SPIRITUAL

Happiness comes from peace within

By Jeffrey L. Smith
197th Infantry Brigade

Each day reminds me that our happiness depends not so much on what happens to us as much as on what happens inside of us. This fact is a message of the Holy Bible of Christians and of most religions in the world, as well as from many in modern psychology and psychiatry.

One writer who has spoken to me in this area is John Powell, S.J., whose book, "The Christian Vision" provides the following story:

May I ask you to run a short homemade movie on the screen of your imagination? Imagine that you come home some dark night and, to your horror, you see a 35-foot snake on your front lawn.

Your heart begins to pound wildly and adrenaline starts pumping into your bloodstream. You quickly grab a garden hoe and in your frenzy, you hack the writhing snake into small pieces.

Satisfied that it is dead, you go inside and try to settle your nerves.

Later, lying in bed, even with your eyes closed, you can still see the wriggling form on the front lawn.

The next morning, you return to the scene to discover what lies in pieces before your eyes was simply the garden hose which had been left out on the lawn.

It was always a hose, of course, but last night for you it was a snake. What you saw last night was a snake, and all your actions and reactions followed from what you saw. The fear, the hoe, the struggle, the effort to calm down — all followed from the vision of a 35-foot snake.

The important fact is this: We always act and react accordingly to what we see. If I see a 35-foot snake — even though it is really a garden hose — my glands and my emotions, my hands and feet and palpitating heart all react to the "snake" I see.

Likewise, our attitudes are the lenses of our minds through which we perceive reality. As I talk with people about problems, one of my goals is to help them understand that attitudes they may have may be distorting their view of their situation.

If, for example, a young person has an attitude of failure in life, that person has a head start on everyone else in being just that.

How often in our workplace do we hear people complaining about the system or the supervisor or a fellow employee? The question I would quickly ask is what causes this person to come back time and time again with criticism.

Is something or someone really causing this individual grief, or does an attitude exist which causes the person to view other persons and other things as problems.

Think about the past few days, your actions and reactions. Ask yourself what attitudes have affected your view of reality. Reality is as good or as bad as we view it in most of life. What is your view of yourself, of others, of life?

The beautiful aspect of all this is that if we discover that our attitudes are not positive and we are viewing this life through a negative lens, we can change.

I have a friend who responds to persons asking how he is doing by saying, "I'm doing simply fantastic." Being a bit cautious about such a positive response all the time, I questioned him.

He explained that one day, he realized that much of his time was taken up with complaints and worry and that this simply wasn't the real him. He decided he wanted to change his view to one of happiness and joy and he did.

I must confess also that on occasion when I pass by him, his cheerful greeting makes me walk a little lighter myself as he has made me remember to smile.

What a way to live, joyful, in love with life, handling the problems, but viewing them as opportunity and challenge, because you have chosen to. Our happiness really does depend on what's in us, doesn't it? That, my friend, is fantastic!

CHAPEL BRIEFS

Religious 'EXPO' planned this month

A religious education EXPO will be Aug. 29, from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. at the youth activity center and adjacent grounds. The EXPO will include all faith groups active on Fort Benning and all chapel groups who are involved in chapel activities at Fort Benning.

The Chaplain section is planning many activities such as singing and music and clowning, plus souvenirs for children.

This program will be a joint effort with DPCA, which is planning a Family Information Fair. All agencies supporting family life at Fort Benning will be represented to provide information.

Training available for volunteers

Training sessions for volunteer Confraternity Christian Doctrine teachers and aides is planned Aug. 11 and 18, at 7:30 p.m. in the Religious Education Center. Morning sessions will be offered Aug. 12 and 19, at 10 a.m. for those who cannot attend the evening session.

The classes are intended to prepare teachers and aides for the coming CCD school year which begins Sept. 20.

There will be classes in scripture, theology, classroom management, lesson-planning and curriculum. All teachers are required to have a minimum of five hours training in order to be certified for the program.

Catholic council meets next week

The monthly First Friday program of the Military Council of Catholic Women is today at 9:15 a.m. at Main Post Catholic Chapel. Father Thomas Campbell, a teacher at Pacelli High School in Columbus, will be the featured speaker.

Following the main program, participants will travel to Weracoba Park in Columbus for a picnic. Attendees should plan to bring a lunch for each family member attending. Soft drinks will be provided.

Children ten years of age and over are invited to participant in this program. Babysitter service for younger children will be available at the Post Religious Education Center, Bldg. 229.

For additional information, call Jean Hawkins at 682-0281, or Marianne Tennant at 687-0451.

Protestant women gather for Bible study

The Protestant Women of the Chapel meet for Bible study each Thursday morning from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. at the Religious Education Center. The emphasis is on scripture study and Christian fellowship for women. Babysitting is provided free in the same facility. For more informtion, call Joby Bird at 682-7107 or Pam McGlaughlin at 682-7992.

Prayer breakfast open to community

The next monthly prayer breakfast is planned Aug. 18 from 6:30 to 7:30 a.m. in the Infantry Center Chapel annex.

This Officer Christian Fellowship function is open to everyone in the community, including officers, and enlisted and civilian personnel, both active and retired. It focuses on fellowship and the sharing of prayer concerns.

Reservations are not necessary but if you plan to attend, call The Infantry Center Chapel at 545-2050 or 545-2359. This will assist in the purchase and preparation of food.There is no charge for the breakfast.

Fort Benning controller, tower chosen best over-all in the Army

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

Lawson Army Airfield couldn't be used if it wasn't for some special people sitting in the red and white checkered tower located at the airfield.

Those housed in that building are air traffic controllers, and this year their manager and tower have been named the best in the Army. MSgt. Richard Baird, of Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, The School Brigade is the ATC Manager-of-the-Year and Lawson Army Airfield Tower is the ATC Tower-of-the-Year.

Baird attributes his success at Lawson to the whole operation, which he compares to a wheel with all the cogs in place."Everyone down here plays an intregal part and if one part is broken nothing works."

According to Baird, there are two basic parts to his position: he oversees the operation of the tower and its personnel and acts as a liaison between the different users of the airfield.

"Since his arrival in 1985, Baird has been an indispensable force in the improvement and refinement of the air traffic control environment within the terminal." said Col. Bobby Hurst, Director of Plans, Training and Mobilization.

One of Baird's many talents is solving problems. For instance, he revamped the procedures used in Fryar Drop Zone -- something unusual for an ATC Manager, since Drop Zones, as a rule, do not fall within traffic control areas.

Lawson is unique in the fact that it has three DZs not one.

Another problem he identified was use of airspace for certain training exercises conducted to the final approach of the primary instrument runway.

During these exercises, all other instrument approaches and departures had to be terminated. "I looked into the problem and determined that the airspace required for maneuvering during these operations could be refined in a manner to allow for full capability with the exception of one runway." Baird said. "We put it into operation and it has been successful since July 1986."

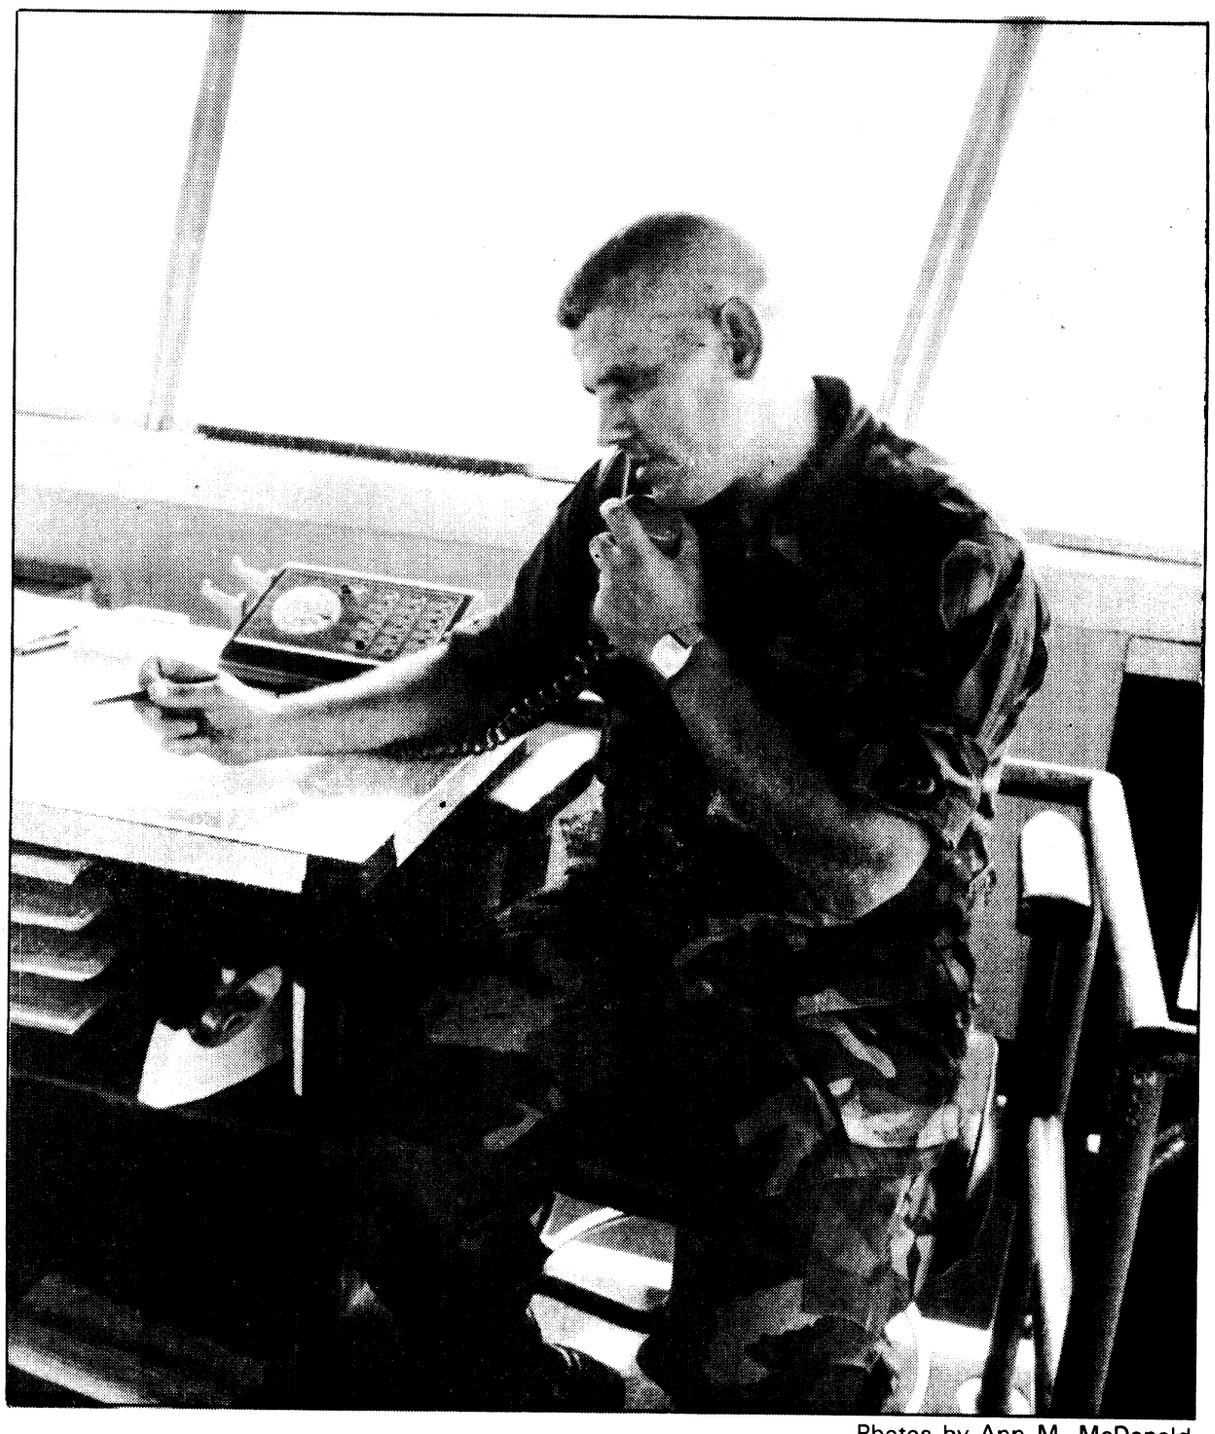
Baird also has set up training programs for all his military personnel, which has resulted in an increase in Skill Qualification Test scores, all being above 85.

Baird's improvements to the facility helped it shine in it's own right. The facility receieved the Facility-of-the-Year award for the second time in three years.

The old saying that "you can't make a good thing better" doesn't seem to apply here.

Working with an understrength staff, the tower crew seems to excel. During a recent survey conducted at Lawson, it was said that "the overall management and operation of all associated functions for Air Traffic Control are being accomplished in an outstanding manner."

"The facilities at Lawson are exceptional in their operation and management," the survey read. "The operational complexities of the airspace are easily handled by an outstanding training program and competent leadership. The personnel take pride in their work and demonstrate professionalism in all areas."



According to Robert Hamby, Tower Chief, they enjoy the reputation of being the best in the Army. "Just recently," he said, "a person was tasked with inspecting tower in this part of the country and he came here first because he wanted to see the proper way things are done."

"Everyone here is working hard to do a very conscientious job to support Fort Benning." Hamby said.

"I think that these awards are good for us, but they really are a pat on the back for the whole post," Baird said, "because we bring together other post elements in order to make it work."

That says it all -- an airfield that handles more than 96,000 movements a year with no accidents and limited manpower has earned the right to be called the best in the Army.

In October, Baird and representatives from the tower will travel to Fort Rucker, Ala. to receive their awards.

Keep the officer's club in mind when you wine and dine or when planning a special function, large or small. We specialize in all events from small cocktail parties to large wedding receptions. We have a price that's right and an experienced staff to serve your every need.

Family Fitness Center--Check out the variety of activities offered by the Officer's Club Family Fitness Center. Aqua Aerobics is scheduled Monday, Wednesday and Friday from 1:30 to 2:30 p.m. Karate classes are offered on Tuesday and Thursday from 7-9 p.m. and again on Saturday from 3:30 to 4:30 p.m. Aerobic classes are available, call 687-0871 for a schedule of classes.

NCO Club System: Treat yourself to a one-pound Porterhouse steak charbroiled to suit your taste Saturday night at the Main NCO Club. Cost is $7.95 per person.

The Sand Hill Club offers an "all-you-can-eat" lunch Monday through Friday for only $3.75.

The Hidden Door Club (E1-E4) features the latest in Disco Video entertainment six nights per week. The Hidden Door Club is closed on Tuesdays. There is a free finger food buffet on Fridays.

Community Recreation: The ITT office announces information packets for Destin, Fla. If you are planning your vacation to Destin, don't forget to pick up your information packet for scuba diving, sailing and reservation information. We can offer sailing from daily cruises with the captain to sailboat rentals where you are the captain. Scuba packages are available for all degrees of expertise.

We also have the following dates available for cabins at Destin: Aug. 20-25; Aug. 24-29; Aug. 25-30; Aug. 29-Sept. 2; Aug. 30-Sept. 3; Sept. 2-Sept. 7; Sept. 3-Sept. 8.

These cabins will be on a first-come, first-serve basis and are subject to availability. The motel is also available for a minimum stay of one night and a maximum stay of seven nights. For more information, please call 545-7535 or come by Bldg. 247, Ingersoll Street.

Kelley Hill Recreation Center: The Kelley Hill Recreation Center, Building 9079, invites retirees and their family members to participate in the programs and activities being offered. A sampling of our programs includes:

Weekly coupon swap — Each Wednesday at 7 p.m., all bargain hunters are invited to convene at the Kelley Hill Recreation Center to trade those valuable coupons.

Overeater's Anonymous — Do you eat when you are not hungry? Do your eating habits change when your mood changes? If so, then perhaps Overeater's Anonymous can help you. This group teaches you to change your eating habits for good. This is an educational support group with no fees, no dues and no weights. Drop in on Thursday evenings at 7:30 p.m.

Computer Classes — Computer know-how is invaluable in today's job market. Without it, finding a good job is almost impossible. The Kelley Hill Recreation Center ranges from the most basic introductory course to the more advanced programming. Each person enrolled gets hands-on training at individual stations complete with monitor, disk drive and printer. Don't hesitate, call today!

Arts and Crafts: The Fort Benning Arts & Crafts Center photo lab is like having your own photography school, and your own professional instructor. You can learn how to use studio lighting; how to develop film; black and white negatives, color negatives, and color slides; how to enlarge and print pictures.

The center is located in Building 2783, on the corner of Eckel Street and Sightseeing Road, or call us at 545-3677.

While you're there, check the Wood Shop. The shop has the best equipment money can buy and two school-trained cabinet makers. The instructors are available at all times to teach and assist you in making a plaque to a room full of furniture.

The woodworking area requires a qualification card prior to utilizing tools and equipment. The class is offered every Saturday morning at 8:30.

Entertainment planned includes blue grass, country and gospel groups, square dancers and cloggers, the Infantry Center Band and the Silver Wings parachute exhibition team.

The fair is open from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. both days.

Martin Army Community Hospital is sponsoring a stop smoking clinic Aug. 11, 13, 18 and 20 from 10 a.m. to noon. Military and civilian employees are eligible to attend, and the classes are free. To register or for more information, Capt. Buchanan at 544-1221 or 544-4166 during duty hours.

The Fort Benning Management Association is seeking applicants for college scholarships. All active duty or retired military personnel and active or retired civil service employees and their family members residing within a 50-mile radius of the Columbus-Phenix City-Fort Benning area are eligible for the scholarships.

The scholarships are intended for undergraduate applicants who are interested in studying in the field of management or business.

The association will select a recipient for a $1,260 per year scholarship to Troy State University at Fort Benning. This must be used during the period of fall 1986 and summer 1987 and will comprise nine courses. The association will also award two additional scholarships: a $300 per quarter or $900 per year scholarship to Troy State University at Fort Benning and $200 per quarter or $600 per year to any accredited college or university.

Applicants applying for scholarships are required to write a letter to the association formally requesting considertion for the scholarship, including highlights of applicant's academic career and extracurricular activities. The letter should also explain why the applicant should be selected to receive the scholarship.

Along with the letter, applicants should include a copy of their high school transcript, a completed application to Troy State University or the college of their choice, and a copy of their request for SAT or ACT scores. Applicants must also submit three letters of recommendaion, with one, if practical, from their principal or high school guidance counselor, transcripts from any college previously attended, and a statement of employment indicating applicant's employer, address and applicant's job title.

Applications must be submitted to Maj. Gravatt, 36th Engineer Group, Building 2827 (545-2886) or M. Crescioni, 36th Engineer Group (545-2686) by Aug. 12.

Schick on an ultra distance comeback trail

By Thad Roberson
Bayonet staff writer

"There has to be an end point somewhere. It's just finding out where it's at."

Richard Schick is a ultra distance runner on the comeback trail, who recently shared second place with Phillip Parker, of Alabama, in the "Last Annual Volunteer Run," a 210 mile race, stretching from Knoxville to Chattanooga, Tn.

The Longest race of Schick's 20 year running career, came just one year after he suffered injuries in a boating accident.

"In the July 11, 1986 accident, I suffered compression fractures to the back and cracked ribs," Schick said.

Two months later, the 37 year old runner was ready to compete in an Atlanta 24-hour run, where he covered a distance of 106 miles.

"I ran as much as I could tolerate with the pain," Schick said . "I wanted to point out that just because you're hurt, doesn't mean you have to roll over and die, " he said.

Races which are governed by time, such as the Atlanta 24-hour race, give the competitors the opportunity to set and meet their own goals for distance.

But in the Last Annual Volunteer Run, with a 210-mile course already set, Schick was forced to give attention to the time.

It was 6 a.m., July 1, when the race began. After 83 hours and 5 minutes, Schick and Parker crossed the finish line with hands clenched.

"We had decided we would run the race together from the very beginning," Schick said.

Though there was time for eating and sleeping, the field of seven ultra distance runners, tracked more than 18 hours each day, for more than three days.

Schick, who said he does not usually have any foot problems on the runs, developed a blister on his left foot shortly after the first 50 miles and later another on his heels. Once again he had to drive on for more than 150 miles in pain.

"I always make the necessary adjustments to my running shoes, making them as comfortable as possible before the run," said Schick, a Physician Assistant at Troop Medical Clinic #5.

"It is always good to keep the feet dry," said Schick. So, I wear extremely thin socks."

Though the feet carries the runner up hill, and down sloops, determination and strength also play an important role.

"I have the determination, but my biggest problem, is keeping the nutrients and fluids at top competitive level," Schick said.

Schick adheres to a special "see food" diet.

"If I see it," said Schick, "I eat it."

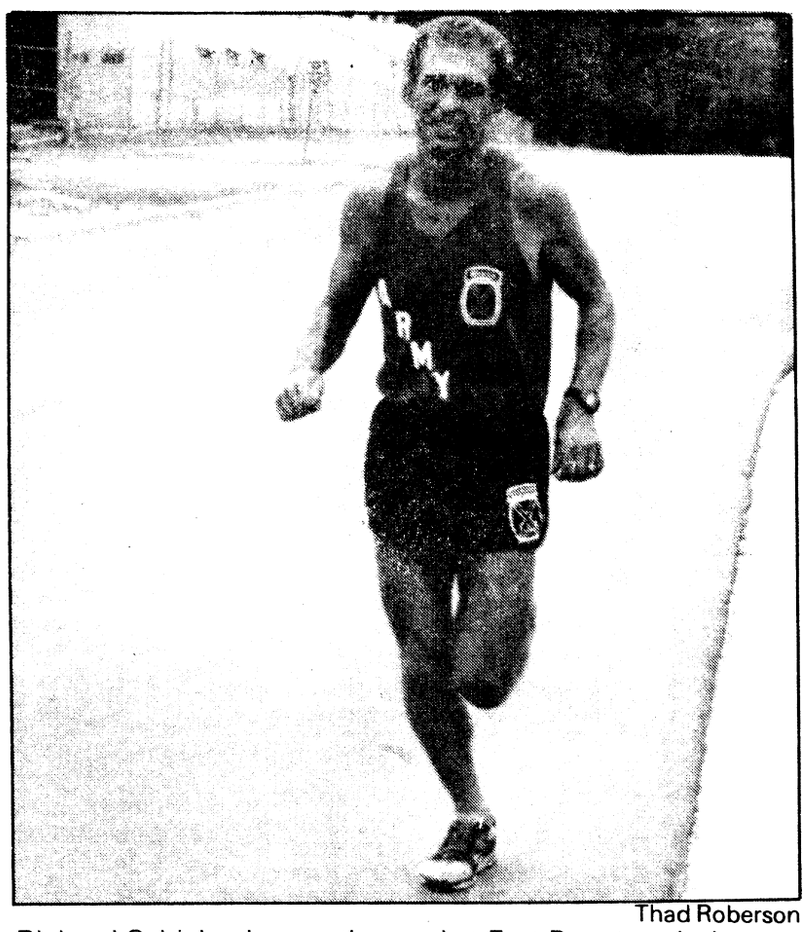
Though dieting is not Schick's strong point, he has developed a 5-foot-seven, 140 pound frame, to atheletic peak through training.

The current vice president of the Columbus Track Club, runs 15 miles a day, five days a week.

What could possibly make any self-loving, sane, individual, want to push to such limits?

"When our daily actions become routine and we become comfortable with what we are doing, we look for something to push us to the very limits," Schick said.

According to Schick, he has chosen the safest manner in searching for those limits.



"There are individual who choose the dangerous sports, such as sky diving, race car driving etc. Should they make a mistake, they stand the chance of losing their life. There are those who choose the stock markets as an avenue of pushing to their limits. A mistake in this arena could ruin lives," said Schick.

"In distance running, I'm given the opportunity to test my limits without risking my health. The only thing that can get busted is my ego, if I don't finish a race," he said.

Schick, who is assigned with the 10th Mountain Division, has been in the Army for just over 20 years.

"I've had no better assignment than being here at the 10th Mountain Division. They are really concerned about the welfare of the soldier and have been great about allowing for my training," Schick said.

Where does it end for Schick... nobody knows. But if given the choice, Fort Benning will be his military home.

Renegades scalp post team

Thad Roberson

Donald Barnes, pitcher for the post team "Doughboys", [illegible] a pitch during the Georgia Military Softball Championship.

By Thad Roberson
Bayonet staff writer

The Renegades circled the field at Benning Park, Saturday, slaughtering several clubs, and taking no prisoners, to claim the top seat in a Military Softball Tournament.

The Renegades, who refer to themselves as an outcast to the Post team, fought to establish themselves as Fort Benning's top flight team.

Fighting without governmental aid, the Renegades opened the tournament with the bitter taste of defeat, as the National Guard team pulled out three runs in the final two innings, to edge past the top team, 10-8, in their first meeting.

The bitter would soon turn to sweet, as the Renegades went on to take revenge on the 10th Mountain Division Team, pounding them to a 9-2 defeat.

Once the Renegades warriors had tasted victory, there would be no end to the warpath they had chosen.

Manudo, another Fort Benning team, met the rage of the the Renegade squad. In the opening inning, the Renegades earned seven runs, and went on to score seven more, scalping Manudo, 14-2.

The Renegades were pitted once again with the National Guard team. In the second matchup, there would be no margin for a National Guard-comeback.

The Renegades took an early 6-4 lead. Realizing the National Guard's finishing kick, the Renegades rallied in the sixth and went on to win, 13-4.

The tournament closed out with an on-going rivilary, as the Renegades faced the Fort Benning Post Team, The Doughboys.

In two consecutive games, the Renegades ambushed the Doughboys, but narrowly escaped with the victory in the first game, as the Doughboys fought back from a 6-3 deficit to pull within one. The Renegades held on to a 7-5 victory.

Falling behind after one inning, 2-0, the Renegades took control in the second inning slamming eight runs at the Post team.

The Doughboys were silenced for the next four inning, as the war-cry of the Renegades sounded throughout Benning Park.

The championship game was decided as the Renegades crushed the Post team Doughboys, 20-4.

Post to pick Army Ten-Miler reps

Fort Benning is gearing up for the third annual "Army Ten-Miler" (Run The River Bridges) to be held in Washington, D.C. Oct. 11.

The Sports Office will be sponsoring three ten-mile runs to be held on Aug. 15 and 29 and Sep. 12 at 7 a.m.. The top six runners will then be selected to represent Benning in Washington.

Runners having the best time in any one race or an average of any two or three will have the opportunity of joining the team.

Entering the Benning races is free and the Community Recreations Division will provide for transportation, lodging and entree fees for the 6-man team that will travel to Washington.

For more information and registration forms, go by the Fort Benning Sports Office in building 394 (Doughboy Stadium) or call 545-2332/7519.

FBOC tennis play slated

The Fort Benning Officer's Club Tennis championships will begin Aug. 19 and is open to club members only. The deadline for registration is Aug. 11. For more information, please call 687-4516.

Uchee fish tourney set

If you're tired of always being "fed a line," now you can do the feeding! The Uchee Creek Recreation area is conducting a fishing tournament during the month of August. Entrants are divided into two categories: Adult, men and women, and junior, boys and girls ages 16 and younger. Prizes will be awarded for longest bass-all species, crappie-all species and bream/sunfish-all species. In addition, prizes will also be awarded for the largest bass and catfish by weight. All catches must be verified at the Uchee Creek Bait Shop. Don't be left out. For more information, contact the Bait Shop Manager, Mr. Bruce, at 545 4053.

New twist for runners

For those wishing to add a twist to the sport of running there is the Chattahoochee Valley Hasher Association. They make the run a combination of seek and find.

For those interested, there will be a meet Saturday at 6 p.m. The starting point will be across the street from the 2nd Brigade Training Center Headquarters, in Harmony Church. Cost of the run will be $4 which includes food and drink after the run.

Leagues now forming

Winter bowling leagues are now organizing. There are currently 17 separate leagues needing bowlers. Their leagues represent all ages and meet at varying times. Join now, call Jim Cantrell at 544-2233/1985 or Gene Riles at 545-4272/1949.

State Hunt classes held

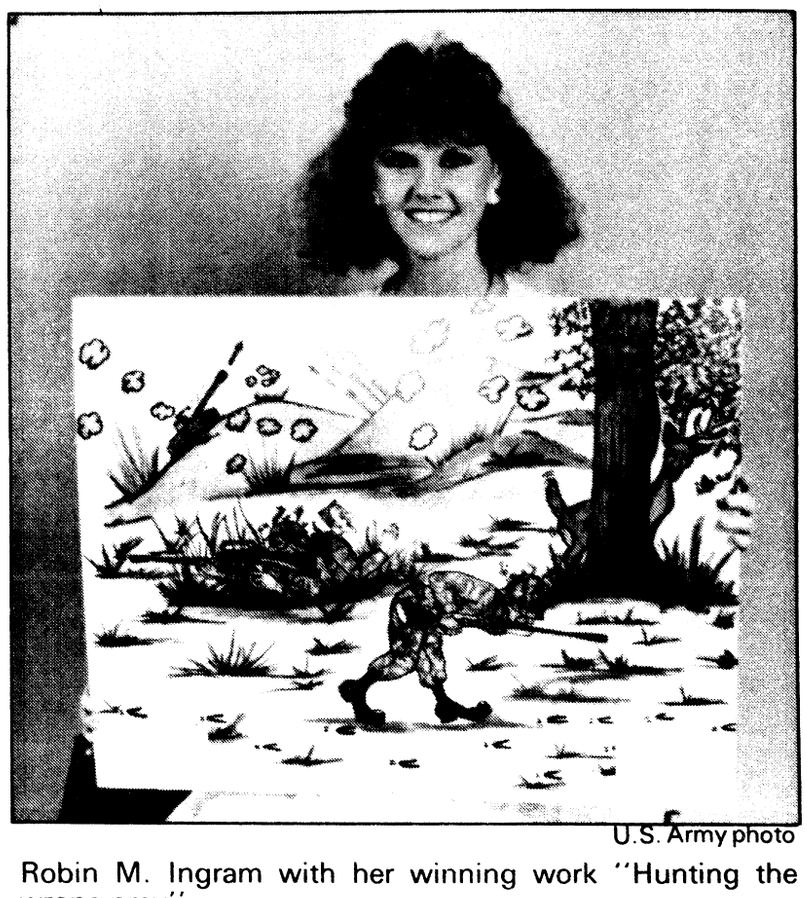
Persons born on or after Jan. 1, 1961, desiring to hunt in Georgia, or on the Fort Benning Reservation must complete a free,state hunting class. Classes will be conducted Aug. 10 and 11, in Bldg. 4, Classroom No. 3, from 7-10 p.m. Students must attend both classes.

Persons born before Jan. 1, 1961, will have to watch a safety tape at the time of

Benning artists win at All-Army

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The All-Army Art Contest judged recently at Fort Myer, Va., featured several Fort Benning artists, winning in four categories.



Magally E. Daminia won second place in the experienced-water base category with her acrylics painting, "Corredor Colonial."

In the novice-water base category, Capt. Ernest C. Audino placed second with "The Specter of Obssession."

Gail J. Keefover's "The Old Slave Quarters" won sixth place in the novice-oil paintings.

Robin M. Ingram used pen, pencil and ink in the creation of "Hunting the Wrong Prey," which took sixth place in the mixed media category.

Keefover also teaches painting at the Crafts Center. Those interested in getting ready for next year's All-Army competition should contact Keefover at the Arts and Crafts Center, Building 2783, located on the corner of Eckel Street and Sightseeing Road, or call 545-3677.

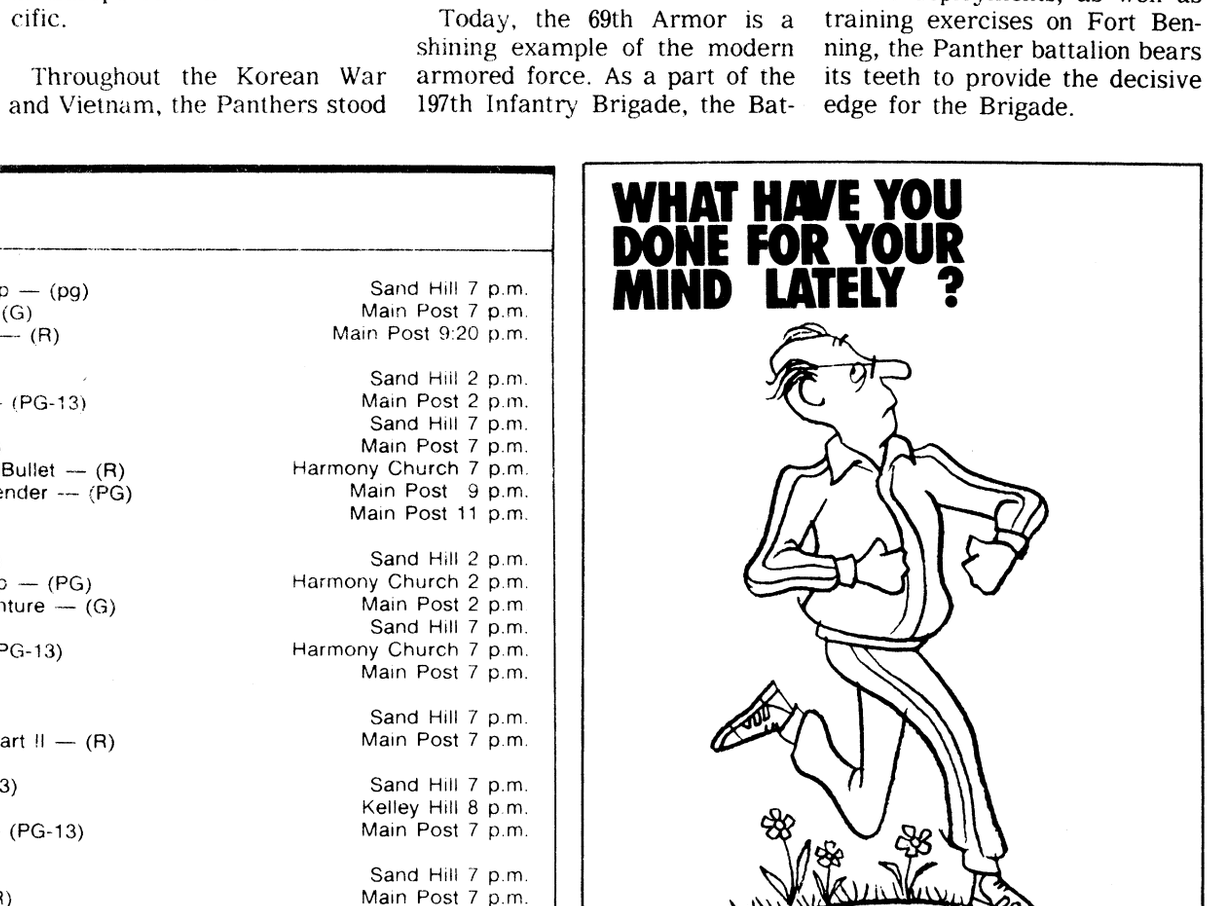
Speed, power portrayed by 69th Armor

By Sally Roberts
197th Infantry correspondent

EDITOR'S NOTE: In September, the 197th Infantry Brigade will mark the 25th anniversary of its activation into the Regular Army at Fort Benning. The following is the second in a series of stories illustrating the history and traditions of the units in the 197th.



The armored fighting force is a relative newcomer to the history of combat units. While the infantry has its roots buried deep, over centuries of battle, the armor force first appeared on the horizon during World War I. The Armor's roots branched out from the Cavalry regiments as tanks replaced horses as the vehicle of the cavalry.

The 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor is the striking force, supporting the 197th Infantry Brigade's mecahnized infantry battalions. The unit's motto, "Speed and Power," describes its combat capability, and the black panther portrayed on the unit crest is symbolic of the tremendous power and striking ability of the regiment.

The Battalion's history dates back to the formation of the 1st Armored Division in 1940, designated the 69th Armored Regiment. During the period that led up to the United State's entry into World War II, the 69th Armor was molded into the fighting force that eventually fought as a part of the 6th Armored Division in Europe and the Western Pacific.

Throughout the Korean War and Vietnam, the Panthers stood tall with the Infantry, sharpening skills as a combined arms team.

Today, the 69th Armor is a shining example of the modern armored force. As a part of the 197th Infantry Brigade, the Battalion boasts the only company of M-1 tanks on Fort Benning. When meeting the challenge of the 197th's deployments, as well as training exercises on Fort Benning, the Panther battalion bears its teeth to provide the decisive edge for the Brigade.

One of the Army's newest weapons, the M-1 tank, is a modern addition to the arsenal of the 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor.

Fort Benning units convert to regimental system

By Becky Obert
Bayonet staff writer

Three Fort Benning battalions join the Army's regimental system this week, with nine more battalions to do so this month.

Thursday the 5th Student Battalion (Officer Candidate School) became the 3rd Battalion (OCS), 11th Infantry Regiment. Immediately following the activation, Lt. Col. Joseph A. Cercone passed command of the battalion to Lt. Col. Ronald H. Harrison.

Today, the 1st Battalion will become the 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment at an activation ceremony on Gardner Field at 11 a.m. Brig. Gen. Walter Bickston, currently the chief of staff of the 6th Army, who commanded the 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry in Quang Tri Province, Vietnam, will be guest speaker.

At 4 p.m., the 2nd Training Battalion (Infantry Officer Basic Course) will become the 2nd Battaion, 11th Infantry Regiment at a ceremony on the field adjacent to Building 74, the battalion headquarters.

The Army has been redesignating all the active force battalions in the last three or four years, in order to bring the regimental system on line, said Capt. Paul Hurley, the S-3 of Headquarters, The School Brigade.

The philosophy behind the regimental system is to preserve the history of distinguished units and give soldirs a sense of continuity and increase espirit de corps, he said.

Although TSB staff did not get to select the regiment, Hurley said they did request that all three battalions be under the same one to lessen confusion.

Because regulations require that regimental responsibility rest with the battalion command of the lowest numbered CONUS battalion, Lt. Col. Dewey George, commander of the 1st Bn., will serve as the regiment commander for historical purposes, Hurley said.

"History is pretty important for soldiers," he said. "We identify with those who have gone before us, and it helps us learn by identifying with what a unit has done in the past."

"It gives you a better sense of what you're fighting for," he said.

'Wandering 11th' fought from Shiloh to Cam Lo

The School Brigade

The 11th Infantry Regiment has a long and distinguished history. It was formed July 16, 1798, and first saw action during the War of 1812. In 1861, the 11th Infantry was reactivated by President Abraham Lincoln, first as a part of the Army of Ohio and later as part of the Army of the Cumberland, taking part in such battles as Shiloh, the Kentucky Campaign, Chickamaugua, Murfreesboro, the march through Georgia and the Battle of Atlanta.

Following the Civil War, the regiment became known as the Wandering 11th. Between 1889 and 1920, the 1st Battalion made 29 changes of station, including seven years of foreign service.

In 1918, the regiment sailed for France and in May joined the 5th Division near Chaumont, France. The 11th then took part in the Bosges Mountains, St. Mihiel and Meuse-Argonne offensives.

In 1922, the 11th moved to Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind., and remained there 11 years.

In 1939, the 11th joined the 5th Divison at Fort McClellan, Ala., and by 1942 was on its way to Iceland for 15 months before moving to England. The regiment landed in Normandy on July 10, 1944, and fought its way across France as part of Gen. George Patton's famed 3rd Army.

On March 22, 1945, the 1st Battalion made a night river assault across the Rhine Rier at Oppenheim, giving Patton a division bridgehead over the Rhine two days ahead of Field Marshal Montgomery's famous crossing.

The regiment was retired after its return from the European theater, and was reactiveated in June 1954 in Germany.

In July 1968, the 11th deployed for action in Vietnam and operated in Cam Lo, Dong Ha, Quang Tri and Khe Sanh.

The regiment returned to Fort Carson in August 1971 and served there as part of the 4th Infantry Division until January 1984, when the regiment was inactivated.

Civilian employees tour post

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

This week Fort Benning played host to over 40 mid-level Department of Defense employees in a tour of the training conducted here.

This tour was designed to help civil service workers see were they fit into the overall picture in the Army.

This is the first time a tour of this type has been arranged anywhere in the Army.

According to Douglas R. Earich, Deputy Director of Civilian Personnel Management, The Office of the Secretary of Defense and a tour member, the employees came from all points in the United States.

"They were nominated by their components to participate in the tour," Earich said. "Fort Benning was chosen via recommendation of the Department of the Army."

"This type of program has been tried with the Navy and was very successful," he said. "It definitely helps them better understand why each job is important and how DOD money is being spent."

The first stop during the week long visit was the 1st of the 507th Parachute Infantry Regiment.

Cadre members demonstrated their Airborne Skills and let the civilians sample some of the training received before becoming a paratrooper.

They jumped from the 34-foot tower and rode the controled-descent tower better known as the buddy seat. A gamut of emotions could be seen on their faces as they descended from both towers but, after they experienced it, most exclaimed the desire to "do it again."

Officials move up testing to identify cocaine users

By Becky Obert
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning drug control officials hope to identify more illegal users of cocaine by having commanders schedule urinalysis tests on Mondays and Tuesdays.

According to Dr. Tom Tennent, the alcohol and drug control officer on post, cocaine moves through the system much faster than marijuana, and with moderate use, it remains at detectable levels for only two or three days.

Thus, drug officials hope to identify weekend users of the drug by testing early in the week, he said.

A study done by Tennent's office on cocaine urinalysis positives since January showed that 75 percent of positive specimens were collected on a Monday or Tuesday.

Department of the Army policy is to test every soldier twice a year, Tennent said, which is already being done at Benning. He said units preparing to deploy are also tested prior to deployment.

"It's important to note that the purpose of the Army's testing program is not just to identify drug users, it's to lower the usage rate in the Army," he said.

"In the four and one-half years since I've been doing this, marijuana use has decreaed from 17 percent to less than 5 percent," Tennent said.

Tennent's office has a fully staffed laboratory, where all specimens are pre-screened. Only those that test positive, or less than 5 percent, are sent away for further testing.

He said every phase of the collection and testing procedure is very controlled and there is no

Army chief of staff approves new NCO evaluation report

Army News Service

The Army chief of staff has approved the new Noncommissioned Officer Evaluation Report for implementation in January 1988.

"The new system was staffed with the major commands and received their votes of confidence," said Sgt. Maj. Clyne A. Goode of the Enlisted Policy Branch in MILPERCEN's Evaluation Systems Office.

"It's seen as an improvement over the current system because it provides a training focus, requires performance counseling and increases emphasis on values and specific noncommissioed officer responsibilities," he continued.

The new system consists of the Noncommissioned Officer Evaluation Report and the NCO Counseling Checklist. It includes:

- a new form design.
- new roles for the rating chain.

The rater will focus primarily on evaluation and performance, and will be responsible for performance counseling. The senior rater (new name for endorser) will focus primarily on evaluation of potential, and will be responsible for monitoring and for watching over the performance evaluation process. The reviewer will make comments only in case of disa-

New pay schedule begins at September end-of-month pay period

Army News Service

Beginning with the September end-of-the-month pay period, soldiers will be paid on the first day of the following month, rather than on the last day of the pay period month.

This change is mandated by Congress and will effect all active-duty service members.

The military services will be authorized to advance paydays up to three days when the first day of the month falls on a weekend or holiday, except for the month of September. Permitting payment on a preceding workday for the September pay period may be authorized only by the office of the secretary of defense.

The first 14 paydays under the new requirement are:

Pay Period — Pay Day
September — Oct. 1 Thursday
October — Oct. 30 Friday
November — Dec. 1 Tuesday
December — Dec. 31 Thursday

Paydays in 1988
January — Feb. 1 Monday
February — March 1 Tuesday
March — April 1 Friday
April — April 29 Friday
May — June 1 Wednesday
June — July 1 Friday
July — Aug. 1 Monday
August — Sept. 1 Thursday
September — Oct. 3 Monday
October — Nov. 1 Tuesday

Mid-month payments will not be affected. Taxable wages will continue to be based on the 12-pay periods covering the January through December paydays.

Army personnel officials say that the new schedule of dates will affect the delivery dates of allotment checks, causing some arrival dates to be a day or two later than arrival dates under the current system.

As a result of these changes, officials say soldiers should be especially careful in handling personal finances — for example, the funds for the September pay period will not be deposited into soldiers' accounts until Oct. 1. Any checks written ahead of that date, in anticipation of funds being deposited by Sept. 30 could bounce, causing problems for soldiers in their personal finances.

Officials at the U.S. Army Finance and Accounting Center in Indianapolis have contacted members of the banking and insurance industry, requesting assistance and cooperation with soldiers in adjusting the due dates of financial contracts already in place.

Officials caution, however, that soldiers need to make a careful review of their financial obligations to insure their payments arrive on the dates scheduled.

OPINION

Leuer welcomes the 11th to 'Home of the Infantry'

As commanding general of Fort Benning and as chief of Infantry, I take great pride and pleasure in welcoming three battalions of the 11th Infantry Regiment back to the active Army rolls. Effective Aug. 14, three battalions of The School Brigade will be redesignated. They are the 1st Battalion to 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry; 2nd Training Battalion to 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry; and 5th Student Battalion (OCS) to 3rd Battalion (OCS), 11th Infantry. The proud history and tradition of the 11th Infantry begins a new chapter here at Fort Benning.

Congratulations to all past and current members of the Regiment.

Kenneth C. Leuer

Our European strategy rests on ability to fight conventional war

Association of the United States Army

Improving Our Conventional Military Capability — A National Imperative

Since the end of World War II, our stated military strategy has highlighted the need for a conventional and a nuclear deterrent against the Soviet threat. We have been constant in our view of the security requirements, with the defense of NATO and Western Europe falling just behind the defense of the United States.

Europe is where we and our NATO allies face the Soviets and the Warsaw Pact across a common border and where the potential for a nuclear conflict seems to be the highest.

In an effort to move away from the nuclear response and its associated devastation, NATO, in 1967, developed the current flexible response strategy — a strategy which combines forward conventional defense with the threat of offensive nuclear weapons, escalating to all-out strategic nuclear war if necessary. Implicit in this strategy is an adequate and credible conventional combat capability — otherwise, the word flexible loses its meaning and leaves us no choice but to resort to the early use of nuclear weapons.

Faced with a dramatic decline in military budgets, it is now necessary for both defense planners and Congress to re-evaluate the priorities and requirements for our defense budget into the 1990s. Two of the basic questions are: how much do we really need for nuclear deterrence and are we ignoring the conventional needs?

Unbalanced solutions to these problems will further erode our conventional warfighting effort. Until we have buttressed our conventional capability, the huge expenditures for more Trident II missiles, stealth bombers, supercarriers and Star Wars need to be more carefully allotted. We simply cannot afford to bet all our ships on an uncertain future.

Soldiers must not forget our history

By Tom Fix
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Forty-two years ago this week, World War II came to a close. But how many of us remember the date.

Several weeks ago we ran a short reminder that July 27 was the 34th anniversary of the Korean Conflict Armistice — the official end to the war between North and South Korea

I didn't give much thought to it then, but I wonder now how many Americans remembered that, or, for that matter, knew when the conflict started. Not that it would matter very much or change the world any, but I wonder how many of us remember the dates of past significant military events.

Some events have a way of sticking in the mind. For instance, the start of the war with Japan is etched forever into the American psyche: Dec. 7, 1941. But how many of us can remember when that struggle ended.

The war started on Dec. 8, 1941, when President Roosevelt asked Congress to declare war on Japan for its attack on Pearl Harbor. Three days later, Hitler would declare war on the United States — thus involving America in the largest and most devasting undertaking conducted by modern man.

Three years, eight months and one week later, the war would end but not until nearly 15 million Americans had been mobilized, of which 292,000 lost their lives and more than 570,000 were wounded.

Countless service men and women are still living who vividly recall the day in April when the fighting halted on the battlefields of Europe. Others can recall the day when the fighting stopped in the Pacific. These people were part of it all, and it is little wonder why they would be able to recall the day when the biggest war in history ended.

But how many of us who were not involved or had not even been born know when it all came to a halt?

School children born nearly four decades after the attack on Pearl Harbor know what day is the "date which will live in infamy." But how many of us who are old enough to drive a car know when the world returned to peace after a four-year nightmare?

I decided to see for myself who on Fort Benning knew the anniversary of Japan's acceptance of surrender terms — the end of the war with Japan, the end of World War II.

There was no doubt in my mind that if I asked what anniversary was celebrated on Dec. 7, I'd get the right answer. But what if I asked what anniversary is celebrated on Aug. 14?

No problem here, I thought.

In a quick, informal and unscientific sampling of soldiers taken one afternoon, I learned otherwise.

Casually, I approached a soldier with my question ready.

"Tell me what anniversary is celebrated on Aug. 14," I said.

A puzzled look told me I was getting nowhere.

"Let me give you some help," I added. "The year was 1945.

"Oh, that's when the U.S. declared war on China... or Japan," he quickly replied.

The next questionees were two officers I caught walking out of Building 4.

"Oh, that's the birthday of the Infantry," quipped the first officer, very confident of his reply.

"No, no, that's the Bicentennial of the Constitution," said his buddy.

I thanked them for their time and went to my car, a little puzzled why certain dates are remembered by everyone while other dates are lost to all but the trivia buffs.

But it was no small event that occurred in the 46 months of this country's involvement in WW II.

Fort Benning's contribution was likewise no small event. In the nearly four years of war, this post trained more than 600,000 troops in courses ranging from basic training to OCS to jump school to the officer advanced course and other various specialty schools. The post wartime population varied from 45,000 to as high as 100,000.

In the war years, OCS produced more than 65,000 infantry 2nd lieutenents in 90-day iterations while roughly 100,000 paratroopers graduated from The Parachute School.

By comparison, in today's peacetime environment, OCS has produced slightly more than 4,000 branch-immaterial 2nd lieutenants in a rigorous 14-week course during the past four years while the Airborne School has graduated roughly 80,000 paratroopers.

The Infantry Center has produced about 120,000 infantrymen in these past four years as IOBC and IOAC, combined, have graduated roughly 15,000 officers.

While Fort Benning continues to provide America's infantrymen, paratroopers and rangers, time continues to erode the memory of World War II — it has become distant history. Numbers, dates and events have been lost in the years.

But the importance and value of what earlier American soldiers accomplished need not be forgotten — unless we ourselves let it.

It will take a conscious effort on our part to remember our past. It may take an article in a newspaper or magazine, or a segment on the evening news, to remind us of events that shape our present lives.

Or, it might even take someone walking up to us on the street and asking, "Do you know what anniversary is celebrated today?"

Editor's note: The official surrender of Japan took place aboard the Battleship Missouri in Tokyo Bay on Sept. 2 — called "Victory over Japan" day, or more commonly, "V-J" Day. (Fix is the installation command information officer.)

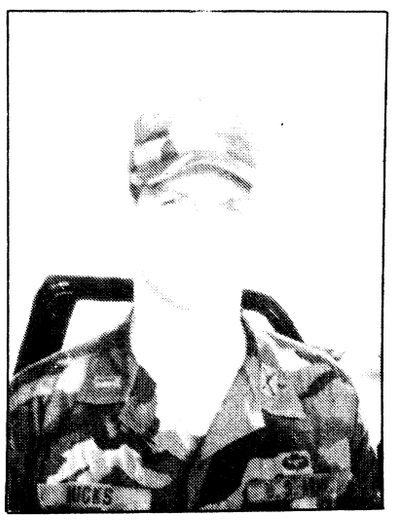
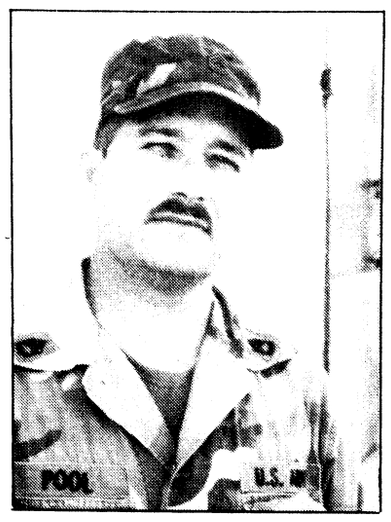
The Bayonet invites readers to write letters to the Editor expressing their opinions on subjects of interest to the military community.

All letters must be typed, double-spaced and signed by the writer, including home or unit address and a telephone number. We will withhold a writer's name upon request, but please include it on your submission to us in case we need to contact you.

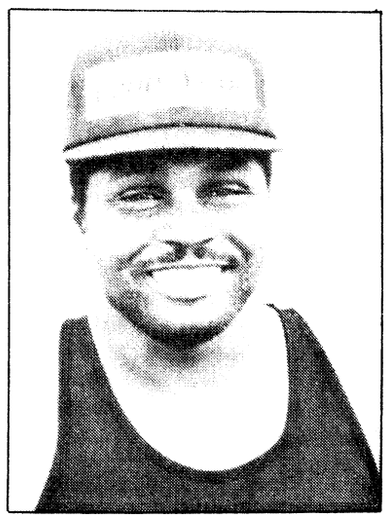


Letters are subject to standard editing and condensing depending on space available. Letters in which the writer requests that no changes be made will not be run.

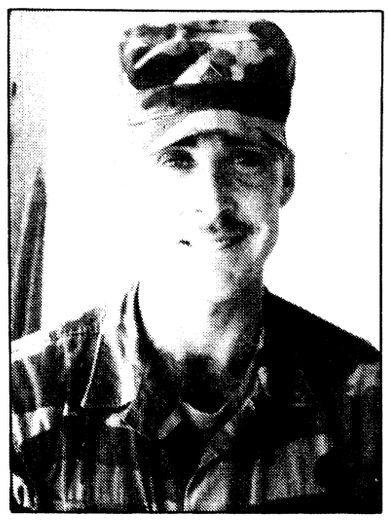
Letters can be dropped off at The Bayonet office in Room 601, Building 4, or mailed to The Bayonet, Room 601, Building 4, Fort Benning Ga., 31905.



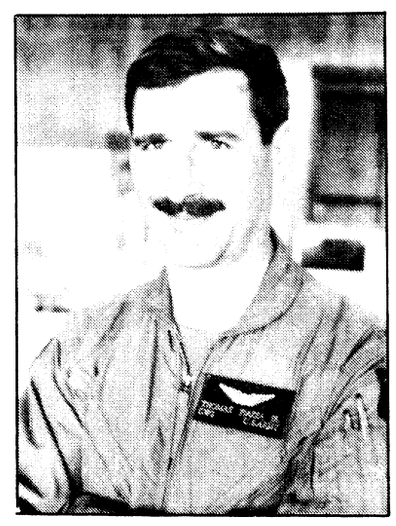
"Wowie! You've got enough there to feed an army!"



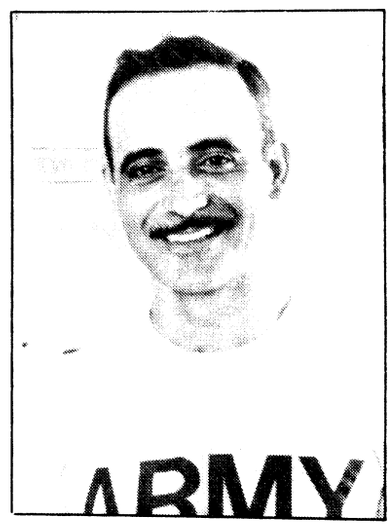
VARIOUS VOICES / How will the reduction of the officers corp affect the Army?



2nd Lt. Mark Hicks, 25th Company, 2nd Battalion, The School Brigade — "I don't think it is good for the Army. According to what they are projecting, I think it would be better if they just reduced their commissioning sources and not take officers off of active duty. I do think the projected three percent that are being released from active duty should be those deemed not fit for duty."



SFC James Pool, Company E, 3rd Battalion, 1/60th Infantry, Burbank, Calif. — "I don't think it will be good for the Army or the officers corps. I think the reduction will end up making an unevenly distributed workload for other people; as it is right now, there are not enough officers to fill platoon leaders positions and NCOs are having to do two jobs."



SFC Willie Robinson, 598th Maintenance Company, 67th Maintanance Battalion, 36th Engineer Group — "I think the reduction will ultimately affect the leadership in the Army. The way I view it, officers are highly trained individuals. Most officers have been highly educated in their field and they bring that knowledge with them. This is especially helpful in the smaller isolated units. We need the officers."

PFC John Thompson, Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 507th Parachute Infantry Regiment — "I think it will help the Army recruit new officer material. But this is not just benefiting recruits by retiring older officers, they will be able to recruit within. Right now there is a slew of officers just stagnating and this will definitely help them.'

CW02 Thomas Piazza Jr., Company C, 226th Attack Helicopter Battalion, Fort Rucker, Ala. — "I think the reduction will probably be good for the Army. In my field there are a lot of officers who end up being assistants to assistants because there are too many officers."

SSgt. Tony Formosa, 1st Battalion (ANCOC), The School Brigade — "I think overall the reduction will hurt the Army. It will have a definite impact on leadership, especially at platoon level. I think it will affect the overall mission."

Holiday early-out schedule announced

Army News Service

WASHINGTON — The holiday season may be several months away, but early release dates are set for officers and enlisted soldiers with expiration-of-service-agreement/expiration-of-term-of-service dates between Dec. 2, and Jan. 3, 1988. Here are the current ESA/ETS dates and early-release times:

CURRENT ESA/ETS	EARLY-RELEASE DATE
Dec. 2 and 3	Dec. 1
Dec. 4	Dec. 2
Dec. 5	Dec. 3
Dec. 6 and 7	Dec. 4
Dec. 8-11	Dec. 7
Dec. 12-14	Dec. 8
Dec. 15-17	Dec. 9
Dec. 18-20	Dec. 10
Dec. 21-23	Dec. 11
Dec. 24 and 25	Dec. 14
Dec. 26	Dec. 15
Dec. 27 and 28	Dec. 16
Dec. 29 and 30	Dec. 17
Dec. 31-Jan. 2, 1988	Dec. 18

A one-day leeway of the target date is authorized as an exception. Army personnel officials say the schedule provides for an orderly and equitable early transitioning from active duty.

Officers eligible for early release under the annual program may be retained on active duty by their command until their normal release date, when operational needs so dictate.

The following soldiers are ineligible for early release:

- Reserve-component members undergoing annual training under special training programs or fixed tours of active duty in support of the reserve components.
- Officers who have DA-approved release from active duty or resignation dates.
- Officers being involuntarily relieved from active duty on a specified date, as directed by Department of the Army (other than for early release).
- Soldiers scheduled for retirement.
- Soldiers under suspension of favorable personnel actions in accordance with AR 600-31.
- Soldiers whose normal ESA/ETS does not fall between Dec. 2 and Jan. 3, 1988.

Soldiers with absent-without-leave time who have an adjusted ETS that falls within the program dates are eligible.

Transition leave may be used in conjunction with this program if the commander approves. Transition leave may not be used to place a soldier in the program.

Holiday early releases are entirely voluntary, officials say. Soldiers who do not volunteer for early release may be required to sign a statement to that effect.

Commanders have the option to retain soldiers to original ETS or to release them early when the soldier changes his mind concerning early release from active duty.

Plan ahead to use leave by January

Army News Service

WASHINGTON — If you're a soldier facing a "use or lose" leave situation, you have only a few weeks left to make plans for any leave accumulated beyond the normal carry-over limit of 60 days per fiscal year.

About 20,000 enlisted soldiers and 19,000 officers and warrant officers lost an average of seven days of leave at the end of fiscal year 1986.

Army personnel officials say soldiers should plan to use their earned leave throughout the year instead of waiting until September and taking all 30 days at once.

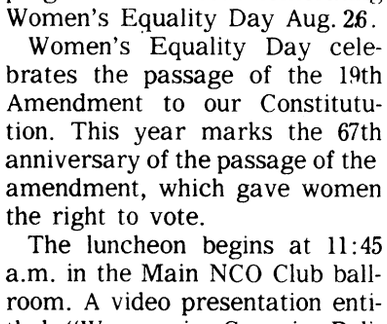
Many soldiers lose leave because of unexpected events,such as hospitalization or training exercises at the end of the year. However, soldiers should note that special leave accrual is permitted, but only under limited circumstances. These range from their being besieged by hostile fire to their being included in certain deployment situations.

Army Regulation 630-5 contains further details on soldiers' leave-policy.

Equality day marks amendment giving women the vote

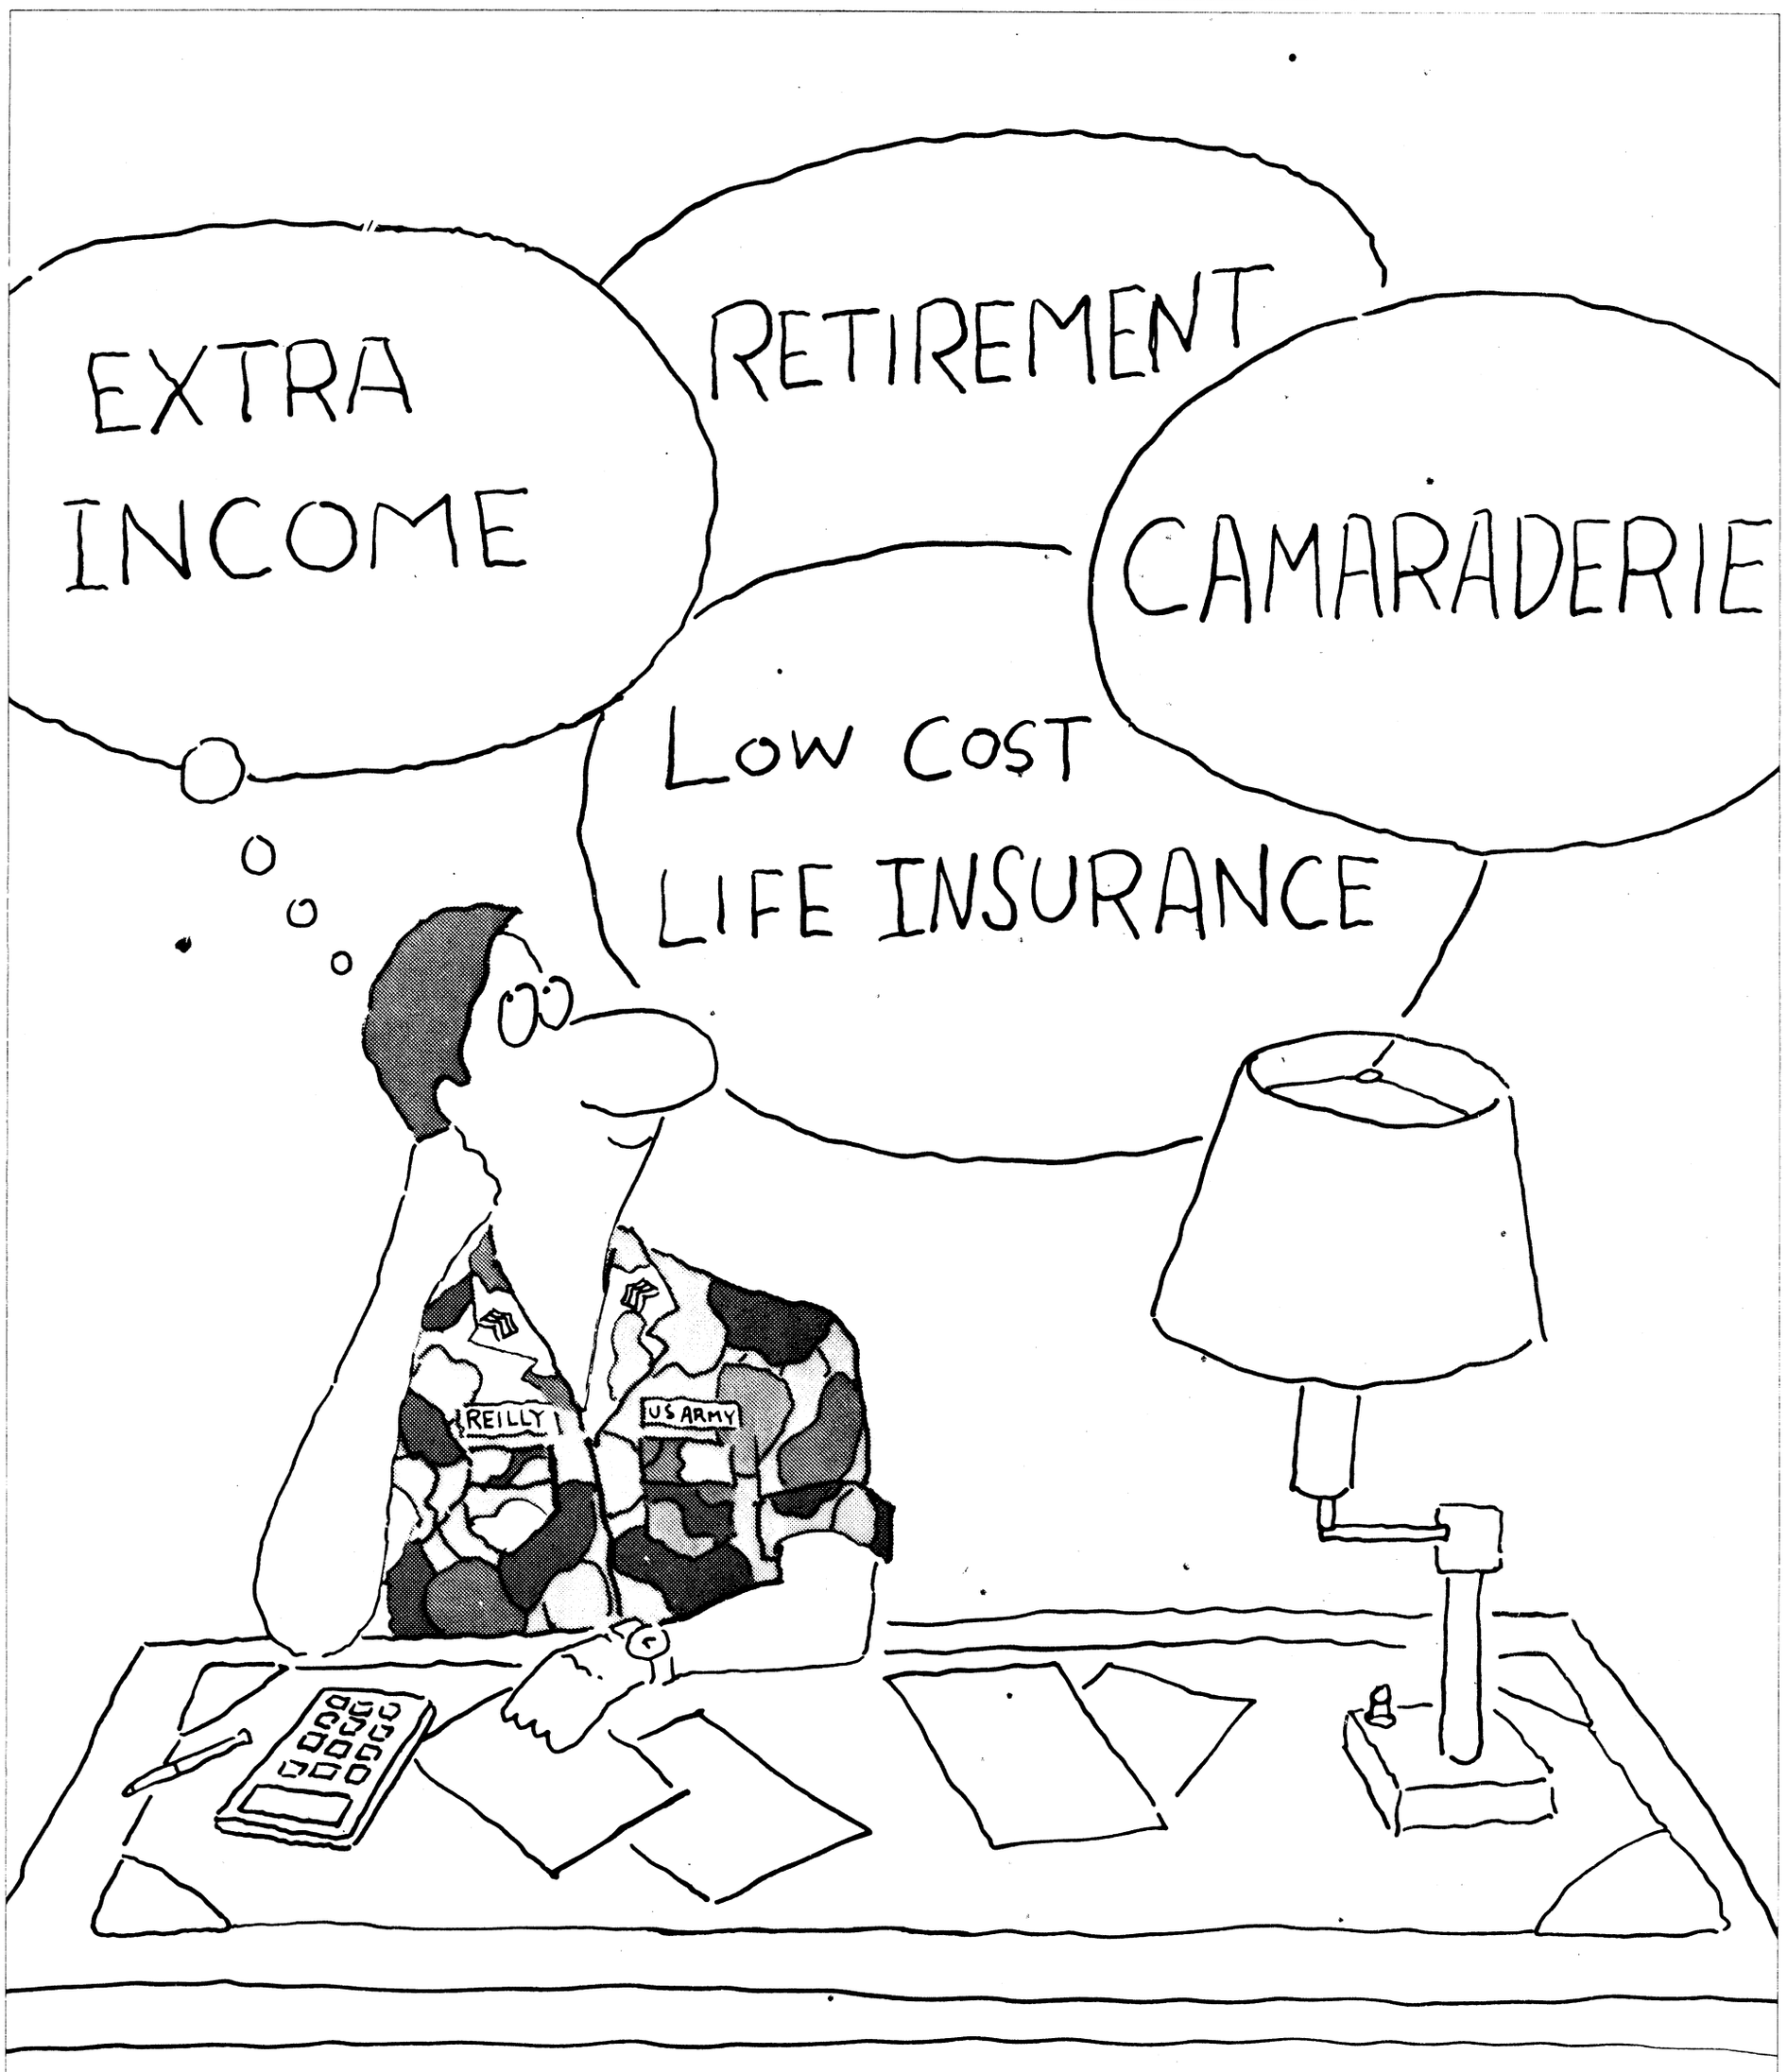
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Federal Women's Program is sponsoring a luncheon program commemorating Women's Equality Day Aug. 26.



Women's Equality Day celebrates the passage of the 19th Amendment to our Constitution. This year marks the 67th anniversary of the passage of the amendment, which gave women the right to vote.

The luncheon begins at 11:45 a.m. in the Main NCO Club ballroom. A video presentation entitled "Women in Georgia Politics" will be shown at the luncheon. The film highlights women from Columbus, Ga., who worked during the early days of the sufferage movement to initiate the first Georgia Women's Political Conference in Atlanta.



The video provides information on how the presence of women in Georgia's political structure has made a difference in creating an equal opportunity environment from past to present in the state of Georgia.

GETTING OUT? YOUR ARMY BENEFITS CAN BE MORE THAN MEMORIES.

It's probably hard to say what you'll miss most about the Army if you've decided to return to civilian life. For some, it's the camaraderie. Others miss the travel and excitement. Still more miss those money-saving Army benefits.

Joining the Army Reserve can help you retain many things you like about the Army. Most important, it will help you keep some of those great benefits. Like your PX and commissary privileges. Space-available air travel. And low-cost life insurance.

The extra income you'll earn will come in handy, too. Right now, an E-5 with four years active duty earns over $125 for a single Reserve weekend. Add two weeks annual training pay, and you've got over $2,000 a year. Plus, you'll continue to qualify for retirement pay.

36th Engineers

By Shawn Bryson
36th Engr. Gp. correspondent

Soldiers from the 533rd Transportation Company, 67th Maintenance Battalion, 36th Engineer Group, can stand tall since the company recently was chosen best overall transportatin unit in Forces Command.

Maj. Gen. Kenneth Leuer, post commander, presented the soldiers a trophy from the National Defense Transportation Association Aug. 6.

According to 2nd Lt. Marcia G. Danzeisen, 3rd Platoon leader for the company, the NDTA is a civilian organization that holds a competition between armed forces transportation units every year. Each unit that enters competes in its respective component.

Danzeisen said that members of the 533rd staff put togethr a narrative including all of the subjects graded by the NDTA.

"The 533rd had the best statistics of all transportation units in FORSCOM," Danzeisen said. "We were judged in areas such as maintenance, supply, safety, readiness, training and community service."

The 533rd had an outstanding safety record, she said. "Last year, our soldiers drove more than 900,000 miles with only one accident."

Danzeisen said that another major factor in winning the award was the fact that the 533rd had won so many other awards such as supply and maintenance excellence awards.

Soldiers of the 533rd are preparing now to convoy to the National Training Center at Fort Irwin, Calif.

USARSA

By Marco Morales
USARSA Public Affairs Office

The U.S. Army School of the Americas has a new deputy commandant.

Col. Ulises Fumiato arrived from Argentina June 15 to assume USARSA's second-highest position. Chosen by a selection process which ran through the U.S. State Department and the Argentine embassy in Washington, D.C., Fumiato spoke of his new job. "It gives me great pride and satisfaction to have been selected to serve in this very important position," Fumiato said.

Fumiato

The former deputy commandant, Col. Frank N. Leon of Venezuela departed USARSA last March to assume another position in his country.

Impressed with life in the U.S. and having travelled here before, Fumiato says it's interesting to be back in "North America." "You just get used to living in the southern hemisphere with different star formations to gaze at in the nighttime Argentine sky," he said, while speaking about how, in his army, soldiers still use the star system for land navigation training — weather permitting.

Fumiato says the Argentine Army still uses equestrian assets to conduct maneuvers in hard-to-reach areas. "We are very much like the Arabs in that we still use horses and mules in the cavalry and infantry, especially in mountainous terrain," Fumiato said.

Fumiato is a 28-year Army veteran. His branch is the cavalry. "We have two regiments which employ 700 horses. One regiment is for ceremonial

Doctor shortage should ease up by September

Martin Army Community Hospital

Due to a shortage of specialized doctors Army-wide, many hospitals are experiencing difficulty in providing medical care to all eligible beneficiaries at all times.

At Martin Army Community Hospital (MACH), orthopedic care has been severely strained during the past few months. Several orthopedic physicians have departed due to normal summer turnover and their replacements have not arrived yet.

Another doctor has been placed on orders to support an overseas commitment. As a result, MACH is currently depending upon one full-time and one part-time orthopedic surgeon to support the entire Fort Benning community.

However, the period of the severest personnel shortage in this specialty is expected to be short-lived. Two additional orthopedic surgeons are scheduled to report for duty during August and a third will arrive in early September.

The doctor, currently on extended TDY, will return from the overseas commitment in January 1988. As resources increase, so will Martin's ability to provide services. This will result in the increased availability of appointments in the Orthopedic Clinic and a reduction in the waiting time for an appointment.

As has always been the case, all eligible beneficiaries with urgent problems can be seen in the MACH Emergency Room, which is open 24 hours a day.

The patient will recieve initial evaluation and treatment in the Emergency Room and then be referred to a specialist for follow-up care, if required.

If the required speciality care is not available at MACH, non-active duty patients may be referred to a civilian specialist under the CHAMUS program.

events and the other is tactical," said Fumiato.

In Argentina, a regiment is about the size of a U.S. Army battalion, according to Fumiato. "A division in the U.S. Army is equal to an army in Argentina, just to give you an idea of how our armies compare in size," he said.

"I am very interested in learning about U.S. Army doctrine because it represents an important contribution that will expand my professional capabilities," Fumiato said, adding that, "Based on my observations, the U.S. Army is as professional and as highly-motivated as when I first saw U.S. soldiers in 1976."

Fumiato has served with various tactical units in Argentina during his military career. More recently, in the past two years, he has served as an instructor at the War College in Buenos Aires, Argentina. Fumiato holds a degree in engineering from Litoral University in Santa Fe, Argentina.

The position of deputy commandant at USARSA is filled on a two-year rotational basis by a colonel selected from Latin America. Since the position was started in 1977, USARSA has had deputy commandants from Colombia, Peru, Ecuador, Honduras, Brazil, Panama and Venezuela. Of these seven, three have since been promoted to the rank of general in their respective countries.

Col. Fumiato and his wife, Deleris, have four children. They are Silvina, 20, Juan, 17, Jorge, 14, and Maria, 13.

197th Infantry

By Kevin J. Howerton
197th Infantry Brigade Correspondent

EDITOR'S NOTE: In September, the 197th Infantry Brigade will mark the 25th anniversary of its activation into the Regular Army at Fort Benning. The folllowing is the third in a series of stories illustrating the history and traditions of the units of the 197th.

From the days of horsedrawn cannons to the modern 155mm self-propelled howitzers, the 2nd Battalion, 10th Field Artillery has proved itself an indispensable element in battle.

Originally formed in 1917 from elements of the 6th Horsedrawn Artillery Regiment, the 10th Artillery first saw combat in World War I. Attached to the 38th Infantry, 3rd Division, the unit helped repel the great German "Peace Offensive" during July 1918.

Following the last battle of the German offensive, named the "Second Battle of the Marne," the 3rd Division acquired it's motto, "Rock of the Marne." The 10th Artillery was, in turn, nicknamed "Rock's Support," which still stands today as the unit's motto.

By the end of World War I, the unit had five campaign streamers and the French Croix de Guerre (Cross of War) with Gilt Star.

During World War II, the 10th Artillery again provided support for the 3rd Infantry Division. Together, they fought against Rommel's Africa Korps.

After the successful invasion of Sicily, the 10th Artillery provided the overwhelming firepower necessary for the 3rd Division to break out of the Anzio beachhead, and surge forward to capture Rome.

The 3rd Division then invaded southern France and forced the Germans back to the Rhine, where they made a stand near the town of Colmar. The 10th Artillery fired more than 5,000 rounds per day at the German troops, forcing them to surrender. For this action, they received three unit citations.

During the Korean War, the 10th again joined the 3rd Division as well as several allied units. They earned the Chryssoun Aristion Andrais (Bravery Gold Medal of Greece) for assistance given a Greek detachment.

After the Korean War, the 10th Field Artillery returned to Fort Benning with the 3rd Infantry Division. When the Division was later transferred to Germany, the 10th was split into three Battalions, of which the second remained here to support the Infantry Center.

Today, the 2nd Battalion, 10th Field Artillery, uses it's 155mm howitzers to give the 197th's "Combined Arms Team" the massive, indirect firepower they need.

36th Engineers

By Shawn Bryson
36th Engineer Group

Soldiers from Company C, 43rd Engineer Battalion, 36th Engineer Group, recently took part in a short but "hardcore" field training exercise on post.

According to Staff Sgt. Anibal Barros, Earthmoving Platoon Sergeant, the company left the rear early Aug. 4, and all of its equipment and vehicles were transported across the Chattahoochee River with the help of the 586th Engineer Co., 43rd Engineer Battalion.

Barros said, "The 586th was already on an FTX when we departed. They used a six-float ribbon-bridge raft to carry us across." Barros said that the crossings went like clockwork even when they loaded a 60-foot 920 tractor-trailer loaded with a D-7 bulldozer onto the 66-foot raft. "It was a tight fit, but it made the crossing without any problems," according to Staff Sgt. Junior L. Purdy Jr., a first platoon squad leader.

Upon arrival at the FTX site, the Charlie soldiers battled the "Category Four" heat as they set up and camouflaged all the equipment and vehicles. Barros said the soldiers were strongly encouraged to drink water every chance they had and none of the soldiers suffered heat injuries.

"The soldiers were also given massive quantities of common - tasks training the second day, including MOPP - level - four nuclear, biological, chemical training in the early morning," Barros said. "That night our soldiers from the Maintenance Platoon laid a three-strand constentina wire fence. First and second platoon soldiers laid a mine field, took down the fence and did a recon of the river," Barros said. He added that the earth-moving platoon did a bridge recon and filled in a tank ditch, which had been dug earlier in the day, in blackout conditions.

"This was a really good FTX because everything was done to Army Readiness Training Evaluation Test standards," Barros commented.

He also explained that the company has had a 30-percent turnover in the last three months, which made the FTX especially good training for younger, less experienced soldiers.

The company ended the FTX Aug. 6, according to Barros. "The reason it was only a three-day FTX was because we have soldiers in Honduras and some preparing for a trip to the National Training Center in Fort Irwin, Calif.

greements with the rater or senior rater, and will be responsible for rating safeguard overwatch.

- Structured duty description narrative. It will be divided into three parts (daily duties and scope, areas of special emphasis, appointed duties). Counseling dates concerning duties must be marked on the form.
- Use of values and NCO requirements and responsibilities as the sole focus for evaluation of performance.
- Requirements for specific justification of each "excellent" and "needs improvement" rating.
- Elimination of numbers and emphasis of use of "success" rating as the performance norm.
- Use of bullet comments. Rigid narrative rules will emphasize results and excellence; highlight significant performance; make it easier for selection boards to review them by using only needed words; and minimize impact of a rater's writing ability on a rating.
- Elimination of total score for overall performance and potential.

Update on New NCO Evaluation Report:

- Mandatory counseling. "Face-to-face performance counseling is mandatory for all NCOs, corporal through command sergeant major. The rater must conduct initial counseling within the first 30 days of each rating period and at least every quarter after that. Counseling dates must be recorded on the form," Goode explained.
- Counseling checklist/record. The NCO counseling checklist must be used in counseling all corporals through sergeants first class.

The education process on the new NCO-ER system will include a series of news releases and messages. MILPERCEN is preparing training packets for Training and Doctrine Command schools and field use.

"The Army will close out the current Enlisted Evaluation Reporting System to ensure a standardized and equitable transition from the current report to the new Noncommissioned Officer Evaluation Report," Goode said. "Most NCOs will get final reports under the old system."

MILPERCEN will provide more details on implementation of the new Noncommissioned Officer Evaluation Report as they become available.

margin for error. "In one case, a soldier's specimen was collected improperly, and when it tested positive and he complained, the test was thrown out," he said.

The Army's contract laboratory tests a specimen several times, and if there is any doubt about a test result, it is deemed a negative specimen, Tennent said. For this reason, "there's really no such thing as a false positive on a urinalysis, because if there's any doubt about it, it's considered a negative test result," he said.

Cocaine use is dangerous for several reasons. It is a highly addictive drug and can cause heart problems in some users. Tennent said there is no way to identify a person who is at risk, so it should be considered a potential health danger to everyone.

The drug gives users a strong feeling of euphoria. "They think their life is going great and at the same time, it's really heading downhill fast," he said.

When the drug's effects wear off, users are left feeling depressed and crave more of the drug to restore the good feeling.

Cocaine may be snorted or injected, and some users also smoke a purified version of the drug calld "crack." In all forms, it is an expensive drug, and many habitual users find themselves turning to crime to support the habit.

It is only since 1982 that experts have recognized the physically addictive aspects of cocaine, Tennent said. While there is no way to identify people who could become easily addicted, there are several common traits. These include depression, mood swings and low self esteem.

Commanders are responsible for seeing that their soldiers are being tested on a regular basis, he said. For more information, call Bernard Cavanaugh at 545-1138.

Survey seeks opinions on dental needs

U.S. Army Health Services Command

FORT SAM HOUSTON, Texas — Randomly selected spouses of Army personnel assigned to Fort Benning will be asked to participate in a dental treatment needs study directed by the Office of the Surgeon General. The study, which began in mid-July and runs through December, will be conducted at 12 Army installations nationwide.

The purpose of the study is to gather data on the dental treatment needs of Army family members and on their attitudes toward the Uniformed Services Dependents Dental Insurance Plan. The study will be able to provide information on the treatment needs of family members joining or not joining the insurance plan. This will help Army and Department of Defense health policy makers plan for the dental health needs of military family members.

Participants in the study will receive a thorough dental examination to check for tooth decay, gum disease and orthodontic needs. No x-rays will be taken for the study. A complete exam, including a short questionnaire, should take only 20-30 minutes. Any dental problems found on examination will be brought to the attention of participants. The results of this check-up will be strictly confidential.

Dr. (Capt.) Mary Jo Corbett will be the project officer and examining dentist for the study at Fort Benning. Spouses who receive letters asking for their participation in the study are encouraged to call Sgt. Byron Chain at 544-1703/1746 to make an appointment for a study examination.

Regulation outlines when to wear I.D. tags

Army News Service

Many recent deaths in the U.S. Army have required the use of military identification tags (Dog Tags) to support the positive ID process.

AR 640-3, para 5-18 (ID Cards, Tags and Badges) specifically states: "Personnel will wear their tags at all times when in the field, when engaging in field training, when traveling in aircraft and when outside the 50 United States."

Seminar attendees seek to improve quality of life

By Sally Roberts
197th Infantry Brigade Correspondent

Anyone who actively participates in the Fort Benning community, whether he or she be active-duty, retired, civil service or a family member, could probably come up with a long list of suggestions on how to improve the quality of life for the Army family.

Recently, several members of the Fort Benning community met at the annual Army Family Action Plan seminar, with a mission of identifying those issues that concern the members of our community.

"The Army Family Action Plan is a commitment by the leadership of the Army that family issues will matter and will be considered in the decision-making process," said Col. Michael Plummer, commander of the 2nd Brigade, 10th Mountain Division, who opened the seminar with background information on the plan's history. Col. Plummer participated in the development of the 1983 white paper "The Army Family," which resulted in much of the recent progress made for the Army family.

This is the second year that the seminar has been held in Fort Benning, gathering representatives from all sectors of the community here, who share their concerns about the Army Family.

Several of the issues from last year's seminar were used in the TRADOC Army Family Action '87, (TRADOC PAM 608-5) which included a need for an improved medical appointment system, improved services for acute minor illness and improved obstetric services.

According to Hattie Bridges-Link, the Fort Benning Family Action Plan coordinator, those issues requiring a decision from a higher level will be forwarded to the Training and Doctrine Command for consideration and then forwarded to the Department of the Army for consideration at the DA seminar in November.

This seminar, and similar ones at other Army posts, contribute ideas and suggestions outlined in the Army Family Action Plan (DA Pamphlet 608-41). This year's plan, consisting of nearly 80 issues, is grouped into four major themes: Relocation, Family Support and Role Identity.

While issues in the Army-wide plan are those that affect the Army family as a group, many of the results of the Fort Benning seminar are localized to issues that specifically affect Fort Benning.

Mrs. Link added, "The results of this year's seminar should be available by the end of October, through the Family Support Division of the Directorate of Personnel and Community Activities

Office releases eligibility dates

Post Housing Office

Whenever a soldier applies for military family housing, he/she is given an eligibility date. This date is not necessarily the date of application. each waiting list is maintained and housing is assigned in accordance with the "eligibility date." If, when called for quarters, a soldier is unable to move because of a lease, TDY, sickness, etc., he/she will be passed over until they are available for quarters, but they will maintain their original "eligibility date."

As of Aug. 11 the eligibility date of the last person to be assigned quarters in each category is as follows:

"Crime stoppers take a bite out of crime," says McGruff the Crime Dog.

Most people who watch television have probably seen that commercial at least once.

Crime Stoppers is an non-profit organization that gives cash rewards to people who give information to the police department that leads to an arrest or conviction of a suspect.

According to Cadet John Smith, a Crime Stoppers representative, all a person has to do is call 571-5858 and give the officer on duty the information.

"If the information given is complete enough, we forward it to the detective section to investigate." Smith said. "A reward is given based upon how helpful the information given was."

You can also call Crime Stoppers to make a donation at 571-5858. Your gift will help in the fight against crime.

Feast of Assumption honors the mother of Jesus

By George Gonzalez
USARSA chaplain

Almost every child has known the joy of having his or her mother promise to bake him or her a chocolate cake. The child may well watch her as she mysteriously combines flour, sugar, butter, chocolate and other delicious ingredients. The child moves in close as she whips up the batter. Then his or her mother says not to touch the batter. Wait for the cake. Don't take what might make you sick. And just as inevitably, practically every child will eat some batter, and some may get sick. The batter is not bad in itself, but the cake is better.

The story of Adam and Eve revolves around much of the same truth. None of the fruit in the Garden was bad, but some of it was in an imperfect state like the cake batter. It had not yet reached its final purpose. Adam and Eve engaged in an act that ignored final purpose as have all people, save Jesus and Mary. Thus, sin pervades the world. People are at cross purposes with God. Just as a child thinks him or herself wiser than his or her mother, so mankind believes itself wiser than God.

The result is an eviction proceeding in which love is driven from the heart. The first stage is to ignore God and exile His love from our souls. The next moment, we ignore people and drive love from our awareness. The daily paper reports the public sins of nations and persons: terrorists in Belfast and Tel Aviv, thieves in the government, kidnappings, murders, rapes, child abuse and battered wives. Who would deny that love has been driven from the heart and replaced by sin?

Jesus has redeemed us from slavery to sin. We can and should pray to Him for forgiveness and delivery. We can also pray to Mary to help us approach God, should He seem to us too awesome. On this feast of the Assumption, we celebrate the final glory of the woman who lived without sin and was the mother who gave birth to and raised our Savior. She sings of her own approachableness in the Gospel: "He has looked upon His servant in her lowliness." Even on the day of her glory, the church repeats her words about humble nearness to us.

Nathaniel Hawthorne writes, "I have always envied Catholics that sweet, sacred, Virgin Mother, who stands between them and the deity. She intercepts somewhat His awesome splendor. She permits his love stream on the worshiper through the medium of a woman's tenderness." God is, of course, approachable too, but for those who have not yet the insight to see it, the Blessed Mother will help.

George Bernard Shaw was a great friend of a mother superior of a convent. He confided in her that he found it so hard to believe in the divinity of Jesus. But then he said, "I think His mother will see me through." For those who are not quite ready to approach Christ, they can find solace in conversing with the mother of God. The novelist Marcel Proust recalled that he would tell his mother about the many evils he performed in ignorance and passion. She always seemed to listen with forgiveness and understanding. Her gentleness lessened their importance and lifted the weight from his conscience.

The same is true with prayer to Mary, the spiritual mother of Christians. She listens to us with all the sympathy that any mother would give. She then draws us into the orbit of her Son where we feel the astonishing acceptance and forgiveness of the saved. These periodic feasts of Mary are meant both to honor the events of her life on earth and her glory in heaven. They are also meant to disclose her interest and sympathy for us. Holy Mary, Mother of God...pray for us!

CHAPEL BRIEFS

Training available for volunteers

Training sessions for volunteer Confraternity Christian Doctrine teachers and aides are planned Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in the Religious Education Center. A morning session will be offered Wednesday at 10 a.m. for those who cannot attend the evening session.

The classes are intended to prepare the teachers and aides for the coming CCD school year, which begins Sept. 20.

There will be classes in scripture, theology, classroom management, lesson-planning and curriculum. All teachers are required to have a minimum of five hours training in order to be certified for the program. Monthly in-service training is scheduled during the school year.

Prayer breakfast open to community

The next monthly prayer breakfast is planned Tuesday from 6:30 to 7:30 a.m. in the Infantry Center Chapel annex.

This Officer Christian Fellowship function is open to everyone in the community, including officers, enlisted and civilian personnel, both active and retired. It focuses on fellowship and the sharing of prayer concerns.

Reservations are not necessary but if you plan to attend, call The Infantry Center Chapel at 545-2050 or 545-2359. This will assist in the purchase and preparation of food. There is no charge for the breakfast.

Post Catholics plan 'A New Beginning'

St. Maurice Catholic community at the Main Post Catholic Chapel continues its theme of 'A New Beginning' at the Religious Educaton Expo Aug. 29.

Representatives from the committees of the Pastoral Council will be available to answer questions, hand out information and sign up volunteers who wish to work in the parish.

Children and youths will be eligible to receive prizes for registering for CCD, signing up to participate in the CYO program, or volunteer as alter ministers for the upcoming year.

All parishoners are encouraged to come out, enjoy and continue to celebrate our new beginning.

Kelley Hill chapel offers many services

The Kelley Hill Family Chapel offers Sunday School for all ages, Bible study and a single-soldier ministry. The chapel has worship programs for Protestants, Catholics, Episcopals and Samoans. To find out more, come sign up to join the program.

Community invited to PWOC fall sign-up

The Protestant Women of the Chapel will host a sign-up for the fall session of the group Sept. 10 at 9:30 a.m.

The sign-up will be held in the Religious Education Center, building 229, on the corner of Ingersoll and Dixie Roads.

The group provides opportunities for fellowship, spiritual growth and fun. Nursery services are provided for all PWOC functions.

The Fort Benning community is invited to join.

Classes available at Sunday School

The Main Post Sunday School meets every Sunday morning at the Religious Education Center, building 229 from 9:30 to 10:30 a.m. Classes are for 2-year-olds through adults.

English language classes are offered free every Tuesday morning during the school year from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. The classes are designed for family members of U.S. military and for personnel from the U.S. Army School of the Americas.

Members needed for outreach groups

Brotherhood and Sisterhood are groups which actively involve the men and women of the church. We get to know each other better, but most of all we do missionary and outreach work. The groups visit the sick, the old folks home, have picnics, etc.

Bible study and new converts classes focus on learning the appropriate conduct and life style according to the Bible, and how to cope with life in general.

For more information, call the Lavoie Chapel.

CDS offers quality options

DPCA

EDITOR'S NOTE: The Bayonet plans a series of articles during the month of August to help parents decide on the best childcare for their families. The options on post include full day care at the Custer Terrace and Marne Road Child Development Centers; part-time day care and preschool at Patch Early Childhood Development Center and McGraw Manor Small World Preschool, preschool, after school and hourly care at Tot Town Child Development Center; and the quarters-based Family Child Care program.

The Child Development Services (CDS) is a network of systems and programs through which the Army provides quality child-development options that reduce the conflict between parental responsibilites and unit mission requirements.

In fiscal year 1986, over 138,000 children were served in 296 child development centers at 173 Army locations worldwide. During the same year, 6,659 family childcare homes provided care for more than 30,000 children. These figures can be compared to the national statistics. At least seven million children nationwide are cared for in family-childcare homes or in child development centers. Family childcare accounts for over 75 percent of all childcare outside the home.

Off-post services are generally not a viable option to provide childcare services to Army families for the following reasons:

Most facilities are located too far from post.

Hours of operation are not responsive to military requirements.

Fees generally are too high for young soldiers.

Many are filled to capacity and have long waiting lists.

Services are very limited for infants and toddlers.

The increase in working spouses and the frequent relocation of service families have made CDS operations a necessity. Of all working mothers, 52-percent have children under the age of six.

The objective of CDS is to provide an atmosphere for the social, physical, emotional and intellectual development of children.

Becky Carroll, CDS chief, said of the program, "We at Fort Benning are working toward providing more services for parents, upgrading what we have and requesting additional centers and supplemental programs to accomodate our installation needs. Child Development Services had a late start at Fort Benning. When other installations were starting center-based programs, Fort Benning was not. After a DA directive Child Development Services officially began in the spring of 1985. We began both center-based and quarters-based programs at the same time. We do have a lot of catching up to do, but are striving hard to not only catch up, but push forward with new and exciting programs."

CDS is a family program offering a supplement to, not a substitute for, the family as the primary agent for the care and development of the child.

Care options offered by CDS include a variety of services, locations, hours of operation, and fee schedules that are responsive to the needs of military families.

CDS operates under the guidance of AR 608-10. This regulation gives the adult/child ratio and the maximum group sizes for center-based facilities:

Infants — 6 weeks-18 months — Adult/Child — 1:5 — Maximum: 10

Toddlers — 18 months-3 years — Adult/Child — 1:8 — Maximum: 16

Preschool — 3 years-5 years — Adult/Child — 1:10 — Maximum: 20

The staffing for family childcare homes is:

Infant/Toddler — 4 weeks-3 years — Adult/Child — 1:4 — Maximum: 4

Multi-age — 4 weeks-12 years — Adult/Child — 1:6 — Maximum: 6

Multi-age — 2 years-12 years — Adult/Child — 1:8 — Maximum: 8

In determining the maximum number of children in family childcare homes, the caregivers own children are included in the totals.

The theme of CDS is "Be Choosy about Child Care," which serves to remind parents of the importance of choosing the right program for their families.

Excellence begins with community yard of the quarter

SSgt. Jeffrey Higgins and wife, Ellen, work in the Fort Benning Community Yard of the Quarter.

Thad Roberson

By Thad Roberson
Bayonet staff writer

A Fort Benning family took the slogan, "Excellence Begins Here," to heart, being recognized as Yard of the Quarter winners.

SSgt Jefferey Higgins and wife, Ellen, were selected for their residence in the South Main Post Community.

"As an incintive to the Post residents," said SGM Alphonso J. Deane, Community Life Noncommissioned officer in charge, "a community beautification program was set up in accordance with USAIC Reg 210-1, to recognize selected quarters, for complying with the guidelines for a more beautiful community.

The Higgins knew nothing of the competition prior to the inspection team's notice that they were being considered.

"We were not in actual competition," Mrs. Higgins said. "I just like to see a clean yard. And I enjoy working in the yard. So, it really came as a suprise, when we found out that we had been nominated by the area's Community Life Office," she said.

For at least four hours each day, Mrs. Higgins works in the yard, while her husband, Jefferey, edges and cuts the grass.

"When we do it together, it doesn't take long to do the entire yard," Mrs. Higgins said. "It's just teamwork."

The Yard-of-the Quarter winners, whose most recent addition to a budding flower garden has been a rock bed,"to keep the weeds out," feel that it is easy for the entire neighborhood to get involved in the community beautification program.

The Yard of the Quarter is judged by the same standards, as the monthly awards presented in each community for the most outstanding yard.

The beautification program, outlined in USAIC Reg 210-1, requires that residents maintain, not only their grounds, but also structured features, such as, fencing and the building itself.

Inspections of Family Housing Areas consist of ensuring that the yard is clean, lawn mowed, shrubbery trimmed, grass or leaves removed from flower beds, gutters or drains, and that the area is free of other deficiencies.

When the checklist is complete, the yards with the fewest deficiencies are nominated for the monthly and quarterly awards.

The winner of the monthly award is recognized by a certificate of appreciation, letter of commendation and a sign is posted in the yard to indicate the current outstanding yard.

According to this quarter's winners, with the tools provided by Self Help, every yard on Fort Benning could be a winner.

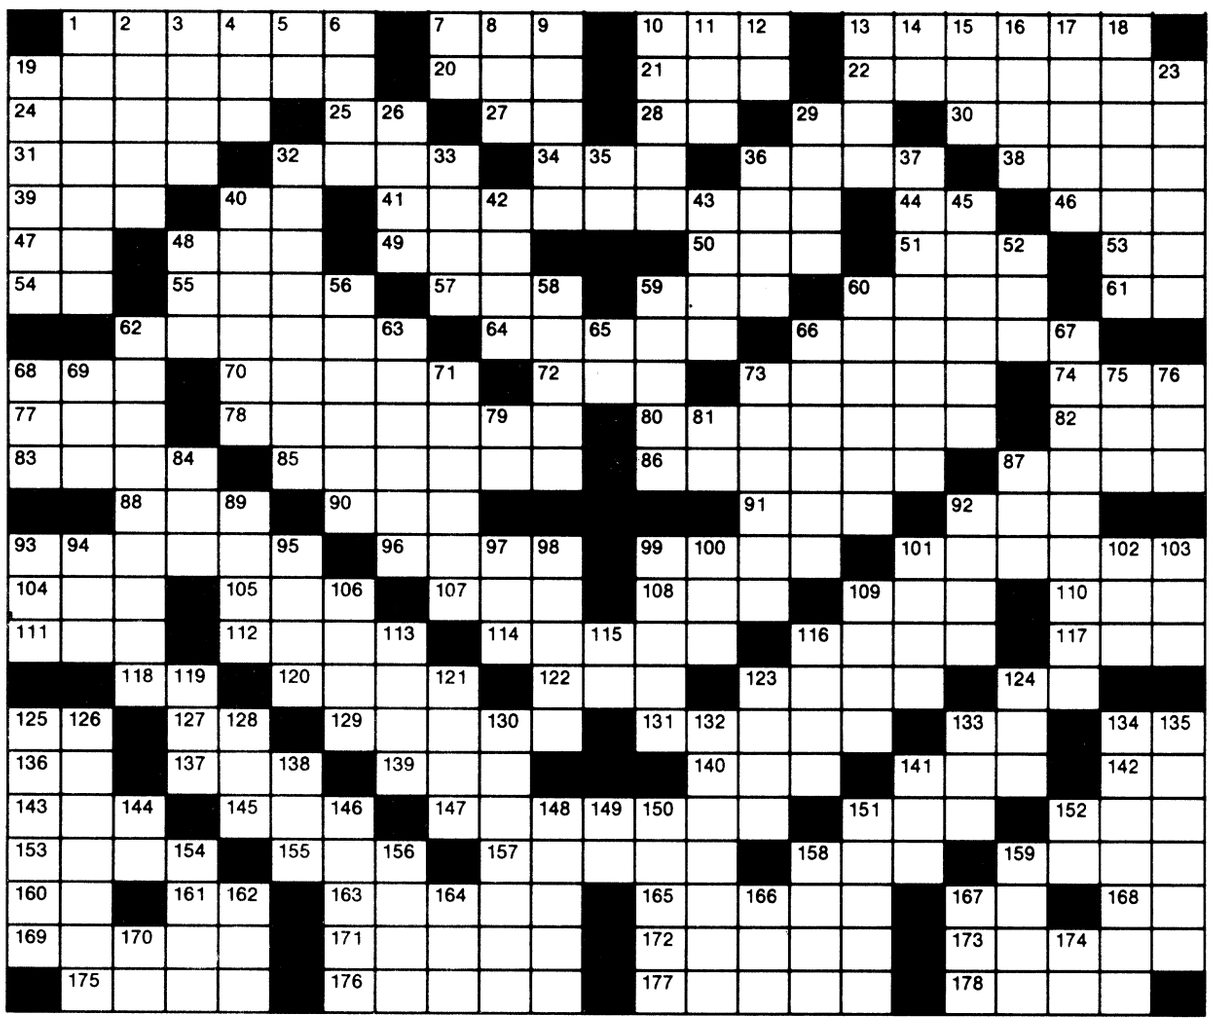
The Self Help facility provides loan items, permanent issue items, and some supplies for yard beautification.

When grass seed is available, those who have attended the self help class and posess a self help issue card, may pick up a limited supply.

Grass sprigs are available on Saturday only. But, pine bark, top soil and fertilizer are available every day.

The top soil and pine bark are bulk products. Therefore, individuals in need of these items must have a shovel and adequate transportation.

Loan items are distributed for a 48-hour period.



Items available for loan include garden tillers, electric leaf blowers, hand-operated edgers, post-hole diggers and more.

The facility is open from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Friday, and 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. on Saturday.

"With the assistance provided by the area coordinator program, Community Life Centers, neighbors, and self help, Higgins said, "Fort Benning will always be the Home of excelle ·e."

MARSHAL'S VIEWPOINT

Provost Marshal's Office

Last year, over 1,000 bicyclists were killed and over 40,000 injured in the United States in accidents. The majority of these victims were between the ages of five and 15 years of age. With the advent of hot summer weather, Fort Benning will see a marked increase in the number of bicycles involved in accidents.

While bicycling can be both enjoyable and healthy, it can also be dangerous. Although collisions involving bicycles and cars are often the fault of the car driver, it's the bicyclist who is more prone to be seriously injured.

These sobering thoughts make it imperative upon both parents and their children to do all in their power to decrease the likelihood of becoming involved in a bicycle accident. For starters, when planning to purchase a bicycle for a child, every parent should be aware of the responsibilities that must be assumed. Several questions which a parent might ask are:

Is my child old enough to understand traffic laws?

Is the neighborhood safe for children on bicycles?

Do I have the patience to teach my child traffic laws and rules?

Bicyclists of all ages must understand that, just as in operating an automobile, adhering to safe riding practices is of the utmost importance. The following are some pointers to help you and your children to "ride right with a bike:"

Obey all traffic signals.

Be seen at night. Be sure to have a white light in the front of your bike and a red reflector on the rear. Always wear light or reflectorized clothing when riding at night.

Keep to the right — ride in the same direction as cars, but just as close to the edge of the road as possible.

Ride in a single file — always ride with one bicycle behind the other, never side-by-side.

Slow down at intersections — look in all directions.

Use proper hand signals — give signal before, not while turning.

Keep both hands on handlebars — especially while turning.

Ride in a straight line — don't weave or swerve in traffic. Don't be a show-off.

Slow down going downhill — you may have to stop quickly.

Keep your eyes straight ahead — watch where you are going.

Only one person to a bike unless it was specifically designed to carry another rider.

Don't ride a bike that's not in good condition — it's not safe. Check your brakes and steering before you ride.

Remember the above rules and teach them to your loved ones. By working together and observing the rules of the road, we can make our community a safer place in which to live, work and play. Accident prevention is your business.

ASK THE JUDGE

By Capt. Thomas J. Shoener
Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Q: About two months ago, I saw an ad in a local newspaper for a vacation trip to Puerto Valarta, Mexico, for less than $400. I called up the toll-free number in California, and the employee there set me up with reservations and a flight, for $397.45. He told me that I would be getting the tickets as soon as I sent the money. I sent the money to an address in Los Angeles. I received my cancelled check, but now I have no tickets or hotel reservation. I have tried to contact the firm by calling the 800 number, but no one answers. What should I do?

A: You need to get an appointment with Legal Assistance. Our numbers are: 545-3281/3282. Bring all relevant information with you. There have been a rash of travel fraud cases throughout the country, with many of the companies based in the Los Angeles area. California law provides that felony thefts occur only when $400 or more is stolen, which is why many fraud schemes steal just under $400 from their victims — the police don't investigate such misdemeanor fraud as thoroughly in California. Before you come to Legal Assistance, it is a good idea to go to the post office and send a certified letter, return receipt requested, to the company, demanding the tickets or a refund.

Keep a copy of the letter. While you are there, it is a good idea also to make a complaint (since you mailed the payment, there may be postal fraud) and contact the Postal Inspector in Atlanta. That number is: (404) 765-7369. Though you may not get your money back, you may help other people avoid the same problems you've gotten into.

VA Q&A

Q — My spouse and I are veterans of the armed forces and plan to use our GI Bill education benefits to attend school. May we claim each other as dependents?

A — Yes. Any veteran may claim his/her spouse as a dependent for education benefits, provided a certified copy of the marriage certificate appears in both VA files.

Q — I am 80 years old and I receive a VA pension. Do I still have to make an annual report of income?

A — Yes. Everyone receiving VA pension benefits, based on age or a non-service-connected disability, must make an annual report of their income. Any change in income should be reported immediately so that adjustments can be made.

Q — I am not a veteran, but I would like to purchase a repossessed VA home. Is this possible?

A — Yes. VA-owned homes are available for the general public to purchase. A listing of these home is available at your local VA regional office, or you may contact a real estate broker of your choice. VA pays the broker's sales commission.

Q: I am a woman veteran. Can I obtan gender-related medical treatment at a VA facility?

A: Yes. Provided you meet the general eligibility requirements for medical care. Women veteran coordinators have been designated at each VA medical center and many regional offices to counsel women veterans seeking treatment.

Q: I own a manufactured home on a rented lot. I would like to purchase a lot for it. Can I do this using the VA Guaranteed Loan program?

A: Yes. A VA-guaranteed loan may be used to buy and improve a lot on which to place a manufactured home you already own.

Warrant Officer history dates to 1790

By Ted Reno
Ordnance Magazine

They call them "Chief," but who they are and what they do is a mystery to many people. Perhaps the reason for this lies in the rather uncertain history of the U.S. Army Warrant Officer Corps itself.

The Navy and the Coast Guard have used the rank of warrant officer since 1790, but it wasn't until 1918 that the rank was incorporated into the Army grade structure. This came about with the Act of July 1918, which established the Army Mine Planters Service as part of the old Coast Artillery Corps and authorized the appointment of warrant officers as masters, mates and engineers for their vessels.

Two years later, the Act of 1920 increased the use of warrant officers by authorizing appointments in the administrative and bandleading fields. The purpose for this expansion was to have warrant officers supplement field clerks and perform certain duties in lieu of commissioned officers. In addition to this, the expansion "rewarded" enlisted men for their service, and provided a place for former World War I commissioned officers who lacked sufficient education and training for retention in that capacity.

For the next 19 years, not much happened in the warrant officer area, but when World War II began, the program got a shot in the arm.

The Act of 1941 created two grades of warrant officers: Warrant Officer Junior Grade and Chief Warrant Officer. That Act also specified that warrant officers would be assigned to duties as prescribed by the secretary of the Army. It gave warrant officers status by prescribing that when they are assigned to positions normally held by commissioned officers, they perform their duties with the same authority as prescribed by law for commissioned officers.

By the end of the war, guidelines for the use of the Army warrant officer were established and appointments were being made in 40 different occupations.

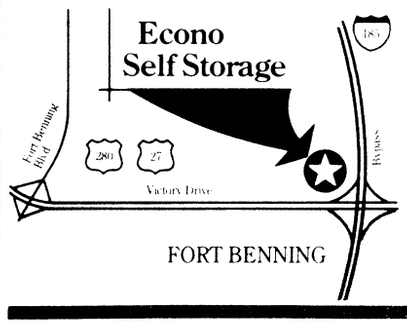
The first four women entered the Corps in March 1944. By wars' end 42 female warrant officers were on active-duty.

The purpose of the Warrant Officer Corps was questionable as the Army readjusted to peacetime. There seemed to be no need for the rank.

It soon became a "capper" rank that could be reached by progression through the enlisted career program. The Army established CW3 and CW4 grades to provide upward mobility. This soon created a situation where warrant officer's duties were interchangeable with those of commissioned officers and senior NCOs.

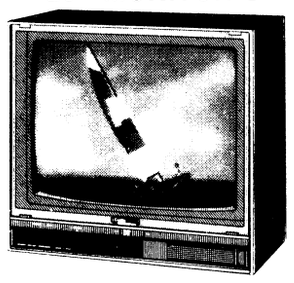
The Korean War era found warrant officers in trouble. Between 1953 and 1957, the Army conducted a study to determine their fate. When the results were released, a brand new warrant concept was deployed. An appointment to warrant officer was no longer to be a "reward" or "incentive" for enlisted personnel and former commissioned officers. Instead, it would be a separate officer category with the specific role of providing mid-level management technical expertise needed for converting theory into practice.

The study re-defined a warrant officer as "a highly-skilled technician who is provided to fill those positions above the enlisted level which are too specialized in scope to permit the effective development and continued use of broadly-trained branch officers."



At last, the Warrant Officer Corps had a defined purpose in the Army's structure. The new definition assured its future.

Today's warrant officer is a single specialty officer technician who is the resident subject matter expert in a particular functional area.



Warrant officers receive in-depth training to be operating technicians. Their career patterns focus on technical qualifications.

Warrant officer duty assignments are repetitive in nature so they can maintain technical proficiency. Normally, those assignments involve direct supervision or performance of technical operations.

Panthers 6-1 over Rock's Support

By George Mingee
197th Infantry Brigade Correspondent

A crushing three-run homer off the bat of Harry Manning in the second inning led the 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor Panthers to the gold in the 197th Infantry Brigade Officers Softball League championship game, beating the "Rock's Support," officers from 2nd Battalion, 10th Field Artillery 6-1.

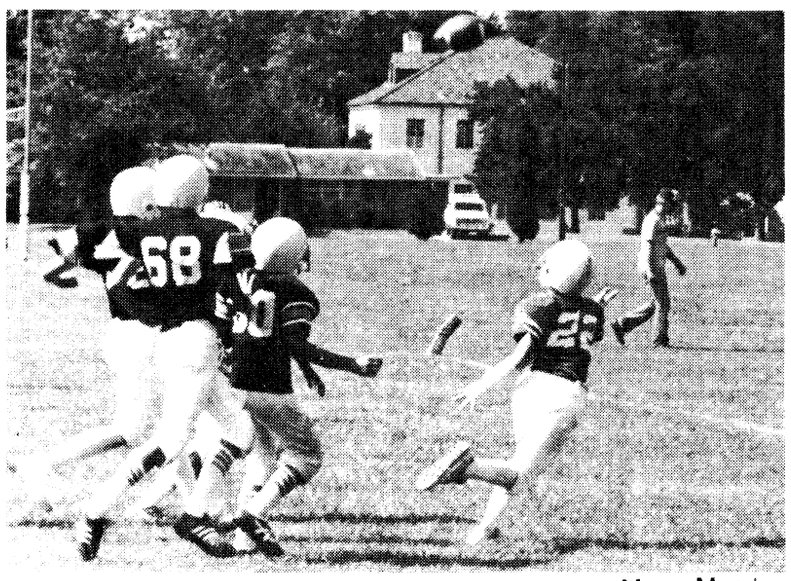
The Rock's Support players made the scoreboard in the bottom of the second inning, when Rick Macaulay tripled and was brought in on a sacrifice fly by Mark Benz, giving the Rock's Support their only score in the game.

In the top of the third inning, another two-run homer by Panther Ken Fischer made the score 5-1.

The Panthers final run was scored in the 6th inning when a single by Charles Hands brought Ken Fischer in on the final score of the game.

"Well, we did it again, another trophy in the case, this makes three years in a row," said Panther's center-fielder Thomas Reilly, who made the last out of the game.

David Moore wins



The Bass Club of Fort Benning held a night tournament on Lake Harding the 8th and 9th of August. It was a beautiful night for fishing, a full moon was shining brightly, especially on David Moore, who took first place honors with a catch of 10 pounds, 12 ounces.

Others who placed were Bob Billman, nine pounds, eight ounces, and Gary Dollar with seven pounds and eight ounces.

The Bass Club is holding its annual family fish fry at Uchee Creek on Sunday, Sept. 20.

Anyone interested in joining the Bass Club of Fort Benning is welcome to attend club meetings in the upstairs section of the Hidden Door Club every second and fourth Monday at 7:30 p.m.

YA pigskinners needed

Marco Morales

A wide receiver for the "Packers" (r); reaches for the pigskin in the end zone as a group of "Redskins" attempt to block the pass.

By Thad Roberson
Bayonet staff writer

The Ghostbusters of the 1986 Youth Activities Football Season have disappeared and the YA Football League is in need of players to carry the pigskin to the Superbowl.

Registration has been extended through Aug. 21, to allow those individuals who wish to participate, the opportunity to excel in the YA Football Division.

The Division hosts four leagues to accomodate the Fort Benning youth ages 6 to 15.

The Grasshopper League will be made up of nine-man Flag Football teams, ages 6 to 8.

In the Termite Division, speedsters from 10 to 11 years old will play four quarters, eight minutes each, with a 10-minute half time.

The Pee-Wee League will get underway, consisting of stars, who are 11 to 13 years old.

The 13 to 15-year olds, make up the Junior League.

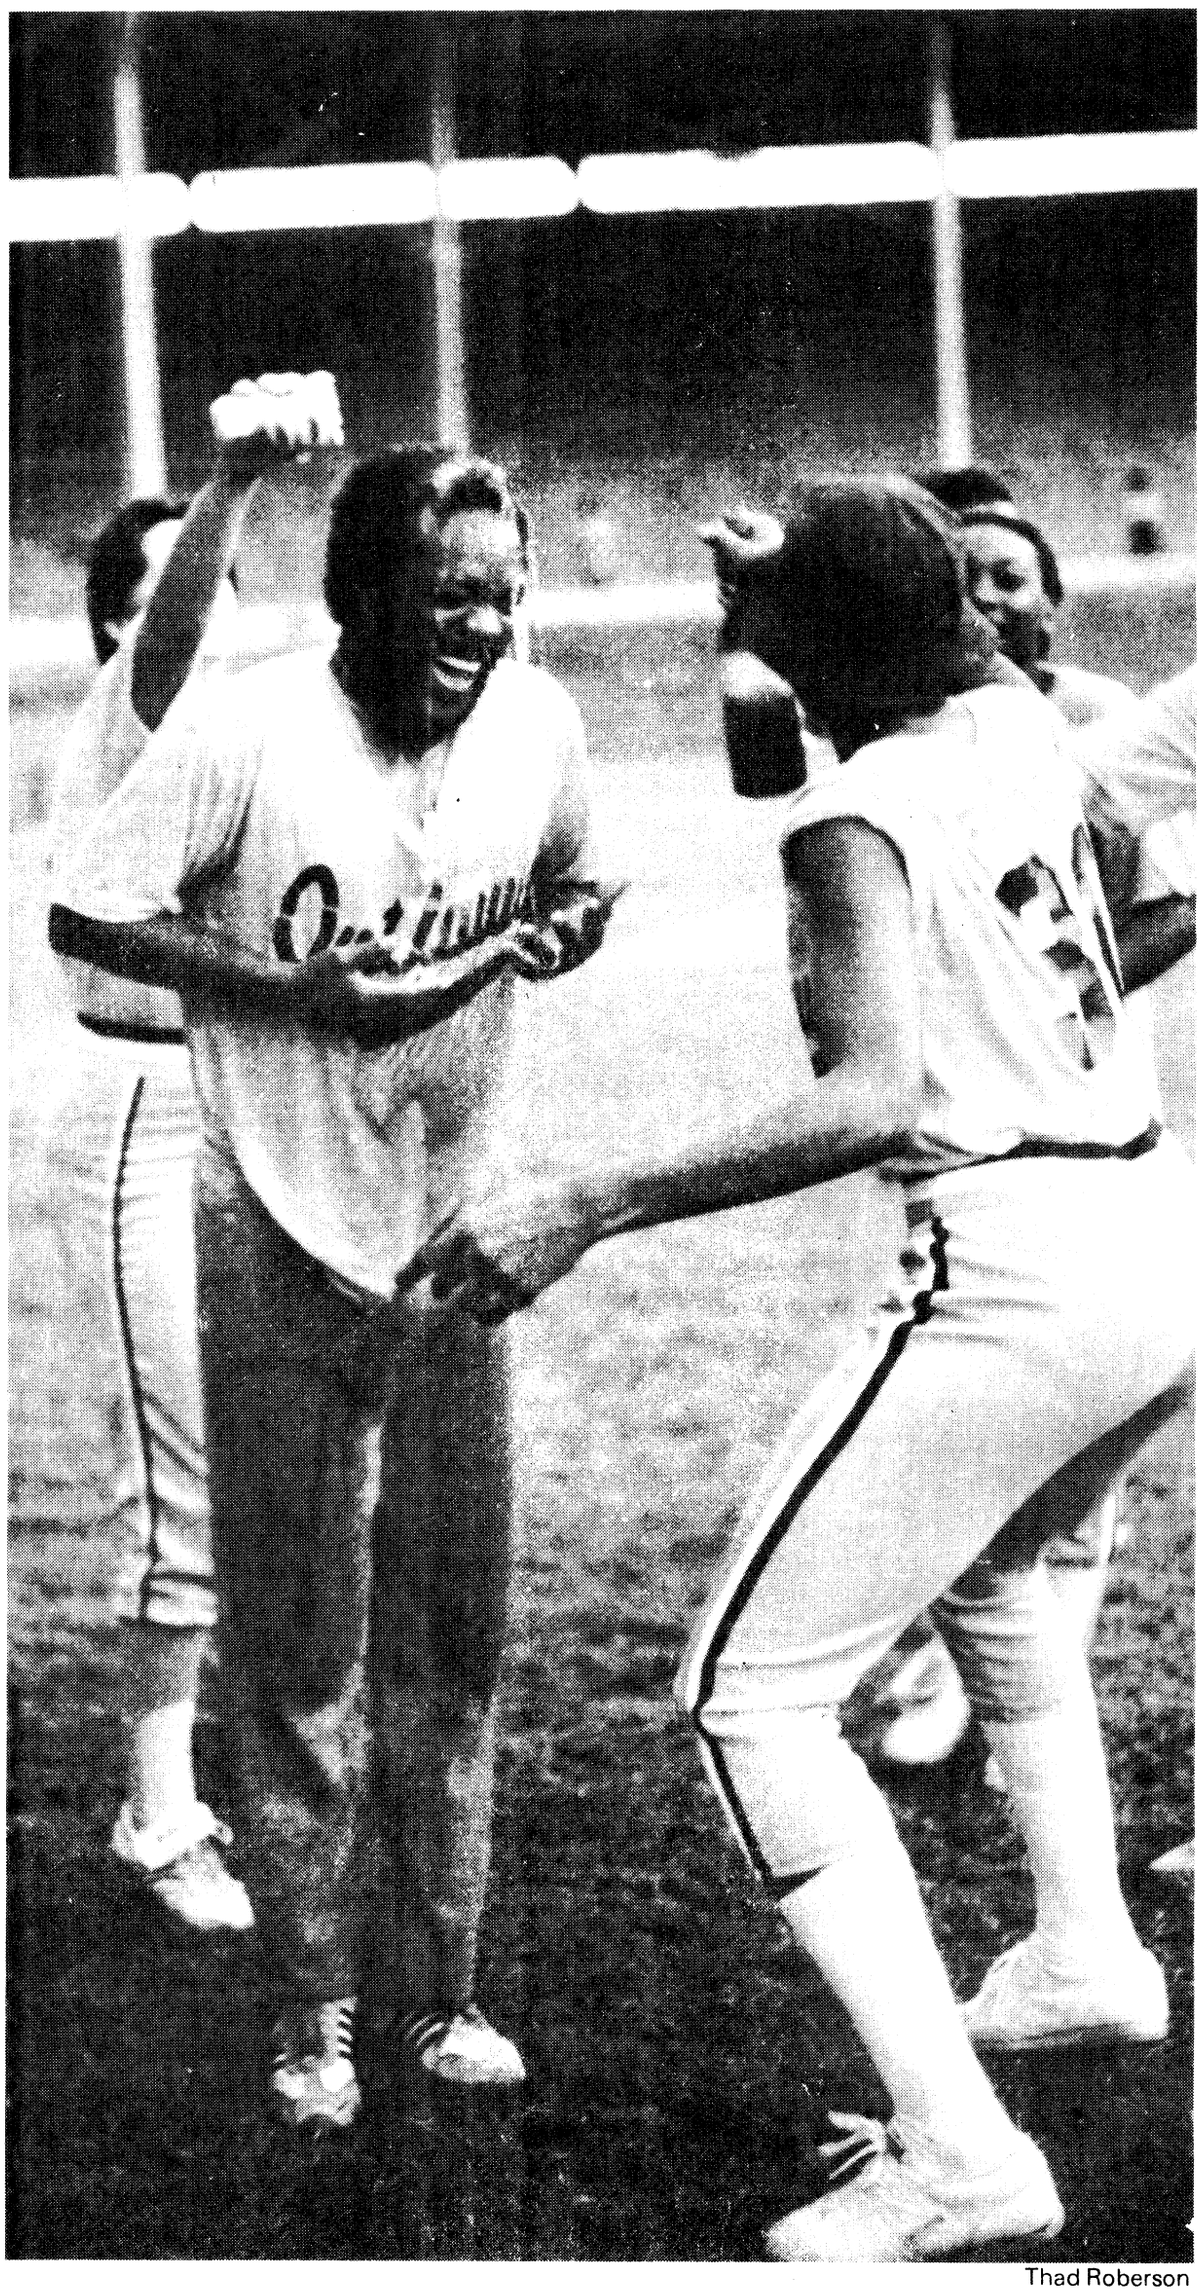
While the Grasshopper League plays flag football, the remainder of the YA Division is hard hitting, tackle football.

Registration fee is $12 per child, though the second child may register for $8, and the third, for $6.

Those interested in joining the Youth Activities Division in their Fall Festival of Football, may contact Ray Pierce at 545-3070/3913, or visit the new Youth Activities Center, building 563, located on the corner of Baltzell and McIver st.

Some times you win some times you don't

By Hank Aaron
Atlanta Braves Vice President



Why is it that some teams get on a tear and for two weeks are unbeatable? Then,a month later, that same team loses 10 games in a row.

Why do some players burn up the league for two weeks and then go a month during which they can't seem to buy a hit at the plate or a victory on the pitcher's mound?

If I could find the answer to those questions and bottle it, I'd be a billionaire. Among today's players, Dale Murphy of the Atlanta Braves is known as a streak hitter. When he's hot, pitchers can't keep the ball in the park. I remember my old teammate Joe Adcock from the championship days of the Milwaukee Braves. When he got into a streak, nobody could get him out. You could throw him a low, outside slider and somehow he'd get it up on his bat and hit it 15 rows into the stands. Five days later, throw him that same pitch and he couldn't do anything with it.

This year, the Milwaukee Brewers got off to a super start and won a lot of ball games. Then they went the other way for a long period. That will happen with a young team. The players are relaxed at the beginning of the season when the team is going well. Then when the team is going badly, those same players put too much pressure on themselves and try to do too much.

I do have some personal theories about avoiding slumps. I think the problem is concentration. Some players will go along and have a good week or a good month and have no understanding of what they are doing that's working for them. Then when they get in a slump, they have nothing to fall back on. If you hit a homerun on a change-up, how did you stride on that pitch? How close were you standing to the plate? You've got to know what you're doing that's right. You can't wait until you are in a slump and then try and figure out what you're doing wrong.

Thad Roberson

Coach Larry Wilkes is drenched by enthusiastic "Outlaws" after there post championship win in the womens' league.

Outlaws blast Allstars

By Thad Roberson
Bayonet staff writer

The 1986 Women's Softball season closed out with a bit of controversy, and a lot of action, as the Outlaws went on the claim the championship crown last Wednesday, dropping J.J.'s Allstars, 7-3, in a hard-hitting showdown at Gowdy Stadium.

In the wake of a protest, lodged in Monday's championship matchup, the two teams were forced to replay the game.

The Allstars started out strong, hitting hard on the ball from the opening pitch. They were able to score two runs in the first inning, but left three scores on base.

The contest remained close through the first three innings, as the outlaws edged ahead, 3-2. But then, the Outlaws exploded with power and speed.

The power was provided by Nancy Hadley, who hit the games first homerun, pulling a shot just over right field, also allowing Debra Green to score.

Before the Allstars could catch their breath, Valencia Jones popped another to right field. Jones speed sent her around the diamond, even before Joni Stamm could find a handle on the ball.

The Allstars defense tightened down, forcing the Outlaws to also rely on a strong defense.

Tweet Taylor, who scored two of the Allstars three runs, started what appeared to be a rally in the bottom of the fifth, pushing a double through the hole, then scoring on a Dorcel Johnson RBI.

In an unusual call, Outlaw coach, Larry Wilks, brought a new pitcher to the mound in the final inning.

After pitching a solid game, Freddie Allen turned the mound over to Debbie Mooney. The Outlaws readily awaited the first pitch, hoping to take advantage of the cold pitcher.

With runners on first and third and no outs, the bottom of the seventh inning looked promising for the Allstar club.

But, once again the Outlaws locked the doors at home plate, as Mooney kept the ball in the infield, holding on to a 7-3 victory.

Uchee fish tourney set

The Uchee Creek Recreation area is conducting a fishing tournament during the month of August. Entrants are divided into two categories: Adult men and women and junior class, boys and girls ages 16 and younger. Prizes will be awarded for longest bass-all species, crappie-all species and bream/sunfish-all species. In addition, prizes will also be awarded for the largest bass and catfish by weight. All catches must be verified at the Uchee Creek Bait Shop. Don't be left out. For more information, contact the Bait Shop Manager, Mr. Bruce, at 545-4053.

Evaluate your needs before picking running shoes

By Becky Obert
Bayonet staff writer

Saucony, Asics, Avia...if these names bring visions of romantic nights along the Seine, think again. About shoes. Specifically, running shoes.

These are the names of companies that produce running shoes, and they, along with Tiger, Reebok, Nike, Converse, New Balance and Brooks, represent some of the top running shoe manufacturers in the world.

Running shoes come in all sizes, colors and styles, with prices to match. To the novice, a wall full of shoes can be intimidating.

But the secret to picking the right running shoe lies in evaluating your needs, and finding a shoe that fits and is priced at what you can afford to pay.

"You have to take a very serious look at what kind of body type you have," said Dr. (Maj.) John Henderson, a family practice physician at Martin Army Community Hospital. "If you are a big stocky person, you're going to put more shock on your legs, so you need to buy a more sturdy shoe."

Henderson knows what he's talking about when it comes to running. Not only is he a marathon runner (he's completed 14 marathons), but he recently completed a one-year residency in sports medicine at the Hughston Clinic (a world-famous treatment center of athletes) in Columbus.

He said most injuries he sees are the result of using running shoes for things they were not made to be used for. "The physical tolerance of running shoes is about 300 miles. If you run 3 miles a day, that means you can wear the shoes 100 times before they begin to lose their shock absorbency," Henderson said.

There are two types of running shoes; racing flats and training shoes. "For the running that the average troop does, a training shoe is better because it's a little sturdier and can stand up to the wear and tear," he said.

Henderson said when he's choosing a new pair of shoes, he does everything from pulling the shoe apart to giving them a test run.

"I put the shoes on and then go outside and run around in them to see how they feel on, because walking around in the store is worthless," he said. "Store personnel will usually let you do this, because they understand."

Henderson said it's important to find a shoe that has enough room in the toe box, with ankles that fit snugly. The top of the foot should not feel pinched by the lacings, he said.

Before you walk out of the store with your package, he said you should check every stitch and seam in the shoe, to make sure they have no flaws. "Don't be afraid to tear the shoe apart, and pull out the inner sole to see how the shoe is constructed underneath it," he said. This is just protecting your investment, since stores don't like to accept returns after the shoes have been worn.

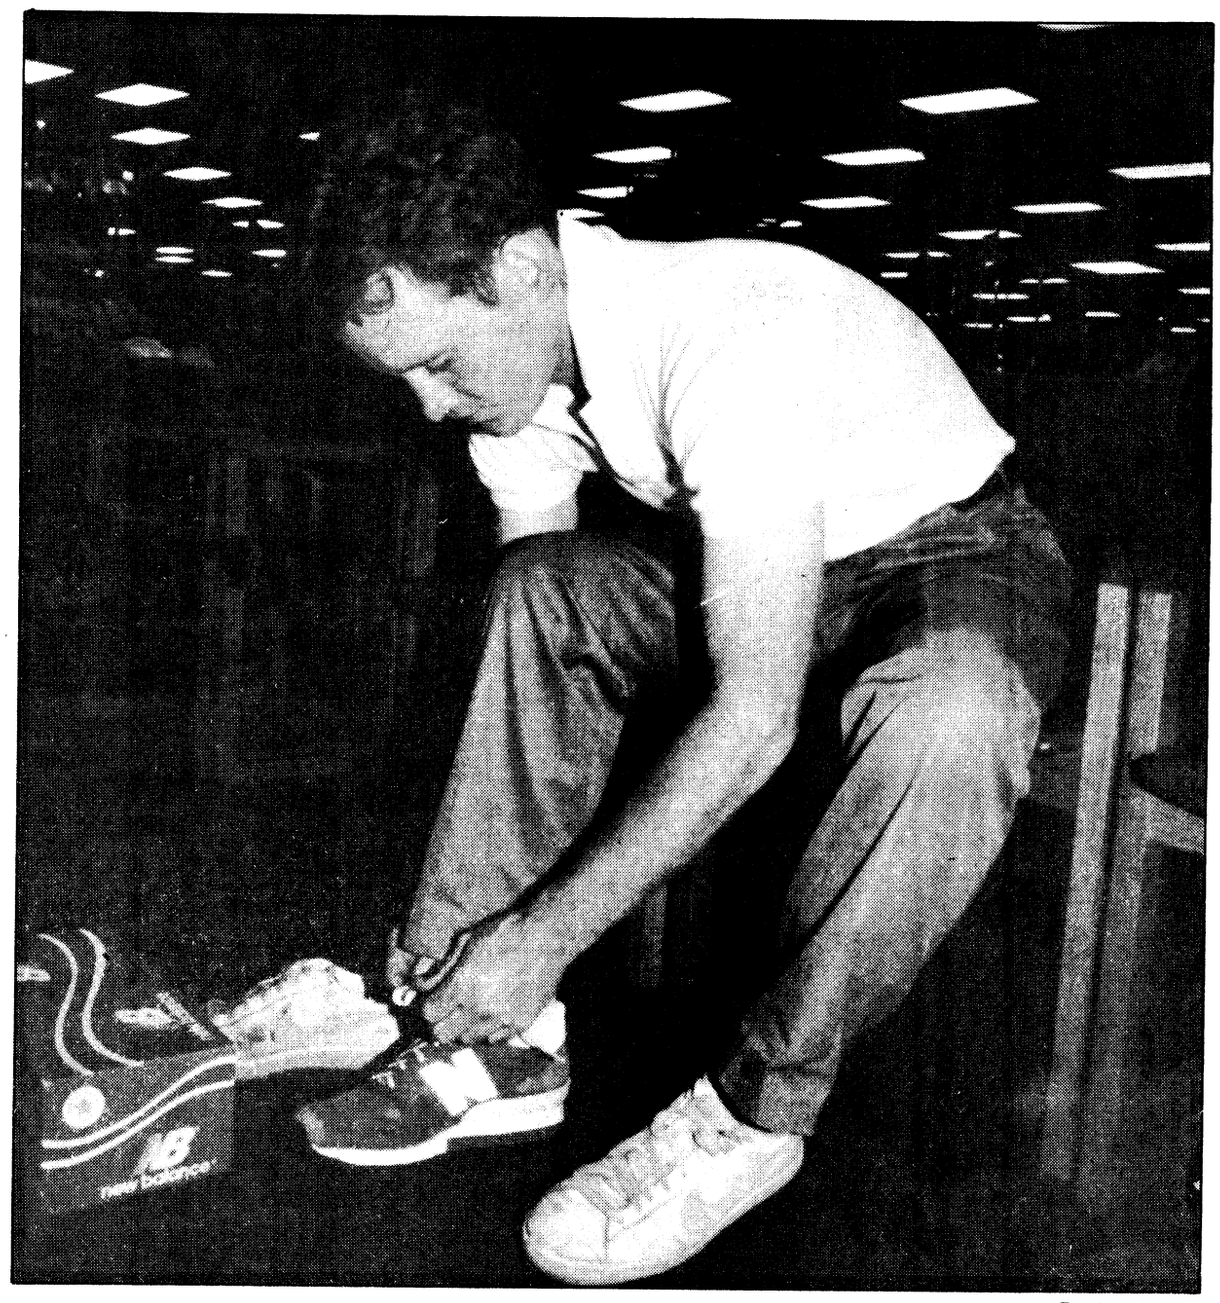
Greg Johnson, owner of a local sport shoe shop, agreed that fit is important. "Try the shoes on, see if they feel good on your feet," Johnson said.

