Benning strives for IOE

Commanding General's message: The goal of our Installation of Excellence program is to continually improve the image of Fort Benning, making it a pleasing and pleasant place to live and work. The program contributes significantly to Fort Benning by bettering the environment of our soldiers, their families and visitors.

By setting standards for all design and maintenance processes, the IOE program has made Fort Benning a more attractive installation. Some notable improvements include the color coordinated exterior painting scheme of the buildings, the standardized brown signs, the reduction of visual clutter, landscaping of barren areas and upgrading of building interiors.

I encourage you to strive to better the quality of life at Fort Benning by working with the Director of Engineering and Housing in following the IOE's Installation Design Guide and utilizing DEH's U-Do-It program. Remember, however, this is not a DEH program alone. It is a post program.

I charge each of you to show your pride in Fort Benning and do your part to help us upgrade its appearance even more. With most of our major projects completed, it is now attention to detail that is critical in fulfilling our drive towards total excellence.

At the Home of the Infantry, we must aggressively pursue excellence in all areas. Join together in doing your part to make Fort Benning the standard of excellence for all TRADOC installations.

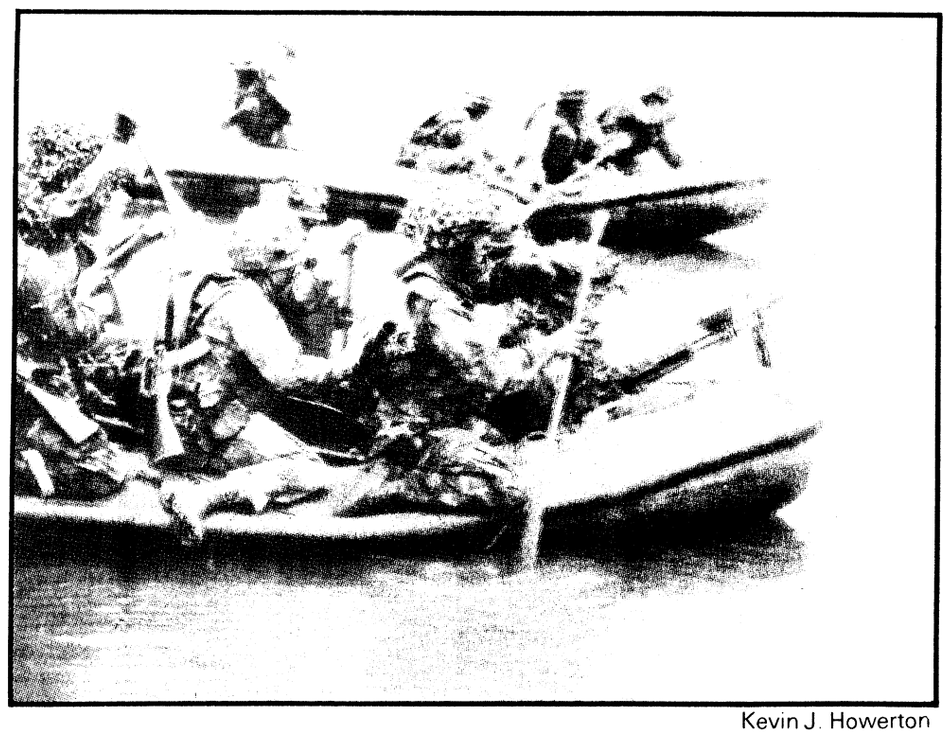
Building dedicated to family group

1st Battalion, 507th Parachute Infantry Regiment has designated a building in their battalion area to house the units' family support group.

According to Maj. Danny Greene, executive officer, 1st Bn., 507th PIR, CSM Edwin Thompson was the driving force behind finding a place for the women to conduct their meetings.

"He did this because the women were always having problems finding a place to do their projects for the families in the unit," Greene said.

Greene added that once a building was found another man became the driving force behind making sure the building was in order.



"1st Sgt. Gary Jenkins took a big interest in making sure all the repairs were made to the building and that it was adequately furnished," he said.

The story for whom the building was named for is as unique as having a family support group building at all.

The building was named Tullidge Hall after Sgt. George Bowler Tullidge who served with the 507th during World War II.

What is special about Tullidge is a book of poems and prayers that his mother sent him in a form of a book during the war. After his death, it was found that the young

Montgomery GI Bill takes effect June 30

Army Continuing Education System

An important date for all Vietnam-Era G.I. Bill eligibles is June 30. Active duty personnel who are currently covered by the Vietnam-Era G.I. Bill need to make sure they qualify for conversion to the Montgomery G.I. Bill (MGIB) by this date. Conversion is not necessarily automatic.

A key provision of the authorization to convert from the Vietnam-Era G.I. Bill to the MGIB is that each individual must have completed the requirements for a high school diploma, a state General Education Development (GED) certificate, or a USAFI equivalency.

Personnel holding only the USAFI equivalency should visit one of the Education Center Branches (Main Post, Sightseeing Road, Kelley Hill, Harmony Church or Sand Hill) to discuss the limitations of the USAFI equivalency.

Individuals who do not meet the high school diploma requirement must initiate testing prior to the June 30 date to qualify for conversion.

Failure to complete the requirement for a high school diploma will automatically disqualify individuals for the conversion. That disqualification means that Vietnam-Era G.I. education benefits will then no longer be available after December 31, 1989.

If you have any doubt about your status, play it safe and visit the nearest Education Center Branch.

Day set aside to honor flag

By Mike Simmons
TRADOC News Service

Tuesday is National Flag Day, a special day set aside for Americans to honor the national banner.

Too often we take the flag for granted. We see it and perhaps experience a short-lived tingle of pride, but we really don't stop to think about our many freedoms, or to give thanks that we Americans have been so fortunate through the years:

So fortunate to have had men and women who were willing to die for their country, and for which it stands; so fortunate to have had national leaders gifted with intelligence and courage; so fortunate to have had a bountiful land filled with natural resources; and, of course, so fortunate to have had a people who had the vision to see the wrongs in our land, and the courage to correct them.

Today we are a nation filled with many people of many professions, many political and religious beliefs and many differing lifestyles, yet we are bound together by a great love for country.

The flag represents all that and more. It represents the freedom we enjoy when we exercise our right to say what we think. And it represents our unqualified right to seek in our own individual ways "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness."

Take a minute or two and think about "Old Glory" and all the freedoms it represents. It is more than a collection of stars and stripes. The colors represent the very qualities of the American spirit: red for hardiness and courage, white for purity and innocence, blue for vigilance and justice.

Flag Day is a call to the colors. It is a time to take pride in who we are, to show our unity before the whole world.

Be a part of this national celebration. On June 14, display your flag.

Then at 7 p.m. (EDT) pause for a moment to recite the Pledge of Alligence, along with millions of other Americans who will pause for the cause.

Faith School teams win top honors in world competition

By Beth Middlemiss
Fort Benning Schools

Two teams from Faith Middle School won top awards in the World Finals of the Odyssey of the Mind at the University of Maryland last week.

Regina O'Brien, state director of Odyssey of the Mind said that this was an exciting win since no team from Georgia has ever scored higher than honorable mention in the World Finals competition.

"We gave it our all," said Loren Magruder of the "Comics team, which took first place. "We had a lot of support from our parents, our coaches and from the members of both of our Odyssey teams."

Odessey of the Mind is a problem-solving competition in which students compete against their peers. The Odyssey of the Mind competition was begun 10 years ago by a New Jersey college professor. It is a program that provides students a mental challenge through problem-solving activities. The two categories are long-term problem solving — students have several months to find a solution and short-term problem solving — students must find a solution during the competition.

The "Comics" team - Jennifer George, Troy Hutchins, Loren Magruder, Dana May, Chris Moore, Danny Segal, and Pontress Webb took first place in the junior high events with a skit they created to bring cartoon characters to life.

"Comics" team also won the Renatra Fusca Award for creativity. This was a remarkable accomplishment since first place and the Renatra Fusca Award are not usually awarded to the same team.

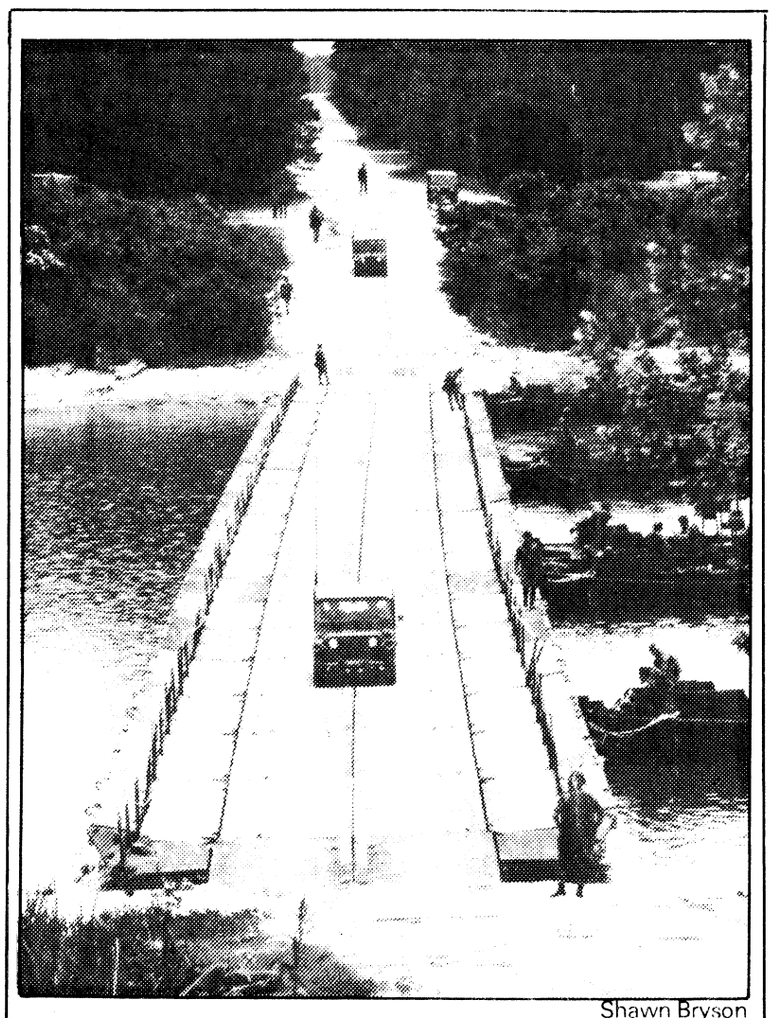
In this year's competition, more than 650 seven-student teams from the United States, Canada, Mexico and the Republic of China were involved in several categories.

The "Comics" team competed against 53 other teams to take the top honors in its category.

The "It's Showtime" team Gina Barlotta, Nicole Dondelinger, Nathan Graham, Sterling Harris, Ahmad Hernandez, Tara Norton, Amanda Ritchie and Patrick Williamson took ninth place in its category after competing against 47 other teams.

An excited but tired group of students and their coaches, Libbie Kurinec and Joan Hutchins, brought a trophy, a plaque and certificates back to Fort Benning.

"This was a great experience,"said Jennifer George. "I won't ever forget it. It brought out things in us we never knew we had."



1955 voting act recommends states amend absentee laws

Army News Service

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is part two of a five part series on the voting assistance program.

The Federal Voting Assistance Act of 1955 (PL 84-296) although a statute, has an unusual feature it is recommendatory in form. It recommended to the States that they amend their absentee voting laws in order to provide a simplified method of absentee registration and voting for four categories of people:

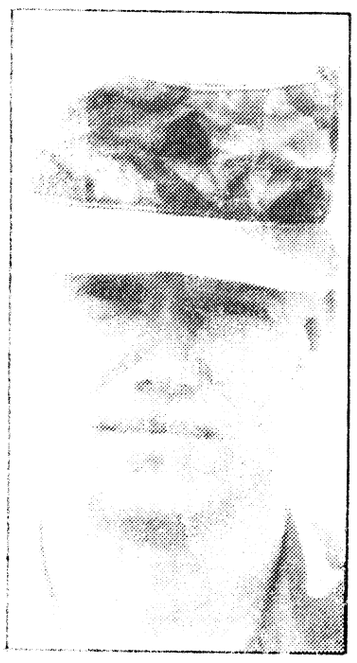
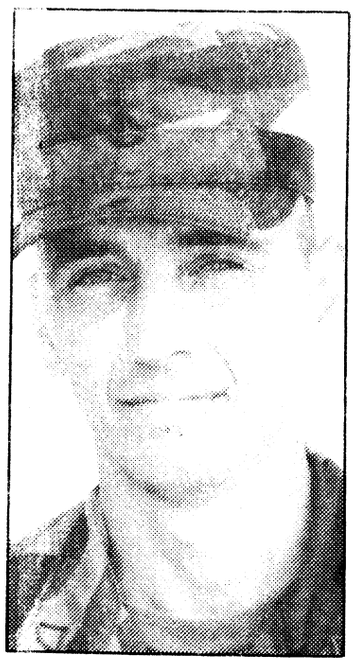
OPINION



VARIOUS VOICES: June 14 is National Flag Day. What does the American Flag mean or symbolize to you?



Sgt. Carl Powell, Company D, 197th Infantry Support Battalion — "The American flag is representative of our country as a whole, united society."

SSgt. Richard Allen, 988th Military Police Company — "Overall, the flag means freedoms such as the freedom to speak and do as we please."

Sgt. Harry Devine, Company C, 1st Battalion, 58th Infantry, 197th Infantry Brigade — "It simply means freedom and is a symbol of a safe nation."

PFC Clifton Loyd, Company C, 1st Battalion, 507th PIR — "The flag is a symbol of patriotism. The stars and stripes tell a lot about America's history and reminds me of others who have given so much for their country."

Janie Johnson, AAFES Mini-Mall manager — "When I see the American flag, I see freedom. It represents the beautiful states that we live in."

Officials crack down on shabby yards

By Clyde Snively
USAIC Public Affairs Office

This newspaper, in conjunction with the Directorate of Engineering and Housing is embarking on a five-week campaign to buck up the post's appearance.

I've always thought of Fort Benning as a rather lovely post, but apparently it isn't lovely enough. The powers that be want to make it even better in order to win TRADOC's Installation of Excellence Award.

Our major, who told us about the campaign and gave us our marching orders, said that one of the biggest weaknesses was yards.

"They're serious guys," he said. "Yard patrols are being sent out, and if your yard is looking shabby, you get ticketed. Three tickets and you walk, in other words, move off post."

"When will you be moving?" I muttered, knowing the major disdains yard work.

"What?" he asked.

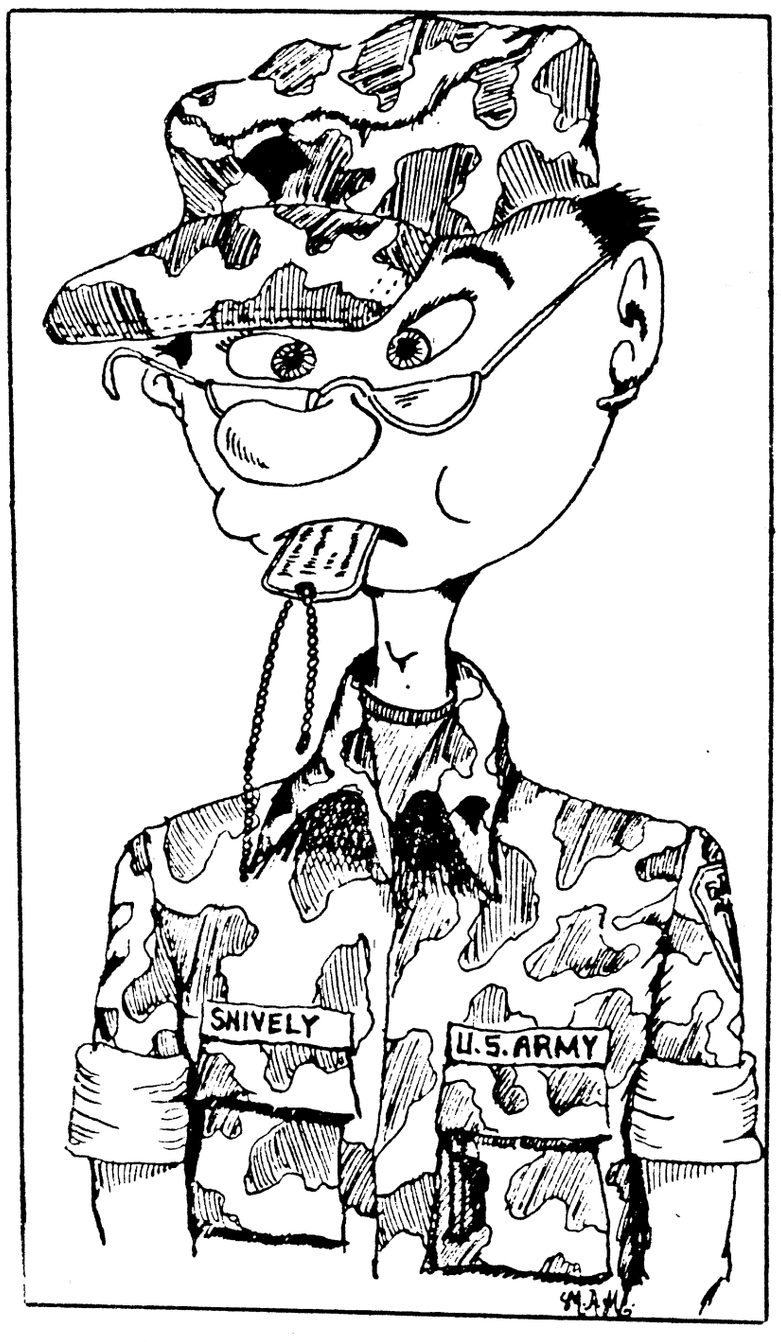
"Nothing," I answered.

The major also noted that post officials aren't just talking about mowing the grass. They want the entire yard looking good. And for those who don't water the lawn, figuring without water it won't grow, ergo, they won't have to mow it, they are also talking reports of survey. Let your yard die, and you'll end up reimbursing the government what it costs to resod it."

As the major droned on about yard maintenance and the "total picture," as he likes to phrase it, I got to thinking about possible reasons people on post could have for neglecting their yards.

All it takes is a little effort on the part of the occupant, and if the soldier plays his cards right, he can convince his spouse that yard work and watering are good exercises so he can spend Saturdays sipping suds, watching TV while the spouse labors in the petunia patch.

When we moved into our off post house, the deal we struck with the landlady was a rent reduction if we'd keep the yard looking good. Sounded like a deal to me as I figured all we'd need to do was water and mow the lawn and plant a few geraniums.



Wrong. That ain't the way it works here in the south. Ya gotta fertilize, weed, spray for vermin, spray for dry rot, wet rot, whatever. It can get expensive, believe me — unless, of course you live on post where all the necessary ingredients are free along with expert advice.

We off post residents also pay for our water, which, while not cheap is made even more expensive because for every drop of water that goes through your pipes, be it for watering a lawn or flushing your commode, the old sewer costs go up, these costs being based directly on the amount of water you use.

Guess what. I'm not sympathetic to on post people who neglect their yards. Their only excuse is, they're lazy. Unfortunately, there must be plenty of them around as even a short drive about post will attest.

My suggestion to the major was that we run a picture of the "yard of the week" in The Bayonet. It would be of the worse looking yard with questions under the picture like, "how much longer will these people be living on post," or "do you think the people living here are invalids?"

Somehow I don't think this paper will do that. I could see the major wondering what kind of caption we'd put under a picture of his yard, something like "awaiting fall harvest."

I think the excuse he uses for not cutting is that he's waiting for his sheep to arrive, contending that using sheep instead of lawn mowers cuts down and noise and other pollutants.

Safety should be integrated into all training

Our Army's senior leadership has provided great momentum in safety. We, the noncommissioned officers, must keep the momentum and build on it. We must intergrate safety into all aspects of training and emphasize the importance of the NCO corps' involvement in making safety happen.

As trainers, we are the first contact soldiers have with the Army NCOs. We have the opportunity to make our soldiers safety smart and instill in them good safety habits before they develop bad ones.

Your soldiers benefit from your knowledge and leadership traits. The standards you set for them in their first month's training will follow them throughout their careers. You must set the pace for them — be involved in their safety and ensure they understand the importance of safety in all their activities, both on and off duty.

I fully support Sergeant Major of the Army Julius W. Gates' philosophy of our role in safety, as expressed in his recent message.

SAFETY IS THE WAY OF LIFE IN TRADOC — NCOS MAKE IT HAPPEN.

Flag sympolizes land of free, home of brave

By J.D. Bender
2nd HB Chaplain

Whenever I see the colors of Old Glory flying in the breeze, I think about the phrase, Stars and Stripes forever! I feel proud to be an American, because the American flag symbolizes the land of the free and the home of the brave. I don't know about you, but the colors of the flag and its representation has a two-fold meaning to me as an American and a Christian.

First of all, I look at how far our flag has come since Betsy Ross designed the first American flag. The colors have a rich heritage and meaning to me. The red stripes represent the blood that was shed by many to make this land a free country. The white stripes represent the purity of an undefiled land, that invites the poor, lonely and unfortunate people to make a home. The blue represents the royalty of a rich country, both in heritage and resources. And finally, the white stars represent the 50 states that make our country a proud and prosperous land.

Historically, our flag represents the high price of respect paid by the thousands of Americans who died for it. It has been through the Revolutionary War and stood proudly as an American people gained their independence. The flag has been proudly displayed in every major war in which the United States was ever involved. It represented Americans who stand for liberty, freedom and justice for all.

Our flag was flown at the North Pole, representing the first country to send people there for exploration. Admiral Byrd and Matthew Henson, along with their crew of Eskimos, represented our country proudly by accomplishing such a task.

Our flag was the first to be displayed upon the moon by any human beings or country. Astronaut Neil Armstrong represented America by placing our flag on the moon and stating, "This is one giant step for man and one giant leap for mankind".

Our flag is being represented throughout the solar system on the satellite Sputnik. It shows American progress in the space age, because the Sputnik is the first satellite to observe the entire universe and solar system. From Valley Forge to the Milky Way, our flag has always been displayed proudly.

Secondly, the red, white and blue has significant meaning to me as a Christian. The red represents the precious blood that was shed for me, so that I might have a right to the tree of life. The white represents a pure and sacrificial lamb, who gave his life for me, because he loves me. And the blue represents peace and tranquility that I receive from the Lord's presence in my life.

All these remind me of my American motto: "In God We Trust," and that's what carried our flag through the years. The flag represents a country where all men are created equal. It stands for acceptance of all, regardless of race, color, creed or national origin. And, the flag stands for a country where there is freedom of religion, speech and equality and the high price that was paid by the Americans to make it possible.

So let us remember on June 14 that our American flag will celebrate its birthday. And as you view the flag, as I do every day, remember with a deeper feeling the words written by Sir Francis Scott Key:

O say can you see, by the dawn's early light,
What so proudly we hailed at the twilight's last gleaming,
Whose broad stripes and bright stars through the perilous fight,
O'er the ramparts we watched were so gallantly streaming?
And the rockets' red glare, the bombs bursting in air,
Gave proof through the night that our flag was still there;
O say, does that Star-spangled Banner yet wave
O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave?
Happy Birthday to the American Flag!

Fraternity presents Kappan award

USAIC Public Affairs Office

W. Charles Harvey was the recipient of the Kappan of the Year award for 1988 from the Chattahoochee Valley, Ga., Chapter 1226, at its annual picnic recently.

The 251 member chapter of the Phi Belta Kappa Fraternity has named the award in memory of Dr. Nathan M. Patterson, a distinquished Muscogee County school administrator. The honorary fraternity recognizes leadership, research and service in education.

Harvey, who has been an education specialist for the U.S. Army Infantry School since 1967 and an adjunct associate professor of English at the Fort Benning branch of Troy State University since 1976, is a charter member of the chapter.

He served as second vice-president (Program Chairman) in 1978-79, first vice-president (Membership Chairman) in 1979-80, president during the Diamond Jubilee (75th Year) of PDK in 1980-81, alternate delegate from 1982-86, and delegate from 1986-88.

He was recognized for his many years of service to the chapter in various capacities, including his role as a member of the initiation team.

Expressing his surprise and appreciation, Harvey thanked the members for the outstanding honor and promised his support for many years to come.

Host families needed for students

American Intercultural Student Exchange

Host families are being sought for high school students from Sweden, Norway, Denmark, Finland, Holland, Belgium, Austria, Switzerland, West Germany, Spain, France, Italy, Ecuador, Japan and Australia for 1988-1989 in a program sponsored by the American Intercultural Student Exchange (AISE).

The students, ages 15 through 17, will arrive in the United States in August 1988, attend a local high school and return to their home countries in June 1989. The students, all fluent in English, have been screened by their school representatives in their home countries, have spending money and medical insurance.

Host families may deduct $50 per month for income tax purposes.

AISE is also interviewing American high school students ages 15 through 17 who would like to spend a high school year or semester in Australia.

Families interested in either program should contact the state coordinator at 1-800-SIBLING.

American Intercultural Student Exchange is a non-profit tax exempt educational organization dedicated to fostering international understanding. AISE has more than 600 area representatives, 48 state coordinators and regional offices in New York, Maryland, Ohio (2), Iowa, Minnesota, Tennessee, Mississippi, Texas, Kansas, Colorado and California.

soldier took much stock in the words his mother sent him.

Upon discovering how much Tullidge cherished the poems and prayers, his mother decided to publish it and named it the "Paratroopers Faith." 507th recieved permission to publish the book and every Airborne student who wants a copy may have one. The book has become a much cherished item in the airborne community.

Isn't it fitting that a man who had so much faith in the words his family sent him should have his name enshrined in the form of a building where people meet to help people.

CRIME STOPPERS

Columbus Police Department

Columbus crime stoppers and the Columbus Police Department are looking for the person or persons who are responsible for the burglary of the residence at 2500 Lookout Drive.

On May 18 at approximately 2:50 p.m., the Columbus Police Department responded to a burglary call at 2500 Lookout Drive. It was discovered that between the hours of 8:50 a.m. and 1 p.m., same date, some unknown person(s) unlawfully entered the home of Gary Griffin and stole in excess of $30,000 worth of silverware and jewelry. There appeared to be no sign of forced entry and there are no known suspects at this time.

There have also been four other reported burlaries and several car break-ins in this neighborhood during the last several weeks. It is not known at this time if these burglaries and break-ins are the work of the same person(s) or if they are by different persons.

Anyone having any information concerning this individual(s) or having information concerning this case should call Columbus Crime Stoppers at 571-5858. If your information leads to the arrest and indictment of this person(s) you could receive up to $1,000 in reward money.

Columbus Crime Stoppers also pays for information on other criminal activity, wanted fugitives and stolen property. The Crime Stoppers phone lines are open from 10 a.m. until 10 p.m. Monday through Friday. Crime Stoppers serves the Columbus, Fort Benning, Phenix City and Russell County areas.

The States were further asked to provide adequate ballot round-trip time and expedite registration and voting by airmail priorities. The Federal Government provided free air mail for all properly marked balloting material.

The most important provision of the Federal Voting Assistance Act was the recommendation to the states that they accept as application for registration, and for the ballot itself, a standard Federal form, now known as the Federal Post Card Application for Absentee Ballot (Standard Form 76), more commonly referred to as the FPCA.

This convenient form is distributed by the federal government to those persons covered by the act to provide an on location application for registration and balloting. Every state, commonwealth, and territory now provides absentee voting for members of the Armed Forces. The great majority provide a simplified method of absentee registration and voting for the members of the Armed Forces and for their family members. Over half of the states have met all the recommendations of the act. This act also directed the president to appoint the head of a Federal Department or agency to coordinate federal actions designed to assist absentee voters. President Eisenhower, by Executive Order No. 10646, Nov. 23, 1955, appointed the Secretary of Defense.

UNIT NEWS

Engineers support 197th's 'Sledgehammer II'

By Shawn Bryson
Bayonet staff writer

Although crossing the Chattahoochee River might not have been the highlight of the 197th Infantry Brigade's recent Sledgehammer II external evaluation training exercise, it was certainly something they could not have done without the help and support of the 586th Engineer Company (Assault Float Bridge), 67th Maintenance Battalion, 36th Engineer Group and the 166th Engineer Company (AFB), 145th Engineer Battalion, U.S. Army National Guard.

The engineer units gave the 1st Battalion, 58th Infantry and the 2nd Battalion, 18th Infantry bridging support during four river crossings, which started Sunday and continued through Wednesday of this week.

According to 1st Lt. Eddie Porter, S-2 officer for the 145th, the 166th arrived at Fort Benning last Saturday for its two weeks annual training period.

Porter explained that the joint training with the 197th units had been planned for some time. However, with the first bridging exercise scheduled for the day after the 166th arrival, the 586th was called upon to lend a hand. "The 586th really helped us out Sunday by taking up the slack. They did most of the bridging and rafting scheduled for that day," Porter said.

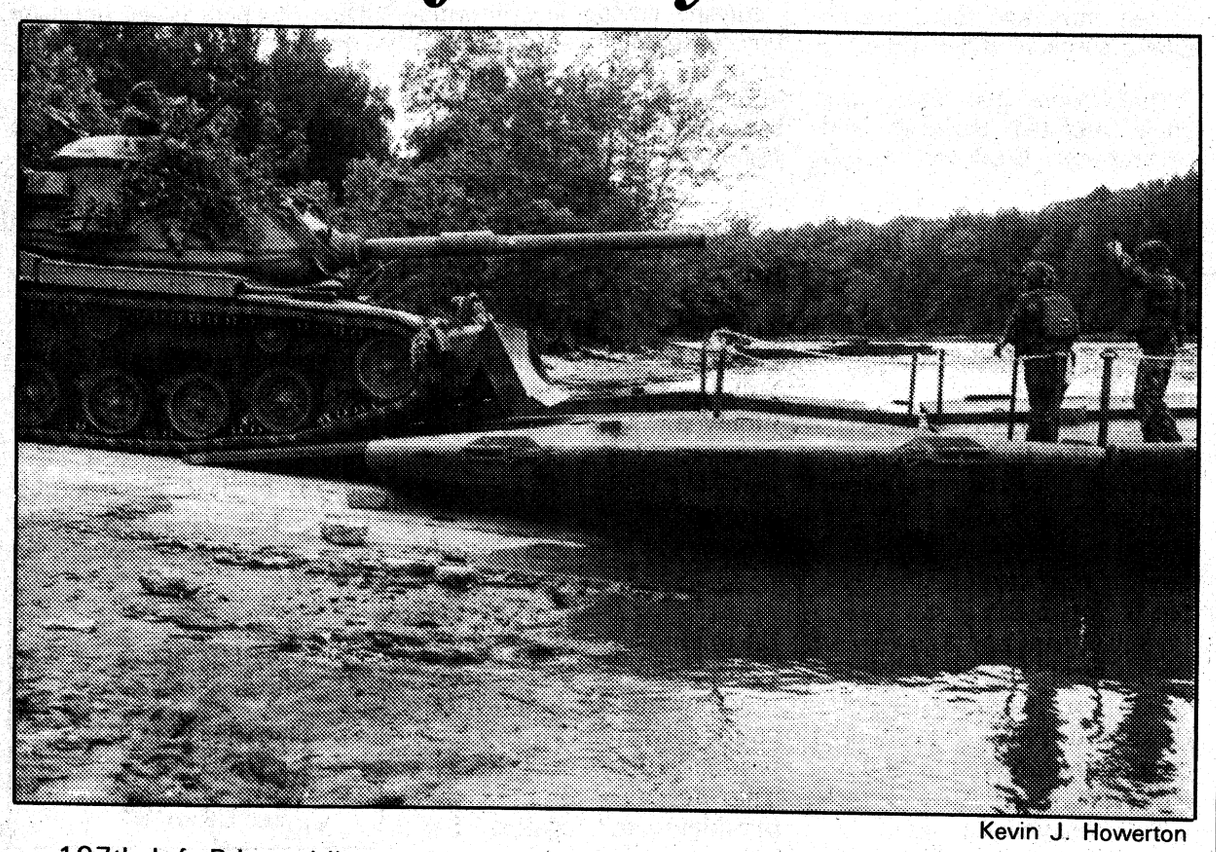
1st Lt. Thomas Smythe, executive officer of the 586th, explained that building a ribbon bridge is like a sixth sense to the AFB soldiers, and they can usually construct the bridge at a rate of about 600 feet per hour.

"Actually, building the bridge is the easy part of our mission when we provide bridging support to other units," Smythe commented. "The hard parts of the mission are all of the other things that must be done before and after building the bridge," he said.

Smythe said that before a single bay or MK-1 boat is dropped into the water, the other side of the river must be secured. He added that in war, an assault bridge river crossing is probably the most vunerable kind of obstacle due to the lack of cover and concealment. For that reason, air and artillary support are critical to a successful crossing.

After the reconnaissance and securing of the other side is complete, a bridgehead is established. Smythe described a bridgehead as the area left, right and forward of the bridge landing that slowly expands as more fire power is rafted across the river.

Smythe continued to explain that five- and six-float rafts are used when transporting the first vehicles, tanks and weapons across the river. The more the bridgehead is expanded, the better the chances of closing an entire bridge.



After closing the bridge, the rest of the unit crosses the river, and the work of the engineers continues.

"After they cross, our soldiers have to break down the bridge, load the bays and boats back on the trucks and catch up to the rest of the convoy. In many cases, we could catch back up within a few hours," Smythe said.

The 586th also helped out the 166th by providing any assets such as parts and maintenance facilities.

When the 166th's two weeks are completed at Fort Benning, the 167th Engineer Company, also from the 145th, will visit here for similar training.

197th Infantry conducts realistic river crossing

Kevin J. Howerton

197th Inf. Bde. soldiers guide a tank a bridge constructed over the Chattahoochee River during the brigade's "Sledgehammer II" exercise conducted recently.

By Kevin J. Howerton
197th Infantry Brigade correspondent

"Put the 60 up front, give me two men, give me four men," yelled the sergeant.

The soldiers from Company B, 1st Battalion, 58th Infantry; and the 72nd Engineer Company (Combat), scramble onto the small rubber boat, clinging to whatever they can to stay on. In less than a few minutes, the boat has been dragged from the heavy brush, packed with men and paddled into the river.

"This is the first time in a long time that the 197th Inf. Bde. has been able to conduct such a realistic river crossing," said Capt. Richard Nazario, brigade engineer officer.

The Task Force from 1st Bn., 58th Inf. is preparing to cross the Chattahoochee River, to take on the Task Force from 2nd Battalion, 18th Infantry in the Sledgehammer II exercises. The mission for the more than 50 soldiers from Co. B is to secure the far bank so that the 586th Engineer Company can install an Assault Ribbon Bridge to carry the main force across.

As soon as Co. B is in place, trucks from the 586th begin backing down into the water. The huge Assault Ribbon Bridge bays slide into the water, unfolding from the stowed position to form the sections of the bridge. Bridge Erection Boats gun their powerful engines to force the bays together so the bridge crew can latch them.

Once several sections are locked together, the boats start taking them downstream to the bridge site. But before the bridge can be completed, heavy vehicles must be landed on the other shore to ward off possible enemy attack.

The small bridge sections are brought to the bank, and Armored Personnel Carriers and High Mobility Multipurpose Wheeled Vehicles (HMMWVs) are loaded on. Then the boats are used to push the rafts across the river.

With the far bank secure, the small sections of bridge are joined together. Soldiers strain at ropes to pull the sections together while the boats force the unit into place.

With the floating bridge complete, the main body of TF 1-58 begins to roll across. More than 150 tracked and wheeled vehicles crossed the 450-foot-span.

10th Fld Arty opens new TACFIRE park

By Kevin J. Howerton
197th Infantry Brigade correspondent

The 2nd Battalion, 10th Field Artillery, recently opened a new park. But this isn't a park where you sit on the grass and eat a picnic lunch. This is the new Tactical Fire Direction (TACFIRE) park, designed to save the unit more than $50,000 a year.

The TACFIRE system is a computerized system the Field Artillery uses to increase the speed and accuracy of fire missions. Forward observers can communicate digitally with the TACFIRE computer shelter, which in turn, sends firing data to the appropriate battery.

The TACFIRE system requires electricity, which normally comes from the various vehicles and large field generators. The new TACFIRE park converts commercial electricity to power the system.

"The new TACFIRE park will cut down on the cost of training, and also provide a better environment for the soldiers to train," said Capt. Gregory N. Clark, 2nd Bn., 10th Fld. Arty.'s Battalion Fire Direction Officer.

The new park sits at the rear of the 2nd Bn., 10th Fld. Arty. motorpool. The vehicles that carry the TACFIRE system plug into the converted power lines that run from a small building to junction boxes at each vehicle's location. Fort Benning is the third post to intall this type of system.

"I've worked with the TACFIRE park in Fort Lewis, Washington and found it to be very beneficial," said SSgt. William K. McDonald, who operates the one of TACFIRE's main computers.

"The individual soldiers will get a lot more time to train on the TACFIRE," he added, "and we save wear and tear on generators, people and equipment."

The park was designed by the Directorate of Engineering and Housing branch at Fort Benning. Construction cost of the unit was $107,000, but it is expected to pay for itself in 22 months.

ASK THE JUDGE

By Dennis E. Brower
Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Q: I just received a telephone offer for a vacation at a very low price. The salesperson told me it was a limited offer and that I should immediately send a check or give my credit card number to reserve my vacation time. This really sounds like a bargain that I can't refuse. What should I do?

A: Be very careful of "free" or "reduced rate" vacation offers or travel club offers. If sound too good to be true, most of the time, they are. Recently, many consumer agencies have been reporting a large amount of fraudulent activity with these types of vacation offers. The companies usually offer coupons or complete travel arrangements for very low prices.

However, they almost always tell you that the offer is limited or part of a special advertising offer. All you have to do is pay, immediately, a small amount and your vacation papers/coupons will be sent to you. What most consumers are finding out is that after they pay, the paperwork never arrives, the trip is cancelled at a later time, the times offered for the vacation are at very undesirable times or the accommodations are not what was offered. Many times, the consumer will appear at the vacation site only to be told that there is no such offer, and the coupons are not any good. Other times, the offer only covers substandard travel and accommodations, and the consumer must pay large additional amounts of money to have an enjoyable and proper vacation.

The key to protecting yourself is to not purchase anything over the phone until you have fully checked it out. First, send no money, and do not provide your credit card number. Second, make sure that the offer is mailed to you so that you can see the contract, the guarantee and the cancellation policies. Finally, check with the Better Business Bureau, local consumer protection agencies, the legal assistance office, The Federal Trade Commission and local travel agents to see if the offer is a good one. It is also a good idea to call the vacation area to make sure the vacation plans are accurate. Remember to be very careful with anyone who sells over the telephone. If you have any questions, you should take the time to find the answers before you pay your money. Promises over the phone are very hard to prove.

AUSA CORNER

By Jim Gallagher
Chapter president

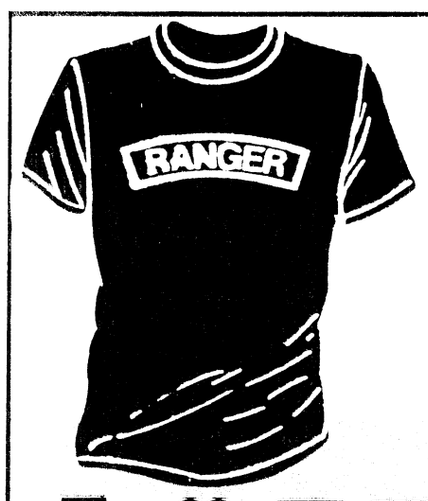
By the time this appears in print, the chapter will have said farewell to retired Maj. Gen. Robert F. Cocklin, executive vice-president of the Association of the United States Army since May 1.

Cocklin is retiring at the end of the month, but we hope he continues his interest and association with the Army and AUSA.

The chapter was fortunate to arrange for Bob as the speaker at the June quarterly breakfast and to get his view of AUSA and its supportive relationship with the Army over the years and especially now in the face of the dwindling defense budget.

Cocklin has been an influential and major force in the history of AUSA. He was the director of Public Affairs for AUSA at the time of its creation in 1950 and instituted the first AUSA National meeting in 1955, which incidentally was held at Fort Benning; since then the meetings have been held in Washington, D.C.

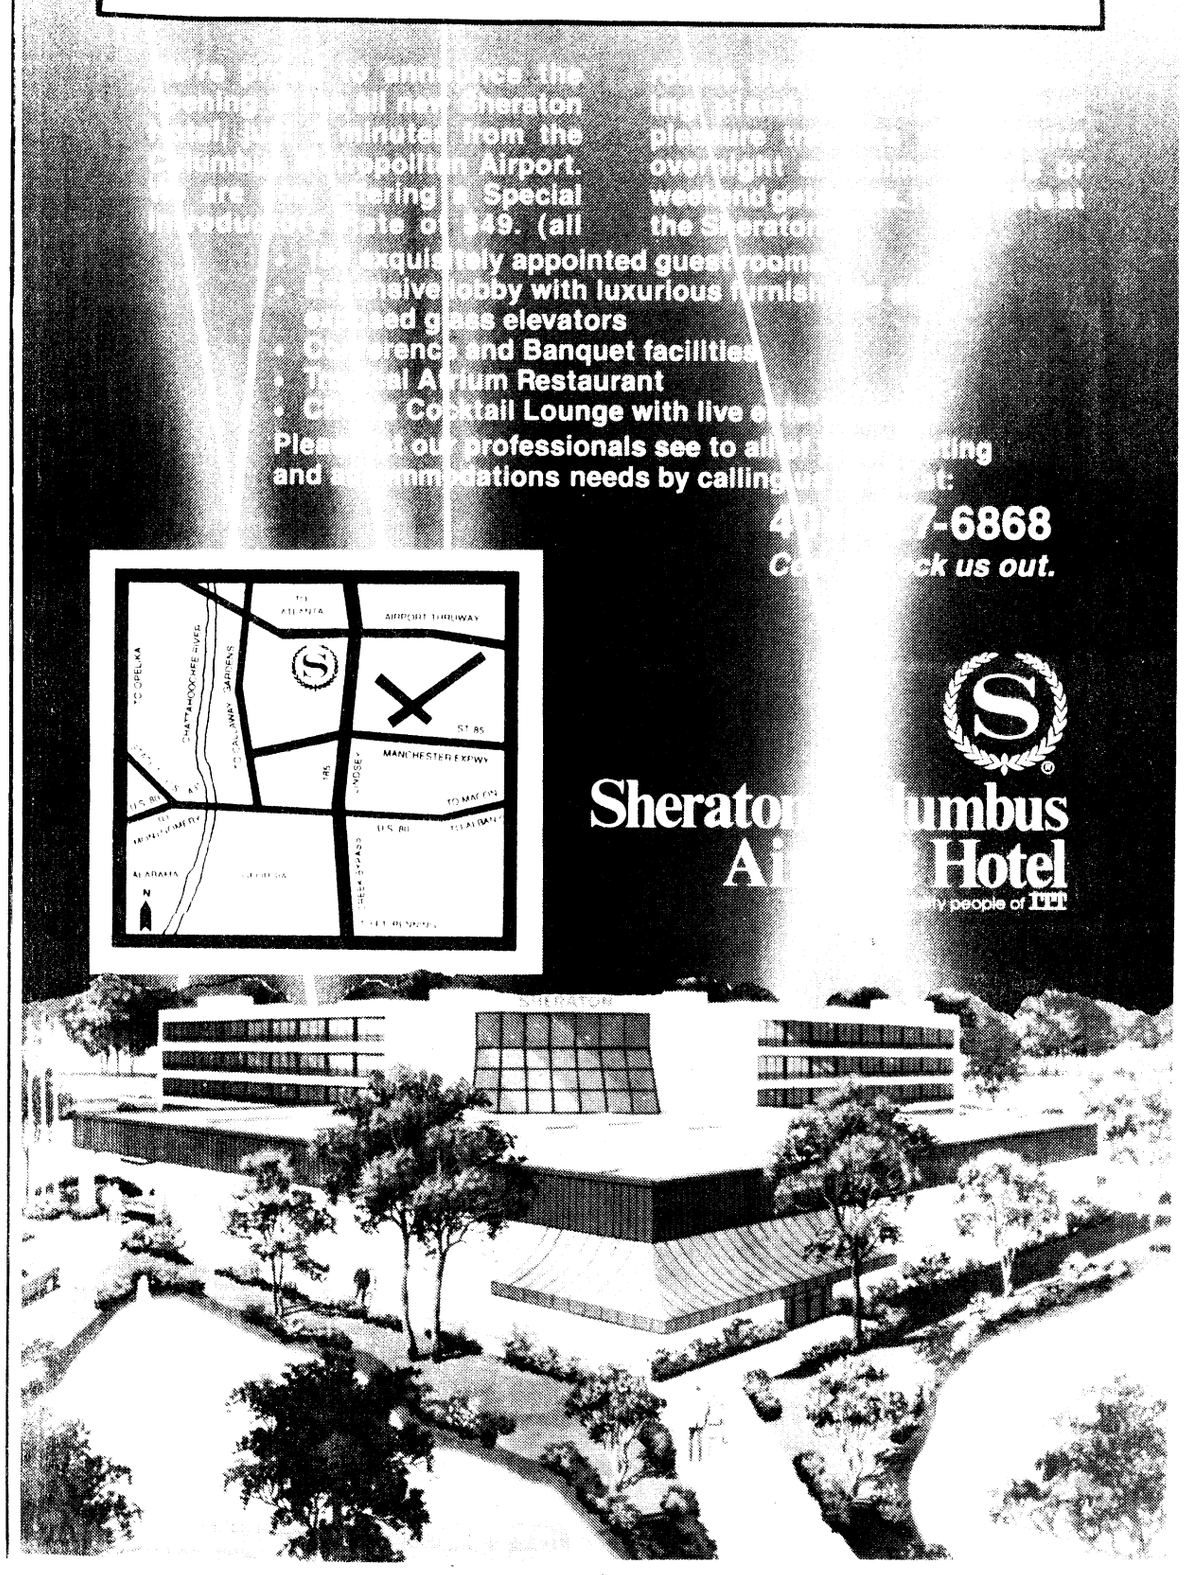
He is recognized in Congress and the Pentagon as the authority on issues affecting readiness, retention, family matters and retiree actions.



Under his direction and leadership, AUSA has grown in membership from 20,000 to 150,000 members. Recognizing the value of maintaining dialogue between the Army and defense industry, he created the Sustaining Member Program and industry liaison initiatives.

Cocklin is the author of several books and numerous articles and position papers on military affairs that have appeared in a number of military publications and been used in the Landpower Education program, another activity for which he shares a large responsibility.

He is not a stranger to Fort Benning, having visited and met with AUSA members many times over the past years.



His last official visit allowed us the opportunity to appropriately recognize his outstanding service and support not only for the Army and all its members, but also for his awareness of and support of the infantry community at Fort Benning.

We salute him in his retirement and assure him of his welcome by the chapter at any time in the future.

Pastoral Ed Center opens here

By Jo Ann Stamey
USAIC Chaplain's Office

In April 1987, the Chief of Chaplains decided that Fort Benning would get a Clinical Pastoral Education (CPE) Center. At the same time, the refurbishment started on the old commissary annex at Custer Terrace to house this training center and chapel. Now, a year later, we will officially open the newly refurnished CPE Center and chapel, and graduate five chaplains from this special training center.

The chaplains selected for this training are in mid-career timeframe — the time when officers are selected to attend Command and General Staff College. The Chaplain Corps receives only five to six slots per year. Because the Chaplain Corps is a special branch; chaplains are selected by a board for special schooling such as Family Life counselors and instructors at schools; i.e., USAIS and USARSA.

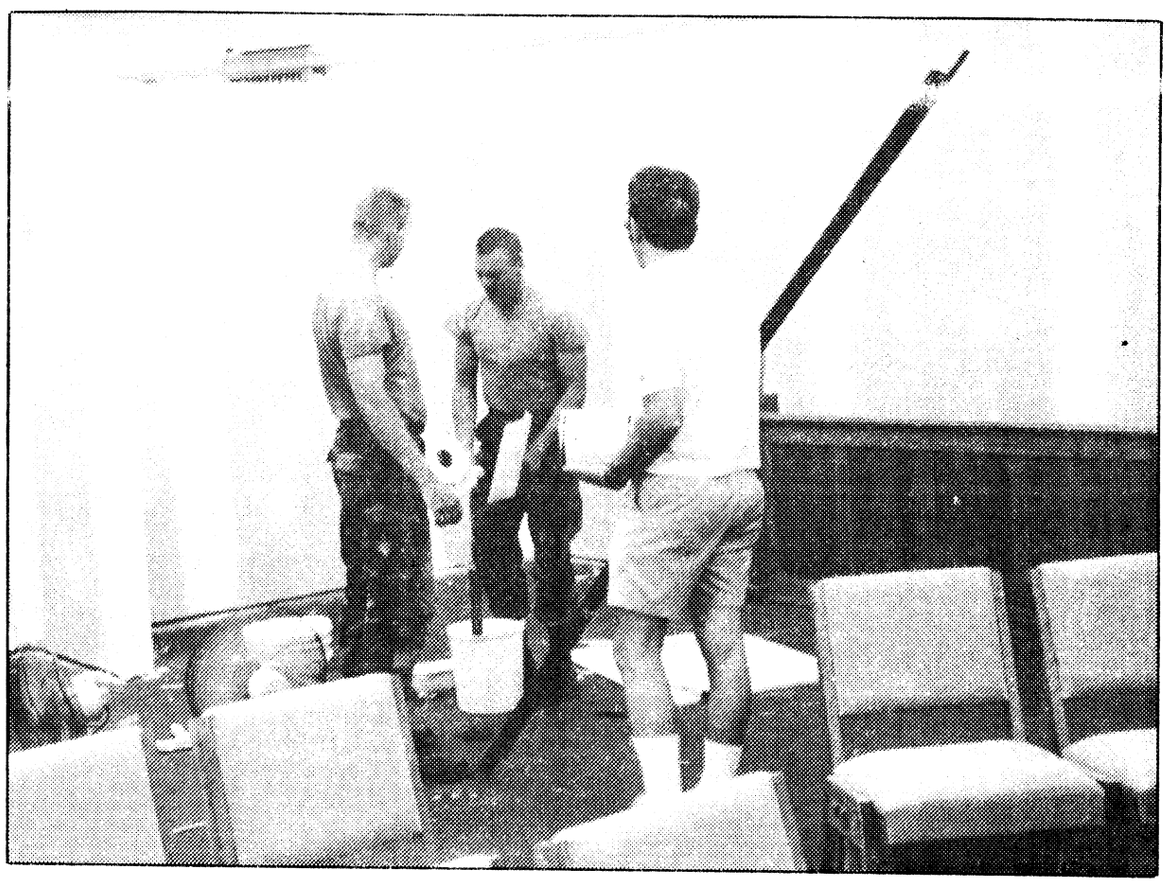
There are two models for CPE training. The first model is the hospital model, where chaplains are trained in a medical setting. There are two hospital models at this time — one at Walter Reed Army Hospital and Fort Sam Houston, Texas.

The second model — the Installation Model — is the one we have at Fort Benning and is the only one of its kind in the Army. This training encompasses the Family Life Center, the Fort Benning Confinement Facility, the Alcohol and Drug Counseling Center, Martin Army Community Hospital and the Custer Terrace Community Chapel.



The chaplains spend half a day in in-depth post graduate pastoral counseling. The second half of the day, the chaplains work in the actual environment of the Fort Benning Confinement Facility, MACH, Custer Terrace Community Chapel, etc. under the supervision of the chaplain assigned to that area. Each quarter, the CPE chaplains rotate to a new area.

The CPE students have also worked in conjunction with Georgia State University to receive a masters degree in community counseling — the only time this has ever been achieved!

Fort Benning is very fortunate to have this training center because it gives an added dimension to the post. This training center is funded by Department of the Army, but Fort Benning reaps the benefits. We have five extra chaplains who have provided two and a half years of their time to the community. They have provided coverage in areas where there no chaplain is assigned, for instance, the confinement facility. They have provided extra ministry of worship, religious education and counseling to the entire Custer Terrace community. These chaplains have also worked with the civilian professional agencies in Columbus.

There will be a graduation ceremony June 17, at 10 a.m. for these five chaplains, Chap. (Brig. Gen.) Charles J. McDonnell, will be the guest speaker.

Please join us at the Custer Terrace Chapel when we honor these five chaplains who have given so much to our community these past 10 months.

Ribbon cutting ceremony set to open new education center

By Jo Ann Stamey
USAIC Chaplain's Office

Thursday at 3 p.m., there will be a ribbon-cutting ceremony to officially open the newly refurbished Clinical Pastoral Education Center and Chapel at Custer Terrace. The deputy chief of chaplains, Chap. (Brig. Gen.) Charles J. McDonnell, will be the guest speaker, along with Brig. Gen. William Hartzog. Everyone is invited to attend.

This project is the culmination of a 15-month effort. The center consists of administrative offices, five student rooms, a library, a community chapel, kitchen, nursery and a large training room/fellowship hall. Inside construction of the offices, rooms, and chapel was accomplished through the post self-help program, with a documented savings of $430,000.

Design and lay-out, professional consultation, and building materials were provided by the directorate of Engineering and Housing. Carpet, drapes, pew chairs, altar furniture, lounge furniture, tables, library shelves and books, office furniture and equipment and professional supplies were provided by the post chaplain's office and grants from the Office of the Chief of Chaplains.

A separate dedication service for the chapel/sanctuary, involving the Custer Terrace community and chapel family, will be held June 19, at 11 a.m.

The Chaplains' non-appropriated fund provided a contract construction supervisor.

Taoy wins gold, again

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

It seems like every weight Sgt. Miguel Taoy of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 197th Infantry Brigade touches turns to gold, and this time, the touch has earned him a national title.

He is the U.S. Powerlifting Federation Junior National Powerlifting champion in his weight class.

He brought this crown back to Fort Benning from Irving, Texas where he traveled at his own expense.

"I paid for everything," he said, "but I feel it was worth it because it is a stepping stone to becoming a world class lifter."

According to Taoy, he went to the meet hoping to do well, but he didn't think he would win.

"I sized up my competition when I arrived at the meet and formulated a game plan in my head, and it worked," Taoy said.

He said he would not have been able to make it as far as he has without the support of his command.

"They give me ample time to train for the meets and that makes all the difference in the world," he said.

Taoy said this is the last meet of the season for him, but he will be back next year to defend his titles.

"I have all ready have gotten calls from my competitors wondering if I will be competing. I told them I definately will be there," he said with a grin.

And who can blame him for the grin, for he definately has the midas touch.

Teachers' training course set

Fort Benning Schools

A Basic Leader Training Course for teachers and volunteers who plan to conduct Junior or Adult Great Books Reading and Discussion groups will be hosted by Fort Benning School System June 23-24 from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m.

The registrar for the course is Beth Middlemiss, director of Staff Development. For information, call 545-2915.

The training course will be taught by a member of the staff of the Great Books Foundation, a Chicago-based nonprofit educational corporation.

The Great Books Foundation gives the Basic Leader Training Course to prepare teachers, librarians and parent volunteers to conduct Junior Great Books reading and discussion groups for students in second through 12th grades. The course is also open to those who plan to lead Adult Great Books groups in their communities.

For additional information about the training course, call the local registrar. For information about the Foundation and its programs, call (312) 332-5870 or 1-800-222-5870.

Radioactive radon gas exposure can cause lung cancer

By Evelyn D. Harris
American Forces Information Service

Radon is a radioactive gas that comes from the natural breakdown of uranium in the soil. It is invisible and odorless. Research has shown that the greater the exposure to radon, the greater the risk of developing lung cancer.

According to the Environmental Protection Agency, radon contributes to lung cancer when particles become trapped in the lungs. The particles break down there, releasing small bursts of energy that can damage lung tissue, increasing cancer risk.

In outdoor air, radon is diluted to such low concentrations that it poses no major health problems. However, once the gas seeps into homes through cracks in basements and foundations, it can accumulate to levels potentially hazardous to health. Radon can also come into the home through the water supply.

This is a more frequent problem in homes using well water; water in large community systems has been exposed to the air, giving the radon a chance to escape.

The indoor level of radon depends on geological factors, such as the soil's concentration of radon and its permeability, and construction factors, such as the condition of the foundation and the building's airtightness. Because of the number of factors involved, one neighbor's home may have high levels of radon while the other has low.

The risk of developing lung cancer from exposure to radon depends on the concentration of radon and the length of exposure. Long-term exposure to a slightly elevated radon level may present a greater risk of lung cancer than short-term exposure to high levels. When considering length of exposure, it is important to consider both the number of hours per day the room is occupied and the number of years it is occupied.

In general, the basement and ground levels of a building contain higher levels of radon than upper stories; highly insulated buildings contain more radon than leaky buildings; and clay soil is a more effective barrier against radon than sandy soil. Thus, a person who spends 12 hours a day in a well-insulated basement room in a geographic region with a high level of radon in the soil is exposed to much more radon than someone in the same area who works on the third floor of an office building and sleeps in a second-floor bedroom.

Individual factors also have a bearing on how radon effects health. For example, because having one cancer risk factor increases the danger from having another, radon in the home affects smokers more. Scientists also suspect that children, whose lungs are smaller and are still developing, may be more susceptible to radon damage than adults.

Estimates are that radon gas causes from 5,000 to 20,000 lung cancer fatalities per year, a small percentage of the yearly number of lung cancer deaths — 130,000 in 1986. Even so, the military services, out of concern for the health of members and their families, are testing military housing, child-care centers and other buildings for elevated radon levels. They will treat those with high levels to eliminate the dangers, with the worst getting highest priority.

Ratification was a fierce political struggle

The Spirit of 1788
Ratification of the Constitution

In 1788, Americans blasted one another with words, but not with muskets. The struggle over ratification occasioned fierce political contention of all sorts, from the loftiest debate to the most scurrilous invective, but it did not occasion bloodshed.

The American political system, inviting the free expression of diverse convictions and views, had its first national trial. And it worked. Rather than trying to obliterate the opposition, Federalists absorbed a good deal of Anti-Federalists' energy and wisdom by adding their own support to a bill of rights.

Political differences did not evaporate thereafter, but for a good many years they did not shatter the Union either. The Constitution provided structures that, again and again, contained the clashing of deeply divergent interests. These structures have provided a large measure of liberty, and they have secured domestic peace — it not exactly tranquility — for the best part of two centuries.

The 200th anniversary of ratification should stimulate and inform discussion about issues that are critical to the functioning of democratic government. Such discussion is always timely, especially since some historians claim that the reverence ordinary Americans feel for the Constitution is matched only by their ignorance of it. Drawing upon an expanded understanding of both Federalist and Anti-Federalist positions, and listening more closely to the voices of the state leaders who fought the ratification and statehood battles, we can now lay the groundwork for a clearer interpretation of the states' role in the achievement of the federal Constitution.

If many Americans retain a notion of the origins of our national government, it is often that of the framers — made of marble rather than of flesh and blood — stepping down from the heights of Olympus to present a passive and grateful populace with the fruits of their wisdom. The historical inaccuracy of this image is all the more dangerous since it entails a serious distortion of the democratic process as well as of the American past.

When James Madison spoke of the people as "the fountain of all power," he was speaking of facts as well as theory. In 1788, the people of the 13 states were not passive. They were deeply embroiled in an extraordinary national debate over the direction the country was to take, and deeply committed to assuring themselves that the independence for which they had fought so hard a war was going to be safeguarded, not betrayed. They were also committed to guarantee state autonomy and personal freedoms in the new nation. They and their delegate representatives did not take the framers' wisdom on faith. They challenged the document framed in Philadelphia, and where they found it wanting, they demanded changes. In this sense at least, the Anti-Federalists won a great victory.

As American citizens today, we have rights and responsibilities not all that different from those of our 18th century predecessors. Re-examining the ratification and statehood process in the evolution of our Constitutional system can help us understand the continuing, balancing need to "preserve the constitutional equilibrium between the General and State Governments," as Alexander Hamilton put it. Some of our current state political leaders, for instance, have vowed to use the Bicentennial to address the "drastic erosion of basic state authority" and "drastic overcentralization of power in Washington" which has taken us so far from the federalist structure envisioned in Philadelphia.

The ratification debate and process also reminds us of what we were meant to expect from our government — and what we must expect from ourselves if we are to sustain our democratic government into its third century. Our right to give or withhold consent, to elect representatives to speak for us, and to participate broadly, actively and fundamentally in the process of government at all levels remains our most previous inheritance of 1787 and 1788.

Air conditioners do more than keep your home cool

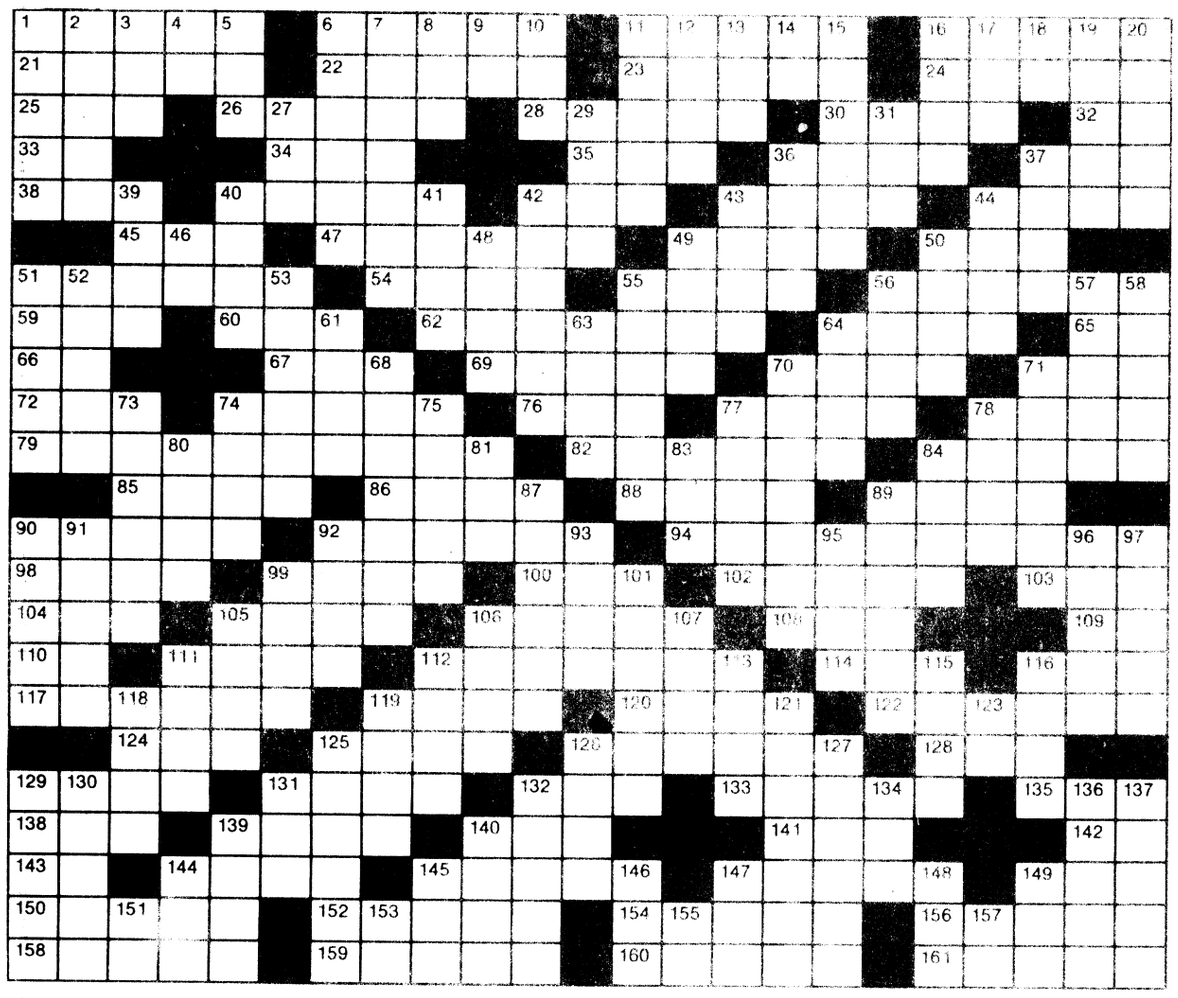
By Becky Ray
Energy Management Branch

Air conditioners perform several functions. In addition to cooling air, they also remove dust and dirt by circulating the air through a filter. Air conditioning lowers the humidity as well, making a more comfortable environment.

Unfortunately, the benefits of air conditioning are expensive. In some areas, air conditioning can account for up to 50 percent of a household's energy use. In August 1987, air conditioning costs at Fort Benning almost doubled the electrical consumption from each of the previous winter months. Fort Benning's electrical bill for the month of August was $998,868.92.

Because air conditioners use lots of energy, it's important to operate and maintain your air conditioning unit to get the most benefit from the work it does. One of the easiest and most important ways to keep your air conditioner running reliably and efficiently is to change the filter regularly, at least once a month during air conditioning season.

Air conditioner fans must work harder to force air through filters clogged with dirt, which increases the amount of energy used to cool the air and increases the wear and tear on the unit. Particles of dust and dirt can also be blown from a soiled filter into the air conditioning unit, causing the coils to become clogged. Air quality will also decline, because an air conditioner with a dirty filter will cause dust to be blown with the cooled air into the room.



Dirty filters can cause many maintenance problems in air conditioners. The life of the unit is also shortened if filters aren't regularly checked and changed, and they generally aren't as reliable as well-maintained units.

Other precautions can help ensure your air conditioner operates well. Shrubs or other plants blocking air intake vents on outdoor compressors cause the fans to work harder. Children should not be allowed to play on or around outdoor units. Objects such as sticks or wires inserted into the vents can damage the cooling fins, reducing the air conditioner's efficiency or causing the refrigerant to leak.

If your air conditioner begins leaking or making unusual noises, turn the unit off. Don't attempt repairs on your own. Problems with air conditioners should be called in to the DEH Work Order Section, 545-2135.

Are the Blues really back?

By Tom Clifford
PM Editorial Services

Every few years it seems, there is talk in the music world of a blues revival. But the blues always remained unrevived, its best musicians working the same old clubs. The talk now, however, is for real. In 1988 the blues is news.

Blues music, which grew out of the field hollers and spirituals of slaves, became the popular music among American blacks in the 1930s, '40s and '50s. The music was the framework on which jazz, rock 'n'roll and soul music were built. But as the more commercial rock'n'roll and soul music grew in popularity, blues musicians fell on tough times. It is only recently that many blues artists have started getting the national attention they deserve.

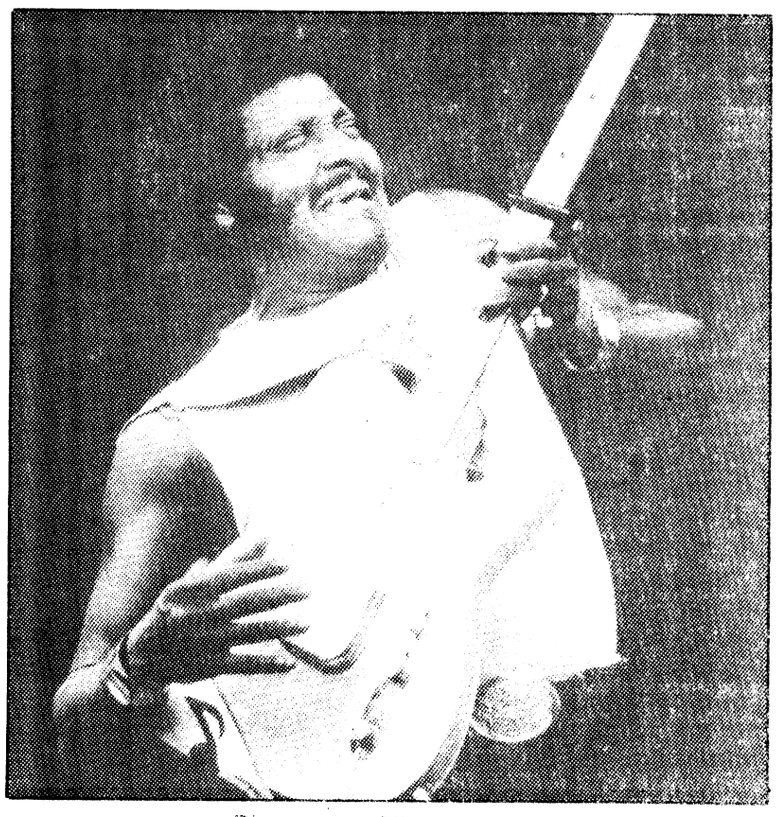
"The blues seem to follow me everywhere I go," bluesman Little Milton sang almost 30 years ago. Today, blues artists are shown in full page magazine advertisements. The music is showing up on movie and television soundtracks, commercials and, for the first time in years, on popular radio. Last year, singer guitarist Robert Cray's single "Smoking Gun" broke into the Billboard Top 25 and a video gained heavy play on cable television's MTV.

Cray's success is just the tip of the iceberg. Longtime blues artists like Albert Collins are enjoying a greatly increased popularity. Last year, Collins appeared on "Late Night With David Letterman" in a wine cooler commercial and in the hit movie "Adventures in Babysitting." Besides sticking to his rigorous road schedule, Ken Morton, publicist for Collins' record label, Alligator Records, says that such opportunities are more available to blues artists today.

"Blues in the mainstream is much more visible than it has ever been," says Morton. "I don't know that many blues musicians will ever get rich, but the biggest thing they're getting out of this is the recognition they've worked so hard for."

The recognition is coming in large part from young audiences that are new to the blues. While many fans were first exposed to the music by artists like Robert Cray, Stevie Ray Vaughn and the Fabulous Thunderbirds, all blues artists are now benefiting.

"They've hardly left a stone unturned in looking for these blues artists," says Hammond Scott, owner of New Orleans' Black Top Records. Black Top recently released a new record by Nappy Brown, a singer whose career has spanned four decades.



Recognition is coming to even the most traditional blues musicians. Last November, the acoustic blues team of "Bowling Green" John Cephas and "Harmonica" Phil Wiggins took home the National Blues Foundation's "Entertainers Of the Year" honors.

"I think the award is indicative of the overall increased popularity of the blues," Wiggins says.

Despite their higher public profiles, blues artists remain a close knit family. When the "Queen of the Blues," Koko Taylor, and her band were involved in an automobile accident recently, many of the blues' biggest stars turned out to play a benefit concert in Chicago to help cover the group's medical expenses. Robert Cray and his band took time off from recording a new album to join artists like Albert Collins, Lonnie Brooks, Sam Seals and Lem Wilson of the Fabulous Thunderbirds for the benefit. The concert was a sell out.

But is the current blues revival just a fad that will pass and leave many of the blues' finest musicians again scraping for work? Hammond Scott doesn't think it is.

"I think that blues is winning so many fans now that I can see this thing going on for a long time," Scott says. "Everything is coming up roses."

Col Museum awarded $75,000

The Columbus Museum

The Columbus Museum has been awarded a $75,000 General Operating Support grant by the Institute of Museum Services (IMS). More than 1,300 museums applied for the prestigious IMS grant; only 402 institutions received funding. $75,000 is the maximum amount any one institution can receive.

The IMS grant is the most sought after federally funded award because it provides direct operating support for all types of museum activities.

"This important grant from the IMS will be applied toward moving and exhibit expenses anticipated for occupying the Museum's newly expanded facility," stated museum director, Anne Timpano.

State and federal sources have awarded the Museum a total of $126,000 in general operating support monies so far this year. In addition to the IMS grant, the Museum recently was awarded a $51,000 general operating support grant by the Georgia Council for the Arts GCA. The Museum has received GCA funds annually for the last several years.

Overall, the Museum has received more than $500,000 in state and federal funds in 1988. Earlier this year the Museum was awarded a $356,000 grant by the National Endowment for the Humanities in support of Chattahoochee Legacy, a regional history gallery planned for the new Museum, a $10-million facility, scheduled to open in April of 1989.

The IMS is an independent federal agency established by Congress in 1976. IMS awards are made on the basis of a museum's judicious management of its resources. The Museum last received IMS awards monies in 1982 when it was awarded a $35,000 grant.

For additional information, please contact Anne Timpano or Chris Henson at 322-0400.

Sea World salutes the armed forces

Sea World News

Sea World of Florida, during its 14th annual salute to the Armed Forces celebration, offers a special admission price for military personnel.

Through Sept. 12, a 20 percent discount off the regular price of park admission will be offered to the military. All active duty and active Reserve personnel, and their family members will receive this special savings, upon presentation of a military I.D. card. For additional savings, contact your ITT/Special Services office or Sea World's ticket department.

On Saturday, the Air Force will be saluted with a special breakfast (by invitation), and will feature as guest speaker, the honorable E.C. Aldridge, Secretary of the Air Force. Each year, a different branch of the military has always been honored during Armed Forces Days and has featured such dignitaries as John O. Marsh, Secretary of the Army; James Webb, retired Secretary of the Navy; Admiral James S. Gracey, retired commandant of the Coast Guard; Gen. Al Kelly, retired commandant of the Marine Corps; and Verne Orr, retired Secretary of the Air Force.

SNAPSHOTS: ARMY BIRTHDAY

Army News Service

Army Snapshot: 10 quotes on the Army as we prepare to celebrate its 213th birthday that can be reflected upon by soldiers and members of the Army family as we prepare to celebrate its birthday.

"If we stand idly by, if we shrink from the hard contests where men must win at hazard of their lives and at the risk of all they hold dear, then the holder and stronger peoples will pass us by and win for themselves the domination of the world."

Teddy Roosevelt

"Every citizen should be a soldier. This was the case with the Greeks and Romans, and must be that of every free state."

Thomas Jefferson

"It is an unfortunate fact that we can secure peace only by preparing for war."

John F. Kennedy

"Every citizen who enjoys the protection of a free government owes his personal services to the defense of it."

George Washington

"God grants liberty only to those who love it and are ready to defend it."

Daniel Webster

"They that can give up essential liberty to obtain a little temporary safety deserve neither liberty nor safety."

Benjamin Franklin

"It is no use saying "We are doing our best." We have got to succeed in doing what is necessary."

Sir Winston Churchill

"When the freedom they wished for the most was freedom from responsibility, Athens ceased to exist."

Gen. Omar Bradley

"War is an ugly thing, but not the ugliest of things. The decayed state of moral feeling which thinks nothing is worth war is much worse. A man who has nothing for which he is willing to fight, nothing he cares more about than his own personal safety, is a miserable creature who has no chance of being free."

John Stuart Mill

"For it's Tommy this and Tommy that and 'chuck him out, the brute,' but it's 'Savior of his country' when the guns begin to shoot."

Rudyard Kipling

Army to test for radon gasses

By Evelyn D. Harris
American Forces Information Service

The services are testing buildings for radon, an odorless, colorless gas that can pose a health risk to humans.

The Army will test all buildings, beginning with day-care centers, hospitals, schools and living areas.

Next, it will test all buildings open 24 hours, such as operations centers, training areas and research facilities, followed by all other structures.

Testing on buildings in the first category began this spring. The Army plans to complete all tests by Oct. 31, 1992.

Each building will be tested for 90 days using a track etch detector in the basement or lowest occupied floor. Testing will be done during a heating or cooling season when buildings are closed.

If the level of radon is greater than four picoCuries per liter of air — the standard set by the Environmental Protection Agency — steps will be taken to bring the radon down to that level. A picoCurie is a measure of radioactivity.

Exposure to radon equalling four picoCuries per liter is roughly the same as smoking eight cigarettes a day. Steps to reduce radon concentration can include sealing radon entry points and subslab ventilation.

The Navy has allocated $20 million for radon screening in family housing for Navy and Marine Corps, day-care centers, hospitals and schools. Screening will begin soon.

The Air Force began testing for radon gas at 136 bases last December and has now completed the 90-day tests. Family housing, child-care centers, temporary-lodging facilities, DoD dependent schools and dormitories were tested.

The Air Force has not yet fully analyzed results, but it estimates, based on Environmental Protection Agency research, some radon reduction steps will be necessary in 14 to 20 percent of tested buildings.

The services have similar plans of action to fix buildings with high levels of radon. Those with radon levels greater than 200pCi/l with radon levels greater than 200 pCi/l (greater cancer risk than smoking four packs of cigarettes a day) will be fixed immediately. If necessary, occupants will be moved until radon levels can be lowered.

Buildings with levels between 20 and 200 picoCuries per liter will be fixed within six months; between 20 and four picoCuries, within one to

Gen. Clark's 12 'Soldier's Rights'

One of the most distinguished Army leaders in recent history, General Bruce C. Clark, had some basic ideas on leadership. Perhaps more importantly, he had his own thoughts on what a soldier has the "right" to expect from his, or her leaders, and through the years these ideas have been passed on as basic leadership goals for any leader. Listed below are some of those "rights" a soldier should expect from his leaders.

1. Honest and fair treatment.
2. Consideration due them as mature and professional soldiers.
3. Personal interest taken in them as individuals.
4. Loyalty.
5. To be shielded from harassment from "higher-ups."
6. That their needs be anticipated and provided for.
7. All the comforts and privileges practicable.
8. To be kept oriented and told the "reason why."
9. A well-thought-out program of training and work, as well as recreation.
10. Clear-cut and positive decisions and orders which are not constantly changing.
11. Demands commensurate with their capabilities — not too small nor too large.
12. Recognition of their good work, including publicizing it when it is appropriate.

Custer's last stand 100 years old

One of the most memorable stories in American history books is the tale of Custer's defeat at the battle of Little Bighorn more than 100 years ago.

Lieutenant Colonel George Armstrong Custer, leading a military force of more than 200 men, attacked a camp of Sioux Indians led by Chiefs Sitting Bull and Crazy Horse, near Little Bighorn River, Montana, on June 25, 1876. Custer and all his men were killed in the battle, which took only 2 hours.

One horse, named Comanche, is reported to have been the only survivor among Custer's forces.

World's entrance courtyard.

Participants involved with the festivities included a 50-state flag team from Orlando's Naval Training Center, color guards from the five military branches and an all-service color guard from the U.S. Special Operations Command at McDill Air Force Base in Tampa. A spectacular fly-by, consisting of four F-16 jets from the Florida Air National Guard's 125th Fighter Wing in Jacksonville, provided exciting aerial accompaniment to the ceremony.

Informational displays and exhibits provided by the active and Reserve components of the armed forces, as well as educational demonstrations by representatives of the military branches, will be featured in the park throughout the summer.

Sea World of Florida opens daily at 9 a.m. The park is located at the intersection of I-4 and Bee Line Expressway. Adult admission, $23.30; children, (3-11), $19.10; under three, admitted free.

Sea World of Florida is a member of the Sea World family of theme parks, which include Boardwalk and Baseball, Cypress Gardens, Sea World of California, Sea World of Ohio and Sea World of Texas.

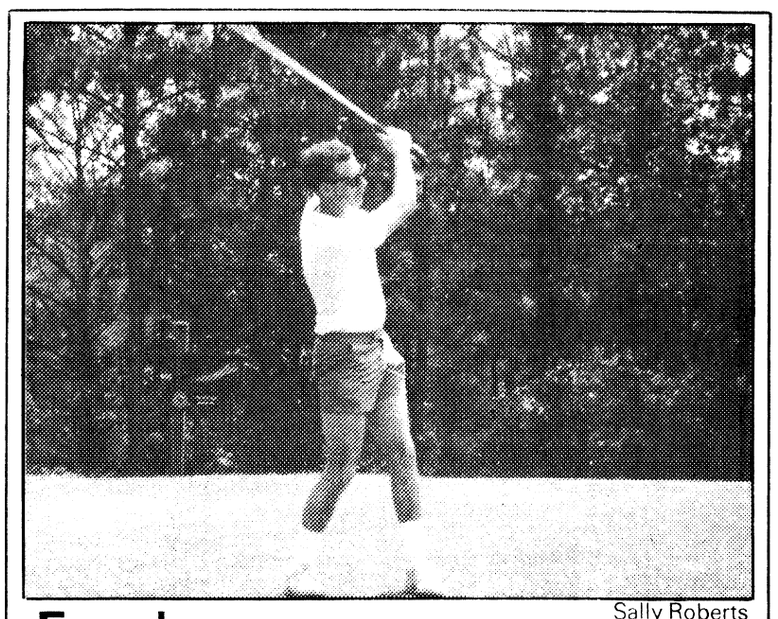
HHC 197 slides by Btry C, 8-7

George Mingee

Kenneth Hecox of HHC tags first ahead of the ball in the bottom of the eigth inning.

By George Mingee
197th Infantry Brigade correspondent

"Strike One," yelled the umpire as a player from Battery C, 2nd Battalion, 10th Field Artillery, watched the first pitch of the game go by. Charlie Battery, was squaring off against Headquarters and Headquarters Company of the 197th Infantry Brigade in softball.



After eight long innings of play, HHC finally beat Charlie Battery by a score of 8-7.

The game started slow with the first inning going scoreless. But the second inning was the start for Charlie Battery, as Roy Bolding doubled and drove in two teammates to take an early 2-0 lead. Several batters later, it was Gregg Hopkins' turn to boost his team's score, with a hard-hit home run driving in two of his teammates. The inning finally ended, showing Charlie Battery on top with a score of 7-0.

In the bottom of the third inning, HHC got on the scoreboard when Tracey Callahan's smashing single drove in two of his teammates.

As the fifth inning rolled around Charlie Battery's score was narrowed down to a three-run lead, HHC was trying to mount a rally at the plate with teammates chanting "crunch time, we still need three." But it wasn't until the bottom of the seventh inning that HHC finally tied the score, when Charles Johnson hit a sacrifice fly and brought in the tying run.

Starting off the extra inning, Charlie Battery put men on the bases with just one out. However, HHC pulled off an inning-ending double play and snubbed the rally. In the bottom of the eighth, Kenneth Hecox of HHC singled and took third on a single by a teammate. John Chesney stepped up to the plate and hit a sacrifice fly to drive in Hecox, winning the game for HHC 8-7. The win boosted HHC's overall record to an undefeated 3-0 start.

Third Climb to Glory Run scheduled for June 25

Fort Drum Public Affairs Office

FORT DRUM, N.Y. — The third annual Climb to Glory Run is scheduled for June 25 in conjunction with Mountain Fest 1988.

Sponsored by the 710th Maintenance Battalion, the 10th Mountain Division (Light Infantry) and open to civilian runners as well as military, the race will begin at 9 a.m. at Fort Drum's Post Gymnasium, buildng T-2360, located on Nash Blvd.

Runners must be registered in either individual or team competition. A registration fee — $6 before June 17 and $8 thereafter — will be collected. Military runners who only compete for the military trophies need not pay the fee when they register, but they will not receive a race T-shirt.

Teams will compete in two classes: battalion-size and larger units, and company-size or smaller units. Although teams will be limited to nine runners each, there is no limit to the number of teams a unit may enter. Competing team rosters must be submitted to race organizers by June 15.

Prizes for individual winners will be given in first, second and third places in the following age groups for males: 19 years and under, 20-29, 30-39, 40-49, 50-59, and 60 years and over. Female age groups are 19 years and under, 26-40 years, and 40 years or over.

Registration forms for the race can be picked up at the Fort Drum Gymnasium (building T-2360), the Physical Fitness Center (building P-4305), or at the Watertown YMCA. Forms can also be obtained by contacting 2nd Lt. Stephen R. Davidson, SFC Ralph D. Perretta or SP4 Ronald M. Rodier by calling commercial (315) 772-5963/4437, or autovon 341-5963/4437. 1,066 died in boating accidents in '86

National Safety Council

In 1986, 1,066 people died in boating accidents, according to U.S. Coast Guard statistics. The prime factors in most of these accidents are alcohol, unused life jackets and poor nautical judgment.

In conjunction with National Safe Boating Week, which ends tomorrow the National Safety Council offers these tips for safe boating:

- Make sure you and your passengers wear well-fitting personal flotation devices (PFDS) at all times. Most fatalities are drownings resulting from capsizes or falls overboard. Accidents happen suddenly, with no time for a victim to get into a life jacket.
- File a float plan before you leave shore, including the boat's description, a passenger list, your destination, estimated departure and arrival times and your planned route. If you're lost or stranded, the plan will serve as a rescue guide.
- Watch out for bad weather. Check weather reports before you cast off and while you're afloat. Since thunderstorms usually travel from west to east, keep an eye on the western sky. And listen for burst of static on your AM radio — it accompanies a thunderstorm.
- Small boats are unstable and can easily capsize. Never overload a small boat — use the boat's capacity plate as a loading guide. Distribute weight evenly throughout the boat. Also, never stand up in your boat — if you must move around, keep your body low and move slowly and carefully.
- Alcohol and boating don't mix. More than half of all boating fatalities are alcohol-related. Drinking and boating is as dangerous as drinking and driving.

Post powerlifing meet to be held June 18

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The first Fort Benning Powerlifting meet will take place at the Briant Wells Field House June 18.

It will begin with a lifters meeting at 9 a.m., and the meet starts at 10 a.m.

The competition will consist of squat, benchpress and deadlift in the following weight classes: 114 1/2, 123 1/2, 132 1/2, 148 3/4, 181 3/4, 198 1/4, 220 1/4, 242 1/2, 275 and super heavyweight.

Early weigh-in will be June 17 from 4 to 7 p.m. and regular weigh-in from 8 to 9:15 a.m., both will be at the Briant Wells Field House.

One platform will be used for the competition. The morning session will consist of all women and the 165-pound weight class. The afternoon session will consist of all others.

The contest is open to all active military men stationed on post and all women, active duty, family members, retired, and NAF, DOD and AAFES civilian employees. A one-piece regulation suit must be worn, no exceptions.

Army wins AFC title

Army men volleyball players recently took first place in the 1988 Armed Forces Championships in Charleston, S.C. The women took second place behind the Navy in the same tournament.

The men took the title record over the Air Force followed by the Marines and Navy. To take the title the Army had to play the Air Force in a tie breaker, which the men won 15-12. Before this game, the Army defeated the Marines 15-3 and 15-10; and the Air Force earlier 15-12.

In the women's competition, the Air Force finished third and the Marines last. The Army women defeated the Marines 15-5 and 15-10 while the Air Force defeated the Navy 15-3 and 15-8.

Army beats Soviets

James Crisp, U.S. Army boxer, won in a dual meet against the Soviets May 28-29 in Jacksonville, Fla.

Crisp, stationed in Nuernberg, Germany won in a decision over Evgeni Zaitsev of the Soviet Union.

In the 165-pound division, Sergel Kobozev, Soviet Union, won a 3-2 decision over Anthony Hembrick of Fort Bragg, N.C.

At 201 pounds, Daniel Fikes, stationed at Fort Campbell, Ky., lost a heavyweight bout when the referee stopped the contest at 2:10 in the third round.

At 201, Alexander Burmistrov, Soviet Union, won a retirement over the Navy's Byron Wrice, stationed in San Diego, Calif. The bout was stopped at 0:42 in the second round.

The U.S. lost seven bouts to two.

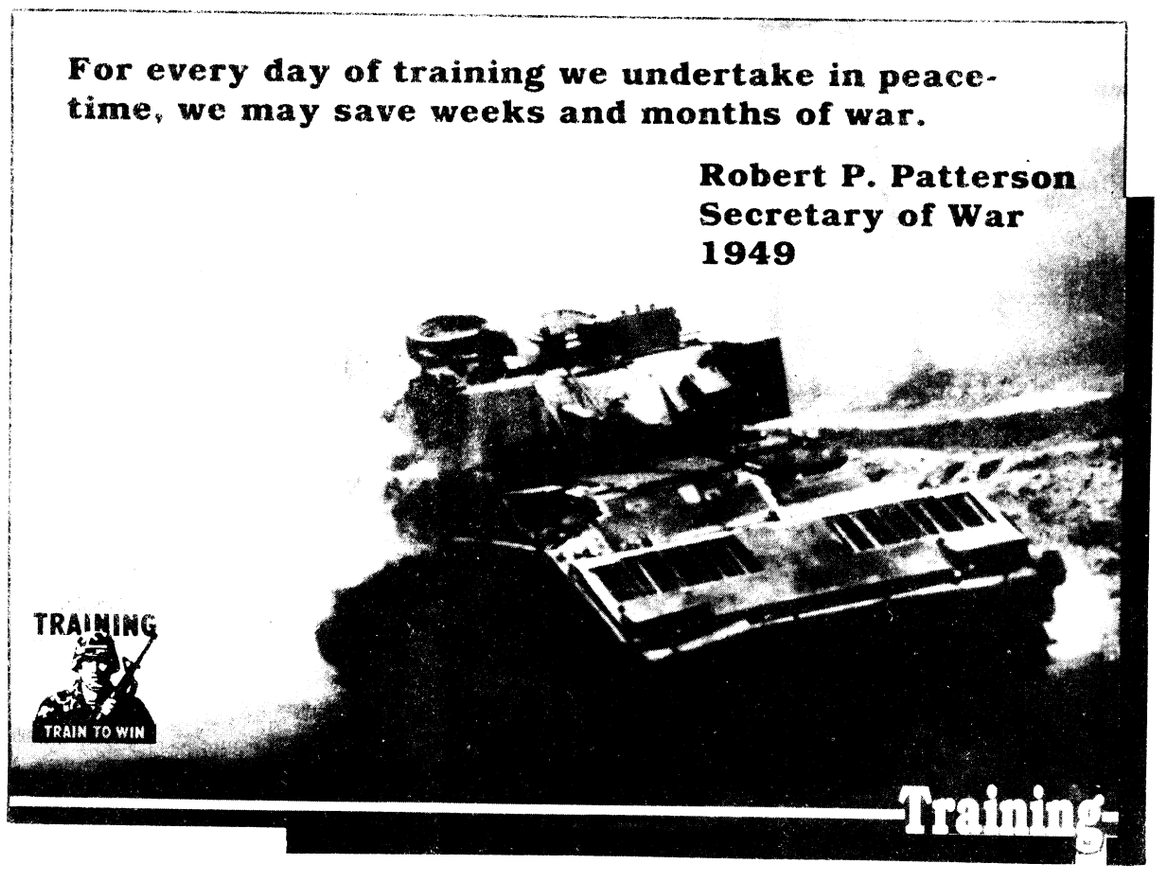
five years, with the higher levels being fixed first.



In calculating the amount of risk involved in radon exposure, the Environment Protection Agency assumes that a person occupies a space 18 hours a day over a period of 70 years. Most people are not going to spend that much time over that many years in the same space. Certainly no military member or family member will.

Therefore, as Penny Schmitt, a spokesperson for the Army's radon abatement program, said, "There is no cause for alarm even if there is a radon problem in your home or office. But it is reassuring to know your service is going to take action to get the level down — soon."

How many times have we thought this about a loved one who isn't performing up to our expectations.

We see their depression as a bad attitude. Misread their self-centeredness as a personality problem. Believe their inability to cope with daily activities is laziness.

But sometimes inappropriate behavior may be a warning sign of something more serious. A mental illness.

Mental illness is a medical illness—not a personal weakness. And learning to recognize its warning signs can be the first step to healing the sickness.

NEWS BRIEFS

Help get Benning ready

IOE is coming!: The TRADOC Installation of Excellence Evaluation Team will visit Fort Benning in three weeks. The team will evaluate many aspects of post operations to include community facilities, child care centers, U-Do-It projects, housing areas and overall appearance.

Last year's winner, Fort Leonard Wood, picked up a $160,000 check for placing first in the Installation of Excellence evaluations.

Fort Benning residents and employees are encouraged to do all they can in the time before the team arrives to get the post ready.

In the era of budget restraints, a check for $160,000 could go a long way to help Fort Benning.

Pitch in and help the post be ready!

HIV testing procedure changes

Blood draw: After the June 27 HIV blood draw, HIV testing will no longer be done at the Main Post, Kelley Hill and Sand Hill Theaters. Beginning July 1, all HIV testing for the purposes of reenlistment, overseas assignment or regular forces screening will take place at the Preventive Medicine Service, building 66. Times are Mondays, 8-10 a.m.; Tuesdays, 12:30-4 p.m.; Thursdays, 12:30-4 p.m.; Fridays, 12:30-4 p.m. No medical records or laboratory slips are needed. New accessions at the Reception Station are not affected by the change. Personnel are reminded that test results are available at their respective PMOs five to seven working days after the blood draw.

AUSA membership meeting set

Annual election: The Chattanoochee Valley-Fort Benning Chapter will hold its annual election at the summer membership meeting Thursday, 6:30 p.m. at the Main Post NCO Club. The winner of the Cliff O. Livingston Award will be announced at the meeting. Tickets are $7.50. For more information, see your unit first sergeant.

Campaign continues

AER: The 1988 Army Emergency Relief Campaign will continue until July 1. The total contributions to date are $135,744.70. To contribute see your unit AER representative.

DRM conducts auction

For sale: The Defense Reutilization and Marketing Office at Fort Benning will conduct an auction sale of government surplus property at 9 a.m., Tuesday, in building 326 on 10th Mountain Division Road.

The auction is open to the public and will include such items as military clothing, household furniture and appliances, office machines, office furniture and vehicles.

A three-day inspection period will begin today, 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. and continue daily until 9 a.m. the day of the sale.

Individuals must be 18 years old or older to purchase property. For more information, call 545-3497.

Vets convention planned

Lakepoint Resort: Vietnam veterans from throughout Alabama, Georgia and the panhandle of Florida will hold their first regional convention Nov. 11, 12 and 13 at Lakepoint Resort and Convention Center in Eufaula, Ala.

Veterans who are Vietnam-era vets are eligible for membership in the Vietnam Veterans of America, which was chartered by an act of Congress in 1978. Chapters of the VVA have been established in Huntsville, Decatur, Montgomery/Maxwell-Gunter Air Force Bases, Ozark/Fort Rucker and Dothan in Alabama and Marietta and Carrollton in Georgia.

Information on the regional convention may be obtained by calling the convention coordinator at 205-794-9680 or 205-792-2868 or by writing to Vietnam Veterans of America Convention Headquarters, P.O. Box 1942, Dothan, AL 36302.

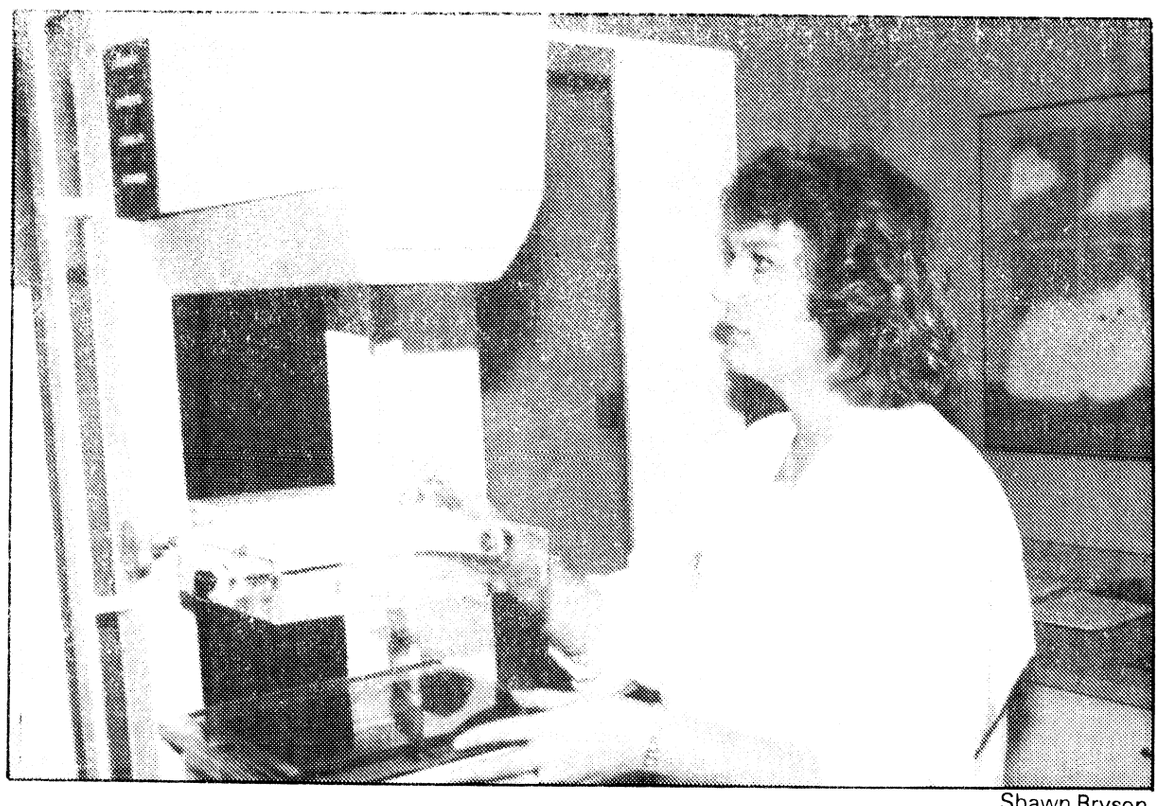
Soldier's accident preventable

Unit Public Affairs Office

Recently a soldier from Headquarters and Headquarters Company, [illegible] Division (Mechanized), [illegible], was driving a 1985 Mercury Comet southbound on Old Cusseta Road at approximately 6:20 p.m. lost control of his vehicle, striking a guardrail.

The vehicle traveled approximately 327 feet before crossing over into the oncoming traffic lane and striking another vehicle driven by a soldier from Company B, 1st Battalion, 58th Infantry. The School Bus [illegible]

When the military police arrived on the scene, a Blood Alcohol Test was taken on the operator of the Mercury Comet. [illegible] 25. Further investigation revealed that this operator was not wearing seatbelts at the time of the accident.



He sustained a contusion to the right chest, scalp lacerations and possible internal abdominal injuries and is presently in the hospital.

The other soldier, who was sober and was wearing his seatbelt, escaped with minor injuries.

This accident clearly illustrates the benefits of doing what is right versus the repercussion of what is wrong.

Officials state the soldier who caused this accident was clearly not performing to standards. He was driving drunk and not wearing his seatbelt. As a result, he has been charged with causing the accident and is in the hospital with serious injuries.

The other soldier performed to standards. He was sober and wearing his seatbelt. Although his vehicle was damaged through no fault of his own, he was able to walk away from the accident.

PRIMUS use at 50 percent

By Shawn Bryson
Bayonet staff writer

A no-cost, professional and high quality health care facility awaits those uniformed service beneficiaries who have yet to visit the new Primary Care for the Uniformed Services Clinic in Columbus.

According to Wayne Vinson, PRIMUS project manager and retired Army lieutenant colonel, the clinic, which opened April 30, is seeing just over 50 percent of the patients it's capable of seeing.

"During the last few weeks, we've been seeing 115-120 patients each weekday," Vinson said. "I'd like to see that number climb to 200 a day during the week."

Primary Care and Family Medicine are the focuses of the clinic, the fifth of its kind for the Army. The clinic is not, however, an emergency room and all medical emergencies should continue to be taken to Martin Army Community Hospital or the nearest hospital with emergency facilities and personnel, if time is of the essence.

The new PRIMUS clinic, located at 1727 Boxwood Place, off Macon Road, was built with the intention of serving all military beneficiaries including retirees and family members enrolled in the Defense Enrollment Eligibility Reporting System.

The civilian-contracted PRIMUS clinic is set up on a walk-in basis and first-time visitors are required to fill out a registration form upon arrival.

Army observes Safety Day

USAIC Public Affairs Office

General Vuono, Chief of Staff of the Army, has directed that Safety Awareness Day be observed Army-wide today.

The purpose is to focus everyone's attention on the potential for mishaps due to the increased operational tempo experienced during the summer months.

In conjunction with this, he has directed that ground operations be kept to a minimum and Army aircraft flights will be limited to those needed for operational necessities.

This command fully supports Vuono's initiative. All units/directorates and activities at Fort Benning will conduct appropriate safety activities on this day. These activities should not, however, be scheduled so as to negatively impact on our training and operational missions.

As a minimum, all organizations on the installation will set aside one to two hours as standdown time during which appropriate safety briefings/classes will be presented to all personnel. These classes should address, as a minimum, training, vehicle, water and summer safety. In addition, all unit assistant safety officers, down to and including battalion level, will attend a range safety conference to be presented by DPTM.

Installation-level activities will include roadside checks of POVs and AMVs by MPA and DOL personnel. These efforts, in conjunction with organization efforts, will serve to enhance the safety consciousness of all Fort Benning personnel as we enter the most hazardous part of the year.

IOE program improves performance

By Becky Ray
DEH

Installation of Excellence Program was established in 1985 to improve the visual and functional performance of installation facilities. The program sets high standards for the maintenance and modification of existing facilities as well as the design of new facilites, with emphasis placed on improved space utilization and aesthetics.

The primary purpose of the program is to attract and retain superior personnel by making TRADOC installations more appealing places to work. It is hoped that by providing high-quality, effective and attractive living and working environments, installations can better compete with other employers for motivated, highly-skilled personnel.

Although many of the policies are directed toward DEH functions, the Installation of Excellence Program applies to everyone living and working at Fort Benning. Many outstanding landscaping and interior design projects have been accomplished by building occupants with supplies and tools furnished at no charge by the U-Do-It Shop.

Fort Benning has already taken great strides in making major improvements in the appearance of the installation. Some of the most obvious improvements have been landscaping projects, many of which can be seen in a drive through main post. New site furnishings, such as redwood benches and bus shelters make many areas more inviting, more comfortable and more visually pleasing. Metal garbage barrels and butt cans have also been replaced with attractive, earth-toned concrete litter containers, while several break areas have been transformed by landscaping and the placement of benches and trash receptacles to create a more pleasant atmosphere.

Another example of IOE landscaping is the courtyard at Soldiers' Plaza, which provides a pleasant resting area for inprocessing soldiers and their families, complete with a fountain, benches, picnic tables and a small playground.

DEH grounds crews and building occupants are also planting shrubs to green unsightly transformers, dumpsters and compressors.

Many building occupants have greatly improved the appearance of their buildings by undertaking landscaping projects of their own. Plants, materials and technical assistance were furnished by DEH for projects to upgrade areas around many buildings, such as the Main Post Chapel, The Federal Printing Plant and the CID Headquarters.

The U-Do-It store furnishes a wide variety of supplies and tools for do-it yourself landscaping projects. Leaf blowers, spreaders, weedeaters, wheelbarrows, edgers and rototillers are a few of the lawn and garden tools available for loan to family housing residents and building managers.

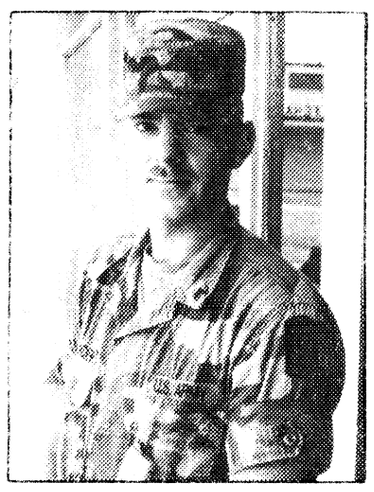
OPINION



VARIOUS VOICES: In its 213 years what is the Army's greatest impact on American society?

Maj. Bill Adams, Company C, 1st Battalion, 507th Parachute Infantry Regiment — "The greatest impact on American Society is serving a great cause by bringing in and training the young men and women who will lead this country into the next century. Those leaving the Army, will be the senators, congressmen and national leaders of the future. This process has continued for 213 years and represents our way of life."

Capt. Thomas Wallace, 70th Division, Reserves, Frazier, Michigan — "There are many ways that the Army has impacted our society, but I think the preservation of our freedom is the most important."

Cpl. Shad Alexander, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor — "I'd have to say the greatest impact on American society would still be the freedom that the Continental Army won for us when they were established. Preserving our freedom is what the Army is all about."

1st Lt. Eric Ehrmann, Company E, 2nd Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment — "I think the greatest impact the Army has had on our society is the preservation of freedom. That was the whole purpose of the Continental Army being established 213 years ago."

Officer Candidate William Kirby, Company A, 3rd Battalion, 11th Infantry — "I think the greatest impact the Army has had on American society is preserving because if the Army hadn't fought for our freedom, God knows what our country would be like."

SP4 Richard Mayfield, Company A, 3rd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment — "Basically, I think that the greatest impact that the Army has made is keeping our nation free. Without our Army, our society would not be able to do the things we take for granted."

Snively gives up TV for baseball, once

By Clyde Snively
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Baseball ain't my favorite pasttime by a long shot. But hey, when the local team has Army night, and it only costs a buck to get in, who can argue. It costs more than a dollar in electricity to stay home and watch TV for four hours.

So that's how I found myself at Golden Park, home of the Columbus Astros, this past Monday.

Everything was perfect.

First, there were the Silver Wings. Once I realized that all the chutes had opened, and the number four jumper was not going to land on the light standyard, I was able to swallow and appreciate the fact that they all hit their targets —pitcher's mound and the three bases.

Next was our great Army band. It sounds good anywhere, but for some reason Golden Park was the perfect setting. They ought to put on a concert there some evening.

The best part of the night though, was the entertainment — the OSUT soldiers — not the dancing machine, or the ballplayers, but the soldiers.

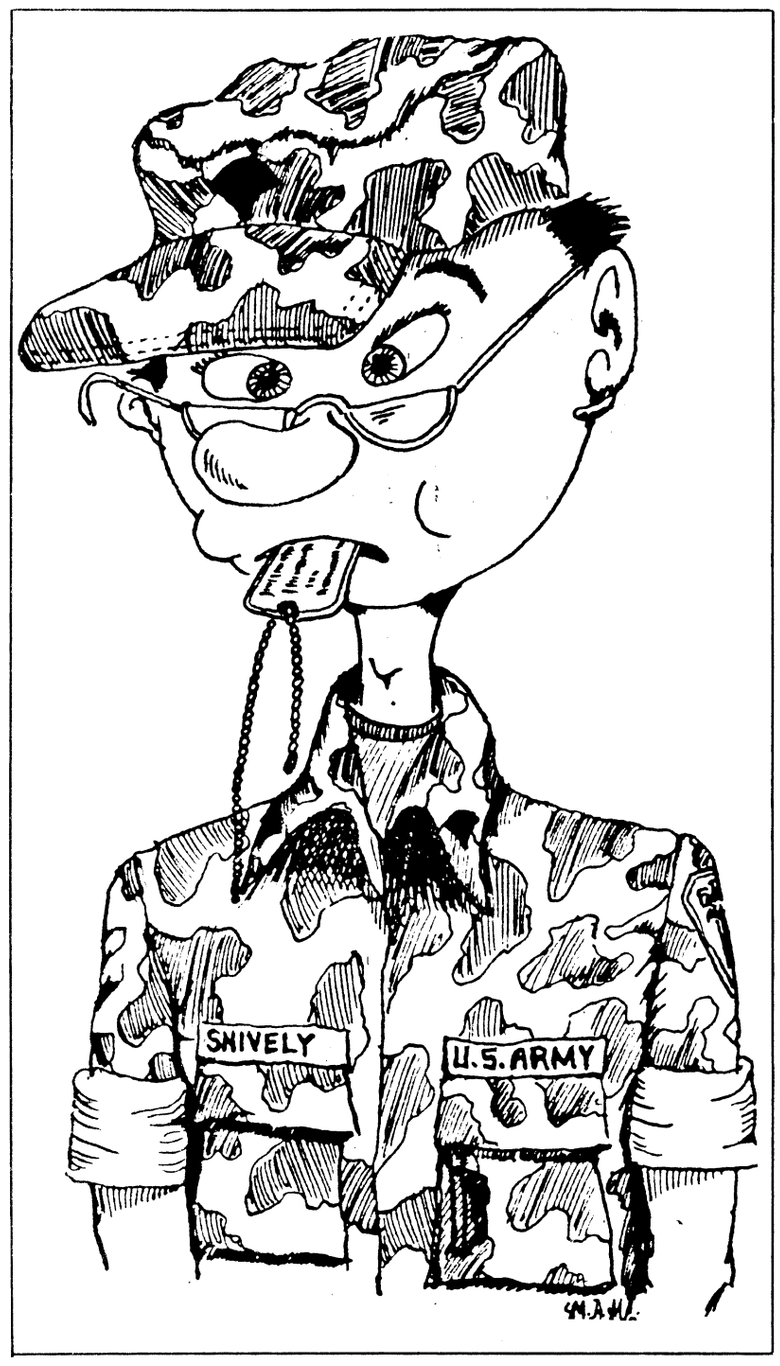
In fact without them, the home team would have been playing before but a handful of die-hard fans. No wonder they can't win. No hometown support. Although I must admit, it sure makes parking easy.

Anyway, I can't say enough about our guys in green. So what if not all the pants fit — afterall, there's a shortage of uniforms and a man's body changes shape after a few weeks of training.

And who cares that some of the hats went down to the ears or were worn akimbo. Haircuts can make a difference in head size, too. It was the spirit of the soldiers that counted.

I doubt the souvenir stand ever sold so many baseballs. I think the players must have gotten writers' cramp autographing so many balls. They probably got swollen heads, and were beginning to think they were stars, what with so many autograph seekers.

The opposing team soon put an end to those thoughts.



In that game,a base hit was as good as a double as base runners were able to steal second at will. As far as the home team's offensive punch, it was about as lethal as a marshmallow.

I know one thing. The food concessionaires must have thought there were 5,000 fans in the bleachers instead of 500. One guy, Ford, made a trip to the food booths each time there was a change of batters.

He wore a path in the concrete walkway he made so many trips. Thing is, he couldn't have been over 4-foot-11, or weighed more than 90 pounds. What did he do with all that food? I hope he made it through the night without too many nightmares.

Through it all, the Drills looked on with bemused compassion. They were probably relishing the next morning's PT.

But hey, when you're in OSUT, and get a week night out, you only live for the moment. Worry about the consequences later.

AUSA, and its corporate members done good. Maybe next year more troops will take advantage of the deal (for some, it was free thanks to corporate members donating tickets and TMP buses providing free transportation). No wonder they had so much money for food and souvenirs.

As nice an evening as Monday was, I'm sorry, I still think baseball is a passing fad.

Accidents increase during summer

June through September of each year is a particularly dangerous period. The summer months bring an increase in operational tempo to meet the demands for support of major field exercises, Reserve Component training and summer training surges post wide. In addition to the increase in training activities, during the summer months an increase in travel and recreational activities also occurs thus increasing the chance of off duty accidents.

In recognition of this problem, General Vuono has declared today as an Army-wide Safety Awareness Day. I fully support this this initiative and have directed that appropriate safety activities be conducted in all organizations at Fort Benning. Special efforts will be directed toward increasing awareness of safety associated with driving, range operations, and seasonal hazards.

As we enter this period of increased activity, each of us must reaffirm our commitment to do what is right. By ensuring that every activity we undertake is done to standard we greatly reduce the chance of injury to ourselves and those who live and work with us. Safety is a by-product of a professional and disciplined environment. Each of us must strive to develop proficiency in ourselves and others and must take proactive measures to prevent injuries both on and off duty.

Each of us must pause on this day, and every day, to look at what we do both on and off duty, and determine if we are doing it right. If we are not, immediate action must be taken to come up to standard. Only with the combined efforts of all personnel and family members on the installation can we develop a true climate of safety which both protects our people and enhances the quality of life at Fort Benning.

Vuono stresses safety consciousness

The summer months will bring an increase in operational tempo at all levels of the Army. Mission demands for aviation and ground units to support major field exercises, reserve component annual training, ROTC and military academy summer training, National Training Center and JROTC rotations will put the Army on the move.

The second half of fical year '87 was the safest six month summer training period in the past five years. Accidents were reduced in four out of the five major accident categories compared to summer '86. But, success in safety is a perishable commodity. All of us must underline the fact that we cannot let up, or be satisfied with past performance.

Leaders at all levels must be especially conscious of the need to apply the appropriate, approved tactical and technical standards rigorously in all aspects of training. If we perform our tasks and operate our equipment to these standards, we will do so safely because safety is inherent in these standards. Enforcing standards is a function of leadership: meeting the standards will enhance training, improve readiness, conserve dollars, reduce accidents and save lives.

To focus everyone's attention on the potential for mishaps due to increased operational tempo, today will be an Army-wide Safety Awareness Day. Today, operations will be kept to a minimum and Army aircraft will not be flown except those needed for operational necessities as determined by major commanders. All commanders should develop and present a program to review accident causes, emphasize the need to apply rigorously the approved tactical and technical standards, review unit accident prevention measures, and conduct appropriate safety-related classes. Safety awareness throughout the Army is our goal.

During this period of intense activity we are entering, we need a sustained effort to keep accidents at the lowest possible level. At stake is the most fundamental resource of our Army, the lives of our people. With continued attention to standards and support for safety consciousness, we will further improve our safety record.

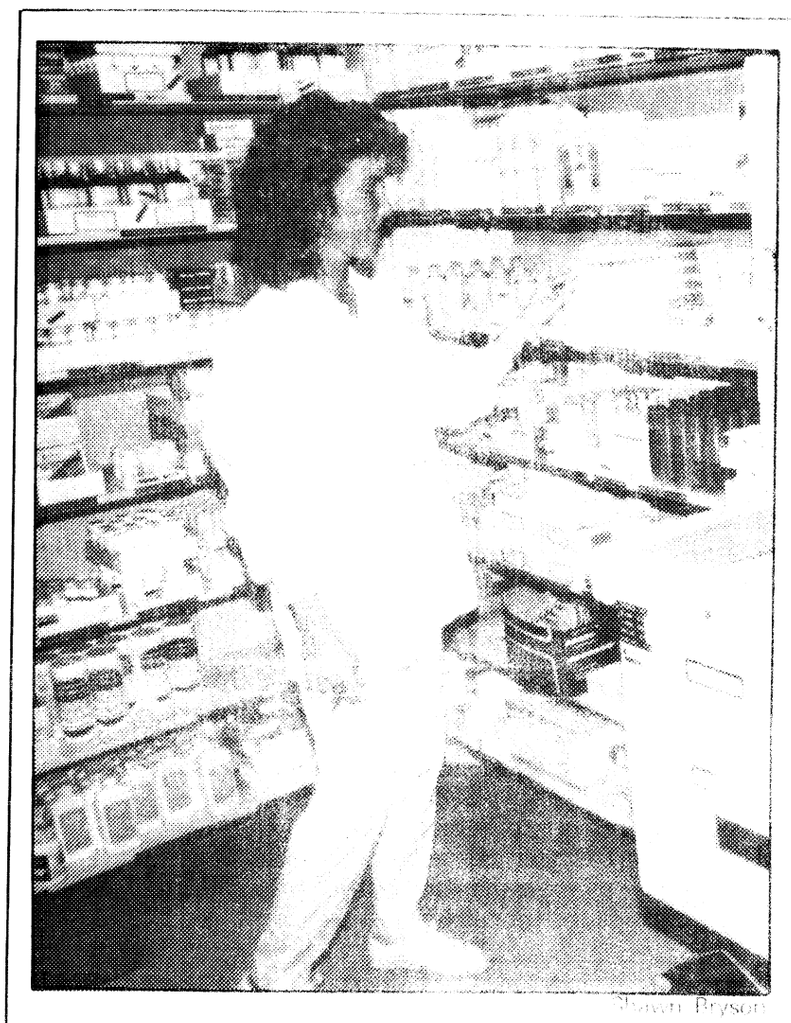
VA to review claims of radiation disability

By Bayonet Acknowledgement

The Veterans Administration has begun reviewing disability compensation claims of veterans exposed to radiation while on active duty, and their survivors, under new authority recently conferred by Congress.

Legislation signed by President Reagan May 20 authorized payments to veterans suffering from any of 13 types of cancer, and their survivors.



To qualify for the disability compensation the disease must be rated 10 percent or more disabling and the veteran must have been exposed in one of three active duty situations: participating in a test atmospheric detonation of a nuclear device, serving occupation duty in Hiroshima or Nagasaki, Japan, between Aug. 6, 1945 and July 1, 1946, or exposure while a prisoner of war in Japan.

Claims involving the 13 cancers already on file with the VA are being reviewed for eligibility. Other claims may be filed by an estimated 300,000 veterans who were in areas of possible exposure.

The diseases automatically assumed by the law to qualify for compensation are the following cancers; leukemia other than chronic lymphocytic leukemia, thyroid, breast, pharynx, esophagus, stomach, small intestine, pancreas, multiple myeloma, lymphomas except Hodgkin's disease, bile duct, gall bladder, and liver except when cirrhosis or hepatitis B is indicated.

The law restricts compensation to those veterans whose disease became evident within 40 years of exposure, beginning on the last date on which the veteran participated in a radiation-risk activity, except for leukemia, which has a 30-year limit.

Monthly compensation payments to veterans range from $71 to $1,411. Additional amounts may be awarded for certain severe disabilities. For survivors, benefits range from $518 to $1,327 a month, depending upon the pay grade of the veteran while on active duty.

PRIMUS

Vinson explained that the front desk at PRIMUS is not maintained with ordinary receptionists. "Registered nurses staff our totally computerized reception area and triage all of our patients," he said.

The PRIMUS contract ensures that the clinic uses the same standard operating procedures as MACH at Fort Benning, according to Vinson.

The clinic provides treatment for colds, flu, sprains, strains, earaches, sore throats, high blood pressure and some stablized chronic conditions, Vinson said.

Screening mammograms can be done at the clinic, as an appointment is required for the service. The clinic has routine x-ray capabilities and a cast room for simple fractures, of the fingers and toes, for example.

Although obstetrics is not offered by PRIMUS, patients are able to receive routine gynecological care, including pap smears, Vinson added.

Routine immunizations and pediatrics are other services of the clinic.

Vinson added that under the contract, all physicians are Board Eligible or Board Certified, specializing in primary care.

Users of the PRIMUS clinic do not lose any of their benefits with MACH or the Civilian Health and Medical Care Program for the Uniformed Services, according to Vinson.

The clinic operates from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. weekdays and 7 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturdays and Sundays.

The clinic has a main information line for general information and information about the current waiting times.

"Our green mode means patients should only have about a half hour wait, yellow is 45 minutes and red means we're busy and patients could expect a wait of more than an hour," Vinson said.

The general information telephone number is 569-9464, and the number to obtain information about scheduling a mammogram is 569-9368.

During planting seasons a variety of plants and bulbs are also available. The store is located on Vibert Avenue in building 385. Hours of operation are Tuesday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Saturday from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.

These landscaping improvements are symbolic of a growing sense of pride, community involvement and accomplishment for Fort Benning.

Former Secretary of Defense Casper Weinberger said in his Annual Report to Congress fiscal year '88, "We must realize that excellent facilities are force multipliers and an essential contribution to our overall defense mission. With creative management and the involvement of all personnel, excellent facilities can help bring about dramatic results."

Volunteer positions available

By K.T. Crowley
Information Volunteer Coordinator

The Volunteer Resource Center has reopened in building 241, Room 210. This is the DPCA building, next to the Infantry Museum.

The Volunteer Resource Center acts as a central clearing house of information for all volunteer organizations on post. It provides information to prospective volunteers and referrals to the various agencies.

Volunteering is a chance to broaden your world and develop your talents.

Newcomers to the area can meet people, feel a part of things and discover what is happening at Fort Benning.

People who want to do something for themselves can feel good while sharing their talents.

Volunteers are needed in the following positions:

- Tour guides: National Infantry Museum.
- Receptionist/Typist: Volunteer Resource Center.
- Data-processing: Volunteer Resource Center.
- Translators: Spanish for ACS' Camp Smiley.
- Bible School. Helpers needed for one-week program.

Please call 545-5602 or drop in to the Volunteer Resource Center for more information concerning these positions.

Hours of operation are 7:30 a.m. through 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday. The telephone number is 545-5602.

Twins enter service to become MPs

By Patrick M. Reed

Leadership course uses unique training device

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

A company of soldiers from 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry recently went to the field for some TLC.

No, not for some tender loving care, but for the Tactical Leadership Course, which is five days of intense live-fire training.

According to Tactical Leadership Branch Chief Capt. Reginald Pettus, this course is used to develop students tactically and technically and to teach them how to train and fight.

Pettus said the students attending the course come from either the Infantry Officers Basic Course, Basic Noncommissioned Officers Course, Advanced Noncommissioned Officers Course and Officers Candidate School as well as soldiers from the Individual Ready Reserve.

"Each of those groups go through the training in different degrees with the IOBC students receiving the most intense training. The IOBC students go through 20-day stations and four-night stations," he said.

Pettus added that in most cases those stations include live fire of M-16s, grenades, claymore mines, M-60 machine guns and various other

Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Theft of paycheck

May 10, Pvt. 2 Dennis L. Batiste was convicted by general court-martial of larceny and disobeying the lawful order of a noncommissioned officer. In July 1987, the accused, Batiste, received the end of month paycheck of one, Dennis A. Batiste, by mistake from the unit mail clerk. Batiste, knowing the check was not his, cashed it, thereby stealing $649 property of the U.S. Government.

In February of this year, Batiste disobeyed the Charge of Quarters when he was told to turn down his stereo. Batiste's company commander testified that Batiste's duty performance has been poor and that he has no rehabilitative potential within the Army. Batiste was sentenced to a Bad Conduct Discharge, reduction to the rank of Pvt. 1, forfeiture of $500 per month for seven months, and confinement for seven months.

ATM card theft

On May 10 and 11, two members of the 586th Engineer Company, 43rd Engineer Battalion, 36th Engineer Group were tried for the theft of an automatic teller card, the subsequent theft of funds from this account and additional offenses.

PFC Michael Bailey was convicted by general court-martial for conspiring to take an automatic teller machine card, which belonged to a fellow soldier, from a vehicle parked off post. After taking the card, Bailey stole $245 from the account at an off-post automatic teller machine with the assistance of PFC David L. Wiggins.

Bailey was also convicted of three assaults and being drunk on duty. On March 22, Bailey consumed one-half of a fifth of gin and one-half of a quart of malt liquor two hours prior to going on gaurd duty.

During his duty, he ordered a pizza to be delivered. When the pizza arrived, Bailey and the delivery man argued about the price of the pizza. Bailey was so enraged that he swung a knife at the delivery man through his car window.

On March 31, the accused was involved in a verbal argument, which escalated into a physical altercation resulting in the accused throwing rocks at two individuals with sufficient force to go through a car windshield.

Bailey was sentenced to 13 months confinement, reduction to Pvt. 1, total forfeitures of all pay and allowance and to be discharged with a bad conduct discharge.

Wiggins was also tried for the conspiracy and subsequent theft of the same ATM card and the funds from the account. In addition, Wiggins was convicted of the use of marijuana. He was sentenced to a bad conduct discharge, 130 days confinement, reduction to Pvt.1 and 2/3 forfeitures.

Bad check writing

On May 11, SSgt. Earnest L. Thompson, Jr., Noncommissioned Officer's Academy, was tried for tendering 24 worthless checks and then attempting to cover up his crime by lying to a Criminal Investigation Division Special Agent.

On Jan. 26 and 27, Thompson was interviewed by a CID agent who was investigating the circumstances surrounding more than $4,000 worth of bad checks written on the accused's account. At that time, Thompson

Two generations come together for ceremony

Ann M. McDonald

Sgt. Micheal, Col. Oren and Cadet David Oeschger take time out for a picture during their recent visit to Eubanks Field.

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

It's not unheard of to have second and third generations of families who have served in the Armed Forces. What is unusual is two of those generations serving at the same time.

Recently Col. Oren Oeschger and his sons Sgt. Micheal, and Cadet David got together at Fort Benning to spend some time with youngest Oeschger as he participated in airborne training.

Cadet Oeschger is presently a junior at George Washington University in Washington D.C. while Sgt. Oeschger is assigned to Company A, 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment. Col. Oeschger is the deputy commander for XVIII Airborne Corps, Fort Bragg, N.C.

Col. Oeschger who has more than 25 years of service under his belt said he didn't push the Army on either of his boys.

"I guess being the sons of an Army officer made them naturally turn towards serving their country as well," Col. Oeschger said, "and I'm proud of them for it especially since they both are interested in the airborne infantry."

Col. Oeschger said he has been airborne for 14 years now, and he doesn't think there is a better way to serve [illegible] regret [illegible] is field artillery.

