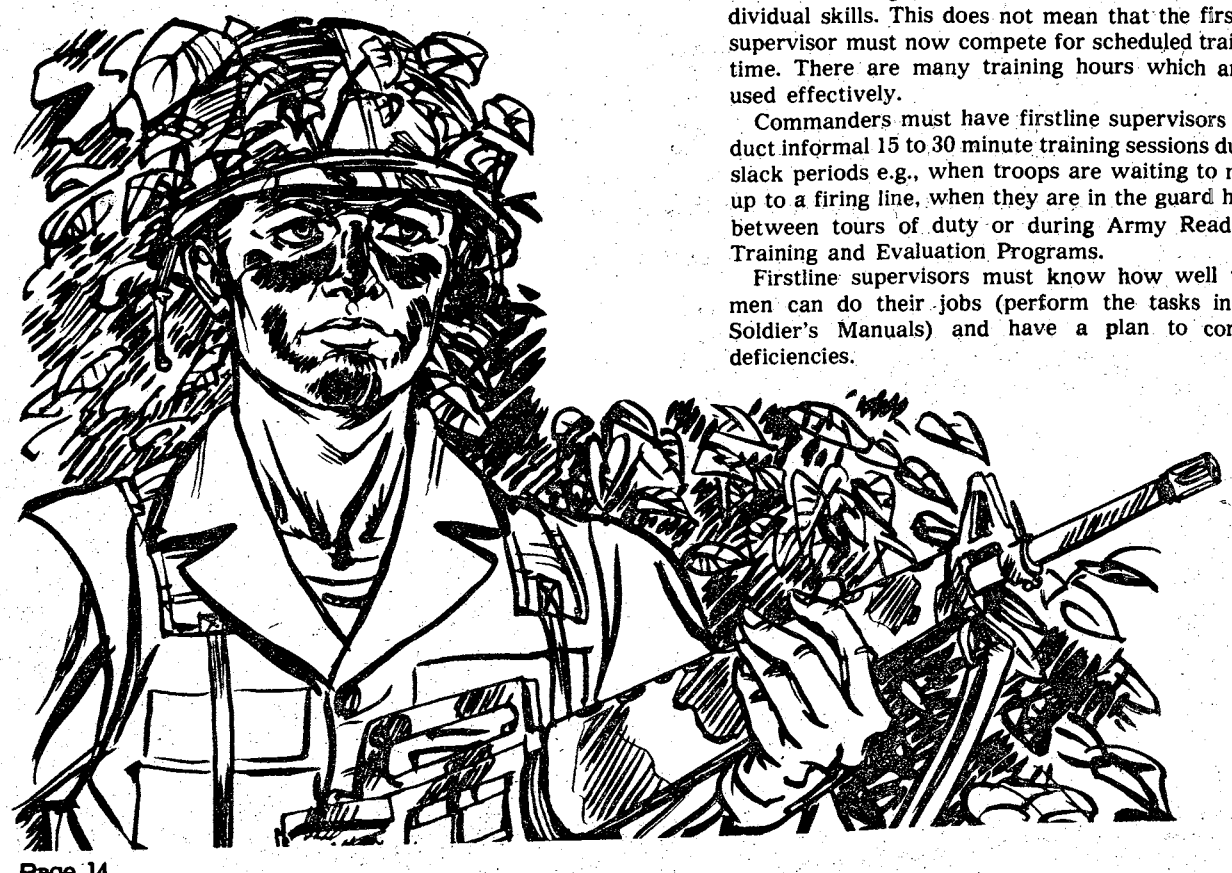
Finally, your direct supervisor is going to conduct hands-on training on these tasks year 'round (during duty hours) so you will learn them well and here's the reason why —

The way it's set up, your commander and NCOs are going to make sure you get all the time needed, because the better you train for SQT the better the unit can perform on its Army Readiness and Training Evaluation Program (ARTEP).

Your next question will probably be —

"What's the best way to study?"

The majority of time you spend in lear-



"I didn

Don't let the Skill Qualification Tes

Editor's note: The following information was compiled to aid commanders, training managers and trainers in preparing their soldiers for the upcoming Skill Qualification Tests (SQT) beginning April 1st. It was derived from unit after action reports, observations by Infantry School representatives, remarks made by test participants and an analysis of soldiers' scores on the Army-wide field test of Infantry SQT conducted during October to December 1976.

The low scores on the Infantry SQT Indicates an Army-wide lack of proficiency In basic individual infantry skills.

There are two causes for this low level of proficiency. First, a lack of emphasis on combat skills in training; and second, inadequate training time in units.

Infantry Soldier's Manuals (SM's) were developed to resolve the first. The second is more difficult to resolve, however, increasing the role of the NCOs in unit training is an approach that is achieving success.

Now that Soldier's Manuals have identified those skills in which soldiers must be trained, the standards of performance required and the training materials needed; there is an increasing effort in most major commands to make the firstline supervisor responsible for training the men under his control in individual skills. This does not mean that the firstline supervisor must now compete for scheduled training time. There are many training hours which aren't used effectively.

Commanders must have firstline supervisors conduct informal 15 to 30 minute training sessions during slack periods e.g., when troops are waiting to move up to a firing line, when they are in the guard house between tours of duty or during Army Readiness Training and Evaluation Programs.

Firstline supervisors must know how well their men can do their jobs (perform the tasks in the Soldier's Manuals) and have a plan to correct deficiencies.

The following are some reasons why some soldiers failed to score well on the infantry hands-on component of the SQT.

Claymore Station

Common causes for failure on this task were the inability to arm the mine properly and the failure to complete the entire task in two minutes.

In arming the mine, soldiers often tried to force the blasting cap through the shipping plug or failed to lock the blasting cap in the well with the plug. Many soldiers simply ran out of time while reading-in additional requirements which did not exist. For example, rather than walking to the mine emplacement point, some soldiers went by low crawl. Others spent time camouflaging the mine.

Though these two actions may be desireable or even required in some situations, they were not a part of the test. Apparently, soldiers were not well briefed on the test prior to taking it.

As mentioned previously, soldiers should be trained using the Soldier's Manual and then evaluated using the SQT criteria prior to the actual SQT test date.

M-60 Station

Soldiers usually failed this task because they wasted time during loading trying to pull the cocking lever to the rear before they took the weapon off SAFE. Soldiers also used too much time positioning the sight and the hinged soldier rest before firing — two actions which are not required and are not graded. Another reason soldiers failed this event was that they frequently left the bolt in the rearward position. The weapon is not clear with the bolt in that position.

LAW Station

Failure on the LAW usually occurred because soldiers did not perform this task in 20 seconds. A trained soldier can easily perform the task in 20 seconds. When questioned, most soldiers who failed the LAW test responded that they had not had an opportunity to practice the task with an experienced NCO.

PRC-77 Radio Station

Soldiers usually failed this test event by not completing the task in the alloted two minutes as the were unfamiliar with the equipment. A traine soldier should be able to perform this task in abou one minute.

's ties it all together!!!

know that!"

ning the "critical" tasks of your specialty will be during duty hours in everyday training.

But, of course, you'll want to score well on the SQT, so it'll probably require some off-duty training. The best method to learn your job in off-duty time is through TEC lessons. Correspondence courses, Field Manuals and other training literature will also help, but are not essential to getting high scores on the SQT.

What's TEC

There are presently 351 different TEC lessons available on Ft. Benning to assist you in preparing to do your "critical" job tasks and pass the SQT. Each lesson includes a set of instructions which tell what equipment you'll need and a pre-test to check your proficiency.

If you pass the pre-test, there's probably no need to take the lesson until after you've studied some other tasks. But if you fail, just follow the instructions, proceeding at your own pace, and take the end of the lesson test which is provided to check your progress.

Some of the lessons are genuine "dog and pony shows" with lights and live action sounds, personalized cassette TVs, stereo head phones and music.

But, don't forget the equipment — TEC is used to support "hands-on" training — POT, remember?

TEC can be used individually or in groups, but it shouldn't be used like a training film. Better results are gained when the questions "asked" by the "Cue-See Projector" are responded to prior to pushing the "go ahead" button. TEC shouldn't be used in place of a scheduled class, but it can be used as part of it.

The best results are achieved in groups of from two to nine soldiers with an instructor or someone who has taken the lesson beforehand (and passed the post test) as a controller.

TEC works

In November, 690 Infantry soldiers were given a test on SQT type tasks and only 42.2 per cent were able to pass. The same 690 soldiers were tested again after using TEC in the manner described above and 87 per cent passed!

TEC is POT for SQT.

"What's it all mean?"

For the first time, the Army has devised a program where it appears that everyone is "singing off the same sheet of music."

- The job you do each day is the job you can expect to be held responsible for on your EER and the SQT.
- The "critical" tasks in your specialty with reference materials can be found in your Soldier's Manual, so there's no guessing on your part as to what's required of you.
- TEC lessons are available in your unit and at all Learning Centers on post to aid you in training yourself.
- Your commander and NCOs are going to teach the SQT on duty time all year 'round because helping you to do better is going to help them on the unit's ARTEP.
- The Enlisted Personnel Management System at DA is set up to support you and assist you to advance in the Army based on how well you perfrom here at Ft. Benning.

What are you waiting for?

The adage "get off the pot" no longer applies. POT is where it's at. So, get on the POT and move!!!

t catch you unprepared

An Army-wide high incidence of battery breakage occurred during the field test. This was caused by a failure to seat the connector pins (on the radio) in the connector pin receptacle (on the battery). In the tests beginning April 1st, damage to the battery during assembly of the radio will result in a NO-GO on the task.

Hand Greanade Station

Failures on this test were caused by many different reasons. First and foremost was soldier inability to detonate one of the three grenades in the target area. This was due to three factors: soldiers did not know how to align their bodies with their targets prior to throwing, they did not "lob" the grenades and/or they didn't correct for range if the grenade was underthrown.

Another cause for failure was unfamiliarity with the fuse and safety devices (clip, pin and lever). Often soldiers hesitated between throws as if waiting for instructions to throw. This caused many soldiers to run out of time.

The test instructions have been changed to insure that soldiers do not wait unnecessarily between throws.

Protective Mask Station

Failure on this station included: inability to mask (including clearing and sealing) in nine seconds, performing the steps out of sequence (sealing the mask before clearing) and improper fit of the mask. Masks come in three sizes; small, medium and large. It is difficult if not impossible for a soldier with a small face to get a proper fit with a large mask.

Testing beginning April 1st will be without the protective hood. The 15 second standard for masking with the hood was found to be unacceptable. A new standard will be developed for next year. In the meantime, all soldiers will have to perform the task of masking in nine seconds without the hood.

Test Results

Claymore mine	39 per cent GO
M-60 Machine Gun	21 per cent GO
LAW (M72A2)	78 per cent GO
PRC-77 Radio	67 per cent GO
Hand Grenade	59 per cent GO
Protective Mask	60 per cent GO

As expected, soldier perfromance on the hands-on test was better than on the written component. There are primarily two reasons for this:

- First, reading comprehension is not as critical to success in the hands-on tests as it is on written tests. Realizing low reading ability may be a problem, several features have been designed into the Infantry SQT system which tend to neutralize the problem.
  — The read grade level (RGL) of the lower skill level Infantry SQT is at the ninth grade level.
  — Infantry SQT questions are taken directly from the Infantry Soldier's Manuals (SMs) using the same phrasings and terminology.
  — Each soldier is given a personal copy/copies of applicable SM for his skill level.
  — Sixty days prior to the test date soldiers are given an SQT Notice telling them specifically which SM tasks will be tested.
  — Training Extension Course (TEC) videotape lessons have been fielded to support soldier training on SM tasks.
  — Trainers are required to conduct hands-on training on SM tasks year 'round not only to prepare soldiers for SQT, but more importantly, to insure combat readiness.

Constant, repetitious hands-on training of tasks to SM standards not only insures proficiency, but retention as well. Hands-on training is the best way to train for both the hands-on component and the written component of SQT.

- The second reason soldiers performed better on the hands-on component (HOC) of SQT is that commanders focused their training efforts on the HOC and tended to neglect the written component altogether even though the HOC represented less than 15 per cent of the SQT.

How to prepare for SQT

- Train soldiers year 'round on individual combat skills. Don't wait until "test time" to prepare for the test.
- Make sure each soldier has the required oldier's Manuals for his MOS and skill level.
- Insure that each soldier has a copy of the SQT Notice for the SQT he will be taking.
- Conduct remedial/sustaining training. Wlthin

30 days after the test scores are forwarded for grading, each soldier will receive an Individual Soldier Report (ISR) containing his personal score. The soldier's firstline supervisor will also get a copy of the soldier's ISR. Unit commanders will receive summaries detailing by MOS how well their soldiers performed.

These reports will identify training deficiencies, and should be used as a basis for conducting remedial training. Sustainment training should also be conducted periodically to insure that the soldier retains his proficiency at performing tasks which were passed.

"There is no way a unit commander is going to pass his ARTEP, unless his soldiers pass their SQTs."

"Uncle Sam needs us."

Dorothy M. Forbes

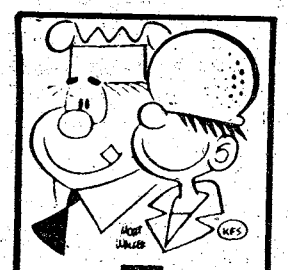
Sergeant Earl Forbes is an infantryman. To him, the Army is a whole lot more than a place to work. It's a place to grow, too. His wife agrees: "My lifestyle has changed a lot. Things are better. Being married to Earl, I feel like I've got it better than many civilian wives. I'm interested in what he does. We talk about his assignments. We need each other. And the Army needs us. It really does."

What about you and your family? Maybe your husband should have a talk with his career counselor. He may find out just how much Uncle Sam needs him.

Keep a good family in the Army.

Competition, parade highlights Organization Day

The 197th Inf Bde (Sep) celebrated its fourth anniversary as a FORSCOM unit last Friday. The entire brigade turned out for a parade and awards ceremony. Families and friends watched as the more than 4,500 soldiers passed in review.



Special guest, MG Willard Latham, complemented the brigade on its fine record of professionalism. Noting that the 197th has not only a combat contingency mission, but also responsibilities to test new combat equipment and doctrine, MG Latham said, "You, the members of the 197th are leading the rest of the Army into the 1980s."

After the review, a special lunch was served in several tents and athletic competition provided excitement for the rest of the afternoon. The final competition was held in pushball, tug of war, foot races, and the de-CAT-alon.

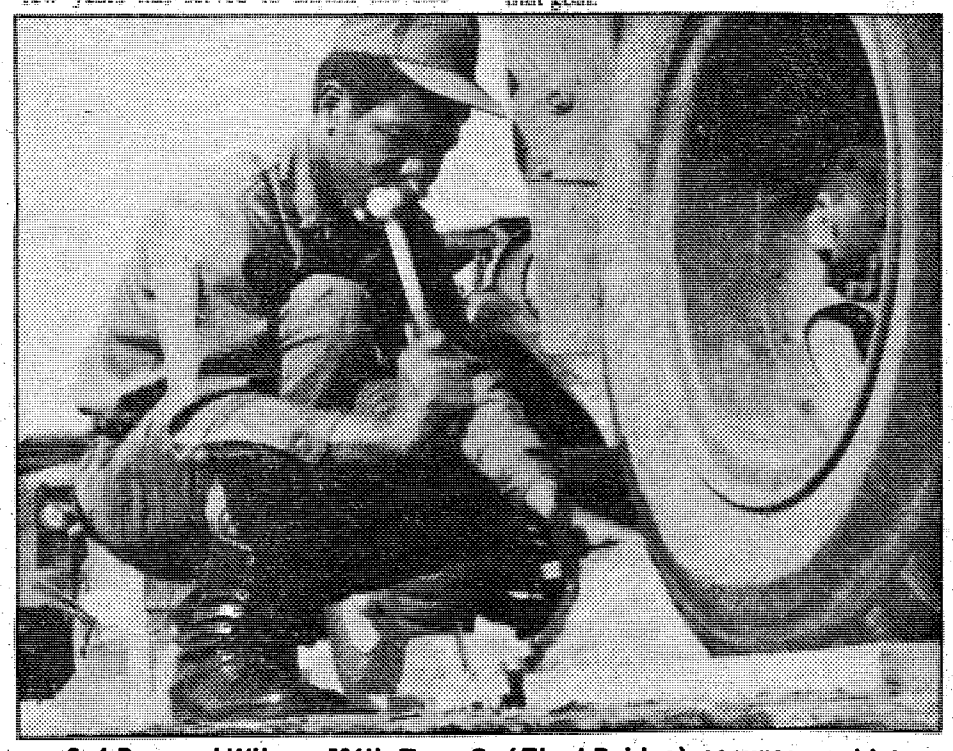
We must have a workable draft

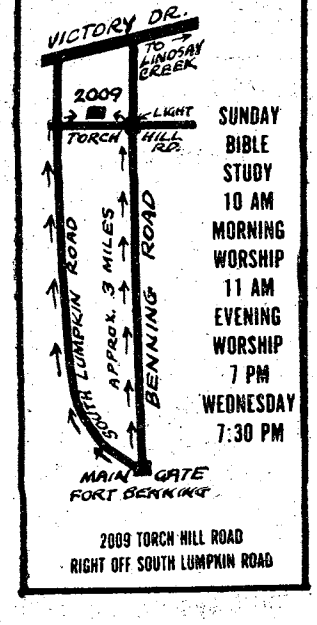
The Nation has paid a high price for the apparent success of the all-volunteer military establishment. Not only has the dollar price been high but it has cost us the awareness that some form of conscription has been an inescapable part of every major war the United States has fought since the Civil War and, if another big war comes, it will be needed again.



While it might be true that an all-out nuclear war would be over too fast to require any conscription, realistic military planners think that is an unlikely possibility. In their view another protracted war, with an initial violent exchange of conventional weapons, is more probable. It is also argued that an extended period of tension prior to actual hostilities would provide time to reactivate the Selective Service System. The counter-argument holds that a renewed draft at that time would be a warlike act, serving to heighten the tension.

But once a war began the need for trained replacements for members of the regular and reserve forces who become early casualites would be immediate. Without an operating draft mechanism there would be no way to get replacements in sufficient numbers. The very absence of draft pressure during the past few years has served to shrink the size of the Individual Ready Reserve to a pitifully small number.

The Fiscal Year 1977 budget for the Selective Service System is a very bare $6.8 million. This level of funding, passed by Congress and approved by the President, reduces the system to little more than a planning group. By Presidential proclamation no young man born since 1959 will even need to register for a possible draft.



The White House Office of Management and Budget insists that enough muscle could be hung on the Selective Service skeleton to deliver the first inductees for training in 50 days. Under pressure, Selective Service Director Byron Pepitone told Congress a more realistic delay would be 110 days. The Defense Manpower Commission concluded that the delay would range between 180 and 270 days. In this worst possible case it would be a full year before the first inductees are trained and ready for combat.