The shoes should have plenty of cushioning on the insole. "Plenty of cushion increases the shoe's shock absorption," he said.

Johnson said the shoe you select should also have a good stable heel area. Better running shoes have heels that feel hard and stiff, which means that the heel cannot slip or wobble while you run. "This controls your motion and keeps you on track, not running from side to side," he said.

Johnson said it really doesn't matter what kind of surface you're running on, a good running shoe can go from asphalt to grass to dirt.

Running shoes are made from either leather or nylon, and the two disagreed on which is best. Johnson said he prefers running shoes made of nylon rather than leather. "The light weight makes it a lot easier on you when you're running, and the nylon breathes better than leather," Johnson said.



Henderson said he likes leather shoes, because they wear well in bad weather. "For winter slush, rain and snow, leather is better," he said. "There are times when running in nylon shoes that you feel you're running in a baggie."

Henderson said that nylon looks better and you have more color choice, but he doesn't think the looks matter. "If you have shoes that fit your feet, wear them and forget about what they look like," he said.

To get that fit, you don't need to order a pair of shoes from Hershey, a special order company that custom makes shoes to your foot dimensions, and charges around $150, Johnson said.

It really boils down to how much you want to spend. "You can get a good pair of running shoes for from $39 to $49," he said. "There are some shoes that sell for less, but they aren't worth it."

Henderson agrees that you have to be willing to pay a little bit more for good shoes.

Becky Obert

Sgt. Kevin Hookstadt tries on a pair of New Balance running shoes at the main post exchange.

"I can go down to K-Mart and spent $20 and the shoes will last a few weeks. You have to be willing to spend about $50," he said.

That's because running in bad shoes can cause all kinds of injuries, ranging from shin splints, to knee injuries to pulled muscles. Even if you're lucky and don't suffer a specific injury, Johnson said that running in bad shoes wears out your whole body because you're taking such punishment.

Henderson said most injuries he sees are caused by overdoing it or running in shoes that don't provide the proper support or cushioning

Wearing a good pair of shoes that provide proper heel support and shock absorbtion is no guarantee that you won't be injured, but it can help lessen injuries, Johnson said.

There's no best brand of running shoes, he said. "Some brands are cut narrower or wider, so one may fit your foot better than another," he said.

"There are 10 to 12 companies out there who all make good shoes, and you're not going to go wrong if you buy one that feels good on your foot."

Editor's note: Henderson said he's available to visit units and talk to soldiers about any kind of sports medicine problems. He can be reached at the Family Practice Clinic.

Leuer speaks at media luncheon

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

Maj. Gen. Kenneth C. Leuer spoke at a Association of the U.S. Army Media Luncheon Tuesday, highlighting the current status of Fort Benning.

Speaking before a crowd of nearly 80 post officers and local media representatives, he stressed the importance of training, caring and community.

"Our troops here are the finest I've seen in my 30 years of service," Leuer said, "and I can only see them getting even better in the future."

Leuer vowed that as the chief of Infantry, he would continue the reputation of producing the finest soldiers in the world.

He applauded local media officials who help get the Fort Benning story told to the tri-community.

After his speech, Leuer opened the floor to questions from the local media.

The luncheon, which has become an annual event, was sponsored by the Chattahoochee Valley-Fort Benning Chapter of the AUSA.

The principal objectives of AUSA are to educate the public, coordinate with industry, provide support for the people who serve in uniform and enhance military development.

This luncheon is just one example of AUSA educating the public about critical and timely issues relating to the Army.

Warrant

This can include command of non-tactical units, detachments, platoons or sections where warrant officers supervise enlisted or civilian personnel in related occupational specialties.

Their role differs from that of commissioned officers, who expect to be flexible in their assignments and duties. As commanders and multi-functional managers, they must have a working knowledge of each functional area. They have to orchestrate the overall requirements of an entire organization. Commissioned officer personnel development focuses on branch qualifications and their positions normally require management of several areas, while warrant officer development is technically-oriented with responsibility for management of a single functional area.

Although the Warrant Officer Corps has seen a lot of ups and downs, it's a survivor. Today, 15,500 warrant officers fine-tune 70 different Army technical occupational specialties.

Official spreads safety message to commanders

Command emphasis vital in reducing accidents on post

By Becky Obert
Bayonet staff writer

Col. Bert Hervey, commander of the U.S. Army Safety Center at Fort Rucker, Ala., visited Benning this week to talk about safety.

"When leadership is effectively applied to accident prevention efforts, the results are often spectacular," he said.

Hervey said this year promises to be the safest in history, if projections compiled by the safety center come true.

He said this success story is a result of leaders' involvement in the prevention of accidents.

"Accidents don't just happen; generally there is a systems failure," Hervey said.

Statistics show that many accidents happen when poorly trained soldiers perform duties they are not capable of executing properly. "You have to ask yourself, what is the proficiency of the people to do what you ask of them," he said.

There has to be a sustained commitment to excellence, embodied in high training standards, he said. This must exist at the lowest level possible.

"NCOs are in the best position to enforce a safety program, because they're with the troops the most," he said. The key to an effective program is in attitudes.

"We want to create a 'brother's keeper' environment, where people look after each other," Hervey said. "Closely aligned to this is a caring attitude towards your soldiers."

Leaders who care about the welfare of their soldiers are motivated to ensure their safety, he said.

"It's a kind of tough caring, taking the time to help young soldiers mature," he said. "These young men think they're immortal, that nothing can hurt them. It's your job to help them learn better."

Hervey said that commanders have great leeway in giving troops remedial training, the guidelines of which are outlined in Army Regulation 600-20, Chapter 5. "A good commander will see that his soldiers have the training they need to be proficient," he said.

Hervey cautioned commanders, however, not to make safety the most important item on their agendas. "Safety isn't everything; it is a by-product, a window that reveals a commanders successes or weaknesses," he said.

Hervey said he recently read a report about a hospital where they were writing job performance standards for their people. The question in the nursery was, "How many babies can you drop and still work in the nursery?" The answer, of course, was none.

"In Army safety, we're dropping a lot of babies," he said. "If we think we're doing OK because we're dropping fewer babies this year than last, then we're really saying it's OK to drop babies, and it isn't OK.

"The Army needs a 'don't drop the baby' safety performance," he said.

Going regimental

Three Fort Benning battalions joined the regimental system last week, with nine more battalions to do so next week.

The 5th Student Battalion (Officer Candidate School) became the 3rd Battalion (OCS), 11th Infantry Regiment. The 1st Battalion became the 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment and the 2nd Training Battalion (Infantry Officer Basic Course) became the 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment.

The Army has been redesignating all the active force battalions in the past four years, in order to bring the regimental system on line.

The philosophy behind the regimental system is to preserve the history of distinguished units and give soldiers a sense of continuity and increase espirit de corps.

Because regulations require that regimental responsibility rest with the battalion command of the lowest numbered CONUS battalion, Lt. Col. Dewey George, commander of the 1st Battalion, will serve as the regiment commander for historical purposes.

Post schools open Tuesday

By Beth Middlemiss
Fort Benning Schools

Approximately 3,300 children are expected to be in place when the bell rings for the Fort Benning schools Tuesday morning.

School will start 45 minutes earlier than usual in all eight Fort Benning schools as heat relief hours will be in place until Oct. 5.

Parents have been registering their children throughout the month of August and enrollments appear to be up slightly higher than last year. Parents who have not registered their children are urged to do so today.

Students will return to find a new mathematics program at every grade level. The program places special emphasis on problem-solving skills and the use of math concepts. It also provides the students with a solid base on basic fundamentals and offers lots of opportunity for practicing basic skills.

Research has shown that childrn in the early grade levels are more successful when they begin to study a concept by manipulating concrete objects and then move from the concrete into abstract thinking processes. The new mathematics program is set up to allow students to move from concrete to abstract. It also provides students opportunities to use computers to solve math problems and to receive practice in using hand-held calculators.

Selected classes at Fort Benning will be learning to use a new computer program designed to teach children to use the computer for problem-solving. The program, Logowriter, can be used by children at any grade level in all subject areas.

Approximately 50 Fort Benning teachers were trained to teach Logowriter this summer and the program will be expanded in the years to come based on this year's evaluation. The Fort Benning schools are fortunate to be equipped with home computers in each school and Logowriter will provide children with yet another tool for self-expression while helping them to move closer to computer literacy.

Students returning to Dexter, Loyd, McBride and Wilson schools will see construction in process at their schools. Additional classrooms are being constructed and the library/media center is being expanded. While construction is always an inconvenience, particularly in the library/media centers, the schools will be better able to meet children's needs when they are completed next spring.

This year will be the year of the U.S. Constitution and many social studies activities are planned to allow Benning students to participate in the national celebration.

The opening of the school year will also be the first day at Fort Benning for 17 teachers who were employed this summer to replace retiring or departing teachers. The new teachers represent a blend of teachers fresh from college and experienced teachers who were selected from a large number of applicants.

Dr. Rolla W. Baumgartner, school superintendant, expressed appreciation for the communities' support as the schools went through an extended registration schedule this year for the first time. He noted that in previous years all schools had registered students in one day, but this year's registration was extended over a two-week period to accomodate parents' vacation plans and to reduce waiting time during registration.

Teachers reported to work this week to prepare for the new school year. "The schools and their staffs are ready," said Baumgartner, "and we look forward to an outstanding year."

Revised reporting schedule in use during hot weather

Fort Benning Schools

Students attending Fort Benning schools will be going to school earlier in the morning this fall in an effort to beat the heat.

Schools begin their day 45 minutes earlier and dismiss 45 minutes earlier for the first five weeks of school following action by the Benning school board in July.

The changed school hours will provide students with more time in school during the cool morning hours and shorten the time during the high afternoon heat.

All school times will advance by 45 minutes to include Tuesday early dismissal times. School will revert to normal times on Oct. 5. Heat relief hours will again resume on May 9 through the end of school on June 7. A chart showing early and normal starting times for each school is shown below.

Pacific next target of Soviet aggression

Association of the U.S. Army

With most of the world's attention directed toward the Persian Gulf, the Middle East or Central America, the breadth and scope of the Soviet Union's military and diplomatic initiatives in the whole Pacific region have received scant acknowledgement. Few Western strategists seem to have listened when Gen. Secretary Gorbachev outlined the Soviet Union's campaign for increasing its influence thoughout Asia and the Pacific, but it is becoming increasingly evident that the Russians are proceeding apace to make the Pacific the next Soviet lake.

Evidence abounds of the changing military balance in the Pacific. In the last 20 years, the Soviets have doubled their surface navy and air fleets there. During the same period, Soviet gorund forces in East Asia doubled to nearly half a million men in some 53 divisions. They have developed the Vietnamese port of Cam Ranh Bay into the site of the largest concentration of Soviet aircraft and naval units deployed outside the Warsaw Pact. In the last 18 months, the Soviet Pacific fleet has been bolstered by the addition of three new surface combatants — a nuclear-powered guided-missile cruiser and two guided-missile destroyers. These forces are backed by at least 1,700 tactical aircraft and about 40 modern Backfire extended-range bombers.

In the past, American policy-makers appeared to view the Soviet presence in Asia mainly as a military threat. Today, however, the threat is just as much economic and diplomatic. Each time the United States has stumbled in its relations with nations along the Pacific rim, the Soviets have been quick to take up the slack.

New Zealand's withdrawal from the ANZUS Pact, the crisis in South Korea and the communist insurgency in the Philippines are stark reminders that the United States can no longer take our Pacific alliances for granted.

The growing threat of Soviet destabilization in the vulnerable states of the Pacific rim demands that the United States government face up to the economic, diplomatic and military threats to the nations of that region. These are challenges we dare not ignore.

Safety comes from doing things right

By Tom Fix
USAIC Public Affairs Office

"We have not been doing too well," Maj. Gen. Kenneth C. Leuer said in his opening remarks to his monthly safety meeting.

I could sense care and concern in his voice; it was also reflected in the number in attendence. Classroom 7 was filled with more than 100 commanders and command sergeants major.

It was the largest safety meeting in recent memory.

Leuer's remark was directed toward the recent rash of accidents and deaths that have occurred to Fort Benning soldiers.

In the first 52 days of the present quarter, the trend of the past several years seems to be repeating itself as four Fort Benning soldiers have died in accidents.

In addition, 41 soldiers have been injured in accidents of one kind or another.

During the two previous years, the 4th quarter was similarly hard on the Fort Benning community. In the 4th quarter FY 1985, 8 deaths and 169 injuries occurred. In 4th quarter 1986, there were 8 deaths and 91 injured soldiers.

"The post commander wanted to reinforce his safety philosopy to the chain of commmand," said Fred Young, post safety officer.

Young said Leuer's philosophy stresses that, "safety is a by-product of proficiency. Is the unit doing what it is supposed to do?"

But how do you eliminate accidents that are, by their very nature and definition, unexpected and without design?

"In the nearly 31 years of military service, most of the accidents of which I have been aware did not have to happen," Leuer said.

Statistics prove him right.

According to the National Safety Council, 85 percent of all accidents result because of unsafe acts, which translates into doing something dumb.

But here is the rub. How many people would knowingly do something dumb?

More than you think.

Yet, how many people do you know who drive around town with the seat belts laying on the seat, or who run during darkness without reflectorized clothing?

It's common knowledge that very few highway patrols have to unbuckle a corpse out of a wreck. Or don't people know?

It's also common knowledge that most automobile accidents happen within 25 miles of home. Or don't people know?

The care and concern of the meeting was also reflected by the guest speaker, Col. Bert Hervey, commander of the Army's Safety Center at Fort Rucker, who emphasized the role that knowledge plays in preventing accidents..

"Safety is the bi-product of enforced standards," he said. "It's doing the job right, by-the-book."

If most accidents are avoidable, and if knowing the right procedure or having the correct data prevents accidents, then training by the book certainly makes sense.

That says that safety is a reachable goal.

And if education is a key to preventing accidents, so is caring. The type of caring that means taking the time to learn the correct way. Then making sure that those under your care — family or soldiers — know the right way, and do it.

So how do you make a person care?

Leaders can educate, remind, inspect and re-inspect. But the individual also has to care — the individual must remember there is a reason for doing it by the book.

The individual must keep in mind that he or she also holds a key — that the trained, knowledgable person is not prone to commit unsafe acts.

It boils down to remembering to do it right, to be safe.

And here imagination is the key. Use whatever reminds you to do it right. It may be a song, a rhyme, or a slick slogan. If it rings true to the ear, it just might ring true to a tired or hurried mind.

Several examples that have worked for me come to mind. If it can happen, it will happen and it will happen to me. It only takes seven-tenths of a second to die. If they can't see you on the road, you're the first thing they'll hit.

Take your pick, but pick life. Make a conscious effort to remember that life can end all so abruptly — to anyone, anytime, anywhere.

As the post commander aptly said, "It happens at the grass root level."

The heart of the matter is doing it right, being proficient.

Both leaders and individuals have their part to do. This team effort will reduce accidents and save peoples lives.

Editor's note: The Bayonet would like to hear from you if you have a phrase or thought that helps you remember to do it right the first time. Whatever has worked for you may work for someone else. You never know if you will get a second chance.

'Soldier' snivels about hot Georgia weather

By Clyde Snively
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Greetings. Snively's the name, writing's the game. I was just plucked out of the far north by those wonderful men and their computer machines at MILPERCEN to work on the "Bayonet" staff.

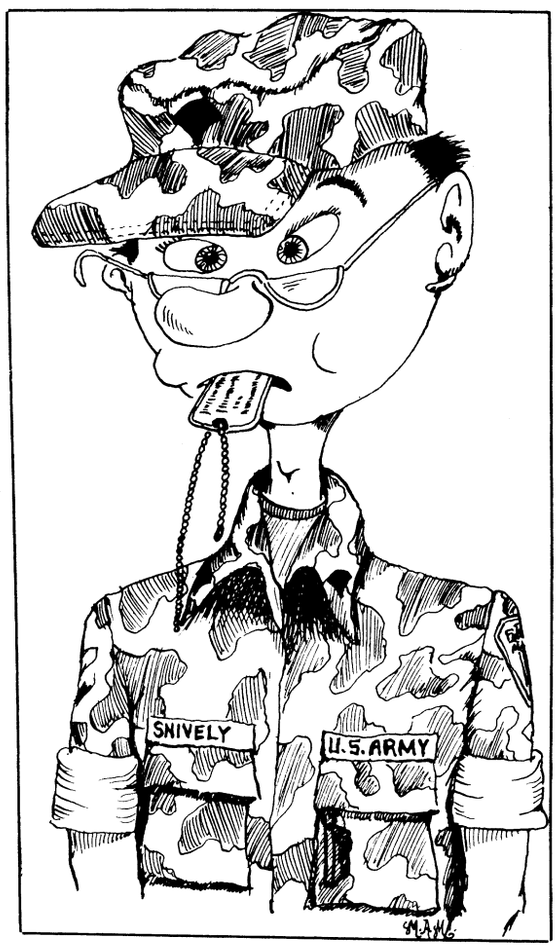
"Oh, good, a reporter," madame acting-editor said in her North Carolina twang that put me in mind of the sound of a cat that has it's tail yanked.

"Can you write," she asked.

"I wrote for the Fort Drum Sentinel," I answered. "Even had a weekly column."

"How special," she said. "Anyone ever read it?"

"The general must have," I said.



"Oh," she said rather skeptically.

"Yep," I said. "He sent a personal message to the public affairs officer, asking, 'What's this rubbish doing on page 2? If you have to run it, put it in the back of the paper.'"

"Well, that's just great," she said. "Maybe we can talk the editor into letting you write some columns. People around here don't appreciate my sense of humor and I'm getting tired of answering their letters."

So, since it appears that I'm going to be your periodic columnist, I guess I'd better tell you a little about myself.

I am, perhaps, the seniorest spec four in the Army. If the cut-off score doesn't drop, I may retire at this rank. I come with the usual accouterments — my wife, Emma, a son, Bubba, a daughter, Clydette; and a dog named Ralf.

The poor dog hasn't stopped panting since we crossed the Mason-Dixon line. I wanted to leave her up north, but Bubba insisted that a dog's fur coat serves as an insulator and would keep her cool. Tell that to Ralf.

Not that the dog is suffering alone. The entire family is wondering who turned the sauna on. Bubba asked if there wasn't a state law that mandated air conditioners in cars.

It's not that we in upstate New York don't know what hot weather is. I can truthfully say that we had at least one day of 90-degree heat all four years we were there.

Most people, when you tell them you came from New York, think "Big Apple," "Broadway," and "curb-to-curb traffic jams." They don't realize there is another New York. In fact NYC residents generally don't admit to having an "upstate" area. They think there are still Indians roaming the woods just across the Hudson River.

We are not without our fame up there. Two Decembers ago we were recognized in "USA Today" for our 108 inches of snow during that month. And, of course, the world now knows that most of the 10th Mountain Division is up there.

As different as the climates are, so is everything else. At Fort Drum, you could go for weeks without seeing an officer. Down here, I've developed bursitis in my shoulder from all the saluting. There must be enough

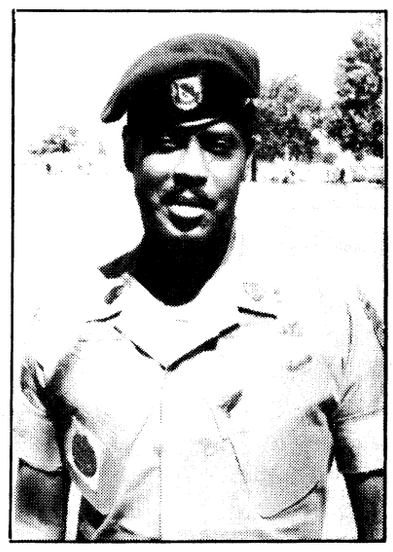
VARIOUS VOICES / If you could change one thing about the Army, what would it be?

SFC Charles Osborne, Company B, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, The School Brigade — "I would like to see Congress bring our pay up to what it ought to be. They need to keep our scale on line with the civilian sector."

Capt. Paul Hurley, S-3, The School Brigade — "I would change the personnel turbulence (people switching back and forth so much). I think the units going back to the regimental system is a step in the right direction, because it will add a sense of continuity."



Pvt. 2 Karen Huber, Company A, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, The School Brigade — "I'd increase public awareness about the Army. A lot of people don't know exactly what the Army does and I think it is important that they know."

Sp4 Michael Lapre, 988th Military Police Company — "I would try to do away with some of the paperwork we do in the Army. There is way too much done; we have to do some for everything and I don't think it's necessary."

Sgt. Regina McKinnon, Company B, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, The School Brigade — "I don't really think I'd like to change anything about the Army. I'm content with things the way they are."

CSM Eddie Roberts, 1st Battalion, 507th Parachute Infantry Regiment — "I'd like to see more females in the military."

Fair, Religious Expo offers entertainment, information

Chaplain's Office

The Family Information Fair/Religious Expo is a joint effort between DPCA and the chaplain's office. This event will take place on Saturday, Aug. 29, from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. at the new Youth Activity Center located at the corner of Baltzell and McIver streets.

The FIF is designed to entertain, while providing critical information to the members of the Fort Benning community. There are numerous horror stories associated with the problems facing the Army family when the sponsor is required to go on extended training or in times of war. These problems can be avoided!

Such questions as, what will my family do if I deploy tomorrow?, or what will I do if my husband leaves tomorrow on emergency orders?, are common concerns of the military family. In addition, the retiree community wonders how to become more involved with the Armed Forces they served so loyally. Finally, the civilian community at Benning is often uninformed about the many facilities and services available for their use as a support group to the Armed Services.

The Army has made a major commitment to establish support service for the military family. However, you must know what is available and who to contact in order to take advantage of this system. Virtually every organization that deals with Fort Benning military and civilian population will be available at this event. The directorate of engineering and housing will provide housing referral information, Army Community services will provide family member employment services, while Staff Judge Advocate will offer assistance with wills, taxes and general legal assistance, to name only a few.

The Religious Education Expo will provide information for every family member on all chapel/denominational services and activities such as Sunday School, CCD, Choir, etc. The Expo will afford you the opportunity to ask questions regarding the services and activities, as well as the opportunity to sign up and to participate in them.

Radio FM 93.3 will be here to broadcast and interview.

Entertainment is scheduled throughout the day at the Family Information Fair and includes

Equality Day recalls struggle to obtain voting rights for women

By Becky Obert
Bayonet staff writer

Wednesday is Women's Equality Day, which marks the 64th anniversary of the passage of the 19th Amendment to the Constitution.

The amendment reads, "The right of citizens to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any State on account of sex."

Simple enough words, but the struggle to make them law was long and bitter.

It began in Seneca Falls, N.Y., in 1848 with the first women's rights convention. Elizabeth Cady Stanton drafted a suffrage amendment to be added to the final resolution the conference would make, but most of those present rejected the idea as being too radical. The vote to add the amendment passed by a narrow margin.

The amendment stated, "Resolved, that it is the duty of the women of this country to secure to themselves their sacred right to the election franchise."

From this radical beginning, it was a long, uphill fight for the women in the suffrage movement.

Early feminists were treated with scorn and ridicule by most people. Men argued that giving women the vote would cancel out the vote of their husbands, and make women too masculine. Yet women were required to pay property taxes along with male property owners, leading to the historical cry from feminists, "No taxation without representation."

The need for all women to join together, black and white, rich and poor, was poignantly emphasized by Sojourner Truth, a black woman who addressed the 1851 Akron, Ohio Suffrage Convention, with her "And Ain't I a Woman" speech.

Indeed, from the very beginning, it was clear that obtaining equal rights meant equal to all, including blacks.

In 1868, the first women's suffrage amendment was introduced into Congress. Then in 1878, the "Anthony Amendment" was introduced in Congress by Sen. Sargent of California.

Times were slowly changing, however, and in 1869, Wyoming became the first territory to allow women to vote and serve on juries.

The next year, Utah enacted women's suffrage and Utah women voting in city elections became the first in the country to vote.

From 1870 to 1910, 480 campaigns for passage of the amendment in 33 states resulted in 17 referenda, only two of which (in Colorado and Idaho) were successful.

In 1890, the Georgia Women's Suffrage Association was founded in Columbus by H. Augusta Howard, with a total of six members. As a result of her efforts, the National Woman Suffrage Association held its yearly convention in Atlanta, Ga., in 1895.

Also in 1890, Wyoming was admitted to the union with women's suffrage in its constitution. The state continued to be a frontrunner in women's rights. In 1910, Mary Bellamy became the first woman to be elected to a state legislature, followed by Jeanette Rankin, who in 1917 became the first woman elected to the U.S. House of Representatives. In 1925, Wyoming elected the first woman governor, Nellie Taylor.

In the early part of this century, women were going to jail for the movement. In 1917, silent suffrage pickets held banners outside the White House gate, and when the banners turned anti-war, the women were arrested for "obstructing sidewalk traffic." The women went on a hunger strike and were brutally force-fed.

Their efforts got them the attention they wanted, however, and in 1918, President Woodrow Wilson publicly supported women's suffrage.

On Aug. 26, 1920, Tennessee became the 36th state to ratify the 19th Amendment and it became a part of the U.S. Constitution.

It was 1921 before women in Georgia were allowed to vote, and 1970 before the Georgia General Assembly voted to ratify the amendment.

Mississippi carved its own special niche in history when it became the last state to ratify the amendment in 1984.

Editor's note: The Federal Women's Program is sponsoring a luncheon program commemorating Women's Equality Day Wednesday.

The luncheon begins at 11:45 a.m. in the Main NCO Club ballroom. A video presentation entitled "Women in Georgia Politics" will be shown at the luncheon. The film highlights women from Columbus, Ga., who worked during the early days of the sufferage movement to initiate the first Georgia Women's Political Conference in Atlanta.

The video provides information on how the presence of women in Georgia's political structure has made a difference in creating an equal opportunity environment from past to present in the state of Georgia.

Display teaches public of dangers in explosives

By Shawm Bryson
36th Engineer Group Correspondent

On Aug. 13, soldiers from the 89th Explosive Ordnance Detachment (E.O. Disposal), 67th Maintenance Battalion, 36th Engineer Group, gave a public awareness demonstration at Young Range.

Reporters from three local television stations, Channel 3 (WRBL), Channel 9 (WTVM) and Channel 38 (WLTZ) covered the demonstration to learn about the mission of the 89th. More importantly, the soldiers of the 89th together with the reporters, strived to better educate the public on the dangers of explosive ordnance.

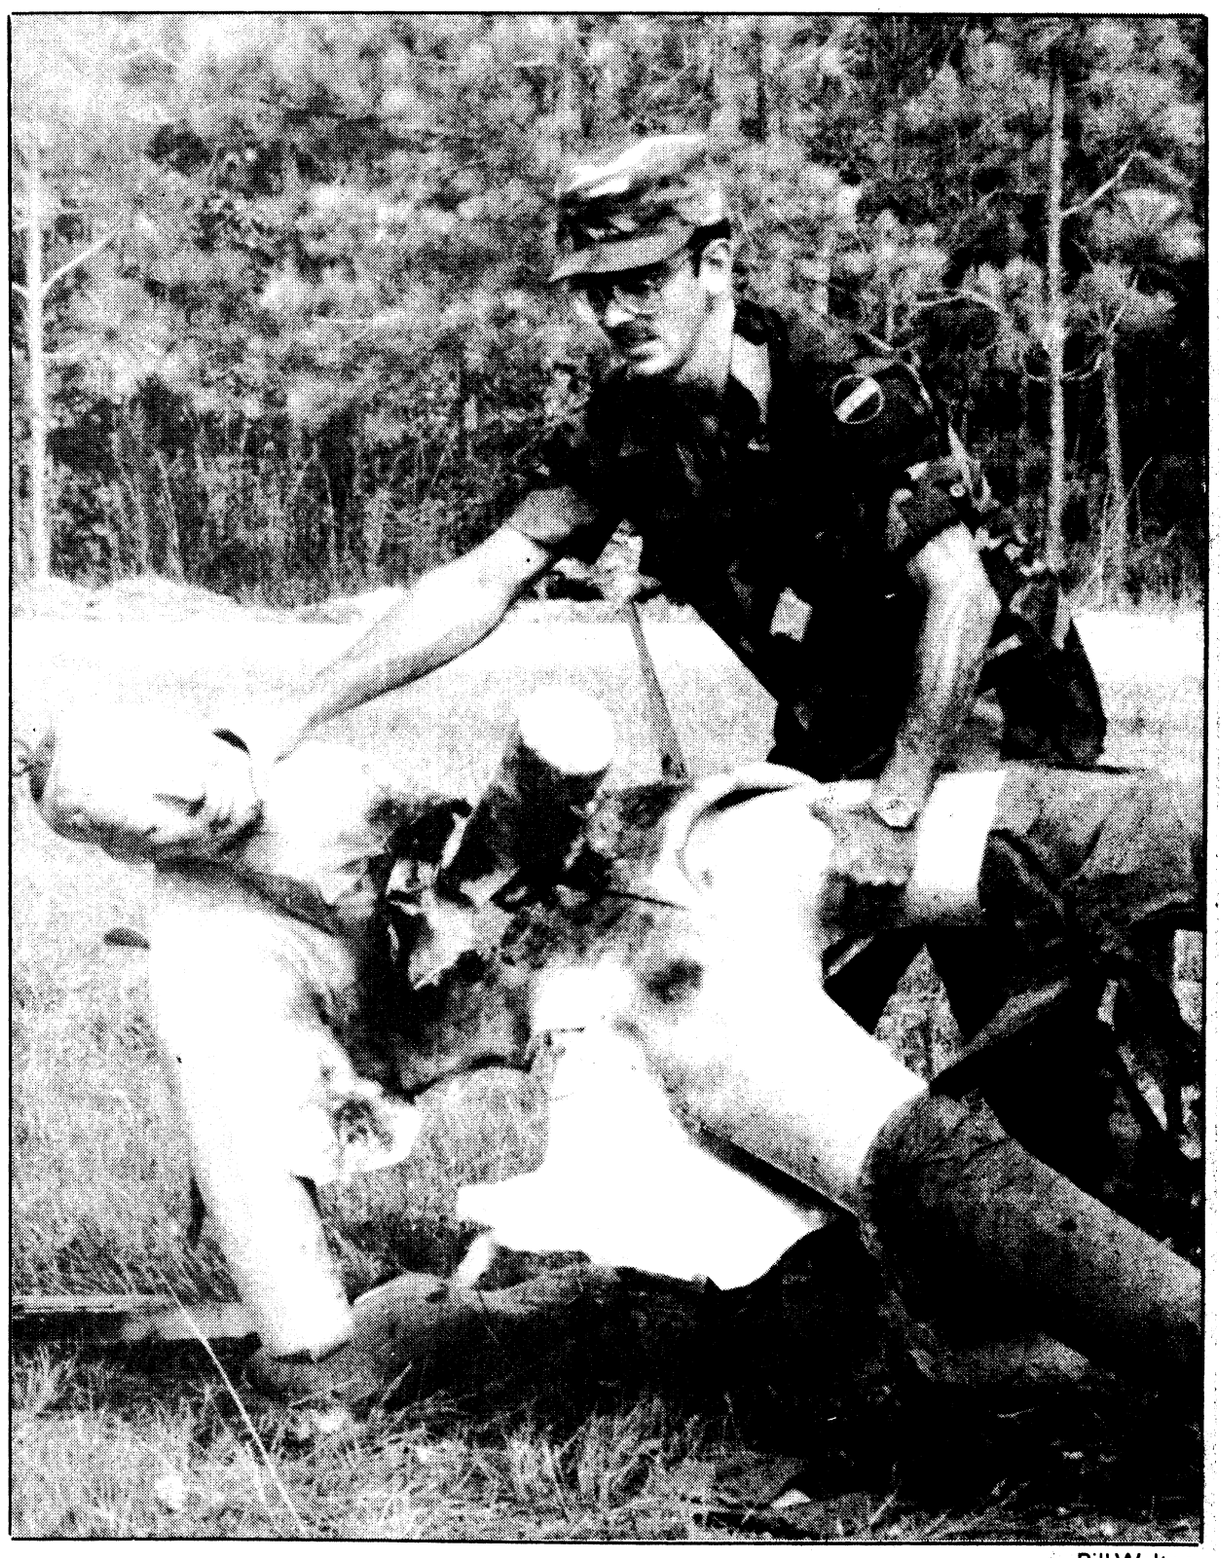
"Our job is to neutralize hazardous devices and ordnance in 44 Georgia counties and five Alabama counties," according to Staff Sgt. James A. Poole of the 89th. Although the 89th E.O.D. is under the 67th Maintenance Battalion, its higher headquarters is the Explosive Ordnance Disposal Control Center in Atlanta.

Poole said that many of the approximately 300 calls received by the 89th each year are made by people who find, for example, a grenade, mortar or hazardous device or package. "Instead of calling the police, many people are killed when they pick the device up causing it to detonate," Poole said. He added that another of the biggest problems occurs when military personnel decide to take some type of ordnance home as a souvenir and later a child finds it and is killed while playing with it.

"Some of the most common souvenirs are grenades," Poole said. "The souvenir problem is not a new one however, it has been around for a number of years."

According to Sgt. 1st Class David C. Collins, non-commissioned officer in charge of the 89th E.O.D., the 89th still receives calls involving Civil War ordnance that is over 200 years old. "We have received two call this year concerning Civil War ordnance which poses more of a threat because of crude production methods used then," Collins said.

To give the public a better understanding of just how dangerous "duds" can be, the 89th soldiers set up and armed four of the more commonly found explosives. This live demonstration included electrical and non-electrical blasting caps used in demolitions, an incenerary grenade used to burn through thick metal, a 40mm grenade and a 60mm projected mortar.



Sgt. Richard J. Lonsberry, of the 89th, said that the 40mm grenade, which is commonly found throughout most United States military reservations, kills more people each year than the other explosives.

However, the 89th does get calls involving more unique explosives. Poole said that the 89th recently received a call concerning the finding of a Czechoslovakian hand grenade from World War II.

Poole stressed that anyone who finds what they think might be a dangerous explosive device or package should not touch or pick it up. If such an item is found off post, the local police department should be notified immediately, Poole said.

If the item is found on post, the military police should be notified he said.

"Once we recieve a call, we take all our equipment to the site, including a remote x-ray which allows us to see inside any type of ammunition or package before trying to disarm it," said Spec. 4 Bruce A. Kruizenga, of the 89th E.O.D.

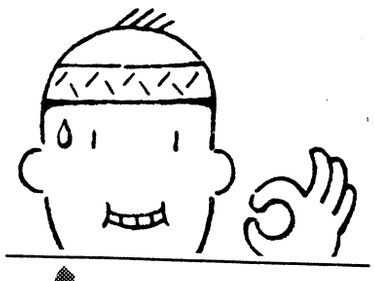
Up there, locals complained when it took them 30 seconds to get out on their version of Macon Road. They'd have a heart attack if you took them to Macon Road and told them they had to not only get ON it, but make a left turn, too.

Of course they'd be dumb enough to believe that people would stop and let them into the flow of traffic and then they'd be naive enough to think people would signal their turning intentions.

Ha. Ha.



I think the sweat rolling off people's wrists have rusted turn signals in place.

"WE FEEL GOOD ABOUT LEAVING JAMAHL AT THE DAY-CARE CENTER BECAUSE THEY TREAT HIM LIKE HE'S THEIR OWN CHILD."

SSG Ken and SP4 Jacquie Farmer

"We never really considered leaving Jamahl with anyone except a private sitter. But our first visit to the new Child Development Center here at Fort Hood sure changed our minds.

"We know our son is well taken care of. So we can concentrate on our jobs without worrying about what he's doing.

"He learns, instead of just playing. He counts, sings, says his ABC's. And they teach him to be more independent.

"Jacquie and I have peace of mind when Jamahl's at the Center. They take care of him, and he's learning, and those are the two most important things."

Support battalion provides vital lifeline of supplies, services

By Kevin J. Howerton
197th Infantry Brigade correspondent

EDITOR'S NOTE: In September, the 197th Infantry Brigade will mark the 25th anniversary of its activation into the Regular Army at Fort Benning. The following is the fourth in a series of stories illustrating the history and traditions of the units of the 197th.

The 197th Infantry Brigade has the primary mission of being ready to deploy and fight as a separate brigade. The cornerstone of this enviable status is the 197th Support Battalion.

Originally formed in 1967, the 197th Support Battalion is the lifeline of supplies and services that sustains soldiers in tactical situations. The Battalion consists of a headquarters company and four letter companies.

Headquarters company provides command and control of the Battalion's activities. It also provides the 197th with control of supply, ammunition and maintenance programs through the Brigade Material Management Center.

Keeping track of people is the mission of Company A. They handle personnel and administrative services to include management, records, actions and mail, In time of actual combat, Company A soldiers would maintain personnel strength through casualty feeder reports.

Company B is the medical company for the Brigade. They supply medical and ambulance support, as well as operating a medical supply warehouse. On major field exercises, the company is responsible for setting up the Brigade's field hospital, conducting sick call and providing medical and dental care for the soldiers.

The survivability of the Brigade in combat is also dependent on constant supplies of food and fuel. Company C is the supply and transportation company, which distributes supplies from ammunition to milk. The company also has a water purification team, which is capable of providing water for the entire Brigade.

Company D has the mission of supplying direct support level maintenance and repair parts to the Brigade's units. Soldiers from the company repair track-and-wheel vehicles, missiles, communications equipment and small arms. The unit also insures that requisitioned parts are sent forward with a minimum of delay.

On Sept. 20, 1982, the Battalion was officially awarded the nickname "Dependables."

Deployment marks largest rail movement ever

By Sally Roberts
197th Infantry Brigade correspondent

The 197th Infantry Brigade deployments to the National Training Center at Fort Irwin, Calif., are much more than a combat training experience. The deployments are also valued for the experience of the movement itself.

In order for the Brigade to maintain a level of rapid deployability, soldiers benefit from the experience of preparing vehicles and equipment for movement and then loading the shipment onto rail cars for the long haul West.

The "railhead" operation is one of the biggest jobs the soldiers perform prior to a deployment. According to Capt. Chip Brown, officer-in-charge of the 197th Infantry Brigade "Desert Hammer" railhead operation, shipping vehicles by rail is an economical and necessary part of the movement.

In preparation for operation "Desert Hammer," which begins with the first flight of soldiers leaving Lawson Army-Airfield today, 197th Infantry Brigade soldiers loaded more than 1,000 wheeled and tracked vehicles onto 325 rail cars. According to the Fort Benning transportation division, this is the largest rail movement ever to leave from Fort Benning.

Three separate trains moved from the Sand Hill railhead site here, headed for the off-load site at the Marine Corps Logistics Base at Yermo, Calif. The cross-country movement takes about nine days.

From Yermo, the advance party of Brigade soldiers will convoy the vehicles nearly 40 miles to Fort Irwin, where the Brigade will engage in two weeks of tactical desert training.

Soldiers get ready for desert heat at NTC

By George Mingee
197th Infantry Brigade correspondent

The temperature is 105 degrees in the shade and a soldier is changing his tire. All of a sudden he feels faint and passes out, he didn't consume enough water, so now he's a heat casualty.

The National Training Center is one place that soldiers must watch their own water consumption and govern their activities.

Whenever you have a large number of soldiers working together, fatigue becomes a factor. When your body gets overheated or overworked you tend to take shortcuts to finish the job, that's when accidents happen.

When accidents do happen, a safety specialist is called out to invesitgate. A large number of accidents can be prevented if the soldier just takes the time out to think.

"Safety is an attitude you develop to keep yourself and others free from accidents," said Patrick M. Adams, a sfety specialist.

NTC is a big test of a soldier's abilities. Soldiers can accomplish the mission without injuries, if they take care of themselves and watch out for unsafe activities.

Captain gets grant to earn doctorate

By Becky Obert
Bayonet staff writer

Franklin

A Fort Benning soldier has been awarded an Army Medical Department scholarship to attend a doctoral program.

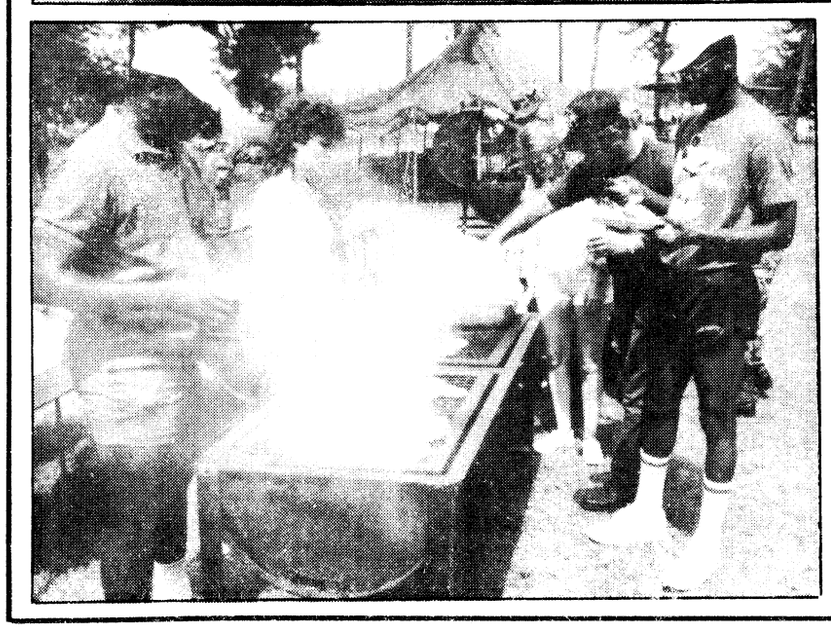
Capt. Tony R. Franklin, the chief of the Primary Care Support Branch, Clinical Support Division, Martin Army Community Hospital, said he was notified about the scholarship July 20.

The scholarship is a three-year, fully funded program, he said. This means he will be paid his regular salary, plus be reimbursed for all tuition, books and fees for attending school. Once he competes the program, he will owe the Army a six-year commitment, he said.

Franklin graduated from Auburn University in 1976 with a degree in psychology and was commissiond through the ROTC program. He was named the distinguished military graduate of his ROTC class.

Prior to his job at the hospital, he served as an instructor, and later as executive officer of the Leadership Branch, Combined Arms and Tactics Division, U.S. Army Infantry School.

Education has always been a top priority for Franklin. In his nearly four years at the USAIS, he also earned a master's degree in management science from Troy State University and completed the Command and General Staff College course work through correspondence courses.



While at USAIS, he was named instructor of the month in February, and instructor of the quarter for second quarter, fiscal year 1987. He now will compete for instructor of the year.

Franklin said he hasn't been accepted in a doctoral program yet, but hopes to attend either Auburn University or Florida State, and earn a doctorate in psychology. Once he has his doctorate, he said he hopes to work in community mental health in a clinical setting.

Until he starts school in the fall of 1988, Franklin said he plans to spend more time with his family.

He is the son of James and Joyce Franklin of Enterprise, Ala.

MACH blood bank meets national quality standards

Martin Army Community Hospital

Martin Army Coomunity Hospital has been granted renewal of accreditation by the American Association of Blood Banks (AABB) and the College of American Pathologists (CAP), according to Dr. (Lt. Col.) Moo H. Cho, chief of the department of pathology.

Accreditation follows an intensive on-site inspection by specially-trained representatives of both associations and establishes that the level of medical, technical and administrative performance within the facility meets or exceeds the rigorous standards set by the AABB and CAP.

By successfully meeting those requirements, Martin Army Community Hospital can join more than 2,200 similar facilities across the United States and abraod that have earned the accreditation rating and recognition.

Cho said, "The AABB's inspection and accreditation procedures are voluntary as are those of CAP. It is not legally necessary for a blood bank, transfusion service or clinical laboratory to be accredited, but, like many others, our facility has sought accreditation because it represents a level of professional and medical expertise that meets and exceeds government regulations."

"The primary goal of the programs are to assist facilities like ours to achieve excellence and thus provide higher quality blood, blood components and laboratory service to our patients," he said.

Housing releases eligibility dates

Post Housing Office

Whenever a soldier applies for military family housing, he/she is given an eligibility date. This date is not necessarily the date of application. Each waiting list is maintained and housing is assigned in accordance with the "eligibility date." If, when called for quarters, a soldier is unable to move because of a lease, TDY, sickness, etc., he/she will be passed over until they are available for quarters, but they will maintain their original "eligibility date."

As of Aug. 17, the eligibility date of the last person to be assigned quarters in each category is as follows:

Jr. NCO—2 BR/Jan. 6
Jr. NCO—3 BR/Jul. 18
Jr. NCO—4 BR/Aug. 13
Jr. NCO—5 BR/May 2, 1985

looking for the unusual, such as snakes and colorful insects. Adams added, "Leave the snakes and animals alone. You never know what kind of diseases they might be carrying. Insects can also prove to be very dangerous, so shake your clothes out before putting them back on and dump your boots out to see if anything might have crawled inside."

A good rule of thumb is anything that walks or crawls should be left alone; the life you save may be your own.

Training is a vital role in a soldier's life, but without safety, it can put a sudden halt to training. A careless accident might have been prevented if someone just took the time to think.

Home care providers give kids love, variety

Child Development Services

Custer Terrace and Marne Road Child DevelopmentCenters (CDC) provide quality full day-care service that is affordable, convenient to the worksite and readily accessible to all military families.

Centralized programs are often preferred by parents because of the developmental stimulation of the child-oriented settings.

The centers can offer advantages that homes cannot, such as child-sized equipment and toilet facilities and more space for play and interest centers. Children seem to prefer the compansionship of their peers.

When working in groups, children learn to consider the rights and feelings of others. They discover the excitement of learning and centers stimulate interest in readiness.

Custer Terrace CDC has a capacity of 82. It is located in the Custer Terrace housing area in Building 2682. Marne Road CDC has a 60-child capacity and is located on the Main PX Mall, Marne Road, Building 9230. The hours of operation in both centers are 6:30 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. Monday through Friday. Both facilities offer full day developmental child care services to military families and civil service workers at Fort Benning.

Custer Terrace CDC accepts children who are six weeks to six years of age. Marne Road CDC cares for children from 18 months to six years. Service for school-aged children (6-12) are available only during summer months.

The children receive supervised care by trained caregivers. The majority of the staff are regularly scheduled caregivers who are the primary caregivers for specific children.

The staff recieves in-service training through workshops and self-paced courses. The adult/child ratio is 1:5 in infant areas and 1:8 for toddlers. It is 1:10 for pre-schoolers. Other specifics concerning mixed groups are detailed in the AR-608-10.

One of the obvious disadvantages of CDC is the number of spaces available. Also, newborn care is not offered for children under six weeks of age.

The sliding scale on price for additional family members is helpful, but in large family, the cost could be a major consideration. The weekly full-time rate for infants to 18 months is $50, $40 a week for older children. A $5 reduction is given for each additional child. If a family had a six-week old infant, a 17-month old toddler and a three-year old child, the weekly full-time rate would be $130.

Some children do not adjust to the active atmosphere of a CDC and might be happier with a family caregiver.

Family Child Care (FCC) is a program whereby individuals are trained and certified to provide childcare in government quarters. Family Child Care homes are required to pass fire, safety and health inspections. Once inspections are completed, FCC—certified caregivers provide positive learning experiences and nutritionally-balanced meals for children aged four weeks to 12 years. The caregivers are enrolled in the Child Care Food Program (CCFP) sponsored by the United States Department of Agriculture (USDA).

In order to receive monetary reimbursement, the providers must meet minimum meal requirements.

Judy Cobb, nutrition technician for CDC, explains: "For a meal be reimbursable from USDA, it must contain a variety of foods, including milk, meat, fruit and/or vegetables and bread."

The caregivers maintain a warm and homelike atmosphere for the children in FCC-approved homes that are designed to meet the specific needs of the military families. Children of different ages can be cared for together as a family, rather than in separate groups as in a center-based facility.

Each FCC-certified provider is identified by the display of a rainbow sign in a window of her quarters. FCC homes can be conveniently located in your neighborhood or on the way to work.

While the neighborhood location can be a major consideration for school age children, it can also add a sense of security and closeness due to the child's familiarity of the area.

FCC is viewed as a small business. A contract is drawn up between the parents and providers. Fees may vary from one provider to another due to each provider setting her own rates. Rates may vary from $35 to $65 for full-time child-care on a weekly basis. Hourly care ranges from $1 to $1.25 an hour for the first child with many caregivers offering a reduced rate for the second child.

Many FCC providers offer flexible hours to meet the specific needs of parents who are involved with PT or a late FTX.

If you are interested in finding a neighborhood FCC caregiver, notice the colorful rainbow signs in your community or call 545-3328 for assistance. "Presently there are 71 FCC homes fully or provisionally-certified and 45 women are going through the certification process. At this time, Fort Benning has approximately 260 children enrolled in the FCC quarter-based homes," according to Jennifer Williams, Family Child Care director for Fort Benning.

English classes resume this fall

Free English language classes for those whom English is a second language will resume Sept. 8 at 9:30 a.m. at the Religious Education Center, Bldg. 229. Four levels of proficiency are offered, including beginning English, conversation and grammar.

New students are invited to attend. Volunteer teachers are urgently needed for this program.

For additional informatio., please call 545-2366.

September is education month

Along with the Religious Education Expo on Aug. 29, promotion day activities Aug. 30 and beginning the new "Sunday School year" on Sept. 6, the Protestant Sunday schools will celebrate two other occasions. They are the anniversary of the Sunday school and Religious Education month.

Due to the varied purposes of Sunday school, the varied locations of its origins and the inadequate record-keeping, it is impossible to say exactly how old Sunday school is.

Robert Raikes of England, known there as "the father of the Sunday school," established a Sunday school in the 1780s and his work quickly spread throughout England. His Sunday schools were of a dual purpose: teaching the Bible and affording the only opportunity for formal education that many of the children of the communities had, since they worked six days per week in factories.

In the United States, records indicate that John Wesley, while a missionary in Georgia, conducted Sunday school as early as 1735. Actually, however, Sunday school as we know it, came into prominence in the 1820s.

How old is the Sunday school at Fort Benning? There are no records to indicate the exact date that the Fort Benning Sunday school was organized, but individuals who were assignd here in the 1920s relate that a Sunday school was in existence then. One recent teacher in the Fort Benning Sunday school began teaching in 1942. Thus, we know that the importance of a Sunday school was realized early in the life of Fort Benning.

The month of September is observed as Religious Education month. During this month of new beginnings in school and Sunday school, everyone is invited and encouraged to come to Sunday School and make a new beginning in your personal religious education.

Catechetical Sunday planned for Sept. 20

The Confrateraity of Christian Doctrine (CCD) is a lay organization established in 1571 for the purpose of offering religious education to Catholic children, youth and adults. In 1905, Pope Pius X began a modern revival and expansion of the program when his directive, that CCD be established in every parish, was incorporated into Canon law. A decree of Vatican Council II reaffirmed the directive, and today the CCD in the U.S. has become the "basic cell of catechetical activity," as it includes numerous new developments outside the school system from the parish to national levels. In 1969, CCD became a division of the department of education of the U.S. Catholic Conference. According to recent figures some 5½ million Catholic children participate in its programs.

Each year, the U.S. Catholic Conference designates the third Sunday of September as "Catechetical Sunday." Every Catholic parish in the U.S. celebrates this day in some ceremony. To celebrate this day, the Fort Benning community will have a commissioning ceremony for the teachers and their aides.

The teachers, having completed a minimum of six hours training will be commissioned as Catechists by the pastor Chaplain Gott. The school year begins at 10 a.m. following Mass on Sept. 20.

Pre-marriage seminar planned for Catholics

There will be a pre-marriage seminar conducted in the Religious Education Center, Bldg. 229, Sunday from 1 to 6 p.m. Attendance at this seminar is required for all those who plan to be married in the Catholic church. For registration and information, call 545-2771.

Jesus' love makes all Christians equal

By Robert White
Family Life Chaplain

The equality in the American Society is relevant today. Races are equal; children are equal to adults; women are equal to men: The Constitution of the United States declares that..."all men are created equal." I beleive we are all equal, but different functions or roles are assigned to us by society.

Sociologists John and Letha Scanzoni in their book, "Men, Women and Change," discuss the changing roles of men and women in society.

Society has certain expectations of how a person should act because she is a female, or he is a male. These expectations are called "gender-related norms."

Certain norms are attached to various social positions. For example, attached to the social position of parent is the norm that parents should take care of their children. If we think of the whole cluster of norms attached to a social position, we have what sociologists call a role...sex roles or gender roles are the parts society assigns us to play in life, according to whether we enter this life as a baby girl or boy.

The social position of being female carries with it the female sex role which contains norms such as a girl is tender. Nice women are not aggressive. Women may display their emotions openly. Girls wear dresses, have long hair and play with dolls. Any significant departure from these norms may create negative responses from parents, teachers and others who are assignd by society to teach acceptable society norms.

Scanzoni moves next to the male-female equality question. "Among industrialized nations, the communist and socialist countries have made special attempts to eliminate inequalities between the sexes; yet vestiges of traditional sex-role patterns remain.

Some social scientists are persuaded that efforts towards full equality for women and men are doomed to failure unless men develop expressive qualities and share in domestic and childcare responsibilities at the same time that women develop instrumental qualities and aim toward achievement in the economic-opportunity system. Thus, all of life would be shared by both sexes, without disproportionate loads or privileges assigned to either."

My belief is the equality of women rest with the Bible, which shares with the reader God's expectations of men and women. Under the new covenant ratified by Jesus, all are sons of God through faith in Christ." Paul says, "There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither slave nor free man, there is neither male nor female for you are all one in Christ Jesus." (Gal. 3:28).

Those of us who share in this faith which Paul speaks of realize that we are all equal in God's mind. Therefore, there is no striving to be equal when we already are. The implications of this fact affirms us as human beings. I am free to love my neighbor rather than worry about being equal with him.

Knowledge the best defense against AIDS

By Evelyn D. Harris
American Forces Information Service

Knowledge is the best protectiona against AIDS (acquired immune deficiency syndrome) — which is why educational materials are an important part of DoD's AIDS prevention efforts.

Here's a quiz to test your knowledge. The answers are primarily based on information from two of the booklets DoD is using in its AIDS/HIV information program: the U.S. Public Health Service booklet, Facts About AIDS and AIDS and Your Job — Are There Risks?

Questions:

1. What is AIDS?
2. What are its symptoms?
3. How is AIDS transmitted?
4. Are health care workers at especially high risk for being infected with the HIV virus?
5. Are infected food handlers likely to spread the AIDS virus?
6. How long after HIV infection does a person develop AIDS?
7. Is there a danger of contracting AIDS from donating blood?
8. Is there a danger of a child's contracting AIDS from schoolmates?
9. Can AIDS be prevented?
10. Is there a cure for AIDS?

Answers

1. AIDS is a fatal disease that destroys a person's immune system. Therefore, people who have AIDS are unable to fight off diseases and infections that would not be a threat to people with healthy immune systems. These illnesses are called "opportunistic" infections.

2. In the early stages of infection with human immunodeficiency virus — the virus that causes AIDS — individuals show no symptoms. Early physical symptoms of AIDS-related complex or AIDS include tiredness, fever, loss of appetite and weight, diarrhea, night sweats and swollen glands. Some people develop neurological symptoms such as memory loss in the early stages. To otherwise rare opportunistic diseases associated with AIDS are pneumocystis pnuemonia, a sever form of pneumonia, and Kaposi's sarcoma, a form of cancer that first appears on the skin or inside the mouth.

3. The HIV virus is tansmitted through sexual contact or exposure to infected blood, chiefly through needle-sharing, or less commonly, through transfused blood and its components, infected mothers can also transmit it to their infants duing pregnancy, birth or shortly after birth.

4. According to the Atlanta-based Center for Disease Control, in spite of thousands of contacts with patients who have AIDS, there have been only six reported cases caused by needle sticks and three cases in workers exposed to infected blood through their skin or mouth. The workers involved were not following recommended precautions to protect themselves. Health care and rescue workers are not at higher risk if they follow recommended precautions.

5. No. AIDS is not transmitted through food. However, all food service workers should observe good personal hygiene and sanitary food-handling procedures to avoid transmitting other diseases.

6. The time between infection and the onset of symptoms seems to range from six months to five years or more. Based on current knowledge, symptoms of illness appear in about 30-percent of infected individuals within five years. Some have estimated that up to 50-percent of infected individuals will eventually develop AIDS.

7. No. Blood banks and other blood collection centers in the United States and on U.S. military installations overseas use sterile equipment and disposable needles.

8. No. AIDS is difficult tp catch as long as persons do not engage in high-risk behaviors such as unprotected sex or sharing needles. The risk of transmitting the virus from daily contact at work, school or home is so rare as to be non-existent for practical purposes.

9. Yes. However, since there is no vaccine that can prevent infection, prevention depends on avoiding high-risk behavior. Not using drugs and having a faithful relationship with a monogamous, uninfected partner virtually elim inates the chance of infection. Using condoms can greaty reduce the risk of infection.

10. There is no known cure for AIDS. However, there are several drugs undergoing trials that have shown some ability to inhibit the AIDS virus. The Department of Defense is currently funding studies of one of these, azidothymidine, or AZT, at four Veterans Administration medical centers and in military hospitals.

CHAMPUS will now share the cost of AZT, which is sold under the trade name "Retrovir." CHAMPUS coverage is retroactive to March 18, 1987, the date the Food & Drug Administration approved the drug for sale. The drug was formerly only used on an experimental basis.

Uncle Sam looking for a few good warrant officer candidates

U.S. Army Recruiting Command

Uncle Sam still wants you, especially if you qualify as a warrant officer candidate.

An Army Recruiting Command team will visit soldiers at Fort Benning Aug. 27 and 28 to select qualified candidates for training as warrant officers.

At the beginning of this year, U.S. Army Recruiting Command added warrant officer recruiting to a long line of recruiting missions.

To find technically and tactically-qualified candidates for the warrant officer corps, two recruiting teams from Fort Sheridan are traveling to Army posts throughout the country and overseas locations. Training for overseas soldiers might be delayed, depending on PCS eligibility.

Recruiting team members quickly point out that they recruit candidates for training, not as warrant officers. Specialty branches must train, certify and appoint the candidate to warrant officer status.

Not every warrant officer specialty is always being recruited. Recruiting is targeted to meet available training quotas.

Proponents set guidelines for qualifying candidates as warrant officers, and the recruiters contact soldiers who meet those requirements. After application begins, the Recruiting Command sends a packet to the proponent, where a technical review of the applications ensures the minimum qualifications are met. If the applicant qualifies, the packet is then boarded at Recruiting Command headquarters. Each branch is represented on the board by a voting member who selects the best-qualified applicants.

Three briefings will be conducted in Building 4, classroom 53. The briefings are open to enlisted active-duty national guard or reserve soldiers.

They are scheduled for 10 a.m. to noon and from 2-4 p.m. on the 27th and from 8:30-10:30 a.m. on Aug. 28.

There will be a briefing for warrant officers on Aug. 28 to discuss the new assession program.

To make arrangements to attend the class of your choice call Miss Lee at 545-1917/1402.

Recruiters say that the application process has been simplified and processing time has been cut to make it easier on the soldier. There are no procedural differences between Regular Army and Army Reserve applications.

Active-duty soldiers who apply for warrant officer training need to complete DA Forms 61 and 160, Verification of Clearance, and obtain an endorsement from their company and battalion commanders. Application also requires an official photograph and DA Forms 2-1 and 2A. Military Intelligence and Special Forces applicants must include DA Form 398.

Soldiers applying for warrant officer training should mail packets to Headquarters, U.S. Army Recruiting Command, ATTN: USARCRO-SM-A, Fort Sheridan, Ill. 60037-6000.

Officials seek to clear up confusion

Army News Service

WASHINGTON — Certain terms of reference need to be kept in perspective as the Defense Department moves toward "fully operational" status for its latest unified command, the U.S. Special Operations Command at MacDill Air Force Base, Fla.

"Sometimes," said Maj. Doug McCreight, "people get confused over the terms, titles and functions involved in the recent reorganization of the military's special operations units."

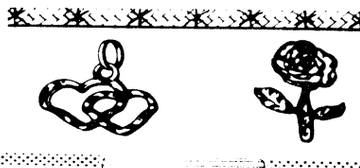
As a staff officer in the Army's Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Operations and Plans at the Pentagon, McCreight deals daily with such matters affecting the Army's role in the special operations mission. Army's lead headquarters for special operations is the 1st Special Operations Command at Fort Bragg, N.C. — the Army component of the new, joint-service command at MacDill.

Activated in fiscal year 1983, the 1st Special Operations Command consists of the various Army special operations forces drawn from throughout the active and reserve components. These forces include a number of special forces groups, the 75th Ranger Regiment, a psychological operations battalion, a civil affairs unit and several special operations aviation units, as well as a support unit and signal unit.

Although based at Bragg, the John F. Kennedy Special Warfare Center and School falls under the operational control of the U.S. Special Operations Command.

McCreight noted that all civil affairs units and psychological operations organizations from both the active and reserve components are awaiting a Defense Department determination as to the desirability of incorporating them into the unified command.

In abbreviated reference, the 1st Special Operations Command is knownas 1st SOCOM, while the U.S. Special Operations Command goes by the short name USSOCOM.



McCreight said, "You have to be careful to use the right prefix 1st or US so as to keep the two commands properly identified." He went on to define "special operations forces" as those multipurpose forces organized, trained and equipped to respond rapidly to various contingencies throughout the world."

Recreation center offers reasonably priced vacation

By Becky Obert
Bayonet staff writer

If you're longing to get away for a Florida beach vacation, think about a trip to Destin.

The U.S. Army Destin Recreation Area offers soldiers and retirees a low cost place to stay. The center has 2- and 3-bedroom cabins and recently added a 10-unit motel.

The cabins are roomy with a combination kitchen and dining room, living room with television, bathroom with shower and bedrooms. Two-bedroom cottages sleep 6 to 8 people, while three-bedroom cabins can sleep 10 to 12 people comfortably.

Cabins are equipped with stoves, refrigerators and cooking and eating utensils. Sheets and blankets are provided, but bring your own towels.

Maid service is not available during your stay, so if you need more clean sheets, check at the manager's office.

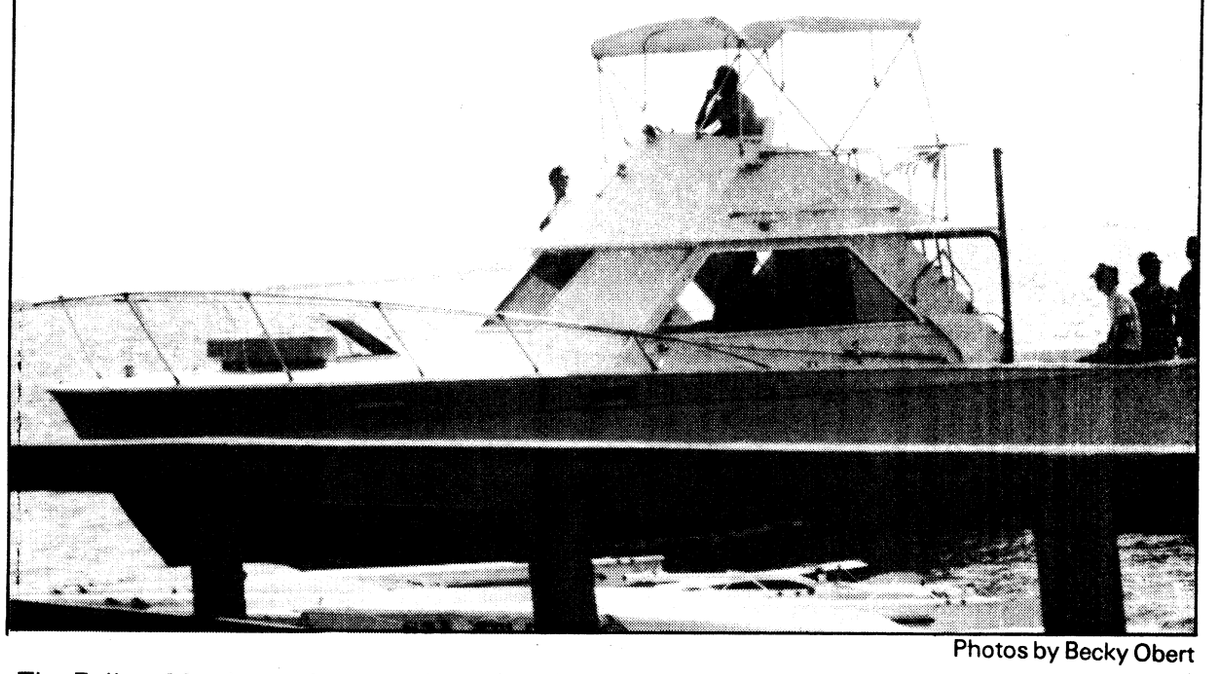
Motel rooms have two double beds and a small refrigerator.

Cabin rates range from $28 per night for a 2-bedroom (E-5 or below) up to $37 per night for civilians. Motel rates are $15 per night for E-5s and below, $20 for all others. Expect to pay an additional $1 to $2 per night for any guests you bring along with you. During the off season, prices start at $14 for a 2-bedroom cabin (E-5s and below) to $18 for civilians, and motel rooms are $10 (E-5s and below) and $15 for all others.

Cabins are rented from May through Labor Day using a lottery system, for five days at a time. Rooms in the motel may be booked by calling and making a reservation.

The center also has campsites with complete hookups and other sites with just electricity. A bath house with shower, toilet and laundry facilities is located next to the campground.

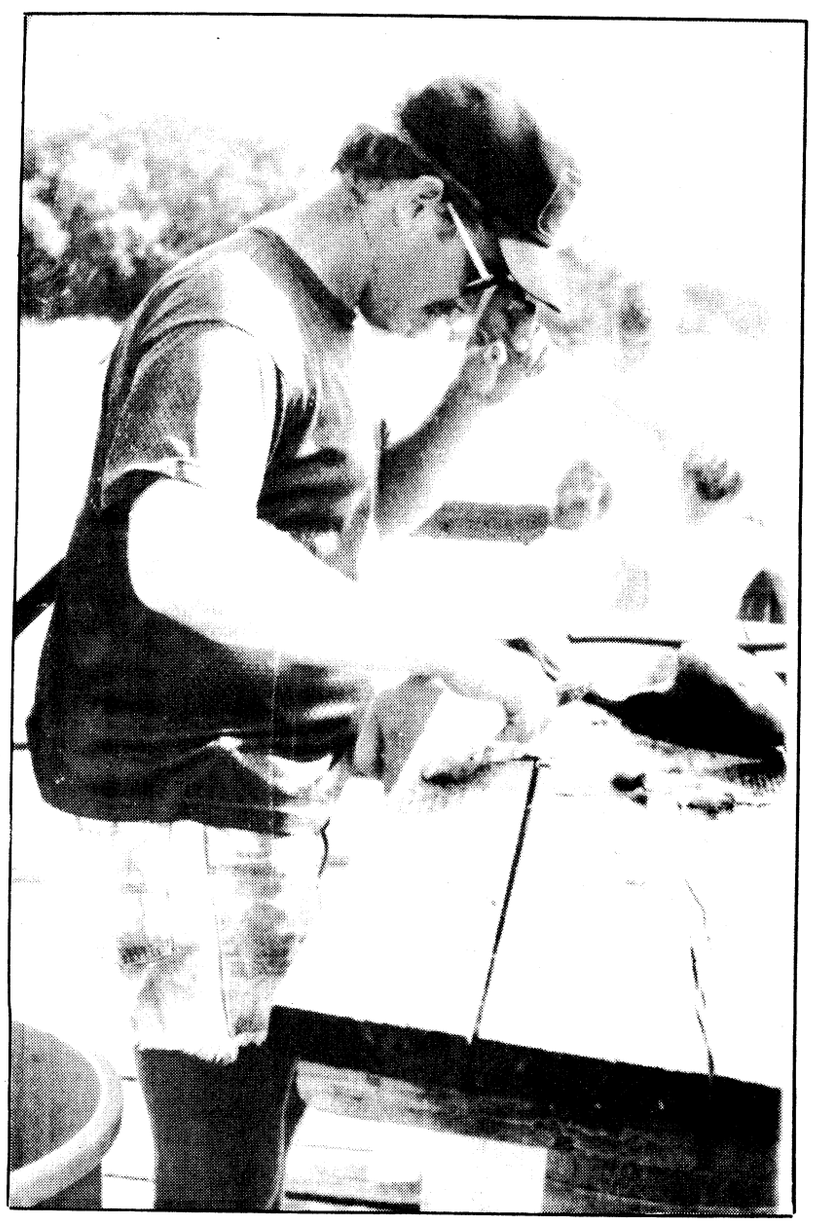
A variety of equipment is available for rental, ranging from a 48' deep sea fishing boat to small paddle boats, jet skis and fishing equipment. A fee is charged for rental equipment.



A post exchange/convenience store is open during the summer months, offering food, drinks, fish bait, ice and a video game room.

The center has a sandy beach on the bay with a roped off swimming area and lifeguards on duty during the day. It also has a lighted fishing pier that extends 300 feet out into the bay.

Storage for personal boats, in boat slips, is available for recreation area customers during their stay, for a small fee. A boat launching facility is also available.



Pets are not allowed in the center.

Reservations and informtion on the center are available at the Outdoor Recreation Administrative Office in Building 247 on post. Their number is 545-4155.

Prior planning helps ensure a safe, accident-free trip

National Safety Council

Whether you head for the hills or travel to city sites, you should overlook your health and safety when you drive to that long-awaited destination.

The key to ensuring an enjoyable vacation is preparation. Unforeseen events all too often throw a wrench into the best-laid plans. By preparing for some of the more common occurrences that seem to foul up vacations each year, you can make sure your time of leisure doesn't turn into a traumatic experience. This National Safety Council advice can help.

Your Car

According to the Council, more than five million vacations are plagued by car trouble each year. Many of those disasters could have been avoided if the driver had given the automobile a simple pre-tip check. The parts of your car that are most likely to give you trouble are:

- Cooling system (radiator, radiator cap, thermostat and hoses)
- Brakes
- Belts (fan, alternator and air-conditioning)
- Tires (including the spare)
- Engine fluids (motor oil, transmission fluid, coolant)
- All lights
- Windshield wiper blades

Another worthwhile precaution is to give your car a tune-up. This means replacing spark plugs, cap, rotor, points (if your car still uses them), ignition wires and all filters.

It's recommended that you take the following on an extended car trip:

- Jack
- Spare tire
- 3/8-inch to 1/2-inch thick plywood board to support the jack
- Lug wrench
- Work light
- Wrenches (metric or standard, depending on the make of your car)
- Screwdrivers (phillips and flathead)
- Locking pliers
- Flashlight
- Fuses (check to see which size your car uses)
- Spare lower radiator hose and drive belts for alternator, water pump, and air conditioner
- Epoxy sealer and silicone gasket for fluid leaks
- Electrical tape and wire
- Fire extinguisher
- Jumper cables
- Flares or reflective triangles
- Oil, coolant and other engine fluids

These items won't do any good in an emergency unless you know how to use them. Before your trip, get to know your car. Find the lower radiator hose and drive belts, and learn which tools you will need to replace them. Practice changing the tire, if you've never done it before. Locate the fuse box and find out what amperage each accessory requires. Know how to check and add engine fluids.

You should also remember to use common sense. If you're going to be the kickoff driver or the only driver, get your usual amount of sleep at normal times. Super early starts may backfire. If you're driving on unfamiliar roads, reduce your speed and allow more following distance. Before you begin driving, fasten your safety belt and make sure passengers and children are buckled up.

Your Home

Protect your home while you're away, so you won't face any disastrous surprises when you get back. The more you make your home seem occupied, the less likely that strangers will be interested in making your valuables their own.

- Set your timer that automatically turns lights on and off in several rooms. Use a timer for the radio, too. That way, a burglar may think someone is home even if nobody answers the doorbell.
- If you have a second car, park it in the driveway. Leave it halfway up, to prevent would-be burglars from pulling a truck or van in close to the house.
- Arrange to have your grass mowed while you're away.
- Have a friend or relative collect mail, newspapers or other things that might be delivered to your door. If nobody picks things up for you, stop all deliveries.
- Ask a neighbor to put out trash at your house on a pick-up day.

Yourself

Many vacationers spend much of their time ill in bed. If it's been awhile since your last physical exam, call your doctor and see if it's time for a check-up. Do the same with your dentist.

If you'll be vacationing in a populated area, your chances of catching cold are pretty good. Most colds are passed along by touching, so wash your hands often, especially before and after eating in restaurants. Pack a decongestant just in case; it won't cure the cold, but it can help relieve some of the symptoms.

The following items may come in handy during an unforeseen vacation problem:

- Driver's license
- Vehicle registration
- Medical information card
- Motor club card
- Duplicate car keys
- Hospital insurance card
- Auto insurance card
- Names and addresses of next of kin

Even the best of precautions don't guarantee that you won't come across problems on your vacation travel. But by making basic preparations, you can keep problems down to a minimum and prevent inconvenience from turning into disaster.

Changes make life easier for families

By Sgt. Maj. Rudi Williams, USA
American Forces Information Service

The military services are making life easier for families of service members on unaccompanied tours. Those already living in government quarters may be permitted to remain there while the service member is away.

This saves military families and the government thousands of dollars in moving expenses and reduces the number of times families are uprooted when sponsors are assigned to isolated areas.

As with the rest of the services, "They have to make a written request for their families to stay in government quarters while they're overseas," said an Air Force spokesman at the Pentagon. "Permission is not granted automatically."

"Home basing"is a term used by Army and Air Force personnel managers for service members who are slated to return to the same base following a remote overseas tour. The two services also have programs called "advance assignment (Army)" and "follow-on (Air Force) tours. Under these programs, service members are told where they will be stationed when they finish their short tour.

Since these soldiers and airmen know where their next assignments will be, their families can move to that location and set up housekeeping, instead of moving to a different area and having to move again when their sponsor returns.

"A member who applies for a follow-on assignment will get an advance notice as to where he's going after completing a short tour," said a spokesman for the Air Force Personnel Center at Randolph Air Force Base, Texas. "We only give it to people who request it, and only if they volunteer to refrain from using their PCS entitlements to move family to another location. If they don't agree, they're not given homebasing or a follow-on assignment."

In the Army, soldiers can sign up for homebasing or the advance assignment program. Officials say either will "save soldiers money on moving expenses and reduce the number of time families have to relocate."

Under the advance assignment program, families who don't already live in base housing are not eligible for government quarters until the service member returns from an overseas assignment.

"If they're already living on post, they can choose to remain in those quarters until the husband returns from his assignment," said Sgt. Maj. Marino A. Fiesel, assignment procedures officer, Army Military Personnel Center, Alexandria, Va.

The names of those who move to the new assignment area are put on the family housing waiting list. Their name will be nearer the top of the list by the time the soldier finishes his overseas tour.

There is no officially-titled program in the Marine Corps, but a spokeswoman said, "We take care of their families while they're gone. But only those already living in government quarters are considered. If everybody was eligible, a base could become a holding tank for dependents, and the commander wouldn't have enough space for people who are assigned there."

"Some people leave mom and the kids on base while they're gone, and others feel more comfortable moving the family back home to live with their parents," said a Navy spokesman.

When families remain in on-base housing while the sailor is overseas, it "doesn't mean that the sailor is coming back to the same place," he said. "But sometimes persons do know they're returning to the base they left — depending upon their specialty and the needs of the Navy."

" "In some cases, for example, a sailor might leave Norfolk, go to Diego Garcia and knows he will go from there to the Navy Security Group Activity at Edzell, Scotland," he explained. "Arrangements in such cases can be made to ship his family and household goods to Scotland to coincide with his arrival there."

The aim of all of these programs among the various military services is to save service members and the government money and to make it easier for families to deal with separations.

Program gives spouses a better chance at jobs

Army News Service

Washington — Since it first went into effect in September 1983 as part of the Defense Department's Priority Placement Program for employees, the Army's Family Member Priority Placement Program has gone through several stages of evolution.

It has undergone a test period to refine its policies and procedures for Army-wide use. It has prompted some changes in the DoD Program, and it has become a permanent means for helping the Army's federally employed family members find new jobs upon relocation of their spouses.

Now comes the latest development, as announced by Army personnel officials: expansion of the program's eligibility criteria and extension of the registration period from 90 days to six months. As from the start, the program is open to spouses, dependent children under the age of 23 dependent parents of either spouse or a sponsor who has civil service status in their current jobs with the Army. Priority consideration for job openings in a given commuting area now would be extended to those employees whose DA sponsors —

- Make a permanent change-of-station move overseas on an unaccompanied tour and the DA family member wishes to PCS within the continental United States; or upon the sponsor's return from an overseas unaccompanied tour, when the family member wishes to relocate from within CONUS to the sponsor's new duty station.
- PCS overseas: The family member could accompany sponsor, but instead chooses to remain in CONUS, for reasons considered beneficial to the family, and wishes to PCS (e.g., stay near the family) within CONUS.
- Retire (or, in the case of military sponsors, incur an expired term of service) and the family will PCS to the retirement destination.
- Are on temporary assignment (service schools, development assignments, etc.) for nine months or longer and might have either permanent or temporary orders.
- Are making a PCS move, but travel expenses are not being paid by the government.
- Are temporary DA employees and are selected for permanent positions at another Army duty station with no break in service.
- Are assigned to a DoD activity, the family member is an employee and there is a DA activity in the commuting area.
- Are Army reservists called to active duty, or are civil service re-employed annuitants if the assignments are for nine months or more.

Answers to questions on eligibility, along with applications for registration, may be obtained from local civilian personnel offices.

If you think you're eligible, go to the civilian personnel office at your current duty station, bringing with you a copy of your sponsor's PCS orders.

The CPO will partially fill out and give you a DO Form 1817 (registration form) and a standard from 75 (containing your federal personnel history). Within seven working days of your arrival at the new duty station, you must take these forms to the new CPO in order to register in the program for DA jobs in the commuting area.

Upon registration, you'll receive priority consideration for six months for job vacancies for which you qualify.

Personnel officials emphasize that there is no guarantee that priority consideration will lead to a job at the new duty station — the aim being to make it easier to deal with one of the burdens of relocation.

MARSHAL'S VIEWPOINT

By Ronald McCuistion
Provost Marshal's Office

How would you like to help a thief break into your home and steal everything of value? Sounds crazy? Don't be too sure!

Some residents of Fort Benning do just that, even though they don't realize they're doing it.

If you're not doing everything possible to make it hard for a thief to break into your house, if you are not making sure he is likely to get caught if he does manage to break in or if your home looks too tempting for him to pass up, you might as well be the thief's accomplice.

During this time of year, people are spending more time away from their homes, whether it's to vacation in Florida or a day at the lake. But, for some, returning home becomes a nightmare after they learn of an unexpected visitor while they were away.

There's no way to make a home 100-percent burglar-proof, but there are a number of simple and inexpensive things you can do to minimize the chances that a burglar will pick your home as a target.

Far too often, we see Crime Prevention steps taken only after a crime has been committed. In most cases, a crime could have been prevented if a few common-sense methods of crime prevention were used. For example, reporting suspicious actions such as someone peering into every car on the street or forcing a window open.

Is this reason enough to suspect criminal activity? Remember, NO violation is too small to be reported.

The Crime Prevention section would like to assist the residents of Fort Benning by helping them to start their own personal crime prevention policy.

For further information on how to prevenrt burglary, contact the Crime Prevention office at 545-7115.

Sudden summer storms can develop without warning

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

Summer is entering the final stretch, but storm season is still in full swing, which means injuries resulting from lightning strikes and tornados are still a big possibility.

They can come on very suddenly without warning or their arrival can be gauged to the minute.

One such incident, where a storm came without any warning, was the recent accident involving 10 trainees on a firing range in the Malone Complex.

According to Frank McClanahan of the post safety office, it was a freak accident. The soldiers were huddled beneath a tree and lightning struck the tree virtually exploding it.

"Since then extra emphasis has been put on instilling knowledge to people in all leadership positions about storm procedures," he said, "I regularly conduct Initial Entry Training classes to incoming executive officers and commanders."

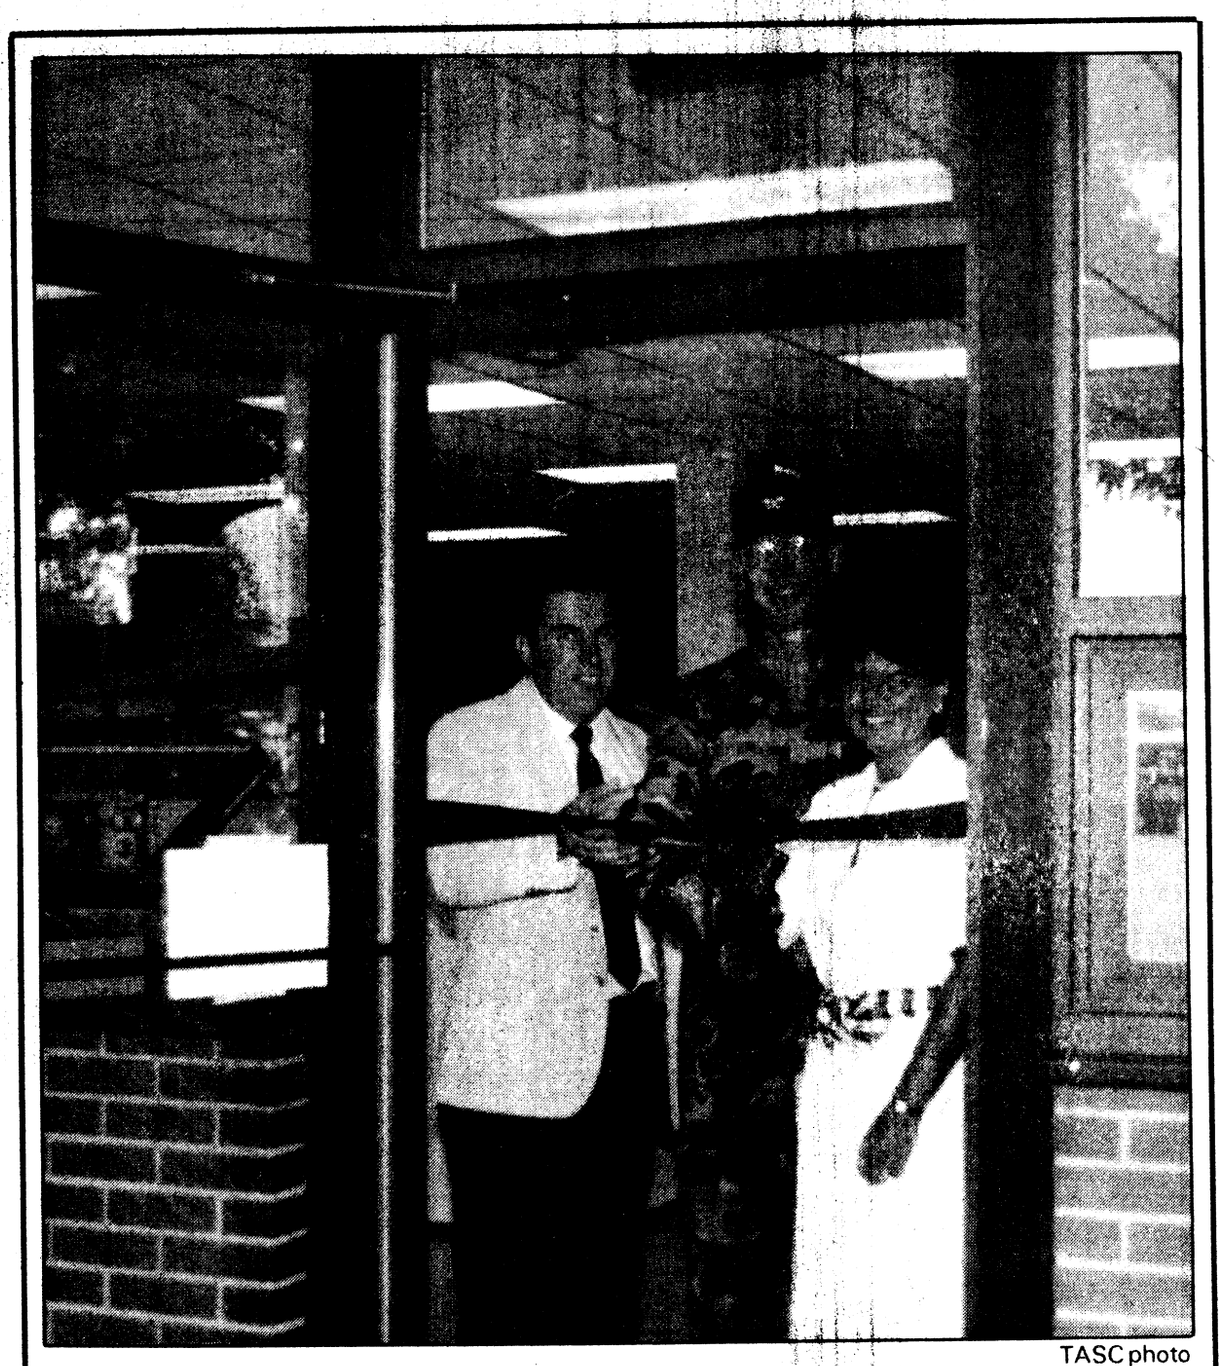
He said that this is important because the trainees are most prone to storm injuries because a major portion of their training is done outdoors.

McClananhan said he emphasises the hazards of using steel helmets, weapons, communication radios, and any other equipment during training which might increase risk of lightning strike.

As a minimum McClanahan said, the following precautions should be taken during exposure to lightning: If indoors, do not handle electrical appliances which are plugged in to electrical outlets or hardwired in place. Do not bathe or touch metal plumbing. Do not use the telephone. If caught on a range or in the field, seek low ground, kneel down and spread out.

Golfers are warned to seek cover and to immediately drop their clubs when lightning is imminent but not seek the shelter of a golf cart because it does not provide adecquete protection. He added that jeeps, convertables, motorcycles and bicycles fall in the same category.

"The reason is," he said, "the Faraday Cage principle does not apply in those situations."



According to U.S. Army Infantry Center regulation number 385-2, the Faraday principle applys to hardtop vehicles. The reason is that the metal cage receives the strike and discharges it harmlessly to the conducting earth. A rubber typed vehicle such as a car, the lightning jumps through the tires and into the ground. At present the Safety office is currently working on funding for shelters on the ranges and training areas where there are presently none. McClanahan said that they will be metal roofed houses grounded by steel cables.

Since Tornado season is also upon us, McClanahan mentioned some procedures to follow during a Tornado Warning: At home: open window on the northeast side; go to a corner of cellar; lie under a heavy table; or stay against the inside walls of your home.

If you are away from home, take shelter in a steel-framed or reinforced concreted building or, if caught outside in the direct path of a tornado, travel at right angles to the path of the funnel or lie flat in a ditch and protect your head.

Avoid buildings with large free-span roofs, don't stay in your car, trailer or mobile home. Avoid halls or corridors oriented in a southwest direction and avoid areas where there could be flying glass.

Lightning kills approximately 150 persons each year. The Chattahoochee Valley is located in an area known by weather experts as the "lightening valley." The nature of the terrain an prevailing winds are conductive to the generation of lightning storms. The most dangerous time for a lightning strike is during the muggy lull which precedes the storm even before it starts raining. In most cases, casualties from lightning occur from the first lightning to strike the area.

Plan provided blueprint for rebuilding Europe

American Forces Press Service

Forty years ago, Europe stood in ruins, devastated and economically paralyzed after years of war. Even after peace had been declared, the European countries had not found peace. Protectionist trade barriers, petty nationalism and controversy over retribution to be paid by the Axis powers strangled their efforts to rebuild.

Feeding on this turmoil was perhaps Europe's greatest threat: the Soviet Union. Although the Soviets had more war dead than any other country, they clung to the conviction that military force is the tool of national gain.

Alone among the war-torn nations of Europe, the Soviet Union saw the defeat of one form of tyranny as an opportunity to spread another. Instead of promoting restoration, the Kremlin took advantage of the Continent's weakness. One by one, the countries of Eastern Europe fell.

What helped save the rest of Europe from this fate was the Marshall Plan, a blueprint for Europe's recovery crafted by then-Secretary of State George C. Marshall Jr.

Secretary of Defense Caspar W. Weinberger recently noted that, on its 40th anniversary, the Marshall Plan continues to share valuable insights as meaningful today as when they were first prescribed.

The plan carried to the world a message that Europe and the United States were united by an inseperable bond, rooted in history and in the struggle for freedom.

And just as importantly, it proclaimed that the Western world would stand firm whenever its freedom was threatened.

The plan reflected the philosophy Marshall espoused throughout his career as Army chief of staff, secretary of state and secretary of defense: preparedness.

Following World War I, Marshall told a Senate committee, "The great tragedy was the wastage of the tremendous potential advantage we had in quality of our personnel, because of the very limited opportunity the men had for preparing themselves..."

In 1940, Marshall foresaw that the United States would be drawn into the conflict brewing in Europe. In response, he called for peacetime conscription and mobilizing the National Guard and Reserve. The result was the most effective fighting force the world had ever seen.

Also, before the United States entered World War II, Marshall helped formulate a global strategy to aid potential allies.

Perhaps Marshall's greatest insight was in recognizing the need for preparedness for peace, as well as war.

In drafting the European recovery plan that bears his name, Marshall helped prepare Europe for lasting peace — a peace that restored, not punished, Germany.

His vision helped inspire the creation of NATO, an alliance that told the world the North Atlantic countries would never again allow disunity and complacency to fuel the fires of war.

Marshall recognized that such vigilance must be maintained from a position of strength, not weakness.

"We have tried since the birth of our nation to promote our love of peace by a display of weakness," he said. "This course has failed us utterly, cost us millions of lives and billions of treasure."

"The reasons are quite understandable," Marshall said, "the world does not seriously regard the desires of the weak. Weakness presents too great a temptation to the strong, particularly the bully who schemes for wealth and power."

"We must, if we are to realize the hopes we may now dare have for lasting peace, enforce our will for peace and strength. We must make it clear to the potential gangsters of the world that if they dare break our peace, they will do so at their great peril."

Weinberger said this concept of peace through strength — the cornerstone of the NATO alliance — must continue to guide America and its allies today.

"Today, more than ever, our democratic peoples must remain united in their commitment to preserve that freedom for which we have all paid so dearly so many times in the past," he said.

The plan's 40th anniversary is an appropriate time to evaluate the West's commitment to preparedness and peace through strength, Weinberger said.

"Just as Marshall's celebration of victory in Europe was tempered by his understanding that peace would be as difficult a task as war, so too must we reflect soberly on the present conditions of our Western alliance," he said. "I think it is clear that the horizon of Europe's and America's future — in truth, the future of free government — reveals perils no less significant than those which the Marshall Plan met and surmounted a generation ago.

"Our task, as we remember, is to learn, and in learning, to fortify. The way of life preserved for so many by the efforts and vision of Western statesmen 40 years ago deserves no less."

Catalog lists latest merchandise

Army & Air Force Exchange Service

The new 1987-88 Exchange mail-order catalogs are being shipped and will cost $3.

The catalogs will include a coupon for $5 off the first order of $25 or more or $10 off any order of $100 or more. These are two of the changes that take effect with the 1987-88 catalog. Other changes include automatic order authentication in the United States and a toll-free U.S. telephone number for credit card holders.

The new catalogs will be available worldwide in late August.

In past years, exchange catalogs have been free of charge. They are being sold at installation magazine racks and exchange customer service counters this year to reduce "pigeonholing," according to Thomas Papst, chief of catalog sales. "We found many people were taking two or three catalogs because they were free, then they would never place an order. This causes shortages and some customers were not able to get personal copies," Papst said.

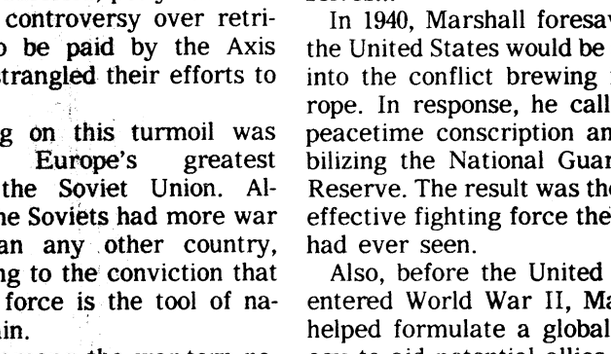
"We also noticed that other retailers like Sears and Penney's had put a nominal fee on their catalogs to attract only the serious shopper and we're doing the same thing," he continued. "It's a great deal for those who use the catalog — for $3 they get a $5 or $10 credit off of an order."

Almost 200,000 certificates are good for free 1987-88 catalogs that have been mailed to customers who placed merchandise orders between Sept. 1, 1986, and May 15, 1987.

Beginning Sept. 1, most customers living in the United States will no longer have to get order forms signed by exchange customer service representatives to prove eligibility for catalog privileges. Their orders will be authenticated automatically because of a computer link between the catalog center and the defense enrollment eligibility reporting system (DEERS) — the program that keeps track of people eligible for military benefits.

Because of the DEERS link, these customers can also call a toll-free telephone number to place Mastercard, VISA and Discover credit card orders. However, because they are not enrolled in DEERS, National Guard and Reserve customers must still have orders authenticated by customer service representatives or unit control officers and cannot use the toll-free number for credit orders.

The catalog sales office will accept telephone orders from 7:30 a.m. until 4 p.m. central time Monday through Friday starting Sept. 1.



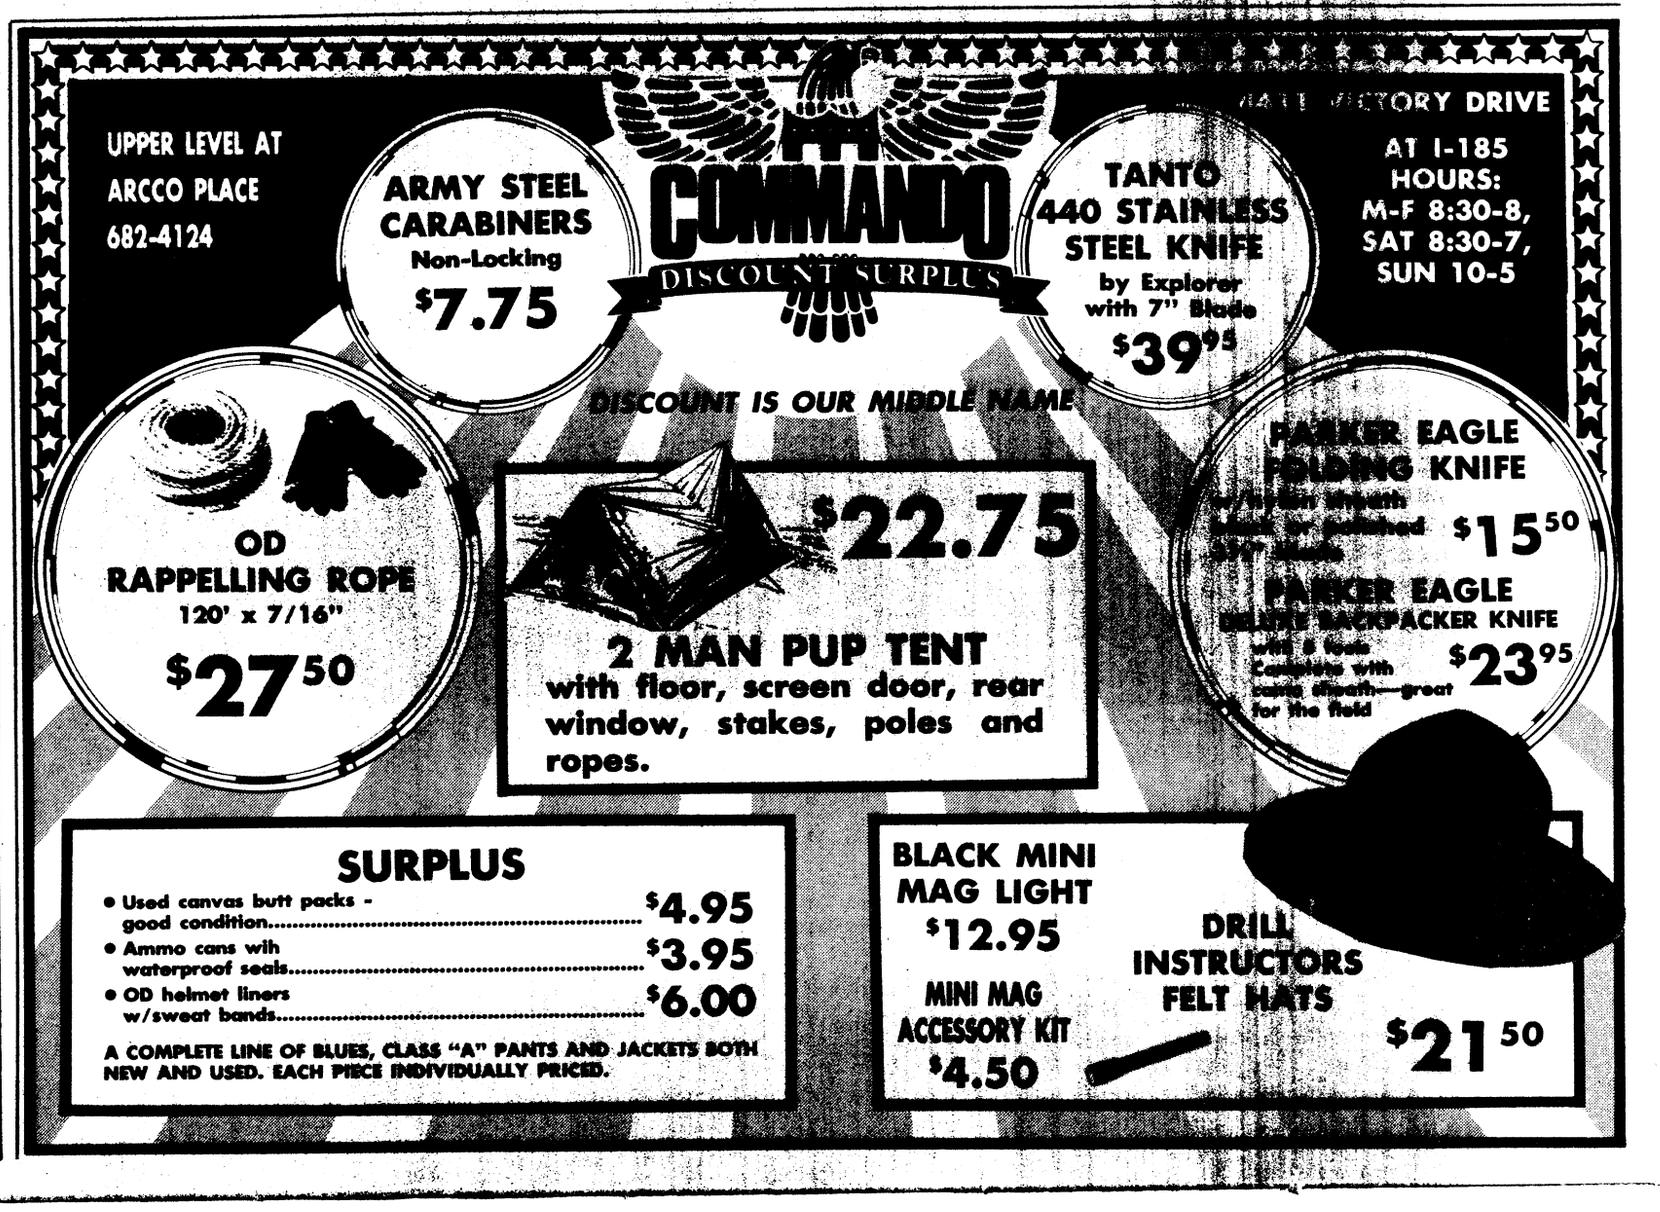
Customers ordering from APO or FPO addresses have never needed to have their orders authenticated. Procedures for ordering from these addresses will not change.

The exchange catalog is published in two editions. The overseas edition contains roughly 10,600 items purchased in Europe, the Pacific and Central America, as well as the United States.

The U.S. edition, for CONUS use, offers roughly 4,000 items purchased in the United States.

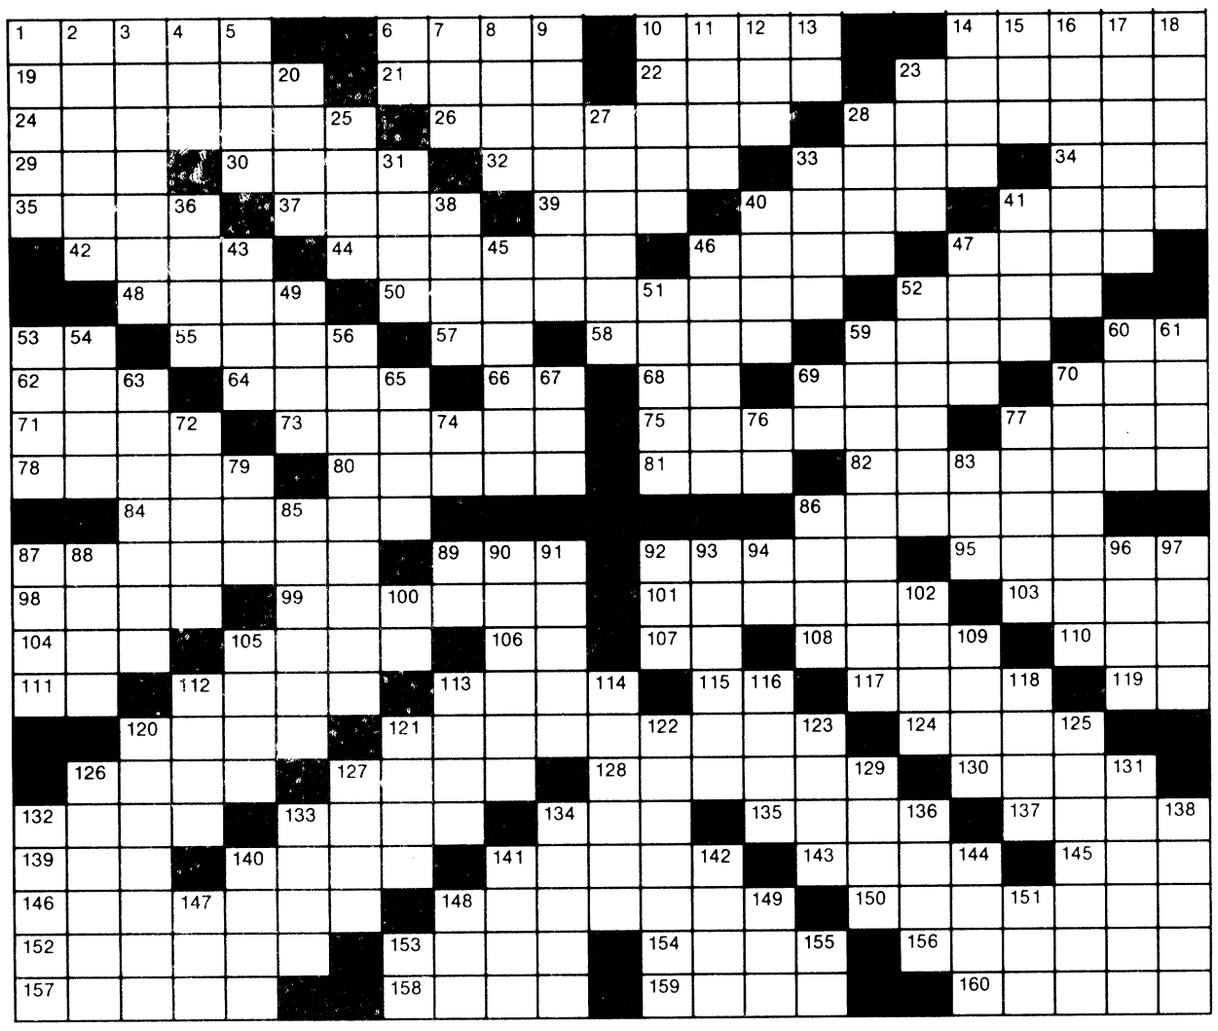
Both editions offer merchandise at substantial savings compared to prices charged in U.S. commercial stores.

Depending on where they are located, active-duty members of all five services, military retirees and National Guard and Reserve personnel use either the U.S. or overseas edition. State Department and Department of Defense civilians stationed outside the United States have overseas catalog privileges. The exchange mail order catalog program is sponsored by the four military exchange systems.



LUPUS: A DISEASE OF A THOUSAND DISGUISES

Lupus has been called "the greatest impersonator" because of the frequency in which initial episodes are diagnosed as other diseases. The diagnosis of lupus can be a lengthy process since the symptoms are so varied and diverse and include fatigue, weight loss, joint pain and swelling, persistent low grade fever, and sun sensitivity, the latter often resulting in a butterfly shaped rash across the bridge of the nose and cheeks.



Since lupus manifests itself in so many different ways, it is difficult to be certain how many people actually suffer from lupus. The consensus is that while over 500,000 Americans have lupus, another 500,000 may unknowingly be afflicted. In the U.S. alone, more than 16,000 people a year develop lupus, making it more common than a number of other well-known diseases. Lupus, therefore, is no longer considered a rare disease.

ARTS & CRAFTS

The Fort Benning Arts & Crafts Center Photo Lab is like having your own photography school and your own professional instructor. What can you learn? How to use your camera, how to use studio lighting, how to develop film (Black and white negatives, color negatives and color slides) and how to enlarge and print pictures.

What must you do to get started? Come by and see us. You will be fascinated by what you can do; no experience necessary.

Now that the secret is out and you have gotten over the initial surprise of how quick and easy you can make your own pictures, we hope you will spread the word. For the best pictures in town, make them yourself at Arts & Crafts Center, Bldg. 2783, located on the corner of Eckel Street and Sightseeing Road, phone number 545-3677.

Wood Shop — The Fort Benning Arts & Crafts Center, Bldg. 2783, welcomes you to come by and see our wood shop. The shop has the best equipment money can buy and two school-trained cabinetmakers. The instructors are available at all times to teach and assist you in making a plaque or a room full of furniture. We know that you will enjoy saving money by working in the wood shop, so come on by.

The woodworking area requires a qualification card prior to utilizing tools and equipment. This is required by regulation and from our previous experience, we have found that time spent in the qualification safety class is well worth it. The safety class is offered every Saturday morning at 8:30. We are located on the corner of Eckel Street and Sightseeing Road. We are very proud of our woodworking and cabinet-making capability, so join us Saturday. You will be glad you did. For more information, call 545-3677.

Home blazes are responsible for most fire related fatalities

By James E. Floyd
Chief Fire Inspector

Of particular concern is the record of fire deaths in private dwellings. Fires in private dwellings account for a majority of fire deaths in residential-type occupancies and a majority of deaths in building fires. In part, this poor record can be attributed to the large number of private dwellings in the country.

Fatal residential fires show characteristics distinct from those of other types of residential fires. They mostly occur at night during hours of sleeping.

Non-fatal residential fires peak during the afternoon hours when people are more likely to be active and less likely to be sleeping.

Fatal residential fires usually start in the living areas where people usually are during the waking hours, but where they may not be during sleeping hours such as family playrooms, kitchens, basements, but not necessarily bedrooms. The majority of these fires originate when smoking materials ignite textiles, such as upholstery and clothing.

The victims usually do not sense the fire until it has gained some headway. Heat and smoke make escape difficult. Often, people can be overcome by smoke while trying to escape, or they may return to rescue someone or something. Lack of a practicable escape plan is also a hindrance.

Be sure you have an escape plan for your family and they are made aware of it.

Housekeeping or the maintenance of orderly cleanliness and neatness is basic to good fire safety.

Good housekeeping practices, both indoors and outdoors, reduce the danger of fire simply because they are time-proven methods of controlling the presence of unwanted fuels, obstructions and sources of ignition. Otherwise, through neglect, they can lead to extremely hazardous exposures to both life and property.

The importance of housekeeping in relation to fire safety extends to every occupancy from the simplest dwelling to the most sophisticated industrial complex.

Certain aspects of housekeeping are a common denominator to practically all properties whatever their use, others are peculiar to a particular occupancy and must be dealt with by means of special procedures.

It is neither practical nor possible to include here a list of all features of housekeeping for all conceivable occupancies and situations.

In dealing with the subject, one must exercise imagination in visualizing possible hazardous situations, in anticipating the fire dangers and danger to life and take appropriate steps to min imize them.

The axiom "a place for everything and everything in it's place," while lacking in imagination, summarizes the proper attitude to take in approaching the task of assuring good order and tidiness.

B Co 1/29 Inf claims USAIC Championship

USAIC Public Affairs Office

John Dale, B Co, 1st Bn, 29th Inf, slammed in two RBIs bringing in what was to be the winning run defeating USARSA 3-1 in the 1987 USAIC Softball Championship Wednesday.

Dale was also the winning pitcher for the game allowing only 3 hits and 1 run during the game.

B Co was the defending 1986 Champions returning this year with a new coach and only five of the original 1986 team.

USARSA started the game off with two hits in the top of the first inning but failed to capitalize.

B Co, in the bottom of the second, hit two singles off the bat of Ernest Brown, short stop, and Julius Smith, third base. Dale then stepped up to the plate with the winning slam bringing in both Brown and Smith.

USARSA mounted a challange in the third with one run but B Co slipped in an insurance run in the fifth when Harold Claytor, Sr., catcher, brought in Jesse Thomas, left field.

"We knew we could be back this year," exclaimed Smith, "it was just a matter putting together a winning team."

B Co's march to the championship game saw some crushing defeats for the rest of the post's 20 participates. Even USARSA fell to the champs in a earlier game 17-1.

B Co began in the bracket by sliding by MPA, 5-2, then MEDDAC was hospitalize with a 14-5 blow. 598th gave B Co a good game ,almost pulling off the upset with a 8-7 loss. In final play before the Championship game,B Co ambushed HHC 3/14th, 10-1.

B Co also won their Regimental Championships earlier in the year.

Runners from around the world get ready to run Army 10-miler

Association of the U.S. Army

ARLINGTON, Va. — Runners from across the country and overseas are registering to participate in the third annual Army Ten-Miler, "Run the River Bridges," which will be held on Sunday, Oct. 11, the day before the Association's Annual Meeting begins.

Sponsored by AUSA's George Washington, Fairfax-Lee and Vint Hill Farms chapters and headquarters, Army Recreation Services, this year's Army 10-Miler will be run in honor of the bicentennial of the United States Constitution.

To recognize this special occasion, prior to the race, the Old Guard Fife & Drum Corps, from the third U.S. Infantry (The Old Guard), will provide entertainment for those preparing to run the race and the many spectators who are expected to attend this patriotic running event.

The race will begin at 8 a.m., when a colonial cannon will signal the start of the race at the Pentagon Ceremonial Grounds, where the finish line will also be established. The course is 90-percent flat and the race is accredited by the Athletic Conference (TAC).

This year, a revolving Commander's Cup trophy will be awarded to the top military team from the active-duty military (men and women), reserve components and ROTC race categories. The winning team willalso receive a permanent trophy.

Other team categories include: Masters, Open, Government Agencies and Corporate, a new category added this year to encourage AUSA corporate and sustaining member companies to participate.

Teams will consist of six runners with the top four places counting toward scoring.

Director's Cups will also be awarded to the top male and female overall finishers and Master's Cups will be presented to the top male and female Master's finishers.

Trophies will be presented to the top three finishers, male and female, in each 10 age categories, to the top male and female in the AUSA category and to the winnin teams in the other team categories.

In addition, participation certificates will be given to all finishers along with Army 10-Miler long-sleeved t-shirts to the first 3,000 registrants.

The race's awards ceremony will follow the 10-Miler at 11:30 a.m.

Again this year, the race will be supported by the Military District of Washington, commanded by Maj. Gen. Donald C. Hilbert, the third U.S. Infantry (The Old Guard), commanded by Col. James F. Hennessee and the Washington, D.C. Army National Guard, commanded by Maj. Gen. Calvin G. Franklin.

Other race supporters include the Canada Dry-Perrier Potomac Corp., Colonial Running Inc. and the Milford Plaza Hotel, New York city.

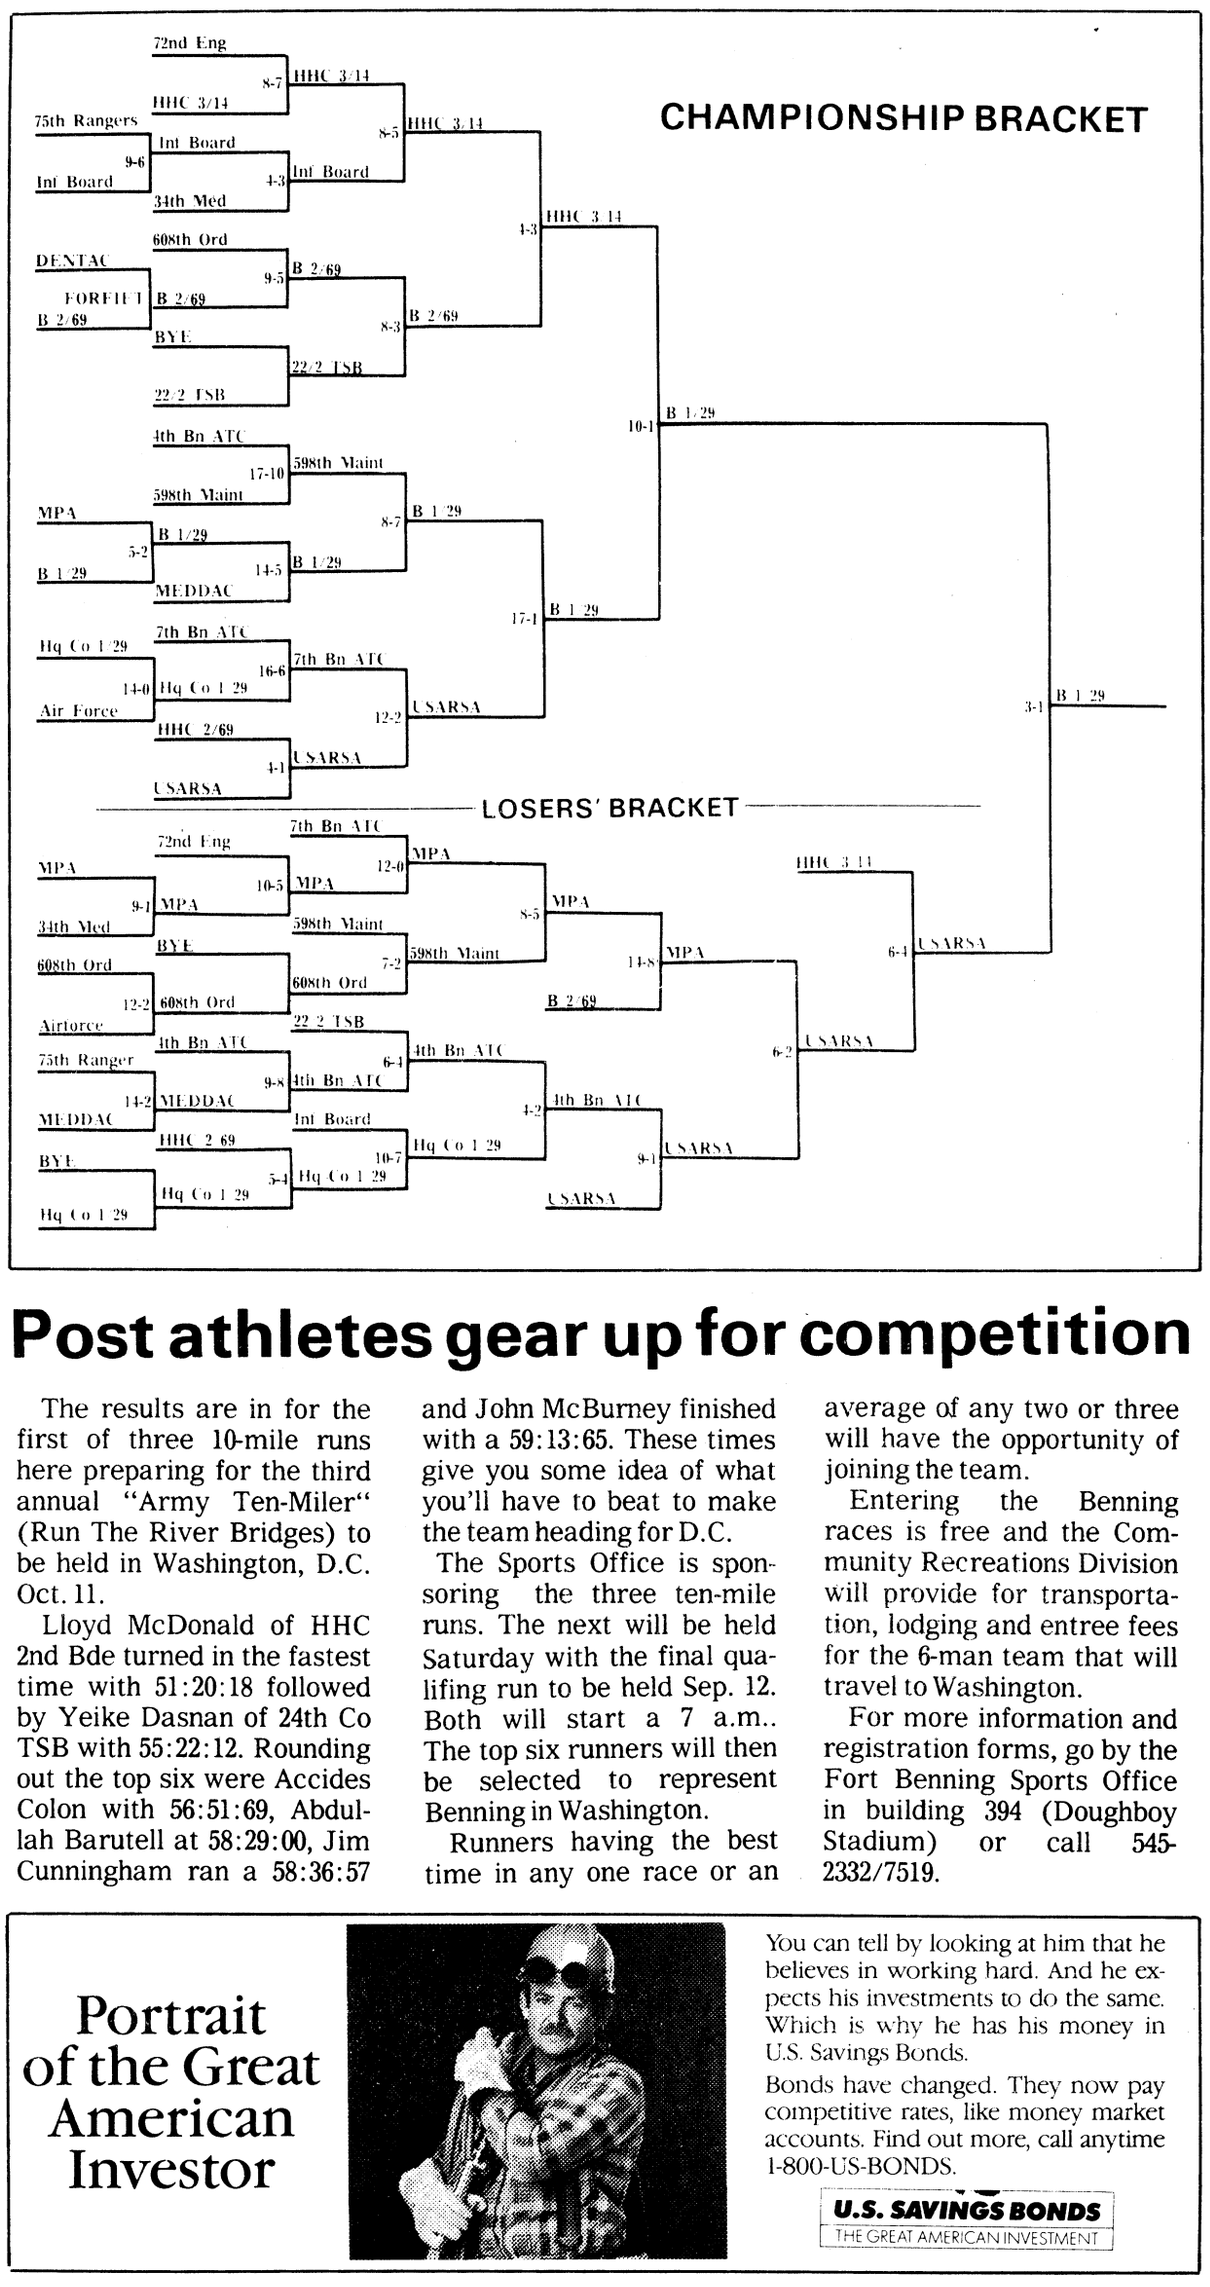
A special feature has been added to this year's 10-Miler. An "all-you-can-eat" spaghetti dinner will be held at the Quality Inn-Arlington Hotel, which is located at 1190-1200 North Court House Road and Route 50 (Arlington Blvd.) in Arlington, Va., across from Fort Myer on Saturday, Oct. 10 from 6-10 p.m.

The cost of the dinner is $10 per person which should be paid in advance and sent in with the race registration form. The cost at the door will be $12.

Also, 10-Miler race packets may be picked up at the Quality Inn from 5-8 p.m. the night of the dinner. (Packets will also be available for pickup the week before the race in the Pentagon or at the starting line area the morning of the race).

In addition, the Quality Inn will have a special room rate for race participants who may come here just for the race or who will also be in the area for all or part of the Association's Annual Meeting.

A special $44 per night (single or double occupancy) room rate will be in effect at the Inn for the nights of Oct. 10-14 for AUSA race and annual meeting participants ONLY.



Rooms are available on a first-come, first-served basis while they last.

Headquarters Army Recreation Services will send a special room rate reservation card to all those who send in an individual registration form and to all team captains.

If you would like to run as an individual or apply as a team, write for registration forms to: Headquarters, Army Recreation Services, OSA, 3A146, The Pentagon, Washington, D.C. 20310-6900; or write to: AUSA Membership Services, 2425 Wilson Blvd., Arlington, Va. 22201.

There is a $7 pre-registration fee ($10 after Oct. 1) for individual runners. Team registration is $5 per team, plus the $7 fee for each individual runner on the team. Team registration must be mailed no later than Sept. 27.

Proceeds from this year's Army 10-Miler will benefit Department of the Army welfare funds, the Military District of Washington morale support fund and the three AUSA chapters.

Post athletes gear up for competition

The results are in for the first of three 10-mile runs here preparing for the third annual "Army Ten-Miler" (Run The River Bridges) to be held in Washington, D.C. Oct. 11.

Lloyd McDonald of HHC 2nd Bde turned in the fastest time with 51:20:18 followed by Yeike Dasnan of 24th Co TSB with 55:22:12. Rounding out the top six were Accides Colon with 56:51:69, Abdullah Barutell at 58:29:00, Jim Cunningham ran a 58:36:57 and John McBurney finished with a 59:13:65. These times give you some idea of what you'll have to beat to make the team heading for D.C.

The Sports Office is sponsoring the three ten-mile runs. The next will be held Saturday with the final qualifing run to be held Sep. 12. Both will start a 7 a.m.. The top six runners will then be selected to represent Benning in Washington.

Runners having the best time in any one race or an average of any two or three will have the opportunity of joining the team.

Entering the Benning races is free and the Community Recreations Division will provide for transportation, lodging and entree fees for the 6-man team that will travel to Washington.

For more information and registration forms, go by the Fort Benning Sports Office in building 394 (Doughboy Stadium) or call 545-2332/7519.

USAMU shooters blast away competitors at games

By Tommy Pool
USAMU PAO

Members of the USAMU won both gold medals and national titles during shooting competition held last week at the Pan American games and the National High-power Rifle Matches at Camp Perry, Ohio.

At the Pan Am Games, being held in Indianapolis, USAMU's Capt. Glenn Dubis, Master Sgt. Erich Buljung and Staff Sgt. Matthew Dryke, all scored individual gold medal victories.

Dubis won the 50-meter small bore rifle event, with a total of 1,253 to finish one point ahead of Mart Klepp of Canada, at 1,252. Third place in the event went to civilian shooter Robert Foth of Colorado Springs, Colo. with a total of 1,251.

In the international skeet event, Staff Sgt. Matthew Dryke continued his winning form with a narrow one-bird victory over teammate Sgt. 1st Class Alger Mullins.

Dryke finished with a total of 221 out of 225, to capture the gold medal, while Mullins scored 220, to finish in second place and the silver medal.

Both Dryke and Mullins also won gold medals as members of the winning United States Skeet team. Dryke and Mullins were joined by former USAMU member Daniel Carlisle of Corona, Calif. for a total of 435 out of 450 targets. Placing second was Cuba at 431 and followed by Canada at 430.

In pistol events, Master Sgt. Erich Buljung won an individual gold in standard pistol and also picked up a silver medal in the 50-meter free pistol event.

Buljung fired a total of 570 out of 600 points in the standard pistol event to finish four points ahead of Guillermo Reyes of Cuba at 566. In the free pistol event, he finished three points back of the U.S. winner, Army reservist George Ross of Saugus, Calif. at 651.

The U.S. squad of Buljung, Ross and Don Nygord also won the free pistol team event. Buljung also picked up another gold medal as a member of the winning air pistol team. His overall total medal count for the games was three gold and one silver in team and individual competition.

Other medal winners from USAMU included Staff Sgt. Rojelio Arredondo and Capt. John McNally in the 25-meter RapidFire pistol event.

Arredondo won the silver medal with a total of 586, while Capt. McNally finished in third winning the bronze medal, with a final of 584.

USAMU's Staff Sgt. Greg Strom swept the individual honors at this year's National Rifle Championships held at Camp Perry, Ohio, from Aug. 5-16.

Strom, this year's All-Army and Interservice Rifle champion, added the National Rifle title to become the first individual in the Army's history to win all three titles in the same year.

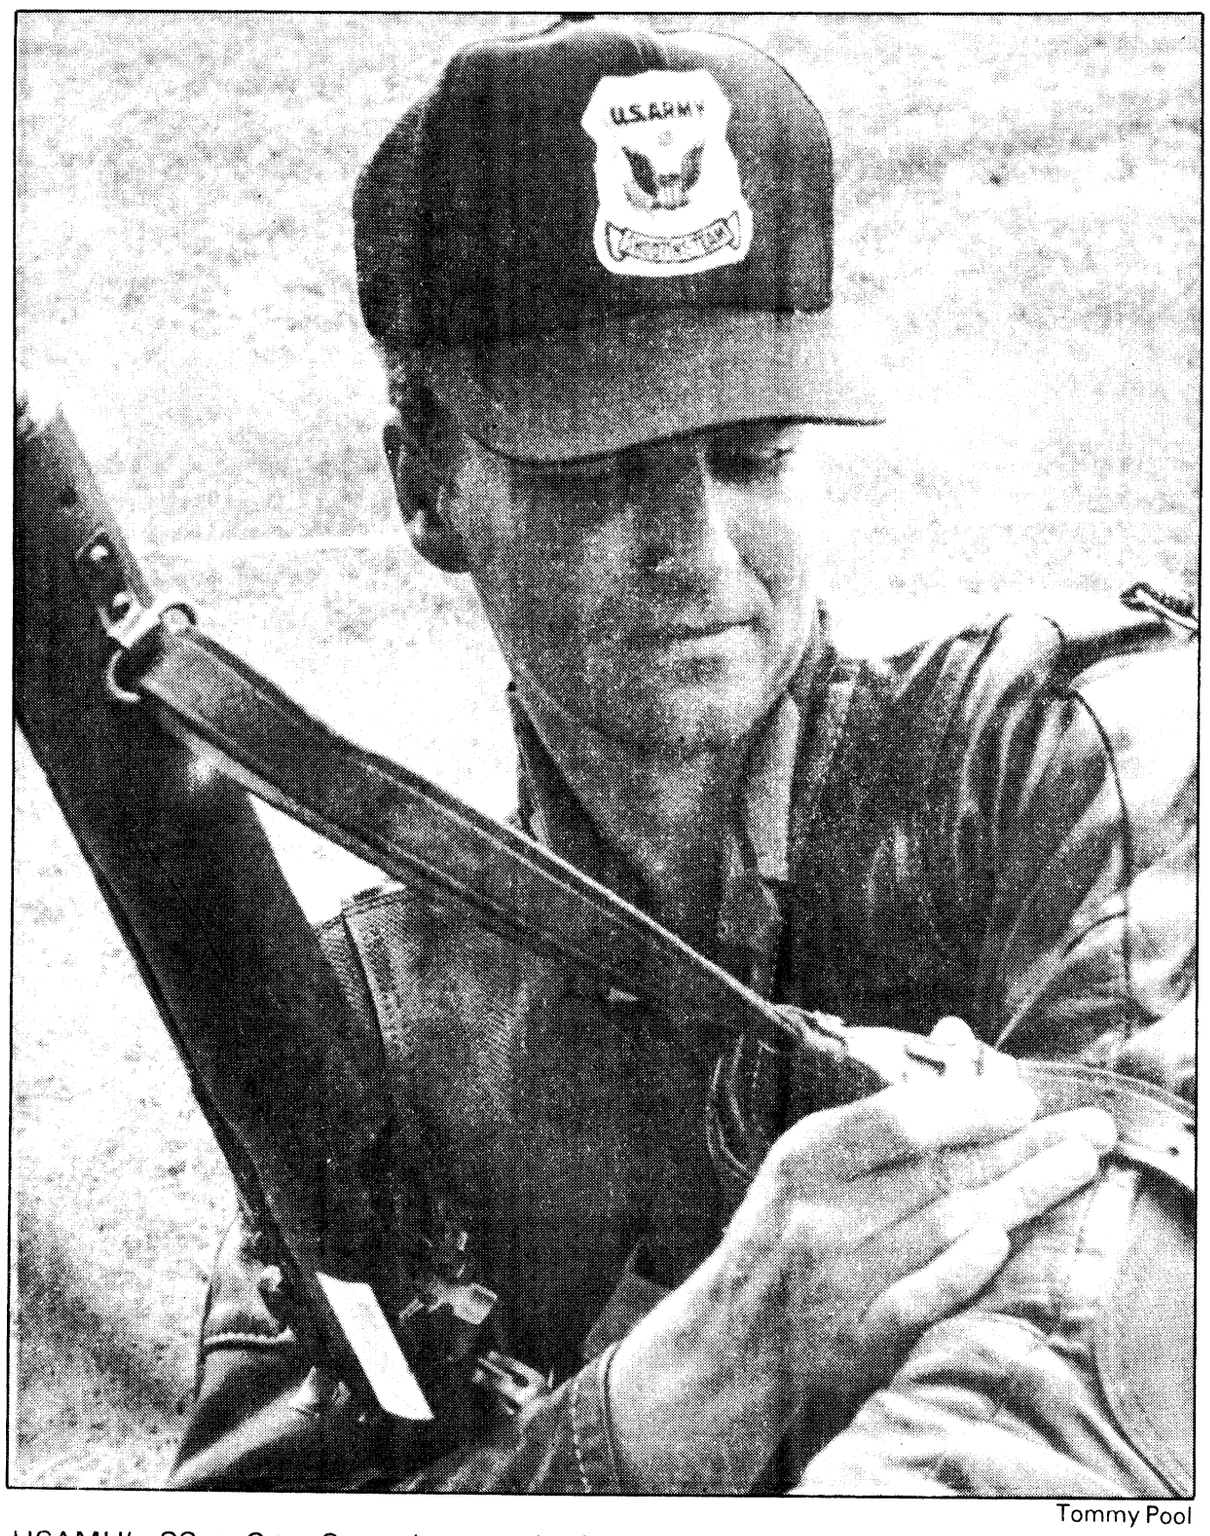
He began his record pace by scoring 495 out of 500 to win the individual national trophy match. Strom added the FORSCOM trophy as well as the Pershing and Rattlesnake trophies for achieving the highest individual score in the National trophy team event.

Strom also added the high Infantryman and Regular Service awards to his credit.

During the four-day individual rifle matches, Staff Sgt. Strom came from behind on the final day to win the National Service Rifle Championship.

His total score of 2,356 out of 2,400 was five points ahead of runner-up CWO Kenneth Cooper, USMC, at 2,651.

Other individual award winners included Spec. 4 Timothy Jackson and Spec. 4 Robert Fowler.



Jackson scored a total of 196 out of 200 points to win the 200-yard standing Navy Cup match.

In the 300-yard rapidfire event, Spec. 4 Fowler scored a perfect 200 out of 200 to win the Coast Artillery Trophy.

In the final 1,000-yard long range matches, the U.S. Army "Red" squad won the national team championship with a total of 769 out of 800.

More than 1,100 of the top military and civilian competitors from across the country were on-hand for this year's National Championships.

Tommy Pool

USAMU's SSgt. Greg Strom became the first individual to ever capture all three major service rifle championships in the same year, winning All Army, Interservice and the Nationals.

Benning rugby club prepares for fall season

After a successful Spring season, the Fort Benning Flyers Rugby Football team is looking forward to regrouping and starting its Fall season.

Highlights of the Spring season included an overall 8-7 record, a second place finish in the Eastern Military Regional Tournament, and a 5th place ranking among military rugby clubs nationwide. In addition, the flyers placed three players on the Army select side. These players will help represent the Army at the Interservice Championships in Washington, D.C. Sept. 12-13.