Sgt. Oeschger who has been in the Army three years decided to follow in his fathers footsteps midway through college. He chose the rangers because he felt he stated under oath that the check book had been stolen, and that he did not know who was forging the checks. Both of these statements were later found to be false.

At trial, the evidence showed that Thompson tendered 24 checks to the Post Exchange, the First Union National Bank, Columbus Bank and Trust and the Post Commissary within one month. Thompson's defense was, that though he lied about the stolen check book, he believed that there were sufficient funds in the account to cover the amount that he had withdrawn.

Thompson was found guilty of 19 of the 24 checks along with rendering two false sworn statements to the CID agent and was sentenced to one year and one day confinement, reduction to Pvt. 1, forfeitures of $500 per month for 12 months and to be discharged with a bad conduct discharge.

Larceny of a boat

May 24, SP4 Alton L. Belyeu, was convicted by general court-martial of larceny. In early September 1987, Belyeu stole a boat and trailer worth more than $11,000 from the Fort Benning Lemon Lot. The military judge sentenced Belyeu to a Bad Conduct Discharge, reduction to Pvt. 1, and 28 months confinement. Belyeu, who is currntly serving a two-year sentence in Muscogee County for unrelated offenses will be transferred to the U.S. Army Disciplinary Barracks in Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, at the completion of his civil sentence.

The stations include mini-ambushes, zone reconnaissance, anti-armor ambushes, reaction to chemical attacks, a hand grenade course and breaching a mine field.

"One of the newest stations we have set up is the mini-ambush, which is unique in that we are using a newly developed concept," Pettus said.

According to Pettus, a cable is strung up on a pulley and dummies filled with balloons are attached. When the cable is pulled, the dummies move through the woodline simulating a patrol. When soldiers shoot the dummies, the balloons pop and the dummies drop, signifying a kill.

"As those dummies are pulled along the woodline, it really looks as though a patrol is being conducted and because of the realism, this station has proven to be very effective," he said.

Pettus said that the stations are constantly being revamped as someone discovers a more effective way to train the soldiers.

Each of the stations was built by the cadre of the Tactical Leadership Branch, all in the interest of making the training of soldiers the best it can be.

Military applicants tested for drugs

U.S. News Service

All applicants for military service are undergoing congressionally mandated testing for evidence of drug and alcohol use and dependency.

This measure began June 1, say Defense Department officials. They explain that the testing is being done at all Military Entrance Processing Stations nationwide.

The testing program covers anyone who seeks any form of military service, including the Reserve components, the Reserve Officers' Training Corps and the service academies.

Laboratory tests results serve to help determine the enlistment eligibility of the tested applicant. Applicants whose tests are confirmed positive are rejected for military service.

Officials explain that the testing process consists of the following criteria:

Alcohol content is measured via a hand-held breath analyzer or a blood-alcohol test. NOTE: A blood alcohol reading of .05 renders the applicant disqualified for further processing.

Exhibitors needed

Army News Service

Do you like to travel? Are you a self starter and able to work with little or no supervision?

Do you like to speak in front of an audience? But most of all, do you like the Army, and are you willing to tell others about it?

If you fit this description, you could become one of the Army's touring exhibitors. Exhibitors travel across America telling the Army story to high school juniors and seniors. Although not recruiters, these soldiers provide promotional assistance for them.

The U.S. Army Recruiting Support Command in Alexandria, Va., fields eight, 18-wheel exhibit trucks and eight vans that carry portable multimedia exhibits. It takes a crew of 48 exhibitors to tell the Army story to more than 125,000 prospective recruits each year.

If you're a sergeant through sergeant first class with a good Army record and are eligible for a permanent change of station move to the United States, call the Recruiting Support Command's administrative office at AUTOVON 284-6664, or write: Commander, U.S Army Recruiting Support Command, bldg. 6, Alexandria, VA 22304-5050. Find out how you can be a member of the Army's exhibit team.

HOUSING LIST

needed a radical change from college life. He intends to finish up his education and come back in as an officer.

The youngest, Cadet Oeschger is presently earning his wings and upon his commission, he is also seeking an airborne position.

All of the Oeschgers really enjoy Army life and said there is no place they would rather be than defending their country.

AUSA holds breakfast

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Association of the United States Army recently had breakfast with more than 1,000 soldiers and civilians at their quarterly breakfast.

At the breakfast, door-prizes were given out and the local chapter recognized some outstanding soldiers and civilians with some awards.

Retired Maj. Gen. Robert F. Cocklin talked on the significance of AUSA and Cy Deitrick demonstrated his singing talents after the speech.

This breakfast has become a quarterly event to show soldiers the importance of AUSA and for AUSA to recognize the people who support their organization.

SPIRITUAL

'Daddy' can be a hard word to live up to

By Donald R. Troyer
USAIS Chaplain

"Daddy" is a word that can melt the heart of even the toughest soldier. You probably remember the saying, "anyone can be a father, but it takes someone special to be a "daddy."

It often comes as a surprise to many of us fathers that this business of being a "daddy" or "dad" is a learned skill. Our modern lifestyle is sure no help. It takes a lot of effort to support a family today. So, to become a "daddy" takes some real concentration.

Another saying that stays hooked in my mind is, "the greatest thing you can do for your child is to love his mother." It makes sense that the reverse may also be true. The loving efforts of both a "mommy" and "daddy" are needed to raise children today.

I have a very active 6-year-old daughter who would try the patience of any Saint. I grieve, however, like many of you, to leave at 0-dark-30 and return that evening only to find her asleep again. I have to make a conscious effort to include her in my "busy" schedule as her "daddy." I continue to fight against TV, treats.

Religious education workshops are conducted at the REC for the community as well as teacher's training workshops.

The center is divided into several rooms, has a library and a fully-equipped kitchen, which is currently being refurbished.

At one time, the Protestant REC was located at Splinter Village, but in May 1985 was moved to Crain Hall. The Catholic REC was initially at Splinter Village, relocated to Custer Terrace, and in July moved again to Crain Hall.

The library holds approximately 4,000 volumes of Protestant, Catholic and Jewish books on theology, devotional, inspirational and reference material for grade school children through adults. The majority of the Jewish material is in Hebrew.

For children, the library offers the Arch books on Bible studies, and there is a collection of music books of children's songs. There is a large volume of reference pictures, films, videos, scripture cassettes and VCR tapes on Catholic doctrine. Previous editions of armed forces hymnals are also on the shelves.

There are two Directors for Religious Education (DREs), who coordinate all of the religious education and activities and act as advisers to Sundays-chool, CCD, youth groups, etc.

DREs are certified by the Chief of Chaplains as an Army educator before they are hired.

On the Protestant side of the house is Bill Putman, who has been at Fort Benning for nine years. Putman previously was a DRE in a civilian church in Tennessee. In 1976, Putman re-job pressures and special interests that rob me of special moments with my little girl. Yet, I fail so many times "to be all I could be" to her. But God has given me His grace and the Golden Rule to do more than just give her lip service.

I'm often challenged and encouraged by the picture of "our Father" that Jesus gave us. When he told us the story of the Prodigal Son (Luke 15), it was meant to point out the real hearts of so-called godly men. At the same time, He revealed His Father, whom He would later call "daddy" in front of His surprised disciples. God is consistently revealed as one who is more eager to give than receive.

His love shows us patience — and even painful adjustments — to remain as our "Heavenly Father."

I'm a proud Dad that will continue to push myself, even when I'm exhausted, to be a "daddy." And I know it's easier if I remember how much has been done for me? I'm thankful a special day exists for Fathers. However, the real role as "Father," "Dad," and "Daddy" sure seems like an earned — not a granted title.

Religious Education Center is hub of various activities

By Jo Ann Stamey
USAIC Chaplain's Office

The Religious Education Center (REC), also known as Crain Hall, also known as building 229, is the "hub" for Protestant, Catholic, and Jewish religious education, activities and special events at Fort Benning.

To name just a few — the REC is the meeting place on Sunday morning for one of the four Bible Schools. Catholic pre-marriage classes, as well as pre-baptism classes for parents are held at the REC. During the winter months, adult education classes are held on Sunday, and English classes on Tuesday evenings for those for whom English is a second language. The Latter Day Saints Women's group meets once a month, and the Protestant and Catholic women's groups board meetings are held here also. On Tuesday's, the Sacramental Preparation Program is held, and on Friday, the Navigators' Bible Study meets. On Friday night, the REC is the scene for Jewish services, and Saturday mornings Jewish religious education takes place.

Also, the Protestant and Catholic youth groups use the REC to hold their meetings and participate in overnight lock-in re-

Chapel offerings collected to assist needy Panamanians

By Jessica R. Harding
Chief of Chaplain's Office

More than $40,000 in chapel offerings from Army families have been collected to assist needy Panamanians.

The collection effort, which recently was endorsed for Army-wide chapel family participation by Army Chief of Chaplains, Chap. (Maj. Gen.) Norris L. Einertson, has continued to bring in additional offerings.

The ideas for those "designated offerings" originated with the commander of the U.S. Army Southern Command in Panama, said Einertson's director for resource management, Chap. (Col.) James Edgren. "He (the SOUTHCOM commander) had asked his staff chaplain to explore ways to provide basic necessities to persons in the command's immediate vicinity."

In turn, realizing the magnitude of the Panamanians' plight, SOUTHCOM chaplain (Col.) Mike Ortiz (former Fort Benning Post Chaplain), sought Einertson's endorsement for a wider contribution base.

"The offerings are being earmarked for such humanitarian aid as food and clothing," Edgren said. We've received responses to the call from posts as far away as western Europe and Korea."

He explained that chapel offerings, an integral part of worship at Army, provide the means for enhancing religious programs and promoting the moral, spiritual and ethical climate of the Army.

"These offerings," Edgren continued, "may be designated for use in missionary work, benevolent programs and philanthropic projects — the same as you'll find supported by civilian churches, synagogues and temples.

In reflecting on the American families' generosity, Einertson said, "I'm gratified to note once again that Army families worldwide have responded to the needs of the Panamanian people with compassion and love. These designated offerings will provide food and clothing for many people."

Fort Benning has donated $4,600 in offerings — more than any other Army post — to help in this worthy cause.

CHAPEL BRIEFS

PROTESTANTS

Special Day at TIC Chapel: The Infantry Center Chapel will hold a special afternoon/evening of events Sunday on the chapel grounds. Beginning at 5 p.m., there will be games, music and fellowship, followed by a cookout at 7 p.m. on the patio. At 8 p.m., a 30-minute service, rededicating the sanctuary to the Lord, will be held in the chapel. During the rededication service, acknowledgements and appreciations will be offered for projects completed at the chapel during the past three years. For information, call the chapel office at 545-2050/2359. If you plan to attend the cookout portion of the events, please let the chapel staff know how many will be in your group.

Monthly Prayer Breakfast: The monthly Prayer Breakfast will be held Tuesday, 6:30 a.m. in the TIC Chapel Annex. The breakfast is free, and everyone is invited to attend.

PWOC: The Protestant Women invite you to attend their Christian Women's fellowship every Thursday, beginning this Thursday, 9:30 a.m. in the Religious Education Center. They will study Proverbs. Free baby-sitting will be provided for all ages at the Religious Education Center. Come and join our group. For information, call Debbie Godwin at 687-7157 or Annette Saul at 682-1157.

CATHOLIC

Pre-Baptism class: There will be a Pre-Baptism class Sunday at 1 p.m. in the Religious Education Center (building 229). All parents planning to have their children baptized in the Catholic Church are required to attend the class. For additional information and registration, call Phil Reilly at 545-2771.

MCCW: The Military Council of Catholic Women is beginning a "third Tuesday evening" program for women in the parish who work and are in the military. The group begins Tuesday. Everyone is invited to attend. For further information, call 545-2771.

AUSA CORNER

By Jim Gallagher
Chapter president

Thursday, the chapter will hold its summer membership meeting at the main post NCO Club, starting at 6:30 p.m. The summer membership meeting is one of three general membership get-togethers held each year.

A few years ago, it was decided to split the chapter functions between the downtown facilities and the post facilities to avoid overburdening either.

The ticket cost for attendance at the NCO Club meeting is considerably less than downtown and offers a more reasonable opportunity for enlisted members to attend and participate in a membership meeting.

The summer meeting has two key items on its agenda. First, the membership will elect the chapter officers for the operational year 1988-1989. This includes a chapter president, 1st and 2d vice-presidents, and eight directors.

As a way of providing continuity and developing leaders the chapter by-laws provides for the 1st vice president to succeed to the chapter president office and the 2d vice to move up to the 1st vice. In effect, the person then elected to become the 2d vice president will be the chapter president two years later.

Following the election, the new officers will be installed in a brief ceremony that will be presided over by Sloan Gibson, who serves as the AUSA president for the state of Georgia.

Sloan served at Fort Benning in 1976-1977 as the aide to the assistant commandant, the late Gen. Fred Mehaffey.

The second item of importance on the agenda is the announcement of the winner of the Livingston Award. This award was created in 1984 by Cliff O. Livingston, a charter member of the local civilian-military council and this chapter for many years. The award is presented to a corporate member who has given generously of his time and efforts toward attainment of the chapter goals.

ASK THE JUDGE

By Jessica L. Kole
Office of the Staff Judge Advocate

Q. I recently received an offer in the mail that claims it can help my estate avoid probate. All I have to do is spend $40 for a kit that shows me how to create something called a living trust. What is a living trust? Can I save my estate some money by making one?

A. A living trust is a legal document that is created when you, the "settlor", give title to your property to another individual, called the "beneficiary." The beneficiary now "owns" the property, but he or she cannot legally touch it, except as directed by the trust document.

You, or someone you appoint, will act as the "trustee" of the trust, and have the power and responsibility to manage the property. The trustee must act for the benefit of the beneficiary as long as the trust is in effect.

At a specific time framed in the trust agreement, usually upon your death or disability, control of the property passes to the beneficiary.

Even if you decide to create a living trust, you will still need a will. It is unlikely that all of your assets will be included in your trust, and some affairs will still need to be settled. The living trust may have some advantages. The property contained in the trust is not held up while a will is being probated. But, creating a living trust will have no effect on your tax situation, since all trust assets will be included in your gross estate for federal estate tax purposes.

The best way to protect your loved ones is usually to prepare a simple will. Virtually all states have updated their probate procedures so that your survivors should be able to settle your affairs with a minimum of time and expense.

If you would like to prepare a will or discuss other estate options with an attorney, call the legal assistance office at 545-3281 to schedule an appointment.

ceived his graduate degree from Virginia Presbyterian School of Christian Education — a part of the Richmond Theological Center, to become a DRE. This is the only school in the United States that specifically trains DREs.

Prior to receiving his graduate degree, Putman was in the Army for 15 years — as an infantry officer — and spent 30 months in Vietnam. Putman spent five years at Fort Benning when he was in the military, and when the Protestant DRE job opened, he decided he wanted to come to Fort Benning again to contribute his services as a DRE to the community.

One of Putman's biggest accomplishments is building up the library and obtaining more up-to-date reference material. Putman said, "One of the highlights of my job is the wonderful support of the volunteers — we wouldn't be able to function without them."

The Catholic DRE is Phil Reilly, who arrived at Fort Benning in January 1981. Reilly came to us from Hawaii, where he worked at Queen's Medical Center as the director of Outpatient Services. From 1976-1978, Reilly was in Guam, where he opened a Catholic hospital.

For 18 years, Reilly worked as a missionary in the Far East and has actually spent his entire life working in the religious education area.

He is a member of the Columbus Area Religious Educators, which consists of all the DREs in the local parishes. As far as accomplishments, Reilly feels Fort Benning has the best Confirmation Program in the system.

Also, he says he receives great personal fulfillment in getting the parents involved in the Catholic programs and developing the lay leaders.

The REC is located on the corner of Ingersoll Street and Dixie Road, and is open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. For further information on Protestant activities, call Bill Putman at 545-2366/4715. For Catholic information, call Phil Reilly at 545-5508/2366.

Hard bodies, glistening with oil, stood upon the Marshall Auditorium stage last Saturday, flexing their muscles and flashing smiles, each with the hopes of walking away with the title of Mr. or Ms. Fort Benning 1988.

Jobie Roach, Co. A, 1st Bn., 29th Inf. Regt. and Barbara Thomas, family member, won the titles Mr. and Ms. Fort Benning respectively.

According to contest coordinator, Speedy Austin, the competition for the women was tough, and the judges had a hard time deciding which of the women would be crowned the winner.

"The women were very closely matched," Austin said. "Thomas edged them out because her upper body was so strong."

Austin said he believes that with some more work each of the women is ready for a higher level of competition.

On the men's side of the house, Roach had a slight edge going into the competition, according to Austin.

"Roach's size and experience really helped him in the men's competition," Austin said. "The fight was really between second and third throughout the competition."

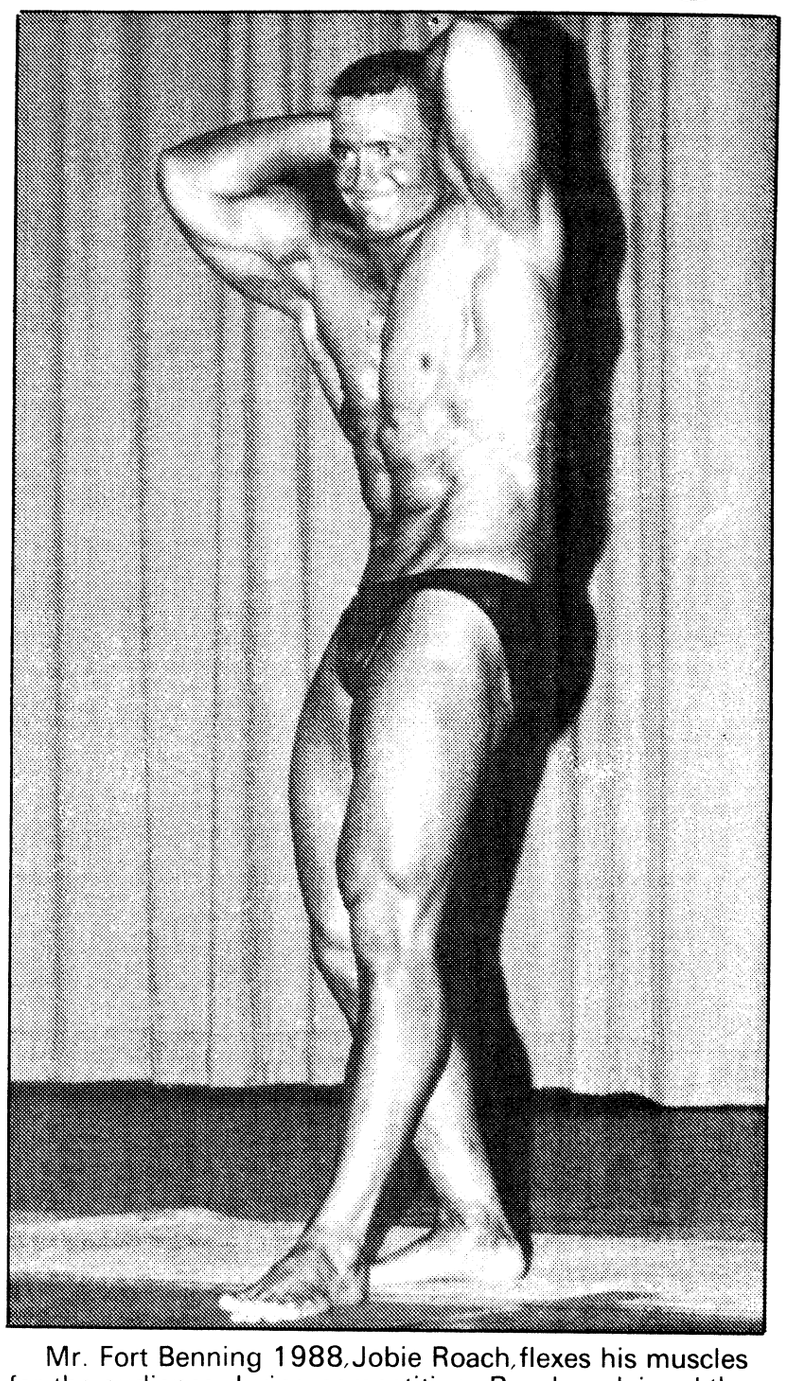
Upon completion of the contest, Thomas commented on her newly acquired title. "I really felt good while I was out there," she said. "I've worked very hard for this title. I set my mind on winning as soon as the competition was over last year, and I did it."

Roach said he had that same thought in his mind after the contest last year in which he placed second, losing his 1986 title.

"I wanted to win, and I went on that stage with my mind set on doing just that," he said. "No one remembers second place. I was not about to settle for that."

Roach said when you go out on that stage, you have to be confident. "The confidence that you demonstrate is noticed by the crowd and the judges. That is a part of bodybuilding."

He said the other part is diet, genetics and the support of everyone around you.



"My entire command really supported my quest for the title," he said. "They allowed me time to train properly so that I could win."

Roach said his wife Denise and his friend Garnet Boudreau also played an important part in his training. Now he going to return that support by helping his wife train for the upcoming Southeastern bodybuilding contest and aid his friend Boudreau in his quest for the Mr. Fort Benning Powerlifting title.

As for himself, he said he will be preparing for the upcoming All-Army Powerlifting trials for which he qualified this past spring.

Magruder III promoted by retired colonel Magruder II

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

Retired Col. Lawson W. Magruder Jr. took his eagles out of retirement last week to promote his son Lawson W. Magruder III to colonel in a ceremony conducted in front of Infantry Hall.

The younger Magruder will now be moving on to Hawaii where he will command 2nd Brigade, 25th Infantry Division, and he will also have the notable distinction of being the youngest brigade commander in the Army.

At age 40 with 19 years in service, the younger Magruder is also the youngest colonel in the Army.

Aside from holding those distinctions, McGruder will have left his mark on Fort Benning in many ways. While here, he served as the Chief of Tactics and Deputy Director of the Combined Arms and Tactics Department of the United States Infantry School and the president of the Pastoral Council for the post Catholic community.

According to McGruder, this past assignment has been very special to him for many reasons.

He said for one, his father held a similar position with the Infantry School and another is that he has learned a lot more about the Infantry branch, which will, he feels, help him be a better commander.

"My role as the president of the Pastoral Council was also very rewarding," McGruder said. "I've had a chance to work with civilians as well as military."

He said he didn't push his position with the council with the people in his workplace. "I feel there is a place for religion within the military, but it is a private thing and not something that should be forced upon someone else."

As far as his other accomplishments, he accredits them to a good solid base.

"I've been very fortunate throughout my entire career," he said. "I've worked for wonderful folks who allowed me the opportunity to grow."

He said that he was told early in his career, remember your friends because you may meet them on the way down.

"That advice is something I have always taken to heart," McGruder said. "To put it in a nutshell, I simply do unto others as I would unto myself."

Post dogs become a problem for meter reader

By Becky Ray
Energy Management Office

Each month, even in the coldest days of winter and the hottest dog days of summer, John Gallagher, a utilities clerk for the Directorate of Engineering and Housing, reads utilities meters all over Fort Benning. Gallagher is a retired Army sergeant and has been reading meters for more than three years.

Although he enjoys his work, Gallagher says his biggest problem on the job is dogs. Many family housing occupants chain their dogs near meters, making it difficult or dangerous for him to take a reading. Other occupants have dogs in fenced yards where the meters are located. He said he is an animal lover but admits that many dogs he encounters make him nervous. Even the friendliest dog can pose a threat to a stranger who invades his perceived territory.

Trying to locate an occupant whose dog won't allow the meter to be read can take lots of time and can cause several trips to the same area. Time is critical to Gallagher, who must read more than 700 meters (more than 400 in family housing areas) at least once a month.

If you keep a dog outside family housing quarters, please keep the dog secured away from meters if possible. This will save the meter reader time and will help ensure his safety.

Meters are normally read on the last week of the month or the first week of the following month. The day on which the meter is read may vary, but readings are taken every month without fail. As Gallagher is fond of saying, "Rain, hail, snow or sleet — the meter reader's on his feet."

Ratification was a fierce political struggle

Spirit of 1788
Ratification of the Constitution

"It . . . seems to have been reserved to the people of this country . . . to decide . . . whether societies of men are really capable or not, of establishing good government from reflection and choice, or whether they are forever destined to depend, for their political constitutions, on accident and force."
Alexander Hamilton, The Federalist No. 1

Great as the struggle was to frame the Constitution in 1787, the fullest exposition of its political theory did not come until 1788. The debate over ratification inspired the greatest outpouring of political discourse America has ever produced. Federalists and Anti-Federalist flooded the nation with pamphlets and articles under such symbolic pseudonyms as Agrippa, Brutus, Centinel, a Federal Farmer, an American Citizen Americanus, Countryman and Landholder.

If, in Alexander Hamilton's words, Americans were seeking through "reflection and choice" — that is, through reason — to establish good government then the moment was at hand for a flood of reasoned appeals.

Far and away the greatest contribution to the war of words was the series of 85 essays that Hamilton, James Madison and John Jay composed for publication in New York newspapers under the title of "The Federalist".

Though it is not certain that these essays swayed so much as a single vote in the ratifiying conventions in New York or elsewhere, "The Federalist" was, in Thomas Jefferson's view, "the best commentary on the principles of government ever written."

It remains invaluable to anyone seeking a better understanding of what the Constitution was meant to accomplish, from the humblest student to the justices of the Supreme Court.

Under the pseudonym "Publius," the three authors set out to reassure the public that the Constitution would help restore prosperity to a country wracked by economic depression, that it was truly republican and not covertly monarchist in drift, that only a strong federal government could truly resolve sectional differences and that "the (state) governments . . . will retain their due authority and activity" within relation to the strengthened union.

It was James Madison, in the closely reasoned "The Federalist No. 10," who made the classic case for the advantages of large republics over small ones. "The influence of factious leaders may kindle a flame within their particular States, but will be unable to spread a general conflagration through the other States: a religious sect, may degenerate into a political faction in a part of the Confederacy; but the variety of sects dispersed over the entire face of it, must secure the national Councils against any danger from that source: a rage for paper money, for an abolition of debts, for an equal division of property or for any other improper or wicked project, will be less apt to pervade the whole body of the Union, than a particular member of it; in the same proportion as such a malady is more likely to taint a particular county or district, than an entire State."

The Anti-Federalist case had its share of eloquence as well — particularly in Virginia, where Patrick Henry provided the strongest leadership Anti-Federalist were to muster anywhere in the country. Henry's speeches in the ratifiying convention ran as much as seven hours at a stretch, and when not harping on the threat to Virginia's sover-

Contractural agreement dictates electrical curtailment at Benning

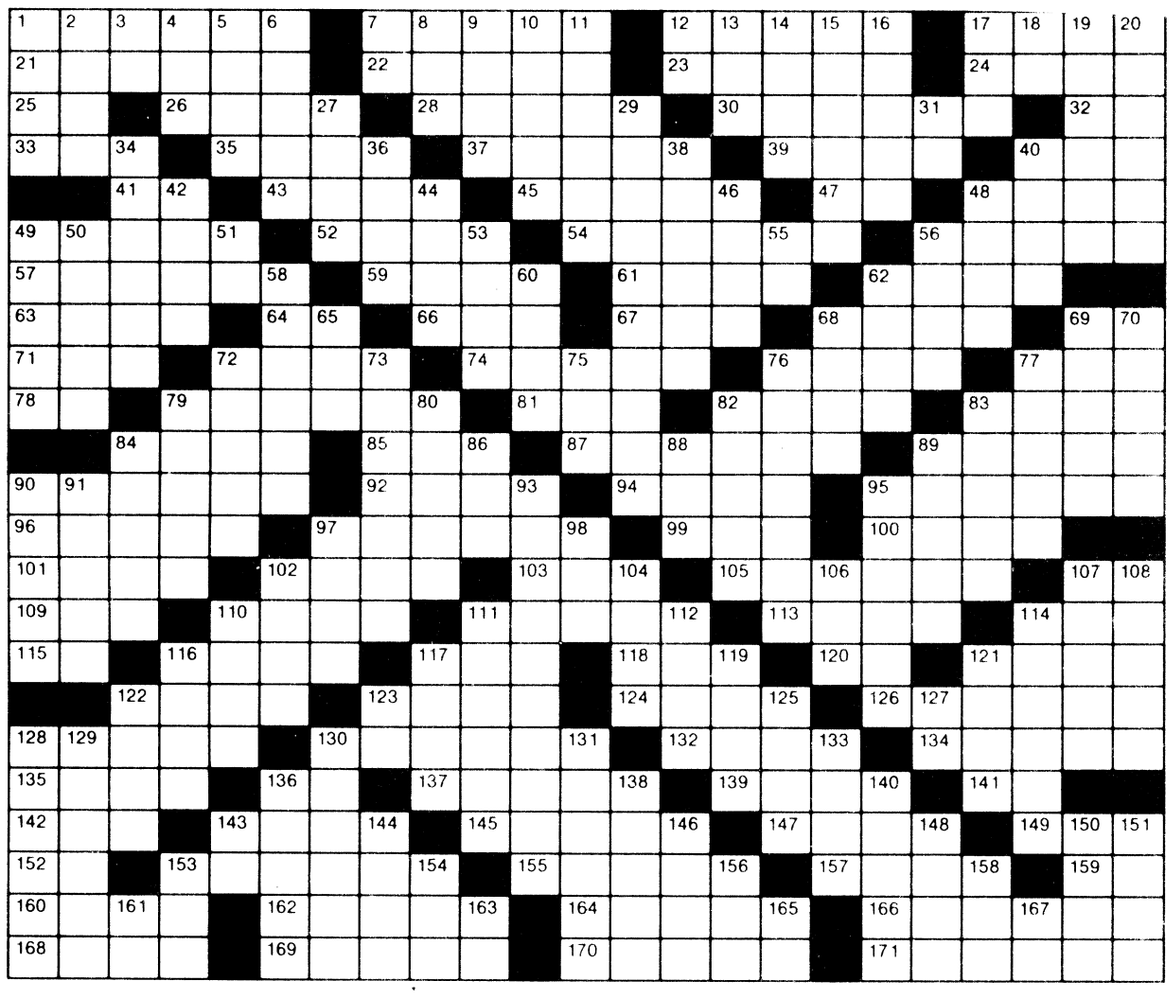
By Becky Ray
Energy Management Office

Occasionally, the Directorate of Engineering and Housing's Energy Management and Control System (EMCS) is used to curtail (turn off) air conditioning in most Fort Benning facilities when electricity is at great demand.

A common misconception is that curtailment is a means to meet energy goals by cutting back on electrical use. The true reason for curtailment, however, is to comply with the contractural agreement Fort Benning has with Georgia Power Company, from which much of the post's electricity is purchased.

Since Fort Benning is the largest single electrical consumer in Southeast Georgia and the eighth largest in the state, we have a civic obligation to assist the Georgia Power Company when the demand for electricity approaches its capacity to produce it. Fort Benning has taken advantage of the fact that it can control our use (demand) of electricity. When Georgia Power is operating at maximum capacity, users with special agreements are asked to curtail demand in order to meet needs for all customers. Fort Benning has such an agreement and complies by reducing electrical loads (load shedding).

In return, Georgia Power allows Fort Benning to purchase electricity at a reduced rate. The substantial savings realized from this reduced rate allows the post to provide air conditioning earlier and later in the season than would be possible otherwise.



During air conditioning season in 1987, daily savings due to this reduced rate ranged from $1,000 to $1,500, with a bottom line savings of almost $400,000 for the year. The money saved was used to cool community buildings before and after the normal cooling season. Projected savings for fiscal year 1988 are $575,000.

Even though curtailments normally occur during very warm weather, air conditioning systems are cycled on again as conditions permit to maintain a degree of comfort for building occupants. In all of 1987, there were only six curtailment periods, ranging from 30 minutes to three hours.

In curtailing electrical usage during peak periods, Fort Benning aids the surrounding community by allowing sufficient power to be distributed to other consumers. This curtailment may cause a slight inconvenience for some post personnel and residents, but overall it is a small price to pay for the benefits received.

SNAPSHOTS: EDUCATION

ARNEWS-Army Snapshot: 10 quotes about the importance of education.

"Formal education is but an incident in the lifetime of an individual. Most of us who have given the subject any study have come to realize that education is a continuous process ending only when ambition comes to a halt."

Frank Borman

"You cannot teach anybody anything that he does not want to learn."

George Sampson

"The world and the universe is a great and exciting place. The mind is like any organ the more it's used, the greater its capacity becomes."

Dorothy Fuldheim

"Learning how to learn is fundamental to a good education because those skills stay with us all our lives. For me, education is still a daily experience. On the best days I learn a lot."

Philip Caldwell

"Undertake something that is difficult; it will do you good. Unless you try to do something beyond what you have already mastered, you will never grow."

Ronald E. Osborn

"What is defeat? Nothing but education, the first step to something better."

Wendell Phillips

"Genius is one percent inspiration and 99 percent perspiration I never did anything worth doing by accident, nor did any of my inventions come by accident; they came by work."

Thomas Edison

Adult Scouts of Fort Benning District honored

USAIC Public Affairs Office

It was not the usual scouting awards ceremony, no one in the room was younger than 18 years old. But for those being recognized, their involvement will be felt by many local young boys well into the next generation.

Adult Scouts of the Fort Benning District were honored recently for the time and effort they have given during the past year to the Boy Scouts and Cub Scouts of the post.

For one of the awardees, the scouting connection goes back 25 years.

Inge Wills, who serves as the commissioner of Cub Scouts Roundtables and as Cubmaster of Pack 54, received the Veteran Service Award for her service to Boy Scouting.

Honored for his leadership and displaying the spirit of scouting and the Infantry, James S. Mason Jr. of Pack 54 received the Follow Me Award.

"We are always in need of adult Scouts," said Lt. Col. Richard Rhoades, vice chairman of the district. "We can be thankful for those who volunteered last year and gave of themselves to the young boys of our district."

Guest speaker Brig. Gen. William W. Hartzog also stressed the importance of volunteer adults.

"We must remember that a better world of tomorrow begins with the youth of today," he said. "And our kids will only have a chance if those who care about them get involved."

"I will never forget," he said, "the time and effort of my adult supervisors when I was a young scout. I learned from them the importance of being prepared."

Others receving awards were:

BOY SCOUTS

ScoutMaster of the Year: Charles Andre, Troop 27

Assistant Scoutmaster of the Year: Jack Hardwick, Troop 27

Committee Chairperson of the Year: Joan Wells, Troop 238

Committee Person of the Year: Laura Garduno, Troop 27

Scouters Husband Award: Paul Castellano, Pack 227

W.T. Wills, Pack 54 Scouters Wife Award: Inge Mason, Troop 135 Billie Smith, Troop 238

The final award of the evening went to Richard Rhoades, who as vice commissioner of the Fort Benning District, is responsible for the making all the Scouting programs happen. Hartzog concluded the ceremonies by awarding Rhoades the District Award of Merit.

"This is the type of individual who really cares and whose influence will be felt for many years in the future," said Hartzog.

Boy Scouts and Cub Scouts are always in need of adult volunteers. For more information about how to get involved, call Maj. Jim Hill, 545-4002/1863.

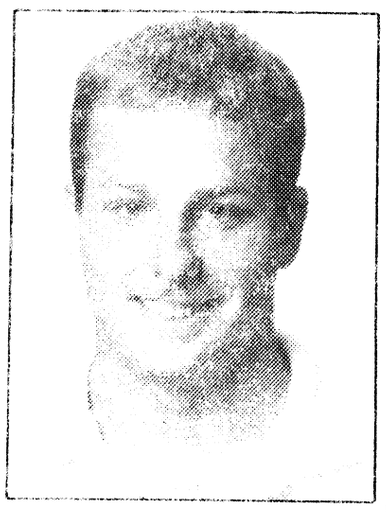
Local ROTC cadet wins award

Columbus College

Columbus, Ga. — Daniel P. Goldthorpe, a cadet in Columbus College's Reserve Officers' Training Corps (ROTC) program, was recently honored as one of approximately 350 students nationwide who received the George C. Marshall ROTC Award.



This award is the highest honor that can be received by a student participating in the Reserve Officer's Training Corps.

The award recognizes outstanding seniors in military science and leadership from more than 300 colleges and universities with ROTC detachments in all 50 states, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico and Guam.

The award was established to honor the qualities of leadership and selfless dedication as exhibited by Gen. Marshall, who served his country as U.S. Army Chief of Staff, Secretary of State and Secretary of Defense. Marshall also received the Nobel Peace Prize.

Goldthorpe received his award at the annual Marshall ROTC Leadership Seminar held at the George C. Marshall Foundation headquarters adjacent to the campus of Virginia Military Institute, Marshall's alma mater, in Lexington, Va.

Goldthorpe, a political science major, received a regular Army commission as a second lieutenant in the U.S. Army infantry, in ceremonies held at the Columbus College campus on June 14.

Daniel P. Goldthorpe

He is married to Tammy K. Goldthorpe of Columbus, and is the son of Claire Strand of Dodgeville, Wis.

It's that time of year to watch for cyclists

Fort Benning Safety Office

There are a lot of little people (and some big people) on the roadways with bicycles this time of year. As bicyclists, they should be practicing good safe bike riding techniques. As auto drivers however, we should give them the benefit of the doubt by watching out for them, practicing good safe driving techniques and using common road courtesy. July and August is vacation and fun time for our kids. Their bicycles get them to the playground, swimming pool, the corner store or a friend's house several times a day.

Sometimes they ride a little too fast or unaware of traffic situations because of all that's on their busy minds. Remember your summer vacations as a kid? Was SAFE bike riding really on your mind at ALL times? I know it. My mind was always on baseball, swimming, etc. and getting there as fast as I could with my Huffy. Some defensive driving on your part can keep their summer fun going without injury or possible tragedy.

On the same token, parents can help by insisting that their little bikers watch for traffic and practice a little common sense and road courtesy themselves. Parents should also examine the bike to see that it's a safe bike for their child to ride. The parent's attitude towards safety in general will most likely affect the child's attitude towards safe bike riding. This may even carry on into the day they decide to get themselves a motorcycle. Think about that one for a minute.

"What's going on at Twilight Pond?" This question is circulating among many Fort Benning fishermen.

Personnel from the Natural Resources Management Division have drained the pond four to five feet below normal pool level to facilitate the construction of an intake valve/pipe for a new central wash rack at Kelley Hill.

While the water level is down, personnel from Natural Resources and Facilities, Maintenance and Operations Divisions are cooperating in an effort to renovate the pond edge. Presently, a drag-line is being used to cut the existing edge approximately two to four feet deeper. This action will increase water depth along the edge when the water is raised. The deeper water will prevent or decrease pond weed growth and thus enhance fishing opportunities.

In addition, fish attractors in the form of used automobile tires will be placed in strategic locations throughout the renovated area. These will provide protection for smaller fish.

Catfish feeding, liming and fertilizing have been temporarily haulted but will resume when the water level is raised.

eignty, they revivified the cause of liberty.

"The first thing I have at heart is American liberty," thundered Henry. "The second thing is American Union. The rights of conscience, trial by jury, liberty of the press, all your immunities and franchises, all pretensions to human rights and privileges, are rendered insecure, if not lost, by this change so loudy talked of by some and inconsiderately by others."

"Is this same relinquishment of rights worthy of free men? Is it worthy of that manly fortitude that ought to characterize republicans. It is said eight states have adopted this plan. I declare that if twelve states and a half had adopted it, I would with manly fitness, and in spite of an erring world, reject it.

You are not to inquire how your trade may be increased, nor how you are to become a great and powerful people, but how your liberties can be secured; for liberty ought to be the direct end of your government."

Though Henry's final blasts at the Convention were accompanied by a violent thunderstorm outdoors, his oratorical power could not win the day. A majority of the delegates had decided their liberties and their future were secure under the Constitution, though they held firmly to the promise of the bill of rights to be added to it.

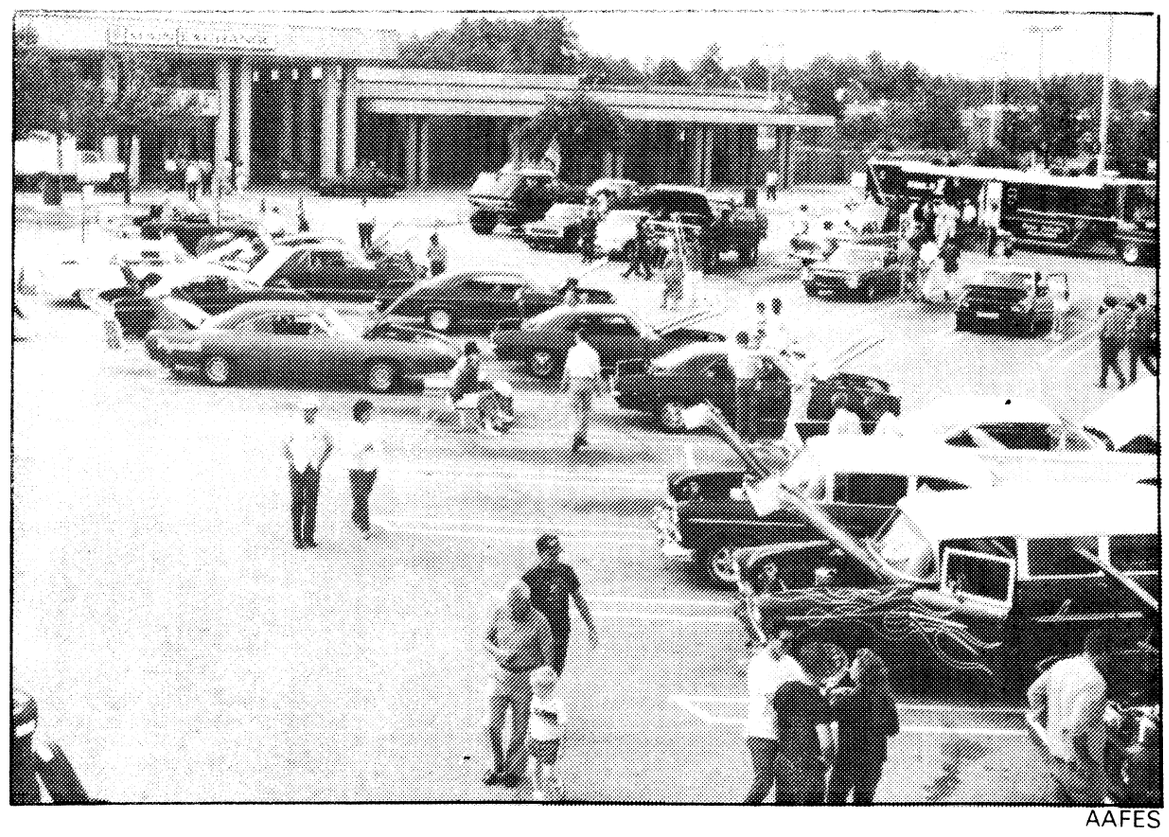
AAFES hosts annual car show

Fort Benning, AAFES



Picture this: 9 a.m. Saturday morning; the Main PX had just opened, the parking lot is lined with tents and trailers, hundreds of customers milling around, smiles on their faces, cameras in hand. The excitement abundant.

Why? It was Freewheelin II, Fort Bennings' second annual car show, held recently in the main exchange parking lot. The focal point of this event was the nearly 50 custom and specialty cars on display. Each was competing for a first, second or third place trophy in one of the seven car show classes, plus a people's choice trophy and $100, or the best of show trophy, which included a cash award.

This year's car show like the one held the year before was an AAFES team effort. Fort Benning Exchange, WGAX Area and SEER personnel combined their talents in planning, coordinating and working the event. Vendor participation was excellent, Dave Schultz, the NHRA Pro Stock Champion and his Eagle I sponsored Ninja Kawasaki motorcycle along with the "Vette Under Glass," a 1970 Corvette, sponsored by Liquid Glass, dazzled the crowd with their displays, technical knowledge, product demonstrations and friendliness. Dave Schultz fired up his "Ninja" and performed a "burnout" that impressed everyone. A BMX bicycle demonstration was given by two local boys who amazed spectators with their trick riding skills. Our 1-hour Photo concessionaire became the self-appointed "official photographer" and captured the event on film. He also provided complementary photos to all trophy winners.

This event was deemed a tremendous success and the entire community benefited. Once again, the AAFES team caused good things to happen. Our bond with the command has strenghtened and the local community has a better awareness of our presence and a better understanding of our function in supporting military life.

What's ahead? Next year, it will be bigger and better as Fort Benning is on a roll.

Running during darkness constitutes a safety hazard

By Patrick M. Reed
Military Police Activity

At 5 a.m. your alarm goes off, and it's out of bed and into your running clothes. After a few stretching exercises you are on the street by 5:30 a.m.

It's cool, a little humid, and oh, so dark. (Some people love to run in the dark — maybe so they can't see how far they have to run!) You turn onto Dixie Road to run on that long open stretch, your pace and breathing are in sync, and you feel like you are gliding across terra firma, not a care in the world.

However, your troubles may be just beginning, unless you practice some routine safety precautions.

Troops running in formation in darkness constitute a safety hazard to traffic and themselves. For this reason, they are required to use flashlights and road guards, front and rear, wear reflective vests, as well as have some members of the formation on the outside columns.

Whether an enthusiast who craves more than just the normal PT run or the casual runner who's trying to lose a few extra pounds, one takes a big risk running during the hours of darkness.

The safest time to run, of course, is during daylight hours. However due to normal working hours and the soon to be intense summer heat, this may not be practical. If you must run during hours of darkness, then the following safety precautions should be followed:

- Run in lighted areas if possible. Most housing areas have adequate lighting to make you more visible to oncoming traffic.
- Wear reflective vests or bands. There are reflective tape strips commercially available for runners. All in combination offer a greater degree of visibility.
- Wear light colored clothing.
- Always run facing traffic.
- Don't run on the roadway, stay on the shoulder of the road.
- Never challenge moving vehicles for the right of way. You may be legally right, but you could end up "dead wrong."
- Try to avoid running during peak traffic hours or in congested areas. Avoid main thoroughfares such as Dixie Road/1st Division Road, and Benning Boulevard/10th Mountain Division Road.
- Carry some type of identification. Most running clothes do not provide pockets, but there are commercially produced pouches available for attachment to runner's shoes or waist. Information should include your name, address, phone number and any medical alert information.

There are some definite "don'ts" for running at Fort Benning. Runners are subject to the same regulations as walking pedestrians. They must avoid impeding traffic and creating a traffic hazard or run the risk of being cited by the military police.

Examples of citable offenses and unsafe practices are:

- Wearing of headphones that cover both ears or restrict the hearing of normal sound levels.
- Running on the roadways (other than in unit formations).
- Any act that could reasonably be expected to create a potentially hazardous situation.

Running is a means to improve your health. Don't be counter productive and needlessly endanger your life.

HHC, 197th Inf Bde wins

By Kevin J. Howerton
197th Infantry Brigade correspondent

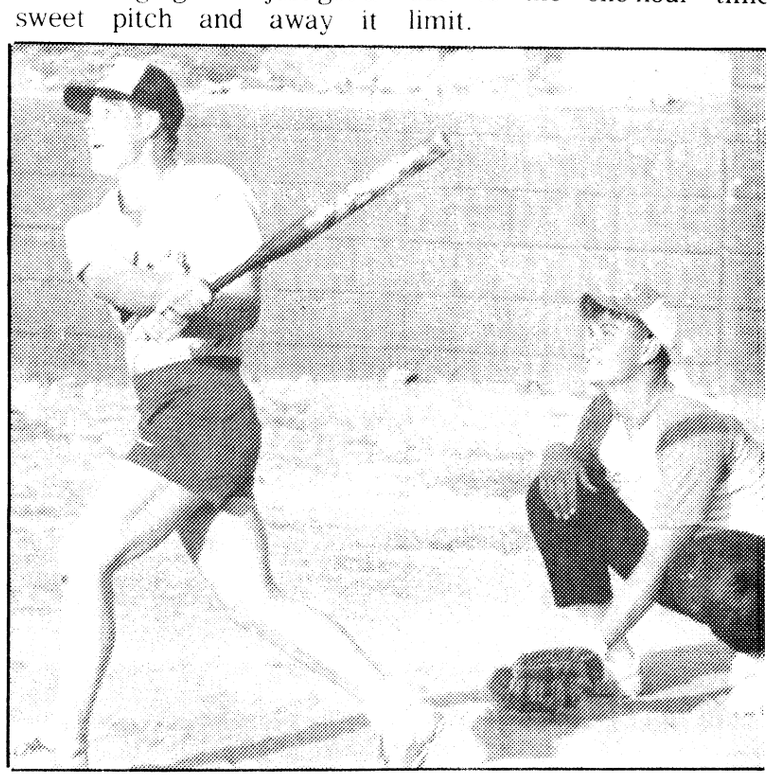
Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 197th Infantry Brigade, has won a seat in the first season post softball playoffs by defeating the 72nd Engineer Company and Troop A, 15th Cavalry in back to back games.

The HHC "Cobras" edged past the 72nd Engineers 12-10 in a grueling extra-inning game. After a 15-minute break, they went on to defeat the "Cav Rocks" 13-6 in the second game.

"72nd is strong in left-handed batting," said Cobra coach, David McDonnell prior to the game, "but we're strong on the left of the infield, so we can contain them if we play right."

72nd started strong in the game, blowing past the Cobra fielding to score 6 runs in the top of the 2nd inning. By the beginning of the 4th inning, the 72nd had a commanding 9-2 lead.

Then the Cobras fielding came alive, shutting down the 72nd hitters. It seemed that any ball that even came close to the left side of the field was either snagged out of the air or fielded off the ground for a quick out.

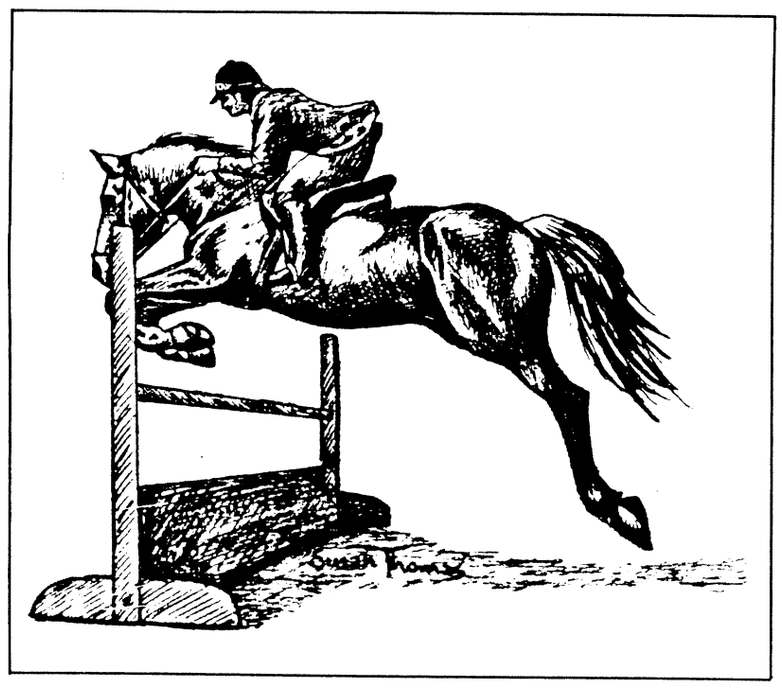


At the plate, the Cobra batters started a hard drive with Kenneth E. Hecox belting a home run, bringing in two runners on base. Darren "T-Bone" Sloan, the Cobra's catcher, hit a homer with a man on base in the bottom of the fifth. By the bottom of the seventh, the game was tied 10-10.

Hecox hit another homer with a man on base in the extra inning, winning the game.

"I'm usually just reliable with the bat, that's all," said Hecox after the game. "The first home run I got, I wasn't even swinging for. I just got a sweet pitch and away it went."

The game against the Cav Rocks went much easier for the Cobras. After one inning the Cobras held a 4-1 lead. The Cav Rocks rallied by scoring five runs in the bottom of the second, but that was the last of their scoring for the night.



The Cobras continued their heavy home run hitting bringing the game to 13-6 by the end of the 6th inning when the game was called due to the one-hour time limit.

Club hosts horse show tomorrow

By Bob Florek
Fort Benning Hunt Club

If you're like me, you probably thought horseback riding at the Fort Benning Hunt Club would be too expensive. I don't own a horse, I don't know how to ride a horse let alone jump over hedges, chasing dogs that are chasing a fox. I'm not even sure where the place is.

Horses have been a part of Fort Benning for a long time. General Patton kept his polo ponies here, and the Cavalry had horses at Benning. I hear that back then a horse could be rented for 15 cents a day. Back then, men on horseback really did chase dogs that chased foxes, jumping over fences and hedges.

Things have changed since then. What the today's club offers is a place for you and your family to enjoy yourselves. You can rent a horse for an afternoon to ride on the club grounds or to take out on one of the many trails.

The Hunt club also offers riding lessons, from beginner to experienced, on your own horse or one of the rentals.

If you already know how to ride and don't want to just take any rental horse, why not lease a horse for a month, summer or year. You and your family can take care of it, ride it when you want or show it, it would be your horse.

The club also sponsors three horse shows per year. Some of competitors are student riders on club rental horses. The shows are held in April, June and October. The next show is tomorrow and will begin at 8 a.m. on French Field. All the shows are open to the public, so why not bring your family out for enjoyable day.

There will be dressage and jumping and a special feature will be the Paso Fino Horse, a small horse with a special gait, giving the rider the smoothest ride on horseback.

Refreshments will be available along with a raffle for horseback rides.

If your thinking of buying a horse, but have no place to keep it, you can rent a paddock at the Hunt Club. The price is far cheaper than what you would pay for boarding your horse at a private stable.

The Fort Benning Hunt Club is here for soldiers and their family members, it makes no difference, enlisted or officer, the common bond is the love of horses.

The club is open six days a week, and rentals are available every day except Wednesday.

There is a picnic area available, so you can enjoy a day at the club while your family rides.

When the swimming pools are crowded, the kids are bored, and mom and dad want to get away from it all, try horseback riding at the Fort Benning Hunt Club. The club is located just west of Martin Army Community Hospital on Marne Road.

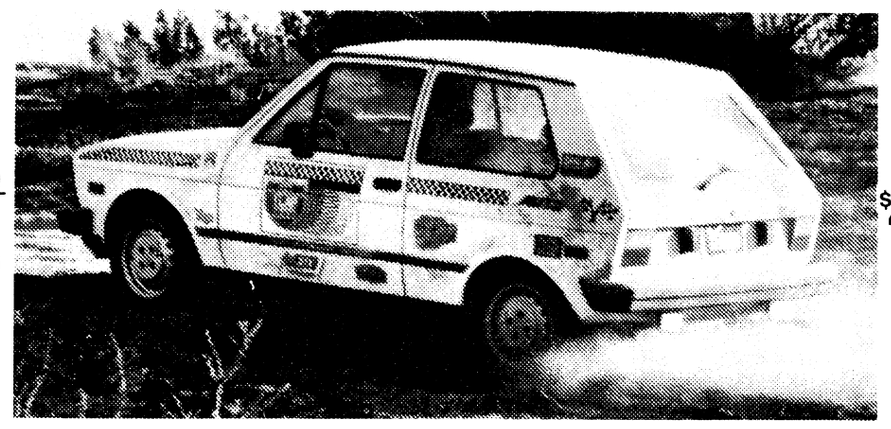
Benning turkey hunters successful

By Deck Major
Fish and Wildlife specialist

A record 132 wild turkeys were taken on Fort Benning during the 1988 Alabama/Georgia season. Alabama hunters accounted for 21 gobblers (16 percent) and 111 were harvested east of the Chattahoochee River.

Weather during the season was excellent overall, with few rainy or low pressure days and could not be blamed for poor hunter success. However, an increase in the total number of permits issued, 458, coupled with the present level of training on post, lead to a reported increase in hunter interactions. One turkey hunter per square mile is considered to be "excellent" hunter density. So, if you saw another camouflaged face or heard some strange owls or yelping during your hunt, your chances of success were much diminished.

Many successful hunters "waited out" the early morning peak of hunter activity and began working birds again at 9 or 10 a.m.



Overall, hunter success was excellent on post. Almost one out of every four hunters killed at least one turkey. Thirty-six hunters killed their limit of two Fort Benning birds. Hunters averaged 4.5 trips per season and 3.5 hours per trip. During the season, they saw an average of almost eight turkeys and heard an average of 12 gobblers. The average successful hunter needed 20 gun hours to bag a trophy. These statistics rival those of any area where eastern wild turkeys are hunted.

There are still many trophy birds on the reservation. Thirty-nine, 29 percent, of the harvested birds were 5-plus years old. These are birds with over the metric equivalent of 1.25-inch spurs. Eleven hunters reported birds with beards over 11 inches long and one hunter reported a kill with a 12-inch beard. Several birds in the 23- to 24-pound range were reported. Fort Benning's trophy gobbler of 1988 weighed 24 pounds, had 2-inch spurs and a beard of 11.75 inches. That's one for the record books.

These simple tests tell if you're overweight

Tradoc News Service

You may be wondering if your "percentage of body fat" is high enough to cause trouble. To see if you need to shed some pounds, try these simple test:

The Pinch Test: Using your thumb and forefinger, pinch a fold of skin on the back of your upper arm. If the fold is more than an inch thick, you are probably too fat.

The Ruler Test: Lying on your back, place a 12-inch ruler on your stomach pointing from head to toe. If the ends of the ruler fail to touch your body, you should probably lose weight.

The Belt Test (for men): Wrap a belt around your middle and note where the notch is. Now place the belt around your chest. If you're bigger at the waist than at the chest, you're carrying more fat on your body than you need.

The Mirror Test: Look in the mirror. Take a good long objective look at yourself. (It's best to be nude for this test.) Do you like what you see? If you don't, you have the "take-it-off syndrome."

The Critical Spouse Test: Does your spouse put pressure on you to lose weight? Are you constantly defending yourself and making excuses for your weight to others (or yourself)? You are suffering from mental "anguish" and spouse "abuse."

The Skinfold Caliper Test is a more precise measure. It will determine not only if you are too fat, but also what percent of your body weight is fat. The results will allow your doctor to help you determine the best ratio of muscle to fat. For this test, contact your local medical authority.

SPORTS SHORTS

Tennis tourney scheduled for June

The 1988 USAIC Tennis Championships will be conducted in June at the Community Recreation Division hard-surface tennis courts on Anderson Street behind Theater #2. All military personnel on active duty at Fort Benning are eligible to participate.

Entry forms may be filled out at all Community Recreation Division gymnasiums and at the Physical Activities Office in building 394.

For more information, call 545-5777.

Fish ponds open for Benning youth

Parents are reminded that three ponds at Fort Benning are set aside for young anglers ages 15 and under.

Russ Pond provides excellent catfishing, and Sand Hill Duck Pond and Russ Pool provide good fishing for bass and bream.

Daily creel and size limits for these ponds are: Bass — 10, which must be 12 inches; Catfish — 5, which must be 12 inches; and Bream — 50, with no size limit.

For more information, call 544-6120.

EAMS Military Night moved to July 23

The Jimmy Thomas Memorial Race at the East Alabama Motor Speedway had to be rescheduled because of conflicting dates, which moved the Military Night Race up to July 23.

Post powerlifting meet to take place

The first Fort Benning Powerlifting meet will take place at the Briant Wells Field House Saturday.

It will begin with a lifters meeting at 9 a.m., and the meet starts at 10 a.m.

The competition will consist of squat, benchpress and deadlift in the following weight classes: 114 1/2, 123 1/2, 132 1/2, 148 3/4, 181 3/4, 198 1/4, 220 1/4, 242 1/2, 275 and super heavyweight.

Early weigh-in is today from 4 to 7 p.m. and regular weigh-in is tomorrow from 8 to 9:15 a.m., both will be at the Briant Wells Field House.

One platform will be used for the competition. The morning session will consist of all women and the 165-pound weight class. The afternoon session will consist of all others.

The contest is open to all active military men stationed on post and all women, active duty, family members, retired, and NAF, DOD and AAFES civilian employees. A one-piece regulation suit must be worn, no exceptions.

For more information, call Speedy Austin at 545-4726/4388.

Hashers at it again

The Columbus Hash House Harriers will be conducting Do-Nothings last stand hash run Saturday. They will meet in the Winn-Dixie, Mazzio's Pizza parking lot on Macon Road at 3 p.m. Cost for the run is $3, and bring your choice of meat to barbecue. For more information, call Bushman at 561-9298.

TRAINERS

Vinnell Corporation, a technical services company, has a requirement to provide training services modeled on the recruit training concept of the US Army. Training will be provided to youths (15-18 years of age) with varied backgrounds and life experiences. Training objectives are to instill discipline, pride and to improve self image. Vocational training and education will be included in the program. Services will be provided in New Jersey.

Positions require recent military experience in various aspects of recruit training to include planning, scheduling, coordinating, supervision, and instruction.

Typical job opportunities include:

- Director, military training
- Drill instructors
- Physical education instructors

We offer a competitive salary and benefits plan. If you have experience and qualifications necessary for one of these positions, please submit your resume to Vinnell Corporation, Dept. MTB, 10530 Rosehaven Street, Suite 600, Fairfax, VA 22030. Vinnell Corporation is an equal opportunity employer m/f/h.

July 4 celebration set

Independence Day: This year's Fourth of July celebration will be held at York Field, 3 p.m. until dark. Featured will be an Airborne/Ranger Demonstration, game booths, fireworks, food and drink and more. The fireworks will begin at dark.

Residents reminded of policy

Watering lawns: Fort Benning personnel are reminded of the watering policy. Family housing residents may water their lawns Monday, Wednesday and Friday, 5 p.m.-midnight. Administrative building occupants may water grass Monday, Wednesday and Friday, 5-9 a.m.

Campaign continues

AER: The 1988 Army Emergency Relief Campaign will continue until July 1. The total contributions to date are $135,744.70. To contribute, see your unit AER representative.

Help get Benning ready

IOE is coming! The TRADOC Installation of Excellence Evaluation Team will visit Fort Benning in two weeks. The team will evaluate many aspects of post operations to include community facilities, child care centers, U-Do-It projects, housing areas and overall appearance.

Last year's winner, Fort Leonard Wood, picked up a $160,000 check for placing first in the Installation of Excellence evaluations.

Fort Benning residents and employees are encouraged to do all they can in the time before the team arrives to get the post ready.

In the era of budget restraints, a check for $160,000 could go a long way to help Fort Benning.

Pitch in and help the post be ready!

Prepare for leaving service

Retirement orientation: The 1988 Summer/Fall Pre-Retirement Orientation will be held July 26, 8 a.m. in Marshall Auditorium. Soldiers who have 18 years or more active duty should be planning for retirement, even though it may not be for several more years. Laws concerning retirement benefits change often and sometimes drastically. To stay current on retirement benefits, now is the time to begin gathering information and formulating ideas. Spouses should also know what to expect since families are an important part of retirement planning. This program is not intended for personnel who have already submitted their retirement application, however, they are also invited to attend. At 1 p.m. will be a financial planning and money management seminar. Please pre-register by calling the Retirement Service Office, building 2635, at 545-2715 or 545-5369. Uniforms will be duty uniform or appropriate civilian attire.

Help needed at MACH

Nurses: Where have all the nurses gone?

That seems to be a fairly common "tune" across the country. Martin Army is no exception. Grace Watson, who handles nurse recruiting at Civilian Personnel Office, believes that many local nurses may have been influenced by newspaper articles depicting "force reduction" at Fort Benning and decided not to submit applications.

However, currently there are three vacancies for GS-9 Registered Nurses and the Department of Nursing desires immediate fill of these positions. All three vacancies are in the Surgical Nursing Section.

There are also part-time positions available. Working for the Army Medical Department offers nurses an opportunity for a long-term career commitment, competitive salaries and benefits, continuing education programs at no cost, upward mobility and the opportunity to transfer to other federal government services/hospitals.

Registered nurses interested in joining the "we care" team are encouraged to initiate the application process at the Recruiting and Placement Section, CPO, building 35.

Benning anxiously awaits IOE official evaluation

By Becky Ray
DEH

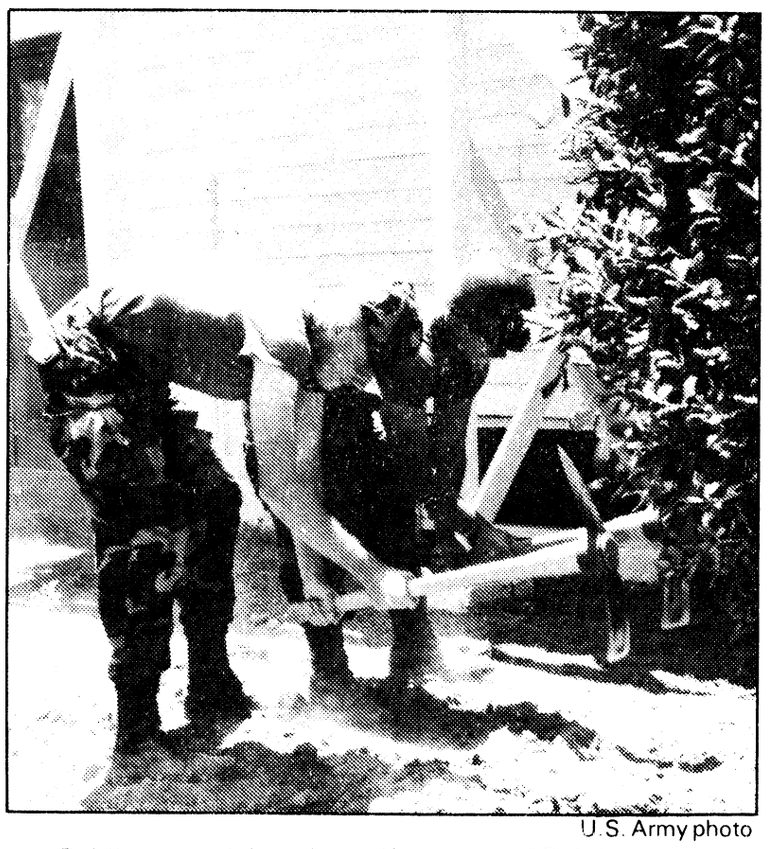
Because the Installation of Excellence Program has been very active at Fort Benning all year, those familiar with the program are anxiously awaiting the official evaluation of their intense efforts in making IOE improvements.

During July 12 through 14, an IOE evaluation team will visit Fort Benning. This year, the evaluators will inspect a variety of facilities, including:

- Barracks
- Child development centers
- Classrooms
- Community facilities
- Dining facilities
- In-processing Center
- Clubs
- Outdoor training areas
- Central Issue Facility
- U-Do-It center
- U-Do-It projects

The team will also evaluate interior design and overall appearance

Evaluations will be made against the standards established in the TRADOC IOE Regulation. This regulation addresses all areas of building-related interior and exterior design, including landscaping, interior appearance and furnishings design.



In addition, the Installation Design Guide will be used for evaluation purposes. The IDG establishes guidelines written specifically for Fort Benning and addresses needs and requirements unique to the installation, such as preservation of historic facilities.

Much hard work has proven fruitful in effecting IOE improvements in the past year, which may be rewarded with high scores.

Examples of IOE projects can easily be seen in a short drive through main post, where landscaping and painting have significantly improved the appearance of many buildings. Building interiors have also been refurbished all over post. Units and activities are also taking on projects of their own to improve the appearance and efficiency of their work areas.

Although the IOE Program may have started the growing trend to improve the appearance of Fort Benning, there seems also to be a renewed sense of pride and teamwork in creating and maintaining excellent facilities.

With increased pride and a commitment to excellence, the IOE Program is fulfilling its goal.

Model CPE opens here

By Shawn Bryson
Bayonet staff writer

A dedication and ribbon-cutting ceremony officially opened Fort Benning's new Clinical Pastoral Education Center June 16.

The center is a Community Model CPE and the only one of its kind in the Army.

On hand for the ceremony were Brig. Gen. William W. Hartzog, deputy commanding general for Fort Benning; Chap. (Brig. Gen.) Charles J. McDonnell, U.S. Army deputy chief of chaplains and Chap. (Col.) Roy Mathis, U.S. Army Infantry Center staff chaplain.

The CPE, which also houses a chapel, is designed to train chaplains in their mid-career time-frame in areas such as the Family Life Center, the Fort Benning Confinement Facility, the Alcohol and Drug Counseling Center, Martin Army Community Hospital and the Custer Terrace Chapel.

The CPE and chapel are located between the Custer Terrace post office and mini-mall in what used to be an annex for the Fort Benning commissary.

The center has five students rooms, administrative offices, a library, a community chapel, a kitchen, a nursery and a large training room/fellowship hall.

The renovation of the old annex began more than a year ago and most of the labor was provided by Benning soldiers in casual or hold-over status. Chapel volunteers, soldiers from the 36th Engineer Group and sailors from the Reserve Seabees assisted with the scraping, sawing, nailing, plastering, wall papering and painting.

The design and lay-out or the CPE, as well as professional consultation and building materials were provided by the Directorate of Engineering and Housing. The Office of the Installation Chaplain and grants from the Office of the Chief of Chaplains made possible supplies such as carpet, drapes, pew chairs, altar and lounge furniture, tables, stacking chairs, library shelves and books, office furniture and equipment and professional supplies.

Golf fees competitive

USAIC Public Affairs Office

As of July 1, new golf course fees will go into effect at the Follow Me Golf Course in efforts to maintain the same type and quality of services post golfers have come accustomed to over the years.

The fee increase results from new congressional instructions that eliminate appropriated fund support for the golf course as well as post bowling alleys, package beverage stores and Officers', NCO and enlisted clubs.

According to the new guidelines, appropriated fund support will no longer be used to pay for utilities, engineer support and selected personnel.

To offset the lack of appropriated fund support, Fort Benning has adjusted its expectation of profits from these activities while, at the same time, increasing fees.

Post officials have studied numerous alternatives and have designed the best possible fee adjustment, taking into consideration the desires of all users. The number one goal, according to the officials, is to maintain the types and quality of activities at the golf course at the cheapest price.

Golf course improvements are also a key concern. Past improvements such as an irrigation system, a clubhouse renovation, new cart paths and the new trees and greens at Pineside have all added to the quality of golf at Fort Benning. Officials say that future upgrades are planned to further improve the Follow Me Golf Course, keeping it the finest in the Army.

U-Do-It items help improve Benning's appearance

USAIC Public Affairs Office

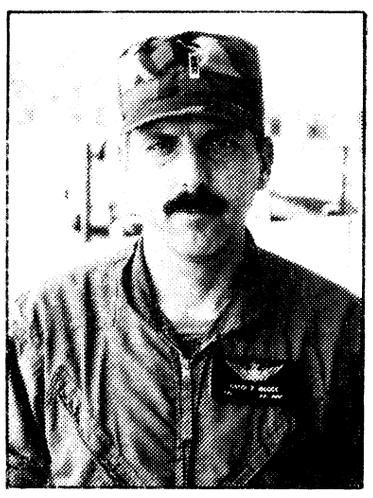
In mid-July Fort Benning will be evaluated for the Installation of Excellence award, and residents are encouraged to help improve the appearance of the post by having their quarters and lawns looking good.

Caring for lawns on post is made much easier with items available at the U-Do-It self help store, located on Vibbert Avenue, building 385. According to George Davis, supply issue clerk, residents can get at no cost top soil, pine bark, pine straw, grass seed and grass sprigs. Also available for issue or direct exchange of unserviceable items are leaf rakes, garden rakes, grass shears, hedge clippers and water sprinklers. Tillers, weedeaters, wheel barrows, leaf blowers and spreaders are available for loan on a 48-hour basis.

According to Davis, lawn fertilizer is out of stock at U-Do-It, however, it is on order and will be stocked in the near future. Residents who wish to fertilize their lawns now can purchase fertilizer at local retail outlets. Before buying fertilizer, identify the type of grass in the yard and whether your lawn is in full sun or shade. The retail outlet will be able to recommend a fertilizer appropriate for your lawn. However, because of the recent drought, fertilizing now is not recommended. Davis explained that water is needed to distribute the fertilizer into the soil.

Residents who have problems with fire ants can get COMBAT, fire ant killer at the U-Do-It. For problems with army worms, chinch bugs, ticks, fleas, etc., call the Entomology Section, 545-3224 for an appointment to have your yard sprayed.

Squirrel cages are available for 30-day loan at U-Do-It for residents who have problems with an over abundance of squirrels in the family housing areas. Customers will be given proper instructions on capture and release of the squirrels.



Watering of lawns is very important especially now in light of he recent shortage of rainfall. It is recommended that residents water their lawns on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays from 5 p.m. until midnight to conserve water and to help Fort Benning meet energy goals.

Soil testing is not an available service at Fort Benning, however, residents can have their soil tested free of charge by the Georgia Cooperative Extension Service. Collect samples from different areas of your lawn, mix the soil - no more than a cupful - place it in a paper bag and drop it off at the Georgia Cooperative Extension Service located on the ground floor of the Tower Building, Columbus Government Center in Columbus. This service will tell you the Ph level of your soil and recommend appropriate fertilizer. There is no charge for the service.

For your convenience, operation hours of the U-Do-It store are Tuesday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., and Saturday, 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. The store is closed Mondays for restocking supplies.

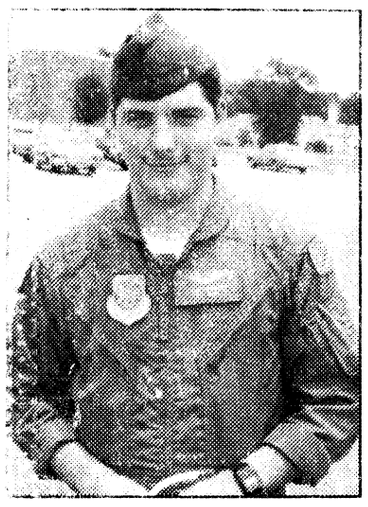
VARIOUS VOICES: What do you do for recreation during the summer?

CWO 3 David E. McCoy, Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment — "I play racquetball and tennis, and I do a lot of fishing."



Maj. Charles Andre, Company B, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment — "There are two things I do during the summer for recreation. One is Boy Scouts because I am a Scoutmaster and the other is camping with my family."

SP4 Dawn Klein, 70th Division Logistics Group, Frazier, Mich. — "I swim a lot, water ski, fish, camp, canoe and ride my bike."

SFC Clarence Jones, ANCOC — "Recreation for the summer months consists of cutting grass, attending baseball games and maybe taking a trip to the zoo or the beach, basically just family things."

Airman 1st Class Keith Schnug, McCord Air Force Base, Wash. — "I go four wheeling, waterskiing and flying, and I play softball."

SSgt. Earl Johnson Jr., ANCOC student — "I swim, play softball and basketball, have barbecues and go dancing."

Snively says 'Go north young man'

By Clyde Snively
USAIC Public Affairs Office

When the 2nd Brigade of the 10th Mountain Division moves North to Fort Drum, it will be a different unit from the one whose soldiers trained hard on the red Georgia clay, sweated in the jungles of Panama, scaled mountain peaks in Alaska and fought the "enemy" from California's NTC to Arkansas' JRTC.

It will be different in that few of the officers and men who were here to activate it three years ago are with the unit today. Even fewer will be making the move to the North Country.

New recruits will soon be training at Harmony Church and Sand Hill to take the place of the original cohort troops who will soon reach the end of their tour with the Commando Brigade and their enlistment in the Army.

But as the Army seeks recruits to turn into mountaineers, the brigade is looking for cadre to lead these young men. To date, the search has been less than a resounding success.

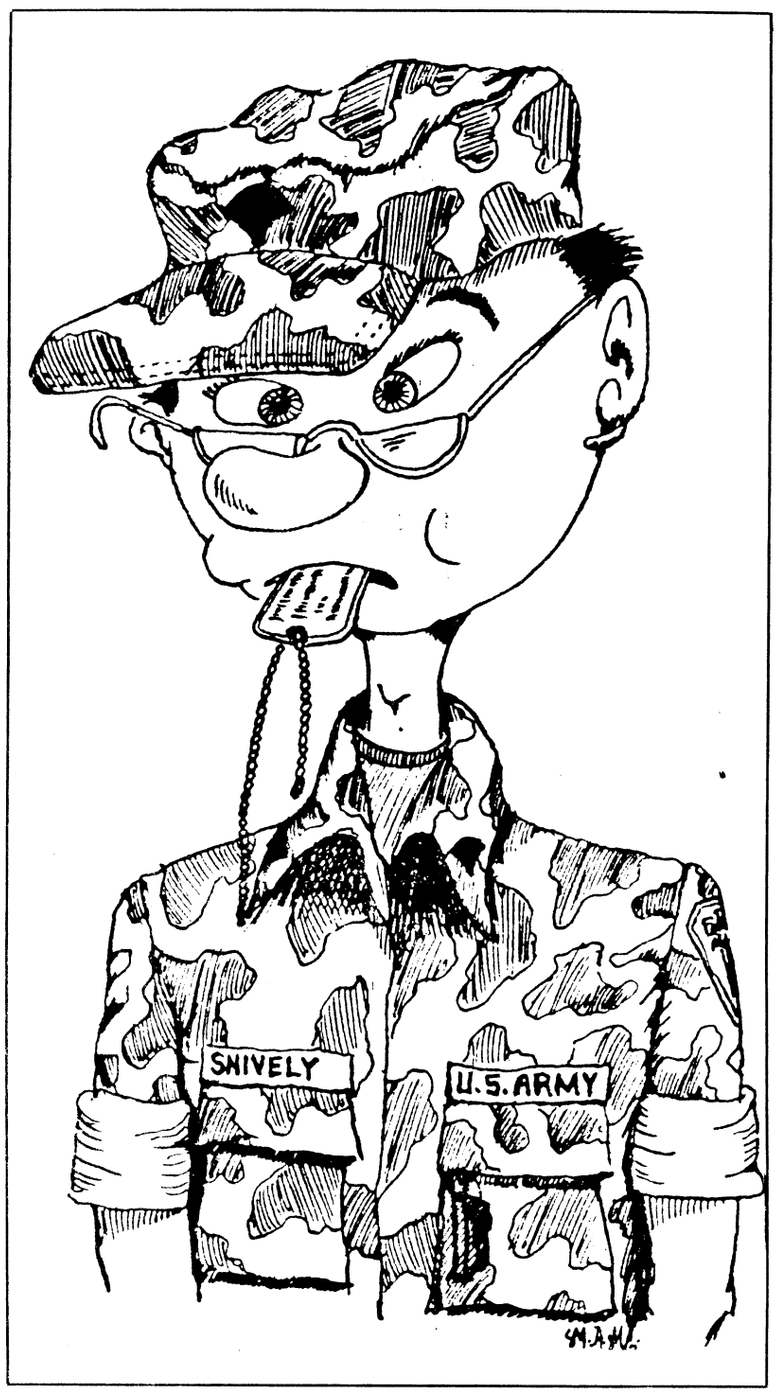
I heard of the dilemma during an afternoon formation. Looking out over the shimmering heat as it reflected off the blacktop parking lot, my uniform wet from sweat, I thought back to the tall cool pines and icy blue lakes of Fort Drum.

Separation makes the heart grow fonder, it also serves to dampen unpleasant memories. Memories of the dust that coated our lungs as we followed mech infantry into the field, cursing the heat as the temperatures climbed into the high 80s and remained there day after day (we called this summer, and it occasionally lasted for as many as three consecutive days).

Yes, tomato plants have been killed by frost in June; yes, Fort Drum did get 112 inches of snow in December of '85; and yes, temperatures have been known to drop 60 degrees below freezing, making it difficult to crank vehicles in the morning and even unpleasant to spend much time outdoors, especially if there's any wind.

I have to admit, Fort Drum is not for soldiers who eat quiche. It's for soldiers and leaders who are willing to put up with a little discomfort as they train to become rugged light infantrymen.

Training aside, the quality of life beckons to anyone who even thinks he's an outdoors person.



Lake Ontario, 20 miles west, is there with lake trout hitting the scales at 90 pounds, salmon on their spawning run up the Salmon and Black rivers; trophy size bass and trout — but best of all — the water is blue. No red, brown or green ponds. The water is blue.

Fall bursts forth on the landscape in early September in a blaze of reds, yellows and ochers, announcing apple cider and maple syrup time and the start of hunting season.

Wild turkey and deer abound on the reservation and in surrounding areas. Trappers can go after small game, to include beavers and one may even see a bear or a wolf.

The best season of all, though, is winter. There's ice fishing, winter carnivals, snowmobiling and downhill and cross country skiing. Winter time PT often consists of running in snowshoes, or skiing about the reservation. Best of all, there's no lawn to water, mow and weed.

Fort Drum itself is a brand new post, built at the cost of nearly a billion dollars — new family housing, new barracks, new maintenance bays, new shopping malls.

Soldiers and their families will find themselves warmly greeted by the local people, and their children will be readily accepted into the schools, which go out of their way to make the military child feel welcome.

Fort Drum's not for those who don't like snow and cold. This, despite the fact that the local saying of "there are only two seasons in the North Country, good skiing and poor skiing," isn't quite true.

I must also admit that a woman I knew, a Columbus native, made a vow that when her husband's assignment was up, up there, she was going to put a snow shovel on the roof of her car and drive south. She would keep driving south until someone asked her what that thing on her roof was.

Fort Drum may not be paradise, but for some of us, it's pretty darn close.

Secretary of Defense salutes soldiers

As the American people prepare to celebrate 212 years of uninterrupted freedom on this July 4th, I am very proud to salute you -- the men and women of the Army, Navy, Air Force, Marine Corps and the Coast Guard. It is through your dedication to duty and country that the hard-won independence our forefathers struggled so valiantly to obtain has endured.

Americans across this great nation are also proud. They will celebrate in hundreds of cities, towns and rural communities, march in parades and light up the skies to honor this great day in American history.

This day continues to symbolize our freedom to all the opressed nations of the world. It is a day the men and women of the Armed Forces who serve so diligently around the world send an important message: The United States is a country of free people and will protect that freedom at all costs.

That which is valuable does not always come easily. Over the course of history, Americans have always heeded the call — and many have died — to protect a nation that stands for liberty and justice for all.

I am proud to serve with the men and women of the Defense team. You are valiant guardians of freedom and worthy successors to the preceding generations of Americans who gave reality to the reasons we celebrate our Declaration of Independence.

Carlucci invites Armed Forces to buy bonds

Let me take just a couple of minutes of your time to invite you to join me in investing in America's future — and your own — by purchasing United States Savings Bonds — your passport to a better future.

Each year at this time, you have the opportunity to advance a proud tradition. During our Defense Department Savings Bonds Campaign, you are encouraged to purchase bonds or increase your rate of investment through the Payroll Savings Plan.

By doing that, you are helping yourself and your family to purchase a new home, finance a college education or guarantee a secure retirement.

Today, United States Savings Bonds are one of the most attractive securities available. They offer market-based interest rates for a small, continual investment — and a short hold period.

Additonally, they are free from state and local taxes. Besides, when you purchase bonds, you're helping our nation's economy by reducing the burden of our national debt.

Savngs bonds, through the Payroll Savings Plan, are the easiest and least painful way for people to save regularly.

So I am asking, the men and women of our armed forces and DoD civilians, to sign up for savings bonds or increase your present allotment during our savings bonds campaign.

As secretary of defense, I am strongly committed to the savings bonds program because of the benefits it provides to our nation, while helping savers as well.

Together, let us work for a successful savings bonds campaign on behalf of America and all her people. Help your country— help yourself — buy bonds.

Thank you.

Frank C. Carlucci

Soldiers from Co. C, 197th Spt. Bn., wearing full Mission Oriented Protective Posture (MOPP) gear, enter a doorway to clear a building at the Military Operations in Urban Terrain site.

197th soldiers fight their way into town

By Kevin J. Howerton
197th Infantry Brigade correspondent

It's not unusual for the soldiers of Company C, 197th Support Battalion, to set up supply operations in the field. But it is unusual for them to fight their way into a town to set up operations.

Recently, Co. C trained at the Military Operations in Urban Terrain site. The MOUT site is a mock village designed to look like a small European town.

"This is the type of situation we would face in real combat," said 1st Lt. David M. Thomas of Company C. "We have to be able to secure an area ourselves, because the line units are often tied up in the battle and can't do it for us."

Shortly after dawn an advance party, wearing full Mission Oriented Protective Posture (MOPP) chemical suits and protective masks, moved in around the town. An opposing force of soldiers from Headquarters Company, 197th Support Battalion, was well secured inside the buildings.

The soldiers had to fight from building to building, clearing each room and rooftop. Soldiers engaged each other with blanks, forcing the opposing force into one building, where they had their vehicles hidden. After the opposing force had been driven out, the area was secured and tested for NBC contamination.

"This is intersting training. I'd like to get more of it," said SP4 Paul D. Jones, "I think it would be like this in a real war."

"This breaks the monotony of the standard field training," said SP4 Robert P. Hotz.

After the town is secured, the main body of Company C rolls in to set up operations. "We have to be able to operate out of towns or small cities without anyone knowing we are there," said Lt. Thomas.

Redeye gunners fire live rounds

By Clarence Pittman III
197th Infantry Brigade correspondent

"It's a certain feeling you never know until you do it. All of a sudden, your shoulder gets light, and before you know it, it's up in the air," said PFC Larry E. Walker, Redeye gunner of HHC, 197th Inf. Bde.

This was a mutual experience shared by the Air Defense Artillery soldiers of HHC, as they got their first opportunity to fire a Redeye missile.

Each selected team, which consists of a gunner and a team leader, fired a man-portable, shoulder-fired, infrared-seeking guided missile at a Ballistic Aerial Target Simulator (BATS).

Because of the costs of the weapon system, these soldiers are limited to a series of innovative simulated training exercises throughout the year; therefore, an opportunity to live fire comes only once a year.

Family Day goes to field

By George Mingee
197th Infantry Brigade correspondent

Family Day was recently held for the 197th Support Battalion of the 197th Infantry Brigade. This wasn't an ordinary Family Day in garrison; this day was held in the field while the battalion was hot and heavy into training.

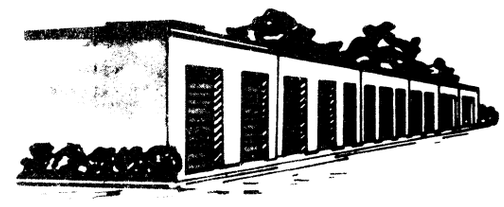
The family members started their day early, as they were bussed to different field locations at Fort Benning where their loved ones were awaiting their arrival.

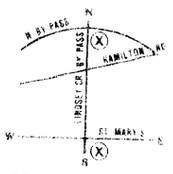
From the camouflage netting draped over the various tents to the shoveled-out fighting positions and twisting concertina wire, all was seen for the first time for most of these family members.

"My wife is new to the Army and to Columbus, so it's good to see her for a few hours and take a break from training," said SP4 Ernesto Valdez.

As family members strolled around the field sites, they were able to see and touch for themselves what they had only heard about in the past. Wives, husbands and children had the opportunity to fire crew-served weapons, ride track and wheel vehicles, observe the unique setups of map boards, surgical tents, resupply centers and fuel and maintenance operations. Without a doubt, the families received a close-up view of what their loved ones do in the field.

"This is a good chance for our family members to see what we do first-hand," said Capt. William E. Dasch, HHC commander. "I've never seen Family Day in the field, but it's working out really well."





As the morning turned into afternoon, the soldiers and their families sat down to a lunch prepared in the field. The afternoon was long but time became short as the family members boarded buses and ended this special day both for themselves and the soldiers.

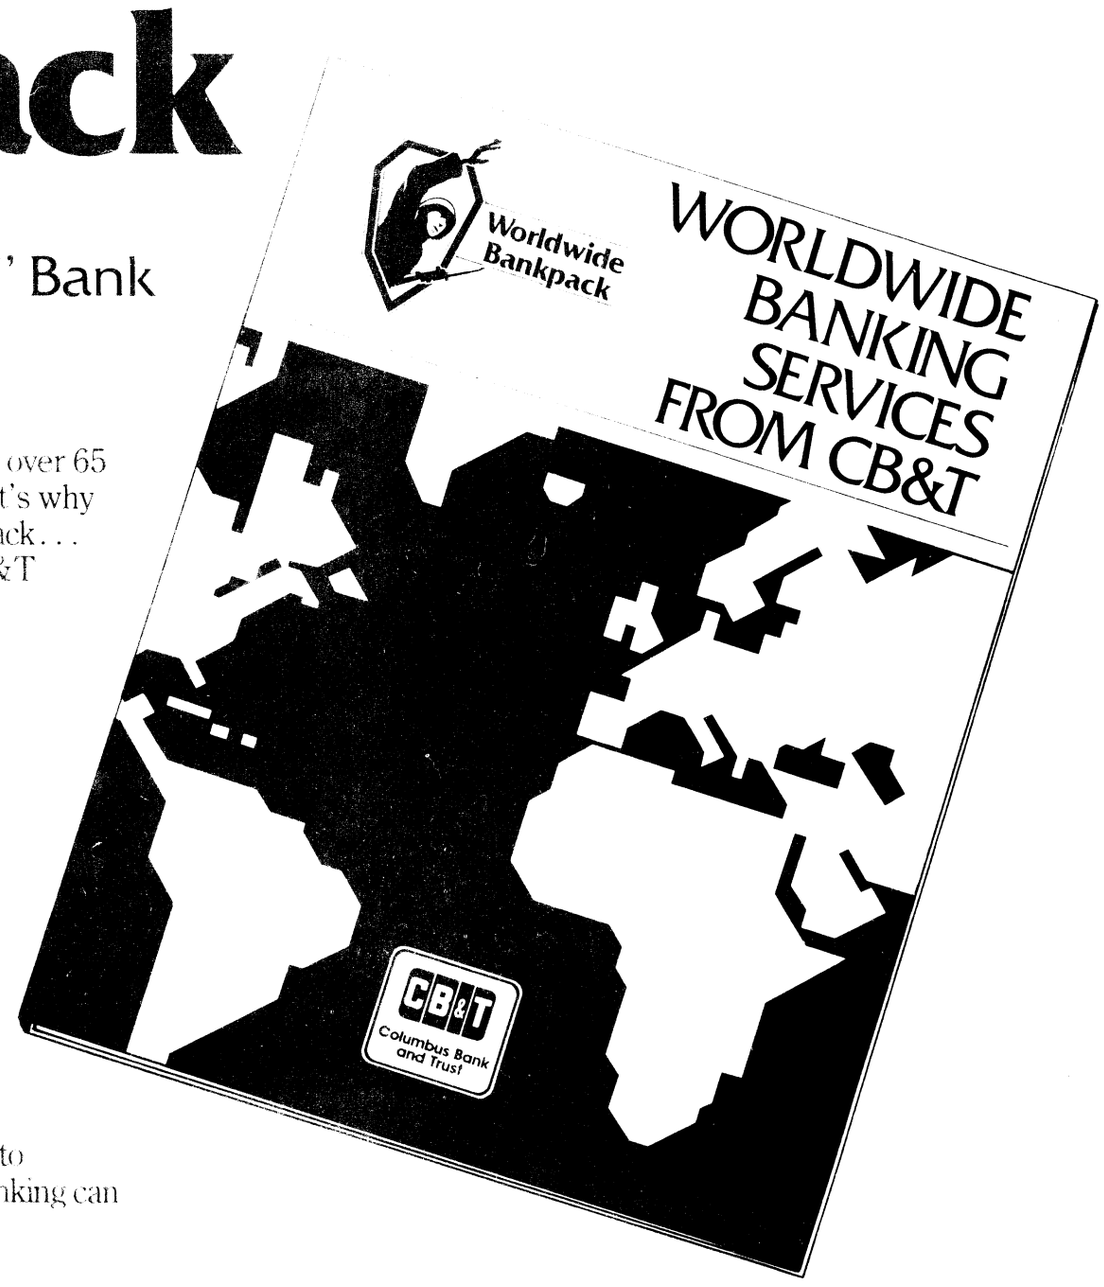
ASK THE JUDGE

By William F. Sutton Jr.
Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Q: After a less than blissful experience, my wife and I have decided to get a divorce. I know that I will have to pay her some money in the form of alimony, but I was concerned about the tax consequences of these payments. How are these payments treated under the tax laws?

A: Generally speaking, alimony payments made pursuant to a divorce decree or written separation agreements are considered gross income to the person receiving them and deductible to the person making them. For example, say Husband must pay $400 per month in alimony to Wife. Since this payment is called alimony, Husband may deduct this amount from his federal income taxes. Payments must meet the following requirements:

- The payments must be in the form of cash, check or money order, and not in the form of personal services or property;
- The divorce decree or separation agreement must not designate payments as nondeductible by Husband or excluded from Wife's income;
- Husband and Wife must live in separate households when the payment is made;
- The divorce decree or separation agreement states that the payments will stop upon Wife's death; and
- The payment is not child support.



The Internal Revenue Service requires the spouse paying alimony to report the Social Security number of his or her ex-spouse, who must provide this number to the spouse paying alimony. The failure to provide this information may result in a $50 penalty for either party. Taxable alimony is reported on Line 11 of Form 1040, while spouses paying alimony may deduct these payments on Line 29 of Form 1040.

Though divorce presents many emotional and social adjustments, one should never lose sight of the financial aspects.

If you are seeking a divorce, be sure to ask your attorney about the tax consequences of alimony and child support payments.

Residents should know about lead contamination

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Fort Benning is required by law to advise all water customers about the potential health hazards associated with exposure to lead in the drinking water.

Although the quality of the drinking water leaving the Fort Benning water treatment plant wells is in compliance with the national drinking water standard for lead, Fort Benning is still required to issue this notice. Please read carefully.

Lead is a toxic metal known to be harmful to human health if inhaled or ingested. Although it has been used in numerous consumer products, we must be concerned about our level of exposure to lead in our environment, including drinking water.

Potential sources of lead exposure to humans include: air, soil and dust (both inside and outside the home); food which can be contaminated by lead in the air or in food containers; and water (from the corrosion of plumbing).

The United States Environmental Protection Agency sets drinking water standards and has determined that lead is a health concern at certain levels of exposure. There is currently a standard of 0.050 parts per million. Based on new health information, EPA is likely to lower this standard significantly.

Part of the purpose of this notice is to inform you of the potential adverse health effects of lead. This is being done even though your water may not be in violation of the current standard.

EPA amd others are concerned about lead in drinking water. Too much lead in the human body can cause serious damage to the brain, kidney, nervous system and red blood cells. The greatest risk, even with short-term exposure, is to young children and pregnant women.

Lead levels in your drinking water are likely to be highest:

- If your home or water system has lead pipes.
- If your home or water has copper pipes with lead solder.
- If your home is less than 5 years old.
- If the water is soft or acidic.
- If the water sits in the pipes for several hours.

Lead may get into your water after the water leaves the local treatment plant or well. Thus the most likely source of lead contamination in your drinking water is the pipe or solder in your home's plumbing. The most common cause is corrosion, a reaction between the water and the lead pipes or solder. The longer water stands in the pipes, the greater the potential of lead dissolving into the water. Soft water, which lathers soap easily, tends to accelerate the corrosion process, resulting in increased levels of dissolved lead in the water. The practice of grounding electrical equipment, such as telephones, to water pipes also increases corrosion. Any electric current traveling through the ground wire will accelerate the corrosion of lead in the pipes. (CAUTION: do not rethe weapon I've been training with for the past year," said PFC Gerald V. Romain.

Training in the past year has been long and intense. In the past three months, seven Redeye teams have stepped-up the training even more in a competition to decide which teams would get to fire the four Redeye missiles.

"All of the teams have been studying and training hard in military stakes so they could win a chance to fire a real missile," said 2nd Lt. Thomas A. Thornton, Redeye platoon leader.

The military stakes include four areas critical to ADA. The teams have to fire correct engagements in the Moving Target Simulator, which tests the gunner's procedures and movements up to pulling the trigger. The soldiers are also tested in aircraft recognition, where they have four seconds to correctly identify each aircraft.

"I believe this year's training was a little better because of the intensity of military stakes," said Sgt. David Douglas, noncommissioned officer in charge.

The highly skilled gunners have to be able to track the BATS, which travel at 420 miles an hour. After the gunner locks on the target, the Redeye travels at a speed of about mach 1 to overtake and destroy the target.

"When you are initially tracking the target, it feels the same as on the trainer, until you pull the trigger," said PFC Larry E. Yerkes, Redeye gunner.

Golf

that also have to balance the same constraints, Fort Benning officials say the new fees are very competitive.

Post officials stress that the Follow Me Golf Course remains a good deal. While fees have gone up, the daily user's fee has disappeared.

They also remind members that golfers choosing to become annual members will be issued a special reciprocal membership card that may be used to play golf at any Army golf course in the world.

As of July 1, the new fees at the Follow Me Golf Course are:

Golf Course Fees

Annual/Single,	$ 34 per month $408 annual
Annual/Family,	$ 38 per month $456 annual
Monthly/Single	$ 45 per month
Monthly/Family	$ 50 per month
E4 and below	$ 8 daily
E5 and above	$ 10 daily
DOD Civilion	$ 10 daily
Guests	$ 12 daily
O-Club members	$ 22 dues + fee
Annual/Single	$ 14 per month $432 annual.
Annual/Family	$ 18 per month $480 annual.

For Officers Club members who elect the annual golf package, the club reimburses the golf course the difference of $14 and the non-member golf rate.

The Follow Me Course remains competitive with other installations:

The annual fee for golfing at Fort Benning is $408, the same as Fort Knox. The rates are higher at Fort Sill, $440, Fort Gordon, $495 and Fort Jackson, $420.

The daily fee at Fort Benning, $10, is matched by Fort Jackson. Costs are higher at Forts Sill and Knox, $12 and Fort Gordon, 13.

Lead

move wires from pipes unless a qualified electrician installs an adequate grounding system.)

Up through the early 1900s, it was common practice to use lead pipes for interior plumbing and service connections. Plumbing installed before 1930 is most likely to contain lead. Since then, copper pipes have replace lead pipes in most residential plumbing; however, the usage of lead solder to join copper pipes is widespread. It is regarded that this lead solder is the major cause of lead contamination of household water in U.S homes today. Recently, it has been required by federal law to use lead-free solder and lead-free materials in new household plumbing and for plumbing repairs.

It has been determined that the newer the home, the greater the risk of lead contamination. Lead levels decrease as a building ages because, as the minerals in water deposit on the inside of the pipes, direct contact of water with the lead solder is prevented.

Lead dissolved in water cannot be seen, tasted or smelled. Having your water tested by a competent laboratory is the only sure way of telling whether there are harmful quantities of lead in your drinking water.

Be suspicious, particularly if your home plumbing has lead material (lead is a dull-gray metal that is soft enough to be easily scratched with a house key) and your non-plastic plumbing is less than 5 years old.

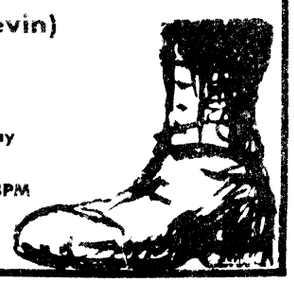
Testing is especially important to apartment dwellers where flushing may not be effective in high-rise buildings that have lead soldered central piping. Contact your local water supplier for assistance in locating a laboratory qualified to analyze drinking water samples for lead contamination.

If you determine or suspect that your household water contains high levels of dissolved lead, there are ways to minimize your exposure to lead.

Avoid consuming water that has been in contact with your home's plumbing for several hours, such as overnight or during your work day. Before using water for drinking or cooking, "flush" the cold water faucet by allowing the water to run until you can feel that the water has become as cold as it will get. If there has recently been major water use in the household, such as showering or bathing, flushing toilets or doing laundry with cold water, flushing the pipes should take 5 to 30 seconds: if not, flushing the pipes could take as long as a minute.

Avoid cooking with, or consuming, water from the hot water faucet. Hot water disolves more lead more quickly than cold water. Avoid using water from the hot water faucet for making baby formula. If you need hot water for cooking or for any consumption, draw water only from the flushed cold water tap and heat it.

Ensure that only lead-free solder and led-free materials are used in new household plumbing and plumbing repairs.



For additonal information concerning reducing your exposure to lead, contact your water supplier. At the present time, the water supplied to the public has no known lead content in excess of the national drinking water standard. It is not necessary that additional steps be taken to achieve compliance with the regulations.

REENLIST.
BE ALL YOU CAN BE.

IT TAKES A SERIOUS DENTAL PLAN TO KEEP YOUR FAMILY SMILING.

The Army Dental Plan. It's another way we're improving the quality of life of the men and women in uniform, and for their families as well.

Because it's important to soldiers to have their families well taken care of. That makes it important to us. Important enough for us to give you assistance in finding comfortable housing. And give you help in financial planning, day care, medical assistance, and now dental assistance, through the Army's Dental Plan.

It's just our way of telling you that we know an Army family is more than just a soldier's spouse and kids, it's a big part of his life. And it's a part we are making as good as it can be.

ARMY FAMILY.
BE ALL YOU CAN BE.

SPIRITUAL

5 chaplains graduate CPE

By Jo Ann Stamey
USAIC Chaplain's Office

On June 17, a graduation ceremony was held in the newly refurbished Custer Terrace Chapel for five chaplains who have been working in the Clinical Pastoral Education (CPE) program during the past year.

The chaplains have studied and worked in the Family Life Center, the Fort Benning Confinement Facility, the Alcohol and Drug Counseling Center, Martin Army Community Hospital and Custer Terrace Chapel.

In addition to their training, they have given approximately two and one half man years to the Fort Benning community in counseling. The chaplains also worked on their Masters Degree in community counseling from Georgia State University — the first time this has ever been accomplished simultaneously!

The guest speaker for this occasion was Chap. (Brig. Gen.) Charles J. McDonnell, the Deputy Chief of Chaplains. Said McDonnell, "You have worked on the talents you came into the Army with, and you are now better prepared to do your mission as a chaplain — to provide quality ministry to every soldier and every soldier's family. Anything less than that cheats our soldiers."

The CPE students all felt the training was excellent, and was not only a wonderful opportunity to learn, but also to take a "spiritual journey" within themselves.

Chap. (Col.) Roy Mathis, the post chaplain, stated, "This program is not just a counseling program, but integrates theology into counseling, which makes it authentic pastoral counseling — Chaplains do have a unique type of counseling to offer . . . different from social, psychological, etc. counseling. This year has helped these CPE students integrate counseling techniques and theology."

The CPE graduates were: Chap. (Maj.) Charles Canada, going to Beaumont Hospital in Fort Bliss, Texas; Chap. (Maj.) Floyd Chapman, being assigned to Eisenhower Hospital in Fort Gordon, Ga.; Chap. (Maj.) Thomas Mitchiner, who is going to the 2nd General Hospital in Landstuhl, Germany; Chap. (Maj.) Dennis DeMond, who will attend the Chaplains' Advanced Course in Fort Monmouth, N.J.; and Chap. (Capt.) Loyd Ganey, who will be assigned to the confinement facility in Mannheim, Germany. All five CPE students will receive their Masters Degree in Community Counseling from Georgia State University in July.

'The Welder'

By David R. Penland

As the massive bridge began
Its rise from the mire of the Salty sea, a thousand workmen
Bent their backs as it rose
So gradually.

All took to their labor in earnest
All worked industriously,
As from the sandy ocean floor,
The behemoth took shape and rose
Imperiously.

But there was one among the Thousand, a welding man was he
Who, as he fused a thousand
Seams that wrestled against gravity,
Began to ask in the back of his mind —
"What difference can one man be?"

So as he welded and melded,
Seam after seam, and the Gargantuan continued to grow
His industry flagged and his Labor slacked as he hurried
From weld to weld — "A moment
Less here, a minute less there — what difference can there possibly be?

And as the days, gave way to months,
And finally a year gave way —
The great expanse stood proud
And haughty against the darkening
Wintery skies.

And the traffic poured across,
Men and women and children,
Gratefull all — marvelled at the Great bridge, as they scurried
From shore to shore —
Oblivious to the flaws, unmindful
Of the pouring of the amoral sea.

Will the bridge collapse?
Will the unknowing rush to Meet their death as they hurdle
Headlong to the sea?

Will the one man have made a
Tragic difference in the scheme
Of history?
Will the unseen imperfections
Hold against the warp and yaw
Of time?
Or with swift and unfeeling judgement
Send man, metal, and concrete crashing
Into the frothy brine?

Thousands touch our lives,
And we touch theirs in the Course of time —
What difference do we make —
Or do they make as we weld
And rivet, mold and shape
Inside each other's minds?

Will our lack of patience —
Will our lack of care,
Leave hidden scars and Imperfections to fact the Test of time?

As we hurry from weld to weld, and Seam to seam in the Development of a human mind —
"A moment less here — a minute
Less there — what difference can
There possibly be?

Chaplain accepts soldiers as family

By Dennis S. Krumlauf
43rd Engineer Battalion Chaplain

The word "family" brings to mind many different pictures to all of us. Family may bring to mind summer picnics at the park or flying kites on a sunny beach or maybe something as simple as sitting down together at the Sunday dinner table.

The memories the word family evokes may not always be pleasant ones. Sometimes families experience sorrow, heated arguments, illness and even death. These and many more experiences are part of life in the family.

Family is important to us as social and psychological beings. There is that part of us that needs to belong, needs to be loved and needs to be cared for. Maslow may have put human needs into a modern hierarchical chart, but these basic needs have existed since man has. We simply need to belong and the family was created by God to meet these needs.

I have been at Fort Benning and Sightseeing Road Chapel for only a few weeks and all ready feel part of this family. The family here is important to me because I am, like many soldiers, separated from my family back home. I miss being a father to my children and a husband to my wife. I know that in just a few months, we will be together as a family. I know it is difficult to be separated from those families we love, and that's the way it should be.

During those times of separation, we can rely on other forms of family called the "extended family" or the "church family" or even a "work family."

As important as our social or human families are to us, even more important is our spiritual family and the relationship we have with one another on a spiritual level. We are all part of social and human family but there is that spiritual side of us that needs attention, also.

Remember that we are created in God's image, and we belong to Him. Sin has separated us from God, our Father and His spiritual family. There remains in all of us the desire to be reunited with Him and His family. We do that when we make a conscious decision to accept Him back into our lives and return home to the Father as the prodigal son did in the narrative told by Jesus in Luke 15.

God does not want us separated from Him, but it is up to us to respond to His love and return to His family and enjoy life in His family.

CHAPEL BRIEFS

Protestant

PWOC: The Protestant Women of the Chapel meet each Thursday, 9:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. in the Religious Education Center, building 229. They are currently studying Proverbs. Babysitting is provided at the REC. For further information, call Debbie Godwin at 687-7157 or Annette Saul at 682-1157.

WE SUPPORT MILITARY SPENDING.

How?
With the "Better than a Bank"® Personal Credit Line.
It's the simple, easy way for career military people to borrow money. Some qualifications apply, of course, like a $15,000 annual family income.
But once you're approved, HFC will give you a credit line for up to $10,000.
And after that, you can write yourself a loan just by writing a check. Anytime. For anything. While on TDY or even overseas assignment.
Plus, we can approve your Personal Credit Line over the phone. The same day you call.*
Transferring? No problem. When you transfer, your Personal Credit Line transfers with you.
Household Finance can help support military spending in other ways too. With personal loans. And budget planning.
So give us a call. We'll go to work. On the double.

French Field was the stage for the Fort Benning Spring Combined Test and Dressage Show last Saturday.

Horses and riders bedecked in all their finery came out to compete in several different categories.

The event was judged by Ann Ticehurst, an international judge, who resides in Tallahassee, Fla. In the horse show circuit, Ticehurst is known for both her judging ability and training of riders and horses. She has judged events in nearly all 50 states.

A special exhibition of Paso Fino horses was conducted for spectators, and refreshments were available to restore energy lost from the heat.

The Hunt Club offers lessons, rentals and stables besides hosting horse shows. For more information, call 689-3945.

BFV conference conducted to resolve problems

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

Raising and resolving problems was the intent of the Bradley Fighting Vehicle Conference conducted in Infantry Hall last week.

According to Capt. Thomas Milam from the 29th Infantry Regiment, the hosting unit for the conference, the conference consisted of three parts; an update on issues, feedback and a wrap up of issues, to include updating field units on training programs and providing literature regarding the heavy force.

Milam said the conference was conducted here because Fort Benning has traditionally conducted the conference, and the 29th has hosted it since the BFV was fielded into the Army system.

"It was Col. John Fuller, the 29th Infantry Regiment's commander, who decided to expand the conference to fully cover all of the issues," he said.

"We invited every major command that has switched or is going to switch to the Bradley here for the conference," Milam said. "For those who are going to switch, we provided them with special instructions on the vehicle and educated them on the latest training equipment developed by FMC Corporation engineers to make the vehicles more user friendly."

He added that the turnout for the conference was very good, with people coming from all over the U.S. and overseas to attend the conference.

Attendees at the conference were impressed with the attempt to resolve tough issues, indicating that everyone who deals with the BFV needs to have a representive attend the next one.

John G. Wheeler, manager of the BFV product improvement program, said he learned many things from the wealth of experience of both the people who were in attendance and the people who were conducting the seminars. That information is going to make his job easier, he said.

"It's a lot different when you just design the Bradley and run it through the tests than when you see and listen to how people actually use it in the field," he said.

He said he was very impressed with the standard of the presentations and the dedication and sincerity of the hosting unit and recommended that more FMC people be exposed to conferences of this nature.

"The Bradley is a revolution in how the infantry fights and, even though some minor problems sometimes occur with the vehicle, it's nice to hear that no one would ever consider giving it back," Wheeler said.

Residents can make ACs more effective

By Becky Ray
Energy Management Office

Air conditioning season began May 24, and although families living at Fort Benning are finding their homes more comfortable, many aren't getting the full benefit of their air conditioners.

According to DEH maintenance personnel, many occupants do things that actually make their homes warmer, even when the air conditioners are on.

Leaving doors and windows open allows cooled air to escape easily to the outside. Make sure doors and windows stay tightly closed when air conditioners are on.

Turning on an attic fan when an air conditioner is being used not only blows the cooled air out of the house, it pulls hot outside air into the house. Attic fans should never be used when the air conditioners are on.

Bathroom and kitchen ventilation fans also blow out cooled air and should be used only when necessary.

Storm doors may not offer direct transfer of air from the outside to the inside of a house, but they do allow sunlight to enter, warming the air inside the house. All doors should be kept closed to keep the inside cool.

Allowing full sun to enter windows also heats a house. Drapes or shades should be closed in sunny windows.

Many appliances can heat a house quickly, especially ovens and stoves. Cooking should be done at cooler times of day (early morning or late in the evening). Using foods that cook quickly can also help avoid unnecessarily heating up the house.

Televisions, lights, steroes and other appliances should be turned off when not being used to save electrictiy and to keep them from radiating heat.

Using lots of hot water in showering, washing dishes and cleaning adds to the heat and humidity in a house. Limit use to that which is really necessary.

There are many misconceptions about getting the most benefit from air conditioning systems and keeping homes cool. If you have questions regarding this or any other energy-related subject, call the Energy Management Branch at 545-4652 or 545-SWAT.

Veteran nurse wins 'Excellence' award

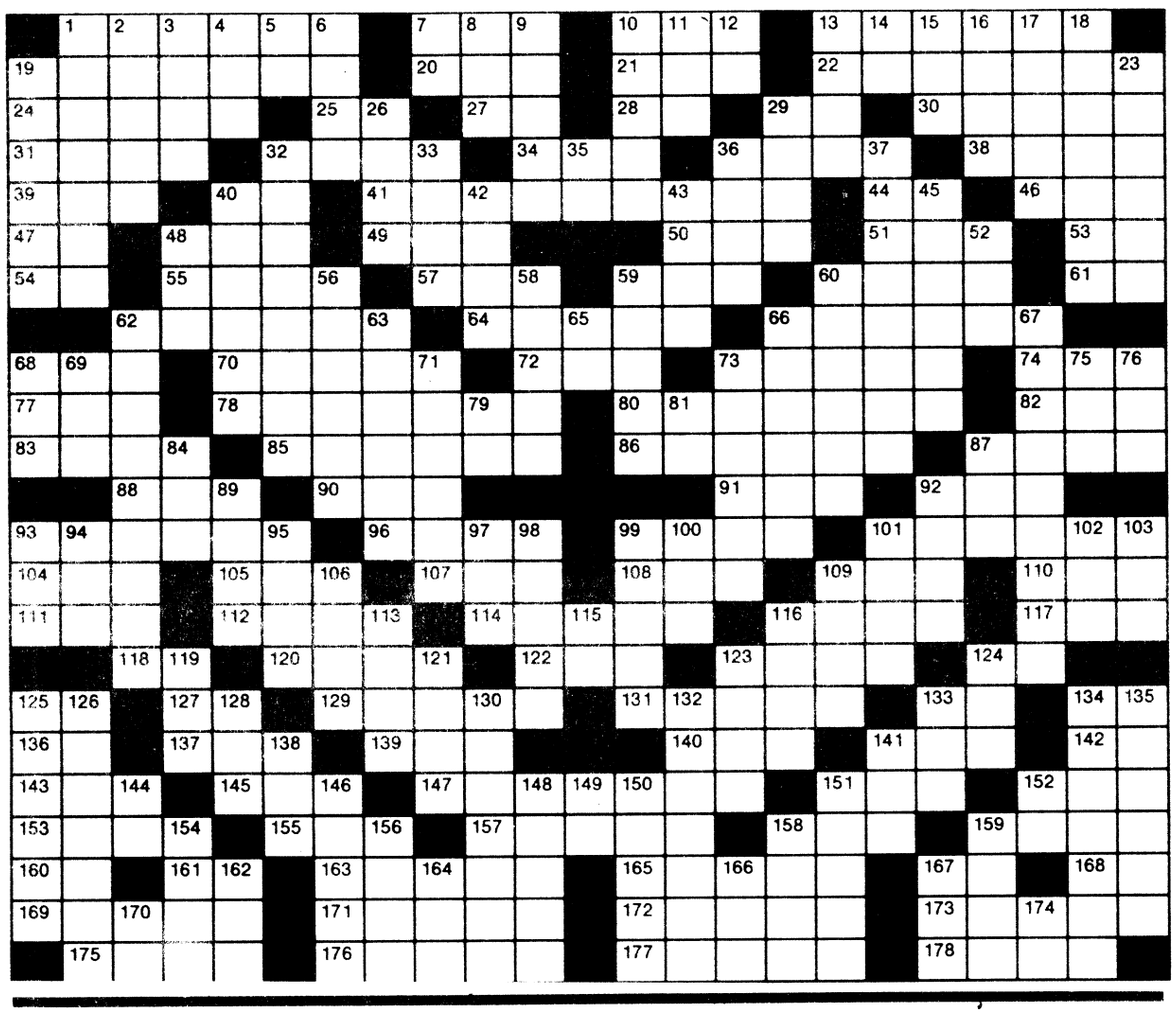
Martin Army Community Hospital

On May 14, Jenovis M. Obleton, a psychiatric clinical nurse at Martin Army Community Hospital, received the Third Annual "Excellence' in Nursing Practice Award" from the Metro Black Nurses' Association at a banquet and ceremony held at the Ralston Towers.

This award, recognizes the contributions minority nurses in the Columbus and Phenix City area make to the nursing profession.

Obleton was cited for her optimistic attitude to achieve all challenges, her impeccable ethical standards and exemplary therapeutic nursing skills. Chief among her accomplishments is her dedication and loyalty during the 25 years she served as a clinical nurse on the acute psychiatric inpatient ward.

Obleton's duty performance has been outstanding as chronicled by her receiving five Sustained Superior Performance Awards and obtaining five "Exceptional" annual performance ratings over the past five years.



She has earned the respect and admiration of her fellow staff, the patients she cares for and their families.

Quality patient care is not only the cornerstone of her philosophy or the goal she works toward each day, but the embodiment of her personhood, where she combines a comprehensive understanding of psychodynamic theory with her own personal qualities of empathy, sincerity, and genuineness in providing reality-based, problem-solving approaches to patients afflicted with significant psychological disorders.

Obleton is a nurse whose skills are recognized and appreciated not only by her patients, staff and family, but in her own sense of career satisfaction.

Dachshund sausage evolved into hot dog

By Fran Altman
National Hot Dog & Sausage Council

Happy Hot Dog Month — This is the peak consumption period for one of our favorite foods, the hot dog. In fact, the hot dog, as we know it, was invented by several people.

First, German wurstmachers came to this country bringing with them the receipe for making the frankfurter. Then, the frankfurter was often called the "dachshund sausage".

One cold spring day in 1901 at the New York Polo Grounds the concessionaire Harry Stevens, sent his salesmen into the stands to sell frankfurters by shouting "Get your Dachshund Sausage hot!" In the press box, sports cartoonist Tad Dorgan was nearing his dealine and desperate for an idea. Hearing the vendors, he hastily drew a cartoon of barking dachshund sausages nestled warmly in rolls. Not sure how to spell "dachshund" he simply wrote "hot dog". The cartoon was a sensation and the term "hot dog" was born.

You've Earned It!

OK, so you've got leave coming. And you've got big plans for good times. You're ready to hit the road. See some sights. Make your free time count for something.

Then reality hits! You're a few dollars short. Maybe a few hundred short. The dream is fading.

Don't let the dream fade away. Call Avco. Most of the people we loan money to have dreams. We help with the realities.

Avco makes loans to military personnel every day. We've been doing it for years.

DON'T TAKE CHANCES.
WEAR A HELMET.

And we have found that military people make great customers. Officers and enlisted men and women. In all branches of the service.

We give you credit for being the kind of person who stands up for our country. We're not afraid to make military loans. In fact, we're proud to do our part.

So, whatever you need money for call Avco. If you're an E-3 or above, just drop by your nearest Avco office. Fill out an application. And we'll do our best to approve your loan right then and there.

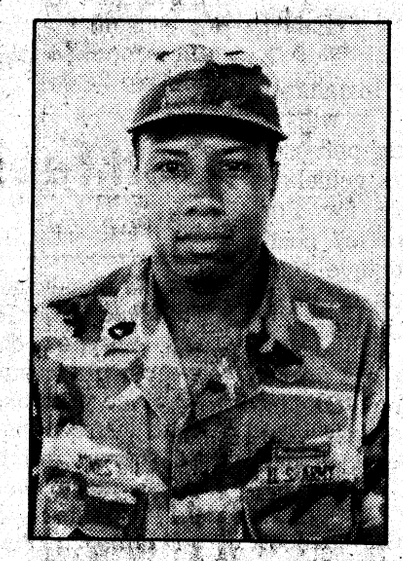
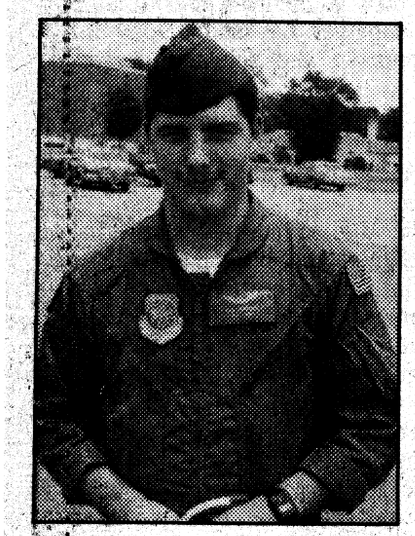
OPINION

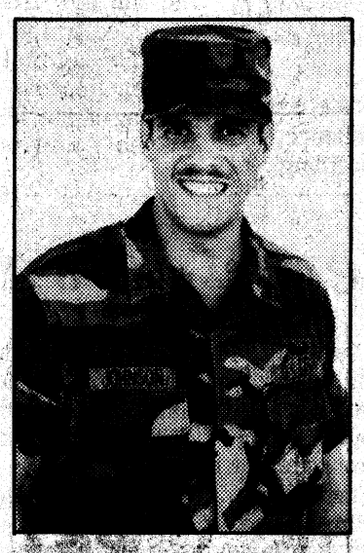
VARIOUS VOICES: What do you do for recreation during the summer?



CWO 3 David E. McCoy, Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment — "I play racquetball and tennis, and I do a lot of fishing."



Maj. Charles Andre, Company B, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment — "There are two things I do during the summer for recreation. One is Boy Scouts because I am a Scoutmaster and the other is camping with my family."



SP4 Dawn Klein, 70th Division Logistics Group, Frazier, Mich. — "I swim a lot, water ski, fish, camp, canoe and ride my bike."

SFC Clarence Jones, ANCOC — "Recreation for the summer months consists of cutting grass, attending baseball games and maybe taking a trip to the zoo or the beach, basically just family things."

Airman 1st Class Keith Schnug, McCord, Air Force Base, Wash. — "I go four-wheeling, waterskiing and flying, and I play softball."

SSgt. Earl Johnson Jr., ANCOC student — "I swim, play softball and basketball, have barbecues and go dancing."

Snively says 'Go north young man'

By Clyde Snively
USAIC Public Affairs Office

When the 2nd Brigade of the 10th Mountain Division moves North to Fort Drum, it will be a different unit from the one whose soldiers trained hard on the red Georgia clay, sweated in the jungles of Panama, scaled mountain peaks in Alaska and fought the "enemy" from California's NTC to Arkansas' JRTC.

It will be different in that few of the officers and men who were here to activate it three years ago are with the unit today. Even fewer will be making the move to the North Country.

New recruits will soon be training at Harmony Church and Sand Hill to take the place of the original cohort troops who will soon reach the end of their tour with the Commando Brigade and their enlistment in the Army.

But as the Army seeks recruits to turn into mountaineers, the brigade is looking for cadre to lead these young men. To date, the search has been less than a resounding success.

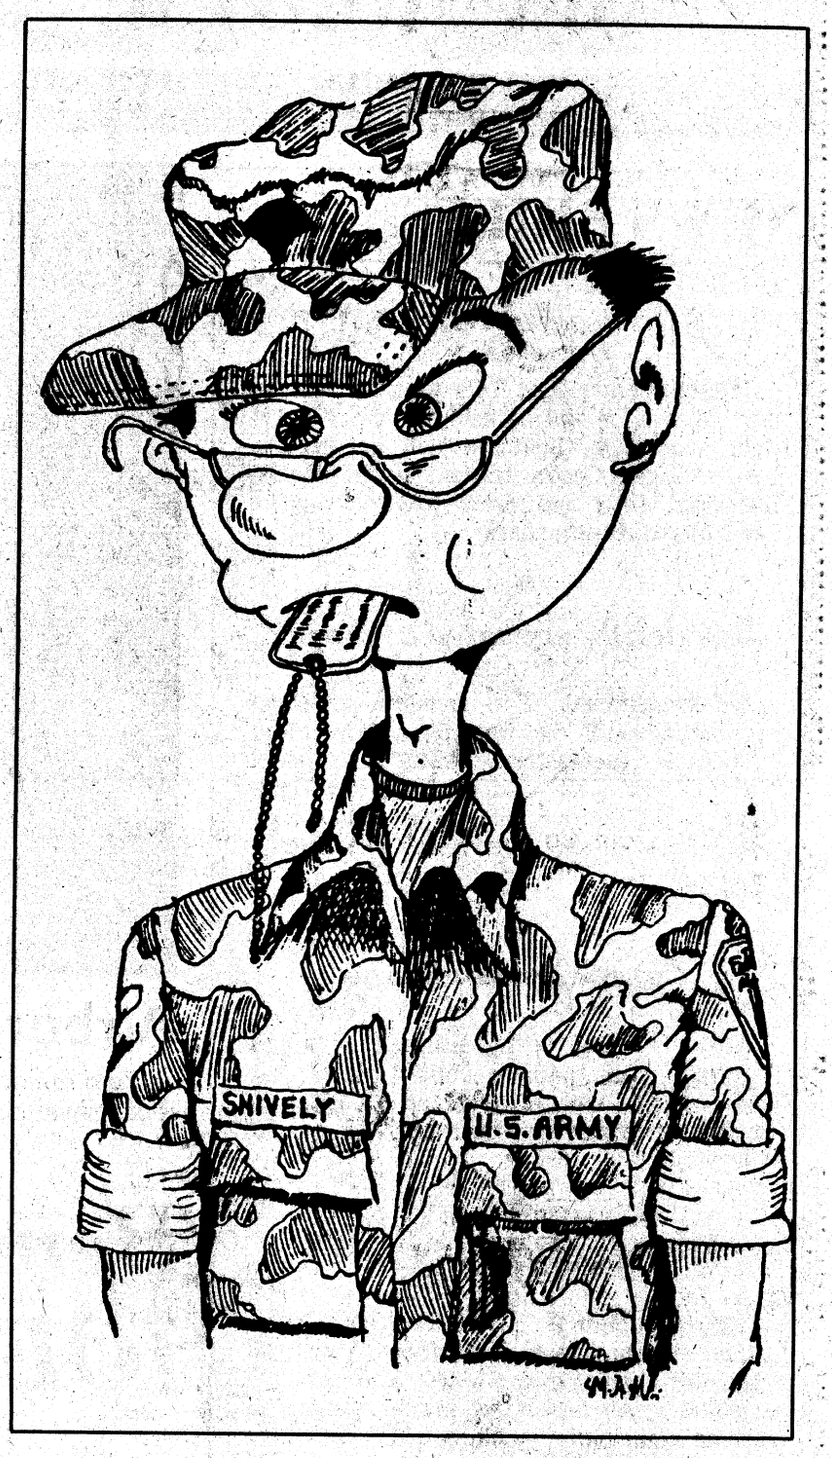
I heard of the dilemma during an afternoon formation. Looking out over the shimmering heat as it reflected off the blacktop parking lot, my uniform wet from sweat, I thought back to the tall cool pines and icy blue lakes of Fort Drum.