The Army, which has always been the biggest customer of the draft, says it must have the first inductees at its training centers 30 days after a mobilization order is issued. Renewed registration and an $18 million annual investment in Selective Service machinery could meet that goal.

It's a dog's life . . . !

The Military Police Desk Sergeant answers his phone and another complaint is received that Sgt Alpha's dog is out again and it has turned over sevaral garbage cans. This is the third time this week that garbage has been turned over by Sgt Alpha's dog and the complainant insists that something be done.

The Desk Sergeant takes the complaint and dispatches a patrol to check the violation of USAIC Reg 210-10. According to this regulation:

- Owners are required to have pets on a leash or under voice control while accompanied by a responsible person in such a manner that they do not become a menace or nuisance. When out of doors, the animal will wear the registration and rabies innoculation tags on its collar or harness.
- If an animal is involved in two biting incidents, when the animal was provoked, the owner will be sent a letter of warning. If the animal is involved in another biting incident (a total of three), the owner will be notified that the animal has been declared a nuisance by the Post Veterinarian and the owner will be required to remove the animal from the installation.
- Animals which are declared "vicious" by the Post Veterinarian (such as biting without provocation) must be removed from the post or confined in a supervised kennel approved by the Post Veterinarian, at the owner's expense. Normally, the owner will be given awarning letter after the first biting incident, with removal action required after the second biting incident.

If Sgt. Alpha's dog has not received the required innoculations and properly resgistered on post (not wearing the proper tags), the animal will be turned over to the Post Veterinarian for disposition. The animal will be advertised in the USAIC Daily Bulletin for one day and held by the Veterinarian for two days. Unless claimed, the animal will be given away or disposed of by the Post Veterinarian. Had the animal been wearing the proper tags, the owner would be notified and his attention invited to the regulation.

If Sgt. Apha's dog is picked up and impounded twice, a letter of warning will be sent to him. Should the animal be picked up three times, Sgt. Alpha will be required to place the animal in supervised kennels or remove it from the post.

St. Alpha had no intention of causing anyone a problem, he simply wanted to allow his dog a little freedom to exercise. After all, you can't keep a registered St. Bernard cooped up and he did cost $225.

PFC Robert Waddell of CSC, 2/69th Ar, was selected as the 197th Inf Bde driver of the month for February. One the written part of the competition, Waddell answered 48 out of the 50 questions correctly. Then he was tested on his knowledge of the vehicle he drives, his appearance along with the upkeep and appearance of his vehicle.

Fishing for all species seems to be improving throughout the Valley area.

Nice strings of Crappie and Striped Bass are being caught at the mouth of feeder creeks. Most folks are using minnows and small "gigs."

As the weather continues to improve, you might try moving up the creek a bit. You'll be surprised just how far up some of these creeks Crappie and Striped Bass will move. They're searching for spawning areas, and these little rascals will move a long way to find a nice sandy bottom.

While we're at it gant, let's not forget the reservation ponds. The fish and wildlife folks state that fishing for all species is excellent now in the following ponds: Harps, Weems, Kings, and Headleys.

Largemouth bass fishing has improved greatly also. Some nice strings are being hauled out of Eufaula and West Point Lake. Lt. Col. Joe Coffman caught a nice "Hawg" last weekend in Thomas Mill Creek, Lake Eufaula. Joe's fish weighed in at 11 pounds even and was caught on a bone colored "Deep R." Some people have all the luck.

Say gang, if you make a nice catch, how about giving me a call at 545-1715/7378. This way we can pass it on the the readers (if there are any.) Who knows, you may have found the secret. Don't keep it to yourself.

Oh well, on with this weeks funny. I was sitting in a local fisherman's hangout having a beer when in walked SGM Greene. The good SGM was moving his head slowly from side to side and muttering, "Tick-tock, tick-tock, tick-tock. . ."

The bartender, too shrewd to fall for Greene's act, ignored him but Greene kept on weaving his head and muttering, "Tick-tock, tick-tock . . ."

Finally, the bartender gave up. "Okay, you win," he said. "What's the gimmick?" "What gimmick?" replied Greene, "I'm a clock. Tick-tock, tick-tock . . ."

"If you're a clock, tell me the time," the bartender humored him. "It's six thirty," answered Greene.

"Wrong!" returned the bartender, "it's seven o'clock." "Oh, my Lord!" exclaimed the startled SGM, "I must be slow. Ticktock ticktock ticktock ticktock!!

Ponder this until next week: Sharks rarely attack when the water temperature is below 65 degrees. So from now on, I suggest you fill your bathtub with cold water.

Scout-O-Rama begins tomorrow

Scouts from approximately 150 Chattahoochee Council cub, boy scout and explorer units will get together for an afternoon of fun Saturday from 12:30 to 6 p.m. at the annual Boy Scout Scout-O-Rama at the Columbus Municipal Auditorium and Fairgrounds.

A team of sky divers from the Airborne Department here will give a free-for-all jumping exhibition at 12:30 p.m. to open the show and make another jump just afterwards.

Another treat in store for the scouts is a junior Jump Tower furnished by the Airborne Department to give the youngsters a taste of Airborne training.

Co E, 4th Bn, 1st AIT Brigade, will operate the Pine Wood Derby for the Cub Scouts at 1 p.m.

A helicopter will be on display throughout the show and personnel will be present to show the aircraft and answer questions.

Tickets are $1 each and can be purchased at the show or from any Boy Scout. Credit for the purchase of an 85-cent hamburger after the show is included in the admission price.

According to Maj. Charles Woodson, project officer for post support of the show and director of youth activities here, ticket sales are well ahead of last year's and the show may well have a bigger crowd this year.

POWERS OF ATTORNEY A SERIOUS MATTER

Due to our active duty status, many of us find it a necessity, from time to time, to execute powers of attorney in favor of our spouses or other parties responsible for our children and business activities. This gift of our civil being to another party is certainly one that should be passed with great care and consideration. The function of a power of attorney is to supply some second party with the complete ability to act in ones behalf in our absence. This is certainly a critical power, and one that can result in disaster if not carefully considered.

Prior to granting the power of attorney, one should always consult the JAG Office in order to obtain a full understanding of the ramifications of the document. It should also be noted that powers of attorney can be and should be specifically limited in duration. A person whom we trust today for various reasons may become untrustworthy in the future. The power of attorney is also revocable, but can only be revoked through the execution and proper publication of written documents. The power of attorney will also terminate upon the death of the grantor. Nevertheless, the duration should be limited to the time period in which the existence of the power is absolutely necessary.

Assistance can be obtained in Bldg 5, Rm 13, from 8 until 5, Monday through Friday. Also, your Legal Assistance Office has the capacity of not only to counsel you with regard to powers of attorney but also to prepare any and all varieties of powers of attorney. Frequently, this can be accomplished in a very few minutes while you wait. Occasionally, depending upon the complexity of the document requested, a 24-hour waiting period is required.

The emphasis on seeking counsel cannot be strong enough to correspond with the importance that surrounds it.

If further information with regard to powers of attorney is needed, the Legal Assistance Office can be reached at 545-3281/3282 and remains at your disposal for answering questions with regard to this power.

VA Notes

The Veterans Administration's program of vocational rehabilitation training has benefited approximately 20,000 service-disabled Georgia veterans since the program's inception in 1943.

According to VA figures, rehabilitation benefits have been used by some 15,500 Georgia veterans of World War II; by approximately 2,000 Korean War veterans, and by more than 2,500 Georgians disabled while serving in the Vietnam War.

VA statistics show that about 72 per cent of service-disabled Vietnam veterans are enrolled in college. This is almost double the rate of Vietnam veterans attending college under the GI Bill.

In comparison, only 25 per cent of World War II trainees used their vocational rehabilitation eligibility to attend college. Another 25 per cent entered vocational or other non-college training. Eleven per cent chose farm-training and 39 per cent entered on-the-job training programs.

Georgia Veterans Service Director Pete Wheeler said that benefits include edicational and vocation counseling, tutoring, medical treatment, prosthetic aids and job-placement assistance.

"Vocational rehabilitation is designed to help the service-disabled veteran select, prepare for and secure work that meets his personal goals, interests, abilities and physical capacities," Wheeler said.

Training expenses, including tuition, books and supplies, and a monthly subsistence allowance are paid by the VA. A single veteran, enrolled full-time in vocational training, receives $226 monthly; with one dependent the monthly amount is $280; with two dependents, $329, and an additional $24 per month for each dependent in excess of two.

VA Questions & Answers

Q — My only income is $750 a month compensation from the VA. I am rated 100 per cent disabled. My wife has been placed in a nursing home and I am having financial problems. Can I receive more assistance from the VA?

A — Since Oct. 1, 1976, veterans with service-connected disabilities rated 50 per cent or more are eligible for an increased allowance if their spouse is in need of aid and attendance. For a veteran rated 100 per cent disabled that amount is $78 per month instead of the $43 monthly allowance for a spouse.

Q — Please define what a deficiency course is under the educational benefits of the GI Bill?

A — Any secondary-level course or subject not previously completed satisfactorily and which is specifically required for pursuit of a post-secondary program of education.

Don't miss the Volks Fest

The Spring Volks Fest, sponsored by Recreation Services, is scheduled for Saturday, April 16th, at Doughboy Stadium with walking and running events for almost everyone who wants to participate or compete.

The Volks Fest starts at 7 a.m. with the running events, and at noon the entertainment begins, featuring several musical and performing groups. Paid refreshments will be offered, including all your German favorites: bratwurst, knackwurst, sauerkraut and brochen. Light and dark beer will make it an authentic German fest.

Entertainment will be in plentiful supply. A German band will be playing at various times throughout the day to add a little atmosphere. The Drum and Fife Corps, the Auburn Singers and the 283d Army Band will make sure the music doesn't stop. Added attractions include an appearance by the world-famous Clydesdale horses and a high school dance competition.

For those interested in competitive running, the schedule of events is:

7 a.m. 20-mile maxi-marathon
8 a.m. 10-mile midi-marathon
10 a.m. 5-mile mini-marathon

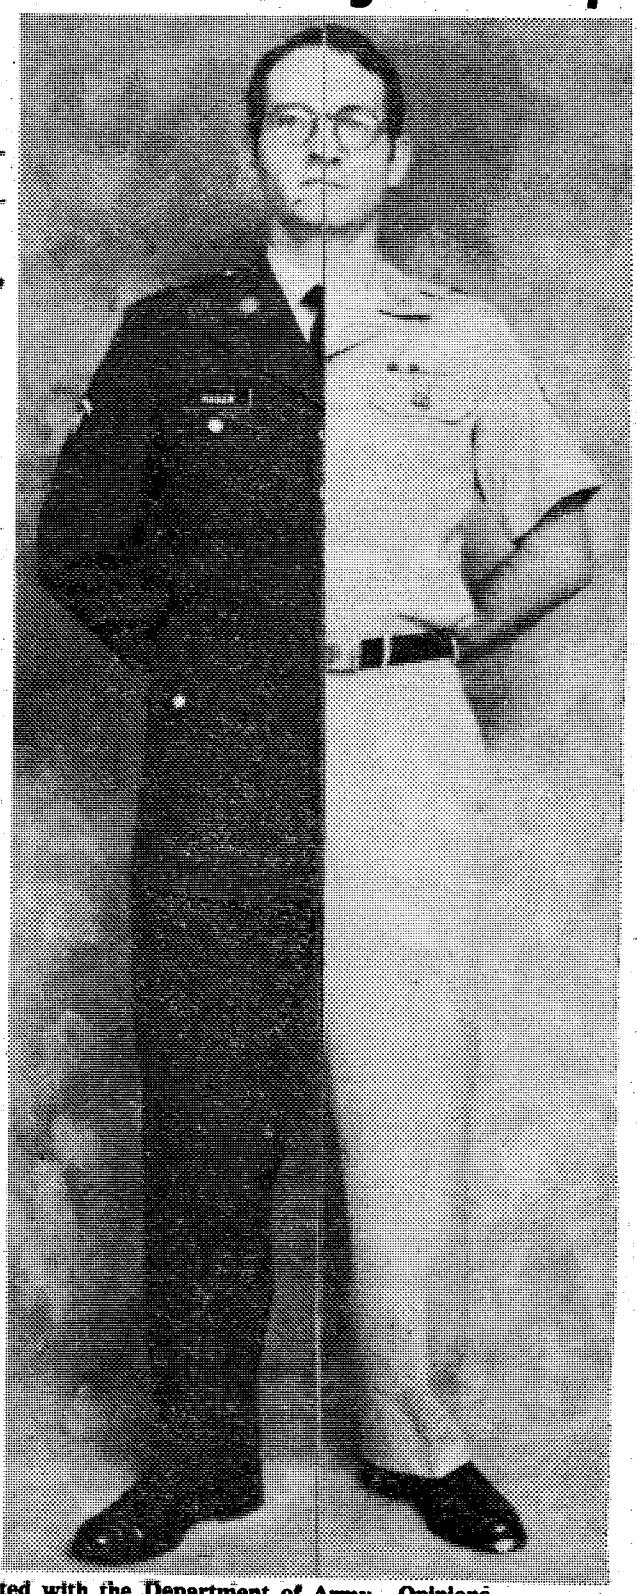
Advance registration is required for all competing runners and they are encouraged to register before the day of the event at the Sports Office, Bldg. 394.

Winners in these events will receive Olympic-style medals. Competition is divided into several categories: Male, Female, Military and Civilian. Male and female categories are broken down by age: Men under 21, 21-24, 25-29, 30-34, 35-39, 40-45 and over 45; Women under 29 and 29 and over.

Those who do not wish to run against time may enter any event Saturday morning. These runners will receive certificates of participation signed by the Commanding General.

The Spring Volks Fest even has walking courses for participants. Walkers can choose a 1 to 3-mile course or a 10 to 20-mile course.

From 4-4:30 p.m. awards will be presented.



No admission will be charged and no entry fees are planned.

The Spring Volks Fest is the newest event in small tradition of German-style events put on by Recreation Services. So if you enjoyed the Volks March, the Beer and Wurst Fest or the Fall Volks Fest, or if you missed those and you want to see what it's all about, come on out and celebrate Spring at the Volks Fest.

Easter Sunrise Service slated

Ft. Benning's traditional Easter Sunrise Service will be held at Gowdy Field on post Sunday, April 10th, beginning at 7:30 a.m.

Guest speaker will be Dr. Tom Haggai, internationally known radio personality and minister. Providing music will be the 283rd Army Band, the Colonial Band of Explorer Post 76 and The Infantry Chorus.

Dr. Tom Haggai

The service will be broadcast live by WRBL-FM Radio, marking the 40th consecutive year the station has aired the event.

Dr. Haggai, a native of High Point, N.C., is known to millions in all 50 states and a score of foreign countries for his religious radio program, "Values for Better Living," and his personal appearances.

A minister since the age of 12, Dr. Haggai is at ease with any audience, from teenagers to businessmen. He has spoken at least once in each of the past 10 years at the Air Force Academy.

Dr. Haggai authored a book about youth and their problems entitled "Chrissie, I Never Had It So Bad." His commitment to help youth has led him to be active in Scouting — his only hobby.

In 1971, Dr. Haggai received the award he says he prizes most — the Silver Buffalo award from the Boy Scouts of America (BSA). Since then, he has continued to support the Scouting program. In 1975 he was named National Director of Manpower, guiding the personnel procedures for the 8,000 employes and two million volunteers of the BSA.

Dr. Haggai has been the constant recipient of honors since he was an athlete and orator in college. These honors include honorary degrees from two colleges, the North Carolina Distinguished Citizen's Award and dozens of honorary state, city, fraternal and military citizenships.

As a reporter who, along with 1,000 other listeners, sat in one of Dr. Haggai's audiences once said, "As Tom Haggai picked up the mike and stood before the audience without podium or notes, I soon felt I was the only one present having a one-to-one visit with a friend."

New E-4s expect EER after 60 days

Soldiers promoted to E-4 will be receiving their initial Enlisted Evaluation Report (EER) 60 days after their promotion date according to the Military Personnel Center.

January 1st marked the beginning of the EER requirement on E-4s after EERs for the three lower grades were discontinued.

According to MILPERCEN, the policy requires a rater to personally supervise a soldier's performance at least 60 days before writing the EER.

Many commanders have stated confusion as to who the new policy effects. Some think that the new policy applies only to those soldiers who were promoted after December 31st. Officials say that this isn't so.

According to MILPERCEN, the idead behind the new policy is to require all E-4s who have never received an EER to be rated as soon as the rater qualification is met.

The first EER will be marked as the initial report so the promotion and school boards will know that the E-4s performance and job capabilities haven't undergone extensive evaluation.

The initial report will have a beginning date that coincides with the date that the soldier came under the rater making the report, according to officials.

An E-5 is permitted to rate an E-4 under the new policy. An annual report must also be filed on all E-4s in October in addition to the initial EER.

According to MILPERCEN, the policy requires a rater to personally supervise a soldier's performance at least 60 days before writing the EER.

Women may be ineligible to re-up for some MOSs

There seems to be some confusion for women soldiers when it comes time to reenlist. The fact is, according to DA officials, women in an administrative or medical MOS may not be able to reenlist in that MOS or even one in the same CMF.

DA personnel staffers attribute the problem to two major factors, overstrength MOSs and the fact that some MOSs are closed to women because of their combat status.

The problem is especially critical for E-5s and below and women on their first enlistment. The push for women soldiers has been on since the early '70s and the Army is just beginning to feel the results of its active recruiting campaign. There are many openings in combat units for admin and medical MOSs but because of the "combat" status, the slots can only be filled by men (a matter of federal law) and there just aren't enough men to fill the positions.

Officials explain the constant recruitment of initial enlistments in these MOSs as a way to insure a steady progression to the grade of E-9. Some women soldiers find that they don't like the Army and just get out or they may opt for the role of civilian homemaker, leaving a gap in the Army's grade structure in a certain MOS. The Army looks for quality men and women to fulfill the Army's needs and requires more recruits to fill slots vacated by soldiers who are promoted or leave the Army.

In the case of overstrength MOSs, promotions come slower and not as many soldiers are leaving the Army which creates a log-jam at the bottom. One of the solutions to the problem has been the involuntary reclassification program which places soldiers in another MOS that is under strength. This actually helps the soldier, though many don't see it that way in the beginning.

By placing a soldier in an understrength MOS chances for promotion increase greatly; it expands the soldier's professional development, and the previous MOS is usually changed to a secondary or additional MOS for use when the need arises.

Soldiers planning on reenlisting should make sure that they contact their reenlistment counselor several months prior to ETS. If the soldier finds that his MOS is overstrength it will allow enough time to make an alternative decision.