The Flyers Fall season will begin Sept. 20 with an away game in Atlanta against the Renegades RFC. The first home game will be Oct. 10 against the Fort Stewart Barbarians.

Team practices will start on Aug. 25 and will be held every Tuesday and Wednesday at 6 p.m. on Stillwell Field.

Anyone interested in playing or learning to play should contact either Chris Irwin at 545-4801 or Mike Stevens at 545-1016 for more information.

Today is last chance for YA sports sign-up

The Ghostbusters of the 1986 Youth Activities Football Season have disappeared and the YA Football League is in need of players to carry the pigskin to the Superbowl.

Registration has been extended through today, to allow those individuals who wish to participate, the opportunity to excel in the YA Football Division.

The Division hosts four leagues to accomodate the Fort Benning youth ages 6 to 15.

The Grasshopper League will be made up of nine-man Flag Football teams, ages 6 to 8.

In the Termite Division, speedsters from 10 to 11 years old will play four quarters, eight minutes each, with a 10 minute half time.

The Pee Wee League will get underway, consisting of stars, who are 11 to 13 years old.

The 13 to 15-year olds, make up the Junior League.

While the Grasshopper League plays flag football, the remainder of the YA Division is hard hitting, tackle football.

Registration fee is $12 per child, though the second child may register for $8, and the third, for $6.

Those interested in joining the Youth Activities Division in their Fall Festival of Football, may contact Ray Pierce at 545-3070/3913, or visit the new Youth Activities Center, building 563, located on the corner of Baltzell and McIver st.

Bass Club to hold fish fry

The Bass Club is holding its annual family fish fry at Uchee Creek on Sunday, Sept. 20.

Anyone interested in joining the Bass Club of Fort Benning are welcome to attend club meetings in the upstairs section of the Hidden Door Club every second and fourth Monday at 7:30 p.m.

Uchee fish tourney set

The Uchee Creek Recreation area is conducting a fishing tournament during the month of August. Entrants are divided into two categories: Adult men and women and junior class, boys and girls ages 16 and younger. Prizes will be awarded for longest bass-all species, crappie-all species and bream/sunfish-all species. In addition, prizes will also be awarded for the largest bass and catfish by weight. All catches must be verified at the Uchee Creek Bait Shop. Don't be left out. For more information, contact the Bait Shop Manager, Mr. Bruce, at 545-4053.

Students report for classes as fall school term begins

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Approximately 3,300 children showed up for school on post Tuesday, as the Fort Benning schools began the fall term.

Beth Middlemiss, the information officer for the schools, said an exact enrollment figure will not be available until next week.

Students will find changes in the schools this year. A new mathematics program has been adopted in all grades, which places special emphasis on problem solving and math concepts. Some classes will be learning to use computers.

Students will begin their day 45 minutes earlier and dismiss 45 minutes earlier, as the schools adopt heat-relief hours. The schools will revert to the normal reporting times Oct. 5.

Water sprays discontinued as routine measure

HSC officials say use of showers may make diagnosis difficult in soldiers with serious heat injuries

By Becky Obert
Bayonet staff writer

Airborne instructors will no longer run students through the water sprays every hour to cool them down, as a result of a Health Services Command message sent out this month.

The message quotes a medical technical bulletin (TB Med. 507) dated July 25, 1980, which discourages the use of water sprays as a means of heat injury prevention.

"Spraying of soldiers does not prevent heat injury, and may make it more difficult to identify soldiers in serious distress during periods of loss of consciousness," the message reads.

Col. Herbert Segal, director of Health Services at Fort Benning and commander of Martin Army Community Hospital, said he was pleased to see the message published.

"The key distinction that this message makes is that measures to prevent heat injuries from occurring are different from those measures necessary to treat heat-injured soldiers," he said.

Lt. Col. Pitt Tomlinson, chief of Preventive Medicine, said that he agrees with the new policy. "Wetting down BDUs makes the clothing much heavier, so the body has to work harder," he said. "Also, wet clothing does not help you sweat, which is the body's primary mechanism for cooling itself."

A heat injury is caused by heat that comes from within the body as a result of strenuous activity, Tomlinson said. "If the heat cannot escape fast enough due to a soldier's inability to sweat, then a heat injury is likely to occur."

Segal said that the guidance in the message is "fully compatible" with existing Fort Benning regulations that outline the heat injury prevention policy on post.

While water sprays have been used all over post, the Airborne Department is the most visible user of sprays to cool down soldiers.

Hourly water sprays have long been used at the Airborne Department to cool students down during training, said Lt. Col. Jimmie Holt, commander of the 1st Battalion, 507th Parachute Infantry Regiment.

That changed Aug. 13, when the battalion implemented a new policy banning the routine use of water sprays.

The policy letter, signed by Holt, states that water sprays will be used only "to clean off the body and clothing," and this will be followed by a rest and drying off period.

The letter stresses that instructors must ensure that all students consume water regularly under supervision, and monitor environmental conditions using the wet bulb temperature. When conditions warrant, instructors have the option of adjusting training levels and work hours.

Holt said this might include walking soldiers instead of running them, and giving them longer breaks.

When cold water baths are used as a first aid measure, the letter states that it can only be used "in actual or suspected medical emergency situations where medical monitoring of core temperatures is performed."

Holt said heat injuries are rare at the Airborne School because trainers are taught to focus on early detection and take quick action. "If you watch a person's eyes, you can tell if they're in control of their faculties or not," he said.

Standard policy at the school also requires instructors to identify soldiers who have been prior heat casualties before the first hour of training, and mark their helmets with a yellow tape "H." This stays on the soldier's helmet throughout his three weeks in the school, so that instructors can closely monitor his condition.

Lt. Col. William J. Connally, executive officer of the Infantry Training Center, said that the water sprays at the center have only been used in limited circumstances, and that center personnel have discontinued using the sprays as a result of the HSC message.

Soldiers team up to deliver baby on Dixie Road

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

When two Fort Benning Rangers stopped to help out a motorist in distress,they didn't expect to find a woman in her final stage of labor.

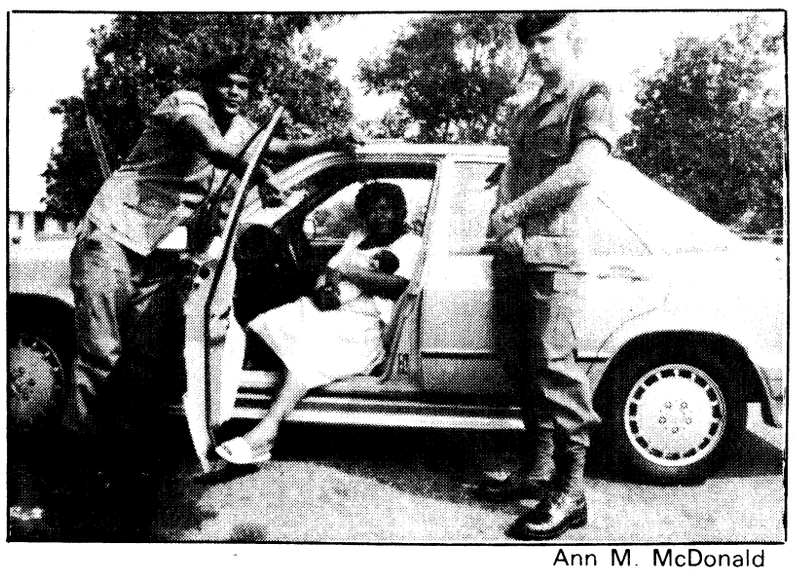
But that's what happened to Sgts. Thomas Prescott and Basil Mitchell on their way to physical training last Thursday morning.

According to Prescott, they were driving out of a local apartment complex when they saw a car on the railroad tracks with its emergency lights on.

"As we came upon the vehicle, the driver sounded the horn and so we stopped to see what the problem was," Prescott said.

"My first thought was that the car had stalled or had a flat tire," Mitchell said. "I thought it would only take a couple of minutes and we would be able to send them on their way."

Both men were stunned momentarily when they approached the car and found Elaine Holmes about to have a baby. But their training as Rangers prevailed and the men took immediate action.



Mitchell went to call an ambulance and her in-laws, while Prescott stood by to aid Mrs. Holmes.

"She was pretty excited when we got there so I calmed her down. She thought that the baby had already been delivered but it hadn't," Prescott said, "but as soon as she settled down a little bit, she delivered the baby right afterwards.

"I cleared the baby's airway, made sure that his nose and mouth were clean," he said. "I made sure the umbilical cord wasn't around his neck, but I didn't cut it because all that was available was a rusty knife."

Prescott said he then made sure the baby was in a safe position until the police and ambulance arrived. Medical personnel then severed the cord, wrapped the baby up and took mother and infant to the hospital.

Mrs. Holmes said she was just driving home from the Labor and Delivery Section at Martin Army Community Hospital, where she was examined and tested and it was determined that she was not ready to deliver her baby.

Sgts. Basil Mitchell (left), and Thomas Prescott, pose with Elaine Holmes and her son, Saeed, at the car where Saeed was born.

"I was almost home when I realized that little Saeed was coming real soon," she said. "Thank God that the men stopped or I don't know what would have happened."

Mitchell and Prescott are both assigned to Headquarters and Headquarters Company, (Ranger Indoctrination Program) detatchment, 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment.

Both said they were glad they could help and attributed their ability to keep cool in the situation to the training they have received in the battalion.

Family Fair / Expo offers fun for everyone

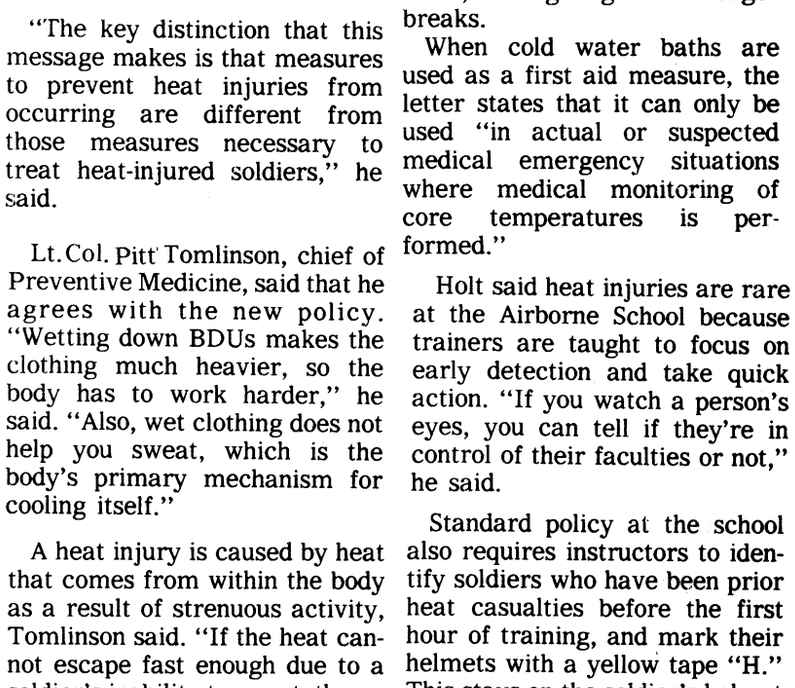
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Fort Benning Family Information Fair and Religious Expo is tomorrow from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. in and around the Youth Activity Center, located at the corner of Baltzell and McIver Streets.

The Fair, a joint effort of the Directorate of Personnel and Community Activities and the Chaplain's Office, is designed to provide information regarding the benefits, programs and facilities available to members of the Fort Benning community.

Virtually every organization that deals with post military and civilian populations will be at the fair. Blood pressure checks, housing referral information, advice on making a will, obtaining a power of attorney and general leagal assistance will all be available.

Representatives from the Boy Scouts, Girls Scouts, Officers' Wives Club, NCO Wives' Club, Army Community Services, Retired Services Office and the Child Development Services, will also be present.



The Military Police's fingerprinting booth will be open, with personnel on hand to fingerprint children; the Volunteer Resource Center will have a table as will the Community Life Office and the Community Recreation Division.

The Expo will provide information on all chapel/denominational services and activities such as Sunday School, CCD, choir, etc., as well as provide the opportunity to sign up.

Entertainment is scheduled throughout the day that includes musical groups, demonstrations by the Siver Wings parachute team, an Astro-jump, kiddy train rides, balloons and clowns. The Dixie Stomper vehicle will be on hand.

Bear O'Brian and a team from KISS FM will take on the Rangers in a volleyball match. Later Mason Dixon and a team from South 106 will do combat with an

OPINION

NCOs responsible for safety of their troops

By Autrail Cobb
Post command sergeant major

Non-commissioned officers play a key role in promoting safety among soldiers. That's because every enlisted troop on post answers to an NCO.

Safety is not a program; it's a way of life. As NCOs, it is our job to see that a high state of discipline is maintained, for disciplined troops make fewer mistakes on the training field and have fewer accidents.

The secret to promoting safety is in the NCO's caring attitude. We have to show our soldiers we care about their welfare, whether it be on or off duty, and in this case, caring means educating, following up with more education and reinforcing safe practices.

We must never let an unsafe act go without corrective action. This means we've got to be there with our soldirs in the training areas, watching their performance and noting their progress.

By familiarizing ourselves with their abilities, we will recognize when a task required is too great for them, and will see areas where remedial training is needed.

There is no shame in remedial training. The shame is in soldiers being injured or dying due to a lack of proficiency with a weapon or vehicle.

We must ask ourselves, "who will fight the next war if we kill or hurt soldiers in training." The answer to this question is obvious.

At Fort Benning, I expect NCOs to set the standard for the Army in the safety arena. You can do this by being highly disciplined NCOs who set the example for their enlisted soldiers to follow. And you can do this by exhibiting a caring attitude toward the young men and women you lead. It is your job as an NCO to help these young troops learn how to be safe, both at work and at play.

I expect NCOs to support this safety philosophy and to take immediate action when it comes to doing the right thing.

Zero defects is good enough.

Snively searches for best running shoe

By Clyde Snively
USAIC Public Affairs Office

"These boots are made for walkin' and these shoes are made for runnin'."

That seems to be the theme song for today's Army. Remember when the Army was looking into furnishing athletic shoes as part of the soldier's basic issue of clothing?

Those of you who've been in the Army longer than three days realizes that the Army just doesn't rush into these things. It researches first. So all the athletic shoe manufacturers in the world were invited to submit proposals for all-around athletic shoes. Then,all the top foot doctors were asked to evaluate the shoe while soldiers tested them. They came to the conclusion that there wasn't one shoe that could do it all. The Army would have to provide at least two or even three different types of shoes to meet all contingencies.

So, the Army said, "too expensive, the soldier will have to furnish his own shoes."

Whatever happened to the good old high-topped Keds and PF Flyers? They came in your basic black canvass with white rubber soles and white shoe laces (although I've seen old pictures of soldiers in green canvassed ones). You could do everything in them — play basketball, handball, work in the garden and even jog in them.

Of course, when these shoes were still on the market, the Army was still into running in combat boots and didn't think to consider that one shoe wasn't capable of "doing it all."

Then we came into the enlightened age. People began to write books about running and the next thing you knew, doctors were studying the foot and the shoe. Army doctors were no different.

"Boots aren't made for running. They cause shin splints, stress fractures, warp the feet and probably contribute to Osgood Schlater's disease," they said, horrified at the thought that the Army had been running in combat boots for two centuries.

So we, in the new, enlightened, high-tech Army went to running shoes for PT. But because one shoe couldn't do it all, we buy our own shoes.

And my time had come. I needed new shoes.

So I decided to ask some of the guys and gals during PT one morning what they'd recommend.

The major immediately let me know his were the best, the fastest. They were certainly the loudest. Looked like they'd last been used by a psychedelic disco dancer.

"What they cost?," I asked.

"A mere $65," he said proudly, "Look at that tread, see all the neat arrows and pin-striping. I can hardly hold them back."

"Nice," I said, moving on to the next person, while noting that "speedy shoes" was the only one from the office I could outrun.

My survey was leading no place. Everyone bragged about how great his or her shoes were, but when I asked them if they had any problems, they generally admitted to foot problems. Even those whose shoes carried a $50-and-up price tag.

Finally, out of desperation, I decided to ask "Airborne Annie" what type of shoes she wore, figuring they'd be something exotic and expensive since she set the track on fire whenever she ran.

"Oh these," she said. "Got them at K-Mart during a Blue Light Special. They were on sale for $19.95."

"But how can you run so fast in such cheap shoes," I wanted to know.

"I push myself," she said.

"And they don't hurt your feet?," I persisted.

"Nah, only wimps have foot problems," she said.

I was weighing all this information when an elderly gent with "old sarge" written on his t-shirt went plodding past me in combat boots. "Say hey," I hailed him as I ran to pull up alongside. "I notice you're running in combat boots."

"That's what the Army issued me, sonny," he said.

"But everyone else runs in running shoes," I puffed.

"Yeah, and everyone else complains about foot problems. Didn't have foot problems in the old days. Back then your feet always hurt and you accepted it as a natural course of events."

"I don't know what they were thinking when they put us into running shoes. Are we supposed to go into combat carrying running shoes in our back packs so we can change into them when we need to run after the enemy?"

"Phooey, the Army went to a lot of time, effort and money to come up with combat boots. If you can walk in the dadburn things, you should be able to run in 'em, too."

"Good point," I said as I fell off the pace to contemplate my toenails poking through the tops of my running shoes.

National Guard, Reserves critical to defense

Association of the U.S. Army

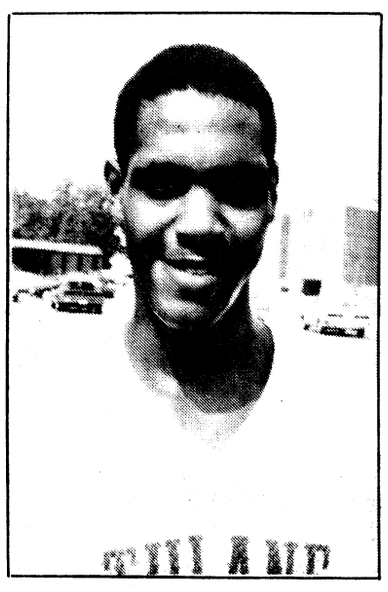
Since 1973, when our country ceased reliance on conscription to obtain our military manpower, we have found it necessary to assign increasingly important roles to the National Guard and the Reserve Forces.

Today, one out of three Americans in uniform is a member of the National Guard or Reserve, a citizen-volunteer whose military duty is a demanding commitment, in addition to the member's full-time career and family responsibilities.

The increasing emphasis on assignment of missions to the reserve components requires that they be fully manned and equipped and that they steadily improve their standards of training, readiness and preparedness.

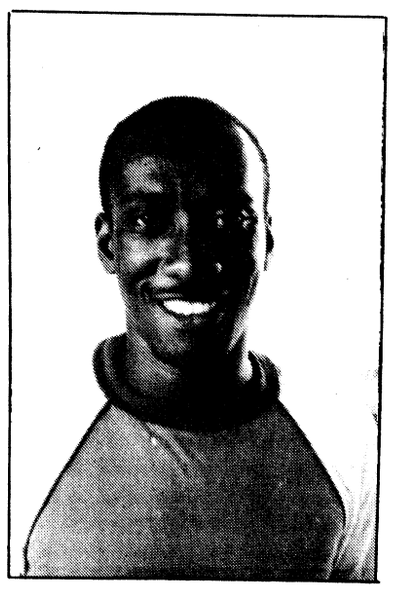
These requirements have extended reserve component training time and have increased the numbers in the Reserve and National Guard ranks, which, in turn, have exposed more and more civilian employers to the unique character of the citizen-soldier.

These days, employers have a critical role in maintaining the personnel strength of the National Guard and Reserve. Research conducted for the Department of Defense discloses that Guard members and Reservists are far more likely to remain in military service when their employers support their participation.



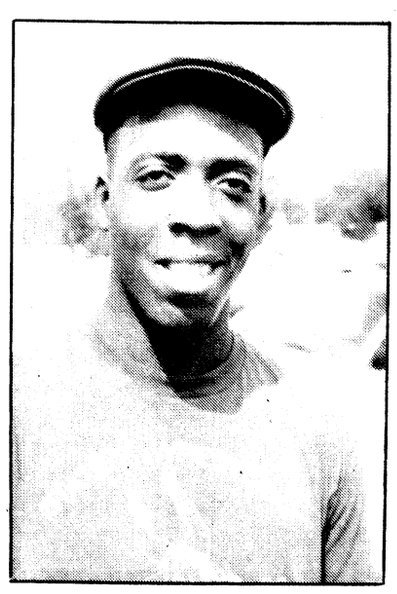
Other studies have concluded that nearly a third of those who choose to leave the Guard and Reserve do so because of conflicts between the full-time demands of their civilian employment and the part-time responsibilities of their military duties.

The National Guard and the Reserves are effective forces today, not only through the efforts of the 1.6 million dedicated part-time professionals who would quickly become full-time fighters for freedom in an emergency, but also because of the understanding, cooperation and encouragement of so many thousands of their civilian employers.



VARIOUS VOICES / What changes would you make to the post's sports program?

SFC John Nelson, MEDDAC - "I think sports should be supported more at the unit level. I would provide more money for uniforms and equipment."



SP4 Eric Lister, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 2/69th 197 Infantry - "I think they should implement the sports into the physical training program. If they implement sports into PT instead of just basic calestenics, people would be more apt to participate on their unit teams."

SSgt. Russell Datts, Company C, 197th Infantry Support, - "I would encourage the units to support it especially since the Army is enforcing physical fitness. I think the sports program should be combined with PT. Give the sports program to the soldiers and the outcome will be more physically fit soldiers."

MSgt. Robert Beverley, Company B, 1st Battalion, 11 Infantry Regiment, The School Brigade - "I would put more money into the sports program. I think we need post teams. A post football team or any kind of team promotes esprit de corps, if a team is doing well, everyone tends to rally around them and it gives people something in common to support."

SP4 Alvin Stewart, Headquarters Company, 2/69th, 197th Infantry, - "I would encourage commanders to dedicate more time to athletics especially for practice time. A team can't win without practice."

SSgt. Ronnie Basnight, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 29th Infantry Regiment - "I think that more command emphasis should be placed on sports. Commanders should try to encourage soldiers to participate more in the various sports activities offered."

Employees have until Dec. 31 to voluntarily switch to FERS

By Becky Obert
Bayonet staff writer

Workers enrolled in the Civil Service Retirement System have until Dec. 31 to voluntarily switch to the new Federal Employees Retirement System.

Called FERS, the new system was developed in response to the high cost to the federal government of the CSRS. Because it was designed to save the government money, many CSRS employees view the new system with skepticism.

The big question workers have is, 'will FERS be a better retirement system for me?' The answer is, it depends.

As a general rule, if you have had only one employer (the federal government), do not qualify for a Social Security pension, and plan to stay with civil service until retirement, then the CSRS is the best plan to be in.

Under the CSRS, you contribute 7 percent of your base income, not including bonuses or overtime. At age 55, you can retire with 30 years service and draw full benefits.

The government uses an annuity formula to determine your benefits, based on your three highest consecutive years of basic pay. These three years are averaged and this is called you high-three average salary. Your pension is determined by how many years service you have, and you get a percentage of your high-three salary for the number of years you have worked.

For example, if you retired with 30 years service, you would be entitled to a pension equal to 56 percent of you high-three average salary.

You can draw a full pension even if you have other retirement income or start a second career. And you will be entitled to a cost of living adjustment every year, which helps keep retirement benefits in line with inflation. This means that your retirement dollars keep the same buying power year after year, which is protection not provided by many other retirement plans.

One disadvantage of the CSRS, however, is that you cannot retire before age 55. If you complete 30 years service at age 52 and choose to quit work, you have to wait until age 55 to begin receiving your deferred annuity.

If you opt to withdraw your contributions and quit work, you can do so, but you will not receive any interest on the money, and you will no longer be eligible for a CSRS pension.

If you return to federal employment, you must pay back your contributions plus interest, to regain your retirement benefits.

If you are married and your spouse is entitled to a full Social Security pension, you also need to know about the the Public Pension Offset.

If your spouse has earned a Social Security benefit and you have earned little or no benefit, you can receive an additional Social Security befefit based on your spouse's benefit. If you begin taking this benefit at age 65, it will amount to one-half of the amount your spouse receives.

However, if you retire under CSRS and are also eligible for Social Security benefits as a spouse or survivor, your benefit is reduced. For every $3 you receive from your CSRS pension, your Social Security spousal benefit will be reduced by $2. This does not apply to any Social Security benefits you are entitled to due to your own payments into Social Security.

The Windfall Elimination Provision takes care of your earned Social Security benefits. It is aimed at workers who have less than 30 years coverage in Social Security and who are also drawing a pension from federal service.

The workers it applies to are: those who reach age 62 after 1985 and are eligible for a SS benefit with less than 30 years coverage; are first eligible to retire after Dec. 31, 1985; and, were not employed in a federal job mandated to be covered by SS on Jan. 1, 1985.

In order to eliminate the "windfall" that could result if you were paid both a CSRS pension and full SS benefits, a modified formula is used to calculate your SS entitlement.

If this applies to your situation, you should check the FERS Transfer Handbook, page 108, to figure just how much your SS benefit will be reduced.

In general, the CSRS is a good retirement plan for employees who know that they will stay with the federal government until they are eligible to retire.

If you are one of these people, you still may want to look into signing up for one part of the new FERS plan. It's called the Thrift Savings Plan, and it allows you to contribute up the 5 percent of your base pay, which is invested in government securities. You get a tax break because the money comes out of your pay before federal and many state and local income taxes are figured. You won't owe taxes on the contributions until you withdraw them after retirement, and then the taxes you owe could be lower.

Editor's note: The FERS Transfer Handbook was the source of the information contained in this story. Next week — which plan is best for workers who don't plan to stay in civil service.

Advisors trained to help you compare the benefit plans

USAIC Public Affairs Office

To help employees make the decision, the Office of Personnel Management in Washington, D.C., has printed and distributed a 124-page Transfer Handbook. The handbook cannot make the decision for you, but it provides vital information about both programs to help you decide for your self.

The Fort Benning Civilian Personnel Office has trained approximately 90 people from all over post, to help you compare the two systems. Called decision advisors, these people spent four days in a FERS advisor class, learning the ins and outs of the new system.

They also have a floppy disc which can run different retirement plans for you (you must have an IBM compatible computer to use this disc). You can take your personal factors and plug them in to the plan, which will provide a printout of your potential benefits under both the CSRS and FERS.

"The decision advisors cannot make the decision for you," said Alex Van Heuvel, chief of the Technical Services Branch, Civilian Personnel Office.

If you have paid into the Social Security retirement system, you will also need a record of your payments with them. This information can be obtained by filling out a Form SSA-7004 FERS and mailing it to the Social Security Administration. These forms are available at CPO.

Check with your administration office to see who the decision advisor is for your directorate or activity.

Variety of volunteer jobs available

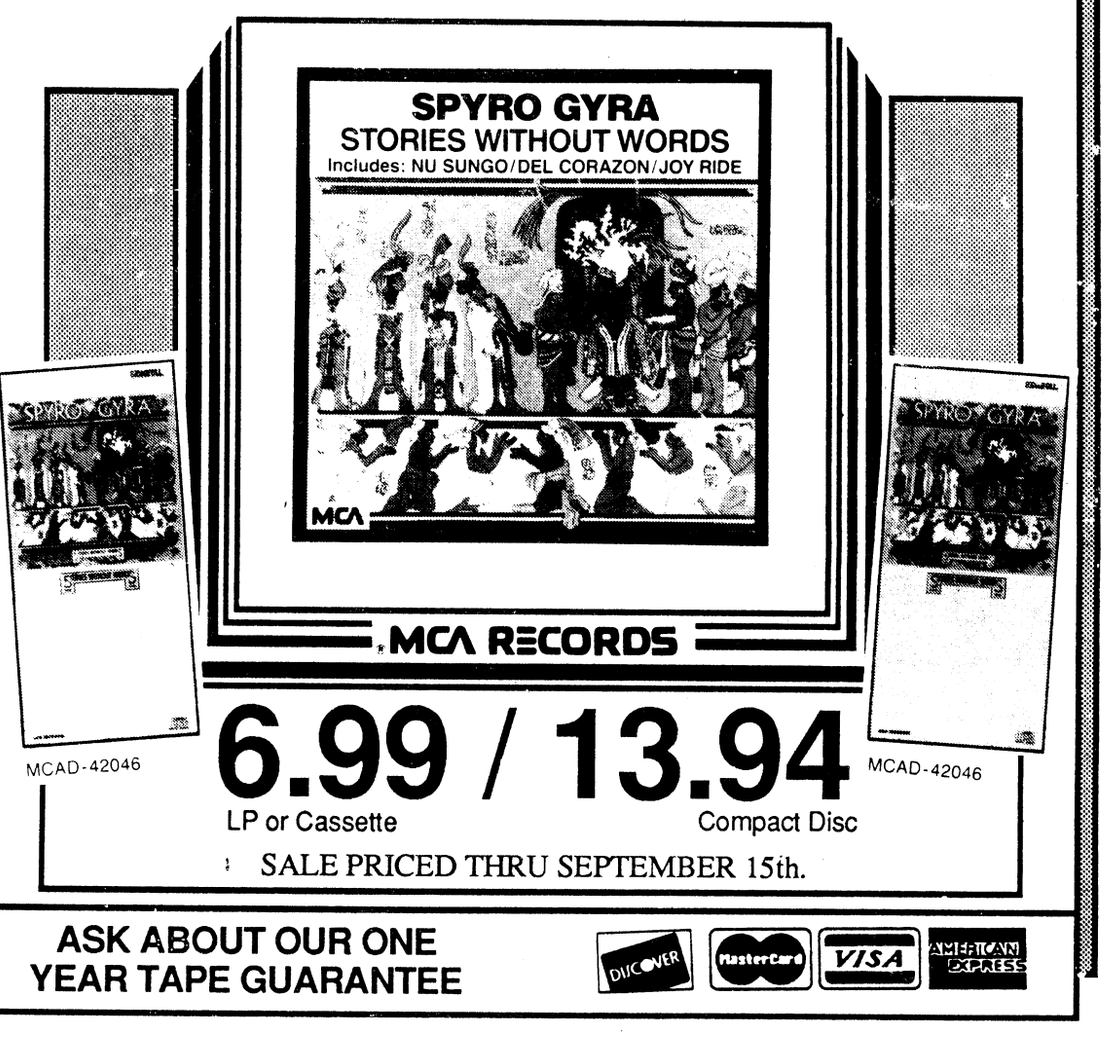
The Volunteer Resource Center is a clearing house of information for 24 organizations on the installation involving volunteers. If you are looking for ways to gain experience for possible paid employment or just want to keep your skills current, stop by the Volunteer Resource Center and find out about the following positions:

Library-Just the thing for the person who likes to spend time in a library. You will shelve books, put up newspapers and assist in mending those books that are tattered.

Clerk Typist-ACS has a need for three volunteers to work in the AER office. Typing is a must, with accuracy more important than speed; filing, answering phones, distributing messages, referring individuals to the right person are a part of the responsiblities.

Receptionist-The Red Cross needs volunteers to answer phones and to do general office work. Typing skills are helpful.



Veterinary Clinic-The clinic needs a receptionist who will file, make appointments and fill out patient records. This falls under the Red Cross.

Religious Education Center-The center needs teachers, teacher's aides, substitute teachers, registrars and librarians to help out during the week and on weekends.

Learning Abilities Center-The center needs an assistant to work with children who have learning disabilities. Duties include placing and organizing activities, and updating records.

International Wives Club-The club needs a citizenship teacher for evening classes. Must have a good working knowledge of English.

Child care is provided at Tot Town or with Home Child Givers. Now is the time to take advantage of what is offered while the children are being cared for by professionals. For more information, please call 545-5602 or stop by the DPCS, building number 241, room 210.

Women make vital contributions to our nation's defense

By Janet Lackey
Army News Service

In this, the year of the Bicentennial of the U.S. Constitution, Women's Equality Day celebrates the 67th anniversary of the date women were included in the preamble, "We the People."

Aug. 26 marked the passage of the 19th amendment to the Constitution in 1920. The amendment granted suffrage (the right to vote) to women.

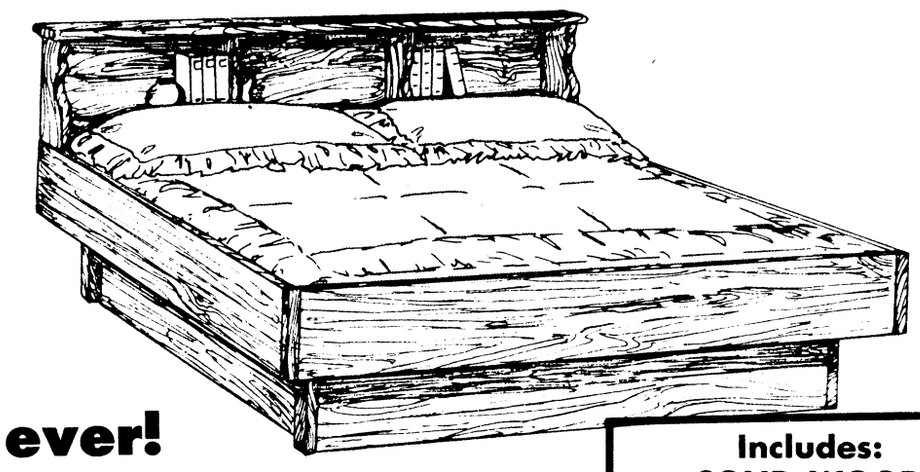
The day represents much more than just the passage of the amendment. It focuses on the Amendment's symbolic importance in recognizing women as full participants in the electoral process. The anniversary also celebrates the 19th amendment as the first of many steps toward Women's Equality in business, government and industry.

The first step was many years in the coming.

In 1919, Congress finally passed the 19th amendment, but it wasn't until August of 1920 that it was ratified by the required number of states.

Since then, women have become integrated into all parts of American life, including the Armed Forces. Secretary of Defense Caspar W. Weinberger has said, "Women in DoD have responded to the challenges of citizenship with courage, dedication and perseverance."

"Both civilian and military women have every reason to be proud of every aspect of their achievements. We owe them a debt of gratitude for the vital contributions they have made to the security of our nations."



There are more than 83,000 women in the active Army, comprising 10.6 percent of the force. Women make up 10.5 percent of the reserve components — almost 80,000 soldiers.

More than 140,000 women work for the Department of the Army as civilian employees.

Women serve the Army at all levels and in almost every type of job. They hold every rank from private through Brigadier General, and are in pay grades GS-01

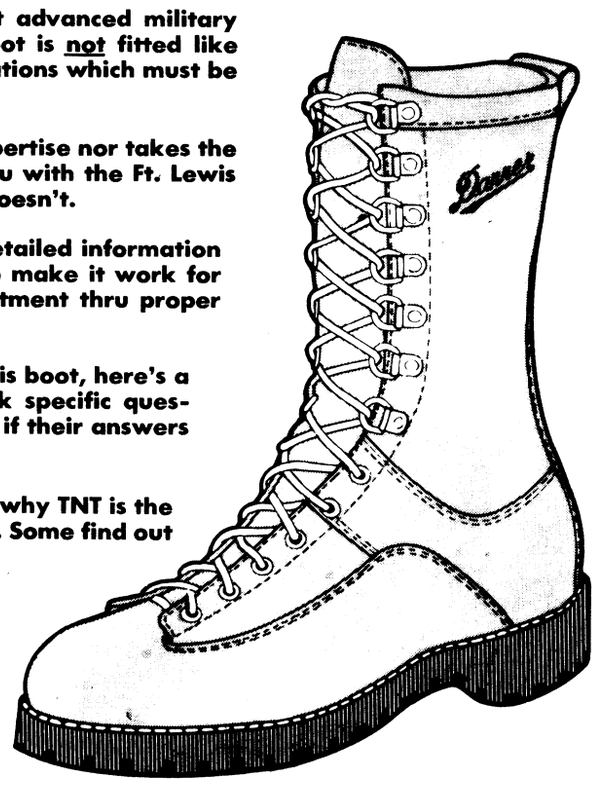
IMPORTANT MESSAGE:

(1) The Danner Ft. Lewis boot is the most advanced military boot on the market. This high tech boot is not fitted like other boots. There are special considerations which must be taken into account.



(2) No other store (except TNT) has the expertise nor takes the extra care necessary to correctly fit you with the Ft. Lewis boot. Danner won't; the competition doesn't.

(3) Only TNT takes the time to give you detailed information on (a) how the boot works, (b) how to make it work for you and (c) how to protect your investment thru proper care & feeding.

(4) If you are truly interested in the Ft. Lewis boot, here's a simple test: Go to the competition, ask specific questions, then come to TNT & we'll tell you if their answers are correct.

(5) Believe this - there are definite reasons why TNT is the #1 retailer of the Danner Ft. Lewis Boot. Some find out why.

(6) It takes time to get correctly fitted (approx. 30 min.), so keep this in mind. When you get the correct fit, you'll swear by the Ft. Lewis Boot (when you get the wrong fit, you'll swear at the Ft. Lewis Boot.) Now whom do you trust? Them or Us?

36th Engrs.

By Shawn Bryson
36th Engineer Group correspondent

For the soldiers of Co. A, 43rd Eng. Bn., 36th Eng. Grp., preparation will be the key to a successful trip to the National Training Center at Fort Irwin, Calif.

Getting the soldiers mentally prepared for an exerciese of this caliber was a long process dating back to April, according to Capt. S. W. Winbush, Co. A, Commander.

The Alpha Company Engineers (ACE) left for the NTC Aug. 23 along with soldiers from the 67th Maint. Bn. and soldiers from the 197th Inf. Bde. via Lawson Army Airfield here.

"It took more training to get prepared for the exercise than ordinary field training exercises because we are going to be doing combat engineer work," Winbush said. "The primary military occupational specialties (MOS) of most of the ACE soldiers deal with carpentry, heavy equipment operators, plumbing, and electrical wiring. However, in support of the 197th Inf. Bde., the ACE soldiers will be the combat engineer element of the opposing forces."

"The ACE soldiers are used to constructing buildings and roads and had to train hard to reaquaint themselves with combat engineering," Winbush said. "A field training exercise in April proved to be a successful tool in preparing the soldiers for the NTC. The projects for the FTX were things such as digging a tank ditch, placing triple strand concertina wire fences and performing route recons."

Winbush expects the majority of the work at NTC to be done at night which will be another challenge for the ACE soldiers. He emphasized that the TEA (Training Experience Attitude) formula for preparation for NTC has played a big part in readying the soldiers for the difficult desert training.

"Upon arrival the soldiers recieved two days of training at the OPFORS (opposing forces) Academy, which teaches the soldiers the basic Russian fighting techniques, in turn, giving the soldiers of the 197th a better training experience," Winbush said.

While many soldiers continue to sweat out the intense Georgia heat, other Fort Benning soldiers are getting a taste of what real heat is all about.

On August 23, 151 soldiers from the 67th Maintenance Battalion, 36th Engineer Group deployed to Fort Irwin, California in support of the 197th Infantry Brigade, which will be training at the National Training Center through mid-September.

According to Capt. Carl Runyon, commander of the 608th Ord Co., the 608th will be the command and control center for the 533rd Trans Co. and the 598th Maint Co. both of the 67th Maint Bn..

Runyon said the 120 soldiers from the 608th will be providing ammunition supply points for the 197th with 29 soldiers from the 533rd providing transportation support to the Infantry Brigade.

"The 533rd spearheaded the exercise as they convoyed to Fort Irwin on Aug. 16 loaded with much of the equipment and vehicles to be used during the exercise," Runyon said. "This deployment was unique because the soldiers gained experience in rail loading and also in air movement."

"I'm glad that soldiers are given this kind of experience. It's another eye-opener for our soldiers and gives them a chance to broaden their military horizon," Runyon concluded. "We expect the exercise to be a fast paced and hectic exercise, but the experience gained from the desert training will be invaluable for the soldiers."

ITC

By Bradley Iwafuchi
9th Battalion, 2nd ITB

The cadre at Company B, 9th Battalion, 2nd Infantry Training Brigade have achieved another milestone in their training of infantry OSUT soldiers. The company was presented with an Infantry Training Center streamer by Col. Victor E. Stamey, commander of the 2nd ITB, for the end of cycle test. This marked B-Company's 16th streamer in the last two years. What made this EOCT award an acomplishment was that all 197 men who took the test were first time go's, and out of this number 174 soldiers maxed the EOCT.

How has B-9-2 been able to achieve such high standards in the past two years? The answer lies with the cadre of B-9-2 who train these infantrymen, not only do well on the EOCT, but to serve competently with units around the world.

B-9-2 EOCT re-enforcement training consist of a "round-robin" course explained Staff Sgt. Charles Alston. "The men go from task station to task station learning the particular skill." This training is very similar to how the set-up is at AO Law. AO Law is the test site where OSUT infantrymen are tested on infantry skills at several different stations. B-9-2 re-enforcement is so intense, Staff Sgt. Alston feels that "we're harder in grading than AO Law."

Sgt. 1st Class David Zak attributes the success of B-9-2 training to Sgt. 1st Class Jack Flowers who helped develop the "round robin" re-enforcement training. "We've continued the program," Zak stated, "if the platoon does well in training, the company's success follows." Zak added that this (round-robin) training allows the men to be "comfortable when they are at AO Law."

As one of the old-timers at B Company, 1st Sgt. Larry Graham has been at the company for two years and has seen it all. He feels that the "success of the unit is based on four things: First, the word 'minimum' isn't used. Second, is the fortune of having a strong senior drill sergeant. Third, having drill sergeants who believe in their job and care for the trainee. Fourth, is having a commander who can distinguish between officer and NCO business."

Capt. Mike Johnson is continually amazed at the "long hours, dedication and support that each drill sergeant gives." Capt. Johnson feels that "the numbers are mere indicators of the product. BRAVO company trains hard, thus we get superior results." If that's the case, B-9-2 should be winning streamers well into the future due to the dedicated cadre that instructs there.

197th Inf.

By George Mingee
197th Inf Bde correspondent

Before departing for the National Training Center at Fort Irwin, Calif., the officers and non-commissioned officers of the 197th Infantry Brigade attended a prayer breakfast. Chaplain (Col.) Matthew A. Zimmerman, was the guest speaker, giving an appropriate address focused on leadership.

Up to that moment, everyone had been wrapped up in preparations for the deployment to the National Training Center and time needed to be taken to talk with the "Big General" in the sky.

"Even though soldiers are always striving to do their fullest, sometimes they do have downfalls," said Chaplain Zimmerman. "That's where God expects you, with your leadership and guidance to come into play."

"When the Army tells you to be all that you can be, it means for you to start today and strive to your fullest."

Approximately 340 leaders enjoyed the hot breakfast, which was prepared by the soldiers of the 1st Battalion, 58th Infantry.

The morning was also filled with singing by members of the Protestant Services Choir, and encouraging comments were made by various leaders. All spiritual energies were devoted toward leading the soldiers on the battlefields at NTC.

Reserves

United States Army Reserve PAO

The 261st Medical Detachment from Fort Benning, Ga., attended two weeks of annual training at Canadian Forces Base Gagetown in New Brunswick, Canada.

This unit's part of a 4400-soldier task force consisting of Army Reserve, National Guard and active Army components.

"This exercise is the largest exercise ever to be conducted wholly by reserve components," said Maj. Gen. John Ricottilli Jr., 94th ARCOM commander.

The challenge to participants of Gagetown '87 was to be self-sufficient and to supply everything required to keep going for two weeks. This includes: food, water, medical care, fuel for over 1,000 vehicles and45 aircraft.

ITC redesignation ceremonies planned Saturday at Sand Hill

Infantry Training Center

A regimental redesignation ceremony for the 10 battalions of the United States Army Infantry Training Center will be held at 8 a.m. Saturday at Weatherby Field.

Maj. Gen. Kenneth C. Leuer, post commander, will be the reviewing officer and Col. R.S. Siegfried will be the host officer.

In case of inclement weather, the ceremony will be held at Theater No. 3, Sand Hill. All interested personnel are invited to attend.

Board will convene to select officers for advanced training

Army News Service

A board is scheduled to convene Dec. 2 to select Army officers for advanced management training, Military Personnel Center officials announced.

The Advanced Management Program gives colonels the chance to attend management courses with executives from government and private industry. Through daily contact with these other students, Army officers gain valuable experience to prepare them for management positions.

Civilian institutions design advanced management training courses to:

- Increase students capabilities for executive-level management.
- Expand their operational and planning techniques.
- Increase their ability to appraise economic, social, political and technological changes.

MILPERCEN is now accepting applications for advanced management training. An officer who wished to apply must have:

- At least 15, but not more than 26, years of active federal commissioned service before completing the course.
- At least one year of active service left after completing the course.
- A bachelor's degree or higher and be a graduate of a senior service college. The senior service college requirement can be waived of an officer meets the other criteria. Send requests for waivers to MILPERCEN (DAPC-OPB-D) at least 60 days before the selection board convenes Dec. 2.
- Demonstrated leadership and the ability to adapt to executive positions.
- Knowledge of command problems such as organization and administration.
- Staff experience.
- Proven potential for career development and intellectual growth.

Colonels who want to compete for advanced management training must send their requests for consideration to colonel's division, MILPERCEN, 200 Stovall St., Alexandria, Va. 22332-0400. Requests must include endorsements from the officer's commands, and must arrive by Nov. 2.

Officers selected for the training and made available by their commands, but who decline to attend, will not be eligible for further consideration. Officers selected, but not made available by their commands will be eligible for later consideration.

Those who have participated in the Advanced Management Program will not be considered for it again.

An officer who takes part in this training must remain on active duty for at least a year after completing the course.

How To Get A Stretch For The Price Of A Subcompact.

At National, we know how far your travel per diem has to go.

So we figured you would be interested in a way to get a little more car for your money.

For as little as $30, you can rent an Economy (or 'compact') car from National.

Which is exactly the same price as a 'subcompact' from the likes of Hertz or Avis.

Or, for just six dollars more, we can give you what they'd call a 'Premium' car for the same price as one of their 'Full-size' cars.

So, why feel all cramped up in one of theirs, when you could have the extra room to stretch out in one of ours?

For information and reservations, call 800-CAR-RENT.

We feature GM cars like this Buick Skylark.

Old charcoal is a fire hazard

By James E. Floyd
Chief Fire Inspector

If you were told that charcoal could start a fire through spontaneous combustion, would you believe it?

It's true! Damp charcoal briquettes, left over from the last barbecue season can indeed start a fire if conditions are right. Under certain conditions, charcoal reacts with air at a sufficient rate to cause the charcoal to heat spontaneously and ignite. Spontaneous heating occurs more readily in fresh charcoal than in old material. The more finely divided it is, the greater the hazard. The principal causes of spontaneous heating of charcoal appear to be:

- Lack of sufficient cooling and airing before shipment.
- Charcoal becoming wet.
- Friction in grinding of finer sizes, particularly of material insufficiently aired before grinding.

The average homeowner would seldom think of charcoal ever becoming a fire hazard as a result of spontaneous combustion. To reduce the probability of it ever happening, take the following precautions:

- Partly used charcoal, which has been put out with water should be discarded.
- The dust which is normally associated with bags of charcoal briquettes is more hazardous and should be discarded.
- Store remaining briquettes in a dry, well-ventilated area, preferably a remote location away from the home. Never let it become contaminated with foreign combustibles.

A GOOD PART-TIME JOB IS HARD TO FIND.

If you're headed back to civilian life, reserve yourself an extra income one weekend a month.

Did you know that one out of three Americans now "moonlights" to help make ends meet?

But as a returning veteran, you don't have to "moonlight." If you want an extra income, just "weekend" once a month with your local Army Reserve unit.

For instance, an E-5 with four years' experience now earns over $130 for a weekend's work. Over $2,000 a year, counting two weeks annual training pay.

As a Reservist, you also get PX privileges, low-cost life insurance, and retirement points toward a pension which begins five years before Social Security.

Wouldn't it be nice to have an extra income waiting when you get home?

Catholic bishops approve pastoral letter on the economy

By Phillip J. Reilly
Director of Religious Education

On Nov. 13, 1986, the National Conference of Catholic Bishops approved and promulgated a pastoral letter on Catholic teaching and the U.S. economy. The letter is entitled "Economic Justice for All." It is "a personal invitation to American Catholics to use the resources of our faith, the strength of our economy and the opportunities of our democracy to shape a society which better protects the dignity and basic rights of our sisters and brothers both in this land and around the world."

The pastoral letter is not a blueprint for the American economy. It does not embrace any particular theory of how the economy works, nor does it attempt to resolve the disputes between different schools of economic thought. Instead, "our letter turns to Scripture and to the social teachings of the church. There, we discover 'what our economic life must serve, what standards it must meet.'"

Some of the basic moral principles the letter presents for consideration are:

- Every economic decision and institution must be judged in light of whether it protects or undermines the dignity of the human person — the economy should serve people and not the other way around.
- Human dignity can be realized and protected only in community. We have many practical ways to measure and debate the health of our economy - gross national product, per capita income, stock market prices. The Christian vision of economic life looks beyond them all and asks, does economic life enhance or threaten our life together as a community?
- All people have a right to participate in the economic life of society. Basic justice demands that people be assured at least a minimum level of participation in the economy. It is wrong for a person or a group to be unfairly excluded or unable to participate or not contribute to the economy.
- All members of society have a special obligation to the poor and vulnerable. From the Scriptures and church teachings, we learn that the justice of a society is tested by the treatment of the poor. As followers of Christ, we are challenged to make a fundamental "option for the poor" — to speak for the voiceless, to defend the defenseless, to assess lifestyles, policies and social institutions in terms of their impact on the poor.
- Human rights are the minimum conditions for life in community. In Catholic teaching, human rights include not only civil and political rights, but economic rights as well. As Pope John XXIII declared, all people have a right to life, food, clothing, shelter, rest, medical care, education and employment. This means that when people are without a chance to earn a living and must go hungry and homeless, they are being denied basic rights.
- Society as a whole, acting through public and private institutions, has the moral responsibility to enhance human dignity and protect human rights. In a democracy, government is a means by which we can act together to protect what is important to us and to promote our common values.

These six moral principles are not the only ones presented in the pastoral letter, but they give an overview of the moral vision that the bishops are trying to share.

The bishops are quick to point out that this vision of economic life cannot exist in a vacuum, it must be translated into concrete measures. The pastoral letter goes on to spell out some specific applications of Catholic moral principles.

In this age of consumerism, "Economic Justice for All" will not be a best-seller, but it is a challenge to all of us who will "take up and read."

CHAPEL BRIEFS

Pre-baptism class meets Sunday

There will be a pre-baptism class for parents Sunday at 1:30 p.m. in the Religious Education Center. All parents who wish to have their children baptized in the Catholic Church must attend For more information, call 545-2771.

Community invited to PWOC fall sign-up

The Protestant Women of the Chapel will host a sign-up for the fall session of the group Sept. 10 at 9:30 a.m.

The sign-up will be held in the Religious Education Center, building 229, on the corner of Ingersoll and Dixie Roads.

The group provides opportunities for fellowship, spiritual growth and fun. Nursery services are provided for all PWOC functions.

The Fort Benning community is invited to join.

Catechetical Sunday planned for Sept. 20

The Confrateraity of Christian Doctrine (CCD), is a lay organization established in 1571 for the purpose of offering religious education to Catholic children, youth and adults. In 1905, Pope Pius X began a modern revival and expansion of the program when his directive, that CCD be established in every parish, was incorporated into Canon law. A decree of Vatican Council II reaffirmed the directive, and today the CCD in the U.S. has become the "basic cell of catechetical activity," as it includes numerous new developments outside the school system from the parish to national levels.

Each year, the U.S. Catholic Conference designates the third Sunday of September as "Catechetical Sunday." Every Catholic parish in the U.S. celebrates this day in some ceremony. To celebrate this day, the Fort Benning community will have a commissioning ceremony for the teachers and their aides

The teachers, having completed a minimum of six hours training, will be commissioned as Catechists by the pastor Chaplain Gott. The school year begins at 10 a.m. following Mass on Sept. 20.

MARSHAL'S VIEWPOINT

By Ronald E. McCuistion
Provost Marshal's Office

"Child Abuse" is an often misunderstood term. The most widely recognized meaning is "the repeated mistreatment or harm of a child by parents or guardians resulting in injury to the child." Child neglect differs in that it is an "emotional harm" done to a child. A more clear definition could be, what the parent does NOT do, rather than what he or she does.

In either case, both can leave scars that last a lifetime and scars that could rob a child of the chance to become a productive person.

Child abuse/neglect is a widespread problem: over one million cases are reported each year. It happens to children of every age, race, nationality, religion and economic group. Each time a child is abused, we all feel the effect.

Crime, delinquency and drug and alcohol abuse are just a few of the many social ills which may occur when a person has been mistreated as child. Sometimes even death can occur to the child who has been physically abused by an angry parent or guardian.

Cases of child abuse and neglect are one of the least-reported recurring crimes which occur within military families. This may be partly attributed to public confusion as to what constitutes child abuse as compared to "old-fashioned discipline."

The Army Child Advocacy Program is in existence at Fort Benning and on most other major Army installations. This agency is ready to assist families who may need their help or advice. Unfortunately, the majority of parents needing such services are reluctant to seek professional help on their own due to their fear of social or judicial sanctions.

Counseling and education sessions are available for those personnel referred to the program. However, as previously indicated, in too many instances the abused child and family do not help themselves. By recognizing common signs of child abuse/neglect, these troubled families can be identified.

Repeated or unexplained injury, neglected or malnourished appearance, or even isolated behavior of the family are examples of warning signals which often accompany the problem.

Child abuse or neglect is a symptom of parental problems and will not go away if ignored. If you suspect it, take the appropriate action and report it to the proper social agencies who can investigate and intervene if necessary. Social agencies may include the school nurse, a teacher, the ACS Child Advocacy Officer (545-7517), Parents Anonymous (687-3487), the medical authorities or the Military Police (545-5222/5223).

YOU could be the difference in a child's future.

Cavalry unit plays vital role

By Sally Roberts
197th Infantry Brigade correspondent

EDITOR'S NOTE: In September, the 197th Infantry Brigade will mark the 25th anniversary of its activation into the Regular Army at Fort Benning. The following is the fifth in a series of stories illustrating the history and traditions of the units of the 197th.

Although the vehicles of the cavalry may have changed from horses to M60 tanks, Troop A, 15th Cavalry still performs the same missions on the modern battlefield while supporting the 197th Infantry Brigade.

The mission of the armored cavalry troop is primarily reconnaissance and security; however, the troop may also be called upon to perform attack, defend or delay missions.

In performing these missions, the Cavalry protects and preserves the fighting ability of the other combined armed forces in the Brigade and helps these elements maintain the initiative during battle.

Troop A has seen duty in the Eastern Hemisphere, serving with the 1st Cavalry Division in Korea from 1963 to 1965.

Women have come along way since 1920. They've contributed much to American society and to the Army.

Women's Equality Day is a time to remember the significance of the 19th Amendment and to honor the advances of women since they became full citizens under our Constitution.

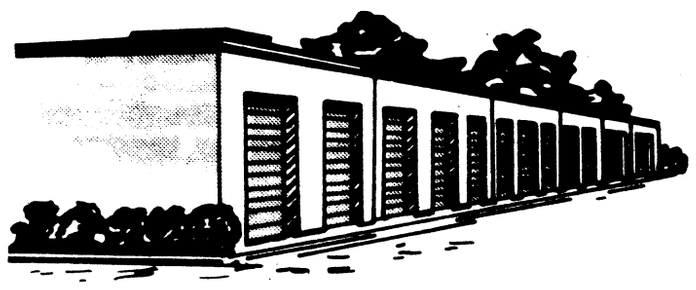
ASK THE JUDGE

By Lawrence Green
Staff Judge Advocate's office

Q. I have been receiving telephone calls from a company trying to sell me magazines. What should I be aware of?

A. The Better Business Bureau has published a list of eight tips on telephone solicitations:



1. Never give your credit card number over the phone unless you initiate the call.
2. Be cautious if the caller says an investment, purchase or charitable donation must be made immediately.
3. Never contribute or purchase anything under pressure.
4. Ask who is in charge of the company or organization represented.
5. Get specific names and titles of representatives.
6. Be wary of offers of free merchandise or prizes. You may end up paying handling fees greater than the value of the gifts.
7. Understand exactly what is being offered and ask for a written confirmantion of all orders.
8. Check the firm's reliability. Call your local Better Business Bureau at 324-0707.

Free babysitting to be offered at center

DPCA

On Sept. 18, personnel in the grade of E-1 through E-4 may receive free childcare services from 7 p.m. to midnight at the Marne Road Day Care Center.

The purposes of this program is to provide those with limited resources an opportunity to go out with their loved ones, shopping, walking or roller-skating, etc.

Marne Road Day Care Center can accomodate a total of 60 children in the following age groups:

- 18 toddlers age 15 months to three years
- 10 three-year olds (not in diapers)
- 35 four-year olds and up to the age of 10-12 years

All day care center rules apply, i.e., children must have current immunization record, cannot be ill, etc. Children MUST be picked up by midnight or parents must defray the cost themselves.

If response is good, personnel can sign up on a monthly basis.

The center requests that each unit provide Army Community Service with the names, rank, age and number of children of personnel desiring to participate by Sept. 10.

Individual soldiers or family members can make telephone response to ACS from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. at 545-4043/7517 or 544-4969.

Insurance 'hoax' frustrates VA

By Sgt. Maj. Rudi Williams, USA
American Forces Information Service

Many military and civilian magazines, newspapers and newsletter editors worldwide have unwittingly printed an "insurance dividend hoax" story. These accounts claim veterans can collect thousands of dollars from the National Service Life Insurance, even if they stopped paying premiums years ago.

"One of the most frustrating things is to see this hoax printed in DoD newsletters or base newspapers," said a Veterans Administration public affairs spokesman. "They probably see the story and think it's something good for veterans, but it's all a hoax..."

The VA's Philadelphia insurance center, the nation's fifth largest insurance system, receives more than 15,000 applications a week for the non-existent dividend.

"Nobody is writing to any civilian insurance company saying, 'I don't have a policy, but send me some money anyway,'" said the spokesman. "One reason the hoax refuses to die is that some Americans think the government gives out money if they qualify. Perhaps they see this as a chance to get some 'free money' that doesn't exist."

"We get thousands of callers with all kinds of different emotions," he said. "But most often, the caller will say, 'We didn't think it was possible, but we thought we'd check.'"

Robert W. Carey, director of the insurance center, explained: "World War II veterans have been the principal victims of the hoax since the early 1960s. We've been telling them for years that despite what a bogus. mimeographed flyer says, the VA does not pay dividends on lapsed National Service Life Insurance policies."

The bogus press release claims that the dividends were recently authorized by Congress. But Carey countered, "There has been no such legislation and there is none pending..."

"There was a one-time dividend at the close of World War II," said the VA spokesman. "In June 1949, the VA announced payment of the '1948 special dividend' to World War II veterans. Payment was based on premiums paid from the effective date of the policy to the anniversary date in 1948.

"The first checks were mailed in January of 1950, and by the end of that year, practically all policyholders or their beneficiaries had been paid," he continued.

"The hoax surfaced about 25 years ago and has become known as the 'insurance dividend hoax,'" he said. "It implies that dividends will be paid to any veteran, whether or not you're paying insurance premiums."

This year, more than 3 million current policyholders are sharing nearly $935 million in annual dividends. These dividends are paid automatically. No application is necessary.

"VA doesn't pay dividends on lapsed policies," the spokesman emphasized.

Housing office releases new eligibility dates

Post Housing Office

Whenever a soldier applies for military family housing, he/she is given an eligibility date. This date is not necessarily the date of application. each waiting list is maintained and housing is assigned in accordance with the "eligibility date." If, when called for quarters, a soldier is unable to move because of a lease, TDY, sickness, etc., he/she will be passed over until they are available for quarters, but they will maintain their original "eligibility date."

As of Aug. 24 the "eligibility date" of the last person to be assigned quarters in each category is as follows:

Hard work goes into every Bradley CAPEX

Ann M. McDonald

The Bradley crew moves out of the back entrance as quickly as possible to assume ground positions around the vehicle.

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

Lights! Action! Camera! Enter, stage left, the Bradley Infantry Fighting Vehicle; stage right, the M-113 armored personnel carrier; directly behind sits a stationary display of basic infantry equipment. No, this is not a set for a movie about the military, but it might as well be.

Red Cloud Range is like a stage, and there are many people behind the scenes; coordinating, directing, shooting and acting. All of this is done approximately twice a month for a capabilities exercise to show various people just what the Army's fighting force is capable of.

According to 1st Lt. Franklin Roach, the officer-in-charge of the Bradley portion of the CAPEX, everything has to be on cue, so there are many hours of practice involved before an actual demonstration is given to any particular audience.

"Timing is the key factor in our portion of the CAPEX," Roach said. "It looks pretty bad if the narrator says look at that target and then it gets shot down five minutes later.

"So in order for that not to happen," he said, "we have to have a radio operator available to relay what the announcer is saying to the people inside the vehicle."

Roach and his crew arrive on the scene with their vehicles, two days prior to any given exercise and practice exactly what they are going to do.

"When we bring the vehicles down here, they stay for the duration, so someone has to stay here with them constantly," Roach said.

"Each exercise is a complete company effort," he said, "from the logistics, to chow, ammunition, sound, and then we have to coordinate with the engineers to grade the range."

But Roach feels the role they play in the overall picture is worth it. "People need to see the vast differences between the Bradley and the 113."

Although the mobile part of the CAPEX outshines the stationary part of the program, they too play an intergral role in showing exactly what our firepower is all about.

According to Capt. Larry McAnneny, Company C commander, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, Small Arms, his soldiers are in charge of providing answers to the questions the public asks or to give a full briefing if need be.

His troops are in charge of 50-caliber machinegun, M-249 Squad Automatic Weapon, M-16A2 rifle and the 9mm caliber pistol and the Russian counterparts to each of those weapons.

"It takes my men approximately 24 hours to prepare for their portion of the CAPEX," McAnneny said, "let alone the research involved in seeking information on the Soviet counterpart weapons."

All of the hours put into these displays is part of the Army effort; the men of the 29th enjoy it. "It's nice to be able to pass on our knowledge of these weapons to people seeking information," one demonstrator said as he carried on his mission.

The Bradley Fighting Vehicle's firepower makes its mark downrange.

Members of the regiment field visitors' questions on the various weapons.

Most fatalities involving a school bus happen to children outside the vehicle

National Safety Council

For nearly 22 million students nationwide, the school day begins and ends with a trip on the school bus. Unfortunately, each year many youngsters are injured or even killed in school bus accidents.

Killed were 45 children and approximately 6,700 injured in school bus accidents during the 1984-85 school year, according to the National Safety Council. Of the fatalities, only 15 occurred while the child was aboard the bus. Most accidents happened as the child was boarding the vehicle or exiting the vehicle.

Although drivers are required by law to stop for a school bus, children should not rely on them to do so. In conjunction with National School Bus Safety Week (Sept. 20-26), the Council encourages parents to teach their youngsters these rules for getting on and off the school bus:

- When the school bus approaches, line up away from the street. Wait until the doors open before stepping into the roadway.
- When stepping onto the bus, use the hand rail.
- When leaving the bus, walk far enough in front of the vehicle for the driver to see you. Wait for a signal from the driver before beginning to cross the street.
- Do not cross the center line on the road until the driver has signaled that it is safe to begin walking.

The Council also suggests that parents review the correct way to cross the street with their children. Youngsters should always stop at the curb or the edge of the road, and look left, then right, and left again before crossing. If their vision is blocked by a parked car, they should go to the outer edge of the car, stop and look left-right-left again.

The "dart-and-dash," in which a child quickly enters the street without checking for traffic, is the most common type of pedestrain accident for young children.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

The Safety Office is giving away free T-shirts. All you have to do is come by Building 80 and explain how seat belts helped you survive an accident. Or call 545-3267. Help us spread the word that seat belts save lives.

Safety update: In a recent motorcycle accident at another installation, a soldier was killed because the helmet he was wearing was not proprly fitted and came off upon impact.

AR 385-55 requires motorcycle riders to wear a properly fastened, approved helmet. Common sense would dictate that the helmet fit the individual who is wearing the helmet. Now it is no longer just logical, it is written in blood. Helmets must be of approved construction, properly fastened and fitted to the individual.

The Directorate of Engineering and Housing reminds residents to use water sparingly. Watering of lawns during hot daylight hours results in a large water loss due to evaporation. This fact, coupled with the cost of approximately $3 per hour for lawn watering, indicates a need for conservartion measures. Watering of lawns should be done between 6 p.m. and 8 a.m. For more information, call 545-7533.

Woodworking Safety Class: The Arts and Crafts Center offers a woodworking safety class every Saturday at 8:30 a.m. The class is required for anyone who wishes to use the woodworking shop, for safety reasons. Upon completion of the class, qualified persons will be issued a qualification card that allows them entry into the woodworking shop. For more information, call 545-3677 or drop by the center in Building 2783.

Officers' Club: The Supper Club will have a Shrimp-a-Peel Saturday from 6 to 8:30 p.m. The menu is all the shrimp you can eat, plus roast beef, french fries, hush puppies, salads and dessert. Cost is $10.50 each for members and their guests, and $14.95 for non-members. The Lexington Room will be closed during this meal.

There will be a Ladies Night All Night Disco at the I-Bar Saturday, beginning at 9 p.m. Free snacks will be available at midnight. Cash prizes will be awarded every half-hour.

NCO Club: Wednesday is schnitzel night at the main NCO club. Dining is from 6 to 9 p.m., and the cost is $3.95 for adults and $2.50 for children under 12. On Saturdays, $6.95 buys a steak dinner from 6 to 9 p.m. Included is a Delmonico steak, a vegetable, potato and the trimmings.

Enjoy Top 40 music performed by a live band in the Golden Touch Lounge of the Main NCO Club. Performances are Tuesday and Thursday from 8 p.m. to midnight and Wednesday and Sunday from 8 p.m. to 1 a.m.

Disco is offered in the End of the Hall Lounge every Friday from 9 p.m. to 2 a.m. at the Main NCO Club.

The Sand Hill NCO Club offers an "all-you-can-eat" lunch Monday through Friday for only $3.75.

The Main NCO Club offers bingo every Tuesday and Thursday at 8 p.m. and Sunday at 2 p.m. The Sand Hill NCO Club offers community bingo on Monday and Wednesday at 7 p.m. and Saturdays at 2 p.m.

NCO Wives' Club: The NCO Wives Club is located in Building 2422 across from the Aviation Clinic on Lawson Army Airfield. Board meetings are the second Monday of each month at 10 a.m. The business meetings are the Wednesday following the board meeting at 10 a.m. The third Wednesday is the monthly luncheon and the fourth Wednesday is an activities brunch at 9:30 a.m.

Membership is $10 per year. Our bowling league will start at 9:30 a.m. Sept. 4 at the post exchange bowling center.

On Monday, the club will sponsor a bake sale in Building 4 by the classrooms. All money will go to the scholarship and welfare fund.

For more information, call Laura Schalavin at 682-3256 or Beverly Oliver at 682-0255.

'Hamburger Hill' premieres today

Army News Service

The motion picture "Hamburger Hill" is scheduled to premiere today at theaters around the country.

Filmed in the Philippines, the movie dwells on the story of a squad of 14 soldiers who fight in one of the most brutal battles of the Vietnam War. The film shows war at its worst and fought by young men at their best.

Operation "Apache Snow" was initiated May 10, 1969 when troops from the 101st Airborne Division encountered the enemy at the base of Dong AP BIA, designated "Hill 937." Ten days and 11 bloody assaults later, the men who fought there called it "Hamburger Hill."

"It took me 14 years before I could write about what happened to me in Vietnam," writer/producer Jim Carabatsos says. "Anyone who has had an intense experience can't write about it right away. I'm trying to serve the people I was with in Vietnam. There were good men over there."

The 14 unknown actors selected to portray the fictional squad underwent a training and weapons familiarity course at the U.S. Naval Base at Subic Bay in the Philippines. Command Sgt. Maj. Albert Neal, veteran of Korea and three tours in Vietnam, including the Battle of "Hamburger Hill," trained the actors in squad level warfare. They also were given special jungle training.

"The dedication of the cast impressed me," says Neal. "Each of the 14 actors made a tremendous effort to learn all about combat and jungle warfare. By the end of the filming, I had the same high regard for these men as I had for the soldiers I served with in Vietnam."

Retired Col. Joseph P. Conmy Jr., brigade commander of the battle of "Hamburger Hill," was senior military advisor to the filmmakers. The shooting schedule lasted 11 weeks and had the support of the U.S. Department of Defense. "Hamburger Hill" is the only film to have the support of two departments of defense: that of the U.S. and the Republic of the Philippines.

DEVON Presents the

NFL PICK with the PROS II CONTEST

That's right! Come play "NFL Pick with the Pros II" at Devon Stores and you could drive away in a brand new* 1988 Chevrolet Corvette at the end of the NFL season. Get ready football fans, the kickoff for Devon's "NFL Pick with the Pros II" contest is almost here. Bet you're excited! You know you can be a winner. Jimmy the Greek has nothing on you. Now you can prove it! If you can pick the winners, you could drive away at season's end in a brand new 1988 Chevrolet Corvette. How do you make the roster of Devon winners? Easy. Each week you will pick the winners of six NFL games during the sixteen weeks of the season and one of those games will be used as a tiebreaker. And whether it's a blowout or won on a last minute field goal, if your the best at picking winners, you could win all sixteen weeks. There will be eight area winners each week. The name of one of these lucky winners will be drawn as the winner of the weekly grand prize from one of our 16 great sponsors. The other seven winners will receive a 5" B&W TV. If there is a tie, the winner will be decided by the total points scored in the designated tiebreaker game. All winners and those who tied the winners will qualify for the DEVON GRAND PRIZE DRAWING at the end of the NFL season for the brand new* 1988 Chevrolet Corvette. So, whether you're a Giant or Bronco fan, believer in wide open offenses, or a rooter for a tough defense, and even if you just watch the games to see the cheerleaders, come to your local Devon Store each week during the season and play "NFL Pick with the Pros II". You never know, you could be the one driving onto your base behind the wheel of a hot, new 1988 Chevrolet Corvette.

YOU COULD WIN THIS BRAND NEW 1988 CHEVROLET CORVETTE

Look for the "NFL Pick with the Pros II" display at your local DEVON STORE for complete entry forms and full contest rules.

Army Marksmanship Skeet Team wins Pan-Am gold

Douglas Ide

SSgt. Matthew Dryke from Fort Benning's U.S. Army Marksmanship Team, fires at a target during the skeet shooting competition at the Pan American Games in Indianapolis Aug. 13. Dryke won the gold medal in individual skeet and combinded with SFC Alger Mullins, also from Benning's marksmanship team, and Dan Carlisle to bring home the gold in team skeet competition.

By Douglas Ide
Fort Benjamin Harrison PAO

FORT BENJAMIN HARRISON, Ind. — The U.S. Skeet Shooting Team put on a golden performance Aug. 12 and 13, winning the team and individual gold medals and individual silver medal in the Pan-American games in Indianapolis.

SSgt. Matthew Dryke, from the U.S. Army Marksmanship Team at Fort Benning, Ga., shot a perfect 25 in the medal round of the individual competition to capture the gold medal. He finished with a total score of 221 out of 225.

Second place in the individual competition went to Dryke's team mate, SFC Class Alger Mullins, also on the marksmanship team at Benning. He finished one shot back of Dryke with a 220, as did third place finisher Brian Gabriel of Canada. But Gabriel shot a 24 in the final round, whereas Mullins matched Dryke with a perfect 25 to earn the silver.

The six shooters with the highest score after 200 shots advance to a final round, or medal round, of 25 additional shots. In the event of a tie, as with Mullins and Gabriel, the highest score in the final round wins.

The third member of the U.S. team, Dan Carlisle, finished the competition in seventh place with a score of 193 out of 200. Carlisle missed the medal round by one point, as the lowest score to advance was 194.

A day earlier, the three Americans combined for the top score in the team portion of the competition. The team score is taken from the combined scores of the team's three shooters after 150 shots. The U.S. scored 439 out of 450, followed by Cuba with 431 and Canada with 430.

Dryke and Mullins are used to finishing high in international skeet competition, often battling each other for the gold. Mullins said he would rather compete against Dryke, who is considered by many as the best in the world in international skeet-shooting, because "he's the best competition I've ever been up against."

Dryke was also the 1983 Pan Am gold medal winner in Caracas, Venezuela, when he tied the Pan Am record of 199, set by Athos Pisana of Brazil in 1975, and was the 1984 Olympic gold medal winner.

Mullins is co-holder of the world record in team skeet competition and is a three-time silver medalist in the National Championships.

The weather conditions during the competition were nearly perfect as the wind was low and the temperatures were mild. Wind can cause targets to "jump around," said Mullins, making it difficult to track them.

A shooter has as little as 3/10th's of a second once he sees the target to raise the gun, get the proper lead and shoot the target, according to Mullins. The American squad shoots from a crouch, called an unorthodox style, as opposed to the classical style of standing erect, which helps the U.S. shooters. The closer to the ground, according to Mullins, the more stable the body is during tracking and firing.

"I like to get my whole body into the shot," said Dryke. "I like to make the shot part of my body." Dryke also feels the crouching style helps make him aggressive. That aggressiveness has definitely worked, but not by itself. Dryke also has a winning attitude.

"Winning is the most important thing," he said. "If you don't have that attitude, you shouldn't be out there."

Dubis takes medal

By David Marks
Fort Benjamin Harrison PAO

FORT BENJAMIN HARRISON, Ind. — If you watched Glenn Dubis' rifle barrel, you saw the muxxle rise and fall ever so slightly. It became still, totally. Then, CRACK. A puff of smoke exited the barrel. Dubis leaned over to calmly examine his aim through his spotting scope.

He must have been pleased with what he saw. The Army captain from Fort Benning, Ga., performed those actions again and again to take the gold medal in the three-position, smallbore rifle competition at the Pan—American Games in Indianapolis.

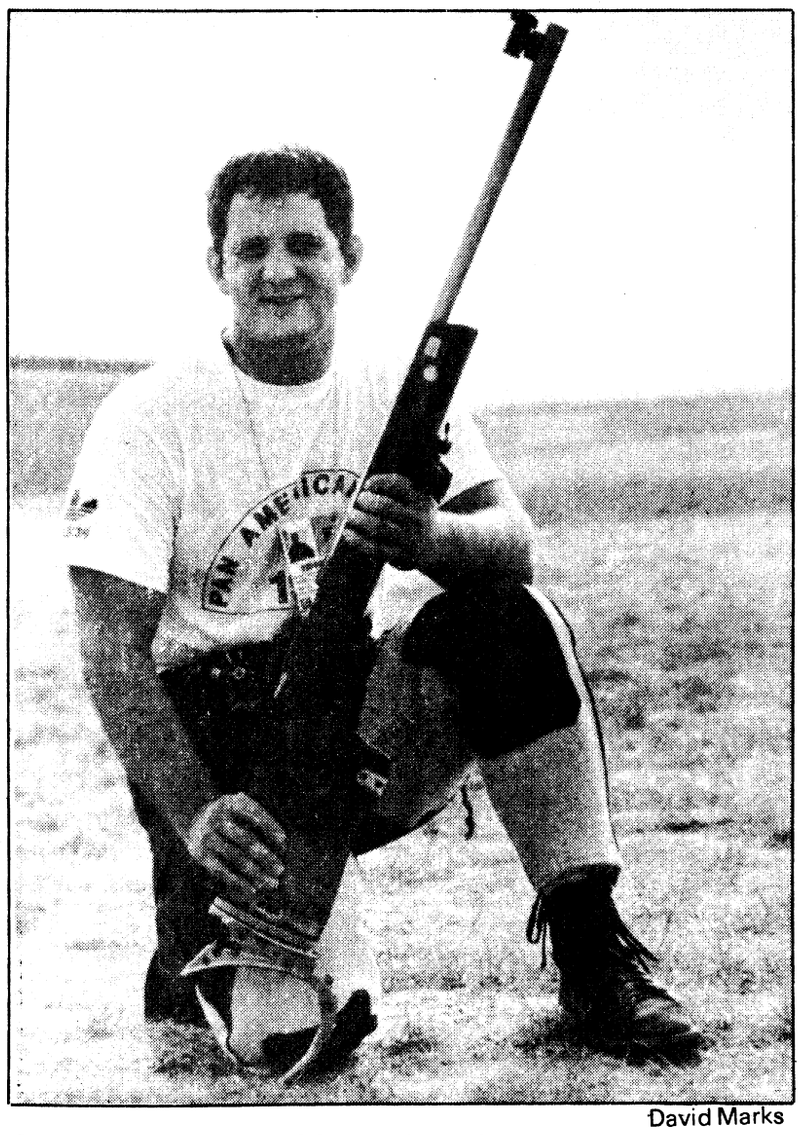
Two days later, on Aug. 15, Dubis won the silver medal in the air rifle competition.

He is comfortable with the laurels of victory. As a member of the prestigious United States Army Marksmanship Unit, Dubis spends 75 percent of the year shooting in international competitions. He's made the United States Shooting Team every year since 1982 and has earned the International Distinguished Badge (the highest badge awarded to both military and civilian shooters). Dubis holds two world records in the World 300-Meter Championships.

He's enjoyed competitive shooting since his years at Bethel Park High School in suburban Pittsburg. Dubis became interested in the Army's marksmanship unit while attending Penn State.

"I made all-American one year and decided that's what I wanted, to join the Army and become the best shooter possible," Dubis said. "In college, I figured I hadn't yet reached my potential."

The select few, like Dubis, who get into the marksmanship units put in long hours honing their skills. "It's best for second lieutenants," Dubis explained. "Because they have their college shooting behind them and they've got some direction."



But even the young officers don't produce until their second tour, and that tour lasts for three years," Dubis said. "It takes a lot of time to get some medals out of someone, to get him to really produce and be a champion for the United States."

The 28-year old infantry officer has called Fort Benning home ever since completing his Officer Basic Course in February 1982. He went directly into the marksmanship unit and, except for an eight-month stint as an infantry platoon leader, has been there ever since.

He didn't win any individual medals until the 1986 World 300-Meter Championships. Dubis' two world records from that match remain unbroken.

Dubis said it's possible for a soldier to work his way up and be chosen for the marksmanship unit, but it's a long and difficult process.

A prospective shooter would have to begin competing in the local post championship, move up to the major command championship and eventually reach the all-Army championship. If the soldier does well there, he might be chosen to compete with the Summer Pick-Up Team, and if he shoots well there, he might get assigned to the Marksmanship Training Unit at Fort Benning.

David Marks

Glenn Dubis with his .22-long free rifle.

At that point, the soldier is still a step away from the U.S.A. Marksmanship Unit.

"It's a long road, and you've got to be committed to shooting to do something like that," Dubis said. "You've really got to enjoy it, and it has to be something you plan on doing for a lifetime."

Mile-long running formation

Imagine a running formation of soldiers stretching almost a mile long. Not a familiar sight on Fort Benning except for one place; 1st Battalion, 507th Parachute Infantry Regiment during one of their bi-monthly battalion runs.

According to Capt. Dave Johnson, S-1, 1/507th PIR, over 2,000 soldiers participate in any given run.

"We do it to promote unit cohesion and maintain physical fitness," Johnson said, "plus it promotes Esprit de Corps within the unit."

He said they are up before dawn to run the 4 mile course in the Army standard 32 minutes.

"This run gives our battalion a chance to do something en masse," Johnson said, "and it gives everyone in the unit a view of how big we really are."

"It really is something special," he said, "seeing all those troops sounding off and movtivated, being all they can be."

Six soldiers come out on top after preliminary screening for D.C. run

Final qualifying run Sept. 12 will decide who makes the team to represent Benning

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The results are in for the first of three 10-mile runs here preparing for the third annual "Army Ten-Miler" (Run The River Bridges) to be held in Washington, D.C. Oct. 11.

Lloyd McDonald of HHC 2nd Bde turned in the fastest time with 51:20:18 followed by Yeike Dasnan of 24th Co TSB with 55:22:12. Rounding out the top six were Accides Colon with 56:51:69, Abdullah Barutell at 58:29:00, Jim Cunningham ran a 58:36:57 and John McBurney finished with a 59:13:65. These times give you some idea of what you'll have to beat to make the team heading for D.C.

The Sports Office is sponsoring the three ten-mile runs. The next will be held Saturday with the final qualifing run to be held Sep. 12. Both will start a 7 a.m.. The top six runners will then be selected to represent Benning in Washington.

Runners having the best time in any one race or an average of any two or three will have the opportunity of joining the team.

Entering the Benning races is free and the Community Recreations Division will provide for transportation, lodging and entree fees for the 6-man team that will travel to Washington.

For more information and registration forms, go by the Fort Benning Sports Office in building 394 (Doughboy Stadium) or call 545-2332/7519.

Soldier sentenced to 20 years in prison for criminal assault

By Becky Obert
Bayonet staff writer

Two Fort Benning soldiers were recently court-martialed for crimes committed on post.

Sp4 Charles T. Winston of Company D, 197th Support Battalion, 197th Infantry Brigade, was sentenced to 20 years in prison for assault with intent to commit murder.

Winston admitted hitting Sp4 Eric Piava, also of the 197th, in the head with an aluminum tent pole during a fight Feb. 25.

The two men, both truck drivers working for the battalion, were unloading their vehicles at the motor pool when the incident occurred.

According to evidence presented at the trial, Winston had removed some equipment from Piava's truck, and when Piava objected, a verbal argument erupted, which led to physical blows.

Witnesses had twice separated the two men and left, thinking the fight was over. At this time, Winston picked up the tent pole and struck Piava, who was lying on the ground, in the head with it.

Winston testified at the court-martial that he had hit Piava with the pole, but did not intend to kill him.

Piava suffered brain damage as a result of the injury, and will be medically discharged from the Army, according to medical testimony.

In addition to 20 years confinement at hard labor, the court-martial panel also sentenced Winston to a dishonorable discharge and to total forfeiture of all pay and allowances at the Aug. 18 court-martial. He will serve his sentence at the U.S. Army Disciplinary Barracks at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas.

According to Capt. Michael Totin, assistant trial counsel on the case, Winston will be eligible for parole in approximately nine years.

MSgt. Anthony T. Tonogan was convicted Aug. 20 of wrongfully appropriating money from the Army Emergency Relief Fund.

Tonogan, currently assigned to Company A, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry, was working as the assistant AER officer at the time the offenses occurred.

He was convicted of misappropriating $431 and $500, on two separate occasions. Evidence showed that he also solicited another ACS employee to misappropriate funds. The employee declined and reported Tonogan to the authorities.

Tonogan later paid back the money he had taken.

Following his conviction, the judge sentenced Tonogan to be reduced to the grade of E-6 and to be reprimanded for his conduct.

Tonogan has over 20 years of service and is still eligible to retire at the reduced grade.

Soldiers march by during the Infantry Training Center's redesignation ceremony.

Ann M. McDonald

More than 6,000 people turn out for ITC redesignation ceremony

By Marsha Santiago
ITC Correspondent

On Saturday, while 1,200 soldiers stood at attention on Wetherby Field and another 5,000 soldiers watched, the nine training battalions and the reception battalion of the United States Army Infantry Training Center joined the regimental system.

The ceremony, the largest to date for the U.S. Army, marked the inactivation of the numerical designations and the reactivation of the battalions under the regimental system.

In the 1st Infantry Training Brigade, the first battalion became the 3rd Battalion, 32nd Infantry; the third battalion became the 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry; the fifth battalion became the 2nd Battalion, 54th Infantry; the sixth battalion became the 1st Battalion, 50th Infantry and the seventh battalion became the 2nd Battalion, 19th Infantry.

In the 2nd Infantry Training Brigade, the second battalion became the 4th Battalion, 30th Infantry; the fourth battalion became the 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry; the eighth battalion became the 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry; and the ninth battalion became the 4th Battalion, 36th Infantry.

The Reception Battalion became the 30th Adjutant General Battalion (Reception).

Col. R.S. Siegfried, USAITC commander, was host commander for the ceremony. Col. Victor E. Stamey, 2nd ITB commander, was the commander of troops. Col. Jose R. Feliciano is the 1st ITB commander.

Maj. Gen. Kenneth C. Leuer, commanding general of the U.S. Army Infantry Center and Fort Benning, was the reviewing officer and guest speaker for the ceremony. During his remarks, Leuer stated that the Training Center sets the standard for excellence, presenting a challenge for the rest of the Army to live up to.

Council says 400 will die over Labor Day weekend

National Safety Council

CHICAGO — Between 420 and 520 people may die in traffic accidents over the Labor Day weekend, according to the National Safety Council.

The Council also estimates that between 17,000 and 21,000 individuals may be seriously injured during the three-day period which begins at 6 p.m. Friday, Sept. 4 and ends at midnight Monday, Sept. 7.

During last year's Labor Day weekend, 487 people lost their lives and 20,000 people suffered disabling injuries in traffic accidents.

Labor Day, traditionally looked upon as the formal end to summer, also includes the Council's "Make It Click" safety belt-use campaign, which runs during the "101 Critical Days of Summer" when traffic fatalities are typically heaviest.

In addition to urging motorists to wear safety belts and place children in approved child restrainers, the Council offers this advice:

- Be watchful of changes in posted speed limits. While many rural interstates have increased the limit to 65 miles per hour, urban interstates still post a maximum 55 mph speed limit.
- When you are unfamiliar with a road or the conditions ahead, reduce speed and allow more following distance. Many accidents occur because a driver is traveling in unfamiliar territory.
- Use the two-second rule: When the vehicle ahead passes a fixed object like a tree, telephone pole, underpass or billboard, start counting — one-thousand-one, one-thousand-two. If your car reaches that object before you finish counting, you're following too closely. Widen the gap between yourself and that vehicle for protection in case he decides to stop suddenly.
- Be alert for pedestrians crossing the road. They ALWAYS have the right-of-way, even in the middle of the road. Expect the unexpected, especially in residential areas where children may dart out from between parked cars or just decide to run across the street at the last moment.
- Don't drink alcohol and drive. Even one or two drinks can impair your driving ability by hampering your judgment and slowing your reaction skills.

Lt. Gen. John S. Crosby's Aug. 14 promotion coincided with his assuming duty as the deputy commanding general for the United States Army Training and Doctrine Command (TRADOC) at Fort Monroe, Va.

The ceremony was conducted in the Pentagon's Hall of Heroes by former Army vice chief of staff and now TRADOC's commanding general, Gen. Maxwell Thurman.

Following the ceremony, Crosby, a Missouri native, talked about his career. "It's a wonderful experience to be in this great Army, even though every once-in-a-while you may want to give it up," he said. Crosby also recognized his military career mentors that began following his commission as a second lieutenant from North Carolina State University. He also recognized his family and other soldiers who have helped him in becoming the leader he is today.

Backing up Crosby's remarks about commitment, DoD figures recently released indicate that today's soldiers are, indeed, reenforcing their commitments to the Army by re-enlisting. Of those eligible to re-enlist, 88 percent have done so since October of 1986.

TOP INFANTRYMAN

197th troop named Soldier of Year

By Sally Roberts
197th Infantry Brigade Correspondent

Glancing at the unit formation of Company E, 1st Battalion, 58th Infantry, the soldiers appear alike and uniform. However, within that formation stands a young man who represents a high caliber of soldier; one who has gone the extra mile to earn the admiration of his peers.

PFC Timothy Mayer II was recently selected as Fort Benning's Soldier of the Year. That's quite an accomplishment for a soldier who has been on active duty less than nine months.

So, what does it take to become soldier of the year? In Mayer's case, the answer is that he simply enjoys being a soldier.

Mayer benefits from a very interesting background which helped him to develop his interest in military at an early age. He was raised near London, where his American parents made their home.

He attended a private boarding school in England and spent four years in the school's cadet corps. When it came time to attend college, Mayer chose an American University in Pennsylvania and participated in the ROTC program.

Before completing the ROTC program, Mayer decided to postpone his studies for awhile and pursue some practical experience in a field he enjoyed. So, he enlisted in the Army.

"Having been exposed to ROTC, I knew many of the tasks when I entered basic training," explained Mayer. "What was the most fun for me was seeing how these tasks were being taught. It gave me great hope and confidence in the Army to see the drill sergeants take people from the reception station and turn them into pretty decent soldiers."

One of the subjects Mayer studied in preparation for the Soldier of the Year board was Military Leadership. As he explains it, military leadership is the art of influencing others to accomplish the mission.

"A good NCO can get you to do things. There is a chain of command if people will use it. They should teach that in basic training."

"My platoon sergeant and first sergeant helped me get to the board in the battalion. Then CSM (Wayne) Gibney got involved and helped me onto the Brigade level," Mayer explained. "At each level, more voices were added to the cheering and pushing. It's nice to see the chain of command work that way."

Becoming soldier of the year takes more than just cramming for an exam. According to Mayer, you have to make your studies a part of your daily routine.

"This isn't one of those things that you can just sit down and prepare for. You have to do it day to day," Mayer said. "When I would draw a weapon, for example, I would think about what questions they might ask me. While I was working at the motor pool, I thought about what they may ask me about my job. You have to observe everything you can and know where to get the information."

PFC Mayer's immediate goals include testing for the Expert Infantryman's Badge. He plans to return to college after finishing this term in the Army, complete his ROTC training and probably return to the Army as an officer.

"I am no less excited to be here as a PFC than I would be as a second lieutenant," Mayer added. "I think there are so many good opportunities to learn things at this level; however, my real joy in life is to teach people and share what I know.

"Too many soldiers think that all the good things that can happen at Fort Benning are for other people," Mayer added. "The truth is that you have to go

OPINION

Have fun safely this Labor Day weekend

The Labor Day holiday was established by Congress in 1894 to honor the skills and determination of the American worker and to recognize the extraordinary contributions made by them to our great nation.

Traditionally, Labor Day weekend is an active holiday for Americans, as families' summer vacations come to an end and they prepare to send the children back to school. Unfortunately for many American families, the holiday celebration will be marred by accidents resulting in numerous injuries and fatalities.

Fort Benning has enjoyed an unblemished Labor Day holiday weekend safety record for many years. With concern and the conscious efforts of everyone, we can make this Labor Day another safe holiday.

I charge every family member of the Fort Benning community — soldier, family members or civilian workers, whether on duty or off, to make this coming holiday a safe one. Think ahead what the outcome of your actions will be before you attempt something that has the potential to be unsafe. Do not take unnecessary chances. Remember, alcohol does not mix with driving or boating. If drinking alcoholic beverages, arrange for a designated driver for your car or "captain" for your boat. Water sports have the potential for serious accidents, too, especially for children. Swim only where authorized and where lifeguards are on duty. If boating or water-skiing, ensure that you use adequate safety/flotation devices.

With a little good common sense and a sincere concern for safety by everyone, I am sure we will all have a safe and memorable holiday.

Maj. Gen. Kenneth C. Leuer
post commander

Commanders must lead by teaching safe attitudes

Commanders and supervisors at all levels will take positive action to ensure their personnel are made aware of the hazards they face during the holiday period. Safety of personnel is an inherent responsibility of command and an essential element of leadership.

Thousands of Americans will travel on the highways, increasing the chances for traffic accidents, injuries and deaths. Adhering safely to a sound defensive driving attitude will permit one to respond safely to changing traffic situations. Personnel should not drive while fatigued or while under the influence of alcohol. Drivers and passengers should wear seat belts at all times.

Many personnel will participate in water activities. Water activities rank second only to motor vehicles as a cause of accidental deaths to TRADOC personnel. Alcohol should not be consumed if one anticipates participation in water activities. Personnel should not swim alone, in off-limits areas or immediately after eating or drinking.

It is my sincere desire that each member of this command has a safe and enjoyable holiday.

Gen. Maxwell Thurman
TRADOC commander

What's a ski bum to do in sunny south?

Northerner looking for fun things to do in land of no snow

By Clyde Snively
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The first issue of the season's "Ski Magazine," arrived in the mail. Up north this was an "event."

It meant it was time to get out the hot wax, the P-tex, and the file and start tuning the skis.

It meant the ski show in Syracuse was just around the corner and it was time to start thinking "snow."

But this year, holding the magazine in my hands, looking at the picture of the skier on the cover, only brought tears to my eyes as a sweatball rolled off my nose and dropped, kerplash, on the skier's boot.

Walking into the house to escape the 98-degree heat, I began to think about what I would be doing in Columbus this winter. I'd been told that there was skiing in Northern Georgia, but I'd also been told that the locals call Providence Canyon, "Little Grand Canyon."

Anyone who's ever seen both will get the point.

So, if it's too cold to swim, but not cold enough for snow, what do people do during the winter? It was time for another Snively survey.

The first person I asked was SSgt. Strack. He said he went hunting and offered to take me along.

"You mean go out in the woods, when it's cold and wet and walk around with a gun," I asked dismayed. "Isn't that what we get paid to do? I'm looking for something that doesn't remind me of duty. I don't need practice being miserable."

Bill had another outdoor adventure. "Go fishing," he said.

"Winter fishing to me, is not sitting out in the rain on some river in a boat. It's taking a snowmobile out on a lake, setting up a shelter, building a fire and dropping a line through a hole in the ice," I said, thanking him for his suggestion and moving on to the next person.

The colonel supposed that he'd spend his winter on the golf course.

He said he had warm, wet weather gear and he figured the course wouldn't be too crowded that time of year.

"Do you have golf mittens that are like trigger mittens," I asked politely, leaving quietly as he practiced swinging an imaginary club.

Dave noted that winter was prime racquetball season. "Good way to stay in shape during the winter. You can really get in a good workout," he said.

"I don't own the right type of shoes for that," I said. "Besides, I don't like any indoor sports where I have to sweat."

Janice said three bowling leagues a week kept her busy during the winter. "Time passes real quick when you've got your evenings occupied," she said.

"I don't have the right shoes for that either," I said. "Besides, last time I tried it, my thumb got stuck in the ball and it took me halfway down the alley before we came to a stop."

The major told me he looked forward to the winter. "I like to hole up with my computer and some military history books. I work up computer war games. Helps me stay on top of the latest developments in equipment and the effect that this high-tech stuff has on tactics and strategy," he said.

"They warned me about you," I muttered.

"Beg your pardon," he said.

"I said that's very impressive," I answered.

The deputy offered to take me woodcutting. "I'll furnish all the gear," he offered. "We'll get ourselves a woodcutting permit, go out in the woods, and while I cut the trees with my chainsaw, you can split and load. Great way to get exercise. It's really invigorating."

Since he didn't even offer to let me come over to his house some cold evening while he burned our wood in his fireplace and share a beer, I told him I thought I'd be pretty busy on most weekends.

The editor couldn't believe that I'd want for anything to do. "Sports, man, they've got professional sports just up the road in Atlanta, what with the Falcons..."

"I didn't know they were professional," I interjected.

Undeterred, he continued on. "And they've got Auburn, Georgia and ..." "Now you're talking professional," I butted in one more time. But I could see I was beginning to wear out my welcome, so I left to check with Steve to hear what he'd recommend.

Steve, who'd ridden with me in my car, said I should go to the auto craft shop on weekends. "You can work on your car in a nice warm stall, under expert supervision and not only get that heap of yours to where it'll stay on the road, but save money doing it," he said.

That seemed to be the cue for the NCOIC to jump in and start talking about rec services and all the inexpensive programs they have for soldiers and their families.

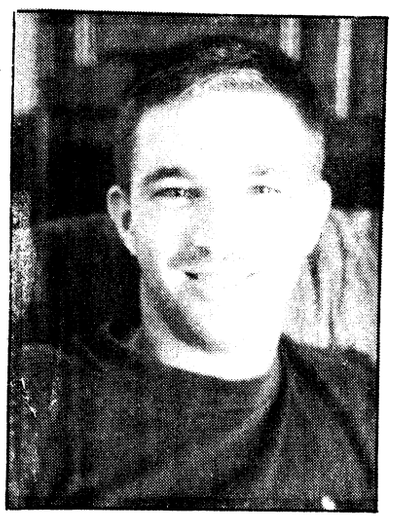
But I'd heard enough. I was already trying to decide who I could hit up for a tow to the auto craft shop.

Hospital offers classes to help smokers kick the habit

By Chaplain Philip R. Touw
Chaplain, The School Brigade

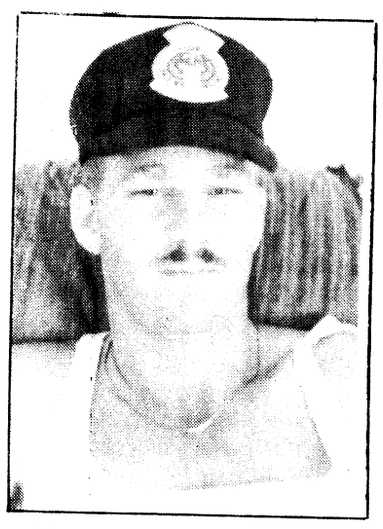
Smoking more lately, but enjoying it less? Tired of seeing your life "go up in smoke" with every unpleasant puff? Sick of being angry with yourself for rumaging through filthy ashtrays looking for a smokable butt?

Well, don't dispair! There is hope! You can regain control of your life. For the past five years, Martin Army Hospital has been conducting quarterly Smoking Cessation Clinics designed to help you beat the cigarette habit.



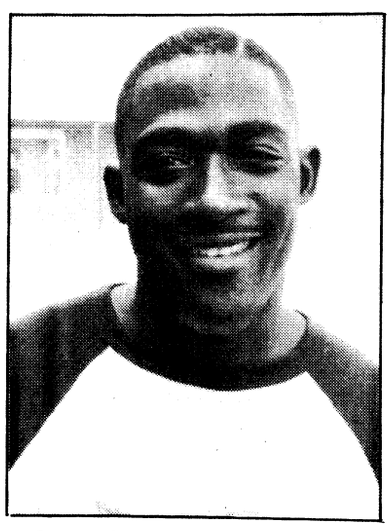
The physical addiction to nicotine has frequently been likened to the addiction to heroine. Quitting cigarette smoking is tough, and only someone who has never smoked would say that it was easy! We know how hard it is, but we also know that you can quit. Some of us, however, need help; that's why we sponsor the clinics.

A typical two-week clinic is held on Tuesdays and Thursdays of two consecutive weeks. The sessions last from 1000 hours to 1200 hours each day. The four sessions inclue: stress management, dealing with addiction, the medical implications of smoking (presented by a doctor), and finally, a nutritionist gives tips on how NOT to "overfeed after you quit the weed."

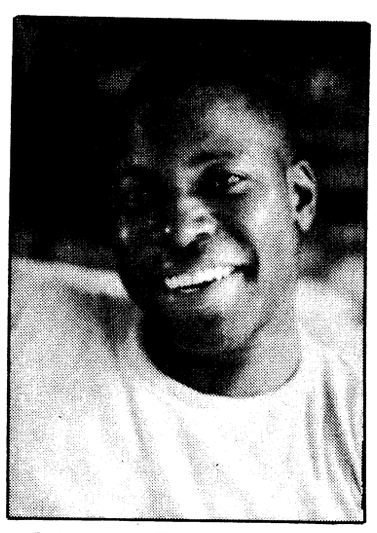


The clinics are presently being held at The School Brigade Chapel (Bldg. 2766), but we will gladly come to your workplace. In fact, the Fort Benning Fire Dept. is sponsoring on-site seminars during September and October to help rid the fire department of smoke! Sounds like a great idea!

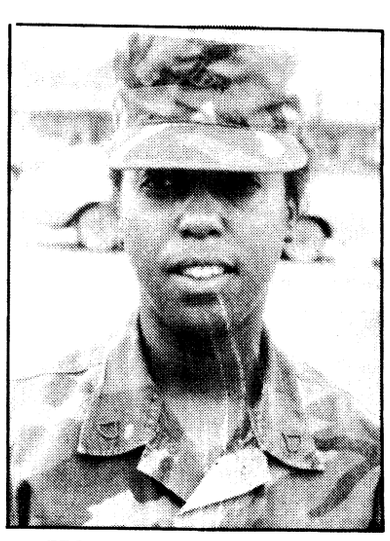
We believe that the clinics can work for you! If you are interested in attending a Smoking Cessation Clinic, or if you would like to sponsor a clinic in your workplace, call Capt. Ann Buchanan, 544-4166 or Chaplain (Maj.) Phil Touw, 545-5378. We'd love to help you stop sending your life "up in smoke!"



VARIOUS VOICES / What should be done about the MIAs in Southeast Asia?



Sgt. Kip Dunagan, 30th A.G. Battalion, Reception Station — "I think that action has to be taken. They need to find them or forget them. The problem stems from the fact that past administrations have swept this problem under the rug, hoping that the next administration would take care of it."



SSgt. Russell Potts, Company C, 2/54th Infantry Regiment, 1st Infantry Training Brigade, Infantry Training Center — "I they are getting treated kind of like retirees. They served their country and then they are forgotten. I think that we need to remember that the POWs and MIAs are there and we need to find them and reward them."

Sgt. Jeff Pargo, 586th Engineer Company, 43rd Engineer Battalion, 36th Engineer Group — "We have people who are specially trained to get people out in these situations. I think that we should send them in there and get them out. It's time that we stop pussy-footing around and do something about it. We need to show the rest of the world that we aren't willing to be messed with."

Sgt. John T. Jones, Company B, 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment — "I think the government should find some means of getting them out of there. But in the future, if Americans get in that kind of situation, they should get out before its too late."

PFC Debra Hailey, Company A, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, The School Brigade — "I think that it needs to be investigated further. I don't know how the government could do it without causing a big controversy. I believe that there are people still alive out there and something needs to be done about it."

SSgt. Edward Case, ANCOC, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, The School Brigade — "I don't really think the government can do anything more than what they are doing right now because there is so much politics involved. They need to just keep on trying to find out more information and to get them back."

Success of regimental changeover depends on soldiers

By Adolf Carlson
The School Brigade

August 14th is a day of immense significance in the history of the IOBC program. For reasons I hope to make clear, it also is a day of great personal significance to me.

The sun shone for the last time upon the colors of the 2nd Training Battalion. They are now cased and will be forwarded for storage, awaiting patiently the order to be recalled — an order, I predict, that will never come.

They have been replaced by the colors of the 2nd Battalion of the 11th Infantry, colors which have flown gallantly since the Civil War. As a part of the Army's regimental system, it is certainly right that someone be entrusted with the history and tradition of a battalion whose battle streamers include Shiloh, the Argonne and Normandy.

But, I think it's fair to ask whether the assignment of a combat battalion's colors to a training organization truly is a perpetuation of tradition, or whether the change in mission is a discontinuity.

Consider, for a moment, the history of the colors just deactivated. The 2nd Training Battalion existed only since 1953, 34 short years. It has never been deployed in the nation's defense. It has earned no combat honors. Its timely arrival on the battlefield has never saved the day, nor has it ever stubbornly refused to yield its ground to a numerically superior enemy.

Yet, battlefield victories, like sturdy trees, have long roots and without stretching the point too far, I believe one can trace the roots of recent victories back to the red soil drained by the Chattahoochee River. For in its 34 years, the 2nd Tng. Bn. produced over 80,000 combat-ready rifle platoon leaders. Some 856 of these gave their lives, as lieutenants, in the Vietnam War.

When support for the war was unpopular, these, your predecessors, were willing to risk all in combat. There was no Little Big Horn or Kassarine Pass or Task Force Smith in Vietnam. We were never defeated on the battlefield, overwhelmingly because of the character, skills and courage of your predecessors. Whatever significance the Vietnam War will have in history, the platoon leaders of that era preserved the honor of the U.S. Infantry.

Now 856 lieutenants killed sounds like a statistic, let me bring it home to you with a personal memory. Throughout my four years at West Point, my two roommates were James L. Smith and Thomas P.B. King. They were the dearest, closest friends I've ever had. The three of us chose Infantry as our branch and volunteered for Vietnam. We went to IOBC together, and then, because of different Ranger School classes and initial units of assignment, we split up.

They were both killed in the fall of 1970 in the Republic of Vietnam — Smith in the 101st Airborne Division, and King in the 1st Cavalry Division. Of the three of us, I am the only one who survived. IOBC was the last place I saw them. So, in my memory, they will forever be Infantry lieutenants.

When I watch you lieutenants in your activities, sometimes I imagine I can see them as well. They were so like you, young, eager to develop and convince the world they were indeed competent officers, but, at the same time, anxious about the challenges of their first assignment. Above all, they were faithful to the nation's call, even to death.

So, to me, the colors we case today are not without battle traditions. We produced rifle platoon leaders of character and courage, capable of leading the young Americans to victory in combat. In my mind's eye, I see 856 battle streamers hanging from that flag, each embroidered with the name of a fallen lieutenant of Infantry. One of them reads James L. Smith and another reads Thomas P.B. King.

The 2nd Bn, 11th Infantry is not without memories for me either. When I left Fort Benning as a 2nd Lt. of Infantry, I did not go directly to Vietnam, but went first to the 5th Infantry Division at Fort Carson, Colo., for a few months seasoning, as was the Army's policy at the time.

I was assigned as a rifle platoon leader for Co. A, 2nd Bn, 11th Infantry. I don't know what my future holds in store, but it is unlikely that I will ever again be a part of an Infantry battalion. So I think it is significant that the first and last of the battalions I've been in is the 2nd Bn, 11th Infantry. I participated in none of the campaigns commemorated by the battalion's battle streamers. Our days at Fort Carson were consumed by garrison routine.

Yet, they were important in my development because as I've learned to appreciate, the best Infantry officers don't concern themselves about dramatic moments of heroic glory. Those moments tend to take care of themselves, if we are concerned first and foremost, day after day, with setting the example and enforcing the standard.

In those days, the commander of the 2-11 Infantry was Lt. Col. Dan Folberg, who some of you may know was a West Point football hero of the 1950s. He seemed to me as remote, imposing and heroic a figure as the faces carved in Mount Rushmore. It is absolutely inconceivable to me that 18 years have gone by and I now hold the office that he occupied. I'm now the old man. It's gone by like a flash. Keep that in mind, lieutenants, when you leave here. Big responsibilities will come your way before you know it. You must always be prepared for them.

To return to my original question, is this redesignation a perpetuation or a break in tradition? I submit the answer is in our hands. We are the ones who must meld these two traditions, these two bloodlines, into one stronger than the two that preceded it. We must invoke the spirits of those fallen platoon leaders and those heroes of the historic 11th Infantry.

The motto of our regiment is semper fidelis — always faithful. Let's dedicate ourselves now to being faithful to the twin traditions of our battalion. If the 2-11th Infantry is no longer to be bold in the attack, let's be bold in the high standards we set for ourselves. If the 2-11 Infantry is no longer to be resolute in the defense, then let's resolve stubbornly never to fall below those high standards. Let's remember that the defense of our country depends not so much on magnificent gestures as in how well we carry out each of our routine duties — every step we take, every round we fire, every entrenching tool of dirt we rake out of the ground.

Let's be faithful to the memory of these 856 fallen lieutenants, so that when the time comes for us to join the ranks of those who have defended the nation, whether it comes in the next 10 years or the next 10 days, we'll be ready to answer the call.

Editor's note: This speech was given by Lt. Col. Adolf Carlson at the Aug. 14 redesignation ceremony of The School Brigade's 2nd Training Battalion (IOBC), which became the 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry.

FERS offers attractive features for non-career federal employees

By Becky Obert
Bayonet staff writer

The decision on whether or not to switch to FERS is more complicated for workers who don't plan to stay employed with the federal government.

That's because most jobs in the private sector are covered by the Social Security system and,once you leave federal service, you must then begin to earn the 40 quarters required to be covered by the SS system.

FERS provides benefits from three sources; your contributions to SS, the Basic Benefit Plan and the Thrift Savings Plan. Contributions to the first two are mandatory. The Thrift Savings Plan gives you the option to save additional amounts for retirement and get a tax break now.

Under FERS, covered workers pay 5.7 percent of their pay into the social security fund, and 1.3 percent into the Basic Benefit Plan. (This seven percent is the same amount workers contribute under the Civil Service Retirement System.)

When you sign up for FERS, the government automatically opens a Thrift Savings Plan for you and contributes an amount equal to one percent of your pay, even if you don't contribute anything. After you have worked for the government for three years, this money belongs to you (two years for non-career employees).

You can put from one the 10 percent of your earnings into this plan, and the government will match your contributions, up to five percent of your earnings. The government will match you dollar for dollar on the first three percent, and $.50 for each dollar on the next two percent. All contributions in this fund belong to you as soon as it goes into the account.

The money in the Thrift Savings Plan is currently invested in the Government Securities Investment Fund, but in 1988, you will have two other investment funds to choose from if you wish to take more risks and go for greater earnings.

So, one advantage of FERS as contrasted with the CSRS, is the new plan's portability.

If you're enrolled in FERS and leave federal service, you can take the basic benefit amount, plus market rate interest, with you. (If you do so, however, you will lose any right to a future basic benefit.)

CSRS employees have the option of withdrawing their contributions to the plan, but they are not paid any interest on their money.

The money you put into social security is not refundable, but it does count towards your 40 quarters of service needed to be eligible to draw SS.

What this means is that when you leave federal employment, you take your retirement benefits with you and can continue to add to them in future jobs. The savings can be transferred to an Individual Retirement Account or to your new employer's pension plan.

This brings us to another benefit of FERS — you get a tax break from savings in the Thrift Savings Plan because the money comes out of your pay check before taxes are figured. You won't owe taxes on your savings until you withdraw them or retire, when you possibly will be in a lower tax bracket.

In contrast, contributions to the CSRS are taken out after taxes, so you don't get a tax break.

It boils down to what your plans for the future are. If you don't plan to stay with federal employment long enough to retire, FERS may be a better plan for you.

To find out all the facts you need to make a decision based on your individual finances and needs, contact your activity's decision advisor. He or she is trained to help you compare the two systems and find which one is best for you.

Check with your administration office to see who the decision advisor is for your directorate or activity.

Colondres is an instructor in the patrolling division, Department of Combat Operations, U.S. Army School of the Americas.

Colondres won many prizes, including some Army dress blues, courtesy of the Association of the U.S. Army, an Army Commendation Medal, $100 and $50 U.S. Savings Bonds from two local banks, a $50 gift certificate from the Army and Air Force Exchange Service and $50 from the Columbus Chamber of Commerce.

"One of the best places to study for any military board is the military occupational specialty (MOS) library and Donovan Technical Library out at Fort Benning," said Colondres, adding, "Many answers to questions asked by board members can be found there. The librarians there were extremely helpful."

According to Colondres, he studied intensively before the competition for two weeks from nine to 10 hours each day — including weekends. "At home, my wife Barbara would quiz me on such things as military subjects and current events while I tried thinking of answers I'd written down before," he said. "I think a family's support is essential when it comes to preparing for anything like this," he added.

Colondres teaches all phases of instruction in the current "Commando" course at USARSA. This course is the equivalent of the U.S. Army Ranger Course offered here.

No stranger to being challenged, his past assignments include duty with the 1st Ranger Battalion, Fort Stewart, Ga., the Ranger Dept. at Fort Benning, the Jungle Operations Training Center in Fort Sherman, Panama and the 3rd Battlaion, 75th Ranger Regiment, Fort Benning.

Leuer went on to say that the new colors pick up where the old left off. He further charged the soldiers and cadre to uphold the traditions of those who had gone before.

Several former members of the 2nd Battalion, 19th Infantry attended the Saturday ceremony. They were: Col. Frederick Wong, the last commander of the unit prior to the 1983 inactivation; Lt. Col. John Schneider, the last battalion executive officer prior to inactivation; and Lt. Col. Louis Duet, the last battalion S-3 prior to inactivation. Long is currently commander, 2nd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division, Fort Stewart, Ga.; Schneider is commander of the 3rd Battalion, 19th Infantry, 24th Infantry Division; while Duet is currently serving as the regimental adjutant for the 19th Infantry Regiment, U.S. Army Military Personnel Center (MILPERCEN), Alexandria, Va.

Also attending the ceremony from MILPERCEN were the following Regimental Adjutants: Capt. Michael Kirsch, 32nd Infantry; Maj. Randall Bruch, 54th Infantry; Capt. Philip North, 50th Infantry; Capt. James Poole, 30th Infantry; and Capt. Robert Johnson, 58th Infantry.

The history of the units during the numerical designation years will not be forgotten. The colors of the inactivated units will be placed permanently on display in the USAITC Conference Room, located in the old Patton area on Sand Hill.

The history of the regiments reactivated within the USAITC is rich in tradition. Following is a brief history of the units assigned to the 1st ITB.

The 3rd Battalion, 32nd Infantry was constituted July 1, 1916 and organized Aug. 7, 1916 at Schofield Barracks, Hawaii. The unit recieved four campaign participation credits for the Korean War and has been decorated eight times. The regiment was inactivated Jan. 16, 1986 at Fort Ord, Calif.

The 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry was constituted May 3, 1861 and organized Aug. 24, 1861 at Indianapolis. The unit participated in nine Civil War campaigns, earning the motto "Rock of Chickamauga;" one Indian Wars campaign; one campaign during the War with Spain; seven Philippine Insurrection campaigns; five World War II campaigns; and seven Korean War campaigns. The regiment has been decorated six times and was inactivated April 15, 1970 at Fort Riley, Kansas.

The 2nd Battalion, 54th Infantry was constituted May 15, 1917 and organized June 16, 1917 at Chickamauga Park, Ga. The unit has two campaign participation credits for World War I and three campaign participation credits for World War II and has earned one Presidential Unit Citation. The motto for the 2nd/54th is "I Will Cast My Shoe Over It." The regiment was inactivated May 10, 1971 in Germany.

The 1st Battalion, 50th Infantry was constituted May 15, 1917 and organized June 1, 1917 at Syracuse, N.Y. The unit, whose motto is "Play the Game," participated in five World War II campaigns and 10 Vietnam campaigns. The inactivation of the 1st/50th was on March 15, 1983 at Fort Hood, Texas.

The 2nd Battalion, 19th Infantry (The Rock of Chickamauga) was constituted may 3, 1861 and organized Sept. 30, 1861 at Indianapolis. Campaign participation credit includes nine Civil War campaigns, one Indian Wars campaign, one campaign during the War with Spain, seven Philippine Insurrection campaigns, five World War II campaigns and eight Korean War campaigns. The unit has been decorated six times and was inactivated May 1, 1966 in Germany.

A brief history of the regiments assigned to the 2nd ITB follows.

The 4th Battalion, 30th Infantry was constituted Feb. 2, 1901 and organized March 16, 1901 at the Presidio of San Francisco, Calif. The unit participated in one Philippine Insurrection campaign, six World War I campaigns and 10 World War II campaigns, and has been decorated seven times. The regiment's motto is "Our Country, not Ourselves." The 4th/30th was inactivated Jan. 11, 1972 at Fort Sill, Okla.

The 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry, nicknamed "The Patriots," was constituted May 15, 1917 and organized June 5, 1917 at Gettysburg National Park, Penn. The unit participated in five World War I campaigns and four World War II campaigns. The motto for the 2nd/58th is "Love of Country." The regiment was inactivated July 1, 1963 at Fort Hood, Texas.

The 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry was constituted May 15, 1917 and organized June 1, 1917 at Syracuse, N.Y. The unit participated in six World War I campaigns, five World War II campaigns and 10 Korean War campaigns, and has been decorated 11 times. The unit's motto is "Rock of the Marne." The 1st/38th was inactivated Dec. 16, 1986 in Korea.

The 4th Battalion, 36th Infantry was constituted July 1, 1916 and organized July 27, 1917 at Brownsville, Texas. The unit participated in five World War II campaigns, earning four decorations. The unit's motto is "Deeds Not Words." The 4th/36th was inactivated Oct. 1, 1957 in Germany.

The 30th Adjutant General Battalion (Reception) was constitued Nov. 1, 1942 and activated Dec. 10, 1942 at New Orleans, La. The unit's motto is "Meeting the Challenge." The 30th AG Battalion participated in one World War II campaign and received a meritorious unit commendation (Army), streamer embroidered EUROPEAN THEATER. The unit was inactivated Dec. 1, 1945 in Italy.

The 1st ITB battalion commanders are: 3d Bn/32d In — Lt. Col. Roy F. Zinser, 1st Bn/19th In — Lt. Col. John W. Matthews, 2d Bn/54th In — Lt. Col. Gordon R. Lam, 1st Bn/50th In — Lt. Col. Robert O. Ciccolella, and 2d Bn/19th In — Lt. Col. Joel E. Williamson.

The 2nd ITB battalion commanders are: 4th Bn/30th In — Lt. Col. George B. Sears Jr., 2d Bn/58th In — Lt. Col. Robert A. Frizzo, 1st Bn/38th In — Lt. Col. George S. Viney, and 4th Bn/36th In — Lt. Col. Paul E. Cullinane Jr.

Lt. Col. Paul B. East is the 30th AG Battalion (Reception) commander.

Military police find training realistic in California sun

By Daniel Gutierrez
197th Infantry Brigade correspondent

You are on a reconnaissance mission gathering information to report back to headquarters.

After hours in the hot blazing sun of the Mojave Desert, your patrol sights enemy troops off in the distance and you radio for help. While your assistance is arriving, you quickly plan an ambush. You decide to surround the troops and disarm them.

This is a typical situation that a military policeman finds himself in in the field instead of the usual picture of an MP and his trusty ticket book.

One of the first tasks that faced the 197th Military Police Platoon during Operation "Desert Hammer" was the railroad operation at Fort Benning railhead. To insure safety and efficiency while members of the Brigade uploaded vehicles to be shipped to the National Training Center at Fort Irwin, Calif., the 197th MP's were posted at Traffic Control Posts (TCPs) in congested areas.

In addition, three members of the platoon accompanied the train, loaded with Brigade equipment, on its weeklong journey to the off-load site at the Marine Corps Logistics Base at Yermo, Calif. These soldiers had the primary responsibility of guarding sensitve items as the train traveled across the United States.

Once in the field at NTC, the military police have battlefield missions. They perform battlefield circulation control, expediting the forward movement of critical combat resources. MPS also provide area security, relieving the tactical commander of the burden of providing security and protection in the rear areas.

They also take charge of enemy prisoners of war by evacuating them from battlefield areas.

The last battlefield mission is law and order operations, which includes Law Enforcement, Criminal Investigation and U.S. Military Prisoner Confinement.

Many people are unaware that offenses against U.S. forces or property crimes occur in the field. Minor crimes are investigated by personnel from MP company operations sections just like in garrison situations.

Military police on the battlefield operate as a flexible organization. In small tactical elements, they are equipped and trained to operate separately or in combinations.

MPs operate in three-man gun-jeep teams, and are versatile with their mobility, communication and fire power.

These are types of operations the 197th Military Police Platoon will execute during its three-week deployment. There will be a period of maintenance, and shortly thereafter, they will return to the road to enforce law and order in the Fort Benning community.

Housing office releases new eligibility dates

Housing Office

When applying for military family housing, each soldier is given an "eligibility date." The housing waiting list is then maintained and housing assigned in accordance with this date.

Normally, this eligibility date is the soldier's departure date from the previous, permanent duty station.

However, if a soldier is coming to Fort Benning from a "restricted tour," the eligibility date is backdated to the departure date from the previous stateside permanent duty station -- up to a maximum of 14 months.

For example, if a soldier was sent to Korea after serving a tour at Fort Lewis, Wash., upon the soldier's return from Korea, the housing eligibility date would be backdated to the time the soldier left Fort Lewis, up to a maximum of 14 months.

If quarters become available and the soldier is unable to move because of a lease, TDY, sick-197th soldiers cookin' in desert...really!

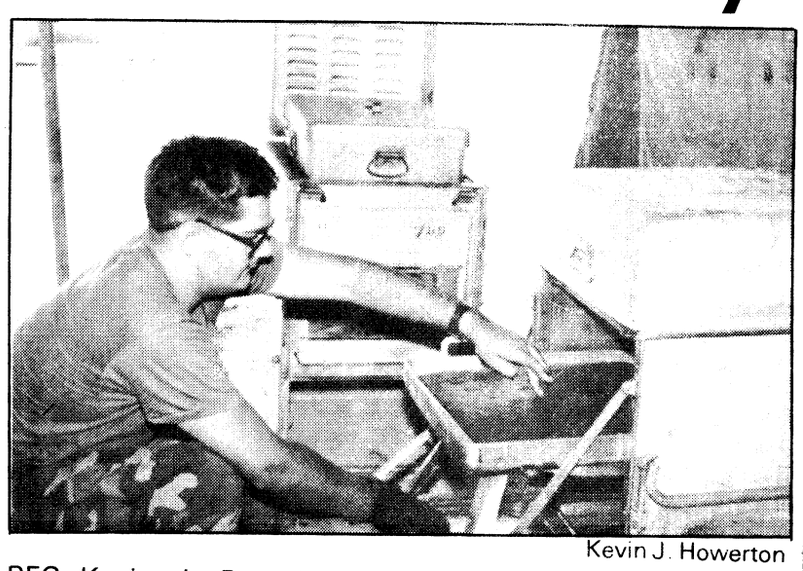
By Kevin J. Howerton
197th Infantry Brigade correspondent

It's not a French sidewalk cafe, but it is the best field mess system that can be found in the Mojave Desert. Getting his first hot meal is a definite comfort to a deployed soldier, especially when he has been involved all day in rail off-load and convoying operations at the National Training Center at Fort Irwin, Calif.



The first hot chow for the 197th Infantry Brigade soldiers was served by the 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor, field mess hall. Nine cooks from 2/69, with the help of a few other cooks from other units, spent seven to eight hours in the heat of Fort Irwin's "Dust Bowl" preparing dinner for 764 soldiers. Everything from the roast beef to the cake reflected what is normally served in a garrison mess hall.

The meal was prepared in a quickly erected tent and the soldiers ate under the recently-built open-shaded shelter at the Dust Bowl. The cooks used M2 burners and M59 field ranges to prepare the meal.

"Only new cooks that haven't been in a field unit have to adapt to using the field equipment," said SSgt. Willis W. Robinson of Headquarters Co., 2/69. "But all of my cooks are veterans, because this unit goes to the field all the time."

The 2/69 field mess hall fed breakfast to over 1,200 troops the next day; Sunday morning. By Sunday afternoon, other units had mess halls operating in the Dust Bowl.

As the Brigade moved out of the Dust Bowl, the field mess halls moved with their respective units. The field mess halls can be taken down, moved and set up in an amazingly short period of time. The cooks have provided troops with hot meals throughout the exercises at NTC.

Airborne cadre share awesome responsibility

By Jimmie F. Holt
Commander, 507th Parachute Inf Reg

As we approach the Labor Day holiday, let us take a moment to reflect on the magnitude of this summer's operation tackled by the 507th Infantry in the conduct of the U.S. Army Airborne School.

The 200-300-strong cadre of the 507th Infantry have an awesome responsibility. While it is not at this time "to close with the enemy by means of fire and manuever in order to kill, destroy or capture him," the daily mission must be accomplished with the realization that with a single decision, it could very well be.

As of the end of July 1987, the troopers of the 507th jumped 81,260 parachutes and sustained 120 casualties for an injury rate of 1.47 per 1,000 since Oct. 1, 1986. Realizing this has little meaning by itself, the figures for the 82nd Airborne Division during that same period are significant. The entire Division jumped 63,704 parachutes and sustained 191 casualties for an injury rate of 2.99 per 1000. Thus, the reality, the magnitude, and the importance of the current ,507th Infantry high-risk mission begins to become apparent.

A division's worth of willing, but untrained soldiers, sailors, airmen and Marines were molded by the 507th cadre into individuals who exude leadership both on and off the training field, in and out of war; individuals who attain the highest possible level of self-confidence in their leaders, their training, their equipment and most importantly, themselves; and finally, individuals who know how to channel aggressive spirit until it becomes contagious to the point the mission is accomplished. This is the very essence of the "warrior spirit," which is absolutely necessary for battlefield victory — a condition for which there are only two measures, excellence or failure.

Many young potential leaders of our Army have been influenced positively by the leadership modeling they encountered while in the U.S. Army Airbrone School. Many, this summer, solidified their decisions about the Army and the Airborne by the example set by the leader/trainers of the 507th Infantry. Each day they saw a tremendous example of leadership and mission-oriented purpose as each cadre member professionally accomplished incredible tasks in the face of overwhelming odds, the magnitude of which would have caused ordinary people to pale. What better example of what airborne is than to demonstrate that it means to always accomplish the mission? Because of this unfailing fact, every time the leaders of this great country of ours has decided that something important had to be done by a person in uniform, for the last 47 years of airborne history, it has called upon those with silver wings on their chest to lead the way — paratroopers.

Enjoy the Labor Day holiday as an airborne family — safely!

2X4 education benifits explained

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

On July 1, 1985, the new GI Bill went into effect. Now, two years later, that first crop of 2-year enlistees are nearing or have reached their separation date.

Under the new GI Bill, a soldier contributes $100 a month for one year and will receive $7,800 divided into equal monthly increments while attending college.

According to Lt. Col. Bob Poole, Reserve GI bill manager, Military Personnel Center, those soldiers are eligible for an additional $50 a month if they serve an additional 4 years in an active Reserve or National Guard Unit. This is what is known as the 2 x 4 program and is available to soldiers who are already enrolled in the new GI bill or the Army College Fund Program.

"Presently, a lot of soldiers do not know that this program exists," Poole said, "or that they can join the reserves up to one year after their separation date and still be eligible."

"One thing that everyone needs to be aware of when enrolling in the program," Poole said, "is that they need to serve two full calender years of active duty."

This means that soldiers in the 2x4 program with a separation date falling on a weekend or holiday cannot get out on the first workday prior. If they do, they are ineligible for the program.

"They are still eligible for the $7,800," he said, "but, because the Veterans Adminstration interpets the program as two full 365-day years, the soldier is ineligible for the extra $50 if they opt for early transition."

For more information on the 2x4 program, call the Fort Benning in-service recruiting office at 544-4759.

BE ALL YOU CAN BE.

"WE FEEL GOOD ABOUT LEAVING JAMAHL AT THE DAY-CARE CENTER BECAUSE THEY TREAT HIM LIKE HE'S THEIR OWN CHILD."

SSG Ken and SP4 Jacquie Farmer

"We never really considered leaving Jamahl with anyone except a private sitter. But our first visit to the new Child Development Center here at Fort Hood sure changed our minds.

"We know our son is well taken care of. So we can concentrate on our jobs without worrying about what he's doing.

"He learns, instead of just playing. He counts, sings, says his ABC's. And they teach him to be more independent.

"Jacquie and I have peace of mind when Jamahl's at the Center. They take care of him, and he's learning, and those are the two most important things."

The Army's Day-Care programs are making modern day-care facilities available to more children each day. And the quality of the "Caregivers" who attend the children has never been higher. It's all part of the Army Family Action Plan in action.

BBQ bash celebrates unit's redesignation

By Gordon R. Lam
5th Battalion commander

Aug. 29 marked a new era for the former 5th Battalion.

Redesignated 2nd Battalion, 54th Infantry in an ITC-wide ceremony at Weatherby Field earlier that day, the cadre and their families assembled at the Sand Hill Swimming Pool in the afternoon to enjoy the cool water, a delicious barbecue lunch and all of the indoor entertainment at the 10th Mountain's recreation hall.

More than 240 members joined in the afternoon of fun and relaxation. In its first social event as the 2nd Battalion, 54th Infantry the occasion was a total success. There was something for everyone — swimming for most, television cartoons for the children, football games, ping-pong, table pool, for those who preferred air-conditioned comfort, and, of course, delicious food provided by Macon Road Barbecue Co. 1st ITB CSM Roland stopped by to join in the festivities.

Even after a full day of parades and picnics, several cadre members, their wives and the Battalion command group all participated in the annual Country's Barbeque Midnight Express Three-Mile Run.

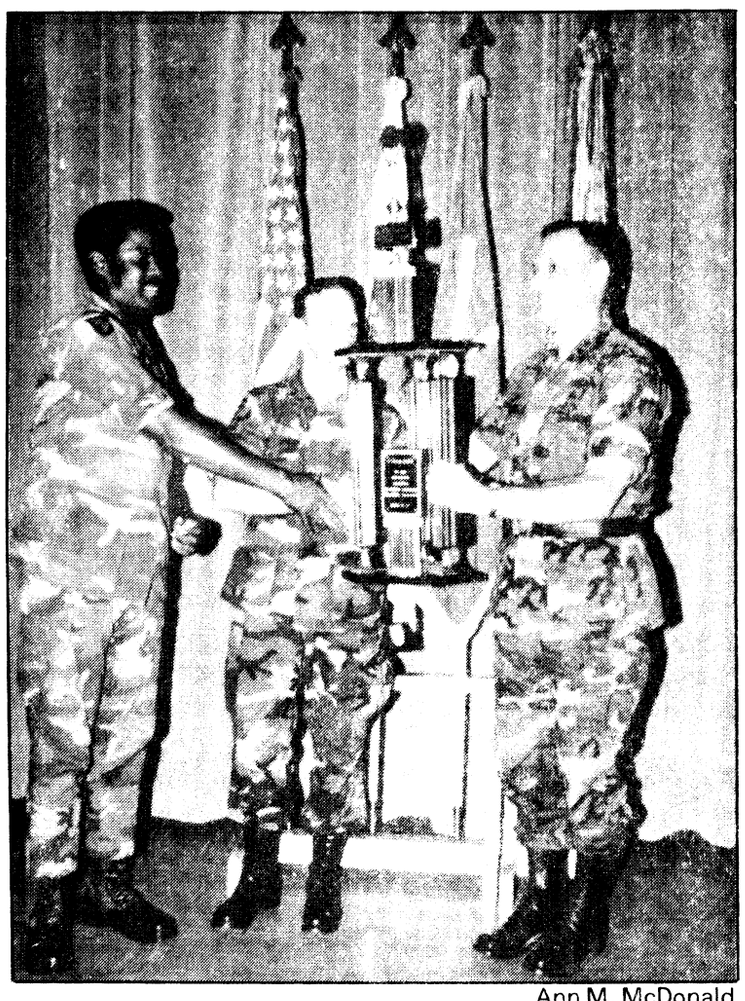
Team from Smithsonian begins four-year project photographing infantry

By Bill Walton
USAIC Public Affairs Office

A hundred years from now, if your grandson is trying to locate some "great infantry-in-action" photos from the 1980s, his chances of finding some just increased, thanks to a Smithsonian project begun recently at Fort Benning.

Dr. Edward C. Ezell, curator, Division of Armed Forces History, the National Museum of American History, Smithsonian Institution, heads up a 4-year project to photographically document the Infantry of the late 1980s.

"We often need infantry pictures from the turn of the century for use in museum displays or for historians and they are hard to come by," he said. "There were plenty of pictures made of ceremonies, parades, etc. during that time frame, but very few pictures exist of the day-to-day soldier's activities, and there is no big collection anywhere of this type of material."



This project, sponsored by the Smithsonian's Office of Printing & Photographic Services, should help to solve that problem for future researchers and historians as the negatives of infantry soldiers will be on file in the Smithsonian and reprints will be available.

"We plan on documenting all aspects of the infantry from the reception battalion through the National Training Center and divisions to include USAREUR and Korea," said Ezell. "We intend to take pictures at several CONUS posts, including Fort Bragg, N.C., Fort Ord, Calif. and Fort Lewis, Wash.; and, of course, we will visit Fort Benning several more times."

The photographs are being done in both black and white and color on about a 70/30-percent ratio.

The black and white negatives will be archivally processed and stored so there should be little problem with them lasting 100-150 years, according to Dane Penland, one of three photographers who participated in the "first shoot" at Fort Benning.

An Infantry Officer Basic Course field-training exercise, the Ranger water-confidence test and light anti-tank weapon's training were the subjects of the first Fort Benning "shoot."

SPIRITUAL

God created work as channel for our creative energy

By Mike Hoyt
1st/507th PIR chaplain

"Then the Lord God took the man and put him in the Garden of Eden to cultivate it and keep it." Genesis 2:15. Since the beginning of human history, man has been involved with labor. One of the intentions of God for man is that he should work.

God expects us to use our intellect to relate to His creation and to relate in such a way that one is fulfilled with a sense of order and purpose. It was not until Adam sinned that work turned to toil and stress was introduced into this heretofore positive experience.

Working is a Holy concept, an activity ordained by God in which mankind could channel, constructively, the creative power, energy and imagination that comes with being made in the image of God.

How then does such a holy idea seem often such an oppressive struggle and terrible burden? Whenever we, like Adam, ignore the holy emphasis on our lives and pursue our own desires, things get out of proportion.

The great prophet, Moses, wrote a Psalm to help us keep the needed balance between a Holy calling and an earthly cry to labor.

Psalm 90 has been called "The Mature Man's Song." It speaks of a devout, Holy, eternal God with an abiding interest in the livelihood and existence of mankind. Best of all, Psalm 90 was written by a workaholic named Moses, who understood not only his occupation, but the God who called him to it.

The Psalm begins by describing the majesty of God before things were made (before any work, even divine creating was done).

The only safe and true perspective one may have about work is that it is only that: work. Labor is not an end in itself. God and our accountability to Him will outlast our jobs. Livelihood is no substitute for living in obedience to God. Work was never intended to supplant worship. Instead, it was provided to us as a vehicle to express our thankful hearts by offering the fruits of our labor, sacrificially, to the God that is from "everlasting to everlasting."

The first murder in Scripture came in part from the refusal of Cain to properly understand the true potential and godly purpose of labor.

So Moses says later in the Psalm, we are never to become so wrapped up in our livelihood (our days on earth) that we become foolish. Instead, our prayer should be for God to teach us to number our days that we may present to Him a heart of wisdom. (Verse 12.)

How are you using your daily experience at work to sharpen your commitment to discipline, perseverance and creativity in your faith? How are you responding to the challenging missions, difficult circumstances and field environments you are faced with in a godly way?

Are you allowing the difficult people you have to work with, or for, to get you down or are you lifting them up in prayer and receiving in your spirit, God's gifts of peace, love, patience, forgiveness and a teachable spirit. It is to these situations, and many others, that Moses seeks the heart of wisdom from God to handle. Not an excuse to avoid work, but a petition to use everything in his job as an opportunity to work for God and thereby establish a spiritual paycheck that will outlast the employment of this world.

God expects us to be professional and earnest in our jobs, to work hard and enjoy them. He built us that way. He does not expect us to take His gift and turn it into greedy self-fulfillment.