Separation makes the heart grow fonder, it also serves to dampen unpleasant memories. Memories of the dust that coated our lungs as we followed mech infantry into the field, cursing the heat as the temperatures climbed into the high 80s and remained there day after day (we called this summer, and it occasionally lasted for as many as three consecutive days).

Yes, tomato plants have been killed by frost in June; yes, Fort Drum did get 112 inches of snow in December of '85; and yes, temperatures have been known to drop 60 degrees below freezing, making it difficult to crank vehicles in the morning and even unpleasant to spend much time outdoors, especially if there's any wind.

I have to admit, Fort Drum is not for soldiers who eat quiche. It's for soldiers and leaders who are willing to put up with a little discomfort as they train to become rugged light infantrymen.

Training aside, the quality of life beckons to anyone who even thinks he's an outdoors person.



Lake Ontario, 20 miles west, is there with lake trout hitting the scales at 90 pounds, salmon on their spawning run up the Salmon and Black rivers; trophy size bass and trout — but best of all — the water is blue. No red, brown or green ponds. The water is blue.

Fall bursts forth on the landscape in early September in a blaze of reds, yellows and ochers, announcing apple cider and maple syrup time and the start of hunting season.

Wild turkey and deer abound on the reservation and in surrounding areas. Trappers can go after small game, to include beavers and one may even see a bear or a wolf.

The best season of all, though, is winter. There's ice fishing, winter carnivals, snowmobiling and downhill and cross country skiing. Winter time PT often consists of running in snowshoes, or skiing about the reservation. Best of all, there's no lawn to water, mow and weed.

Fort Drum itself is a brand new post, built at the cost of nearly a billion dollars — new family housing, new barracks, new maintenance bays, new shopping malls.

Soldiers and their families will find themselves warmly greeted by the local people, and their children will be readily accepted into the schools, which go out of their way to make the military child feel welcome.

Fort Drum's not for those who don't like snow and cold. This, despite the fact that the local saying of "there are only two seasons in the North Country, good skiing and poor skiing," isn't quite true.

I must also admit that a woman I knew, a Columbus native, made a vow that when her husband's assignment was up, up there, she was going to put a snow shovel on the roof of her car and drive south. She would keep driving south until someone asked her what that thing on her roof was.

Fort Drum may not be paradise, but for some of us, it's pretty darn close.

Secretary of Defense salutes soldiers

As the American people prepare to celebrate 212 years of uninterrupted freedom on this July 4th, I am very proud to salute you — the men and women of the Army, Navy, Air Force, Marine Corps and the Coast Guard. It is through your dedication to duty and country that the hard-won independence our forefathers struggled so valiantly to obtain has endured.

Americans across this great nation are also proud. They will celebrate in hundreds of cities, towns and rural communities, march in parades and light up the skies to honor this great day in American history.

This day continues to symbolize our freedom to all the opressed nations of the world. It is a day the men and women of the Armed Forces who serve so diligently around the world send an important message: The United States is a country of free people and will protect that freedom at all costs.

That which is valuable does not always come easily. Over the course of history, Americans have always heeded the call — and many have died — to protect a nation that stands for liberty and justice for all.

I am proud to serve with the men and women of the Defense team. You are valiant guardians of freedom and worthy successors to the preceding generations of Americans who gave reality to the reasons we celebrate our Declaration of Independence.

Carlucci invites Armed Forces to buy bonds

Let me take just a couple of minutes of your time to invite you to join me in investing in America's future — and your own — by purchasing United States Savings Bonds — your passport to a better future.

Each year at this time, you have the opportunity to advance a proud tradition. During our Defense Department Savings Bonds Campaign, you are encouraged to purchase bonds or increase your rate of investment through the Payroll Savings Plan.

By doing that, you are helping yourself and your family to purchase a new home, finance a college education or guarantee a secure retirement.

Today, United States Savings Bonds are one of the most attractive securities available. They offer market-based interest rates for a small, continual investment — and a short hold period.

Additonally, they are free from state and local taxes. Besides, when you purchase bonds, you're helping our nation's economy by reducing the burden of our national debt.

Savngs bonds, through the Payroll Savings Plan, are the easiest and least painful way for people to save regularly.

So I am asking, the men and women of our armed forces and DoD civilians, to sign up for savings bonds or increase your present allotment during our savings bonds campaign.

As secretary of defense, I am strongly committed to the savings bonds program because of the benefits it provides to our nation, while helping savers as well.

Together, let us work for a successful savings bonds campaign on behalf of America and all her people. Help your country— help yourself — buy bonds.

Thank you.

Frank C. Carlucci
Secretary of Defense

Summer activities keep youth entertained

Below are some activities available to keep our children entertained during the summer:

Information Tour & Travel

The Information Tour & Travel Office provides a variety of attractions and tickets for Fort Benning's youth.

•Six Flags trips for groups of 35 or more. Bus transportation and tickets are included in the ticket price of $25. This trip is designed for Boy and Girl Scout groups, youth church groups, community youth groups and any other youth groups at Fort Benning.

•Tickets are available for White Water, Disney World, Desoto Caverns, Sea World, local movie theaters and other attractions as well.

•The ITT Office will be happy to assist in planning youth group tour and travel requirements.

Bowling Centers

The Fort Benning Bowling Centers are offering summer discounts and bowling leagues for Fort Benning youth. Discounts are as follows:

Ages 18 and under — three games - $1.50 (includes shoes), 9 a.m.-5 p.m. Monday-Friday (except holidays).

18 and over and parents — three games, $2.25 (includes shoes), 9 a.m.-5 p.m. Monday-Friday (except holidays).

Evening specials for parents and youth — three games $3 plus shoes; 5 p.m. to close, Monday-Friday (except holidays).

The Bowling Centers welcome Fort Benning's youth and invites inquiries at 545-4272 or 544-1985.

Follow Me Golf Course

Junior lessons are taught several times monthly. Cost is $15, and lessons run for four days, two hours per day.

Call Greg Kelley for information regarding youth tournaments in and around the Columbus area. There are currently three youth tournaments scheduled during July.

Call the Fort Benning Follow Me Golf Course, Greg Kelley, at 687-1940 for additional information.

Youth Employment Program

The Youth Activities Center & The Family Member Employment Program are working together to offer summer employment opportunities for Fort Benning youth (ages 14-19). Applications and a release form (filled out by parents) can be obtained at the Youth Activities Center. Pay is worked out between employee and employer.

Ages 17 & over — Special employment opportunities are available with local establishments. Interested parties should contact Pat Sneed.

Contact the Youth Activities Center at 545-3070/3913 or Pat Sneed at 545-5340 for additional information.

EFMP

The Exceptional Family Member Program provides Summer Camp opportunities for children with special needs. The following Summer Camp opportunities apply:

NEWS BRIEFS

Trash pickup schedule

Holiday hours: There will be no trash pickup in family housing areas on July 4. Trash pickup in areas normally scheduled for Monday will be picked up Tuesday, and areas normally scheduled for Tuesday will be serviced Wednesday. For more information, call DEH at 545-4749.

July 4 celebration set

Independence Day: Bring the family and come out to York Field to celebrate the Fourth. Monday's activities, including Airborne/Ranger demonstrations, game booths, food and drinks and more, begin at 3 p.m. Fireworks are scheduled to begin at dark. In case of inclement weather, the fireworks will be held July 9 at dark preceeded by a concert by the 283rd Infantry Center Band.

Museum open on Fourth

Infantry Museum: The Fort Benning Infantry Museum will be open this Fourth of July, 10 a.m.-4:30 p.m.

Scholarships offered

Competition: The Fort Benning Management Association is seeking business and management students to compete for its yearly scholarships. All active duty or retired soldiers, or federal civil service employees and their family members residing within a 50-mile radius of the Fort Benning area are eligible.

The association will select recipients for two $1,200 per year scholarships donated by Troy State University at Fort Benning. This scholarship is good only at the Fort Benning Branch. The association will fund two additional scholarships; a $300 per quarter or $900 per year scholarship to Troy State, Fort Benning Branch; and one $200 per quarter or $600 per year scholarship to any accredited college or university.

Applicants are required to write a letter to the Management Association formally requesting consideration. The letter must include highlights of the applicant's academic career and extracurricular activities and also, explain why the applicants feel they should receive scholarships. Include high school transcript and completed application to Troy State or college of choice, three letters of recommendation, college transcripts and a statement of employment including name, address and applicant's job title. Submit applications to Maryann Crescioni or 1st Lt. Archie Pollock, 36th Engineer Group, building 2827, Room 202B/201C, Fort Benning, Ga. no later than July 22.

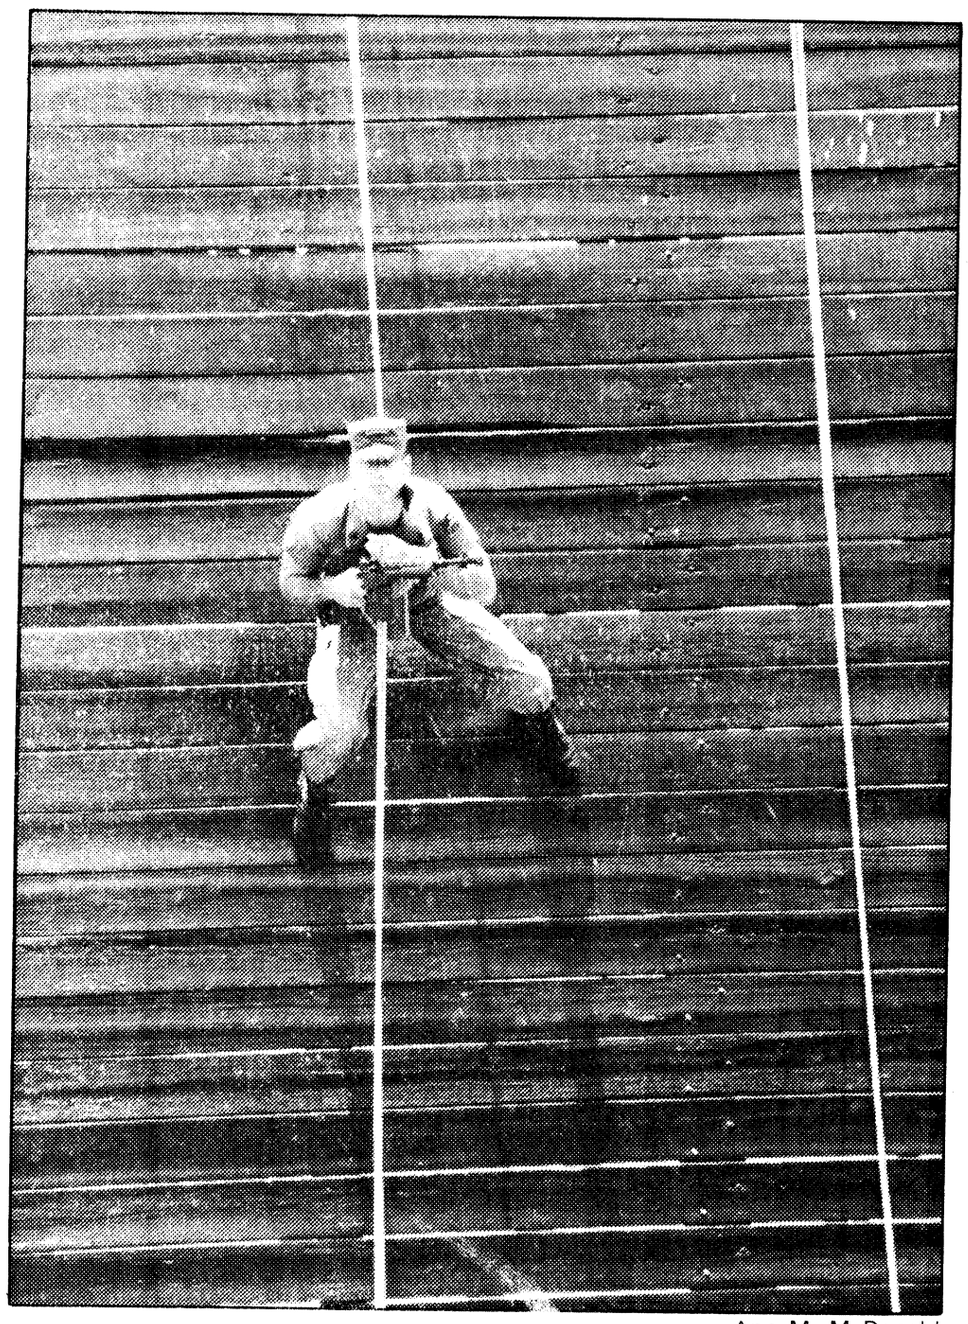
President salutes soldiers

Reagan's message: On this July 4th, America celebrates the completion of 212 years of freedom. As a nation, we pause to call to mind the cherished legacy of liberty and self-government under God bequeathed to us by our founding fathers and passed along by every succeeding generation.

The heart of that legacy is a hard, but invaluable lesson: freedom is never free. Our survival as an independent nation for more than two centuries has been possible only because of the steadfast courage and untold sacrifices of countless dedicated men and women of the armed forces. As General Douglas MacArthur noted in his farewell address to the cadets of West Point: "The soldier, above all other men, is required to practice the greatest act of religious training — sacrifice. . . He must suffer and bear the deepest wounds and scars of war."



Defenders of this land have borne many such wounds and scars, and it is to them above all — to their memory and to their honor — that we owe every Fourth we celebrate in peace and freedom.

We can rejoice that we gather together today at such a time, a time of tranquility, prosperity and hope. As this century of conflict and ferment moves toward its final decade, the forces of freedom are resurgent both in the tide of ideas and in the strength of free institutions.

On this Independence Day, 1988, we can look forward with renewed faith and expectation, and look to you, our men and women in uniform, with an even deeper sense of pride and thanks.

On this, my final Fourth of July as president and commander in chief, I take special satisfaction in saluting you — the guardians of America's liberties. Nancy and I join all Americans in wishing you and your families a memorable and safe Independence Day. May God bless you and keep you.

Ronald Reagan

Benning workers catch the SPIRIT

By Shawn Bryson
Bayonet staff writer

Three Fort Benning personnel were honored this week for their significant participation in the "Catch the Spirit" campaign held May 23-27.

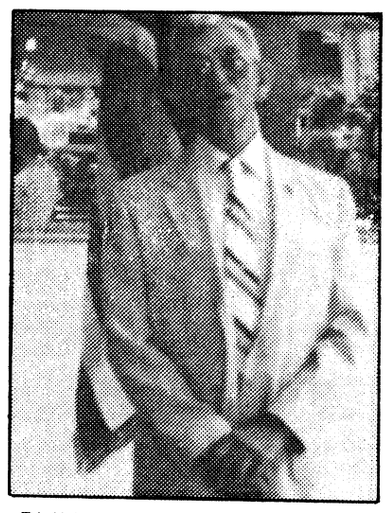
During the CG's Command and Staff Conference Monday, Maj. Gen. K. C. Leuer, post commander, presented Project SPIRIT Awards to Lee Thomason, Directorate of Plans, Training and Mobilization; Thomas Rentschler, Directorate of Engineering of Housing and Charlie Orr, Chief of the Engineer Resources Management Division, who accepted the award on behalf of Turner McCrary from the Directorate of Engineering and Housing.

The campaign was designed to create productivity consciousness at Fort Benning. The campaign emphasized the need for a post-wide attitude of seeking better ways to increase productivity in 1987. Fort Benning won a million dollars in the Project SPIRIT competition.

Eighteen activities on post participated in the campaign. Sixty people submitted 98 productivity improvement actions, which represent a $13.6 million annual savings to Fort Benning.

Rentschler's six productivity improvement actions totaled a $895,985 annual savings to the post while McCrary's eight actions will mean a $570,760 savings each year.

Nine actions submitted by Thomason amounted to a $205,517 annual savings.



Each awardee also received a 'Blue Chip' for their efforts toward saving the post and the Army a considerable amount of money and pushing Fort Benning closer to winning a million dollars again in fiscal year 1988.

Veterans donate flags to PX, Commissary

By Shawn Bryson
Bayonet staff writer

Members of the Disabled American Veterans Chapter 7 in Columbus, donated two American flags to the Main Post Exchange and Commissary recently as a patriotic gesture.

According to Phil Liparoto, he noticed years ago that the PX and Commissary didn't have any American flags flying, and two years ago, he decided to do something about it. After two years, Liparoto's idea finally became a reality as he and other members of the DAV donated the flags to Fort Benning Chief of Staff, Col. James I. Daily, who accepted the donations for the stores on behalf of Maj. Gen. K.C. Leuer, post commander.

Phil Liparoto

Liparoto, who served in the Army for 28 years, considers himself to be very patriotic and feels that is what drove him to make his idea work. "After our chapter agreed with my idea, we set out make it happen but had many problems," Laparoto commented.

The main problem was the determination of how and where the flags would be flown, the veteran explained. "Our first idea was to put in flagpoles but that meant someone would have to put up the flags every day and

In setting an example of excellence, the installations of Excellence regulation (TRADOC Reg 420-15) offers a simple but effective concept in the reduction of visual clutter.

To project a professional and pleasing appearance, the regulation suggests that we take a critical look at our work areas and building grounds, and clean up areas that are distracting to the eye.

The regulation also suggests specific ways to accomplish this task. For instance, throw away things that have outlived their usefulness. Thin out files. Don't use the floor or tops of furniture as storage areas. Wall decorations should be limited to framed artwork or awards. Posters, calendars and memos should be attached to tackboards. Generally, the regulation asks us to maintain interiors that we can be proud of, and which set an example of excellence.

The Directorate of Engineering and Housing is making a major effort to reduce exterior visual clutter all over post. Workers are replacing a conglomeration of sign types and colors with uniform white-on-brown signs. Buildings are also being painted a standard beige and brown trim color scheme, which has been designated the "colors of excellence."

Integral with implementation of the standard color scheme is the removal of unauthorized unit crests and slogans. New outdoor furnishings, such as trash receptacles and benches, contribute to the overall enhanced appearance. In addition, grounds crews and motivated volunteers have planted bushes and plants around unsightly transformers and dumpsters to screen them from view.

Standardization of building exteriors is also the responsibility of the building users. Unit crests, signs, letters or nameplates are not authorized on buildings. Fencing must also conform to standards set in the Installation Design Guide. All fences, including "first sergeant fences" (rope or chain threaded through short posts) that do not meet standards should be removed.

The use of utility buildings (outbuildings) is another topic addressed in the Design Guide. These buildings must conform to style and color of adjacent buildings. To insure compliance, all utility buildings must be approved by the DEH prior to installation.

Reducing visual clutter to project a professional appearance is an important part of the IOE concept that does not have to be extensive or expensive. According to the concept, raising our standards for the appearances of our working and living areas will foster a sense of excellence. As the old saying goes, "When you look good, you feel good."

Voting applications available

USAIC Public Affairs Office

In just a little more than four months, a new president of the United States will be elected by the American people. The reason to vote can best be given in this year's voter slogan: "Tomorrow will be decided today — Vote."

Federal Post Card Applications for citizens who will be away from their local polling places on the general election day can be picked up from unit Voting Assistance Officers or from any of three main post locations:

- Information Office at Infantry Hall, building 4. SSgt. Anthony Ward, 545-2218/3214.
- Legal Assistance Office, building 5. SSgt. Herman Furlow, 545-3281/3282.
- Personnel Processing Center, building 2622 in Soldiers' Plaza. SFC Willie Seals, 545-2910/4630.

Submition of the FPCA should be done in plenty of time so that the requestor can receive the ballot and return it by Election Day, Nov. 8.

For West Virginia residents, one FPCA must be used to register and another to receive an absentee ballot. All other states require only one.

For more information, contact your unit voting assistance office or call the post Deputy Voting Assistance Officer, Capt. Harry Williams at 545-3881 or 544-4559.

Local citizen honored with Livingston Award

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

Art Chriss of AARCO military supply received the 5th annual Livingston Award at the Annual Association of the U.S. Army Summer General Membership Meeting here last week.

The Livingston Award was instituted by Cliff Livingston Sr. to honor unsung local citizens who enhance communication between soldiers and civilians in the Fort Benning, Columbus and Phenix City community.

Tom Highland of the U.S. Army Marksmanship unit provided the handiwork in the painting for the award. It bears the likeness of Chriss surrounded with various patches and badges that can be seen on soldiers' uniforms around Fort Benning.

Chriss, who can be seen at most military functions in his camoflague sport jacket, has made several donations to the Infantry Training Center and The Ranger Training Brigade.

After Chriss received the award he spoke about his love for soldiers and how surprised he was about receiving the award.

Chriss mentioned that he was to have attended a class reunion in Auburn conducted at the same time as the meeting but was told he could not go since he had to be at the AUSA meeting.

Art Chriss

"Because of that, I assumed I was going to get some sort of plaque or something similar," he said, "I never dreamed that I would be the recipient of this year's Livingston Award."

He added that his business caters to soldiers, so he, in turn, tries to give something back.

Over the years, Chriss has done much for Fort Benning, including being one of the founders of the David L. Grange Best Ranger Competition conducted yearly to determine the best Ranger in the Army.

OPINION

VARIOUS VOICES: How are you going to celebrate the 4th of July?

1st Lt. Judy Partin, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 36th Engineer Group — "We are going out of town to visit my husband's uncle and have a family picnic."

Jannis Williams, family member — "I am going to watch my husband play baseball. He plays for a local team, and they have a game on the 4th. Afterwards, we are planning on having a barbecue."

Sgt. Terry Bridges, Company B, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment — "I plan on going home to my see my family, and we'll probably barbecue when I get there."

SP4 Wade Liddell, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor — "I'm taking leave and going to visit my parents and the rest of my family. I imagine we'll have a picnic or something on that day."

SP4 Henry Floyd, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment — "I'm going home to spend the holiday with my parents. We will probably go to the park and barbecue."

2nd Lt. David Propst, Headquarters and Headquarters Detachment, 34th Medical Battalion — "I plan on spending the 4th of July with my parents in New York. While I'm there, we will probably go see the fireworks display at the Hudson River."

Last year's fireworks were a natural

By Clyde Snively
USAIC Public Affairs Office

"We're celebrating Fourth of July, Independence Day, Monday, so write something patriotic," the major told me as he passed out our assignments for the week.

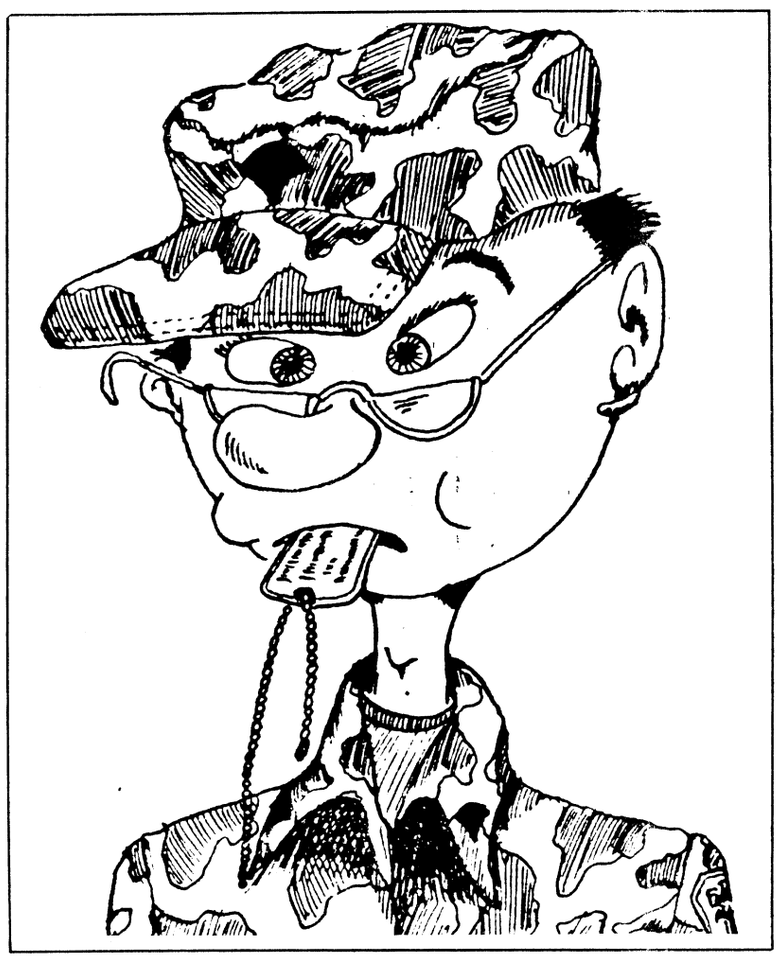
"I guess it's my patriotic duty to remind everyone that no matter what the Bayonet says, Fourth of July will be celebrated on July 4," I said, reminding him in a roundabout manner that last year's Bayonet announced that July 4 would be held on July 3, causing all sorts of problems, consternation and many phone calls.

Nor could the major escape the error of his ways when he visited the post exchange later that day. Even then he heard people talking about when July 4 would be. This prompted him to ask management to make an announcement over the PA system that despite what they may have read in The Bayonet, July 4 festivities would be held on July 4.

As it turned out, July 4 should have been scheduled for July 3 since nature's fireworks caused the celebration to be postponed. One lightning bolt hit right behind Iron Mike, cracking the concrete in front of Infantry Hall. At least The Bayonet was correct in noting that in case of inclement weather the man-made fireworks would be held July 5.

Days like Independence Day can really get my blood stirred up as I think back on the long line of fellow specialists who've come before to help preserve this country's liberty.

I will admit though, that I'm glad I'm not fighting in the Revolutionary War. Those guys rarely got paid and often had to provide their own rifles and ammunition.



I'd hate to be considered a "sunshine patriot," but if the truth be known, I do appreciate my monthly paycheck and get quite upset when there's been a mixup and my bank doesn't have my direct deposit on time.

On July 4, we celebrate the 212th anniversary of this country. On the day the Constitution was signed, in 1787, someone asked Benjamin Franklin what it meant. "A republic, if you can keep it," he said.

Earlier, he'd told the Convention that the Constitution was probably the best that could be devised. He said it should last forever, but then added, "However, nothing is certain but death and taxes."

I knew I'd heard that before somewhere.

One thing I find interesting about the Constitutional Convention is that the delegates adopted a rule of secrecy for its proceedings because they believed publicity would stifle honest and open debate.

Today, because of the freedoms granted the press under the Constitution, it would be impossible to hold such a convention. Thus, if we didn't have a Constitution, would it be possible to get such a document? Of course not, there would be too many leaks, and too many interest groups would shoot down the various articles and ammendments.

It's great to be an American. To live in a free country. It's just a good thing that all these events took place 200 years ago when times were simpler.

Speaking of simpler... have you heard the latest abomination, the most recent attack on Americanism? Someone has developed a seedless watermelon. Now who can enjoy a Fourth of July picnic without watermelon seeds to spit on the ground?

CG wishes all a safe Fourth of July

Each Independence Day is a special occasion as we commemmorate the start of another year of democracy.

Our nation was conceived in liberty on the 4th of July, 1776, with the signing of the Declaration of Independence. This country was founded on democratic principles — its people unwilling to accept anything less than freedom — and through the Declaration of Independence, we became the first nation in history born with a commitment to democratic ideals.

This year, we celebrate the 200th anniversary of the ratification of the Constitution. Today, through our own actions and service, we reaffirm that ratification and the freedoms it guarantees.

George Washington realized that America's victory over the British didn't guarantee a future free of threats to America. He warned that America must always remain ready to defend itself. In his first annual address to Congress, he said: "To be prepared for war is one of the most effectual means of preserving peace."

We achieve preparedness through training. We recognize that quality training is essential for the Army to fulfill its fundamental mission to deter war, or if, deterrence fails, to reestablish peace through victory on the battlefield.

In this year of training, we especially focus on:

- Individual training that develops soldiers who are disciplined, physically tough and highly motivated.
- Leader training that provides us with highly skilled leaders at every level of the Army who are prepared to lead our soldiers in combat.
- Unit training that is team oriented and realistic to prepare our forces for the rigors of the battlefield.

Such training is not "here today, gone tomorrow." It is a constant. Learned skills must always be reinforced as new ones are developed. Sustained training through continuous practice keeps soldier skills alive.

We must always remember that in training soldiers, there is more to be accomplished than the technical matters. The spirit of the soldier must be the cornerstone on which we build the technical expertise. This spirit must be one that engenders a willingness to sacrifice — to pay the price in sweat, rather than blood.

Army Chief of Staff, General Carl E. Vuono said, "We train as we intend to fight. Good training produces readiness for war, realistic training is the test of the credibility of our deterrence."

Soldiers and civilians of Fort Benning, I am proud to serve with you, to be part of the deterrence that keeps this nation free.

Have a safe and glorious Fourth.

Secretary of Defense salutes America's peace keepers

Army News Service

As the American people prepare to celebrate 212 years of uninterrupted freedom on this July 4th, I am very proud to salute you the men and women of the Army, Navy, Air Force, Marine Corps and Coast Guard.

It is through your dedication to duty and country that the hard won independence our forefathers struggled so valiantly to obtain has endured.

Americans across this great nation are also proud. They will celebrate in hundreds of cities, towns, and rural communities, march in parades, and light up the skies to honor this great day in American History.

This day continues to symbolize our freedom to all the oppressed nations of the world. It is a day the men and women of the Armed Forces who serve so diligently around the world send an important message:

The United States is a country of free people and will protect that freedom at all costs.

That which is valuable does not always come easily. Over the course of history, Americans have always heeded the call and many have died to protect a nation that stands for liberty and justice for all.

I am proud to serve with the men and women of the defense team.

You are valiant guardians of freedom and worthy successors to the preceding generations of Americans who gave reality to the reasons we celebrate our declaration of independence.

Frank C. Carlucci
Secretary of Defence

Have a happy, safe Fourth of July!

Safety tips may prevent July 4 accidents

Evelyn D. Harris
American Forces Information Service

There's something about the Fourth of July.

We listen to "The Star Spangled Banner" while watching a fireworks displays, enjoying a picnic and generally celebrating our good fortune at being Americans.

Safety doesn't usually make the list, but it's no less important. First of all, consider fireworks safety.

Military safety people hope you'll watch the display put on by the professional fireworks people on your installation or in your community rather than try to do it yourself.

Individuals in military housing are not allowed to use any fireworks that are illegal in that state, but some base commanders restrict them even further. For example, while the state of Maryland permits sparklers, Andrews Air Force Base prohibits them.

That's because even seemingly innocent fireworks such as a sparklers can cause injury. One 8-year-old girl, for example, received second and third degree burns on her leg when a sparkler ignited her dress.

According to the Consumer Product Safety Commission, an estimated 9,000 people were treated in hospital emergency rooms last year for injuries from fireworks. About half the victims were under 15 years old. Perhaps due to stricter fireworks laws, stepped-up enforcement and greater public awareness, the number of injuries is going down — in 1985, 10,300 people were injured — but any is too many.

If you're going to use fireworks, safety experts say to follow these guidelines:

- Do not allow younger children to play with fireworks. The sparkler considered by many to be the ideal "safe" firework for the young, burns at very high temperatures and can easily ignite clothing. Children can't appreciate the danger involved.
- Allow older children to play with fireworks only under close adult supervision. Don't allow any horseplay around fireworks.
- Read and follow all warning instructions printed on the fireworks label before use.
- Light fireworks outdoors in a clear area away from houses and flammable materials.
- Keep a bucket of water nearby for emergencies.
- Don't try to relight malfunctioning fireworks. Soak them in water and throw them away.
- Be sure other people and pets are out of range before lighting.

Never light fireworks in a container, especially one of glass or metal.

- Store fireworks in a dry, cool place.
- Check instructions for special storage directions.

Fireworks aren't the only Fourth of July hazard. Drunk driving is even more dangerous due to the increase of traffic during a holiday weekend. Add the influence of alcohol to the fatigue caused by hot weather and the long distances many people drive, and you've get a recipe for trouble.

Most military and civilian police step up their vigilance to spot drunk drivers over the holiday, but they may not get them all.

Therefore, all drivers should drive a little more defensively to avoid accidents.

If you're a motorcyclist, don't let holiday high spirits tempt you to ride too fast. Trying to negociate curves while speeding is one of the most common causes of motorcycle accidents. And advice on defensive driving goes double for bikers. Car drivers who have hit motorcycles often say they didn't see them. Such drivers may be even less likely to see you if they've been drinking or are tired.

Athough it may seem a little grim to think about accidents during a holiday, taking a few simple precautions to avoid an accident is better than spoiling a holiday by not having one.

CG recognizes, rewards volunteer's hard work

By Shawn Bryson
Bayonet staff writer

One of Fort Benning's volunteers was honored recently by Maj. Gen. K. C. Leuer, post commander.

Judy Purkett, wife of SFC James Purkett, Co. C, 2nd Bn., 14th Inf., 10th Mtn. Div., and a mother of two, was recognized as the Volunteer of Quarter June 24 in the office of the commanding general.

Judy Purkett

Purkett, who was accompanied by her children, Carma, 9, and Gary, 6, as well as her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Austin, accepted a certificate of achievement from Leuer for the time she volunteered to a variety of projects at Benning.

Purkett, a native of Washington state, spent much of her time with the Fort Benning Girl Scouts where she held a variety of positions. She was a leader of a Daisy Group, Age Level Consultant, trainer on the Concharty Council and a Service Unit Director. She also designed an incentive program for the cookie sale, the major fund raising event of the year for the scouts.

Other areas of Purkett's volunteer work included Santa's Castle, the Officers Wives' Club, the Rangers Wives' Group, Army Community Service and 10th Mountain Division.

"I think it speaks highly of a command when it recognizes volunteers because it shows that we are appreciated," Purkett said after the ceremony.

Trip to Florida was far from a beach vacation

Soldiers from Co. B, 1st Bn., 58th Inf., move out on a patrol during aggressor force exercises at Camp Rudder, Fla.

197th Infantry Brigade correspondent

Two platoons from Company B, 1st Battalion, 58th Infantry, recently took a trip to Florida. But the training they were involved in at Camp Rudder was far from a vacation on the beach.

1st platoon of Company B work as an aggressor force for the School of the Americas training at the Army camp, located near Fort Walton Beach, Fla. The soldiers they helped to train were an El Salvadorian commando unit.

3rd platoon provided both enemy and friendly forces to Company C, 1st Battalion, 19th Special Forces Group. This was part of the Salt Lake City, Utah, National Guard unit's annual, two-week training.

"This is the best training I've had since I've been in the Army," said SP4 David C. Redmon, one of the soldiers from 3rd Plt., Co. B. "If we were ever attached to an air assault unit during a war, this training would definitely pay off."

3rd Plt. and the Special Forces unit taught each other many new techniques. The 197th soldiers taught classes in the DRAGON anti-tank missile and the Squad Automatic Weapon.

The Special Forces unit soldiers introduced the Fort Benning soldiers to the F-470 Zodiac rubber assault boat, a rappelling technique called "Fast-rope," and taught a class in parachute signals and commands.

Mountaineer honored at retreat

By Shawn Bryson
Bayonet staff writer

Soldiers from the 2nd Brigade, 10th Mountain Division recently gathered for a retreat ceremony held in honor of CSM Thomas Cruise.

Cruise, who served as the command sergeant major of the brigade since its activation in October 1985, is transferring to the Florida Ranger Camp, which was recently redesignated as the 6th Ranger Training Battalion.

The ceremony was held June 24 in front of building 3210 as the brigade's 2nd and 3rd battalion soldiers stood tall to bid farewell to Cruise.

After the retreat and retirement of the colors, retired CSM Jim Gallagher, former president of the Chattahoochee Valley Fort Benning Chapter of the Association of the United States Army, presented Cruise with a watch in appreciation of his support for AUSA over the past two and a half years.

Col. Michael Connor, 2nd Brigade commander, commented that the loss of Cruise is a great one to the brigade and showed his appreciation for Cruise by presenting him with the Meritorious Service Medal.

The new command sergeant major of the brigade is CSM Willie Solomon, formerly the command sergeant major of the 2nd Battalion of the 2nd Brigade, 10th Mountain Division.

Ranger Brigade changes hands

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

Col. James E. Mace turned over the reins of the Ranger Training Brigade to Col. Keith M. Nightingale last week in a ceremony on York Field.

Mace was the first to command the unit after it was redesignated a brigade instead of a department.

During the ceremony, Mace was awarded the Legion of Merit for his work as the Infantry Center commander and commander of the Ranger Training Brigade. Mace's next assignment is Alaska.

Nightingale comes to Fort Benning from the Army War College. His numerous assignments include battalion commands with 1st Battalion, 509th Airborne Combat Team, Vincenza, Italy, and 1st Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, Hunter Army Airfield, Savannah, Ga. He has also served in the Department of the Army Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Operations.

MILES class improves training effectiveness

By Shawn Bryson
Bayonet staff writer

The third Multiple Integrated Laser Engagement System controller training class since April was conducted last week as Fort Benning strives to make use of the equipment a more controlled training method.

According to Capt. Christopher Rivers, from the Directorate of Plans, Training and Mobilization, since MILES became an official training aid, its effectiveness has been limited due to the lack of understanding by soldiers about proper use.

Rivers explained that in the past, MILES equipment was drawn and used by soldiers in a way that strayed from the proper guidelines and goals. "Soldiers would use MILES equipment without knowing the real purpose behind it," Rivers said. That purpose, he said, is to give the soldiers immediate feedback on their performance after a direct contact battle with opposing forces.

The monthly five-day class centers around teaching soldiers how to be MILES controllers, according to Stephen Chadwick, Senior MILES Tactical Engagement Simulation Training Specialist. "We are basically training soldiers to be MILES trainers," Chadwick said.

Rivers further explained that the each class is set up to train 20 soldiers who are proficient marksmen. The soldiers are hand picked to attend the training from a roster sent in by the units, but there have been problems getting the soldiers who are picked to actually attend the training Rivers said.

"We are supposed to have 20 soldiers for each class but only 13 showed up for the latest class," Rivers said. He explained that one of the three classes had been cancelled because not enough people showed up.

The first two days of the class consist of a MILES orientation and history class as well as an introduction to the equipment and the proper attachment of the equipment, Rivers said.

The last three days of the training is comprised of squad level tactical engagement simulation training exercises with MILES. These exercises are designed to give the soldiers practical experience with the MILES equipment. More importantly, according to Chadwick, the exercises give each soldier the opportunity to be the controller of an actual exercise.

The position of the controller in one of the training exercises is to give both the squad soldiers, and the opposing forces the training objectives of the exercise including orders and time frames. The controller also accompanies the squad through the exercise and evaluates everything that happens before and during the contact with the enemy.

"One of the most important parts of the training is the After Action Review because the soldiers are able to learn what they did wrong," Chadwick said. He added that through a discussion with the controller and the opposing forces, the members of the squad can look at the whole encounter and understand the things they did right and learn about alternatives that could have been taken.

All this is done so that the MILES/controller students can return to their units and train other trainers so that the users of MILES equipment will get the full benefit from the training, Rivers explained.

With MILES equipment, this soldier knows whether the target at which he has fired has been hit. He also knows whether he can keep running when someone fires at him.

Soldiers train with Zodiac

By Kevin J. Howerton
197th Infantry Brigade correspondent

"The motivation of Company B has really impressed me," said Capt. Greg Stuart of the 1st Battalion, 19th Special Forces Group. "When you teach people that are this excited about training, it makes your job fun. It is also a good feeling to be able to instruct active duty units and to know that they are depending on you."

The Zodiac is an inflatable boat with a 35-horsepower outboard motor. The soldiers from 1st Bn., 58th Inf. used them in various assault exercises and supporting manuvers, such as recovering parachutes from the ocean after the Special Forces unit made a water landing.

In another mission, the boats were taken to Santa Rosa Island. At times the soldiers were more than 10 miles off the coast.

The Fast-rope technique is a form of rappelling developed by British commando units. Rather than using the traditional "Swiss seat" to connect to the rope, the soldiers use leather gloves to slide down a thick rope.

"Fast-rope is the fastest way of getting out of a helicopter without it having to touch down," said SP4 David A. Clarke. "You're not attached to the rope, so you have a lot more options in getting down to the ground and into position."

Retirement orientation: The 1988 Summer/Fall Pre-Retirement Orientation will be held July 26, 8 a.m. in Classroom 5. Soldiers who have 18 years or more active duty should be planning for retirement, even though it may not be for several more years. Laws concerning retirement benefits change often and sometimes drastically. To stay current on retirement benefits, now is the time to begin gathering information and formulating ideas. Spouse should also know what to expect since families are an important part of retirement planning. This program is not intended for personnel who have already submitted their retirement application, however, they are also invited to attend. At 1 p.m. will be a financial planning and money management seminar. Please pre-register by calling the Retirement Service Office, building 2635, at 545-2715 or 545-5369. Uniforms will be duty uniform or appropriate civilian attire.

Country Fair: It's fair time once again. The 16th annual Oak Grove Country Fair is Aug. 20-21, 10 a.m.-6 p.m. It is located two miles north and 1 mile west of Pine Mountain, Ga. off Highway 27. Admission is $2 for adults, $1 for senior citizens or disabled and free to children under 12 years old.

Veterinary clinic: A Saturday walk-in clinic at Veterinary Services is scheduled for July 9, 8-11 a.m. The clinic is in building 265 on 10 Mountain Division Road. This service will be restricted to the first 30 pets. For more information, call 545-1127.

Veterans convention: Vietnam veterans from throughout Alabama, Georgia and the panhandle of Florida will hold their first regional convention Nov. 11, 12 and 13 at Lakepoint Resort and Convention Center in Eufaula, Ala. Veterans who are Vietnam-era vets are eligible for membership in the Vietnam Veterans of America, which was chartered by an act of Congress in 1978. Chapters of the VVA have been established in Huntsville, Decatur, Montgomery/Maxwell-Gunter Air Force Bases, Ozark/Fort Rucker and Dothan in Alabama and Marietta and Carrollton in Georgia. Information on the regional convention may be obtained by calling the convention coordinator at 205-794-9680 or 205-792-2868 or by writing to Vietnam Veterans of America Convention Headquarters, P.O. Box 1942, Dothan, AL 36302.

WHAT TO DO

If someone complains of a neck injury or numbness after an accident, a spinal cord injury may have occurred. Don't move the person; you can cause greater damage. Tell the ambulance crew you suspect a spinal cord injury.

If you think someone has been injured in the water, don't pull the victim out. Instead, keep the head above water and the neck still. If the body is face down, carefully turn it over, supporting the head, neck and back as a unit. To support the body, use water skis or a long board for the trunk, and sandbags or a life jacket for the neck.

For more information on spinal cord injury prevention and programs and how you can help, contact: National Spinal Cord Injury Association, 149 California Street, Newton, Massachusetts 02158. Tel: (617) 964-0521.

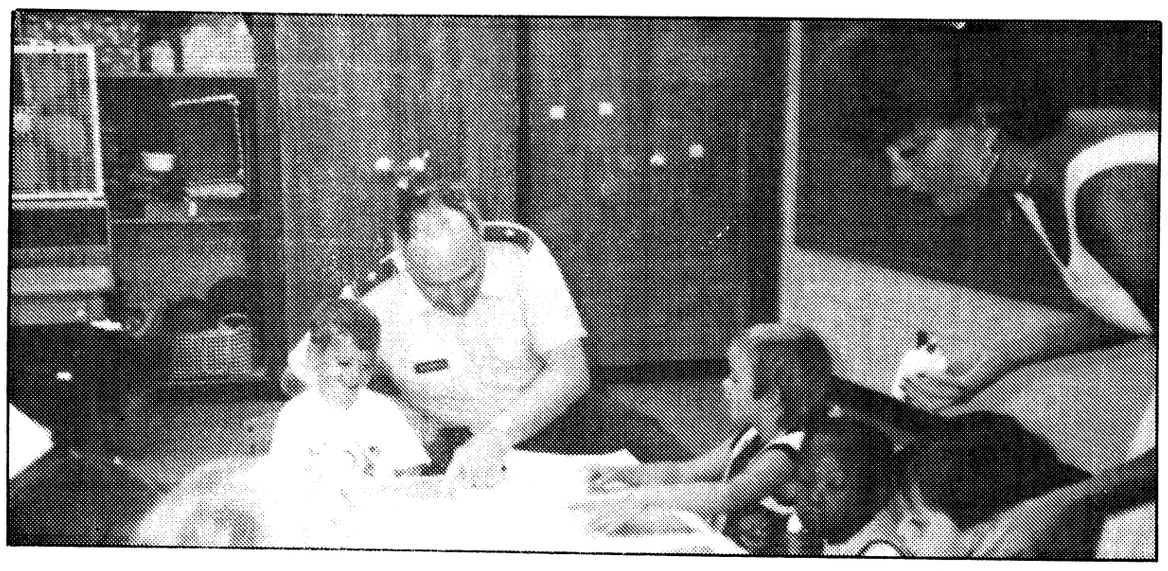
Vacation Bible School attendance is highest ever

By Jo Ann Stamey
USAIC Chaplain's Office

On June 13, Vacation Bible School (VBS) opened its doors at Dexter, McBride and Wilson schools to about 830 little "Champions for Jesus" — the largest attendance ever at Fort Benning!



The program would not have been such a success without the untiring efforts of more than 150 volunteers — mothers, fathers, teachers, chaplains, junior and senior high students and many others. A special thanks goes to Bobbie Hartzog, Evelyn Church and Amanda Thornton, the co-directors, who spent many hours coordinating the program from the beginning and making sure things ran smoothly at Dexter School. Thanks to Norsely Krider and Kay Smith, who kept things on an even keel at Wilson School, and to SP4 and Mrs. Tom Langel, who kept the eaglets entertained at McBride School.

Also, many thanks goes to the Fort Benning School System for allowing us the use of their schools. A note of special appreciation goes to the transportation motor pool for the buses and drivers who got the little eaglets to VBS on time. The commissary also deserves a note of thanks for their special assistance in getting the refreshments.

The man behind all of this, Bill Putman, the Protestant Director for Religious Education, certainly deserves special recognition for such a successful program this year. Chap. (Col.) Roy Mathis presented Putnam a blue chip award for his great work.

On June 17, the Deputy Chief of Chaplains, Chap. (Brig. Gen.) Charles McDon-

Freedom encourages contribution

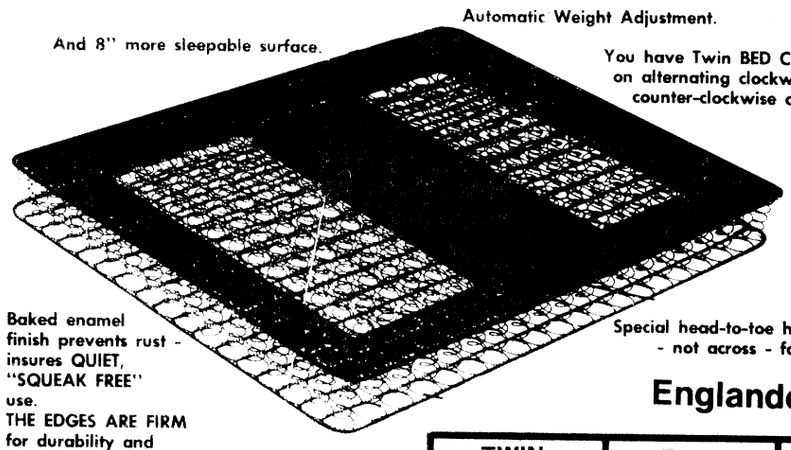
By James L. Bixler
2nd Battalion, 69th Armor Chaplain

Soon we will celebrate the birth and the continuing life of our nation. Principles of personal liberty were articulated in both the Declaration of Independence and in the Constitution, the foundation of our government. These principles of personal liberty — these freedoms — created the very heart of what makes the United States of America a great nation.

These freedoms have created and preserved a great nation because freedom encourages the contribution of individuals, no matter who they may be — young, old, male, female, black, Anglo, Hispanic or Oriental. The diversity of our heritage can enable us to see what there is to treasure in life.

For example, children remind us of the wonder of growth and learning, while grandparents remind us of the values that are the building blocks of strong individuals, families and communities.

Our freedoms allow individuals to develop their potential and, in turn, make important contributions to the life of our nation. Many are innovative thinkers whose ideas can benefit customers, clients or patients. Many are skilled laborers who take the ideas and plans of others and create a finished product. Many are caring people who teach, who want to alleviate physical suffering or help create a better quality of life. Many enrich life with their music, their paintings, films or humor. Some are our collective conscience who remind us when things are wrong or could be better.



The greatest resource that we have as a nation is our people. However, there are still too many of our people who do not know who they are. Too many of our people believe they are worthless and persuade others by their behavior that they, indeed, are worthless. Too many of our people are treated as though they have no value. Too many of our people do not understand or believe that they can make valuable contributions to our country's greater good.

It is only when we exercise our freedoms in light of our spiritual values that we will be able to recognize and develop this vast, untapped source of human potential.

It is primarily these spiritual values that underscore the importance of the individual. For example, if we really do love our neighbor as ourselves, we will treat each person in our circle of work and community associations with respect. We will realize the dignity of every individual and recognize that they have

AUSA gets new president

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

Retired Maj. Gen. Robert Sullivan succeeded retired CSM James Gallagher as president of the Chattahoochee Valley-Fort Benning Chapter of the Association of the U.S. Army during the annual Summer General Membership Meeting conducted last week.

Also installed into office were Charles A. McClure, 1st vice president; Ben F. Williams, 2nd vice president; Col. Thomas A. Wilson, secretary-treasurer and Maj. McDonald Plummer Jr., assistant secretary-treasurer.

Sullivan has much experience under his belt that should prove helpful in his new position. During his military career, he served as the public affairs officer here as well as the chief of public affairs for the U.S. Army. Currently, he is the vice president of CB&T in charge of the Fort Benning branches.

During Sullivan's inaugaural speech, he praised Gallagher for his contributions to the chapter during his tenure as president. He said he was going to give the presidency all he's got and mentioned that the first project would be to increase membership of the chapter.

Commanding General Maj. Gen. K. C. Leuer followed Sullivan at the podium and spoke about the recent budget crunch and urged all soldiers in attendence to band together and recruit new members for the association as it acts as "our voice" in Washington.

Other highlights were the presentation of the Livingston Award to Art Chriss, as well as the Membership Award, President's awards and Queen's awards.

1st Battalion, 507th Parachute Infantry Regiment was honored with the Membership Award for having 100 percent AUSA membership for the second consecutive year.

The President's awards went to Patricia L. Cole, USARSA subchapter; CSM Eddie Roberts, Follow Me subchapter; Sgt. Antionette Flowers, ITC subchapter; CSM Richard Pimental, Pioneer subchapter and corporate member, Cliff Livingston.

The Queen's awards went to Sherry Lewis, Follow Me; Tina Crews, AMEDD; Phyllis Quintana, USARSA; Yolanda McGee, Seahorse; Cheryl Knott, Pioneer; Laurianne Brevard, Forever Forward and Barbara Arradondo, ITC.

AUSA holds membership drive

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

If asked to join AUSA, some soldiers would answer, "I don't know, I'm not sure what it is. I've heard it's some organization out of D.C. that's supposed to help soldiers by lobbying in Congress."

What they don't know, is just how much the Association of the U.S. Army does to help soldiers.

True, on a major scale, they do lobby for the rights of soldiers on Capitol Hill, but, locally, they contribute much more than that.

Each year AUSA sponsors "Operation Holiday" a program designed to entertain young soldiers who aren't able to take leave during the holidays. With the support of local businesses, AUSA provides soldiers with transportation and tickets to major sporting events and tours of local businesses and museums.

The local AUSA also sponsors quarterly breakfasts. These events help soldiers gain a better insight of AUSA. They provide soldiers a chance to be recognized with awards and win door prizes donated by corporate members.

Armed Forces Day is another event AUSA supports, providing refreshments and entertainment for soldiers and their families.

There are also the assorted plaques that soldiers are given throughout the year.

Besides soldiers, AUSA helps their families, as well. AUSA supported the Officers Wives' Club Festival of Running and junior and senior ROTC scholarships.

Currently, the chapter is conducting a membership drive. In this time of budget constraints, it is important to know that the association is our "one voice" on Capitol Hill fighting for our benefits.

If you would like to join the chapter, you can do so through your unit, or you can go to building 4, Room 602.

nell, visited VBS and was especially pleased with the turn out, the program and impressed by the number of volunteers.

VBS was a great success this year. The children learned about Jesus — and had a good time doing it. The volunteers gave so much of themselves, but were also rewarded by the smiling faces and gleeful noises of the children.

Spunky the Eaglet and 83 little eaglet friends are now soaring like eagles. Who knows — maybe next year will be an even bigger success!

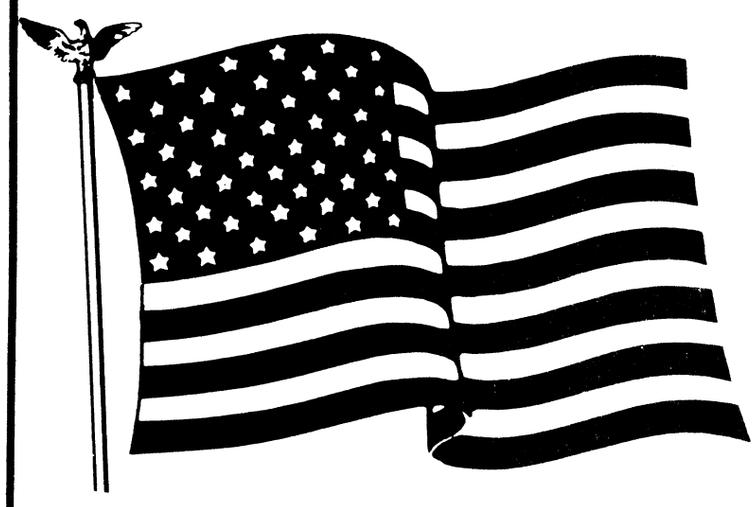
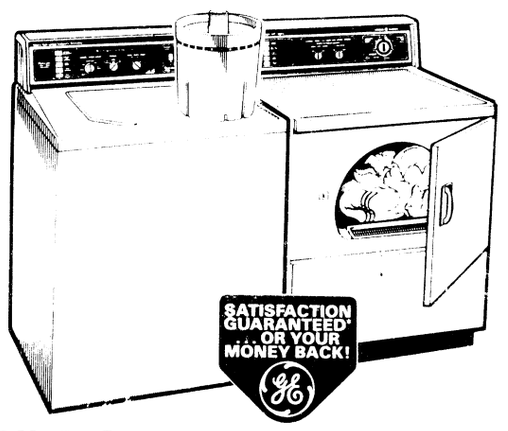
a positive contribution to make to the life of our community. Whether our neighbor is single or married, a service station attendant, a cashier in a fast food restaurant, a wealthy businessman or an individual struggling to live on a pension, we will realize that each one has valuable ideas and God given abilities.



It is important that we give individuals the opportunity to discover, develop and use their God given talents and share their ideas. As people have this opportunity, our way of life will be preserved and enriched. When we recognize the worth that God has given to each individual and deal with people each day from that perspective, then our celebration of the 4th of July is not limited to one day when we picnic with family and friends and enjoy a fireworks display.



Then it becomes a daily honoring of the personal freedom, which we say we cherish, and our community and nation will become richer as a result.

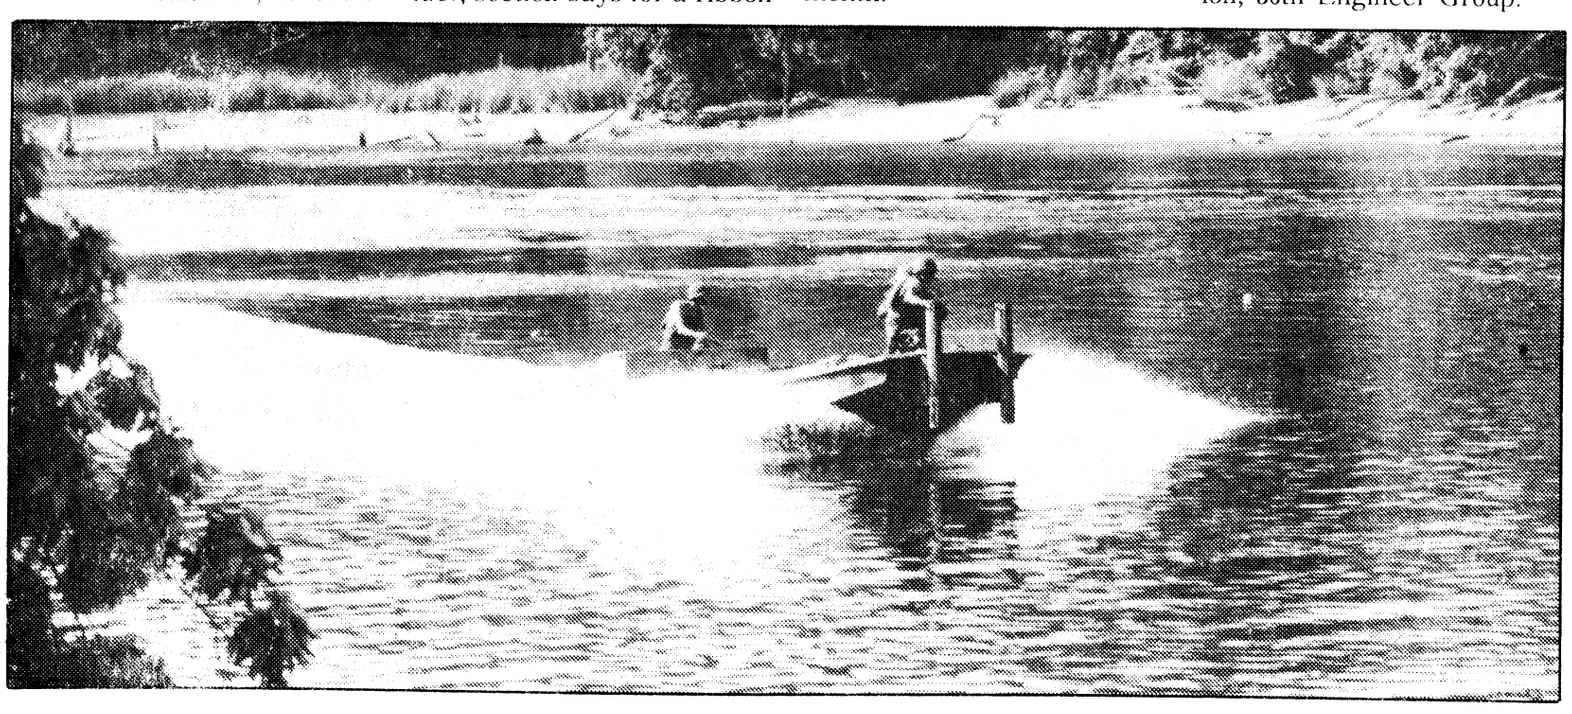
Sky cranes assist engineers

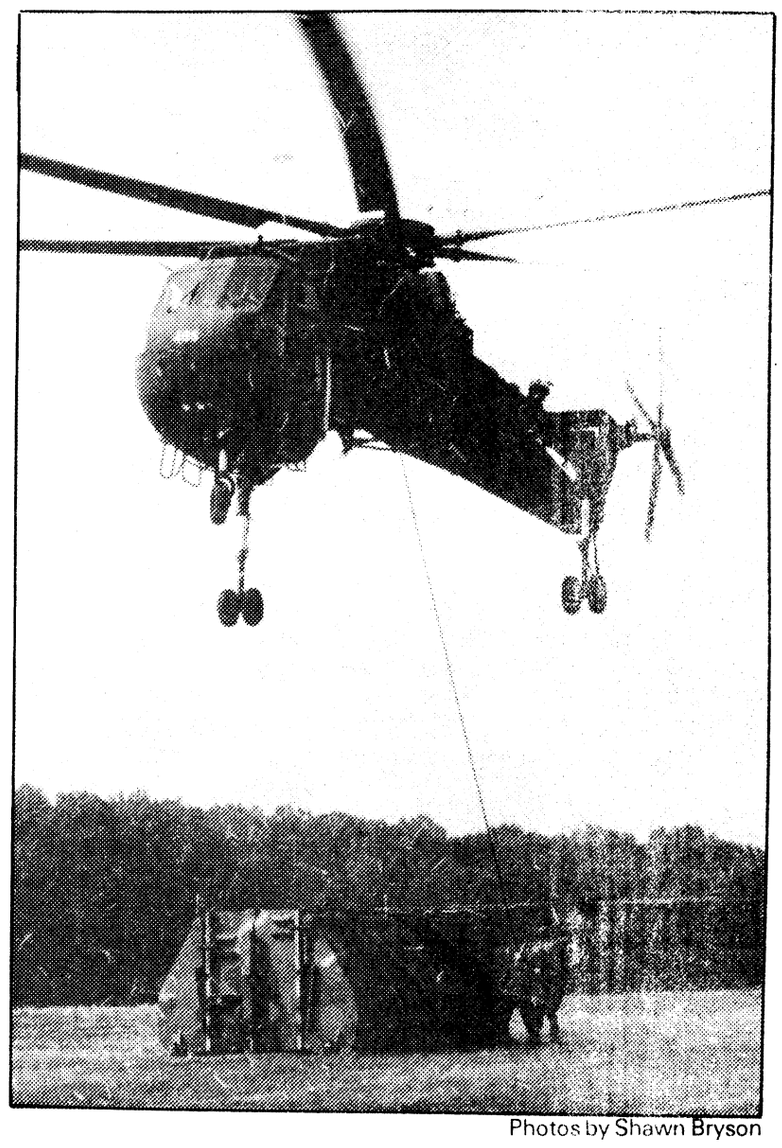
By Shawn Bryson
Bayonet staff writer

Anyone passing by Engineer Landing on the Chattahoochee River next to Lawson Army Airfield during the evening of June 21 might have had to look twice to figure out what it was they were looking at.



From a distance, it could have been mistaken for giant mosquitos hoisting what appeared to be huge, rectangular-shaped, metal boxes.

In reality, the strange flying objects were sky crane helicopters piloted by soldiers from the Army National Guard's 145th Engineer Battalion. Their cargo was, in fact, section bays for a ribbon assault float bridge being built by soldiers from the Guard's 167th Engineer Company (AFB) at Cody Landing on the river.



The 167th is at Fort Benning for its two weeks of annual training just as its sister company, 166th Engineer Company, trained here earlier this month.

The 167th soldiers are training along the Chattahoochee exercising all phases of building ribbon bridges to include five- and six-float rafts, shore-to-shore closures and airlift bridging.

While at Fort Benning, the 167th is being supported by the 586th Engineer Company (AFB), 43rd Engineer Battalion, 36th Engineer Group.

A 27-foot bridge erection boat from the 167th Eng. Co., 145th Eng. Bn., speeds down the Chattahoochee River during bridging exercises conducted last week.

First women graduate Benning Jump School in 1973

By Margaret M. Tippy
Fort Bragg Public Affairs Office

A C-130 airplane approaches the Fort Bragg drop zone while inside, tense bodies wait for the jumpmaster's commands and the green light signaling "go."

Soldiers jump one after the other descending to the ground, performing parachute landing falls, gathering their gear and running off the drop zone.

It was May 14, 1980, and 152 female paratroopers from across Fort Bragg made history by taking part in the first mass parachute jump conducted by women on Sicily Drop Zone. They were commemorating the 38th anniversary of the Women's Army Corps (deactivated in 1978).

The history of Army airborne women began seven years before that historic jump. Pvts. Rita Johnson and Joyce Kutsch were the first women to graduate from the Fort Benning, Ga., jump school Dec. 14, 1973.

"The Army decided to allow women to go through jump school because riggers were needed," said Sgt. Maj. Wilson Goldie, sergeant major of the XVIII Airborne Corps Public Affairs Office.

"I was stationed here at Bragg and was sent down to Benning to help answer all the media inquiries. It was big news — women in the Airborne."

To pack personnel parachutes, soldiers have to be able to jump what they pack, according to Goldie. So women who enlisted for the parachute rigger military occupational specialty were sent to jump school.

And were things ever different from today's Army. According to SFC Maria Allsopp-Hansel, operations sergeant of the 612th Quartermaster Company here and the fifth woman to graduate, women were completely segregated in jump school.

"We received individual training," she said, "and as a result, we understood more about what we were doing."

"That really became apparent when I went through training at the Fort Lee, Va., (parachute) rigger school. I understood more about the parachutes than my contemporaries. I was more at ease."

Allsopp-Hansel graduated from jump school on Feb. 7, 1974, and has been on jump status longer than any other woman in the Army.

Airborne female soldiers make up a small segment of military women. Of the 2,845 female soldiers stationed at Fort Bragg, 396 are airborne, according to Sgt. John Anthony Arnold, senior programmer analyst, Adjutant General Personnel Service Support Operation Systems. The women range in rank from lieutenant colonel to privates and run the gamut racially. Blacks, whites, Hispanics, Indians and Asians have all taken the giant leap.

Two enlisted soldiers with a total of 23 years on jump status spoke of what it's like to be Airborne female soldiers.

SSgt. Nancy Ellen Studer from HHC, 1st Special Warfare Tng. Ctr., graduated in August 1975 from jump school, while SFC Audrey Jean Tannahill, 600th QM Co., completed the course in April 1976.

The two soldiers describe a different jump school from Allsopp-Hansel.

"We were segregated somewhat," Tannahill said. "We did female push-ups and pull-ons, and took physical training separate from the men. Also, the men jumped (with) equipment and the women didn't. But those were the only differences, unlike when Maria went through."

The three soldiers, Allsopp-Hansel, Studer and Tannahill, refer to themselves as the "oldie goldies" because there are not many other female airborne soldiers who have remained in the Army as long as they have. But Studer and Tannahill both agree that "Maria (Allsopp-Hansel) is 'top dog.'"

Studer graduated from Military Free-Fall School, U.S. Army JFK Special Warfare Center and School, Fort Bragg, in June 1984. She has 68 high-altitude, low-opening jumps and "no idea how many static-line

High school cadets hold summer camp here

Shawn Bryson

Cadets Mitch Godwin and Dawn Johnston reach the ' of the line as they slam to a halt on the 250-foot trolled descent tower.

By Shawn Bryson
Bayonet staff writer

For most high school students, summer camp means shorts, T-shirts and swim suits, swimming, ball games and hot dogs, and ghost stories around a camp fire.

However, for 270 high school students currently at Fort Benning, summer camp means fatigues, combat boots, helmet liners, drills, training and a lot of sweat.

The students are Junior Reserve Officer Training Course cadets from the "Third ROTC Region" based at Fort Riley, Kan.

The cadets, who came from 15 schools from Georgia, Alabama and Florida as well as eight schools from the Muscogee County School District, have chosen to participate in this year's camp to get some understanding of Army life.

The cadets arrived at Benning Sunday and will train through tomorrow.

They were selected for the camp for their potential as leaders in JROTC for the next school year.

Among the goals of the "Third Region JROTC Summer Camp," are the development of self-discipline, self-confidence and an enhanced self-image for the cadets.

This year's camp consists of four companies with much of their training provided by Fort Benning instructors. About 38 JROTC cadre personnel supervise the students during their stay here.

The cadets started their training Monday as they visited the Infantry Museum and witnessed the Airborne in Action demonstration conducted by the 507th Parachute Infantry Regiment. Other airborne activities included jumps from the 34-foot towers and rides on the 250-foot controlled descent tower.

Monday's training also provided the cadets with rides in the M-113 Armored Personnel Carriers and Bradley Fighting Vehicle.

The cadets also received training at the Leadership Reaction Course, an obstacle course and in land navigation and map reading. The Ranger Regiment provided more training for the cadets at Todd Field's rappelling tower. They also fired M-16 rifles and M-60 machine guns at Malone Range #4.

Although it's not T-shirts and baseball, these cadets will most likely never forget their summer camp at Fort Benning.

Humidity often increases need for air conditioning

By Becky Ray
Energy Management Branch

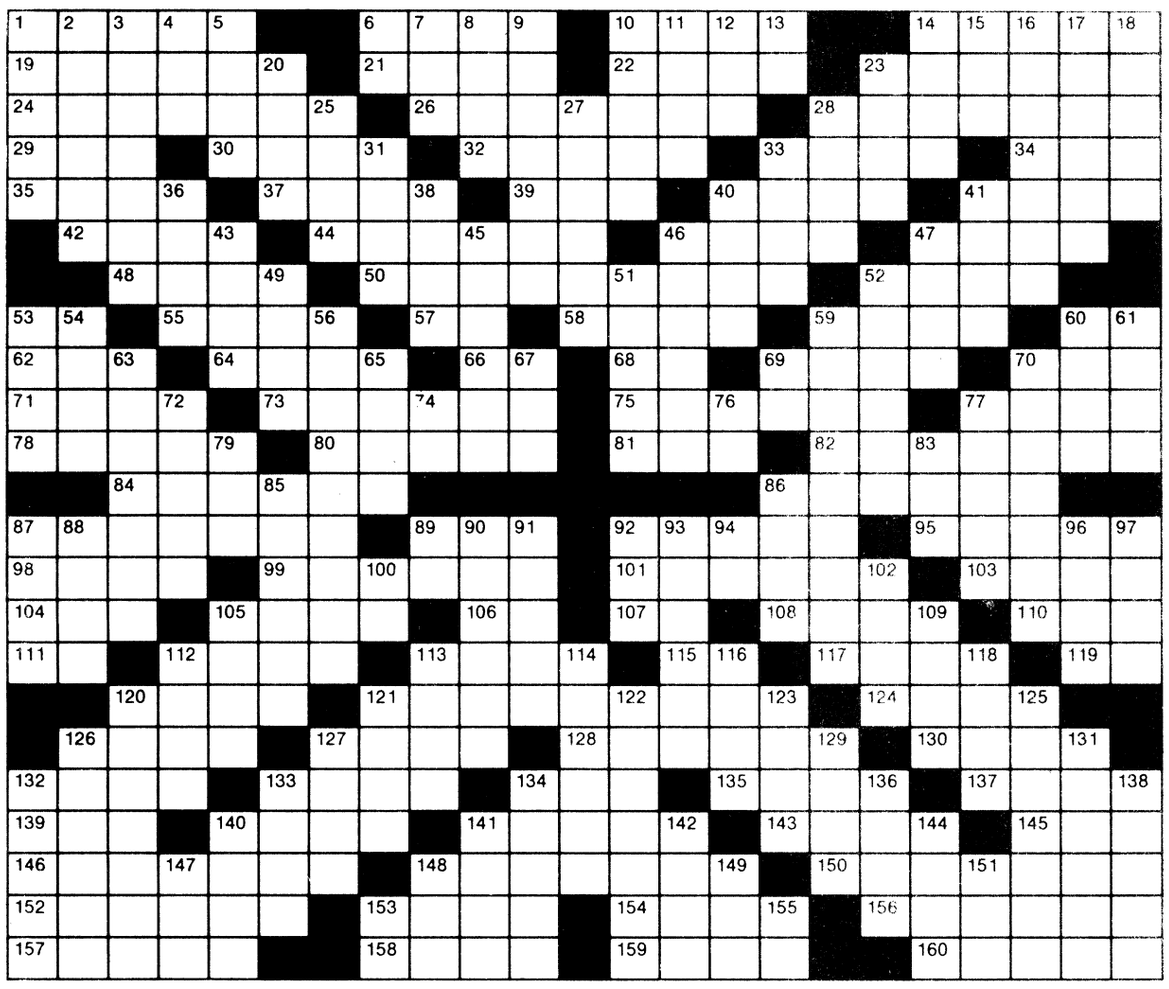
Relative humidity is often a problem in the southeastern United States, causing us to feel uncomfortable and increasing our need for air conditioning.

SAVE ARMY ENERGY

Relative humidity is defined as the amount of moisture in the air compared to the maximum amount of water vapor the air can hold at that given temperature.

A high relative humidity decreases the rate at which perspiration evaporates, making us feel warmer. Excessively high humidity can also damage furniture and paint and can cause structural damage to buildings. Mold and mildew thrive in humid environments.

Natural humidity is often increased even more by day-to-day household activity. Cooking, especially in large pots without lids, greatly increases humidity levels. Showering, doing laundry and cleaning with excessive amounts of water contribute to the problem even more. Plumbing leaks not only waste water, but provide a constant supply of moisture to the air.



Ventilation can help control humidity levels. In the home, opening windows at night and using fans can help decrease the amount of moisture in the air.

Other ways to decrease or control humidity are to repair all plumbing leaks and use as little water as practical in cleaning. Avoid excessively long showers and use a bathroom ventilation fan while showering. Plan meals that require little cooking time and cover pans to reduce the amount of steam released into the air.

Generally, staying aware of the water uses in a building will provide you with plenty of opportunities to reduce humidity levels and to feel more comfortable.

SNAPSHOTS: ROTC

ARNEWS—Army Snapshot: 10 facts you always wanted to know about ROTC.

Not many in the military are aware of the details of the Army Reserve Officers Training Corps program in place at U.S. colleges and universities, or the extent to which ROTC is the major source of officers entering active duty every year.

The 4-year ROTC program is divided into two parts a "basic course" offered during the freshman and sophomore years of college, and an "advanced course" offered during the junior and senior years.

Cadets who take the basic course attend an "advanced camp" after their junior year at either Fort Lewis, Wash., Fort Riley, Kan. or Fort Bragg, N.C.

Students who don't take the basic course can still enroll in the advanced course by completing a six-week "basic camp" at Fort Knox, Ky., before their junior year.

Many ROTC cadets attend airborne training, Ranger training, air assault training, flight training, "acting lieutenant" cadet troop leader training, and northern warfare training in Alaska with the Regular Army.

ROTC cadets must master 67 specific skills and 20 subject matter subjects before they are commissioned.

Women, who were first admitted into ROTC in 1972, today compromise almost 25 percent of those in the program.

ROTC, as we know it today, began with the National Defense Act of 1916, with almost 90,000 ROTC officers served during World War I and 100,000 during World War II.

Since 1945, more than 365,000 Army officers have been commissioned through ROTC.

Today, about 1,725 active Army officers, 580 Guard and Reserve officers, 1,400 enlisted personnel, and 780 civilians are assigned to full time ROTC duty.

Classical music airs in July

Peach State Public Radio

Classical music lovers will find the month of July a "listening must" when they peruse concert programming on Peach State Public Radio.

The Milwaukee Symphony Orchestra leads off the month when it premieres today at 8 p.m. under music director, Zdenek Macal.

The Milwaukee Symphony concerts are noted for their tradition of innovative programming and superb musicianship, and these qualities have been enhanced with the leadership of Maestro Macal.

Guest conductors include JoAnn Falletta, who will join Macal on July 8, to conduct the orchestra in a program featuring violinist, Nadia Salerno-Sonneberg; Lucas Foss will conduct the orchestra on July 15, with guest artists pianist, Barry Douglas and Jan Williams, percussionist.

On Sunday at noon, S.R.O. with Harry Kruger premieres. Kruger, conductor emeritus of the Columbus Symphony Orchestra, will select the symphony concert programming for the new 13-week series and will also serve as host.

A well-balanced, interesting, varied and exciting repertoire is scheduled with Kruger commenting on each piece of music and its composer.

The St. Louis Symphony Orchestra encores Tuesday at 9 p.m. Highlights include Soviet conductor, Kurt Sanderling; violin sensation, Joshua Bell; the American premiere of Danube; and Sir Georg Solti in a rare non-Chicago Symphony appearance. Leonard Slatkin is music

American war dead returning from Canada for re-burial

By Monica L. Manganaro
Special to The Bayonet

The War of 1812 is most often remembered for Andrew Jackson's victory against the British at the Battle of New Orleans. A song and Jackson's advance to the Presidency, account for much of the war's notoriety.

But, American soldiers fought other important, lesser-known battles along our northern frontier. A recent discovery on Lake Erie's Canadian shore reminds us of that violent struggle, and gives recognition to those who died during the 1814 Siege of Fort Erie, Canada. The recent discovery of the remains of 28 American soldiers adds further reason to honor those who paid the ultimate sacrifice during the War of 1812.

In April 1987, construction workers unearthed the remains of 28 American soldiers on a site historians later determined was that of a U.S. Army battlefield cemetery located near Fort Erie. Because of the Army's commitment to properly honoring its war dead, the remains of these U.S. soldiers will soon be coming home.

"We view these no differently than we would a casualty today," said Lt. Col. Joseph W. A. Whitehorne, historian for the Army Inspector General and team member of a project documenting the find. "This signals something important to me and everyone else who wears the uniform," Whitehorne said. "No matter what happens, the Army takes care of its own."

The men are thought to be casualties from the 2-month Siege of Fort Erie in 1814, said Whitehorne. During the battle, American and British soldiers fought hand-to-hand over the strategically-located fort on Lake Erie. Because of its location on the Canadian shore, the British and Americans vied for its control.

Following the campaign, the fort reverted once again to Canadian control.

The area around Snake Hill, Canada, where the bodies were found, has remained relatively unchanged until recent years when the land was used for construction of private homes. When the remains were discovered, building was temporarily halted and archeologists, along with the U.S. Army, were brought to the scene.

"At first we weren't sure whose remains they were or what they were doing there. Now we know they fought for America, and we can now bring them home," said Lt. Col. Robert F. Trotter, the Army project officer coordinating the return of the American soldiers' remains.

Because of uniform buttons and the cemetery location, historians have ID'd the skeletons as those of U.S. soldiers. Bone and teeth structure indicate these were young men averaging in the early twenties, as was typical of soldiers in this period. Some soldiers, however, were as young as 14 years.

Some British buttons were found along with the remains of the Americans, but historians believe these were picked up as war relics by the soldiers.

Whitehorne believes that most of the Americans wounded from Fort Erie were evacuated to a nearby hospital in Williamsville, New York. Some soldiers, however were either too seriously wounded to be moved and later died, or died instantly from their injuries. As a result, the dead were buried on a site at Snake Hill near the old fort.

Evidence shows these soldiers received a proper burial. All 28 were buried approximately six feet underground with their heads directing west, as is customary of Christian burials. Also, the skeletons were found lying side by side, arms folded across their chests or hips. Two men were each placed in a coffin which was the practice of the day for those soldiers who could afford one.

While the remains may never be positively identified, Whitehorne has compiled a list of U.S. soldiers killed during the Fort Erie Siege.

Notwithstanding the 173 years following the War of 1812, the 28 returning soldiers will receive a military funeral complete with military honors. The ceremony will be conducted on June 30 as a combined U.S.-Canadian effort. An honor guard from Washington's 3d U.S. Infantry (The Old Guard), one which traces its heritage back to the War of 1812, will participate.

Following a repatriation ceremony at Fort Erie, the remains will be interred in the Bath National Cemetery in Bath, New York.

These soldiers may never have a song written about them. But their efforts will long be honored by a memorial marker dedicated by retired Maj. Gen. Thomas K. Turnage, American Administrator of Veterans Affairs.

Reflecting on this effort to bring these 1812 veterans home, Trotter said, "We are showing the soldier today, his country never forgets about him."

Guitarjam begins Saturday on Peach State Public Radio

Peach State Public Radio

Peach State Public Radio will broadcast the first public radio series to concentrate solely on the musical influences of this country's most popular musical instrument — the guitar.

Guitarjam, a five-program series containing a fascinating blend of Brazilian, Spanish, Renaissance and Baroque music, as well as blues, folk, rock and jazz, will premiere Saturday at 1 p.m.

This historic offering was developed under the artistic direction of world class guitarist Sharon Isbin and will be hosted by actor/director Alvin Epstein.

Each of the five programs concentrates on a different genre of guitar music, leading off with music from Brazil and Latin America featuring Brazilian guitarist Carlos Barbosa-Lima and Thiago de Mello a percussionist from the Amazon. The flamenco spirit and Sephardic influences on the guitar music of Spain are explored on the second program, with flamenco guitarist Paco Pena, the Sephardic trio Alhambra, flamenco singer El Charparro and violinist Nadja Salerno-Sonnenberg.

Paul O'Dette carries listeners back to an ancient Venetian court with the delicate strains of his renaissance lute on the third program, which will feature Broque and Renaissance music. Michael Lorimer plays the baroque guitar, performing a kind of eighteenth-century blues whose repeated chord patterns create the foundation for all the variations, each of which expresses a different emotion.

The tenor and tempo changes in the fourth program with an illustration of blues, country and folk music. Doc Watson, Jean Redpath and Cynthia Sayer's Crazy Rhythm Trio perform. Odetta joins the group for several songs, including two beautiful Southern hymns that transport listeners back in time to a hot, sprawling plantation in Georgia, 150 years ago.

The final program features a more contemporary outlook. Mainstream jazz legend Joe Pass, Larry Coryell and singer Janet Lawson herald old jazz, as well as the new jazz. And the boundaries of classical, Brazilian bossanova and jazz all dissolve in the fusion of Guitarjam — a trio in which Isbin is joined by Larry Coryell and Laurindo Almeida.

Guitarjam is a true fusion of the influences of the guitar as explored in its five sessions of music by world renowned artists. It is a series dedicated guitar music lovers should not miss.

An encore program will be presented Thursday at 8 p.m. with the Deutsche Welle: Concert Hour '88. Presented will be internationally prominent German orchestras and choirs with excellent soloists and conductors. The repertory includes music from the Baroque era to the 20th century with many of the works not available on commercial discs.

Jump

jumps," and believes jumping has become easier for her as the years go by. As she puts it, "I don't care when it is, where it is or how it is, I'm game to jump."

And she's serious. Studer and her husband exchanged wedding vows on Sicily Drop Zone in 1985. Instead of sealing their vows with a kiss on the ground, they went up to 10,000 feet. "At 8,000 feet, the free-fall minister pronounced us man and wife and broke off from the formation. We sealed our vows with a kiss pass," she said grinning.

Tannahill, on the other hand, says, "I have periods where sometimes I like to jump and sometimes I don't. My perception of jumping has changed. I used to be fearful when they opened up the door. Now it's like 'let me get up there closer so I can see better.' I don't have the fear anymore."

Tannahill has 65 static-line jumps.

All three women agree being airborne makes a big difference. As Studer put it, "We have more pride and shine more. Airborne women are sharper because they've had to work harder."

When asked about the caliber of the female soldiers coming in the Army now, they both agreed that "some are hard core and some are weak."

Tannahill and Studer, who are married to airborne soldiers, believe being female soldiers means, "they have to work harder. There is a lot of pressure to excel — to do better."

Both soldiers believe there has been progress in the way they are treated by male soldiers. "Some are willing to work with you. Like the younger lieutenants — they figure you've been around and have the expertise in the field, so they're willing to listen to you. It's pretty much on a case-by-case basis."

Speaking of the younger troops, Tannahill said, "We have troublemakers who try to test you — see how much they can get away with.

"From my on experience, if I fail in something, I stand out more than a man who doesn't volunteer. I had that problem in jumpmaster school. I fractured my leg the last time I went," she said. "But I'm going back."

"She keeps going back and trying, and she deserves a lot for that," Studer said. "She's still hanging in there."

Studer graduated from the course last August.

Both soldiers plan to stay in the Army.

Reita Los, who was the 100th female graduate of the school on April 18, 1975, and the first female instructor there, believes she helped to integrate soldiers into one class, instead of keeping the women separate.

According to the academic records section at Fort Benning, Ga., approximately 400 females enter jump school yearly. No records are kept on how many achieve this goal.

The first 50 women who graduated were going on to parachute rigger school at Fort Lee, Va., according to Allsopp-Hansel. The Army then opened jump school to women in MOSs other than the rigger MOS.

In May 1977, the United States Army Parachute Team, the Golden Knights, made history by accepting its first female competitor. Then Spec. 5 Cheryl Stearns went on to make parachuting history for the Army.

Currently a pilot for Piedmont Airlines, Stearns is a former two-time women's world parachuting champion, and has won numerous overall, style and accuracy championships.

Six other women have since been accepted by the Golden Knights as competitors or demonstrators. To many Army paratroopers or demonstrators. To many Army paratroopers, making the Golden Knights team is the epitome of jumping.

Army dominates national and interservice tourneys

By Tommy Pool
USAMU Public Affairs Office

Members of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit dominated both national and interservice shooting events at Fort Benning firing ranges last week.

During the National 300-meter rifle championships, Capt. Glenn Dubis set one new individual record, tied two others and anchored the U.S. Army "Blue" squad, which established two new national team records.

Dubis, the current 300-meter world champion, outdistanced the field to win all three rifle events including the three-position aggregate, the prone championship and the military standards rifle championship.

His winning total of 3,517 in the three-position event was 42 points ahead of team-mate, Maj. Robert Aylward at 3,459. SSgt. Lance Peters of the Army National Guard, finished in third position with 3,454 points.

In the 300-meter standard rifle event, Dubis set a new record in the first round of the championship with a total of 586 out of 600, two points over the old mark of 582 established in 1984 by Malcom Cooper of Great Britain.

Dubis finished with an aggregate total of 1,167 in the standard rifle event, while team-mate, Capt. Steve Goff, placed second after winning a tie-breaking procedure over SSgt. Dennis Ghiselli, U.S. Marine Corps. Both competitors had finished with scores of 1,149.

The final 300-meter prone championship was also dominated by Dubis with a three-day total of 1,795 out of 1,800 possible points.

His individual scores of 599, 597 and 599, gave Dubis a four-point victory over runner-up, SSgt. Gary Andrade of the U.S. Marine Corps squad. Third place was won by USAMU's Maj. Richard Hawkins, with a total of 1,785.

In team events, the U.S. Army "Blue" squad swept all three 300-meter rifle championships and established two new national records in the process.

The Army "Blue" team of Dubis, Hawkins and Aylward, combined for a total of 1,791 in the 300-meter prone championship to break the old record of 1,784 by six points.

The same trio also scored a new record in prone phase of the three-position championship, with a total of 1,195 out of 1,200. That was two points over the old mark of 1,193 also held by the U.S. Army.

The winning Army team members in the 300-meter position and standard rifle events included Dubis, Goff and Aylward.

On the shotgun range, this year's Interservice Trap championships featured the top representatives from the U.S. Army, Army Reserve, Marine Corps and Air Force teams.

In the individual trap competition, the 1988 Interservice title was won by Cpl. William Thompson of the U.S. Marine Corps, stationed at Quantico, Va.

Thompson finished the three-day event with a one-target victory, scoring a total of 287 out of 300. Placing second in the championship was USAMU's SP4 James Graves, who won a shoot-off for the silver medal against SSgt. Terry Howard of the U.S. Air Force.

Both competitors had tied with scores of 286 in the regulation event, with Graves going on to break 25 additional targets to win the shoot-off over Howard's total of 21 targets.

In trap team competition, the U.S. Army squad came back to win the Interservice championship in a narrow two-target victory over the Army Reserve team with a total of 421 to 419. The U.S. Marine Corps finished in third place at 417.

Team members of the winning U.S. Army "Blue" squad were Graves, SSgt. Brian Ballard and SP4 Mark Hobbs.

USAITC Golf Tournament held at Follow Me course

By Gaye Milling
USAITC Golf Tournament

The USAITC Golf Tournament was held recently at the Follow-Me Golf Course at Fort Benning. Play began at 12:30 p.m. with a shotgun start.

Approximately 92 people participated in the 4-Man Scramble, which consisted of 23 teams with 4 players each of different abilities, according to their declared handicap.

Despite the extremely hot weather, the golfers managed to stay cool with the cold beverages and iced water that were provided at some of the greens. However, some of the players sought refuge from the heat in the woods, either in search of a tall shade tree or a small white ball.

The closing awards ceremony was highlighted with plenty of food and drinks and many prizes, most of which were donated by area businesses. Every player was a winner, including the "worst" team.

The 4-man team comprised of Dave Merriam, Dave Wilson, John Fuller and Ed Gilmore captured the first place trophies and $25 gift certificates for each of them.

The second-place trophies and $20 gift certificates were won by Robert Yates, Larry Owens, Kim Graham and Bob Brinke.

Third-place trophies and $15 gift certificates were awarded to Jim Fowler, Robert Ciccolella, Cleveland Harrell and Trevor McLendon.

The "Highest Score" awards were presented to Roger Moberg, Clyde Moxley, Anthony Yaroumez and Ansle Morales.

Records broken as Army wins

Army News Service

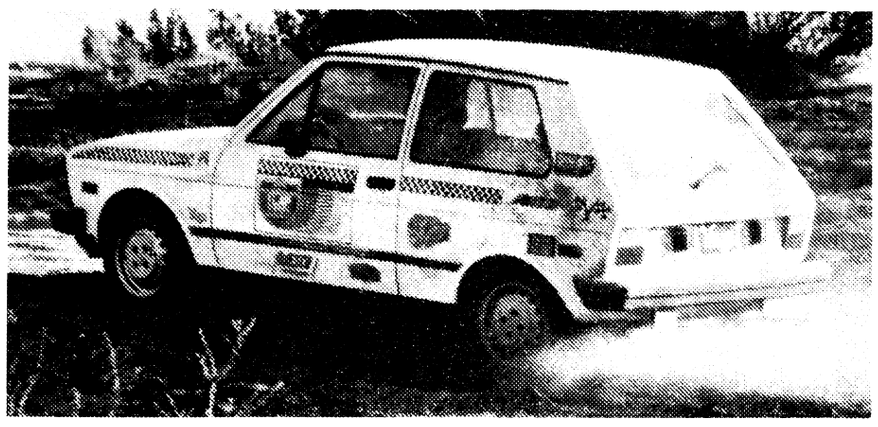
Breaking seven Armed Forces Track and Field records, the Army's men and women captured their respective team titles in the championships June 8-9 in Albuquerque, N.M.

The men broke four records, while the women broke three. On the first day of the championships, Ralph Spry set a new long jump record with a leap of 27'3-1/2". The record was 27'1-3/4" set in 1976 by Leo Coleman of the Army.

The next day, Willie Caldwell of the Army ran the 200-meters in 20.44 breaking the old record of 20.63 set in 1980 by Lester Lashington.

In the 4x400-meter relay, the Army team of Forika McDougald, Thomas Johnson, Salwyn Parker and Andre Brown set a record with a 3:06.19 team effort. The old record was also held by an Army team at 3:07.80.

Jason Twedt of the Army threw the javelin 244'10" setting a new record by more than 24'. The old record was 200'3" held by the Air Force's Rob Eamon.



On the first day of the championships the Army women set two records.

Lori Bearson led the way in the 5000-meters with a record of David Shinn lobs one over the net during the recent post tennis tournament. Shinn won the singles title in straight sets over Thomas Adarme 6-0, 6-0. In doubles action, Shinn teamed up with Adarme, taking the doubles crown in straight sets over Frank DaSilva and Dominic Macaluso 6-2, 6-2.

Steeplechase to be held in Columbus

Callaway Gardens

Officials with the Columbus Steeplechase and Callaway Gardens have announced that The Columbus Steeplechase is part of the world's first First International Steeplechase Series, The Sport of Queens Challenge, which will take place this fall. A $500,000 purse is offered for the four featured races to be held in the United States, England and Ireland.

The series will begin in Nashville, Oct. 14 and run during The Columbus Steeplechase on Nov. 19. These two races will be followed by a Dec. 10 race on Nov. 19.

These two races will be followed by a Dec. 10 race in Cheltenham, England and the final race on Dec. 29 in Leopardstown, Ireland.

The Sport of Queens Challenge will establish the world's first champion novice steeplechase horse on cumulative point system. A novice steeplechase is a race for 4 year olds and up who have not won a race over obstacles of any kind before Aug. 1, 1987.

Total purses for the four, 2-2½-mile championship series races are $250,000. Points are awarded for the first four places in each race and a horse must run in three of the four races in order to qualify for a $250,000 bonus purse awarded to the horse with the highest point total in the series.

Mason Lampton, Columbus Steeplechase chairman, said, "This race will represent the best four-year-old steeplechasers in the world, just as the Kentucky Derby features the best three-year-old racehorses. We are thrilled to have been chosen as one of the two sites in the United States selected to host this inaugural race series. It says a great deal about our area and about Callaway Gardens, which hosts this event."

The Columbus Steeplechase will air noon EST on ESPN Thanksgiving Day in a one-hour show. This is only the second time a steeplechase race has been televised nationally.

Hal Northrop, president of Callaway Gardens, reported, "What started out as a local charity event has taken on regional, national and now international interest. This is a major landmark for Columbus, Callaway Gardens and the state of Georgia."

Delta Airlines will sponsor The Sport of Queens Challenge race during the Columbus Steeplechase. The Delta Airlines Novice Handicap, the second leg in the International Series, will be the highlight of the seven scheduled races.

The idea of an international championship was a goal expressed by the International Steeplechase Group, consisting of businessmen and entrepeneurs interested in promoting and furthering the sport of steeplechasing. Steeplechasing is reported as one of the fastest growing sports in the United States and has unsurpassed appeal in England and Ireland.

SPORTS SHORTS

Racquetball tourney scheduled in August

A post racquetball tournament is scheduled for August 28-30 at Briant Wells Field House. People wishing to compete in the tournament are urged to sign up now. All active duty military personnel are eligible to participate. Registration forms are available at all post gyms.

For more information, call the Briant Wells Field House at 545-4726 or 545-5777.

Golf Championship to begin play Tuesday

The 1988 U.S. Army Infantry Center Battalion Golf Championships will take place on July 5-7. All active duty personnel assigned or attached to a post battalion-size unit are eligible to particpate.

For more information, call the sports office at 545-5777.

Soldier makes Olympic Team to compete in kayak doubles

SP4 Jurgen Hagemann became the first soldier to make the 1988 Summer Olympic Team at the Canoe Kayak Trials on June 11-12, qualifying in the kayak doubles event.

Hagemann joined the Army's elite World Class Athlete Program in early 1986. He will travel to Europe during June and July for international competitions as a member of the U.S. Team.

Tryout program slated

Golden Knights: The U.S. Army Parachute Team, the "Golden Knights," is accepting applications for this year's tryout program for the 1989 demonstration season.

The tryout program for the Army's only official aerial demonstration team will be conducted Oct. 3-Nov. 14, 1988, at Fort Bragg.

The applications are due in to the team area no later than Aug. 15, and certain criteria must be met by all applicants. Each applicant must be an active-duty enlisted soldier with a perfect military and civilian record, must have had at least 150 free-fall jumps and, if not jump qualified, be willing to attend the Basic Airborne Course.

Finally, applicants must meet current permanent change of station requirements and have at least three years remaining on active duty, or be willing to extend or re-enlist to meet these requirements if selected for the team. Soldiers who don't meet these requirements won't be considered for selection for the tryout program.

Applications may be sent to the U.S. Army Parachute Team, P.O. Box 70126, Fort Bragg, N.C., 28307.

Red Cross, Benning team up for blood

By Shawn Bryson
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning and the American Red Cross teamed up June 28 at Sand Hill in the first combined blood drive since December.

Four combined blood drives are scheduled per year and according to Maj. (Dr.) Isaac Broussard, medical director of the blood bank at Martin Army Community Hospital, about 290 people showed up to donate blood last week, nearly the same as in December.

Broussard said he believes the blood drive's success was due, in part, to the participation of the Red Cross.

"A lot more people tend to come to the blood drives when an organization as popular as the Red Cross is involved," he said.

Fifty of the blood units drawn during the drive went to the blood bank at MACH with the rest going to area Red Cross blood banks, Broussard said.

"Fifty units of blood per week is the Army Blood Drive goal at Fort Benning," he said.

Broussard explained that one of the most effective ways to solicit blood donors is to focus on the many units on post. He said the Army Blood Drive personnel at Fort Benning are assigned a different unit each week and although blood donations are not required of soldiers, the program works very well.

The next combined blood drive scheduled at Fort Benning will be held Aug. 31 at building 4 with the hope of yet another successful drive, Broussard said.

Congress okays junior enlisted quarters here

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Congress has authorized Fort Benning to have 250 units built for junior enlisted soldiers (private through private first class) who are authorized family housing.

A recent Fort Benning study of available housing in the area revealed a shortage of affordable housing for these soldiers.

The units will be built within a 20-mile, 30-minute radius of main post by a private firm, which will lease them to the Army for 20 years. Fort Benning will keep them occupied by assigning married soldiers to live there.

The soldiers, in turn, forfeit their basic allowance for quarters, just as they do when living on post.

The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, Savannah District, is overseeing the program. It solicited responses from landowners interested in making their land available to the government at fair market value.

It is up to developers to make a bid to the government based on what the property will cost and the cost for constructing the housing project. The Corps will conduct an economic analysis of the project to verify that the cost to the government is at least five percent less than comparable housing obtained by the Military Construction, Army Program.

Following the 20-year period, the government will have the first option to either purchase the 250 units, renew the contract to lease or end the contract.

Anyone with comments regarding this program, should contact John Baggett, Directorate of Engineering and Housing, Fort Benning, (404) 545-5515. Specific questions and information may be obtained from Elaine McDowell, U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, Savannah District, (912) 944-5030.

Management Association seeks scholarship applicants

Fort Benning Management Association

The Fort Benning Management Association is seeking business and management students to compete for its yearly scholarships. All active duty or retired soldiers, or federal civil service employees and their family members residing within a 50-mile radius of the Fort Benning area are eligible. Applicants must be working toward a degree in a field related to business or management.

The association will select recipients for two $1,200 per year scholarships donated by Troy State University at Fort Benning. This scholarship is good only at the Fort Benning Branch.

The association will fund two additional scholarships; a $300 per quarter or $900 per year scholarship to Troy State, Fort Benning Branch; and one $200 per quarter or $600 per year scholarship to any accredited college or university.

Lastly, one graduate scholarship will be awarded for the period beginning fall 1988.

Applicants are required to write a letter to the Management Association formally requesting consideration. The letter must include highlights of the applicant's academic career and extracurricular activities and also, explain why the applicants feel they should receive scholarships. Include high school transcript and completed application to Troy State or college of choice, three letters of recommendation, college transcripts and a statement of employment, if applicable, including name, address and applicant's job title.

Graduate applicants should include a copy of undergraduate degree and transcripts instead of high school transcripts. Also include a completed application to Troy State fulfilling graduate requirements.

Submit applications to Maryann Crescioni or 1st Lt. Archie Pollock, 36th Engineer Group building 2827, Room 202B/201C, Fort Benning, Ga. no later than July 22. For more information call 545-7918/2686.

Insurance hoax rears its head again

Veterans Administration

Atlanta — That periodic nemesis to the Veteran Administration, the GI Insurance hoax, has reared its head again, enticing veterans to apply to the VA for an insurance dividend that does not exist.

Although they have been warned repeatedly over the years, many veterans are still taken in by sometimes official-looking application forms that mysteriously appear in various locale around the state and nation advising veterans that Congress has passed a bill authorizing payment of dividends on government insurance which they carried while in the military, whether or not the insurance is still in force.

The most recent appearances of the bogus forms in Georgia occurred in Athens and Milledgeville. Sometimes the forms are handed out on streets or in shopping centers. In some instances, the well-meaning news media have been misled and the forms have been printed in newspapers and information about the "dividend" has been aired over radio stations.

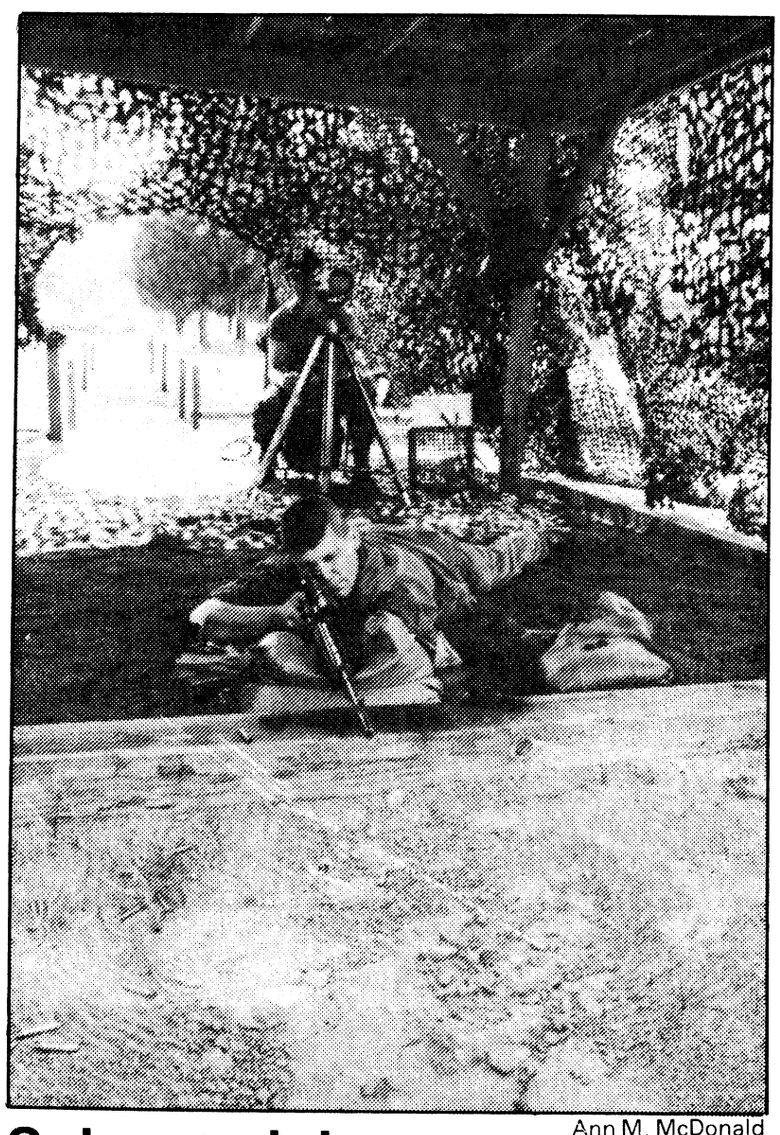
New policy guides reassignments

Army News Service

The Total Army Personnel Agency recently announced a new policy for approval of compassionate reassignment requests.



The new policy is designed to enhance readiness, ensure proper use of the soldier's skills and help offset budgetary restrictions on the number of permanent change of station move requests.

Under the new policy, reassignment for extreme personal problems or family problems will only be considered when a valid MOS and grade requirement exists at the requested gaining activity. Assignment stabilization for compassionate reassignments will still be 12 months.

In situations where the soldier's grade and MOS are not authorized at the installation nearest the site of the soldier's personal or family problem and the request for compassionate reassignment is denied, the soldier will be advised to seek a hardship discharge as a means of resolving the problem.

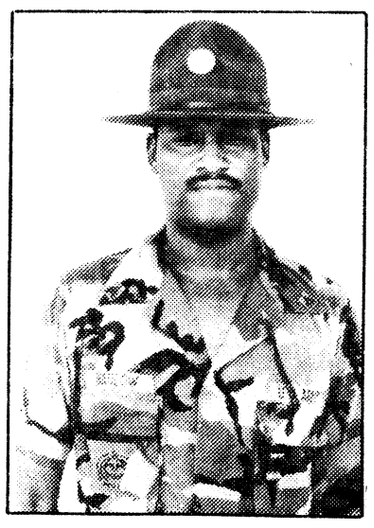
OPINION

VARIOUS VOICES: What Various Voices question would you ask if you could?

1st Lt. Wayne Walter, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 75th Ranger Regiment — "I would ask people what they think of their immediate supervisors' leadership styles. I think the answers would be a good way for supervisors to evaluate their own styles of leadership."

SFC Angel Ortiz, USARSA — "I would ask, 'What do you think of the level of discipline in the Army today?' I have been in for 18 years, and have recently heard people comment about the old days when you did as you were told and no questions were asked. People seem to think it is because of the new brand of soldier, but I believe it lies in the leadership they recieve."



Sandra Moorer, AG Enlisted Records — "I would ask, 'What can be done at Fort Benning to make community life better.'"

Linda Duhaine, family member — "I would ask people to name some good points about Fort Benning and what it offers to the family. I think a lot of people, especially new people, would like to see that."

SP4 Jaup Xhunga, Ranger Indoctrination Program — "I would ask if people think about the four percent pay raise and whether they think it is enough."

Sgt. Rodney Barlow, Company A, 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry Regiment — "If I was able to ask the question I would ask, 'Why do you think cut off scores are so high?' Promotion is something everyone thinks about, and I would like to know what people think about it."

PAO major becomes curb cop

By Clyde Snively
USAIC Public Affairs Office

No more square blocks in round holes for our boss in command information.

No longer does he try to beat the system by trying to see how tall his grass will grow before he gets a notice tacked to his door. He's Maj. Straight Arrow now.

Not only does he keep his grass trimmed, he even edged his curb this past weekend, and he now faithfully waters his lawn during the prescribed hours. Now that he's a law abiding citizen, he has assumed the role of housing area cop.

No, he doesn't patrol his neighborhood checking on lawns. He sits in a lawn chair while watering his lawn, and if he sees anyone speeding, he yells at them to slow down.

Or at least that's what he used to do. He used to do this until one day one of the speeders got upset and called the MPs on him for yelling at him and on another occasion, one of the other speedsters stopped his car and was ready to go 10 rounds with our major. Fortunately, the speeder's wife intervened.

But our major is nothing if not resourceful, so now, after getting some advice from the MPs, he keeps a notepad and pencil handy and writes down license numbers, descriptions of the vehicles, and times and places he noted them speeding.

This way, he lets the MPs or the offender's commander do the talking.

I asked him what would happen if a person he reported decided to go to court. Would he testify?

"Of course I would," he said.

"And when they ask you what you estimated the speed to be what would you say — 'too damn fast?'"

"I'd give it my best shot and make an estimation."

"Right," I said, "and some shyster lawyer will drag you out on the street and demand you estimate vehicle speeds of cars driving by."

"Well, like I said, I don't really think it will reach the courts, just be limited to verbal warnings. What I really wanted were speed bumps, but I was told they are illegal."

Why don't you just toss some cinder blocks out on the street and make a slalom course out of it?" I offered helpfully.

"Snively," he retorted, "This is serious business. The welfare of children is involved. Drivers have to be made aware of the danger they pose to these kids, and I intend to do my part for my housing area and would hope other concerned parents would in their areas."

Well, I told him I was impressed with what he was doing and wished him luck.

Some of you who happened to park on main post last week may have noticed flyers surreptitiously tucked in your car door (they didn't put them on the windshield because someone might have spotted them doing it) guaranteeing you certain prizes.

First let me say I'm prejudiced against outfits like this, not just because they sneaked on post to do it illegally, but because most people will just take the cards and toss them, creating all sorts of extra litter to be policed up.

I'm also extremely wary of the something for nothing outfits, and my only advice is — if you go to claim your prize — don't sign nuttin'.

The other day I talked about upstate New York and maple syrup in the fall. I must have been inhaling too much ragweed that day for, as anyone knows, maple syrup is collected in the spring as was pointed out in a letter from a person who actually reads this column.

Sorry about that mistake. I only remember going out in the snow, knocking in my tap and hanging the bucket. So, as you can see, fall snow, winter snow, spring snow, it's all the same to me, for (ta dah, true confessions) I'm not a New Englander, I'm a, gasp, Californian. Sorry about that.

Fight for Constitution was bitter struggle

This year marks the 200th anniversary of the ratification of the Constitution.

Reading history books makes it seem that the process was a foregone conclusion. In reality, the fight for the Constitution was a close and often bitter struggle.

This is something to be kept in mind as the Department of Defense, along with rest of the nation, celebrates and studies the debates and compromises that attended the ratification of the Consititution.

When the Framers presented the Constitutiton to the nation, there was a section on how it would be ratified. Even this was open to debate.

"When the framers presented the Constitu ion to Congress, it was not greeted with universal joy," said Dr. Robert Wright, the resident expert on the Constitution at the Army Center of Military History in Washington.

"There was some debate as to whether it should even be presented."

The argument first was that the Framers of the Constitution had overstepped their bounds. The Congress had charged them to amend the Articles of Confederation, not write a completely new document. Secondly, the argument was that Congress was the instrument for ratification. Who had ever heard of a popular plebiscite? This was, after all, years before such an idea gained currency.

"They eventually decided to present the Constitution to the states," Wright said.

"The parties were not divided by the fact that the government needed to be changed, just in how it should be divided."

Those opposed to the Constitution still thought they had done well. According to Wright, had the Constitution been voted on in September 1787, it would likely have been soundly defeated.

"This was where the political acumen of the Framers and their credibility with the people came into play," Wright said.

There was a split on the issue.

On the more conservative side, the Federalists favored the Constitution as written. The Anti-Federalists represented the "more extreme" side and opposed the Constitution unless it was severely revised.

"The parties were not divided by the fact that the government needed to be changed, just in how it should be divided," Wright said. "Both sides were concerned about protecting liberty. After all, they had just fought a war to protect that.

"The Federalists believed there were enough checks and balances in the Constitution to protect liberty while the Anti-Federalists felt specific liberties needed to be written into the Constitution before it should be ratified," he added.

The Federalists launched a massive public education effort, highlighted by The Federalist Papers" penned by John Jay, Alexander Hamilton and James Madison.

They also moved politically to attack the Anti-Federalists.

"The Federalists were quick to capitalize on the negative connotations of the Anti-Federalists. They were against something and had nothing to present in its place. It was sort of the 18th century version of the 'when did you stop beating your wife' question," Wright said.

The Federalists also moved quickly to get momentum on their side. Before the end of 1787, Delaware, Pennsylvania and New Jersey ratified the Constitution. Georgia and Connecticut followed in January. Those five were in the Federalist camp. Then came the big test.

Massachusetts would be the first state to vote on the Constitution in which the Federlists had not stacked the deck.

Federalist leaders perceived a genuine concern on the part of the Anti-Federalists over the Constitution and proposed a deal.

"The lack of a Bill of Rights was specifically the thing that concerned the Anti-Federalists," Wright said. "The Federalists proposed ratifying the Constitution as it was and then adding a Bill of Rights as the first order of business under the new Constitution."

This deal gained enough votes so Massachusetts ratified the Constitution on February 6, 1788.

"With the exception of Maryland, which ratified the Constitution in April 1788, the rest of the states ratified the Constitution under this deal," Wright said.

The document was placed in force when New Hampshire — the ninth state — ratified it on June 21, 1788.

"The only issue left after that was whether a state wanted to be in the United States or not," said Wright.

Virginia and New York ratified in June and July 1788. North Carolina ratified the Constitution in November 1789 and Rhode Island ratified on May 29, 1790.

"Coming up with the Constitution was only half the fight," Wright said. "Selling the document to the country was a major feat.

Today the Anti-Federalists have a bad reputation because people believe they were simply against the Constitution. We should be very thankful to them. Without the Anti-Federalist effort we would not have our Bill of Rights."

Reassign

ferments originate with individual soldiers. The problem must normally be resolvable within one year. TAPA retains final approval authority, but the General Court-Martial Authority can recommend approval or disapprove the request.

Requests for compassionate reassignment, deletion or deferment will normally be approved for the following conditions:

- Recent death of a soldier's spouse or child (deletion or deferment only) Terminal illness of a family member (deletion or deferment only)
- Prolonged hospitalization of a family member
- Severe psychotic episode involving a spouse or child
- Adoption cases in which the home study has been completed and the child is scheduled to be placed in the soldier's home within 90 days
- Soldier's children are made wards of the court as a result of family separation
- Inability to obtain off-post housing as a result of discrimination.

The following conditions normally do not warrant approval:

- Death of a family member other than a spouse or child
- Divorce or separation resulting from family separation
- Psychoneurosis of a family member resulting from family separation due to military requirements
- Pregnancies involving threatened miscarriage, breech birth, Caesarean section or RH incompatibility
- Minor allergies due to climatic conditions
- Problems relating to home owners hip
- Financial problems resulting from mismanagement
- The recent awarding of custody of a dependent child or children to the soldier.
- The following conditions must also exist for a soldier to be considered for a change in assignment:
- The problem cannot be resolved through the use of leave, correspondence, power of attorney or the assistance of other family members or outside parties. The problem neither existed nor was foreseen at the time of the latest entry on active duty
- If the problem involves the health and/or welfare of a family member, the affected person must be a spouse, child, parent, minor brother or sister, person in loco parentis or the only blood relative of the soldier.

Other persons, including parents-in-law, may be be considered provided they are authorized dependents. If the problem is based on the condition of a parent-in-law, no other members of the spouse's family must be available to help resolve the problem.

Commanders having General Court-Martial authority over soldiers submitting requests or installation commanders also have authority to approve - on a one-time basis - deletions up to one year or deferments for up to 90 days for specific conditions listed in paragraphs 3-5b(1) or 3-5b(2) of AR 614-200.

Commanders must be actively involved in resolving soldiers' problems by granting leave, referral to Army Community Service and/or appropriate governmental or social agencies that can assist the soldier in solving the problem.

Commanders and supervisors also have the responsibility to provide personal and professional counseling concerning soldiers' options to solve their problems. Counseling sessions should include the Army's requirements and the soldier's long-term career professional development.

Commanders' recommendations for approval or disapproval of requests for compassionate reassignment should include any additional information that has a bearing on the case, such as the number of times the soldier has had to take leave as a result of the problem, or any other actions taken by the soldier to solve the problem.

Fort Benning bids farewell to deputy post commander

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning bid farewell to deputy post commander, Col. Donald McKay Jr. in a special retirement ceremony conducted in front of Infantry Hall last week. He is retiring after 30 years of service in the U.S. Army.

McKay has been deputy post commander since June 4, 1986. In that position, he acted as the commanding general's representative in many community activities.

During his career he has served with the Special Forces, XVII Airborne Corps and as commander of the U.S. Army Jungle Operations Training Center in Panama.

The fact that McKay was in the Army at all is a small miracle.

According to McKay, he was born crippled and had to wear special braces just to walk. Later, he progressed to special shoes, which was as far as doctors said he would be able to go. They said he would never be able to walk normally, let alone run.

During the ceremony McKay said, "I am still wearing special shoes, I have worn them for 30 years, they are the jungle, jump and regular Army combat boots of a soldier."

McKay not only wears the boots of a soldier, but wears running shoes as well. During the Armed Forced Day 10-K run, he ran the race with a ruck pack on his back.

He bid farewell to all at the ceremony, but he won't be leaving the area. McKay and his wife plan to reside in Columbus.

Replacing McKay is Col. Thomas A. Wilson moving from his position as director of the Infantry Proponency.

Hoax

Georgia Commissioner of Veterans Affairs Pete Wheeler said, "Such a dividend, amounting to almost $3 billion, was paid in 1950 to approximately 16 million veterans who carried GI insurance during World War II. The 91st Congress, however, later passed an act, which states 'No claims by an insured for payment in cash of a special dividend declared prior to January 1, 1952, shall be processed by the VA, unless such claim was recorded within six years after such dividend was declared.'"

Under this law, any such claim received by the VA is returned to the claimant along with a copy of the law, and the VA considers the matter closed.

"Even so," said Wheeler, "with the VA receiving thousands of claims for the non-existent dividends, each of which must be acknowledged, the cost to American taxpayers is enormous." He advises veterans to ignore the leaflets and not to waste their time and money or the VA's.

Wheeler pointed out that the VA does make insurance dividend payments to those veterans who have kept their policies in force. These payments of dividends are paid automatically each year on the anniversary dates of individual policies without any action on the part of the veteran.

Correction

In last week's edition of The Bayonet, SP4 Ann M. McDonald incorrectly reported that retired Maj. Gen. Robert Sullivan is currently the vice president of CB&T in charge of the Fort Benning Branches. It should have read that he is the vice president of First Union Bank in charge of the Fort Benning branches.

Promotions favorable this summer

Army News Service

Enlisted soldiers with an eye on promotion can view this summer as an early Christmas, according to the Army's latest promotion projections.

Those projections show that for August some 3,200 noncommissioned officers will rise in rank.

Broken down by pay grade, the August, projections look like this:

E-9, 70; E-8, 386; E-7, 641; E-6, 890; E-5, 1,235.

Army personnel officials explained that now that the Army has reached the lower NCO strength levels dictated by budget limitations, NCO promotions are returning to normal levels. Officials said, promotions for September should be in the same range as August promotions.

Sniper school proves demanding for soldiers

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

Silently, he moves through the underbrush stalking the enemy. He is camouflaged so well that he appears to be part of the landscape. His mission is to kill the enemy and move out of the area undetected.

This man is a trained sniper, and he is taught his trade at the Fort Benning, U.S. Army Sniper School, the only officially sanctioned school of its type in the Army. It is designed, to train a long-range riflemen to deliver fires beyond the effective range of a normal infantryman.

The first class to attend the three-week course graduated less than a year ago and since then, 11 more groups of students have trained on Galloway Range, the site of the course.

The school, headed up by Capt. Mark Rozycki and SFC Lonny Wright of Co. D, 2nd Bn., 29th Inf. Regt., is not an easy one. Upon their arrival at the course, students can expect to be in training 10 to 16 hours a day, six days a week.

According to Wright, the course is broken down into two parts, field craft and markmanship, with the heavier concentration on the latter.

"Marksmanship is secondary because a sniper has to learn how to first get into the area undetected and survive." Wright said.

Wright said many people are under the impression that this is a "gentleman's course" and that they just learn how to shoot, which is a myth because there is so much more to being a sniper.

"We take a soldier and train him to be the eyes and ears of the commander. They collect battlefield information as well as killing the enemy," he said. "A two-man sniper team can be as effective as an entire platoon because of their precision shooting skills and their ability to get in and out undetected."

Wright added that the sniper students are put under a lot of pressure during the course so that when the time comes, they have the ability to do that for the commander.

According to Rozycki, sniper students can score as many as 1,000 points during the course, but they need 700 points to graduate.

He said if they fail one portion of marksmanship or two portions of field craft, they are out of the course. However, he added that if a student is just weak in that area and would otherwise complete the course, the student is given remedial training.

"Generally, we see high quality soldiers coming to the course," Rozycki said. "Commanders choose who they want to send to the course, and they know if they send a lower caliber soldier, he will not be able to meet the standards of the course."

Marksmanship, the other half of instruction, is taught by the members of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit.

SFC Dewey Hardison, a member of the USAMU, said they issue the students an M-21 rifle with an auto-range-finding telescope and then take them from the fundamentals of marksmanship to far beyond normal marksmanship skills.

"We marry them to that weapon. They learn the weapon, and it becomes a part of them just like breathing and walking," Hardison said.

He said confidence has to be instilled in the students before they can become effective snipers.

"You can teach anyone to be a marksman, but they (students) have to have that extra confidence to be a sniper," Hardison said. "Snipers need to know how to read wind direction and velocity and compensate for it as they are engaging targets at distances up to 850 meters."

Comments from students attending the course vary, but all agree that the course is very demanding.

Sgt. John Hicks, a sniper student, said, "The course is outstanding. The standards are high, and that is where they should stay."

Another student, SSgt. Roger Presley, said, "I didn't think it was going to be this tough, especially the camouflage, which is very demanding."

SP4 Mark Solomons listens to Pvt. Jessie Patrick point out his errors in camouflage.

The students are feeling the pressure, but they are not folding under it for they are highly motivated soldiers who have the desire to become snipers.

Rgr Bde gets new commander

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

It's small world. Just ask Col. Keith Nightingale. He served under Maj. Gen. K. C. Leuer when Leuer commanded the 1st Ranger Battalion. Now, he's with him again as commander of the Ranger Training Brigade.

As the new commander, Nightingale is the second person to command the unit since it went from a department to a brigade last October.

As the commander of a unit still in its growing stages, he said he plans no significant changes.

"I am just going to pick it up and carry it forward," he said. "I am going to fine tune the unit and concentrate on building on and reinforcing what has already been instituted."

Nightingale commented on the advantages the unit gained with becoming a brigade and how different it is

Veteran retires with 48 years under his belt

By Patricia Cornett
Community Health Nurse

In July, 1940, here at Fort Benning, Sigsbee Mainous became Pvt. Mainous and so began a 48-year career of federal service, 24 years on active duty and 24 years as a civil service employee. He retired yesterday in a ceremony at Martin Army Community Hospital.

As a soldier, Mainous initially served as the administrative assistant to the Department of Surgery, Station Hospital, Fort Benning. With the entry of the United States into the European conflict of World War II, Mainous was transferred to North Africa in 1942 where he served as a medic for five months and was then assigned to a medical battalion in Italy. During his three years in Italy, Mainous saw duty in the medical evacuation zones and in the V.D. treatment center of 5th Army near Naples.

To follow the career of Mainous is to follow the history of prevention and control of venereal disease (V.D.), as it was then called. For the latter part of his tour in Italy, Mainous worked at the "V.D. Hospital" near Naples.

Venereal disease was so much of a serious health problem during this period that an entire treatment center, tent compound was established. Patients were identifiable by their blue denim colored jackets with "V.D." emblazoned on the back.

Treatment of venereal diseases was more cumbersome then — syphilis required weekly treatments for one year while gonorrhea required sulfa drugs daily for 10 days. The shortage of doctors enhanced the problem of proper treatment and placed tremendous responsibility on SSgt. Mainous and the others who worked with venereal diseases full time.

Upon his return to the States in 1945, Mainous was assigned to Fort Knox and then sent to Atlanta for V.D. training at the Centers for Disease Control (CDC). During this training period, Mainous traveled with a team of health professionals to various cities to set up free V.D. detection and treatment clinics.

"Normally the Mayor would come to the clinic to have his picture taken as he volunteered for the blood test. During one six week period, we identified 2,146 cases of syphilis."

Shortly thereafter, the discovery of penicillin transformed the treatment of syphilis. Treatment now meant a single dose of penicillin with a 10-day hospitalization and follow-up as an outpatient. Mainous questioned the necessity of this 10-day hospital admission and suggested treatment on an outpatient basis as an alternative.

While participating in the research study to test his idea, Mainous spent many long hours drawing blood and completing all the necessary laboratory work. The study showed that the 10-day hospitalization was unnecessary, resulting in tremendous financial and personnel savings for not only the Army, but all branches of the armed services.

Mainous continued to work in his specialized area during assignments to Heidelberg, West Germany and finally back to Fort Benning. He remained here until May 1964 when SFC Mainous retired after 24 years of active duty.

Fortunately, our community did not lose Mainous. He entered civil service employment here at Fort Benning, and has since remained in our midst.

As a civil service employee, Mainous has continued to work as a V.D. specialist, first under the auspices of the Dermatology Clinic and then as a separate clinic under Preventive Medicine Service. Mainous has moved from the "old hospital," to the "new hospital," to his present location with Preventive Medicine.

During that time, he has seen his speciality change tremendously. New diseases have been discovered, new treatments have become available and the language has changed — no longer classified as venereal diseases, the new phrase is Sexually Transmitted Diseases (STD). Mainous responded to the changes by expanding his role and became an educator and trainer. He has given countless classes to troop units and is a valued trainer for hospital and TMC personnel, Family Practice Physicians, nursing and physician assistant students.