What's it like to be a paratrooper? Eighty-one students from the University of Mississippi, had a taste of the real thing when they visited the Airborne Department's Tower Branch. Each student had the opportunity to simulate a jump from the 250-foot tower by riding a parachute-equipped device called the "buddy seat." Here for their Army orientation, the ROTC students visited the 1st AIT Bde, Ft. Benning Mall, the Infantry Museum, observed a squad attack on Malone 22, an artillery demonstration and the Airborne 5000 demonstration on Eubanks Field.

Camellia is an apartment motel. We don't rent rooms, we rent furnished apartments with all the features of a regular motel plus added conveniences that cannot be provided with just a single room — and all at the same, or most times lower rates than the single -room motel. For example, our "standard" unit is comprised of two bedrooms, combination living room-dining room, bathroom and fully furnished kitchen including refrigerator, stove, cooking utensils, and table service for six people. These are some of the "extras" but at no extra cost. Our 150 units are in separate buildings with usually four apartments in each building, which adds to a person's or family's privacy.

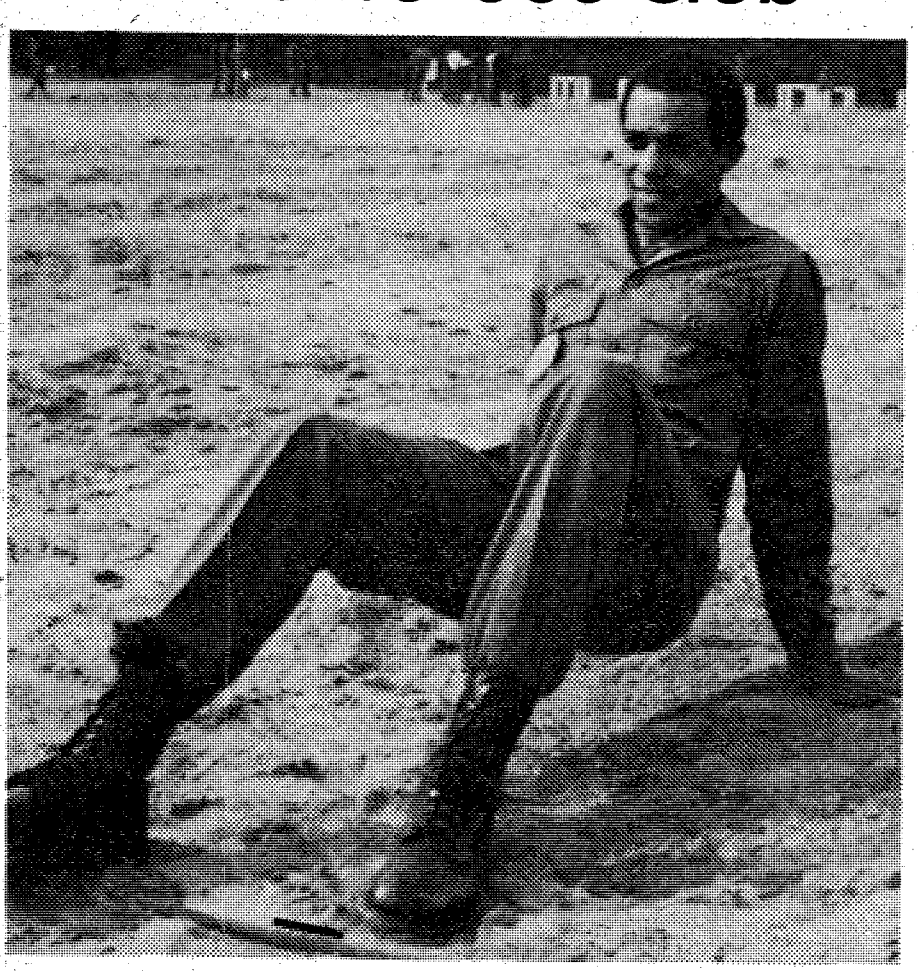
Banks becomes 1st member of elite '535' Club

By Marshall Jones

The first man to join the 197th Infantry Brigade's elite "535 Club" is 2ndLt. Larry Banks, executive officer of HHB, 2/10th FA.

To win the 535 Club patch, a member of the 197th must attain 500 on the APFT and run five miles in under 35 minutes.

Bank's first try at the PT test netted him 499 points, but "under unusual circumstances, as it happens he was up all night the night before as staff duty officer, and had to stand inspection the next day before the test!



Unsatisified with his first showing, the undaunted lieutenant showed he was club material by "maxing" the PT test on his second try. With a time of 32:45 in the five-mile run he was a shoe-in for the 535 Club.

A native of Stephens, Ark., 2ndLt. Banks is the son of Early and Emma Banks of Stephens. He graduated from Southern Arkansas University in December 1975.

The Army trained Banks as a signal officer. So what is he doing in a field artillery unit? Banks explains it this way:

"The unit is authorized two signal officer slots: communications officer and communications platoon leader. I fill both these slots, but I'm primarily the communications platoon leader."

2ndLt. Banks has apparently stirred up some competition for the coveted 535 patch. Several other brigade members are expected to join the club's ranks in the near future.

2ndLt. Larry Banks, HHB, 2/10th FA stretches to toe the end line during the "low crawl" portion of the APFT. Banks is the first member of the 197th Inf Bde's "535 Club."

SSgt. Jerry Davis, court reporter with the Staff Judge Advocate Section recently received the Jimmy D. Hasty Award from the U.S. Naval Justice School as the honor graduate of his class. Davis was not only the first Army graduate to receive the award but in achieving the honor he maintained a grade point average of 3.94, the highest average ever attained by a court reporter in the history of the school.

Medics lend helping hand to IOBC

By Greg Smith

The 690th Med Co, 34th Med Bn plays an important part in the activities at Ft. Benning. Among their many missions is the requirement to provide medical support to the Infantry School and ambulance transportation to and from the various medical facilities on post. This medical coverage spans from burns received on a TOW range to fractures on the Fryar Field Drop Zone.

PFC John Feree, 690th Med Co, 34th Med Bn, treats Sgt. Stanley Brooks, Co A, 1/29th Inf, for a head injury received during IOBC training. Assigning medics to the IOBA classes has eliminated much wasted time in the treatment of injuries.

Recently an interesting and innovative new medical program was initiated by the 690th. This involves an indepth medical coverage for the Infantry Officers Basic Course. Medics from the 690th are permanently assigned to IOBC companies. They are then divided into two groups, light and mechanized, and remain with the company for the entire 14 weeks of training. The medics go everywhere and do just about everything the junior officers do. They accompany the officers on 25-mile road marches, patrols and during classroom instruction.

The medical services provided to the class help it to operate harmoniously and the presence of the medics seem to be a morale builder. The treatment of the students range from routine treatment of blisters to serious burns and fractures requiring evacuation by helicopter.

Not ones to neglect Mother Nature's friends, medical treatment was provided to an injured owl that was accidently hurt during an FTX.

To assist the IOBC students in their military education, the medics of the 690th conduct classes in the medical field, including CBR, treatment of shock and application of all types of bandages. The program has been a big success and is expected to continue.

Both parties benefit from the arrangement, the IOBC students by having medics immediately available when needed and the medics by getting a chance to put their medical skills to practical use.

The soldier speaks

Why does a person enlist? And, three or four years later, why does that same person reenlist? And, past that point, what incentives encourage a soldier to stick it out for 20 or more years?

The answers to these questions, when looked at closely, can tell the Army much about how to attract recruits and retain qualified soldiers. The responses come from some 21,000 soldiers who were surveyed in the spring of 1976 by the Deputy Chief of Staff for Personnel. They contain many insights as to what motivates or moves a soldier to make certain decision in a career.

LIKES AND DISLIKES

High on the list of most soldiers' dislikes are the frequent moves. They don't mind the possibility of being injured or killed in combat.

Generally, the best liked aspect of the Army is the retirement system. On the other hand, the least liked aspect of Army life is the perceived social status or the lack of prestige which results from being in the Army.

Most soldiers are married.Their spouses, who have a major impact on the decisions of the servicemember, don't like the frequent moves and they don't like the housing facilities they find after they move.

INCOME

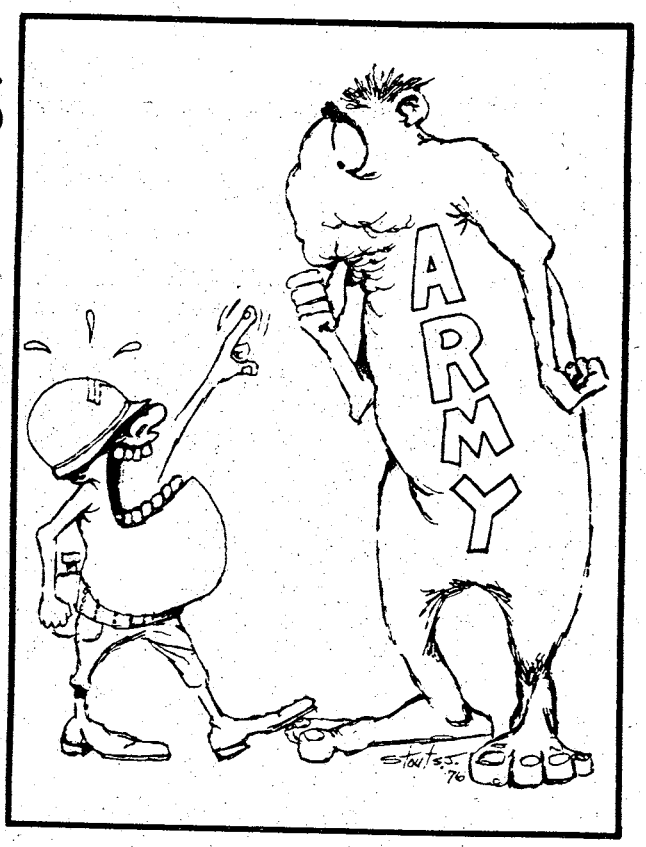
Despite some criticism to the contrary, soldiers do know how much money they make, that they have a tax advantage, but most believe that they could make more money as a civilian.

Soldiers value their benefits highly. Medical care and the retirement system are by far the most popular. And most soldiers believe that the benefits they receive by being in the Army are somewhat better than those they would receive in a civilian job.

MOONLIGHTING

Part-time jobs have become a way of life for many soldiers. One-fifth of all enlisted soldiers hold down a second job and over 40 per cent of their spouses also work. More of the spouses said they would work if they could but the conditions of military service, such as frequent moves, make that impossible.

In an apparent contradiction, most soldiers believe that their Army experience will be of benefit to them in a future civilian career, but more than half would not recommend a military career to a friend or family member.



Less than half of all career soldiers would make the Army a career if they had the opportunity to "do it all over again."

The most positive attitudes toward the Army are found among privates, second lieutenants and senior field grade officers.

CIVILIAN COMPARISON

Many soldiers felt that the Army did not compare favorably with most civilian careers. Thirty-six per cent of the enlisted soldiers felt that a military career had fewer favorable aspects, 21 per cent felt they were about the same, and 34 per cent thought a military career was more favorable.

Officers were not so generous in their comparison. Only 26 per cent believed that a military career had more favorable aspects, 30 per cent felt they were about the same and nearly 40 per cent believed that a military career had fewer favorable aspects. Four per cent could not make a comparison. Junior servicemembers listed the military as having more favorable aspects more often than did other enlisted ranks. Perhaps they have higher expectations than the older troops.

WORKWEEK

The survey revealed that very few servicemembers work the "standard" 40-hour week. A workweek of between 46 and 60 hours was listed by 58 per cent of the officers. Only 6 per cent stated that they worked 40 hours per week or less.

More enlisted soldiers work a standard 40-hour week but 56 per cent said they work between 41 and 55 hours per week.

ANSWERS VARY

The responses, of course, varied by rank and age groups. Low pay was listed by soldiers in the junior enlisted ranks as being the "most unfavorable" while soldiers E-5 and above listed frequent moves as the "most unfavorable" aspect of an Army career but the older troops, officer and enlisted alike, who have perhaps had enough travel and adventure, listed the retirement system as the "most favorable" aspect.

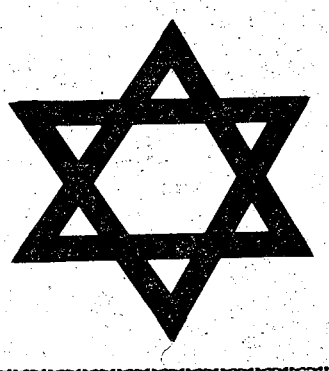
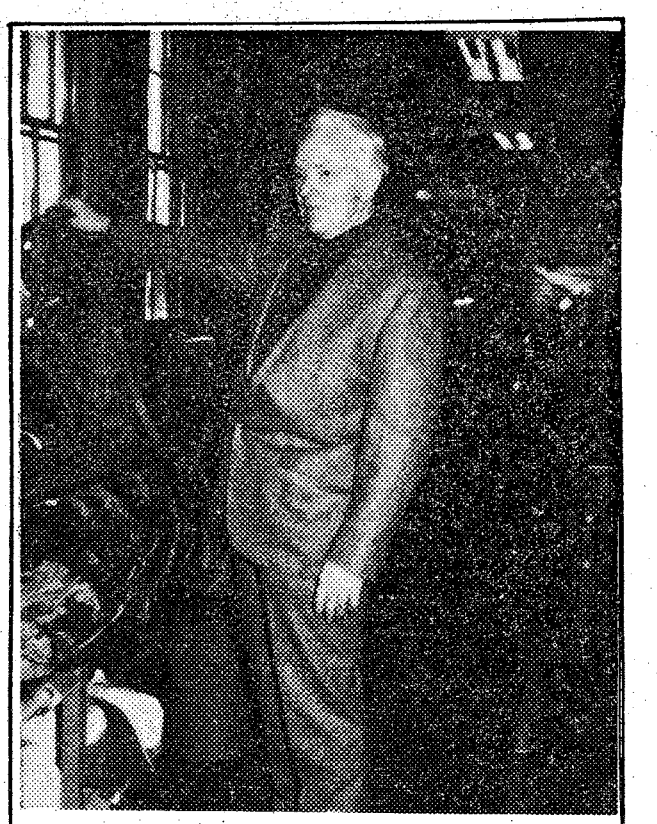
Passover and Easter



The approaching Passover and Easter seasons, the holiest of the year for Jews and Christians, remind us once again that God's message to human-kind is a message of love and reconciliation, of deliverance and freedom. A theme common to both Passover and Easter is liberation; liberation from bondage and sin, liberation from that which enslaves people and makes them less than God intended them to be.

For the Jewish Community, Passover is a season of remembrance; it is a time to recall God's deliverance of the nation Israel out of Egyptian bondage to a new land, a time to celebrate the renewing of the covenant, a time for praying for peace, a time for hope, a time for trusting that God will fulfill His promises anew each day as he did in the wilderness of the desert.



As Christians observe the Passion of the Lord and His Resurrection, Holy Week and Easter mean prayerful preparation and inward reflection climaxing in joyful celebration. Through Christ's victory over evil and death, Christians are freed from the enslavement of sin and, through faith, are granted abundant life and new hope.

With themes of liberation, renewal and new hope, Passover and Easter challenge all of us, Christians and Jews, to rededicate ourselves to the principles of our faith and, in love, to renew our commitments to God, to people, and to our Nation.

Kenneth Tingle of the Parachute Packing Branch, DIO received a cash award of $555 for his suggestion concerning damaged parachute canopies. Tingle suggested that damaged or unserviceable T-10 parachute canopies be used to fabricate J-3 canopies now used on the 250 foot free towers for airborne student practice jumps. The adoption of this suggestion aided in the development of a parachute canopy having a built-in maneuver capability, improved training realism and satisfied the need to maintain a constant inventory of 18 J-3 canopies. The suggestion resulted in an estimated annual savings of $10,128.

Congressman Brinkley talks military

Congressman Jack Brinkley, a Georgia Democrat and member of the House of Representatives, recently spoke with Army News Service (ARNEWS) editor concerning current attitudes about the military.

Congressman Brinkley is a member of the House Armed Services Committee and the House Committee on Veteran's Affairs. In addition, he serves on the Military Installation and Facilities Subcommittee and the Intelligence and Military Application of Musclear Energy Subcommittee of the Armed Services Committee.

Commenting on the idea of the Army "contracting out" for specific services. The Congressman explained, "My general philosophy is against it. Now there may be a case for some contracting out, for example in the laundry system, but another case which would be contra to that would be the fire departments. The laundry system is of course unskilled, there would not be a lot of room for abuses like a contractor coming up short on his contract, for example, the high cost of labor and then in fact paying the labor much lower than that. We know of instances in the past where this has been the case."

"Now in a skill category like firefighters," he continued, "we know that to have professional units. We can't take the risk of abuse in that area by getting incompetent people at a lower wage. There is no place for contracting out professional services such as in finance offices ior in the military police for that matter. The problem is that the civilian end strengths have been set at an unrealisticly low level and the military services have been forced to consider this because they have the money but the not the personnel. We've got to be mightly careful with careful with it and in general I'm opposed to it."

Budget Cuts

When asked about the administration's proposed cuts in the defense budget Brinkley expressed his dissatisfaction with the limitations. "I think it is the responsibility fo the Congress to add to or cut as it sees the need. For my own part, I believe that we should provide the military system with however much is necessary to have a defense establishment of sufficient strength to command the respect of friend and fro alike. In some areas we can cut out and still maintain that posture. While in other areas, I think we should beef it up. I think we need soldiers second to none in fighting skills. We have them, in my opinion, as a mucleus for a short conventional war on a nuclear war."

"For example we have the Rangers, the paratroopers, special Forces and the infantry. These are good soldiers. I have seen them train at Ft. Benning and I can vouch for the training of the Volunteer Army. Some people claim that it is not working. I don't know, but I do know that the training is without peer, it is superb training and we have super, able soldiers. I have seen advanced infantry training at Benning and I know that to be a fact.

Erosion of Benefits

Commenting on the feeling of many soldiers that there has been a tremendous erosion of benefits and the desires of some Congressmen to make even more cuts in this area, even in view of the fact that the cuts would conflict with the government's wish to sustain the All-Volunteer Army, Brinkley commented, "Perhaps it does in a way, but in the long run it simply means a review and overhaul of a system that is changing. It changes with every decade and three are changes that need to be looked at. For example, we have a longer life expectancy now and because of this we have the philosophy that as long as a man can be productive, it is to his advantage and to the nation's advantage for him or her to be productive. While we should not change the retirement system back to the past, for the pensions are low enough as it is, we can look at the requirements to have longer periods of services in the future and perhaps pay a greater pension — more realistic and more attuned to the world in which we live."

Brinkely went on further in his comments talking about erosion of other benefits, "I think that military people have a quasi-contractural right and certainly an expectancy of certain fringe benefits. I mean the comissary, PX, medical and dental benefits. I think we should not get into a situation where there is an over-expectation, but I think that we should meet those basic requirements — the comissary, for example — I think that is pretty important. I further think it is very important to receive good medical care.