As you celebrate Labor Day this year, do so knowing fully who it is you are working for and may God grant to you a heart of wisdom as He confirms the works of your hand.

CHAPEL BRIEFS

Catechetical Sunday planned for Sept. 20

The Confrateraity of Christian Doctrine (CCD), is a lay organization established in 1571 for the purpose of offering religious education to Catholic children, youth and adults. In 1905, Pope Pius X began a modern revival and expansion of the program when his directive, that CCD be established in every parish, was incorporated into Canon law. A decree of Vatican Council II reaffirmed the directive, and today the CCD in the U.S. has become the "basic cell of catechetical activity," as it includes numerous new developments outside the school system from the parish to national levels. In 1969, CCD became a division of the department of education of the U.S. Catholic Conference. According to recent figures, some 5½ million Catholic children participate in its programs.

The CCD Confirmation classes will begin on Sept. 20. Those in 9th grade and above are eligible to be candidates for confirmation.

There will be an orientation meeting for parents and students on Sunday evening, Sept. 13 from 7-8:30 p.m. in the Religious Education Center. The meeting is mandatory for all who wish to participate in the confirmation program.

For further information, please call 545-2771.

CCD classes, preschool through adult, will begin Sept. 20.

The classes will be conducted in White School (next to Tot Town) from 10 a.m. to 11 a.m.

Registration for classes can be done at the Religious Education Center Monday through Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. For further information call 545-2771.

English classes resume this fall

Free English language classes for those whom English is a second language will resume Tuesday at 9:30 a.m. at the Religious Education Center, Bldg. 229. Four levels of proficiency are offered, including beginning English, conversation and grammar.

New students are invited to attend. Volunteer teachers are urgently needed for this program. Call 545-2366.

Community invited to PWOC fall sign-up

The Protestant Women of the Chapel will host a sign-up for the fall session of the group Thursday at 9:30 a.m.

The sign-up will be held in the Religious Education Center, building 229, on the corner of Ingersoll and Dixie Roads.

The group provides opportunities for fellowship, spiritual growth and fun. Nursery services are provided for all PWOC functions.

The Fort Benning community is invited to join.

Rules change for burial in VA cemeteries

Veterans Administration

The Veterans Administration has adopted a new policy on branch of service inscriptions for veterans grave markers and has issued new requirements for the delivery of all government-issued monuments.

The VA will now provide inscriptions for all branches of service, on headstones and markers at government expense. Prior to the change, requests for multiple branch inscriptions were permitted below the last line of the authorized inscription, but only at private expense.

Also, the VA now delivers all grave monuments by private carrier. Applications must indicate a street address since post office box numbers cannot be used for shipping purposes. Stone monuments have traditionally been shipped by private carrier and now bronze markers will be handled the same way.

VA's Department of Memorial Affairs administers the National Cemetery System comprising 110 national cemeteries in 38 states and Puerto Rico.

Burial in a national cemetery with available grave space is open to all veterans discharged under conditions other than dishonorable, as well as eligible dependents of veterans.

A government headstone or marker is furnished to mark the graves of veterans and their dependents interred in national cemeteries and, upon request, to mark the graves of veterans interred in private cemeteries. Last year, VA's Department of Memorial Affairs provided over 246,600 monuments.

MARSHAL'S VIEWPOINT

Provost Marshal's Office

What is fraud? Here are some definitions:

Any willful or conscious wrongdoing that adversely effects the Governments interests.

The intentional, wrongful obtaining of either money or some other advantage or benefit.

The obtaining of something of value, unlawfully, through willful misrepresentation.

Basically, fraud is deceit, trickery or breach of confidence used to gain some unfair or dishonest advantage.

If someone wanted to take your money, how could he get it? The common crook might try a holdup. But what about the less common crook — the con artist, the dishonest businessman, and the cheat. They're after your money too. But they don't use a gun. They use fraud.

Losses due to fraud are estimated to be at least $21 billion a year, nationwide.

Some common cons are:

Charity fraud: This does a lot of harm. The swindler takes advantage of people's goodwill and takes their cash money that was meant for people in need. To make sure that any money you give gets into the right hands, follow these pointers when somebody asks for a donation:

Ask for identification of the organization, the solicitor. Find out what the purpose of the charity is and how funds are used.

Give to charities that you are familiar with. Check out those you've never heard of before.

Be suspicious of charities that only accept cash. Always make a check out to the organization and not the individual.

Medical fraud: Unlike the medicine man who sold snake oil to pioneers on the American frontier, today's quacks are highly sophisticated salespeople who use widespread deceptive advertising to offer miracles they cannot produce — ie, instant cure for arthritis, lose weight overnight, grow more hair and look years younger.

Most of the gadgets and gimmicks advertised have not been tested by competent medical authorities and some could be downright dangerous, so:

DON'T trust your health to a salesman.

DON'T believe claims of a secret cure or miracles.

DON'T believe claims of excessive weight loss.

DON'T beleive exaggerated claims of regained youth.

To report fraud, waste and abuse, call C.I.D. at 545-3984 and leave your recorded message. No need to leave your name.

Help us help you.

ASK THE JUDGE

Dear SJA: A few months ago I joined a local health spa. Before I signed the contract, I was not allowed to inspect the facilities at the spa and by the pictures they showed me and had displayed, I was led to believe that the spa was coed. However, since joining the spa, I have discovered that the spa was for men only and that there was a separate facility for women. Also, the facilities at the spa were not what I was led to believe, especially the swimming pool. What can I do to get out of my contract? Is there some kind of grace period in which I can cancel the contract?

Reader: Unless there is some period specified in the contract itself there is no grace period in which you can cancel this type of contract. Also, while the facilities may not be what you expected, that, in itself, is not reason enough to cancel a contract. If, before signing the contract, the spa's representatives made some type of representation to you about the spa, then there may be a chance that you could win a court battle based on the fraud of the spa's representatives; however, this is expensive and doubtful. The best remedy for this situation is to never enter into any contractual agreement without having full knowledge of all the facts.

Always inspect the facility before signing the contract. Any reputable spa will always allow you to take a tour of the facilities. Never rely on pictures to show you what the spa is like and who attends the spa. Remember, once you sign the contract, you are bound by the agreement and it is difficult, if not sometimes impossible, to cancel the contract without being held liable for a lot of damages.

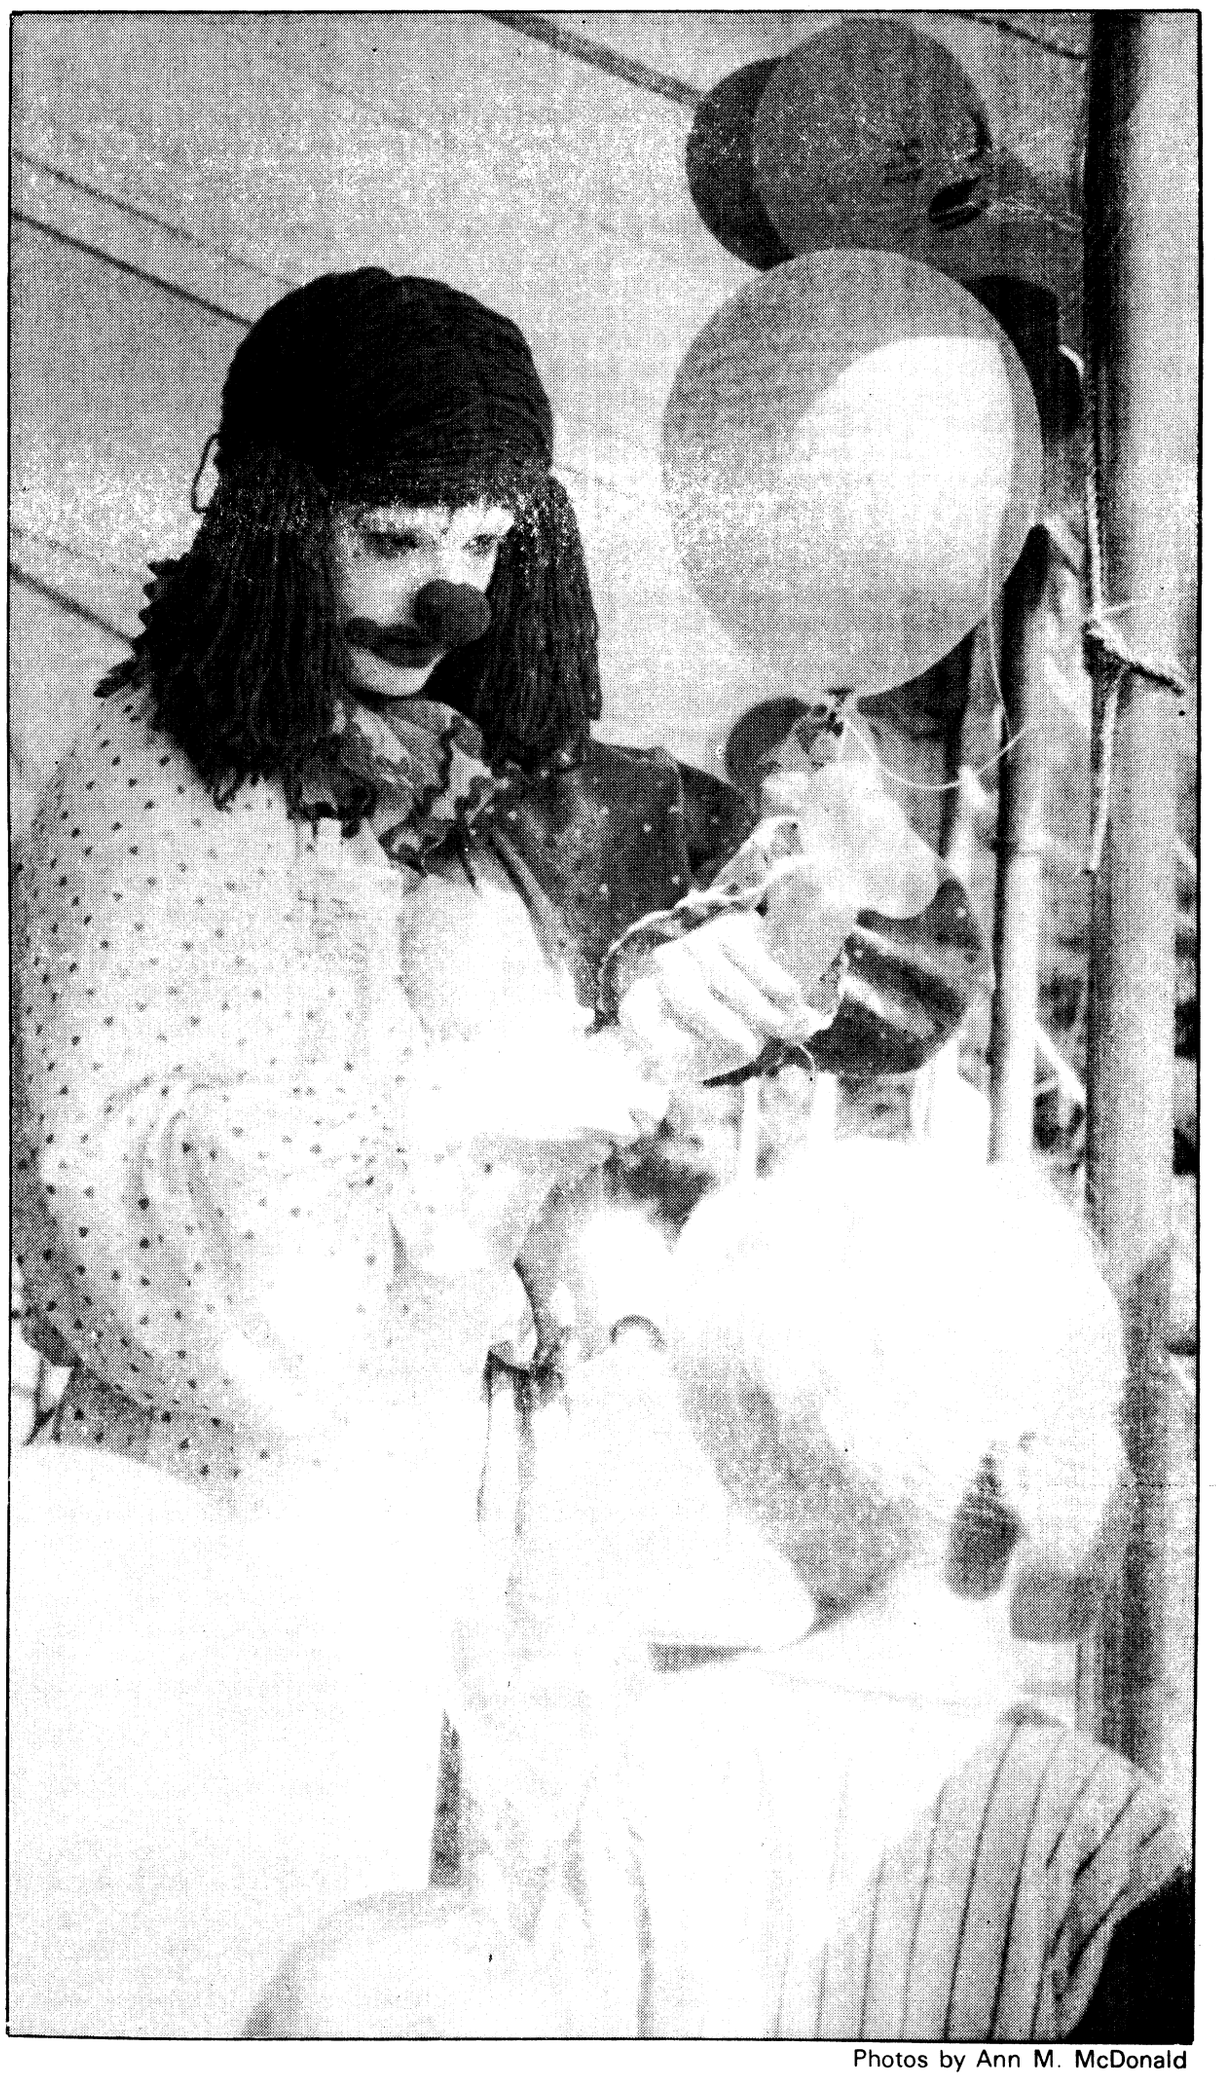
Super success

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Fort Benning Community joined together last Saturday in a Family Information Fair/Religious Expo, which was designed to entertain and provide vital information to post residents.

Representatives from nearly every major organization on post were on hand to answer questions on everything from Religious Instruction to how to rent a boat from the Community Recreation Division.



The U. S. Infantry Band and several other local groups provided music for the fairgoers listening enjoyment.

The 1/507th Parachute Infantry Regiment and the 75th Ranger Regiment battled local radio stations in separate volleyball matches in the field adjacent to the fair.

According to a Spokesman for the project, the turnout was good and they're planning to make the fair a yearly event.

SOS keeps post running

By Tom Fix
USAIC Public Affairs Office

As go these seven women, goes Fort Benning. Their computers regularly dispatch an army of DEH workers and equipment with the mission of keeping the post operational.

Recently I had my first encounter with this office when I placed my first work order request. Having just moved on post, there were several things I wanted to get repaired. I dialed 545-2135 and got the typical answer: "You have reached the DEH service order section . . .," the taped response began. This is going to take all day, I thought. But within seconds, a pleasant voice interrupted the tape saying, "Work order desk, Miss. Johnson."

Sarah Johnson is one of five telephone operators who answer calls coming into the post's Work Reception Office. Wearing a telephone headset and sitting in front of a computer, she is at the hub of the Directorate of Engineering and Housing's fully automated maintenance command center.

Johnson and her four partners log more than 100,000 telephone work orders each year, attempting to keep the post's "real property" repaired and working.

It's no small task and is directed by no small woman. Standing 4 feet 8 inches, Becky Ray oversees an office of six other women whose computers send repair crews of all kinds all over the post.

Scattered in and around Fort Benning's 182,000 acres are 3,834 buildings, both permanent and temporary, that need care if they are going to last.

There is also 18,300 square yards of roads as well as 275 miles of sewer lines and 162 miles of water mains. Add to that the 108 miles of electrical wire used to provide light for the post, and it's apparent that there's a lot that can break.

My requests seemed trivial when stacked up against the demands of the post. I simply wanted the leaves in the gutters removed and several tiles that were missing from the roof of my front porch replaced. But they were not considered small to the woman on the telephone, for she realized that people are calling because they need help or something has gone wrong -- roughly 25 percent of all calls come from families in need of help.

I was so impressed with my telephone encounter, I decided to visit their 262 Edwards Street office.

"The best part of the job is helping people," said Martha Harmon of Columbus. She practices just that. Once Harmon spent an afternoon getting a plummer to the house of a woman who had lost a contact lens down a sink drain. "I wear contacts myself and knew what she was going through," Harmon said.

It is comforting to know that the voices on the other end of the phone belong to caring human beings. "We do everything we can," she said, "but we can only do so much."

Here I found out, is where callers can do a lot to help themselves. Having the correct information readily available is the first step. Imagine yourself answering a hundred calls a day and having to pull out the necessary information for each one. The old saying about "knowing how the system works" definitely applies here.

A specific description of the problem is the key. How would you like to respond to a work order having incomplete or inaccurate information? In this business, time is of the essence and information saves time. For instance, I quickly was informed that a detailed description of the problem would allow the telephone operator to determine the proper priortiy and notify the correct maintenance section.

More than 350 DEH workers in 22 different shops are ready to respond. With roughly 275 new telephone requests generated daily, I began to see why there would be a difference in response times in spite of the large work force.

Some shops, like range maintenance, have a large work force but respond to infrequent service requests.

To handle the urgency of each request, the telephone operators place each call into one of three catagories: rountine, urgent or emergency. They make their decision based upon the information that is provided by the caller. I could see why they needed a complete description of the problem, to include exact location with room number or floor number and the exact nature of the problem. Was the toilet leaking through the top of the tank or around the back near the pipes.

Becky Obert

Carolyn Scruggs, a work order clerk at DEH, takes a customer's call.

But why did they need to know my building number? Wasn't my address enough? "We need the building number," said Carolyn Scruggs, another of the operators. "It saves time." When you consider the number of units on post combined with their support agencies and than add more than 4,000 families you can see why anything that saves time is of interest. After all, it's the small things that will save you — every time.

Scruggs, has a sign on her desk that describes the overwhelming pressure to get the details, especially when the 100th call of the day has just come in: "Lord give me the strength to get along with computers."

In another cubicle, the Unity ministry calendar of Donna Bowen provides a clue to the office's service: "The keynote for August is enthusiasm," it says.

I discovered there's even a number to get an update, to find out what's happened to my work requests. That's where Debra Myles, another Columbus native, comes in. She operates the Status Line — 545-1995. On Tuesdays and Thursdays from 8 a.m. to noon, Myles can provide the latest on any request, as long as you can provide the request number.

"We have done so much for so long, with so little," says a sign on her desk, "we are now qualified to do anything with nothing."

Says a card on operator Edna Lewis' desk, "God is like Bayer Aspirin, He works wonders."

Given their workload, so does the Work Reception Office.

Editor's Note: From 4:30 p.m. to midnight, an emergency crew is on post to handle emergency requests, which are those where a threat to life, health or property exists. From midnight to 7:30 a.m., a single operator is available to call in crews for emergencies. That number, again, is 545-2135.

'Creative Parenting' author to address OWC

By Lynn Barlotta
OWC Publicity Chairman

Dr. William S. Sears, author of the bestseller Creative Parenting, will be speaking at the OWC Sept. 25 luncheon at 10:30 a.m. in the Officer's Club.

Dr. Sears has also written a series of articles called "The Growing Family," currently featured in Baby Talk magazine.

Presently Dr. Sears is an assistant professor of pediatrics at the University of Southern California's school of medicine and maintains a private practice in California.

His book is a comprehensive encyclopedia on the subject of childcare. Dr. Dears says it was written for intuitive, feeling parents who place a "top priority on their professions as parents," and as a how-to book for families who live a mobile life, isolated from extended families and unable to seek advice and information from grandparents.

Speaking with Dr. Sears will be his wife, and mother of their six children, Martha.

Mrs. Sears is a well-known authority on breastfeeding and is actively involved in the LaLeche League International. Together, they will address such topics as how to build self-esteem in your child; the give and take of parenting, when do those little takers become big givers; effective discipline and responding sensitively to your child's needs. A question and answer session with Dr. and Mrs. Sears will conclude the "Motherhood in Spotlight" program.

In January and March of 1988, two more best-selling authors will speak to the OWC. In January, Natalie Dupree, author of New Southern Cooking and a television-syndicated gourmet chef will be featured. In March, Mr. Joe Piscatella, author of Don't Eat Your Heart Out and director of the Institute of Fitness and Health, will advise us on cardiac health, diet, fitness and stress.

OWC members wishing to make a reservation for the luncheon should contact their unit rep or call one of the reservation lines listed in the Communique.

Chili lovers converge on Hospice Chili Festival

Columbus Hospice, inc.

The first Great Columbus Chili Festival will take place at the Chattahoochee Valley fairgrounds on Saturday, Oct. 31, from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m.

Proceeds from the festival will benefit Coumbus Hospice Inc., whose purpose is to provide services and improve the quality of life for terminally ill patients and their families.

The event is made possible by a grant from Pratt & Whitney, an operating unit of United Technologies Corp.

The Cookoff, which will be sanctioned by the International Chili Society, is expected to attract contestants from throughout the southeast, according to chairpersons Joe Gillespie and Andy Speed.

Prizes will be awarded for the first, second and third-best chili, and for a variety of other contests of skill and fun that will be a part of the festival.

Contestants will also compete for prizes for the best decorated cooking booth, best cowboy hat and best boot throw, hoot and holler and costume.

There will be live entertainment and fun for the entire family throughout the day.

For more information, contact Columbus Hospice Inc., Medical Arts Building, Suite 207, Columbus 31901, or call (404) 327-5153.

Triathlon draws athletes

Jekyll Island — State Park Authority

JEKYLL ISLAND, Ga. — Athletes from Georgia and North Florida and from as far away as South Carolina will compete in the Third Annual Jekyll Island — Bud Light Triathlon to be held Saturday, Sept. 12.

The swimming, biking and running competition will begin at 9 a.m. on the beach behind the Convention Center with a one-kilometer swim in the Atlantic Ocean. Following the swim will be a 40-kilometer bike race around the south end of the island and a 10-kilometer run around the north end.

"While everyone who competes in a triathlon would love to win the event, the triathlete really competes against himself and the elements — the ocean, wind and sun," Laurie Lester, Jekyll Island superintendant of recreation, said.

Six divisions are open for men and women of all ages. Registration may be made in advance with a $10 entry fee postmarked before Sept. 5. After that date the entry fee will be $12. Registration is also available the morning of the race between 7 a.m. and 8:30 a.m.

Trophies will be awarded to the first place overall winnr for both men and women and first place winners in each division. In addition, there will be second and third place awards for divisional winners. All registered participants will receive a t-shirt.

Lockers, restrooms and showers, as well as refreshments after the race, will be provided for the participants.

In addition to the triathlon, Jekyll Island will host its second annual biathlon — a 40-kilometer bicycle race and 10-kilometer run — on Saturday, Oct. 3. "The biathlon is a very popular competition because the swimming aspect in a triathlon greatly increases the difficulty of the event," Lester said.

Both events are being sponsored by the Jekyll Island Authority, Bud Light and Tri-Sport Cycles of Brunswick. Registration information is available by calling the Jekyll Island Recreation office at (912) 635-2232.

Bike trail opens at Callaway

Ida Cason Calloway Foundation

PINE MOUNTAIN, Ga. — What's 23,760 feet long, eight feet wide and has two thousand legs? The new Callaway Gardens Bike Trail on opening day! A thousand bikers are expected to take the inaugural bike ride down the $700,000 trail after ribbon-cutting ceremonies Labor Day, Sept. 7.

Callaway Garden's president, Hal Northrop, will officially proclaim the trail open shortly after 1 p.m. He will then lead a caravan of bikers on a tour of the trail, that begins at the Mountain Creek Lake Boathouse and winds through woods and around lakes and streams to the John A. Sibley Horticultural Center, the Ida Cason Callaway Memorial Chapel and the Pioneer Log Cabin.

The Bike Trail, which features 18 wooden bridges ranging from 10 to 200 feet long, ends on the west side of Mountain Creek Lake, where bikers board a ferry back to the start of the trail. The 10-foot by 30-foot ferry is powered by a 50-horsepower motor and will make the crossing in approximately three minutes.

Grand opening festivities planned for Labor Day at Callaway include music by the Gibson-Bennett Band, bicycle acrobatics by the Florida State Circus and special bike tricks by Atlanta's Free Flight Bicycle Club. Exhibit booths will feature the latest bicycle models and accessories, plus there will be a display of antique bikes dating back to the 1800s. The staging area for all the special activities will be the lawn between the Mountain Creek Lake Boathouse and the Gardens Restaurant.

Admission to the Bike Trail Grand Opening is free to anyone riding their bike to Callaway Gardens on Labor Day. Those choosing to bring their bike to the Gardens on Sept. 7 will be admitted for half price. Regular Gardens admission is $4 for adults, $1 for children ages 6-11 and children under six are admitted free.

Labor Day will also be the last opportunity for visitors to enjoy Robin Lake Beach this summer. Beach activities include swimming, rides on the Robin E. Lee Riverboat and Whistlin' Dixie miniature train, paddleboat, canoes, miniature golf and shuffleboard. Admission to Robin Lake Beach on Labor Day will be $5.25 for adults, $2.50 for children ages 6-11. Beach admission also includes entrance to the Gardens and Bike Trail.

For anyone not bringing a bike to Callaway, bicycles will be available for rent at the entrance to the Bike Trail and at the Bike Barn at the Beach.

For additional information about activities on Labor Day at Callaway Gardens, contact the public relations departmant at (404) 663-5186.

The results are in for the second of three 10-mile runs here preparing for the third annual "Army Ten-Miler" (Run The River Bridges) to be held in Washington, D.C. Oct. 11.

Lloyd McDonald of HHC 2nd Bde still has the fastest time with 51:20:18 followed by Dan Sullivan of HHC 2/14, who is new to the top six, with a time of 54:06:89. Nambaye Y. Dasnan of 24th Co TSB, with 55:22:12, fell from second to third. Accides Colon from A Co 3/7, with 56:51:69, dropped from third to fourth and Abdula Bartuia, 24th Co TSB, went to fifth from forth with a time of 58:29:00. Rounding out the top six, and new to the list, was Mark Crawson of HHC 10th Mount. with a time of 58:35:85.

Jim Cunningham who ran a 58:36:57 and John McBurney who finished with a 59:13:65 last week fell from the top six. However, the 7th through 12th place finishers will be place on an alternate list in case the top finishers are unable to travel to D.C..

These times give you some idea of what you'll have to beat to make the team heading for D.C.

The Sports Office is sponsoring the three ten-mile runs. The final qualifing run will be held Sep. 12 starting at 7 a.m. in front of Santiago Gym, Sand Hill.

The top six runners will be selected to represent Benning in Washington.

Runners having the best time in any one race or an average of any two or three will have the opportunity of joining the team.

Entering the Benning races is free and the Community Recreations Division will provide for transportation, lodging and entree fees for the 6-man team that will travel to Washington.

For more information and registration forms, go by the Fort Benning Sports Office in building 394 (Doughboy Stadium) or call 545-2332/7519.

Post announces plans to ring in the Bicentennial

By Becky Obert
Bayonet staff writer

The circular driveway in front of Infantry Hall will become Constitution Loop next week, as part of Fort Benning's observance of the Bicentennial of the U.S. Constitution.

The mayors of Columbus and Phenix City, along with post commander, Maj. Gen. Kenneth Leuer, will join together Sept. 17 to celebrate the occasion.

A highlight of the event will be the burial of a time capsule containing artifacts that represent current events and the Army, to be opened in another 100 years.

The capsule will contain the Sept. 17, 1987, issue of the Ledger-Enquirer, Columbus Times and Phenix Citizen Newspapers, a copy of The Bayonet's Bicentennial issue, pictures of Fort Benning, a copy of the day's program, letters from the two mayors and Leuer, and patches of units represented at Fort Benning.

The ceremony begins at 2:45 p.m. in front of Infantry Hall, and will include patriotic music by the Infantry Centery Band and soloist Cy Dietrick.

A plaque marking the site of the time capsule was donated by the Columbus-Fort Benning Chapter of the Association of the U.S. Army.

Later that day, Fort Benning will join with other cities nationwide in marking the signing of the Constitution.

Billed as a ringing tribute to the Constitution, bells across the country will be rung at 4 p.m. Eastern Daylight Time, for 200 seconds. It was 4 p.m. on Sept. 17, 1787, that the Constitution was signed in Philadelphia, Pa.

The bell that will ring on post will be on the porch of the National Infantry Museum. The bell is a part of the museum's collection, and was cast by a company named Meneelys in West Troy, N.Y., in 1860. The bell is made of bronze and is never rung for fear of damaging it, said Dick Grube, museum director. Because of the historic significance of the occasion, they're making an exception this time.

Wreath-laying ceremony to honor POWs/MIAs

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Fort Benning community will take time out to remember prisoners of war and those missing in action, at a wreath-laying ceremony Sept. 18.

Maj. Gen. Kenneth Leuer, post commander, and Jo Anne Shirley, vice president of the Georgia Committee for POWs/MIAs, will jointly lay a wreath at the POW/MIA statue in the field adjacent to Greene Hall, off Lumpkin Road. The ceremony begins at 10:30 a.m.

Mrs. Shirley became involved with the National League of Families of Prisoners and Missing in 1974. Her brother, Maj. Bobby Marvin Jones, was listed as missing in action in South Vietnam in November 1972.

She has been the Georgia State Coordinator of the national league for the past five years, and has served as vice president of the Georgia committee since it was founded in October 1985.

Following the ceremony, guests will adjourn to a reception and luncheon at the Officers' Club at 11:30 a.m. A POW/MIA display will also be set up there.

The public is invited to attend the wreath-laying ceremony. The reception and luncheon is by invitation only.

Soldier wins medal for aiding injured construction worker

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

Due to the quick thinking of an airborne student at 1st Battalion, 507th Parachute Infantry Regiment, a construction worker is alive today.

The accident occured during the recent construction of the 34 foot mock towers on Eubanks Field.

Fletcher Johnson, of a local construction company was doing some last minute welding at the top portion of the tower when he lost his balance and fell from the tower.

That is where 2nd Lt. Berthony Ladoucer stepped in. According to Ladoucer, he was in the break area near the tower when he heard a noise and saw several people running to the construction site.

"When I got to the scene, I found Fletcher Johnson semiconcious on the ground," Ladoucer said, "He had a cut on the right side of his head and was having problems breathing."

Upon evaluating the situation, Ladoucer took action. He knelt next to the victim, checked the airway, took his pulse and continued to monitor his condition while emergency aid was sought.

Suddenly, Johnson stopped breathing and Berthony began artificial respiration. "I used the chin-lift method because of the possibility of a neck injury," he said. "When I lifted his chin, he began breathing again and became concious."

"He tried to sit up, but I made him stay still," Ladoucer said, "and waited there with him until medical personnel arrived."

According the Mrs. Mae Johnson the wife of the victim, her husband would not be alive today if it were not for the quick thinking of Ladoucer.

She said her husband received several broken ribs, a punctured lung and a pinched nerve in his neck, as well as other injuries in his fall.

Ladoucer, has since permanently changed his station of duty, but received an Army Achievement Medal for his efforts.

MEMORABILIA

Museum display features items crafted by prisoners

By Becky Obert
Bayonet staff writer

A china cup, playing cards, a diary, slippers.

Ordinary items that you find anywhere, but to Col. Ray M. O'Day, they meant much more. They were things he made while held a prisoner of war by the Japanese during World War II.

These pieces, along with more than 100 other items, make up the Prisoner of War/Missing In Action exhibit that is currently on display at Fort Benning's National Infantry Museum. The collection was started in 1960, and donations and purchases make it the largest one of its kind in the Army.

The exhibit was designed around the idea of contrasts.

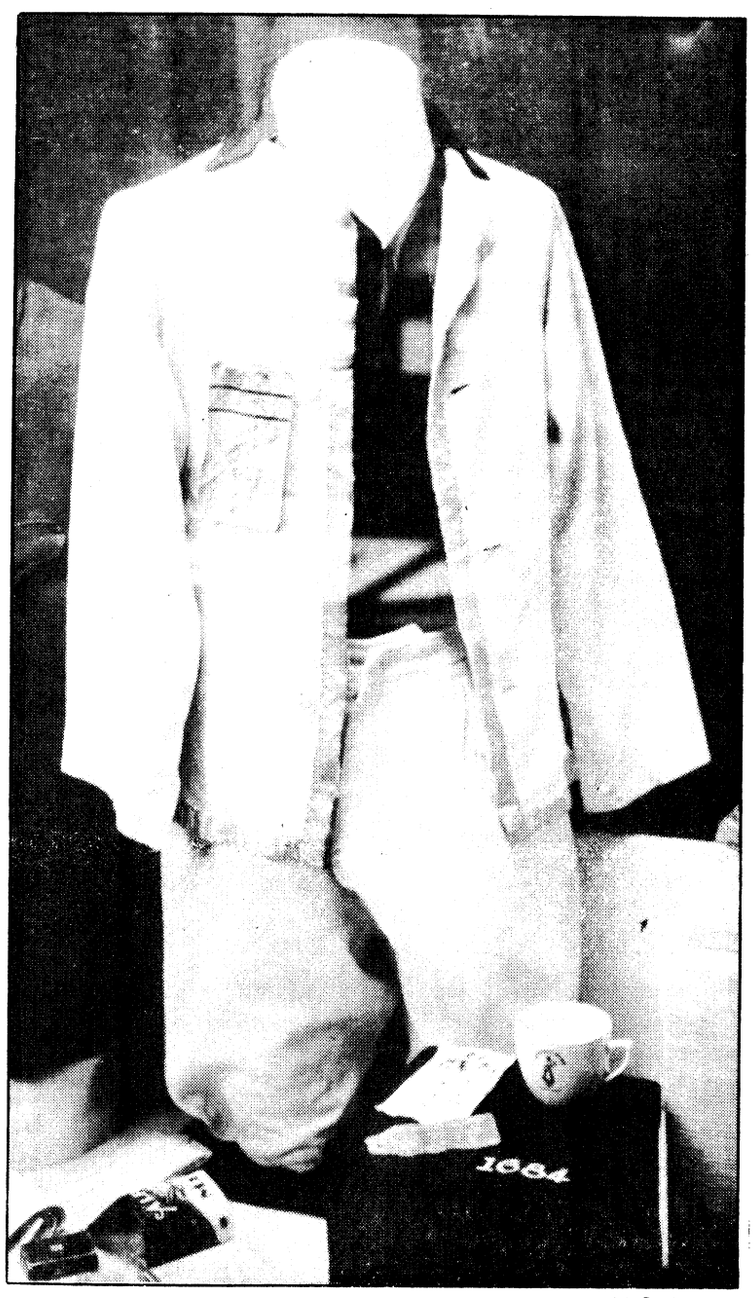
"We wanted to show the difference between freedom and captivity," said Dick Grube, museum director. For this reason, the items are displayed on a stark black background with touches of white for visual effect. Some of the glass display cases are topped by circles of rusty barbed wire, a touch added to "remind visitors of the burden and restriction placed upon a human being who is held captive," Grube said.

Being held prisoner means deprivation of body and spirit. "The lack of activity and lack of contact with friends and comrades was as great a threat to the well-being of a prisoner as the lack of food, shelter and medical attention was," Grube said.

To fight this deprivation, the prisoner looks for things to do to keep busy, occupy his mind with creative thoughts rather than sitting and rotting away, Grube explained.

The collection has many examples of how prisoners passed their time through creative pursuits. These include pottery, carvings, painting and beadwork made by prisoners. Most of the handicrafts were crudely-made folk art, Grube said, since the artists lacked materials and tools. "Despite this lack, some prisoners created real works of art from bone, ivory and wood," he said.

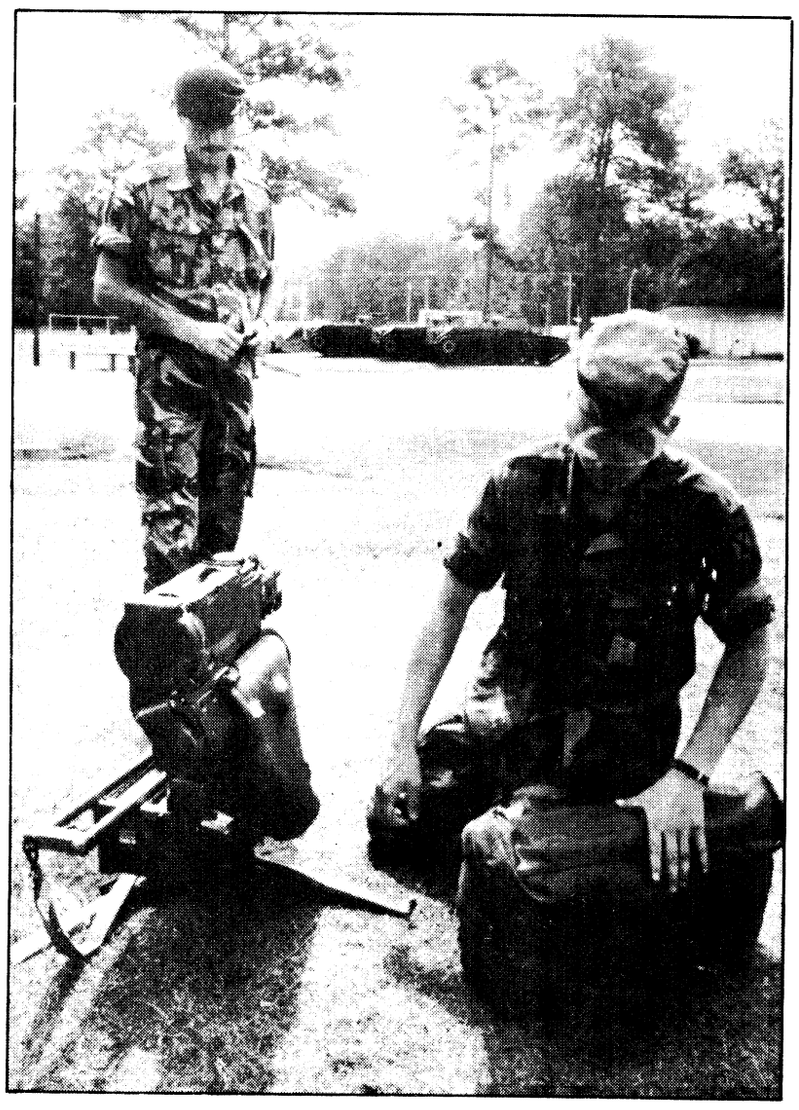
The oldest items in the exhibit are leg irons and handcuffs that may have been used during the Civil War, Grube said. Other Civil War artifacts are reproductions of drawings done by prisoners in Confederate prison camps.



Another part of the exhibit features artifacts from Vietnam POWs, including the pajama-type bright green uniforms they wore during captivity and the POW bracelets that were popular in the U.S. during the war.

There's a story behind every item in the exhibit. O'Day survived the Bataan Death March and was a captive until the Russians liberated the Manchurian POW camp where he was being held.

He used every scrap of paper, every bit of cloth and string that was available to make the things that would enhance his life as a prisoner.



It was his way of clinging to the past and the American way of life.

The POW/MIA exhibit will be on display until September 1988. The museum is open from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Tuesday through Friday, from 12:30 to 4:30 p.m. Saturdays and Sundays and Mondays by appointment only.

British trainers show troops testing methods

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

A British New Equipment Training Team (NETT) is here to educate 20 10th Mountain Division soldiers on the logistics necessary to test a weapon to see if it is suitable for Army use.

The weapon is an interim supplement to the Dragon. If the Army decides to purchase this weapon, it will be used in selected light infantry and airborne units in special contingency missions.

According to Capt. Harry Hopkins of the Directorate of Training and Doctrine (DOTD), which is in charge of the testing, the British were selected because they already employ the weapon. The 10th Mountain soldiers were selected because they are light infantry and would possibly be using the weapon.

"The British will be training the men on every aspect of the weapon," Hopkins said, "so that the men will be prepared when the actual testing phase begins."

Lt. Col. Terry Daly from the Ministry of Defense in London is the leader from the NETT group. According to him, each member of the group was selected individually and comes from a different unit within their Army.

"WO1 Keith Hoyle comes from the British School of Infantry in Wilshire, and WO2 Frank Gregan is with their 1st Infantry Battalion in Germany," Daly said, "Sgt. James Robertson is with the Gordon Highlanders while Sgt. Stuart Blackmore comes from the 2nd Battalion, Parachute Regiment."

Daly explained that they all were brought together for this one-time mission and the selection was based upon their expertise with the weapon.

"This is a good opportunity for us," he said, "as we are able to compare our training techniques with how the U.S. conducts training and learn some things as well."

"Their training is very condensed and thorough," said Cpl. Jeff Lyons of Company C, 3rd Battalion, 14th Infantry, 10th Mountain Division. "They are all business and very knowledgeable on the weapon we will be testing."

Wearing seat belts saves driver's life

By Wayne J. Potuznik
Co. A, 3rd Bn, 32nd Inf

It was a hot July morning. All along Illinois Route 1, corn swayed in the morning breeze as farm families sat down to breakfast. Traveling south that morning, as it had several times before, a little Chevy Vega was cruising along at 55 miles per hour to take its driver to his job.

The morning calm was shattered when the left front tire of the little car exploded, dragging it over the yellow line, just as the car was approaching an oncoming semi-tractor/trailer. The driver of the car fought to regain control of his car and force it back onto his own side of the road. The Vega squeezed by the tractor, but the trailer wheels bore down like dual buzz saws on the little car. Steel crunched and tore, rubber screamed and glass exploded as the tires shredded thedriver's side of little car, spinning it like a child's top.

The driver was a helpless occupant in his missile of destruction as it careened into the car following the semi. The impact with the other car ripped the hood of the little car from its mountings and through the windshield, stopping just over the steering wheel.

The farm family heard the crash in front of their home and called the ambulance even before going outside. When they did, they went to the little car first to check on its driver. They felt no one could have survived in the Vega by the way it looked. The hood was through the windshield, the left side shredded, the driver's door skin and complete window were gone. When they looked inside, there was no one in the driver's seat. They turned to the man standing next to the car and asked if he had found the driver yet. I responded, I am the driver.

That was 10 years ago, before mandatory seat belt laws were even thought of. I wore my seat belts religiously because I had seen too many of my friends killed not wearing them.

My total injuries sustained in that crash was a sprained left wrist from when I broke the steering with my hands as I was thrown forward into my shoulder belt, and bruises from when my body slammed into the belts that saved my life. The ambulance crew could not believe that I was the driver of that little Vega. Without a doubt, seat belts saved my life. Buckle up.

Snively gets lowdown on accidents

McGruff reveals most happen in post parking lots

By Clyde Snively
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Officer McGruff, crime fighter exemplar, was working a case in the Building 4 parking lot when I caught up to him.

My Mission: interview him. Get the low-down on crime at Fort Benning.

I didn't relish the assignment. People in uniform who wear badges, and carry guns, make me nervous. I could be driving two miles an hour below the speed limit and let a cop car pull in behind me and I begin to sweat bullets.

My mind races over anything that could possibly be wrong: "Seat belts?" "Check." "Car registration?" "Check." "Tail and brake lights working properly?" "Hope so."

I'll continue in that worry mode as long as the policeman's on my tail.

If I'm in a store shopping and if anyone resembling a security officer looks my way, I immediately begin to whistle while I think of ways I can prove that what I walked in with actually belongs to me.

But...a job's a job, so I took a deep breath and walked up to the famous crime fighter.

"Sir, er, uh, Officer McGruff sir, I'm Specialist Snively and I was told to interview you about vehicle accidents and any related crime patterns."

He looked at me balefully. I knew he was going for his cuffs, but instead he merely reached up and scratched behind his ear with a pencil.

"Sure," he said. "Come with me. We'll cruise about in the patrol car and I'll tell you a few things about some trends I've noticed."

I didn't like the "come with me," nor the "in my car" statements, but I had little choice, an order is an order.

Once properly strapped in, I let loose with my first hard-hitting question, letting him know I wasn't a rookie journalist. "Where's it most dangerous to drive at Fort Benning?"

I figured it'd be Highway 27 or the bypass, so I wasn't ready for his answer — "parking lots."

"Uhhh, whaaat?" I stammered.

"Yep," he said. "Fact is, parking lots are the most dangerous place there is for a car. We have more accidents in parking lots, more hit-and-runs in parking lots and more vandalism to cars in parking lots than anywhere else."

"Gosh," I murmured. "I wonder where we should park our cars." Envisioning a destructo derby, I asked him what kind of accidents occurred in parking lots.

"Backing," he said. "People don't look behind them before they go shooting out from their parking places and plow into someone."

"What else?" I asked.

"Hit-and-runs," he said. "Get a lot of hit-and-run accidents. Again, it's usually someone who can't negotiate a parking stall, so they whack some car on the side, then take off without reporting it."

"Strangest one of all, though, was a shopping cart hit-and-run. Had a bag boy at the commissary let loose of his cart one day. Damn thing slammed into a car and the kid took off. That's what I call a real hit-and-run, although the kid eventually turned himself in."

"You also mentioned vandalism," I said.

"Yep," he said. "People don't lock their cars, so someone rips off their fancy stereo system.

Safety top priority for TRADOC commander

By James Ford
TRADOC OCPA

FORT MONROE, Va. — Each year thousands of people are hurt on and off the job, mainly because they do not take proper safety precautions.

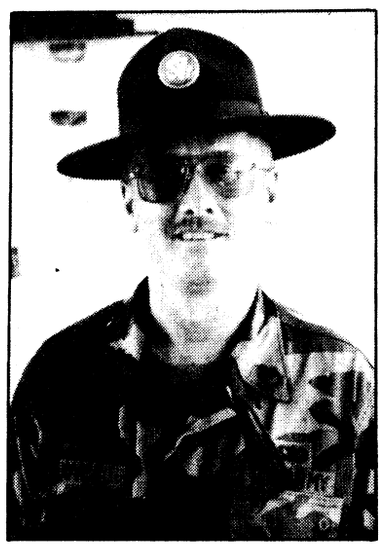
One of the new TRADOC commander's main priorities is safety — especially safety in training. It was obvious from listening to Gen. Thurman's first formal talk to his action officers and employees, that safety is of utmost importance to him. He even referred to himself as "The TRADOC Safety Officer." He advocates hard and realistic training and safe training.

When we talk about leader and soldier competence, we generally think of competence from a technical or tactical perspective. However, soldiers and civilians must be knowledgeable and proficient in all aspects of their duties. Safety awareness is an essential part of soldiers' and leaders' responsibilities.

In order to have a safe Army, it is important to instill in the entire TRADOC and Army families a keen sense of safety awareness, the appreciation of the value of safety and a knowledge of the safety aspects of Army operations and training.

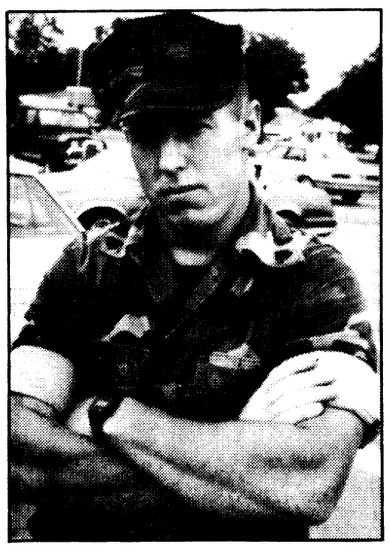
Gen. Thurman has reiterated that there can be no compromise in tough, demanding and realistic training to standards.

Such training is essential in ensuring that our Army's mission is accomplished. It prevents unnecessary loss of life and equipment. Safety is a part of the mission, and as such, it cannot be compromised. Effective and realistic training can and must be done without unnecessary risk of injury or death and loss of equipment.

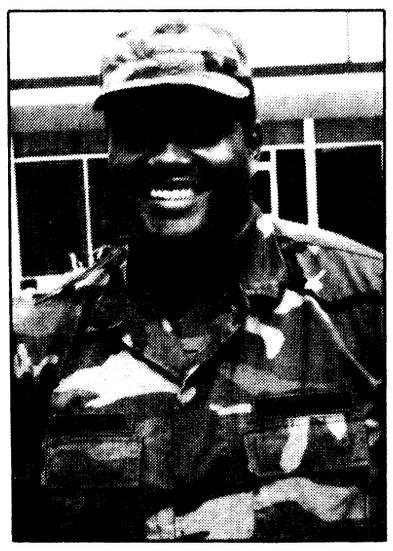


Undoubtedly, accidents will happen from time to time. But they can be avoided almost totally, or minimized significantly, if we follow standard operating procedures on the job, and establish safety standards where needed.

There cannot be a "ready" Army of Excellence without leaders, soldiers, civilians and family members who are sensitive and responsive to the importance of maintaining safety in everything they do. As Gen. Thurman has said, safety is a mindset for excellence; and if excellence does indeed start at TRADOC, then we must emphasize, exercise and improve upon it everyday.

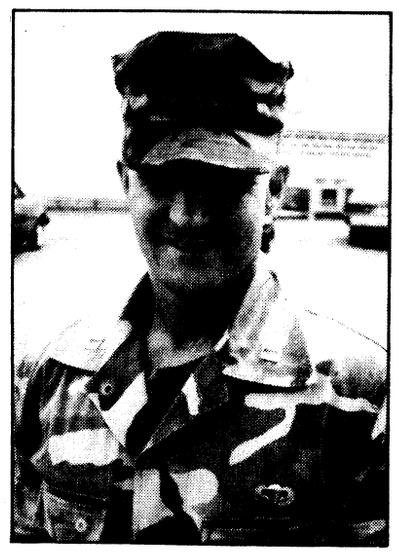


VARIOUS VOICES / What does the Constitution mean to you?



2nd Lt. Vaughn Brown, IOBC, Company D, 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment — "The Constitution is what our country is based on. Our principles and values all stem from it. To me, it means enough to defend it to the letter as I am sworn to do."

SSgt. Jerome Joyce, Company C, 4th Battalion, 30th Infantry Regiment — "To me, it is the groundwork of the entire fabric of the United States."



Marine Sgt. David Craft, Company D, 1st Battalion, 507th Parachute Infantry Regiment — "To me it is being able to do what I want to do, when I want to do it. Of course, I have to abide by the laws of the Constitution and all the amendments but, we as a whole are able to do more than citizens from any other country."

Pvt. 1 Charles McGruder, Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 507th Parachute Infantry Regiment — "The Constitution means equal rights regardless of sex, race, or religion."

Tracy Price, family member — "It's the basis for all of our current laws. It stands for freedom and it will forever be applicable."

Marine Capt. Mark Price, IOAC, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment — "Well, to me the Constitution is the basis for my commission as an officer. In my commissioning, I swore to support and defend it against all enemies foreign and domestic."

Man sentenced to 5 years in prison for ammo theft

Staff Judge Advocate

Recently, SSgt. William T. Patton, Headquarters Co., 75th Ranger Regiment, was found guilty by a general court-martial convened at Fort Benning, of two specifications of a violation of the Uniform Code of Military Justice (UCMJ), Article 121, Larceny of Government Property, and one specification of suffering the loss of government property in violation of Article 108, UCMJ.

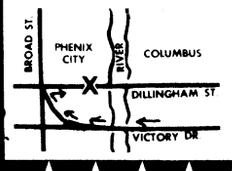
Patton admitted that between November 1984 and May 1986 he stole hand grenade simulators, ground blast simulators, timing fuses, smoke grenades, hundreds of rounds of ammunition, a practice Claymore anti-personnel mine, 3 and three-quarters pounds of M112 demolition charge (C-4), as well as other explosives.

To aggravate the theft of this property, Patton abandoned it in a mini-storage unit in Phenix City. The theft and abandonment of these explosives led to an extreme safety hazard.

Testimony elicited by Maj. Dan Wright, trial counsel, showed that the explosives were so sensitive that it would only take a minor shock, heat or friction to have set them off.

The military jury, made up of five officers and four enlisted soldiers, sentenced Patton to forfeit all pay and allowances, to be confined for five years and to be discharged from the service with a bad conduct discharge.

Patton will be reduced to the pay grade level of E-1. He will serve his confinement at the disciplinary barracks at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas.



WHAT TO DO

If someone complains of a neck injury or numbness after an accident, a spinal cord injury may have occurred. Don't move the person; you can cause greater damage. Tell the ambulance crew you suspect a spinal cord injury.

If you think someone has been injured in the water, don't pull the victim out. Instead, keep the head above water and the neck still. If the body is face down, carefully turn it over, supporting the head, neck and back as a unit. To support the body, use water skis or a long board for the trunk, and sandbags or a life jacket for the neck.

For more information on spinal cord injury prevention and programs and how you can help, contact: National Spinal Cord Injury Association, 149 California Street, Newton, Massachusetts 02158. Tel: (617) 964-0521.

UNIT NEWS

ITC

By Martin D. Neal
1st Bn, 29th Inf

The first platoon of Company C, first BT Battalion, 29th Infantry was the first unit to be inspected within the guidelines of Lt. Col. Robert M. Tesdahl's revamped battalion commander's inspection Aug. 25 and 26.

The purpose of the inspection is to evaluate company systems. The platoon inspection is a vehicle used to evaluate company systems such as enlisted efficiency ratings, overweight program, care of soldiers, physical training program and maintenance.

The inspection began at 5 p.m. Aug. 24, with the in-brief to the company's chain of command. The in-brief consisted of an overall briefing by the battalion executive officer and more detailed briefings by each staff section. Tesdahl closed the briefing by stating his intent of the inspection and exactly what he expects from the company and the platoon.

The 25th started at 8 a.m. with each staff section inspecting their appropriate areas at company level. These inspections did not directly involve first platoon. They were inspected in three different areas. Tesdahl, and CSM Jack T. Hardwick conducted an in-ranks inspection in Class A uniforms. Immediately following the in-ranks inspection, everyone moved on to inspect the platoon's TA-50 and the bullets. The platoon then prepared for the next phase of the inspection.

At 1 p.m. first platoon conducted a 15-km tactical road march to a field site where their vehicles went through a maintenance inspection and the basic issue items were inventoried and inspected. Following the inspection, the platoon road marched back to Kelley Hill. The return to Kelley Hill marked the end of the first day of inspections and first platoon prepared for the second day.

Day two began at 6 a.m. with a PT test conducted by the S-3 Shop. Immediately following the test, the platoon began work on the "battalion commanders option." This is a task chosen by the commander, which the majority of the platoon does not know how to do and will not have the opportunity to train for because of the unit mission requirements. The intent is to evaluate the platoon's ability to plan, organize and work as a team to complete the mission.

First platoon was required to construct a 50-meter double apron barbed-wire fence. With a lot of hard work and a couple of attempts, the fence was completed to Tesdahl's standards and first platoon had completed their inspection.

The final task was the out-brief to the company's chain of command at 4 p.m., where first platoon and the entire company was congratulated for a great effort and a fine overall performance throughout the revamped battalion commander's inspection.

Afterwards, members of the unit talked about how the inspection went. Cpl. Patrick Stilwell enjoyed the challenge of constructing the double apron fence. He stated the "double apron fence was a great challenge because a majority of the platoon had never done it before." PFC Rudy Garcia felt the construction of the fence "brought out of the willingness of the platoon to work together, which we don't get to do very often because of our support mission."

PFC Keith Gruhlke said the inspection, "reflected the readiness of the platoon and we got hands-on training on a task (double-apron fencing) we never got to do before."

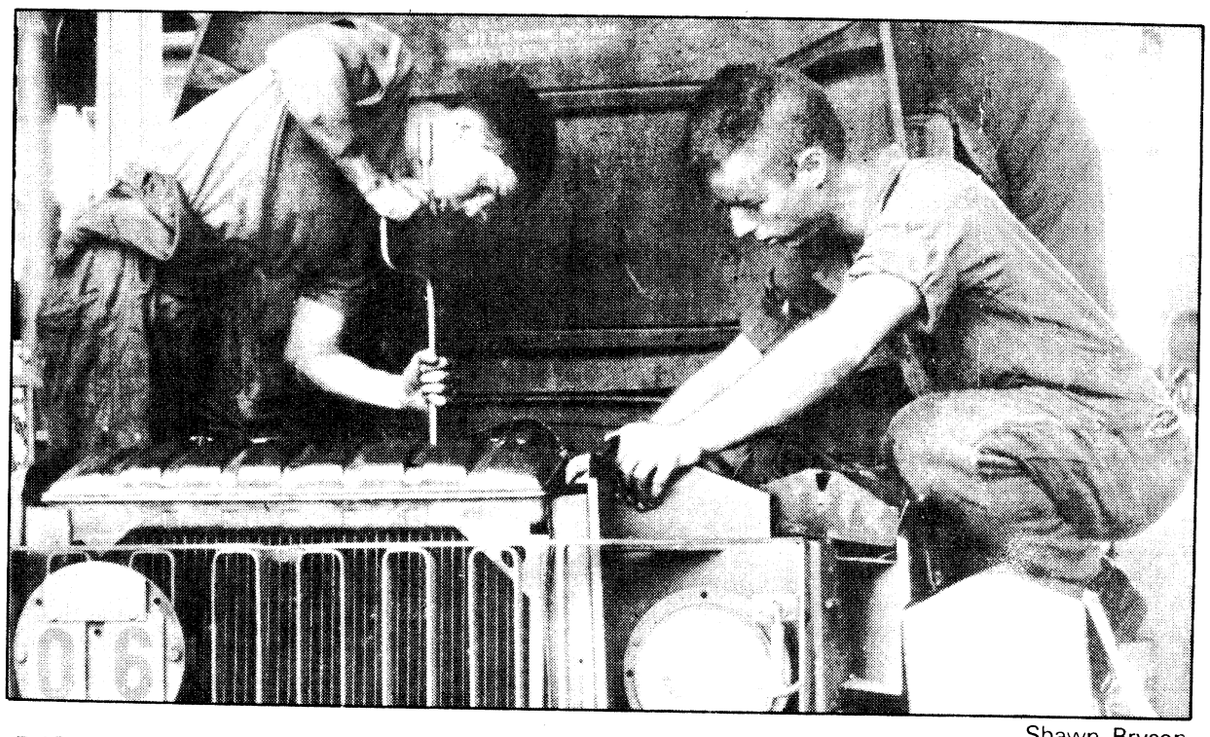
Soldiers from the 598th Maintenance Co. are meeting the challenges that come with being a part of the Ranger Support Element at Fort Benning.

According to SFC James L. Kennet, 598th Headquarters Platoon sergeant and noncommissioned officer in charge of the RSE, the RSE provides support to the 3rd Ranger Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment and to the Regimental Headquarters.

Kennet explained that while the RSE is made up of several different elements, it is the 598th Maintenance Co. that is the command and control of the RSE.



It took over the mission from the 586th Engineer Co. (Assault Float Bridge), because the 586th, formerly of the 67th Maintenance Battalion, was reassigned to the 43rd Engineer Battalion in June and the mission had to stay in the 67th Battalion, according to Kennet.

"Our mission is to provide support to the Rangers should they ever be called out anywhere in the world," Kennet said, adding that the RSE supports the Rangers with maintenance, food service, supplies, ammunition, communication and medical support.

The 598th provides 40 soldiers to the RSE with an equal amount of alternates, Kennet said. "Our mission, as a part of the RSE, is direct maintenance support," he said. "My maintenance team inspects 100-percent of the vehicles, trailers and generators used by the elements of the RSE."

Kennet explained that there can be absolutely no flaws on any of the vehicles. "If we find any gigs on a vehicle they have to be repaired before the vehicle is considered deployable," Kennet

Commission seeks ways to improve equipment quality

By Tom Joyce
American Forces Information Service

People who serve in the armed forces are expected to conduct their lives based on the highest standards. Likewise, the equipment they receive to do their jobs should be manufactured using the highest standards.

So when the President's Blue Ribbon Commission on Defense Management recommended that the Department of Defense buy more commercial (off-the-shelf) products, the acquisition professionals said, "All right, but let's do it smartly."

"We don't want to buy something commercially just because it's less expensive," said Jack Wyatt, director of the Defense Product Standards Office. "We want to get the best value — quality at a price."

In the past, military specifications and standards have been used to ensure value and quality. But as DoD uses more off-the-shelf components and systems, having a means of ensuring the quality of critical military components such as electronics and avionics becomes an important goal.

That's the impetus behind the National Product Certification Program. Said Wyatt, "We are encouraging the private sector to develop its own product certification systems which DoD will then use in place of current military standards and specifications.

DoD will selectively apply product-certification efforts. "We won't encourage a product-certification system if the product is not critical," noted Tom Ridgway, a staff engineer in the Defense Product Standards Office. Critical products are defined as those affecting health or safety, those important enough from a functional standpoint to merit the designation and those it is economically necessary to procure.

Hispanics make vital contributions to American way of life

USAIC Equal Opportunity Office

Millions of Americans have their roots in Central and South America and the Caribbean Islands. These people, commonly referred to as Hispanic Americans, have grown in population dramatically over the past 20 years. In the 1970 census, Hispanic Americans accounted for 4.5 percent of the U.S. population and by 1980, 6.4 percent. Demographers predict that by the year 2020, Hispanic Americans will number over 47 million in the US and represent the nation's largest minority group.

All Hispanic Americans can trace their language, ancestry and customs back to Spain and to a lesser degree, Portugal. Spain was one of the earliest centers of human development and later became a center of culture, blending European and Arabic traditions.

Spain was not an industrial country in early times, but rather depended on exploration of unchartered lands for economic riches. This exploration ultimately led them to the Americas in the 15th century.

Spain was a leader in education and culture and the rich culture of Spain profoundly influenced and dominated the culture of the world for centuries.

In their zeal to spread Catholicism in the New World, the Spaniards established many missions in North, Central and South America, including several in what is now California, Arizona and New Mexico. Over the succeeding centuries the Spanish explorers and settlers assimilated the many Indian peoples into their culture. Many of these Indian tribes, such as the Mayas, Aztecs and Incas, were very highly developed themselves and the result was a Latin-American culture that was a blend of the Old World and the New World.

As the Hispanic American population has grown in this country, their economic and political influence has also grown. The top Hispanic-owned business in the U.S. accounted for $8.7 billion in total sales and over 65,000 employees in 1985.

Hispanic-American voter registration has increased at a faster pace than other ethnic groups in recent years and it is estimated that over 51-percent of eligible Hispanic Americans are registered to vote. At the present time, there are 14 Hispanic American members of Congress.

The Hispanic American culture is deeply rooted in the "melting pot" that is known as the United States of America.

said. The 598th soldiers do all of the major maintenance on the vehicles while minor gigs are repaired at the element's motor pools.

Kennet added that the 598th soldiers also handle all the loading of supplies and equipment and would set up and complete landline radio communications network if deployed. All the vehicle drivers are also from the 598th, according to Kennet.

"All of the soldiers involved in the RSE are hand-picked and considered to be the best at what they do," Kennet said.

"It's really a challenge to bring soldiers in from so many different units and have them work effectively together as a whole unit," he added, "but these soldiers are the top of the line and do a very professional job."

The soldiers are motivated, Kennet said, they are "ready, willing and able" to meet the demands of supporting the Rangers.

Sometimes even make off with the car. Also get cases where people actually break into cars to steal stuff they see inside that they want. Then there are the jerks who just don't care, want something to do, so they break tail lights or scratch up paint jobs."

"I don't get it," I said. "Aren't we all supposed to be one Army? Where's all that esprit and discipline I hear about?"

"Got me," Officer McGruff said.

"Well, there must be something we can do about it," I said, as we passed by the safety marquee which reminded us that school was in session and the kids were about.

"Maybe that's the answer," I said, pointing to the sign. "We could advertise the dangers of parking lots by using those signs. Stuff like, 'before you back/look around/or risk a whack.'"

"Your meter and syntax are as bad as those who put those signs up," he said. "Try this: 'Before engaging the rearward gear/check your tail/both far and near," he rhymed to me.

"I like it," I said, "maybe we could do a 'chrome on chrome/and metal-to-metal/parking lot wrecks/expensive to settle,'"

"Not bad for a newby," he said, "how about, 'Fancy car stereos/Sony, Sanyo Fisher /will get up and go, go , go/when your car's not secure.'"

"I think it's about time for me to go, go, go," I said, making sure he didn't let me out in the parking lot.

Five facts you should know about depression

1. Depression is not a character flaw. It is nothing to be ashamed of.
2. Depression is very common. As many as one in twelve of us suffer from depression right now.
3. Depression often is not treated because many of its victims don't complain. But they may have severe symptoms—both physical and psychological.
4. Modern treatment can help. There is no reason to suffer in silence.
5. With the help of millions of people like you, we're working for more and better treatment for depression and other forms of mental illness.

WARNING ... BEWARE OF DANNER FT. LEWIS BOOTS!*
*(when you purchase them at any other location except TNT)
MESSAGE
(1) The Danner Ft. Lewis boot is the most advanced military boot on the market. This high tech boot is not fitted like other boots. There are special considerations which must be taken into account.
(2) No other store (except TNT) has the expertise nor takes the extra care necessary to correctly fit you with the Ft. Lewis boot. Danner won't; the competition doesn't.
(3) Only TNT takes the time to give you detailed information on (a) how the boot works, (b) how to make it work for you and (c) how to protect your investment thru proper care & feeding.
(4) If you are truly interested in the Ft. Lewis boot, here's a simple test: Go to the competition, ask specific questions, then come to TNT & we'll tell you if their answers are correct.
(5) Believe this - there are definite reasons why TNT is the #1 retailer of the Danner Ft. Lewis Boot. Come find out why.
(6) It takes time to get correctly fitted (approx. 30 min.), so keep this in mind. When you get the correct fit, you'll swear by the Ft. Lewis Boot (when you get the wrong fit, you'll swear at the Ft. Lewis Boot.) Now whom do you trust? Them or Us?

Board meets in December

Army News Service

A board is scheduled to convene Dec. 2 to select Army officers for advanced management training, Military Personnel Center officials announced.

The Advanced Management Program gives colonels the chance to attend management courses with executives from government and private industry. Through daily contact with these other students, Army officers gain valuable experience to prepare them for management positions.

Civilian institutions design advanced management training courses to:

- Increase students capabilities for executive-level management.
- Expand their operational and planning techniques.
- Increase their ability to appraise economic, social, political and technological changes.
- Provide for exchange of expertise between senior executives of national and international industry and senior Army officers.

MILPERCEN is now accepting applications for advanced management training. An officer who wished to apply must have:

- At least 15, but not more than 26, years of active federal commissioned service before completing the course.
- At least one year of active service left after completing the course.
- A bachelor's degree or higher and be a graduate of a senior service college. The senior service college requirement can be waived of an officer meets the other criteria. Send requests for waivers to MILPERCEN (DAPC-OPB-D) at least 60 days before the selection board convenes Dec. 2.
- Demonstrated leadership and the ability to adapt to executive positions.
- Knowledge of command problems such as organization and administration.
- Staff experience.
- Proven potential for career development and intellectual growth.

Colonels who want to compete for advanced management training must send their requests for consideration to colonel's division, MILPERCEN, 200 Stovall St., Alexandria, Va. 22332-0400. Requests must include endorsements from the officer's commands, and must arrive by Nov. 2.

Officers selected for the training and made available by their commands, but who decline to attend, will not be eligible for further consideration. Officers selected, but not made available by their commands will be eligible for later consideration.

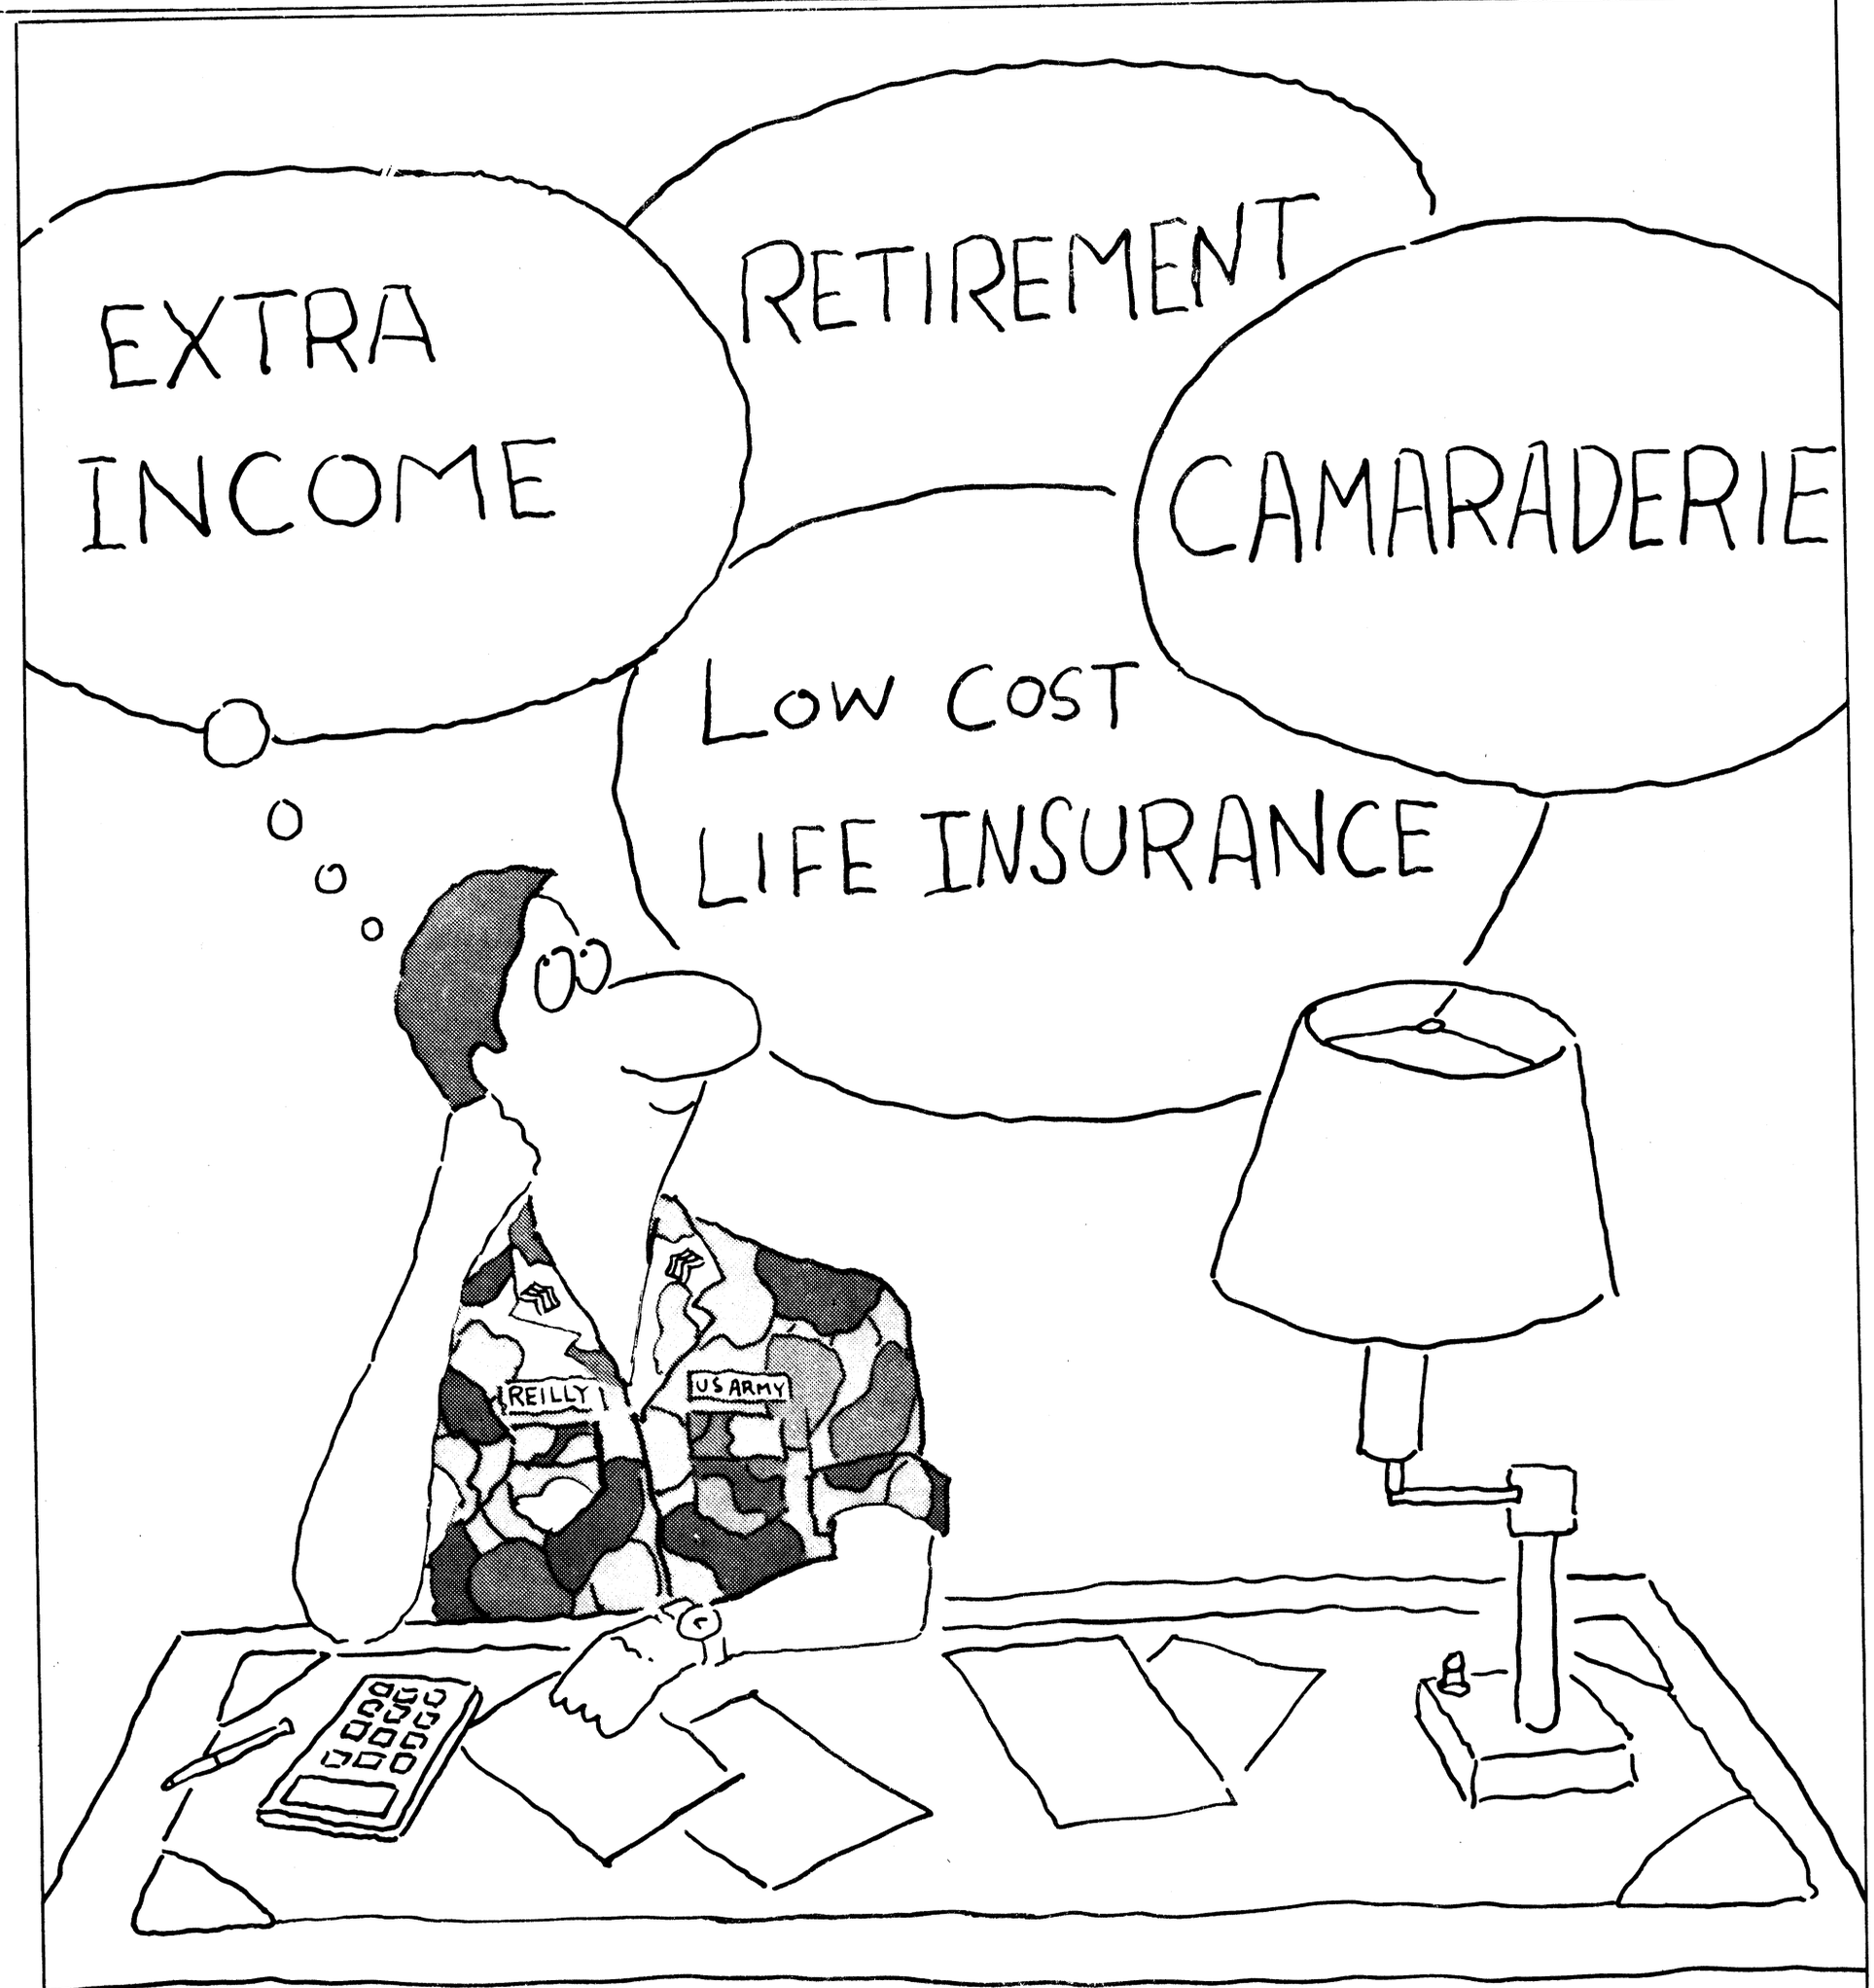
can be arranged upon request. For further information, please call the Kelley Hill Recreation Center Wednesday, Thursday or Friday at 544-3079.

Arts & Crafts — The arts and crafts staff welcomes you to the Fort Benning Milton E. Long Arts & Crafts Center and the Main Post Auto Shop. These fine facilities are fully-equipped and staffed by knowledgeable instructors. The facilities are available for use by active-duty, retired military, reserve personnel, their family members and authorized civilians working at Fort Benning. A lisiting of the many scheduled activities are printed monthly and are available at the Arts & Crafts facilities during operating hours. For additional information, please call 545-3677.

Music Lessons — The recreation centers offer piano lessons, beginning and intermediate, to people of all ages. Joleen Oney of the Acorn School of Music offers piano and vocal lessons for all ages. Joleen is a member of the National Guild of Piano Teachers and is qualified to teach preschool age children, as well.



Grandkids to grandparents can learn to play beautifully by taking one 30-minute lesson per week, not including practice time. Lessons are private and individually-paced. Practice pianos are available during reception centers operational hours. The cost is only $7 per lesson. To register, call 545-7400 or 327-3214 and leave your name and telephone number; the instructor will contact you to arrange a lesson schedule. Don't hesitate, call today!

Grandparents' Day Brunch — Sunday from 10 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. in the Supper Club. In commemoration of this special occasion, the regular price of brunch will be reduced by $1.50 for each grandparent that is a member of the club. Grandparents must be accompanied by their grandchildren to qualify for the additional discount. Reservations are required and may only be taken on the hour from 10 a.m. until 1:30 p.m. Due to the popularity of this event, reservations may only be held for 15 minutes beyond your scheduled arrival time.

Family Fitness Center — Saunas, whirlpools, Nautilus equipment, free weights, electronic treadmill, stationary bikes and an exercise room offering various levels of areobic classes are available daily. For more information, please call 687-0871.

NCO Club System Dinner Specials — Bring the family in for Schnitzel every Wednesday night from 6-9 p.m. at the Main NCO Club during the month of September. The price is $3.95 for adults and $2.50 for children under 12. Every Saturday night from 6-9 p.m. is steak night at the Main NCO Club. The cost for this special is $6.95 and includes a choice Del Monico steak, a vegetable, potato and trimmings.

Entertainment — Enjoy Top 40 music performed by a live band in the Golden Touch Lounge of the Main NCO Club. Performances are Tuesday and Thursday from 8-12 p.m., Wednesday and Sunday from 8 p.m. to 1 a.m. and 9 p.m. to 2 a.m. on Friday and Saturday nights. Latin American Disco is a very popular event and is available in the end of the hall lounge from 9 p.m. to 2 a.m. every Friday night at the Main NCO Club.

GETTING OUT? YOUR ARMY BENEFITS CAN BE MORE THAN MEMORIES.

It's probably hard to say what you'll miss most about the Army if you've decided to return to civilian life. For some, it's the camaraderie. Others miss the travel and excitement. Still more miss those money-saving Army benefits.

Joining the Army Reserve can help you retain many things you like about the Army. Most important, it will help you keep some of those great benefits. Like your PX and commissary privileges. Space-available air travel. And low-cost life insurance.

The extra income you'll earn will come in handy, too. Right now, an E-5 with four years active duty earns over $125 for a single Reserve weekend. Add two weeks annual training pay, and you've got over $2,000 a year. Plus, you'll continue to qualify for retirement pay.

For more information call SGM Claude Brown, MSG James M. Southern or SGM Curtis B. Haig Jr., at 545-4132, 544-4759 or 544-2062.

Housing office releases new eligibility dates

Post Housing Office

When applying for military family housing, each soldier is given an "eligibility date." The housing waiting list is then maintained and housing assigned in accordance with this date.

Normally, this eligibility date is the soldier's departure date from the previous, permanent duty station.

However, if a soldier is coming to Fort Benning from a "restricted tour," the eligibility date is backdated to the departure date from the " the eligibility dat is backdated to the departure date from the previous stateside permanent duty station -- up to a maximum of 14 months.

For example, if a soldier was sent to Korea after serving a tour at Fort Lewis, Wash., upon the soldier's return from Korea, the housing eligibility date would be backdated to the time the soldier left Fort Lewis, up to a maximum of 14 months.

If quarters become available and the soldier is unable to move because of a lease, TDY, sickness, etc., the original eligibility date will be maintained.

As of Sept. 8 the "eligibility date" of the last person to be assigned quarters in each category is as follows:

VA Q&A

Veterans Administration

Editor's Note: Following are representative questions answered daily by VA counselors. Full information is available at any VA office.

Q: I received a Certificate of Eligibility for a VA home loan guaranty several years ago, but never had the opportunity to use it. Have my benefits expired?

A: Loan guaranty entitlement is not subject to an expiration date.

Q: Can I get a release of liability if a non-veteran assumes my VA-guaranteed home loan?

A: Anyone may assume your loan. If the buyer meets with VA approval, you may be released from liability.

Q: May I use my VA home loan benefit to purchase a house for my son?

A: No. The home must be the principal residence of the veteran.

MARSHAL'S VIEWPOINT

By Ronald E. McCuistion
Provost Marshal's Office

It's back to school at Fort Benning. The time of year is upon us when compliance with speed limits are especially important. Speed limits in school zones are set up with the safety of the children in mind. Motorists should be aware of these school zones on post and obey the speed limit.

Most drivers obey the speed limits through the school zones, but for some, it's an inconvenience, and to them driving 15 miles per hour is just too slow. This person may be late for work or someone who does not believe that driving a few mph over the speed limit would hurt anything. "Does this sound familiar?" Well if it does, then how about considering these thoughts. First of all, like all children they seem to sometimes disregard safety, such as playing in the streets before morning classes begin or riding bicycles alongside the traffic.

At Fort Benning, the speed limit in school zones are clearly posted. Some areas have flashing yellow lights, while others have the speed posted and the time in which they are in effect.

"Remember," Georgia law requires motorists to stop while school buses load or discharge children. Also, traffic signals given by the school crossing guards require compliance. These instructions direct motorists to slow, stop, turn or continue. All crossing guards work under the guidance of the Military Police Activity.

All of us can help protect school children by obeying the rules of the road.

As a reminder from your Crime Prevention Office, "Be alert near our schools." If you witness unsafe or suspicious activity, report it immediately to 545-5222/5223.

Scout sign-up night gives youths chance to 'catch the spirit'

By Ann McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

Summer has ended and the school bells are ringing. To some kids that means the fun has ended, but not for long because the fall registration for local scout troops has begun.

Parents are being urged to let their children catch the scouting spirit. September 17 is "school night" a one night program conducted in every elementary school in the Central Georgia Council to enroll prospective Cub Scouts and Scouts and their parents into existing or new Cub Packs or Scout Troops.

The age old tradition of scouting for young girls and boys is still alive. But, a recent survey statistic shows that many people are not aware of what the scouts of today do.

A long-range communication program is being implemented by the Boy Scouts of America to alleviate that problem. The purpose in the program will be to enhance the participation in, understanding of and support for scouting.

According to a local scout spokesperson, their energies will be directed in three principal groups: the prospective scouts, persons involved in scouting, and patrons or supporters of the scouting program with the organization of the programs at district level.

Some general observations that have been made is that today's adult does not know what changes have come about since they were a child. To dispel this and other questions that have been raised, it has been recommended that scouts become more visible to answer those questions.

Some changes that may be seen this scouting year will be scouts at more events lending a helping hand, exhibits in malls to tell the public exactly what scouts do and boys in their uniform doing public services like helping the elderly or cleaning up litter in the streets.

For more information and to find out if your child's school is involved call the Chattahoochee Council at 327-2634.

'Take the lead' by joining Girl Scouts

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Local Girl Scout troops are going to kick off their season on Sept. 19 with open houses in several different areas.

Girls are urged to "Take the lead" with the Girl Scouts of today.

The open houses are as follows: Main Post, Girl Scout Hut, 10 a.m. - noon; Bouton Heights - Davis Hill, Round House Community Building on 1st Calvary Division Road; C.U.B., Gibson Drive, Girl Scout Hut, 10 a.m. - noon; McGraw Manor, Custer Road, Girl Scout Hut, 4 - 6 p.m.; and Indianhead Terrace has the "Saturday madness " in their Girl Scout Hut behind Wilson School from 2 - 4 p.m. For more information call Judy Purkett, the Service Unit Director at 682-1111 or 545-4632.

Father of the Constitution finally in the spot light

By David M. Maxfield
Smithsonian News Service

For a founding father, James Madison's public profile has never quite measured up to his monumental achievements. For years, the fourth president has been overshadowed by fond memories of his vivacious wife, Dolley, and by the towering esteem held for his Virginia neighbor, Thomas Jefferson.

But this year, as the bicentennial of the United States Constitution is celebrated from coast to coast, Madison is the man in the news. It was his keen intellect and steely determination, after all, that accomplished miracles in Philadelphia that hot and historic summer of 1787. At last, the nation seems to be getting acquainted with the "Father of the Constitution," a man who had the vision and political skills to forge a system of government that had never existed before.

Madison's low 20th-century profile seems traceable to his quiet reserve as well as to the mistaken belief revealed in one recent national poll that it was an enterprising Jefferson who engineered the Constitutional Convention. Jefferson, in fact, was in Paris on diplomatic business that summer.

By today's media standards, Madison "was not what we would call a charismatic leader," observes A.E. Dick Howard, a University of Virginia law professor and chairman of a recent Smithsonian Institute symposium called "Constitutional Roots, Rights and Responsibilities." Only five feet six inches tall, Madison had none of the presence and prowess of George Washington, his prose lacked the bite of Thomas Paine's pamphlets, and in an age when Patrick Henry turned public speaking into a political asset, Madison's voice was weak and faltering.

At a low point after college, the young Virginian was at loose ends, uncertain about a career (law seemed "too coarse and dry") and during one period was so overtaken by a nervous disorder that he confided that he did not "expect a long or healthy life." Then he discovered religion — the issue of religious liberty, a lifelong crusade, it became a pillar of the Bill of Rights.

Anglican persecutions of Baptists and other dissenters truly distressed Madison, Howard explains. The issue began to draw the young Madison out of his own despondency into public life. By 1787, the 36-year old's dominating spirit at Philadelphia would move Georgia delegate William Pierce to record: "Every person seems to acknowledge his greatness. He blends together the profound politician, with the Scholar."

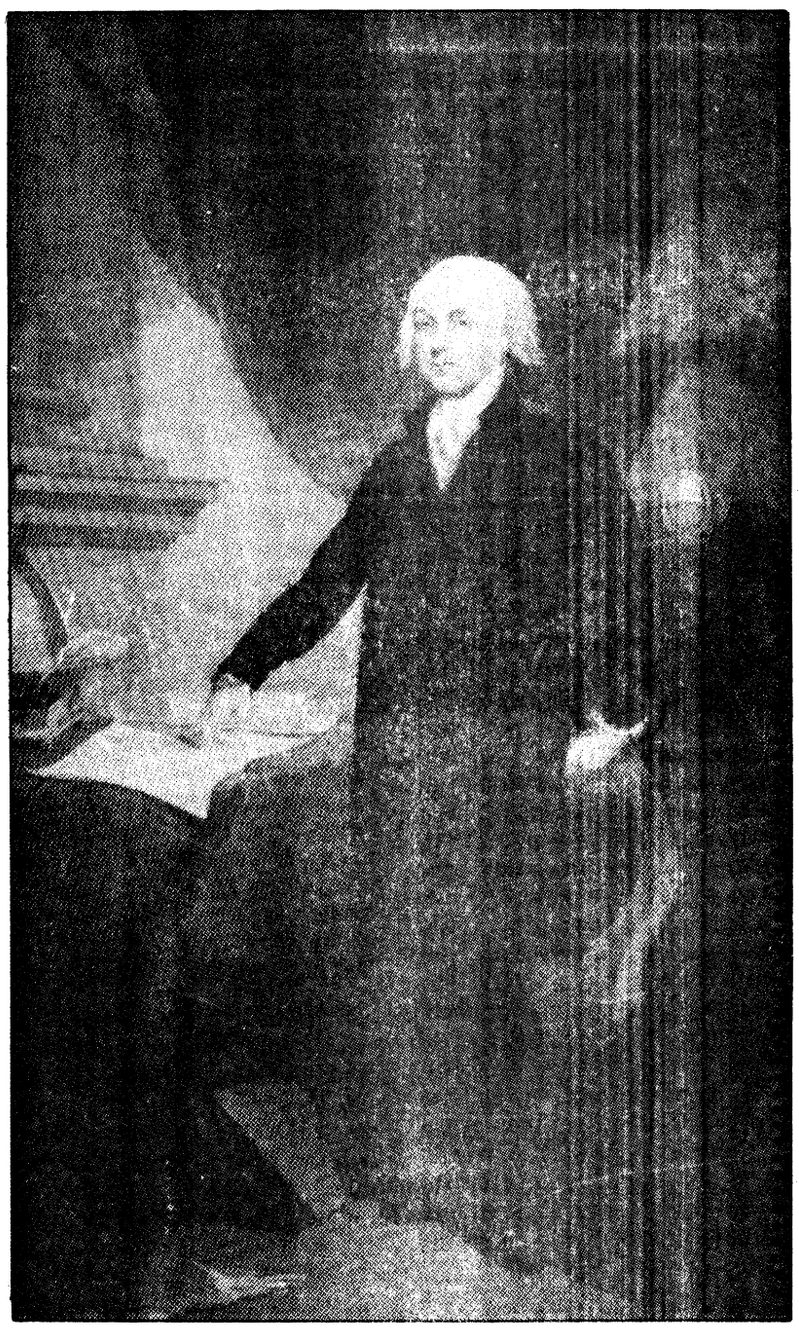
Madison always did his homework. He arrived in the City of Brotherly Love, then the nation's largest town with 45,000 people, fully prepared to confront the economic and political havoc that threatened to tear apart the fragile nation that had arisen tattered, but proud, from the Revolutionary War.

The nation had become so divided that Jefferson feared "the states will go to war with each other in defiance of Congress; one will call in France to her assistance; another Great Britain, and so we shall have all the wars of Europe brought to our own doors." Already, New York was taxing domestic ships passing its Sandy Hook lighthouse.

At his family home, Montpelier, near Charlottesville, Va., Madison had devoured the 200 or so books sent by Jefferson from Paris — political theory, economics, European and ancient history; authors such as Plutarch, Montesquieu, Locke, Hobbes. Madison understood that history could yield generalizations about human nature and suggest guidelines for governing. He concluded that if the states did not set up a strong central government, disaster would overtake them all.

Trade was the trouble. With states treating each other like foreign powers, rivalries for market shares of goods and agriculture had grown intense, but the insipid Articles of Confederation of 1777 provided no regulatory solutions. Moreover, everyone had their eyes on a new frontier, the West. Among them, Madison dreamed that much of this trade would pass through Virginia down the James or the Potomac rivers.

Madison believed the major problem lay with the state legislatures — not the people of the states. When it suited them, the states simply ignored the resolutions of the Continental Congress, refused to pay their share of expenses or to send delegates. Sometimes weeks would go by with no decisions from Congress because it lacked a quorum. Inflated paper money issued by the states was wrecking public confidence in government, notes author William Peters in A More Perfect Union.



Men like fellow Virginian Patrick Henry had become thorns in Madison's side. Opposing a centralized government, Henry argued that since Americans had just fought a war against a distant and powerful ruler, it made no sense to give up the new experiment with local rule for "something so new it wants a name," as he put it. Henry refused to travel to Philadelphia, sniffing, "I smelt a rat."

While the delegates gathered, Madison worked out the details of his Virginia Plan whose essentials — a strong national government, three branches of power and the separation of authority — would survive heated summer debates over the states' place in the proposals. Key to Madison's thinking was the idea that "you must first enable the government to control the governed; and in the next place oblige it to control itself."

As the eloquent Virginia Gov. Edmund Randolph presented the plan, Madison recorded the proceedings, an unofficial task he thought necessary considering the lack of details about earlier republics. "It happened...that I was not absent a single day nor more than a casual fraction of an hour in any day, so that I could not have lost a single speech, unless a very short one," he later wrote.

After a month of inconclusive deliberations, Dr. Benjamin Franklin, aching with gout, expressed an impatience with the proceedings. Noting the lack Answer 10: (A)True. (B) False.

Answers and Survey Results
To Question 1: (A). Seven in 10 Americans (71-percent) correctly state that under the U.S. Constitution only a person born in the United States can be elected the country's president.

To Question 2: (B). Two-thirds (67-percent) know that the popular election does not automatically determine which candidate assumes the nation's highest office.

To Question 3: (A). Only 21-percent know that states can require citizens to take literacy tests before they may become registered voters.

To Question 4: (B). A majority of the public (62-percent) knows the president cannot send aid to a friendly country on his own authority.

To Question 5: (B). "Miranda Vs. Arizona" dealt with the rights of the criminally accused, and 45-percent of those polled knew it.

To Question 6: (B). Three quarters (75-percent) of the American public are under the misconception that the Constitution guarantees every citizen the right to a free public education.

To Question 7: (B). Eighty-five percent of the American public wrongly believes that any important court case can be appealed from the state courts to the U.S. Supreme Court.

To Question 8: (E). Nine out of 10 (or 92-percent) of Americans are aware that in a criminal trial they must be provided with a lawyer if they cannot afford to pay for one. Five out of six (83-percent) know they must be provided with a trial by jury. A similar number (81-percent) are aware that their spouses cannot be forced to testify against them. Seven in 10 (69-percent) know they cannot be tried a second time for a crime for which they were found innocent.

To Question 9: (A). Fifty-five percent of Americans know that convicted felons are denied the right to vote.

To Question 10: (B). Forty-six percent of the public incorrectly says that a state can give money to religious schools, provided it gives it to all religious schools equally.

Post schools celebrate citizenship

Students learn about freedom in a democracy

By Beth Middlemiss
Fort Benning Schools

Have you ever heard a second-grader discussing the meaning of "domestic tranquility" and "justice?" Vicki Rogers, Fort Benning's Language Arts and Social Studies coordinator did when she visited Dot Jones' second grade classroom at Loyd School last week.

Jones and her fellow Fort Benning teachers are preparing their students for "A Celebration of Citizenship" that will occur nationwide Wednesday.

All eight Fort Benning's schools will participate at 1 p.m., as President Ronald Reagan leads the nation in saying the Pledge of Allegiance and retired Chief Justice Warren Berger leads the reading of the preamble to the Constitution.

"Each of our schools is celebrating the day in its own special way," Rogers said. "The 16th of September is the formal beginning of year-long activities that will focus on citizenship and the 200th birthday of the Constitution."

Patch School's kindergarten and first grade students will celebrate with a parade around their school, a red, white and blue balloon launch and a birthday party with a patriotic cake holding 200 candles.

Decorated bicycles and dressed up students will also parade at Dexter School to patriotic music, and patriotic music will be featured at a special assembly at White School.

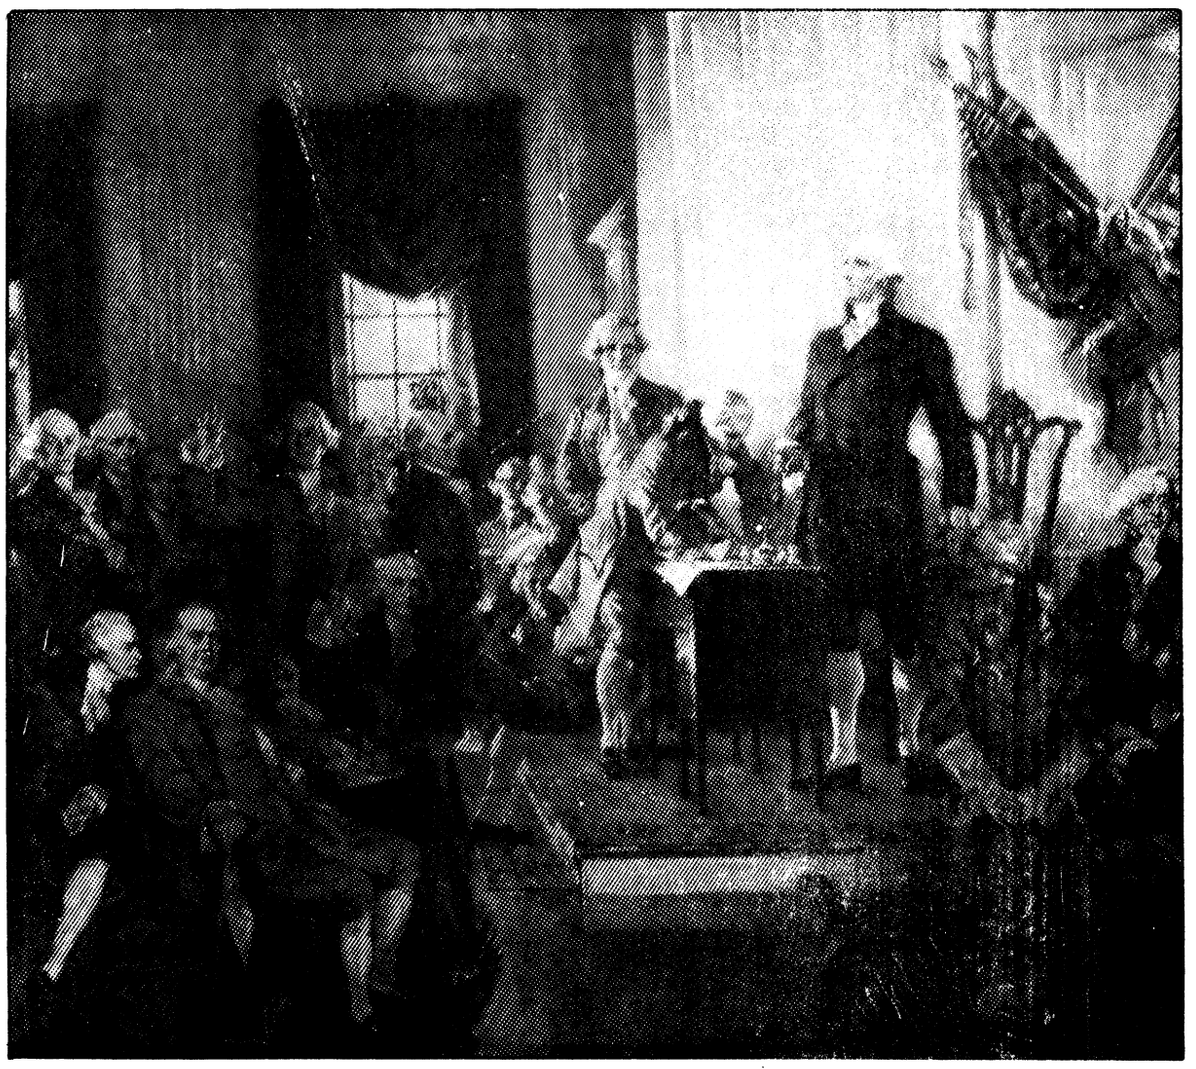
McBride students will be wearing red ribbons wishing the Constitution a Happy Birthday and students have planned what they call "The All-American Lunch," — hamburgers, potato chips and apple pie.

Students at Wilson School will celebrate with a special ceremony at the flag pole.

Red, white and blue will be the colors of the day in all Fort Benning schools Wednesday, as students and teachers participate in this "teach-in" on the Constitution and the rights and responsibilities of citizenship.

With young students, the emphasis is on learning the Pledge of Allegiance — what it is and why we say it. The ideas become more complex with age and grade level, so that the more advanced students at Faith will be working with JAG office representatives to examine legislation and to learn how interpretation of the Constitution affects their daily lives.

Since Wednesday marks the beginning of the celebration, some of the schools wish to extend invitations to parents and friends to join them in their activities. Other schools will issue an invitation for activities at a later date.



"We are excited about this Celebration of Citizenship," Rogers said, "and we encourage our parents to watch the 1 p.m. telecast and discuss its significance with their children."

Parents and friends are invited to attend the following Fort Benning School activities Wednesday:

Dexter School/Patriotic Bicycle Parade/9:30 a.m.

Patch School/Patriotic Balloon Parade/12 noon

White School/Musical Program YAC Gym/12:30 p.m.

The signing ot the Constitution on Sept. 17, 1787, is depicted in a 1940 Howard Chandler painting located in the U.S. Capitol.

Bicentennial essay contest winners announced

USAIC Public Affairs Office

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following are the top three winners in the Bicentennial essay contest sponsored by the Fort Benning Public Affairs Office and the Chattahhochee Valley-Fort Benning Chapter of the Association of the U.S. Army. The theme of the essay was "What does the Constitution Mean to You."

The first place winner, Sharon E. Wade of TraineeMILPO, will receive a $500 U.S. savings bond, second place winner, Capt. Christopher Wisdom of HHC, 197th Spt Bn, will receive a $200 bond and the third place winner, James B. Leahy, Jr. of Tactics Division, CATD, will receive a $100 bond.

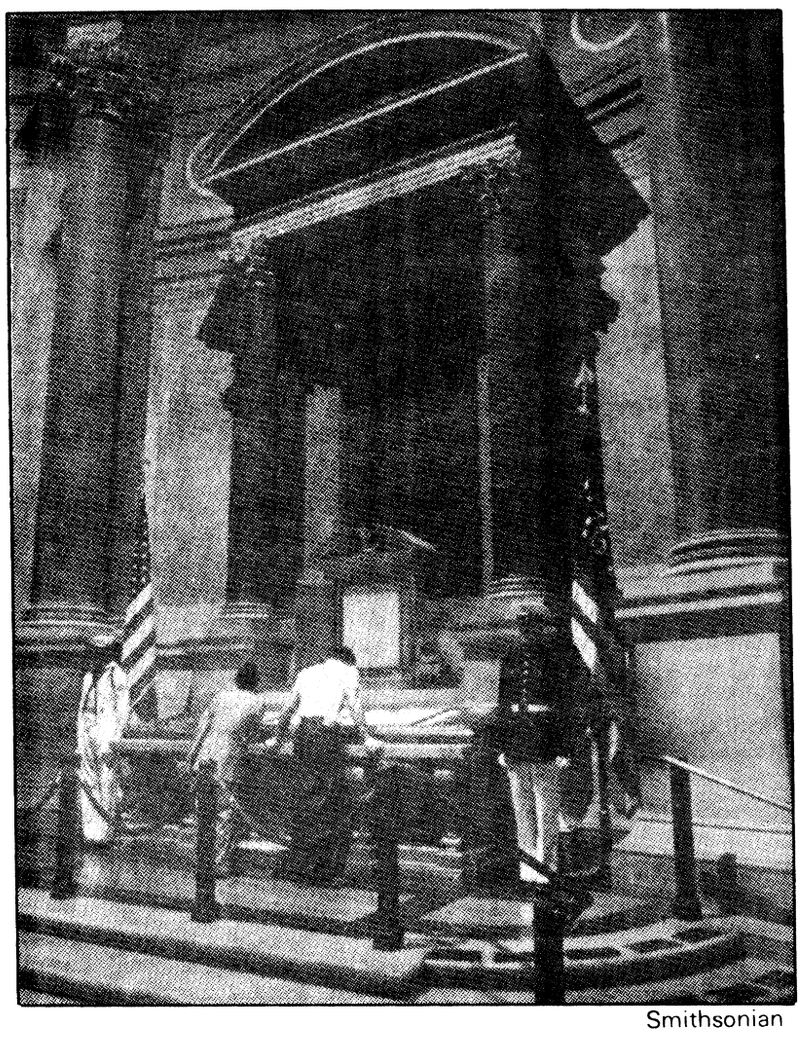
While watching television one afternoon, I viewed a courtroom drama that spoke of the Bicentennial of the United States Constitution. The question that came to my mind was, "What do I know about the Constitution?" The answer was, "Not much." So, I went on a quest of knowledge and what I discovered was and is profound.

This document is, in essence, a very intricate road map which is the underlying foundation of this country. My whole existence as an American citizen is governed by this document. I felt ashamed at not knowing more about it. There are aspects of my life as a citizen that I am adamant about. The major aspect being my right to life as I deem suitable for me. I am literally free and I'm afraid that some people take this freedom for granted.



I am free to practice my religious preference without fear of reprisal from the government. Government agents cannot forcibly enter my home without probable cause. I can't be thrown in jail at the whim of a government official and if any charges are brought against me, I have the right to a trial by a jury of my peers. There are countries where people go to jail when they haven't committed a crime, and virutally stay there forever without the right to a fair trial. I grieve for Nelson Mandela of South Africa, a man who has been imprisoned for more than 20 years because of his political views. As an American citizen, I am protected against this ever happening to me by the Constitution. It is a safe and secure existence that I enjoy as a result of this document.

I sat down with a copy of the Constitution and reviewed my rights. I felt very honored. My ancestors were slaves, but the Constitution protects me from being held against my wishes. I can speak freely and write freely without fear of retaliation from the government of this country. People from such countries as Russia and Poland know nothing of this privilege.

One of my most cherished rights is the right to vote. There was a time, when, because of my race and sex, I would have been denied the right to vote. The Constitution says that this right cannot be denied or abridged by the United States or by any state on account of race, color, previous condition of servitude or sex.

I am appalled that there are American citizens who have reached the age of 18 and have never registered to vote. I've heard people say that their one vote could not possibly make a difference. I realize that there are people who have given their lives so that Black people in this country could legally vote and have a say as to the way this country is run. I would never deface their memory by taking this right casually or ignoring it.

I am truly proud to be a citizen of this country. It means the world to me to be able to go about living my life and know that the government is there to protect me and allow me to do so. I ache for people in countries where these rights and privileges are not allowed and I thank my forefathers for creating this document with my best interests in mind.

The Constitution of the Unitied States is on view at the National Archives in Washington, D.C..

By Christopher Wisdom
Second Place

To me, the Constitution means that I have civic responsibilities as well as civil rights. If I neglect my duties as a soldier or as a citizen, my freedom will be abused, unused or confused.

I believe that liberty without law is an abuse of freedom. True liberty includes my responsibility to support the Constitution. My freedom is protected in America by the law. The writers of our Constitution knew that it was not enough to break with unjust rulers. They knew they must begin a new order based on just laws. They did not believe that enduring freedom could be built upon the whims of human nature.

Secondly, my freedom remains unused if I don't defend the constitutional rights of my fellow citizens. I must protect the civil liberties of others, as well as my own. During World War II, the Nazis were eliminating certain groups of people. Others knew about it, but most of them did nothing; soon no one there was free. I have to use my liberty to defend my neighbor's rights, so that I don't lose them.

Finally, as an Army chaplain, I uphold the Constitution by providing the opportunity for the "free exercise of religion." I dare not confuse the separation of church and state with the banishment of religion from civilian or military life. To do so would obscure the religious freedom guaranteed in the First Amendment.

Our nation historically has acknowledged God as the source of our freedom in our Declaration of Independence, Bill of Rights and the Pledge of Allegiance. We even stamp "In God We Trust" on our currency. I believe that if we, as U.S. citizens, wish to remain "indivisible, with liberty and justice for all," then we first must be "one nation, under God."

This, then, is what the Constitution means to me: that I must not abuse my freedom by selfish abandon, leave it unused through careless apathy, or confuse it with intolerance of others. Rather, I must uphold the Constitution by fulfilling my civic and Army responsibilities as well as defending my rights as a citizen.

By James B. Leahy Jr.

To me, our Constitution and its 26 amendments are reminders both of how far our nation has progressed in its relatively yourthful life and how important the role of our Army is in its preservation of the many unique freedoms we Americans enjoy.

In arguing for adoption of the proposed Constitution, Alexander Hamilton wrote in the first Federalist essay that the people of the United States had the opportunity to decide for themselves "whether societies of men are really capable or not of establishing good government from reflection and choice, or whether they are forever destined to depend for their political constitutions on accident and force." While the years since have not been without internal difficulty, by-and-large, we have shown ourselves to be capable of the former process.

The bickering and squabbling of today's politics were present even in 1787. No sooner was the basic Constitution finished than the Antifederalists insisted on amending it with a series of 10 articles collectively known as the Bill of Rights. It is fascinating to see that even today, precisely what some of these amendments mean is still being determined by our courts. Nonetheless, they form the very bedrock of our personal and political security.

Other amendments mark our social course: the abolition of slavery (the 13th, 1865), the guarantees of due process and equal protection of the laws (the 14th, 1868), the proscription of poll taxes designed to restrict access to our political process (the 24th, 1964), even our experiment with the prohibition of alcohol (the 18th, 1918), which was repealed 15 years later.

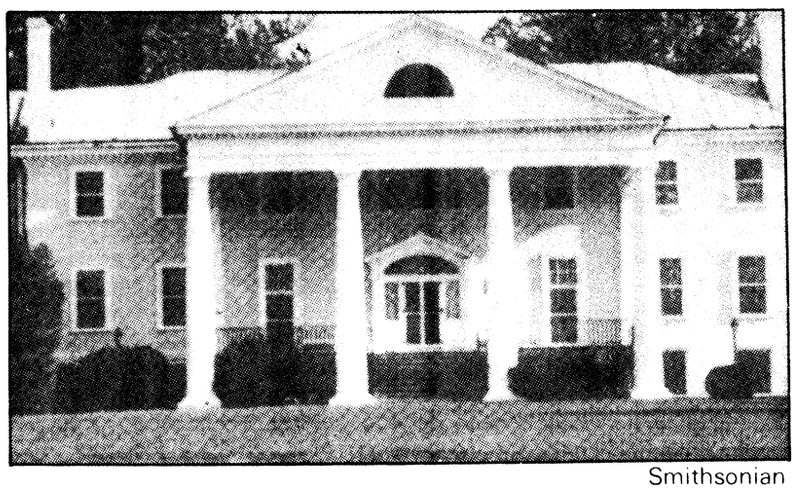
Soldiers played a special part in the formation of the Constitution — over half the signers were veterans of the Revolutionary War. While there have been several prominent soldier-statesmen in more recent times such as Marshall and Eisenhower, the military role since the creation of the Constitution has been primarily one of protection. I think it is well to remember that not a generation has passed that hasn't seen armed conflict, ranging from internal bloodletting that nearly rent the fabric of our republic to global upheaval.

Even the most casual study of history will show that there is little reason to believe that the years ahead, while laden with opportunity, will be any less perilous for a way of life that emphasizes individual freedom at the expense of state control. At Gettysburg, on the 19th of November, 1863, President Lincoln declared that, "government of the people, by the people, for the people, shall not perish from the earth."

Lincoln's promise, based on the fundamental ideas of our Constitution of 200 years ago, is kept today by our Army and the rest of our armed forces. Few would argue that neither our Constitution nor our way of life is perfect, but, to me, that special document provides both a remarkable chart of our past, and a reliable beacon upon which to guide for our future.

Montpelier on display

By David M. Maxfield
Smithsonian News Service



James Madison, the "Father of the Constitution," was considered the most underrated af all presidents by President Kennedy. The low profile seems likely to change in this anniversary year of the great document and because of the vision of the National Trust for Historic Preservation. In 1984, it acquired Montpelier, the 2700-acre Virginia estate that James and wife, Dolley, called home.

The house and expansive grounds are now open to the public daily from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. From Washington, D.C., Montpelier can be reached in about two hours by taking I-95 to Fredericksburg and then scenic routes 3 and 20 through Orange, Va. to Montpelier Station.

From the portico of the formal, Palladian-style home, visitors will be surrounded by the property's vast lawns, gardens, field crops, acres of woodland, steeple chase, race course — and beyond all of this, the rolling foothills of the Blud Ridge Mountains.

"Dolley kept a telescope on the front porch to view the mountains and wildlife," descendent Kay Myers says. "She checked it every evening and if someone was coming up the road, she'd set an extra plate for dinner."

Montpelier one day should have it all — a center for the study of historic preservation, the making of the Constitution and the life of President of Madison.

Madison

of governmental role models, both classical and European, Franklin asked why "we have not hitherto once thought of humbly applying to the Father of Lights to illuminate our understandings?"

Franklin, said Smithsonian symposium participant Judith N. Shklar, a Harvard professor of government, "put his finger on the difficulty that the Framers confronted: that there were no precedents...to guide them in their utterly novel enterprise. It would all have to be their own invention."

In the end, the Founding Fathers worked out a solution that enlisted the support of ordinary voters against entrenched politicians like Henry, points out historian Joyce Appleby of the University of Southern California, Los Angeles. "Their constitutional plan limited the power of citizens acting through representatives in their legislatures, but it guaranteed their rights as individuals pursuing their own interests."

The conflict over state powers flared early during the convention on May 31, when it was proposed that members of the House be elected by the people rather than by the state legislatures. Roger Sherman of Connecticut coolly asserted, "The people should have as little to do as may be about the government. They lack information and are constantly liable to be misled."

Madison then rose. "I consider the popular election of one branch of the national legislature as essential to every plan of a free government," he began. "I think, too, that the great fabric to be raised will be more stable and durable if it rests on the solid foundation of the people themselves..."

Madison and his allies, however, were not to prevail when the small states insisted on equal, rather than proportional, representation in the Senate, and his plan for a council that could veto state laws was defeated. But by late August, the convention turned to specific restrictions on the states — they were forbidden to make treaties, coin money and tax imports or exports without consent of Congress, for example. Madison, in effect, had won his point: The states would not act as sovereign powers.

In its final form, the Constitution ignored or skirted a number of highly controversial issues. One provision allowed slaves to be imported until 1808, but euphemistically referred to them as "such persons" so as to make the Constitution, in the words of one delegate, "as palatable as possible." Madison recognized these shortcomings. Putting such a provision in the Constitution, he warned, will be "dishonorable to the national character."

Since its ratification in 1788, the document has been praised, cursed, amended and repeatedly interpreted. Madison's words might serve as a guide in the continuing debate over the Constitution's role in resolving contemporary issues. The statesman asked Americans to judge the document on the basis, not of "custom" or "blind veneration of antiquity," but rather of "their own good sense, the knowledge of their own situation and the lessons of their own experience."

SPIRITUAL

Constitutional Freedom, Liberty worth fighting for

By Chaplain (Maj.) Leverett
2nd Brigade Chaplain

The last person slipped into our tiny living area from the night as we were about to begin worship services under the cover of darkness.

Ever since the Yellow Party seized power in our country years ago freedoms and liberties were lost, that frankly our ancestors must have taken for granted in the old republic.

Once in power, the Yellow Revolutionary Party outlawed public and private worship, making it a crime against the state, and they took control of all religious buildings and property for Party usage.

My grandfather told me stories he heard as a kid of how the old republic began to collapse when members of the Green Party of Bervania began convincing young people in the republic that there was really nothing at all worth fighting for, much less anything worth dying for.

"Those people," said my grandfather, "believed this propoganda, and they refused to take a stand on any issue. The only thing those folks could say was, 'leave us alone, don't bother us.'"

The Yellows focused on those values of personal peace at all cost in our country. "When the Yellows had complete control of this country," continued my grandfather, "they suspended just law until they could produce their own so-called legal code which is no law at all."

Worship gatherings were risky. The chance of being caught and imprisoned was a chance we were willing to take and besides, it gave us an opportunity to exchange information about the eventual overthrow of the Yellows.

The Law Committee chairman, one of the key leaders of the Underground Against the Yellows (UAY) was a regular attendee at our worhship services, and he kept us informed on the plans and activities of the UAY. As his custom was, he briefed us before the worship service began.

"There is now sufficient reason to believe the Yellows can and will be overthrown. The large and organized network of UAY resistance now has a plan, the resources and the audacity to overthrow the Yellows. I have been involved with some of the planning," he continued, "but my central responsibility is to reinstate just law once the noose of the Yellows is removed from our necks. The Law Committee has unanimously approved the use of the Constitution document as a basis for law in our new republic.

The document called the Constitution," he reminded us, "was found about two years ago in a barn on a collective farm. The document was hidden in an old Bible, and perhaps, by the grace of God Almighty, missed being burned during the information purge by the Yellows."

"When the Commissar of Information and Facts placed party books and party members in the schools and universities, our ancestors and we, ourselves, were bombarded with the Party Line. But gradually," he said, "we have been able to put together bits and pieces of information about our true history. Discovery of this Constitution has filled many gaps that we were lacking, and now our picture of the old republic is more complete."

The Constitution's references to rights and freedoms, to the establishment of justice, to domestic tranquility, and to the blessings of liberty have been a significant motivating factor to overthrow the Yellows, and to restore the liberties our ancestors once enjoyed.

"Our plan," said the UAY leader, "is to have parts of the Constitution printed and distrib-

There will be a meeting of all CCD volunteers (teachers, teacher's aides, substitites and music and art resource persons) Sept. 15 at the Religious Education Center at 7 p.m.

A resource person from Silver Burdette will be available to explain this year's program and answer all questions. Books and supplies will be distributed and all loose ends will be tied up before the beginning of the new CCD year. It is very important that all volunteers attend this meeting.

Sunday, Sept. 13, all Fort Benning chapels will include special activities within each worship service as part of the celebration of the 200th anniversary of the signing of the U.S. Constitution. Each chapel will also distribute the 42-page booklet "The Constitution of the United States."

On Thursday, Sept. 17, the Infantry Center (TIC) Chapel, Sightseeing Road Chapel, the School Brigade Chapel and the first Infantry Training Brigade Chapel will join in "Bells Across America — A Ringing Tribute to the Constitution." Bells will be ringing for 200 seconds in honor of the 200th anniversary.

VOLUNTEERS

By Claudia McCullough
Installation Volunteer Office

Without dedicated, hard-working volunteers, programs offered by various agencies in support of the soldiers and their families would not survive. These volunteers are composed of concerned and caring people from all walks of life, including parents, professionals, retirees, active-duty soldiers and others. Volunteers range from a wide variety of educational levels, to include those with Bachelor's and Master's degrees. The reasons for which these individuals volunteer are as varied as the people themselves. The Installation Volunteer Coordinator (IVC) for Fort Benning, Maggie Siegfried, noted, "We don't known why they do what they do, but we're very glad they do it."

Volunteers work in many areas, including: The Thrift Shop, schools, Red Cross, ACS, retiree services, religious education, the Volunteer Resource Center, scouting, Santa's Castle, NCOWC, OWC, MEDDAC/DENTAC, National Infantry Museum, International Wives, Community Life Program, vet clinic, hospital, dental, libraries and youth activities. Volunteers also aid the families of unit members by becoming chaffeurs, mentors, coordinators of family support groups and much more.

You can gain job experience, develop new skills and sharpen current ones while taking advantage of free childcare. The good works of the volunteer have finally reached the level of recognition it deserves. Many areas of business, including the federal government, accepts voluntary service to the community as job experience. Documentation of your experience with the Volun-

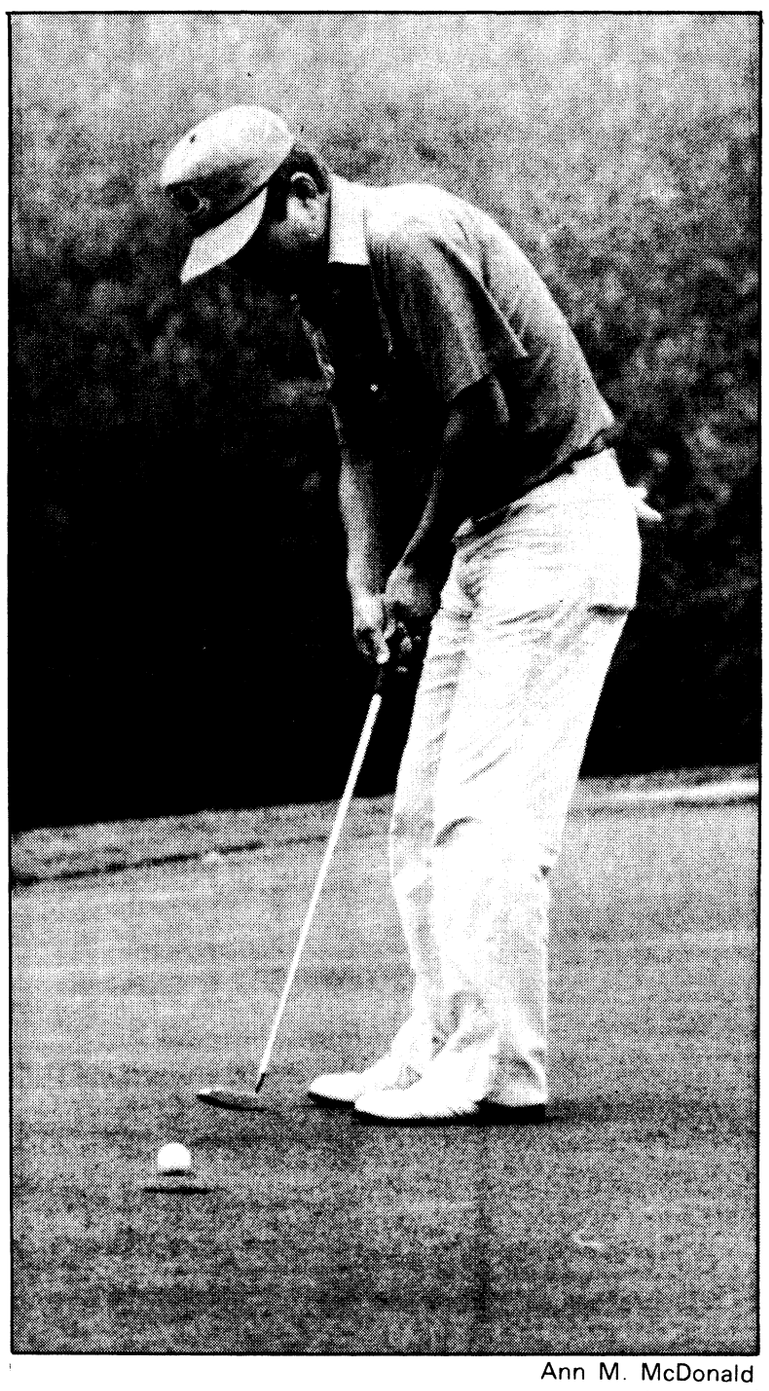
Wright wins golf tourney

USAIC Public Affairs Office

A local college student came out on top last weekend in The Fort Benning Golf Course Club Championships.



Tony Wright edged out Wesley Brown with a par on the 11th hole in playoff action during the tournament.

According to Bill Webb a course spokesman the whole tournament was close with 8 playoffs conducted during tournament play.

Trophies were awarded to the winner in each category along with a gift certificate. Players who placed second and third in each category were also given certificates.

The first place winners in each category are:

•Champion A	Tony Wright
•Champion B	Bill Thomas
•First Flight	Dan Fare
•Second Flight	Dale Meredith
•Third Flight	Don Henderson
•Fourth Flight	Richard Parker
•Fifth Flight	Lou Marcotte
•Sixth Flight	Song Hong
•Seventh Flight	Harry Iknar
•Eighth Flight	Alan Dye
•Ninth Flight	Delmar Williams

Ann M. McDonald

Song Hong, winner of the sixth Flight, gets ready to sink another putt.

Final qualifying for D.C. run

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Saturday is the final 10-mile qualifying run here preparing for the third annual "Army Ten-Miler" (Run The River Bridges) to be held in Washington, D.C. Oct. 11.

The run will begin in front of Santiago Gym at Sand Hill at 7 a.m.

Lloyd McDonald of HHC 2nd Bde still holds the fastest time with 51:20:18 followed by Dan Sullivan of HHC 2/14 with a time of 54:06:89. Nambaye Y. Dasnan of 24th Co TSB, with 55:22:12 is third. Accides Colon from A Co 3/7, with 56:51:69 holds fourth and Abdula Bartuia, 24th Co TSB stands at fifth with a time of 58:29:00. Rounding out the top six, Mark Crawson of HHC 10th Mount has a time of 58:35:85.

Jim Cunningham who ran a 58:36:57 and John McBurney who finished with a 59:13:65 fell from the top six. However, the 7th through 12th place finishers will be placed on an alternate list in case the top finishers are unable to travel to D.C..

These times give you some idea of what you'll have to beat to make the team heading for D.C.

The Sports Office is sponsoring the three ten-mile runs. The top six runners will be selected to represent Benning in Washington.

Runners having the best time in any one race or an average of any two or three will have the opportunity of joining the team.

Entering the Benning races is free and the Community Recreations Division will provide for transportation, lodging and entree fees for the 6-man team that will travel to Washington.

For more information and registration forms, go by the Fort Benning Sports Office in building 394 (Doughboy Stadium) or call 545-2332/7519.

Hank Aaron: Is the ball juiced?

By Hank Aaron
Vice President Atlanta Braves

There's been alot of speculation about why there has been a big increase in home runs this season. Some people are even speculating that the ball has been juiced up or made more lively.

Players like Mike Schmidt, Dale Murphy and Darryl Strawberry are going to hit homeruns regardless of whether the ball is juiced up or not. What bothers most people is to see unproven hitters, guys who've never hit more than five or six homeruns, suddenly start booming them into the blue seats.

The player grapevine has it that the ball is smaller, which would make it travel a lot farther.

Whether the ball has been changed or not, I don't know. But I do have some thoughts on why more home runs are being hit. I don't think we have the really good pitching we had a few years ago.

First of all, young pitchers come up from high school and college afraid to throw on the inside of the plate. The game is different at that level. For example, aluminum bats can be used by hitters. A young pitcher in college makes a good pitch on the inside and a hitter using an aluminum bat can muscle it enough to get it out of the ball park. The pitcher gets a little scared, a little skeptical and he stops throwing inside. Everything ends up over the plate or on the outside where the good hitters can extend their arms and hit it out.

Another major reason for the increased home runs is that we have more trick or junk pitches these days. Every pitcher wants to learn how to throw a split-finger fastball, a palm ball, a knuckleball or a fork ball. But if you put 10 guys on the mound and tell them to throw three good palm balls or fork balls for strikes, I guarantee you they can't do it.

Relying on trick pitches is dangerous in any other way. It's like driving an automobile in the city for three or four years where you average 20 miles an hour. When you take that same automobile out on the open highway, it's not going to perform very well. It's the same way with a pitcher. He will be in a tight ball game and want to throw a real live, good fastball, but his arm just will not respond. It's too used to throwing little palm balls and other junk pitches.

SPORTS SHORTS

YA Rifle club offers course

The Fort Benning Youth Activities Junior Rifle Club is looking for new members. All new members must first complete the six week basic markksmanship course that the club runs, starting on Sept. 15 at 5 p.m.. Weapons and ammunition will be provided. The cost of the course is $30. uted through our security network to all the underground leaders, and to all the religious leaders."

"We area asking the underground pastors to read portions of the document to their worship communities on Sept. 13. On that same day a force from the UAY Commando Unit will raid the Yellow broadcasting station at Green Mountain, take control of the station and read from the Constitution over the air."

"The reading will be a signal to the other UY units that the overthrow had begun." He concluded his update to us by asking for continued prayers for the successful overthrow of the Yellows, and for the successful implementation of just law based on the Constitution.

I moved to the front of the room to begin the worship for the night knowing that history was going to be changed in only a few weeks. I said to the worshipers, "the idea that 'nothing is worth fighting for, much less dying for,' must never be valued again. Living under tyranny has taught us this very tough lesson. Let us pray that we will never take our freedom for granted, and let us offer prayers for the successful implementation of just law based on the Constitution."

"We must pray," I said, "for the UAY because many lives will surely be lost." And I concluded by thanking God that in the near future we might be able to worship any time, and any place, freely.

We, the people of the United States, in order to form a more perfect Union, establish justice, insure domestic tranquility, provide for the common defense, promote the general welfare and the secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity, do ordain and establish this Constitution for the United States of America.

The Constitution of America: "Don't Take it for Granted."

These guys want you to stop wasting your tax dollars.

Yet every single year, over one billion in tax dollars goes up in smoke. That's what it costs to protect our nation's resources and fight wildfires.

So, think of these famous faces next time you're in the great outdoors. And remember, only you can prevent forest fires.

Drill sergeants to get more pay starting Oct. 1

Army News Service

WASHINGTON — Beginning with the Oct. 1 paycheck, experienced drill sergeants will receive an additional $55 per month.

Special duty assignment pay for all active and reserve component drill sergeants in their 13th month increased from $165 to $220 per month.

The $55 increase in pay is a way of recognizing these soldiers for the challenges, responsibilities and extraordinary effort they give for serving as a drill sergeant, said Maj. Allen Deutsch, special duty pay program manager in the office of the deputy chief of staff for personnel.

Drill sergeants with less than 13 months will receive the following SDAP: 0-6 months — $110 per month; 7-12 months — $165; and more than 13 months — $220.

Time served in prior successful tour as a drill sergeant will count toward the amount of SDAP awarded, said Deutsch. For example, a soldier with seven months prior successful service as a drill sergeant will be paid $165 SDAP upon his return to drill sergeant duty.

Other soldiers reaping the benefits of special-duty assignment pay include staff recruiters, total Army career counselors and retention non-commissioned officers. SDAP is paid according to this chart.

Staff recruiters, total Army career counselors and retention NCOs: 0-6 months — $55; 7-12 months — $110; and 13 months or more — $165.

Recruiters and Guidance Counselors: 0-3 months — $165; 4-9 months — $220; and 10 months or more — $275.

Payment of the SDAP begins when the soldier successfully completes the special training and is assigned to a designated position.

Former CSM of Army takes job with NCOA

Non-commissioned Officers Association

SAN ANTONIO — Glen E. Morrell, retired sergeant major of the U.S. Army, joined the Non-commissioned Officers Association as special assistant to the president, effective Sept. 1, it was announced recently by NCOA president Walter W. Krueger.

In his new position, Morrell will be active in a variety of NCOA programs, including voter registration, veterans job assistance, federal and state legislative issues and membership development.

A native of Wick, W. Va., he spent more than 31 years in the Army, serving in virtually every noncommissioned officer leadership position. He became the seventh sergeant major of the Army on July 1, 1983, and served as the principal enlisted advisor to the the Army chief of staff. He retired July 1.

A Vietnam veteran, Morrell is married and the father of three children.

The NCOA is a nonprofit fraternal organization that was chartered in 1960 to promote and protect the rights and benefits of active-duty and veteran noncommissioned and petty officers (NCOs/POs) in all five branches of the armed forces worldwide.

Post worker first to be 'Saved by Seatbelt'

Safety Office

Marilyn Vatral was the first winner in the Safety Office's 'Saved by the Seatbelt' Campaign.

Aug. 4, Mrs. Vatral was traveling east on Macon Road when another driver traveling west decided to make a left turn onto Cody Road directly in front of her. There was no way she could avoid hitting the other car.

Mrs. Vatral says she travels to Fort Benning almost every day and because of the mandatory seatbelt requirement she has gotten into the habit of using her seatbelt routinely. She also said that there is no doubt in her mind that the reason she wasn't hurt was because she was using her seatbelt.

Mrs. Vatral's husband is a retired Army officer who practices oral surgery in Columbus, so she has seen first-hand what happens to mouths, jaws and teeth that go through a windshield or impact with the steering wheel. She always uses her seatbelt and encourages everyone else to do the same.

You, too, can win a Saved by My Seatbelt t-shirt. All you have to do is come by the Safety Office, Bldg. 80, or call 545-3267, and tell us how a seatbelt saved you from injury in an accident. Help us let everyone else know that seatbelts really do save lives, but only if you use it.

Lab workers looking back for 'bad' blood

By Becky Obert
Bayonet staff writer

Medical personnel at Martin Army Community Hospital are searching records as far back as 1977, in an effort to identify people who might have received HIV-contaminated transfusions.

It's part of the nationwide AIDS Look-Back Program, and the blood bank on post, along with others across the country, is participating.

"It's an effort by the blood bank industry to take an ethical approach and say there's the possibility that the (HIV) virus could have been passed through blood transfusions," said Lt. Col. Pitt Tomlinson, chief, Preventive Medicine.