When asked to summarize the changes over the past 48 years, Mainous commented that "of course, the treatment is much better now, but patient follow-up and follow-up of those patients' contacts is as important as it was 40 years ago. You have to stay on top of it." In other words, the best treatment is useless unless it is delivered to the right person at the right time.

Mainous' commitment to staying on top of it is well known by his patients and those who work in public health. His positive outlook on life and constant readiness with a good joke are the aspects well known to those who have worked with him.

We have been fortunate to have Mainous working with us. On the occasion of his retirement, the Fort Benning community extends a hand of thanks for his 48 years of commitment, caring and professionalism.

Ranger

from most other brigades in the Army.

"We train individuals instead of units as a regular TO&E organization would," he said. "By using the same leadership system and putting our NCOs and officers in squad and platoon leader positions, the discipline, the response from the students and the quality of training received is much better."

Another difference is the battalions and their locations, which are a considerable distance from post.

"The commanders of those battalions basically act as post commanders as well," Nightingale said. "They maintain fire departments and other facilities because their battalions are more like mini-installations."

He added that communication is not a problem, although he doesn't get to see the outlying battalions in person as often as he would like. "I'm sure they don't mind though," he said with a grin.

Nightingale commented on the recent move of the brigade headquarters and 4th Battalion into 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment's old facilities.

"It's a vast improvement over the old site, and morale has improved significantly," he said. "Because of that, we are able to turn out a better product."

That product, a Ranger, is the result of training — good hard training — given by the cadre of the brigade and that is exactly what Nightingale demands. "Everything is training, and training is everything," he said, "and my standard of perfect is good enough."

He said he expects everyone to have that drive to strive for perfection as opposed to a lesser goal.

Nightingale said he doesn't like soldiers who don't want to serve in the position they're in, or leaders who are not truly responsible for their subordinates.

"Eventually, problems like that will detract from the mission at hand, which, in this case, is turning out the best small unit leaders in the U. S. Army," he said."

"The tab those leaders wear on their shoulders, the Ranger Tab, is probably the single greatest hallmark in the Department of Defense," Nightingale said. "It carries an aura around it like no other similar badge the Army carries."

He said the soldiers who attend the course and successfully complete it are pretty special and having anything detract from their training is less than standard.

Marine liaison heads for Japan

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning is losing one of the Marine's "few good men," Lt. Col. Zachary Forester, Marine Corps Liaison Officer. Forester received a Meritorious Service Medal for his service to the Infantry School.

In his position with the school, Forester was in charge of all Sailors and Marines attending courses here and reviewing doctrine.

Forester said it was a good experience working with the Army but feels it is time to get back to a line unit.

He will be leaving to command a battalion in Okinawa, Japan.

During the award ceremony, Brig. Gen. William Hartzog praised Forester for his knowledge and expertise in amphibious warfare, saying it will be hard to replace the senior advisor of the Army's sister service.

Retirement orientation: The 1988 Summer/Fall Pre-Retirement Orientation will be held July 26, 8 a.m. in Classroom 5. Soldiers who have 18 years or more active duty should be planning for retirement, even though it may not be for several more years. Laws concerning retirement benefits change often and sometimes drastically. To stay current on retirement benefits, now is the time to begin gathering information and formulating ideas. Spouse should also know what to expect since families are an important part of retirement planning. This program is not intended for personnel who have already submitted their retirement application, however, they are also invited to attend. At 1 p.m. will be a financial planning and money management seminar. Please pre-register by calling the Retirement Service Office, building 2635, at 545-2715 or 545-5369. Uniforms will be duty uniform or appropriate civilian attire.

SPIRITUAL

Ministry in deploying, non-deploying units compared

By Jo Ann Stamey
USAIC Chaplain's Office

Is ministry different in a unit that deploys (a TO&E) unit; i.e., 197th Infantry Brigade (Mech.) (Sep.), versus a unit that does not deploy a (a TDA unit); i.e., U.S. Army Infantry Training Center.

According to Chap. (Capt.) James Bixler, battalion chaplain in 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor, 197th Infantry Brigade, it's not much different, in some ways, than working with people in a civilian community. Many families haven't established their family identity -- what their expectations are, and what responsibilities they can realistically handle.

However, in a civilian community, you don't have the concentration of 19-24 year olds that you do in an Army unit.

The Army tends to be more aware of the problems the soldier and his family may have, and the Army has a vast resource of people who can help families with their problems — Army Community Service, Army Emergency Relief, Red Cross, etc.

One major problem families have is that if there is a problem, they may wait too long to get help, and then it turns into a major crisis. At that time, it's difficult to cut through the problem and get back to what they really want in a relationship.

Young wives who don't have children, and who have not yet established their own identity, may just sit at home waiting for their husbands to return from work. They feel their lives are out of control; feel they're competing with the Army for their husband's attention and become very angry. The husband may only hear or receive the anger and often not hear they just want to be loved.

Another problem for young wives who have not had a lot of experience is they don't know what to plan for when their husbands deploy. The solution is to inform the family. Let them know when and why they're having to deploy at a particular time and for what reason.

Family Support Groups are also very important in relieving the stress of separation. Chap. Bixler encourages soldiers to have their wives come in and talk with him.

Also, before the deployment, the battalions have family briefings to inform families of what they need to do to prepare for the separation, and who they can contact to help them in case of any kind of emergency. Bixler said it is very important that husbands don't keep their wives dependent on them, as they can't deal with a deployment very well.

Other problems that deployment may bring about is a family may have an argument before the deployment — thinking it will make the separation easier. There is more stress before deployment because of the longer work hours and the knowledge of the upcoming separation adds so much more stress to the family. If a soldier has family problems, he may feel it will become worse if he's not there to work it out. If a soldier has a pregnant wife or a parent who's ill, he will feel uneasy about leaving. If a soldier has financial problems, he may feel guilty about leaving this burden with his family.

At the end of deployment, sometimes the family has too many expectations for their relationship. The couple has missed each other, feel they really love each other and can work out their problems.

However, says Bixler, "Unless the people seek help, their problems will come back. Deployment is like two people juggling six balls, says Bixler, "one backs out, and how do you get him back in."

For the most part, the morale of the soldier is high when actually deployed, because he can see where his job is needed, and he's doing what's expected of him. The hours are long and hard, so time seems to pass quickly for him. However, if he has left a major problem unsolved at home, this can be so distracting that he can't concentrate on his job.

"When you're in the deployed ministry, it can be really good. It can be an opportunity to encourage people. Soldiers see a smiling face they didn't necessarily expect to see, and it's not someone that may be checking on their performance, but more a sense of someone showing concern and care," Bixler said.

In a deployment setting as people go through things together, like a severe rain storm or a desert sand storm, they develop a special rapport and become more open.

What are Bixler's feelings on ministering to a deploying unit? He says it's good and not necessarily as bad as it sounds. "It comes down to not just "training" readiness, but "spiritual," and "emotional" and "relational" readines — and we don't do well at that. We talk about maintaining our equipment, but people often fail to maintain their relationships. All of that is part of the equipment and part of the readiness the soldier has to be concerned about."

Study shows founding fathers had great faith

By Jerry L. Leverett
2nd Brigade, 10th Mountain Division

What kind of men founded the United States? Were they men of little or no faith who were simply politicians and had no inclinations toward religion?

Perhaps modern school textbooks would have us believe that. In fact, Dr. Paul Vitz, New York University psychology professor, completed a study for the U.S. Department of Education on 60 of the most popular textbooks in the nations public schools.

"The most striking thing about these texts," stated Dr. Vitz, "is the total absence of the Christian Religion in them."

One text, according to Dr. Vitz, only admits that "Pilgrims are people who go on long journeys in large ships." History tells us that all but one of the 55 Founding Fathers at the Constitutional Convention were members of a church, and most made some kind of statement of traditional faith in order to qualify as a delegate to the convention.

The Father of Our Country, George Washington, was a Christian whose life was marked by daily devotion and prayer. At 9 p.m., he would retire to his library for prayer. On several occasions, people, who happened to be in his home because of certain emergencies, found that they had to go to the library for his attention. Invariably, they found him on his knees in front of a chair and praying before an open Bible.

Another example of the faith of our Founding Fathers is seen in the Constitutional Convention. On June 28, 1787, the debate on representation and voting had reached a hopeless deadlock.

Some of the delegates had left, and others were on the verge of following suit. At this point, Ben Franklin said, "In the beginning of this contest with Great Britain, when we were sensible of danger, we had daily prayer in this room for Divine protection. Our prayers, Sir, were heard, and they were graciously answered. And now, have we forgotten this powerful Friend? Or do we imagine we no longer need his assistance? I therefore beg leave to move — that henceforth prayers imploring the assistance of Heaven be held in this assembly every morning . . ."

History has referred to James Madison as the Father of the Constitution. One historian has said of Madison's faith, "After the manner of the Bereans, he seems to have searched the scriptures daily and diligently." Madison's personal Bible is filled with notes on grace, giving, Jesus and miracles and other virtues of the Christian life.

Abraham Baldwin was a delegate to the convention from Georgia. He was a clergyman, and he had served as an Army Chaplain in the Revolutionary War. Just prior to attending the convention in Philadelphia, he wrote, "When the minds of the people in general are viciously disposed and unprincipled, and their conduct disorderly . . . it should be among the first objects of those who wish well to the national prosperity to encourage and support the principles of religion and morality."

Perhaps we have fallen prey to the same attitude to which Ben Franklin referred, "Do we imagine we no longer need His assistance?" Let us pray that history will someday point back to us and say, "Yes, these were truly men and women of great faith."

CRIME STOPPERS

Columbus Crime Stoppers and the Columbus Police Department are looking for the lone white male who (attempted) armed robbery of the Pic-N-Pay Shoe Store located at 4686 Buena Vista Road.

On May 13, at approximately 12:55 p.m., the Columbus Police Department responded to an (attempted) armed robbery call at the Pic-N-Pay.

Upon arrival, it was learned that at approximately 12:40 p.m., same date, an unknown white male entered through the front door and walked to the rear of the store where the manager was stocking shoes.

The manager stated she heard the door beeper sound and knew that someone had entered the store so she stood up as she was approached by the suspect and asked him if she could help him find something. Again the suspect said nothing until he was right upon her at which time he pulled a black or dark blue steel automatic pistol from his jacket and told her that he wanted her to go to the back room with him and open the safe.

The manager began to back away from the suspect until they came to the back office door where the suspect grabbed her by the right shoulder and pushed her into the door, which came open. The manager fell to the ground and began to scream and slid under a table. At this time, two customers came into the store and the suspect ran out the back door of the store without getting any money.

This suspect is also wanted for the armed robbery of four other Pic-N-Pay Shoe Stores in the Nashville, Tennessee area.

The suspect is described as: white male, late 30s early 40s, 6-feet to 6-feet, 1 inch tall, 200 pounds, white or gray hair thin on top, clean shaven, wearing a tan windbreaker type jacket, white pullover shirt and dark pants.

Anyone having any information concerning this individual or having any information concerning this case should call Columbus Crime Stoppers at 571-5858. If your information leads to the arrest and indictment of this person, you could receive up to $1,000 in reward money.

Columbus Crime Stoppers also pays for information on other criminal activity, wanted fugitives and stolen property. The Crime Stoppers phone lines are open from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. Monday through Friday. Crime Stoppers serves the Columbus, Fort Benning, Phenix City and Russell County areas.

Heeded warnings may save lives

By Patrick M. Reed
Provost Marshal's Office

All your life you've gotten warnings about being careful. "Don't do this," "Don't go there," "Never walk alone at night." It gets boring, but there are "ways" behind the "don'ts," and they have to do with more than keeping your family from worrying or giving you grief. The facts speak for themselves: There are more than 2,000 violent crimes committed against teenagers every day in the United States.

Even if you think you know how to stay safe, review these reasons behind the warnings:

●"Always let someone know where you're going and what time you'll be back." It may seem like an invasion of privacy, but it's plain common sense. If you're in trouble and no one knows you're missing, no one's going to look for you. If you have an accident or get assaulted, an hour or two can make a life or death difference.

●"Never hitchhike or accept a ride from a stranger." Your friends may do it "all the time" and never have a problem. Many hitchhikers aren't so lucky. Some get kidnapped, raped even killed. There is no way to tell if anyone, old or young, male or female, well-dressed or not, can be a threat — and at 60 mph, there's no way out.

●"Don't take dangerous shortcuts — especially at night." You may go through the parking lot, the ball field, or the alley every day — but things are different at night. People you can't see can hurt you! Criminals don't want to get caught — so they're much less likely to try something on a well-lighted street with lots of people around. Taking a few extra minutes to go the long way can save you money — or your life.

●"Never walk alone at night." You know the old saying about safety in numbers. A single person is a much easier target for a thief or other criminal. It may seem easier to go on your own than to wait for a ride or find someone to walk with, but it's much more of a hassle to get robbed or hurt.

●"If you do get mugged or robbed, don't take unnecessary risks." A few dollars, a radio, a bike, even a car— it's not worth risking your life. It has nothing to do with being chicken. It's a matter of being smart.

Look out for yourself, your friends and your community. To report a crime, call the Military Police Desk Sergeant at 545-5222. You can help take a bite out of crime.

ASK THE JUDGE

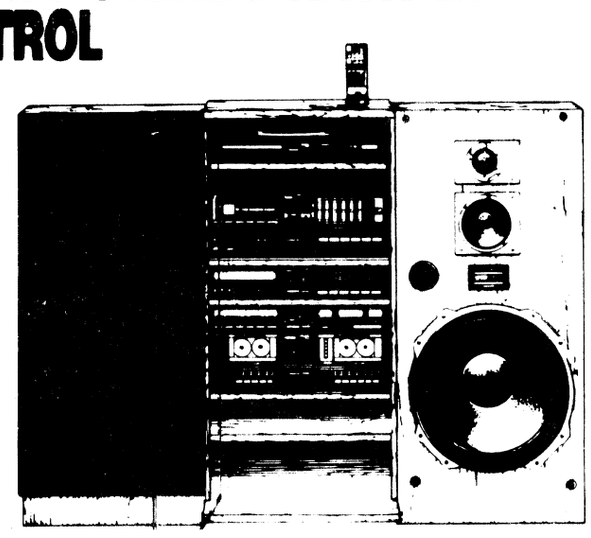
By Susan McKeeman
Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Q: My wife and I have been having problems in our marriage. We decided to get a divorce. But the divorce won't be final for some time. Our lawyers told us we could draw up a separation agreement to put down in writing our rights and duties during the time we are separated. Can we include a provision that we can have sexual relations with other people?

A: No. A separation is not a divorce. Until you are finally declared divorced, you are technically married, even though you are living separate and apart, no matter for how long. During this time, having sexual relations with anyone other than your spouse is still adultery.

Your separation agreement can include provisions on child custody, who must pay which bills and who gets what items of property. However, adultery is not something you can contract away. It is an act which society has condemned; it violates public policy.

For example, society condems the act of murder for violating public policy. Contracts for murder are never legal, no matter how the parties may agree to it; it is the act itself that is condemned.



In addition, the military has condemned adultery; it is a crime under the Uniform Code of Military Justice, Article 134.

B,1/29th dusts USARSA in championship

Thomas Buckingham (l) and Cily Dana (r) both of Co. B., 1-29th Inf. jump for joy after winning the championship.

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

U.S. Army School of Americas bit the dust when Company B, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment walked away with the post's first season softball championship title, 8-3. This is the third year in a row they have captured the crown.

A double play made from an infield hit fielded by Thomas Buckingham and then thrown to shortstop, Ernest Brown and in turn to first baseman Walter Sitarek set the tone for the entire game.

"Buckingham played great ball," Brown said, "pitching and playing good defense as well."

Brown said although Buckingham played well in the championship game, he doesn't attribute the team's success to any one person.

"We don't have any stars on our team. It is a team effort," Brown said. "We win, because we practice hard, enter tournaments and set up scrimmage games as often as possible."

Brown added that the road to the championship game was not an easy one.

"We had some pretty sound competition from HHC, 1st of the 11th and Company B, 2nd of the 14th," Brown said, "but our base hits and sound defense pulled us through."

Brown said now that the first season championship is over, it's back to the field.

"We want the second season title as well," he said.

Molesters may trick their victims

Readers Digest

An estimated one in four girls and one in eight boys are sexually abused before age 18, reports the June 1988 Reader's Digest. Molestation can start when children are infants, with the most vulnerable years between nine and 12.

Knowing the tricks that molesters use could save your children form grievous harm — even death. Following are 10 common sex lures and recommended preventive measures from Readers Digest.

●Affection/ love lure. About 75 to 85 percent of sex crimes against children are commited by someone the child knows, loves or trusts.

●Prevention. Question the motive of any adult who seems highly interested in your kids and wants to spend a lot of time alone with them, especially overnight. Monitor and participate in your child's activities in youth groups, summer camps and the like. And stress to your child the importance of telling you about any improper advances made by others.

●Assistant lure. A common ruse is to ask a child for help — directions, assistance in carrying packages or help in finding a lost dog.

●Prevention. Tell your child that adults should ask other adults for directions or help. If anyone stops to ask directions, your child should move out of reach and be ready to run and

Woman's past is part of Airborne history

By Margaret M. Tippy
Fort Bragg Public Affairs Office

Sgt. Reita Lewis (now Los), the 100th graduate of the jump school here, and her company commander admire the list of the first 100 women who completed airborne training. The list used to hang at the school. It was being thrown away when Los's husband saved it for her.

FORT BRAGG, N.C. — Eve does not have anything on Reita Los. Her past is part of the history of airborne women. Los is the first female honor graduate of jump school; the 100th woman to graduate from the school; the first female instructor at the school; the first woman jumpmaster qualfied at Benning, and also the first woman to graduate from Pathfinder School.

Los started doing all these firsts by enlisting in the Army in Omaha, Neb., even though her father was not too happy about it. In 1974, she enlisted for the 82nd Airborne Division as airborne chemical equipment repairman.

She wanted to be airborne because "I didn't want to get stuck inside all the time. I figured this would give me a chance to get outdoors once in awhile."

But there was a glitch. Los completed all the training and arrived at Fort Bragg. She was told she had an "erroneous MOS (military occupational specialty)."

"The 82nd wouldn't accept me. I spent a week or more at One Stop (the post's inprocessing station), and then they assigned me to a 'leg' (a non-airborne unit) unit. People tried to help, asking me what I wanted. I'd tell them I want what I enlisted for. And I was told no, I couldn't have that.

"The Golden Knights were called to see if they would accept me. And their attitude was 'i guess we'll have to accept a female eventually. She can be supply or clerical."

"So I told the people at One Stop I didn't like their attitude, and I didn't want to go there."

"I went to a recruiter and his attitude was 'get out of the Army, and stop bothering me.'"

But Los is a woman who does not stop until she gets what she wants. The next logical step — The Pentagon.

"I went up there catching a ride with some friends who were in the 82nd that I had graduated from jump school with. They were pretty nice to me up there," she said with a laugh. "I asked to see the general of the Army. They said he wasn't available, and I got to see a colonel who said, 'If I can't help you, I'll find someone who can.'"

"He asked me what I wanted, and I said I wanted what I enlisted for, and he said, 'you can't have it.' I asked if I was a man, would I be able to have the job and he said, 'yes, but I'm not saying it's because you're a woman that you can't have it.'"

"I wasn't getting any answers, and here I was at the top so I just shrugged my shoulders and told him, 'Look, they want me back at Fort Benning as an instructor. I'll do that.'"

"I left Washington, D.C., that weekend, and Monday morning I had orders to Benning," Los said.

It would take a lot of courage for most people to confront the top brass of the Army, but Los describes it by saying "I didn't have anything to lose, so why not? The recruiters had already told me to get out."

She went to Fort Benning where she had support from MSgt. Duanne Fisher, who was then in charge of the Fort Benning jump school's ground committee and spent the rest of her tour there.

Not that everything was rosy with the other instructors. Los encountered some resistance from her male counterparts.

For instance, Los said, "Every morning we would have a briefing and it normally took place in the men's locker room. I asked to have it moved, but the men didn't want to. So, when I would enter, I would sound off with 'Female in the area!'

"Even so, some of the instructors decided they wouldn't change anything just because of my presence. So they would go ahead and change clothes while I was present. It was really embarrassing. I'm basically a very shy person, and it was difficult for me to handle."

Eventually the policy was changed.

The red-haired Los completed her other firsts at Fort Benning where she also met her husband, Sgt. 1st Class Jim P. Los, who now works on the Military Free-Fall Committee, U.S. Army JFK Special Warfare Center and School at Fort Bragg.

She also jumped with a sports parachuting team at Fort Benning. She has 190 free falls and 75 military static-line jumps.

With all the accomplishments she has under her belt, Los describes going through jump school as hard.

"It was really different then. The women were completely segregated from the men," Los said. "The only time we were in

Work continues on post's appearance

By Becky Ray
DEH

The Installations of Excellence Program stresses overall excellence in facilities, both inside and out.

Although many of the improvement projects currently underway in support of the IOE Program are landscaping and grounds work, other projects are being undertaken to improve interior working and living areas.

IOE standards are set for renovation of existing facility interiors as well as construction of new facilities. In making plans for a renovation, all elements of design, such as furniture and lighting, are considered. Although budget constraints have all but eliminated modification of interiors by Directorate of Engineering and Housing shops, units and activities may still utilize the U-Do-It Program to upgrade their buildings.

There are many advantages to U-Do-It interior renovations. New interiors are designed by the people who work in them, so they are suited for the user's specific needs. U-Do-It jobs are cost effective as well. Materials are not charged to the using agencies, but are funded by the installation. The quality of the work is usually excellent due to pride of ownership and because the U-Do-It Shop personnel monitor progress closely and provide technical assistance.

Major interior renovation projects are now underway in the batallion headquarters buildings of the 197th Infantry Brigade. With the use of troop labor, and supplies and technical advice from the U-Do-It Shop, office building interiors in the area are being transformed from dark and unorganized mazes to bright, efficient work spaces. Paneling, chair railing, new ceilings and wallpaper give the entrances and offices a pleasant, professional appearance.

Chapels, dayrooms, dining facilities and conference rooms are only a few of the types of facilities that have been improved with U-Do-It projects.

According to Dominick Decarlo, who manages the program, "U-Do-It is a great opportunity for any organization to upgrade facilities that might not be improved otherwise. Office managers and commanders can also make their offices work better for them, because they design them to fit their needs.

Army Fact Survey

More than 80 percent of new active-duty physicians graduate in the top half of their medical school class.

Three of every four new active-duty physicians earned a 3.5 or higher grade-point average, compared to only two out of four in the civilian sector.

The average medical college admission test score of students accepted into the Health Professions Scholarship Program is 9.5, compared to the national average of 7.5. The HPSP is the source of most Army physicians.

More than 86 percent of senior physicians, lieutenant colonels and colonels, are certified by national civilian medical boards.

Thrift Shop offers bargains, place to sell unwanted items

By Lynn Barlotta
Thrift Shop

If you love garage sales, antique shops, shopping for bargains or making easy money, then you need to visit the Thrift Shop.

Anyone PCSing, leaving Fort Benning and having orders, can consign all the unwanted "treasures," clothing, housewares and appliances not wanted or needed at the Thrift Shop.

Checks will be mailed to you, after the items have sold.

Anyone looking for a gift, something special, and who is unable to go off-post to shop in Columbus should come the Craft Cabin; it's full of handmade gifts, from cross-stitch to quilts, all created by Army family members.

Having your own garage sale but concerned that you won't get many folks to come by your sale? For $5, back your car into our Flea Market area and sell your items. You will have hundreds of people to browse through your sale, and you keep all the cash, there's no consignment fee.

If you have had a garage sale, and don't know what to do with your "leftovers," donate them to the Thrift Shop where you will be provided with a receipt for tax purposes.

The Thrift Shop offers many other services to the community. For instance, the shop gives donated clothing to the Rape Crisis Center and to the battered wives shelter (donations can be designated specifically for these programs). A uniform was donated by the Thrift Shop to the widow of a retired soldier so that his last wish, to be buried in uniform, could be honored. The Thrift Shop offers the opportunity to non-profit organizations to have a free flea market space or to sell a food item on Flea Market day, as a fundraising activity.

The monies that we make at the Thrift Shop, has helped the OWC give $30,000 last year to charitable causes and worthy organizations on post, in Columbus and a few at the national level. With these monies: The Benning school children have a fine arts program throughout the year; the Army family children who are in foster care, received Christmas toys; young Army couples shared a marriage enrichment program to help them deal with the stresses of Army life; it costs nothing for the community to listen to the Columbus Symphony Concert in May; the children of Fort Benning enjoyed a Fantasyland at Riverside; and many graduating seniors received scholarships for college.

The Thrift Shop offers the opportunity to everyone to become a volunteer and receive many benefits for doing so. Free babysitting is offered at Tot Town for volunteers while they work at the Thrift Shop. Other benefits of volunteering include: consignment of 20 items a day instead of the usual 10; first choice on items brought into the shop and free refreshments.

The experience in retailing, merchandising and public relations to be gained while doing volunteer work at the Thrift Shop is invaluable. In addition, there's the opportunity to meet new people, make new friends, find lots of bargains and support the community in an important service.

Come and visit the Thrift Shop. It is open throughout the summer every Tuesday and Thursday, 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. and the first and third Saturdays, 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Flea Markets are always on the first and third Saturdays. Call 687-4830 for more information.

Abuse

scream for help.

•Authority lure. Taking advantage of children's respect for authority, molesters often dress like police, clergy or firefighters.

•Prevention. Instruct your child that badges and IDs can be faked. Advise him to keep his distance and have an adult he knows confirm the credentials. Explain that even a person with legitimate authority has no special rights to a child's body.

•Bribery lure. Youngsters may be offered candy, toys and other rewards. Teen-agers are lured with headsets or bikes.

•Prevention. Tell your children not to accept gifts from a stranger and to tell you if such an offer has been made. Be alert to new toys or money you can't account for.

•Ego/Fame lure. Children may be promised a modeling job or the chance to compete in a beauty contest.

•Prevention. Accompany your child on his talent pursuits and check the credentials of "talent scouts."

•Emergency lure. The emergency lure — "Your mommy was rushed to the hospital; come with me" — is designed to disarm, confuse and worry the child.

•Prevention. Pre-arrange a plan of action with your child. Stress the following: Never go with a stranger. Either call or hurry home yourself to verify that there is an emergency. If uncertain, seek help from relatives or friends.

•Magic and Rituals lure. Ritual abuse is disguised as "magic," "sorcery," "Satanism" and the "world of the unknown." Magic and rituals fascinate and brainwash the child into a consenting association, leading to repeated abuse.

•Prevention. Discuss the concepts of good and evil at an early age, so your children are not confused by those who try to mislead them. Be inquisitive if your child begins to reject basic social values — family, country and established religious beliefs. Probe as to how, when and why these adult-like opinions were formulated. Be aware if your child suffers frequent nightmares or lapses into periods of prolonged silence. Be especially concerned if your child becomes absorbed in horror films, Satanic rock and heavy-metal music or publications about the occult.

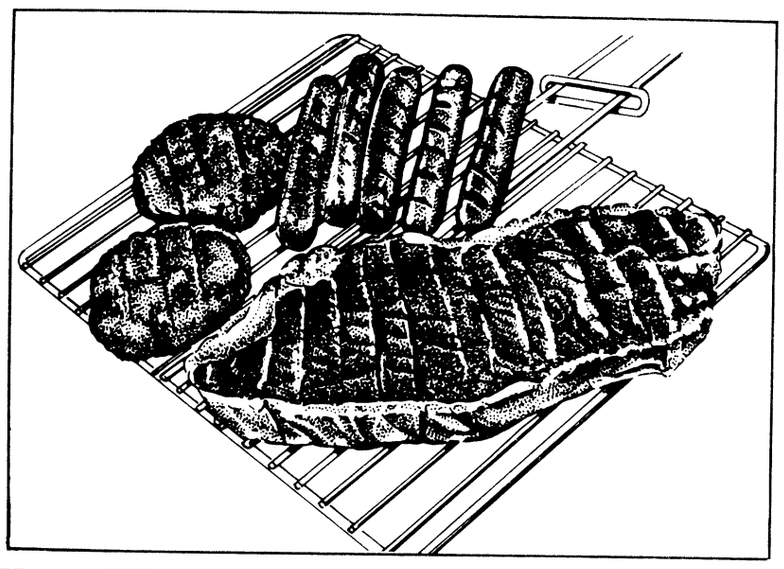
•Pornography lure. Molesters can use pornographic magazines and videos to sexually arouse a victim and destroy his inhibitions.

•Prevention. Keep your home free of all forms of pornography. If you suspect that your child has been calling a Dial-A-Porn number, cut off telephone access with a lock-out device.

•Heros lure. Molesters can dress as such childhood heros as Big Bird, the Easter Bunny or Santa Clause.

•Prevention. Explain that bad people sometimes try to trick children. Real heroes would never use their fame to harm children.

•Jobs lure. Adolescents, in particular, can be attracted by the promise of a high-paying or interesting job. Interviews for these jobs are often held in secluded locations and are advertised with only a post-office box number.



•Prevention. Explain to your child why it is important for you to go along on any job interview, particularly if it is an unusual location. Simply telling your job-seeking teen-ager about this lure should put him or her on the alert.

Outdoor cooking becomes popular

Readers Digest

Outdoor cooking has become our new national pastime. According to the July 1988 Reader's Digest, Americans own almost 100 million backyard grills and light their fires more than one billion times yearly.

The modern bonanza began in 1951, when George Stephen decided he was tired of burning steaks over inefficient open braziers with fires that were often too hot. Employed by Weber Brothers Metal Works, Stephen joined two drum-sized metal shapes to form a covered grill. This stopped flare-ups and reflected heat to aid in the cooking. The device was so successful that he bought Weber and began manufacturing "The Weber Kettle."

Kettles and covered cookers are the most popular, but water smokers, which approximate Southern barbecue smoked flavor, are gaining in use. Gas grills are catching on as well. Their grates are lined with reusable ceramic briquettes, or lava rocks — natural volcanic stones. These radiate heat from the gas jets and cook the food.

Some seasoned Southern barbecuers rely on wood. One manufacturer offers a stainless-steel smoker pit with a solid-gold emblem in the shape of Texas on the smoking pot. List price: $6,000, wood not included.

The favorite of most Americans, however, remains the charcoal briquette — the brainchild of Henry Ford. Unhappy with the huge piles of wood scraps outside a sawmill he operated for automobile production, Ford utilized a method for converting the wood chips to charcoal. His charcoal factory was revealed in 1922, and with some modifications, this method of changing scrap wood into charcoal is still in use.

"I helped change things when I was there. The women and men began training together.

"As an instructor, I was impressed with a lot of the women who came through — especially the ones sent from Fort Bragg," she said. "They were always in the best physical shape and knew what to expect. There were some women, though, who showed up completely unprepared to train. They left quickly."

The former soldier sees today's Army as full of opportunity for women. "If you do a good job, you're going to be promoted," she said. "It doesn't matter what your sex is. Ability to do the job is the determining factor."

Los believes in female soldiers being trained to jump out of airplanes — not just parachute riggers who must be able to jump what they pack.

"I believe there are going to be times when women are going to need to jump into different areas, and if they aren't qualified, they're going to be stuck," she said.

"It's a valid course for many soldiers. It teaches you discipline and offers rewards."

The mother of two children, Jennifer, 8, and Jason, 7, completed her bachelor's of science degree and got out of the Army in 1978 after her four-year enlistment.

Los left the Army when her husband received orders for Germany, and she was told joint domicile could not be guaranteed.

She says she is constantly surprised at the number of women she meets who are also former soldiers, and she believes it helps marriage relationships because, having been a soldier, the women understand soldier-husbands' jobs better.

When asked if she thinks the Army has changed her reply is, "Yes, for the better. There will always be some men and some women who resist change. But overall, the Army is full of opportunities."

Union participant writes about Battle of Gettysburg experiences

Army News Service

(NOTE: The 125th anniversary of the Battle of Gettysburg (July 1-3, 1863) was marked recently by the largest re-enactment ever staged. The following story was written by a Union participant in that event.)

June 24. It is hot, and the march has been long, but we are near the front of the column so the dust is not too bad. From beyond a ridge ahead comes heavy cannon and musket fire.

We turn across the fields; the Iron Brigade is engaged and the enemy is apparently here in force. We move up at the double quick and go into line at the top of the ridge. Smoke lies in the vale below like morning fog.

We advance to join the left of a brigade in the vale and immediately meet a hot fire from the enemy. Soon we become as automatons load and fire, load and fire. The barrel is untouchable; spit out powder with the cartridge paper; sweat runs into the eyes, but no matter, little can be seen through the smoke. There is no hearing commands; if the man on your right goes down, step over him and continue the fight.

Step by step they force us back, and at last we are ordered to withdraw.

I turn for one last look and see the whole enemy line surging forward; we can do no more this day.

Night. We occupy a low ridge southeast of town; the Rebels hold the ground to the west. Supper is salt pork, canned fish, hard bread and water.

Bed is a poncho and blanket on the ground.

June 25. The morning passes quietly, but in the afternoon the Third Corps is attacked, and we are ordered to their support. At the edge of a wheat field, we see a brigade going in. The Rebels fire, and the line tumbles like grain before the gleaners. The survivors pass through our line as we charge to meet the advancing enemy.

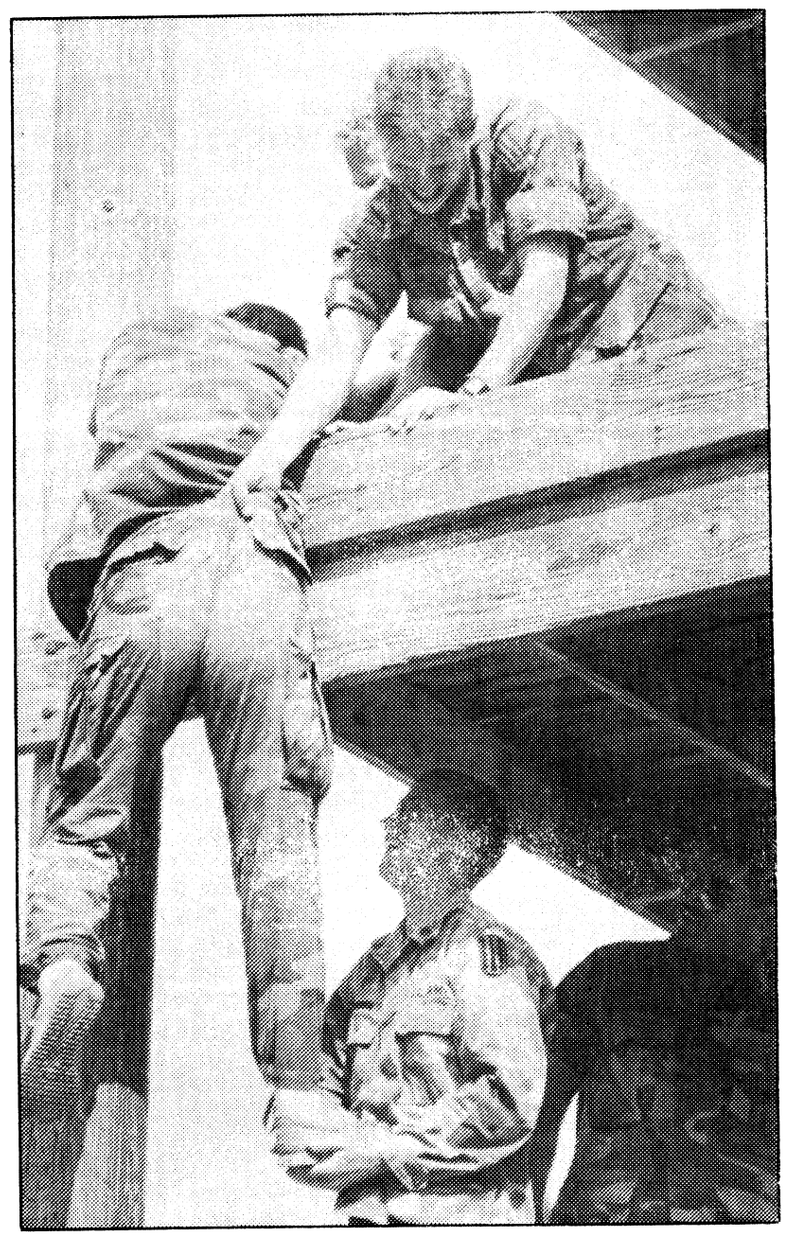
Both sides feed brigades into the fight as a miller pours sacks of grain into the chute. Each advance and retreat may be marked by the lines of the fallen. We are forced back, but the enemy can gain no advantage, and we all retire with nothing settled.

June 26. Again the morning passes quietly. By noon it is stifling, and I lie with my cap over my eyes and try to sleep. I wish I could be in the shade of those trees to the right.

Shade, sleep, all is forgotten as the enemy opens on our lines with his guns. Our artillery answers, and soon it seems that every cannon ever made is firing across the valley. The Rebels are concentrating their fire on that grove of trees. We are ordered to move in that direction, and suddenly their shade is not so attractive as it seemed.

Our guns gradually cease firing, and soon the enemy's guns fall silent as well. Moments pass, then someone cries out "here they come."

Across the valley, the Rebels emerge from the trees in the broadest front that I've ever seen, and advance as if on parade.



Our artillery opens again, tearing great gaps in their lines, but they close up and come on. A fence at the Emmitsburg Road holds them up, and many go no farther. They re-form for the advance; the order is given and our line erupts with a roar.

Whole companies have disappeared, but still the survivors advance. We pour round after round into their ranks as fast as we can reload, but still they come on. To our left, an enemy brigade rushes toward an angle in the fence; and despite being blasted at point-blank range from front, left and right, a few get inside our line.

The angle becomes a whirlpool of destruction; regiments rush in from left and right and disappear in the smoke and dust. In half an hour it is all over; the assault is broken and the survivors are streaming to the rear.

Cheers erupt, as along the line rides a general waving a Virginia state flag, his orderly carrying an enemy battle flag.

After three days of hard marching and harder fighting, the Battle of Gettysburg is history once again.

Benning shooters ready for Olympic trials

Tommy Pool

SFC Alger Mullins is among the more experienced of those qualified for the Olympic tryouts in skeet shooting. He has been a member of two world-record-setting teams and won the gold medal at last year's U.S. Sports Festival.

USAMU

As the games of the 24th Olympiad in Seoul, Korea draw closer, members of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit are getting ready for the U.S. shooting team tryouts.

There will be 15 shooting events at this year's Olympics, with the final tryouts to be held Aug. 7-20, at Chino, Calif., site of the 1984 Los Angeles games shooting competition.

About 85 top civilian and military shooters from across the nation have met the qualifying scores necessary to compete in the finals.

Of the total number who qualified for the tryouts, 27 are stationed at the Army Marksmanship Unit here.

Since the unit was formed in 1956, members of USAMU have made up nearly 50 percent of all U.S. shooting team personnel.

These individuals accounted for six gold, three silver and four bronze medals, amounting to half the total medal count won by the United States in Olympic shooting during this period.

Among those individuals who will be considered strong contenders to make the U.S. team, are four who were members of the 1984 Olympic squad. They are: Capts. Glenn Dubis and Wanda Jewell in rifle competition; and MSgt. Erich Buljung and Capt. John McNally in pistol events.

Dubis won a gold medal during last year's Pan American Games and in the 1986 World Shooting championships, he won two gold medals and set three world records.

Jewell is a two-time world champion in women's rifle events. She also won a bronze medal in the 50-meter standard rifle event at the 1984 Olympic Games.

In the pistol competition, Buljung won a gold medal during the 1987 Pan American Games and is the current nationa champion in three pistol cat gories. He will be trying out fc the U.S. team in both the 5 meter free pistol event and th 10-meter air pistol event.

McNally is currently nationa and interservice champion i rapid fire pistol. He also hold the national record for this ever and has been a member c several gold-medal-winning U.S teams. He and his father, retire SFC John McNally, are the onl father and son duo to ever mak the U.S. Olympic team in th same shooting event. The senic McNally competed in the 196 and 1972 games.

Other members from USAMU who are expected to make strong showing are; SFC Alge Mullins, SP4 James Grave (shotgun), SP4 Troy Lawto (running target), Capt. Kur Fitz-Randolph (rifle) and Lt Col. Sharon Best (women's pis tol).

SP4 Troy Lawton is one of USAMU's top prospects to make this year's U.S. Olympic team in running target competition. He is the current national champion and recently set a new national record in the event.

Site for Army-Navy football game moved to Giants Stadium for 1989

Army News Service

An agreement has been reached with the New Jersey Sports and Exposition Authority to play the 1989 Army-Navy football game at Giants Stadium in East Rutherford, N.J.

Selection of Giants Stadium as the game site ends months of negotiations with representatives of five cities who offered their facilities for the 1989 classic. Proposals also came in from Dallas, Jacksonville, Fla., Baltimore and Philadelphia, said officials at the U.S. Military Academy at West Point and the U.S. Naval Academy in Annapolis, Md.

Athletic directors at the two academies, Army's Carl Ullrich and Navy's J.O. Coppedge, stressed that the decision to play the 1989 game at Giants Stadium should not be interpreted as a denial of Philadelphia as the home of the Army-Navy game. Of the 88 Army-Navy games, 66 have been played to date in Philadelphia, including every game but one since 1945.

Infantry medic places second at Armed Forces track, field meet

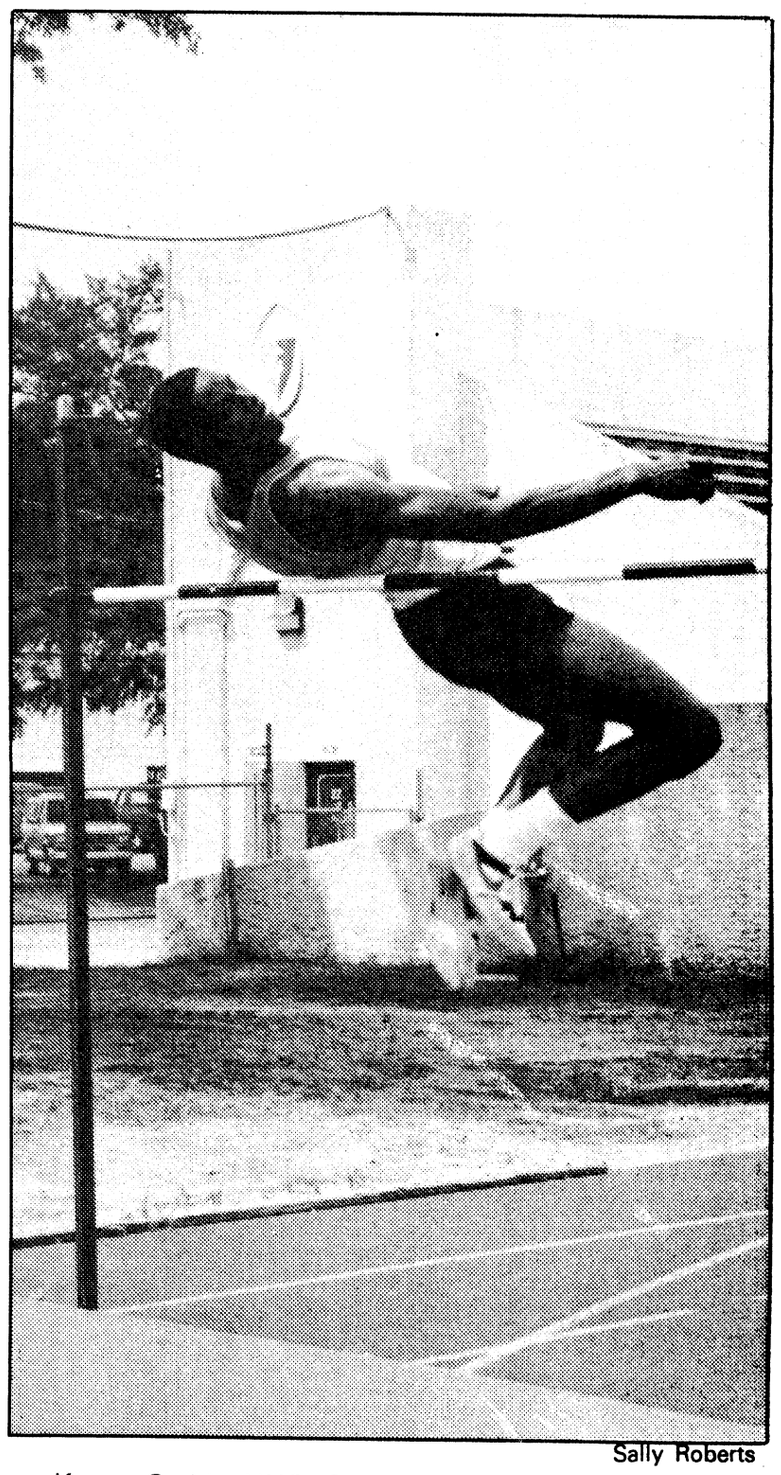
By Sally Roberts
197th Infantry Brigade correspondent

Kenny Smith, a medic in the 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor, 197th Infantry Brigade, literally leaped at an opportunity to participate on the All-Army Track team and landed with a second-place award at the Armed Forces Track and Field competition at Albuquerque, N.M.

Smith and Leo Williams, the Navy competitor who took first place in the competition, set an interservice record in the high jump by successfully jumping 7 feet, 3-¾ inches.

"We both jumped the same height, but he had fewer misses than I did," Smith said.

Smith began high jumping while participating in track in high school. He continued with his training while attending Florida State University.



"I still hold a Florida State record for jumping 7 feet, 4-¼ inches," Smith added.

Smith says that he gave up jumping in 1986 because of injuries and conflicts with his job. However, the Army has opened an opportunity for him to resume his training.

"The Army has a world class track program and a lot of good athletes," Smith said. "If I get the time and a chance to train, I have the potential to go 7 feet, 8 inches next year."

For now, Smith maintains his own training program and has plans to participate in local meets. At age 25, he feels that he won't reach his peak for about three more years, so he will take advantage of any training opportunities.

"I met a coach at the Armed Forces meet who gave me a strength workout to train with," Smith said. "There are some "all-comers" meets in Atlanta and some indoor meets that I will try for next year."

Fishing line is the only link between angler and fish

Bass Anglers Sportsman Society

One of the most important, but most often neglected, items of bass fishing tackle is the very link that connects an angler to his fish — the fishing line. "Take care of it, and it will take care of you," is a familiar saying among professional anglers.

"There is a lot more involved in choosing fishing line today than there was several years ago," says Johnson Outboards Pro Staff member Jack Chancellor, "primarily because of the new developments we've seen in rods and reels as well as the new techniques we're seeing in fishing.

"Just as tackle and lures have become more specialized for certain applications, lines have become more specialized, too."

What's happening, explains Chancellor, winner of the 1985 BASS Masters Classic; is that anglers (himself included) are gradually switching to lighter lines because these lines work smaller lures more efficiently. Smaller lures, in turn, are catching more fish, overall, than larger lures.

Lines are rated according to their breaking strength, which is expressed as pound-test. Although fishing line is manufactured with pound test ratings ranging from one to about 150-pounds, bass fishermen normally use lines rated between about six and 25-pounds.

Naturally, bass fishermen are concerned about fish breaking their lines on obstacles and cover, and a decade ago, it was common for fishermen to spool their reels with 20 and 25-pound test monofilaments.

"What we've all realized," says Chancellor, "is that many lures, especially crank baits, perform much better with lighter lines. The lures dive deeper and wobble better because there is less drag on the line itself as it moves through the water.

"The same is true with certain topwater lures, especially poppers and chuggers, and it's true to some extent with plastic-worms. The lures have better action because they can move more freely."

Chancellor advises choosing line according to the type of fishing an angler intends to do, as well as on the type of lake he's fishing. His own line choices range from a fairly light eight-pound test to a moderately heavy 17-pound test.

"If I'm fishing extremely clear water, I use the lighter line," he says. "In clear water, I normally use smaller lures to keep from alarming the bass, and smaller lures work best on lighter lines and with spinning tackle.

"I believe bass can see line under certain conditions, because I've had fish swim into my line and bump it."

Chancellor's definition of clear water is being able to see a lure three to four feet down. In those cases, he chooses the eight-pound test monofilament.

When he's working crank baits, Chancellor normally moves up to 12-pound test line. The lures work well with this weight of line, and it is strong enough to handle large bass, since the majority of crank bait bass are caught in relatively open water.

Lighter line is definitely the path to take if an angler wants his crank baits to run deeper. Tests have shown some diving lures run as much as two feet deeper with 10-pound test line than with 17-pound test.

One common misconception about choosing lighter lines like this is that the line won't be strong enough to handle big bass. Actually, lighter lines can and do handle big fish well, as long as the angler plays the fish properly and uses the leverage of his rod and the drag on his reel to wear the bass down.

Chancellor has caught largemouth bass weighing as much as 11-pounds using eight-pound test line. On his houseboat on Alabama's Lake Eufaula, he keeps one rod permanently rigged with eight-pound test mono, and with it, he catches far more fish than with another rod rigged with the same type of lure but with 14-pound test line.

When fishing heavy cover such as rocks, bushes or trees, the line is likely to come in contact with each cast, a heavier line choice is normally used. Chancellor recommends 14- or 17-pound test because with its added thickness, nicks and abrasions will not wear through the line as quickly.

"We talk about lines being 'abrasion resistant,'" says the Johnson Outboard's team angler, "and what we mean is that the line takes wear and tear better. Basically, heavier line is thicker in diameter."

Fishing with heavier line, it is important to check periodically for abrasions. The easiest way to do this is to run thumb and forefinger along the last 18 to 24-inches above the lure. If any rough spots are detected, it's time to clip the line and re-tie the lure.

Abrasion doesn't always occur on underwater obstacles either. One often-overlooked cause of line problems occurs when anglers carry three or four rods together and line from one gets snagged in the reel of another. When this happens, the line is usually pinched and a potential weak spot is created.

"Another time you need to check fishing line is when an angler is catching a lot of fish," says Chancellor. "The rough lips of a bass can fray fishing line quickly and cause you to break a line when you set the hook or play the fish to the boat."

Although the technology in manufacturing today's fishing lines is constantly improving, Chancellor recommends bass fishermen purchase only premium grade monofilament lines from well-known manufacturers, store the line in cool places when not being used, and remember to spool on fresh line at the start of each new fishing season.

TRADOC rewards civilians

By Shawn Bryson
Bayonet staff writer

Maj. Gen. K. C. Leuer, Fort Benning's commanding general, presented several awards to six civilian employee managers Monday for their participation in the Training and Doctrine Command's annual Community and Family Awards Program.

Alan Stewart, the Morale, Welfare and Recreation business manager, accepted the Best Installation Single Fund and Community and Family Program plaque. Leuer also presented the Commander's Award for Civilian Service to Stewart for his performance as the MWR business manager.

Lee Etta Simmons, Linda Magee and John Bush were individually chosen by TRADOC for their excellence as Outstanding Division Chiefs for 1987. The three also received plaques and the Commander's Award for Civilian Service.

Also awarded was Rebecca Carroll. Carroll was selected as the Outstanding Program Manager for 1987 in Child Development Services.

Pat Sneed was voted as the TRADOC Community and Family Activities Outstanding Civilian Employee for 1987.

MP Activity gets new commander

By Shawn Bryson
Bayonet staff writer

After 21 years of climbing the ladder of military law enforcement, Lt. Col. Frederick W. Liebe has returned to Fort Benning to assume command of the Military Police Activity.

The host of Monday's ceremony at the Field of Four Chaplains was Maj. Gen. K. C. Leuer, post commander, who signified the assumption of command with the traditional passing of the colors.

Leuer welcomed Liebe and remarked, "How the MP's go on a post, so goes the post."

Liebe's return marks the first time he's served at Fort Benning since his graduation from Officers Candidate School in 1967.

"I'm thrilled to be back for my second tour at Fort Benning," he said. "The MPA here has an excellent reputation, and I look forward to working here."

The commander said he doesn't plan any major changes just yet. "My initial task will be to familiarize myself, and changes won't be made until I've had time to make evaluations," Liebe said after the ceremony.

Liebe explained that after seeing the people of his new command, he's confident about keeping its high standards. "I think the soldiers and civilians I saw at the ceremony aptly represented the fine reputation of law enforcement here," he said.

Dentists complete residency here

By Shawn Bryson
Bayonet staff writer

Seven soldiers graduated recently from the Dental General Practice Residency at Martin Army Community Hospital and left Fort Benning after a year of specialized dentistry training.

The graduates, Capts. Charlene Czuszak, Christopher G. Fielding, Karl J. Hunt, Jordi X. Rodriguez, John D. Smith, Joe L. Wells and Nathan D. Willis, spent most of their time at the Dental Clinic No. 1, where they sharpened their skills in specialized areas of dentistry, according to Col. Charles D. Wakefield, program director and member of the general dentistry specialty teaching staff for the course.

The purpose of the course, Wakefield explained, is to take young dental officers just out of dental school, put them into the course and teach them more about the specialized dentistry areas.

"Some of the areas they are taught include oral surgery, crowns, bridges and child dentistry," Wakefield said.

The overall purpose of the course is to prepare the dentists well enough so they can be sent to small clinics where they will be able to handle most kinds of cases, Wakefield further explained.

"When they finish here, they are far above and beyond Dental School," he said.

The course, which is somewhat of an elite course for Army dentists, is not mandatory. In fact, getting accepted to the course is quite difficult as the residents are selected from numerous applications.

"We really tax the residents of the course," Wakefield said. "We push their time and capabilities, and they aren't given routine cases such as drilling and filling."

While lectures and seminars are a part of their residency, the great bulk of the training is clinical care, according to Wakefield.

"We have specialists who are mentors of the residents," he said.

The mentors are the guides of the residents during each phase of their training.

MPs pay respects to dog killed in line of duty

Ann M. McDonald

Chap. (Lt. Col.) Douglas Stephenson eulogizes Niki, a Military Police narcotics dog killed recently in the line of duty.

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

It's often said that the dog is man's best friend, however, to the military police and law enforcement people, dogs are often partners.

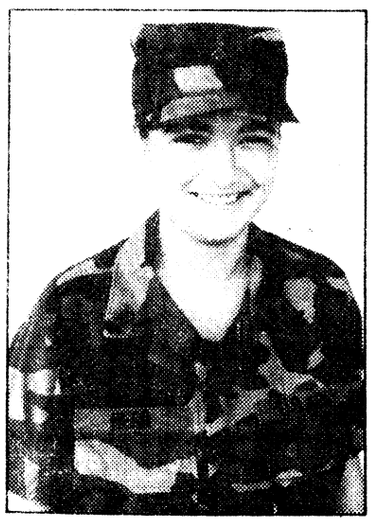
Sgt. Randy Yates just lost his partner, Niki, a patrol narcotics dog. He died in the line of duty while on patrol.

According to Capt. Lynne Mallard, commander, U.S. Army Infantry Center Military Police Company, Yates and Niki responded to a prowler call in Battle Park when Niki leaped out of the vehicle to help his partner and was struck by a car. The animal was rushed to the post veterinary clinic where attempts to save his life were unsuccessful.

"As far as records can tell, Niki was the first animal ever to be killed in the line of duty (here)," Mallard said. "Usually we lose an animal to disease or old age."

Mallard, along with other personnel within MPA honored Niki last week in a ceremony conducted at the Pet Cemetery, located just off of 10th Mountain Division Road.

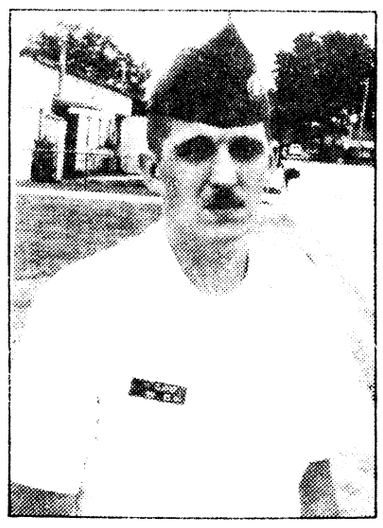
Niki was posthumously awarded the Army Commendation Medal for his dedication to duty while serving with the USAIC MPs.



The temporary plate marking Niki's final resting place will eventually be replaced by a permanent stone.

OPINION

VARIOUS VOICES: What do you think of the level of discipline in today's Army?

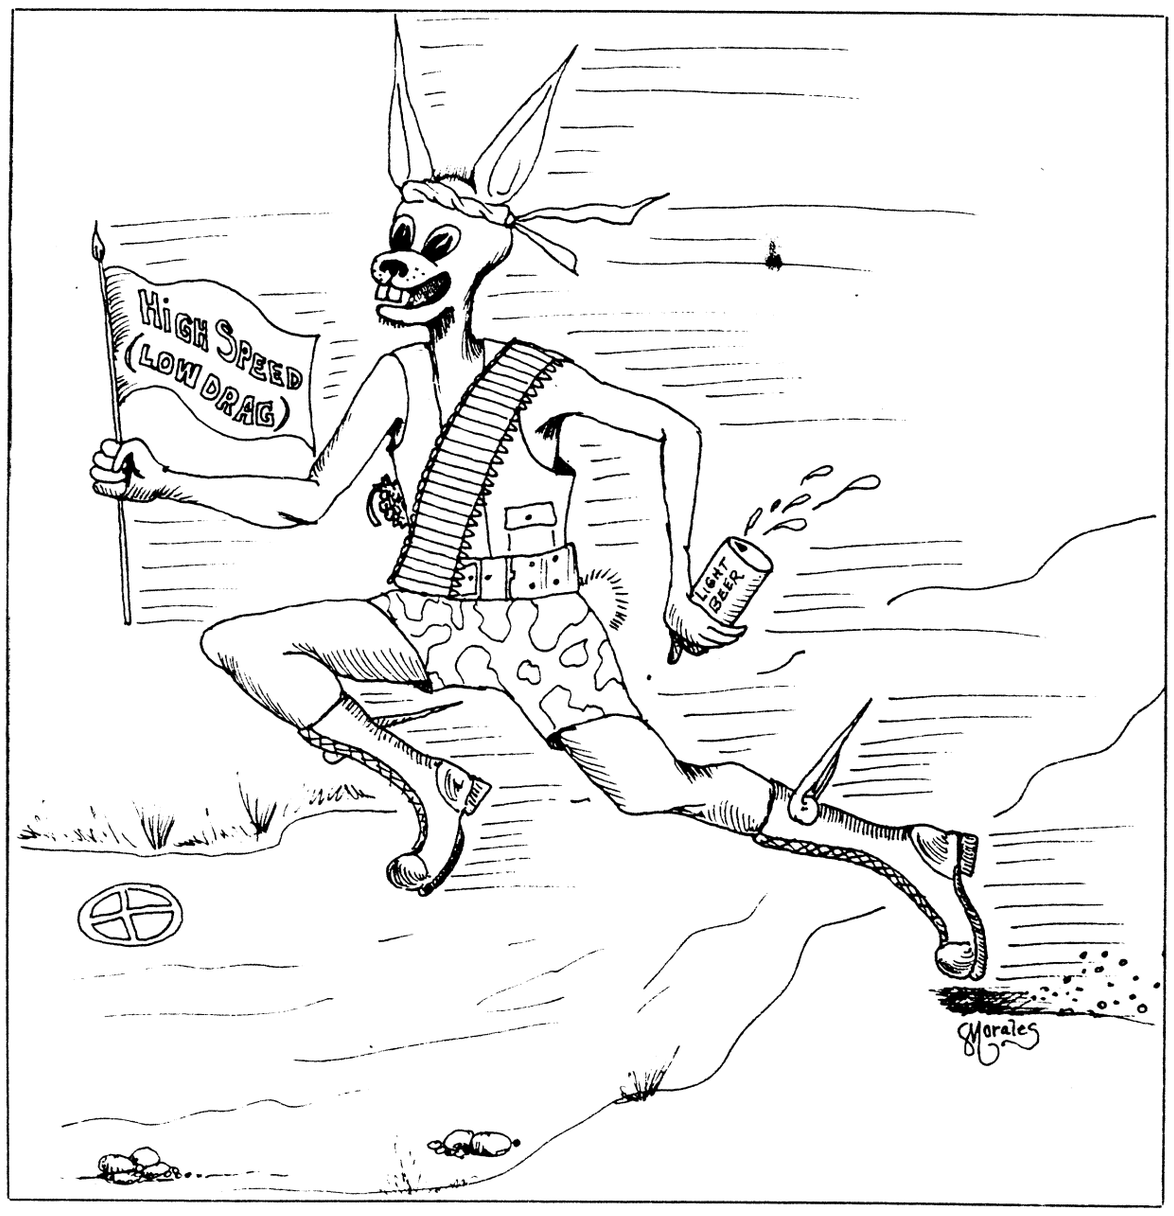


Sgt. Nathanial Bell, 988th MP Co., USAIC — "I don't think it's high enough. It shows in uniform appearance and disrespect shown to NCOs and officers. I think it's because soldiers just don't have pride in the military like they used to."

SP4 Amy Herr, HHC , 2nd Bn., 29th Inf. Regt. — "I think the level of discipline while soldiers are in their initial training is good but when they make that transition to a regular soldier, it gets lost somewhere."

SFC Willie Robinson, 598th Maint. Co., 67th Maint. Bn., 36th Eng. Grp. — "I think the level of discipline is low. The jobs that used to be done by NCOs have been taken away. Everything has been turned into a paperwork shuffle instead of just plain discipline."

SP4 Ernest Glover, USARSA — "I don't believe it's too lenient. I think it is at the level it should be."



Richard Brown, Supply Div., Dir. of Log. — "I think the level of discipline is good. Soldiers today are better educated and show respect where it is due."

2nd Lt. Dennis Sullivan, Co. E, 2nd Bn., 11th Inf. — "From what I've seen, I think discipline could be more uniform. The standards are there, but they are not always enforced."

Snively advertises Hashers under duress

By Clyde Snively
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Hashers are at it again.

Airborne Annie, a Hasher spokesman brought in a flyer announcing a run up in Pine Mountain. Then she parked on my desk and refused to leave until I promised to help her publicize it. But I fought it.

"Airborne," I said, "who in his right mind would want to go out in the scorching Georgia sun, in the oppressive humidity, in the middle of July and run in snake-infested, thorn-ladened woods?"

When I ran that sentence back for instant replay, I realized the error of my ways. I assumed I was dealing with people who think like you and me. I forgot I was talking to a Hasher about Hashers hashing.

If you believe there's any sanity among this bunch, you'd believe a Rugby player when he tells you he's in it for the "sport." Blood and beer more likely, but I digress.

While these thoughts were passing through my mind, Airborne Annie was going on about what a great sport hashing is, the thrill of the chase and the superb, post chase parties, not to mention the mid-chase beer guzzling break.

"Listen," I said, "you really have to be kidding me about wanting publicity for your event in a newspaper, which the major keeps telling us is read by family members as well as soldiers.

"Why, hashing is such a vulgar sport, I can't even print the nicknames of your hashers in this column for fear I might be violating the local pornography law. I'm not even sure if the menu you have listed in the flyer and the name of the camp are legitimate, or have some vulgar meaning that I'm not aware of. I refuse to write anything about this activity."

After she reminded me she was in charge of PT next week and could really make my life miserable, I relented and promised I'd tell both my readers that the Hash run will be at 3 p.m., July 16 at Pine Mountain Club Chalets on Highway 18.

On-post phone system may be better in 1989.

Readers of the local newspaper may have gotten a sudden lift with their morning coffee when they read the headline about a new phone system being on line in September.

Unfortunately, we are talking September 1989, as the story points out, not this September.

I know a lot of people are disappointed with this. That means it will continue to be quicker to drive to Sand Hill at times to deliver a message than to try and call.

I have noticed I'm a lot calmer about the antics of the phone system, the cute little trick of faking a dial tone, then when you are in the midst of dialing your number, your ear is suddenly assaulted by that grating voice that comes on to tell you to butt out, you've just screwed up and need to try again. Or you may even get a dial tone, only to have the system cut you off as your finger reaches for the fourth number.

Newcomers to the post still get extremely frustrated and stressed out over the system. They are the ones who threaten to throw their phones out the window and replace them with a coffee can, string and buttons.

I too was like that, but have since learned to deal with it. Now I only bang the instrument with my fist when I can't get any dial tone at all. So I know if I and the thousands before me can learn to cope, newcomers can too.

I just wonder what kind of bugs will have to be ironed out when the new system is installed. I remember when Fort Drum got its new system. They had to send people to class to learn to talk on the phones. Can you believe that? Americans are practically born with phones connected to their ears, but this system was so state-of-the-art, you had to go to a class and bring back a booklet to keep by the instrument to make it work.

But anything has got to be better than what we have now.

CG sends thanks for IOE participation

Congratulations on a super job of preparing for this year's visit by the Installation of Excellence Evaluation Team.

The team just completed its inspection, so we don't know the final results. But whatever they are, they won't change the fact that you are all winners.

The team effort in preparing for this year's competition was obvious and productive. Soldiers, family members and civilians all worked long and hard to produce dramatic improvements in the appearance of our post and the quality of services provided our customers. It was truly a Fort Benning family show.

I personally thank each of you for your part, small or large, in making our efforts successful. A special thanks goes to those who stood by to show off the results of their hard work, but were never visited by the team. It was just physically impossible for the team, in the limited time available, to see everything. You can take great pride in knowing you were ready had time permitted. That's the spirit of teamwork and the winning attitude that yield success.

This inspection was really an evaluation of our year-long effort to raise the standards of excellence on this post. We didn't prepare just for this inspection. We've worked hard together to raise our daily standards of appearance and services. We've shifted the "band of excellence" we operate in even higher.

My thanks again for a job well done. I am extremely proud of our accomplishments to date. However, we have not yet reached our full potential. If we continue to work together as a team to make Fort Benning all it can be — it will be.

Thanks again for your great work.

Indian artifacts uncovered here

By Ann M. McDonald

There's Indians in them there hills, or at least there were some time ago. And some of their belongings were uncovered during an archeological dig at Fort Benning recently.

The dig was conducted on the ridgeline between Custer Road and Highway 280 near Sand Hill.

According to Carl Divinyi of the Environmental Management Office, Directorate of Engineering and Housing, digs of this nature are routinely done prior to construction projects. In this case, it was a new approach ramp that will be built to highway 280.

Ann M. McDonald

Nancy Harrison tosses dirt into the sifter that Colby Childs uses to search for artifacts at Fort Benning archeological dig site.

The dig was conducted by the Art Christopher Goodwin Association with the team headed by Richard Geidel.

Geidel said they found projectile points and a few pieces of pottery, which date back 2,000 years.

He said the team obtained the artifacts by digging up the soil at controlled levels and then sifting through it. When artifacts are found they retain and catalog the items.

Geidel believes the items belonged to woodland Indians who occupied this area during that era and added that the dig site was probably used as a temporary camping site.

"We have come to this conclusion because it's located on higher ground making it a good ambush point, and it's easily accessible to water," he said.

Geidel said the projectile points and pottery pieces would probably be all they would find on that site. But, with those findings, they would learn more about the indians who roamed the hills of Fort Benning.

VHA remains intact through this month

Army News Service

There will be no cut in the variable housing allowance for soldiers in July, say officials at the U.S. Army Finance and Accounting Center.

The Army continues to plead its case with Congress to provide relief for the projected VHA shortfall, to preclude cuts in August and September, but so far no agreement has been reached.

If Congress doesn't provide relief, there may be a reduction of VHA payments in August and September, but officials say the new rates are not yet available.

Also, because VHA rates are based upon pay grade and geographic location, it isn't possible to make blanket statements about how large the cuts could be.

"We're still hoping that Congress will come through. We've already been able to postpone the cuts the 'Army Times' reported were coming this month, and we're hoping we can save VHA for August and September as well," said Mary Harden of the USAFAC public affairs office. "But the final determination will depend on Congress."

Drill sergeants to receive training at NCO Academy

By Ann M. McDonald

The Fort Benning Infantry Center Noncommissioned Officer Academy now has the added responsibility of training drill sergeants.

According to 1st Sgt. Joe [illegible] of the NCO Academy, the Drill Sergeant School was deactivated from the U.S. Army Infantry Training Center on July 1 and reactivated under the academy.

He said this move was made under the direction of Training and Doctrine Command so the noncommissioned officer education system could be centralized.

He added that although the drill sergeant school now falls under the academy, the school will remain at Sand Hill until new facilities, presently under construction, are complete.

With this change, CSM James Fowler is the commandant of the Drill Sergeant School and MSgt. Robert Sackett is the branch chief.

Army gets recognition for its health program

Army News Service

High honors went to the Army June 24 for its health promotion program.

"The Army receives special recognition for its outstanding worldwide health promotion," said award presenter Constance Horner, Director of the U.S. Office of Personnel Management. During her remarks at a ceremony at the Old Executive Office Building in Washington, Horner said, "Throughout the military services, the Army leads the way. This award adds new meaning to Be All You Can Be."

While four federal agencies won the agency's Director's Award for Outstanding Health and Fitness Programs, the Army received a special citation for its worldwide health promotion program begun in October 1987.

Maj. Gen. John A. Renner, director for military personnel management for the Army's Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Personnel at the Pentagon, accepted the plaque.

"I am honored to accept this award for the Army," Renner said.

"We're proud to have a program for our entire workforce — civilians, soldiers and family members — that contributes to readiness through health fitness."

The top four recipients included the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta, the Farmer's Home Administration's Employee Wellness Program of the U.S. Department of Agriculture, the U.S. Department of Transportation's Employee Occupational Health and Fitness Program in Washington and the Department of Health and Human Services's Health Care Financing Administration in Baltimore. Eight other finalists received citations for their outstanding health and fitness programs.

Other Army nominees for the 1988 director's awards inclu$ed the U.S. Army Staff (Pentagon), Washington; U.S. Army Material Command, Alexandria, Va.; U.S. Army Combined Arms Center, Fort Leavenworth, Kan.; "CORE FIT" Health Promotion Program, Fort Bragg, N.C.; Corps of Engineers Louisville, Ky.; Florida National Guard, St. Augustine, Fla.; Fort Belvoir Civilian Personnel Office, Va.; Fort Lee Quartermaster Center, Va.; Fort Leonard Wood's Community Recreation Division, Mo.; Fort Jackson Health Promotion Center, S.C.; the U.S. Army Training and Doctrine Command and the Fort Monroe Health Clinic, Va. Letterman Army Medical Center, Presidio of San Francisco; U.S. Army Tank Automotive Command, Lima, Ohio and the U.S. Total Army Personnel Agency, Alexandria, Va.

OPM officials established the director's award program in October 1987.

43rd rolls out equipment for change of command

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Lt. Col. Charles S. Rust relinquished his command of the 43rd Engineer Battalion, 36th Engineer Group last week at York Field.

During the change of command ceremony, the soldiers of the 43rd rolled out much of the battalion's heavy construction equipment, including scrapers, graders, bucket loaders, two-and-a-half ton trucks and two cranes, fully extended and hoisting the 43rd's unit crest.

The setting was the soldiers' tribute to Rust and their new commander, Lt. Col. Lee P. Gibson.

After the traditional passing of the battalion colors, which signifies the change of command, Brig. Gen. William Hartzog, assistant commander of Fort Benning presented Rust with a Meritorious Service Medal.

Rust, who served with the 43rd for 26 months, will be attending the Army War College.

Gibson came to Fort Benning from the Programs Analysis and Evaluation Office of the Office of the Chief of Staff of the Army where he was a Systems Analyst.

1-29 Inf Regt welcomes new CSM

USAIC Public Affairs Office

On June 17, the 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment conducted an enlisted review on Dickman Field as the outgoing command sergeant major, Jack P. Hardwick, was replaced by CSM Jimmie G. Bowles.

Hardwick was the 1st Battalion command sergeant major from Sept. 3, 1985 until June 17, 1988. Prior to his service with the 29th Inf., he was assigned to the Ranger Training Brigade and the 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment here. Hardwick left for Panama where he was assigned to NCOA (JOTC).

The incoming command sergeant major Jimmie G. Bowles recently returned from the Federal Republic of Germany where he was post command sergeant major for the Wildflicken Military Community (MILCOM).

Prior to his assignment as the MILCOM CSM, he was the battalion CSM for the 3rd Battalion, 79th Field Artillery (LANCE) for two years, in Giessen, Germany, Rivers Kaserne.

Girl Scouts wrap up season

Columbus Girl Scouts

The Fort Benning Girl Scouts recently wrapped up the scouting season at summer camp with the theme "Arts and Crafts."

"We tried to give the girls as many activities as possible," said Cassie Martinez, camp director, "so they wouldn't get bored."

During the week, the girls went on nature walks and learned how to care for the animals, had fun with arts and crafts and went on hikes down to the creek.

On the last day, the camp was transformed into a carnival with a western theme. The girls donned cowgirl attire and were judged for best costume.

Martinez added that although the camp marked the end of the season, she and the other leaders are making plans for next year.

"In August, we will start recruiting new girls and adult leaders, and we plan to have a scouting night at the Youth Activities Center," Martinez said.

She said it doesn't cost anything to get trained as a scout leader and the rewards of helping young girls are endless.

Dentists

"By the time they complete their year here, they are at the level of more experienced dentists," Wakefield commented.

Normally, a new group of residents would have arrived at Fort Benning during the week of the last graduation. However, because of a change in Officer Basic Course of Dentistry at Fort Sam Houston, the new residents will not arrive until October, Wakefield said.

Reserve drill sergeant's platoon honored at graduation ceremony

70th Training Division correspondent

They stood tall and proud today at Dickman field, before friends and family. To get there, they had run hundreds of miles and sat through countless classes for the past 13 weeks. But all the sweat and agony was worth it. Today, they graduated as infantry soldiers.

It was also a day for SSgt. David J. Rosin, a drill sergeant from 2nd Bde., 70th Div. (Trng.) to be proud. His platoon, the 2nd, was selected as honor platoon for Co. A, 3rd ITB.

SSgt. David J. Rosin and the Distinguished Honor Graduate, Pvt. 1 Panagiotis Giannakakos, proudly hold the unit flag with the Honor Platoon banner.

Rosin also ran the hundreds of miles and taught the countless classes along with the trainees. But his sweat and agony began years before the trainees ever put on a uniform.

"I lead by example — do all the difficult tasks along with the trainees. The trainees look to the drill sergeants for leadership, and I tried to provide that by putting the needs of my men first. I spent hour after hour, seven days a week with my men and gained their respect. When the time came, they were motivated to perform," said Rosin.

Rosin is a special kind of soldier, pushing himself to the limits of physical and mental endurance. At age 38, he has the distinction of graduating as the Honor Grad from the Fort Benning Drill Sergeant school taught at Sand Hill. Not only was he the top graudate, he was perfect. Rosin scored a perfect score academically and a maximum 300 points on the PT test, surpassing anything achieved by an active or reserve soldier.

Rosin continued to excel, this time as the teacher. He was part

Reserve soldiers take progressive training steps

70th Training Division, USAR

With the final pass and review at their July 8 graduation ceremony the 3rd Infantry Training Brigade accomplished a first for Fort Benning training. The 369 new infantry fighting soldiers were trained by Reserve members of the 70th Division, headquartered in Livonia, Mich.

The MATC mission culminated with an exceptional graduation ceremony featuring the 70th Division band, along with many dignitaries and guests.

SFC Steven L Campbell, 1st Bn. 19th Inf., serving as an evaluator for the graduation ceremonies said "Overall, these soldiers look very good, especially knowing that the cadre training them changed every two weeks."

Maj. Gen. Marvin Back, 70th Div. commander congratulated the new soldiers by stating "Today, you join two centuries of American infantrymen who have said, 'God Bless America.' This effort represents a progressive step forward in total force utilization in that 70th Division Reserve members trained these infantry soldiers from beginning to end and have produced a superior soldier that's ready to join infantry fighting soldiers around the world."

The Reservists in charge of 3rd ITB were members of the 2nd Bde., 70th Div.

The 2nd Bde. commander, Col. Axel A. Johnson III, stated "The mission could not have been possible without a very close working relationship between Fort Benning and the 70th. We have established an ongoing relationship here during the last six years, and we look forward to strengthening our ties.

Col Jose Feliciano, commander, 1st ITB, remarked that the MATC mission is a major challenge that we have worked up to over the years.

Soviet staff pays historic visit to States

By Jo Ann Burkhalter

Chief of the Soviet Armed Forces Marshal Sergei F. Akhromeyev and key members of the Soviet Joint Staff are paying a historic visit to the United States from July 5-11.

The counterpart visit is the first of its kind to the United States by senior Soviet officers.

The delegation is coming at the invitation of the U.S. Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Adm. William J. Crowe Jr.

Soviet officials coming to the United States in addition to Akhromeyev are Gen. A. A. Grinkevich, deputy commander of Soviet ground forces; Col. Gen. [illegible] Pankin, deputy commander of Soviet air forces; Adm. I.V. Makarov, deputy commander of the Soviet navy, Col. Gen. N.F. Chervov, general staff department chief; and Maj. Gen. I.S. Skuratov, chief of Marine Corps affairs for the general staff.

The group will visit Washington, D.C., Camp LeJeune, N.C.; the U.S. Roosevelt in Norfolk, Va.; Williamsburg, Va.; Fort Hood, Texas; San Antonio, Texas; University of Oklahoma, Norman; Tinker Air Force Base, Oklahoma City, Okla.; Ellsworth Air Force Base, S.D.; Mount Rushmore, S.D.; and New York City.

During the visit, Akhromeyev will lay a wreath at the Tomb of the Unknowns in Arlington National Cemetery, hold two joint press conferences with Crowe in the Pentagon, attend a dinner in Washington hosted by Crowe, and host a dinner for Crowe at the Soviet embassy.

Grinkevich, deputy commander of Soviet ground forces, will spend one day at the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, New York.

Akhromeyev's wife is accompanying him on his trip.

The purpose of the visit, according to U.S. defense officials, is for Akhromeyev and Crowe to develop a better understanding of the differences between their countries, with a view towards minimizing military conflict.

The visit will not involve negotiations.

"Military-to-military matters is the area of greatest interest to the two officers," said Lt. Col. Arnold Williams, a Defense Department spokesman.

"The U.S. and Soviet Union navies already have a structure in place with the 'Incidents at Sea' commission and Admiral Crowe and Marshal Akhromeyev are going to look at the possibility of expanding that dialogue in other areas."

U.S. officials say Crowe also wants to enhance the credibility of U.S. deterrence by giving Akhromeyev a feel for the quality of the U.S. military.

Williams said, "Admiral Crowe believes that seeing is believing and that believing is important in this business."

U.S. officials also say Crowe hopes to convey to Akhromeyev that the risks of military aggression and intimidation are too high to take.

Williams said, "Admiral Crowe will try to leave with Marshal Akhromeyev the message that political and military restraint, along with openness and peaceful adjustment of controversies, is not only possible but the only sensible course."

Crowe is looking forward to the visit very much, U.S. sources declare.

"Admiral Crowe has met Marshal Akhromeyev on several occasions and says he is a serious, professional soldier, one of the world's foremost military leaders, and a person he'd like to get to know better," said Williams. "He wants to explore with him how he thinks about subjects of common concern, much as he does with leaders of our allies and friends."

The reason that the Soviet delegation is spending as much time as it is at non-military places is to see the "cultural diversity" and "basic outlook" of mainstream America, U.S. officials report.

Admiral Crowe wants his visitors to see the extent to which independence and honesty are part of the cultural fabric of our country," said Williams.

Crowe is under no illusion about changing Soviet behavior with a single visit, U.S. officials emphasize. Explained Williams, "Admiral Crowe will be cautious and prudent. Everything the Soviets will see will be unclassified.

However, he believes strongly in the lessening of tensions and that military-to-military dialogue can help do that."

During their visit to Fort Hood, the Soviets will observe several combat systems of the U.S. III Corps to include the M-1 tank, Bradley Fighting Vehicle, and the AH-64 Apache helicopter. They will see an battalion live-fire exercise, a tank platoon attack supported by attack helicopters, an "urban terrain" training site, and have lunch in the field with U.S. soldiers.

The U.S. military establishment that the Soviets will see is not nearly as large as their own. The Soviet Union has many more personnel on active duty than does the United States more than 5.0 million in the U.S.S.R. compared to 2.1 million in the United States.

Also, the Soviet visitors will see an American society in which the military is much less present than it is in the Soviet Union. Between 15-17 percent of the U.S.S.R.'s total productivity (Gross National Product) is spent on defense compared with less than six percent in the United States. Plus 1.8 to 2 million Soviets are drafted annually into the armed services compared with about 290,000 Americans who voluntarily enlist.

Also, because Soviets remain officially on military reserve roles until age 50, the U.S.S.R. can call upon a tremendous pool of reservists in the event of mobilization nine million who have served on active duty in just the last five years compared with 1.6 million in all U.S. reserve component units.

In addition, 90 percent of the Soviet 9-14 year olds belong to the Young Pioneers where military and political training begins. All Soviet 15-17-year-olds take compulsory military training in high school, and Soviet military commanders serve prominently on city councils in areas where the armed forces are posted.

Soviet ground forces, for which Grinkevich is the deputy commander, are a very large, modern force consisting of 211 active divisions (not all of which are at full strength), 53,000 main battle tanks, 60,000 armored personnel carriers and infantry fighting vehicles, 4,500 helicopters, and 48,000 artillery pieces, mortars, and multiple rocket launchers.

Soviet ground forces also have very large chemical and airborne elements 45,000-60,000 chemical troops and seven airborne divisions.

Reserve

"The evaluation of the 70th Div. during the MATC was the first realistic evaluation of training of a Reserve training division at Benning.

The smiling new infantry soldiers and their families enjoyed the beautiful weather and proudly accepted the accolades presented to them, and they look forward to new challenges. Pvt. Keith E. Andrews Co. B, 2nd Bn., 333rd from Las Vegas Neveda, was one of the new soldiers. Reflecting back on the training, Andrews said, "I feel I have been well disciplined and trained. We were treated fairly. The training was demanding and rewarding."

The new soldiers now go to their next duty assignments and the 70th Div. members proudly return to Michigan,confident that they did the job and did it well.

"The 2nd Brigade of the 70th Division is now one of the very best training brigades in the USAR," Back said. "We have a way to go and, we're looking forward to coming back and doing this again."

Drinking during pregnancy harmful

American Forces Information Service

One of the better things a mother can do to ensure having a healthy baby is to avoid alcohol during pregnancy.

Physical and mental birth defects may result from drinking during pregnancy — known as fetal alcohol syndrome.

"Although most people are aware that drinking during pregnancy is harmful, they do not know how dangerous it can be. That, of course, applies across the board — to military members and their spouses as well as civilians," said Army Lt. Col. Antionette Hagey, senior program specialist for health promotion in the Office of the Assistant Secretary of Defense for Health Affairs.

According to the National Council on Alcoholism, at least 5,000 babies each year suffer from the syndrome, the leading cause of babies being born with mental retardation. Other signs of the syndrome are growth deficiencies, malformed organs and facial abnormalities. As many as 50,000 children may suffer a milder form of alcohol-related birth defects known as fetal alcohol effects — that is, they have some, but not all, of the symptoms of full-blown fetal alcohol syndrome.

In 1981, the U.S. surgeon general recommended that women who are pregnant or are considering pregnancy abstain from alcohol and be aware of the alcohol content in foods, beverages and medications. But health officials believe the public is not sufficiently aware of the effects of alcohol on their children's health. Therefore, the National Council on Alcoholism, a non-profit organization, is conducting a public awareness campaign together with other private and government health organizations.

Here are some facts provided by the council:

- There is no established safe dose of alcohol during pregnancy; nor does there appear to be a safe time to drink.
- Well-designed studies have linked an average of one to two drinks daily to decreased birthweight, growth abnormalities and behavioral problems in the newborn or infant.
- Although most of the public is aware drinking during pregnancy may damage the unborn child, one study found that one-third of the women interviewed believed that an average daily consumption of more than three drinks was safe during pregnancy.
- One in six women in the peak childbearing years of 18-34 may drink enough, either chronically or on occasion, to present a hazard to an unborn infant.
- Regular drinking is common among high school girls, and a sizable number engage in heavy drinking. Current studies show that teenagers are remarkably uninformed about the relationship between drinking during pregnancy and the high risk of bearing children with fetal alcohol syndrome or effects.
- Women's drinking problems may be more frequently misdiagnosed than men's. Most treatment programs do not provide child care, and women may not seek or continue treatment because of the difficulty of finding acceptable arrangements.

Adoption expenses reimbursable

Army News Service

Thanks to recently enacted legislation, military families who incur certain expenses for child adoption now may apply for reimbursement from the government.

According to Marilyn Keel of the U.S. Army Community and Family Support Center in Alexandria, Va., the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Years 1988-89 provides for a two-year pilot program for which the new policy may be tested.

"It allows active-component service members who initiate adoption proceedings during the period Sept. 30, 1987-Oct. 1, 1989, to recover up to $2,000 per child, the maximum reimbursement to one member being $5,000 in any calendar year, Keel explained. "Of course, the adopted child has to be under age 18, and the member may receive the reimbursement only upon showing that the adoption is final."

Adoption-minded families are being encouraged by Keel's office to save all receipts for expenses incurred during the reimbursement period.

Once the Defense Department and the Army develop instructions for processing applications, the Army plans to publish additional details, Keel said.

ately confessed to the taking and returned all of the money.

He was found guilty of the charge and sentenced to a forfeiture of $450 for six months, restriction for a period of two months, and hard labor without confinement for two months.

Pvt. 2 Anthony C. Bell, HHC, 2nd Bn., 69th Armor, plead guilty at a general court-martial to writing 17 worthless checks, possessing a false military identification card, going AWOL on three occasions and using cocaine. Bell wrote $2,100 in bad checks to the post exchange system during a 16-day period, then attempted to conceal the act by claiming his bank lost a $5,000 transfer to his account. Investigation by the CID indicated the transfer never took place.

Bell later went AWOL on three occasions, the last being terminated by apprehension. A urinalysis test conducted after his second AWOL detected the use of cocaine.

Finally, Bell was found guilty of possessing a false military ID having an altered birthdate putting him over the age required to buy alcoholic beverages.

Bell was found guilty of all charges, and he was sentenced to a bad conduct discharge, 36 months confinement, forfeiture of all pay and allowances, and reduction to Pvt. 1.

of the core cadre from the 70th Div. (Tng.) that ran the 3rd ITP.

"The 13-week cycle was a unique opportunity and challenge for me," said Rosin.

"It took about four weeks for the trainees to adjust. After they put aside their personal differences, our platoon became a team. The mission was made more difficult because, with the exception of the core cadre, we changed drill sergeants every two weeks. It would take the new drill sergeants a week to get to know their trainees. There was also a lot of pressure on us to perform because we were evaluated by the regular Army from first call to lights out," Rosin said.

Rosin's platoon was exceptional due in part to his tireless efforts and his ability to motivate. "You have to know what you are talking about when in front of the trainees. They pick up on mistakes. You have to have confidence and knowledge to impart confidence in the trainee. You have to say the right thing at the right time," he said.

The 3rd ITB measured out well when their scores were compared to their regular Army counterparts, falling along the medium of the preformance scale.

ASK THE JUDGE

By William F. Sutton Jr.
Staff Judge Advocate

Q: Following a long search for a good deal in Georgia, I finally bought a car in Alabama. I later discovered that Georgia was trying to charge a sales and use tax on my new car. Since I am a soldier and Georiga is not my home state, do I have to pay this tax?

A: Section 514 of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act says that non-business personal property shall not be taxed in a host state (a host state is the state where a soldier is stationed). There are, however, exceptions to this general rule. One exception is the sales and use tax.

A sales and use tax is not a tax on the value of property, like an ad valorem tax. Rather, the sales tax is a tax on the sale of the property, while the use tax is a tax on the use, storage or consumption of property. Since sales and use taxes are not on the property's value, a host state may use them to tax property purchased outside the state. Therefore, even though a soldier did not buy a new car in the host state, he must still pay the sales and use tax.

Since a host state can tax property using a sales and use tax, it is wise to keep records of sales and use taxes paid on major item purchases to avoid additional taxes. Ordinarily, a tax credit for the amount of sales tax paid will be given by a state which has a use tax.

For example, a soldier, stationed in state A (the host state), buys a new car in state B. State A charges the soldier $100 in use taxes while state B charges him $60 in sales taxes. State A allows a tax credit for sales taxes paid. Therefore, the soldier will only pay $40 in use taxes in state A. Whether this credit is given is a matter for each state to decide as there is no guarantee from the federal government that soldiers will receive this automatically.

CRIME STOPPERS

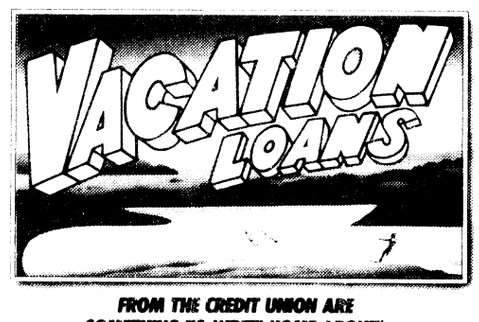
Columbus Crime Stoppers and the Columbus Police Department are looking for a black female who robbed Sears Cleaners on two occasions.

On May 12, the Columbus Police Department responded to an armed robbery call at Sears Cleaners. They discovered that at about 8:30 that morning a black woman came into the business wearing a mask and holding handgun.

The suspect made the manager go to the back of the store and lock herself in the backroom where she remained for about 15 minutes. When she came out, the suspect was gone along with a large amount of money from the cash register.

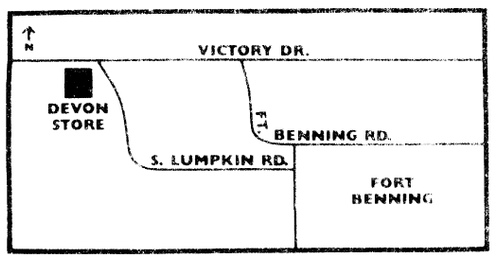
On May 24, the Columbus Police Department again responded to an armed robbery call at Sears Cleaners. They found that at around 7:35 that morning a black woman had entered the business carrying a handgun and made the manager lock herself in the bathroom and count to 100.

Later when she came out of the bathroom, the suspect was gone along with a large amount money from the cash register.



It is believed that the same person is responsible for both armed robberies. She is described as: Black,female, 24-30 years old, very thin build, 90-100 pounds, 5 feet 6 inches-5 feet 10 inches, black hair, dark complexion. On both occasions she was wearing faded blue jeans.

Anyone having information concerning this individual or this case, should call Columbus Crime Stoppers at 571-5858. If your information leads to the arrest and indictment, the caller could receive up to $1,000 in reward money.



Columbus Crime Stoppers also pays for information on other criminal activity, wanted fugitives and stolen property. The Crime Stoppers phone lines are open from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. Monday through Friday. Crime Stoppers serves the Columbus, Fort Benning, Phenix City and Russell County areas.

SPIRITUAL

30 OSUT soldiers baptized at spiritual gathering

By Jo Ann Stamey
USAIC Chaplain's Office

"The formation of this nation has directly relied on the guidance she received from her religious heritage."

Those were the words of Chap. (Capt.) Steve Paschall as he opened a patriotic and spiritual gathering at the Sand Hill Theater for the soldiers of the 1st ITB recently.

What a great way to celebrate the nation's 212th birthday — with more than 1,300 OSUT soldiers who have — by their own choice — "sworn to protect and defend the constitution of the United States of America, so help me, God."

The enthusiasm and patriotic and spiritual feelings of these young soldiers constantly reverberated around the theater.

The Cornerstones, a quartet from Columbus, sang a variety of religious songs and had the soldiers clapping and singing along.

CSM Sidney Raspberry, 1st Bn., 54th Inf., 1st ITB, gave a beautiful rendition of the Star Spangled Banner, and the Soldiers Choir from the 1st ITB sang several patriotic songs, to inlcude "The Battle Hymn of the Republic."

After the service, the audience moved to the Duck Pond at Sand Hill where about 30 soldiers were baptized by Chap. Paschall and Chap. (1st. Lt.) Tom Wheatley.

This service touched on all the things that are important to us as Americans. With the grace of God and the soldiers who have committed themselves to be the protectors of our nation, we will be able to sing the last verse of "My Country Tis of Thee" with pride and conviction.

"Our fathers' God to thee, author of liberty, to thee I sing; Long may our land be bright, with freedom's holy light; Protect us by thy might, Great God, our King."

Uncommon strength in face of problems is testimonial

By Loran C. Bulla
1st Battalion, 58th Infantry
197th Infantry Brigade Chaplain

One of the great testimonials to Christian living is found in the repeated example of believers receiving uncommon strength to face some difficult problems in life. We hear and read of such stories often, and the Bible is a tremendous record of such experiences.

In order to have this kind of strength in our lives, it may first be helpful to develop an understanding of this provision. I think there are several pillars to this strength.

One such pillar is found in the believer's hope that regardless of what the present circumstance may be, one day God is going to make things better and will remove all suffering from us (Revelations 21:4).

Although this hope is often referred to as "pie in the sky bye and bye," do not underestimate how powerful it can be. Many people have endured terrible afflictions knowing what they could expect beyond them. Jesus Himself held this great hope as He faced death (Hebrews 12:2).

"God is going to make things better and will remove all suffering from us."

A second pillar to this strength is found in what God will do in order to provide more immediate relief. As a chaplain, I spend much time working with people who are looking for some way to change the circumstances in their lives. Sometimes precious little can be done to deal with the outward problem. In such a case the individual might despair. But does it have to be that way? The scripture seems pretty clear that in a time of need, we can find some strength even joy with which to face the problem! (Philippians 4:19)

The key to discovering this joy is found in understanding that our happiness is not to be tied to the outward circumstance.

I recently heard a radio preacher put it like this: "It's not how the winds blow or the rains fall. It's not how life comes at us. It's more a matter of how we come at life. In this way, happiness comes more as the result of the kind of foundation in life we have, the resources available to us and the kind of roots we have."

The radio preacher is hinting that through a personal fellowship with Christ, we come into possession of these inner qualities. This means that when the storm of life comes upon us, happiness does not necessarily fly out the window. Instead, through that fellowship with the Lord we might turn to Him and discover that certain strength that will help us come through with joy.

Do you possess this kind of strength with which to face life? If not, let me encourage you to nurture your relationship with the Lord. Practice those things that make for a healthy faith. Spend time in the Bible reading about how others found strength. Then when the time comes, you will find the strength you need.

Sessions focus on parenting

By Jo Ann Stamey
USAIC Chaplain's Office

Improving relationships between parents and teenagers will be the focus of a series of discussion sessions at the Chaplains' Family Life Center.

The discussions will be held Thursday, 2 to 4 p.m., in building 2606 (upstairs). They will be based on Systematic Training for Effective Parenting of Teens (STEP/TEEN) and will run for seven weeks.

Our community's interest in parenting education is part of a nationwide trend. Discussion materials that include "The Parent's Guide," which have helped parents throughout the country to communicate better with their teenagers will be used. Some of the topics are:

- Understanding behavior and misbehavior.
- Understanding the emotions of parents and teens.
- Encouragement.
- Skills for listening.
- Exploring alternatives and expressing your ideas and feelings to teenagers
- Developing responsibility.
- Selecting the appropriate approach to discipline situations.
- The family meeting.
- Special challenges and developing confidence.

The discussion group offers parents a chance to share experiences, meet new people and have an enjoyable time while learning and practicing new ways of relating their teenagers.

To register, call the Chaplains' Family Life Center at 545-5301.

U.S. regulars and volunteers of the Niagara Campaign.

From the War of 1812:

'Those are regulars, by God'

Ann Genders

U.S. Army battlefield cemetery discovered near Fort Erie at Snake Hill

By Joseph W. A. Whitehorne
Special to The Bayonet

On July 3, 1814, a force of combined U.S. regulars and volunteer militia stationed near Buffalo, New York crossed the Niagara River under the leadership of Maj. Gen. Jacob Brown. Fort Erie, Canada was captured the same day, and the well-disciplined force quickly turned northward. The American forces were confronted by a slightly smaller British force at Chippewa on July 5. The advance into battle of the well-trained Americans of Brig. Gen. Winfield Scott's brigade prompted the British commander, Brig. Gen. Phineas Riall, to observe, "Those are regulars, by God," an epithet of continuing pride in the U.S. Army.

Riall was forced back into Fort George on Lake Ontario, Canada where Brown attempted to besiege him. When this proved impossible, Brown withdrew to Chippewa. A few days later, Riall and reinforcements under Gen. Sir Gordon Drummon advanced southward. On July 25, the two forces collided a mile west of Niagara Falls in a ferocious engagement at Lundy's Lane. Both sides suffered heavily, and the Americans fell back to Fort Erie.

American troops began a strenuous around-the-clock effort to reinforce their defenses. Eventually, they built a palisade enclosing a 15-acre area around the old fort. Within this, more than 3,000 troops, five artillery batteries and their animals dug in to resist an expected British assault.

Drummond and his forces closed in by Aug. 2 and immediately began to prepare their positions. The first British guns began firing on the Americans on Aug. 7. However, it soon became apparent to Drummond that U.S. control of the water route to supplies in Buffalo precluded his ability to strangle slowly the U.S. garrison, as was customary in a siege.

So, in the early hours of Aug. 15, Drummond launched a three-column night attack on the Americans. This was repulsed disastrously with 1,000 British casualties in comparison to about 90 Americans.

The British then settled into a steady bombardment of the entrenched Americans. The Fort Erie enclosure received 300-500 rounds a day.

At the same time, the British built their siege lines with new batteries coming ever closer to the American positions. Each side suffered more casualties as infantry patrols grappled with each other in no-man's land. Brown realized that this continued slow encroachment could be fatal. Consequently, he launched a sortie on Sept. 17, which wrecked two of the three British siege batteries.

A violent British counterattack forced the Americans back into Fort Erie, each side losing about 800 casualties. The sortie and Drummond's declining supply situation forced him and his soldiers to withdraw to Chippewa, thus lifting the siege. The two forces, however, continued to skirmish with each other for several more weeks.

Finally, worsening winter weather led the American commander, Brown's replacement, Maj. Gen. George Izard, on Nov. 5, to abandon Fort Erie and withdraw to the United States, thus ending the campaign.

Fallen soldiers of 1812 to be reburied in U.S.

Army News Service

After 174 years, the remains of 28 American soldiers came home June 30 to a final resting place in New York's Bath National Cemetery.

During a ceremony complete with full military honors, the U.S. Army paid final respects to those who died during the 1814 Siege of Fort Erie, Canada.

Last year, the remains surfaced during construction on a lot at Fort Erie, Ontario. Later identified as American troops from the War of 1812, the remains came to symbolize something more than war dead of another era.

Instead, they were seen as patriots deserving a place of honor.

The reinterment area bears a monument dedicated by Wilfred L. Ebel, who heads memorial affairs for the U.S. Veterans Administration.

"This monument will serve as a reminder of that great gift that God and our courageous veterans have given us, the gift of freedom," Ebel said.

Ebel continued, "Though we know little of what these soldiers endured, we know their lot was not easy. Though we cannot document their individual heroics, we know they persisted bravely in defense of their patriotism."

In the spirit of military tradition, the ceremony included a traditional gun salute by members of Washington's 3rd U.S. Infantry (The Old Guard). Then a lone bugler played "Taps."

Chap. (Col.) Daniel J. Donahue, who had traveled from Headquarters, U.S. Army Military District of Washington, gave the eulogy. Maj. Gen. Donald W. Jones, commander, U.S. Total Army Personnel Agency in Alexandria, Va., received the American flag draping one of the 28 coffins.

Throughout the ceremony, participants shared one thought: Though nameless, these veterans long will be remembered.

Water customers advised of potential health hazard

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Fort Benning is required by law to advise all water customers about the potential health hazards associated with exposure to lead in the drinking water.

Although the quality of the drinking water leaving the Fort Benning water treatment plant wells is in compliance with the national drinking water standard for lead, Fort Benning is still required to issue this notice. Please read carefully.

Lead is a toxic metal known to be harmful to human health if inhaled or ingested. Although it has been used in numerous consumer products, we must be concerned about our level of exposure to lead in our environment, including drinking water.

Potential sources of lead exposure to humans include: air, soil and dust (both inside and outside the home); food, which can be contaminated by lead in the air or in food containers; and water (from the corrosion of plumbing).

The United States Environmental Protection Agency sets drinking water standards and has determined that lead is a health concern at certain levels of exposure. There is currently a standard of 0.050 parts per million. Based on new health information, EPA is likely to lower this standard significantly.

Part of the purpose of this notice is to inform you of the potential adverse health effects of lead. This is being done even though your water may not be in violation of the current standard.

EPA and others are concerned about lead in drinking water. Too much lead in the human body can cause serious damage to the brain, kidney, nervous system and red blood cells. The greatest risk, even with short-term exposure, is to young children and pregnant women.

Lead levels in your drinking water are likely to be highest:

- If your home or water system has lead pipes.
- If your home or water system has copper pipes with lead solder.
- If your home is less than 5 years old.
- If the water is soft or acidic.
- If the water sits in the pipes for several hours.

Lead may get into your water after the water leaves the local treatment plant or well. Thus, the most likely source of lead contamination in your drinking water is the pipe or solder in your home's plumbing. The most common cause is corrosion, a reaction between the water and the lead pipes or solder. The longer water stands in the pipes, the greater the potential of lead dissolving into the water. Soft water, which lathers soap easily, tends to accelerate the corrosion process, resulting in increased levels of dissolved lead in the water. The practice of grounding electrical equipment, such as telephones, to water pipes also increases corrosion. Any electric current traveling through the ground wire will accelerate the corrosion of lead in the pipes. (CAUTION: do not remove wires from pipes unless a qualified electrician installs an adequate grounding system.)

Up through the early 1900s, it was common practice to use lead pipes for interior plumbing and service connections. Plumbing installed before 1930 is most likely to contain lead. Since then, copper pipes have replace lead pipes in most residential plumbing; however, the usage of lead solder to join copper pipes is widespread. It is regarded that this lead solder is the major cause of lead contamination of household water in U.S homes today. Recently, it has been required by federal law to use lead-free solder and lead-free materials in new household plumbing and for plumbing repairs.

It has been determined that the newer the home, the greater the risk of lead contamination. Lead levels decrease as a building ages because, as the minerals in water deposit on the inside of the pipes, direct contact of water with the lead solder is prevented.

Lead dissolved in water cannot be seen, tasted or smelled. Having your water tested by a competent laboratory is the only sure way of telling whether there are harmful quantities of lead in your drinking water.

Be suspicious, particularly if your home plumbing has lead material (lead is a dull-gray metal that is soft enough to be easily scratched with a house key) and your non-plastic plumbing is less than 5 years old.

Testing is especially important to apartment dwellers where flushing may not be effective in high-rise buildings that have lead soldered central piping. Contact your local water supplier for assistance in locating a laboratory qualified to analyze drinking water samples for lead contamination.

If you determine or suspect that your household water contains high levels of dissolved lead, there are ways to minimize your exposure to lead.

Avoid consuming water that has been in contact with your home's plumbing for several hours, such as overnight or during your work day. Before using water for drinking or cooking, "flush" the cold water faucet by allowing the water to run until you can feel that the water has become as cold as it will get. If there has recently been major water use in the household, such as showering or bathing, flushing toilets or doing laundry with cold water, flushing the pipes should take 5 to 30 seconds: if not, flushing the pipes could take as long as a minute.

Avoid cooking with, or consuming, water from the hot water faucet. Hot water dissolves lead more quickly than cold water. Avoid water taken from the hot-water faucet for making baby formula. If you need hot water for cooking or for any consumption, draw water only from the flushed cold water tap and heat it.

Ensure that only lead-free solder and led-free materials are used in new household plumbing and plumbing repairs.

For additonal information concerning reducing your exposure to lead, contact your water supplier. At the present time, the water supplied to the public has no known lead content in excess of the national drinking water standard. It is not necessary that additional steps be taken to achieve compliance with the regulations.

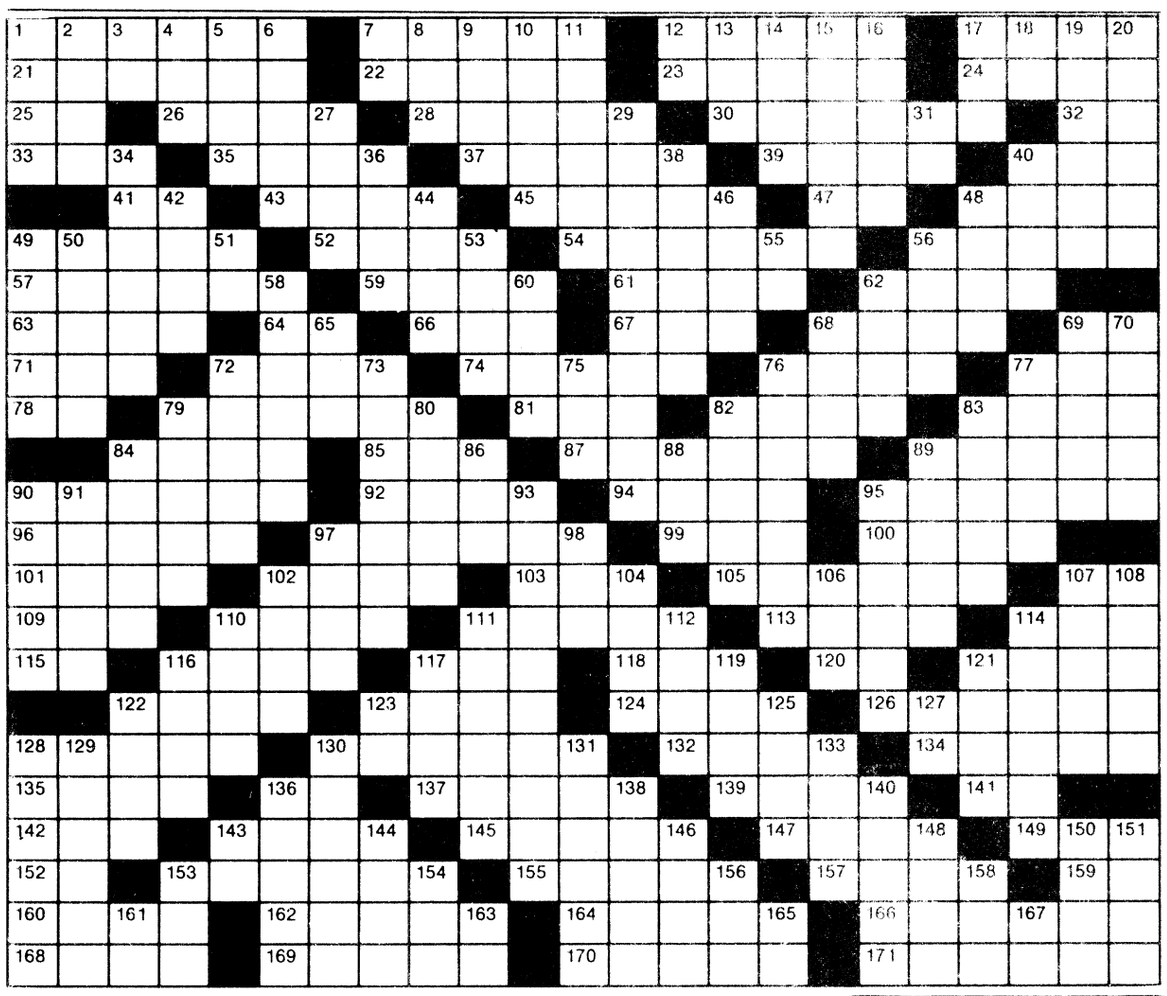
Wise use of appliances helps save post energy

By Becky Ray
Energy Management Office

In the United States, 30 percent of the electrical energy used is in households. From the 1950s to the late 1970s, household electrical demand grew by an average of 2 percent per year due to the increase in electrical appliances. Although these appliances may make our lives more comfortable, using them wisely can cut energy waste substantially.

SAVE ARMY ENERGY

Many appliances use a surprising amount of electricity over a year. The chart below will give you some idea of the electrical use of some common appliances. The yearly cost is computed using 8 cents per kilowatt-hour.



Appliance	Average Watts	Kilowatts per year	Yearly cost
Clothes dryer	4856	990	$ 79.20
Coffee maker	1200	140	$ 11.20
Dishwasher	1200	324	$ 25.92
Freezer (15 cu ft)	440	1760	$140.80
Garbage disposer	445	30	$ 2.40
Hair dryer	1200	52	$ 4.16
Humidifier	177	163	$ 13.04
Microwave oven	1450	190	$ 15.20
Refrigerator	615	1830	$146.20
Stereo	100	37	$ 2.96
Stove	12,200	1175	$ 94.00
Television	200	440	$ 35.20
Toaster	1145	40	$ 3.20
Vacuum cleaner	630	46	$ 3.68
Washing machine	512	103	$ 8.24
Water heater	4500	6000	$480.00

By using electrical appliances only when necessary, washing only full loads in washing machines and dishwashers, and using cold water instead of hot for most purposes, we can save substantial amounts of electriciy in our homes.

With, 4,083 housing units at Fort Benning, a concerted effort to eliminate energy waste by all housing residents would mean great gains to the entire installation in meeting our conservation goals.

SNAPSHOTS: Recruiting

Army News Service

Since July 1, 1973, more than 2.2 million soldiers have been recruited for the Regular Army and 600,000 for the Army Reserve.

USAREC has 7,320 Regular Army and 1,780 U.S. Army Reserve recruiters on "production" status.

The 00R recruiter selection rate for E-7 last year was 96.6 percent in the primary zone and 95.2 percent in the secondary zone. (The Army selection rate was 17.7 percent in the primary zone; 7.2 percent in the secondary zone.)

In fiscal year 1987, USAREC recruited 133,000 soldiers for the Regular Army and 65,274 for the Army Reserve.

Last year, 91 percent of the Regular Army's non-prior service enlistees and 95 percent of Army Reserve enlistees were high school graduates.

Cypress Garden plans Labor Day salute to Armed Forces

Cypress Gardens

A variety of special shows and activities will highlight Cypress Gardens' Labor Day Weekend festivities, Sept. 3-5.

Performances by the United States Army Parachute Team, the Golden Knights, will close out the park's summer-long salute to the Armed Forces. The Golden Knights will give two daily performances over Lake Eloise, executing team and individual free-fall maneuvers from heights of 12,500 feet. They are the Army's official aerial demonstration team and have won more than 70 world and national free-fall championships.

Air Dancin', Cypress Gardens' high-flying summer entertainment show, draws to a close on Sept. 5.

Through Labor Day, active military personnel can purchase Cypress Gardens tickets on-base at a 50-percent discount or receive a 15-percent discount on admission at the park's ticket gate upon presentation of a valid military identification card. Regular admission to Cypress Gardens is $16.95 for adults and $11.50 for children ages 3-11.

Cypress Gardens, Florida's Original Showplace," is located 45 minutes southwest of Sea World, off U.S. 27, near Winter Haven.

More than two-thirds of last year's non-prior service Regular Army enlistees scored in the upper half of the Armed Forces Qualification Test; 71 percent of the USAR enlistees scored in the upper half.

In 1980, only 54 percent of RA enlistees were high school graduates and only 25 percent scored in the upper half on the AFQT.

No recruits are accepted with scores in scores lower than 26 on the AFQT in either the Regular Army or the Army Reserve.

Non-high school graduates are twice as likely to receive an Article 15 or court-martial and twice as likely to be discharged without completing their initial term of service.

The "Be All You Can Be" advertising campaign began on Dec. 29, 1980.

Follow these tips for a safe picnic

By Evelyn D. Harris
American Forces Information Service

For most people, the word "picnic" evokes fond memories — good food, good friends, games and music shared in a beautiful outdoor setting. But anyone who has gotten sick from eating improperly handled food may not have such glowing memories.

A little planning before the picnic is the best way to ensure that food is safe, as well as tasty. Here are some tips from military and Department of Agriculture food safety experts.

•When shopping for food, buy perishable items such as meat last. Get them into a refrigerator or portable cooler as soon as possible. Never leave perishables in a hot car while you run other errands.

•If you are going to use perishable food, quickly refrigerate it. Otherwise, freeze it.

•Don't thaw meat on the counter. Thaw in the refrigerator or in your microwave oven. If meat is not completely defrosted when you're ready to leave, just cook it longer at the picnic.

•Cook everything thoroughly. Cook pork chops and ribs until the pink is gone; poultry should have no red near the bone. Steak and hamburger are safer when cooked until well-done.

•Clean your hands before cooking and after tasting. If there's no water faucet, use disposable handwipes. Don't reuse the same utensils and dishes that touched raw meat for serving.

•Keep hot foods above 140 degrees and cold foods below 45 degrees Fahrenheit. Invest in a thermometer to check temperature range.

•The high-acid content of commercial mayonnaise actually helps protect foods from spoiling. But homemade mayonnaise, if made without vinegar or lemon juice, could be risky.

•Keep food covered to avoid exposing it to flies and common bacteria.

•If you were gone no more than five hours and your perishables were kept on ice except when cooked and served, you may be able to save the leftovers. But if you have any doubts about a food, throw it out.

Wild plants can be eaten, but use this test first

American Forces Information Service

Summertime and the camping is easy.

But sometimes, backpackers get lost and have to depend on the plants in the region for food. You can eat some plants safely, while others can kill you. How can you tell the difference?

According to SSgt. Charles H. Cunningham, an instructor at the Air Force Survival School, Fairchild Air Force Base, Wash., there is an edibility test.

One basic rule is to test only one plant at a time. That way, if there is any abnormality, you know for sure which plant caused it.

First, crush or break the plant and look at the color of the sap. If the sap is clear, milky or a sensitive area, such as the inside of the lip of the tongue. If there are no ill effects — such as burning, stinging, bitterness or numbing — move to the preparation step.

Boil the plant or plant part at least five minutes in two changes of water. The toxic properties of many plants are water-soluble or destroyed by heat. By boiling the plant in two changes of water, you can lessen or remove toxins.

Next, place one tablespoon of the preparation in your mouth for five minutes and chew, but don't swallow it. If you have no obvious side effect, then swallow and wait eight hours.

If after the allotted time there is no sign of nausea, diarrhea or cramps, eat two tablespoons; and wait another eight hours. If there are no ill effects at the end of that time, you can consider the plant edible.

Fairchild officials recommend that you research edible plants before you venture into the wilderness. In a survival situation, knowing the difference between edible and inedible plants is critical.

Here are some tips on them:

•Avoid mushrooms and fungi.

•Avoid plants with umbrella-shaped flowers.

•Avoid all the legume family (beans and peas) because they absorb minerals from the soil.

•Avoid plant bulbs.

•Plants with shiny leaves are generally poisonous.

•A milky sap indicates a poisonous plant.

•White and yellow berries are almost always poisonous. Almost half of all red berries are also poisonous. Blue or black berries are generally safe to eat.

•Don't eat plants that irritate the skin — such as poison ivy.

1988 Soldier Show takes to the road

Army News Service

The 1988 Army Soldier Show, "All You Can Be and More," heads for the Pacific next week for a 30-day tour.

The Soldier Show carries on the tradition of entertainment "for the soldier by the soldier" established in World War I by Irving Berlin.

This year's show is even funded by soldiers for soldiers. The Soldier Show's 179-day, worldwide tour is being paid for from non-appropriated funds — money spent by soldiers and their families in morale-support activities. This is the first time that the tour has been paid for entirely with soldier dollars.

The 1988 tour includes 20 military installations in the continental U.S. and numerous locations in Hawaii, Japan, Okinawa, Johnston Island and Korea.

The cast and crew are made up entirely of active duty soldiers representing ten of the Army's major commands. These part-time entertainers were selected by audition from hundreds of finalists and represent the entire cross-section of Army occupational specialties.

They're entertainers now, but at the end of their tour in September, they'll return to infantry, armor, artillery and every other kind of unit in the Army's inventory.

Audiences will find big production numbers like "One," from "A Chorus Line" mixed with country and popular selections ranging from "Orange Blossom Special" to Michael Jackson's "Man in the Mirror," dance sequences from the recent movie hit "Dirty Dancing," comedy routines and soldier-authored selections.

While the 1988 tour moves toward its climax, auditions are already in full swing around the Army to select the cast for the 1989 Soldier Show, which is scheduled to kick off in February at Fort Knox, Ky.

Soldiers interested in auditioning for a spot in the 1989 Soldier Show cast should contact their local entertainment or recreation center directly.

Thomas returns from wrestling tour

By Shawn Bryson
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning's SFC Tony Thomas is 5 feet 8 inches tall and weighs 165 pounds. His hobby is throwing people around, and there are few in this land who are better at it.

Thomas is the 1988 U.S. Open Greco-Roman Wrestling Champion in the 163-pound weight class. Thomas won the April competition at Cedar Rapids, Iowa by defeating the U.S. Navy's Dave Butler, the three-time defending champion.

After three previous trips the U.S. Open, the best of which brought him a third-place finish, Thomas had no real trouble with his opponents this year. "I beat everyone 15-0 except for the last two matches," Thomas explained.

Thomas, who is a senior instructor at the Bradley Infantry Detachment of the 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry, feels that part of his success at the championships can be attributed to a month of training in Europe with one of the world's best wrestlers. "In September of '87 I trained with Clauldio Passerelli who was fourth at the World Championships," Thomas said. "I wrestled a few matches at that time, but they were mainly for the training. That helped my wrestling a lot."

Being the national champion, Thomas felt he had a super shot at fulfilling his greatest goal as a wrestler, representing the U.S. in the Olympics and ultimately winning a gold medal.

Thomas did serve as an alternate at the 1984 Olympics. But, that wasn't enough for the man who'd been dreaming of the Olympics since he started wrestling as a 98 pounder in high school.

At the 1988 Greco-Roman Wrestling Final Olympic Qualifications, Thomas was seeded number one in his class. To his dismay, however, Thomas was knocked out of the competition early.

"There was nothing I could do about it, but I really felt like I lost because of bad calls by the referee," Thomas commented. "In Greco-Roman Wrestling, three cautions means you're out. I got two cautions early in the match for fleeing the mat. I just didn't agree with that. Later, I got the last one," he said. "I can't blame it all on the ref though. I went in seeded number one, and I guess I felt like I wouldn't have to work to make the Olympic team; but I was wrong."

Shawn Bryson

Viewers won't see Thomas in this year's Olympics. In fact, Thomas said that he has considered making this his last year as a wrestler. "There are times when people put so much into something only to be disappointed, and one reaction is to quit what they're doing," Thomas explained. "This might be my last year in wrestling but I'm not sure yet. Even if it is, I have a lot of great memories about my nine years as a wrestler."

Water workouts help beat the summer heat

By Dick Kazmaier
Fitness Forum

Now that summer is here, our thoughts turn to vacations, barbeques, relaxation, and fun in the sun. Swimming is one way to stay in shape, beat the heat and have fun.

This cardiorespiratory, "aerobic," form of exercise is one of the most popular activities in the United States. Whether you chose to swim laps, take an "aqua dynamics" class, or design your own series of water exercises, you'll find working out in water to be a safe, effective and enjoyable way to maintain your fitness levels through the coming months.

In order to achieve and maintain the benefits of exercise, you must do more than just jump in the water, wade around and get back out. Your water workout must follow the main principles of a workout - warmup, 20-30 minutes of vigorous "aerobic" activity, and a cooldown. Supplement this with muscle strengthening and stretching exercises and you'll have a well-rounded program to improve your heart/lung (aerobic) endurance, muscle strength and endurance, flexibility and help keep your weight under control.

Swimming laps is one of the most popular ways of exercising in the water. Large pools, lakes and even the ocean, are great as long as the lap distance you choose is easily marked and free of such "traffic" as boats, buoys and people who are not swimming laps with you. The continuous movement back and forth, combining a variety of strokes or maintaining one steady pace stroke, will keep your heart rate elevated and give you a good aerobic workout.

Many people who do not enjoy lap swimming are enrolling in "aqua aerobic" classes. With music in the background, these classes are often led by an instructor who stays poolside to lead the class through continuous movements similar to those done in a regular aerobic class. For those who cannot withstand the impact of aerobics, running and other activities, lap swimming or water aerobics can minimize their chance of injury while providing a vigorous workout.

Lastly, there are many different exercises you can do in the water on your own to get a good workout, and you need not venture into deep water. Holding on to the side of the pool and kicking your legs, treading water, jumping in place, and running or walking laps in the waist-deep water are just a few of the many creative ways to work out in water. The resistive nature of the water itself against your muscles contributes to the muscular tone benefits of water exercise, and the movement itself helps increase flexibility.

Before starting your summer swimming program, here are a few tips you should consider:

- Check with your doctor if you're just starting an exercise program, are overweight, or if you have any medical problems you feel need attention.
- Start slowly and gradually increase the intensity and duration of your workout.
- Never swim alone. Even the most experienced swimmer should swim in the presence of a life guard, friends or other adult.
- Avoid swimming directly after eating. Give your body at least two hours to digest your food. When exercise and digestion compete for oxygen muscle cramps may result.

With a little knowledge, a positive outlook and a safe place to work out, exercising in the water can be a great way to keep cool and stay in shape this summer.

Summertime means top water fishing

By Earl Bentz and Steve Price
1988 Outboard Marine Corp.

To many anglers, summertime bass fishing means topwater action. To them, nothing can match the excitement of seeing a big largemouth's explosive strike right at boatside.

As these very same anglers can attest, however, even the fishiest-looking places — the quiet coves with stumps, stickups and brushtops — often fail to produce a single strike. At other times, the bass do hit, but they continually strike short, making it difficult to get a hook in one.

"There's no question topwater fishing is fun and exciting," says Evinrude Outboards Pro Staff member Tom Mann Jr., "but it is often a little more difficult than many fishermen realize. To be really effective, a topwater lure should be used to finesse a bass into striking, and the fish itself will nearly always tell you how he wants that lure presented."

Mann, who fishes a lot of topwater lures on Lake Lanier north of Atlanta where he lives, believes one of the keys to using topwater lures successfully is for the angler to vary his speed of retrieve until he does something the bass likes.

"In many instances," he explains, "a very slow, deliberate retrieve is the best one, but not always. Sometimes, the best way to draw a strike on a topwater lure is to skip it back across the surface as fast as you can, making it look like a jumping shad trying to escape a larger fish.

"Other times, the best retrieve may actually be no retrieve at all. In the spring when smallmouth are spawning, for example, the best way to use a topwater lure can be to let it sit absolutely motionless after it lands. About 20 seconds later, you'll get a hammering strike that all but scares you to death."

On calm, clear days, Mann likes to use a large topwater plug he can sashay side to side back to the boat with a steady retrieve. He concentrates on long bars and points out in the main lake, and tries to bring the lure close to any existing cover.

The lure is worked with both the rod tip and the reel. A steady rhythm is needed, with the rod tip held down and twitched continuously as the reel is turned.

"Getting this rhythm so the lure 'walks' across the water is difficult," says Mann, "and requires a lot of practice. When I do it, I prefer a six-foot, medium-to-heavy action rod, with a flexable tip and I use 14-pound test line.

"A lot of bass will come up and strike, and frequently you'll even see them following behind. When this happens, don't stop your retrieve. Just keep it coming, even though your heart will probably be beating doubletime. Even if the fish strikes and misses, don't stop retrieving. Most of the time a bass will come right back and strike again."

When bass repeatedly miss the lure or "strike short," Mann recommends trying a 12- to 14-inch piece of monofilament line (also 14-pound test) to the lure's rear hook and rigging it with a 1/16-ounce jig or leadhead hook and tube worm. As you work the lure over the surface, the bass will begin to hit the jig or worm rather than the topwater lure itself.

"If the bass aren't really taking your topwater lure," notes the Evinrude Outboards pro, "it may be time to switch to a smaller lure. Try tying on a little chugger or popper and working it the same way."

Topwater lures can also be effective in rough, windy water. The most effective lures for these conditions, believes Mann, are the "prop baits," those topwater lures with propellers on them. These are fished with short jerks across the water, so the lure buzzes and churns for two or three feet, then stops, then suddenly takes off again.

"Two important things to remember about fishing topwater lures," says Mann, "are that you'll always do better when you fish very close to cover, and that your strikes will often come very quickly after the lure hits.

"When you fish topwater lures you're going after bass that are feeding by sight rather than by sound, so try to make long casts to avoid spooking the fish. You're also fishing for potentially larger bass, too, so be prepared to set the hook hard when you do get a strike."