Brinkley noted that the Congress has been very active in drafting a bill favoring recomputation of benefits, but he added that the idea of a one-time recomputation may come about sometime in the future.

High Cost of Housing

Commenting about the high cost area that military personnel must live within, Brinkley noted that "there should be more realistic finanical subsidies to those who live in places like Washington D.C." He agreed that in Washington where prices are higher there seems to be resistance to station housing allowances and cost-of-living similar to the subsidies for personnel overseas.

"It is certainly a fact of life and we as members of the Congress recognize the enrmous housing costs for ourselves." Brinkley added that the Congressmen try to communicate this fact on to their constituents to be a better soldier than the soldier of our adversary — we ought to pay the military man well . . . I certainly do not believe the soldier is overpaid."

"A man in the military service does lay his life on the line; he comes when you say come, he goes when you say go, so he is not his own man. His family must be responsive to the military needs, therefore roots do not have a chance to develop. There are many, many sacrificies the soldier makes. I think that when a man or woman volunteers for the military service that he or she is a special American.

All Volunteer Army

When asked about the recent testimony of Dr. William King before Senator Sam Nunn's (Dem-Ga) subcommittee on Manpower and Personnel (BAYONET, March 11th, 1977) and the fact that it may be difficult to sustain the All Volunteer Army, Brinkley noted that, "There is no alternative at this moment to the volunteer army, because the draft is gone. Congress, in response to the wishes of the people, did not appropriate money, therefore, the Selective Service machinery has been disbanded. . ."

"If there is a new look at the draft," he continued, "there should certainly be consideration for the service of every single young man and woman in the country — in the military and perhaps other public service type jobs. All should serve."

Lottery System Unfair

According to Brinkley, everyone should serve. He noted that the lottery system is patently unfair create a better understanding of the problem, so the people are aware of the problems so the people are aware of the problems that the military face in such areas as Washington, D.C.

Brinkley noted that, "If we put on our thinking caps and we develop the incentives, it is really a shield against unionization, if we respond to the legitimate needs of the military. I think we have met most of them, but in the area of medical benefits and the area of housing costs, I feel we are getting behind."

Military Overpaid?

Although many Americans feel that members of the military are overpaid, Brinkley disagreed, "I think you get what you pay for and there is an old saying that 'cheap labor is costly labor' and that is true. I don't want a man who is worth that little working for me."

"I certainly believe that to have all the drive ambition and motivation to do the best job possible and to because one individual, by luck of the draw, serves and the other does not. "I certainly wouldn't vote for that again."

In time of prospective need or present danger, I would, of course vote for the draft. I believe that young people would be responsive," he added.

The congressman noted that the volunteer Army is working as far as training is concerned, but that recruiting was not adequate to the military's needs.

"If we can give them hope," Brinkley explained, "and the promise of a secure future, good housing, good medical benefits and the respect of their fellow citizens, these things might beef it up to come degree."

Brinkley noted that the Congress should not make any hasty decisions this year or next year, but after a stablizing period if there was still a problem than something should be done.

Universal Service

"If we are still having a recruiting problem, then instead of the old type draft, Let's go to a universal service to the country, where all young people provide some service."

"Of course they would transitory," he explained, "They would only be there only one year or two. The career soldier, the cadre soldier, in the volunteer army could remain. His pay would be even higher than it is today and the draftee pay under the new system perhaps could be minimal."

Brinkley commented on the fact that many times the military is taken for granted, "I think we should be grateful to them and respect them. We would be in a heck of a shape if this country had no policemen, the military system is the policeman. It is an insurance policy for a great and good country, it is an important function. If they know that their job is important and there is recognition of that importance, then they will motivated to do even a better job. I believe that when you get right down to it, Most Americans do view their functions as important and appreciate there doing it."

CLAIMS:

The United States Army Claims Service has recently addressed the issue of thefts of citizen band radios. The position was taken that soldiers/civilian employes who bought CB car radios should be financially able to buy insurance for them and that ordinarily claims submitted for their loss or theft will be deemed nonmeritorious and thus not paid.

It was noted that this radio equipment is a prime target of criminals and that thefts have reached epidemic proportions. Thus CB's are placed in the same category as telephone and TV's in automobiles and are not viewed as reasonable, useful, or proper, except under certain circumstances, i.e., used by personnel engaged in providing police, medical, or similar type services. (In these cases, if a loss occurs, the claim must be documented with a statement from the individual's commander that he was instructed to use his CB radion and setting forth all details as to date use was required, type of duty, and the reason for a personal CB radio being used in the performance of duty.)

Other exceptions to the non-payment rule are loss or damage to CB radios in the shipment of household goods, theft from quarters, damage due to the alleged negligence of government employes, and theft where the radios are mounted in a locked secured area of a vehicle other than the passenger compartment (i.e. trunk). Under any of these exceptions payment will be limited to $200.00.

Also recently published were guildelines concerning the securing of motorcycles, bicycles, mini-bikes, etc. Failure to secure the cycle to a fixed object (i.e. post, fence, tree) will bar recovery in case of theft. The chain and lock used to secure the cycle to the fixed object should be of a heavy type that cannot be cut or broken, and the chain itself should be woven through both the wheels and the frame of the bike.

Recovery for loss/damage to privately owned vehicles, including motorcycles, except for losses incident to shipment under Government orders or due to alleged Government negligence (traffic accident where the driver of a Government vehicle is charged with the accident) will be limited to $1,000.00.

DITY moving program ave

The "Do It Yourself" (DITY) household goods move program saved the Army more than $100,000 during July through November 1976. It also paid out handsome "incentive" payments to officers and enlisted personnel.

Statistics contained in the first quarterly report on DITY showed that enlisted personnel took advantage of the program about five times as often as officers. Of the 673 recorded moves made during the five-month time period, 543 were made by enlisted soldiers. Among officers, 139 moved themselves.

The report noted that the total incentive payment made to officers and enlisted members was about $170,000 — an average of approximately $252 per person per move. Total Government savings were set at approximately $124,000.

A total incentive of about $40,000 was paid to Army officers in ranks WO1 through 0-6. The government saved nearly $29,000 on officer moves.

Enlisted members pocketed about $244 on the average self-move. The total incentive amount paid to troopers was about $130,000. Uncle Sam realized a total savings of about $95,500.

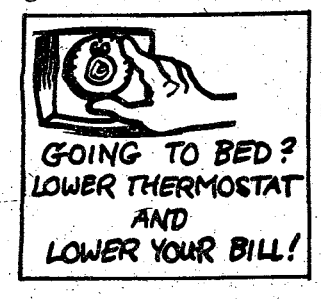
DA officials point out that these dollar amount incentives paid to service members do not include those expenses incurred by troops and paid out of the reimbursement they received. These expenses might include labor hired to assist in the move, the cost of preparing large appliances for the move and any packaging and crating materials that may have been purchased. Also, gas, oil and other vehicle expenses may have been incurred if the member used his own vehicle on the move.

The largest incentive at Ft. Benning was paid to an E-5 moving from Benning to Seattle, Wash., on his ETS. He was paid $1,557.60. He moved 5,860 pounds using his own truck and paid all operating costs out of this payment.

DA officials say that payments are made at the destination point of the PCS move involved, except those moves made in connection with retirement or separation orders. Claims for these moves are paid at the trooper's old duty station.

Soldiers moving their household goods in privately-owned trucks or trailers or rented vehicles, are reimbursed an amount equal to 75 per cent of what it would have cost the Government to ship the same goods by commercial mover. Subtracted from this amount is the cost incurred by the Government for the DITY move. The servicemember receives the difference.

DA officials emphasize that the Government's intent is not to reimburse troopers for carrying their suitcases to their next duty station. Excluded for reimbursement purposes are moves of household goods made in or on top of vehicles primarily designed for transportation of passengers.



All servicemembers who plan to move themselves must check with the Ft. Benning Transportation Officer Bldg 280 (544-4423) prior to the move. The TO figures the amount that your planned move will cost the Army. Solder-movers will receive no reimbursement for their move if they have not met this prior planning requirement.

Howard Bus to increase fares

Howard Bus Line fares will increase to $.65 per passenger between Ft. Benning and Columbus beginning April 1st.

The raise in fare is due to the increase in operating cost. However, intra-post fares will remain $.50 per passenger.

'Doughboy' Spring practice starts April 18th

The Ft. Benning Doughboy football team will conduct spring practice from April 18th through May 14th. Active duty military personnel who are interested in competing for a spot on the 1977 Doughboy team are encouraged to attend the initial meeting at Doughboy Stadium, 5:30 p.m., April 18th.

Daily evening practices will be held in the stadium, or at Gowdy Field. Coach Jack Barham identifies the period as the first step toward another undefeated Doughboy season.

"We'll use the spring drill to identify talent, build post interest in the program and teach our systems to players who did not work with us last year," Barham explained.

"Most of the participants will work in sweat clothes throughout the session," the coach added. "After several days of non-contact work, we'll issue equipment to some of the men we want to see in an active scrimmage. We hope to conclude spring practice with an intra-squad game."

The Doughboy coaching staff will be essentially the same group that took Ft. Benning to its undefeated four game season in 1976. Barham has replaced departed Wayne Boles as head coach. John Boles, former standout lineman at Arkansas will serve as chief assistant. John Ross and Jerry Johnson will coach the offense while Dave Bankston and Ray Wagner handle the defense. Daniel Stevens, who played fullback last season, will help with the offensive backfield.

Several '76 Doughboys are expected to return to duty next fall, but Coach Barham warns, "They must earn a place on the team just like everyone else."

Spring practice will be strictly an off-duty affair. Coach Barham cautioned that only 50 players will eventually be selected for the team. "Everyone is welcome to try out, and there will be no cuts during the spring drills," Barham said. "But we expect keen competition for the final roster. Men who have never played anything but sandlot football will have to be exceptionally talented to make the squad. Those who make spring practice will have an edge, because we'll know them when we start training next fall, and they will be familiar with our offense and defense. But come time for fall tryouts, everyone will have to earn his place all over again."

This season, the Doughboys anticipate an expanded schedule against much tougher competition than they faced in 1976.

Series E Bonds earn 4 per cent in 3 months

The Department of the Treasury has announced that Series E U.S. Savings Bonds issued on or after Sept. 1, 1976, will earn a minimum of four per cent when held for more than two months beyond their issue date.

Although the overall yield remains at six per cent for bonds held to their original maturity of five years, Series E Bonds will now begin to receive interest in the third month after their issue, and their redemption value will increase each month until the thirtieth month after purchase, at which time the increases will be on a semi-annual basis.

The provision for a gradually increasing rate of return for Series E. bonds, starting at four per cent in the third month, will provide a more equitable yield for those bond owners who find they must redeem their bonds before maturity.

At a glance: Slicing the revenue pie

Income and social insurance taxes are the largest sources of Federal revenues. In 1976, individuals paid $131.6 billion in income taxes and corporations paid $41.4 billion. Social security and other insurance and retirement taxes and contributions totaled $92.7 billion. Receipts from excise taxes were $17 billion. The remaining $17.3 billion of receipts came from a variety of sources.

Government revenues provide a wide range of public services. Following is a breakdown of how the Federal Government dollar — basically your dollar — was spent in 1976.

National Defense: $90.2 billion.

Twenty-five cents of each dollar spent by the Government in 1976 went for equipping and modernizing our Armed Forces, for military assistance abroad, and for atomic energy defense activities.

International Affairs: $4.5. billion

More than one cent of each dollar went for international programs, such as economic and technical assistance, Food for Peace and the operation of embassies abroad.

General Government: $3 billion

About one cent of each dollar went for managing Government finances and property, and other general activities.

General Science and Space: $4.2 billion

Spending for the development of space shuttle, other space research and technology, and general science and basic research took one cent of each Federal dollar.

Natural Resources, Environment and Energy: $11.7 billion

Programs to maintain and conserve the Nation's natural resources, control pollution, and promote energy research and development took three cents of each Federal dollar.

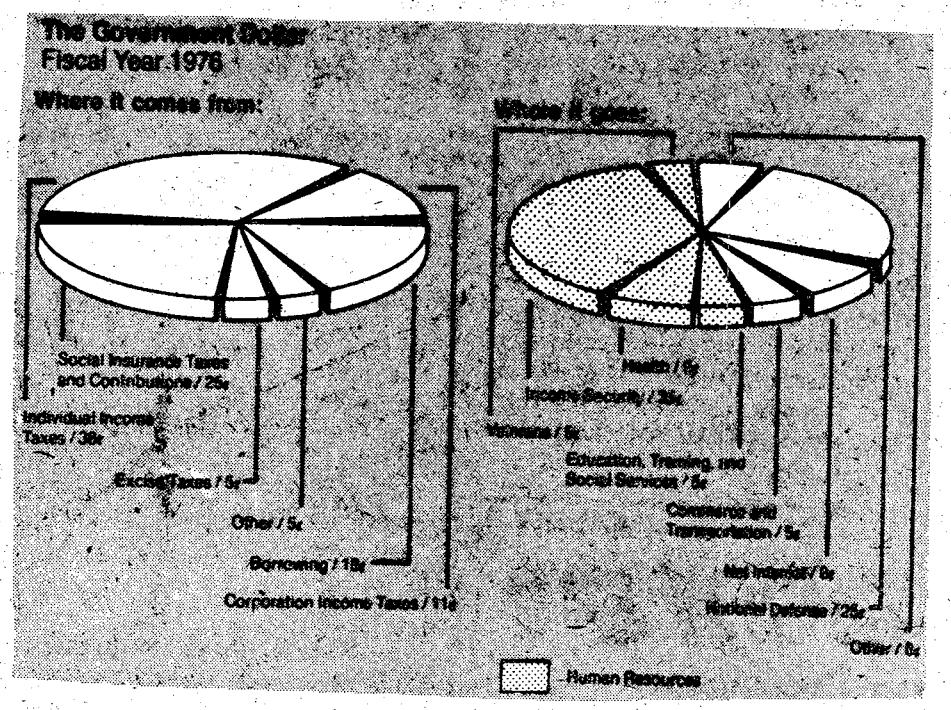
Agriculture: $2.0 billion

One-half cent of each dollar spent was used for farm income stabilization, agricultural research and food inspection.

Commerce and Transportation: $17.2 billion

Programs to assist in the development of transportation through funds for highway construction, mass transit, and railroads; operation of Federal airways and grants for airport construction; the Coast Guard; support of mortgage credit and thrift insurance; and other aids to commerce accounted for nearly five cents of the Federal dollar.

Community and Regional Developments: $5 billion



One and one-half cents of each dollar were spent on grants and loans to develop both urban and rural areas and on programs for disaster relief and insurance.

Education, Training and Social Services: $17.7 billion

Five cents of each dollar went to improve elementary, secondary, and vocational education and aid to college students; training and employment services and grants to States for social services.

Health: $33.6 billion

Through Medicare and Medicaid, the Government helps to pay the medical bills of the Nation's aged and poor. In addition, the Government provides funds for medical research, training for health professions, construction of health facilities, disease prevention and control, and consumer safety. These programs took nine cents of each dollar.

Income Security: $126.9 billion

This category includes Social Security, unemployment, and other disability and retirement benefits which are financed by taxes specifically levied for these programs. It also includes cash, housing, and food assistance for the needy. These programs accounted for nearly 35 cents of each dollar.

Veterans: $18.4 billion

Compensation and pensions, hospital care and medical treatment, education and training, life insurance benefits, and other veterans programs took about five cents of the Government dollar.

Law Enforcement and Justice: $3.3 billion

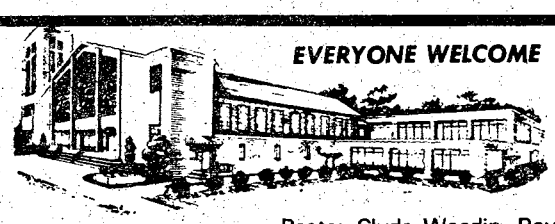
Enforcement of Federal laws, judicial and correctional activities, and financial support for law enforcement activities of State and local governments took one cent of each budget dollar.

Revenue Sharing and General Aid: $7.1 billion

Almost two cents of each Federal dollar was given to State and local governments to spend according to their own needs and priorities subject to only minimal Federal restrictions.

Net Interest: $27.7 billion

Interest payments on debt held by the public required about eight cents of each dollar.



Note: breakdown of cents per dollar is approximate, not exact.

Scout-O-Rama a huge success

By MARSHALL JONES

Beautiful weather and a crack team of jumpers from the Airborne Department here helped make the 1977 Chattahoochee Council Boy Scout Scout-O-Rama a huge success Saturday at the Columbus Municipal Auditorium and Fairgrounds.

Thousands of cub, boy and explorer scouts, families and visitors in summer clothes watched the Military Free-Fall Demonstration Team kick off the show at 12:30 p.m. by jumping from a helicopter onto a grassy field at the fairgrounds.

Colored smoke, buffeted by light winds, guided Maj. Ken Johnston, SSgt. Robbis Robinson, SFc Danny Trevino and Sgt. Patrick Moon to a tight landing pattern near the edge of the field, while SSgt. John Hester was ground controller.

The rectangular red, white and blue chutes stood out clearly against the sky, giving the appearance of handgliders drifting leisurely in.

Later on, the helicopter piloted by Wo1. John Dixon III, with Jaj. John Dalton as co-pilot and Sp4 Allen Cassatt as crew chief — took the team up again for another jump.

It was a toss-up as to which was more popular: the skydiving or the Junior Jump Tower. Hundreds of youngsters lined up to put on harnesses and ride and wires to be caught by teams from the Airborne Department. Even tiny children took advantage of the chance to "go Airborne" just for an afternoon.

The Pinewood Derby got underway for the Cub Scout packs on four "racetracks" furnished by the post and with a team of helpers from 2d Pl, CoE, 4th Bn, 1st AIT Bde. Local Scout Executive Emmett McKay provided the commentary on the public address system, also provided by the post.

The auditorium and a large portion of the fairgrounds were filled throughout the afternoon by scores of displays put on by scout units reflacting every aspect of scouting and youth.

Youngsters and their families could roam around and learn about everything from drug abuse prevention to recycling paper to cooking a chicken over an open fire without utensils.

It was an opportunity for scouts to get together, pool their knowledge and just have a whopping good time.