The way the program works is that, as patients are diagnosed as having AIDS or test positive for the virus, they are asked if they have donated blood. If they say yes, the blood bank where they donated blood is contacted, and personnel there check the records and see who received the blood.

"The Food and Drug Administration requires us (and all blood banks) to maintain extensive records to account for all aspects of blood donated," said Maj. James Hawkins, who is the manager of the laboratory at MACH.

Using these records, the laboratory contacts the people who received parts of the blood donation, and tells them they may have been exposed to the HIV, Tomlinson said. They are urged to come in to be tested for presence of the virus if they are eligible for medical care at MACH, or told to go to their private physicians.

Hawkins declined to say how many people have been contacted through MACH's look back program, saying that he doesn't think those figures are significant.

Tomlinson, however, said that, "in the cases where we have notified people of possible exposure, there have been no secondary cases of AIDS identified."

The Army has been testing blood donations for the antibody since May 1985, and have not given contaminated blood to patients since then, Tomlinson said. The program looks back all the way to 1977, however, because so little is known about the virus' behavior.

"We still don't know for sure how long a person could carry the virus before coming down with

Day reminds us of soldiers' pain, suffering

Army News Service

U.S. and Vietnamese officials are weighing results of a recent visit to Hanoi by former chairman of the U.S. Joint Chiefs of Staff, retired Army Gen. John W. Vessey. In his capacity as special presidental emissary for POW/MIA and other humanitarian issues.

Vessey's three-day visit in early August reflects at the highest level the U.S. government's continued commitment to account for all Americans who served in southeast Asia, said Army Lt. Col. Keith Schneider. He serves as the defense department's spokesman on matters pertaining to Americans taken prisoner or declared missing-in-action during the Vietnam era.

When Vessey reported on his visit during a press conference Aug. 10 at the White House, he said that the agreement reached in Hanoi covers four main points:

- The Vietnamese will accelerate efforts to help find missing Americans in Vietnam.
- The United States will send experts to Vietnam to look into humanitarian concerns expressed by the Vietnamese over their wartime losses.
- Any such discussion of those concerns will dwell on the purely humanitarian aspects and will not be linked to such broader political issues as normalization or diplomatic relations.
- Plans are being made to hold two meetings of experts shortly to discuss the POW/MIA issue and Vietnamese humanitarian concerns. One of these meetings will take the form of a "technical session," the last of which occured in Hanoi Oct. 29- Nov. 1, 1986. Such technical talks focus solely on the issue of missing Americans. Their representatives normally dwell on such technical (i.e., non-policy) matters as logisitics support for crash-site excavations, geographic tracking of rumored sightings of grave locations and repatriation procedures.

Besides that progress in Vietnam, a similar agreement resulted several days later during a U.S. delegation's visit to Laos. "The U.S. government," Schneider added, "has acknowledged the humanitarian problems of Laos and has agreed to work within its capability to respond to them." For their part, the Laotians have agreed to resume humanitarian cooperation with the United States on the issue of Americans still missing and unaccounted for in Laotian territory.

During his press conference, Vessey referred to a priority list of 220 "discrepancy cases," — cases where there is compelling evidence that the other side has, or should have, knowledge concerning the individual. "There are about 70 urgent cases on that particular list," he said — meaning the category of case offering compelling evidence for believing the man was alive.

According to the defense department's latest compilation, the number of Americans still missing or otherwise unaccounted for in Indochina totals 2,413 as of Aug. 20. Broken down by country, this means 1,776 in Vietnam, 549 in Laos, 82 in Cambodia and six in China. Defense Department figures show that on Nov. 26, 1986 U.S. representatives received from Vietnamese officials the repatriated remains of what were believed to be those of three missing Americans. Efforts at the U.S. Army Central Identification Laboratory in Hawaii have determined the identity of two of the three. Other recovered remains are still undergoing analysis at the lab.

Meanwhile, Vessey's visit dovetails with the annual observance of national POW/MIA Recognition Day, set for Sept. 18. At that time, military installations across the nation are expected to take part in various activities devoted to the memory of Americans lost in foreign lands.

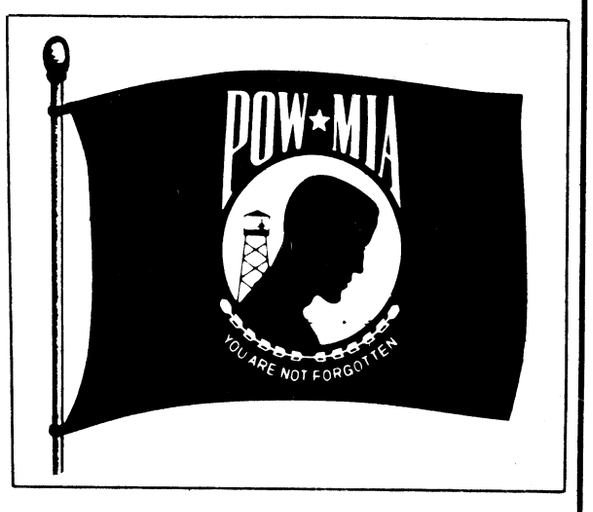
Community joins for wreath-laying ceremony today



By Aimee R. Holden
Bayonet staff writer

The Fort Benning community will honor prisoners of war and those missing in action at a wreath-laying ceremony today at 10:30 a.m.

Maj. Gen. Kenneth Leuer, post commander, and Jo Anne Shirley, vice president of the Georgia Committee for POWs/MIAs, will together place a wreath at the POW/MIA statue. The statue is located in the field adjacent to Greene Hall, off Lumpkin Road.

After the ceremony, guests will attend a reception and luncheon at the Officers' Club, where a POW/MIA display will be set up.

Mrs. Shirley's brother, Maj. Bobby Marvin Jones, was listed as missing in action in South Vietnam in November 1972. In 1974 she became involved with the National League of Families of Prisoners and Missing.

She has been the Georgia State Coordinator of the national league for the past five years, and has served as vice president of the Georgia committee since it was founded in 1985.

The wreath-laying ceremony is open to the public. The reception and luncheon is by invitation only.

OPINION

President proclaims special day for POWs

Perhaps no American could cherish our country's liberty more dearly than those who have defended it and, in doing so, have paid the price of capture and imprisonment. We take solemn inspiration and resolve from the sacrifices of brave Americans who have endured captivity for their allegiance to our beloved land and our ideals. Their dignity, faith and valor remind us of the allegiance we owe our nation and its defenders.

We also take inspiration from the courage of the families of those who remain missing or unaccounted for. The fortitude they display in the face of uncertainty is heroic, like the acts of those whose fates they seek to learn. We, as a nation, will not rest in our efforts to secure the release of any United States personnel who may still be held against their will, to obtain the fullest possible accounting of those still missing, to repatriate all recoverable American remains and to relieve the suffering of the families.

The POW/MIA issue will continue to be a matter of the highest national priority until it is resolved. To symbolize our national commitment, the POW/MIA flag will fly over the White House, the Departments of State and Defense, the Veterans Administration and the Vietnam Veterans Memorial on Sept. 18. It will also fly over the Vietnam Veterans Memorial on Memorial Day and Veterans Day.

To recognize the special debt of gratitude all Americans owe to those who sacrificed their freedom in the service of our country and to reaffirm our commitment to their courageous families, the Congress, by Senate Joint Resolution 49, has designated Sept. 18 as "National POW/MIA Recognition Day" and authorized and requested the President to issue a proclamation in observance of this occasion.

Now, therefore, I, Ronald Reagan, President of the United States of America, do hereby proclaim Friday, Sept. 18, as National POW/MIA Recognition Day. I call upon all Americans to join in honoring all former American prisoners of war, those still missing and their families who have made extraordinary sacrifices on behalf of our country. I also call upon state and local officials and private organizations to observe this day with every appropriate ceremony and activity.

In Witness Whereof, I have hereunto set my hand this 21st day of August, in the year of our Lord nineteen hundred and eighty-seven, and of the Independence of the United States of America the two hundred and twelfth.

Smoking in the workplace quickly going out of style

By Gary Parnell
Interface Magazine

The traffic in "No Smoking" signs is getting brisk and the Army is not the only agency that's serious about banning smoking in the workplace.

Objections to other people's smoking hasn't yet reached the fervor of the early 1660s, when smokers were routinely executed in Constantinople or subject to imprisonment and confiscation of property in Japan.

But today's smoker is fast becoming a social pariah, banished to the rear sections of aircraft and barred from an increasing variety of public places.

Last May, for example, the General Service Administration proposed an almost total ban on smoking in its 6,800 buildings. Implemented in fall of 1986, the GSA Plan affectsalmost half of the government's 2.8 million civilian workers and most of the 350,000 employees in the Washington, D.C. area.

Some surveys indicate that most people — whether or not they smoke — favor current restrictions on smoking in public places, such as having non-smoking areas in restaurants and aircraft or prohibiting smoking in hospital rooms.

With the growing emphasis on controlling smoking in the workplace, too, it may be time for the smoker to break the nicotine habit.

Special to The Bayonet

Ceremonies turn me on.

I'm the only 11 Bush I know who actually enjoys marching in parades. I could stand all day at parade rest with the Georgia sun turning my steel pot into a pressure cooker as long as an Army band was nearby playing martial music.

Thus, Thursday, the 200th anniversary of our Constitution, was a real treat for me. Not only was there a lot of martial music, but there was singing as well, and I got to sit for it.

Some of my buddies say I'm weird. That no one could be as patriotic as me. Maybe it's in my genes.

My grandmother, Clarrisse Snively, told me once that my great-great-great-great-great-great-grandfather Clarence Sniffly was a member of the Constitutional Convention in Philadelphia, but that on the day of the signing, he was out with a cold.

Because he missed the signing, he was not allowed to sit for the painting afterwards.

His absence from all that has thrown a monkey wrench into a great deal of our history.

For instance, instead of 23 soldier-statesmen at the convention, there were actually 24.

Grandmother said she doubted Clarence would have considered himself a soldier-statesman, but the fact of the matter is, that's what he was.

First, he fought in the Army of the Delaware, that makes him a soldier. And since he attended the convention, I guess that makes him a statesman.

Apparently his soldier skills consisted mainly of bartering for goods, to include a good spot of ale. He had quite a reputation for his verbal skills. Most of it concerned the trouble his tongue got him into.

Grandmother says that he is the one who inspired George Washington's letter to Lafayette in which Washington wrote:

"...in a free and republican government, you cannot restrain the voice of the multitude; every man will speak as he thinks, or more properly without thinking, consequently will judge the effects without attending to the causes."

Say what you will about Clarence Sniffly, but he was nothing if not prescient. He told everyone that running the Army by committee as done during the Revolutionary War, was not the way to go, that what the new country needed was one person in charge and since it was a sure bet that Washington would be elected president, then why not make the President Commander-in-Chief, too?

Of course, there was a great deal of argument from the Federalists who argued that power corrupts; and an Army is designed to support corrupt power; and power is the major enemy of liberty. Since supreme power is possessed by those who have arms in their hands and are disciplined to use them, the most pressing danger to liberty is a standing Army. Armies, they proclaimed, are gangs of ruthless mercenaries responsible only to those who pay them and are capable of destroying all rights, laws and liberty.

But one look at Clarence in his corporal uniform helped convince them that they might be acting a little too hastily, so they voted to allow the nation to maintain a small standing Army of 800 soldiers.

Many people think that after the Constitution was signed, that was it. Well, it wasn't. There was a lot of fighting to convince folks that we were serious about our independence and were willing to fight to preserve it.

Clarence who'd been raised on a farm in the Northeast, actually a collection of rocks on a plot of land, decided he'd stay with the Army. Thus, he ended up going to war against the northwest Indians and later, was under Maj. Gen. Arthur St. Clair's command which consisted of a collection of regular Army men and militia.

These were the days before the "One Army" concept and you can imagine the bickering that went on between the regulars and the militia.

We pretty nearly lost the west because of it. If it hadn't been for Anthony Wayne, we probably would have. He ended the Indian danger at the Battle of Fallen Timbers. Unfortunately, Clarence lost his life there and he was the last of the Snively (or Sniffly) warriors until me.

I guess that's why I get goose bumps when I hear patriotic music and tears come to my eyes when I see Old Glory wavering in the breeze and think about just what the flag, our Constitution, this nation, means to me.

Editor's note: Pvt. 1 Clyde Snively couldn't make it as a journalist (71Q), so he is now at large among the ranks of infantrymen on post. Watch this space to see if he can make it as an 11B.

'We the People' really meant 'we the men'

By David M. Maxfield
Smithsonian News Service

"We the People" — a phrase that once really meant "We, the Men" — begins the Preamble to the Constitution.

"Virtually nothing in the original constitutional text and debates directly addresses the situation of women and families...," Sylvia A. Law, a New York University professor of law, explained at a recent Smithsonian symposium on the Constitution.

At that time, the "dominant conceptions of families denied the liberty, equality and even personhood of women," she said. And so, the "original intent" of the Founding Fathers "does not provide answers for today's problems." On the other hand, Law offered, the men intended the constitutional spirit of experimentation to continue and grow.

Correspondence between John and Abigail Adams in 1776 reveals that this "deafening silence" was certainly no accident. From Braintree, Mass.,on March 31, Abigail wrote John, who was serving in the Continental Congress in New York:

"I long to hear that you have declared an independency — and by the way, in the new code of laws which I suppose it will be necessary for you to make, I desired you would remember the ladies and be more generous and favorable to them than your ancestors. Do not put such unlimited powers into the hands of the husbands."

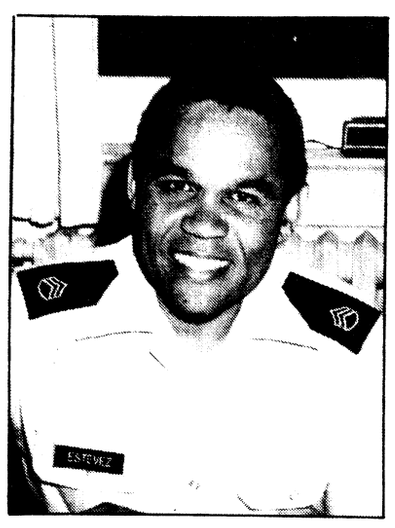
John was not at all sympathetic:

"As to your extraordinary Code of Laws, I cannot but laugh...depend upon it, we know better than to repeal our masculine system."

Adams' snippy response reflected the intellectual tradition of the time. The founding families were profoundly different from today's nuclear unit. Then, a woman's place WAS in the home. "Women were assigned, on the basis of status, to perform the essential work" of the household, from child rearing to soap and candle-making, Law said. The average white woman of the era bore more than seven children, black women 10 or 11.

And yet, Law told the audience, it is impossible to tell another very different, lesser-known story about families of this era. As men went off to revolutionary battle, the women assumed responsibility for maintaining home and property. They quartered soldiers and provided refuge for displaced friends and relatives.

Women also played political roles during the Revolution — boycotting British goods and sometimes physically attacking the property of merchants who stocked enemy imports. They turned in lead weights from windows to be melted down for bullets. The war also generated the nation's first women's proclamation and political organization when Benjamin Franklin's relatives petitioned door-to-door in support of the American cause.



When active fighting subsided, women managed farms and businesses and dealt with the dangers of epidemics. Courts began to recognize married women's property interests. Both men and women were allowed greater latitude in selecting their mates.

Although women were excluded from the constitutional debates, "just as plainly, women have always played a vital role in constructing our nation," Law stated. The challenge for the coming century is to "promote the liberty and equality of all people."

197th troops hit the ground running for three-week's training in desert

By Clarence Pittman III
197th Infantry Brigade Public Affairs Officer

Planeloads of troops flew into Lawson Army Airfield last week as the 197th Infantry Brigade returned from the National Training Center at Fort Irwin, Calif.

Overall, nearly 4,000 troops participated in three weeks of tough exercises in the hot and dry climate of the Mojave Desert.

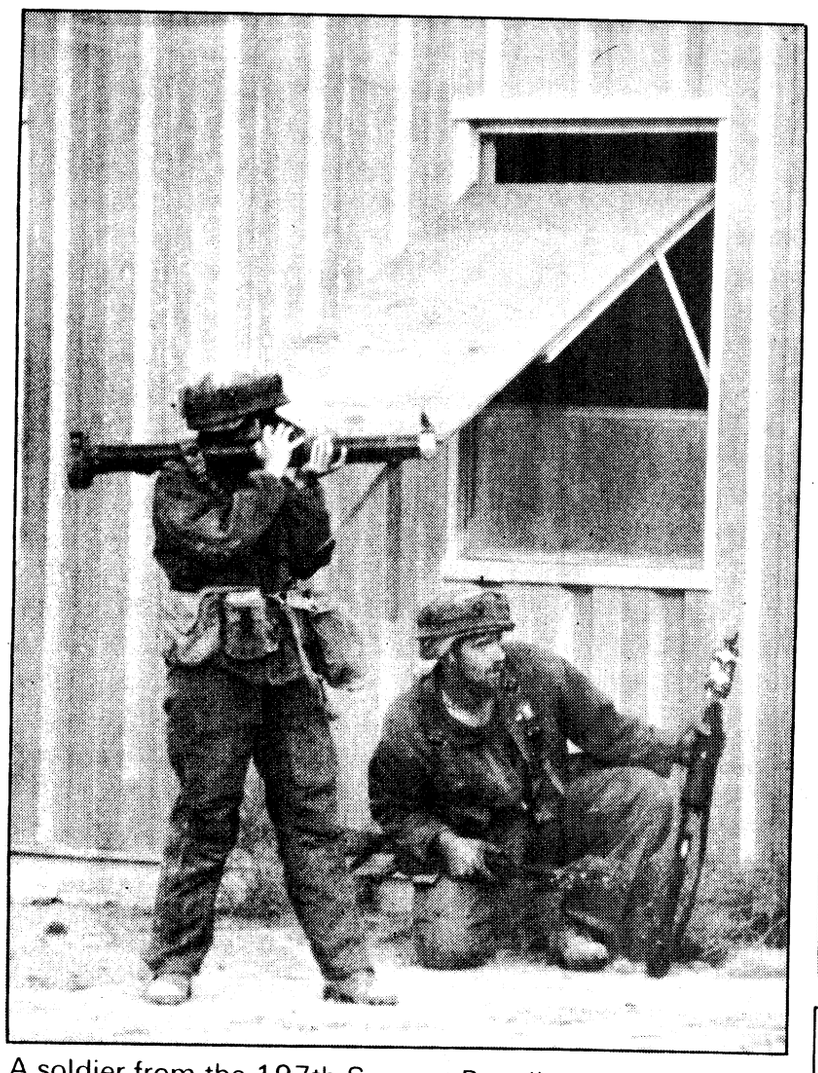
"The stress and pressures placed on every soldier regardless of rank, position or duties is not replicated in any other collective training experience — this is tough, complicated business," said Col. William W. Hartzog, 197th Infantry Brigade commander.

The experience at NTC was a combination of force-on-force maneuvers and live-fire training.

In force on force maneuvers, the Brigade was broken down into Task Force 3-7, Task Force 2-69, and separate elements directly under Brigade control. The soldiers used air-land tactics to fight against its tough opponent — the Opposing Force (OPFOR). The OPFOR is a U.S. Army Brigade, trained to look like and fight like a Soviet motorized rifle regiment.

The live-fire exercise placed the soldiers in a defensive scenario engaging over 500 targets with live ammunition. The targets were computer-controlled to simulate an attack from a full motorized rifle regiment.

"Both in live-fire and force on force, we've beat the stress and developed to the point of winning," said Col. Hartzog.



All the realistic training is closely analyzed by the high-tech instrumentation system at the NTC. This system is capable of monitoring the status of the battlefield and recording the action. The information is compiled into an after-action review so that leaders can analyze their performance.

"The men and women of the Brigade attacked, defended and supported with great skill and a strong warrior spirit," Col. Hartzog added. "We undoubtedly made great use of the best training environment in the world."

It's a fact: you can't get AIDS by donating blood

By Becky Obert
Bayonet staff writer

It's a fact: you can't get AIDS by donating blood.

The American Red Cross estimates that blood donations are down from 10 to 20 percent, partly because people fear contracting the deadly virus.

Maj. Isaac Broussard, medical director of the Martin Army Community Hospital Blood Bank, said donations there are down, but there's really no way to tell if fear of AIDS is the reason. "The number of donations we receive is a cyclical thing, so we really have no way of telling if they're down because of fear," he said.

Medical personnel are trying their best to let people know that they have nothing to fear when giving blood.

"There's no way to get AIDS by giving blood, because disposable needles are used to draw the blood and thrown away after one use," Broussard said.

The Blood Bank has also expanded its pre-donation screening process, to make sure people who might carry the virus don't give blood.

Prospective donors are now asked if they have had any of these: enlarged lymph nodes, purplish skin lesions, persistent cough, white spots or unusual blemishes in the mouth, skin cancer, Kaposi's Sarcoma, night sweats, unexplained fever or chronic diarrhea. If a person has any of these symptoms, they should not give blood.

Prospective donors are also given a list of groups of people who are at a higher risk for carrying the HIV.

These include people who are: IV drug users, past or present, or their sex partners; homosexual or bisexual men (any male who has had one homosexual encounter since 1977) or their sex partners; emigrants from Haiti or Central Africa since 1977; hemophilia sufferers or people who receive clotting factor concentrates; men and women who have been prostitutes since 1977, persons who have been their heterosexual partners within six months; and persons who have had sex with a prostitute in the past six months.

If they fit any of these categories, then they are asked not to give blood.

And donors at MACH are now filling out another form. It is labeled "confidential statement" and the donor is instructed to staple it shut after filling it out.

It reads: "After reading the informaton about AIDS, you may have decided that your blood donation should not be used for transfusion because of possible risk factors in your history. You may, however, want to continue with the blood donation process and donate blood as usual. It is, therefore, important that you check one of the blocks below."

The blocks read: "Yes — I believe my blood is safe for transfusion;" and "No — My blood should not be given to a patient." These forms are filed by number, and checked before that lot of blood is processed. Those that are marked 'no' are not given as transfusions. Since it is all done by numbers, the person processing the blood does not know who the donor was.

"Sometimes there's a lot of peer pressure to give blood, so if a person comes in with their friends but doesn't want to give blood because of possible HIV exposure, this allows them a way to do so safely," Broussard said.

Blood

AIDS," Tomlinson said. So besides identifying others who may be carrying the virus, the look back program may provide data on the incubation period of the virus.

The FDA began requiring all blood banks to test for the virus in October 1985, and to begin participating in the Look-Back Program as of June 1, 1987.

MACH offers HIV antibody testing for all recipients of blood or blood products since 1977. If a person eligible for care at MACH has received blood or blood products since 1977, at MACH or elsewhere, he or she can visit their private physician at MACH and request a test. If the person does not have a particular Army doctor, he or she can go for testing at the Preventive Medicine Service.

During the initial visit, they will be given information about AIDS in general, and any questions they have will be answered. A blood sample for the antibody test will be taken at this time, and a follow-up session or telephone call will be scheduled within two to three weeks. At the follow-up session, the results of the test will be discussed and depending on what the test shows, the person will be counseled accordingly.

215th Finance Center gets new name

By Shawn Bryson
36th Engineer Group correspondent

Lt. Col. Robert U. Schultz, finance and accounts officer for Fort Benning, assumed command of the 215th Area Finance Support Center, 36th Engineer Group Sept. 11, as the unit was reorganized and redesignated the 215th Finance Support Unit at Engineer Field here.

The 215th is the eighth of 15 AFSCs to make the conversion to an FSU since the Finance Corps was activated as a regiment under the Army Regimental System in May of this year, according to Schultz.

Schultz commented that the finance corps has come a long way since its beginning 211 years ago.

However, the Army's decision to activate the Finance Corps as a regiment is basically a necessary and positive step backwards,according to Schultz.

"The Finance Corps is only two days younger than the Infantry Corps making it the second oldest corps in the Army," Schultz said. "It didn't take the Army long after forming the Infantry to realize the need for a Finance Corps."

He added that in the early days, finance personnel paid soldiers individually, in cash and on horseback.

Since then, the Finance Corps has advanced from the soldiers on horseback to highly skilled soldiers, like those of the 215th, at a computer terminal, Schultz said.

The commander added that he plans to visit battalion and brigade commanders at Fort Benning to get ideas for improvements to better meet the needs of the soldiers both in the field and in the garrison.

Engineers give airstrip 'face-lift'

By Shawn Bryson
36th Engineer Group correspondent

Soldiers from B Co., 3rd Engineer Battalion, 36th Engineer Group gave Decker Combat Airstrip here a facelift during a battalion field training exercise recently.

According to SSgt. Curtis R. Gross, earth-moving platoon sergeant, the 21-soldier platoon was tasked to raise the surface of the airstrip eight inches.

Gross said that the reason the it was necessary was because over the years, the sub base of the airstrip had worn away. He said if the work had not been done, the airstrip would continue to wear away and become a hazard to aircraft landing there.

The soldiers worked 24 hours a day in shifts throughout most of the FTX, Gross said. "It took approximately 10,000 compacted yards of fill to raise the surface level which equals roughly 15,800 loose yards of fill," he said. According to Gross, the airstrip is 4,000 meters long and that much fill makes for a lot of trips with the scrapers.

He added that the soldiers piloted the company's scrapers, graders, vibratory rollers and Bomags for more than 1,200 man hours before completing the project late Tuesday.

However, the project was not without its share of problems Gross said. Apparently, the "borrow pit," the soldiers were using to obtain the fill from had an old sewer line, put in years ago and not in service. "When two of our scrapers were scraping, they hit parts of the old sewer line which gave us two flat tires to change," he said. The tires for the scrapers are over six feet tall and it usually takes four or five men to change one, according to Gross.

MARSHAL'S VIEWPOINT

y Wendell D. Choate
·ovost Marshal's Office

Con artists dupe, defraud and heat unsuspecting Americans ut of several billion dollars each ear. People of all ages are ictims, but the swindlers' prime arget is the senior citizen.

Swindlers see the elderly as asy marks for many reasons. Many older people live on Social ecurity and pensions supplemented by savings. They may be looking for ways to increase their income through investments, home business opportunities to i income through investments, home business opportunities or retirement properties. Such business ventures may be good, but some are ideal settings for fraud.

Some things to watch for are hearing aid and insurance ripoffs, health quackery and work-at-home rackets.

Most con artists promise "incredible bargains" or "quick money." Unfortunately, senior citizens are just as vulnerable as everyone else when it comes to get-rich quick schemes.

Health "cures" and health machines are another racket. Some are good and some are not. Check with your local doctor or health clinic before you buy.

Fake health insurance snares many older people. A lot of senior citizens worry about getting sick and being unable to pay for medical expenses that Medicare does not cover. There is health insurance that is supposed to pick up where Medicare leaves off. Many such policies offer inadequate coverage. Before you buy a "medi-gap" policy, check with the state insurance commission, a lawyer or the Better Business Bureau.

Cheap glasses and hearing aids may not be such a good deal. Check with your doctor or local health clinic if you think you need glasses or a hearing aid. They must fit properly. A bargain is not a bargain if you can't use it.

Some precautions to take are:

- Do not be afraid to say "no." High pressure tactics can convince you to buy something you don't want or need.
- Get a receipt for all transactions.
- Do not give anyone large sums of cash for any purpose.
- Do not pay in advance for goods or services.
- Do not expect something for nothing.

To report fraud, call the CID at 545-3984 and leave your recorded message. You do not have to identify yourself.

ASK THE JUDGE

Q: I can no longer make the ayments on my car. The dealer as offered to take it back as a voluntary repossession." What oes this mean?

A: In most cases, a voluntary epossession is much like an rdinary, or involuntary, repossession. Unless you have a specific agreement with the dealer tating differently, the automobile can be sold and the sale price will be deducted from what you till owe on the contract. If the lealer does not get enough noney from the sale to cover the entire amount due, you will still e responsible for paying the alance owed. Since the repossessed items are usually auctioned off to the highest bidder, he sale prices are often very ow. In addition to the contract alance, you will also have to pay he expenses which the lienholder ncurred preparing the automobile for resale, such as pick up, leaning, delivery, commissions, etc. And, to make matters worse, he entire amount is usually due ll at once rather than in payments. Your credit record will lso reflect the voluntary repossession for a period of up to seven ears. Often times, you may find t is better to refinance or to sell he automobile yourself rather han have it repossessed. Be sure ou consider all the alternatives efore making a decision.

Q: Recently my trailer flooded and ruined several hundred dollars worth of furniture. The trailer park has replaced the carpet and repainted the walls, but they refuse to pay for the furniture. What are my rights?

A: If you have a written lease, you should check there for a statement of responsibility. The general rule is that renters must insure their own property. Landords have no duty to repair or replace damaged items unless hey were responsible for the damage. If the problem had been caused by faulty construction or mproper maintenance, for example, you might have a claim against the trailer park. If the problem is the result of a true, unforeseen accident, an "act-of-God"-type issue, such as a flood, you will probably be responsible for your own property.

Pilot recounts his experience with MIAs in Vietnam

By Col. Jay E. Riedel
Senior Air Force Representative to the U

"POW/MIA." We have all heard these words many times and they mean different things to each of us. Many of us were glued to out television sets in February of 1973 to watch our POWs get off the C-141s from Hanoi and return to freedom — some, after more than seven years in captivity. And a lot of us still feel a twinge deep inside of us when we hear those words today in the news — continuing efforts by many to further account for those still missing throughout southeast Asia (SEA).

But some of us when we hear the words "POW/MIA" have flashbacks in our personal experiences. One such flashback of mine is to Dec. 10, 1972; a day that will always be with me.

I was a Captain at the time, but had just found out that I was on the new Major's list. My entire wing of 72 A-7Ds (single seat, single engine attack jet) had deployed from Myrtle Beach, S.C., to Korat Air Base, Thailand, about six weeks earlier; the first Air Force A-7Ds to deploy to SEA. Although the aircraft was new to SEA, our wing already had many veteran fighter pilots that were used for the cadre of the new wing. It was my third duty there — in my third different aircraft. We were all quite busy forces, and we were heavily committed to the new search and rescue (SAR) role that the A-7Ds had picked up from the retiring prop-driven A-1 "Sky Raiders."

On that morning, we had put together a SAR package of 13 A-7Ds and 2 "Jolly Green" helicopters to go in, pick up, and recover an F-4 pilot who had been shot down the day before — only a few "klicks" northwest of Hanoi, in the hills affectionately known as "Thud Ridge." His wingman had observed his ejection, good 'chute and had talked to him on his survival radio after he had landed safely. He only had slight injuries and had not observed any "bad guys" in his area: a good risk for a SAR package.

Using the "survivors" (the general term used until positive ID is made) approximate location given to us by his wingman, the five A-7D SAR "birds," call sign "Sandy," took off from Korat at first light — their job: find the best ingress and egress routes; pinpoint the survivor's location; and locate any defenses that may be a threat to the helicopters.

A few minutes later, I took off, as an element leader in a four-ship flight of SEAD (Suppression of Enemy Air Defenses) aircraft loaded with 20mm ammo and CBU-52 (cluster bomb unit) (small bomblets that are used for area coverage). Another flight of four A-7s, also for SEAD, took off shortly after us. KC-135 tankers, used for air refueling of the A-7s, were already "on-station" — orbiting in a "safe area" and available to us throughout the mission for fuel. Fuel management for the entire package was a major job. Sandy 3 (number 3 aircraft of the 5-ship Sandy flight) kept track of everyone's fuel state and made the decision, based on the leader's, Sandy Low, overall plan, when to send birds to the tankers, over 200 klicks away to refuel and be back, with as much fuel as possible, so the whole package would be ready to go at the time set by Sandy Low.

After stopping by the tankers to "top off," my flight ingressed at low altitude to the general area of the survivor and joined up with the 5 Sandys; also at low altitude. They had already determined the best ingress and egress routes for the Jolly Green, and the two Jollys, one primary and one spare, were on their way to their predetermined holding point in a safe area. A few minutes later, Sandy Low had pinpointed the survivor's location while the rest of us stayed somewhat away from the immediate area to "troll for guns" (find any enemy defenses that would fire on us), and to not draw attention to the survivor's location by numerous aircraft overhead. The other SEAD flight arrived in the area; the survivor's exact location was found and made known to all "players;" Sandy 3 had sent us, at our required intervals, to the tankers for a full load of fuel; and Sandy Low had determined we were ready. All was going like clockwork.

After egressing back out of the area, still at low altitude (below 1000 feet), we joined up with the two Jollys, briefed them on the survivor, routes, weather, headings, terrain, etc., and we started in: the camouflaged Jolly Green helicopter (the spare stayed in the safe area) at treetop level — hard to see over the dark green jungle and moving at about 100 miles per hour; the 5 Sandys escorting the Jolly, keeping him in sight, on course and away from all roads, towns, villages, open areas, etc., and ready to react to any small threat that may have come up on Jolly; and the two flights of 4 SEAD A-7s escorting the whole packaage, ready at any time to "roll in" on any major threat that "came up." All was going well. No problems.

When we approached the survivor's location, radio contact with him was re-established on a preselected frequency, and using special procedures, positive ID of the individual who was shot down the day before in the F-4 was made. When the survivor heard the Jolly approaching, control was turned over to him for final vectoring of the helicopter to a position directly over him.

He was on a small hill in fairly dense jungle. We couldn't see him, but we knew his exact location. All was going without a hitch. Jolly hovered over the survivor and the pararescueman lowered the rope ladder. The 5 Sandys and the 8 SEAD birds were buzzing around him like flies — ready to respond to any challenge. What a thrill! What a beautiful sight! Although our hearts were pounding, all else was quiet — too quiet.

Then it happened. As soon as the ladder disappeared down into the trees, the most vulnerable time for the entire SAR package, the whole sky lit up with white, gray and orange flashes of numerous antiaircraft artillery guns and red tracers from small arms and automatic weapons. It was coming from everywhere! My radar homing and warning scope, which displays numbers, types and locations of threats was lit up like a video arcade game and the different audio warning tones coming through my headset from each type of threat were all blended together into indistinguishable noise. Then came the unmistakeable rattlesnake sound of an SA-2 surface-to-air missile. Instantaneously, the warning call: "SAMs!" was transmitted. The RHAW scope checked, and the large "telephone pole" shaped SA-2 found as it left its launcher. We were too close to it for it to guide properly, so it was "easy" to outmaneuver. All of this took about 10 seconds...

As I looked down to try and find an AAA gun to roll in on, I saw the Jolly Green, streaming snow-white smoke, slip away from his hover position and slide down the side of the hill, fighting to regain control of his obviously badly damaged chopper. "We're hit! We're hit! Get us out of here! Heading. Give me a heading!"

Capt. Chuck Kennedy, a highly experienced fighter pilot who was a wingman in my flight that day, had the best view at that moment of a relatively safe egress route and was the first man to respond. He immediately snapped a heading to the crippled chopper for the best egress out of the area through the hail of defenses. After attacking all the 23mm, 37mm and 57mm AAA guns we could find, we rejoined the crippled Jolly, easy to find now while still streaming white smoke nd contrasted against the dark green jungle, and the 5 Sandys that were "sanitizing" the egress path out of North Vietnam in front of it with their 20mm strafe. Two more SA-2s were fired at the package during this period, but they, too, were detected early and outmaneuvered...

What a mess. But we were all on the way out! The silence was broken by Sandy Low: "Jolly, how're you doin'?"

His answer sent a cold chill through me: "My copilot's dead, pararescueman is wounded, and I've lost the left engine. I don't know how long this thing is gonna fly."

Sandy Low's reassuring reply came right back: "Roger, Jolly, you're lookin' good. Do you have the survivor on board?"

Jolly's one-word reply was branded in my mind forever: "Negative."

We egressed the rest of the way out in silence, as we all pondered the mission. It had been a flack trap. The North Vietnamese had brought in mobile AAA guns and set them up around the survivor a few klicks away — then waited for the SAR package to arrive! He never knew it.

When I finally got back to Korat and landed, I had logged 10 hours and 15 minutes.

It had been one of the longest single seat, single-engine jet fighter combat missions in history and had included five in-flight refuelings, on loading over 50,000 pounds of fuel.

Many of the details of the mission have been blurred with time, for eight days later on Dec. 18, Operation Linebacker II started — the last heavy bombing of NVN. The peace talks had stalled, so then-President Nixon ordered the renewed massive bombing of NVN to get them back to the peace tables. It worked.

We flew interdiction bombing missions against key targets in NVN, and we continued with our CAS missions and SAR commitment in South Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia. In one night during this 11-day Linebacker II operation, six B-52 Bombers were shot down — each with a six-man crew. All of these new "beepers," personal locator beacons that activate automatically upon bailout/ejection on the ground, along with those already plotted, blended together to make pinpoint locating of each almost impossible. How many are still carried as MIA, I don't know. Less than two months later, on Feb. 12, 1973, Project Homecoming, the return of 591 POWs began.

And "The Survivor" we went after on Dec. 10, 1972? I don't know POW MIA — one or the other — we never went back. But I'll never forget...

What Specialist Hales has been aiming for during his off-duty time.

Specialist Four Jason Hales has been aiming for the best. As a soldier, and as a student. He's an Infantryman at Fort Myer, Virginia, as well as a B.S. candidate in Mechanical Engineering at Park College. And he's just one of the over 100,000 soldiers who are building brighter, smarter futures through the Army's Reaching for Excellence education program.

It's a terrific opportunity that's available to each and every soldier, at virtually every Army post around the world. Reaching for Excellence is everything from basic educational skills and technical skill development to undergraduate and graduate studies at the college level. And it's a chance to have at least 75% of your college tuition paid for by the Army.

Continuing your education is a commitment that's fully supported by the Army leadership. You can start taking advantage of this commitment at your post's Education Center. There, you'll find a professional education counselor who can help you set short- and long-range goals which fit both your educational and career plans.

Drop by your Education Center and find out, as Specialist Hales did, how you can turn some off-duty time into a lifetime of rewards. If you want to get ahead, now's the time to get started.

ARMY EDUCATION. BE ALL YOU CAN BE.

COMMUNITY

THIS WEEK

The NCO Wives Club is planning a luncheon at Steak & Ale Wednesday at 11:30 a.m.

The club offers a variety of activities this fall for NCO wives. Signup for a morning or evening bowling league.

A fall festival is planned Oct. 10 at Doughboy Stadium, including a flea market, arts and crafts, food and entertainment. Flea market spaces are $10, craft spaces $15. Call Effie Clark at 322-3143 to reserve a space.

A fashion show and sale is planned Nov. 8 at the main NCO Club from noon to 6 p.m.

For information on joining the club, call Laura Schalavin at 682-3256 or Beverly Oliver at 682-0255.

Ground Forward Air Controller directs air strike

Steve Simpson

Showing off the "pearly whites," an A-10 responds to the ground forward air controller (GFAC) to provide close air support to the maneuver forces.

By Clarence Pittman III
197th Infantry Brigade

When the Brigade commander decided to deploy heavy air strikes upon the OPFOR, he contacted a Ground Forward Air Controller, GFAC who made that happen.

During Force-on-Force and Live Fire training, a GFAC was vital in making the Air Force fighter planes an integral part of Task Force 3-7 and Task Force 2-69 combined arms power.

"This is probably the most realistic and demanding close air support training around," said Maj. Jack B. Eatman, liaison officer from Detachment 4, 507th Tactical (Air Control Wing of the 197th Brigade). "It's all based on high threat operations with the OPFOR and friendly manuever assets on the battlefield."

Overall, five GFAC teams were in support at different locations, with two to three individuals part of each team. Once given the decision to deploy the aircraft, the 23rd Tactical Fighter Wing from Englin Air Force Base, La., were contacted. This was the Brigade's attached unit which used the nearby airfield at George Air Force Base in Victorville, Calif.

The GFAC must provide to the pilot as much information as possible about the battlefield area. The realistic scenario had not only OPFOR tanks, BMPs and other ground weapon systems, but also simulated Surface-to-Air Missile sites. This forced the pilots to use terrain masking, green chaff and flares to avoid detection.

Intermingled with this mission, the pilots had to distinguish between friendly and enemy targets when the battle became joined and covered with smoke.

Further complicating the communications with the pilot, the GFAC had to set up Airspace Coordination Areas to separate the A-10s from indirect fire such as artillery.

"The training scenarios I would guess, are the closest thing to fighting a war," said Sgt. Steven W. Nasal, GFAC member of Det 4, 507 TACW. "However, I feel confident that I can do the job if my officer is knocked out of action."

His feeling of confidence is due to six years of GFAC experience and three weeks of training at Air Ground Operations School at Fort Walton Beach, Fla.

"The enlisted members know more about the GFAC communication system than the officers. The main thing that separates us is that the officer is a certified pilot," Sgt. Nasal said.

This overall effort ensured Air Force close air support for Operation "Desert Hammer."

Commo plays major role at NTC

By Daniel Gutierrez
197th Infantry Brigade

There are many simple things in life that are taken for granted. With ease, you pick up the phone to call a friend across the country or around the block. This form of communications plays a major role on the battlefield, as well as in everyday life.

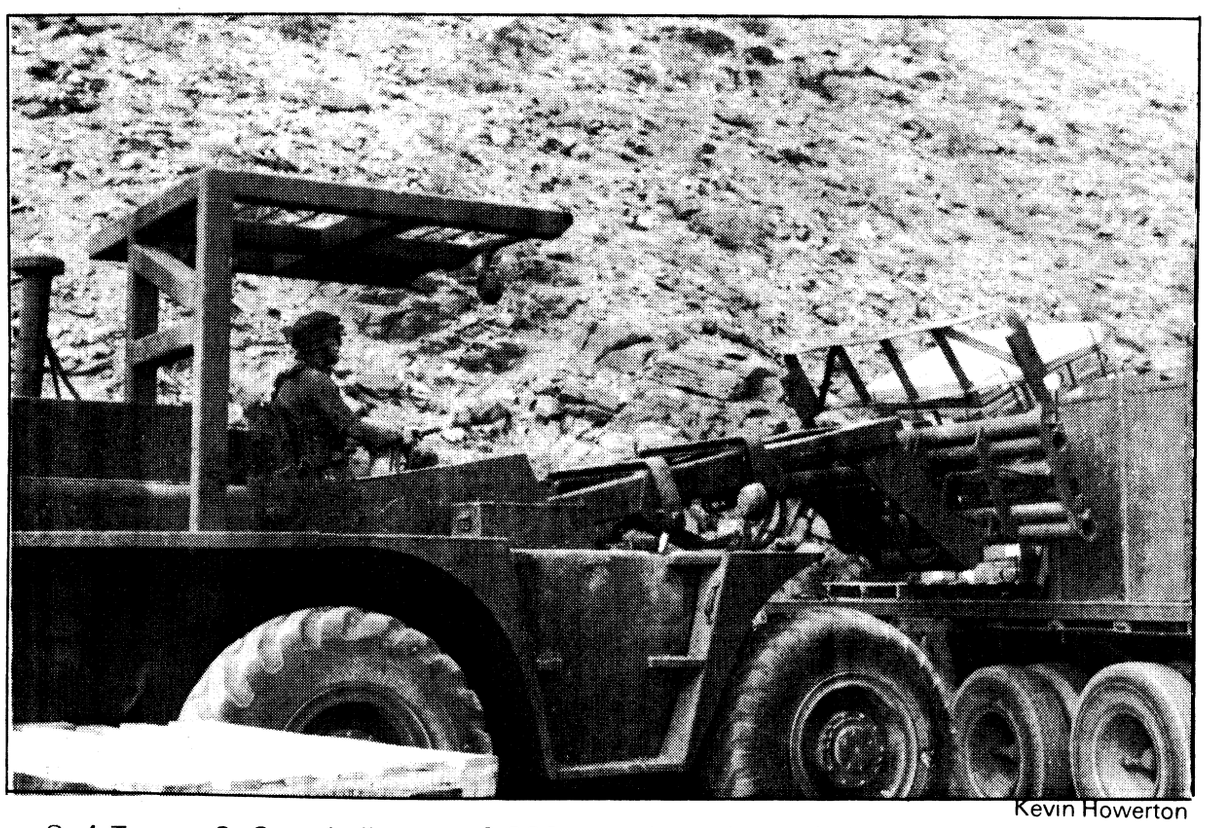
The 197th Infantry Brigade Headquarters Co. has two Commo platoons that support the flow of informaion throughout the Brigade during combat operations.

One platoon supports the Tactical Operations Center (TOC) and the other supports the Brigade Support Area (BSA).

The platoon in the TOC has three basic sections; Radio teletype (RATT), Wire and Maintenance. The RATT section has a message center with teletype machines that receives secured messages. The wire section is responsible for installing a telephone line to the tactical operations center that provides access to commercial phone lines, laying all wire and field phones throughout the Brigade, and relaying transmissions for FM communications. The maintenance section is responsible for the maintenance of all communication equipment.

"The best part of the job is knowing that all Commo is working properly," said Sgt. Lewis Royster of the Commo platoon. "Although the job is always a 24-hour mission."

Working simultaneously with the TOC is the platoon in the BSA. Its basic mission is to ensure all cable connections, switchboards, message centers and multichannels are operating properly within the Brigade.



One of these elements — the switchboard — functions like an AT&T operator, by making the proper connections to the elements without going through the switchboard.

Although it seems like an easy job, it's all very complicated. Communication, and the never-ending flow of information, is vital to the outcome of the battlefield operations. The Commo soldiers who support the 197th Infantry Brigade seem to be well aware of the importance of their mission and continously met the challenge of their duties during operation "Desert Hammer."

Support vital link for success of 197th

By Kevin J. Howerton
197th Infantry Brigade Correspondent

When you have been in the field for a couple of weeks, you start believing that you can do anything by yourself, a real "Schwarzenegger." But, if you run out of food, water, ice, fuel or ammunition in the middle of the Mojave desert, the image quickly dies.

The soldiers in Company C, 197th Support Battalion, see to it that necessary supplies consistently reach the soldiers on the battlefield. During the recent training at Fort Irwin, Calif., this required long hours and hard work in the extremes of the desert climate.

Water is one of the most important items that Charlie Support provided during Operation "Desert Hammer." The water distribution team stored and transported water to the entire Brigade during the desert training. Water is stored in a 50,000 gallon water "blivet," as well as smaller water bags that are loaded onto trucks when transporting the water to distribution points.

Ice, food and other items necessary to the soldier's survivability are handled by these supply soldiers. The goods are hauled to a field distribution point, where they are divided for shipment to the units.

During an average day of desert operations, the Brigade's vehicles use up to 15,000 gallons of diesel fuel and mogas. The distribution of this combat sustinance is also handled by the Company C soldiers.

"We support the entire Brigade and attached units," said 2nd Lt. Bernadette M. Nicholson from the Petroleum, Oil and Lubricants platoon. "Our tankers are emptied almost as fast as we can fill them."

Transportation is also provided by Charlie Support. The transportation platoon moves equipment, food, fuel and other supplies throughout the Brigade with 5-ton cargo trucks, tractor trucks with trailers and heavy equipment transports.

"The rocky terrain here is very hard on our HETs," said Staff Sgt. Robert L. Ivey. "It's very easy to blow a tire on a truck or trailer."

At times, the drivers must move supplies undercover of night in a blackout drive mode. When transporting valuable fuel or ammunition, this can be a nerve-wracking experience.

"When you are not convoying under blackout drive, you have to be careful not to go too fast," remarked Pvt. 2 Gary Swanson. "The dust can get so heavy that drivers can't see the vehicle in front of them."

Despite these conditions, the soldiers of Charlie Support will continue to drive on, making sure that the Brigade gets resupplied to face the next battle.

Watchful Eye

An Army Reserve Drill Sergeant keeps a watchful eye on mortar trainees during his own annual training session. The 1/414, 104th Div from Salem, Oregon replaced the regular Army personnel at companies C, D and E 4/30th and also the drill sergeants, PAC, TMA, LOG and Battalion Headquarters of the 4/30th.

This training is crucial to the USAR Battalion because in the event of war their drill sergeants and support personnel would be responsible for the training of infantry soldiers. The experience allows the battalion to evaluate its readiness for a wartime mission. There are 154 soldiers from the battalion that were here for training from Aug. 29 to Sept. 12.

SPIRITUAL

Don't give in to "Moral Fatigue"

By Chaplain (Capt.) Pat Hash

We really do not know much else about the people Isaiah is confronting, but one thing is clear, they have been overcome with moral fatigue. The term "moral fatigue" is used to characterize those who see little purpose to life, who feel that nothing is really worthwhile, who drag themselves out of one hour into the next, whose enthusiasm is spent, and who feel that the whole thing called life is nothing but "a tale told by an idiot full of sound and fury, signifying nothing."

The majestic words of Isaiah 40:28-31 are addressed to the Jewish exiles in Babylon, but their echo is heard across the ages by all of us who are overcome with moral fatigue. When the headlines tell of bribery on a global scale by trusted corporation presidents; government agencies violating the Constitution in bold and flagrant ways; a presidential candidate quits because of sexual indiscretion; drugs available to high school students in a minute's notice; pornography staring at us from many places; the national budget burdened with enormous expenditures; America engulfed in a nasty, name-calling war in the Middle East; and when there is a vacuum in moral and spiritual values being filled with all sorts of spine-tingling, star-gazing empty ecstacy, we are left limp.

We understand what Omar the tentmaker meant when he said in his Rubaiyat: "Ah, love! Could you and I with him conspire to grasp this sorry scheme of things entire, would not we shatter it to bits and then remold it nearer to the heart's desire!"

Well, that is one answer to moral fatigue, disgust, surrender and cynical resignation. A better way to respond to moral fatigue is "they who wait for the Lord shall renew their strength, they shall mount up with wings like eagles, they shall run and not be weary, they shall walk and not faint."

You see, God never gets tired and does not faint, ever! We are not God, awe do get tired and we do get faint, what are we to do? In order to pull out of this fatigue, begin by taking on small tasks first equal to your strength, until your strength grows. And it will! Start with small victories and pile them up.

A friend had a stroke and had temporary paralysis in his right leg. A physical therapist working with him had a rough time getting him to respond. He wanted to move his whole leg, right then. She said, "No. Let's start with the big toe. Move it. Get control of that first. Then the whole foot. Then the calf. Then the thigh. One bone at a time." Remember, Ezekiel's vision was converted into a black spiritual that said that those dry bones did not suddenly leap together. The singers remind you that the toe bone connected to the foot bone, and so on.

Next, you are responsible for your own opportunity. Nothing more. So use what you have, gain he ground you can and God will add to your effort.

The parable of the talents was told to show us that one-talent servants are under as heavy an obligation as 10-talent ones to do the best they can with what is available to them. You may not leap from moral fatigue to St. Francis of Assisi. You may have to pass through some unimpressive stages, growing from "one degree of grace to another," one bang-a-bang at a time, but don't give up.

Hold on to those old and well-established principles of morality that have stood the test of time. You may not be living up to them, but keep reaffirming that they belong to you. It is one thing to be lost, it is another to lose your map too! So, however far you may have strayed, keep your principles together.

Finally, take the quick opener. Be ready to seize upon the first chance at moral greatness you see. Life keeps a parade of opportunities moving before us, people who need love, causes that need support, services begging for a volunteer. Don't wait for the very one you had in mind. Flex those moral muscles. Move out at the first flash of insight. Fort Benning needs you, your country needs you, and God needs you.

Chaplains using music as expression of unity

Chaplains Music Group

A unique religious experience is happening at Fort Benning. Three chaplains (Craig Allen, Gordon Miller and Richard Quinn) of vastly different faith traditions are using the medium of improvisational music as both expression of unity and a form of worship.

Conceived by Chaplain (Rabbi) Allen and received enthusiastically at a variety of concert/discussion seminars on post, the objective is simple, "Emphasize and reinforce the military commitment to religious/ethnic pluralism by collectively imitating the divine act of creativity."

What makes this particular type of music appropriate, according to Chaplain Allen, is its dependence on performer communicaton, i.e., effective active listening and spontaneous, yet controlled, response.

"The conscious decision to create rather than destroy is an affirmation of God's presence and purpose in one's life. If man is the ultimate expression of divine creativity, then the creative product of man's mind (art) is an attempt to reconnect with God, the ultimate artist."

The seminar usually begins with a brief introduction relating to the type of music to be heard and a reading of several key words to serve as a point of departure for the discussion (God, man, prayer, speech, revelation, response, etc.) that weaves in and out of the performance.

There may also be some Hebrew chant, some poetry reading or the sound of the shofar (Ram's Horn).

Some of the feedback so far has been along the lines of: "That type of music is sure different than Rock." "It enables me to be alone with my thoughts." "It forces me to think." "You guys sure know how to pay attention to each other." "Although I cannot express it, I know what you are trying to say."

The credentials of the chaplains are impressive, both academically and in terms of experience. Chaplain Allen has a Master's degree in music composition from George Washington University as well as a lot of Detroit inner city jazz experience. He was also on the staff for three years at the Navy school of music in Norfolk.

Chaplain Miller spent many years in New York playing professionally and interacting with a host of firstrate Jazz performers.

Chaplain Quinn also has a degree in music from Southeastern University. His greatest asset is his versatility as he plays percussion, keyboards and a variety of wind instruments.

These three Chaplains, however, bring more than just musical expertise to this project. They are each committed to the concept that there are many paths to God, that the beauty of a garden is in its diversity.

Indeed, it is precisely our ethnic/religious pluralism that is the source of our national strength and unity. By harmonizing together, these three Chaplains feel they can make a statement about tolerance and respect for individual differences.

Invariably, if this attitude of respect exists in the training environment, unit morale is high. If a soldier is made to feel good about himself and his uniqueness, he will be more likely to contribute to the unit that enhances those feelings.

CHAPEL BRIEFS

RICA (Rite of Christian Initiation of Adults)program will meet for the first time on Sept. 28 at 7 p.m. in the upstairs room of the Catholic chapel. Any non-Catholic adult wishing to learn more about the Catholic faith or who is considering conversion to Catholicism is invited to join us on the 28th. For more information, or to register for the program, call Rich and Cathie Wampler at 324-7493 or the Religious Education Center at 545-2771.

The Adult Enrichment Programwill continue this year on Sunday evenings, the first session will be held on Sept. 27 at 7 p.m. in the Religious Education Center. The topic for the evening is A Catholic Faith Inventory. For more information, call Cindy Trax at 698-8125 or Cathie and Rich Wampler at 324-7493. Also, you may call the Religious Education Center at 545-2771.

A Pot Luck Dinner will be held Sept. 20 at 6:30 p.m. at TIC Annex for all Religious Education volunteers and their spouses (CCD and Adult Education). Father Dan O'Connell, pastor of Our Lady of Lourdes parish, will be the guest speaker. Please bring a main dish and a salad or desert to share. Beverages will be provided. Babysitting will be available at the Religious Education Center. Please plan to attend.

The CARE (Continuing Adult Religious Education) Programwill begin on Sept. 20 in the library of White School. This is an adult program held each Sunday during CCD time. Each Sunday, a video will be shown from the extensive resources available in our Religious Education Library. Following the video will be a time for discussion led by a facilitator. Babysitting is available in TIC annex. The topic planned for Sept. 20 is "Will Our Children Have Faith?" by John Westerhoff. This topic will be presented in two parts, continued on Sept. 27. For information, call Sondra Broussard at 687-1518 or the Religious Education Center at 545-2771.

The CCD Program will begin on Sept. 20 from 10 'til 11 a.m. at White School. Please take note of the new CCD schedule which will enable you to attend either the 8:30 or the 11:30 Mass and still participate in CCD.

Sept. 20 has been designated as Catechetical Sunday. There will be a commissioning ceremony for CCD Volunteers (teachers and aides) at the 8:30 a.m. Mass on Sept. 20.

Kickoff Barbeuce for this year's Catholic Youth Program will be held on Sept. 20 at 6 p.m. at 100 Rainbow. All seventh through 12th graders and anyone interested in helping with the program are cordially invited to attend. The program will be outlined, discussed and set in motion. For more information, call 682-8948.

POWs share story of courage and survival of human spirit

By Donna Bolinger-Miles
American Forces Information Service

National POW/MIA Recognition Day is Sept. 18. It's a day set aside to remind people of the pain and suffering that thousands of American prisoners of war endured in all the wars in which the United States participated.

It is also a day established by Congress and proclaimed by the president to call attention to the fact that 2,413 American military men and women and civilians are still missing or unaccounted for in Southeast Asia.

The story of Jose Anzaldua is one shared by prisoners of all America's wars — a story of courage and survival of the human spirit.

Anzaldua was a 19-year old Marine Corps corporal serving as a tactical advisor in South Vietnam when he was captured by the Viet Cong on Jan. 17, 1970.

Like some 142,000 American prisoners of World Wars I and II and the Korean and Vietnam conflicts, capture for Anzaldua didn't mean the end of combat. It represented the beginning of a whole new war — a war for survival.

Initially confined in a small jungle camp in South Vietnam near the Laotian border, Anzaldua fought a daily war against hunger and disease. His diet was restricted to one-half a cup dry rice per day and whatever rodents and insects he could catch. He dropped nearly 100 pounds from his 6-foot 2½-inch frame.

In addition to malnutrition, Anzaldua fought off malaria, dysentery and intestinal worms.

"Our living conditions were nothing short of downright survival," he said. "We had a day-to-day, ongoing battle to survive. Helping each other was the only way to do it. What you couldn't do by yourself, you could do as a group."

Despite the prisoners' efforts to help each other, only 12 of the 26 Americans originally confined in the camp lived.

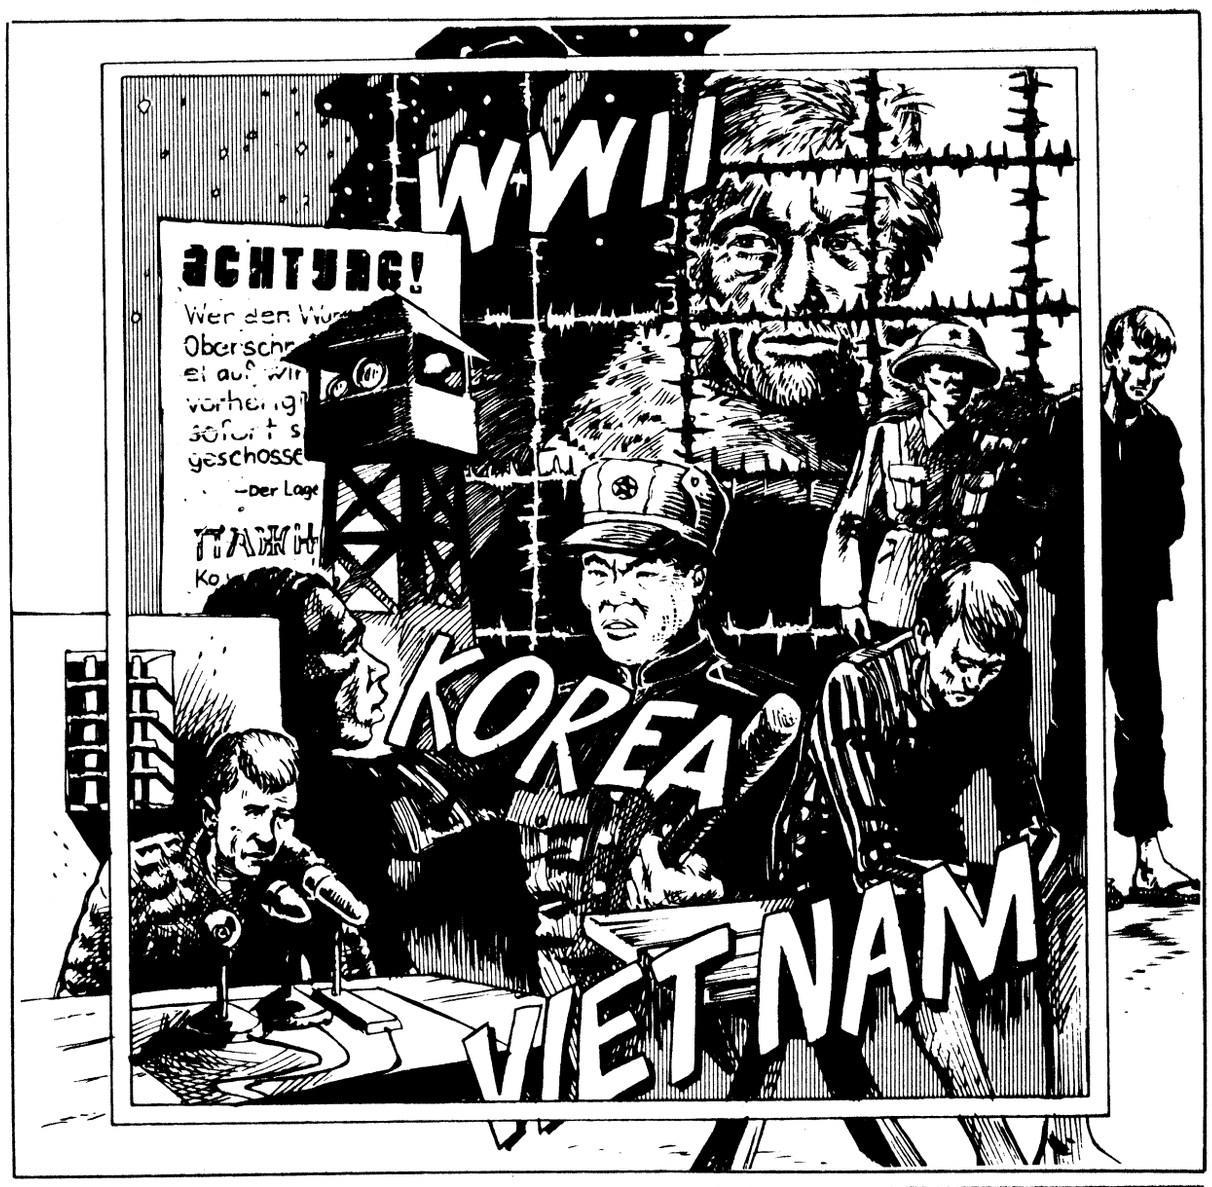
After two years there, Anzaldua and his fellow prisoners were transferred to "Plantation Gardens," a large prison camp outside Hanoi. Starving and sickly, the barefoot prisoners were forced to walk day and night through 900 miles of jungle until they crossed the demilitarized zone into North Vietnam.

At night, Anzaldua carried one of the prisoners who suffered night blindness due to Vitamin A deprivation. When a larger man could walk no further, Anzaldua and another American prisoner helped carry him over the miles.

"There was no doubt in my mind that if one of us couldn't walk, we would have been shot," he said.

When they arrived at Plantation Gardens, the prisoners found better living conditions, but were exposed for the first time to physical abuse. Anzaldua spent a year, off and on, in solitary confinement. When he refused to make anti-war statements, the North Vietnamese repeatedly burned his back with cigarettes.

Anzaldua said three things helped him survive his imprisonment: love for his family, lessons the Marine Corps had taught him about sticking together and the Code of Conduct.



He tried to adhere as strictly as possible to the code and encouraged his fellow prisoners to do so. This caused his captors to single him out for additional punishment and torture.

"I went through some things as a result of trying to live by it, but it was worthwhile because the Code really helped me through it," he said. "Just like the values the Marine Corps had instilled in me, it gave me something to hang onto to get me through."

Anzuldua was freed in March 1973 in the last wave of Operation Homecoming, following the signing of the Paris peace accords. After nine months of convalescent leave, he returned to active-duty and received a battlefield commission for his conduct as a prisoner of war.

Fourteen years later, Anzaldua — now a major who is serving at Camp Pendleton, Calif. — still clings to the principles that guided him through his POW days. He frequently shares his message with military groups.

"You have to have faith in this country and its leadership and the military and its leadership," he said. "The freedoms we have in this country are precious. They're worth protecting and, if necessary, worth suffering for."

Post "Army Ten-Miler" team picked for trip to D.C.

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Fort Benning team has been chosen for the third annual "Army Ten-Miler" (Run The River Bridges) to be held in Washington, D.C. Oct. 11.

Three 10-mile qualifying run were held during August and September to pick the best runners to represent Benning in D.C..

Lloyd McDonald of HHC 2nd Bde clocked the fastest time with 51:20:18 followed by Dan Sullivan of HHC 2-14 with a time of 54:06:89. Tony Thomas of 3-75, with 54:50:39, is third. Nambaye Y. Dasnan of D 2-11, with 55:29:71, took fourth while John Reilly of A 3-11, with 56:27:24, placed fifth. Michael Adams, 12th Co, finished in the sixth spot with a time of 56:34:39.

"With runners like these we'll be the team to beat in D.C.," McDonald exclaimed. "I believe we've assembled some the premiere runners in Georgia."

McDonald, a winner of many local races in Georgia, indicated that as long as the team stays healthy they would be difficult, if not impossible, to beat. "My goal is to go to Washington and win", he said. "With the times we turned in during qualifying there should be no reason why we can't."wu;;

The 7th through 12th place finishers will be placed on an alternate list in case the top finishers are unable to travel to D.C..

The six alternates are:
Accides Colon, A 3-7, 56:51:89
Abdula Bartuia, D 2-11, 58:18:26
Jim Cunningham, MACH, 58:36:57
James E. Evans, 3-75, 58:46:35
Lamarre Russel, E 2—11, 58:53:44
Mark Crowson, HHC 2-10, 59:14:68

Runners having the best time in any one race or an average of any two or three were selected for the team.

"A lot of credit should go to the people in the Sports Office," McDonald said. "These qualifying runs insure that we have the best possible team to go the D.C.."

"Last year we finshed second in D.C. with a team we just put together," McDonald explained. "With the qualifying, this year we have a much better team."

The Community Recreations Division will also provide for transportation, lodging and entree fees for the 6-man team that will travel to Washington.

Runners from across the country and overseas are registering to participate in the third annual Army Ten-Miler. Sponsored by AUSA's George Washington, Fairfax-Lee and Vint Hill Farms chapters and headquarters, Army Recreation Services, this year's Army 10-Miler will be run in honor of the bicentennial of the United States Constitution.

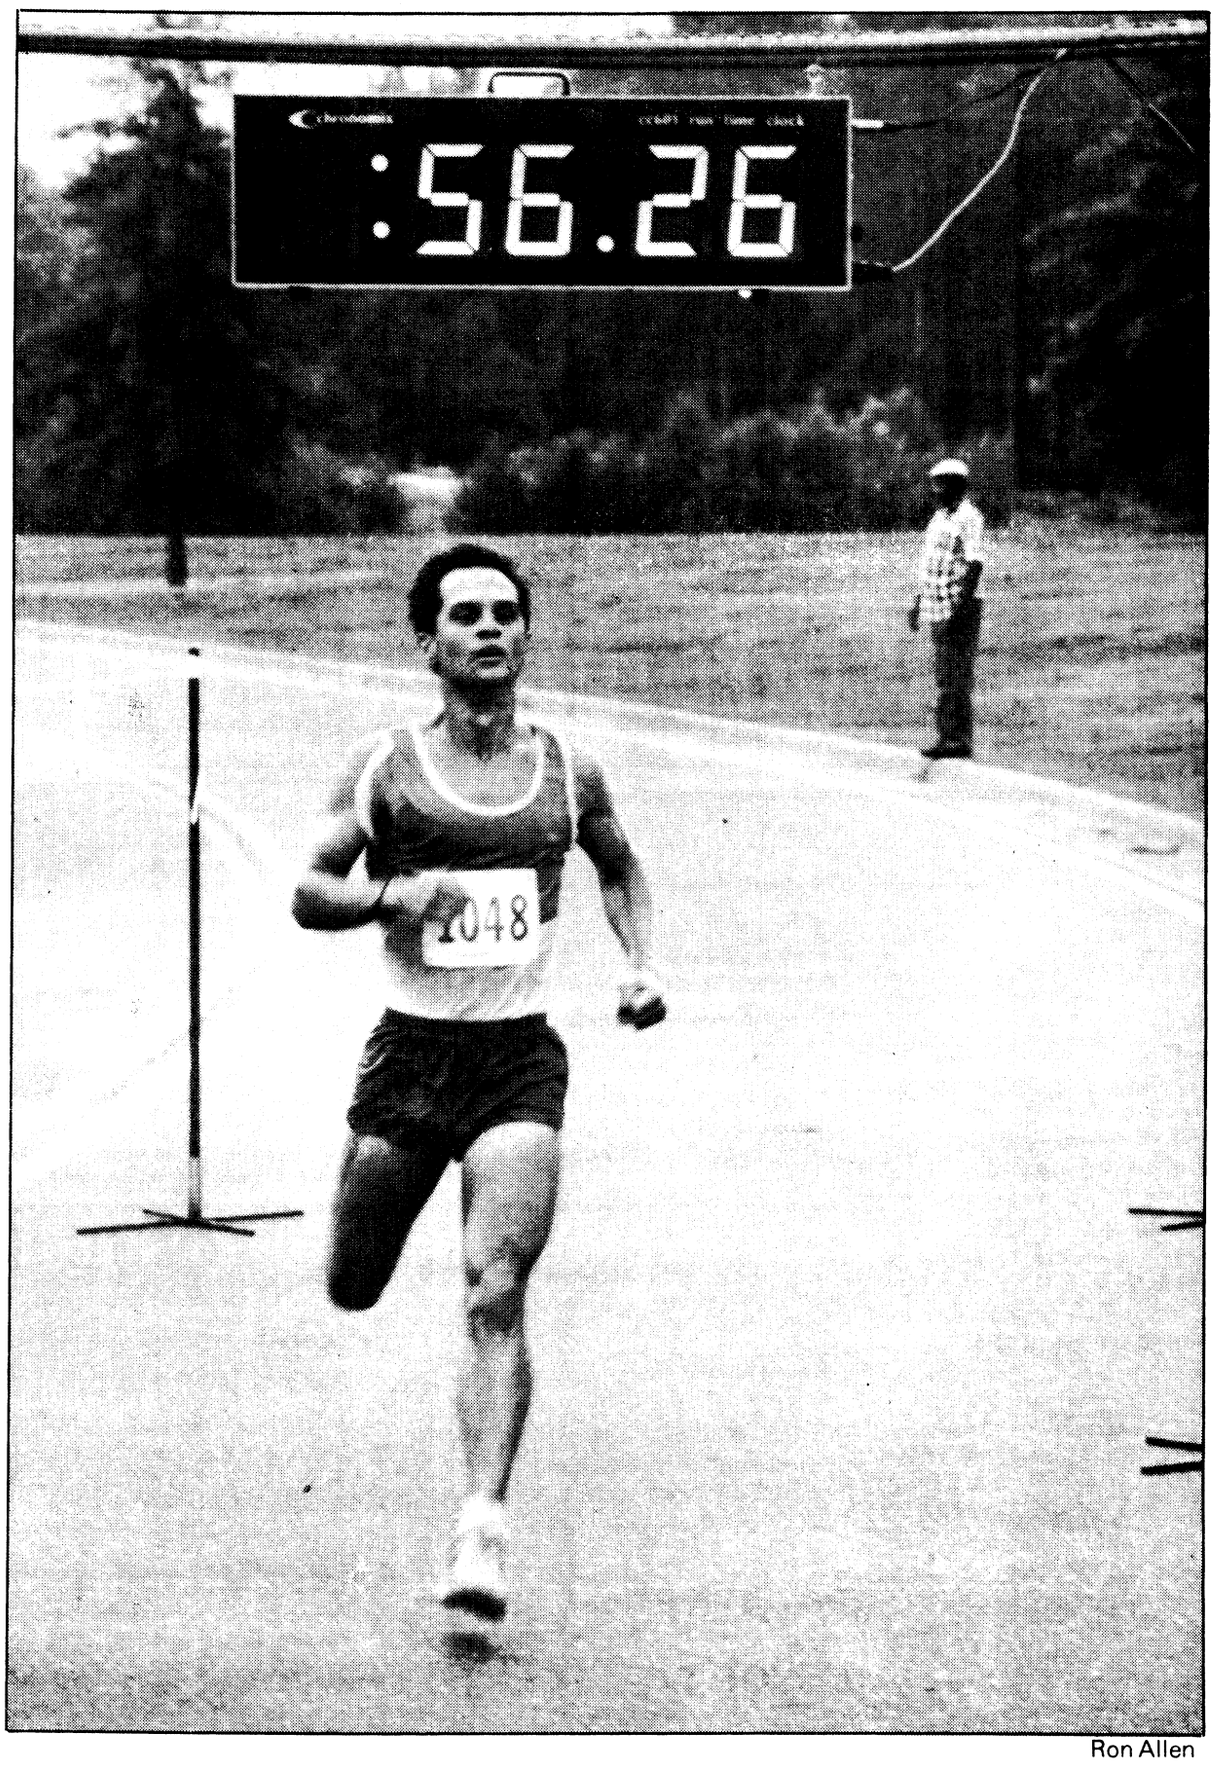
To recognize this special occasion, prior to the race, the Old Guard Fife & Drum Corps, from the third U.S. Infantry (The Old Guard), will provide entertainment for those preparing to run the race and the many spectators who are expected to attend this patriotic running event.

The race will begin at 8 a.m., when a colonial cannon will signal the start of the race at the Pentagon Ceremonial Grounds, where the finish line will also be established. The course is 90-percent flat and the race is accredited by the Athletic Conference (TAC).

This year, a revolving Commander's Cup trophy will be awarded to the top military team from the active-duty military (men and women), reserve components and ROTC race categories. The winning team will also receive a permanent trophy.

Other team categories include: Masters, Open, Government Agencies and Corporate, a new category added this year to encourage AUSA corporate and sustaining member companies to participate.

A Director's Cups will also be awarded to the top male and female overall finishers and Master's Cups will be presented to the top male and female Master's finishers.



Trophies will be presented to the top three finishers, male and female, in each 10 age categories, to the top male and female in the AUSA category and to the winnin teams in the other team categories.

In addition, participation certificates will be given to all finishers along with Army 10-Miler long-sleeved t-shirts to the first 3,000 registrants.

The race's awards ceremony will follow the 10-Miler at 11:30 a.m.

Again this year, the race will be supported by the Military District of Washington, commanded by Maj. Gen. Donald C. Hilbert, the third U.S. Infantry (The Old Guard), commanded by Col. James F. Hennessee and the Washington, D.C. Army National Guard, commanded by Maj. Gen. Calvin G. Franklin.

If you would like to run as an individual write for registration forms to: Headquarters, Army Recreation Services, OSA, 3A146, The Pentagon, Washington, D.C. 20310-6900; or write to: AUSA Membership Services, 2425 Wilson Blvd., Arlington, Va. 22201.

Ron Allen

John Reilly of A 3-11 crosses the finish line with 56:27:24 during qualifying for the Post Team-miler team. Reilly's time was good enough to pull in the number five spot on the team.

U.S. wins in Sweden

By Tommy Pool
USAMU PAO

Propelled by gold medal victories from Fort Benning soldiers, the United States swept the majority of awards during this year's Council on International Sports, Military (CISM) shooting championships.

Held in Skovde, Sweden, from Sept. 1-6, the annual competition attracted more than 300 of the top miltary marksman in the world who represented a total of 22 countries.

Shooting events during the CISM matches featured precision slow-fire as well as military rapid-fire for both rifle and pistol in team and individual competition.

In individual events, Glenn Dubis of the United States Marksmanship Unit (USAMU) here, captured both gold medals during the 300-meter slow and rapid-fire rifle matches, while Erich Buljung won the gold in rapid-fire pistol.

Dubis scored a total of 582 in precision slow-fire to narrowly miss the current CISM record of 584 out of 600. In military rapid-fire, he finished with 572 out of 600 points, while David Erickson, Fort Benning, placed second to win the silver medal at 563.

Erickson, a former USAMU member, is currently assigned as detachment commander, mortar Tng, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry regiment.

In individual pistol action, USAMUs Erich Buljung came back from a slow start in the precision event to win the military rapidfire championship.

Buljung fired an excellent 595 out of 600 points to edge S. Makinen of Finland, who finished second at 593.

The victory marked Buljung's third CISM rapidfire pistol title that he has won in his career. He also holds the current record with a total of 597 set in 1981.

In women's events, USAMUs Sharon Best and Denis Loring were both gold medal winners in pistol and smallbore standard rifle, respectively.

Best scored 575 out of 600 for the pistol title, while Loring finished with 574 out of 600 to narrowly edge teammate Sue Sandusky by one point at 573.

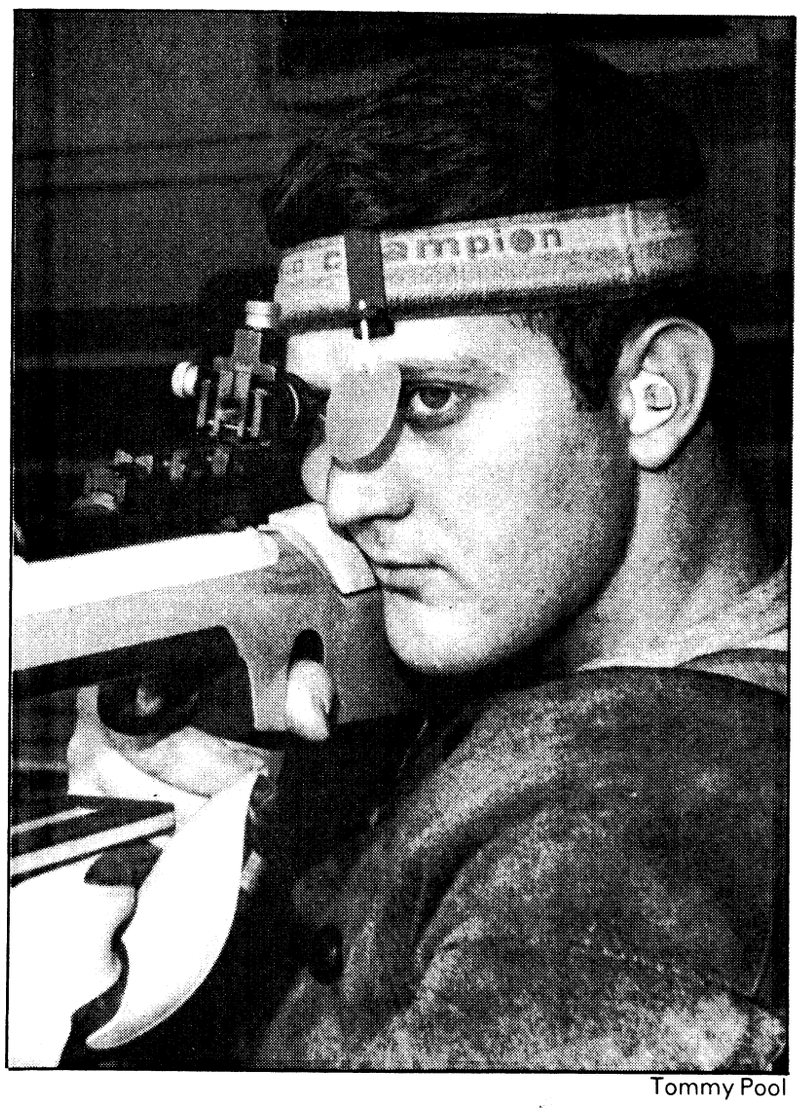
During the CISM team championships, the events were marked by close competition between the United States and Finland throughout the matches.

The U.S. squad dominated the rifle matches with victories in the slowfire and rapidfire categories, while Finland won both pistol events with the U.S. finishing third.

Members of the winning CISM rifle team included Dubis, Robert Aylward, Steve Goff and Kurt Fitz-Randolph, all from USAMU, and Erickson, 1/29th Infantry Regiment, Fort Benning.

Team captain of the rifle squad was Mark Kauder, while Bill Krilling (both of USAMU) served as rifle coach.

USAMU personnel that competed on the U.S. pistol team were Buljung, James Laguana and Ray Arredondo. Other members included Ricardo Rodriquez from the U.S. Marine Corps and Michael Manthey, U.S. Air Force.



The pistol squad was coached by USAMUs Ronnie Boles and Roger Willis.

In the race for best overall CISM nation, the title was won by the United States with a combined rifle and pistol team aggregate score of 9,206.

Finland placed second in the standings with 9,168 points, while Switzerland finished third at 9,123.

The U.S. total was also a new CISM record, raising the old mark by nine points that was set by the U.S. team at last year's championships held in Ota, Portugal.

This year's victory marks the sixth consecutive overall CISM team title win by the United States.

Hunters to phone in and out

DPCA

A hunter call-in/call-out program will replace the physical sign-in/sign-out system of last year. This program will start with the 1987 Fort Benning deer firearms season.

The call-in/call-out telephone lines will be open 4 a.m. to 8 p.m., seven days a week.

To use the call-in/call-out system:

- Obtain the numbered access pass when purchasing the appropriate state and post hunting licenses/permits.
- Hunters may call-in by phone as early as noon the day before they hunt. Hunters can also call in the day of hunting during operational hours.
- The hunter calls the Hunter Control telephone number and the call is answered.
- The hunter gives the access pass number and hunting area requested. The hunter should have a second choice of hunting areas in case the first choice is full.
- The telephone operator will verify the hunter's request and say:

a. "You are signed in to area (requested)" OR
b. "I'm sorry, that area is not available. Do you have a second choice?"

Once verified by the operator, the hunter may proceed directly to the hunting area. PLEASE, be sure you have one numbered access pass on the dash of your vehicle AND the second access pass on your person along with other required hunting documents.

To sign out of a hunting area or change hunting areas, simply call the hunter control telephone number and repeat the steps.

- If you are changing areas, give this information to the operator after you have given your access pass number.
- If you are signing out for the day, once the telephone operator has verified the request, you may proceed directly home.

Hunters are required by regulation USAIC 210-2 to check range clearance maps before hunting in available areas. Be sure you do this, as the telephone operators will NOT furnish INFORMATION on open hunting areas.

Telephone numbers for the Hunter Control will be published at a later date and be posted on range clearance maps located at Harmony Church, Uchee Creek and Building 247.

YA kicks off fall soccer season

USAIC Public Affairs

Last Saturday marked the kick-off of the Fall Soccer Season for the Youth Activities program.

This season there are four separate divisions: Mighty Mites, for 4- and 5- year olds; Grasshoppers, 6-8 years; Termites, 9-11 years and the Junior League, which consists of 12-15 year olds.

The season will last until Nov 8.

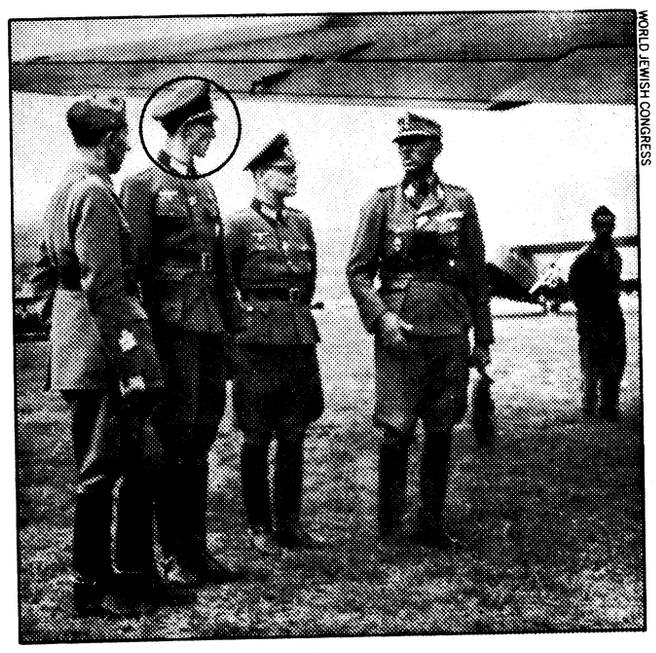
According to Ray Pierce of Youth Activities, the kickoff went "super."

"Soccer benefits the children, especially the smaller ones," he said, "because it is such a fun game and it teaches them sportsmanship."

The children will be playing different teams in their division and the Junior League will be playing on the Columbus circuit.

The mighty mites are unique in that they fall under an instructional league, which teachs them the fundamentals of soccer.

The children play on a scaled-down field and their coaches are used as referees.



In soccer action last weekend, players in all divisions demonstrated their skills in the first game of the season.

Tomorrow, soccer players will again do battle on Gordon Field, adjacent to the new post laundromat across the street from Burger King. Games start at 9 a.m. and are open to the public.

Ground Forward Air Controller directs air strike

Steve Simpson

Showing off the "pearly whites," an A-10 responds to the ground forward air controller (GFAC) to provide close air support to the maneuver forces.

By Clarence Pittman III
197th Infantry Brigade

When the Brigade commander decided to deploy heavy air strikes upon the OPFOR, he contacted a Ground Forward Air Controller, GFAC who made that happen.

During Force-on-Force and Live Fire training, a GFAC was vital in making the Air Force fighter planes an integral part of Task Force 3-7 and Task Force 2-69 combined arms power.

"This is probably the most realistic and demanding close air support training around," said Maj. Jack B. Eatman, liaison officer from Detachment 4, 507th Tactical (Air Control Wing of the 197th Brigade). "It's all based on high threat operations with the OPFOR and friendly manuever assets on the battlefield."

Overall, five GFAC teams were in support at different locations, with two to three individuals part of each team. Once given the decision to deploy the aircraft, the 23rd Tactical Fighter Wing from Englin Air Force Base, La., were contacted. This was the Brigade's attached unit which used the nearby airfield at George Air Force Base in Victorville, Calif.

The GFAC must provide to the pilot as much information as possible about the battlefield area. The realistic scenario had not only OPFOR tanks, BMPs and other ground weapon systems, but also simulated Surface-to-Air Missile sites. This forced the pilots to use terrain masking, green chaff and flares to avoid detection.

Intermingled with this mission, the pilots had to distinguish between friendly and enemy targets when the battle became joined and covered with smoke.

Further complicating the communications with the pilot, the GFAC had to set up Airspace Coordination Areas to separate the A-10s from indirect fire such as artillery.

"The training scenarios I would guess, are the closest thing to fighting a war," said Sgt. Steven W. Nasal, GFAC member of Det 4, 507 TACW. "However, I feel confident that I can do the job if my officer is knocked out of action."

His feeling of confidence is due to six years of GFAC experience and three weeks of training at Air Ground Operations School at Fort Walton Beach, Fla.

"The enlisted members know more about the GFAC communication system than the officers. The main thing that separates us is that the officer is a certified pilot," Sgt. Nasal said.

This overall effort ensured Air Force close air support for Operation "Desert Hammer."

Commo plays major role at NTC

By Daniel Gutierrez
197th Infantry Brigade

There are many simple things in life that are taken for granted. With ease, you pick up the phone to call a friend across the country or around the block. This form of communications plays a major role on the battlefield, as well as in everyday life.

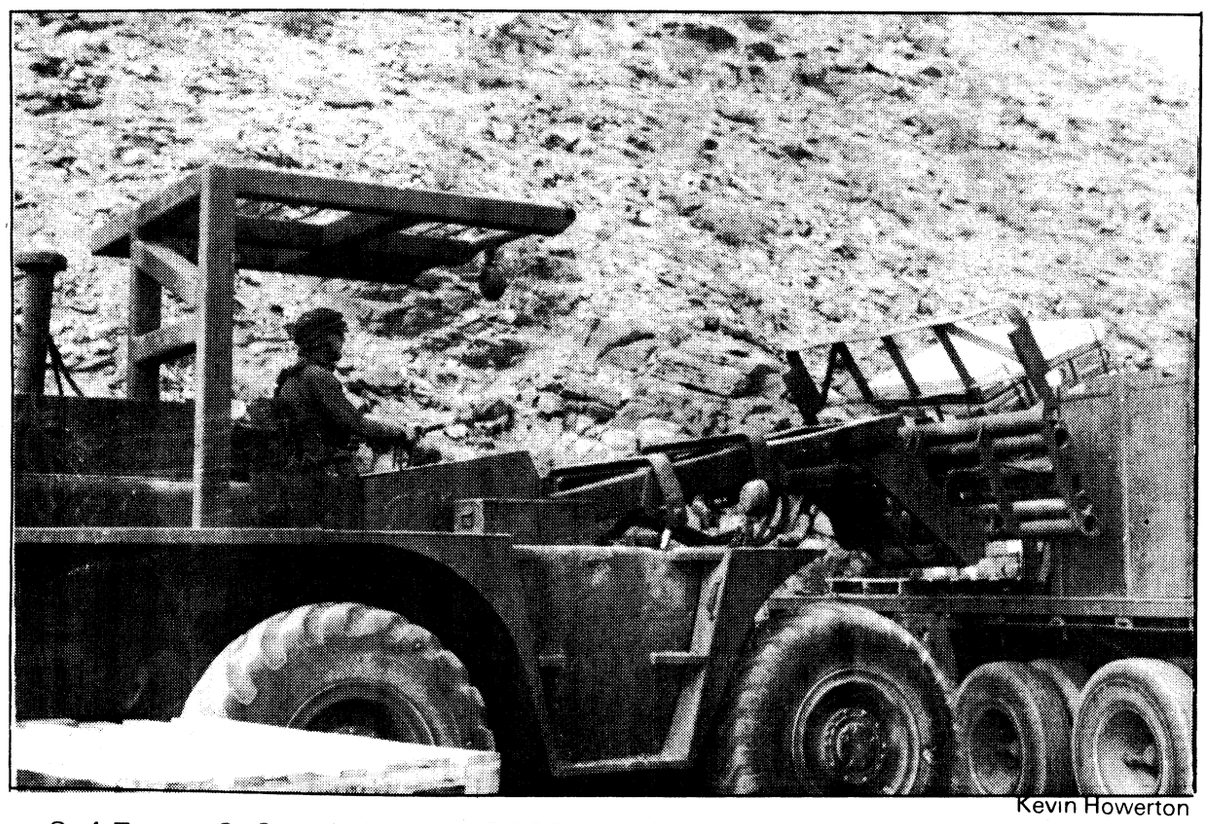
The 197th Infantry Brigade Headquarters Co. has two Commo platoons that support the flow of informaion throughout the Brigade during combat operations.

One platoon supports the Tactical Operations Center (TOC) and the other supports the Brigade Support Area (BSA).

The platoon in the TOC has three basic sections; Radio teletype (RATT), Wire and Maintenance. The RATT section has a message center with teletype machines that receives secured messages. The wire section is responsible for installing a telephone line to the tactical operations center that provides access to commercial phone lines, laying all wire and field phones throughout the Brigade, and relaying transmissions for FM communications. The maintenance section is responsible for the maintenance of all communication equipment.

"The best part of the job is knowing that all Commo is working properly," said Sgt. Lewis Royster of the Commo platoon. "Although the job is always a 24-hour mission."

Working simultaneously with the TOC is the platoon in the BSA. Its basic mission is to ensure all cable connections, switchboards, message centers and multichannels are operating properly within the Brigade.



One of these elements — the switchboard — functions like an AT&T operator, by making the proper connections to the elements without going through the switchboard.

Although it seems like an easy job, it's all very complicated. Communication, and the never-ending flow of information, is vital to the outcome of the battlefield operations. The Commo soldiers who support the 197th Infantry Brigade seem to be well aware of the importance of their mission and continously met the challenge of their duties during operation "Desert Hammer."

George Mingee

Cpl. Donna Gray puts the final wire in place to ensure that the 197th Infantry Brigade can communicate.

Support vital link for success of 197th

By Kevin J. Howerton
197th Infantry Brigade Correspondent

When you have been in the field for a couple of weeks, you start believing that you can do anything by yourself, a real "Schwarzenegger." But, if you run out of food, water, ice, fuel or ammunition in the middle of the Mojave desert, the image quickly dies.

The soldiers in Company C, 197th Support Battalion, see to it that necessary supplies consistently reach the soldiers on the battlefield. During the recent training at Fort Irwin, Calif., this required long hours and hard work in the extremes of the desert climate.

Water is one of the most important items that Charlie Support provided during Operation "Desert Hammer." The water distribution team stored and transported water to the entire Brigade during the desert training. Water is stored in a 50,000 gallon water "blivet," as well as smaller water bags that are loaded onto trucks when transporting the water to distribution points.

Ice, food and other items necessary to the soldier's survivability are handled by these supply soldiers. The goods are hauled to a field distribution point, where they are divided for shipment to the units.

During an average day of desert operations, the Brigade's vehicles use up to 15,000 gallons of diesel fuel and mogas. The distribution of this combat sustinance is also handled by the Company C soldiers.

"We support the entire Brigade and attached units," said 2nd Lt. Bernadette M. Nicholson from the Petroleum, Oil and Lubricants platoon. "Our tankers are emptied almost as fast as we can fill them."

Transportation is also provided by Charlie Support. The transportation platoon moves equipment, food, fuel and other supplies throughout the Brigade with 5-ton cargo trucks, tractor trucks with trailers and heavy equipment transports.

"The rocky terrain here is very hard on our HETs," said Staff Sgt. Robert L. Ivey. "It's very easy to blow a tire on a truck or trailer."

At times, the drivers must move supplies undercover of night in a blackout drive mode. When transporting valuable fuel or ammunition, this can be a nerve-wracking experience.

"When you are not convoying under blackout drive, you have to be careful not to go too fast," remarked Pvt. 2 Gary Swanson. "The dust can get so heavy that drivers can't see the vehicle in front of them."

Despite these conditions, the soldiers of Charlie Support will continue to drive on, making sure that the Brigade gets resupplied to face the next battle.

Watchful Eye

An Army Reserve Drill Sergeant keeps a watchful eye on mortar trainees during his own annual training session. The 1/414, 104th Div from Salem, Oregon replaced the regular Army personnel at companies C, D and E 4/30th and also the drill sergeants, PAC, TMA, LOG and Battalion Headquarters of the 4/30th.

This training is crucial to the USAR Battalion because in the event of war their drill sergeants and support personnel would be responsible for the training of infantry soldiers. The experience allows the battalion to evaluate its readiness for a wartime mission. There are 154 soldiers from the battalion that were here for training from Aug. 29 to Sept. 12.

SPIRITUAL

Don't give in to "Moral Fatigue"

By Chaplain (Capt.) Pat Hash

We really do not know much else about the people Isaiah is confronting, but one thing is clear, they have been overcome with moral fatigue. The term "moral fatigue" is used to characterize those who see little purpose to life, who feel that nothing is really worthwhile, who drag themselves out of one hour into the next, whose enthusiasm is spent, and who feel that the whole thing called life is nothing but "a tale told by an idiot full of sound and fury, signifying nothing."

The majestic words of Isaiah 40:28-31 are addressed to the Jewish exiles in Babylon, but their echo is heard across the ages by all of us who are overcome with moral fatigue. When the headlines tell of bribery on a global scale by trusted corporation presidents; government agencies violating the Constitution in bold and flagrant ways; a presidential candidate quits because of sexual indiscretion; drugs available to high school students in a minute's notice; pornography staring at us from many places; the national budget burdened with enormous expenditures; America engulfed in a nasty, name-calling war in the Middle East; and when there is a vacuum in moral and spiritual values being filled with all sorts of spine-tingling, star-gazing empty ecstacy, we are left limp.

We understand what Omar the tentmaker meant when he said in his Rubaiyat: "Ah, love! Could you and I with him conspire to grasp this sorry scheme of things entire, would not we shatter it to bits and then remold it nearer to the heart's desire!"

Well, that is one answer to moral fatigue, disgust, surrender and cynical resignation. A better way to respond to moral fatigue is "they who wait for the Lord shall renew their strength, they shall mount up with wings like eagles, they shall run and not be weary, they shall walk and not faint."

You see, God never gets tired and does not faint, ever! We are not God, awe do get tired and we do get faint, what are we to do? In order to pull out of this fatigue, begin by taking on small tasks first equal to your strength, until your strength grows. And it will! Start with small victories and pile them up.

A friend had a stroke and had temporary paralysis in his right leg. A physical therapist working with him had a rough time getting him to respond. He wanted to move his whole leg, right then. She said, "No. Let's start with the big toe. Move it. Get control of that first. Then the whole foot. Then the calf. Then the thigh. One bone at a time." Remember, Ezekiel's vision was converted into a black spiritual that said that those dry bones did not suddenly leap together. The singers remind you that the toe bone connected to the foot bone, and so on.

Next, you are responsible for your own opportunity. Nothing more. So use what you have, gain he ground you can and God will add to your effort.

The parable of the talents was told to show us that one-talent servants are under as heavy an obligation as 10-talent ones to do the best they can with what is available to them. You may not leap from moral fatigue to St. Francis of Assisi. You may have to pass through some unimpressive stages, growing from "one degree of grace to another," one bang-a-bang at a time, but don't give up.

Hold on to those old and well-established principles of morality that have stood the test of time. You may not be living up to them, but keep reaffirming that they belong to you. It is one thing to be lost, it is another to lose your map too! So, however far you may have strayed, keep your principles together.

Finally, take the quick opener. Be ready to seize upon the first chance at moral greatness you see. Life keeps a parade of opportunities moving before us, people who need love, causes that need support, services begging for a volunteer. Don't wait for the very one you had in mind. Flex those moral muscles. Move out at the first flash of insight. Fort Benning needs you, your country needs you, and God needs you.

Chaplains using music as expression of unity

Chaplains Music Group

A unique religious experience is happening at Fort Benning. Three chaplains (Craig Allen, Gordon Miller and Richard Quinn) of vastly different faith traditions are using the medium of improvisational music as both expression of unity and a form of worship.

Conceived by Chaplain (Rabbi) Allen and received enthusiastically at a variety of concert/discussion seminars on post, the objective is simple, "Emphasize and reinforce the military commitment to religious/ethnic pluralism by collectively imitating the divine act of creativity."

What makes this particular type of music appropriate, according to Chaplain Allen, is its dependence on performer communicaton, i.e., effective active listening and spontaneous, yet controlled, response.

"The conscious decision to create rather than destroy is an affirmation of God's presence and purpose in one's life. If man is the ultimate expression of divine creativity, then the creative product of man's mind (art) is an attempt to reconnect with God, the ultimate artist."

The seminar usually begins with a brief introduction relating to the type of music to be heard and a reading of several key words to serve as a point of departure for the discussion (God, man, prayer, speech, revelation, response, etc.) that weaves in and out of the performance.

There may also be some Hebrew chant, some poetry reading or the sound of the shofar (Ram's Horn).

Some of the feedback so far has been along the lines of: "That type of music is sure different than Rock." "It enables me to be alone with my thoughts." "It forces me to think." "You guys sure know how to pay attention to each other." "Although I cannot express it, I know what you are trying to say."

The credentials of the chaplains are impressive, both academically and in terms of experience. Chaplain Allen has a Master's degree in music composition from George Washington University as well as a lot of Detroit inner city jazz experience. He was also on the staff for three years at the Navy school of music in Norfolk.

Chaplain Miller spent many years in New York playing professionally and interacting with a host of firstrate Jazz performers.

Chaplain Quinn also has a degree in music from Southeastern University. His greatest asset is his versatility as he plays percussion, keyboards and a variety of wind instruments.

These three Chaplains, however, bring more than just musical expertise to this project. They are each committed to the concept that there are many paths to God, that the beauty of a garden is in its diversity.

Indeed, it is precisely our ethnic/religious pluralism that is the source of our national strength and unity. By harmonizing together, these three Chaplains feel they can make a statement about tolerance and respect for individual differences.

Invariably, if this attitude of respect exists in the training environment, unit morale is high. If a soldier is made to feel good about himself and his uniqueness, he will be more likely to contribute to the unit that enhances those feelings.

CHAPEL BRIEFS

RICA (Rite of Christian Initiation of Adults)program will meet for the first time on Sept. 28 at 7 p.m. in the upstairs room of the Catholic chapel. Any non-Catholic adult wishing to learn more about the Catholic faith or who is considering conversion to Catholicism is invited to join us on the 28th. For more information, or to register for the program, call Rich and Cathie Wampler at 324-7493 or the Religious Education Center at 545-2771.

The Adult Enrichment Program-will continue this year on Sunday evenings, the first session will be held on Sept. 27 at 7 p.m. in the Religious Education Center. The topic for the evening is A Catholic Faith Inventory. For more information, call Cindy Trax at 698-8125 or Cathie and Rich Wampler at 324-7493. Also, you may call the Religious Education Center at 545-2771.

A Pot Luck Dinner will be held Sept. 20 at 6:30 p.m. at TIC Annex for all Religious Education volunteers and their spouses (CCD and Adult Education). Father Dan O'Connell, pastor of Our Lady of Lourdes parish, will be the guest speaker. Please bring a main dish and a salad or desert to share. Beverages will be provided. Babysitting will be available at the Religious Education Center. Please plan to attend.

The CARE (Continuing Adult Religious Education) Program-will begin on Sept. 20 in the library of White School. This is an adult program held each Sunday during CCD time. Each Sunday, a video will be shown from the extensive resources available in our Religious Education Library. Following the video will be a time for discussion led by a facilitator. Babysitting is available in TIC annex. The topic planned for Sept. 20 is "Will Our Children Have Faith?" by John Westerhoff. This topic will be presented in two parts, continued on Sept. 27. For information, call Sondra Broussard at 687-1518 or the Religious Education Center at 545-2771.

The CCD Program will begin on Sept. 20 from 10 'til 11 a.m. at White School. Please take note of the new CCD schedule which will enable you to attend either the 8:30 or the 11:30 Mass and still participate in CCD.

Sept. 20 has been designated as Catechetical Sunday. There will be a commissioning ceremony for CCD Volunteers (teachers and aides) at the 8:30 a.m. Mass on Sept. 20.

Kickoff Barbeuce for this year's Catholic Youth Program will be held on Sept. 20 at 6 p.m. at 100 Rainbow. All seventh through 12th graders and anyone interested in helping with the program are cordially invited to attend. The program will be outlined, discussed and set in motion. For more information, call 682-8948.

POWs share story of courage and survival of human spirit

By Donna Bolinger-Miles
American Forces Information Service

National POW/MIA Recognition Day is Sept. 18. It's a day set aside to remind people of the pain and suffering that thousands of American prisoners of war endured in all the wars in which the United States participated.

It is also a day established by Congress and proclaimed by the president to call attention to the fact that 2,413 American military men and women and civilians are still missing or unaccounted for in Southeast Asia.

The story of Jose Anzaldua is one shared by prisoners of all America's wars — a story of courage and survival of the human spirit.

Anzaldua was a 19-year old Marine Corps corporal serving as a tactical advisor in South Vietnam when he was captured by the Viet Cong on Jan. 17, 1970.

Like some 142,000 American prisoners of World Wars I and II and the Korean and Vietnam conflicts, capture for Anzaldua didn't mean the end of combat. It represented the beginning of a whole new war — a war for survival.

Initially confined in a small jungle camp in South Vietnam near the Laotian border, Anzaldua fought a daily war against hunger and disease. His diet was restricted to one-half a cup dry rice per day and whatever rodents and insects he could catch. He dropped nearly 100 pounds from his 6-foot 2½-inch frame.

In addition to malnutrition, Anzaldua fought off malaria, dysentery and intestinal worms.

"Our living conditions were nothing short of downright survival," he said. "We had a day-to-day, ongoing battle to survive. Helping each other was the only way to do it. What you couldn't do by yourself, you could do as a group."

Despite the prisoners' efforts to help each other, only 12 of the 26 Americans originally confined in the camp lived.

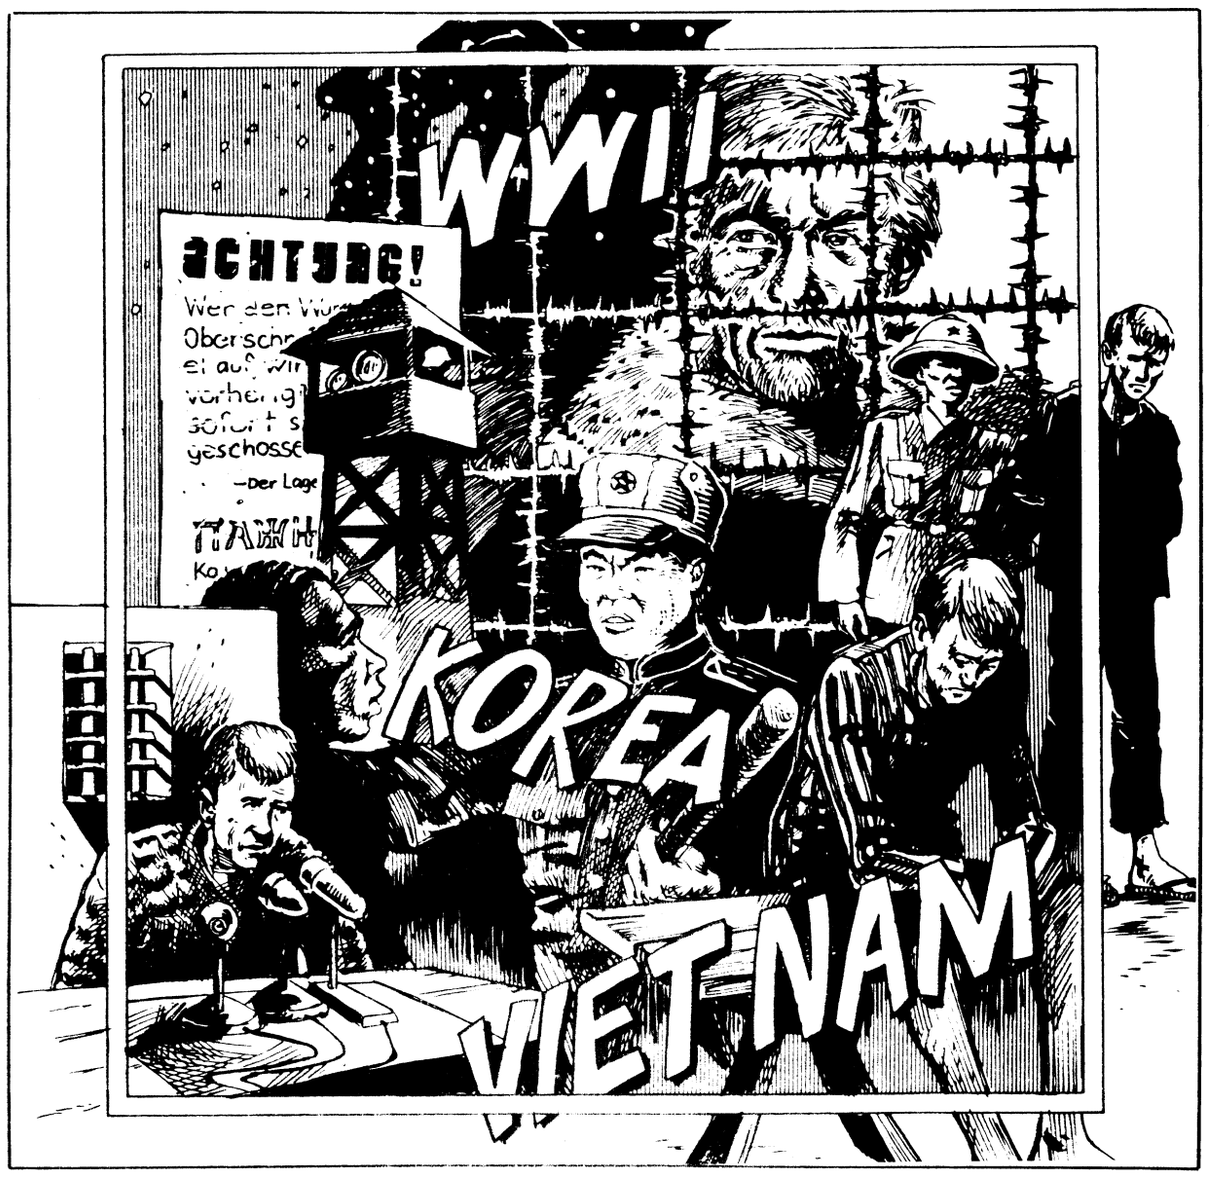
After two years there, Anzaldua and his fellow prisoners were transferred to "Plantation Gardens," a large prison camp outside Hanoi. Starving and sickly, the barefoot prisoners were forced to walk day and night through 900 miles of jungle until they crossed the demilitarized zone into North Vietnam.

At night, Anzaldua carried one of the prisoners who suffered night blindness due to Vitamin A deprivation. When a larger man could walk no further, Anzaldua and another American prisoner helped carry him over the miles.

"There was no doubt in my mind that if one of us couldn't walk, we would have been shot," he said.

When they arrived at Plantation Gardens, the prisoners found better living conditions, but were exposed for the first time to physical abuse. Anzaldua spent a year, off and on, in solitary confinement. When he refused to make anti-war statements, the North Vietnamese repeatedly burned his back with cigarettes.

Anzaldua said three things helped him survive his imprisonment: love for his family, lessons the Marine Corps had taught him about sticking together and the Code of Conduct.



He tried to adhere as strictly as possible to the code and encouraged his fellow prisoners to do so. This caused his captors to single him out for additional punishment and torture.

"I went through some things as a result of trying to live by it, but it was worthwhile because the Code really helped me through it," he said. "Just like the values the Marine Corps had instilled in me, it gave me something to hang onto to get me through."

Anzuldua was freed in March 1973 in the last wave of Operation Homecoming, following the signing of the Paris peace accords. After nine months of convalescent leave, he returned to active-duty and received a battlefield commission for his conduct as a prisoner of war.

Fourteen years later, Anzaldua — now a major who is serving at Camp Pendleton, Calif. — still clings to the principles that guided him through his POW days. He frequently shares his message with military groups.

"You have to have faith in this country and its leadership and the military and its leadership," he said. "The freedoms we have in this country are precious. They're worth protecting and, if necessary, worth suffering for."

Post "Army Ten-Miler" team picked for trip to D.C.

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Fort Benning team has been chosen for the third annual "Army Ten-Miler" (Run The River Bridges) to be held in Washington, D.C. Oct. 11.

Three 10-mile qualifying run were held during August and September to pick the best runners to represent Benning in D.C..

Lloyd McDonald of HHC 2nd Bde clocked the fastest time with 51:20:18 followed by Dan Sullivan of HHC 2-14 with a time of 54:06:89. Tony Thomas of 3-75, with 54:50:39, is third. Nambaye Y. Dasnan of D 2-11, with 55:29:71, took fourth while John Reilly of A 3-11, with 56:27:24, placed fifth. Michael Adams, 12th Co, finished in the sixth spot with a time of 56:34:39.

"With runners like these we'll be the team to beat in D.C.," McDonald exclaimed. "I believe we've assembled some the premiere runners in Georgia."

McDonald, a winner of many local races in Georgia, indicated that as long as the team stays healthy they would be difficult, if not impossible, to beat. "My goal is to go to Washington and win", he said. "With the times we turned in during qualifying there should be no reason why we can't."wu;;

The 7th through 12th place finishers will be placed on an alternate list in case the top finishers are unable to travel to D.C..

The six alternates are:
Accides Colon, A 3-7, 56:51:89
Abdula Bartuia, D 2-11, 58:18:26
Jim Cunningham, MACH, 58:36:57
James E. Evans, 3-75, 58:46:35
Lamarre Russel, E 2—11, 58:53:44
Mark Crowson, HHC 2-10, 59:14:68

Runners having the best time in any one race or an average of any two or three were selected for the team.

"A lot of credit should go to the people in the Sports Office," McDonald said. "These qualifying runs insure that we have the best possible team to go the D.C.."

"Last year we finshed second in D.C. with a team we just put together," McDonald explained. "With the qualifying, this year we have a much better team."

The Community Recreations Division will also provide for transportation, lodging and entree fees for the 6-man team that will travel to Washington.

Runners from across the country and overseas are registering to participate in the third annual Army Ten-Miler. Sponsored by AUSA's George Washington, Fairfax-Lee and Vint Hill Farms chapters and headquarters, Army Recreation Services, this year's Army 10-Miler will be run in honor of the bicentennial of the United States Constitution.

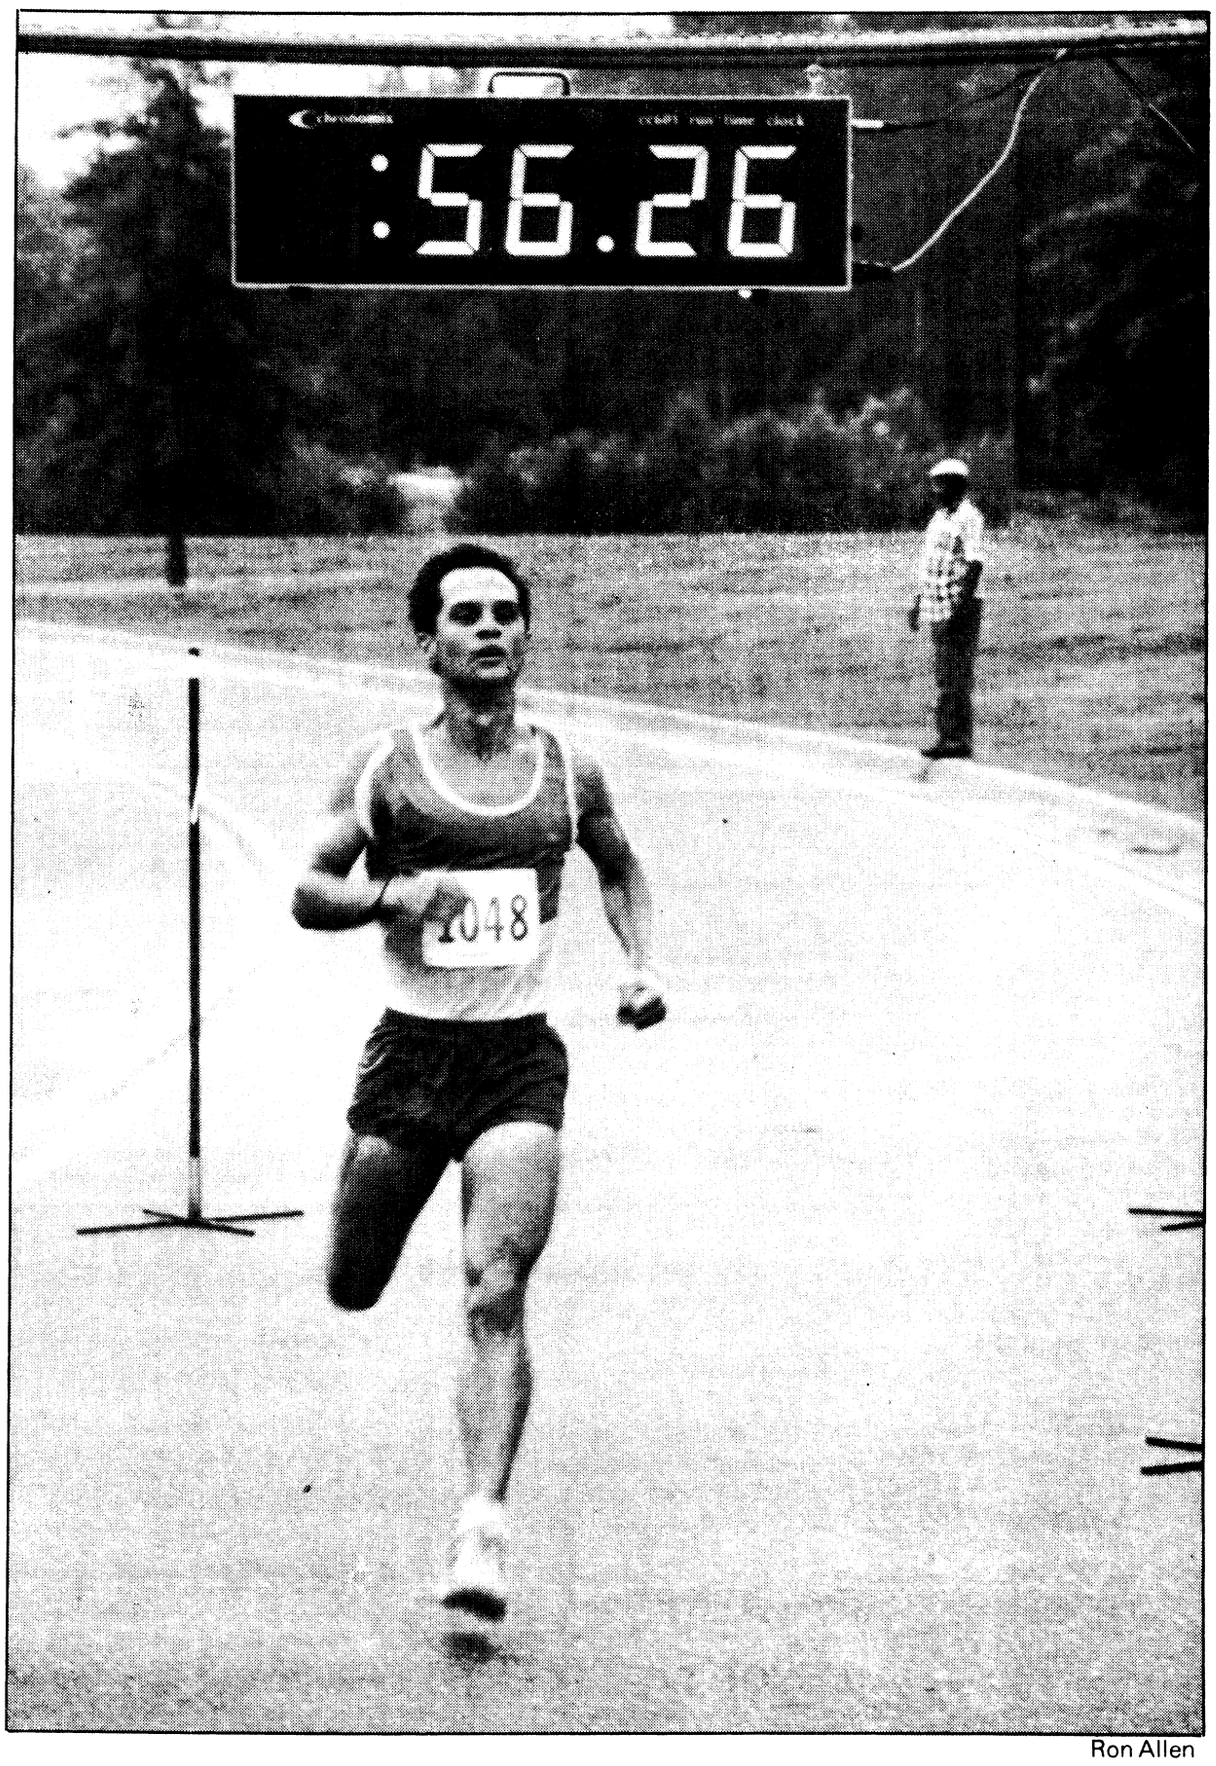
To recognize this special occasion, prior to the race, the Old Guard Fife & Drum Corps, from the third U.S. Infantry (The Old Guard), will provide entertainment for those preparing to run the race and the many spectators who are expected to attend this patriotic running event.

The race will begin at 8 a.m., when a colonial cannon will signal the start of the race at the Pentagon Ceremonial Grounds, where the finish line will also be established. The course is 90-percent flat and the race is accredited by the Athletic Conference (TAC).

This year, a revolving Commander's Cup trophy will be awarded to the top military team from the active-duty military (men and women), reserve components and ROTC race categories. The winning team will also receive a permanent trophy.

Other team categories include: Masters, Open, Government Agencies and Corporate, a new category added this year to encourage AUSA corporate and sustaining member companies to participate.

A Director's Cups will also be awarded to the top male and female overall finishers and Master's Cups will be presented to the top male and female Master's finishers.



Trophies will be presented to the top three finishers, male and female, in each 10 age categories, to the top male and female in the AUSA category and to the winnin teams in the other team categories.

In addition, participation certificates will be given to all finishers along with Army 10-Miler long-sleeved t-shirts to the first 3,000 registrants.

The race's awards ceremony will follow the 10-Miler at 11:30 a.m.

Again this year, the race will be supported by the Military District of Washington, commanded by Maj. Gen. Donald C. Hilbert, the third U.S. Infantry (The Old Guard), commanded by Col. James F. Hennessee and the Washington, D.C. Army National Guard, commanded by Maj. Gen. Calvin G. Franklin.

If you would like to run as an individual write for registration forms to: Headquarters, Army Recreation Services, OSA, 3A146, The Pentagon, Washington, D.C. 20310-6900; or write to: AUSA Membership Services, 2425 Wilson Blvd., Arlington, Va. 22201.

Ron Allen

John Reilly of A 3-11 crosses the finish line with 56:27:24 during qualifying for the Post Team-miler team. Reilly's time was good enough to pull in the number five spot on the team.

U.S. wins in Sweden

By Tommy Pool
USAMU PAO

Propelled by gold medal victories from Fort Benning soldiers, the United States swept the majority of awards during this year's Council on International Sports, Military (CISM) shooting championships.

Held in Skovde, Sweden, from Sept. 1-6, the annual competition attracted more than 300 of the top miltary marksman in the world who represented a total of 22 countries.

Shooting events during the CISM matches featured precision slow-fire as well as military rapid-fire for both rifle and pistol in team and individual competition.

In individual events, Glenn Dubis of the United States Marksmanship Unit (USAMU) here, captured both gold medals during the 300-meter slow and rapid-fire rifle matches, while Erich Buljung won the gold in rapid-fire pistol.

Dubis scored a total of 582 in precision slow-fire to narrowly miss the current CISM record of 584 out of 600. In military rapid-fire, he finished with 572 out of 600 points, while David Erickson, Fort Benning, placed second to win the silver medal at 563.

Erickson, a former USAMU member, is currently assigned as detachment commander, mortar Tng, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry regiment.

In individual pistol action, USAMUs Erich Buljung came back from a slow start in the precision event to win the military rapidfire championship.

Buljung fired an excellent 595 out of 600 points to edge S. Makinen of Finland, who finished second at 593.

The victory marked Buljung's third CISM rapidfire pistol title that he has won in his career. He also holds the current record with a total of 597 set in 1981.

In women's events, USAMUs Sharon Best and Denis Loring were both gold medal winners in pistol and smallbore standard rifle, respectively.

Best scored 575 out of 600 for the pistol title, while Loring finished with 574 out of 600 to narrowly edge teammate Sue Sandusky by one point at 573.

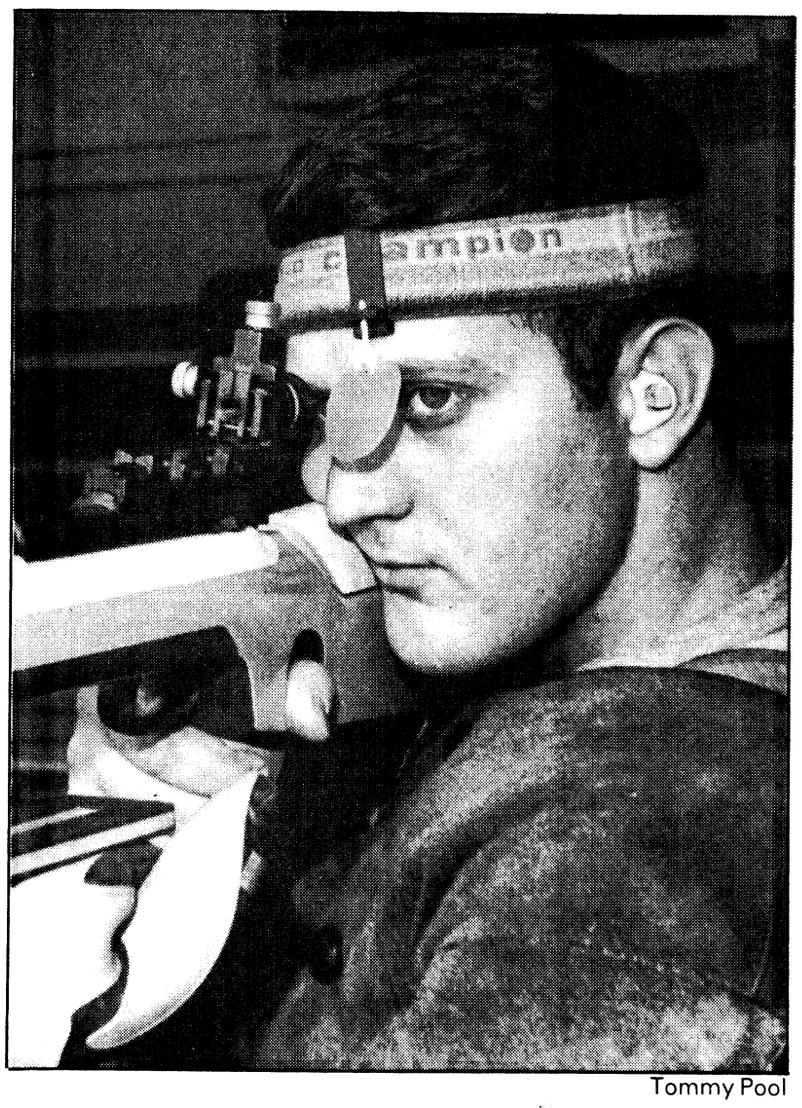
During the CISM team championships, the events were marked by close competition between the United States and Finland throughout the matches.

The U.S. squad dominated the rifle matches with victories in the slowfire and rapidfire categories, while Finland won both pistol events with the U.S. finishing third.

Members of the winning CISM rifle team included Dubis, Robert Aylward, Steve Goff and Kurt Fitz-Randolph, all from USAMU, and Erickson, 1/29th Infantry Regiment, Fort Benning.

Team captain of the rifle squad was Mark Kauder, while Bill Krilling (both of USAMU) served as rifle coach.

USAMU personnel that competed on the U.S. pistol team were Buljung, James Laguana and Ray Arredondo. Other members included Ricardo Rodriquez from the U.S. Marine Corps and Michael Manthey, U.S. Air Force.



The pistol squad was coached by USAMUs Ronnie Boles and Roger Willis.

In the race for best overall CISM nation, the title was won by the United States with a combined rifle and pistol team aggregate score of 9,206.

Finland placed second in the standings with 9,168 points, while Switzerland finished third at 9,123.

The U.S. total was also a new CISM record, raising the old mark by nine points that was set by the U.S. team at last year's championships held in Ota, Portugal.

This year's victory marks the sixth consecutive overall CISM team title win by the United States.

Hunters to phone in and out

DPCA

A hunter call-in/call-out program will replace the physical sign-in/sign-out system of last year. This program will start with the 1987 Fort Benning deer firearms season.

The call-in/call-out telephone lines will be open 4 a.m. to 8 p.m., seven days a week.

To use the call-in/call-out system:

- Obtain the numbered access pass when purchasing the appropriate state and post hunting licenses/permits.
- Hunters may call-in by phone as early as noon the day before they hunt. Hunters can also call in the day of hunting during operational hours.
- The hunter calls the Hunter Control telephone number and the call is answered.
- The hunter gives the access pass number and hunting area requested. The hunter should have a second choice of hunting areas in case the first choice is full.
- The telephone operator will verify the hunter's request and say:

a. "You are signed in to area (requested)" OR
b. "I'm sorry, that area is not available. Do you have a second choice?"

Once verified by the operator, the hunter may proceed directly to the hunting area. PLEASE, be sure you have one numbered access pass on the dash of your vehicle AND the second access pass on your person along with other required hunting documents.

To sign out of a hunting area or change hunting areas, simply call the hunter control telephone number and repeat the steps.

- If you are changing areas, give this information to the operator after you have given your access pass number.
- If you are signing out for the day, once the telephone operator has verified the request, you may proceed directly home.

Hunters are required by regulation USAIC 210-2 to check range clearance maps before hunting in available areas. Be sure you do this, as the telephone operators will NOT furnish INFORMATION on open hunting areas.

Telephone numbers for the Hunter Control will be published at a later date and be posted on range clearance maps located at Harmony Church, Uchee Creek and Building 247.

YA kicks off fall soccer season

USAIC Public Affairs

Last Saturday marked the kick-off of the Fall Soccer Season for the Youth Activities program.

This season there are four separate divisions: Mighty Mites, for 4- and 5- year olds; Grasshoppers, 6-8 years; Termites, 9-11 years and the Junior League, which consists of 12-15 year olds.

The season will last until Nov 8.

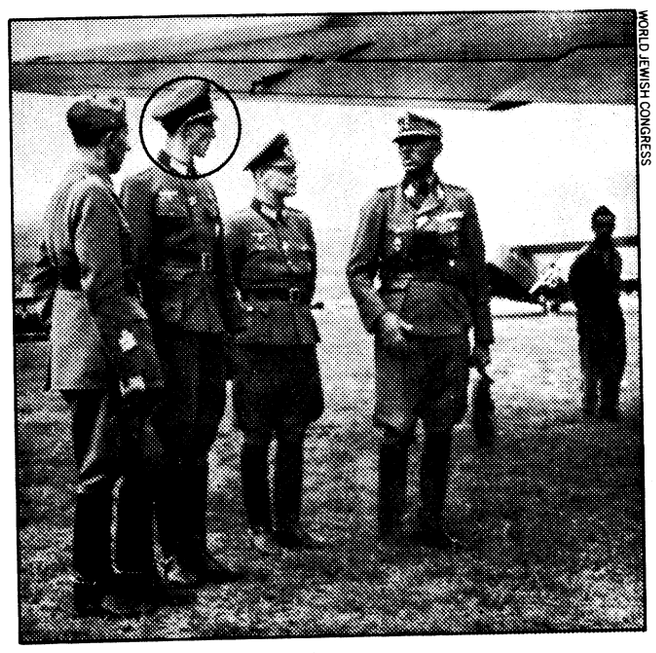
According to Ray Pierce of Youth Activities, the kickoff went "super."

"Soccer benefits the children, especially the smaller ones," he said, "because it is such a fun game and it teaches them sportsmanship."

The children will be playing different teams in their division and the Junior League will be playing on the Columbus circuit.

The mighty mites are unique in that they fall under an instructional league, which teachs them the fundamentals of soccer.

The children play on a scaled-down field and their coaches are used as referees.



In soccer action last weekend, players in all divisions demonstrated their skills in the first game of the season.

Tomorrow, soccer players will again do battle on Gordon Field, adjacent to the new post laundromat across the street from Burger King. Games start at 9 a.m. and are open to the public.

Soldiers must wait an extra day for end-of-month pay

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Starting next week, military families will have to wait another day before seeing their paychecks, as the Army switches over to a new pay schedule.

Starting with the September end-of-month pay period, soldiers will get paid on the first day of the following month, rather than the last day of the pay-period month.

Instead of getting paid Sept. 30, soldiers will get their checks on Oct. 1.

The change, required by Congress, affects all active-duty service members in the Department of Defense.

Soldiers with mortgages, car payments or other bills due at the end of the month need to notify their financial institutions now to adjust these payments.

The U.S. Army Finance and Accounting Center at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind., developed the Army's new payday schedule. The following dates apply for paydays for the first 14 months after the September change.

Month	Payday
September 1987	Oct. 1
October	Oct. 30
November	Dec. 1
December	Dec.31
January 1988	Feb. 1
February	March 1
March	April 1
April	April 29
May	June 1
June	July 1
July	Aug. 1
August	Sept. 1
September	Oct. 3
October	Nov. 1

The military services are still authorized to advance payday as much as three days when the first of the month falls on a weekend or holiday.

TRADOC gets new CSM

TRADOC Public Affairs

FORT MONROE, Va. — Command Sgt. Maj. Henry J. Goodwin will become the next command sergeant major of the U.S. Army Training and Doctrine Command.

Goodwin is currently the command sergeant major for V-Corps Artillery in Europe. He will assume his new duties in October. Goodwin succeeds Command Sgt. Maj. William J.H. Peters, who retired in August.

Born in South Carolina, Goodwin entered the Army in June 1959. He held a variety of previous command sergeant major assignments to include post CSM at Fort Jackson, S.C.; CSM of the 6th Battalion, 37th Field Artillery, 2nd Infantry Division, Korea; and CSM of Headquarters and Headquarters Battalion, Division Artillery, Hunter Army-Airfield, Ga.

Goodwin served a tour in Vietnam as a first sergeant for the 1st Battalion, 7th Field Artillery, 1st Infantry Division. His unit saw four campaigns, including the 1968 TET Counteroffensive.

Goodwin's military education includes drill sergeant school, the Vietnamese Language Course, the Senior Non-commissioned Officer Course and the Sergeants Major Academy. Goodwin also possesses a bachelor's in science degree in business administration.

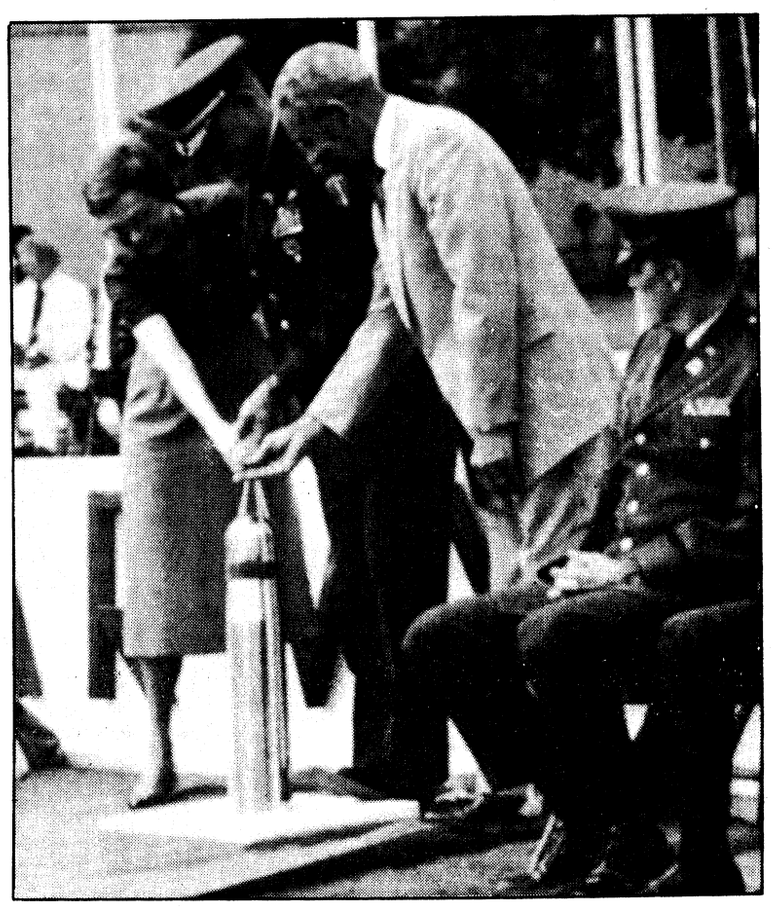
Parades, ceremonies mark post celebration of U.S. Bicentennial

USAIC Public Affairs Office



Everybody got in on the act last week, as Fort Benning celebrated the Bicentennial of the Constitution.

Children in post schools studied special lessons about the Constitution. Students at McBride School took part in a bicycle parade, while the kids at Patch marched in a parade and launched balloons to celebrate the special birthday.

The activities were designed to help children learn how important the document is to our country.