One place Mann really likes to fish topwater lures is around rock riprap. Here his lure choice is a floating minnow imitation, which he twitches very slowly around the rocks. He tries to make his casts parallel to the riprap, and works depths down to four or five feet.

Grass is another place Mann

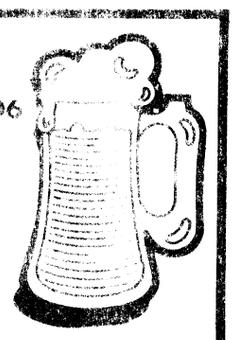
Four Army boxers qualify for Olympic Team

Army News Service

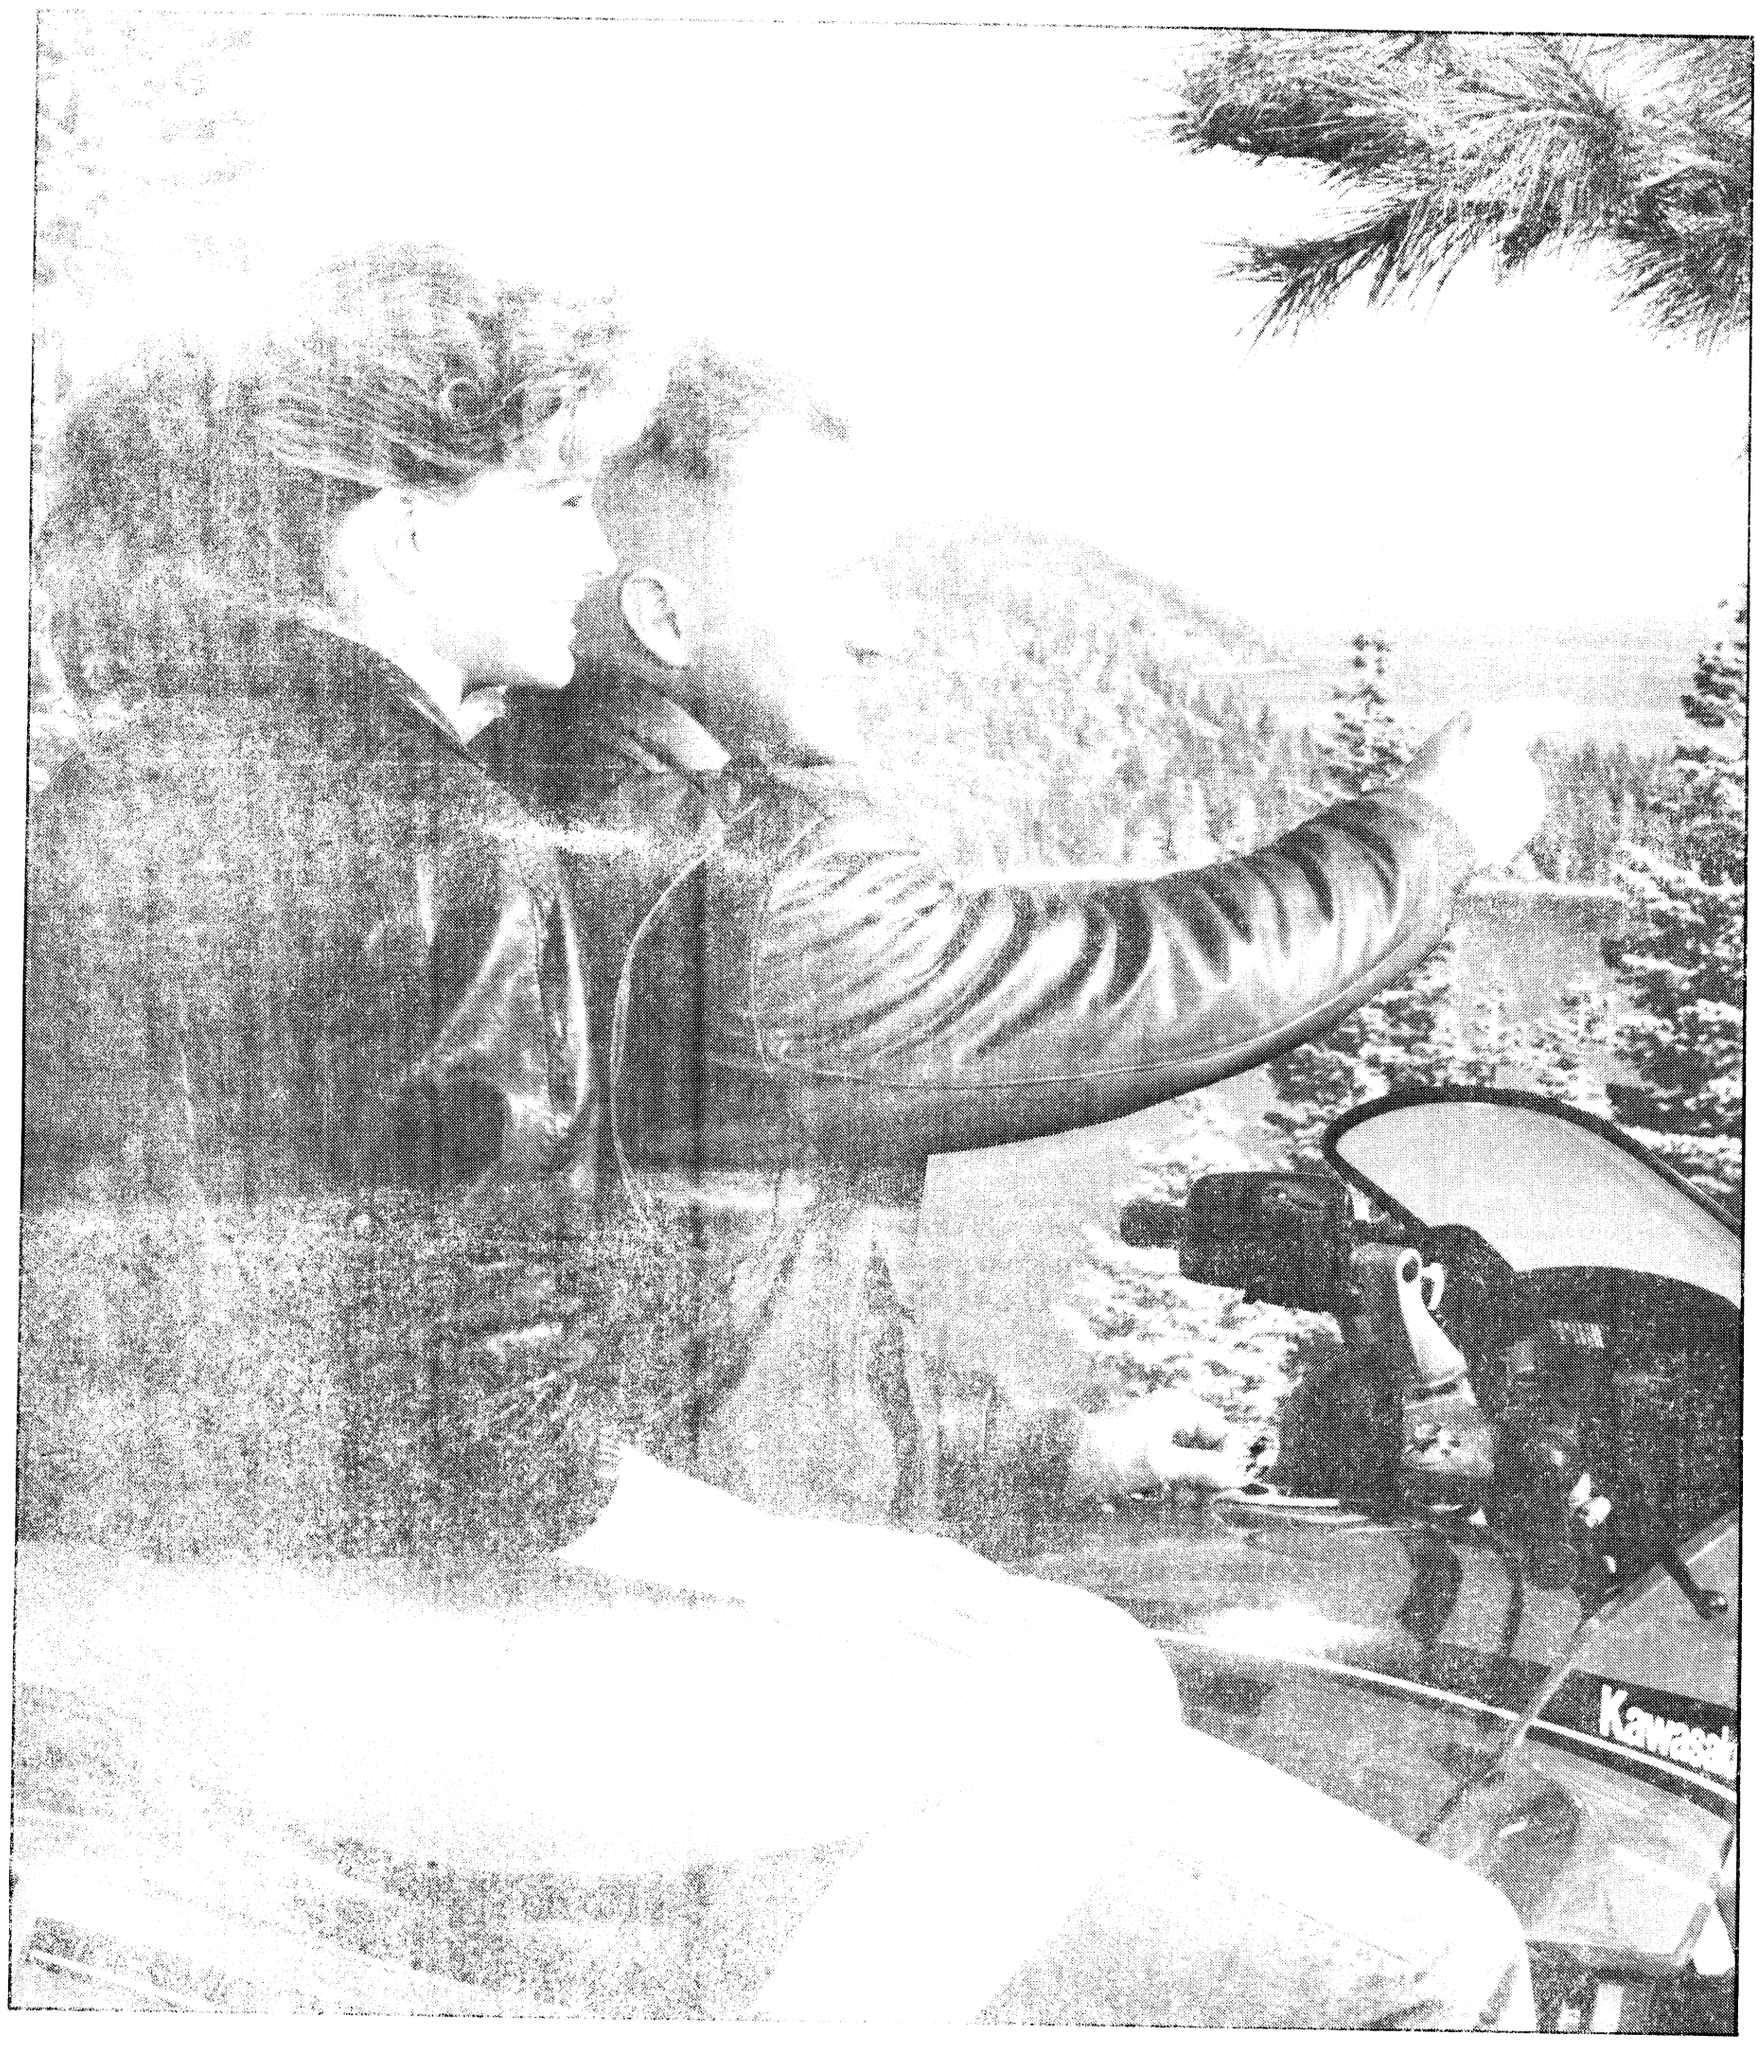
Four Army boxers, including one reservist, qualified for the U.S. Olympic team by winning their weight divisions in the final box-off at Caesar's Palace July 16-17.



Anthony Hembrick of Fort Bragg, N.C., qualified in the middleweight division on a walkover.

In the heavyweight division, Ray Mercer of Baumholder, Germany, pounded out a 3-2 split decision over Michael Bent of Cambria Heights, New York.

Army reservist Kennedy McKinney, a 119-pound bantamweight who calls Killeen, Texas home, won his final bout. McKinney, the 1987 All-Army and Armed Forces champ, beat another Texan, Michael Collins of La Porte, on a 4-1 decision, avenging his previous day's loss to Collins.



Anthony Maynard, a specialist assigned to the 4th Infantry Division at Fort Carson, Colo., decisioned Anthony Cole, another Army boxer from Fort Hood, Texas. After losing to Cole in the Olympic trials, Maynard came back to win the second bout to qualify.

Mullins braces himself for the next clay pigeon during the 1988 Interservice Skeet Championship.

By Tommy Pool
USAMU Public Affairs Office

SFC Alger Mullins of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit, scored a dramatic shoot-off victory to win this year's Interservice Skeet Championship in matches held at Fort Benning, July 8 through 10.

More than 40 of the military's top international skeet competitors participated in the annual matches and included teams representing the U.S. Marine Corps, Army Reserve, Air Force and U.S. Army.

In the race for the individual title, Mullins and Army Reservist, Sgt. Dean Clark, waged a battle for the lead throughout the [illegible] championship event.

On the final day of competition, both individuals finished the regulation event tied with 294 out of 300 targets, forcing an additional round of 25 targets to break the tie.

In the ensuing shoot-off, both competitors fired a perfect 25 straight to send the championship into another 25-target round.

Mullins prevailed to win the individual championship with another perfect round of 25, while Clark finished with 24 out of 25 and second place.

Third place in the individual championship was won by USAMU's SSgt. Joe Dickson with 288 out of 300, while teammate SSgt. Richard Haynie finished in a two-way tie for fourth position at 287.

[illegible] service team as [illegible] members of the U.S. Air Force squad rushed to win the overall championship with a total of 433 out of 450, to narrowly edge the U.S. Army "Blue" squad by two targets to finish at 431.

The U.S. Army Reserve squad finished third in the team event with 429 targets, to round out the three top-scoring teams.

Members of the silver-medal winning Army "Blue" team included [illegible] Dickson and [illegible] vice [illegible] posts marks of the last major competition prior to the U.S. Shooting Championships and final Olympic team tryouts to be held Aug. 9 through 20 in Chino, Calif.

C Cobras win three in a row as second season begins

Kevin J. Howerton

[illegible] the 598th Maint. Co. slides into third base in a game against HHC, 197th

By George Mingee
197th Infantry Brigade correspondent

The Cobras from Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 197th Infantry Brigade out-batted Service Battery, 2nd Battalion, 10th Field Artillery to win the game 12-7 in five short innings of play. The Cobras are now 3-0 in the second season of 197th Inf. Bde. softball.

Svc. Btry came on strong in the first inning, bringing in five runs before the Cobras managed to shut them down.

The second inning continued like the first. Svc. Btry. added to their commanding lead, taking to the field with a score of 7-0.

In the bottom of the second inning, the Cobras finally struck, when Charles "Stump" Johnson hit a three-run homer and fired up their scoring spree. When the Cobras second inning rally stopped, they had closed the gap to a score of 7-5.

In the remaining three innings, the Cobras totally shut out Svc. Btry. and continued their scoring drive.

When the Cobras went to bat in the third inning, it was another game. The Cobras took advantage of Svc. Btry's. weak pitching and scored five quick runs, taking the lead with a score of 10-7.

In the fourth inning, Stump Johnson cracked another home run, adding two runs to the score.

When the final inning rolled around, the Cobras needed three outs to win the game. As Svc. Btry. players went to bat, so did the Cobras infield making three quick outs and clinching another game 12-7.

may not appear to move and its "discoverer" may be tempted to reach out and touch it. Unsuspecting youngsters may assume the fawn's mother has been killed and that the baby animal is weak from hunger — taking it home or to a ranger station may seem the only thing left to do.

A baby deer "abandoned" in high grasses usually is not alone, but being carefully tended by a doe in the immediate vicinity. The doe has left it there to protect it from predators and visits it only briefly to nurse, thus keeping her scent away from the area. The fawn's primary defense is to remain hidden and motionless.

Many such young fawns can be found throughout Georgia in the spring and summer months as white tail doe give birth to their young. Well intentioned people may try to rescue a fawn, believing it is orphaned. The best course of action is not to approach the fawn and not to touch it. Human scent may attract predators such as dogs or coyotes to the stop, and signs the fawn's death warrant.

The area in which a fawn is discovered should be left as quickly as possible and no one should return to "check" on the baby animal. Research shows that a doe will return for her "lost" fawn for up to three days. In most cases, the scent of humans on the fawn will not cause the mother to abandon it. If someone has gone so far as to take a fawn home and has held it for less than three days, it should be returned as quickly as possible to the spot where it was found. If the area has been disturbed, the fawn should be taken to the nearest protective cover and left, where its mother will be able to find it.

In rare cases, a fawn may be found near a dead doe and truly orphaned. The nearest office of the Georgia Department of Natural Resources (DNR) should be contacted in these instances. DNR personnel will find a suitable home for the baby, where it will receive proper care. Georgia law makes it illegal for anyone to keep a deer or most any other wildlife species in captivity.

Young rabbits and fledgling birds may also be mistakenly seen as orphaned. Baby rabbits remain in the nest for about two weeks and, like the mother deer, the female rabbit only visits her young to feed them two or three times a day. Too much commotion around the nest may well attract predators. After young rabbits leave the nest they may continue to nurse for a short period of time but are completely on their own between three and four weeks later. A young rabbit no larger than a man's fist is able to take care of itself.

Young birds having just left the nest are not yet able to fly or obtain food as well as adult birds. They will be fed by their parents until they gain the strength and skill needed to obtain food for themselves. At this stage, they may appear in need of help while they are actually going through a natural learning phase, being assisted by their parents.

[illegible]d head belongs in every angler's tackle box

[illegible] Writers

[illegible]s of "[illegible]-tech" confuse the choice of an artificial bait [illegible]ortant. You have your crank baits, your spinner [illegible]baits not to mention your twitch baits, stick baits, [illegible] and so forth. Actually I'm not sure some of the forego[illegible]ese things — at least from the fish's point of view.

[illegible] is one lure (or class of lures) that belongs in every [illegible]box. That is the jig. It is the essence of simplicity. It [illegible]ed virtually forever. And best of all, it catches fish — a [illegible] of fish, under a wide variety of circumstances.

[illegible]sists of a lump of lead molded onto a hook, thence the [illegible]ad. This is followed with a variety of dressings: deer [illegible] feathers, rubber skirts or small plastic grub-like [illegible]ings it is even tipped with a natural bait such as a [illegible] minnow. It comes in a variety of weights, casts like [illegible]es like a rock.

[illegible] weight to match your equipment and the type of [illegible]ty fun spurry's feeding habits.

[illegible]ad dressed with a brush-like plastic weed guard and tip[illegible] of pickled pig skin becomes the justly acclaimed [illegible]. This is a favorite early spring lure of bass anglers [illegible] and deep on steep rocky shorelines. Later in the summer, the lead head, dressed with a plastic worm, is used to probe deep structures for summer bass action.

A jig head with a soft plastic, fish-shaped body is a favorite for such open water predators as the striped bass; its little cousin, the white bass, or the cross between these species, the hybrid "sunshine" bass.

Once, while we were casting shad bodied jigs and hoping to find a breaking school of stripers, my fishing partner set his hook into a solid fish. In due course an eight-pound channel cat came over the side. I doubt that jigs will ever replace blood baits, stink baits, etc. for catfishing, but it proves that if a gamefish will eat a baitfish, it will take a jig.

Scale down the lead head, add a grub body and a safety-pin spinner and you have about the best bluegill bait this side of wasp larvae. Used on ultra-light tackle and cast into a hot bed of spawning bluegills, the jig/grub/spinner renders great sport and a great fish fry.

Jigs in their traditional feather and hair dressing and sometimes "sweetened" with a minnow have long been the standbys of walleye and crappie anglers. They are also a favorite of winter ice fishermen for a variety of species.

Simple, relatively inexpensive and amazingly versatile, that's the humble lead-head jig. It catches almost anything, almost any time. It's hard to ask for more than that.

Golden Knights' win

my News Service

When the smoke cleared after the 10th and nal round of the accuracy competition the U.S. Skydiving Championships, the U.S. rmy Parachute Team, the "Golden Knights" ad taken the top three honors, as well as 6th nd 10th Place.

Although this is his first year on the ompetition Team, Sgt. Chuck Lackey took st Place with a total score of six centimeters a competition of 60 competitors. The ompetitor with the lowest score after 10 ounds is the winner.

Sgt. Kevin Breaux took 2nd Place with a core of nine centimeters, and SSgt. Jim lipper and Sgt. Bill Jackson tied for 3rd Place vith a score of ten centimeters. Last ear's winner, Sgt. Randy Kern, took 6th lace, and sgts. Richard Albritton and om Welgos tied for 10th Place, rounding out nother competition dominated by the Golden nights.

Accuracy competition requires the competiors to leave the plane at an altitude f 2,800 feet. Usually, three jumpers will go at the same time with the order of competition predetermined.

At 2,000 feet, the jumpers open their chutes and begin making concentric circles toward the target, a five centimeter disk centered in a ten meter gravel pit. The disk is wired to send an electronic signal that determines precisely where the jumper lands.

The final approach begins at 1,000 feet. At about 150 feet, the jumper is usually hovering directly above the target, which by now looks like a medium pizza with a single slice of pepperoni in the center.

"Try jumping off your steps ten times and placing your heel in the center of a slice of pepperoni each time," says Shriver. "It's not easy to do."

For his successful efforts, Lackey has won a spot on the U.S. Parachute Team and will compete in the World Parachute Championships to be held in Sweden in August. Lackey will also represent the United States at Seoul, Korea by jumping in with the American flag at the opening ceremonies of the 1988 Summer Olympics

Unsafe diving can cause injury

ational Safety Council

Diving is a major cause of spinal cord injuries — nany of which result in permanent disability.

The National Safety Council urges you to take hese precautions to avoid diving accidents.

- Pay attention to posted warnings about water lepth and those forbidding diving.
- Never dive into an above-ground pool.
- Before diving into a pool, lake, pond or river, heck the water depth. Depths can vary at different locations within the same body of water.
- Look for obstacles on the bottom, such as rocks or submerged tree trunks.
- Check the spring of the diving board before you complete a dive, since too much spring can increase your momentum as you hit the water.
- Jump feet first on the initial plunge, even if you think the water is deep enough.
- Always swim and dive with a companion.

Animal

nal that people are occasionally drawn to elp. Like other baby animals, it is cute, and our natural instinct is to try to protect and are for them. Young raccoons spend their early lives with their mothers learning how to survive. One found alone, especially during he daytime, probably is orphaned. But the mportant question here is, "What killed ts mother?" Perhaps it was a dog or an automobile. Another very likely possibility would be disease.

Rabies must be thought about very seriously when we mention diseases in raccoons. In South Carolina during spring 1979, a baby raccoon was found beside a road. It was taken home and adopted. Children played with it and as may be expected, some people were bitten or scratched as they handled the active baby raccoon. In July the raccoon became sick and was diagnosed as having rabies. An intensive search was necessary to find as many people as possible who had come into contact with the raccoon.

Anyone who had been bitten or had saliva introduced into an open wound were advised to take the series of rabies shots. The cost of the treatment was $10,000.

Any raccoon found moving about in the daytime, or that shows no fear of people or dogs, or is behaving in a sick or abnormal way, should be avoided. Under no circumstances should you try to feed or pet it. If the animal poses a possible threat to people, pets or livestock it should be killed as humanely as possible, taking care not to injure the head. The brain is used in rabies diagnosis. If no people or animals have been scratched or bitten, the carcass may be buried but make sure it cannot be dug up by dogs or other animals.

If anyone has been in close contact with the raccoon, then either your county health office or the Department of Natural Resourses should be contacted so the animal can be submitted for rabies diagnosis.

For more information on "animal orphans," contact Nick Nicholson or DNR's Social Circle Game Management Office at Route 2, Box 119-A, Social Circle, Ga. 30279 or call (404) 557-2532.

Wrong answer

Units may no longer spray their soldiers down with water during training to prevent heat injuries. TRADOC Reg 350-29, paragraph 6d, states that water sprays should not be used to cool down soldiers except as a first aid treatment for heat stroke casualties. When used otherwise, spraying does not prevent heat injuries. In fact, the temporary cooling effect caused by spraying increases the core body temperature, thus intensifying the heat injury.

PCS moves need not be stressful

By Shawn Bryson
Bayonet staff writer

"Probably the easiest move most soldiers make is the first one, when all they have to do is throw a duffle bag over their shoulders and take off," said B. J. Manard, staff director and senior counselor at the newly opened Relocation Assistance Center (RAC).

However, most soldiers find that Permanent Change of Station moves can be very stressful for both themselves and their family members.

The stress factor that accompanies PCS moves is the one of the reasons that the RAC, located in Soldiers' Plaza, was established.

Manard explained that the center, which opened in May, is one of only two Army pilot programs designed to provide information about the area to

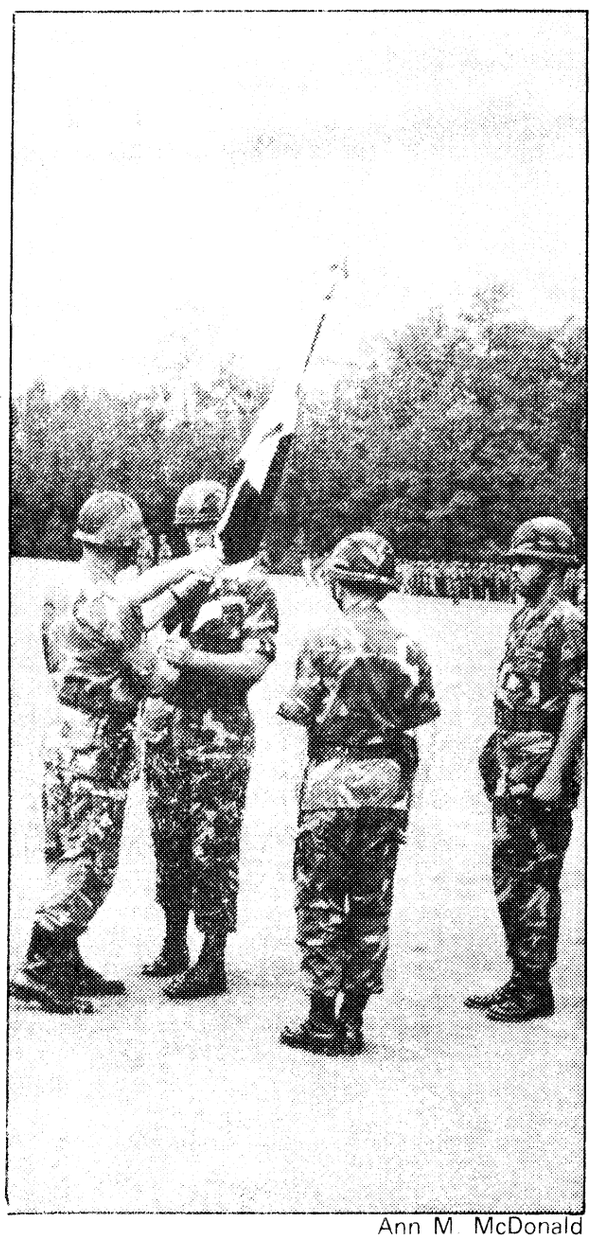
ITC changes hands



By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

More than 1,800 soldiers with military experience ranging from four days to more than 30 years stood on Weatherby Field last week to render honors as the U.S. Infantry Training Center changed hands.

Col. Victor Stamey handed the reins to Col. Stephen Perry, who will assume the responsibility of overseeing the training of more than 29,000 new soldiers yearly.

Perry comes to Fort Benning from Schofield Barracks, Hawaii where he commanded the 2nd Brigade, 25th Infantry Division (Light). This is Perry's second command tour involving the training of new infantry soldiers. He commanded 4th Battalion, 1st Infantry Training Brigade from 1977 to 1979.

Stamey, who wore "two hats" prior to the change will stay in his position as commander of the 2nd Infantry Training Brigade, U.S. Infantry Training Center.

Benning impresses IOE team

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

The Training and Doctrine Command Installation of Excellence Evaluation Team has come and gone. Was the team impressed with Fort Benning? From comments made during the out briefing. They were.

The team keyed in on on-post facilities that give first impressions of the Army to visitors and incoming soldiers. And, according to Col. Bob Bischoff, IOE evaluation team chief, they were particularly impressed with Soldiers' Plaza, the landscaping at the Infantry Center Chapel, the Youth Activities Center, the new Collins Training Center and the 197th Infantry Brigade entrance area. During his presentation Bischoff said "You never have a second chance to make a good first impression, and that's why it is so important to maintain standards of excellence."

Bischoff explained that excellent facilities create good first impressions and help the Army recruit and retain quality people.

"It has extreme positive benefits on our personnel and their morale," he said. "They become more productive and, in turn, provide better training and services to soldiers, their families, civilian employees and commanders."

Bischoff said this contributes to achievement of the Army's overall mission, to deter, to fight and to win.

He added that TRADOC installations such as Fort Benning, lead the way in proving the motto "excellence starts here."

"My team is here to recognize excellence," he said. "We do it with on the spot awards, excellence plaques for selected areas evaluated and cups for overall winners."

Craig Taylor, post IOE coordinator explained the importance of the commander in chief's competition.

"Fort Benning could be recognized TRADOC-wide as being the number one large installation, and it could have a chance to win some money," he said. "Last year's winner won more than $165,000."

Taylor said that while he was guiding the team around post, they said many positive things.

He said the team was amazed by the progress this post has made in the past year, and they felt that many of areas they visited were among the best in TRADOC.

"I don't know if that means we have a chance of winning the Commander's Cup," Taylor said. "But, I think it's safe to say we're pretty close. We'll know for sure when they announce the winner's in August."

Dental appointment no-shows cost money

By Shawn Bryson
Bayonet staff writer

The problem of dental appointment no-shows at Fort Benning is getting worse, and many people don't realize the consequences of failing to call in a dental appointment cancellation.

According to Col. (DDS) Richard T. Brown, commander, Dental Activities, the biggest of those consequences is the money lost when people don't notify a dental clinic of an inability to show for an appointment.

"In most cases, each failure to cancel an appointment can cost Fort Benning sometimes as much as $100," Brown said. He explained that the loss is evident in the idleness of dentists and dental assistants when someone doesn't call in a cancellation.

Brown said that the personnel of the dental clinics, six in all, do their best to fill the unexpected appointment vacancies with people waiting for other appointments. However, he explained, that process doesn't always solve the problem, and many times, it only creates confusion and chaos.

"This is the time of the year when no-shows tend to increase," Brown said. "Summer means the kids are out of school,and people are taking trips. Dental appointments become the last things on their minds," he added.

Failure to cancel a dental appointment cost more than money, Brown further explained. "Every time an appointment is missed, a family member won't be seen since soldiers are given priority over family members," he said.

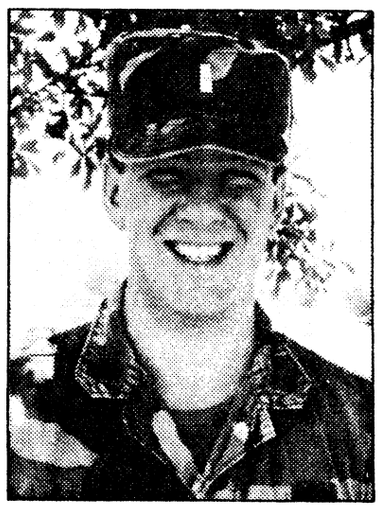
Brown said that not being able to make a dental appointment is understandable, but that people should give the clinics as much notice as possible, even if it's only 10 minutes prior to the appointment.

OPINION

VARIOUS VOICES: What do you think of the regimental system?

SFC Eugenia Ulman, Post Equal Opportunity Office, Co. A, 1st Bn., 11th Inf. Regt. — "I think the system is good if you like the unit you are affiliated with, but it could be very stressful if you're not happy with your position."

SFC Charles Thomas, HHD, Noncommissioned Officers Academy — "The regimental system is good if the individual wishes to remain in that unit, but, I think problems could arise if one wishes to transfer later on."



SFC James Howse, Co. B, 1st Bn., 11th Inf. Regt. — "I like the system. I saw the system work when I was with the 10th Mountain Division, and I like the bond it forms between soldiers."

Capt. Amos Samuel, Co. B, 1st Bn., 11th Inf. Regt. — "I think it's a good concept. It provides a soldier with a sense of belonging to something smaller than the total Army. It also gives the soldier a sense of esprit for the unit."

CSM Samuel Hernandez, 325th Inf. Regt., Abn. Inf., Vincenza, Italy — "The system has some good points and some bad points. Personally, I think we should do it like the British do and move the entire unit to a different post all at once. I think that system promotes more comraderie and unit cohesiveness."

1st Lt. Michael Hicks, Co. C, 1st Bn., 11th Inf. Regt. — "I think it's a good system, but I don't think they are applying it. I am regimentally affiliated with the 10th Mountain Division at Fort Drum, and I was supposed to be assigned there on my next tour, but instead they are going to send me to Fort Riley."

Golf 'pooh poohed' as sissy sport

By Clyde Snively
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Football is often compared to war. Quarterbacks are field generals and linesmen are behemoths. Coaches are known as tacticians and are often cited as being students of warfare and friends of general officers.

Baseball is known as our national pastime and horse racing, the sport of kings. But golf, well,it's just there. More people participate in golf than probably any other sport, and scads watch it on TV.

Yet golf is just golf. It's poohed poohed as a sissy sport by people who've never tried it. In fact, they won't even classify it as a sport.

"You call driving around in a cart to hit a small ball sport?" they sneer.

As for watching it on TV, non-golfers, and even some golfers, say they'd rather watch crabgrass grow. Yet, every weekend millions sit in front of their TVs, cheering on their favorite golfer.

But sneer if you like, non-golfers. I've got news for you. Golf IS war.

It is the infantryman patiently hacking his way through dense tropical jungles as he flanks the objective, staying out of enemy fields of fire until he's close enough to lob his ball up on the enemy's bunkered position.

It's the mech infantry, with personnel carriers abreast, boldly making a frontal attack on the flag of the enemy command post.

Here at Fort Benning, where they are putting in asphalt cart paths, golf is more like training than war. In fact, it's like participating on a Reforger — your vehicle is restricted to roads and trails, and to just some of the fields.

It's like emerging from some village like Iphofen in central Germany and having to look up road signs to determine which route to take.

"Yeah, this will take us to the 12th hole."

Let me say this, I'll never be mistaken for a golfer, although I've been known to go out just prior to sunset, and try to sneak in a few holes without being seen.

Included in my basic survival pack are several gallons of bug repellant, a couple of canteens of water, a machete, chain saw, compass and flashlight. It's not that I get off the beaten track, it's just that I don't always follow the path of least resistance.

I can't even guess which way one of my shots will fly, or more accurately, dribble, from one shot to the next. For me, a straight shot is when I top the ball, and it rolls off the tee for 16 inches.

Given this background, you can see why I never use a cart. Or at least that was my master plan until one day a friend talked me into riding with him.

"Hey come on Clyde," he said. "I've got the cart. May as well use it. I won't even charge you."

Never one to pass up something free, I relented.

As it turned out, I did more walking than riding anyway.

First, there would be the tee shot. I'd immediately hit it into the woods on the side of the fairway opposite the cart path. This meant I'd need to walk across the fairway, hoping I could find my ball since being in a cart I'm now restricted to the cart path and have to guess just how far I hit it, instead of being able to travel along the flight path of the ball.

Naturally I'd have the wrong club once I did find the ball, or I'd take a whack, move the ball 10 yards or so and need to go back for another club now that I was closer to the green. Do you see why I play alone at night?

The person I was playing with told me not to be concerned with all the people stacked up behind us, but that's kind of tough to do when, after you hit your third fairway wood, you have to dodge their drives and listen to them gunning their cart motors while you search the woods for your ball.

I guess I could limit my playing to the Lakewood Course in Phenix City where the biggest risk is being run over by a blue 77 Oldsmobile on the fairway of the second hole.

It's either that, or convince the contractor to put the cart trails down the middle of the fairway. I know I won't have to worry about hitting them.

Engineers battle effects of drought

Army News Service

EDITOR'S NOTE: As America battles the worst drought in 25 years, the Army Corps of Engineers is working overtime to help offset the effects of that drought. The following story highlights just one of the areas in which the Engineers are contributing.

In some parts of the country, there has been no appreciable rain for almost three months, stunting crops, reducing water supplies, and giving the nation a severe case of hardening of the arteries.

In this case, the arteries comprise the nation's vast inland waterways system which branches from the main stem of the lower Mississippi River and links the ports of the American heartland to the markets of the world. This year's drought has constricted the channel in many places, stifling the movement of essential materials.

To ensure the continued flow of vital goods within the system, the Army Corps of Engineers has responded with emergency surgery using dredges to clear blockages and keep the rivers open for navigation.

"Dredges have become the primary tool in our efforts to keep the river open. We're keeping our heads above water, but it's a tough effort. Our dredge crews and captains are doing a really great job," said Jim Bentley, assistant chief of construction operations in the Corps' Lower Mississippi Valley Division.

The dredges remove the silt from navigation channel deposit it to the side to be carried away by the current.

Besides the ongoing effort of the dredges and their crews, other Corps works have had a significant effect on lowering the drought's impact on navigation.

"Our dikes are working beautifully by confining the water to a well-defined channel. Without this help, the river wouldn't be navigable now," Bentley said.

Help is coming from other areas as well, especially from the reservoirs on the Missouri, Tennessee and Cumberland Rivers.

Releases from the upper Missouri and from TVA dams in Kentucky are providing more than half the flow on the lower Mississippi, according to J. R. Tuttle, chief of the water control branch in the Lower Mississippi Valley Division.

"We're expecting a base flow at Cairo, Ill., of about 80,000 to 90,000 cubic feet per second. We don't expect it to go any lower because of the 60,000 to 65,000 cubic feet per second coming out of the reservoirs. As long as we can stay in this neighborhood, we can handle the situation," Tuttle said. "At this stage of the game, everything considered, we're in pretty good shape. We're in a lot better shape than if our projects weren't in place."

Magazine covers tactics of light infantry

USAIC Public Affairs Office

In the July-August 1988 issue of INFANTRY, Col. Richard F. Timmons discusses the critical components that light infantry commanders must consider when planning fire support for an operation.

In the article, titled "Fire Planning and Control," Timmons advocates that units practice the procedures for developing the integrated fire support plans that bring together engineers, artillery, helicopters, tanks, TOWs and the rest. Included is a checklist for an integrated fire plan for an engagement area.

Timmons formerly commanded the 2nd Brigade, 7th Infantry Division and is now executive officer to the Secretary of the Army.

Related articles in this issue are "Light Infantry FDC," by Lt. Howard G. Waters and SSgt. William M. Topka and "Supporting Light Infantry," by Maj. James H. Silcox.

INFANTRY, a professional bulletin of the Department of the Army, is in its 68th year of publication at Fort Benning.

Other articles in the July-August issue include Part 2 of "Soviet Landmine Operations," prepared by the Infantry School's Threat Directorate; "TOW Training Strategy," by Maj. Anthony DiStephano and SFC David L. Bolder; "Equipment Discipline," by Lt. Daniel F. Sullivan and "Resistence to Interrogation," by Capt. P.J. Mullings, British Army.

283rd Army Band honored

By Shawn Bryson
Bayonet staff writer

The 283rd Army Band was honored for all their hard work last week during an Infantry Center Band Appreciation Luncheon at the NCO Club.

Three of the 283rd's members received special honors at the luncheon for their recent outstanding acheivements. SP4 Hermangildo Rodriguez received a Blue Chip for winning the 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry, Soldier of the Month competition for May. SP4 Fred Catchings received a Blue Chip for being selected as 1st Battalion's Soldier of the Month for June. SSgt. Victor Rios received his Blue Chip for recruiting 29 Army bandsmen during fiscal year 1988.

The 283rd's first sergeant, Joe Bates, said, "In my 18 and a half years in the Army, this is the first time I have ever experienced a ceremony like the luncheon."

Bates told his soldiers afterwards, "Everytime your uniform is full of sweat out there on a parade field or everytime you're freezing cold waiting for a ceremony to start, remember the appreciation lunch."

Bates explained that the band stays very busy and plays in 800 or so ceremonies each year. "Besides playing, we also have to do everything that other companies do, like Common Task Training, administrative actions and weapons qualification for example," Bates said. "We have 37 members now and hope to have 40 by Septmeber, but it is really hectic sometimes and the band really stays busy."

The Association of the United States Army and the Noncommissioned Officers' Association also showed their appreciation of the 283rd as they presented the band with plaques for its help with some of their functions.

Airborne artillery NCOs needed

Army News Service

Field artillery NCOs who want an airborne assignment have an opportunity to realize their wishes.

The U.S. Total Army Personnel Agency needs sergeants in MOS 13B, cannon crewman and 13F, fire support specialist, to apply for airborne training. The conversion of an artillery battalion at Fort Bragg, N.C., has depleted the Army's surplus of airborne field artillery sergeants.

According to SFC David Nichols, TAPA career development NCO for cannon MOS, the Army likes to keep its numbers of airborne qualified soldiers at 150 percent of authorized strength. This is to allow airborne-qualified NCOs to be assigned as drill sergeants, recruiters and service school instructors.

Specifically, Nichols said that he is looking for interested overseas based NCOs to reenlist for airborne training; or, if not eligible to reenlist yet, to submit a DA Form 4187 requesting airborne training upon their return from overseas.

Most airborne artillery soldiers will be assigned to the 82nd Airborne Division at Fort Bragg on completion of training.

34th Med gets new commander

By Mary K. Shuler
34th Medical Battalion

Maj. Gen. K. C. Leuer along with about 100 guests watched one of the largest and most diverse medical battalions in the Army change hands in a ceremony on York Field recently.

Lt. Col. Allen E. Rhodes, who comes to 34th Med. Bn. from a position as Chief of Logistical Plans, Doctrine and Material Development Office of the Surgeon General, assumed command. His previous assignments include: Aeromedical Evacuation Pilot in the Republic of Vietnam; Crash/Rescue and Aerospace Physiology Instructor at the U.S. Army Aviation Center; S-4, 47th Medical Battalion, 1st Armored Division; chief, Storage Division, U.S. Army Medical Material Center, Europe; commander 507th Medical Company (Air Ambulance); and Combat Service Support instructor, Command and Staff Branch, U.S. Army Academy of Health Sciences.

During the ceremony, Lt. Col. Robert D. Deaderick, who commanded the battalion for the past two years, was awarded the Meritorious Service Medal for his achievements. He is leaving for Carlisle Barracks where he will attend the Army War College.

988th MPs support 'Golden Pheasant'

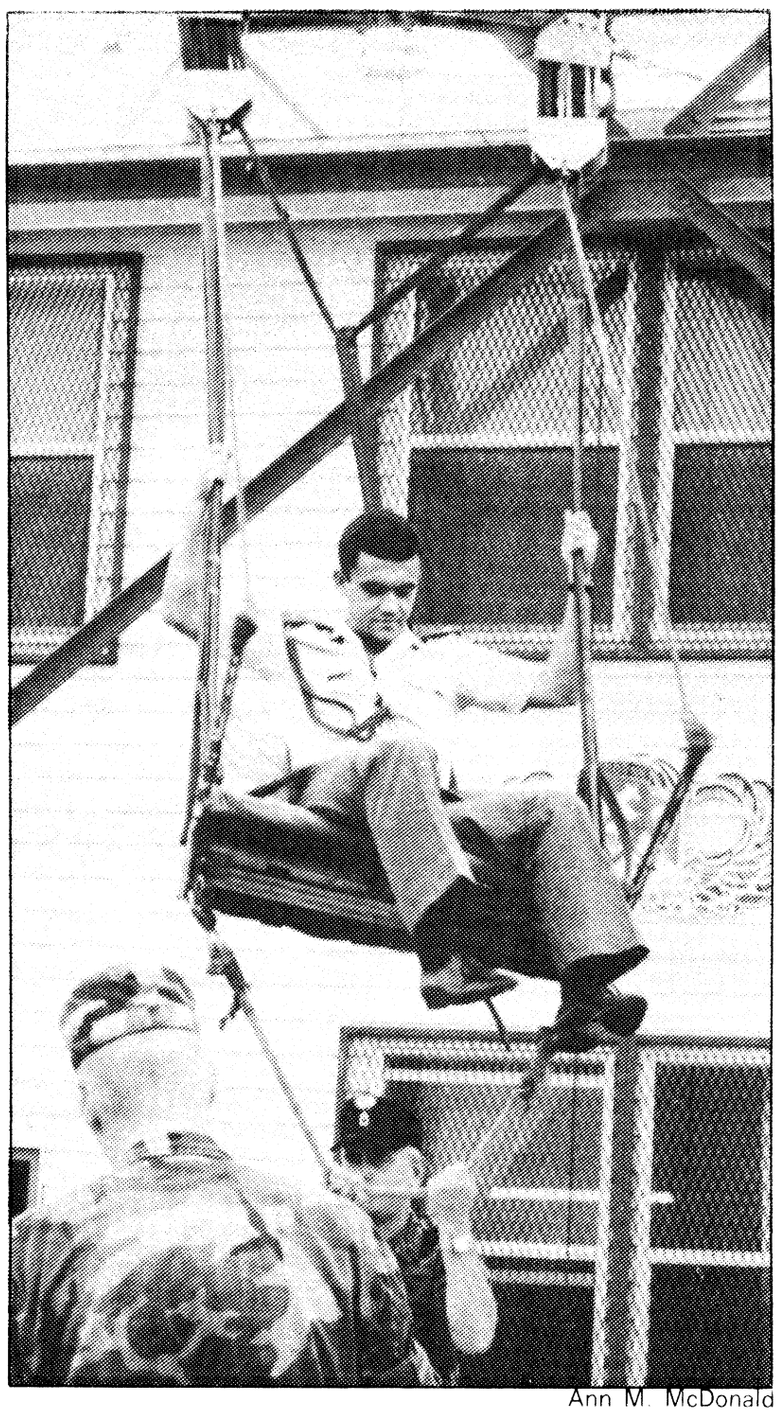
Soldiers of the 3rd Plt., 988th MP Co., Fort Benning, pose for a group photo after returning from Palmerola Air Base, Honduras recently.

By Shawn Bryson
Bayonet staff writer

The stars of the mid-March deployment of U.S. Army troops to Honduras for Operation Golden Pheasant were 3,126 soldiers from the 82nd Airborne Division out of Fort Bragg, N.C. and the 7th Infantry Division (Light Infantry) of Fort Ord, Calif.



However, 31 soldiers from Fort Benning played a major role in the exercise and could be labled the unsung heroes of Golden Pheasant.

"We received notification of the deployment of the 82nd and the 7th I.D. on March 15," said 1st Lt. John Baxter, 3rd Platoon leader of the 988th Military Police Company here.

Baxter, along with 30 soldiers of the 3rd Platoon arrived in Honduras long before Honduran President Jose Azcona requested support from the U.S. after the invasion of Sandinista armed forces troops into Honduras.

The platoon had been at Palmerola Air Base, a Honduran installation, since Feb. 21. Attached to the 401st Military Police Company, from Fort Hood, Texas., the 988th's mission was to perform regular law enforcement activities. Those activities included working with the Hondurans pulling security at the base. They also performed various types of site and V.I.P

Benning hosts Spanish cadets

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning hosted five Spanish soldiers last week as part of an exchange program with Spain.

Capt. Fernando Gil and Cadets Luis Cepeda, Fernando Anton, Edwardo Diz and Francisco Marcos received a week-long tour guided by members of 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment.

The first stop during their visit was an airborne demonstration conducted by 1st Battalion, 507th Parachute Infantry Regiment, followed by a tour of the training facilities led by 1st Lt. Michael Gibson.

According to Gibson, the group really enjoyed the orientation and were especially thrilled about riding the controlled descent tower.

Gibson said that this was the first time the cadets had been exposed to anything like the controlled decent tower, and it showed them what to expect when they go to airborne school in their country.

Gil said that, from what he observed, training at the 507th site is very similar to the airborne training conducted in his country.

The group also visited the Tactical Leadership Course, the U.S. Army School of the Americas and Columbus and the surrounding area.

On the last evening of their visit, they attended a farewell banquet with local military and civilian dignitaries.

Korean War teaches Army bitter lesson about training

Army News Service

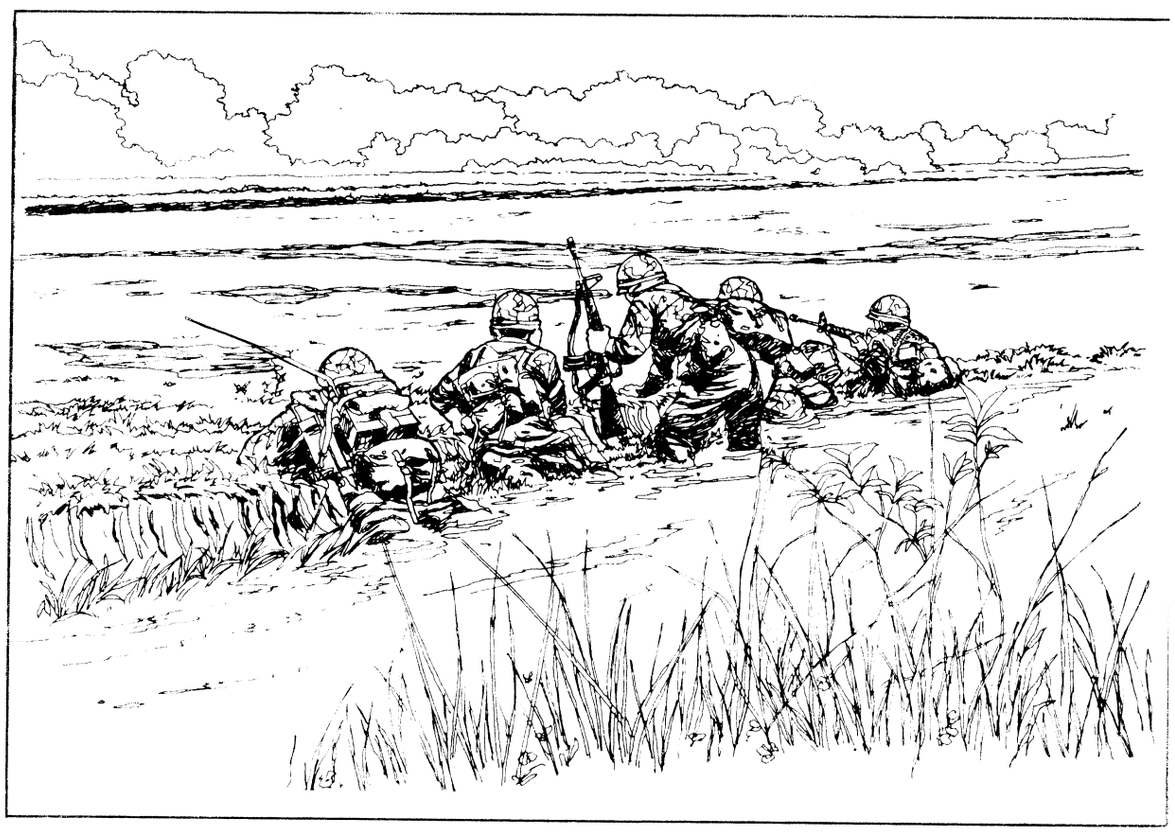
The sudden and unexpected outbreak of the Korean War in 1950 taught the Army a bitter lesson about training.

For the most part, the American troops that entered combat in June and July of that year were woefully ill-prepared to halt the invading North Korean Army. An Army training effort begun in 1949 by the Eighth Army came too late.

When the war began, the most readily available American forces for combat in Korea were U.S. Army troops stationed in Japan. Since the end of World War II, their primary role had been to help rebuild and govern a war-torn nation. Training for combat was, at best, secondary.

Recognizing the poor state of training, Lt. Gen. William H. Walker, commander of Eighth Army, put in place in June 1949 a new training program designed to raise divisions to a state of combat readiness by the end of December 1950.

Training in Japan proved difficult. Little land could be set aside for military maneuvers in the heavily populated Japanese islands, and food shortages made it unthinkable to maneuver troops and equipment through cropland. At best, training areas tended to be only large enough to accommodate a single infantry or artillery battalion at a time. Artillery batteries could only schedule live firing once a year, and combined live-fire training with infantry or armor was non-existent.



In May, 1950, less than a month before the outbreak of the war, Commander-in-Chief of the Far East Gen. Douglas MacArthur rated his divisions, which were mostly under strength and poorly equipped, between 65 and 84 percent combat ready.

The need to stop the invasion as soon as possible forced the Army to send unprepared units into combat. Lack of preparedness for combat manifested itself in many ways. In some cases, crew-served weapons were disabled because they were improperly emplaced. Some soldiers did not fire their rifles in combat because they were jammed with dirt or incorrectly assembled.

On some occasions, Americans were killed or wounded because, not knowing any better, they dug positions in the open. Other soldiers couldn't distinguish between American and North Korean T-34 tanks, and set mines incorrectly, allowing enemy tanks to roll over them.

Far too many soldiers lacked the stamina provided by vigorous physical training, resulting in more heat casualties than gunshot or shrapnel wounds.

The results of putting untrained men on the front lines were sadly predictable. American forces were pushed back by the rapidly advancing North Korean Army, and suffered many needless casualties.

The early days of the Korean War serve as a stern reminder of the need to be trained at all times.

Seatbelt use required even when training

By Eleanor Kaufer
Prevention Programs Division

Some people believe that seatbelts aren't required during tactical training situations.

However, AR 385-55: Prevention of Motor Vehicle Accidents says the use of safety belts is required in all vehicles equipped with them.

According to paragraph 2-18 of that regulation, "Commanders responsible for conducting tactical operations, actual or training, that involve motor vehicles and equipment will apply all normal safety standards, including speed limits, passenger transportation standards and vehicle maintenance, unless it is necessary to deviate to accomplish a mission."

Safety belts are not mentioned here, but of course they are part of normal safety standards in the HMMWV, CUCV, M-880 series and HEMTT. They are also to be installed in most other tactical vechicles such as 2½- and 5-ton trucks as part of a service life extension program.

The regulation continues, "In training situations, such deviations may be authorized only by the unit commander. Commanders will evaluate the significance of the assumed risk versus the training benefit."

Otherwise, safety belts will be worn when available. Unnecessary risk has no place in tactical training.

BBB booklet gives tips on employment services

Better Business Bureau

Finding the right job quickly is one of the most important decisions you will make in a lifetime. Although it need not be the only tool you use in locating a job, a reputable employment service can help in your job search. A newly revised booklet produced by the Better Business Bureau of West Georgia-East Alabama, Inc. explains the different types of services with specific information for consumers.

"Tips on Employment Services" outlines what employment services can and cannot do, offers tips on choosing the right agency and helps consumers effectively use an agency's services. The booklet also notes various state laws that govern the actions of employment services.

A special section of the booklet explains the numerous methods of fee payment, usually the primary source of problems and misunderstandings. "If a contract and fee are required by the service," notes Lou Marcotte, BBB president, "be sure to get in writing a clear explanation of what the firm will and won't do, what the costs will be and what time period the contract covers."

"Tips on Employment Services" is one of the Better Business Bureau Consumer Information Series that offers booklets on more than 60 topics of consumer interest. For a free copy of the booklet, stop by the BBB office at #8 13th Street or send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2587, Columbus, Ga., 31902 or call the local number for the BBB for your area.

ASK THE JUDGE

By Dennis E. Brower
Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Q: I just received a notice that said I had won a great prize, and all I have to do is listen to a sales pitch about cameras. What can you tell me about these types of promotions?

A: These types of promotions are seen a lot now days. Many of them are reliable, but many are not.

The Georgia Fair Business Practices Act governs these types of promotional giveaways, and it requires the companies to follow very strict rules. If you are asked to listen to a sales pitch in response to a promotional giveaway, you have the following rights under Georgia law.

First, you must be given a written notice that clearly discloses the promotion and all of its rules. It must state the verifiable retail value of each prize and the odds of winning each one. This notice must be given to you before you travel to the place of business, or prior to the presentation if no travel was necessary.

Next, you cannot be made to pay any nominal charges or fees for the prizes. If there are other, legitimate, charges then the complete additional cost must be clearly shown at the time of the offer or promotion.

Upon arriving at the place of business, or the salesperson's arrival at your home, you must be immediately informed which, if any, prize you have won, and it must be given to you at that time. You cannot be made to wait through the presentation. You can make them give you the prize right at the beginning and then leave with it if you like. They cannot make any substitutions of the prizes. If they have run out of your prize, they must give you a voucher or certificate for it and must redeem it within 30 days.

If the sales personnel violate any of these rules the state may be able to take criminal legal action against them, and you might be able to take legal action for any civil damages you may have suffered.

Remember that you have many rights as a consumer. Do not let the sales personnel push you into something you will later regret. If you have any doubts about signing, ask for a copy of the contract and call the legal assistance office.

security.

Little did the M.Ps. know that halfway through their stay, they would be called upon to build the base of Operation Golden Pheasant.

"We secured the drop zones for the 82nd and 7th I.D. before they arrived in Honduras," Baxter explained. "There was a definite sense of urgency in the beginning. Things were pretty tense during the first week."

The role of the M.Ps. extended as they also provided security escorts for the convoys to and from the drop zones and other training areas, according to Baxter. The escorts consisted of 10 to 12 vehicles with two or three soldiers per vehicle.

Another highlight of the 988th's participation in the exercise was the securing of a UH-1 helicopter accident March 21, just 15 miles from the Nicaraguan border. The chopper was flown by soldiers from the 18th Aviation Brigade out of Bragg, and eight of the 10 servicemen on board the Huey were from the 82nd. All escaped the accident with only minor injuries.

"The site where the helicopter went down was so remote that most of the natives we encountered had probably never seen an American before," Baxter commented.

Fortunately for the 988th soldiers, the only significant problem of the exercise was the shortage of water at Palmerola resulting from the abundance of soldiers from the 82nd and the 7th I. D.

"Our deployment to Honduras and participation in Operation Golden Pheasant was the greatest training tool the soldiers could ever have," Baxter said. "They did everything that would be done in a real combat situation."

The 988th soldiers returned from Honduras in late June and all were awarded medals for their parts as the unsung heroes of Golden Pheasant.

75% of safety seats used improperly

GEICO

Hundreds of young children die needlessly in automobile accidents each year because their parents, or those who transport them, fail to use child safety seats or use them incorrectly, according to Edward Utley, president of GEICO Indemnity Insurance Company.

"Auto accidents are the leading cause of deaths for children from birth to 5 years old," Utley said. "Many of those deaths could be prevented if parents would properly restrain their children in child safety seats every time they ride in the car."

According to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, child safety seats are 90 percent effective in preventing death and 67 percent effective in preventing serious injuries to children involved in traffic accidents. Unfortunately, only about 68 percent of children regularly ride in a restraint, and as many as 75 percent of those restraints are used improperly.

which a soldier is being transferred. To this point, the Fort Benning center has helped make moving easier for more than 300 individual soldiers or families.

The RAC is set up to counsel soldiers, family members and Department of the Army Civilian employees on a walk-in basis. "When people enter our office, a receptionist explains our services, has them fill out a simple form and assigns them a counselor," Manard said.

The information from the form is plugged into a computer that spits out an estimated expenses model based on rank, family size and the distance of the move, Manard explained. The model also provides estimates of the time the move will take, costs of temporary lodging and meals.

The RAC goes much further than just providing estimated costs of the move, according to Manard.

"The four areas of concern that most people have questions about are information about the place they're going to, the kinds of schools available for their children, whether or not their spouse can get a job and the costs involved with the move," Manard said.

Upon the request for information in any of these areas, a counselor can push a few keys on a computer, and a break down of several options in each category will appear.

People do have other questions about the move and where they will be going, according to Manard. To accomodate those many questions, the RAC's computer system categorizes questions into more than 20 subjects. Many of those subjects are domestic locations, education, employment, finance, healthcare, housing, recreation, stores, transportation and travel.

The system also includes subtopics for most of the subjects. For example, the housing subject is broken down into 17 subtopics,such as buying, financing, government, mobile homes, renting (conus and overseas), selling, temporary lodging and utilities.

"If we don't have a piece of information in our computers, we probably have it in our files or relocation library," Manard said. "If we don't have any information on an area where a person is moving, all we have to do is make a few phone calls," he continued.

New Sand Hill chapel to be dedicated next week

By Jo Ann Stamey
USAIC Chaplain's Office

Sand Hill is presently undergoing many changes and much construction. The latest addition to Sand Hill, the new Infantry Training Center (ITC) Chapel, located on 187th Infantry Regiment Road, will be dedicated in a ceremony scheduled July 29 at 10 a.m.

In 1983, budget planning and programming began for starships and chapels at Sand Hill. Initially, there were to be three chapels — one for each brigade and a center chapel. Because of budget constraints, one chapel was deleted.

In 1984, Chap. (Maj) Don Taylor, currently the brigade chaplain in 2nd ITB, was a member of the Department of Army Construction Requirements Review Committee and was instrumental in getting approval from Department of the Army, Office of the Secretary of Defense, and Congress. The new ITC Chapel, the only Army chapel approved and built in CONUS in fiscal year 1987, was readily approved based on the large number of soldiers that attended chapel. They were so overcrowded in the current chapels, they had to be transported to theaters and other locations on post for services.

On April 1987, the ground breaking ceremony took place in Sand Hill. Now, 15 months later, the chapel is complete and ready for worship services. This new $1.5 million chapel is unique. It is the last 600-seat chapel to be built and, because of its location in the ITC, is designed solely for soldiers. Chapels are normally smaller and are oriented to soldiers and their families, with nursery facilities, etc. The ITC Chapel is extremely flexible in that it has a 125-seat classroom and a 75-seat classroom (which will also be used as a library, with reference books for all faiths), that can be used as part of the sanctuary.

It will be the only one at Fort Benning with an immersile baptistry, so that now the soldiers can be baptized in a religious atmosphere rather than at ponds or pools

Worship services for the three major faith groups within the Army — Protestant, Catholic and Jewish will be conducted in the new chapel.

Also, because of the central location, resources, and close proximity to the soldiers, it is hoped that the chapel will be used as a "hub" not only for religious and social activities and events, but also a meeting place for soldiers and families when visiting.

To the right of the chapel is a carillon tower, which has a very sohisticated sound system that plays music and announces church call electronically. It can also be used by the units to sound reveille, retreat or taps.

The entrance of the chapel has an atrium and reception area with a skylight. To the left of the entrance is a conference room and offices for six chaplains and assistants.

To the right of the entrance is a modern, fully-equipped kitchen, which will have an additional kosher refrigerator for the Jews.

The sanctuary actually has pews for 400 people, but folding doors open to add two additional rooms that seat 200 people. Upon leaving the entrance, you enter the sanctuary, which is shaped like an ark — a symbol of hope and security. Behind the pulpit are doors that open to the immersible baptistry. Above the baptistry is another set of doors that house the cross on sliding telescopic rollers that can be rotated for Protestant or Catholic services or totally removed to make the sanctuary neutral for non-Christian services or meetings. Above the cross is a huge window that captures the sunlight — the perfect place for a stained glass window. The chaplains hope to get support to accomplish this in the future.

The interior is done in earth tones. There are approximately $100,000 worth of furnishings — one-half provided by Fort Benning; the other half provided by the Chief of Chaplain's Office.

There is a $30,000 three-tier keyboard organ, provided by Training and Doctrine Command. Col. Connie Boterweg, former Director of Personnel and Community Activities, and his wife Pat, graciously donated their baby grand piano, appraised at about $8,000.

On July 29, the Chaplain Corps birthday, the new ITC Chapel will be dedicated at 10 a.m. The Chief of Chaplains, Chap. (Maj. Gen.) Norris L. Einertson will be the guest speaker.

Following the dedication service, there will be a reception and tour of the chapel facilities. Everyone is invited to attend the celebration.

Strength can be found in talking to God — prayer

By James L. Bixler
2nd Battalion, 69th Armor
197th Infantry Brigade Chaplain

When a machine is constantly operated beyond the maufacturer's recommended limits, stresses and strains are imposed upon it that it was never intended to sustain. Parts wear down and the effectiveness of the machine decreases. It may even completely break down.

The Designer and Creator of man places limits upon each person. He has designed and limited our lives by our individual needs, abilities and strengths. When the load we carry exceeds our own limits for prolonged periods of time, we wear down. Our emotions, physical stamina and relationships suffer.

We allow many things to make demands upon our lives. Urgencies prod us through our days. The truly important gets postponed. Stress builds. Friction builds. We get angry, tired, depressed. We spend all our time on the temporary demands in our lives and have no time left over to invert in the lives of our families. We exchange treasure for trash. As we fly through our days, life blurs.

Stop! Slow down! We need to live within our limits. We need to live more wisely. Wisdom is the art of living. That art, like many skills, demands concentration. Concentration is directing our attention to a common center.

It also means to increase in strength. We can increase our strength for living when we focus our attention by talking with God daily. We increase in strength when we allow God to act upon our spirits, redirecting them to what is truly wise and worthy of our lives. Jesus, the wisest of us all, took time out of each of his demanding days to talk to God. His followers sensed the difference it made in His life and asked Him to teach them to pray. The Scriptures record what is called "The Lord's Prayer." It is a model of what praying should be about:

"Our Father Who art in heaven, hallowed be Thy name. Thy kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven. Give us this day our daily bread and forgive us our trespasses as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil." (Matthew 5:9-13).

Prayer is a time when we remember again that God is our maker. He knows our limitations, our purpose, our problems and our needs better than we do. He knows what will keep us in working order. As we spend time with God daily, we can be reminded that some of the things we are pouring so much of ourselves into are not as important as we believe.

Prayer is a time to ask that God provide what we need for today. We do not always know what is necessary for the day. We may have some stubborn wishes or great fears. In prayer, we can come to God and present to Him all of our anxieties, believing that He cares for us. We can let go of the daily pressures and worries that wear us out.

Talking with God gives us an opportunity to ask forgiveness for our blunders, for trespassing — crossing the boundaries and bringing pain to other people's lives.

When we talk to God in the way that Jesus suggested, we are also reminded of our need to forgive as well as be forgiven.

Prayer is also a time to seek God's guidance for the day, that He will remind us through the day of what is wise and right and remind us of our limits.

God knows our limits. Often we ignore them. When we do we live beyond the limits that God recommends, our physical stamina, emotions and relationships erode. When we make a practice of talking with God, we can focus our attention on what is wise and reduce the stresses in life that wear us out.

Losing weight takes motivation

By Melvin Jackson
TRADOC Headquarters

If you're overweight and are trying to lose weight, it's going to take motivation, determination, low-calorie diets and plenty of exercise to be successful in doing it.

But first — before you engage in any of these programs — consult your family physician, and consider getting a complete physical or health risk appraisal conducted.

The first step in accomplishing any goal is having the motivation. Next, you must be determined to carry it to completion. For example,, losing weight is an action that requires both of these in abundance. If the only reason you attempt to lose weight is because you have to, or someone else is making you, the liklihood of success is slim.

Determination is crucial to reaching any goal. Most people know that it's much easier to do the things they want to do. You can maximize your chances of success by keeping foremost in your mind the reasons you want to and should lose weight. Therefore, it is very important to keep the proper focus on your sound reasons for losing weight, not everyone else's.

Your attitude also plays a major role in your success or failure. The way you talk to yourself has a lot to do with your eventual achievements.

Here are some hints for cutting calories:

Use skim or lowfat milk in recipes when making puddings, sauces, soups and baked products.

Substitute plain, unsweetened lowfat yogurt or lowfat cottage cheese in recipes that call for sour cream or mayonnaise.

Trim all visible fat from meats and remove the skin from poultry before cooking.

Bake, roast, broil or braise meats rather than frying.

Chill meat broth until the fat layer solidifies on top, then skim the fat off with a spoon and discard.

Steam, broil, boil, or bake vegetables and potatoes. Some fruits are delicious when broiled or heated with added spices for extra flavor.

Go easy on sauces, butter and margarine. Season with herbs and spices instead.

Crisp-cooked vegetables usually don't require as much seasoning as over-cooked ones; they are more nutritious, too.

Try lemon juice or vinegar on salads. Cut back on regular salad dressings. For example, ¼ cup of creamy dressing equals up to 340 calories.

Check ingredient labels for fat and sugar content. Check nutrition informaion labels for total calories in each portion. If you must have a snack, have fresh fruits, a few crackers or pretzels, or low-calorie vegetables.

Note: It's not considered prudent to reduce your daily calorie intake below 1500. In any event, you should not do so without first consulting your local medical authority.

Although eating the right foods is essential to controlling weight, you also need a good physical exercise program. If your goal is achieving physical fitness as well as weight control or weight loss, follow these guidelines.

For weight loss you should:

Always eat three meals a day.

Never eat less than 1500 calories per day.

Always exercise aerobically (running, walking, swimming, bicycling, etc.) no less than five times per week.

Always exercise at least 30 minutes to three hours after consuming food for maximum performance.

For weight control you should:

Always eat three meals each day.

Continue to exercise at least five times a week.

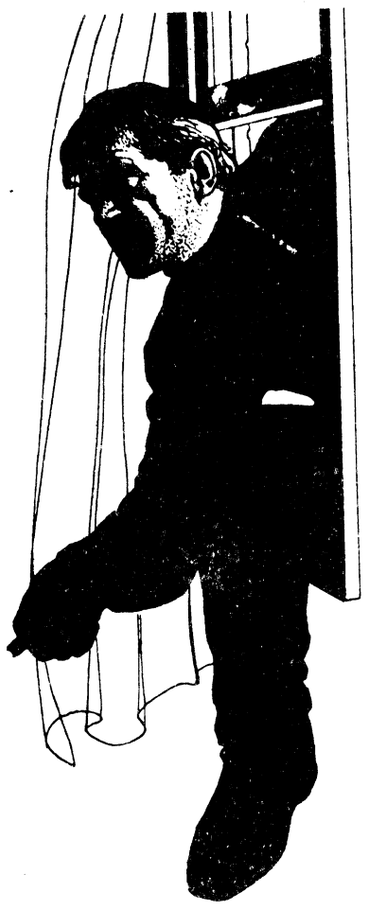
Always exercise at least 30 minutes to three hours after consuming food for maximum performances.

Using the above information on weight control and diet, you can devise your own strategy or plan on how you will accomplish your goal. However, keep in mind the following points when you are ready to start.

A good attitude: Having a good mental attitude helps self-discipline, an important ingredient.

Sensible nutrition: A diet (daily food allowance) containing the essential nutrients is necessary to prevent mental and physical fatigue.

Regular exercise: Exercise promotes physical fitness. It improves flexibility, strength, endurance and weight loss by speeding up the body's metabolism. It also helps to suppress the appetite.



Diet and exercise plan: Create your own diet and exercise plan. Keep a record and make adjustments. You have to be in control.

Rest: Adequate rest improves attitudes, posture and appearance. Lack of rest and sleep weakens resistance and willpower.

A set goal: Set a long-range objective, then get going by identifying easier-to-reach short-term goals. After the first few goals have been met, the objective will be properly focused. However, don't try to accomplish everything at once.

CRIME STOPPERS

Columbus Police Department

Columbus Crime Stoppers and the Columbus Police Department are looking for the person or persons responsible for a series of recent church burglaries.

The first burglary was reported June 5 at the Second Avenue Baptist Church. Since that incident, 11 other Columbus churches have been burglarized. They appear to be related since the methods of entry and equipment taken — stereos and sound equipment — are the same.

At this time, there are no known suspects. Anyone having any information concerning this case or individual should call Columbus Crime Stoppers at 571-5858. If your information leads to arrest and indictment of this person, you could receive a reward of up to $1,000.

Crime Stoppers also pays for information on other criminal activity, wanted fugitives and stolen property. The phone lines are open from 10 a.m.-10 p.m., Monday-Friday. Crime Stoppers serves the Columbus, Fort Benning, Phenix City and Russell County areas.

NCOs learn Black Hawk MedEvac procedure

SSgt. Paul A. Donovan, of the 498th Med. Co. (Air Ambulance), instructs a group of NCOs from HHC, 197th Inf. Bde., on the proper way to load a litter patient into a UH-60 Black Hawk.

By Kevin J. Howerton
197th Infantry Brigade correspondent

"If you want to be friends with the dustoff crew," said SSgt. Paul A. Donovan of the 498th Medical Company (Air Ambulance), "you have to know what you're doing. If you don't know what you're doing, you are going to slow us down and put us and the patients in danger."

Donovan, a medic with the largest air ambulance company in the Army, was standing in the doorway of a UH-60 Black Hawk, the Army's 15,000-pound, high-powered, high-speed helicopter presenting a class on medical evacuation to a group of 65 noncommissioned officers from Headquarters Company, 197th Infantry Brigade, as part of their NCO Development Program.

The NCOs were given a complete class on medical evacuation procedures, starting with the proper way to give a status when initially calling in. The person reporting must be able to correctly identify the patients condition, extra equipment the crew must bring, and half a dozen other important factors affecting the pilots ability to successfully pick up the patient.

"The way they presented the class was outstanding," said SSgt. Basil A. Guffey, the chemical NCOIC for the 197th Infantry Brigade.

"Before we had this class, the only thing I knew about a MedEvac was the call sign on the radio," Guffey added. "Now, I am confident that I could call for and execute a MedEvac properly."

The class also discussed the various equipment the helicopter can bring for special situations, ways of marking the landing site and loading of the patient litters onto the craft. Forest and jungle penetrators (large protected litters) can be used to hoist patients up to the helicopter when vegetation is too dense for landing.

The NCOs were also taught to load patients onto a rotating litter carrier, nicknamed the "carousel" by the helicopter crew. The carousel allows patients to be loaded quickly through the side doors, then rotated to a head-first position so the crew can better treat and monitor them during the flight.

"I had some brief training in MedEvac procedures while I was stationed in Germany, but nothing as detailed as this," said SSgt. Keith Riddick. "The run-through where we actually loaded a patient taught us everything about properly handling a MedEvac."

After attending the class, the NCOs were able to conduct an actual MedEvac to put their new skills to the test.

Aviation art relatively unknown to general public

By Rita Cipalla
Smithsonian News Service

There they are, skimming the clouds, so real you can almost touch them — two airplanes locked in deadly battle. Get closer: Imagine the searing heat from the engines, the blast of wind from the whirling propellers, the speed and grace of the two aircraft streaking by. The pilots, one German, the other British, are locked in aerial pursuit high above the clouds. It is a "Duel of Eagles."

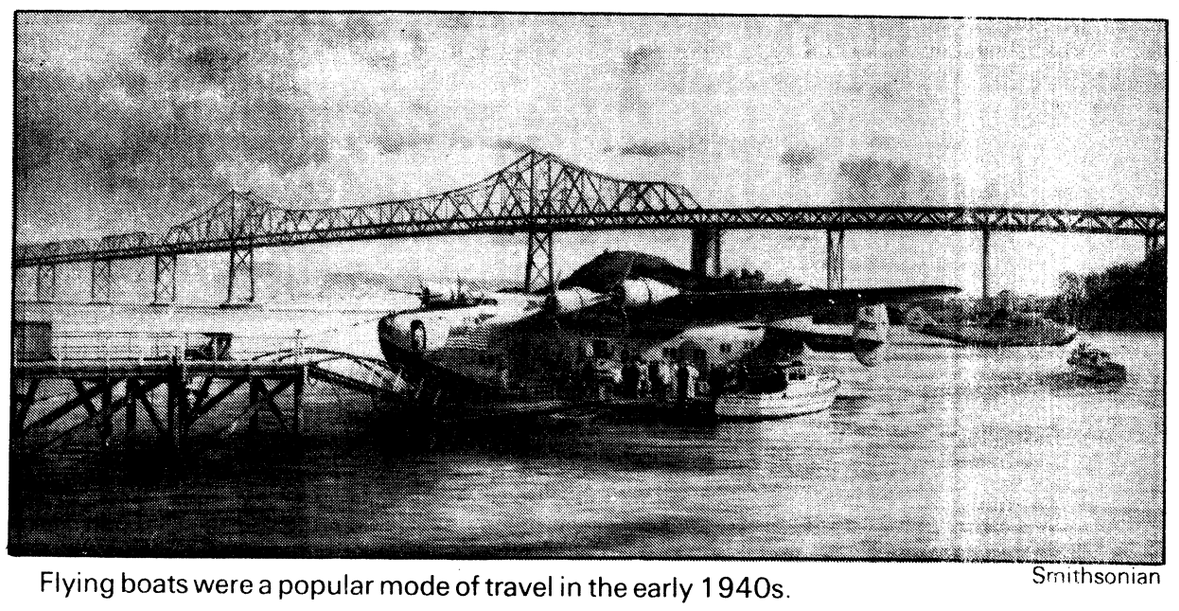
This dramatic painting of a World War II dogfight, created in 1980 by British aviation artist Robert Taylor, epitomizes a fairly new genre of art, where airplanes are front and center and a gamut of emotions — from nostalgia to heady exhilaration — are triggered. Yet except for a handful of enthusiasts, aviation art, like railroad or marine art, is relatively unknown to the general public.

"Aviation art is of recent vintage," says Mary Henderson, art curator at the Smithsonian Institution's National Air and Space Museum in Washington, D.C. "Now there is a market for realist, subject-matter art." Henderson is curator of a new exhibition opening this month, "Horizons: The Paintings and Drawings of Robert Taylor." The exhibition is made possible by funding from Pan American World Airways, Inc.

Pat Barnard, a British fine-art publisher, agrees with Henderson's assessment. "Quite a bit of aviation art has a military theme and people are interested in historical fact," he says. "The style is rooted in nostalgia. These pilots are daring young men involved in dangerous feats. The average person finds that compellingly attractive. Also, flying is familiar to all of us. Everybody flies everywhere."

Although interest in aviation art did not take off until the 1970s, artists have been "at home in the sky," pursuing aviation themes for decades, Henderson says. "In Italy, prior to World War I, for instance, a group of artists called the Futurists adopted 'movement' as their motto," she explains. "They were experimenting with depictions of speed and motion and were in love with machines. The airplane was a natural extension of their interests."

Modern art pioneer Fernard Leger echoed this early fascination with aviation. "Painting is over," he declared after visiting the 1912 Paris Air Show. "Who can do better than a propeller?" The propeller image later became a favorite symbol of Leger's Cubist period.



World War I gave many artists first-hand knowledge of the airplane. Swiss artist, Paul Klee, for example, serviced aircraft in Bavaria during the war and, perhaps not coincidentally, used flight as a continuing theme in his work. Other artists chose to romanticize the role of the flyer. British artist Norman Arnold, for example, perpetuated the legend of the fighter pilot through his watercolors of aerial dogfights over the Somme. Manfred von Richthofen, "The Red Baron," and American ace Eddie Rickenbacker were among the prominent figures he sketched.

It wasn't until World War II that the role of the aviation artist was formalized when the British Royal air Force selected artists to record all aspects of combat in the air. Frank Wootton was one of those chosen.

Born in 1914 in Sussex, England, Wootton began his career as a free-lance painter and illustrator. His ability to paint motor vehicles convincingly, soon attracted commissions from automotive and aircraft manufacturers alike. "At that time," Wootton recalls, "magazine ads showed aircraft as all nuts and bolts. There was nothing artistic about them. I wanted to change that."

One of his clients was British Overseas Airways. "In the 1930s, traveling by air meant flying in converted bombers," he says. "It was neither attractive nor comfortable. BOA decided to promote the destination, not the airplane, in its advertising. The company wanted to fly me everywhere in the world they flew to paint the locales. It was such a terrific job that I was sure it couldn't last, so I chose all the farthest places first — Hong Kong, Africa, Singapore,

POV accidents top list

Army Safety Center

Year after year, more soldiers are killed in privately owned vehicle accidents than in all other accidents throughout all other Army activities. Speeding, fatigue, abuse of alcohol and failure to use seat belts are factors in most Army POV accidents, deaths and injuries.

Speeding

Army accident records show that most fatal auto accidents involve speeding. This includes exceeding the posted legal speed limit, and driving too fast for road and weather conditions. The posted speed limit isn't necessarily the safest speed. Road and weather conditions, time of day and the amount and type of traffic all have an effect on safe speed. Slower speeds give drivers more time to react, and the lower the speed, the lower the crash forces in case a crash can't be avoided.

Fatigue

A driver who overextends himself to "drive straight through" is playing with dynamite. Accidents and fatalities have occurred because soldiers fell asleep at the wheel. Simply dozing for a couple of seconds at a time is just long enough to run off the road or into another car. In most of these cases, the main cause is fatigue. Consider the following two scenarios.

- Two privates were returning from leave and had driven through the night. The morning sun beat down on the car as they pushed on. The driver fell asleep at the wheel and hit a parked car. He was killed, and his passenger and the civilian in the parked car were injured.
- A family was on their way home for Thanksgiving. The soldier had worked all day and then drove all night, sharing the driving with his wife. It was about 6 a.m. when he apparently fell asleep at the wheel. The car drifted across the oncoming lane

Can't take the heat? Then cook outside!

By Becky Ray
Energy Management Branch

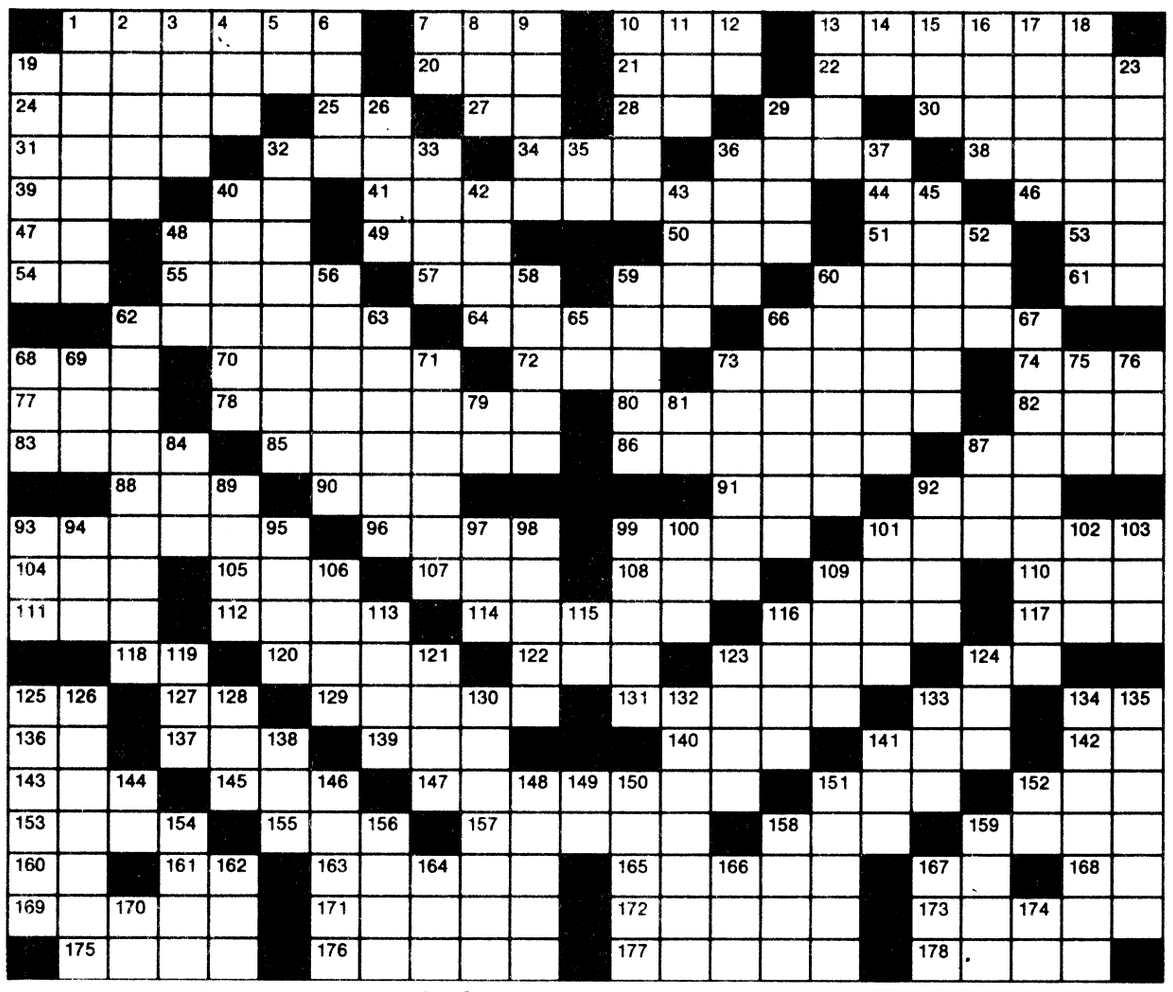
The old saying "if you can't take the heat, get out of the kitchen," usually isn't meant to be taken literally, but it's good advice for the summer months.

Ranges use lots of energy because they generate lots of heat, which heats the air in addition to cooking food. This makes your house more uncomfortable and causes air conditioners to work double-time to cool the house.

One way to avoid overheating the house while preparing cooked meals is to use toaster ovens and microwaves rather than conventional ovens as much as possible. They draw less energy and add much less heat to the air. Microwaves generally use from one-third to one-half as much electricity as a conventional oven.

Pressure cookers shorten cooking time by about two-thirds, reducing the amount of time, energy and heat added to the house.

If you do use a conventional oven, check dishes by looking through the oven window rather than opening the oven door. Each time the oven is opened, a significant amount of heat and humidity escapes. This not only makes the room hotter, but it lengthens cooking time.



By keeping the lids on pots when cooking, the heat and humidity added to the air is lowered and cooking time shortened. It also helps to match the size of the pan to the burner you're using.

Barbecuing outdoors and serving cold dishes and salads can prevent overheating the kitchen when preparing meals. Another option is to prepare dishes in the cooler early morning or late evening hours.

Taking time to carefully plan meal preparation can substantially reduce the heat and humidity added to the house. You'll not only save energy, but will avoid burning out the air conditioner and the cook.

VETERANS' Qs & As

Veterans Administration

Q — Are common-law marrages recognized by the VA?

A - Yes, if the relationship was established in a state that recognizes common-law marriages.

Q — Does the Veterans Administration sell life insurance to disabled veterans?

A — Veterans separated from service on or after April 25, 1951, who are granted a service-connected disability, may apply to the VA for up to $10,000 life insurance coverage. They must apply within one year from the date the VA notifies the veteran that his/her disability has been rated as service-connected. Recently separated veterans are eligible to convert Serviceman's Group Life Insurance to Veterans Group Life Insurance. If application is made within 120 days after separation. There are no medical requirements. After five years, the insurance can be converted to a permanent plan with any company that participates in the SGLI/VGLI program. Current coverage is $50,000.

Q — If my husband dies while hospitalized in a VA medical center, will the VA help with expenses of bring him home for burial?

A — Yes. If a veteran dies while a patient in a VA medical center, transportation expenses to the place of burial will be paid by the VA.

Q — I have a five-year level premium term insurance plan with the VA. I would like to convert to one of the permanent plans. Will I have to take a physical to meet certain health requirements?

A — The five-year level premium term insurance plan can be converted without meeting health requirements at any time the policy is in force. However, if the veteran is totally disabled, it cannot be converted to an endowment--type policy.

Q — What is the amount of the VA clothing allowance for disabled veterans? When is it payable?

A — The clothing allowance is payable annually, in August. The rate in 1988 will be $380.

Q — Is it true that veterans are eligible for a pension from the VA when they turn 65?

A — To qualify for VA pension benefits, wartime veterans must meet income requirements, have been discharged under other than dishonorable conditions after at least 90 days of active duty and be permanently and totally disabled for reasons not traceable to military service. Veterans 65 and older and not working are considered permanently and totally disabled.

SNAPSHOTS: Corps of Engineers

Army News Service

Ten facts about the Army Corps of Engineers:

The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers was born July 16, 1775, when a fortification was built at Bunker Hill to protect American soldiers from British warship bombardments.

The Corps today is the nation's largest public works engineering agency, responsible not only for military construction projects in the U.S. and overseas, but also for water resource projects such as generation of hydroelectric power, improvement of harbor and river waterways, water storage and conservation, and dam safety.

The Corps helped open the West by conducting surveys for canals, roads and railroads.

The levees in use today along the Mississippi River near St. Louis, Mo., were designed by an Army engineer, 1st Lt. Robert E. Lee.

The U.S. capitol dome, the Library of Congress and the upper two-thirds of the Washington Monument in Washington, D.C., were built by the Corps of Engineers.

Of the country's 150 largest cities today, 130 are located on navigable waterways maintained by the Corps of Engineers.

The Corps maintains 25,000 miles of U.S. waterways and 221 locks and dams.

The Corps has 40,000 civilian employees and 1,000 military personnel assigned to 14 divisions and 39 districts in the U.S. and more than 30 countries overseas.

The Corps' largest military construction project currently underway is the buildup of facilities to support the 10th Mountain Division (Light Infantry) at Fort Drum, N.Y.

The largest civilian project is the Mississippi River Basin Waterways.

How to get off mailing lists

Better Business Bureau

People who have busy schedules may enjoy the convenience of shopping or donating to charities by mail. Even so, some may wish to cut down the amount of direct mail they receive from businesses and non-profit organizations.

In a direct mail campaign, organizations may send out millions of solicitations, seeking new support or business. To reach the people who are most likely to respond, the organization may rent or exchange mailing lists that group individuals according to common characteristics. It is estimated that there are some 11,000 lists available for direct mail campaigns.

It is unlikely that you can have your name removed from all mailing lists since new lists are constantly being created. However, you can write to each organization you're not interested in hearing from and ask them to remove you from their mailing list. Be sure to send the address label that appears on the outside of the envelope. If you are receiving duplicate mailings, include all the labels addressed to you showing all the variations.

The Direct Marketing Association will, upon request, delete your name from national mailing lists of certain direct mail marketing firms. When you write to the Association, be sure to specify if you wish to have your name removed from either commercial mailing lists, lists of nonprofit soliciting organizations or both. Write to DMA, "Mail Preference Service," P.O. Box 3861, Grand Central Station, New York, N.Y. 10163.

In addition, when you make a donation or purchase by mail, tell the organization to drop your name from any list that's rented or exchanged.

Andersonville hosts Torchlight Tours

Andersonville Historic Site

Andersonville National Historic Site will once again sponsor an evening Torchlight Tour tomorrow at 8:30 p.m.

This year's programs are quite different from those of the past. The park staff will be using the newly reconstructed stockade wall as a backdrop for the outdoor stage where the programs will be viewed. Park volunteers will present skits depicting daily life during 1864 and 1865 within the prison walls.

Park ranger, Jim Small says, "The conditions at Andersonville during the Civil War were harsh for both the prisoners and the guards alike. This year's Torchlight Tours accurately portray those hardships, as well as provide a basic understanding of life at the prison camp," he said and added, "Those attending the tours will see daily prison activities reenacted, such as issuing rations, arrival of new prisoners and the hope of escape."

The program is based on research from prisoners' diaries, letters and newspapers written shortly after the war.

There will be two other performances, one on Aug. 20 and another Oct. 1. The public is invited to attend. No fee will be charged for these outdoor dramas. For more information, call Andersonville National Historic Site at (912) 924-0343.

South America. In fact, the job lasted nearly 10 years."

In 1939, Wootton volunteered for the RAF and was later commissioned to record the activities of British squadrons in action during and after the Battle of Britain. In 1944, following the invasion of Normandy, he was sent overseas to record RAF operations in France and in Belgium.

Wootton shared the life of the pilots, winning their admiration as, vividly and accurately, he illustrated their aircraft in action as well as aircraft maintenance on the ground. "It was a wonderful opportunity to be with the pilots on the spot," he says.

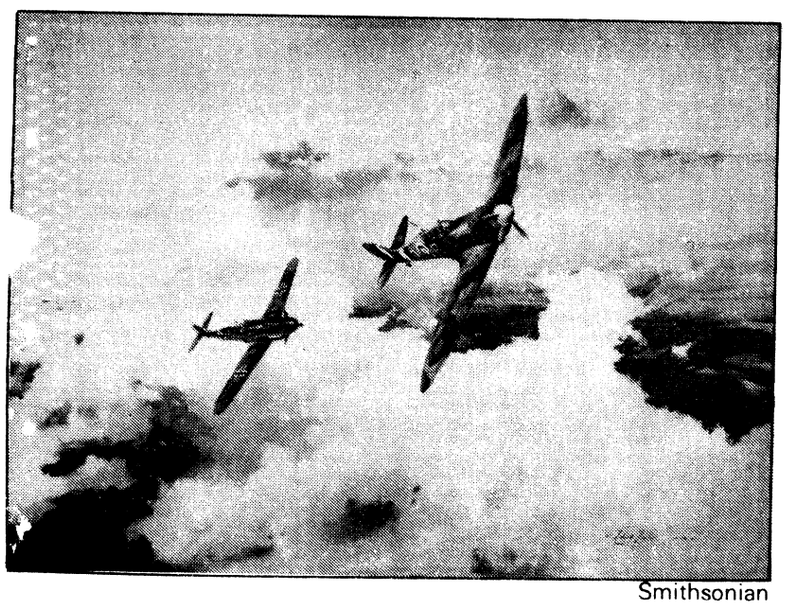
Improvising in the field was the rule, he adds. "Because of weight limitations, I would sometimes abandon my bedroll in favor of rolls of canvas. If I ran out of turpentine with which to thin my paints, I simply used petrol."

Wootton continues to paint aircraft today. Respected for his choice of subject matter, he is also renowned for his careful compositions, the luminous light and color, which infuse his work and the intriguing shapes and sizes he employs. Wootton, who is currently the president of the Guild of Aviation Artists, has paintings in Air Force mess halls, museums and private collections worldwide. As one critic wrote, "He is unique in his ability to set this curious, ungainly, though often beautiful creation of metal and wood and fabric, the airpane, naturally among its surroundings."

And though he is well-known for his paintings of landscapes and horses, "above all, Wootton celebrates flying," Henderson says, "in all of its exhilaration, delight and joy."

Like Wootton, British artist Robert Taylor captures on canvas the world of the pilot. Born in Bath, England, in 1946, Taylor attended art school there. After graduation, he became an apprentice framer and later a painting restorer for a Bath art dealer, continuing to draw and paint during his free time. Finally, a number of successful commissions convinced him to devote himself full time to art.

Taylor made a name for himself by portraying aerial events of World War II, but he is also a skilled marine artist. His true love, however, is neither the airplane nor the ship, rather, the depiction of the beauty and power of nature. "My favorite part in any painting is the overall aspect of clouds and the sea," he says, "the vastness, the all-powerfulness of nature. Although an airplane may be the most prominent feature, for me the main drama lies in the sky."



Creating this atmosphere is Taylor's trademark as is the absolute authenticity of events he dramatizes. To get every detail right, Taylor relies on exhaustive research to recreate a particular scene.

"I use photos and the written word to give me a feel for a scene," he explains. "Whenever possible, I interview the pilots who flew the aircraft and question them about a particular event. I also build my own airplane models and use them to get the attitude or position right. I'll hang a model in my studio in all kinds of directions, to envision it free and moving in the air."

His painting "Duel of Eagles" depicts British ace, Douglas Bader in his Spitfire being pursued by German Luftwaffe ace, Adolf Galland in a Messerschmitt Me 109. To get the painting as accurate as possible, Taylor met with both men to discuss what the scene looked like. He later expressed his trepidation in meeting these former aces. "Both men had been wing leaders. . . was used to having his own way," he wrote. "How on earth was I to compose a painting in which both combatants would agree?"

Taylor's worrying was for naught. Although his first two sketches were turned down because of problems with the composition, a third was enthusiastically approved by the two former adversaries.

The talent of Robert Taylor, Frank Wootton and other aviation artist — such as American painters Keith Ferris, R.G. Smith and William S. Phillips — has helped interest in this subject to continue growing. Thanks to their creations, thousands of armchair pilots can now witness the spectacular rhythm and beauty of flight, the heart-stopping drama of an aerial encounter or the mist-draped moon from above.

and hit a culvert. He and his 7-year-old son were killed instantly. His wife suffered multiple injuries but survived. Their 17-month-old son was not injured. He was buckled into an infant car seat.

Knowing the things that can make drivers drowsy, and avoiding them, is the best insurance against falling asleep at the wheel. Follow these safety measures:

- Be fresh and alert when starting on a trip. If an emergency trip must be made to some distant place, consider taking a plane or bus instead of trying to drive.
- Avoid alcohol and all other drugs.
- On long trips, use about one-fourth of the total driving time for rest breaks. A good rule is to stop and relax after every two or three hours of driving. This should include some form of exercise such as walking to stretch leg muscles.
- Avoid overextending and driving "straight through." It is best to drive in the daytime. When traveling at night, avoid driving past normal bedtime. When possible, don't travel alone. Share the driving with another qualified driver.
- Avoid using drugs to keep awake. Instead, try drinking coffee and nibbling on snacks to prevent drowsiness.
- Listening to the radio can also help drivers stay awake, but avoid soft, soothing music or heavy meals. They can cause drowsiness. The best programs are talk shows and newscasts.
- Stress to every soldier that drowsy drivers are only seconds away from being dead drivers.

Drinking and driving

Drinking and driving is the number-one cause of fatal POV accidents. Soldiers ages 17 to 25 years old are most often involved in these accidents. Most of these young people are new at both driving and drinking — a deadly combination.

Alcohol not only slows a person's reaction time but also affects his judgement. Drinking drivers tend to become reckless. They lose their ability to recognize hazards. They become a threat to themselves, their passengers and to others.

Not everyone heeds the message that drinking and driving don't mix. TV and radio commercials, billboards and magazines tell the nation that tolerance toward drinking is a thing of the past. States are raising the drinking age to 21 and are beefing up enforcement of laws. Stiff penalties for drunk driving are mandatory in many states and foreign countries. All these efforts are having a positive effect.

The Army's crackdown on drinking and driving parallels efforts in the civilian arena. Regulations set tough penalties for driving while intoxicated and mandate an immediate, automatic one-year suspension of on-post driving privileges for refusing to take a blood-alcohol test when apprehended for driving while intoxicated. These are in addition to actions that can be taken by Army authorities using state and local laws.

A letter of reprimand signed by a general officer will be placed in the records of soldiers convicted of drunk driving on or off post and of soldiers who refuse to take a blood-alcohol test. No promotion board, local or HQDA, will look favorably on soldiers who have such a letter in their files. Alcohol-abuse referral and counseling may also result.

Safety belts not used

At least half the soldiers killed in car wrecks last year may have lived if they had been buckled in. More people are killed from being thrown around inside the car or being thrown out of it than from the crash. In fact, the chances of being killed are 30 times greater if a person is thrown out of the car. Accident records show that soldiers wearing safety belts are 70 percent less likely to be killed or seriously hurt than unbelted soldiers. And shoulder harnesses reduce the chance of injury up to 90 percent.

POV accident prevention

Information and education programs are the heart of POV accident prevention. Comand interest, accountability and direction are vital elements. NCOs must be examples as well as instructors for their soldiers.

- Stress safety every day, not just as a checklist item before holidays.
- Use your installation's safety professionals. They can help you develop a comprehensive POV program that includes follow-ups to safety deficiencies. It's important to correct problems before they cause an accident.
- Ensure your soldiers are aware of the penalties of a driving-while-intoxicated charge.
- Stress the potential for injuring or killing themselves while driving and drinking. Speeding has the same potential.
- Safety belt use is a requirement on Army installations. Encourage your soldiers to use them all the time. Set the example.
- Warn your soldiers about the dangers of driving when they are tired or sleepy. Remind them that very few trips are worth risking their lives.

Finally, as you begin any travel, remember that your safety and well-being are important to your family, the Army and the nation.

Tyler Williams demonstrates his championship form during the golf tournament.

Williams wins USAIC Golf

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

Tyler Williams of Company B, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment's golf game was certainly up to "par," when he won the Fort Benning, U.S. Army Infantry Center Golf Championship last week with scores of 75 and 79 on a par 72 course.

Williams also led the way for his unit as a member of the battalion team. The team players, Tyler Williams, Jack Eley, Michael Haley, Gregory Hale, Gregory McLaughlin and Thomas Suitt won the title with a total score of 679.

36th Engineer Group team members, Eric Wakefield, Charles Aikens, Mario Campos, Charles Stenson and Kenneth O'Conner closely followed the 29th team with a score of 698, earning them the 2nd-place title in the tournament.

Co. B Condors beat Charlie Rock, 6-4

George Mingee

Condors' Gary Stewart smashes a ground ball down the third base line for a single against Charlie Rock.

By George Mingee
197th Infantry Brigade correspondent

The Condors from Co. B, 2nd Bn., 18th Inf. belted Charlie Rock, Co. C, 2nd Bn., 18th Inf. to win the game 6-4 in six innings of play.

Raymond Frazier of the Condor's singled in the bottom of the 1st inning and was followed by two more base hits and a homer by coach Roy McCage to take a 4-0 lead.

It wasn't until the bottom of the third inning that the Condors struck once more. Frazier again made contact with the ball, but this time smashing a center field home-run driving in a teammate to make the score 5-0.

In the top of the fifth inning, Charlie Rock made the scoreboard when Larry Dailey scored off a double by Mike Hoffman. With another run scoring later, the inning ended 5-2.

The Condors didn't go unanswered in the fifth inning. Frazier's double set him up to be driven in by teammate Mark Jones to give his team a score of 6-2.

Charlie Rock scored two runs in the sixth inning, but were unable to tie the score losing to the Condors 6-4 in a close game.

U.S. sweeps CISM shoot

By Tommy Pool
USAMU Public Affairs Office

Propelled by gold medal performances from Fort Benning soldiers, the United States swept the majority of awards during this year's Military (CISM) Shooting Championships held recently in Lahti, Findland.

The annual competition attracted more than 200 of the top military marksmen in the world and represented a total of 25 nations.

Those countries that participated in the matches were: Austria, Algeria, West Germany, Belgium, Brazil, Chile, South Korea, Denmark, United Arab Emirates, Spain, Finland, France, Greece, Ireland, Italy, Luxemburg, Norway, Oman, Netherlands, Portugal, Sweden, Switzerland, Tunisia, Turkey and the United States.

Shooting events during the CISM matches featured precision slow fire as well as rapid fire for military rifle and pistol matches in both team and individual competition.

During the individual rifle events, USMU's Capt. Glenn Dubis set a new CISM record and won both gold medals in 300-meter slow fire and rapid fire competition.

Dubis scored a total of 586 out of 600 points in the precision slow fire event that matched the current world record and raised the old CISM mark of 584, by two points.

Second place in the event went to Finnish shooter, Ralf Westerlund, who scored 582 and was followed by Capt's Steve Goff and Kurt Fitz-Randolph, who tied for 5th place at 578.

In the 300-meter rapid fire championship, Dubis led the field with 575 points to win the gold medal, while Westerlund of Finland again finished in second place at 565.

Other individual winners included USAMU's 1st Lt. Denise Loring in the Women's 50-meter rifle event, and Sgt. Roxanne Conrad of the U.S. Marine Corps, in the Women's 25-meter pistol competition.

Loring fired a total of 573 to win the rifle event by seven points over Vreni Ryter of Switzerland, while Conrad finished with a score of 555, for a narrow one-point victory in the pistol championship over Erika Oyaneder of Chile.

Marine MSgt. Ricardo Rodriquez, also won the silver medal in the precision center fire pistol championship with 589 out of 600, only one point behind the winning total of Seppo Makenen of Finland.

During the CISM team championships, the events were marked by close competition between the United States and Finland throughout the matches.

Members of the winning CISM rifle team were Capt's Glenn Dubis, Steve Goff, Kurt Fitz-Randolph, SP4 Thomas Tames, Maj. Robert Aylward (team captain) and William Krilling (team coach), all from USAMU.

USAMU personnel who competed on the U.S. pistol squad were Capt. John McNally, MSgt. Erich Buljung, SFC Jimmie McCoy and SSgt. Ray Arredondo. Other pistol members included MSgt. Ricardo Rodriquez and Sgt. Mitchell Reed of the U.S. Marine Corps.

Competitors that participated in women's events included 1st. Lt. Denise Loring, PFC Audrey Hayes (USAMU), 1st Lt. Rhonda Barush, 2nd Lt. Mary Crutcher (U.S. Army), Sgt. Conrad (USMC) and SSgt. Barbara Holtermann of the USAF.

In the race for the best overall CISM nation award, the title was won by the United States with a combined rifle and pistol team aggregate score of 9,199 points.

Host country, Finland, placed second in the team standings with 9,166 points, while Norway was third at 9,162.

This year's victory also marks the seventh consecutive overall team title won by the United States, a record for the CISM matches.

Muddy water plagues fishing tournaments

Earl Bentz & Steve Price
1988 Outboard Marine Corporation

It happens every spring, summer and autumn, to novice and professional anglers alike: a long-planned fishing trip or a big tournament is plagued with rain. The water muddies, and fishing action slows to a standstill.

At times like this, many bass fishermen pack their tackle and head home. Others determinedly stay on the water, trying to salvage whatever they can from the conditions. A few, like top bass tournament professional Denny Brauer of the Evinrude Pro Staff, have learned how to catch bass in muddy water.

"When the water turns muddy," explains Brauer, the 1987 B.A.S.S. Angler of the Year and a four-time winner in national competion, "I move to the backs of tributary creeks. Here, the water will muddy the fastest from shoreline runoff, but it will also clear the fastest, too."

"The backs of creeks have another advantage," adds Brauer, "which is that they will also have the warmest water. This means the bass there will be the most active, an important factor if the lake you're fishing is still cold. Most of the pros I compete against agree that cold, muddy water is just about the worst of all possible bass fishing conditions."

At times, the Evinrude pro notes, it is possible to "out run" muddy water by fishing the lower end of a big impoundment. Normally, upper lake tributaries muddy the fastest because they are the most shallow, but on some impoundments that are basically all shallow, even lower lake and creeks will muddy quickly.

In the creeks, Brauer looks for different forms of cover to fish. Muddy water often means rising water that covers new shoreline, and this "new" cover, such as grasses, bushes and shrubs, frequently attracts bass.

"In rising water, it seems as if the fresh cover filters out mud and silt," Brauer explains, "and bass move into these areas, even into extremely shallow water."

These are active bass, too. Spinnerbaits retrieved beside the brush, or jigs dropped into the cover, often draw vicious strikes. Brauer likes a single blade willow leaf spinnerbait that features a size 5 blade and a white or chartreuse skirt. Crank baits are also good lure choices.

"In newly flooded vegetation," says Brauer, "some of the fish will hold extremely tight on cover. They'll also be suspended, so another way to catch them is by flipping or pitching. For this, I'd recommend a jig or plastic worm, especially if the bass aren't aggressive and won't hit the faster lures."

Another muddy water fishing technique many of the top pros use, particularly on lakes with abundant vegetation like milfoil, hydrilla or water hyacinths, is to fish the outside edge of that vegetation. It sometimes appears as if this vegetation acts like a filter to the silt, so bass concentrate as close to it as possible.

Under these conditions, one of the top lure choices is a buzz bait, especially if the water is warm and the bass are aggressive. Brauer prefers a buzz bait that makes a lot of noise and creates plenty of commotion. He retrieves it as slowly as possible along the edge of the vegetation; the heavier the greenery, the slower he makes his retrieve.

"In really muddy water, I think sound is important," explains Brauer, "so I use lures that create sound by moving water, such as the big blade spinnerbait, a buzz bait, or a wobbling crank bait. If I fish a worm in muddy water, I use one that has a vibrating tail that swims when I move it."

On lakes characterized with steep, high bluffs, bass frequently move to the ends of those bluffs to escape muddy water. There, explains Brauer, where the banks don't slope as severely, the composition of the bottom-growing moss, may be present. Bass may be holding tight to this cover, just as they do in creeks where the water is rising.

In this type of water, the jig and plastic worm are excellent lure choices and should be worked slowly in and around the cover. For active fish, a crank bait can also be tried.

Still another muddy water fishing technique is to work the leading edge of the muddy water as it moves slowly down a lake. Bass probably aren't actually moving ahead of the mud, as some anglers believe, but rather, are simply becoming more aggressive.

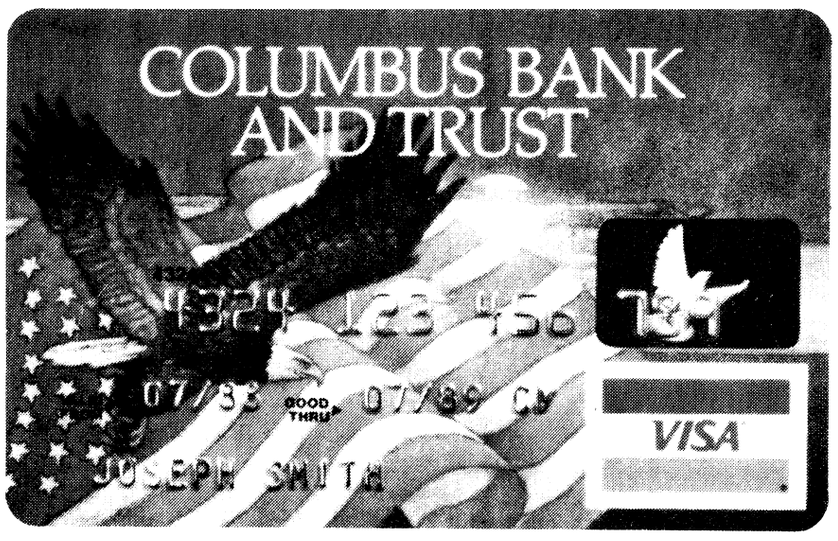
Good lure choices for this type of fishing include spinnerbaits and crank baits. Brauer recommends using slightly larger lures that produce a lot of vibration, and working them at various depths between the muddy and clear water.

The big one that doesn't get away

By Aaron Pass
PM Editorial Service

The big one doesn't always get away. Sometimes, when an angler and an underwater leviathan catch one another, the angler wins the ensuing tug of war.

Probably every angler fantasizes about catching a real trophy fish, which can be displayed on the office or den wall. But when that wall hanger of fantasy becomes the lunker of reality at the side of the boat, what the angler does next can have a major effect on the quality of the mounted trophy.



- Land and handle the fish carefully. Do not let the fish flounce around knocking off scales and possibly bruising and tearing its skin.
- Remove the hooks carefully. Take care not to rip or tear the tender membranes of the fish's mouth. These are very difficult for a taxidermist to repair.
- Do not put a trophy fish on a stringer. A stringer does even more damage to the fish's mouth and invites bruising and skin damage. A live well or ice chest is best. If neither is available, wrap the fish in a wet towel and keep it in the shade.
- Take pictures. For the most realistic mount, good clear, color photos taken while the fish is fresh will help the taxidermist reproduce the coloration and makings of your trophy.
- Do not cut, gut or skin the fish. Absolutely no meat can be removed before mounting. You can't have your trophy and eat it too.
- Preserve the fish by freezing. Rinse the fish in clean water, wrap well to prevent freezer burn and place in freezer. Freeze fish on a flat surface and do not stack anything on top of the fish. Be particularly careful not to break or damage the frozen fins.
- Select a good taxidermist. Look at examples (of the same species as your trophy) of the work of several taxidermists. Talk to the taxidermist for a clear understanding of price, waiting period, etc.
- Shipping should be part of your initial understanding. Wrap the fish well and package with dry ice. Use a sturdy carton and cushion the fish to protect it from damage. Include a letter describing the type of mount you want, and also include the color photo. Ship "Perishable-Rush," "Fragile-Do Not Crush." Alert the taxidermist that the fish is on the way.

Remember, despite the skill of the taxidermist, the quality of the trophy is greatly dependent on the initial handling of the fish and its condition when the taxidermist receives it.

Trophy fish are few and far between. Give your big catch the care it deserves and select a competent taxidermist,and you will get a trophy of which you can be justly proud.

ELECTRICIAN

Are you tired of the usual electrician's job? Would you like to travel for a high tech distribution system's company that's going places? Would you like to work on state of the art distribution equipment?

We're Distech, a Columbus based company that specializes in custom built computer systems utilizing laser beam scanners.

We need an electrician with:
- Strong electrical background
- Industrial control experience, preferably conveyor
- Ability to read electrical drawings and do wiring and cabinet building (voltages ranging from 12 volt DC to 660 AC, with work typically 230 or 408 3 phase power) PLC knowledge (preferable Allen Bradley) and exposure to electronics would be a plus.

Extensive travel is required for this position.

We can offer the successful candidate:
- Competitive compensation
- Paid benefits, including health, life and dental insurance
- Paid vacations and holidays
- Retirement plan

If you want something different in the electrician's field and feel you are qualified, send your resume to:

Our Recipe for a great deal

1. Give a Ledger-Enquirer gift subscription.
2. And a FREE Sara Spano Cookbook

We've added another ingredient to sweeten our home delivery offer. Besides saving money, convenience and service, anyone ordering a 7-day, paid-in-advance subscription for eight weeks or longer, will receive a copy of Sara Spano's "Through The Years" Cookbook. The cookbook is as much a part of our newspaper as the paper itself. It contains over 450 of the most popular recipes that were collected and run on the food pages by former Food Editor Sara Spano during her years at the Ledger-Enquirer. It's the recipe for a great deal, but it's only available for a limited time. Offer good for anyone who has been a non-subscriber for at least 60 days. Subscribe now.

DEERS enrollment required

MACH: Current DoD directives require that all persons requesting health care be properly enrolled in the Defense Enrollment Eligibility Reporting System and present proper identification prior to care. Anyone not enrolled in DEERS and/or not having a proper ID card may receive care if the sponsor or parent certifies eligibility. In doing so, the sponsor/guardian will be required to sign a form agreeing to provide a valid ID card and/or proof of DEERS enrollment within 30 days or pay for the visit at appropriate civilian emergency rate. Currently that rate is $60 per visit for outpatient care.

Bussey's daughter sets record straight

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The daughter of the gentleman who built Riverside, the home of Fort Benning's commanding generals since 1919, came "home," last week to "set the record straight."

Sarah B. Bickerstaff, daughter of Arthur Bussey, was nearly 3 years old when the family first began its summer pilgrimages in 1909 to what is now known as "Riverside." Currently living in Columbus, she visited her old homestead to talk about the history of the mansion and tell Sally Leuer what the different rooms were used for when she and her four brothers and sisters began spending their summers here.

Following a tour of the home, Bickerstaff joined Leuer on a music room settee for a lively, non-stop monologue on what life was like "in the country."

Not even pausing long enough to sip her tea or take a bite from the cookie she held in her right hand, Bickerstaff regaled her hostess with stories of snakes, "you can't live in the country without knowing how to kill snakes," to the family delicacies, "I'll never again eat possum or chitlins."

She remembered the heat of summer, "Whoever said summers in the country weren't as hot as summers in the city was crazy," and the mosquitos, "It was too hot for mosquito nets, so all summer long our legs were full of scabs from all the scratching. Mother used tincture of green soap — first liquid soap I ever saw — then she wrapped us with guaze and poured on Gentian Violet. We bought it by the quart."

Bickerstaff also remembers the "rot gut liquor" that flowed freely.

"We girls never rode home from a party with boys who'd been drinking. They said we couldn't enjoy the party unless we drank. We told them at least we remembered the party."

Although the family only spent two winters at Riverside, she remembers the winters well.

"Mother was, to say the least, inclined to be a hypochondriac, not only with herself, but with us. She liked to bundle us up in the winter with high shoes that we had to wrap around our ankles, and those horrible long drawers. Then there were those black, sateen bloomers. How they smelled."

She has since forgiven the Atlanta belles who used to come to Columbus to visit. "When we went up there, they were too snooty to visit with us, but when they came here, all they wanted to do was go out to the dump and shoot rats. They've mellowed since and aren't nearly as uppity. I've made some fast friends with them since those days."

Bickerstaff's tales of summer water fights with fire hoses, ponds of crystal clear water, of playing Indians in her father's bathrobe and slippers, and the visits to see Mrs. Lamb, "big and fat, big bosums, which food fell on sometimes," came all too quickly to an end for her audience, but not before she dispelled the rumor about "all the fancy balls and Southern belles." "We had too many relatives staying with us to be hosting balls and garden parties," letting her listeners know that if they wanted facts, they needed to go to the source instead of getting third-hand information.

At 82, Bickerstaff is still an excellent source.

Airborne School changes hands

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

Lt. Col. James Holt handed over the responsibility of commanding the U.S. Army Airborne School 1st Bn, 507th PIR to Lt. Col. Mark Lewis in a ceremony recently on York Field.

The school is the only one of its type in the U.S. military and turns out more than 28,000 basic airborne, jumpmaster and pathfinder students from each branch of the service.

During Holt's tenure as commander of the unit, the mode of training was changed from committee to unit training, which follows the mentor style of leadership of today's Army.

Holt will be departing Fort Benning to attend the School of Advanced Military Studies at Fort Leavenworth as the Senior Service College Advanced Operational Studies, War College, Fellow.

Time nears for school registration

By Beth Middlemiss
Fort Benning Schools

The first day of school is only a little more than a month away. The Fort Benning Schools will begin their 1988-89 school year on Aug. 30. It is time for all students — kindergarten through 8th grade — to register.

This year, registration will be conducted throughout most of the month of August in all eight post schools. Rather than asking parents to come on just one or two days, parents are asked to choose the date and time that best fits their needs.

Past practice indicates that there are large crowds on the first couple of days of the registration process. Parents who wish to avoid a long wait should consider this when choosing a registration time.

Registration days and times are:
Aug. 2-5, 8-11 a.m. and 1-2:30 p.m.
Aug. 8-12, 8-11 a.m. and 1-2:30 p.m.
Aug. 15-19, 8-11 a.m. and 1-2:30 p.m.
Aug. 22-25, 8-11 a.m. and 1-2:30 p.m.
Aug. 29, 8-11 a.m. and 1-2:30 p.m.

Parents should bring certain items to the school when they register students. The items are determined by the student's age and grade and whether the child has previously attended a Fort Benning School.

Parents of all students who have previously attended Fort Benning schools (except kindergarten) need to complete and sign registration forms — nothing needs to be brought to the school.

Parents of all students who are new to the Fort Benning School System should bring last year's report card or grade placement record and an immunization certificate.

Parents of all kindergarten and first grade students who are new to the Fort Benning School System should bring a birth certificate and proof of physical examination.

Santa's Castle opens after renovation

By Shawn Bryson
Bayonet staff writer

Maj. Gen. Kenneth C. Leuer, post commander, helped cut the ribbon that officially reopened Santa's Castle in Soldiers' Plaza July 22 after six months of renovation.

Santa's Castle is a nonprofit organization made up of volunteers who collect, clean and donate new and used toys to needy military families during the Christmas season.

According to Diane Gravatt, vice chairman of Santa's Castle, soldiers from Company A, 43rd Engineer Battalion, 36th Engineer Group started the renovation by gutting the whole building in January.

The 26 soldiers of the 1st Platoon, who did all the renovations, worked long hours to get the job done, including nights and weekends, Gravatt said.

"The soldiers did a great job getting the building ready; their morale always seemed to be high," she said.

According to 1st Lt. Patricia Bedard, 1st Platoon leader, the morale of the soldiers was due to the cause.

"The soldiers stayed motivated because they took a lot of individual pride in what they were doing for the kids," Bedard said.

The rebuilding of Santa's Castle was done in two phases she explained.

"All of the toys were moved downstairs so we could work on the upstairs first," she said.

OPINION

VARIOUS VOICES: What do you like about being stationed at Fort Benning?

SP4 David Mitchell, HHC, 1st Bn., 29th Inf. Regt. — "The thing I like best about being stationed here is the geographical location. Fort Benning is close to Atlanta and the beaches of Florida."

2nd Lt. David VanBuskirk, Co. C, 2nd Bn., 11th Inf. Regt. — "I like Fort Benning because of the military schools it offers. It is kind of like a one-stop shop for an infantryman."

Linda Clancy, family member — "I like being stationed here because it's a nice post. The weather here is perfect and the shopping facilities are good, plus the cost of living is relatively low."

Maj. Dan McIver, HQ, ITC — "I like being stationed at Fort Benning because this is the 'Home of the Infantry' and for an infantryman, this is the best place to be stationed."

PFC Gary Gudgeon, Co. B, 1st Bn., 11th Inf. Regt. — "I think the thing I like best about being stationed at Fort Benning is all the recreational facilities located on post. There is horseback riding, boat rentals at Uchee Creek, as well as the many recreation centers. These activities give me something to do with my spare time and a chance to meet people."

SP4 Darrell Baker, HHC, 2nd Bn., 11th Inf. — "I like being stationed at Fort Benning because it's close to my home. I also like it because the weather is nice."

Parking lots remain a battle ground

By Clyde Snively
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Anthropologists just released the results of an in-depth study on human engineering. I share it with the Fort Benning community as a public service.

These intrepid scientists are at this very moment announcing to the world that the human head, perched atop the human neck, is capable of turning. In other words, without moving our torsos, we can, by turning our heads to the left and right, cover a 360 degree range with our eyes.

Amazing, isn't it.

And why am I sharing this information with you, the O.D. masses? It's because parking lots remain the most dangerous place to drive on post. It's rare when a day passes without at least one parking lot accident being reported. It's not rare to see five accidents in one day.

I can only surmise that the public is unaware of the marvelous things that can be done with the head, besides think.

There are a few other discoveries I've made that probably need to be passed along.

First, when you see the white lights on the rear of a car come on, it means the car will soon be heading in your direction. Interestingly, if you or the backer fail to stop, and obviously the backer won't stop if he doesn't use his head to turn and look behind him, a collision will result.

Cars are no longer made of steal. They are made of fiberglass and plastic. The material is expensive. To replace the material is even more expensive.

I mentioned stopping.

Stopping is accomplished by depressing the brake pedal. It's next to the gas pedal. Hopefully the motorist will use the same foot he uses for depresssing the gas pedal since this will cause him to take his foot off the gas, thus preventing him from hitting both pedals and finding out that more than likely a heavy foot on the gas will override a heavy foot on the brake.

Yes, Wilma, I realize a horn will warn a backing motorist that you are on his tail, but it may also startle the poor driver into pushing down on the accelerator even harder. It's better to be safe than right.

I realize that you, who are reading this column know all this. But I'm providing this information to warn you of the unwashed who don't read and who don't know about looking behind before backing, or who come tearing into your lane out of nowhere while you are trying to backup.

The way I look at it, given the number of cars on post, the number of parking lot accidents per week, the odds are good that one of us could be a parking lot accident victim–or perpetrator–during our three-or four-year tour here. Of course, this also means that civilians really stand a great chance of getting hit in one of our parking lots.

While in the public service mood, let me add a few notes on security.

I realize we all wear O.D., if not on our person, at least in our hearts. In other words, one big happy family.

Doesn't always work that way. You park a car overnight with fancy stereo equipment, radar detectors and other delectables, chances of seeing it in your car the next day are not good–whether it's locked or not. There are some people on post who are very adept at removing these items without being seen.

And if they can't get past the lock on the door, then they'll just bust out a window and take it anyway.

I realize this might be one of the reasons you like to darken your windows so no one can see in. Guess what. Columbus police are pulling folks over and charging them $75 to $100 a roll.

Finally, bicyclists. Big bike theft ring operating. It's moving through the various housing areas, snarfing up unsecured or poorly secured bikes.

Not finished afterall. Our new NCOIC just told me his hanging plants were ripped off the day he put them out. He doesn't take kindly to this, so beware. He's thinking of hiding on his roof and dropping pitbulls down on you.

I personally like what one gal did when she heard about her friend's poseys being stolen off a loved one's gravesite. She mixed up a beautiful bouquet to leave for the thieves. They were laced with poison ivy and poison oak.

Now that's what I call creative.