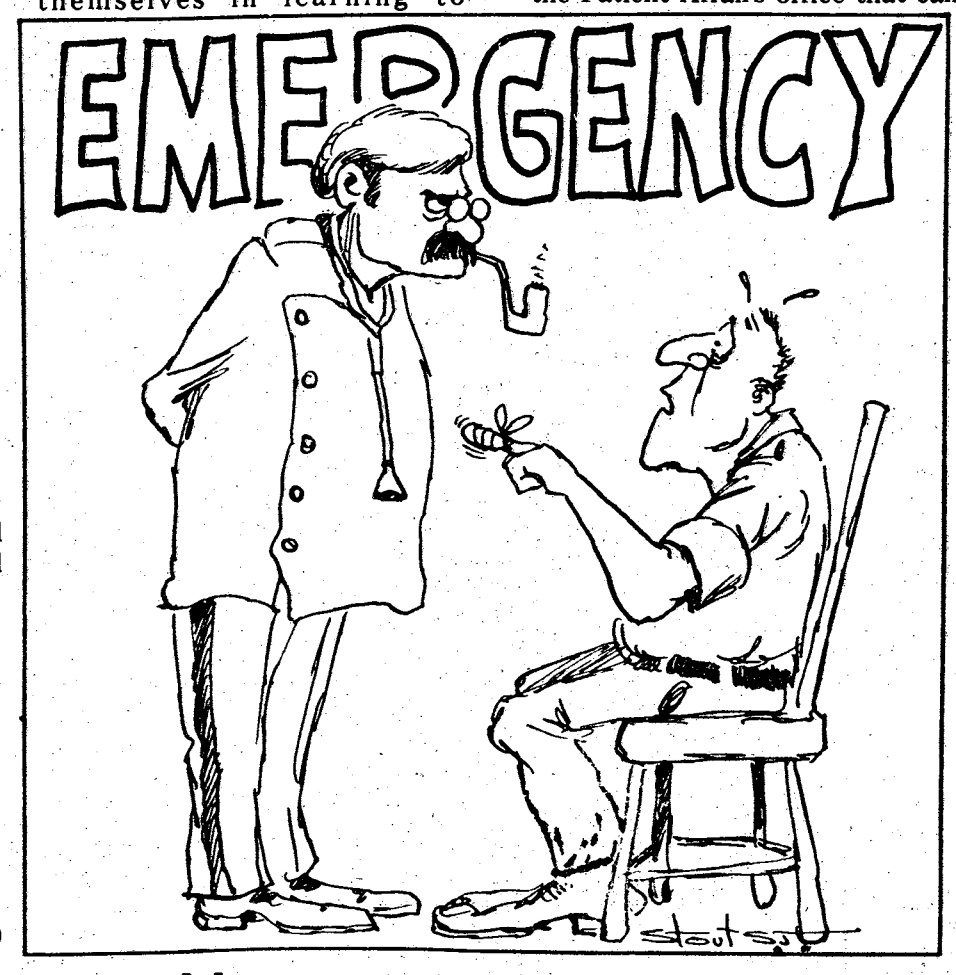
MAH Emergency Room not a walk-in clinic

By Joyce Walker



Abuse and misuse of the Emergency Room after duty hours is becoming of major concern at Martin Army Hospital (MAH). Emergency Room (ER) personnel have had to handle on an average as many as 168 cases in one day. Patients have complained to the Patient Affairs Liaison that they have had to wait as long as six hours before receiving medical attention.

"The fault doesn't lie with the Emergency Room staff," says 1stLt. Edward Ponatoski, Patient Affairs Officer. "The ER is not staffed to treat patients with routine or minor illnesses. Anyone coming into the ER with a fracture or a life threatening condition will be seen before a patient with a bad cold or some other minor illness."

The problem is that some people consider the Emergency Room as a convenient walk-in clinic after duty hours. MAH is trying to combat the problem by educating the hospital patrons about the various systems being instituted or developed at MAH.

"The Ft. Benning populace should try and educate themselves to these systems," notes Dr. (Maj) Genry Yeatman, Chief of Pediatrics. "They also have the responsibility to educate themselves in learning to recognize and treat minor illnesses at home," he added.

Two booklets are available at the Patient Affairs office that can assist the patient in recognizing a real emergency and how to treat minor illnesses at home.

The Patient Medical Advisor provides guidelines in self treatment at home for minor medical conditions that normally will not require the attention of a physician. It should not be considered as a Textbook of Medicine, but an explanation of many minor medical illnesses, along with a discussion of safe self-treatment. In addition, the booklet also provides a list of medications that can be obtained at MAH's High Speed Pharmacy without a doctor's prescription.

The Pediatric Medical Advisor is a detailed medical booklet providing guidelines when a parent should seek further medical consultation for their child.

The Pediatric Clinic also offers parents a class providing basic information in the treatment of colds, fevers, diarrhea, and other childhood problems. Further information concerning classes may be obtained by calling 544-1777.

Proper civilian attire required

Improper clothing is still being worn to the commissary, movie theaters, post exchange (PX) and other military service facilities.

Rather than finding yourself refused access to these facilities because you aren't aware of the dress code regulations, it might be more practical if you know what is required, follow the guidelines and avoid the inconvenience of being turned away.

The wearing of civilian attire during non-duty hours is authorized by all military personnel assigned or attached to Ft. Benning. However, when worn by military, their dependents or civilian 12 years and older, clothing will be in good taste and repair and worn as designed by the manufacturer.

It must also be appropriate to the occasion, especially when using the following facilities: chapels, Officer and NCO Clubs, Follow Me Golf Course, Main Mall, mini-mall (7-11 store), all concessions, theaters, Recreation Services activities, libraries and bowling centers.

T-shirts or other styles of knitted shirts designed and sold or issued for wear as an undergarment, such as "tank tops" or "muscle shirts," when worn as an outer garment, will not be allowed in any of the facilities mentioned above. Also unauthorized are bare feet or shower shoes, except while at swimming pools and gymnasiums.

Modified items of the military uniform, such as cut-off fatigue trousers or fatigue jackets with the sleeves cut off or removed are not authorized.

The wearing of curlers by both male and female personnel is sufficient cause for rejection from post activities and/or facilities as well.

The wearing of the unauthorized apparel or items mentioned does not apply to persons seeking emergency medical or dental treatment but does apply to use of these facilities when engaged in routine appointments or visits.

Uniform items other than those authorized for wear with civilian attire will not be mixed. The only items authorized for wear with civilian attire are the windbreaker, overcoat, raincoat and under garments.

Don't get caught short or turned away needlessly — know the rules and realize that they are created to protect your rights.

777 ENROLL defensive driving course

National Safety Council

Editor's Note: The following article is the second in a series of three concerning defensive driving. The articles are presented in conjunction with National Defensive Driving Week, April 3-9th.

Do you consider yourself a good driver? Do you feel that there is just nothing more for you to learn? Chances are you're wrong unless you have already invested eight hours of your time taking the Defensive Driving Course.

Now what, you are asking yourself, is the Defensive Driving Course? The DDC, as it is called, is a driver improvement program developed by the National Safety Council. The course consists of eight hours of classroom instruction in how to drive to prevent accidents in spite of the incorrect actions of others and adverse conditions.

In addition to the use of a comprehensive handbook, DDC uses visual aids and films to support lectures given by a National Safety Council-certified instructor.

In many states, insurance companies are offering discounts on policy premiums for motorists who have successfully completed the course.

If you haven't already taken the DDC, check with the Ft. Benning Safety Office and see about enrollment. If you have taken the course, encourage your family and fellow-workers to enroll. They can do it right there at the installation. For those of you who have not taken the course plan on taking it again. You will find many changes to include new films and new methods of instruction.

The DDC is an investment in safety that no driver can afford to pass up. It is an investment that pays off in an extra margin of protection for you the driver, your passengars, and for those around you. (TNS).

suggests that further medical consultation is necessary MAH patrons should call the hospital information desk, 544-2041. Desk personnel will refer their call to either the Medical Officer of the Day, or the Family Practice Doctor on call or the Pediatrician on call.

Usually within 15 minutes to an hour, a doctor will return your call. After listening to the symptoms, he will either suggest treatment or request that you bring the patient into the hospital.

Before calling the doctor, it is important to make a mental note of exactly what you are going to say. When speaking to the doctor, you should tell him what signs and symptoms the patient has.

For example; in the case of a child with a fever, tell the doctor how high, by what method you measured, how long it has been present and whether or not the child has responded to treatment with liquid tylenol or baby aspirin.

Ladies with OB problems should call the OB Labor and Delivery Room at 544-1241.

Calling the hospital first, could save the patient from many hours of waiting in the Emergency Room.

"We're not trying to discourage people with obvious emergencies from coming into the hospital," explained Ponatoski, "Any patient with a serious injury can come in at anytime. However, it is important to remember that the Emergency Room is not an out-patient clinic."

High School Registration

All students residing on Ft. Benning and attending public high schools in Muscogee County must be registered with the Ft. Benning Dependent Schools Officer. In addition, it is necessary to register with the Schools Officer to be scheduled for transportation and receive a bus pass. Registration must be accomplished each year before attending school even though the student was registeed during previous school years. Sponsors of those high school students who have not yet registered should visit the Schools Office, Bldg. 880A, immediately to complete the necessary registration papers and be issued a bus pass.

Sponsors are also reminded that the Schools Officer must be notified if at any time after registration if the high school student withdraws from school for any reason or ceases to reside on the Ft. Benning reservation.

Army linguist career program gets 'overhaul'

The Army has taken the first steps toward an eventual overhaul of the Army linguist program, according to DA staffers.

Some of the problems surfaced in a recent Army Linguist Personnel Study (ALPS) have been solved in ways which will provide career opportunities and cash bonuses for some soldiers in the linguist career field.

Among the ALPS recommendations already adopted are:

- The establishment of a $2,500 enlistment bonus for some persons enlisting in MOS 98G (voice intercept operator). Languages to which the bonus applies are Arabic-Syrian, Czechoclovakian and Polish.
- Career progression programs have been developed for MOS 98G as well as MOS 96C (interrogator) and MOS 97C (area intelligence specialist). The latter two programs went into effect in September 1976, and the 98G program will start in March 1978.
- A bonus is now being offered for reenlistment in the 98G MOS. The bonus can be a fat one. For example, a Sergeant E-5 with more than three years service, with basic pay of $534, who reenlists for six years will qualify for a bonus in excess of $9,600, paid in annual installments.

The ALPS recommendations include development of language training programs, validation of Army linguist requirements, and retesting of individuals who have linguistic proficiency on their records. Long range objectives include meeting the Army's requirements for linguists under all conditions, automation of linguist career management, and the development of a bilingual officer corps. (ARNEWS)

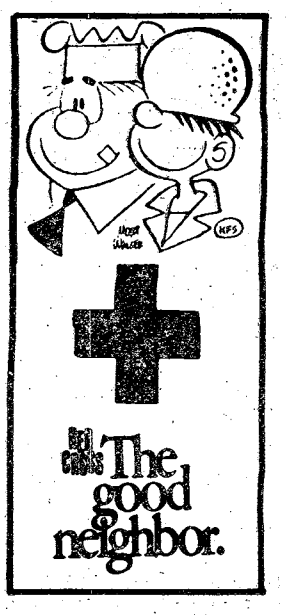
10-8 on the warpost

By "HOSS" KACI 4615



If you want to know what's in the future of CB radio, take a look at the past history of Amateur radio. Where's the similarity? Well, almost 30 years ago all Ham phone stations were amplitude modulated (AM) only. Then all of a sudden, single sideband (SSB) became available.

Without getting too technical about it, the difference between AM and SSB goes like this — the AM signal consists of three parts: the carrier and two sidebands. The carrier's only function is to deliver the sidebands which actually contain the intelligence being transmitted. In this system, 2/3 of the power output is contained in the carrier and the remaining 1/3 is split between the sidebands. However, in SSB, the carrier and one sideband are suppressed and only the remaining sideband is transmitted, thus concentrating 100% of the power behind the voice. SSB signals are allowed three times the power of AM signals.

So, when the early Amateur sidebanders began firing up, animosity built up between them and the AMers. Why the animosity? When an AM receiver is tuned to an SSB signal, it sounds just like a badly overmodulated AM signal bleeding over from another frequency. So the Hams in those days faced the problems of a great number of people with equipment incapable of receiving SSB signals and a grown population of sidebanders. There were arguments and charges hurled back and forth; it nearly resulted in open war between the new sidebanders and the old AMers.

Does all this sound familiar? You bet it does because the same thing is happening today on the CB channels. How did things work out on the Ham bands? Well, the basic superiority of SSB asserted itself and the number of AM users dwindled to the point that it's the AM signal that's rarely heard today.

My opinion is that the Federal Communications Commission is going to wait for the same thing to happen on CB. It would certainly help if they set aside five or six channels for SSB only, but that doesn't seem likely in the near future. In the meantime it's up to us. If we cooperate and respect any local arrangements as to channel usage CB will be better for all of us.

Several Benning soldiers will participate in Boston Marathon

By Betty Zimmerman

Several Ft. Benning soldiers plan to participate in the Boston Marathon, the most prestigious 26-mile, 385-yard road race in the country, on April 18th.

In order to qualify for this event, entrants must have previously run the same distance in three hours or less during a AAU-recognized marathon if they are under 40. Runners over 40 are allowed three-and-a-half hours.

There are also many unofficial runners in this marathon who have not yet met the qualifying times. They are not assigned numbers, nor do they receive times or recognition.

Capt. Geoff Wihelmy a student in the Infantry Officers' Advance Course, definitely plans to go as an official entrant. LtCol. Patrick McClintic, 4th Stu Bn TSB, commander has tentative plans to enter. He also meets the required prerequisites for official entry.

Three doctors from Martin Army Hospital are going to run as unofficial entrants. They are Majors Charles Robinett, Stephen Lohr and Bernard Hirsch.

The Boston Marathon, the second marathon to ever be held in this country, is the goal of nearly every long distance runner in the U.S.A.

Fifteen would-be marathoners ran in that first race in 1897, over much the same course as used today. Only the number of entrants has increased to a figure between 1,000 and 1,500.

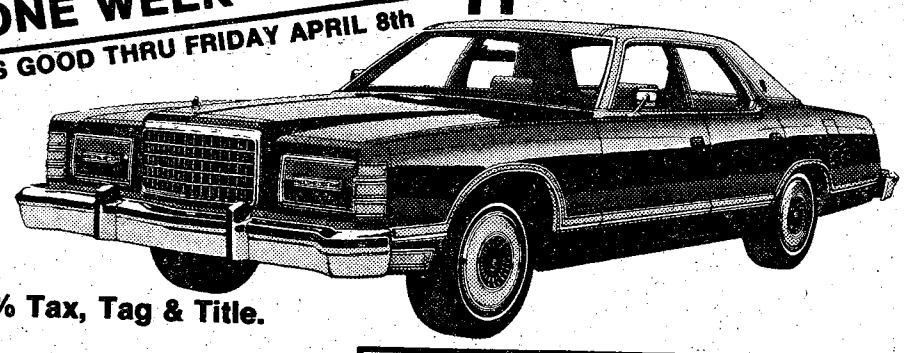
The race originally started in Ashland, Mass. Distance additions and course alternations pushed it back to the present starting point near the town green in Hopkinton.

From Hopkinton, the course winds through eight more suburbs before reaching downtown Boston. It passes through Ashland, Framingham, Natick, Wellesley, Auburndale, Newton, Brighton and Brookline.

Generally the course's early profile is like this: a drop of over 300 feet in the first four miles, a slight rise in the fifth mile, then generally down again — with only a couple of bumps for variety — all the way to Newton Lower Falls at 16 miles.

Once the runners reach the level of the Charles River (50 feet), a long climb to Boston College begins. There is a series of hills — four in all, the first three followed by smaller downhill breaks.

The last climb is the legendary one — "Heartbreak Hill." It starts just after 20 miles, and peaks a mile later over-looking Boston College. The hill itself is small as hills go, it rises only 90 feet. But its positioning makes it particularly sadistic. It is at a point where 20 miles and three previous hills have extracted their toll.



Almost without exception, the course is flat or down from there. It drops over 200 feet in four miles. The race winds up at the Prudential Center Plaza, Boston's filled-in Back Bay section, once salt water and today not much above sea level.

VA announces higher GI insurance dividends

The Veterans Administration announced today it will pay $403.4 million in GI insurance dividends during 1977.

VA officials said the 1977 payments will represent an increase of $26.6 million over the dividends paid in 1976. Dividend payments will be made on the anniversary date of the individual policies. The first checks have already been mailed.

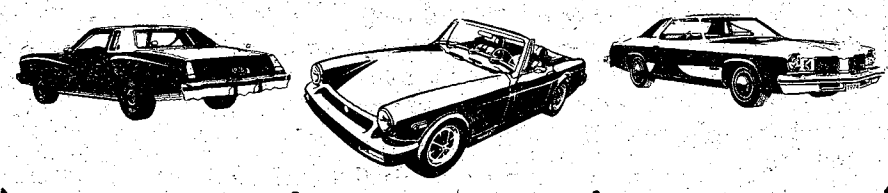
Payments go to holders of three types of government insurance policies: U.S. Government Life Insurance (USGLI), National Service Life Insurance and Veterans Special Life Insurance.

About $368.1 million of the total dividend will be paid to 3.5 million World War II vets who have kept their GI insurance policies. The average payment to these veterans will be $104, an increase from the 1976 average payment of $95.

Some 114,300 World War I policy-holding veterans will receive $23.1 million in dividends, an average of $202, up from $183 paid last year.

About 550,000 Korean Conflict veterans who kept their GI policies in force will receive $12.2 million in dividend payments, according to VA officials. This is an average payment of $22, up from $18 last year. This is the third annual dividend paid to Korean Conflict veterans.

A VA spokesman pointed out that dividends on GI insurance policies will be paid automatically. He stressed that there is no need to contact the VA, explaining that an inquiry about a dividend could delay payment.



Dividends represent a return to policy holders of funds not needed to pay the cost of the insurance. This includes both excess interest earned and any savings realized because actual deaths were fewer than projected rates.

This has operated to the benefit of veterans owning permanent type insurance plans, but has had little or no effect on those with term insurance where the interest element is small.

The VA spokesman also noted that some veterans will receive more than the average dividend payment and others less than the average. Dividends will depend on the policy held, the amount of insurance, the vet's age at issue or renewal and the length of time the policy has been in force.

Homebase/ PCS policy is extended

The Army has extended its homebase/advanced assignment policy indefinitely for officers and NCOs, according to DA officials. The policy affects officers through grade 0-5 and enlisted soldiers E-5 through E-9 who receive orders for unaccompanied short tours overseas.

Under the policy, soldiers are told before they depart CONUS where their next assignment will be. When it is possible, soldiers will be returned to their current CONUS locations, DA officials said.

Since the policy has been in effect, many families have chosen to remain at "homebase" until the soldier returns rather than move elsewhere. This not only helps cut family travel PCS cost but also gives the soldier more time for personal planning.

The homebase/advanced assignment policy soon will be placed in Army regulations. (ARNEWS)

'The Army takes care of its own'

By Madonna Simple

"The Army Takes Care of Its Own." This is the adopted slogan of the Army Emergency Relief (AER) Program, a private, non-profit organization supported entirely by active and retired soldiers' contributions.