Army announces plan to correct defect in face mask canisters

Army News Service

WASHINGTON (ARNEWS) — A canister used as a filter in the M-25 tanker and M-24 aviation protective masks that was found to be leaking carbon particles and catalytic chemicals is being corrected, say Army officials.

One of the catalytic chemicals is hexavalent chromium, which is known to cause lung cancer under certain conditions of prolonged exposure.

Actions have been taken to provide additional filter protection in existing canister stocks and to redesign the canister for future production.

"We will ensure that our soldiers will have protective masks that meet or exceed even the most stringent industrial standards," said Under Secretary of the Army James R. Ambrose. "The typical soldier uses his mask intermittently for an average of 60 hours per year or less," Ambrose added. "We know of no instances where leaking masks were used even for this length of time."

Typically, the canister was replaced soon after leakage was observed (by carbon dust obscuration of the face plate of the mask). The Army considers these exposure levels to be much lower than those known from industrial experience to produce a detectable incidence rate of cancer. We think that the exposure of the soldier is insignificantly small in comparison to the background cancer incidence we all live with in our normal lives."

Hexavalent chromium, a common agent in industrial and military protective masks, is essential to the filtration process for the blood agents, hydrogen cyanide and cyanogen chloride.

"However, its controlled use in a protective mask in these small quantities does not pose a risk," according to Surgeon General of the Army Lt. Gen. Quinn Becker.

Field evaluations by the U.S. Army Materiel Command in conjunction with the Surgeon General of the Army isolated the problem, and provided both an interim and permanent solution.

The filter insert interim fix was initially distributed to the field in May 1985. Written guidance was issued Army-wide to reinforce the use of the filter insert with the canister, according to Maj. Leonard A. Izzo in the chemical division of the Army's Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Operations and Plans.

Ambrose stressed that, "We have recently reaffirmed to the field that the M-10A1 canister should not be used without the filter insert, all depot inventories of the canisters will be reworked to install the filter inserts, and a redesigned canister will be in production next year."

Tests of the field fixed canister were conducted and compared with industrial standards. To allay concerns that the Army testing may not have been statistically sufficient, Ambrose has directed additional testing which includes:

- Retrieval and testing of an adequate sample of masks currently distributed to the field.
- Tests of an adequate sample of depot storage stocks, with and without the filter insert.
- Further tests of the redesigned M-10A1 canister.
- Detailed analysis of the chemical composition of carbon dust emissions to establish chromium content and valence state.

"We fully expect these tests to confirm the previous very low levels of exposure projected from earlier test results," said Ambrose.

He promised that the test results will be made public as soon as they become available.

The Environmental Protection Agency and the National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health have conducted extensive assessments of cancer in chromium workers. These assessments indicate an association to lung cancer. The time interval for development for lung cancer from this cause is estimated to be 15 to 20 years.

The Occupational Safety and Health Administration has established a ceiling of 0.1 milligram per cubic meter of air as its exposure limit. The American Conference of Governmental Industrial Hygienists has proposed a more restrictive level of 0.05 milligram per cubic meter of air based on an assumed exposure of 40 hours per week, 50 weeks a year for a work-life up to 40 years. An even more stringent exposure level is being proposed by NIOSH.

Tests of the canister with the filter sleeve installed show emission levels well below the proposed ACGIH level, said Ambrose. Test data on the redesigned canister indicates that the Army is meeting the NIOSH criteria.

Approximately 1.2 million of the M-10A1 canisters, which did not exhibit observable leakage, were shipped to Army activities worldwide. An interim change to TM 3-4240-280-23&P, dated May 17, 1985, directed a modification to the canister prior to its use.

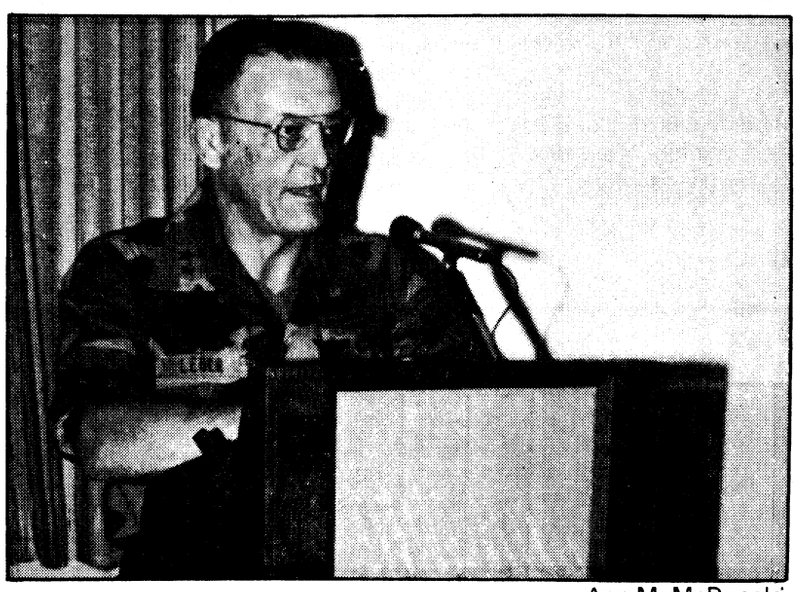
The canisters that have the modification, a filter sleeve inserted into the canister, can be identified by a black stripe painted on the side of the canister.

"Current instructions prohibit the use of a canister without an installed insert," Izzo said. The C2 canister used with the new M-40 series protective mask and the redesigned M-10A1 canister have all been designed to meet the NIOSH standard, according to Izzo.

Use caution, common sense when running in early morning

By Aimee Holden
Bayonet staff writer

Reports by motorists of near misses of runners on post are up, a military police spokesman said.



Maj. Jean Kennedy, MP operations officers, said the incidents police are hearing about indicate that runners are either not making themselves visible enough or are violating safety procedures.

Adding to the problem is the change in visibility during early morning hours, as the days become shorter and sunrise comes later each morning.

Runners are required by post regulation to wear brightly colored clothing at all times, and reflective devices must be worn when running from one-half hour after sunset until half an hour after sunrise. Sashes, which must be worn with reflective leg or wrist bands or vests, are recommended.

Individual runners must run against the traffic, while groups of runners must run with the traffic, a Safety Office spoksman said.

Also, runners must yield the right-of-way to traffic, except at crosswalks.

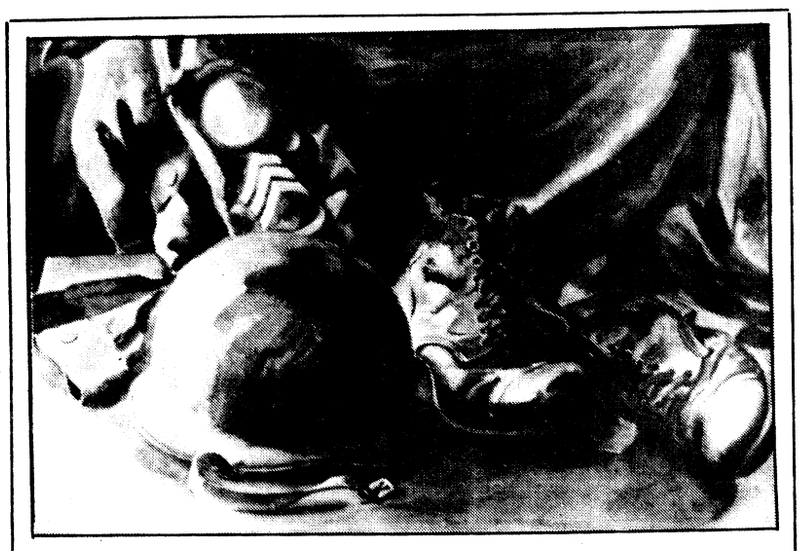
CFC campaign kicks off at Benning

By Aimee Holden
Bayonet staff writer

The annual Combined Federal Campaign got underway Tuesday at a breakfast hosted by Maj. Gen. Kenneth C. Leuer, post commander.

Leuer told the assembled commanders, their sergeants major and guests how important the CFC is to Fort Benning, and urged everyone to give to the best of their financial ability.



"I consider CFC and United Way a chance for us to excel," Leuer said. "It's an opportunity to put our money where our mouths are."

This year's goal is $550,000. Last year, post workers gave $563,347 to the campaign, whose goal was $500,000.

The campaign will continue through November among all military and civilian personnel in the Fort Benning, Columbus and Phenix City areas.

Contributions from the CFC support many post organizations, including Army Community Service, Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, Youth Activities, Community Life Offices, Red Cross, Child Development Services, and the Installation Volunteer Coordinator's Office.

OPINION

NCOs violating uniform regs set bad example for soldiers

By Autrail Cobb
Post CSM

Some soldiers choose to exercise what I call "selective obedience" when it comes to the regulation dictating wear of uniforms.

What I mean by this is that they interpret the uniform regs to mean what they want them to mean, thus finding authority to wear any number of "modified" versions.

Every day I see soldiers with name tapes on their battle dress uniform caps, wearing A-7A straps as belts, using green suspension line in their boots, or wearing foreign awards or other service combat patches on their BDUs.

I've even seen people wearing the old camouflage jungle fatigues, which were retired from the Army's uniform inventory in 1983.

The senior NCOs and officers on post can play a big role in correcting this problem if they take the uniform regulations seriously, which they certainly should. There is no excuse for any senior leaders at Fort Benning to be in violation of these regulations. The Army produces some of the best written documents of all the services. As leaders, you must read them, obey them and enforce them. This concept applies to off-duty time as well, and dress codes should be complied with when using the recreation and shopping facilities on post.

As senior soldiers, you automatically attract the attention of subordinates. You are a valuable guide for success, so when you ignore the regulations or interpret them incorrectly, you set an example for enlisted soldiers that is difficult to repair.

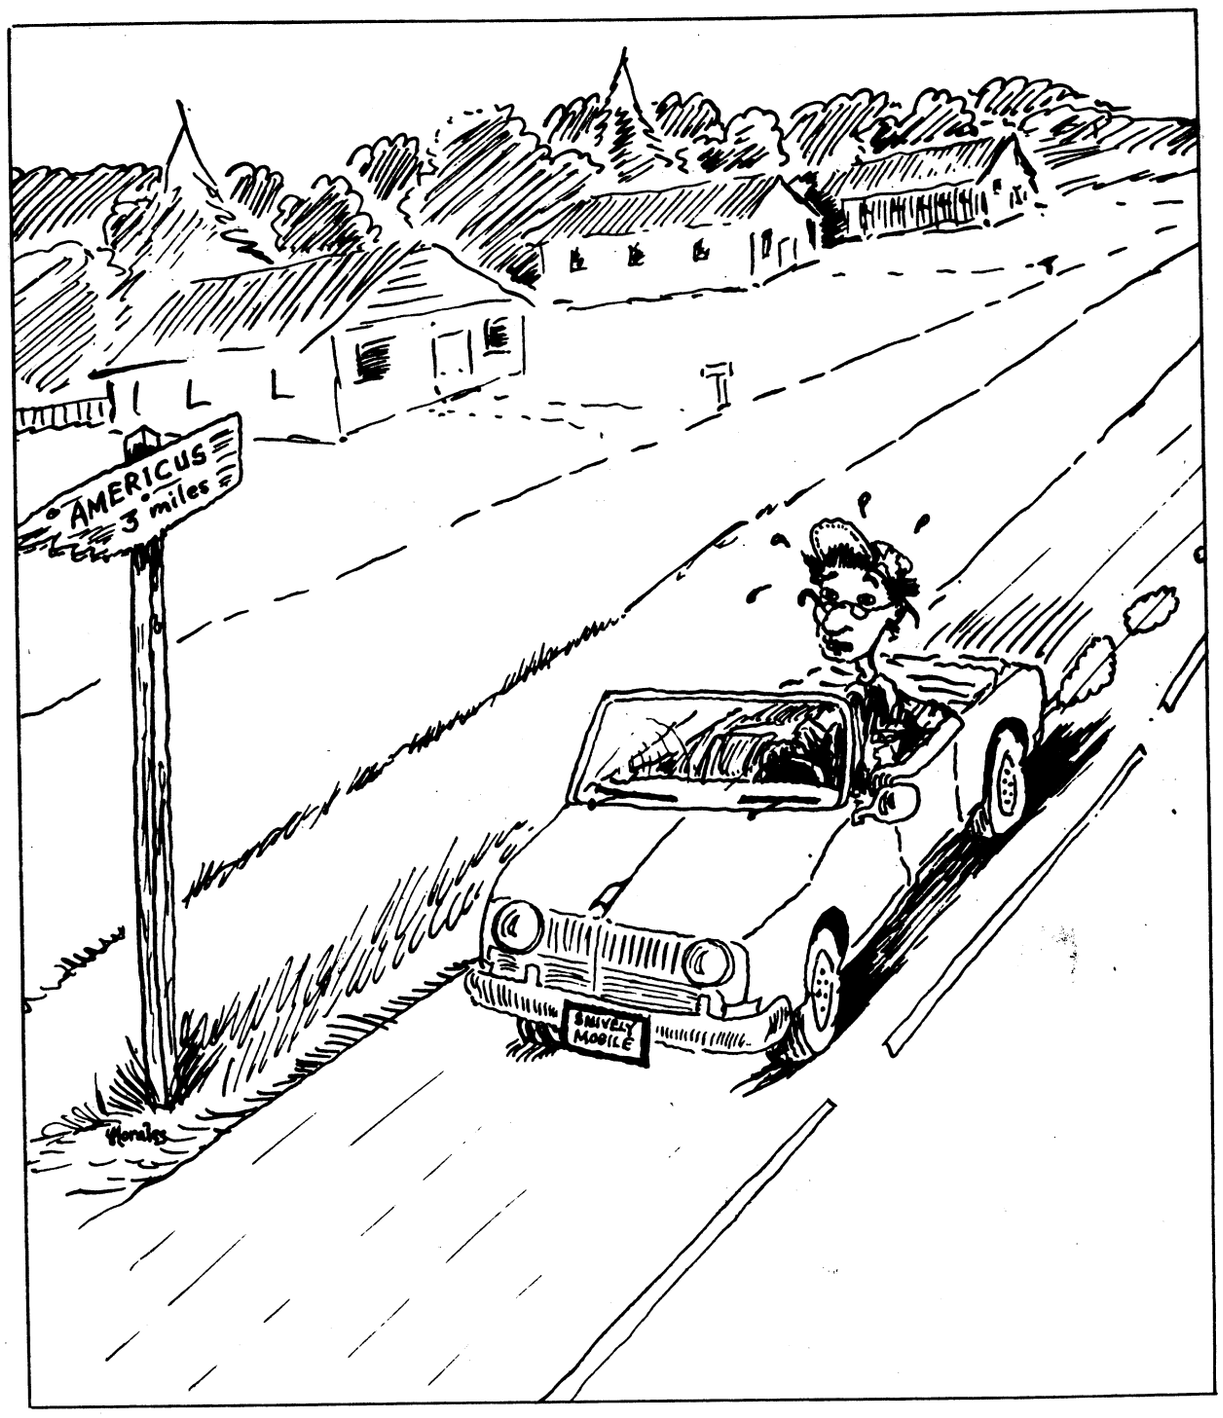
We don't need to go back and re-invent the wheel — existing regulations plainly state what is and is not allowed. If what you are wearing is not in accordance with the reg, then you're in the wrong and are setting a bad example for soldiers in your command.

I expect every NCO at Fort Benning to enforce these regulations. Also, I expect the chain of command to support me on these points and to take action when errors come to their attention.

Fort Benning sets the standard for the Army and a soldier's standards are only as high as we make them. Let's set them high.

Leuer proclaims Native American Day

In recognition of Native Americans and their many contributions to our country, the 25th of September is officially declared "Native American Day" at Fort Benning, Ga.



This year's theme is "Honoring the Spirit of the First Americans." Native Americans possess a rich culture. Their experiences and accomplishments are deeply-rooted in our American heritage. Their excellence in the arts, business, law, medicine and the Armed Forces has been instrumental in our country's development.

I invite each individual at Fort Benning to learn something new about the first Americans, the Native Americans, during this year's observance.

Troop searches for School of Americus

By Clyde Snively
USAIC Public Affairs

I knew it was going to be an interesting week when I awoke the morning of Sept 14 — which signified the start of "National Hispanic Heritage Week." The first things that popped into my mind were long lines at the mess hall waiting for a generous helping of tacos, enchiladas and burritos — a tradition in the Army.

That morning, my editor left a conspicuous-looking note in my rusty, dented grey in-box which said, "...Snively. Go cover 'Various Voices,' (the weekly question asked of Fort Benning soldiers and civilian employees) and go with a theme which relates to Hispanic Americans contributing to the development of the U.S." "Hmmmm," I thought, "Maybe I could find a pool of Hispanics and ask them what they thought since it related to the question."

I then stared at the organizational chart on Fort Benning and started going down the rectangular boxes looking for Spanish surnames. I finally ran across something called "USARSA." There were people there with names like Rivera, Ayala, Ortiz, Garcia and so on. Preparing for my short trip from building 4 to building 35, I grabbed my paperback, unabridged Spanish-English dictionary and my 35mm camera.

Arriving at building 35 was impressive with 19 different flags representing many countries in Central and South America. At first I looked around to see if I could catch a glimpse of a nametag or two in hopes of finding someone with a Spanish surname. Stopping a nice-looking, tall blonde on the second floor, I asked, "...Er, uh, ex---excuse me, ma'am, er, would you happen to know where I could maybe find a USARSA soldier...?" She looked at me in bewilderment as if I were asking her for directions to Timbuktu. She then "humpffed" and walked off as if I had just insulted her. I then thought to myself, "I shouldn't ask for locations of units by using acronyms..." That was one of the rules in journalism taught us military writers at the Defense Information School in Fort Harrison, Ind.

Regrouping my self-assurance, I stopped another civilian-looking person on the first floor and was more specific. "...Uh, s-s-sir, could you tell me how to find the School of Americas, I'm doing an interview with people of Spanish surnames and I need specific information," I said, trying to sound like I knew what I was talking about. Holding what looked like a job application in his hand, he scratched his head and put his hand on his nubby jaw. "Weehl, sonny, ah know of several schools in Americus. A'course, yah'd haf ta' drav quite ah wahs to fahnd eny pa'ticulah school in Americus...," he drawled as he grabbed the shoulder straps of his overalls. "Ya' saee, ya' haf ta' git on hahway 26 due sauth 'til ya' git ta' rauhtnanteen...,", he added. "...Thin' ya'll wel' be in Americus..."

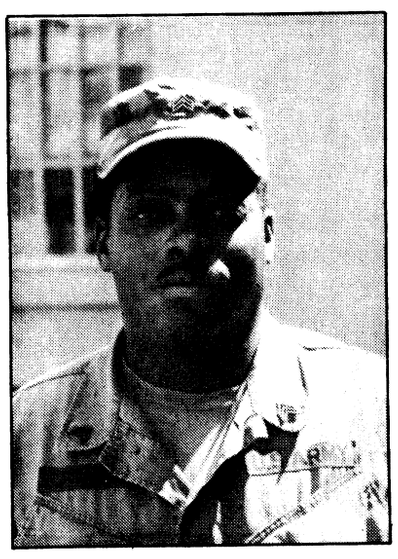
Jotting all of his directions down on my notebook after having deciphered his distinct articulation, I said, "Sir, you've been very helpful. I'll have to return a favor one of these days." As I did a quick about-face and headed out the door by the 'CPO,' I could hear him saying..."Ya'll come back nauh, ya heah..." Seems I'd heard those words somewhere before, although I couldn't quite put my finger on it at the time.

Americus, Ga., is about 35 miles southeast of Fort Benning. Driving halfway there I realized my editor had told me to do 'Various Voices' — a weekly editorial page requirement which had always been done on post. I wondered, "What am I doing heading for Americus? Did Fort Benning have other units stationed there? And, what would people with Spanish surnames be doing way out here anyway."

I pulled up into the first Starvin' Marvin, where I got a full tank of gasoline, then went inside the store to ask for directions.

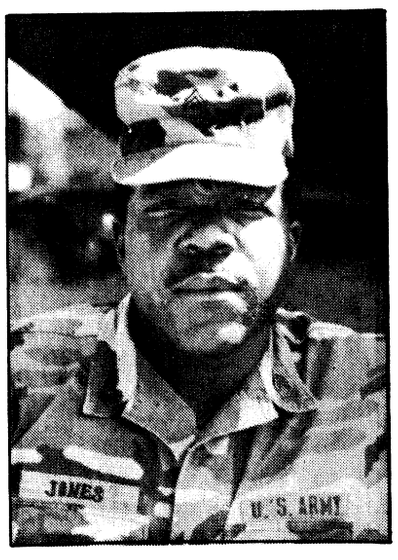
After brousing around inside that quick-convenience store, I decided to ask the clerk for directions. "Uh,...'scuse me ma'am, but do you know how to get to the School of the Americas...?"

She stopped what she was doing behind the counter and stared at me like I was E.T., the Extraterrestrial. "Son, you're about as fer away from the School of Americas as a hoot and a holler. Don't ya' know that's on Fort Benning?," she asked in total disbelief. "You're about the 60th person who's come in here asking for directions to that place, and frankly, it doesn't surprise me one bit. Ya' see, that school at Fort Benning teaches U.S. Army Doctrine to our Latin American allies in the south. I should know, I was invited by those people to tour the School of Americas."



I walked out of there like a whipped puppy with its tail between its legs as I headed back to Fort Benning.

Maybe I could offer my editor a cup of coffee.



The POW/MIA flag flys today, in honor of American soldiers taken prisoner or listed as mission during war.

VARIOUS VOICES / What did you learn while training at the National Training Center?

Sgt. Herman C. Shelton, Headquarters Battery, 2nd Battalion, 10th Field Artillery, 197th Infantry Brigade — "Teamwork is an important part of NTC, you need it to be efficient. Safety was also a top priority; we really stressed safety."

SFC Willie A. Jones, Company A, 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor, 197th Infantry Brigade — "I've been there eight times, but I'm still learning each time I go. It's important to learn how to use terrain to your advantage. Also, communication plays a big part, I learned that everybody can't operate on the same net."

Sp4 William J. Burns, A Troop, 15th Cavalry, 197th Infantry Brigade — "I'm a mechanic, and what I learned out there was how one man is able to recover a downed vehicle and bring it to the rear in order to fix it."

Sgt. Mark A. Daniel, Company D, 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor, 197th Infantry Brigade — "I learned how Soviets operate, how they will outnumber us in battle, how to act on the defensive, and how their knowledge of the terrain gives them an advantage."

PFC Richard M. Marchand, Headquarters Company, 3rd Battalion, 7th Infantry, 197th Infantry Brigade — "I learned how our battalion and other battalions work together, and how the brigade works as a whole."

Cpl. Wayne B. Vance, 72nd Engineers (Combat), 197th Infantry Brigade — "I learned a lot about setting up obstacles and defensive positions. The terrain was a big obstacle for everyone. I also learned a lot about NTC and the difficult operations."

197th infantryman wins title of FORSCOM Soldier-of-the-Year

By Sally Roberts
197th Infantry Brigade Correspondent

Sp4 Kent Miles, from Troop A, 15th Cavalry, 197th Infantry Brigade, was recently selected as the Forces Command Soldier-of-the-Year. Miles faced several panels of senior NCOs while progressing through unit, brigade and Fort Benning soldier of the quarter boards, and finally, with the support of the 197th behind him, at the FORSCOM competition.

Miles, a native of Apple Valley, Calif., is presently assigned to Troop A as a mortar infantryman, providing fire support for the cavalry scouts. He is airborne-qualified and has earned the Expert Infantryman's Badge.

"My unit was very supportive," Miles said. "This was a crucial factor to my success."

Throughout all the excitement, Miles has seen a change in his attitude and goals for the Army. "My main intent when I came in the Army was to get the college fund and to experience the world," Miles said.

Now he has plans to attend the Reserve Officers' Training Corps program in college and possibly return to active-duty as an officer. "Ultimately, my goal is to get commissioned," he added.

Miles also explained that, "I have adopted a more professional attitude toward the soldier. This has also increased my insight about how the Army operates."

That knowledge can be a real asset to someone who has Army career goals. "This award has shown me that there is a high-caliber of soldier who wants to excel," Miles added. "All they need is to be given the proper direction and motivation."

In recognition of his achievement, Miles was awarded a $1,000 savings bond from FORSCOM and an Army Commendation Medal from the 197th Infantry Brigade commander. In addition, Miles was given several gifts and awards from his unit and the Association of the United States Army.

Engineer troops lauded for buying savings bonds

By Shawn Bryson
36th Engineer Group correspondent

Soldiers from the 36th Engineer Group were honored Sept. 18 for their outstanding participation in the 1987 Savings Bond campaign.

The 43rd Engineer Battalion and Company C, 43rd Engineer Battalion, received the award for patriotism for attaining more than 50-percent participation by the soldiers of the two units, according to Capt. Paul Wilcox.

Wilcox explained that the annual campaign took place from May 4 through June 12 this year.

When the statistics were totaled, the 43rd had reached well over 50-percent soldier participation, while Company C had a post high 71-percent participation, according to Wilcox.

Lt. Col. Charles S. Rust, commander of the 43rd, and 1st Sgt. Thomas L. Geralds, Company C first sergeant, accepted the awards from Dean Long, area manager for the Department of the Treasury, U.S. Savings Bond division.

Rust and Wilcox added that Savings Bonds are a great investment for young soldiers because they receive a significant return on a small investment.

Wilcox said the 36th Engineer Group as a whole also did well in the campaign, as it had more new savings bond starts than any other unit on post.

Visit to military park adds insight into unit's history

By Marsha Santiago
ITC correspondent

Members of the 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry, 1st Infantry Training Brigade, gained new insight into their regiment's history when they visited Chickamauga National Military Park on Aug. 29 and 30.

Company A, with the assistance of ITC personnel Joyce Golden and Sgt. 1st Class Earl Barton, hosted the trip as an officer and noncommissioned officer professional development activity.

Following the Aug. 29 regimental redesignation ceremony, Lt. Col. John W. Matthews, battalion commander, and cadre left Fort Benning for the park.

On Aug. 30, the group camped overnight at the park. A four-hour tour and lecture were given by Col. Matthias B. Spruill of Fort McPherson, Ga. Spruill is an expert on the Battle of Chickamauga, fought on Sept. 19 and 20, 1863. During this battle, the 19th Infantry earned its motto, "Rock of Chickamauga."

197th unit vital to past U.S. victories

By Sally Roberts
197th Infantry Brigade correspondent

EDITOR'S NOTE: In September, the 197th Infantry Brigade celebrates the 25th anniversary of its activation into the Regular Army at Fort Benning. The following is the sixth in a series of stories illustrating the history and traditions of the units of the 197th.

Sometimes the battlefield requires a little preparation when an attack is eminent. Obstacles and mine fields are strategically placed in anticipation of the enemy movements by soldiers who make this type of work their specialty.

When the 197th Infantry Brigade needs the expertise of the combat engineers, they call on the 72nd Engineer Co. (combat) to complete the mission.

The 72nd Engineer Co. is the largest separate company in the Brigade. In addition to their engineer missions, the 72nd soldiers also support the Brigade with the basic skills of infantrymen.

The history of the unit dates back to 1933 when it was activated as a light pontoon company. During European campaigns in World War II, the unit provided bridging capabilities to the forward-moving allied forces.

The unit also served during the Korean War, earning many unit awards and citations for effectively performing its missions.

Today, as a part of the 197th Infantry Brigade, the Engineers perform the dual mission of supporting the U.S. Army Infantry School as well as their specialized engineer support to the Brigade in maintaining combat readiness.

Speed, mobility key to 58th Infantry's success

By George Mingee
197th Infantry Brigade Correspondent

Editor's Note: This month, the 197th Infantry Brigade will mark the 25th anniversary of its activation into the regular Army at Fort Benning. The following is the seventh in a series of stories illustrating the history and traditions of units of the 197th.

In order to survive on the modern battlefield, a unit must exhibit rapid speed and mobility. These are characteristics that truly reflect the 1st Battalion, 58th Infantry.

The 1/58 Infantry, also dubbed "Patriots," is a mechanized unit which fights in armored personnel carriers to operate with the other "Combined Arms Team" members. With small arms, crew served weapons and anti-tank weapons.

The history of 1/58 dates back to its original organization in 1917, when they were organized at Colt Park, Gettysburg, Pa., and saw service in France with the 4th Infantry Division during World War I. In World War II, the regiment served as separate battalions, in Alaska, and Europe. In Europe, the Patriots fought through France and Germany with the 8th Armored Division, 3rd Army.

Without a doubt, due to its capabilities, 1/58 Infantry is and will continue to be a formidable unit on the battlefield.

CHAMPUS rules on DRG payments

CHAMPUS

CHAMPUS published its final rule on the new diagnosis-related group (DRG) payment system in the Sept. 1 Federal Register. The new hospital payment system, under which most hospitals in 49 states, the District of Columbia and Puerto Rico will be paid a preset rate for in-patient services, will be effective for admissions occurring on or after Oct. 1.

Maryland, which is exempt from Medicare's DRG system, requested and received an exemption from CHAMPUS.

CHAMPUS estimates that the new payment system will result in a savings of $150 million in the next year. Hospitals will get a fixed payment, regardless of the actual costs of care they provide. And CHAMPUS families will save money because when overall CHAMPUS allowances are lower, the beneficiary's cost-share is also lower.

For each admission to a hospital subject to the DRG system, all beneficiaries other than active-duty dependents will pay the lesser of 25-percent of the billed charges or a fixed, daily amount ($175). This is a change from the cost share described in kidney acquistion costs and heart and liver transplants. And certain hospitals, such as psychiatric, long-term care, rehabilitation, sole community, cancer and children's hospitals, Christian Science sanitoria and distinct parts of a hospital providing psychiatric, rehabilitation and alcohol or drug services, would not be affected.

New Englanders 'take over' 2nd ITB for reserve training

By Sgt. Wendell M. Graham
76th Division PAO

Recently 250 soldiers from New England's 4th Brigade (Inf-OSUT), 76th Division (Training) arrived at Fort Benning for their two weeks of Annual Training to vertically displace cadre of the 2nd Infantry Training Brigade.

Vertical unit displacemnt is where an entire training brigade completely takes over without technical support from their active duty counterparts. It is only one of the many missions of the 4th Brigade, according to Capt. John Frias, 4th Brigade Assistant S-2-3.

During a horizontal unit displacement mission, the 4th Brigade would take over a brigade (one battalion at a time in succession) and would receive technical support from their active duty counterparts.

These two missions are a specialization of the 4th Brigade's basic of satellization where reservists work side by side with their active component counterparts.

The last mission, and currently the highest requirement for the USAR, is establishing a Mobilization Army Training Center (MATC), where a brigade sets up basic training for eight weeks or Infantry OSUT for 13 weeks. The 4th Brigade was the first Reserve unit in history to accomplish a MATC at Fort Campbell, Ky.,in 1985.

Commanded by Col. R. Bruce Nixon, III, 4th Brigade soldiers from the 1/76th Regiment, Bristol, Rhode Island; 2/76th, 3/76th Regiments and Headquarters Detachment, Providence, Rhode Island; 2/417th Regiment, Norwich, Conn., and Logistics Group, East Windsor, Conn., journeyed to Fort Benning. For many it was a return trip.

Many hours of planning and preparation went into this year's mission, according to Frias. First, the mission was identified and the brigade changed training

Fiesta in Columbus a rousing success

By Marco Morales
USARSA Public Affairs Office

This year's National Hispanic Heritage week kicked off with the third annual "Fiesta in Columbus," Sept. 12 at the amphitheater next to the Columbus Trade Center.

The program, co-sponsored by the Columbus Hispanic Assocation and the U.S. Army School of the Americas, began with comments from guest speaker, Col. Miguel A. Garcia, commandant, USARSA. Garcia spoke on the importance of recognizing all the social and political contributions made by Hispanic-Americans toward the development of America.

"Fiesta,"then unraveled some of its international culture as dancers and a fashion show drew wandering crowds to amphitheater seats. Many guest instructors assigned to USARSA with their families participated in dances and in modeling folkloric costumes native of many countries from central and South America.

"This year's event went well, considering unplanned rainy weather," said Capt. Jose Maldonado, "Fiesta" project officer, USARSA.

One of the highlights of Hispanic Heritage Week at Fort Benning was a display sponsored by USARSA, which focused on artifacts from 19 Latin American countries,

Leadership Reaction Course tests soldiers on problem-solving skills

By Aimee Holden
Bayonet Staff Writer

The narrow culvert ends in a five-foot drop into a large body of water. The only thing between you and the shore are two upright fence posts. You can't touch the water or the enemy will hear you, but you must get your company and its ammunition across. Waves are crashing around you and the noise is deafening. You find two fairly sturdy boards and, racing against time, seek to complete the mission.

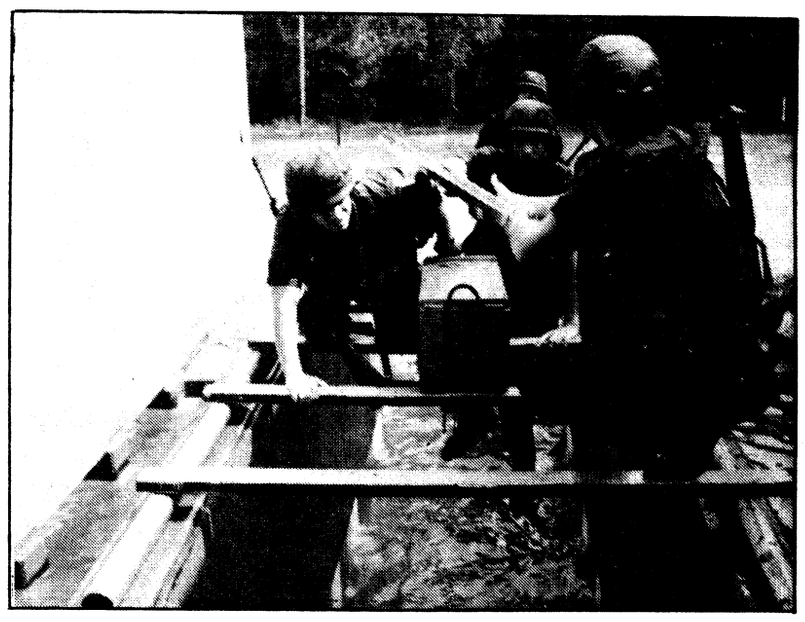
This and ten other similar situations confronted the soldiers of Company A, 14th Infantry, 10th Mountain Division last Thursdsay at the Leaders' Reaction Course.

The objective of the course is to evaluate the leadership potential of its participants.

The LRC consists of seventeen different obstacles courses, some on dry land and some in water. Each obstacle has a different scenario. Soldiers are briefed on the mission and then given twelve minutes to complete it.

Evaluaters are assigned to critique the team's performance. Team's are judged not only by whether or not they complete the mission but by how they work to complete it

According to SSgt. Robert Gallagher, a squad leader from Company A and a course evaluater, they are looking for the leadership potential in every soldier.



"This course is a good way to further their ability to deal with other soldiers in various tasks," Gallagher said. "Plus, it helps me see how well I'm doing my job by how well they complete the mission."

2nd Lt. Lauren Ramos, a platoon leader from Company A and Officer-in- Charge, said that the course is a great motivational tool.

"We are taking all of our troops through the course because everybody needs to know how to do the job two levels up," Ramos said. "This is part of the power-down concept of training."

"As leaders, it allows us to identify individuals that demon-

AUSA Octoberfest is Oct. 2-3 and will be held at the Columbus Iron Works. The fun begins Oct. 2 with an Octoberfest dance from 6 p.m. until midnight, featuring continuous German Fest music, German food, beer and wine, and door prizes.

German Fest music begins the day Oct. 3 from noon to 1:30 p.m. Then Country and Western music will be played from 1:30 to 6 p.m. From 6 p.m. to midnight, Rock and Roll music will entertain one and all.

From 1:30 to 9 p.m., there will be appearances by a variety of entertainers, including the Georgia Dancing Machine, Miss Columbus (Traci Green), Miss Phenix City (Shannon Stevens), and Miss Georgia (Kelly Jirles).

There will be door prize drawings throughout the day, as well as gift and craft stands, and German food and drinks available.

Admission for one day only is $3, or $5 for a two-day ticket. Tickets can be purchased from you command sergeant major, at the Trade Center, the CB&T bank on post or the main office on 1st Ave, or at the First Union Bank on post or the main office on 1st Ave.

The Follow Me Chapter of the Non-commissioned Officer Association will host and conduct a general membership meeting Oct. 3 at 6 p.m. in the Sand Hill NCO Club.

The official drawing to determine the winner of the TX 17-foot boat, motor and trailer will take place at 7 p.m. You do not have to be present to win.

The Supper Club will offer a dinner theater production of Chapter Two, a Neil Simon comedy, Nov. 18. The play is a romantic comedy that gives an intensely personal account of Simon's adored wife's death and his later remarriage. Simon, with a mocking, dancing delicacy, takes his most poignant memory and wreaths it in robust laughter.

For more information, call the Supper Club.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Beginning Monday, the Optometry Clinic at Martin Army Community Hospital will change its walk-in clinic for active duty to a same day appointment system. This change is being made in an effort to reduce the patient's waiting time and to provide better service.

Same day appointments will be available on Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday afternoons. No morning appointments will be available since the optometrists screen patients at the Reception Station in the morning.

Appointments should be scheduled for routine eye examinations. They must be made by telephone only, between the hours of 8:30 and 10:30 a.m., for an appointment that afternoon. Call 544-3041/3042/3043.

Appointments are not needed if you only need to reorder glasses or order protective mask inserts from a current (less than one year old) prescription. These individuals can report to the clinic between 8 a.m. and 3:30 p.m. on any duty day with their current prescription, ID card and medical records.

The Officers' Wives Club offers a variety of classes for all military families. This includes gymnastics for ages 2 1/2 and up, instructor Kelly Pitts 563-0325 or Brad Godown 324-1167; jazzercise, instructor Sheri Snoddy 561-5609; karate for ages 5 and up, instructor John Touchton 1-582-3117; Maria's Battle of the Bulge, Maria Ratio 687-2616; get fit-stay fit, instructor Jeanne Parker 687-0738. For more information, call individual instructors.

Change in telephone numbers: Effective immediately, all telephone numbers for the Billeting Branch, including guest houses, have been changed to 689-0067.

Ammunition Amnesty Program: Ammunition found on or off post may be turned in at the Ammunition Supply Installation Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. No paper work is required and no questions asked. Ammunition found during non-duty hours, holidays and weekends may be turned in at the Vehicle Holding Area. Remember prior to moving abandoned ammunition, ensure that it is safe to do so. If doubt exists, contact the 89th EOD, 545-2914/4154 or the ASI, 544-6667/6052.

Using wrong tool can spell disaster

USAIC Safety Office

Recently, a Fort Benning soldier sustained a fractured pelvis and elbow when a vehicle he was working under slipped from the bumper jack used to support it. This soldier is lucky to be alive. It is unfortunate that so many of our soldiers continue to make the same mistake each year by selecting the wrong tool for a job. Fort Benning has already lost one soldier this year in a similar accident. The jacking devices contained in vehicles are provided for changing flat tires and even then require extreme caution. Don't ever get any part of your body under a vehicle supported only by a jack. Vehicle maintenance of this nature should be performed at installation craft shops where appropriate jacking devices such as stands or hydraulic lifts are available as well as an assortment of other tools and equipment. Don't let your POV and poor judgment kill a curious child — or you.

A member of this command was recently paralyzed from the chest down when he suffered a broken neck as a result of diving into shallow water. The service member dived from a small dock without first checking the water depth or looking for hidden objects such as stumps or trees. The accident occurred off-post and was in an area not normally used for swimming and was, as a consequence, not watched by lifeguards.

directions to address the specific training needs that would be highlighted at annual training.

Second, coordination with the 2nd ITB was established to provide a mobile training team. A 2nd ITB team travelled to New England to conduct refresher training for the 4th Brigade's drill sergeants, reinforcing the current training being conducted at Fort Benning.

"Prior to coming to AT, all 4th Brigade cadre were certified in physical training and end-of-cycle testing for Infantry-OSUT," said Nixon.

"Our men and women came prepared to bring out the best in training and safety with the new soldiers and are ready to hit the ground running," he added.

"A 4th Brigade objective while at Fort Benning is for our drill sergeants to become more proficient in the soldierization process," Nixon said. "Our affilliation with the 2nd ITB calls for our drill sergeants to continually hone their leadership skills to train the new soldier to the highest standards and prepare the infantryman to fight."

"The 4th Brigade will depart for home station on Oct. 3 where they will immediately begin training and preparation for their 1988 return tour to Fort Benning and participation in ON-AWAY EAGLE III.

Course

strate leadership qualities you wouldn't otherwise see," he said. " We get to find the 'sleeping giants,' and develop leadership qualities at the lowest level possible."

The course also seems to be something that the soldiers really enjoy.

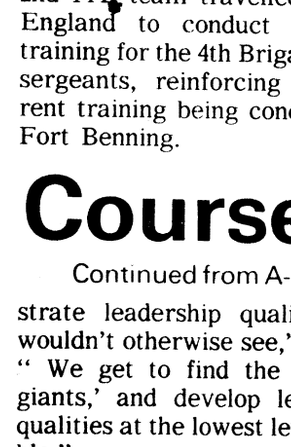
"This training makes you think," said PFC Brian Lavalley a soldier from Company A, "and, it is definately a break from our regular training."

Since its introduction in the 1920s, the LRC has undergone many modifications. Today it can help identify creative soldiers, soldiers who can lead, and soldiers who hinder mission accomplishment.

SSgt. Thomas Brick, the Course's Non-Commissioned Officer-In-Charge, said that German psychologists designed the course in the early 1900s. After World War II, the British Army adopted the LRC. The Air Force brought it to Maxwell Air Force Base, Alabama, in the 1950s. In 1953 the Infantry School prepared a LRC for West Point cadets who were coming to Fort Benning for six weeks of training in 1954.

The Fort Benning LRC is both the oldest and the busiest in the Army. Brick said that an average of 8 units a week use the course.

The course is presently included in the curriculum for Officer Candidate School, Basic Noncommissioned Officer Course, Light Leaders Course and School of Americas. Active duty, Nartional Guard and Reserve units of the Army and Marines and ROTC units also use the course.



The course can accomodate up to 250 people at a time. A minimum of 50 people on the course are reguired due to the large amounts of water used. Brick said that the 185,000 gallons of water used on the course are changed every other day.

MARSHAL'S VIEWPOINT

By Wendell D. Choate
Provost Marshal's Office

Fraud is not an offense under the Uniform Code of Military Justice (UCMJ) or Title 18 of the U.S. Code (USC). The term is a generic designation for a category of criminal offenses involving fraudulent behavior...i.e., making a false statement, a false claim or bribery.

Although fraud is difficult to detect, there are "indicators" of fraudulent activities, which, to a knowledgeable person, can signal a potential problem. Commanders and supervisors must be able to recognize these indicators and take appropriate action.

What appears to be a minor administrative discrepancy may prove to be a fraud against the Army. Fraud is a concern to all of us and supervisors at all levels must be alert for possible fraud and subsequently report it.

An example of a false TDY voucher is:

Servicemembers, either acting alone or conspiring with others, submit claims for TDY lodging expenses, vehicle rentals, etc., when in fact, all claims are false. The servicemembers receive payments to which they are not entitled.

Corrective Actions:

Commanders or supervisors should investigate "rumors" that someone assigned to the unit may have submitted a false voucher. Personnel reviewing travel vouchers should be alert for improprieties such as...altered lodging receipts, differences in claims made by personnel traveling together for rooms, taxis or privately-owned vehicles shared with co-workers, yet each claims full-rate, out of proportion fares or mileage, or personnel who reside with relatives and submit false lodging receipts.

Example of a false travel voucher is:

Servicemember claiming privately-owned vehicle mileage when, in fact, their mode of travel was by commercial air. Not only are there substantial cost differences between POV mileage and commercial airfares, but the difference in travel time is a loss to the government.

Corrective actions:

This is a difficult situation for a commander or supervisor to detect because the fraud is completed at finance during inprocessing. The only hint a commander may have is an overheard statement or a tip from another servicemember.

Fort Benning is not immune to this growing Army-wide problem. There have been several reported incidents of travel fraud at Fort Benning. In order for you to help combat this costly crime call CID at 545-3984 and leave your tape-recorded message. You do not have to identify yourself.

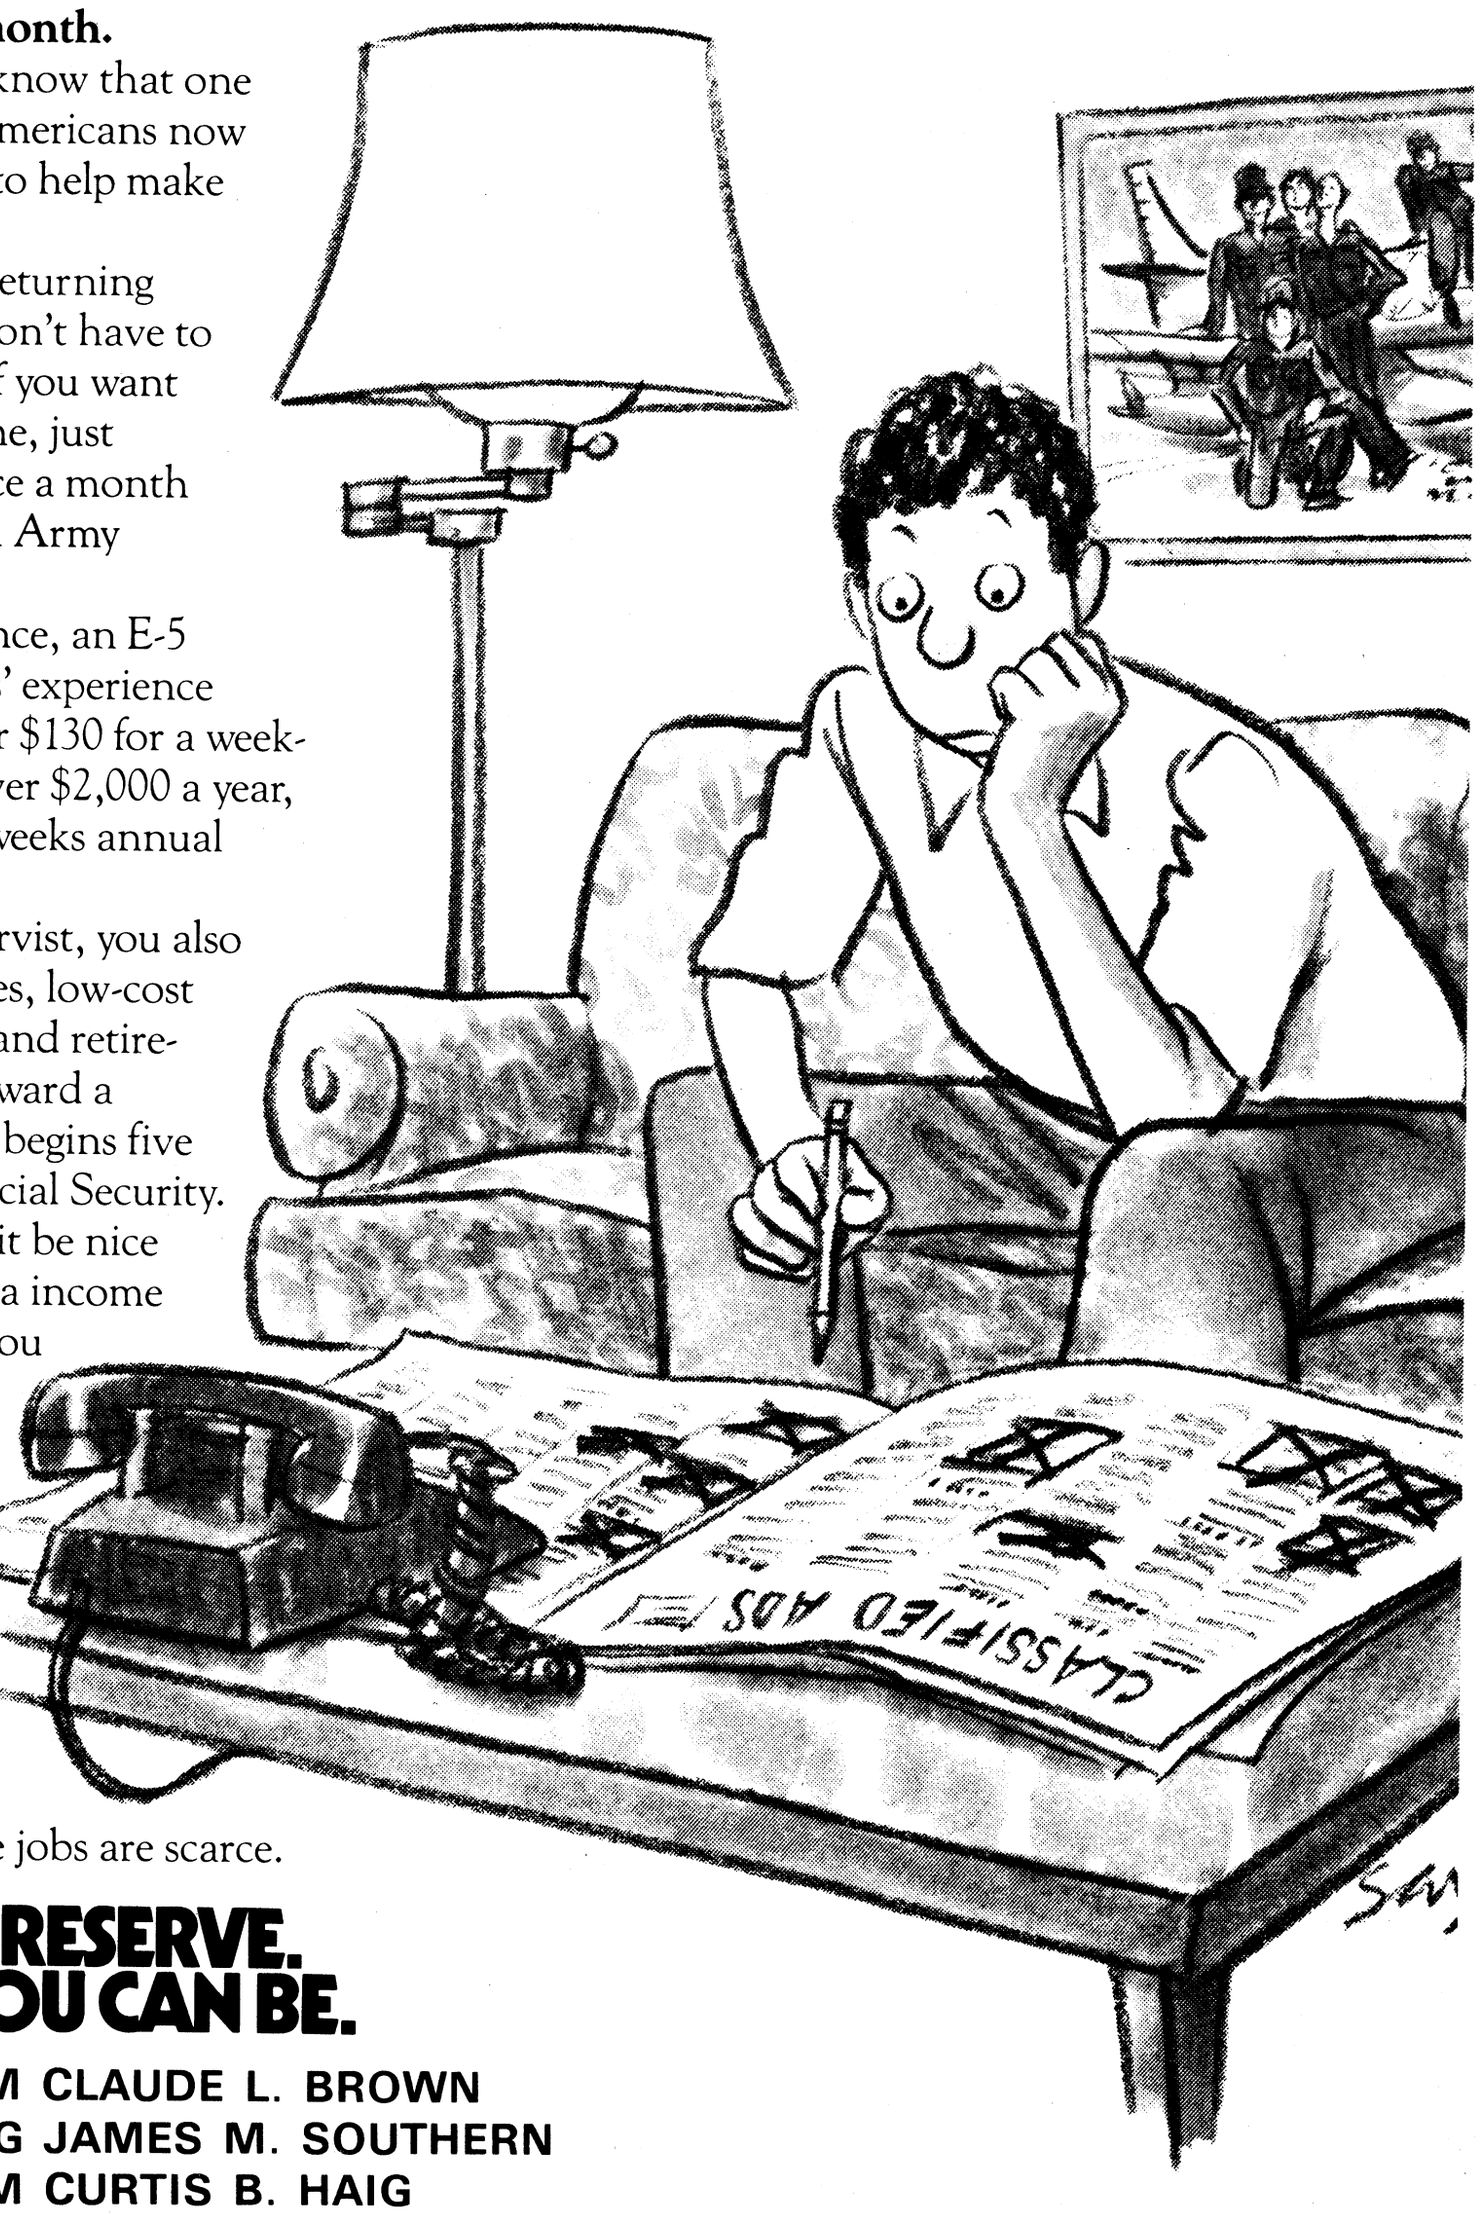
A GOOD PART-TIME JOB IS HARD TO FIND.

If you're headed back to civilian life, reserve yourself an extra income one weekend a month.

Did you know that one out of three Americans now "moonlights" to help make ends meet?



But as a returning veteran, you don't have to "moonlight." If you want an extra income, just "weekend" once a month with your local Army Reserve unit.

For instance, an E-5 with four years' experience now earns over $130 for a weekend's work. Over $2,000 a year, counting two weeks annual training pay.

As a Reservist, you also get PX privileges, low-cost life insurance, and retirement points toward a pension which begins five years before Social Security.

Wouldn't it be nice to have an extra income waiting when you get home?

It can be arranged. See your unit commander, or talk to your in-service recruiter, listed below. Act fast. Good part-time jobs are scarce.

ARMY RESERVE. BE ALL YOU CAN BE.

Pathfinder's mission means 'First in and Last Out'

Ann M. McDonald

Two pathfinder students float in for a landing on Artman Drop Zone after one of their fellow classmates gave the go ahead to jump.

Ann M. McDonald

A Pathfinder student prepares to jump from a UH-1H Helicopter when the Jumpmaster and Pilots recieve the command from the ground to execute.

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

Pathfinder: "Whiskey four-five, with six paratroopers, stand by." Pilot: "Whiskey four-five, standing by." Pathfinder: "Whiskey four-five, execute, execute, execute." Pilot: "Wilco." Pathfinder: "Whiskey four-five, I observe six paratroopers away and clear. Maintain left closed traffic, all drop information remains the same. Report final."

Directing an aircraft to drop parachutists using the Voice Initiated Release system is only one of the many things troops are taught when they attend the U.S. Army Pathfinder School, the only one of its kind in U.S. Armed Forces.

Army, Marines, Air Force and Navy join together to learn how to provide navagational assistance and advisory services to military aircraft. They are trained to be the "first in and last out," which is the pathfinder's mission in any airmobile operation.

Approximately 500 students graduate from the school yearly. It is three weeks long with no more than 48 students per class.

According to SFC Gary Jenkins, non-commissioned officer in charge, the first week starts off with classroom instruction on land navagation, air traffic control and slingloading operations. The students are then evaluated hands-on in all areas covered in the classroom.

"The land navigation portion is basically orienteering," Jenkins said, "where a map is used to identify terrain features and to aid a person in reaching point B from point A."

Jenkins said that in the air traffic control portion, students are taught how to communicate properly with the pilot and all about the different types of traffic patterns.

"In slingload operations, they are taught aircraft weight limitations," Jenkins said, "as well as the different types of slings that are used for each aircraft, the different types of hitchs used to fasten them, the capabilities of each slingload and various other technical aspects of the operation."

During the second week, the men take to the field for a cadre-led field training exercise, where they are shown exactly what to do in pickup and landing zone operations.

"We teach them how to select and visually mark a fixed-wing, aircraft landing zone," Jenkins said, "and we teach them how to operate it."

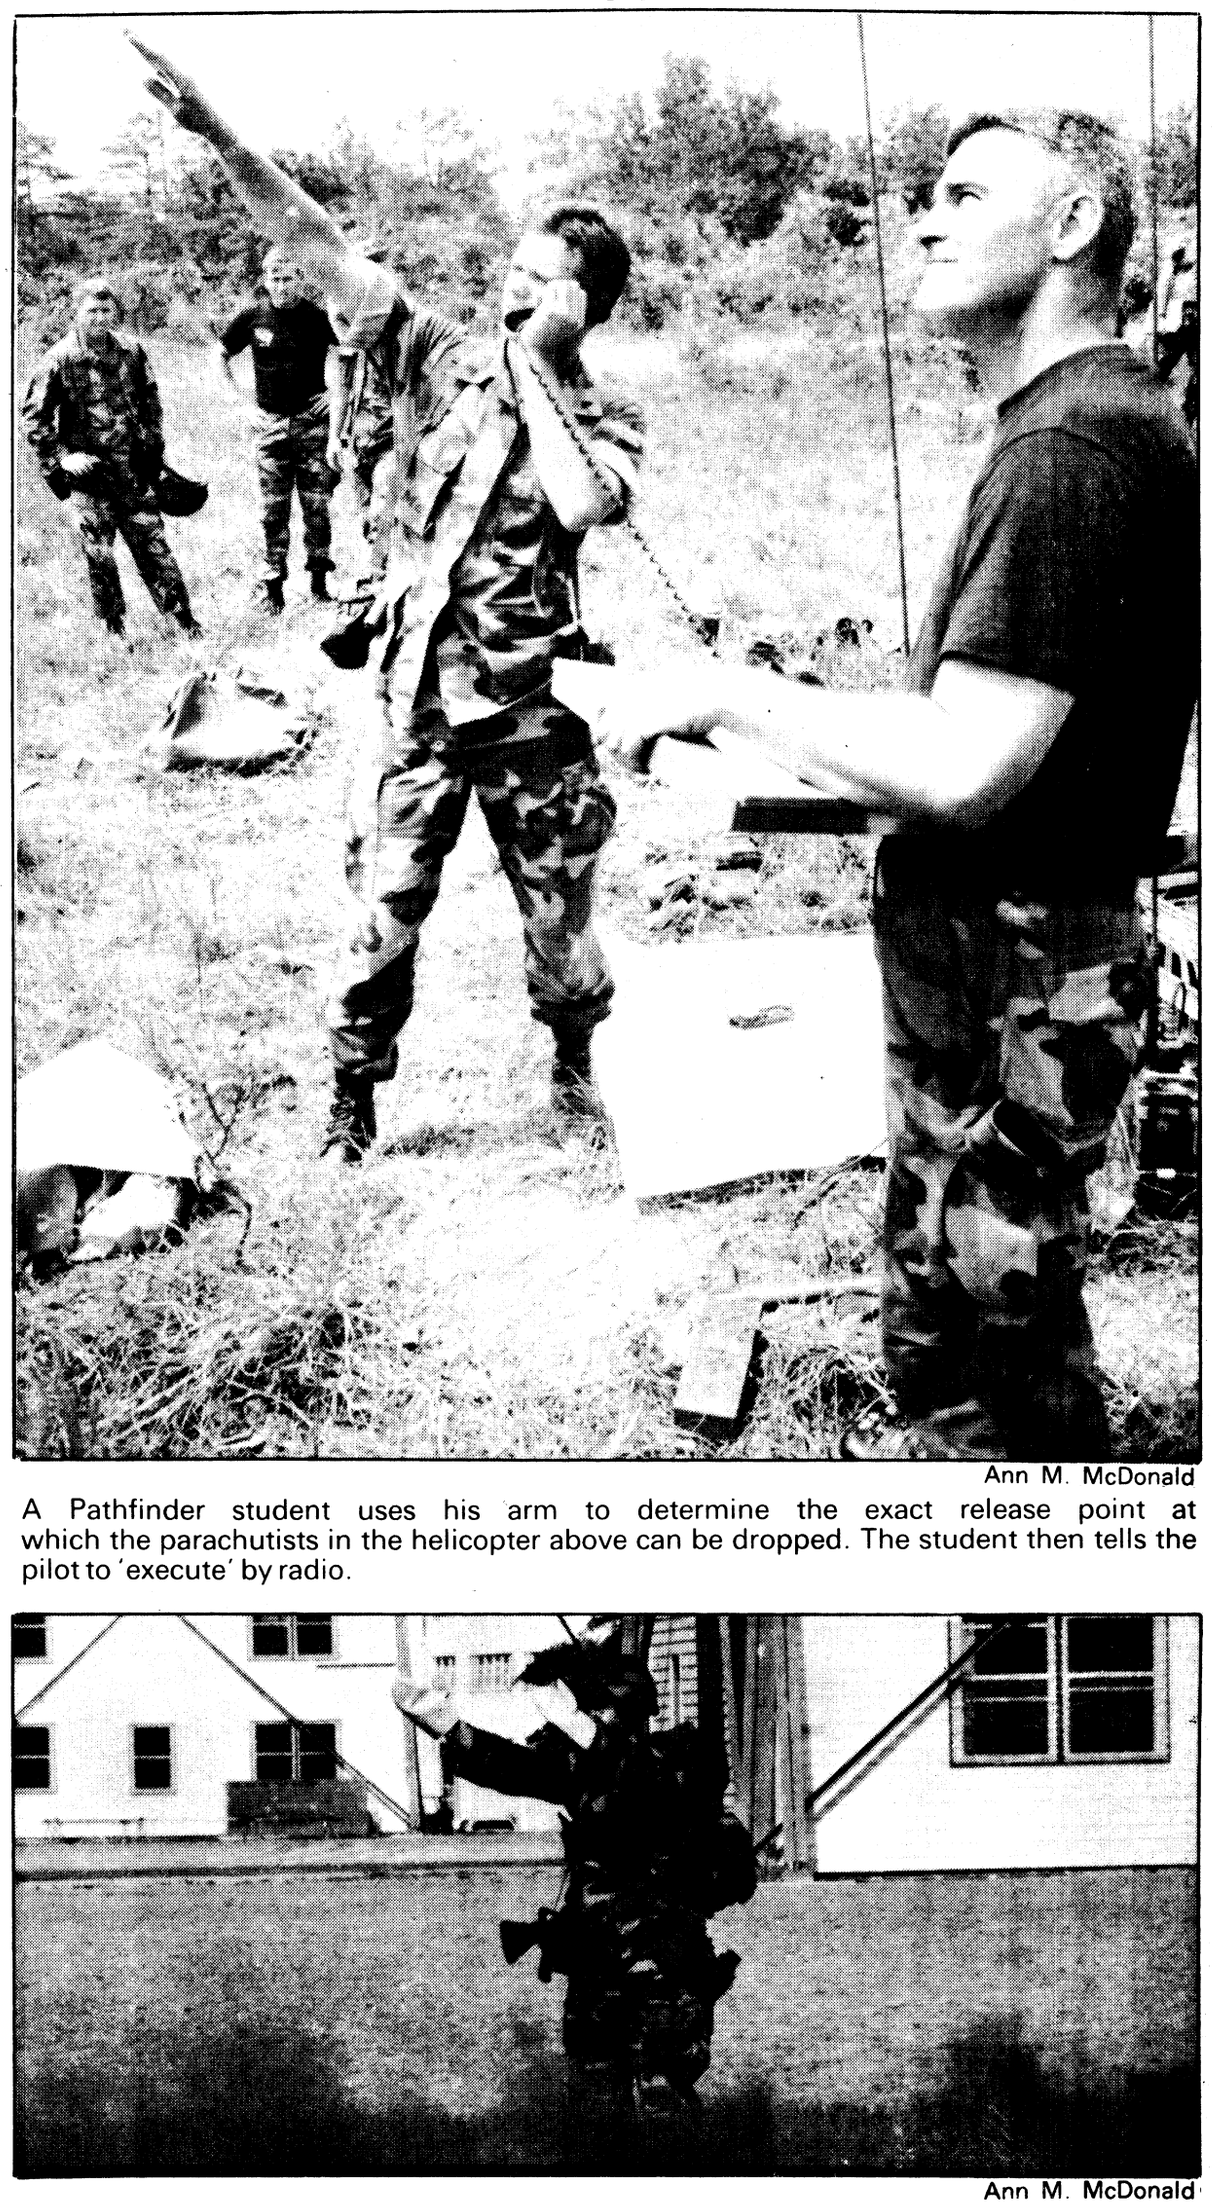
The students then take over and are evaluated.

In the final week, the men are trained in setting up and controlling a drop zone for airborne operations. They are taught the formula needed to give jumpers enough air space to land safely as well as coordinating with the pilot for when the jumpers can start their descent.

After the last phase of training, the men are given a final examination to determine if they have learned all it takes to wear the coveted torch, which is the insignia of the pathfinder badge.

"This course is only taught to people who need to know pathfinder operations for their unit," Jenkins said. "It is not just taught to anyone.

"All the students are highly motivated," he said. "They have to be because a unit is not going to send them here unless they are in the top 10 percent."



The pace of the course is fast and furious; one student described it as a "college semester crammed into three weeks."

A lieutenant, attending the course from 10th Mountain Division, described the course as the most professionally run school he has attended in the Army.

"The best thing about this school," he said, "is that when you leave here, you can immediately apply things at your unit that you have learned ."

"This course does not just teach the basics," the lieutenant added,"you learn it all."

Pathfinder: History began with World War II jump

507th PIR correspondent

The first U.S. Airborne operation of World War II was conducted by the 509th Parachute Infantry Battalion. In November of 1942, the 509th, commanded by Lt. Col. Edson Raff, flew from southern England to Oran, Algeria to seize and secure two French airfields as part of Operation Torch. Due to high winds, overcast conditions and night-flying, the C-47 troop transports became misoriented and widely dispersed. As a result, the paratroopers were scattered miles from their drop zones, and the battalion was unable to fully accomplish its mission.

When the allies invaded Sicily on July 9, 1943, part of the combined invasion consisted of an airborne assault by the 505th Parachute Infantry Regiment and elements of the British 1st Airborne Division. High winds, night-flying and bad weather on the Mediterranean Sea caused the jump aircraft to stray far off course. This resulted in paratroopers landing as far as 50 miles from their designated drop zones.

Largely as a result of this operation, the concept of the pathfinder was born. Small pathfinder teams were trained and prepared to mark the way for the main airborne assault on the Italian town of Salerno on Sept. 9. 1943. Pathfinders were dropped ahead of the main assault force, marked the drop zones, and set up radar homing devices to assist the pilots in navigation.

The concept of the pathfinder first emerged in the British 6th Airborne Division in World War II. The 21st Independent Parachute Co. of the 6th Airborne Division had the mission to provide navigational assistance for the 38th Bomber Group of the Royal Air Force. The U.S. Airborne Division commanders initiated plans to train small pathfinder units modeled after the British concept to provide navigational assistance to improve the accuracy of night airborne operations. Capt. Frank Lillyman was detailed from the 101st Airborne Division to observe the 21st Independent Co. equipment and S.O.P.s.

A course was established at Fort Benning to train pathfinders for the Airborne division's still forming and training in the United States. Almost simultaneously, local training programs were established in Europe and North Africa to provide pathfinders for the 82nd and 101st Airborne Divisions.

The first successful use of pathfinders occured during the invasion of Italy at Salerno in September of 1943.

The most important and successful use of pathfinders occured during the invasion of Normandy on June 6, 1944. Pathfinders from the 101st and 82nd airborne divisions, including the separate 507th PIR, jumped in first to provide navigational assistance to the jump aircraft. While spearheading the initial assault, the pathfinder motto was born: "Semper Primus: Always First."

Aftr World War II, the mission of the pathfinder remained essentially unchanged until the helicopter was introduced as a means of moving assets about the battlefield. The pathfinder mission expanded to providing navigational assistance and control of helicopters. The proud and valorous heritage of the pathfinder was to continue throughout the Vietnam War in large scale combat air assaults. The motto was changed from "Always First" to "First In, Last Out!"

All pathfinder training was conducted at Fort Benning until 1951 when the air force combat control teams assumed the mission of providing navigational assistance to air force aircraft. The pathfinder school remained closed until the end of the Korean War. With the advent of helicopters, the infantry school reopened the course in 1955, and broadened the pathfinder mission to include providing air traffic control and navigation assistance for helicopters.

In Vietnam, the role of the pathfinder further expanded as airmobility became a battlefield reality. Pathfinders established helicopter landing zones for day and night air assaults, furnished ground-to-air communication and air traffic control for battalion and brigade air assaults, rigged external slingloads and assisted in moving entire fire bases rapidly by air. They assisted in the recovery of downed aircraft and set up foreward fixed wing airstrips and drop zones for air force aircraft resupply.

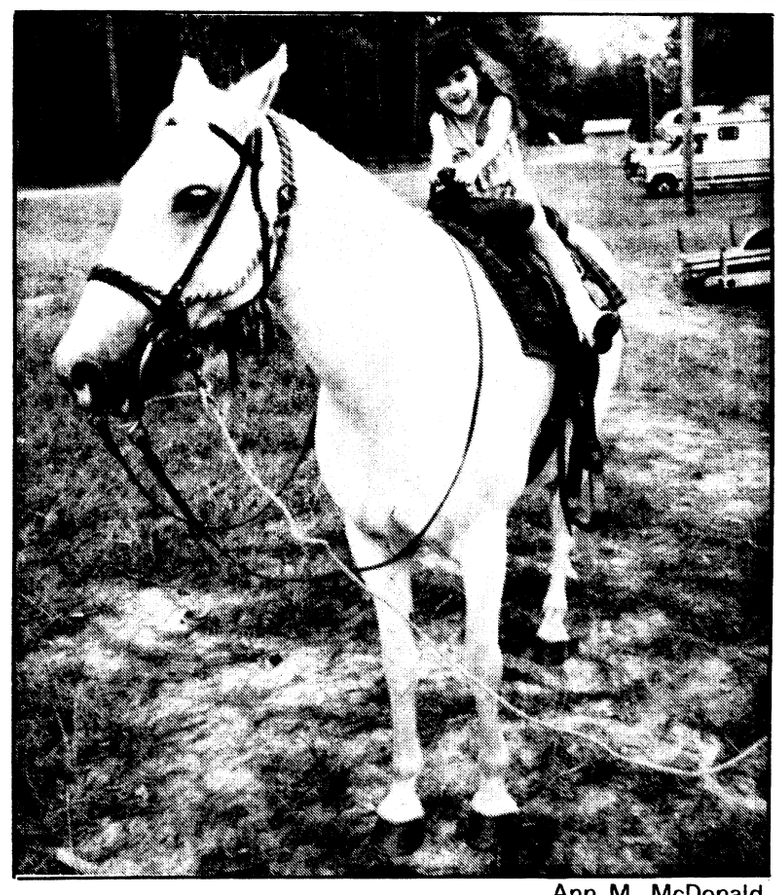
The Pathfinder School Program of instruction reflects the current needs of the Army. As Army of excellence is implemented, aviation assets are greatly expanded, but Pathfinder units are eliminated. The Airland Battle dictates a highly mobile doctrine, and aviation assets will be used extensively in the light, airborne and air assault divisions to move troops, equipment and resupply on the battlefield.

Air Force celebrates birthday

Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

Last week the Air Force celebrated its 40th year of being a separate part of our nation's Armed Forces.

Since its birth on September 18, 1947, the Air Force has been confronted by numerous crises and revolutionary changes in weapons, tactics and strategic concepts. It has overcome them all and has grown from a force of not quite 400,000 people to more than one million.



Air Force representatives in Building 4 serve as the liaison with the Infantry Center, insuring operations run smoothly.,

According to TSgt. Michael Lee, one of the liaison personnel, his office advises the Commandant and the Assistant Commandant on all matters pertaining to the Air Force. The office also provides resident and non-resident instruction to the Infantry School as well as giving training aids on numerous Air Force subjects.

"We also serve as a point of contact for all the airmen attending various post courses," Lee said, "mainly the Basic Airborne, Jumpmaster and Pathfinder Courses."

In the airborne courses taught by the 1st of the 507th Parachute Infantry Regment, assistance is required from Air Force pilots and their aircraft.

The Airlift Control Element at Lawson Army Airfield coordinates with other bases to get the needed aircraft and pilots here. They forecast weeks in advance what type of aircraft will be used and where they will come from.

Ann M. McDonald
Carlotta Sain enjoys a pony ride during the Air Force Picnic at Uchee Creek

Every week these aircraft can be seen lined up on the airfield ready to pick up and drop a planeload of students.

But aircraft support is not the only Air Forece service provided. Detatchment 10, 5th Weather Squadron provides weather forecasts on a daily basis. Close coordination between the services, including this little heralded forecast office, are involved in the smallest to the largest of operations.

A recent example of the Army and Air Force working together is the 75th Ranger Regimental mass tactical jump, "Callid Warrior," where more than 1,400 rangers from three army posts dropped onto Fryar Field, the largest peacetime airborne operation conducted by the Rangers.

Another peacetime operation occurred during the Berlin Airlift, which involved the largest demonstration of airpower during peacetime. In 11 months, the Air Force and other allied forces delivered some 2.3 million tons of food, fuel and supplies to the stranded West Berliners until the Soviets lifted the blockade.

The USAF celebrated the day in several ways. The most visible was a display showing the mission of today's Air Force, as well as its history. The display drew crowds of building 4 passerbys on numerous occasions.

Into personal world of stress comes good news

By Capt. Ray Ganey
Clinical Pastoral Student

Into your world of anxiety, worry, frustration and hurt, and into your personal world of stress comes good news. Yes, even into this world of "Follow Me," and living a life that revolves around the three glass balls of training, maintenance, and modernization, comes good news. Yes, even into this world of barracks living, into your own personal world of stress, comes good news. The good news is that you can combat stress creatively. The choice is yours.

Here are some ideas that are helping me as I seek to handle stress creatively. I hope they will help you.

Trust God to bear your burdens. Are you living as if it were all up to you? As if the burden of the whole world were on your shoulders? Do you feel helpless and inadequate for the task? I know how you feel, for I have been there. Even today and every day I find the need to "cast my cares upon the Lord, knowing that He cares for me," (I Peter 5:7). To cast means to let go of the stressors and to trust God to handle them. God wants us to find in Him the answer to our fears within and fightings without. Such faith and trust grow as we study His Word and let go. He is "a very present help in trouble." God cares, forgives, sustains, comforts and empowers.

Accept God's estimate of yourself. You can tell much about what a thing is worth by what has been paid for it. The price paid for your abundant and eternal life was the greatest price ever paid. You are a person of infinite worth. And you are loved and accepted by God and are paid the great compliment of the gift of free choice. Accept and love yourself.

Build a Strong Family Life. The family can be a great support resource for the distressed person. God established families to give us the emotional support, empathy and love which we need. Family members must learn how to relieve, rather than increase, stress. Let God love you through your family. To be able to pour out your heart without putting up defenses or hiding weaknesses is a great antidote to stress. Not only do you accept love, but you give love as well. Love is something you do, and it takes time. Communicate, open your heart in unselfish sharing and caring.

Set priorities. You will never get everything done. Establish short and long-range goals. Select what is most important and then concentrate on each job as it comes, doing one thing at a time. Don't try to operate in high-gear all the time, but do pace yourself. Learn the value of mini-vacations, a walk or even a look out of the window. A change is a rest. Do not allow the urgent to crowd out the important.

Concentrate on gratitude. Count your blessings, name them one by one. Thank God continually and thank people for every small kindness. You will be amazed at how happy this sharing of love will make you as well as others.

Turn to serve others. Nothing relieves stress like doing a good and loving deed. It takes the focus off self and reduces the distress caused by brooding. Try giving yourself away in loving works and loving deeds. "It is more blessed (and stress-relieving) to give than to receive."

Practice thought-control. Practice this consciously and you will eliminate habitual worry and anxiety, for the mind can hold only one thought at a time. And how you think determines how you feel just as how you feel determines how you act out or behave in life. If you don't like the way you are and if you don't like the way you are feeling — change your thinking patterns. As any good habit does, this will take practice; but, you do have the ability to choose what you will think about and what you refuse to think about. This is not unrealistic, but it is to live by your beliefs and not by your doubts.

Examine your relationships. Earn your neighbors' love. Don't neglect friendship and fellowship. God loves us through others. Put more warmth, more nutual support, more communication and more involvement into your relationships.

Use your leisure time to relieve stress. Traveling, shopping, painting, sewing, reading, building and visiting — a change from your stress-producing routines can be helpful.

Get regular exercise, eat right, sleep enough and enjoy each day as it comes. "This is the day that the Lord has made, I will rejoice and be glad in it." Celebrate every day as a precious and glorious gift to God. Wake up each and every day with a fresh new look and lease on life. Be full of vitality nd ready to conquer and take on the challenges that the day brings. Don't worry about tomorrow and especially don't drag your heels back into yesterday. There was a recent Charlie Brown comic strip in which Linus says, "I guess it's wrong to always be worrying about tomorrow. Maybe we should think only about today." Charlie Brown replies, "No. That's giving up. I'm still hoping that yesterday will get better." Enjoy and live for today. Find joy in little things — the smile of a child, a warm handshake, the song of a bird, a caring smile. Laugh a lot. It's stress-relieving.

The chaplains of the Fort Benning community stand ready to serve and aid you in your spiritual journey and through the stressful times of your life.

1987 Jewish High Holy Day Observances:

The days of Jewish religious obligation during the month of October are:

- Yom Kippur (Day of Atonement: fast day), sunset Friday, Oct. 2, through sunset Saturday, Oct. 3.
- Sukkot (Feast of Tabernacles), sunset Wednesday, Oct. 7, through sunset Friday, Oct. 9.
- Shemini Atzeret-Simhat Torah, sunset Wednesday, Oct. 14, through sunset Friday, Oct. 16.

If military requirements do not prohibit it, commanders will excuse from duty all persons required by the tenets of their faith to observe certain customs or to attend religious services.

A liberal pass and leave policy will be followed with special consideration for the need of personnel to arrive at their destination prior to the beginning of the holiday service.

Every assistance should be given to facilitate the participation and encourage the attendance of all Jewish personnel at these observances.

The following services will be held at the Main Post Jewish chapel, building 229, on the corner of Dixie Road and Ingersoll Street:

- Yom Kippur:
  —Friday, Oct. 2 — 7 p.m. (Kol Nidre)

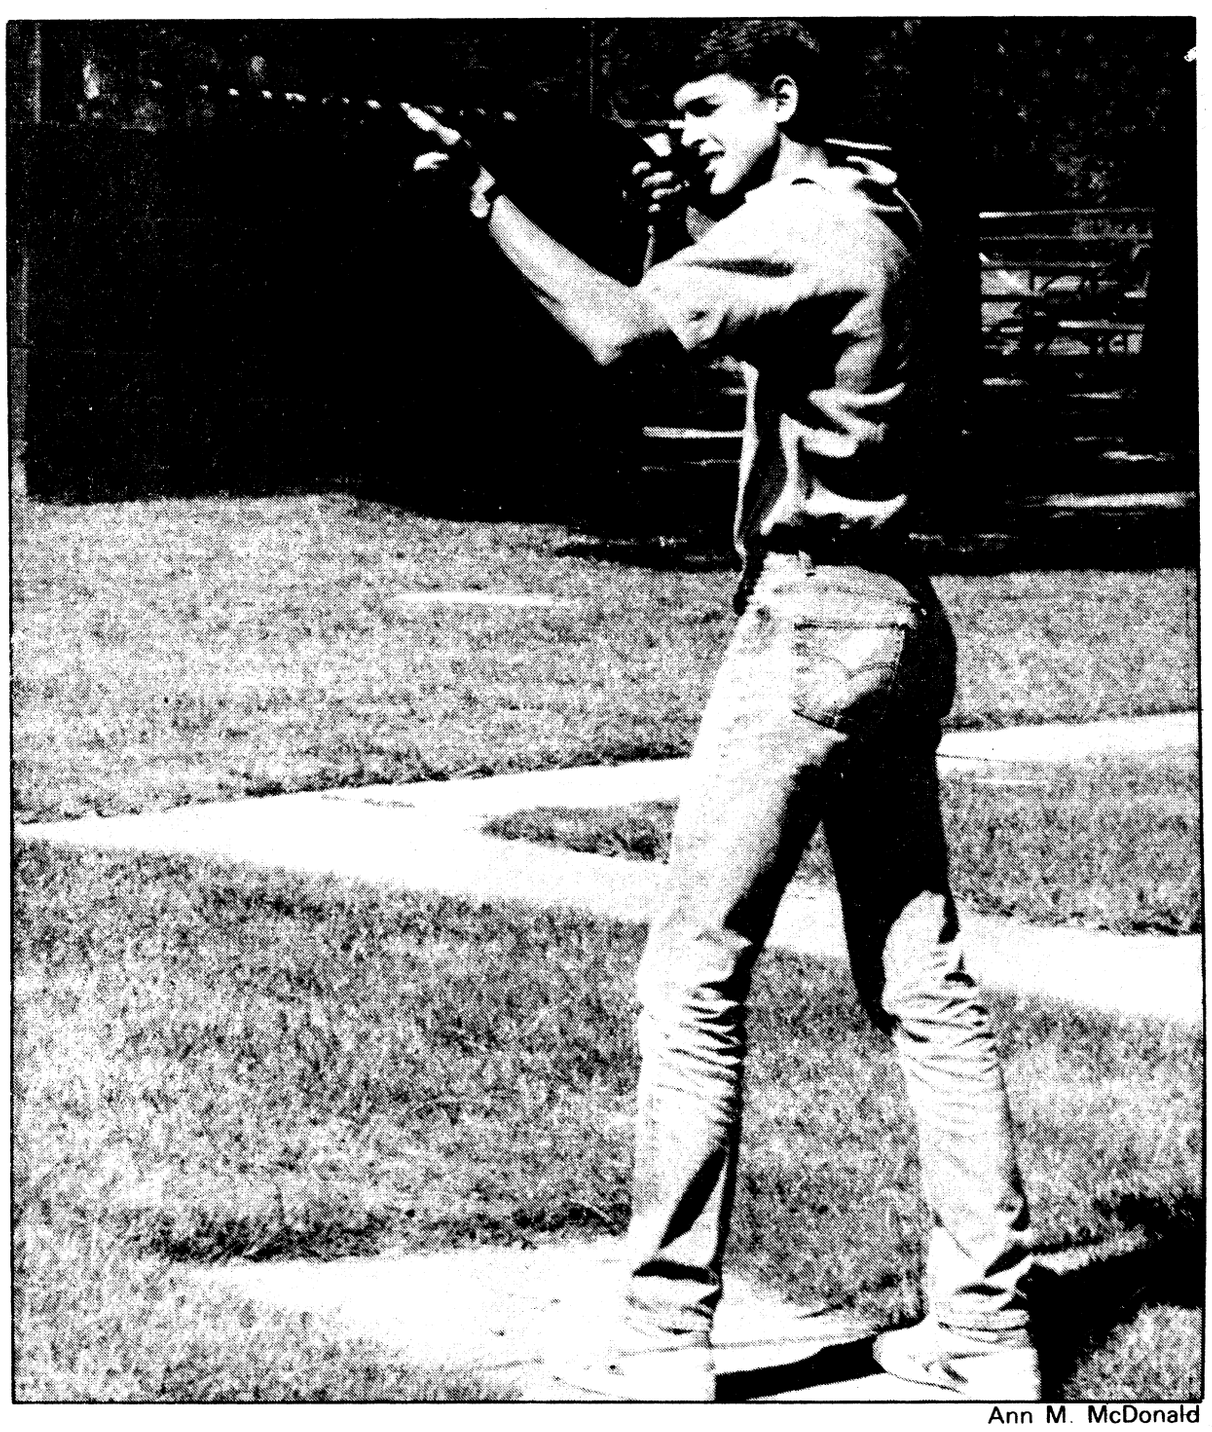
Post deer population up

By Chris Dunn
Natural Resources Division, DEH

Results of data obtained from the Fort Benning Deer Permits (FB (Eng) Form 48) returned by hunters at the end of the 1986-87 season indicates that there are plenty of deer roaming the installation's woodlands. Hunters reported harvesting 1,604 deer last season. Of this figure, 925 were bucks and 679 were does.

Several indicators are utilized each year to make population estimates. These include deer population models, trend analysis, hunter reports and data obtained from physical examination of deer brought by the Deer Check Station. Data obtained last year indicates that the population is between 50 and 60 deer per square mile. Ideally, the population should be about 40 per square mile.



Average weights for various buck and doe age classes are obtained each year during the either sex-hunting dates and are considerably lower than average weights of deer killed on state-operated wildlife management areas.

Fort Benning's 1½-year old bucks averaged 70 pounds field-dressed while those from wildlife management areas are 80-plus pounds. Although antler size improved in 1986-87, antler measurements are still below regional averages.

All the data obtained indicates a serious overpopulation problem on Fort Benning. Biologists have recommended increasing hunting pressure, which should result in more deer harvested. The installation has taken a step in that direction by allowing two guests per day without other restrictions imposed as in the past. Additionally, training will be minimized on the opening weekend of the Georgia gun season in order to provide maximum hunting opportunities. However, all these efforts will be in vain unless support is also given by the hunter in killing a deer- preferably a doe.

Many hunters do not kill does for one reason or another. This is not good management, and, in fact, severely limits harvest possibilities. For example, results of a 15-year study conducted by the Alabama Game & Fish Commission showed that for each 100 deer in Alabama, the following age and sex ratios were present: five bucks, one year or older, with antlers of three or more points; ten bucks, one year or older, with visible spikes; 20 buck fawns less than one year old; 40 does, one year or older; and 20 doe fawns less than a year old. With a "bucks only" hunting philosophy, only 15 out of each 100 deer are legal for harvest. Even under the most intensive hunting pressure, it would be virtually impossible to harvest half the legal bucks each year. This is not a practical method of controlling the problem.

Now comes the hard part. Each of us who hunt deer will be categorized into two classes: those that continue to march as before, passing up spiked deer, not harvesting does and complaining of small deer; and those that can take the ribbing from their buddies, shoot a small spiked deer or harvest one or more does. The latter will end up with a lot more at the end of the hunting season — the satisfaction of knowing that he personally helped to improve the deer herd. We can improve the quality of the deer and double the harvest at the same time — only if each of us makes this their goal.

Greenwing shooters

Todd Reaves takes aim at a target during the recent Greenwing Competion at the Army Marksmanship Unit Range off Dixie Road, Fort Benning. Youths up to age 17 competed in different shooting contests, received gun instruction and shot skeet. This is an annual event hosted by Ducks Unlimited.

Benning Bass club holds tourney

Fort Benning Bass Club

The Bass Club of Fort Benning held its annual fish fry for club members and families Sept. 20 at Uchee Creek.

The fish fry was preceded by a day-and-a-half tournament also held out of Uchee Creek. The tournament was a boat event, where total weight from each participant in the boat is added together to determine the winning boat.

The team of Skip Ray and Bill Alenworth took first place with a total weight of 32 pounds, 12 ounces. Alensworth also caught the biggest bass of the tournament, a 7-pound, 1-ounce beauty. They caught most of their fish on top water lures and worms.

Second place was won by the team of Murray Williams and Joe Steed. Their catch weighed in at 32 pounds and one ounce. Third place went to the team of Ben McGuire and Jennifer Waugh. Their catch weighed in at 27 pounds, 11 ounces.

The October tournament is scheduled for Oct. 17-18 at Lake Seminole. The next club meeting will be Sept. 28 at the Hidden Door Club.

Youth Activities fall soccer and football seasons underway

USAIC Public Affairs

The Fall Soccer and Football Seasons for the Youth Activities program is under way. This season there are four separate soccer divisions: Mighty Mites, for 4- and 5- year olds; Grasshoppers, 6-8 years; Termites, 9-11 years and the Junior League, which consists of 12-15 year olds.

The season will last until Nov 8.

Play will be held every Saturday begining at 9 a.m. on Gordon field.

"Soccer benefits the children, especially the smaller ones," said Ray Pierce, the YA director, "because it is such a fun game and it teaches them sportsmanship."

The children will be playing different teams in their division and the Junior League will be playing on the Columbus circuit.

The mighty mites are unique in that they fall under an instructional league, which teachs them the fundamentals of soccer.

The children play on a scaled-down field and their coaches are used as referees.

The Football league has three divisions this year, the Grasshoppers ages 6-8, the Termites ages 9-10 and the Pee Wees ages 11-13. The Grasshoppers play flag football while the other two division play tackle.

Footbal will also be played every Saturday begining at 9 a.m. on Blue Field.

The following are the scores from last Saturday's Football games:

Grasshoppers
Bears - 10 vs Wildcats - 6
Termites
Giants - 18 vs Cougars - 0
Pee Wees
Trojans - 19 vs Redskins - 0
Packers - 20 vs Broncos - 6

The following is the standings for the Soccer league:

Mighty Mites	W	L	T
Gremlins	2	0	0
Transformers	1	1	0
Bullets	1	1	0
Golden Eagles	0	2	0
Grasshoppers
Black Hawks	3	0	0
Tigers	2	1	0
Blue Thunder	2	1	0
Ghostbusters	1	2	0
Raiders	0	3	0
Termites
Red Demons	3	1	0
Cosmos	2	1	0
Fireball	1	2	1
Phythons	1	1	1
Pack Rats	2	1	0
Panthers	0	3	0

Alabama racing championships set

East Alabama Motor Speedway

East Alabama Motor Speedway General Manager Billy Thomas has announced that the Ninth Annual Alabama State Championships will be held on Saturday, Oct. 17, and Sunday, Oct. 18.

The event features the best drivers and cars throughout the southeast in five different divisions of competition. Late Models, Cadets, Open Wheel Modifieds, Street Stockers and Enduros will all be in action.

Generally billed as a big weekend for lower divisions of cars, the Alabama State Championship in each class is a great way for a race team to put the finishing touches on the racing season. Over $20,000 in prize money will be up for grabs over the two-day period.

On Saturday evening, Qualifying Heat Races and Time Trials will be held in all classes, plus an exciting Enduro Feature Race.

On Sunday afternoon (1:30 p.m. EDT), feature races will get underway.

"Next to the National 100, this is our biggest stock car event of the year," said Thomas. "All the drivers and crews point towards the Alabama State Championships. It's the big money race of the season for most of the lower divisions and will draw some tough competition from around Georgia and Alabama that visit our speedway for this event only.

"It'll be great for the racers and the fans," Thomas said. "We'd like to invite everyone to come be with us for all the action."

For more information contact Billy Thomas or Jim Jacobs at (205) 297-2588.

SPORTS SHORTS

Basketball tourney set

The Sandhill basketball bragging rights will be up for grabs Oct. 6 at 7 p.m. when 10th Mountain squares off against 1st Brigade ITC in Santiago Gym. Everyone is invited to attend the annual event. For more information contact the Santiago gym at 544-2486.

Bait shop clearance on

The Uchee Creek bait shop is having a sale on their fishing equipment and merchandise. Big markdowns have been made and quantities are limited. Now is the time to save big on your fishing needs. The shop is open from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. seven days a week. Don't miss out. Hurry while the selection is best!

Membership for ladies golf

The Fort Benning Ladies Golf Association will host a membership coffee on Sept. 29 at 8:30 a.m. at the golf course dining facility. All interested ladies, regardless of skill level, are invited to attend.

Tournament play: On Oct. 27 the FBLGA will host an annual "Invitational Tournament. For more information contact Debbie Vogel at 568-0080.

Phone in / out to hunt here

A hunter call-in/call-out program will replace the physical sign-in/sign-out system of last year. This program will start with the 1987 Fort Benning deer firearms season.

The call-in/call-out telephone lines will be open seven days a week from 4 a.m. to 8 p.m..

Telephone numbers will be published at a later date and will be posted on range clearance maps located at Harmony Church, Uchee Creek and Building 247.

Zero weapon, deer hunters

Personal weapon zeroing for deer gun season will be conducted at Easley Range from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. on Oct. 3. In case of inclement weather the date will be change to Oct. 17.

Post license sales change

State licenses and post permits will no longer be sold at the Uchee Creek Recreation Area on weekends and holidays. This change is due to construction of the new bait shop.

Walkers club sponsors Volksmarch

Georgia Walkers Club

Amidst the fall leaves and mountain scenery, the Georgia Walkrs Club will sponsor its Eighth International Volksmarch at Red Top Mountain State Park Oct. 10 and 11.

Participants must begin the walk between 8 a.m. and 1 p.m. and must finish by 5 p.m. Both 10 and 20-kilometer walks will be held. The course is on a hiking trail that may not be suitable for strollers or wheelchairs. It is entirely in the woods with no significant hills.

While there is no fee to participate in the volksmarch, souvenir medals will be available for a $4 fee. Late registration (after Oct. 5) is $5. Participants may also register for International Federation of Popular Sports credit for $1.50.

The event will be held come rain or shine.

Red Top Mountain State Park is located at Exit 123 on I-75 North in Cartersville, Ga.

To register or for more information, call Duncan Brantley at 961-0109 or Karen McMullen at 478-6814.

A volksmarch is an organized hike or walk of 10 or 20 kilometers (about 6 to 12 miles), along a specified trail through woods, forests, scenic or historical areas. It is designed to appeal to everyone, no matter what their age, and is not a contest of speed or endurance. Participants travel at their own pace and may walk, jog or run. The event must be started and completed during a specified time and participants must have start cards stamped at various checkpoints along the course.

Volksmarches are walking events which are extremely popular in Europe. The volksmarch (people's walk) is also spreading in popularity in the United States through the American Volkssport Association (AVA). The AVA is a member of the International Federation of Popular Sports. Volkssporting includes walking, swimming, bicycling and cross-country skiing events.

"THE DEALERSHIP THAT CARES ABOUT YOU!!

WE DELIVER . . .

Big Bucks.

This week, you could save many dollars on a variety of different items with just the coupons in the Wednesday Ledger and Thursday Enquirer alone. That's much more than the weekly cost of the newspaper itself. We can save you money in other ways, too. Our food pages advertise sale items, and you can find reduced prices on clothing, automotive and other items, not to mention the bargains you can find in our want ads. And with our convenient home delivery, not only do we give you big bucks, but we deliver them right to your door every day. That's guaranteed — or you don't pay.

Don't miss out.

Week highlights ways to prevent, survive house fires

By Ann McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

Planning alternate means of escape is the theme for Fire Prevention Week, which kicks off Monday.

According to Fort Benning Fire Chief, Charles B. Carr, the Fort Benning Fire Department has planned a variety of events to entertain and educate post residents.

Monday through Friday each Fire House will conduct an open house. Firemen will be on hand to answer questions and demonstrate equipment.

Carr said that there will be displays in the Main Exchange Mall for people of all ages and there will be gifts given out randomly to people of all ages.

"Some of our people will be in all the housing areas to inspect homes upon request." he said. "My men will tell them what rules they are breaking and how to fix them."

The biggest thing that the department is stressing is prevention, something that should be practiced all year long.

"We practice the three E's" Carr said, "We engineer ways to prevent fires, we educate the people and then we enforce it."

Evacuation is a focal point because, statistics show that most victims of fires are overcome by smoke because that didn't know proper procedures.

Carr suggested alternate routes of escape and a designated place to meet outdoors. "Most people tend to go out the same way they came in and that can't always be done so planning is necessary."

The department find prevention training most effective with children. They found that kids tend to listen more and actually practive what they have been taught.

To support their program the post Fire Department has a puppet show that is used to entertain the kids. Carr said that the show is not only popular here but they receive many requests from the surrounding area as well.

Army plans additions to SRB program

Army News Service

WASHINGTON — Seven military occupational specialties have been added to the fiscal year 1988 selective re-enlistment bonus program, and five specialty multipliers were increased as of Sept. 23.

The bonus program has been a success in attracting soldiers to the critically short specialties, said Maj. Allen Deutsch. "As a result, we were able to also decrease multipliers in 14 specialities and to delete nine."

Deutsch, a staff officer in the Army's Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Personnel, explained that the program has become a management tool by which the Army sustains the force by attracting and rewarding soldiers who re-enlist in critical specialties.

"This is why we have continued to add and delete specialties from the program," he said.

He anticipates minimal change to the program will be required in the future. Here are the latest specialties added to the program: TACFIRE operations specialist, field artillery firefinder radar operator, Pershing missile crewmember, air defense artillery command and control system operator/repairer, radio/TV systems specialist, terrain analyst and ground surveillance systems operator.

Specialty multipliers increased in the program are the: MLRS/Lance operations/fire directions specialist, ADA short range gunnery crewmember, MANPADS crewman, areoscout observer and corrections specialist.

Contract cleaning of family quarters faces funding snag

Army News Service

The recently announced authorization for start-up of the Army's "family-quarters cleaning initiative," by which major Army commanders may undertake contract cleaning of soldiers' quarters, has run into a funding snag.

Consequently, said Dean Stefanides, "Although some major Army commands already have begun carrying out the initiative, we're faced with a recent policy change from the Office of the Secretary of Defense that might delay further implementation as well as bring a halt to the MACOM actions inprogress."

Stefanides monitors the Army's family housing program for the chief of engineers at Army headquarters.

He explained that the new OSD policy requires that the Army family housing operations account be used to pay cleaning contractors who are called in to clean quarters of soldiers on orders for permanent change of station.

"Since that account is not as well resourced as the maintenance account, the original ac-

McCaffrey named for key NATO slot

Hartzog selected for deputy position

USAIC Public Affairs Office

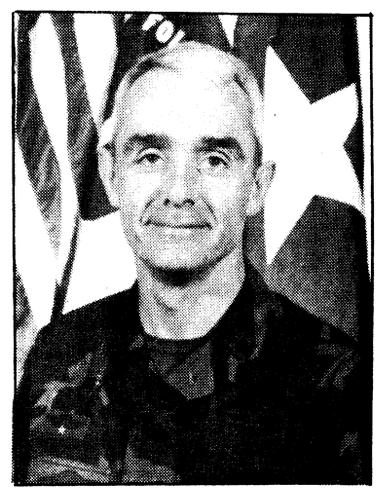
Brig. Gen. Barry R. McCaffrey will be be leaving Benning to become the deputy U.S. military representative to NATO, in Brussels, Belgium, a Department of Army spokesman announced in Washington, D.C., today.

McCaffrey has served as the deputy commanding general of Fort Benning and assistant commandant of the U.S. Army Infantry School since January 1986.

He will report to his assignment with the Military Committee, U.S. Army International Military Activity, no later than January 1988.

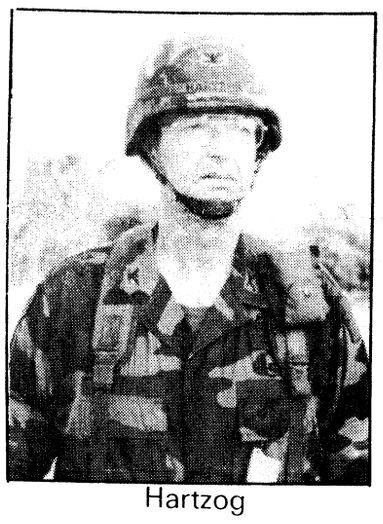
Succeeding McCaffrey will be Col. William W. Hartzog, who currently commands the 197th Infantry Brigade on post. Hartzog's reporting date will not be determined until Senate confirmation of the 1987 brigadier general promotion list. He was nominated for his first star in July.

Hartzog has been the 197th commander since November 1985.



McCaffrey, 44, was born in Taunton, Mass., and was commissioned a second lieutenant upon graduation from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point in 1964. He holds a master of arts degree in civil government.

His professional schooling includes the National Defense University, Capstone Flag and General Officer Course; Western Behavioral Sciences Institute, School of Management and Strategic Studies, and the Defense Language Institute (Vietnamese Language).



McCaffrey holds two Distinguished Service Crosses, the nation's second highest decoration for combat action.

He is married to the former Jill Faulkner and they have three children.

Hartzog, 46, is a Wilmington, N.C., native. He received his commission as a second lieutenant upon graduating from The Citadel in 1963.

Hartzog

He earned a master's degree in psychology at Appalachian State University in Boone, N.C., in 1974. His military schooling includes the Infantry Officer Basic and Advanced Courses, Airborne School, the U.S. Marine Corps Command and Staff College, and the U.S. Army War College.

A senior parachutist, Hartzog's decorations include the Combat Infantryman's Badge, the Expert Infantryman's Badge, the Legion of Merit with two oak leaf cluster, the Soldier's Medal, the Bronze Star Medal with V-device and oak leaf cluster and the purple heart.

He is married to the former Roberta Anita Fitton and they have two children.

Post school revert to regular hours

By Beth Middlemiss
Fort Benning schools

School starting and dismissal times change Monday in the eight Fort Benning schools as they return to normal operating hours.

The Fort Benning School System has operated on a heat relief schedule since the school year began in August. This early schedule provided more time in school during the cooler morning hours and shortened time in school during the afternoon heat.

Starting Monday, regular school hours will begin and end the school day 45 minutes later.

These hours will continue through May 6, 1988, when heat relief hours will again be adopted until the end of the school year in June.

School bus schedules will be adjusted accordingly.

See the accompanying chart for the new reporting schedule for your child's school.

Octoberfest offers family fun

AUSA

Miss Georgia, Kelly Jerles, will be a featured attraction at the Association of the U.S. Army's Octoberfest this weekend at the Columbus Iron Works.

The fun begins Friday with an Octoberfest dance from 6 p.m. until midnight, featuring continuous German Fest music, German food, beer and wine, and door prizes.

German Fest music begins the day Saturday from noon to 1:30 p.m. Then Country and Western music will be played from 1:30 to 6 p.m. From 6 p.m. to midnight, Rock and Roll music will entertain one and all.

From 1:30 to 9 p.m., there will be appearances by a variety of entertainers, including the Georgia Dancing Machine, Miss Columbus (Traci Green), Miss Phenix City (Shannon Stevens), and Miss Georgia.

There will be door prize drawings throughout the day, as well as gift and craft stands, and German food and drinks available.

Admission for one day only is $3, or $5 for a two-day ticket. Tickets can be purchased from your command sergeant major, at the Trade Center, the CB&T bank on post or the main office on 1st Ave, or at the First Union Bank on post or the main office on 1st Ave.

Eddy Bridges closes

Eddy Bridge will be closed Thursday from 6:30 p.m. until 3 a.m. Friday, because of readiness training.

All traffic will be diverted away from Lawson Army Airfield during this period, so motorists are advised to take an alternate route.

OPINION

Make sure your family has a fire escape plan

Oct. 4 through 10 marks this year's Fire Prevention Week. Observed annually by the United States and Canada, Fire Prevention Week always falls during the Sunday through-Saturday period that includes Oct. 9.

This date is the anniversary of "The Great Chicago Fire of 1871," which killed 250 people and destroyed property totaling $168 million.

I urge all military and civilian personnel to help your fire department during Fire Prevention Week and all year long, by keeping your homes and your community as safe as possible from the dangers of fire by following the recommendations of your fire department; i.e., by practicing this year's Fire Prevention Week theme, "Play It Safe — Plan Your Escape." It is most important that you and your family know and practice an escape route from your home should a fire occur.

The Fort Benning Fire Department has scheduled several events this week to emphasize the importance of fire prevention, including a display at the main mall, puppet shows at all post schools and open houses at all post fire stations.

Remember, keeping the world safe from fire is a shared responsibility. Let's all support our fire prevention program at Fort Benning and help make this a more fire-safe world in which to live.

European allies contribute much in support facilities, manpower

Association of the U.S. Army

The politicians and pundits who carp about our NATO alliance partners failing to contribute their fair share to the defense of Western Europe too often couch their criticisms only in terms of dollar signs. In so doing, they frequently overlook the tremendous investments in support facilities, logistics support, and, most importantly, manpower that is provided the North Atlantic Alliance by our European allies.

It is a fact that we spend more money on defense than does Europe, but that fact does not reflect the true value of the contributions of Western Europe. Consider, for example, the addition of territorial forces and host nation commitments to augment American logistics support capabilities and the contributions from either side of the Atlantic begin to become more balanced.

It should also be observed that Germany's conscript military forces would be measured to cost some $700 million more annually if they are to be compared with U.S. volunteer forces of equal size. Such manpower revaluation is appropriate for almost all of our allies, from Norway to Turkey, and many other contributions must be re-measured in the same manner.

Gen. John W. Vessey Jr., former chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, summed up some of these in a recent address. He said, "I am not against criticism, but it must come from an understanding of how NATO works, For example, if you multiply the population of Oregon by 20, give each person a car, bring in another half-million armed foreigners, put 50,000 armored vehicles on the road and put a couple thousand jets in the air, at least the Oregonians would know what the Germans have to put up with."

Rising defense costs and resource constraints on the armed forces are certainly not uniquely American problems. Our European partners have been feeling the pinch, too. So long as each of us continues to share the burden of the defense of Western Europe, we should be able to count on NATO to give us another 40 years of peace there.

Phone system has Snively all tied up

By Clyde Snively
USAIC Public Affairs Office

It's very difficult to get people to agree on anything. Find two people, ask for their opinions on any subject and you'll get two different answers.

I did discover one topic that the people at Fort Benning normally agree on.

They all agree that the phone systems takes in air.

They may disagree as to just how bad it is, but they all agree that "bad" is a nice term to describe it.

There are some offices here where a person's job revolves around the telephone. If the phone isn't working, that person isn't working.

I've seen some people so frustrated that they've grabbed the phone and heaved it out the window. Picture a phone flying out the sixth floor window of Infantry Hall. Picture it when there's a ceremony going on down below. Not a pretty sight.

Talk about your injured-on-the-job claims. It's a good thing the Fort Benning work force is stoic. Otherwise there would be a multitude of claims for inflamed and swollen digits, a result of dialing 8s, 9s and 77s over and over and over again.

People in DEH and DOL needn't fear contracting out. What self-respecting business would want to do business at a place where you can't even call across post?

Personally, I think the phones here are unjustly maligned. People just aren't looking at the positive aspects of the phone system.

What better whipping boy do we have for failing to do something? It's like the old "check's in the mail," excuse, only now our answer is, "I tried to return your call, but I just couldn't get an outside line."

Translation: "I didn't want to talk to you."

Or, "Well, we were in the office until 6 p.m., but you know these phones, sometimes you just can't get through."

Translation: "So, I took a two-hour lunch break. I just forgot that Jan was off that afternoon."

Or, "Hello, hello, sorry, can't hear you, please call back."

Translation: "Hey boss, that pest just phoned, what do you want me to tell him when he calls back?"

I just came from a post that had a new phone system installed. It had everything the phone company advertises — call forwarding, call waiting, automatic transfer, automatic ring back, etc.

It was awful. Get a busy signal when calling another office? Then just dial in a three-digit number, redial the number you want, and as soon as both lines are free, the phone rings in for you.

This is fine if you have your own number or if you are prepared to wait for the ring back.

Our office had this guy, Garry, who would dial up the code and then leave the office. So then you have the phone ringing on your desk and in some other office. You answer, the person in the other office answers and neither of you knows who dialed who or for what reason. "DPCA, may I help you?" "This is public affairs, may I help you?" "You called me," "Sorry, just a minute...GAAARRRRRY!"

Another feature was if you wanted an autovon, and it was busy, again, you'd dial a three-digit code, the autovon access number, then wait for a free line.

If flames could talk, here's what they'd say

Fire Prevention Office

I was a fire. My beginning was small but my effect was great. Let me relate the short story of my evil life.

It was a little after midnight on a damp, cold morning when I began my destruction. I started as a glowing ember on the end of a cigarette. Through carelessness, a small part of me dropped unnoticed between the cushions of an overstuffed chair. A hasty "nightly inspection" failed to disclose my hiding place. I lay there smoldering for some time until I ate my way through to the open where I reached my favorite food — OXYGEN.

Gradually, I picked up strength until I was beginning to crackle and roar with the heat I felt building up inside me. Then I heard a yell, "FIRE!" Someone had detected my presence.

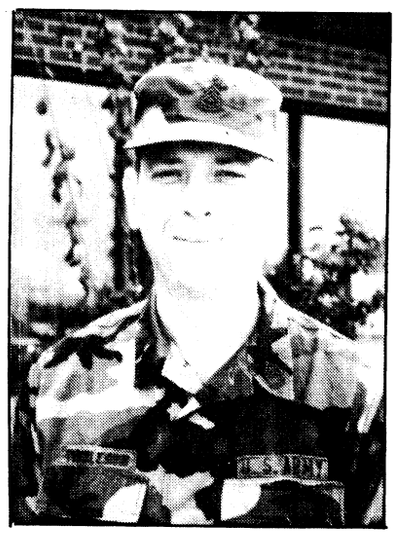
Insulted at being discovered, I began to gnaw at the curtains, drapes and overstuffed furniture, all the time feeling braver and more powerful. Then I heard someone dialing "117" and shortly, through the closed windows, I heard the alarm being sounded at the fire station and I knew my enemy was on my trail.

Suddenly a shudder went through me as I heard powerful engines roar into life, followed by the highpitched wail of sirens, and I knew water and fire trucks were on the way. I knew that the men on this equipment were angry at being awakened to the cold and unknown danger of the night and would do their best to destroy me quickly.

Although these fear-inspiring sounds were echoing in my mind, I was becoming stronger and more confident, eating deeper into the wood of the furniture and floors to feed my enormous hunger. Then the roar of an engine announced that the first fire truck had arrived.

I could hear still another as it unloaded hose and equipment and pulled quickly away to a hydrant close by. The sound of hose being pulled warned me firemen were at the entrance. There was a scurry as they adjusted their oxygen masks at their faces and voices shouting orders for the job to be done. I roared and blistered the paint on the door as a warning to those who were trying to conquer me. Suddenly there was the shattering sound of glass and a hole appeared in a window; soon to be followed by the tip of a shining nizzle. It threatened my life as a torrent of water rushed from its tip and began to turn me to steam.

Steam! My mind raced madly for steam would absorb my heat and leave me only a glowing ember. They were too quick for me. I could feel the strength which I had acquired leaving me and, before I could make these firefighters draw back, I was reduced to a few blazes spotted here and there among the ruins of the room. I was lost.



Then I heard the door open and my thoughts leaped to the idea that if I could get more oxygen I would be strong again. The last chance was denied me though, because helmeted figures bearing hose lines came through the doorway and after a few minutes of their efficient efforts I was reduced to one glowing ember in VARIOUS VOICES: What is the best military school you have attended?

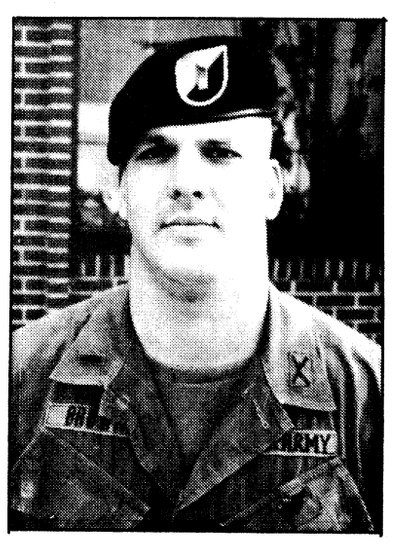
Maj. Danny Greene, executive officer, 1st Battalion, 507th Parachute Infantry Regiment — "Airborne School is the best school I ever attended because it did more to build my self confidence than any other school. It was also my first Army school and set the tone for my life. I have never served in a leg unit at any time in my entire career."



SFC Keith Tumbleson, 2nd Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, 2nd Infantry Training Brigade — "The best military school I have attended is a Signal School at Fort Gordon, Ga. It was the first military course I ever attended and I thoroughly enjoyed it. I've since changed my military occupational specialty but I'll always remember that first one."

Sp4 Joel Chandler, Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment — "Advanced Individual Training at Lowry Air Force Base in Denver, Colo., is the best school I've attended. The training was very professional, well taught, very practical and I utilize what I have learned everyday."

SSgt. Diana Compo, Company A, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, The School Brigade — "Drill Sergeant School was the best course I have ever attended. It's a more advanced way of teaching soldiers basic leadership skills. The Primary Leadership Development Course and the Basic Non-Commissioned Officers Courses teach leadership skills too, but DSS goes much more indepth."

1st Lt. David Brown, 3rd Ranger Company, Ranger Department — "Ranger School without a doubt is the best school I have ever attended. It builds the character and instills the will to fight in combat situations. I believe that every basic infantryman needs to go to Ranger School. The course taught me more about my own capabilities than anything else I have ever done."

Pvt. 2 Christopher Glass, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 58th Infantry, 197th Infantry Brigade — "Airborne School is the best course I have attended. I thought it was better than air-assault/air-mobile. There is a certain sense of freedom you feel when you jump out of an airplane."

Recently, the 586th Engineer Company (AFB) deployed personnel to Fort McClellan, Ala., to provide Army readiness training evaluators and support equipment to the 166/167th Engineer Company of the Alabama National Guard.

The chief evaluator was Capt. David R. Neeley, with SSgt. Mark Burrell assisting in providing the technical expertise in float bridging and MK bridge erection boat skills. Throughout the 14-day exercise, the soldiers of the 586th Engineer Company strengthened their capstone affiliation ties with the two national guard units.

Throughout the field exercise, the evaluation team provided valuable assistance to both units in areas concerning bridging and rafting missions. The operators of the 586th Engineer Company obtained time to train in a different environment, as well as to learn about sling loading ribbon bays with heavy lift helicopters .

The soldiers of the Supply Section of the 215th Finance Support Unit, 36th Engineer Group, were recently named the best supply section on post.

According to the Sgt. Darlene F. Driver, a supply sergeant for the 215th, the section was chosen to represent the 36th Engineer Group in late August and was awarded the post unit Supply Excellence Award in September.

"I basically walked into an excellent supply section here in February, and I've just tried to keep it that way," Driver said. She added that without the help of her two clerks, Sp4s Cynthia Robbins and Lewis Hallings, the section could never have achieved the best percentage on post. Although the section scored 99 percent, Driver said, "The inspection was very tough, the post inspectors really had us sweating."

The inspection covered every area in the standard operating procedures of a unit supply section, Driver said. "They graded us on everything from paper work to our own knowledge of the supply operation."

According to Driver, the 215th supply section has since put together a written format of its operation and will represent Fort Benning in the Forces Command competition for the supply excellence award.

Soldiers from the 36th Engineer Group provided vital behind-the-scenes support to 197th troops during their recent deployment at the National Training Center in Fort Irwin, Calif.

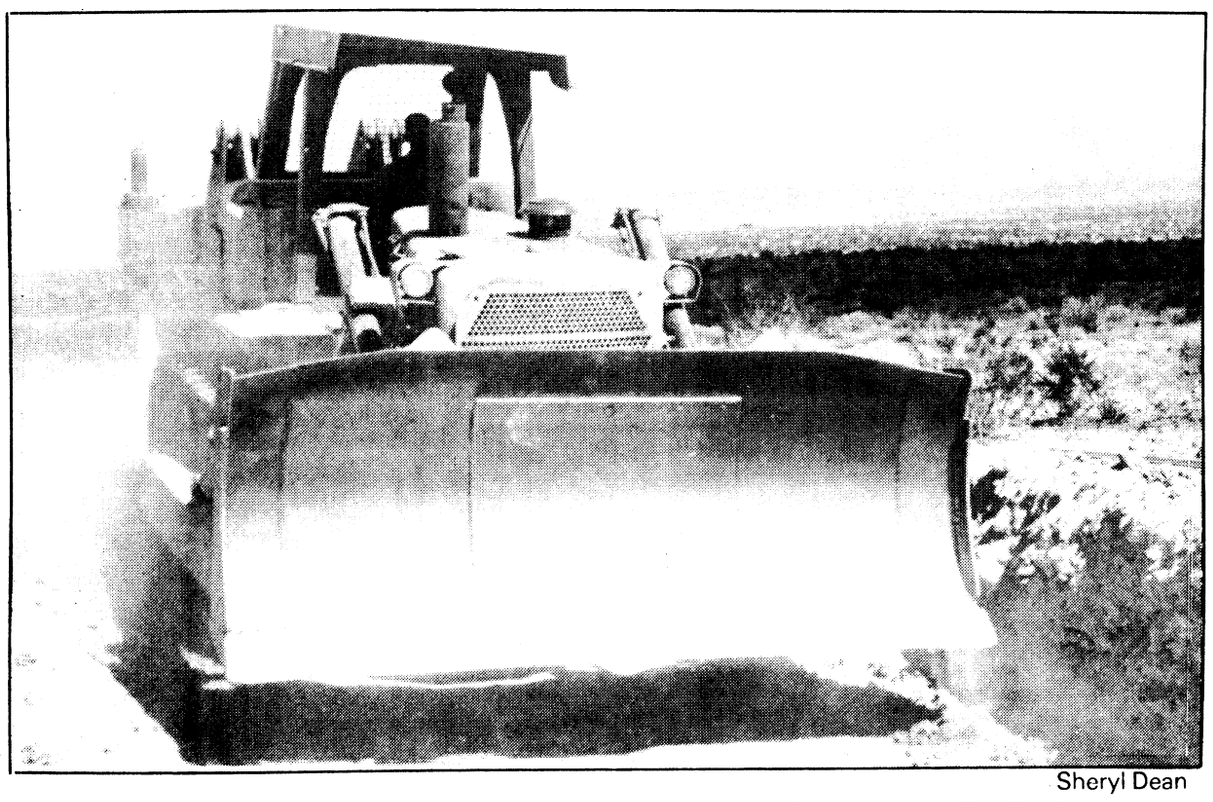
The 608th Ordinance Company and the 533rd Transportation Company, 67th Maintenance Battalion, 36th Engineer Group, together played a major role in the success of the three-week training exercise in the Mojave Desert.

The 533rd was one of the last units to return from the NTC last week. It was also one of the first units to arrive in the desert back in mid-August, according to 2nd Lt. David Cintron, 553rd 1st Platoon leader.

The soldiers of the 533rd drove an estimated 175,000 miles in their all-important support role to the 197th, Cintron said.

Cintron explained that 59 soldiers from the 533rd convoyed 35 915-tractor-trailers loaded with their own equipment and many of the vehicles and equipment of the 608th and the 197th. The 1st and 3rd Platoons made the original convoy to the NTC and the 1st Pplatoon stayed there the duration of the exercise, he said. Then, the 2nd Platoon drove to Fort Irwin to assist the 1st Platoon in convoying back to Fort Benning.

While at NTC, the 1st Platoon was kept extremely busy, according to Cintron. "We ran rations, obstacles, ammunition, repair parts, trash and water anywhere they were needed," he said. "Our soldiers and tractors were on call 24 hours a day and the S-3 of the 197th gave us our missions daily."



While the 533rd was busy transporting supplies for the 197th, the 608th was providing the brigade with ammunition for its live-fire exercises.

According to SSgt. David Koppelmann, of the 608th, the companies primary mission was to set up an Ammunition Supply Point and run the Ammunition Transfer Point.

"We drew the ammunition from the Fort Irwin depot and were responsible for seeing that the 197th drew the ammo for the live-fire exercises," Koppelmann said.

"Our soldiers were always on call and the hands-on experience gave our ammunition specialists a much better understanding of their jobs," Koppelmann said.

The maintenance and service soldiers of the 608th were also on call and performed many 'midnight rescue missions' according to Sp4 Stanley Bartusiak. Although parts are hard to come by in the field and repairing vehicles is difficult to do without all of the normal equipment and tools, the maintenance soldiers were continuously repairing vehicles that had fallen victim to the desert environment, Bartusiak said.

Thirty officers and noncommissined officers from six countries in Central and South America graudated Sept. 24 at the U.S. Army School of the Americas from the Infantry Mortar Platoon Officer course.

Numbers of graduates and countries represented were Bolivia 3, Colombia 4, Costa Rica 8, Ecuador 5, El Salvador 9 and Venezuela 1.

Guest speaker for the graudation ceremony was 1st Lt. Adalberto Garcete, a guest instructor at USARSA from Paraguay.

The five-week course gives officers and NCOs the working knowledge on how to supervise and direct mortar platoon fire while supporting infantry combat opeations in a tactical environment.

The student learns gunnery techniques, fire direction center procedures, forward observer procedures and maintenance, operatin and employment of equipment.

Since is inception in 1946, USARSA has graduated more than 49,000 officers, NCOs and cadets from 22 countries in Central and South America and the Caribbean.

The phone would signal when ready.

If you wanted to answer a phone in an adjacent office, all you had to do was dial your three-digit code, the number that was ringing and the call would come to your line.

There was no excuse for not returning calls. You could even punch in a code and the number where you'd be when you left the office, so that a call to your number would follow you. It was awful.

There was no challenge in the system. You always knew what the different tones meant — busy, or dial tone.

Not only that, on a slow day there was no way to tune in to someone's conversations for a few moments of relaxation and to catch up on gossip.

You'd be amazed at the things I've learned trying to dial out when I thought I had a dial tone. Let me tell you folks, security's not the only outfit monitoring your conversations. I've got some great stories stored up for a slow news day.

People around here just don't realize how good they have it. Or, I should say most people don't. The major in our office has the phone system down to a science.

He sees someone coming and immediately picks up the phone. He might only be talking to static, but he can wait out most people he doesn't want to talk to.

Of course he walks around with a red ear and a permanent crick in his neck and right shoulder, but at least he isn't pestered by people he doesn't want to see.

I guess the moral of this story is be happy with what you've got. At least now, there's always an excuse for not reaching out and touching someone.

Salvadoran first year cadets from the "Capitan General Gerardo Barrios" Military Academy in San Salvador conducted 10 days of intensive small unit tactical training here under the guidance of U.S. and Latin American instructors of the Department of Combat Operations, U.S. Army School of the Americas.

The 40 Salvadoran cadets completed squad and platoon battle drills and combat tasks including extensive night training.

SFC Carlos Allen, noncommissioned officer-in-charge of the tactical training said, "These cadets are learning a wide variety of troop-leading procedures and methods of tactical employment useful in their own army. The 10 consecutive days of training include air assault operations and aerial re-supply, clearing obstacles and enemy positions and combat drills at the squad and platoon level."

Salvadoran third year cadet, Marlon Romero, who is serving as a tactical and escort officer for the freshmen cadets, said, "We are very pleased to have the opportunity to train at Fort Benning. We are also very enthusiastic and benefit from this training a great deal."

The cadets tested their skills in urban combat at the Fort Benning Urban Warfare Facility (MOUT) and participated in squad and platoon live fire attacks.

Upon completing their small unit tactical operations phase, the cadets will begin a rigorous eight-week "Commando" course which will find them away from Fort Benning in the mountains of northern Georgia and in the swamps of Eglin AFT, Fla.

Reserves

2nd Battalion, 423rd Regiment

Lt. Col. Phillip D. Stevens, commander of 2nd Battalion, 423d Regiment, 3nd Brigade (Infantry), 70th Division (Training), has been a traveling man this summer.

Recently, the battalion, from Grissom AFB, Ind., finished up its second week of annual Training on Sand Hill, displacing the 2/54 Infantry, 1st ITB in its Infantry OSUT training mission.

Earlier this summer, Stevens and Col. Robert M. Stockwell, 3rd Brigade commander, traveled to Orlando, Fla., to attend the Reserve Officer Association (ROA) annual conference. ROA selected 2/423 as the top large size Amy Reserve unit in CONUS, and presented Stevens with the award on July 2.

Next month, Stevens will travel to Washington, D.C. to attend the Association of the United States Army (AUSA) annual convention. AUSA has announced that the battalion has been awarded the General Walter T. Kerwin Award for having the highest rated Army Reserve unit based on mobilization readiness. The award will be presented by Army Chief of Staff Gen. Carl Vuono.

AUSA presents only two such awards each year, one for Army Reserve units and one for Army National Guard units.

197th Infantry

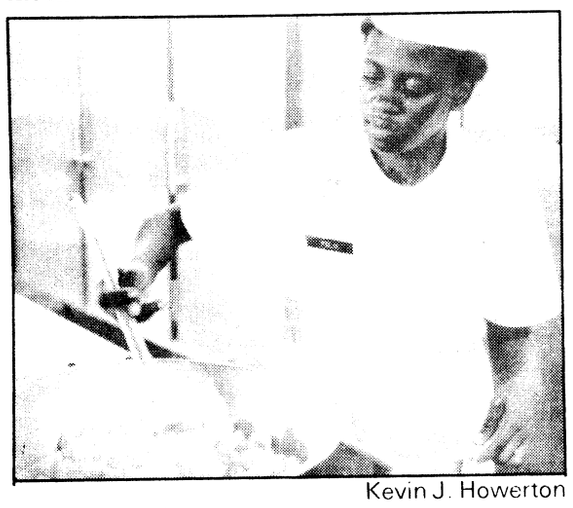
Sgt. Dawn M. Felix of Headquarters Company, 197th Infantry Brigade, won the Fort Benning chef of the quarter competition on Sept. 24. The competition included a verbal test on cooking skills, and a cook-off between representatives from various units on post. The special spaghetti menu for the cook-off was the same for all contestants.

Sgt. Felix, a native of Guyana, South Africa, won chef of the quarter honors for the 197th Infantry Brigade last July. She has also won chef of the quarter competitions three times in her previous unit, the 263rd Maintenance Company, stationed in Stuttgart, West Germany.

"I learned a lot about gourmet cooking in Germany", said Sgt. Felix. "I even took a two week culinary arts course given by the Army."



Sgt. Felix explained that the Army course taught food service specialists how to take the simple, basic items issued to dining facilities and use them to create appealing dishes. The course included unusual subjects as well, such as ice carving.

Sgt. Felix had less than a week to prepare for the chef of the quarter competition after returing to Fort Benning from deployment to the National Training Center, Fort Irwin, Calif.

"My shift leader, SFC Dawn Evans, spent a lot of her own time helping me study for the competition and giving me pointers for the cook-off," she said.

Sgt. Felix attributes much of her success to the positive attitude she has toward her job.

"My work is very challenging, but I enjoy it very much."

Sept. 24 marked the 25th anniversary of the 197th Infantry Brigade's activation into the regular Army at Fort Benning. On that date, leaders of the brigade dedicated a memorial, located on the Ivy Road entrance to Kelley Hill, to the men and women who have served with the Brigade over the past quarter of a century.

The history of the brigade actually dates back to 1941, when the 197th was formed as an element of the 99th Division. 197th Infantry Brigade soldiers fought in the European theater of World War II during three major campaigns; the Ardenness-Alsace, Rhineland, and Central Europe. As a result of their valorous actions, the unit was awarded the Belgian Forregere.

Following the war, the brigade was inactivated until 1962 when it was activated on Fort Benning to provide support to the U.S. Army Infantry Center.

Since that time the soldiers of the 197th have continued to set precedents for other Army units to follow.

In 1970, the 197th became the first all-volunteer, brigade-sized unit in the Army. In 1981 the 197th was the first U.S. Army Forces Command unit to deploy to the National Training Center and played a major role in smoothing some of the rough edges of the fledgeling NTC.

Since that time, the brigade has made seven rotations to the desert, including JRX Gallant Eagle last year at Twenty-nine Palms, Calif. In addition, 197th soldiers have trained in the winter climate of Fort Drum, N.Y., and during Winter REFORGER 85 in Germany. Other deployments in the past years include Japan, Panama and Alaska.

Today, the 197th is the largest separate brigade in the Army. The approximately 4,200 soldiers who wear the 197th patch on their soldier remain ready to fulfill our missions as a FORSCOM combat ready unit, as well as continued support to the Infantry School.

29th Infantry

29th Infantry Regiment

The 29th Infantry Regiment will celebrate the activation of its 1st and 2nd battalions this weekend along with a reunion of former 29th Infantry Regiment soldiers. A live-fire capability exercise, to include the M-16, squad automatic weapon, 60mm mortar and the Bradley Infantry Fighting Vehicle, will take place today from 2:30 to 4 p.m. at Red Cloud Range followed by a static display of the small arms weapons and the Bradley. The activation ceremony itself will occur on Saturday from 9 to 10 a.m. at Todd Field. A memorial service will conclude the weekend at 9:30 to 10:30 at Victory Pond.

The public is invited to attend these three events.

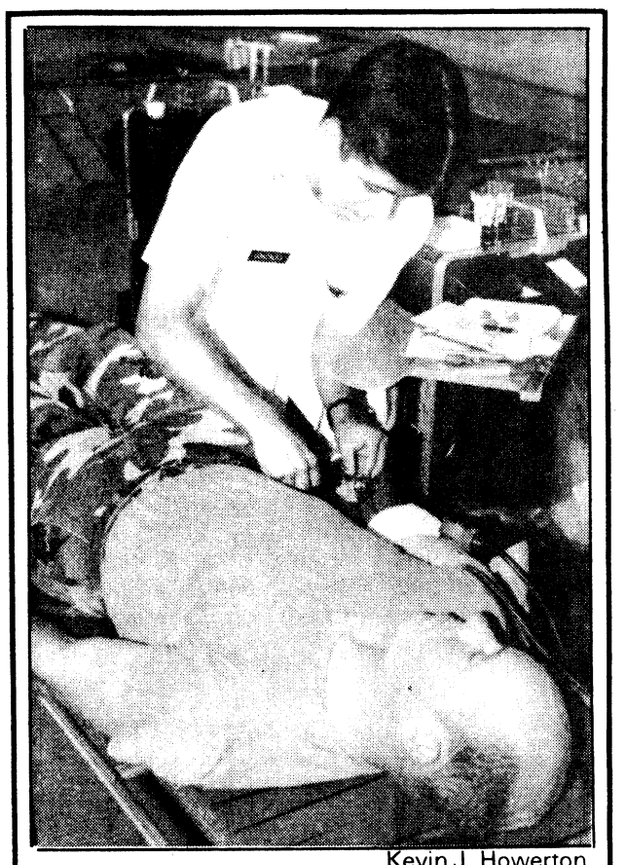
SSgt. Henry Copley, from Company C, 29th Infantry Regiment is this years Top Gun.

He was named Top Gun in the recently concluded first annual competition. For his efforts he was awarded an Army Accomodation Medal and a trophy.

In the event, soldiers fire the M16A2, M1911A1 caliber .45 pistol, M60 machine gun and M249 squad automatic weapon.

Each company in the regiment selected team members to participate in the demanding and challenging competition.



Col. Steve Sigfreid, commander, United States Army Infantry Training Center, was the guest of honor at the awards ceremony held on Wagner Range Sept. 27. He presented the awards to the competitors and provided remarks following the ceremony.

Col. John D. Fuller, commander, 29th Infantry Regiment, concluded the ceremony with closing remarks.

Next year they are planning to include the Bradley and Mortar firing and participation by USAITC cadre.

Winners of the individual categories are: Capt. David Erikson, B/1-29th, .45 caliber pistol; SFC William Duvall, C/2-29th, M16A2 rifle; Sgt. Clarence E. Horton, BID/1-29th SAW; SP4 William L. McCabe III, D/1-29th, M60 machinegun; Overall Competition 2nd Place, SFC Gary W. Beckham D/1-29th; 3rd Place, Sp4 William McCabe, D/1-29th.

Runnersup in the overall competition as well as first place winners in the individual events were awarded Army Achievement Medals and trophies.

Whether you lead a squad or command a battalion, your ability to help keep good soldiers in the Army is a strong reflection of your effectiveness as a leader.

From the day a young person begins Basic Training, to the last day of his or her enlistment, you make a critical difference. Because the way you lead your soldiers has a lot to do with their decision to reenlist.

Aside from teaching and training, as well as instilling in your people Army values to make them better soldiers, one of the most important things you do is to be a good listener. It lets your soldiers know you care. You make them feel needed. Respected. Appreciated. And, in turn, more likely to want to continue their Army experience.

You can give your soldiers dozens of great reasons to stay in the Army. But the greatest reason of all is the one staring back at you in the mirror: your soldiers are yours to keep.

ARMY. BE ALL YOU CAN BE.

MARSHAL'S VIEWPOINT

Wendell D. Choate
Provost Marshal's Office

This week I have good news and bad news. First the bad news: larcenies on Fort Benning are high. This includes larcenies of private property and larcenies of government property.

The good news is that larcenies can be reduced and hopefully prevented by securing all property. A thief is basically a lazy individual who doesn't want to work hard for wha. he gets. If you secure your property properly you will make the thief work too hard and consequently, he will give up and look for something easier.

What can you do to counter these thefts? Some of the ways are:

- Keep a record of all serial numbers.
- Mark property for identification.
- Lock doors and windows when you are not at home.
- Lock POV's and place packages, clothing, or other articles in the trunk or another place out of sight.
- Secure bicycles and other easily moved objects to something stationary.
- Notify Military Police immediately when your property has been taken.

A note of interest to the thief: The maximum punishment for conviction by a court-martial for larcency is a dishonorable discharge, confinement at hard labor, not to exceed five years, and total forfeiture of all pay and allowances. Theives should ask themselves this question before taking someone else's property — is it worth it?

Through the combined efforts of everyone on Fort Benning we can hopefully, reduce the number of larcenies and make it too hazardous for the thief. If you are a victim, or if you witness a crime, call the Military Police at 545-5223/5224 and HELP TAKE A BITE OUT OF CRIME.

New fiscal year means family must start over on deductible

CHAMPUS

WASHINGTON — With the start of a new fiscal year Oct.1, CHAMPUS health insurance patients must start from scratch with their deductible before their care become eligible for CHAMPUS coverage.