Reader concerned with leased housing

My mind was filled with consternation upon reading the article, "Congress okays junior enlisted quarters here," July 8.

From the limited information in the article, to provide housing for junior enlisted soldiers and their families, Congress has authorized Fort Benning to build 250 units on land to be procurred within 20 miles, 30 minutes of Fort Benning. The units will be leased from the developer for 20 years.

Why procure land when Fort Benning has an abundance of acreage in Georgia and Alabama? After the 20 year lease, then what? The need for the housing will surely outlast the lease.

Did anyone that was so concerned about the financial hardship of the junior enlisted soldier ever stop to consider the feasibility of transportation for a soldier who is housed up to 20 miles from Fort Benning?

A 20-mile range could put the soldier in Harris, Russell or Chattahoochee county — far away from public transportation. Will the Army furnish shuttle buses for the soldier to reach his place of duty and for his family to be afforded the services/support of Fort Benning?

The distant location of the apartments in itself will impose a financial hardship for the soldier to procure reliable, economical transportation and the purchase of fuel for the commute.

I couldn't agree more that the junior enlisted soldiers should be provided with affordable housing; however, I feel the proposed way of providing the facilities leaves much to be desired by the soldier and the taxpayer.

If the Army is interested in alleviating the shortage of affordable housing for junior enlisted soldiers, why not:

- Use existing government land and build government-owned apartments to meet the needs of the soldiers now and in the future;
- Convert existing quarters at Fort Benning to Junior Enlisted Quarters — causing those with more lucrative incomes to seek housing off post, or;
- Lease existing apartments adjacent to Fort Benning (the Army-leased guest house facilities from the Camellia Motel in the 70s under the auspices of the All Volunteer Army concept.)

Helen B. Quinn

DEH responds to letter on enlisted quarters

Section 801 housing for military families, established as a public law in 1984, mandates that 801 housing be constructed off post on privately-owned land.

Although Fort Benning is a large installation with over 181,000 acres, we have a large training mission that effectively utilizes available land. As much as we would like to see these quarters built on post, this program will not permit it.

As you already know, the Army does not now provide exclusive transportation for military family housing residents on post, and it will not provide transportation to the soldiers and families residing in this planned complex.

All proposals submitted will be graded on a number of things, one of which will be the availability of local transportation. However, the soldier will be expected to provide his own transportation between his duty station and his residence, as is currently the policy.

In response to your specific suggestions:

- The law that authorizes Section 801 housing requires that housing be located off post and on privately-owned land;
- Recently 46 company grade officer family housing units were reallocated for junior NCOs. On July 19, 1988, we redesignated 83 three-bedroom units, located in McDaniel Manor, exclusively for JNCOs on the two-bedroom waiting list. This should make the two-bedroom list move a little faster;
- By law, Section 801 housing must be new construction and constructed to Department of Defense construction criteria.

We appreciate your interest in the soldiers' welfare and thank you for your comments.

Ex-Filipino guerilla tells World War II stories

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

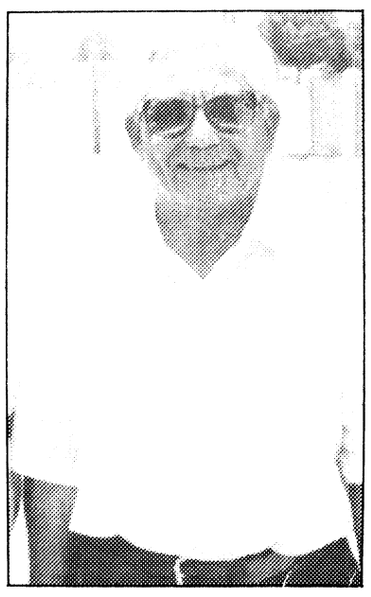
"If the Japs caught you, they would hang you by your ears, cut off your fingers or torture you using various techniques," Bernabe Ratio said. "One of the times that I was captured, they tied me to a table and covered my face with a thick towel and slowly dripped water on it making it very difficult to breathe."

That was just one of Ratio's experiences as a Filipino guerrilla soldier during World War II. He recently shared his experiences with officers attending the professional development class he conducted for the Combined Arms and Tactics Department.

Ratio was born in the U.S., and then, he and his family moved backed to the Philippines when he was 9 years old. When the war broke out, his family was taken prisoner because the Japanese found out they were American citizens.

Although only 17 years old, Ratio escaped and joined the Marinduque Patriotic Army. The unit, 300 strong, was broken down into companies; and they had no medical support.

According to Ratio, there was a similar unit on each province.



"Although we were allies of the U.S., we received no aid from them during the first few years of the war," Ratio said. "We used the weapon's we captured from the Japanese and got supplies any way we could."

He said, at first the villager's fed them and were very helpful, but after a while, they grew leary. If they were caught giving aid to the guerrillas, the Japanese would burn down the entire village.

Ratio said after that they mainly had to rely on the land for food. They lived like nomads in the jungle with never a permanent camp.

"We would find out what our mission was and move on," he said. "Night raids were our usual method of fighting."

"One guerrilla would crawl in beforehand and take out the guards; and then, we would attack," he said. "To camouflage ourselves, we took off our clothing and rolled in the mud."

Bernabe Ratio

He added that the technique worked so well that they could go into a Japanese camp, take what they wanted and leave undetected.

Ratio said this kind of camouflage made the guerrillas virtually part of their surroundings. That was what made them so good.

"When the Japanese came through our territory, we knew they were there," he said. "For one, they were very noisy, and two, we could smell them."

Although the Japanese were not proficient in patrolling, Ratio said they were very good soldiers.

"They had great discipline, were great at setting traps and were excellent snipers," he said.

After two years of avoiding those traps and snipers, they received aid from the U.S., according to Ratio.

"I served with them for one year after that, and then I resigned," he said.

He remained in the Philippines for a while after resigning. Then he moved to back to the U.S.

He came to Fort Benning, to visit his son, Capt. Bernabe Ratio of the Combined Arms and Tactics Division.

It's obvious that the younger Ratio chose to follow his father's footsteps and play his part to safeguard our country. The only difference is the nature of their positions.

The younger Ratio, an aviator, has chosen to do it from above, while his father did it deep in the jungle.

Santa

"Then we put in a new plywood floor, sheet rocked the walls, ran all the electrical wiring and put in a new dropped ceiling."

Basically, the same work was done to the first floor after the soldiers moved all the toys back upstairs, Gravatt said.

Gravatt said that the Castle is now much more efficient because the second floor will be used strictly for shopping, and the first floor will be the cleaning and repair area.

Bedard said that the military occupational specialties of the soldiers who worked on the Castle included carpenters, plumbers and electricians.

"The soldiers learned a lot from the project and got the chance to crosstrain with specialties," Bedard said.

Although the renovation is now history for Santa's Castle, its mission goes on.

"We only have about six to 10 full-time volunteers, and we need a lot more," Gravatt said. She said that even an-hour-a-week volunteers are welcome as the renovation put the organization six months behind schedule.

For now, the Castle is open on Thursdays from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. When school starts up again in August, the Castle will be open weekdays from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m., Gravatt said.

Chief of Chaplains visits Benning to celebrate the Corps birthday

By Jo Ann Stamey
USAIC Chaplains' Office

The Chief of Chaplains Chap. (Maj. Gen.) Norris L. Einertson, is visiting Fort Benning to join in the celebration of the Chaplain Corps' 213th birthday.

First on the agenda for this celebration is the dedication service of the new Infantry Training Center Chapel — a birthday present to the Chaplain Corps.

Chaplain Einertson will be the special guest speaker at the service, which starts at 10 a.m. Following the dedication, there will be a reception and tour of the chapel facilities. Everyone is encouraged and invited to attend this special event.

Later in the evening, the chaplains will attend an anniversary ball at the Fort Benning Officers' Club. Brig. Gen. William Hartzog, the deputy commanding general of Fort Benning, and Chap. Einertson will be the guests of honor. There will be a special historical presentation of the Army chaplaincy.

Also, in recognition of their birthday, the chaplains have a display in building 4 depicting the involvement of chaplains from the Revolutionary War era (a wounded soldier receiving last rights) to the present era, with a chaplain and chaplain's assistant ministering to soldiers in the field.

The Chaplain Corps has a long and proud heritage, but the best known event in the Army chaplain history is the ministry of the four chaplains, Alexander D. Goode (Jewish); John P. Washington, (Catholic); Clark V. Poling and George Fox (Protestants) — aboard the troop ship SS Dorchester. On Feb. 3, 1943, the four chaplains were among the 678 of 904 passengers on the ship who died when it was torpedoed and sank while en route from St. John's, Newfoundland to Greenland.

Surviving witnesses said the chaplains gave their life jackets and gloves to enlisted men, prayed with others and spoke words of encouragement; finally forcing the men into life boards. On April 20, 1987, a community-wide ceremony was held at Fort Benning to formally receive and dedicate a permanent lectern memorial in memory of these four chaplains. This memorial is located on the Field of Four Chaplains and was donated by the local AUSA chapter.

On the 213th anniversary, let us take a moment to let our chaplains know how much we appreciate their ministry not only to our soldiers but also to our families.

Chaplains vie to fulfill their motto

By Douglas R. Stephenson
USAIC Chaplain's Office

Today the United States Army Chaplain Corps celebrates its 213th anniversary.

Since the first chaplains were officially recognized by the Continental Army on July 29, 1775, chaplains have proudly and ably served their God, church and country as clergy in uniform.

For more than two centuries, from a handful of chaplains serving during the American Revolution to more than 1,500, men and women of God have been fulfilling the Chaplain Corps motto: "Bringing Soldiers to God and God to Soldiers."

Since soldiers have generally not considered the service of a chaplain or chapel attendance as a high priority except during combat, Army chaplains have found unique and creative ways of "Bringing Soldiers to God."

Army chaplains have been highly successful in creating new and interesting chapel programs to bring soldiers into the House of God. Some of these programs include Duty Days With God, adventure retreats, unit-sponsored prayer breakfasts, marriage and family retreats, newcomer orientations, pizza and film night at the chapel and the ever popular chapel pot-luck ice cream dinners.

From the combatant chaplains of the War for American independence to the non-combatant chaplains of the Korean and Vietnam conflicts, U.S. Army chaplains have also used traditional and proven methods of "Bringing God to Soldiers."

Chaplains are men and women of "the Book — the Word of God." Whether a Roman Catholic Priest, Protestant minister pastor, or a Jewish Rabbi, their duty, first and foremost, is to "bring the Word of God to soldiers and their families" and to allow "the Word" to make a difference in their daily lives.

It is also the responsibility of U.S. Army chaplains to "bring God to soldiers" through the sacraments of their various faith groups and churches.

For Christian chaplains, these sacraments include baptism, marriage and the Eucharist (Lord's Supper). For the Jewish chaplain, it includes circumcision and the Passover Seder meal. For both groups, funerals and memorial services are very important rites of their faiths.

Army chaplains also fulfill the motto of "Bringing God to Soldiers" through a "ministry of presence." Unit chaplains are "present" with the troops.

Wherever the troops go, the chaplain goes. He lives and works along side soldiers in both the garrison and field environments. The chaplain is readily available to pray, counsel, worship and recreate with soldiers and their families.

The 35 Army chaplains presently assigned to Fort Benning stand proud in the great heritage of the U.S. Army Chaplains' Corps and are ready to minister to soldiers and families in service to God, church and country through a variety of chapel ministries: the School Brigade chaplains jumping each week with the 1st Battalion, 507th Parachute Infantry Regiment; the Ranger chaplain deploying with the 3rd Ranger Battalion; the 197th Infantry Brigade chaplains counseling soldiers in the field and family members at the Kelley Hill Chapel; the Infantry Training Center chaplains conducting worship services in both theater and chapel facilities; 36th Engineer Group chaplains leading a morning PT run and holding a prayer breakfast with soldiers; the Infantry School and School of the Americas chaplains teaching ethics classes; and the Main Post Catholic and Protestant chaplains conducting a wide range of post-wide religious education, youth-, music and family-oriented programs.

God willing, Army Chaplains will continue to fulfill their motto of "Bringing Soldiers to God and God to soldiers" into the 21st century.

'The New Fall Look' Fashion Show held here

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

It's safe to say that most women dream of being professionally made over like the women they see in fashion magazines. For some members of the 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment Wive's Club, that dream came true.

The women were plucked, permed, poufed and primped to perfection so they could be models for "The New Fall Look" Fashion Show conducted at the Kelley Hill Recreation Center.

According to Monette Sexton, a wive's club spokesperson, the show was presented by the club as a fundraiser for the battalion.

"We started the project after I was approached by hairstylist, Kendall Browning, and asked if the club would be interested in doing a fashion show," Sexton said. "The club thought it sounded like a good idea, so we decided to do it."

Sexton said after the intial decision was made, Browning came to a battalion coffee and handpicked the women he wanted to use in the show. She added that he was looking for and chose a variety of body types and hair styles in addition to one person that could be changed dramatically.

"He cut, permed and color treated each of the women's hair; and then he chose the clothing and applied their makeup for the fashion show," Sexton said. "As he went through each process, he explained what he was doing and special tricks to use."

"When the women saw the total change for the first time, they were surprised but happy," Sexton said.

She said the way the women reacted was just what Browning had set out to achieve.

What he achieved was the "New Fall Look" in the form of some beautifully made-over wives of members of the 3rd Ranger Battalion.

Small group of professional NCOs keeps towers in shape

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

If you've ever been on [illegible] post during the middle of the week, you've probably seen the airborne student dangling 250 feet in the air, anxiously waiting for the blackhat to give the signal to release him off the free tower.

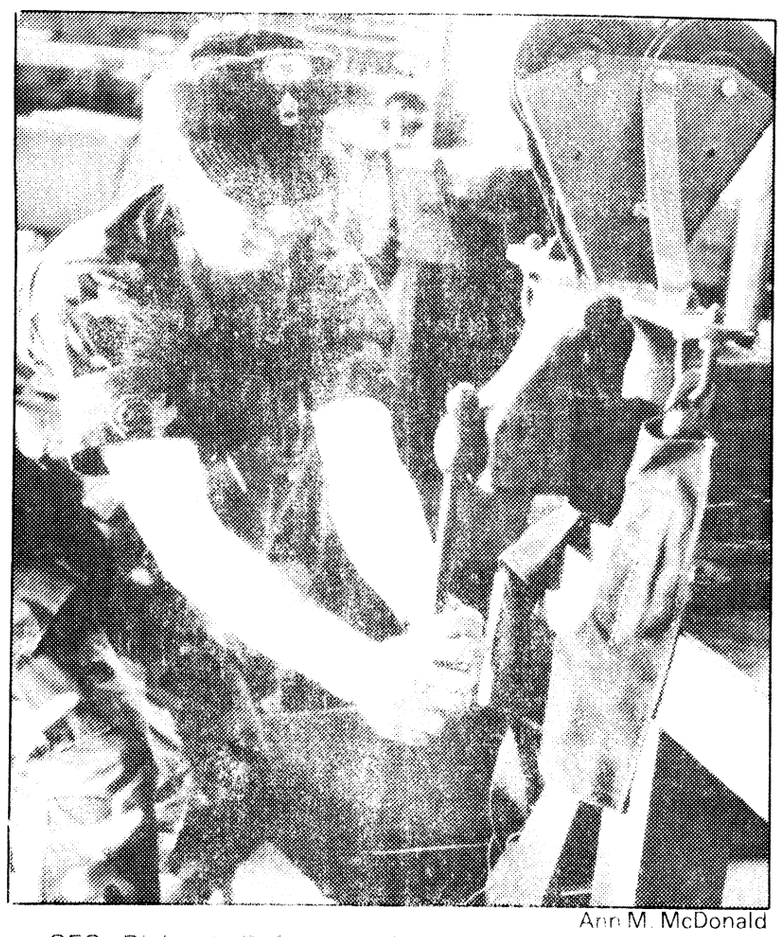
This sight captures the attention of most people passing by the training area. It causes them to either slow down, or stop for a moment to watch the soldiers attached to a modified parachute slowly descend to the ground.

Although they stop and watch this spectacle, they probably don't think about the mechanical workings of the towers or who keeps them working.

It is a small group of non-commissioned officers called Tower Maintenance. They're in charge of making sure every mechanical piece of equipment on both ground training branch and tower training branch is in perfect working order.

According to SFC Richard Defouw, assistant NCOIC of Tower Maintenance, they oversee the care of the 250-foot towers, the 34-foot towers on both ground and tower branch, the lateral drift apparatus, the swing landing trainer and the suspended harness.

"We make daily inspections of all the equipment. We check the wheels that are attached to the cables, the cables, everything," Defouw said. "If one piece of equipment doesn't meet the standard, we deadline the equipment until it can be repaired."



Defouw said that to properly maintain the free tower, they either have to climb the ladders located on the sides of the towers or ride up on swingset-type seats. To change a light bulb or make sure the attached cables are in good condition, they have to scale the arms on top of the towers. Sgt. Jose Gonzales, currently in training to be part of the team said, "I got pretty nervous the first time I climbed the tower, but after I was up there and was doing the task I set out to do, I was fine."

Gonzales said that you really don't have to worry anyhow because the whole time you're on the tower, you're wearing a safety line.

Defouw agreed with Gonzales. "Safety, is number one priority here," he said, "both for us and the equipment that we keep in good repair for the airborne students."

To keep that equipment in good repair, the team has a workshop located beneath one of the free towers. In the shop, there are bins filled with several types of nuts and bolts and tools, also extra straps and harnesses to keep the equipment running smoothly.

Incidentally, the crew has kept the equipment running so smoothly there has never been an injury due to equipment failure at either of the training branches. What does the maintenance team attribute that to? To them, it's all in a day's work.

Operating light bulb costs more than bulb

By Becky Ray
Energy Management Section

A surprising fact about lightbulbs is that the electricity to operate them generally costs about four to six times the price of the bulbs. This means that a package of two bulbs purchased for $1.50 costs $6 to $8 to operate over the life of the bulbs.

Lighting accounts for a substantial amount of electricity consumed at Fort Benning, but much can be done to make better use of it.

In incandescent (bulb-type) fixtures with more than one socket, it's better to use one 100-watt bulb than two 60-watt bulbs. The same amount of light will be produced. Smaller wattage bulbs don't produce light as efficiently as larger bulbs.

Never insert two 100-watt bulbs in a fixture which has an Underwriter's Laboratories (UL) listing for two 60-watt bulbs. This will cause the fixture to overheat.

"Long-life" bulbs use more electricity than regular bulbs, and should only be used in hard-to-reach places. "Energy Miser" or "Supersaver" bulbs, however, use five to 13 percent less energy than standard bulbs and are a good idea.

Fluorescent lighting is much more efficient than incandescent lighting. Fluorescent tubes also last eight to 15 times longer than incandescent bulbs.

A new innovation in lighting is the compact fluorescent bulb. These are available as complete screw-in units or as conversion bases and tubes that screw or snap in. These bulbs produce the same color light as incandescents and don't flicker like many fluorescent tubes. They last a long time too — five to 10 times the life of a standard incandescent bulb. They also use 70 percent less energy than other bulbs. Even though they cost more, you'll save by buying fewer bulbs and using less electricity.

Light buttons (small discs inserted in the bulb socket) are advertised as energy savers, but they actually decrease the amount of light the bulb puts out more than decreasing the amount of energy used. They simply decrease the efficiency of the bulb. If you can get by on less light, just switch to a lower wattage bulb or use a dimmer switch.

Outdoor lights are big energy users. The most efficient types are metal halide or high pressure sodium lamps, which are even better than fluorescent types. The least efficient outdoor lights are incandescent.

Perhaps the best way to extend the life of bulbs and tubes and conserve energy as well, is to turn lights off when they're not needed. It's also a good idea to avoid overlighting, especially in hallways, closets and vestibules.

Lengthening bulb life and saving energy are always bright ideas.

Blockhouse at Fort George nears completion

GDNR

Reconstruction of the eighteenth century blockhouse at Fort King George Historic Site in Darien nears completion after four months of construction.

The original blockhouse holds a significant place in Georgia's history. Built by Col. John Barnwell in 1721, the blockhouse protected settlers from Spanish and French forces and hostile Indian tribes. The word "blockhouse" probably derived from the German "blochaus," meaning "a house that blocks a pass." This definition was certainly true of the Fort King George Blockhouse, which became a symbol of British domination over the Altamaha River and coastal Georgia. It was the first English military outpost in Georgia and a major stepping stone in the eventual founding and settlement of the Georgia colony.

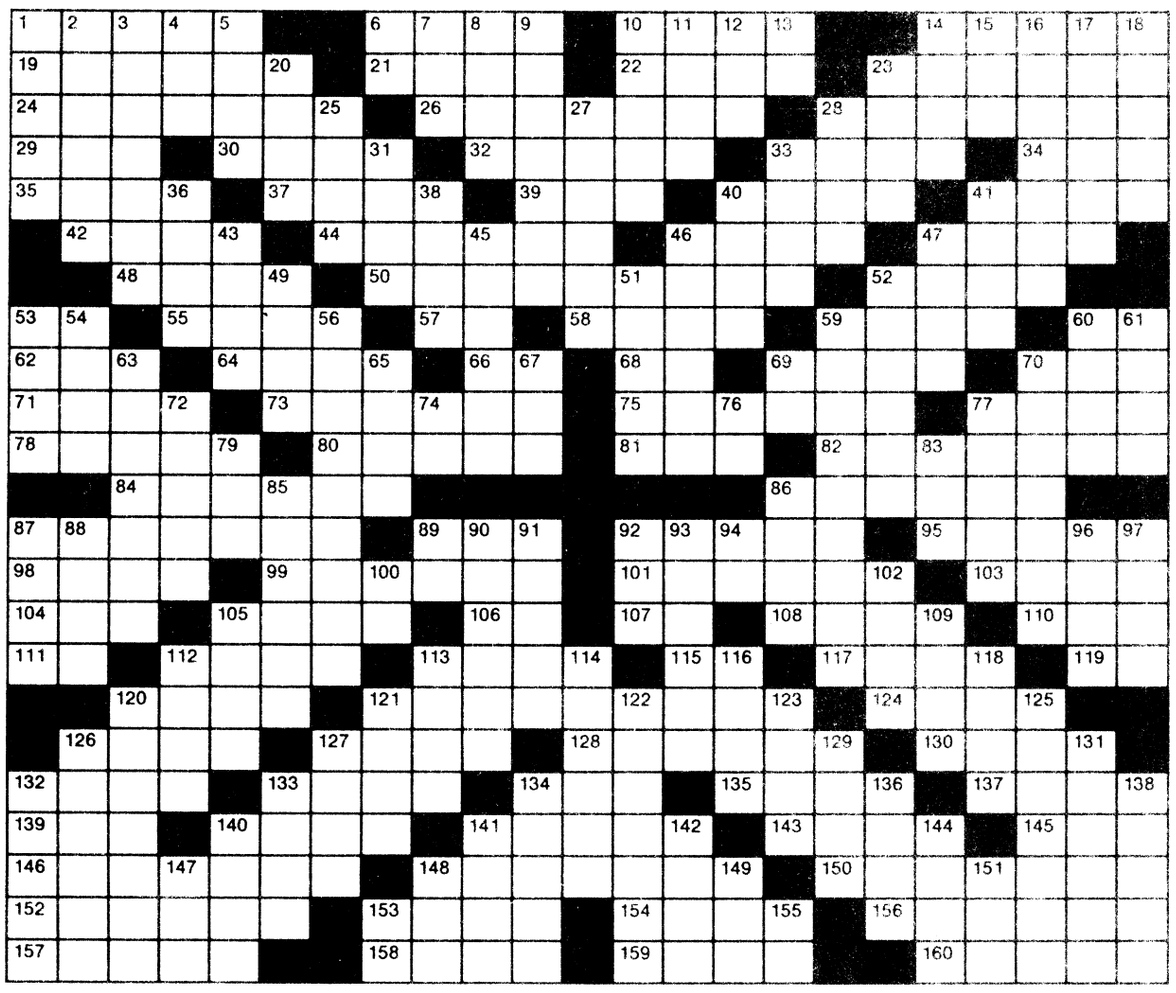
Barnwell's blockhouse was either dismantled and moved or washed away by the Darien River. In the 1930s, Bessie Lewis used old maps and documents to rediscover the fort site. Because of the land's historical value, the state soon acquired the property and opened it to the public.

The reconstructed blockhouse should be finished within the next few months. The roof and lower two levels, both made of cypress from the Altamaha River, are complete. The four-inch-thick vertical planks forming the lower blockhouse walls, slide into grooves in the framework, and support the structure without nails or pegs. This unique construction made the building easily disassembled and mobile.

Stairs to all four floors are complete, as well as the cat walk at the top of the blockhouse. Visitors may enjoy a spectacular view of the marsh from the catwalk and with binoculars can see Jekyll and St. Simons islands. Although construction continues, visitors may tour the building with a park official.

Around Oct. 23, Fort King George Historic Site will host a gala celebration to jointly dedicate the blockhouse with the Lower Altamaha Historical Society. To honor the many British soldiers who died at the fort, special arrangements have been made for a British band and a representative from the British Consul to attend.

Funded by the Georgia Department of Natural Resources and local contributors, the reconstruction efforts began in June 1987. Members of the Lower Altamaha Historical Society raised most of the local funds, which today total over $40,000. Thanks to the $15,000 donation from the Mills B. Lane Foundation of Savannah, only $7,000 remain to complete the original $50,000 goal.



DNR appropriated over $30,000 and spent hundreds of man-hours constructing the ironwork, foundation and framework of the blockhouse.

Visitors to Fort King George Historic Site, Georgia's oldest British fort site, can walk the interpretive trail featuring the oldest British military cemetery in the southeast and the new blockhouse. The museum exhibits a slide presentation, shown in the newly completed audio-visual theatre, describing the building of the fort and the history of Darien's inhabitants.

Located in Darien, one mile east of U.S. 17, the site is open year-round Tuesday-Saturday, 9 a.m.-5 p.m. and Sundays, 2-5:30 p.m. For more information, please write Fort King George, P.O. Box 711, Darien, Ga. 31305 or call (912) 437-4770.

SNAPSHOT: Fear of Failure

U.S Army News Service

Army Snapshot: 10 quotes you always wanted to hear about the fear of failure.

"What is defeat? Nothing but education, the first step to something better."

Wendell Phillips
American orator

"To try and fail is at least to learn. To fail to try is to suffer inestimable loss of what might have been."

Chester Barnard
American utilities executive

"It is better to make a wrong decision than to build up a habit of indecision."

Marie Benyon Ray
American author and editor

"If it weren't for the dark days, we wouldn't know what it is to walk in the light."

Earl Campbell
Former National Football League player

"Too many people are thinking of security instead of opportunity. They seem more afraid of life than of death."

James F. Byrnes
U. S. Supreme Court Justice

"A failure is not always a mistake; it may simply be the best one can do under the circumstances. The real mistake is to stop trying."

B. F. Skinner
American writer and psychologist

"Things turn out best for those who make the best of the way things turn out."

John Wooden
Former UCLA basketball coach

"Failure is only the opportunity to begin again more intelligently."

Henry Ford
American automobile manufacturer

"I am not concerned that you have fallen; I am concerned that you arise."

Abraham Lincoln
16th U. S. president

"When one door closes, another one opens, but we often look so long and so regretfully upon the closed one that we do not see the one which has opened."

Alexander Graham Bell
American inventor

VETERANS' Qs & As

Veterans Administration

Q — I am a retired Army officer and have applied for disability compensation from the VA. Will my grade entitle me to increased compensation?

A — No. Military grade is not a factor in determining the amount of disability compensation benefits.

Q — My grandfather is a veteran who served honorably on active duty with the U.S. Army from Sept. 1, 1925 through Sept. 10, 1940. He has an adequate and regular income and wants to buy his own home after all these years. Can he qualify for a VA-guaranteed home loan?

A — No. A VA-guaranteed home loan is available only to veterans with sufficient qualifying service during any period on or after Sept. 16, 1940.

National Safety Council offers summer safety tips

National Safety Council

POOLSIDE POINTERS

A swimming pool accident can be tragic. If you have a backyard pool, protect your family and friends this summer with these tips from the National Safety Council:

●Keep a ring buoy and a lightweight pole (at least 10-feet long) in the pool area at all times.

●Always supervise children when they're in the water — even if kids are wearing personal flotation devices.

●Enforce basic pool safety rules: No swimming alone and no running, pushing or horseplay around the pool. Don't allow swimmers to go in the water when overtired, overheated or immediately after eating.

●Know how to safely use and store pool chemicals. If you have questions, call your local dealer or the manufacturer.

●Never dive into an above-ground pool. Diving into shallow water can cause spinal cord injuries, which can lead to permanent paralysis.

BE ON GUARD IN THE GARDEN

A day of gardening doesn't have to result in bandaged fingers, an aching back and a stinging sunburn. Follow these suggestions from the National Safety Council and beautify your lawn and garden painlessly:

●Don't take on more than you can handle — too much work in too little time can result in sore muscles, blisters and heat exhaustion. Pace yourself and take frequent breaks.

●Wear comfortable, well-fitting clothing. Loose garments or dangling jewelry can become tangled in the moving parts of power equipment.

●Mix pesticides outdoors and always stay upwind of the area being sprayed. Wear safety glasses while spraying and wash thoroughly afterwards.

●Keep children and pets away when you're mowing the lawn.

●Have a sturdy hanger or rack for every tool — hooking things on nails is risky.

●Label poisonous materials plainly and store the out of the reach of children.

Talladega features ARCA and NASCAR this week

Alabama International Motor Speedway

TALLADEGA, Ala. — Red Farmer says he had so much fun winning the ARCA 500k earlier this year at Talladega that he can't wait to get back.

With the Permatex 500k tomorrow, he won't have to wait very long.

The senior member of the "Alabama Gang" acted more like a young rookie in victory lane after a narrow win over Grant Adcox in the ARCA 500k. When talking about his next trip to Talladega, it doesn't sound much like he has lost any of that enthusiasm either.

"That was a good race. We kept swapping back and forth, and it would have been a last lap shootout if a caution hadn't come out. Maybe we'll get a chance to try it again," he said.

"I won the last one, and I'm looking forward to coming back because we'll have the same car that's already set up and ready to go. We were real happy with the car before, and we left everything pretty much like it was."

The car that has Farmer excited is a Jim Magill Chevrolet/Gambler Boats sponsored,

Bass

bikes to use topwater lures, and often his choice here is a buzz bait. He prefers a buzz bait when the water temperature is at least 80 degrees, the depth is shallow and the cover is heavy.

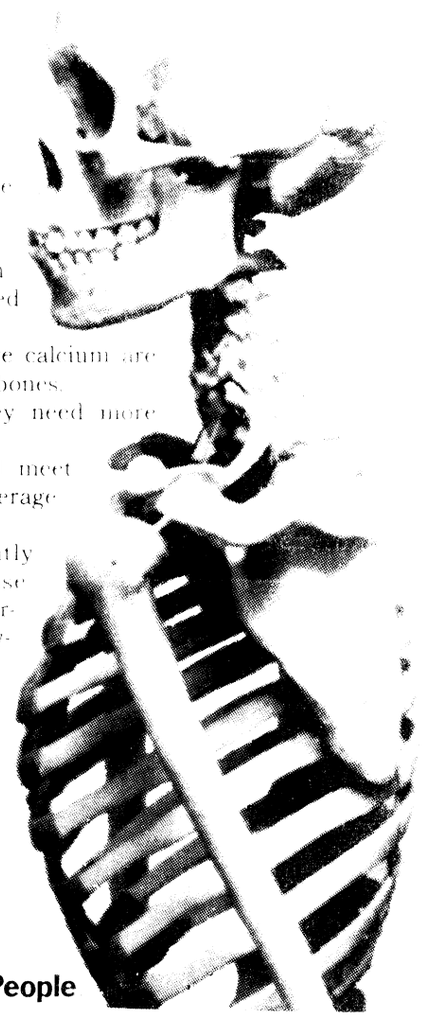
"Getting a buzz bait back on the surface as soon as possible after it touches the water is critical," says Mann, "because it really determines the effectiveness of your cast. The bass know instantly when the lure lands, and the longer you take to get it back on the surface, the more chance the bass will realize it isn't something he wants to eat."

Once he has a buzz bait on the surface, Mann slows the retrieve, moving it just fast enough to keep it on top. When he's in an area, he feels has large bass, he uses a larger buzz bait, but if he sees only smaller fish he uses a smaller bait.

No Bones About It

Start now to prevent bone problems later.

Osteoporosis (brittle bone disease) is a disorder in which bone strength is decreased due to calcium loss.



Physical activity and more calcium are required to maintain healthy bones.

As people get older, they need more calcium.

Three cups of milk will meet the daily calcium need of an average adult.

Bone cells are constantly changing. Regular exercise helps build new bone. Exercises such as walking, bicycling, hiking, rope-jumping and rowing are best for building and keeping bone mass.

Osteoporosis can be prevented.

NEWS BRIEFS

Overseas employment available

Korea: A representative from the Eighth U.S. Army Civilian Recruiting Office will conduct group information briefings and individual counseling sessions on Aug. 19 for career, career-conditional and reinstatment eligibles (GS-9-level and above) interested in employment in Korea. Each briefing will consist of a 15-to-20-minute video followed by a question and answer period. Call Mrs. Pfeiffer or Ms. Lewis at the Training and Development Division, Directorate of Civilian Personnel at 545-5580/5656, to make a reservation to attend one of the briefings or to obtain a counseling appointment. An information brochure and list of available positions may be obtained now from Mr. Fleming at the DCP, building 35, Room 105.

Army Ten-miler run set

Washington D.C.: The Fourth Annual Army Ten-miler will be conducted on Oct. 16 in Washington D.C. Fort Benning sent a men's team to the event last year and would like to send both a male and female team this year.

The team will consist of six members and there will be a run off to see who is best qualified to represent this post in Washington.

Applications are presently being accepted for both teams. The applications should be sent to the main sports office, Room 8, Doughboy Stadium.

Point of contact for the female team is SP4 Ann McDonald, 545-2201 and for the male team, Sgt McDonald, 545-7519.

Employee reminder: Annual leave should be scheduled and used by employees and supervisors to avoid forfeiture of leave at the end of the leave year. Scheduling and using annual leave early also precludes having an empty shop in December.

Soviet journalist visits Fort Benning

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Over the years, Fort Benning has had visitors from many foreign countries. But last week's visitor, Artyom Borovik, foreign editor of Ogonyok magazine, which has main offices in Moscow, has to be ranked as one the most unusual.

Borovik was here observing OSUT, Airborne, Ranger and IOBC training. In addition, he received an orientation on the Bradley Infantry Fighting Vehicle and the M-ll3. He was accompanied by Life photographer, Wayne Sorce.

A joint program between Life Magazine and Ogonyok brought Borovik to Fort Benning. While he was here, a team from Life was at a Soviet recruit camp, near Leningrad, observing the same sort of training. The stories will be published simultaneously in both magazines, probably in mid-October.

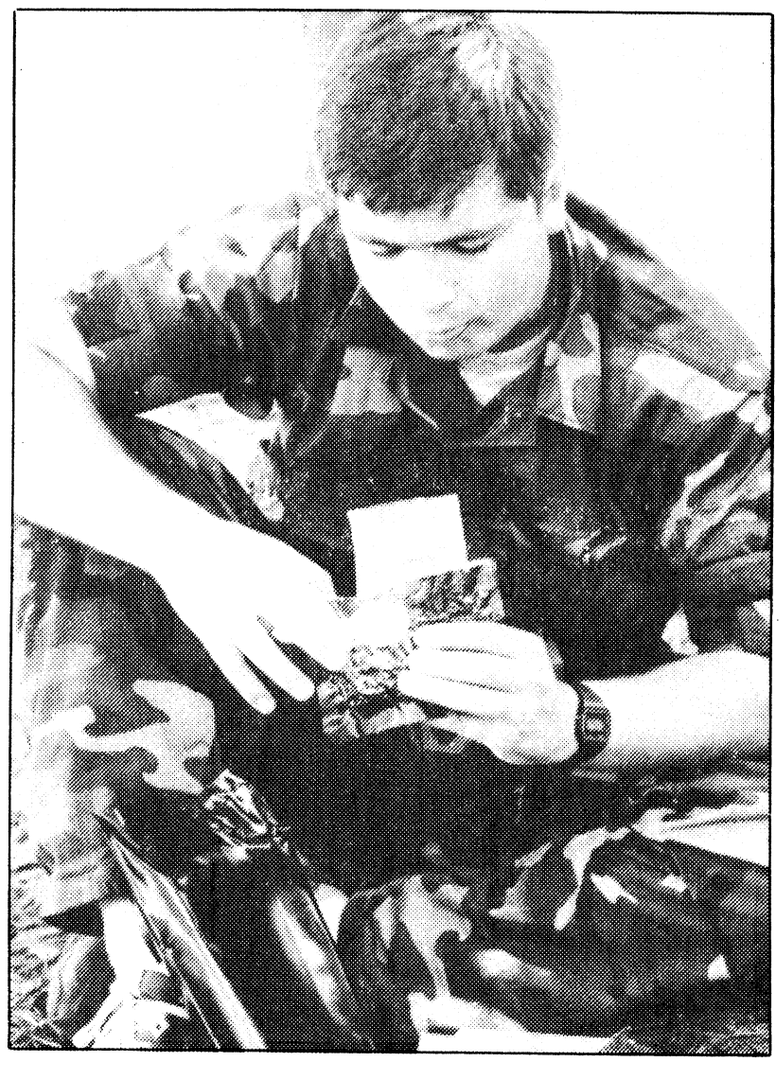
Observing is somewhat of a misnomer as Borovik was permitted to participate in hands-on training throughout the week. He fired the ML-6A2, the M-203 grenade launcher, the Squad Automatic Weapons and threw live hand grenades.

He drove a Bradley Infantry Fighting Vehicle and an M-113 and fired all the Bradley's weapons except the TOW.

He jumped from a 34-foot tower during his observation of Airborne training and compared it to "being born again." At the Ranger Training Brigade during a Ranger student refresher parachute jump, he rode in a UH-60A Black Hawk and a C-141 aircraft. During OSUT Squad Battle Drills at McBrides Bridge, he participated in Multiple Integrated Laser Engagement System (MILES) training and came across Upatoi Creek on the "Slide-for-Life." To top it all off, he had his hair cut-in a military style at the Reception Battalion barber shop.

He talked with soldiers from privates to the commanding general. These talks ranged from individual interviews to sitting on the ground with a group of OSUT soldier answering questions about life in the Soviet Union.

"The friendliness and openess of everyone I have met has been the most memorable thing of this visit," said Borovik. "I expected U.S. soldiers to be reserved or perhaps a bit hostile towards me, since after all, there haven't been many Soviet journalists visit Fort Benning. But I saw neither of these, and everyone has been more than helpful."



The intensity of the training and the soldiers' enthusiasm really impressed him. He said, "The Army and the commanders are to be congratulated on making the training interesting enough to keep the enthusiasm level up."

He said he was pleasantly surprised to learn about the Army's smoking and alcohol curtailment program. When told that intial entry training soldiers are not permitted to smoke during OSUT, he said, "This is a great idea that we could put to use in the Soviet Union."

What was the most exciting thing he saw during his stay here? "All the training was exciting, but the Rangers-in-Action demonstration was the best," he replied.

The visit wasn't only soldiers and training. He visited several homes and was a guest at a dinner at Country's Barbecue.

Just prior to departing on Sunday, he summed up his feelings about his trip. "I had a fantastic time and enjoyed everything; and I think this exchange program will be a big success," he said.

Bill Walton

Swimming allowed only in pools here

USAIC Public Affairs Office

August is here — the hottest month of the year. Temperatures will continue to soar to the 90s and higher and while air conditioning seems to be the best way to beat the heat, swimming is not far behind.

The one thing to keep in mind is that the only places people are authorized to swim at Fort Benning are swimming pools with qualified lifeguards.

Reasons for the restrictions range from the ever-changing current of the Chattahoochee River due to dams up stream, to snakes and debris in the ponds, not to mention the dangers of swimming without a lifeguard.

According to Steve Turner, acting chief of the Facilities Maintenance and Operations Division at the Directorate of Engineering and Housing, precautions have been taken to prevent people from swmming in unauthorized areas. "No Swimming" signs are located at some of the unauthorized swimming areas throughout Fort Benning. Fences, too, are used to help keep people out of the forbiden waters. Turner explained that after last year's drowning of two children in the Chattahoochee River near the Indianhead Terrace housing area, DEH extended an already existing fence to prevent children from swimming in the river.

"Even though we have some fences up and signs posted, it takes individual cooperation and knowledge to prevent swimming in the unauthorized areas," Turner said. "The physical warnings won't stop people who are bound and determined to swim in those areas."

People caught swimming, bathing or wading in unauthorized areas can be sited

Spouse survey reveals info

Army News Service

Data compiled from the 1987 survey of Army spouses reveal some new information about quality of life and community and family support, officials reported July 14.

"Between June and September 1987, the Army mailed some 20,000 survey questionnaires to civilian spouses married to active-component soldiers around the world," said Emily Cato of the U.S. Army Community and Family Support Center in Alexandria, Va. Cato serves as a management analyst in the program analysis and evaluation directorate there. "We received responses from about 12,000 spouses. More than 4,000 spouses also sent back comment sheets. The overall response rate amounted to 67 percent."

Cato also said that one important objective of the survey was to determine how the the Army Family Action Plan and other efforts to improve the quality of life for Army families were working.

"Based on the survey data collected, it appears that the Army Family Action Plan is a success," Cato said. "We targeted the right issues.

Based on survey responses, some of those issues are showing improvements. "Another survey objective included identifying Army families' concerns. One of the most important aspects of the survey is that it provided spouses an opportunity to express their concerns and views to Army leadership."

Cato said the survey

OPINION

VARIOUS VOICES: How do you keep informed about Fort Benning events and activities?

SP4 Erik Stinson — "HHB, 2nd Bde., 10th Mtn. Div. — "I get most of my information through the rumor mill. I work in supply, and everyone seems to know what is going on."

SP4 Jerry Willmann, 533rd Trans. Co., 67th Maint. Bn., 36th Eng. Grp. — "I read the Bayonet. It's my only source of information other than my squad leader."

1st Lt. David Black, Co. C, 1st Bn., 11th Inf. Regt. — "I find out information through my chain of command."

SP4 Sherral Mallety, HHC, 2nd Bn., 11th Inf. Regt. — "I get my information from The Bayonet. There isn't any particular section I read in on; I read the entire paper."

SP4 Earl Anderson, HHC, 1st Bn., 29th Inf. Regt. — "I get information by reading the Daily Bulletin. It is the most available source of information on post."

Sgt. Rainer Macon, HHC, 197th Inf. Bde. Spt. Bn. — "I either find information through reading the Bayonet or talking to friends. The Bayonet is one of the only good sources of information on post."

Snively recommends new secret weapon

By Clyde Snively
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Southerners stationed in the snow belt will often tell you, "When I leave hea'h, I never want to see snoah (white stuff found in winter) ay-gain."

I feel the same way about red clay.

Just how much of the south is permeated with the stuff? Was kudzu brought in to hide it from unwary Yankee carpet baggers ("How'd y'all like to buy this hea'h plush green acreage?"), or from southerners who got tired of it staining everything red.

I figure anything as dreadful as red clay must have a strategic use. Somewhere in the bowels of the pentagon, there's probably a plan for the defense of the United States that calls for the deployment of red clay — but only as a last resort, I'm sure.

I can see the headlines now: "U.S. unleashes secret weapon to ward off invasion force."

The story would run something like: "A secret joint service unit spread liquid red clay at the feet of the invading forces as they stormed ashore north of Savannah.

"As the enemy troops slipped and slid in the red muck, Army units mounted a counter offensive, which drove them back to sea.

"Forces that didn't escape were permanently trapped ashore as the red clay hardened, completely immobilizing them."

Just think, if Gen. Robert E. Lee had thought of using red clay as a weapon, the South might have won the war. But he didn't. Maybe they don't have red clay in Virginia.

Someone from down this-a-way should have clued him in. Then Atlanta might not have burned and Margaret Mitchell wouldn't have had to write "Gone with the Wind." Best of all, Atlanta would have escaped hosting the Democratic National Convention.

Since there is so much red clay around, someone surely should be able to come up with a good use for it.

If we could find a way to keep it wet with something other than sweat, it could be used to replace oil as a lubricant. Since oil is the building block of all of our plastics, red clay would cut our dependence on the mideast for oil.

I can just see us traveling in cars made of red clay, carrying credit cards made of red clay. The car idea can't be too far fetched. Afterall, don't they make armor for combat vehicles out of ceramics?

In its stickier form, red clay could be used as a substitute for Elmers glue and Polident. The variety of uses is unlimited.

But best of all, mine enough red clay, and who knows, somewhere down deep, under all that red clay, there might be some nice, warm, dark brown, sweet smelling, old-fashioned dirt.

Army wife dreads husband's retirement

By Jenelle L. Flocke
Army News Service

My husband and I went "over 20" this past June. I'm not taking it very well.

First of all, I'm too darn young to be married to a retired person. Maybe this is ego talking here, folks, but I remember when Bob and I first said "I do" to the Army. We got such a kick out of the battalion commander and his wife; they were such old fogies, and we were so young and knowledgeable or so we thought. Since then, I've come to realize they really tolerated a lot, not just from us, but from "the system" as well. But then, that comes with the territory, doesn't it?

Second, I'm not sure I'm ready to leave the protective military environment to which I've grown accustomed. Uncle Sam's been kind enough to assign us for the past nine years right in the middle of some of the best military hospitals and facilities in the country.

Ah, but it wasn't always this comfy. I should've realized it would be no Garden of Eden when Bob said, "Marry me and I'll show you the world." Our world started out with three tours at Fort Sill, Okla., two of them back-to-back. This, of course, was before they leveled the downtown area where women and children dared not venture alone.

I remember Bob's tour in Vietnam like it was yesterday. I, too, served in my own way. I didn't hold an M-16 rifle and trek through the jungle looking for VC. But, I did hold down three jobs to keep my sanity, alleviate the loneliness and make ends meet while I worried and waited for his return.

Another landmark assignment was when Bob taught ROTC. How excited we were when his career manager assigned us to Virginia Military Institute.

Unfortunately, he called a few weeks before the move to tell us there'd been a "slight change." We were going to Boonville, Mo., instead.

Ever seen a 14-months, or so it felt, pregnant woman cry? Trust me, it's a pathetic sight. Luckily, it turned out for the best, since the nearby medical center was experimenting with medical equipment that saved our daughter's life. And then, CHAMPUS came to the rescue by picking up all but $98 of the $10,000 in hospital bills.

Finally, after 10 years of begging, we got orders for Germany. It was wonderful and more than made up for the other assignments. Bob loved being at Grafenwoehr with his troops, and I threw myself into every activity available on post. We also made the most of our tour by driving somewhere new each weekend. Of course, there were changes that took getting used to. For instance, my second day in country, Bob was called out on alert. I awoke from a tremendous case of jet lag to find no husband, no car and no neighbors. I thought we were at war. It wasn't until later that I found a note explaining the situation. It was right next to the USAREUR driver's handbook with another note that said, "Memorize this: You have two weeks to get your driver's license before I go to Graf."

I've lived through a lot of changes in the Army. I saw the draft evolve into the present all-volunteer force; I saw the Army take an active interest in its family members and their welfare; I saw women become eligible for combat MOSs; and I saw the many changes in military uniforms.

I remember well "hearing" Bob get into his first set of fatigues.

That old familiar rasping/ripping sound at 5 a.m. as he forced his legs and arms through the overly-starched material made my teeth curl. Since then he's gone through more wardrobe changes than I, and his closet and wallet attest to it. If the military style becomes chic again, our kid's got it made.

In all our assignments, 17 moves so far, we've met many interesting people and made some lifelong friends. We haven't lived on-post for nine years, and I miss the convenience of the facilities, the camaraderie, the protection it offers and the feeling of belonging. Over the years, I've sometimes found myself defending our decision to be an Army family, but it's a decision we've never regretted. Our furniture may be falling apart, but our scrapbooks and hearts are overflowing with great memories.

Reader says seatbelt saved his life

Ever since a near miss several years ago, I've become almost fanatic about wearing my seat belt.

Last year, I was involved in an accident, and I know that if I hadn't been wearing my seatbelt, I probably would have suffered a head injury at the very least. As far as this accident is concerned, I'm positive that seatbelts saved my life.

I have no recollection of being run over by the semi. I remember seeing it in my rear view mirror and swerving to the left. My next memory is of climbing out of the car through a gap where the passenger door and seat used to be.

2-29th welcomes new CSM

By Tyrone Black
HHC, 2nd Battalion
29th Infantry Regiment

On June 18, the 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment welcomed CSM Samuel Hernandez to the 29th Infantry Regiment. Hernandez will be replacing the 2nd Battalion interim CSM, 1st Sgt. Alan L. Sternberg.

The 29th Infantry Regiment is known for its outstanding training of Infantry soldiers and with an Infantry veteran such as Hernandez joining the team, training can only get better for the OSUT soldier.

Hernandez was born in Galveston, Texas. He joined the Army in 1959 and during his 28½ years of service, he has held positions in infantry units from squad leader to command sergeant major.

Most of his assignments have been with airborne, Ranger and special forces units. He spent almost six years in Vietnam with the 5th Special Forces and three years in Thailand with the 1st Special Forces.

While assigned to the 82nd Airborne Division at Fort Bragg, he held the positions of first sergeant and NCOIC of the Advanced Airborne School. He graduated from the Sergeant Major Academy and then went to Schweinfurt, Germany to become command sergeant major for the 3rd Battalion, 7th Cavalry. As command sergeant major of the 3rd Battalion, 325th Airborne Infantry, he participted in the Liberation of Grenada, in 1983, and later transferred with the battalion from Fort Bragg to Italy in accordance with the new Cohort Unit Manning System.

Hernandez's awards include the Combat Infantryman's Badge, Ranger Tab, Master Parachutist Badge (Airborne), Purple Heart (2nd oak leaf cluster), Bronze Star (5th oak leaf cluster), MSM (2nd oak leaf cluster), ARCOM (1st oak leaf cluster), AAM, Armed Forces Expeditionary Medal, Air Medal, NDSM, Vietnam Campaign Medal and the NCO Ribbon.

TRADOC wants honest opinion on MREs

TRADOC

Mm! Mm! Good! MREs are tasting better. Or are they?

"That's why we want to hear from you," said Capt. Melvin Jackson, an Army food advisor at Headquarters, TRADOC.

The Army's latest version of the meals ready-to-eat, the MRE VIII, has been changed significantly from previous ones, Jackson said. While the Army deleted dehydrated meat and potatoes, it developed nine entrees and increased the portions from five to eight ounces.

Two new breakfast entrees — a ham omelet and corned beef hash — have been added. The pack also includes brand name candies, hot sauce, beverage flavoring and a large handwash towelette.

The Army has arranged for units to eat the new MREs during some of its major training exercises and during training rotations at two CONUS training centers.

"If you happen to eat some of the new rations, please let us know your reaction to them," Jackson said. "It is important that we get comments from those who've eaten the new meals, because soldiers' impressions and acceptance of the products will be beneficial to the Quartermaster School in evaluating these rations."

Jackson said that getting soldiers' comments about the new rations also allows the Army to show the soldiers that it is continually trying to improve the MREs, even though the Army still has a number of older MREs in storage that must be used.

under violation of USAIC 210-5, according to SSgt. James White, assistant operations sergeant at the Military Police Activity.

"Most of the people we catch swimming in unauthorized areas are not aware of the regulation," White said. "We ask them to leave the area because we are just concerned about their safety."

Survey data reveals demographic facts

Army News Service

Data collected from the first survey of Army spouses worldwide reveal some interesting demographic facts about the diversity of Army families.

Researchers report the following:

Army spouses are young. Twenty-nine percent are 24 years of age or younger. Forty-eight percent are between 25 and 34. Twenty-three percent are 35 or older.

They're educated. Almost 90 percent of spouses of enlisted soldiers have a high-school diploma or better. Among officers' spouses, four-fifths have at least some college education.

The majority of Army spouses are white, non-Hispanic. But, the Army has a high percentage of minority spouses. Two-fifths of enlisted soldiers' spouses are from minority racial or ethnic groups, of which about half are black.

Minority groups represent about one-fifth of officers' spouses. Thirteen percent have bicultural marriages.

About 40 percent of Army wives have had some prior experience with military life. Officers' wives who have worked for or are currently employed by the military have a higher percentage of experience with military life than do enlisted soldiers' wives.

A large majority, 83 percent, of Army couples are in their first marriage. About three-fifths of Army families have one or two children. Less than one-fourth, however, have no children in dependent status.

Families of enlisted soldiers generally are quite young. A majority of enlisted soldiers' wives, 62 percent, are under age 30; 44 percent have been married less than five years; one-third have children under the age of 2 years. Nearly half the families of soldiers in grades E-4 and lower have children aged 2 or younger.

On average, officers' wives are older than those of enlisted soldiers. Almost half are 35 years or older; more than half have been married for 10 years or longer; one-third have teenage children, and 15 percent have a youngest child of high-school age. Data show that spouses of enlisted soldiers and officers agree on both youth concerns and youth activity program needs.

With 70 percent of enlisted soldiers' families in the early years of marriage (either before child-bearing or with a preschooler), and since that's when family adjustments are made, demands may cause competition between military responsibilities and family life, researchers reported.

The importance of the survey data relates to determining family service needs. Planners plan programs based on the knowledge that family services are needed to help soldiers and their families adapt to the mobile Army lifestyle.

Spouse

was a cooperative effort between the Community and Family Support Center, the Soldier Support Center National Capital Region, the U.S. Army Research Institute for the Behavioral and Social Sciences and the Research Triangle Institute near Raleigh, N.C.

Spouses answered questions on subjects such as permanent-change-of-station moves and relocation, housing and transportation, medical and child care, schools and programs for Army children and youth. Spouses expressed their opinions of Army family programs and services, spouse employment and volunteer participation.

The survey asked questions about problems and adjustments of Army families, including ones related to readiness and retention and others affecting quality of life. Answers to survey questions provided information about both the demands and the limitations Army life places on spouse and families.

"While the findings indicate improvements in some areas, there's still room for improvement in others," Cato said. "For example, on a positive note, 36 percent of working spouses have found employment with federal agencies as a result of Army Family Action Plan initiatives to change spouse employment policy. Another positive response shows that half of Army spouses have exercised their own authority to sign for shipment or receipt of household goods. Also, many Army spouses felt that too many of our doctors did not speak English well. Data collected from the survey show an improvement in that area, too."

Another important survey finding deals with Army spouses' attitudes about the "Army way of life." "Overall," Cato said, "60 percent of Army spouses said they are satisfied with the Army as a way of life. Twenty-five percent were neutral, while only 15 percent indicated dissatisfaction." "The survey data indicated other areas with obvious room for improvement included relocation, sponsorship and orientation programs.

"Army leaders, including those at the levels of headquarters, major command and installation, will use these survey data to plan for future family related programs."

"We have briefed senior Army officials on the survey results and will brief other headquarters and major command staffs in the very near future," she explained. We plan to distribute widely our written report on the survey findings. That distribution is scheduled to begin the first of August. We also plan to publicize the findings by subject-matter with the help of Army newspapers worldwide.

"Information obtained from the representative-sample survey is important to the Army because it provides first-hand data that will tell us where dollars need to be spent and which programs are broken and need fixing," Cato added. "Also, we plan to track the trends every two years with a biennial follow-up survey."

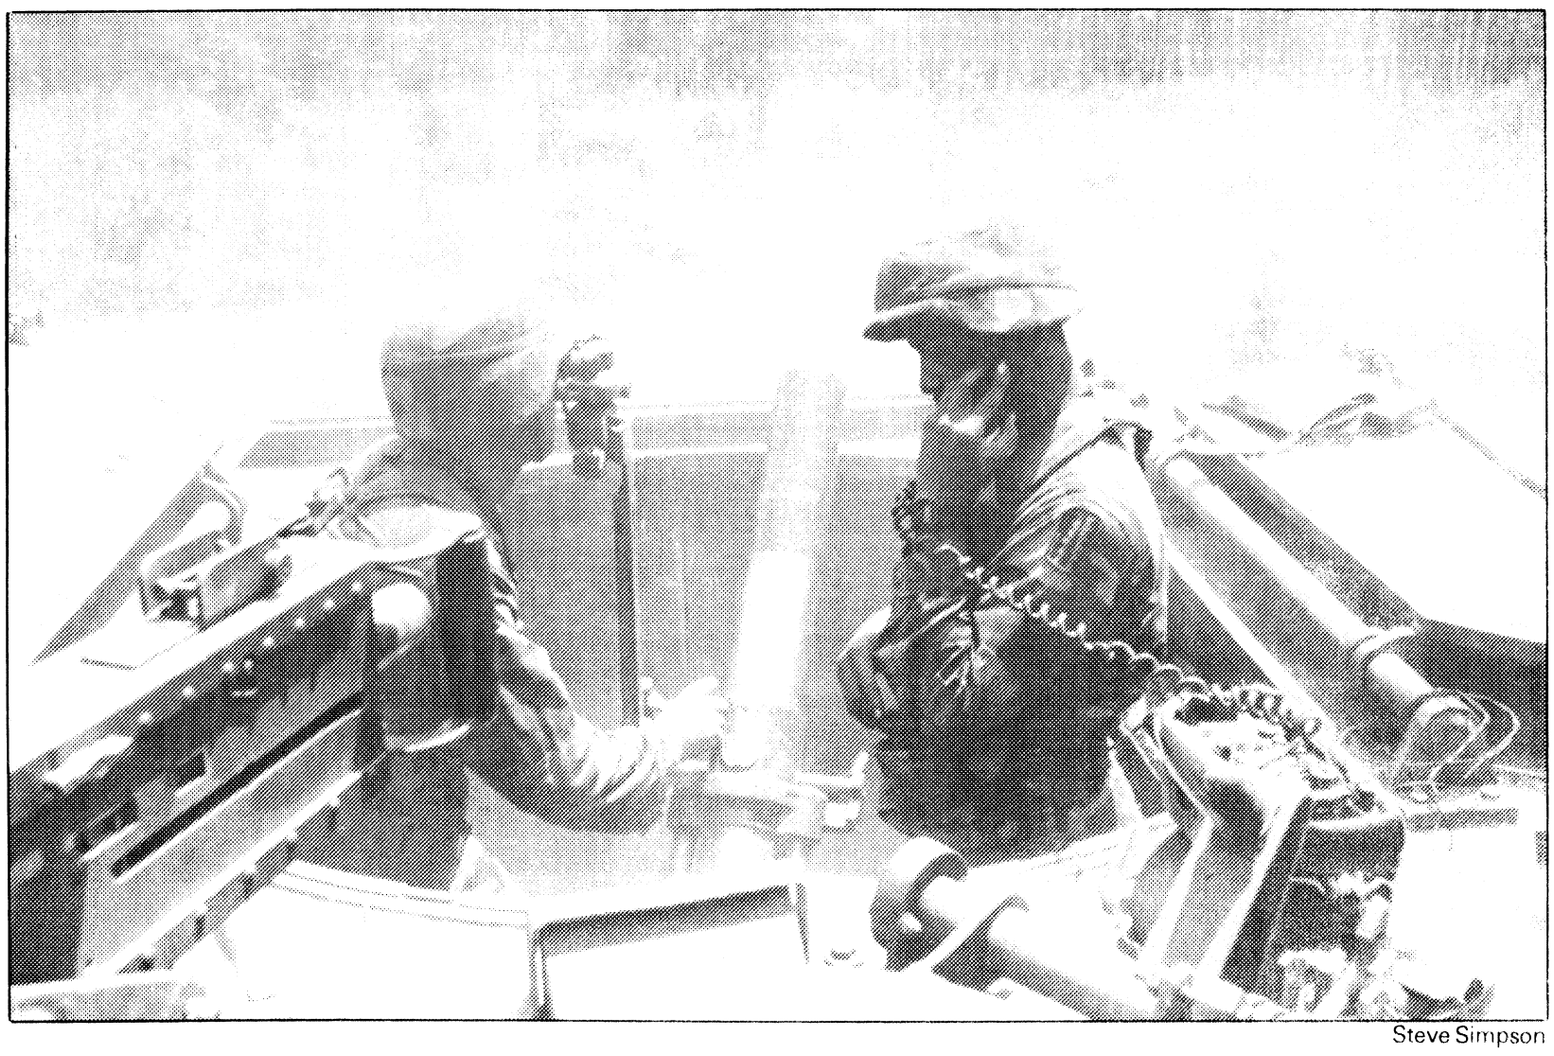
Mortar men build confidence during evaluation

By George Mingee
197th Infantry Brigade correspondent

"Hang it!" This is a familiar phrase for the mortar men of Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 58th Infantry, who just completed their 4.2-inch, four-deuce 107mm heavy mortar annual evaluation.

"We have a new breed of troops today. Our platoon is mostly made up of soldiers just out of Advanced Individual Training," said SFC Ned Mobley. "But, our soldiers are quicker today and have better reaction time.

SFC Mobley explained that the Mortar Team consists of three personnel: the gunner, who is responsible for adjusting the sight and aiming the weapon; the assistant gunner, who keeps the sight level and helps rotate the base plate while the gunner is aiming, then drops the round down the tube to fire the mortar; and the ammo bearer, who must insert the fuse into the mortar round, then place the correct number of explosive charges on the base of the round to propel it the proper distance.

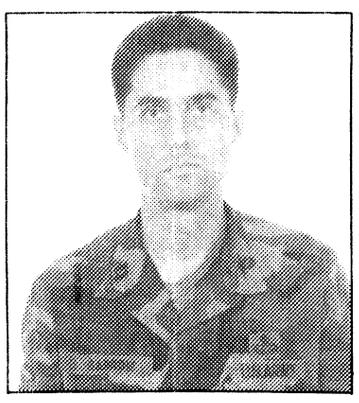


The mortar men of 1st Bn., 58th Inf. provide timely indirect fire support for the battalion, by way of 4.2-inch, 107mm high trajectory mortars capable of firing up to 6,840 meters out.

The mortar men are now using the Digital Message Device in conjunction with 2nd Battalion, 10th Field Artillery. This new computer system enables the mortar men to lay on target faster and complete the mission.

The evaluation proved to be a valuable training tool for the leaders and new soldiers alike.

"The past few days have been a confidence builder for me, since I just completed AIT, "said Pvt. Eugune King. "This is the first real chance I've had to handle the mortar with confidence."



The mortar platoon leader, 1st Lt. Frank W. Jones, said, "This is a good evaluation done to standard; and it will give us the input we need to formulate the training plan for next year's mortar evaluation."

1-11th Inf soldiers rappel off 90-foot towers

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

Last week, troops from 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment pushed aside their typewriters, threw down their pens, donned kevlar helmets and pistol belts and spent a day in the field learning "hands-on" how other soldiers earn their pay.

Ann M. McDonald

Sgt. Steve Roberts instructs PFC William Williams on how to properly jump off the skid on the tower.

They spent the day flying in Blackhawk Helicopters, firing Bradley Fighting Vehicles and rappelling off towers as tall as 90 feet.

According to the battalion S-3 officer, Capt. Herman Payton, training was set up under the direction of battalion commander, Lt. Col. Dewey George.

"Lieutenant Colonel George did this because he wanted to give office-bound soldiers an opportunity to do some valuable training," Payton said.

He said that this type training was selected to give them a chance to do something they wouldn't normally have a chance to do. Most soldiers don't have a chance to fire a BFV, ride in a Blackhawk Helicopter or do a big confidence builder like rappelling, he said.

PFC Michael Hart, HHC, 1st Bn., 11th Inf., said he thought it was a good day because most soldiers in the battalion don't get to do basic soldiering.

Hart added that although he had experienced some of the training before, he learned something new.

"The rappelling was something I had never done," he said, "I have a fear of heights, so sliding down a rope 90 feet in the air was a real accomplishment; and I felt good about doing it."

Another soldier couldn't get enough of rappelling off the tower and exclaimed, "I have a chance to be all I can be, and I am going to do that."

Payton said that was the response of the majority of the troops and added that there would be more of this type of training in the future.

498th Med Co supports exercise in Honduras

By Shawn Bryson
Bayonet staff writer

Soldiers from the 498th Medical Company (Air Ambulance), 34th Medical Battalion returned recently from Central America after four months of support to U.S. Armed Forces in Honduras.

According to Capt. Donald West, 1st Flight Platoon leader, three of the 498th's UH-60 Blackhawks and their four-man crews arrived in Honduras Feb. 21 to carry out the mission of Task Force Reliable Eagle.

With a base station in the Agwan Valley in the northern section of the country, the aviators of the 498th put in a total of 525 hours of flying time and provided medical evacuations for 75 Honduran and American patients.

West said that this was the first time the Army had sent Blackhawks to Honduras and that they and their crews went on a number of challenging missions.

CWO 2 William VanWagner, a Blackhawk pilot, recalled a mission that was not only challenging, but also frightening.

"We were called to respond to the burning of the American embassy's annex in Tegucigalpa April 7," VanWagner explained. "We were told that we might have to extract the embassy personnel if the embassy was taken over," VanWagner said. "We thought we would be fired at."

However, an extraction was not needed, and the 498th crew headed back to its base station.

The 498th soldiers also added their share to Operation Golden Pheasant, an operation in which more than 3,000 U.S. Army troops from the 82nd Airborne Division of Fort Bragg, N.C. and the 7th Infantry Division out of Fort Ord, Calif. deployed in March to Honduras for training. When a U.S. Army UH-1 helicopter carrying 10 soldiers crashed March 24, the 498th was called in to search for the chopper and rescue the soldiers.

"It was not easy to find the helicopter because the weather was so bad that day," West said. But the search and rescue mission was successful, and the injured were evacuated.

He also said that during Golden Pheasant, the 498th soldiers put in 150 flying hours, which is a lot for just three crews to manage.

West explained that flying in Honduras is much different from flying in the United States.

"Honduras is very mountainous and has a lot of low clouds. Landing areas are few and far between," West said. "Plus, there are no active weather reports in Honduras and night flying was restricted."

Just such flying conditions are what made another of their missions difficult. "There was an outbreak of polio in several of the villages, and we flew to four or five of these villages each day to provide them with vaccinations," West explained. The real difficulties with these projects were flying in and landing in remote and primative villages, West said.

West said that the word of the vaccinations spread so fast that many Honduran natives walked up to 40 miles to receive them. "We vaccinated about 800 people one day," he said.

The 498th soldiers returned to Fort Benning from what West described as an enjoyable and educational training exercise.

Benning soldiers visit Canadian jump school

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

Thirty-seven Fort Benning soldiers recently got the chance to see how our Canadian neighbors train their airborne soldiers when the group traveled to Alberta, Canada to attend Canadian jump school.

According to SFC Kerry Johnson of Co. C, 1st Bn., 507th PIR, he and four other members from the battalion, plus 32 additional troops from the Ranger Training Brigade, traveled to Edmundton Kaserne to earn a different set of airborne wings.

Johnson, who is an instructor with the U.S. Army Airborne School said he noticed several differences right away.

He said all of the training is conducted indoors with the exception of the 34-foot tower. Also, they do physical training twice a day instead the once like the U.S.

Johnson added that the way they conduct their training is different in that they are less formal when they are conducting their classes.

"I think a lot of that stems from their class size being so much smaller than the classes conducted here," he said. "They have no more than 50 students per class, whereas we have up to 500."

When the members of the group were ready to make their qualifying jumps, Johnson noticed big differences in the way they conducted inspections and exited the aircraft. The size of the parachutes they carried was also different.

"I think seeing how they do things and the differences, will really enhance my skills as a trainer," he said.

Automated equipment streamlines supply

AMMUNITION AMNESTY PROGRAM

FOUND SOME AMMUNITION?

DON'T KNOW WHAT TO DO WITH IT?

- TURN IT IN THROUGH YOUR UNIT AMNESTY PROGRAM OR DIRECTLY TO THE ASI
- NO QUESTIONS ASKED
- NO PAPER WORK REQUIRED
- QUESTIONS??? CALL 544-7490

Amnesty program provides no-questions-asked turn in

Supply and Services Division

Many people keep large shells displayed in their homes as souvenirs. They don't seem to realize that the shells have probably already misfired and are more than likely unstable — ticking time bombs.

Even if you've had ammunition sitting around your home for months, the Ammunition Supply Installation wants it back. And the ASI Amnesty Program provides a way to turn in ammunition with no paperwork and no questions asked.

The program is not intended as an easy way to circumvent established turn-in procedures but is oriented toward gaining control of small quantities of ammunition that may have been found..

Ammunition found on or off post may be turned in at the ASI Monday through Friday, 8 a.m.-4:30 p.m. or during non-duty hours, at any Vehicle Holding Area adjacent to the ASI. For more information, call 544-7490.

Supply

TACMIS product manager for devices at the Army's Tactical Management Information Systems here.

Priddy said LOGMARS is designed to speed data collection and processing through automation and to improve inventory control of military supplies.

"It provides cost-effective and accurate methods to streamline operations in the supply, maintenance and medical community," he said. "The future of LOGMARS-T promises to bring benefits to the soldier in the field and savings to the Army."

LOGMARS-T employs bar codes similar to those used by civilian supermarkets and department stores. Its associated equipment includes bar code scanners and readers, communications modems and bar code printers.

With LOGMARS-T, items such as repair parts, supplies and tools are labeled with bar codes. One soldier armed with a scanner and reader conducts inventory simply by aiming the scanner at the bar-coded shelf label. The scanner sends each item's bar code to the reader, which stores it. When the required number of shelf labels have been scanned, the soldier can electronically send the information to his unit's main computer.

Two types of scanners are being fielded: contact scanners that resemble a ball-point pen and must be in contact with the label to pick up the code, and laser scanners which can read the bar-code label from distances up to two feet. Either kind can be used with the reader.

The bar code reader is slightly larger than a pocket calculator and features an alpha-numeric keyboard which the soldier can use to manually enter bar-code information if for some reason the scanner can't pick it up.

The LOGMARS-T equipment package also includes a printer which is used to generate bar code labels for new items or to replace damaged or incorrect labels.

The LOGMARS-T scanner and reader with holsters, belts, cables, batteries and technical manual weighs only 14 pounds, including the transit case. The modem and printer each fit in a transit case with a technical manual and cables, and weigh about seven and 40 pounds, respectively. The LOGMARS-T equipment is "user-friendly," with software designed for easy use by soldiers who haven't had special data-processing training.

LOGMARS-T fielding is about 65 percent complete worldwide with SARSS.

ASK THE JUDGE

By Dennis E. Brower
Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Q: I just received a notice that said I had won a great prize and all I have to do is listen to a sales pitch about cameras. What can you tell me about these types of promotions?

A: These types of promotions are used a lot now days. Many of them are reliable but many are not. The Georgia Fair Business Practices Act governs three types of promotional giveaways, and it requires the companies to follow very strict rules. If you are asked to listen to a sales pitch in response to a promotional giveaway, you have the following rights under Georgia law:

* First, you must be given a written notice that clearly discloses the promotion and all of its rules. It must state the verifiable retail value of each prize and the odds of winning each one. This notice must be given to you before you travel to the place of business or prior to the presentation if no travel was necessary.

* You cannot be made to pay any nominal charges or fees for the prizes. If there are other, legitimate, charges, then the complete additional cost must be clearly shown at the time of the offer or promotion. Upon arriving at the place of business, or the salesperson's arrival at your home, you must be immediately informed which, if any, prize you have won, and it must be given to you at that time. You cannot be made to wait through the presentation. You can make them give you the prize right at the beginning and then leave with it if you like. They cannot make any substitutions of the prizes. If they have run out of your prize, they must give you a voucher or certificate for it and must redeem it within 30 days. If the sales personnel violate any of these rules, the state may be able to take criminal legal action against them, and you might be able to take legal action for any civil damages you may have suffered.

Remember that you have many rights as a consumer. Do not let the sales personnel push you into something you will later regret. If you have any doubts about signing ask for a copy of the contract and call the Legal Assistance Office.

CRIME STOPPERS 571-5858

Columbus Police Department

Columbus Crime Stoppers and the Phenix City Police Department are looking for the person or persons responsible for the destruction of two Georgia Power Company 230 KV Transmission Towers, on Cox Road in Lee County, Ala.

The two transmission towers were torn down when someone drove a bulldozer into them, knocking them to the ground. The downed electrical wires caused several small fires.

The bulldozer belongs to Johnny Dudley and was left at the scene where it was being used to clear lots for a new subdivision.

Anyone having any information concerning this this case should call Columbus Crime Stoppers at 571-5858. If your information leads to the arrest and indictment of this person(s), you could receive up to $1,000 in reward money.

Georgia Power Company is also offering an additional $10,000 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person(s) responsible.

Columbus Crime Stoppers pays for information on other criminal activities, wanted fugitives and stolen property. The Crime Stoppers phone lines are open from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. Monday through Friday. Crime Stoppers serves the Columbus, Fort Benning, Phenix City and Russell County areas.

MISCELLANEOUS

Golden Knights: The U.S. Army Parachute Team, the "Golden Knights," is accepting applications for this year's tryout program for the 1989 demonstration season.

The tryout program for the Army's only official aerial demonstration team will be conducted Oct. 3-Nov. 14 at Fort Bragg.

The applications are due in to the team area no later than Aug. 15, and certain criteria must be met by all applicants. Each applicant must be an active-duty enlisted soldier with a perfect military and civilian record, must have had at least 150 free-fall jumps and, if not jump qualified, be willing to attend the Basic Airborne Course.

Finally, applicants must meet current permanent change of station requirements and have at least three years remaining on active duty, or be willing to extend or reenlist to meet these requirements if selected for the team. Soldiers who don't meet these requirements won't be considered for selection for the tryout program.

Applications may be sent to the U.S. Army Parachute Team, P.O. Box 70126, Fort Bragg, N.C., 28307.

Beware of 'fowl ups' when pickin' chicken

U.S. Army Troop Support Agency

With today's emphasis on fitness and nutrition, poultry is fast becoming a most favored flavor on America's dinner tables. But poultry purchasers must beware of possible "fowl ups" when pickin' chicken.

Accordingly, the U.S. Army Troop Support Agency has some tips for connoisseurs of commissary capons and other varieties of poultry products so customers will get the best bird for the buck.

TSA says its best to look for chicks with the most eye appeal. When buying, look for good yellow texture with no discoloration or missing parts.

Good quality poultry is free of any bruises, skin tears and pin feathers. It is tender to the touch, whether whole or conveniently cut into parts.

There are good reasons to put poultry ahead of red meats in market baskets. It is lower in sodium, fats, calories and cholesterol. It also offers a variety of ways of preparation and fits into today's fast-paced kitchen like a comb on a rooster. Best of all, it is inexpensive.

Nutritious, delicious, economical and easy to fix, poultry is plenty to crow about.

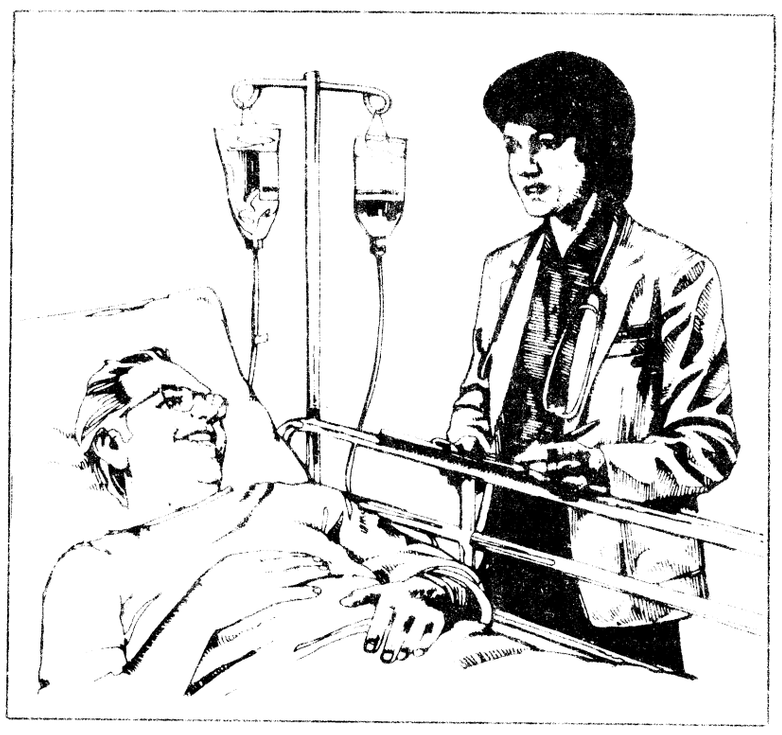
CHAMPUS supplemental insurance considered a must

U.S. Army Health Services Command

Whether a private or a general, all soldiers with family members should have an insurance policy that will supplement their CHAMPUS benefits.

One of the primary concerns of the Army leadership is that soldiers of all ages do not thoroughly understand the ever-changing CHAMPUS program. They say it is unlikely that all health care needs for soldiers and their families will be met in military treatment facilities, especially after retirement.



CHAMPUS is not free! For outpatient care the beneficiary must pay an annual deductible plus a share of the bill. For a stay in the hospital, there is a small co-payment of $7.85 per hospital day while the sponsor is on active duty; after retirement that could jump to as much as $175 per hospital day, or 25 percent of billed hospital charges, whichever is less. It doesn't take a calculator to figure out that a brief hospital stay can add up to a considerable amount.

As an example, let's say you're a military retiree, and you just spent 20 days in a civilian hospital. That stay totaled $10,000 worth of CHAMPUS-covered inpatient hospital services. CHAMPUS rules say your share of the cost can be up to 25 percent of the billed charges, or $175 per day, whichever is less. So even with the help of CHAMPUS, you would still have to pay a hefty tab of $2,500! A good supplemental insurance policy will pick up most or all of that amount for you.

With strong Army support, Congress recently passed legislation that limits a family's share of the CHAMPUS bill to $1,000 per year for the family of active duty soldiers and $10,000 per year for retirees and their families.

Also to be considered are the costs of procedures not covered by CHAMPUS. That includes such items as routine physical exams, mammograms, Pap smears, chiropractors, abortions and birth control. These can make even the active duty soldier carry a heavy financial burden without insurance.

There are many different kinds of supplemental policies, and you must be careful to know exactly what you are buying. Some policies have a catch: They're worded so that they agree to pay your 25 percent of the allowable charges for the hospital costs. Some doctors and hospitals charge more than CHAMPUS will pay; and you would be liable for the extra amount, if the doctor or hospital has not agreed in advance to accept CHAMPUS assignment. In our example, CHAMPUS' new DRG payment system may only allow a charge of $4,000, not the $10,000 the hospital billed. So, the insurance company only pays $1,000. You would be left with the rest of the $2,000, or a total of $1,500, to pay out of your pocket.

The bottom line answer is that all military families, active duty or retired, need a CHAMPUS supplemental insurance policy.

However, buying a supplemental insurance policy is like shopping for a new car. There are many variables. You must read the fine print. Each company has a base "sticker" price, which varies from company to company. Then there are the add-ons.

The key is to build a policy that fits your needs. You should do comparison shopping by writing or calling on several companies to get their marketing packages. Your Health Benefits Advisor at your nearest medical treatment facility has a list of the companies, which offer supplemental insurance and can help sort out questions you might have. Most of the military associations and many other insurance companies now offer low cost policies.

There are all sorts of clauses in the policies while on active duty without a physical examination. After retirement, some companies require a physical examination; therefore, it might be prudent to start a policy before retirement because many soldiers retiring with 25 or more years of service have medical conditions that might cause a company to deny insurance.

The real shock comes when retirees reach 65, and lose CHAMPUS benefits. At that point, they simply become MEDICARE beneficiaries, and their out-of-pocket expenses can increase dramatically.

The most important consideration: Whatever policy you consider, be sure it will convert to a MEDICARE supplemental policy at age 65! Your local health benefits adviser will assist you in making the right considerations.

No one can expect good health for the rest of his life; a CHAMPUS supplemental insurance policy will ensure the best of care at minimum cost.

SPIRITUAL

Take a break, let God take over

By Chap. Tom Wheatley

"Be Still And Know That I Am God"

The other day I found myself rushing around from place to place trying to accomplish all of the tasks that had accumulated. I just knew that if I did not hurry, I would never finish all of my work. I felt burdened by my load as I thought I was solely responsible for getting all of the work done. Frustration began to set in, and a feeling that, humanly, it was impossible for me to complete the work.

Then I began to realize that I was trying to leave God out of His universe. Of course, it is impossible to do that since the Scriptures tell us that God is all powerful and ever present. God is always there and always in control, regardless of what the human picture presents.

There may be many times when, humanly, it looks like there are no solutions; but God does not know of any situations without solutions. There is nothing impossible to God.

Sometimes we need to quiet our own human activity and the whirl of thoughts inside of our heads to be able to see what God has already done and is doing in our experience. Wildly rushing about without using our spiritual vision can hinder us from seeing God's salvation at hand.

I realized that I needed to calm myself and turn to God for an answer. The answer came in the form of a Bible passage from Psalms 46:10, "Be still, and know that I am God . . ." This psalm begins with the assurance, "God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble." The psalm goes on to encourage us not to be afraid even in the face of turmoil in our experience.

Dummelow's Bible commentary says that to "be still" means to desist from our vain efforts, in other words, we need to calm our own jumbled thoughts and frantic movements and be willing to see God at work in our experience.

As we begin to put our faith in God, the anxiety or turmoil we feel or experience will be replaced by a calm trust, which will enable us to face the situation with courage and confidence. And as we begin to let God govern the situation, we will be pleasantly surprised to find that He will.

My pace that day became less hectic, and I found myself accomplishing the tasks without having to rush. All of the things that were important were finished, and I thanked God for truly being in control.

I was later reminded of a Japanese version of the 23rd Pslam which sums up the lessons I learned that day about being still:

The Lord is my pace-setter.
I shall not rush.
He makes me stop for quiet intervals.

He provides me with images of stillness which restore my serenity.
He leads me in ways of efficiency through calmness of mind and His guidance is peace.
Even though I have a great many things to accomplish each day, I will not fret, for His presence is here.
His timelessness; His All-importance;
will keep me in balance.
His prepares refreshment and renewal in the midst of my activity by anointing my mind with His oil of tranquility.
My cup of joyous energy overflows
Surely harmony and effectiveness shall be the fruit of my hours, and I shall walk in the pace of the Lord forever.

Signal Corps eliminates 25F

Army News Service

A specialty-realignment process is underway at Army headquarters to eliminate one of the Army Signal Corps' "areas of concentration" namely AOC 25F, which is held by some 541 officers Army-wide.

The realignment, approved recently by Army Vice Chief of Staff Gen. Arthur E. Brown Jr., applies to both the active component and the reserve components, said Maj. Gerry Kemp at the Total Army Personnel Center in Alexandria, Va. He noted that the need for the realignment derives from realizing that, since the materiel managed by the affected officers belongs to ordnance and quartermaster units, it would be managerially beneficial to align the officers with those branches whenever practical to do so.

Kemp explained that the alignment process for the active component is expected to be completed by Oct. 1, the reserve components' action deadline yet to be set.

Meantime, the AOC 25F-holding officers communications electronics materiel managers⅜ have been notified by a TAPA letter that a review board will convene in August to reclassify them. Based on the board's review of each officer's record and executed "preference sheet" (provided with the notification letter), officers will be selected to continue service in the Signal Corps or to be transferred either to the Ordnance Corps or the Quartermaster Corps.

The selection decision will depend on the officer's preference, assignment history, qualifications and the needs of the Army, Kemp said. The board will consist of senior officers versed in the pertinent functions, along with members drawn from the signal and logistics branch proponents. Once the board completes its work, each officer will be notified of the results, Kemp added. That notification is expected to take place during the first week of September.

"Right now, we anticipate that about 25 percent of the AOC 25F population will be transferred to Ordnance or Quartermaster ⅛AOC 91 or 92⅜," Kemp said.

"The remainder will continue to serve in Signal as AOC 25C."

The affected officers are being invited to address their questions about the alignment to Capt. Winston Davis, TAPA professional development officer for the Signal Branch (AUTOVON 221-0645).

197th undergoes customs inspection

By Kevin J. Howerton
197th Infantry Brigade correspondent

Life in the military is filled with inspections — room inspections, uniform inspections and a host of others. But the 197th Infantry Brigade has been undergoing a different kind of inspection, courtesy of the 42nd Military Police Group (Customs), headquartered in Manheim, West Germany.

Members of the 42nd MP Group are here at Fort Benning to prepare the 197th Infantry Brigade for their upcoming deployment to the Federal Republic of Germany for Reforger '88 exercise "Certain Challenge".

"We inspect all of the vehicles and equipment prior to their shipment to Europe", said SSgt. Richard A. Roberts, NCOIC of the Customs Inspection Team. "This way the unit doesn't have to download all their equipment for the European customs inspection. The equipment goes straight to the deployment area, saving the Army time and money."

About 3,000 soldiers from the 197th will deploy to Germany. More than 950 wheeled and tracked vehicles will be taken to the port at Savannah, Ga. to be loaded onto ships bound for Europe.

The nine soldiers from the 42nd Group are all specially trained by the U.S. Customs Department as Senior Military Customs Inspectors. They, in turn, train Fort Benning soldiers as Military Customs Inspectors to assist in the deployment operations.

"We have to check everything for contraband and dirt, both leaving and entering the U.S.," said Roberts. "Dirt can cause all sorts of agricultural problems."

Roberts explained that parasites can be carried in the dirt or mud on a vehicle. Parasites such as the golden nematode, which costs the U.S. agricultural department about $12 million a year, was probably brought into the U.S. on a dirty vehicle from Europe.

"The hardest vehicles to inspect are the tracked vehicles," said Roberts, "They have all kinds of cracks and crevices where dirt gets caught."

Who cleans all these cracks and crevices? That's right, the tank crew. "The Army definitely got their money's worth for our pay this month," said Sgt. Michael A. Thomas, Trp. A, 15th Cav. "The four people in my tank crew spent four days working to get ready for the customs inspection. The toughest part is the suspension and track, because there are hundreds of cracks, joints and holes that have to be cleaned."

The customs inspections will continue for the next couple of weeks to get the brigade ready for the deployment this month.

Bike thefts at Fort Benning increasing

Provost Marshall's Office

In the past few months, there has been an increase in bicycle theft on Fort Benning. This is not primarily due to the increased bicyclist activity, but mainly because individuals are not properly securing their bicycles. The PX activites have a variety of locking devices, which are suitable for bicycle security and are relatively inexpensive, and definitely worth the investment. If you live in barracks, your unit should provide some type of bicycle rack to secure your bicycle. However, taking these precautionary measures will not always preclude the possibility that you could still become a victim of a bicycle theft.

The question you might ask is, "What can I do to assist the MPs in their investigation and recovering the stolen bicycle?" The answer is very simple. Have your bicyle registered with the Provost Marshal's office. Registration is done daily during regular duty hours. There is no fee for registration; and all you need is the serial number, make, model, and about five minutes of your time. Also be sure to maintain a copy of the serial number and possibly a picture to help identify your bicycle in case it is recovered. The Crime Prevention Office of the Military Police Activity has available to the Fort Benning community an electric engraver that can be used to mark your valuables with other identity numbers such as drivers license number, etc. This engraver can be signed out during normal duty hours.

Remember, crime prevention is everyone's business — get involved.

To report a crime, call the Military Police Desk Sergeant at 545-5222.

Golden Knights compete in World Championships

Army News Service

Five members of the U.S. Army Parachute Team, the "Golden Knights," are in Stockholm, Sweden, competing in the 1988 World Parachuting Championships.

The team leader is Col. Bruce Wicks, commander of the Golden Knights; the coach is SFC Brad Arvidson, team leader of the Knights' style and accuracy squad; and three male competitors, SSgt. Tom Welgos and Sgts. Chuck Lackey and Bill Jackson, are also members of the Golden Knights.

Two teams of five men and five women each are representing the United States in style and accuracy at the meet. Style competition involves jumpers performing a specified number of flips and turns as quickly as possible while free-falling from 6,000 feet. Accuracy competition requires precision - the jumper leaves the aircraft at 2,800 feet and tries to land on a five-centimeter disk centered in a 10-meter gravel pit.

The Golden Knights won the 1987 world team championship.

Save America's energy for a stronger tomorrow

By Becky Ray
Energy Management Section

What one thing could slow the global warming trend, reduce acid rain, save U.S. consumers substantial amounts of money, help balance the federal budget, help balance the U.S. trade deficit and make United States industry more competitive? According to a recent study by the American Council for an Energy Efficient Economy, it's energy efficiency.

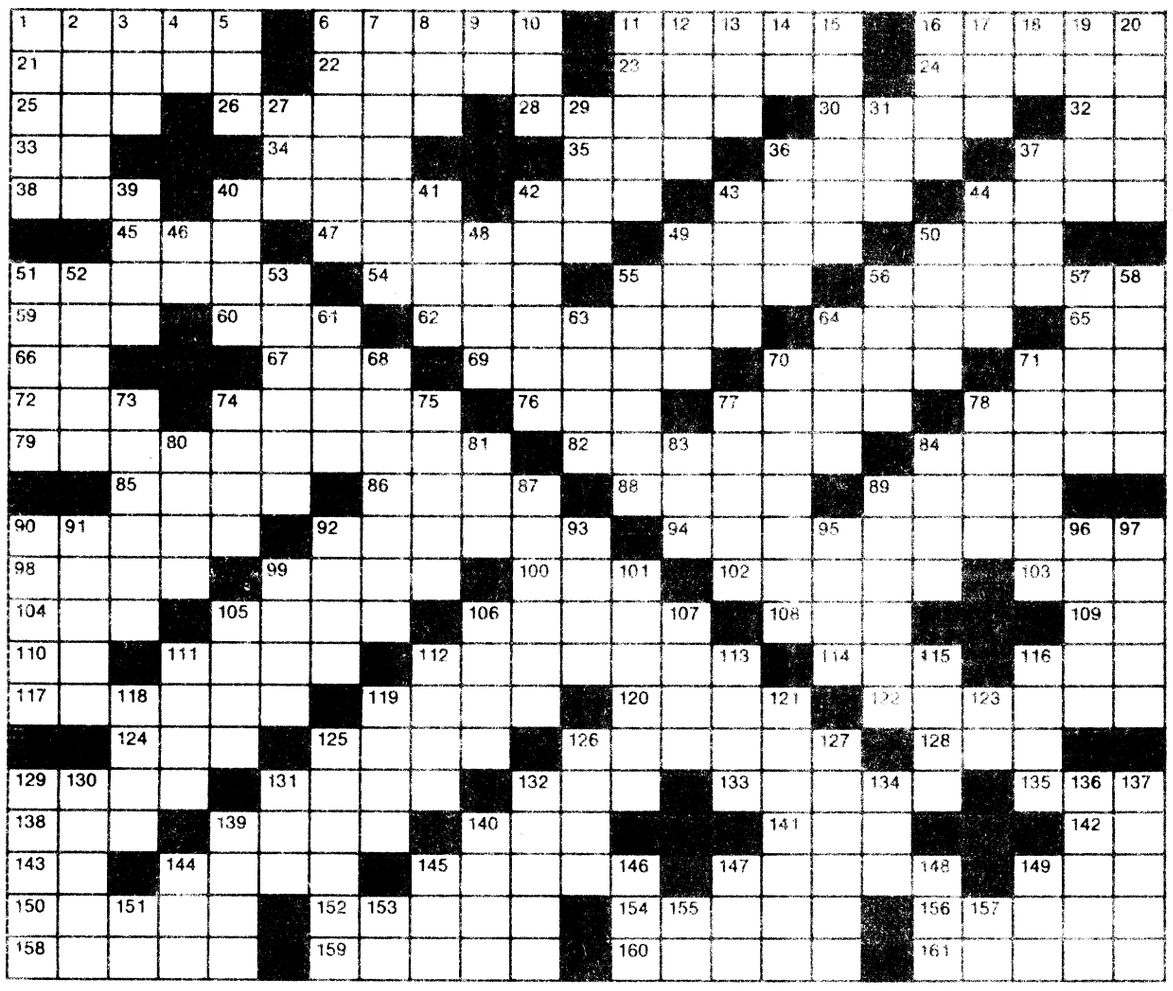
The study, which was the topic of a July 18 Energy Report article, offers 21 recommendations for improving national energy efficiency. For instance, the council recommends raising standards for fuel economy to 45 miles per gallon for cars and 35 miles per gallon for light trucks.

The study also recommends that energy conservation be a top priority of the next president as a means of tackling a host of problems.

The study reports that oil imports to the United States now account for almost one-third of the U.S. trade deficit and suggests that this deficit could reach $100 billion a year by the year 2000 if measures to control the trend aren't taken.

In addition to the fiscal problems incurred by out-of-control petroleum products consumption, the global warming trend, named the "greenhouse effect," could be slowed by more efficient use of petroleum products.

The problem of acid rain could also be reduced by increased energy efficiency. As less coal is burned for power generation, less sulfur and nitrogen oxide, the gases blamed for contaminating rain, are emitted from power plants.



Another startling fact reported in the study is that industries in West Germany, Italy and Japan use only half as much energy as those in the U.S. in producing the same amount of goods. These higher costs in U.S. industry make the nation less competitive in trade. In addition, high energy costs for products made in the U.S. are passed on to the buyer, making consumer goods more expensive.

Ignorance and carelessness on the part of individual citizens are also to blame for wasted energy resources and environmental contamination. Individuals must be equally responsible for making needed changes in attitudes and behaviors to stop energy waste and abuse.

Poor energy efficiency in the U.S., now and in the past, has caused or aggravated numerous economic and environmental problems for the nation. The concerted efforts of the government, industry and individuals are necessary to solve this array of problems.

LAST WEEK

SNAPSHOT: LABCOM

Army News Service

Each week ARNEWS publishes an "Army Snapshot" information column of facts, figures, quotes or other data about a subject of interest to soldiers and military families.

Ten facts about the Army Laboratory Command.

Many times the technical breakthroughs discovered in Army research laboratories have led to new industries or new jobs in existing industries.

The domestic transfer of technology from Army labs to private industry benefits taxpayers by allowing the country to use technology developed for the military in consumer goods.

The computer industry was spawned in 1946 when the Ballistics Research Laboratory unveiled the world's first all electronic computer, the Electronic Numerator Integrator Analyzer Computer, popularly called "ENIAC".

Some 40 years later, the same laboratory dedicated the Army's first "supercomputer".

A photographic technique for making integrated circuits invented at Harry Diamond Laboratories more than 30 years ago led to today's electronics revolution.

Methods developed by the Materials Technology Laboratory to analyze copper enabled restorers of the Statue of Liberty to exactly match the symbolic lady's "dress."

Lasers developed by the Atmospheric Sciences Laboratory to sense toxic agents on the battlefield are enabling agronomists to determine how insect relationships influence crop production.

These examples illustrate how civilian uses have been found for capabilities developed originally for military purposes.

The laboratories cited are among seven Army research labs nationwide that report to the Army Laboratory Command.

They are all also members of the Federal Laboratory Consortium, a body dedicated to speeding the transfer of technology from government labs to private industry.

VETERANS' Qs & As

Veterans Administration

Q — I receive education benefits from the VA. Can I set up a direct deposit of those checks?

A — No. Only compensation and pension benefits can be directly deposited to a personal bank account.

Q — Are common-law marriages recognized by the VA?

A: Yes, in a state that recognized common-law marriages at the time the relationship was established.

Q — My ex-husband says I am the beneficiary of his National Service Life Insurance policy. Can I verify this?

A — Verification is possible only with the husband's permission in writing. This does not preclude a change in beneficiaries at a later date.

Q — I believe I may be eligible for veterans benefits based on a recent determination by the Defense Department concerning Merchant Marine seamen. How do I go about getting my discharge certificate?

A — To be considered for a discharge certificate, you are asked to complete DD Form 2168, which is available from any VA Regional Office, and mail to Commandant (GMVP-1/12 MMVS), U.S. Coast Guard, Washington, D.C. 20593-0001.

Keep children away from unsafe areas

National Safety Council

To curious children, railroad yards, abandoned houses and other off-limits locations seem attractive places to investigate. The National Safety Council reminds you that these unauthorized play spaces contain hazards that can cause serious injury or death to trespassers. Don't allow your children to play in or around these areas:

- Railroads, including tracks, trestles and freight yards
- Mines or caves
- Excavations
- Construction sites
- Electrical stations
- Empty buildings
- Quarries (dry or water-filled)
- Dumps or junkyards
- Waterfronts

'Training' is the theme of the Military History Writing Contest

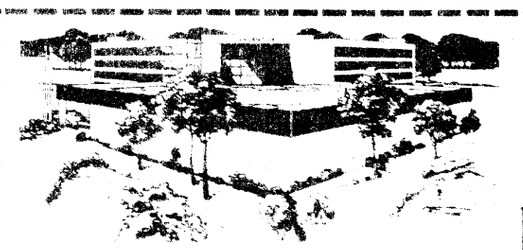
Army News Service

Entries are now being accepted for the 1988 Military History Writing Contest, sponsored by the Army's Center of Military History.

The contest is open to all 1988 graduates and current students of advanced officer courses and the Sergeants Major Academy.

The theme of this year's contest is "Training." Entries must be previously unpublished manuscripts, 2,000 to 4,000 words long, typed double-spaced, dealing with an historical perspective of one of the following aspects of training:

The NCO and training
Training and the trainer
Logistic training
Unit training
Leadership training
Initial entry training
Intelligence training
Staff training
Training exercises, maneuvers or simulations
Civil War or other period training
Effects of training on warfighting or combat



To enter, send two copies of the manuscript, with any accompanying photographs, maps or other graphics, to: History Writing Contest, Center of Military History, 20 Massachusetts Avenue NW, Washington, D.C., 20314-0200.

The deadline for entries is Dec. 31, 1988.

Entrants should contact their command historian for assistance in writing their essays by acceptable historical standards and methodology.

Officers Wives' Club donations aimed at helping terminally ill

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

Donations by caring members of the Medical and Dental activities Officers Wives' Club are aimed at making the terminally ill patients' rooms at Martin Army Community Hospital a little more "homey."

The group donated draperies and recliner easy chairs to two rooms on the terminally ill ward in the hospital.

According to the club chairperson, Joan Hutchins, they felt the terminally ill patients' rooms needed to be more "homey," and they decided to do something about it.

The women did some research and found that to make a donation of that type they would have to work with the head of the Housekeeping Section, Clyde Curliss, to ensure the items they wished to donate would meet hospital standards.

Curliss said he told the women what specifications needed to be met, and the women went out and purchased the items.

The hospital, in turn, painted the rooms that would house the furnishings. The combination makes for a much more relaxed atmosphere in the rooms for the terminally ill.

The club gets funding for their projects from a percentage of the fee paid for newborn baby pictures.

They donate money to various dental and hospital clinics to benefit the Fort Benning community.

Veterans Administration begins nationwide survey

Veterans Administration

The Veterans Administration has begun a nationwide survey of disabled veterans to gather information on their needs and to assist the VA in determining how it can better serve veterans with service-connected disabilities.

The Arawak Consulting Corporation, Rosslyn, Va., which is doing the survey for the VA under a $1.5 million contract, will conduct in-depth interviews with 10,000 men and women veterans over the next six months. The survey's participants were selected at random and will be contacted directly. A final report of the results is expected to be available by the middle of next year.

Administrator of Veterans Affairs, Thomas K. Turnage, is urging all veterans contacted to participate in the study.

"Their cooperation will ensure an accurate and unbiased report on the attitudes and experiences of disabled veterans and will be invaluable in helping VA plan for their future needs," Turnage said.

In a letter sent to each veteran selected, Turnage noted that their participation is voluntary and that the confidentiality of all responses will be maintained.

'Dependables' win 11th, beat 'Patriots' 9-6

Sally Roberts

Cheryl Robinson makes a bid for the 1st Bn, 58th Inf. Patriots in the 197th Inf. Bde Officers Softball League

By Sally Roberts
197th Infantry Brigade correspondent

Hot hitting in the 1st inning sparked the 197th Support Battalion "Dependables" on to their 11th win in the 197th Infantry Officers Softball League as they beat the 1st Battalion, 58th Infantry "Patriots" 9-6.

The Patriots took the bat first, making their intentions clear with two 1st-inning runs. But the Dependables countered the threat right from the start and held the lead throughout the rest of the game.

[illegible] the Patriot fielders turned hits by Jack Judy, Jackie David and Sammy Hardgrove into triples and helped the Dependables get six runners across home plate, ending the 1st inning with a score of 6-2.

In the 2nd inning, [illegible] drive to centerfield for [illegible] Slade became a triple because of Patriot errors. Slade had the only run in the inning, coming home on a single by Jackie David.

The Patriots rallied in the third inning to close the score gap but never got the advantage over the Dependables. A home run by Ferdinand Pizzarro scored two runs, and a single by Darryl Robinson brought Dale Walsh in from second base. When the Patriots took to the field, they held the Dependables back with three quick outs.

Robinson scored the Patriot's final run in the 5th [illegible] on a single by Dennis [illegible]ngast.

Three quick hits by Dave Dodson, Rich Uncle and Sammy Hardgrove in the bottom of the 6th inning brought in two more runs for the Dependables. The Patriots managed to get two hits in the 7th inning, but the Dependables shut them down to win the game 9-6.

Soldier heads for Seoul for Olympic Pentathlon

[illegible] Service

When the 1988 United States Olympic Modern Pentathlon Team goes to the Olympic games in Seoul, Korea, this fall, they'll take a Fort Sam Houston soldier as an alternate member of the team.

SP4 Laszlo Beres is one of four pentathletes from across the nation to earn the honor of representing the United States in the prestigious five-event (running, swimming, fencing, horseback riding and pistol marksmanship) competition. He will train with other members of the team in Poland prior to the Olympic games in Seoul.

Born in Hungary, where the modern pentathlon is a popular professional sport, Beres has been involved in the sport since the age of 10.

It started when a birthday wish for horseback riding lessons was granted by his mother. After becoming a proficient equestrian, Beres decided he wanted to become a musketeer when he grew up. His mother informed him that there isn't much work in the modern-day musketeering profession but that there is a sport in which he could use both of his newly-acquired interests. That sport, of course, is modern pentathlon.

His first inspiration to compete came when he met Hungarian gold medal winner Andrew Balczo. Then in 1972, Beres and his mother moved from Hungary to Chicago. By this time he was becoming more and more involved in the sport.

In 1974, Beres came to San Antonio to compete in the Junior Olympics. By then, he really had the "bug" and it wasn't long after that he and his mother moved to San Antonio for the sole purpose of sharpening his pentathlon skills. San Antonio was then and remains the headquarters for United States modern pentathlon competition.

Apparently it worked, because to the United States Olympic committee, he's one of the four sharpest competitors in the nation. In addition, he has been a member of the U. S. World team for the last four years.

Beres said he joined the Army in 1977 to [illegible] the financial support it provided while simultaneously giving him the opportunity to [illegible] in basic soldier skills, his MOS and to conduct his personal pentathlon training program.

Reaching Olympic status has been one of Laszlo's goals for a long time so long, in fact, that now that he has reached it, it's not [illegible] he's expected it the whole time. "I feel really good about it, but the real excitement hasn't set in yet," he said. "The Olympics are a very prestigious competition but I'm used to that prestige after being in world competitions. I was really prepared for being chosen for the team because I've expected it for so long."

He is expecting plenty of excitement to occur, however. "I think it'll hit me when we get to Los Angeles and join up with the rest of the Olympic team," he said. "Around here, there aren't many privileges involved with being an Olympic athlete. But when we get to Los Angeles, that is where we will get acquainted with all of the other American Olympic athletes. That's when I'll become part of the whole team. That's when the excitement will really start to set in."

Fort Drum Triathlon registration is underway for Aug. 21 meet

[illegible] Public Affairs Office

Individual and three-member team registration is underway for the second Fort Drum Triathlon, according to Douglas Goodfellow, Physical Conditioning Center manager. Goodfellow said registration will continue until 9 a.m. the day of the meet, Aug. 21.

Open to anyone 17 years of age and older, the endurance contest pits men and women against themselves, and each other, in three events. Goodfellow estimates most competitors will complete the half-mile swim across Remington Pond, 15-mile bike race on Fort Drum streets and a five-mile run on Route 26 in less than two hours.

"The triathlon is a very intimate test, with competitors striving against inner barriers to meet their personal best.

He said, "We're holding this triathlon because it's a good test for soldiers and civilians of their stamina, endurance and mental toughness. It's a challenge just to complete all three events. It's one heck of an accomplishment."

Last year's course was shorter, having a quarter-mile, rather than a half-mile swim. The bike race also follows a different route from last year.

According to Goodfellow, there were approximately 50 entrants last year, competing as individuals or teams; and Goodfellow expects this year's field to increase. "We think the number of entries might double," he said.

"If we continue with this hot, humid weather, some of the runners might hope for rain, but weather is not going to interfere. Only lightning will stop us," Goodfellow said.

Open to both men and women, the competition will be divided into five age categories: 17 to 25 years old; 26 to 30 years old; 31 to 36 years old; 37 to 42 years old; and 42 years old and older. Gold, silver and bronze medals will be awarded in each age category.

Goodfellow said female competitors are strongly encouraged to register before Aug. 12 to be assured of receiving an award on the day of the event.

People who register now will receive their T-shirts through the mail after the competiton. A $6 fee will be collected at the time of registration from each competitor, whether signing up as an individual or as a team member.

Interested people are asked to contact Douglas Goodfellow, Larry Gutierrez or Bill Wilson at (315) 772-6938/4584 for specific details on the triathlon or for additional information about registering.

4th Annual Army 10-miler sign-up begins

[illegible] News

The Fourth Annual Army 10-miler race will be Oct. 16, in Washington, D.C.

The race begins at 8 a.m. It will follow the "historic Run the Bridges course" which, according to promotional material from the Military District of Washington, is "one of the most scenic routes in road racing."

The race features runners from the national capital region competing against runners from around the world for individual and team honors.

Runners wishing to compete individually should submit registration forms and their $10 pre-registration fees not later than Sept. 30 (after Sept. 30, the registration fee increases to $12).

Teams wishing to compete must also be registered by Sept. 30, team members must register and submit their fees as individuals. Entries for teams must be postmarked by Sept. 21. All teams must consist of six members, and no substitutions will be allowed once teams are registered.

According to Col. David Burpee, public affairs officer for the Military District of Washington, the race has grown each year; more than 9,000 runners took part last year.

"We expect thousands of military and civilian runners this year. Runners will compete both in age and in team categories for prizes and trophies. The 'Commander's Cup' trophy will be awarded to the top military team. We hope to see many active, Reserve and [illegible] units compete for the cup," Burpee said.

For more information on the race, and to request registration forms, write: Army 10-miler, P.O. Box 46594, Washington D.C. 20050-6594. You can also contact the Fort Benning Sports Office for more information.

Many consider spinnerbait to be the best

By Earl Bentz & Steve Price
88 Outboard Marine Corp.

Summer Spinnerbaits

Many anglers consider the spinnerbait the best lure ever developed for bass fishing. After all, it can be fished slow or fast, shallow or deep, around cover or in open water; and it can be effective in both clear and dingy water.

Despite all these accolades and its proven record for catching big bass, spinnerbaits are often ignored during the summer months. When bass vacate the spring shallows and head for deeper points and dropoffs, plastic worms and jigs are considered better lure choices.

"Not necessarily," says Johnson Outboards Pro Staff member Ricky Green, considered one of the nation's best spinnerbait fishermen. "On certain lakes summer largemouths do not always move to deeper water. They remain relatively shallow and where they do is usually prime spinnerbait water."

Green points out that in lakes with heavy grass and weeds, bass can frequently be found in water less than 10 feet deep, even during the hottest part of the summer. Likewise, lakes that have other cover, particularly stumps, fallen timber, and brush will also attract and hold bass shallow.

Green likes to fish a tandem blade spinnerbait around shallow grass, using a ⅜-ounce model with Size 5 and 3 blades. He doesn't "buzz" the lure near the surface, however, but rather, likes to drop the lure into openings in the grass.

"Frequently, big patches of vegetation will have large open areas inside them," explains Green, "and you can make a short cast that lets you retrieve the spinnerbait across this relatively open water.

"Instead of really racing the bait across, I make a cast and let the lure fall down beside one of the edges. Then I bring the spinnerbait back up near the surface where I can see it and slowly reel it back as close to the edge of the grass as I can."

Green also works edges of vegetation with his spinnerbait, bumping the greenery the same way crankbait anglers like to ricochet their lures off stumps and logs. He keeps the spinnerbait as close to the cover as possible at all times.

When he is fishing the edge of a grassline, Green often switches to a tandem willow leaf spinnerbait, because the blades produce an extra amount of flash that helps attract bass. The leaf-shaped blades also cut through vegetation very well, too. His preferred blade size choices are 5 and 3.

"One thing I like to do with my willow leaf blades," says Johnson Outboards pro, "is bend the last ½-inch of the big blade up at about a 45-degree angle. It adds vibration so you can feel the lure working, and it does not affect the performance or balance at all."

A productive technique with shallow-blade grasses is to cast a spinnerbait back over the vegetation and bring the lure back with a fast retrieve that literally keeps the lure hopping and skipping through the greenery. At times, the lure will even be out of the water, but if fish are in the grass and are active, they'll hit the lure. If they hit and miss the lure, you can frequently cast to the same spot with a plastic worm and get another strike.

For this type of fishing, tie on a tandem-blade willow leaf spinnerbait with Size 5 and 3 blades. Work the lure with 14- or 17-pound test line, and check the line frequently for abrasions.

When there is no grass to fish, look for shallow cover like stumps and fallen trees, the true home for a spinnerbait. The backs of coves and tributary creeks are good places to locate cover like this, even in deep, clear water lakes.

"Around cover of this type, a slow-moving spinnerbait often generates more strikes than a fast-moving one," notes Green, "so a slightly smaller spinnerbait, such as a ¼-ounce size, might be needed. Bring the lure back as close to the cover as possible, even bumping it, on each retrieve."

For this type of fishing, Green again recommends using a tandem blade spinnerbait, either a small willow leaf or a standard lure with Colorado or Indiana blades.

Occasionally Green will "drop" a spinnerbait into slightly deeper water around cover. When doing this, he prefers a single-blade spinnerbait with a much larger Size 7 or 8 blade. The big blade has both flash and vibration and frequently attracts large bass.

"When you drop or 'kill' a spinnerbait," explains Green, "it's always better if you cast well beyond your intended target and keep the lure near the surface as you retrieve up to that target. Then, simply stop reeling and let the spinnerbait fall right down beside it.

"Keep a tight line as the lure drops so you can feel the blade vibrate, and if that vibration stops for any reason, set the hook. Most spinnerbait strikes are hard, but some are so soft you never really feel a thing."

Green also likes to use a large single-blade spinnerbait at night for summer bass fishing, and he's taken several fish in the eight-pound class by simply casting and reeling the lure straight back with a slow, steady retrieve.

"At night bass come shallow to feed," he explains. "I simply work shorelines, long points and shallow flats, and just make long casts and slow retrieves. If cover, like fallen trees or brush is present, I work the lure around them as much as possible.

"It's really an exciting way to fish, and frequently the fish I catch at night are much larger than those taken during the day."

NEWS BRIEFS

Post updates phone service

ITT: Long distance telephone service will be provided by ITT under the competed long distance telephone service program. This upgrade to new long distance equipment will permit customers to direct dial official calls to commercial numbers within the United States (including within the state of Georgia) from Class AA telephone numbers by dialing 77, wait for a dial tone, then dial the area code plus the seven-digit telephone number desired. Official calls must still be placed through the Fort Benning telephone operator.

Volunteers needed

Opportunities: The following opportunities are available for volunteers:

Bi-lingual clerks to work in the Thrift Shop Tuesdays and Thursdays, 10 a.m.-2 p.m.

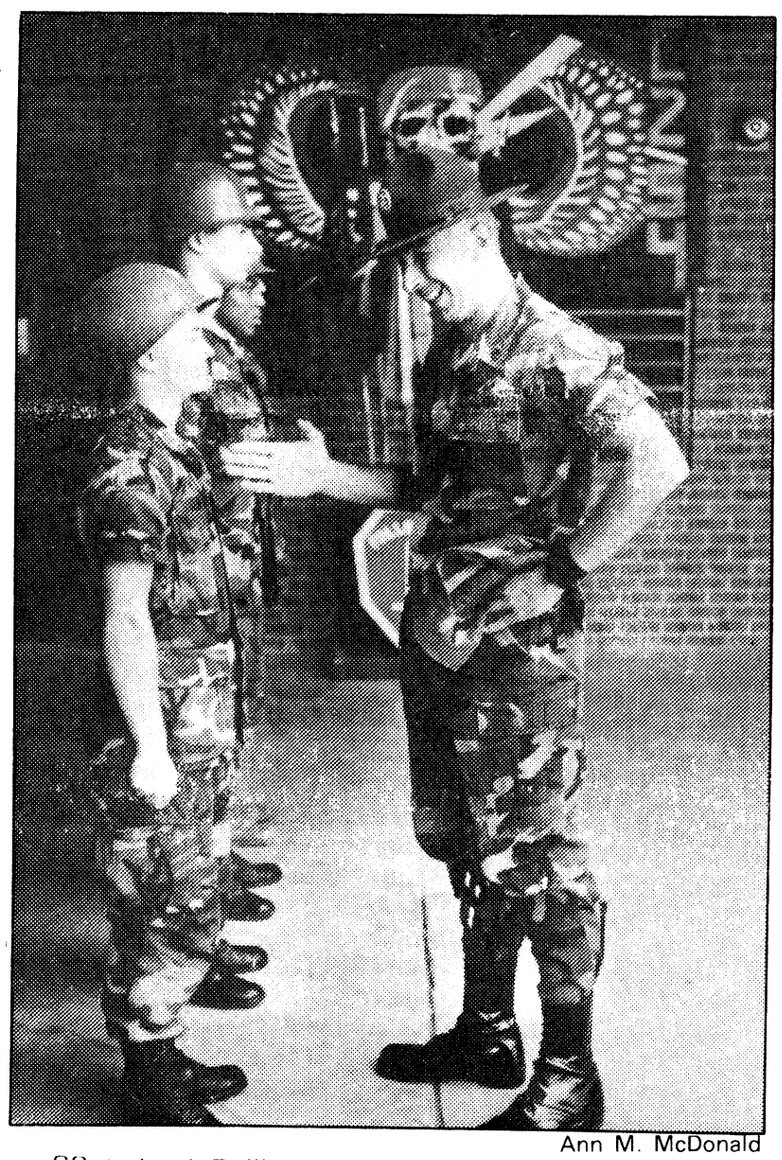
Bigger isn't always better

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

He's five-foot-two, his eyes are blue, and he's in the Army.

He is 18-year-old, Pvt. Jason Stewart, Co. C, 2nd Bn., 54th Inf. Regt., 2nd Inf. Tng. Bde.



Yes it's true, he is short compared to the average height of most American men; but he's long on stamina and heart.

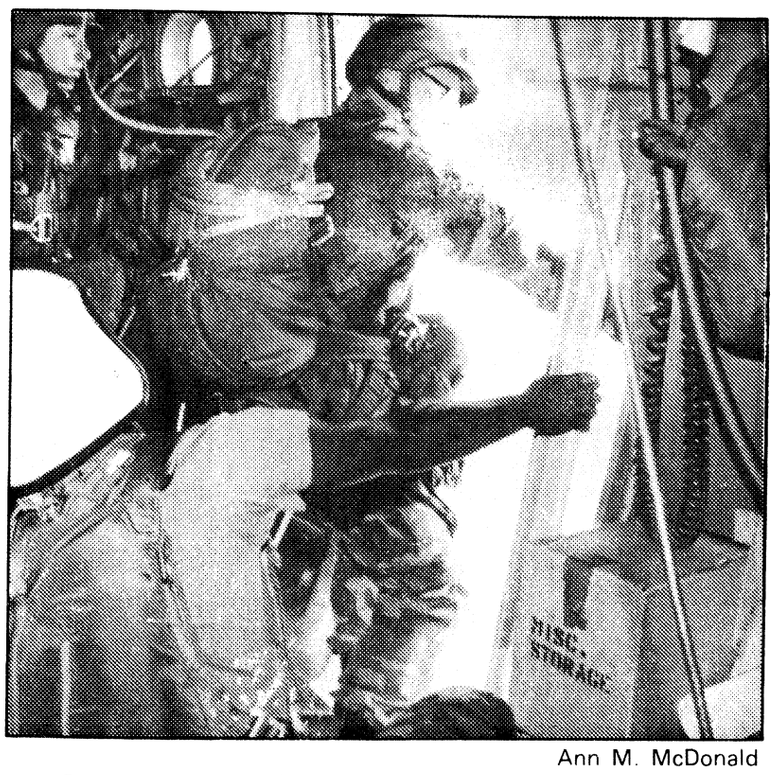
The Plattsburgh, N.Y. native is at Fort Benning attending the first portion of his training for the National Guard. Stewart has a split-option contract, which is designed especially for people attending high school. This allows enlistees to attend basic training the summer before their senior year of school; and they attend Advanced Individual Training upon graduation.

Stewart said he opted for this contract so he could finish some of his initial training before graduating.

Although most soldiers are a full head taller than Stewart, he said he has no problem keeping up with them.

"As a matter of fact," he said, "a lot of people are a lot more slower than I am."

Ann M. McDonald



SSgt. Fred Dolling gives Pvt. Jason Stewart a little one-on-one training.

He said that he is on the track and soccer team at home, which is what keeps him in good shape. He added that the National Guard Unit he's with does a lot of skiing and rappelling during their weekend drills, which helps out as well.

Stewart said that he gets ribbed a lot about his height, but it comes with the territory.

"I just tell them that they're ugly because they're too tall; and they have to dig deeper foxholes," he said with a grin.

The Army's top man in training was the guest speaker for the graduating class of Company B, 1st Battalion, 507th Parachute Infantry Regiment (U.S. Army Airborne School) last week.

Training and Doctrine Commander Gen. Maxwell Thurman visited Fort Benning to observe training and to meet with various officials concerning training equipment.

Although it not the first time a high-ranking official has spoken at a graduation, it is rare that he participated in airborne operation with the graduating class.

Thurman, a master parachutist participated in the class's fifth jump, which upon successful completion qualifies the soldiers as parachutists.

Thurman said it was 34 years ago that he stood before another guest speaker who spoke at his airborne graduation.

Benning gets health vehicle

MEDDAC

Next Friday at 10 a.m., Fort Benning will officially have its first Military Occupational Health Vehicle, or MOHV.

The MOHV is a fifth-wheel trailer with a pick up truck prime mover. The trailer is equipped with a six-man audiometric testing booth, health education room, medical screening room with EKG, vision screener, pulmonary function tester, centrifuge and refrigerator. The vehicle will be used to screen military and civilian personnel at their areasof operation, thus, reducing the inconvenience for soldiers and civilians to travel from various areas on post to Troop Medical Clinics or the hospital. The MOHV will also conserve valuable manpower and give our workers the quality occupational health services they need and deserve.

The MOHV will provide several advantages to Fort Benning. It will serve as a resource for meeting medical surveillance due to the large number of soldiers and civilian employees served and increase participation of hazard-exposed personnel in occupational health and hearing conservatiom programs.

The intent of fielding the MOHV is to take medical services to soldier and civilian workers near their work site. The vehicle will be positioned at several sites where there is a heavy troop concentration, to include Preventive Medicine Service, building 66; Main Post DEHH, building 385; Sand Hill Theater #3 and Dental Clinic, building 2828.

The vehicle will be in full operation starting next Friday. A ceremony to welcome the vehicle and discuss its advantages will be Aug. 19, 10 a.m. at Soldiers' Plaza. A touring of the vehicle will take place following the ceremony. All those interested in viewing Fort Benning's first MOHV are welcomed to attend.

MEDDAC takes health on the road

MEDDAC, Nursing Services

Martin Army Community Hospital's motto, "We Care," was demonstrated during a "mini-health fair" for the cadre and their families stationed at Frank D. Merrill Ranger Camp in Dahlonega, Ga., recently.

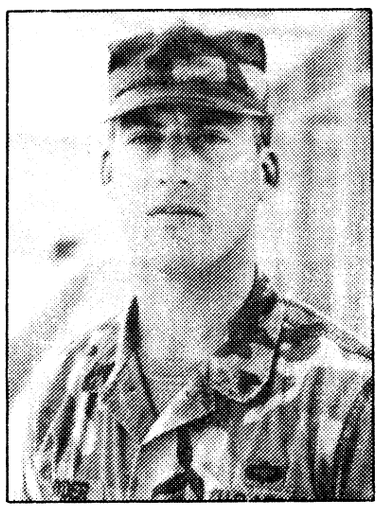
During May, the former chief of Troop Medical Clinic Nursing Services, Lt. Col. Gloria J. Wacks, coordinated with specialty area staff members of Martin Army Community Hospital, Army Community Service and the Ranger Camp commander to identify needs and resources available to conduct a health fair. When everyone involved realized that most of the medical care provided for the family members was done through CHAMPUS and insurance claims and that they were not able to use the facilities at Fort Benning without a great deal of cost for travel, etc., the response was overwhelming. The new chief of TMC Nursing Services, Lt. Col. Gil D. Basilio, picked up the ball from Wacks and continued with the project.

During July, Basilio was provided with handouts, equipment, medical supplies, appointment schedules, etc., that needed to be in place prior to the health fair. These items were sent to TMC #11 located at the camp. Department of Plans and Training, Rotorwing, provided two Black Hawk aircraft for the mission. Because of the approximate distance (200 miles) to the camp, driving would be unrealistic.

On July 26 at 8 a.m., the aircraft took off for Dahlonega; Upon arrival, everyone went to their appointed area to set up for the health fair.

The participants were divided into groups and provided services according to their specialties.

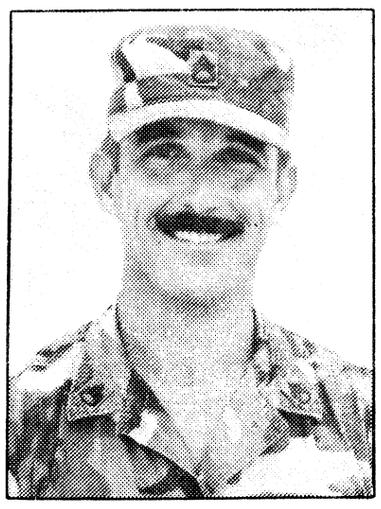
One of the Ranger NCOs said that in the few hours the health fair was conducted, he and his family had received: diet information, appointments for dental examinations, enrollment in the EFMP program, increased knowledge of the CHAMPUS system and an armload of helpful brochures, pamphlets and bookets. He said, "My wife got a Pap smear and breast examination, my child received a well-baby examination and immunizations and I got my back checked and was given instruction in physical therapy. It's great! I feel good about my family's health status."



At 3 p.m., the MEDDAC team boarded the Black Hawks and headed for home, leaving behind those "We care for."