AER collections for 1976 totaled $18,-854.78. However, loans and grants given to Ft. Benning military personnel totaled over $50,631.81. Much more assistance has been granted by AER than received by Ft. Benning personnel during the last two years. Future contributions to AER must be greater than in the past if AER is to continue meeting the needs of military personnel.

AER provides financial counselling and assistance to members of the Army (active and retired) and their dependents when a financial emergency arises due to reasons beyond their control and is beyond their means to cope with.

Some of the categories AER provides assistance include; non-receipt of pay, allotments or allowances, loss of pay or other personal funds, emergency medical, dental and hospital expenses, funeral expenses, travel expenses due to a leave of an emergency nature, payment of initial rent or payment to prevent eviction and privation of dependents due to emergencies not covered elsewhere.

A few of the cases where the Ft. Benning AER office has provided financial assistance are:

The wife and six month old son of a Benning soldier is evicted by parents. The soldier has sufficient funds for transportation but will need rent, damage deposit, utilities deposit and a little extra for food until mid-month check arrives. AER says they will assist the soldier once the family arrives. The family arrives a day later and gets off-post housing. AER granted the soldier $275.

Another case was when the soldier's wife was ready to have a baby. His car water pump was broken and he wanted to have the auto ready for the trip to the hospital. AER loaned the soldier $38 which was payed back in a lump sum at the end of the month.

An E-4's newborn son died shortly after birth. The family was caught up in unexpected funeral expenses, but they had some funds AER provided $100 for funeral expenses.

AER will not provide assistance for school clothes, refurnishing quarters, buying luxury items, vacations, non-emergency leaves, cars, insurance, divorces, chronic illness and civilian court fees.

This year's AER goal is $20,000. The fund drive is underway and will continue through May 2nd. AER needs your contributions so that they can provide the type of emergency assistance that has been rendered for the past 35 years.

Automobile rental discounts offered

Avis Rent-a-Car, Inc., and the Military Traffic Management Command (MTMC) have joined forces to ease the strain on the soldier's pocketbook.

Discount rates are available for both personal and official travel (TDY and PCS). All the soldier has to do is present an I. D. card or official travel orders when renting a car.

"Clean-cut rates," as the program is called by Avis, do not include gasoline but do include a mileage charge. A discount of 10 per cent is figured on the total bill. The daily rate is the same at all rental locations and varies only with the type of car the soldier rents. The per-mile charge is based on the size and type of car and may vary from city to city.

34th Med prepares for combat readiness test

By Jim Wilbert

In peacetime, one of the Army's biggest yearly events is the Operational Readiness Training Test. All quarterly field training exercises are geared towards the larger ORTT in preparing personnel on MOS related field operations and success in completing it is a true indication of the unit's combat readiness. Failure means a large amount of extra training.

In preparation for their upcoming ORTT, several companies of the 34th Med Bn recently participated in a field training exercise. The purpose of this FTX was to evalute the unlts ability to function under combat conditions and give individual commanders the opportunity to observe, in the field, the end results of training obtained in the garrison classrooms.

Most of the first day of training was spent setting up headquarters, flight operations, the medical and dining facilities. By night fall the personnel of the 34th Med Bn were ready to begin their MOS related field training and test their basic soldiering skills.

Phase one of training began by forming into a convoy of forty trucks to conduct a night tactical bridge crossing, supported by the 2/69th Cbt Spt Co, 197th Inf Bde. The convoy was able to cross the 60-foot revine and reach their objective. Their objective was an area 200 yards from the bridge crossing where earlier there had been a rocket and small arms attack creating a mass casualty situation that required medical assistance and evacuation. From the mock battle site the patients were evacuated by the 690th Med Co (Amb) to the 676th Med Det where the simulated casualties were sorted, treated, and released.

After attending a two hour block of instruction on the four life and cardio pulmonary resuscitation Sp4 Douglas Lyndley a supply clerk with HHD, 34th Med Bn prepares to perform mouth to mouth resuscitation on the mannequin training aid. This type of MOS cross training insures that every soldier regardless of MOS is capableof performing in a emergency medical situation.

The second day training sites were being prepared while the 690th Med Co were setting up their minimal essential standards test. The purpose of this test was to evaluate individual medical skills by rotating each member through all five stations that tested their knowledge for treatment of shock, cardiac pulmonary resusciatation, water purification, the medical field card, bandaging and care of the wound without the issued field dressing and using improvised dressings from plain gauze, ace bandages and cravats.

This situation familiarizes the medics with the possibility of finding themselves win an actual mass casualty situation where the number of patients could possibly deplete normal levels of medical supplies and improvising could mean the difference between life or death.

They also received instruction on the four life saving steps and after receiving the two hour block of instruction found themselves being divided into groups for testing. With the aid of mannequins and compression meters (a device that measures internal pressure in the mannequins chest) they received accurate compression readings while performing closed chest cardiac massage and mouth to mouth resuscitation.

The 498th Med Co (AIR AMB) provided medical and air ambulance support to the FTX both actual and simulated. During field training exercise the unit underwent extensive aviation and medical training. They were credited with approximately 40 hours of flying time and received 44 simulated missions stressing Nap of the Earth low level and tactical instrument flying. The 498th AA also received six actual medivac missions while in the field site. These missions included a snake bite, head injury, fractured leg, an 11 month-old auto accident victim who was picked up in Widowee hospital in Widowee, Ala. and transferred to Childrens Hospital in Birmingham, and an emergency whole blood transfer from Atlanta Red Cross to Martin Army Hospital.

In a combined training exercise all personnel were sent through three phases of CBR training. The first station was to refamiliarize the individual with CBR warning signs and replacement of filters and equipment. Station two was wet up for masking and recognizing symptoms from gas exposure and at the third personnel were instructed in the various types and uses of the decontamination kits.

After extensive retraining in the field of CBR all personnel were formed into one group for their last training exercise, and after repeated masking procedures watched as the masked instructors encircled them with smoking cannisters.

Finally the signal of GAS was given and the protective masks were put on in record time, thank heaven for the M-17 protective mask.

The training received by the troops was very beneficial in that it gave the individual soldier the chance to sharpen his already acquired skills and gain new skills. It also provided the Battalion Commander the opportunity to view the participating units in a combined effort.

'Can't I just pay for it?'

"Hey lady, wait a minute," pleads the young serviceman, lurching forward in his seat and taking out his wallet. The woman, whose nameplate reads Mrs. White, pauses, her finger still on the dial.

"Look, it's just junk — hardly a buck-fifty," he gestures toward the magazines and pack of gum on the desk between them. "Can't I just pay for them now, and we'll let it go at that? Please?"

Mrs. White begins dialing. She's heard it all before. Whether it's cameras or hose or flashlight batteries, most PX shoppers usually have enough money in their pockets or purse to pay for what they are trying to steal.

The different excuses could fill a book: "I didn't have the exact change;" "I forgot I had it in my pocket;" "I was just doing it for kicks."

The number was ringing and the phone on the other end was answered.

"Military Police Desk, Sergeant Brown speaking . . ."

A patrol is on the way, and the young man in the PX office will soon learn the truth of those posters that read: "A shoplifter gets something for nothing."

What does the PX shoplifter get? An Article 15 can be expected, in addition to loss of exchange privileges.

Vets may face college debts

Veterans going to school under the GI Bill could wind up in debt to the Federal government if they drop courses or receive non-punitive grades under certain circumstances, cautions the Veterans Administration (VA).

VA officials explain that a recent Congressional amendment to the GI Bill requires the agency to cancel assistance payments retroactively for a course dropped without a grade. This applies also in cases when a course is completed but the course or the grade assigned is not used in computing graduation requirements.

Payments for such courses must be stopped as of the first day of the school term, or Dec. 1, 1976, whichever date is later. For example, if a student withdraws from a course on April 1st, under the conditions outlined, VA payments will be terminated retroactively to the beginning of the term.

In the past, GI Bill payments would have continued up to the date of withdrawal, but the new law prohibits this.

VA urges students enrolled under the GI Bill not to drop a course or request a non-punitive grade until they have contacted their school's veterans affairs office and understand what effect the withdrawal from a course may have on their monthly VA checks.

The new regulations do not apply, say VA officials, when the situation is caused by circumstances beyond the student's control.

Pacifiers have killed at least eight babies in the last few years reports the Consumer Product Safety Commission. Six infants were strangled by a ribbon or string attached to the pacifier, and two others choked on the pacifier itself. CPSC is proposing regulations that would make pacifiers difficult to swallow and would discourage parents from tying a pacifier around a child's neck with a ribbon or string.

fins, furs, feathers

By Denny Blankenship

Bass fishing has improved considerably during the past two weeks. Many anglers are reporting good catches from Lake Eufaula and West Point Lake. Most of these folks are catching their fish on crankbaits fished slowly along the banks.

A slow retrieve seems to be working best. I guess its because bass are still trying to recover from a hard winter. They're moving around awful slow. Still no reports of bass being on the "beds." This should occur any day now.

Beautiful strings of Crappie and Striped Bass are being caught up Upatoi and Uchee creeks using small "gigs." Now's the time to go get a nice string. Watch out for snakes though, they're lying all along these creek banks and they'll ruin a good fishing trip in a hurry.

While we're talking about fishing, don't forget that fishing licenses expired in the state of Georgia on March 31st. They're on sale at the Mall exchange and most bait stores in the area. Let's comply with the law gang and get that new license.

Since news is scarce and I can't wait to get down to the ol' fishing hole, I'll leave you with something to puzzle over.

How quickly can you find out what is so unusual about this paragraph? It looks so ordinary that you would think that nothing was wrong with it at all and in fact, nothing is. But it is unusual. Why? If you study it and think about it, you may find out, but I'm not going to assist you in any way. You must do it without coaching. No doubt, if you work at it it will dawn on you. Who knows? Go to work now and try your skill. Hint: Lipogram.

Most of you folks probably didn't think I was smart enough to write that. Well, in that case, I might as well give you both barrels while I'm at it.

Ponder this until next week: A nomadic portion of the metamorphosed igneous or sedimentary deposit of the Proterozoic Era accumulates no bryophytic plant life. (A rolling stone gathers no moss).

VA Q&A

Q — What is the 20-year endowment National Service Life Insurance plan?

A — This is a permanent-plan policy that provides life insurance coverage for 20 years. If the insured is alive at the end of the 20-year period, he may receive the full policy amount in one sum or installments. Premiums are higher than most permanent plans.

Q — As an honorably discharged World War II veteran am I eligible for educational benefits under the GI Bill?

A — Educational benefits for World War II veterans ended July 25, 1956. The current bill offers training to eligibile veterans separated from active duty after January 31, 1955. Eligibility ends 10 years after separation.

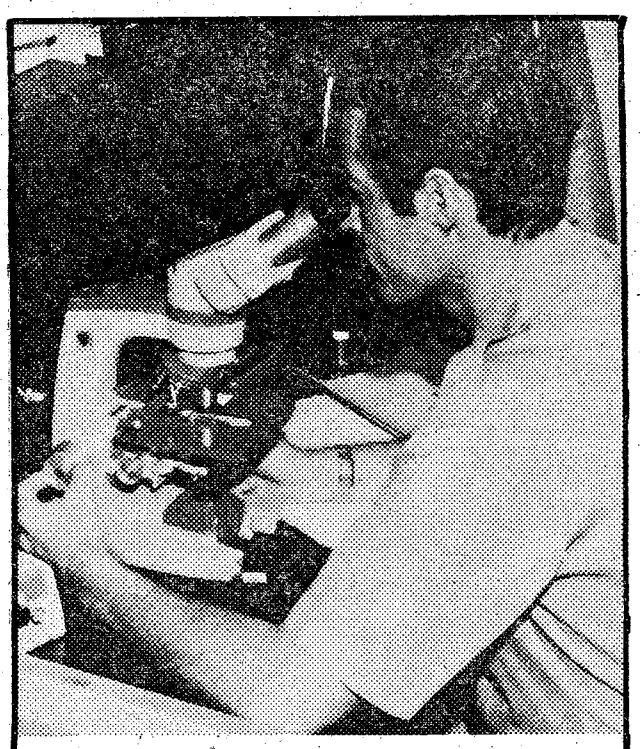
Post physician myths dispelled

(Editor's Note) Recent articles in various newspapers and magazines address physician moonlighting and staff shortages in military hospitals. Col. Anton Hitzelberger, commander of Martin Army Hospital, feels that some of the comments from our soldiers, retirees and their families indicate that they have many misconceptions about their health care providers, and he would like to explain the situation as it really is.

My mission is to provide the best possible care to the great number of patients and to maintain the staff's high morale by providing them the best of equipment and services to carry out my first obligation.

Mentioning moonlighting, physician shortages and service cuts together, implies that our doctors should work just a little harder and we could restore services to our retired and their dependents. This attitude is neither helping us nor the community; at worst, it antagonizes both the provider and consumer.



Increase in work quantity could only be accomplished at the expense of quality — this we cannot do. Our physicians spend at least 52 hours at their duty station. Many, expecially surgeons, have a 60 to 80-hour work week. This does not include the on-call or standby hours.

During the past year, with some additional help from the post, we have absorbed several hundred more clinic visits per day, 50 more inpatients per day, and five more operations per day. Our workload is staggering, even with the new equipment. We have also extended the operating hours of the records room and pharmacy to provide better service.

586th Engineers return from Texas exercise

By Joe Hilton

In the cold Texas morning hours, the men of the 586th Engr Co (Float Bridge) and HHC, 36th Engr Gp fought against time and the threat of discovery as they prepared the way for the final thrust into the "enemy."

Feverishly, the engineers sweated and swore as they moved the mammoth bridge sections from the five-ton trucks and prepared for the airlift.

By dawn, all sections were ready and two CH-47 "Chinooks" began the lift to the bridge site for the final chapter of Exercise "Gallent Crew."

"Zulu 36, this is Zulu 20, two APCs just went down at Cowhouse Creek and we need divers at our location immediately, do you understand last transmission, over?"

Even in simulated warfare, unpredictable freak accidents are a very real possibility. Fortunately in this "real life" crisis, there were no casualties, due to the quick and capable response by the divers of the 586th Engr Co.

The 586th along with its sister unit, HHC, 36th Engr Gp, recently participated in the most comprehensive electronic warfare and communication oriented exercise ever conducted at Ft. Hood, Texas. Additionally the Ft. Benning engineers spearheaded the most massive river crossing operation in recent years.

"Gallent Crew '77 is the largest Army exercise of its kind in the U.S. this year," said Lt. Gen. Robert M. Shoemaker, commander of III Corps and Ft. Hood. "Twenty-seven thousand active Army and Air Force troops from Ft. Hood and seven other installations along with 1,300 reserve troops from 12 states are engaged in the joint exercise."

MAST crew rescues three University students

By Bill Walton

The 498th Med Co (Air Amb), 34th Med Bn is deeply involved in the Military Assistance to Safety and Traffic (MAST) mission. Over 65 per cent of their MAST missions to date has been concerned with transport of premature infants from hospitals in the local area to the Medical Center at Columbus.

MAST mission 489 on March 29th will long be remembered, not only by the 498th but also by three Auburn University Students; Paul Mattson, Rick English and Hank Brooks, who were plucked out of a tree near Lochapoka, Ala., by the MAST crew.

Their pleasure trip, in two canoes, ran into problems in the rain-swollen Saugahatchee Creek when the canoe with the three men capsized. They stayed with the canoe and managed to wedge it between some trees on what is normally an island, but was covered with water. As the current was too swift and strong for them to make it to shore they climbed up into one of the trees.

The crew of the second canoe notified the Alabama Highway patrol of the problem and they in turn notified the 498th at 12:50 p.m. with a request for help. The UH-1H with CW02 Stanley Snopkowski, mission commander, W01 Rick Hilgendorf co-pilot, Sgt. William Lunt, crewchief and Sp5 Alonzo Wilson, flight medic were ready to launch immediately.

However, there was a delay in departure due to the necessity of evacuating an injured airborne student from Fryar Drop Zone to Martin Army Hospital. The aircraft departed at 1:21 p.m., and was over the site about 1:45 p.m. Although the aircrew thought they had the location pinpointed, the Highway Patrol was standing by on the bridge where Alabama Highway 11 crosses the Saugahatchee and gave exact guidance.

Upon their arrival at the scene Snopkowski said, "It reminded me of an article in National Geographic. Those three guys looked like three Koala bears sitting in a tree."

The aircraft hovered at about 80 feet above the ground and using the rescue hoist with a jungle penetration seat in it lowered the flight medic, Wilson determined if the three men were seriously injured. To prevent complications and to insure that the men got aboard the aircraft safely, Wilson made the 50-foot hoist trip with each of them.

To say they were happy and grateful to be aboard the aircraft is perhaps the understatement of the year. The helicopter took the three wet but happy students to the Highway Patrol and arrived back at Ft. Benning at 2:45 p.m.

This was the first actual hoist rescue mission for both Snopkowski and Hilgendorf. When asked how he felt about the mission Snopkowski said, "I was really happy with the way everything went.

Toll-free port call number available

A soldier home on emergency leave or TDY no longer has to look for a phone with AUTOVON to get a return port call. The Military Traffic Management Command (MTMC) has set up a toll-free telephone number for quick and easy port call service.

Previously, soldiers had to travel to the nearest military installation to get a port call. They can now call from home, and the Army will pick up the tab.

In addition, the number is used by group movements and recruits when they experience problems while traveling. Recruits will be furnished the telephone number by the Armed Forces Examining and Entrance Station. Group movement leaders can get the number from the local transportation officer.

Soldiers who need a port call are requested to call during normal duty hours. Staff duty officers and other after-hours officers can only accept the information and pass it on to regular staffers who enter the data into MAC's computer to obtain a port call. Soldiers are encouraged to get port calls as early as possible. If a soldier requests a port call with less than 48 hours remaining on leave, he is advised to report to the APOE. When he arrives there, his leave is terminated and his status is changed to "duty."

The toll-free number for port calls is 800-336-0223.

Leadership--South Korea, 1951

Editors note: Due to the favorable response received at the following article's first publication, it was felt that it should be presented to the Ft. Benning audience again.

Editor's note: The italic print in the following text was taken from "This Kind of War," written by T. R. Fehrenbach on the Korean conflict.

We was rotten 'fore we started — we was never disciplined;
We made it out a favour if an order was obeyed.
Yes, every little drummer 'as 'is rights an' wrongs to mind,
So we had to pay for teachin' — an' we paid!
Rudyard Kipling, "That Day"

A soldier of the 31st Inf Regt, 7th Inf Div, catches "40 winks," oblivious to the action going on around him, near P'ap'o-ri, Korea.

Problems in Korea generated from unpreparedness — an unpreparedness not so much in the ability of the machinery of war to function (once the economic wheels of the country began to turn), but rather in the training of the people called upon to operate the machinery and their leaders.