Under CHAMPUS, a family with one dependent must pay the first $50 of medical bills before the military plan begins to pay its portion of medical charges. Families with two or more dependents pay $100 before CHAMPUS begins paying.

CHAMPUS accepts any payments that patients make in order to fulfill the deductible requirement, including payments the patient makes to a civilian health insurance plan.

For active-duty dependents, CHAMPUS pays 80 percent of the charges for physician care that CHAMPUS officials determine o be eligible and reasonably priced. For retiree, CHAMPUS pays 75 percent of the charges.

Hospital care obtained after Oct. 1 will be governed by a new payment system that requires retirees and their dependents to pay a flat rate of $175 per day in a civilian hospital or 25 percent of the total charges, whichever is less. Active-duty dependents still will be required to pay a low fee of $7.55 per day in a civilian hospital.

Know the safety rules when riding a bicycle

By Aimee R. Holden
Bayonet staff writer

Summer is officially over and the kids have headed back to school, many on their bikes.

Because a large number of children use their bicycles to get to and from school and extra-curricular activities, now is a good time to remind everyone of proper bicycle safety habits.

Regulations for bicycle riders on Fort Benning are:

- All traffic signals, signs and devices will be obeyed. Bicycles are considered a vehicle, and must adhere to most of the same rules as cars and other motorized vehicles.
- Bicycles will be equipped with a brake or brakes.
- When operated during the hours of darkness, bicycles must be equipped with a front headlight that is visible from 300 feet. A rear reflector is also required.
- Bicycles will be ridden in single file.
- Bicycles coming from alleys, driveways or from between parked cars must come to a complete stop. If there is approaching traffic, the bicyclist must yield the right-of-way.
- Bicyclists may not wear earphones/headphones. A Provost Marshall's spokesperson said that it is important to make sure bicycles are mechanically safe before using them. He also said bicycle riders need to remember to use their hand and arm signals.

As a refresher for those of us who have forgotten the proper hand and arm signals, they are:

- Left turn: Hand and arm extended out from the vehicle in a horizontal position parallel to the ground.
- Right Turn: Hand and arm extended out with the arm bent at the elbow at a 90 degree angle.
- Stop: Hand and arm extended out and downward at approximately a 45 degree angle.

The elementary schools on post stress the importance of bicycle safety.

Spurgeon Glenn, principal of White Elementary School, said September was Bicycle Safety Month at the school. Glenn said the teachers discussed bicycle safety with the children. The children then created situations in which they would have to practice bicycle safety procedures.

The Crime Prevention Center of the Provost Marshall's Office also encourages children to practice bicycle safety, although in a slightly different way.

Crime Prevention Officer Sgt.Darrell W. Choate organizes bicycle rodeos which give children a chance to practice their bicycle safety skills. They are asked to perform tasks such as stopping, giving proper arm-hand signals and making turns.

Choate said that the rodeos are scheduled by request and are usually held on Saturdays.

U-Do-It Shop offers one-stop shopping

Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

The Facilities Training Branch, Building 385, of the Directorate of Engineering and Housing has a new look.

Remodeling of the facility has just been completed and now the U-Do-it shop and the classroom, where newcomers receive their intial briefing on their new quarters will be in the same place.

According to Dominick DeCarlo, chief of the Facilities and Training Branch, they housed them both in one building to make it a one stop shop for people to get things they need for their quarters.

In conjunction with the Installation of Excellence program, DEH has made some additions to the U-Do-It shop and extended the hours.

"We're going beyond stressing maintenance of the quarters and encouraging the enhancement of the buildings." DeCarlo said, "there isn't much that we will allow done on the inside but we've added many things to our shop that people can use to make the outside more attractive."

The shop has roto-tillers, leaf blowers and edgers that can be lent out to residents and basic gardening tools that can be issued.

In addition to fertilizer, the shop now will be supplying fillers such as pine straw and tree bark.

As a convenience to soldiers the hours have been extended, the new hours are 9:30 a.m. to 5:45 p.m. Monday through Friday and 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. on Saturdays.

DeCarlo said that the hours were extended so that people could stop by on the way home and pick up needed items.

He added that they are always looking into new ways to provide services to the community and any suggestions that people may have on improving the program are always welcome.

Program helps soldiers maintain skills

TRADOC News Service

FORT MONROE, Va. — The Army and the U.S. Department of Labor experienced a milestone Aug. 31 with the 1,000th completion of the Army Apprenticeship Program. The soldier was Staff Sgt. Harrison George Jr.

Currently assigned to the 517th Transportation Company (AVIM), Fort Bragg, N.C., George earned his certificate by documenting more than 6,000 hours of hands-on experience that was totally job-related.

The Army Apprenticeship Program began as a pilot program in 1976 at Fort Belvoir, Va. It is now operated by TRADOC headquarters and 11 of its service schools for the total Army in conjunction with the Department of Labor, Bureau of Apprenticeship and Training. Currently, more than 27,000 soldiers participate in this program.

TRADOC developed the AAP. Eleven service schools focus 140 military occupational specialty jobs relating to 79 civilian occupations. These programs require from 2,000 to 8,000 hours of hands-on work experience and from 144 to 576 hours of related instruction.

Since the cornerstone of the program for these soldiers is documentation of military skills performance, civilian industry recognizes the certificate of completion as evidence that the soldier has attained journeyman level status in his chosen field.

Whether or not a soldier decides to remain in the Army, this journeyman status helps keep him competitive with his civilian peers. The net effect is that AAP soldiers may be staying in the Army longer than they otherwise would.

"One of the things we were looking at when the program began was the tendency of soldiers to get out early because they were falling behind their peers in maintaining their credentials," said E. Robert Lord, chief of the Career Education Branch of TRADOC's Education Directorate, and supervisor of the AAP. "If in getting their apprenticeship completion they have maintained their position with their peers, there is a decreased tendency for soldiers to leave the service for that reason."

The Army Apprenticeship Program is available worldwide. Soldiers who are interested in the program can contact their nearest education center.

MPs looking for soldiers for correctional NCO slots

Army News Service

The Military Police Corps is seeking qualified soldiers to reclassify into military occupational specialty 95C (Correctional Noncommissioned Officer). MILPERCEN career managers are looking for specialists four and sergeants who are interested in becoming correctional NCOs, according to SFC Wade A. Schmierer, enlisted MP career advisor.

"Correctional noncommissioned officer duties include a variety of tasks," Schmierer said. "They supervise, counsel and manage military prisoners in confinement.

"They also perform duties such as admitting and releasing prisoners, maintaining custody and control of prisoners, and briefing prisoners on rights, privileges and rules," he continued.

Qualified soldiers can enter the correctional field through reclassification or reenlistment. If eligible for reenlistment, soldiers can receive bonuses through the Bonus Extension and Retarining (BEAR) program for changing the MOSs.

To reclassify, a soldier must complete DA Form 4187. Request for Personnel Action, and forward it to MILPERCEN for approval. If accepted for the correctional NCO program, soldiers take four weeks of training at Fort McClellan, Ala.

"There are several factors to consider if you're interested in becoming a 95C," Shcmierer said. "You can get promoted quickly to sergeant. We've exhausted our sergeant standing promotion list each month since 1985."

Soldiers interested in reclassifying into MOS 95C should call MILPERCEN's Military Police Branch, autovon 221-0180, commercial 202-325-0180.

PEOPLE

Capt. John P. Lamplough has been selected as the Officer Instructor of the Month for August 1987.

Lamplough is assigned to the Combined Arms and Tactics Department, Communicative Skills Division. He is an instructor in staff communication.

He has been in service for nine years, and has been a CATD instructor since Jan. 1986.

Lamplough's other awards received are the MSM-1, ARCOM-2, HSM-1, ASUA-1, OSR-1 and the AR-1.

Lamplough is from Concord, Ma.

SFC Lawrence Williams has been selected as the Senior Enlisted Instructor of the Month for August 1987.

Williams is assigned to Company D, 1-507, PIR, and has been instructor in the Basic Airborne Course since June 1985. He has been in service for 11 years.

Williams' other awards received include the Master Parachutist Badge, AAM, ARCOM 3rd Oakleaf Cluster, Good Conduct 3rd (Clasp).

Williams is a native of Palmetto, Ga.

Geneva Wilkes recently won third place in a worldwide Army Community Service Slogan Contest.

Wilkes was awarded a certificate of achievement signed by Major General Robert M. Joyce for her slogan, "We Listen, We Help, We Care, We Share, ACS is Always There."

Wilkes said that she chose the slogan because it is a definition of what ACS does. She said that she has been to ACS many times, and knows several people who have been helped by ACS.

Maj. Gen. Joyce said, "The slogan you submitted reflects the true spirit of commitment and dedication found at Army Community Service for all our soldiers and their families."

Joyce added that, "Your participation in the contest is indicative of your understanding of the importance and the need for quality family programs."

Fire

the depth of the chair.

As I lay there trying to regain my strength, I could hear noises the men made as they went about overhauling the ruins, searching for any heat which might indicate there was still a chance for me to break out again. Time passed and I heard the furniture moved, piece by piece, from the room, and squeegees being used to gather the water in one spot to be taken up by mops and buckets. As the chair in which I hid was being carried out onto the lawn I could visualize from thesounds of the activity what was going on.

Hose lines were being broken down and racked on the trucks, equipment was being wiped off and replaced, and the men beginning to laugh and joke now that the job was done. I could hear one fire truck being returned to quarters, indicating that the danger was over.

I hid there silently, thinking and gathering courage from the cold night air. Only one truck remained. As soon as it left, I too, would be safe. But no. I heard booted footsteps coming in my direction instead of going toward the throbbing motor and flashing red lights.

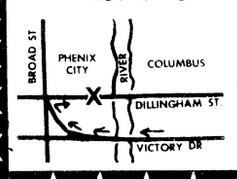
Suddenly, my hiding place, the chair, was turned over as I startled, releasing a small wisp of smoke. A stream of water flooded over me and I realized that this was my end; beaten again by those men who are constantly standing by to prevent me from harming personnel and property.

As the water stopped and my life ran out, I heard voices from the radio — "IN SERVICE, RETURNING TO QUARTERS" — which meant that until another careless act was committed, I was dead.

ASK THE JUDGE

Staff Judge Advocate

Q: I am a resident of the state of Maryland and last year I had to pay more state tax at the end of the year than I expected to pay. Doesn't the Army withhold state taxes from my pay each month? If so, then why did I have to pay more taxes at the end of the year?



Yes, the Army withholds state taxes from your pay each month. However, some states require more tax to be paid than the Army withholds. The Army does not withhold the full amount because some states have complicated withholding schemes for state taxes and to compute the amount that should be withheld for each individual who resides within these states would create too much of an administrative burden.

To alleviate this added tax burden in the future, you should file a new W-4 form and in the appropriate blank write in a dollar amount that should be withheld from your pay over and above the standard deduction which you claim. The amount you write in should be the amount of extra state tax you paid last year divided by twelve. When you file the new W-4 form, make sure that you also write beside this amount that this amount is to be "withheld to account for additional state taxes."

Motor vehicle accidents continue to decrease

U.S. Army Safety Center

The downward trend that began in 1982 in Army motor vehicle accidents continued through 1986 and resulted in the lowest accident rate in 12 years. Programs to improve driver safety and maintenance in AMV operations have produced a 26-percent reduction over the past five years.

The Army motor vehicle accident rate for 1986 was 2.32 per million miles driven, an improvement over the previous year's rate of 2.71 and better than the average rate of 2.93 for commercial carriers. This is especially noteworthy in view of the higher risks involved in off-road, tactical AMV operations.

To further reduce AMV accidents, the Army has revised its regulations governing driver selection and licensing to include standardized driver training. The Army is also buying driver-training simulators, and vehicle-specific driver training packages are being developed for each tactical vehicle.

Last year the Army reduced private motor vehicle accidents to their lowest number since 1980. Total fatalities in four-wheeled vehicles were reduced 19 percent from 1982 to 1986, and further reductions are being made in 1987.

The 1986 fatality rate of 17.5 per 100,000 military population is better than the national rate of 19.1 per 100,000 civilians. This is especially noteworthy because more than half the total Army population is in the high-risk age group, under age 25, compared to one-fifth of the civilian population.

Soldier fatalities in POV accidents involving alcohol were reduced 34 percent in 1986. The number of alcohol-related POV accidents was reduced 28 percent.

These reductions were achieved through effective media programs related to alcohol and safety belt use. In addition, Army regulations now require that safety belts be worn by military personnel on and off duty. Regulations also require motorcyclists to wear protective clothing and equipment both on and off duty.

VA Q&A

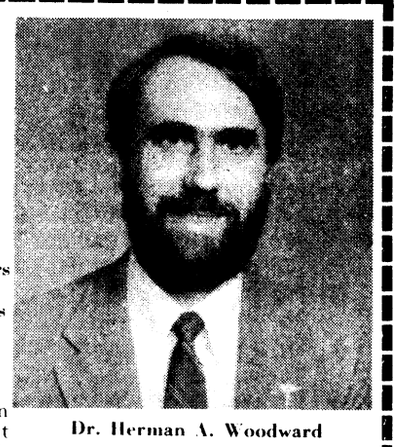
Veterans Administration

Q — I used my VA home loan entitlement in 1969 to purchase a home. I now want to sell this home and buy a larger one, do I have any remaining entitlement?

A — The maximum home loan guaranty entitlement was raised to $27,500 in 1980. The amount of any additional entitlement is the difference between $27,500 and the amount of entitlement used on prior loans.

Q - Is there a time limit to file for reimbursement for the cose of a non-Government headstone placed in a private cemetery?

A - Yes. The claim must be filed within two years of either the date or burial or the date of purchase of a privately purchased headstone or marker.



Q - My husband was cremated and his ashes were scattered without interment or any portion of the ashes. May I still obtain a memorial marker for him?

A — Yes. The memorial may be erected in a private cemetery.

Adult converts benefit entire Catholic parish

By Cathie Wampler
Special to The Bayonet

The Rite of Christian Initiation of Adults (RCIA) is a process of conversion, not just for converts wishing to become members of the Catholic Church, but for the whole community. It compels us to take a look at our roots as a church and to renew ourselves in light of our tradition. It challenges us to relearn what it means to be church.

Not very long ago, adults who wished to join the Catholic Church attended weeks of private instruction and were baptized quietly, usually with only a few relatives or close friends present. The following week the new convert would take his or her place in line for communion with little or no attention to the fact that they were joining the community for the first time at the Table of the Lord.

Confirmation might take place with the next seventh or eighth grade class when the bishop came for his yearly visit. Infant baptism had become the norm with almost total emphasis placed on the "cleansing from original sin."

Since 1972, that approach to adult baptism has changed radically. After 10 years of study and research, during which church leaders reached into the church's rich heritage to apply the ancient catechumenate process to modern situations, the Revised Rite of Christian Initiation of Adults was published. The RCIA was reborn.

Early Christians invited people to join the community on a journey of faith. Those who accepted the invitation were called catechumens and began a step-by-step process toward full membership in the church lasting three years or more.

It was a time of instruction, discernment, and a time to explore the responsibilities in carrying out the church's mission and ministry. This was a beautiful, community-supported journey of faith. Praying for and with the catechumens, instructing them in gospel values, sharing with them the faith-life of the church and celebrating the stages of their faith journey with special rituals was looked upon as a community responsibility and demanded total community involvement.

The purpose of Lent in the early church was totally related to baptism. It was a time of final preparation and formation for those catechumens to be initiated into the Christian community and a time for the community to remember and renew their baptismal commitment.

At the solemn Vigil of Easter, the early Christians joyfully welcomed the newcomers to full membership in the church community through the celebration of the Sacraments of Initiation (Baptism, Confirmation, and Holy Eucharist) as one. Another period of instruction followed their initiation, one that centered on ministry and led them to a deeper understanding of the mysteries of faith.

The Fathers of Vatican II called for the revival of the RCIA and Africa, France, and the United States have taken the lead in restoring the structure and rites.

The significance of the restoration of the catechumenate is powerful for the candidate and for the community. For the candidate, the RCIA honors the individual's process of growing in faith with all its individuality. There is time for growth, for reflection, for digesting the Christian way of life, and time for choosing a life of ministry and service. There is inclusion in a caring community. Formation becomes more important than information.

For the community — the local parish — the catechumenate has more power for renewal than any other comparable rite or structure. When a parish community prioritizes giving birth to new members through evangalizing the good news and becoming symbol to catechumens, the members of that community begin to rediscover Christ in their own lives. They begin to question their own faith and respond in new ways to God's gift of faith.

The RCIA calls us to be a community of hospitality and friendship. It calls us to be a community in search of meaning that is attentive to God's word. It calls us to be a community that celebrates our holiness, that worships together in praise and thanksgiving. It calls us to be a community in the process of ongoing conversion.

Conversion is not a once-in-a-lifetime thing. The catechumens journeying toward initial conversion in our parish, models for us the deeper conversion to which we are all called. We all experience God's call to reexamine our lives and improve our relationships with the Lord.

Church attendance still vital in order to be true Christians

By Robert E. Reese
MACH Chaplain's Office

Why go to church? That's a good question, and it deserves a good answer. Some people never even think of church except to attend a wedding or funeral.

In a modern, sophisticated world such as ours, some people wonder how important the church really is. After all, this is the age of the atom, transcontinental missiles, and advanced computer technology.

In the world of international summit conferences and "megatrends," it's easy to become cynical about the importance of coming together with friends and neighbors to sing hymns, study the Bible, pray and worship.

Yet, if you read Matthew 16:18, you realize that Jesus made a remarkable, unconditional promise: "... On this foundation I will build my church, and not even death will ever be able to overcome it." Jesus has kept that promise. He did establish His church, and for the past 2,000 years the church has grown and prospered as Jesus said it would.

So far in history, no government, no cultural revolution, no "new morality" has been able to destroy God's church. Nations come and go, politicians and great leaders fade into history, but the church with Christ as its head continues to grow and prosper as never before.

Jay Kesler, a modern-day Christian, has offered five reasons for supporting the local church:

- The church is the only institution dealing with ultimate issues such as death, judgment, purpose in life, personal identity, heaven and hell.
- The church provides a message of hope and dignity to human beings. We live in a world in which people can feel small and worthless. Christ, through His church, lets people know they are valuable and have dignity because God loves them.
- The church provides a moral and ethical standard in an age of shifting values. The church still stands on the timeless bedrock of holy acripture and the Ten Commandments.
- The church is the place for individuals to find true community, healing, compassion and love.
- The church, like no other institution, has provided motivation for the most lasting, unselfish and courageous ministries on earth: schools, hospitals, orphanages, and outreach ministries such as the military chaplaincy.

There is a final reason to support the local church. You can't be a Christian and not go to church. You may be a spiritual person. You may be a great community leader. But to be a Christian, by definition, means going to church. Jesus makes this clear to us when he says, "I am the vine and you are the branches. Whoever remains in me, and I in him, will bear much fruit; for you can do nothing without me. Whoever does not remain in me is thrown out like a branch and dries up." (John 15:4-6)

The God who created us constantly reaches out to encourage, to instruct, to embrace, to lift up His people. He does this through His church over which His beloved son is the head.

This Sunday is World Communion Sunday. God's people will once again come together in local communities throughout the world to worship, to pray, to be forgiven, to be encouraged, and to hear of God's love. You are invited to claim your place as one of His sons or daughters in His presence and within the fellowship of His people, the church.

Deputy chief of chaplains visits with pope during pontiff's U.S. trip

Army News Service

WASHINGTON — A recent visit by U.S. Catholic clergymen to the Vatican in Rome included the Army's deputy chief of chaplains, Chaplain (Brig. Gen.) Charles J. McDonnell. His audience with the Pope comes at a time when the Catholic Church is struggling to fulfill its role of providing adequate ministry to the armed forces in the face of a shortage of Catholic chaplains.

McDonnell traveled to Rome with a delegation of Catholic representatives from the other services: Chaplain (Brig. Gen.) John P. McDonough (deputy chief of chaplains, U.S. Air Force); and Rear Adm. John R. McNamara (chief of chaplains, U.S. Navy). Also in the group were Archbishop of the Military Services The Most Reverend Joseph T. Ryan, and the Rev. Wallace Przbylski, OPM, deputy chief of chaplains for the Veterans Administration.

In their audience with Pope John Paul II, the clergymen acknowledged the importance of the U.S. Armed Forces in maintaining world peace, while at the same time stressed the critical shortage of Roman Catholic chaplains. They sought his assistance in providing more military priests to minister to the needs of service members and their families worldwide.

The Holy Father voiced his personal concern about the shortage of priests to minister to Catholics of the armed forces. The group also received a copy of the establishing constitution of the Military Vicariate as an independent diocese. Headquarters for the new Archdiocese for the Military Services is located in Silver Spring, Md. Monsignor McDonnell, senior Roman Catholic chaplain in the U.S. Army, said, "Catholics make up about 25 percent of the Army population. We need 548 priests to adequately take care of them the Army has only 218 on active duty, therefore, we have a shortage of 62 percent. "Because of the shortage, they must work longer hours and sometimes travel extensively from post to post to provide wide-area coverage. This places a burden on the server and the served," McDonnell explained.

He went on to say that in 1983, Roman Catholic men and women in the services received a challenge from U.S. bishops in their Pastoral Letter on War and Peace in the Nuclear Age. Titled "The Challenge of Peace: God's Promise and Our Response," their article counseled: "All those who enter the military service in loyalty to their country should look upon themselves as custodians of the security and freedom of their fellow countrymen and where they carry out their duty properly, they are contributing to the maintenance of peace."

Cardinal Cooke, who was the military vicar in 1983, had sent a letter to all Catholic military chaplains, saying: "Your profession is peace. Your vocation is peace. Your ministry is peace." Further, he urged, "...we are grateful for the sacrifice so many in the military service must make today and for the service offered in the past by veterans ... Military persons and their families must be provided continuing opportunity for full spiritual growth, the exercise of religious faith and a dignified mode of life." Army Catholic chaplains have a difficult mission wherever they serve. In the face of war, they must be prepared to provide essential sacraments, appropriate counsel and religious services support for those who will experience combat. In peacetime they must advise the commander of his soldiers' needs for suitable living and working conditions, as well as provide full religious programs to foster the spiritual growth of the soldier and the soldier's family in order that they may exercise their religious faith.

Employees drawing Army pension may need FERS' tax benefits

By Becky Obert
Bayonet staff writer

Veterans who go to work as civil service employees have several retirement options available, and should carefully examine them all before making a decision.

At present, any military retirees who come to work for the federal government as civilians must sign up for the Federal Employees Retirement System.

Before pension reform, military retirees could opt to join the Civil Service Retirement System. If they wanted to get credit for their military service, they were required to pay in a seven percent of pay contribution (plus market-rate interest) for every year military service since Dec. 31, 1956. For retirees with a lot of years service, it might not be worth it. If they chose not to pay for those years, then those years did not count towards CSRS.

They could simply let their CSRS pension begin to accrue at the time of their employment as a civil servant, and draw a smaller pension when they were eligible to retire.

To retire under the CSRS, veterans had to have at least 5 years service and be age 62 before they can begin receiving benefits. Under FERS, you can retire at age 55 with a minimum of 10 years service, and begin receiving a pension.

Military retirees who are also eligible to draw a Civil Service Retirement System pension are in an enviable position, and should not switch retirement systems without a lot of thought.

Other military retirees who come to work for the federal government but won't have enough career time to retire from the CSRS may find the new Federal Employees Retirement System an appealing option, because of the tax break it offers.

Employees who contribute to FERS can deduct their contributions from their taxable income until the money is withdrawn. For a person drawing a taxable retirement check and a federal pay check, this deduction could mean significant savings at tax time.

When the taxes are finally due, (when you retire), your income should be lower and then the tax bite won't be as great.

Santa's Castle needs workers to repair used toys

By Maggie Siegfried
Installation Volunteer Coordinator

Christmas is around the corner and with that in mind the Volunteer Resource Center is highlighting Santa's Castle. This is an organization manned solely by volunteers and operated year round. Used toys are collected and repaired, and during the holiday season Fort Benning children who would not get a visit from Santa will be the benefactors of this wonderful organizaion.

Shopping privileges at the Castle are given on the basis of need, not by rank or income. During the holiday period, the soldier chooses five toys for each child. A referral by a 1SG, Chaplain, Mayor or the ACS is needed before the soldier has the privilege to shop.

Last year the Castle distributed over 4,000 toys, games, etc. The goal this year is to be able to help all who need it resulting in a greater distribution of toys. This takes lots of work by a few dedicated volunteers to accomplish this effort.

Every child deserves something during the holidays and the volunteers of Santa's castle are working very hard to make it happen. As with other programs benefitting the soldiers and their families volunteers are the key to the success stories and more are needed now at Santa's Castle than any other time of the year if they are to meet their goal. So, if you're looking for something different for your unit gatherings, Santa's Castle can provide you with a tour and the chance to help some Fort Benning children experience a joyful holiday by cleaning or repairing toys.

Call 545-1233 0900-1400 Monday through Friday and the first Saturday of the month or call Pam Harris at 689-7629. Location is in building 2639 Splinter Village where toys, amy be dropped off. Another drop-off point is a large box at the main PX. Other volunteer opportunities are:

MEDDAC/DENTAC Officers' Wives is in need of a Public Affairs person who will take pictures, write articles on organization's events and attend board meetings. You must be a MEDDAC/DENTAC wife. For more informaion call Gloria Goodwin at 689-7782.

THERMAX HIGH-TECH UNDERWEAR
THE OFFICIAL THERMALWEAR FOR THE WINTER OLYMPICS!
Thermax wicks moisture away from your skin, and keeps you warm and dry. Since it cannot absorb moisture, you stay dry even after heavy perspiration. Hollow core fibers 1/6th the thickness of a human hair trap air inside of them, and insulate you from the cold. More than twice as warm as cotton, and even better than polypropylene!

THE ULTIMATE RAIN GEAR ARCCO'S GORE-TEX
PARKAS
Our Gore-Tex parka is designed to keep you dry under the most adverse conditions. Gore-Tex has 9 billion pores per square inch that are 20,000 times smaller than a water drop, but 700 times larger than a water molecule. They let perspiration vapor escape, but block outside wetness and cold wind with up to 40% greater warmth than conventional fabrics. Arcco's Gore-Tex parka has a roomy design to accommodate bulky clothing underneath, and has a double flap over the zipper to prevent rain from penetrating to clothing. Our Gore-Tex parkas come in Woodland Camo, and are available with matching pants.

DANNER BOOTS
Guaranteed Waterproof for 2 years! The ultimate waterproof boot, made with a Gore-Tex booties, Cambrelle lining and Vibram Kelterlift soles. This ten inch leather boot is comfortable right out of the box, eliminating the need for a break-in period. ARCCO also stocks the insulated Danner Boot, lined with Thinsulate as well as Gore-Tex.

GATES GORE-TEX GLOVES WITH TUFF-GRIP II
Gates makes our best waterproof gloves with Gore-Tex and Thermalite. Gore-Tex is totally waterproof, yet allows perspiration vapor to escape. Thermalite is twice as warm as down, but has the advantage of wicking moisture away from your skin. Keep your hands warm and dry, and avoid frostbite!

RANGER AND AIRBORNE SWEATS
ARCCO has the popular black and maroon heavyweight sweats silk screened with basic jumpwings, Airborne and Ranger, but that's not all. We now have Ranger sweats with a gold ranger tab embroidered across the chest, was well as suits with embroidered basic jumpwings and ranger. You won't believe the huge selection of sweats at ARCCO!

507th PIR celebrates Market Garden anniversary

Ann M. McDonald

Lt. Gen. Theodore G. Jenes prepares to exit a C-130 during the reenactment of Market Garden.

Ann M. McDonald

USAIC Public Affairs Office

To celebrate the anniversary of Market Garden, the largest airborne operation in history, members of the 1st of the 507th Parachute Infantry Regiment conducted a special airborne operation to commemorate the event.

Lt. General Theodore G. Jenes, Jr. Deputy Commanding General, Forces Command, joined the group in a tactical jump onto Fryar Drop Zone.

After assembling on the ground, the unit roadmarched to their next point, reanacted parts of the famous assault and conducted discussions about the operation.

Always seeking to improve combat readiness, the group analyzed the event and offered ideas on how it could have been improved and what will be done in future operations.

Market Garden was conceptionalized during the summer of 1944, as the allies pursued the retreating Germans across France. It was then many possibilities arose for the use of airborne forces. Numerous jumps were planned once the airborne forces were reformed in England after the Normandy operation but for a number of reasons none was executed.

During this period, British Field Marshall Montgomery proposed that airborne forces be used as a "carpet" in front of the British Second Army over the many water obstacles in Holland, all the way to and over the Rhine. Once over the Rhine, the secured territory could be used as a springboard for future operations into Germany itself. If successfully accomplished, the operation could result in the ending of the war before the end of 1944.

In early September, the Guards Armored Division secured a foothold along the Belgian-Dutch border, which would be a suitable launching point for the operation that had by then been named "Market-Garden." Eight water obstacles and a distance of more than 60 miles lay between the forward line of allied troops and the north bank of the Neder Rign river at Arnhem. Along the route the allies would insert the 101st Airborne Division north of Eindhoven, the 82nd Airborne Division south of Nijmegen and the British 1st Airborne Division west of Arnhem to secure the key bridges along the way. The airborne assualt would be "Market." As the airborne forces secured the crossings over the water obstacles, the ground element of the British XXX Corps would advance from Belgium driving on Arnhem. This portion of the operation would be "Garden."

"Market" would be the largest airborne assault ever staged. Supported by the IX Troop Carrier Command and its 1,545 transport planes and 478 gliders, the airborne forces would also be conducting the first daylight jump of the war. Just after 1 p.m. on the afternoon of September 17, the airborne forces began landing on their drop zones in Holland. The drops were very accurate with nearly all of the 16,500 paratroopers and 3,500 glidermen landing at the correct location. They assembled quickly, but from that time on the situation began to fall apart.

Part of the problem was the use of drop zones as far as eight miles from their objectives. The loss of some heavily relied upon Glider-borne jeeps also slowed down the operation because the 1st Airborne Division was forced to travel by foot to its objective.

Enroute to their targets, the British ran afoul of elements of the 2nd SS Panzer Corps, which were in the Arnhem area. Only the 2nd Parachute Battalion commanded by Lt. Col. John Frost reached the bridge, doing so by avoiding the town of Arnhem and following the banks of the river. Once at the bridge, they began a series of attacks to seize the bridge, none of which was successful, each of which continued to drain the fighting strength of the isolated battalion. Although local successes were being experienced, operation "Market-Garden" was not enjoying the tactical advantage that was sought in pressing on to the Neder Rign. Inspite of the efforts of the American paratroopers in seizing their objectives and the heroic stand by the beleaguered 1st Airborne at Arnhem, the armored forces of XXX Corps were unable to maintain their timetable and did not continue the attack north from Nijmegan until the afternoon of D+4.

Throughout the operation bad weather in Holland and England resulted in delays in the dropping of follow-on forces and greatly reduced the planned resupply of the airhead. Once the weather did improve, some of the drop zones, especially those in the vicinity of Arnhem had fallen into German hands. Even while the 82nd was launching its assault across the Waal at Nijmegan, the British 1st Airborne was being forced away from the approaches to the Arnhem bridge.

The Germans continued to reinforce their roadblock position north of Nijmegan and repeatedly reduced the encircled British pocket in Arnhem. In spite of repeated attempts, XXX Corps was unable to breakthrough and relieve the 1st Airborne Division. The situation continued to deteriorate until the evening of D+8 when the remaining British forces north of the Neder Rijn were ordered to withdraw. More than 2,300 paratroopers safely reached the south bank of the river. The Germans captured more than 6,000 British troops north of the river, nearly half of them wounded.

The bridge at Arnhem had as the story goes, been "A Bridge Too Far". The mission had not accomplished its intended goals but had consistently served to demonstrate the tenacity and resolve of the paratroopers who fought to make it happen. With the failure of "Market-Garden," the war in Europe did not end in 1944 but continued until May of the next year.

Veteran of Korea and Vietnam honored at retirement

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

One of the few remaining veterans of both the Korean and Vietnam Wars retired last week after 27 years of active duty service.

MSgt. Isaac Mitchell, 3rd Battalion, 14th Infantry Regiment, 10th Mountain Division put on his greens for the second to the last time to be honored in a ceremony.

Mitchell will wear the uniform one more time -- for keeps. He will be buried in it.

He doesn't plan on doing that anytime soon, though. After his long career as a guardian of freedom, he plans to venture on to new horizons.

His career began in early 1952, on a whim.

According to Mitchell, he, his brothers, and some friends were at a theater in his home town, St. Mathews, S. C., and saw a commercial about the Army.

"We thought it looked like fun, and the next day we went and signed up." he said.

That whim sent him to Korea, where he served as a demolitions man during the last year of the war.

After the war, he was sent to Fort Benning to serve with the 773rd Tank Battalion. "Which incidently," Mitchell said, "was located in the same place as my present office at 10th Mountain."

Mitchell went on to a tour in Germany and then chose to get out of the service in 1957.

"When I initially entered the service, I had never done anything else, " he said. "So I was real curious what it was like on the other side."

That break lasted until August of 1966 when he couldn't stand it anymore and came back in the Army.

This tour brought him right into the Vietnam War and almost cost him his life.

Mitchell and some others were returning from a routine patrol when the helicopter they were traveling in went down.

"All of the sudden the chopper started flying sideways and I heard a loud crash and that was all I remember until I woke up 10 hours later in a hospital bed,"said Mitchell.

He later learned that everyone was taken for dead in the accident until a medic saw his leg move.

"I didn't find out I was the only one who survived until much later," Mitchell said, "I was in a hospital in the states when I found out."

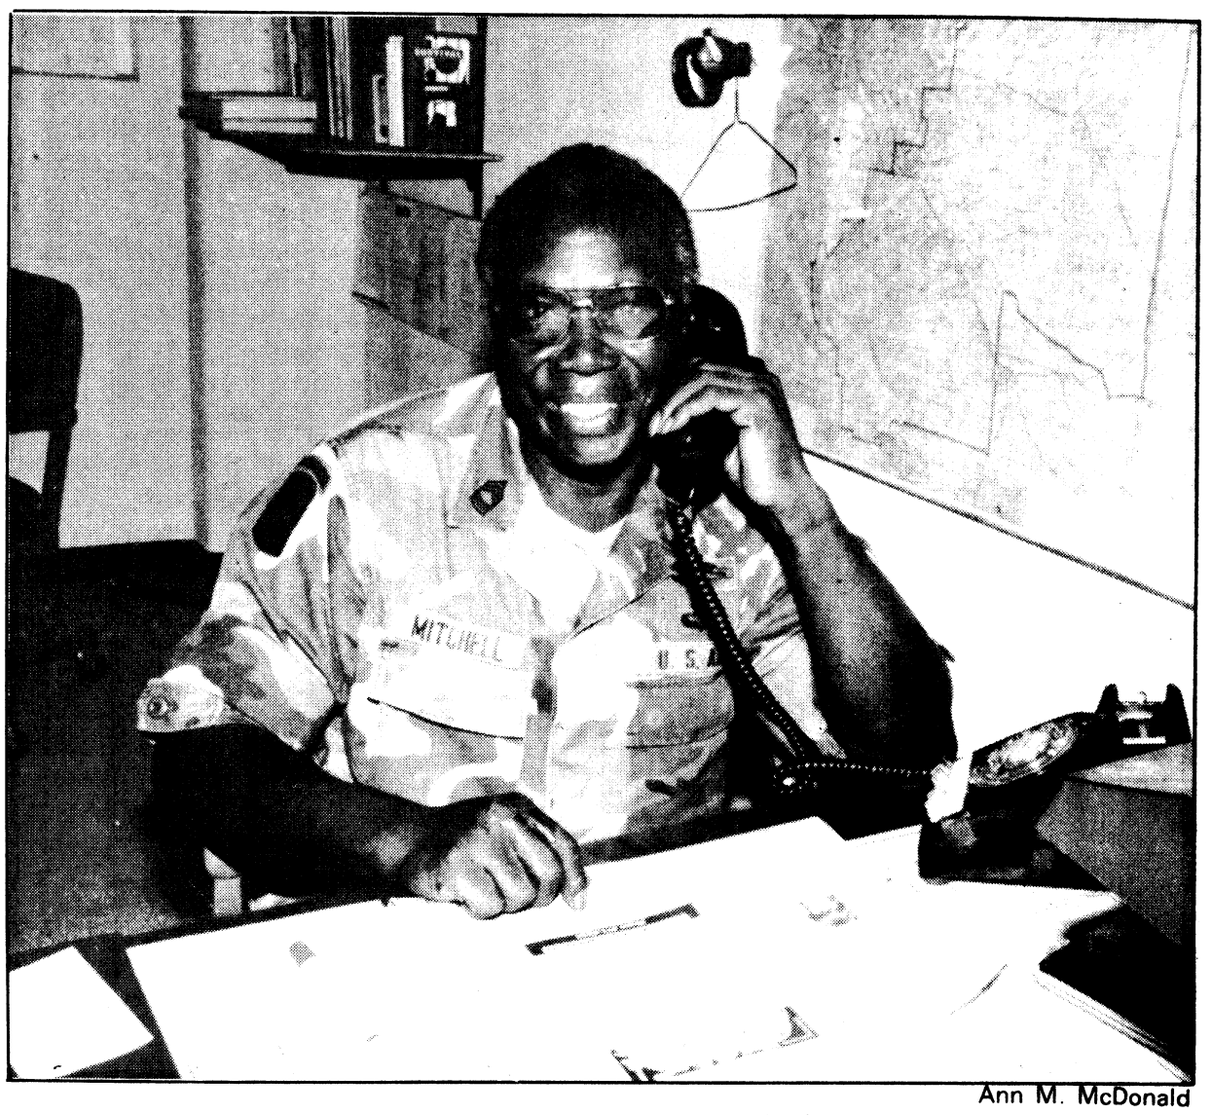
Years later he met up with a medic who knew of the crash. "He thought I was a ghost," he said. "Believe me, I assured him I wasn't."

After recovering, Mitchell went back to Vietnam for a second tour with the 82nd Airborne.

The Airborne seems to be where Mitchell's fondest memories lie.

Reminiscing about his tours with the Airborne, he said there is a certain comraderie there. One that he has not found in a regular line unit.

Mitchell's enjoyment of jumping is most evident in his tour as a Black Hat instructor when he taught young soldiers the art of military parachuting.



During his many years in the Army, he has witnessed many changes, such as the advancement of weapon systems, and the overall revamping of many units.

Mitchell said that the most favorable change he has witnessed is the advancement in enlisted education.

Mitchell believes you can truly "be all you can be" because the Army is "a good place to start."

He's left the mountain, his last tour of duty. "It's a good unit," Mitchell said, "I believe they are truly prepared for any combat situation."

Carpentry school at Columbus Tech is what Mitchell has planned for the future. " And," he said, "maybe a little hunting and fishing."

Club sets up 92 point "Trim Course"

By Mark Chander
Assistant Director Orienteering Club

An extensive, "semi-permanent" trim course has recently been set up by the Orienteering Club on Main Post, a part of the Physical Activities Branch of the Community Recreation Division (DPCA). The course consists of 92 points spread out over a five square kilometer area in the Fort Mitchell region. The course's terrain is very diverse, ranging from lowlands along the Chatthoochee to coniferous forests on the hilltops.

The course was set up by Linda Ferguson, the recent Director of the Orienteering Club, Mark Chandle, the Assistant Director, and Regina Victor. The points are marked with 12"X12" metalic, orange and white signs. Each sign has a number and letter code located on the upper right and lower left corners. By "semi-permanent," the course is designed to last anywhere from 12 to 18 months, perhaps longer depending on how well the signs survive hunting season.

"We designed the course with flexibility in mind," Chandler said. "But with this map and these pre-established points, a company or a battalion could practice out there for days and never hit the same point." Furthermore, Chandler adds, with a little coordination and planning, a unit of any size could easily set up their own meet using the trim course.

So far, the School of the Americas, the 4th Battalion of the 2nd ITB, and Class 10-87 of IOBC all ran very successful orienteering meets on the course, with lanes ranging from yellow (the easiest) to red (the most difficult).

"The map we are using was made by Capt. Mikell Platt (USAR), a national orienteering champion and a professional cartographer who specializes in orienteering maps" states Chandler.

"Of course the map is black and white, and ideally orienteering maps are in color; however, what it lacks in aesthetics it makes up for with accuracy, he said."

Maps and clue sheets of the Fort Mitchell trim course are available at the Physicl Activities Office in Doughboy Stadium (bldg. 394). The Orienteering Club also signs out compasses, hand punches, punch cards and additional markers provide requests are received two weeks prior to the date they are needed.

Any unit wishing to use the Fort Mitchell region for practice or to hold a meet, must submit a "Request to Schedule Ranges/Terrain" (Form 466) to the Resident Land Navigation Attachment of A Co., 2/29 (Building 4713; 544-6809) at least six weeks prior to the date the area is needed. The unit must also coordinate their activities with Range Control (Bldg. 2621; 545-51860, particularly now that hunting season has arrived.

MACH doctor helps amputees

Carmen E. Alverio
MACH, Occupational Therapy Service

As I was called early in June 1986 by higher headquarters, I was informed that I would be going on a six month TDY to Central America. I would be assigned to the USA Humanitarian Medical Mobile Training Team in El Salvador as an occupational therapist advisor. My main mission was to assess the existing host country Army Occupational Therapy facilities and programs and improve their rehabilitation services. One of my major roles was also to expand the sports rehabilitation program with emphasis on amputee soccer games.

The El Salvador Armed Forces has suffered over the last five years some 2,000 casualties due to mines. Of these approximately 1,000 have lost a limb. In order to instill morale, a sense of self confidence, self esteem and a sense of belonging for those soldiers, USMMTT introduced an amputee soccer program.

The idea to form an amputee soccer team in El Salvador came from an article in the San Francisco Chronicle/Examiner newspaper June 12, 1986, which described this unique game. The Amputee Soccer International was conceived by Don Bennett, the Seattle businessman and handicapped sports enthusiast who made history in 1982 by being the first person in the world to climb Mount Ranier with one leg, using crutches.

Communication was established between Bill Barry, executive director and coach of Seattle Amputee Soccer Team, and Lt. Col. Fred Thill, the U.S. Army Medical MTT El Salvador Team Chief. Armed with the amputee soccer rules and motivation, Capt. Len Cancio formed an amputee team within ESAF. Cancio was the previous and first occupational therapist advisor assigned in El Salvador. The coach is Mr. Mario Pacheco, sports professor of the military hospital. The hospital/cerproca team is composed of veterans from the ESAF and National Guard. With their help, the 1st Brigade soon formed their team.

A challenge was issued and the first game was played on June 7, 1986 at the 1st Brigade soccer field. The final score was HM/CERPRORA 1, 1st Brigade 0. In attendance was U.S. Ambassador Edwin E. Corr, Chief of Staff of the ESAF, General Adolfo O. Blandon, as well as other distinguished guests.

Upon my arrival to El Salavador Aug. 23, 1986, the 5th Brigade had formed a team. By September, 1986, Mr. Jeffery Jones, handicapped sports specialist from Detroit, came to El Salvador to assist with a week of theory and field practice on disabled sports. Amputee Soccer games were conducted by military disabled soldiers and the six soccer teams organized by that time.

While I was working on expanding the ESAF amputee soccer, the First Amputee Soccer International Challenge Cup was being held Sept. 27-28, 1986, in Woodenville, Wash. with the participation of three amputee teams, to include Seattle, Portland and Canada. These teams competed against able-bodied players.

The El Salvador earthquake of Oct. 10, 1986 slowed us down; however by December 1986 an ESAF-wide championship was being programmed and on Feb. 13, 1987, the 1st Brigade soccer field was elutied with mixed emotions. A total of 13 amputee soccer teams marched in the grand opening ceremony of the first soccer tournament of amputee soldiers which gave initiation to the selection of players for the ESAF All Star Team. The ESAF was well motivated to send an All Star Team to the 1987 Amputee Soccer International Challenge Cup with our assistance.

Mr. Pacheco and myself held weekly tournaments to select the ESAF All Star Amputee Soccer Team. Meanwhile, through donations, we were able to buy uniforms and luggage for the All Star Team.

I had extended my TDY tour for an additional month to provide them with my maximum guidance and assistance. Upon my departure from El Salvador during April 1987, the All Star Team selection was almost finalized.

On May 16, 1987, the 1st Brigade soccer field was filled again with great emotions and the attendance of distinguished guests to include the presence of Mr. Barry. This time the ceremony was arranged to prize teams participating in the tournaments and honor the players selected to form the All Star Team and represent the ESAF. Mr. Barry has informed me of his admiration of the work accomplished by the USMTT/ESAF Group.

This has been a great U.S. Armed Forces humanitarian project. The ESAF All Star Team is composed of amputee soldiers of

MACH blood program seeks support

Martin Army Community Hospital

The Army Blood Program at Fort Benning operates through the Department of Pathology at Martin Army Community Hospital for the Fort Benning community. The Blood Bank collects approximately 2,400 units of blood each year in the community. This blood is made into components, such as platelet concentrates and packed red cells, in order to exapnd the number of patients that can be treated with a single donation.

In addition to meeting the blood needs of the Fort Benning community, the Blood Bank provides support to the Armed Services Whole Blood Processing Laboratory at McGuire AFB, N.J., for world-wide redistribution within DoD. Blood that is still useable, but nearing the 35-day expiration date is shipped each week to Eisenhower Army Medical Center at Fort Gordon, whose use rate is much higher. This virtually eliminates waste due to outdating.

Through coordination with DPTM, all permanent party units at Fort Benning have been assigned time periods when they are responsible for providing don't support to the program. Blood drives are then scheduled in the various unit areas on Wednesday of each week. Wednesday is used because it takes approximately two days to test, process and label the blood. This assures that the maximum inventory is on-hand over the weekend. Major units tasked to support the Army Blood Program have provided excellent support during the last two years. This support has meant that the hospital has only rarely had to stage emergency blood drives or buy blood from civilian sources.

Anyone with questions about the program, either locally or nationally, is welcome to stop by or call the Blood Bank at 544-2221 or 2780.

Bears defeat Cougars 14-6 in Y A Termite football

Ann M. McDonald

A Trojan team member heads down field in YA Football play against the Broncos.

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Bears mauled the Cougars Saturday, 14-6, in a tough defensive YA football battle.

The Bears, of the Termite league, were last years "Super Bowl" winners in their league.

Eugene Phillips lead the defenses fight with 11 unassisted tackles while Carlos Armstrong rush for 125 yard with 1 TD on offense. Bobby Adams scored the other TD and Robert Warren carried in a 2 point conversion.

The Bears opened the season against the Pioneer Colts from Columbus in non-league play Sept. 19 with a 6-0 win.

The Bears will take on the YA Giants this Saturday on Blue field. The Giants lost to the Columbus Packers, 8-0, last Saturday but have one league win to their credit.

Shoot a spike this year

By Chris Dunn
Natural Resources Division DEH

"Why did you shoot a spike? You should have let him go so he would grow up and become a trophy buck!"

How many of us have faced this situation and, more importantly, how many of us have passed up shooting a spike buck for exactly that same reason?

Certainly the goal is admirable but the reasoning may acutally prolong the chances of seeing a set of trophy sized antlers.

There is undeniable evidence that genetics plays an important role in antler production. Research conducted in Texas on penned deer fround that spikes their first year remained inferior in body weight and antler development to bucks that had forked antlers. In breeding experiments, 41 percent of male offspring from the spike bucks also had spike antlers at 1-1/2 years of age.

In contrast, all bucks sired by a superior-antlered buck had forked antlers at 1-1/2 years and averaged 14 pounds heavier. This is not to say that a spike buck is genetically inferior; however, he will not attain the quality of maturity that a multi-pointed deer of the same age class will achieve.

Another contributing factor is populain density. In areas where deer populations are not high, the first set of antlers will have from three to possibly ten points. Hard to believe isn't it? Of course these are not massive racks; however, they do have the potential, with age, of becoming trophies.

In overpopulated areas, the incidence of spikes in the 1-1/2 year old age class is high. These facts are substantiated in our own deer herd at Fort Benning.

Sixty-six 1-1/2 year old bucks were examined at the Deer Check Station during the 1986-1987 season. Of these, 40 were spikes; five had three points; seven had four points; three had five points; and, eleven had six points or more.

Kent Kammermeyer, Biologist, Georgia Department of Natural Resources, wrote an article in Georgia Sportsman Magazine in November 1979 about this same subject. In his article, Kent mentions three prerequisites to increase the number of trophy-sized bucks -- nutrition, genetics, and age.

To accomplish this type of management, the population density must be lowered by harvesting both adult does and spike bucks; a relative older age structure in the buck population must be maintained; and, the populatin must be composed of as few spikes as possible.

There are many hunters who think that the best way to grow big bucks is to save the spikes. This does not work! The right method to accomplish this goal is to harvest as many spikes and does as possible. The next time you see a spike, don't pass it up -- you still have one tag left for that trophy you are looking for.

SPORTS SHORTS

Basketball tourney set

The Sand Hill basketball bragging rights will be up for grabs Oct. 6 at 7 p.m. when 10th Mountain squares off against 1st Brigade ITC in Santiago Gym. Everyone is invited to attend the annual event. For more information contact the Santiago gym at 544-2486.

The Information, Tour and Travel office is selling Auburn football tickets for home games at $16 per ticket. Call 545-4155 for more information.

Bait shop clearance on

The Uchee Creek bait shop is having a sale on their fishing equipment and merchandise. Big markdowns have been made and quantities are limited. Now is the time to save big on your fishing needs. The shop is open from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. seven days a week. Don't miss out. Hurry while the selection is best!

Phone in / out to hunt here

A hunter call-in/call-out program will replace the physical sign-in/sign-out system of last year. This program will start with the 1987 Fort Benning deer firearms season.

The call-in/call-out telephone lines will be open seven days a week from 4 a.m. to 8 p.m..

Telephone numbers will be published at a later date and will be posted on range clearance maps located at Harmony Church, Uchee Creek and Building 247.

Area changes for hunting

All hunter should be aware that the following changes to paragraph 17a of USAIC Regulation 210-2, Installation Hunting and Fishing Regulation have been made pertaining to rifle areas:

1. Delete areas A-7 and A-8. These areas will remain shotgun hunting only.
2. Change A-3 to A-2. Area A-3 will remain a bow hunting only area.

For more information about these changes contact DEH at 544-6120.

Zero weapon, deer hunters

Personal weapon zeroing for deer gun season will be conducted at Easley Range from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. on Oct. 3. In case of inclement weather, the date will be change to Oct. 17. For more information contact Pat McCann at 545-3456 or Dave Christensen at 544-2021.

Post license sales change

State licenses and post permits will no longer be sold at the Uchee Creek Recreation Area on weekends and holidays. This change is due to construction of the new bait shop. State licenses and post permits will be available fro the Outdoor Recreation Administration Office, Monday-Friday, 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m..

Hunters, note

To hunt on Fort Benning hunters must have a valid Georgia State hunting license, Georgia State big game tags (as required), Fort Benning post hunting permit, Fort Benning deer kill card (as required) and a valid Fort Benning vehicle registration sticker. Hunters must check the range clearance maps before entering any area and comply with both USAIC Regulation 210-2 and USAIC Circular 210-4.

Eufaula set for great deer season

Department of the Interior

Eufaula National Wildlife Refuge is preparing for what should be another outstanding deer season in 1987-88. Permits for the archery hunt on the Alabama portion of the refuge are now available. The permits are free, and may be obtained by visiting or calling the Refuge Office at (205) 687-4065. The archery season will begin on Oct. 15 and continue daily until Jan. 31 except Sundays and Jan. 2. There is no limit on the number of archery permits, but archers under age 16 must be hunter safety graduates.

The refuge is still accepting applications for this year's youth deer hunts. There will be three youth firearms hunts: Nov. 7-8 and 14-15 on the Georgia portion of the refuge and Jan. 2-3 on the Alabama side. The youth hunts were initiated in 1986 and were highly successful when the 30 participants bagged a total of 21 white-tails. The youth hunts are open to boys and girls aged 12-15 who have completed a state-approved hunter education course. They must have an adult supervisor to participate.

Anyone needing a copy of the current refuge hunting regulations or with further questions can call the refuge or write to Eufaula National Wildlife Refuge, Route 2, Box 97B, Eufaula, Ala. 36027-9294.

Sportsmen's Festival scheduled for October

Southeast Sportsmen's Festival

ATLANTA — The Southeast Sportsmen's Festival, an outdoor festival for outdoor sportsmen, will be held Oct. 16-18 at the Royal Festival Grounds, just south of Atlanta at I-85, exit 12, Peachtree City/Fairburn area. The event will be a three-day festival of exhibits, seminars, clinics, hands-on demonstrations, contests, competitions, and more, according to festival management.

"There are a variety of good shows in the Southeast that focus on single interests of outdoor sportsmen, such as fishing or hunting, but never an event that encompasses all outdoor sports and activities," Bill Wintzinger, director of the festival commented. "There are hundreds of thousands of avid outdoor sportsmen in the region that enjoy fishing and canoeing, camping and white-water rafting, hunting and skiing, hiking and wildlife photography, but never a show where they can see and buy everything that's new for their combined sporting interests, plus, have the opportunity to meet the leading experts in each of these areas and participate with them, one-on-one, with hands-on demonstrations, seminars and clinics."

"The Sportsmen's Festival is also the only event for outdoor sportsmen that is held outdoors," Wintzinger added. "Our 172-acre festival site comprised of woods and fields affords us the opportunity to hold a variety of unique special events. For example, several major rifle and handgun manufacturers will conduct shooting demonstrations on the festival's firearms range. There will also be marksmanship and trap-shooting competitions each day. Similar activities are planned on the festival's archery range. These are activities that can only be held at an outdoor event."

Breeding, training and working hunting dogs is a popular activity among bird hunters. Sportsmen may enter their prize canines in retriever dog trials and attend training demonstrations Saturday, Oct. 17, and Sunday, Oct. 18, during festival hours. "We are currently working with sportsmen's clubs to develop a regional competition for retriever dogs," Wintzinger pointed out.

Fishing clinics and tackle demonstrations are also planned for all three days of the fetival. Topics will include not only bass fishing, but crappie and trout fishing, also popular with southeastern sportsmen.

A camp site, where tent-pitching demonstrations, fireside cooking clinics, trip planning seminars, and a host of other activities are planned is yet another unique feature of the festival.

A special pavilion at the festival will house wildlife art exhibits and woodland crafts, such as hand-carved decoys and turkey calls.

In addition to the wide variety of activities and special events planned each day of the festival, there will be hundreds of exhibits of products, supplies, equipment and merchandise to fully outfit every sportsman no matter what his outdoor interests, according to festival management. Among planned exhibits are:

- pickup trucks
- recreational vehicles
- 4-wheel drives
- ATVs
- campers
- motorhomes
- boats and motors
- dirt bikes
- canoes and rafts
- outdoor clothing
- safaris and game preserves
- sportsmen's publications
- guns of all types
- fishing tackle
- tents
- camping equipment
- skiing equipment
- cameras and binoculars
- parks and resorts
- campgrounds and lodges
- hunting and fishing guides
- rafting expeditions
- outfitters
- wildlife arts and crafts

"The Southeast Sportsmen's Festival is an event for any and all outdoor sportsmen whether they want to see new products and equipment, come to buy at special festival prices, participate in activities, learn new skills, be entertained, or just enjoy the great food and atmosphere along with other outdoor sportsmen who share their interests," Wintzinger explained. "There will be more to see and do at the festival than anyone can fit into a single day. I feel certain that many sportsmen will want to attend the festival all three days."

Ticket prices are $5 for adults, $2 or children six years and older, and free to children under five. A three-day festival pass is available for $10. All festival parking is free. Discount coupons will be available from participating exhibitors and through sportsmen's clubs and organizations. For more information about discount coupon locations, contact festival management at (404) 964-8575 Monday through Friday between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m.

The Southeast Sportsmen's Festival is produced by Georgia Festevents Limited, Box 986, Fairburn, Ga. 30213. For exhibit space and group discount information, contact Bill Wintzinger.

Amputees

the Salvadorean Armed Forces, veterans of their country's bloody nine-year civil war. This year, El Salvador, was represented by the All Star Team in the Second annual International Amputee Soccer Tournament held in Seattle, Wash. on Sept.7. Local news media covered the event. This was not only an inspirational trip since amputee soccer returned a sense of purpose and dignity. These injured soldiers were received with admiration by their compatriots.

The Amputee Soccer International 1987 World Challenge Cup was a tournament of fun and a place in history with participants from Canada, the United States, and for the first time, Central America. The El Salvador amputee team won the tournament. Victory was particularly satisfying for Cancio and myself.

Leisure skills to include sports are a very important part within the rehabilitation of a soldier or any other person. Amputee soccer games has greatly assisted us to facilitate the rehabilitation process of patients.

The amputee soccer rules are similar to regular soccer rules with these additions: the player may only use their remaining leg to strike the ball; no one is allowed to intentionally strike or direct the ball with their crutches in any way; throw-ins shall be replaced with kick-ins; goalie must be an upper extemity amputee and is not permitted to leave the penalty area; and games will consist of four 12 minute quarters with a 2 minute quarter break and a 5-minute halftime. The Salvadoreans took the sport immediately as soccer is the favored sport of their country. Taking the 1982 Challenge Cup back home was one of their goals and their accomplishments.

Families taken in by alleged "bait and switch" artists

By Becky Obert
Bayonet staff writer

At least five military families were the victims of an alleged "bait and switch" meat market operation in Columbus this summer.

This is probably just the "tip of the iceburg," though, according to Lou Marcotte, president of the Better Business Bureau of West Georgia and East Alabama, Inc. "Since they left town, people (who did business with them) have been coming out of the woodwork," he said.

Marcotte said the company, called Family Meats, set up shop in Columbus June 6, and operated a meat market on Warm Springs Road.

The firm left town in hurry sometime in the early morning hours of Sept. 17, after Rebecca Todd of Action 9 News aired a series of reports on their business.

The BBB received its first call about the company June 10, and since then has logged 75 calls and 10 to 12 written complaints, he said.

Jim Newsome, manager of a local financial institution that provided financing for the firm, said his company made 800 conditional sales contracts for customers of Family Meats.

"Before agreeing to provide financing for them, I checked the company out with the state of Georgia, the Department of Agriculture and Swift Co. (their meat suppliers), and everybody said they were fine, reputable people," Newsome said.

After receiving 14 complaints, Newsome said he told Family Meats that his company would no longer provide financing.

Marcotte said that the firm very definitely had all the symptoms of a bait and switch operation, and that he tried to get the word out to the public in late June.

"I called the Ledger-Enquirer and they sent a reporter out, but then they decided not to pursue the story," Marcotte said.

Russell Grantham, L-E business writer, said that when he initially investigated the story, no written complaints had been filed against the firm, and his editor decided that the story was not worth pursuing.

At the same time, the L-E was running large ads for the company in its papers, and in The Bayonet. The last ad ran in The Bayonet Sept. 11.

Bait and switch is the practice of advertising meat products at a very low price, and then once a customer comes in, switching them to a higher priced product, Marcotte said.

Customers are lured in by ads offering 200 lbs. of beef for 99 cents per pound, but by the time they made their purchase, they had been talked into paying from $5 to $9 per pound for inferior quality meat.

Guidelines broaden reenlistment options, cut back on extensions

Army News Service

Washington — Starting Oct. 1, soldiers planning to re-enlist or extend will be doing so with a brand new set of guidelines. To include two-year reenlistment options and few opportunities to extend their service contracts.

Beginning Oct. 1, the re-enlistment eligibility window will be expanded to eight months before expiration of term of service for all soldiers.

The policy change allows soldiers to re-enlist immediately upon receiving a desired option from their servicing total Army career counseling, said Sgt. Maj. Shelby Meares, the Army's senior career counselor.

As a reminder, Meares said, soldiers desiring to cash-in accrued leave in conjunction with re-enlistment must be within three months of ETS at the time of discharge. Soldiers entitled to selective re-enlistment bonuses will be advised by their career counselors on the advantages of delaying re-enlistment in order to maximize their bonuses.

Soldiers in Grade E-4 and above within the re-enlistment window only may re-enlist to meet any service remaining requirement incurred either voluntarily or involuntarily instead of extending to cover the service obligation.

However, Meares said, the new provision does not apply to soldiers taking action to meet service-remaining requirements for promotion to sergeant and staff sergeant. They still maychoose to extend. These soldiers also may take advantage of a new two-year re-enlistment option, provided the two years will fulfill any service requirements.

Sergeants first class and below serving overseas may choose stabilization periods of 12, 18 or 24 months and may re-enlist for two years, provided the two-year re-enlistment covers the selected stabilization. Stabilization begins at the soldier's DEROS or old ETS, which ever is earlier.

Soldiers desiring to take part in the overseas tour extension program or the consecutive overseas tour programs should apply for them before reenlisting in order to receive the benefits of these programs, Meares said.

Sergeants first class and below serving in the United States may elect stabilization periods of six or 12 months. Those electing six-month stabilization may re-enlist for a two-year term.

The maximum period for any extension is now 23 months, except for privates first class who are not on a two-year initial enlistment and those soldiers participating in the bonus extension and re-training program. Those soldiers may extend for the minimum number of months to fulfill department of the Army-imposed service-remaining requirements, even if the extension may exceed the 23-month limit.

NCOs in grades E-6 through E-8 serving overseas who will complete a normal overseas tour, but cannot take action to meet service-remaining requirements for return to the United States because of grade restrictions may re-enlist for two years without a waiver for grade. Meares noted that these soldiers must be otherwise qualified, and that the two-year re-enlistment must not take them beyond the retention ineligibility point for the next higher grade.

3,500 expected at Retiree Open House

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Fort Benning will offer some 3,500 military retirees an opportunity to see today's Army and learn about retiree benefits Oct. 22 through 24 at the seventh annual Retiree Open House.

Activities this year include tours and an opportunity for retirees to transact personal business related to their rights, benefits, privileges and entitlements. They will also be informed of the latest developments and concepts of the modern Army, while renewing common bonds with the active Army communities.

The Open House kicks off at 8 a.m. Oct. 22 with a golf tournament at the Follow Me Golf Course and a "retiree" wellness assessment, the newest concept in health maintenance, at Martin Army Community Hospital.

Other activities during the day include tours of the National Infantry Museum and nearby Fort Mitchell National Cemetery.

The second day's agenda includes a tour of a new "starship" battalion-size barracks and reception battalion, lunch with the troops, Rangers-in-Action demonstration, and a Bradley Fighting Vehicle and Abrams tank capability exercise. The day's activities end with an all-you-can-eat supper buffet and dance at the Main Post Non-commissioned Officers Club.

Representatives from Fort Benning and federal, state and local governments will be on hand the final day to counsel retirees concerning their benefits and entitlements in a county fair atmosphere.

Following the fair will be entertainment at Infantry Hall's Marshall Auditorium, along with various speakers, including assistant commandant of the Infantry School, Brig. Gen. Barry R. McCaffrey.

After lunch on Gardner Field, retirees are invited to attend an opening ceremony for the traveling Vietnam War Memorial wall display at Columbus' Golden Park baseball stadium.

Invitations have been sent out to some 16,000 Army retirees and 13,000 retirees from other branches of service, residing in Alabama, Florida and Georgia. Nearly 10,000 retirees live in the Columbus area.

The Fort Benning Retirement Services Office (404) 545-5369 and 545-2715, can provide details on registration and other information.

Army changes over to standard civilian payday

Army News Service

Washington — All Army civilians are to undergo changeover to a standard pay day next January.

The new pay procedure using the 12-day time lag between pay period and payday will be in full effect armywide by the first pay period of 1988. Payday for all Army civilians that pay period will be Jan. 14, with paydays coming regularly thereafter on alternate Thursdays.

Currently, the lag period ranges from 5-12 days, although more than half of all Army civilians currently receive their pay 11-12 days after the pay period, say officials at the US Army finance and accounting center in Indianapolis.

They explain that the change will cause no loss of pay, but may cause changes during the transition period in the time lag between end of pay period and receipt of pay. Once the 12-day lag time has been achieved, paydays will come on a regular schedule of every other Thursday, they say.

Reasons behind the change include the requirement to permit adequate application of internal controls and to preclude the need for precertification of time and attendance reports. The change also takes into account the extra time needed to prepare and file reports for the "thrift savings plan" as part of the federal employees retirement system.

USAFAC officials note that local unions may bargain over the procedures used to implement the change. The Department of the Army is recommended a gradual implementation consisting of one-day difference per pay period until the standard 12-day period is met.

Under the change, leave accruals will be prorated so that each employee earns all leave entitlements for each pay period.

Judah named Handicapped Employee of the Year

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

An Employee Relations assistant from the Civilian Personnel Office has been named the Outstanding Handicapped Employee of the Year.

Hazel Judah has worked in the Fort Benning system since 1984.

According to Ms. Judah, she injured her spinal cord in a diving accident when she was 17 years old and was partially paralyzed as a result.

Following a stay in the hospital, she was educated on living with her disabilities at the Warm Springs Institute Rehabilitation Center.

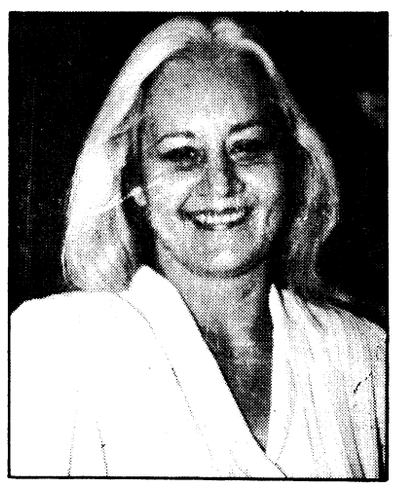
"As soon as I was released from the center, I pursued my art," she said. "I mainly paint with water colors and have done a few one-person shows."

But attaining status as a professional artist wasn't enough for Judah. In 1976 she started the long road to a bachelor of arts degree in sociology from Columbus College, where she was on the Deans List for seven quarters and received a regent's scholarship.

"After I completed my degree," Ms. Judah said, "I came out and applied for a postion at Fort Benning."

While waiting for an opening, she was on the Mayor's Committee for the Handicapped. She promoted employability of the handicapped to major employers via seminars and public relation efforts.

"The National Rehabilitation Act in 1974 really gave handicapped people the added boost needed to live normal lives," she said. "Since first being injured, I have seen a lot of changes."



Thanks to advances in technology, she drives a specially equipped van, which gives her added mobility.

Ms. Judah has beauty as well. She holds the title of Miss Wheelchair Georgia and was first runner-up in the Miss Wheelchair America pageant.

Despite these achievements, she said she would like to be awarded on merit alone.

"Yes, I am in a wheelchair," she said, "but, I don't want to be categorized, I am pursuing a career, not a disability."

Use care when driving this holiday weekend

The Columbus Day holiday is a significant one. It marks the day Christoper Columbus discovered America after embarking on a perilous sea voyage.

On this holiday many of our families will make their own journeys to visit family and friends. To help ensure a safe and enjoyable weekend, commanders must remind soldiers to take proper safety precautions.

Many Americans will be traveling the highways this weekend. Commanders should emphasize to their soldiers the importance of adhering to the rules of the road, driving defensively and using common sense while on the highways this weekend.

It is a fact that seat belts save lives and should always be worn. Motorcycle riders should be reminded that they must wear helmets and proper clothing, and ride with their lights on.

Our goal should be to make the upcoming holiday period accident and injury free. To do so we must remember that safety, both personal safety and the safety of others, is everyone's responsibility.

CFC your chance to help others

The 1988 Combined Federal Campaign will be conducted at Fort Benning and in other federal government activities in the area during the period Oct. 1-Nov. 30.

This campaign solicits monetary support for over 100 humanitarian agencies through a single appeal. This combined effort affords each of us a chance to assist local, state, national and international activities which support both our military and civilian communities.

Every year, through the United Way, this campaign provides thousands of dollars for Fort Benning's health, welfare and youth activities.

The goal for this year's campaign is $550,000. This goal can be attained by the wholehearted participation of all members of this installation through a fair share system of giving.

Generosity and concern for others has always symbolized those who serve in the United States government. Let us continue this tradition.

All personnel are urged to support these deserving agencies by giving generously to the 1988 Combined Federal Campaign.

Know any unsung heroes?

It seems like we always report the bad things that happen on post, while good news gets little space. We'd like to hear from our readers about some of the good things going on here. If you know someone who's an "unsung hero," write us a letter about it.

All letters must be typed, double-spaced and signed by the writer, including home or unit address and a telephone number. We will withhold a writer's name upon request, but please include it on your submission to us in case we need to contact you.

Letters are subject to standard editing and condensing depending on space available. Letters in which the writer requests that no changes be made will not be run.

Letters can be dropped off at The Bayonet office in Room 601, Building 4, or mailed to The Bayonet, Room 601, Building 4, Fort Benning Ga., 31905.

Snively snivels about boot prices

By Clyde Snively
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Considering that my heels were worn enough to drive a HUMMVW under them and my tongues were hanging by threads, I decided it might be time to break down and buy the new Army boot everyone's talking about.

I would miss my $20-basic-issue-combat boots which were just now getting properly broken in, but I knew I'd never be able to finish out my current enlistment with them.

(Don't worry, first sergeant, I still have my spit-shined jump boots for inspections — five years old and only 400 yards on them.)

Anyway, after checking the amount of money in my bank account to make sure I had at least $35 (allowing for inflation) I headed for the clothing sales store.

"May I help you?" a friendly clerk offered.

"Looking for boots," I said brightly.

"Indeed you are," she said, eyeing the ones I had on. She proceeded to take me back to where all sorts of boots were on display. I pointed to a pair that had a tag hanging from the boot lace which identified it as "Boots, combat, mildew and water resistant, direct molded sole."

"These are our new combat boots," she said. "They come in half sizes to assure a better fit. What size do you want?"

"I normally wear a ten and a half," I said modestly.

"And will that be in extra narrow, narrow, narrow regular, regular, regular wide, or extra wide?" she asked.

"I never had so many choices," I said. Why don't we try the narrow regular, regular and regular wide," I suggested.

"Very good sir, why don't you have a seat while I round them up."

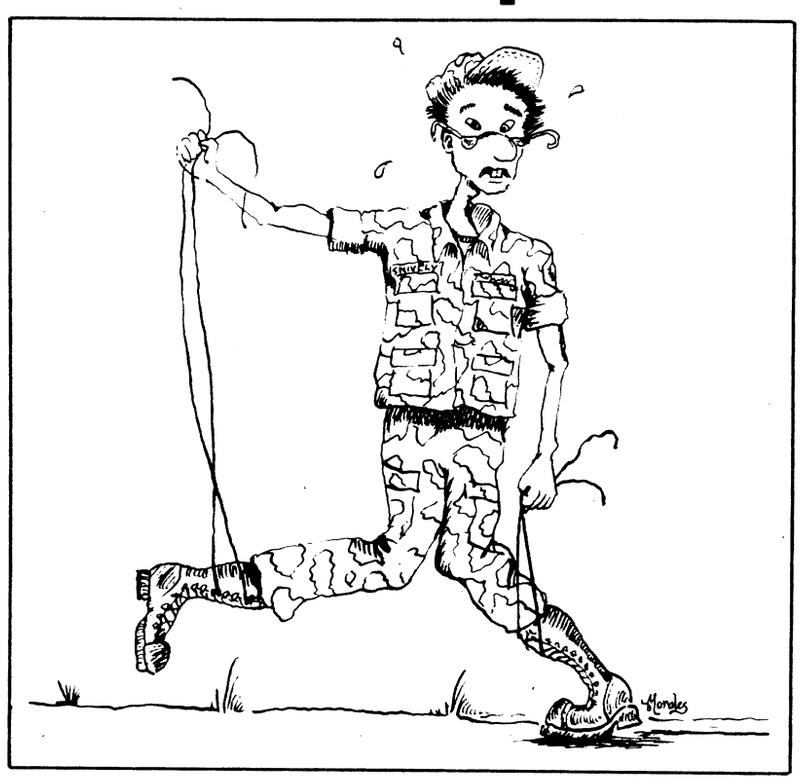
She had 10 1/2 narrow regulars and 10 1/2 regular wides, but no 10 1/2 regular regulars. She only had those in size 10 or 11.

As I was trying them on, I thought to ask what the price was.

"Fifty-one, ninety," she replied smartly.

I thought I was having a hearing lapse. "Would you repeat that," I asked.

"Fifty-one, ninety," she said again.



"What am I getting for that price? Built in air conditioning and heating systems? And I bet they only come in one color, too," I gasped.

"Oh no," she replied." What you're getting is the best boot the Army ever had. It has non-skid, self-cleaning soles with speed lacing eyelets and ventilating insoles."

"Lady," I said, "have you ever been on a patrol in the Fort Benning woods on a rainy day?

"There ain't no such thing as non-skid on wet, red clay. And as for self-cleaning, they must come with a pry bar because that stuff clings like lint. You soon find yourself walking with 50 pounds of that stuff hanging on each boot.

"Also, I don't trust any boot that requires instructions for learning how to lace them. Additionally, those eyelets can be a real hazard."

"What do you mean?" she asked.

"Wait-a-minute vines," I said. "The meanest, baddest vine there is. They reach out and grab hold of anything that protrudes, and these eyelets protrude."

While I was on a roll, I proceeded to note that if the boots come with a molded sole, that must mean they can't be repaired once they wear out, that I couldn't see paying a week's salary for something that couldn't be repaired.

Walking out on the boots that brought me into the store, I decided to check out the off-post stores that have soldier stuff.

The first one I went into, the clerk took me to a boot that he said would be the most comfortable boot that I ever wore, that it didn't need any breaking in, that to show me how great it was, it would take about 20 minutes to get it properly fitted.

"Wow," I said. "How much."

"A mere $139," he said.

After I recovered, I asked what happened if, during combat or a field training exercie you lost a boot, or burned one up trying to dry it by a fire. "Do you send a valet out to measure me?"

I then beat feet back to the clothing sales store where they were having a phase out sale on the old boots, figuring my poor crumpled toes could handle a few more years of plain old, basic black boots.

Following safety rules can prevent tragedy

Safety Office

Are you one of the lucky ones? In fiscal year 1986, 14 Fort Benning soldiers were killed in accidents. At the close last week of fiscal year 1987, only nine soldiers were accident victims. Were you one of the lucky ones who escaped death in an accident?

During the 1980s, an average of 14 soldiers each year have been lost in accidents. In the 1970s, it was 21 per year, and in the 1960s, 39 soldiers each year were killed in accidents.

The dramatic reduction in accidental deaths from the 1960 to 1987 indicates that Fort Benning's safety program is doing something right.

Unfortunately, although the number of soldiers killed in accidents is decreasing, it is still not the desired zero.

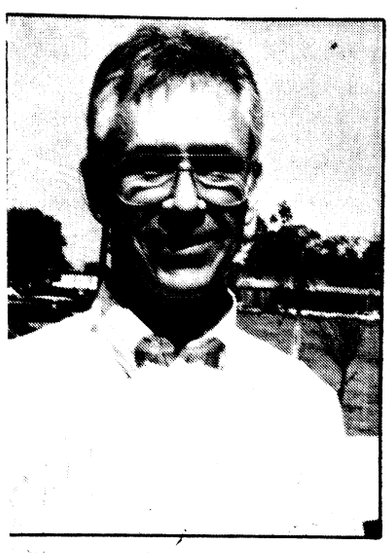
In fiscal year 1987, nine healthy young men were violently removed from the prime of life in fatal accidents. Nine families and many friends attended memorial services for these soldiers. Literally hundreds of people will grieve and mourn these losses for many, many years. As you read this, you should be (and probably are) thinking, "I'm sure glad I wasn't one of those nine."

Most of these unfortunate soldiers die in private vehicle accidents. The second leading cause of deaths is drowning. The real tragedy is that in almost all of the cases, the accident could have been prevented.

You have all heard the safety messages from your squad leader and platoon sergeant on how to protect yourself and avoid accidents. You're given the usual good advice about speeding, driving while drinking, fatigue, wearing seat belts, and so on.

All this advice may seem old hat and unnecessary to many of you, and some unfortunately ignore it. This year, five more soldiers apparently heeded the advice and are still with us.

An old axiom says it's a shame youth is wasted on the young. For many of our young soldiers, this is true when it comes to concern about their own personal safety.



Too many young persons have little or no regard for safety. These make up the majortity of those killed each year in accidents. The thought of death does not enter their minds. Or, if it does, there is an attitude of "it won't happen to me."

All of us need to heed Murphy's Law: it can happen, it will happen, and it will happen to me. This attitude, exercising normal care and the observance of safety rules, would allow many more soldiers to live to a ripe old age.

Sergeant's wife falls for "bait and switch"

By Aimee R. Holden
Bayonet staff writer

If Polly Foster, of Fort Benning, had known the havoc that would ensue, she almost certainly would not have responded to the Family Meats advertisement in the Aug. 23 edition of a local news paper.

The ad that caught Foster's eye offered 200 pounds of assorted meat for 99 cents per pound. Included in the package were sirloin steaks, T-bone steaks, ground beef, bacon, pork chops, poultry and rib-eye steaks. A 100 pound bonus pack of meat was also included in the deal.

"The bonus pack was what really interested me," Foster said.

The customer was also to be given 23 free rib-eye steaks if they came in with approved credit and if they responded to the ad that day, 75 sirloin steaks were added.

Foster called that day and set up an appointment to get the meat. She was told to contact a local lending company, to arrange for 90-day same-as-cash financing.

"I was told that it was mandatory that financing be done through this company," Foster said.

When the loan was initially turned down, Family Meats got it approved for her and gave her an appointment to come in.

That's when the real trouble began, she said.

"I went there with the intention of buying the 200-pound package," Foster explained. "But when I got there, they told me that I probably didn't really want that one. They said it was mostly soup meats."

She was then shown a plan that guarenteed her 10 months of meat for $84 per month. She was not told, however, how many pounds of meat she would be getting.

"They told me I was buying sections of the cow, and that this way I would be getting better cuts," Foster said. "I thought that at least this would be something we'd use. I'd never heard of soup meats and I wouldn't have known what to do with them."

After Foster agreed to the more expensive package, the salesperson took her to the butchering room where she could watch her meat being cut.

"They made you watch them cut the meat," she said, "and then you had to sign a paper saying that you had witnessed it. The only thing was you couldn't really see what they were doing and the butcher didn't tell you anything."

Foster also said that she never had a chance to see the meat packaged and bagged before she got home.

"They bagged it and took it out to my car while I was signing the contract, so I couldn't tell how much was there," Foster said.

After the meat was cut, Foster was asked to sign a contract. Instead of the $84 a month contract to which she had agreed, she was charged $106 a month for 105 pounds of meat for nine months. When she asked why she was being charged more, they told her it was because when the meat was cut she had gotten extra weight.

"I was upset, but I would have felt like a heel telling them I didn't want it after they had already cut it," Foster said. "I couldn't do it."

What Foster finally took home was 95.5 lbs of meat (the 105 pounds was the total weight of the meat before it was cut and trimmed) plus only a 40 pound bonus pack that was made up mostly of vegetables. Foster said that at no time did they explain to her that she would not receive the 100 pound bonus pack.

"They told me all about the bonus pack I'd get," Foster said, "but they didn't tell me it would

Better Business Bureau

Ads such as this one should be an immediate tip off to readers.

Don't be fooled by ads offering incredible deals

Better Business Bureau

Don't be fooled by those "bait and switch" freezer meat ads. They're the ones that advertise bulk quantities of meat at unbelievably low prices. That's the bait.

When you visit the ad sponsor's establishment to inquire about this bargain priced meat, you are sold something else at a much higher price. That's the switch.

Usually, the item to which you're switched is priced much higher than the same item when purchased from a legitimate meat dealer.

What are the pitfalls to avoid when dealing with the sponsor of such ads?

• Watch out for the "switch." When you actually see the featured "USDA Choice" beef in the cooler, it will likely be the fattest, most wasty hunk of meat you've ever seen. Also, it will probably be the moldiest. You'll shudder at the very thought of being stuck with it and will almost feel relieved when the salesman says, "Now of course, we'll sell you this if you want it...but, quite frankly, we know you'll be much happier with that."

Then he'll switch you to some other beef priced much higher than the price that originally caught your eye. And, invariably, if you buy it, you'll pay a substantially higher price than if you had bought it from an ethical dealer.

• Sometimes the switch is handled by outright disparagement as the salesman showing you the beef makes it clear that only a fool would purchase such fat and wasty beef. Or, the salesman may tell you that the advertised carcass is sold and that they can't get any more. Whatever his excuse may be, if he tries to switch you to other higher priced meat, you can be sure you're dealing with a "bait and switch" artist.

• Don't let yourself be unduly influenced by the free bonus offer of a ham or turkey, a bonus of meat, 75 pork chops or some free steaks. These so called "free gifts" are never free...their cost is hidden in the price of what you buy. Remember, nothing is really free if it is advertised as part of the deal.

• Look out for misleading words that are supposed to identify the cuts of meat. Take "beef half," for example. When most folks see this phrase, they think of a side of beef. In legitimate meat business language, a side of free T-bone and ribeye steaks to customers who called the same day the ad ran.

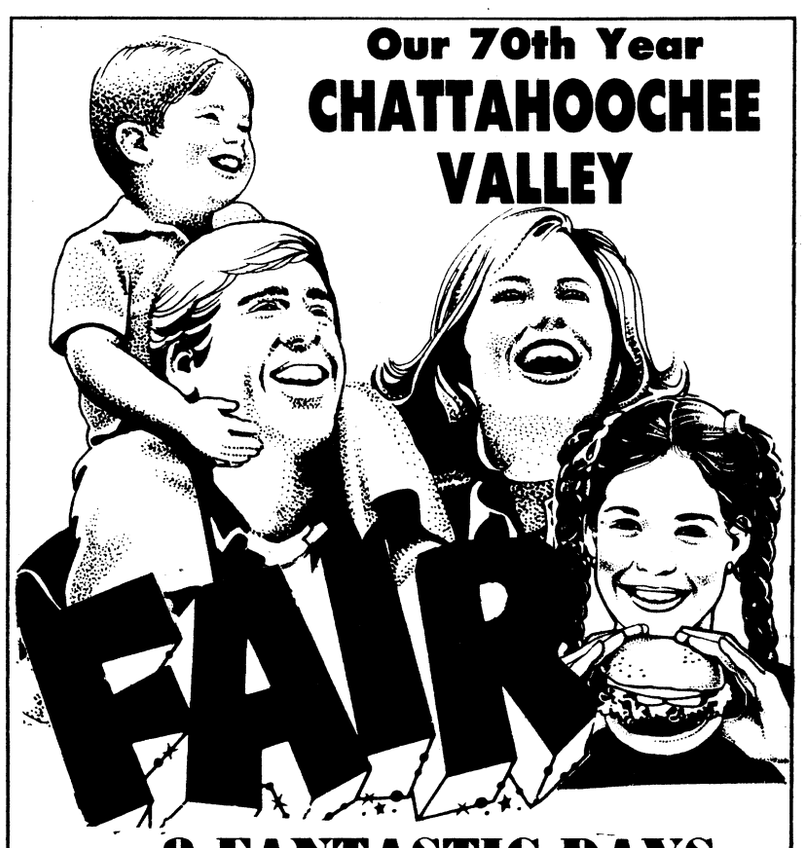
The firm encouraged customers to obtain financing from Newsome's company, and in several instances, actually refused to sell meat to customers who wanted to pay cash.

"These people knew exactly what they were doing," Marcotte said. Potential customers were advised to call for an appointment, which is another common tactic in such operations, he said.

"When a customer called in, they would get enough information to do a credit check, so they could find out how much money to charge them," he said.

Consumers could have avoided being ripped off by the firm by calling the BBB for a performance record on the company. Marcotte said the one prepared on the firm and given to anyone who called stated, "Based on a review of our files, this firm does not meet BBB standards for business practices. While the company has answered most complaints presented to it by this bureau, our file does show a pattern of failure to resolve or eliminate the cause of customer complaints."

Callers would also have been told that, "this firm advertises bulk quantities of meat at very low prices. When consumers inquire about these bargain priced offers and bonuses, they are offered better quality meats at much higher prices and are pressured to sign contracts with high interest rates for payment."



Leroy Mills, a detective at the Muscogee County Sheriff's Department who is investigating the firm, said that no charges have been filed because they have left town.

"Bait and switch is a misdemeanor offence under Georgia law, and is not an extraditable offence," he said. The penalty is a maximum fine of $1,000 and one year in jail.

It is a fairly common practice, Mills said, and there are different groups of people doing it. What makes it especially hard to prosecute, is that the "salesmen" make customers initial virtually every line of their paperwork.

Mills said there is no evidence that the firm violated any criminal laws. "They didn't sell bad or spoiled meat, just low grade meat at high prices," he said. "If anybody actually has some bad meat, I'd like to hear from them to look at possible criminal charges."

Newsome said that the people still must pay his firm for their loans. "They are legally binding contracts," he said.

Automation helps TASC serve customers better

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

The Fort Benning Training Support Center is getting automated, all to better serve their customers.

According to Ralph Carizzo, Director of Training and Support, this is a big switch from the manually operated, paper driven system.

"In the past, a number was taken from a piece of paper and then entered into the computer," Carizzo said. "Now, a workorder is fed directly into the computer and the computer gives the number."

Carizzo said with this system each branch can look into the computer and find out exactly where it is and what the status is in that department.

"The biggest advantage of that is to the customer," he said. "Because they will know a more exact date on the completion of the workorder."

Another bonus to the new system is that the computer can search out labor and materials and give product costs for each customer using TASC.

Eventually, people who have compatible systems will be able to call up the status of their work order on their computer and never have to leave the office.

Carizzo said it is a very "user friendly device," which means that it is not difficult to learn and not much training is required.

He noted that the whole system was revamped internally.

Several employees accredited Virginia Ingram as being the workhorse behind the entire project. "She put in many long hours to make the transition a smooth one."

This is part of an ongoing project to completely automate the work management and distribution system.

Bait

only be 40 pounds instead of 100 pounds, or that vegetables would be in it."

Foster said she never did get the free steaks she was promised.

"I asked about them twice and both times they assured me they were there. But they weren't. They later told me that if I didn't get them it was because I hadn't asked, which wasn't true."

Something else that Foster didn't realized was that she was being charged approximately nine dollars a pound for an assortment of meats that included ground beef and poultry. She also didn't realize that the weight of the meat and vegetables in the bonus pack was included in the poundage of the meat she was paying for.

"It just didn't sink in at the time that I was paying for meat," Foster said. "At the time, it really seemed like they were giving you a good deal. They really sold it well."

Foster had another surprise in store when she got home and started putting the meat away.

"When I started putting the meat in the freezer," she said, "I didn't think it looked like nine months worth of meat. Like I said, I hadn't really seen how much was there until I got home. I thought I might have gotten ripped off, but I didn't know how much." Foster called a friend over, who looked at the meat and agreed that she had been cheated.

When Foster and her friend brought the paperwork and their questions back to Family Meats, they didn't exactly get a warm welcome. In fact, Foster said, "they were really rude."

Foster then brought in two butchers to give a second and third opinion. Both men agreed that she had not gotten what she paid for, although they would not give her a dollar estimate of the meat's value.

"The second guy suggested that I call Channel 9 and also file a complaint with the Better Business Bureau," she said. "So I did."

Rebecca Todd with WTVM television came to Foster's home and filmed the meat in her freezer. A week-long series about the incident was scheduled to be aired.

When Foster once again returned to Family Meats to get some of the "bonus" promised to her, the salesperson who had sold her the meat denied any wrongdoing.

"They had already received a letter from the Better Business Bureau and he was very irate," Foster said. "He scared me. He verbally attacked me. My friend and I were both afraid that he was going to do something physical."

The manager, on the other hand, Foster said, was quite nice about it.

"He offered that, in all probability, they were wrong," she said. "He said the paperwork was very confusing. He said he would give me my free steaks doubled and that would take care of everything."

After the Channel 9 story began to air on Sept. 14, Family Meats called Foster and offered a new settlement.

"They said if I paid $240, which was what I valued the meat at after pricing it at grocery stores, plus tax, they would give my contract back," Foster said.

"But I didn't have that kind of money. I called Red Cross to see if they could provide Emergency Funds, but they said they couldn't help."

So Foster went back to Family Meats and took Rebecca Todd from Channel 9 with her.

"But they refused to talk in front of her, Foster said."

Rebecca Todd left, and Family Meats offered a final settlement. If Foster returned the meat, which had been sitting untouched in her freezer, they would give back her contract. The company also stipulated that she not tell Rebecca Todd of the settlement, and that they would not settle until the story had finished airing.

The next day Foster's phone rang off the hook. "Everyone was calling to tell me they (Family Meats) had left town. They just packed up their things and left," Foster said.

Family Meats disappeared from Columbus and left the Fosters with a $957 bill. Foster said Beneficial told her no one from Family Meats spoke with them about buying back her contract. Unless the Family Meats organization can be located, the Fosters have no leg to stand on.

All that Foster and her husband, SSgt. Larry Foster, know about the company are the names of the owners, and that the company is based somewhere in Texas.

They have contacted a lawyer who says they definately have a good case and can probably prove fraud. That is, of course, providing they can find the elusive Family Meats company.

The lawyer told them they can either look for the people themselves, or hire a skip locator, which costs money -- $200 a month, up-front, with no guarantee of results.

Deals

beef means a forequarter and a hindquarter from the same beef animal. This misleading phrase is frequently applied to an assortment of beef cuts which did not come from the same side of beef and which may not add up to the value of an actual side of beef. Consumers have bought a "beef half" thinking that they were getting a side of beef but actually got two front quarters. They got a "half," but they didn't get what they expected.

Another phrase to look out for is "beef order." Who, except for the dealer, knows what a beef order contains? Don't buy this kind of a deal unless you know the dealer and are provided with a complete inventory breakdown before you buy.

• Be careful about misleading words and phrases that are supposed to tell you the grade or quality of the meat. Take "U.S. Fancy Beef," for example. There is no such U.S. grade as "Fancy."

"USDA Grade A" is another such phrase. There is no "Grade A" in the U.S. Department of Agriculture's meat grades. Meat may be inspected but, unless it bears the designation "Prime," "Choice," or "Good," (lower grades are "Standard," "Commercial," "Utility," "Cutter," or "Canner"), it is not government graded. Grading and inspection are two entirely different things.

• Another aspect of grading you should know about is "Yield Grade." This is a method of indicating the percentage of yield within a grade of closely trimmed cuts on a scale ranging from 1 to 5. Yield Grade 1 reflects the highest yield of closely trimmed table-ready cuts and the least waste. Yield Grade 5 provides the lowest yield of cuts with the highest waste...with the numbers in between varying accordingly. Bait and switch freezer meat ads often carry a yield grade indication (usually yield grades 4 or 5) in very small print. If you later complain about the poor yield, they point out the yield grade designation in their advertisement.

• Be alert for attempts to "load" your order. Quality hindquarters of beef sold by ethical meat dealers usually weigh less than 200 pounds before processing. Yet many people who have bought so-called "beef hind" from bait and switch dealers find themselves with from 300 to 400 pounds on their hands, made up largely of cheaper cuts from the fore part of the animal.

• Beware of high pressure sales tactics. The bait and switch people will likely press you for a signed order right on the spot. They don't want to give you time to think it over, or compare the overpriced meat to which they're trying to switch you with the prices offered by ethical dealers.

• Don't fall for "same as cash" financing lures and similar claims. Interest or carrying charges are a legitimate and normal part of time-payment buying. If they're not itemizing these charges, you can be sure they're hidden in the price of the meat.

• Be on the lookout for deception everywhere. That bonus of "20 rib eye steaks" or "10 pounds of chicken" should tip you off to the size or thickness of the steaks. Does the price include cutting, wrapping and freezing charges? And look out for beef specials offering "extra sections." You'll be paying full price for those less valuable and perhaps unwanted "extras." Do you get the "bonus" only by opening an account, which means buying?

• Nearly every bait and switch ad has a small section referring to pre-trimmed, executive or special orders that are also available. That section should give you a clue as to what the firm wants to sell and at what price. And remember, even that meat is sold at hanging weight and is subject to further trim loss.

Simply put, if it sounds too good to be true, it probably isn't!

These are some of the pitfalls in buying meat from the bait and switch freezer meat people. Take our advice and play it safe. Buy your freezer meat from your established, locally-owned locker-freezer provisioner or meat processor who refrains from using "bait" type advertising and who wants your repeat business. He will serve you best.

Monday a holiday for federal workers

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Monday is Columbus Day, and federal workers on post will have the day off. Some "essential" personnel will have to work, such as security personnel and duty officers.

The commissary will be closed as will the Foxhole, Harmony Church and Kelley Hill Recreation Centers.

Garbage will not be picked up Monday. According to a spokesman for Reliable Trash Company, Monday's garbage will be picked up Tuesday, Tuesday's garbage will be picked up Wednesday, and the normal garbage schedule will resume Thursday.

Most recreational facilities on post will be open Monday, including the Youth Activities Center, Officers Club, libraries, arts and crafts and auto shops, gyms, bowling alleys, package stores, golf course and the post exchange.

Some facilities will be operating on a modified holiday schedule, so call before ahead to find out their operating hours.

29th Infantry Regiments hosts activation events

Retirees who were former members of the unit were honored guests last weekend's activities

The 29th Infantry Regiment played host to former members of the unit last weekend, during three days of events to celebrate the reactivation of its two battalions.

Friday, attendees were treated to tours, a luncheon and a capabilities exercise and static display.

Saturday marked the official reactivation ceremony, as the two battalions of the 29th Infantry Regiment became Fort Benning's latest additions to the regimental sytem.

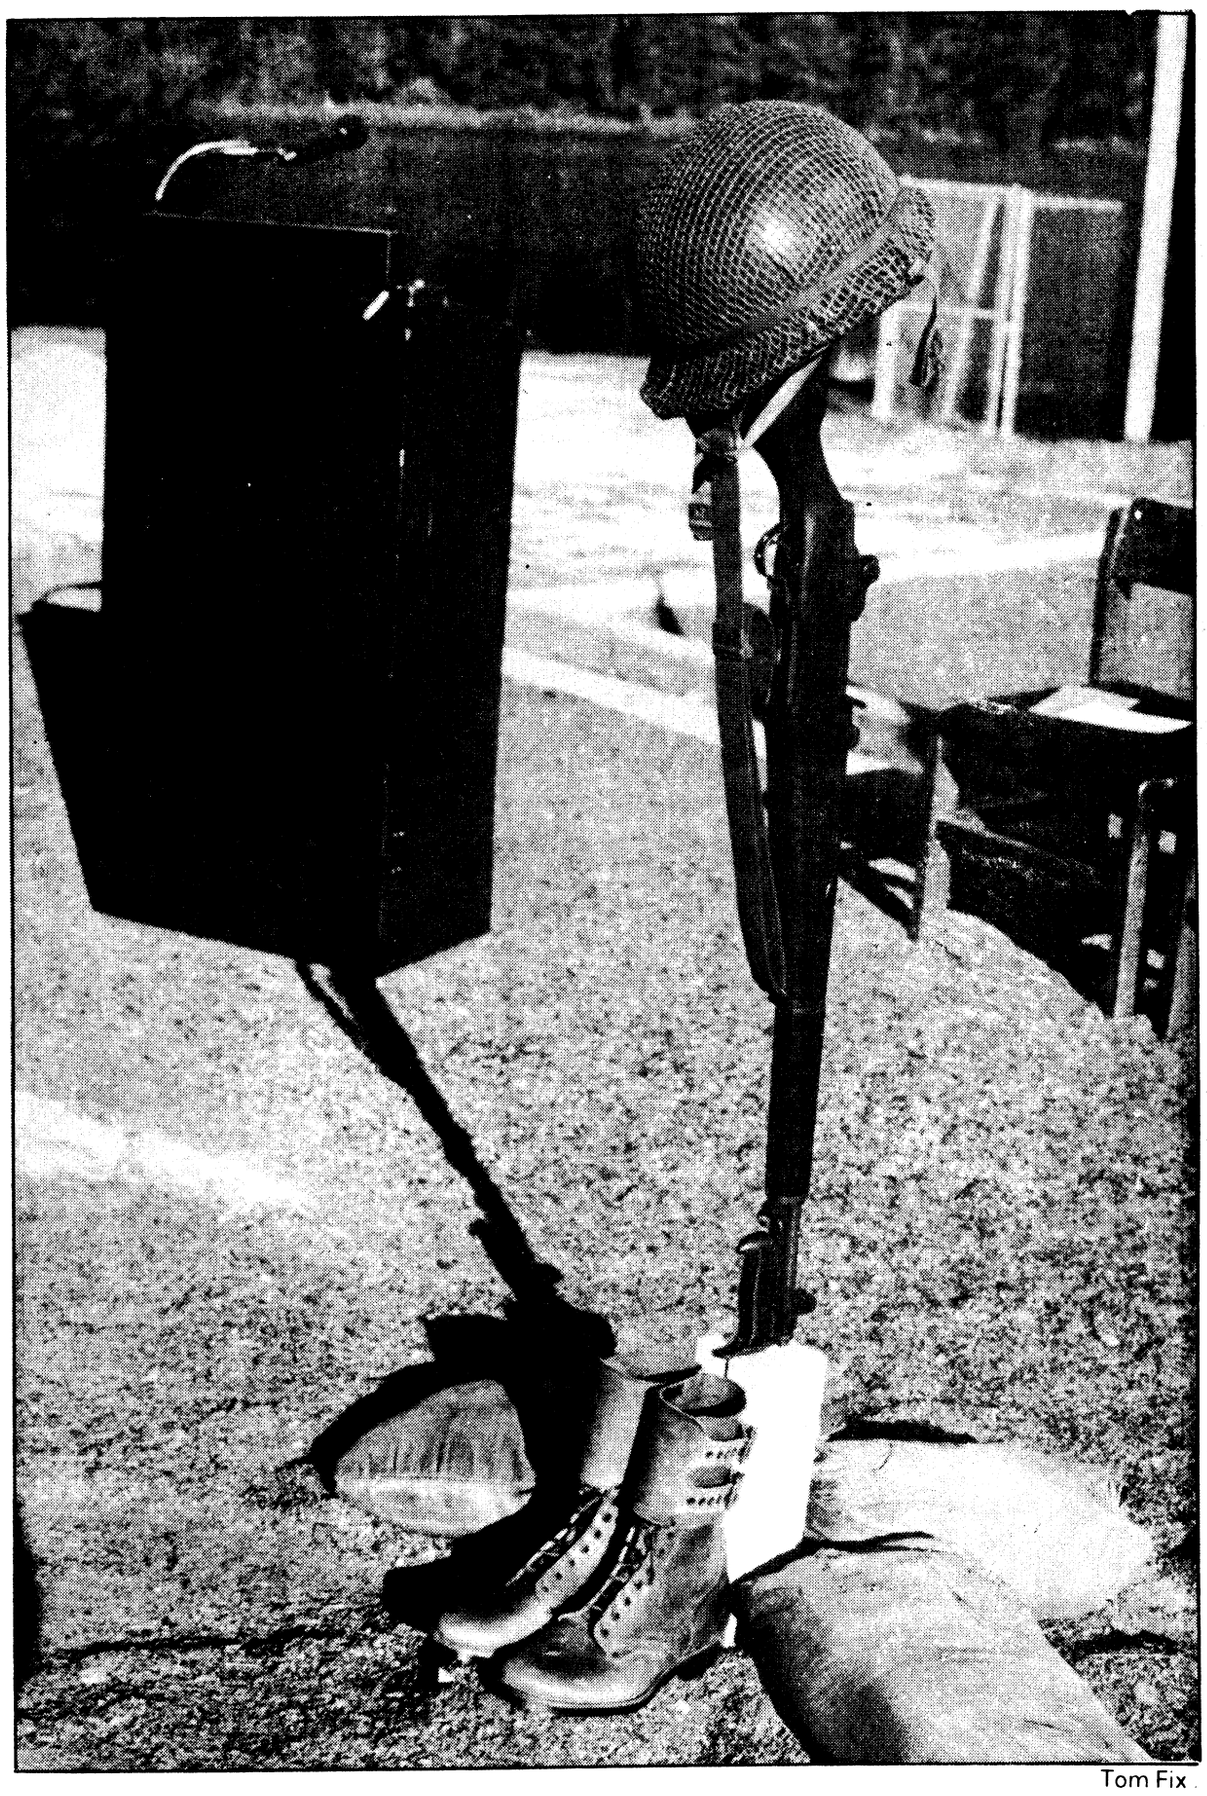
The regimental colors of each battalion were unfurled by the regimental commander, Col. John D. Fuller, on Todd Field as several hundred spectators watched.

The next day in the cool morning air, former and present soldiers of the 29th Infantry Regiment gathered at Victory Pond to pay tribute to fallen comrades of the regiment.

Frank Leatherman, who served in the 29th during World War II, fed doughnuts and coffee to soldiers departing South Hampton, England, on the their way to Normandy beaches as part of the D-Day invasion.

"I served many of them their last meal," Leatherman said.

After the services, former members of the regiment listen to Col. Fuller as he recapped the events of the weekend and handed out certificates of attendence to the reunion.



Bernard Harris, who served in the regimental headquarters, remembered what it was like to be in the 29th when he was stationed at Benning. "The real life was in Phenix City," he recalled.

One of his companions who also attended the reunion was Frank T. Roberts, of D Company, whose enthusiasm of past years was still very active. "I came in as a private. I had a good time, and I went out as a private," Roberts mused with the zest of a much younger man.

Ninety-seven Colombian cadets graduated Sept. 29 from a Cadet Branch Orientation course at the U.S. Army School of the Americas.

The four-week course familiarizes cadets with light infantry tactics, weapons and procedures. Weapons training includes using the M-16 rifle, M-60 machine gun, light anti-tank weapon (LAW) and the 90mm recoilless rifle.

The cadets also received training in land navigation, internal defense and development procedures.

Guest speaker for the graduation ceremony was Brig. Gen. Farouk Yanine Diaz, commandant of the "General Jose Maria Cordova" Military Academy in Colombia.

This iteration of cadets represents the seventh and final course of this type offered at USARSA for 1987. Branch specific training for Colombian cadets includes orientation courses in artillery, engineering, mechanized infantry and logistics, depending on each iteration's requirement and on the military academy's training program.

For example, this graduation had 18 marine cadets and 79 air force cadets, but they all received training in light infantry tactics

Bolivia, Costa Rica, Ecuador, Honduras and Venezuela were represented in a graduation ceremony at the US Army School of the Americas Oct. 2.

The graduation honored 16 officers who graduated from the Resource Management Course.

Graduating from Bolivia was Lt. Col. Max Claros. Costa Rica had two graduates, Capt. Mario A. Calderon and Manrique Fonseca. The four graduates from Ecuador were Lt. Col. Hector A. Arteaga, Lt. Col. Eduardo Ruales, Lt. Col. Nayao F. Velasco and Maj. Pablo E. Burbano.

Honduras had the most graduates. They were Lt. Colonels Jordge A. Cubas, Eduardo I. Hernandez, Guadalupe A. Reithel and Eugenio Romero, Majors Juan R. Espinoza, Jose S. Maldonado and Francisco Reyes and Capt. Jose E. Canales. Representing Venezuela was Capt. Luis A. Gatas.

The eight-week course teaches officers the modern decision-making skills which apply to a wide variety of military situations. It also instructs officers in personnel and logistics management with emphasis in international logistics.

36th Engr. Gp.

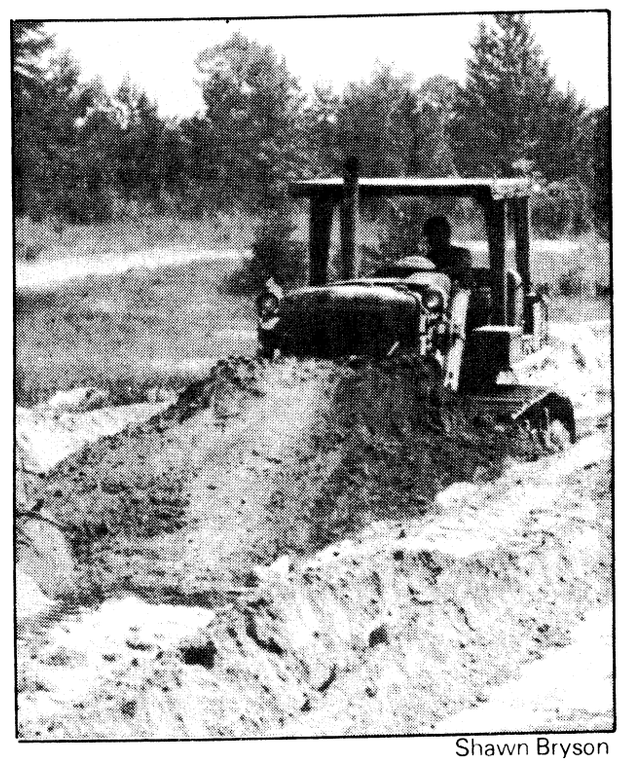
36th Engineer Group Correspondent

The soldiers from C Company, 43rd Engineer Battalion, 36th Engineer Group, played a major role in a recent Battalion field training exercise.

According to 1st Lt. Dominic Macaluso, executive officer of the company, the Charlie soldiers convoyed to the FTX site and set up a tactical bivouac during the first two days.



The company performed many of the Army Readiness Training Exercise Program tasks. One of the tasks was to conduct general engineering and survivability mobility and counter-mobility mission in support of the Battalion.

Macaluso said that the company was operational 24 hours each day of the remainder of the FTX. The battalion Base Defense Operation Center gave the 62 Charlie soldiers several other ARTEP tasks given as fragmentary orders.

One of the missions was a road recon from Fort Benning to Fort McClellan, Ala. "The recon was over 300 miles round trip and was performed to determine the quantities and kinds of loads the road could support," Macaluso said. "The road recon was also done to find engineer advantages such as borrow pits, airfield sites, lumber yards and quarries," the lieutenant said.

The soldiers also performed a bridge recon in which they used engineer formulas that determine the bridges weight classifications, according to Macaluso.

The battalion sent Opposing Forces to attack the C Company without notice, which gave the soldiers the opportunity to deal with processing prisoners of was Macaluso said. In turn, the Charlie soldiers are given the chance to act as the opposing forces when they "terrorized" the Headquarters Co., he said.

Fostering good will more than just a job for ASTD employee

By Becky Obert
Bayonet staff writer

Charlotte Osterburg is having a normal day.

At 9:30 a.m., she's consoling a Latin American wife who's in tears over an automobile accident. Mrs. Osterburg puts her arms around the young woman, speaking gently in a mixture of Spanish and English, wiping away the tears.

Next a student from Thailand comes in, wanting help with a wedding. He and his wife want to repeat their vows in a Christian church Saturday, but they don't have blood tests, a license or a minister.

"First you must have the blood test, then we can take care of the other things," she tells him, and asks her assistant to call the health department and get directions.

In her job as program officer for the Allied Student Training Detachment, Mrs. Osterburg is responsible for helping foreign students and their families learn more about the U.S.

An equally important job, she says, is helping them deal with the culture shocks. "America is so different from their home countries and much of our life here is hard for them to understand, it is so foreign to what they have grown up with," she said.

She admits that it is more than an 8 to 5 job, and part of the reason is the way she gets personally involved with the students and their families.

"Before they get here, it's like Christmas, waiting to open the presents," she said. "And it's so sad when they leave. I get much too involved with them, and saying goodbye just tears me up."

Many students already know her face before they arrive, because Mrs. Osterburg has made friends around the world since coming to the ASTD in 1974.

"Even after they leave they'll write to me and I never fail to answer," she said.

That's because the students become part of her family while they are here. "I've been accused of babying them, but I'll continue it as long as no one asks me to stop," she said.

What Charlotte offers them is true friendship. She gets involved in their lives and welcomes them into hers. She gives them her home telephone number and encourages them to call her anytime. And they do.

During a recent visit, Charlotte said her daughter just couldn't believe how much the phone rang. "She asked me if they always call this much, and I said, oh yes, I worry about them if they don't."

Communicating can be a problem for many of the students, many of whom have taken English classes but don't have much experience with conversational English.

"I think my diction has improved, because I try to speak very clearly so they can understand my English," she said. "They tell me, 'Miss Charlotte, I can understand what you say, but nobody else.'"

She speaks German fluently, and some Spanish and French. "I have also acquired quite a bit of Arabic, and it amuses the Saudi students so much when I try to speak to them in their language," she said.

What makes Mrs.Osterburg special is that she goes one step further than most people, trying to find ways to make the families feel at home.

"I've learned to say good morning in many languages, and that always goes over well," she said.

She said part of her continued enthusiasm for the job comes from the students themselves.

"They're always amazed at us (Americans), and I never miss a chance to tell them how wonderful we are," she said.

Mrs. Osterburg also puts herself in their shoes, and understands how it feels to be a stranger in a foreign country.

Ledger-Enquirer

Charlotte Osterburg

She knows firsthand what it feels like, having immigrated to the U.S. in 1957, a widow with two small children.

"When I watch television, I see it from their viewpoint," she said. "If there is a flood or fire somewhere, I wonder if any of my students from that area are affected."

Mrs. Osterburg said she wants to show others what a wonderful country America is because she feels indebted to it.

"I can never repay this country for taking me in," she said. "Not a day goes by that I am not aware of how good it is to be in America.

"With me things always count double. If it happens to someone born here, that's good, but to me, an immigrant, it is doubly wonderful."

She believes that her job is important. "I really believe that if we dont' send them home with the right feeling, we might as well close the door and go home. This is America and we have an image to uphold," she said.

"They always say thank you, and I say, you would do the same for me."

Mrs. Osterburg was recently invited to join the Kiwanis Club in Columbus, making her the first woman member. Wearing her Kiwanis pin on her collar, she said she was honored to be asked to join the group, and that she plans to be an active member.

Chuck Gantner is the chairman of the Kiwanis Club's international relations committee, and nominated Mrs. Osterburg for membership.

"She has been the 'power behind the throne' in our international relations projects for a long time," he said.

Bob Poydasheff, a retired officer and bank officer has known Mrs. Osterburg for many years, said, "Charlotte exemplifies everything that is good and decent about American. She is a warm, generous person. She's a kind caring person. Creating a positive image among foreign people. Her life gives lie to the stereotype ugly American."

He said that he's been impressed with her work with allied students and their families.

"She does a tremendous job spreading positive feelings about Americans being caring decent people," he said. "She loves this country and loves being an American.

"She believes that through her actions a difference can be made, and she proves it," he said.

Australian finds Benning to be 'just his cup of tea'

By Becky Obert
Bayonet staff writer

Adapting to America wasn't that difficult for Australian Capt. Eric Stephen Goldie. He just tucked his tea gear in his pocket, his obliging hosts rustled up a cup of hot water and Goldie fixed himself a nice hot cup of tea.

Not quite the well-brewed potion he's accustomed to at home in Kelso, New South Wales, but quite satisfactory just the same.

Goldie visited Benning for two weeks to observe infantry officer training and do what he could to foster good will between the two nations. He also spent some time with the city planner in Columbus, exchanging notes about the work he does in civilian life.

Goldie is a reservist in the Australian Army, and the trip to the U.S. is a prize he won as a recipient of the Prince of Wales Award.

He said the purpose of the award is to recognize individual excellence in the Australian Defense Force Reserves. Soldiers are judged on their service record and their civilian employment record.

The awards were established in 1984 with the patronage of His Royal Highness, Prince Charles, the Prince of Wales, by the Citizens in support of the Reserve Forces (Trust) Fund.

Goldie said that about 3,000 reservists competed for the awards, and 30 finalists were chosen. These individuals were then interviewed by a board of high ranking officers from all branches of the services, and six winners were selected.

"We had to explain to the panel why we wished to visit the post we selected," he said. "I chose Fort Benning because I teach officer cadets in a university regiment, which is comparable to your ROTC, so there was a lot I could learn about infantry training."

Goldie said he was surprised at the sheer size of Fort Benning. "It is bigger than I'd expected," he said. "The post is bigger than our whole Australian Army."

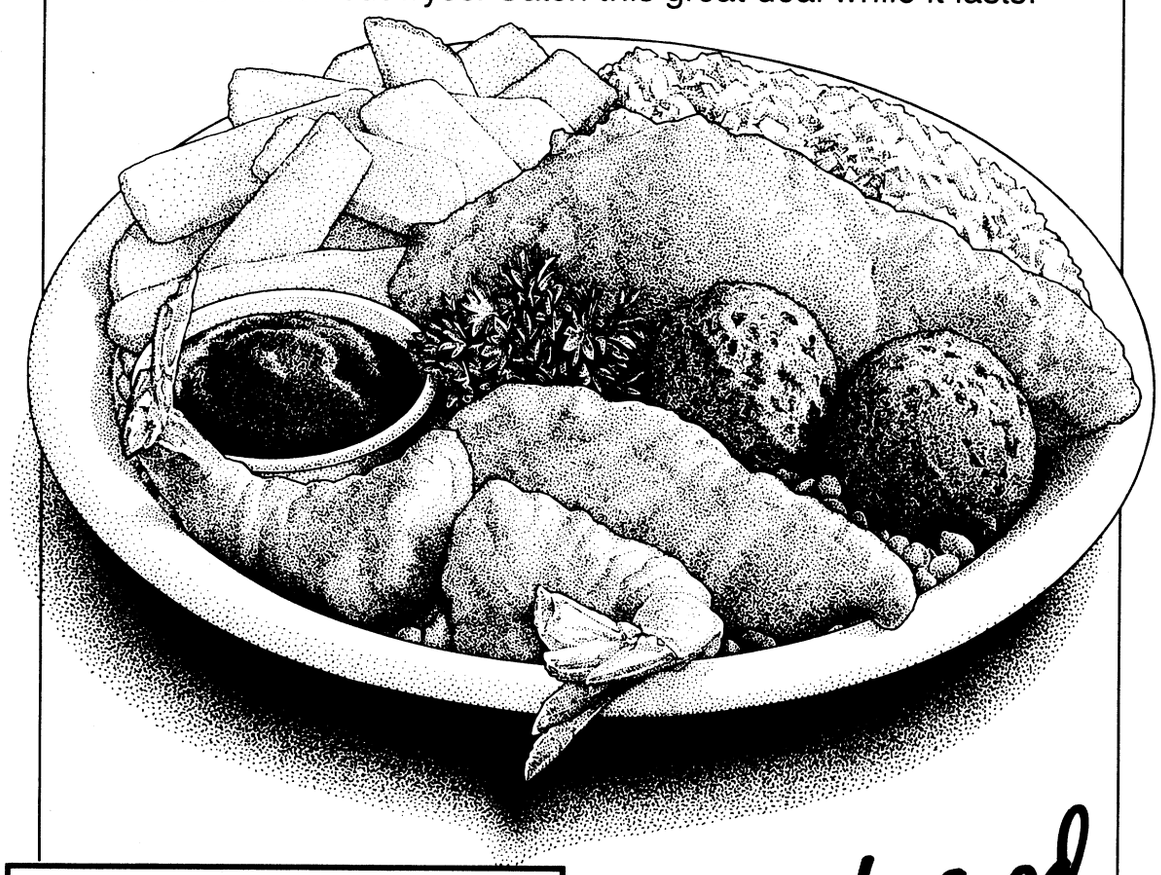
While Australia has roughly the same land mass as the U.S., its population is only 15 million people, he said.

Goldie said it made good sense for him to visit here. "In all the wars this century, we've fought together, so the chances are we'd do it again. For this reason, I see myself as an ambassador as well as an observer."

He said he thinks it's important for allies to understand each other and get to know each other.

As a "goodwill ambassador," Goldie said he's tried to be as helpful as possible to the people he meets. "They all have about a million questions about Australia, and I try to answer them as best I can," he said.

It's his first visit to the U.S., but Goldie said there are so many similarities between the U.S. and Australia, so it's not that much of a culture shock.



He said the thing that struck him most about Americans is, "the way people seem to be enjoying themselves more.

"Australians are not a sad people by any means, but I guess you'd say we're slightly more reserved," he said.

In civilian life, Goldie is the deputy chief town planner of the Council of the City of Bathurst. During his reserve duty, he's an officer instructor of a training company, where he teaches tactics, military operations and leadership.

Tisdale to speak at OWC luncheon

OWC

Betty Tisdale will be the guest speaker at an Officers' Wives Club luncheon Oct. 23 at the Officers' Club, beginning at 10:30 a.m.

She will speak about her part in the rescue of Vietnamese orphans from Saigon in 1975, which was called Operation Babylift.

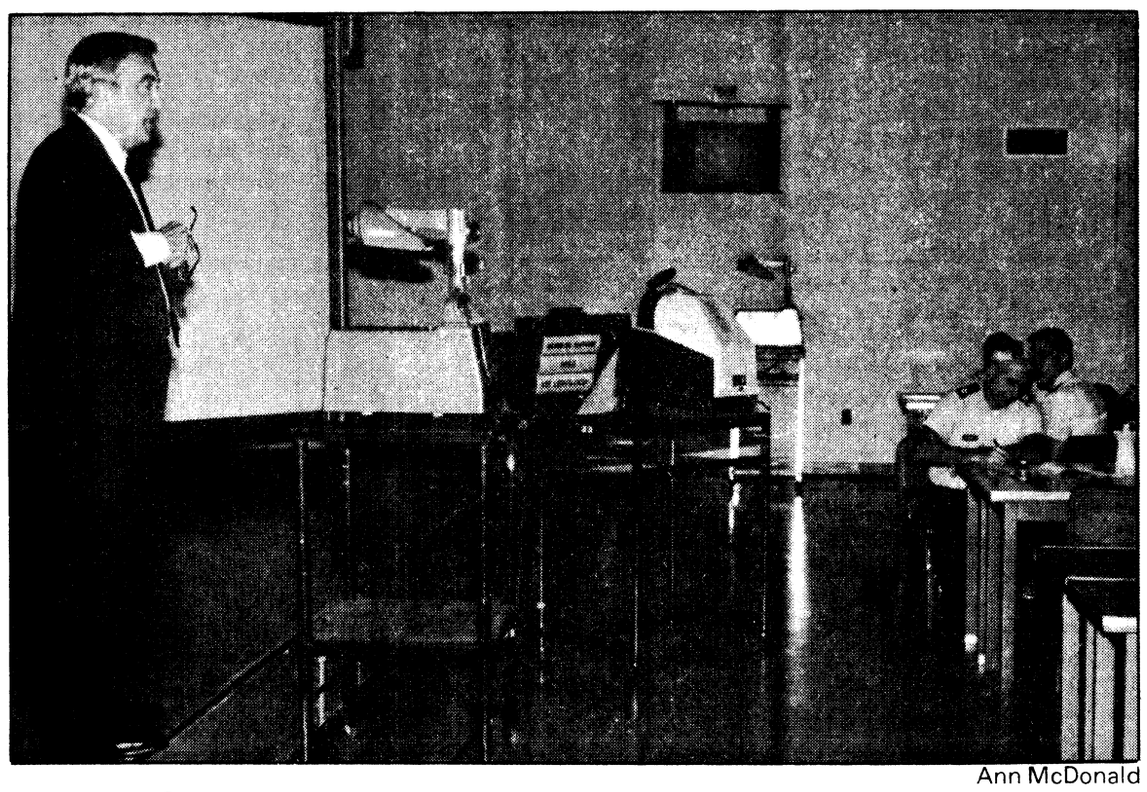
Tisdale began working with Vietnamese orphans in the 1960s, after meeting Dr. Tom Dooley, a physician who dedicated his life to helping the children of southeast Asia.

Upon Dr. Dooley's death, Tisdale picked up his cause and began her crusade to help the children of An Lac. She spent all her vacation time every year in Vietnam, cleaning the orphanage, finding desperately needed supplies, shopping for food that was very scarce, teaching math and English to the older children, and holding and loving the babies, some of whom died in her arms.

With every trip to An Lac, her devotion became stronger. She knew that she needed financial assistance to help her children survive. Each child cost $5 a month to clothe and feed and her goal was to send $2,000 a month to Mme. Ngai's orphanage in An Lac.

Betty began speaking at schools, civic organizations, church groups, anyone who would listen to her story and look at her poignant slides of the horrible conditions at An Lac.

Her words and pictures touched everyone's heart and her crusade received national attention.



The orphanage now had clothes, food, medical supplies, a jeep and even a full-time doctor. A second orphanage was opened in the countryside and two hundred older orphans were being cared for.

Conditions in the orphanage had improved, but the war was going badly for South Vietnam. The end was in sight and Mme. Ngai and the children of An Lac were in danger. They had been too friendly with the Americans and would be eliminated when the North Vietnamese government took over.

Tisdale and her army of volunteers, headquartered at Fort Benning, planned a rescue mission that reached around the world and saved the lives of Mme. Ngai and 219 Vietnamese orphans. It was called Operation Babylift.

This dramatic story is just a part of this remarkable woman; her message of strength, self-motivation and love is inspiring.

War Conference

Infantry Officers Advanced Courses students got an opportunity to hear about past wars during a recent War Conference. Five veterans from past wars, including a Medal of Honor winner, spoke to students about war fighting. The purpose of the conferences was to reinforce the understanding of warfighting in past wars and how it may likely be in the future.

MARSHAL'S VIEWPOINT

By Wendell D. Choate
Provost Marshal's Office

Some straight talk to teens about street safety. All your life you've gotten warnings about being careful. "Don't do this," "Don't go there," "Never walk alone at night." It gets boring, but there are reasons why behind all of the "don'ts."

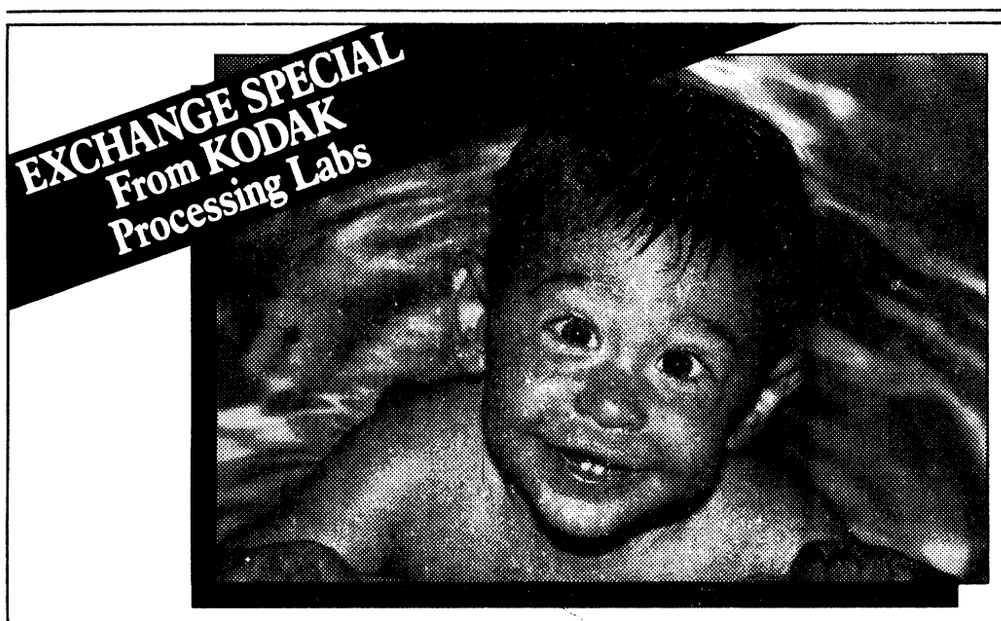
The facts speak for themselves: there are over 2000 violent crimes committed by strangers against teenager every day.

Even if you think you know how to stay safe, review these reasons behind the warnings:

Always let someone know where you're going and what time you'll be back. It may seem like an invasion of privacy, but it's plain common sense. If you're in trouble and no one knows you're missing, no one's going to look for you. If you have an accident or get assaulted, an hour or two can make a life or death difference.

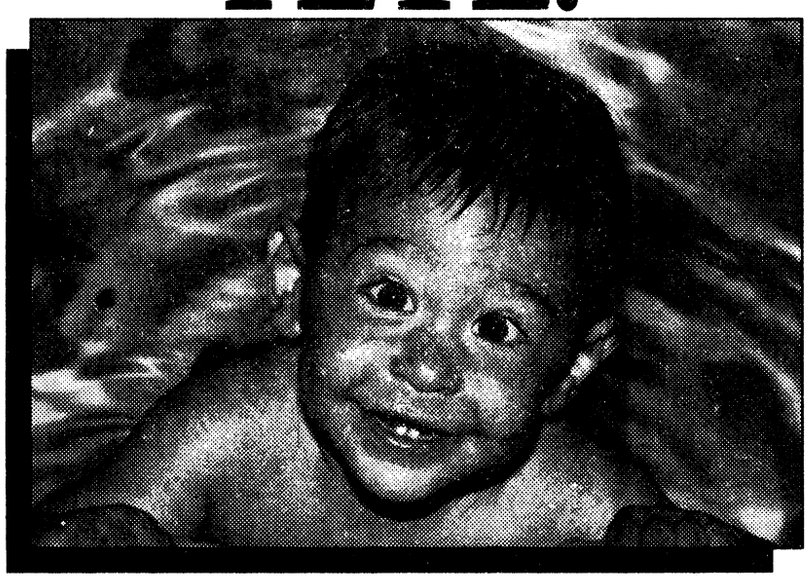
Never hitchhike or accept a ride from a stranger. Your friends may do it "all the time" and never have a problem. Many hitchhikers aren't so lucky. Some get kidnaped, raped, even killed. There is no way to tell if anyone, young or old, male or female, good-looking or not, can be a threat to your life — and at 60mph — once you're in a car, there's no easy way out.

"Don't take deserted shortcuts — especially at night." You may go through a parking lot, the ball field or the alley every day — but things are different at night. Who you can't see can hurt you. Criminals don't want to get caught — so they're much less likely to try something on a well-lighted street with lots of people around. Taking a few extra minutes to go the long way can save your money — possibly even your life.



"Never walk alone at night." You know the old saying about safety in numbers. A single person is a much easier target for a thief or other criminal. It may seem easier to go on your own than to wait for a ride or find someone to walk with, but it's much more of a hassle to get robbed or hurt.

"If you do get mugged or robbed, don't take unneccessary risks." A few dollars, a radio, a bike, even a car — it's not worth risking your life. It has nothing to do with being chicken. It's a matter of being smart. It's especially true if you're outnumbered, or your attacker is armed. But if you really think your life is in danger, you may have to defend yourself or run.



Look out for yourself, your friends, and your community. The Military Police have, and have had for some time, a "Crime in Progress Hotline," at 545-2222, that is to be used only for reporting a crime that is in progress. To report other crimes that have already happened call the military police desk sergeant at 545-5223/5224. You can help TAKE A BITE OUT OF CRIME.

COURT REPORT

Staff Judge Advocate

On Sept. 21 Staff Sgt. James Antoine, an airborne instructor assigned to B-Company, 1/507th PIR was found guilty by a special court-martial of disobeying a lawful order and of seven counts of maltreating female airborne students.

SSgt. Antoine violated a 1/507th PIR policy letter which specifically prohibits airborne cadre from entering into personal relationships with students by dating a female airborne student while she was in training. In addition, Antoine sexually harrassed several female airborne students by making sexually offensive comments to them while they were in airborne training.

Sexual harrassment is a form of maltreatment and includes any unwelcome sexually-related, obscene or suggestive language, gestures, coercion, humiliation, embarrassment and physical contact. The term "unwelcome" is determined by the recipient of the harassment. It is not up to the person who makes the comments or gestures to decie whether that behavior is welcome.

Even after the first allegations were made by the students and charges against SSgt. Antoine were pending (referred to a special court-martial), he continued his maltreatment by making sexually offensive comments to another female student.

Col. Sebert L. Trail, the military judge, sentenced SSgt. Antoine to be reprimanded, reduced to E1 and discharged from the Army with a bad conduct discharge.

This conviction enforces the Army policy which acknowledges that sexual harrassment is serious misconduct which undermines the integrity of relationships between soldiers and stresses that all soldiers must be allowed to work and train in an environment free from unsolicited and unwelcomed sexual overtures.

VA deputy visits pope

Veterans Administration

Father Wallace F. Przybylski, deputy director of the Veterans Administration chaplain service, met with Pope John Paul II during a recent visit to Rome.

In his private audience with the Pope, Father Przybylski discussed the special role of the VA Chaplain service. He told the pontiff about the ecumenism, the plurality and the fraternity that are the spirit and foundation of the ministry to healing veteran-patients.

"The Holy Father expressed a keen interest in our veterans and asked about their health care and the number of our medical facilities," Father Przybylski said. "He was very impressed at the care and concern America has for its veterans."

The VA chaplain service provides for the veteran-patient sacramental ministry, worship services, ecumenical and inter-faith services, pastoral visits, crisis and grief counseling and graveside services.

The trip was sponsored by the Archdiocese of the Military Services in Washington, D.C.

Evening of karate, devotions promotes fitness in body, spirit

By Marsha Santiago
ITC Correspondent

Recently, 250 soldiers from the 1st Infantry Training Brigade gathered at Theater #3, Sand Hill, for an evening of singing, devotion and a karate demonstration.

Chaplain (Maj.) James Langford, 1st ITB chaplain, explained the theme for the evening, "by having both a devotion and a karate demonstration we show the young soldiers how important discipline is in both the spiritual and physical life of an individual."

Chaplain (Capt.) Richard Quinn led the devotion. The Fort Benning McGraw Manor Karate Team, led by Sgt. Martin Czapla, provided the karate portion of the program.

According to Langford, the chaplains strive to build rapport with the soldiers and share the gospel with them in a positive, motivating manner, teaching and emphasizing the principles of the Bible and the high standards of the Army help instill the importance of developing the spiritual as well as the physical aspects of life.

"When the chaplains sponsor a program of this nature, we get our message across and provide entertainment for the soldiers at the same time," Langford concluded.

Bring children to God while they are young

By Robert Washington
1st Bde Chaplain's Office

Charles Spurgeon, in his autobiography, The Early Years, recounts the following incident from his childhood in 19th century England:

"I remember well, in my early days, seeing upon my grandmother's mantel-shelf an apple contained in a phial.

This was a great wonder to me, and I tried to investigate it. My question was, "How came the apple to get inside so small a bottle?" The apple was quite as big round as the phial; by what means it was placed within it?

Though it was treason to touch the treasures on the mantelpiece, I took down the bottle, and convinced my youthful mind that the apple never passed through its neck, and by means of an attempt to unscrew the bottom, I became equally certain that the apple did not enter from below.

I held to the notion that by some means the bottle has been made it two pieces, and afterwards united in so careful a manner that no trace of the join remained. I was hardly satisfied with the theory, but as no philosopher was at hand to suggest any other hypothesis, I let the matter rest.

One day, the next summer, I chanced to see upon a bough another phial, the first cousin my old friend, within which was growing a little apple which had been passed through the neck of the bottle while it was extremely small. "Nature well-known, no prodigies remain." I did not cry, "Eureka! Eureka!," but I might have done so if I had then been versed in the Greek tongue."

The aplication Spurgeon urges upon his readers from this incident is as fitting today as it was in the 19th century: "Let us get the apples into the bottle while they are little. Which, being translated, signifies, let us bring the young ones into the house of God...in the hope that, in after days, they will love the place where His honour dwelleth, and there seek and find eternal life."*

"The Apple in the Bottle" reminds those of us who are preachers, teachers and parents of the opportunity we have to influence the attitudes of our children toward church and Sunday school.

Sermons do not have to be so long and dull that preachers lose the attention of their young listeners. Preachers can include in their sermons illustrations and applications directed at their younger listeners.

Concerned and loving Sunday school teachers can find ways to make their classes interesting and enjoyable while they teach their students the truths of religion.

Parents can show their children, by their attitude and example, that you attend church and Sunday school because you want, and not because you have to.

So how about it, parents, teachers, preachers? Let's do it! Let's get those apples into the bottle while they are little!

Quotations are from C.H. Spurgeon, Autobiography, Volume I: The Early Years, The Banner of Truth Trust, Carlisle, Penn., 1976.

Beginning Monday, the Optometry Clinic at Martin Army Community Hospital will change its walk-in clinic for active duty to a same day appointment system. This change is being made in an effort to reduce the patient's waiting time and to provide better service.

Same day appointments will be available on Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday afternoons. No morning appointments will be available since the optometrists screen patients at the Reception Station in the morning.

Appointments should be scheduled for routine eye examinations. They must be made by telephone only, between the hours of 8:30 and 10:30 a.m., for an appointment that afternoon. Call 544-3041/3042/3043.

Appointments are not needed if you only need to reorder glasses or order protective mask inserts from a current (less than one year old) prescription. These individuals can report to the clinic between 8 a.m. and 3:30 p.m. on any duty day with their current prescription, ID card and medical records.

Now is the time to get your car ready for winter. The auto craft shops on post have the equipment and instructors you need to winterize your car, or make needed repairs. Visit the facility in Bldg. 9064 or the main post auto shop, Bldg. 2843.

The shops can be used by active duty and retired military, their family members and civilian employees.

The Don C. Faith Middle School is now conducting a membership drive. The school has 800 students this year, many of whom will be participating in local, state and national competitions in band, art, math, history and social studies.

The PTO needs the support of parents to help raise funds to support these activities, and joining the PTO is the first step. Membership dues are $2 per person. For more information, call Lynn Barlotta at 689-2096.

The Self Help Issue Point has relocated. It is now housed in the U-Do-It Center, Bldg. 385, located at Vibbert Avenue and Delta Street. Operating hours of the center at 9:30 a.m. to 5:45 p.m. Monday through Friday, and 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. on Saturday. All military units will continue to pick up supplies for projects at Bldg. 466 until further notice.

For more information, call 545-1121.

Santa looks for helpers as Christmas season nears

Shawn Bryson

Pam Harris, Chairman of Santa's Castle, dresses a doll that was donated earlier this month.