OPINION

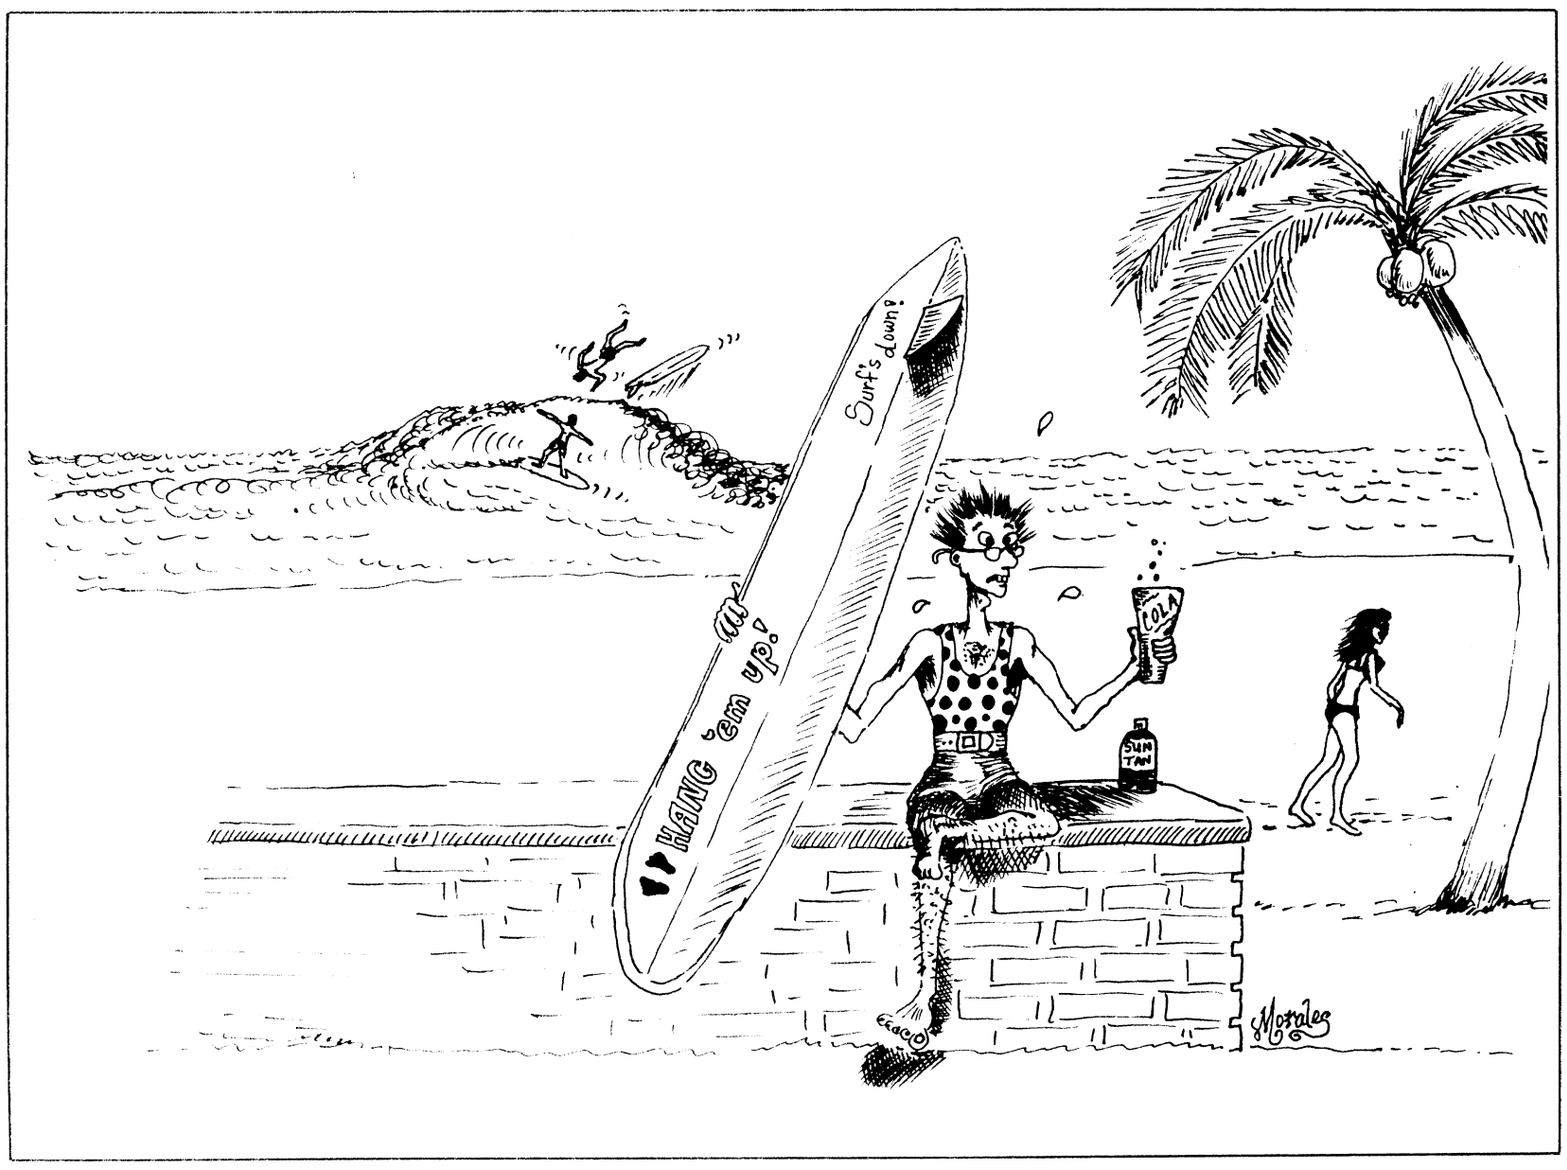
VARIOUS VOICES: What does the Berlin Wall symbolize to you?



Pvt. Warren McCarver, HHC, 1st Bn., 507th PIR — "It symbolizes how residents of communist block countries are trapped in their own country. When people try to leave, they get shot at."

Sgt. Kevin Snyder, Co. C, 1st Bn., 58th Inf., 197th Inf. Bde. — "I don't believe in it. It is a hinderance of freedom. It is keeping people in a place they really don't want to be."

Linda Mihal, family member — "It's a barrier that separates people from freedom. I wish it could be removed, but I don't think it will happen."



SSgt. Dennis Shallenberger, Co. A, 46th Eng., Fort Rucker, Ala. — "It symbolizes to me how great it is to be a free American."

Sgt. George Johnson, 6th Ranger Tng. Bn., Ranger Tng. Bde. — "It symbolizes the difference between communism and democracy and the barrier there. The barrier is not only in Berlin but in other communist countries as well."

2nd Lt. Danny O'Leary, Co. C, 2nd Bn., 11th Inf. Regt. — "It symbolizes that a communist government doesn't work. If it did, they wouldn't have to build a wall to keep them in."

Snively says California life is too easy

By Clyde Snively
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Two weeks ago I said goodbye to my editor and announced that I was returning to the real world.

"Going to become a civilian?" she smirked.

"No," I said. "I'm going home to Southern California for some R&R."

"Good luck," she said, sarcasm dripping from her lips. "Watch out for the birds of paradise."

I ignored her remark and soon found myself California bound.

My first few days back, I thought I'd died and gone to heaven. But then a slow realization began to creep over me. California is not the real world. It's all one big Fantasyland, like at Disneyland.

All cars are gold-plated, bearing personalized license plates. Line them up bumper to bumper and they'd reach to Nantucket and back.

Drivers signal their intentions and cars behind actually slow down so the car ahead can make its lane change. Quite a deviation from the south where a signal is a challenge to another driver's machoism and is like waving a red flag in front of a bull, they see it as a cue to accelerate so they won't be cut off and lose face.

Drivers even stop for pedestrians. There are no "So many pedestrians, so little time," bumper stickers in California.

Bicyclists and joggers speed along with the cars rarely breaking a sweat since weather, while it heats up around noon, quickly returns to cool in the evening. Of course, they do have to have all the fancy-dancy biking and running clothes. You just don't go out to jog and bike in any old thing.

I got to thinking about all this and noted that while all women have long, tanned legs, blond, shoulder-length hair and blue eyes; and the men can bench press 350 pounds; and their bronze rippling muscles make Sylvester Salone look like a strand of limp spaghetti, the question remains, just how tough are these people?

Besides the Lakers, which consists of non-California players, what California team — college or pro — has won anything recently? Or what California athlete has excelled in any sport besides swimming and volleyball?

Let's face it, life is too easy, too good to develop the physical and mental toughness demanded of champions. "No pain, no gain," as any coach worth his salt would say.

I mean look at the Rams. They win conference titles, then fade in the playoffs as they move to the snow of Minnesota or the heat of Dallas.

The Raiders, perennial champs while up north haven't done diddly since moving south to Los Angeles. It's because, like everyone else, athletes are pampered by the culture and the environment. Everything's too perfect.

If pedestrians don't have to keep a wary eye out for cars, don't have to dodge them when crossing streets, how will Californians ever develop good peripheral vision and quickness of foot.

How will golfers ever learn to concentrate without gnats buzzing about their heads. You know the ones I mean, the little fellow who follows you for 18 straight holes and buzzes from ear to ear as you get ready to drive or line up a putt, while all his relatives nip at your ankles.

And who can be tough if there's only dry, cool air to run and bike and practice football in? Sure, they may have smog, but that just serves to help clear the sinuses.

Oh, I'm sure there are some hardships that Californians have to endure, like maybe tourists who dress funny and jokes about earthquakes, but until they can come up with some good southern heat and humidity and good ol' boys doing their thing on the interstate, Californians can never again hope to be contenders for anything meaningful in the real world — like football championships.

Cutbacks cause stagnation of improvements

AUSA

The advent of the Reagan Administration saw a renewed commitment to the revitalization of our armed forces after an extended period of neglect as seen in the 1970.

The defense budgets of 1981 and 1982 showed substantial increases in spending for national security over the previous decade and helped launch a long overdue program of modernization of our military services. During the first half of the 1980s, both the Navy and the Air Force got a big jump in modernization. The Army, off to a slow start, is still only about halfway toward its goal in meeting the equipment modernization needs.

Since then, reduced budgets have meant that the Army's modernization program has been faced with stretch-outs and underfunding. Cutbacks in the present defense budget will be the cause of further stagnation and even termination in the improvement of certain critical weapons systems.

Writer says complainers are wrong about MACH

Please forgive this letter, my hands are still a little shaky and my handwriting is still not very good.

Many people have have been complaining about Army medicine and Army doctors and other medical personnel. They are wrong.

I have just been released from Martin Army Community Hospital after a stay of about 75 days. I was in a serious automobile accident in Alabama and was transferred to Martin Army from a hospital in Opelika.

My treatment at Martin Army was marvelous; and the people who took care of me — doctors, nurses, orderlies, wardmasters, everybody — were wonderful. I could not have asked for better treatment or better handling. No civilian hospital could have treated me better.

And, so, I would like to thank all of those wonderful people at Martin Army who are so dedicated to caring for people.

I would like to thank all my friends from building 4, from the Post Exchange and from Fort Benning and Columbus who came to see me and pray for me. Thank you! Thank you! Thank you, all! And God bless each and every one of you.

Voting shows responsibility, concern

Army News Service

A soldier's vote may not decide an election, but it shows that he is a responsible citizen and concerned about his elected officials. After the 1984 presidential election, 10.4 percent of servicemembers surveyed said their primary reason for not voting was "My vote wouldn't matter."

A case in Ohio illustrates how one vote does matter. In a recent election in Ohio, a naval ensign's absentee ballot created a tie in a race for a Marysville, Ohio, City Council position.

The disputed absentee ballot was cast by the son of candidate Albert Westerholme who had trailed by one vote in the Nov. 3, 1987 election.

Westerholme's son was on duty aboard ship in the Mediterranean.

The official ballot envelope was signed and dated by the ensign Nov. 3 and arrived at the election office Nov. 13 — both dates complying with deadlines in Ohio law. But the ballot was challenged because it was postmarked Nov. 9, six days after the election, although Ohio law provides that any ballot signed or postmarked after the election is valid.

In this instance, the envelope, signature and date had been witnessed by the unit voting officer and bore the proper seal. The Elections Board ruled that the ballot met the postmark requirement because it was given to the unit voting officer by election day and the ballot was counted.

Ohio law requires a tied election to be decided by the toss of a coin.

Westerholme lost the coin toss but later gained his seat on the city council when another member resigned.

AIDS becomes 'pandemic'

Army News Service

AIDS. We've been bombarded with information about it for several years now. Despite all efforts, the virus continues to run rampant. It has become a "pandemic," or worldwide problem.

Based on a recent study by the National Academy of Science, Americans still may not be well educated about the AIDS threat despite all the media attention and other attempts to educate our society about the perils of the fatal disease. Or, at least they don't take it seriously. Researchers reported that almost 40 percent of unmarried males had sex with more than three partners in the last year. The same goes for 17 percent of unmarried females.

Though experts have preached condom use for lessening the risk of HIV transmission, 50 percent of married men have never even bought one. Neither have 25 percent of the unmarried men surveyed. The survey indicated that 60 percent of men nationwide who have had nine or more sex partners in the last year consider their personal AIDS' risk "little or none."

Perhaps they should think again.

At least Maj. David G. Peterson, an AIDS policymaker for the Army's Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Personnel, thinks they should. Peterson attended the Fourth International Conference on AIDS held in Stockholm, Sweden June 12-16 and led by the World Health Organization and the Karolinska Institute. He returned to his job at the Pentagon with a lot of current information on the subject.

"The main thing I came away with," Peterson said, "was the knowledge of the spread of HIV into the heterosexual community."

Several years ago when AIDS first came on the scene, it was linked mostly with homosexuals and IV drug users. That link remains close. But, now, IV drug users spread the infection into the heterosexual community via sexual partners, who, in turn, infect their uninfected partners. They, in turn, infect other sex partners, and even their children, in the case of women who become infected and later have babies.

It became apparent to me through the findings and the research presented at the conference that heterosexual transmission is probably going to be a bigger concern worldwide.

Coast Guard Academy is accepting applications

Coast Guard News

The United States Coast Guard Academy has announced that it is now accepting and processing applications for appointment as U.S. Coast Guard cadets, class of 1993. Applications are being accepted for both men and women.

Appointments as Coast Guard cadets are tendered solely on the basis of an annual nationwide competition with no congressional appointments or geographical quotas.

Applications for appointment must be submitted to the Director of Admissions, U.S. Coast Guard Academy, prior to Dec. 15. Candidates must arrange to participate in either the College Board Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) or American College Testing Assessment (ACT) prior to the Dec. 10 administration for the ACT and the Dec. 3 administration for the SAT.

The competition for appointment as cadet is based on the candidate's high school rank, performance on either the SAT or ACT and leadership potential as demonstrated by participation in high school extracurricular activities, community affairs and/or part-time employment. Most successful candidates rank in the top quarter of their high school class and demonstrate proficiency in both the mathematical and applied science fields.

To qualify for the competition, an applicant must be unmarried at the time of appointment, have no legal obligations resulting from a prior marriage and must have reached the age of 17 but not 22 by July 1, 1989.

All applicants must be assured of high school graduation by June 30, 1989. Regulations stipulate that all applicants must have completed three units in English, and three in mathematics to include algebra and plane or coordinate geometry or their equivalents and must fulfill basic physical requirements.

Coast Guard cadets obtain an excellent undergraduate education at no personal expense. In addition, they receive pay and allowances fully adequate to fulfill their ordinary living expenses. The constantly updated academy curriculum leads to a Bachelor of Science degree with a strong academic emphasis on engineering and science. The selected major studies, when combined with varied elective courses, establish a solid foundation for a challenging career.

Graduates of the academy are awarded a Bachelor of Science degree and are commissioned as ensigns in the United States Coast Guard. Selected officers may pursue further postgraduate education and specialized training at many leading civilian and military graduate or professional schools in such fields as aviation, business administration, electronics, engineering, law and oceanography.

The young Academy graduate can look forward to a varied, exciting and demanding career as a regular Coast Guard officer. The Coast Guard performs essential humanitarian missions vital to safety and saving of lives at sea. Under the Department of Transportation, the Coast Guard establishes and coordinates search and rescue operations by ship and plane, maintains advanced electronic and other aids to navigation scatterd around the globe, operates the icebreakers that clear the way for all polar expeditions and enforces marine law and all aspects of merchant marine safety. In addition, the Coast Guard has responsibility for boating safety and marine environmental protection.

For more information, write: Director of Admissions, U.S. Coast Guard Academy, New London, Conn. 06320 or call (203) 444-8501.

Volunteer positions available

Public Information Officer

Georgia volunteers are being recruited to serve in a State Defense Force.

Georgia residents between the ages of 17 and 70 who are in good health and who are not currently members of the Georgia National Guard or any reserve unit of the United States Armed Forces may be eligible for service. Prior military experience is not a requirement.

The command provides manpower needed to perform the traditional military duties of the Georgia National Guard in the event the Guard should be called into Federal service.

The cadre of volunteers is divided into trained militia units with a state headquarters detachment based in Atlanta and three infantry brigades headquartered in Atlanta, Macon and Savannah.

For more information about the SDF and the range of personnel specialities needed at all units, write to: DCS-OPS-MS, State Defense Force, Georgia Department of Defense, P.O. Box 17965, Atlanta, Ga. 30316-0965.

Budget

Curtailment of Army modernization will most certainly have a deleterious effect on the future ability of the Army to accomplish its deterrent and warfighting objectives.

The Army's ability to deter or to win in war is a function of well trained, highly motivated soldiers, armed and equipped with qualitatively superior weapons, employing sound battlefield doctrine. This effective combination can help balance the enormous quantitative advantage in conventional forces presently enjoyed by the Soviet Union and Warsaw Pact.

Yet, declining budgets and program reductions have worked contrary to the achievement of this goal. By putting these vital systems on the appropriations chopping block, we risk failure in our efforts to overcome the Warsaw Pact advantages. Our best hope lies in continuance of investment in the modernization of weapons as well as in research and development to exploit American superiority in advanced technology.

The 41st president and the 101st congress, in consort, must decide where our national security priorities lie in order to ensure an adequate defense and a competent deterrent in these unsure times. In the face of a quantitatively superior foe, modernization is the Army's best and most practical answer. That can only be attained through the appropriation of sufficient funds for needed weapons systems and technologies. These hard decisions should no longer be delayed.

YOU MAY BENEFIT FROM H & R BLOCK'S TAX COURSE
Many successful tax preparers have begun their careers by enrolling in the H & R Block Income Tax Course. Others have taken the course to increase their ability to accurately prepare their own returns.
H & R Block, the nation's largest tax preparation firm, has been teaching income tax preparation for 22 years. This year the basic income tax course starts on September 7; morning, afternoon, evening & Saturday classes are available.
Students look at the course as a way to save money and make money by picking up or polishing up tax return preparation skills. The 13-week course progresses from simple to complex tax problems. Students learn through a combination of classroom discussion, hands-on problem solving and home work. This year's classes will introduce participatns to the latest tax laws.
Qualified course graduates may be offered job interviews for positions with Block. Many Block employees find the flexible scheduling a real benefit. However, Block is under no obligation to offer employment, nor are graduates under any obligation to accept employment with H & R Block.
One low fee includes all materials, supplies, and textbooks. Successful graduates receive a Certificate of Achievement and 7.5 units of continuing education credit.
Additional information and registration forms are available from the H & R Block office at 2511 Airport Thruway, Columbus, Georgia 31904. The telephone number is (404) 324-5603.

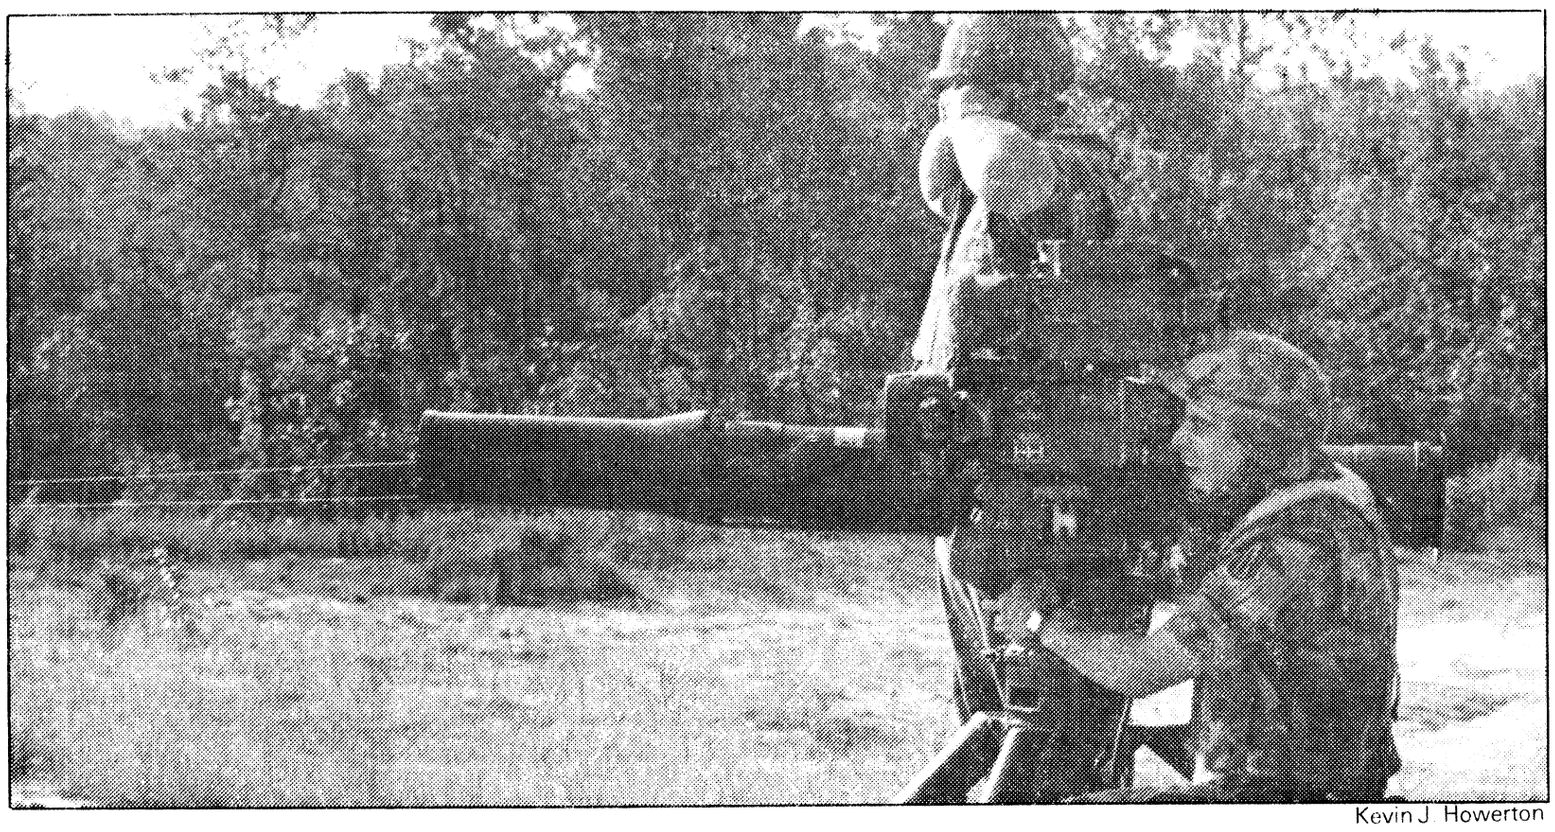
TOW highlights 197th Inf live-fire exercises

By Kevin J. Howerton
197th Infantry Brigade correspondent

You hear a muffled click as the gunner presses the trigger. A second passes before the missile launches with a heavy boom. You catch just a glimpse of the missile as it first heads downrange, then it's gone. Scanning the line of abandoned vehicles a thousand meters away, there is no sign of it. On a distant ridge, there is a cloud of smoke. About the time you realize that those are the targets they are shooting at, the thundering sound of the blast echoes back to your position.

Soldiers from throughout the 197th Infantry Brigade were at Hartell Observation Point recently for live fire exercises with the Tube-launched, Optically-sighted, Wire-guided (TOW) missile. At the range, conducted by Company E, 1st Battalion, 58th Infantry, soldiers fired 17 missiles from the ground mount TOW and the Improved TOW Vehicle (ITV).

More than 25 family members of the soldiers were present at the live fire to see first hand the type of training their husbands and fathers do "all in a day's work."



"This is the first time in about three years that we've used the high explosive round," said SFC Christopher Bregovi, NCOIC of the range. "It's also the first time we have fired at distances of 2,700 to 3,300 meters."

Bregovi went on to explain that at times the gunners were volley firing, engaging dual targets with two missles in the air at the same time. This is important because the TOW teams have to be mutually supportive, covering each other the same way that a pilot's wing man does.

"I was really nervous at first," said Pvt. 2 Patrick C. Nuse, Co. E, 1st Bn., 58th Inf., "But it all went like clockwork."

Nuse fired his first round as a gunner on the ground-mounted TOW. He had only been in the unit a little over a week.

"The ITV fired first, and I fired a few seconds later," he added. "There was a big boom, and I couldn't see anything for a few seconds because of the heat from the missle. Then the smoke cleared, and I put the crosshairs on target and hit it center of mass. I was impressed by the power of the weapon."

Kevin J. Howerton

PFC Craig J. Cavazzini of Co. E, 1st Bn., 58th Inf., fires a TOW missile at Hartell Observation Point.

"It works great; where you put those crosshairs is where the missile is going to hit," said SP4 Robert S. Erhardt, an ITV gunner also of Co. E, 1st Bn., 58th Inf. "Looking through the sights, I could see metal flying from the dust when the missile hit the target."

The sight was not unusual for the range.

"Every gunner hit the target, and every target was a confirmed kill," said Bregovi. "I think that is a credit to the gunners, as well as to the training they have received."

Co C, 43rd Eng completes tactical river crossing site

By William Craven
43rd Engineer Battalion correspondent

On June 3, Company C, 43rd Engineer Battalion (Combat) (Heavy) completed work on Cody Landing, a project designed as a tactical river crossing site.

The site was used by the 197th Infantry Brigade and others to include National Guard units during Sledgehammer II, the 197th ARTEP.

Co. C completed the project by dividing it into two parts — the Alabama side and the Georgia side. In order to complete the project on time, both sides were worked on simultaneously. Each side had its own unique problems that had to be overcome to complete the river crossing site.

The Alabama side consisted of improvement of roads leading to the ramp site and improvement of an existing

AIDS

Since 1982, the percentage of increase in the number of cases transmitted heterosexually has been greater each year than the percentage of increase of all other modes of transmission.

Statistically, about 3,000 people in the United States have contracted AIDS through heterosexual sex. When you look at percentages, heterosexual transmission is the third most common method of transmission, behind homosexual and IV drug use. As the numbers increase, geometric progression occurs. That means every person who gets infected may infect two or three others. And those two or three others may each go out an infect two or three others.

It's like a chain reaction.

Peterson hopes for a reaction to his message from fellow soldiers and other Army family members. "I think people need to know and understand," Peterson said, "that the virus is mainly transmitted by sex. You don't have to participate in homosexual or bisexual relations to get infected.

You can get infected through ordinary heterosexual sex.

That means you now have to know a lot more about the person you're having sex with. It means that you must be more willing to sit down with your partner and discuss HIV and AIDS as an issue.

You need to be concerned about who that person has had sex with in the past. If your partner has been a person who has been fairly promiscuous, or has had sexual relations with an IV drug user, it's possible he or she may be HIV infected. If you have sex with that person, you can get infected, too.

"Researchers are unsure of whether you can get infected with one sexual relationship or whether it takes a number of them before the virus is transmitted. But, remember, the potential is there if the infection is present.

"The problem is, once you get infected, that's it. You can't undo it. The damage is done. Everyone who is going to die of AIDS this century has already been infected or soon will be. That's because they don't yet understand the risk they take when they have sex with someone they don't know or with someone who is sexually promiscuous. Even if all transmission was stopped today, the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta estimates that about 400,000 people in the United States will die of AIDS by the end of 1992. "Worldwide, we're talking somewhere between 5 million to 10 million people who are HIV infected. And there is nothing that we can do to stop it. The damage is already done. Those people who are infected are likely going to get AIDS at some point in time."

"The only way we're going to stop the spread of the HIV infection is for everyone to 'get smart' on how it's transmitted and to take appropriate actions. If you are going to have sex with somebody and you don't know their background and you are not willing to talk to them about it, then you have to use safe sex methods, like condoms. Of course, the best thing to do is to get to know your partner. Make sure that he or she is not infected."

Training at Fort Lee, Va., he was assigned to ITC.

Nelson's past credits and achievements include receiving the Army Achievement Medal, Certificate of Achievement for outstanding duty performance during FTX training and runner-up for Brigade Logistician of the Quarter.

The USAITC Logistician of the Quarter/Year program was established to give recognition to ITC's most outstanding enlisted supply personnel. To be eligible for this award, personnel must be a staff sergeant or below. Candidates are nominated from the 1st and 2nd HBs, HSC and the 30th AG Battalion (Rec).

Final selection of recipient for the Logistician of the Quarter Award is made by an ITC board. Winners of the quarterly award are then eligible to compete for the Logistician of the Year Award.

ramp. Because the Alabama side was located near Indian archaeological areas, improving the roads had to be done with approval from the Department of Engineering and Hosing's (DEH) archaeological section. Four hundred cubic yards of fill (which would fill a hole 100 feet long, 10 feet wide and 10 feet deep) was used to improve the roads, and 350 cubic yards was used to improve the ramp.

The Georgia side also proved to be difficult. The road leading to the river had to be improved, and a new road leading to the new crossing site had to be made. A total of 1,500 cubic yards of sandy-clay soil was cut from the bank of the Chattahoochee to make a ramp for the crossing site. After the soil had been removed, 300 cubic yards of a gravel-clay fill and two sheets of Momat, a geotextile, were used to help stabialize the ramp.

In addition, a soft spot leading to the ramp on the road had to be improved before the road could withstand the weight of tracked vehicles. For this, Charlie Company came up with a log raft, which consisted of logs tied together to form a rectangular "raft" much like the one used by Tom Sawyer in Mark Twain's stories. The logs that were used to build the raft came from trees that had been cut when clearing the road. The trees were cut into 30-foot logs and tied together. They were then lowered into the soft spot, which had been dug out for this reason. Fill was then laid on top of the logs and compacted. The log raft proved to be successful during the river crossings of Sledgehammer II.

A total of 375 cubic yards of fill was used to improve the roads leading to the new site. A turn-around area next to the ramp was also built for use by the units using the ramp.

SPIRITUAL

Cornerstone of combat readiness is spiritual fitness

By Chaplain Roger O. Ruff
Army News Service

What's the cornerstone of combat readiness?

According to Army Chief of Staff Gen. Carl E. Vuono, it is "training." Vuono said that quality training is essential for mobilization, deployment and combat readiness.

There's a special part of "fitness for combat" training that I want to share with you. It is "Spiritual Fitness." Before you dismiss this as "nice, idealistic thoughts and platitudes," listen to what Gen. George C. Marshall said:

"The soldier's heart, the soldier's spirit and the soldier's soul are everything. Unless the soldier's soul sustains him, he cannot be relied on and will fail himself, his commander and his country in the end. It is not enough to fight. It is the spirit that wins victory."

If you have read the personal accounts of some of our prisoners of war held in Hanoi during the Vietnam conflict or seen several of the films portraying their struggle to survive, one dominant factor emerges — the power of strong, resilient faith in God to overcome almost insurmountable odds.

Navy Cdr. Jeremiah Denton (played by Hal Holbrook in the film "When Hell Was in Season") was one of our contemporary heroes who found tremendous strength in the power of God. It not only sustained him personally, but it also formed the foundation of his strong caring for and support of his fellow American prisoners.

More than 2,000 years ago, a military leader, David, the shepherd boy and king, also found this to be true both in his contest with the giant, Goliath, and in his later years:

"The Lord is my light and my salvation; whom shall I fear? The Lord is the stronghold of my life; of whom shall I be afraid?

Though a host encamp against me, my heart shall not fear; though war arise against me, yet I will be confident. Wait for the Lord; be strong, and let your heart take courage; yea, wait for the Lord." (Psalm 27)

Meditation on scripture — often memorized at an early age — prayer, and the recalling and singing of hymns were critical elements of the foundation of the lives of these two soldiers. Are they part of your life also? Can you feel the strength of your spiritual muscles?

Spiritual fitness "is the development of these personal qualities needed to sustain a person in times of stress, hardship and tragedy." As we have just seen, they come from religious belief as well as philosophical and human values and "form the basis for character, disposition, decision making and integrity" (as expressed in DA Pamphlet 600-63-12). They are essential to strength, survival and victory on the battlefield — not just for you individually but also for your team members. So begin now to take a personal inventory of your spiritual fitness and health, by pondering these questions:

Is my spiritual life as strong as I really want it to be?

Do I consider spiritual things at times other than crises?

Are courage, competence, candor and commitment part of my values and beliefs?

Are prayer, meditation or quiet reflection a regular part of my lifestyle?

How important is spiritual growth to me?

Am I willing to share my values and their meanings with other people who ask?

Do I do things for other people that I want them to do for me?

Do I believe there is something greater than myself?

Does the professional Army ethic — loyalty, duty, selfless service, integrity — make sense to me as I live out my life as a citizen soldier?

How do I really regard my life and my death?

In conclusion, the combat preparedness or fitness of the soldier depends also on spiritual strength as well. Far from being a "sign of weakness," spiritual fitness is the ironclad stuff of which life, success and victory are made. Just as "fit, seasoned soldiers" are not 30-day wonders, but are battle-ready through longer-term, strenuous training and experience, so also does spiritual fitness come through "daily workouts" and long-haul experience.

Let's keep training to the standard.

(This article is reprinted from the March 1988 edition of the newspaper, the "Pipeline.")

Time of year has arrived to reflect on Assumption

By Orlando Sunga
30th AG Battalion (Rec) Chaplain

This is the time of year when we need to take a moment to reflect upon the feast of the Assumption.

The Assumption is an excellent celebration to teach us the full meaning of salvation, the dignity of our human bodies redeemed by the Lord, and our destiny to share the glory of the risen Lord in our own flesh. Mary is the sign that we shall also share. Her assumption shows the completion of redemption and salvation in her; because of Christ, we, too shall share that glory.

If there had been no Original Sin, each one of us would have experienced the Assumption of our lives. We may speculate on whether there would have been "death." But if there were death, then immediately afterward — if there had never been sin — each of us would have been glorified and taken to heaven. What we celebrate in Mary is what God intended for each of us. Unfortunately, we sinned.

But Mary did not. In the entire history of the Church, no one has ever imputed sin to Mary. The New Testament gives rise to the metaphor used by the Fathers of the Church that she is the new Eve. She is the "woman spoken of in Genesis 3:15 whose son will attack evil. She is seen as the necessary cooperator with God in redemption; she has to say "yes," or the incarnation would not have taken place. In the gospel of John, she is seen as cooperating in the mission of Jesus at the beginning and at the end.

In the beginning, she is the instigator of his first "sign," even though "his hour" had not yet come. At the end, she stands unbowed at the foot of the cross and is given to us as our Mother, as Jesus gives her to his beloved disciple.

It is totally in keeping with the spirit of the New Testament and the spirit of the primitive church that we firmly believe that Mary, Mother of Christ and Mother of the Church, was taken to heaven, body and soul, at the close of her life.

She is the sign of what we shall experience on the last day in our own resurrection. She is also the sign of what would have been, had our first parents not sinned. If we belive in the Immaculate Conception, we must, as a consequence, believe in the Assumption of Mary into heaven.

It disturbs a great many of our separated brothers and sisters that the Assumption is no where mentioned in Scriptures or in the early writings of the Church. We should remember that the primitive Church thought that the Parousia (Second Coming of Christ) with the general resurrection and last judgment would happen very soon.

Since all fervently believed that the just would rise in the glory of Christ, it was not unusual that Christ's mother should be resurrected and assumed at the close of her life. We should remember that the primitive church did not really develop many of its ideas on such "Last Things" as heaven and hell; there was no consciousness of a "private judgement," since all thought that the general judgement would happen very soon.

When the Church developed firm ideas about heaven, hell, resurrection and the end of the world, the concepts of purgatory and Assumption and private judgement began to be developed.

At the time that the theology of the Last Things developed, a very primitive feast of the Dormitian of Mary was celebrated in the East; in the West this feast was the Assumption. Going along with the above, it is significant that no one ever claimed to have the body of Mary, while all kinds of claims were made to have the bodies of the apostles and of nearly every person in the Bible.

Mary's tomb was claimed, it is true; but no one ever said that the tomb held her body. Therefore, although the Assumption of Mary was defined as a dogma only in 1950, it follows perfectly from the teaching of the New Testament Church.

Today's celebration, then, is our celebration,as well as that of Mary. We honor her, but we reflect on our own destiny — which has already been completed in her. We honor her Son who is our Savior now, but whose salvation will be completed in us on the last day when we join him and his Mother in glory.

CHAPEL BRIEFS

Protestant

Adult Sunday School Class: A new adult "elective" Sunday School class will begin Sept. 18, 9:30 a.m. at the Religious Education Center. The class will be taught by Chap. (Lt. Col.) Stephenson and is entitled, "Gifts of the Spirit, Scripture Training from a Pentecostal Background." All adults are invited and encouraged to attend. For more information or to register, call 545-2366/4715.

Catholic

MCCW: The Military Council of Catholic Women will hold their evening meeting Tuesday, 7 p.m., at the Religious Education Center, building 229. The program is "Pornography." A video tape produced by Dr. James Kennedy will be shown. All ladies, to include female military members, are invited to attend. For information, call Claudia Wolf at 682-2090.

New Beginnings: The Fort Benning Catholic community will hold a "New Beginnings" for the St. Maurice Catholic parish. The community will be given an opportunity to register their children for CCD classes, which are scheduled to begin Sept. 11 at Dexter School. In addition, parents will be given the opportunity to volunteer for various projects and committees and will be given information regarding adult religious education, Bible study, etc. The "New Beginnings" will be held immediately following the Masses Aug. 20 and again Aug. 21.

Clothing and Canned Goods Drive: The Junior Catholic Youth Organization is conducting a clothing and canned goods drive during the month of August. The clothing collected will be sent to Honduras and will be distributed by the Chaplain section there. All canned goods will be given to Army Community Service to replenish their emergency food locker. Your generosity is appreciated. For more information, call the chapel office at 545-3461/1452.

ASK THE JUDGE

By Jessica L. Kole
Staff Judge Advocate

Q: Several years, ago I bought a home using my veteran's eligibility. I now have an interested buyer for my home. He is not a veteran but would like to assume my VA loan. I have heard that if I let someone assume my loan, I will still be liable to the VA for the loan amount if the new owner defaults on the payments. Is there anything I can do to insure this doesn't happen?

A: Prior to 1988, veterans were allowed to seek release from liability on assumed loans. However, only a small number of them did so. As a result, many veterans were held responsible for paying deficiencies when subsequent owners defaulted on the loans. Recently enacted legislation has established a procedure to release veterans from liability when their VA loans are assumed.

Under the new procedure, the VA must conduct a credit check on a buyer assuming a loan using the same standards used to evaluate the credit-worthiness of a veteran. The lender is authorized to charge a fee, not to exceed $500, for conducting a credit check. If the purchaser is found credit worthy, the veteran is automatically released from liability on the assumed loan.

A veteran does have the option to accept the risk of possible default by an unapproved purchaser, perhaps to avoid the expense of a credit check. Even then, the veteran will automatically be released from joint liability after the purchaser has made payments on the note for five years.

These new procedures will make it much easier for you to obtain release from liability when your loan is assumed. However, by allowing another to assume your VA loan, you will lose your entitlement for additional VA guaranteed loans until the assumed mortgage is fully paid off. You can restore your entitlement by either completely paying off the loan or by selling your home to another veteran.

Renovations improve post recreation, sports activities

MWR

The Community Activities and Single Fund Program at Fort Benning is one of the most successful in the Army and encompasses a wide range of sports, recreational and service facilities and programs.

Facilities include the Destin and Uchee Creek recreation areas, Bowling Centers, Officers' and NCO Clubs, Golf Course, Child Development Centers, Billeting Activity, Youth Activity Centers, Post Car Washes and Laundromat, to name only a few.

Charging forward with the mandate from Congress to become increasingly self sufficient, the Community Activities Program is striving to offer the soldier and his family recreation and services at a reasonable cost without sacrificing quality.

Nonappropriated dollars generated under the Single Fund umbrella provide the life blood for major construction projects, new programs and renovations that will be beneficial to the soldier and his family for many years to come.

Notable nonappropriated fund projects purchases include the following:

- Nautilus equipment in gyms and fitness centers
- Youth Activities Center
- Car wash facility at the Main Mall
- The Main Post Laundromat
- Installation of a commercial phone system and complete room renovation of post billeting facilities.
- Renovation of the Golden Touch Lounge at the Main NCO Club.
- Renovation of the Veterinarian Small Animal Facility.
- New tees and greens, Pineside Golf Course.
- Refrigerators and color TVs for the BOQ and BEQs
- New camping trailers and pop-up campers for rent.

Recreational facilities and programs are on the move at Fort Benning due to the Community Activities Program.

Those who get excited about the idea of an affordable vacation at some of the world's most beautiful beaches will be pleased to know that the Destin Recreation Area has been expanded.

In addition to the existing 13 cabins, campground and marina, it now offers a 10-unit motel, two new duplexes, a 48-foot deep sea charter boat that will carry up to 17 passengers at a modest fee, a community activities center that houses an outlet store, video games, pool table and jukebox.

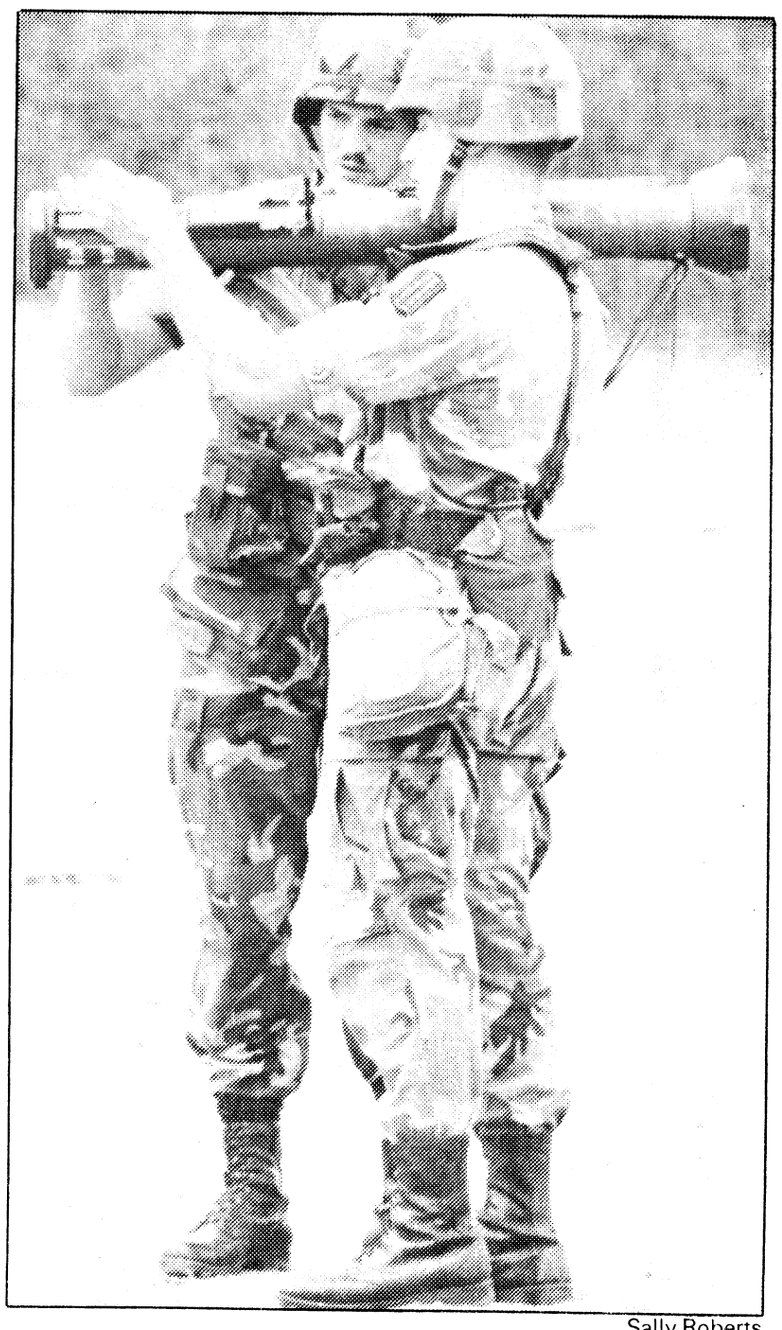
Additionally, a swimming pool with a large sun deck will be completed this month. Starting Oct. 1, another 10 units will be added to the motel; and four duplex cottages with eight units will replace four of the older cabins.

Closer to home, great plans are underway for the Uchee Creek Recreation Area. A professional park developer was contracted to develop a master plan for the Uchee Creek Area.

Fund expenditures are planned for developing a softball field, multi-purpose courts, picnic pavilions and a playground area for children.

During this fiscal year, a boat rental, picnic and fishing supply store was erected and a supplemental low-water boat launch ramp is being designed.

Also, 50 camping sites, 33 full hookups (seven with electricity and water) and a comfort station with showers, latrines and laundry facilities will replace the present substandard 30 sites next spring.



Other significant recreational improvements include:

- Post Bowling Centers — complete renovation of Post Bowling Centers to include new concourses, a state-of-the-art electronic scoring system, soundproofing of interior walls, carpet installation throughout and complete replacement of all visual bowling systems.
- Follow Me Golf Course — New cart paths are being installed at the Follow Me Golf Course.
- Hidden Door Club — A complete renovation is scheduled for the Hidden Door Club in fiscal year '89.
- Club Annex — A new billeting-based club annex (Club 22-100) will open soon for residents of the Fort Benning Billeting Facilities.

Included within the framework of renovations are countless other improvements and modernization efforts ranging from the purchase of bass boats for soldier rentals to the scheduled renovation of the Main NCO Club restrooms, lobby and kitchen area.

Soldiers' dollars are being put to good use on the installation. Despite morale, welfare, recreation appropriated fund cutbacks, Fort Benning leads the way in providing services and recreational activities for the soldier and family and will continue to do so.

Most of the improvements mentioned in this article are the results of suggestions from the Fort Benning Community. The Fort Benning Community Activities program invites comments and suggestions. Please give your ideas to your facility program manager or call 545-3671.

'Rodeo' lassos Weems Pond weeds

By Deck Major
Fish and Wildlife specialist

One person's idea of a thing of beauty is often another's idea of the ugliest thing this side of the Mississippi River. So it is with the most common water plant in Weems Pond, the American Lotus.

Just recently, I overhead a couple fishing from Weems Pond on the Jamestown Road bank. "Aren't these water lilies beautiful," said one. The other responded as most hardcore fishermen would, "Yes, they're nice to look at, and they provide cover for bass and bream; but there are way too many. The pond is being choked out."

In reviewing our fish pond management records, I found that Fort Benning fisheries specialists have been fighting a losing battle with the persistent American Lotus since 1962. The pond was opened to fishing, as some old timers may remember, in 1960.

Upon reviewing the literature on the American Lotus, I learned that it is a very persistent, emergent plant that does best in muddy, shallow areas and marshes. The book went on to describe the exact habitat present in the north end of Weems Pond. Hence, the problem.

The solution — "Rodeo!" On July 20 through 22, members of the Fish and Wildlife Branch and the Entomology Section of DEH went to war. During that time, a one-percent solution of aquatic herbicide, known as Rodeo, was applied to the water plants at a rate of four pints per acre.

When I inspected Weems Pond one week later, I was pleased to see that 60-70 percent of the plants were dead or dying.

Next week, a final follow-up treatment will be made in an effort to kill most of the remaining plants.

The plants were killed in order to provide easier bank fishing and to prevent an eventual entire take-over of the open water sections of the pond by American Lotus.

The plants were also blocking the boat ramp and spillway. With heavy rains, heavy aquatic growth and debris can clog spillways and cause deterioration and/or "blow-out" of a pond dam.

The pond will look ugly and be filled with dead plants for the rest of the summer and fall but hopefully, next year, fishing will be better and easier.

Is Rodeo safe? According to the Environmental Protection Agency, it is safe to use in aquatic situations. It biodegrades into natural products rapidly and does not persist in the environment; also, it will not bioaccumulate in the food chain. In summary, Rodeo will do the job of controlling aquatic weeds without adversely affecting human health, wildlife or the environment.

Heavy hauler

The most requested asset in HSC, 43rd Eng. Bn. (Cbt.) (Hvy.), is the company's 20-ton dump trucks. In the past several months, the trucks have supported many high priority missions such as repairs to Carmouche Range, the upgrade of Cody Landing and the demolition of the old Military Police dog kennels. The trucks are capable of hauling up to 15-cubic yards of fill material and debris long distances more efficiently than any other battalion asset. The support from Headquarters Support Company was critical to the timely completion of these important projects.

Post energy consumption moves past targeted goals

By Becky Ray
Energy Management Branch

Fort Benning's energy goal performance is keeping energy managers on the edge of their seats this year.

The post finished the third quarter of the fiscal year at 0.68 percent worse than the installation target, which means that to date, we've used a bit less energy than provided for. Unfortunately, when projected into the last three month's of this budget year, the annual consumption is one percent worse than target.

While one percent of the energy budget may initially seem insignificant, it actually amounts to about $200,000 dollars.

If the year's target is exceeded, the money must be found in other budgets on Fort Benning to help pay the bill. This can mean cuts in other programs or budgets anywhere on post, meaning less money for improvements, supplies or services for installation workers and residents.

The month of July brought higher than normal temperatures, resulting in increased use of air conditioning and higher energy consumption.

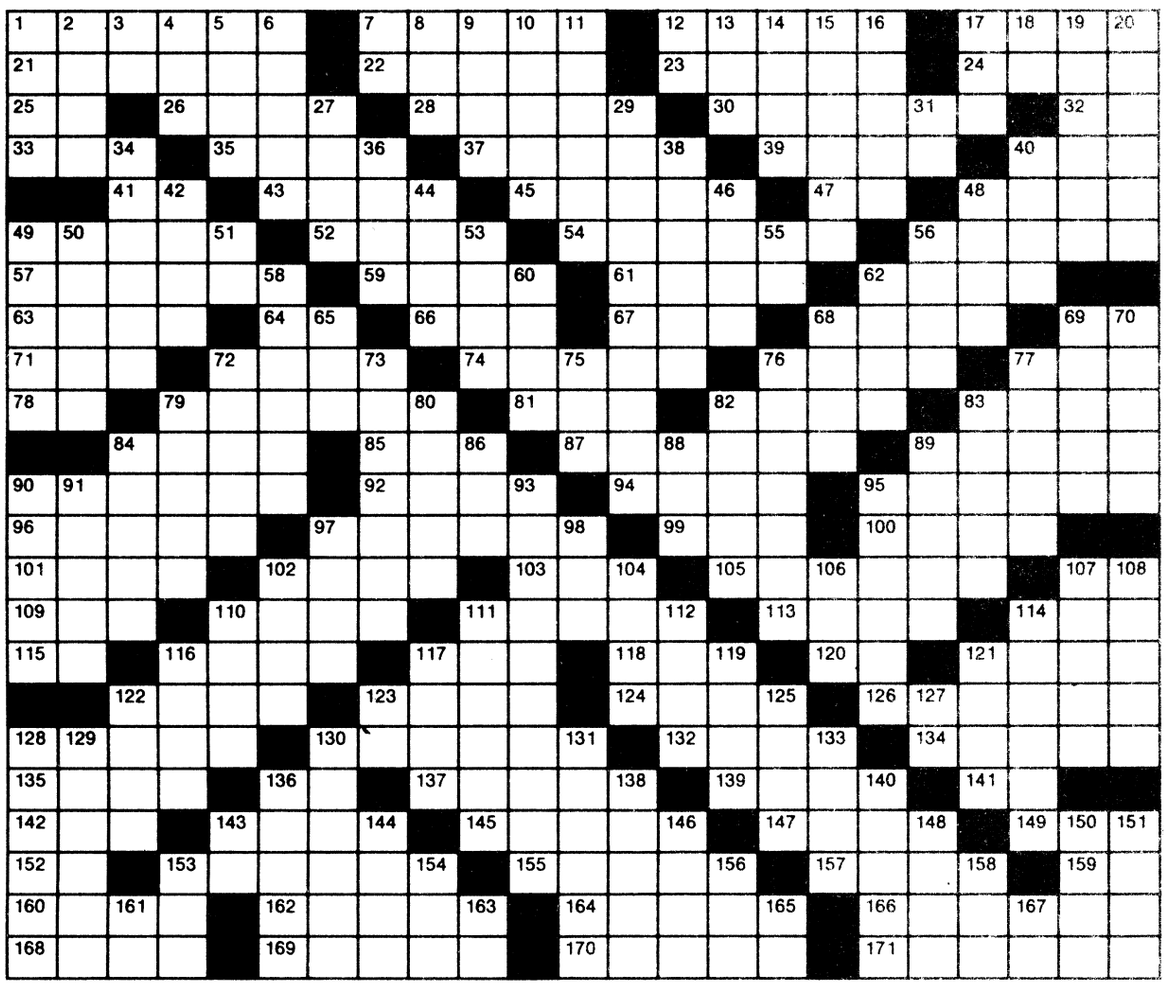
Although goals are automatically increased or decreased to compensate for unusual weather (called the weather factor), the adjustments were less than the additional energy use. Subsequently, consumption in July was 0.13 percent worse than target.

The weather factor is taken into account during heating and cooling seasons, when TRADOC adjusts energy allotments according to the number of days the temperature reads below or above the historical average. This average is taken from recorded daily temperatures over the last 30 years.

All these things mean that August and September are critical times for energy goal performance this year. If weather and consumption patterns for last year are repeated, Fort Benning will miss its goal, and the additioanl energy will be paid for with funds from other areas of the installation's budget.

In fiscal year '87, monthly goals for August and September were exceeded by 3.56 percent and 8.5 percent, respectively.

All is not lost, however. The prudent use of our energy resources should be a goal of everyone on Fort Benning. This means keeping air conditioning thermostats set at 78 degrees, turning off unnecessary lights and not watering lawns in the heat of the day.



Simple elimination of energy waste and abuse can give Fort Benning the edge required to meet energy targets. Blatant examples of such waste and abuse are athletic field lights left on when not needed, hot water faucets left on when not in use and doors to air conditioned spaces being left open.

A concerted effort by all post employees, residents and energy managers can ensure that goals for the year are met.

Let's work together to meet our energy target!

SNAPSHOTS: Terrorist targets

Army News Service

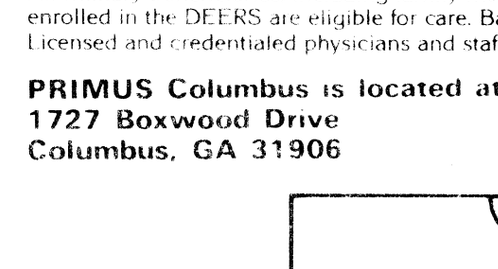
Ten steps you can take to keep yourself and your family from becoming terrorist targets:

- Report to the military police the presence of strangers loitering in the area.
- Take notice of strangers taking pictures or asking "innocent" questions about an area, building, intersection, fences, barriers, entranceways, etc. Their reasons may be much different than you think.
- Don't volunteer information to strangers. One of the best covers for terrorists surveying an area is that of a "lost tourist."
- Take notice of unexplained and unattended briefcases, boxes, bundles and packages in hallways, parking lots and entrances.
- Report abandoned vehicles to the military police. The fact a vehicle may have a current military decal doesn't matter.
- Don't give copies of seemingly unimportant military publications, telephone books, organizational charts, rosters or manuals to strangers.
- Don't take "For Official Use Only" materials home with you. They may not be classified, but they are sensitive.
- Don't give or throw away military uniforms without removing military patches, name tapes, and rank insignia.
- Be particularly alert to strangers observing you. These persons frequently have serious intentions.
- Discuss all of the preventive measures above with your family. They need to be aware of the information as well as you.

VETERANS' Qs & As

Veterans Administration

Q — My husband is buried in a VA National Cemetery. Am I entitled to burial in the same cemetery?



A — Yes. Burial in a National Cemetery is available to a veteran's widow, minor children, unmarried children under the age of 23 attending school and, under certain conditions, to unmarried adult children.

Q — I am a 100-percent service-connected disabled veteran. My wife and I are getting a divorce. Will she be entitled to a portion of my compensation after the divorce becomes final?

A — No. Her entitlement to all benefits ceases when the divorce is final.

Q — My husband was cremated and his ashes were scattered. Is it possible to have a memorial marker placed in a VA National Cemetery?

A — Yes. The memorial may be erected in a private cemetery or memorial section of a national cemetery.

Post kchanges bega in 1895

AAFES

On July 25, 1895, Department of the Army General Orde[illegible]er 46 established the first postexchanges. They sold "articles of ordinary use, wir and consumption" and provided "means of rational recreation." Profits funded post welfare programs.

Ninety-three years later, the Army and Air Force Exchange Service (AAFES), the worldwide command that evolved, has a similar mission. It provides merchandise and services and helps fund morale, welfare and recreation activities. But times have changed.

The first exchanges were operated locally with no standard policies or prices. Large installations made large profits while small installations made do with whatever earnings their limited populations could generate.

Today, AAFES is a worldwide military command with standardized policies and prices.

Last year, AAFES generated $132 million in the form of dividends used by the Army and Air Force to provide quality-of-life programs on military installations.

The log cabin trading post has evolved into modern shopping malls providing everything from amusement arcades to fast foods.

AAFES has some 15,000 customer facilities in the United States, its territories and 22 foreign countries.

More than 75,000 AAFES employees serve 10 million customers. And AAFES is the eleventh largest retailer in the United States.

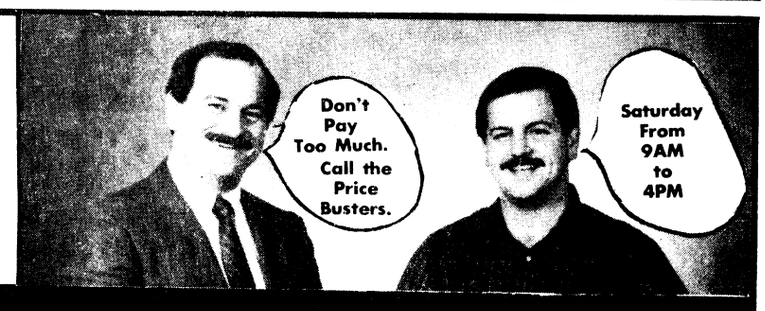
Army enginneers shore up Mississippi

Army News Service

Army engineers have completed a submerged barrier designed to prevent the encroachment of saltwater from the Gulf of Mexico into the Mississippi River below New Orleans.

Construction of the barrier started June 30 in response to mitigate worsening salinity conditions related to the summer's continuing drought.

The Corps orginally designed the barrier to have a crest 60 feet below the water surface. But because the saltwater was advancing so rapidly upstream toward New Orleans and the city's water supply intakes, the crest of the barrier was raised 15 feet to keep saltwater out of the freshwater intakes.



The barrier is made of 800,000 cubic yards of dredged river clay and sand, measures 1,600 feet across at its crest, has a 120-foot width at the crown and a 1,000-foot base width.

According to Robert W. Page, assistant secretary of the Army for civil works, the barrier is working so far in preventing saltwater from entering New Orleans' city water supply system, but if river flows fall considerably, salinity levels may rise to slightly above the standard. Right now, Page said, nationwide drought conditions have resulted in record low flows in the river — about 130,000 cubic feet per second, as opposed to normal average flows of 450,000 cubic feet per second.

The Corps expects that, with no improvement in rainfall in the Mississippi River's drainage areas — principally the Missouri, Arkansas, Upper Mississippi and Ohio River basins — the low flow conditions could persist until November.

Eagle Scouts renew their vows at the court of honor.

Local Boy Scouts earn Eagle

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

They don't give you the badge, you earn; it and this particular award is not given very often.

It is the distinctive Eagle Scout Badge.

Two Fort Benning family members recieved that award last Sunday in the National Eagle Scout Court of Honor conducted in the Infantry Museum Conference Room.

The Boy Scouts honored were Michael Pierce Helgeson and Gregory Scott Harkins

Helgeson began his trail to Eagle Scout in September 1980 at Fort Dix, N.J. He advanced through the ranks and earned his life rank in 1986.

To complete the requirements to become an Eagle Scout, Helgeson renovated and reconstructed two large storage closets at the post Red Cross Headquarters.

He organized the work crews, obtained materials needed and supervised the work until the end.

Harkins, started out in scouting in 1980 at Fort Ord, Calif. He passed through the ranks and advanced to Life Scout in October 1987. Harkins final project necessary to become an Eagle Scout was a soil conservation/beautification project for Faith Middle School.

The project consisted of clearing and planting 50 azalea bushes.

Both boys will be returning to high school this fall. Helgeson will be starting his junior year in Macon, Ga., and Harkins will begin his senior year at Spencer High School.

The boys were honored with the presence of the commanding general, Maj. Gen. Kenneth C. Leuer, who was the guest speaker at the ceremony.

VA provides education assistance for National Guard and Reserves

Veterans Administration

The Veterans Administration has provided education benefits to more than 100,000 military reservists in the first three years of a new assistance program for National Guard and Reserve members.

VA administrator, Thomas K. Turnage, noted, "The program provides up to $5,040 to eligible reservists for 36 months of college studies. For the first time, members of the Army, Navy, Air Force, Marine and Coast Guard Reserves and the Army and Air National Guards are now eligible for VA education benefits."

By July 1, 1988, the third anniversary of the program, the 100,000th claim for benefits had been processed.

The reserve benefits are authorized by the Montgomery GI Bill, which also provides education benefits to veterans and active duty service members. The education program is funded by the Defense Department and administered by the VA.

VA programs have been providing educational benefits to veterans since 1944, but reservists have been eligible only since 1985, when the Montgomery GI Bill went into effect. More than 20 million Americans have received educational benefits totaling $69.7 billion in the past 43 years.

"It has been estimated that these veterans will pay up to eight times the cost of their education in federal income taxes, for $557.6 billion, from the added lifetime income their educations made possible," Turnage said. "And that doesn't even take into consideration the technological commercial, artistic and other improvements their educations have returned to American society."

COURT REPORT

Staff Judge Advocate

Pvt. 2 Anthony C. Bell, HHC, 2nd Bn., 69th Armor, pleaded guilty at a general court-martial to writing 17 worthless checks, possession of a false military identification card, three specifications of AWOL, and one specification of use of cocaine. Bell wrote $2,100 in bad checks to the post exchange system over a period of 16 days, then attempted to conceal the act by claiming his bank lost a $5,000 transfer to his account. Investigation by the CID indicated the transfer never took place.

Bell later went AWOL on three separate occasions, the last being terminated by apprehension. A urinalysis test after his second AWOL detected the use of cocaine.

Finally, Bell was found guilty of possessing a false military ID card, which had been altered to place him over the age required to purchase alcoholic beverages.

Bell was found guilty of all charges and sentenced to a bad conduct discharge, 36 months confinement, forfeiture of all pay and allowances and reduction to Pvt. 1.

Columbus Junior League hosts 34th annual Attic Sale Sept 24

Junior League of Columbus

Where in Columbus can you go for complete one-stop shopping for everything from a car, washing machine and furniture, to clothing, toys and appliances? These items and more will be available for purchase at the Municipal Auditorium Sept. 24, when the Junior League holds its 34th annual Attic Sale.

"The Attic Sale is like one giant yard sale," said chairman Linda Jackson. "We attract bargain hunters from the entire Valley area and have many regular customers who return year after year."

Unique items for sale this year include a 1977 Plymouth Volare station wagon, an original pair of Chatty Cathy and Chatty Brother dolls, a trampoline, water skis and a silver butter dish.

More than 200 individuals donated merchandise for this event, which benefits Junior League projects in the community.

Other items that will be for sale include large and small appliances, draperies, linens, china, books and clothing for the entire family. Plants and baked goods are also available.

According to Jackson, the sale has been moved back to the Municipal Auditorium due to popular demand.

"Money raised by the Attic Sale is returned to the community through various agencies and projects the Junior League supports," Jackson said. Beneficiaries of the 1987 Attic Sale included the Anne Elizabeth Shepherd Home, the Listening Eyes School, the Girls' Club, the Muscogee County Area Literacy Association, the Stewart Home and the area AIDS Conference.

Co-chairman Gail McClure stated that planning for the event begins months in advance. "Receiving, sorting and marking merchandise from members and merchants is an ongoing process," she said.

"Particularly time-consuming is marking the thousands of items donated for the sale. More than 900 volunteer manhours are required to make this event a success."

Admission to the Attic Sale is free of charge. Sale hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. All sales are on a cash-and-carry basis.

The Junior League of Columbus, Ga., Inc. is an organization of women committed to improving the community through the effective action and leadership of trained volunteers. Its purpose is exclusively educational and charitable.

For additional information, contact Chris Henson at 322-0400 or call the Junior League headquarters at 327-4207.

Outlaws crush Dawgs, 13-3, in 197th Inf play

By Sally Roberts
197th Infantry Brigade correspondent

It was a no-hit situation for the Dawgs from Co. D, 2nd Bn., 69th Armor as they were stomped by the Outlaws from HHC, 2nd Bn., 69th Armor, 13-3, in five innings of play in the 197th Infantry Brigade Softball League.

The Outlaws meant business as they came out to bat in each inning, scoring four runs in the first and two more in the third.

The Dawgs were without a hit in the first three innings and made their only runs in the game on a three-run homer by Yewston Myers in the fourth.

The Outlaws returned this fourth inning volley with two more runs, ending the fourth with a score of 7-3, and rallied their players to finish the game in the fifth.

The Outlaws scored three runs,one hit at a time, while taking advantage of errors by the Dawg fielders. Greg Perry brought in two more runs on a home run over the Dawg's right fielder's head; and Leonard Beech hit the same gap for a home run, finishing the game with a score of 13-3.

The Outlaws won the game in the fifth inning on the ten-run-lead rule.

The 197th teams are winding down the season and getting ready for the Fort Benning Tournaments scheduled for Aug. 17 and 18. The following teams will represent the 197th: Trp. A, 15th Cav.; Co. B, 2-18th Inf.; Co. E, 1st Bn., 58th Inf.; Svc. Btry., 2nd Bn., 10th Fld. Arty. and Co. C, 197th Spt. Bn.

Florida/Georgia agreement helps seniors hunt, fish both

GDNR

Under a new agreement between Georgia's Department of Natural Resources and the Florida Game and Freshwater Fish Commission, Georgia Honorary License holders will be able to hunt and fish in Florida under the authority of the Georgia license.

In return, Florida residents who have a Resident Senior Citizen Hunting and Fishing Certificate issued by that state will be able to hunt and fish in Georgia without further licensing in Georgia.

This action, announced recently in a joint statement from Georgia DNR commissioner, J. Leonard Ledbetter, and executive director of the Florida Game and Freshwater Fish Commission, Robert M. Brantly, will make it less expensive for residents of either state to hunt and fish in the other.

"Under the agreement," Ledbetter said, "Holders of either state's senior citizens license must have their licenses in possession while hunting or fishing in either state. In addition, senior citizens from either state who wish to hunt deer in Georgia must first obtain honorary deer tags, available at no charge, from license dealers and DNR offices.

All non-residents who fish for trout will still have to purchase Georgia non-resident trout stamps at $10.50 per year."

The agreement to make hunting and fishing in Georgia and Florida available to senior citizens of either state without cost was made possible in Georgia by legislation enacted by the General Assembly in 1988.

The conference committee that gave the bill its final shape included Senators Loyce W. Turner, Hugh M. Gillis and Joseph E. Kennedy and representatives, Howard W. Rainey, Lundsford Moody and L. Charles Watts. Also influential in the passage of this legislation was another cosponsor of the bill, representative, Robert G. Peters.

Georgia licenses may be obtained from license dealers throughout the state, from any office of the Game and Fish Division or ordered by mail from: License Sales Unit, Department of Natural Resources, 2258 Northlake Parkway, Suite 100, Tucker, Ga. 30084.

New program recognizes outstanding athletes

Army News Service

A new program aimed at recognizing the outstanding military athletes at each base around the world will kick off next year, officials of the sponsoring agencies announced this week.

The Base Athlete of the Year Program is jointly sponsored by the U.S. Military Sports Association, a non-profit group that supports military athletes-in-training, and Lever Brothers.

It will get underway at the local level in March and culminate in the selection of Military Athletes of the Year by November 1989.

According to USMSA officials, the commander of every U.S. military installation in the world will be allowed to select one man and one woman as its Base Athlete of the Year.

Local winners will receive a specially-designed medal inscribed with their name, base and the year of the award.

Athletic achievement won't be the sole basis for judging the athletes of the year, officials said. Outstanding performance of military duties and service to the local community will also be part of the judging criteria.

The program is being funded through contributions generated by commissary and exchange purchases of Lever Brothers products in March and April, 1989.

This new program was approved by the Armed Forces Sports Committee, which sets policy for the armed forces sports program.

Fishing summer vegetation can produce results

By Earl Bentz & Steve Price
1988 Outdoor Marine Corp

Fishing Summer Vegetation

Of all the summer bass fishing patterns available to anglers, the one many like — or dislike — the most, is fishing vegetation.

Many factors cause this love/hate relationship, not the least of which is that vegetation comes in many forms, such as hydrilla, milfoil, moss, lily pads or hyacinths; and ferreting out largemouths from acres and acres of this greenery can take hours of casting.

The good part about summer vegetation, however, is that it does hold bass, and those fish can be enticed to strike during the hottest part of the day.

"I like to fish a buzz bait over vegetation like milfoil and hydrilla," says Johnson Outboards Pro Staff member, Charlie Reed, winner of the 1986 Bass Masters Classic world championship on Tennessee's grass-filled Lake Chickamauga. "With a buzz bait you can draw fish out of even the heaviest grass."

When fishing vegetation early, Reed prefers a very quiet 1/4-ounce buzz bait; and he works it as slowly as possible around the edges of visible grass.

As the day progresses and the sun begins to heat the water, Reed changes to a louder buzz bait that creates more commotion. He still tries to work the lure as slowly as possible and he keeps it in the strike zone as much as he can.

On many lakes, milfoil and other vegetation mats on the surface, forming a green carpet that can cover literally miles of water. In situations like this, Reed often fishes a weedless spoon with a plastic grub attached as a trailer. He likes to fish this lure early in the morning, or when the sky is overcast. It isn't nearly as effective on bright days because the lure doesn't make as much noise or commotion as a buzz bait.

"The key to fishing a weedless one-hook spoon," says Reed, "is to keep working the lure and not set the hook until you actually feel the bass pulling it down.

It's important to keep your hooks as sharp as possible, and when you do set the hook, do it as hard as possible. Just cast over the vegetation and retrieve the spoon right over it."

Once the topwater action ends, Reed may change to a plastic worm and drift through vegetation, pitching the worm ahead of him. He uses a straight-tail worm that slips through the vegetation easier and a slip sinker heavy enough to pull the lure down.

"I make short pitch-casts into the thickest part of the vegetation," explains Reed. "A lot of anglers fish only little holes and openings in the grass, but I catch better bass hiding in heavier cover.

On some lakes where floating hyacinths are present, flipping plastic worms can be productive. The roots of these plants extend only about two or three feet below the surface but they're frequently home to small shrimp and crayfish the bass eat.

Where possible, anglers simply run their boats 15 to 20 feet into the hyacinth gardens and then begin flipping the worms down right beside the boat.

"What happens," says Reed, "is that the boat knocks the shrimp and crayfish loose from the roots. Bass begin feeding on them, and will readily hit a worm jigged right in there with them."

Because the hyacinths are often quite thick, a 3/4-ounce or even a full one-ounce slip sinker is needed to pull the worm down. Once it breaks through to the water below the roots, it can be jigged rapidly up and down to generate strikes; it should not be dropped completely to the bottom.

Very often the edge of a grassline or hyacinth bed signals a change in depth, and Reed recommends anglers fish those edges when looking for summer bass patterns.

He keeps his boat right on the edge of the grass and pitches a jig or plastic worm ahead of him. He lets the lure fall to the bottom, lifts it slightly once or twice, and if there are no hits, reels in for another cast.

"On lakes with matted hydrilla, bass actually locate underneath it where it opens up," explains Reed. "It's difficult to get a lure through hydrilla because it's so thick, but you can work the edges of it and draw fish out."

Another way to fish these edges, says the Johnson Outboard pro, is to use a deep diving crankbait and work it with long casts that bring the lure along the edge of the grass. This is especially productive when the bass seem to want a faster-moving lure.

Before vegetation like this completely mats over on the surface, Reed often uses a floating, shallow-running crankbait that he twitches over the top of the greenery. The lure immitates an injured minnow with its erratic, darting motion.

"I alway like to see baitfish activity around vegetation," says Reed, "because I know, where baithfish are present, bass won't be far away."

Reed also recommends anglers look for isolated patches of vegetation whenever possible, because these seem to attract and hold bass better than many other forms of cover, such as rocks, brush or even boathouses.

Changes made to Georgia's boat registration requirements

GDNR

Recently the Department of Natural Resources Law Enforcement Colonel, Steve Black, announced changes in Georgia's boat registration requirements that make it mandatory to register all boats with the Department of Natural Resources.

The only exceptions to this law are boats used exclusively for racing, sailboats under 12 feet in length, boats that are not mechanically powered and boats used exclusively on private ponds and lakes.

This registration is mandated under Georgia Law 52-7-4 as passed in 1987 by the Georgia General Assembly and amended by the General Assembly in 1988.

Failure to comply with the law can result in a $1,000 fine, one year in jail or both.

Owners of large vessels in Georgia are advised that although their vessels are documented by the U.S. Coast Guard, they are still subject to Georgia Law and must be registered.

Each boat registered is assigned a registration number and this number must be prominently displayed on the bow of the boat. Boats that are federally documented and registered are also assigned numbers, but it is not necessary that these be displayed. The registration decal, however, must be displayed on the left side of the bow of all vessels.

The only federally documented vessels not required to be registered under Georgia law 52-7-4 are commercial fishing boats. These are licensed with DNR through their commercial fishing license.

Black also advises operators of boats on Lake Sidney Lanier in northeast Georgia, to be aware of legislation passed by the General Assembly that makes it unlawful to "operate or float a vessel on Lake Sidney Lanier with a toilet that is not designed for "no discharge" and to fail to display a certificate certifying compliance."

The bill cites the large number of boats on that lake and the need for special protection of public health, safety and welfare there.

Among the provisions of the legislation, which went into effect July 1, 1988, are:

- It is illegal to operate or float a boat from which sewerage is discharged into protected fresh waters.
- It is illegal to operate or float a boat that has a marine toilet designed to discharge sewerage into the water; all marine toilets must be of a design that can be emptied only by pumping out.
- It is illegal to pump out any sewerage from the holding tank of a marine toilet except into a pump out facility approved by the Department of Natural Resources.
- All vessels having a marine toilet must display a certificate, issued by DNR, immediately adjacent to its registration numbers.

Each owner of a boat registered before July 1 must declare the existence of any marine toilet on his boat at the first date of renewal of the vessels' registration after July 1, and apply for certification of the marine toilet at that time. There is an additional $5 fee for this certification.

Anyone found in violation of this statute is guilty of a misdemeanor and subject to penalties associated with misdemeanors.

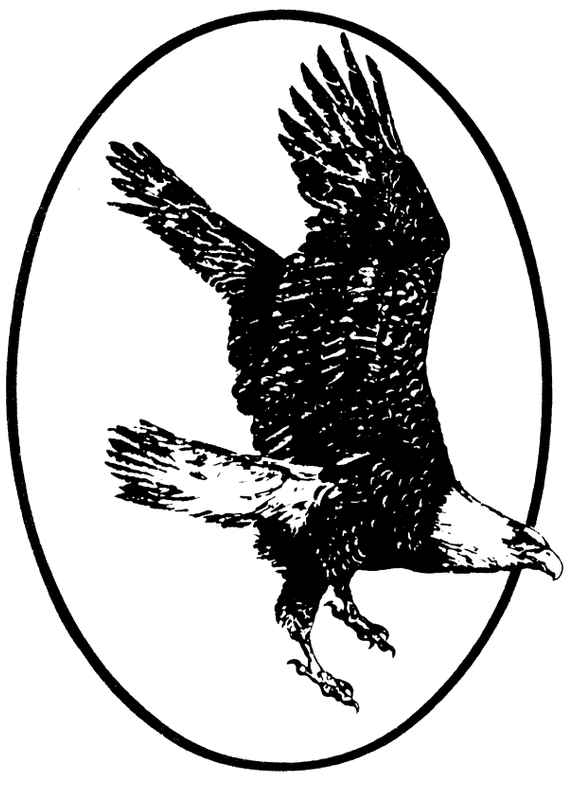
For more information about boat registration, boating safety or the marine sanitation laws, contact any office of the Game and Fish Division's Law Enforcement, or call (404) 656-3510.

Georgia alligator population on the rise

GDNR

Once listed as an endangered species, the American alligator has been reclassified to "threatened by similarity of appearance," a classification that recognizes the species is no longer biologically endangered or threatened, but merely is similar in appearance to other crocodilian species that still are endangered.

The Game and Fish Division of Georgia's Department of Natural Resources notes that the alligator population in Georgia occurs primarily south of the Fall Line (Columbus to Macon to Augusta) in an estimated 2 million acres of habitat. Recent DNR studies of alligator productivity, along with annual population surveys since 1973, indicate a healthy, growing alligator population.



Along with the increase in Georgia's alligator population has come a significant increase in the number of nuisance alligator complaints with which DNR must deal. Most complaints center around concern for the safety of humans, pets or livestock.

Recent changes in the Georgia law regarding alligators have led to some misunderstandings about the meaning and intent of those changes. Simply stated, the law was amended to, once again, make it legal to harvest alligators in Georgia and to set up a maximum time frame during which alligators can be hunted. However, the harvest of alligators as well as season and bag limits are subject to rules and regulations promulgated by the Board of Natural Resources, and there are no regulations to allow an alligator hunting season at this time. These changes were intended to provide the legal basis for instituting an alligator hunting season should a harvest become appropriate in the future.

Investigating complaints and capturing and relocating nuisance alligators consume an increasing amount of DNR time each year. In addition, there are almost no places left to put a large alligator, where it will remain and not create another complaint.

Because of these problems and a desire to control the number of nuisance alligators, the Board of Natural Resources recently approved regulations which, beginning in 1989, will allow a harvest of certain alligators that pose a legitimate threat to humans, livestock or pets. The harvest will be conducted by a limited number of agent-trappers selected to work in specific geographic areas under contract to DNR. As payment for their services, alligator trappers will be allowed to sell hides, meat and other products from the nuisance alligators they kill.

Individuals residing in the southern half of the state who are interested in becoming nuisance alligator agent-trappers may receive complete details of the program and an application form by contacting Steve Ruckel, DNR Game Management Section, 2024 Newton Road, Albany, Ga. 31708, (912) 430-4254. Applications will be accepted until Sept. 15.

NEWS BRIEFS

BG list released

Brigadier list: The Brigadier General's list is out. It consisted of 50 names. Of those 50, three are former unit commanders at Fort Benning and the fourth is a current commander.

They are Col. Wes Taylor, commander of the 75th Ranger Regiment, and his immediate predecessor, Col. Joe Stringham; Col. Paul Chinen, former commander of 36th Engineer Group; and Col. Emery Mace, former commander of the Ranger Training Brigade.

Register to vote

"Tomorrow will be decided today, register and vote!" — The Army leads the country in many ways: Equal opportunity, health and fitness, fewest POV accidents per young population, but not in voter turnout. Shouldn't we be doing better?

In an effort to increase voters' awareness and encourage people to vote through absentee ballot, a Voting Assistance Booth will be set up at the Main Mall PX from Aug. 28 through Sept. 2, 10 a.m to 6 p.m.

For more information, contact your unit Voting Assistance Officer or the Deputy Installation Voting Officer, Capt. Williams at 545-3881.

Women's Equality Day

A celebration honoring Judy Damewood will be held Thursday, 11:30 a.m.-1 p.m. at the Infantry Center Chapel Annex on Sigerfoos Road. Refreshments will be served.

For more information, call Pam Patterson at 545-3282.

QMP appeal procedures change

U.S.Army News Service

In efforts to improve its quality of the enlisted force, the Army has begun to change its Qualitative Management Program appeal procedures.

Soldiers selected for QMP action will now have only 90 days from the completion of the option statement to appeal the action. In the past, soldiers were given up to one year to appeal the decision.

Soldiers with less than 90 days to their expiration term of service and who submit appeals may be extended until a decision is made by the commander of the Total Army Personnel Agency. Soldiers may also appeal the QMP action based on an error in their records and/or improved performance.

Lieutenant colonels and above may also appeal a QMP decision based on the soldiers improvement within 90 days of receipt of the action.

What a QMP board looks for

When a soldier is considered for QMP many factors are looked at by the board, according to Sgt. Maj. Shelby Meares, who serves as the QMP policy integrator in the Pentagon.

Results of skill qualification tests, Enlisted Evaluation Reports and Non-commissioned officer Evaluation Reports are considered. Overall performance of the soldier as measured by minimum performance standards, trends in efficiency, military education and demonstration of a commitment to the professional Army ethic as well as NCO responsibilities are considered by the board.

Has the soldier had a wide range of assignments and does he continually meet the height and weight standards and pass his semi-annual Army physical fitness test? The board looks at all these areas before making a decision, Meares said.

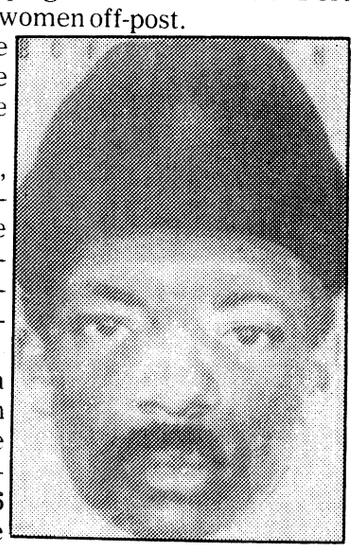
Objectives of QMP

QMP procedures are based on the idea that reenlistment is a privilege for those whose performance, conduct, attitude and potential for advancement meet the Army standards, according to Meares.

Quality management is designed to enhance the quality of the career enlisted force. It denies reenlistment to nonproductive soldiers and encourages soldiers to maintain their eligibility for further service.

Actions taken under these procedures are not intended to be rehabilitative in nature, Meares said. They are designed to deny reenlistment to soldiers who are identified through the QMP board screening as failing to meet the standards.

Soldiers will be denied reenlistment when it is clear by the board that the soldier has not met minimum performance standards, or has exhibited moral and ethical conduct incompatible with the values of the NCO corps and the Army ethic. Soldiers will be denied reenlistment when they do not exhibit the potential to perform the duties of an NCO in their current grade.



Soldiers set to retire

Soldiers who receive QMP notification and have 18 years of active federal service will not be involuntarily separated, according to Meares. These soldiers will however retire at the completion of 20 years.

CID, Police search for rape suspect

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

Post Military Police, CID and the Columbus Police Department are in search of a man suspected of raping one woman on Fort Benning and two women off-post.

Composite of suspect

Each of the women is a wife of a service member.

In each case, the assailant entered through the back door or window of the victims' ground-floor apartments and used a knife to threaten them. Each rape occurred at approximately 6 a.m. while the husbands were at work.

The assailant was identified by each woman as a black male of medium build in his late 20's or early 30's and is said to be between 5 feet 10 inches to 6 feet tall, and to weigh approximately 170 pounds.

The suspect has short hair, a round face, a thick mustache and may speak with a slur. On two occasions, he was wearing a white T-shirt.

According to CID Commander, Lt. Col. Sladen Mohl, the similarities in the method of operation in each of the cases leads local law enforcement agencies to believe that these rapes were committed by one person.

"If this is true," Mohl said, "experience indicates that he will strike again in the near future."

The assailant struck on July 27, August 4 and August 10.

Mohl said sponsors who have families and live in the tri-community area should ensure that their homes are secure before leaving for work.

The suspect is considered armed and dangerous. If anyone has any information concerning these cases, call CID at 545-7950 or Crime Stoppers at 571-5858. If any suspicious activity is seen in the housing areas, report it immediately to the Military Police at 545-5222. Call the local civilian police at 911 if it occurs off post.

1,000 soldiers, civilians up at dawn for AUSA Breakfast

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

More than 1,000 soldiers and civilians gathered Tuesday before the crack of dawn to gather for the fourth Association of the U.S. Army breakfast at the Harmony Church Field House.

The breakfast, which has become a quarterly, event is conducted to increase awareness of AUSA to soldiers, civilians and corporate members as well as recognizing selected persons for doing outstanding either in the community or in their workplace.

Featured at this breakfast was entertainment from the U.S. Army Infantry Center Band and former Miss Columbus . Guest speaker for the event was the Cliff Livingston Award Winner, Art Chriss.

Door prizes donated by corporate members were also given away during the breakfast.

Just one vote can make a difference

U.S.Army News Service

Two hundred years ago, the United States was in a lot of trouble and it almost didn't work out.

Here was the situation: The colonists had fought and won the war for their independence which left the newly free Americans exhausted and bankrupt.

Congress had become a debating society that couldn't enforce its own laws. It couldn't raise money to run the government or protect the country from the Spanish, English and French who were thinking of stealing pieces of the new states.

There was no president or national court system and the states were squabbling among themselves.

A group of national leaders met in Philadelphia in May 1787 to create a new government that would save what had been won at the cost of many lives. This was the Constitutional Convention on which the future of the United States depended. As important as the Convention was, the rivalry and suspicion between the big states and the small states was so fierce that many delegates almost decided their cause was hopeless and that they should dissolve the Convention. Had that happened, there probably would not have been a Constitution nor a United States.

On July 6, 1787, a compromise was suggested and a vote was taken. The compromise passed and the Convention, the Constitution and the United States became a reality.

OPINION

VARIOUS VOICES: What is the best way to get people to vote?

Pvt. 2 Roy Trevino, 2nd Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment, 197th Infantry Brigade - "I think people should get more information on voting through their chain of command. Especially informing them on how easy it is to vote."

Capt. Charles Turner, 2nd, 108th Training Group, Charlotte N.C. - "I think you should make people more aware of how much their vote really counts. A lot of people don't realize that one vote can make a difference."

SSgt. Clinton Allen, Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment - "I think the chain of command should demonstrate how easy it is to register to vote and make soldiers realize that their vote really does count."

Brenda Qurles, Family Member - "I think the best way is through advertising. When something is displayed openly people are at least more likely to think about voting."

SP4 Richard Minor, Headquarters, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment -"I think there should be a reward for registering to vote. Perhaps if a whole company registered they could get a day off from work."

Margo Schlesser, Family Member - "I think the best way to reach people is through advertising. I think more should be done on TV, radio and in the newspapers."

Clyde takes a crack at getting dressed

By Clyde Snively
USAIC Public Affairs Office

As soldiers, we have many things to be thankful for.

We get paid on a regular basis. The Army makes sure we have a roof over our heads and get fed good, nutrional meals. And we don't even have to wash the dishes once we get out of basic training.

We also get free medical and dental care and a chance to see some of the finer tourist attractions of the world, such as Grafenwohr, Hohenfels, Baumholder, Wildflecken, the Pohakuloa Training Center and the DMZ.

There's one other thing that is often overlooked, but is by no means a minor benefit. And that is–the Army selects our clothes for us.

Most of you probably never gave this any consideration. I know I never did when surrounded by green-suiters. But since I've been working with civilians, I've come to appreciate the problem they have of deciding what to wear every day.

Like our civilians even read that Columbus Ledger-Enquirer clothes writer's column–well most of them do anyway, we still have some who shop at Goodwill. But those who care about appearances are always quoting this writer on how a properly dressed gentleman will wear only long sleeved shirts, no matter how hot it gets, and how any woman whose shoe size exceeds 3AAA should never wear white shoes.

All this sartorial homework apparently pays off though, for the other day I overheard the women in the office talking about nominating one of the men for Josiah's best dressed list.

They were talking about Rad.

Rad takes his clothes very seriously. Being a basic ivy-suiter (as in poison ivy) I've never really formed an opinion about clothes except for the fact that I would never wear anything that belonged to someone else.

Like why do so many people wear jeans that belong to Calvin and who is Jordache anyway? And what's with the little rabbits and tigers and alligators on people's shirts? What does it all mean. Are people who wear these critters trying to develop the personalities of tigers and rabbits? And why oh why, do people wear clothes inside out? Is it because the label irritates their skin?

But since Rad also wears clothes that belong to other people it must be the thing to do–as long as the clothes are expensive. Clothes that are so expensive in fact that he steals his from two or even three people like the other day when he came in wearing a pair of pants that belonged to three guys–Hart, Shaftner and Marx (isn't that a comedy trio?) that he claimed he got for half price–$40!

Heck, I didn't even realize you could pay that much for a pair of pants, let alone $80. But I could tell they were used, they were all wringled with creases down the front of them.

Even his ties have someone's name, like Olag Cassino, and I think his suits come from Strickler-Hamby. He wears those fancy Italian shoes with tassles, Elno Lastos, and we know his watch bands are pure lizard leather because they are always breaking.

But all the ladies swoon and rave about his pink shirts with purple ties and wonder how he manages to match his wardrobe so adroitly.

Since I come from the old school of not mixing stripes with polka dots or whatever, I wondered how he did it without causing traffic accidents by blinding people with his opulence.

So one day I approached him. "Rad," I said. "Tell me the secret of your success. How do you manage to mix all the many splendid colors of your ward robe so people will not be shocked by the color, but more importantly will be so dazzled they won't remember if they saw you in that outfit before?"

Rad, being a modest person, at first didn't want to be quoted, but finally broke down and said, "It's really quite simple. Every Sunday my wife goes through my clothes and matches each set for the next five days. All I have to do is dress myself."

I always did hear that the secret to success is a woman and I guess that applies to proper dress. I hope he makes the best dressed list. His wife deserves it.

Ground forces importance often overlooked

AUSA

There is one mlitary fact of life that is too often overlooked in this age of advanced technology, that is no military victory is truly won until your soldiers hold the ground in dispute. Only ground forces can exercise decisive control over the land and the people and resources thereon.

The relative importance of airpower and seapower are not to be underestimated. Both have often demonstrated their vital, but supporting roles in war.

Even in the case of the unthinkable-a strategic nuclear exchange-neither side would be assured of a lasting advantage over the other unless land forces occupy the ground and control whatever remains.

Success by the allies in Europe during World War II was not achieved until Italy and Germany were overrun by land forces.

While the air and sea elements were critical to the defeat of Japan, they were only effective after Army and Marine land forces had secured the chain of island bases from which we launched our attacks against the Japanese home-land.

In Korea, despite almost total air and sea dominance by the United Nations forces, it was again demonstrated that the element of decision was landpower.

The lessons of history should not be ignored. If deterrence fails, the next war will be decided on the ground by the force which can best integrate effective air, sea and landpower.

It is indeed strange, in the face of history and the assessment of the current threat, that we in the United States seem to have such difficulty establishing our own defense priorities.

It is long past time for this country's defense resources to be focused on our most likely needs. We must assure that the Army's needs are assigned the priority required so that it can successfully perform its central role as the decisive element of our national security.

"Reforger Widow" Poem addresses spouse's plight

By Albert J. Nahas
197th Infantry Brigade

REFORGER WIDOW

Cross off September as if it weren't there.
As a REFORGER widow it's true.
Your man is gone to play war games.
And that makes a soldier of you.

Throughout the spring the plans were made.
Foundations for the movement laid.
Summer practice, long hours
meant.
You begin to wish they'd just be sent.

Each day a new surprise in store.
God help us if 'twas really war.
"Will they ever be ready to pick up and go?
Is this a deployment or merely a show?"

Departure day! The month ahead seems long.
You've promised him that you'd be strong.
Not just for yourself and the children, too.
But the other wives of the battalion who Must now band together and make do.

Sons display in their own way
The feelings they've not learned to say,
And daughters show to all around,
Their favorite man is out of town.
All the simple tasks of home
Now multiply while you're alone.
The battery dies in the family car.
The dog gets illnesses quite bizarre.
The plumbing breaks, the stove won't work,
One by one things go beserk.

Each night a prayer for safe return,
And one of hope for peace.
So that these games of war
they play
Can stay a game at least.

There's sacrifices for all concerned.
Old friends think you insane.
Helping others more in need
Helps you forget the pain.
For you, no medal. None would be enough.
No flags unfurled or gun salute.
Our warm reunion says much more,
Though thanks is often mute.
You're as much a soldier as your man;
Your service given free.
The world is that much safer place
Because you stand me.

197th faces 'Certain Challenge' during REFORGER

By Sally A. Roberts
197th Infantry Brigade correspondent

More than 900 vehicles were transported from Kelley Hill to the port at Savannah, Ga. this week as the 197th Infantry Brigade began its first leg of the movement overseas for REFORGER 88.

Tracked vehicles, such as M113 Armored Personnel Carriers and M60A3 Tanks and Combat Engineer Vehicles, convoyed to the rail head site at Sand Hill to be loaded onto rail cars and moved by rail to Savannah.

Monday, convoys of up to 30 wheeled vehicles began leaving Kelley Hill and rolling across Georgia where they were assembled with the tracked vehicles and loaded onto cargo ships, preparing for the five-day voyage to Belgium.

Approximately 3,000 soldiers from the 197th will deploy later this month, and arrive in various locations in Germany and Belgium to link up with equipment arriving by sea.

This 20th REturn of FORces to GERmany exercise demonstrates the United States' capability to quickly reinforce NATO in accordance with allied plans and agreements.

Major ground maneuvers will feature exercise Certain Challenge in September. U.S. soldiers from the 1st Infantry Division, Fort Riley, Ka; the 3rd Armored Cavalry Regiment, Fort Bliss, Texas; and the 197th Infantry Brigade, Fort Benning; will join U.S. soldiers stationed in Germany, the 10th and 12th German Panzer Divisions and the 4th Canadian Mechanized Brigade Group, to form the Certain Challenge Forces.

Certain Challenge will be held primarily in the German states of Baden-Wuerttemberg and Bavaria.

Specialist takes over Top's job as NCOs take to the field

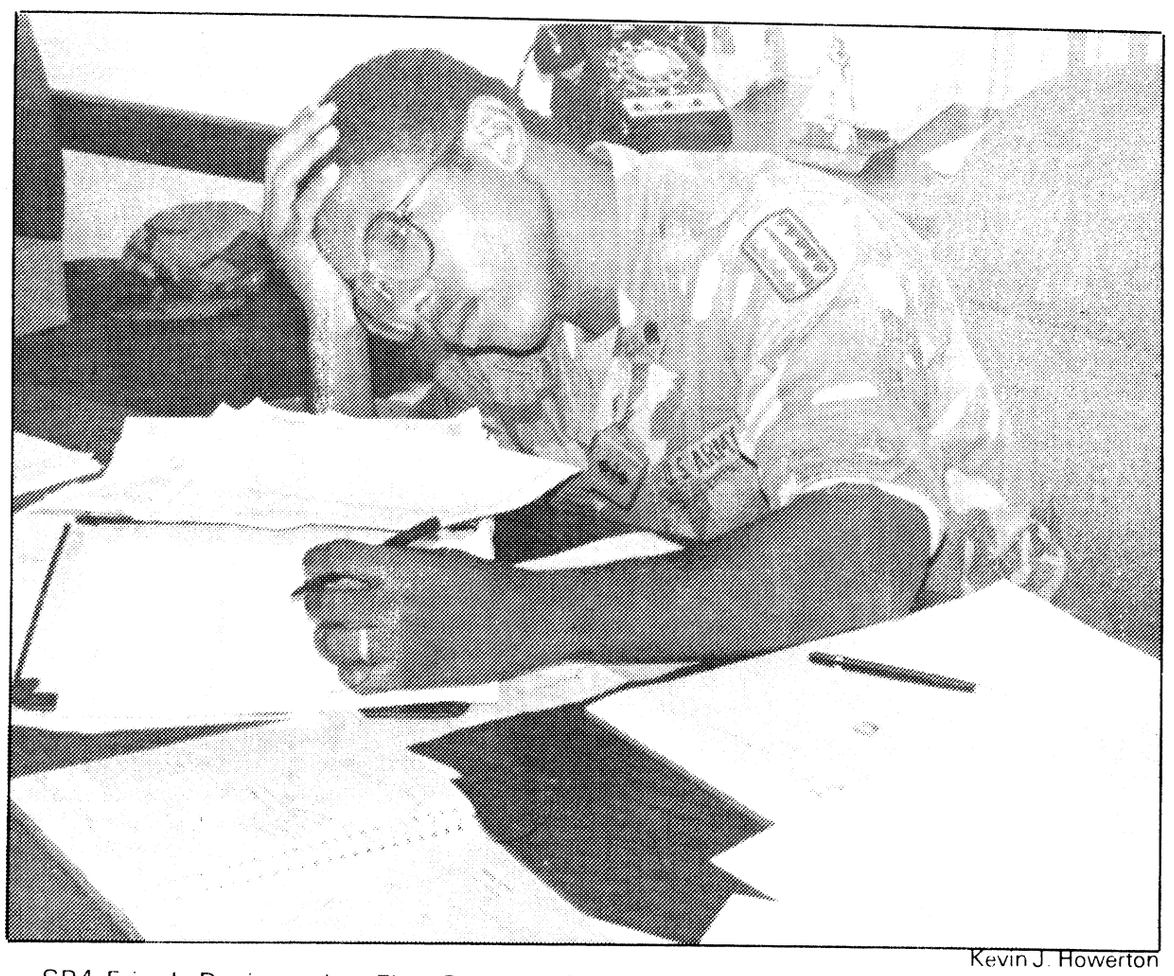
By Kevin J. Howerton
197th Infantry Brigade correspondent

On the door is a wooden sign that says First Sergeant. Behind the desk sits SP4 Eric J. Davis, struggling with a duty roster and a pile of other paperwork, not to mention two phone calls on hold.

Ten minutes later in formation, the acting platoon sergeants, all specialist fours, report the morning accountability to acting first sergeant Davis. For three days, the lower enlisted soldiers in Headquarters Company, 197th Infantry Brigade assumed the positions of their noncommissioned officer counterparts and literally ran the company.

"It's hard trying to work with a company as big as Headquarters," said Davis. "You've got to get information to 10 different groups of people that are scattered all over Kelley Hill. I've learned how complicated the job can get. It's a lot more work than I expected."

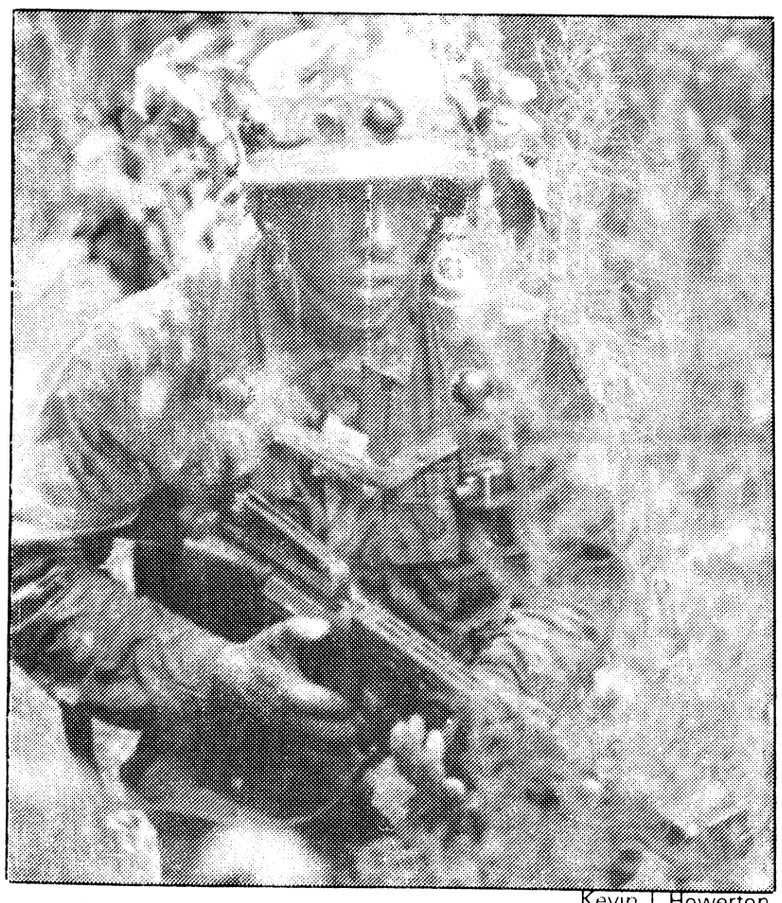
"It gives the specialists a chance to learn about the NCO positions in the company," said 1st Sgt. Albert J. Williams. "This gives them more respect for what their leaders have to go through."



While the specialists took charge of the garrison missions, the NCOs, on the other hand, packed their rucksacks and headed out on a 10-mile road march to the Malone training area for a field training exercise.

The group of NCOs, who represented various military occupational specialities, participated in such training as reconnaissance and security patrolling techniques, movement under fire, land navigation and patrol formations.

"We have a chance to share our experience and learn different ways of doing things without the distraction of having to worry about the enlisted people," explained SSG Jan D. Puterbaugh. "It's pulling the NCO s together, we're working as a team to perform basic infantry tactics."



There was also a role reversal associated with the training.

"The sergeants first class out here aren't squad leaders-we're privates," said SFC Larry T. Nicholson. "We let the corporals and sergeants take the leadership positions so they can learn more about it. We do what they tell us to do, that way they can see whether they are right or wrong. Later, we can help them with the things they did wrong."

Kevin J. Howerton

SP4 Eric J. Davis, acting First Sergeant for HHC, 197th Inf. Bde., tackles the heavy load of paperwork associated with the job.

Kevin J. Howerton

A SSgt. from HHC, 197th Inf. Bde., moves out on a patrol mission during an NCO Feild Training Exercise.

So, if the NCOs desired to separate and train again, would the specialist behind the first sergeant's desk be willing to step into the first sergeant's boots once more?

"Not until I get first sergeant's pay," replied Davis. "One thing I've learned for sure is that a first sergeant earns every dime of his money."

When the exercise ended, the NCOs returned to their leadership positions with renewed skills and confidence, and the specialists gave up their temporary stripes with a little more respect and understanding of the responsibilities that go with leadership.

First try a charm for Co C, 2nd Bn, 54th Inf soldiers

USAIC Public Affairs Office

When it comes to grenades you can't beat them. Each soldier from Co. C, 2nd Bn., 54th Infantry Regiment, 2nd Infantry Training Brigade, is a qualified grenadier; and they all did it on the first try.

According to the company's senior drill sergeant, SFC Michael Wright, they not only earned their badges on the first try but they also did it on a new range.

He said out of the 209 men sent to qualify on the range, 43 earned the expert badge, 36 second class and 130 first class.

He attributed their success to a lot of re-enforcement training done on a small simulated range near the company.

"The extra training really helps," Wright said, "and because of that we consistantly beat out the other companies in the battalion."

NG's bring their local community to Fort Benning

Ann M. McDonald

A member of the 586th Eng. Co. (Assualt Float Bridge) gives a tour group from Tenn. a ride on a bridge erection boat.

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

It is not unusual for a unit to give a demonstration to members of the local community, but when the community travels hundreds of miles to see that demonstration, well, that's a little different.

The 2998th Engineer Company (National Guard) headquartered in Martin, Tenn., with a detatchment in Tiptonville, Tenn., flew members of their community down to Fort Benning to view a day of training the unit undergoes while they do their two-week annual summer commitment.

According to the company commander, Capt. Jimmie Brown, his unit did this to show the local community that when they leave for two weeks they aren't off having a free-for-all somewhere and that they are out in the field learning how to be better soldiers.

"My personnel are civilians after these two weeks are over," Brown said, "so we invited some of their employers to dispel the myth that they are taking a two-week vacation."

He added that when they see there employees in action they become more understanding and are more flexible the next time they have to take a leave of absence for training.

One of the employers viewing the demonstration recalled when he was at Fort Benning for training many years ago.

"I was here in May 1965 at Harmony Church for basic training before heading out to Vietnam," Robert Griffin said, "which was when they were putting many people through basic training at the same time."

"The barracks we were put in looked like they hadn't been used since World War II," he added, "so we spent two weeks cleaning them up before we got started with basic."

Houston Patrick, who is the county register of deeds, was stationed here right after the Korean Conflict.

"I went to look for the place where our building was and it was gone," he said, "the entire Sand Hill area has changed."

He noted the differences in training since he served in the Army.

"Everyone is so highly trained and specialized," he said, "the Army has come a long way since I was in."

Legal side of the AIDS issues discussed by Pentagon JAG

U.S Army News Service

Nowadays, you often hear about the medical issues associated with AIDS. But the legal side of the issue poses another story. What can happen to soldiers who willfully and knowingly transmit the AIDS-associated human immunodeficiency virus? What's the crime? What's the punishment?

"The Army doesn't consider it a crime for soldiers to be HIV infected or to have AIDS," says Army lawyer Paul A. Capofari, Criminal Law Division in the Office of The Judge Advocate General in the Pentagon.

"A crime occurs when these soldiers choose to disobey Army regulations. Army policy says that they may not take part in unprotected sex. It also requires them to inform potential partners that they have been exposed to the virus."

"The Army has developed a good AIDS policy," Capofari said. "It treats the soldiers with compassion while it takes care of the Army's mission. Although you hear a great deal about the very small number of soldiers who are court-martialed, you don't hear about those HIV-positive soldiers who act responsibly and continue as soldiers. When and if their physical condition deteriorates, they may get a medical discharge, all in line with Army policy."

"The regulation says that soldiers will be treated with dignity and understanding," Capofari said. "That's the basic thrust of the Army's policy. Getting commanders involved is also a major thrust. The soldiers' immediate commanders go with them for initial notification."

That same commander gives the soldier the safe sex order, according to Capofari. Also, the soldier is informed that the Army has resources available, that they can continue their work and they'll receive help. In this manner, the Army shows the soldier that it cares. That's the intent behind Army Regulation 600-110.

That regulation requires commanders to counsel those soldiers identified as HIV positive and order them to verbally advise all prospective sexual partners of their diagnosed condition prior to engaging in any sexual intercourse and to take precautions should they engage in sexual intercourse with a partner.

"For the small number of soldiers who disobey that order, the Army must consider criminal sanctions," Capofari warns.

The advantage of the safe-sex order is that if soldiers violate it, it's a ready-made tool for prosecution. Disobedience of an officer's order is a violation of Article 90 of the Uniform Code of Military Justice. The maximum punishment extends to five years' confinement and a dishonorable discharge.

"More than likely that conduct is aggravated assault, which is punishable by a three-year sentence and a dishonorable discharge. In an egregious, glaring or obvious, circumstance, unprotected sex could amount to assault with intent to commit murder or other very serious offense carrying maximum punishment of up to 20 years' confinement.

The problem in most of these cases is proving intent. For instance in an assault with intent to commit murder charge, the government would have to prove intent to kill.

Often that's almost impossible to prove unless you have a statement of intention from the defendant.

"If transmission of the virus, in fact, does occur," Capofari says, then "you can be found guilty of inflicting grievous bodily harm. That charge is punishable by a five-year sentence and a dishonorable discharge. It, of course, requires evidence that your sex partner is now positive. That evidence might not show up for six or more months. If intent is shown, that brings you to the more serious assault-related crimes which can range from assault with intent to commit murder or attempted murder all the way down to intentional infliction of bodily harm. All hinge on the intent to harm."

"Although proof is difficult," Capofari stressed, "it can happen."

Also, as a result of the recent verdict in an AIDS-related case at Fort Huachuca, Ariz., Capofari says, "we know now that a soldier can be charged with the crime of violation of Article 134, the general article which prohibits conduct that brings discredit upon the Army.

"Prosecution for transmitting HIV," Capofari says, "is in line with the American Bar Association's recommendations on criminal sanctions for HIV transmission and The President's Commission on the HIV epidemic in that we'll only be punishing people for knowing and willful exposure of others after they've been counseled, educated and warned.

"We've imposed a duty on soldiers simply to take precautions and to warn their partners," Capofari stresses. "So, the notion of criminal prosecution for violating an officer's order is right in line with what all the civilian entities are telling us should be the model statute."

"We don't want to create an impression that we have an entire policy that has been established to deal with people when something goes wrong," said Maj. Ronald J. Buchholz, a lawyer who works for the administrative law division of the OTJAG. "If soldiers follow the policy, they really receive benefits from the system. They are going to receive care.

"In line with what some states and the president's commission emphasize," Buchholz said, "we don't want to divert resources away from education and counselling. That's the way to stop the spread of the disease.

If you get caught up in criminal prosecution, you really are diverting resources away from what will stop the spread.

Criminal sanctions play an extremely small part against that very small portion of the population who just won't conform their conduct no matter what laws you pass.

"The key," he said, "is to educate the healthy soldiers and make sure they know how to avoid the disease."

ASK THE JUDGE

By Susan McKeeman
Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Q — I know money can't buy happiness, but it does make me giggle a little. So when I got depressed on Saturday, I went shopping — I selected a Corvette (the financing wasn't finalized, but I signed the contract and drove the car off the lot). I also bought a diamond ring. I felt better Sunday, and I realized I don't like the car or my fiancee after all. I've got until Tuesday, three days after the sale, to return the car and ring and get out of my contracts, right?

A — Wrong. You can only use the "three-day rule" to end a contract if three conditions were present. First, the sale must be either at your home (door-to-door) or a place where the seller isn't actually performing business. Second, the sale must involve at least $25 worth of goods/services. Third, the seller or his representative must personally be involved in the sale. For example, the three-day rule does not cover sales contracts done completely over the phone. In this case, the sale was not done door-to-door, but at a regular place of business. Thus, you may not use the "three-day rule" to cancel your contracts.

To properly cancel under the three-day rule, you must mail or deliver a signed and dated copy of your cancellation notice within three business days of the day you signed the contract. Always keep a copy for your own records. If you are using the mail, send the notice by certified mail, return receipt requested. You must then make any goods you received available to the seller at your house in as substantially good condition as you got it, or follow any instructions the seller gives you on returning the goods. The seller must pay the expenses of getting the goods back. If the seller doesn't pick up the goods within 20 days of your notice's date, you may retain or dispose of the goods without any further obligation.

Tips for back-to-school safety

By Evelyn D. Harris
American Forces Information Service

There is a lot to do to get children ready for school, especially for parents whose military reassignments will change their children's schools. But even if the "to-do" list is already long, don't shorten it by forgetting safety, suggested Seth Maher.

Maher is chief of the Department of Defense Dependents School Transportation, Safety and Security Branch. Whether they live in the United States or overseas, children need to know about things like traffic safety and what to do in case of a fire. DoDDS students, however, have one more worry—the possibility of terrorism.

To prepare its students, DoDDS has a comprehensive safety program aimed not only at the usual safety problems but at making students less likely terrorist victims. The curriculum, called "A-OK" for "Alert Overseas Kids," is targeted to the child's age. For example, as part of their education, younger children in schools in Europe see a video featuring actor Chevy Chase, while the older students see a video featuring Air Force Gen. Thomas C. Richards, deputy commander in chief, U.S. European Command.

Said Maher, "Most of the tips we teach are good personal security practices anywhere, but they're particularly important where terrorism is a problem." Here are some tips for elementary school children:

❑ Know phone numbers—your own, your parents' work numbers, the police and fire department numbers and that of a friend.

❑ Know the location in your home of the fuse box and gas and water turnoffs. Also, know the safest escape routes.

❑ Have regular family security meetings to go over these things.

❑ Know how to answer the phone. Don't tell your parents' whereabouts to callers or let strangers know you're home alone.

❑ Don't open the door to your home for strangers.

❑ Don't accept unexpected packages or letters.

❑ Have a family password for use in case your parents can't pick you up and someone else does so.

❑ Be familiar with your surroundings.

❑ Know key words and phrases in the language of the country you're living in.

❑ Know how to say no.

❑ Don't get into, or even approach, the car of a stranger.

❑ Travel in groups.

❑ Always let your parents or other caretaker know where you are.

❑ Know school safety rules for handling emergencies such as fires and bomb threats. Don't fool around during safety drills.

❑ Be alert—report unusual cars or people around your neighborhood or school to your parents or teacher. But don't try to play detective yourself.

In addition, high school students should not dress in conspicuously American clothing, such as cowboy boots. They should also try to learn the language and to be sensitive to local culture and customs. ■

What causes anxiety in children?

Reacher's Digest

What causes your child the most anxiety? Having to undergo surgery? Getting a new baby brother or sister? Going to the dentist?

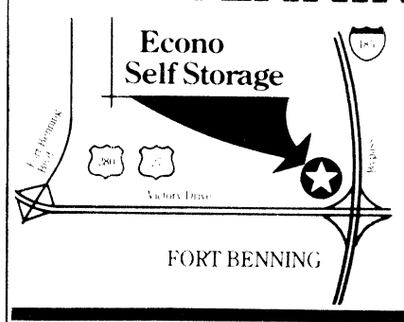
None of the above, reports the August 1988 "Reader's Digest." According to recent research, next to the loss of a parent, children are most afraid of losing face: being thought of as unattractive, stupid or dishonest, especially by their peers. For a child, a blow to self-esteem — wetting their pants in class, repeating a grade — can be devastating.

How can parents and teachers help? The magazine recommends the following:

●Listen — Instead of grilling a child to discover truth, let him or her talk. Ask "open-ended questions." For example, if a child appears to be unhappy because other children tease her about her clothes, the point is not to say, "Don't pay any attention to them," but rather, "So you're upset because the other kids do not like your dress?" Show the child that you are attentive, concerned.

●Prepare the child for upcoming events. — For example, if their child is going to a new school in the fall, parents should ask how the child feels about it, which old friends will be there too, what they know about their new teacher. The parent might take the child to school, visit the classroom, even talk to the new teacher.

●Provide emotional and physical support. — A child needs to be accepted by his peers. So take very seriously a child's complaints about being teased, or being left out of games, or not being asked to a party. The sense that you are there is an anchor will help give the child confidence.



●Accept the child for what he or she really is. —Parents, of course, have to help shape their children to fit into society. But let them fit in in their own ways. The basic requirement for anyone, young or old, is to feel that he or she is worth something.

Multiple resources available for acquiring Chaplains

By Jo Ann Stamey
USAIC Chaplain's Office

Just as the Regular Army has multiple resources for acquiring active duty officers, so does the Army Chaplain Corps.

One of the most popular training and education programs is the Staff Specialist (Chaplain Candidate) Branch. The primary purpose of the program is to procure Reserve chaplains to meet future mobilization requirements and provide a pool of chaplains from which chaplains may be selected for active duty.

Participants in the Chaplain Candidate program must be full-time resident students in seminaries or seminary graduates awaiting endorsement by their denomination.

Seminarians may apply for appointment in the Army National Guard or the U.S. Army Reserves. The Army National Guard offers the candidate full membership in the Guard, with paid monthly drills and two weeks annual training.

The candidate must attend a five and one-half week Chaplain Candidate Course and may receive additional training depending on availability of state funds.

The Army Reserve candidate is not required to attend unit monthly drills or annual training. However, he is required to attend the five and one-half week Chaplain Candidate Course and receive 90 days of practical training at an active duty installation.

Chaplain candidates must agree to seek ordination and ecclesiastic endorsement to become chaplains within three years of graduating from seminary. (Many denominations require that the candidate serve two years in a civilian parish before entering active duty.)

After receiving endorsement from a recognized ecclesiastical endorsing agency, the candidate must agree to serve three years on active duty.

Presently, there are two chaplain candidates at Fort Benning.

Chaplain Candidate Bryan Finch, from Cartersville, Ga., came to Fort Benning on July 5. Before entering Seminary, Finch served in the Navy for four years as an optical technician. It was during his time working with the Navigators and naval chaplains, that he decided that the military has a very special need for chaplains and decided to become an Army chaplain.

In August 1985, Finch entered Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary in Texas. In January 1986, he was commissioned a second lieutenant, and in July 1988, graduated from Seminary.

During his time as a chaplain candiate, Fince has served at Fort McClellan, Fort Dix, Fort Monmouth, Fort Hood, and Fort Sam Houston. While here at Fort Benning, he has worked in several areas of ministry — the 1st Infantry Training Brigade, Reception Battalion, the School Brigade and the 197th Infantry Brigade.

When asked why he chose the Chaplain Candidate program, he stated "I wanted to take advantage of the opportunity to learn more about the Army before coming on active duty." Says Finch. "The Chaplain Candidate Program is a totally positive experience and really helps you decide what you want to do."

Finch will be leaving this week for Waleska, Ga., where he will serve as an associate pastor.

Chaplain Candidate John Borges, from Chicago, came to Fort Benning on August 1 and will be here until the end of the month.

Like Finch, Borges had previous military experience as an enlisted man. Borges was in the Marines for four years in Okinawa.

After completing his tour with the Marines, Borges entered the Seventh Day Adventist Theological Center in Berrien Springs, Mich.

In October 1986, he received his commission as a second lieutenant. Borges has served at Fitzsimmons Army Hospital and attended the Chaplain Candidate Course at Fort Monmouth, N. J. He is presently serving as a missionary for three churches in Puerto Rico and hopes to complete seminary next summer.

While at Fort Benning, Borges has served at Martin Army Community Hospital, 1st Infantry Training Brigade, Reception Battalion and is currently ministering at The School Brigade.

Borges' primary goal is to integrate ministry with soldiering and to be a good spiritual leader for the Army. He also feels the Chaplain Candidate Program is a positive experience and is helping him to become the kind of spiritual leader the Army is seeking.

Both chaplain candidates have been extremely involved in the religious and family life programs, hospital ministry, and the counseling of soldiers and family members. The enthusiam, intelligence, and spiritual dedication of these young chaplain candidates ensure a bright future for the Army Chaplain Corps.

'What a relief' to know God cares for us

By Dale V. Heinlein
197th Support Battalion Chaplain

We often exclaim, "Oh, what a relief!" when things that looked so gloomy and hopeless turn out better than we had hoped.

In our day-to-day lives we find physical and emotional relief in many and various ways.

What a relief the recent blessing of rain has been on the parched ground here in the Southeast. What a relief it is when Friday's final formation is over and one can enjoy a duty-free weekend. What a relief to be able to spend an evening with friends and/or family after a long and hectic day. What a relief it is to make par on the final hole of the golf course when you've had at least a double bogey on all the previous holes. What a relief it is to come in from an extended field training exercise. What a relief it is to dive into the swimming pool when the temperature outside is 100 degrees. What a relief it is when the dentist finally pin-points what is causing you discomfort in your mouth and corrects the problem. What a relief it is when the tests ordered by your doctor come back negative.

"Oh, what a relief it is!"

In our day-to-day lives God wants us to also have spiritual relief. What a relief it is to know God cares about us. What a lasting relief it is to know that the One who has given us life, has also given us the redeemer that we might experience forgiveness and life eternal. What a relief it is to know God's protecting, comforting, and loving presence every moment of each day. What a relief it is to take our burdens to God in prayer — trusting him to hear and answer. What a relief it is to find a quiet place to read God's message to us and meditate on its meaning in our lives. What a relief it is to know that through faith in the saving Lord we are assured of an everlasting heavenly home with the King of kings.

We find relief in many and various ways. But lasting relief is made known only through God. And, "Oh, what a relief it is!"

Personnel Support Center supplies 'daily bread'

By Donna Miles
American Forces Information Service

What do sailors on duty in the Persian Gulf, military commisary shoppers, patients at Veterans Administration hospitals and inmates at federal prisons have in common?

They all rely on the Defense Personnel Support Center in Philadelphia for their daily bread — eggs, milk, fresh fruit, vegetables and meat.

The job of the Defense Personnel Support Center is to ensure that millions of military people and their families, whether in the United States or overseas, get the best selection of high-quality fresh, frozen and canned foods available.

The center also supports other federal agencies, including the Veterans Administration, Job Corps, Federal Prison System, some American embassies and the District of Columbia public school system.

Feeding the men and women in uniform and their families is a responsibility Navy Capt. Ned Kuhns, director of subsistence for the Defense Personnel Support Center, takes very seriously.

He oversees a team of more than 1,700 people who buy and distribute about $2 billion in food served each year to military people, both in military dining halls and in the field. In addition, they purchase and distribute $2.6 billion in food for resale in military commissaries worldwide.

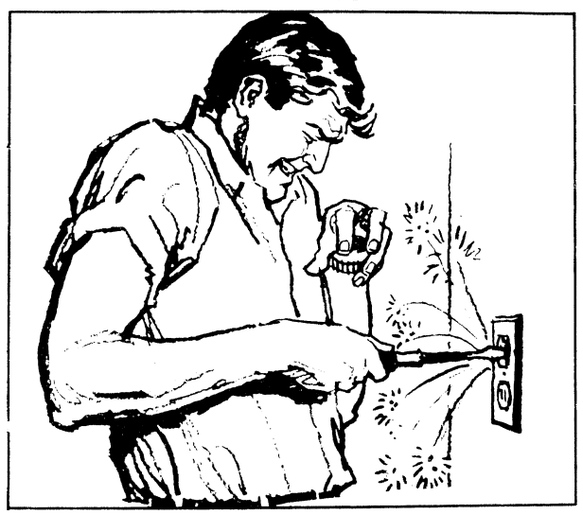
Three regional subsistence offices help organize this massive effort, Kuhns explained. One in Alameda, Calif., supports all U.S. facilities west of the Rockies and in the Pacific. The Philadelphia office supports the Eastern and Midwestern United States, South America and the Middle East. The Zweibruecken, West Germany, office supports U.S. forces in Europe.

Feeding people on seven continents is a mind-boggling logistical feat. It's even more impressive when one considers that, except for fresh fruit and vegetables, dairy products and other highly perishable foods, most food is purchased in the United States and shipped overseas.

Kuhn attributes this to a longstanding DoD policy of buying American goods whenever possible.

"Our basic premise is to buy everything we can in the United States and ship it overseas," he said. "It allows us to provide subsistence without relying on foreign agriculture or economies. In addition, it helps support U.S. producers and manufacturers."

There are some exceptions to the policy of buying American products. In addition to highly perishable items, some less perishable goods are bought locally by food service and commissary personnel overseas.



Kuhns explained another, equally important reason for shipping U.S. food products overseas: commissary shoppers like to buy products they're familiar with.

"Military commissaries and the Defense Personnel Support Center want to offer our military people overseas the same quality and variety of products they're used to," he said. "They should be able to reach for the same brand names and get the same choices they'd have in the United States. When they buy an American product, they know it's going to be a quality item with all the American ingenuity and quality consciousness they're used to."

Household accidents kill 20,000 Americans every year

Reader's Digest

The National Safety Council says that each year household accidents kill about 20,000 Americans and injure another three million. Many of these mishaps are caused by the modern equipment and supplies we take for granted in our garages, reports the August 1988 "Reader's Digest."

The U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission, basing its findings on injuries treated in emergency rooms, has pinpointed several threats of life and limb:

●Lawn, tree and garden equipment — Lawn mowers and chain saws send close to 100,000 people to hospitals each year.

Some mowing tips: Wear long pants, close-fitting clothes and shoes with a good tread. Clear the lawn of litter and rocks before mowing. Disconnect the spark plug before maintenance.

If you must use a chain saw, use only an up-to-date model: recent safety features — such as brakes that stop the chain quickly during kickback, nose-tip guards and low kickback guidebars — have reduced injuries dramatically. Also wear protective clothing, safety glasses, ear plugs and a hard hat.

●Flammable and toxic liquids — Gasoline can be as dangerous as explosives. About 15,000 casualties were caused by gas-related accidents in 1987.

Gas can explode even if the garage door is open. Also, many hot-water heaters are located in garages, and the pilot light can ignite gas vapors.

Experts suggest that gas be stored in a tightly closed container designed for the task, and kept in a separate shed or building.

Other liquid menaces in the garage are paint, paint thinner, oil, varnish, weedkillers and insecticides.

●The workshop — Garages often double as home workshops, and there are about 78,000 injuries each year from home-workshop tools such as power saws, heavy-duty staplers, power grinders, buffers and sanders. Ground all power tools unless they are double insulated. Keep work areas clean. Never remove blade guards. Don't use any tool unless you've read the instructions.

●Electricity — Electricians and engineers know that the human body is an ideal conductor of electricity.

As little as one-third of an ampere can stun and stop the heart. The best way to avoid shocks is by replacing ordinary wall outlets or standard circuit breakers with electrical safety devices called ground fault circuit interrupters (GFCIs). These devices cut off current within microseconds if they detect current flowing to ground and setting up potential shock.