There were many young men . . . who had come to Korea with no concept of war. Panic began to sprout.

. . . an officer — for there were young men wearing bars . . . who were never soldiers, either — ran along the stalled line of trucks, shouting: "It's every man for himself! We're trapped! Get out any way you can!"

Men got down from the trucks and began to run for the circling hills — and the officers and sergeants followed. Here . . . we commmitted a grevious error . . . we broke faith with our fellow soldiers . . .

There were 180 wounded men in the trucks, and no one said anything to those men as they were abandoned.

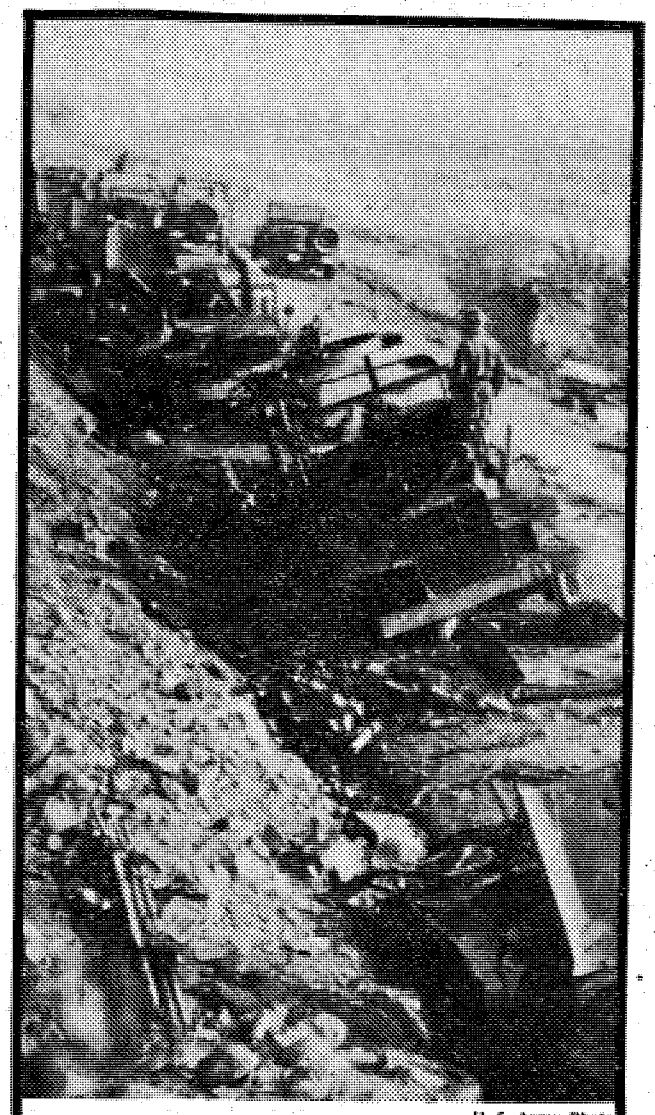
Leadership is an inborn trait — not everyone can lead — it takes a special type of individual to be a leader of men.

This may be so, however, it matters little whether the traits are there if the resources and know-how aren't. A leader can only lead based on how he is taught to lead.

He may now what to do but his training determines how he does it.

On arrival in Korea, the regiments had been at 70 per cent strength — but worse, their tactical integrity had been destroyed. Each regiment had only two battalions, instead of the normal three . . . regimental commanders could have only one battalion on line and one in reserve, or two on line and no reserve at all.

The Army schools, assuming that before being committed to action the Army would get its "fat" restored, had developed no new and startling ways of making do with too little, too late.



He who supposes all men to be brave at all times . . . does not realize that the courage of troops must be reborn daily, that nothing is so changeable, that the true skill of a general consists of knowing how to guarantee it by his positions, dispositions, and those traits of genius that characterize great captains.

From the French of Maurice de Saxe,
REVERIES ON THE ART OF WAR

. . . George's 4th Platoon leader commanding the company mortars, discovered a group of artillerymen huddling together inside one of the battery's canvas tents. Fire from the hills was beginning to spray over into the valley now, and the mortarmen and gunners were being hurt.

"Hell!" this officer barked at them. "A squad tent won't stop bullets!"

Despite this officer's urging, none of these men would go up on the hill to give the riflemen a hand. Faced with being overrun, they seemed to feel that because their primary military occupational specialty did not include handling a rifle, no one had the right to make them use one.

A recently ambushed convoy of the 23rd Inf Regt, 2nd Inf Div is checked out by U.S. Military police after being hit by Chinese Communist forces while retreating south.

. . . Soldiers fight from discipline and training, citizens from motivation and ideals. Lacking both, it is amazing that American troops did even as well as they did.

Leadership--Ft. Benning, 1977

By John Davis

Today's Infantry platoon leader must have the mental toughness and discipline to accomplish any mission assigned, yet possess the sensitivity to deal intimately with the individual soldier and his problems. He must be forceful yet kind; firm yet understanding.

It is the mission of the Infantry School to develop this highly-complex leader. Combining projected needs with lessons learned in battles past, the school has developed a curriculum designed to produce the best product in the shortest time possible. The Infantry leader circa 1977 has the benefit of the finest training yet devised by the United States Army.

"Our platoon leaders are taught to be the complete soldier beginning with learning how to be a follower," says LtCol. Douglas Fingles of the Infantry School's Command, Staff and Leadership Department. "The old principals and traits of leadership still apply. Now the emphasis is on implementing them."

Twenty five years ago it was a popular conception that leaders were born, not made. And when the United States suddenly became involved in a massive land war in Korea, the Army found itself with an excess of young officers ill-trained to lead in combat. It was not uncommon for troops to panic in battle as the result of poor leadership.

"Today we train our junior officers and NCOs with emphasis on decision making," says Capt. Jack Daniels, a leadership instructor. "We place the leader in a realistic situation and watch him respond under pressure. Here our training is geared to deal with fear and prevent panic in combat situations."

"Not everyone can be a Patton or Rommel," Fingles admits, "but with training and practice, we have discovered that most of our people can effectively lead. The key is patience and understanding, helping the leader to know himself — his capabilities and limitations."

By fully examining his own strengths and weaknesses, the leader can better deal with his men. He is taught self discipline, emotional control, spiritual and moral strength, and how to attain and maintain standards. He is taught to lead by example, to "Do as I do."

Another major concern of the school is teaching the leader to be sensitive to the problems of the individual soldier. While the mission always comes first, the welfare of the men is also of prime importance. According to Capt. Carl Fedde, also a leadership instructor, "We have courses designed to place leaders who believe in accomplishing the mission at all costs, as well as those who may foresake the mission to cater to the needs of his people. Both kinds need to be identified so that adjustments can be made. What we are after is the complete leader." What we are after is the complete leader."

And when the complete leader is developed, it is the contention of the Infantry School that the finished product will be equipped to lead men in combat without reservation. Because he has the expertise and confidence to lead by example, his subordinates will follow him unhesitatingly.

"The leader must make each soldier feel as though he is a member of the team," says Fingles. "This is the first step in complete leadership. He must provide the incentive to make the individual soldier believe in himself.

"If he can do this; make the soldier believe in himself and get him to work as a team member, then, he can call himself a leader. The men he leads will get the job done because they want to rather than because they have to. The soldier who performs because he wants to will still be doing the job when the leader's back is turned.

"Our job is to develop this kind of leader, and the first thing we look for is someone who gives a damn!" concluded Fingles.

Benning 'Super Soldiers'

NCO develops many different skills

By Marshall Jones

Some people spend a lot of time developing skills in one area. SSgt. Donald Marquis, NCOIC Interrogation Section, 179th MI Det., 197th Inf Bde has become proficient in many.

SSgt. Marquis is probably best known for his running. He figures he has run 2,500 miles since he began running several years ago. Now, he consistently runs five miles in around 34 minutes.

He was also a Volks Fest participant, running 20 miles in two hours, 15 minutes.

Proving that you don't have to run from a fight, Marquis has been taking classes in Tae Kwon Do for about six months, and has earned his green belt. He can be seen daily practicing his kicks, jabs and punches.

He is also an avid trail bike fan and spends any free hours left over on his bike. His most recent competition was a rugged 75-mile Hare Scramble, which he completed without a scratch.

Marquis has other activities he enjoys, but he simply doesn't have the time for them. He used to spend many hours scuba diving, but his other pursuits occupy him now.

He has proven that with the commitment and time to devote to one's activities, one can be proficient and excel in many things.

On a winning streak and can't stop

By Bev Lockhart

When Sp4 Carol Webber gets on a winning streak she just doesn't know when to stop.

Carol was chosen Soldier of the Month for June and just finished the 36th Engineer Group's leadership course as distinguished honor graduate in January. When it came time to decide who was going to represent Headquarters Command on Rozell's "Young America Show" in February, the most likely soldier was — you guessed it . . . Carol!

Carol entered the Army in 1975 as a Field Radio Repair Specialist after attending the University of Connecticut for a year. "I wanted a technical skill I could fall back on," she said.

After attending basic training at Ft. McClellan, she completed Advanced Individual Training courses in radio repair at Ft. Sill and Ft. Gordon where she was named honor graduate.

Carol's main interests are in "completing my education while doing a good job for the Army." She's doing both. A junior at Troy State University, Carol's working on her Bachelor's degree in Social Science with an ultimate goal of a Doctorate in Counseling Psychology. "I'd really like to work with kids and families," Carol said, her hazel eyes lighting up with excitement.

Carol is currently working on a correspondance course in television repair to broaden her knowledge in her field. The 20-year-old has a lot of respect from both her supervisors and co-workers in the Electronics and Communications Maintenance Division of Classroom Support at Infantry Hall.

When she's off-duty Carol can be seen riding her ten-speed bicycle around post. Often she takes off in her yellow van and camps out. "Actually, I like to snow ski in the winter and swim in the summer, but I don't get much of a chance to ski around here", the native of Tolland, Connecticut said. Being such an outgoing person may have had something to do with her winning the Professional Fitness Award for Headquarters Command last year. She likes to play tennis, too, although she's only learning and "not too good at it."

Safety Caps Save Lives

Child-resistant packaging has been credited with a reduction in ingestions of aspirin and other toxic substances by children. In 1971, the year before child-resistant packaging was required for aspirin, Poison Prevention Control Centers reported 8,146 aspirin ingestions for children under five. By 1974, that figure had dropped to 4,-837. In the two years after child-resistant packaging was required for aspirin, the number of reported deaths from aspirin poisoning of children under five dropped 48 per cent, according to the Public Health Service's National Center for Health Statistics.

Doctors at MAH professionals

physicians. The stipulations under which any member, specifically medical officers, can moonlight are clear; are being followed to the letter; and are reviewed by the Inspector General of Health Services Command.

A serious need must exist in the civilian community. Since there is no serious need in Columbus, short of one specialty, only one physician does four hours of consultation work per week in Columbus. All other doctors work in X-ray departments or emergency rooms in small hospitals in counties where civilian medical care is severely limited or non-existent.

Most of the 'moonlighters' work one 8-hour shift per week, usually on a weekend, and never within eight hours preceding their duties at Martin Army Hospital. Moonlighting in federal hospitals by federal physicians is illegal as well as impossible since we do not have the support staff — receptionists, X-ray personnel, laboratory technicians, nursing personnel, etc. — to assist the physician after hours. Neither do we have the money to pay overtime for the 60 per cent civilianized staff.

Another point I wish to bring out, is that only two physicians come from a service where we were forced to cut care. Service had to be cut not due to lack of surgeons but because of shortages in support staff and operating room time.

Finances

Whatever gives some service members the idea that all of our young doctors are rich? It simply is not true! Most struggled financially through school and residency specialty training. Now they are paying back school loans, raising children, providing for parents and all the other financial worries that we all must cope with.

Over 75 per cent of our physicians at Martin Army Hospital (MAH) are non-career Army physicians. All of them entered the service under the Berry Plan. This means they had, prior to elimination of the draft, the option to be drafted as general practitioners or continue their civilian specialty education and come in the Army later. These doctors are being held to their promise.

The Army has not paid for their education as many of our service people believe. These young physicians do not receive the bonus of $10, 000 to $13,000 annually that is now available to physicians with considerable prior civilian medical experience. Nor do they receive pay anywhere near the salaries of our civilian (GS-13 through 15) physicians. The fact is, our Medical Corps captains and majors receive only $100 a month more than their line counterparts.

The physician whose education will be paid under federal scholarship programs will not come into the Army until the early 1980's. Until such time, we will have a tremendous problem since there will be no more Berry Plan doctors after next year, and the retention rate is so very low. We cannot solve this problem locally. At best, we can hope to improve the situation with community support and understanding.

Staffing

We are not competitive with civilian salaries and so we have difficulties in hiring civilian physicians and critical technicians. Civilian emergency room physicians command high salaries — radiologists even higher. We have not been able to fill technician slots in our laboratory for up to a year. This is why patients have to wait and doctors have to wait for results and further disposition of patients.

As I have explained previously, Martin Army Hospital is staffed on the basis of active duty personnel only, and we try to serve as many dependents and retirees are possible. The troop and retired population has risen and will go even higher, but the available hospital staff has not! In fact, we will experience a further cut.

New Program Works

In the middle of last year, the chief of pediatrics instituted a new program. A Pediatric Advisor Booklet was published and widely distributed. Patients must call in and describe symptoms and if the doctor deems it necessary, the patient will get an appointment that same day. Some people think it is silly to call, but unless it is an emergency, the non-callers will go to the end of the line. This system has worked so well that we have extended it to the emergency room.

Emergency Room Abuse

We also put out the Adult Medical Advisor booklet, although I am not sure who uses it, since our emergency room continues to be abused. From 150 to 200 patients per day visit the hospital, mainly afterhours. This service is staffed to see sick people, instead they mainly treat blisters and colds. Only 10 to 20 of the 200 are really emergencies and perhaps another 30 to 50 could be classified as patients that should receive attention. The remainder comprises the ever present group who abuse the system for minor aches and pains that could be handled on a scheduled basis.

Some patients tell us that their military supervisor will not let them go to sick call during the day, causing them to use the emergency room at night. Some retired and dependent personnel work during the day, and therefore present themselves at night. For the sake of the patient who uses the system properly and our staff, we must put a stop to this practice! The emergency room is fast becoming a place of mutual dissatisfaction due to overuse by those not needing the service. Educational programs and other definite steps will be used to stop abuse and or misuse of care services.

Conclusion

Criticism or suggestions should be brought to the attention of our Patient Affairs Officer, at 544-1611, who is my personal representative. We want to improve our services. With no silver lining on the horizon or light at the end of the tunnel, with your cooperation, we will do our best with what we have.

Let me repeat that what we need is community support — not generalized or unfounded criticism. Then perhaps one of these days, one or the other young medical officers will remain in the Army Medical Department — a service which I have found to be personnally and professionally rewarding.

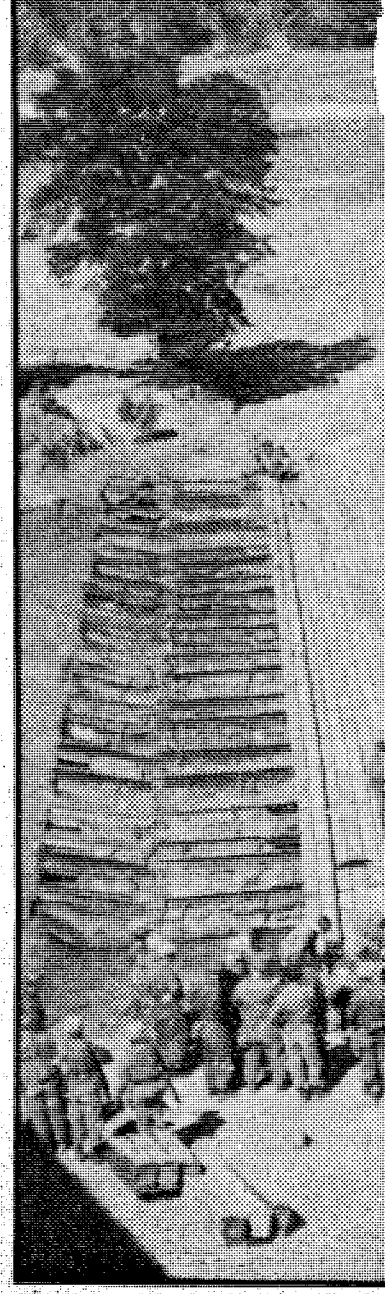
Engineers

A CH-47C "Chinook" carries a bridge section from the staging area to the actual river-crossing site.

Engineers of the 586th and HHC, 36th Engr Gp begin laying the first two pontoons of the M4T6 float bridge.



The primary mission of the 586th an HHC, 36th Eng Gp (CBT) was to tra and supervise the 62nd Engr. Bn and th 8th Engr. Bn in the construction of th M4T6 Float Bridge prior to "Gallei Crew."

During the actual exercise th engineers employed the M4T6 at tw bridging sites and helped facillitate th movement of the 2nd Armored Div commanded by MajGen. George Patt III, in a tactical river crossing.

The main ground forces for both th friendly and opposition sides of the exe vise came from the III Corps, Ft. Hoo The opposing combat units were e ecuting free play tactical operations find one anothers units and maneuv their units against each other. Tank mechanized infantry platoons mov freely across the 143,000 acres of He maneuver area during the mock war.

There was no pre-determined winne evaluators and controllers were flow directly to the field sites where units en ed up facing one another. There th reviewed the unit's positions and tactic plans, then made judgment on which un won.

with the help of Ft. Benning's Engineers prevailed over the 1st Cav Div.

For the engineers, "Gallent Crew" meant four-weeks in the field and a quick assimilation of all of the tools and knowledge that an engineer must possess to operate as infantry when called upon to do so.

A river crossing of the magnitude such as the one conducted at Fort Hood required no less than three-weeks of training and coordination between all of the participating units. All of the floats and pontoons which make up the M4T6 Float Bridge had to be constructed in the rear assembly area and then airlifted by helicopter to the bridge site. The actual operation was performed under blackout conditions until the early morning attack commenced.

As the day of the actual river crossing operation approahced, the engineers worked on little or no sleep. However the whole ordeal soon showed its worth as tank after tank and other armored equipment convoyed across the bridging sites.

The bridging operation was the turning point of the mock war, as the 2nd Armored Div. moved into the enemy stronghold and overpowered their front lines with the pulverizing power of armor.

ough the cold Texas night, the idge in time to decide the battle.

8th grader wins spelling contest

For a spell-binding fifteen minutes, it seemed that a spunky little 4th grader would triumph over an eighth grade student during the post-wide spelling contest held on April 1st in the White School library.