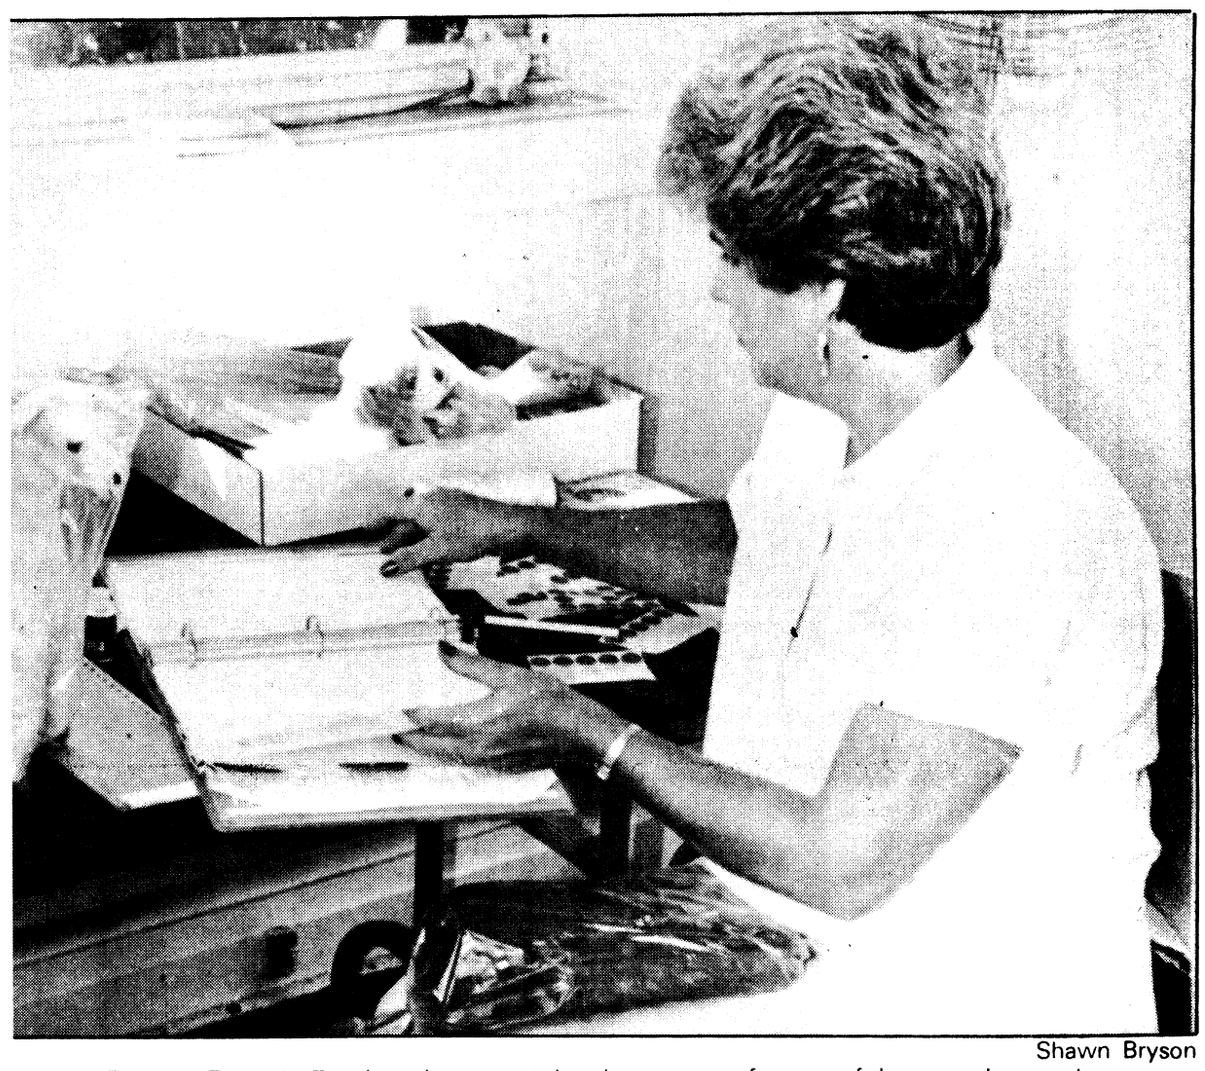
By Shawn Bryson
36th Engineer Group Correspondent

As the holiday season approaches, the volunteers at Santa's Castle here are busily at work in hopes of another successful Christmas.

Santa's Castle is a non-profit organization designed to help soldiers whose financial situation might not allow them to give their children the kind of Christmas that they want for them.

According to Pam Harris, chairman of Santa's Castle, the Castle workers collect used and new toys, clean and repair them and redistribute them to needy military families on and off-post during the Christmas season.

Harris stressed that the Castle is very much in need of toys as well as volunteers to help in the shop. She explained that even people with only a few hours or so to spare each week are encouraged to lend a hand at the Castle.

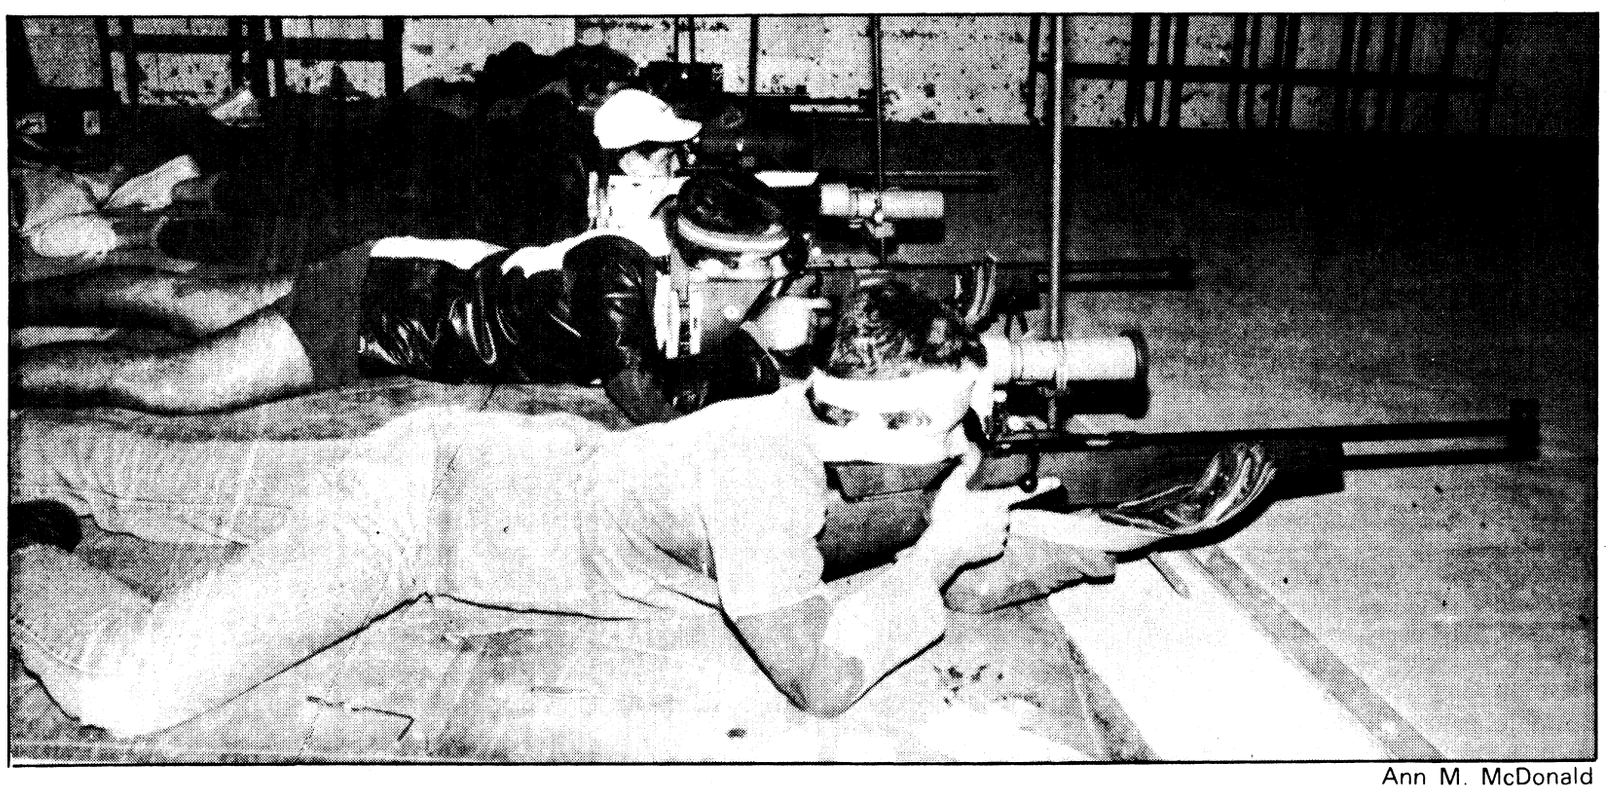


People who are moving or having a garage sale can easily lighten the load by giving generously to Santa's Castle, according to Harris.

According to Ann York, volunteer in charge of publicity, the Castle will also accept cleaning supplies as donations. All of the usable toys are scrubbed clean and packaged before given to the families she said.

Harris explained that all first sergeants will receive letters requesting recommendations for Santa's Castle services. Soldiers that have been recommended can set up a shopping appointment and will be escorted through the Castle while selecting toys for their children. She said that all of the toys collected will be divided equally between all of the children.

Mrs. York added that Santa's Castle will have an Open House Oct. 15 from 5-7 p.m. for anyone interested in seeing the operation. She said that toys may be dropped off at the Castle which is located in Splinter Village or at the Santa's Castle drop box at the Main Post Exchange. Santa's Castle will be open every day from 9 a.m. to noon through Dec. 15.



Last year the Castle provided services for over 600 children with more than 3,000 toys. The workers are hoping to double the number of toys and participants this year.

Youth Activities Junior Rifle Club in search of new members

Ann M. McDonald

Members of the YA Rifle Team advance group prepare for their next meet.

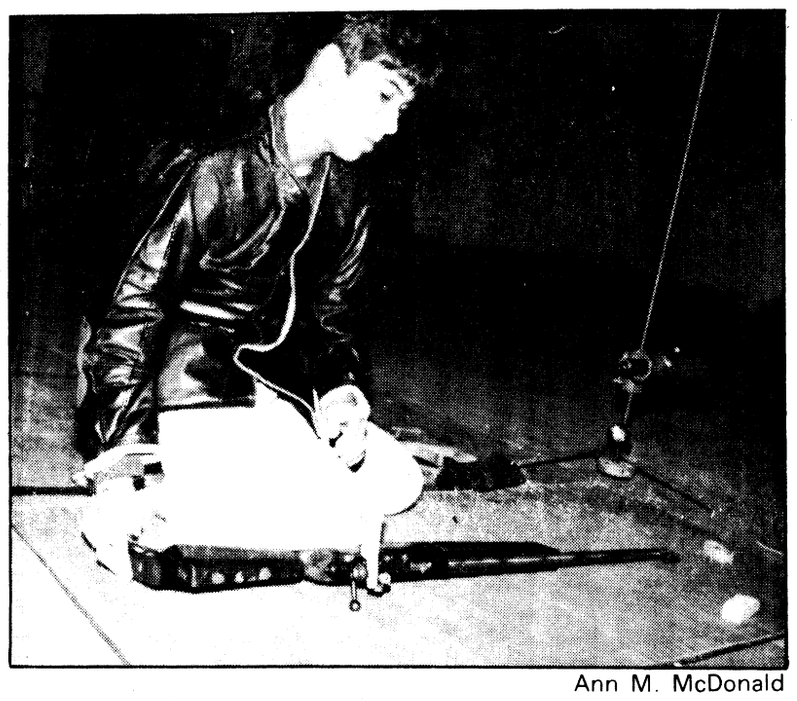
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Fort Benning Youth Activities Junior Rifle Club is looking for new members.

The club,which has been very successful in the past, consists of youth aged 12 through 19 who are primarily family members of both active duty and retired military personnel.

According to Maj. Richard Hawkins, team coach, there's a beginning, intermediate and advanced group.

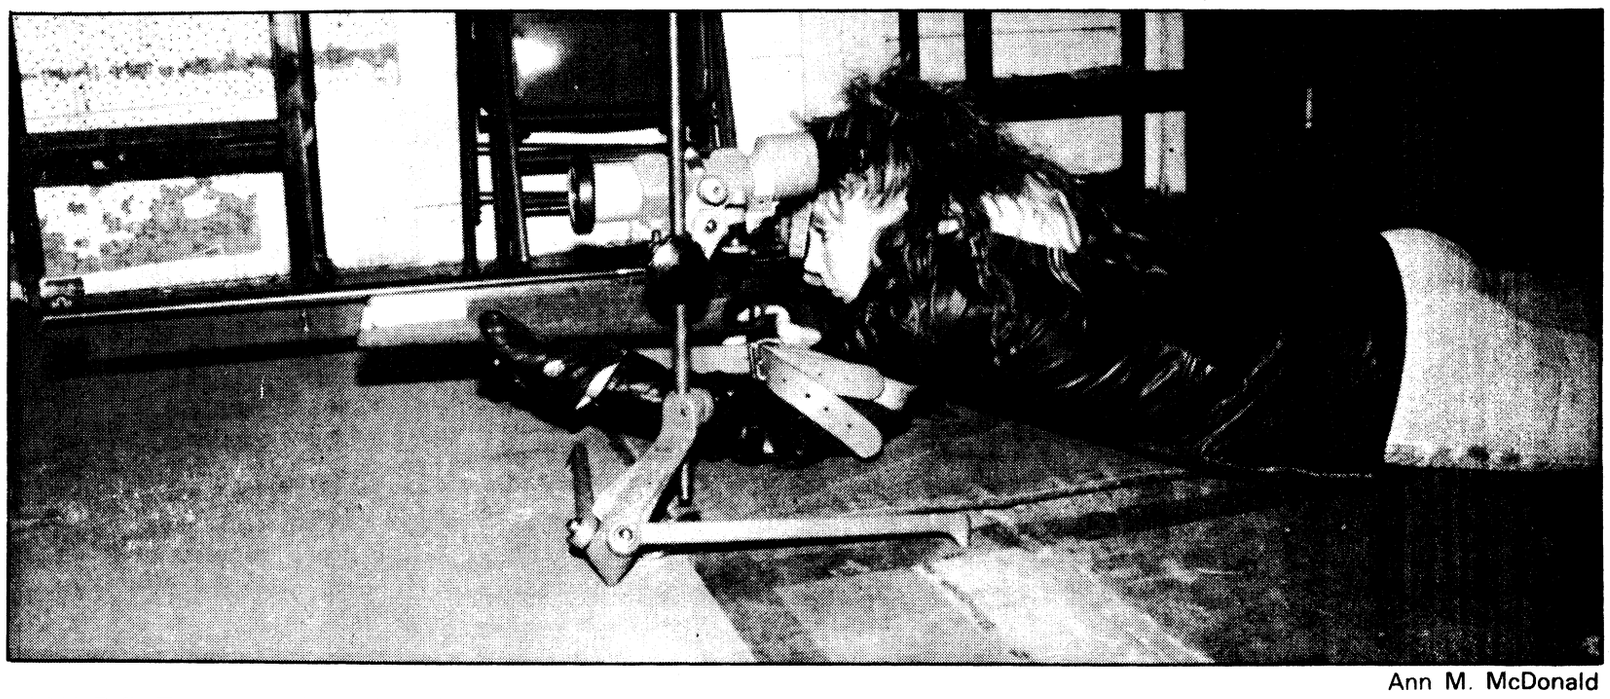
"The Junior and Intermediate groups compete in the National Rifle Association Junior Qualification Program," Hawkins said. "They earn medals, pins and certificates based on their performance throughout the year,



The advanced group gives the members of the groups something to aim for. They have won several national titles to include the 1987 Junior Indoor three-position team championship and National Junior Prone team championship.

The advanced group travels to different competitions each month." he said. "and they will be going to the National Championships at Camp Perry, Ohio and the Final 1988 Olympic Tryouts in Los Angeles.

Hawkins said it is not necessary to own your equipment to join the club, which costs $80 per year for membership. "We can provide all the necessary equipment and ammunition to new shooters."



The club uses the .22 caliber smallbore rifle to train and fire in three basic positions; prone, kneeling and standing.

The club's reputation is a good one. In the past 11 years, 40 members or former members have received college shooting scholarships at various academies and universities throughout the United States.

Post playgrounds receive face lift

By Aimee R. Holden
Bayonet staff writer

Residents of McGraw Manor are joining together to help restore the playgrounds near their homes.

On Oct. 3 volunteers cleaned, painted, raked and cut back tree branches to make the playground at McGrath and Baker safe and fun for their children to use. This was the second playground to be completed.

Angie Banks, a coordinator for the project, said she was thrilled that the "residents came together to show initiative, caring and concern for their community."

Banks said that McGraw Manor Mayor, Aquilla Williams, organized the clean-up project eight months ago. Banks said that many of the playgrounds were in such poor condition they were dangerous to the children using them.

"There was broken equipment, gutters missing, erosion, ant and insect infestation, vandalism, poison ivy, and trash thrown everywhere," Banks said.

Preventive Maintenance is fixing the broken equipment, and neighborhood residents are being asked to help clean up.

Ron Allen

Residents of McGraw Manor join together to help restore playgrounds near their homes.

It takes between two and four hours to clean a playground, depending on the size of the area and the number of people helping, Banks said. She added that the volunteers choose how they want to paint the playground, using the colors of red, yellow, orange and blue.

Banks said that they hope to have all 12 of the playgrounds restored by March 1988.

Banks said future plans for McGraw Manor include a recreation plaza at Brostrom St. and McGraw St., and an award given to the nicest playground.

Volunteers vital to Redcross operation

Aimee Holden
Bayonet Staff Writer

Recently at a Red Cross orientation nine people pledged their "conscientious and loyal service" to the Fort Benning community, and became new American Red Cross volunteers.

Fort Benning has approximately 121 American Red Cross volunteers. Most of them work in Martin Army Hospital, although others serve in the dental clinic, the veterinary clinic and as instructors.

Once a month,an orientation is offered to those people who have expressed a desire to volunteer their services. The orientation covers everything from the history of the Red Cross to the proper uniforms to be worn by volunteers.

After attending the orientation, the volunteers then meet with the training coordinator to help identify their areas of interest. If they choose to serve in the dental clinic, they must attend special training.

When they have completed 40 hours of service, volunteers receive the Red Cross Pin, to be worn on their uniform.

Carlene Ward, a new volunteer, said she wanted to be a Red Cross volunteer because she had just moved to Fort Benning and had nothing to do. "Being an emergency medical technician used to keep me busy and now I want something to do while the kids are at school."

Aimee Holden

Ward said that she and her husband used to teach water safety and CPR at their previous station, and that was how she found out about the Red Cross.

Another volunteer said that she admired the commitment of the Red Cross volunteers she had met and that prompted her to volunteer.

"Although the Red Cross is growing in number," said Dotti Bouldin, station chairperson, "more volunteers are always needed."

The American Red Cross was founded in 1881 by Clara Barton. She was introduced to the Red Cross by friends in Geneva, Switzerland. She later served with the International Red Cross during the Franco—Prussian War in 1870.

In 1881 she formed the American Association of the Red Cross. In 1893 it was reincorporated as the American Red Cross, which was the basis for today's organization.

Campaign kicks off

Arthritis Foundation

The Arthritis Foundation, Georgia chapter, announced the kick-off of their "Up, Up and Away with Arthritis" campaign this week. The campaign will climax with a balloon launch at the Atlanta Falcons-New Orleans Saints game Nov. 1. Thousands of balloons will be launched to represent every dollar donated through this campaign to support the research and patient services sponsored by the Arthritis Foundation, Georgia chapter.

"In the coming weeks, hundreds of volunteers will hit the streets to urge people to sponsor balloons for $1 each," says Alan Fishman, M.D., Georgia chapter president. "Everyone knows someone with arthritis and everyone can participate. A child can give a dollar to launch a single balloon. An individual can sponsor 50 balloons as a tribute to a loved one with arthritis, and businesses and service clubs can launch hundreds to represent their concern for the cause. We are sponsoring a fun event and most importantly, we are sponsoring hope for people with arthritis. Researchers are tantalizingly close to finding the causes of many forms of this disease, but there are still questions that remain unanswered."

Many people incorrectly think that arthritis is just the minor aches and pains of aging for which nothing can be done, reports the Foundation. But, in fact, arthritis is a serious health problem which causes pain, disability and sometimes deformity. It's America's Number One crippling disease.

The launch will take place Sunday, Nov. 1, at the Atlanta Falcons football game. For more information about "Up, Up and Away...with Arthritis," and how you can help, call (404) 873-3240 or write the Georgia chapter of the Arthritis Foundation at 1340 Spring St., Suite 103, Atlanta 30309.

Coupons are big bucks to TSA

Troop Support Agency

If you thought using grocery coupons was nickel and dime stuff, think again.

In Fiscal Year 1987, Army commissary customers redeemed approximately 68 million coupons worth $34.6 million, according to officials at the U.S. Army Troop Support Agency.

Shoppers who use coupons aren't the only ones who save. Product manufacturers pay TSA a handling fee for every coupon redeemed in an army commissary. In FY 87, TSA earned $5.2 million in handling fees. That money is used to offset personnel costs for processing coupons.

So, help yourself and the Army Commissary System. Use coupons on your next commissary shopping trip and save money.

REENLIST.
BE ALL YOU CAN BE.

"OUR NEW ARMY HOUSING IS NICE TO COME HOME TO. IT WAS WORTH THE WAIT."

SFC Ron Rhodes and his wife Connie.

"It sure didn't take us long to get comfortable in our new house here at Fort Polk. Connie loves the size and lay-out. Ronnie-Lee loves the playground. And there's even room to store my boat.

"We love our quarters. This house has been very important for us in making a good home.

"Because we're in the Army, people may not expect us to live this well. But the Army has changed a lot in the past five years. It's a good place to live, to be.

"Connie and I feel that the Army's really come a long way in housing and, you know, in taking care of its people."

The overall quality of quarters on posts throughout the Army continues to improve. And housing starts and renovations are at an all-time high. It's all part of the Army Family Action Plan in action.

ARMY FAMILY.
BE ALL YOU CAN BE.

Wood shop offered at Craft Center

Community Recreation Division

Drill sergeants: seeking a way to keep your hat neat and ready to go when you need it? You can make a hat press at the Crafts Center, Building 2783 on the corner of Sightseeing Road and Eckel Street.

In order to utilize the wood shop facilities, you will need a wood shop safety card. The wood shop safety class is given each Saturday at 8:30 a.m., the class is free.

Looking for a toy that your child will enjoy for years? How about one made of wood? Most woods are non-toxic, easy to work with and the cost is usually low. Come by the wood shop and ask one of the instructors to let you see the toy plans that are available.

In order for the Craft Center to provide better service, we are asking you to help. We have placed a red suggestion box in the smoking area. You can help by making suggestions so we can improve the activity and better serve you.

Please remember that customers using the Crafts Center must have a military ID card or a civilian crafts card. A civilian crafts card may be obtained by bringing your last leave and earnings statement to the Crafts Center.

The craft center's hours of operation are:
Monday & Tuesday — Closed
Wednesday & Friday — 1-9 p.m.
Saturday & Sunday — 10 a.m.-6 p.m.

19th Artillery hosts Redleg Open

By Chris Karamitsos
197th Inf Bde Correspondent

Winston Churchill was once quoted as saying "Golf is a game in which a man attempts to put a round ball in a round hole using instruments ill-designed for the task."

One would certainly believe this to be true if he either witnessed or played in the Third Annual REDLEG Open golf tournament, which was held recently at Fort Benning's Follow Me Golf Course.

The event, which was organized by the "Redlegs" of 2nd Battalion, 19th Field Artillery, brought ninety golfers — or facsimilies thereof — to Fort Benning's Lakeside Course to test their golfing skills and partake in the fun and excitement that the afternoon had in store.

In conjunction with local sponsors, the artillerymen awarded several hundred dollars worth of prizes to golfers of all calibers.

Perhaps the most prestigious of all gifts was the coveted and much sought-after "Sure Shot" award. The winner received the "Sure Shot" trophy and a broken steering wheel signifying his "Driving Ability." Uncharacteristic of its name, the "Sure Shot" award is presented to the golfer with the worst score.

This year's winner was SFC Kenneth Taylor from Battery A, 2-10 FA. Taylor's score of 144 won him the "Sure Shot" hands down. Taylor admits that a strong desire to underachieve on the golf course and positive mental attitude for playing poorly are both prerequisites for an unbelievably high score. That comes from a man who hit an eagle, a birdie, an elk, a moose and a deer. He sounds like a reliable source concerning the Fort Benning wildlife.

On a more serious note, 1st Lt. Mark Ernyei from the 197th Infantry Brigade Separate Companies team fired a 2-under par round of 70 to take first place in the low gross score category.

Closely behind with a round of 74 was Maj. Bill Engel from the artillery; grabbing third place was Sgt. Proegier from 2nd Battalion, 14th Infantry, 10th Mountain Division, who shot a 78.

In the low net team competition, 2nd Bn, 10th FA took first place, followed by 2nd Bn, 69 AR and the Brigade separate companies team.

Capt. Scott Jeffers from 2nd Bn, 10th FA won the closest to the hole competition when he hit a spectacular tee shot on the 140 yard Par three 17th, to within three feet of the cup. The longest drive of the day belonged to SFC Claudy Moore of 2nd Bn, 69th AR. His tee shot on #1 traveled 275 yards.

One can only wonder what the Scots of yesteryear — who provided us with this great game of golf — would have said had they the opportunity to view the 1987 RedLeg Open.

One thing is for sure. They would have at least shouted "fore" on numerous occasions.

With the participants from across post sharing good will and comradeship, planning and practice for the fourth annual RedLeg open is already underway.

Fort Benning hunters are urged to include does in harvest

By Chris Dunn
Natural Resources Division, DEH

When was your most embarrassing moment from hunting deer? Mine occurred last year.

I had luckily found my way in the dark to my tree stand, safely climbed the tree, shivered through an hour of cold darkness, endured muscle cramps trying to sit still and finally decided, since I wasn't having much fun anyway, to go home.

About this time, a doe wandered down the trail I had been watching. After much debate with myself, I decided to go ahead and take it.

The real fun started when I pulled into the back yard and called my wife out to see what I had brought home. Upon seeing the doe, she immediately started screaming, which then brought the kids clambering over the side of my pickup, and, upon seeing the doe, also started screaming that I'd shot a MAMA. This caused our neighbors to come running because they thought I had shot my wife, who was still screaming like a banshee.

What a mess! I'll bet that's the last time I kill a doe. Yet, when I look at the facts of good deer management, I've got to convince myself and others that this is the proper thing to do.

Deer are born at a sex ratio of about 1:1 — one buck to one doe. This is also the ideal ratio for adult animals; however, it is never reached. Hunting philosophies and regulations prohibit this from ever happening. Since deer are born at a sex ratio of 1:1, should they not also be harvested at that same ratio? Would we expect a cattleman to harvest only the bulls from this herd and not the cows?

Since the primary role of the doe in a deer herd is reproduction, some hunters do not harvest them because they believe if more does are present more bucks will also be present. This is true, based on birth sex ratios, up to a point.

An area of land will only support a specific number of animals before quality of both habitat and animals begin to deteriorate. This number is called carrying capacity. So, while does are providing more bucks through the birthing process, they are also providing more does — in equal numbers. Once the carrying capacity is reached, both fawn production and survival are reduced. Therefore, a high number of females do not necessarily insure a large number of replacement animals, but exactly the opposite. This one fact must be clearly understood — a continuous increase in the number of females results in a constant trend toward overpopulation.

An increase in the number of does, coupled with an overharvest of the buck population, results in distorted adult sex ratios and lowered average age of bucks harvested. As a result, more does are seen by the hunter and bucks available for harvest are primarily composed of 1½ and 2½ year old deer. This could never happen at Fort Benning: or could it?

In the 1986-87 deer season, 58-percent of the total harvest were bucks and 42-percent were does. Of the bucks examined at the Deer Check Station, 54-percent were 1½ years old and younger. When the next year's age class is included, a whopping 86-percent of the bucks were relatively young deer, 2½ years old and younger.

This data represents a trend that has been developing for many years. As a comparison, just three years ago (1984-85), 48-percent of the bucks examined were 1½ years old and younger and 73-percent were 2½ years old and younger.

The fact remains that there are not enough does being harvested. Hunters can reverse this trend. Their first opportunity comes with the opening of the gun deer season in Georgia. The first nine days are also either sex days on Fort Benning. Considering our present situation, the only criteria for harvest should be an adult doe that stands still long enough for a good shot.

Aaron: Best team not always winner

By Hank Aaron
Vice President Atlanta Braves

There's a special excitement to being in the middle of a pennant race. Having been on baseball teams that won pennants and other teams that fell short, I know that feeling well.

Back in 1956, the Milwaukee Braves were chasing the Brooklyn Dodgers for the pennant. Other than Warren Spahn and a few others, we were a young team with players like Eddie Mathews, Johnny Logan and Billy Bruton. The Dodgers, of course, had been through it all before.

We went into St. Louis with a one-game lead needing to win two out of three to clinch our first pennant. We were almost at the end of the rainbow. But we weren't quite there yet. Spahn and Lew Burdette pitched good ballgames but we lost both. The Dodgers swept the Pirates and won the pennant.

There's tremendous pressure on young players in a series like that one. Everyone is uptight. You don't want the ball hit to you. You don't want to come up with the bases loaded and risk popping up with the tying or winning run at third base. Any mistake will be one you think about all winter. It's a very scary feeling.

To survive a team should be a blend of young players and veterans. The veterans calm the rookies down and the rookies keep the veterans hustling.

Now winning a pennant is one of the greatest moments that anyone can ever experience in sports. I was lucky enough to hit a 12th inning homerun in Milwaukee to clinch the 1957 pennant for Milwaukee.

To be very honest, I don't remember what time I got home after the game. I think the game was over about 11:30 that night and I got home about 11:30 the next morning. What a thrill that was!

It is also true that the best team doesn't always win the pennant. I have always felt the 1959 Braves were far and away the best team in the National League. We had won two pennants in a row and were sure of winning another. But come September, there were the Dodgers. We tied for first place and they won the playoff.

Better team or not, we lost because the Dodgers wanted it more than we did and were determined to win. Determination and desire put them in the World Series.

One thing's for certain, anything can happen during a pennant chase.

Ann M. McDonald

PAR for the course

Marksmanship matches scheduled

By Stewart Olson
DPTM

The annual USAIC Marksmanship matches are scheduled for Nov. 16-20, with a mandatory clinic Nov. 9 and 10.

The matches and clinic will take place at Easley, McAndrews and Phillips ranges with match headquarters located at Bldg. 2601. They will consist of three categories: combat rifle (M16A1/M16A2), combat pistol (9mm/45 cal) and the light machinegun (LMG, M60) with both individual and team competition.

Trophies and/or medallions will be awarded in all matches for the top three places.

Individual matches trophies and/or medallions will be awarded for both open (soldiers who have competed in a post level or higher competition) and novice (new) shooters.

The top two teams in each category may be eligible to compete in the All-Army matches. Individuals will also be urged to compete based on their overall scores.

The marksmanship matches are battalion competition, therefore, all battalions are urged to enter teams.

All officers in the grade of 0-3 or below and all enlisted in the grade of E-8 or below and assigned to a Fort Benning unit the day the competition starts are eligible to enter both team and individual competition.

Individuals in grades of 0-4 and above and E-9s are only eligible to fire in individual competition. With this exception, individuals that want to fire individually must also be a member of a team if his/her unit is sponsoring one.

Eligible soldiers should contact their team representative or first sergeants if they are interested in participating and fill out FORSCOM/TRADOC Form 235-6-R, (Individual Registration and entry card), available at their unit or Bldg. 4, Room 624. Units must have the entry forms filled out correctly and returned to SFC Stewart Olson, Bldg. 4, Room 624, by the close of business Nov. 2, or the individual or team will not be able to participate.

Additional information may be found in the match bulletin, which will be available Nov. 15 from team representatives, or contact Olson at 545-4252/2917.

A night club war is waging in Columbus. But it's unlike any battle the city has ever seen. The fodder is dancing music and soda pop. And the spoils are teen-age party-goers. D-11

The Ledger-Enquirer can shrink your clothing bills.

Every shopping trip you make should start right here. In The Ledger-Enquirer. Because the wealth of ads, articles, and coupons you'll find can save you money before you spend it. Nothing but The Ledger-Enquirer gives you such a complete overview of where and when to find the city's best bargains. So make the most of your Ledger-Enquirer. A monthly subscription is a very small investment that'll save you dollar after dollar or anything you need.

"Use my head and checked some ads before shopping. A half-price sale on hats was exactly what I want to see!"

"Saw an article in The Ledger-Enquirer about a new discount outlet for designer fashion. Turned out I could fit 2 suits in a budget for one."

"Saw an ad for a sale on my favorite brand. (I bought the shirt for what I saved on the coat!"

"Saved 30% thanks to an ad in The Ledger-Enquirer. (Right down the street I saw the same pair for full price.)"

It pays to read The Ledger-Enquirer

Energy week highlights need to conserve

Energy Office

The Directorate of Engineering and Housing has scheduled a variety of activities for Energy Awareness Week, Oct. 18 through 24. In an effort to reach everyone on post, four target populations were identified. These include families, students, soldiers and civilians.

Family housing residents will receive a letter from the director of engineering and housing containing a jar opener and magnetic light bulb to place in their kitchen. Col. Harris will also appear on television on the Rozelle Show Oct. 15 and on Good Day Oct. 20.

The more than 3,400 students in the Fort Benning schools will receive a unit of study on energy conservation and handouts that include a notebook insert containing pencils, eraser, ruler, etc. The Energy Buster will be making personal appearances at each school.

Unit commanders and activity chiefs will receive a letter from the commanding general briefing them on the present energy situation. The Energy Resource Group (ERG), the post energy committee, will distribute promotional items post-wide.

Also, be sure to visit the energy displays provided by Georgia Power Co. They will be located in the Main Mall, Building 4, Building 35, and Martin Army Community Hospital.

These activities are designed to increase energy awareness on post and also show appreciation for the widespread support we have received from everyone. Your continued support and cooperation will ensure the success of Fort Benning's energy program this year and every year.

Reserve call-up exercise planned

Army News Service

A nationwide exercise to evaluate the notification system of the Selected Reserve is expected to take place by year's end.

As announced recently by the Secretary of Defense, the exercise aims to test the notification and reporting procedures for the Selected Reserve Presidential Call-up Authority.

Federal law grants authority to the president to call up as many as 200,000 selected reservists without a declaration of national emergency, said defense department spokesman Maj. David Super.

Actual dates and the number of reservists in the call-up will not be announced in advance, allowing the test to be as realistic as possible Super explained. The chosen number of participants will be a statistically valid sample of the 200,000 that could be called.

It is estimated the call-up will last for two days, he said.

The call-up of selected reserve units and individuals, an effort un-related to current operations or events, allows close examination of the military services' notification and reporting procedures, Super said.

The U.S. Total Force Policy relies heavily on the National Guard and Reserve forces to quickly augment the active military when needed.

The Selected Reserve consists of all National Guard units and organized units of the reserve forces maintained by Army, Navy, Marine Corps and Air Force. A limited number of individual reservists may be involved in the exercise. Also taking part in this exercise will be members of the U.S. Coast Guard Reserve.

Make plans to attend Retiree Open House

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Some 3,500 people are expected to visit Fort Benning next weekend for the seventh annual Retiree Open House.

Retirees will get a chance to learn more about their benefits and get a first-hand look at the modern Army Oct. 22 through 24.

Tours and opportunities to transact personal business related to their rights, benefits, privileges and entitlements are on the agenda this year. Retirees will also be informed of the latest developments and concepts of today's Army.

The open house will begin with a golf tournament at 8 a.m. on Oct. 22 at the Follow Me Golf Course. A retirement wellness assessment will be offered at the same time at Martin Army Community Hospital.

For more information, call the Fort Benning Retirement Services Office at (404) 545-5369 or 545-2715.

Secretary of Army visits post

By Aimee R. Holden
Bayonet staff writer

Resounding hooaahs greeted Secretary of the Army John O. Marsh last Friday in Marshall Auditorium. Marsh spoke to Fort Benning soldiers about the U.S Constitution and its importance to the history of the U.S.

Maj. Gen. Kenneth C. Leuer, post commander, introduced Marsh. "As we see the Army today — the progress we've made, the greatness we have achieved — much of that credit goes to our current Secretary of the Army," Leuer said.

Marsh spoke about past Army themes, and how these are ongoing rather than abandoned at each year's end. He said it was fitting that the Constitution was adopted as this year's theme.

Marsh said that the Army is seeking to attach the theme of the Constitution to a National Program that will help soldiers better understand how the Constitution impacts on them, and help the country understand the role of the Army in the development of the Constitution.

"The American people have a great obligation to the Army because it was the Army that gave us our independence and who ultimately lead to the founding of this great nation," Marsh said.

Marsh said that the Constitution was one of the great milestones in human history, and that its genuis was the dispersion of powers.

He also used the writing of the Constitution as an example that, "It doesn't take a lot of people to get things done if they are motivated and dedicated."

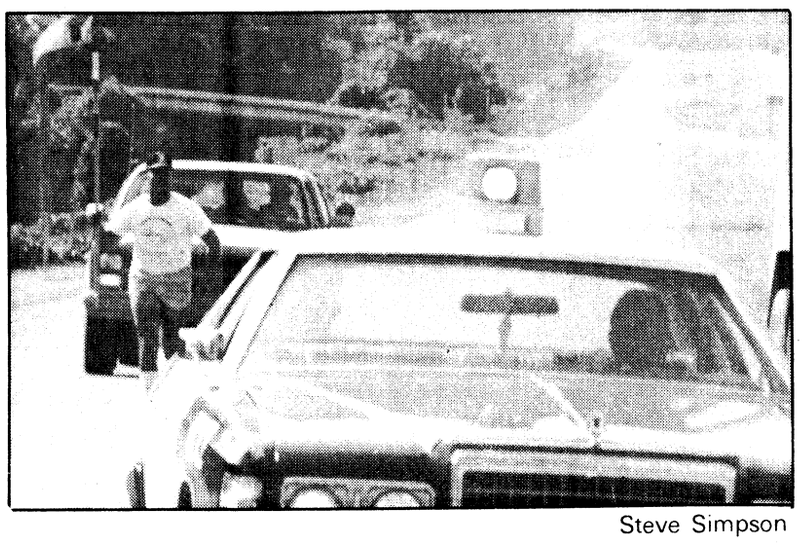
Later in the day, Marsh attended a 507th PIR graduation and mingled with former paratroopers at a regimental reunion.

Otis responds to criticism of weapons' systems

Army News Service

Recent news stories on the effectiveness of the Army's new weapon systems drew a strong response Monday from Gen. Glenn K. Otis, commander in chief, U.S. Army, Europe.

In an "open letter to soldiers and families of the U.S. Army in Europe" published recently in European "Stars and Stripes," Otis stated American weapons "now more than ever before" give U.S. soldiers the capability to fight and win should war occur in Europe.



Following is Otis's letter: The weapons used by American soldiers today are as good as or better than those of any other nation in the world. Both our friends and foes alike know our weapon systems are good.That is why our foes copy them.

Lately though, I have read a number of newspaper reports about somefailures of certain weapons. Let me put the record straight. New weapon systems such as the M-1 Abrams tank, the AH-64 Apache helicopter, the multiple-launch rocket system and many others are now being introduced into the U.S. Army in Europe. Should war occur, these new weapons ensure more than ever before that American soldiers can fight, survive, and win.

For example, the M-2/3 Bradley is a great infantry and cavalry fighting vehicle and a tremendous improvement over the older M-113 armored personnel carrier. If you have any doubt, just ask a soldier who has one.

The Tow and Dragon antitank missiles are also good and constantly being improved further.

The Tow missile system is a case in point, here in Germany, the missile system and its crew are now under armor, greatly increasing both their effectiveness and their survivability.

Fort Stewart soldiers run in 'Paws Across Georgia' relay

By Sally Roberts
197th Infantry Brigade correspondent

The The 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor welcomed more than 40 "dog tired" soldiers from the 2nd Battalion, 70th Armor, Fort Stewart, Ga., recently, following a 241-mile relay run from Fort Stewart to Fort Benning.

"Paws Across Georgia " was a unique approach for the "Dogs" from Company D, 2-70 Armor, to celebrate the unit's redesignation as the 3rd Battation, 69th Armor.

The soldiers formed into four eight-man teams, relaying the unit guidon across the Georgia countryside. Following more than 31 hours on the road, the guidon reached Kelley Hill, where the entire group of runners fell in behind it to run the final leg of the marathon to the 2-69 Armor Headquarters.

The soldiers arrived at Kelley Hill shortly before 1:30 p.m. Tuesday, and firmly planted the guidon into the soil at the 2-69 Panther headquarters.

SPIRIT winners named

Chaplains win first place award in competition

By Becky Obert
Bayonet staff writer

The USAIC Chaplain Division was named first place winner of the fourth quarter Project SPIRIT award last week.

The Civilian Personnel Office finished second, while the Directorate of Engineering and Housing was in third place.

Col. James I. Daily, post chief of staff, who presented the awards, had high praise for the winners and the SPIRIT program.

"Fort Benning has come a long way since the first quarter of this fiscal year," he said. "We went from $150,000 saved in the first quarter, to $8 million in the fourth quarter."

This is the most savings ever documented in one quarter since Project SPIRIT began in 1983, he said.

SPIRIT stands for systematic productivity improvement review in TRADOC, and the program's goal is to capture and document all savings generated throughout the Department of Army.

Daily urged those present to take one more look at their organizations, to find even more savings to submit on Fort Benning's year-end report to TRADOC. The installation that wins the TRADOC competition receives $1 million to spend on post improvement projects.

"We have approximately $28 million documented this year, but we need more for the year-end report," he said. "We want to win the million dollars that TRADOC gives to the top installation."

Fort Benning won first place in 1983, and placed fourth in 1984.

The Chaplain's Division implemented ten management improvements which yielded an annual savings of $955,116. Some of these were using volunteer help to install a landscape lighting system, refurbishing several chapels through self-help channels, and accomplishing landscaping work using volunteer labor.

CPO captured $1,414,522 worth of savings as a result of installing a special computer program, reducing continuation of pay costs and opting for on-site civilian training instead of paying TDY costs.

DEH instituted 12 management initiatives resulting in an annual savings of $2,514,724. These included accomplishing renovations using troop labor instead of contracting out, and installing new signs with in-house personnel.

David Flo, Director of Resource Management, presented individual awards to employees who had made suggestions that resulted in significant savings.

The individual winners were: William R. Funk, Information Service Center, U.S. Army Information Systems Command; Robert McLeod, Aviation Division, Directorate of Plans, Training and Mobilization; Ralph T. Corizzo, Audiovisual Support Center, Training Division,DPTM; Margaret W. Pope, Resource Management Division, DPTM; Shirley A. Nowlan, Jackie L. Smith and Bernadette S. Covan, Support Division, Directorate of Contracting; Kathryne J. Delffs, Civilian Personnel Office; Robert L. Kelley, Facilities Training School, Housing Division, DEH; Col. Philip R. Harris, Director of Engineering and Housing; and Edward H. Spidle, Storage Section, Property Account Branch, DOL.

Individual winners received a SPIRIT desk set, and activities received statues and wall plaques.

OPINION

Save for the future by conserving energy

Fort Benning will observe "Army Energy Awareness Week" Oct. 18 through 24. Energy Awareness Week is a time for us to look back at the progress we have made and also rededicate ourselves to the accomplishment of future goals. This year's theme is, "Use Energy Wisely for a Secure America."

During the past few years, many Americans have become complacent as a result of low gas prices and abundant supplies. They have forgotten the embargoes, gas lines and price increases we experienced during the 1970s. Hopefully, this is not the case with the military and civilain members of the Department of Army.

Fifteen years later, the facts remain the same. Oil provides one half of our energy needs and half of the oil we use is imported. At this very moment, servicemen on American warships are providing protection for ships transporting oil through the straits of Hormuz in the Red Sea. For us, there can be no mistaking the seriousness of the situation. Oil is critical to the United States and the free world.

The Department of Defense has mandated a 15 percent reduction in our energy use by 1995. This is not unreasonable when you consider that other countries have reduced their energy consumption 20 to 40 percent without lowering their standard of living.

Americans must do likewise. At Fort Benning we have made steady progress with an energy program that involves everyone. When you turn on a light switch, set a thermostat, or drive a car, your actions determine the success or failure of the ehergy program. If we work together, with everyone doing his or her share to ensure our resources are used wisely, we will continue the success achieved thus far.

I ask that each of you do your share in supporting this vital program. As with any worthwhile endeavor, teamwork is the necessary ingredient for success.

Yorktown victory reminds us of forefathers' bravery

The celebration of Yorktown on Monday the 19th of October 1987 is of special significance this year. It marks the 206th anniversary of the Army's triumph over the British forces at Yorktown and occurs during the Bicentennial Year of the Signing of our Constitution.

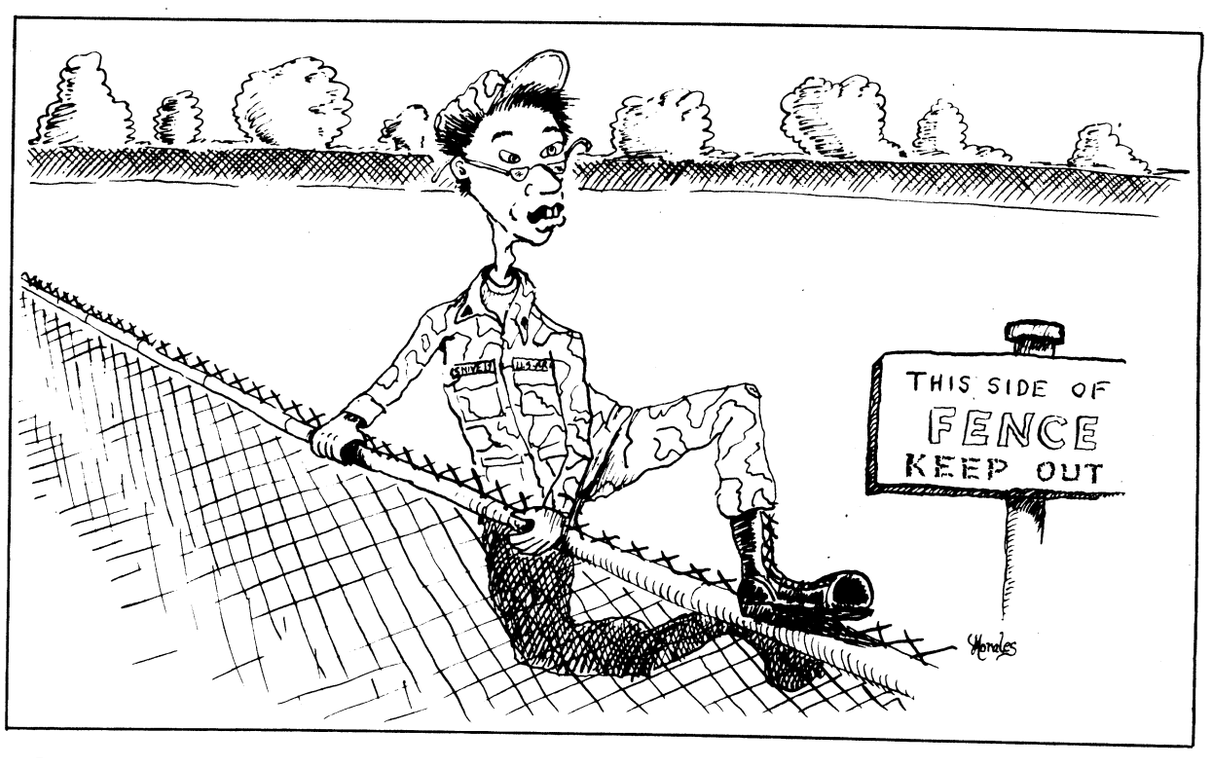
These events remind us of our forefathers' courage in obtaining our freedom, and their exceptional achievements in creating a document to preserve it.

Yorktown served as a bridge between the Decalration of Independence and the Constitution. In 1776, brave men gathered together to declare our independence as a nation.

That declaration would nave been empty without the resolve of dedicated people to give it meaning. From the Yorktown victory emerged a young nation proud and free. The bridge was in place to carry Americans to a form of government unlike any other up to that time.

The Constitution was the result. The roll call of those who drafted it, signed it and championed its ratification included 23 veterans of the Army.

These men gave much on the battlefield and gave this nation even more during those hot summer days in Philadelphia.



Wherever we serve, let us renew our commitment as selfless, vigilant defenders of the Constitution by living the legacy of courage and self-sacrifice given us by the victors of Yorktown.

Snively sings the 'don't fence me in' blues

By Clyde Snivley
USAIC Public Affairs Office

People who can do things with their hands never cease to amaze me.

Some of them can fix cars, others can make things grow, and still others can build stuff. I can do none of those things, and I'm envious.

I know where the key to the ignition is supposed to go to get the car to crank.

I know I'm supposed to check the oil and water levels, but I usually don't because I can't get the hood to open all the way.

I know there's some domajig that you're supposed to flip, but if people are waiting, I panic and can never seem to locate it, so I pretend I was just checking for bugs on the grill, close the hood tightly and nonchalantly walk off.

I know about watering plants and grass, that trees are supposed to be transplanted during the dormant season,which is also the pruning season. But knowledge does not a gardner make.

As for building things, I can't even build Ralf a semi-decent dog house.

Unfortunately, this knowledge of my short comings doesn't keep me from trying. Like the other day, I got to feeling sorry for Ralf having to be tied up all the time, so I thought it would be nice if I built her a fence. That way she'd be free to roam the backyard and wouldn't pull shrubs out by the roots when she got her rope wrapped around them.

I approached my land lady with my scheme and she thought it a marvelous idea. Emma and Bubb, however, were a little skeptical--"Clyde, the only thing you can build is a mess," Emma said.

"My dad build a fence! This could make all the news channels, film at 11," Bubba chortled.

But I was determined. After all, just how difficult could building a fence be?

So I paced off the backyard and took my figures to the local lumber yard, expecting them to take my data, run it through a fence calculating machine and come up with a list of things I'd need down to the very nail.

Didn't work that way. I guess they don't like to deal with amateurs. I was expected to come up with the figures. But undaunted, I took my measurements, multiplied by 12 to get the number of inches, divided by six for the number of boards.

I then went back to the foot measurement and divided by 8 and multiplied by 2 to come up with the number of 2x4s, then half of that for the number of posts. "Easy," I thought. I then ordered several boxes of what looked like approriate nails for the boards and another box for the 2x4s.

I also picked up a post hole digger and some string, the string to let people know that I knew what I was doing as I had my areas all laid out.

I was amazed at how easy things seemed to be going. Digging the holes wasn't half the work I thought it would be,and in no time,I was ready to plunk my posts into the ground.

I added some concrete for the professional touch. I then called Emma and Bubba out to help me put the 2x4s up.

"This come in a kit?" Bubba asked, eyeing all the lumber.

"No," I answered. "I figured it out all by myself."

"But how do you know how to

Loyalty plus selfless service make a professional

By Kevin A. Hom
Army Flier Fort Rucker, Ala.

TRADOC NEWS SERVICE — Loyalty to one's country and unit, coupled with personal responsibility and selfless service, are the basic values which make a member of the Army a professional.

Ethics are formed from ideals and values that have been handed down, withstanding the test of time.

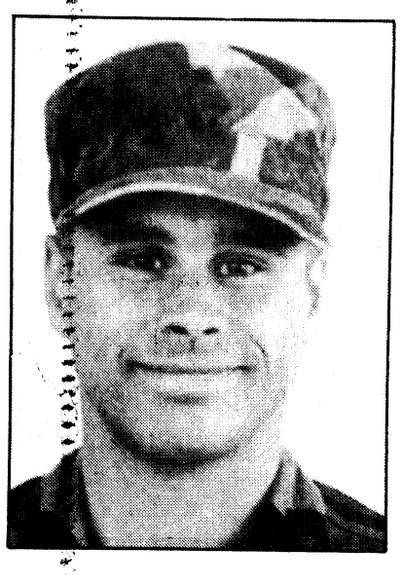
Military leaders have relied on the sound moral principles that have developed into our present professional ethics and values. Defending a nation's freedom is but one aspect of values. Being a professional soldier in the Army requires a soldier to really believe in what he is doing. It is impossible to professionally serve his country with only superficial ideals, or without a clear understanding of why he is defending his country.

A true professional military leader is not just trained to kill, to capture territory, or force other people into a different political system. Professional soldiers are experts. They train themselves and their subordinates to be the best, so that if the time should come, they will be ready to defend their nation and all that it stands for, and if necessary, to sacrifice their lives.

To properly train subordinates requires loyalty to the unit. This loyalty is earned, through consideration for a subordinate's well-being, to developing cohesion and unit pride. Effective training and forming a group of individuals into an efficient, productive, and highly motivated unit contributes to the overall readiness of the Army and to the defense of the nation.

The only way in which a military leader can achieve unit loyalty and loyalty to the nation is through personal responsibility. He must have the desire to achieve and to accomplish the mission to the best of his capability by living up to commitments whether large or small.

Personal responsibility is taking advantage of every opportunity that will contribute to the growth and improvement of the individual. This is not limited to personal affairs; as a leader, it means being responsible for those under us.



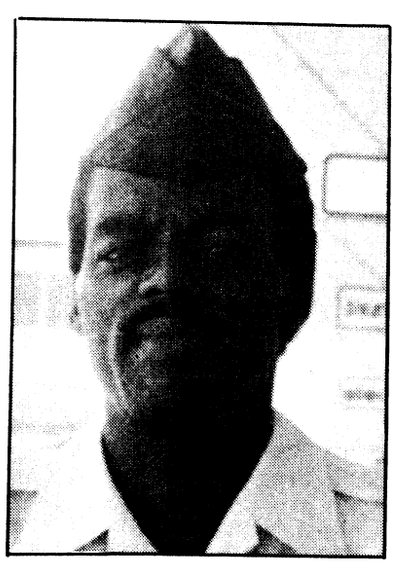
Duty, honor, and doing what has to be done in an honorable way, are basic values in personal responsibility. Also included are making sure that equipment is available to train subordinates effectively, and being loyal to the unit and the commander. Selfless service means putting the needs of the unit, the Army, and the nation ahead of personal needs and desires. Selflessness in duty requires hard work, dedication, and a sound belief in what one is doing. Without this, all efforts become half-hearted and unsuccessful.

A good leader is measured by how hard he works and the results he attains. Inevitably, selfless service in a leader leads him to the top and makes him stand out among his peers. It takes courage and a will to succeed to do the job to the best of his ability.

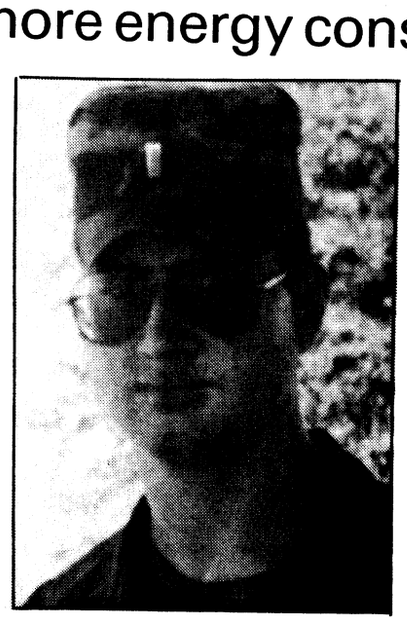
Keeping in mind all of these professional ethics (loyalty to nation, loyalty to unit, personal responsibility, and selfless service), a leader in today's Army faces even more challenges than ever. He must deal with everything from the diverse backgrounds of subordinates and peers, to the changing moral values of the nation, to the changing political systems and governments of other countries.

Today's atmosphere of world instability requires us to be solid in our beliefs and values, to be ready to defend our country at a moment's notice, to face any enemy, anywhere at any time, to carry out our mission at all costs.

VARIOUS VOICES / What can be done to help make people more energy conscious?



Sp4 Clement Vanzeeland, Company C, 1st Battalion, 507th Parachute Infantry Regiment — "You have to educate the masses. Also, have people walk instead of hopping on a vehicle to go on a one-quarter mile ride. It wastes gas. The Army does that too often."



CWO2 Larry Sampson, Student Detachment, Martin Army Community Hospital — "Education is the best thing - brochures, pamphlets and stuff like that. I've also heard of a program where they pay money for energy conservation ideas. I definitely think that if people knew more about that they'd be interested.

PFC Pamela Louis, 2-11 Infantry, The School Brigade — "I think they should just cut off all the lights for a designated period of time. People take everything for granted, and you never appreciate something until you can't use it. If they did that people would realize what it would be like without electricity."

Sgt Clyde Smith, Detachment 1, 317th Tactical Air Wing — "I think that people can make themselves more aware of energy conservation by doing simple things like making sure all the lights are off and turning off office machines. Media attention is also a good idea."

1st Lt. Gary Ramsdell, 1st Bn, 11 Infantry, IOAC 1-88 — "I don't think spending money on stickers and pamphlets is a good idea. Energy conservation should be stressed to the troops by the commanders. At home it should by stressed by the parents. Education is really the only way."

Julia Grau, civilian employee, — "If people had to pay the bill themselves, they would remember to turn off the lights. We should make people aware of what the power bill on Fort Benning actually is, and make them realize that the money is coming out of the taxpayer's pocket."

Monitoring system helps post surpass energy target

By Verdelle Lambert
The Castle

From 1975 until last year, Fort Benning had been consistently 3 to 5-percent above the energy consumption targets set by its major command, TRADOC.

Last year, Fort Benning came in approximately 5-percent below its target, with actual savings on utility bills from October 1986 to June 1987 totaling $1 million.

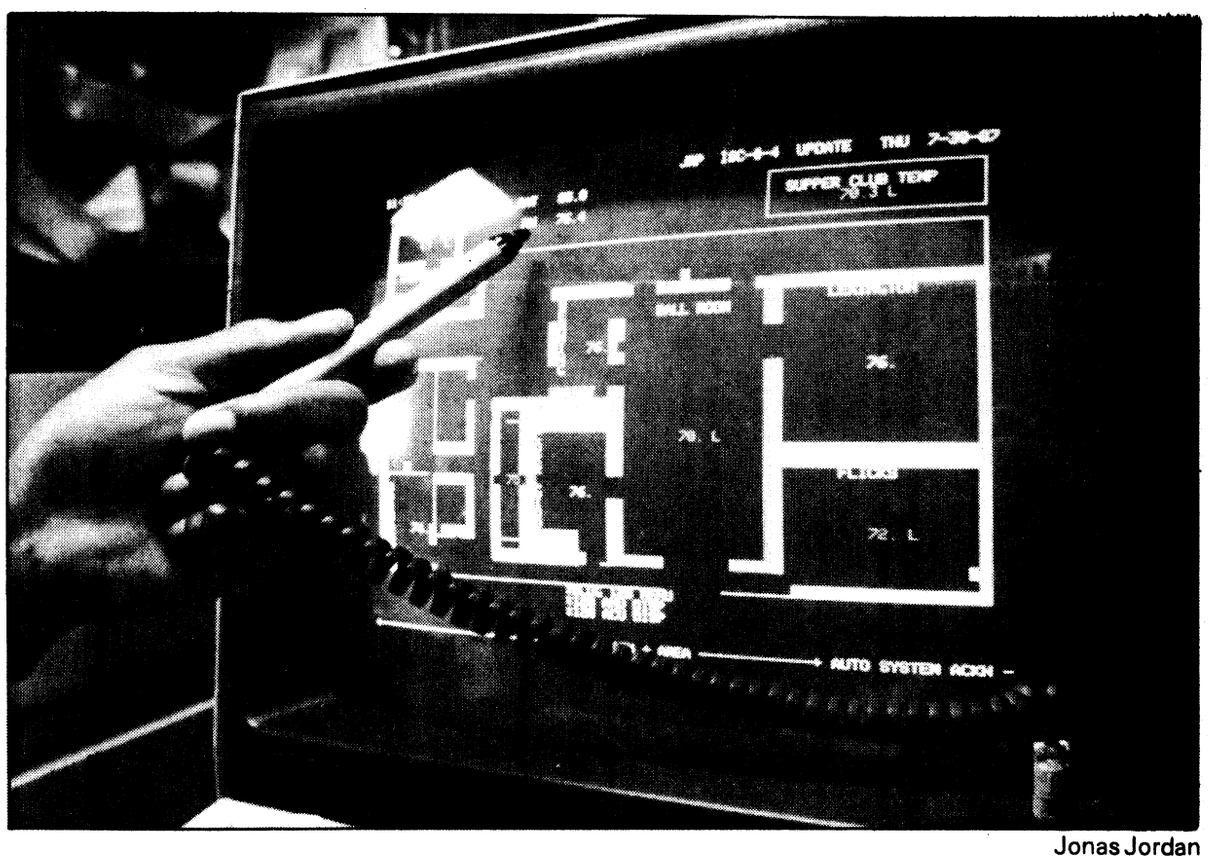
"We attribute some of the savings to our energy monitoring and control system (EMCS)," said Glenn Todd, energy section chief, Fort Benning. "By 1995, we have to reduce our energ consumption by 15-percent. It's impossible to do it without some kind of management tool like EMCS.

"Besides," Todd continued, "TRADOC has said, 'We will give you a goal each year and you will live within those goals. If you do not, we're only financing those goals to this amount of MBTUs. If you go over that amount, you, the post, will have to come up with the money from some place else to finance your overuse in energy."

Well, just recently, TRADOC gave Fort Benning a bonus of $1.3 million to spend as they like, because they came in under their goal last year using EMCS.

"I think," said Ronald G. Sibold, area engineer at the West Georgia Area Office, "EMCS is probably one of the best systems — or contracts — that the Savannah district — or maybe the Corps in general — has ever provided a user from the standpoint of total customer satisfaction. We have a good contractor. The folks at Fort Benning are excited about the system. They're always anxious to demonstrate it, to show it to visitors...and that makes us proud of it."

Fort Benning has approximately 4,000 family housing units, 9000 buildings and 22 million square feet of heated/air-conditioned space. It handles its own electrical distribution, all of its water treatment and sewage treatments, and its own natural gas distribution. Its baseline load (lights, drink machines, typewriters, computers, etc.) is 22,000 kilowatts. Everything over that can be attributed mostly to heat or air-conditioning, and it is in this area that EMCS exercises the most control to reap the greatest benefits for its users.



"For instance," said Todd, who is responsible for the 24-hour-a-day operation of EMCS, "in the winter time our Kw demand for electricity runs in the neighborhood of 22,000. In the summertime, we usually hit a demand of around 47,000 Kwhs. Georgia Power had to have the capability to supply this demand at any given time. Because we're such a large user, we would have to pay a high price under those circumstances.

"So we sat down with Georgia Power," continued Todd. "We asked them what we could do to shed back to a level they could live with when they didn't have the power to sell us. In return, we said, for our customers' sake, when the power is there, let us use it."

Georgia Power said, in effect, they'd give Fort Benning a better rate if Benning helped them manage their peaks. The post could have whatever demand it wanted until they were given "curtailment notice."

"When we're put on curtailment," Todd explained, "we have a pre-determined shed point that we fall back to and that is what our bill is based on. We have 30 minutes to shed. We can have the load down to our shed point within three minutes of being notified."

The system can tell the operator what the current demand is, what the average usage is for a 30-minute interval, and what the last peak was. Using several forecasting techniques, the system can also project what the demand will be in the next minute.

Jonas Jordan

State-of-the-art computer equipment makes tracking energy waste and abuse a snap.

"All we're doing," explained Todd, "is managing the way we hit our peak. We've shown peak shaving to be, not an inflated savings, but a real savings. This is the reason this system is so important to us."

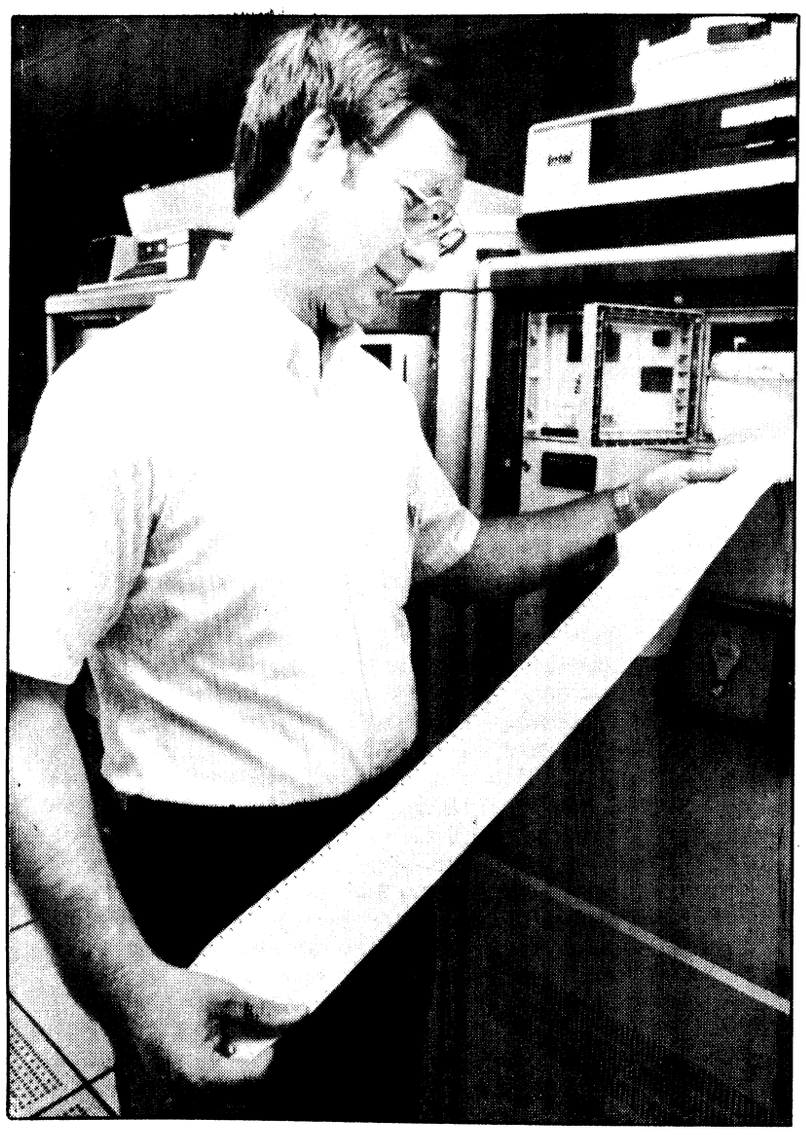
The actual mechanism that allows Benning to shed power is the FM receiver. There are currently 4,000 in the system, attached to buildings. These FM receivers allow central control to turn off air conditioners when peak shaving is required.

Buildings with low priority are turned off first. These are PX buildings and public buildings with a low occupancy rate during that time of day (usually between noon and 6 p.m.) If that's not enough, air conditioners in big users, like administrative buildings (65-percent of the load), are cut off. If that doesn't do it, air conditioners in family housing units are turned off. (It's usually between 4 p.m. and 6 p.m. if this occurs.)

Most family housing occupants don't know that the system has cut their air conditioning off because it doesn't cut the fan off," explained Sibold.

When Fort Benning gets the o.k. from Georgia Power to resume normal usage, the last units to be turned off are the first to be turned back on.

"The consequences of not being able to shed in 30 minutes is that we have bought a new peak," explained Todd. "Rather than having to pay on what our shed point is — 39,800 kws — we now have to pay for a whole 12-month period on 47,000. So there's a tremendous amount of money we're talking about if we're unable to shed."



In the winter months, Fort Benning uses primarily natural gas. They are authorized by TRADOC to start up heat only after so many consecutive days of the average temperature being below 65 degrees. Here, too, Benning has a firm contract with Southern Natural Gas Co. and usage over the contract amount could cost them up to 23 times the cost of a million cubic feet of gas for every million cubic feet used. Because Benning has a good control system, they can keep their demand within the contract figures.

Load-shedding is a grandstand function of EMCS, but there are, as Todd calls them, "in-the-grunt" things that can be done to serve the customer while controlling energy consumption.

"The system allows us to exploit the weather when it's in our favor," said Todd. "For example, if the outside air in April and May is sufficient enough to cool with, we can prolong the start-up of air-conditioning by using the ventilation part of our system. We haven't started up an energy hog. So we can go through some Aprils and Mays optimizing our system and save air-conditioning for months when the temperature at Fort Benning gets up to 100 degrees, with relative humidity running between 65 and 70-percent."

EMCS is defined by more than just load-shedding or being able to exploit the weather, though. The system's normal operation is to start equipment on time schedules. (Family housing is not on a time schedule. Medical buildings are also exempt, but Benning's hospital commander has opted for service when needed, rather than on a 24-hour basis.) Before do it?" Bubba persisted.

"Just native intelligence," I was about to answer when I noticed that my posts were not only out of line, but in some instances too far apart.

I then sent Emma and Bubba back in the house while I "replanted" the posts.

Fortunately, my concrete job wasn't that good of a job, I was able to get the posts out. Unfortunately, of the 15 I planted, 14 needed to be replaced. Further, whereas before I'd managed to avoid larger rocks and roots, the second time around didn't work that way.

Enter week two of my weekend project.

This time I used my string for something more than just decoration, and got my posts properly aligned.

Back came my work crew, minus Bubba who had found other things to do, and up went the boards.

Here's where I really got clever. To make sure my boards were perfectly straight, I started off by aligning them with the wall of the house, making sure each successive board fit snugly with the previous one.

Emma and I proceeded on our merry way and finished in short order. But then we noticed that the side next to the house was about six inches lower than the far side.

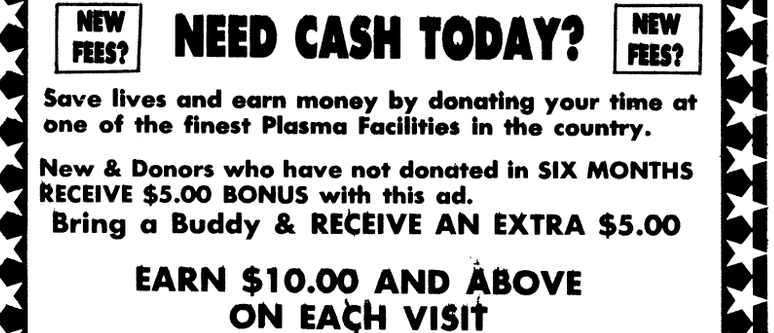
"Ground slope," I told Emma, not being able to figure out what caused the slant.

Finally I spotted the problem. The wall of the house slanted, so as each board was placed side by side, they impreciptiously rose to the difference of six inches.

Go to the hardware store, buy a crow bar and long level. Return and enter week three.

Finished. The boards are on. The fence is aligned. And Ralf is still on a rope in the back yard.

Is there anyone out there who knows how to hang a gate?



I wish I lived on post in family housing. I'm sure the DEH would not have been like my land lady and allowed me to build a fence.

36th Engineer Gp.

36th Engineer Group

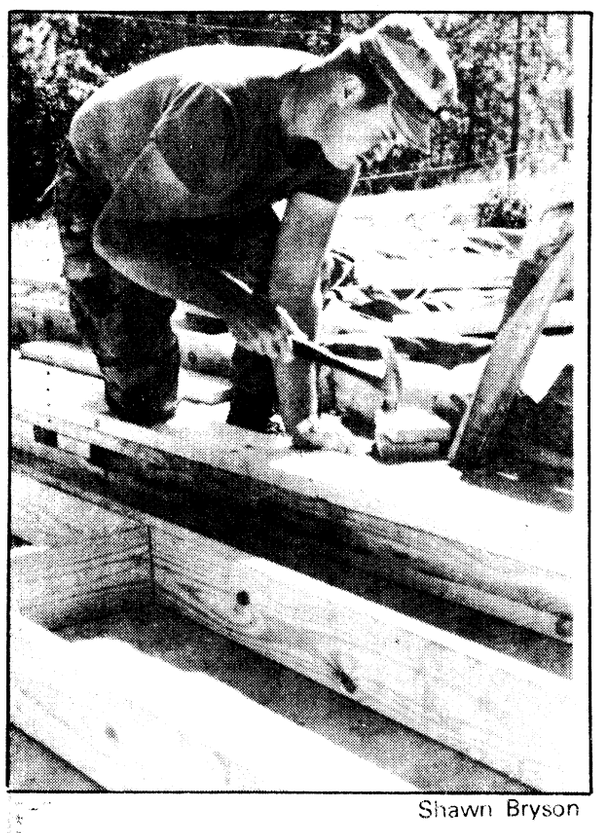
To the soldiers of the 1st platoon, B Co., 43rd Engineer Battalion, building a garage is one thing. However, building an eight-stall garage with an office is really a challenge.

The 24 36th Engineer Group soldiers are gaining invaluable experience as they near the half-way mark of the four-month project, according to 2nd Lt. Todd A. Wang, 1st platoon Leader.

"We are building the garage in support of the 197th Infantry Brigade and the 507th Tactical Air Control Party of the 197th," Wang said. Wang explained that the garage will house the 507th's HUMM-Vs.

According to Maj. Robert E. Cutler, Brigade Air Liason Officer for the 2nd Brigade, 10th Mountain Division, the 507th is in the process of changing it's high-frequency radio equipment from the 3/4 ton CUC-Vehicle to the HUMM-Vehicle. "The HUMMV's that we are using have soft tops and because of the radio equipment stored inside, there was a need for a garage to protect the equipment from the elements," he said.

Wang added that the garage will also allow mechanics to maintain the vehicles regardless of the weather conditions.



Groundbreaking of the project began Aug. 11 and according to Wang, more than 1,000 cubic yards of fill were trucked in to level the site and provide a better drainage pattern.

Once leveled, the Bravo soldiers raked and spread 120 tons of gravel on top of the fill in preparation for the concrete-pouring phase of the project, Wang said.

Wang emphasized that during a battalion field-training exercise, the B-Company soldiers put in more than 1,200 man-hours on a 24-hour-a-day work schedule. "The reason for the long days was to prepare the site for the concrete trucks, which were to start pouring after the FTX," Wang said.

A total of 226 cubic yards of concrete were poured and leveled by the Bravo soldiers who have just recently begun constructing the frame of the building, according to Wang.

Wang said that if the soldiers of B-Company continue to work with the motivation that they have so far, there should be no problem in making the Dec. 15 deadline for completion of the project.

Executive Officer, 1st Battalion, 50th Infantry

When the Delta dragons from 1st Battalion, 50th Infantry, 1st Infantry Training Brigade took to the field on a recent five-day FTX, it was a little different story since it was the first time in recent Infantry Training Center history that a company consisting almost completely of 11-C mortarmen conducted the exercise.

Planning for their training started many months ago, even before the soldiers arrived at the battalion. Drill sergeants with mortar skills from all five companies in the battalion organized to assist in the effort with help from the 29th Infantry Regiment and the 10th Mountain Division.

"This was an outstanding cycle due to the large number of 11-Cs,"said Capt. Mark A. Campbell, Delta Co. commander. "The FTX served as a vehicle for training."

According to Capt. Russ Medina, executive officer, 1st Battalion, 50th Infantry, it was also an opportune time for a new training film for reserve component units, new cadre, and most important, the new soldier.

"It will be good for the new OSUT soldier who has yet to experience his first FTX," Medina said.

Filming was done by Louis Hanie, educational television branch, after editing, one film should be ready for release in November.

Cadre from the mortar platoon, 3rd Battalion, 14th Infantry, 10th Mountain Division assisted in training the mortarmen. They taught the soldiers mortar battle drills, gunnery skills and assisted them in digging near-perfect mortar positions, using nearly 7,000 sandbags.

When the mortarmen weren't digging in, or practicing gunnery skills, they formed into infantry squads and negotiated squad movement to contact on the situational training exercise (STX) lane.

The FTX finished with a 15-mile road march.

The company started with 96 potential mortarmen, graduating 94. All qualified on the mortar gunners exam with an average score of 187.4 out of a possible 200 points. Testing saw 78 qualify as "experts" with 12 maxing the test with perfect scores of 200. Additionally, the mortarmen averaged 247 on a PT test and ran the five miles in 42½ minutes.

"I think it was great," said Pvt. 1 Carl Dismukes, a native of Lake Providence, La. "We had a lot of hands-on training and that's exactly what we needed. Our instructors and drill sergeants trained all of us well."

Pvt. 1 Charles Hager of Iowa City, Iowa, was one of the 11 Charlies scoring "expert." "I felt my 11-C training went super because we were all very motivated and our drill sergeants worked us hard," he said.

"Soldier, what are you still doing here?," asks the drill sergeant. "Didn't I just run you out of here?"

"Not me, drill sergeant. It must have been my brother," answers the One Station Unit Training soldier.

On Sand Hill for the first few days of a current OSUT cycle in Alpha Company, 2nd Battalion, 19th Infantry, 1st Infantry Training Brigade, this was a typical conversation. Drill sergeants thought they were seeing double. Having three sets of twins training in the same company was a bit confusing.

Marsha Santiago

"We didn't know we had the twins," said Staff Sgt. Manuel Alvarez, 1st Platoon. "Then we started seeing them in the DFAC. It took a few days to realize we had not one, but three sets of twins."

Now in the eighth week of training, everyone is used to asking "Which Hartman, Brown or McLamb?"

Patrick and Peter Hartman, the 17-year old sons of Richard and Cheryl Hartman of Luling, La., both say they joined the Army because they were bored with civilian life, thought the military would teach self-discipline and wanted a chance to serve their country.

The Hartman's have no brothers or sisters. "After us, I guess that was enough," joked Peter. They are graduates of Hahnville High School, Paradis, La. Both brothers plan to attend college and hope to begin while in the military.

Patrick, the oldest of the Hartman twins, will be going into the Old Guard after graduation from OSUT. Peter Hartman will be going to Airborne School and hopes to be stationed with an airborne unit.

For Fred and Greg Brown, 19-year old twins from Montgomery, Ala., joining the Army was a chance to be on their own and learn leadership skills. Their parents are Samuel and Earnestine Brown and they have two younger brothers: Patrick, 4 years old, and Christopher, 9.

They are not strangers to work and study. During their senior year at Robert E. Lee High School, they attended classes half the day and worked the other half.

The Brown twins are not sure where they will be assigned after graduation. They agreed, while it had been good to train together, it did not matter if they received different assignments after graduation.

Ricky and Nicky McLamb, the 19-year old sons of Mr. and Mrs. John R. McLamb of Nakina, N.C., joined the Army because it was the "American" thing to do. They agree that driving by Fort Bragg and seeing the "Airborne" soldiers played a part in their decision, as did their competition in high school athletics and a love of the outdoors.

197th soldier finally achieves goal of becoming Army Ranger

By Kevin J. Howerton
197th Infantry Brigade correspondent

Every soldier knows that Ranger training can increase your skills and abilities dramatically. But few realize the effect that the training has on the soldier's unit.

"There are a lot of things I learned at Ranger School that I brought back to my company," said Sgt. Timothy N. Banfield, a squad leader in Company C, 3rd Battalion, 7th Infantry. "It's a top-notch leadership course that enhances your abilities as a leader."

Sgt. Banfield, who has been in the Army for seven years and has three years prior service in the U.S. Marine Corps, completed the 58-day Ranger Course Aug. 27.

"I've wanted to be a Ranger ever since I came into the Army," said Sgt. Banfield, "and now that I'm stationed at Fort Benning, where the Ranger course is taught, I finally got the chance. I feel that every leader or future leader should get a chance to take the course."

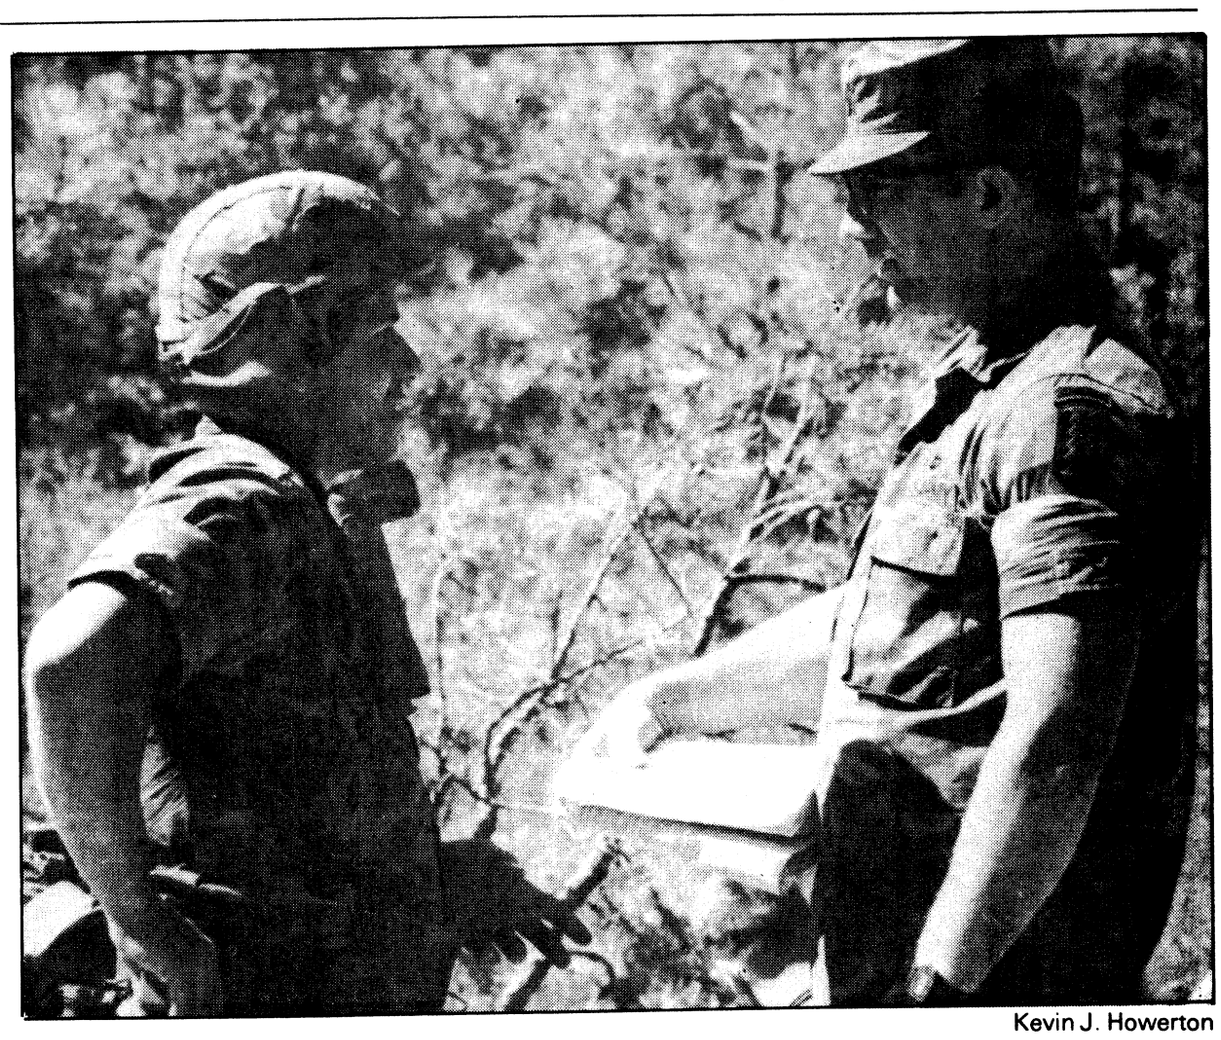
Sgt. Banfield is not the only one to notice an increase in his leadership ability from the Ranger school.

"His charisma and his drive have definitely taken a sharp jump," said 2nd Lt. William E. Ryan IV, Sgt. Banfield's platoon leader. "He's become an inspiration to the platoon and he has aided in the esprit de corps of the unit."

Getting into Ranger school was no easy task for the 29-year-old Banfield.

"Our battalion receives limited slots to send people to the Ranger School," explained Lt. Ryan. "Sgt. Banfield had expressed an intense desire to go to the school, therefore we kept the chain of command constantly informed of this desire. When a slot came in, he got it."

Sgt. Banfield has many of the characteristics that Ranger's commonly refer to as the "Hooaah" spirit.



"He constantly maintains a positive attitude," said Ryan, "and he's a self-starter. When he sees a problem, he corrects it on the spot. That's a trait not commonly seen in all NCOs."

Sgt. Banfield started preparing for the Ranger school for two months before his class began. Daily runs, extra workouts and a special diet helped him get ready for the grueling two-month course.

"I was the third oldest guy in the class," he commented, "but the others kept cheering me on, and I always knew that I could do it."

Sgt. Banfield's completion of the course has helped inspire others in his company to want to do the same.

"I've had a number of people from the unit come up to me now and say that they want to go to Ranger School," said Ryan.

Teamwork takes training, practice

By Sally Roberts
197th Infantry Brigade correspondent

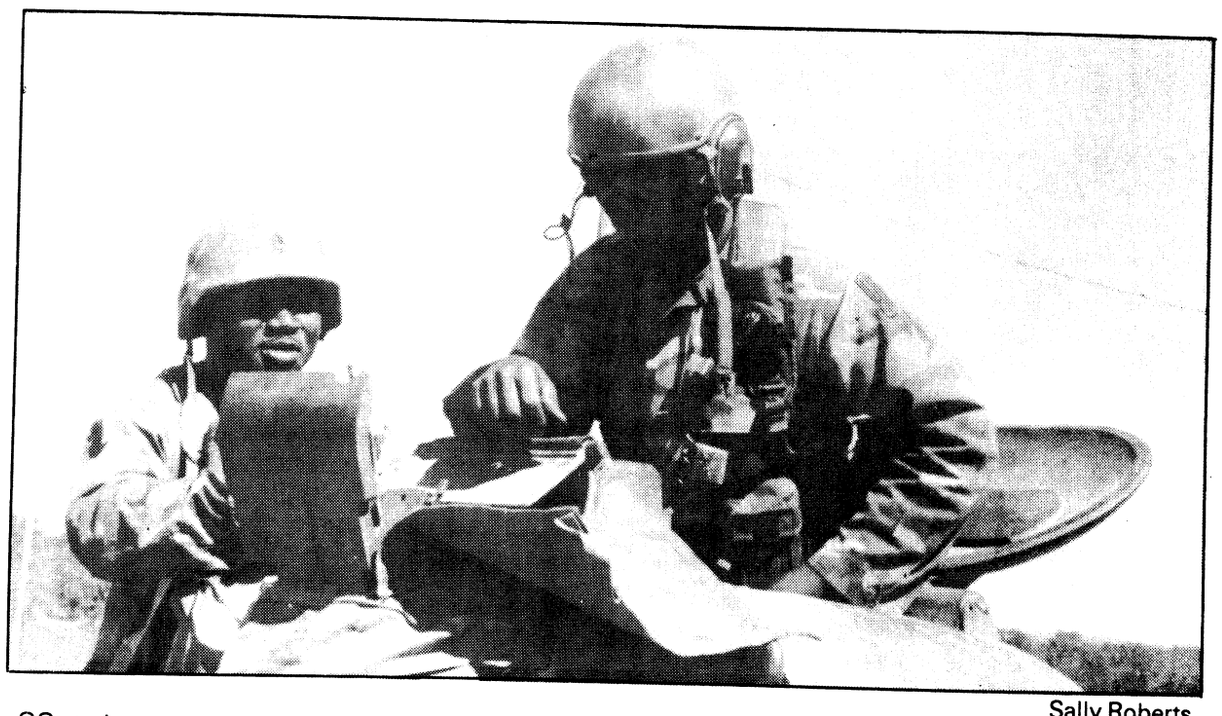
The four-man crew of an M60 tank accomplish their mission by working together as a team. In constant training as a team, the crew can learn to move and think as one.

That is a tank crew under ideal conditions. Often, the turn around of personnel, which is inevitable in any unit, challenges the crew to adapt to and train a new man on the team. When that is the case, the tank commander, a non-commissioned officer, is responsible for bringing that soldier into the team.

"As a tank commander, we have been in all the positions on the crew," said Staff Sgt. Laurence Davis, a TC from Troop A, 15th Cavalry. "We know the problems in learning to build cohesion within the crew."

The TC is responsible for the proficiency of his crew. He must ensure that skills are maintained and that weaknesses are identified and turned into strengths.

"I have to give my crew the training they need to remain proficient in their job," Staff Sgt. Davis added. "We have to concentrate on deficiencies and correct them."



The crew gets the opportunity to show their teamwork in semi-annual tank gunnery. The crew qualifies for record once each year and conducts a gunnery exercise for sustainment of their skills between annual qualification.

Whether the mission is in a training or in a tactical situation, the TC receives the fire commands and must properly relay the information to his crew. Then it is up to the crew to react and do their part in the mission.

"If the NCO is not knowledgeable of his job, then that tank will not qualify," said Staff Sgt. Joseph L. Roberst, also a tank commander in the Troop.

"The TC has to analyze the situation and give the proper fire commands," Roberts added. "Then the gunner has to make sure that everything is set in order to fire on the target."

"It especially helps the gunner, when the TC knows his job," said Cpl. Keith Lewis, a gunner. "The TC passes his experience and knowledge on to the entire crew."

Energy

EMCS, equipment had to be turned on or off manually, or was left running all the time. With EMCS, one computer handles communication with the field, receiving status reports and initiating start/stop functions, while the other computer handles the internal software. The object is to be able to give service when it's needed, and to cut it off when it's not needed. For example: classroom schedules are entered into the computer and the air conditioning or heat automatically turned on only when a room is occupied. Input points back into the computer can tell what the temperature is in a given room, and when it's outside the "set" range. The operator knows within 15 seconds when something happens in the system that's outside the authorized state.

The operator knows what's happening in the system because of input devices called points (or sensors). Each point communicates to the computer about the state of a specific activity. There are currently 4,200 points (input/output) in the system, some 8-10 miles away from the central control office. These points measure things like flow of air, steam or water; temperature of a space, water or steam; and pressure differences between filters and between pumps, which would tell if a pump were on, for example.

Within 10 seconds, EMCS can scan 6,000 points to find out what's going on in the system. Within a minute after the system sends a command to a point — and that point does not come back verified, or a point drops outside its limits — a message is output to that effect.

Todd decides which points are important enough to get an audible alarm, requiring the operator's personal and immediate acknowledgement. (The system is programmed to give an audible alarm if Benning exceeds its power demand or if hot water in a critical building has gone outside the limit, for example.)

Savannah district awarded the contract to build EMCS to Computer Science Corp. out of Herndon, Va. in 1980. Phase I was turned over to Fort Benning in 1981. It had approximately 1,500 points, some basic operating programs, and limited control of the FM system. Under Phase II of the contract, the majority of the buildings on post have been brought into the system, and the console operator given direct input into the FM system. Savings realized by Fort Benning came during Phase II installation.

"The thing of it is, we have a good working relationship with the people here," said Jim Blackman, computer science project engineer. "Usually the user doesn't have any use of the system until it's accepted and we turn it over to them. But since we're adding on buildings in Phase I they continued to operate the system just like it was theirs, even using the points that were added during Phase II."

Before the Army accepts Phase II, the system has to pass a 30-day endurance test, conducted by the Savannah District, to determine if the system meets many reliability requirements. The test covers two 15-day periods.

Under Phase III, the final phase of the contract, most of the remaining buildings will be brought into the system.

Pvt. 2 Christopher L. Barlow of Company E, 1st Battalion, 58th Infantry, fires the Army's new 9 mm pistol during range qualifications last week.

197th troops first to qualify on newly-fielded 9mm pistol

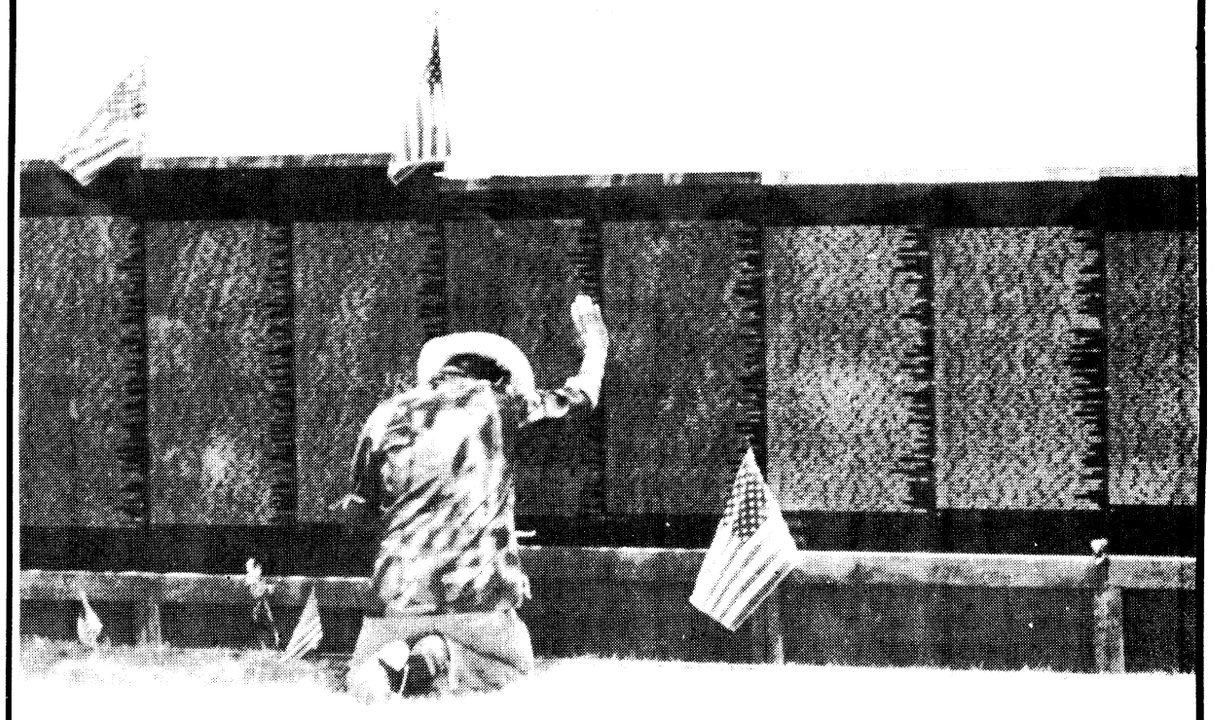
By Kevin J. Howerton
197th Infantry Brigade correspondent

"This little sucker is deadly."

That was Pvt. 2 Christopher L. Barlow's impression of the 9mm semi-automatic pistol after firing it for the first time. Pvt. Barlow, a soldier from Company E, 1st Battalion, 58th Infantry, was one of the men who qualified with the newly-fielded weapon at Porter Range last Friday.

1-58 was the first unit of the 197th Infantry Brigade to familiarize or qualify with the 9mm since the weapon was issued to them. About 65 soldiers from throughout the battalion participated in the range exercises.

Friday's operation included instruction on maintenance and functions check of the pistol.



"Most of the men weren't familiar with the weapon at all," said 2nd Lt. Darnell Shaw of Company C, 1-58,OIC of the range. "Overall, they shot well, and they were impressed by the weapon."

"The 9mm takes some getting used to because it's so light, but I think that will be one of it's big advantages," commented Barlow. "It's also extremely accurate and easy to clean and take care of."

Other soldiers in the unit were equally impressed by the weapon.

"I had never fired with a 9mm before, so I didn't know what to expect," said Pvt. 2 James P. Salters, an armorer with Company C. "But I found I like it better than the old .45 caliber pistol." The 9mm semi-automatic pistol is a double-action weapon with a 15-round capacity. It is easy to use for both right and left-handed shooters and has many new features, such as loaded chamber indicator which allows the soldier to know if the chamber is loaded without visually inspecting it, even in total darkness.

Congress fails to act on SRB program

Army News Service

Soldiers in military occupational specialties that fall into the selective re-enlistment bonus program, and whose enlistment contracts expire in October, November or December, may extend until Jan. 31, 1988, in hopes that legislation is signed re-instituting the bonus program.

On Oct. 1, legislative authority to give the bonuses and provide re-enlistment contracts for the bonus extension and re-training program expired because Congress failed to enact a new law covering the programs, said Maj. Allen Deutsch, a staff officer in the Army's Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Personnel. SRB payments will continue to soldiers with contracts signed before Sept. 30, Deutsch said. Soldiers enrolled in the bonus extension and re-enlistment program before Sept. 30 with completed schooling and commitment to re-enlist will receive their bonuses.

Deutsch explained that soldiers may continue to apply for the BEAR program, and that applications will be processed through the Total Army Personnel Agency in Alexandria, Va.; approval, however, will not be granted until the program is re-instituted by Congress.

Child's balloon sails 80 miles away before being found in tree

By Beth Middlemiss
Fort Benning Schools

A note arrived at Patch School last week. It was addressed to kindergarten student Jonathan Corley. It came from a family 80 miles away who had never met him. It was written because a balloon had landed in a tree.

Jonathan's balloon was one of the many balloons that were released on Sept. 16 at Patch School as part of the school's parade and birthday celebration for the Constitution. Jonathan's teacher, Nadine Norton, had written his school address and an explanation of the Celebration of Citizenship in the Fort Benning schools.

When the note arrived, Mrs. Norton read it to Jonathan and his classmates, then everyone clapped and cheered. Though the note was written in language that Jonathan understands now, its message may mean more to him as he grows older.

Beth Middlemiss

Nadine Norton and Jonathan Corley display the letter he received as a result of the Constitution balloon launch.

It read:

"Dear Jonathan,

My husband found your beautiful balloon in a tree on our farm. It had traveled 80 miles before it was caught in the tree. My husband and I live in the country and enjoy the animals and farm. We have a large barn and two dogs, Smokey and Dudley. My husband is a state trooper and I work in a bank.

"We also had a big celebration here for the signing of the Constitution — parades, displays and flags flying everywhere. I am so proud to be an American — aren't you?

"As your balloon traveled to the tree it passed over the most beautiful country on earth — Our America!

With our best wishes,
Mr. and Mrs. R.C. Hoyal
Thomaston, Ga."

10th Mountain soldiers tackle MOUT site

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

An abandoned schoolhouse in Russell County, Ala., last week served as a communist headquarters for guerillas from Company A, 3rd Battalion, 14th Infantry during "Operation Avalanche."

The operation began early last Tuesday when soldiers from the unit were alerted to seek and destroy communist soldiers who were invading the ficticious allied country of Cortina.

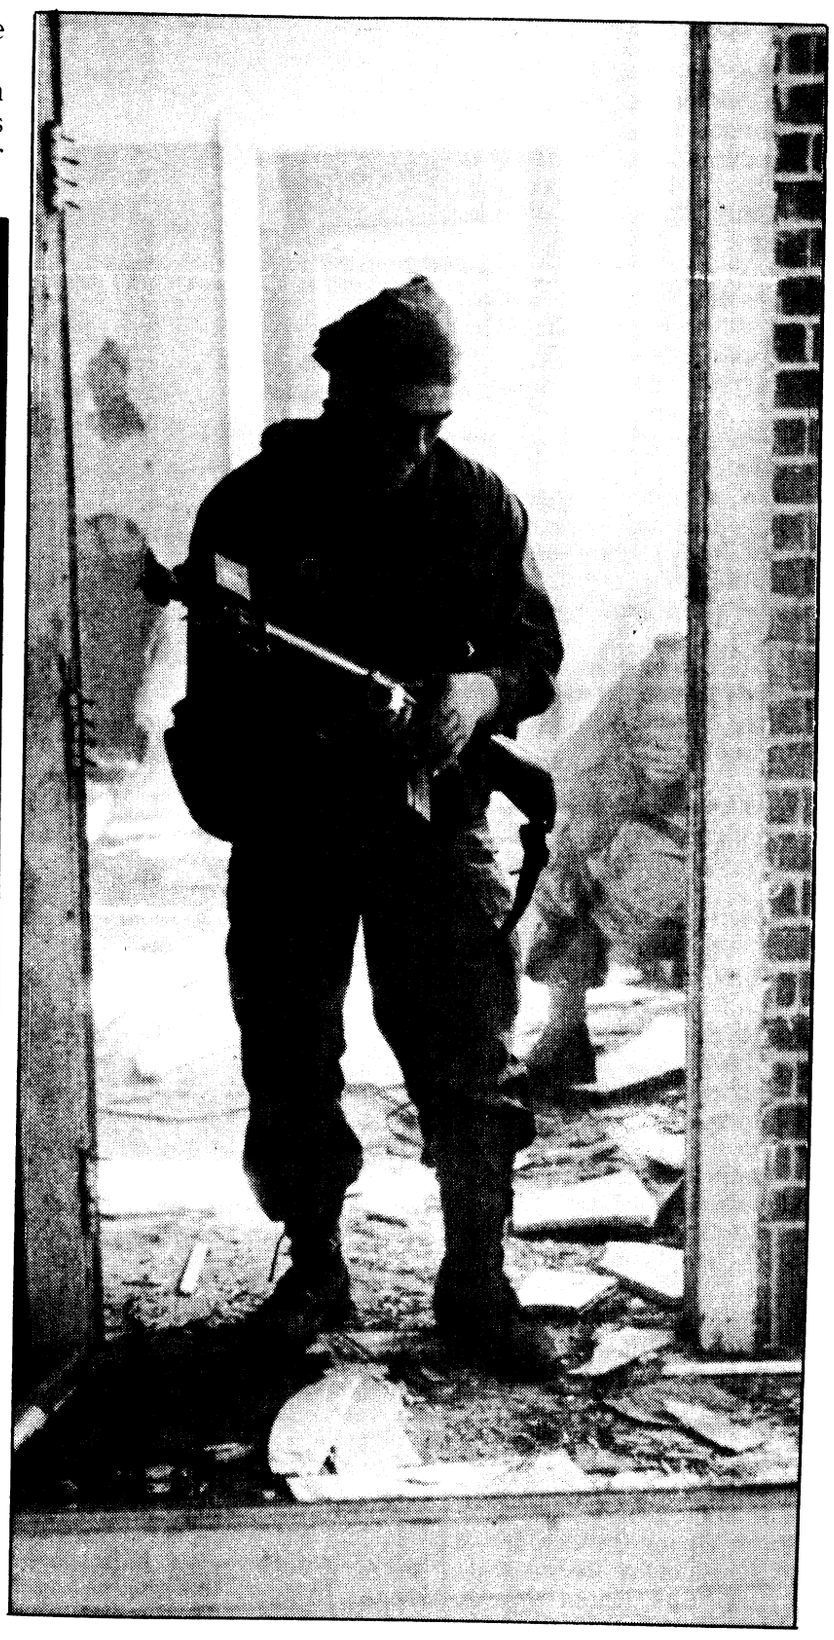
According to Capt. Thomas Foster, Air and Land Operations Officer, 2nd Brigade, 10th Mountain Division, it was a classic raid but it was unique since the soldiers had never seen the site before.

"All the men had to go on was some photographs of the area," he said, "just like in a real wartime situation."

At the start of the exercise, helicopters filled the Alabama skies loaded with soldiers ready to infiltrate the site.

When they assaulted the objective, the guerillas stood their ground as attacking soldiers moved from room to room battling for position.

Booby trapped doors and windows sent glass and wood splinters flying through the air, creating added obstacles for the troops.



The total exercise, which took fourteen minutes, ended with the retaking of the schoolhouse. Soon, the skies were again filled with helicopters on their return trip to helipads on Sand Hill.

The whole scenario was made possible through the combined efforts of the Phenix City Chamber of Commerce and a Russell County resident who donated the land.

The 2nd Brigade, 10th Mountain Division, has adopted Phenix City as their home faway from home.

LUPUS: A DISEASE OF A THOUSAND DISGUISES

Lupus has been called "the greatest impersonator" because of the frequency in which initial episodes are diagnosed as other diseases. The diagnosis of lupus can be a lengthy process since the symptoms are so varied and diverse and include fatigue, weight loss, joint pain and swelling, persistent low grade fever, and sun sensitivity, the latter often resulting in a butterfly shaped rash across the bridge of the nose and cheeks.

Since lupus manifests itself in so many different ways, it is difficult to be certain how many people actually suffer from lupus. The consensus is that while over 500,000 Americans have lupus, another 500,000 may unknowingly be afflicted. In the U.S. alone, more than 16,000 people a year develop lupus, making it more common than a number of other well-known diseases. Lupus, therefore, is no longer considered a rare disease.

"OUR NEW ARMY HOUSING IS NICE TO COME HOME TO. IT WAS WORTH THE WAIT."

SFC Ron Rhodes and his wife Connie.

"It sure didn't take us long to get comfortable in our new house here at Fort Polk. Connie loves the size and lay-out. Ronnie-Lee loves the playground. And there's even room to store my boat.

"We love our quarters. This house has been very important for us in making a good home.

"Because we're in the Army, people may not expect us to live this well. But the Army has changed a lot in the past five years. It's a good place to live, to be.

"Connie and I feel that the Army's really come a long way in housing and, you know, in taking care of its people."

The overall quality of quarters on posts throughout the Army continues to improve. And housing starts and renovations are at an all-time high. It's all part of the Army Family Action Plan in action.

ARMY FAMILY.

SPIRITUAL

Show others you really care by listening to what they say

By Donald Wilson
10th Mountain Division Chaplain's Office

"Good morning, how are you?" "Just fine, how about you?" "Fine."

How many mornings have we started our day just like that? It seems to be the expected American greeting.

Have you ever had someone say "fine" before you even had a chance to ask?

Try it some morning. Just say good morning as you pass by, and notice the responses that you receive.

That brings me to the point that I would like for us to think about today. Do we care enough to listen? Do we listen enough to care? I am afraid that we have become a society of friendly strangers.

We may live next door to the same neighbors for years and say, "How are you?" in the morning and "How was your day?" at night, but never know phem. We are kind to them and never have a harsh word, but we are equally never enriched by their friendship.

Do we care enough to listen?

Listening is an art that needs to be "worked at" to be properly developed. Have you ever noticed when a group of people get together, men or women, there seems to be a battle over who will talk and who will listen? One person will begin and barely finishes before the next person chimes in, and "on it goes."

Usually, people are not listening to what is being said, rather they are thinking about what they are going to say next. The conversation, therefore, becomes self-centered and not others-centered. No one is interested in what is being said, but only in what they are saying. How refreshing it is to talk with someone who actually listens to what you say and responds to your statement instead of trying to "go one better."

To me, one of the greatest compliments that I can be paid in a conversation is when a person says, "I had something I wanted to say, but I forgot." That tells me that the person was listening to me instead of thinking of a response.

Do we listen enough to care? One of the greatest problems that we have in our society today is loneliness. It is not that we do not come in contact with enough people, we do not come in contact with enough people who care.

Caring may be defined as concern for or genuine interest in others, or simply, love.

Was it not Jesus who said, "A new commandment I give you: Love one another as I have loved you.

"Soyou must love one another. All men will know that you are my disciples if you love one another." (John 13:34 and 35).

Do we care enough to listen, and do we listen enough to care? What a challenging set of questions.

The Scottish commentator William Barclay wrote, "...the best way to forget our own worries is to shoulder someone elses. Life becomes an easier and a bigger thing when we feel the troubles of others more than we feel our own."

May God help us to better neighbors. May He help us to listen better and care more.

Chaplain finds ministering at NTC challenging

By Aimee R. Holden
Bayonet staff writer

Even in a simulated war-time situation, the presence of an Army chaplain can be critical to the morale of the soldiers.

And, in a hostile environment of blistering heat, sandstorms and enemy fire, the Army chaplain's service to his soldiers depends on his ability to survive.

"Surviving is a major mission," said Chaplain (Capt.) Christopher Wisdom, HHC, 197th Support Battalion, after he and his brigade recently returned from the National Training Center in Fort Irwin, Calif.

Soldiers at the NTC, which is located in the middle of the Mojave Desert, must battle both the environment and the opposing forces.

During the day, the heat is oppressive and at night, temperatures may drop below freezing. Sandstorms make navigation perilous.

The opposing forces (OPFOR) are as ruthless as the weather. Dressed in Soviet-style uniforms and using Soviet-style equipment and tactics, they do their best to make life miserable for visiting troops.

Because of the threat of enemy attack and the physical demands of accomplishing the mission, everyone is under a lot of stress, Wisdom said.

Added to the stress of a chaplain is the knowledge that if he gets killed, he will be unable to meet the needs of his soldiers.

"Camaflouge, vehicle and equipment maintenance, and actually being with the soldiers during an attack are all presuppositions to survival, which is a presuppostion to ministry," Wisdom said. "If I don't survive, I don't minister."

Wisdom said that several times during the recent training session, his survival was in question.

"I had my jeep blown up because I didn't camaflouge it properly," he said. "We lost sight of our convoy during a sandstorm and there was always the threat of dehydryation.

"The entire situation was a challenge to me," Wisdom said. "I don't mean that regular garrison work isn't challenging, but I've been doing that for a long time and I'm comfortable with it. This was new."

Wisdom said that the stressful NTC environment made ministry much different than a typical day in the garrison.

"Although the soldiers had many of the same problems as in the garrison, everything was compounded by the environment," Wisdom said.

Wisdom said that the most common problem he helped soldiers deal with concerned their families.

"Families run out of money, or an I.D. card expires while the sponsor is out in the field," he said.

"Or a soldier may receive notification that a loved one has died. We averaged one of these every two days.

"These sorts of things are called war stoppers. They can be very demoralizing to a soldier. The soldiers come to me to ask what I can do to help," Wisdom said.

"Frustration with the Army is also a problem," Wisdom said. "The soldier wants a normal life, but there is no such thing as a normal life in the Army. I can be talking to you today and pack my bags tomorrow to leave. I have to be spiritually equipped to help my soldiers face that possibility."

Soldiers sometimes come to him with philosophical concerns that test his spiritual preparation.

"I had a high level officer come to me and ask how he could justify his religious faith with what he was doing in the Army," Wisdom said.

Wisdom said that he responded by answering questions and sharing his own convictions as a Presbyterian, a faith which sees the legitmacy of using force to combat evil.

While at the NTC, Wisdom tried to provide for the religious needs of all the soldiers. He gave field services several times daily, and denominational needs were met through lay leaders.

"Where I can't perform I provide," Wisdom said, emphasizing that chaplains play a distinctive role in the war environment.

"The chaplain is a presence," he said. "Just having him there seems to make a difference. As long as he's not in the way, he is most welcome. It may be the desire to have a chaplain present, or it may be the desire for a positive presence. I've had people tell me that a smile and a concerned attitude really makes a difference."

In spite of the weather, constant enemy threat, lack of sleep, and meals being ruined by tear gas grenades thrown into a mess tent, Wisdom said he had a great time at the NTC.

"It was an opportunity to be with the soldiers in an up close and personal relationship. There were no distractions, and it was what we chaplains call a "teachable moment." Soldiers would talk about heavy religious issues that they wouldn't talk about in the garrison."

The NTC excercise was a success for Wisdom and for the 197th. He remained "notionally" alive, and was able to minister to the needs of his soldiers. The soldiers of 197th did not fall victim to the environment and remained literally alive. Wisdom said that one death per rotation is the average at the NTC, but the 197th was fortunate enough to bring back everyone that went.

The 197th also claimed a tactical success, which doesn't happen often against the skilled OPFOR, who remain at the NTC year round.

CHAPEL BRIEFS

Council hosts potluck supper

The Military Council of Catholic Women will host a parish chilli potluck supper Oct. 24 at The Infantry Center Chapel annex. All families are asked to bring a pot of chilli. All single soldiers are asked to bring crackers. Drinks and dessert will be provided. Come and join in the fun.

For more information, call Marianne Tennant at 687-0451.

Retreat offers food for spirit

The Military Council of Catholic Women will be sponsoring a retreat to Blessed Trinity on Nov. 6. The topic for discussion will be "Faith Within the Family."

Reservations must be made by Oct. 31. For reservations, call Marianne Tennant at 687-0451 or Sondra Broussard at 687-1518.

Seminar required before baptism

There will be a pre-baptism class Sunday at 1:30 p.m. in the Religious Educaton Center, building 229. Parents who plan to have their children baptised in the Catholic Church are required to attend the class.

The class is open to those who are expecting as well as those who have given birth.

Lavoie plans appreciation day

The Lavoie Manor Chapel will present a choir appreciation day for their Youth Choir Sunday. The choir was organized three years ago, under the direction of Valerie Wedlock.

The purpose of the choir is to get the youth of the chapel more active in its ministry. There are 60 youth choir members. Mary Gauthier is the director and Chaplain John Krider is the chaplain supervisor.

"Join our team to help beat MS."

. . . Steve Garvey, Chairman, National MS Sports Committee

Multiple sclerosis, MS, is one of the cruelest diseases of all.

MS attacks the central nervous system, often crippling, and frequently resulting in total loss of coordination. MS is unpredictable. It strikes without warning, and once you've got it, you've got it for life. MS generally affects young adults in the prime years of their lives, making its blow particularly devastating emotionally and financially as well as physically. And almost 200 new cases are diagnosed every week in the U.S. alone.

There's no cure for MS so far, but researchers are working unrelentingly to find one. People in the sports world are teaming up to help in the fight. People like Jimmy Connors, Tom Seaver, Martina Navratilova, Ed "Too Tall" Jones, Lee Trevino and myself. But the most valuable player is still you. Won't you join us and send a check to your local MS chapter or to the National Multiple Sclerosis Society, 205 East 42nd Street, New York, New York 10017. Or call (212) 986-3240 to see how else you can help.

We must strike out MS. Because MS strikes at the worst possible time, just when you're starting to live.

The Craft Cabin will host its Christmas Holiday Fair Saturday from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Beautiful arts and crafts will be available for sale for the first time. Come and do your Christmas shopping early.

The OWC flea market begins at 8 a.m., so there should be something for everyone.

There will be artists and crafters giving demonstrations, hourly door prizes, and a photographer will be there to take pictures of your children with Santa and Rudolph.

The Craft Cabin is part of the Thrift Shop Complex, which is the ongoing service project of the Officers Wives' Club. The Craft Cabin is a unique aspect of the Thrift Shop in that all the items consigned are both new and handmade in comparison to the used items sold in the rest of the complex.

The Craft Cabin is a very different gift shop since all the items sold are made only by military personnel and their family members. The items sold in the Craft Cabin include paintings, needlework, woodwork and ceramics.

If you are looking for a shop to sell your arts and crafts, let the Craft Cabin assist you. All military I.D. card holders are eligible to consign their crafts. Come and sell your crafts at the Craft Cabin and share your talent with others.

The Craft Cabin and Thrift Shop Complex are located on Yeager Avenue between Lumpkin Road and Ingersoll Street. They are open every Tuesday and Thursday from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., and the first and third Saturdays of each month.

For more information, call 687-4830.

Twins

Both brothers will enter Airborne School after OSUT and hope to be assigned to the 82nd Airborne Division. They signed up for the GI bill, but both hope to make the Army a career.

All three sets of twins are fraternal, but with the OSUT haircut and dressed in BDUs, it is easy to see how the drill sergeants could be confused.

None of the twins knew they would be training in the same company when they arrived at Fort Benning. However, they all agreed it was a nice surprise.

None of the twins are assigned to the same platoon. Fred Brown, Ricky McLamb, and Patrick Hartman are in 4th Platoon; Greg Brown and Peter Hartman are in 1st Platoon; and Nicky McLamb is in 2nd Platoon. All six soldiers have an MOS of 11 Bravo.

"At least we already knew someone. It made it easier," said Patrick Hartman.

Peter Hartman is quick to add, "For the first week we were so busy we didn't even have time to talk to each other."

Staff Sgt. Ricky McGill started the cycle with 4th Platoon and had one of each set of twins. He recently moved to 1st Platoon, which has a Hartman and a Brown twin. "I don't think there is a lot of competition between the twins, but there is interest. They always want to know how the other one is doing, what he has accomplished that day."

What is MULTIPLE SCLEROSIS

Symptoms of multiple sclerosis vary greatly depending upon where the sclerosed patches are formed in the central nervous system. They may include tingling sensations, numbness, slurred speech, blurred or double vision, muscle weakness, poor coordination, unusual fatigue, muscle cramps, spasms, problems with bladder, bowel and sexual function, and paralysis. These symptoms may occur in any combination and can vary from very mild to very severe.

Time proves wisdom of changing to all-volunteer Army

By George C. Wilson
Washington Post Staff Writer

Editor's note: this article ran recently in the Washinton Post, is reprinted with permission.

Wayne T. Hewlett of Landover, Md., a 17-year old who grew up in Washington-area ghettos polluted by crime and drugs, was only 3 years old in 1972 when President Richard M. Nixon carved out an unexpectedly bright future for him. Hewlett is now living that bright future enthusiastically as an apprentice infantryman at this sprawling Army base outside Columbus.

He successfully completed his seven-week basic training course today.

Fifteen years ago, Nixon changed the lives of Hewlett and many other American teenagers by abandoning the draft and telling the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps to find ways to attract volunteers. It was a monumental gamble that appears to be paying off.

Weeks of Washington Post interviews with young trainees here, with no drill sergeant or officer in earshot, confirms what senior officers are claiming — that the All Volunteer Force has created a new generation of recruits who want to be in the Army and want to do well.

Hewlett is one of several Washington-area recruits who typify this new generation of American soldier. The youngest 17-year old in Delta Co. and the recruit selected to lead his platoon for most of basic training, Hewlett came from a divorced family, living sometimes in the Washington area with his mother and other times in Durham, N.C. with his father, a former Army sergeant.

"It was rough growing up," he said of life in northeast Washington and Seat Pleasant, Md. "Crime, drugs. Very rough. There was one point in high school where I didn't care. My father told me, 'You're going to have to make it into the service. You're going to be nothing in life unless you straighten up.'"

"And here I am in the Army. I joined to get away from home, for adventure, to get money for college. I can't believe basic is nearly over. In high school, I always wanted to be a leader, but was afraid of it. Now I've been platoon guide (leader). It's the biggest thing I've ever done. It's me. It's my passage to manhood. I'm going airborne (into paratrooper training)."

A greater incentive than Army starting pay for Hewlett and the thousands of other high school graduates joining the Army today is the amount of money they can put away for college by doing a four-year hitch in a combat branch like the infantry. Hewlett and his comrades-in-arms can end up with $25,200 in the bank for college after four years of Army service. The Army and Veterans Administration will contribute $24,000 of that total; the soldier $1200.

Army leaders are inclined to call the generation of soldiers they lead as the best ever. Gen. John A. Wickham Jr., recently departed Army chief, did so repeatedly in talking about today's soldier. But the officer in charge of training the new breed here on the ground goes beyond the headquarters huzzahs and tells why he believes the Army has completed a 180-degree turn that "the country hasn't been told about."

"It's a different environment," said Col. Richard S. Siegfried, whose job as commander of the U.S. Army Training Center here is to turn 30,000 teenagers a year into "hard-bellied infantrymen."

"These guys in training are not here because some judge sent them here by saying you can't make it in society, so I'm going to let the Army square you away. They're not here because they're trying to get away from mom and dad; not because they can't find a job. They volunteered to be here. They want to succeed. If they aren't trying hard to succeed, they will be punished by being sent home, not the other way around. These guys want to do well; want to become part of the team. That all by itself creates an atmosphere that you see all around you."

What has made the difference? "National pride," Siegfried asserted as he walked around the office here occupied by Gen. George S. Patton while he was at Benning developing World War II tactics. "A lot of it came out of Washington, D.C. — Ronald Reagan. There's a renaissance — a new 'Let's come to grips with Vietnam, finally.' — a new willingness to say, 'Hey, it's an honorable thing to be a serviceman or woman.' It's an upsurge the country doesn't know about."

The Post focused for the past three weeks on the 200-member Delta Company of the 5th Battalion of the 1st Infantry Brigade. The Army imposed no restrictions on interviewing trainees. The young recruits in scores of interviews said that they see joining the military as a step up; that they want to do well; that they believe the profession of arms is an honorable one. For them, Vietnam is as remote as World War I is to their parents.

John Brooks, 19, of College Park, Md., like Hewlett, said he believed the Army could make him live up to its recruiting slogan, "Be All You Can Be." He said during an interview on the Sand Hill training complex that he broke off his studies at the University of Maryland and "joined the Army to get disciplined. I had no incentive. My grades were slipping. I wanted discipline, and I wanted to save money, so I would not have to borrow to finish college. I'm glad I joined."

Dallas Henderson, 18, a graduate of Fairfax County's Lake Braddock High School, said that even after 17-hour days of pushups, crawling under barbed wire, running four miles, being yelled at by drill sergeants and sleeping on the ground where Georgia's red fireants bite all night long, he was still glad he signed up for the infantry because it would lead him where he wanted to go in life.

"I joined most of all for the college," he said.

His father, a carpenter, and his mother, a legal secretary, are divorced. "I didn't want to ask them for a college money. I get a little homesick once in a while," Henderson continued. "So I called my mother. She sent me back a whole mess of pictures of my friends right away. She's great. She's more like a sister to me than a mother."

Barry Williams, 21, of Dallas, is among the blacks interviewed who said he found the Army a less prejudiced employer than the civilian employers he had been working for, most recently as a $4.10-an-hour dishwasher in a restaurant. "In the Army," he said, "I learned that if you give respect, you get respect."

Blacks still tend to stick together in off-hours and in the dining hall. Drill sergeants, perhaps mindful of Vietnam-era racial polarization, often integrate the groupings. "Drill Sgt. Rodriquez will come over when a bunch of us are sitting together," said Hewlett, "and say, 'We need to put a little vanilla ice cream in with all this chocolate sauce."

At times, the young troops in training cannot contain their enthusiasm. After crawling up a hill in the August heat, shooting down targets with his M-16 rifle and hurling grenades until he took the hill, one sweaty recruit turned to his drill sergeant and yelled, "Sergeant. I love this stuff" — or somthing of that nature.

Siegfried said that as the training commander "I have to believe accidents are bolts of lightning, that heat injuries can and must be avoided." A few drill sergeants have been reprimanded for not being attentive enough to the danger of overheating trainees. An investigation of the Granoth case is underway.

Drill sergeants say they must walk the fine line between training soldiers to fight in places as hot as Nicaragua while not overheating a group of American teenagers, many of whom never experienced hot summers.

Weeks of observation did not find Army drill sergeants systematically debasing recruits in ways portrayed in such Hollywood movies as "Full Metal Jacket." They bawl out errant recruits by calling them "hero" and "yo-yo" far more often than resorting to the old standards such as "maggot" and earthier street expressions.

"I probably have a drill sergeant out there right now abusing one of my recruits, and it hurts me," Siegfried said. "But I think we're getting through. I don't want to demean people and tear them down to nothing and build them back up into something, because we could just build an Army of robots that way.

"I want to build on God-given talent. You take 50 men and try and build on each one's capabilities — that's a very difficult leadership challenge. Tearing them all down and treating them like no-names, making them like automatons is a much simpler thing to do.

"You want a drill sergeant who makes his men say, 'He's good. I want to be like him.' All my life I've been trying to live up to my old drill sergeant, Carl Burton. He was the best man at my wedding, gave me seven bucks and loaned me his '57 Ford, so I could entertain Maggie (his bride) for two days."

Sgt. 1st Class Raul Rodriguez is one of the most popular drill sergeants in Delta Co., with his immediate superiors and the trainees. He relies more on gentle humor than nose-to-nose shouting to make his points. A slow trainee is likely to hear Rodriguez tell him that "you've got a bad case of mucosis — iron in the blood, which turns to lead in the butt." The ensuing laughter makes the recruit move faster.

One morning Rodriguez "dropped" trainee Harold Hudson, 18, of Omaha, for shaking cornflakes into his mouth when he was supposed to be standing at attention. Being dropped means doing pushups for punishment. Later in the day Rodriguez turned the incident into a tutorial for the whole company, ordering "Munchies" to stand up and engage in this dialogue:

Rodriguez: "Explain to everybody, Munchies, the proper position of attention."

Munchies: "The proper position of attention is feet on the line at a 45-degree angle; legs straight, not locked; knees slightly bent; back straight; chest slightly out."

Rodriguez: "Outstanding. You could be a drill sergeant, couldn't you?"

Munchies: "No, drill sergeant."

Rodriguez: "Yes, you could. Not only that, tell everybody what your IQ is."

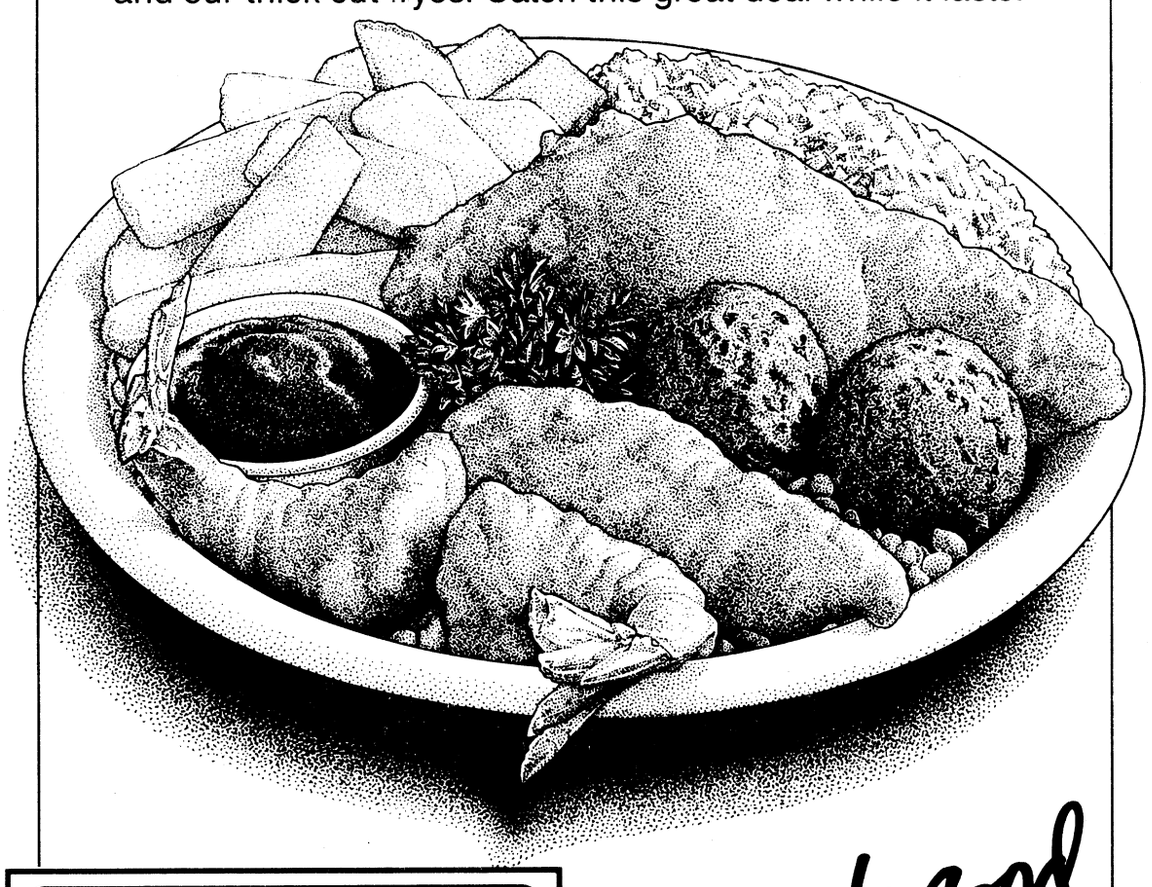
Munchies: "About 150."

Rodriguez: "Very outstanding. You're a good man, Munchies. Now tell everybody why you got dogged out."

Munchies: "Because I ate cereal while we were in formation; while we were supposed to be at attention."

Rodriguez: "Now, was that the proper position of attention?"

Munchies: "No, drill sergeant."



Rodriguez: "Thank you. Have a seat. Listen up, men; listen up. You think it's funny. But the main ingredient of a successful military unit is the discipline of its soldiers. I'm not picking on you Munchies, there, but just to give you a good example, right? If you're in a combat situation and you have to depend on the guy next to you, and instead of watching the perimeter, he's munching down some cereal — the next thing you know you've got a bayonet up your ass, and you'll want to know where your buddy was."

Some of the old problems persist, such as the occasional insensitivity to heat problems.

But pride in soldiering, so hard to find in the early 70s, is indisputably back. The spirit of the new GIs was summed up by marching troops on a recent August afternoon as they chanted in cadence, "We're standing tall; we're looking good; we ought to be in Hollywood; one-two; three-four."

Engineers take time out for some 'R and R'

Two 43rd Engineer Battalion soldiers row their canoe to the finish line.

Organization days give soldiers welcome time to enjoy family fun, wholesome competitions

By Shawn Bryson and Mark Moffat
36th Engineer Group correspondents

For most of the soldiers of the 36th Engineer Group, Oct. 9, was a day of festivities and food. Both the 67th Maintenance Battalion and the 43rd Engineer Battalion held organization days for the soldiers and their families.

The 67th Maintenance Battalion pulled out all the stops as it soldiers and family members got together at Sgt. Major's field here.

The day was filled with competition as the separate companies competed in volleyball, softball and horseshoes. One of the most popular events of the day was the water balloon throw, in which commanders were prey to revenge-seeking soldiers from the battalion.

When the scores were tallied, the 608th ordinance company had swept all but one of the events. The only other winner was the 598th Maintenance Co., which took the softball competition.

While the 608th soldiers were tops on the sports side of the day, it's hard to say which of the companies devoured the most food during a feast that only the 67th food service personnel could provide.

On Oct. 9, with a beautiful cloudless blue sky above, two months of planning provided an outstanding organization day at King's Pond for the soldiers and families of the 43rd Engineer Battalion (Combat-Heavy). The battalions special day was planned and organized by the battalions executive officers so that each soldier and family could enjoy some friendship, company-level competition and good food.

The battalion's four organic companies and the 586th Engineer Co. (Assault Float Bridge) began a grueling competition after the battalion commander, Lt. Col. Charles S. Rust, presented some of the battalions and separate company's past heritage. Upon the presentation of the battalion trophy from Alpha Co., who won the competition last year, the games began.

The 10-event competition provided a variety of competitive games and sports that each company hoped to win so that they could take the battalion trophy home to their company area for the next year. Several of the critical events included a three-mile run, volleyball, canoe race, and a tug of war.

In addition to the fierce company competition, the soldiers and families enjoyed a great feast of steak, ribs, chicken, picnic salads and plenty of drinks prepared by the battalions dining facility soldiers. Each company also

Come to the SHRIMP-A-PEEL — Friday, from 6-8:30 p.m. in the Supper Club. If you love shrimp, you'll love this seafood special featuring all the boiled, unpeeled shrimp you care to eat, along with sliced roast beef, assorted salads, French fries, assorted rolls, beverage, fruit cobbler and more for only $10.50 for members and their guests, and $14.95 for non-members. Note: The Lexington Room will be closed for this event.

Celebrate National Boss Day — Friday, from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. in the Supper Club. Lunch will be provided at half price for all bosses who are treated by their secretaries (who are FBOC members) in recognition of National Boss Day. You will have a choice of two hot food specials, a "Buy the Ounce Salad and Sandwich Bar," or a combination of the two, at half the regular menu price for the Boss.

Surf & Turf Nite — A bacon wrapped filet mignon with crab legs is featured on Saturday nights in the Lexington Room for only $7.95 for members (and their bona fide guests) and $11.95 or non-members.

Community Recreation — Uchee Creek Recreation Area is located on the Alabama side of Fort Benning. Fish along the river or down the creek and turn an otherwise dull afternoon into an enjoyable day. A boat ramp and docking facilities are provided.

If you enjoy camping, Uchee Creek offers 30 camping pads with water, electricity and a centralized dump station for $3 a day.

The Uchee Creek Recreation Area also offers Uchee Creek Lodge, which features a fireplace, refrigerator, icemaker and can seat up to 150 people. This lodge is available to military personnel for $30. Unit functions can be coordinated through the Information Tour & Travel office at 545-7535/4155. Picnic tables and grills are also in the area.

Picnicking, lodging, camping, canoe rental, fishing, boat ramp, boat rental and bait shop are available.

Screening process identifies family members with problems

EFMP coordinator

Soldiers going overseas, whether they plan to take family members or not, are required to have the medical records of all family members screened by the Exceptional Family Member Program coordinator at Martin Army Community Hospital.

The purpose of the screening is for identification of exceptional family members who must be enrolled in the EFMP when found to have medical conditions, educational disabilities or other types of support needs.

This includes children requiring speech/language therapy, special education requirements or medically-related problems; as well as adults with medically-related problems or other support needs.

The EFMP is a mandatory Department of the Army program which became effective Aug. 1, 1986.

"What is the purpose? is frequently asked. In addition to the above, if soldiers do not have their family members screened immediately after receiving notice of pending overseas assignments, they may discover later that family member travel has not been approved. If during the screening process a medical condition or educational condition is found to exist, then a series of DA questionnaires must be completed prior to completion of the screening.

In some instances, these questionnaires must be coordinated with other facilities which could result in additional delay in finalizing the family member screening process for overseas deployment.

A large number of soldiers and spouses are still unfamiliar and uninformed on the program and its requirements. If you are unsure whether a family member qualifies for enrollment in EFMP or if you are alerted for an overseas assignment, you can contact Helen Moore, EFMP coordinator, at 544-4350, for further information and for scheduling required appointments. Walk-ins cannot be seen due to the large number of daily scheduled screenings/enrollments.

If Ms. Moore is unavailable when you telephone, you may leave your name and phone numbers and she will return your call (usually the same day). Messages should be as clear as possible to allow prompt reply.

Appointments are usually scheduled within a three-day time frame and, in most instances, screenings are completed the same day. Exceptions to this are when enrollment in EFMP is needed; then completion of family member screening could be delayed.

In any event, the entire process must be finalized within a 15-day time frame in order for MILPOS to prepare the necessary packets for the gaining commanders.

VA Q&A

Veterans Administration

EDITOR'S NOTE: Following are representative questions answered daily by VA counselors. Full information is available at any VA office.

Q: Does the new GI Bill, which was started July 1, 1985 have an ending date for participation by active-duty military personnel?

A: This program was made permanent on June 1. It was redesignated the Montgomery GI Bill with no termination date.

Q: I was denied reimbursement for a privately-purchased headstone because I purchased it prior to my husband's death. Is this correct?

A: Yes. Reimbursement may only be paid for a headstone or marker purchased after a veteran's death. If a headstone or marker was purchased prior to a veteran's death, an allowance may be paid for separate charges for engraving the existing headstone or marker following the death.

Q: Is there a maximum VA-guaranteed home loan?

A: Depending upon the income of the veteran, lenders will approve a loan up to four times the maximum VA loan guaranty of $27,500 with no down payment. Beyond that amount of $110,000, lenders usually require a down payment.

Q: I am attending college full time under the GI Bill. If I reduce my status to part time, do I need to notify the VA?