If you have to use extension cords with power tools, be sure that the cord's current rating matches, or is greater than, the rating of the equipment.

Don't operate power tools while wearing damp shoes. Don't even enter a wet basement if you suspect any electrical wiring has made contact with water.

Working outdoors is one of the small joys of being a homeowner. There's no need to fear the hazards if you take a few simple precautions to prevent your home from being an accident waiting to happen.

Benning soldiers to battle in '88 Olympics

Tommy Pool

SSgt. Brian Ballard closed with a strong finish in trap shooting tryouts to join four other USAMU members that will represent the Untied States at the Olympic games in Seoul, Korea.

By Tommy Pool
USAMU

Five soldiers from Fort Benning were recently announced as having been selected to this year's U.S. Olympic shooting team and will be competing at the Summer Olympic Games next month in Seoul, Korea.

All five of those selected are assigned to the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit. They are Capt. Wanda Jewell, MSgt. Erich Buljung, SSgt. Rojelio Arredondo, SSgt. Brian Ballard and Capt. John McNally.

McNally and Arredondo placed first and second respectively in the 25 meter rapid fire pistol championship to capture both team slots in the event, while Jewell won the women's standard rifle championship to earn her position.

In other shooting events, Buljung won the 10 meter air pistol title to qualify for the team and Ballard came from behind on the final day of trap competition to finish second and make the U.S. squad along with former AUM members Dan Carlisle and George Haas.

Three of the members selected thus far will be making their second appearance in Olympic competition. They are Jewell, Buljung and McNally, all competed in the 1984 games in Los Angeles.

The U.S. Shooting team tryouts are currently being conducted in Chino, Calif. and will continue through tomorrow with additional events still to be completed.

Remaining Olympic selection events include the men's 50 meter rifle prone and three position and the women's air rifle and shotgun (skeet) competition.

Children show off pets

Kelly Hill Recreation

Barking dogs, meowing cats and tweets of one frightened parakeet were all in tune on Saturday at the Kelley Hill Recreation Center. Nineteen proud children and their nervous pets participated in the Children's Pet Show. Bill the Clown was around handing out balloons to the children, petting the pets and smiling at the friends and parents.

The judges, Phyllis Armstrong, Chuck Osborn and Richard Allen, members of the Chattahoochee Valley Dog Club, had a difficult time deciding which contestant was the Cutest Pet, Most Laid Back Pet, Fattest Pet and many other categories of pets. While the judges were out deliberating, other members of the club exhibited their beautiful dogs, most of them Champions. Elsie Jackson, spokesperson for the Chattahoochee Valley Dog Club said the dogs will appear in shows until late fall.

The children and ninteen pets were awarded blue ribbons in nineteen categories. Each pet received a certificate for participating.

Volunteers for the program included Pvt. 2 William Moore, Company E, 2nd Battalion, 18 Infantry who was Bill the Clown, Pvt. 2 Chuck Allen, Company D, 1st Battalion, 29 Infantry who took pictures and Pvt. 2 Dennis Capell, Company B, 1st Battalion, 58th Infantry who assisted in the kitchen.

Also helping were members of the Chattahoochee Valley Dog Club.

Wildlife not likely to suffer from this year's drought

GDNR

With the concern from outdoorsmen about the effect of the drought on wildlife, biologists from Department of Natural Resources' Game and Fish Division advise that they anticipate no catastrophic losses of wildlife.

They point out, however, that it is much too early to make positive assessments of the situation. Only a few game species are directly effected by the drought.

One is the bobwhite quail. Quail chicks require a very specific temperature/humidity combination as they emerge from the egg. If it is too dry, they are unable to free themselves of the eggshell and soon die. Joe Kurz, Assistant Chief of Game Management, is concerned about this possibility but is pleased with the turkey hatch this year which he describes as very good. Mourning dove nests are very abundant this year, one of the best years in the past twenty.

"Our interest right now," says Kurz, "is the condition of the plants that produce food for wildlife. We hope they are getting enough moisture to provide the forage to get animals through the coming winter."

Observations of some of the wildlife food crops are encouraging. There seems to be a good crop of acorns although some of them might drop if the dry weather continues. The wild

Blind ol' dog turns out to be a champion

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

When SP4 Rodger Lampley and his wife Joyce adopted the blind Sharpei from the pound, they thought she had strayed away from a home in Columbus and they wanted to help her find her way back.

Well they did, but she is not from around these parts. She's a Texas Gal.

The couple discovered where "Grandma" (they named her that because she moves slow and is all wrinkled) belongs last week quite by accident.

Mrs. Lampley was with Grandma at the post veterinarian clinic to get the animal her rabies vaccination when a man approached her and asked if she wanted to know the dogs real name.

The man told Mrs. Lampley to get in touch with Ray Guerrero who could explain where the dog came from.

Mrs. Lampley got in touch with Guerrero and he told her the whole story.

As it turns out "Grandma" is really "Elvira" and she is in Columbus because Guerrero brought her here as a favor for the dogs' owner Shirley Mendoza.

Mendoza had "Elvira" sent here to see if she could be treated for her blindness.

The dog was at the pound because she had managed to break free of her leash and got lost. Guerrero said he had tried to find her but was unsuccessful.

Upon learning all this information, Mrs. Lampley called Texas to confirm the story.

"She got real excited when I told her we found Elvira," Mrs. Lampley said, "and with pretty good reason, she's a breeder of champion Shar-pei's and Elvira is one of her champions."

Mrs. Lampley said, "the dog earned her championship three years ago and her linage goes back to India."

Now the question is: How are the Lampley's going to get El-

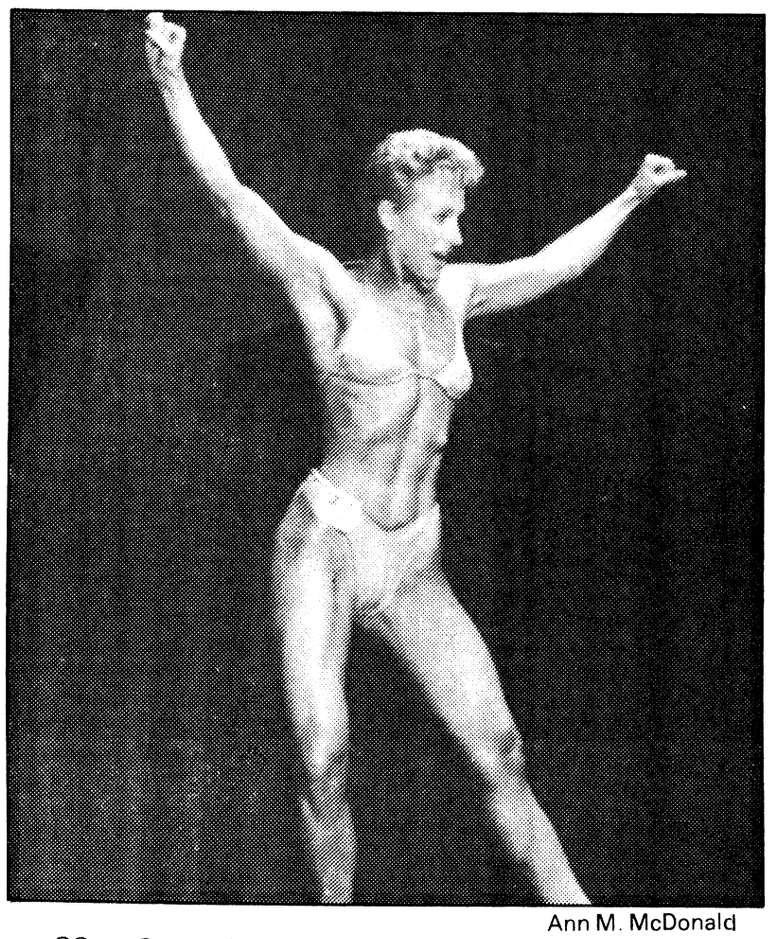
U.S. energy efficiency shows zero improvement

Becky Ray
Energy Management Branch

For the first time since 1975, energy efficiency in the U.S. has not improved. According to the July 25 edition of "The Energy Report," Energy Information Administration figures show a zero percent improvement in energy efficiency, although projections had raised hopes for at least a one percent improvement.

Efficiency is rated by the amount of energy used nationally in BTUs per dollar of the gross national product. Beginning in the 1970's, national energy efficiency had improved by an average of 2.5 percent annually.

Energy Information Administration official Jerry Lagace attributes earlier gains in energy efficiency to improvements made in response to the oil embargoes in the 1970s. As oil prices have dropped, however, efficiency has also declined.



Ironically, in the previous issue, "The Energy Report" also reported a sharp increase in oil imports. Since the beginning of 1988, crude and petroleum products have increased by 14 percent over last year's figures. The American Petroleum Institute stated that this was double the growth analysts had expected. The increase in imports amounts to about 900,000 barrels of oil per day.

As imports are increasing, oil production in the U.S. is declining. Crude oil production in the lower 48 states has dropped 870,000 barrels per day in the past two years, the largest drop on record for any similar time period.

Oil production in Alaska has risen only slightly, about 150,000 barrels per day, since 1986. However, the American Petroleum Institute attributes the increase to new projects, and production is expected to soon level off and then decline.

The individual bits of information in these articles are disturbing, and when examined together, paint a bleak picture of our energy future. As a nation, we are consuming energy resources faster than ever, and are working less to conserve them. We are producing less oil at home, and are relying more heavily than ever on imports.

Our energy situation is not a problem out of the control of the consumer. We can begin to solve the problem at the gas pump, thermostat and light switch. Possibly the largest hurdle we face as a nation in our energy dilemma is making the conscious realization that we have a serious ethical, strategic and economic problem and that we must make a conscious decision to solve it. It's time to take our heads out of the sand. It's time to wake up to our individual responsibilities and begin an active involvement to save energy.

Post soldiers place in local body building competition

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

Rock hard bodies sculpted to perfection aptly demonstrated the fine art of bodybuilding during the Southeastern Body Building Championships conducted at the Springer Opera House last week.

Jerry Oates, owner of Oates Gym and sponsor of the event, said that this was the best show they have ever had.

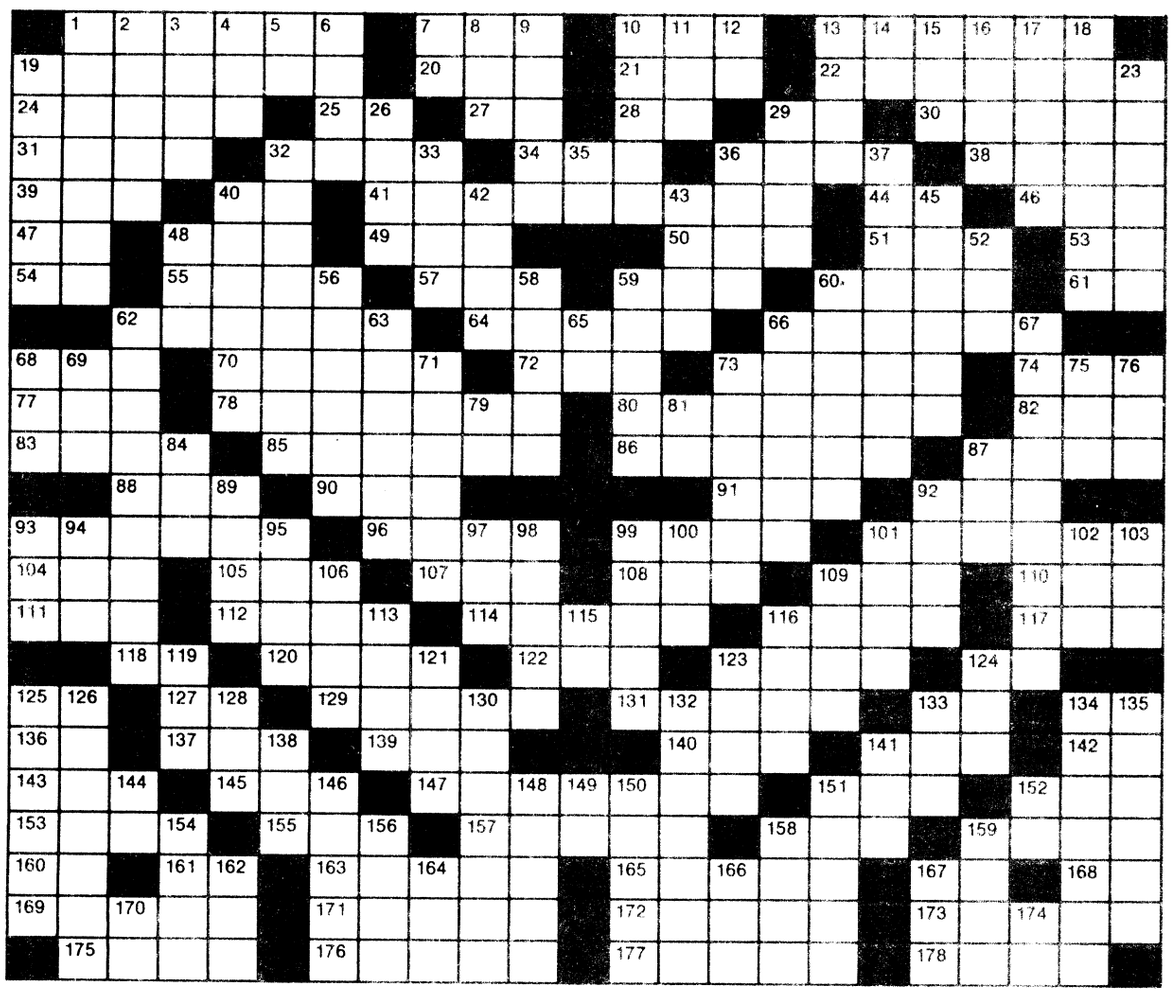
He noted that there was a large turnout from Fort Benning and the caliber of overall competitors was greater than he had ever seen.

"I was especially impressed by the turnout of women for the competition," Oates said, "there were more women competing this year than ever before."

Oates said that all of the competitors are more educated than ever before. The art of bodybuilding has come a long way and people know their own bodies as well.

Post soldiers who faired well in the competition were Max Mullen who finished first in the open middle weight category and Franklin Roach who finished third in the open heavy weight category.

Roach's wife competed in the light weight middle category along with Gwen Garrett who finished third in the Fort Benning Contest.



After the show guest poser, Former Mr. Universe Lance Dreher, posed for the audience.

Overall winners in the open category were: Jimmy Padgett and Kim Pilcher.

Winners in each of the open categories were: Men, light weight, Mitchell Jones; middle weight, Max Mullen; heavy weight, Jimmy Padgett. Women, light weight, Kim Pilcher; heavy weight Cindy Sears.

grape crop is rated as "so-so" this year but the wild cherry trees are producing bumper crops.

Acorns, other nuts and leafy vegetation are most important as winter approaches. Should there not be good production of these, deer will experience a slight loss of body weight, have smaller antlers, and depending on the seriousness of the food shortage, produce fewer fawns next spring.

Kurz added, "It's the long term effects of the drought that concern us most. Wildlife can deal with immediate effects of the drought. It's still much too early to know what will happen later. Presently we don't expect any long term problems."

Fisheries Chief Mike Gennings reports that there have been no fish kills reported that are directly related to the drought. He said, however that there have been some adjustments in the trout stocking schedules in north Georgia because of low stream flow and elevated temperatures in some of the smaller steams. Drivers of stocking trucks routinely carry thermometers to check the temperature of the stream before introducing fish. If the water temperature is too high, the fish are stocked in alternate locations. He also said that trout in the Burton Hatchery was being moved at a higher rate than usual because of elevated temperatures there. Most are being moved to other DNR hatcheries.

Intermittent streams in south Georgia, those which dry up each summer, do not have significant fish populations. Deep holes where fish survive until the streams fill again are beginning to suffer because of the high oxygen demand from fish and from the high levels of organic material in these waters. This happens every year.

Larger streams and impoundments are exhibiting little effect of the drought. There is sufficient flow and deep areas to maintain oxygen levels and temperatures to sustain the fish there to some degree.

Gennings also expects no extraordinary problems with the fish populations this summer. "Fishing this time of the year is not the best and we fishermen would like to blame it on the drought", he said.

VETERANS' Qs & As

Veterans Administration

Q — I understand that there have been some changes in the Veterans Administration's Home Loan Guaranty Program. Did the amount of the maximum VA-guaranty on a conventional home loan change?

A — The Veterans' Home Loan Program Improvements and Property Rehabilitation Act revised calculations for determining the percentage of the loan guaranteed by the VA. Previously, the maximum VA-guaranty on a conventional home loan was $27,500. Under the new law, for loans of $45,000 or less, 50 percent of the loan is guaranteed. For loans above $45,000, 40 percent of the loan is guaranteed, up to a maximum of $36,000, but not less than $22,500.

Q — Why is it necessary to have a property appraised under the VA home loan guaranty program?

A — The new law requires that the amount of a VA guaranteed loan may not exceed the reasonable value of the property, construction, alterations, improvements, or repairs, as determined by the VA. In order to make this determination, the VA requires an appraisal of the property by a designated appraiser.

Q — I am a service-connected veteran rated 10 percent. My service-connected condition has worsened. Can I be reevaluated for an increase of my percentage of disability?

A — Yes. You should submit a written request to the VA along with any medical evidence you have to substantiate the claim.

Q — I have been receiving a widow's pension from the VA for the past 15 years. If I remarry will I be able to continue to receive the pension?

A — No. When a widow remarries, her pension terminates.

Q — Can I get a release of liability if a non-veteran assumes my VA-guaranteed home loan?

A — Yes. Anyone may assume your loan. If the buyer meets with Veterans Administration approval, you may be released from liability.

SNAPSHOTS: U.S. Constitution

U.S. Army News Service

10 facts about the U.S. Constitution:

The Constitution today consists of a preamble, seven articles, and 26 amendments.

The Preamble explains why the Constitution was written and what it is intended to do.

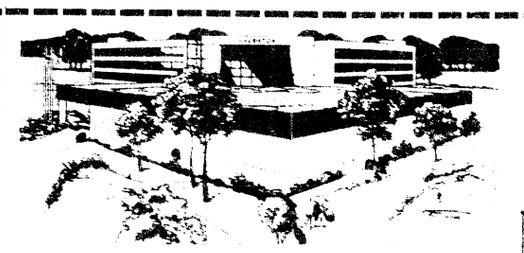
The seven articles established our form of government.

The Constitution was adopted in Philadelphia on Sept. 17, 1787.

Of the 39 signers of the Constitution, 23 had been soldiers in the American Revolution.

The first state to ratify the Constitution was Delaware, on Dec. 7, 1787.

The Constitution became the law of the land when the ninth state, New Hampshire, ratified it on June 21, 1788.



For an amendment to become part of the Constitution, it must be approved by two-thirds of each house of Congress and three-fourths of the states.

The first ten amendments to the Constitution — the Bill of Rights — were adopted in 1791.

Besides members of the armed forces, the President, Vice President, U.S. senators and representatives, members of state legislatures, and all executive and judicial officials at the federal and state level are bound by oath to defend the Constitution.

'Sledgehammer' stomps on Spt. Bn., 17-7

George Mingee

Steve Tennant slides for a close call at first base as William Lewellyn makes the tag.

By Sally Roberts
197th Infantry Brigade correspondent

Designated hitter, Lee Barnes, led the "Sledgehammer" Separate Units Officers to an 17-7 victory over the 197th Support Battalion with two astounding three-run home runs in the championship game of the 197th Infantry Brigade Officers Softball League.

Barnes cracked the ball over the left field fence in two consecutive at bats in the fifth and seventh innings, putting the score out of reach for the Support Battalion "Dependables".

The Dependables entered the championship game with a 11-1 record. Their only loss during the regular season was to the Sledgehammer. The Sledgehammer came into the championship game with a 11-3 season record, and ready to stop the favored Dependables from capturing the trophy.

Scoring started early in the game with Richard Stouder bringing Rick Neiberding home on a double and two more RBIs by Steve Tennant and Mike Norton for the Sledgehammer in the first inning. The Dependables Jackie David answered with a triple, bringing Tom Slade home from first base.

Errors plagued both teams in the second inning. The Sledgehammer scored two runs on Nieberding's sacrifice fly when the Dependables left fielder Jim Struder overthrew the ball to home plate. This and an RBI by John Towery began the Sledgehammer's string of runs.

The Dependables came to bat in the second inning anxious to close the score gap. Sledgehammer center fielder Tennant fumbled and dropped two consecutive hits by the Dependables, allowing bases to be loaded when William Lewellyn took the bat. This time it was Separate Units who missed the play at home plate, allowing three runs to score for the Dependables on Lewellyn's hit and closing the score to 6-4.

But, the Separate Units accelerated their lead in the fifth inning. Harvey Watson doubled with two men on and brought Nieberding home from second base.

Stouder was next at bat and brought Towery home from third. Tennant sacrificed an out to bring Watson in and Bob Kyser singled, leaving two men on base when Barnes smacked his first home run over the fence. Six runs in the fifth inning made the Sledgehammers.

The Dependables final rally came in the sixth inning on a two-run home run by Michael Chambers and a home run by Lewellyn.

The Sledgehammer had no mercy on their opponents in the Proper tackle and presentation may cure clear-water phobias

FISHING CLEAR WATER

Whenever bass anglers are asked to describe the types of lakes and water conditions that give them the most problems, one answer frequently heard is "clear water." Indeed, some of America's bast-known fishermen do everything they can to avoid fishing where the water looks like liquid air.

"Clear water does present its own brand of fishing problems," says Johnson Outboards Pro Staff member Guido Hibdon, "but for the most part, those problems can be solved with only a few adjustments in tackle and lure presentation.

"The greatest difficulty anglers have is adjusting mentally to the conditions."

Hibdon, a former guide on Missouri's Lake of the Ozarks where the water is often extremely clear, suggests anglers switch to smaller lures, lighter lines and more limber rods, and to become more aware of the importance of shade as a form of cover.

"You can fish the same types of lures, such as spinnerbaits, crankbaits, jugs and topwaters," says Hibdon, "only use the smaller versions. Think in terms of 1/8 or 1/4-ounce lures, rather than 1/2 or 5/8-ounce sizes.

"You need lighter lures because you have to use lighter line. In extremely clear water, bass, as a rule, can see the larger lines. I like to use six-pound test line, and may even drop to four-pound test. You can probably catch clear water bass on large lures, but the light lines simply won't handle them."

To properly fish the light lines and lures also requires a more limber rod, specifically one with a very flexible tip. This allows the light lures to be cast more easily, and also aids in hook-setting.

"With light line you can't snap-set a hook because the sudden jolt will break the line," says the Johnson Outboards pro. "Instead, you have to use more of an upward sweeping motion with the rod. Its much more gentle, and the rod flexes to ease the strain on the line."

When fishing clear water lakes, Hibdon recommends trying main lake points at depths ranging from four to as deep as 25 feet. Gravel banks are prime places to find bass, and if cover like rocks or brush are present, your chances are even better.

"I'd start with a watermellon-colored grub or short plastic worm," explains Hibdon, "and simply hop it down the point into deeper water. Early in the morning during the summer, a small topwater lure can also be used over these same points, but when the sun gets hot, the grub will be more productive."

On many clear water impoundments, cover is often at a premium, and visible structures like boat docks, shoreline brushpiles, and rocks receive heavy fishing pressure. On lakes like this, shade itself often becomes a form of cover and structure bass use.

"Rock bluffs that cast a morning or afternoon shadow over the water may attract bass, even though that shadow may be only a foot wide," says Hibdon. "In many instances, shade like this means your effective strike zone is very small, so it's extremely important to keep your lure in it as much as possible.

"Maneuver your boat so your retrieve will keep your lure in the shade as much as possible, and don't stop fishing after you've caght your first bass. On some lakes, you may catch five or six fish from a narrow lane of shade beside a bluff."

Another technique Hibdon uses on some lakes is clear water flipping. It's similar to normal bass flipping, except that a very limber 7½-foot rod and 10-pound test line is used. The primary lure is a shore plastic grub or tube worm.

Ark NG to host Minuteman race

Military Department of Arkansas

The Arkansas National Guard Minuteman Races will be held October 8 at Camp Robinson, North Little Rock. In its sixth year running, a new race has been added.

Originally called the Minuteman 10K, race director Col. Frank D. Green said, "With the addition this year of a 5K race, and our one-mile fun run and walk we started last year, the title '10K race' just doesn't tell the story."

The Minutesman Races — third largest in the state, according to Green — are open to the public. The 6.2 miles course, over rolling hills on hard surfaced roads closed to all traffic, is certified by The Athletic Congress (TAC). Accuracy of the course is considered by many as the most important ingredient of a high caliber event. TAC certification ensures the course is within allowable tolerance of 6.21371 miles.

The fun run and walk, starting at 7:30 a.m., is open to all ages. "Children are especially welcomed," Green said. "This is a low-key event where every participant is a winner. All fun runners receive a finisher's medallion, race T-shirt and other mementos."

The 5K, starting at 8 a.m., is for those who prefer to walk or run a shorter distance than the 10K, also starting at 8 on the same track. Trophies will be presented for both races for the 1st, 2nd and 3rd place overall male and female runners, and age group awards for male and female 1st, 2nd and 3rd place finishers. Age groups are: Under 10, 11-14, 15-19, 20-24, 25-29, 30-34, 35-39, 40-44, 45-49 50-54, 55-59 and over 60.

There will be military team competition again this year. Any military unit, active or reserve, any branch, may enter a team. Teams consist of three to five runners, any age, male or female. Scores are counted on the first three finishers of each team. Team members are eligi-

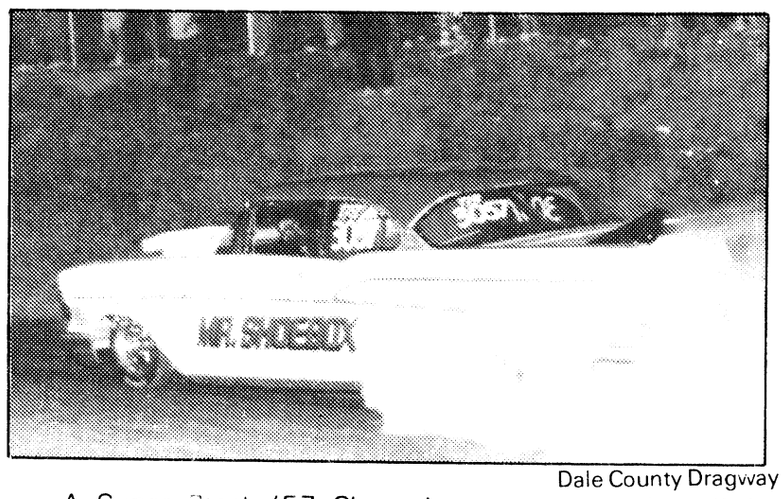
Pro- Stocks compete at Dale County tomorrow

Dale County Dragway

The Pro-stock cars VS Prostalgia cars portion of the Nostalgia Nationals that was rained out July 2 will be contested tomorrow at Dale County Dragway.

The 1962 & 1963 Super Stock competition and the special Nostalgia eliminator portion of the 3rd Annual race was run Aug. 6 and was a huge success.



Over 30 cars, 1966 model and older, entered the Nostalgia eliminator. A record spectator crowd was on hand to see these immaculately restored and preserved older model cars as well as a record number of bracket races.

The Pro-stalgia contingency will be represented by the "Mega Ford" the world's fastest 1957 Fairlane and the Ex-Thundercraft 1957 Chevy, now named "Mr. Shoebox".

The Pro stock catagory will be represented by track record holder "Big Daddy" Ellis Milner in his 1987 Beretta and Clete Ballard in his 1987 Mustang.

The four-way match race format calls for each car to run a differnt car each round of competition, so everyone will run everyone one time.

Gates will open at 3 p.m. with qualifying at 4 p.m. and races at 8 p.m. For further information, call the race track at (205) 299-3642.

Marsh wishes Olympic boxers well in Seoul games

U S Army News Service

Secretary of the Army John O. Marsh Jr., visited Fort Bragg's Callahan Physical Fitness Center to wish members of the Olympic boxing team well in the recent competition against the Canadian Olympic team.

The team is preparing for their Olympic competition in Seoul, Korea, Sept. 17 to Oct 2.

Lt. Gen. John W. Foss, XVIII Airborne Corps and Fort Bragg commanding general was with Marsh to greet the boxers.

The boxers welcomed Marsh with applause as he spoke to the team.

"You young men are the ones with busy schedules right now," he said.

"In the Army we place a high regard on physical fitness. You men set the highest example of physical conditioning. I know Lt. Gen. Foss agrees with me that boxers are among the best trained of all athletes," Marsh added.

Foss greeted the boxers in his role as host for the team.

"We are proud that Fort Bragg has been given the honor of hosting you boxers during your training," Foss said. "Naturally, the Army boxers place high in our hearts, but I congratulate all of you."

The training consisted of both Army boxers and civilians who have made the Olympic team.

Marsh told the civilian members of the team, "If you have a difficult time finding a job after the Olympics, come join the Army and be a paratrooper at Fort Bragg," he said. "We need men like you."

After Marsh and Foss addressed the team, Olympic head coach Tom Coulter called each boxer from the stands to greet them.

The Army boxers are: 119-pound Kennedy McKinney, an Army Reservist from Killeen, Texas; 165-pound Anthony Hembrick, Fort Bragg; 178-pound Andrew Maynard, Fort Carson, Colo.; 178-pound alternate Alfred Cole, Fort Hood, Texas; heavyweight Ray Mercer, Baumholder, Germany and super-heavyweight alternate Robert Salters, Fort Bragg.

"Good luck in your upcoming Olympic competition," Marsh remarked to the boxers as he departed. "I know each of you expects nothing less than the best. Bring home the gold."

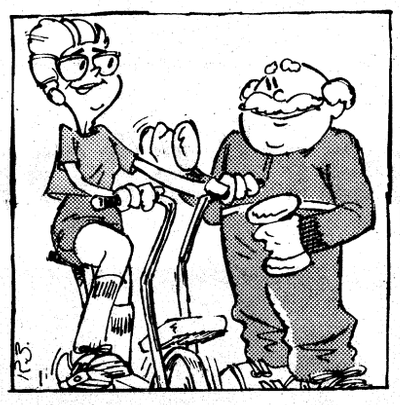
Age need not be exercise barrier

There is some good news on the horizon for all of us. We are living longer, and that means more years to enjoy the people, places and activities that make up our lives. It also means more reason to exercise regularly, now and as you get older.

While medical advances are extending the length of our lives, it is up to us to maintain the quality of our lives. One way to do this, of course, is to exercise regularly. Age need not be a barrier, even if you haven't been particularly active in the past. Everyone can enjoy the benefits of regular exercise.



And, the benefits are many. For people of all ages, exercise helps reduce the chances of developing such chronic diseases as heart disease, high blood pressure, obesity and possibly, arthritis. People who exercise often feel better about themselves and are better able to cope with stress. Studies show that regular exercise may even help you live longer.

There's a popular saying that tells us "everyone should exercise, but older people must." There are many good reasons for making this statement. For one, studies show that exercise helps increase your metabolism during and after a workout, which may help keep those extra pounds off.

People who are physically active also report having more energy during the day and a more restful sleep at night. With more stamina and vigor we can better enjoy the increased leisure time that accompanies us as we grow older. Also, we'll be better able to keep up with active friends, family and especially the grandchildren.

Weight bearing exercises such as walking, using light weights, and doing low-impact aerobics can help slow down the process of osteoporosis, a deteriorating bone disease common among older adults and especially women. Osteoporosis often is the cause of bone breakage, which can be very serious in older men and women. Weight-bearing exercises also will help improve and maintain your muscle tone and strength, which will help your posture as well.

Regular physical activity can also help alleviate some of the digestive and bowel function problems you may have as you get older. Stretching exercises increase flexibility in your muscles and joints, easing joint stiffness and increasing your mobility. Getting in and out of a car, up from a chair, and reaching and bending will be easier and the risk of injuring yourself will be reduced.

Although the physical benefits of exercise help maintain our health and keep us independent and self-sufficient, the emotional, social and psychological benefits of being physically active are equally significant. Taking part in a new activity, or an old favorite, may mean new friends and social activities. Or, you may find it more relaxing to exercise alone with your favorite music. Whatever activity you choose, it should be fun and something you look forward to doing.

If you haven't exercised for several years, or have a medical condition which may require special attention, check with your physician before starting an exercise program. Your doctor, or someone knowledgable in exercise training, will help you design an appropriate exercise program.

Try to establish a routine, a special time and place to exercise that is convenient and fits well into your schedule. The activity most popular among the over-55 age group is fitness walking. This ideal aerobic activity can be done in your neighborhood, at a local track or in a shopping mall.

DeSoto Caverns' September Fest promises fun for all

DeSoto Caverns Park

CHILDERSBURG, Ala. — September Fest, an annual outdoor festival now entering its teens, will again be held at DeSoto Caverns Park on Sept. 17 and 18 as a benefit for The King's Ranch.

The popular festival features arts & crafts, top regional cloggers, live band performances by Saugahatachee Bluegrass and The Front Porch String Band.

Enjoy pony rides, plus special activities such as panning for gold or gemstones, The Bunkhouse Boys Gunfighters and Tom Owen, Southeastern Powerlifting Champion. There's lots of good food such as great tasting "Big T" barbeque, plus hot dogs, hamburgers, funnel cakes, homemade fudge, rise & shine bisquits, and ice cream, to tantalize your appetites.

Over 6,000 people are expected to attend the two day event. Festival hours are 9 a.m.-10:30 p.m. Saturday and 9 a.m.-5 p.m. Sunday.

Master of Ceremonies for Saturday evening's entertainment will be Dollar Bill Lawson of WZZK. DeSoto Caverns Park is on Highway 76, 5 miles east of Childersburg, Alabama. Festival gate is $2 adults, under age 4, free.

The Arts & Crafts Show attracts exhibitors from throughout the Southeast. The show is limited to 100 exhibits, which will be judged and 10 awards given.

Spaces are 12 feet by 14 feet. Each space is $32. An electrical outlet is $5 more. Exhibitors are chosen for the quality and originality of their work and are encouraged to demonstrate. Two slides or photos are required with the application. Setup for exhibitors is between 3 p.m. and 7 p.m. September 16 or between 6:45 a.m. and 8:30 a.m. September 17.

A featured part of Saturday evening's entertainment is The Clogging Team Exhibition with the audience choosing the 1988 Championship Clogging Team.

Registration is $3 per team, no matter how many dancers in group. Teams must have at least 4 dancers any combination male or female with no age restrictions.

Routines may be no longer than 3 minutes and may be any category or combination of show, line and/or precision dancing. Simple props are allowed. Contestants may enter as a member of only one dance team and each team may enter only one routine.

Remember, Exhibitor and Clogging Team application deadlines are Sept. 1. For more information, exhibitor applications and/or clogging team entry forms contact Caryl Lynn Cusick, 200 Landfall Road NW, Atlanta, GA 30328, (404) 252-7743 before Sept. 1.

FISH

"Light line flipping works best around boat docks, piers and yacht clubs where the bass tend to locate underneath the structures for shade," says Hibdon. "Fliping is the best way to present a lure to those fish, but because the water is so clear you still have to use light line.

"Basically, the limber rod does the hook setting for you," he continues. "You simply lift up on it when a bass hits, and gradually work the fish out from the cover. Then, you stick the rod tip back down into the water to keep the fish from jumping and throwing the lure.

"Light line flipping can be effective, but it can cause a lot of heartaches, to, because you have to be patient in playing a bass, which is just the opposite of heavy line flipping."

Benning CG announces retirement

Military, civilian community caught by surprise

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

Maj. Gen Kenneth C. Leuer surprised the entire military and civilian community last week when he announced he will retire Sept. 1.

Although his retirement seems abrupt, the Chief of Infantry said he decided to retire almost a year ago.

"I held back the announcement because people tend not to take a person as seriously when they know he'll be leaving shortly," Leuer said. "I didn't want to be a lame duck CG."

He said this has been the most memorable tour of his over 32 years in service and added that his year as commander of the U.S. Infantry Center has been a good, but tough one.

"We made it through the budget cuts and reduction in force because there is a great body of leadership on Fort Benning," he said. "It keeps the whole post moving and is the reason for our success."

Leuer commented that everyone here is motivated, enthusiastic and has the desire to do what is right.

"People here go above and beyond the call of duty and it shows all over post," Leuer said. "A good example of this is the improved lawns and gardens in the housing areas."

During his tour, Leuer demonstrated his belief in the theme "Training, Caring and Community Involvement" and has made himself very visible and accessible in all areas, particularly in training.

Known throughout the Army as a master trainer, Leuer stressed the importance of training and made it known that training was the most important mission on Fort Benning.

Leuer often noted that only through training can soldiers fight, win and survive on the battlefield. He believed soldiers should spend lots of sweat in training to preserve their blood in battle.

Training applied to civilians, too. At Leuer's insistence, each civilian on post had at least one period of training to improve proficiency and productivity during the year.

His idea of caring extended to family members. Leuer insisted that families be properly housed, had the necessary medical care and enjoyed the same quality of life as is available to those in the civilian community.

A soldier's lifeblood, love for country, and dedication to defending the Constitution is dependent upon the support he receives from the civilian community, according to Leuer.

As Chief of Infantry, he pushed his concept of "One Infantry," and, although it was met with some resistance initially, Leuer said it is now being looked at favorably by his peers.

In the "One Infantry" concept, Leuer believes that no matter how a soldier gets to the objective, once there his actions will be the same as any other rifleman - mechanized, airborne, light infantry or ranger. Infantryman should be cross-trained in all those areas.

Now, after a career filled with many and varied assignments, Leuer, at age 54, has decided to move on.

"My wife, Sally Jean, and I are in good health and we want to enjoy life and look to new horizons while we have our good health," he said.

The Commanding General said he and his wife will remain in Columbus. They bought a home in the Chapel Lake area.

He said he has no immediate plans and that he is going to take some time off to "smell the roses."

Maj. Gen. Michael F. Spigelmire, Commanding General, 24th Infantry Division (Mechanized), Fort Stewart, Ga., will replace Leuer at Fort Benning.

Uncertified baby sitters could loose post quarters

By Shawn Bryson
Bayonet staff writer

The Family Child Care program at Fort Benning has some good news and some bad news.

The bad news is, according to Jennifer Williams, FCC Director, if you live in government quarters and babysit children in those quarters for more than 10 hours per week, you risk losing your quarters if you are not certified through the FCC. That's not 10 hours per child but 10 hours total.

The good news is if you are 18 or older, live in government quarters and would like to provide child care in those quarters for more than 10 hours per week, you qualify to apply for certification through the Family Child Care Program.

Williams explained that there are currently about 70 certified child care providers on post and 30 who have completed the training and are awaiting the necessary inspections.

Although the certification process is not lickety-split, the demand at Fort Benning for child care is high and supply is low. Thus, anyone who gets certified can expect plenty of business.

The process starts with an application including general information about the applicant and a signature from the applicant's sponsor authorizing use of the quarters for child care. Three references must also be given when applying.

Background checks on all adult members of the applicant's household are conducted by the Military Police and Social Work Services, Williams said. A history of spouse/child abuse or criminal activity disqualifies applicants for certification.

FCC policies also require each applicant to obtain a health evaluation, including rubella and tuberculosis screenings. The successful completion of First Aid and Cardio Pulmoinary Recussitation training are also necessary.

Once requirements have been met, applicants must take a 20 credit-hour training class. "The class includes several aspects of child care such as child development, identification of abuse, nutrition, fire safety and preventative medicine," Williams said.

After fire, safety and health inspections, applicants must provide sample schedules of daily activities and menus, and child-proof their homes.

Once all of the application steps have been completed, applicants receive a provisional certification from the FCC which is valid for six months. An additional 18 hours of training is then required, after which final certification is given. Final certification is valid for 3 years.

Williams said that the requirements for FCC certification are strict, but necessary in providing safe and educational places for the children. "A parent can be assured that the standards of FCC certified child care givers are the same as any Army child care center," she said.

"Parents will also find much more flexibility in the hours of an FCC provider than those of a center," Williams added. "FCC providers can usually do hourly, evening and weekend care."

4,500 speeding tickets issued here

USAIC Public Affairs

More than 4,500 speeding tickets were issued at Fort Benning during the first six months of this year. On average, 25 speeding tickets were written each day.

According to the Military Police's operations officer, Capt. Sonny Buttrum, as many as 19 radar teams patrol the streets of post each day in search of those drivers who ignore posted speed limits.

"Our aim is not to harass those who travel on Fort Benning," Buttrum said, "but to make sure our community is safe for those who use our streets, whether in cars, on bikes or on foot."

Buttrum, who knows Fort Benning quite well from his 17 months in police work here, explained that it has been expensive for those who don't stay within the posted speed limits.

"If you take the average fine for speeding," he said, "and multiply it by the number of tickets written since the first of the year, the total is staggering."

Using the average fine of $50, the total for the 4,681 tickets would come to just over $140,000.

In reality, though, not all tickets end with a conviction and subsequent fine, especially if violators are successful in arguing their side of the story in court.

Since March 1986, soldiers ticketed for speeding on post have appeared before the U.S. Federal Magistrate, Judge William Slaughter. Before then, speeding violations by soldiers were handled through the Uniform Code of Military Justice.

On selected Fridays each month, military and civilian speeders who choose to present their case, or who have a mandatory court appearance, report to the magistrate's court convened at the Staff Judge Advocate's office. In some months, Slaughter must convene court every Friday. Typically, Slaughter listens to an offender's side of the story, makes a decision and,if the violator is proven guilty, levies a fine.

Under Georgia State Highway Codes, speeding fines can range as high as $1,000.

Historically, the Military Police give more tickets in family housing areas than any other area.

Armed Forces Voters Week scheduled to kick-off Monday

By Jim Garomone
American Forces Information Service

The Department of Defense is sponsoring a week begining Monday to highlight the effort to get service members to vote. It has been designated as Armed Forces Voters Week by Defense Secretary Frank C. Carlucci.

"We are going to use the week as a vehicle to change the focus of our voting effort from the primaries to the national election in November," said Hank Valentino, the director of the Federal Voting Assistance Program. "Commanders have been encouraged to do everything they can to get voting information to their personnel."

Valentino said some commands are planning parades, while others are setting up registration tables. Still others are having training to stress the importance of voting. "It's wide open (what commanders can do)," he said. "The important thing is to make service members and their family members aware of the responsibility to vote and the procedures for voting."

In 1984, a higher percentage of service members voted than the general public. Those who didn't vote cited a lack of information on the candidates as one of the reasons. To solve this, the Federal Voting Assistance Program is setting up AUTOVON lines that will allow service members to call and hear prerecorded campaign messages from candidates. The lines will be open 24 hours a day.

AUTOVON calls are free, while commercial calls are not. The touchtone phone numbers are AUTOVON 285-4333 and commercial (202) 504-4333. For rotary phones, the numbers are AUTOVON 221-5100 and commercial (703) 325-6100. The lines will go into operation Monday.

Callers can hear messages from the presidential candidates as well as those in senatorial contests and gubernatorial elections.

Service members with questions about voting should contact their unit voting assistance officer or the Fort Benning Deputy Installation Voting Officer, Capt. Williams at 545-3881.

See Secretary of Defense Frank C. Carlucci's Message on Absentee Voting on page A—2.

OPINION

VARIOUS VOICES: What will it take for women to gain total equality?

Beatriz Barral, Family Member - "I think that women first need to think of themselves as being equal. I believe that many women tend to think they are lesser than men."

2nd Lt. Eric Skinner, Company B, 108th Training Group, Charlotte, N.C. - "I think it will take a lot of changes in attitude. Men don't always look at a woman and think of her as equal. I don't think it's right but it is true."

SSgt. Ray Church, Company E, 1st Battalion, 50th Infantry Regiment - "I think women need to put forth 100 percent effort in whatever they do so more men can see that they can do the job."

Suellen Maka, Post Finance and Accounting Office - "I never really thought about it. I've always felt pretty equal as far as my job goes. I think we've made a lot of headway but in many areas we have a long way to go. It is hard to sway old opinions."

Sgt. Kenneth Turner, 598th Maintenance Company, 67th Maintenance Battalion - "I think it is just a matter of time. Women have been suppressed for a long time and it takes just as much time to turn those feelings around."

Gail Kidde, Harmony Church Sato Travel Office - "I think that most women are capable of obtaining equality if they demonstrate they are able to do the job."

Clyde bids farewell to post CG

Want to know how to strengthen the NATO alliance, or the best way to defend Europe against an invasion from the east?

Would you like to know if the INF treaty is doable? Or maybe you just want to cure world hunger and stop the spread of AIDs. The answers to all these challenges can be found in the Infantry School cafeteria, almost any time of day. Just ask any captain wearing an Army uniform with a blue plastic name tag.

Everyone knows that the cleverest, smartest, and the most experienced Army officers on earth are captains attending the officers' advanced course.

After all, each one has had THE key and unique assignment before reporting to IOAC. It's impossible to guess at how many general officers have either had their careers' saved or been personally instructed on some Army matter, by one of these captains.

Even now the phone lines at the Infantry Officers' Assignment Branch are ringing off the hook as commanders vie to get these captains assigned to their units.

This week, cafeteria talk was more subdued than usual. No posturing about the cafeteria, no banging of fists to make a point. Instead discussion was quiet and reasoned, and for once the captains seemed to be doing more listening than talking.

At nearly all the tables, whether student, center or school staff, talk centered around the announcement by the Infantry School Commandant, Maj. Gen. K.C. Leuer, that he would retire. Everyone had his own impression of the general, and each wanted to share it with the others.

"He's the first leader I've known who I actually believed he meant what he said when he talked about caring for soldiers and family members. Too many times you get the feeling leaders just pay lip service to this caring business because someone up at DA said that's the way it ought to be. General Leuer believed in that stuff," one captain was heard to say.

"What I liked about the CG is that he wasn't a checklist man. He was more interested in the outcome of an action than how well you followed a checklist. He knew that no matter how well a commander did in preparing to attack an objective, recon, cross LD on time, call in arty and tac air, etc., it all didn't amount to a hill of beans unless he takes the objective.

"It's like if there are 10 steps to making coffee, you do nine out of ten, you score 90 percent, but unless you added coffee to the pot, you will only end up with hot water," another captain said.

There was a buzz of agreement at that table.

At another table some center staff majors and senior NCOs were discussing the CG's management style. "He wasn't a micro manager. He told you what he wanted, then left it up to you to do it....of course if you didn't do what you were supposed to do, you'd hear about it," one of the majors said.

A sergeant major said he thought the CG was a soldier's general, "Just like Gen. (Omar) Bradley. General Leuer would go up to troops in the field and stop and shake their hands and talk to them. He seemed to value their opinions. It really made them feel important."

A civilian at the table summed it up when he said, "General Leuer truly cared for everyone."

Jackson's inauguration goes unmatched

PM Editorial Services

Early next year, we will inaugurate a new president of the United States at the Capitol in Washington, D.C. Whether it is a Democrat or Republican, the inauguration is certain to be an event marked by a serious speech, a parade down Pennsylvania Avenue and extremely high security. Some recent presidents have tried to break this mold — Jimmy Carter walked the inaugural parade route in 1977 — but no matter how hard the new president tries to bring his inauguration to the people, nothing will ever match Andrew Jackson's presidential inauguration of 1829.

Jackson, a national hero for leading the American forces to victory in the Battle of New Orleans in the War of 1812, ran for president in 1828 as the people's candidate. Born in a log cabin in what is now North Carolina, he was a true frontiersman and appealed to the common man. Affectionately known as "Old Hickory," he was the first president of the United States who was not from either Virginia or Massachusetts.

On March 4, 1829, a huge crowd of the common people who helped make Jackson president came to Washington, D.C., for his inauguration. What happened was very different from any of the inaugurations that had come before — or since.

When the speech was over and the president made his parting bow, the barrier that had separated the people from him was broken down, and they rushed up the steps all eager to shake hands with him," a contemporary of Jackson's recalled years later. "It was with difficulty that he made his way through the Capitol and down the hill to the gateway that opens on the avenue."

Jackson mounted his horse for his inaugural ride down Pennsylvania Avenue to the White House, the throng trailing behind him. When the mob reached the White House, where Jackson was to give a reception for government officials, it did not stop. Frontiersmen, backwoodsmen, laborers and war veterans forced their way into the White House to celebrate the inauguration of their hero. Some stood on fancy chairs in their muddy boots to see Jackson while others pushed aside members of Congress and their wives to get to tables of food, smashing White House china.

The new president was pushed up against the wall by the tide of well-wishers and had to be protected by a ring of friends who linked arms to create a barrier around him. He eventually was forced to escape the White House through a back door. The partying crowd, however, did not leave until their square-dancing was done several hours later.

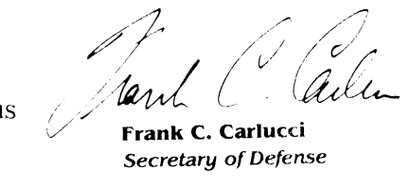
Secretary of Defense urges military to vote

In 1988, we will elect over 500,000 public officials who will serve at all levels — federal, sate and local. Their decisions will directly influence our lives and well-being.

In 1984, over 81 million Americans who could vote, didn't. That number includes over 900,000 of our men and women in uniform.

The main reason for not voting given by military non-voters in 1984 was that they didn't know how to get a ballot. Another group said they didn't vote because they had no candidate preference and another said their vote wouldn't matter.

Sometimes we forget that our rights in a free society carry a responsibility to select our leaders. Our military are the very ones who will defend our country, so it is difficult to understand why so many fail to exercise their right to vote.



I have ask commanders at every level of command to ensure that every military person knows how to get a ballot. For those who say they have no candidate preference, we have a special AUTOVON number to call to get information on candidates. You can also get information from friends or relatives back home or hometown newspapers.

For those who think their vote won't matter, I can tell you about a number of elections where the margin was only a few votes, and some where one vote made the difference.

It's not only the president who will be determined in this year's election. At stake are all 435 members of the House of Representatives, 33 senators, 13 governors and numerous state and local officials.

I have designed the week of August 29th as Armed Forces Voters Week to focus on the upcoming elections. This is the time to request your absentee ballot. See your commander or unit voting assistance officer to get your federal postcard application for an absentee ballot. It only takes a few minutes.

Our forefathers defended our freedoms and guaranteed us the right to choose our leaders — to honor their commitment derserves our participation in the voting process. Be sure you vote this year.

Frank C. Carlucci
Secretary of Defense

Stress is unavoidable but can be dealt with

By Robert White
Family Life Center Chaplain

Excerpts taken from "A Scriptographic Booklet", by Channing L. Bete Co., Inc.

What is stress? It's pressure from outside that can make you feel tense inside. It is an unavoidable fact of life. Some stress is a part of daily life — it affects everyone. Certain kinds are actually helpful — they keep you on your toes, but miserable, worried, sad, and ill.

Stress and how you handle it affects your health and happiness. If you allow it to build up, stress can sometimes produce tensions serious enough to interfere with your normal problems.

Many people visiting doctors for physical complaints have stress-linked problems, mental and emotional woes.

One of the main causes of stress is change. Too many or too drastic changes often result in harmful tension. For examle, personal loss, such as death of a loved one, loss of friends when moving, separation or divorce, all can cause depression.

Illness/injury, change in lifestyle, job changes, money problems, family changes, and retirement are all causes of stress.

Excess tension can result in anxiety and depression. Anxiety is that worried, up-tight feeling. It's a vague fear that something bad or unpleasant is going to happen even if there's no real threat.

Anxiety may result from holding back feelings we can't cope with or understand, or it may grow out of a conflict between what we'd like to do and what we think we ought to do. For example, you have an interview with the boss — you're in line for promotion. Naturally you're a little tense, anxious to do your best. If that keyed-up feeling of pressure and uncertainty lasts even after you get the job, you may be on the way to a full-fledged anxiety state.

The most common signs of anxiety are nervousness, trembling, dizziness, pounding heart, inability to slow down or relax, abnormal eating habits and troubled breathing.

Everyone has a certain amount of anxiety. To a degree, it's a natural, helpful response to stressful or threatening situations. But prolonged anxiety can lead to serious problems, such as ulcers, high blood pressure, inability to enjoy life and the world.

The result of tension is depression, that sad and blue feeling. It's a feeling of sadness or disappointment that leads to apathy and withdrawal for no specific reason. The most common signs of depression are fatigue, sleeplessness, inability to concentrate, restlessness, boredom, lack of interest in food, sex, and life in general, feelings of worthlessness and hopelessness.

Prolonged depression may cause such physical symptoms as headache or weight loss, or may lead to drug or alcohol abuse.

Some depression is normal, a reaction to the reality that "what is often" falls short of "what's hoped for." But prolonged depression is a serious problem. Long lasting feelings of worthlessness and isolation can lead to suicide.

What can you do? You can do a lot to keep tensions within reasonable limits before they lead to trouble.

- Talk it over with a friend
- Exercise regularly
- Plan your work
- Take a break
- Learn to relax
- Be realistic
- Avoid stress (too many changes in a short period)
- See your chaplain, doctor, or helping professional

People should show concern and care to those immediately around them. If you know that your friend or neighbor is experiencing a lot of stress, be a good listener and, if needed, refer him or her to the chaplain, doctor, or other helping professional.

The U.S. Naval Ship ALTAIR prepares to be loaded with equipment from the 197th Inf. Bde.

36th Eng supports REFORGER

By Beverly D. Asbury
36th Engineer Group correspondent

Soldiers from the 36th Engineer Group provided vital behind-the-scenes support to the 197th Infantry Brigade who transported more than 900 vehicles to the port of Savannah last week in preparation for the upcoming Reforger.

During the movement, the 598th Maintenance Company, 67th Maintenance Battalion, provided direct maintenance support that helped the success of the mission.

The 598th set up a pit stop at Warner Robins Air Force Base, where the convoys refueled to continue their journey to Savannah. All vehicles were checked for maintenance problems at the base.

"Minor maintenance problems were repaired at Warner Robins Air Force Base and the major maintenance problems were repaired at Savannah," said Chief Thomas Pinter, 598th Shop Officer.

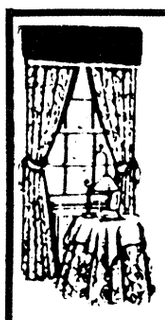
ASK THE JUDGE



By Jessica L. Kole
Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Q: I have been receiving telephone calls from a company trying to sell me magazine subscriptions. The salesperson said I can get five different magazines for only $1 a day. It sounds like it might be a good deal, but I'm not sure. What should I do to be sure that I do not get ripped off if I decide to buy?

A: Listen very carefully to the initial telephone sales presentation to understand what you are being offered. Be suspicious if anyone tries to sell you a bargain or give you something free. Do not be afraid to ask the salesperson questions. If you do not get answers to your questions, hang up. The Federal Trade Commission suggests the following questions to ask and tips to follow when you receive an offer to buy magazines over the telephone.

●Ask callers for their name, and the name, address and phone number of the company they represent. Ask what maga-

●Ask for the total yearly cost of each magazine and for the whole package. Decide if this is a real bargain over the regular subscription prices you could obtain elsewhere. The idea of paying $1 a day for five magazines may sound like a bargain but, remember, that adds up to $365 per year.

●Ask to receive a written copy of the sales terms offered over the telephone before you agree to buy anything. Read the sales agreement carefully to make sure you understand what you will receive and what it will cost.

●Do not give your credit card number or bank account number over the phone unless you initiate the call or you are familiar with the company.

RC honors youth volunteers

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

Participants in the Fort Benning Red Cross Youth Volunteer Program were recognized in a ceremony last week for the more than 2,300 hours of time they donated in various services this summer.

During the ceremony, Martin Army Community Hospital Commander Herbert Segal praised the volunteers and told them how much he appreciated the gap they filled in various positions within in his command.

"There are some positions in the hospital that are not currently occupied and, through the help of the youth, we were able to provide better service to the community," he said.

Dottie Bouldin, Red Cross Station Manager also praised the volunteers and recognized the program chairperson, Monette Sexton, for putting the whole project together.

"The days of the traditional candy-striper are gone," she said, "these volunteers do much more than pass out magazines; they answer telephones, check-in patients and do some clerical work as well."

She added that once the units realized how beneficial the youth were to their workplace, they expressed interest in receiving additional help.

They realized how special these kids are and the uniqueness of the youth volunteering their free-time to work during the summer.

"I hope these volunteers have learned something from their experiences this summer and will take that with them as they enter the new school year," she said."

Bouldin said that although the summer program has ended, there are many more activities planned for the Youth Volunteers.

"We are initiating a year-round program that will include volunteering to help with the special olympics, holidays and special projects," she added. "With the expansion of the program, we will initiate youth leadership where individuals will be elected into to office."

Several of the volunteers stated that they really enjoyed their work with the program and realize the importance of the experience gained from it.

The two that donated the most hours were Danechia McIver, 363 hours, and Jessica Robinson with 331.

Nancy Ruehle was recognized for having the most number of years in the program.

Each of the volunteers were given a certificate from the Red Cross for their hard work.

Riverside revisited

Mrs. Sally Leuer, wife of Fort Benning's commanding general (l), and Mrs. Sarah B. Bickerstaff discuss the history of Riverside. Bickerstaff, whose father, Arthur Bussey, built the home in 1909, recently visited the home after 70 years. The home and surrounding lands were purchased by the War Department in 1918 to house the U.S. Army Infantry School. At the time of its purchase, the home was surrounded by one of the last self-supporting plantations in the area.

MACH nurse serves at convention

MACH Public Affairs Office

Gladys Cravens, a registered nurse in the Emergency Room at Martin Army Community Hospital, recently returned from Atlanta, where she served as a volunteer on the medical team at the Democratic National Convention.

Five-hundred applications were reviewed before the 157 nurses needed were chosen to fill eight emergency centers located throughout the convention hall.

Cravens, whose career as an emergency room nurse spans 24 years, was one of only 16 nurses given a top security clearance to provide medical care to VIPs, including candidates and their families. The clearance came only after an intensive background investigation by the U.S. Secret Service.

She served in the emergency and trauma center located behind the podium and worked the 3 p.m.-1 a.m. shift during the fast-paced four-day convention.

Craven said that serving on the medical team and working with top-notch emergency and trauma nurses from across the nation was a professional challenge.

Cravens received her nursing skills from a three-year program at the St. Elizabeth School of Nursing in Covington, Ky. She was a staff nurse in the emergency room at Fort Knox, Ky., before coming to MACH in 1969.

Although there were only minor medical emergencies, Cravens considers her work at the convention a highlight of her nursing career.

The 598th also provided wreckers for the recovery of major breakdowns during the trip to Savannah.

"The soldiers worked long, hot hours. They usually put in a 14-15 hour day," Pintar said. "The soldiers were continuously repairing vehicles but they stayed motivated and accomplished the mission."

SPIRITUAL

MCCW subtle but extremely effective organization

By Jo Ann Stamey
USAIC Chaplain's Office

(Historical information derived from "History of MCCW, U.S.A.," by Frances M. Kelly)

"The Army takes care of its own" is a cliche that is heard often. A true example of this is the Military Council of Catholic Women (MCCW). MCCW is a subtle organization, but an extremely effective one here at Fort Benning.

MCCW was developed from Catholic Women of the Chapel. Because of the unique and specific needs of the military, the Catholic women decided they needed an organization that catered to military needs.

These needs included: constant moving and adjusting to new communities, the long hours and absences of husbands on TDY or unaccompanied tours, the stress of working wives having to reestablish their careers with each move and the impact on the children as they move from school to school.

In 1960, MCCW was established in Europe, because of the need to link together the military Catholic women living in various posts in Europe. The women provided vital assistance to the chaplains in parish affairs, participated in community activities and represented the American Catholic women in countries in which their families were stationed.

By mutual agreement with the women's parochial organizations, MCCW was formed and affiliated with the National Council of Catholic Women (NCCW) in Washington, D.C.

With assistance of the NCCW staff, an organizational structure was formed that met the needs of the military overseas.

Because the chapel groups were spread over so many countries, the MCCW structure provided for area subdivisions within which the representatives of chapel groups could more readily meet and maintain the communications flow from the chapel groups of each area through the military council to the national council.

As the organizational structure was developed, programs were initiated to guide and inspire chapel groups in their church work and in assisting the chaplains.

Women who had worked in these groups returned to the states and were disappointed at the lack of organization and purpose in the chapel groups here. Many expressed a desire to create a similar organization in the United States.

On Aug. 18, 1970, three chaplains and 18 ladies representing seven Army installations met at Fort McPherson, Ga. At this time, MCCW, Third Army, was established, based on the guidelines of MCCW in Europe. The first meeting was held in November 1970 at the Fort McPherson Chapel, and it was at this meeting that the name was modified to Military Council of Catholic Women, Southeast, USA. With a high level of interest, many more chapel groups were formed.

At the general meeting of MCCW, SE, USA, in November 1971, chapel groups were asked to submit suggestions for a motto for this oganization. The entry, "Growth thru Unity" was chosen, submitted by a chapel group at Fort Benning.

Because membership included chapels in Arizona and California, at a general assembly meeting in 1976, the name of the organization was changed to Military Council of Catholic Women, USA.

In 1977, two Navy installations joined the organization — naval stations at Mayport, Fla., and Roosevelt Roads, Puerto Rico. MCCW now has affiliations from Hawaii to Alaska to Florida, serving the Catholic military community.

The main purpose of MCCW is to unite Catholic military women's organizations and individual Catholic military-associated women of the United States in purpose, direction, and action in religion, education, social, and economic fields. Also, MCCW is a medium through which Catholic women can speak and act as a unit on all matters of public interest.

The Fort Benning chapter of MCCW is a large group — and growing — with many active members. MCCW has nine subcommittees: Publicity, Prayer Chain, Interior Church Maintenance, Altar Linens, Liturgy, Hospitality, Historian, Librarian, and Newsletter. Two additional subcommittees that are presently being considered are nursery supplies and hospital visitation.

The driving force behind this group, Mrs. Claudia Wolf, MCCW Fort Benning Chaper President states, "The purpose of MCCW at Fort Benning is to help Catholic women of the military community to grow and develop spiritually through shared programs, which deepen our faith, address issues which can distract us from that faith, and solidify our Catholic Christian heritage."

MCCW sponsors two major programs. The first is called the "First Friday" meeting. This is held the first Friday of every month at 9:30 a.m. and is spiritually-based, consisting of praying of the Rosary, celebration of Mass, a brief business meeting, followed by a program with a guest speaker of community service.

The second program is usually an issue-related meeting (dealing with Christian women in the 80's) held on the third Tuesday evening of each month at 7 p.m. This meeting usually consists of fellowship, a Prayer Service, and a speaker or film.

Free babysitting is provided at the Religious Education Center during meeting times.

The organization is working hard to ensure that the coming year is an interesting and fulfilling one. Two retreats are being planned at Blesses Trinity in Alabama, and there will be speakers not only from Blessed Trinity for the monthly meetings, but also speakers from the community and other religious backgrounds.

MCCW will be celebrating the history of the Rosary at a retreat at Blessed Trinity and will be focusing on the different forms of prayer, such as imagery, Rosary, and meditative and intentional prayer.

MCCW is currently working with the Protestant Women of The Chapel on two issues of shared concern — refurbishment of the Religious Education Center's nursery and the issue of pornography on post.

"The primary goal this year of the Fort Benning MCCW is to increase the spiritual opportunities of the group," Wolf said. "We are a group of women devoted to the Church and the Lord. We are here to help each other — in crisis and in joy. We are a sisterhood, and that's what we celebrate each time we get together."

All women, military or spouses of military, who would like to learn more about MCCW or who would like to become a part of this vibrant and spiritually enrichin group, please call Claudia Wolf at 682-2090.

USAMU adds another to U.S. Olympic team

USAMU PAO

Capt. Glenn Dubis of USAMU, set a new national record enroute to winning a position on the U.S. Olympic team during the final day of this years Olympic tryouts held in Chino, California Aug. 7-20.

The selection of Dubis brings the total number to six individuals from the Army Marksmanship Unit that will be representing the U.S. Army during the shooting events at next month's Olympic Games in Seoul, Korea.

Dubis scored a total of 3,522 out of 3,600 points over the three day course of fire, to shatter the old record mark by 20 points and win the 50-meter rifle championship.

Finishing second in the event was Dan Durbin of Colorado Springs, Colo., with a total of 3,518 points to fill the final Olympic slot in the men's 50-meter rifle event.

This will make the second appearance of Dubis in Olympic competition, having been a member of the 1984 U.S. team at Los Angeles.

Other individuals selected to the U.S. squad on the final day of the tryouts was former USAMU member, Matthew Dryke, who will compete in the skeet event.

Also selected in women's 10-meter air rifle was Deena Wigger, formerly of Columbus and Fort Benning, and daughter of retired Lt. Col. Lones Wigger, a two time Olympic gold medal winner in rifle shooting.

Dubis will join five other soldiers from the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit at Fort Benning, that was selected from last week's competitions.

They include Capt. John McNally and SSgt. Rojelio Arredondo, both competing in rapid fire pistol, Capt. Wanda Jewell in women's 50-meter standard rifle, MSgt. Erich Buljung in 10-meter air pistol, and SSgt. Brian Ballard in trap shooting.

In addition to the national championship victory by Dubis in 50-meter rifle, national titles were also won by Buljung, Jewell and McNally in their respective shooting disciples during their selection to the U.S. team.

This years Olympic shooting squad is expected to be one of the strongest ever fielded by the United States, with at least 10 individuals of the 26-member team having participated in previous Olympic competition.

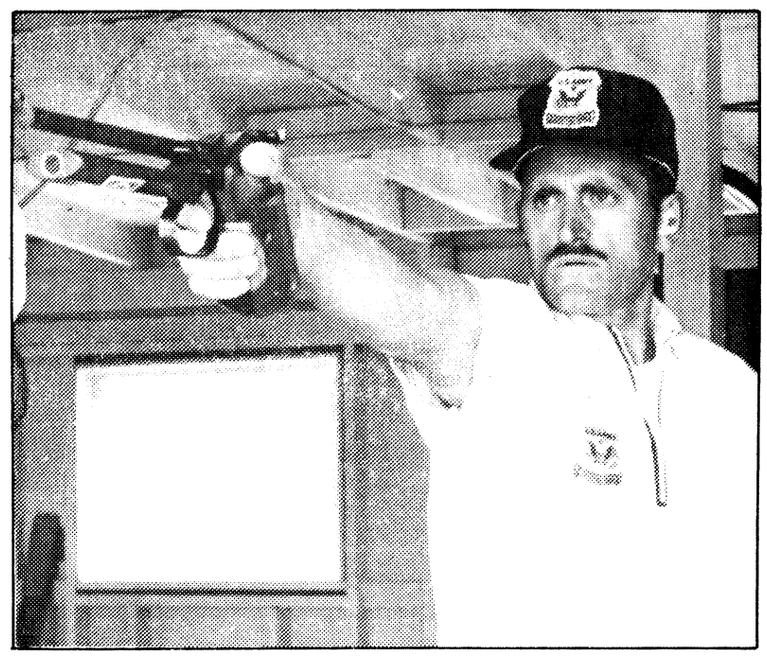
The 1988 Summer Olympic games are set to run through Sept. 17 to Oct. 2, with competition in 23 different sports and two demonstration games, including baseball.

The Olympic shooting events are scheduled to be conducted Sept. 18-24, on the Taenung international shooting range, the site of the 1978 World Shooting Championships.

The following is a brief description of the shooting events that USAMU soldiers will be participating in during next months Olympic Games in Seoul.

Rapid Fire Pistol

This event is fired at a distance of 25 meters at a bank of five silhouette targets using a .22 caliber pistol. Competitors fire a total of 60 shots in 5 shot series in time limits of 8 seconds, 6 seconds and 4 seconds. Current Olympic record is 597.



Men's Air Pistol

This event is fired at a distance of 10 meters using a .177 caliber air pistol. Competitors fire a total of 60 shots. This is a new Olympic event.

Women's Standard Rifle

This event is fired at a distance of 50 meters using a .22 caliber smallbore rifle. The course of fire includes 20 shots each from the prone, kneeling

Changing AC filter will help avoid headaches and damage

By Becky Ray
Energy Branch

Changing an air conditioner filter is a simple task, but many family housing residents are causing themselves much discomfort and inconvenience, and severe damage to their air conditioners, by not doing it.

Although housing residents aren't authorized to make major repairs to their quarters or utilities systems, they are responsible for minor maintenance and making sure the quarter's air conditioning and heating systems are properly maintained and efficiently operated. One important task residents are responsible for is changing air conditioner and heater filters.

Neglect of air conditioning and heating system filters is a growing problem in housing areas.

DEH responds to about 10 to 12 calls a day to repair air conditioners damaged from dirt or dust. This happens when systems are operated with a dirty filter or with no filter.

When air filters become clogged with dust and dirt, air conditioner coils also become clogged. The unit has to operate much longer and harder to cool the house, and then it stops cooling efficiently.

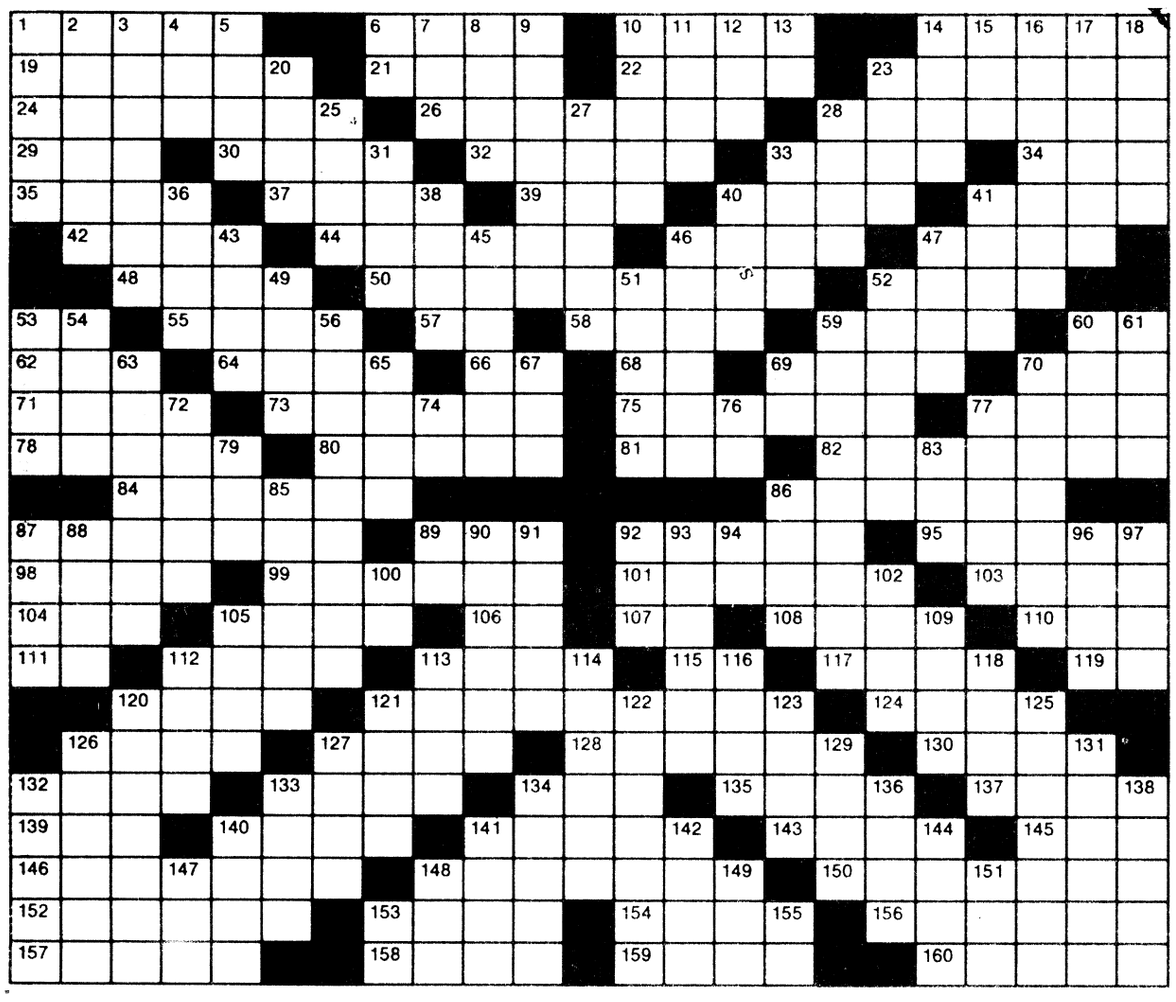
A house in which the air conditioner filter has gone unchanged simply won't be as cool on a very hot day as it would be with clean air filters. If the filter isn't replaced for long periods and is allowed to remain clogged and dirty, the air conditioning system may stop working altogether.

Cleaning and repair of these neglected air conditioners can take up to four man-hours and may require replacement of the condenser unit. The cost of the compressor alone may be $400 or more, and the time spent making these repairs means fewer repairs for other customers, and a longer response time for everyone on service calls.

In addition to the possibiity of damage to the air conditioner or heater unit, the quality of the air circulated through the house is reduced. Dirt and dust is blown through the system and into the air instead of staying trapped in the filter.

Dirty filters also cause energy waste. Because the air flow is obstructed, an air conditioner or heater must work harder and longer to force air through the filter. The unit will always work most efficiently with a clean filter.

Changing a filter in an air conditioner or heater is a simple and quick task. They should be checked often and changed at least once a month when the heater or air conditioner is being used.



New filters are issued at the Unit and Housing Support Branch (formerly the Self-Help Issue), building 385 on Vibbert Avenue.

Just find the size of the old filter (usually printed on the side of the filter frame) or bring in the old filter, and the staff will issue a new one. Hours of operation are 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Tuesday through Friday, and 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. on Saturday. The telephone number 545-4207 or 545-1121.

If you have questions, please call the Energy Hotline, 545-SWAT (Save Watts and Therms).

ITT books lodging at militay rates

Community Activities

The Information Tour & Travel Office is now booking lodging facilities at military rates. Accommodations and military rates can be booked for the following hotels:

- Holiday Inn
- Crown Plaza Hotels
- Quality Inns
- Comfort Inns
- Clarion Hotels and Resorts
- Days Inns
- Any selected Howard Johnson's properties

This is a very special offer that is sure to appeal to anyone who's ever arrived with their family at a special duty station only to find government quarters were not available. To begin with, the soldiers have to bear the expense for a commercial hotel out of their own pocket. Then, because they're new to the area, its hard to know how to find a good hotel, let alone one with reasonable rates.

Don't take chances. ITT can tell which hotels are available, whether they have a swimming pool, fitness center, laundry facilities, baby sitting services and so forth. Of course, the best part is you will not have to pay full price!

If you plan to travel on vacation or just want to get away for a weekend, remember to book your discount lodging reservations with the ITT Office. By the way, the same discounts apply if you need to reserve rooms for parents, family members or other personal guests who plan to visit you at the installation.

Call the ITT Office today at 545-7535/4155 for your lodging reservations.

Georgia water meets quality standards

GDNR

A report recently completed by the Environmental Protection Division of the Department of Natural Resources indicates that during the past two years, 97 percent of Georgia's rivers and streams, 98.7 percent of the publicly-owned lakes and reservoirs and 98 percent of the estuaries met their water quality standards.

All the waters of the State are designated for one of the following uses: drinking water, recreation, fishing, industrial, navigation, wild river or scenic river. Specific water quality standards are assigned to support each water use classification.

DNR's Environmental Protection Division monitors the water to determine whether it meets the applicable standards. The monitoring program is comprised of a number of facets including fixed stations, sampling inspections and stream surveys. During the period covered by the report — January 1, 1986 through December 31, 1987 — the Division maintained a trend monitoring network of 109 stations located throughout the state and conducted 57 intensive stream surveys and 405 compliance sampling inspections.

The report, "Georgia's Clean Water," summarized monitoring data and information on EPD's water quality and water protection programs.

According to the report, 19,443 miles of Georgia's 20,000 miles of rivers and streams met the water quality standards for their designated use during the two year period. Of 417,700 acres of publicly-owned lakes, 412,357 acres met the standards as did 582.5 of the State's 594 square miles of estuaries.

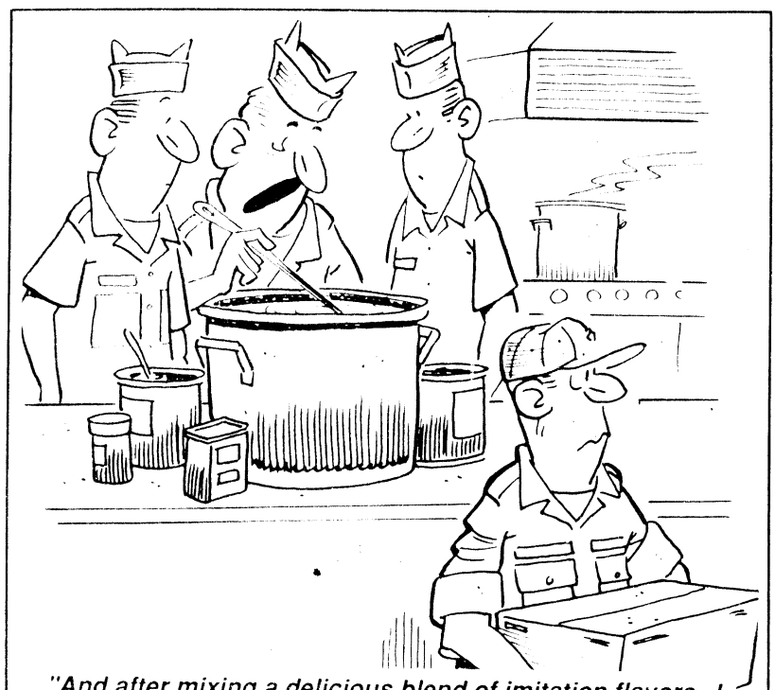
Georgia's water quality has improved steadily in recent years as industries have improved their pollution-control methods and equipment and a number of new or expanded municipal treatment facilities have come on line.

During 1986-87, 31 new or upgraded municipal wastewater treatment plants went into operation and 25 inadequate plants were eliminated. Of 115 major municipal wastewater treatment plants, 104 consistently complied with their permit conditions. On the other hand, the Environmental Protectin Division issued 72 orders to municipalities for improperly treated discharges. The orders resulted in the collection of $123,383 in civil penalties. Fifty-three communities operated under sewer connection bans.

Of the major industrial facilities, 98 percent consistently met their permit conditions. One hundred and four enforcement actions were taken against industries for improperly treated discharges. These actions resulted in the collection of $261,130 in civil penalties. An additional 24 orders, with a total of $113,300 in civil penalities, were issued in conjunction with emergency response investigations involving spills of oil or hazardous materials.

Labor day means fun at Providence Canyon

GDNR



End the summer with fun on Labor Day, Sept. 5 at Providence Canyon State Park. A great activity program has been planned for the whole family.

There will be three-legged races, sack races, water balloon toss contest and horseshoe throwing contest. Ribbons will be presented to the winners in each event. Activities will begin in the picnic area at 2 p.m. and end at 5 p.m. The Labor Day, "Life Be In It" activities are free to the public and everyone is invited to Providence Canyon for a fun day.

Operated by the Department of Natural Resources, Providence Canyon State Park is located on highway 39C and is seven miles west of Lumpkin, Georgia.

Purple Heart Ranger recalls 'Nam experience

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

A Purple Heart is an award given to a soldier who has shed blood while defending our country in a combat situation.

Earlier this month was Purple Heart Day. It was designated as such to honor all those who have been awarded this distinctive medal.

SSgt. William A. Wilkinson, a Long Range Surveillance Leadership Course Instructor with the Ranger Training Brigade wears this award. He was awarded this medal for a gunshot wound to his left shoulder. He was shot while on a mission with Ranger Company C, 75th Infantry in 1969 during the Vietnam War.

Wilkinson vividly recalls the events surrounding that mission.

It happened about two hours before nightfall while he and his squad were being flown into a new area.

"As the helicopter was preparing to land," the veteran said, "I took a glance at the woodline, as I did I saw several enemy soldiers pour out of the jungle and immediately start firing at the chopper."

Wilkinson said that the enemy detonated a mine which hit the underbelly of the bird, causing it to nose dive into the jungle.

"As we were falling from the sky I remember hearing shots being fired all around us as we plummeted to earth," he said, "the impact of the crash flung most of us out the bird."

"We had to drag the pilots and the crew chief from the wreckage, and fortunately it didn't start fire as we were doing it," he added."

After the men were removed from the rubble they dug into an area on the edge of the jungle and fended off the enemy fire until it subsided at nightfall.

"We had broken contact with our unit so we ended up staying in the jungle all night," Wilkinson said, "friendly gunships flew overhead for awhile provided some help in fending off the enemy but we were basically on our own until the para-rescue team came for just before dawn."

He said the first thing they heard was their call sign 'team one-six" echoing out of a loudspeaker which surprised them all.

"We weren't sure if the voice was friendly at first, we thought it was a new technique the Vietnamese were using to lure us out of hiding," Wilkinson said, "and until we heard the whirl of helicopter blades, were we sure that they were coming to rescue us."

All ten members of the team was extracted out of the jungle and flown to a hospital. "The crew chief later died from injuries he recieved during the crash," he added.

After recovering from his wounds the tall dark haired, ruggedly built ger went back to fight for country.

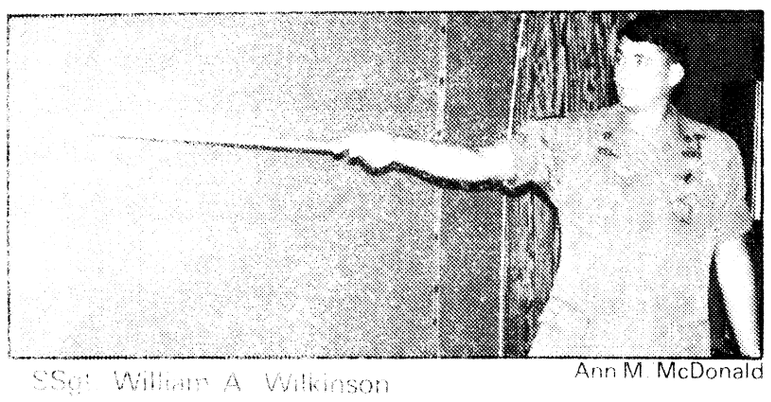
With a track record like that why is this man a staff sergeant?

Well, in early 1976 he opted to get out of the Army. After a nine-year break in service he decided his love for the mililitary drew him back to active service.

His return to active duty started another chapter in his life of adventures. He came back in as a private and had to attend basic training and AIT all over again.

Now, he has regained his former rank and is moving on.

He recently re-enlisted and was sworn in by Lt. Col. Raymond Hitchcock, commander of 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment, 1st Infantry Training Brigade.



According to Wilkinson, Hitchcock was one of his platoon leaders in Vietnam.

The bond the two men formed while serving together was evident during and after the ceremony.

Hitchcock recalled the first time he met Wilkinson. "I met him on the side of the hill in Vietnam," he said. "We served for months together there."

They didn't serve together after that, but each knew what the other was doing.

When Wilkinson re-graduated from basic training he was assigned to the Ranger Training Brigade and he and Hitchcock were together again.

Outlaws take women's softball championship in heated battle

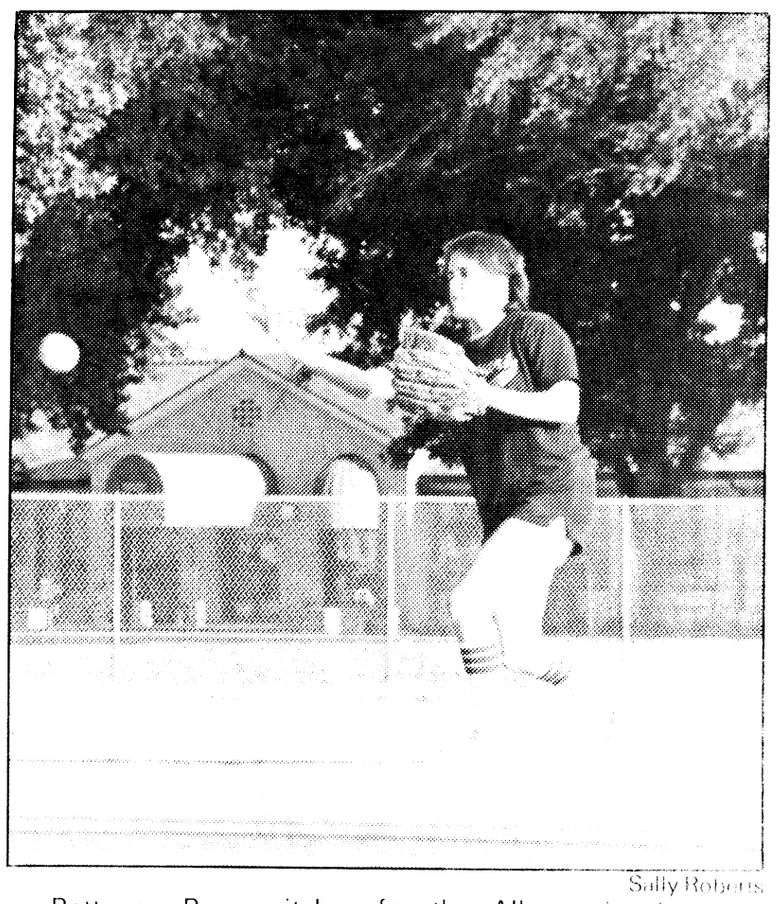
By Sally Roberts
197th Infantry Brigade correspondent

It was an underdog victory for the "Outlaws" who took the Fort Benning Women's Softball Championship by defeating the "Allstars," 5-3 and 7-6 in consecutive games.

The Outlaws lost the first game of the double elimination tournament to Company B, 1st Battalion, 29 Infantry, and then dominated the losers bracket to land a seat in the championship game. The Outlaws then defeated the Allstars twice in the final games of the tournament to carry off the trophy.

Poor pitching by the Allstar pitcher, Tonya Randall, doomed the team to lose the first game. In the second inning, Randall walked six Outlaw players and gave away two hits, allowing the Outlaws to score five runs.

The Allstars managed to muster three runs in the fourth inning, but the Outlaws held them back to win the game 5-3.



The deciding game followed, with each team warmed up and anxious for the win. Again the Outlaws prevailed, but the competition was fierce.

The Allstars came out strong with Jackie Medina-Rivera scoring a three-run homer in the first inning.

In the second inning, the Outlaws edged by with four runs, but the Allstars reclaimed the lead, ending the fourth inning with a score of 6-4.

The Outlaws used the sacrafice fly in the fourth and fifth innings to tie the score 6-6, and scored the winning run in the sixth inning when Allstar shortstop, Bettyann Perry, errored and allowed the Outlaws to bring in a runner from second base.

The Outlaws claimed the trophy and the USAIC Women's Softball Championship title.

USAMU claims victory at national matchs

By Tommy Pool
USAMU PAO

Members of USAMU scored championship victories and set two new records during this years national highpower rifle matches fired at Camp Perry, Ohio, Aug. 2-14.

U.S. Army team members won seven individual and two national team titles during the annual championships that drew more than 1,500 of the top competitors from across the nation.

In individual action, SP4 Timothy Jackson won the first title for the Army by firing 198 out of 200 points in the slow fire 200-yard standing event to win the prestigous Navy Cup Trophy.

Other winners included Sgt. Dwayne Gaskin, who scored a perfect 200 points to win the Scott Trophy, fired from 200-yards rapid-fire sitting, while SFC Terry Duling won the Coast Artillery Trophy with a perfect score at 300-yards rapid-fire prone.

Sgt. Greg Gustafson set a new record as he won the recently established national rapid-fire championship, that included an aggregate of the 200- and 300-yard rapid-fire event. His total of 1,196 out of 1,200 points was a new national match record.

Three individual titles were also won by former national champion, Capt. David Erickson.

Erickson scored a total of 974 out of 1,000 points to win the U.S. Forces Command Trophy, awarded annually to the high scoring active Army competitor in the national individual and national rifle team matches.

Erickson was also awarded the 25th Infantry Division Trophy for the high scoring Infantryman in the national individual championship. He also scored a perfect 200 points to win the Cavalry Cup Trophy, fired from 300-yards rapid-fire prone.

Tommy Pool

Army "Gold" team members scored a new national record recently in the 1,00 yard tem event. Members were (l-r); SFC Terry Duling, SFC Michael Delk, Clyde Malphus (team gunsmith), SFC Frank Recktenwald (team captain), SP4 Timothy Jackson and SSgt. Lewis Silvis.

In team events, the U.S. Army "Gold" squad scored a new record total of 1,375 points to win the National Infantry Trophy Team Championship.

The U.S. Marine Corps "Silver" team finished second with 1,314 points, while the U.S. Army "Blue" squad placed third at 1,214.

Members of the winning Army "Gold" team were; MSgt. Edward Shelley, SFC Terry Duling, SP4 Vincent Greiner, SFC Bruce Gilbreath, SP4 Timothy Bahensky and Sgt. Levine Del Prado.

SSgt. Richard Ramos was the team coach, while SFC Richard Wyckstandt served as team captain. SSgt. Lewis Silvis and SP4 David Diaz were team alternates.

In the final phase of this years national matches, the U.S. Army "Gold" team won the long range Roumanian Cup Trophy for the fourth straight year.

Fired at a distance of 1,000 yards, the four member Army "Gold" team scored a total of 786 out of 800 possible points.

Winning team members included Capt. David Erickson, Sp4 Eric Uptagrafft, SSgt. John Chubb and SP4 Kenneth Strait. The team coach was SFC Sione Tulua.

Earlier in July, the Army "Gold" squad had established a new national record for the 1,000-yard team event with a score of 796 out of 800, two points over the old mark of 794.

Coached by SFC Frank Recktenwald, firing members included SFC Michael Delk, SSgt. Lewis Silvis, SP4 Timothy Jackson and SFC Terry Duling.

GDNR wildlife program involves many projects

GDNR

The Georgia Department of Natural Resources' Nongame Wildlife Program, "Give Wildlife A Chance," involves a wide variety of projects. The following is a brief update of some of the exciting programs DNR has underway.

Gray Bats: The first colony of gray bats ever found in Georgia was recently discovered near Rome. The species is listed by the federal government as endangered. Biologists are currently studying the group of nocturnal mammals with hopes of learning more about the colony.

Round Tailed Muskrats: The discovery of several round tailed muskrat colonies recently near Valdosta indicates a range expansion for the species. Until now the species, also called the Florida water rat, has only been reported in the Okefenokee Swamp, and that was 30 to 40 years ago. DNR biologists and a mammologist from Valdosta State College are observing the colonies to determine the rats' status and distribution in the well protected area.

Peregrine Falcons: For young peregrine falcons were successfully reared and released on Bell Mountain in Hiawassee this summer. The birds practiced their aerial acrobatics in the area for several weeks, and even attracted a wild peregrine to the site. As yet, Georgia has no nesting peregrines, but the program will continue to work towards that goal.

Bald Eagles: Two young bald eagles were hacked in June at Lake Allatoona, near Cartersville. Both are flying freely, and appear to enjoy their new home. Three birds were released earlier this summer from the hacking site on Butler Island near Durien. Although one of the birds was found dead, the other two are active and healthy.

Bald Eagle Nests: DNR has received reports of two new bald eagle nests in Georgia — one on St. Simons Island and one near Columbus. If these are confirmed, there will be a total of 10 wild nests in the state.

Golden Eagles: DNR biologists hacked 12 golden eagles this summer at Pigeon Mountain in LaFayette. The birds were released in three groups, and are all healthy and behaving normally in the wild.

Ospreys: DNR has four opsrey hacking projects this year — one each near LaFayette, Forsyth, LaGrange and Lakeland. Two ospreys at Forysth and one at the LaFayette site died, but the rest are doing well. Of those already released, most are now fully independent and the others should follow soon. Osprey populations have nearly doubled during the last eight years to around 200 nesting pairs in the state.

Manatees: Current studies indicate that there are more manatees in Georgia's coastal rivers than previously believed. The Coastal Resources Division of DNR has begun posting warning signs to alert boaters to areas where manatees are known to occur. Hillary, a tagged manatee under close observation by marine biologists, is reported to be moving towards the Altamaha River system. DNR has notified the public and urges them to be on the look out for Hillary, but not to remove her tag. Recently, a large manatee was found on the beach of Little Cumberland Island — cause of death is unknown. Sightings and strandings should be reported to the CRD office (912) 264-7218.

Sea Turtles: Every summer, giant female sea turtles drag themselves up dark beaches to lay their eggs, usually around 100 eggs at a time. To aid the reproduction of these endangered reptiles, volunteers mark the nests and set up barriers against predators, such as raccoons. The nesting season is nearing an end this year, and soon another generation of sea turtles will hatch and head for the ocean. Report sightings and strandings to the CRD office (912) 264-7218.

Eastern Cougar: The Florida Game and Fish Commission has released five western cougars just south of the Okefenokee Swamp to study their behavior in preparation for an eastern cougar restoration project. DNR biologists assist florida with radio tracking when the cougars travel into Georgia. Although one of the animals died, the others are healthy and remain close to the release site in Florida.

Woodstorks: This rare bird has very specific water depth requirements to breed successfully, and because of this year's drought, few have nested. Woodstorks can go for two or three years, however, without nesting before any significant population damage occurs. Georgia is home to the northern most woodstork rookery near Millen.

Migrating Shore Birds: Summer is the time for many sub-Arctic shore birds to migrate through Georgia and the Southeastern United States. Rum Creek Wildlife Management Area, near Forsyth, has reported seeing such species as western sandpipers, least sandpipers, semi-palmated plovers and lesser yellowlegs. Given the correct habitat, a low-lying pond with plenty of food, many shore birds will occur inland. Wildlife biologists are observing the behavior of the birds to learn more about migratory trends.

State Parks and Nongame: Many state parks offer opportunities for public involvement in nongame projects, such as wildflower seminars, nature walks and bird watching. Recently at Red Top Mountain State Park in Cartersville, a bald egle viewing trail was implemented — in fact, one of the newly released bald eagles from the WMA across the lake, came to roost overnight at the park. Other parks, like General Coffee State Park in Douglas, offer sanctuary to species like the gopher tortoise and the indigo snake.

Nongame T-Shirts: DNR is currently selling Nongame Wildlife T-Shirts bearing the program's attractive logo. The shirts are offered in all sizes in three varieties: short sleeved ($8), long sleeved ($13.50) and sweat shirts ($16.50). The shirts, available in jade, gray and ecru, are with either an eagleor sea turtle design. Look for them at state parks, or call a DNR office.

Lodge, meeting center near McRae open for business

GDNR

Department of Natural Resources Commissioner J. Leonard Ledbetter today announced that the L.L. "Pete" Phillips Lodge and Meeting Center is open and ready to receive guests wishing to sample the recreational amenities of Little Ocmulgee State Park.

The opening of the lodge and conference center marks an important addition to state park facilities available in middle Georgia and provides a beautiful setting for golf outings, family getaways, and group meetings.

The 30 room lodge has one handicapped accessible room and an executive suite with separate living and sleeping quarters.

Groups of up to 150 can be easily accommodated in the lodge's Woods and Irons Conference Hall. Guests may choose to dine in the Fairway Restaurant or hold outdoor gatherings in the park's enclosed shelter with kitchen and fish fry facilities.

Guests will enjoy the park's famous 18-hole golf course, 2655-acre lake with fishing and rental boats or canoes, tennis courts, swimming pools miniature golf, nature trails and interpretive boardwalk.

Tucked into the sandhills of middle Georgia near McRae, the park plays host to a number of special events ranging from arts and crafts festivals, Fourth of July celebration, CCC reunions, to holiday Christmas decoration workshops.

Throughout the year, golf enthusiasts can enter one of many golf tournaments offered at the Wallace Adams Memorial Golf Course. In addition, region naturalists or park staffers lead novice and experienced canoe excursions on the Little Ocmulgee River.

Pete Phillips Lodge at Little Ocmulgee State Park is located 31 miles south of I-16 via U.S. Highways 319/441, or 57 miles east of I-75 via U.S. 280.

Security measures may protect families

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Military Police have heightened patrol visibility in response to an increase in rapes on post within the past six weeks.

"We have multiple operations underway now to catch the person or persons responsible for these crimes," said Maj. David Buzzell, deputy provost marshal.

Buzzell encourages post residents to immediately report any suspicious individuals or activity around their homes to the MP desk sergeant at 545-5222.

"We would much rather respond to a false alarm rather than get to the site of an actual crime too late," Buzzell said.

The MPs recommend that post residents double check all windows in their homes each night to ensure they are locked. Husbands are urged to make doubly sure their homes are secured before leaving for work.

Residents who have windows that cannot be locked should place their PM cards

Take time to plan safe routes for kids who walk to school

Safety Office

If your child is walking to school for the first time this year or attending a new school, spend a few minutes together planning a safe route. Which streets should he not cross? What shortcuts are okay? Is there a friend's house or a store where he can stop if he feels ill or if someone is following him?

Then walk the route with your child, pointing out possible hazards, like a big dog or a busy intersection. Emphasize the safe way to cross the street — at a marked intersection and only after the child has stopped, looked and listened for traffic. Practice these skills with your child to make sure he understands.

Encourage your child to walk with friends. The buddy system may lead to more dawdling along the way, but children are safer in groups than alone.

Post commander retires

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

Chief of Infantry, Maj. Gen. K.C. Leuer trooped the line for the last time yesterday, during a retirement ceremony marking the end of an Army career spanning more than 32 years.

Soldiers, representing every major unit on post, stood at attention to render a final salute to Leuer as he and Gen. Maxwell Thurman, commander of the Training and Doctrine Command reviewed the troops that the former Fort Benning commander loves so much.

Ann M. McDonald

Maj. Gen. K.C. Leuer and his wife, Sally Jean, watch the [illegible] during his retirement after 32 years in the Army.

In his remarks, Leuer said of the soldiers of this Army who make it work and the NCOs are it's backbone.

The director of training commented on why training was so important to him.

"Once I lay down the line and don't want some hand reaching out from the grave screaming 'why didn't you train me right,'" Leuer said, "because you didn't prepare me properly for combat."

He added that even though it is peacetime, you must always be prepared for battle and each unit should be able to come together as one infantry.

Leuer's ability to lead is recognized throughout the Army, and he has been called on to use that ability in many instances.

During his career, he was called on to activate the 1st Ranger Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment. He also commanded 2nd Battalion, 39th Infantry, 19th Airborne Brigade in Vietnam.

Leuer commanded the 3rd Armored Brigade and the [illegible] Security Assistance Agency, Latin America, and was present when the Panama Canal [illegible] signed.

He has commanded twice at nearly every level.

MADD requests car lights on for Saturday's Drive For Life

Mothers Against Drunk Driving

As part of the second annual Drive For Life, a national campaign to reduce our nation's drunk driving deaths, Louise B. Thomas of Ken Thomas Volkswagen is teaming up with Pat Hardy of West Georgia MADD to ask all Columbus residents not to drink and drive tomorrow.

To show support, drivers are asked to drive with their lights (low beams) on all day Saturday.

Sponsored by Mothers Against Drunk Driving and Volkswagen United States, Inc., this public awareness program was launched last week with the mounting of a petition. Community residents were urged to visit the dealership to make their pledges not to drink and drive.

Hardy said, "We're not against alcohol, [illegible]ple for being responsible behind the wheel, responsible so that others might live. Last year's Drive For Life helped reduce Saturday drunk driving deaths by 27.5 percent, and this year we're hoping for even more encouraging results."

In addition to asking all Americans to pledge not to drink and drive, Drive For Life also seeks the support of United States congressmen, congresswomen, governors and mayors to help endorse the program in their states and communities.

With more than 650,000 members and supporters, MADD is the largest victim assistance program in the world. According to Hardy, the organization is dedicated to eliminating drunk driving as a nationwide dilemma through a wide range of programs aimed at mobilizing public opinion and impacting public policy.

First airborne test platoon paratrooper dies

Ann M. McDonald

Pallbearers from 1st Bn., 507th Parachute Infantry Regiment carry retired M.Sgt. William "Red" King to his final resting place in Fort Mitchell Cemetery, Fort Mitchell, Ala.

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

A chapter in airborne history has ended.

Retired Msgt. William "Red" King, the first enlisted soldier to officially jump as a paratrooper in the U.S. Army, died last week at age 71.

King made this historical jump Aug. 16, 1940 from a Douglass B-18 aircraft over Lawson Field.

After his retirement in 1960, King retired in the local community. He kept close to his airborne roots by serving as a guest speaker at many airborne graduation ceremonies.

King captivated many audiences with tales of his experiences as a member of the original test platoon and his airborne experiences during the war.

One tale King often told was the circumstances surrounding his first jump.

According to King, the enlisted men drew straws to determine who would follow their platoon leader, 1st Lt. William T. Ryder, out the door of the aircraft.

He didn't draw the winning straw; but while standing in the door of the aircraft, the soldier designated to follow Ryder froze and refused to exit the door. So King jumped instead.

Retired Brig. Gen. William Ryder, the original "Test Platoon" leader, and many other members of the airborne community came to pay last respects to their fallen comrade.

OPINION

VARIOUS VOICES: Why is Labor Day celebrated?

1st Lt. Franklin Roach, Co. A, 1st Bn., 29th Inf. Regt. - "Labor Day has been set aside as a holiday to honor all of the hardships workers went through before labor laws were passed to protect people and free them from being overworked."

2nd Lt. Timothy Altenburg, Co. C, 2nd Bn., 11th Inf. Regt. - "Labor Day is a day set aside to memorialize all the people who worked hard in the past to make America the great country that it is today."

Sgt. Norma Moody, 3rd Bn., 361st Reserve Unit, Sacramento, Calif. - "It is a day set aside for all the laborers who have worked many long hours during the year."

Spec. Jeff Carter, Co. C, 1st Bn., 58th Inf., 197th Inf. Bde. - "It is a day set aside to honor all the working people in America."

Spec. Gregory Kelso, Med. Hold Company, MACH - "Labor Day is celebrated in memory of the workers who worked up to 90-hour work weeks during the early 1900s and the personal hardships they endured before labor laws were passed."

Sgt. Darryl Gibbs, Co. D, 2nd Bn., 29th Inf. Regt. - "Well, there are many factors that figure into why there is a Labor Day, but, primarily it is a day set aside to give the working person a break for a job well done."

Snively puts away Ski Magazine for a closer look at Southern living

By Clyde Snively
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Normally, the highlight of my summer is when the season's first Ski Magazine arrives in the mail.

I tear into the magazine to drool over the latest equipment and fantasize about skiing the powder at Banff or twisting my way down a black diamond trail at Killington.

This summer the magazine arrived and I set it aside. I didn't peak inside to see what they were saying about Telluride or even glance at the ads for Solomon boots or Marker bindings and Rossignol skis or even check the listing for ski shows.

It was painful, but I've vowed to change my ways and become more appreciative of my surroundings here in the South. There are a couple of reasons for this.

First, there's my wife, Emma. She's a native of the South (her real name is Emma Jean), and she becomes downright cranky when I write anything that can be construed as not being complimentary of this area.

The second reason is my boss' boss' boss. He said simply, "No more anti-South stuff, Snively." Being the good trooper I am, I saluted, returned to my computer terminal and have been straight ever since "our little talk," as he labeled it.

So, instead of reading Ski Magazine, I picked up some tourist brochures from the new welcome center on I-185 to see what southerners do in the winter to keep themselves entertained.

Quite a lot it appears.

State parks are a good bet for those into nature. They have bird watches and "Man in the Swamp," tours plus good old backpacking. There are demonstrations of pioneer skills and all sorts of holiday displays.

There are runs, races and rodeos throughout the state in the fall. Dahlonega has its Gold Rush Days where you can check in on our Army Rangers.

And, of course, there's always Hotlanta for those looking for a little night life and major concerts.

For those who call themselves sportsmen — don't all Infantrymen fall into this category — this area is considered "heaven."

Fishers can fish year round without having to cut holes in the ice, which obviously means boats are a year-round proposition.

Hunters don't have the same problems as their northern brethren although some might like to track deer in snow and check trap lines by snowshoe.

Naturally golf is a year-round sport down here although playing after work is out once daylight savings time ends. But speaking of golf, the Southern Open is being played down here while our northern brethren are checking out their snow blowers in preparation for the first winter storm.

We all know football is king down here. The best college teams money can buy are only a couple of hours away, and for those willing to run up to Atlanta, the Falcons are talking playoff berths.

Once basketball season starts (does it ever end?), the Hawks will be looking to unseat the Lakers; and the colleges have all heard of the Final Four.

So, for those of you who've come down from the North or moved here from the West, if you're having difficulty adjusting to the climate, the drivers, the bugs, or whatever else may annoy you, just remember, it's a matter of perspective.

If you were to take one of these fine southerners and plop him down in your hometown he would find plenty to complain about, but being a southern gentleman, he would keep his mouth shut and not say anything unless it was something nice. So there.

Bathroom fixtures cute but confusing

By James A. Michener
Reader's Digest

This article is reprinted with permission from the August 1988 Reader's Digest. Copyright 1988 by the Reader's Digest Association, Inc.

Using a bathroom ought to be the simplest job in the world. You go in, close the door, turn on the faucet and get water, hot or cold as your need dictates. But the American water closet has become so complicated that no mere mortal can make it work.

Take a look at my bathroom, and you'll spot the major problem right away. I have three sources of water — one for the sink, one for the shower and one for the john. But the controls for each are wildly different from the other two. A man could go nuts in there.

The washbasin has fancy, expensive faucets, the cold-water right one turning clockwise, the way faucets have always turned, the hot-water left one counterclockwise, the way they have never turned. When I asked a plumber why the confusion, he showed how, with both hands on the faucets, it was rather nice to turn both wrists outward.

"It's poetic," he said. He assured me that after five or six months I'd get used to it. I doubt I ever will.

Not only are the ball-type faucets so smooth that they cannot be operated by wet hands; they are jammed so far back against the sink wall that you have to work them with your fingertips. I spend most of my sink time wrestling with knobs.

The sink's worst failure is its sophisticated metal stopper. No matter how I push or pull, the water drains out at the exact speed at which I am letting it in. All in all, my washbasin, one of the more important items in a bathroom, is largely useless.

Next the shower. Here again one looks for some simple mechanism to control the mix of hot and cold. After all, if things get confused in the washbasin, the worst result is a scalded finger. But the shower, watch out!

My wife and I have recently lived in three rented house — in Texas, Alaska and Florida — and each had a radically different bath-shower system. Worst were the two that had one big up and down control while revolving about a fixed mid-point. This meant I had to turn the long handle to the right to move the top pointer to the left, except that in one system, it was the direction of the lower handle movement that determined whether I got hot or cold; and in the other, it was the upper pointer part. Both former residents had painted big arrows and the words "Hot" and "Cold" on the wall to keep from steaming themselves to death. I went along with their decision.

Unfortunately, I can't escape the problem by taking a bath instead of a shower, because, like the washbasin, there are 40 or 50 ways to keep the water in the tub, most of which don't work. By the time I finish soaping down, the water is at the two-inch level, and how am I going to rinse?

The toilet, perhaps the most critical part of any bathroom, has not yet been completely ruined, but I've heard that bathroom designers hold annual competitions to see who can suggest the most ingenious place to hide the toilet-paper dispenser.

By my woes at home are simple compared to what I run into when I travel. According to my own analysis, 40 percent of hotel toilets have hidden flushing mechanisms; and 48 percent have hidden toilet-paper dispensers, while 67 percent of American hotel bathrooms contain washbasins that will not hold water. This is serious. With basins that don't hold water, it is impossible to soak your socks and get them really clean.

When I asked my friend James Kruhly, a prize-winning Philadelphia architect, why he couldn't get the "old-fashioned," reliable fixtures, he explained: "I can get them, but they cost four times as much because they have to be handmade."

Sometimes the best explanation for wildly ingenious bathroom fixtures that nobody can figure out is simple nepotism. When asked the reason for the incomprehensible hardware, those in the know may whisper, " The owner's brother-in-law is a plumber."

When my company checked me into a fancy hotel in Washington, D.C., $225 a night with no breakfast, my bathtub drain consisted of a long, snakelike gizmo that fit into some doohickey deep down the pipe, requiring me to fit one part into another without having any idea what was happening. Taking a bath was impossible. When I called the desk I got only as far as, "I'm paying $225 for this room and . . .".

"I know," came the reply, "the bathtub doesn't work," and within two minutes a young man whisked into my room, performed some magic and had the stopper fixed.

"Could I have done that?" I asked. He laughed. "No chance. I have a lifetime job. Room to room all day, fixing the bathtubs."

I think the President ought to declare an emergency and appoint a special committee of people like me who take bathrooms seriously to spend six months of intensive study to see what can be done to make the American bathroom user-friendly.

out or call the PM shop at 545-4326. Doors that need locks repaired should be reported to the Work Order Section at 545-2135.

Residents in Bouton Heights and Davis Hill should contact the family housing maintenance contractor at 687-4383 for repair of their doors and windows.

Additional items to secure the home are available at the Unit and Housing Support Branch, which contains the U-Do-It Shop, building 385 on Vibbert Avenue.

The U-Do-It shop has barrel bolts, security chains and peep holes for main doors as well as security pins for sliding glass doors. Items to secure windows include shash locks as well as security screens for basement doors. Some of these items can be installed by PM personnel.

The U-Do-It shop is open Tuesday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., and Saturdays, 9 a.m.-2 p.m. The shop is closed Saturdays over three-day weekends and each Monday. It will be closed this Saturday for Labor Day weekend.

The MPs also recommend that post residents turn on outside lights during night time hours.

Other useful security and crime prevention measures are contained in USAIC Regulation 190-31, which may be obtained from the MP station or the Unit and Housing Support Branch in building 385 on Vibbert Avenue.

Final days of summer harbor unforseen perils

Safety Office

Time flies when you are having fun! The fun-filled days of summer are growing shorter and Labor Day is just around the corner.

The Labor Day holiday, by tradition, accounts for more accidents than any other holiday — particularly for serious traffic mishaps and accidents associated with water sports.

On the average, more than 650 people die each year over the Labor Day weekend in traffic accidents. They plan for a trip to the beach or to a park for that last long weekend of the summer season. They attempt to cover too much ground in the short time available, party too much, and set themselves up for the classic accident involving speed, fatigue and alcohol.

Water sports are extremely popular because in many parts of the country fall and its chilly weather will put an end to activities for several months. Here, as in vehicle accidents, fatigue and alcohol will play a part in the number of water accidents.

Over past holiday weekends, Fort Benning personnel have celebrated the weekend with a minimum of accident involvement. However, this favorable past experience does not guarantee a safe future or allow us to let down our efforts to make the holiday accident free. We must continue to emphasize the hazards of speed, over-extending ourselves, and excessive consumption of alcohol.

Personnel should gear up a campaign focusing on water and vehicle safety for the forthcoming holiday weekend — the end of the 101 Days of Summer. Special emphasis should be placed on wearing seat belts and avoidingdrinking and driving. Fort Benning's mission is vital to the combat readiness of the Army. It can ill-afford to lose its most valuable resources — its people.

New dental care system goes on line here

Dental Activity

A new family member dental care system is being put into practice at Fort Benning.

Any parent who would like to have their child/children (ages 1-8) included in this Pediatric Dental Care System and have not been seen by the pediatric section during the past year are asked to come to Dental Clinic No. 1 and fill out an application. This application can be completed Monday through Friday between 8:30 and 11 a.m. or 1-4 p.m. at the first floor reception desk.

If you are enrolled in the Family Member Dental Insurance plan, the military dental staff cannot perform procedures that are covered by this plan. However, family members are eligible for care for those procedures not covered by the insurance plan.

For more information, come to Dental Clinic No. 1 for the information paper and application form.

Course tests leadership potential

By [illegible]

"Throw the rope." "Pass me another board." "Help me up." These are familiar commands heard at Fort Benning's Leadership Reaction Course (LRC).

Equipped with only nonmotorized equipment, soldiers are challenged on various obstacles to test their leadership potential in problem-solving situations.

"This course gives the soldier a chance to think, to move from point A to point B with only a minimum of tools," said SSgt. Dewey Griffis, platoon sergeant.

The LRC was the second stage of training which put 36 enlisted soldiers of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 197th Infantry Brigade in charge for a day. During the initial stage, soldiers played the roles of the company commander, first sergeant, platoon leaders and platoon sergeants, fulfilling garrison responsibilities.

Soldiers were training, climbing and even crawling over the mind-boggling obstacles. Eyes to beat the alerted time and successfully accomplish the task.

Teamwork is the key in order for a squad to successfully complete a mission on the LRC, which truly test a soldier's mettle, flexibility and ingenuity.

Spec. Wayne Clark shimmies across a pole as Spc. Wayne Chesney and Pvt. 2 Patrick Chapman [illegible] the accumulation.

"The course teaches soldiers to work as a team and build confidence in themselves so they can be better leaders," said 1st Sgt. Albert Williams.

Instructors of Month chosen at USARSA

By Marco Morales

Two U.S. Army instructors and two Latin American guest instructors assigned to the U.S. Army School of the Americas have been selected as instructors of the quarter for the first two quarters this year.

Sfc. Luis R. Cruz (U.S. Army) and Capt. Bernardino Soto of Paraguay represent first quarter, FY88 selectees and SSgt. Nelson Flores (U.S.) and Capt. Roddy Mackay of Bolivia represent the second quarter. These instructors work in the Department of Combat Operations at USARSA.

USARSA didn't have an ongoing instructor recognition program, as do most formal Army schools, until key training directors and the Directorate of Training and Doctrine at USARSA pooled their ideas, which resulted in starting the program here, according to Cheryl M. Watters, chief, Staff and Faculty Development Division, USARSA.

"This program now includes USARSA in Training and Doctrine Command (TRADOC) competition along with all other Army-wide TRADOC schools," said Watters. This means that USARSA instructors, including Latin American guest instructors, will compete for TRADOC's instructor of the year, Watters said.

The instructor of the quarter program works as an incentive that recognizes top instructors within TRADOC for doing a superb job as instructors of U.S. Army doctrine. Together with such organizations as the Association of the U.S. Army (AUSA), TRADOC schools reward these instructors with trophies, U.S. savings bonds and other memorabilia.

2nd MASH plays it cool in heat crisis

MACH Public Affairs Office

Soldiers from 2nd MASH set up and operated a Utility Pack at Martin Army Hospital to cool the laboratory during the recent heat crisis.

Spec. Brian Schofield, 2nd MASH's only school-trained U-Pack operator, calls this equipment "the heart of the MASH." It provides air conditioning, heat, hot and cold water, 110/220-volt electricity, vacuum and compressed air.

The extra air conditioning pumped in from the U-Pack helped MACH's ailing air conditioning and kept the laboratory cool enough to run critical tests. Maj. Jim Hawkins, MACH's lab manager, stated the U-Pack cooled the chemistry and hematology rooms.

"The multi-channel chemistry analyser performs 95 percent of our chemistry tests. Without it, we're just about closed down," Hawkins said.

The MASH accepted the request for assistance shortly after a practice deployment. SSgt. John Dawson, motor sergeant, and Specs. John French, Sean Murphy and Schofield were on site and set up within three hours. Running the flexible duct was tricky. The MASH team reached the lab through its second floor windows, running two 80-foot ducts into the building.

Murphy summed up the team's feelings, "It finally gave the motor pool recognition. We're in the spotlight for support, doing our day-to-day, real-time mission."

The cool air was welcome in the lab. Irene Irwin, a laboratory technician, stated. "It's more comfortable. I can put up with the breeze (from the U-Pack) compared with the heat. It's a lot easier than having to rerun lab tests."

MACH medic comes to the rescue, saves woman's life at Disney World

MACH

Recently Sgt. Laura Hughes, a medic currently assigned to Martin Army Community Hospital, saved a woman's life.

While attending a stage show in Disney World, she noticed that a woman from the audience, who had been dancing to the music, had passed out.

As the crowd gathered around to see the woman, so did Hughes.

The situation appeared to be under control. It was not. As Hughes watched, a man began to administer CPR, but incorrectly. She noticed the compressions he was administering were wrong and much too low. She decided to intervene.

She started CPR the correct way and instructed the woman giving mouth-to-mouth not to take the woman's dentures out.

Having taken charge of the situation, she then asked people to call the EMTs, get water and loosen the woman's clothing.

Once the EMT arrived on the scene and Hughes accompanied them to the hospital. The woman recovered, thanks to Hughes.

When asked what her thoughts were about the incident, she replied, "I'm so glad I have CPR training. Everyone should have it. You never know when you will need it."

29th Inf to dedicate Collins Training Ctr

By Shawn Bryson
Bayonet staff writer

The 29th Infantry Regiment will dedicate the Collins Training Center Sept. 14, at 9 a.m.

The center will house the headquarters for the 29th as well as all resident instruction on the Bradley Infantry Fighting Vehicle for the United States Army Infantry School here.

Named after the late Gen. J. Lawton Collins, the $10.7 million center is 92,000-square-feet facility and about 4,000 soldiers are expected to train out of it each year.

The Collins Training Center is located on 8th Division Road near Victory Pond.

Among Collins' numerous positions were U.S. Army Deputy Chief of Staff to Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower in 1947, Vice Chief of Staff to Gen. Omar N. Bradley in 1948 and Chief of Staff from 1949-53. He also appointed the U.S. Representative to the Military Committee and the Standing Group of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization in 1953.

Collins' children and grandchildren will attend the dedication ceremony. Also at the dedication will be retired Lt. Gen. Stanley R. Larsen. Larsen served under Collins as a battalion commander in Guadal Canal and was the Assistant Commander at Fort Benning from 1957-59.

PWOC members help improve quality of life here

By Jo Ann Stamey
USAIC Chaplain's Office

For many years, individual chaplains, on their own initiative, have encouraged women's groups within the chapel framework. These sometimes took the form of Mission Study groups, and sometimes Prayer and Bible Study groups. They met a genuine need in the lives of women — particularly overseas.

It was not until 1955 that Protestant Women of the Chapel, as we know it today, began to take form. The United States Army, Europe (USAREUR), chaplain set up a conference at the Retreat House in Berchtesgaden, Germany, in October of that year. It was attended by 250 women from all over Europe — and PWOC was on its way!

In May 1956, the first PWOC convention was held in Berchtesgaden, with 500 women in attendance. In the fall of that same year, the USAREUR Council sponsored the first series of Fall Rallies.

In 1957, "We are Workers Together for Christ" became the official PWOC motto; the Darmstadt chapter designed the emblem that incorporates these words.

By 1959, newsletters were being published on local, district, and area levels and many chapters began distributing yearbooks.

On Dec. 1, 1957, the Fort Benning chapter of PWOC was formed. Having just returned from Europe and being inspired by the PWOC movement there, Chap. (Col.) Albert C. Wildman, Fort Benning's post chaplain, was instrumental in the organization of the first chapter. In the spring of 1959, the women of the 2nd Division, located at Sand Hill, felt the need for an additional group and organized the ATC Chapter. That fall, a Student Brigade Chapter was organized.

In 1963, the Evening Chapter was formed, and in 1964, the 197th Infantry Brigade established their own chapter. Over the years, several denominational groups, such as Episcopalian and Lutheran, have been active in the PWOC.

Realizing the need to strengthen the total work of PWOC at Fort Benning, a PWOC Council was organized in 1963. The purpose was to unite and assist the chapters in accomplishing purposes and goals of the individual groups and to sponsor major activities, such as the Fall Rally, World Day of Prayer, retreats, mission studies and Bible Study groups.

Much like their sister organization, the Military Council of Catholic Women, PWOC is a large, active and effective organization at Fort Benning that provides not only personal spiritual growth to its members, but also is an organization that gives much of its time and heart to the community. Several activities PWOC has participated in are projects at Martin Army Community Hospital, the Armed Services YMCA and the local Cancer Society.

PWOC members have visited local nursing homes, children's homes, community houses, servicemen's homes and rescue missions. The group has helped to collect food and clothing, school supplies for migrant missions, hospital kits for Africa and provided support to orphans through reputable organizations.

Closer to home, PWOC provides many services to our chapels; i.e., free babysitting, chapel maintenenace and meals for new mothers and fulfills many other family emergency needs. PWOC is currently working with the Crisis Pregnancy Center.

PWOC sponsors a variety of activities, which include a choice of four Bible studies, outreach ministries and guest speakers. A retreat at Blessed Trinity in Alabama will be one of the highlights of the year. The general meetings, featuring a guest speaker, are held the first Thursday of each month, 9:30 a.m., at The Infantry Center Chapel Annex. The Bible studies are held the second, third and fourth Thursdays, 9:30 a.m., at the Religious Education Center. A nursery is provided during all meetings at the Religious Education Center.

Deby Godwin, president of PWOC, extends a warm invitation to all women seeking fellowship, opportunities to serve the community and church and personal spiritual growth.

For further information regarding this organization, call Godwin at 687-7157 or Annette Saul at 682-1157.

Following is the general meeting schedule for 1988-1989:

Sept. 1 — Mary Jo Garett — former missionary in the Amazon.

Oct. 6 — Dianna Helms — from Christian Financial Concepts.

Nov. 3 — Melissa Etnyre — DJ at 93.3 WVFJ, Manchester, Ga.

Dec. 1 — Chap. (Col.) Roy Mathis — post chaplain.

Jan. 5 — Bob Boidock — Navigators; Ministry.

Feb. 2 — Crisis Pregnancy Center Counceling Team.

April 6 — Sue Vail Trego — Cancer Care coordinator, Doctor's Hospital.

May 4 — Richard Bunn — American Family Association on Humanism versus Christianity.

June 1 — Testimonies and sharing God's Blessings/Potluck Brunch.

What is stress? It's pressure from outside that can make you feel tense inside. It is an unavoidable fact of life. Some stress is a part of daily life - they keep you on your toes, but miserable, worried, sad and ill.

Stress and how you handle it affects your health and happiness. If you allow it to build up, stress can sometimes produce tensions serious enough to interfere with your normal problems.

Many people visiting doctors for physical complaints have stress-linked problems, mental and emotional woes.

One of the main causes of stress is change. Too many or too drastic changes often result in harmful tension. For example, personal loss, such a death of a loved one, loss of friends when moving, separation or divorce, all can cause depression.

Illness/injury, change in lifestyle, job changes, money problems, family changes and retirement are all causes of stress.

Excess tension can result in anxiety and depression. Anxiety is that worried, up-tight feeling. It's a vague fear that something bad or unpleasant is going to happen even if there's no real threat.

Anxiety may result from holding back feelings we can't cope with or understand, or it may grow out of a conflict between what we'd like to do and what we think we ought to do. For example, you have an interview with the boss - you're in line for promotion. Naturally you're a little tense, anxious to do your best. If that keyed-up feeling of pressure and uncertainty lasts even after you get the job, you may be on the way to a full-fledged anxiety state.

The most common signs of anxiety are nervousness, trembling, dizziness, pounding heart, inability to slow down or relax, abnormal eating habits and troubled breathing.

Everyone has a certain amount of anxiety. To a degree, it's a natural, helpful response to stressful or threatening situations. But prolonged anxiety can lead to serious problems, such as ulcers, high blood pressure, inability to enjoy life and the world.

The result of tension is depression that sad and blue feeling. It's a feeling of sadness or disappointment that leads to apathy and withdrawal for no specific reason. The most common signs of depression are fatigue, sleeplessness, inability to concentrate, restlessness, boredom, lack of interest in food, sex, and life in general, feelings of worthlessness and hopelessness.

Prolonged depression may cause such physical symptoms as headache or weight loss or may lead to drug or alcohol abuse.

Some depression is normal, a reaction to the reality that "what is often" falls short of "what's hoped for." But prolonged depression is a serious problem. Long lasting feelings of worthlessness and isolation can lead to suicide.

What can you do? You can do a lot to keep tensions within reasonable limits before they lead to trouble.

- Talk it over with a friend.
- Exercise regularly.
- Plan your work.
- Take a break.
- Learn to relax.
- Be realistic.
- Avoid stress (too many changes in a short period).
- See your chaplain, doctor or helping professional.

People should show concern and care to those immediately around them. If you know that your friend or neighbor is experiencing a lot of stress, be a good listener and, if needed, refer him or her to the chaplain, doctor or other helping professional.