However, Mark Larson, a 4th grade student at White School, was defeated when he was unable to spell the word, chattel. Michelle Mauldin, an 8th grader at Don C. Faith School, went on to victory when she successfully spelled chattel and the winning word conciliate.

As post champion, Michelle will attend the district contest in Americus on April 8th. If she cannot go, Mark, the runner up, will go.

Michelle is the daughter of Major and Mrs. Bruce Mauldin of Ft. Benning.

The post contest pitted the champion spellers from the 4th to the 8th grade against each other for an hour. George Gingell, of WRBL-TV, Channel 3 in Columbus, was the guest caller.

Other participants in the contest were, Felician Bowen, a 5th grade student at White School; Anne Hebert and David McCaskill, 6th and 7th grade students at Faith School.

Post Bass Club honors Fisherman of the Year

By Denny Blankenship

SSgt. (ret) Bob Billman has been named Ft. Benning's Bass Fisherman of the Year for the second year in a row. This prestigious award, presented annually by the Post Bass Club, is based on year long competition with points being awarded for ounces of fish caught.

Billman, an avid bass fisherman for 13 years was born in Geneva, Ohio, but now claims Columbus, as his home.

In accepting the award, Billman admitted that the competition was 'close' and at times he had his doubts about the outcome. When asked about his success, Billman replied, "I structure fish most of the time and try to establish a pattern early. Bass are generally around some type of structure, however you must establish a pattern as to depth, water temperature and oxygen content."

By virtue of his win, Billman will lead Benning's "Top Six" fishermen in this year's Georgia State Championships which will be held April 21st-25th at West Point Lake. Winners in this tournament will then advance to the National Championships to be held at a later date.

Billman narrowly missed a berth in last year's Nationals, but based on his recent performances, he certainly has a good chance to make it this year.

Just in case you thought Uncle Charlie isn't watching over your shoulder, here are some statistics I managed to dig up.

In a three-month period the FCC reported that it revoked 18 CB licenses outright and levied fines totalling $33,000 on 426 CBers. The fines ranged from $50 to $200.

Reasons cited for the fines included violations of the rules covering frequencies, output power, working skip and use of FCC callsigns. However, the majority of fines and revocations were issued for violation of an FCC rule that doesn't even appear in Part 95 of the FCC Regulations, which covers CB. It's Section 1.89, which states that you are subject to a fine if you don't respond to a violation notice.

That's right, if you don't answer an FCC violation notice they can slap a fine on you and revoke your license to boot.

So, if you ever receive a notice of violation from the FCC, your best bet is to answer it right away. If there are extenuating circumstances concerning the violation, you might try explaining them and ask for a reduction of the fine.

This may or may not help, but it is certainly better than ignoring the letter, which will result in another fine or revocation of your license.

If you receive a notice of a violation that you would rather not try explaining, you could take the extreme measure of sending your license back to the FCC and asking them to cancel it. You'll wind up without a license of course, but this action just might help you out of whatever jam you're in.

RMC is tax free

One of the least understood things about regular military Compensation (RMC) is the tax advantage resulting from the soldier's taxfree BAQ and subsistence allowances. Many people have a tendency to think of it as "tax avoided" instead of "tax advantage." Tax advantage is the additional income a military member would have to earn, if all pay and allowances were fully taxable, to yield the same takehome pay. To put it another way, it is the additional amount a civilian must earn to realize the same takehome pay as a military member.

Well folks, I think we can count our blessings because most of the bad weather that has been prevailing in the Southern half of the good ol' USofA has passed to the north and west of us and some pretty good fishing is available in the local area.

Although the rivers are running muddy, the following creeks are clear with excellent fishing: Hatachubbie, Little Barber, Rum White Oak and Chinahatachee. Bass being caught in these creeks are chalk white in color and they've obviously come from a long stay in muddy water. This means they're moving up into the creeks in preparation for going on the "beds."

They're very aggressive and hungry, so don't be surprised when you think you have hooked a five pounder and actually it's a much smaller fish.

Those die-hard bassers from the Post Bass Club held their April tournament on West Point Lake last Saturday. That ol' son-of-a-gun Bob Bellman won first place again. I honestly don't know how he does it. Willie Goble, who you can always count on being in there, came in with second. Willie also won big fish honors for the day. I won't tell you how big it was, let's just say it was big enough to win. Atta' boy Willie, hang in there.

Billy Rumberg and Bob Babcock tied for third. We'll probably never hear the end of that, particularly from Babcock.

You know, I've been writing a lot lately about those two esteemed Command Sergeant Majors Greene and Collier. Actually, I've been getting all my poop from SFC Chapman, DPT, USAIS.

As a matter of fact, I was having a leisurely cup of coffee in the Bldg 4 cafeteria the other day when Chapman told me the following:

It seems that Chapman, Greene and Collier ware walking across the Sahara Desert together. Chapman was carrying a canteen, Greene a goat skin container, and Collier a car door.

Lord, was it hot.

They humped their gear for a few miles and Chapman said, "Man, is it hot. I think I'll have some water." And he proceeded to drink the cold water from his canteen.

They walked a few more miles and Greene said, "Man, it sure is hot. I'll think I will have some wine.' Whereashe drank the wine with much satisfaction from his goat skin.

They all walked a little further with the sun beating down and Collier said, "Boy, is it hot. I think I'll roll the window down!"

Ponder this until next week: It took centuries to make man out of monkey. Sometimes the process can be reversed in just a few minutes.

Yes, Virginia, there is an Easter Bunny: Prices, the weather and politicians all change. One thing that remains constant is that on Easter, the Easter Bunny always shows up to deliver eggs. Since Ft. Benning is a big post, he arrived a bit early this year to be ready to "do his thing" Sunday and was observed near the hangar of the 121st Avn Co (AH), 34th Med Bn.

Brown takes strong anti-union stand

Secretary of Defense Harold Brown testified before the Senate Armed Services Committee March 18th, and cautioned against strong anti-union legislation.

In his opening statement before the Committee, Brown acknowledged the place of unions in America, "The union movement in our country has been an important contributor to our national security, vitality and strength," he said.

He went on to point out that the economic growth and stability of the nation is tied to labor and the unions, stating, "In this sense, labor and the Armed Forces share in assuring our national security."

Brown noted that unions and the military do not necessarily go together as a unit. Within the Department of Defense, there are many labor agreements that cover hundreds of thousands of civilian personnel. However, it does not follow that the civilian process of collective bargaining as we know it can or should be applied to our military forces. I believe, and others including the President share my belief, that it cannot," he said.

Brown stated that the Armed Forces occupy a unique position in society and that they require specialized management as well as a uniquely high degree of discipline and sacrifice to perform properly.

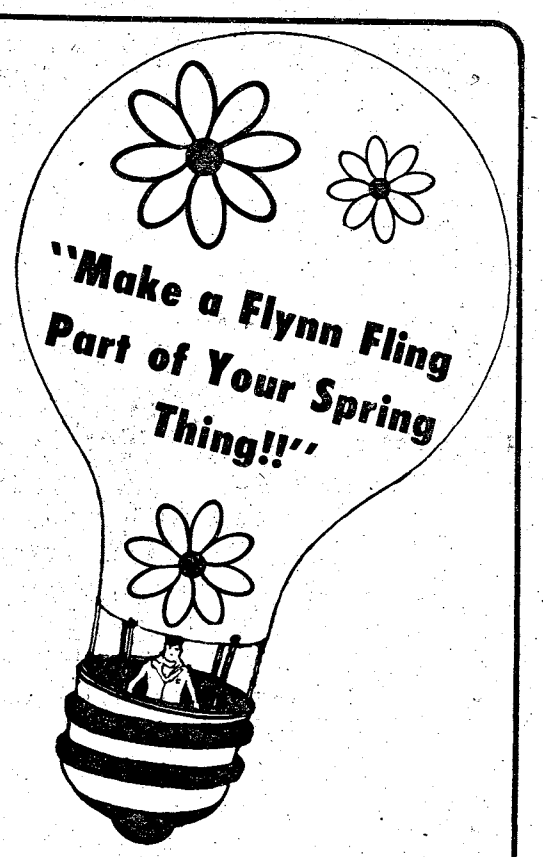
"The relations between a member of the Armed Forces and his superiors, or between the soldier and the government, is not an employee/employer relationship," Brown stated. Getting to the heart of the matter he added that, "The functional role of our Armed Forces demands absolute certainty of immediate and total responsiveness to lawful orders. . .our military must be quickly and completely responsive to external threats."

The fundamentals of unionism cannot assure this type of response. At this point Brown explained why unions wouldn't work: "The collective bargaining process is fundamentally incompatible with this basic requirement (responsiveness). Collective bargaining, with its aspects to shared decision making and forms of consultation prior to action, cannot accord with the basic requirements of the military in the performance of its mission. . ."

Brown said that, as a layman, he needed to comment carefully on purely legal issues but insisted that, ". . .legislation would have to be examined carefully in light of the First Amendment's protections of speech and association. It may well be that the legal standing of legislative restrictions (on military unions) would vary according to whether they were addressed to collective bargaining, to membership in a group, to solicitation of membership, or to the location or manner of such solicitation."

Brown said he didn't have the answers but, "Their existence, complexity and sensitivity suggest to me that caution should be exercised in any legislative action in this area." He also told the committee that adverse court decisions could mean greater limitations on the military's ability to deal with unionization than exist now.

Brown went on to say that the soldier has a number of channels to present problems to the chain of command and, "Undoubtedly improvements (of the system) are possible," he added.



The defense chief concluded by telling the Committee, "In this context it is my view and that of the Department of Defense that a system of collective bargaining is neither necessary nor appropriate for the military." He then recited the clause in the DoD policy directive on unions: "No member of the armed forces, or civilian employee of the Department of Defense, may negotiate or bargain on behalf of the United States, with respect to terms and conditions of military service of members of the armed forces, with any individual, organization or association which represents or purports to represent members of the armed forces; nor may members of the armed forces, or civilian employee of the Department of Defense, recognize any individual, organization or association for any such purpose." The Theatre Guild presents ...

The Atlanta Ballet, under the auspices of the Ft. Benning Theatre Guild will be performing at Marshall Auditorium on April 23.

This is the final program for the Guild's 1976-77 season. Tickets are available for two dollars ($2) at the Information, Tours and Travels (ITT) office, Bldg. 394 (Doughboy Stadium).

The Atlanta Ballet, considered one of the finest professional Ballet companies in the country, is the oldest in the United States having been founded in 1929 by Mrs. Dorothy Alexander.

Because of the Atlanta Ballet's many accomplishments in 1970 it was distinquished as being one of four to be named a "Major Company" out of 400 in the country, and in February of 1973, Governor Jimmy Carter signed a proclamation initiated by the Georgia State Legislature naming the Atlanta Ballet "The State Ballet Company of Georgia".

The Atlanta Ballet has been a driving force of cultural life not only in the State of Georgia, but throughout the entire Southeastern United States, having presented over eighty performances per season. Since 1961, the Atlanta Ballet has presented performances during the Christmas season featuring "The Nutcracker" with the Atlanta Symphony.

In addition to performances throughout the Southeast, The Touring Ensemble participated in the 1974 Alaska Festival of Music in Anchorage. This was the first time a professional ballet company extensively toured the state of Alaska. During the summer of '75, the Atlanta Ballet Touring Ensemble were the guests of the Flagstaff Summer Festival in Arizona. In addition to one full week of performances in the Atlanta public parks, the summer of '77 will take the Atlanta Ballet Touring Ensemble to California for a two week residency at the Forest Meadows Center of the Performing Arts in San Rafael.

The Atlanta Ballet Touring Ensemble completed its second annual community tour of Georgia in '76, visiting as many as 17 towns throughout the state, introducing dance to some of the more remote parts of Georgia. During these tours, the dancers stopped at places of confinement to dance before audiences with little or no exposure to the outside world, not to mention the arts.

The Atlanta Ballet has traveled to five states performing story ballets. "The Nutcracker" has been danced in Jackson, Mississippi and Nashville, Tennessee, and more, with performances involving 48 local children. "Giselle" has been performed in Athens, Georgia and will be performed in Augusta, Georgia in May.

The Atlanta Ballet Touring Ensemble along with the Corps de Ballet will have a busy (77-78) season having been scheduled to dance "Firebird", "The Nutcracker". "Giselle" and "Serenade" in Atlanta at the Fabulous Fox Theatre. The members of the company will also present lecture demonstrations in public schools in the area, as well as providing these demonstrations while on tour.

IS YOUR SPEEDOMETER ACCURATE?

Here's a quick, accurate way to check your car's speedometer for accuracy:

First, check the number of seconds required for you to travel one mile. You can determine a mile exactly from your odometer (which is generally more accurate than the speedometer), or, preferably, from mile-posts along the roadway.

Then divide 3600 by the number of seconds to give you your speed in miles per hour.

For example, if it takes you 72 seconds to go one mile, you divide 3600 by 72. You're traveling at a speed of 50 miles per hour.

Benning 'Super Soldiers'

Three instructors go Airborne -- Canadian style

By Bev Lockhart

Three airborne instructors returned from Canada April 4th, after spending four weeks at the Canadian Airborne Center in Edmonton, Alberta.

SFC Eugene Middleton, Jr., and SSgts. Oscar Cunningham and Jerome Loving attended the jump school as assistant instructors while exchanging ideas and techniques with the Canadians.

They found a few differences between the Canadian and U.S. training, although most of the jump techniques were comparable.

Maj. Nesbitt, Training Branch Director of Canadian Airborne Center congratulates SSgt. Jerome Loving upon completion of his Canadian airborne training as an assistant instructor. SSgt. Oscar Cunningham, SFC Eugene Middleton Jr., and 2ndLt. Alford (82nd Airborne Division, Ft. Bragg) await their congratulations.

"Instead of breaking it down into three phases, as it is here, they have two weeks of ground training and two weeks jump traing," SSgt Loving said. "The Canadians are required to make two jumps from a C-138, three jumps from a C-130, two 'door jumps' and one mandatory night jump. One jump with full gear and equipment is also a requirement."

Classes don't start every week as they do here, and they're much smaller, with only 67 students starting. "We turn out the same amount of airborne qualified soldiers in one week, as they do in a year," Loving said.

The grading system was different too. "We grade our students on a grade sheet daily to determine whether or not they are ready to go on to the next stage. The Canadians give their students a performance objective test at the end of the second week," according to SSgt. Cunningham.

The parachutes the Canadians use are made of thicker material and turn faster than the U.S. parachutes, but their opening shock is greater.

They don't use the 250 foot training towers. After "getting the feel of it" on the 34-foot towers they take the big step — out of an aircraft. Neither do they utilize platforms during their parachute landing fall (plf). They have another individual assist instead. They also keep their legs straight while turning in the air and are already into the roll before they hit the ground. "We teach our students to bend their knees and twist upon hitting the ground," Loving added.

"On the C-130, 34 foot tower training exits they use two jumpmasters instead of one and three commands are given whereas we use two. They use an additional command of 'sound off for an equipment check,' which is something we don't use," said SFC Middleton.

The women who attend the jump school in Canada receive the same training as the men, including physical training (PT). The students run once in the morning and once in the afternoon totaling an average of five miles per day. All training takes place inside due to the cruel Canadian winter although PT is taken outside when weather permits. The three American soldiers were dismayed to see the drop zone covered with ice and snow, but they figured "if they can do it, so can we."

All three sergeants received the Canadian Forces Certificate of Military Achievement, individual plaques, and they brought back the first Iron Mike (equivalent to our Infantry Airborne Statue) given to non-Canadian military personnel.

Next fall Canadian Representatives will attend the airborne training here.

Drill Sergeant takes Post Soldier of Quarter honors

For Sgt. Dale Conner, Ft. Benning's Soldier of the Quarter for January through March 1977, there were many good reasons to become a Drill Sergeant.

"I wanted to be in a position to mold new soldiers and influence their attitudes concerning the Army," the five-year Army veteran said. "I get a great deal of satisfaction from helping and guiding the Infantry soldier of tomorrow. I feel confident that the product we turn out of the 1st AIT Brigade is the type of soldier I want to have next to me when the time comes."

A career soldier, Conners, plans to add a year extension to his current two-year tour as a Drill Sergeant with Co D, 4th Bn, 1st AIT Bde.

This was not the first soldiering recognition Connor has received. He was selected as the top Junior Noncommissioned Officer for Brigade '75 Phase III while stationed with the 2nd Armored Div in Ft. Hood.

Study time? "I work a 12 to 18 hours days," Dale explains, "but this did not hinder my knowledge-gathering, the only subjects that I needed to study were those that I really never had call to use during my military service."

For his selection as the Ft. Benning Soldier of the Quarter, Sgt. Dale Conners receives a USAIC Certificate of Achievement, a certificate and one year membership from AUSA, a $25 savings bond from the National Bank of Ft. Benning, a $25 check from the Ledger-Enquirer newspaper, a bust bank of John F. Kennedy, a Certificate of Merit from post CSM Rogiers, a three day pass signed by MajGen. Latham, exemption from the duty roster for 90 days, a bayonet with his name engraved from the SGMs Association and will also be an honored guest at local AUSA functions during his tenure.

Wigger wins Champions' match

Maj. Lones Wigger Jr. of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit surprized no one by winning the Champion of Champions Outdoor Match at Ft. Benning April 9-10.

Wigger, the perrenial favorite in any shooting match he enters, amassed 2322 out of a possible 2400 points in the two-day event to outdistance second place finisher 1stLt. Dick Floyd, also of USAMU, who shot a 2293. Army Reserve Sp5 David Kimes placed third just two points behind Floyd at 2291.

The USAMU Blue Team of Wigger, Floyd, Lieutenants Ray Carter and Bob Aylward racked up 4585 points to win the team competition. The Army Reserve Team of Maj. John Foster, Capt. David Cramer, Sp5 David Kimes and PFC Karen Monez was second with a 4565.

In the English Match competition, Kimes ran away from the pack by garnering 1195 out of 1200 possible points, overshadowing Wigger's 1191 and taking top honors in the prone event. John Chapman of Ft. Worth, Tex. took third place just two points behind Wigger at 1189.

A health hazard to many soldiers : Hearing loss

Loss of hearing is the health hazard affecting a great many soldiers. The victim is rarely aware there is anything wrong until the disease has progressed for years.

Officials at the Walter Reed Army Medical Center (WRAMC) estimate that over half the soldiers who have spent more than 10 years in combat arms suffer significant hearing loss.

A 1971 study at a major training center showed hearing loss in only 2.4 per cent of the recruits, but by the end of basic training the figure has tripled to 6.3 per cent. By the end of AIT it stood at 13 per cent.

This and other studies led the Army to command interest in hearing conservation. More than 50 audiologists were commissioned and assigned to Army posts to set up programs, identify noise hazards and provide hearing tests for soldiers.

Hearing loss is usually the result of exposure to a hazard, so it can be prevented. In this case, the principal hazard is noise.
